Will Withhold Vote On Annexation

Carter Challenges City's Action In Extending Lines

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Mayor Pro Tem Ed Carter, in workshop session of the City Council Monday, announced he would not vote on residential annexation issues until the council comes up with an alternate electoral process to ensure adequate minority and geographical representation.

While Carter acknowledged in an interview this morning that establishment of such a process could "take quite a long time," he said he could not "in all conscience" vote on annexation issues until the city had come up with an alternative to its current at-large election method, as well as a means of determining what impact annexations of undeveloped parcels is having on the area's black-white voter mix. Abstinence by Carter on residential annexation issues could, city officials say, have some effect on passage of upcoming requests if other members join with Carter in disapproving proposed annexations.

The city, in compliance with the Voting Rights Act of 1965, is now required to forward for preclearance all annexation requests carrying council approval to the U.S. Department of Justice. Justice Department representatives then contact city officials and leaders of the black community to ascertain what effect annexations will have on voter mix. Justice Department decisions on annexations in areas with at-large election processes are currently based on a 1 percent margin in which annexations diluting black voter strength by 1 percent are disallowed. According to City Manager Gail Meeks, the Justice Department has not disapproved an annexation carrying council approval for the last 15 years. The council has approved 15 residential annexation proposals since 1983.

Carter, however, maintains that neither the city nor Justice Department can adequately project what effect annexations of undeveloped areas will have on voter mix. He contends that revision of the city's at-large system to a combination ward/at-large method will eliminate the need for counting voters in annexed areas.

The council, in executive session March 27, will discuss annexation and methods of election. The subject is of such depth, however, that it will probably take several meetings to reach a consensus, City Manager Gail Meeks said today.

Carter said in the interview today he is pushing the issue because of a promise he made to his supporters before he was elected. "I pledged I would seek an equitable system to ensure adequate representation ... and I feel it's really wise of the council to finally study the matter," he said.

Asked if he felt the responsibility of running and electing candidates lay with blacks rather than with the system, Carter responded he thought everyone has "a moral and ethical obligation to ensure that all people are represented."

"The problem in the city has not been in candidates and running candidates; the problem has been a continuing decline in the percentage of voter turnout, both black and white. There's a lot of apathy on both sides. The at-large process also tends to dilute the voting strength of black people," he said.

Carter noted what he saw as an "insufficient" number of blacks on past city councils, adding that the current ratio of one black to five white council members and a white mayor is also inadequate in light of black population composition. The most recent statistics, according to Carter, indicate that black residents compose 38 percent of the city's population. Since 1971, three blacks, including Carter, have served on the Greenville City Council.

"If you look at the county record," Carter added, "you'll find that a black has never served in any capacity in county government."

According to a Pitt County school board spokesman, there have been no blacks on the board for the past 10 years. One black, however, is included on the consolidation committee for Pitt and Greenville schools. The committee, which first met in September 1984, is composed of all eight county board members and four city school board members, a composition based on population figures and recommended in the Research Triangle Institute Merger Feasibility Study done for the Pitt County Commissioners.

Kelly Barnhill, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, said this morning that "to his knowledge" no blacks have ever served on the commission.

Ayden Board Gives Tentative Approval To New Town Park

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Ayden Town Board of Commissioners has agreed to foot the bill for one-half the construction cost of a new town park if the Recreation Department receives federal matching funds for the other half.

The board voted in its monthly meeting Monday to provide the town's Recreation Department with $10,000 in funds and $15,000 in in-kind labor for a park located in the northeast section of town. The funds will be made available only if the department's request for a federal matching grant for $25,000 is approved.

The park will be located adjacent to Strawberry Banks II subdivision on land donated to the town in 1982 by Bill Clark, the subdivision's developer. Recreation Director Gil Davis of Ayden estimated the park would cost $50,000 to develop, a figure which includes construction of restrooms, a picnic shelter, nature trails and playground equipment. Currently, Davis said, no park serves residents on the northeast section of town. He said he saw a need in the area for recreation facilities and added that the park "would be well-used" by citizens.

Davis said the state must OK the grant by June 15 and then the federal government will consider the application and notify the town of its decision by Aug. 30.

In other business:
•A public hearing was held on the town's Community Development

Block Grant for 1985-86 and suggestions were heard from citizens on the target area and the town's needs. No decision was made and a second public hearing was scheduled for April.

•Property located north of the Gulf Station on North Lee Street was rezoned from residential to B-1 commercial. Town Manager Don Russell reported the property is scheduled to house office rental space.

•Commissioners agreed for the town to participate in the Power Agency load management program. The annual cost to the town will be $786, which includes capital and operating expenses.

One Year Later

A photograph of a Pitt County couple hung in a tree in Bertie County for nearly a year — since the March 28, 1984 tornadoes. The picture blew down recently and was retrieved from a pasture by Doris and Jesse Biggs, who live near Windsor.

After the Biggs were unsuccessful in identifying the 8-by 10-inch photograph, they took it to WNCT-TV in Greenville and asked if the station would like to televise it to see if it would be identified and claimed.

The station aired it Friday afternoon and within minutes several acquaintances of Green and Margie Paramore had called to identify the people shown in the photograph as the Paramores. Green Paramore was killed and Margie Paramore was seriously injured in the March 28 tornado, which apparently lifted the picture from their home at Portertown and carried it to Bertie County.

Mrs. Paramore agreed for the picture to be given to one of her relatives. WNCT reporter Linda Shore said the picture was a little faded but was neither torn nor bent.

HAS PAPERS TO GIVE

I would like to give some newspapers to an organization which would like to promote black heritage.

In 1982 the Van Horn Advocate of Van Horn, Texas, printed "Saga of Black Infantrymen in West Texas." The article states that history has never given the black soldiers the recognition they deserved for their part in settling the West. Black people should know that members of their race (from Louisiana and Virginia, mainly) made valuable contributions.

Incidentally, the Van Horn area was featured in the March 1984 edition of "National Geographic." A.T.

Anyone wishing to get a copy of this newspaper is asked to call Ms. T. at 758-5409.

Winterville Board Holds Hearing

WINTERVILLE — A public hearing was held Monday night at the regular Board of Aldermen meeting to discuss the town's application for funding under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act.

The application, if funds were granted, would be used to improve Jones, Hammond, Cross, Blount and West Main streets. This would involve rehabilitation of 50 houses and curb, guttering and paving in some areas. Town Clerk Elwood Nobles stressed this is only an application for funds, and a second public hearing is scheduled for April 8.

In other business the board gave approval to hold a public hearing concerning a resolution to close an alley off Cooper Street between the G.M. Vincent and S.J. Waters property. A letter had also been sent to the board from W. Riley Cox releasing claim to the property from the Jane Cox heirs, who had once owned the alley. The alleyway is blocked at one end by the A.M. Mumford property line and can not be utilized by the adjoining landowners as an alleyway.

Town Engineer Linwood Stroud presented a plan to the board for street improvements on North Railroad Street at the old depot site. The work would be done when the land is acquired from the railroad and would straighten the street. A drainage report, also presented by Stroud, was tabled.

Eula Jones, the town's representative to the Council on Aging, told the board of proposed projects concerning the meals-on-wheels program for the Winterville area.

The board also approved sewer lines to be extended to the Fenner

Airport Services

Jim Turcotte, manager of the Pitt-Greenville Airport, spoke at last week's meeting of the Pitt County Safety Council.

Turcotte said the interaction of many federal, state and local organizations are necessary to provide safe and efficient aviation facilities in Greenville. He said the local airport was started in 1938 and improved with a new building in 1967. A period of major growth began in 1974, he said, with Wheeler Airlines adding service in late 1973.

Much of the money spent on the services of the airport are self-generated, he said. Services now include a commuter airline, charters, flight training, aircraft rental, air freight, aircraft maintenance and auto rentals.

G-Man's Items Sold

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — The most-wanted items at a weekend auction were furniture and art belonging to legendary G-man Melvin Purvis Jr., who tracked down the notorious gangsters of the 1930s.

More than 300 bidders attended the sale, which brought in $70,000, according to Tracy Hackney of Bobby Langston Antiques.

The big-ticket items at the sale were furnishings, rather than a gun collection and memorabilia that headlined the sale, she said.

A marble-topped sideboard circa 1850 sold for $2,000, a French porcelain clock for $1,250, a tall-case inlaid mahogany clock for $1,800, and a Sarouk rug for $1,400, she said.

There were more than 1,000 lots auctioned by Langston from the estate of Purvis, who died in 1960 in Florence, S.C.

Purvis, the son of a tobacco farmer, became chief of the FBI's

Chicago office during the 1930s. He gained fame for tracking down John Dillinger, Charles "Pretty Boy" Floyd, "Baby Face" Nelson and Ma Barker.

He quit the FBI in 1935 for "personal reasons" and moved to San Francisco, where he practiced law before returning to his South Carolina home.

Purvis became a newspaper publisher and broadcast executive. He died of a self-inflicted gunshot wound in 1960 that was later ruled accidental.

Lullabies Really Work Putting Kids To Sleep

By STEVE WILSTEIN

Associated Press Writer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The surest test of a collection of lullabies is its ability to put children to sleep.

On that score, and many others, a recent release titled "Nursery Songs & Lullabies" lives up to its promise.

Take it from a parent of a typically rambunctious 4-year-old, this collection of traditional children's songs by silky-voiced soprano Francine Lancaster and her husband, violinist-arranger James Shallenberger, really works.

The collection also has had startling success on the business side since it was released by Ms. Lancaster's new company in October. In the first two months, some 100,000 copies were sold in 11 states, she said. Over 4,000 had sold just in the San Francisco Bay area by Christmas.

Parents have written to thank her for the album, and one grandmother wrote to say she cried through the whole collection because it brought back memories of her own childhood.

The music, in Dolby stereo, has a full range of orchestral instruments and sound effects such as a lamb gently bleating.

The collection of 17th- to 19th-century songs features nursery rhymes on one side and lullabies on the flip side.

Featured on the lullabies side, in order, are "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," "The Fairyship," "Little Boy Blue," "Hush, Little Baby," "Rockabye Baby," "All the Pretty Little Horses," "All Through the Night," "Sleep, Baby, Sleep," "Brahms' Lullaby," and "When At Night I Go To Sleep."

After 20 minutes of that, nearly any weary toddler will nod off.

Ms. Lancaster, 34, has her own 4-year-old boy. She debuted with the San Francisco Opera in "Electra" last fall, and says she doesn't mind at all that her singing puts people to sleep.

"Certainly not for the lullabies," she said in an recent interview. "I think it's wonderful. I even fall asleep listening to the songs. I find them very consoling."

She said she and her husband and partner, Anya Horvath, an artist who designed the cover, wanted to present song collections that would "help parents share an experience with their children and also have a respite."

Among the 16 brightly sung nursery songs are such favorites as "Frere Jacques," "London Bridge," and "This Old Man."

Their next album, expected this spring, is a collection of songs about animals.

"We want to preserve the classic songs that children have grown up with for the last few centuries," said Ms. Lancaster. "In some cases, there are three or four translations of songs, such as the lyrics to Brahms' Lullaby. We try to use the more familiar, contemporary lyrics."

Chippendale Style Chair Added To Palace Collection

The antique furniture collection at Tryon Palace in New Bern has been enhanced by the recent addition of an American Chippendale style mahogany chair (circa 1770).

It is the only piece of furniture in the collection at present believed to have been part of the furnishings when the palace served as the residence of North Carolina's royal governors during the late 18th century.

Evidence indicates that the chair belonged to Josiah Martin, who succeeded William Tryon as royal governor of North Carolina. Martin resided at the palace from 1771 after Tryon's departure for New York, until 1775. The American Revolution caused him and his family to make a hasty departure from New Bern leaving behind most of his furnishings.

Cabinet-makers in the 18th century, as now, numbered each chair of a set consecutively, by carving the appropriate Roman numeral on the inside of the seat rail. The Governor Josiah Martin chair bears a carved "V" indicating it was number five of the set. The splat and form of the back of the chair is identical to a style which developed in Providence, R.I., during the third quarter of the 18th century. Several of the American colonies developed similar styles.

