Aid Cuts Would Affect ECU Students In 1986

By CAROL B. TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Students starting or continuing in college next fall will be little affected by the changes in federal government Student Aid Programs proposed in President Ronald Reagan's Fiscal Year 1986 budget.

The effects, if Reagan's recommendations of cuts of up to 25 percent are enacted by Congress, will come during the following school year, Kenneth Wheeler, an East Carolina University financial aid officer, said.

Reagan has requested $2.3 billion less in student financial assistance and Guaranteed Students Loans for FY 86 than was appropriated in FY 85. He has also presented a number of legislative proposals that would make all students from families with adjusted gross incomes above $25,000 ineligible for federal grants, direct loans or work-study jobs, simultaneously imposing a $4,000 annual maximum cap on the total amount of federal Title IV aid students from low-income families could receive, earn or borrow. The price of attending a state-supported institution is not much more than the $4,000 ceiling, Wheeler said. So East Carolina University students and those at other state-supported institutions probably would not be much affected. Those more adversely affected would be students at private and church-affiliated schools which usually are more costly.

Under the president's proposal, more than 1 million students currently participating in the Pell Grant and campus-based program would have the awards eliminated or significantly reduced.

On the East Carolina campus 400-600 students probably will be affected, Wheeler said.

Nationally, another 304,000 students would have their state grants cut in half or eliminated, and by the estimate of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators, between 750,000 and 900,000 middle-income family students would no longer be eligible for low-interest Guaranteed Student Loans.

The president has requested $6.8 billion in budget authority for higher education in FY 86, with $6.3 billion being directed toward student aid. Expenditures of $2.681 billion are requested for the Pell Grant Program for the 1986-87 school year, along with $850 million for work-study grants, and $28 million to cover teacher cancellations under the National Direct Student Loan Program. A total of $2.868 billion in outlays are proposed for the Guaranteed Student Loan Program in FY 86; however, students from families with adjusted gross incomes above $32,500 will no longer qualify for subsidized loans, regardless of the amount of their financial needs. Instead, these students would be forced to borrow from private sources or under a more expensive modified PLUS Program.

Under the '86 budget, the Pell Grant Program would be funded at approximately $2.681 billion — a $644 million reduction from the FY 85 level. By the administration's own estimates, 574,000 fewer student awards would be available under the program, which would be limited to students from families with adjusted gross incomes of less than $25,000.

A student would be required to contribute a minimum of $800 to the cost of attendance through work before receiving a Pell Grant. This self-help amount would be in addition to the family contribution. The maximum grant for the 1986-87

Senator East Stops Short On Talking 1986 Plans

U.S. Senator John East is expected to be a candidate for re-election in 1986, although he has made no formal announcement.

East authorized the formation of a fund-raising committee following last November's election. And a two-minute television ad is to begin airing this week, according to Tom Fetzer of Jefferson Marketing, which produced the ad.

But the senator, a former U.S. Marine Corps officer and political science professor at East Carolina University, has stopped short of declaring himself a candidate.

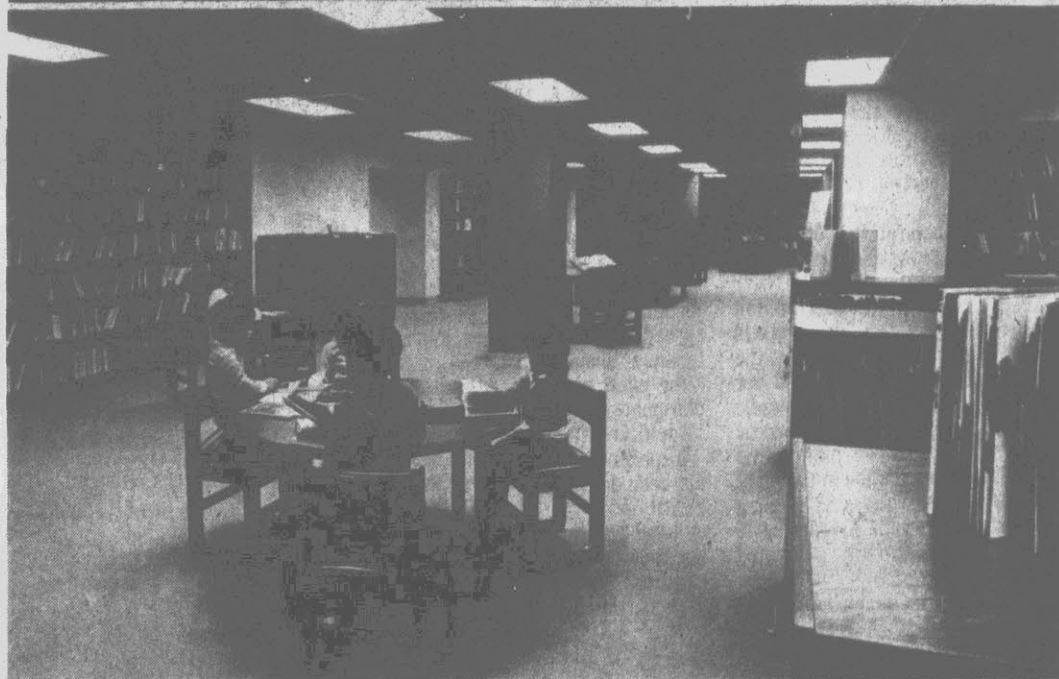

"I do not intend to be leveraged at this juncture into being either a lame duck or leveraged into a commitment that 'yes, I am running.' People can draw their own personal conclusions one way or another," East said recently.

Citing the Helms-Hunt race, in which incumbent Sen. Jesse Helms defeated Gov. Jim Hunt in the most expensive senate race in U.S. history, East said "we went through a two-year campaign that was very contentious and very hard-fought, and the people of the state wearied of it. I think what the people want at this point is that we concentrate our efforts and talents not to be posturing for re-election, but attending seriously to the nation's business."

Jerry Woodruff, East's press secretary in Washington, said Friday that the senator, who underwent surgery Feb. 1. to remove a benign obstruction in his urinary tract, has "recuperated" and returned to work last Monday.

Woodruff said East "has not made

Open House On March 17

Children's Section Finished At Library

A renovation project at the Shepard Memorial Library has been completed to the children's library section, according to director Willie Nelms.

The expansion provides an additional 3,250 square feet of space for the children's services. The original area had about 900 square feet. The combination of space will total about 4,100 square feet for the new and old area combined.

The need for the expansion was a direct result of the growth in the use in the children's library over the past few years.

The expanded facility provides space for approximately 20,000 books for youngsters, allowing many children's books which were kept in storage prior to the expansion project to now be made available.

In addition to the space for housing material, the new area will provide an area for story programs and other book-related activities for young people. This area will also be available for future book storage.

Construction crews began last fall excavating dirt from under the north section of the building moving approximately 1,000 cubic yards of dirt. During the process, workmen turned up some interesting items including old fire extinguishers, old horse shoes, fire axes and old shelving. The debris was thought to be from the old Evans Street School which burned.

Additional steel was placed under the wall at the north end of the building to give added structural strength and new foundations poured.

According to Nelms, there were numerous reasons for deciding on excavation as the most desirable means of expanding the children's library. A main reason was the excavated area could be directly added to the existing children's room, thus eliminating the need to recapture the space already existing. In addition, the expansion project did not affect the external appearance of the building.

Because the space is underground, heating and air conditioning cost will be reduced, Nelms noted. Temperature control of the entire building will also be improved. The director also added, the present children's entrance did not have to be moved so there was no need of reorientation of patrons to a new entrance.

The architect is Boney Architects of Wilmington and Stackhouse of Goldsboro, the general contractor.

The project was financed by the City of Greenville at a cost of $169,187. Nelms said, with $140,000 coming from net-debt reduction bonds, with the remaining balance coming from the general fund and interest on investments.

An open house will be held at the children's library Sunday, March 17, with grand opening ceremonies scheduled to begin at 2:30 p.m. At that time the room will be open to the public.

'Clipping' Seen As Way To Help Tobacco Quality

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

What do football and lawn mowers have to do with tobacco production? All three of them involve clipping.

The big difference is the tobacco farmer receives benefits from clipping, not a 15-yard penalty.

Pitt Extension Agent Mitch Smith is taking an old technique — mowing tobacco beds — and bringing it into the 1980's. He says he's after improved quality in the crop and believes he can get it through a process called clipping. Smith will experiment with this process on five Pitt County farms in 1985.

"It sounds a little radical — taking a lawn mower to a tobacco plant bed — but it is an old practice that experiments in 1984 indicate may have some relevance today," Smith said.

Clipping means taking a specially modified lawn mower and cutting plants in the tobacco bed one-half inch above the bud. According to Smith, clipping has two agronomic benefits — it can increase the crop's yield per acre, but more important, it can improve the quality of the crop.

"Experiments have shown that clipping decreases the amount of immature flowering and promotes a better root system," Smith said. "By decreasing the amount of leaf it creates a situation where the root system takes up more water and grows more prolifically." The stronger the root system, the stronger the tobacco plant and the higher the quality of the tobacco produced, Smith said. "What we are primarily interested in in the local experiments is the increase in quality, not yield," he said.

Another benefit to clipping is that it creates plant uniformity, which also promotes quality leaf, Smith said. "Clipping a plant bed two or three times assures that the plants are growing at the same rate and height," he said. "This means when it's time to harvest, there's more uniformity — the plants are at the same stage of maturity."

Smith said he is especially interested in clipping because he thinks it can ease one of Pitt County's biggest production problems in 1984 — immature flowering. "In 1984 there was a direct need in the county for transplant utilization timing, which clipping can create," Smith said. "The unique thing about this process is that it can be applicable under both normal and stressful condi-

Community Colleges In Service Dispute

By PRISCILLA BROWN

WILLIAMSTON — When the state board of community colleges meets in Raleigh this week, they'll find themselves sitting squarely in the middle of a territorial dispute that's been raging for more than 10 years.

Martin Community College in Williamston and Beaufort County Community College in Washington have been squabbling over who serves Washington County since the early 1970s.

But not until two years ago did the infighting reach proportions that squared one school off against another in a dispute involving everyone from the president of the system to members of the North Carolina General Assembly.

And not until a new state law went into effect this month did the squabble look like it was coming to an end.

Now, a state-level proposal gives Washington County to the Beaufort school — and Martin officials, at least, are scrambling to every corner to ferret out the proof that history lies on their side before the proposal is approved by the state board later this spring.

"We got a letter from (state president of community colleges) Bob Scott in July of 1983 that stated we would be approved for Washington County," said Tyler Warren, chairman of the Martin Community College Board of Trustees.

"Then, lo and behold, two months later, he completely reversed his decision."

That, said Beaufort Community College President Jim Blanton, was when he received a Scott letter that said, "I am reassigning Beaufort County Community College as primary deliverer of adult basic education courses in Washington County."

What makes Washington County so important?

The law that went into effect this month, the Administrative Procedure Act, empowers the state community college board to establish formal service areas for all 58 community colleges in the state.

And once those service areas are established, individual schools will be bound to those areas for continuing education courses. Students, of course, can go to school wherever they choose.

But schools cannot offer courses outside their service areas. And community college officials say that community outreach is a subtle, but effective way to recruit fulltime students.

In addition, community colleges receive funding for Adult Basic Education courses — and the larger their service area, the more courses they can offer.

But the biggest factor is funding for fulltime equivalent students (FTE). And since FTE numbers are based on a percentage of the population within a service area, population is important.

As Martin Community College President Travis Martin put it, "seven percent of 48,000 (the college's service area including Washington County) is a lot more than seven percent of 24,000 (the area without Washington County)."

Martin and his board are

academic year would be $2,100, the same as that of 1985-86. A student's Pell Grant, in combination with other federal aid, could not exceed $4,000.

During 1985-86, approximately 720,000 students are expected to receive Supplemental Grants of about $550 each, totaling $412.5 million. More than 60 percent of these funds will go to students with family incomes under $18,000. The administration is not requesting any funding of this program in FY 86, but would allow schools at their discretion to use up to 50 percent of their work-study grants for such awards. The administration is assuming that not more than $130 million would be used by schools for supplemental grants. Based on the current average award, this would mean that 483,637 students who are now receiving supplemental grant awards would be eliminated.

In 1985-86 it is expected that approximately 788,000 students will be served by the College Work Study program will earn $879 each. More than 65 percent of these funds will go to students with family incomes of $24,000 or less.

In 1986-87, the administration is requesting $850 to fund a new program called Work Study/Grants." Each school would receive a single annual allocation of funds, and would, at its discretion, be able to expend up to 50 percent of its available funds for supplemental grants. Funds not expended for supplemental grants would otherwise be used for College Work-Study jobs and would have to be matched by at least 20 percent of the institutional funds. If institutions take this route, then approximately 194,000 more students could be employed in FY 86 than are expected to be in FY 85.

The National Direct Student Loans program is largely capitalized by repayments. Congress appropriated $190 million in new capital last year, making $841 million available for lending in 1985-86. From that amount, approximately 956,000 students will borrow an average of $880 in FY 85. No federal capital expenditure, in other words no additional funds, are allocated for FY 86.

All of these projections, Wheeler re-emphasized, are based on what the president has asked for. Major or minor changes could be instituted by Congress.

a decision" about a re-election bid "but will make an announcement when he has made a decision.

"If his friends and supporters want to go ahead and tell other people what they think about John East, that's fine with us. But the senator is not ready to make an announcement," Woodruff said.

"It's unfortunate," Woodruff said of rumors that poor health will keep East from seeking a second term, or that he will resign. "It's simply not true.

East, 53, contracted polio in 1955 while stationed at Capm Lejeune, and uses a wheelchair.

Woodruff said that rumors about East's health "is one of the ways discrimination against the handicapped occurs. People who use wheelchairs suffer the same afflictions as those who don't," Woodruff said. "His having gone in for surgery has no connection whatever with his wheelchair."

Fetzer, who said the East ads will start sometime in the coming week said the ads will be "in every media market in the state" and will run "indefinitely ... there's no timetable for them to go off the air."

Fetzer also said that the current ad "will be followed by others, although there are no concrete plans for any future ads at this time."

The ad, designed to give viewers East's record, depicts the senator as "one of the leading authors and supporters" of President Reagan's economic recovery program. It show Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and former senators John Tower of Texas and Howard Baker of Tennessee praising East for his intelligence.

The ad also includes film clips showing the president talking about the recovery, although not specifically about East.

Drivers Charged

Greenville police charged Delbert Thompson of Route 2, Greenville, with a safe movement violation Saturday following a traffic accident involving the car he was driving and a vehicle operated by John Lee Pait of 107 Gawain Road.

Damages to the Pait car in the East 14th Street accident were estimated at $750. The Thompson vehicle not damaged, officers said.

Brenda Mack Freeman of Route 2, Snow Hill, who was cited for failure to yield right of way following a South Memorial Drive accident Friday. Police said the wreck involved the car Ms. Freeman was driving and vehicles operated by Dorothy Green McRoy of Route 1, Winterville, and Sandra Faye Andrews of Route 6, Greenville.

Police estimated damages at $2,450 to the Freeman car, $2,500 to the McRoy car and $2,100 to the Andrews vehicle.

Debra Kay Satterfield of Greenville was charged with a safe movement violation Friday following an accident on 10th Street involving the car she was driving and a car operated by Ashby Todd Jordan of 300-S Elm St. Police estimated damages to the Jordan car at $200 and $1,500 to the Satterfield car.

Baby Survives Fall

CHICAGO (AP) — A 3-year-old girl who plunged 14 stories down a garbage chute was saved by a pile of trash that accumulated because a compactor was broken, police said Saturday.

Quida Stone, who either fell or was pushed down the chute Friday, escaped with minor injuries after spending the night in the garbage, said police Sgt. Al Davis.

The girl was in the care of a babysitter and disappeared while playing with other children in the 14th-floor hallway of a public housing project on the city's South Side, Davis said.

Later, when the babysitter could not find the girl in the hallway, she and some neighbors began searching the building. When the girl did not show up, the babysitter notified police, who searched the building all night, Davis said.

About 9:30 a.m. Saturday, police heard faint cries coming from the trash compactor and found the girl, he said. The trash apparently had broken the child's fall and kept her warm, Davis said.

The girl was treated Michael Reese Hospital and released, Davis said.

tions, such as immature flowering."

When a tobacco plant flowers, Smith explained, all the nutrients in the plant go directly to this seed. By eliminating the flower or controlling the flowering process, a standard production technique, the nutrients go instead to the leaf, the part of the plant that is harvested, he said. "So eliminating this flowering or controlling its timing is important in terms of quality," he said.

Clipping can also slow the growth process of the plant in the plant bed and delay the time plants must be pulled from the bed for transplanting, Smith said. "Clipping the plant slows the transpiration process and consequently slows the growth process," he said.

According to N.C. Extension experiments in 1984 utilizing 10 60-acre plots, clipping increased the leaf number, root weight, yield per acre and quality of tobacco plants. Based on a results table released by the extension service, plants that were clipped twice while in the plant bed averaged 17 leaves at topping time, compared to an average of 16 leaves on conventionally cultivated plants.

In addition, the table showed that root weight of the clipped plants averaged 13.1 ounces, compared to an average root weight of 12.7 ounces on conventional plants. Yield per acre for clipped tobacco was 2,755 pounds, compared with a yield of 2,571 pounds per acre yield from conventional tobacco.

Finally, and most important according to Smith, the research indicated that quality increased in the clipped tobacco. On an index designed to measure leaf quality, the clipped tobacco received a 59.4 grade. The conventional tobacco got marks of 56.8.

The extension service cautions that clipping should not be attempted on a large scale the first year although it was "used successfully by several North Carolina growers in 1983 and 1984." To clip plant beds, a farmer needs to modify the wheel assembly of a high suction lawn mower, according to Extension recommendations. To minimize the spread of tobacco mosaic virus, farmers should wash the mower after each use with a mixture of phosphate detergent and chlorine bleach, Smith added.

Experimentation with clipping has not been done before in Pitt County, Smith said. "It was done as a cultural practice a few decades ago but now we are taking a more serious look at the scientific aspects," he said.

president at Martin Community College," he said. "And they've had five presidents in the last 10 years."

Blanton said he has no idea what the state board will decide after hearing both sides of the dispute on Thursday, but he said he was willing to abide by its decision.

"Whatever their decision is," he said, "should be final. I hope all institutions will accept it."

Walk Slowly

If you should go before me, dear, walk slowly
 Down the ways of death, well-worn and wide,
 For I would want to overtake you quickly
 And seek the journey's ending by your side.

I would be so forlorn not to descry you Down some shining highroad when I came;
 Walk slowly, dear, and often look behind you
 And pause to hear if someone calls your name.

Kindergarten registration will be held at W.H. Robinson School from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday.
To be eligible, a child must be 5 years old on or before Oct. 16, 1985. Parents are required to bring a copy of a child's birth certificate and immunization record. For further information contact the school.

Music Therapy

A demonstration of the process of music therapy will be presented by music therapy students from East Carolina University and by handicapped persons from the area Friday from 10 a.m. until noon.

The program, part of the "Open House" series sponsored by the Friends of the ECU School of Music, will be held in the Fletcher Music Center Recital Hall.

The presentation will be directed by Dr. Rosemary Fischer of the school of music faculty and is given as a tribute to the memory of the late Bobby Gowen of Greenville, a handicapped youth who received special services in music therapy for more than five years.

The event will include a slide presentation and a discussion of the materials and techniques used.

Dr. Fischer is a registered music therapist with degrees in piano performance and special education. Before coming to ECU nine years ago, she developed the music therapy program at the Charles Lea Center in Spartanburg, S.C.

Sunday Opinion

Educational Cuts May Undermine Schools' Progress

Gov. Martin presented his budget to the state Legislature Monday night and it was obvious that there was to be no magic in his long known proposals to cut inventory, intangibles and food taxes.

The cuts can be made, of course, but the lost revenue just won't be there for such things as public education. The budget proposed by Gov. Martin cut big holes in the public education budget which had been proposed by his predecessor, Jim Hunt. Where Hunt had called for an additional $367.9 million in education spending for 1985-87, Martin recommended $185 million.

Among the casualties in the Martin education budget were funds to hire more school nurses, psychiatrists, job counselors and drug counselors. A major saving was deferral of the implementation of a career ladder program for teachers. A cut was made Hunt's recommendations for funding of summer school remedial help for grades three, six and nine.

These recommended cuts come at a time when it is generally recognized that public education in North Carolina needs more financial resources. We are behind in many areas and we need to catch up. It would not be fair to say that the Martin budget does not recommend additional spending in areas of public education; it does, and for that we are grateful.

It must be remembered, however, that the promise of tax cuts by Gov. Martin overrides all. We can reduce inventory, intangibles and food taxes but there are not to be any miracles in the governor's mansion. If we reduce taxes we citizens have to give up some services. In the case of public education it will be a winding down of much needed improvements.

Mr. S.L. (Sam) Bridgers died last week at the age of 93. He was for many years advertising manager of The Daily Reflector and vice president of the company.

He was also one of those rare people within whose character you find both gentleness and fairness, a man who, upon his death inspired sincerely meant words of praise. He was one who possessed a keen mind and good health until near the end.

I recall the good times and the inspiration he provided for those who worked with him.

During the years of the Great Depression and World War II, the small town newspaper business was decidedly not prosperous. Mr. Bridgers, like others of that era, had to wear many hats. He was not only the advertising manager, he was the advertising department, and the business department, too.

I first became acquainted with Mr. Bridgers during the days of World War II, shortly after I had joined the paper as a carrier.

Mr. Bridgers worked in those days with the knowledge of a son flying combat missions in the Pacific and all the gnawing concern that brought about. There were times when he completed his regular duties of selling and laying out advertising, only to find that there was no one to stamp labels on the newspapers which were to go out in the mails. The job might then fall to him.

The war eventually ended, however, and his son returned home (later to finish medical school). Between his son and daughter there were to be 10 grandchildren. Things got better for the newspaper and the work load less for Mr. Bridgers.

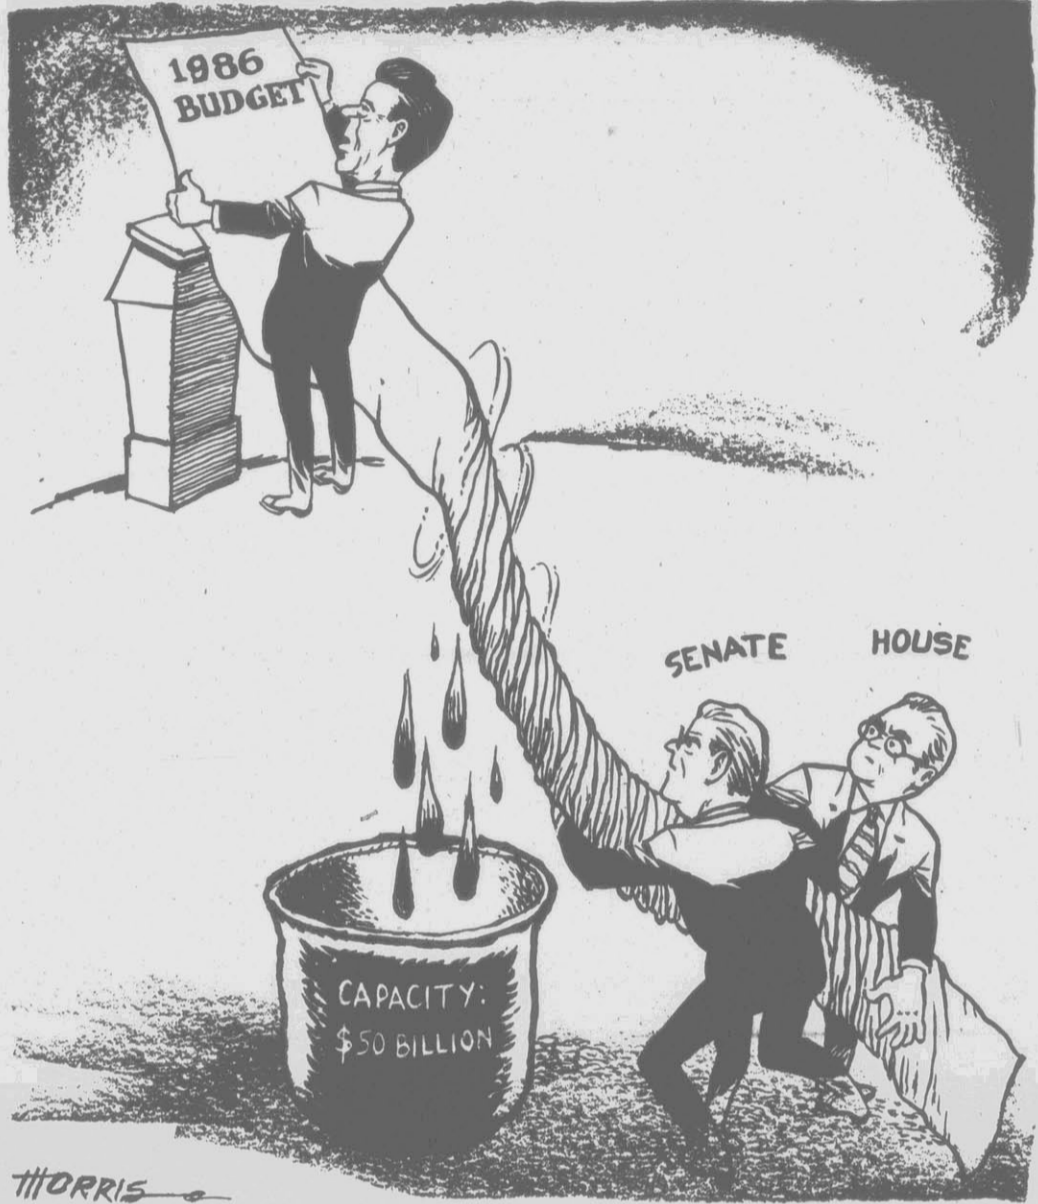

For many more years after that he was here daily sporting his trademark bow tie and clutching the pipe that had become regular aspects of his appearance.

Eventually he went into full retirement, yet almost until the end he made periodic visits to the office, looking virtually the same as he had when I had first met him as a 13 year old.

When you live to be 93, perhaps you belong to another era. Perhaps. Certainly it was in other times that Mr. Bridgers did his best to build this newspaper and to serve his church and community. But what we are, is built upon what others did in the past. We are better today because Mr. Sam Bridgers came our way.

BETTER FILL IT UP, GENTLEMEN!

Ike Warned U.S. To Keep On Alert

The so-called military-industrial complex suffered another body blow with disclosure that a giant in their midst sought to bill the Pentagon for political contributions to individuals and causes.

That, in addition to revelations of mind-boggling spare parts prices and products that failed to meet specifications ... plus reported high profit levels that somehow were found non-taxable, deducting certain public relations expenses on their federal income taxes ... raises bile in the throats of ordinary taxpayers who resignedly pay and pay and pay.

A California lawmaker, Rep. Fortney Stark, nutshelled the whole sordid story saying, "If the Pentagon won't take real action to stop this, I'm willing to bet Congress and the IRS will."

President Eisenhower warned the system was getting out of hand and told Americans to beware. He was smarter than many people gave him credit for being.

Skipping Out On The Tax

WASHINGTON — Over the past three years, the General Electric Co. had profits of $6.5 billion. It paid no federal income tax. Dow Chemical had profits of $776 million; Union Carbide had profits of $613 million; W.R. Grace & Co. had profits of $684 million. None of them paid a dime in federal income tax. Together the four companies claimed refunds — refunds, if you please! — of more than half a million dollars.

This is corporate welfare. It is the system of tax avoidance known cynically as AFDC — Aid for Dependent Corporations — and it is the indefensible consequence of tax laws passed with the very best intentions.

It is not yet clear whether Congress will act on tax reform this year. In the House, Dan Rostenkowski says that his Committee on Ways and Means is ready to cooperate with the administration. In the Senate, majority leader Bob Dole says that reducing deficits has a higher priority than simplifying taxes. My own thought is that if Congress fails to tackle tax reform in 1985, it is not likely to tackle tax reform in the election year of 1986. The lobbyists will be out like tree frogs in April.

For a variety of reasons, both tangible and intangible, a wholesale revision of the tax code gets more urgent all the time. It is now clear that the investment tax credit has not worked as its sponsors hoped it would work when they put it on the books 20 odd years ago. The idea seemed attractive: To spur capital investment in new equipment, give a company an outright credit of 10 percent on such investments. Will you buy a $200,000 rotary press? Then deduct $20,000 from your corporate income tax.

The investment tax credit may have helped the machine tool industry; it may have benefited other suppliers of equipment, but gains in productivity probably have been purchased at the price of eliminating jobs. In the coming fiscal year, if the act is not repealed or drastically amended, the Treasury will have to grant $38 billion in credits. These credits are outright subsidies to industry, in no way distinguishable from such subsidies as food stamps for the poor.

Another target for tax reform is the program of accelerated cost recovery. This is the principal program that has permitted such firms as General Electric and Dow Chemical to escape federal income taxes. They can write off most new equipment in five years and most new structures in 15 years. The program will cost the Treasury an estimated $22 billion in fiscal '86.

To be sure, plausible arguments can be made that tax breaks for business, including Very Big Business, are good things for the economy. In theory these credits and write-offs provide incentives for American companies to invest in new and modernized plants that will make them more competitive on world markets. There is not much evidence either to prove or to disprove the theory. Most new plants probably would have been built anyhow.

No such arguments support continuation of tax shelters for individuals. These phantom investments result in a loss to the Treasury of roughly $20 billion to $25 billion a year. You see these cynical schemes advertised in daily newspapers and in professional journals: Invest only $2,000! Become a limited partner! Wealthy individuals are urged to put a little money into oil, gas, real estate, horses, treasure hunts, cattle, kiwi fruit, jojoba beans, duck farms, oyster farms, and even the breeding of llamas. The investments make a mockery of our capitalist system, for the whole object is not to earn money but to lose money — to provide tax losses for the rich.

These sleazy schemes of tax avoidance do incalculable damage. They divert capital from truly productive enterprises and they contribute significantly to a public perception of unfairness in the tax laws. It may not be perfectly understood, but it is generally understood, that when the rich doctor, dentist or lawyer finds refuge in a tax shelter, it is the ordinary Joe who is being ripped off. The little guy's taxes have to make up the gap when 9,000 persons earning $250,000 or more pay no income taxes at all.

The Treasury's program of tax simplification is far from perfect, but it provides a good starting point. Other bills — Kemp-Kasten, Bradley-Gephardt — have great merit. It remains only for Congress to demonstrate the will to do what has to be done.

Party Changes May Occur

ST. PAUL, Minn. — The political payoff of the farm belt financial crisis may be a reverse party realignment, pushing veteran state Sen. Charlie Berg out of the Republican Party because of what he calls its "tendencies toward political suicide."

Just back from a futile Paul Revere ride to Washington, Berg told us President Reagan no longer is Teflon-coated out here in the devastated farm belt. "He's out to decapitalize rural America," said the angry state legislator. "He'll reduce the price of farm land and the land will all end up in the Federal Land Bank or the insurance companies."

Given his reputation as a canny political gadfly first elected as an independent, Berg may have been exaggerating. But toned-down versions of his warning are being heard from the Dakotas down to Texas and from the Rockies east to Missouri and Illinois. That comprises the home states of about half the 22 Republican U.S. senators up for re-election next year. Four of them — Mark Andrews (N.D.), Charles Grassley (Iowa), James Abdnor (S.D.) and Bob Kasten (Wis.) — deserted Republican ranks last week in defeating Reagan on the farm bailout bill.

Berg and other farm belt Republicans are rankled because they understand the source of the farm credit crisis and feel the Reagan administration does not. "Isn't our problem tied to the tight high-price money policy of the Federal Reserve Board?" Berg asked Agriculture Secretary John Block in Washington. Block did not reply.

That non-answer reflected the Reagan administration's attitude, born out of ignorance and fear of tangling with Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker. Instead of dealing with commodity deflation as a monetary phenomenon, the president is pressing on with his New American Revolution. He truly intends to return agriculture to something approaching a free market economy and regards the 1985 farm crisis as a tragic but essentially minor impediment.

Berg believes what he was told in Washington: Reagan will veto any bailout legislation approaching in cost the bills passed last week by the House and Senate. He calls budget director David Stockman "as compassionate as Auschwitz" and joins farmers in labeling Block an incompetent who is afraid of Stockman.

Nobody knows whether a Reagan veto would appeal to non-farm voters swept up by enthusiasm for the Reagan revolution against big government handouts. But farm-state Republicans think they know what it would do to voters dependent on agriculture — 42 percent of Minnesota's population. "Big political trouble in '86" at both state and federal levels, Republican state chairwoman Marge Gruenes told us.

Republican National Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf, addressing a recent state GOP fund-raising dinner here, was so fearful of triggering a political backlash that he hardly mentioned the farm crisis. Even state Sen. Randy Kamrath, a conservative Republican champion of repealing many federal farm-aid programs, worries that Reagan's move to free markets will attempt too much too quickly. "If this transition goes too deep," he told us, "a third of our farmers, our villages and our churches and banks will go down."

That not only threatens party realignment toward a Republican majority in the farm belt but promises reversal of 1984 tides. Reagan captured a huge farm-vote majority in Minnesota last November, with votes from many members of Walter Mondale's Democratic-Farmer-Labor (DFL) Party. Mondale carried his only state on the strength of urban voters.

But Berg, elected in 1972 as an independent before switching to the Republicans in 1980, and several other GOP legislators have "an open invitation" to join the DFL caucus. Reagan's veto could persuade them to accept it.

MX Could Be Major Test

To the editor:
Let us be wary of glib generalizations based on polls and projections. I am especially referring to the recent Gallup Poll on the "Star Wars" proposal. Headlines have given the impression that a majority of Americans favor the system. A closer reading, however, shows that it is a very slim majority of Americans who have followed the discussion over "Star Wars" defense either "very" or "fairly" closely who are in favor of it — not a majority of all Americans. And that percentage is only a slight 52 percent of those paying more attention than not.

According to the way I figure it, 52 percent of the 67 percent of the population following the discussion fairly or very closely comes out to being only about 35 percent of the whole population. That certainly isn't a majority of Americans! In fact, it's a small minority that appears to be in favor of the "Star Wars" defense policy. But I am certain that those in power will glibly use those poll results as support for policies, and Americans love polls, so they will not look closely to see if the numbers have supported the generalizations.

Watch out! Numbers can lie, when they are moved around in a hazy cloud.

To the editor:
If we were in some heathenistic country we might have to accept many things to which we are subjected. However, we are not, even though the press is acting like it; therefore, I want to officially protest the Feb. 24-March 2, 1985, issue of TV Showtime with the cover story of the Playboy Bunny.

A local newspaper should exercise more taste. No doubt, this magazine is part of a Hollywood scheme to push us into more and more destruction through undermining morals, authority and everything else that stands for truth and purity. But the local newspaper also has the obligation to its community.

There is going to be — there has got to be — a changing sweep in America toward good values and the home. If not, we are doomed for destruction. Please be accountable to your local community and do your part.

To the editor:
The Bible Radio this month had the following quotation in its monthly literature:

Over 200 years ago, while our nation was still a British colony, the noted English historian, Alexnder Frazier Tyler, wrote about the fall of the Athenian Republic in these words:

"A democracy cannot exist as a permanent form of government. It can only exist until the voters discover that they can vote themselves largesse from the public treasury. From that moment on, the majority always votes for the candidates promising the most benefits from the public treasury, with the result that a democracy always collapses over loose fiscal policy, always followed by a dictatorship. The average age of the world's greatest civilizations has been 200 years. These nations have progressed through this sequence: From bondage to spiritual faith; from spiritual faith to great courage; from courage to liberty; from liberty to abundance; from abundance to selfishness; from selfishness to complacency; from complacency to apathy; from apathy to dependence; from dependency back again into bondage.

Maybe we had better stop looking toward Washington to solve all our problems.

The popular image of a typical Girl Scout of just a generation ago would bear only a slight resemblance to the Girl Scout of 1985. Today's Girl Scouts are mastering computer technology, learning about the environment and the ecological balance, exploring the universe by telescope and getting on-the-job training through Girl Scouting's career education projects.

It's a full rich life for Girl Scouts in the 1980s. But girls will still be girls. So, in all those exciting ventures, the accent is still on plain old girl-size fun! In fact, the theme for Girl Scout Week this year — March 10-16 — is "The Best Part's the Fun." It reminds us that, in Girl Scouting, "fun" is still number one! It's the lure that continues to bring millions of girls into Girl Scouting's worlds of new discoveries, expanded personal horizons, community service and happy friendships.

During Girl Scout Week, we're reminded, too, that Girl Scouting's value-centered program is still helping girls grow up to be happy, strong, contributing citizens. That makes this special week a time for all citizens, in communities across the U.S.A., salute the Girl Scouts for the enrichment they add to girls' lives — and for never forgetting the "The Best Part's the Fun."

Happy Birthday, Girl Scouts, and best wishes for another 73 years of growth and progress.

I recently read an article by Charles Simpson in "New Wine Magazine."

Mr. Simpson says, "Many Christians are completely conditioned to secular sources of information. When men like Norman Lear, noted creator of Archie Bunker, attack Christian leaders for exercising influence, some Christians will join in like a chorus of parrots, and say, 'Yeah, look at those TV preachers asking for money again! Why don't they just preach the gospel?'"

Few of us question the billions raised and spent by secular television networks, newspaper and foundations to tell their stories and present their views. I don't know if you've noticed lately, but things are changing.

We were asleep when the Supreme Court OK'd 15 million abortions; we were asleep when it took prayer and Bible reading out of the schools. But many of us are not asleep any more, because of men like Billy Graham, Oral Roberts, Jerry Falwell and Pat Robertson. These men, operating in faith, are competing with the liberal press for the hearts and minds of this generation.

To the editor:
Appeals continue for John Sterling Gardner Jr., the man convicted of murdering our son, Richard A. Adams, Dec. 23, 1982. We thought the public should be aware of the time and expense involved, not only in the case of our son, but in all cases that have to go through the court system. Yes, we should be careful and thorough and make sure that we have the guilty party, but once this is done, it is absurd to spend the time and money that is done through our system now. Already, after the jurors unanimously sentenced Gardner to the death penalty, followed by the same decision by the Supreme Court judges of North Carolina and the U.S. Supreme Courts judges, we are told that the earliest this final decision will be made is at least another five or six years.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega's ostensibly good-faith decision to halt weapons purchases and send home 100 Cuban military advisers underscores the desperation in top Sandinista circles about the rapidly deteriorating state of this nation's economy.

President Reagan's effort to defeat the ruling Sandinistas economically has accomplished far more than military operations undertaken with or without U.S. help by anti-government forces along Nicaragua's borders. Tough domestic policy measures taken by this country's inexperienced leaders have only added to the misery.

When the corrupt Somoza family surrendered power in 1979, it left the Sandinistas with an already feeble

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, who lost his first fight with Congress last week over emergency aid to farmers, is pulling out all the stops to win continued support of his MX missile program and — his aides hope — set a steady course through the stormy legislative session ahead.

With a dose of Reagan's legendary luck and the return of veteran lobbyist Max Friedersdorf to the White House staff, administration strategists have set up a carefully orchestrated test of the second-term president's strength on Capitol Hill.

And they don't deny the president could be staking his future on the outcome.

The 10-warhead, intercontinental MX is the most controversial of the new generation of nuclear weapons in the U.S. arsenal, but Reagan has been determined to deploy 100 of the missiles in existing silos in Nebraska and Wyoming beginning late next year.

In a narrow victory two years ago, he won funds from Congress for production of the first 21 missiles, but last year lawmakers stopped payment on a check for $1.5 billion to fund the second batch of 21 pending another test of strength this year.

In putting off a final decision, however, the House and Senate locked themselves into taking two separate votes on the issue within 15 days after Reagan reports the missiles are still necessary. He was not permitted to make that report before March 1.

As events unfolded, the dates coincided almost perfectly with the opening of a new round of U.S.-Soviet arms control talks next week, giving Reagan a powerful club in his fight with MX opponents.

"It did serendipitously give us the rarity of a fixed calendar," said one White House aide, who discussed the administration's legislative strategy on condition he not be named.

About two weeks ago, he said, when strategists at the White House, State Department and Pentagon focused their attention on how to handle the brewing fight, they considered waiting until after the opening round of procedural talks in order to use the U.S. negotiating team to help lobby for the MX. They decided instead to move immediately in order "to use the talks as a lever," the official said.

"To put it off would have been a signal of a lack of resolve and confidence on our part," he added.

Friedersdorf, who organized the lobbying campaign for the sweeping budget cuts and tax cuts in the first, triumphant legislative session of Reagan's presidency, came back just in time to orchestrate the MX campaign.

Reagan first called in all the members of the House and Senate Armed Services and Appropriations committees to make his case quietly, laying out his fundamental argument that Congress shouldn't disarm the U.S. negotiators on the eve of the resumption of arms control talks with the Soviets.

"The Senate was not that warm," one of those present reported. "You could feel it in the room."

The assessment was that the vote would be close in the Republican-controlled Senate, which is to vote first on the issue.

With the formal issuance of Reagan's report on Monday and the beginning of the countdown toward the House and Senate votes, Friedersdorf and his staff selected more than 100 House members to have breakfast at the White House and hear the president make his own case.

The groups were kept fairly small to convey the importance attached to each person invited, and Reagan set aside a few minutes each morning this week to drop in on the breakfasts in the State Dining Room on his way to the Oval Office.

Some of those invited were known opponents of the MX, others were uncommitted, and a few certain supporters of the administration were included to ensure that the president would have some friends in the audience.

Meanwhile, as part of the effort, Reagan reserved some time at the end of each day to see a couple of key senators in the intimate surroundings of his own residential quarters of the executive mansion to let them know the importance he attached to the upcoming votes.

Outside groups, including evangelists and corporate supporters of other Reagan programs, also were invited to the White House for Reagan to try to enlist their support for the MX.

The idea was to stress the importance of the MX vote to everyone, not just as a weapons system but as a test of Reagan's strength.

"The message is, 'If you want me to win on these other issues you're particularly interested in, you've got to help me on this one,'" the White House official said.

Asked if the president intended to stake so much of his personal prestige on one controversial missile system, the source said, "This vote will set the tone for the (legislative) session. We're going to do everything we can to win it."

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — While the Reagan administration's proposed budget for fiscal 1986 clearly calls for major cuts in social programs and further increases for defense, the public would do just the opposite: cut defense and increase spending for social programs.

In the latest Gallup Poll, public opinion is 4-to-1 that too much (46 percent) rather than too little (11 percent) is now being spent for national defense and military purposes. When it comes to social programs, however, the public leans 2-to-1 (42 percent to 22 percent) that too little is earmarked for this purpose.

Public support for reduced defense spending is now at the highest point since 1971, when 50 percent felt it was excessive.

The public's views on defense and social spending are conditioned to a great extent by their political persuasion. Democrats are far more inclined than Republicans to favor increased social spending and to endorse defense cuts. At the same time, however, only 15 percent of Republicans concur with the administration's view that too little is now spent for defense, with most saying the current defense budget is either about right (49 percent) or too high (29 percent).

These findings are recorded at a time when there is broad agreement between the administration and Congress that reducing the federal budget deficit is one of the nation's highest priorities and that the budget cuts should total about $50 billion. The budget debate now centers on which programs should be cut.

These findings are consistent with earlier survey findings that if the American people had the responsibility for reducing the huge federal budget deficit, their top priority would be to cut defense spending.

Asked to vote on each of the four principal means of cutting the deficit, 61 percent in a December Gallup survey approve of cuts in the defense budget, 41 percent favor cuts in spending for social programs, 23 percent would raise income taxes, and 11 percent would cut "entitlement" programs such as Social Security and Medicaid.

The latest results are based on in-person interviews with 1,528 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Jan. 25-28.

For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percentage points in either direction.

— HOPE THAT'S HIS LUCKY DAY!

Noel Yancey

Dorothea Dix, Crusader

Back in 1848, two women staying at the Mansion House, a Raleigh hotel, formed a friendship that altered many lives in North Carolina.

One of the women, Louisa Dobbin of Fayetteville, had accompanied her husband, James C. Dobbin, to Raleigh to be with him during the session of the General Assembly. Dobbin was a representative and the Democratic floor leader.

The other woman was Dorothea L. Dix, a prim New Englander who had embarked on a single-minded, almost single-handed crusade to improve the lot of the nation's mentally ill, many of whom, she had discovered, were chained in cold, damp, filthy jails and poorhouses. By the time she reached Raleigh, she had personally investigated the plight of the mentally ill in her home state of Massachusetts, presented her findings to the Legislature and persuaded it to provide for about 200 additional beds in the State Hospital at Worcester.

Then she went on to Connecticut and Rhode Island and on to New Jersey, where her efforts resulted in the opening in 1847 of a state hospital at Trenton. It was the first of 32 hospitals established in the United States through her efforts. There were several more in Europe and Japan before her death in 1882. Although she was tubercular, neurotic and domineering, she culled an iron resolution with a profound compassion for human suffering.

Before taking her plea to the General Assembly in Raleigh, Miss Dix had spent three months traveling the state so that she could present firsthand facts and figures to the General Assembly. She estimated that North Carolina had more than 1,000 mentally ill, epileptic and feeble-minded persons. A few of the well-to-do had been sent to mental hospitals in other states — there were none in North Carolina. Many were confined in unheated cells in jails and poorhouses. But most were kept in private dwellings by their families who cared for them as best they could. In all, she visited about 50 jails and poorhouses, traveling at her own expense.

Gov. W.A. Graham, who knew of her arrival and her purpose, commended Miss Dix in his message to the General Assembly and said, "I cannot too earnestly recommend her cause." Her cause was a $100,000 appropriation to build a state hospital and a small tax levy to pay for it.

To the Mansion House, where she was devotedly nursing Mrs. Dobbin, who had become gravely ill, Miss Dix invited some of the leading legislators. She told them some of her findings which she had summed up in a "Memorial Soliciting a State Hospital for the Protection and Cure of the Insane." Then she handed the document to John W. Ellis, saying she wished him to present it to the Legislature. Ellis, a committee chairman, presented the Memorial to the House and introduced the bill providing for the hospital.

