Farm Officials Say Support Plan Shuns Issues

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Local farm officials said today they see the 25-cent-per-pound tobacco assessment announced by U.S. Agriculture John Block Thursday as an action that means less profit for the farmer and shuns what they call "the real problems."

"I don't see where its going to be much margin of profit for the farmers," Pitt Extension Chairman Leroy James said. If it costs a farmer $1 a pound to grow the crop and he pays a 40-cent rent and 25-cent assessment, James said, he's got $1.65 invested in growing a pound of tobacco. "A 25-cent assessment with a $1.69 price support will cut profits to four cents a pound. If we have an average year, that's not much money and if we have a bad year, that's no money."

Block announced that the tobacco assessment fee, the amount per pound farmers must pay to the no-net cost program, would be 25 cents in 1985 — an increase of 18 cents over the 1984 assessment. He also announced that the price support for 1985 would remain at $1.69 per pound, the same as the past two years.

Block's announcement came as no surprise to most farm leaders since the price support level and the increase in the assessment were recommended to Block by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

"I'm still hoping we can cut back on the assessment and get that profit margin up," James said. "Four cents is a mighty slim profit margin."

"My initial reaction to the assessment is that here's an 18-cent reduction in profit off the top for farmers," Gene Paramore, president of the Pitt County Farm Bureau, said today. "My second reaction is that it doesn't really address the inventory problem in Stabilization."

Block "had no choice" but to raise the assessment, Paramore said, since the co-op recommended it. "But in my opinion, it enhances the argument of those in Congress against the tobacco program because it does nothing to relieve the pressure of the inventory situation," he added.

The 25-cent assessment and the huge inventory in the co-op "forces us to consider alternative sources of revenue," to fund the no-net cost program, Paramore said. For example, a state cigarette manufacturers tax or a federal excise tax on the sale of cigarettes, he said.

Paramore, a tobacco producer himself, said he feared many farmers would see Block's announcement as "final for the 1985 season" but added he's "not so sure it is."

"Producers still need to be very cautious on leasing arrangements," Paramore said. "Until the crop is sold, nothing is final. Until the crop is sold, there's no guarantee of cash." He recommended producers

Congress Still Could Change Tobacco Plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco officials, farmers and lawmakers registered disappointment, but not surprise, at Agriculture Secretary John Block's announcement setting the 1985 flue-cured tobacco fee at 25 cents a pound.

"When you couple that with all the problems the tobacco program faces, it is not a very pleasant picture," U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., said through an aide following Thursday's announcement.

Rose's administrative assistant, Ivan Swift, said Rose would call a meeting of the House Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts, which he chairs, next week "to determine what options might be open to us."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, will call a meeting of all tobacco-state senators next week, said Helms' aide George Dunlop.

Block also announced that tobacco's average support price this year will be $1.69 per pound — the same as for the last three years.

But he held out the possibility that the 25-cent-per-pound assessment to finance the tobacco program could change if legislation is enacted to seal an agreement between farmers and tobacco companies for a buyout of surplus leaf.

"My opinion is that if we can't get legislation this year, we are finished," said Rick Apple, a Browns Summit farmer and newly elected director of the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp.

Under the No Net Cost Tobacco Program Act of 1982, growers must contribute to a fund to ensure that the program will be operated at no net cost to taxpayers. The Raleigh, N.C.-based Stabilization, which handles marketing and loans for farmers, had recommended a contribution of 25 cents per pound.

Block said the large increase is necessary to cover projected losses on flue-cured crops of 1982 through 1985. By Jan. 1, 1985, the cooperative held the largest inventory since 1965.

Rose criticized the Stabilization directors for having recommended the 25-cent fee.

"The Stabilization board is trying to push us into a drastic reduction in the price support level," Rose said.

But Arthur L. Jackson, Stabilization's accounting manager, said despite the severity of the assessment, "farmers won't get hit both ways" with a low price support and a high assessment.

A group of Greenville citizens are working to enable an East Carolina University graduate to pursue his chosen field of work.

Roy Pate, 33, who graduated from East Carolina University several years ago, has been seeking a job in the real estate field and has been hampered by one thing — not being able to drive. Confined to a wheelchair because of rheumatoid arthritis since his early teens, Pate needs a specially equipped van to lift and accommodate his wheelchair and with controls which will enable him to drive despite crippled hands and feet.

Hugh McGowan, Percy Cox and the Rev. Bill Hadden have enrolled a number of other Greenville residents in seeking to raise $14,000 to buy and initially insure the van Pate needs. About $5,000 has been gathered so far.

Anyone wishing to help may call McGowan, 752-2691; Cox, 756-5191, or Rev. Hadden, 758-1593.

Tax Plan Brings Mixed Response

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Local reaction to Gov. Jim Martin's proposed tax cuts, as outlined in his first State of the State message to a joint session of the General Assembly Thursday, seemed to be mixed.

Martin's tax-cut package proposes repeal of the state sales tax on food effective Jan. 1, 1986, repeal of the property tax on intangible assets effective Jan. 1, 1986, and suggests that businesses receive a 50 percent rebate on their inventory tax payments beginning Jan. 1, 1986, with the rebate increasing to 100 percent on Jan. 1, 1988.

Andy Andrews, chairman of the Republican Party in Pitt County, said he views the proposals by Martin as "fulfilling a campaign promise to the people of North Carolina. I think that's what helped him get elected to begin with."

But Andrews suggested that the proposed cuts "will help the average North Carolina citizen ... spur business growth, economic growth ... (and) possibly give a little relief to older people who have investments ... through repeal of the intangibles tax."

"I don't really see these proposals giving any one group of people a hard time," Andrews said.

"Some legislators," Andrews said, "used the suggestion of a possible reduction of federal revenue coming to North Carolina as a kind of scare tactic" to make people wary of any tax reduction. "I'm extremely disappointed in that," Andrews said, suggesting that it "caused citizens to lose confidence in Martin before his program was specifically outlined."

Democrat Betty Speir of Bethel said that, "certainly, reducing the individual tax burden is important," and "I wish the governor well." But she said "as a member of the State Board of Education, I would also hope that he will remember the needs of public education," such as the "basic education plan" which would attempt to provide every child in North Carolina an equal education and "a career ladder plan for teachers which has been developed at the request of the North Carolina Legislature. These would seem to be important priorities of this administration."

Danny Jacobson, a Democratic precinct official in Greenville, said "first of all, I don't agree with any of his cuts. I think people will suffer."

Jacobson said "my concern, when it comes to taxes, is that taxes should be fair for all people and

'Octad' Concept Gaining Support

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A meeting has been set for April 18 in Greenville for representatives of chambers of commerce in eight eastern North Carolina cities to discuss a proposed coalition tentatively dubbed the Octad.

Representatives of the eight chambers, including Greenville, met in Kinston Thursday "to determine the level of interest in the project," according to Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

Walker said today "all eight cities showed up at the meeting" and there was "a very strong camaraderie" in the group. "The consensus of the meeting was that we (the eight cities) have such an unsung story that needs to be told of all the good things that are happening here," he said. "The group was excited about it and we are meeting again April 18 to hear input from all the areas."

The confederation — similar to alliances such as the Triangle and Triad areas in the Piedmont — was proposed to area chambers in a letter from Dr. Jon Tinglestad, immediate past chairman of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce. Tinglestad acted as an official chairman at Thursday's meeting.

In addition to Greenville, the cities included in the proposed consortium are Washington, Kinston, Goldsboro, New Bern, Rocky Mount, Tarboro and Wilson. Tinglestad's letter said cities of "similar nature and size in a particular region can have a greater impact on regional development when they work together in a communicative, supportive and productive fashion." He cited the Triangle and Triad as examples.

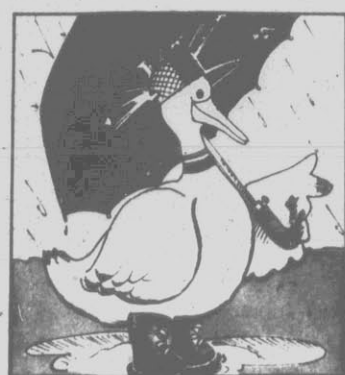

Organizers of the alliance stress the group would not be another chamber of commerce and "would not be in competition with" the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce, Walker said.

Discussion at Thursday's meeting centered around a name for the coalition, which has tentatively been called the Octad. "We want to see if Octad is an appropriate name and throw around some other suggestions," Walker said.

The group also "discussed the various needs of each community," he said. "Each chamber was asked to bring a packet of their community's needs to the next meeting and from these we will identify the three basic needs that are the top priority."

The group will also make a list of

Clarification

Bill de Buys, director of the North Carolina Conservancy, says a report published in the Feb. 13 Daily Reflector indicating the conservancy was trying to acquire 35,000 acres in the Alligator River is misleading. The report was issued by the Amoco Foundation, provider of a $500,000 grant for the Nature Conservancy.

"We are in contact with various land owners in the area, and in fact, one or more landowners have already elected to make land donations to the conservancy," de Buys said.

"We do hope over a period of time to acquire more land, to be able to move to some permanent type of conservancy area in the Alligator area. Our aim is to work with landowners in an arrangement that will be of mutual benefit to them and to the conservancy.

"However," de Buys emphasized, "the idea of seeking 35,000 acres is not within our plan."

have a person 'arrested' for a $25 fee and set a bail of from $100 to $300 for release. The prisoners then raised the bail through phone calls. The jail-a-thon program originated in Rocky Mount and has since grown to a national fund-raising event for the cancer society. (Reflector Photo by Chris Bennett)

REACH OUT

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The mystery of why hundreds of telephone calls — often only seconds apart — were being made at night and on weekends when Fayetteville's municipal building was closed has been solved.

It was not the work of a telephone burglar but rather a malfunctioning soft drink machine, reports MIS Week, an information management journal.

The machine had been programmed to telephone the factory when it needed a refill and it apparently wanted to reach out and touch someone at the local soft drink bottling plant.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Women who are exhausted from the rigors of motherhood often ask, "When does it get better?"

Is there a Camelot where children clean their rooms without being threatened... clear the table without demanding a check... and look upon their homework as a privilege instead of extreme and inhumane cruelty?

There is indeed. And the magic number is age 15. Remember it and know that when it comes, a metamorphosis will take place. Life will never be as good to you again as each day you will be bottle-fed with the milk of human kindness from this wonderful child who will smother you with love and concern. Why?

THIS KID WANTS TO DRIVE YOUR CAR!

It is the strongest motivation for goodness that has ever been measured in the human spectrum. In the beginning, he will be subtle. Out of nowhere he will say, "Sit still, Mother. I'll get your glasses from the kitchen where you left them. I'll also bring you a cold drink of water. You look wonderful in that dress. Is it new?"

Later, he will not be so subtle. When he climbs in the car he will say, "I hate dragging you out in the cold to run me to the library. It'll be nice when, in 186 days, I can drive myself and you can stay in where it's warm."

With each day he will impress you with his dependability, his responsibility and his respect for law and order. It's like living with George Shultz. He will pretend he doesn't know the carload full of boys who pull up to the traffic light next to you and offer to drag. Instead he will shake his head and say, "They're disgusting! Lucky you and Dad taught me that cars are not playthings."

By the time he is 15 years and 11 months, you will swear he is monastery material. His grades are higher than they have ever been. He has stopped punching out his brother's headlights because he has "nothing to do" and he changes underwear every day. He is someone you'd like to have father your car.

On his 16th birthday as he drops you off at the curb after his test, savor the moment. You will never see him or your car again.

You will hear it as it screeches around the corner on your radial tires that you are still making payments on. You will hear it as your radio blares in the wee hours of the morning while he brings it to rest in the driveway. You will hear it as it "idles" for ten minutes while he changes clothes for his next social event.

What happened to Camelot? Was it Merlin invoking his magic in a puff of smoke? Or was it your son in a leather jacket with a winged serpent on the back driving off in a cloud of blue exhaust from your muffler with the hole in it?

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

She Takes A Backseat To His Daughter

DEAR ABBY: I've been going with a wonderful man for a year and a half, and I am hoping to marry him. We usually get along beautifully, but there is one problem. He's divorced and has a 6-year-old daughter, "Lori," who lives with her mother in an adjoining state. "Peter" gets Lori every third weekend and on occasional holidays.

Peter recently acquired a new car with bucket seats, and when Lori is with us, she insists on riding in front with her daddy. That means I have to sit in the back alone.

I say that as an adult, my place is in front with Peter. He says he sees more of me than he sees of Lori, and I should sit in the back and not make a big deal out of it. I refused to go along with this, but the last straw was when Peter suggested that Lori and I "take turns" sitting in front with him.

How would you handle this?
CAMEL'S BACK

DEAR BACK: If I wanted to land Peter, I'd quit competing with Lori and quietly plant my bucket in the backseat. If you make a fuss, you'll force Peter to make a choice between you and his daughter. Then you'll find that blood is thicker than water.

DEAR ABBY: I am a widow, 60 years of age. I recently met "Mr. B.," a gentleman, 82, who offered me a job in his home as a live-in homemaker. I accepted, the position and have been very satisfied.

Mr. B. has been married twice. Both wives died. He has asked me to marry him and I have accepted.

The stepchildren from Mr. B.'s second marriage have been coming to his home and taking furniture, dishes and other valuables, saying that these articles were the property of their mother! Mr. B. said, "The things they took from this home belonged to my first wife, and those stepchildren have no right to come in here at all!"

Is there anything I can do to stop this aggravating situation? His stepchildren have told me that I am only the "maid" and I should mind my own business!

Mr. B. said that everything accumulated during both his marriages is his—that neither wife brought any valuables to his home. What should be done?
ANXIOUS IN CANADA

DEAR ANXIOUS: Mr. B.'s stepchildren have no right to enter his home without his permission, nor do they have a right to remove any valuables from that home. Ownership of said valuables should be established, and if they are indeed the property of Mr. B., his grasping stepchildren should return them immediately. Canadian law is the same as U.S. law in this regard: "He who takes what isn't his'n, must give it back or go to prison."

