Chernenko Dies At 73; Soviets Name Gorbachev To Top Post

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — President Konstantin U. Chernenko, a longtime party stalwart and transition figure at the Soviet helm, died Sunday at age 73. Within hours the Kremlin announced his successor — 54-year-old Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the Politburo's youngest member.

The selection of economic specialist Gorbachev as Communist Party general secretary signaled the arrival of a new generation to power in this vast nation, but not necessarily a major change in Soviet policy.

Chernenko, a party activist for 55 years, had finally reached the pinnacle of Moscow power last year, but only as an elderly and enfeebled figurehead. He governed a mere 13 months, shortest tenure of any Kremlin chief.

He died at 7:20 p.m. (11:20 a.m. EST) Sunday "after a grave illness," the Soviet government announced today, more than 18 hours after his death. It later said emphysema, complicated by heart and liver ailments, was the cause of death. Chernenko had been known to be suffering from respiratory problems.

Gorbachev was quickly named to head the commission making arrangements for Chernenko's funeral Wednesday, an early indication he would take over as party general secretary, the key Kremlin post.

Then, only four hours after the death announcement, the official Tass news agency reported that Gorbachev had been unanimously elected general secretary at an extraordinary plenary session of the party Central Committee.

He is expected also to be named Soviet president, but that must be done by the Supreme Soviet, the national parliament.

The choice of Gorbachev was not a surprise. His positioning in the Politburo lineup during public events in recent months had led Western diplomats to label him the Kremlin's No. 2 man.

The ruddy-faced, white-haired Chernenko, whose ill health had kept him from public view for weeks at a time, was the third Kremlin chief to die in little more than two years, part of a revolving-door succession that has complicated already frigid U.S.-Soviet relations.

The announcement of his death came on the eve of the resumption of U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms-control talks in Geneva, Switzerland. It could delay movement in the negotiations, during a transition to new Moscow leadership. But the Geneva delegations announced their discussions would open as scheduled Tuesday.

Once again, as in the past, Soviet officials waited many hours before announcing a Soviet leader's death.

Early signs of an emergency in Moscow came Sunday when high-ranking Soviet delegations in San Francisco, Yugoslavia and West Germany cut short overseas visits. Lights burned before dawn today at the headquarters of the Communist Party Central Committee, an indications of unusual activity, and Soviet radio and television switched to somber music.

The death announcement, reported by the official Tass news agency at 2 p.m. (6 a.m. EST) and read over the national television and radio networks, said:

"The Central Committee of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union, the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR and the Council of Ministers of the USSR announce with deep sorrow to the party and the entire Soviet people

BLAZE DAMAGES AYDEN BUSINESS — Fireman battle an early-morning blaze that county fire officials say heavily damaged Huggins Convenient Mart and Laundromat on South Lee Street in Ayden today. Pitt County Fire Marshal Bobby Joyner said no dollar estimate of damage was available and that the cause of the fire is under investigation. Two Ayden firefighters whose names were not available were injured in the blaze, Joyner said. One fireman was overcome by smoke and another hurt his back, he said. The fire was reported at 2:18 a.m. and units from Winterville, Ayden and Grifton responded. (Reflector Photos By Tommy Forrest)

Reagan Rules Out Trip To Moscow To Attend Funeral

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today ruled out a visit to the Soviet Union to attend the funeral of President Konstantin U. Chernenko, a White House spokesman said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan's decision came during a 30-minute meeting this morning with his foreign policy advisers.

He said the controlling factors in the decision included the short time available for a meeting with the new Soviet leadership and the short time for preparations for the Wednesday funeral.

The spokesman added that the United States was still awaiting word from the Soviets on the size of the delegation Kremlin would like but that Reagan was "inclined" to send Vice President George Bush, who is in Geneva.

Reagan did not attend the funerals of the first two Soviet leaders who died during his term in the White House, Leonid I. Brezhnev and Yuri V. Andropov.

Although White House officials had suggested earlier in the day that the atmosphere was better this time for a Reagan visit, largely due to the scheduled reopening Tuesday of U.S.-Soviet arms negotiations, Speakes said, "We talked about the short time for a meeting, the short time for preparations and those types of considerations" in making the decision.

It has been standing administration policy that Reagan would not hold a summit meeting with a Soviet leader unless there had been adequate preparations and a likelihood of success.

If the Soviets stick to their customary practice of inviting nations to send small delegations to the funeral, Reagan will name Bush, Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Robert Hartman, the U.S. ambassador to Moscow, to represent the United States, one White House official said.

"That official, speaking on condition he not be named, said a presidential visit would have required a major change, both logistically and politically, for Reagan, who would not be expected to make a show of warmth toward the Soviet leadership he regards with considerable distrust.

Reagan is scheduled to visit Quebec for a summit meeting with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney next Sunday and Monday.

Arms Talks Will Continue

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union decided today to go ahead with nuclear weapons reduction talks despite the death of Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko, a U.S. spokesman said.

The decision was made at an hour-long meeting between Warren Zimmerman, a deputy to chief U.S. negotiator Max Kampelman, and Vladimir Alexandrov of the Soviet delegation.

The spokesman, Joseph Lehman, said the meeting would begin at 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Soviet mission. The session is designed to set a schedule for the next few weeks. It was not immediately clear when the two sides would begin to grapple with the issues.

"The executive secretaries of the U.S. and Soviet delegations have agreed that the heads of the delegations will meet at 11 a.m. at the Soviet mission," Lehman said.

The chief Soviet delegate is Victor P. Karpov.

Proposed Cutbacks In Conservation Spending Causing Concern Locally

By MELANIE PHILLIPS
Reflector Staff Writer

A Reagan administration proposal to reduce funding to or eliminate the U.S. Soil Conservation Service has sparked concern in Pitt County, not only within the conservation district of this area, but among local farmers and organizations dedicated to soil and water management.

The proposal, submitted to the National Association of Conservation Districts on Feb. 4, would cut the SCS staff from 14,156 to 5,000 and would eliminate the following national programs: Resource Conservations and Development, The Great Plains Conservation Program, The Snow Survey and Water Forecasting Program, Research Conservation Act Activities and the Inventory and Monitoring Program, River Basin Survey and Small Watershed Programs, and all cost sharing programs of the Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture 1986 budget summary contains four figures for SCS. The actual amount spent in the 1984 fiscal year was $621 million and the current estimate of monies spent for the 1985 fiscal year is $603 million. The administration's proposed budget for the 1986 fiscal year is $454 million and the estimated administration budget proposal for the 1987 fiscal year is $200 million.

The SCS would be left with one-third of the present Conservation Technical Assistance Program, the Soil Survey Program, and the Plant Materials Centers by the 1987 fiscal year — the only three funded programs that would be left if the proposals are ratified. Other agencies such as TVA, Fish and Wildlife Service and Forestry and Reclamation Programs, all face shrinking funds.

The National Association of Conservation Districts recommends for the final program, to be in place by Oct. 1, 1986, that the budget be held the same as the 1985 budget — $609.5 million in total SCS appropriations.

"These drastic cutback proposals were a shock," said Albert Coffey, district conservationist with the SCS. Locally, according to Coffey, the proposal would eliminate small projects used to develop watersheds

ECU Classroom Expansion To Begin In Spring

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University officials say they expect to begin construction sometime this summer of a 150,000-square-foot general classroom building that will help, but not eradicate, the "tremendous overcrowding" problem the school has been facing for several years.

"There's no question but that we need this building to relieve the stress placed on existing facilities," ECU Vice Chancellor Angelo Wolpe said in a recent interview. "For sometime now in the school of business," he elaborated, "we've had faculty members sharing cubicles that aren't even one person offices."

Construction bids for the proposed three-story building are scheduled to be let in either May or June, according to Cliff Moore, ECU vice chancellor for business affairs. The project is expected to cost approximately $13.6 million, a sum appropriated by the North Carolina

General Assembly in 1983, and is scheduled for "hopeful" completion at the beginning of the 1987 fall semester.

The building, which will be one of the largest in the University of North Carolina system and the largest on the ECU campus, will be located in an area bounded by the Graham, Rawl and Flanagan buildings, with the southern end of the structure sitting atop the university's old heating plant. Asked if construction would interfere with the gazebo area of campus behind the sciences building, Moore replied that area would be left intact.

Dr. William Bloodworth, chairman of ECU's Department of English — one of several departments scheduled for relocation once the project is complete — said he is pleased the university will finally receive a new classroom building. The last classroom-office structure built on the central campus was the Brewster building, completed in 1971 at an approximate cost of $2.9 million. Student enrollment in 1971 totaled 10,106; today, approximately 13,800 students attend East Carolina University. The number of teaching faculty at ECU has also increased by 240 members since 1971, bringing the number of instructional faculty positions to 900. Two schools, the school of technology and school of medicine, have also been added to the university's curriculum since 1971.

Saying the need for another classroom building was "terribly obvious," Professor Bloodworth explained that English department personnel, like those of the school of business, have had to live in cramped quarters for some time. "We have senior faculty members who share offices ... We also are really hurting for classroom space," he said.

"In some cases, we've even had to limit enrollment because we couldn't find the right size classroom. And because our classrooms in this building (Austin) are on the second and third floors, we have real problems offering our classes to handicapped students."

The new classroom and office facility will be equipped with elevators and other like details to provide access for handicapped students, as well as large classrooms with tiered seating and pits from which instructors will teach. In addition, the building will house approximately 200 offices, and conference and seminar rooms.

University disciplines scheduled for relocation to the new building in addition to English, include the school of business, the department of foreign language and literatures, the department of business education and administrative services, the center for leadership development, the honors program, the office of cooperative education and the university's gerontology program.

ECU ...

The building, Volpe said, has been designed to blend with other structures located in the campus' core area.

"It will be brick, red brick, and will blend in very nicely with surrounding buildings. The design will be compatible, but will be more modern in keeping with the appearance of the sciences building."

Some trees will have to be taken down to accommodate the building, but according to Volpe, no matter where the building is located, a number of trees will have to come down. He stressed, however, that site selection was a lengthy process that involved such considerations as conservation of natural areas and existing parking facilities, as well as compatibility with the university's instructional building location plan. Volpe said several alternatives were considered including a location near Joyner Library. That alternative was not feasible, he explained, because the building would have taken up a significant portion of the university's much needed parking space and because that location would have been too far away from the campus' core of instructional buildings.

that Konstantin Ustinovich Chernenko, General Secretary of the Central Committee of the CPSU (Communist Party) and President of the Presidium of the USSR Supreme Soviet, died at 7:20 p.m. on March 10, 1985, after a grave illness.

