Tar River Name Change Passes House

RALEIGH — The North Carolina House of Representatives Tuesday approved a bill that would cut 1.8 miles off the Tar River by changing the name of the river, between the Pitt-Beaufort County line and the U.S. 17 highway bridge at Washington, to the Pamlico.

If the Senate agrees, the Tar will be 1.8 miles shorter and the Pamlico 1.8 miles longer, and all of the city of Washington — now partly on the Tar and partly on the Pamlico — will be on the Pamlico River.

But before the senators have the opportunity to vote, the House bill will be referred to the Senate's local government or natural and economic resources committee, a Senate spokesman said this morning.

The Tar River, which originates in Person County and flows for 179 miles through Granville, Franklin, Nash, Edgecombe and Pitt counties, now ends at the U.S. 17 highway bridge at Washington, in Beaufort County. The Pamlico River then flows for 33 miles east of the bridge and empties the Tar-Pamlico water into Pamlico Sound.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, who introduced the name-change bill, said the change would simplify local references to the river and suggested that the county line seemed a more logical choice for the river boundary than a bridge.

Pitt Rep. Ed Warren said this morning that "there was not a lot of interest" expressed in the name-change measure. "Nobody called me about it," he said.

Warren said the bill passed the house with "four or five votes against" the measure.

Sen. Tom Taft said this morning that "I can find little enthusiasm for the concept of changing the names of historic landmarks and natural boundaries, as well as rivers and lakes.

"I vehemently opposed Representative Chapin's first bill, which included changing the name of the entire river to the Tar-Pamlico. I'm now trying to get some feel for whether there is any support for changing the name of the 1.8 miles in Beaufort County," Taft said.

According to Taft, "the only call I've had so far is from a representative of the Pamlico River Foundation who opposed the change."

Zoning Panel Turns Down Carolina Dairy Expansion

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission voted Tuesday to recommend denial of a request to rezone property located behind Carolina Dairy Products to allow expansion of the Greenville industry. The proposal now advances to the City Council along with the commission's recommendation for denial.

The request, brought by Tommy Edwards, involved proposals to rezone an .87-acre portion of a 2.23-acre parcel, fronting Millbrook Street to office and institutional, and to rezone the remaining 1.36 acres of the tract to highway commercial. The acreage is currently zoned to allow high density residential development.

Saying the request was a compromise, Charles Hardee, legal representative for Edwards, said zoning the .87-acre portion of the property fronting Millbrook Street would be the best alternative for adjacent property owners. A request to rezone the entire tract highway commercial was continued at the commission's February meeting upon Edwards' request after it became apparent area home owners objected to re-zoning the entire parcel highway commercial.

Owners of single family residences fronting Millbrook Street objected to both Tuesday night's and the previous rezoning proposals, because such action would affect the quality of their lives, legal representative Mickey Herrin told commissioners Tuesday night.

According to Herrin, residents were concerned about an "annoying ammonia odor" emanating from the existing plant and a possible increase in the problem if facility expansion were allowed, as well as potential traffic problem increases and possible escalation of noise generated by refrigeration units. Following his presentation, Herrin handed the commission a petition signed by 87 city residents opposing the rezoning proposal.

Lewis Baker, a resident of Millbrook Street and former 13-year employee of Carolina Dairy, said he was opposed to the rezoning because of the "very real" possibility of an ammonia leak at the plant. Saying leakage was a matter of when and not if, Baker said he was opposed to any expansion that would endanger the community.

Edwards, in rebuttal comments, told the commission his company had been working to improve traffic flow over the years and that he had "a great deal of respect for ammonia." He said new equipment that would be brought in, in the event the rezoning request was approved by

Water Triggered Indian Gas Leak

DANBURY, Conn. (AP) — An unusually large amount of water contaminated a storage tank and triggered a chemical reaction that released the methyl isocyanate gas which killed more than people 2,000 at Union Carbide Corp.'s plant in Bhopal, India, the company said today.

Analysis of residue in the tank and laboratory experiments indicated that 120 to 240 gallons of water reacted with the gas and higher than normal levels of chloroform to produce temperatures up to 392 degrees Fahrenheit and pressure to an average of 180 pounds per square inch, said Ronald Van Mynen, leader of Carbide's investigative team.

The tank normally operates under pressure of from 2 psi to 20 psi, said Van Mynen, corporate director of occupational health and personnel safety. The reaction corroded the inside of the stainless steel tank and apparently burst a relief valve, releasing the MIC.

Although the company's report did not try to assess blame for the accident, Carbide Chairman Warren Anderson said at a news conference that operations at the plant were "not in compliance with standard operating procedure" at the time of the leak.

Union Carbide is being sued for billions of dollars in connection with the Dec. 3 Bhopal leak, considered one of the worst industrial accidents in history.

Anderson said Carbide has instituted corporate-wide changes since the leak, including intensified sampling procedures, training and retraining sessions, process reviews and administrative and physical changes, along with increased safety audits at overseas and domestic plants.

Juvenile Center Opens

The Pitt Regional Juvenile Service Center opened Tuesday to house persons aged 15 and under from 23 northeastern counties of North Carolina who are awaiting trial.

Since July 1, 1984, no child can be kept in a county jail. The center was established temporarily at Dobbs Training School in Kinston until the center in Greenville could be completed, director Charles Hough said.

Most children stay at the center from 10 to 12 days and are given specialized educational instruction, counseling and an exercise program while they're here. The staff includes the director, two social workers, an educational specialist, a secretary, and nine youth service counselor-technicians who rotate around the clock every day to the week.

The children housed here are ones who have been arrested for having committed serious offenses against persons or property, those who have been arrested for violating probation, and sometimes those who have been located after being declared missing or runaway by their parents or guardians from anywhere in the nation.

There are usually about six children being served at any time, with about 20 different children being served in a month, Hough said.

Hough, a Martin County native, was a probation officer and court counselor for 16 years — 11 of those with juveniles — prior to becoming director of the program. He and his wife, a school guidance counselor, have recently moved to Greenville.

Small Business Unit Expands

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A second office of the local Small Business Center was dedicated today at the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's Fleming House. Established at Pitt Community College, the facility was set up "to help people in small business," according to Greenville businessman Jack Edwards, coordinator of the center.

"The mission of the center is to help people interested in going into business and to help businessmen with problems," Edwards said.

"The backbone of any community is small business — small business is the largest employer," he added.

"There is a very high failure rate among small businesses, and because of this, we feel we have a very important mission."