Ellis' committee gave the bill a favorable report, and it was scheduled for consideration on Dec. 19. Meanwhile, the House and Senate adopted a joint resolution thanking Miss Dix for her "zealous labor, Christian philanthropy and self-sacrificing devotion to the insane poor of North Carolina." However, Miss Dix wanted something more than nice words. But it appeared for a while that all she was going to get. The Whigs, under Gov. Graham, favored the bill, and Kenneth Raynor, one of their most influential spokesmen, spoke eloquently in its behalf. However, the Democrats, who were opposed to any increase in state spending, controlled the House. The bill was defeated. It appeared that the cause was lost.

Meanwhile, Mrs. Dobbin's condition worsened. Miss Dix continued to nurse her friend zealously even though it was obvious the end was in sight. Then the dying woman asked Dorothea Dix if there was not something she could do to show her appreciation.

"Yes," she replied. "You can ask your husband to speak for the Hospital Bill." Louisa Dobbin died on Dec. 18, but before she died she asked her husband as a last request to support Miss Dix's project. Dobbin kept his promise. He resumed his seat in the House on Dec. 23 without observing the usual period of mourning and moved for reconsideration of the hospital measure. He not only made a touching and eloquent speech in its behalf, he offered an amendment calling for a small tax on property for four years to pay for it. The amendment carried a provision that if they wished, county governments could reduce the poor tax by the amount of the hospital tax. It was a case of "robbing the poor for the benefit of the insane." The House reconsidered the measure and passed it overwhelmingly.

"Rejoice, rejoice with me," Miss Dix wrote a friend. "Through toil, anxiety and tribulation my bill has passed. 101 ayes. 10 nays. I am not well, though perfectly happy. I leave North Carolina compensated thousandfold for all the labours by this great success."

In the Senate, the margin was much closer, but the bill became law on Jan. 1, 1849, and work on the new hospital was started 29 days later. Legend has it that the site, a beautiful tree-covered hill southwest of Raleigh, was selected by Miss Dix at the urging of the hospital commissioners. The 1852 Legislature continued the state tax, and on April 29, 1856, the hospital opened its doors.

"You will let us call it Dix Hill after you?" the commissioners asked Miss Dix — according to the legend. When she hesitated, one said, "If not in your honor, perhaps there is someone dear to you whose memory you would like to perpetuate?"

After thinking a moment, Miss Dix said there was someone, Dr. Elijah Dix, her grandfather, who had once dreamed of establishing a medical school in Boston. According to the legend, that is how the hospital got the name Dix Hill. A few years ago the state mental health folks apparently decided that the name was too redolent of the discredited term "asylum" that they were trying to get away from. So, they officially renamed it the "North Carolina State Hospital in Raleigh." But that name never took. It was always referred to as Dix Hill by the people of Raleigh. So the state folks officially gave it its present name: Dorothea Dix Hospital.

Sandinistas Desperate About Economy

economy. With only $3.5 million in international reserves (the Somozas and friends had channeled far more into their own bank accounts overseas), Nicaragua faced a $1.5 billion foreign debt.

Today, Nicaragua's debt has grown to $4.35 billion, but the U.S. is doing everything it can to discourage the kind of foreign investment here that would ultimately help pay the interest. While about 56 foreign firms, including such U.S. companies as Texaco, Bank of America and Colgate-Palmolive, still have Nicaraguan operations, the private sector's share of this country's economy has dropped to 17 percent.

War with the contras has had a particularly devastating effect on the nation's once-prolific agricultural system, since a large part of the coffee and grain crops are cultivated in contested areas.

Nicaragua's national unemployment rate only slightly exceeds that of the U.S. (Joblessness in Managua, at 17 percent, compares with that in some of America's Midwestern towns.) But the general inflation rate of 102 percent (government restraints and subsidies help keep price growth for consumer staples to about 20 percent) has eaten away at real wages and the standard of living.

Military needs have only sharpened the pains of a weak economy. At least 40 percent of the government's 1985 budget of $280 million will go for food, clothing, medicine, transportation and munitions for Nicaragua's armed forces, according to Ortega.

Mali Will Get Relief, Bush Says

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
BAMAKO, Mali (AP) — Vice President George Bush said Saturday the Reagan administration has chosen this drought-stricken nation as one keystone of a program designed to encourage a market-oriented farm economy in Africa.

Speaking at the signing of an agreement transferring 60,300 tons of food aid, Bush said Mali was one of four African nations whose economic reform programs would be supported by the Reagan administration.

He did not name the three other countries, and a senior administration official said it has not been determined how the money would be used.

Mali, one of the world's 10 poorest countries, instituted economic reforms with the help of the United Nations and Western governments in 1984. Change has been slower than the aid donors wanted, however, and they have urged quicker adoption of a free market system.

"We will do everything we can to reinforce your courageous efforts to liberalize your economy and turn it toward the private sector," Bush told Malian officials at the ceremony.

In a toast to President Moussa Traore at a state dinner, Bush promised help in dealing with Africa's drought and famine.

"Beyond the immediate crisis, the United States has heard another voice from Mali as well," he added.

"We have heard you say that you are going to take an historic turn in agricultural policy — an historic turn that, we trust, once the historic drought subsides and the rains return, will help ensure that famine of this magnitude never again comes to Mali."

Bush, who visited Sudan and Niger before coming here, will fly to Switzerland Sunday. On Monday, he will address a conference in Geneva of donor nations and urge them to increase their famine relief for Africa.

He said in an interview that he would "make an appeal to the conscience of the world to assist these countries that have been in distress. This will transcend East and West and ideology and help the children, mothers and those who are suffering from drought."

Bush said earlier in the day before leaving Niamey, Niger, that the United States cannot turn its back on drought ravaged Africa, but its food surpluses must be used to meet worldwide demand.

He noted demands in the United States that the government care for Americans' needs before helping those abroad and he said, "The answer is we have to find a balanced program."

"When you have seen the suffering that we have seen along the way and when you hear first hand from chiefs of state whom we respect about their needs, it is impossible for the United States to turn its back on these requirements," he told reporters at the Niamey news conference.

Bush said America is committed to provide half the emergency food Africa needs, and he would appeal to the other donor nations to provide the other half.

He was asked why the United States, with large food surpluses, could not provide more than half, and he said he thought America should use its surpluses to meet worldwide demands.

But he added: "I have not been able to suggest a better way in which the match-up can take place. Because of the enormous budgetary impact of the way we account for surplus food, it is extraordinarily difficult to do the match-up that I think compassion and need call for."

Bush said he and Niger's president, Seyni Kountche, had agreed it was vital for donor nations to provide food on schedule, and that he would make "a strong pitch" in Geneva for such a commitment.

Quake Damages Heavy

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — The government said Saturday the earthquake that killed 146 people and left hundreds of thousands homeless caused damages estimated at $500 million to $600 million.

The figure, which may increase as reports continue to arrive, "gives an idea of the immense challenge we Chileans have ahead of us," said Francisco Cuadra, the government's chief spokesman.

It was the first government estimate on the damage caused by last Sunday's quake that also injured some 2,000 people.

German Molina, president of the Chilean Construction Chamber, a national association of builders, has said that when the estimate is completed "the figure will probably reach one billion dollars."

Cuadra said the most affected sector was housing. The government has said that 20,000 homes were destroyed and 40,000 damaged, leaving some 200,000 people homeless.

The quake measure 7.4 on the Richter scale, a gauge of energy released by an earthquake as measured by the ground motion recorded on seismographs.

UNC Board Says Tuition Figure Too High

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Gov. Jim Martin is asking college students to pick up too much of the tab for the University of North Carolina system budget cuts he wants, the university board of governors says.

The board has unanimously approved a resolution to tell Martin and legislators that a proposed 10 percent tuition increase is too hefty this year.

Martin's 1985-87 budget proposal calls for $10 million in cuts to the UNC system budget, school officials say. The tuition increase would raise about $9 million.

UNC President William Friday said the proposed tuition increase comes on the heels of President Reagan's calls for reduced student grant and loan programs and of expectations of increased room and board charges at North Carolina schools.

"This set of circumstances, if fulfilled, means that more young people qualified to attend will not be able to enroll simply because economic factors — not academic ability and personal motivation — have become the controlling element in gaining access to our institutions," he said.

Friday said the state constitution insists that the UNC system be available to all state residents "as far as practicable free of expense."

The resolution reminds the Legislature and the governor of that section of the constitution, and says, "Any increase in tuition without a corresponding increase in student financial aid will deny access to needy and qualified applicants."

"This is going to happen every session from here on out," board member John Jordan Jr. of Raleigh said Friday of Martin's proposal that tuition be raised.

North Carolina students pay about $480 a year in tuition at the 15 UNC campuses. Out-of-state students pay about $3,100.

In the past four years, tuition has increased 25 percent for in-state students and 45 percent for out-of-state students, university officials say.

Friday said 84 percent of the UNC system's students are in-state residents. He said the state is not subsidizing tuition for out-of-state students at a high cost because they enrich the university and because many are graduate students who help the universities build up reputations for research.

Health Care Compared In Study

DURHAM (AP) — A Duke-Watts Family Medicine Center study comparing prepaid health care with traditional fee-for-service care may help defuse objections to the new financing arrangements, researchers say.

"Many doctors believe the financial risk assumed by the medical group providing services under a prepaid plan will ultimately reduce the quality of care," said Dr. Don W. Bradley, medical director for the center. "This was listed as a major concern by many of the area physicians who declined to participate."

The three-year study will compare cost and quality of care given under three payment options at the center, which is affiliated with Duke University Medical Center and Durham County General Hospital. The two prepaid plans under review are the Blue Cross-Blue Shield Personal Care Plan and the HealthAmerica Plan.

Under typical prepaid plans, a set fee entitles participants to almost unlimited use of certain medical services. While the plans offer substantial savings to consumers, some argue that they promise more for the money than participating medical groups can deliver.

Bradley said consumer surveys indicate concern that joining a prepaid plan means losing the personal doctor-patient relationship of a family physician.

"Many consider that relationship vital to the caliber of care they receive," he said.

Opponents of the prepaid plans say they encourage consumers to use more medical services than they are paying for, driving costs up instead of down.

"It's argued that the demands of patients with chronic medical problems will eventually force cost-cutting measures somewhere along the line that could affect the quality of care for everyone in the plan," Bradley said.

The study, using a $176,000 grant from the Kate B. Reynolds Health Care Trust, will focus on 1,200 to 1,500 patients at the center. Each will be asked about their health status, health habits and use of health services and their behavior will be monitored, Bradley said.

Researchers also will tally the costs under each payment option and determine whether prepayment increases the use of medical services.

Disease Traced

RALEIGH (AP) — The outbreak of a disease that threatens a principal source of North Carolina's pulpwood and saw timber has been traced to a state-run Goldsboro nursery, officials say.

"It was a freak occurrence," said Wilson L. Norris, supervisory of F.H. Claridge Nursery, where the fusiform rust turned up. "We sprayed for it, but it still showed up in about 10 percent of our seedlings."

The fungus, which strikes loblolly pines, is at its highest level in 17 years, affecting as many as 10 percent of the 24 million seedlings distributed to industry and landowners this year, Norris said.

Klan-Nazi Rally Trial Involves $48 Million Suit

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — For the third time since Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis killed five communist demonstrators at a 1979 anti-Klan march in Greensboro, participants are going to court.

This time, the trial beginning Monday in U.S. District Court in Winston-Salem involves a $48 million civil suit brought by widows and survivors of the Communist Workers Party "Death to the Klan" rally. And this time the defendants include four federal and 34 city officials the plaintiffs claim either helped incite the violence of Nov. 3, 1979, or did nothing to prevent it.

"In the two previous trials, prosecuting officials had the interest of concealing or at least not emphasizing the role of agent provocateurs," said Lewis Pitts, an attorney for the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund, which represents the plaintiffs.

In 1980, an all-white state jury found six Klansmen and Nazis innocent of murder. Last year, another all-white jury found nine Klansmen and Nazis innocent of civil rights conspiracy charges in a federal trial.

Both trials featured television news clips showing defendants getting guns out of car trunks and shooting down demonstrators. But defense lawyers said the Klansmen and Nazis fired in self-defense and that the demonstrators actually provoked the fight.

The acquittals sparked outrage among civil rights and some church groups, and the directors of the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund include leaders of the United Church of Christ, the Unitarian-Universalist Association and the American Civil Liberties Union.

The 16 plaintiffs allege in this suit that the defendants, including 16 Klansmen and Nazis, conspired to deprive them of their civil rights by disrupting the anti-Klan march.

The defendants also include two FBI agents; two agents of the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms; two former Greensboro city officials; two top Greensboro police officers; and 30 police detectives and officers.

Nine law firms have contributed more than $11,000 to a fund to reimburse lawyers representing the indigent Klan-Nazi defendants.

R. Joseph Sher, who has defended federal agents in other cases, is representing the FBI and ATF defendants. Sher could not be reached for comment and did not return repeated telephone calls.

Charles Nichols and Ken Kyre of Greensboro are representing the city defendants. Kyre declined to discuss the defense strategy before the trial. "We do not want to give the plaintiffs advance knowledge," he said. "We want that to hit them at the time of opening arguments."

But Kyre did say that "the evidence will show that the police acted reasonably and that there are no liability."

Pitts said the plaintiffs contend that ATF undercover agent Bernard Butkovich "promoted and encouraged a conspiracy that was in process by the Nazis."

"As part of his cover, he promoted the conspiracy," Pitts said. "Then he just let it run its course. ... He was an agent provocateur out of control."

The plaintiffs allege Eddie Dawson, an undercover agent who worked for the Greensboro police, did the same thing with the Klan. Pitts said both knew the Klansmen and Nazis held a joint meeting two days before the demonstration and discussed using pipe bombs to disrupt it.

"There are a limited number of people actually promoting and encouraging the conspiracy," Pitts said. "The greater number (of defendants) were aware of it and failed to take steps to prevent it."

"Every person has the duty, set out in the civil rights statutes, that if you know there's going to be a conspiracy to violate someone's civil rights — in this case by a violent attack — it's your duty to stop it," he said.

The months before the civil trial have brought dozens of motions and rulings on who will and will not be included among the defendants. Last week, U.S. District Judge Robert Merhige Jr., who will preside over the trial, dismissed former Greensboro Mayor Jim Melvin from the suit but retained two other city officials. The Greensboro Civil Rights Fund hailed their retention as a "tremendous victory."

Earlier, Merhige denied a motion to change the site of the trial after Fund attorneys said they couldn't get an unbiased jury here. Defense lawyers countered that "their arguments are a not-so-subtle assertion that white North Carolinians are racists."

Lawsuit Seeks Assault Money

DURHAM (AP) — A Guilford County man and a Durham County woman are seeking more than $10,000 in damages each in a suit filed against a Durham police officer, the Durham Public Safety Department and the city of Durham, records show.

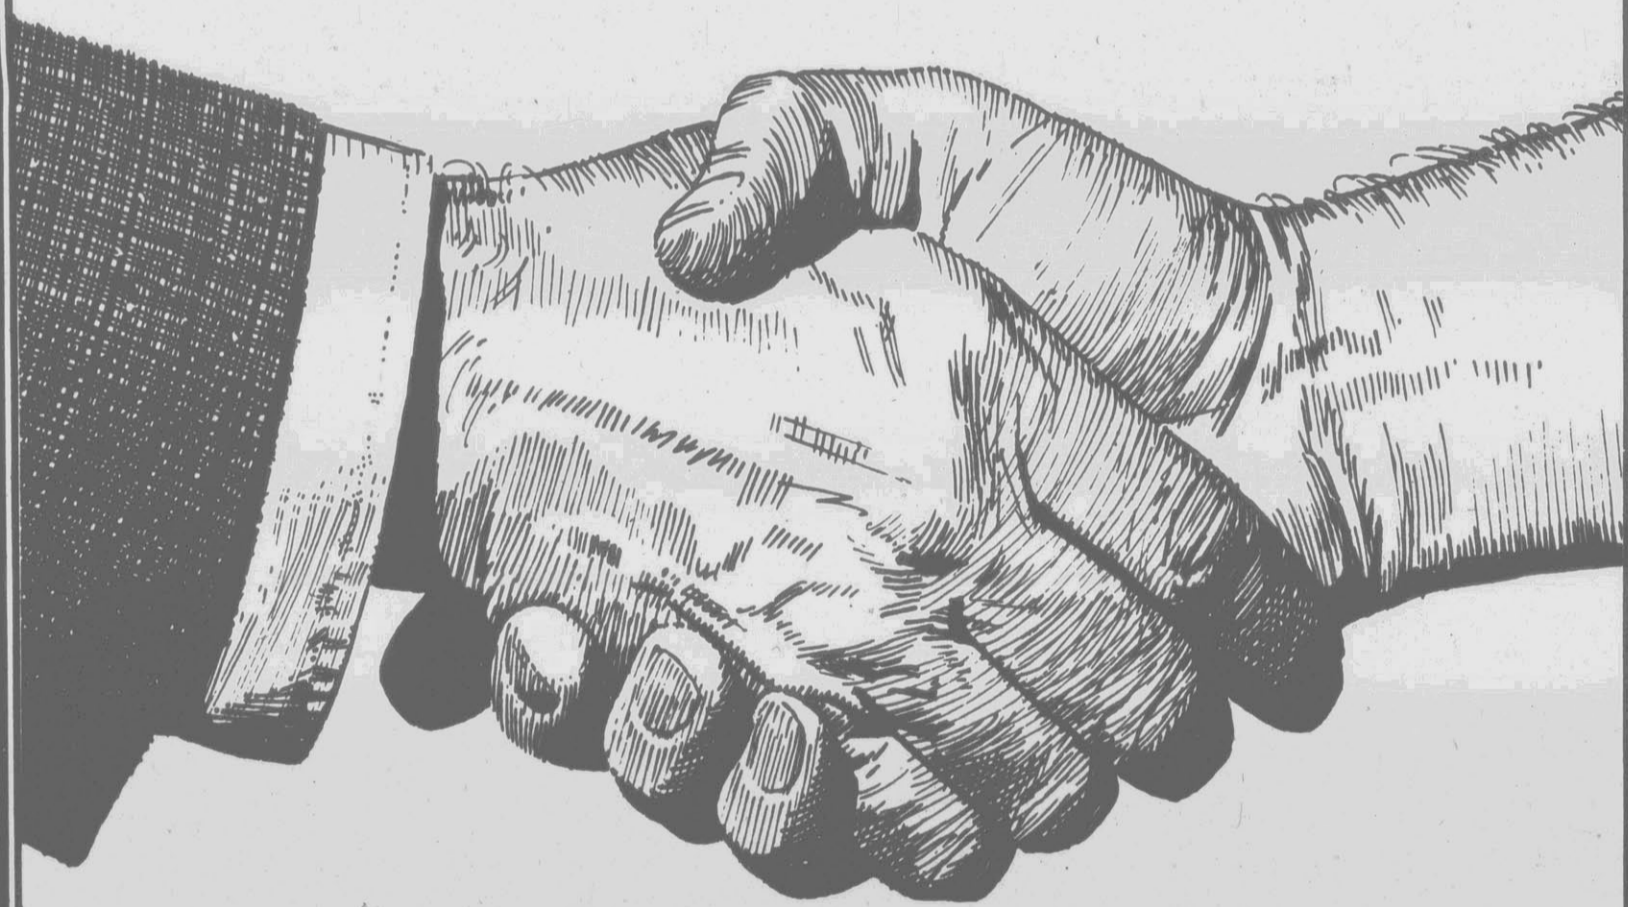

In their lawsuit, Kenneth David Jessup and Claudia Staniszewski say the department has a policy of using excessive force during arrests, and accuse Officer Kenneth Dollar of assaulting them during separate arrests last year.

The suit, filed in Durham County Superior Court Wednesday, contends that the city of Durham allows the use of excessive force by police officers because it does not properly screen public safety officer applicants, does not take appropriate action disciplinary actions against officers who use excessive force and fails to supervise officers properly.

According to the suit, Dollar confronted Jessup in a city parking lot on Sept. 9 and demanded without explanation that he produce his driver's license. Dollar then accused Jessup of driving with an expired license, the suit says.

According to the lawsuit, Dollar then slammed Jessup's head against the automobile, cutting his left eye and bruising his head. The blow shifted a plate that had been implanted in Jessup's head after an earlier injury and forced Jessup to undergo corrective surgery late, the suit said.

Protesters Chant 'Death To America' As Lebanon Explosion Victims Buried

By SAMIR F. GHATTAS
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Mourning Moslem families, followed by a procession of demonstrators shouting anti-American slogans, buried on Saturday victims of the car bomb explosion that killed 75 people and injured at least 250.

Protesters shook fists and chanted "Death to America, death to Israel!" as victims' bodies, wrapped in black cloth, were buried in a mass grave at the Rawdat al-Shadeedin cemetery about a mile from the explosion site.

The blast Friday at the Shiite Moslem suburb of Ghobeiri was the deadliest in Beirut since truck bombings of U.S. and French military headquarters on Oct. 23, 1983, killed 241 U.S. servicemen and 58 French soldiers.

Rescue workers dug three more bodies from a wrecked apartment building shortly before pallbearers bore the bodies of other victims to their graves.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack. Lebanese government officials and Shiite Moslem religious leaders blamed Israel, but offered no proof.

Israel's Cabinet secretary, Yossi Beilin, denied the accusation Saturday. Israel Television quoted him as saying, "Israel has not used in the past and will not use in the future the abominable methods of terror."

Black banners, hung on a damaged building, read "Made in USA," "Down with Israel. Down with USA."

The bomb destroyed an eight-story apartment building and damaged a mosque filled with worshippers gathering at dusk for prayers. Police estimated the car contained at least 330 pounds of explosives.

The explosion spread fire and destruction in the neighborhood. Butane gas canisters stored in an apartment blew up after the bomb blast, police said.

Those detonations hampered rescue operations that went on through the night. Four apartment buildings also caught fire, as did dozens of cars.

In other developments: —Five Israeli soldiers were wounded in an overnight guerrilla attack on their position at the Qasmiyeh Bridge over the Litani River — the boundary of Israel's occupation zone in south Lebanon.

The Israelis withdrew to the Litani last month in preparation for their complete withdrawal from Lebanon, which Israeli leaders have said they hope to finish by the end of the summer.

Israel invaded Lebanon in 1982 to destroy strongholds of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

—In Bikfaya, a Christian suburb northeast of Beirut, Syrian Vice President Abdel-Halim Khaddam met Lebanese Christian and Moslem leaders in an effort to mediate a disagreement over political reforms intended to end Lebanon's 10-year civil war.

At the cemetery where the car bomb victims were buried, most demonstrators and gunmen belonged to the dominant Shiite Amal militia and to the radical Hezbollah militia, led by Sheik Mohammed Hussein Fadlallah. They chanted "America, the great Satan! Death to America! Death to Israel!"

Fadlallah, who lives about 20 yards from the explosion, looked tired as he walked with a cane, flanked by dozens of bodyguards.

A spiritual adviser of Hezbollah, Fadlallah addressed the crowd among the pine trees, vowing to end American influence in Lebanon.

"We will protect the blood of the martyrs ... Let your suffering congest in your hearts to bring down whoever wants America to rule this country," he said through a bullhorn.

A few yards away, the remains of 30 victims, identified by white tags bearing their names, were lowered into one grave. Funerals of other victims were held separately or were delayed until bodies could be identified or families notified.

The crowd shouted "death" to Lebanese President Amin Gemayel and to the right-wing Christian Phalange Party, founded by Gemayel's late father, Pierre.

The anti-American demonstration included a chant praising Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Two militia jeeps mounted with anti-aircraft guns guarded the cemetery entrance.

At the explosion site, survivors sifted through the rubble of their apartments. They cleaned glass and threw burnt furniture into the street. Civil defense workers knocked down walls of a damaged building.

Mohammed Ali Jawad, a pharmacist, was in the back of his shop across the street when the car bomb exploded.

"People were screaming, hysterical. People were touching themselves to make sure they weren't wounded," he said.

Mass Said For Slain Drug Agent

CALEXICO, Calif. (UPI) — The family and friends of Enrique Camarena, the federal narcotics agent murdered by drug runners in Mexico, gathered Saturday for a memorial mass in the small border town where he was raised and began his career.

A Mass of the Resurrection was to be said at Our Lady of Guadalupe Church in the Imperial County desert town 115 miles east of San Diego that was plunged into mourning last week when it learned Camarena was dead. Police stood guard over the family home to keep people away.

Gilbert Chavez, auxiliary bishop of the Diocese of San Diego, was to conduct the Saturday afternoon service. Burial arrangements were private.

Camarena, 37, an agent of the Drug Enforcement Agency, was found dead on a Mexican ranch once used by drug smugglers. His body was brought back to the United States Friday in a flag-draped coffin amid full military honors.

Camarena was hustled into a car by four presumed drug smugglers outside his office in Guadalajara on Feb. 7. His body was found Tuesday night in a plastic bag on a nearby ranch formerly occupied by drug smugglers. Beside it was another bag containing the body of Alfredo Zavala, a pilot for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Agency.

U.S. officials said Camarena and Zavala had been beaten to death and the bodies were buried elsewhere, then dug up and dumped at the ranch.

HOME DESTROYED — Firemen battle a blaze that destroyed the home of Mrs. Artie Tutten of Route 3, Washington, Friday afternoon. Mrs. Tutten's son, J.W. Carrow, said power to the house went off just before 12:30 p.m. and his mother went across the road to his home. Carrow said she had left some grease on the stove

Kidnapper Collects, Then Dies In Accident

TOKYO (UPI) — A man who kidnapped a 6-year-old boy and held him for a $200,000 ransom was hit by a truck and killed Saturday while dashing across a street to pick up the loot, police in the southern city of Kobe said.

Masanori Watanabe, the grandson of a wealthy women's fashion wholesaler, was found unharmed minutes later in a locked dump truck parked in a field about a mile away.

Police in Kobe, a port city 300 miles southwest of Tokyo, said the abduction took place Friday but details were withheld until the child was found safe.

The kidnapper had demanded that the ransom be dropped at a bus stop bench in Kobe.

The money had not yet arrived when Sadami Yasuda, 26, dashed across a busy intersection at the collection point and was hit by a truck.

When police, who had the area staked out found the boy's name and address in Yasuda's pocket, they assumed he was the kidnapper.

Yasuda died at the scene, police said.

It was the 20th major kidnapping in postwar Japan and the first time any officer could recall a kidnapper being killed in a traffic accident.

"I hated the man at first but now I feel sorry for him," the kidnapped boy's father, Tadashi Watanabe, 37, told a news conference.

The boy told reporters he was not scared during the 33-hour ordeal. He said he ate a sandwich and "some bread" before his rescue.

"I wanted to go but I did not say that to (Yasuda)," he said.

Yasuda allegedly broke into the Watanabe home in Ashiya, a city just north of Kobe, at 4:45 a.m. Friday.

He entered the room where the child and his mother, Masako, 32, were sleeping, drugged her by covering her mouth with an ether-soaked cloth, and fled with the child, police said. The child's mother was not hurt by the kidnapper and the boy were gone before she could alert her husband.

About seven hours later, Yasuda allegedly telephoned the family demanding a $200,000 ransom, police said. Yasuda subsequently made more than 10 calls to the family, and they alerted police.

Wachovia BankLineSM

The prime-based line of credit up to $50,000 or more that's as easy to use as writing a check.

There's no easier way to borrow in North Carolina than Wachovia BankLine, a prearranged line of credit up to $50,000. Simply write a check — at any time, for any amount up to your credit limit.

BankLine is inexpensive, too. The interest you pay is tied to Wachovia's Prime Rate.* And unlike most banks, Wachovia bases your interest rate on your credit line, not the amount you borrow.

Wachovia also offers Equity BankLine, a line of credit of $10,000 or more based on the equity you have in your home. There are no loan origination fees, although the normal mortgage loan closing expenses apply when the line is established and at every 10-year anniversary.

BankLine	Your credit line:	Your interest rate:	APR for February is:
(unsecured or secured with liquid assets)	$10,000 or more	Prime + 1%	11.50%
	$ 5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%	12.00%
	$ 2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%	13.00%
Equity BankLine (secured by real estate)	$10,000 or more	Prime + 2%	12.50%

Your rate may vary monthly. If the Prime Rate goes down, so does your interest rate. But no matter how high the Prime Rate should go, under present North Carolina law the maximum Annual Percentage Rate (APR) you will be charged on unsecured lines is 18%; on secured lines, 15%. The minimum rate is 8% APR.

Talk to a Personal BankerSM soon about BankLine. Find out how easy and inexpensive borrowing can be.

Wachovia Bank & Trust

*"Prime Rate" refers to that interest rate set by the Bank from time to time as an interest rate basis for commercial and consumer borrowings. The Prime Rate is one of several interest rate bases used by the Bank. The Bank lends at interest rates above and below the Prime Rate.

Nicaraguan Overthrow Plot Sees 10 Accused

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — Ten Nicaraguan opposition and business leaders were summoned to state security headquarters Saturday to answer charges they were involved in a U.S.-sponsored plot to overthrow the Sandinista government.

Among those summoned by the State Security Directorate were the editor of La Prensa newspaper, Jaime Chamorro Cardenal, and Enrique Bolanos, president of the Private Enterprise Council.

Bolanos said the director-general of state security, Lenin Cerna, accused the opposition and business leaders of participating in a U.S.-sponsored plot to overthrow the Nicaraguan government.

All those called were among the signatories of a document by the opposition Nicaraguan Democratic Coordinating Council last year urging a national dialogue that would include the U.S.-backed rebels fighting to overthrow the government.

Eduardo Rivas Gasteazoro, president of the Coordinating Council, said Cerna accused those summoned of planning a meeting in the Costa Rican capital of San Jose with representatives of the CIA, opposition leader Arturo Cruz and Pedro Joaquin Chamorro to plot the overthrow of the Sandinistas.

Pedro Joaquin Chamorro, uncle of Jaime Chamorro, left his job as La Prensa editor in December and is now in self-imposed exile in Costa Rica.

The Nicaraguan government Thursday refused to allow Cruz into the country, saying that the CIA had planned to assassinate him on arrival and "blame the Popular Sandinista Revolution."

Both Rivas and Bolanos said the opposition and business leaders told Cerna they had no knowledge of a San Jose meeting.

"Yes, you do know," Bolanos quoted Cerna as saying. "And if you attend, you will suffer the consequences."

"This summons is very strange," added Rivas. "The Democratic Coordinating Council is in the civil struggle and that is why we are in Nicaragua, to work toward democracy."

Rivas said state security agents filmed the meeting with Cerna, which he added was cause for concern because "these gentlemen can use it to splice into other film."

An editor at La Prensa said Chamorro was prohibited from leaving as planned to attend a meeting of the Interamerican Press Association in Panama.

Among the others called to state security headquarters and accused of complicity in a coup plot were Ramiro Gurdian, vice president of the Private Enterprise Council; Eric Ramirez, vice president of the Social Christian Party; Luis Rivas Leyva, president of the Social Democrat Party, and Mario Rapacholi, president of the Nicaraguan Conservative Party.

The officials met with Cerna briefly and were released. All but Leyva attended the session at state security headquarters, Bolanos said.

Rivas Leyva's mother said her son was not in Managua Friday night.

"I'm nervous because the soldier that brought the summons acted a bit rude," she said. "I told him that Luis was not in Managua and he answered, 'You have to find him. This is an order.'"

The document signed by the 10 opposition and business leaders was similar to one signed last week in Costa Rica by rebel and opposition leaders that Cruz was reportedly planning to deliver to the Nicaraguan government.

That document, titled "Project Unity," gave the Sandinistas until April 20 to establish a dialogue with rebel and opposition leaders or face the consequences.

The document called for new elections, the separation of the Sandinista Front from the government, the elimination of the Sandinista Defense Committees and other measures opposed by the Nicaraguan government.

Mubarak Set For Meetings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak arrived in Washington Saturday for five days of meetings on topics ranging from the latest Middle East peace initiative to an expected request for $870 million in extra aid.

Secretary of State George Shultz greeted Mubarak on the grounds of the Washington Monument, where the two posed briefly for photographers before being whisked away in waiting limousines.

When official talks begin Monday, Mubarak is expected to ask the United States to soften its position in dealing with the Palestine Liberation Organization and press Israel, which refuses to meet with the guerrilla group, to enter negotiations.

Mubarak is scheduled to meet with Shultz, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and members of Congress on Monday.

Haydon, Schroeder Hear Accounts About The Death Of Heart Patient

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — The two men with permanent artificial hearts learned from news reports about the death of a young man who had received two human heart transplants and a blood pump implant, their hospital said Saturday.

Robert Irvine, a spokesman for the experimental Jarvik-7 heart program at Humana Hospital Audubon, said Bill Schroeder, 53, and Murray P. Haydon, 58, both were aware from television news reports of Thomas Creighton's death.

Both have become loyal television watchers, Irvine said.

Asked if either man with a mechanical heart had expressed any reaction to Creighton's ordeal in Tuscon, Ariz., Irvine said, "No. I just talked to Juanita (Haydon's wife) and she didn't even mention it."

Relatives of Haydon, who received his mechanical heart Feb. 17, have said they were keenly aware of the experimental heart implanted in Schroeder on Nov. 25 from news reports. Haydon's family lives in Louisville, where updates on Schroeder's condition at Audubon are a daily news staple.

Neither man has been well enough to leave the hospital grounds.

Schroeder, whose recovery has been hampered by a Dec. 13 stroke, occasional brain seizures related to the stroke and a two-week bout with an unexplained fever in early February, has ventured around the hospital grounds three times in his wheelchair — twice outside the hospital entrance and once for a brief van ride in the parking lot.

Haydon, a retired auto worker, appeared to be recovering nicely from his implant last month but then complained of fatigue. He had emergency surgery March 2 to stop bleeding near his mechanical heart.

Irvine said the isolation conditions that have existed around Haydon since his implant — requiring bedside visitors to wear sterile surgical gowns and masks — ended Saturday because fears of infection had subsided.

The relaxed requirements will allow Haydon to have more visitors in his coronary care unit, Irvin said.

"He'll be moving around more and exercising in the room," Irvine said.

Shuttle Door Is Damaged

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — Space agency engineers met Saturday to determine what repairs will be needed to fix one of the shuttle Discovery's cargo bay doors, damaged in an accident Friday that will delay this month's launch.

Charles Redmond, a spokesman for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said shuttle contractors from Tulsa, Okla., where the doors are built, and NASA engineers planned an assessment over the weekend to "determine the level of damage and what possible repair work will be needed."

"The presumption is by sometime this weekend when the orbiter payload bay door experts can get there, we will have their assessment as to the actual damage to the door," he said.

"Right now, we know we have punctured the (insulation) and the orbiter door skin in two areas. It's believed it can be repaired."

In the meantime, a "mishap investigation board" will continue its formal analysis of what went wrong to make sure a similar accident does not happen again.

Discovery had been tentatively scheduled to take off around March 28-29 with a crew of seven, including Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, on a revised mission to launch two satellites and put an interrupted launch schedule back on track.

But the accident Friday temporarily put those plans on hold and repairs are expected to push the launch into early April.

The incident happened in Discovery's hangar where the ship was being readied for the short trip to the rocket assembly building.

With the 60-foot-long payload bay doors closed, one of four overhead service platforms suddenly dropped from its stowed position, hit technician Gary Sutherland, who was standing on a raised platform by the shuttle, and then the shuttle's left cargo bay door.

Sutherland's left leg was broken in two places and he was taken to a local hospital for treatment.

The bucket of the service platform, used to lower technicians into the open payload bay during ground work, ripped two tears in the heat insulation blanket of the door and its skin.

Redmond said engineers believe

Correspondent Fired By CNN

NEW YORK (AP) — Veteran TV newsman Daniel Schorr says he was fired by Cable News Network after five years as a correspondent because CNN refused to guarantee his "journalistic independence."

DANIEL SCHORR

Schorr, 68, who gained a reputation as an investigative reporter during 25 years with CBS, was fired Friday after the network could not agree with him on a new contract, CNN President Burt Reinhardt said.

Schorr said the network refused to give him a clause, contained in previous contracts, barring demands that would compromise his professional ethics. He joined CNN in 1979.

Goetz Publicity

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernhard Goetz, who says he shot four youths on a subway train out of fear they were threatening him, has complained about news media attention, but the publicity also has caused trouble for a man unconnected with the case.

David Fleeger, who resembles Goetz, says he has been mistaken for Goetz four times and was chased through the Times Square subway station Thursday night, the New York Post reported Saturday.

Measles Put Damper On Spring Holiday

ELSAH, Ill. (UPI) — While thousands of college students across the country spend their spring break soaking up the sun, as many as 200 students at Principia College will remain on the measles-plagued campus.

Spring break began Saturday as usual for most of the student body, those with active cases of the infectious disease or who have refused a measles vaccine will remain on campus for the two-week period.

The school's students are of the Christian Science faith, which holds that disease is overcome by prayer.

There have been 111 verified cases of measles at the college since early January. The outbreak at the small school 30 miles north of St. Louis is linked to two deaths and was the likely cause of a third.

More than 500 people at the school have broken the faith and received measles vaccinations, allowing them to leave campus.

School officials say 26 students remain at the school's "special care unit" with active cases of the infectious disease.

For another 150 to 200 students who refused the shots or have never had measles, the recess will be no different than the self-imposed quarantine they've been under since Feb. 21.

Final exams began Friday and the 26 students in isolation were making special arrangements to complete the academic quarter.

Linda Cornell, a school spokeswoman, said some of the infected students took finals at the care unit. Others will finish their courses after classes resumed March 25.

"They're working out a variety of arrangements with their teachers as far as completing the quarter," she said. "Some will take incompletes."

On Thursday, a doctor was allowed on the quarantined campus for the first time since the outbreak began. Dr. Steven Wassilak of the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta was to file a report Monday on his observations.

Big Deficit Is Reported By Vatican

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican, in an effort to quash the "myth" about its wealth, reported Saturday it had a deficit of more than $29 million in 1984 and expects even more red ink this year.

Twelve cardinals of a finance oversight committee also disclosed that the Vatican bank had paid off a settlement in a major banking scandal without tapping other church resources.

Banking sources said the Vatican bank had agreed to pay between $240 million and $250 million to creditors of the collapsed Banco Ambrosiano, in which the Vatican was a large stockholder.

In their statement, the cardinals said they gave "special attention" to possible cost-cutting changes in the Roman Catholic church's central administration, but did not specify what the changes might be.

The statement regarding the preliminary figures came after the cardinals from around the world finished four days of meetings at the Vatican on Friday.

It said the figures showed the combined deficit for the church's worldwide activities, including Vatican Radio, was 58.4 billion lire, the equivalent of $29.2 million, last year.

The statement originally said the 1984 deficit was 57.8 billion lire. Spokesman Joaquin Navarro told The Associated Press in a telephone interview that the mistake was due to a typographical error.

"This deficit was covered in large part thanks to the Peter's Pence collection," the cardinals said. The collection, which last year came to just under $26 million, is the annual contribution from the faithful to defray the expenses of the Holy See. They said the rest of the deficit was made up by other Vatican funds.

The cardinals' committee added that the projected deficit this year would be 63.3 billion lire, or $31.6 million. The 1983 deficit was the equivalent of $30 million at then-current rates.

Committee members said the preliminary balance sheet for the day-to-day running of the Vatican city-state showed a small budget surplus last year, and was expected to break even in 1985.

Led by Vatican Secretary of State Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, the committee officially is known as the Council of Cardinals for the Study of Organizational and Economic Problems of the Holy See. Pope John Paul II formed the committee in 1981 to advise him on financial matters.

Last May, the Vatican confirmed it had reached an accord with creditors of Banco Ambrosiano, but refused to accept any responsibility for involvement in the 1982 collapse of Italy's largest private bank.

Banking sources in London and Rome said the Vatican Bank, officially known as the Institute for Religious Works, had agreed to pay about $250 million to Banco Ambrosiano creditors. But they said the amount could be less if it was paid off quickly.

"The council was fully informed about the transaction, the cost of which was completely covered by the Institute itself, without contributions from the Holy See and without deposits entrusted to the Institute being touched," the cardinals added.

Banco Ambrosiano collapsed after bank examiners discovered $1.2 billion in bad loans.

The Vatican maintains it was the victim of a "hidden project" by the late Banco Ambrosiano president, Roberto Calvi.

However, Italian officials and international bankers demanded the Vatican Bank cover some of the losses because of dealings between Calvi and American Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus, president of the Vatican bank.

The Vatican has been making public its annual budget deficit since 1981. Vatican officials said that is part of the pope's effort to eliminate "the myth" that the Vatican is wealthy and remind Catholics of the Holy See's need for additional revenue.

Facilities Damaged

AMHERST, Mass. (AP) — An early morning fire Saturday at Amherst College destroyed a $2 million gymnasium containing the school's basketball court, swimming pool, racquetball courts and indoor tennis courts.

No one was injured in the blaze, which was discovered by security officers at 1 a.m. and burned for four hours. The cause has not been determined.

The single-story structure, built in 1976, could not be saved after the vaulted ceiling collapsed, firefighters said. The building, which college spokesman Doug Wilson said was fully insured, had no sprinklers.

The small, private undergraduate school plans to rebuild the gym as quickly as possible, Wilson said.

Heels To Face Georgia Tech

UNC Holds Off Wolfpack, 57-51

ATLANTA (AP) — Defense and an offense that picked up the tempo in the second half were the keys to sixth-ranked North Carolina making it into its 15th Atlantic Coast Conference championship game Sunday against Georgia Tech, said Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith.

North Carolina got five points in the final 33 seconds from Kenny Smith to edge North Carolina State 57-51 Saturday in one ACC semifinal contest.

Earlier, Tech whipped No. 7 Duke 75-64 to make it to the title game for the first time ever.

"I thought we played very well in the second half, and played good defense the entire game," said Smith, whose Tar Heels scored 35 points after intermission after trailing 23-22 at the half.

Smith pointed at Brad Daugherty's defense on All-ACC forward

Lorenzo Charles, who was held to only five points on 2 of 10 shooting.

"Daugherty's defense on Charles was just outstanding. Believe me, he had help. No one person can stop Charles," said Smith.

He said neither team held the ball, but both teams shot poorly in the opening half, "one reason the score was so low. I never thought I would see such low scoring in a game with the clock."

North Carolina Coach Jim Valvano thought the low-scoring was due to both teams' being a bit tired.

"It was obvious to me that our club was tired and I also thought Carolina was tired," he said.

Valvano also felt the game might have been lost at the free throw line. North Carolina made 13 of 19 and State only made 5 of 12, including four straight misses by Cozell McQueen in the closing stages of the game.

"We had a couple of occasions in the second half where we could have taken the lead from the line. We didn't. I thought that was a big story for us," said Valvano.

North Carolina took the lead for good on a Steve Hale jumper with 3:05 left to play at 48-46.

Smith, who led North Carolina with 16 points, then cemented the victory with three free throws and a dunk in the final 33 seconds.

Spud Webb, who scored 12 first half points, led North Carolina State, 20-9, with 13, hitting only a free throw in the closing minutes.

The Tar Heels, 24-7, trailed 23-22 at halftime but broke out on top early in the second half and took the lead at 32-28 after a six-point run capped by Brad Daugherty's turn-around jumper with 15 minutes left.

But State fought back and regained the lead at 42-41 with 7:04 remaining on a layup by Nate McMillan. The lead went back and forth until the Tar Heels went ahead to stay on Hale's 15-foot jumper.

The Wolfpack took its slim halftime lead on Terry Gannon's 24-foot bomb at the buzzer. Webb's 12 points were high for State at the half, but no other teammate had more than two points.

No one on the North Carolina squad had more than four points at the half as both teams shot poorly. State connected on only 38.5 percent and the Tar Heels hit only 40 percent.

North Carolina, seeking its 11th ACC championship, will be facing a Yellow Jacket squad Sunday that will be making its first appearance in the title game.

Navy Tops Richmond For Title

In Title Game For First Time

Price Leads Tech By Duke

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. (AP) — After finishing 24-8 last year and being overlooked for post-season play, Navy's Midshipmen have determined their own fate for the 1985 NCAA basketball tournament.

"It's a lot better than waiting till 5:30 Sunday for a phone call which never came," Navy Coach Paul Evans said after his team clinched an automatic NCAA berth by capturing the ECAC-South tournament Saturday with an 85-76 win over Richmond's Spiders. "We can't explain the feeling of disappointment last year when we didn't get a post-season bid."

Sophomore forward Vernon Butler scored 29 points en route to being named the tournament's most valuable player as Navy, 25-5 and the ECAC-South's top seed, locked up its first NCAA appearance since 1960.

Richmond, the defending ECAC-South champion and No. 2 seed in this year's tournament, fell to 20-10.

The Spiders built a 44-39 halftime edge and held the lead until the 10:21 mark of the second half, when a 5-foot turnaround jumper by David Robinson gave the Midshipmen the lead for good at 63-62.

Evans said one key was Navy's switch from a variety of defenses in the first half to a triangle-and-two after intermission.

"The triangle-and-two defense threw them off in the second half," he said. "The key was Butler. He was a man among boys out there in the second half. He played three great games mentally."

Butler, who scored 17 of his 29 in the final 20 minutes, also grabbed eight rebounds while Robinson, a 6-foot-10 sophomore center and the player of the year in the ECAC-South, contributed 24 points and a game-high 13 rebounds. Cliff Rees and Carl Liebert added 10 points apiece for the Midshipmen.

Richmond got a game-high 31 points from senior guard Kelvin Johnson. Junior forward John Newman contributed 23 points before fouling out, and senior guard Greg Beckwith added 10 points and a game-high 13 assists.

"The tempo got out of our hands in the second half," said Richmond Coach Dick Tarrant. "We wanted to keep the game in the 60s, not 80s. In the first half, we were up by 10 and had control over the flow, but we let it slip to five at the half. Maybe fatigue got to us."