DEAR ABBY: My problem? Painful rheumatoid arthritis in my hands and fingers. I'm a 38-year-old female executive medical secretary in a large medical center, and in my job I greet salesmen and others on a daily basis. I am expected to offer my hand when introductions are made, and therein lies the problem.

Most of the men who shake my hand have such firm grips that I have all I can do to keep from screaming with pain.

What can I say or do to let these well-meaning macho men know that they do not have to shake hands that hard?

SQUEEZED IN SPOKANE

DEAR SQUEEZED: What's the matter with the truth? A pleasant smile and a warm, "How do you do; no handshake, please. I have arthritis."

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Arne Treholt was a Norwegian diplomat until his arrest at the Oslo airport about a year ago as he was about to leave the country. Police said he was carrying 66 NATO and other documents he planned to give Russian agents in Vienna.

He is said to have provided the U.S.S.R. with "a staggering array" of secrets over the previous 10 years. His trial began this week.

His government claims not only military and domestic secrets of its closest allies were provided Russia, but so too were those of Norway.

Fairness requires Treholt's guilt must depend upon the outcome of his trial, though details of the charges must largely have come from admissions by the accused during his year of detention and interrogation.

The story is an alarming one because of the implication that if one highly ranked and trusted diplomat has been so exposed as a spy, then there are presumably others. In short, Treholt represents but the tip of an iceberg.

What we cannot understand is the demise of loyalty and honor.

Is love of family, companions, homeland so negotiable as traitors imply? What of personal integrity? Are they all so fragile as the Treholts of our world would have us think?

If such were the case, all our most closely held values are worth nothing.

That is impossible to believe.

Ratings

Once again a list of the best and worst comes along. You know, the best colleges, the best vacation areas.

This time it is the best and worst cities of the nation. They are ranked in Rand McNally's "Places Rated Almanac," a publication that evaluates quality of life in 329 cities which include three-fourths of the nation's population.

The ratings system takes into account such factors as crime, overall civic performance, climate, housing, health care, transportation, education, the arts, recreation and economics.

It was exciting to discover that North Carolina's Raleigh-Durham area was ranked third in the nation by the almanac. But then we read on to learn that the top-ranked city is Pittsburgh. Number two is Boston. We wouldn't want to live in Pittsburgh, although we admit that, never having visited there, ours is a subjective view. On the other hand, Boston we have seen, and we wouldn't want to live there either.

At any rate, Greenville-Pitt County is too small to be rated by the "Places Rated Almanac" and for that we are thankful. We know that even using the almanac's rating system our area would have to rank high in some ways. (Medical care being one). No doubt other phases of our way of living would not rate so high with those who do the rankings. We don't know how climate fits into the picture but apparently the snows which regularly wrap up Boston and Pittsburgh are not a major factor. That is OK with us, too. We will live without the snows.

Anyway, those who wish to follow the rankings of the "Places Rated Almanac" are certainly free to move to the top-rated cities. As for the rest of us, it may be we see more important values in choosing a place to live than the criteria set by the almanac's editors.

Reagan's Call Has Double Meaning

WASHINGTON — Although President Reagan's telephone call to Syrian President Hafez Assad recently was ostensibly limited to saying thanks for the return of reporter Jerry Levin, in fact it was a belated admission that the U.S. needs Syrian help to block a second Khomeini-style Islamic state — this one smack on Israel's border.

Arab leader able to interfere with or block outright the development of a Shiite fundamentalist state on Israel's northern border obtained by Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, America's most virulent hater.

That menace is pointed like a dagger at Israel. But it also threatens every interest the United States has in the Islamic world.

When Reagan thanked Assad for sending Levin home, he also asked the Syrian president to help free four other Americans still held by radical Shiites. There is no way in the world that the U.S. could communicate with the actual kidnappers or even their agents.

Two years ago, when Shultz helped Israel force its unequal withdrawal terms on powerless, occupied Lebanon, Shiite fundamentalism was a bare smoulder in Southern Lebanon. What fanned it to flames was the long Israeli occupation. That bitterly resisted foreign rule might never have happened if Assad had been brought front-and-center into the 1983 Lebanon negotiations.

Since then the display and growth of Syrian power in the face of overt U.S. hostility have been phenomenal. Assad single-handedly caused the Shultz peace agreement to collapse simply by refusing to acknowledge its existence and exerting his control over Lebanon's government. Now Assad is a victorious spectator, watching Israel rush for the exits without having to lift a finger to hasten the process.

At the same time, his eternal effort to outflank Israel militarily shows some success. Soviet arms of far greater power than any offered before are now deployed. If during Israel's 1982 invasion of Lebanon Assad had been armed with the SAM-5 anti-aircraft missile he now has, the Israeli air force could not have downed nearly 100 Syrian aircraft without a loss. Israel now has reason to be increasingly concerned about Syrian military power at the very moment its armies are, for the first time in its history, in voluntary retreat — retreat dictated by the growing power and fanaticism of Shiite radicals.

The problem of Soviet arms is dwarfed by the menace of this Khomeini-style radicalism in Southern Lebanon. Israeli Defense Minister Itzhak Rabin on his recent visit here condemned the Lebanon war for "letting the Shiite genie out of the bottle ... one of the worst mistakes that Israel has ever made." Rabin was too diplomat to mention American connivance with that mistake.

Although no one can assess Assad's long-run ability to deal with the Shiite threat overflowing from his ally in Iran, there is no question about his desire to do so. A Khomeini-style Shiite regime in Lebanon — even if only in part of a cantonized Lebanon — would pose grave danger to Assad's minority Alewite regime.

Nevertheless, Assad talks grandly about infecting West Bank Palestinians with the same Shiite virus from which Israel is fleeing in Lebanon. Damascus Radio trumpeted on Feb. 5 that "awakening the Arabs in the occupied homeland (the West Bank) and revolutionizing them to the level of Southern Lebanon" is the great objective of the Arab world. But whatever the danger for Israel from such an "awakening" on the Israeli-occupied West Bank, it would further spread the Khomeini fire in the Arab world, threatening Arab and Islamic states everywhere.

Before such lethal elements of Islamic nationalism rise to flood tide, Syria is a place to be studiously cultivated, not ignored. Even political realists in Israel are fully aware of that fact. So is Ronald Reagan.

The reasons Reagan would likely cite for a veto are straightforward — both the farm measures and the famine relief are budget-busters in a year when deficit-cutting is the prime topic.

Dole claimed the bill put the government another $1 billion in the hole, especially since the famine relief was far above the $25 million asked by Reagan.

Dole, struggling through the first floor test of his tenure as majority leader, made it clear he considers this fight only the first round in the budget battle and so did the White House.

"We have bitten a very tough political bullet" in calling for severe spending reductions in numerous areas, said spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "We aren't going to back away from that now."

But that argument is a tough one for Republican officeholders. Twenty-two GOP Senate seats are, among the 34 up in 1986, while all the House seats are, of course, on the line next year. And nowhere was the 1986 political angle clearer than in the tally of the Senate roll call.

On the key vote on the first farm amendment, eight Senate Republicans bolted to join the Democrats, while only one Democrat went the other way. Of the eight Republicans, four are up for re-election in 1986 in the heart of the nation's Farm Belt: Jim Abner of South Dakota, Mark Andrews of North Dakota, Charles Grassley of Iowa and Robert Kasten of Wisconsin.

On the final roll call, when issue wasn't in doubt, those four were joined by these other 1986 Republican hopefuls: Alfonso D'Amato, New York; Jeremiah Denton, Ala.; Paula Hawkins, Fla.; Charles Mathias, Maryland; Frank Murkowski, Alaska and Arlen Specter, Pennsylvania.

Abner faced an especially clear choice and not just because the entire South Dakota legislature was in town on Tuesday to press for the bill. Reagan may have won South Dakota with 77 percent of the vote in 1984, but that is little comfort for Abner in 1986.

For all Abner has to do to consider the election possibilities is look to the chief sponsor of the farm credit passed in the House: Democratic Rep. Tom Daschle of South Dakota.

First Class Booking

Attention, earthlings. It won't be long before you can "bury" your loved ones in outer space. Deke Slayton, a former astronaut, is working in tandem with a consortium of companies that will orbit the ashes of a deceased person 1,900 miles above the earth. Funeral services should begin in late 1986.

The Department of Transportation has enthusiastically approved the plan and said "it represents a creative response to the president's initiative to encourage the commercial use of space."

As I understand it, the remains of your Uncle Sidney will be compressed by a secret process in a special two-inch tall, lipstick-shaped titanium capsule, which will then be placed into a 300-pound shiny sphere, along with the ashes of 10,330 of the recently departed. The sphere will be launched into the heavens where it's guaranteed to remain in orbit for at least 63 million years, or you get your money back.

While Mr. Slayton's consortium will provide the rocket and the capsule, they prefer to leave actual sales and arrangements to funeral directors and undertakers around the country.

This might lead to some problems.

"Please have a chair."

"Thank you. I would like to cremate my Uncle Sidney and put him in celestial orbit."

"You're in luck. We have a launch in one month, and we can reserve a place for him."

"Wonderful. I noticed in your advertisement that the price for the service was $3,900."

"That's the base cost just to get him up there. Did you love your Uncle Sidney?"

"Very much."

"Then I wouldn't advise you put his ashes in the standard titanium capsule."

"Why not?"

"I'm not supposed to tell you this, but although the containers are advertised to last for 65 million years, some of them fall apart after 30 million. You wouldn't want your uncle's ashes all over the sky, would you?"

"I guess not."

"Then I'd recommend this upgraded 'From Here to Eternity' model. Notice the outside is twice as strong as titanium, and the inside is lined with French satin."

"How much is it?"

"It's only $900 more, but if you insist on the cheap, tacky one, I'm sure your uncle would understand."

"No, no. I'll take the 'From Here to Eternity' capsule. Will that do it?"

"There is the placement of the ash container in the sphere. I assume you would want your Uncle Sidney as close to the skin as possible, facing toward the earth."

"Certainly."

"Then there is a premium charge of $600, to guarantee his ashes won't be thrown in the middle with all the economy class passengers. Will you want to bid a fond adieu to your loved one as he is launched into space?"

"Of course."

"We can give you a package tour to Cape Canaveral with complimentary breakfast before liftoff, at a group rate of $1,500 per person."

"Sending Uncle Sidney up into orbit is costing me more than I planned on."

"But it's worth it. Every time you look up to the heavens, you will see your Uncle Sidney and know he is smiling down on you because you booked him first class."

Public Forum

To the editor: Thanks to the Daily Reflector and to East Carolina University for bringing good musical entertainment to many people on Saturday evening, Feb. 23. The United States Air Force Tactical Air Command Band of Langley Air Force Base, Va., gave a fine performance to an enthusiastic audience. The program had variety. There was something for everyone to enjoy.

The director reminded us of what a great country we have. He spoke of patriotism, something we don't hear enough of nowadays.

Thank you, Daily Reflector and ECU, for providing many people with an evening of good music, a pleasant time to long remember.

Strength For Today

"How much are you worth?"

"None of your business," you reply angrily. "I'll take up matters of this sort with my banker and with the income tax man when he comes to check my return."

No, brother, you'll take it up with me, and with the people who live on either side of you, and with the people who live in your own house. In dead earnestness we ask, "How much are you worth?"

You have a house, a life insurance policy, and two cars — so what? The question of importance is, how faithful are you in carrying your share of the load? How much do you add to the happiness of your home, to the richness of life along your street? You are worth just as much as you serve and love. You are worth just as much as the happiness you produce.

You know partly. I know partly. The full truth is on the scrolls of heaven.

It was not known what caused the accident, Ms. Eysaman said. The accident is under investigation.

Louisiana Governor Indicted As Racketeer

NEW-ORLEANS (AP) — Authorities will try to seize nearly $10 million in "ill-gotten gains" from Gov. Edwin Edwards and six other men indicted for allegedly selling state certification for hospitals and nursing homes, a prosecutor says.

Edwards, two of his relatives and four friends and business associates were named Thursday in a 51-count federal indictment charging racketeering conspiracy.

Edwards, a 57-year-old Democrat in his third term, is the sixth governor in the nation this century to be indicted while in office. He is accused of netting $2 million from the alleged scheme.

Edwards has acknowledged receiving about $2 million from Health Services Development Corp., the company that allegedly obtained the state certificates, as fees when he was in private life, prior to his re-election in 1983. He served two terms as governor from 1972-1980, but by state law could not run for a third consecutive term. He began the third term last March.

Thursday's indictment said money the defendants received is subject to confiscation under the federal Racketeering Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act or RICO.

U.S. Attorney John Volz said prosecutors' aim is "seizure of all of the ill-gotten gains. The RICO statute enables us to do that. The FBI cannot take ill-gotten gains." The indictment alleges Edwards used his position to gain favorable treatment of Health Services Development Corp., which allegedly obtained state certificates that qualified hospitals and nursing homes for state money. The certificates were granted to those interested in actually building the facilities, the indictment says.

Volz said they were tipped by backers of hospitals and nursing homes whose projects were blocked by a moratorium imposed by Edwards. Edwards ordered eight projects exempted, five of them involving his former business associates.

Volz said he wants the certificates seized, meaning the facilities could not receive federal reimbursement for building costs. He refused to say whether other indictments might be returned, or whether the continuing probe still involves the governor.

Edwards said he had not read the indictment and could not comment on it.

The governor, who had been examined by a doctor earlier in the day, said jokingly, "I'll be able to live out any sentence I might receive as a result of this. It was not unexpected."