"The name of Konstantin Ustinovich Chernenko, an outstanding leader of the Communist Party and the Soviet state and a staunch fighter for the ideals of Communism and for peace, will remain forever in the hearts of the Soviet people and of the whole of progressive mankind."

A later medical bulletin said he died of the lung disease emphysema, complicated by unspecified cardiac difficulties and chronic hepatitis that worsened into cirrhosis, or deterioration, of his liver.

In Washington, White House officials said President Reagan was notified by his national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, within minutes after the Moscow announcement.

Black-draped flags were quickly hung on major Moscow buildings by crews working in sunny, 21-degree Fahrenheit weather. Chernenko's portrait was placed on the front of the central House of Unions, where his body will lie in state, just across from the Kremlin's towering red-brick walls.

Tass said later the funeral was scheduled for 1 p.m. Wednesday, and Chernenko would be buried in Red Square, traditional resting place for Soviet leaders.

The White House said President Reagan had ruled out his personal participation in the funeral. It was not immediately announced whether Vice President George Bush or some other dignitary would lead the U.S. delegation.

The Siberian peasants' son Chernenko, a party activist for 55 years, took over as general secretary Feb. 13, 1984, four days after the death of party chief and President Yuri V. Andropov.

Chernenko was the oldest person ever to assume the top post held by Vladimir I. Lenin, Josef Stalin and Nikita S. Khrushchev.

His 390 days in power, historically the shortest tenure of any Soviet chief, were regarded by Kremlin observers as a time of collective leadership.

Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko dominated foreign policy, Gorbachev took charge of economic planning, and Chernenko dropped from public sight for months at a time because of illness.

Gorbachev also appeared to have taken over important ideological and foreign policy duties. He visited Britain last December in a highly publicized trip that brought him more fully into the international spotlight and presented a new image to the West — of a younger, more polished Soviet leader.

He is regarded as a stronger supporter of Andropov's reform-minded economic policies than was Chernenko.

in Pitt County. There are four completed watersheds in Pitt County and another is under planning at Little Contentnea Creek. If the proposals are ratified, that project would be dropped.

Coffey also named other areas which would be affected by the proposals. "We could lose our recreation, conservation and development program, which is a legislative mandate that involves a combination of local leadership with rural concerns such as erosion, flooding and water-based recreation." The Emergency Watershed Protection program, Coffey added, would be affected. This program works with drainage districts and was used to help clean up after the tornados last March. "If the proposal goes through, we would not have the people and the funds and would lose the capability to participate in this program," Coffey said.

According to Coffey, a possible impact of the proposals would involve the targeting program which concentrates staff members in districts with a high erosion rate. This program would use the bulk of staff members in those areas and reduction in staff members would deplete the number of staff members in areas of lower erosion rates.

including Pitt County.

Ralph Tucker, chairman of the Pitt County Soil and Water Conservation District, said he was surprised that anyone in the Reagan administration would come out with such a proposal. "If the Soil Conservation Service was eliminated, it would have a devastating effect on Pitt County, North Carolina and the United States. If we think enough of this great country that we live in to spend so much on defense, we need to think enough of it to protect the soil given to us by God."

Tucker, a farmer in Pitt County, said that he uses SCS assistance on his farm. "We must continue to provide assistance to farmers with their soil and water concerns."

Jonathan Phillips, executive director of the Pamlico-Tar River Foundation, a privately funded organization, recently wrote to Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-N.C., and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., regarding the foundation's concern about the proposal. According to Phillips, SCS programs have been a success and the continuing need for federal soil and water conservation programs is "clear and pressing." He cited examples of the need for this type of program at three scales.

Phillips wrote: "In the Pamlico-Tar River watershed, the PTRF has identified soil erosion, sedimentation, and nonpoint source pollution associated with erosion as critical water quality problems. We consider the work of SCS and the soil and water districts as essential to dealing with these problems."

Phillips also wrote that at the state level the recent report of the Water Quality Roundtable series of the North Carolina Coastal Resources Advisory Council identified "a number of pollution problems related to land use." According to Phillips, the recommendations repeatedly cite the need to support and work through SCS and the districts. At the national scale, Phillips wrote, "the 1984 meeting of the Soil Conservation Society of America considered an issue that is frightening: The feeling that we may now face a soil erosion crisis rivaling the 'dust bowl' days of the thirties."

Jones replied with his own letter stating that he was "shocked and

Soviet journalists said it was unlikely that Karpov and the two other Soviet negotiators, Yuli Kvitsinsky and Alexei Obukhov, would go home to Moscow for Chernenko's funeral on Wednesday.

But that does not rule out a pause here for a few days.

Arms talks in Geneva usually are held twice a week. Lehman's announcement, telephoned to the U.S. press center, did not say whether a session would also be held Thursday.

Kampelman and the other U.S. negotiators, John Tower and Maynard Glitman, were in Brussels today to brief officials of the NATO governments.

The talks will open with the two sides far apart on the issues even though their stated goals are nearly identical.

Both sides have said they want to prevent an arms race in space and end it on earth, but they were split on where to put the emphasis.

The United States wants to resume the quest for deep cuts in offensive weapons, which was suspended when previous talks broke down 15 months ago. The Soviets want to stop President Reagan's space-based missile-defense program, arguing it will lead to a dangerous militarization of outer space.

On arrival in Geneva on Saturday, Kampelman, pledged his efforts toward the "taming and then the elimination of nuclear weapons."

Karpov said when he arrived Sunday that the Soviets also hope to attain the "truly historic goal" of eliminating nuclear weapons. He said neither side should have "unilateral advantage" over the other.

After the mostly ceremonial first session, the talks will be split into three parts — space weapons, strategic nuclear weapons and medium-range weapons.

Complicated by the sharp dispute over the space weapons system, dubbed "Star Wars," the talks are likely to be long and difficult.

Kampelman said his negotiating strategy could be summarized in "one important word — patience."

U.S. Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., one of 10 senators in Geneva to observe the start of the talks, suggested Sunday that Soviet opposition to U.S. research on space weapons may be part of a propaganda campaign designed to split the Western alliance.

"We must wait and see why they are here and what they are up to," said Lugar, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, in an interview.

America's main European allies, while concerned about possible militarization of space, have somewhat reluctantly given Reagan a go-ahead on a research program, which might take 10-15 years. But such countries as Britain, West Germany and Italy have insisted any deployment of Star Wars technology must be negotiated with the Soviets.

Reagan has instructed the U.S. negotiating team to discuss the Star Wars plan — officially known as the Strategic Defense Initiative — but not to negotiate limitations on research or testing.

HOW LONG WILL A CROWN LAST?
 If you have a tooth that needs a crown to save it from further deterioration, how long will the new crown last? That depends on a lot of things.
 A crown carefully fitted to your tooth should last a long time if you take good care of it and keep it free of accidents or injuries. The material from which the crown is made will make a difference. Acrylic or porcelain, for example, are less expensive than gold or the new metals but not as durable or injury-resistant. But the greatest threat to any crown, no matter what the material, are the bacteria that cause decay. If your gums become infected or if decay is given an opportunity to work its way under the crown, your tooth can be threatened again.
 Good oral hygiene at home will help you get rid of decay-causing plaque. So will a diet that's low in sugar and sugar-sweetened foods. But your best protection is to get regular dental checkups. Then, any minor problems can be treated before they get out of hand.

Lawyer Warns Others About Bank Cards

DEAR ABBY: You advised "Mac in the Big Apple" that if a thief used his credit card, his loss would be no more than $50 per card. This may or may not be the law in these cases, but as a lawyer who has had several of these cases, I know the reality may be very different.

I am handling a case right now where a lady, who does not speak English, came to Philadelphia and deposited her life savings of $10,900 in a major bank. The bank mailed her a card whereby the money could be withdrawn in amounts of no more than $200 without this lady ever requesting this card or knowing that it was coming.

Somehow this card was intercepted by a thief, and over a period of several months the entire $10,900 was withdrawn! The lady reported the theft immediately upon learning of it. The bank had advertised and still advertises that in a case like this, the loss is limited to $50. However, the bank refuses to pay a penny and has forced us to sue.

I expect that in several years we will recover all of this lady's money, but in the meantime, she has been forced to wait several years and incur legal fees.

FRANCIS E. GLEESON JR., PHILADELPHIA LAWYER

DEAR MR. GLEESON: If this can happen in the city of Brotherly Love, it can happen wherever such bank cards are issued. Thanks for wising up several million people.

DEAR ABBY: How would you feel if you were a healthy woman, age 49, and your husband of over 30 years (he's 56) informed you at the dinner table that after you die, he will find himself a beautiful, young girl with sex appeal to take care of him in his old age?

I am not a slob. I am slim, neat and clean, and some people even tell me I'm pretty.

HURT IN AUGUSTA, MAINE

DEAR HURT: I hope for your husband's sake that he's as handsome as Cary Grant, rich as a Rockefeller and charming as Prince Charles, because an ordinary middle-aged man would have a hard time finding a beautiful, young girl with sex appeal to take care of him in his old age.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Crocheted elegance for all seasons can be yours with this award-winning design by Sharon Price of Linesville, Pa., an exclusive for readers of this column. The crochet top looks great over a blouse or a sweater for chilly days or stands beautifully on its own as shown here.

The model garment was made with Lustersheen — an acrylic yarn with the feel of silky cotton — but you can use any sports-weight yarn. Directions are for small (35), medium (37 1/2), large (40) or extra large (42 1/2). The figures in parentheses indicate the finished bust measurement in inches.

To obtain directions for making the Crocheted Top, send your request for Leaflet No. CL-0310 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. C-0310 by sending a check or money order for $15 for small or medium sizes or $16.50 for large or extra large to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and Lustersheen yarn in your choice of the following colors: jade, white, Ming blue, gold, natural or light lilac.

Dear Pat: This is a thank you for all the many hours of pleasure I've had from Pat's Pointers. It seems like "carrying coals to Newcastle" to offer you patterns, but I am sending you some of my favorite edgings, thinking you might have missed some of these old-timers.

The first can be used with a variety of yarns to accent a yoke or neckline of a blouse. Worked in white on a darker garment makes the garment very showy.

CROCHETED TOP...shown in Lustersheen yarn is seasonless, worn alone or over a blouse or another sweater.

For the first row, work as follows: Chain 9, slip stitch in one loop of the fourth chain from the hook for a picot. Repeat these steps until desired length is reached. You will have 5 chains between picots. Chain 2 and turn.

For Row 2, work a shell of 6 double crochets in the middle chain between each picot loop across the row; end with a shell in the next to last chain of the row; then chain 3.

Row 3: Single crochet in the open space at the bottom of the last shell made, working along the lower edge of Row 1 (chain 8 and work a single crochet in the open space of the next shell). Repeat steps between parentheses across. Fasten off.

