Congress Will Let Farm Bill Veto Stand

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's veto of an emergency farm credit bill brought angry reaction from farm-state members of Congress, but they conceded the action sharply diminishes chances of further help for farmers needing loans before spring planting.

Sen. John Melcher, D-Mont., compared the veto to "dropping the first bomb on Pearl Harbor. From then on it's war, and no prisoners taken."

"It's going to be a long two years if the president continues to be this inflexible," said Senate Minority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., echoing the bitter partisan tone that has dominated debate on the farm credit issue in recent weeks.

Reagan signed the veto Wednesday, sending the legislation back to Congress where it appeared likely to die. House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. said he had no plans to try to override the veto, saying "I don't see any sense in it" because the Republican-controlled Senate likely would block any such move.

North Carolina Agriculture

Commissioner Jim Graham said he was "bitterly disappointed" about the veto.

"Our farmers have been dedicated to producing sufficient food at a reasonable enough price so you no longer see rickets, retardation and other conditions of poor nutrition as a normal occurrence," Graham said. "They have been here when we needed them. Reagan should take a closer look at some of the more costly sacred cows in the budget, and not try to break the deficit on the backs of our farm families."

Wielding his veto pen before reporters and television cameras in the Oval Office, Reagan called the measure a "massive new bailout that would add billions to the deficit" without really helping farmers.

"The bottom line is that someone in Washington must be responsible," the president said.

"Someone must be willing to stand up for those who pay America's bills. And someone must stand up to those who say, 'Here's the key; there's the treasury; just take as many of those hard-earned tax dollars as you want.'"

Reagan said Congress had acted irresponsibly in passing the legislation, which he estimated would add $2.5 billion to the deficit over the next several years. He vowed to "veto again and again until spending is brought under control."

Some in Congress were talking about opening new talks with the White House in an effort to resurrect some compromise form of the credit legislation, but the administration and the Senate GOP leadership appeared to slam the door.

"The veto will stick," said presidential spokesman Larry Speakes. "If Congress wants to talk, let's talk about deficit reduction, not budget busting."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said he hoped the action would lay the matter to rest and focus attention on the administration's existing offer of federal loan guarantees for lenders willing to restructure existing farm debt.

RJR OKs Leaf Compromise

By The Associated Press

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has agreed to help buy the crippling stores of surplus flue-cured tobacco in exchange for a federal support price of $1.40 in 1985 and 1986, and other companies are expected to follow suit.

U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Tobacco and Peanuts, on Wednesday announced Reynolds' proposal, which Rose's panel agreed to endorse.

"We've got a deal," Rose said. "I think we're back in business."

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. and the U.S. Department of Agriculture will have final approval, he said.

Reynolds' president said the announcement came in response to requests by Stabilization's board of directors.

"Since we began talking with representatives of Stabilization several months ago we have tried to make it very clear to everyone in the tobacco community that our primary objective is to take this opportunity to develop a sound tobacco program," said G.H. Long, president of R.J. Reynolds. "Our agreement to support a $1.40 support level is another indication of our willingness to do whatever we reasonably can to help ensure that such a program is established."

Tobacco and legislative officials hailed the compromise.

"I'm very pleased," said Stabilization director Fred Bond. "The next step is getting the other companies to go along."

"This puts us off dead center," said T. Carlton Blalock, director of the 3,000-member Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina. "It puts us in a direction we were hoping things would move."

Reynolds dropped its request for a $1.35 price support, which had been criticized by some farm leaders. The current support price is $1.70 per pound.

Rose said also said the tobacco companies would not insist on an earlier demand to gain anti-trust immunity through legislation.

Rose had threatened Monday to push legislation to increase the federal cigarette excise tax unless the manufacturers softened their demand in the buy-out negotiations. He praised Reynolds Wednesday for its proposals.

"They have made great concessions, and I believe that at least 90 percent of the cigarette manufacturing industry will go along," Rose said, adding that complete details of the buy-out plan have not been worked out.

The other companies, Philip Morris, Brown & Williamson, American, Lorillard, and Liggett, have generally followed Reynolds' lead during the negotiations with Stabilization.

For the 1986 crop, legislation would be sought to keep the support rate at $1.40 and to set up a new formula for setting price supports in the future.

Reid Backs TV In Courtrooms

By STUART SAVAGE

Reflector Staff Writer

Superior Court Judge David E. Reid Jr. said today that he tends "to favor the broader use of cameras" in the courtrooms of North Carolina.

Reid, chief judge of the 3rd Judicial District which includes Pitt, Craven, Carteret and Pamlico counties, is chairman of the News Media-Administration of Justice

Council, which has conducted a survey to help the Supreme Court decide whether to allow electronic media coverage of state trials on a continuing basis.

Contacted in Goldsboro, Reid said the council, at the request of the Supreme Court, conducted a survey in the summer of 1984 on the effect of cameras in the court room during the trials of Evanagalista Navas and

Lt. Gov. Jimmy Green in Wake County. "They were selected," Reid said, "because ... they were most publicized (and) had the widest coverage."

"The study concluded that virtually none of the participants in the trial were affected one way or another by the presence of cameras," Reid said, adding that the judges, witnesses and court personnel "indicated that after the first indication that cameras were in the courtroom, that it really was not a factor that affected them in any way."

"One or two jurors, out of about 60, said it made them nervous. But they were jurors that ultimately were not seated in the case," Reid said.

On the basis of the survey, Reid said "findings were drawn that it would appear" that having cameras in the courtroom "would be nothing to be alarmed about."

According to Reid, "I have never presided over a trial covered by TV cameras. The reason is that the Supreme Court guidelines (which began allowing camera coverage of trials in 1982) puts the burden ... the expense ... of building a booth (in the courtroom to screen news cameras that harmonize with the decor of the court facility) on the news media. I think the news media in the 3rd District simply feels that this experimental period will be changed into a more relaxed setting where booth requirements will not be retained."

"The bottom line is this," Reid said. "I hear judges, lawyers, and other people say they do not want cameras in the courtroom because they will turn the courtroom into a circus."

"I feel contrary. The biggest thing is not too much coverage, but not enough coverage. The biggest problem the public and the court system faces is insufficient understanding of what goes on in court. The more people understand, the more confident they will be that our court system in North Carolina, in most cases, produces substantial justice."

Reid noted that the initial trial period for cameras in the courtroom, set to end in October 1984, has been extended until December 1985. But he said the Supreme Court has "placed a burden on the news media to cover at least 12 trials between now and the end of October."

"They need this experience. They need to make a decision based on more experience," Reid said of the Supreme Court. "The ball has been passed back to the news media to generate enough cases so the Supreme Court can make a final decision on what type of permanent order to enter."

However, Reid said, "I cannot believe that the Supreme Court would revert to the old rule of no camera coverage. I think we'll have some type of guidelines, either along the lines of the present rules, or more relaxed rules."

Untested Heart Keeps Man Alive

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Surgeons today transplanted a human heart into a man who was kept alive for 11 hours by the emergency implant of a new type of artificial heart that has not received federal approval, officials said.

Sharon Kha, a University of Arizona spokeswoman, said at about 3:15 a.m. that the operation was complete.

The patient, an unidentified 32-year-old, was listed in critical condition with several significant complications, including congestive heart failure caused by fluid in the lungs and other conditions, said spokesman Allan Beigel, a university vice president.

Beigel said Dr. Jack Copeland, the surgeon who performed the transplant, reported that the complications were "a direct result of the length of time that the patient spent on the heart-lung machine" Wednesday while awaiting implantation of the artificial heart and then his second human heart.

Beigel said the patient's vital signs were fairly stable. He said, "Dr. Copeland indicates the prognosis is guarded."

The patient Wednesday received the first implant of a mechanical pump called the Phoenix Heart, which was designed by a dentist who specializes in reconstructive surgery. The patient had suffered cardiac arrest after his body re-

Former Panelist Urges Care In Land Use

By SUBHINSON

Reflector Staff Writer

Development of land surrounding Pitt County Memorial Hospital has proceeded, with few exceptions, along lines prescribed in 1975 by Greenville's first medical district study committee, former member Ruth Trevathan told the city's new land use study committee Wednesday.

Mrs. Trevathan, the sixth in a series of speakers who have been asked to provide information at committee meetings, was invited to address future development of the district as well as provide background on the initial medical area development plan. Data provided by Mrs. Trevathan and others will be used by committee members to produce updated recommendations on growth control of the region encompassing PCHM and the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

Saying there are now no "jarring notes" in Greenville's medical district, Mrs. Trevathan went on to warn that the situation could be compromised at any time unless committee members "stick to their guns and act "consistently" when faced with opposition. If one incompatible use is allowed, it will be even harder to deny a similar intrusion blocks away, she explained.

Further recommendations Mrs. Trevathan had for the committee included more frequent reviews of the medical district land use plan. An update every three to five years would decrease vulnerability of the area, she said, because such activity will keep the matter uppermost in the minds of public officials and private citizens.

The plan, now undergoing its first update since it was adopted in 1975, was earmarked for review in November, action of the City Council in response to controversy spawned by an area developer's request to rezone property across from PCHM to allow construction of a shopping center. The plan, however, was already in need of review, a city official pointed out, because development of the medical neighborhood had far surpassed the base upon which the initial plan was structured. In 1975 when land use recommendations were approved by the Council, ECU had a one-year medical program.

According to Mrs. Trevathan, recommendations of the first committee took 14 months to develop. That period, she said, was a "very emotional, trying time" in which members took "a lot of verbal abuse." Conflict between public and private sectors was apparent, she added, in all of those initial meetings. "But it was a great educational experience."

Out of that 14-month period came a plan providing for orderly development of the critical area involving the hospital and budding medical school; a plan that was initially turned down by a council vote of 2-3. Compromises and revisions were achieved in that same meeting, however, and the plan was adopted Feb. 25, 1975.

The first of its kind ever attempted in Greenville, the study produced two new zoning designations — Medical Arts and Health Care, zoning classifications that comprise 20 percent of the 1,790-acre medical district. When asked if she felt uses allowed under these designations were appropriate, Mrs. Trevathan replied she thought so, but added she did not feel enough acreage was zoned Medical Arts. "People said then (in initial study meetings) we'd never have enough medical arts." The MA zoning classification, she said, allows location of practically anything except grocery stores and fast food enterprises.

Available space is a major consideration, she added, in light of the PCHM building program. Structures composing the medical center are designed for horizontal, not vertical expansion. Consequently, space for both building expansion and parking lots to accommodate staff, patients, visitors, faculty members and students is at a premium. Add to those considerations the medical center's growing role as a regional facility and you begin to see the need for land, she said.

The next meeting of the Medical District Study Committee will be held Monday. Guest speakers will include representatives from the N.C. Department of Transportation who will discuss plans for thoroughfare development in the medical district.

Celebrities Cook For March Of Dimes In Washington

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Casting aside their political worries briefly, many of the best-known couples in Washington tested their culinary skills in a benefit expected to raise $250,000 for the "March of Dimes" charity.

"He's already changed the recipe," sighed Peatsy Hollings, the wife of Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C., who acknowledged that his wife did most of the cooking at home.

"We practiced one night and he kept saying 'It needs a pinch of mace' and I said, 'It needs a smidgen of mace,'" she said, referring to a thick, creamy She- Crab soup they entered in the competition.

Across the ballroom, Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., didn't even pretend to play a big role cooking a roast rack of lamb with mustard persillade, a favorite in Nevada's Basque country.

"I've got an excellent sous-chef over there," he said, pointing to his wife, Carol, as she busily tended the meat for the dish that won in the "Best Entree" category.

Laxalt, one of President Reagan's close friends, said he rarely handled day-to-day cooking in the Laxalt household, even though he boasted about his mean barbecue.

The O'Neill's — House Speaker Thomas P. and his wife, Millie — were making their dish more of a team effort.

But O'Neill, who's fond of complaining about the Reagan administration's way of doing business, wasn't completely satisfied with the type of fish supplied for his recipe of scalloped fish.

"It looks like a Potomac perch," the speaker said, adding that had- dock was the best fish for the recipe.

O'Neill said he never eats fish in Washington, anyway. "I'm spoiled by Boston."

Does the speaker cook at home? Mrs. O'Neill was asked. "Yes — but I won't tell you what."

A real chef in the group was Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, who had three pots cooking as he prepared his bouillabaisse. "Here's the saffron I bought from home," Catherine Stevens reminded her serious-looking husband.

Calling himself a "weekend cook," White House Deputy Chief of Staff Michael K. Deaver and his wife, Carolyn, whipped up a tomato beef curry that won them the Corning Creative Cookery Award.

Deaver, 45 pounds lighter since he came to Washington four years ago, lauded the recipe's healthful aspects, saying it consisted of lean beef and vegetable. His diet secret? No fat and lots of vegetables, chicken and fish.

For Agriculture Secretary John Block, the contest brought some welcome relief from the pressures of dealing with the farm bill and angry farmers.

"I'm a hog farmer, so I'm cooking pork," said Block whose recipe was called "Maple Bar-B-Que Ribs."

"It beats testifying before Congress," he said.

Columnist Ann Landers admitted, "I haven't cooked in 20 years," but she looked at home making a chocolate mousse.

Miss Landers, looking trim in a blue gown, said she was still recovering from the sex survey she took of her readers in which most of them said they preferred cuddling to the act of sex. "No more surveys," she said.

Lee Elder, the golfer, didn't mince words as his wife, Rose, helped him with his Sweet Potato Pie, which was picked as the "Best Dessert."

Asked what he normally cooked at home, Elder said he usually sat down, put his feet up and waited for his wife to bring the meal. Mrs. Elder laughed.