Tarrant said the Spiders, who registered back-to-back 20-win seasons for the first time in 31 years, "hope to get consideration for the NIT (National Invitation Tournament). The kids would love to play."

Joining Butler, Robinson, Johnson and Newman on the all-tournament team was William & Mary senior guard Keith Cieplicki.

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins admitted he was hard to live with before Saturday's 75-64 triumph over No. 7 Duke in the semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament, but afterwards, he was his usual bubbly self.

All-ACC guard Mark Price led Tech with 24 points and three other starters were in double figures as the Yellow Jackets made it into the ACC title game for the first time since entering the league six years ago.

Top-seeded and ninth-ranked Tech will meet No. 6 North Carolina in Sunday's championship clash. The Tarheels defeated 18th-ranked North Carolina State 57-51 in Saturday's other tournament semifinal.

"I was a bit of a pain today because I knew if we didn't fight hard and play well that Duke would put it to us," Cremins said. "The kids tolerated me today and stayed with the play."

After the emotional victory, Cremins was his smiling self again, raving about his players.

"It's a great victory for us. We've come so far and worked so hard and earned this one today. It means a lot in Atlanta," he said. "But, there's still another game and you're only as good as your last game."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski applauded Tech's play, but was critical of the referees, who whistled 44 fouls, 25 against Duke. Four players fouled out, including three Blue Devils.

"There was more body checking out there than in a hockey game," he said. "I've gone with the gag rule all season, but the season is over now and I think we need to take some steps."

"The officiating today was a disgrace to the conference, and I'm upset for our players," said Krzyzewski.

Tech, 23-7, led 32-26 at halftime but Duke, 22-7, behind the hot-shooting Jay Bilas and Johnny Dawkins, finally caught the Yellow Jackets and went ahead 42-41 on a Dawkins' jumper with 11:02 remaining.

Tech's Bruce Dalrymple, however, knocked in a 15-foot jumper to give the Yellow Jackets the lead for good 24 seconds later.

Duke made another run to within 53-51 on a layin by Bilas before Price knocked in a pair of free throws with 5:01 left and Yvon Joseph and John Salley followed with baskets for a 59-51 edge.

Tech, whose 23 victories tied the school record for most in a single season first set by the 1970-71 squad, played without starter Duane Ferrell, who suffered ligament damage in the Yellow Jackets' 55-48 victory over Virginia in the ACC opener.

Ferrell's replacement, Scott

Petway, scored only six points but Dalrymple added 16, Salley 15 and Joseph 12.

Bilas led Duke with 21 points and Dawkins added 19 for the Blue Devils, who played all but the first 53 seconds without Mark Alarie, the Blue Devils second leading scorer and rebounder. He suffered a hip pointer in Duke's opening round victory over Maryland 86-73.

Hoyas Slug Way Past St. John's

NEW YORK (AP) — Top-ranked Georgetown, despite getting only 18 minutes of playing time from All-America center Patrick Ewing because of foul trouble, defeated second-ranked St. John's 92-80 Saturday night to win the Big East Conference tournament title for the fourth time in six years.

The defending NCAA champion Hoyas will carry a 12-game winning streak and a 30-2 record into the NCAA basketball playoffs next week. The Redmen, regular-season Big East winners, were beaten for the second time by the Hoyas in 10 days and dropped to 27-3.

The game was marred by five technical fouls, two each against the head coaches, John Thompson of Georgetown and Lou Carnesecca of St. John's — all in the first half.

With 7:16 remaining in the second half, reserve Ron Rowan of St. John's and Reggie Williams of Georgetown were ejected for scuffling.

Michael Jackson led five Georgetown players in double figures with 19 points, followed by Bill Martin with 18 and David Wingate with 17.

Georgetown never trailed, leading 47-40 at halftime, and by as much as 14 points in the second half when the Hoyas built their lead to 78-64 on Martin's three-point play with 8:03 remaining. The closest St. John's could get after that was 84-76 on Chris Mullin's field goal and two free throws with 2:40 left.

Ralph Dalton, Ewing's 6-foot-11 backup center, played effectively in the All-America's absence, scoring nine points and grabbing eight rebounds. The 7-foot Ewing had 11 points while Williams tossed in 14.

Mullin scored 25 points to pace the Redmen, but was virtually silent after intermission when he scored only six of his points. Bill Wennington added 16, Walter Berry 14 and Mike Moses 10 for the Redmen.

In the first half, the Hoyas took a 22-13 lead, but Mullin was able to cash in at the free throw line after Georgetown's Perry McDonald was called for an intentional foul. Thompson was slapped with his first technical. Mullin made three of four free throws and before play resumed, Thompson was hit with another technical. Mullin sank two more free throws and Wennington drove in for a layup to bring the Redmen within 22-20.

The score was tied at 26 and 28, but after that the Hoyas led the rest of the way.

Georgetown previously won the Big East championship in 1980, 1982 and 1984. Georgetown and St. John's have been the only teams ranked No. 1 in the nation this season. The Redmen replaced the Hoyas after a 66-65 victory on Jan. 26, but the Hoyas moved to the top again after crushing St. John's 85-69 Feb. 27.

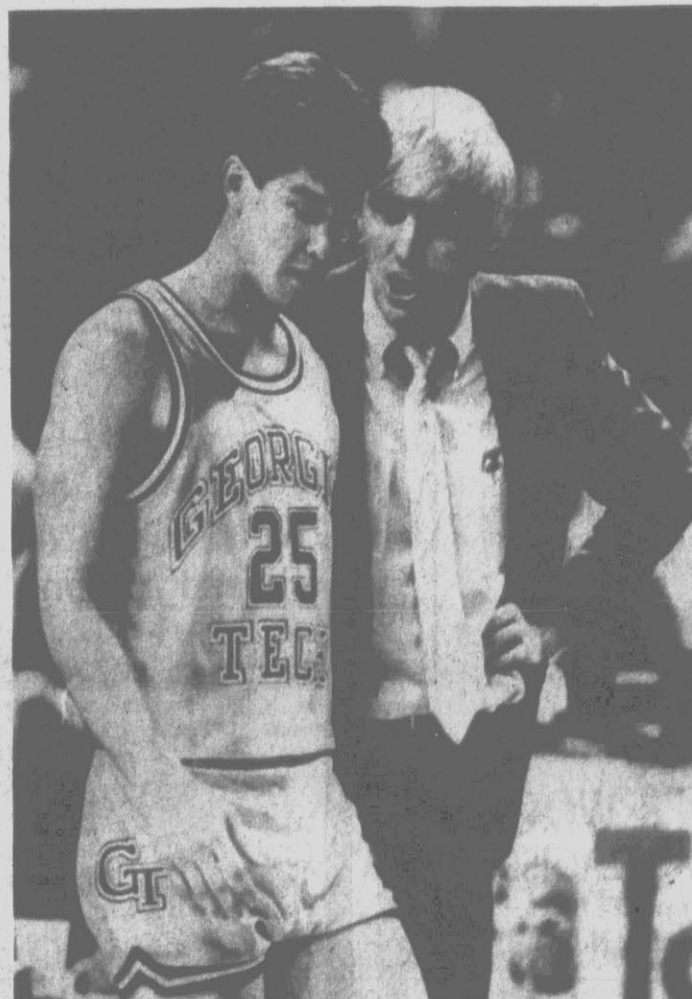

ECU's O'Neil Eighth In NCAA

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Lee McNeil, a freshman sprinter from St. Pauls, N.C., finished in eighth place in the 55-meter dash finals at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Meet yesterday, the lone East Carolina qualifier for the finals.

McNeil finished the event in a time of 6.29 seconds. The time, however, did not break the school record of 6.20, set by McNeil in the Eastern Kodak Invitational in January.

Eagles' Owner To Make Sale

Sooners Win Without Tisdale

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Tim McCalister and Anthony Bowie kept Oklahoma together while Wayman Tisdale sat out most of the second half with fouls Saturday, and the fourth-ranked Sooners withstood a furious bid by Iowa State to beat the Cyclones 73-71 in the title game of the Big Eight postseason basketball tournament.

Tisdale, the three-time Big Eight player of the year, scored 14 points in the first half to help the Sooners to a 34-33 lead, but went to the bench when he collected his fourth foul less than 90 seconds into the second half.

Iowa State's David Moss made a quick jumper to bring the Cyclones within one point at 36-35, but the Sooners managed to hold the lead and build it to four at 63-59 when Tisdale returned with 5:19 left.

Oklahoma, the Big Eight regular season champion for the second year in a row, never led by more than eight points over the underdog Cyclones, who beat 10th-ranked Kansas 75-59 in the semifinals Friday.

With a school record 21 victories, Iowa State retained hopes of an at-large bid to the NCAA tournament when invitations are announced Sunday.

Bowie, a slender 6-foot-6 swingman, hit a basket and two free throws to boost the Sooners to a five-point lead at 48-43. Following an Iowa State bucket, Bowie pulled off a three-point play for Oklahoma and McCalister hit a pair of unanswered shots to give the Sooners breathing room.

Barry Stevens, Iowa State's all-time leading scorer, finished with 23, while Jeff Hornacek and Jeff Grayer scored 10 points apiece for the Cyclones before fouling out.

Tisdale, the Big Eight's all-time leading scorer, got six points in the final five minutes and finished with 20, while McCalister had 18 and Bowie 12.

Oklahoma's Linwood Davis dropped in two free throws with 24 seconds left to put the Sooners on top 73-67. A pair of baskets by Gary Thompkins in the closing seconds cut the final margin to two.

Shockers Upset Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — With Xavier McDaniel powering in 34 points and pulling down 13 rebounds, Wichita State outlasted a furious Tulsa rally to upend the No. 15 Hurricane 84-82 for the championship of the Missouri Valley Conference postseason basketball tournament Saturday.

The victory gives the Shockers, 18-12, the league's automatic berth in the NCAA tournament. Tulsa fell to 23-7 and also expects an NCAA invitation.

The Shockers broke open a close game late in the contest with a 13-2 run that staked them to a 78-63 advantage. Wichita State still had an 82-68 lead with 2:50 left when the Hurricane mounted a final charge.

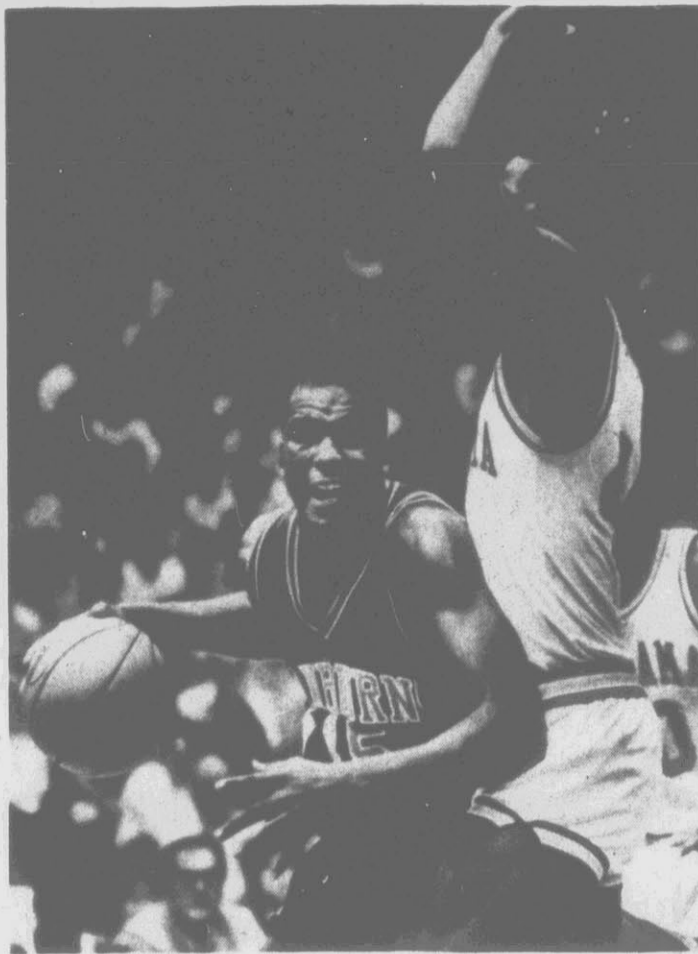

Tulsa's Steve Harris, who bombed 37 points — 24 in the second half — picked up a loose ball in the midst of a scramble on a Wichita State inbound play in the closing seconds, but his off-balance shot bounced off the rim and bounded out of bounds as the buzzer sounded.

Tulsa took a 39-37 halftime edge, but Wichita State put together a 43-42 lead early in the second half and never relinquished it. The Shockers hit 70 percent of their field goals in the second half and finished with 64 percent for the game, while Tulsa managed just 46 percent.

Guard Mike Arline and Karl Papke added 12 points each for Wichita State. Herb Johnson added 16 points and 13 rebounds for the Hurricane.

Auburn Takes SEC's Crown

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Gerald White hit two free throws with 10 seconds remaining in overtime and Frank Ford had a dunk at the buzzer as Auburn edged Alabama 53-49 Saturday to capture the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament.

The victory for the emotion-driven Tigers, playing their final season under Coach Sonny Smith, gave them the SEC's automatic berth in the upcoming NCAA championship tournament.

It was the fourth victory in as many days for the Tigers, making them the first team since the SEC renewed its postseason event in 1979 to claim the title after playing a first-round game.

The Tigers also became the seventh different team to win it since 1979 — rolling by Mississippi, conference champion Louisiana State and Florida before disposing of Alabama Saturday.

The Tigers, 20-11, missed an opportunity to win in regulation when Carey Holland failed on a free throw attempt with one second remaining.

Auburn gained possession on the opening tap of overtime and held the ball until Chuck Person missed from the top of the key with 2:13 to go.

Arkansas Upsets SMU For Title

DALLAS (AP) — Freshman reserve Byron Irvin scored 18 points and Joe Kleine muscled in 17 to carry Arkansas into the finals of the Southwest Conference Post-Season Basketball Classic with a 68-55 victory over No. 20 Southern Methodist Saturday.

Texas Tech, the regular season SWC champion, advanced to Sunday afternoon's title game earlier Saturday with a 72-63 victory over Texas A&M behind guard Bubba Jennings, who scored 23 points. Arkansas is now 21-11 for the year, while SMU tumbled to 22-9.

The Mustangs rallied from a 13-point deficit to cut the margin to 39-37 in the second half on a Carl Wright jump shot before 14,185 fans in Reunion Arena. But the Razorbacks were equal to the pressure as Kleine came back with five points and Irvin hit two quick buckets.

SMU center Jon Koncak scored nine points and had 11 rebounds in his duel with fellow Olympian Kleine — who had two rebounds — before fouling out with 1:59 to play. Wright led SMU scoring with 20 points.

Arkansas' tenacious man-for-man defense kept the Mustangs' run-and-gun out of gear as the Razorbacks' built a 31-20 halftime lead.

The 20 points represented SMU's lowest scoring in a half this season. The previous low was 21 against Rice.

Williams Mills added 11 points for the balanced-scoring Arkansas attack.

The winner of the SWC Classic is automatically assured an NCAA playoff berth.

Lady Pirates Split Pair

East Carolina's Lady Pirates split a pair of softball games with Wayne State University yesterday. Wayne State took the opener, 3-2, but the Lady Pirates came back to claim the second game, 7-0.

Pam Young limited Wayne State to just two hits in the shutout. Stacey Boyette gave up but four hits in her losing effort in the first game, but didn't get much support on offense.

The Lady Pirates got only three hits in the first game, with Young, Wendy Ozment and Boyette each getting one. East Carolina had only four hits in the nightcap, Tamara Franks, Ozment, Sandy Kee and Boyette each collecting one.

The split left the ECU women with a 3-2-1 record on the season. They play host to Francis Marion today at 2 p.m. in a doubleheader on the ECU softball field.

Simmons Paces Tiger Victory

By The Associated Press
Rookie Nelson Simmons' home run triggered a four-run rally that lifted the defending World Series champion Detroit Tigers to a 7-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox in exhibition baseball action Saturday.

In other games played Saturday on the Florida spring training circuit, Floyd Rayford clubbed a three-run, ninth-inning homer to give the Baltimore Orioles a 5-3 win over the New York Yankees, and Jerry Reuss pitched three innings of shutout ball and stroked a homer in the Los Angeles Dodgers' 7-0 victory over Sanjungs of Korea.

Jeff Burroughs and Kelly Gruber each hit two-run homers to give the Toronto Blue Jays a 7-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox. Steve Rogers began his comeback from an off year with three innings of shutout ball in the Montreal Expos' 4-0 victory over the Atlanta Braves, and Mike Stenhouse contributed a two-run single to the Minnesota Twins' 6-1 victory over the Houston Astros.

In another game, Kansas City bested Edison Community College 4-1.

In Arizona's Cactus League, Mel Hall drove in the winning run with a bases-loaded single in the ninth inning as the Cleveland Indians shaded the San Francisco Giants 5-4, and catcher Jody Davis singled in the winning run in the seventh inning as the Chicago Cubs beat Milwaukee 3-2.

A double by Kirk Gibson gave Detroit a run in the first off Boston starter Dennis Boyd, but Boston tied it Jim Rice's long homer in the fourth.

The Tigers took a 3-1 lead in the seventh when Larry Herndon, who doubled, and Chris Pittaro, who singled, came around to score on wild pitches by Boston reliever John Henry Johnson.

An inning later, Simmons homered off relief ace Bob Stanley, and the Tigers added three more runs on a single by Rusty Kuntz, a double by Dwight Lowry, an intentional walk and singles by Ron Johnson and Pittaro.

Last year with Triple A Evansville, Simmons an outfielder, hit .307 with 22 homers and 83 RBI.

Rayford, a seventh-inning defensive replacement, connected off Yankee reliever Joe Cowley as Baltimore overcame a 3-1 New York lead. A solo homer by Larry Sheets made it 3-2 and Mike Young singled and Len Sakata reached on an error in the ninth to set the stage for Rayford.

Reuss, a left-hander who experienced arm problems much of last season, pitched the opening three innings against the Koreans visitors and his three-run homer highlighted a four-run Dodger uprising in the second inning.

Dave Stieb, who signed an 11-year contract for a reported $25 million on Friday, pitched three innings for Toronto, allowing one hit and striking out three White Sox batters.

Burroughs, purchased from the Oakland A's during the off-season, homered against Chicago starter Tom Seaver in the first inning. Gruber, who played most of last season for Syracuse in Class AAA, homered off Ron Reed in the seventh inning. Ron Kittle homered in the seventh off reliever Bill Caudill for the only White Sox run.

Rogers, saddled with a 6-15 record last season, struck out two and allowed two hits in three innings for the Expos. Montreal got the only run it needed in the second when U.L. Washington singled, stole second and scored on a single by Mike Fitzgerald.

The Twins exploded for five runs in the first inning of their Grapefruit League opener against Houston. The Twins put together four singles and two walks off losing pitcher Charlie Kerfeld. Stenhouse drove in two with a single to center and Tom Brunansky, Gary Gaetti and Tim Teufel each had run-scoring singles.

Four Twins pitchers held Houston to five hits. Starter Frank Viola allowed the only run, the result of a pop-fly double to left by Harry Spilman and two groundouts.

Trinity Captures Tourney Crown

ROCKY MOUNT — Jimmy Powers grabbed off a key rebound and returned it to the basket with four seconds remaining in the game to give Trinity Christian School a 44-42 victory over Immanuel of Edenton Saturday and the Northern Division championship of the N.C. Christian Athletic Association.

Trinity's girls also won their divisional championship, 50-28. Trinity rolled out to a 14-10 lead in the first quarter of the boys' game, boosting that to 27-20 by intermission. In the third period, however, Immanuel rallied and knotted the score at 34-34.

In the final period, the two continued on an even pace, and with seven seconds to go Edward Everett was fouled with a 42-42 tie. Everett missed the shot, but Powers was there to grab the loose ball and put it back in for the winning basket.

Mike Reynolds, named the tournament's Most Valuable Player, led the Trinity effort with 16 points. Mike Ange had 20 points to pace Immanuel, while Robbie Holland added 10.

Trinity's girls had an easier time of it, gaining a 10-8 lead after one quarter of play. In the second period, Trinity outscored Immanuel, 13-2, and rushed out to a 23-10 lead. That was extended to 39-20 at the end of the third period and Trinity outscored Immanuel once more, 11-8 in the final quarter.

Renee Deans led Trinity with 22 points while Mary Harris added 17. Theresa Harrell and Ginger Belch each had 10 for Immanuel.

Trinity will play host to the NCCAA's state tournament next Friday and Saturday. Six games, the first round of play and the consolation games are planned for Friday, with the championship games on Saturday.

North Lenoir Nips Greene

SNOW HILL — Steve Quinn climaxed a four-run first inning with a home run as North Lenoir gained a 6-3 baseball victory over Greene Central yesterday.

The loss dropped the Rams to 0-2-1 on the young season.

With one out, Bobby Simmons reached on an error and Stan Robinson's fly to the outfield was also errored, allowing Simmons to score. John Copeland doubled, driving in Robinson and Quinn finished things off with a two-run homer. All four runs were unearned.

Greene Central came back with one in the bottom of the first. With one gone, Eric Collins reached on an error and took second on a wild pitch. Roger Sutton was safe on still another misplay, allowing Collins to score.

The Rams added one in the second, only to see the Hawks counter that in the third. The sixth run crossed in the fourth. Greene Central's other run came over in the sixth.

Copeland and Quinn each had two hits to lead North Lenoir. No one had more than one hit for Greene Central.

The Rams travel to Greenville Rose on Tuesday.

Memphis State Holds On To Win

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Baskerville Holmes pumped in 24 points, including a retrieve of a missed shot at the end of regulation, as fifth-ranked Memphis State needed an overtime period to outlast a determined Florida State 90-86 in the championship game of the Metro Conference basketball tournament Saturday.

Memphis State, 26-3, scored the first five points of the extra period on a 3-point play by center William Bedford and a short jumper by guard Andre Turner to take an 81-76 lead. Florida State, 14-16, could come no closer than three points the rest of the extra period.

Memphis State had to go the extra period without their star Keith Lee, who fouled out with 1:21 left in regulation. Lee finished with 19 points, three shy of what he needed to break the Metro Conference career scoring mark of 2,333 held by former Louisville star Darrell Griffith.

Holmes' rebound shot tied the score at 76 with one second left in regulation. Florida State failed to get a shot off.

The Seminoles outscored a complacent Memphis State 20-5 late in the second half to take a 69-67 lead with 3:10 left on a layin by guard Dean Shaffer, who finished with 24 points. Florida State center Alton Lee Gipson, bothered by stomach cramps that forced him to leave the game temporarily in the second half, had six points and guard Joe Farrar had 10 of his 18 during the run.

Farrar had given Florida State a 76-74 lead with 20 seconds left. Memphis State's Turner came down and took a short jumper and missed, got his own rebound and shot again. That shot also missed, but Holmes was waiting on the other side of the basket to put the shot back in.

Gipson finished with 26 points. Turner added 11 points for Memphis State, while guard Vincent Aske and Bedford had 14 each.

UNLV Rolls To The Title

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Two-time Pacific Coast Athletic Association Player of the Year Richie Adams scored 23 points and grabbed 14 rebounds Saturday to lead 11th-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas to a convincing 79-61 victory over Fullerton State in the 10th annual PCAA Basketball Tournament.

The Rebels led all the way in raising their record to 27-3 and earning an automatic berth in the NCAA Basketball Tournament, which begins next week. Pairings for the 64-team tournament will be announced Sunday.

UNLV scored the game's first six points and, after Kerry Boagni scored for Fullerton, ran off another six points to make it 12-2 after four minutes of play. At that stage, each of the Rebels' starters had scored at least two points.

With Adams leading the way, the Rebels extended their advantage to 28-9 midway through the first half. The Titans weren't closer than 12 points after that.

Adams, a 6-foot-9 senior, scored 15 of his points in the first 12:55 of play, sparking UNLV to a 33-18 lead at that stage. It was 46-25 at halftime and Fullerton, which finished the season with a 17-13 record, was unable to mount a serious threat in the final 20 minutes.

Anthony Jones and Ed Catchings added 18 and 13 points, respectively, for UNLV. Kevin Henderson led Fullerton with 20 points, all but six of them in the first half.

Crowd Of Players Have Shot To Win

Shares The Lead
Curtis Strange chips onto the green on the 18th hole Saturday during the third round of the Bay Hill Classic golf tournament. Strange parred the hole for a 208, five-under-par total, sharing the lead with Fuzzy Zoeller. Strange had a 66 for the day. (AP Laserphoto)

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — There are 24 players, including some of golf's more celebrated names, locked within five strokes of the lead entering Sunday's final round of the Hertz Bay Hill Classic.

"Anybody within five shots can win," said Tom Watson.

Fuzzy Zoeller already is a winner, at least by his own reckoning.

"I'm a winner every morning when I can get out of bed and walk and go to the golf course and swing a club," he said.

Zoeller made birdie on five of his last six holes for a 66 that lifted him into a tie for the lead with Curtis Strange.

A few months ago he could do none of those things. He could not get out of bed. He could not walk. He could not swing a club.

His career, highlighted by victories in the 1979 Masters and last year's U.S. Open, was in jeopardy.

The easy-going Zoeller, who won the American national championship in a playoff last summer, twice was hospitalized with severe back problems later in the year and, in September, underwent major surgery.

He didn't swing a club until January, didn't start heavy practice until last month and returned to Tour competition less than three weeks ago.

And now, with a 208 total, five shots under par for three trips over Arnold Palmer's Bay Hill Club course, he is tied for the lead. Strange, winner of last week's Honda Classic, tied him with a third-round 68.

Zoeller's success, his high standing in this event, "might surprise some people, but it doesn't shock me," Fuzzy said.

"I played in pain so long, got so accustomed to pain, that the little aches and pains I have now, the pains of healing, don't bother me."

"Listen, I've been hitting the ball well. It's just the little mental errors I make. I know I'm gonna hit some bad shots, at least until I can get my mind to where I can concentrate for 18 holes," he said.

One of those mental lapses came on the sixth hole, where he drove into the water and made double bogey-7.

"It was a bad shot," he shrugged. "It was a shot that deserved a double bogey."

But Zoeller hit it close to the flag on the back, scoring four of the five birdies in his closing burst after his approach shots had come to rest less than eight feet from the cup.

While the rebounding Zoeller was making his move at the end, those same tough, finishing holes extracted their toll from some of the game's more celebrated names.

Andy Bean, in a tie for the lead, hit into the water on the 18th and made double bogey.

Tom Watson, within a shot of the top, 3-putted from 8 feet on the 16th.

"A stupid mistake," he said. And Greg Norman, the Australian shark-shooter who now owns a home on this course, kept his ball dry but took four strokes to get it on the putting surface at the 18th and fell three off the pace.

Watson and Bean, Andy Magee and Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion, shared third, two shots back of the co-leaders at 210. Magee had a 68, Bean 69, Nelson and Watson 70.

They were followed by Norman and six others at 211, very much within striking distance. Norman had a hard-won round of 70.

He was tied with Dan Pohl, whose 64 was the best round of the tournament, Mark Lye, Keith Ferguson, Payne Stewart, second round leader Paul Azinger and Corey Pavin. Lye had a 68, Ferguson 69, Stewart 70, Pavin 72 and Azinger 74.

Seve Ballesteros, the British Open titleholder who started the round three shots off the lead, struggled to a 75 and was at 215.

After matching par over the front side, Zoeller began his run at the top with an 8-iron shot to three feet on the 13th. A 2-iron stopped within four feet of the cup on the next hole and he made it three birdies in a row with a 7-iron to six inches on the 15th.

The 16th went to a par, and he closed a 35-footer on the 17th and holed it with an eight-foot birdie putt on the 18th.

Bonnie Lauer Unfamiliar With Tournament's Lead

COSTA MESA, Calif. (AP) — Bonnie Lauer, who's won just once in 10 years on the women's golf tour, found herself in a strange spot after Saturday's third round of the $330,000 Uniden Invitational.

"I don't think I've ever led going into the final round," Lauer said after firing a 4-under-par 68 to break away from the field.

"The only tournament I won, I think I was three shots behind going into the last round," she said, trying to recall that distant victory, eight years ago.

Lauer's three-round total of 209, 7-under-par over the 6,085-yard Mesa Verde Country Club course, gives her a four-shot lead over Alice Miller heading into Sunday's final round.

Lauer was the LPGA's Rookie of the Year in 1976, but, after winning the Patty Berg Classic the following year, she failed to live up to that early promise.

She'd been bothered in recent years by a nerve problem in her wrists, which affected her sense of touch in both hands. But that problem, Carpel Tunnel Syndrome, was corrected by surgery two years ago.

"My hands feel fine now," she said. "I had lost a lot of my touch."

Lauer, who had drawn a small gallery Saturday until she started widening her lead, said she hoped for a large following for the final round.

"When there are a lot of people watching, you don't want to make a fool of yourself," she said with a grin.

Her game a model of consistency over one of the more challenging courses on the LPGA tour, Lauer had shared the lead after the opening two rounds.

She went into the third day of play tied with Miller, Patty Sheehan and Jane Blalock at 3-under-par.

Miller, who's won three tournaments since joining the tour in 1978, shot a third-round 72. Sheehan, the LPGA's leading money-winner thus far in 1985, had a 73 to head into the final 18 holes at 214.

Donna Caponi, with a third-round 70, was another stroke back at 215, and Blalock had a 75 to slip to even par, seven strokes off the pace.

Nancy Lopez, defending champion in the tournament, shot a 73 Saturday and also is at even par after the first three rounds.

The 34-year-old Lauer, whose only LPGA victory came in 1977, shared the first-round lead at 70 with Miller and Pat Meyers.

A win in the event, the second richest on the women's tour, would earn Lauer a $49,500 paycheck, by far her largest ever and almost equaling her top annual winnings — $51,348 last year.

A national collegiate champion at Michigan State in 1973, Lauer had a bogey-free third round as she moved out to a two-shot lead on the front nine with a pair of birdies and extended her pad to four shots with two more birdies after the turn.

Lauer, mastering a course that's characterized by slick, tricky greens and tight fairways, has had just three bogeys for the 54 holes played thus far.

During five previous LPGA events played at Mesa Verde, none of the golfers have been able to finish the tournament with sub-par totals.

Also in the group with Lopez and Blalock at even par after three rounds were Besty King, Pia Nilsson and Shirley Furlong.

Meyers, continuing to slide back after her opening 70, shot 75 to fall eight shots back of Lauer.

Illini Claim 2nd Place

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Center Ken Norman scored 20 points as 14th-ranked Illinois earned second place in the Big Ten Conference on Saturday with an 82-56 victory over Minnesota.

The win, the 24th in a row at home for Illinois and its season finale, gave the Illini a 12-6 Big Ten record. They are 24-8 overall.

Minnesota finished the Big Ten season at 6-12, the same record as last year, and was 13-15 overall.

Illinois held a 35-24 halftime lead, although the Gophers had led through the first 6½ minutes. After sputtering early, Illinois' shooting and rebounding improved to the point where Illinois shot better than the Gophers in the first half by 47 percent to 39 percent and won the rebound battle 19-12.

Minnesota got no closer than nine points in the second half as Illinois avenged a Big Ten season-opening loss to the Gophers at Minneapolis.

Doug Altenberger scored 15, Anthony Welch added 12 and Bruce Douglas had 10 for Illinois.

Tough Decisions Surround Women's NCAA Field

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The mystery surrounding the draw in this year's NCAA Women's Basketball Tournament will end Sunday when the 32-team field is announced.

During the past week suspense has been building over the selection committee's two major decisions. One involves choosing the 15 at-large teams to join 17 conference champions advancing to the tournament as automatic qualifiers.

The second, and perhaps more controversial, will be the selection of eight teams to be seeded nationally. These schools can be placed anywhere in the country as the top two teams in each of the four regional tournaments.

The mechanics call for the committee to select a No. 1 team and then pair it with the committee's No. 8 team. The No. 2 would be matched with the No. 7 team, etc.

For example, if Texas, the No. 1 team in The Associated Press poll, was named as the NCAA's top selection, and if Ohio State was declared the committee's eighth national team, the two would then be placed 1-2 in either the East, Midwest, West or West region. The remaining six teams in each of the areas would be held to their geographic location, if possible.

Nora Lynn Finch, who heads the NCAA tournament committee, indicated it could be difficult for her group to select a clear No. 1 team. If that situation occurs, Sunday's women's announcement, to be televised nationally on CBS at 12:30 p.m. EST, may refer to four No. 1 teams and four No. 2 teams, one in each region.

"We don't have the luxury of national television exposure for our teams as the men's committee has with their's," Finch said. "They get to see most of their candidates, some of them several times."

The 64-team field for the NCAA Division I Men's Tournament also will be announced Sunday.

"We have to make a lot of our decisions based on profiles put together on paper," Finch continued. "We rely on head-to-head results, power ratings, strength of schedule, how teams finished in their conferences and what they did in their postseason playoffs. We also have regional advisory committees, which include coaches who gives us their viewpoints.

"Indeed, we could find it hard to declare a No. 1 team after we look at the data. It's possible that we may announce a cluster of No. 1 seeds, instead."

So, theoretically, Texas could end up being seeded lower to give the Longhorns an easier, though still dangerous, path to the finals, which they're hosting in Austin on March 29-31. The committee could also move Texas around with less controversy by dropping the 1-8 pairings and just announcing four top teams.

But before the group comes to any decision on the national seeds, it must first deal with the selection of the 15 at-large teams.

"Selecting these teams are almost as tough as seeding the upper portion of the bracket," Finch said. "Last year I thought we had more viable teams than we had available berths. Now, it's even worse because we're seeing an increase in the number of quality teams...."

"Obviously, we need to expand the bracket to accommodate this growth. If we can get good attendance from the first round through the finals, perhaps we would be allowed to increase the field to 40 teams next year. But it's going to take support from the spectators to get the job done."

Finch cited several criteria for squeezing the final teams into this year's field.

"When we get down to the last two or three, we look at what they did against each other and what they did against teams we've already selected," she said.

The teams that would appear to be on the fringe are Drake, Virginia, Temple, Iowa, Texas Tech and San Diego State.

Virginia and San Diego State both have been mediocre down the stretch. Temple came out of nowhere to finish second in the Atlantic 10. Iowa has been tantalizing people since it drew a record 22,000 fans several weeks ago. But the Hawkeye chances have dimmed considerably since they were blasted by Indiana last Sunday.

Even if Iowa is selected, the committee might find it difficult to award one of the 16 home sites in the first round.

"Our tendency is to stick with the upper seeds in each region," Finch said, without discounting a potential Iowa home site altogether.

She indicated the slim chance that the Hawkeyes could be paired with a school that might be seeded higher but couldn't deliver the $5,000 guarantee required for a first round site.

Mandlikova Gets Second Victory

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Fourth-seeded Hana Mandlikova, fresh off her victory over Martina Navratilova, defeated Catarina Lindqvist 6-3, 7-5 Saturday to capture the $150,000 U.S. Women's Indoor tennis championship.

The victory was Mandlikova's second of the year and came just about 16 hours after she defeated Navratilova 7-6, 6-0 in the semifinals. It also earned her a top prize of $30,000.

"I think my fighting spirit is much better than it was," said Mandlikova. "If something doesn't work, I don't lose my head but I try my hardest."

Mandlikova never appeared in jeopardy against her 21-year-old Swedish opponent, winning the first set in 30 minutes.

The players split the first four games, with each woman losing service once. Mandlikova held service in the fifth game to take a 3-2 lead and broke Lindqvist in the sixth game to go up 4-2.

Lindqvist broke back in the seventh game to make it 4-3. But Mandlikova broke her in the eighth game to take a 5-3 lead and then held serve to win the set.

There were five service breaks in the second set, the most crucial coming in the 10th and eleventh games.

Trailing 5-4, Lindqvist reeled off four straight points to break Mandlikova, tying the match 5-5 with a backhand down the line.

"I didn't have any confidence at all in my serve," said Lindqvist. "First I tried to hit my serve in, and she hit winners. Then I had to go for winners myself."

Mandlikova came right back in the next game and took a 0-40 advantage before Lindqvist rallied to bring the game to deuce. But the Czechoslovakian ripped a cross-court winner and broke the 5-foot-5 Swede, who botched a return.

"When it was five all I was not nervous at all," said Mandlikova. "I just tried to hit the ball the same way I did in the first set. I was just really into the match mentally, so I broke her back."

Mandlikova was taken to deuce in the 12th and final game, but captured the match when Lindqvist hit the net with a backhand, a shot that failed her frequently during the match.

Lindqvist said she watched Mandlikova beat Navratilova on Friday night and didn't like what she saw.

Injuries Nag ACC Semifinalists

ATLANTA (AP) — The four teams in Saturday's semifinals of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament not only had to overcome their opponents — they had to contend with an assortment of injuries collected in the first round.

Top-seeded Georgia Tech, which took a 55-48 victory over last-place Virginia in the tournament opener, had the biggest loss of all. Freshman Duane Ferrell suffered a torn ligament in his right knee and not only missed Saturday's game, but will miss the rest of the season.

Duke knocked off Maryland 86-73, but forward Mark Alarie and center Jay Bilas limped off the court with ailments that they hope mended sufficiently to help them cope with the Yellow Jackets in Saturday's game.

North Carolina needed an overtime to get by Wake Forest 72-61. In the dressing room following the action, center Brad Daugherty had an ice pack on his right shoulder.

After North Carolina State's 70-63 triumph over Clemson, guard Anthony "Spud" Webb was being treated in the Wolfpack locker room for a leg injury. In addition, forward Lorenzo Charles was slowed by a virus which could play a key in the Wolfpack-Tar Heel encounter.

Ferrell suffered his injury in the first half and Coach Bobby Cremins thinks that might have kept his Yellow Jackets from pulling away from the Cavaliers.

"I think Ferrell's injury got us out of sync mentally because our numbers are not very large to start with," Cremins said. "I thought we got off to a good start. I thought we almost put Virginia away. We had about a 15-point lead and we just couldn't put them away."

Actually, Georgia Tech held a 13-point lead late in the first half before Virginia began to whittle its deficit to 44-42 on Olden Polynice's hook with 6:40 left. That was the best Virginia could do, however, and the Yellow Jackets hit seven of 10 free throws to advance into the semifinals.

Ferrell's replacement is Scott Petway, who started 24 of 29 games last year, but who had started one of Georgia Tech's games this year prior to the tournament.

"Scott Petway can do the job," Cremins said. "He has the experience."

Bruce Dalrymple paced Georgia Tech, 22-7, with 15 points. Reserve Jim Miller led the losers with 16 points and Polynice scored 13 as the State's Grossman Blanks Pirates With Six-Hitter

By WOODY PEELE
 Reflector Sports Editor

N.C. State's Paul Grossman limited East Carolina to just six hits — three of them in the ninth inning — as the Wolfpack gained a 6-0 baseball victory over East Carolina's Pirates Friday afternoon.

The loss was the first of the year for the Pirates, and snapped a five-game winning streak. State boosted its record to 8-4.

East Carolina, which had scored a record 27 runs two nights earlier, could have used a few of those against the Wolfpack, but while it was Grossman's work that clogged up the ECU offense, the Pirate defense was its own worst enemy.

"There's two things I can say," new Pirate coach Gary Overton said about his first head coaching loss, "Grossman threw a very good game, but our defense was awful. It allowed runs to score and that was the key to the game. Grossman was the reason for our lack of offense, but there is no reason for our lack of defense."

The Pirates committed three errors, had a pair of wild pitches and a passed ball. Of the six State runs, two were unearned, and three of the earned runs came off starting pitcher Daniel Boone.

Boone, a sophomore, was making his first collegiate start after having played in the outfield last year. "We started Boone because he looked the best after our first three in our scrimmages," Overton said. "We can't change the schedule to suit the rotation and we didn't want to break rotation for this game. We threw a bunch of people the other night, and they certainly weren't ready for this game. I really thought (Danny) Culpepper (who came on in relief and went seven and a third-plus innings) did a good job for us. He threw well and mixed his pitches well."

State got only four hits off Culpepper during his stay on the mound and two of the three runs scored against him were unearned.

The Wolfpack, however, had mastery in Grossman, who scattered three hits through the first eight innings. He walked but three and struck out nine. Only one runner reached second in the first eight innings. He gave up three singles in the final frame, but then retired the side on an infield grounder to preserve the shutout.

State scored three times in the first inning. Bob Marczak led off with a bloop, just over the jumping Boone on the mound, dying just behind the hill in the grass for a single. Marczak stole up and scored on a one-out double to right by Doug Strange. Strange took third on a passed ball and Mark Clendonia beat out a bunt down the third base line. Turtle Zaun was hit by a pitch, loading the bases and a wild pitch let Strange score. Mark Withers walked to reload them and Overton pulled Boone for Culpepper.

Culpepper, however, walked Jim McNamara, forcing in Clendonia, giving State a 3-0 lead.

Two more runs crossed in the fourth. McNamara walked and courtney runner Jay Yvars moved up on an out, scoring on a double to center. Alex Wallace reached on an error and Strange reached on a fielder's choice, allowing Marczak to score for a 5-0 lead.

The final run scored in the sixth. Dickie Dalton reached on an error and was sacrificed up. Double two away, Strange got his second double of the day, off Mark Shank's glove in left center, scoring Dalton.

East Carolina took a rare Saturday off yesterday and will return to action today at 2 p.m. hosting Fairleigh University. The game is the first of a series to be played each day this week.

"I don't think this game will effect us," Overton said. "They'll bounce back and play hard."

Sore Leg Doesn't Stop McKay

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — A sore leg undid one defending champion Friday in the qualifying round of the 21st annual NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships, but Antonio McKay of Georgia Tech was undaunted by similar misfortune. "If I'm able to run, I'm going to go for it," said McKay, an Olympic bronze medalist in the 400 meters who warmed up for Los Angeles with a 46.46-second victory in the event at the indoor meet last year. Lamed by a left hamstring pull, McKay slowed up in the last 100 meters of his heat and failed to overtake Manhattan's Willie McLaughlin, who finished first in the heat in 47.29 seconds to McKay's 47.33. "I think I can go for it," McKay said. "I tried to pick it up ... It started to tighten, but I didn't want to stop. Then it just grabbed and I had to let him go."

Meanwhile, Olympic triple jump silver medalist Michael Conley led 10 Arkansas athletes into Saturday's finals by qualifying in both the long jump and triple jump as the Razorbacks took aim on a successful title defense. Washington State and Baylor had six finalists, and Tennessee had five.

Arkansas nipped Iowa State 38-36 last year for the men's team title. Nebraska faced an uphill struggle in its quest for a third straight women's crown after Angela Thacker withdrew from all events. Thacker, a junior, hurt the back of her left kneecap practicing the long jump Tuesday.

Meet records were set in the 3,000 meters by Kevin King of Georgetown and in the men's and women's 1,500 meters by Paul Donovan of Arkansas and Shelly Steely of Florida. Donovan was timed in three minutes, 46.68 seconds, leading an all-out assault on the previous 3:52.83 set by Iowa State's Bob Verbeck in 1984, the first time the event was held in the indoor meet. The other seven qualifiers all broke Verbeck's record, paced by the other heat winner, Jim McKeon of Richmond, in 3:47.46.

The same thing happened in the 3,000, where King's 7:57.13 was seven seconds faster than the 8:04.20 standard of Washington State's Peter Koech set last year, but Steely's 4:21.13 time was only a fraction better than the women's record.

McKay's 1984 time in the 400 meters also was a record, but Friday the sophomore was far off his past form, which included a 44.71-second mark outdoors in the Olympic trials. Michael Franks of Southern Illinois posted the fastest time of the three-heat qualifier — 47.13 — but did not expect McKay to be there at the finish line today.

"He's the type of person who's going to compete no matter what. I'm not counting anybody out," said Franks, who finished third last year just three-hundredths of a second behind McKay.

Franks also was the meet's fastest entrant with a 45.73-second qualifying time.

Thacker, who stunned favored Carol Lewis of Houston last year in the long jump and placed second in the women's 55-meter dash, said she knew after the injury she might have to skip the competition.

"I am disappointed — not just because I can't compete against Carol, but because I just wanted to compete," Thacker said.

Lewis holds the American indoor and outdoor long jump records and took only one leap to qualify at 21 feet, 9 inches and also ran second in her heat to qualify for the 55-meter hurdles final.

Lewis had vowed last year and again less than three weeks ago that she would not compete in this meet because NCAA officials made her change her socks when they displayed a commercial emblem during the 1984 meet.

"We're going for the team title — that's the reason I'm here," she explained.

The imperturbable Conley prepared for his defense with only two tries in the long jump and one in the triple, closing out the latter competition with a 54-11 effort.

"It was a relaxed jump," he said. "I figured 54 feet would make the finals. I was smooth on the runway and fluid in the pits."

He said he only problem was concentrating during a two-hour delay because officials were running behind.

Jumping in the silver spikes he has favored since his second place in Los Angeles, the 22-year-old Conley sailed 25-9/4 for second in the long jump before coming within nine inches of his meet record in the triple jump.

Trinity Gains Tourney Finals

ROCKY MOUNT — Trinity Christian School had little trouble in rolling past Elizabeth City Immanuel Friday night in the first round of the N.C. Christian Athletic Association's North Division championship tournament, 66-25.

Trinity moved on into Saturday afternoon's championship game, facing Edenton Immanuel, while the Trinity girls, with a first round bye, were also to face Edenton for the title.

Trinity jumped out to a 15-0 lead in the first period and was in no difficulty at any time after that. By the end of the first quarter, they were up, 17-4, and increased that to 29-15 by halftime.

In the third period, Trinity's lead climbed to 52-19, and they outscored Immanuel, 14-6, in the final quarter.

Timmy Peaden led the Trinity scoring with 15 points while Jimmy Powers added ten. John Creet led Immanuel with 10 points.

Trinity will be the host school for the state tournament, to be played next weekend in Greenville, and will receive an automatic berth for both the boys' and girls' as the host, regardless of the outcome of the divisional championship games.