Edwards has appeared before several federal grand juries in investigations ranging from Internal Revenue Service probes to land deals to alleged influence buying by South Korean businessman Tong-sun Park. He always emerged unscathed.

There is nothing in state law which would force him to step down pending the outcome of trial, or even if convicted. He would have to go through an impeachment proceeding, Edwards has said he doesn't intend to leave office.

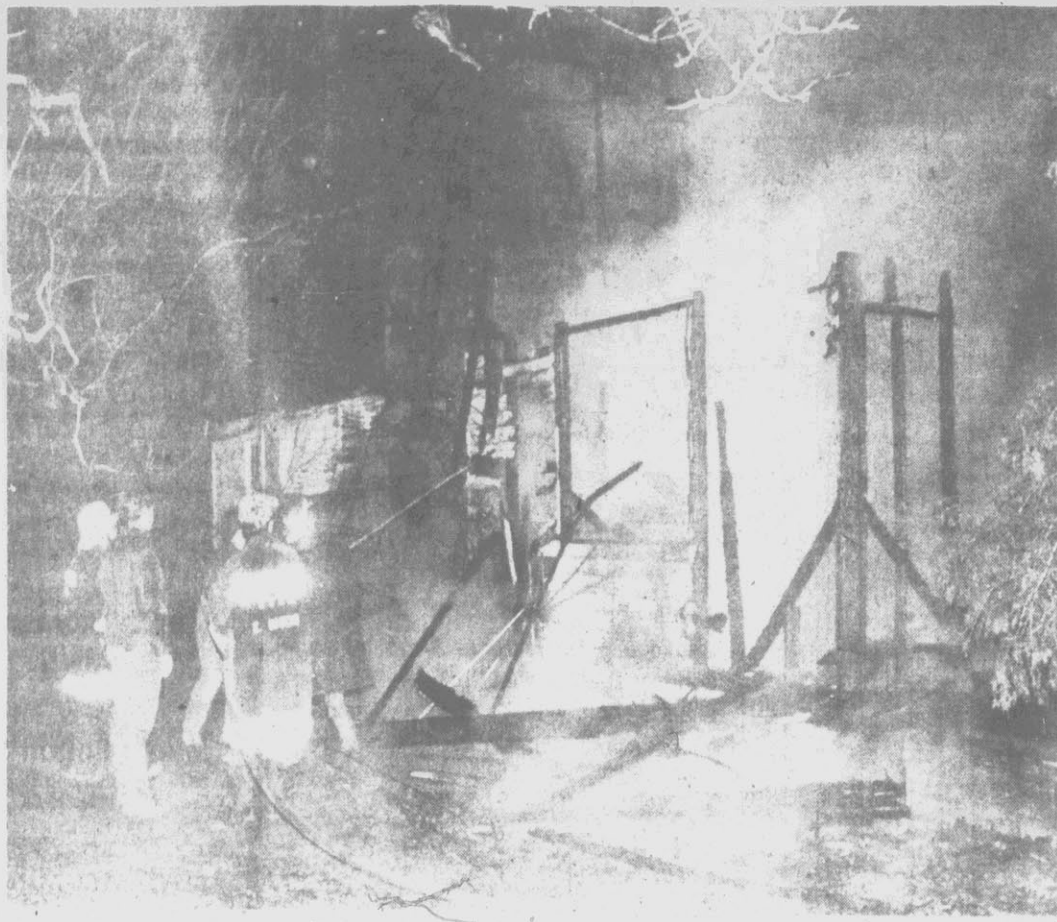

The indictment said Edwards concealed his role as business partner with two of the others named in the indictment "so that he could later take official acts as governor to help the ongoing enterprise."

Among other things, the indictment said that Edwards signed a letter written by one of his codefendants that established a moratorium on new hospital construction.

In the first count of the indictment, all seven were charged with conspiring to violate RICO. Counts 2-50 alleged mail fraud and wire fraud in a scheme to defraud the state. The 51st count accused one person of obstructing justice by telling two people to withhold information from the grand jury.

Volz said he expects the trial to begin within 90 days, and last about a month.

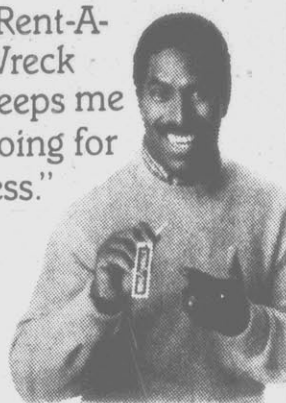

House Fire

Pactolus firemen assisted by Staton House and Stokes firefighters battle a fire that destroyed a vacant house owned by Harvey Whitehurst early this morning. According to the Pitt County fire marshal's office, the house was located on the Old Creek Road near Pactolus. Firemen were on the scene for about four hours after the 3:32 a.m. blaze, which almost completely destroyed the wood frame house. Cause of the fire was not known. The value of the house was listed at about $20,000. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

House Democrats Seeking Therapy At Classy West Virginia Retreat

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 150 Democratic members of Congress are heading for a classy West Virginia resort for three days of political group therapy, a treatment leaders say may help cure the party's post-election identity crisis.

The retreat, to be held at the Greenbrier Hotel in the mountains of southeastern West Virginia, is "an effort to open minds ... and reach a sharper consensus" on issues, according to organizer Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., chairman of the House Democratic Caucus.

Democrats are still having a hard time getting their act together in the wake of President Reagan's landslide re-election victory, and the conference will help Democrats focus on legislative and political strategy, Gephardt said.

A train was chartered for today's five-hour trip from Washington to the resort. Members were taking along families and selected staff members.

"We look forward to this as an opportunity for members to learn more about each other," Gephardt said. "Members are islands, running to and fro to the floor and to their offices and to their districts. They don't have much time to meet each other."

The conference includes a Saturday lecture by Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee Iacocca on "Where Does America Go From Here?" and a workshop with Rolling Stone magazine editor William Greider on "How is the Country changing?"

Other speakers will be former Texas Rep. Barbara Jordan and former Johnson administration aide Horace Busby on "Where is the Country Politically," and former Reagan White House communications director David Gergen on "Communications and Politics."

The sessions are closed to the news media, but about 30 "special guests" who have contributed money to the party to help defray expenses of the conference will be permitted to sit in the closed-door sessions, organizers said.

The three-day event is costing $150,000, two thirds of which is being paid for from private contributions, said John McEvoy, president of a non-profit foundation set up by Democrats to attract funds.

In addition, members are paying $400 each for the trip, McEvoy said.

Democrats are copying the idea from Republicans, who in the 1970s and early 1980s had an annual three-day issues conference at the Tidewater Inn on Maryland's Eastern Shore.

However, these so-called "Tidewater Conferences" were open to news coverage.

Gephardt said the decision to bar reporters from the sessions, while inviting big contributors, was done so members could have free-wheeling discussions and not feel inhibited.

Gephardt said the retreat would be "the beginning of an effort" to get House Democrats working as a team.

"Reaching a consensus is awfully difficult to do when you've got 250 members and don't have a president," Gephardt said. "Over the last four years, we've done less than an optimal job at it."

Good Samaritan?

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — She's a woman with a cause, the nemesis of the meter maid, and she plugs nickels and dimes into every expired parking meter she happens to pass in downtown Rochester.

Louise Hill, 52, said she doesn't know the drivers of the estimated 50 cars a week she saves from $7 parking tickets. But she said she hopes she brightens their day anyway.

"It doesn't cost a lot of money to make somebody happy," said Ms. Hill, a secretary at Rochester Institute of Technology's City Center.

She said she started feeding meters about two years ago after a friend got a ticket at an expired meter.

Army Is Making Education Pitch

NEW YORK (AP) — The Reagan administration has warned that the days of plentiful student aid are numbered, but one segment of the federal government, the Army, begins an ad campaign today offering high school students tens of thousands of dollars in college assistance.

The only hitch is one in the Army. Army spokesman Maj. Robert Mireleson said the ads, scheduled to appear for the first time tonight on evening newscasts on the three major networks, will publicize the "New GI Bill Plus New Army College Fund."

Eligible high school students can get from $17,000 to $25,200 in college benefits as of July 1 if they agree to serve a two- to four-year tour of active duty in the Army.

To be eligible, a person must enlist and enter active duty between July 1 and June 30, 1988, have a high school diploma or equivalency diploma, score 50 or better on the Armed Forces qualification test, and enlist in what the Army considers a "critical skill." Those include infantryman, combat engineer, metalworker, Pershing missile crew member and food service specialist.

Although the program takes effect in July, enlistees can sign up for it now under the Army's "delayed entry program," which allows them a year to report for training.

The Army's $8 million ad campaign comes as President Reagan has sent shudders through higher education with plans to slash most federal student aid programs. Under his budget proposals, no student could receive more than $4,000 a year in federal assistance. Some students can now get as much as $11,000.

Reagan also wants to cut funding for Pell Grants to $2.7 billion from the current $3.5 billion and to set a family income ceiling of $32,000 for students applying for guaranteed student loans.

The Army's offer isn't entirely new, however, or significantly more generous than in previous years.

Under the 8-year-old Veterans Education and Employment Assistance Program expiring June 30, qualified enlistees could get up to $26,400 in benefits — $1,200 more than under the new GI Bill taking effect in July.

The old benefit program required enlistees to kick in $2,700 out of their Army pay to receive the college aid. The new program cuts the required personal contribution to $1,200.

The Army traditionally has offered the best college aid deal of all the service branches. The Navy, Air Force and Marines offer enlistees $10,800 in college aid for a four-year tour, including a $1,200 personal payroll contribution.

Army spokesman Lt. Col. John Cullen explained: "We have the biggest service. We have the biggest personnel needs."

Turner Reportedly Plans Takeover Of TV Network

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Federal Communications Commission official says broadcasting magnate Ted Turner is considering an attempt to take over a major television network, which two published reports identify as CBS.

James C. McKinney, chief of the FCC's mass media bureau, said former FCC Chairman Charles Ferris, a Washington attorney who represents Turner, had met with a number of current commissioners to discuss the possible takeover bid.

McKinney did not identify the network, but today's editions of the trade journal Communications Daily reported Turner was eyeing CBS.

Today's editions of The New York Times quoted FCC sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, as saying Turner had spent several days in Washington making presentations to each of the five commissioners.

"They were advised that Mr. Turner has the intention of taking over CBS," one source said. No formal proposal was presented.

CBS News quoted an unidentified FCC source Thursday night as saying an attorney for Turner had discussed a bid to take over CBS with FCC commissioners.

Tom Seem, a spokesman for the network, told The Times, "CBS executives have told CBS News that they know of no truth to the reports of any takeover attempts of CBS Inc. by Ted Turner or his organization."

Communications Daily said it was told Ferris tried to determine the commissioners' attitude toward such a proposal and they told him to "bring us something" to consider.

Ferris told The Times that Turner has never made a secret of his interest in acquiring a network.

"Ted Turner has always said, 'I want to have a network,'" Ferris said. "Mr. Turner doesn't usually start out on something he can't accomplish."

Turner, owner of Cable News Network and other broadcast properties, two years ago suggested a merger of his Turner Broadcasting System with CBS.

The network is already the object of a takeover bid by Fairness in Media, a group of political conservatives who have received support from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

Doctor Says Kiss May Be Hazardous

WILTON, Conn. (AP) — Next time you're at a party and a casual acquaintance offers you a welcoming kiss, Dr. Hans H. Neumann recommends you play it safe and turn the other cheek.

"I'm not by any means against kissing that means something," Neumann says. It's what he calls the American "cocktail party kiss" — which he says has replaced the handshake — that should be kissed off.

"I have seen cases of strep throats and of upper respiratory infections transmitted in this manner, and there are some more remote infection hazards, such as herpes," Neumann wrote in an editorial in the current issue of Connecticut Medicine, the journal of the Connecticut State Medical Society.

The cocktail party kiss "seems to have given way to a growing trend to greet even casual acquaintances with a kiss on the mouth," Neumann wrote.

"Sociologists could probably pinpoint an explanation for this evolving custom," he wrote. "My own guess is that it reflects the more open and casual sexuality of the Sixties and Seventies. People, particularly young people, are less inhibited about public display of affection and related emotions."

Kissing on the mouth as a greeting, he wrote, "appears more prevalent among those in the educated and sophisticated strata of our society."

But despite the risk, "If you like it, do it, by all means," he said in an interview. "I'm only against meaningless kissing that no one wants, that just becomes routine."

Not only does it become routine, Neumann says, it can be unhealthy.

Neumann says he is not aware of any studies that document his belief, "but I've discussed this with other physicians. They also feel the same."

There is some medical logic to this.

For everyday occasions, if one must kiss, Neumann advocates doing what the Europeans do: kiss on the cheek.

"In France, it is customary to buss each cheek, usually the left one first," he wrote. "In Belgium, one kisses three times: left cheek, right cheek, then left again."

Neumann said the old Polynesian and Eskimo custom of rubbing noses "is, if anything, worse as a health hazard than is kissing on the mouth."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market gained ground today, aided by new evidence of strength in the economy.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 4.64 to 1,288.65 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 6-5 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the Commerce Department reported that the index of leading economic indicators rose 1.7 percent last month.

It was the largest increase in the index, which is designed to detect future economic trends, since it climbed 1.9 percent in June 1983. The latest figure came in well above most advance estimates on Wall Street.

The news drew a mixed response in the credit markets, where interest rates lately have been rising on fears of a tighter Federal Reserve credit policy and the prospect of increased loan demand in an economy growing faster than had been anticipated.

But some stock traders evidently read it as a positive portent for corporate profits in the months ahead.

Malcolm Baldrige, secretary of commerce, said the figures betokened "renewed upward momentum in employment and output."

The government also said construction spending rose 2 percent last month, after a revised increase of 0.6 percent in December.