The chair is presently on exhibit at the palace.

MAHOGANY CHAIR... (circa 1770) is now being shown at Tryon Palace.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

Houses haven't changed much over the years.

Only the names of the rooms.

We put a tablecloth on our kitchen table and the next thing you know, it was a "Breakfast Room," when we added a chair and a lamp to the bedroom, it somehow became a "Suite." When we put a television set in the living room, it became a "Television Room."

Our "Television Room" used to be the "Recreation Room." It was a lot of fun then. At one time we had a ping-pong table there and when we got a few more bucks, we replaced it with a pool table. There were a couple of chairs and a few magazines and a phonograph so we could hear music while we laughed and talked.

But all that ended when we got the TV set. The pool table went to the back porch which was immediately named the "Sun Room." I never understood this as it got the same sun when it was referred to as the back porch.

The TV set brought about a lot of changes in the television room. The chairs and sofas all faced the east wall and there were snack tables at the end of every row of chairs and the three-way lights never got over 40 watts. Naturally, since no one could study there with all that heavy breathing and car chases, the desk had to be moved to the sewing room. It was renamed the "Den." Since you couldn't sew there and have someone study at the same time, the sewing room went to a small room at the end of the hall, which used to be called simply the small bedroom.

That meant that the bed had to be stored in the "Workshop." Of course, I can remember the workshop when it was just called a basement. It looks the same actually. The only thing that has changed is we put a screen in front of the hot water heater and put all the bolts, nuts and screws in baby food jars.

Sometimes a room doesn't have to go through a lot of remodeling to change names. Our son's bedroom went from a simple bedroom to the "Guest Room" the day after he moved out.

My husband is thinking of buying a computer and putting it in the television room. That would certainly screw things up because it wouldn't be a television room anymore, but a "Media Room." He said things have been moving in that direction since we added a VCR and a digital clock.

With all those rooms, you'd think I would have a place to sit and read in some kind of privacy, but I don't. The "Den" always has someone talking on the phone. The "Breakfast Room" is noisy and the "Sun Room" is cold in the winter.

There's only one place left for me. It used to be called a bathroom before we added an exercise bicycle and a bathroom scale. Now it's called the "Personal Fitness Room." It will always be a library to me.

Engagement Announced

Mary E. Jones of Greenville announces the engagement of her daughter, Deirdre Willette, to Michael Albert Rice, son of Madeline Rice of Windsor and the late Grady Rice Jr. The bride-elect is also the daughter of the late Rev. William E. Jones. A May 4 wedding is planned.

SWEET RHYTHM

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — The International Sweethearts of Rhythm was a red hot jazz force from 1937 to 1949, according to jazz critic Nat Hentoff.

But today, the group is largely unknown to jazz buffs, even though the Sweethearts stayed together longer than any other female jazz band. Hentoff says they were better than their legend even though they're often not mentioned in histories of big-band jazz.

"Maybe," he says, "because no one believed that women could do such things."

Cowboys Might Take Off Their Hats If They Could Hang Them

DEAR ABBY: On the subject of cowboys wearing their hats indoors: In more genteel times, restaurants had coatrooms, which had proper spaces for hats and someone to watch them and prevent their being pilfered.

Nowadays, if a restaurant has a coatroom at all, it is "at the customer's risk" and has no place even to hang a hat. Often not even a peg exists, necessitating either wearing the hat during meals or putting it on the seat of an adjacent chair, subject to being slopped on by careless waiters, or sat upon by incoming customers!

I sometimes hang my hat on any convenient projection from the wall, be it steer horns, false beams or a bookcase. In rowdier places, I have been known to take out a knife, stick it in a wall plank and hang my hat thereupon.

Lucky (and rare) is the home nowadays that has a hall closet, much less one with room for anything but a ski cap. Throwing the coats on the bed in the spare bedroom often results in coats landing atop a hat and crushing it—sometimes the coats even have people still in them!

WILLIAM D.
DEER PARK, N.Y.

DEAR ABBY: Your column about the cowboy hat reminded me of a story that circulated in the Houston area about the former Houston Oilers coach, Bum Phillips, now coach of the New Orleans Saints.

Bum always wore his 10-gallon hat, which made him easily identifiable on the sidelines at football games. However, he never wore his hat when the Oilers played at home in the Astrodome.

A reporter once asked Bum why he never wore his cowboy hat at a home game. As the story goes, he replied, "My mama taught me that a gentleman always removes his hat when he enters a home, and the Astrodome is home to me."

MARCIA B., TEXAN

DEAR ABBY: I know why cowboys always wear their 10-gallon hats. An honest-to-God cowboy wears his hat to shade his eyes from the scorching sun, but his face gets tanned anyway, taking on the look of leather. Meanwhile his forehead is as fair as a newborn baby's bottom, and if he removes his hat, he will look silly with his tan face and his pale forehead, so he never takes his hat off unless he's going to bed.

COWBOY'S GIRLFRIEND

DEAR ABBY: Who said a cowboy never removes his hat? I just saw Gene Autry on the news. He was all dressed up in his spiffy western clothes, including a beautiful 10-gallon hat, but when a lady approached him, I noticed that he took his hat off. Now, there's a gentleman for you!

Come to think of it, John Wayne always took his hat off in the presence of a lady, and so did Hopalong Cassidy, Gary Cooper and George Montgomery.

LOVES OLD WESTERNS

DEAR LOVES: True. All of the above had good manners. Also hair.

DEAR ABBY: Gentlemen cowboys remove their hats indoors and in the presence of ladies no matter where they are. Drugstore cowboys, who just wear western clothes and hang out trying to look macho, never take their hats off.

If you recall the movie "Midnight Cowboy," that guy never took his hat off because he was no gentleman.

MOVIE BUFF

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps I can provide a reasonable explanation for why cowboys wear their hats indoors.

Those hats are so big, there is no place to put them. Also, each brim is shaped individually by the owner according to his personal taste. A real cowboy bends the brim of his hat to suit himself, and when he removes it, he always places it upside down on the crown with nothing touching it to keep the brim from being bent out of shape.

Most restaurants don't want to take the responsibility of keeping these precious hats in the checkroom, so they encourage cowboys to keep their hats on their head.

Nearsighted

The ports of Morehead City and Wilmington have seen growth over the years, and their economic impact upon North Carolina as a whole is a point of great satisfaction. So the Reagan administration plan to eliminate U.S. Customs import inspectors in the state is a very upsetting piece of news.

Other than coastal ports, the cities of Durham, Winston-Salem and Charlotte are also involved in the proposed policy change.

State Ports Authority executive director William Greene says the offices in Wilmington and Morehead City bring the government more revenue than it costs to provide the service — more than $26 million a year. Another SPA spokesman says the two ports could lose between 17 percent and 30 percent of their import business as ships are diverted to other (out of state) ports that have full customs services.

The loss of ships would further affect ability of the ports to attract import business and halt growth in general ... discouraging a proposed $15 million expansion of the Wilmington wharf and addition of a fourth container crane.

Full implications of those Reagan words "you ain't seen nothin' yet" are beginning to sink in. The picture of shortsighted and poorly thought-out actions is emerging.

Consolidation of the Customs Service import inspectors would reduce their offices from 50 to 35; a step which on the surface represents an economy in the service. But in North Carolina those customs cuts would cost the state up to 100,000 jobs and as much as $300 million in wages, taxes and other revenues, we're told. This is not economizing. It is foolish.

At this point the administration's plan is only a plan ... possibly a very tentative idea that has found its way to being put on paper but not yet adopted. Maybe, just maybe, it will lie there and die there.

Addition

Sunday a carefully planned and constructed addition to the Sheppard Memorial Library children's section will be dedicated.

The addition involved digging out an area under the building to accommodate an additional 3,250 square feet of space for children's services. The work was done that way to add on to the existing space and also to avoid changing the lines of the library building.

It is a well thought out plan. The additional space for the children's library was needed and, yet, it would be difficult to add space at ground level without spoiling the lines of one of Greenville's most outstanding buildings. As a result the work was done underground with the addition of more supports under the main building.

Greenville has a unique municipal library and it has been significantly improved with this addition.

Kemp Forms New Alliance

WASHINGTON — When Rep. Jack Kemp and Lewis Lehrman dined in public at the Capitol Hill Club Feb. 19, the two supply-siders from New York were serving public notice of a united front in the post-Reagan battle for the Republican Party.

Considering the simmering rivalry between Kemp and Lehrman over the past three years, fellow diners at the Republican club raised their eyebrows. If they had heard the conversation, they would have been even more intrigued.

Lehrman was saying that Kemp, with a decade more experience in the political wars, had the right-of-way to run for president in 1988.

Instead of confronting Lehrman as a competitor, Kemp would enjoy his support. Kemp responded with a suggestion for monthly strategy sessions between them and their advisers (the first of which was set for this week).

The Kemp-Lehrman entente, whether a shaky non-aggression pact or a full-fledged alliance, informs the Republican Party that President Reagan's hints of support for his vice president will not automatically sew up the nomination for George Bush; it also informs Bush, Sen. Bob Dole and ex-senator Howard Baker that they will face a supply-side conservative alliance in battling for the nomination.

More subtly, the two supply-siders agree that they have gone as far as they can in getting their growth-

RALEIGH — When an abused child is removed from his home by social workers, he can end up in a legal never-never land. The child may never get out of the system that sends him from one foster home to the next. The child's parents may never fully understand what they have to do to get him back.

Legislation scheduled for introduction at the General Assembly would change the standards under which a child could be removed from his home. A tighter procedure would be required of social service agencies and of parents. The bill essentially tells both social worker and parent to "fish or cut bait." The bill's sponsor says it is designed to move the process along at a speed best suited to the child, not the parent or social worker.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, says the bill would establish statewide standards for the removal of children from their parental homes. Judges around the state currently use their own standards, she said, so the process is very unevenly applied.

Some judges have minimal standards for removing children from their homes, she says. Other judges almost never remove a child.

The proposed standards, she says, are more rigorous than those used in many state courts today. "In the majority of cases, the child is best off when allowed to remain in the home," Mrs. Marvin said. But in the case of a child who is "endangered," her bill establishes a procedure that puts a burden on the parents to move quickly to improve the child's living conditions.

Mrs. Marvin's proposal demands that a local social services department do all in its power to help an abused or neglected child and his parents before seeking to remove a child. At the hearing required to take a child out of his home, DSS would have to show a judge that it had done everything possible for the child while he was still in his home.

Also, the bill would require that a child be removed from his home only if his parents were the source of the problem. Jenny Weisz of the Administrative Office of the Courts said children often have emotional problems for which their parents are not the source. Removing them from their homes, as sometimes happens, just compounds the child's problems.

Once the child has been removed from his home, local DSS would have to present a written plan for returning the child to the home. "If a child is placed in a foster home, he may stay there interminably. He drops through the cracks," Mrs. Marvin said. With Mrs. Marvin's bill, the parents would be told exactly what they had to do — the improvements in the child's home which they need to make — or they would face an accelerated procedure to have their parental rights to the child removed.

Six months after the child had been removed, parents would get a right to go back into court. At that time, a judge would determine if they had made progress towards improving the original problem. Maybe the most controversial change Mrs. Marvin is proposing might occur at this time. After six months, DSS could begin the process of having parental rights removed if the parents were not cooperating with the written plan which they'd been given. Now DSS must wait two years before taking that action.

Any bill in this area is highly controversial. It took four years for the diverse groups of children's advocates backing this bill to agree on its final form. Now the bill faces what Mrs. Marvin calls the "pro-family" advocates — people who get very nervous about any government intervention in family life. She hopes the more rigorous removal standards will entice those people to support her bill.

A Matter Of Public Record

WASHINGTON — The sad story of John Fedders provides an opportunity for those of us in the news business to re-examine one of the unwritten rules of our trade. Once again we are compelled to ask ourselves: At what point does the private life of a public official become public business?

Until last week, Fedders was director of law enforcement for the Securities and Exchange Commission. He resigned his post in the wake of disclosures that over their 18 years of marriage he periodically had beaten his wife. He publicly acknowledged at least seven such incidents.