W. Craven Tops Indians

W. Craven Tops Indians

VANCEBORO — West Craven High School outlasted Chocowinity's Indians Friday, gaining a 17-11 baseball victory.

It was the opening game of the season for the Tribe, which got only one hit during the afternoon. That came off the bat of Darren Waters in the second inning, when Chocowinity scored five of their 11 runs.

The Indians took advantage of 16 walks and one hit batsman to put runners on base and also were helped along by a number of passed balls and wild pitches.

West Craven, which wrapped up the game in the fifth inning by scoring six runs, banded out 11 hits against two Tribe pitchers.

Chocowinity is scheduled to return to action on Thursday against Bath, but there is a probability that the game will be rescheduled due to the Bath girls' basketball team's participation in the Regionals that same day.

Injuries...

Len Bias scored 22 points and Adrian Branch 21 for Maryland, 23-11.

Two technical fouls were crucial in the Wake Forest-North Carolina game. The first, assessed against Coach Dean Smith, helped an 8-0 Wake Forest run that gave the Demon Deacons a 47-39 lead with 7:36 left. The second technical foul was called against Wake Forest's Charlie Thomas, who hung on the rim to avoid falling on Tar Heel Warren Martin, who was knocked down on a blocking call. Kenny Smith hit the free throw and Joe Wolf added a jumper that brought the Tar Heels to within 47-46.

Dean Smith wouldn't comment on the technical that made the difference for the Tar Heels, but Wake Forest's Carl Tracy didn't hesitate.

"I felt the technical foul was a turnaround," Tracy said. "It really broke our backs. I'd have to look at the rule book, but to avoid possible injury maybe he should have come down on the player. I don't know."

Referee Hank Nichols, who called both technicals, said he had no choice but to whistle Thomas.

"There is no rule allowance of possibility of personal injury or for a player lying underneath," Nichols said in a prepared statement. "Whether it is right or wrong, I called it by the rule."

The call overshadowed Joe Wolf's second half. Wolf scored all 12 of his points in the second half and had a follow shot with 60 seconds left that set up the overtime.

The call also overshadowed Delaney Rudd's 24 points, 18 of which were in the last 25 minutes. Wake Forest is 15-13 while North Carolina is 23-7.

Meanwhile, Daugherty sat in the locker room tending to his problem. "I've just got a little bruise on my arm," he said.

Terry Gannon's jumper with 4:54 remaining broke a 59-59 tie and led the Wolfpack into its meeting with the Tar Heels. Gannon, a senior, had six of N.C. State's last 11 points and finished with 12 points behind Anthony "Spud" Webb's 18. Nate McMillan added 10 for the Wolfpack.

Vincent Hamilton, who had 10 points at halftime, was the victim of a change in Wolfpack defensive strategy in the second half and finished with 12 points. Grayson Marshall and Glenn Corbit benefited from the change — Corbit score 13 in the half and 22 overall, while Marshall had 10 in the period and finished with 12.

Bertie Tops Lady Jags

WINDSOR — Bertie High School's girls' softball team rolled up a 17-9 victory over Farmville Central Friday, their second of the week over the short-handed Lady Jaguars.

With five players — three of them starters on last year's squad — still sidelined with continued play of the Farmville basketball team in the regionals, the Lady Jags are finding out what some of the other players can do.

No one of Farmville's team had more than one hit in the game, while Vernell Speller had two in four trips to lead Bertie. Rosemary Foy also cracked a solo homer for the Lady Falcons.

Now 0-2, the Lady Jaguars travel to North Lenoir on Tuesday.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's boys' tennis team rolled up a 6-3 victory over Wilson Beddingfield Friday afternoon, remaining unbeaten in three matches.

Beddingfield captured the #1 singles matches, having to win tie-breakers in both sets, and got one other singles match along with the #1 doubles event. The Rams won the remaining matches handily in the singles and didn't have all that much trouble in the two doubles wins.

Now 3-0, the Rams travel to East Carteret on Tuesday.

Summary:

- Greg Franks (B) d. Steve Harrison, 7-6 (5), 7-6 (11-9).
- Jimmy Sauls (GC) d. Greg Scott, 6-3.
- Mark Hall (GC) d. Richard Holland, 6-2.
- Reggie Ridley (B) d. Brian Minchew, 6-0.

Jaguars Lose To Bertie Again

WINDSOR — Bertie Senior High School handed Farmville Central its second straight defeat of the early baseball season Friday, gaining a 7-5 victory.

Bertie earlier claimed a 5-4 win over the Jaguars in their first meeting.

The Falcons took the initial lead with a run in the first inning. Terry Bunch walked and reached second when Andrew Ryan's grounder was bobbled. Ron Perry then singled to score Bunch.

Farmville came back in the top of the second, scoring twice for a 2-1 lead. Brian Huber walked and Mark Wooten singled. Robert Evans got a hit to score Huber and Hugh Moore reached on an error, scoring Wooten.

Bertie, however, tied it up with one in the bottom of the second. Farmville went back out in the top of the fourth with two runs, leading 4-2.

But Bertie then took command for good, scoring five runs in the bottom of the fourth. Perry led off with a walk and Mark Bunch was hit by a pitch. After a sacrifice, two straight passed balls allowed both runners to score. John Williams then walked as did Al Pierce. Kevin Hayes singled, leading the bases. Two runs scored on Terry Bunch's double and Ryan singled to score to bring Hayes over with the seventh Falcon run.

Farmville got one more in the sixth on a solo homer by Dennis Tripp, but fell short in its rally. Brian Windham, Wooten, and Moore each had two hits to lead Farmville, while no one had more than one hit for Bertie.

Mullin, Ewing Do Their Jobs

By BARRY WILNER
AP Sports Writer

Chris Mullin did his job with passing instead of shooting. Patrick Ewing did it like he always has — with muscle.

Mullin scored only 14 points — he's averaging 19.5 — Friday night but he posted 11 assists, helping Walter Berry to 22 points as the second-ranked Redmen blitzed Villanova 89-74 in the semifinals of the Big East basketball tournament. The victory earned St. John's a third shot at No. 1 Georgetown — the teams are 1-1 this year — as the Hoyas downed No. 13 Syracuse 74-65. Ewing, the 7-foot All-American center, had 15 points and 12 rebounds and a near-knockout of Syracuse guard Dwayne "Pearl" Washington.

"What fight?" Ewing said, ignoring his tiff with Washington in the first half. With the game six minutes old and tied 10-10, Washington punched Ewing in the midsection under the Georgetown basket and Ewing retaliated but missed a punch before falling to the floor. "That's over with. I don't wish to get into that."

"I imagine it was the most exciting thing that happened in the game," said John Thompson, coach of the 29-2 Hoyas, who faced the Redmen Saturday night. "I think any time you get an emotional game with a lot at stake emotions are going to flare and we have a tendency to make more out of it than we should."

Said Washington, "He hit me with two shots. He hit me in the jaw and I reacted with a punch. He hit me again in the jaw, but that was my reaction, too. I know he didn't hit me on purpose, it was a reaction. I tried to step back but I don't think I'm Ali. I don't think the incident made him play any harder, he's the type of player who always plays hard."

So does Mullin, who was at his playmaking best Friday.

"He gets 11 assists. He's smart, he was passing. When he can't beat you one way, he beats you another," St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca said.

Elsewhere on a busy night of tournament action, the Atlantic Coast Conference quarterfinals saw Georgia Tech beat Virginia 55-48; Duke 86, Maryland 73; North Carolina St. 70, Clemson 63, and North Carolina 72, Wake Forest 61 in overtime. Saturday's semifinals had

No. 9 Georgia Tech against No. 7 Duke and sixth-rated North Carolina against No. 18 N.C. State.

At Kansas City, Mo., No. 4 Oklahoma routed Missouri 104-84, but 10th-ranked Kansas fell to Iowa State 75-59 to set up Saturday's Big Eight final.

The Metro finals Saturday matched No. 5 Memphis State against Florida State. The Tigers beat Louisville for the third time this season, 81-74, and Florida State took Cincinnati 75-65 in the semifinals.

In the Southeastern Conference, which has featured upsets all week, Alabama and Auburn surged into the finals at Birmingham. Saturday's intrastate matchup was secured when Alabama belted No. 17 Georgia 74-53 and Auburn nipped Florida 43-42.

No. 11 Nevada-Las Vegas survived by a 60-59 score over San Jose State in Friday night's semifinals at Inglewood, Calif. The Runnin' Rebels opposed Fullerton State, a 56-54 victor over Fresno State, in Saturday's Pacific Coast Athletic Conference final.

No. 15 Tulsa played host to Wichita State Saturday for the Missouri Valley crown.

No. 16 Loyola, Ill., downed Xavier, Ohio 65-61 to earn a spot in Saturday night's Midwestern City Conference showdown at Tulsa, Okla., with Oral Roberts, which eliminated Evansville 74-69.

In the Atlantic 10 semis, it was Rutgers 78, Duquesne 53, and Temple 62, St. Joseph's 61. Host Rutgers played Temple Saturday for the automatic bid to the NCAA tourney.

The Big Sky at Boise, Idaho, pitted Idaho State, which beat Northern Arizona 89-86, against Nevada-Reno, a 79-67 winner over Boise State.

Saturday night's ECAC North title game had Boston University at Northeastern. In the ECAC South, Navy faced Richmond at Williamsburg, Va.

Mid-American Conference semifinal winners were Ohio University (57-55 over Kent State), and Miami, Ohio (91-70 against Ball State). They met last night at Toledo, Ohio.

The Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference title game Saturday featured North Carolina A&T against Howard.

Pirate Tankers Set New Records

CLEVELAND — East Carolina University's swimmers failed to win a title in Friday action at the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming and Diving Championships, but did set three new freshman and one varsity record.

The top individual finisher for the Pirates on the second day of the three day meet was Patrick Brennan, who finished fourth in the 400-yard individual medley with a time of 4:09.01, a new ECU freshman mark.

The other two freshmen records came in the 100-yard butterfly where Bruce Brockschmidt finished seventh in 51.68, and in the 100-yard breaststroke where Lee Hicks took seventh in 59.10.

The 400-yard freestyle relay team of Keith Kaut, Kevin Hidalgo, Brockschmidt and Chris Pittelli took fourth place with a time of 3:04.95. Kaut, on the opening leg, swam a 45.81, which gave him a new varsity record.

Other ECU placers included:

•100 butterfly: Gregor Wray, 12th in 52.38; Hidalgo, 14th in 52.63.

•200 freestyle: Pittelli, sixth in 1:41.25; Kaut, 11th in 1:42.95; Andy Cook, 14th in 1:44.75.

•400 IM: David Robaczewski, 11th in 4:15.48; Stratton Smith, 12th in 4:16.41; Eric Hawkins, 15th in 4:29.92; and Richard Wells, 16th in 4:23.60.

Pittsburgh continued to lead the ten-team field with 497 points while West Virginia held to second with 440. East Carolina is still third with 325, followed by St. Bonaventure 301; Marshall 259; hosting Cleveland State 209; Maine 186; Villanova 171; UNC-Wilmington 119; and Rutgers, 49.

Eagles Sale May Come Soon

MIAMI (AP) — A deal to sell the Philadelphia Eagles may not be completed until "sometime next week," team owner Leonard Tose said in confirming for the first time that the entire National Football League franchise is up for sale.

"I will not remain in any capacity. I don't want to remain. It's time to move on," Tose said Friday in Miami, where he reportedly was working out the details of a sale to Miami Beach auto dealer Norman Braman.

Tose, without referring to Braman by name, said, "No agreement has been reached."

"Every day there are different problems," said Tose, who must repay a $12 million bank loan by April 1. "I didn't think that it would take this long. It may not be settled until sometime next week."

Earlier this week, the AP learned from sources that Tose had agreed to sell out entirely to Braman for $65 million.

A source close to the club hinted Friday that the flamboyant, 70-year-old Tose may still be fighting to retain a piece of the team he has owned since 1969, but Tose insisted later in the day that "the entire team is for sale."

Joe Browne, NFL director of information, said the league had not been informed of any deal being finalized.

"We expect the issue to be discussed at our league meetings starting Sunday in Arizona," Browne said from New York, referring to the league's annual winter meetings in Phoenix.

NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle had said a deal could not be approved at the Phoenix meetings because the league would undertake a "thorough investigation" of any prospective buyer.

Any deal to sell the team would need approval from 21 of the 28 NFL team owners.

Bobby Robinson Named Tiger Athletic Director

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Bobby Robinson, named Clemson University's athletic director in the midst of a controversy many consider a matter of academics vs. athletics at the school, says its obvious "we've got to get some things together."

Robinson, who has worked in Clemson's athletic department for 12 years, will succeed Bill McLellan as athletic director. Walter Cox, dean of student affairs, announced Friday.

The appointment comes after major changes in administration at Clemson. The school's football program is just coming off two-years of NCAA probation for recruiting violations and a prescription drug-dispensing scandal caused the indictments of three former Clemson coaches Monday.

"Obviously, we've got to get some things together," Robinson said during Friday's opening round of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament. "We've got to convince the faculty and everybody else that we're just another part of that university."

He said that's a challenge he looks forward to. "We've got some work to do in the coming weeks. We will rearrange the staff slightly, but in general we want to do the things that will make Clemson a fine university."

McLellan, Clemson's athletic director for 14 years, resigned after a board of trustees meeting March 1 and was granted a request for reassignment within the athletic department.

Clemson President Bill Atchley also resigned during the trustees meeting because, he said, the trustees refused to support his plan to remove McLellan from the athletic department entirely and to restructure the department.

Atchley's resignation is effective July 1.

Robinson has been serving as acting athletic director since Feb. 15, when McLellan took a leave of absence.

Atchley, who approved Robinson's appointment, said he has "a great deal of confidence" in the new director.

"I think this is an excellent choice, and one that gives me a good feeling about the future of the department," he said.

"Bobby Robinson quickly emerged as the most qualified candidate for the job," Cox said. "In fact, two other leading candidates withdrew their names in deference to him."

An advisory committee met for nearly two hours Thursday to review applications and unanimously agreed that Robinson was the best candidate for the job, Cox said.

"I will do everything in my power to make sure the program moves forward in a very positive manner," Robinson said.

Robinson, a 38-year-old Columbia native, graduated from Furman University in 1968 with a bachelor's degree in business and political science.

In 1970, Robinson was hired by Clemson's office of student affairs. He moved to the athletic department as an administrative assistant in 1973.

Since then, he has held the positions of business manager, assistant athletic director, golf coach and finally associate athletic director, a position he was named to in 1982.

As associate athletic director, Robinson was responsible for budgeting and administration of Clemson's football and basketball teams.

Eastern Teams Seen Dominant

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Eastern teams figure to dominate Sunday when the field is announced, for the biggest, richest NCAA Basketball Tournament ever.

CBS plans live coverage of the announcement at 4:30 p.m. EST, when the nine members of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee emerge from three days and nights of meetings with their selections, pairings and seedings.

Eleven at-large berths have been added to bring the field to 64. Thanks largely to a new three-year, $96 million television contract, tournament teams will share a record $17.5 million in net receipts.

The Final Four teams that assemble for the semifinals March 30 in Lexington, Ky., will each be guaranteed $708,000, which compares with $648,630 that went to the 1984 Final Four and $133,381 awarded to the semifinalists in 1975. The championship game will be April 1.

Twenty-nine bids will go automatically to champions of 29 Division I conferences or the winners of the conference postseason tournaments. This leaves the committee 35 at-large bids to issue, and most observers feel the lion's share will go to four conferences — the Big Ten, Atlantic Coast, Southeastern and Big East.

Officials of the Big Ten and ACC have said their leagues could each get as many as six invitations, while followers of the Big East and Southeastern Conferences are hoping for four or five apiece. The record is five, by the Big East and the Big Ten two years ago and matched last year by the ACC.

In another new wrinkle, there will be no first-round byes awarded to the top seeds in each of the four regions. Teams in each regional will be seeded one through 16, with the top seed playing No. 16, No. 2 meeting No. 15, etc. There will be 16 first-round games March 14 and 15 at eight sites around the nation. Second-round action will be March 16-17 in the same arenas.

Aggies Win; Face Buffs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Claude Williams scored 21 points to lead North Carolina A&T to a 97-75 victory over Bethune-Cookman Friday night in the semifinals of the Mid-Eastern Athletic Conference tournament at the Palestra.

In the championship game Saturday, the Aggies, 18-9, will face Howard, which defeated Delaware State 73-59 in the second game Friday night.

At 11:57 of the first period, a pair of baskets by A&T's Thomas Griffin and Jimmy Brown tied the score at 16. A&T raised its lead to 45-37 at the half and never looked back, outscoring the Wildcats 24-8 in the first 10 minutes of the second period.

Brown scored 19 points and Griffin added 16 for A&T. Ronnie Weston scored a game-high 23 for Bethune-Cookman.

The tournament committee is empowered to send any team to any region it wishes in order to balance the bracket.

Vic Bubas, who is in his first year as chairman of the Division I Men's Basketball Committee, believes the tournament essentially has 211 teams.

"We've got 25 conferences with postseason tournaments to determine their automatic entry," said Bubas, commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference. "To me, that's the same thing as the opening round of the NCAA because if you win it you're in the NCAA. In one way, we almost have an open tournament. There is something like 282 Division I teams in all and roughly 211 are involved in post-season tournaments."

Enlarging the field to 64 teams will make it tougher on the committee, according to Missouri Athletic Director Dave Hart.

"It will be very, very tough picking the last 10 teams or so," said Hart, a committee member for four years. "The conferences are so jumbled and there is so much parity around the nation, it will be tough. Somebody will win the NIT and come back and say, 'I told you so.'"

The National Invitational Tournament, the nation's oldest postseason basketball competition, has been relegated to the leftovers since the NCAA tournament began expanding rapidly in the late 1970s.

The committee will work under few restrictions. But one rule that could send some teams out of their natural regions says squads from the same conference can't be placed in the same group of seedings in the same regional. Seeding groups are 1 through 4, 5 through 8, 9 through 12 and 13 through 16. Thus, Big East powers Georgetown and St. John's, ranked No. 1 and No. 2 in the country, are unlikely to be in the same regional because both would surely be among the top four seeds in whatever regional they land in.

The 32 first-round losers will receive $141,600 apiece, more than UCLA got for winning the title just 10 years ago, while the 16 second-round losers will receive $283,200 each.

The eight survivors of the first two rounds in each of the four regions move into regional competition the following weekend. Semifinals will be contested March 21 in the Midwest Regional in Dallas and the East Regional in Providence, R.I. March 22 is the date for semifinals in the West Regional in Denver and the Southeast Regional in Birmingham, Ala.

Champ Tigers Off To Bad Start

By The Associated Press
The Detroit Tigers, whose fast start in 1984 signaled an early end to the American League East race, had an inauspicious beginning to their 1985 exhibition season. The Boston Red Sox scored two unearned runs off Tigers ace Jack Morris in the first inning Friday and went on to defeat Detroit 3-2 at Lakeland, Fla.

against the White Sox in his second star of the 1984 season, was victimized by second baseman Lou Whitaker's error and a passed ball by catcher Lance Parrish, allowing two Red Sox runs. Parrish homered to make it 2-1 in the fourth and the Tigers tied it in the seventh before Boston's Kevin Romine doubled in the game-winning run in the eighth. In the only other games, the Houston Astros defeated the New York Yankees 9-6 and the Chicago White Sox beat the Kansas City Royals 4-2.

The Astros, playing for the first time at their new training site in Kissimmee, Fla., broke a 6-6 tie in the seventh inning on Kevin Bass' two-run single. Reliever Joe Sambito, who came back from arm surgery last season, worked three innings for the victory. Astros shortstop Dickie Thon, who missed all but five games of the 1984 season after he was hit in the face with a pitch, doubled and singled. Omar Moreno had three hits for the Yankees and drove in a run.

In Sarasota, Fla., Ron Kittle drove in two runs with an infield roller in the eighth inning to boost the White Sox over Kansas City. Chicago had tied the score 2-2 in the second as Nelson Barrera and Scott Fletcher had RBI singles.

Onix Concepcion accounted for Kansas City's runs with a two-run triple in the second.

Meanwhile, Toronto pitcher Dave Stieb signed an 11-year contract Friday, an agreement believed to be the longest for a player in baseball history.

Bob LaMonte, Stieb's agent, said the agreement was worth about $25 million, counting incentives and deferred payments.

"You could use that figure and not be far off," LaMonte said.

Stieb, 27, has been the ace of the Blue Jays' staff for the last five seasons, twice winning 17 games. He was 16-8 with a 2.83 earned run average last season when Toronto finished second in the AL East.

Pat Gillick, the Blues Jays' executive vice president, said the contract was guaranteed for three years, with eight options.

In St. Petersburg, Fla., where the St. Louis Cardinals train, second baseman Tom Herr signed a four-year contract that will pay him an estimated $3 million. Agreement on the contract was reached over the winter.

Other Friday signees included Cleveland outfielder Carmen Castillo, California infielder Dick Schofield and Cincinnati pitchers Jay Tibbs, John Franco and Fred Toliver, all to 1985 contracts.

Castillo later celebrated his signing by hitting a two-run triple and an RBI single in an intrasquad match-up.

Many other teams teams also played intrasquad games at their camps Friday.

Dwight Gooden, who led the major leagues with 276 strikeouts as a rookie last season, unveiled his new pitch, a changeup, at the New York Mets camp in St. Petersburg and pitched two scoreless innings.

In Mesa, Ariz., Brian Dayett had a single, double and triple in three at-bats in a Chicago Cubs intrasquad game, while Alfredo Griffin and Jose Canseco homered in an Oakland A's game at Phoenix.

Also at Mesa, Ken Forsch, in his first competitive pitching in 11 months, retired eight of the nine fellow California Angels he faced.

Japanese pitcher Yutaka Enatsu made his American debut with a scoreless inning for the Milwaukee Brewers in their intrasquad game.

How Can He Miss?

Handshakes For USFL Players

By The Associated Press

When the players take the field for this weekend's United States Football League games, they will meet at midfield for "solidarity handshakes" prior to the kickoffs.

The handshakes, according to Doug Allen, executive director of the USFL Players Association, will express the players' "determination to secure a four-year agreement with management that covers the entire 1985 preseason and regular season."

Players in the National Football League did the same thing in games that preceded their nine-weekend strike during the 1982 season.

"Frankly, we don't care if they go out and hug each other, as long as when the game starts they're in there playing," said Jim Byrne, director of public relations for the USFL.

The USFLPA is seeking improved preseason and postseason pay, league-wide player insurance, salary and medical costs for players recovering from injuries, minimum salaries, guaranteed roster sizes and a grievance procedure to resolve player-club disputes.

Play began Saturday night when Birmingham traveled to Orlando and Baltimore went to Memphis. On Sunday, Los Angeles will be at New Jersey, Portland at Denver, Tampa Bay at San Antonio and Houston at Oakland.

On Monday night, Jacksonville will be at Arizona.

Orlando and Baltimore were each seeking their first victories of the season. The Orlando Renegades have lost both of their games and Baltimore has one loss and one tie.

Birmingham quarterback Cliff Stoudt connected with wide receiver Joey Jones for a 53-yard scoring pass in last week's loss to Denver, the longest touchdown pass in Stallions' history. The Renegades, led by quarterback Jerry Golsteyn, are next to last in offense and defense in the league. Golsteyn has been sacked nine times, tying him with the Stars' Chuck Fusina for the most in the East.

Baltimore led 17-0 before being tied in overtime last week by Oakland. The Stars also set a team record for longest touchdown pass play — 61 yards from Fusina to wide receiver Victory Harrison.

Memphis, 2-0, is making its home debut this week, and Coach Pepper Rodgers says the Showboats are hurting.

"We're a banged-up football team," Rodgers said. "We've beaten two teams that were good football teams, but they were finesse teams. They move people around and they'll try to fool you."

But the Baltimore Stars, Rodgers said, like to hit. "I'd say this is going to be smash-face football, and we like smash-face football."

Smart Software can make buying your first computer a whole lot easier.

Everyone knows it takes software to run a computer. But software companies sometimes forget that it takes people to run the software. All different kinds of people. Even those who know nothing about computers. And that's often why many people fear the thought of buying one.

But Smart Software—featuring The Smart Spreadsheet with Graphics, The Smart Word Processor, and The Smart Data Manager—has a unique feature called "confidence levels" that makes it especially attractive to first-time users.

The levels are designed to make learning easier. At Level One, users don't face intimidating options, and they receive all the prompts and help they need. Then, as their confidence increases, they can move up levels—all the way to Level Three, where they have all the power and capabilities they could want.

This simple, but revolutionary, idea is not only helping to sell Smart Software. It's making it much easier for people to buy their first computer.

Nets Can't Halt Trail Blazers

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer
Although the Portland Trail Blazers have been a disappointment this season, trying to stop them when they're on a roll is like trying to stop a flood.

"We just collapsed on defense," Nets forward Buck Williams said after New Jersey fell to Portland 128-110 Friday night in a National Basketball Association game. "Everytime we patched up one hole, we seemed to spring two other leaks. It seemed like their men were going by us each time."

During a span of 4:22 in the second quarter, the Trail Blazers ran off 19 straight points to extend a two-point lead to 62-41.

The victory improved Portland's record to 30-34, but 28 of the victories have been by eight points or more.

"It started for us at the defensive end and we were able to get it going so well that we forced them out of their defense," said Kiki Vandeweghe, who tallied 11 of his game-high 35 points in the second period. "When we can run like we did tonight, the other team can't crash the offensive boards because we'll just 2-on-1 them to death."

Elsewhere in the NBA, it was Boston 133, Dallas 122; Philadelphia 128, Seattle 114; Chicago 117, Los Angeles Clippers 101; Houston 125, Indiana 105 and Milwaukee 127, Kansas City 114.

During their 19-0 run, the Trail Blazers scored seven of eight baskets on layups. Jim Paxson, who finished with 23 points, triggered the spurt with a three-point play and Vandeweghe, Steve Colter and Kenny Carr went on to score four points apiece in the spurt.

Portland Coach Jack Ramsey was elated by his team's performance.

"We got a lot in the run off steals and blocks," he said. "As long as we play this well, we'll stay in the playoff picture."

"We had good shots but they just weren't going down," New Jersey Coach Stan Albeck said. "That enabled them to run their break and put the pressure on us."

Celtics 133, Mavericks 122
Boston stayed unbeaten in 10 games against Dallas in its five-year history and kept Mavericks Coach Dick Motta from winning his 700th NBA game.

The Celtics, who got 32 points from Larry Bird and 28 from Kevin McHale, pulled away from a 6-6 tie to a 31-13 lead with a 24-7 spurt in the first quarter.

The Mavericks, with 35 points by Jay Vincent and 32 from Mark Aguirre, got within six points in the second period, but they didn't close the gap to single digits in the second half after Boston led 67-55 at halftime.

Philadelphia stayed 1 1/2 games behind Boston in the Atlantic Division as Moses Malone scored 25 points and Maurice Cheeks 20 against Seattle.

The 76ers led by six points after the first quarter before an 11-2 spurt gave them a 41-26 lead three minutes into the second period. Philadelphia led 71-53 at halftime and Seattle got no closer than nine points in the second half.

Ricky Sobers and Tom Chambers paced the SuperSonics with 26 and 25 points, respectively.

Bucks 127, Kings 114
Sidney Moncrief scored 25 points and Terry Cummings 23 to help Milwaukee extend its Central Division lead to nine games with a victory over Kansas City.

The Bucks hit 66 percent of their shots in the first half to take a 70-58 lead. The Kings, who had their three-game winning streak snapped, got as close as four points in the third quarter before Milwaukee rebuilt its advantage to 93-83 at the end of the period.

Mike Woodson scored 23 points to lead Kansas City.

Rockets 125, Pacers 105
Lionel Hollins scored 12 of his season-high 23 points in the third quarter to help Houston pull away from Indiana after the Pacers erased a 15-point deficit.

Ralph Sampson scored eight points in the first five minutes of the game as the Rockets raced to an 18-4 lead. Houston went on to lead 37-22 after the first period.

Indiana, which got 21 points from Steve Stipanovich, outscored Houston 28-13 to tie the score at 50-50 with 2:39 left in the first half. But the Rockets pulled away the entire second half to turn the game into a rout.

Bulls 117, Clippers 101
Orlando Woolridge scored 28 points and Michael Jordan hit nine of his 26 in a 5 1/2-minute span of the third period as Chicago handed Los Angeles its eighth straight loss.

Rec Teams To Meet

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department is making preparations for the upcoming men's and women's softball season.

Organizational meetings for anyone interested in playing on a team, forming a team or managing a team will be held as follows:

- Industrial League: Monday, March 11, 7 p.m.
- Church League: Monday, March 11, 8 p.m.
- Women's League: Wednesday, March 13, 7 p.m.
- City League: Wednesday, March 13, 8 p.m.
- Coed League: Wednesday, March 20, 7 p.m.

All meetings will be held at Elm Street Gym.

Practice fields and times will be available starting in April; with the regular season starting in May. The last date for a team to enter any league will be April 10, 1985.

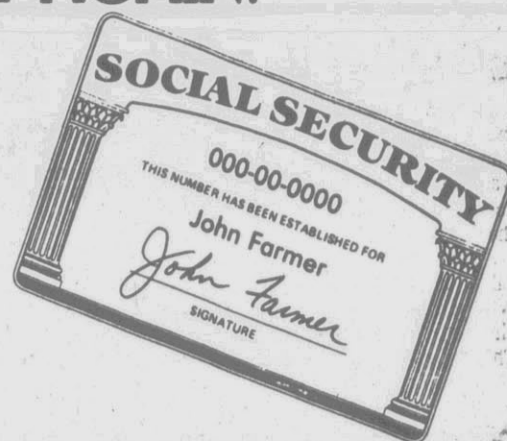

For further information concerning the adult softball program, call 752-4137, extension 248, 220 or 259, or go by the athletic department at Elm Street Gym.

1985 Duck Stamp

A painting of a pair of canvasback ducks will be featured on the 1985 North Carolina Waterfowl Conservation stamp and art prints. The painting, by Tom Hirata of Rutherford, N.J., was recently selected in a competition sponsored by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

The publishing and national marketing of art prints of this stamp will be handled by Sport'en Art-Midwest Marketing of Sullivan, Ill. Revenues from waterfowl stamp sales — and royalties from print sales — will be used to fund the waterfowl conservation program in North Carolina.

"We're sure that sportsmen and wildlife art collectors will be very pleased with the new state waterfowl stamp and art prints," said Vernon Beville, executive director of the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"The new design makes an especially attractive art print, and funds from this program will make a great contribution to waterfowl management and research in North Carolina. Over the past two years, over $825,000 has been raised for waterfowl conservation in the state through the stamp and print programs. This money is being used for habitat improvement and research for waterfowl, and will also be used for habitat acquisition and management in the future," he said.

Hirata is a nationally-known wildlife artist. His painting of canvasbacks was selected for the First of State New Jersey Waterfowl Stamp in 1984. In 1982, he won the Best of Show award at the Ducks Unlimited National Wildlife Art Show and he has also been a Gold Room Exhibitor at the Easton Waterfowl festival in Easton, Md.

The 1985 North Carolina Waterfowl Conservation stamp art prints are not available yet. They will be available from art dealers, not the wildlife resources commission.

The 1985 program will, for the first time, include a medallion series in addition to the regular and remargued print series. Art dealers will take orders for these time-limited edition prints through Aug. 31, 1985. Stamps will not go on sale until July 1, 1985, and will be available through license agents.

Business Notes

Company Honored

Service Roofing & Sheet Metal Co. of Greenville has been awarded the "Excellence of Performance Award" for 1984 by the firm's roofing and sheet metal group membership.

The award recognizes the company as the top 1984 business performer in its group.

Mike Richardson and Barry Sugg of the Greenville office accepted the award from Harry Esbenshade Jr., group representative.

Employee Recognized

Jean Lilley, service representative in the commercial department of Carolina Telephone in Greenville, was honored recently for having completed 25 years of service with the company.

A Beaufort County native, Mrs. Lilley and her husband, Jay, live in Washington. They have two children. The family attends Wares Chapel United Methodist Church.

Name Changed

Bankers Mortgage Co., a South Carolina headquartered mortgage banking subsidiary of Fleet Financial Group, has changed its name to Fleet Real Estate Funding Corp.

The firm, to be known as Fleet Funding, services $4.2 billion in residential and commercial mortgages in 47 states. The company has an office at 610 Arlington Blvd. in Greenville.

Andrew D. Woodward, president and chief executive officer of Fleet Funding, said the company's new name recognizes its affiliation with Fleet Financial Group.

Insurance Workshop

Seth Jones, who represents the home service division of Pilot Life Insurance Co. in Greenville, recently participated in a business insurance workshop at the company's Greenville home offices.

New Store Opens

Ribbon cutting ceremonies involving officials from the city and Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce were held Friday marking the grand opening of the new Curtis Mathes Home Entertainment Center at 606 Arlington Blvd.

The Greenville franchise, which has been purchased by Bert Saville and Michael Bain, will be managed by Greg Brown. The manager said the business will have its own in-store service department and offer a video library.

The store will be open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. until 7 p.m.

Saville has the Curtis Mathes franchise in Kinston and is expanding into the Greenville area, said Brown.

Training Session

Bea Heath and Ann Brown of Greenville recently completed three days of management training in sales, recruiting and product knowledge conducted by Mary Kay Cosmetics Inc. in Atlanta for top achievers of the company's independent sales force.

Mrs. Heath said Mary Kay officials updated the company's performer incentive program, which has awarded over 1,200 qualifying independent beauty consultants the use of automobiles since the program was initiated last June.

Mrs. Heath, who joined the company in 1977, is married to John Heath and they have two children. Mrs. Brown, who has been associated with the company since 1981, is married to Bobby Brown and they have three children.

The company reported net sales for 1983 of $323.8 million.

Firm Certified

Sebastian International, Los Angeles based professional hair care and cosmetics company, has announced the certification of Hair By Rycke and Co. at 403 1/2 Evans Mall as an "Artistic Center."

The certification by the Artistic Center Committee was announced by John Sebastian, company president.

The Greenville firm is owned by Rycke Lynn Creech.

Sales Declined

Tandy Corp. has announced that consolidated sales during February were $207,261,000, a decline of 1 percent from $210,014,000 recorded a year earlier.

Sales of Tandy's U.S. Radio Shack division were $156,658,000 during the month compared to $157,003,000 in 1984. The company said sales of U.S. Radio Shack stores in existence more than one year increased slightly in February.

Quarterly Dividend

Directors of Fieldcrest Mills Inc. voted Thursday to pay a regular quarterly dividend of 50 cents per share March 29 to holders of record March 18.

Company Purchased

Heilig-Meyers, Richmond based home furnishings company, announced that it has completed the acquisition of Royal Furniture Co. of Russellville, Ala.

Heilig-Meyers said the asset purchase, which originally would have added 13 stores and a central warehouse to the company, was expanded to include an additional location in Huntsville, Ala.

Interiors Business

Wade and Betsy Drake Lewis and Tom and Joyce Blackwell have announced the planned opening of Betsy Drake Interiors Inc. at 425 Greenville Blvd., offering home furnishings and accessories.

The owners said the business will also specialize in window treatments, wall coverings, oriental rugs and oriental accents such as silk and teakwood screens.

Ms. Lewis is a graduate interior designer with eight years experience in the Greenville area. Lewis has 16 years experience in home furnishing sales and management.

The spokesmen said the store, which is being renovated, will open soon.

Computer Firm

The opening of Compriserv Ltd., computer software/hardware consultants specializing in vertical market software at Route 13, Greenville, has been announced by Jack Smith, president.

Smith said the software product currently available is a job price estimator/inventory management for the graphic arts industry to be marketed nationally. He said the firm also offers consulting services for software and hardware, as well as research and development in the software field.

Consulting Office

Health Management Associates has announced the recent opening of an office at 113 Fletcher Place in Greenville, specializing in health promotion planning and cost-containment consulting for both the public and private sectors.

HMA has worked with companies in the pharmaceutical, publishing,

Apple Plans Shut Down

CUPERTINO, Calif. (AP) — Apple Computer Inc. says it plans to shut down production for a week because of excess inventories caused by the sluggish personal-computer market.

The news sent Apple's stock tumbling $2.50 a share, to $22.12 1/2, in heavy trading of more than 3 million shares on the over-the-counter market Thursday.

"The general softness of the computer industry is continuing," Delbert Yocam, Apple executive vice president and division manager for the Apple II computer division, said in a statement.

"It's affecting not only personal-computer manufacturers like Apple but manufacturers of larger computers and industry suppliers as well," he said.

Apple's Dallas manufacturing facility, where Apple IIs are made, and its Singapore plant, where Apple II circuit boards are produced, will close March 18-22, said spokeswoman Barbara Krause.

health care, and paper products industries since 1980.

The firm is directed by David Chenoweth, Ph.D., and David White, Ed.D.

Dillard Award

Adams & Longino Advertising of Greenville was recently presented the Dillard Award for "most outstanding achievement" at the recent annual awards banquet held by the Printing Industries of the Virginias in Richmond, Va.

The award was presented for a catalog produced by Adams & Longino for Grady-White Boats and printed by Satterwhite Printing of Richmond.

The firm was also presented a first place award for four-color brochures and the "best of show" award for four-color printed pieces.

Susan Johnson, senior art director, accepted the awards for the Greenville firm.

PSI Meeting

Gail Wallace, director of the Career Center at Pitt Community College, presented a program on "If You Don't Know Where You Are Going You Will Probably End Up Somewhere Else" at the recent meeting of the Greenville chapter of Professional Secretaries International.

Janet Black, division FSA director, discussed the international FSA conference set for March 29 in Greensboro.

Chapter members Jo Gillan, Mary

Blick and Betty Andrews recently attended a leadership development conference in Greensboro.

Ms. Gillam presented the February program for the FSA chapter session, discussing "Your Job Interview — How To Make It Successful."

New PSI members installed in February were Mary Baker, Mary Blick, Davalyn Thompson and Mary Harrel.

Division Sold

Hackney Industries Inc. of Washington, N.C., has announced that its consolidated electrical systems division has been sold.

Con-Select, the division trade name, has plants in Hammond and Harvey, La., for the manufacture of power control systems.

James A. Hackney III, president, said the sale is taking place in two parts, with Con-Select's load bank design and manufacturing section being sold to Kohler Manufacturing Co. of Kohler, Wis., a plumbing-ware company.

The other two phases of Con-Select, its electrical switchgear design and manufacturing operation, and its shipboard controls manufacturing section, are being sold to International Controls Corp. of Houston, Texas, a division of Texas Microprocessor Controls Inc., Hackney said.

Record Figures

Heilig-Meyers Co. has reported record revenues and earnings for both the quarter and nine months ended Dec. 31.

The home furnishings firm said net earnings for the quarter increased by 14.9 percent to $3,638,000 compared to $3,166,000 a year earlier. Total revenues increased by 23.2 percent to $49.7 million, up from $40.4 million reported last year.

For the nine-month period, net earnings increased by 15.9 percent to $9,569,000 compared to $8,260,000 for the year-earlier period. Total revenues increased to $131.8 million from $105.5 million last year.

PEANUTS

Sweetener Is Seen As A Product Of The 80s

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — NutraSweet has been a boon to more than its creator, G.D. Searle & Co.

The low-calorie sweetener also has been a plus for the makers of a growing number of consumer products.

NutraSweet has given an added kick to products that already were doing well, such as diet soft drinks. It has rejuvenated stagnant products, such as powdered soft drinks. And it is making new products possible.

"This is big news in the food industry," says Robert Seelert, group vice president for General Foods Corp.

Emanuel Goldman, a consumer products analyst with the investment firm Montgomery Securities Inc. in San Francisco, says, "NutraSweet is going to be one of the products of the 80s."

Strong demand for NutraSweet products comes from aging baby boomers who are concerned about their weight and health, analysts say.

Some parents like NutraSweet because it doesn't promote tooth decay.

NutraSweet, which is patented under the generic name aspartame, was introduced in 1981 in Searle's tabletop sweetener Equal. Now, it is available in more than 60 products, including hot cocoa, pudding and custard, chewing gum, cold milk flavorings, and tea and coffee preparations.

Besides General Foods, Searle's clients include such giants as Coca-Cola Co., PepsiCo Inc., Seven-Up Co., Borden Inc., Carnation Co., H.J. Heinz Co. and Procter & Gamble Co.

Searle and its customers are seeking approval from the Food and Drug Administration for use of NutraSweet in other product categories, says Timothy Healy, vice president for marketing of Searle's NutraSweet group.

One is the juice and juice drink category, both frozen and refrigerated, which Healy says is an $8 billion-a-year industry.

FDA petitions should be filed within the next 12 months for frozen dairy products and yogurt, he says.

At the moment, you cannot bake with NutraSweet because high heat removes its sweetness. But one day, consumers may be able to buy cookies and cakes that are sweetened with aspartame, which is 180 times sweeter than sugar and is made from protein components.

"The baking industry is huge; that would be an attractive area for us to get into," Healy says, noting that intensive research efforts are being made to do just that.

The most visible NutraSweet users now are the soft drink companies. Last fall, the top three announced they were going to sweeten some of their diet soft drinks with 100 percent NutraSweet instead of with a blend that uses saccharin.

Pepsi-Cola led the pack. Its president, Roger Enrico, said at that time, "The reformulation to 100 percent NutraSweet will accelerate the tremendous sales momentum being experienced by Diet Pepsi in 1984."

Indeed, Diet Pepsi sales shot up about 33 percent last year to 181.5 million 192-ounce cases, Goldman says. He has doubled his estimated gain for this year from 15 percent to 30 percent.

Diet Coke sales rocketed 70 percent in 1984 to 425 million cases, Goldman says, and he expects growth of at least 25 percent in 1985. Diet 7-Up sales rose 10 percent to 90.9 million in 1984 and will gain 15 percent this year, the analyst says.

"That (industry growth) may not be sustainable but we do know there has been a stimulus to the diet segment that already was dying at a good clip," Goldman says.

Another large user is General Foods, which offers NutraSweet in powdered beverages, desserts and coffee and is testing it in cereal.

"NutraSweet has really helped the powdered soft drink business," says Jon Hettinger, senior group vice president for the consumer products division of Borden.

Borden says it introduced NutraSweet in its sugar-free Wyler's nationally in 1983 and in its Lite-Line powdered drinks in 1984.

Lou Umphlett

She's 75, Working Hard and Happy At It

Lou Umphlett started her career at age 54 and today, on her 75th birthday, she's still working — full time.

"Many of my patients are younger than I am," Mrs. Umphlett, a nurse's aide at Greenville Villa Nursing Home said. "I love to stroll into one man's room and say, 'Okay, young man, this old lady's here to wait on you.' It makes him laugh.

"I like to keep things light and fun, but really I'm just so thankful that my health is so good I can do whatever I want to. I had what they called a light heart attack after my twins were born when I was 42, but I fully recovered and now I just don't have any health problems. Honey, don't you think I could pick you up and put you over there in that other chair just as easy as pie? I lift people bigger than I am all the time. I'm trained to do it and I'm strong."

Mrs. Umphlett took her first "public job" 21 years ago, shortly after her husband, Ether Umphlett, died. "I know the Lord provided that place for me to work," she said. "It was just what I needed so I wouldn't just sit around and get old after my husband died. I'm devoted to my patients. I'm old enough to really identify with them and how they feel. I think this interest outside myself, and the physical activity, too, have kept me young-feeling."

She worked full time on different shifts till she was 62 years old, then she started to work part time in order to draw her Social Security and keep her income at the required level. Then, when she was 72 and the restrictions were lifted, she started working full time again, asking for and getting the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift. "That's the shift I like best," she said. "I sleep fine in the daytime and it gives me time to do things at home that I like to do."

What does she like to do in her spare time? "I love to cook," she said. "Good old country cooking. I'll make biscuits with a meal even when I'm home by myself."

She likes to read. "I read novels mostly," she said. "Just good stories about people. I love people."

She like television. "Especially the 'soap operas,'" her grandson, Tommy, teases. She doesn't deny she likes "the stories" but said she doesn't see them on a regular basis and doesn't have a favorite. "Like my reading, I just like them because they're about people," she said.

She enjoys attending Red Oak Christian Church on the Sundays when she hasn't worked till 7 a.m.

She and Tommy, who share a home her daughter, Linda, tend a vegetable garden each summer and she cans and freezes and preserves the family's favorite fruits and vegetables.

Though she doesn't drive a car, she likes to fly. "I didn't get on an airliner for the first time till I was over 60," she said, "but I found out I love it. I fly to see my children and grandchildren in other states whenever I get the chance."

Her two youngest daughters, twins, are in other states, along with her eldest daughter. The rest of her eight children live in Pitt County. Both the twins are expecting babies now, so Mrs. Umphlett anticipates trips to meet new grandchildren soon.

Her children are Dot McGillan of Princeton, Ky.; Lois Englehardt of Lexington, Ky.; Lola Bains of Milledgeville, Ga.; Linda Umphlett, with whom she lives in Greenville; Jesse Umphlett, Ray Umphlett, and Sandra Stocks, all of Greenville; and Earl Umphlett of Farmville. She has 23 grandchildren and three great-grandchildren. One, Karen Englehardt, was born on her birthday. She's 10 years old today.

Most of Mrs. Umphlett's children and grandchildren and many friends will gather this afternoon to honor her on her 75th birthday.

Mrs. Umphlett was born in the Palmyra community of Halifax County, one of 11 children. She met her husband, a Gates County native, through mutual friends and was married in 1927. Her husband was a sawyer most of his life and the family lived in several places in northeastern North Carolina, "wherever there was timber to be cut." They moved to Greenville about 30 years ago and settled in the Bell Arthur community.

"Those early years of raising eight children born over 25 years was hard, but I wouldn't take anything for them then and I still wouldn't," she said. "My children and grandchildren and the people I work with make my life full and I love every minute of it."

"I love every one of my patients," Mrs. Umphlett said, as she wheeled Mrs. Nellie Corey through the halls of Greenville Villa Nursing Home.