In addition to providing business information, the center will conduct seminars and workshops on business. Videotapes and films concerning small businesses will be available. The Small Business Center will work with the chamber and other local organizations, including the Regional Development Institute at East Carolina University.

The first Small Business Center in Pitt County was begun in December 1984 on the campus of Pitt Community College as one of 14 centers in North Carolina community colleges. The center is funded by the Community Colleges of North Carolina.

"Pitt County has a very large number of small businesses employing 50 or less people," said Dr. Charlie Russell, PCC president. "PCC's newly created Small Business Center enables the college to be in a strategic position to respond to educational needs" of the small businessmen.

"We are and will continue striving to serve the educational needs of current small businesses, as well as assisting prospective small business persons with general information about starting and maintaining successful businesses and other information counseling services," Russell added.

Russell said he was pleased that the chamber has made available to the Small Business Center one of its rooms in the chamber's Fleming House. "This will enable us to expand our opportunities for serving small businesses," he said.

Edwards said the center's office at Pitt Community College and the center at the Fleming House both will set up certain office hours, and conferences also will be available by appointment.

Pat's Pointers

By Pat Trexler

Here's proof positive that fashion can be a look and not a price. Just for the clicking of your needles and a few balls of cotton yarn, you can have this smash hit of a summer shell. The yarn is used double to achieve a tweedy effect — and to make for quick knitting.

It is an ideal project for the beginner — quick, easy and with a minimum of shaping required. Unabbreviated directions are written for small (8-10), medium (12-14) and large (16-18).

To obtain directions for knitting this Beginner's Delight Shell, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0317 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0317 by sending a check or money order for $14.50 for small or medium sizes or $17.50 for the large size to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and Knit-Cro-Sheen yarn in four colors. Please specify your choice of earth tones, blue tones or pastel stripes.

Dear Pat: My biggest problem in knitting is joining the shoulders on a sweater. Any help you can give will be greatly appreciated. — Carla C., Aurora, Colo.

Yours is a fairly common problem, Carla, with a couple of good solutions. I would recommend the first that I discuss here for the beginner and the second for the more accomplished knitter.

In most garments, you bind off the shoulders in stages, which often leaves a "stair-step" edge.

It is this jagged edge that causes the problem, since many knitters attempt to make the seam along the edges. Instead, hold the two pieces together with the wrong sides facing out and back stitch a seam, working inside the stair-step on a straight line. This one simple step will give you a smoother shoulder line.

Better yet, weave the shoulder sections together. The reason for the gradual bind-offs is to give you a shoulder section that slopes down from the neckline.

If you plan to weave the shoulder seams and want to have this slope, you will have to do it by using "short rows." To work a short row, you work to within a certain number of stitches at the end of a row, then turn and work back in the opposite direction, leaving unworked stitches at the end.

As an example, suppose you had 21 stitches on the needle and were told to bind off seven stitches at the beginning of each knit row three times for the left front shoulder.

Instead, on a purl row, purl 14 stitches, turn, slip a stitch and knit back to the neck edge. On the next row, purl seven stitches, turn, slip a stitch and knit back to the neck edge. To complete the shoulder shaping, purl once across all remaining stitches. Place the shoulder stitches on a stitch holder.

For the right front shoulder, work in the same manner, reversing the shaping — that is, you would knit where told to purl in the previous paragraph and purl when told to knit. The back shoulders would be worked in the same way, of course.

Now you are ready to weave the seams using the Kitchener stitch, place the stitches for one shoulder front on one needle and the stitches for the corresponding shoulder back on another. Hold the two needles close together with the wrong sides of each piece facing each other.

Thread the yarn that comes from the first stitch of the back needle into a tapestry needle.

Now, insert the tapestry needle into the first stitch of the front needle as if to knit. Pull the yarn through and drop the stitch off the front needle. Then pass the tapestry needle and yarn through the next stitch on the front needle as if to purl. Leave this stitch on the front needle.

Insert the tapestry needle into the first stitch on the back needle as if to purl; pull the yarn through and drop the stitch from the back needle. Then pass the tapestry needle and yarn through the next stitch on the back needle as if to knit and leave this stitch on the back needle.

Keep repeating the steps given in the last two paragraphs until all the stitches are joined, being careful to keep the weaving stitches at the same tension as your knitted stitches.

Patient Representative Hospital Program Started

A patient representative program designed to give patients a personal advocate in responding to their needs while hospitalized has been instituted at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

monstrating the hospital's responsiveness in seeing that the patient's needs are met. She works

The program is directed by Jo Twilley, a registered nurse at Pitt Memorial who has nearly 40 years of nursing experience in a variety of clinical environments. She sees her role as that of liaison between the hospital and its patients.

"I think I can bridge the gap by having first-hand knowledge of the patient's needs," said Twilley, who is recruiting two additional patient representatives. "It is very important that our patients be satisfied with what the hospital has to offer," she said, "because they are our consumers." It is important, she said, that the hospital recognizes the rights of its patients and seeks to protect them.

Twilley's job takes her to departments throughout the hospital — wherever patients' needs take her.

"Knowing the hospital as well as I do, I'm able to share with patients the services we have available and make recommendations on how to improve their stay in the hospital," said Twilley, employed at Pitt Memorial for more than 15 years.

Twilley believes that a patient representative can help a patient feel at ease in the hospital by answering questions, explaining routines and policies and de-

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler

Beautiful pictures can be a joy to use and can enhance a room if they are properly located and correctly hung.

Art principles should not be ignored when arranging pictures. There must be emphasis, harmony of line and shape, scale (or harmony of size), harmony of color and balance.

The current trend is to hang pictures in relation to furniture groupings. The pictures should be close enough to the furniture that they appear to belong together — seen as a unit, not separately. Don't hang pictures on just any empty wall with anything near them; they need furniture for support. A fireplace gives this support, too.

Keep the size of the picture or group of pictures in scale with the size of the furniture it accompanies. Large furniture calls for large pictures; small pieces require smaller pictures.

The shape of the picture should harmonize with the shape of the wall space on which it hangs and the shape of the furniture it accompanies. A broad picture is suited to a horizontal wall space and furniture. A vertical wall space needs a tall picture. The picture should also be in scale with the room and the wall space. A large room requires a massive wall hanging. But in a small room, such as the bathroom, or on a small wall area, keep the picture small.

Pictures should be hung so that the center or center of interest of the picture is at eye level. In most cases, this means the standing eye level of the average adult. However, if the picture will be viewed mainly while sitting, hang the picture low, as in the case of pictures over a desk.