The Fedders case presented no very difficult problems in the ethics of journalism. The Wall Street Journal broke the story on Feb. 25 after sitting on a tip for more than a year.

Why the year's silence? The Journal was unwilling to publish a story that could wreck the career of a public official — an official who was doing a brilliant job — until the paper had a public record on which a story could be based. When Charlotte Fedders sued John Fedders for divorce, and the two testified in a public courtroom, the story became news.

It was not investigative reporting — not keyhole peeping or garbage rummaging — that led to the Page 1 stories. It was a transcript of Mrs. Fedders' testimony in open court. On the witness stand she poured out her travails as the wife of a martinet, a man obsessed with discipline and order in everything, perhaps, save his wearing apparel. Mrs. Fedders testified that she laid out his clothes in the morning and picked them up when he dropped them at night.

It was the public record that triggered the exposure. This is the unwritten rule that many Washington journalists live by, and it is not a bad rule.

Wilbur Mills came to the House of Representatives from Arkansas in 1937. He made himself an authority on tax legislation. In time he became chairman of Ways and Means, and in that capacity he performed superbly. He ran his committee with a firm hand, and his public hearing were models of way committee hearings ought to be. Rumors of his heavy drinking began to circulate early in the 1970s. This rumors became more than rumors; reporters who covered the House knew that Mills was an alcoholic. They wrote not a line. Why not? At that point his private life was not interfering with his public office, and there was no public record to report.

Then came Mills' drunken dalliance with the Argentine Firecracker and her famous dip in the tidal basin. The cops were called in. Now there were names on a blotter. It was news.

The same rule governed the matter of Wayne Hays of Ohio. His affair with the blond bombshell was a private matter — it was private, that is, until he put Elizabeth Ray on the public payroll. That made it a public matter. When she confessed to a reporter that "I can't type, I can't file, I can't even answer the phone," Hays was done for. He resigned from Congress in September 1976.

The 535 men and women who serve in Congress, and the hundreds of top officials in the executive departments, probably are no moral or immoral than upper-income individuals in other cities. The drive in the fast lane; it is the lane that leads to temptation. Reporters are natural-born gossips. One or another rumor always is floating about the press galleries: Senator So-and-So has a new bimbo; Congressman Such-and-Such lost a bundle at the races. The rumors have to do with adultery, homosexuality, gambling, drinking, and living beyond visible means of support. We gab a lot.

But as long as public servants do the work for which they are paid, we will not act as judges of their private lives. If the senior senator from Massachusetts had just taken the young lady for a midnight stroll upon the beach — and reporters had learned of the matter — nothing would have been written. But when he went off the bridge at Chappaquiddick and Mary Jo Kopechne drowned, the cops came in. Ted Kennedy's private life became public.

The system may seem cynical — if punishes not the deed, but the getting caught — but it preserves the privacy of public officials, and it serves the public interest.

To the editor:

For some time now different study groups have recommended the necessity of a federal spending freeze.

President Reagan dispatched American negotiators to Geneva, Switzerland, for the United States-Soviet arms talks. Yet, it seems that some congressmen (wives, too) who are not part of the negotiating group will be there at the expense of the taxpayers (Evans and Novak article, 3/7/85 in The Daily Reflector). This Swiss spree is another example of the flagrant disregard of the nation's deficit spending problem by members of Congress.

Where would households and businesses be if, operating on a budget of spending more than is coming in, they went a step beyond and practiced wasteful spending? Irrational behavior, to say the least!

Strength For Today

"Be glad in the Lord and rejoice ye righteous."

Why do some people seem to feel that religion is a matter of gloom and denial? Religious faith indeed causes us to face life in a spirit of quiet solemnity. But such solemnity is not gloom. It is resolute purpose manifesting itself as it faces life's issues.

The really happy people in the world are people who have a hold on some religion and who in turn allow that religion to have a hold on them. They acknowledge the moral standards which this religion demands. They give themselves seriously to living up to these standards.

They turn from evil like Jesus who in his encounter with Satan said, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

There is plenty of seriousness about sincere religion, but the outstanding characteristic of sincere religion is joy.

Study Says Strong Dollar Costing Jobs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The overvalued dollar has cost the United States nearly 2 million jobs because of a resulting flood of foreign imports, a new study shows.

The study, scheduled for release today at a hearing of the congressional Joint Economic Subcommittee on Economic Goals, concludes the United States must reduce the federal budget deficit in order to make the nation more competitive in world markets.

An overvalued dollar makes foreign goods less expensive in this country and makes U.S. goods more expensive overseas.

"Our export sales are approximately 15 percent lower and our imports 15 percent higher than would have been the case with a normal dollar value," the report said.

"The sharp appreciation of the dollar since 1980 has cost 2 million jobs — 1.5 million in manufacturing alone — and cut national output by 4 percent," said the study prepared for the subcommittee by Data Resources Inc., an economic research firm based in Lexington, Mass.

The report was released by the subcommittee's vice chairman, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, who said,

"Our trade policy is off the track, and the dollar's devastation is widespread."

The U.S. trade deficit last year was more than $120 billion, including $79 billion in the manufacturing sector.

The report says the overvalued dollar has cost 144,000 jobs in California; 104,000 in New York; 97,000 in North Carolina; 92,000 in Pennsylvania; 75,000 in Michigan; 73,000 in Ohio; 69,000 in Texas and 57,000 in Illinois.

The dollar has risen in value because of high interest rates, which stem from ballooning budget deficits, the report says.

"The greater the federal deficit, the stronger the federal government's demand for funds," the report concludes. "The greater the demand for funds, the higher the level of interest rates; the higher the level of American interest rates ... the greater the demand for dollar investments."

The study proposes reducing the deficit by limiting growth in entitlement programs such as Social Security. The report also suggests reducing indexing of the personal income tax and limiting defense spending in areas such as retirement benefits. Other suggestions include raising personal income taxes.

The study advises against an increase in business taxes, saying that would tend to reduce formation of capital.

The United States, says the report, also must "push aggressively" to have its trading partners grant equal access to U.S. exports, which now face many barriers from foreign countries.

"A logical, but admittedly extreme, answer to a country which does not deliver reciprocal access might be an across-the-board tariff on U.S. imports of all the recalcitrant partner's products," says the report. "with the tariff revenues split between rebates to the general U.S. taxpayer and public and export subsidies on U.S. goods shipped to that country."

The study says that "to put the nation back on its optimal growth path, domestic fiscal policies must be carefully adjusted to bring down the cost of funds in the United States, thereby enhancing fixed investment and returning the dollar to a competitive value."

Nixon's Giving Up SS Agents

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Richard Nixon is dropping Secret Service protection, opting instead for private security agents in an effort to save the government about $3 million, it was reported today.

Nixon, 72, wrote to Treasury Secretary James Baker on Thursday to say he "is declining Secret Service protection from now on," the New York Daily News said, quoting unidentified sources in Washington.

The Secret Service, an arm of the Treasury Department, would neither confirm nor deny the report, according to the News.

The former president is replacing his federal bodyguards with private ones "at no cost to the government," an unidentified source told the News.

"He merely stepped back and decided that the expenditure is too great, that he didn't need it," the source said. "He doesn't see why former presidents must be protected by such an expensive detail for life."

Secret Service protection for former presidents Nixon, Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter, and for Lady Bird Johnson, widow of Lyndon B. Johnson, costs the government more than $26 million a year, according to the News.

Nixon's protection last year cost taxpayers $3 million, it said.

Nixon canceled government security for his wife, Pat, early last year, and the private security agents will protect her as well as his home in Saddle River, N.J., the newspaper said.

Financier Will Enter Guilty Plea

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A year after the collapse of his multimillion-dollar international money-trading company, J. David Dominelli will plead guilty Thursday to bankruptcy fraud charges, but the investigation of his company will continue, a prosecutor says.

The plea-bargain will dispose of the federal case against the financier, who has been jailed for nearly a year and suffered a stroke that has left him partially paralyzed, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Bob Rose.

Rose confirmed Monday that Dominelli would appear in federal court Thursday to plead guilty to an undisclosed number of charges. He declined to discuss specifics of the arrangement, including the possible sentence.

The San Diego Union, citing sources it did not identify, reported today that Dominelli would face a prison term of about 20 years. Had he been convicted on all counts, Dominelli would have faced a maximum prison term of 140 years, Rose said.

The plea bargain "does not terminate the investigation" into his money trading concern, J. David & Co., he said. The inquiry will now focus on directors and principals of J. David "to see if they are criminally liable."

Dominelli, 43, had been regarded by some as a financial wizard with a knack for making money in the volatile but potentially lucrative international currency exchange market.

In February 1984, disgruntled investors forced his company into bankruptcy after they were unable to retrieve their money from company accounts. Dominelli is accused of coaxing about $60 million from 1,000 investors by promising he would double their money.

The bankruptcy led to a federal grand jury investigation and the subsequent indictment on 25 criminal charges of perjury, fraud and contempt.

Dominelli's attorney, Gilbert Athay, could not be reached for comment at his office in Salt Lake City, Athay's secretary said.

Dominelli also faces state perjury and conspiracy charges for allegedly plotting with Mayor Roger Hedgecock and two others to finance Hedgecock's 1983 campaign with $357,000 of J. David money. Local election laws limit individual contributions to $250 and prohibit donations from corporations and unions.

Moscow Scrubs For Chernenko Funeral

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet citizens lined up in freezing temperatures today to view the body of late President Konstantin U. Chernenko, and soldiers chipped ice from gutters and scrubbed streets and sidewalks to prepare for his funeral.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev, 54, an agronomist and lawyer chosen to succeed the 73-year-old Chernenko as Communist Party chief only four hours after the death announcement, told the party central committee Monday he was ready to seek "termination" of the arms race and stressed the need to build the economy.

He said he was offering a freeze of nuclear arsenals and an end to deployment of missiles. If the United States responded in kind, "the peoples of the world would sigh with relief," he said.

The smooth transition came on the eve of the resumption of U.S.-Soviet nuclear arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland. The talks had been suspended for 15-months.

Gorbachev's picture dominated morning editions of the national Soviet newspapers, adding to the air of briskness that surrounded the swiftest transition in Soviet history. Chernenko's photo was on the second pages. In the past, deceased leaders were on the front page.

Chernenko, who died Sunday night of lung, heart and liver ailments, is to be buried Wednesday under the cobblestones of Red Square.

Gorbachev led the other nine members of the ruling Politburo in viewing the body again today, and Gorbachev offered his condolences to Chernenko's widow, Anna Dmitrievna. Gorbachev, who heads the funeral commission, had also led some Politburo members into the House of Unions Monday night to view Chernenko's body.

With the announcement of Chernenko's death, Moscow and the rest of this vast country went into official mourning — the Soviet Union's third succession in 28 months.

Workers draped lampposts with black-trimmed flags and store windows replaced their regular displays with portraits of the departed leader. People lined up to view Chernenko's body as it lay in state in a flower-bedecked bier in the the House of Unions.

The heart of Moscow was made immaculate overnight by squads that cleaned thoroughfares and used metal staves to chip away black ice from gutters in preparation for the funeral.

President Reagan sent a message of condolence to the Soviets, saying, "I wish to reiterate the strong desire of the American people for world peace."

The American chief executive told reporters he eventually would "like to have a talk ... a meeting of minds" with Gorbachev. But he ruled out attending Chernenko funeral, saying he "didn't see anything that could be achieved" by coming to Moscow.

Vice President George Bush, Secretary of State George Shultz, British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, French President Francois Mitterrand, West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and India's Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi were expected to arrive later today or Wednesday to attend the funeral. Most were also expected to seek meetings with the new Soviet leader.

China, a rival communist giant since the 1960s, congratulated Gorbachev on his becoming party leader and announced that Vice Premier Li Peng would attend the funeral.

Under gray, overcast skies, thousands of police and soldiers lined the streets between the Kremlin and the House of Unions.

The Hall of Columns was permeated with the aroma of evergreens from hundreds of wreaths. An orchestra played mournful music.

Sentries formed files leading up a staircase where a two-story-high portrait of Chernenko hung.