For Row 4, join yarn at beginning of last row. Slip stitch in the second chain of the first chain-8 loop; (chain 1, slip stitch in each of the next 5 chains and in the second chain of the next loop). Repeat steps between parentheses across. Fasten off.

The following are directions for a zig-zag pattern. When this is used on a jacket collar and lapels, you can turn an ordinary jacket into a creation.

Using any yarn you like, chain 8 stitches. Skip the first 3 chains and single crochet in the remaining 5 chains. Row 1: Chain 3, turn and single crochet in the back loops of each of the 5 single crochet stitches.

Row 2: Chain 6, turn, skip the first 3 chains, single crochet in the remaining 3 chains and single crochet in the back loops of the next 2 single crochets. Repeat Rows 1 and 2 for the desired length. — Emma Brown, Indianapolis

Sad Day?

When the good ship Elizabeth II sails from Shallowbag Bay in April she faces a routine scraping and painting of the hull. And, if there's time and money left, the three-masted square-rigger will be given a trial run to test her rigging.

It would be an opportunity to test the crew, too. Most of them are said to be amateurs in the trade (they just don't sail square-riggers like they used to); and the winter, which has been spent largely at dock or ashore, would take a lot of salt out of even the oldest salts in their midst.

Speaking of which . . .

Captain Horace Whitfield has some 20th century notions about sailing aboard a 16th century ship. A "crew-support" vessel is deemed necessary to provide a "head," shower and lounge for the crew who sails the Elizabeth II. From there, our imagination lopes to a point of no return: television, VCRs, stereos, a lunch bar, inner-spring mattresses; a clinic to care for blisters, fractures, ingrown nails, musket ball wounds, medication for seasickness, upset stomachs and scurvy. It's enough to shake the Elizabethan world. . . .

And there's more:

Elizabeth II is to be accompanied by a tug!

Yes, you should weep. Not only they take away the filth, hardship, poor diet, romance, drudgery, patience and skills of sailing a square-rigger from one port to another nearby port, there is no reliance on the wind which such ships were built to ride.

Some things are more important than timetables and being "on time."

One can hardly visualize natives of primitive coastal towns gathering on the shore to greet the "great white-winged bird" approaching over the shining deep-sea water with enthusiasm if it were being towed by a tug.

We'd surmise Captain Whitfield is also going to include at least one state-of-the-art navigation aid on the quarterdeck, too. A SATNAV, perhaps. A skipper shouldn't be caught without one.

All that's left to utterly destroy our illusions is a crew wearing Topsiders, T-shirts with a souvenir quality about them, no beards, and an antenna sprouting from the foremast.

It's a sad, sad day for traditionalists in the world of sailing. The clock was not turned back after all.

RALEIGH — Four years ago, the Highway Fund was in big trouble. Gasoline tax receipts were falling and highway construction and paving costs were rising. The 1981 General Assembly agreed to raise the gas tax by three cents a gallon but only after draconian cuts were made in the Department of Transportation.

The mood at DOT has certainly changed lately and the proposed 1985-87 budget is proof. Included in the budget recommendations of former Gov. Jim Hunt is a call for 311 new positions which would cost the state more than $4.5 million in the first year. Not to accuse the former governor of trying to bury this major increase in state personnel, but he didn't mention the new jobs in any of the summaries of his recommendations included in the front of the budget. Hunt got around to mentioning the 311 new jobs on page 19, deep in the written text for Highway Fund appropriations.

Billy Rose, deputy secretary of transportation, said the new people are needed to supervise and inspect new construction and rehabilitation projects. "With the increase in federal aid to highways because of the 5-cent gas tax increase, we're letting a lot more construction programs and we've found we don't have enough people to inspect the work," he said.

Without the new employees, Rose said, the work just won't get done.

The 5-cent gas tax increase, passed by Congress in 1983, has doubled the amount of money the state has for highway construction, raising the annual pot to $300 million. The state gas tax increase was earmarked for repaving and maintenance. Rose said the 311 new employees would be paid from both state and federal funds, depending on the project a particular employee was working on.

While the Highway Fund was the big topic of conversation in the Legislature four years ago, legislators hardly blinked when legislative staff tried to explain the proposal to hire 311 new people. At a Senate budget briefing, only Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, questioned the increase. "Who are these people? The budget document only talks about supervisors," she said in a later interview. "Where are these positions, are they out on the road? I didn't get an answer."

Although Hunt made the initial proposal, Mrs. Woodard was suspicious of Gov. Jim Martin's acquiescence to it. "Are the Republicans planning to put a bunch of their people on the payroll?" she asked.

Mrs. Woodard said she felt any new jobs in DOT ought to be first offered to some of the state employees fired during the lean years. Between 1977 and 1984, DOT laid off about 1,700 people.

Arch Laney, a lobbyist for the newly formed State Employees of North Carolina, was executive director of the N.C. State Government Employees Association during that period. He repeatedly insisted that jobs were being eliminated unnecessarily, that career state employees were being unfairly terminated. He predicted that the state would just have to turn around and hire new people in a short time.

How The Talks Might Go

Coffee

Just when coffee drinkers thought they were safe from potential health hazards along comes a study which tends to link coffee drinking with high cholesterol.

The clinical study reported in the February American Journal of Cardiology that sedentary and mildly active middle-age men who drink more than two cups of coffee a day are linked with higher cholesterol levels and a protein which is associated with heart disease.

The National Coffee Association promptly replied that "the weight of evidence in medical literature shows no indication that coffee consumption causes heart attacks."

Sedentary, middle age men are left to wonder as they pass their second cup of coffee of the day. So far, however, we have detected no abatement in coffee drinking in this or any other group. There is, however, one more shadow in our lives. Coffee is suspect along with salt and red meat and many other things. It's enough to send one to a diet of radishes, carrots and celery.

Agreement On MX Is Likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — As American arms negotiators prepare to meet their Soviet counterparts in Geneva, there is little doubt President Reagan will obtain congressional agreement that building more missiles is the key to reducing their numbers.

That is the logic of arms control and with negotiations about the resume, Congress is unlikely to defy it.

The MX missile, which the president likes to call the Peacekeeper, is the issue at hand.

"It is essential at this time that we not appear hesitant or otherwise lacking in resolve," Reagan told Congress last week. "Cancellation of, or slowing, the Peacekeeper deployment would unavoidably give such an appearance to the Soviet leadership."

Opponents of the MX have not given up. Members of Congress who want to kill the missile have joined forces with some potent grass-roots lobbying organizations in an effort to build public opposition.

"Congress must not allow the long-awaited resumption of the U.S.-Soviet negotiations to become a smokescreen for the deployment of a weapons system that endangers the national security interests of our country," said Dorothy Ridings, president of the League of Women Voters.

But the political reality of the contrary pressure on Congress was summed up by Rep. Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, a supporter of the missile, when she said, "Who wants to be in the position of voting against the MX and getting blamed for the failure of the talks?"

The House and Senate will vote on whether to build 21 new missiles later this month, while the three-part negotiations are under way in Geneva.

A year ago, the MX barely survived a 48-48 vote in the Senate when Vice President George Bush broke the tie in the missile's favor.

When the Democrats picked up two Senate seats in the 1984 elections there was widespread speculation the MX was in for tough going.

One of the most pessimistic backers of the MX was Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who wrote to Reagan a month after the election that "we do not have the votes in the

"The Arms Control talks will come to order. Did the gentleman from the Soviet Union wish to speak?"

"My government must protest President Reagan's request for funding of new MX missiles at a time when we are in Geneva to begin arms negotiations. How are we to seriously discuss reducing weapons at the very moment your American leaders are asking Congress for authority to build more of them?"

"It is very simple, Mr. Federenko. The only reason the President wants the MX missile at this time is so you Soviets will know my country is serious about getting a fair and verifiable treaty."

"Why should we give up our ICBMs if the United States keeps building the MX?"

"Because, Mr. Federenko, you know as well as I do that the MX has no strategic value. The original idea was to move it underground so we could retaliate if you launched a first strike attack. When that idea proved too costly we decided to put the MX in hardened Minuteman silos. The instant we did that its value as an offensive weapon was lost."

"If it has no value as an offensive weapon why does your President keep asking for money for produce so many of them?"

"Because the MX is the secret bargaining chip we intend to use in these negotiations. We're reluctantly willing to give it up at some time if you are reluctantly willing to give up one of your missile systems."

"Forgive me for asking this, but if the MX is really a secret bargaining chip, why are you telling me this?"

"Because, Mr. Federenko, we believe if we tell you what we are willing to give up, then you will offer us a bargaining chip of your own — something that has no real value in your arsenal."

"We have plenty of those. But if you eliminate a weapon you really couldn't care about, and we eliminate one that we don't want, how does that reduce the risk of a nuclear war?"

"If we both give up obsolete weapons it's easier to arrive at an agreement. The difficult part is to give up something the President insists we need."

"Such as 'Star Wars'?"

"Exactly. 'Star Wars' will never be used as a bargaining chip because once we develop it, we don't care if the Kremlin signs an arms treaty with us or not. If we can knock all your weapons out of the sky, why should we talk to you?"

"By the time you develop a foolproof 'Star Wars' defensive system, we will develop a foolproof offensive system to penetrate it."

"You're just saying that, Mr. Federenko, because you want us to put 'Star Wars' on the table."

"How can you put it on the table when you don't know what it is?"

"How do you know we don't know what it is?"

"Because if you really had a 'Star Wars' system we would have stolen it from you by now. You should know there are no secrets from the KGB."

"'Star Wars' is dear to Mr. Reagan's heart, and whether it exists or not is immaterial. The fact that the President dreams about it makes the system non-negotiable."

"Then we will not agree to any nuclear arms reductions until the President stops dreaming about 'Star Wars.'"

"The Soviet Union cannot tell the President of the United States what he can or cannot dream about."

"We can if his dreams are destabilizing the balance of power in the world. We have an answer to every space weapon he dreams of putting in the sky, and we intend to start building them right now."

"Is that your final work, Mr. Federenko?"

"No, it's my opening statement. Now let's start the talks."

Strength For Today

"Be glad in the Lord and rejoice ye righteous."

Why do some people seem to feel that religion is a matter of gloom and denial? Religious faith indeed causes us to face life in a spirit of quiet solemnity. But such solemnity is not gloom. It is resolute purpose manifesting itself as it faces life's issues.

The really happy people in the world are people who have a hold on some religion and who in turn allow that religion to have a hold on them. They acknowledge the moral standards which this religion demands. They give themselves seriously to living up to these standards. They turn from evil like Jesus who in his encounter with Satan said, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

There is plenty of seriousness about sincere religion, but the outstanding characteristic of sincere religion is joy.