Vienna's Jews Are Reviving Their Rich Heritage

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Nine thousand Jews live in Vienna now — up from the 1,400 that were left at the end of the Nazi occupation in World War II, but still nowhere near the 185,000 who lived here before the war, helping make Vienna a capital of science, culture and the arts.

They included such innovators as Sigmund Freud, the founder of psychoanalysis, and the composers Gustav Mahler and Arnold Schoenberg.

Now, 40 years after stepping out of the shadow of Nazi terror, Vienna's Jews are trying to revive their rich cultural heritage and striving to overcome lingering anti-Semitism in Austria.

Leaders of the small Jewish Community and outside observers agree that the resignation of Bruno Kreisky as Austria's chancellor, or government leader, helped ease fears and suspicions among resident Jews.

Kreisky, who was born a Jew but professes no religious beliefs, was known for his strident criticism of Israel and for his pro-Arab stands, including support of the Palestinian cause and endorsement of Libya's Moammar Khadafy.

Jews and non-Jews say the current series of Jewish cultural programs — the biggest in postwar Vienna — would never have taken place during the Kreisky's term in office: nor would the forthcoming congress, nor the visit in November of Edward I. Koch, the Jewish mayor of New York City.

"We have pushed the door open, and we are trying to keep it wide open," said Leon Zelman, 58-year-old executive director of the Jewish Welcome Service. "We realize there is a third generation eager to learn and ready to be motivated."

However, Zelman and others credited Kreisky with warning young people to beware of fascist tendencies reappearing in Austria and elsewhere in Europe.

An authoritative study published this year showed one-fourth of Austrians were clearly "anti-Semitic" and another 25 percent revealed at least traces of anti-Semitism.

Zelman said his group is still waging "a battle between us and Adolf Hitler, who really wanted to wipe out all Jewry," explaining that one of his tasks was to tell young Austrians what happened to the Jews in the past.

Kreisky, who still enjoys considerable prestige and influence, recently voiced sharp criticism of officials who warmly received Mayor Koch on his four-day visit to Vienna.

The former chancellor lashed out in newspaper interviews after Koch said Kreisky had "put his arm around terrorism" by receiving Yasser Arafat, chief of the Palestine Liberation Organization, and Libyan leader Khadafy.

Official attitudes are clearly changing. In November, the Austrian president, Rudolf Kirchschlager, inaugurated a Jewish educational center — the first postwar Jewish high school, a kindergarten and an elementary school.

The center is in a renovated building that housed a Jewish secondary school before the Nazi takeover in 1938. In the early 1940s the Nazis used the premises to assemble Jews to be sent to death camps.

Zelman said that at the end of the war, only 1,400 Jews were left in Vienna. The others had fled or were deported and killed by the Nazis.

"Whenever a camp was freed in 1945 east of Vienna," Zelman recalled, "the first station was Vienna."

Most Austrian Jews live in Vienna, as they always have.

Zelman and his aides organized a scientific symposium on the history of Austrian Jewry, a two-week Jewish film retrospective and a photo show depicting Jewish life mainly in prewar Poland and Vienna.

The symposium was held at City Hall with prominent Jewish historians, scholars and psychiatrists from Austria and abroad presenting papers.

The string of events, placed under the motto "Sunken World Of Eastern Jewry," were visited or addressed by Austrian leaders, including President Kirchschlager, Chancellor Fred Sinowatz and Mayor Helmut Zilk of Vienna.

In separate interviews with The Associated Press, both Zelman and Chief Rabbi Paul Chaim Eisenberg praised the new Austrian leadership. Zelman explained the misgivings about Kreisky: "The whole community lived in the shadows of the holocaust here," he said. "It was terrible. Kreisky did not realize that here was an awfully sensitive community."

Eisenberg agreed. "There has been a shift in accent, that's for sure. ... His (Kreisky's anti-Israel) comments were not pleasant. We don't hear them any more."

"A million survivors passed through here in search of new homes farther west. But some of the old people were sick and remained here because they didn't get a passport to go to the United States or elsewhere."

"Today a new generation has grown up here," said Zelman. "We have again some 200 Jewish doctors, 17 lawyers, as well as engineers and university professors."

He said the Jewish Welcome Service, set up in 1980 for Jews visiting Austria or passing through, is funded by the city of Vienna and the Austrian Tourist Board.

The Jewish Community is run by a 24-member board representing a variety of political and religious groups on the basis of membership vote.

It has a weekly newspaper. The two main political factions, Bund (liberal) and Herut (conservative) run monthly newspapers of their own, in addition to several periodicals issued by private Jewish groups.

Wedding Vows Said In Double Ring Ceremony

Brenda Ray O'Geary of Greenville became the bride of Charlie Junior Briley of Bethel in a double ring ceremony at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Red Oak Christian Church in Greenville.

Dr. Maurice Ankrom, pastor of the bride, officiated.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Allen Ray Jr. of Ayden. The bridegroom is the son of Luberta Briley of Route 6, Greenville, and the late Becton Briley.

Organist was Dr. Sam Winchester Jr. of Greenville. Dr. Mary Faye Smith Whisler of Greenville recited a poem "What is Love." The father of the bride sang "Where There is Love," "The Prayer Perfect" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Given in marriage by her children and escorted by her son, David Bryan O'Geary, the bride was attired in a formal gown of blue faille taffeta designed with a high neckline encircled with matching floral embroidered English net. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of net embroidered in pearl beaded floral motifs with a scalloped edged border. Cording accented the modified natural waistline and the elbow length French puffed sleeves featured a ruffle edging gathered through the center and accented with a rolled fabric rosette of faille taffeta and satin ribbon in matching blue. The demi-gathered skirt was trimmed on the side with a fabric rose and ribbon accent. She wore a derby styled braid hat in blue. It was trimmed in embroidered English net centered with pearls with a veil of imported matching blue illusion. She carried a cascade of silk white sweetheart roses, lily of the valley, blue miniature lilies, stephanotis and greenery tied with lace ribbon and blue satin streamers.

Shannon Renee O'Geary served her mother as maid of honor and wore a formal gown of raspberry faille taffeta designed with an open off-shoulder neckline with pleats. The fitted bodice featured a floral embroidered motif in matching fabric. The full skirt was enhanced by a sash of matching fabric. She carried a colonial nosegay of silk wine and pink roses, raspberry and pink daisies, miniature pink lilies mixed with stephanotis and greenery with candlelight lace ribbon streamers and blue satin streamers.

Julia Ray Collins of Boone, sister of the bride, was matron of honor and was attired identical to the maid of honor and her nosegay was similar.

Other attendants were Faye Ross of Washington and Michelle Staton of Greenville. Their gowns were styled identically to the honor attendants' in suede rose and each carried an identical colonial nosegay.

Meredith Leigh Bullock of Greenville was flower girl and wore a formal gown of suede rose. It featured a scooped neckline, puffed sleeves and empire waist. Matching satin ribbon accented the empire waist and satin bows ascended the ruffle on the skirt. She carried a wicker basket filled with flowers like that of the honor attendant.

Kathy Elks of Greenville was honorary bridesmaid and presided at the guest register. She wore a corsage of pink and white silk sweetheart roses.

Rena Manning of Greenville directed the wedding.

William Keith Briley served his father as best man. Ushers were James Carl Manning of Bethel, Jimmy Bell of Route 1, Bethel, and Tommy Clark of Chocowinity.

The mother of the bride wore a street length dress of mauve with a matching jacket. The mother of the bridegroom selected a street length dress of lavender. Both wore corsages of cream colored silk roses.

A reception followed the ceremony and was held in the fellowship hall of the church given by the bride. The refreshment table was covered with a white cloth edged in lace and centered with an arrangement of silk white mums, pink lilies, wine glorioles, greenery and miniature pink lilies. Mary Holloman of Farmville served cake and Debbie Lewis of Vanceboro poured punch. Mona Williams of Greenville gave out bags of bird seed.

A pre-rehearsal dinner and after-rehearsal reception were given by the bridegroom and friends in the church fellowship hall. The Rev. and Mrs. Calvin Trueblood welcomed guests.

Mrs. Dalton Rollins poured punch and Mr. and Mrs. William Davenport said goodbyes.

After a trip to the N.C. mountains the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride and bridegroom are employed by Burroughs Wellcome.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

On a good day, marriage is a fragile institution.

It's beset by money problems, battered by mood shifts, and badgered by in-laws who only want what is best for you.

The game of "Trivial Pursuit" could force a marriage over the edge. After all, what is a union but a series of unimportant, petty, insignificant things of no consequence that drive you nuts.

I'm not overreacting. Prof. Teal Bennett of Tulane University Medical Center says people have three basic fears: dying, going crazy and making a fool of yourself. He believes you can plug "Trivial Pursuit" into the third fear.

I will go one step farther. I don't think you know a man until you've played "Trivial Pursuit" with him. You may think you do, but you don't.

The man who held your hand tenderly through 16 hours of labor with your first child is the same man who will shout at you in front of a group: "What do you mean, you don't know how many stars are in Orion's Belt? If it were jewels in Joan Collins' belt, you'd know."

Somehow, it upsets me to realize that a man who cannot remember the date of my mother's birthday remembers that Will Chamberlain made 23,924 rebounds in his career.

I have never played a game of "Trivial Pursuit" with him in my life that as soon as the question to me leaves someone's mouth, he doesn't mumble, "She doesn't know that."

"How do you know I don't know that?" I ask.

"Look, anyone who doesn't know what candy bar is made in Hershey, Pa., cannot possibly know what is the largest gland in the human body."

"You don't know me THAT well," I charge. "Besides, it's the liver."

"You guessed."

"I did not guess. I just remembered your family history."

And I'll tell you something else. If I had known before "Trivial Pursuit" that I was sleeping next to a man who stored such inane things as what mammal has a bill, webbed feet with claws and lays eggs, and what ap-

Forty percent of working parents send their children to a friend's or family member's home while they are at work according to U.S. Census Bureau. About 31 percent have the caregiver come to their home. About 15 percent use a daycare center. The rest make other arrangements.

Chris Chappell Gives Program For Junior Women

The Greenville Junior Woman's Club held its March meeting last week. Chris Chappell presented the program.

He was a winner at the district arts festival in drama. Chappell and Robin Bolande, winner in public speaking, will represent the juniors at the State Arts Festival March 30 in Winston-Salem.

New officers elected were: Lydia Hayes, president; Jackie Carson, first vice president; Cindy Carter, second vice president; Julie Everett, recording secretary; Jilayne Johnston, treasurer; and Bonnie Evans and Jan Tysinger, co-editors.

Junior Day will be held April 20 in Williamston and will be hosted by the junior club there.

Susan Banks, Patt Sugg, Vivian Pierce, Sharon Simpson, Billy Jean Humke, Linda Van Doren and Kim

Bunn were named as new members. An orientation will be held March 20 at the home of Glenda Brannigan and inductions will take place at the April general meeting.

Holly Edwards, ways and means committee, reported on the results of the Marlin Art Auction. Glenda Hinnant, home life, reported a charter membership had been obtained for the club from the Pitt County Family Violence Program. Kathy Kazior, public affairs, announced the anatomically correct dolls were presented to the Pitt County Department of Social Services.

Jilayne Johnston, Julie Everette, Mary Shear and Jan Tysinger were meeting hostesses.

Engagement Announced

Barbara Ellen Peoples and E. Sturgis Payne Jr., both of Greenville, announce their engagement. She is the daughter of Janet and Phillip Peoples of Greenville. He is the son of Elmer S. Payne Sr. of Ayden and the late Edna Wrenn Payne. The wedding will take place April 6.

The average weekly cost for daycare in the United States is $53.

Nurses To Meet In Raleigh Tuesday

Nurses from throughout the state will meet in Raleigh Tuesday to hear a briefing on health care issues before the General Assembly and to sharpen their lobbying skills.

The N.C. Nurses Association is sponsoring the workshop for all nurses and nursing students at the Holiday Inn State Capital. The luncheon speaker will be Lt. Gov. Robert B. Jordan III. Sen. Wilma Woodard (D-Wake) will also attend the luncheon.

Morning sessions will include discussion about lobbying strategies and key health care legislative issues for 1985. Speakers will include Gale Touger, Alene Watson, Cheryl Proctor and Estelle Fulp, all of Raleigh, and Martha Henderson of Chapel Hill.

Extensive Collection Is Musical Treasure

(AP) — Hans Moldenhauer often goes unrecognized, but the blind, 78-year-old Spokane man is famous for owning one of the world's greatest individual collections of musical manuscripts, documents, letters and memorabilia.

His third wife, Mary, leads Moldenhauer into the bank vault. History spills out of the drawers in yellowing pages of music. The quick, light touch of composers Mendelssohn and Brahms, the sprawling handwriting of letters written by Bach and Handel. A part of the second movement of Beethoven's Opus 28. A minuet penned by Mozart in 1772.

They raised two daughters. Collecting manuscripts, which began as a hobby, grew. By the mid-1950s, Moldenhauer's eyesight was failing and the couple decided to collect full time. Moldenhauer has retinitis pigmentosa, a progressive illness in which the inner layer of the retina deteriorates.

Moldenhauer has collected original scores penned by Beethoven, Bach, Brahms, Handel and other com's. He has some of the treasures in safety deposit boxes in twkane an's. Moldenhauer is aware that much of Spokane is ignorant of his collection, which he calls "Music History From Primary Sources," but which most call the "Moldenhauer Archives."

Moldenhauer cannot begin to count the number of items in the archives. Seven file boxes, crammed with index cards, list the contents of the collection, which is spread between Spokane and seven other sites, including Harvard University, Washington State University and the Bavarian State Library in Munich.

"Increasingly (Rosaleen) became his eyes," said Donald Thulean, former conductor of the Spokane Symphony, a close friend of the Moldenhauers. "One thing that was startling was that I was never aware of the transition, the time he became completely dependent on her for help."

However, a bronze bust of Moldenhauer sits in a niche on the mezzanine level of the Spokane Opera House. Moldenhauer requested that it be placed there rather than on the ground floor because "I did not want people to place chewing gum on my head."

Though his scores by composers of other centuries are better recognized, Moldenhauer also has a large collection of works by 20th-century composers.

For 17 years, the Moldenhauers worked on the biography of Anton von Webern, an Austrian composer who died in 1945. The book, published in the United States in 1979, is considered the definitive work on the composer and has won several literary awards.

Mrs. Ralph Tucker To Be Speaker

The Parent Circle of the King's Daughters and Sons will be held in the ladies parlor of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church Thursday starting at 2:30 p.m.

"So much of his collection is modern music," said the Very Rev. Richard Coombs of The Cathedral of St. John the Evangelist. "He has impeccable judgment and knows who the great composers will be, who will last."

Rosaleen died of cancer in January 1982. Mary Moldenhauer, 42, became acquainted with the Moldenhauers by arranging their many trips to Europe.

Mrs. Ralph Tucker will present, as part of the Bible study, "Some Thoughts on Easter."

Asking Moldenhauer which item is his favorite is like asking a father to name his favorite child.

After marrying her in 1982, Moldenhauer appointed Mary curator of the Moldenhauer Archives.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

"We love them all," he said, smoothing his hands over the manuscripts. "My main concern is that these are not just dying papers but that they let music come to life."

"If there is one great purpose in our union, it is to complete Rosaleen's ambition," Moldenhauer said.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement. Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Moldenhauer fled his native Germany in 1938 because of the Nazis, landing briefly in New York before settling in Spokane in July 1939. He and his first wife were divorced after she decided to stay with relatives in Long Island, N.Y.

With the help of three research assistants and two college students, the Moldenhauers are cataloging the archives. They are also adding pieces to the Rosaleen Moldenhauer Memorial Collection, which contains the "choicest" components of the Moldenhauer Archives.

In Germany he had worked as a teacher, a vocal coach and a harpsichordist. He taught piano in Spokane, and earned $30 a month for playing five, 15-te prg

Each year the couple works at least eight weeks in Europe. Last year, Moldenhauer lectured in 10 cities in the United States.

He married his former pupil and protege, 17-year-old Spokane native Rosaleen Jackman. After the war, they devoted themselves to their teacher's cooperative, the Spokane Conservatory of Music and Allied Arts, teaching as many as 150 pupils a week and traveling the Northwest giving concerts. At the same time, Moldenhauer, who knows his manuscripts by touch and plays the piano from memory, says of his blindness: "I never asked the question ... why me? There are uncounted examples of much less fortunate people. I think it would be much harder to be a Beethoven and not be able to hear the music that he was writing down."

This prestigious award pays all expenses incurred during undergraduate study at the university, and it also provides an opportunity for summer enrichment experiences ranging from Outward Bound to foreign study.

Alicia Speight and Clay Deanhardt have both been named as finalists in the competition for Merit Scholarships to N.C. State University. Final interviews will be held on March 16 in Raleigh to determine what kind of scholarship each will receive.

March 16 is also the date for the district round of the Quiz Bowl competition. The event will be held in Wilson at Atlantic Christian College, and the team from Rose will try and become one of the two top teams from this round to advance to the state finals in April.

Last week was National Foreign Language Week, and there were many activities conducted in observance of this celebration. Announcements in both Spanish and French were made throughout the week by students from the upper level language classes. On Thursday, the Blue Rose Cafe served a special meal of French and Spanish foods during both lunches. The Spanish Club decorated the halls with posters and created a display case with various Spanish customs described. They also sold different

Student Publishes Book On Globetrotting

Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Traveling cheaply not only saves money, it also enhances the true goal of traveling — to experience different cultures and meet their people, says a Western Carolina University senior who has written and published a book that tells how to do it.

Endicott, who has traveled in about 40 countries on five continents by thumb, train, bus and freight train, says a major way to save money if you must fly is to avoid flying across international borders. "You should walk any land borders or take a taxi or public transportation," he says. "You see more people that way anyway."

Endicott says the thrifty traveler can visit almost any area of the world — including hot spots like Central America and Africa — as long as he is well prepared both physically and mentally. American travelers regularly go overland through Central America and from Egypt to South Africa, he said.

Seattle and hitchhiked through the world, says he has never found himself in a dangerous situation. "Not even one thing happened to me," he says. "I met only nice people. Americans have an attitude of paranoia that's been perpetuated by the mass media."

PARTY FOR KIDS
Sandwiches & Milk
Ice Cream & Sauce
PEANUT BUTTER
CHOCOLATE SAUCE
6 ounces (1 cup) semi-sweet chocolate pieces
1/2 cup smooth peanut butter
1-3rd cup honey
1/2 cup milk
In a 1 or 1 1/2 quart saucepan over low heat, stir together chocolate, peanut butter and honey until chocolate has melted and mixture is blended — it will be very thick. Gradually stir in milk, keeping smooth. Over high heat, stirring constantly, cook until sauce begins to boil. Serve at once over vanilla ice cream. Makes 1 1/2 cups (scant).

SHRIMP & RICE
1 pound medium shrimp (cooked, shelled and deveined)
3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1 cup milk
1/4 teaspoon celery salt
1/2 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon paprika
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons chili sauce
Salt and Tabasco sauce to taste
Hot Cooked Rice
Cut each shrimp in half lengthwise. Make a white sauce of the butter, flour, milk and seasonings. Add shrimp and reheat. Serve over rice. Makes 4 small servings.

LIGHT SUPPER

Dear Abby By Abigail Van Buren

Shared Secrets Cause Sisters To Draw Apart

DEAR ABBY: I come from a very large family, but there is one sister with whom I have always been particularly close. I'll call her Mary. We've always confided things to each other that we wouldn't share with anybody else.

About six months ago, I learned that Mary had been telling a close male friend of hers some of the very personal things I had shared with her. When I confronted her, she admitted betraying my confidence, tearfully apologized and promised it would never happen again.

I told her I forgave her but didn't feel that I could ever confide in her again. She said she understood my feelings and didn't blame me.

Mary continues to confide the most intimate details of her private life, hoping I will reciprocate. I just can't. The trust between us is gone. When we're together with the family, Mary's laughter is forced, her brightness is artificial, and she is obviously ill at ease in my presence. The family has picked up on this and keep asking me what is wrong. When I refuse to tell them, they see me as the one who is to blame.

How do I answer my family's questions? And how can I make Mary return to her natural self?

BETRAYED

DEAR BETRAYED: Be honest with yourself. Although you told

STAY WITH THE CAR IN A WINTER STORM

DENVER (AP) — If you're caught in a winter storm while driving, stay with the car. Disorientation during blizzard conditions can happen quickly and being lost in blinding snow and cold can prove fatal.

Only leave the car if you see a nearby safe shelter, a safety council advises. Clear the exhaust pipe of snow. Use the engine for brief periods for heat, and always leave a downwind window open a little to avoid carbon monoxide poisoning.

ARTHRITIS AND PAIN

ATLANTA (AP) — Many Americans with arthritis endure needless pain, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

Some people think nothing much can be done for their arthritis, so they do not consult a doctor or do not follow the treatment plan prescribed for them by their doctor.

Medication, along with a combination of exercise, joint protection, and rest are frequently part of a total treatment plan for arthritis. These treatments are designed to help control pain and to prevent or delay joint deformity, the foundation says.

The City of Greenville has a Citizen Concern System to help citizens with their questions, needs, and concerns. If you need assistance, call Nadine Bowen, Coordinator for the Citizen Concern System, at 752-4137, Ext. 224.

Mary you forgave her, you really haven't. She senses this and is frantically trying to cover her remorse by putting on a happy face. You owe your family no explanations. Please work on forgiving your sister. Who among us doesn't need to be forgiven?

DEAR ABBY: I want the whole world to know that I haven't had a cigarette for 58 days! I am very proud of myself because I'm 64 years old, smoked for 30 years and used to smoke three packs a day.

When I was smoking, what griped me the most was the way nearly everyone was so patient with the drug addict and the lush, but nobody had any sympathy for the smoker. Believe me, Abby, it is just as hard to give up nicotine as it is to quit drugs or booze.

I will never smoke again because I feel 100 percent better, and best of all, I'm no longer a slave to a dirty, destructive, expensive habit.

EX-SMOKER IN MARLBORO, MASS.

DEAR EX-SMOKER: Congratulations. What a message from someone who actually lives in Marlboro country!

DEAR ABBY: I'm one of your readers who made a contribution to the March of Dimes by sending President Reagan a dollar for his birthday on Feb. 6.

How many dollars were raised this way? Please let us know.

ARIZONA REAGANITE

DEAR REAGANITE: I spoke with Larry Speakes, President Reagan's acting press secretary. He said they were still counting, and he'll let me know as soon as all the money is in. Be assured I will publish the grand total at that time.

President Reagan has requested that those who want to send their dollars to the March of Dimes use the following address: March of Dimes Birth Defects Foundation, P.O. Box 2000, White Plains, N.Y. 10602.

DEAR ABBY: My husband went to a dentist for a new set of dentures.

The terms were cash in advance, so my husband paid him.

Well, unfortunately, my husband died unexpectedly, and I was so upset I never got around to calling the dentist to tell him to stop work on the dentures.

When I called him a few weeks later, he told me it was too late, the dentures were already finished.

I told him I didn't have any use for them, and he said neither did he, but since they were paid for, somebody might as well pick them up.

Abby, don't you think under the circumstances I'm entitled to some kind of refund?

MONEY WASTED

DEAR WASTED: I'm sorry your husband died, but the dentist who made the dentures invested his time, talent and material in them and is entitled to the full price. Under sad circumstances such as these, some dentists might refund a token sum, but it shouldn't be expected.

 Drain liquid from beets into a 1 1/2-quart saucepan. Stir in consomme and water. Gently bring to a boil. Cut beets into thin strips and add to consomme mixture with pepper. Top each serving with a spoonful of sour cream.
 Makes 3 cups.

COME FOR DINNER
 Tongue & Honey Mustard
 Potatoes, Peas & Salad
 Pear Turnovers & Beverage
HOT HONEY MUSTARD

1 large clove garlic, peeled
 3 tablespoons white wine vinegar
 1/2 cup fork-stirred dry mustard
 1/2 cup honey
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1 teaspoon curry powder
 1/4 cup vegetable oil
 In an electric blender whirl together until smooth the garlic, vinegar, mustard, honey, salt and curry powder; gradually whirl in oil. Refrigerate, tightly covered, for several days to allow flavors to mellow before using. Makes 1 cup.

CHILI TUNA SANDWICHES
 6 1/2-ounce can chunk-style light tuna in oil, undrained
 4-ounce can chopped chilies, drained
 3 tablespoons mayonnaise
 1 tablespoon minced onion
 2 teaspoons lemon juice
 2 teaspoons drained capers
 Sliced bread
 Thoroughly mix together all the ingredients (makes 1 1/2 cups).

Pasties Are Latest Entry In Food Trends

By JAN CORWIN
 Easton Express
PEN ARGYL, Pa. (AP) — The pungent aroma of meat and onions still lingers in Real English Foods Inc.'s bakery in mid-afternoon as the seven workers start to clean up for the day.

"It was the best-kept secret of the Slate Belt," says Garnet T. Sleep Jr., a Slate Belt native who has been marketing pasties for the past two years but just recently bought the bakery.

Sleep says pasties — a meat-and-potatoes turnover resembling a giant pierogie — are the fast food of the '80s. Recently, the Armed Forces commissaries chose to add Real English's "Mr. Pastie" to its shelves, and Sleep noted that an Oriental businessman has approached him about establishing a chain of "Mr. Pastie" franchises in Korea.

"I actually had to put it off," Sleep says of the Korean deal. "I had to say we're not prepared for that."

Not bad for a dish best known as a hot lunch for Welsh and Cornish miners. In fact, Sleep says, pasty (pronounced PASS-tee) may be even older, possibly being part of the menu at King Arthur's round table in Camelot before forks were invented.

Pasties, the firm's only product, were made mostly for local consumption until Sleep, an advertising agency head now living in Washington, D.C., decided to fulfill a boyhood dream.

"I'd always had the idea to market pasties, ever since I lived here," he said. In December 1981, after receiving encouragement from some friends, he took some pasties from the Old English bakery in Pen Argyl to High's Dairy Stores, a convenience store chain based in Washington and a client of Sleep's advertising agency.

By March 1982, Sleep and his wife, Cecelia, who is vice president of the firm, had formed Real English Foods as the distributor for Old English Foods, marketing Mr. Pastie as a hot lunch through High's. And before long, he said, other stores and independent food brokers were asking for the product, either prebaked to reheat for over-the-counter lunch sales or as a frozen entree.

Now it has gone nationwide and soon will go international through the Armed Forces commissaries. Some of the first shipments will be to bases in the United Kingdom, Sleep said.

The pasty then will have gone full circle. There are as many ways to make pasties as there are villages in Wales and Cornwall, Sleep said.

The Slate Belt pasty consists of ground beef, diced potatoes and minced onion wrapped in dough to form a half-circle. Carrots, peas, rutabagas and turnips have all made their way into pasties at one time or another. Sleep says his company is considering making chicken, pork and ham pasties, which have been well-received in local tests.

There are a few other companies in the United States making pasties, Sleep said, but these are machine-made. Real English's pasties are made by hand, starting with the hands of Shirley Suprys.

For 17 years, Ms. Suprys, a Pen Argyl resident, has been the dough lady at the bakery. She has been making pasties since her childhood and estimates she probably has made dough for more than a million pasties in her career.

The dough recipe is simple: "Flour, salt, shortening and water to suit my fingers," Ms. Suprys said. There's no need for a measuring cup. Ms. Suprys knows if the dough is right from "just the way it feels."

The dough then is rolled in a rolling machine that produces flat sheets that are cut into circles. The dough circles are placed into 6-inch-deep pie tins and the onions, potatoes and ground beef are spooned in individually.

The pasty then is closed — the dough folded over the filling and crimped — and frozen or baked.

Images Of Missing Children Printed On Pizza Boxes, Toll Tickets

By FRED BAYLES
Associated Press Writer

They stare back from milk cartons, utility bills, turnpike toll cards — even pizza boxes. They are the faces of the nation's missing children, and their images are rapidly becoming fixtures of American culture.

With awareness growing of the 1.5 million children reported missing each year, public officials and private businesses are finding more and more places to display pictures of lost youngsters.

More than 700 dairies now put photos and information about missing children on their milk cartons. In recent months, the faces have made their way onto grocery bags, truck posters and soda bottles. New Jersey officials talk of putting pictures in state employees' paychecks. A Los Angeles musician has produced a rock video featuring pictures of missing children.

"Everybody in their own way is trying to help," said Howard Wilkinson, president of National Child Safety Council, a Jackson, Mich., non-profit group that has been coordinating the information campaign with dairies and other businesses.

Wilkinson said fast-food chains and candy manufacturers had expressed interest in the program.

"We're dealing with a lot of people who are saying 'This is something good,'" he said.

Examples of those who have joined the search for missing children:

—The California Grocers Association is putting photos on grocery bags, with the program likely to go nationwide this year.

—A Pittsburgh soft drink distributor plans to place "hangers" — strips of paper with photos — on bottles distributed in Cleveland, Buffalo and Pennsylvania's Lehigh Valley.

—The Atlanta Gas Light Co. distributes pictures to 950,000 customers through its monthly "Gas Line" publication.

—Photographs are being posted on Chicago's trains and buses.

—Monterey, Calif., restaurateur Sabu Shake puts pictures of missing children in his menus and plans a letter-writing campaign to encourage other restaurants to follow his lead. "I've got children of my own — six grandchildren and six of my own — and I asked if there wasn't some way I could help," he said.

—Rock musician Devin Payne has produced a music video, "Foolin' Around," that shows pictures of nine missing children. The video, narrated by actor David Soul, has been distributed to 650 television stations.

The use of product packaging as wanted posters began last year in Des Moines, Iowa, when the Anderson-Erickson Dairy printed pictures of John Gosch and Eugene Martin, two local newspaper boys who vanished in separate incidents.

"It just snowballed from there," said Frank Olson, the dairy's assistant manager. "I think more people are aware of what's going on with child abuse and child abduction."

Since then, more than 700 of the nation's 1,800 dairies have put the faces of the missing on their products. Wilkinson estimated 1.5 billion such milk cartons of milk had been distributed nationwide.

"I have children," said Kent Schenkel, vice president of Schenkel's All Star Dairy Inc. of Huntington, Ind. "It was a very easy decision to make."

The milk cartons urge those with information about the children to call 800-843-5678, the National Missing Children Hotline, a federally funded toll-free number.

Carla Branch, the hotline's director, said the number of reported sightings had jumped from eight calls a day to more than 25 calls since the program began last month.

"It seems that everybody drinks milk," she said.

Ms. Branch said the program had used pictures of 35 children who are believed to have been abducted. Since children in such cases are usually taken from their home states, carton manufacturers such as International Paper Co. rotate the pictures from region to region until each child has received national exposure.

Information received by the hotline is referred to local police and the FBI. While no child has been recovered as a result of the program, Ms. Branch said it was only a matter of time.

"With the increased visibility, we can't help but find someone," she said.

Several dairies have expanded the program to prevent child abduction, printing Safety Pup, a cartoon character developed by The National Child Safety Council, on the side of school lunchroom milk cartons.

The superhero character offers such cautions as "Safety Pup Says 'Never go with strangers.'"

Following the disappearance of an 8-year-old Exeter, N.H., girl, Weeks Dairy Foods Inc. of Concord, N.H., began a similar project with a character called Huey Half-Pint.

"We wanted to do something to prevent kids from being taken," said David Kimball, advertising director for Weeks.

While the milk carton programs have been well received, some dairies proceed with caution. Cream O' Weber Highland, a Utah dairy distributor, plans to leave the photos off half its larger milk containers following complaints from some parents.

"They fear their children might be scared," said spokeswoman Kim Redmon.

Child Find, a New Paltz, N.Y., private group, is working with such outlets as the New York State Thruway Authority and a national pizza company to display the pictures of runaways and missing children.

The Thruway Authority plans to put pictures of missing children on the back of the 80 million toll cards printed annually, replacing such slogans like "I Love NY." An estimated 500,000 motorists travel the 559-mile system each day.

Domino's Pizza, a nationwide company, will begin taping flyers on pizza cartons along the East Coast. The plan has already had results in Virginia's Tidewater section where a pilot program led to the return of a 15-year-old runaway.

Virginia Beach Detective Tom Lewis said the girl returned home after she saw her picture on a pizza box. "She realized the seriousness of what she was doing," he said.

Marj Mapes, a spokeswoman for Child Find, said the organization was also working with several companies that had put missing children posters on the sides of trucks and with the 3.5 million circulation "TV Movie News," a publication distributed through 6,500 supermarkets.

She said Child Find had also helped five insurance companies place flyers in renewal forms.

"It's really catching on," said Ms. Mapes. "This is the best source for finding the children."

Master Food Preserver Program To Open May 9

North Carolina consumers can learn the basics of home food preservation with the start of a Master Food Preserver program in Pitt County starting May 9.

The seven-week program is being offered by the Agricultural Extension Service of N.C. State University. It is designed to train volunteers who will then work with others interested in home food preservation.

Among the subjects to be covered in the weekly four-hour lessons are: pressure canning; water bath canning; freezing; jam and jelly preparation; pickling; and drying.

The course will be taught by the Agricultural Extension Service home economists and staff. Classes will include lectures, demonstrations and first-hand experience.

The extension staff will assist volunteers in answering telephone questions, providing information at farm markets, fairs and food preservation workshops and providing personal assistance to beginning canners.

Buddy Bear Shows Children What To Expect At Hospital

They squirmed in their seats, craned their necks and waved their arms to ask questions. The children in a first-grade class at Sadie Saulter School wanted to learn everything they could about a hospital.

They got their chance one winter morning when pediatric nurses Anna Blair and Anita Harrison from Pitt Memorial introduced them to what the group of inquisitive youngsters saw as the mystique and excitement of hospitals. It was all part of an effort to extend the hospital's Pediatric Orientation Program to all first-graders in the public school system.

The centerpiece of the program is a seven-minute slide show called "Buddy Bear's Hospital Story," narrated by Buddy Bear, a cuddly brown teddy bear who is the unofficial mascot of the pediatrics unit. The slide show chronicles Buddy's trip to Pitt Memorial for surgery. Afterward, youngsters are encouraged to ask questions, which are

The nurses bring with them into the classroom miniature surgical masks, caps and gloves which the students can't wait to don. They also show them how to use a stethoscope and blood pressure cuff. Most importantly, the nurses explain how these items fit into the complete picture of hospital care.

While Buddy Bear has only recently "gone public," he has been the star of the Pediatric Orientation Program since it started in 1981. Youngsters have been invited to the hospital to participate in the program, take a tour of the hospital and enjoy juice and cookies in the cafeteria.

The purpose of the program has been to give young patients an idea of what they can expect when they come into the hospital, said Blair, coordinator of the orientation program. It is designed for patients whose hospitalization has been planned in advance, she explained. However, extending it to first-grade classes is an attempt to prepare youngsters who may need to come to the hospital in an emergency.

A letter from the pediatrics staff to the students' parents encourages them to talk with their children about what they learned from the program. "We hope that by watching this program your child will be less afraid of hospitals and will be more at ease if he or she should ever need to be in a hospital," the letter reads.

"Studies have proven that programs of this nature decrease anxiety," Blair said. They also make children more willing to cooperate with health care professionals and reduce the length of time they are hospitalized, she said.

The visit to a first-grade classroom at Sadie Saulter School was only the first of what Blair hopes will be many educational sessions in schools in Eastern North Carolina. With National Children and Hospitals Week set for March 24-30, she hopes to schedule a number of Buddy Bear programs in the near future. Educators who would like to take advantage of this opportunity should call Blair at 757-4979.

St. Patrick's Day Calls For Special Foods

By TOM HOGE

AP Wine and Food Writer

As sons and daughters of Ireland here and abroad pay annual tribute to St. Patrick, it seems timely to discuss some of the Emerald Isle's favorite foods.

There was a time when the Irish, especially the country folk, lived on potatoes and little else because that was all they could afford. But times have changed.

Corned beef and cabbage, of course, is the traditional feast of St. Patrick's, especially in America. In Ireland, however, many families feature that meat on Dec. 25, just after midnight ends the Christmas Eve fast. But the Irish usually serve the spicy meat cold to lead off the Yuletide banquet.

Ireland has many culinary specialties, such as its renowned white soda bread, as well as griddle, brown and potato breads. These baked delights are usually served with heather-scented honey or one of the country's tangy cheeses.

Ireland is famous for the salmon and trout that swim its well-stocked rivers. Another favorite is the plump Dublin prawn. The country is also known for its delicious oysters, and when the season opens in September, a number of inns stage oyster festivals.

Irish cuisine also features smoked eels, County Down ham and Antrim ham.

Festivals are popular in Ireland and one favorite is the annual beer fete in Kilkenny, held late in May. Another popular beverage, of course, is Irish coffee, featuring Irish whiskey and rich Irish cream.

One unusual dish served at Shannon Airport is scallop chowder, which I sampled on one of my visits and found delicious.

Since everyone knows about corned beef and cabbage, I am featuring another St. Patrick's special: Lime Salad.

- 1 one-pound can sliced peaches, syrup included
- 2 three-ounce packages lime

- gelatin
- 2 cups boiling water
- 1 cup cold water
- 1 cup of seedless grapes, cut in half

Coleslaw

Drain peaches. To the syrup add enough water to make 1 cup. Dissolve gelatin in boiling water. Add cold water and the peach syrup. Chill until partly jellied. Place 1 cup of gelatin mixture into a 6-cup salad mold and chill. Place 12 peach slices on the gelatin. Dice remaining peaches. Add peach bits and grapes to remaining gelatin. Pour into mold. Chill until firm. Unmold onto serving platter, surrounding with coleslaw. Serves 6 to 8 people.

R. L. Stevenson As Chronicler Of Colonialism's Dark Age

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

VAILIMA, Western Samoa (AP) — That old tale-spinner Robert Louis Stevenson, moldering away now for nearly a century in his Samoan mountaintop grave, is re-emerging these days in a new role — as an early chronicler of colonialism's dark age.

A recent book about the creator of "Treasure Island" shows how Stevenson, in a feverishly productive final five years in the South Pacific, turned from romance to reality to expose colonialism in what today is called the Third World.

In the novella "Beach of Falesa," the celebrated Scot's message was bold enough to draw his publisher's displeasure — and heavy editing.

The story, of miscegenation and of white traders' manipulation of Pacific natives, offended Victorian sensibilities, notes Barry Menikoff, author of "Robert Louis Stevenson and 'The Beach of Falesa': A Study in Victorian Publishing" (Stanford University Press), which publishes the unexpurgated text for the first time.

"The English did not want to see themselves in such a bad light, as imperialists," Menikoff said.

"But this side of Stevenson that people don't know, the Pacific side, was extremely influential — on Conrad, Kipling, Jack London. They all read and were affected by Stevenson."

Today, in the villages below Mount Vaea's thickly green slopes, few Samoans read Stevenson.

"When I was a girl, we had to learn his life by heart," said Fanaafi Le Tagaloo, a middle-aged educator who has produced the only Samoan translation of "Treasure Island."

"Nowadays, there's simply a dearth of Stevenson material here."

But "Tusitala" — The Tale-Teller — is not forgotten. Samoans burnish his memory with myth and mystery.

"You go see Tusitala!" children shout to visitors and tag along on the hour's climb to the lofty burial site. Down below, workers trim the broad lawns of Vailima, the grand Stevenson mansion that is now an official government residence. Inside, his writing room is kept as it was.

When he sailed into nearby Apia harbor in 1889 aboard a chartered schooner with his American wife, Fanny, the author was 40, famous and sickly, looking for a healthy climate. He already had written his big moneymakers — "Treasure Island," "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Kidnapped."

Within weeks Stevenson decided to settle here on Samoa's flowery Upolu island, half a world away from London's literary salons.

He bought 300 wilderness acres and built "my beautiful shining, windy house," unequaled in the primitive South Seas — great hall lined with California redwood, large library, Samoa's only fireplace.

Like a Samoan chieftain, he gathered a clan around him — elderly mother, stepchildren, a cousin.

Seventy-two tons of family furniture and household goods were shipped from Britain. Vailima's table offered the local and the exotic — banana and pineapple and wine sent from Bourdeaux.

"We have been low in the past; but now we are as belly gods, enjoying all things," Stevenson wrote a friend.

He felt healthy and able to work as never before, producing 700,000 words for publication in five years.

He focused on colonialism, a subject he studied closely in his South Seas travels. He wrote "Footnote to History," criticizing great-power intervention, and three fiction works on the encounter of white man and native, including "Beach of Falesa."

"He moved up from historical romances to contemporary times.

He wanted to educate the English to their colonialism," said John Enright, a Stevenson specialist who teaches English at the community college in nearby American Samoa.

In "Beach of Falesa," a white trader casually takes a beautiful Samoan woman as his partner, another white man terrorizes natives by preying on superstitions and white missionaries are ridiculed.

In his book, Menikoff said entire passages of "Falesa" were bowdlerized because they clashed with the British establishment's "most deeply held political, sexual and religious convictions."

In a telephone interview, Menikoff, a University of Hawaii English professor, said Stevenson's Pacific work foreshadowed such later "colonialist" literature as E.M. Forster's "Passage to India."

"This was the most important aspect of Stevenson's career, when he reached maturity," Menikoff said.

But Stevenson never wrote his great book, which he planned to call "The South Seas." A stroke felled him at age 44, on the evening of Dec. 3, 1894.

Overnight, working in shifts, Samoans under the orders of their chiefs hacked a path up steep Mount Vaea, and then carried his coffin to the summit, where Stevenson wished to be put to rest.

The green- and white-enameled tomb still looks out over a turquoise southern sea, inscribed with the epitaph he wrote:

"Here he lies where he longed to be:

Home is the sailor, home from the sea,
And the hunter home from the hill."

Issuing New Olympics Stamp

The U.S. Postal Service will issue a commemorative stamp honoring the "Winter Special Olympics on March 25. The 22-cent stamp (new rate) will have first day issuances at Park City, Utah, which along with Salt Lake City, is one of the sites of the 1985 International Winter Special Olympics Games.

The Special Olympics were organized in 1968 with a national meet for 1,000 athletes co-sponsored by the Joseph P. Kennedy, Jr. Foundation and the Chicago Park District. Today more than one million mentally handicapped children and adults participate in the international year-round program of recreation, sports training and competition. The games are held every four years, just like the regular Olympics.

Also on the 1985 agenda is a booklet stamp featuring the American flag flying over the U.S. Capitol. The design will be the width of two ordinary booklet stamps and will be featured in the first U.S. booklet pane to offer a single row of five stamps. These booklets will be sold from vending machines only. The denomination will be the new 22-cent rate.

In 1980, two Indian tribes in Maine were recompensed with $81.5 million on claims going back to a 1790 statute, says National Geographic.

Two ECU Artists Have Work In Green Hill Show

GREENSBORO — Two artists from the faculty of the School of Art, East Carolina University, are among 42 artists in North Carolina who were invited to submit work in the fall of 1984 for showing in Rome, Italy. The invitational show was sponsored by the Italian Ministry of Cultural Affairs, Rome, and the Teatro Club, a cultural organization. The show, "USA Portrait of the South," has returned from Italy and is now on view at the Green Hill Center for North Carolina Art, 200 North Davie Street, Greensboro. The exhibit opened at Green Hill Friday and will remain on view until April 4. Admission is free. Center hours are 10 to 5 Tuesdays-Fridays, and 2 to 5 Saturdays and Sundays, closed Mondays and holidays.

The Greenville artists invited, Paul Hartley and Clarence Morgan, are both painters and were among seven North Carolina painters invited to submit work.

By numbers, the other artists in various categories, were: drawing, printmaking, and mixed media, 11; glass, five; clay, seven; tapestry, two; photography, five; wood, three; and metal, two.

New York Fortress Of Medieval Treasures

By ROGER CAWLEY
New York State

Department Of Commerce
NEW YORK, N.Y. — Atop the bluffs of the Hudson River along Manhattan's northern skyline stands a remote medieval-looking fortress. Yet the imposing granite structure harbors peaceful motives. It is the Cloisters, a modern museum designed as a medieval European monastery to display art works from the Middle Ages. While its origins are of more recent vintage, the Cloisters' reach extends back nearly a thousand years.

Begun in 1934, construction of the museum took four years to complete, chiefly with the support of John D. Rockefeller, Jr. He donated its present site and funded the Metropolitan Museum of Art's purchase of the original private collection of George Grey Barnard when it came up for sale. He also donated gifts from his private collection.

The Cloisters is an aperture to an age, an era of kingdoms and dynasties, austere monasteries and pious artisans, common folk and wealthy patrons to inspire painters, sculptors, engravers and builders. It is their legacy of superb religious and secular art works that the Cloisters exhibits.

The name of the museum is derived from a custom of medieval monasteries to group important buildings around a central cloister or open rectangular court with a covered and arcaded passageway along the sides. Throughout its cloisters, arcades, gardens and exhibition rooms, the museum displays European art and architecture from the period of the 12th through the 15th centuries. What distinguishes the Cloisters as well is its atmosphere and attitude, notes William Wixom, chairman of the department of medieval art at the Metropolitan Museum of Art and the Cloisters.

"The works of art here are some of the finest produced in the Middle Ages," he explains. "We attempt to present them in a sympathetic way and in a dramatic setting, high above the Hudson River. They are shown in a way that avoids the hustle and bustle of other New York City museums and allows for quietude and contemplation." And there is much to contemplate. One of the museum's prized possessions is the renowned

Stamp News

India has announced the issuance of a special diamond-shaped 50-paise stamp to honor the late Prime Minister Indira Gandhi. Indira's father, Jawaharlal Nehru, was one of the prime architects of the national independence drive which resulted in the British relinquishing their colonial rule in 1947. He was India's first Prime Minister from 1947 until his death in 1964 at the age of 75. Indira Gandhi, following in her father's footsteps, was elected to the first of four terms in 1966.

The U.S. Postal Service says it will issue a stamp later this year in conjunction with the 50th anniversary of American Mothers, Inc. Also on the 1985 agenda will be a "Combat Hunger" commemorative stamp.

set of seven tapestries known collectively as the Hunt of the Unicorn. Woven of wool, silk, silver and silver-gilt threads, the tapestries represent an unrivaled example of rich religious symbolism, color and superb details from the life, customs and costumes of the late 15th century.