Phillips Petroleum gained 1/4 to 49 1/2. Carl Icahn said he was seeking to enlist the support of Sir James Goldsmith, the British financier, in his bid for control of Phillips.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.98 points to 1,284.01.

About eight stocks rose in price for every seven that fell on the NYSE.

Big Board volume slowed to 100.72 million shares from 107.69 million Wednesday.

The NYSE's composite index rose .27 to 104.93. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .95 at 227.43.

the five greatest assets of the area which will be compiled for a description of the Octad region, Walker said.

"The two things that came out of this first meeting were the need for identity and marketing of the area," he said.

Walker said earlier this week that the Octad coalition is an idea chamber executives from the eight cities "have been discussing for some time."

"We feel like the eight cities and their proximity have a real need for sharing and regional promotion," he said.

"If the support price is lowered, the assessment will certainly be lowered, too," Jackson said. "So if he's looking at $1.70 and a quarter contribution, that's not a whole lot different than $1.35 and no assessment. So, economically he can go on figuring it won't get any better and it won't get any worse."

W.B. Jenkins, assistant to the president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, disagreed. With a $1.70 price support and 25-cent assessment, the farmer must pay income tax on the full price he receives on tobacco — including the 25 cents per pound deducted from his check — because the Internal Revenue Service counts the assessment as capital stock in Stabilization.

"The government is gonna be the big taker on this one," Jenkins said of the $1.70 price support and 25-cent assessment.

North Carolina Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said the announcement ended "some of the uncertainties felt by tobacco producers about the coming season."

"However, I am concerned that the price support could be lower by the time the tobacco markets open, since legislation could possibly be passed allowing the price support to be dropped to as low as $1.35 as some organizations have suggested," Graham said.

Stabilization and the six major domestic cigarette makers have been negotiating to buy the cooperative's 812-million-pound inventory of tobacco over a five-year period, in return for lowering the flue-cured price support.

things thrown at us that forced us to go back to Congress" Paramore said. For example, some groups wanted the price support legislated, he said.

"With the mood of Congress, how could anyone who truly wanted a (tobacco) program force it to that kind of abuse?" he added. "I'm not being vindictive, I'm just saying we've got to examine motives."

Paramore said that, despite the outcome of the 1985 tobacco struggle, he feels "everyone involved in the whole situation must sit and look realistically at the forces and see what the motives truly are."

Producers especially must "recognize where we are coming from and not sit back and turn the other cheek anymore," he said.

Chevys Flexing Their Muscles

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — The powers that be in NASCAR are breathing a bit easier now that the Chevrolets have flexed their horsepower.

Just two weeks ago, Bill Elliott and his low-flying Thunderbird were producing visions of a Ford runaway this season in Grand National stock car racing.

Elliott shattered the all-time stock car qualifying record with a lap of 205.114 mph at Daytona International Raceway, then overwhelmed the field in the prestigious Daytona 500.

Wounded cries of "Slow down the Fords" were sounding from the non-Ford garages.

"It seemed like the rest of us were gonna be hunting elephants with a 22 rifle," said Chevrolet driver Neil Bonnett.

But Bonnett's teammate Darrell

Waltrip won the pole and Dale Earnhardt the race last weekend at Richmond, Va., both of them in Chevrolet Monte Carlo SS cars. And, Thursday, Terry Labonte's Piedmont-sponsored Monte Carlo barely missed the North Carolina Motor Speedway qualifying record as he won the pole for Sunday's Carolina 500.

"On this racetrack you really have to have your car handling well," said Labonte, the defending Winston Cup champion. "That's where it was won today. I don't think Ford or Chevrolet has an advantage here. Whoever is handling best has the advantage."

Labonte's quick lap on the high-banked 1.017-mile oval was clocked at 145.067 mph, just .017 off Harry Gant's track record of 145.084 set last March.

His elapsed time of 25.238 seconds was even closer, missing Gant's mark by just .003.

"I didn't really expect to run that quick," said Labonte. "But when you go out in practice and run as fast as anyone else and still have a little left, you go out there and go after it. That's what I was doing (before qualifying) today."

Dale Inman, the crew chief on Labonte's team, gave his driver most of the credit.

"I think what Terry practiced most was holding his breath," Inman said with a grin. "That's really fast on a mile track."

Waltrip, who took the outside spot on the front row with a 144.711 lap, said, "We blew an engine in practice, so we changed motors just before qualifying."

"Actually, we changed a lot of things, so it was really just a shot in the dark. It just turned out to be a good shot."

Ricky Rudd, in one of the sleek new Fords, was third, the only non-Chevy to break into the top five. Rudd had a lap of 144.614, while Bonnett was at 144.551 and Geoff Bodine 144.375.

Elliott, who crashed at Richmond after qualifying eighth, was 14th Thursday at 142.653.

"Boy, this ain't Daytona," he said. "I'd been running a little better in practice. The car feels just fine, but it just isn't running all that strong. I'm just gonna have to go back and check everything so we can get ready for Sunday's race."

Renegades Prepare To Try To Stop Flutie, Generals

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The transplanted Renegades expect to have their hands full in containing Doug Flutie and his New Jersey Generals in Orlando's home debut in the United States Football League tonight.

The Renegades, who showed a porous defense and punchless offense in a crushing 35-7 opening-week loss to the Tampa Bay Bandits, are prepared for a scrambling, gambling Flutie as a result of his strong second-half effort in the General's 38-28 loss to Birmingham last Sunday.

"We expect him to roll out more. We've worked on a few defenses to hopefully contain him," said Renegades defensive end Scott Hutchinson.

The Generals actually have three good running backs in Flutie, Herschel Walker and Maurice Carthon, the Renegades believe.

Flutie wants to play more aggressively against Orlando than in his regular-season debut against the Stallions. The 1984 Heisman Trophy winner out of Boston College doesn't want to be trailing "by 20 points or have to wait until the fourth quarter to get cranked up," he said in practice this week.

After the Generals fell behind 31-7, Flutie completed 12 of 18 passes for 189 yards and two touchdowns. Said Flutie about his rolling out, running and conducting 2-minute drills in the middle of the game: "There's something about it. I'm in control, and I feel better. Maybe I just have a helter-skelter attitude."

New Jersey Coach Walt Michaels isn't too happy about Flutie's desire to scramble more, however.

"It can become exciting, and it can become dangerous," Michaels said. "I guess that's what everyone wants."

Coach Lee Corso of the Renegades, formerly the Washington Federals, will start Jerry Golsteyn, who completed 25 of 43 passes for 231 yards last week despite eight sacks by the Bandits.

Golsteyn, a dropback thrower who relies on a short, controlled passing game, is the main offensive hope for Orlando, along with running back Curtis Bledsoe, who ran for 1,080 yards last season as a Washington Federal.

In this weekend's only Saturday contest, Los Angeles visits Portland in a night game. On Sunday, it's Arizona at San Antonio, Denver at Birmingham, Houston at Tampa Bay and Baltimore at Oakland. Memphis plays at Jacksonville on Monday night.

Both the Express and Breakers hope to bounce back from close opening-day losses in their Western Conference game Saturday night. Last Sunday, the Express lost 34-33 to Houston in a contest that featured Jim Kelly's record 574-yard passing performance for the Gamblers. The Breakers' 9-7 loss to Arizona was extra costly because Portland lost running star Marcus Dupree for the season to injury.

In its second straight home game, San Antonio is looking for its first win in the contest with Arizona. The Gunslingers were beaten by Memphis 20-3 last Monday night.

Denver has beaten Birmingham twice in three meetings over the past two seasons. Birmingham is coming off its victory over the Generals. The Gold lost to Oakland 31-10 last week.

Kelly leads Houston against Tampa Bay following the most spectacular game of his pro career in which he tossed three touchdown passes in the last 10 minutes against Los Angeles. Kelly completed 35 of 54 passes for five touchdowns in his 574-yard day. In its opening victory over Orlando, Tampa Bay set a club record of 239 yards rushing.

In hosting the defending USFL champion Stars at the Oakland Coliseum, the Invaders hope to continue their domination in their series. They have beaten the Stars in all three previous meetings.

Lady Pirates Await Foe For Tournament Semifinal

East Carolina's Lady Pirates will await the verdict of Friday night's game between fourth seeded George Mason and number five Richmond to see who which team they will be playing in Saturday's semifinals of the ECAC-South women's tournament.

The tournament will begin Friday afternoon at Robins Center on the University of Richmond campus, with three games scheduled. The opening game of the afternoon will send number two James Madison (10-2) against number seven William & Mary (2-10) at 4 p.m. That will be followed at 6 p.m. by #3 UNC-Wilmington (7-5) facing #6 American (3-9), Richmond (4-8) and George Mason (5-7) will collide in the 8 p.m. game that winds up the second round.

The winners will have little time to rest as play resumes at 12 noon on Saturday. The lower bracket survivors meet in that game, while East Carolina (11-1) takes on the Richmond-GMU winner in a 2 p.m. game.

The championship will be decided on Sunday afternoon at 2 p.m. The title, the second ECAC-South women's championship, does not carry an automatic berth into the NCAA women's tournament, although league officials are hopeful of gaining one in the next few years.

East Carolina is the defending champion, having beaten Richmond for the title in last year's tournament, 54-39, played in Greenville.

The Lady Pirates breezed through the conference during regular season play with just one loss, that coming in their next to the last game at UNC-Wilmington, 79-70. However, the Pirates were the only team in the league to down James Madison, which beat every other team twice.

One of the things to watch in the tournament could be the scoring of Pirate guard Sylvia Bragg, who is closing in on her 1,000th career point. She currently had 970 and needs just 30 more to become the ninth 1,000 point scorer in ECU history. She is currently in ninth place on the all-time ECU scoring list behind team handball Olympian Sam Jones.

Anita Anderson will lead the Pirates into the tournament action with a 13.5 average while Loraine Foster is second with a 12.7 mark. Bragg comes next at 11.8 while Lisa Squirewell is hitting 10.7. The only other starter is Annette Phillips, hitting 4.4 points per game.

Squirewell is the leading rebounder with a 7.6 mark, followed by Anderson at 7.2. Non-starter Monique Pompili is the third rebounder with a 6.7 average.

UNC-W's Gwen Austin is the league's leading scorer with a 20.1 average, followed by Richmond's Karen Elsner at 19.0. Anderson stands sixth and Foster ninth.

Austin is also the top rebounder with a 12.7 average, followed by Elsner at 9.0. Squirewell is seventh and Anderson 11th.

Elizabeth Bell of UNC-W leads in field goal percentage with 54.1, followed by Austin at 51.7. Foster is seven at 48.7 and Anderson ninth at 47.8.

JMU's Sue Manelski leads in free throw shooting at 81.9 with American's Kia Cooper second at 79.8. Squirewell is ninth at 62.3.

American's Jody Thornton leads in assists with 6.7 with Bragg second at 5.5. Foster stands eighth at 2.8.

Austin leads in blocked shots with 2.6 per game while Anderson is third at 1.3 and Pompili is fourth at 1.1.

Linda Jones of GMU leads in steals with 3.6 while Richmond's Jackie Isreal is second at 2.6. Bragg is third with 2.5 per game.

In their previous meeting in Greenville, Madison recorded a 74-65 win, led by Eric Esch's 19 points. John Newman, a 6-5 sophomore forward, is the leading scorer for the Dukes, averaging 12.5 points per game. He is the only player in double figures, however.

Other starters are expected to be 6-3 sophomore Eric Brent (8.6) and 6-2 freshman Robert Griffin (8.9) at the guards, 6-6 Darrell Jackson (9.3) at center and Esch, a 6-9 1/2 junior, (6.1) at the other forward spot.

James Madison leads the series between the two teams, 7-2, with both of the ECU wins coming in Greenville. The closest ECU has come in to Madison in Harrisonburg was nine points in their first meeting there in 1980. Since then, the closest game was in a 17-point margin last season.

Chargers, Lady Rams Oust Conley

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer
HAVELOCK — The trip to the District II 3-A high school basketball tournament was brief for both D.H. Conley squads, as Greene Central's girls eliminated the Valkyries 47-33 and Ayden-Grifton held off the boys 60-54 Thursday night.

Ayden-Grifton advances to face West Craven Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the semifinals of the tourney, while the Lady Rams of Greene Central play Havelock in Monday's 7 p.m. opener.

Danny West fired in 16 points to lead the Chargers, while Doug Anderson chipped in 14 and Marvin Smith 13.

Steve Mills paced the Vikings with 21 points including all 11 attempts from the free throw line. Jeff Wright contributed 13 points for Conley.

The Vikings scorched the nets for 20 out of 22 free throws, while Ayden-Grifton managed a weak eight of 19. The Chargers also missed the front end of all seven one-and-one situations in the fourth quarter.

"I don't know what it is with our free throws," Ayden-Grifton Coach Bob Murphrey said. "We're definitely snake-bitten. It's a mental thing; I reckon I'm making too much of it. If I just let them go out and shoot, it might be better."

The Chargers jumped out to a 9-2 lead in the first quarter, but Wright posted six points as Conley trimmed the margin to 11-9 with 2:54 left.

West connected from the corner to give Ayden-Grifton a 13-9 advantage, but the Vikings posted the next eight points including six by Mills to take a 17-13 edge with 33 seconds remaining in the period.

Ayden-Grifton tied the score three times in the first two minutes of the second quarter, then went ahead to stay with 5:12 remaining on a 17-footer by West. Wright sank two free throws as the Vikings cut the margin to 31-29 with 1:39 left, but the Chargers closed the half with six unanswered points for a 37-29 advantage.

A pair of free throws by Conley's Joel Cox set the score at 41-34 with 6:34 left in the third quarter, and Ayden-Grifton rattled off a 10-0 string on four points each from Anderson and Smith.

But Conley outscored the Chargers 7-3 to cut the deficit to 54-41 going into the fourth quarter.