About 45 percent of all new mothers return to work within one year of giving birth in 1984 according to U.S. Department of Labor statistics.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Anyone who has ever sat down on Christmas Eve with a bicycle in a box and a set of instructions in Japanese knows the frustration of a do-it-yourself manual.

Did you ever wonder who wrote them?

The authors are men . . . most of them married men . . . who are interviewed for the position by a personnel director who asks, "Have you ever given directions to your wife on how to get anywhere?"

If the answer is, "Yes," he is then asked, "Did she ever get there?" If the answer to that question is "No," he is hired.

Men seem to have a penchant for telling you more than you will ever want to know in language you cannot begin to understand.

My husband can make a four-year academic graduate degree out of how to get on the expressway. To begin with, he speaks Compass. Everything is east, west, north or south. This ticks me off. Everything off my right hand is always east and everything off my left hand is west. North is straight ahead and south is anywhere behind me . . . no matter where I stand. Don't try to tell me any different.

He always speaks mileage. Don't talk to me of mileage. I don't want to hear it's 2.5 miles to get there. I want to know how many blocks, how many traffic lights and how many minutes.

Don't clutter up the instructions with facts. The thought of going over an underpass or under an overpass confuses me. Let me be surprised.

The passion for vagueness is always with him. One day I came upon him lecturing our son. "Actually," he said, "the panel is held together by four depressed screws which house the electrical mechanism. When the thumb is inserted in the top switch and pressure is applied, currents are reduced drastically and the result is darkness. On the other hand if you . . ."

First-time births will account for 43 percent of all births from 1981 through 1985 according to National Center for Health Statistics.

never between the ribbon reverse, actuator arm and ribbon carrier as outlined in steps 1-5. The only man in North America who broke the code on how to remove the dust bag in my sweeper.

But I cannot help but rejoice that men never wrote the manual on giving birth. Think about it for a minute. By the time he interpreted the directions, the kid would be too outdated to use, and too big to return.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Salesmen Regard 'Stay Out' As An Invitation To Come In

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to the letter signed "Sick of Solicitors," who was upset because her sign saying "No Soliciting" didn't help.

We had the same problem and discovered that some people don't know what the words "solicitor" and "soliciting" mean. In England, a "solicitor" is a lawyer. And in the United States some people call what prostitutes do "soliciting."

We finally took down our "No Solicitors" sign and put up one that said "No Door-to-Door Salespeople." It worked.

ALSO SICK OF SOLICITORS

DEAR ALSO: Read on for an explanation of why experienced door-to-door salespeople ignore that sign:

DEAR ABBY: When I worked for an insulation company as a canvasser, we were instructed to ignore all "No Solicitors" signs and ring the bell anyway.

We were told that only people who had a hard time saying no to a salesperson needed to put up a sign like that, and after working in the field for three years, I found it to be true.

DON'T BELIEVE IN SIGNS

DEAR ABBY: Did that letter signed "Sick of Solicitors" ever bring back memories to this 65-year-old salesman! Forty years ago I was a member of a crew of door-to-door salesmen who used to cover an entire county in a couple of days, then we'd move on to the next county.

Our crew chief told us on our first day that "No Salesmen" signs were often used by people with low sales resistance, and we should pay no attention to them.

Abby, he was right. Behind such signs was either a quick cursing or a fast sale. Neither cost us much time, and it sure added to our sales. Thanks for the memories.

RETIRED IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: The letter from "Sick of Solicitors" made me smile. All good salespeople know that "No Solicitors" signs are put up by people who realize their sales resistance is practically nil.

When they open the door, after they bark, "Didn't you see the sign?" comes the next question, "OK, so what are you selling?"

W.C.W., FORMER SALESMAN

DEAR ABBY: I'm a regular reader of "Dear Abby" in the Tulsa Tribune. I'm also a 67-year-old widower who doesn't want to be bothered by folks coming around to sell me something, so I put a big sign on my front door that turns away all comers.

It says: WARNING—CAUTION,

ARMED DAY SLEEPER!

They don't even knock—they turn and walk away.

OKLAHOMA OKIE

DEAR ABBY: The letter from the person complaining about a "No Soliciting" sign being repeatedly ignored reminded me of the time I trained to sell encyclopedias door-to-door. My supervisor told me, "Behind doors marked 'No Soliciting' live people who have a hard time saying no—hence prime prospects."

He said he always knocked. I didn't; I quit.

FAIR-MINDED GAL, BELTSVILLE, MD.

DEAR ABBY: I once posted a "No Solicitors" sign on my gate, but a courteous young man knocked on my door anyway, and very politely explained that he was a Jehovah's Witness and wanted only a few minutes of my time. I asked him if he had seen the sign on my gate, and he said he had but he wasn't "selling" anything—that he had come to "give" me something. Then he handed me some literature.

Some Insurance Companies Issue Special Policies

Almost anything can be insured and large companies such as Lloyd's of London write special policies.

"You don't have to be a millionaire to need special insurance," points out Dr. Thelma Hinson, extension family resource management specialist at N.C. State University.

Some of the more frequently used specialty insurances include burial insurance, child care insurance (for those who watch children at home on a business basis), health and burial insurance on pets, home business insurance, legal expense insurance, investor's insurance and mugging insurance.

But you can also insure against adverse publicity, lost contact lenses, hang glider liability, multiple births, rain, saddle animal liability, stock broker errors and omissions and accidents involving water beds.

"Check your situation for specialized risks. Then ask your insurance agent about coverage. He or she should be able to write you a policy or refer you to someone who can," Dr. Hinson.

Willis Maid Service, Inc.
752-4043

I thanked him for wanting to give me something, but told him (politely) that I was a nurse who worked nights and tried to sleep during the daytime. Then I got my purse and gave him a dollar for the literature, told him that I was very happy with my religion and said goodbye.

Abby, I realize that it is part of some people's religion to spread the gospel, and their church demands that they do it, but wouldn't you call that "soliciting" even though they have come to give you something?

SOLICITED

DEAR SOLICITED: Yes. And as someone once said, "The most precious right a person has is the right to be left alone."

Growth

There can be no doubt that the Republican Party is here to stay in Pitt County.

The county GOP convention was held Tuesday night and there was a contest for the chairmanship with young businessman Douglas P. Hill winning the election.

Reports indicate that more Republicans attended this year's convention than last year, which is remarkable considering that 1984 was an election year with several important positions at stake on the national and state levels.

What's more, the Republicans made it clear that they were after disenchanting conservative Democrats through their "Operation Switch" campaign.

There was a time when Pitt Republicans held their conventions in the home of the county chairman and it was a foregone conclusion as to who the chairman would be. Times have changed and it means that the Democratic Party has a lot to do to sharpen its image if it is to hold on to its registered party members. The GOP activity will also bring more vigorous politics in Pitt County. It doesn't have to mean the decline of the Democratic party. If the Democrats react positively, it can mean better candidates and better government at all levels.

EPA Rules

The Environmental Protection Agency has taken what it hopes is the final steps toward getting most of the lead out of gasoline with adoption of regulations reducing lead concentration. Neither the impact nor results will be immediately noticed.

It has been a long time in coming.

The protracted time element involved does not reflect a casual attitude toward health risks in automotive exhaust pollutants. Rather there was also concern about practicalities ... the effect on public transportation and the economy should lead concentration in gasoline be abruptly reduced. In effect, the consuming public (as well as refineries) have been given a grace period to adjust for the inevitable change.

Final regulations reducing permissible lead concentration in gasoline begin to take effect July 1, culminating in the lowest level on Jan. 1.

There are researchers who attribute the decline and fall of the Roman empire to pervasive effects of lead poisoning ... unrelated, of course, to gasoline. And, decades ago there were adults who attributed mental and nerve malfunctions among some children as being due to inhaling exhaust fumes for the never-fully explained "kick" that resulted. (To this day we remember admonitions to stay away from the exhaust pipe.

The EPA has announced reason to believe IQ scores among thousands of children are affected by blood concentrations of lead from exhausts. (Lead poisoning is known to cause not only mental deterioration, but kidney damage and anemia as well.)

So, the agency is convinced its action will result in lowered medical costs ... even lower maintenance costs for engines now fueled unnecessarily with leaded gasoline.

The Tax Cut Argument Broadens

RALEIGH — Democrats opposed to Gov. Jim Martin's proposed tax cuts have no shortage of arguments with which to debate. In the past several months, they've argued that such cuts would undermine education reform and they've argued that Martin's business tax cuts would practically wipe out corporate taxes. In the last several weeks, however, the Democratic leadership has apparently decided that its strongest argument against the tax cuts is that they would actually cause tax increases. The Democrats say Martin's cuts would so damage the revenues of local governments that major increases in property taxes would have to be approved by local boards.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey, who has never cottoned much to Martin's ideas, recently said the tax cuts, together with federal cuts, could cause a 23-cent increase in the tax rate of his home county of Madison.

Ramsey didn't stop with Madison

County. The Legislature's Fiscal Research Division also provided legislators and the press with a 100-county breakdown on the revenue which would be lost by repeal of the inventory and intangibles taxes and by the end of the federal revenue sharing program. Legislators were also told how much revenue each county could raise with each penny increase in the property tax.

For example, Alexander County would lose $839,000 from the three cuts. To replace that money, the appropriate boards in Alexander would have to raise the property tax rate by 22.1 cents.

"I think they're very neatly laying the groundwork," one fiscal analyst said privately. "They want people (the legislators) to remember those numbers when they vote on the tax cuts."

The analyst went on to predict that the Martin administration in the next few weeks will bring forth much different figures on the effects of the federal cuts. "One's a worst case scenario, the other will be a best case scenario," the analyst said.

The intangibles and inventory taxes are both forms of property tax the revenues from which go to local governments. Martin keeps saying that lost revenue will be replaced. But Ramsey almost disregards that, saying he just doesn't know how state General Fund money can be transferred to local governments. Also, it is at this point that the almost unbearable. Part of the campaign will be educational. Part will be legislative. The AMA makes a good case.

The problem, in its simplest terms, is that in recent years malpractice judgments have soared beyond the reach of malpractice insurance. Until 1930 there wasn't much of a problem, but as drugs became more potent and technology burgeoned, lawsuits began to multiply. Even so, the costs of medical claims remained manage-able until about 15 years ago.

Then jury verdicts began to take off. In 1975, the midpoint of verdicts against physicians was $48,500; the average was $95,000. In 1983-84, the midpoint verdict was $200,600 and the average was $338,000. For injuries to newborns, the midpoint verdict in 1984 was $1,452,000.

The figures from California are instructive. In 1976, when litigation peaked, 226 malpractice suits went to trial. The defendant doctors won 74 percent of the cases, but juries still awarded $9.6 million in damages to 58 plaintiffs. The average award was $166,600. In 1983, doctors won 68 percent of the 152 suits that went to trial, but jury verdicts for 49 plaintiffs came to nearly $32 million — an average of $649,000. Nine of the awards in California were for more than a million dollars.

The trend has forced many old-line insurance companies to stop writing malpractice insurance altogether. Doctors have formed their own companies, but they too have been compelled to charge almost prohibitive premiums. Between 1977 and 1983, premiums for medical professional liability rose from $1.2 billion to almost $1.6 billion, but losses in 1983 amounted to $2 billion.

The hidden costs of the situation are more difficult to estimate. A task force of the AMA believes that "defensive medicine" may add from $15 billion to $40 billion a year to the costs of medical care. Doctors will order diagnostic tests and take other measures not because these measures are necessary, but because they may provide a defense later on. One study indicated that fully 25 percent of a doctor's bill may represent defensive costs.

The AMA plans a vigorous public relations campaign to remind consumers that in one way or another they foot the cost of all this. The AMA also will be lobbying hard in state legislatures for changes in the rules that govern malpractice litigation. One change that makes sense — 18 states already have adopted it — would permit or require periodic payments to successful plaintiffs. Such payments are less costly to finance, and they assure that income will be available to the injured person over a period of years.

The AMA will be lobbying Congress, too, but the association's ideas on federal legislation appear not to have jelled. The general idea is for the federal government to provide unspecified "incentives" to the states to adopt the kind of laws the AMA would like to see on the books. In point of fact the states have not been idle. With the sole exception of West Virginia, every state has acted in this field. In nine states, parts of their programs have been found unconstitutional, but such states as California, Florida, Indiana, Delaware, Louisiana and Nebraska have enacted comprehensive programs intended to keep malpractice costs within reasonable limits.

Federal legislation may be the wrong medicine for this ailment, but the problem manifestly demands attention. Doctors do make mistakes — sometimes terrible mistakes — and the victims deserve compensation. All the same, many of these jury awards bear no rational relationship to the injuries suffered, and the unwarranted verdicts drive up the cost of medical care for everyone else.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I attended a business meeting held at the Minges Building in uptown Greenville and parked in an adjacent area open for the public restricted to two-hour parking. On return, I found a ticket indicating that I had overparked 10 minutes.

Just the night before, I read in The Daily Reflector that a company had been hired that will "revive" the uptown section of Greenville at considerable expense. I cannot help but think what a waste this will be if the city is going to continue the annoyance of parking meters to feed while all around us there are large and beautiful shopping malls with unlimited parking. It does not seem wise to consider a plan, obviously costly, without allowing the visitors and potential customers the option of free parking.

Much good will would be generated by such a move and I think the store owners would be amazed at increased traffic from happy customers.

Strength For Today

How do we forsake sin? We forsake it by putting it behind us. When Jesus was tempted by Satan his words were, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

Toward the end of Jesus' ministry he encountered a temptation in Peter's suggestion that he bypass crucifixion and become the world's savior in an easier fashion. The Lord's words on that occasion were: "Get thee behind me, Satan; thou art an offense to me, for thou savourest not the things that be of God but those that be of men."