Hang pictures in a child's room at his eye level rather than the adult's. If they are brought down, he can enjoy them more. As the child grows, you can raise the pictures.

Hang pictures in relation to architectural lines. If there is more than one picture in a room, all should form an even line at the top, bottom, or centers.

The height of furniture and the sizes of the pictures will determine which line is best. Grouped pictures of varying sizes should follow the line of the furniture above which they are hung. If the piece of furniture forms a straight line, keep the bottom of the frames on the same line; if the furniture creates an uneven line, it is better to hang pictures so the tops are on the same line.

The only time it is correct to stair-step pictures is when the follow a stairway. Even then, it should not be done if the stairway is in a living area. The diagonal line would attract the eye and carry it up and away from the conversation group.

Consider the background against which the picture will be seen. Plain walls are best because the design in the picture is seen clearly. It is difficult to hang pictures on patterned walls — the designs of the picture and wall tend to run together. Patterned walls must have either a wide mat around the picture or a very wide frame.

A general rule is to hang light pictures on light walls and dark pictures on dark walls. However, for balance, a dark picture looks better with dark furniture, and vice versa, regardless of wall shade.

Grouping pictures and other accessories is very popular. For information on how to group, call the Agricultural Extension Service at 752-2934 and ask for the brochure "Picture Placement."

Clothing prices have almost doubled (up 91 percent) since 1967, federal statistics show — but medical costs have increased 288 percent during that same period, says the Health Insurance Association of America.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Wife Gets Broken Heart For Valentine's

DEAR ABBY: I'm terribly upset because my husband forgot Valentine's Day. I used to drop subtle hints before my birthday, anniversary, etc., but it never did any good, so I started to come right out and ask him to please remember me. Even that didn't help.

The week before Valentine's Day I reminded him that I would just love a card, a rosebud or some cute earrings. I reminded him again the day before, but the next day when I gave him his Valentine's Day gift, he just stared at me stupidly and said, "Gee, I guess I should have gotten you something, huh?"

The same thing happens every birthday and anniversary. Last Mother's Day was my first (our baby is 6 months old), so the day before, I told my husband I'd like a card, breakfast in bed, or just being able to sleep in while he looked after the baby. I would have been thrilled with any one of these gifts, but I got nothing. Instead he went bowling.

I am so disappointed when he forgets. I end up crying myself to sleep. Do you have any suggestions?
HURT IN ALBANY, ORE.

DEAR HURT: Face it, you are married to a thoughtless, insensitive man. He doesn't forget —he cares nothing for sentiment, and refuses to put himself out to please you.

You can't change anyone but yourself, so accept these glaring deficiencies in the man you loved enough to marry. Expect nothing, and you'll not be disappointed. And concentrate on his good qualities—if you can find them.

DEAR ABBY: In response to "Seeing Reality," who suggested that only family members (no in-laws) be included in family portraits owing to the fact that divorce is epidemic nowadays:

We have a family friend who faced an expensive family portrait with an eye to the future. The portrait was to include the father and mother, their four daughters and a new son-in-law, seated in a garden.

The new son-in-law was strategically placed on the end. After the divorce (which was apparently anticipated), the son-in-law was easily brushed and oiled into a bush, and the expensive portrait now proudly hangs, showing the family as it is today.

FACING REALITY

DEAR FACING: That's what I call giving a new son-in-law the brush—literally.

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to "Mother of the Groom" was totally off-base. You said the stepmother should not have been in the receiving line at all.

Abby, in some cases, a stepparent most certainly should be in the receiving line. Some stepparents play an important role in the stepchild's life. Questions such as "How long has the stepfather been remarried?"

and "With whom do the children live?" were not answered in the letter. The relationship between the stepparent and the child or his or her new spouse must also be considered.

It's their wedding, and they should have a say in the matter.
STEEPARENT-TO-BE

DEAR STEEPARENT-TO-BE: I agree, the circumstances can make all the difference in the world. In this case, the parents of the groom had a bitter divorce, after which the father promptly married his girlfriend, who had been waiting in the wings for some time. These facts should have been included in the letter but were not.

In my eagerness to stay within the space allotted for my column, it's often necessary to cut the original letter to the bone. Or sometimes a local editor cuts a letter, eliminating some important facts.

In this case, it was I who cut the guts out of the letter, omitting some pertinent facts. Many readers wrote to complain. They were right.

No Good

Oh, gosh. The Legislature must be in session. The word from Raleigh is that a bill has been introduced which would knock 1.8 miles off the Tar River. It involves moving the line where the Tar becomes the Pamlico back to the Pitt-Beaufort line and the bill has gotten to the point of being approved by the House Natural and Economic Resources Committee. The bill was introduced by Rep. Howard B. Chapin of Beaufort County.

Briefly there was consideration of extending the name Tar to the point where the Pamlico becomes the Pamlico Sound. That idea was dropped, however, and the committee approved the bill to cut short the Tar.

The question arises, what possible good could the passage of such a bill bring about? The Tar has been flowing along for centuries with its name of probable Indian origins. For probably as long as Europeans have been in this area the name Tar has extended to its present point in Beaufort County.

Why not just leave it alone? The Tar is designated as such on maps. It is identified in land deeds and the name has served us well.

Our world is changing in a breathtaking way and we must learn and accept these changes. That, however, is all the more reason not to change things which don't need changing, and the Tar fits in that category.

Surely the Legislature has better things to do than to meddle in the names of Eastern North Carolina rivers. Textiles and tobacco are in trouble; we need better schools; more effective prisons and better law enforcement. Let's tackle these and other pressing problems and leave the Tar River alone.

Soaring

There was a time when a red tailed hawk would have been only casually observed. Wildlife was so plentiful that there was adequate game to suit human needs, and plenty more.

No more. Many species have virtually disappeared and man has turned his attention to protecting the remaining wildlife.

Thus it was more than a passing occasion when a red tailed hawk named Mercury was released in the River Park North last week. The hawk was found along the road suffering from a concussion and starvation. It was nursed back to health at the Carolina Raptor Rehabilitation Center in Charlotte and the local park was designated as an ideal spot to return the hawk to the wild.

The media was on hand for the event and Mercury obliged the cameramen by soaring into the skies.

The area now has one more healthy red tailed hawk and we can hope that the the breed will proliferate.

Does the fact that Washington has the most psychotherapists mean that there are more mentally deranged people here than anywhere else? The answer is probably yes.