Tax Concept Spreading

WASHINGTON (AP) — "Tax increase," the phrase President Reagan thought his landslide reelection victory banished from Congress' fiscal vocabulary, has crept back.
 Talk about raising taxes has returned as budget writers in the Senate continue to shun the president's assertion that further domestic spending cuts, alone, can significantly reduce federal budget deficits.
 Democrats increasingly are saying that revenues must be raised also. But Republicans are sticking to the line that raising taxes should be considered only if all other efforts to curb deficits fall short.
 "I have always felt ... that there was no way that you were going to get a majority vote out of either party" to cut enough to effect substantial deficit reductions, said Sen. Lawton Chiles of Florida, the top Democrat on the Senate Budget Committee.

 "You probably will have to have some revenues in the package to get to the goal," Chiles said Sunday on CBS' "Face the Nation."
 "The last resort should be taxes," Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, said on the same program. "We're not anywhere near close to last resort activities yet."
 However, his panel, which began drafting a budget blueprint last week, is not close to making a dent in the deficits, either.

 The committee deadlocked last Thursday in arguments about whether next year's Social Security cost-of-living adjustment should be eliminated to help trim federal spending.
 The Senate resumes its work Tuesday afternoon.

Study Will Focus On N.C. Winter Storms

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Winter storms like one in 1980 that flattened eastern North Carolina poultry houses under up to 25 inches of snow and destroyed beach homes with high waves should be more predictable after research on the "Hatteras lows," a scientist says.
More typically, Hatteras lows bring lesser amounts of snow, ice or rain to North Carolina and go on to wreak greater havoc farther north along the Eastern Seaboard.
"When these cyclones are born off the Carolina coast, they present serious weather forecasting prob-blems from North Carolina all the way to New England," said Gerald F. Watson, a North Carolina State University meteorologist.

Watson and researchers from five other universities will soon venture higher in the sky and farther out to sea than before to track the Hatteras lows, the East Coast's biggest winter weather maker.
"It'll be by far the largest field experiment for gathering meteorological data ever on the East Coast," Watson said.
"With all the state-of-the-art equipment we'll be using, we'll be able to get a real three-dimensional picture of weather patterns, instead of just the two dimensions we're used to," he said.

The $7 million project, named GALE for Genesis of Atlantic Lows Experiment, will use aircraft, a research ship, radar and data-gathering balloons and aircraft drops from the U.S. Air Force, NASA and the parent agency of the National Weather Service.
The Hatteras lows are low-pressure whirlpools of air about 1,000 miles in diameter that move in counter-clockwise patterns and gather force as they reach the waters off North Carolina from the Gulf of Mexico.
Meteorologists "have a difficult time forecasting these storms, which are so important for the Carolinas and the whole northeast, because a lot of the storm circulation is out over the sea," Watson said. "There just aren't that many observations out there, or in the first few miles of the earth's atmosphere."

"In the past, our inability to observe thousands of feet above the storm systems and to monitor in offshore waters made it difficult for even the most modern computerized forecasts to be accurate," Watson said.
In what Watson called a "crucial rehearsal," the scientists are testing their equipment and the forecasting techniques that will be used to determine when the 1986 Hatteras lows will occur.

When the conditions look right for the Hatteras lows next winter, the GALE program will use the aircraft, a research ship, radar systems, sounding systems and weather stations on the ground in a network stretching across the Piedmont and coastal plains of North Carolina and South Carolina to collect details such as air temperature, wind speed and pressure.
Starting in January, the research will be monitored by scientists in a control center at Raleigh-Durham Airport.

"What we're hoping to gain from this experiment is a better appreciation of the ... processes responsible for the production of winter storms," Watson said. "And while we're looking at that, we'll also get a good look at the detailed weather structure within the storms."
"In the end, we'll be able to forecast storms better in general, and we'll also be able to improve our local forecasting ability and tell you that the town 20 miles away from you could get several inches of snow, while you won't get any," he said.

Crime Rate Reduced At N.C. State

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University's campus has become safer since a 1983 FBI Uniform Crime Report listing the school with the highest number of violent crimes of 328 reporting colleges nationwide, says a public safety official.
"I consider it to be very safe," said Capt. Larry D. Liles, deputy operations director for the school's Public Safety Department. "I would feel comfortable with my wife and daughters on this campus at night."
With an enrollment of 22,557 in the fall of 1983, N.C. State reported 102 violent crimes — almost double the number at schools with the next highest enrollment. Louisiana State University, with an enrollment of about 27,000, and the University of Oklahoma, with an enrollment of about 21,000, reported 57 crimes per campus.
Liles blamed the high crime figure in 1983 in part on the Wolfpack's victory in the NCAA tournament.
"They (UCR statistics) neglected to take account of what was going on here that no one else had (the tournament)," Liles said. "We had celebrations after each victory whether the game was here or not."
But when the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill won the NCAA basketball championship in 1982, violent crime did not increase, said Sgt. Ned A. Comar, crime prevention officer for University Police at UNC-CH.
UCR statistics show that nine violent crimes — all assaults — were reported at UNC-CH in 1982. In 1983, 21 violent crimes, also all assaults, were reported.
Of the 102 violent crimes reported at N.C. State in 1983, four were rapes, 22 were robberies, and 76 were aggravated assaults, according to UCR statistics. N.C. State's property crimes — burglary, larceny, motor vehicle theft and arson — totaled 1,136 in 1983. That was the ninth highest in the nation.
N.C. State's Rape Prevention Committee conducts a "night walk" in which faculty members, public safety officers and students walk the campus to target danger spots.
But some students and faculty say they're still concerned for their safety.
"It's just a general feeling that the students have," said Dr. Frances M. Richardson, associate professor of engineering at N.C. State and chairman of the school's Advisory Council on Women's Affairs.

Missing Child Found In Canada

RALEIGH (AP) — Christmas came late for a North Carolina mother reunited with her 4-year-old daughter who had been missing for nearly three months.
"We just cried a lot and said, 'I love you. I love you,'" said Kay Coleman, who was reunited with her daughter, Shannon Brooke, Friday night in Nova Scotia.
Henry Shannon, the child's grandfather, said he had left his Christmas tree — with gifts untouched — undisturbed in anticipation of Shannon's return home.
"We'll celebrate Christmas tonight," he said. "I'm just glad this is over and that Shannon is safe."
The family returned to Raleigh-Durham Airport Saturday after the reunion in Antigonish, a small community about 80 miles north of Halifax, the provincial capital of Nova Scotia, where the FBI had traced Shannon's father, Richard Granville Coleman.
Teresa Bloom, director of Find My Child Support Network, said Mrs. Coleman had contacted her agency when Shannon did not return home after a visit with her father just before Christmas.
The Colemans are divorced, and Mrs. Coleman is responsible for Shannon's primary care, Mrs. Bloom said.

Robert Pence, special agent in charge of the FBI's North Carolina office, said Saturday his agency had issued a federal fugitive warrant for Coleman. He said the warrant was issued at the request of the Wake County Sheriff's Department, which had issued a warrant for Coleman charging that he had violated a court custody order.
Neither the sheriff's department nor Canadian authorities would comment

Mrs. Coleman said an eastern North Carolina man had seen her daughter and husband on a television newscast. The man told police he had received a payment from Coleman for a time-share condominium, and the envelope had a Nova Scotia postmark. She said authorities concentrated their efforts in the Canadian province and located Coleman Thursday.
Pence said Coleman was being held by Canadian authorities and was scheduled to be arraigned today. But, Pence said he didn't know what charges were filed against Coleman or if Coleman would be extradited to the United States.

Third Trial Set In 1979 Shootout

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — In the third trial stemming from a 1979 shootout in Greensboro, survivors of the violence have expanded their list of defendants in a $48 million lawsuit, an attorney for the plaintiffs says.
"We have about 40 people who have never gone to trial for their role (in the incident)," said Greensboro Civil Rights Fund spokeswoman, Andrea Bernstein.
Jury selection was expected to begin today.
Meanwhile, U.S. District Judge Robert Merhige of Richmond, Va., was considering a motion by the plaintiff's to move the trial to Richmond to ensure an unbiased, racially balanced jury.
Merhige said he wanted to begin jury selection in Winston-Salem and see whether a satisfactory jury could be seated here.
The 61 defendants include Ku Klux Klansmen and Nazis who rode in a caravan at the shootout. Greensboro police assigned to keep peace during the demonstration, the city of Greensboro, former city officials and several agents of the FBI and the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms.
The civil suit filed by widows and survivors of the Communist Workers Party's "Death to the Klan" rally charges that the defendants either helped incite the violence of Nov. 3, 1979, or did nothing to prevent it.
"In the two previous trials, prosecuting officials had the interest of concealing or at least not emphasizing the role of agent provocateurs," said Lewis Pitts, an attorney for the Greensboro Civil Rights Fund, which represents the

War On Drugs Cutting Effort To Prevent Fraud In Textiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — They sound like military invasions — "Operation Blitz," "Operation Tripwire" and "Operation Foward In-Bound." But in fact, they are U.S. Customs Service agents enforcing textile quotas.
The agency has won some major battles. Agents in Atlanta, for example, seized 6,000 pair of men's pants from Hong Kong last November after laboratory tests disclosed the pants were made of a fabric subject to trade restraints.
But the war is being lost, according to members of Congress who are deeply involved in trying to save the U.S. textile industry from extinction in the wake of record-high imports.
It's being lost, they say, because the Reagan administration is trying to cut the Customs Service budget and, at the same time, shift more of the agency's resources to another war — the war on illegal drugs.
The stakes are high. The U.S. textile, fiber and apparel industry generates $45 billion in Gross National Product, bigger than steel or automobiles.
It employs 2.3 million people, or about one in every eight workers in manufacturing. But in recent years, more than 200,000 textile workers have lost their jobs because of imports.
In 1984, $16.5 billion of the U.S. trade deficit, or 13 percent of the overall trade deficit, came from foreign textiles and apparels.
The members of Congress who are trying to protect their textile producers have no objection to the administration devoting more resources to its war on drugs. They do have objections, however, to cutting the number of textile inspectors at a time when fraud is reaching epidemic proportions.

"Imports are killing South Carolina's textile industry, and the Reagan response is to assist foreign competition by taking the cop off the beat," said Sen. Ernest F. Hollings, D-S.C.
He was responding to the administration's plan to cut the Customs Service budget by 5 percent and reduce the number of agents by 788 nationwide.
A congressional subcommittee that reviewed the textile import problem said in its report that the Customs Service is "spread too thin."