One reason why good resolutions turn out to be pretty weak is because such resolutions involve no action. If we are really going to give up something we really believe we ought not to be doing, we must turn from it. The turning must be resolute — no looking back as Lot's wife did to gaze fondly at the burning city from which she had fled.

If something is really wrong, you had better make a break before it breaks you.

Congressmen Threaten Talks

WASHINGTON — Policymakers at a recent high-level meeting preparing for renewed arms talks were stunned by word that at least 28 members of Congress plus wives and staffs were flying to Geneva at Uncle Sam's expense to attend the opening of the U.S.-Soviet nuclear games.

When protests were voiced, the principal arms negotiator — ex-Sen. John Tower — shrugged his shoulders in a don't-blame-me posture. Whoever should be blamed, Secretary of State George Shultz is furious. Three Air Force planes are set to leave Washington Sunday carrying a party that, at this writing, totals more than 40 and is going up.

Taxpayer expense will exceed $150,000 for transportation alone. But more than dollars is at stake. "It has turned into a damned circus," a senior administration official told us. Attending to that circus and keeping the lawmakers amused will preoccupy U.S. negotiators. At worst, the congressional descent on Geneva might give the Soviets the impression of breathless anticipation across an expectant America.

There literally would be nothing for the lawmakers to do in Geneva. They cannot sit in on the negotiations, cannot talk to Soviet negotiators and could be more easily briefed in Washington by U.S. experts. "The difference would be coming to see us from their offices in Washington instead of luxury hotels in Geneva," one briefer told us.

But another bizarre touch: plans by House members to cap their Swiss outing with a touchdown in Ireland for St. Patrick's Day. Joining Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill (in Ireland for a parade), House members would rest up after the Geneva grind for a few days on the Old Sod. Administration officials, though unaware of the Irish stop, describe the entire business as a junket.

It started modestly when Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd suggested Senate observers for the new arms talks. He was informed that under no conditions could senators sit in on negotiations. Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole liked the idea, partly as a consolation for Sen. Ted Stevens, his just-defeated rival for the Republican leadership. "That's when things started getting out of hand," a Senate insider told us.

A bipartisan team of 10 senators co-chaired by Stevens and Democrat Sam Nunn was named, with additional staffers. But Stevens talked about a permanent Senate observer's office in Geneva and hinted at manning that post himself for the duration.

That pleased neither the State Department nor the new chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Sen. Richard Lugar. He and the committee's ranking Democrat, Sen. Claiborne Pell, became observers.

Democrats raise their secondary arguments. They ask why revenues generated by the personal income tax should be diverted to pay for business tax breaks. And then they argue that such a transfer of funds would undermine education improvements.

Martin discounts the entire Democratic scenario. In his State of the State address, he was skeptical about the proposed revenue sharing cuts. He also said simple arithmetic applied to revenue projections and state spending shows the state can afford the tax cuts and education improvements. But Martin is talking of education spending increases of $116 million in the coming biennium. The Democrats are talking much higher.

Ramsey's obvious lack of enthusiasm for a state reimbursement to the locals makes local government officials very nervous about the whole idea of these tax cuts. "If you're a county commissioner, which would you prefer: a revenue source upon which you have to depend on the Legislature or one you control yourself?" a Democratic budget analyst asked.

Raising the specter of higher property taxes is a good way to get the public's attention and to scare heck out of local government officials.

No one said Jim Martin was butting heads with a fool when he took on Liston Ramsey.

Joint Hospital Pact Is Accepted

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County's Board of Commissioners has reached agreement in principle on joint operation of Martin General Hospital and Bertie County Memorial Hospital. The agreement involves four area boards — commissioners from the two counties and hospital boards of the two hospitals.

The four boards have agreed to contract hospital management services from the same group, Sun Health, a hospital spokesman said.

At this time, the only action involved in the agreement is an approval for the four boards to look into sharing of services between the two hospitals. In agreeing in principle to enter into the contract with Sun Health, the next step in the process is to review options available, the spokesman said.

Martin commissioners expressed thoughts that shared services would hopefully reduce some hospital costs for area residents.

"We're in a very critical situation here," commissioner Henry Winslow said. "Martin County has traditionally carried a pretty good fund surplus."

"We have tried to go with Martin General," he added, "but it has put us in a critical situation. It's going to put a strain to keep up at the same level. We're dropping $1,000 a day there and I don't know how long the people of Martin County can keep doing that."

Commission chairman Joe B. Griffin pointed out that "the indigent of both counties need a place to be treated."

Public Hearings Urged In Martin

WILLIAMSTON — Two groups asked the Martin County Board of Education this week to schedule public hearings before choosing a successor to school Superintendent R. Eugene Rogers, who is retiring at the end of this school year.

Oden Latham, spokesman for the Martin County Chamber of Commerce, told school board members that the chamber proposed open public forums be held in each of the four school districts for the purpose of seeking views from citizens about criteria for those who might seek the position.

Latham said a proposed hiring procedure did not use public input effectively.

Another spokesman, W.J. Morris, also supported public input. He suggested a non-partisan biracial "Citizens Advisory Standing Committee" be formed to take part in the selection process. Morris noted the board would not be bound by the committee's decision.

Dan Bowen, a long-time county school employee, called the public hearing suggestion "an insult to the board's intelligence."

Following an executive session, school board members released a statement stating: "As the Board of Education continues its process for selecting a new superintendent, it wishes to invite citizens of the county to inform the board of those qualifications which they desire in a superintendent of schools.

"The board is not asking individuals to submit names of candidates, but rather criteria which should be considered as the board makes it choice from those who have submitted applications by the new deadline, March 11."

The board's statement also asked citizens to put their recommendations in writing and to submit them to the board's attorney, and requested that such comments be signed and submitted prior to March 15.

Senator Listed For Next Shuttle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Jake Garn, whose canceled space shuttle flight was supposed to have started today, says he's pleased to be reassigned another mission so quickly but is disappointed that French astronaut Patrick Baudry has been bumped from the crew.

Garn and five of the other six crew members from the scrubbed Challenger mission were named by NASA on Wednesday to fly a Discovery flight in late March or early April. Baudry was dropped from the crew to make way for Charles Walker, who had been assigned the next Discovery mission.

The reason: Walker's complex drug-processing equipment already is installed in Discovery. To remove it would delay the launch. And with it in place, there is not room in the cabin for Baudry's five lockers full of medical test equipment.

Baudry was reassigned to a June shuttle flight. The other six members of Walker's crew will be assigned a later mission, NASA said.

When Challenger's trip had to be cancelled because of a defect in a tracking and data relay satellite it was to carry, the space agency decided to combine some features of that mission with some from a Discovery flight set to start March 22. Discovery was selected for the hybrid journey because it could be readied more quickly and easily.

NASA said it hopes to start the mission in late March or early April. Officials said March 29 is a preliminary target date.

Garn told a news conference in Washington on Wednesday that he was happy about the new flight assignment.

"My only disappointment," he said, "is that all seven of us could not stay together on the crew. We trained together and worked together."

"My understanding is that Walker and Baudry could not go together," Garn said. He added that Baudry probably will be happier with the June flight, which at seven days duration is three days longer than the upcoming mission.

Baudry had complained that four days was not enough time to conduct his medical experiments.

In retaining Garn on the crew, the space agency cited his extensive training for other medical tests to be performed on the flight and said his congressional schedule would be favorable during the period of flight.

The astronauts will release a Canadian communications satellite that had been aboard Challenger and a Navy Communications satellite that was part of Discovery's original cargo.

Panel Says Drug Trade Skyrocketing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fed by the opium fields of Asia and clandestine laboratories in South America, the U.S. narcotics trade is skyrocketing at a rate of $10 billion annually, a House panel reported.

Narcotics traffickers grossed an estimated $110 billion in U.S. sales in 1984 as the number of heroin addicts climbed past 500,000 for the first time since 1973, the Select Narcotics Committee said Wednesday.

Among the few bright spots was the military, the report said. It said a Defense Department crackdown on drug abuse in the armed forces is working.

But from the poppy fields along Asia's southern rim to the violence-prone coca regions of Peru, the report sketched a picture of faltering efforts to stem a flood of narcotics destined for America's streets, where U.S. overdose deaths increased 93 percent from 1979 through 1983.

Drug traffickers "have declared war on the United States," Committee Chairman Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y., said in a statement. He urged measures to "repel the invader."

The committee's report said governments of narcotics-producing nations must be persuaded to toughen enforcement. It said greater educational efforts were needed to warn American youngsters about drug abuse.

Based on a wide array of hearings, documents and an overseas fact-finding tour, the report surveyed narcotics-related problems in 25 nations.

The report said about 45 percent of the coca that reaches this country in the form of cocaine comes from Peru and much of the rest from Bolivia.

Guerrilla raids in Upper Huallaga Valley — one of six regions of Peru where farmers grow the coca leaf — have shut down two 1981 anti-narcotics programs financed with a total of $33 million in American aid, the report said. The programs were designed to slash coca cultivation and induce growers to switch crops.

The report said that on April 18, the chief of the Coca Growers Association at Tingo Maria in the Upper Huallaga was killed by gunmen, while the same night, 70 armed men raided an outpost of the crop substitution program.

Drawing on Peruvian and Bolivian coca paste, the report said, clandestine laboratories in Colombia produce 75 percent of illegal U.S. cocaine imports.

Security Police Armory Damaged By Explosive Blasts In Nicaragua

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — An armory that serves as headquarters of Nicaragua's state security police exploded in a series of shattering blasts, sparking a fire that spread to a nearby military hospital.

More than 200 firemen battled overnight to control the blaze.

President Daniel Ortega said the explosions and fire at El Chipote armory caused extensive damage but no casualties.

The series of explosions late Wednesday night led to initial reports that the explosions occurred all around the city, including at an oil refinery on Managua's west side.

However, authorities said later that at least five explosions occurred at the armory, and that the sound of those blasts led to an inaccurate report on state radio that the explosions occurred throughout the city.

Ortega said the fire was set off by explosives stored at the armory. Interior Minister Tomas Borge told reporters at El Chipote that an investigation was under way to determine what caused the explosives to detonate.

As firemen battled the blaze, high flames consumed trees and vegetation at the edge of nearby Tiscapa Lagoon, on a hill above the city's main hotel, the nearby Intercontinental.

Many families living near the hospital were evacuated. However, a fire official who spoke on condition he not be identified, said early this morning that firemen were preventing the blaze from spreading, even though they had been unable to put it out.

Many people said they first thought the explosions were sonic booms made by high-flying U.S. surveillance planes. A series of sonic booms in early November by such planes spread panic and confusion among Managua residents and government officials, who at first thought the sonic booms were explosions.

Nicaragua's leftist leaders periodically predict invasions by U.S. forces.

Immediately after the blasts occurred Wednesday, large numbers of police rushed through the streets in official vehicles, and sirens screamed in the night, and the state radio called on Managua residents to "place yourselves on battle readiness and to put yourselves at the orders of the police."

Marijuana Hunt Ends In Shootout Four Officers Killed In Mexico

SAN FERNANDO, Mexico (AP) — Police say they have arrested 11 people linked to the drug smugglers who killed four policemen and a civilian in two shootouts with police chasing a tanker truck loaded with marijuana.

But the gunmen may have escaped into the United States.

The gunmen were driving a tanker truck filled with marijuana near San Fernando, 87 miles from the Texas border, when police began to pursue them and a shootout occurred Tuesday, police said. The policemen and the civilian died in the gun battle.

Seven miles down the road, the gunmen rammed a second police car, exchanged fired with the police officers, abandoned the truck and escaped. Three other police officers were wounded in that battle, police said.

Then other members of the drug operation picked up the vehicle and drove it toward the Texas border, police said.

Police said the second group of drivers was arrested when they drove the truck into Reynosa, about 12 miles south of Texas, and they led police to a home where the remainder of the 11 people were arrested.

Police said they confiscated automatic weapons and handguns at the home, and that the arrests broke a major drug-smuggling ring. The truck was taken to a warehouse, they said.

Those who did the actual shooting in San Fernando already may have escaped into the United States, officials said.

Officials said the truck's original drivers opened fire on pursuing police.

"The police didn't have time to shoot because they still had the safety on their weapons," Judge Dagoberto Martinez Becerra said in a telephone interview.

He said the officers tried to stop the tanker on the outskirts of San Fernando. A wounded policeman involved in the chase and gunfight that followed said he saw at least three men in the truck.

Officials in Matamoros said that one officer suffered at least six gunshot wounds and was in critical condition in a hospital there. Officials said the civilian was a friend of one of the officers who went with them when they received a radio call.

Jose Luis Aldape Lopez, one of the wounded officers, said at the hospital that he and his two companions got a distress call and headed for the site of the first shooting.

He said they saw the bodies of four officers and the civilian, then chased a white Mercury Marquis for about seven miles before it stopped.

"We were ready to get out and shoot and then felt a hit from the back and it was the tanker truck," he said. The firing started and he managed to radio for help after he was hit, he said.

The trunk of the car was smashed and the rear window of the driver's side was shattered, with a gaping hole in the middle.

Javier Manilla Garcia, president of the local Association of Newspaper Reporters here, said the dead men at the first site had been shot through the head.

San Fernando, a city of 40,000, is in the northeastern state of Tamaulipas on the road that leads from the state capital of Ciudad Victoria to the border cities of Reynosa and Matamoros.

There have been reports that pressure from drug enforcement programs in the traditional marijuana growing areas of the Mexican interior has encouraged growers to plant more crops in areas such as Tamaulipas.

DEA Agent's Body Found In Mexico

U.S. WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief of the Drug Enforcement Administration is renewing American criticism of the Mexican government's handling of the abduction and apparent murder of U.S. agent Enrique Camarena Salazar.