Dr. Arnold Frisher, a noted psychiatrist who has been practicing in D.C. for 40 years, and only takes the toughest cases, maintains that something happens to people after they stay in Washington awhile.

He said, "To put it in professional terms, 50 percent are nuttier than fruitcakes."

"How do you account for it?" "Pressure, power and politics. Although most of them are normal people when they come here, it doesn't take long for them to lose all sense of reality. Let me give you an illustration. I have a patient who works for the office of Management and Budget. He makes $28,000 a year. Every time he comes to see me he says he has just chopped another billion dollars out of a government program. Then he bites his fingernails."

"Would that make him crazy?" "No. But on each visit he claims he's brought the money with him and wants me to put it in my safe so Congress can't get their mitts on it."

"It sounds like he's suffering from exhaustion."

"That or guilt," Dr. Frisher said. "Six months ago he took a wheelchair away from his 80-year-old mother because he said she wasn't entitled to it on Medicare."

"Why would he feel guilty about that?" I asked.

"She calls him every morning and tells him not to worry about her because his father has offered to carry her to the supermarket on his back."

"What other troubled patients do you see?"

"I have a senator who took $5 million from political action committees in the last election, but still believes he's his own man. Then there is a secretary of education who has a phobia about college kids, a U.S. Justice Department attorney for civil rights who loathes civil rights, a newspaper reporter who behaves like an animal, a lobbyist who claims to have 20 congressmen sewn up in his pocket, and a CIA official who has to continually wash his hands every time he testifies about Nicaragua."

"Is that it?"

"No, I have this high official in the White House who maintains he has a mandate to spend a trillion dollars on new weapons to keep the peace."

"That wouldn't make him gonzo. The White House did win 49 states."

"My patient doesn't claim he has a mandate from the people — he says he has one from God."

"Haven't you ever had patients who talk to God?"

"Yes, but I have never had one who told me God wanted him to spend a trillion dollars. That's manic."

"At the same time, the way things seem to be going, a trillion dollars isn't too much to invest for security on earth."

"My patient doesn't want to spend it on earth. He wants to send it in the sky."

"How is he going to do that?"

"He doesn't know. That is why he says he comes to me. He wants me to find the answer before people say he's flipped out."

"It sounds like a hopeless case. Why don't you fire him as a patient?" "Because I think I have the solution. If I could hook up a network of lasers to 10 hydrogen bombs and explode them just as the moon passed over the Soviet Union, I could create a nuclear winter which would negate a first-strike capability, and then the Russians would come to me and say, 'Ain't going to go to war no more, ain't going to go to war no more, ain't g-o-i-n-g to go to war no moorrrrrrr.'"

Gasohol Credit Hurting State

RALEIGH — Two years ago, the Legislature passed one of those bills that looked like it would help everyone and hurt no one: The assembly granted a 5-cent a gallon tax exemption on gasohol.

At the time, the tax credit appeared to accomplish a number of goals. Combined with other provisions of a major bill, it opened the possibility that a methanol plant would be built in North Carolina, thus creating jobs. Because methanol — the alcohol that is mixed with gasoline to make gasohol — is made from corn, it appeared to be a new market for North Carolina farm products. Because it would encourage gasohol use, it appeared to be an energy saving initiative. And finally, since gasohol use was so small at the time, all this would cost the state treasury very little money.

Things didn't work that way, says Rep. Gerald Anderson, D-Craven, who has filed a bill to repeal the tax credit. The tax break threatens to break the Highway Fund, Anderson says, and neither North Carolina farmers nor motorists have gotten any benefit from it, he said.

Anderson says that the oil companies are not passing the tax credit along to the consumers. An industry spokesman conceded that the combined 11-cent federal and state tax credit on gasohol really only brings the pump price down 3 cents. The agricultural products being used to produce the methanol aren't coming from North Carolina. They're coming from Brazil, in the form of molasses.

As for lost revenues, the explosive increase in the amount of gasohol being sold in North Carolina threatens to turn the 5-cent tax break per gallon into a major problem for the Highway Fund. In October 1983, 43,000 gallons of gasohol were sold in the state. In February 1985, 13 million gallons were sold. The Legislature's Fiscal Research Division estimates that the annual revenue loss will be almost $17 million next year and $19 million the next.

Anderson's bill sailed through the House but ran into trouble in the Senate Finance Committee where a Wilson businessman said repeal of the tax credit would ruin his plans for a major new plant in Johnston County.

With former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten helping him plead his case, Bill Horton, president of Diversified Fuels Inc., said he has the contracts necessary to start a major new plant, with a number of supporting plants, in the Selma area.

If the tax credit is repealed, he said, "It will kill this project." The total investment, he said, would be in the neighborhood of $140 million and North Carolina farmers would have a new 25 million bushel a year corn market. Horton and Edmisten argued that the loss to the Highway Fund would be more than offset by the new taxes generated by this industry.

Anderson didn't help his case with the Senate committee when he kept tripping over his own facts. He's not the most articulate legislator and several senators could be heard groaning confusion as he tried to make his argument. He at one point proposed an amendment and then tried to retract it when an industry spokesman complained. Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, whose district would be helped by the new plant, finally sought to have the whole matter sent to a subcommittee. Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, committee chairman, agreed.

After the meeting, Anderson said he still wanted the tax credit repealed. He said the credit helps only out-of-state oil companies, and he questioned whether the Selma plant will ever be built. But in the hallway a few minutes later, Horton and Edmisten were seen huddling with Anderson about possible compromises. Edmisten said the tax credit should probably be tightened to include only methanol created from North Carolina farm products.

To the editor: Regarding my letter to the editor published March 17, please allow me to make a correction.

My letter stated holidays cost (per Congressional Record) $40 billion per year each for a total of $360 billion per year. In my zeal to get the letter to you, a decimal point was omitted. The figures should have read $4.0 billion per year each for a total of $36.0 billion per year.

Strength For Today

We are told that when Jonathan met David for the last time and the two communed together, Jonathan strengthened David's hand in God.

Friendship is never really friendship until this happens. When those who are near to us can really say that our contacts have deepened their faith in God and man, then and only then can we claim to be a friend worthy of the name. Many a person can look back on companionship which slowly but surely over a period of years weakened every fine impulse in his nature. It is the part of wisdom to disentangle one's self from the pernicious influence of such relationships if they exist. True happiness exists only when friends strengthen each other in all good things.