In the mourning room, Mrs. Chernenko sat with other family members to the right of the casket watching columns of people move swiftly by the mass of red, purple and white flowers that covered all but the dead leader's head and shoulders.

Mrs. Chernenko was also visited by the widow of former President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Victoria.

Starting with Vladimir I. Lenin in 1924, the death of a Soviet leader had been reported on front page of every Soviet newspaper. Dailies like Pravda, the party organ, bordered the page in black and ran quarter-page photographs of the dead ruler.

This time, Chernenko's picture was on the second page, and it was half the customary size. Every newspaper ran a lead story announcing his death, but the rest of the front pages were devoted to Gorbachev, including a portrait and a story on the plenum at which he was formally named general secretary.

"It's so striking that he's on the front page, but once you've got a general secretary ... he's it," said a Western diplomat, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

The youngest of the remaining Politburo members, Gorbachev is also the youngest man to win supreme Kremlin power since Josef V. Stalin became leader at age 45 in 1924.

LYING IN STATE — The body of the late Konstantin U. Chernenko, general secretary of the Soviet Communist Party, lies in state Monday in Moscow's House of Unions. Official Soviet publications have treated Chernenko's death Sunday as second-rate news to the selection of his Mikhail Gorbachev as his successor. A funeral is planned Wednesday. (AP Laserphoto)

Reagan Says He's Ready For Talks With Gorbachev

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he is "more than ready" to meet with the Soviet Union's new leader, but the White House insists it must be under the same terms that were set — but never met — for talks with three earlier Kremlin chiefs.

Reagan pledged Monday to deal "with an open mind" with Mikhail Gorbachev, 54, the new Soviet Communist Party chairman and successor to Konstantin U. Chernenko, who died Sunday.

In an official message of condolence, the president told the Soviets, "At this solemn time, I wish to reiterate the strong desire of the American people for world peace. Although the problems which divide our countries are many and complex, we can and must resolve our differences through dialogue and negotiation."

Reagan passed up an opportunity to meet Gorbachev following Chernenko's funeral, scheduled for Wednesday, by tapping Vice President George Bush to head the official U.S. delegation to Moscow. Bush performed the same job at the deaths of former Soviet leaders Leonid I. Brezhnev in 1982 and Yuri V. Andropov in 1984.

Other delegation members are Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Arthur Hartman, U.S. ambassador to Moscow.

The president made a five-minute visit to the Soviet Embassy in Washington on Monday to sign a book of condolence, which had been placed on a table in front of a picture of Chernenko draped with black crepe. Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin and other officials who greeted Reagan wore red bands on their sleeves.

Earlier, answering questions from regional editors and broadcasters assembled in the State Dining Room, Reagan expressed pleasure that U.S.-Soviet arms talks were opening on schedule today in Geneva.

Asked if he were anxious to meet with Gorbachev, Reagan replied, "Very much so. And I was with the previous three, also."

Reagan added, "You have to wait for a new man now to get in place and establish his regime and then I'll be more than ready. Because I think there's a great suspicion between the two countries."

Accusing the Kremlin of trying to expand its control around the world, Reagan said, "I'd like to have a talk and see if some way we can't some day have a meeting of minds."

However, White House deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said, "Nothing has changed from the president's criterion for meeting with the Soviet leader — that being a meeting that would be well prepared with a sufficient agenda for some discussions." In the past, U.S. officials also have said a meeting would have to hold the prospect of tangible results.

Asked if a meeting were more likely now than in the past, Speakes replied, "It's difficult to assess" because of the turnover in Soviet power.

Bush, heading to Moscow from Geneva, was carrying a letter from Reagan to Gorbachev. The vice president, asked if the letter proposed an early summit between the two leaders, said, "We'll talk about that after agreement is reached with the Soviets on what we're going to disclose."

President Reagan's national security adviser, Robert McFarlane, also refused, in an interview on the NBC-TV "Today" show, to discuss directly the possibility of a Reagan-Gorbachev meeting.

But McFarlane did say that heightened Soviet interest in arms control "has been missing in the past" and that, now, "I think there's an agenda that we could move on quickly. ... We look forward to dealing with him (Gorbachev) and are hopeful of making some headway this year."

President Faces Intestinal Testing For Blood In Stool

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, in otherwise "excellent" health, is undergoing additional tests following the discovery last week of blood in his stool and a new growth in his lower intestine.

Reagan's doctors described the growth as an inflammatory polyp, a noncancerous lesion that sometimes indicates the patient has inflammatory bowel disease or ulcerative colitis.

A White House spokesman said Monday that additional tests will be done before deciding whether further treatment is indicated.

Navy Capt. Walter Karney, who headed the team of military physicians that conducted Reagan's general physical examination at Bethesda Naval Hospital on Friday, said the 74-year-old president's "overall physical and mental condition is excellent." He called it "quite remarkable" that Reagan's blood pressure, at 130 over 74, was lower than a year ago.

But a written statement summarizing the results of the examination said two of four tests for occult, or hidden, blood in the feces were positive.

"Physicians believe this may be from the polyp or from diet and will be monitored," the statement said.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said eating red meat and certain vegetables "sometimes causes tests for occult blood in the stool to indicate the presence of blood when there is none."

He said the president would be put on a somewhat restricted diet recommended by the American Cancer Society and tested periodically during the next few weeks before doctors decide whether further examination or treatment is needed.

Speakes said the test results could indicate the new polyp was bleeding or that there are other polyps not found during the examination, in which an instrument called a flexible procto-sigmoidoscope was used to observe the inside of the lower third of the president's colon.

One specialist in diseases of the intestinal tract, discussing the findings on condition he not be identified, said they could indicate Reagan has a relatively mild inflammatory bowel disease or ulcerative colitis.

The late President Eisenhower underwent surgery while still in office to remove a section of his colon afflicted with Crohn's Disease, a potentially severe and painful inflammation of the bowel.

The physician said he would not make a judgment based on the information released by the White House, but he said some further studies probably are called for. He suggested those would include a colonoscopy, which entails using a longer instrument than the one employed on Friday to examine the full length of the colon, or a barium enema, in which an opaque liquid is injected into the bowel to provide a view of the colon on X-rays.

Two of four positive stool samples "is certainly enough to be quite suspicious," the specialist said. "He does need further study."

Reagan's doctors reported finding no evidence of a benign polyp they discovered and examined last May.

But they did discover another, similar growth, which they called a "small inflammatory pseudo-polyp," near the place where they found the one last year.

They said it, too, was benign, or noncancerous, as such inflammatory or pseudo-polyps always are.

Intestinal polyps are not uncommon, particularly in older people, but the discovery of one polyp indicates there may be others, and some types of polyp grow into cancerous lesions.

Cancer of the colon or rectum is among the most deadly forms of cancer. It can often be prevented or cured, however, by prompt removal of intestinal growths.

Previous physical examinations have noted that Reagan has diverticulosis, a condition in which several small pouches grow in the intestine.

The White House spokesman noted that "unusual bleeding" is one of the seven warning signs of cancer, but he cautioned that doctors were not suggesting Reagan has cancer.

"All other tests were in the normal range," the White House statement said.

The physicians also took note of a tendon contraction in Reagan's left hand, which causes his ring finger to curl slightly.

Reagan has said the condition, known as Dupuytren's Syndrome, bothers him occasionally, but Speakes said there are no plans to correct the condition surgically.

Asked how serious the problem is, Speakes said the former star of Western movies has remarked that "it bothers him when he twirls his pistol to put it back in its holster."

VOLUNTARY AUCTION — Herman Bissette, 28, of Bailey, leans against an automatic tobacco primer that didn't sell in a voluntary equipment auction after he decided to quit farming after 10 years. Bissette says he will try to refinance his farm debts so that they can be paid off on a monthly income. (AP Laserphoto)

Young Nash Grower Decides It's Time To Quit, Sells His Equipment

BAILEY, N.C. (AP) — The uncertainty of the tobacco price-support program and the increase in the fee growers pay from 7 cents to 25 cents figured in Herman Bissette Jr.'s decision to leave a business he loves.

"I love farming," said the 28-year-old Nash County man. "It's the main thing I always wanted to do. But I don't see any future in it. I just hope the ones who've made up their minds to try and stick with it can make it. There's no better life than farm life. It's No. 1 in my opinion."

In the past two years, Bissette lost $18,000 because of rising costs, lower commodity prices and adverse weather conditions. He plans to refinance by borrowing money against his home so he can get the debts down to a manageable monthly payment.

With the increased assessment, Bissette would have found himself paying $25,000 on 100,000 pounds of tobacco. For tax purposes that money is considered income of the grower because it is paid to keep the price-support program, a farmer-owned cooperative, going.

"That's $25,000 I've got to pay taxes on that I've never had," he said.

After 10 years of raising tobacco, cucumbers and corn, Bissette decided last month to auction his farm equipment.

"It's hard to see everything you've worked your life for just go away," he said. "That's what I had done. I had put my life in farming. I put probably 10 of the best years of my life in farming. And now it's just gone."

Unlike other farm auctions in recent months sparked by bankruptcy proceedings, Bissette's auction was voluntary.

"I was not forced out of farming," Bissette said. "I decided it was time to quit. I was not one who had to file for bankruptcy. I have a good credit rating. I could have gotten money to farm again if I had wanted to. But I was just looking after my family's future."

He withdrew some of his 17 pieces of equipment from the auction, hoping for better prices later. But the sale marked the end of his chosen career.

"It was over just like the snap of a finger," said Bissette, who now works as a carpenter for a Wilson construction company.

Bissette got into farming as soon as he finished high school by leasing 90 acres of land. When he quit last month, he was tending 300 acres of leased land, mostly in tobacco and cucumbers.

Kinston Farmer Finds T-Shirt Fad More Profitable Than His Pig Pen

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

After 40 years of raising hogs, tobacco and soybeans, Floyd "Junior" Gray was tired of depending on the whims of nature for his livelihood. So he invested about $4,000 in the dream of a manufacturer with an idea but no money.

The move appears to have paid off.

Gray isn't spending his time slopping hogs any more. The Kinston farmer has been criss-crossing the country, taking orders for what he calls "the next Cabbage Patch kids" — "Color Me" T-shirts with outlined designs that come with colored pens whose ink can be washed out of the fabric again and again.

Gray and Carroll Midgette, working out of a mobile home surrounded by tobacco barns, have taken orders for 100,000 dozen of the T-shirts since Midgette brought a few samples to the National Merchandise Convention in New York in September.

"When I went up there, I said it would be OK if I sold 50 to 100 dozen," Midgette said. "I wound up doing 5,000 dozen."

J.C. Penney, K Mart, military installations and National Football League franchises are among those who have placed orders for the shirts, Midgette said.

"We've got 'Color Me Santa Claus,' 'Color Me Animal World,'

'Color Me Army,' 'Color Me God Is Love,' and other designs," he said. "We've got companies that want their own designs. We've got a company that's going to bring the shirts to Saudi Arabia ... and we just got a call from the Oral Roberts organization — they're interested, too."

And Gray and Midgette are not stopping there.

"Right now, we're ushering in the color-me kids," Midgette said. "We're working on cartoons, and we're dealing with companies to make tennis shoes and jogging suits."

Midgette said he got the idea for the T-shirts about 15 years ago.

"My kids liked to color, and they liked to wear T-shirts. I thought you could sell a T-shirt that kids could color on, wear and then wash out and color again," he said.

"I thought it would work, but I didn't think it would get this big," said Midgette, now president of the enterprise, G&M Manufacturing. "I didn't know it was going to explode like this."

Gray, now board chairman, said he was at first skeptical of Midgette's proposition.

"A lot of people have approached me with things like this, so when Carroll came by ... I didn't pay him much mind," he said. "But my wife thought he had a good product. He came back again, and we were riding in my truck. We were looking at the crops, and they didn't look too good. And he said, 'Trust me.'"

Midgette said the business has not rounded the financial corner yet, but he expects it to in about three months.

Gray said no matter what happens, he won't give up his hogs.

"I've been a farmer all my life. It just feels so good that maybe I won't have to depend on the weather and the prices ... and always worry about making payments," he said.

"I enjoy hogs, I really do," he said. "I love messing with them, even though I've lost money with them. I love them. If things go like they look like they will, I'll probably just build me a huge hog pen."