Following the discovery Wednesday in Mexico of what authorities believed was Camarena's body, John C. Lawn, acting administrator of the DEA, said Mexican police should have done more immediately following the agent's Feb. 7 abduction in Guadalajara, Mexico.

Lawn, a former Marine and 15-year FBI veteran who has been told he will be nominated to succeed Francis R. Mullen as DEA administrator, told reporters that "as a law enforcement officer, I can tell you the most critical time in a kidnapping is the first 48 hours."

"There was a period of inertia on the part of the Mexican government" in the days just after Camarena was kidnapped as he was walking to a restaurant within sight of the U.S. Consulate in Guadalajara to have lunch with his wife, Lawn maintained.

"Their action was too little too late," Lawn said of the Mexican response. "The inertia of the first few days still hasn't been justified in my mind."

Several Mexicans have made statements to the news media pointing to the country's efforts to stem drug traffic, and Attorney General Sergio Garcia Ramirez has said Mexican police were using "all the resources at their disposal" to solve the Camarena case.

Rich Women Grow In Number

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Almost 28 percent of the nation's personal wealth is held by 2.8 percent of the adult population — a concentration of money that declined only slightly between 1976 and 1982, when the number of millionaires more than doubled.

New statistics compiled by the Internal Revenue Service estimate that the richest Americans have a net worth — assets minus debts — of more than $2.4 trillion. The number of wealthy women is increasing much faster than the number of rich men; the typical rich woman has more than her male counterpart, and real estate is the favorite asset of the rich, followed closely by corporate stock.

The IRS study found that in 1982, nearly 4.4 million people, referred to as "top wealthholders," had assets of more than $300,000, and that more than one-third of them lived in California, Texas, Florida and New York. The number with holdings exceeding $500,000 was just under 2 million.

"The top wealthholder in 1982 was apt to be a male under 50 years of age with net worth between $250,000 and $500,000," the IRS said in a report based on estate-tax returns filed in 1983. "More than one-half of his wealth was held as real estate and corporate stock, with real estate surpassing corporate stock as the most prominent asset in the top wealthholder's portfolio."

Real estate accounted for 31.5 percent of the holdings of the rich men in 1982 and 30.6 percent of the women's portfolios. Men were more likely to hold corporate stock than were women; women were partial to cash and bonds. While life insurance accounted for 1.2 percent of the men's estates, it represented only 0.5 percent of the women's.

The report found the number of women holding between $300,000 and $500,000 increased by 200 percent from 1976 to 1982 (compared with a 96 percent increase for men) and the number of women worth more than $500,000 climbed by 123 percent. But because the number of moderately rich women increased so sharply during the period, the IRS said, the average net worth of wealthy women dropped to $605,900, while the average for rich men increased to $519,600.

All told, 39.3 percent of the top wealthholders in 1982 were women, up from 34.7 percent the year before and 32.8 percent in 1976.

The IRS found little significance in the slight decline since 1976 in the share of the nation's wealth held by a relative handful of rich people. That downward trend has been running since 1922, the report said. And while the number of millionaires increased from 180,000 in 1976 to 410,000 in 1982, much of that change was a result of inflation. It took $1 million in 1982 to buy what could be had for only $639,700 in 1976.

The report estimated 10,100 people under the age of 50 and 11,400 over 65 had assets of more than $5 million.

New Sight At 100

WEYMOUTH, Mass. (AP) — John Stenberg turned 100 last week, but refused to celebrate the event until he regained his sight. He got his wish and is looking forward to a birthday party this weekend.

"I haven't been able to see for a long time. I was always eating in the dark," Stenberg said before undergoing cataract surgery Tuesday at New England Eye Surgical Center in Weymouth.

The centenarian was back in his room at the Weymouth Manor Nursing Home an hour after a 30-minute operation that replaced a cataract in his left eye with an artificial lens. A protective eye patch was removed Wednesday.

"He's already had improvement in his vision. He has no pain, no discomfort and he's doing real well," said Patti Leahy, an assistant to Dr. Brent W. Lambert, who conducted the surgery.

"He's in good spirits," added Ruth Shanahan, administrator of the nursing home where Stenberg has lived for two years.

Stenberg, a retired master photoengraver, turned 100 last week, but refused to celebrate his birthday until he regained his sight.

His son, Arthur Stenberg of Yarmouth, said the four Stenberg children, four grandchildren and six great-grandchildren probably would gather this weekend for a birthday party at the nursing home.

"They wanted to have a birthday party for him last week, but he wouldn't let them," said the younger Stenberg, 73. "He wanted to see who was there."

'Superfund' Cost Nearly Doubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Accounting Office, nearly doubling an estimate it made last year, says the federal "Superfund" cost of cleaning up the nation's worst toxic chemical dumps could reach $39.1 billion.

The GAO, the investigative arm of Congress, also estimates the cleanup process could eventually cost states $7.6 billion and require spending totaling $26.1 billion by the individuals and companies responsible for creating the dumps.

The agency says the number of sites on the Environmental Protection Agency's national priority list of the worst dumps could reach 4,170, nearly double a high-end estimate of 2,200 made by the EPA in December.

The GAO further says that there may be as many as 378,000 potentially hazardous sites across the country. Currently, the EPA lists 19,368 in this category, which includes everything from a leaking chemical vat to the poisoned community of Love Canal in upstate New York.

The estimates are contained in testimony prepared by Milton J. Socolar, the GAO's No. 2 official, for delivery at a House hearing this afternoon on proposals to greatly expand spending for the Superfund toxic waste cleanup program.

Socolar said that because accurate information about toxic waste sites is "incomplete, the Congress, EPA and the public cannot be sure that human health and the environment are being adequately protected."

In its latest estimate of the magnitude of the chemical waste problem, the EPA has said it could cost Superfund as much as $22 billion to neutralize the 2,200 sites that it says could wind up on the national priority list.

Under Superfund's first 4½ years, cleanup operations have been completed at only six priority sites, although the EPA says work is being performed now on scores of other such dumps.

Socolar said the GAO, which last year predicted Superfund costs might reach $20 billion, based the $39.1 billion estimate on latest data and assumed "continuation of past levels of (cleanup) operation."

Commenting on the Superfund program, he said:

—Both the EPA and the states have made only a "limited" effort to compile inventories of hazardous waste sites, as required by law.

—In the absence of cleanup standards in the Superfund law, EPA follows "environmental standards contained in other statutes which do not address all of the substances and conditions found at hazardous waste sites."

—The Department of Health and Human Services has not completed any of the health effects studies and testing of chemicals required by the 1980 Superfund law.

Warren Budget Panel To Begin

RALEIGH — Rep. Ed N. Warren, chairman of the House Appropriations Base Budget Committee on Education, said the committee will begin its work this week by hearing from Bob Scott, president of the community colleges system.

Scott will be followed by Dr. William Friday, president of the University of North Carolina, and Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction.

Warren said the committee will meet for about 35 days, from 8:30 a.m. to 10 a.m. each day.

"We have our work cut out for us," Warren said. "The impact of potential federal cuts to the state budget and the request for tax cuts on the state level will make our job very difficult."

The three educational systems' budgets receive about 64 percent of the total state revenue, with public schools accounting for about 42 percent, the university system receiving 15 percent and the community colleges accounting for about 7 percent.

In addition to looking at the line-item budgets, Warren said "we will also be looking for program quality and effectiveness to assure that each program funded is bringing the best education possible to all North Carolina students."

JUBILATION — Opponents of the Carter Presidential Parkway in Atlanta were jubilant Wednesday after a judge issued a permanent injunction barring the prime contractor from doing work on the project. (AP Laserphoto)

Judge Halts Work On Carter Parkway

ATLANTA (AP) — A judge Wednesday voided the contract awarded by the state for construction of a parkway to Jimmy Carter's presidential library and permanently enjoined the contractor from continuing the work.

Superior Court Judge Osgood Williams, ruling on a suit filed by parkway opponents, said the contract was awarded improperly to Shepherd Construction Co. by the state Department of Transportation last fall.

The judge found that a city ordinance transferring land to the state for the park was valid. But he said the invalid contract was sufficient for him to enjoin Shepherd from further construction work on the controversial roadway.

Carter's office said the former president was traveling Wednesday and would have no immediate comment on Williams' decision.

Cecilia Mitchell, a member of the parkway opposition group called Roadbusters, said she was "ecstatic" over the ruling.

"I think we've got enough momentum with this decision, I have the faith that it's going to be stopped," she said.

In 1982, Shepherd Construction Co. pleaded guilty to charges of conspiracy in restraint of free and open competition in an unrelated criminal bid rigging case in Fulton County Superior Court.

Shepherd was ordered to pay restitution to the state of $2.2 million plus interest in four payments. Shepherd later was restored to the state's list of qualified bidders subject to conditions set forth in a probationary agreement with the DOT.

But Shepherd recently was found to be in violation of the probationary agreement and delinquent in making restitution, and Williams said in the ruling that the DOT was aware of Shepherd's violation and the delinquency.

"To allow Shepherd to benefit under such circumstances is an abuse of discretion," Williams said.

Shepherd began building the 2.4-mile Presidential Parkway after winning the DOT contract Nov. 21. The road was designed to connect Carter's planned library complex near Emory University with downtown Atlanta.

The road work was interrupted several times by demonstrators who climbed trees, stood in construction ditches and pitched tents to protest what they called the destruction of park land along the parkway route.

Six residents of the area filed the lawsuit in Williams' court last month against the state, the city and Shepherd Construction. It alleged that Shepherd was ineligible to bid on the parkway contract because of bid-rigging probation violations.

The suit also alleged that City Council votes transferring parkway land to the state were invalid because of a conflict of interest by Council President Marvin Arrington, who was a minority contractor on the project. Arrington, who said he was unaware of his company's connection at the time of the votes, later withdrew from the project.

Insanity Plea Set

ATLANTA (AP) — A 30-year-old postal clerk will plead insanity to murder and assault charges stemming from a shooting spree that killed two co-workers and wounded a third, his lawyer said.

Police said Steven W. Brownlee, a 12-year employee of the U.S. Postal Service, was charged with murder and two counts of aggravated assault.

Members of Brownlee's mail-sorting crew dove for the floor about noon Wednesday when he allegedly began shooting. Some of them wore black, in mourning for another co-worker, Bettye Eberhart, 35, of Decatur, who was murdered last week.

Mrs. Eberhart was strangled in her suburban home. Her husband was charged with her murder.

Brownlee's attorney, Jerry Froehlich, said Wednesday night Brownlee would use the insanity defense.

The wounded worker, Douglas M. Adams, 42, of Woodstock, was in stable condition at Grady Memorial Hospital, said postal service spokeswoman Kay Loggins.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48.25 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. Too few percent of the loads offered to confirm a preliminary weighted average. The market is steady and the live supply is light to adequate for a good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Thursday was 1,856,000, compared to 1,813,000 last Thursday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 3 to 6 cents higher at mostly 2.95-3.09 in East and mostly 3.01-3.19 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans 2 to 8 cents higher at mostly 5.82-6.02 in the East and mostly 5.73-5.88 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 3.20-3.40; (new crop wheat 2.89-3.14).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was broadly lower today, extending the decline that set in Wednesday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 5.52 to 1,274.85 in the first half hour.

Loser took a 2-1 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The market has been beset lately by concern over rising interest rates and fears that the upswing in rates has further to go.

That prospect was reinforced in many investor's minds when Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve talked Wednesday of the possibility that the dollar might tumble from its recent lofty heights in foreign exchange.

Analysts say a falling dollar would stand to cool off foreign investors' enthusiasm for U.S. securities like Treasury bills and bonds.

That reduction of demand for interest-bearing securities could create significant upward pressure on interest rates in this country.

Interest rates continued to climb in the credit markets this morning. Rates on short-term T-bills rose 12 to 15 basis point, or hundredths of a percentage point.

Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, fell about $5 for every $1,000 in face value.

American Natural Resources was actively traded, down 1/8 at 61 1/2. The company, which is the subject of an unwelcomed $60-a-share takeover bid by Coastal Corp., is reported to be looking for a "white knight" merger partner.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 11.48 to 1,280.37.

Declines outpaced advances by about 5 to 3 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 116.94 million shares, against 116.37 million in the previous session.

Newton, Lang Pace Farmville Victory

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

HAVELOCK — Stephanie Newton and Lisa Lang combined for 42 points and 29 rebounds to lead Farmville Central's Lady Jaguars to a 70-54 victory over Havelock in the championship game of the District I, 3-A high school basketball playoffs.

Farmville Central advances to the Eastern Regionals at Wilson Beddingfield, where they will face Rockingham (24-4) next Thursday at 8:30 p.m. In the boys' final, West Carteret canned its free throws in the final period to defeat West Craven 69-59.

Newton fired in 23 points and pulled down 12 rebounds, while Lang powered inside for 19 points and 17 rebounds as the Lady Jags dominated the boards 41-32. Joy Peaden chipped in 14 points for Farmville.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

THURSDAY AFTERNOON, MARCH 7, 1985

Pat Abel paced the Lady Rams with 18 points and 12 rebounds. Karen Johnson and Laura Maxwell contributed 11 points each, while Shannon Stobel added 10 for Havelock.

"Stephanie Newton probably played one of her best games since the beginning of the season,"

Farmville Coach Hilda Worthington said. "I think Lisa Lang has a lot more spring in her legs (than Pat Abel) and that gave her an advantage most of the time. She's able to go up over people without fouling."

Lang picked up her second foul with 1:53 left in the first quarter, sat out the remainder of the period, then finished the game without another violation.

"I just told her to calm down," Worthington said. "She tends to get excited — over-anxious."