Jonathan died shortly after this meeting. Or did he? He seems always to have lived on influentially in the life of his friend David.

Nuclear Free Zones Spreading

WASHINGTON — When the elected leaders of neighboring Takoma Park, Md., declared their village a nuclear-free zone in 1983, there was nary a peep from the policymakers in downtown Washington.

The town (pop. 16,000) sat on the Maryland-District of Columbia border; who could take "Nuclear-Free Takoma Park" seriously? Takoma Park didn't — nor was it likely to — have Minuteman silos or an employer directly or indirectly involved in nuclear weapons production.

Today, however, 82 U.S. communities, with 10 million residents (thanks largely to New York City), belong to the nuclear-free zone club. Another 125, including Portland, Ore., are considering membership under one condition or another.

While electoral and judicial defeats may prevent this country from becoming another New Zealand, the Takoma Parks of America are sending a warning: Regardless of what happens in Geneva, the nuclear allergy could become epidemic.

Nuclear-free zoners face an uphill battle in the minds of those who believe their movement is better suited to Fantasy Island than the real world. Many people just don't take the effort seriously. For example, when New York's City Council voted overwhelmingly last November to bar nuclear-armed vessels from dropping anchor in port, only one reporter is said to have shown up at a post-vote press conference; in San Francisco, Mayor Diane Feinstein simply vetoed a resolution that would have mirrored New York's action.

Meanwhile, wary of scaring away federal and private research dollars, some ostensibly liberal communities have rejected bans by wide margins. In 1983, a $550,000 industry-supported campaign resulted in the defeat of a referendum in Cambridge, Mass. Last year, significant setbacks came in Ann Arbor, Mich., and Santa Monica, Calif. Fresno, Calif., said "no" more recently.

But voters endorsed 14 of the 16 nuclear-free zone measures on the ballot last November. Two months later, in Santa Cruz County, Calif., the Board of Supervisors voted 3-2 to deny Lockheed Missile and Space Corp. a zoning variance for expanding a facility to build parts for the Trident II missile. Lockheed had spend big money to defeat the country's first nuclear-free-zone initiative, also in Santa Cruz County, nearly five years ago.

In some cases, potential legal obstacles have been cleared. In Portland last December, the city attorney issued a favorable opinion on the nuclear-free-zone measure that comes before the City Council on May 1. Amending an earlier opinion, he said that the proposal did not violate constitutional protections of interstate commerce and the right of Congress to provide for, among other things, the common defense.

But legal challenges have gone ignored, too. When the Massachusetts attorney general ruled last year that an Amherst ban was unconstitutional, angry residents at a town meeting simply re-endorsed the measure in more specific form, thereby daring the state to take them on in court.

These developments, in fact, suggest that the nuclear-free zone's biggest test will ultimately take place in the courtroom. The Supreme Court has already ruled that federal interest pre-empts local prerogative when it comes to the transportation of nuclear waste materials.

Reagan Scores With Senate's MX Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's decisive Senate victory on spending for the MX missile sets the stage for three other votes he must win before Congress will release $1.5 billion to resume MX production.

The Senate's 55-45 vote Tuesday to free funds to build and deploy a second batch of 21 of the highly accurate MX missiles underscored the president's powers of persuasion and gave Reagan the first major legislative victory of his second White House term.

Senator after senator credited the victory to Reagan's personal lobbying and his adroit use of the argument that killing the MX system would undermine U.S. arms control negotiators and set back both national security and the cause of world peace.

"The power of the presidency is amazing," said Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., an MX opponent.

"I just didn't know how many people were going to be influenced, both by the talks and by the president's efforts," said Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., leader of anti-MX forces on the Senate floor.

Serious doubts remain in Congress about the effectiveness of the MX system, its impact as an arms control bargaining chip and the wisdom of deploying the full fleet of 100 missiles envisioned by the administration.

And even if Reagan prevails in the battle to free the MX funds Congress impounded last year, the future of the weapons system and its place in national defense and arms control is far from secure.

Several key senators said they do not intend to vote to authorize or appropriate the $3.2 billion requested by the president to buy 48 more MX missiles during fiscal 1986.

The Senate, as part of an MX compromise reached last year, now must vote on whether to actually appropriate the impounded MX money for fiscal 1985. That vote is scheduled for today, and the House is set for an identical pair of votes next week.

A key Democratic aide, asking not to be identified by name, said a survey of all House members shows a near even split on the immediate issue of lifting restrictions on MX spending, with about 200 representatives for the MX, about 200 against it and the rest uncommitted.

"I think this is winnable in the House," Hart said of his anti-MX efforts. "But I think it's going to be tough. We'll be working on the swing vote."

Reagan, who already has begun lobbying House members, said Tuesday, "it will be real tight."

The House Appropriations and Armed Services committees both scheduled MX votes today. The House Democratic Caucus also was to meet to discuss the issue.

Reagan hailed the Senate vote as sending "a message of American resolve to the world."

"The MX Peacekeeper will strengthen our national security and our negotiating position at Geneva," Reagan said of the U.S.-Soviet arms control talks under way in the Swiss city.

But Hart said he believes the missile makes the nation less secure.

"When the red, white and blue bunting is taken off this missile system, it is no longer a peace keeper, it is a stick of dynamite," Hart said in the closing moments of debate.

This is true, he contended, because the administration has never solved the problem of how to ensure MX survivability against a Soviet attack.

Because Reagan now proposes to base the MX in existing Minuteman missile silos, the possibility exists that the United States might fire the MX on warning — right or wrong — that a Soviet attack was under way, Hart said.

And that, he said, erodes the stability of the strategic balance and makes nuclear war more likely.

Among the pro-MX votes Tuesday were 45 Republicans and 10 Democrats. Voting no were 37 Democrats and eight Republicans.

Reagan even won over Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd Jr. of West Virginia, who said while the MX has major flaws, "it does add additional military punch, does strengthen our bargaining position and puts us in a better position with our European allies."

After trooping to the White House on Tuesday to hear Reagan make his case, several House members said the fate of the MX system would be radically different if the Geneva talks were not taking place.

Rep. Roy Dyson, D-Md., said that although he thinks the missile basing system "still stinks" because it is vulnerable to attack, he will vote for releasing the money for 21 missiles at this juncture because of the arms talks.

Tass Sees Hypocrisy

MOSCOW (AP) — A U.S. Senate vote to free funds for 21 new MX missiles exposes Washington's "hypocritical declarations" that it wants to limit the arms race, the official news agency Tass said today.