"I thought we played well offensively for two and a half quarters," Murphrey said. "Then we got frustrated because we got hit inside a couple of times and got no call. Our lack of free throw shooting frustrated us even more."

"We weren't really intense on defense. We didn't move down the court like we should have on defense."

Smith opened the fourth quarter with a move inside to give the Chargers a 56-41 edge, but Conley outscored Ayden-Grifton 9-2 through the three-minute mark to cut the gap to 58-52. Anderson missed a pair of free throw opportunities, while Smith and Maurice Berry were off-target once before West hit two attempts with 29 seconds remaining for a 60-52 Charger lead.

Mills swished two more from the line for Conley with 20 seconds left for the final tally.

"It's the same story as we've had all year," Conley Coach Walter Claybrook said. "We had some spells where we did nothing offensively. If you go by the final score, we missed enough easy shots under the basket to win the game."

"I was pleased with our effort, but it looked like Ayden-Grifton was a step quicker on the loose balls; they seemed to come up with every one. It just came down to their experience in the end."

LADY RAMS-VALKYRIES

Greene Central jumped out to a 12-3 lead with 2:53 left in the first quarter and closed the period with seven unanswered points for a 19-7 lead.

The Valkyries continued to falter in the second period, as the Lady Rams outscored Conley 8-4 to take a 27-11 halftime advantage.

"I think the main thing that hurt us in the first half was they were hot and we were mentally down," Conley Coach Joy Riddick said. "Our offense broke down; we were standing around, and you can't do that against a team like Greene Central. I thought we played well in the second half."

Cynthia Corbett scored four points as the Lady Rams posted the first eight points of the third quarter, but Conley matched Greene Central through the end of the period and trailed 41-17 going into the fourth quarter.

Conley opened the final period with 10 unanswered points, as Angela Smith drove in for two layups and Lisa Mills and Trellany Boyd sank a pair of free throws each. Greene Central posted six points, but Conley retaliated with six free throws — two by Boyd and four by Smith — through the end of the game.

"In the first half, I was totally pleased with the way we played," Greene Central Coach Brenda Dail said. "But we were really sloppy at the end. They realize that, and that shows me we can correct our mistakes. Our biggest advantage was we are stronger and have got more experience."

Havelock defeated C.B. Aycock in the opening round to advance, and Dail said her team will have to perform well the entire game against the tourney hosts.

"Havelock has a strong rebounding team," Dail said. "They have good outside game; good shooters. We're going to have to block out their big girl inside and stick with the fundamentals."

Detroit Upsets Tigers

By The Associated Press
 The University of Detroit, in the midst of a renaissance season, made believers of fourth-ranked Memphis State.

"Sometimes, you come into a place like Detroit and the players don't know what to expect, so they don't play hard," Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk said after Detroit upset his Tigers 71-66 in college basketball Thursday night.

Detroit, which suffered through an 8-20 disaster last year, raised its record to 16-11.

"It's a warm feeling," Detroit Coach Don Sicks said. "All the hard work that the team put in, all the sacrifices by the coaching staff, it all comes down to this."

It was the biggest triumph for the Titans since 1979, when they knocked off then-No. 10 Marquette. The crowd of 8,133 was largest at Detroit's Calihan Hall since that Marquette game.

In other Top Twenty action, No. 3 Michigan beat Wisconsin 88-68, No. 7 Louisiana Tech stopped Northeast Louisiana 72-65, No. 11 Kansas defeated Nebraska 70-65, West Texas State stung No. 15 Tulsa 70-62, and Washington tripped No. 19 Arizona 60-58.

Greg Wendt scored 23 points and Keith Gray added 21 for Detroit, which led 41-29 at halftime before watching Memphis State pull within 65-62 in the final two minutes.

But the Titans got some clutch foul shooting to hold off the Metro Conference-champion Tigers, who slipped to 23-3.

"We couldn't get the ballgame to where we needed it," Kirk said. "And they played very, very inspired."

Kirk said he suspected his team might be in for trouble. "We're always scared of let-downs," he said. "When you're out of your conference, which you've already won, you sometimes have a mental letdown."

Detroit got a good effort from 6-foot-7 sophomore Brian Humes, who scored 13 points and helped shut down Memphis State's 6-10 star, Keith Lee.

Lee made just five of 18 shots from the floor, although he wound up with 16 points.

"A couple of times, we adjusted by sagging back and denying the ball," Humes said. "I tried to front him quite a bit."

Said Lee: "Everyone you play against, you have to respect. We took them kind of lightly."

William Bedford scored 22 points for Memphis State.

Top Ten
 Roy Tarpley scored 21 points and helped Michigan clinch the Big Ten regular-season title. It was the Wolverines' first outright conference championship since 1977.

Michigan tied a 20-year school record by winning its 13th straight game and improved to 22-3 overall and 13-2 in the Big Ten.

The game was tied 34-34 at halftime before Michigan started the second half with a 19-8 spree. J.J. Webber had with 23 points for Wisconsin, 13-13 overall and 4-12 in the Big Ten.

Robert Godbolt scored 17 points and Louisiana Tech went on to beat Northeast Louisiana in a Southland Conference game.

Tech, 25-2 overall and 11-1 in the league, took the lead for good early in the game. The visitors cut the margin to 50-47 midway through the second half, but Louisiana Tech scored the next seven points to take control.

Willie Simmons and Willie Bland had 13 points apiece for the winning Bulldogs.

Second Ten
 Danny Manning scored 22 points and Kansas held off visiting Nebraska in Big Eight play. Manning, a 6-11 center who has already set a freshman scoring record for Kansas, hit a couple of key baskets late in the game to guide the Jayhawks.

Kansas, 23-6 overall and 10-3 in the conference, has clinched second place behind Oklahoma in the league race. Dave Hoppen scored 22 points for Nebraska.

In Amarillo, Texas, Tommy Johnson scored 19 points as West Texas State stopped Tulsa in a game that scrambled the Missouri Valley Conference race.

The loss dropped Tulsa into a tie with Wichita State and Southern Illinois atop the league standings with 11-4 records in the conference.

GTC Votes To Disband

The Greenville Tennis Club has voted to disband and has donated its remaining fund to the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department in support of tennis.

Founded 14 years ago, the GTC has served a needed purpose, according to president Frank Harper. But with more facilities and personnel now available, the city program is well prepared to carry on the function of organizing tennis ladders, tournaments, leagues, classes and the like.

Plans are underway to do a historical summary of the GTC activities and to present this either to River Birch Tennis Center or to Shepperd Memorial Library, according to Harper.

Those members who wish to continue to be active in tennis through the city's program should call 756-9343.

Pam Pack Advances In District I Tourney

AHOSKIE — Washington High School's boys and Roanoke's girls moved into the semifinals of the District I 3-A basketball tournament last night, ousting two Roanoke River Conference teams.

Washington topped Northampton West 64-50, while Roanoke nipped Warren County, 50-48. The Pam Pack advances into Saturday night action against Roanoke at 8 p.m., followed the girls' game between Roanoke and Plymouth.

Roanoke's girls pushed out to a 14-9 lead in the opening period of the game, but they were unable to pull away. Warren rallied, 11-10, and cut the lead to 24-20 at intermission.

The third period saw Warren surge ahead with a 15-9 margin, taking a 35-29 lead. Roanoke then rallied in the final period of the game, led by Sheila Carlisle, who came off the bench with eight points in the quarter. Gloria Duggins also hit five free throws while Cheryl Randolph added four, as the Lady Redskins outlit Warren, 17-13, to push ahead for the win.

Duggins led Roanoke with 23 while Randolph had 16. Zenobia Hopkins and Tracey Evans each had 14 and Nichole Tuesell each had 13.

Washington's boys inched out into a 15-14 lead after one period, but Northampton West rallied to edge ahead, 28-27 at the half. Washington eased back into the lead in the third period, 41-40.

Then, in the final quarter of the game, the Pam Pack exploded for 23 points while holding the Hurricanes to just 10, and won handily.

Earl Randolph led Washington with 20 points while Frankie Warren added 17. Maud Ingram led the Hurricanes with 14 while Mark Bell added 12.

Tonight's play wraps up first round play with Ahoskie meeting North Edgecombe in a girls' game and Plymouth taking on Weldon in a boys game.

Bruins, Lady Gryphons Win

KINSTON — Wilson Beddingfield nipped Elizabeth City Northeastern and will face cross-country rival Wilson Fike tonight for the championship of the Big East Conference.

Beddingfield gained a 57-56 win over Northeastern and will host the finals as the highest remaining team in the field. The Bruins, seeded second in the field, saw #1 Kinston upset by Fike, 50-46, as the Golden Demons gained the finals.

The winner of the game will take the top seed from the Big East in the state playoffs starting next week, while Kinston will hold the #2 spot.

Meanwhile, in girls' action, Rocky Mount, seeded sixth, continued to knock off higher seeded teams, beating #2 Beddingfield, 62-56. That sends the Lady Gryphons against #5 seeded Northern Nash in the finals tonight.

Here, too, the winner will take the #1 state tourney seed while Hunt holds the #2 spot.

The girls' game starts at 7 p.m. and the boys' game will follow.

Hatteras And Belhaven Win

WILLIAMSTON — Cape Hatteras upset #1 ranked Creswell in the first round of the District I 1-A basketball tournament last night.

Hatteras, seeded fourth in the four-team field, knocked off Creswell, which won both the regular season and tournament titles in the Tobacco Belt, 43-41, to advance to the finals.

In the girls' game, top-seeded Belhaven kayoed number four Columbia, 59-30, to move into the finals.

Tonight, Bath takes on Chocowinity in a girls' game at 7 p.m. while Jamesville meets Matamuskeet in a boys' contest. The winners advance to Tuesday night's finals, with both of the finalists qualifying for the regionals.

Fear Leaves PGA Tour

CORAL SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — The level of competition on the PGA Tour is such, said Peter Jacobsen, that caution no longer has a place. "Fear is leaving the Tour," he said after a solid, 6-under-par 66 Thursday in the first round of the $50,000 Honda Classic golf tournament. "Nobody has fear any more. You have to go right at the pin on every shot. If you don't, you're gone," Jacobsen said. The point was illustrated a few hours later when Fred Couples attacked the Tournament Players Club at Eagle Trace with six consecutive birdies and a course-record, 9-under-par 63 that put him two strokes ahead of the field. "Maybe (in the final round) on Sunday it would be different. Maybe you'd be a little more conservative," Couples admitted. "But this was one of those days where you just hit a shot, hit another shot, make a putt and try to keep it going, try to get as much as you can. "You just go right at the pin. There's no pressure and not much to worry about." Couples, in fact, was unconcerned he said he was unaware he had strung birdies from his 12th through 17th holes. The burst, in ideal playing conditions, temperatures in the upper 70s with very little wind — put him two in front of Willie Wood, alone at 65, the previous course record. Tied at 66, 6-under par, with Jacobsen were Hubert and Ken Green, who are not related. The group at 67 included Nick Faldo of England, Dave Barr of Canada, Curtis Strange and Jim Simons. Jack Nicklaus had a 70 that left him seven shots back. U.S. Open champ Fuzzy Zoeller shot a 71. British Open titleholder Seve Ballesteros of Spain and Honda defending champ Bruce Lietzke matched par 72. Masters champ Ben Crenshaw was another stroke higher at 73. Couples' record was his second on the new Stadium Golf facilities that are coming into being on the Tour. He set the record at 64 at the original Tournament Players Club, at Sawgrass, in his victory last spring at the Tournament Players Championship. Starting his day's play from the 10th tee, he played that side in 33. On the front, started his decisive drive with a 20-foot putt on the third hole, then hit a sand wedge to six feet and made the putt on the fourth. The long hitter reached the par-5 fifth with a 3-iron second shot and 2-putted for birdie-4. On the sixth, he put his approach in the front bunker, found the ball "sitting up like somebody placed it there," and promptly holed the sand shot. The seventh hole was tamed with a 15-footer and he scored his sixth birdie with a wedge to 4 feet on the eighth.

ECU Joins Movement To Make NCAA Responsive

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Leaders of more than 30 universities plan to discuss reforming the National Collegiate Athletic Association to make it more responsive to their needs, or failing that, forming a breakaway group. "Our system is now too big and unwieldy," said Edward T. Foote II, president of the University of Miami, which is hosting today's meeting. Universities represented at the meeting include North Carolina, East Carolina, Georgia, Penn State, Nebraska, Indiana, Florida State, Maryland and Louisiana State. Foote suggested the get-together last September, saying the NCAA might be too large to meet the needs of intercollegiate athletics at major universities. "There is a widespread consensus that the present governing system is too slow and tries to reflect too many interests to be manageable," Foote said Thursday. He said he expected more than 30 university leaders from about one-third of the nation's Division I-A schools to attend the meeting. Foote said the best solution might be to reform the association, but he did not rule out the creation of a new, smaller breakaway group if such an effort failed. At a January meeting in Nashville, Tenn., the NCAA passed a resolution that would give Division

I-A schools more autonomy within the association. That move led Foote and other university leaders to shift the focus of their meeting to finding ways to work within the NCAA instead of breaking away from it. "The question is, can we work out our problems inside the NCAA or outside it?" Foote asked Thursday. "I think we can concentrate on the inside." Although there is no formal agenda for the meeting, reasons for dissatisfaction with the NCAA have included academic admission standards for college athletes and the recent debacle at the University of Florida, whose football program is on probation for recruiting violations. "We will not be discussing those kinds of issues," Foote said. Rather, he said, "We will be addressing the system itself, not any particular problems of the system."

Teachers, Take Newspapers Back To School

National Newspaper in Education (NIE) Week is coming March 4-8, 1985. The Newspaper in Education program encourages the use of newspapers for a variety of educational purposes. National NIE Week emphasizes the importance of reading and writing and is a cooperative effort of the International Reading Association and newspapers.