Martin, Virginian Forming 2-State Farm Task Force

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he'll join forces with a Virginia congressman to improve federal insurance terms for peanut farmers and to lobby against cigarette tax hikes.

"We share a mutual interest in both the peanut program and the tobacco program," Martin said

Monday at a Capitol news conference with U.S. Rep. Stan Parris, R-Va., who secured Martin's endorsement of a two-state task force to oppose a ruling on peanuts by the Federal Crop Insurance Corp.

The FCIC recently decided to base its insurance rates for peanut farmers on the average yield of the past six years, a change from the previous 10-year formula.

"We are going to be communicating to the president our opposition to making that change ...," said Martin. He and Parris kicked off the joint effort Monday by sending a telegram to the FCIC manager.

A drought has hurt peanut crops over the past six years. If loans are based on that period's average yield, insurance coverage will amount to about $400 per acre, instead of $600 per acre under the 10-year formula.

Senate Gives First OK To Child Center

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Violence against children is rampant and a "national disgrace," John Walsh told state legislators shortly before the Senate tentatively approved a center for missing children.

"We're just starting to see the tip of the iceberg, a colossal iceberg," said Walsh, father of the 6-year-old boy whose 1981 abduction and brutal murder inspired the television movie "Adam."

A final Senate vote was expected today on the missing-children bill, which hit a temporary snag Monday night when Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, questioned its cost and whether it would give the executive branch too much power.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, passed 45-0 on its second reading.

Earlier, Walsh addressed an overflow crowd of about 400 in the Legislative Building auditorium. He briefly described the agony of seeking his 6-year-old son, who disappeared from a Hollywood, Fla., shopping mall in 1981, and learning Adam's severed head had been found in a canal.

After his son's death, Walsh spearheaded a national effort to combat crimes against children.

"I'm not the victim," said Walsh, his voice breaking. "The real victim isn't here. He's in a better place. I'm the heartbroken father left behind."

Members of the House and Senate Children and Youth Committees grimaced as Walsh recited statistics on missing, abused and murdered children and described particularly grotesque cases.

With "great urgency," Walsh urged speedy approval of Hipps' bill and dozens of other laws ranging from mandating background checks of day-care workers to videotaping testimony of child victims outside the courtroom.

"Some states are years ahead of North Carolina," he said. "You've done some wonderful things in this state, but you're sadly lacking in other areas."

"Whatever your reaction, I beseech you, don't assume it couldn't happen to you. We can no longer afford to turn our heads in disgust."

Gov. Jim Martin's wife, Dottie, said afterward that Walsh's speech had put the audience "through the wringer ... such a powerful statement."

Hipps' bill would add two staffers to the one-person missing-child center in the Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

The center would serve as a collection and distribution point for information on missing children, do research on lost and exploited children, help local communities start prevention programs, and maintain a toll-free number — 1-800-255-KIDS — to receive reports of missing children.

Also, the center would feed data into the Police Information Network computer for statewide and nationwide distribution.

Hipps told the Senate that the crime control department had enough money to start and operate the center until July 1, when the new fiscal year begins. He estimated that the center would need $292,000 in fiscal 1985-87.

Why Would A Bank Put So Much Value On Something Money Can't Buy?

No one is surprised these days when a bank touts the quality of its services or announces with pride the addition of another zero in its assets column.

And certainly, these things are important. It's just that, at BB&T, we view them from a somewhat different perspective. Because, what we value above all else is something quite different. We place a premium on attitude.

Attitude shows up on the balance sheet only indirectly. But we venture to say that you'll notice the difference it makes when you enter any one of our branches.

You'll find, for example, that instead of merely providing a service, we're interested in the full range of your long-term financial plans and needs.

We believe that our commitment to long-term thinking gives us superior insight. And that this insight gives us the ability to understand the need and value of integrated financial solutions for our customers.

Responsiveness is another BB&T attribute. We're committed to responding to any request for our services in the absolute minimum amount of time.

Ultimately, you'll also discover that BB&T delivers the highest quality financial services across the board.

Quality. Commitment. Performance. For the things that mean more than just money, come to the place that's more than a bank.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks opened mixed today after posting their fourth straight loss in the previous session.

Mining, paper and airline issues were among the early casualties.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off more than 30 points over the past six sessions, recovered 1.44 to 1,269.99 in today's opening half-hour.

Losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers on the New York Stock Exchange, however.

The market's recent slide, and the accompanying sluggish volume, reflects investors' confusion toward the outlook for the economy and the subsequent effect on stocks, analysts said.

There is speculation that the economy's expansion is beginning to slow, which might help reduce upward pressure on interest rates. The same slowdown, however, could crimp corporate earnings.

There also are fears that if the dollar's current decline accelerates, foreign investors would increasingly withdraw from dollar-denominated investments, including equities.

Fresh evidence of the economy's pace is due later this week with government reports on retail sales and industrial production for February.

On the NYSE's active list today, International Business Machines fell 3/8 to 131 1/8, Sony climbed 1/4 to 18 and American Express slipped 1/8 to 41 1/4.

Ormandy Dies At 85

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eugene Ormandy, who conducted the Philadelphia Orchestra for 44 years until his retirement in 1980, died today at his home here after a long illness, the orchestra association announced. He was 85.

The cause of death was listed as pneumonia, a complication of a long-standing cardiac condition.

At Ormandy's side when he died was his wife, Margaret. He is also survived by two brothers, Martin and Laszlo.

Ormandy led a major world orchestra longer than any other conductor and became the Philadelphia's conductor laureate when he was succeeded by Riccardo Muti.

Reached in Munich, where he is conducting the Bavarian State Opera, Muti called Ormandy's death "a very difficult moment."

Muti praised Ormandy for making the orchestra world-renowned.

"Maestro Ormandy had a vision for this orchestra," Muti said in a statement. "This vision extended from young people and students to the entire city of Philadelphia. It was to make this orchestra serve the cultural life, to be the greatest and best loved, to contribute to the world through its music making."

Soviets, Americans Open Talks On Nuclear Controls

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The United States and the Soviet Union made a fresh start Tuesday on nuclear weapons control, with Soviet negotiators operating from instructions approved by their new leader, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Signaling conciliation, Victor P. Karpov, head of the Soviet delegation, said if both sides wanted an accord, "You can do that on the kitchen floor, here or somewhere else."

The opening session, which lasted about two hours and 40 minutes, was held up for 12 minutes while the three American negotiators signed a book of condolences to mark the death of Soviet President Konstantin U. Chernenko on Sunday. Today's session at the Soviet mission marked the resumption of superpower arms talks following a 15-month lapse.

On the eve of the talks, Gorbachev, who became Communist Party general secretary on Monday following the death of Chernenko, urged Washington to join Moscow in reducing nuclear weapons stocks and preventing space from becoming an atomic battleground.

Embassy Attacked

OTTAWA (AP) — Two armed men, calling themselves members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army, burst into the Turkish Embassy today, injuring the ambassador and a security guard, authorities reported.

They said the men had taken 11 hostages.

Sean Brady, a spokesman for Canada's foreign affairs department, said the ambassador's wife and children were among the hostages.

He said the ambassador and a police officer were barricaded in a separate part of the building.

Police said the ambassador, identified as Ozdemir Benler, and a security guard were injured. The seriousness of their injuries was not known.

A caller to Canadian Press said the men were members of the Armenian Revolutionary Army.

"There was an explosion at the door, they entered, they took command of the premises and they're holding hostages," a police spokesman told the news agency.

The embassy is in the Sandy Hill district of Ottawa, less than a mile from Parliament Hill.

Corbitt property outside the Winterville city limits, off the Tar Road for the Tanglewood subdivision property. The lots will meet the present 20,000 foot lot size requirements. The motion was approved with final approval by the Winterville Planning and Zoning Commission.

The board also approved a request by Thomas Roland to place a double-wide mobile home behind the Blanche Roland resident on Maye Drive. The board noted that the home would have to be made a permanent structure.

Aldermen designated a 1976 king cab Ford truck as being surplus and authorized the town clerk to dispose of the vehicle with a minimum price of $1,000.

In a related item, Nobles said a new 1985 Chevrolet truck had been delivered, which will be replacing the older truck. The new truck will be used by the sewage department.

In final action brought before the board, J.D. Buck of the Tar Road requested the town to run a sewer line to his house. The board approved the eight-inch line to be run at the owner's expense.

Pirates Win On Homer Parade

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's baseball bats, seemingly asleep for the past two games, awoke with a loud bang Monday afternoon as the Pirates buried Fairfield, 10-2, behind a five-homer attack, led by Chris Bradberry's two round-trippers.

Also adding home runs were Greg Hardison, Jim Riley and Winfred Johnson.

Johnson also contributed on the mound, going the distance and allowing seven hits. Four of those hits came in the first inning when the Stags took a short-lived 1-0 lead.

"I don't know why, but I seem to pitch better when my arm's a little tired," Johnson said. "Maybe I should warm up longer to get to that stage, but I'm a little scared to when I have to go nine innings like today."

Johnson, who as a junior is already the school's career home run leader with 34, popped up his first two times at bat before getting hits his last two times up. "I think I tried to swing too hard. I'm trying to do it all rather than let the bat do it. That's my biggest problem."

All in all, too, Coach Gary Overton was much happier with the outcome. "We played much, much better," he said. "We played like we wanted to and took the game to them. Winfred pitched well against a good-hitting ball club, but our defense was much better today. We were able to accomplish some things because of our defense. (Sunday), we let them get some bloop hits because we weren't playing hard defense. Today, we did, and they didn't get those hits."

"We just came out in a different frame of mind."

Fairfield came out swinging the bats in the first inning and it looked like they were picking up where they left off with their 18-hit attack. With one away, Chris McKenna singled, but Johnson picked him off. It proved fortuitous.

Chuck Knight, Joe Charno and Mark Portanova each followed with singles, scoring Knight. Ken McGovern walked, but Johnson got the next batter on a fly-out to end the frame.

The Pirates wasted little time in moving ahead for good. Mark Shank opened with a walk and Hardison cracked a homer to left, putting the Pirates up 2-0. Bradberry added to that with a shot over the fence in center.

A fourth run scored in the second. Riley singled and courtesy runner Mont Carter moved up on a sacrifice, scoring on a single by Shank.

Riley opened the fourth with a homer to left, running the lead out to 5-1.

Both teams scored in the sixth. Fairfield opened with McGovern reaching on an error, moving up on an infield out and scoring on a hit by Joe Mancini.

The Pirates got it right back when Riley reached on an error and Carter again ran for him, taking second on a hit by Robert Langston. Both moved up on a wild pitch and after Shank walked, Carter scored on a double play.

Three came over in the seventh. Johnson opened the inning with a homer to center. With one away, Mark Cockrell walked and Jay McGraw doubled. Riley's sacrifice fly scored Cockrell and Langston singled to bring McGraw home.

The final run, in the eighth, came on Bradberry's second homer of the day, his fourth of the year.

Langston led the Pirate hitting with three while Bradberry and Riley each had two. No one had more than one for the Stags, limited to seven — three in the final eight innings — by Johnson.

The win boosted the Pirates to 6-2 while Fairfield slips to 1-1.

The two teams met again today at 3 p.m., with Purdue coming in Wednesday for another 3 p.m. game.

Firing Home

East Carolina pitcher Winfred Johnson fires a pitch home during his complete game and third win of the season yesterday against Fairfield University. Johnson also went two for four, one of them a homer, to help the Pirates along. ECU hit a total of five homers in the game, two by Chris Bradberry in winning 10-2. Georgetown, #1 At Start, Finishes In The Same Spot

By The Associated Press

Georgetown, which was the No. 1 team in The Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll 17 weeks ago, finished as the No. 1 team in the final rankings.

The Hoyas, the top seed in the East region in this week's NCAA tournament, were the No. 1 team for all but five of those weeks as they fashioned a 30-2 record and captured the Big East postseason tournament.

Following the Hoyas, who received all 63 first-place votes from the nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters in Monday's poll, were the other three teams that received top seeding in the other regions.