In addition to its traditional role of enforcing quota and tariff laws, the Customs Service also combats drug smuggling, technology transfer and product counterfeiting.
The subcommittee chairman, Rep. Doug Barnard, D-Ga., believes the Customs Service should play a larger role in policing textile quotas, especially when the more the agency looks, the more fraud it uncovers.

Child Abuse
by Marsha L. Mills,
Communications Specialist

Child abuse is the repeated mistreatment or neglect of a child which results in injury or harm. The abuse may be physical, emotional, verbal, or sexual. Parents are the most frequent child abusers but other guardians may also be involved. Child abuse often results in a parent or guardian's reaction to past or present problems that they can't handle. The abuse is a vicious circle usually passed on from generation to generation. To break the abuse circle, you, the community must become aware of how serious the problem is and do something about it. Recognize common signs of child abuse such as: repeated injuries, passive withdrawn children, "super-critical" parents, extremely isolated families, neglected appearances, and aggressive, negative behaviors. Report the case to people who can help and extend a helping hand to the family in crisis.

If you are a parent and think you are or may become an abusive parent, get help. If you know of a child abuse case, learn the facts about child abuse, help the abused victims and their parents, and support legal and social efforts to combat child abuse.

You're looking at the best reasons for using Vernam® in peanuts.

Selective Herbicide

Nutsedge. It's your biggest weed problem. If you treat only yellow nutsedge, you could be overlooking another problem weed: purple nutsedge. But there is one herbicide that can control both varieties. Only one. Vernam.

And Vernam has a lot going for it besides nutsedge.

Like sicklepod, morningglory, pigweed, lambsquarters, Florida purslane, and 15 other grass and broadleaf weeds. In a tank mix with Balan* it gets tough buffalo grass as well. Also, since Vernam is applied preplant incorporated, you get reliable coverage in wet or dry weather. With Vernam, you don't have to rely on precisely the right amount of rain to do the job.

You know nutsedge is a problem in your peanuts. And you know Vernam can get the job done. Peanut farmers like you have gotten year-in, year-out reliable weed control with Vernam since 1968. Make Vernam the backbone of your weed control program. Follow label directions. Stauffer Chemical Company, Agricultural Division, Westport, CT 06881.

Study Cites Low Hospital Costs

A recent report of the American Hospital Association's Monitrend management information network indicates that Pitt County Memorial Hospital's average cost per hospital stay is $2,904, compared with an average of $3,441 for 50 other teaching hospitals of comparable size nationwide. Pitt's average cost per stay is also lower than the average of 28 teaching hospitals in the Southeast United States.

PCMH has been commended by the American Hospital Association for its efforts to control costs and monitor productivity. "We believe this recognition is evidence of our commitment to holding down costs while providing our patients the highest quality of health care," Fred T. Brown Jr., the hospital's executive vice president, said.

He said the hospital's SEARCH program gives a bonus to hospital employees who discover significant and practical ways to save money. There are standing committees on cost containment, standardization and reuse which ensure that the hospital gets the most efficient use of its supplies and equipment. The standardization and reuse committees, he said, help the hospital to carry fewer different types of products and permit some products to be sterilized and reused to save money when quality of care is determined not to be compromised.

"We also use aggressive purchasing techniques that allow us to maintain extremely low inventories for a hospital our size. This means we turn over our inventories 12 times a year. Most hospitals have a turnover rate of six."

He said that, through group purchasing, the hospital is able to get competitive prices for most of its supplies.

Brown credited the hospital's department managers with leading the way in holding down costs. "All managers regularly conduct extensive reviews of the revenues and expenses generated in their divisions," he said. "This ensures that all areas of the hospital are equally sharing the responsibility of keeping expenses to a minimum."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, opening a new week on a hesitant note after its recent retreat.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 2.76 to 1,272.42 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 5-4 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

An upswing in interest rates of late has been cited as the major reason for the market's skittishness. Even when rates fell back sharply on Friday, stocks were unable to mount a rally.

Analysts say confidence in the prospective strength and durability of the economic expansion seems to have faltered a bit in the past few weeks.

"There appears to have been a recent increase of skittishness, pessimism, whatever, amongst the professionals in Wall Street," said William LeFevre, an analyst at Purcell, Graham & Co.

"Much time is being spent currently trying to decide whether this market has topped out.

"We think this is a positive development. A few weeks ago there were just too many bulls."

Among today's early volume leaders, International Business Machines rose 1/4 to 129 1/2; American Electric Power gained 1/4 to 21; General Electric was unchanged at 62 1/2, and Johnson & Johnson lost 1/8 to 38 3/4.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 1.87 to 1,269.66, extending its loss for the week to 29.70 points.

For Cremins, Title Was A Dream

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech's preseason goal was a bid to the NCAA tournament, which the ninth-ranked Yellow Jackets received Sunday. But Coach Bobby Cremins never dreamed of capturing the Atlantic Coast Conference tournament, too.

That also became a reality Sunday at The Omni when junior guard Mark Price dropped in four free throws in the final 22 seconds to propel the Yellow Jackets to a 57-54 triumph over North Carolina and their first ACC championship.

"Do you believe it? Do you believe it?" Cremins asked repeatedly. "I never thought they could do it. I just can't believe it."

Not many would have believed it either after the sixth-ranked Tar Heels, who had won the title 10 times, including nine under Coach Dean Smith, swept to a quick 14-3 lead.

But Tech regrouped under the leadership of Price, who was named the tourney's Most Valuable Player after scoring 16 points in the final, and got to within 32-27 at the half.

The Yellow Jackets, whose 24-7 record this season broke the school's 1970-71 single season best of 23-9, never led until Yvon Joseph dropped in a free throw with 52 seconds left for a 51-50 lead.

"It was a great basketball game. I feel like we've accomplished something that is very difficult to do," said Cremins, adding he didn't think his squad could pull off the title after only three recruiting seasons.

"The NCAA was our goal," said Cremins, who inherited a Tech squad that went 4-23 in 1981. He has a 65-49 record in four seasons and turned Tech into winners a year ago with an 18-11 record and National Invitation Tournament berth.

"It was a great game, and we played a great team, but I really don't have any words to say," said Price, who scored 50 points in Tech's victories over Virginia 55-48, Duke 75-64 and North Carolina. He also was perfect from the free throw line, hitting 14 of 14 against Duke and six of six in the title game.

"We got behind, but we kept fighting. That's one thing about this team, they never quit," Price said.

Smith, gracious in defeat, said Tech "did what they had to do to win. We had our chances. Georgia Tech was better, but I thought we played awfully well."

John Salley added 14 points for Tech, Joseph chipped in 13 and Bruce Dalrymple added 12. Kenny Smith and Brad Daugherty led North Carolina, 24-8, with 16 points apiece.

Joining Price on the all-tournament team picked by the sportswriters and sportscasters covering the tourney were Dalrymple, Smith, Daugherty and Johnny Dawkins of Duke.

The National Collegiate Athletic Association officially announced its 64 tournament teams Sunday, selecting five ACC schools: Tech, North Carolina, Duke, North Carolina State and Maryland.

Tech, seeded third in the East region in Atlanta, will face Mercer of Macon, the Trans America Athletic Conference champion, in the first round.

The Tar Heels will meet Middle

Tennessee State in a Southeast regional in South Bend, Ind.; Duke will face Pepperdine in a Midwest regional at Houston; North Carolina State plays Nevada-Reno in a West regional at Albuquerque, N.M.; and Maryland takes on Miami, Ohio, in a Southeast regional at Dayton, Ohio.

"I'm really afraid of a let down (in the NCAA opener) because we've got a reputation now to uphold. I just hope we have a lot of class and hang tough," Cremins said.

Tech has made only one previous appearance in the NCAA tourney, beating Ohio University in 1960 57-54 before getting knocked off by eventual national champion Ohio State, 86-69.

North Carolina and North Carolina State each have captured two national titles, the Tar Heels winning in 1957 and 1982 and State sweeping to the championship in 1974 and 1983.

Fairfield Slams Pirates 12-2; 2nd Straight Loss

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

If a casual observer, with no knowledge of either team had walked into Harrington Field Sunday afternoon, he might not have been able to guess which team was playing its first game and which it's seventh.

Fairfield, opening the season, looked in mid-season form, banging out 18 hits and committing no errors as the Stags rolled to a 12-2 baseball victory over East Carolina.

The Pirates, meanwhile, dropping their second straight after five opening wins, misplayed the ball five times — adding in a few mental mistakes — and, although they finished with ten hits, put few of them together.

"We came to the field ready to play," Coach Gary Overton said. "But we seemed to get comfortable with a 1-0 lead. Then, they started hitting the ball and we could never get anything going."

"Fairfield hit the ball well and I've got to give them a lot of credit. They didn't look like they were playing their first game. That's the best any Fairfield club has looked against us (in 11 previous games). But they had good experience; they returned every fielding position. And their pitcher threw a smart game."

The Stag hurler, Doug Hofstedt, went the distance. He walked but one and struck out three. And, unlike the East Carolina hurlers, got perfect fielding behind him.

Starter Jim Peterson, suffering his first loss after one win, went six and two-thirds innings, getting tagged for 14 hits. He walked three and struck out five. He gave up 11 runs, nine of them earned. Reliever Tom Webb allowed three hits, one unearned run, walked one and struck out one.

"Peterson had good stuff but didn't locate the ball well," Overton said. "Also he fell behind a lot and ended up giving them something to hit."

"Once again, our defense was poor, but I don't think we took them lightly."

East Carolina got the initial lead, scoring once in the first inning. Greg Hardison got a one out double and scored when Winfred Johnson also doubled, giving the Pirates a 1-0 edge.

But the Pirates weren't to score again until the eighth, and in between they had few chances. The eighth saw Hardison again single with one out, followed by Johnson getting a hit. Mark Sullivan's single, the third hit of the inning, scored Hardison, but the rally ended there.

Fairfield missed out on a score in the second, when they seemingly tied the score, only to lose the run. Mark Portonova singled and Tom Reardon grounded to third, where a preceding runner was forced out. But Mike Sullivan's throw to first was off target, and Portonova streaked from second to third on the play, continuing on home, where another misplay appeared to let him score. But on appeal, Portonova was called out for missing third, erasing the run.

However, in the third, Fairfield pushed over two runs. Chris McKenna reached on an infield hit and with one out, Joe Charno doubled. Portonova walked and Ken McGovern hit a sacrifice fly to score McKenna. Reardon followed with a single, scoring courtesy runner Greg Derosa for a 2-1 lead.