The MX endorsement was the first of two setbacks in less than 24 hours for the Soviet propaganda campaign against Western missile deployments. The Belgian government early today won a parliamentary vote of confidence on deployment of NATO nuclear missiles in Belgium.

Bristling at Tuesday's 55-45 Senate vote, seen as a major victory for the administration of President Reagan, Tass said the senators bowed to pressure from the White House and the American military-industrial complex.

"The results of the Senate voting and the administration's persistent efforts directed at pushing through Congress the allocations for the MX program at a time when Soviet-American talks on nuclear and space armaments are held in Geneva fully expose Washington's hypocritical declarations that the United States is 'fully determined' to achieve reduction, and even elimination of offensive strategic armaments," Tass said.

Ohio Legislature Passes Emergency Plan For Thrifts

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The Legislature passed a bill today allowing 69 savings and loan associations closed by the governor to open and give depositors $750 per month until state officials permit the institutions to resume normal operations.

Gov. Richard Celeste, who on Friday ordered the savings and loans closed for three days to stem a run by depositors and then extended the so-called bank holiday through Tuesday, quickly signed the bill.

"We have achieved a great deal tonight with the passage of the legislation I am signing," Celeste said before making the measure official early today. "We are protecting $4 billion, the savings of 500,000 Ohioans."

Rep. Robert D. Nettle, head of the House Finance Committee, said some of the S&Ls could reopen today, and that the others could resume operations over a period of time because of a series of stipulations in the law.

The governor scheduled a meeting today with the institutions' chief officers to discuss implementation of the bill.

Celeste had ordered 70 state-chartered institutions closed following a run by depositors triggered by the March 8 closing of Cincinnati-based Home State Savings Bank after it was revealed that Home State could lose millions in the failure of ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

The Home State closing threatened to cripple the private fund that guaranteed the deposits of the thrifts affected by Celeste's order.

After two days of legislative haggling, the Senate voted 32-0 for a bill requiring the thrifts to drop their private insurance in favor of federal deposit insurance. The House approved the measure 92-0 Tuesday night.

The bill was attached to a Senate bill that allows depositors to withdraw $750 of their savings in a 30-day period, and would let the institutions receive deposits.

Under the new bill, certain small institutions that would not qualify for Federal Saving and Loan Insurance Corp. protection will be allowed to reopen after obtaining state approval.

One Cincinnati-area savings and loan reopened Monday after obtaining conditional approval for membership in the FSLIC.

"This is a great achievement, a vastly improved bill, by a very diverse group of us who refused to be stamped," Republican Sen. Paul Pfeifer, a member of the Senate Financial Institutions Committee, said today. The law says privately insured institutions that have applied for federal insurance can open once the state's superintendent of savings and loans has certified that depositors would not be jeopardized.

Six-Year-Old Boy Bluffs Knifer With Empty Rifle

SHAWNEE, Okla. (AP) — A 6-year-old boy who pointed a rifle at a man holding a knife to his mother's throat knew the gun wasn't loaded, but bluffed his way through the rescue because "he didn't have time to find the shells," a sheriff said.

When his mother was gripped by the intruder with a knife, Jimmy Roland grabbed the family's .22-caliber rifle and leveled it at him, hollering, "Let my mommie loose!" Pottawatomie County Sheriff Paul Abel said Tuesday.

Abel called Jimmy "a real mature 6-year-old — a real gutty little fellow. I know of several awards he's going to end up getting."

The incident began when Jacquelyn Gail Roland, 35, went to investigate a noise outside the house Sunday. She grabbed a cooking pan and told her children to get the family's gun, Abel said.

Mrs. Roland confronted a man

"masked with a red bandanna over his face," Abel said. "She tried to run, but he grabbed her around the neck and placed a knife to her throat."

Then Jimmy came outside with the rifle and shouted, "Let my mommie loose!"

When the man told him to put the weapon down, Jimmy cocked it.

The man, "apparently believing the little boy was going to shoot him ... loosened his grip on Mrs. Roland and she broke away," Abel said. "With that 6-year-old, you better believe him — he's been around guns all his life."

"I asked him 'Son, did you know the gun wasn't loaded?' and he said yes. I asked him why he didn't load the gun and he said he didn't have time to find the shells."

"And the amazing thing is, it was no big deal to him."

Jimmy "in all likelihood ... saved every one of those people's lives," Abel said. The Rolands' other son and three relatives, all under 11 years old, also were at the house.

The boy's grandfather is a reserve deputy sheriff "and that whole family has been taught how to handle guns safely since they were little," the sheriff said. "They're not a bunch of gun nuts. They're just average working people that taught their children safety with guns from the time they were real little, because there are guns in that house as there are in most of the houses around here."

Arlen Henry Alexander, 29, of Tishomingo, and Joshua Shane Baldwin, 18, of Norman, were arrested near the Roland home, Abel said. Douglas Wayne Humphreys, 19, of Norman, was arrested later at the sheriff's office when he went to inquire about the other two, he said.

All three were being held on complaints of conspiracy to commit burglary and attempted first-degree burglary. Alexander also was jailed on a complaint of assault with a dangerous weapon, and Baldwin on attempted escape from custody when he briefly bolted from a jailer, Abel said.

The youth's father, Floyd Roland, was working as an oilfield welder in Konawa, about 35 miles southeast of Shawnee, at the time of the incident.

Contractor Bills U.S. For Expense Of Legal Fight

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Navy Secretary John F. Lehman has vowed to block the McDonnell Douglas Corp. from obtaining government reimbursement for millions of dollars in legal fees from its private court fight with the Northrop Corp., according to Pentagon documents.

The documents, obtained Tuesday, disclose McDonnell Douglas has already submitted bills totaling more than $24 million for its legal defense in a suit involving construction of export versions of the F-A-18 jet fighter.

The legal expense claims were submitted even though the firm was advised by the Navy more than a year ago that "this litigation provides absolutely no benefit to the Navy's F-A-18 program."

A spokesman for McDonnell Douglas on Tuesday defended the claims as a proper — and recoverable — cost of doing business. Until the dispute is resolved, however, the company is refunding roughly $17 million that was paid out by the Navy for legal fees before the payments were questioned, spokesman Gerald Meyer said.

"Since 1979, we have been defending ourselves against this lawsuit," Meyer said. "This defense is a cost of doing business. Federal Acquisition Regulations state such legitimate costs are allocable to government programs. The Navy disagrees. So we have filed an appeal."