The defending NCAA champions entered last year's tournament with a No. 2 ranking, behind North Carolina, which was eliminated in the regional semifinals by Indiana.

Michigan, the top seed in the Southeast Region, moved from third to second in the final poll, while St. John's, the No. 1 seed in the West, exchanged places with the Wolverines. Oklahoma, the top seed in the Midwest Region, held fourth from last week's poll.

Memphis State, Georgia Tech,

North Carolina, Louisiana Tech, Nevada-Las Vegas and Duke rounded out the final Top Ten.

The final Second Ten was Virginia Commonwealth, Illinois, Kansas, Loyola, Ill., Syracuse, North Carolina State, Texas Tech, Tulsa, Georgia and Louisiana State.

In addition to the Hoyas, who never fell below second during the season, eight other teams held a ranked position from the preseason poll through the final rankings.

St. John's, Oklahoma, Memphis State, Georgia Tech, Duke, Illinois, Kansas and Syracuse were the other teams to remain in the Top Twenty for the entire season.

North Carolina wasn't in the preseason poll, but the Tar Heels jumped into the rankings the next week and stayed there, reaching fifth.

Cremins Worries About A Letdown

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins is afraid his sixth-ranked Yellow Jackets may suffer a letdown in their opening round NCAA pairing with lightly regarded state rival Mercer after capturing the emotion-charged Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.

Tech, 24-7, took the ACC title Sunday by downing North Carolina 57-54 and was tabbed as the No. 2 seed in the NCAA East regional at Atlanta's Omni. Mercer, only 60 miles down Interstate 75 in Macon, won the Trans America Athletic Conference tourney and was seeded 15th.

The Yellow Jackets-Bears game will conclude four opening round games Friday. The winners will meet Sunday with those two winners advancing to the next round in Hartford, Conn.

Other opening round pairings Friday have Illinois, 24-8, meeting Northeastern, 22-8; Georgia, 21-8, vs. Wichita St., 18-12; and Syracuse, 21-8, vs. DePaul, 19-9.

"I think Mercer is sitting in a great position," Cremins said Monday. "They are right here in Georgia and they would like to prove to everyone that they are a really good team. They have a great player in Sam Mitchell and an outstanding supporting cast."

Mercer is led by 6-foot-7 senior Mitchell, 6-5 junior Earl Walker and 6-4 senior Melvin Randall. The three averaged 55.2 points and 20 rebounds this season. Mitchell, the school's all-time leading scorer, averaged 24.9 points and 10.8 rebounds.

"It will be another really tough test for us. The expectations for us will be high," Cremins said. "But the biggest thing is that we better not take Mercer lightly."

"We've got our work cut out for us, and we'd better be very careful," he said of the 22-8 Bears, who will be making their second NCAA appearance.

Tech, also in the NCAA for the second time, holds a 21-15 margin over Mercer but the two schools have not met since the 1974-75 season.

The Yellow Jackets are led by junior guard Mark Price, a second-team All-American who averaged 16.7 points during the season, and three other starters in double figures.

John Salley, a 7-foot forward, was next at 14.2 points followed by 6-4 guard Bruce Dalrymple at 13.1 and 6-11 center Yvon Joseph at 11.3.

Freshman forward Duane Ferrell, who averaged 9.8 points, suffered ligament damage to his knee in the ACC tournament, missed two games but may be available for limited duty against Mercer.

"He has a chance to play," said Tech spokesman Mike Finn. "We're re-evaluating the knee each day. He's on a rehabilitation program lifting weights. He says he thinks he can come back and play at least a few minutes Friday."

Mark Price Heads AP's 1985 All-ACC Selections

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

Georgia Tech guard Mark Price, the major motivator in the Yellow Jackets' rise to the top of the Atlantic Coast Conference, heads the list of players named to The Associated Press 1985 all-Atlantic Coast Conference basketball team announced today.

Joining Price on the first team are Maryland's Len Bias, North Carolina State's Lorenzo Charles, Johnny Dawkins of Duke and Brad Daugherty of North Carolina.

Price, Bias and Dawkins are second-team all-Americans. Charles and Daugherty received honorable mention.

On the second five are Kenny Green of Wake Forest, Kenny Smith of North Carolina, Mark Alarie of Duke, John Salley of Georgia Tech and Anthony "Spud" Webb of N.C. State.

Price's contributions on the court helped Coach Bobby Cremins lead Georgia Tech from the bottom of the ACC to the league's throne room, a climb which was culminated last Sunday when the Yellow Jackets topped North Carolina for the league title.

"I really don't like to single out one thing for our success this season," Cremins said. "But if I had to pick one ingredient for our record this year, it would have to be the play and leadership of Mark Price."

Price, a 6-foot junior from Enid, Okla., capped the 1985 season by scoring 50 points in the ACC tournament. His total included 20 straight free throws.

Bias, also a junior, enters the NCAA tournament as the ACC's leading scorer at 19.1 points per game. His rebounding and scoring helped Coach Lefty Driesell achieve his 500th coaching victory this year as well as a 23-11 record going into the national tournament chase.

The 6-7 Charles, a 240-pound senior from Brooklyn, N.Y., muscled his way to fourth place in the conference scoring race with a 17.8 average for the 20-9 Wolfpack. He is shooting 57.2 percent from the field and has led the Wolfpack in scoring in 18 of its 29 games.

Perhaps Charles had his best moment when he hit seven straight shots en route to an 18-point effort in the second half in a 70-66 victory over Duke at Cameron Indoor Stadium.

"Lorenzo Charles was incredible," Wolfpack Coach Jim Valvano said. "I'm almost speechless about the performance offensively that he put on against excellent defense."

Dawkins, the slender 6-2 guard from Washington, D.C., became Duke's all-time assist leader this year with 417. He is the league's second-leading scorer at 18.7 points per game.

"He's been as consistent and as versatile as any guard in the country this year," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "His points, assists and rebounds attest to that fact."

Daugherty, a 19-year old junior center from Black Mountain, N.C., has replaced Sam Perkins as the Tar Heel pivotman and produced a 17.8 scoring average, a league leading 9.6 rebounds per game and a 61.3 percent shooting average from the field.

He and Bias are the only two ACC performers who occupy top 10 positions in scoring, field goal and free throw percentage and rebounding.

"He's only beginning to touch what he can be," North Carolina Coach Dean Smith said. "He's got good moves inside, but he's still not as aggressive as he will be."

On the second team, Salley continues his assault on the Georgia Tech record book and was another contributor to Georgia Tech's first trip to the NCAA since 1960 and only the second in school history. He scored 38 points in the tournament.

Green was not only a catalyst for Coach Carl Tacy, he was an iron man for the Demon Deacons, who are headed for the National Invitation Tournament. The 6-7 Floridian is averaging 17.7 points per game and played 554 minutes out of a possible 570.

Alarie started the season as the ACC's leading scorer, and while his scoring pace slackened, his shooting eye remained sharp. The Arizona native is the ACC's third best field goal shooter at 59 percent.

The speedy Smith, nicknamed "The Jet" in high school, is second in free throw percentage at 87.4 percent and is scoring more than 12 points per game. Webb, the junior college transfer who gets the Wolfpack offense moving, is averaging 9.9 points per game, including 20 points in a key late-season victory over North Carolina which helped guide the Wolfpack into a tie for first place in the regular season.

Three ACC Players Second Team

NEW YORK (AP) — Xavier McDaniel of Wichita State, who could become the first player to lead Division I players in both scoring and rebounding, already holds a distinction among those selected to The Associated Press' All-America basketball team.

McDaniel, a 6-foot-7 senior, wasn't a unanimous choice in the voting released Monday. All the others were — Georgetown's Patrick Ewing, Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale, St. John's Chris Mullin and Memphis State's Keith Lee.

Heading into this week's NCAA tournament, McDaniel was tied for the scoring lead with Loyola of Chicago's Alfredrick Hughes. Each has a scoring average of 27.4 points. McDaniel also is averaging 15 rebounds a game.

McDaniel led Wichita State to the Missouri Valley Conference tournament title in an upset over Tulsa, earning the Shockers an automatic NCAA berth. McDaniel has shot 56 percent from the field this season.

"It's a great honor," said McDaniel in Wichita, Kan. "I always got honorable mention wherever I played. But I wouldn't have been disappointed if I didn't make it."

As far as his shooting goes, McDaniel said he likes to work the offensive boards because of his great leaping ability. He also said he gets the green light from Coach Gene Smithson often, but said, "If I scored 30 points and had one assist and we lost, I'd be upset. I like to give the ball up, too."

"Even when I'm on the fast break, three on one and I'm in the middle, nine times out of ten, I'm going to pass it to one of the wing guys."

Ewing, Tisdale and Mullin helped the United States win the Olympic gold medal team last summer, an opportunity McDaniel missed when he was passed over on the invitation list. Their teams are top-seeded for the NCAA playoffs along with Michigan.

Ewing, an intimidating 7-foot, 240-pound senior center who no doubt will be the No. 1 draft choice in the National Basketball Association draft, led the defending NCAA champions to a 30-2 record, including the Big East Conference tournament. He averaged 14.6 points, 9.7 rebounds and blocked 121 shots.

He hit 64 percent of his shots from the field this season, boosting his career total to 2,096 points. He also grabbed 1,277 rebounds and blocked 479 shots in four seasons.

Tisdale, a 6-9 junior center, paced Oklahoma to a 28-5 record this season, including the Big Eight Conference regular season and tournament crowns. Despite being double- and triple-teamed, he averaged 25.5 points on 57 percent field goal shooting and a 10.2 rebound average. He became the top scorer in Big Eight history in running his career total to 2,570 points.

Tisdale's highest scoring game this season was 55 points against Southwestern (Texas). Whether he makes himself available for the NBA draft this year or next, he is expected to be among the stop choices.

Mullin, a 6-6 senior guard, guided St. John's, the Big East regular season winner, past Georgetown 66-65 last January will his scoring and passing ability. He scored 25 points against the Hoyas in the Big East tourney title game but their defense hampered his passing game, holding him to one assist.

With a soft left-handed jump shot and accurate foul line proficiency (82 percent this season), he became the Redmen's leading career scorer this season with 2,350 points. He averaged 19.5 points with 52 percent field goal shooting and led the Redmen to a 27-3 record.

Lee became the leading scorer and rebounder in Memphis State history this season. The slender 6-10 senior averaged 20.4 points and 9.6 rebounds in leading the Tigers to the Metro Conference titles, regular season and tournament, with a 27-3 mark.

Lee, a 50 percent shooter from the field this season, has poured in 2,331 points and grabbed 1,301 rebounds in his career.

Len Bias of Maryland, Kenny Walker of Kentucky, Jon Koncak of Southern Methodist, Johnny Dawkins of Duke and Mark Price of Georgia Tech were selected to the second team.

A.C. Green of Oregon State, Roy Tarpley of Michigan, Dwayne "Pearl" Washington of Syracuse, Sam Vincent of Michigan State and Hughes made up the third team.

The All-Americans were chosen by a 10-member panel of AP and newspaper sports writers without regard to position. Players drew five points for a first-team selection, three points for second and one point for third. The individual balloting was not released.

Who's The Cinderella Team?

By The Associated Press
It seems to happen every year. Who will it be this time?

Which unheralded school will leap into the national limelight by upsetting some college basketball giant early in the NCAA tournament?

"I don't want to sound flip, but there's always the chance anything can happen," said Lehigh Coach Tom Schneider, whose team takes on No. 1 Georgetown in an East Regional game Thursday.

"We'll have trouble matching up," Mercer Coach Bill Bibb said, looking ahead to his team's first-round game against No. 6 Georgia Tech in the East Regional.

"I don't imagine our players know too much about Middle Tennessee State," said Dean Smith, coach of No. 7 North Carolina, preparing to face the Blue Raiders in the Southeast Regional Thursday. "Middle Tennessee is certainly capable."

Last year, Dayton provided the shock — twice. The unranked Flyers knocked off No. 7 Oklahoma and then tripped No. 15 Washington.

The previous season, Utah surprised No. 7 UCLA. The year before, it was Middle Tennessee State's turn, when it toppled No. 15 Kentucky.