Teachers, use ads, maps, graphs, and schedules to teach reading and math. Show students how to write news stories, editorials, ads, and reviews. Also have them write letters to the editor and use newspapers to update research projects. Ask them to discuss the judgments that are made in interviews and editorials. Most important, have them read daily to develop the habit of reading and to keep well informed.

Use The Daily Reflector for one or more days each week. To place an order, call Margy Blount at 752-6166 or write her at P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C. 27834. During NIE Week and throughout the year, classroom sets of newspapers are available at a reduced rate. Each newspaper costs 12¢. Hurry and place your order today, so your students may use The Daily Reflector during NIE Week.

'Masterpiece' Role Earns Actor Trans-Ocean Praise

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — As the venomous Ronald Merrick in public television's "Jewel in the Crown," actor Tim Pigott-Smith's memorable smirk and sneer have been highlights of the television season.

His portrayal in the ongoing "Masterpiece Theatre" presentation has earned Pigott-Smith praise on both sides of the Atlantic, as well as some well-earned angry reactions on the street in London.

"One woman accosted me and said, 'If you had a restaurant, I wouldn't eat at it,'" the 38-year-old actor said. "I drummed up a place as a result of this called 'Chez Ronnie's,' with one-armed waiters who beat you if you don't eat your food."

"But there has been a completely different reaction in America," added Pigott-Smith. "I can only assume that they have a different reaction to bad people, villains, because everybody who has stopped me in the street has been extremely courteous."

"What they have appreciated much more than in England was the sympathetic side of the character ... and understood him in a much deeper way than in England."

Appearing alongside such theater veterans as Rosemary Leach, Rachel Kempson and Dame Peggy Ashcroft, Pigott-Smith plays the racist homosexual Ronald Merrick, a police superintendent with a tragic inferiority complex. He persecutes an innocent Anglo-Indian Hari Kuma (Art Malik) and leads women astray but also suffers burns and the loss of an arm in a heroic rescue.

The 14-part adaptation of novelist Paul Scott's "Raj Quartet," which reaches its 12th installment Sunday, is set in India in 1942-1947 during the last turbulent years of British rule. It takes its title from the days when India was the jewel in Queen Victoria's empire.

This is not Pigott-Smith's first unsympathetic character. He played the conniving Angelo opposite Kate Nelligan's Isabella in Shakespeare's "Measure For Measure" on British television.

And last fall, he appeared in London in "Benefactors," a play by Michael Frayn, the author of "Noises Off." The four-character drama cast Pigott-Smith as an embittered journalist who ends up, as in "Jewel," with a badly burned face.

The actor's fascination with India didn't stop with "Jewel in the Crown." He has commissioned a writer to create a one-man play based on Francis Yates Brown's book "The Bengal Lancer."

"Yates Brown went to India in 1905 to be a Bengal lancer, which, of course, was very romantic then," Pigott-Smith said, explaining that the show, which would require him to play 20 characters, is "a one-man play with a difference: I get to be a variety of English and Indian characters."

Pigott-Smith said the passage of time was the primary reason for the sudden media interest in India, which has carried through the Academy Award-winning "Gandhi," as well as "Jewel in the Crown" and David Lean's large-scale film of the

E.M. Forster novel "A Passage To India."

"The Indian experience covers 300 years of intense British history. It was severed brutally in 1947, and I think it takes a long time to assess with any real validity what went on. It takes time for things to grow into consciousness," he said.

Originally from Stratford-upon-Avon where he attended the same school as Shakespeare, Pigott-Smith grew up immersed in theater and the classics, and received his university education at Bristol, where he studied English, French and drama.

As a member of the theater school at the Bristol Old Vic, Pigott-Smith befriended classmate Jeremy Irons, who used a different British series, "Brideshead Revisited," to launch his career.

Despite similar television exposure, Pigott-Smith doesn't think he'll attract the same sort of starring roles as Irons, although Hollywood people are more "eager to speak to me," he said.

"Jeremy is a more clearly romantic leading man than I am, and with Merrick being a perverted homosexual, I'm considered in a very different category," Pigott-Smith said.

He's about to do a film with Martin Sheen called "Chain Reaction," which is about a nuclear physicist.

"I'm playing an Irish-Catholic American priest with two arms," he said.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 2, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The early morning is the best time for you to put in action any plan involving favors from those in high office for later you find that you are apt to be too emotional.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Some possible family argument should be quelled early so that it will not turn into a royal battle later.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Communicate wisely in the morning. You should be courteous and kind with your partners. Be concerned with your personal safety.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Handling a financial affair well in the morning helps you to understand other monetary matters without taking action as yet.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Early handle that personal matter that is important to you, but later make sure you do not lose your temper.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Early plan the future wisely and then you can get into outside affairs and make them work much to your benefit.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You can easily get backing from a friend for an enterprise that means a good deal to you, if you are tactful.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Make sure to get outside duties handled early otherwise your personal aims will suffer later. Don't go off on a spree with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Early you have a good idea that needs to be put in operation quickly since later you have to handle problematical affairs.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to handle problems in the morning, and then you will have time to study into new ways to get ahead faster.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Make sure that an associate goes along with some agreement that means a great deal to you in the morning.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get that work done early that is ahead of you and later avoid a partner who wants to handle matters differently from you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Early make arrangements for amusements later in the day. Buy a little present for your mate.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will early in life appeal to the influential and will have many favors bestowed on him or her. However, teach to be more self-reliant and give as fine an education as you can since there is much ability here and your progeny can become very successful. Teach to separate business from family life.

Rights Proposed

CAPE TOWN, South Africa (AP) — The white-minority government has proposed legislation to give blacks living near cities the right to move to other municipalities without losing jobs or the privilege of working in white areas. Currently, if a black has the documents needed to work in Johannesburg, for example, he or she could not work in Cape Town or Durban. When blacks left their particular work area, they would surrender rights to live and work anywhere else except in impoverished tribal homelands.

The legislation would affect about 4 million of the nation's more than 22 million blacks, who are dominated and denied the vote by 5 million whites.

Hardison Would Give Farmers Tax Credits For Market Fees

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Tobacco growers could offset the new 25-cents-per-pound leaf assessment and gas station owners could avoid unfair competition from major oil companies under new state legislation.

"Tobacco farmers are gone if somebody doesn't do something," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Enoir, who filed both bills Thursday. "A lot of people that farmed last year won't plant this year. They can't get the financing."

The tobacco bill could cost the state up to $127 million in income tax credits that would roughly reimburse what farmers pay into the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. That fee recently was raised from 7 cents as part of an agreement between growers and the federal government, Hardison said.

Hardison said tobacco growers pay $500 an acre for land but can't deduct the cost from federal income taxes as they can expenses like fertilizer and seed. He said a grower who sells 200 pounds of leaf for $300 at a warehouse ends up paying $57 to $59 "just to sell that darn pile of tobacco."

That includes renting floor space and paying fees for auctioneers and graders, he said.

"He can't absorb it, not with the economy the way it is," Hardison said.

The bill is unlikely to cost the full $127 million because "not all will take advantage and not all will be paying taxes," he said, adding that growers who go "belly up" mean lost tax revenues to the state.

"This won't help them, but if you can keep some more from going out of business, you've taken a big step," he said.

Hardison's other bill forbids major oil companies from deliberately cutting costs to put small gasoline stations they supply out of business.

"What's happening is your major oil companies will supply a franchise then they buy a spot for a direct outlet and they'll undersell you," he explained. "The small man can't fight them. He's buying from them."

Hardison said similar laws had been enacted to keep major automobile makers from pushing out franchisees.

IN THE STATE

Savings Account

STATESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Statesville residents have set up a savings account to raise money for Johnny Burchette, who may have a heart transplant soon.

"We only have $35 in the fund now, but we're hoping once people hear more about it, they'll start donating money," said Eleanor Brigenar, a spokeswoman for Northern Bank where the account was established.

Burchette, 35, of Statesville, suffers from a debilitating heart disease that restricts the amount of blood pumped through his body. He has had the disease for two years and has gotten weaker.

Burchette and his wife, Jackie Burchette, hope to visit Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore next month to learn more about the operation and whether he needs to have it to save his life.

Heart transplants cost about $50,000, said Karen Helsley, a spokeswoman for the hospital.

Ex-Volunteer Sentenced

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A former "Big Buddy" volunteer and Scout leader has been sentenced to 45 years in prison after pleading guilty to six charges of taking indecent liberties with young boys.

John William Henry, 52, of Jacksonville pleaded guilty to the charges in September after authorities agreed to drop other sex-related charges. He was sentenced Wednesday by Onslow Superior Court Judge James R. Strickland.

District Attorney William Andrews said the six incidents to which Henry admitted taking part in involved boys between ages 11 and 13 and took place in Henry's home.

Rocky Mount Changes

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. (AP) — The Rocky Mount City Council has voted to change the way council members are elected, and the switch could end two federal challenges to the present election method.

The change also could put at least three blacks on the seven-member board this fall, Mayor Frederick E. Turnage said Wednesday.

The council voted Monday to adopt the pure ward system that would permit residents to vote only on candidates from the ward in which they live.

Now, all seven members of the council are elected citywide, even though the city is divided into five wards with two at-large seats. Black residents have argued for years that the method was discriminatory, resulting in a board with only one black member.

Blacks make up 42 percent of the city's population.

Firm Indicted

WILMINGTON (AP) — U.S. Attorney Sam Currin announced Thursday that a federal grand jury has indicted "Just For You Apparel, Ltd.," Bert Feldman, and Steven Feldman for conspiracy to smuggle, smuggling, and introduction of goods into the United States by means of false statements.

The investigation was conducted by U.S. Commerce Department agents in Wilmington. It began when an import specialist discovered some imported items did not have the required visa from the exporting countries of the Philippines and China before they could be entered into commerce.

The indictment alleges that Bert and Steven Feldman, who were employees as corporate secretary and foreign sales buyer for "Just For You Apparel" misidentified the textile goods in order to import them without a visa.

The loss of revenue is alleged to be $19,176.69.

Flu Tapering Off

ATLANTA (AP) — The percentage of deaths caused by flu nationwide last week was at its highest level in nine years, government researchers said.

The national Centers for Disease Control said Thursday that 26 states reported outbreaks of flu last week, two fewer than the week before.

But 7.3 percent of the 13,329 deaths reported to the CDC last week from 121 cities were caused by influenza or pneumonia. That percentage is well above the usual 5 percent and is at its highest level since 1976, said Karl Kappus, a flu specialist at the CDC.

"That's indicative of the apparent effect that influenza outbreaks during the last month or so have been having," he said.

The ratio of pneumonia and flu deaths is not a leading indicator, but is one way the CDC measures the severity of the flu season, Kappus said.

A dozen states last week reported widespread flu outbreaks, covering an area containing more than half the state's population: Alaska, Florida, Hawaii, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, South Dakota, Texas and Virginia. Fourteen other states reported regional outbreaks, covering a smaller area.

The level of flu activity "is leveling or declining nationally," Kappus said, although "it may be a different matter" in some local areas.

Forty-seven states — all but Idaho, Wyoming, and South Dakota — have now reported this season's predominant flu strain, which researchers call type A-H3N2, or the Philippines flu. South Dakota also is believed to have that type flu, but simply hasn't reported an isolation of the virus yet, Kappus said.

ESCAPEE — Ronnie Ray Davis, center, who escaped Monday from the Cumberland County jail while awaiting trial on murder charges, is escorted by sheriff's deputies after he was captured in Fayetteville Thursday. Helms Files Mart-Oriented Farm Bill As 'Alternative'

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, expressing support for the goals of President Reagan's "market-oriented" farm bill, says he has a more politically saleable alternative.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said his bill, like the administration's, attempts to wean American farmers from government crop subsidies.

But Helms said his bill would make the transition from the price-support system to market reliance over six years instead of the five-year period in the administration's bill. His proposal also would preserve the program of target prices as a "safety net" for farmers.

Target prices, which Reagan proposes to eliminate eventually, are an income protection device that offers farmers direct cash payments when the value of their crops falls below certain levels set by law.

Helms also said he wants strong export incentives in a new farm law, including direct subsidies of at least $1 billion a year.

"This bill I think may be somewhat more acceptable" in Congress than the administration measure, Helms told reporters at a briefing Thursday. He called Reagan's bill "perhaps the ultimate in what they'd like to see," but politically unrealistic.

While Helms contended his bill would be less expensive than present law, aides said it would cost more than Reagan's proposal — perhaps 50 percent more.

Under Helms's bill:

- Loan rates, the amount the government will lend farmers with their crops as collateral, would be set at 75 percent to 85 percent of a five-year average of commodity prices. Those rates now are set by law, and their relatively high levels are blamed for pricing U.S. producers out of world markets.
- Target prices would be set at the discretion of the secretary of agriculture at 110 percent to 125 percent of the loan rate. Payments under the program would be limited to the median family income figure for the previous year. That figure was $24,581 in 1983.
- Compliance with basic conservation practices would be required as a condition of participation in the "safety net," and the secretary would have the discretion to require farmers to idle part of their cropland as well if surpluses build high enough to warrant such action.
- The current dairy price support program, under which the government buys surpluses and sets a minimum price level would be continued. Reagan's bill calls for abolishing the purchases and turning to a target price system. The government is required to sell part of its dairy stocks for export each year through 1988 to reduce surpluses.

- Interest rates on government farm operating loans would be raised gradually to commercial levels and emphasis would be shifted from direct loans to guaranteed lending, as Reagan proposes. Farmers Home Administration loans for farmland purchases would be ended.
- States would be given the option of receiving a block grant to operate nutrition assistance programs in lieu of administering the federal food stamp program. Able-bodied food stamp recipients would be required to do public service work in exchange for the assistance they get, and program administration would be tightened to cut fraud.