Adjacent to the Unicorn tapestries is the room of the Nine Heroes Tapestries produced by Paris artisans around the year 1385. These elaborate and finely crafted weavings provide a glimpse of medieval court life replete with portraits of bishops, cardinals, knights, ladies, musicians, spearmen and archers.

On view in the more than two dozen exhibition rooms is a treasure trove of intricate wood carvings, furniture, religious statuary of alabaster, ivory and other precious materials, stained glass panels, marble capitals and jewel-encrusted decorative and religious objects. A more serious atmosphere prevails among the sepulchral monuments and chapel rooms from the 14th century that suggest the strongly felt ties between religious belief and faith in the hereafter.

Among more recent additions to the museum's collections, financed by the endowment arranged by John

D. Rockefeller, Jr., have been a 13th century French salt cellar made of gold, crystal and semi-precious stones, and a wonderfully preserved deck of 15th century playing cards from Belgium.

The Cloisters, a branch of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, is located in Fort Tryon Park in upper Manhattan.

Girl Guides Stamps For Isle Of Man

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

The Isle of Man loves its Girl Guides.

The little island in the Irish Sea off the northwest coast of England hails the 75th anniversary of the Girl Guides Association by issuing five new stamps featuring scenes of Girl Guides' activities and leaders of the organization. The Girl Guides is equivalent to the Girl Scouts in the United States.

In 1909 The Girl Guides asked for official recognition as "Girl Scouts" from Robert Baden-Powell, founder of the Boy Scout movement. Baden-Powell turned down the request (as a name unsuitable for girls) and chose the name "Guides" after Queen Victoria's Corps of Guides in India. In 1910 the Guides organization was formed.

The Isle of Man Post Office Authority says of this new set of stamps: "Since 1985 has been designated International Youth Year by the United Nations General Assembly, the emphasis on young people gives a natural link with a stamp issue honoring the Girl Guides Association."

The 11-pence shows a view of Cunningham House, present Guide Headquarters in the Isle of Man. Also seen are vignette portraits of Mrs. Joseph Cunningham and Mrs. Willie Cunningham, early commissioners.

The 14-pence depicts Her Royal Highness Princess Margaret, President of the Girl Guides Association. Three Guides, as a color guard, hold the Isle of Man standard.

The 29-pence illustrates the first and second Guide Headquarters in the Isle of Man. The opening ceremonies for both buildings were performed by Lady Olave Baden-Powell.

The 31-pence displays variations of Guide uniforms from 1910 to 1985. Also included are present-day Guide and Brownie uniforms.

The stamps are available at your local stamp dealer.

Illumina Art Show To Open March 17

Art works in various media by East Carolina University student artists will be on view March 17-30 in the ECU student center. The exhibition is the Student Union Visual Arts Committee's annual "Illumina" art competition and show.

Works will be selected and judged by professional jurors, with the winning pieces displayed in Mendenhall Student Center. According to Steven Zakeley of the Visual Arts Committee, previous shows have included works in such three-dimensional media as ceramics and sculpture along with paintings, drawings prints and photographs.

A reception, open to the public, is set for 7 to 9 p.m. March 17 in the student center gallery will formally open the show.

Master Arts Sessions

NEW SMYRNA BEACH, FLA. — Jeweler William Harper, short-story writer Bobbie Ann Mason and composer Henry Brant will be in residence at Atlantic Center for the Arts in New Smyrna Beach, Fla. from May 20 to June 7. Applications are now being accepted for the three-week session.

For complete information on eligibility, fees, etc. write to: Atlantic Center for the Arts, 1414 Art Center Ave., New Smyrna Beach, Fla., 32069, or call 904/427-6975.

New Sound System

MANTEO — "The Lost Colony" will have a new sound system this year, provided by a $19,800 grant from the Theatre Arts Section of the North Carolina Arts Council. The grant will be used to refabricate and update the sound system now at "The Lost Colony."

All components of the system will be returned to a proper sound engineering complex and will include a new mixing board, and paging and monitoring system.

Mudslides

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — A heavy summer rain started mudslides in Rio's hillside slum districts and flooded beaches and highways in the smart tourist district over the weekend, leaving 19 people dead, officials said.

A 5-month-old baby and a middle-aged man were killed when the pounding rain loosed a rock onto traffic at a busy shopping mall.

Flash floods left motorists stranded along Rio's famous Copacabana and Ipanema beaches and in other sections of the tourist district where thigh-high water filled streets.

Retirement Helps Career

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Dean Stockwell found that retirement was good for his career.

Stockwell, an actor for 40 of his 48 years, packed up his belongings three years ago and moved with his new wife, Joy, to Santa Fe, N.M. After 55 films he was calling it quits.

"I took a six-week, very difficult real estate course and an exam and got my license," he said. He never got to use it.

When Stockwell moved out, Hollywood came calling. First he was cast in "Paris, Texas," as drifter Harry Dean Stanton's brother.

Three Shows Now On View At The Greenville Museum Of Art

Three shows are on the walls at the Greenville Museum of Art, two new ones — watercolors by Holly Brewster Simons; collages and drawings by Bob Ray; and a carry over show, paintings by Ariane Clark.

Simons, a resident of Raleigh, is exhibiting watercolors in the North Gallery. These are works marked by perfection — in accuracy of depicted subject matter, colors and painting technique. Her subjects include flowers, boats at dock, snow scenes in the forest, abandoned farm equipment, foreign streets and villages, and rural weathered wood buildings. Every flower, leaf, tree limb, and piece of wood is structurally correct, yet her mastery of technique, and her ability to aptly choose an isolated segment of a total scene elevates these paintings above the merely photographic. Simons makes fine use of white, untouched spaces to give a good balance to her compositions.

These paintings, all imbued with total serenity, should find favor with a wide audience seeking the solace of unmarred beauty translated into an art form.

In the South Gallery, Bob Ray, an M.F.A. candidate at East Carolina University, is showing a small collection of collages and drawing. The collages, minimal constructions on a small scale, are somewhat lost against the gallery walls. I have the distinct feeling these precisely formulated compositions would result in a much stronger impact in a different setting — possibly a larger number grouped together would more strongly engage the attention of a viewer. Most are comprised of stark black lines drawn or pasted on with narrow tape on cut segments of beige or cream paper. The three larger works in graphite include one very recent work, dated 1985. These three have a degree of emotional involvement that seem missing in the collages.

The carry over exhibit, oil paintings by Ariane Clark, are on display in the Upstairs Gallery. These paintings in a wide palette of color, are of a nature entirely opposite of the controlled watercolors of Simons. With the exception of two pieces, Clark's flowers, still lifes, operatically-grouped people and a large waterfall scene are painted with brushes heavily laden with paint. Her style can best be characterized as oriented to one bordering on the flamboyant. Clark's work will please viewers who like their art in a full range of brilliant colors. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tuesdays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Wednesdays through Fridays, 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturdays, 1 to 5 p.m.

Sundays, closed Mondays and major holidays. The Greenville Museum of Art is located at 802 South Evans Street. Admission is free.

ECU Art Dean Exhibiting In Waterworks Gallery Show

SALISBURY — Dr. Edward Levine, dean of the School of Art, East Carolina University, is currently exhibiting a site-specific installation at the Waterworks Gallery in Salisbury.

Levine has exhibited nationally, including the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) in Winston-Salem, the North Carolina Museum of Art, Artists Space in New York City, the Minneapolis College of Art and Design, and Ohio State University. He holds a B.A. degree from Yale University and the M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from New York University. He has written articles for the Arts Journal, Art Forum, Arts Magazine, and other art publications.

Commenting on his recent (1984) installation at SECCA, Levine said: "Although art may be experienced in a multiplicity of ways and from various perspectives, the most powerful for me happens when the content of art is felt as an act of discovery, the process through which and by which both artist and viewer move through the shadow and substance of the world... An art of discovery seeks a form of enchantment..."

Other exhibitors with work currently on view at The Waterworks Gallery are Mary Lou Stewart of Jackson, Mississippi, who shows paintings and North Carolinian Patrick Dougherty, with a site-specific sculpture.

The Waterworks Gallery is located at Number One Water Street in Salisbury. Gallery hours are 10 to 5 on Mondays through Fridays, and 2 to 5 Sundays. Admission is free.

Karpinski Art In Salem Show

WINSTON-SALEM — Leslie Karpinski of Greenville has a mixed media work on view in the exhibition, "After Her Own Image — Woman's Work 1985" currently on view at Salem Academy and College in Winston-Salem.

Ms. Karpinski is a graduate student in painting at East Carolina University. Her entry, "Untitled No. 8," won a $300 cash award from the Henley Paper Company.

Juror Dorothy Gillespie selected 194 works from nearly 1,100 entries submitted by women artists from all parts of the nation.

March Designated Youth Art Month

RALEIGH — March is being recognized in North Carolina and throughout the nation as "Youth Art Month." This is the ninth year that the observance has been carried out in North Carolina.

This year's Youth Art Month chairman is Emmy L. Whitehead, arts coordinator for the Pitt County schools. "Youth Art Month provides a focus for telling the public that art education develops self-esteem, appreciation for the work of others, a sense of pride in self-expression," Mrs. Whitehead said.

Statewide, schools are planning billboards and other programs to exhibit children's art during the month, one way of emphasizing the importance of art in the schools.

For details or ideas on celebrating Youth Art Month, contact Mrs. Whitehead at 752-6106.

Thesis Show To Open

The 1985 Thesis Exhibition for candidates for Master of Fine Arts degrees in the School of Art, East Carolina University, will be on view at Gray Gallery on campus from March 15 to April 7.

A preview and reception, open to the public, will be held beginning at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, March 14.

Gallery hours are 10 to 5 Mondays through Fridays, and 1 to 4 on Sundays.

Tuesday Is 266th Anniversary Of Blackbeard's Pirates Trial

By NORMAN PENDERED
 March 12 marks the 266th anniversary of the piracy trials of the crew of Blackbeard, the fiercest pirate of all. It was on this day in 1719 that the Court of Vice Admiralty under the Great Seal of England convened at Williamsburg, Va. to try 15 of Blackbeard's men for piracy on the high seas.

men from Virginia had killed or wounded all 22 of the pirates. Even though outnumbered nearly three to one, Blackbeard's men had fought viciously and killed or wounded 26 of the Virginians. Blood had run freely from the ship's skippers that day on the Outer Banks.
 After the battle the surviving nine wounded pirates were shackled in the ship's hold and carried to Bath where the king's men licked their wounds for 35 days before returning to Virginia. While in Bath, six more pirates were rounded up including the notorious Israel Hands, Blackbeard's sailing master and Robert Louis Stevenson's prototype for the gunner's mate in "Treasure Island."

Virginia's Governor Spotswood had delayed the pirate trials because of three ugly rumors circulating about the countryside — Blackbeard and his men had been within the benefits of his majesty's pardon when killed or captured; the sloops from Virginia had been fitted out after Blackbeard's pardon had arrived; and the government of North Carolina was taking steps to exonerate the pirate crew from any piracies since their surrender.

The original records of the trial were damaged by fire in Virginia's capitol building and later completely destroyed during the War between the States. Fortunately, the trial evidence had been forwarded to North Carolina's Governor Eden with the court's opinion that the Secretary of the Province, Tobias Knight, was an accessory to the piracies of Blackbeard. For this reason a complete record of the trial is preserved in North Carolina's archives in Raleigh.

At the beginning of the trials the court heard a petition from the government of North Carolina. The petition demanded the return of the pirates taken prisoner on the grounds that Virginia had no right to abduct any person from North Carolina and try him for piracy without permission of the king of England.

This petition was, of course, without foundation because a pirate is regarded as an international outlaw and an enemy of the human race. Under 18th century law those who capture pirates can put them to death if the captors cannot safely bring the pirates to some government for trial. In other words, the captors of pirates may hang them without any formality of law.

The court overruled the petition and continued the trials.

William Bell and his son were brought from Currituck to testify against the pirates. Other testimony was heard from the pirates — Israel Hands, Richard Stiles, James Black, James White, and Thomas Gates. Captain Brand, who had traveled overland from Virginia to capture Blackbeard and his crew if they were at Bath, also testified.

After hearing the evidence, the Admiralty Court quickly reached a decision and found 14 of the 15 prisoners guilty of piracy as charged and sentenced them to be hanged immediately.

Thirteen of the pirates were escorted from the public gaol and hanged on 13 trees along the road leading to Capitol Landing, Williamsburg. For years afterwards this thoroughfare was known as Gallows Road.

Samuel Odell was the only prisoner found innocent of piracy. It is believed that Odell had taken part in the battle because a contemporary writer, Captain Charles Johnson (thought by some to be the English novelist, Daniel Defoe) reported that Odell had received 70 wounds in the battle! Despite this participation, Odell pleaded that he had been forced against his will to serve on the pirate ship. The court found him not guilty.

England bearing word that the time limit of his majesty's pardon for pirates had been extended. The convicted Hands pleaded for his pardon and it was granted. Hands had not been in the bloody battle at Ocracoke because of a gunshot wound in his knee inflicted by Blackbeard in a moment of rage. Years later Hands, still limping from his wound, became a beggar in the streets of London.

With the death of Blackbeard and the hanging of his pirate cutthroats, the "Golden Age of Piracy" came to an end in the New World.

(Editor's Note: Dr. Pendered, a professor at East Carolina University, is the author of two books and numerous articles on 18th century piracy, especially in North Carolina. A third book is nearing completion. He is a speaker on Blackbeard in public schools in the area.)

NEW STAMPS — The United States Postal Service has announced that a block of four 22-cent stamps depicting four duck decoys will be issued March 22 in Shelburne, Vermont. The ceremony will be held at the Shelburne Village School. The stamps were designed by Steven Dohanos of Westport, Connecticut. (AP Laserphoto)

A Review New N.C. Guidebook

The Vacationer: The Only All-North Carolina Travel Guide. North Carolina 400th Anniversary Souvenir Edition. Edited by Thomas A. Williams and Charles F. Simpson. Greenville, S&S Publishers, 1985. Paper, 224 pages, $9.95.

A handy-sized book with some good features, "The Vacationer" in the end fails to live up to the tantalizing promises of its subtitles.

It contains a few good color photographs, some useful facts such as toll-free numbers, and at least mentions most major places and events in the three main areas of the state, east to west.

There is a brief history of the state, as well as a summary of interesting facts about the state, miles of coastline, largest lake, and so on. Most lists do include a phone number or address for obtaining further information. The book is a convenient size, the slick paper is pleasant to thumb through, and the cover is attractive.

The text in "The Vacationer" is mixed with advertisements and these plus the lack of a table of contents and a real index make the book difficult to use. (What is called an index at the end is really a table of contents of sorts). Trout fishermen must guess that the article they want is somewhere in the hard-to-find section on the mountain counties. Skiing is mentioned throughout the book, but interested skiers must leaf through to locate the articles, lists, and references.

The book appears to offer only material that was readily available, from chambers of commerce for instance, rather than determining what travelers really need to know and setting out to get that information.

The maps have not been selected or edited for their present purpose and are mostly unusable or irrelevant. The high price may put off tourists who can find other travel publications for less than what "The Vacationer" costs.

Ceremony

BEAUFORT — A special commissioning ceremony on Friday, March 15, will celebrate the completion of the 24 foot ship's boat. This public ceremony will take place at 3 p.m. at the museum's Watercraft Center, 322 Front Street, Beaufort. A reception sponsored by the 400th Anniversary Committee of Carteret County follows the ceremony.

In 1983 the Friends of Elizabeth II commissioned the N. C. Maritime Museum to research, design and construct a companion vessel to the Elizabeth II, North Carolina's quadricentennial ship, specifying a boat typical of the 16th century Elizabethan era.

Following several months of research by the museum's maritime researcher, Mike Alford, construction of the vessel began in March, 1984. Built by master boatbuilder Geoffrey Scofield, assisted by David Flagler, the construction of the ship's boat was offered as a public demonstration in the museum under the watchful eyes of thousands of visitors.

The ship's boat is 24 feet long by six and one-half feet wide and is made entirely of native oak and white cedar.

Plan ahead for your vacation with the help of travel guide books from the library.

"San Francisco in Your Pocket" is a handy directory of restaurants, hotels, museums, theaters, stores, nightlife, famous landmarks — the best of the city's sights, services and pleasures. The guide gives you the best of the Bay Area — annual events, antique shops, art galleries, all types of stores, restaurants, tours, etc. It also includes Chinatown, Fisherman's Wharf, Alcatraz and other places of interest.

"The City Observed: Los Angeles" by Charles Moore and others depicts its architecture and landscapes. It covers a tremendous amount of territory (ranging from Malibu in the west to the San Fernando Valley in the north, from Riverside in the east to San Juan Capistrano in the south), and a wide variety of architectural forms and styles including Spanish revival, Disney fantasy, Hollywood vulgar and the modernism and post-modernism of Frank Lloyd Wright, Frank Gehry, Cesar Pelli and Charles Moore himself. It provides lively and penetrating appraisals of the buildings and sets them in their broader historical and cultural contexts and evokes the elusive character of the city as a whole.

"Mobile Travel Guide" is a series of regional guides published by Rand McNally in collaboration with Mobil Oil Corporation that lists and rates accommodations and restaurants. They select a cross section of accommodations and restaurants reflecting a wide range in both price and type. All attractions, events and federal, state, provincial and city agencies are contacted annually to correct and update their material. Books available in the series are: "California and the West," "Great Lakes Area," "Middle Atlantic States," "Northeastern States," "Northwest and Great Plains States," "Southeastern States," and "Southwest and South Central Area."

Eugene Fodor's well known series of travel guides tell you what to see and what to do in an area. They present background on history, geography, culture and the way of life and give practical information on hotels, restaurants, shopping, local transportation and much more. The guides are reviewed, revised and updated annually. Books in the series available at the library are: "Fodor's Caribbean and Bahamas," "Fodor's Europe," "Fodor's Mexico," "Fodor's New England," "Fodor's South," and "Fodor's U.S.A."

"Rand McNally National Park Guide" by Michael Frome covers all 48 National Parks and more than 300 other vacation sites administered by the National Park Service. It includes full-color maps and the best recreations and attractions, camping, nearby points of interest and where to stay in and near the parks. This leading guide to America's National Parks is updated and revised annually to save time and money and get you where you want to go.

"Rand McNally Campground and Trailer Park Directory" covers the United States, Canada, and Mexico. Updated and revised annually, it has unique color charts and maps to help you locate and compare campgrounds. The campgrounds included in the directory have been chosen in order to present the broadest range of camping experiences.

TO BE IN CONCERT WEDNESDAY . . . Miami native Marvis Martin will be in concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday, March 13 in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus. She sings with the Metropolitan Opera, and has appeared in opera productions in the U.S. and abroad. For ticket information, call 757-6611.

Marvis Martin To Concert March 13

Soprano Marvis Martin, whom some critics have termed "the new Leontyne Price," will perform at East Carolina University March 13, at 8 p.m. Her appearance, set for Wright Auditorium, is the final event of the 1984-85 ECU Artists Series.

Miss Martin has won acclaim for her performance in opera and recital and with orchestra since making her Metropolitan Opera debut in 1982 as Pamina in "The Magic Flute." She has also sung other featured roles with the Met and other opera companies. Future engagements include singing the role of Mimi in "La Boheme" with the Seattle Opera, and appearances with the Netherlands Opera and at Carnegie Hall and the Metropolitan Opera, the latter two with Marilyn Horne.

Her performances have included a 1982 debut with the Chicago Symphony at the Ravinia Festival in Haydn's "Lord Nelson Mass" and Mozart's "Mass in C minor," both conducted by James Levine, and a 1983 guest artist appearance at the Spoleto U.S.A. Festival. She has also appeared in choral and orchestral presentations at Lincoln Center and the Metropolitan Museum in New York.

Among her honors and awards are the Kathleen Ferrier Prize, the 1983 National Opera Institute Competition gold medal and three prizes in the 1980 Concours International de Chant in Paris.

A native of Miami, Fla., Marvis Martin has degrees from the University of Miami and the Manhattan School of Music.

Tickets for her ECU recital are available at the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center. For details on ticket prices, call 757-6611.

Kinks Concert Set

The rock group Kinks will perform in Greenville beginning at 8 p.m. Saturday, March 16 at Minges Coliseum on the East Carolina University campus. The name of the opening act for Kinks is not known at this time.

The concert is sponsored by the Student Union Major Concert Series. Tickets can be purchased at the Central Ticket Office, Mendenhall Student Center, and information and ticket reservations can be made by calling 757-6611, extension 266.

Two Student Recitals Set

Two juniors in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present recitals during the coming week at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. The recitals are free and open to the public.

On Thursday, March 14, Joanne M. Legg of Goldsboro, a student of Rodney Schmidt, will perform a junior recital in violin. She will be assisted by Joanne Swartz of La Grange.

She has chosen three compositions for her program — Tommaso Vitali's "Chaconne;" Mozart's "Adagio in E Major;" and Bela Bartok's "Rumanian Dances."

At 7 p.m. Friday, March 15, Angela Dawn Wilcox of New Bern, a student of James Searl, will perform in a trumpet recital. She will be accompanied by Alisa Wetherington, piano, and assisted by Larry Hobbs, horn; Jonathan Sills, piano; James Barnard, trumpet; Davis Clark, tuba; and John Pruitt, trombone.

Selections she will perform are "Sonata for Trumpet," by Handel; D. Whites's "Sonata for Trumpet and Piano;" Gabay's "Boutade;" and the first movement of Frackenpal's "Brass Quintet."

Students and staff at Aycock Junior High School are planning a Freedom Assembly as the highlight of a Freedom Celebration drive Tuesday through Thursday to collect money for the Statue of Liberty repair fund.

The assembly will be held beginning at 9:30 a.m. Thursday. Dr. Maria Malby from the East Carolina University Foreign Language Department will be the special guest. She will speak about her personal experiences when as a young woman she immigrated from Yugoslavia to the United States.

The assembly will open with student musicians performing Cole Porter's "Another Op'nin, Another Show," to be followed by a medley, "The Golden Age of Broadway" featuring George Gershwin's "Strike Up the Band."

To dramatize the importance of repairs underway to the 100-year-old Statue of Liberty given to the U.S. by France 100 years ago in 1884, a number of student speakers will relate the history of this lady who has come to symbolize the promise of opportunity to generations of new Americans. Students taking part in the presentation will be Burnell Battle, Chris Brown, Trina Jenkins, Christy Davenport, Laurie Granade, Kia Hardy, Mills Jones, Shirley Kelly, Edward Moore and Tomecka Stevenson.

The assembly will also feature members of the school chorus, accompanied by Chris Marks, in a salute to American music with selections to include a medley of George M. Cohan's songs as well as "America the Beautiful" and Irving Berlin's "God Bless America."

Another segment of the celebration will be a display of student art work with the theme of freedom to be displayed within the school.

The project to raise funds for the Statue of Liberty repair is sponsored by the Choral Department, Patricia Hiss, director; the Art Department, Patricia Hampton, director; and the Student Government Association, Sonya Daniels, president and Alan Pearce, advisor.

The assembly celebration at 9:15 Thursday is open to the public.

Brewington Recital

John H. Brewington of Virginia Beach, Va., a graduate student in the School of Music, East Carolina University, will present his graduate recital in percussion at 7 p.m. Thursday, March 14. The recital will be in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus. It is free and open to the public.

Brewington is a student of Harold Jones. For his recital, he will be accompanied by ECU faculty pianist Paul Tardif and by ECU music students Mike Marshall, saxophone; Guy Cantonwine, bass, and Brian Lewis, drums.

Brewington has chosen six works for his recital. One of the selections, ECU student composer David Garza's "Pentamix," is being given its premiere performance in this program.

The five other works on the program are two pieces by Jim Odgren, "Skyward Bound" and "Tierra del Fuego;" William Kraft's "Images;" Keiko Abe's "Variations on Children's Songs;" and J.S. Bach's "Sonata in B minor."

Band Boosters To Meet

The Greenville City Band Boosters will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Rose High School gymnasium.

Scholarship winners for the ECU Summer Band Camp will be announced. Entertainment will be provided by the Elementary Honors Band, the Greenville Middle School Honors Band, and the Aycock Junior High Concert and Symphonic Bands.

Nine Played In Honors Band

FREE CONCERT — Guitarist Rob Nathanson will perform "Strumming," a work composed for him by David Kechley of Wilmington, during a concert presented by the North Carolina Composers Alliance at the North Carolina Museum of Art. The free performance will be at 3 p.m. Sunday, March 17 in the museum auditorium. (Photo courtesy NCMA)

Nine string students from Greenville took part in the Eastern Regional Honors Orchestra, held this year March 1-3 on the campus of Methodist College, Fayetteville. The North Carolina Music Educators Association Orchestra Section sponsors the annual event for outstanding high school string players.

Local performers, selected on the basis of auditions held earlier in the year, were: first violins — Andrea Bath, Robert Haggard, Josh Hickman, Danielle Nieman; second violins — Sarah Yarbrough, Kendra Harris, Aaron Nieman, Carsten Dose; cello — Jennifer Lucht.

With the exception of Yarbrough (D.H. Conley) and Lucht (Aycock Junior High), all are students at Rose High School.

Additional recognition was given to four of the performers, who were awarded special positions as a result of auditions held at the beginning of the three day event: Bath, concertmaster; Haggard, assistant concertmaster; Yarbrough, principal of second violin section; and Lucht, principal of cello section.

Of the 23 schools represented from eastern North Carolina, the Greenville City orchestra program, directed by Paul Emerson, had the largest representation.

Guest clinician and conductor of the final concert was William Starr, presently adjunct professor of music at the University of Colorado. Starr has conducted youth orchestras throughout the U.S. and in Australia, Japan, and England. He has served on the Fulbright Committee to select advanced string players for study abroad and is the author of several music texts.

Two students were selected for the honors orchestra but were unable to attend — violinists Mary Paul Castellow of Aycock, and Sheila Pearson of Rose High.

Piano Festival Held

Three young pianists were awarded scholarships and 18 others received recognition for outstanding performance during the Greenville Piano Teachers Association Piano Festival held March 2.

The festival, held at the School of Music, East Carolina University, had a total of 203 student pianists from Greenville and the area participating. All were students of members of the Greenville Piano Teachers Association. Each played for one of the five judges and received comments and a rating.

One student in the senior division and two in the junior division each received a scholarship to the 1985 Piano Music Camp to be held at ECU. The senior winner is Chris Marks. The junior winners are Brian Marks and Taylor Evans. Runners up were Penny McCreary in the senior division, and Alicia Pascaio in the junior division.

The 18 students awarded recognition for outstanding performance were: Li-Chun Hsu, Lisa Muzzarelli, Charlene Ahn, Michael Turner, Elise Fleming, Emily Fleming, Susan Bramley, Anny Jeon, Tracy Stancill, Geoffrey Clayton, Mary Beckman, Ingrid Lalik, Lynn Murphree, Stephanie Parks, Beth Norris, Arleen Song, Paula Song, and Kerry Hindsley.

Wagner Opera Airs March 16

Richard Wagner's opera "Die Meistersinger von Nuernberg" will be broadcast live from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera House beginning at 12:30 p.m. Saturday, March 16.

The broadcast can be heard over two area stations — WITN, Washington, and WTEB, New Bern.

Christof Perick makes his Met debut as the opera orchestra's conductor. Also, two of the cast members will be making their Met debuts — soprano Mari Anne Haeggander as Eva; and tenor Heribert Steinbach as Walther von Stolzing. Others in the cast are David Rendall as David; Dieter Welier as Beckmesser; Franz-Ferdinand Nentwig as Hans Sachs; and Gwynne Howell as Pogner.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Hospitality House today features history, weather and entertainment. The program, hosted by Kay Currie, airs from noon to 12:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, channel 7, Washington.

Currie will interview Dr. Helen Wallis of the British Library, London. She is curator of the Raleigh and Roanoke exhibit, running March 8 through June 6 at the N.C. Museum of History. Interviewed with her will be Dr. John Neville, executive director of the State 400th Anniversary Celebration. They will talk about the exhibit and show related artifacts.

WITN weathercasters will discuss tornadoes. They will show visuals from "Terrible Tuesday," a National Weather Service film and tornado debris from Eastern North Carolina.

Two members of the cast of "Annie, Get Your Gun," to be presented at Washington High School March 14-16 at 8 p.m. will present excerpts from the musical. Shannon Oughton as Annie and Billy Worsley as Frank will sing "Anything You Can Do, I Can Do Better," with piano accompaniment by Jane Griffin. Joyce Harris, director, and Chip Thompson, who plays Buffalo Bill also are guests.

ECU Dance Theater Offering A Statewide Dance Workshop

The dance faculty of the Department of Theatre Arts at East Carolina University, with the assistance of the North Carolina Arts Council, is offering a statewide workshop for dance teachers on Saturday and Sunday, March 16 and 17. The two-day event will feature New York based neuromuscular training specialist Irene Dowd, and ECU faculty members Mavis Ray and Jerome Jenkins.

The workshop will be held in Messick Theatre Arts Center, corner of Fifth and Eastern Streets on the ECU campus. Registration begins at 8:30 a.m. on Saturday. For fees and other information, call 757-6390 between 8 and 5 Monday-Friday.

Dowd, who emphasizes teaching dance from an anatomically sound base, will conduct sessions on the conditioning needs of the body, warming up for dance according to body type, and refining dance technique concerning posture, turnout, etc. She has taught at Columbia University, the American Dance Festival, the Laban Institute of Movement Studies, and the Juillard School. She has contributed articles to Dancemagazine and Dance Scope.

Ballet technique will be taught by Mavis Ray, master teacher and choreographer. She has appeared in dozens of Broadway shows, was assistant to Agnes de Mille for many years, and performed extensively on television and in major dance companies. Her most recent professional appearances include "Ballroom," a national tour of "Da," and a role in the movie version of "Annie." In addition to choreographing for leading musical theatres throughout the nation, she is a choreographer for the East Carolina Summer Theater and the East Carolina Dance Theater.

Jerome Jenkins, now in his third semester as a guest instructor in jazz at ECU, will teach the jazz class. Jenkins has performed in musicals and cabarets in the U.S. and Europe. He was a soloist for Lynn Simonson's "The Uncompany" and has also performed in works by Fred Benjamin, Herman Howell, Gary Miller and Wilson Morelli.

As a jazz teacher, Jenkins has been on the faculty of the Morelli Ballet Studio, the University of Iowa, several academies in Quebec, the Ballattakademies of Stockholm, Sweden, and the Helsingin Tanssiopisto of Helsinki, Finland.

Space is the workshop is being limited.

AMONG SEASON OFFERINGS — The British military tattoo is one of eight performances by famed entertainers worldwide to be included in the 1985-86 season of Friends of the College, N.C. State University, Raleigh. Opera, dance, and symphonic concerts are also on the list. Tickets for the season can be purchased in Greenville by calling Mrs. Mae Gates at 758-1420.

To Conduct Masterclass

International concert pianist and recording artist Marylene Dosse will conduct a piano masterclass in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University campus from 1 to 3 p.m. Monday, March 18.

The class is sponsored by the Piano Pedagogy Program of the ECU School of Music and is open free of charge to the public. Piano students from the School of Music will be performing in the masterclass.

Madame Dosse is a native of Paris and is winner of first prizes in piano from the Paris Conservatory, the Salzburg Mozarteum, and the Casella Competition. She has served as assistant to Paul Badura-Skoda at the University of Wisconsin for several years.

Madame Dosse has recorded for Vox Records since 1971, including the complete piano music of composers Saint-Saens and Granados.

She will be heard in concert at the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall at 8:15 p.m. Tuesday, March 19. The concert is free and open to the public.

Israeli Stamps

Four birds of prey mentioned frequently in the Bible appear on the latest four mint stamps and one souvenir sheet issued by Israel. The illustrations depict Bonelli's Eagle, Sooty Falcon, Lappet-faced Vulture and Griffon Vulture.

Because of Israel's geographic location at the junction of three continents, the people of this country see 45 different species of birds of prey. Some remain permanently, others spend the winter or summer in Israel.

As in other nations in various parts of the world, industrialization and extensive use of pesticides are making many of these famous birds extinct. As a result, Israel has taken steps to protect them by law.

Talent Search

CHICAGO, ILL. — The search is on for the top two high school instrumental musicians in North Carolina.

For the 19th year, McDonald's Corporation is looking for 104 of America's young musicians to represent their states in the 1985 McDonald's All-American High School Band.

High school band directors have been asked to nominate their two most talented students as candidates for the band, which will perform in some of the nation's best known parades, including Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York City and the Tournament of Roses Parade in Pasadena, California.

Two will be selected from each state and the District of Columbia, and one each from the Virgin Islands and Puerto Rico.

Plans Laid For Local N.C. Symphony Chapter

An organizational meeting of the Greenville Chapter of the North Carolina Symphony was held at the Greenville Golf and Country Club on Thursday, March 7.

Speaker for the event was the North Carolina Symphony director of Community and Volunteer Services, Mrs. Jean Trott. Plans were made for a subscription drive which will bring the North Carolina Symphony to Greenville during its 1985-86 season for two evening concerts and two educational concerts.

Persons who would like to request further information on the subscription drive may call Cheryl Taft, 756-3666, Diane Land, 756-4835, or Mary Holt Kitchin, 752-7498.

The First Warm Days Lure Outdoors People To River Park North

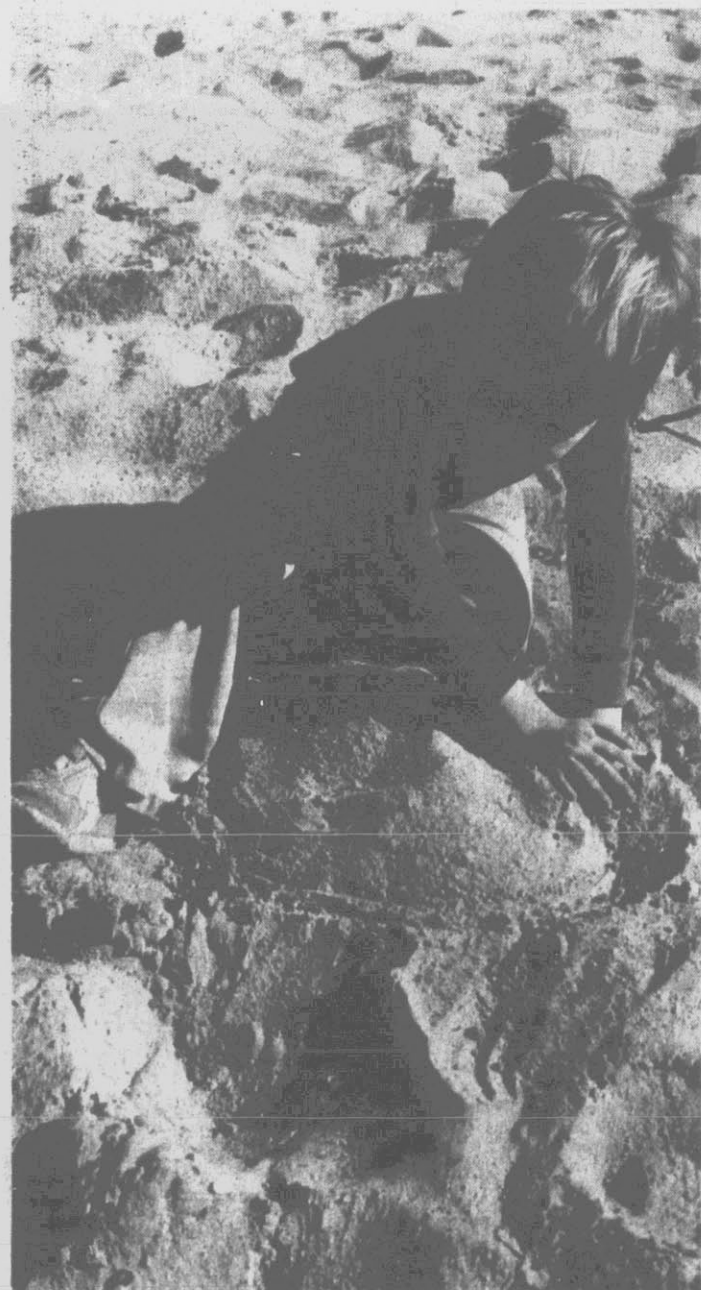

A MOMENT OF EXCITEMENT . . . These three all waited tensely as the man at right hooked a fish that had taken his bait. Although most fish in the ponds are small, an occasional prime catch is made.

Greenville's largest park is being discovered, enjoyed by more local people

The planned addition of new buildings will greatly expand the potential of the nature park

THIS IS WHAT I LIKE . . . declared three-year-old Renee Collins, as she had her first taste of playing in a large pile of white sand between two of the park's ponds.

Step by step, the facilities and the number of activities offered the public at River Park North are gradually being expanded.

The park, to be preserved primarily as a nature center, will nevertheless encompass a number of land and water sports, but only those that will be in harmony with the tenor of the area as an open space-window on local nature.

Picnic areas with one or two tables are available for small groups. One large picnic shelter is for large groups on a reserved basis. One participant sport, volleyball, is permitted, along with activities such as Frisbee. One of the favorite attractions in warm weather, first on weekends, then on a daily basis, is the pedal-boat rides.

To date, the biggest drawing card at River Park North on a year-round basis is fishing. Most visitors fish from the shore. Boats are permitted, provided they are motorless or operated by an electric motor. Daily and annual fishing permits, for fishing or boating, or a combination of the two are available for a fee.

Non-motorized bicycle riding is allowed, and pets can be brought into the park on a leash and accompanied at all times by the owner.

Increasingly, River Park North is being used as an outdoor study center for school students from Greenville and Pitt County schools. In these nature study-outings, East Carolina University students majoring in recreation and science fields assist teachers from local schools.

Exciting developments are planned for broadening the scope of services and activities at the park. According to Howard Vainright, director of the park, "construction will hopefully get underway this year for a planetarium and two additional buildings to house life science and possibly physical science displays and studies. These will be a valuable addition to our present museum."

People in and around Greenville hear about it. They go for a look. They like what they see. They return. They become habitués.

This is the pattern that leads to becoming a devotee of what is fast becoming the finest nature park in eastern North Carolina, River Park North, a 358-acre spread of water, open space and forests north of the Tar River along Mumford Road.

In all seasons, patrons find River Park North a place with space enough to insure a comfortable degree of solitude, even on days when attendance is at peak levels.

Sunday, March 3 was one of those splendid early spring days beckoning people to get out, to bask in the welcome warmth. All around town, joggers, bikers and people simply strolling were very much in evidence by mid-day. Couples with picnic baskets and a few hardy sunbathers populated the gentle slopes in the Town Common.

And across Tar River, singles, young couples, buddy groups and families visited River Park North. A goodly number brought along fishing gear and tried their luck from vantage points on the shores of ponds. Four or five fished the ponds from small boats.

Some flew kites. An elderly man leaned against a tree, reading, while his companion knitted. Parents walked the long main path, talking, keeping an eye on offspring who darted about exploring or playing pretend games.

At the back section of the park, in the swampy area bordering the Tar River, a couple of young men, very likely college students, were engaged in taking photographs, comparing notes.

ECU ART MAJOR . . . Chuck Parham of Henderson pauses during a walk in the park with his bicycle to view some of the scenic spots along the park's main path.

Text and Photographs by Jerry Raynor

River Park North, located on Mumford Road, is open to the public daily except Mondays. Park hours vary during the year depending on the length of sunlight hours. Persons wanting more details on the park and activities there are to call Howard Vainright at 758-1230.

FISHING SEEMED INCIDENTAL . . . For this couple incidental to the simple pleasure of being outdoors on and their leashed dog, it was apparent that fishing was one of the first warm days of the year.

Rug Exhibition Prompts Strong Reactions

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

When was the last time a rug made you laugh?

For most people, the answer would be "never." But those who have seen the "For the Floor" exhibition at the American Craft Museum in New York might come up with a different reply.

The variety of funny, beautiful, serious, colorful and conceptually interesting rugs created by 48 international craftsmen in this show is likely to cause stronger-than-usual reactions to floor coverings.

After its run in New York is over this spring, the exhibition will circulate to 10 American cities for two years, according to Paul Smith, director of the museum. Except for its first stop in Tacoma, Wash., a definitive list of cities has not yet been completed, he added.

Aside from their visual power, another difference between handmade and mass-produced rugs which surfaced at the show is just how much trouble some people are willing to go to for art.

Take Carolyn S. Bowler, for example. Ms. Bowler, of Moscow, Idaho, made the wool felting for her black and white rug, which comes with 10 brightly colored felt balls to roll about and play with on the rug or to use as pillows while lounging. She dyed the balls herself. She also raised and sheared the sheep that furnished the wool. The rug's black and white pattern was inspired by the view from her window of grazing sheep, she said.

Gloria Crouse of Olympia, Wash., invested three months of full-time effort to complete her rug. It is made with four different techniques. Weaving, hooking, an application of paint to some of the surface, and applique were employed to create the variety of surface textures which together make the rug a kind of landscape in fiber.

Commercial rug designs usually emphasize repetitive patterns which are easily duplicated in the manufacturing process. In handmade rugs, variety is the rule. An artist may incorporate a number of themes in a rug. The rug may be woven and hooked and have painted images, each method from a different tradition. A design source might be a Navajo blanket, but the colors selected could be the pastels associated with an oriental kilim.

These choices are merged into a completed work through the vision of the artist. It is this originality which makes for visually exciting work as onlookers discover for themselves the many themes brought together by the artist.

While a major goal of the exhibition is to give pleasure to those who see the work, another purpose is to correct a neglect of the floor in fiber art recently, said Smith. He said handmade paper, wearable art and wall hangings—all different aspects of fiber art—have been illustrated in exhibitions recently, while the floor has been forgotten. That's why one requirement for works in this exhibition was that they had to be primarily for use on the floor.

Some of the rugs on display could be reproduced commercially, according to Smith, who hopes that the artists will benefit through contacts with carpet manufacturers who have been invited to see the exhibition. Consumers may also recognize the rugs as alternatives to the standard mass-produced variety. However, a number of artists at the show agreed it is often difficult for the general public to find original rugs such as these.

Retail carpet and rug outlets don't generally carry one-of-a-kind rugs. Fiber artists producing them tend to work primarily on commission. Finding customers is a hit-or-miss thing for them.

However, one recourse for weavers capable of and interested in making rugs is local craft galleries found all over the country. In some areas, local arts councils maintain registries of crafts artists.

Jennifer Raphael, a weaver in New York, said weavers tended to establish networks. "If you find one weaver, chances are good that one can help you find others," she said.

Handmade rugs are not a moderate-cost item. The time required and the costliness of wool drive up prices. As an example, the rug by Ms. Bowler had a price tag of $7,500. Ms. Crouse's rug or one like it might cost about $4,500.

Even if the closest things to a workshop in your house is a kitchen drawer jammed with assorted tools, it's certain you own at least one and probably several screwdrivers. The unhandiest of families needs a screwdriver now and then.

More than any other tool, a screwdriver is used in many ways for which it was not intended, probably most often for prying, which is why the blade tip is usually damaged. One way to keep screwdrivers in good shape is to set aside one for poking, lifting, opening, etc., and reserve the rest for tightening and loosening screws.

An excellent reason for having more than one screwdriver is because the wood into which the screw is being driven is likely to be damaged if the tip of the screwdriver is too small or too large, not to mention the probability of marring the screw head slot. If the latter occurs, you may not be able to finish driving in the screw and may have to remove it with pliers before starting over again. Besides checking the proper size, you should always check to be sure the tip is square, not rounded. If it is an old screwdriver with a rounded tip but otherwise in good condition, you can put it back in shape by placing it in a vise and filing the tip until it is square.

In using a screwdriver, remember the basic rule about tightening and loosening screws or anything else. You tighten a screw by turning it clockwise. You loosen it by turning it counterclockwise. Forget that and you occasionally will find yourself going in the wrong direction. That is especially important when taking out a screw. If you start out by going clockwise, you may tighten the screw even more, adding to the difficulty of removal. There is one exception there that you should know about it, because it is contrary to what has just been said. Once in a great while, when a screw resists removal, if you give it a quick turn clockwise just before turning it the proper way—counterclockwise—it will yield.

The handle of a screwdriver should be held in the palm of the hand, using the thumb and index finger of the other hand to steady the blade lower down. Slowly make a couple of turns until the screw has caught, then remove your hand from the bottom and slide it up the blade or take it off the screwdriver altogether. When working with hardwood, drill a pilot hole for the screw. Even with softwood, it is wise to start the hole with the tip of an awl.

When a screw has a head with a cross-shaped slot, you need what is called a Phillips screwdriver. It has a star-shaped point that fits the slot of that type of screw. Unless you do a lot of work with such screws, you may be able to get by with a single special screwdriver of medium size. There are dozens of kinds of screwdrivers for special purposes, some with long handles and some with short handles for use in tight quarters. Your needs will determine which kind you should have on hand.

Screwdrivers should be kept free of rust and dirt and are best kept in a holder to prevent damage to and from other tools. While the tip can be filed by hand to be squared, as mentioned previously, it can also be ground on an emery wheel.

For those who do quantity work with a screwdriver, a power drive will make the job easier and faster. In order to use this type of tool in places where there are no electrical outlets, a cordless screwdriver is just the thing. When not in use, it can be taken to an ordinary outlet and, via a special battery charger, plugged in so that it will be ready the next time you use it.

Q. — I plan to use hardboard panels for the walls of an attic I will be finishing into two rooms. I have never used hardboard, but I have worked with plywood, also for wall paneling. I understand there are some things I should watch out for. Can you give me some advice?

A. — There should be a solid support behind every joint, such as a stud or furring strip. Hardboard can be fastened with nails, screws, adhesive or almost any kind of fastener, but should never be attached too close to the edges. Allow from a quarter of an inch to half an inch from the edges. Always nail the center of the panel first, then the edges. When cutting hardboard with a saw, keep the face side up. Standard hardboard should be used indoors, although not where there are high humidity conditions. Tempered hardboard can be used for places where there is moisture, while heavy duty tempered hardboard is the most resistant to water and the strongest.