But perhaps the biggest upset in recent NCAA tournament history came during the 1980-81 season.

DePaul, led by All-American Mark Aguirre and Terry Cummings, sailed through the regular season with a 27-1 record and was ranked No. 1 in the nation. The Blue Demons were favored to win the NCAA tournament going into their first game, against lightly regarded St. Joseph's, Pa.

St. Joe's had a 22-7 record, but not many people gave the Hawks much of a chance against powerful DePaul.

Yet at 3:30 p.m. on March 14, 1981, in the Midwest Regional at Dayton, Ohio, the unexpected happened: in the hectic last seconds, John Smith, a hard-working forward, wound up all alone under the basket for a layup at the buzzer that gave St. Joe's a stunning 49-48 victory.

"When you go into a game like that, you have to believe you can win. You have to believe you that you have some plan of attack that is going to offset their artillery," Smith, now a sporting-goods salesman in southern New Jersey, said Monday night.

"Oh, we knew we could win that game," he said. "But we knew we had to play hard and play together. Our plan was to control the tempo, and that's what we did."

Smith said his teammates figured they were in a no-lose situation.

"Not that many teams get a chance to play the No. 1 team in the country, especially in a prestigious event like the NCAA tournament," he said. "We had an even greater opportunity to look good if we fared well, maybe if we came within a few points of them."

"Even if we didn't go home with the 'W,' it would've been like a moral victory. But we were thinking about winning the game."

Smith had some advice for the teams that are big underdogs going into first-round NCAA games this week — teams like Lehigh, rated 31 points under Georgetown; Southern, a 20-point underdog to St. John's; and North Carolina A&T, listed as 23 points under No. 4 Oklahoma.

"Any team is susceptible to losing," he said. "You concentrate on what you do best, and about how you can attack their weak points."

"You have to go into a game like that thinking, 'yes, we respect you, but we're pretty good, too.' You don't want to think that Patrick Ewing is going to be blocking all of your shots, even if he might do that. If you start thinking that way, you've already lost."

That's just the way Schneider is approaching Lehigh's game with the top-rated Hoyas, owners of a 30-2 record.

"I'm more concerned with executing the things we want to do than with what Georgetown does," he said. "We've played some good teams in the last two years — Arizona State, Marquette, Notre Dame — so I don't think our players will be awed."

Lehigh, which has a 12-18 record but earned its first NCAA appearance by winning the East Coast Conference tournament, will find trouble in the middle, where 6-foot-7 center Don Henderson will be matched against 7-foot, three-time All-American Ewing.

"I certainly don't feel we can challenge him a whole lot," said Schneider.

Tom Green finds himself in position similar to Schneider. Green is the second-year coach at Fairleigh Dickinson University, which faces

No. 2 Michigan, 25-3, in the Southeast Regional on Friday.

When he first heard about the pairing with Michigan, Green said, "I felt like I was in the middle of the Lincoln Tunnel during rush hour — I panicked."

"Obviously, no one has stopped them this year," he said, "and we'll be looking for something to slow them down."

Knights Down Rose Golfers

WHITAKERS — Northern Nash High School rolled around Hickory Meadows Golf Course yesterday with a two-over par 290 score, easily outdistancing Rose High School.

It was the opening match of the season for the Ramblers.

Northern was led by Russ Buchanan with a one-under-par 71, while Ivan Street was at even par 72. Brian Puckett recorded a 73 while Hewitt Poland had a 74.

Rose finished the day with a 313 team score. David Lee, Simon Moye and Mike Herrin each came in with a 78 while Tee Davis had 79.

Rose returns to action on Thursday traveling to New Bern.

Krause Takes Junior Title

CHARLOTTE — Jason Krause of Greenville, 10, captured the Juniors 12 and under racquetball title at the American Amateur Racquetball Association's State Championship.

The event was held in Charlotte over the weekend. Krause had previously won the junior 10 and under and was ranked eighth in the nation in the juniors 10 and under following last year's nationals in Davidson, Michigan.

Patriots Top Coastal Field

MOREHEAD CITY — Hosting West Carteret High School took first place as four Coastal Conference golf teams opened their 1985 season yesterday.

West Carteret finished the 18 hole match with a team total of 344, four strokes ahead of second place Havelock, in with a 348. White Oak took third place with 361, while Conley trailed with a 375.

Coach J.C. Thomas said the Conley total was ten strokes better than any Conley team had scored in the past.

Steve Collins of West Carteret was medalist for the day with a 79, while Hall Dunn led Conley with an 89.

Conley will play host to the other three teams next Monday at Ayden Golf and Country Club.

Colson, Lobos Set Sights On Aggies

By The Associated Press

Preoccupied by rumors of a job change and the flu, Gary Colson has had his mind on just about everything but the game at hand in recent days.

But tonight, the New Mexico basketball coach has his sights set only on Texas A&M.

"Shelby Metcalf is a veteran coach and he'll bring his club in here relaxed," Colson said as he prepared his Lobos for the Aggies in the opening game of the National Invitation Tournament at Albuquerque, N.M.

It is the only game scheduled tonight in the NIT, which continues Wednesday night with Canisius at Nebraska. The remaining 14 first-round games will be played the following two nights at sites around the country, 10 of them on Thursday night.

Colson spent most of the past few days denying rumors that he would replace veteran Marv Harshman at Washington, calling it "fictitious."

He has also been laid low by the flu of late.

"It hasn't been an easy couple of days for me," said Colson, whose Lobos were beaten over the weekend by San Diego State in the Western Athletic Conference tournament.

Despite the loss in the WAC tourney, Colson called the season "tremendous. We lost all our starters and still got an NIT bid this year."

The Lobos had a 24-10 record last season before losing in the first round of the NIT last year. This year, they have fashioned an 18-12 record with a virtually new team and gave top-ranked Georgetown a tremendous battle earlier this season at their home court called "The Pit" before losing by eight points.

Colson feels his team will have to rebound better than they have to beat Texas A&M.

"Their strength is offensive rebounding," Colson said of the Aggies. "We're not a very good rebounding team ourselves. We'll just have to block out and work harder."

The Aggies have a 19-10 record following their loss to Texas Tech in the semifinals of the Southwest Conference tournament.

Meanwhile, Nebraska practiced twice Monday because the Cornhuskers hadn't worked out since last Tuesday's Big Eight Conference loss at Kansas.

"They are going to be very difficult to beat," Nebraska Coach Moe Iba said of Canisius, a school located in Buffalo, N.Y. "They change up their defenses, they have a strong inside game and a quick outside game. I'm a little concerned about our practice time. But it goes both ways. Canisius hadn't worked out since last week, either."

Nebraska players said they were thrilled to get a bid to the NIT, in light of their 15-13 record. It will be the Huskers' third straight trip to the NIT.

"We've always given the NIT a good game," said center Dave Hoppert. "We've never gone out and got blown out . . . and I think that helped us get in."

Nebraska got an early scouting report on Canisius, with a little help from intrastate rival Creighton.

Creighton assistant coach Rick Colura called Iba on Monday and offered him a videotape of Canisius' game earlier this season against Dayton. Colura had used the tape to prepare for Creighton's game last month against Dayton.

"We were very fortunate to get it," Iba said. "It was a very nice thing for him (Colura) and Creighton to do."

Creighton, ironically, was shut out of the NIT field despite winning 20 games.

Fordham is the only New York-area team in what used to be strictly a New York show before switching to a road-show format several years ago. But the Rams begin on the road, playing Friday night at Richmond.

Fordham will be making its fifth appearance in the NIT and the bid wasn't exactly unexpected.

"We've been working out for the past two days with the striped ball and a shot clock. We're ready," Fordham Coach Tom Penders said. "I didn't really expect to get an NCAA bid."

ACC Commissioner Pleased With Post-Season Tourneys

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.

AP Sports Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — With the competition among Atlantic Coast Conference basketball teams in recent years, league Commissioner Bob James said he figured all eight ACC squads would be picked for post-season play for the first time ever.

"We could sort of see this coming along with the competition that we were having in our games in the last several years," James said Monday in a telephone interview.

"This is the goal I think conferences strive for, to get the balance that we had this year," he said.

Leading the conference's contingent into the NCAA tournament is ACC champion Georgia Tech, which downed North Carolina 57-54 in the league tournament finals Sunday. The Yellow Jackets have the added luxury of staying at home as they will meet Mercer in a first-round game in the East Regional in Atlanta.

Also heading to the NCAA are North Carolina, Maryland, Duke and North Carolina State.

After the NCAA selections were announced, the National Invitation Tournament tapped Clemson, Wake Forest and Virginia.

Last season, seven league teams were involved in post-season play and Virginia reached the Final Four in Seattle before losing to Houston. Five teams went beyond the ACC tournament in 1983 and N.C. State was crowned national champion. Six teams got

Writers Continue Strike

LOS ANGELES (AP) — West Coast members of the Writers Guild of America voted today to suspend contract ratification and continue for a second week a strike against film and television producers, a union spokesman said.

The announcement followed a stormy session by guild members who began voting at the Hollywood Palladium after East Coast members cast ballots in New York City on Monday night.

"The writers' strike will continue for an additional week," union publicist Joe Sutton said today. "A motion was brought from the floor to delay the vote, and there will be a meeting a week from tonight, and a vote will be taken at that time."

Sutton said he was told of the action by WGA negotiator Alan Mannings.

The results of the vote by 182 guild members on the East Coast had not been released to avoid interfering with the vote on the West Coast, said a union spokeswoman in New York, speaking on condition of anonymity. Sutton said the pact was overwhelmingly approved in New York.

Union spokesmen and representatives of the Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers had been confident members would approve the tentative agreement reached Friday after nearly 17 hours of bargaining.

Television producers had prepared to resume shooting of the top-rated "Hill Street Blues" and "The Cosby Show," which were left in limbo by the strike, which enters its eighth day today.

Both sides returned to the bargaining table with a federal mediator on Thursday after talks broke off March 1. The old contract expired Feb. 28.

The guild and the alliance refused to release details of the agreement until WGA members voted.

But a union member who would not be identified by name said the guild agreed to accept the producers' terms on the key issue of videocassette percentages. Under those terms, writers will receive a percentage of the producers' gross on sales, instead of a percentage of the much higher distributors' gross.

According to a contract summary obtained by The Associated Press, the tentative pact would provide increases totaling 19.7 percent in writers' fees over three years.

The writers would receive a 6 percent increase, effective March 1, another 6 percent in the second year and a 6½ percent increase in the third year, according to the summary.

Fees for movies longer than two hours and for movies of the week would increase 30 percent over three years, rising by 7.5 percent in the first year, 7 percent in the second year and 13 percent in the third year, according to the summary.

Under the old contract, writers received $14,782 for a half-hour sitcom, which includes the residuals for one rerun. For a two-hour movie, they received $44,566, including a residual for a prime time rerun.

The writers' return would allow networks to go ahead with episodes endangered by the strike.

The last writers' strike lasted 13 weeks in 1981. It followed a 67-day actors' strike in 1980, and the combined effect of the two strikes set television scheduling back months.

Stars' Record For Ethiopia Becomes Hot-Selling Item

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We Are the World," a recording by 46 pop artists to benefit African famine victims, is a hot-selling single less than a week after 1 million copies were released nationwide, record dealers say.

The video version of the song written by superstars Michael Jackson and Lionel Richie made its debut Monday night on MTV.

The single, a veritable Who's Who of the American music industry recorded after the American Music Awards in January, was selling off the racks in record stores and getting heavy airtime on radio stations.

It was released in New York on Wednesday and nationally on Thursday.

At the Hollywood Tower Records on Sunset Boulevard, clerk Jack Donaldson said Monday night that "We Are the World" is "the most-demanded single right now."

"We're sold out at the moment," he said, adding that about 1,000 copies were delivered Thursday and were gone by Saturday noon.

"Everybody wants it." At the Warehouse record store in Santa Monica, clerk Tami Graham said the single is selling "pretty good, definitely. We just got another 200 copies in. We went through the first 100 in two days." A spokeswoman at KRTH-FM radio said the station has been getting "a lot of calls, too, to send away for the sweatshirts" bearing the song name.