After a see-saw first half, Farmville finished with a 32-31 edge at intermission. The Lady Jags opened the third quarter with a 6-2 scoring spurt, but Havelock trimmed the margin to 38-37 with a follow-shot by Abel with 1:25 left.

Farmville closed the third quarter with seven unanswered points as Lang completed a three-point play with three seconds left for a 45-37 edge.

The Lady Jaguars added to the lead in the final period, as Debra Joyner connected on two free throws with 5:14 left for a 53-41 margin. After Johnson hit from outside for Havelock, Peaden scored inside for Farmville and Lang added a free throw and a field goal for a 58-43 Lady Jags edge.

Peaden sank a 12-footer and Newton added two free throws to give Farmville its biggest lead of the night at 62-45 with 2:30 remaining.

Havelock trimmed the margin to 14 twice in the final minute but was unable to gain more ground.

"I thought it was outstanding," Worthington said of the Lady Jaguars' effort. "The girls played hard and showed they can hold their heads up. I knew how well (Havelock) shoots from outside, so we tried to stay on them further out."

"At first I thought it would be hard (to get ready after beating SouthWest Edgecombe in the semifinals), but when I got here tonight I knew they were ready to play. The girls just hadn't put it together until this tournament."

If the Lady Jaguars had a flaw in their performance, it was at the free throw line. Farmville connected on 16 out of 29 from the line for the game, but nine in the final period to seal the victory.

"I think it might have been nerves," Worthington said. "We spent a lot of time working on free throws, but we need to make more than that."

Pirates 'Survive' 27-15 Slugfest

Chris Bradberry blasted a homer to put East Carolina ahead to stay and Winfred Johnson pitched four hitless innings of relief to lead the Pirates to a record-setting 27-15 victory over Atlantic Christian College Wednesday at Harrington Field.

ECU spotted Atlantic Christian an eight-run lead, then roared back to score 11 runs in the third inning and 12 more in the sixth.

The Pirates, 4-0, broke the previous record for total runs scored in a game and most runs scored in an inning. East Carolina scored 17 runs against VMI in a 1975 victory and also scored eight runs in an inning the same day.

A total of 42 runs were scored by both teams, including 33 hits, 31 walks. Thirty-five players were used by both teams, including 10 pitchers.

"Our team played intelligent baseball to come back," East Carolina Coach Gary Overton said. "We hit the ball and ran the bases well. I wouldn't say we beat Atlantic Christian; I'd say we outlasted them."

The Bulldogs, 2-4, jumped out to a 9-1 lead after three innings before the Pirates exploded for 11 runs, sending 17 batters to the plate in the bottom of the third.

Then, with East Carolina leading 13-11 in the top of the fifth, the Bulldogs rallied to score four runs and recapture the lead at 15-13.

Jim Riley blasted a two-run homer for the Pirates in the bottom of the inning to tie the score at 15-15.

Bradberry then started a 12-run sixth inning for the Pirates with a home run and a lead they never relinquished.

Johnson, 2-0, picked up the victory for the Pirates after pitching the second game of Tuesday's doubleheader sweep against St. Augustine's.

The Pirates host Virginia Commonwealth today at 6 p.m.

NFL Makes Move To Shorten TV Games

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League is considering a package of procedural changes for 1985 that combined with a possible streamlining of commercial breaks on television may be able to reverse a trend to longer games.

Members of the NFL's Competition Committee, meeting for the past two weeks on the Hawaiian island of Maui in preparation for next week's owners' meetings in Phoenix, have agreed that they will recommend no drastic changes to shorten games — like keeping the clock running on incomplete passes and out-of-bounds plays.

But they have come up with tentative proposals which may help them get an average of 10 minutes out of NFL games, which averaged 3 hours, nine minutes in 1984.

Among them — reducing the number of pass-interference calls; shortening timeouts in the last two minutes of each half; and restarting the clock after some penalty calls.

Long games — last season's average was nearly 15 minutes longer than a decade ago — are considered one reason for a 20 percent drop in network TV ratings the last two seasons.

Wolves 'Keep Winning'

By The Associated Press
With the NCAA tournament coming up, Coach Bill Frieder of No. 3 Michigan has his own idea on how to prepare.

Keep winning.
"There's no better way to get ready," Frieder said Wednesday night after the Wolverines extended the nation's longest winning streak to 15 games by beating Ohio State 77-72.

Michigan, which raised its overall record to 24-3 and its Big Ten Conference mark to 15-2, has already clinched the league crown and has an accompanying automatic bid to the NCAA tournament because the Big Ten does not have post-season playoffs.

"This was a great victory for us," Frieder said after the triumph in Columbus, Ohio. "It's OK to be on the road because we're going to be on the road for the rest of the way."

Michigan was the only Top Twenty team that played Wednesday night, although there were several games in conference tournaments.

Junior center Roy Tarpley led Michigan with 23 points and 16 rebounds and helped spark an 11-3 spree at the end of the first half and a 16-8 burst that opened the second half. The Wolverines led by 17 points before Ohio State pulled within three in the final 42 seconds, but sophomore guard Antoine Joubert made six straight foul shots to seal the victory.

"We're much more together this year," the 6-foot-11 Tarpley said. "We've matured a lot, and we're playing great defense."

Evans, Robinson Claim Top ECAC-South Honors

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Navy basketball coach Paul Evans and his star player, sophomore David Robinson, shared top honors at the ECAC-South press luncheon Wednesday, installed as coach-of-the-year and player-of-the-year, respectively.

The University of Richmond's Peter Woolfolk was selected as the ECAC-South's Rookie of the Year.

Evans, whom some thought was overlooked for last year's honor, took it handily this year as his team fashioned a 22-5 regular season record and claimed top seeding in this year's tournament.

Navy, picked to finish fifth in pre-season balloting after losing three starters from last year's 24-8 club, is the first service academy to win 20 games two years running. Over the past three years, Evans' clubs have been 64-24, 20-10 against league competition.

A native of Arcade, N.Y., Evans came to Navy in 1980 after an impressive 126-50 tenure at St. Lawrence University in Canton, N.Y. In the five years since then, Evans has turned a program that never recorded over 14 wins a season for 21 straight years into a winner.

Of course, one of the big reasons for that is the play of Robinson, a 6-11 conference dominator.

Robinson was three-times ECAC-South player of the week and was selected as the "Sports Illustrated" national player of the week, bringing top attention to his school. He leads all Division I sophomores and freshmen in scoring (24.0), rebounding (11.6), field goal percentage (63.8) and blocked shots (4.3), ranking in the top 15 nationally in each of those categories.

A native of Woodbridge, Va. who played just one year of high school basketball, Robinson has already broken the old season record of 634 points for the Naval Academy.

The honor adds to the ECAC-South Rookie of the Year award he received last year.

There are observers who expect Robinson to transfer from Navy — to avoid a mandatory service period after graduation — to enhance his professional hopes. But insiders at Navy scoff at the idea, saying he'll be back to try again.

Woolfolk, a 6-5, 225-pound center/forward from Richmond, is the second Spider to be picked for the rookie honors in the last three years. Teammate John Newman was selected to the honor two seasons back — when East Carolina's Johnny Edwards was named to the All-Conference team as the only freshman honored.

Three times during the year Woolfolk earned rookie-of-the-week honors, leading all newcomers in rebounding (6.1) as well as averaging 10.1 points per game.

A reserve for the first 10 games for the Spiders, Woolfolk came on strong and helped Richmond to a 13-4 record in games he started.

Woolfolk led his team in rebounding 10 times and averaged 12.6 points and 6.9 rebounds as a starter.

ECAC-South tournament play opened this afternoon with top-seeded Navy facing East Carolina in a 1 p.m. game, while second-ranked Richmond was to meet American in the 3 p.m. game.

Tonight, fourth-seeded William & Mary takes on No. 5 James Madison at 7 p.m., with No. 3 George Mason facing No. 7 UNC-Wilmington at 9 p.m.

Semifinals will be held on Friday with the finals at 4 p.m. Saturday.

Nomination Ends Slaughter's Wait

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
Enos "Country" Slaughter says being named to the baseball Hall of Fame is a good ending to his career as an outfielder — especially after waiting more than a decade for the honor to come.

Slaughter and shortstop Arky Vaughan were voted into the Hall of Fame Wednesday by the Veterans Committee, which considers executives, umpires, managers and players whose eligibility in the annual baseball writers' election has expired.

"I had no inkling this would be the year," Slaughter said in a telephone interview from his home in Roxboro, N.C. "I'm very thrilled over it after it so many years of living in agony."

Slaughter was a .300 hitter for 19 major league seasons, 13 of them with the St. Louis Cardinals.

After retiring in 1959, Slaughter became eligible for the hall in 1964 but was denied entrance by the writers for 15 years before becoming eligible for becoming eligible for consideration by the Veterans Committee in 1984.

"I think the veterans committee saw fit to put me in because I played against a lot of those veterans on the committee," he said. "After all the years the writers passed me over, I just said, 'If I go in, okay, if not, it's okay.'"

Slaughter said the hard feelings he harbored for being denied admittance have passed.

"I'm not bitter any more," he said. "I don't know if it's because I'm getting older or mellow."

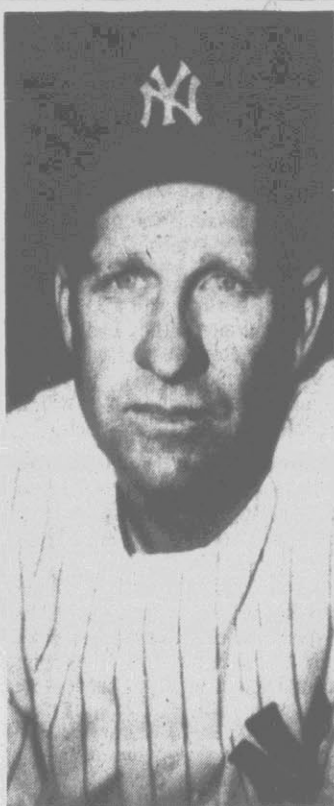

Slaughter said he would not change anything — other than to ask for more money — if he had to do it again.

"I would like people to remember me as a player who asked for no odds and gave no odds," he said. "If a pitcher knocked me down, I got up and went to first base. But, if the pitcher was covering first base, then I tried to take care of it."

Slaughter said his top salary was $25,000 after hitting "only" .336 and had to take a pay cut of $2,500 the next season because his average dropped to .291.

"I wouldn't change anything I've ever said," he said. "But I would ask for more money."

He said members of the committee called him about 11:55 to tell him he had been elected.

Enos Slaughter

"No, my knees didn't shake. I've been in a lot of tougher situations," Slaughter said, "with a three-and-two count and a runner on third trying to get him home."

Slaughter said he planned to attend the induction ceremonies on July 28 in Cooperstown, N.Y.

Vaughan, Slaughter Tabbed By Hall Veterans' Committee

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Arky Vaughan and Enos Slaughter, two talented hitters who previously had fallen short of the required votes, are the newest members of the baseball Hall of Fame.

Slaughter, a hustling outfielder with a career .300 batting average in 19 major league seasons, and Vaughan, a shortstop who batted under .300 only twice in 14 seasons, were elected by the Veterans Committee, which chose them over some 30 candidates.

Among those who fell short of the necessary 12 votes from the 16 members of the panel at Wednesday's meeting were players Ray Dandridge, Bobby Doerr, Babe Herman, Ernie Lombardi, Phil Rizzuto, Vic Willis and Glenn Wright, umpires Al Barlick and Bill McGowan, and owners Walter O'Malley and Bill Veck. They were the top finishers, in alphabetical order, behind the two electees.

It was the second year of eligibility through the Veterans Committee for Slaughter, who was passed along to that panel after failing to win election in 15 years on the writers' ballot.

"I wasn't bitter," he told the committee after being notified by telephone of his election. "But this was something I always wanted to happen."

"I think the veterans committee saw fit to put me in because I played against a lot of those veterans on the committee," he said. "After all the years the writers passed me over, I just said, 'If I go in, OK, if not, it's OK.'"

Slaughter, who operates a 150-acre tobacco farm in his native Roxboro, N.C., was well aware of Wednesday's meeting.

"The phone only rang once," Ed Stack, president of the Hall of Fame, said, describing his call to inform Slaughter of his election.

Slaughter played for 13 seasons with the St. Louis Cardinals. He is best remembered for scoring from first base on a single by Harry Walker to deliver the winning run in the seventh game of the 1946 World Series against Boston. He had led the National League with 130 runs batted in that season, one of 10 years in which he hit .300 or better.

"I had no inkling this would be the year," Slaughter said. "I'm very thrilled over it after so many years of living in agony."

Slaughter said his top salary was $25,000 after hitting "only" .336, and he had to take a pay cut of $2,500 the next season because his average dropped to .291.

"He could do it all — hit, run, field," Hall of Famer Monte Irvin, a member of the Veterans Committee, said of Slaughter. "He was a left-handed hitter who could hit left-handed pitchers as good as any body."

That ability was born of necessity, according to longtime teammate Stan Musial, another Hall of Famer who sits on the Veterans Committee and who, like Slaughter, was a left-handed hitter.

"We lost our balance when we lost Walker Cooper, who was a right-handed hitter, and George Kurowski hurt his shoulder," he said. "Everybody saved their left-handers for us. We had to learn to hit them."

Jordan, Bulls Top Celts 107-104

By The Associated Press
When the Chicago Bulls cut a 14-point deficit to six in the last 2:16 of the first half, it gave them an idea that they could do what they hardly expected — beat the Celtics in Boston.

"They started making steals and we started making turnovers on the break," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said after Chicago's 107-104 victory Wednesday night. "That gave them confidence and they came out and played like it was their home court."

Before the game, the Chicago players knew that Boston had the National Basketball Association's best home record at 26-3 and that the Bulls hadn't won on the road since Dec. 20, a streak covering 12 games.