"Existing farm programs in this country are not working," Helms said, echoing a widespread sentiment in the agricultural establishment. "They are the problem in many respects. The day of reckoning is upon us and we've got to work our way out of it."

Democrats Plan To Test Reagan

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats say they will test President Reagan's threat to veto a bill giving emergency credit to embattled farmers and non-food aid to drought-stricken Africa.

The House Rules Committee on Thursday cleared the way for action as early as Tuesday on the legislation, over the objections of Republicans who said the exercise was merely intended to embarrass the White House.

Reagan has said he is virtually certain to veto the bill if it comes to his desk in the form passed by the Senate late Wednesday.

"We'll give him the opportunity" to do so, said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., as Democrats appeared gleeful at the prospect of Reagan vetoing a humanitarian aid package.

O'Neill's decision means the House will simply accept the Senate bill instead of taking it to a House-Senate conference to negotiate differences between the two chambers' versions. A quick House vote would speed the bill to Reagan as early as next week.

Democrats, helped by farm-state Republicans in both houses of Congress, have seized upon the debt crisis of farmers unable to get spring planting loans as a hot political issue.

Senate Democrats used a filibuster last week to expound at length on the problems of family farmers. O'Neill is expected to discuss the farm situation on Saturday during the Democratic Party's response to Reagan's weekly radio address.

The measure passed by the Senate offers $175 million in non-food aid for drought-ravaged areas of Africa. Democrats also succeeded in tacking on credit provisions providing $100 million in interest-rate subsidies for farmers and $1.85 billion in additional loan-guarantee money.

The bill also calls for immediate 50 percent advances on crop price-support loans normally not received until harvest time.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said there was a 110 percent chance the bill would be vetoed by the president as unnecessary and too costly. Dole noted that while Republicans lost on the issue in Senate votes Wednesday, he still had enough votes to sustain a presidential veto. It takes a two-thirds vote to override a veto.

In addition to the credit-relief measures already approved by the House and Senate, the House Thursday voted 294-115 to make available an additional $1 billion in federal loan guarantees for farmers.

The bill, sponsored by Appropriations Committee Chairman Jamie Whitten, D-Miss., limits the guaranteed loans of up to $750,000 to farmers with debt-to-asset ratios of 3-to-1.

The limit means loan money would go only to the 7 percent or less of farmers in the worst financial shape.

Statue Shows Virginia Dare As Woman

MANTEO, N.C. (AP) — She survived a shipwreck, a fire, abandonment and ridicule before reaching her final resting place at Roanoke Island.

For the past 26 years, a statue of Virginia Dare has been displayed atop a pedestal in the Elizabethan Gardens next to an oak tree — the same type of sea-battered oak that grew when the first child of English settlers was born in America.

But the statue does not depict Virginia Dare as a child, although she and the other colonists mysteriously disappeared shortly after Virginia Dare's birth at Fort Raleigh in 1587.

The nude statue carved in white Carrara marble is that of a grown woman.

Sculptor Maria Louise Lander of Salem, Mass., was inspired by the belief of many Roanoke Island residents that the colonists survived and that they were descendants, said Louis Midgette, supervisor at Elizabeth Gardens for 26 years.

"A lot of people believed that Virginia Dare grew up to be a beautiful woman," Midgette said.

"Only in recent years when they began uncovering all the facts, did we come to learn that the colonists may not have survived and Virginia Dare never grew to be a woman," Midgette said.

Today, Midgette said, the statue is admired by many as a fine piece of art.

"It wasn't always that way for Virginia Dare," he said. "She's had quite a past."

The statue was lost at sea when a sailing vessel from Rome to Boston sank in the Mediterranean off the coast of Spain, Midgette said. After two years at the bottom of the sea, the Italian government salvaged the statue along with the rest of the ship's cargo.

Placed in a New York art gallery, the statue caught the eye of a collector who reportedly offered $5,000 dollars, Midgette said. Not long after the sale, the collector's studio caught fire, but the statue was saved.

However, the collector died and the sale of the statue could not be confirmed, Miss Lander took back the statue, leaving it to the state of North Carolina after her death in 1923.

For 12 years Virginia Dare was on display in the Hall of History, but the work was criticized as being "frivolous" and "not historical," Midgette said. Some said the statue was inappropriate for school groups.

From the hall, Virginia Dare was shunted off to a basement storage area for several years until State Auditor George Ross Pou found the statue and placed it in his office.

In the 1950s when the Garden Clubs of North Carolina began collecting statues to place in gardens they were developing, Virginia Dare was one of the first to be suggested.

Paul Green, creator of the play "The Lost Colony," hand-picked the spot for the pedestal.

"Mr. Green told me that he thought Virginia Dare may have actually played on the spot where he placed the statue," Midgette said. "It's been there ever since."

Midgette acknowledges there's no proof that Virginia Dare saw womanhood, "but who knows."

"I like to think sometimes when I see her out there that the facts are wrong and Virginia Dare did become a woman. I think she would have been a most pleasant person," he said.

Child Advocates Say Senators Ignoring Them

By The Associated Press

The North Carolina Child Advocacy Institute has sent a telegram to Sens. Jesse Helms and John East saying their refusal to meet with the group is an indication of the "low priority" the senators place on children's issues.

"We are disappointed that for the third consecutive year you have decided not to meet with North Carolina's delegation attending the Children's Defense Fund Conference," said John Niblock, who read the telegram to The Associated Press in a telephone interview Thursday.

Niblock was one of 40 people from the group attending the conference this week to lobby for legislation concerning children.

"By delegating this responsibility to poorly informed and unresponsive junior aides, you are sending a signal to your constituents that the needs of the children of North Carolina are a low priority to you,"

Niblock said the telegram read.

Aides to the two North Carolina senators disagreed with the organization's characterization of the staffers who met with the group as "junior aides."

"We don't have 'junior aides' on our staff," said Barbara Lukens, a staff assistant for Helms.

Martin Reflects Conservative Tone In First Speech To Solons

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin reminded lawmakers of his margin of victory in calling for tax cuts in his State of the State address and scorned fears that federal budget cuts would render tax relief unwise.

The Republican told the mostly Democratic General Assembly Thursday that he had won "a larger total vote than any other North Carolina candidate has ever received," and interpreted that as a mandate to cut taxes.

He added that if the Legislature insists on leaving a "rainy day fund" to compensate for possible federal aid losses, it should reduce state spending and leave the tax cuts intact. Besides, he said, cutting taxes might stimulate the state's economy to the point that lost federal money would be made up with an expanded state tax base.

For the most part, Martin's first State of the State speech reflected the same conservative positions that turned him from a six-term Congressman into the second Republican governor this century.

The 30-minute address focused on the plan to eliminate the intangibles and inventory taxes and the state sales tax. Martin called the plan "eminently justifiable," arguing that levies on intangible assets and business inventories discourage industrial development outside the affluent Piedmont.

"Our pattern of unemployment, which clearly correlates with rural border counties, is a compelling argument for eliminating these virtually unique, self-inflicting handicaps on North Carolina businesses and the jobs they provide," he said.

"When ... investment goes elsewhere or goes under, it is our workers who pay a 'hidden tax' of unemployment."

A News Analysis

Martin repeated campaign pledges to reduce the $1.3 million abortion fund, limiting state-funded abortions to women in the case of incest, rape or where the mother's life is in danger. He avoided mentioning the social implications of abortion and turned called attention to "prevention of pregnancy, prenatal care and more adoption as a plan for dealing with the problem of the unwanted pregnancy."

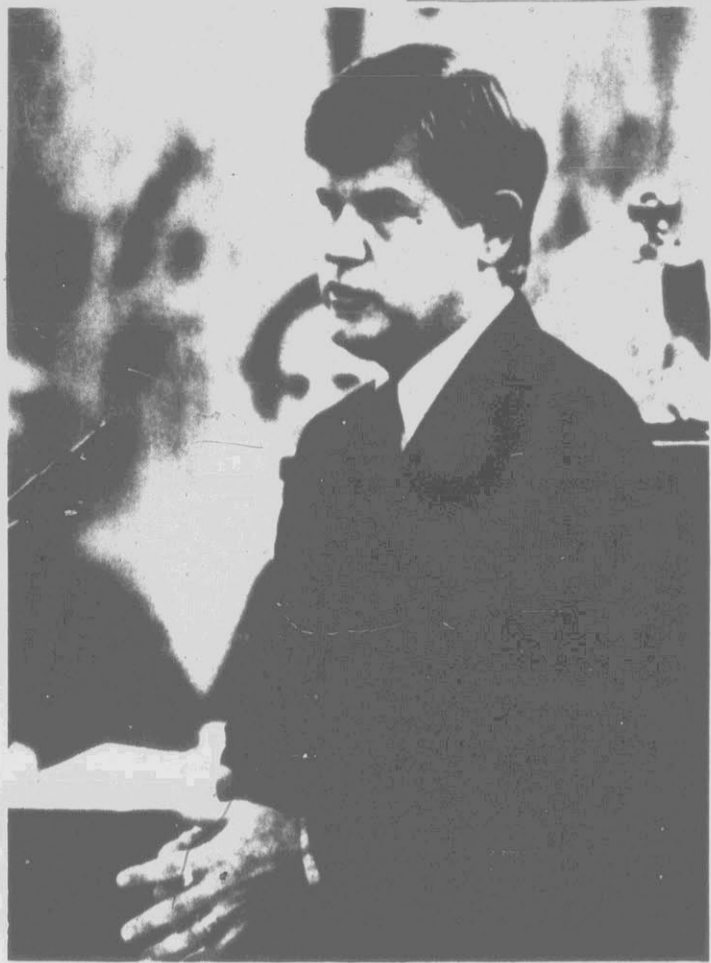

Martin joined the "crusade" for children and young people championed by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, proposing legislation to help lost and abused youngsters. Another proposal likely to get significant support is Martin's call for a crackdown on drug dealers, whom he likened to terrorists who "seek to destroy us by psychochemical guerilla warfare."

Some lawmakers expressed surprise that Martin asked for the virtually impossible gubernatorial veto, suggesting that it appear on the ballot in November 1986 alongside a proposed amendment to deny governors second consecutive terms.

"I think it should be discussed ... on its merits, and I think the people will be interested in it," he told reporters after the speech.

Martin downplayed his administration's controversial firings of more than 100 state employees, briefly mentioning his need to "make key managerial changes, without which one cannot govern."

He promised to reduce the number of employees vulnerable to arbitrary dismissal through exemption from the State Personnel Act, and suggested that workers become eligible for the act's protections after three years of service instead of the current five years.

MARTIN SPEAKS — Gov. Jim Martin, shown delivering his first State of the State address to the General Assembly Thursday, has again given tax relief his major priority. Legislative leaders say any tax cuts could depend on the reliability of state revenue projections. (AP Laserphoto)

Retailers Back Bill Changing Drinking Age

RALEIGH (AP) — Groups representing convenience stores, restaurants and retail merchants say they prefer one of three bills that would raise the drinking age because it would let teen-agers sell and serve alcohol.

"We are very much opposed to the drinking age being raised to 21, but we understand that this is what the federal government has mandated," Gene Horne of the North Carolina Association of Convenience Stores told the House Alcoholic Beverage Control Committee Thursday. "We would much prefer (a bill by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham) because it covers the right of 18-, 19- and 20-year-olds to work."

Three bills have been introduced so far that would raise the drinking age to 21 by 1986. Congress has ordered states to raise their drinking age to 21 or lose federal highway funds.

One bill would raise the drinking age effective in July, while another would raise the drinking age first to 20 and then to 21 by the deadline.

Miller's bill calls for raising the drinking age in September 1986 and provides for dropping the legal drinking age to 19 if courts declare the congressional action unconstitutional.

Jerry Williams of the North Carolina Restaurant Association said his group was "opposed to raising the drinking age — period." He said the law would make no real difference in teen-age drinking, but would "make young people disrespectful of the law, which, frankly, is unenforceable."

Shannon Carson, president of the Student Government Association at North Carolina State University, echoed Williams, saying the congressional action is a violation of constitutional rights and unfairly singles out one age group for discrimination.

The three bills were sent to a subcommittee for study.

The City of Greenville has a radio program, "City Hall Notes", which is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 10:25 A.M. on WOOW Radio. The public is invited to listen to this program each week and learn more about Greenville City Government.

Governor Keeps Tax Cuts At Top

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin wants to reduce one part of his predecessor's suggested 1985-87 budget by $16 million as a first step toward the tax cuts on which Martin's legislative program is based.

"The important thing to keep clearly in mind is that our objective is to cut those taxes," he said Thursday in his first State of the State address to a joint session of the General Assembly. "It can be done. And it should be done."

Martin, the state's second Republican governor this century, used the speech to begin selling his economic package to a Legislature dominated by skeptical Democrats.

The second step — which may prove even more significant — comes Monday night. Martin, in a move he called "an historic innovation," will appear before the Joint Appropriations Committee to present the bulk of his budget proposals including $1.28 billion in new expenditures.

During his 30-minute speech, Martin also unveiled the rest of his platform for the current legislative session.

Martin asked for higher teacher pay and smaller public school classes. He proposed a crackdown on drug trafficking, a career growth program for public school teachers, reform of the State Personnel Act, and merit selection of judges.

Proclaiming 1985 as the "Year of the Child" in North Carolina, Martin asked for legislation to help lost and abused children.

He also asked that the people be allowed to vote on giving the governor veto power, a plea that lawmakers of both parties agreed would fall on deaf ears. North Carolina is the only state without gubernatorial veto.

"You and your predecessors have often ... risen to confront a difficult issue, to meet it head on without your governor sharing that public burden, other than whispering words of encouragement from the cool shade while you had to take the heat," said Martin.