At WPLJ-FM in New York, program director Larry Berger said "There been a tremendous amount of curiosity" in the record. "It's become a trivia game with audiences asking who was that, who was that?"

"This is one of those cases that no matter how much they press, it's never enough," said Jim Hale, a buyer for Tower Records in New York. Tower's initial allotment of 600 arrived Thursday and was sold out by Friday night.

One Sam Goody outlet in Manhattan had 200 copies, and they were gone within an hour and a half, according to salesman Allan Lee.

According to CBS Records, nearly 1 million copies of the single were shipped nationwide to stores late last week, but no sales figures were available Monday. All proceeds go to African hunger relief.

MTV's world premiere broadcast of the music video Monday night ended the guessing game about the artists singing solos on "We Are the World."

Billy Joel, one of the 46 superstar singers on the record, introduced the video from the MTV studios. At the end of the video, which was a straight studio rendition of the artists recording the song, MTV punched up a graphic that showed an address for contributions.

3,800 MILES PER GALLON — Charles Ramsey of Dunkirk, Ind., stands behind his car, which gets 3,800 miles on a gallon of gasoline, after it won an award at the Design Engineering Show in Chicago. Chicago Show Features World's Exotic Inventions

By DEBRA HALE
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — A 64-pound car that gets 3,803 miles per gallon is "not practical for regular use," its inventor says. Then again, neither is "the world's fastest door," a $7,000 contraption that slams shut in 1.7 seconds.

For the more practical-minded, however, the world of engineering exotica also offers the experimental electric bandage, designed to speed healing, and a computerized alarm system that monitors the living habits of the elderly or infirm.

These and thousands of other technological marvels have been brought together under one roof at the National Plant Engineering and Maintenance Show and the National Design Engineering Show, which run through Thursday at the McCormick Place exhibition hall.

Design News magazine included the car, the bandage and the alarm in its exhibit of "the 10 best technical ideas of last year."

The energy-efficient car, an aerodynamic, three-wheeler dubbed the UFO2, weighs less than the small woman around whose body it was custom-built.

The vehicle is so small that when it won a mileage marathon, the woman drove without her shoes to save 35 to 40 miles per gallon.

It's "not practical for regular use," conceded John Michalowicz, marketing manager for Prime Computer Inc. of Natick, Mass.

Prime and Ford Motor Co. designed the car, using Prime's computerized design system. Its top speed is about 25 mph.

The computerized alarm is being test-marketed in 50 homes by Medical Monitoring Systems Inc. of Madison,

Wis. Lars Soderholm, editorial director of Design News, calls it "a computer acting as a companion to older people."

A health-care facility feeds the computer with information to remind a person of such things as when to take medicine, said Don Warren, president of Medical Monitoring. Sensors in the home help the computer learn a daily routine — the approximate time a person flushes the toilet each morning, for example.

"If you fail to perform that activity ... it will get suspicious," Warren said. The computer then sounds an alarm and asks if everything is OK. If the person does not respond properly within 20 seconds, the computer telephones for help.

For people who don't take their medicine after a first alarm-reminder, the computer turns lights, televisions or other household items on and off. If they still don't act, help is summoned.

To be marketed this summer, the device can be leased for $35 a month.

The electric bandage is being developed in Louisiana to speed healing by up to 30 percent. Intended for open wounds, it has a battery pack connected to a nylon gauze impregnated with silver oxide.

A low current stimulates blood flow while the release of silver ions helps kill bacteria, Soderholm said. "This is another way in which technology enters your life — through a bandage."

What is seen as the "world's fastest door" probably won't be seen in too many suburban split-level homes. It is designed for warehouses and other commercial uses.

A slam of the speedy 8- by 10-foot plastic fabric door costs $7,000 — motors, sensors and installation included.

Government Accuses D.C. Of Using Discrimination

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal prosecutors sued the District of Columbia Fire Department for promotion practices that allegedly discriminate against whites in favor of minorities.

The suit, filed Monday by the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division, is the latest attempt by the Reagan administration to force affirmative action programs to comply with a June 1984 Supreme Court decision.

The high court had ruled that a decision by Memphis, Tenn., officials to lay off white firefighters in order to protect jobs held by less senior blacks violated the constitutional rights of the whites.

In the D.C. firefighters case, the department said the plan provides that in appointing sergeants, lieutenants and captains "a preference be given to certain candidates because of their race. In particular, the affirmative action plan requires racially based preferences even though the promotional procedures used by (the district) have been determined not to have adverse impact and to be valid."

The administration's complaint said the city's actions "constitute a pattern and practice of resistance to the full enjoyment of the right of all applicants for employment and candidates for promotion to equal employment opportunities within the District of Columbia Fire Department."

However, Mayor Marion Barry Jr. defended the department's program, saying it represented "justice and equity."

"We are confident that justice will prevail and that the fire department affirmative plan will be upheld," Barry said in a statement.

A hearing on the suit and two related ones will be held today before U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey.

The D.C. Fire Department has 780 white officers and 494 black officers. Blacks make up about 64 percent of the district's population.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds has maintained that the so-called Stotts case in Memphis had the effect of limiting the authority of courts and governmental jurisdictions to impose mandatory job-hiring quotas for minorities.

The Justice Department has filed briefs in several cases in which it seeks modifications of existing court-ordered affirmative action plans.

FORECAST FOR WED., MARCH 13, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is no time to take chances and especially where anyone in a position of authority is concerned, so ask no favors and take care of your health. Afternoon and evening are favored.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A private worry could deter you from handling a new situation that could prove lucrative, if you permit.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Both a private anxiety and a friend can cause confusion in the morning, but later you can enjoy the social side of life.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) An argument between a partner and a high official could prove worrisome in the morning, but later you handle business admirably.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You may have to handle some outside affair in the morning which could interfere with your duties.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Schedule your hours wisely so that you can handle both business and social affairs well. Plan on a romantic evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) A family tie and one in business do not agree, so be tactful and keep them apart, but keep promises to both wisely.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Don't leave your work and go off on a spree which could prove costly. You can have a good time with friends later in the day.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't spend lavishly for amusement in the morning and later you can enjoy yourself inexpensively. Cut down on expenses.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do not commit yourself to anything in the morning that could cripple you later. Save the fun for the evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You have a chance to get ahead fast in the morning if you do not fuss over what cannot be helped.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get the cooperation of friends for the big goals you have in mind and they can be successful. Plan the future intelligently.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) The morning is not good for getting a favor from a bigwig, but after lunch, you get your way easily.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will need good food and plenty of rest during adolescence to become strong and healthy. Slant the education along lines of imports and exports, and add foreign languages to the curriculum. Stress religious training.

Coast Guard On Way To Burning Ship

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Fire spread to the pilothouse of a Honduran freighter that remained afloat today, foundering in the Gulf of Mexico as its 21 crewmen waited in lifeboats for help to arrive, Coast Guard officials said.

The 350-foot Tepora burst into flames belowdecks late Monday morning about 450 miles south of New Orleans and developed a gash in its hull above the waterline, the Coast Guard said.

The crew abandoned ship in two lifeboats about noon without radioing for help, the Coast Guard said. No injuries were reported.

"The pilothouse of the vessel is on fire as of now," Lt. Daniel Cronin said just before midnight. "The vessel is still listing and still afloat."

A passing 68-foot shrimp boat, too small to board the crew, arrived alongside the two lifeboats Monday night and waited through the night for the arrival of the Coast Guard cutter Dependable, Cronin said.

A Spanish tanker that had changed course to rendezvous with the lifeboats continued on its way after the shrimp boat out of Tarpon Springs, Fla., reached the crewmen, he said.

The Coast Guard said first word of the accident came from a commercial airliner whose crew noticed a cloud of smoke over the Gulf and reported it to the Federal Aviation Administration in Houston.

The Coast Guard then dispatched the airplane that found the lifeboats, he said. Only after the plane then dropped a radio to one of the lifeboats was the Coast Guard able to learn there were no injuries, a spokesman said.

The spokesman also quoted the ship's captain as saying he was not aware of hitting anything that might have gashed his vessel's hull.

"The master doesn't speak English very well, so poor communications have so far prevented us from learning about the cause of the accident," Cronin said.

Pastor May Be Defrocked

PITTSBURGH (AP) — No matter what a Lutheran disciplinary board decides, a dissident mill-town pastor who faces being defrocked says his anti-corporate ministry remains valid and church officials "will not stop me."

The 15-member board on Monday began considering the case of the Rev. D. Douglas Roth, who boycotted part of the session. It was to make a recommendation today, said Charles Austin, a spokesman for the Lutheran Church in America.

Roth, 33, who was fired in October for dividing his blue-collar congregation at Trinity Lutheran Church in Clairton, refused to return to the hearing after lunch Monday after he was barred from tape-recording it.

"I will not be part of a fixed hearing where the truth will not come out," he told about 50 supporters and reporters outside St. John's Lutheran Church in suburban Highland.

The panel could recommend that Bishop Kenneth May, head of the regional synod, take no action or that Roth be reprimanded or defrocked for disobeying May's order that he step down from his pastorate.

"It becomes more and more obvious this decision has already been made," Roth said Monday. "They will not stop me. Regardless of today, the ministry goes on. It's valid."

May fired Roth after about half of Trinity Lutheran's 145-member congregation objected to the pastor's work with militant religious and labor groups seeking relief for unemployed people.

Roth accuses U.S. Steel Corp., Mellon Bank and Dravo

Corp. of throwing thousands of blue-collar employees out of work and abandoning them.

When a court order backed up the firing, Roth barricaded himself inside the church, where he was arrested in mid-November. He was held in contempt of court, and concluded a 112-day jail term March 4.

"This is really a matter of the church disciplining itself and taking care of its own clergy," Austin said. "When a pastor signs on, he knows from the start to subject himself to the constitution of the LCA and of the synod."

Roth was not allowed to bring an attorney into the hearing. He said the 90-minute morning session was taken up by his request to be allowed to make an audio or written record.

May said records are not kept at disciplinary hearings to protect ministers found innocent of charges. He said he appointed the Rev. Donald Zundel of Pittsburgh to stand in for Roth at the hearing.

Roth said he would return to his Clairton church Sunday. The church has been closed since Jan. 4, when deputies arrested Nadine Roth and supporters who were occupying it. Roth conducted a service on the church lawn last Sunday.

May, who testified at the hearing, stood outside in a cold rain for more than an hour waiting to be called. He ignored hecklers among Roth's supporters, saying that any replies "would be jumped on and misconstrued."

In the church's only previous disciplinary hearing for a minister, the Rev. John E. Bergstrasser of Royersford was defrocked for leading a faction in a break from the national church, May said.

In conjunction with CBS Software, in the coming year we intend to bring two new products onto the market, including a program that will bid and play random hands.

This hand is from the award-winning program. After a normal auction you reach an excellent contract of four hearts. West leads the queen of diamonds, East overtakes with the king, cashes the ace and continues with a third diamond. Plan the play.

There are two types of player that age us prematurely—those who see no danger anywhere, and those who perceive a hazard in everything, even where none exists. The former blithely ruffs high, then finds that, because of the 4-0 trump split, he eventually has to lose a trump trick and a club for down one.

The latter at least has a chance to come out on top on this hand. If he foresees the possibility of a 4-0 trump division, he should realize that ruffing, either high or low, will prove fatal—in the one case because of a trump promotion; in the other because of an overruff.

Once you realize where the danger lurks, the cure should be easy to spot. Discard a club, which is a loser anyway, on the third diamond. Now no matter what the defenders do, you can win the next trick (you would ruff a fourth diamond on the table, if necessary), draw trumps and claim your contract.

Purge Ordered

KHARTOUM, Sudan (AP) — President Gaafar Nimeiri, facing a rebellion in southern Sudan and widespread discontent over the economy, has purged 11 members of an Islamic group from leading government posts.

The official Sudan News Agency SUNA said Nimeiri fired foreign policy adviser Hassan Abdullah Turabi, leader of the fundamentalist Moslem Brotherhood, and 10 other members of the group.

The purge came following rumors of widespread arrests of brotherhood figures. SUNA did not comment on the rumors.