"We almost dreaded leaving Chicago to come here," said Bulls forward David Greenwood.

The Celtics led 61-47 late in the second quarter, but over the next nine minutes Chicago outscored the defending NBA champions 28-6 for a 75-67 advantage. Then rookie sensation Michael Jordan scored 15 of his 33 points in the fourth period to spark Chicago's stretch run.

In other NBA games, it was New Jersey 129, Seattle 108; Philadelphia 96, Atlanta 86; Detroit 114, New York 90; Washington 127, Portland 121 in double overtime; San Antonio 108, Indiana 102; Utah 94, Houston 90; Cleveland 114, Los Angeles Clippers 112 and Los Angeles Lakers 145, Golden State 119.

"This is the biggest win of the season for us," Chicago Coach Kevin Loughery said. "Hopefully, this game will give us a lift and we'll take advantage of it. That's what you've got to do. Take advantage of beating a great team on their home court."

"In the second quarter, we had control and could have put them away with a couple of more baskets, but we made some bad decisions," said Larry Bird, who had 25 points and 10 assists for the Celtics. "We weren't taking the type of shots we like."

Boston rallied from eight points down to tie the game at 96-96, but Orlando Woolridge, who scored 29 points, hit four free throws to put the Bulls ahead to stay.

Five points by Robert Parish, who led the Celtics with 26 points and 13 rebounds, cut the margin to one, but four free throws by Jordan made it 106-101. Dennis Johnson's three-point goal and a missed free throw gave Boston one last chance to tie, but Danny Ainge's 60-foot heave rimmed the basket at the buzzer.

The Bulls managed to cool off Boston forward Kevin McHale, holding him to 22 points after he scored 98 in his previous two games.

76ers 96, Hawks 86
Philadelphia narrowed Boston's margin to 1½ games in the Atlantic Division as Andrew Toney scored 21 points, including a four-point play, against injury-plagued Atlanta.

Charles Barkley scored 10 of his 15 points in the second quarter, including eight during a 14-3 spurt in the final four minutes of the period that gave the 76ers a 57-42 halftime lead. Toney's three-point goal and free throw, the second of his career, came in the fourth quarter.

Atlanta, playing without injured starters Dominique Wilkins and Tree Rollins, was led by Glenn Rivers with 24 points. Philadelphia center Moses Malone's streak of 526 consecutive games in double figures ended when he managed only seven points.

Bullets 127, Trail Blazers 121
Jeff Malone outscored the entire Portland team 8-6 in the second overtime and finished with a career-high 40 points for Washington.

It was the first 40-point performance by a Bullets player since Elvin Hayes reached that figure against New York nearly four years ago.

Rookie Steve Colter, starting his third straight game in place of injured Darnell Valentine, scored a season-high 35 points for the Trail Blazers, now 2-18 in games decided by seven or fewer points. Gus Williams added 27 for the Bullets.

Cavaliers 114, Clippers 112
Cleveland, formerly 2-19, won its sixth straight game and its seventh consecutive road outing behind World B. Free's 23 points and Phil Hubbard's 20, spoiling the coaching debut of Los Angeles' Don Chaney.

Chaney, named earlier in the day to replace Jim Lynam, saw the Clippers cut a 72-54 deficit to 91-88 at the end of the third period. Derek Smith scored 15 of his game-high 29 points and James Donaldson added 13 in the quarter for Los Angeles.

Lakers 145, Golden State 119
Los Angeles continued to dominate Golden State, registering its fourth straight lopsided victory as backups Mike McGee and Larry Spriggs scored 29 and 20 points, respectively.

The Lakers have defeated the Warriors by 34, 24, 30 and 26 points this season, an average margin of 28½ points.

Jazz 94, Houston 90
Mark Eaton hit the go-ahead basket for Utah, then blocked a potential go-ahead shot by Houston's Mitchell Wiggins with 12 seconds remaining.

Eaton, who had eight blocked shots in the game, put the Jazz ahead 91-89 with his basket with 1:24 left. A free throw by Rodney McCray cut the deficit to one, and after Wiggins rebounded McCray's next attempt, Eaton blocked the ball and the Jazz gained possession, setting up three game-clinching free throws.

Darrell Griffith led Utah with 27 points, while Akeem Olajuwon paced the Rockets with 21.

Nets 129, SuperSonics 108
Michael Ray Richardson had 23 points and 10 assists and Buck Williams added 20 points and 20 rebounds as New Jersey beat Seattle for its fifth victory in six outings.

Otis Birdsong scored six of his 10 first-quarter points during a 12-4 streak that gave the Nets a 37-25 lead, and the SuperSonics got no closer than eight points thereafter. An 8-2 run at the end of the first half made it 69-55 at halftime.

Tim McCormick paced Seattle with 27 points and 12 rebounds.

Spurs 108, Pacers 102
Artis Gilmore scored 22 points, including three in the final 24 seconds, to help San Antonio hold off a late Indiana rally.

The Spurs led by as many as 16 points in the second quarter and still had an eight-point advantage with 3:51 left. After the Pacers scored seven straight points to cut the margin to 103-102 with 39 seconds to go, Gilmore hit a hook shot with 24 seconds remaining and added a free throw when the Pacers turned the ball over on the inbounds pass.

Mike Mitchell led all scorers with 29 points for the Spurs, while Steve Stipanovich had 27 points for the Pacers.

Pistons 114, Knicks 90
Vinnie Johnson scored 17 of his 21 points in the second quarter in Detroit's rout of New York.

Students Support Atchley

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — More than 1,500 Clemson University students rallied to support outgoing President Bill Atchley and oppose what they called the trustees' support of athletics over academics at the school.

"Sometimes I think the trustees are willing to allow this place to be plowed up and planted in turnip greens, just so we can have a good football team," former Student Senate President Oran Smith told the crowd Wednesday.

Atchley resigned as Clemson's president effective July 1, after the school's 13-member board of trustees refused to give him a vote of confidence during a seven-hour meeting Friday in Columbia.

His resignation and the re-signation of Athletic Director Bill McLellan, coupled with criminal indictments against three former Clemson coaches on charges of illegally dispensing prescription drugs to athletes, has put the school in the national spotlight in a way Clemson has not seen since its 1981 football championship.

The drug probe followed another scandal at the school — a two-year NCAA probation for recruiting violations in the football program — handed down in November 1982.

Tech Enjoying Spotlight

By The Associated Press
As Georgia Tech enters the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament as the top seed for the first time since the Yellow Jackets joined the league six years ago, Coach Bobby Cremins knows where the spotlight will be.

"Now the expectations are on us," Cremins said. "It'll be our first time in this type situation. Hopefully, the kids can react to this type of pressure. Because of its tradition, the ACC is important to me, it's pride and momentum."

With three teams tied in the top spot in the ACC at 9-5, Georgia Tech won the top seed in a draw Sunday. North Carolina was seeded second in the tournament, and N.C. State got the No. 3 seed.

The draw gave Duke the fourth seed, while Maryland was seeded fifth, Clemson sixth, Wake Forest seventh, and Virginia eighth.

From top to bottom, all eight conference coaches know it's time to pull out all the stops.

"I think it's very obvious we're looking forward to the tournament as a second season," said Virginia coach Terry Holland. "Everybody always says that, but it's never been more true than it is in our case. The tournament gives us one last chance to show that we can play with these people..."

Meanwhile, defending champion Maryland and Duke have a chance to do what they couldn't do in the regular season—finish first.

Ninth-ranked Georgia Tech, 21-7 will meet Virginia, 15-14, in the first round Friday in Atlanta's Omni, and Yellow Jacket players say the flash of being the top seed won't dazzle them for long.

The Cavaliers "are in the same position we were in two years ago," said forward John Salley, remembering 1983 when Virginia was the top seed and Georgia Tech was seventh. "Now we're at the top.

Anything can happen. We're not going to look forward to Saturday, just worry about Virginia."

"Once the ball's thrown up, everybody's equal," said Yellow Jacket guard Bruce Dalrymple. "We know that there's no easy game, so they're not going to catch us sleeping."

Holland said his team needs to win the tournament to get an NCAA bid.

"For us to have any legitimate chance at any kind of postseason play it's imperative that we win the tournament," Holland said. "That would put us in the NCAAs, and that's our goal."

Michigan...

State with 18 points, and also was impressed with the opposition.

"Michigan is the best team we've played," he said. "They have that winning streak, they're Big Ten champions and they're playing the best basketball in the league."

Ohio State, at 18-9 overall, is still hoping to get an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament. The Buckeyes play their final-regular season game Saturday at home against Michigan State.

"It comes down to this time and this game, and you find out what you've got," Ohio State Coach Eldon Miller said.

Elsewhere, the Big East Conference tournament began at New York's Madison Square Garden with a good game. Keith Lomax scored 24 points, including the game-winning basket with 34 seconds left in overtime, to give Providence a 77-75 victory over Seton Hall.

That means Providence Coach Joe Mullaney, who has led the Friars for 18 years and has announced his resignation effective at the end of the season, gets to coach at least one more game. Providence's reward for beating Seton Hall is a matchup tonight with No. 2 St. John's.

The Big Eight Conference continued with first-round tournament play and Missouri, behind 19 points from Derrick Chievous, knocked off Kansas State 68-50 while Barry Stevens scored 25 points as Iowa State routed Colorado 76-52.

And in the first round of the Southeastern Conference tournament, Chuck Person scored 26 points as Auburn beat Mississippi 68-60 and Anthony Richardson tallied 19 points to lead Tennessee past Vanderbilt 71-51.

In non-tournament action, Notre Dame raised its record to 19-8 and boosted its drive for an NCAA tournament spot by downing Marquette 66-60. Donald Royal led the host Irish by scoring 15 points, all of them from the foul line.

Funding Proposal Brings Renewed Abortion Debate

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — If North Carolina stops funding abortions, it should prepare to help support thousands of babies whose indigent mothers will give birth unwillingly, some state legislators say.

"Clearly, there would be an obligation to appropriate money to take care of these babies that we are demanding be born," said Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, in an interview Wednesday.

The state paid for about 6,600 abortions last year, Blue said. If a like number of abortions were disallowed next year, about $20 million probably would be needed to support the newborns, many of whom would have serious defects, he said.

But the executive director of North Carolina Right to Life says that argument is a thinly veiled attempt to justify abortions by putting a price on human life.

"We reject the notion that killing the unborn children of poor women is a proper way for the state to save money," said Richard Hartney Jr., adding that Blue's $20 million figure was "totally erroneous."

Elimination of the $1.3 million fund earmarked for poor women's abortions is the lone major change Republican Gov. Jim Martin has proposed in the budget for ongoing programs submitted last December by his predecessor, Democrat Jim Hunt.

Martin would set aside about $20,000 to pay for abortions that are medically necessary or result from rape or incest.

The abortion fund's prognosis is uncertain. An Associated Press survey in January indicated the Legislature was divided almost 50-50 on whether to continue it.

Martin, who outlined Monday his proposals for $1.28 billion in new expenditures, didn't repeat Hunt's request for a $321,553 increase in funding of perinatal services in intensive care nurseries.

Also, Martin slashed Hunt's requested increases in funding of programs to prevent teen pregnancy and care for youthful mothers.

Hunt requested $5.3 million increases for both fiscal 1985-86 and 1986-87. Martin seeks no additional state funding for the first year, relying instead on an anticipated $2.2 million federal block grant, and seeks an extra $3.1 million from state coffers for the second year.

"It's disturbing to me that, with him (Martin) trying to cut the abortion fund, he is also cutting money for these programs and planning on federal funds that we may or may not get," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee.

Blue, chairman of the House Budget Committee on Human Resources, said he "certainly would not advocate aborting fetuses to keep from spending money."

But it's contradictory to seek elimination of the abortion fund without planning a sharp buildup in prenatal and perinatal care programs, Blue said.

"We certainly must budget responsibly," he said. "I would find reducing the abortion fund on the one hand and failing to prepare for these urgent needs on the other to be highly irresponsible."

Hartney, in a statement issued Wednesday, said Blue's estimate that cutting the abortion fund would cost the state $20 million was based on a 1983 study that didn't consider the resulting $1.3 million savings.

Also, there's no guarantee that all the women denied government funding would give birth, Hartney said. Federal studies say up to 40 percent would pay for their abortions, he said.

The study assumes that none of the newborns would be adopted, that all would require government assistance, and that none would be cared for by the parents of the mothers — many of whom are minors, Hartney said.

"The study also assumes falsely that no financial assistance will be provided to unwed mothers by private charitable organizations," he said.

Cigarette Tax For Farm Aid Suggested

RALEIGH (AP) — Tobacco-area legislators are considering a bill to tax cigarette companies 1 cent a pack to raise money for research and marketing of all farm products in North Carolina.

"We are looking at all the possible ways of assisting farmers and agribusiness in North Carolina because it's still a strong link in our economy," said Sen. James D. Speed, D-Franklin, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee.

"We're not just talking about helping farmers," Speed said. "We're talking about helping the economy of North Carolina."

The tax would be levied on each of the 17.4 billion packs of cigarettes manufactured each year in North Carolina for sale inside and outside the state, and would generate about $170 million, proponents say.

To prevent the tax's cost from being passed onto smokers, the lawmakers also are considering legislation to repeal the 2-cent state tax added to each pack of cigarettes purchased in North Carolina.

A revenue loss of $15 million a year from the retail tax would be absorbed by the increased revenue from the manufacturers' tax.

Manufacturers said they already pay enough taxes.

"We're against any kind of tax," said Alan C. Bryn, a Washington spokesman for the Tobacco Institute, which lobbies for tobacco manufacturers. "Certainly tobacco companies themselves are paying extensive income tax and personal property tax."