Q. — I want to make a round table that will accommodate six persons. I have measured the diameter of some tables in furniture stores and find that those which presumably seat six have differences of as much as 6 inches in the diameter. Is there some standard size or can one use one's judgement?

A. — The diameters of tables for six run from 46 to 52 inches. Naturally, the larger the table, the more room there is at dining time. If space permits, use the larger size, even larger than 52 inches if possible. You can always seat an extra person or two, if necessary, but you can't find extra room where there is none. That's why there are tables which open up to receive inserts or leaves.

Q. — We have an old house with plaster walls. I recently did some patching on a kitchen wall, using a spackling compound to make the

Garden Clinic

Q. Is there going to be another "Almanac Gardener" this season on public television? (R.M., Dunn)

A. "Almanac Gardener" returns this week over the nine channels of the University of North Carolina Center for Public Television network. "Almanac Gardener" airs Saturdays at 5 p.m., Sundays at 9:30 a.m. and Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. Mike Gray, host of "Saving Energy with Mike Gray" and the regular "Almanac" series, will also host the 14-part series "Almanac Gardener." The season premier is a special, shot entirely in the field, that focuses on lawn care, houseplant care and landscaping. Horticultural extension specialists Kim Powell and Larry Bass are regular panelists on the show. Each week they are joined by a different county agent. The panelists' responses to viewer questions comprise one portion of each episode, which also includes two or three features shot on location. "Almanac Gardener" became a separate show in 1984. For the five previous years, gardening topics during the spring and early summer months had been incorporated into the regular "Almanac" series. Viewer interest led to the creation of "Almanac Gardener" to deal exclusively with gardening and garden-related topics.

Q. Tiny insects are in the potting mix of my African violets. They come to the surface when I water. What are they? What should I do about them? (L.P., Morganton)

A. Those tiny insects are called springtails or collembola. Springtails are a normal component of the soil fauna. They are harmless except for a few species which have occasionally been reported as damaging plants in greenhouses or gardens. Springtails are abundant in soil which has not been pasteurized but are usually not noticed because of their small size. If you are concerned about them, drench your plants with malathion. Use a liquid concentrate. Be sure to read and follow all label instructions.

Q. What is the best type of yew to plant in Piedmont North Carolina? (L.B., Greensboro)

A. The Japanese yew (Taxus cuspidata) is the yew commonly grown in this area.

The Galactic Hitchhiker Returns In New Douglas Adams Book

By DEBORAH ZABARENKO
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Remember planet Earth? You know, the one that got bulldozed to make way for a hyperspace bypass in the early reaches of The Hitchhiker's Trilogy, the comic science fiction series by Douglas Adams?
Well, Earth is back. Sort of. Adams has written a rather domesticated fourth book in the trilogy, called "So Long, And Thanks For All The Fish" (Harmony Books, $12.95). Sure, there are extraterrestrial critters such as the Babel fish and a dim dog named Know Nothing Bozo, not to mention the Fuolornis Fire Dragons, who eat pizza and fill the air with an aphrodisiac feeling.
And Arthur Dent, the hitchhiker of the previous three best-selling books — "The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy," "The Restaurant at the End of the Universe" and "Life, The Universe and Everything" — is back. But, instead of spending the whole time hitching a ride, he comes back to England. He falls in love. He finds out why all the dolphins left.

Adams, a 32-year-old Englishman, facetiously blames this fourth book in a three-book series on "miscounting," but more seriously admits he wanted to write about God's Final Message To His Creation, which is delivered at a fiery mountainside shrine dotted with souvenir booths and hot-footed pilgrims. The message itself is: "We apologize for the inconvenience."
"Moving it back to Earth was very much a change of pace for me," Adams said during a recent stop in New York. "I was beginning to slip into alien cultures and I had slipped into self-mimicry."

Two of the alien cultures prominent in Adams' latest work are Han Dold City — a thinly veiled, smog-tainted view of New York — and Los Angeles. Adams spent time in both places during the past year, and apparently has yet to recover from a seven-month stint in Southern California.
"It is kind of relentlessly superficial," Adams said. "When I was out there, I would say, all right, let's get down to it. And they would say, 'We are down to it. This is as down to it as we get.'"
His vision of Han Dold City, where life is nasty, brutish, short and probably costs too much, took shape after Adams went to a midtown movie.
"It was one night in New York and I was coming out of 'Gandhi.' The first thing one couldn't help noticing was a pile of mattresses burning in the middle of the street. Then I saw a group of young men obviously stealing a car ... Then a man walked up to me and asked if I wanted my picture taken with his llama." This scene, Adams decided, was something interesting enough to write about.

He is considering getting an apartment in New York because he spends so much time there. Just now he is working on a project he won't define but describes as being "kind of related to computers." He has also written a radio series, a television series, a record album, an interactive fiction computer game and a movie based on the Hitchhiker books.
He has worked with the likes of Jim Henson, John Cleese, Peter Cook and Graham Chapman, but the recognition hasn't rubbed off. He's still a good candidate for one of those "do you know me?" credit card ads and is the kind of guy who gets lost while jogging in Central Park. Despite his 6-foot-5 height, heads do not turn when he walks into a room.

Strong opinions are an intrinsic part of his conversation — digital watches are odious, video games "intensely boring." American television a "mind-rot," long-playing computer games are "great" — but he admits some trepidation when he sits down to write.
"I spend months and months worrying whether I actually can do it ... and then there's a manic scramble at the end when the guys from the publishers come with knee drills," he said.
The publishers are held at bay now, with the publication of "So Long, And Thanks For All The Fish," and the logical progression might seem to be another book in the series. Wrong.

"A fifth book in a trilogy?" Adams says. "No. That would be silly."
Codeine, a derivative of the opium poppy, was the key ingredient in 65 million prescriptions dispensed by American drugstores in 1983, the most recent year for which figures are available, says National Geographic. Other products of the little flower are morphine, opium and heroin.

Frankfurt Battles To Overcome Sleazy Nightlife Image

By BRENDA WATSON
Associated Press Writer
FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — In the years since the war, Frankfurt has become West Germany's most maligned metropolis. But it now is battling to overcome its reputation as a place for sleazy nightlife, rowdy American soldiers, foreign workers and sterile architecture.

A $118 million facelift is under way to restore some of the charm and cultural treasures destroyed in World War II, when bombings destroyed or heavily damaged two-thirds of the city.

Once famous as a medieval showcase, Frankfurt suffered from hasty postwar reconstruction that turned it into a hodge-podge of concrete and glass. The city also became a haven for underworld enterprises that thrived alongside legitimate commerce.

The financial capital of West Germany with 175 foreign banks, headquarters of five major domestic banks, the Central Bank and the country's biggest stock market, Frankfurt long seemed too busy making money to worry about urban problems.

Cynics call the city "Bankfurt" to underline its role in high finance and a seeming obsession with bottom-line materialism. Public opinion surveys consistently rank Frankfurt as the least-liked West German city.

But in recent years, Frankfurt officials have made a concerted effort to change the image and instill more pride in residents of the city that gave the world the hot dog, along with other contributions.

With some exaggeration, publicists have dubbed the city "Mainhattan" — likening the high-rise skyline along the Main River to Manhattan in New York City. The city's formal name is Frankfurt am Main — Frankfurt on Main — to distinguish it from Frankfurt an der Oder, the city on the Oder River in what now is East Germany.

Pedestrian malls are replacing traffic-clogged streets in the central shopping district and the opera house has been rebuilt to its former magnificence. The famous Roemer Square at City Hall has been upgraded with a block of medieval-style buildings, and a row of museums unique to Germany is opening along the river.

City spokesman Bernd Sanders said the image renewal is stressing Frankfurt's important role in German cultural history.

The city was founded in the 1st century by the Romans and became a royal residence in the 8th century under Charlemagne. Emperors of the Holy Roman Empire were crowned on Roemer Square from 1562 to 1792, and the nearby Paul's Church was the site of the historic Frankfurt Assembly of 1848 — Germany's first unsuccessful attempt to adopt a democratic government.

Germany's greatest writer, Johann Wolfgang Goethe, was born here in 1749, and his childhood home on a narrow side street near the main shopping district is a landmark for tourists.

A city park is named for the Rothschilds, who helped the city become a world financial center before they moved the family businesses to London around World War I.

Frankfurt is notorious for several blocks of bordellos, peep shows and porn shops near the main railway station. But it also has a remarkable cultural life.

The city boasts 19 legitimate theaters, a first-rate opera company, the Hesse state radio orchestra, a score of museums and a major university.

Frankfurt's large number of foreign residents — about 20 percent of the city's 650,000 people — provides another kind of cultural flavor, with restaurants and exotic shops representing a palette of nationalities ranging from Spain and Turkey to Iran and the Far East.

The "guest workers," as they are called, perform mostly menial jobs that Germans shun, and they have become a source of tension across the country. Graffiti proclaiming "Foreigners Out" scrawled on park benches or sprayed on walls testify to resentments exacerbated by high unemployment.

About 11,000 American soldiers are stationed in Frankfurt, and thousands more are in nearby towns. Although most troops are well-behaved, incidents over the years have created strains with the German population.

Last New Year's Eve, 500 U.S. soldiers brawled with each other for six hours in the Sachsenhausen entertainment district, terrifying other revelers by throwing firecrackers and launching fireworks, German police said.

A transportation hub, Frankfurt is the site of continental Europe's busiest airport, handling 17.7 million passengers a year, and West Germany's largest railway terminal, used by 70 million people annually.

Fifteen trade fairs drew 2.1 million visitors in 1983, and the city annually hosts the world's largest book fair.

The campaign to upgrade Frankfurt includes efforts to clean up the train station district, where drug addicts and prostitutes abound.

The Kaiserstrasse thoroughfare, a schizophrenic mixture of expensive boutiques and sleazy sex shops, is being upgraded with wider sidewalks and trees to bring back a turn-of-the-century look.

Mayor Walter Wallmann is pressuring owners of bordellos and peep shows to relocate their establishments in the industrial suburbs, but legal roadblocks have delayed the move.

Sanders said Frankfurt's cultural facelift began in 1977, when residents agreed that the opera house, which stood in ruins since the war, should be repaired at a cost of $69 million.

Shopping malls and squares came next.

Roemer Square, reduced to rubble in the war, was refurbished at a cost of $11.7 million.

Monica Sarie, 39, who manages a souvenir shop at the medieval square, noted an increase in tourists at her store since the restoration was completed in 1981.

Museum row along the Main River, which will eventually consist of 30 museums, will cost an estimated $34 million.

A film museum and an architecture museum opened this past summer. A modern art gallery and a transportation museum are in the works, just down the street from the postal museum and the Stadel gallery housing some of Germany's finest art masterpieces.

TOWER OF COINS — Sushi bar owner Ryozo Kobayashi poses beside a tower of 10-yen coins (four cents U.S.) at his shop on the outskirts of Tokyo. The honeycomb-like tower took 95,000 coins worth 950,000 yen (3,800 dollars U.S.) and four and a half years to build. The tower is 39 inches high, 18 inches in diameter and weighs 990 pounds. The coins were stacked without using glue. (AP Laserphoto by Fujio Yokomama)

Alabama Officials Hope Travelers Will Promote State

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Most Southern states spend more money than Alabama to attract tourists, but officials who promote the "Heart of Dixie" are hoping word of mouth will help make it a haven for vacationers.

Alabama has struggled for years with a reputation spawned by the state's segregationist past and at least one tourism expert believes that image is now a thing of the past.

"I deal with tourism on a day-to-day basis and if Alabama has an image problem, it's only with those people who haven't been here in the past 15 years," said Ed Hall, director of the Alabama Bureau of Tourism and Travel.

"I like to think of it as a perceptual problem instead of an actual problem," he said.

While Hall admits his operating budget for tourism is one of the lowest in the South, he said changing a state's image is not something that can easily be solved with money.

"It has to do with people visiting the state and going back home and telling their family and friends about us," he said. "Occasionally we find people with misconceptions about the state, but it is appearing less and less, and more people who visit the state are now saying they plan to come back."

Alabama ranks ninth among 11 Southern states in the total amount of money ($2.9 million) budgeted this year for tourism. The largest amount, $9.4 million, is budgeted for Florida and the smallest amount, $1.8 million, is budgeted in Mississippi.

A comparison of advertising budgets in the South ranks Alabama eighth at $300,000. The top ranked state is Florida with $4.3 million and the lowest is Arkansas with $364,000.

With a limited budget for tourism, Alabama officials have been forced to be selective in how they use the money. Publications targeted for promotional advertising are carefully screened, said Hall, and a major television campaign is about to get underway.

"We are going to continue to capitalize on the genuine warmth and hospitality of the people of Alabama," he said, noting many tourists in the state have been recently polled and interviewed about the state's attractions. "With everyone talking about our people, we decided they are the best way to promote the state."

Alabama was recently awarded the 1984 National Travel Marketing Award by the Travel Industry Association of America. The award was granted for the state's "Alabama the Beautiful — The Way to Go" campaign that was conducted while the World's Fair was open in New Orleans.

"All the Southern states have about the same number of employees and the same number of welcome centers," Hall said. "The difference is in the advertising budgets and that is what hurts us. We try to get into publications that people will hold onto."

Hall admits a lot of Alabama's tourism business, which accounted for over $3 billion in economic activity last year, is related to its geographic location. The state was able last year to capitalize on visitors headed to the World's Fair, and tourists on their way to and from Florida are a steady source of income.

"The South is the number one travel destination in America because of Florida," the director said. "Thank God for Florida. I don't have any ego problem with travelers headed there and I'm just glad we are geographically situated to take advantage of them."

Hall noted that Florida and Tennessee are becoming "very aggressive" in their promotional activity. "Alabama's biggest problem is that everybody sees an opportunity for tourism and they are fighting for it. We have got to make sure we are competitive. We have a story to tell and, if we can tell it, I know we'll be competitive," he said.

Hall said Alabama is trying to improve its relationship with private industry because theme parks, recreational developments and motels channel a lot of money into advertising and promotion.

He said he believes Alabama's growth pattern in tourism is secure for the rest of the decade, although there is always concern about the availability of gasoline and the state of the economy.

Researchers Will Unveil Electrical Invention

LIVERMORE, Calif. (UPI) — On the bottom of a blue-tiled pool sits a compact, silver machine that physicists say has wide-ranging applications, from making food less likely to spoil to eliminating acid rain.

The culmination of 27 years of research at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, the electrical device, called the Magnetically Switched Induction Linear Accelerator, will be unveiled publicly Monday.

This latest technological wonder — a miniature cousin of a long line of linear accelerators, some of which stretch for miles — serves as a radiation source that, unlike any in practical use today, can be turned on and off.

Its creators say it should be ready for commercial use within two years.

"It can be readily reproduced and for under $1 million," Dr. Richard Briggs, deputy associate director for beam research at the lab, said in an interview.

The 2 million electron volt machine is being tested in food preservation experiments. It is kept immersed in water to shield workers from the radiation produced when the machine is in use.

Scientists from the lab, which has pioneered the development of linear induction accelerators since 1958, and the University of California at Davis are studying insect deinfestation and effects of electron beams on flavor and texture.

"The beauty of this little fellow, 6 feet long and some 4 feet across, is that when it's turned on, it emits an intense electron beam, and when it's turned off, it's perfectly safe, unlike a traditional radiation source that presents a constant danger of radioactivity," Dr. Steven Matthews, senior physicist at Livermore, said in an interview.

"One of its many practical applications — food processing and preservation — may reduce the need for carcinogenic fumigants used on produce in this country and curtail the 20 percent to 30 percent of food destruction due to spoilage every year in Third World countries."

Currently, 30 countries use conventional ionizing radiation from a continuously radioactive source to eliminate certain bacteria and sterilize certain components within food, Matthews said.

Although no irradiated food is consumed yet in America, this country uses its facilities to do the job for others.

"With huge amounts of food to be processed, I believe we will need dangerously high levels of the radioactive isotope, the current radiation source," Matthews said.

"The isotope is constantly radioactive and has to be kept enclosed in a lead container. Transporting it by air or truck can have deadly consequences. The accelerator can solve these problems."

The researchers also will look at fumigating produce with electron beams instead of chemicals, some of which have been shown to leave cancerous residues in food.

The machine also could help eliminate acid rain, he said.

Some environmentalists say growing industrial emissions of sulfur dioxide from smokestacks, along with oxides of nitrogen from motor vehicles and industrial smokestacks, are a major threat to forests, lakes and rivers.

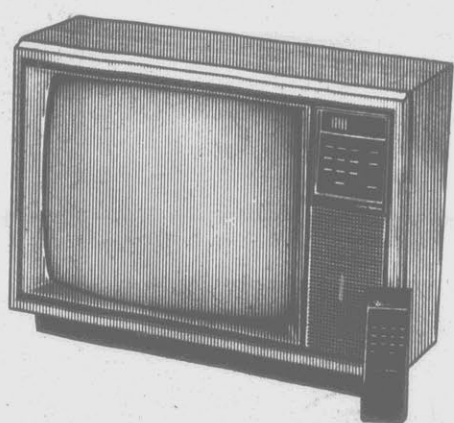

"Gases are hard to remove from smokestacks. But if you shine an electron beam at the gases, the electron rearranges the molecule of gas and changes it, say, from sulfur dioxide to ammonium sulfate — a particulate that can be removed much easier than gas and, in addition, be used as fertilizer," Matthews said.

"The machine sitting in our lab can do the job right now. It can easily be redesigned to fit into a smokestack."

Interest Grows In Turkey Hunting

By KELLY P. KISSEL
Associated Press Writer
HATTIESBURG, Miss. (AP) — The increased popularity of wild turkeys is sweeping Mississippi and the nation, causing people to flock to seminars on how to track and take the bird, experts say.

"What we try to do is educate the public on the how-tos, the what-tos and the whys of turkey hunting," said Preston Pittman, a three-time, turkey calling national champion who directed a weekend meeting here.

Interest in the bird has gone up because the population of the bird has increased.

"We probably only had 4,000 turkeys in Mississippi in the 1930s," said Dr. George Hurst, a Mississippi State University biologist. Now, the bird population is near 400,000.

Hunters play to a gobble's instinct to lure the game.

"I try to tell him what he wants to hear," Pittman said. Usually, that means a hen's voice.

"You have to sound good enough to make him come to you."

Turkeys make a lot of noises, said seminar executive director Larry Ladner — and knowing what means what will help the hunter whether he uses his own voice or a friction caller.

The most popular call, known by most hunters, is the mating yelp. Others include an excited cackle, a purr of contentment and a whine, which precedes the mating yelp.

There also is the cluck, which means a hen is ready for romance. Ladner calls it a locator call in which the hen says, "Here I am."

Younger birds have a "kee kee run" call, which they make when they are lost.

Hunters also can use a gobble's territorial yell to make the turkey think another bird is entering his territory.

A turkey still might not fall for the trick, though.

"Turkey hunting is the most competitive thing with (a turkey's) sense of vision and hearing," Ladner said. "If they could smell I don't think you could ever kill one."

The seminar at the University of Southern Mississippi was not designed just for tracking the bird, but for understanding the turkeys' instincts and habits.

Hurst said he was exploring the food habitat and the brood habitat of the turkeys in a study at the Bienville National Forest in east Mississippi.

The study, with the state Department of Wildlife Conservation as its lead agency, began in July 1983 and will last from 7-10 years, Hurst said. It involves capturing birds, tagging them, then tracking their travels.

"We'll look at the dynamics, how they change over time," Hurst said. "What makes this population go?"

The information gathered will ultimately tell what governs the birds and perhaps give clues to wild turkey management.

This weekend's turkey seminar was USM's third — and largest — so far.

"Turkey hunting has taken off," Ladner said. "It's one of the fastest growing sports now."

That poses a paradox for Pittman, who manufactures turkey box calls.

"It's getting very commercialized, which is good for business," he said. "But as far as getting more hunters in the woods, that's terrible."

Weaves Travels Into Book

On The Shores Of The Mediterranean. By Eric Newby. Little, Brown. 448 Pages. $19.95.

While vacationing in Italy at their house in northern Tuscany, travel writer Edwin Newby and his wife determined to "travel around the shores of the Mediterranean."

Their idea was to see "people, places and things that we had either never seen before or had not seen for so long that we both wanted to see them again and to discover ... what changes time had wrought in them."

Well, they did what they planned and the result is this delightful travelogue that takes the reader on an enchanted journey. In the 26 articles collected here, Newby weaves historical anecdotes, physical descriptions and personal impressions into an engrossing story for those who actually travel and those who do so from their armchair.

Newby's descriptions of his travels are often amusing, but never more so than when he can weave in a bit of unimportant, but interesting, material. Such as his speculation that Carrara, a place famous for its marble, is probably the headquarters of the Italian anarchists, because "of the abundance of blasting material conveniently at hand." Or the fact that the hotel bedroom in Naples was furnished "with an upright piano belonging to the brother of the proprietor."

Newby is also very good at writing physical description: "South of Rijeka the Adriatic Highway with its sometimes amazing views of offshore islands that appear to be swimming one behind the other like a shoal of sea monsters, extends almost to the Albanian frontier."

Luck Has Smiled On Sawyer Brown

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UPI) — As football and drama coaches often say, luck follows talent.

The country-rock group Sawyer Brown's cup has overflowed with both the ingredients to a successful career.

It was by luck that the boys found each other. Lead singer Mark Miller and keyboard and vocalist Gregg Hubbard are from Apopka, Fla. Lead guitarist and vocalist Bobby Randall and bassist Jim Scholten are from Midland, Mich. Drummer Joe Smyth is from Westbrook, Me.

They came straggling into Nashville individually about five years ago and wound up playing in the same band for singer Don King. His bookings were off, so they decided to form their own group.

After tuning their act in small clubs, they took the step of trying out for "Star Search," the nationwide TV talent contest. They were named the best New Star Musical Group of 1984. That won them a recording contract with Capitol and $100,000.

That success and the help of mutual friends led them to open for Kenny Rogers and Dolly Parton on their current nationwide tour. And, they could be opening for Rogers again this fall on another tour.

"I don't think you can put a dollar figure on it (Star Search) because it put us in front of 40 million people every week," Miller said in an interview. "We've sold over 100,000 copies of our album 'Sawyer Brown' in a few weeks."

"In the tour with Kenny and Dolly, there are probably 60-70 percent of the people in the audience who are already familiar with us. By the time we leave, the other 30-40 percent know who we are," he said.

Also participating in the interview were Randall and Hubbard.

Randall said the TV talent show is not for everybody.

"The 'Star Search' route worked well for us, but I'm not sure it would work for everybody," Randall said.

"There are so many routes to take. I spoke with a friend of mine and he asked what he could do to make it in the music business. It takes a lot of determination. 'Star Search' worked as a tool for us to get started and get ahead of everybody else. But the show does nothing for us now," Randall added.

Miller said there are 15,000 acts who audition for the show during the course of a year. "If a young act can get on it, they should do it."

Hubbard said another element of luck aided their career.

He reasoned that the timing of their exposure on the TV show came at exactly the right time.

Essentially, the keyboard wizard said, Sawyer Brown found out what audiences at small halls like and didn't like before they even attempted to get on the show.

"If 'Star Search' had happened earlier in our career, we wouldn't have done us any good. We wouldn't have been ready for it," Hubbard added.

All the members of Sawyer Brown (the name was taken from a suburban road in Nashville) are in their 20s.

Miller said an element of luck helped them to become the opening act for the Rogers and Parton concert series.

"We had some mutual friends and some of his people talked to some of our people," Miller said.

Sawyer Brown appeared with Rogers for a couple of weeks last October and he was impressed and gave them the job for this year's tour.

"I think we appeal to the same kind of people."

Miller joked that when Rogers asked them to appear with him, they hesitated saying "let us check our schedule." Of course it was open to such an opportunity.

"We also joked that we needed a closing act and what a better one than Kenny and Dolly," Miller said.

In a more serious vein, Miller said that there are some acts who have been "intimidated by our energetic style."

Not so with Kenny Rogers. "He said the hotter the crowd, the easier it is for him."

Miller said he had heard that Rogers had been mistreated when he performed as an opening act and he wanted to do better for those who opened for him.

"We're not patting ourselves on the back, we feel real fortunate," Miller said.

They decided on the name "Sawyer Brown" because it was fictitious.

"We toyed with the idea of Saginaw, Michigan or Son of a Fisherman," Randall joked.

The group figures that another tour with Rogers this fall will give them time to get a few hits "under the belt" so they can strike out on their own concert tour.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, MARCH 10, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Some poor judgment or adverse condition in effect early this morning requires much thought and attention to handle wisely. Don't take an arbitrary position but delve into all factors involved.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Your hunches are not good in the morning, so be sure to use mature judgment and double-check everything you do.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A partner may not understand your ideas in the morning, but if you are patient will later agree with you and all goes well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) In the morning, your partners may disagree violently with a new contact, so do not mix in. Later be with a wise pal.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be loyal to the one you love and come to a better understanding. Then study ways to handle your obligations wisely.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Don't enter into any argument with anger between a close tie and a newcomer and it will soon right itself.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't permit some task to keep you from gaining the data you need at a new site and then tonight you can handle some home duty.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some new investment should not require spending too much money in the morning. Do something fun with an associate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't argue with a family tie in the morning, and then you can get into interesting activities with your family.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't permit a private worry to keep you from handling outside interests in the morning.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A friend may try to trick you out of something valuable, so don't get taken in. Teach to be more self reliant later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Show that you live the philosophy that you profess and be an A-1 citizen, thus gaining good will of others easily.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You may find it hard to acquire the information needed in the morning, but later you stumble upon it quite easily.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will love to investigate, and can get good results because of the natural magnetism in this nature and others will respond quickly to questions asked. Give as much education as you can and permit to participate in sports and keep the figure trim. There can be disappointments in early years.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, MARCH 11, 1985

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning opens with your being able to make a very interesting campaign to gain your deep-seated objectives with the assistance of influential persons, so go forward dynamically.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Business matters proceed nicely in the morning, but later you may need advice from experts. Do something thoughtful for loved ones.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) A benefit early from a partner is fine in the morning, but later get into the work that will guarantee steady benefits.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Although you begin work enthusiastically in the morning, later you can slow down and get fine results just the same.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Plan for amusements that you like early and then handle the work that needs to be done.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Get your home well organized early in the day so that you can get other affairs handled well later. Make wise plans for the future.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Early contact those who can be of assistance to you and you to them and come to a fine understanding. Be clever.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You understand how to take care of monetary matters in a more intelligent fashion, so get into them early.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You are able to gain those wishes that mean a great deal to you in the morning, so up and at 'em early.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Plan your strategy early and then go after your aims in a positive way and gain them. Get personal affairs in order.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Study how to follow through on advice given you by a dynamic friend who is an expert and make progress later.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) If you show good citizenship, you can improve your position in the world considerably. Handle work efficiently.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Seek new ideas that can help you to get whatever it is that you desire the most to have. A newcomer is of assistance.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be able to get at the truth of any situation, so slant the education along investigative lines which can bring great success during the lifetime. Be sure to teach only the finest ideas and precepts. Let surroundings be ideal.

Artist Says Kites Make People Happy

VALDOSTA, Ga. (AP) — A purple and yellow dragonfly, its wings poised for flight, floats gently in an art gallery here, enchanting visitors with a cheerful demeanor and bulging eyes.

The dragonfly is among 22 boldly colored and whimsical kite sculptures by Stone Mountain artist Jack Mason on display through Friday at the Fine Arts Gallery of Valdosta State College.

"Kites have been an art form for a long time and they're really coming on strong," observed Donald Penny, an art professor at the college.

Penny organized the exhibit to coincide with the breezy month of March, the traditional kite-flying time when kids head for open fields with balls of string, fragile tissue stretched over wooden spars and great expectations.

"Because of recent design innovations, kiting has become a popular pastime. Kite stores are opening around the country, and enthusiasts are performing stunts and other feats in competition, said Penny, noting that the record vertical lift for a kite has been boosted to 728 pounds.

Mason's kites, made of rip-stop nylon stretched over wooden frames of pine, spruce or bamboo, resemble insects such as lady bugs and butterflies, hawks and sharks, antique airplanes and futuristic wedge-shaped flying machines.

An art instructor at DeKalb College before he became a full-time artist 1½ years ago, Mason said he gets some of his ideas from the model airplanes and kites he built as a child.

"I guess kites make people happy," the artist recalled. "Almost everybody who watches me carry my kites ends up with a smile."

Suspended by wires from the ceiling of the gallery and illuminated by overhead lights, Mason's kites sway and turn at the slightest breeze.

"Kites are a hypnotic device, like mobiles," Penny observed. "If you sit and look at them, it's very soothing. I like the kite both as an art form and as a toy."

Noting that early airplanes were actually motor-driven kites, Penny said the renewed interest in kites and related activities such as parachuting, hang gliding and ultra-light flying is due, in part, to a desire to get away from from earthly woes.

"Man has taken more and more to the air to escape," he explained. "And who can blame them. Who can come to grips with the profound problems we have — nuclear holocaust and chemical waste?"

Besides insuring that his kites fly well, Mason strives for originality and innovative design, along with a "pleasant" appearance.

THE TALE OF THE SEVEN OF HEARTS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

He was a grizzled veteran of many campaigns. Despite a slight limp caused by a stray bullet at Anzio, there was a spring in the step of the Seven of Hearts as he strolled away from the game in the company of a select band of admirers.

"Cannon fodder, that's all we are and all we are meant to be," he thundered. "I know that, occasionally, we win a trick by ruffing or by becoming a long card in a suit. But for the most part we are stationed in the front line to be mowed down by the enemy.

"In my long career, only once can I remember when I won a trick in my own right early in the play. What made the escapade even more satisfying was that it took place in the semifinals of the world team championship.

"East's opening two spade bid might look a bit strange to you, but I guess anything goes at the world championship. Our player in the South seat elected to make a strong takeout with his cue-bid. North's jump to four no-trump was not Blackwood. Instead, it showed a good hand with the values concentrated in the minor suits. Hence South's leap to six diamonds.

"West led the king of spades, and when dummy appeared declarer realized that he was not going to have a cakewalk. After winning the ace of spades, it was tempting to cross to the table with a trump and lead a heart. However, that was unlikely to gain anything and declarer was reluctant to use up one of his few entries to dummy so early in the play.

"Instead, he elected to lead a low heart from his hand. West could see no reason not to follow the old adage of 'second hand low' and, to everyone's surprise, I won the trick!

"The rest was simple. Two hearts were sluffed on the top clubs. Now two clubs were ruffed, the second high, to provide entries for two heart ruffs on the board with the king and queen of trumps. A spade ruff high was followed by a diamond ruff with the seven. This high crossruff established the defenders' nine of trumps as a trick, but that was all the defense could get. Six diamonds bid and made!"

'The Burning Bed' Gets Another Airing

By Jay Carman

Not so long ago it was believed that massive numbers of viewers would not tune in to see serious shows about domestic problems. Suggest something like wife-beating and you would likely be greeted by a chorus of groans and loud accusations that what the public really wants is sex, violence and laughs.

But all that was before somebody at NBC mustered up the nerve to take a chance on a true-life story about Francine Hughes, a Michigan housewife who ended years of abuse by murdering her husband. The resulting film was called "The Burning Bed" and when it aired last October, it attracted a 52-share, making it the most-watched film of the entire year.

With 75 million people watching the horrifying yet remarkably moving film, there were bound to be consequences. Among them was a significant rise in the number of battered women taking advantage of shelters and other social help. Another was an incalculable consciousness-raising among viewers, which was helped enormously by scheduling the film during the U.S. National Domestic Violence Awareness Week.

Still another was the decision to rebroadcast "The Burning Bed" this month on NBC.

For Fawcett, who gave a faultless and unforgettable performance as Francine Hughes, the effects were extremely gratifying. Despite hard work and good intentions, she was saddled with an image problem because of her role on "Charlie's Angels." For years, she tried to convince producers to let her tackle something meatier and for years the same cold-feet types who used to automatically nix such projects as "The Burning Bed" said no.

Then Miss Fawcett landed the lead role in a gritty, violent Broadway hit, "Extremities." Critics went wild and NBC decided to take a chance on her. The gamble paid off handsomely.

In fact, Miss Fawcett was all but unrecognizable with her stringy, unwashed hair, her bruised face and terrified expression. Her performance was magnificent as it was surprising.

There will be 300 — and not 100 — stars participating in the Radio City Music Hall extravaganza "Night of 100 Stars II," airing Sunday, March 10 on ABC. Some of the big-names you'll find on the small-screen include Ann-Margret, George Burns, John Forsythe, Linda Evans and Stefanie Powers.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: After watching the movie "My Wicked, Wicked Ways: The Legend of Errol Flynn," I wondered whatever became of the actor's children, Sean, Deidre, Rory and Arletta? — BARB FRY, CANTON OHIO

Sean Flynn, born to the legendary swashbuckler and actress Lili Damita, was a photographer who disappeared in 1970 while on assignment covering the Vietnam War near the Cambodian border. He is presumed dead. Deidre and Rory, children from Flynn's second marriage to Nora Eddington, are both involved in the entertainment industry. Deidre is a stunt woman and most recently she was the stand-in for Veronica Cartwright, who portrayed Ethel Kennedy in the CBS miniseries "Robert Kennedy and His Times."

"I started working in films around 14 years ago, doing stunt work," explains Deidre. "I'd always ridden horses, both for pleasure and in shows, so I'd learned to fall off them a long time ago. A friend of mine was married to a stunt man, and one day she said "why don't you do some stunt work?" I looked into it and started on the series "Get Smart."

Rory Flynn is the special photographer for the "Ripley's Believe It or Not" series. Rory began a career as a model. In the '60s, she was a flower child and lived briefly in Paris. The former model became interested in the other side of the camera, and began doing portraits of celebrity children. This led to an acquaintance with 'Ripley' executive producer Jack Haley Jr.

Deidre and Rory are writing a book on their half brother Sean and a biography on their father. Arletta, born in 1953, is the daughter of actress Patricia Wymore, Flynn's third and last wife. Miss Wymore retired from the screen in 1953, and stayed out of films to give birth to their daughter and help Flynn through the most difficult time of his career. Miss Wymore returned briefly to the screen in 1959. Both she and her daughter have kept a low profile by Hollywood standards.

Dear Michele: Is it true that Shirley Temple Black was once married to movie star John Agar? — ANNABELLE ADAMS, FIELDON, ILL.

Mrs. Black married Agar in 1945. They divorced in 1949. The couple had a daughter, Linda Susan, born in 1947.

Nashville Network Marks Second Year

By Andrew J. Edelstein

The Nashville Network, which marked its second anniversary this month, has become one of basic cable's fastest-growing services.

The station, a joint venture between Opryland USA and Group W Satellite Communications, exhibited a 40 percent growth rate last year. It now has a total of 21.2 million subscribers — a 25 percent penetration, according to A.C. Nielsen figures released in January.

What's the down-home network's appeal? "Broadcast TV projects a lot of fantasy," says David Hall, TNN's vice president and general manager. "We project realism and traditional values. We also have the ability to define ourselves better about who we are than some other basic-cable stations."

The station features all original programming, most of it taped on a low-budget away from the high-cost production centers of New York and Los Angeles. The key to the network's success is that in addition to the music programming, TNN offers country-flavored versions of popular TV genres. Among the TNN shows are a sitcom ("1-40 Paradise"); game show ("Fandango"); talk show ("Nashville Now"); and sports magazine ("American Sports Cavalcade").

TV Chatter

The three-hour "Night of 100 Stars II" special, airing March 10 on ABC, boasts a cast of 308 world-renowned stars. To prove it, each star will be introduced with a number next to his or her name as they come on stage.

New faces mingle with old favorites in the program's varied segments. Special presentations include a showcase of prime-time stars from all three television networks and a fashion show featuring 40 male and female stars in designs by Calvin Klein, Bill Blass, Galanos, Perry Ellis and Halston. A film tribute will honor the work of Warren Beatty, Olivia de Havilland, Dustin Hoffman, Danny Kaye, Sir Laurence Olivier, Sidney Poitier and Lana Turner.

Also featured will be a dance number with Ann Miller, Ginger Rogers, Gwen Verdon, Chita Rivera, Gregory Hines, Van Johnson, Bonnie Franklin, Donny Osmond and Donald O'Connor. Current and old-time sports stars like Doug Flutie, Y.A. Tittle, Jimmy Brown, Joe Namath, "Mean" Joe Green, Mark Gastineau, Dan Marino, Lynn Swann and many Olympic stars will appear in a sports segment. A special tribute to the stars of the silent movies is also planned.

Producer Alex Cohen insists this will be the last "Stars" special. "It's an enormous risk requiring a year-round office and my full attention," he says.

Johnny Carson's home town of Norfolk, Neb., is planning a special tribute to the "Tonight Show" host. Denny Reeves is spearheading a drive to erect five large billboards of Carson to be placed on different roads leading to the city. The money is being raised locally by a group called The Johnny Carson Billboard Association. The signs feature Carson's likeness and say "H-e-e-e's Norfolk, Proud Home of Johnny Carson."

Dustin Hoffman and the original Broadway cast have finished filming "Death of a Salesman" for CBS. The special, which will air in the spring, was filmed in an unheated New York studio. Re-creating his Broadway role as the aging Willy Loman required heavy makeup, which Hoffman was afraid would melt in a heated room.

Monday, March 11, the first live satellite transmission of a TV show from Australia will air on NBC. "The Most Beautiful Girl in the World Contest," with contestants from 22 countries.

 BIG RED
 SIT DOWN ON THE JOB... AND SMILE
 With the new '85 Big Red, working men of all types have never had it so good. It's powered by an all-new, lightweight 248 cc two-valve head engine that provides stronger torque, increased reliability and an array of low maintenance features. In addition, its live-speed transmission includes a super-low 1st gear and reverse. All this, plus electric starting, shaft drive, and front and rear suspension makes Big Red the hardest working three-wheeler ever.

NCAA Gets Ready For The March Madness

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

This week, the madness begins. The madness of March. The madness of pitting 64 college basketball teams against one another and waiting for the weekend of the Final Four, one of the most exciting times in all of sport. It's the madness of the tournament to find the best team in the NCAA.

On Sunday, March 10, CBS airs "The Road to Lexington," a review of the 1984-85 season with pre-tournament news and features of the teams likely to be invited to this year's tourney. It's a sort of film-clip appetizer to get the viewer ready for the next couple of crazed weeks. This year's tournament should be, at least on paper, the most colorful NCAA tournament since 1983's Slammas Jamma Dunkathon. There are more than a handful of good teams, two truly masterful coaches to study and one genius — Bobby Knight — to entertain us, at least in the early rounds. This year, Indiana will have difficulty getting out of the regionals.

St. John's University, with Chris Mullin leading the charge down to the Final Four, is the tournament favorite going into the early rounds. It is fitting that this is happening now, that Coach Lou Carnesecca has, after nearly three decades of yelling and screaming, his best team ever. Little Looie has wanted to be the center, the main force behind March Madness for a long time. Now, after such a long wait, after much patience and a truckload of sausage parmesan heroes, he has finally made it, finally achieved the post position in the race toward madness.

There will be a number of obstacles in his way. Georgetown, under Coach John Thompson, has shown that they like being a part of the maddening crowd. Last year, in fact, they liked it so much they stayed till the end and brought home a title. This year Patrick Ewing is a year older and some say wiser, the team defense has tightened considerably and Coach Thompson's lungs show no signs of slowing down.

There are also the surprise teams. A number of teams will come to the NCAA tournament, know they don't belong, shrug their shoulders and proceed to go out and beat a number of teams who truly do belong. This year's choices might be Villanova, North Carolina, perhaps the University of Nevada-Las Vegas. It is always the little guy who seems most primed to take on the madness.

The TV cameras will be there most of the way, bringing the viewer as deep into the madness as commercial time allows. The fans will be there, banners waving, slogans sung at fever pitch, sweat and steam rising toward the rafters. The players will be juiced up, ready for their biggest moments in their college careers. The coaches will have the throat spray and the cold sodas handy, the plays designed, waiting to be used, the vision of a title the only sight they can see. It is all there. All part of the madness. All part of the beauty and spectacle of the NCAA tournament; all part of the most exciting month in sport. Without the madness, without the tournament, without the NCAA, without any of that, well, it just wouldn't seem like March. And that would be enough to drive anyone mad.

Modine Continues Quest For Stardom

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — The odds are that anyone tearing themselves away from the tube for long enough to take in a little quality fare at the local movie theater will encounter actor Matthew Modine up there on the big screen.

Modine is currently featured in "Mrs. Soffel" and "Birdy," both of which have just been nationally released weeks after turning up in West Coast theaters in time to qualify for 1984 Oscar consideration.

Now he has the lead role in "Vision Quest," a new release that promises to be one of the first big hits of 1985.

"Vision Quest" comes from the same production stable as 1983's teen-oriented blockbuster, "Flashdance." Comparisons, however odious, are inevitable. "Flashdance" featured Jennifer Beals as a spunky youngster who worked by day as a welder so she could finance her dream to become a dancer. It offered a gooey succession of sentimental cliches, but it was obviously what the audience wanted, because the film made a fortune.

THE BRITISH HAVE ALWAYS HAD AN ESTEEMED APPROACH TO STYLE

Austin Reed of Regent Street has engendered quality clothing for generations, clothing that is designed to stand up to the effects of time and trends. This dusty rose ensemble for women is a fine case in point. The silk blend inverted pleat skirt and natural shouldered jacket unite for a classic stance.

FUTURE JOBS!

By the year 2000, you, 15-year-old today, 30. What will the world be like?

TV's Jason Bateman

HEADLINERS

Who ever said divorce has to be messy, or even noisy? Certainly not Ted Danson, the teetotaling, skirt-chasing bartender on Cheers. Now happily married for the second time, Danson recalls the silent split from his first wife, an actress who was learning sign language for a play and teaching Ted its intricacies. "When you 'sign,' it's just too hard to chit-chat," he explains. "You get right down to whatever it is you want to say. We ended up 'talking' for about 45 minutes about splitting up. Without saying a word, we agreed to separate."

DANSON: SIGNING OFF

Things are looking up for Maril Hemingway, and here's the evidence: She just got married to Steve Grisman, a manager of New York's current hot spot, the Hard Rock Cafe; she has two movies coming out, Creator with Peter O'Toole and The Mean Season with Kurt Russell; and — here's the important part — "Do you realize that they're now writing about me without adding 'the sister of Margaux' or 'the granddaughter of Ernest'?" But things would really be looking up for Margaux's sister and Ernest's granddaughter if one of her new movies turned out to be a hit. Woody Allen's Manhattan was a promising start, but "after the failure of Star 80, I thought, 'What more can I do?'" says Maril. "I've given my best performance. I've even taken off my clothes." She also shaved her eyebrows and got breast implants. For Personal Best, in which she played an athlete, Maril underwent months of training. "So it was very disheartening when those films failed. I don't want people saying, 'She's quite a good actress, but nobody goes to see her movies.'"

HEMINGWAY: DRESSED FOR SUCCESS

Mike Connors, better known as Mannix, really ought to do something about his sense of timing. "When I was doing the show, there was a thinking among Hollywood people that if you had done a series where people could see you for free, they weren't going to pay to see you in a motion picture. So, automatically, if you were a star of a TV series, they didn't consider you for motion pictures. Then all of a sudden, they started hiring TV people for movies. Unfortunately, I got caught in between. I'd been off the show for some time, so they started using hot series stars like Tom Selleck." Not that Mannix, er, guess what Connors plays in Scream. 'doe v

CARROLL: HANGING ON

They shoot J.R., they shoot Bobby, they arrange a plane crash for half the cast of Falcon Crest; now they have Dominique Devereaux languishing in a hospital bed with "a disease female singers get that is curable, but I don't know if I'll be cured," says Dynasty's Diahann Carroll. Ah, 'tis the season for filming the end-of-season cliff-hangers. Believes Carroll, "I'll survive for a while — if I'm not too much of a pain in the neck."

No one's foot has ever had quite so much glide, as Gene Kelly proves once again in MGM's retrospective That's Dancing. Even so, Kelly doesn't think his shoes — or shadow — are too big for today's young hoofers. "All the younger dancers perform much better than the way we did in my generation," he insists. "They're so well trained — far more than we were." Well, Kelly is going to get an argument from tapper extraordinaire Maurice Hines, whose fancy footwork is currently on view in Cotton Club. "The kind of dancing Fred Astaire and Gene Kelly did is beyond improvement," Hines claims. "You can't improve on perfection. Dancers today do not have the dedication to learn. They're like fast food — no waiting. They want immediate attention without having to work for it. I remember when a replacement was sought for me in a Broadway show. One dancer was asked, 'Can you tap?' and he said, 'No, but I'll study for the next three weeks.' How insulting! He wanted to learn in three weeks what it took me 30 years to master."

What Will Today's Teenagers Be Doing in the Year 2000?

By John Naisbitt

When the 21st century arrives 15 years from now, many of today's teenagers will be coming into their own in the career world. What will their future be like? FAMILY WEEKLY asked America's foremost social forecaster, John Naisbitt, for his scenario. Here's how he pictures it:

When Mark got out of college in 1992, six companies competed to get him to sign up. It was a seller's market, just the reverse of the buyer's market of a decade earlier. Because of the tremendous number of jobs being created by the new information/electronics economy and because of the dropoff in the number of people coming into the job market, starting in 1986 there were more people leaving the work force than entering it. Full employment returned to the United States in 1987, and there had been labor shortages ever since. Historians were referring to the period starting in 1984 as the "Booming '80s."

Mark decided to go with Biolabs Inc. because it was a medium-sized outfit in the still-growing biotechnology field that offered him the opportunity to be his own entrepreneur. He joined because he sensed that he could experience personal growth as well as contribute to the growth of the company. "Self-management" was the byword at Biolabs. You created your own destiny. But at the same time, everyone in the company was available to help you do the job you wanted to do.