The fight over legal expense claims is discussed in documents obtained from several Pentagon sources who refused to allow themselves to be identified. But the Navy, while declining comment, confirmed the documents' authenticity.

The documents trace the history of a court fight that began in October 1979, when Northrop filed a $700 million antitrust suit against McDonnell Douglas in Los Angeles.

The St. Louis-based McDonnell Douglas is the prime contractor for the Navy's F-A-18, a high-performance jet designed for operation aboard aircraft carriers. Northrop, headquartered in Los Angeles, is a prime sub-contractor on the plane.

Charity Break

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Members of the La Scala orchestra say they will interrupt their strike to stage a charity performance of Mozart's opera "The Magic Flute" tonight.

However, orchestra representatives said they will walk out again after the performance and force cancellation of the second staging of the opera. Early April performances of the ballet "Proust" by Roland Petit could be canceled if an agreement on a new contract is not reached.

The striking orchestra members blocked the premiere of Mozart's classic twice last week to protest a government veto of contracts that would exceed a 7 percent ceiling imposed on salaries of public workers.

In the lawsuit, Northrop claims it entered into a "teaming agreement" under which it was supposed to serve as the prime contractor for any land-based version of the F-A-18 sold to foreign allies. Instead, the suit claims, McDonnell Douglas has continued to monopolize that business.

McDonnell Douglas has denied doing anything improper to block Northrop from negotiating foreign sale agreements and filed a countersuit of its own. The cases are expected to go to trial late this year.

According to one of the internal documents, as of last Oct. 10, McDonnell Douglas had submitted legal expense claims totaling $24.3 million, even though "we told them not to bill."

Indeed, on Feb. 3, 1984, Vice Adm. J. B. Busey, the commander of the Naval Air Systems Command, wrote Sanford N. McDonnell, the company's president, stating:

"As this litigation provides absolutely no benefit to the Navy's F-A-18 program, the Navy will accept no responsibility to reimburse either McDonnell Douglas or Northrop for any such expenses."

Despite that warning, McDonnell Douglas challenged the Navy position last month by "filing a claim with the Armed Services Board of Contract Appeals for its legal costs incurred to date."

That produced a special directive from Lehman, dated March 14. The directive orders Navy auditors to identify and recoup any funds already paid to McDonnell Douglas and to "continue to withhold any further amounts billed by both contractors for these litigation expenses."

Moreover, the documents show the Navy is warning the two firms that if they persist in fighting out their dispute in court, it will be prepared to bill both companies for "all expenses (to the government) both direct and indirect."

Those bills could run into the millions, since they would include costs attributed to depositions; the production of documents; responses to subpoenas, and "legal research and coordination with Department of Justice on the government position in the litigation since 1979."

Northrop had no comment on the matter, beyond saying it had not submitted any claims to the Navy for its legal expenses.

Condemned Man Says Poor, Blacks 'Are Pawns Of Society' In U.S.

JACKSON, Ga. (AP) — John C. Young, who beat three elderly people to death during a 1974 rampage, was executed in the Georgia electric chair early today after telling witnesses that "being born black in America was against me."

The U.S. Supreme Court voted 5-3 Tuesday not to hear an appeal based on the admission of Young's trial lawyer that he was under the influence of drugs while representing Young.

Young was the sixth man, and the fifth black, to be executed in Georgia since the state resumed using the electric chair in 1983 following a 19-year suspension. He was the 41st person put to death in the U.S. since the Supreme Court allowed states to restore the death penalty in 1976.

The condemned man was escorted into the execution chamber at the Georgia Diagnostic and Classification Center at 12:12 a.m. and strapped into the varnished wooden chair by six guards.

In a barely audible final statement delivered to 12 official witnesses, Young, 28, complained that poor people and blacks were "pawns of society."

"Being born black in America was against me," he said. "Y'all cry that America was built on Christianity, I say it was built on slavery."

At 12:15, Warden Ralph Kemp read the court's execution order and two guards placed a leather harness over Young's shaved head, while two others attached electrodes to his right leg and head.

After a brown leather mask was placed over his face, 1,080 volts of electricity was applied, causing his fists to clench and forcing his body against the chair back.

Two minutes later the electricity was turned off and his body was allowed to cool for six minutes before two doctors checked for signs of life and pronounced him dead.

Outside the central Georgia prison, about 30 opponents of the death penalty staged a 45-minute vigil, holding candles while standing in a circle and softly singing "Amazing Grace" and other hymns.

About 20 people demonstrated in favor of the execution, including Ed Stephens, grand dragon of the Georgia Ku Klux Klan, and two other robed Klansmen. The two groups were separated by a barbed wire fence.

Young's last-minute appeals were based on the statements of Charles Marchman that he was negligent as Young's trial lawyer because of daily drug use and because of a personal crisis stemming from his decision to stop hiding his homosexuality.

Nelson Jarnigan, an Atlanta lawyer who handled Young's appeals, said that when he spoke by phone with Marchman Tuesday afternoon, Marchman was "very tearful, very remorseful." Jarnigan said he admired Marchman for having "the courage to admit his past mistakes. Unfortunately, no court would listen to him."

The argument also was turned down Tuesday by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals and the Georgia Board of Pardons and Paroles.

Young was sentenced to die for the Dec. 7, 1974, murders of Coleman Brice, 85; his wife, Gladys, 83; and Katie Davis, 83. They were beaten and kicked to death in their Macon homes.

Three other elderly residents of the same racially mixed neighborhood also were beaten by Young the same night, but they survived the attack. All six victims were white.

Defense lawyers claimed in their appeals that Marchman should have informed the sentencing jury in January 1976 that Young had been traumatized as a 3-year-old when his mother was killed with two shotgun blasts while she lay in bed next to him.

Dollar Suffers Biggest One-Day Loss In Decade

LONDON (AP) — The dollar swung widely in erratic early trading today after suffering its biggest one-day decline in 14 years, a drop that helped rocket gold up by more than $35 an ounce.

Currency traders said the market was still unsettled by the run on Ohio savings and loan associations that forced state authorities to order some 70 of them shut last Friday. Early today, Ohio's state government approved a bill that was expected to lead to the institutions' reopening soon.

"It appears the gravity of the crisis has been played down from the beginning," complained a trader in Frankfurt, speaking on condition he remain anonymous. "If the U.S. dealers don't trust their currency, how can we?"

Said a London dealer: "People are thinking this is probably the tip of the iceberg."

The London trader, who also insisted on anonymity, said the dollar was overvalued anyway, and the Ohio crisis had merely focused attention on this.