Legislators stressed that the proposal needed further discussion before any bills were drafted.

Panels Back Child-Protection Bills

RALEIGH (AP) — Bills to protect children riding in automobiles and to help missing and exploited children have passed their respective committees while lawmakers consider combining bills affecting day care.

The House Highway Safety Committee approved a bill to require that children under age 6 be restrained when riding in automobiles. The panel, assured by studies showing such legislation saves lives, also took out a provision that would have exempted children lying or standing in cars.

"This was something we put on the bill to get it passed last time," said Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne. "When we re-enact this, we should strengthen it. (Otherwise) we are simply making missiles of these children and jeopardizing their lives."

The child-restraint bill filed by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, is one of several that anticipate the July 1 sunset of a restraint bill enacted several years ago. Miller's bill makes restraints mandatory for all children under age 6, while the previous law applied only to children under age 2 when their parents were driving.

Miller's bill originally would have allowed children 2 and older to be restrained by seat belts, but Rep. Charles Woodard, D-Wayne, amended the bill Wednesday to require safety seats up to age 3. The bill carries a $10 fine plus court costs, but the penalties would be waived if the driver purchases a child-restraint seat.

Miller said the House will likely approve the bill when it takes it up on Tuesday.

"It appears to me that the committee fully supported these amendments and if the committee is a reflection of the support in the House, I think it will do very well there," he said, adding that the Senate has supported the concept from the outset.

Parents appreciate more than the safety involved, Miller said.

"They also see it as a convenience that the child is not moving around the vehicle," he said. "And a lot of parents now use a seat belt because the child is involved with it."

Meanwhile, the Senate Committee on Children and Youth approved a bill to set up a North Carolina Center for Missing and Exploited Children. Sen. Charles Hips, D-Haywood, said the center would be a clearinghouse of information with ties to the Police Information Network and the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

Hips said the center was established by executive order in May 1984 but he added, "There really hasn't been the statewide attention that there is a missing children center. In fact, I've wondered if the center itself is missing."

Hips, chairman of the Senate Children and Youth Committee, said some bills concerning day-care licensing may need to be consolidated to clarify them.

"Putting it all in one package will probably make it clear what we're trying to do," he said.

Bills that have been approved by Children and Youth subcommittees and awaiting committee action would:

— Use hearing officers to speed consideration of day-care licensing violations, instead of leaving action to Day Care Licensing Commission's meetings every three months. That bill also would allow hearing officers, with the approval of the secretary of administration, to issue warnings, probation, license revocations or civil penalties of up to $1,000. The only current penalty is license revocation.

— Establish a special unit on child abuse and neglect in day-care centers and smaller day-care plans.

— Require county social services directors to report complaints of child abuse in day care and resulting investigations to the commission.

— Require that day-care officials notify the public that all cases of child abuse must be reported.

— Require that officials visit centers within seven days of a complaint of child abuse.

Kissing Bandit Robs N.C. Men

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Police say they don't know how a 22-year-old woman charged with robbing three Greensboro, N.C., men, slipped a knock-out drug into their mouths without being knocked unconscious herself.

"We can only surmise. Of course, she wouldn't tell us," said Atlantic City police Capt. James Dooley.

"The victims tell us that when they're kissing her, she tries to put something in their mouth. They feel as if something is being transferred from her mouth to theirs, sort of a powder, and after that, of course, they're rendered unconscious," he said.

Police in this casino resort had been searching for a woman dubbed "the kissing bandit" for posing as a high-priced prostitute to lure male gamblers into their hotel rooms, where she would kiss them and pass a drug from her mouth to theirs.

The victims told police that when they woke up, they discovered money and jewelry missing. Police reported a string of similar robberies dating to July 1983.

Margarita Delos Santos was arrested last Friday in the robbery of the three Greensboro men. She was being held Tuesday in the Atlantic County Jail under $250,000 cash bond.

Atlantic City Police Detective Dan Rispoli said Tuesday night that he would not release the names of the three victims, who are businessmen between the ages of 50 and 60 with families in Greensboro.

"I had a special request from the victims not to release their names," Rispoli said. They were robbed Feb. 10 in their Resorts International hotel rooms, one at a time. "They're here every once in a while for recreation," Rispoli said.

The woman was charged with three counts of reckless endangerment and three counts of theft of over $500, police Capt. James Dooley said.

The drug used most often was a powerful sedative known as scopolamine, which is potentially fatal in large doses, police said.

State Will Get Federal Aid In Repairing I-40 Tunnel

HARMON DEN, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has declared a state of emergency, making North Carolina eligible for $1 million in federal funds to repair an Interstate 40 tunnel smashed by house-sized boulders in a rockslide.

"The designation of the tunnel as a disaster area will help us to move with great speed in clearing first the eastbound lane of the interstate and then moving quickly to open both lanes," Martin said in a prepared statement Wednesday.

The federal money, which would pay full repair costs, should be available immediately if federal officials approve Martin's application.

"In western North Carolina, where tourism is a vital part of the economy, we want to open the roads and resume normal traffic as soon as possible with the spring and summer travel seasons coming," Martin said.

Highway workers Wednesday rappelled a 150-foot cliff to push off loose rocks, while others started breaking up 100,000 tons of boulders that smashed the tunnel early Tuesday.

The rockslide on the major route between North Carolina and Tennessee forced traffic onto U.S. 25-70, where one truck plunged down a mountain early Wednesday as it rounded a narrow curve.

"The rock is so brittle that it should shoot up pretty good," Russell Glass, a geologist with the North Carolina Department of Transportation, said as workers used a 10-foot steel drill on tank treads to prepare 150-ton boulders for blasting. "It's just the size of 'em."

Employees of Highways Inc. of Brentwood, Tenn., the contractor the state hired to clear the 80,000 cubic yards of rubble, pushed loose rocks onto a pile of boulders that stood out 50 feet from the smashed concrete tunnel facing. Others inspected an overhanging ledge the company plans to blast away in the next few days.

Workers also prepared a 30-foot-high tunnel retaining wall for blasting. The rocks crushed about 80 feet of the westbound tunnel tube coming out of the mountainside.

"We're gonna get everything out of the way and we're gonna shoot (blast) that wall down," DOT highway inspector George Mitchell said as workers pulled up guardrails and lightposts with cranes and bulldozers. "Then we're gonna shoot those ledges off."

Mitchell said workers also hoped to clear a path through both tunnels soon for inspectors. Officials hoped the rest of the 1,220-foot westbound tunnel was not damaged.

Because the interstate was closed at the tunnel, all traffic was rerouted over narrow mountain roads that originally made the four-lane I-40 necessary. About 2 a.m., a truck loaded with beef plunged over a mountainside beside U.S. 25-70, the main detour.

The state Highway Patrol said the truck dropped 200 feet and the cab plunged another 800 feet. The driver, Michael Zimmer, 29, of Covington, Ohio, was in serious condition with injuries to his lower extremities at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville.

Highway Patrol Capt. Charles H. Long said Zimmer's rig "went off the mountain just south of Hot Springs when he drove onto the shoulder and the shoulder gave way ... the trailer went over first and he bailed out before the cab went."

"The trailer just exploded and there's meat all over the mountain," Long said.

The rockslide occurred about 4:30 a.m. Tuesday at the east end of an Interstate 40 tunnel in the Great Smoky Mountains about four miles from the Tennessee line and 50 miles west of Asheville.

School Board Urges OK On Course Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Board of Education has unanimously approved a resolution urging the Legislature to support and enact a massive set of school curriculum guidelines that tell teachers what to teach.

Some board members said they feared the Legislature might write some of the guidelines into law, reducing the authority and flexibility of the local and state school boards in determining what is taught.

"If they go that far, everybody's hands are tied," board member John Tart of Smithfield said Wednesday.

The curriculum should not be set in law, board members said, because it will need expansion and additions for years to come.

Also Wednesday, the board discussed education funding in Gov. Jim Martin's budget proposal.

"It's just not enough money there," Phillips said. "The whole difference is the $300 million he wants to give back to the taxpayer instead of investing it in some much needed services, primarily education. But that's part of the struggle to see where the priorities are."

The guidelines are contained in a 500-page Standard Course of Study and a 5,000-page Competency-Based Curriculum. The Standard Course of Study outlines the courses that schools should teach, while the Competency Based Curriculum sets out in minute detail what students should learn and what skills, questions and tasks they should master.

The board scheduled a public hearing for March 29 on the Standard Course of Study. It is expected to act on the study by its April meeting.

If the board approves the document next month, the curriculum would be in the schools by late summer, said Joseph B. Webb, assistant state superintendent for instructional services.

About 7,000 educators, including 6,000 teachers, helped write the two documents. It cost about $1 million and required 15 months of work.

The documents supplement the curriculum portion of the $690 million Basic Education Program, which also outlines standards for school buildings, class sizes, student promotion and summer school programs. The Basic Education Program is pending in the General Assembly.

Rape Penalty

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — Rape has made punishable by the death penalty under a law passed by the Tunisian Parliament.

The Chamber of Deputies' legal commission said the change was necessary because of "the rise of morals offenses to a disquieting degree in recent years." The law amended the previous statute which called for a "maximum penalty for rape of 20 years' in jail at hard labor.

David Copperfield's Magic Highlights Tonight's Schedule On CBS Television

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ask David Copperfield how he performs his feats of magic and he will tell you. "Very well, thank you."

Copperfield, who made the Statue of Liberty disappear and levitated himself across the Grand Canyon, doesn't reveal secrets.

He will tell you, however, that the Statue of Liberty illusion cost $500,000, took 300 technicians and four trucks loaded with generators and lights.

The toughest part of that feat was cutting through the government red tape. Since the statue is an irreplaceable national shrine, Copperfield was also required to take out a multimillion dollar insurance policy in case of damage.

Copperfield will say that he doesn't simply do magic. He's probably the most theme-oriented magician and his illusions are part of a story. That's been true of all his TV specials, as it is for his seventh special on CBS tonight.

"Most of my illusions are couched in romantic story lines," he said.

"That sort of became my trademark — besides doing the big, spectacular things like making a jet plane or the Statue of Liberty disappear. The thing that's kept my career going is this vignette-type magic.

"When I grew up my idols weren't magicians like Thurston or Houdini. My idols were Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly. What they did for dancing I wanted to do for magic. They didn't become popular just from dancing. They also sang and acted. Their dances told stories."

He added, "Because of that, my goal was not only to amaze audiences but to entertain them as well. You put the audience at ease so they will accept the magic. The technical end comes first, but if you stopped there it would just be a trick. You have to take the audience to a place they've never been before."

Copperfield, whose real name is David Kotkin, grew up in New Jersey and began his career as a ventriloquist. At 12, he was the youngest person ever admitted into the Society of American Magicians. At 16, he was teaching magic in New York University's drama department. At 18, he was starring in "The Magic Man" in Chicago.

"I starred in New York after the show in Chicago," he said. "I went there thinking doors would be open for me, but they weren't. I looked for a new way to showcase magic. I created a lot of vignettes using magic. I was 19 at the time. I knocked on a lot of doors."

Copperfield taught himself magic from books.

"It came easy to me because I got a lot of approval from other kids and that satisfied me," he said.

Copperfield maintains his base in Los Angeles, where he has three warehouses full of equipment. He keeps duplicate equipment on the East Coast and in London. When he travels for a show he usually takes along 20 crew members.

His first big illusion came in 1981 when he made a seven-ton jet disappear on his fourth special.

"It came to me when I thought of Houdini making an elephant vanish in the 1920s," he said. "Others had duplicated that so I wanted to go further. I met with the people who design my illusions. They take the magical principles and restructure them. You build models, you try it on a small scale. But the illusion was never rehearsed as a piece until we did it on the air. If I appeared to be nervous on the show, I was."

How will he top himself?

"I've just gotten permission to go to China for next year's special," he said. "I'm going to walk through the Great Wall of China. I've been researching it for some time."

Embargo Broken

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We Are the World," the charity anthem written by Lionel Richie and Michael Jackson and recorded by 45 rock superstars to aid famine victims, was broadcast a day before the embargo imposed by the record company.

The upbeat single won't be available in most record stores until today or Friday, and Columbia Records had asked that it not be played before today.

"We are really indignant that anybody is using a charity record to establish a competitive advantage among radio stations," a statement from Columbia Records said Wednesday.

All profits from the effort will go to charity organizations fighting starvation in Africa and the United States.

The record produced by Quincy Jones is the brainchild of Ken Kragen, who manages such talent as Richie and Kenny Rogers. Kragen was inspired by the British collection of superstars known as Band Aid, whose "Do They Know It's Christmas," has generated $9.2 million so far through sales of the single record and the video.

Besides the "We Are the World" single, an album containing contributions from such artists as Prince and Linda Ronstadt is due out next week, along with a video of the recording session. Kragen has said he hopes to raise as much as $50 million.

In Los Angeles, FM stations KLOS, KRTH and KIQQ had played the song at least once by Wednesday afternoon. It was also played on WNEW-FM in New York City.

IN THE STATE

Finger-Nibbling

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — CBS News is anxious about a conservative group's attempt to buy a controlling share of CBS stock, Sen. Jesse Helms says.

"The CBS folks who were saying, 'Ho, ho, ho,' at the beginning are now living on a diet of fingernails," Helms, R-N.C., said Wednesday at the American Pork Congress.

Fairness in Media, a North Carolina-based group, has asked conservatives to purchase CBS stock with a collective goal of obtaining a controlling interest in the company. The group accuses CBS News of liberal bias.

A supporter of the bid, Helms said Wednesday that he doesn't "have anything to do in a formal way with Fairness in Media."

"They are my friends, though," Helms said.