Then, in the fifth, the Stags pushed over four more to put the game away. John Martin reached on a two-base error and scored on McKenna's triple. Chuck Knight singled in McKenna and Charno got

Lady Pirates Gain Split With Marion

East Carolina University's Lady Pirates had to struggle through ten innings in the first game to pull out a 1-0 softball win over Francis Marion yesterday, 1-0. The visitors came back in the second game to claim a 3-1 victory, gaining a split in the doubleheader.

Lisa Zumda, who went 2-5 in the game, knocked in the winning run in the bottom of the tenth inning to allow the Lady Pirates to claim the win.

In the second game, the lone Pirate run crossed in the second as Zumda homered. Francis Marion tied it up with one in the fourth, then scored two more in the fifth to pull out the win.

ECU got only three hits in the game, one each by Zumda, Pam Young and Suzie Pierce.

The Lady Pirates are now 4-3-1 on the year and play host to Connecticut and George Mason on Thursday.

Five From ACC Picked For NCAA

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Patrick Ewing and powerful Georgetown will launch defense of their NCAA Basketball title with a first-round match Thursday against the only squad with a losing record in a 64-team tournament field dominated by five conferences.

Ewing's top-ranked Hoyas, 30-2, will go against Lehigh, 12-18, on Thursday as one of five Big East Conference schools named Sunday to the biggest and richest NCAA Tournament ever. The Big Ten Conference also landed six berths to break the tourney record of five. Bids went to five Atlantic Coast Conference and five Southeastern Conference schools as the nine-man selection committee left no doubt where it believes most of power lies in college basketball.

Holding up the pride of the West was the Pac-10, which placed four of its teams, although once-invincible UCLA was not among them. In all, 41 percent of the invitations went to those five leagues.

Vic Bubas, chairman of the committee, said the field, expanded by eleven at-large bids from last year's 53-team field, is the best ever.

"We are very excited about the very difficult job we have done," Bubas said Sunday when the bracket was announced after the committee spent three days and nights drawing up the pairings and seedings.

Georgetown, St. John's, Michigan and Oklahoma — the top four teams in The Associated Press Top Twenty — were made No. 1 seeds in the four regions.

First-round competition begins Thursday around the nation and the tournament will end with the championship game April 1 in Lexington, Ky.

The committee picked 35 at-large teams to go with 29 which qualified automatically as champions of their conference or conference tournament.

"The first 20 or 21 at-large teams were easy. It was no trouble," Bubas said. "The last 15 got difficult and I'm telling you, the last six or eight.

we could have stayed there a week. It was an agonizing experience."

Kentucky, a Final Four team last season and host of the finals this year, made the field with the worst record among at-large entries, 16-12.

Among the missing were Indiana, NCAA champion in 1976 and 1981 but a loser in six of its last seven games this season; Louisville, which won in 1980 and had been in the last eight NCAA tournaments; Houston, which had been in the Final Four the last three years, and UCLA, which won 10 titles in a 12-year stretch ending in 1975 and which had not missed the tournament two years a row since 1961.

Bids went to only three independents — Notre Dame, Dayton and DePaul. Sixteen teams with 20 or more victories were denied bids and Bubas declined to speculate on how many teams had a realistic chance of winning.

"There are a lot of them," he said. "The number is getting greater every year. The National Invitation Tournament is going to have a good tournament. There are a lot of quality players and quality teams still there."

Teams with good records who were left out included West Virginia, 20-8, Richmond 20-10, Creighton, 20-12, plus 22-7 Montana, 20-9 Weber State, 20-9 Canisius, 22-7 Siena, 21-8 Cleveland State, 20-10 Eastern Illinois, 20-11 Youngstown State, 20-9 Fresno State, 20-7 Tennessee-Chattanooga, 23-6 Alcorn State, 24-5 Georgia Southern, 21-8 Houston Baptist and 29-8 Santa Clara.

"We think we've got a great field," said Bubas, who is commissioner of the Sun Belt Conference. "I'm happy with the very difficult job the committee has done."

Bubas readily admitted that many teams would be bitter over their exclusion.

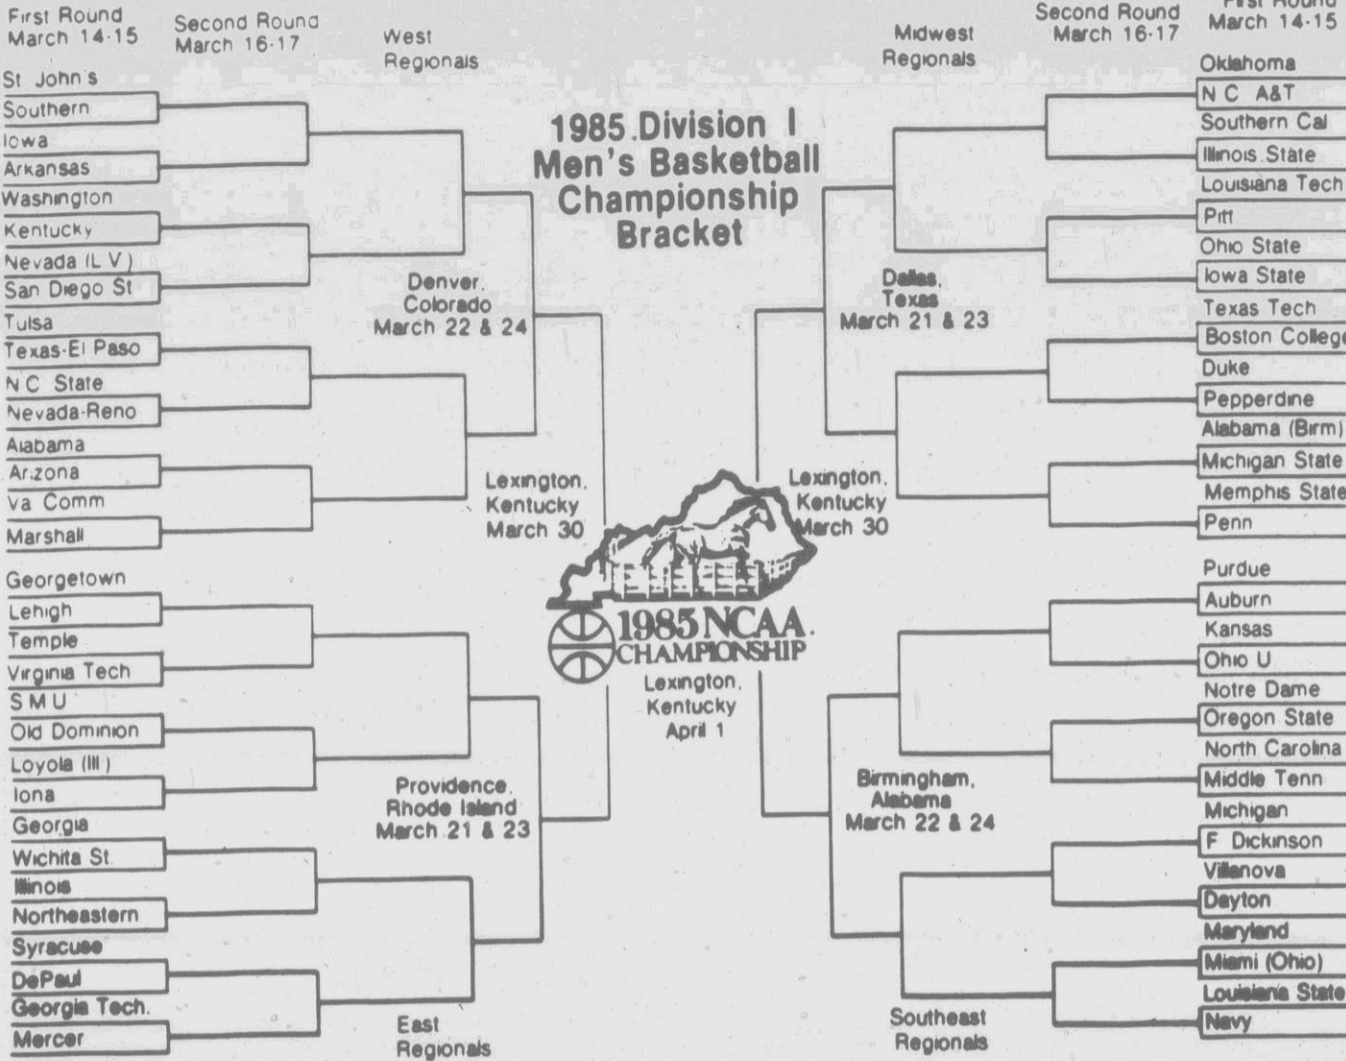

"More and more to the Division I Committee the quality of your schedule comes into play," he said of the selection process. "The schedules are scrutinized very closely. Home and away. How you did against the Top Twenty. The top 50. The top 100. There will be some disappointed people. There always are."

Three ACC Teams To NIT

By The Associated Press
NEW YORK (AP) — Indiana, Louisville, Houston, UCLA and Virginia.

The list reads like an honor roll of college basketball teams that have dominated the NCAA tournament in recent years.

And they'll all be in the same tournament this year — the National Invitation Tournament.

"With the names I've heard so far, the NIT sounds like a very prestigious tournament and we are excited to be in the field," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland, whose team reached the NCAA's Final Four last season.

Pairings for the 32-team NIT, which begins Tuesday night, were announced Sunday night after the NCAA finished picking its 64-team field. There were several big-name teams for the NIT to choose from.

Houston, 16-13 this season, went to the NCAA championship game the last two seasons, losing to Georgetown last year and falling to North Carolina State the previous season.

Indiana, 15-13, ran into severe trouble in the final weeks of this season, dropping six of its last seven games to finish with its worst record since 1970. The Hoosiers have won four NCAA tournaments, more recently in 1981.

Louisville, 16-16, won the NCAA in 1980 and has been to that event 17 times.

UCLA, 16-12, has won more NCAA tournaments than any school, 10. But the Bruins were available to the NIT selection committee after being left out of the NCAA field for the second straight year, something that hadn't happened since 1970.

UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard said he was glad his team was picked for the NIT.

"The most important thing is that we earned the right to be there," Hazzard said. "I think this team deserves to be in a tournament."

"One thing you can say about the 1984-85 UCLA Bruins is that we weren't easy," he said. "I think this team is playing the best ball in the Pacific-10 right now."

Louisville Coach Denny Crum said he did not expect his team to be chosen by the NCAA selection committee.

"We didn't deserve to be in the NCAA," he said. "Face it, when you win 16 games, the NCAA does not take too much interest in you."

Also in the NIT field is Marquette, the NCAA champion in 1977. This season, the Warriors went 18-10.

"We want to go out and represent the university well and use it as a catapult for next season," Marquette Coach Rick Majerus said. "I honestly believe we will be an NCAA team next year."