Citing a "healthy revenue growth forecast" in Hunt's proposed budget, Martin said his program would allow improvements in some state programs, creation of some new programs and the tax-cut package that legislative analysts have said could cost up to $443.5 million.

He proposed that repeal of the state sales tax on food take effect Jan. 1, 1986. In a departure from previous proposals, Martin asked that the property tax on intangible assets be lifted Jan. 1, 1986, instead of July 1, 1986. And he suggested that businesses receive a 50 percent rebate on their inventory tax payments beginning Jan. 1, 1986. The rebate would increase to 100 percent Jan. 1, 1988.

The state should reimburse cities and counties for lost tax revenues, Martin said.

As promised, Martin's proposed modifications in Hunt's "continuation budget" were relatively minor. In fact, Martin said he wanted no actual cuts in existing services except the $1.3 million abortion fund, saying his proposed reductions could be achieved by increasing efficiency.

Examples of those reductions — which total $16,055,921 for the biennium — are $8,279,007 from public school allocations, including $4,578,103 to reflect a decline in the price of gasoline for school buses; and $1,721,153 to adjust inflationary increases for library book purchases by University of North Carolina schools.

In a spirited defense of his tax-cuts proposals, Martin rebutted those who urge caution in the face of impending reductions of federal aid to state and local governments.

"The question before us is not really whether Congress might surprise us and cut spending," said Martin, a former six-term U.S.

representative. "The question is whether we are going to take ... revenue growth over the next four years and spend all, or whether we are going to give a fourth of it back to our taxpayers."

The speech, delivered before a packed House chamber in the Legislative Building and a statewide television audience, was received politely but coolly by the predominantly Democratic assembly. Martin was interrupted seven times by Republican-led applause.

"It was a good speech; he brought out some good ideas," said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, the state's ranking Democrat. "The thing we have to be sensitive to is that there are needs out there ... and it's a matter of how much we can do in each area."

Revenue May Be Key To Tax Relief

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The reliability of Gov. Jim Martin's revenue projections may be a big factor in how his tax cuts fare, legislative leaders said after the Republican governor's State of the State address.

"We don't know that the governor's not right when he says growth will take care of the lost revenue, or that he is," Senate President Pro Tem J.J. "Monk" Harrington said after Thursday's address.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, co-chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said discrepancies between Martin's projected revenues and other estimates will be required some "compromises."

But he added, "I have no reason to feel that the governor's staff is any less competent in making revenue projections than anyone else."

House and Senate leaders cheered Martin's unprecedented plan to appear Monday night before budget committees to explain his plan to cut taxes by $328 million in fiscal 1985-87 and to spend $1.28 billion on new programs.

"It's something new, but I think it's good that he's going straight to the Appropriations Committee to be heard," said Harrington.

"I'm glad he's willing to come ... and give us further definition as to what he's going to propose," said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan.

Most lawmakers agreed that some kind of tax cut is likely, but some support more spending than Martin proposed.

"I think we will have tax cuts, but I'm very committed to see that we go forward with the basic education plan," said Jordan. He said Martin didn't mention such problems as water and sewer needs that "are there and real."

"We've got an army of lobbyists up here who want to see us spend more," added Rauch. "And you don't have any lobbyists saying, 'Cut taxes.' Thus, the Legislature must become the peoples' lobbyist."

"The people will get that tax cut through if they want it," said Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman of Iredell County. "I think people will have a tough time getting re-elected if they don't support some of his initiatives."

However, House Speaker Liston Ramsey counseled caution.

"It appears to me we ought to wait," he said. "Some of these tax cuts don't come around for a couple of years. I think we can cut taxes. It's a matter of where and how many dollars."

Martin's call for veto power for the governor drew predictably bipartisan responses.

"We've made one mistake with (gubernatorial) succession," said Senate Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham. "We're not going to make it two with veto power."

Redman, however, said, "It seems to me only fair if you're going to blame the governor for everything that happens, you ought to give him the power to do something."

Some lawmakers perceived a weaker commitment to education and other spending on Martin's part.

"Now is the year for the public schools and he's cutting taxes," said Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Expansion Budget Appropriations Committee.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, chairman of the House Base Budget Human Resources Appropriations Committee, said he heard no details on "people issues like the infant mortality rate, the increasing number of children under the poverty level and issues related to family."

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, expressed disappointment that Martin said "not one word about tobacco."

"With the shape our farmers are in, I would have thought he would have mentioned something about agriculture," said James.

Marijuana Valued At $1 Million Found

RALEIGH (AP) — A Bunn couple were arrested Wednesday after investigators confiscated a half ton of high-grade marijuana valued at more than $1 million from a backyard storage shield where neighborhood children had been stealing it.

"A large quantity of that marijuana was getting in school kids' hands and into schools in Wake County and Franklin County," said Wake County Sheriff John Baker. "From what I can determine, they (the children) were stealing it from the shed."

Bobby Fowler, 38, and his wife, Connie Bell Fowler, 35, were charged with manufacturing marijuana, felonious possession of marijuana and trafficking in marijuana, according to officials with Wake and Franklin County sheriff's departments.

RALEIGH (AP) — A judge has declined to dismiss a lawsuit against former Gov. Jim Hunt concerning use of state aircraft for political purposes and ruled Gov. Jim Martin should be added as a defendant.

John R. Wallace, an attorney for Hunt, argued at a hearing Thursday that as Hunt's successor, Martin should be added as a defendant — even though it would mean he was being sued by the former chairman of his party, David T. Flaherty.

According to legal procedure, new state office-holders automatically succeed outgoing officers who in their official capacity have been named as defendants in a lawsuit.

And because Hunt, in his official capacity, filed a countersuit against Flaherty, it follows that Martin is now suing Flaherty as well, Wallace said.

"Mr. Martin is now suing Mr. Flaherty?" said James H. Pou Bailey, Wake County's senior resident Superior Court judge. "That's the biggest mess I've ever seen."

But Bailey agreed that legal procedure required Martin to be a party to the suit and its counterclaim.

Richard D. Titus, an attorney representing Flaherty, said the addition of Martin to the suit did not change the importance of the issues. Flaherty could not be reached for comment. Flaherty filed the suit in September, claiming Hunt and several campaign aides had used aircraft owned by the state Department of Commerce for campaigning in Hunt's unsuccessful bid to unseat Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

The suit asked that Hunt be enjoined from using the aircraft for political purposes and that his political committee be required to reimburse the state an amount "in excess of $100,000."

Hunt since has paid the state about $195,000 in addition to what was billed by the Commerce Department for use of the aircraft. In a countersuit, Hunt has charged Flaherty with using state aircraft for private purposes when he was secretary of human resources in the mid-1970s.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1♥	Pass
2♥	Pass	4♥	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Whether or not you should draw trumps is often a vexing problem. As a rule of thumb, if you have any ruffing to do steer clear of the trump suit. Drawing even one round of trumps could be fatal.

Note North's raise to two hearts. Any other bid is so bad that it doesn't even merit criticism. That holds true even if North-South are playing four-card majors. His hand is too weak to try two diamonds, for he would find himself in an impossible situation should his partner now rebid two hearts — he owes him a raise because of his trumps but he has already overbid his hand. South's jump to four hearts is impeccable.

West led the king of diamonds, taken by the ace. Declarer thought he would try the trump finesse, and he was not allowed to recover. West returned a trump, captured the king of spades with the ace and led his last trump, exhausting all of dummy's trumps. Now there was no way that declarer could avoid losing two club tricks — down one.

Declarer should plan to lose one trick in each suit except diamonds. After winning the ace of diamonds at trick one, he should immediately lead a spade. Best defense is for West to win and shift to a trump. Declarer wins in hand, cashes his high spades for two club discards on the table, then follows with the ace of clubs and ruff. He gets back to hand with a diamond ruff for another club ruff. So far he has lost only one trick, and his only other losers are a club and a trump.

Wake Forest Law School To Reduce

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest University's law school plans in the next five years to decrease its student body by about 60 and intensify its efforts to recruit students from outside North Carolina, according to a long-range plan.

"We have taken a good, hard look at what the marketplace looks like in North Carolina," said John D. Scarlett, dean of the law school. "We now have five law schools ... and there is certainly room for all of us to pull back a little bit to keep from overcrowding the market tremendously in the next 10 or 15 years."

Federal Agency Says Hunt Brothers Tried Illegally To Drive Up Level Of Silver Prices

By SCOTT McCARTNEY
 AP Business Writer

DALLAS (AP) — The embattled Hunt brothers, reportedly faced by $4 billion in paper losses from businesses gone sour, have been accused of illegally trying to drive up the price of silver when they bought 100 million ounces of bullion five years ago.

The federal Commodity Futures Trading Commission on Thursday accused Nelson Bunker Hunt, Herbert W. Hunt and several other individuals and companies of the illegal manipulations during late 1979 and early 1980. The Hunts have denied any wrongdoing.

The Hunts bought up silver through a variety of transactions in the futures markets, sending the price skyrocketing, then tried to evade regulatory actions when the price began to tumble, the commission said. The Hunts ended up borrowing $1.1 billion to cover their losses.

On Thursday a Hunt International Resources Corp. official confirmed that paychecks for some employees had bounced. That was only the latest in a series of financial embarrassments for the family, which has suffered massive oil and com-

Former Boss Is Shunned By Agency

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the seventh floor waiting room of the State Department's bureau of politico-military affairs, a picture frame that once bore the likeness of Leslie H. Gelb now is empty except for a note that begins: "Removed for Cause."

Without mentioning Gelb by name, the note proclaims that the former director of the bureau, who now writes for The New York Times, "did willingly, willfully, and knowingly publish, in 1985, classified information the release of which is harmful and damaging to the country."

The decision to remove Gelb's picture was made by the current director of the bureau, Lt. Gen. John T. Chain Jr., who also ordered his staff to refuse to talk with Gelb any longer.

Gelb, who headed the bureau during the Carter administration, incurred Chain's wrath by writing a story published in the Feb. 13 Times saying the United States has contingency plans to place nuclear weapons in Canada, Iceland, Bermuda and Puerto Rico.

Chain believed Gelb used classified information, publication of which could be damaging to the United States, according to Judy Mandel, deputy director of the office of public diplomacy. She said Chain could not be reached for comment.

A. M. Rosenthal, executive editor of the Times, was quoted in Thursday's editions as saying the newspaper had protested the action.

Rosenthal said: "General Chain surely knows that the story The New York Times published contained no information that had not already been published and debated in the countries named in the story. The only people from whom this information had been withheld were the American people."

State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian said that Secretary of State George P. Shultz supported the decision by Chain, who became director of the bureau last July. The bureau deals with issues such as weapons treaties.

NELSON HUNT

modities losses.

Hunt International, one of three companies controlled by the two Hunt brothers, disclosed in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing last week that it is in default on $295 million in loans, is unlikely to be able to repay it all and has a negative net worth of $112 million.

And the Internal Revenue Service is seeking $238 million in back taxes and interest in a dispute primarily over the silver trading, according to tax court documents filed by Nelson Hunt, his family and a family-controlled partnership.

In its five-year investigation of the silver debacle, the commodity commission traveled overseas and tracked a "complex trading pattern," said spokeswoman Kathleen W. Hathaway in Washington.

Although many of the allegations have been aired in earlier legal proceedings and congressional hearings, the civil administrative complaint is the first formally lodged in the case by the federal agency that oversees futures trading.

It sets off administrative proceedings that could lead to a civil fine of $100,000 on each of dozens of specific alleged trading transactions. The defendants also could be barred from trading in commodities futures.

The Hunt brothers had not seen the complaint but on the basis of the commission news release, "the thrust of those allegations are baseless," said Walter Roach, general counsel of Hunt Energy Inc.

"The Hunts will defend themselves and will be ultimately vindicated," he said. "All of the activities were totally above-board and within the spirit and letter of all applicable laws and regulations."

The Hunts invested heavily in silver in the 1970s as the price climbed from $2 an ounce in 1972 to a high of $52.50 in 1980. The market crashed March 27, 1980, falling to $11 an ounce.

HERBERT HUNT

The commodity commission complaint said the Hunts and others acquired more than 100 million ounces of silver bullion in a little over six months, driving the price up artificially.

When prices started to fall, the complaint alleged, the defendants took a number of steps to halt the decline. The complaint alleged the defendants attempted to circumvent legal actions directed at them by Commodity Exchange Inc. in New York and the Board of Trade of Chicago.

More recent Hunt investments in farm and ranch land, oil exploration and commodities such as sugar and silver have soured. Their paper losses were estimated by the Wall Street Journal recently at more than $4 billion.

Cash flow at Hunt International, a major sugar refiner and drilling-rig operator, has been controlled for some time by its main banks, said Robert White, Hunt International's chief counsel.

Last week, funds for some payroll checks were withheld, White said. "Some of the employees' checks were returned. 'We've been working with the banks all week to iron that problem out.'"

He declined to say how many employees were affected.

In 1981, the SEC charged that the Hunt brothers failed to comply with reporting provisions of federal securities law when they acquired more than 5 percent of the stock of Bache Group Inc., a brokerage house which lent them millions of dollars for silver speculation.

That complaint was settled when the Hunts, without admitting or denying wrongdoing, agreed to a consent order barring them from violating the federal reporting provisions.

In 1975, the brothers were indicted in Dallas on charges of conspiracy to obstruct justice by impeding an investigation of allegedly illegal wiretaps. They pleaded no contest to the charges and each paid a $1,000 fine.

"The Hermit Kingdom"

Today Koreans celebrate "Samiljol" — the anniversary of the peninsula's independence from Japan. The Korean peninsula is about the size of the state of Kentucky. Scientists estimate Korea has been populated for at least 30,000 years. Korean artisans invented the first movable printing type, in 1234 A.D. During the 17th through 19th centuries, Westerners called Korea "the Hermit Kingdom" because it shunned contact with most nations, except China.