Leaking Tanks

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina faces a "tremendous problem" with as many as 116,000 underground storage tanks leaking gasoline and other petroleum products into groundwater, the state's top environmental official warns.

"One third of all the tanks in North Carolina could be leaking and contaminating our groundwater right now," Thomas Rhodes, secretary of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said at a news conference Wednesday.

Rhodes said the problem of leaking underground tanks exceeds the state's ability to manage, but he stopped short of saying it poses a serious threat to public health.

Mayor Dropped

GREENSBORO (AP) — Former Greensboro Mayor Jim Melvin has been dropped from a $48 million lawsuit stemming from a Greensboro shootout on Nov. 3, 1979, in which five demonstrators were killed, attorneys for both sides say.

However, U.S. District Judge Robert R. Merhige Jr. on Wednesday ruled that other city defendants, including former City Manager Thomas Z. Osborne and Hewitt Lovelace, former city director of public safety, would remain defendants in the suit.

The lawsuit was filed by the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund on behalf of anti-Klan demonstrators killed, wounded or arrested as a result of the confrontation with Ku Klux Klansmen and American Nazi Party members. Five Communist Workers Party members were killed when gunfire broke out during a "Death to the Klan" rally.

The lawsuit alleges that federal, state and local officials conspired with the Klan and Nazis to disrupt the anti-Klan gathering.

Register Listing

FRANKLINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The small Randolph County town of Franklinville needs to find a way to turn its listing in the National Register of Historic Places into an asset, says Mayor Mac Whatley.

"The main thing for us to start doing is to tell everybody that it's something to be proud of," Whatley told town board members at a meeting this week.

Whatley told the board a section of the town, located about 10 miles northeast of Asheboro, containing old mill homes and structures has been listed in the register.

The U.S. Department of the Interior approved the Franklinville historic district for listing on Dec. 20, calling it "part of the cultural heritage of our nation."

Ruling Expected

WILMINGTON (AP) — A federal judge says he'll rule "at the earliest possible date" on motions by attorneys for the city of Fayetteville for a new trial in a police brutality lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge James C. Fox also chastised an attorney for revealing an in-chamber discussion during the trial.

Fox, who heard arguments on motions Tuesday, said quoting the closed-door discussions "raises a very grave question," and said he planned to talk with other judges about it.

Fox presided last month over the three-week trial of a lawsuit filed by Henry Z. Spell of Autryville against the city. Spell, who had sought $10 million, was awarded $1,000 after a jury ruled in his favor.

Murder Charge

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — Scotland County sheriff's officials and SBI agents have charged a 22-year-old man with first-degree murder in the shotgun slaying of a social worker whose body was found eight days after she disappeared.

Casey Jack Monroe of Scotland County was arrested about 10 p.m. Wednesday and charged in the death of 40-year-old Karen Gibson Monroe of Laurinburg, said Scotland County Sheriff Alfred White.

Ms. Monroe's body was found Monday in a wooded area four miles north of Laurinburg. She had last been seen Feb. 25 by a client from the social services department who lived in the Scotland Acres Mobile Home Park.

Appeal Notice

RALEIGH (AP) — Attorneys for Jeffrey MacDonald, who was recently denied a new trial for the murders of his pregnant wife and two young daughters, filed a notice of appeal Wednesday, a legal official says.

Nancy McNair, a paralegal for MacDonald's attorney Wade Smith, said the notice of appeal was filed in U.S. District Court in Raleigh Wednesday afternoon. She said the Raleigh court would notify the U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va.

Ms. McNair filed the appeal on behalf of Smith, who was in South Carolina working on another case Wednesday. She said attorneys do not know when the 4th Circuit Court will make a decision on the appeal.

U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree denied a new trial for MacDonald Friday, saying a second jury "would again reach the almost inescapable conclusion that he (MacDonald) was responsible for these horrible crimes."

MacDonald is serving three life sentences and is imprisoned in Bastrop, Texas, after being convicted in 1979 of murdering his wife Colette, and daughters, Kimberly and Kristen, at their Fort Bragg apartment in February 1970.

Deputy Fired

RALEIGH (AP) — A deputy Cabinet member from the administration of former Gov. Jim Hunt has been fired by the Martin administration, officials say.

Lawrence J. Wheeler, the deputy secretary and second-ranking official in the Department of Cultural Resources, was asked to resign his $50,544-a-year post at the end of March, by department secretary Patric Dorsey.

Department spokesman Boyd Cathey said Wheeler was asked to resign because the deputy position involved "extensive policy-making responsibilities" and it was decided the department needed to reorganize administrative functions.

Life Sentence

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Winston-Salem man who was accused of attacking two women and two girls in their homes last fall was sentenced in Forsyth Superior Court to life plus 10 years in prison.

Reginald D. Long, 28, pleaded guilty to first-degree burglary, felonious assault with intent to kill and four counts of first-degree kidnapping, all committed last Nov. 15.

Tobacco Considered New Source For Fuel, Protein

FLOYD, Va. (AP) — In an experiment he hopes will open huge, new markets for tobacco farmers, Luke Staengl plans to modify an ethanol plant to process young tobacco leaves into fuel alcohol and edible, high-quality protein.

Researchers in the past have succeeded in converting tobacco into either protein or ethanol. But Staengl believes his will be the first commercial attempt to get both products out of the same leaves — an endeavor he thinks could be profitable for farmers and processors, alike.

"It could mean not only survival for the family farm, but a rather prosperous outlook," said Staengl, president and founder of the Floyd Agricultural Energy Cooperative. "I don't see any reason why we can't have gross income figures of $3,000 to $4,000 an acre, which would be a net of $1,500 an acre."

Ethanol is a popular octane enhancer for gasoline. Tobacco protein is higher quality than that derived from soybeans and could be used as animal feed or shipped to Third World countries as a food supplement, tobacco researchers say. The federal Food and Drug Administration hasn't approved tobacco protein for human consumption.

Ray C. Long, professor of crop science at North Carolina State University in Raleigh, said it isn't economically feasible now to extract protein from tobacco on a commercial scale — in part because no good use has been found for the byproducts. Ethanol production may be the answer, he said.

"I think it's got some potential," Long said. "You have to be able to utilize the byproducts to make it a fully viable economic concept."

Dave Wallis, assistant professor of chemical engineering at Virginia Tech, said he plans to convert tobacco into ethanol and protein in the laboratory and then on a slightly larger scale to learn the best techniques. Staengl is to use what Wallis learns to set up a commercial operation.

"The question is not going to be whether we can make alcohol when we make protein," he said. "It will be whether both work favorably enough to show good economics."

The Floyd Agricultural Energy Cooperative, which operates an ethanol plant north of Floyd, decided it wanted to try converting tobacco into protein and ethanol based on studies by Bill Drake, an Austin, Tex., writer and researcher. To date, the organization has used corn for most of its fermentation.

Drake said Wednesday that protein extraction leaves behind carbohydrates as byproducts. He theorized that the leftover sugars could be fermented into ethanol to offset the cost of removing the protein. He tried making alcohol from tobacco last spring, he said, and it worked.

"It's really assembling a bunch of parts that are already in place," he said of combining the two processes.

Drake said he began writing letters to people involved in "alternative energy," like ethanol production. He said he heard from Staengl as well as a Texas firm that plans to try combining the two techniques with the help of Texas A&M.

A boost to the experiments will be that tobacco grown for protein and ethanol can be planted much more densely than that grown for smoking. The leaves don't have to be pretty, said Bill Kovarik, an associate of Staengl's.

"Instead of 8,000 plants per acre, you plant about 150,000," Kovarik said.

Long said he has succeeded in growing 220,000 pounds of tobacco on an acre by seeding the plot densely and cutting the leaves as many as five times. That's about 10 times the yield of a plot grown for smoking, he said.

Kovarik said that when tobacco leaves are cut young, they contain no nicotine. The Floyd co-op, which has about 75 members, estimates that 220,000 pounds of tobacco could yield about 4,000 pounds of protein and about 500 gallons of ethanol.

Drake said about 10 percent of the protein derived from tobacco is a very high-quality type that is extremely low in sodium and potassium. Researchers believe it could be consumed intravenously by hospital patients with kidney failure, he said.

Wallis plans to start his research at Tech this summer, but he said funding still needs to be approved. He believes the best procedure will be to extract the protein first, and he doesn't know how that process will affect the ethanol yield.

"I think it will be feasible to produce both," he said. "I think we can get a very high alcohol yield. Tobacco may look to be a very productive crop just for alcohol, without the protein."

The Floyd ethanol plant suffered $300,000 damage in a September fire, and employees are rebuilding it now. Kovarik said tests on tobacco could be conducted at the plant as early as next fall with commercial production from tobacco starting as early as 1986.

Staengl believes the market for ethanol is growing rapidly. And he envisions the "white, tasteless, odorless" protein powder being used as a food additive in the United States and abroad.

"We're looking for crops that produce more ethanol for less," he said, "and crops that are productive enough to give a good return to the farmer."

Living It Up

From 1981 to 1982, average life expectancy in the United States rose nearly half a year — from 74.2 to 74.6 years. Suppose it rose the same amount — .4/year — EVERY year from now on. Americans born in 2050 could expect to live 100.6 years! The oldest authenticated centenarian was Shigechiyo Izumi of Japan, who lived to be 118. He attributed his long life to a drink called "firewater," and advised others to leave concerns about longevity to "God, the Sun, and Buddha."

Farmworker Council Blasts Critics

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Council of Churches has issued a policy statement saying the N.C. Farmworkers Council favors farmers and groups "opposing migrant interests," but some Farmworker Council members voiced objections.

The council says statements from legislators and newspaper stories "have created the illusion these new laws (including creation of the Farmworker Council) will substantially better the lives of farmworkers."

"Most people familiar with the actual conditions of farmworkers do not hold this view, ..." the policy statement says.

In a section outlining the Farmworker Council, whose members are appointed by the governor, lieutenant governor and House speaker, the policy statement says the council is to propose legislation to improve the living and working conditions of farmworkers.

"It is unclear how this mandate can be fulfilled by a council which is presently composed in the main of growers, grower advocates, individuals and organizations which are on record opposing migrant interests," the church council statement says.

"I couldn't support that statement," farmworkers council member Edwin Beamon said Wednesday. "I don't think anybody on this council is opposed to the interests of migrant farmworkers."

"It seems to me this is not the way to get the cooperation of people whose help you need," Beamon told Sister Evelyn Mattern, a lobbyist for the Council of Churches. "Most of the changes you are seeking would have to be financed by growers or grower organizations."

"That may have been put in a negative way, but it was meant to be a positive statement that people are best represented when they represent themselves," Ms. Mattern said. "Our sense was that farmworkers or strong farmworker organizations should be represented on this council."

The Rev. James Horton, chairman of the farmworker council, said the policy statement "may represent the perception, but not necessarily the facts."

"The problem we've got is how we deal with issues, how to translate facts into action," he said. "We don't have farmers on here who say 'I don't care what goes on on my land,' but that does happen with some farmers."

"We cannot be blind to the fact that there are problems out there," Horton said. "Because of the actions of a few abusive farmers or crew leaders, all may have to pay a price that may not be fair."

Ms. Mattern told the council she believed they could be most effective in channeling their efforts over three or four years into a small number of farmworker issues.

She suggested that workman's compensation, farmworker housing and state monitoring of local migrant camp inspectors as issues the council might want to push.

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

We know many players who, as declarer, can't wait to ruff a loser in dummy even when there is no hurry to do so. It is almost as though they think they get to score that trump twice.

North-South conducted an intelligent auction to get to a very fine diamond slam. Note North's bid of four no trump — it is a slam try, not Blackwood. Since he had already bid hearts and jump-raised diamonds, the raise over game in no trump described a strong hand that was essentially balanced. South was free to pass with no slam ambitions, but he rather fancied his wealth of controls. So he boldly took the plunge.

West led the jack of spades, and declarer went down in record time. He won the king of spades, cashed the ace and ruffed a spade. After drawing trumps in three rounds, declarer cashed the ace-king of hearts, sluffing his remaining spade. Now he started on clubs, and he would have been home with an even break. But with the more likely 4-2 split, declarer ended up conceding two club tricks.

Since the shortest suit in the combined holding was hearts, declarer could have coasted home with a dummy reversal. He should win the opening lead in hand, cash dummy's ace of hearts and ruff a heart. After cashing the king of diamonds, declarer gets back to the table with a trump and ruffs the other low heart with his remaining trump. All that remains is to cross to the king of spades to draw the last trump. Declarer then forces out the ace of clubs and claims his slam.

Setback

MONTEVIDEO, Uruguay (AP) — Legislators have dealt Uruguay's new civilian president his first setback, approving an amnesty for political prisoners that would include convicted assassins and other terrorists he wants to keep in jail.

The blanket amnesty passed the House of Representatives by a vote of 55-39, and needs Senate approval.

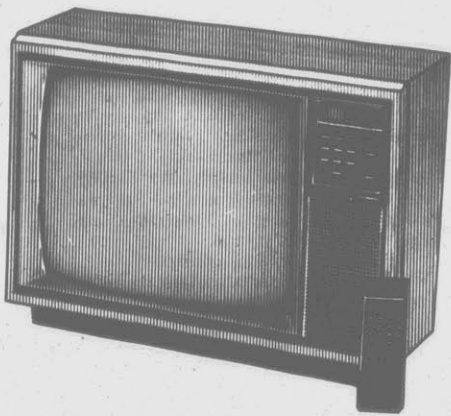

President Julio Sanguinetti, whose elected government took over from the military last Friday, agrees with the desire to free most of Uruguay's approximately 270 political prisoners. But he wants to continue holding 61 prisoners who are convicted of political assassinations and other violent terrorist acts.