The NIT will hold first-round games Tuesday through Saturday at campus sites around the country. Then, after staying on campus sites for second round and quarterfinal games, the four survivors will head for Madison Square Garden, site of the semifinals on March 27 and the final March 29.

On Tuesday, the NIT begins when Texas A&M, 18-11, plays at New Mexico, 18-12. Canisius, 20-8, plays at Nebraska, 15-13, on Wednesday.

Seven games are scheduled for Thursday. ## Coaches Happy With Bids

By The Associated Press
It's just one happy, 64-member family now that the NCAA college basketball tournament is finally set up.

"We'll be playing in Big East places, so we should have some support," John Thompson, coach of No. 1 Georgetown, said Sunday after finding out his top-seeded team would be playing in the East region.

"It looks like a good place to go," said Lou Carnesecca, coach of No. 2 St. John's, after hearing his team would be playing in the West region.

"We're just happy that we got a high seed," said Mike Krzyzewski, coach of No. 7 Duke, after learning his team would be third-seeded in the West.

Just one big, happy family, right? Well, not exactly.

"I am shocked and extremely hurt for our players and our conference," West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett said after his team, which went 20-8 during the season, was not chosen to go to the NCAA tournament.

Also among this year's missing are a few teams that have had their share of glory in the past but have had trouble in the present — UCLA, Indiana, Houston, Virginia and Louisville. Those five teams will be going to the National Invitation Tournament this year.

"It's not a disappointment," said Louisville Coach Denny Crum, whose team went 16-16. "We didn't deserve to be in the NCAA."

The select teams and pairings for this year's tournament, which begins Thursday, were announced after all the pre-NCAA tournament games were finished.

On Sunday, No. 3 Michigan got past Indiana 73-71 at the buzzer to wrap up the Big Ten regular season. No. 9 Georgia Tech downed No. 6 North Carolina 57-54 to win the Atlantic Coast Conference postseason tournament and Texas Tech tripped Arkansas 67-64 to take the Southwest Conference tournament.

Vic Bubas, chairman of the Division I basketball committee, said his group met for three days and nights in setting up the NCAA event.

"The first 20 or 21 at-large teams were easy. It was no trouble," Bubas said. "The last 15 got difficult and I'm telling you, the last six or eight, we could have stayed there a week. It was an agonizing experience."

To no one's surprise, Georgetown was made the No. 1 seed in its home territory, the East. The Hoyas start their drive toward a second straight NCAA tournament when they face Lehigh, 12-18, in Hartford, Conn.

"One advantage is that our fans get a chance to follow us," Thompson said of his team's seeding. "So we should have some support, which should help us."

Lehigh, a team without any scholarship players that won the East Coast Conference tournament, "obviously is playing well against somebody," Thompson said.

"Sometimes, the won-loss record is not that important. What is important is how you are playing at the right time of the year," he said. "Lehigh has nothing to lose and sometimes teams like that can be trouble."

Dean Smith, the veteran coach at North Carolina, also is wary of his team's first-round opponent in the Southeast regional, unheralded Middle Tennessee State, 17-13, of the Ohio Valley Conference.

"I imagine our players don't really know a lot about Middle Tennessee State," he said. "Middle Tennessee is certainly capable, as it proved in its conference tournament last week."

Smith made his remarks after watching his team squander an 11-point, first-half lead against Georgia Tech in Atlanta.

The Stags put together seven hits, including doubles by Martin and Knight, to score five more times in the seventh and they used two hits and an error to score their final run in the eighth.

Portonova led the Stags with four hits while Charno had three. McKenna, Knight and Joe Mancini each had two. Hardison led East Carolina with three, while Johnson and Jay McGraw each had two.

Attenborough Explores 'Living Planet' In Latest Book And Television Series

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — When zoologist David Attenborough abandoned his lab more than 30 years ago to join BBC's brand-new TV network it didn't seem at the time like one giant step for science.

"The kind of zoology being done in universities at the time consisted mostly of cutting up dead animals," said Attenborough. "That's not the kind of zoology I was interested in. I wanted to go watch elephants."

Attenborough has been seeking the elephant since, and he's taken the public along on such journeys as "Life on Earth" and his latest television venture, "The Living Planet."

"The Living Planet" is running in 12 parts on public television and a book version has been published by Little, Brown & Co. It's a current Book of the Month Club selection. It's his ninth combination book and TV look at the world of nature.

"I went to BBC as a director," Attenborough said. "The most experienced man there had nine months. I directed everything from ballet to short stories. It was all live and it was a lot of fun."

"I'd always wanted to do films on animals around the world. But the attitude was, 'We've got TV cameras in the studio, what's this about spending money abroad?' So if we used animals we brought them in from the zoo. Once, a flying squirrel got loose. Everybody watched our shows that week, waiting to see the squirrel would show up licking his whiskers behind the bishop."

It wasn't long before Attenborough discovered the London Zoo was sending a collecting team to West Africa. "I persuaded the BBC to let me go along and send back film that could be tied in with the London zoo show. But when I got back the host became ill and I was ushered in to do 'Zoo Quest.'"

That marked his on-screen debut. After that he spent six months in the field and six months doing his regular duties. That went on for the next 10 years. Then he went to work for the new BBC II channel in 1964, helping inaugurate BBC II as England's first color network.

"Then I became program director for both networks," he said. "It wasn't as interesting because it had to do more with administration. After four years of that I resigned and decided it was time to get back to making films."

Actually, all during those eight years Attenborough had been taking time out every few years to do a film.

"I was able to justify it because I needed to know about new equipment and the like," he said. "As an administrator I couldn't understand why shooting ratios were escalating. Shooting six times more film than goes on the air was tolerable, but it was getting up to 20-1. How could this be? It wasn't until I went on a trip that I discovered it was the wide-angle lens. You could get everything in one shot so you let the camera run to stay in sync."

The first thing he did was go to Central Borneo and complete a film he had started earlier, "Tribal Eye." That was an anthropological film about such things as primitive sculptures and Polynesian stone carvings.

He said he works on the book and film simultaneously. "You do the research for, say, a desert," he explained. "Then I write 30 or 40 pages for the script. That will establish a line of thought for the structure. On the one hand the structure is filled with images or pictures. On the other hand you fill it in with sentences. There are many areas I'm very familiar with. But there are other areas, say the antarctic, that I'd never been to before. So, I delay writing that chapter until I've been there."

A Reflector Review

'Soldier's Story' Proves A Surprise

Some movies just don't turn out to be what you think they'll be: when they turn out to be much more than you expected, it's a nice surprise. "A Soldier's Story" looked like just like another movie about racism and the tension between Southern blacks and whites. But it is much more than that.

Set in Tynan, La., in 1944, "A Soldier's Story" is about a company of black soldiers during World War II, when the Army was still segregated. Black pride was not yet a movement, although there were underground stirrings and individual feelings that things must change. Sgt. Waters (Adolf Caesar) believed that things must change. He ran his men hard, obsessed with making them as good as the whites in their own eyes and in the eyes of the whites.

At the beginning of the movie, Sgt. Waters has been shot and left by the side of the road. Everyone thinks it was a Klan murder. When Captain Davenport (Howard E. Rollins Jr.), an army lawyer, comes to investigate, his reception is cool, not only because he's black, the first black officer any of them, including white Col. Niven and Capt. Taylor, have ever seen, but also it appears that two white men from the base may be implicated in the murder. Captain Davenport is not deterred, however, and stands up to all efforts to isolate and intimidate him.

The movie follows the investigation through its labyrinthine turns and twists. The story unfolds through a series of flashbacks which occur during questioning of the men under Sgt. Waters' command. We learn a lot about each of the men, about the sergeant, about racism and self-image. When the murder is finally solved and the perpetrator arrested, we are surprised. But we are more surprised at what we have learned about motivations, caring, hating and judging others.

"A Soldier's Story" is adapted from the play of the same name; both the play and the screenplay were written by Charles Fuller. Very often, plays do not make the transition to the screen well. It is also not common for the original author to write the screenplay, for playwrights do not necessarily make good screenwriters. In "A Soldier's Story," however, Fuller's adaptation is successful, and Norman Jewison's capable direction enabled us to see the nuances beyond stereotypes and other expectations.

In many ways this is an ensemble movie, as the play was, with the characters of "C.J." Memphis, Wilkie and Peterson standing out somewhat. While Howard E. Rollins Jr. plays Capt. Davenport with subtlety and sensitivity, the movie really belongs to Adolf Caesar as Sgt. Waters, a man torn by pride and a self-styled obsessive mission in life.

Herbie Hancock was in charge of music, and the movie is full of the blues — blues sung by C.J., blues sung by Patti LaBelle in her cameo role as Big Mary, owner of the black bar in Tynan, blues sung by known and unknown musicians. In "A Soldier's Story," the sound track isn't extraneous; it is an integral part of the story, and it's glorious.

"A Soldier's Story" is rated PG for some four-letter words. There's no sex and very little violence, none of it gratuitous. There are a few scenes of emotional and psychological intensity, balanced by several scenes of gentle humor. It might not be the best movie you'll see this year, but it is worth seeing.

Israeli, Lebanese Soldiers Tangle

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — The Israeli army fought today with Lebanese army troops and guerrillas during a raid on a south Lebanon village, the military command announced, saying 24 guerrillas were killed and 10 Lebanese soldiers were arrested.

The clash came one day after 12 Israeli soldiers were killed by a suicide truck bomber, and 14 others were wounded in occupied south Lebanon.

Following the attack on an Israeli convoy, Prime Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin vowed that Israel would fight terrorism by whatever means were necessary.

Opposition politicians as well as some members of Peres' own Cabinet called for Israel to pull out of Lebanon immediately.

The suicide truck-bomb attack occurred just inside Lebanon north of the Israeli border town of Metulla. Zrariye, target of today's raid, is 15 miles west of Metulla.

The military command said Israeli troops "captured many suspects and weapons in great quantities" during the Zrariye operation.

Reports from Lebanon said there was heavy fighting between the Lebanese and Israeli armies in the village as helicopter-borne Israeli troops landed on the hills surrounding a Lebanese army garrison at Zrariye.

The Israeli command's announcement said: "The Lebanese army was told not to interfere in the IDF (Israeli Defense Forces) action, and only after it fired at our forces, fire was returned in its direction and 10 of its soldiers were arrested. Our forces are still active in the village, continuing searches for weapons and guerrillas."

Cotton sweaters are a staple of most everyone's spring wardrobe. But they shouldn't be part of your closet inventory.