Mark works almost exactly what the statistically average person in the United States works: 26 hours a week. His arrangement is six-and-a-half hours a day, four days a week. The average work week had been dropping for 150 years. By 1985, it was already down to about

Mark works his four days from 11 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Biolabs, like most companies, has flexible working hours. Until a year ago, Mark worked from 7 a.m. to 2:30 p.m., but he was allowed to shift his hours after his wife, Jennifer, gave birth to a son. Now he spends his mornings with the baby. Biolabs also has a generous maternity- and paternity-leave policy, and Mark was home on leave for the first four months of the new baby's life.

Mark's $45,000 salary is low by traditional standards (the equivalent of $20,000 in 1985), but that's only part of his compensation. Like many people he knows, most of his pay is in twice-yearly profit-sharing bonuses. All of the employees in Biolabs own stock. Mark bought several shares when he joined the company and has been buying more each year at a discounted price.

Mark is not working at home in an "electronic cottage," with his computer wired to the company's computer, as many futurists predicted in the '80s. What most people want in 2000 is to be with other people, to go to the office. Contrary to what many expected, the more technology in the society, the more people wanted to work outside the home. Many businesses have small satellite offices scattered in the suburbs and rural areas. Mark's computer at home is connected to Biolabs, though, and once in a while he does stay home and work there. But most of the time he goes to the office.

A number of Mark's colleagues at work are in their 60s and 70s, people who chose not to retire. Ever since forced retirement was outlawed in the United States in 1988, an increasing number of people began choosing to work beyond 65 and 70. That was a good thing, too, because of the labor shortages the country had experienced for more than a decade. Many older people began working in positions known as "permanent-part-time." Under this arrangement, people in their 70s and 80s had the dignity and security of a job, and employers gained the experience and considerable energy of the older workers.

Mark does not belong to a union, an industrial-period creation that has just about disappeared. At the beginning of 1985, only about 16 percent of the private-sector work force was unionized. This downward trend has continued into the 21st century.

When Mark was at college, the emphasis, fortunately, was on "learning how to learn." The idea was this: anticipating that people would change careers and specialties a number of times in a lifetime, the most important thing was the skill of learning new things. Even at 30, Mark is on his second career. After college, when he joined Biolabs in 1992, he trained to be a computer systems analyst. But in the last three years, he has created a new self-health-care business. He's not sure what he will be doing five years from now, but he knows that if he needs funds for retraining, they will be available. Biolabs sets aside 10 percent of its payroll for upgrading employees' skills.

Mark spends most of his lunch hour in the company's fitness center. Biolabs has spent an incredible amount of money on fitness and wellness programs for its employees. This commitment to the physical well-being of employees became very widespread in the '90s with the growing awareness that in an information society, human resources are the competitive edge.

There are as many women as men working at Biolabs, and that's true of the entire work force in the year 2000. Early in 1985, about 53 percent of women worked, but even then, as many women in their 20s and 30s worked as men of the same ages. That pattern soon became the norm.

At Mark's 12th high-school reunion this year, not a single person he talked with was in any kind of manufacturing company. Everyone was processing information. The only manufacturing being done in the United States was computerized. In 1985, the blue-collar population was down to only 17 percent of the work force, a drop from 65 percent at the height of the industrial '50s. In 1990, blue-collar workers were at 10 percent, and in the year 2000, around 4 percent — about the same as in agriculture.

Mark had a good time at the reunion. The next week he would start a new training program and then join a task force that would try to evaluate what Biolabs' contribution could be to the much-discussed, long-postponed lunar station, now set for 2010.

WHAT HAPPENED TO THE CLASS OF '92

A number of Mark's fellow graduates joined computer software companies. It seemed the whole economy rested on the computer. It was a great global business, and while Japan and Korea still made most of the world's personal computers, the United States made a lot of specially programmed computers and led the world in software development.

Some went to graduate school for advanced work in biology with an eye toward genetic engineering or environmental work. Communications, entertainment and travel were popular in a society that had become very leisure-oriented.

The "business types" either went into financial services or started their own businesses. While entrepreneurship wasn't booming the way it did in the '80s and early '90s (in 1991, for the first and only time in U.S. history, more than one million new companies were created in a single year), there was still plenty of action.

Others went into health care, nutrition and fitness (as the United States became a nation of clerks who needed to pay attention to their bodies, these turned into great growth areas). Still others went into law, accounting, geriatrics, mobile telephones, retailing, and various technical vocations. And a surprising number entered the fields of education and training, the quality of which had slipped recently as it had so disastrously in the 1960s and 1970s. A lesser but substantial number of Mark's class pursued the arts. Overcome by all the technology around them, they sought a new balance between high technology and our humanity.

The majority of Mark's classmates are now working somewhere in the Southwest or in Florida. As 1985 began, the southwest quarter of the country (draw a line across the top of California, Nevada, Utah and Colorado and drop it down to include Texas) and Florida were accounting for about 85 percent of the population and economic growth of the United States. That momentum continued into the year 2000. FW

By Alvin Tresselt,
Dean of Faculty

We're looking for people to write children's books.

"Writing for children is the perfect way to take up writing," says the author of 53 children's books. "Your ideas come right out of your own experience. And while it's still a challenge, it's the straightest possible line between you and publication—if you're qualified to seek the success this rewarding field offers."

The Institute of Children's Literature deep in the Connecticut woods. The old mansion has been the home of this workshop for new writers since 1969.

IF YOU WANT TO WRITE AND GET PUBLISHED, I can't think of a better way to do it than writing books and stories for children and teenagers. Ideas flow naturally right out of your own life experience. While it's still a challenge, the odds of getting that first unforgettable check from a juvenile publisher are better than they are from any other kind of publisher I know.

Later on, you may get other checks from other publishers. But right now, the object is to begin—to break into print—to learn the feeling of writing and selling your work and seeing your name in type. After that, you can decide if you want your writing to take another direction.

But after 30 years of editing, publishing, and teaching—and 53 books of my own—I can tell you this: You'll go a long way before you discover anything as rewarding as writing for young readers.

Your words will never sound as sweet as they do from the lips of a child reading your books and stories. And the joy of creating books and stories that young people 'really like' is an experience you'll never have anywhere else. (In this age of boob tube illiteracy, convenient morality, and plastic values, do you know of a more important audience?)

A surprisingly big market

But, that's not all. The financial rewards go far beyond most people's expectations because there's a surprisingly big market out there for writers who are trained to crack it. More than 130 million young people's books are purchased each year. As many as 2,500 new titles appear annually and new authors account for up to half of them.

There are also 250 monthly magazines looking for material for young readers. You can imagine how much writing it takes just to keep them going!

Yet two big questions bedevil nearly every would-be writer: "Am I really qualified?" and "How can I get started?"

'Am I really qualified?'

This is our definition of a "qualified person": It's someone with an aptitude for writing who can take constructive criticism, learn from it, and turn it into a professional performance. That's the only kind of person we're looking for.

The reasons are simple: Our reputation is built on success, and if prospective students don't have the earmarks of success, we probably can't help them. And we tell them so. It's only fair to both of us.

To help us spot potential authors, we've developed a revealing test for writing aptitude. It's free, and we don't charge for our evaluation.

But no one gets into

Our students learn where to sell their writing with our exclusive publishers' lists.

The Institute without passing it. Those who pass and enroll receive our promise: You will complete at least one manuscript ready to submit to a publisher by the time you finish the Course.

Learn one-to-one with your own instructor

I've learned a lot about writing for children and I love it. Now I'm passing my knowledge on to my students so they can profit from it. When I'm not writing my own books I spend my time at The Institute of Children's Literature, a workshop for new writers that does one thing and does it better than any other educational institution I know of: It trains qualified people to write for the young reader.

This is the way I work with my students, and my fellow instructors—all of whom are experienced writers or editors—work more or less the same way.

Learn at your own pace

When you're ready—at your own time and your own pace—you send your assignment to me and I read it and I reread it to get everything out of it you've put into it.

Then I edit your assignment with a red pencil just the way a publishing house editor would—if he had the time. I return it along with a detailed letter explaining my comments. I tell you what your strong points are, what your weaknesses are, and just what you can do to improve. It's a matter of push and pull with each assignment. You push and I pull and between us both, you learn to write.

'Now... I am a writer!'

This method really works. I wouldn't spend five minutes at it if it didn't. The proof of the pudding is that many students break into print even before they finish the Course. We receive hundreds of letters like these from students: "Before taking your Course, the short stories I scribbled for my two tiny tots never caught an editor's fancy," writes Emily Burns of Salem, Ore. "My first sale, to National Catholic Weekly, was a Course lesson. Then I sent another Course assignment to a writer's competition and won first prize of $400!"

"My instructor's advice was invaluable in plotting, character, motivation, and dialogue. I am most grateful for her personal interest. She helped me understand my own strengths and weaknesses and how to emphasize the first and remedy the second." Elizabeth Henley, New Cambria, Mo.

Marilyn Day of Marissa, Ill. says, "Now I'm no longer a housewife, I am a writer!" And Mary Carruth, Dublin, Cal., writes, "I sent out my first article with a prayer and it was accepted. Your Course, with its structure and support, has been everything I hoped for."

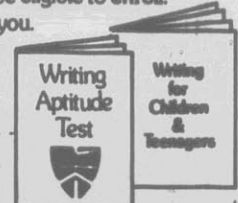

"When I started, I did not really think I had the ability" writes Sister M. Laetitia Mudde, West Haven, CT. "But my instructor made me believe in myself."

I have a file full of similar letters. People like yourself so full of pride they could easily convince you that it is a pity more people don't take up writing for children.

Free Writing Aptitude Test offered

AN ACTIVE FAMILY AT THE ACTORS' FUND HOME

The suburban sun streams through the greenhouse, spilling into the common room. It reflects off the plaque on the piano inscribed "Gift of Harold Prince, Trustee," illuminates copies of Variety and Romeo and Juliet, and dances on the ice in the glass of Dorothy Brown Fox, who is reminiscing while waiting for lunch. "Mr. [Florenz] Ziegfeld was the most wonderful man I ever knew. From the time I joined the Follies in 1923, he never yelled or screamed, and when we traveled out of town, we were always well chaperoned."

Mrs. Fox is a resident of the Actors' Fund Home in Englewood, N.J., a renovated stone mansion set on a sweeping lawn. It's a place where retired theater people — stage managers, scene painters and agents as well as actors — can live and be comfortable among their colleagues.

There is a distinctive atmosphere that pervades the room; an unmistakable sense of kinship exists between these people. Everyone here has worked with everyone else, or has worked with their husband or roommate or sister. Outside it is winter, but inside the feeling is family picnic — a very warm family with a scandalous and glorious history.

The Actors' Fund Home is largely supported by people in the industry, most visibly at the recent Night of 100 Stars II gala fund-raiser. Some of these people have come out from New York City on this day to visit and have lunch with the residents. Producer Robert Whitehead is one such staunch supporter because, he explains, the Actors' Fund "is part of my future and my heritage. It's important to any responsible person in this business."

Whitehead is joined by his wife, actress Zoe Caldwell, and by Nedda Harrigan Logan, president of the Actors' Fund, and her husband, producer-director Josh Logan, also visiting for lunch. Mrs. Logan is waving the original program of a play produced in New York in the 1890s by her father, Edward Harrigan. "My father was offered a lease on the property of Herald Square for 99 years. He said he wanted something more permanent, so he bought the Harrigan Theatre," chuckles Nedda Logan. "They tore that down years ago."

Josh Logan has gathered everyone around the piano for a song he "learned in the unromantic part of Louisiana. My father brought me a record from New York, and I learned every word. The yard man came in and taught me to do the shuffle." Logan proceeds to demonstrate, his red bow tie bobbing in accompaniment to the chorus: "Hot lips, that are pips/And no more conscience than a snake has hips."

Overlooking the rose garden donated by Helen Hayes, Colleen Dewhurst maintains that in the theater, "they don't care if you're rich. They don't care if you come from the 'right' sort of family. Everything else is out the window. The only true democracy is in the arts." And in the theater, democracy is not the province of the active alone: Theater people take care of their own.

PARENTING

COMFORT FOR "LATCHKEY" KIDS

In Pennsylvania, 8-year-old Sandra needed to go to the bathroom, but she "heard a mouse in there," and Sandra is terrified of mice.

Charlene, 10, who lives in a Washington, D.C., suburb, learned that her grandmother was dying. She wanted to tell somebody how sad she felt.

A Honolulu youngster worried because his cat was sick. A conscience-stricken California boy wondered how to tell his parents he had smoked pot for the first time. In a Chicago suburb, a 6-year-old child panicked when a stranger kept knocking on the door.

These five youngsters had different fears, sorrows and worries, but they all share the same condition. They are among the nation's 7 million "latchkey kids," children who, with parents at work, come home after school to a silent and empty home. These five are among the more fortunate ones; they live in communities with programs called PhoneFriend, After-School Line, Kids Line, or Phone A Friend. When they feel lonely or frightened, they can go to the phone for instant comfort and counsel.

When Sandra called the service in her town, a friendly voice assured her that the tiny mouse was probably scared of the larger girl. Other "phone friends" encouraged Charlene to talk about her grief, informed the little boy that healthy cats do throw up hairballs, listened as the young pot smoker decided how to talk to his parents, and kept the 6-year-old talking while police were called on another line.

PhoneFriend began in 1982 when a committee of local women and Dr. Louise F. Guerney, a psychologist at Pennsylvania State University, organized the program in the surrounding area. Today programs flourish in Palos Verdes, Calif.; Elk Grove, Ill.; Rochester, N.Y.; Bethesda, Md.; Honolulu and Detroit. An additional 14 communities across the country have begun PhoneFriend projects, and another 200 have asked Guerney for instruction manuals.

In a typical program, mental health professionals train volunteers how to handle both specific problems and emotional needs. Instructions are geared to a child's age and are presented so they will be helpful in the future. For example, a young child is told to cover up broken glass; an older one advised how to pick it up safely. However, the friend-on-the-phone primarily listens, reassures, and helps a child talk out his feelings and fears. Very few children make emergency calls. Most know about dialing 911. As Elaine Wilson, head of Honolulu's Phone A Friend says, "We're not a hot line. We're a nice, fuzzy, warm line. A friendly voice for a child alone."

Proof positive that the friend on the phone is indeed trusted comes from California. There a little girl ran away from home. As night brought panic, she called not her parents but PhoneFriend. Feelings aired, fears eased, she then returned home.

For help in starting a PhoneFriend program, write: PhoneFriend, c/o American Association of University Homes, Box 735, State College, Pa. 16804.

The scramble is on.

Get ready, mothers. Because for eight short weeks in early spring, something extraordinary appears. Something that fills the hearts (and the Easter baskets) of children everywhere. The Cadbury's Creme Egg. A glorious egg with a thick shell of Cadbury's Dairy Milk™ Chocolate and a unique, creamy center. Making it fun to eat as well as exceedingly delicious.

They're here now. But don't wait. Because once spring has fully sprung, the Cadbury's Creme Egg will disappear as quickly as the crocus.

MODERN LIVING

THE COMEBACK OF BOARD GAMES IS BREAKING VIDEO'S MONOPOLY

By Marion Long

More than most people, the Pietrini family loves playing Trivial Pursuit. And when they sit down to play, the board game becomes a game in the complete sense of the word: a competitive activity involving skill, chance and endurance. "I would think — are we ever, ever going to get through this game," explains Elaine, a Pietrini by marriage. "We're a big Italian family, so everyone's talking. Talking over the questions, talking over the answers. Singing the songs mentioned in the questions. . . . Sometimes it's more like a shouting match than a game, but it's always a lot of fun."

Experts trace the current board game craze to a new spirit of nostalgia.

For the Pietrinis, of Clarendon Hills, Ill., all that family frenzy has paid off. Last spring, Dennis and Elaine Pietrini went to Chicago, put their long, hard hours of training to the test in a Trivial Pursuit Tournament, and won it all: a trophy, TV coverage, and a trip to Europe.

Winning the competition was hardly a trivial matter, however; the tournament drew over 150,000 entrants. Also, things got very tense indeed when Elaine misheard a question in the final round and was forced into an agonizing 20-minute sudden-death overtime.

Now something is happening here (as any good baby boomer would put it). A board game tournament with 150,000 contestants? Families fighting over a board game? A board game so popular it's harder to find than a Cabbage Patch Kid at Christmas?

Now, most of us grew up playing board games, and many of us were beguiled with them early on, as we dreamily pushed a gumdrop to Candyland. But as we grew older, we put away childish things. And children changed, too, so much so that with the dawning of the electronic '80s, the board games business found itself in great difficulty. Milton Bradley, creator of Candyland, tried to appeal to new-age whiz kids with the likes of Simon, a $30 wonder toy that uses sound and colored lights to play concentration and memory games with you. Selchow & Righter, now triumphing with Trivial Pursuit, tried in those desperate days to refurbish their former flagship, Scrabble Brand Crossword Game, by fitting it with alphanumeric displays and an electronic timer, the better to help you beat the brain.

"Board games were being written off because of video games," admits John Nason, Selchow & Righter's vice president. "They were thought to be old-fashioned — cardboard and plastic. The big manufacturers lost their nerve; they didn't see a future in board games. Trivial Pursuit proved that with the right product, board games are still a viable business."

Indeed. In America, an estimated 20 million Trivial Pursuit sets were sold in 1984. The United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand, France, Holland and Germany already have their own adaptations. Editions are also due for Spain, Portugal, Italy, Japan, Brazil, Denmark, Finland, Sweden, Norway, Greece and India in their respective languages with their own cultural idiosyncracies.

Moreover, Trivial Pursuit is spawning more spinoffs than Norman Lear, including Entertainment Tonight, Book of Lists, Golden Trivia Game's Major League Baseball Edition and M*A*S*H Edition, People Weekly, Ripley's Believe It or Not, Rock Trivia, Sixtomania, Solid Gold Music Trivia, TIME: the Game, TV Guide's TV Game, Super Quiz I, Super Quiz II, and Trivia Adventure (for trivia tots).

Major board game manufacturers have also mounted aggressive campaigns for their classic products and have been seeing results. Sales of games like Clue, Risk, Life, Candyland, Sorry, Parcheesi and Monopoly are much healthier this year than they were two years ago, according to the managing editor of Toy and Hobby World magazine, Rick Anguilla. What's more, Monopoly's creator, Parker Brothers, plans a big promotion for the game's 50th anniversary in 1985, which should boost sales even higher, according to the company's director of marketing, Dave Evanchik.

Experts believe the board game craze reflects changes in underlying values and attitudes. They can see two clear trends emerging: a return to traditional toys and games, and the renewed popularity of pastimes shared by both parents and children. Also, experts point out, most of the successful new board games center on nostalgia themes or trivia, a reflection of the ongoing nostalgia boom.

"Our growing fixation with nostalgia and trivia suggests that there is a current sense of cultural exhaustion," says Pennsylvania State University sociologist Roy C. Buck. "The house is turning into a symbolic sanctuary, a refuge from the uncertainty of the outside world. The family is shut in, the world is shut out."

Laura Leddy offers a less somber appraisal of the situation. She's a 35-year-old teacher of gifted children in Chicago, and she finished fourth in the Trivial Pursuit tournament. Leddy thinks nostalgic feelings and all their attendant trivia are simply enjoyable. "It's a pleasure to collect a kind of 'mental memorabilia,'" she says. "If it's something you love — an era you grew up in, sports, history, movies, whatever — you treasure every little anecdote and anything to do with it."

Others attribute the present popularity of board games to video game boredom. "People were simply burnt out with all the video stuff and wanted something to draw them away from all the electronic mayhem for a while," says a Milton Bradley salesman. "And today trivia is the hook that is catching them."

In fact, the video game industry has suffered dramatic losses in the past year and a half. Earnings plunged 30 percent in the arcades during 1983 and continued to drop in 1984; at least 20 percent of the nation's arcades have closed their doors for good. "Video games are bound to go through down periods," observes Nolan Bushnell, founder and chairman of Atari Inc. "Anyone could have predicted it. What we didn't know was how bad it would be."

Video games once almost zapped the board game to death, and it could happen again. After all, with computer sales constantly increasing, the ascendancy of video game entertainment seems inevitable. But for now, video looks like a futures game at best, while the board game is clearly the Game of the Week.

Certainly a board game can be said to offer a more elegant way of showing off than, say, a game of football or Frogger. Yet it's like any other game. When you compete, you want to win. "It helps to play with people who have a good sense of humor," says Nancy Balcer, who finished third in the Trivial Pursuit tournament. "Because the secret thing, the funny fact underneath the whole business, is that everyone deep down thinks or at least hopes that they are very intelligent. At the tournament finals I looked around the room, and you could see it on their faces. We didn't have finalists there, we had geniuses. Everyone thinks they're top of the line."

Edward Parker, past president of Parker Brothers, once said of Monopoly: "It's a game people like to play because they can clobber their best friends without doing any actual damage, and that's the basis for any successful game." Is Trivial Pursuit the new Monopoly — or just a quick cash crop, like the Cabbage Patch dolls? Is America's interest in board games just a flirtation with some old-fashioned fun, or will the love last? These are questions to which no one, not even a tournament champion, has the answers yet. FW

BEHAVIOR

STRESS: WORKING IT OUT

A divorce, an illness, children leaving home, a co-worker who never seems to cooperate — experts agree that these are all situations that can lead to stress overload. Today a growing number of companies are recognizing that stress — both on the job and in personal life — may affect one's performance at work.

"Corporate provision of mental health services is a fast-growing phenomenon, and many companies are developing quite extensive programs," notes Maury Lieberman, program head of work and mental health, a division of the National Institute of Mental Health in Washington, D.C. Most of these programs focus on short-term counseling for specific problems and are set up in one of two different ways.

In the first type of plan, a company simply offers its employees insurance benefits for mental health services (although there's usually a limit on how much the employee will be reimbursed). With this type of plan, the employee files a claim in the same manner that he would for treatment of a broken leg.

The second type of plan, called an employee assistance program, tends to involve the company more. Explains Anne Kiefhaber, project director of the Work Site Health Promotion Initiative, U.S. Department of Health and Human Services in Washington, D.C., "The company offers psychological services on the premises or contracts with an outside organization. These programs have expanded, but the basic premise is that if the problem — alcohol, drugs, a divorce, whatever — is affecting your performance on the job, you're eligible for help."

Different programs offer employees different options of where to go for help. Explains Lieberman: "Sometimes the company retains a counselor or social worker who can see you a few times and, if more extensive help is needed, refer you to an outside firm; New England Telephone and Polaroid have this type of program." A number of companies have contracts with hospitals or outside counseling services.

But these corporate mental-health programs can cause a new problem: worries about confidentiality. Will an employee partaking in a company-sponsored program find that his private problems are suddenly all too public, or that his supervisor has access to records that could jeopardize job security? According to Anne Kiefhaber, these fears are generally unfounded. "This is one reason lots of companies provide off-site locations; they want to insure that your co-workers don't know where you're going," she explains. "Also, news about these programs tends to travel fast, and if someone's had a bad experience with one particular program, people tend to stop using any program." For a company intent on reducing stress, that kind of reaction from employees would represent a negative return on the company's investment. Therefore, it is in the company's own interest to observe strict confidentiality. —Brie P. Quinby

ELIMINATES DIETING

Thrilling Japanese Super Pill Guarantees Rapid Weight-Loss!

BEVERLY HILLS, CA — There now exists for the first time, an all natural, bio-active weight-loss compound so powerful, so effective, so relentless in its awesome attack on bulging fatty deposits that it has virtually eliminated the need to diet. News of this super pill from Japan is sweeping the country. The product is called AMITOL/AM™ and it's dynamite! In fact, thousands of people are now trying AMITOL/AM™ and losing weight faster than ever before! Some people have reported as much as 3 pounds the first 24 hrs!

PREVENTS CALORIES FROM FORMING BODY FAT! AMITOL/AM™ was developed in Japan by the JMA (Japanese Medical Association). It contains no drugs whatsoever. Its ingredients are derived solely from the Konjac root which grows primarily in Northern Japan.

Why the Konjac root? For years it was a widely held belief that the Konjac root had magical properties. When a person ate a small amount of this delicious root he would miraculously lose weight! The JMA investigated this phenomenon and discovered, thru sophisticated testing, that the Konjac root did indeed cause rapid weight-loss. Actually the way it works is truly extraordinary: Shortly after taking small portions of the Konjac root it dissolves into a completely natural gel which surrounds the excess figure destroying foods and prevents them from forming body fat. This action actually alters the time contact is made with the intestinal membrane!

The JMA was so impressed with the Konjac's abilities that they produced an amazing weight-loss tablet (AMITOL/AM™), which uses only the key ingredients of the Konjac root. But what's even more impressive, AMITOL/AM™ actually surpasses the incredible powers of the Konjac root because AMITOL/AM™'s ingredients are so highly concentrated. In fact, AMITOL/AM™ is so effective at producing massive weight-loss in record time that it was recently awarded a patent by the United States Patent Authorities!

WHEN YOU TAKE THIS PILL THERE IS ABSOLUTELY NO CALORIE COUNTING!

By now it should be obvious that AMITOL/AM™ is no ordinary diet pill. Unlike other diet programs, once you've taken AMITOL/AM™ there is really nothing else to do. You'll marvel at the way AMITOL/AM™ literally reverse years of over eating. You need only follow the simple instructions. That's it! You can continue to enjoy those foods you love to eat. AMITOL/AM™ simply does not allow your body to absorb excess calories. Period! Each day you'll notice absolute visible results as your unwanted pounds of fat, flab, and cellulite completely disappear.

However, a word of caution is in order. Because AMITOL/AM™ is so effective at rapidly removing years of ugly fatty deposits, and because AMITOL/AM™ has absolutely no side effects, there is a tendency for some people to over do it. Do not allow yourself to become too thin. If you start to lose weight too rapidly limit your tablet intake, or even skip a day or two. Have a goal in mind and try not to go beyond it. Also, before starting any weight loss program you should check with your physician to determine that you are in normal health!

COMPANY OFFERS EXTRAORDINARY GUARANTEE

Amitol Industries is the only company in the United States authorized to sell AMITOL/AM™. They have tested the product thoroughly and are convinced that with AMITOL/AM™ you can achieve the body of your dreams. They don't care if you've tried to lose weight before and failed. They have documented the results of literally thousands of skeptical people who now swear by AMITOL/AM™. Amitol Industries means it when they say you can lose a maximum amount of fat in record time.

In fact, as proof that they believe AMITOL/AM™ is everything they say it is they offer an extraordinary guarantee, one they wouldn't dare make if they had even a single doubt! If you place your order now and then follow the simple instructions for a trial period of 30 days, you must be completely satisfied with the dramatic results or just return the empty container and Amitol Industries will immediately send you your entire purchase price. No questions asked! What could be better than that! It's just that simple. If you've tried to lose weight before and failed you no longer have an excuse. AMITOL/AM™ is available, it's easy and it works!

$19.95 — 30 day supply or $35.95 — 60 day supply. Order immediately by sending a check or money order to AMITOL INDUSTRIES, 4357 So. AIRPORT PARK PLAZA, OGDEN, UTAH 84405 DEPT. 150 (enclose your return address). Credit card holders can order by simply dialing toll free: 1-800-441-4040. Operators are standing by and will be glad to take your order. You can order 24 hrs. a day, 7 days a week! Either way your order will be promptly sent. Please don't wait. You really do deserve to be thin! Thank You.

HORROR AT THE MOVIES

Sometimes a cartoon states a social dilemma more effectively than any etiquette manual could. Here's a doozy, featuring a desperate movie-house usher.

"Smoking on your left," she's shouting. "Eating, talking and being a pest, down front. Sexual harassment in the balcony . . ."

Explicit in that cartoon are some of the reasons I rarely go to the movies anymore. I shock too easily. And, like that usher, I can't cope with the animal-house atmosphere that has replaced the discreet but cozy darkness of yesteryear.

When I do pay my $5, hoping for a quiet seat near the aisle, things rarely go right. I'm usually seated behind a loving couple watching the movie cheek to cheek. They shift from this position only for a noisy, lengthy kiss. To watch the movie, I must tilt sharply to the right. This does not please the man beside me who is eating a Chinese dinner from a plastic container and does not want my elbow in his moo-goo gai pan. (Neither do I.)

I tilt to the left. Do I now see a sliver of the screen? No. The woman sitting beside the kissing couple has a new hairdo — wingspan, 4 feet. At this point a thought strikes: "If I wait two years, I can see this film on television."

With more murmurs ("Oops, so sorry!" . . . "Excuse me!"), I crawl over unfriendly knees holding pizza boxes, muddy boots (removed for comfort), and artifacts I cannot identify in the dark but suspect may be hazardous to my health. Outside, I breathe deeply, thankfully.

The paradox built into every movie house is that it is both a public and a private place. The dark creates the illusion of privacy. For some moviegoers, the dark is license, a shroud for indecency.

Research has established that 12-to-30-year-olds make up the greatest part of the movie-going audience. These are the heirs to the "Me Generation," and its me-preoccupation has left little time for the amenities. What must be explained to them is that when you buy a ticket, you make a social contract stipulating that you will do nothing to mar the pleasure of others.

It implies no loud chatter, no talking back to the screen, no smoking of marijuana, and no messing around with one's date. In short, shut up and enjoy the film — and let others do the same.

Theater managers say that the behavior of the audience is often conditioned by the behavior of the actors on the screen. The worst behavior, it would seem, is provoked by hard-rock musicals. One movie-theater owner I talked to breaks into a cold sweat remembering The Wall, a movie featuring the rock group Pink Floyd.

"The kids went wild — cut up the seats, defaced the walls," he recalled. "One night we had a near riot, with bottle throwing and real fights. We had to call the police in."

The manager of a movie house in a small town near San Francisco closed his theater permanently because he couldn't stand the rudeness — and the vandalism — of his customers one more day. They left his once-spick-and-span theater a tattered, broken mess.

Why do young people behave so badly at the movies? Dr. Charles Winick, a New York-based psychologist, points out that movie patrons today are products of the TV age. Since infancy, they have been sitting in front of that busy screen an average of three to five hours a day. And what do they do while watching? They talk. They eat. They quarrel. They are critics with very short attention spans.

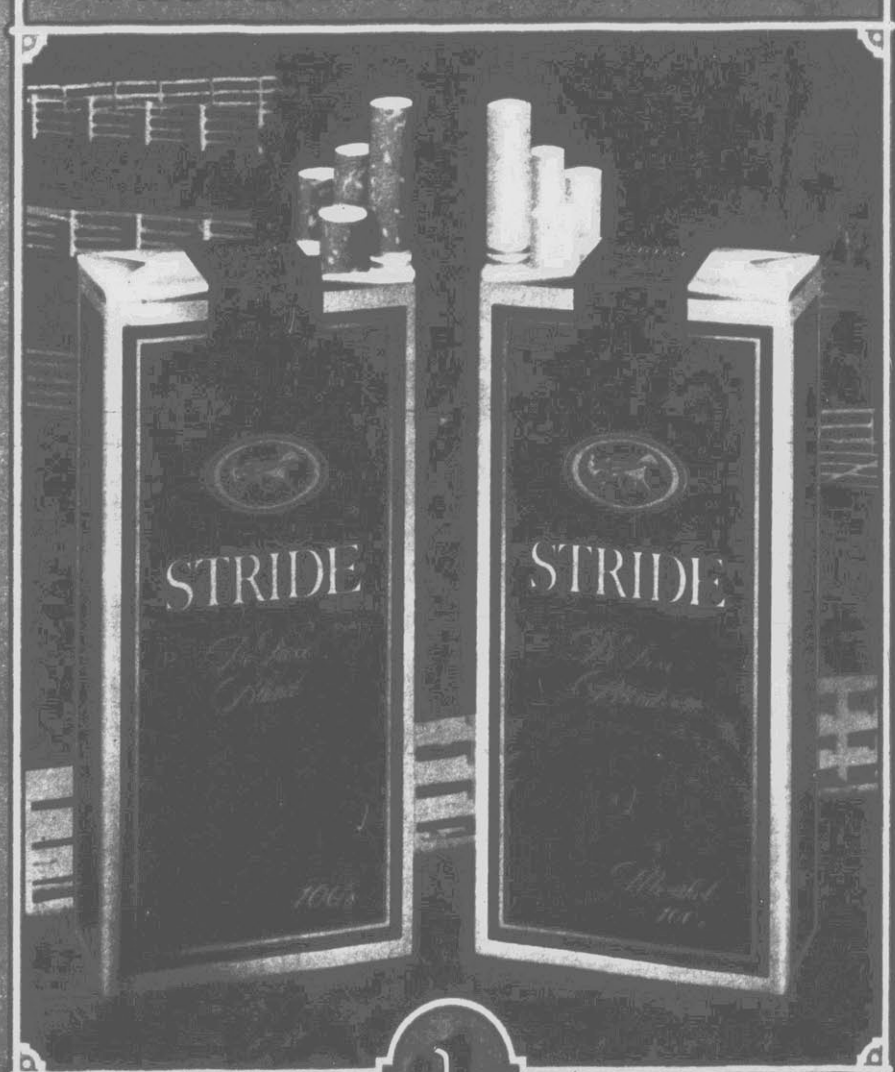

At the cinema, it frustrates them that they cannot change channels. It's time somebody told them: A movie house is not a home. FW

When Jesus Christ, as God incarnate, lived among the people of his time, choosing to lead a normal human life, Scripture speaks of him as being "led by the Spirit." Christian faith teaches us that since his Resurrection, Christ sends this same Spirit to all believers, enabling them to believe, in the first place, and then to share in God's own life. Thus, it is by the power of the Spirit that they fulfill their God-given destiny. For they were made to be God's own image and likeness.

RELATIONSHIPS

WHY COMPLIMENTS ARE SO HARD TO TAKE

Compliments invariably catch us unprepared and off-guard. They make us embarrassed, shy, uncomfortable. Often our first reaction is disbelief and a quick comeback belittling ourselves.

"Compliments are often appreciated and regarded with pride," says Houston psychologist Dr. Robert L. Bell. "But some people have low self-esteem and find it hard to believe a compliment."

Sociologists Ronnie E. Turner of Colorado State University and Charles Edgley of Oklahoma State University conducted a study to analyze the reactions of respondents to praise. Though people found compliments nice to receive, they often felt awkward and found the praise difficult to deal with. "It's a bittersweet sensation," Turner and Edgley report. "Although compliments encourage, reward, bolster self-esteem, and lubricate social relationships, compliments often give rise to feelings of uneasiness, defensiveness and cynicism."

The reasons:

Reciprocity. A compliment seems to imply a certain felt need to return it, usually as quickly as possible.

Modesty. You feel you must neutralize the compliment so that you don't appear conceited. You say, "I can't take all the credit. I had lots of help." Witness the Academy Award speeches. Or you can credit luck or circumstances.

Uterior Motive. Some compliments are devised to manipulate you. Sometimes you can see through a person's veneer. But when you're unable to detect an ulterior motive you begin to feel uneasy, mistrustful.

Impending Criticism. Compliments are also used as a prelude to criticism. Remarks like, "You did a nice job typing this letter, but you could improve your neatness," are disconcerting.

Perspective. "People use compliments to remind other people of their place in a hierarchy," says Edgley. "As an example: For an assistant professor, this is an excellent job." That means, he explains, "You've done a good job, but don't forget you're just an assistant professor."

Upping the Ante. Sometimes compliments are a way of setting standards for anticipated performance in the future. "That's a good job, but now that we know what you can do, we're expecting more from you".

There are right and wrong ways to give and receive compliments. Here are suggestions from the experts.

- Acknowledge a compliment with a simple "thank you."

- Put it into perspective for yourself. Make no more nor less of it than it is.
- Don't prolong a compliment. To dwell on it results in embarrassment for both of you.

- Be specific. Instead of "You look wonderful," say, "You look wonderful in that dress."
- Don't constantly compliment someone. Habitual praise can eventually become meaningless.

- Give non-verbal compliments. You can show approval by a smile or a pat on the back.

Introducing New ALPO Puppy Food.

ALPO consulted with hundreds of veterinarians to develop a new food for puppies. And the result—a formula that has high quality protein and is more digestible than other leading puppy foods. So it's no wonder that veterinarians who responded to a recent survey preferred the formula for new ALPO Puppy Food more than 2 to 1 over every leading brand.

It's the pick of veterinarians and the pick of the litter.

WHAT IN THE WORLD

BY MARION LONG

FROM BOSTON

SWEAT IN THE SHOP

Does the tension at the office sometimes make you sweat more than 20 minutes of Nautilus does? David Bodanis, author of The Body Book: A Fantastic Voyage to the World Within (Little, Brown), says emotional stress actually produces a physiological condition similar to physical stress.

When you get steamed, Bodanis explains, "blood sugars are assembled by the crucial muscles, coagulants are sent racing through the bloodstream, white corpuscle production is stepped up, and powerful hormones are distributed throughout the body." When you have to suppress that anger and hold back from beating your boss or trashing your typewriter, your body breaks down the blood sugars, coagulants and hormones immediately, producing heat. So you sweat.

A cold sweat happens when your body begins to gear up for action but realizes that it's too late. "The cooling mechanism — sweating — has begun before you feel the heat." In this case, Bodanis shrugs, "you're

SO LONG, BROKEN AXLES

The people who bring you America's highways and byways have wised up and started practicing a little preventive medicine. The University of Illinois in Urbana and the Army's Construction Engineering Research Lab next door in Champagne have developed a series of computer programs designed to get road repairs started before the roads become pocked with potholes.

The computer system, called PAVER, "will make city planners and engineers far more efficient in allocating resources," Michael Darter, an engineering professor (at U. of Ill.), points out. "If you can put tax money where it's needed most, you're not going to waste it."

PAVER records the paving in an area, classifies it according to age, traffic load, and construction history, and makes suggestions on when repairs should be made based on projected road conditions. Sounds great! Anything that keeps taxes at a level below highway robbery is fine with us.

FROM NEW YORK

WHO YA GONNA CALL?

Teenage girls. That is, if you're calling with questions pertaining to the supernatural. A Seventeen magazine survey of its readers' belief in things that go bump in the night revealed that teenage girls have an unearthly preoccupation with these matters.

It was found that 92 percent of the respondents read their horoscopes (and 28 percent take them seriously), 82 percent believe in ESP, 62 percent participate in seances, and 61 percent believe in ghosts.

But let's face it, belief in the supernatural isn't restricted to 17-year-old American girls. We can think of at least one 30-ish Prince of Denmark who was a ghostbuster long before Bill Murray.

BEDSIDE READING

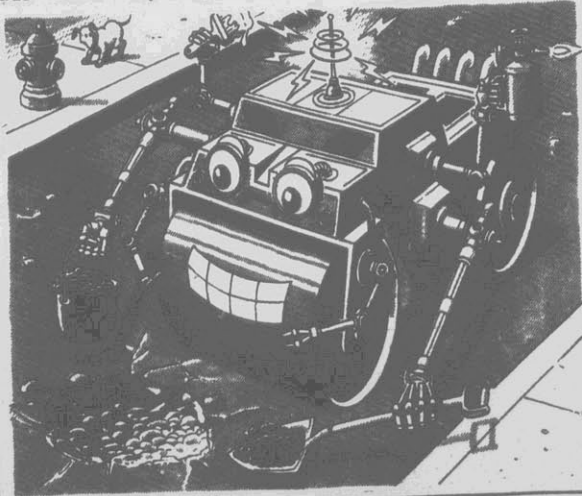

What are Americans reading before they turn out the light? We asked a couple of them:

Monte Lorenzet, market analyst, Apple Computers, San Jose, Calif.

"I've just finished reading The Maltese Falcon by Dashiell Hammett in a special edition that features pictures of scenes in San Francisco where it takes place. I've seen the movie a dozen times, and I had fun seeing Bogart as I read along. And since I was so familiar with it, I could pay even closer attention to the dialogue, which is terrific."

Glenn Marcy, research systems programmer, Carnegie-Mellon Univ.

"I recently read Moretta: Dragon Rider of Pern by Anne McCaffery. The author goes into a great deal of depth with her characters so that you really feel you know them. You especially feel for the heroine and suffer through all the ordeals she goes through. I've read everything Anne McCaffery has written, and I liked this book a lot."

Playful Morning

by Nicholas Wilson

Inaugurating the National Wildlife Federation's new collection of porcelain sculptures portraying wild animals with their young.

An original work of art.
Hand-painted. $60.

Please mail your reservation application by April 30, 1985.

The National Wildlife Federation announces the commissioning of a new sculpture collection depicting native North American animals with their young.

Playful Morning inaugurates the collection. Crafted in fine hand-painted porcelain, it is an unusually beautiful work of art. Yet it is being made available at the modest price of $60 which may be paid in three convenient monthly installments of $20 each.

This new and original work of art has been created for the National Wildlife Federation by Nicholas Wilson, one of the world's most talented wildlife portraitists. With both an artist's love for beauty and a naturalist's eye for fine detail, Wilson has a unique talent for sharing his insights into the personalities and feelings of his animal subjects. The intimacy and realism of his work is truly extraordinary.

Here, Wilson portrays a desert bobcat and her kitten drawn together in gentle play. And he captures perfectly the exuberance of the frisky youngster as well as the affectionate mother's spirited response.

All the features of the animals are precisely true-to-nature—from their alert, tufted ears to their black-banded tails... from their tawny brown backs to their padded white paws. Even the texture of their fine, soft fur and the lively gleam in their amber eyes.

Playful Morning will be crafted for the National Wildlife Federation under the supervision of Franklin Porcelain. It will be sculptured and cast in fine porcelain. And great care will be taken to preserve all the remarkable detail that is the hallmark of Wilson's style. Then, this fine imported sculpture will be meticulously painted by hand faithfully rendering every subtle marking, every tone and shade of the artist's palette.

A Certificate of Authenticity will accompany each sculpture. And as an owner of this work, you will also be guaranteed the opportunity to acquire any of the future wildlife sculptures created for this collection at the same attractive price. You will, however, be under no obligation to do so.

Displayed in your home, this original work of art will draw the admiration of all who see it. Thus, it is certain to become a family treasure—to be passed down to future generations with pride.

You need send no money now. Simply complete your application and mail it to the National Wildlife Federation, c/o Franklin Porcelain, Franklin Center, PA 19091 by April 30, 1985.

Why are we giving away these nationally advertised SWIFT-660/F Autocast Spinning Reels for only $4

Hard to believe, but true.

As part of its Anniversary Publicity Campaign, the giant New York outfitting firm of Abernathy & Closter will distribute one million (1,000,000) of its most expensive spinning reels—the SWIFT-660/F Autocast Spinning Reel—for the astonishing “Anniversary Price” of only $4 each to the first one million persons who write to the company address (below) before Midnight, April 7, 1985.

This original Anniversary Ad must accompany your request.
Copies or photostats are not acceptable.

These are the same SWIFT-660/F Autocast Spinning Reels nationally advertised in leading media. They give you fast “thumbs-off” (one-handed) casting, over longer distances than you ever dreamed possible. And you can cast even light baits without backlash.

Compatible with virtually every plug or lure, the new high-speed gear ratio gives you fast “pop”-action, yet is powerful enough to reel in fish without “pumping”.

The new open-face design (and desirable skirted spool) eliminates friction and prevents tangles. The anti-reverse is “whisper” silent. And the Microdisc Surge-Free Drag System won't let your fish run away.

Not only the most expensive, but also the fastest selling spinning reel ever sold by this multi-million dollar New York firm, it is ideal for both trolling and casting in both salt and fresh water. Precision crafted of newest spaceage materials, it is built to last. Yet, unbelievably, it weighs just 7 ounces, making it the perfect reel for your ultra-light rig.

These SWIFT-660/F Autocast Spinning Reels will not be sold at this price by the company in any store. To obtain one at this special Anniversary Price, mail this original printed ad to the company before Midnight, April 7, 1985.

Each reel is covered by a full one-year money-back guarantee and will thus be replaced or refunded by the company, free of charge, if it ever fails to function. There is a limit of two (2) reels per address at this price, but requests which are mailed early enough (before March 31) may request up to five.

To obtain your SWIFT-660/F Autocast Spinning Reel, mail this original Anniversary Ad together with your name and address and $4 for each reel. Add only $2 shipping and handling no matter how many reels you are requesting. (New York residents add sales tax.) Allow up to 6-8 weeks for shipment. Mail to: Abernathy & Closter, $4 Spinning Reel Offer, Dept. 603-143, Box 1736, Hicksville, New York 11751.

FREE BONUS: We will also wind 250 feet of our specialty 6-lb-test monofilament line onto your reel, free of charge, if your request is mailed before March 31.

● ON TARGET! Five marksmen each scored 100 points in a different way on the target at right. Two shooters fired five times; three fired six times. Only one scored a bull's-eye in the process. Can you find at least one way to score 100 in five shots and one way in six shots?

● Riddle-Me-This, if you can! How do fishermen get in touch? By dropping a line. How did the hog get out of the dump? It pigged out. What dog uses the telephone? The dial-mation.

WILD WEST GAMBLER

'Tis said a gambler once appeared at a frontiertown bank seeking a loan. "My collateral is in this envelope," said he. "I'm in a poker game. There's a fortune in the pot. I've an hour to raise a stake."

"Absurd," said the cashier, peering into the envelope. "We can't lend you money on that."

Just then, the bank president arrived. He looked into the envelope and said, "Son, the money is yours."

What was in the envelope?

OPEN HOUSE! What nursery rhyme structure can you draw to complete the scene above? Add lines from dot to dot.

AFTER SEVERAL DAYS' JOURNEY THEY COME TO A GREAT FJORD. BELOW, LAPP HERDSMEN URGE A SEA OF REINDEER ACROSS. "THIS IS THE MOST IMPORTANT THING THAT HAPPENS IN OUR LAND," MIKKEL EXPLAINS. "AT SUMMER'S END WE DRIVE THE HERDS SOUTH FOR BETTER FORAGING. WHEN WINTER BREAKS WE DRIVE THEM NORTH AGAIN--- BACK HOME."

"THE REINDEER GIVE US MEAT AND MILK. THEY GIVE US CLOTHES FOR OUR BACKS AND SKINS FOR OUR ROOFS." AND ALREADY PRINCE VALIANT IS WONDERING IF THE REINDEER CAN HELP GIVE THE LAPS SOME PEACE AS WELL.