Cotton sweaters - in fact, any knits - should be folded carefully and stored in a lined, dust-tight drawer. This type of storage will keep your sweaters from losing their shape and will protect them from destructive snags or tears.

Remember, knits and hangers don't mix. We often return your knits to you on wire hangers. But they are meant for transit only. Store knits properly when you get home.

Proper care and cleaning will extend the life and beauty of your garments. To help you with your garment care budget A Cleaner World offers the following special: 3 Sweaters Cleaned For The Price Of 2. Ad must be presented with order when brought in.

Classroom Feud Spills Over Into Halls Of Congress

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Back in the early 1970s, Mark Siljander was a clean-cut, conservative college student taking a course in African politics at Western Michigan University from an professor named Howard Wolpe.

As Siljander jokingly tells the story, the two had strong disagreements about Africa, and when Siljander received a "C" in the course, he asked his liberal professor whether it had anything to do with his political views.

"No, Mark, you're just a bad student," Siljander remembered Wolpe saying.

From that day on, Siljander vowed to show up his teacher.

Flash forward to March 5, 1985.

The scene: the second meeting of the year of the House Foreign Affairs subcommittee on Africa.

Chairing the meeting is Rep.

Howard Wolpe, 45, a Democrat from Michigan's 3rd District. To his immediate left is Rep. Mark Siljander, 33, the panel's ranking Republican from Michigan's 4th District.

Recalling the pledge he made to himself more than a decade ago, Siljander said recently, "I think I've made good on my promise."

Wolpe, who holds a Ph.D. in African politics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and has written two books on Nigeria, bristles when asked about the episode.

"I can't believe he's serious," Wolpe said, adding that the old dispute has no relevance to their joint work on U.S. policy on Africa.

"That's Mark's obsession, not mine," Wolpe said of the grade. Then, he said, "I hope we can establish a good working relationship on the committee."

Although they represent adjacent districts and serve on the same subcommittee, Wolpe and Siljander couldn't be more different ideologically.

In 1984, the liberal Americans for Democratic Action gave Siljander a rating of zero and Wolpe a 95.

Wolpe's district is somewhat more urban than Siljander's. Wolpe represents some rural constituents but also the residents of Kalamazoo and part of Lansing.

Siljander, a former restaurant executive who as a candidate used to wear a "Jesus First" lapel button, has stressed social issues since his arrival in Congress in 1981.

His conservative agenda has included favoring President Reagan's budget and tax cuts, resuming nerve gas production and funding the MX missile, all positions opposed by Wolpe.

On the other hand, Wolpe has voted for a nuclear freeze and has opposed a constitutional amendment banning abortion, positions contrary to those of his colleague.

Delegation activities and committee work bring the two men in contact, and they treat each other with civility. But aides say they are not personal friends.

In fact, tensions flared in the 1984 election when Siljander and two Michigan state senators, self-described "born-again evangelicals," joined in urging ministers to urge their congregations to dump Wolpe and "send another Christian to Congress."

Wolpe said he resented the letter because he believed it was an attack on his Jewish faith. Siljander and the others denied that, saying Wolpe's religion was never mentioned.

The Africa subcommittee is sure to become a battleground for the two.

Wolpe has for several years led committee liberals in criticizing many of the Reagan administration's initiatives toward Africa.

He's criticized the administration's South Africa policy, which stresses low-key diplomacy as the way to bring change to the white-ruled government. He backs tougher economic sanctions against South Africa, including a ban on the importation of Kruggerands and on new U.S. investment in South Africa.

Siljander was one of the 35 conservative congressmen who signed a letter urging South Africa to dismantle its racial separation laws. But he is opposed to economic sanctions.

In committee hearings, Wolpe talks knowledgeably and in detail about African tribes and leaders.

He generally seeks more economic aid for Africa and has voiced concern about overemphasizing military assistance to African nations.

Siljander, on the other hand, acknowledges he is a neophyte in the Africa area. At a recent hearing, he asked an administration official to outline in five minutes why Africa, which consists of more than 40 countries, was experiencing economic problems.

Iran, Iraq Exchange Air Attacks On Major Cities

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iranian jet fighters rocketed and strafed three residential areas in Baghdad today, while Iraqi warplanes bombed Iran's city of Bakhtaran as the border war between the two nations escalated, military communiques and witnesses said.

At least 83 people were reported killed and more than 500 hurt in the fighting.

An Iranian joint staff communique issued in Tehran and carried by the official Islamic Republic News Agency said Iranian jets struck at "pre-determined" points in Baghdad, inflicting heavy casualties and damage.

Eyewitnesses reached by telephone in Baghdad said the Iranian jets fired rockets and guns on the three residential areas of Kasra, Atash and Saddam city, east of Baghdad, killing at least 13 persons and wounding scores of others.

In a Tehran radio interview, an unidentified Iranian colonel said the planes did not "want to aim at innocent people" as Baghdad commuters headed for work in the Iraqi capital of 4 million people.

"We did not bomb houses, only garrisons. We flew over houses and bombed the military concentration points in Baghdad to show them our power and the fact we were able to bomb any target we choose," the officer was quoted as saying.

IRNA, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, also reported two Iraqi planes flew over Tehran, the Iranian capital. It said they were chased away by the Iranian air force.

An earlier Iraqi air raid today on the city of Bakhtaran, formerly called Kermanshah, killed at least 70 people and wounded more than 500 others, IRNA said. It reported more than 200 houses were demolished in the bombing.

Iraqi planes, meanwhile, bombed and damaged facilities at Port Khomeini, formerly Bandar Shahpur, on the northern tip of the Persian Gulf, IRNA said.

Ashes To Be Rocketed Into Space

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Thomas Creighton, the auto mechanic who was kept alive briefly by an artificial heart when a transplanted human heart failed, will be cremated and his ashes will be saved and sent into outer space, a relative says.

Creighton's sister, identified only as D. Anne, told The Arizona Daily Star that it was the wish of her brother to have his remains sent into space in a mausoleum-satellite to be launched in 1986 or 1987.

Creighton, 33, died Friday after receiving a new heart that failed, an artificial heart that was implanted for 11 hours, and then another donated human organ.

ANSWERS TO

WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ5 ♥AQJ976 ♦873 ♣6

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♦ 2 ♣ 2 ♥ Pass

2 NT Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—If partner has the king of hearts, or if that card is with East, three no-trump should be a cake-walk. But what if those conditions don't apply, and partner has only a single club stopper? All in all, if four hearts should be a safer contract, and we would get there directly.

Q.2—East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK63 ♥7 ♦A94 ♣KQ652

The bidding has proceeded:

West North East South

1 ♥ 2 ♦ Pass ?

What do you bid now?

A.—There's no question about driving this hand to game — as a matter of fact, if partner has the right hand you could be laydown for a slam. The way to get that message across to partner is to start with a cue-bid of the enemy suit. Bid two hearts.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠KJ107 ♥J93 ♦82 ♣Q875

Partner opens the bidding with one heart. What do you respond?

A.—You have a hand worth just one voluntary bid. If you elect to respond one spade, almost any rebid by partner could prove embarrassing. For example, what would you do if partner rebid one no-trump? To avoid being awkwardly positioned, raise to two hearts now.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AJ10 ♥J76 ♦AJ3 ♣A874

The bidding has proceeded:

South West North East

1 ♣ Pass 1 ♥ Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—We don't want you to get the idea that, whenever you have three cards to an honor in partner's suit, you should raise — you do so only under special circumstances. Here, a rebid of one no-trump would describe your hand perfectly, so there is no reason not to make it.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠AJ954 ♥84 ♦KQ3 ♣AK5

The bidding has proceeded:

North East South West

1 ♣ Pass 3 ♣ Pass

3 ♦ Pass 4 ♣ Pass

5 ♣ Pass ?

What action do you take?

A.—After your jump in spades, partner can't want reassurance about the trump suit. The only logical explanation for his bid over game is that he is worried about the unbid suit — hearts. Since you have two fast losers in that suit, you have done all you can — pass.

Q.6—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠AK752 ♥Q ♦8763 ♣AKJ

Partner opens the bidding with four hearts. What action do you take?

A.—Partner's preempt has made it impossible for you to investigate slam possibilities in a scientific manner. We would close our eyes and gamble out six hearts. Even if we should have two fast losers in diamonds, there is no guarantee that the opponents will lead that suit, in which case partner could use our black suit winners for discards.

Farm Scene

By MITCH SMITH
Agricultural Extension Agent

As the growing season continues to progress, many farmers are noticing the occurrence of yellow areas in their white fields. The areas may be seen as isolated spots or may exist randomly across the field. A closer examination of these areas may reveal some interesting findings.

One of the causes of plant yellowing is a deficiency of manganese. Manganese is an essential nutrient needed in very small amounts. It's role is one of make up in the chlorophyll molecule. When a plant becomes deficient in this element, it takes on a bleached appearance and may die if left untreated. Manganese deficiency can be corrected through an application of a dry fertilizer in the fall or foliar application in the spring. It should be noted that treatments are recommended when soil sample indexes are below 25.

Copper deficiencies may also cause yellowing of wheat. Copper, like manganese, is also needed in small amounts and is essential to enzyme activities within the plant. Plants which suffer from a deficiency of this element exhibit chlorosis plus "curling" of the leaves. These plants may also die if left untreated. Copper is supplied to a crop either through the application of a dry fertilizer or a foliar application. A dry fertilizer application in the fall is usually sufficient for several years whereas a foliar application lasts for only one season. If growers should choose to correct the problem through a foliar application, a one-half pound of actual copper per acre should be applied.

Freezing damage may also contribute to plant yellowing. This damage usually occurs in the sandiest portions of the field and the whole crop may exhibit bronzing of the leaf tips. Freeze damage may affect late planted wheat but earlier planted wheat is usually unaffected by the damage.

Although visual symptoms may accompany each problem, exact identification may require a plant analysis sample. Each sample is $3 and should be accompanied by a soil sample for easier results. # "Perdue's done a lot of good in this part of North Carolina."

"I was the third man to put up a Perdue chicken house in North Carolina over eleven years ago. At the time I was worried about my peanut crop and felt that with a chicken house on a small amount of land I could make a living off my land.

My confidence in Perdue has paid off in a substantial yearly income from my two houses and an excellent cash flow that has kept my farm profitable. But, I worry that not enough of my neighbors are taking advantage of what Perdue has to offer.

"Every week or so we see where somebody has gone bankrupt farming. If they had a chicken house, I think it would help them. Perdue has done a lot of good in Eastern North Carolina. They've created a lot of new jobs, brought new business into the area and buy a good part of the corn and soybean crops grown here. Perdue is a fine company and they do what they say they will do. Growing for Perdue is a fine way for a farmer to make a good living off his land."