Other analysts said the dollar's reversal was aggravated by newly published figures on the U.S. trade deficit, which indicated America had become a debtor nation for the first time in more than seven decades.

Gold, meanwhile, was benefiting from a flareup in the 4-year-old Iran-Iraq war and the resulting threat to oil supplies, the analysts said. Precious metals are a traditional investment haven in times of international crisis.

Gold opened in London at a bid price of $337.50 an ounce today, a jump of more than $22 from Tuesday's late London price, and $35 from the Tuesday opening.

By midmorning, however, the price had receded to $330.00. A dealer described trading as "very busy."

Currency trading, meanwhile, was described by traders in several cities as "very erratic."

Tuesday's ebb tide for the dollar continued into Wednesday when trading began in Asia. In Tokyo, the U.S. currency closed at 256.90 Japanese yen, a drop of 2.60 from Tuesday.

Later, when markets opened in Europe, the dollar plunged to 3.20 West German marks, 3 1/2 pfennigs below New York's closing rate.

Critics Attack EPA Decision To Halt Indoor Air Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency's decision to halt research into indoor air pollution is under attack by critics who say it's more dangerous to breathe inside the home than in the backyard.

Rep. Claudine Schneider, R-R.I., says the decision ignores recent studies showing that high levels of such pollutants as benzene, chloroform and tobacco smoke in the home are contributing factors in about half the illnesses in the nation. "When you consider that the average American spends 70 percent of his or her time inside, you realize that exposure to indoor air pollutants is a health factor for the overwhelming majority of Americans," she said.

Mrs. Schneider's call for more research was joined by a doctor, a former EPA official and representatives of environmental and consumer groups at a hearing Tuesday by the House Science and Technology environment subcommittee.

They were reacting to the Reagan administration's decision to seek no money in fiscal 1986 for basic research into indoor air quality problems. Such studies, which the EPA says are not required by law, are now financed by $2 million that Congress placed into this year's budget.

The decision was termed "ludicrous" by Richard Dowd, executive director of the EPA's science advisory board during the Carter administration and acting EPA research chief from November 1980 to April 1981.

Dr. Jan A. J. Stolwijk of Yale's School of Medicine said indoor pollution is becoming a "larger and larger" problem in terms of its total impact on the nation's health.

He said the administration proposal "clearly is a highly inappropriate reduction" because research into indoor air quality "is in a pitiful condition" and "practically no progress" has been made.

Alan Fox of the Consumer Federation of America, said indoor pollutants cause millions of illnesses annually and cost the economy billions of dollars in lost wages and health care costs.

"We face a public health problem which, if it had a single cause or a single set of symptoms, would be considered an epidemic of major proportions," said Fox, who estimated that $50 million should be spent on research.

He said a recent study by the Consumer Product Safety Commission of 40 typical homes found the presence of from 20 to 150 hazardous chemicals at concentrations from 10 to 45 times greater than outdoors.

"Add to those figures the fact that we spend nine times as much time indoors as we do outdoors and you have the outline of a very dangerous situation," Fox said.

John McCormick of the Environmental Policy Institute said the administration should be devoting more money to EPA research instead of pursuing "multi-billion (dollar) projects" such as trying to develop synthetic fuels.

The EPA did not testify at the hearing, but a spokesman, David Cohen, said the agency requested no indoor air research money because it doesn't believe the Air Quality Act authorizes such studies and because the EPA doesn't anticipate writing any regulations covering indoor pollution.

IBM Halts PCjr Production

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM says it plans to halt production of its PCjr home computer in April, becoming the latest victim of a sharp decline in demand that followed the strong Christmas selling season.

No plans were announced by International Business Machines Corp. to resume production later.

"There was a great deal of speculation that inventories were excessive, particularly the PCjr," said Eugene Glazer of Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. "This confirms that was correct."

A week ago, Apple Computer Inc. announced it would halt production of its personal computers for one week to bring inventories in line with sluggish demand, and it said then there was "general softness" in the computer industry.

At that time, IBM said sales and demand for its personal computers remained strong across its entire product line.

But on Tuesday, IBM said it would complete its current PCjr production schedule sometime in April, "when inventory is projected to be sufficient to meet anticipated demand for the product from retail, large account and education customers."

"Yes, sales have slackened," said John Pope, spokesman for IBM's Entry Systems Division, the Boca Raton, Fla.-based unit responsible for IBM's personal computers. "For a product such as PCjr, the peak season is the fourth quarter."

Pope said there were no current plans for when production might be resumed, and he otherwise declined comment on IBM's projections of PCjr sales.

IBM said it would continue to make PCjr cartridge programs, spare parts and options, such as memory-expansion products and power-supply attachments. IBM also said it would continue to market, service and fully support the PCjr.

Demand for the PCjr and other home computers was robust in the final quarter of 1984 and retailers heavily stockpiled the machines, thanks in part to price discounts and other promotions offered by the machines' manufacturers.

But after strong Christmas sales, "our numbers indicate sales of home computer products, including the Apple II and PCjr, dropped significantly on the order of 65 percent versus December," Michele Preston of the securities firm L.F. Rothschild, Unterberg, Towbin said recently.

The result was excessive retail inventories of home computers. Office personal computers — where IBM's efforts are primarily aimed — were not hurt as much, industry observers said.

Edward Ramos, president of Future Information Systems, a computer retailer in New York, said Tuesday that his store had an ample supply of PCjrs and that it was readying a PCjr sale to move inventory.

The basic PCjr with 128,000 characters of main memory lists for $999, but Ramos said his store was preparing a sale price of $800.

IBM made the PCjr announcement after its stock climbed $2.12½ a share to $130.50 in New York Stock Exchange composite trading.

Consumer Spending Keeps Up Growth

WASHINGTON (AP) — Consumer spending continued to grow at a rapid clip in February despite a meager rise in Americans' personal income, the government said today.

The Commerce Department said personal consumption spending, which includes virtually everything except interest payments on debt, rose 0.7 percent in February, a healthy gain that was off only slightly from the 0.8 percent increases in both January and December.

The 0.3 percent increase in personal income was only half the 0.6 percent January gain and was also down from a 0.5 percent gain in December.

However, both the income and spending gains were expected to support moderate growth in the overall economy of around 4 percent for the first three months of the year.

On Thursday, the Commerce Department will release its "flash" estimate of growth as measured by the gross national product. Many analysts believe it will show slightly slower growth than the 4.9 percent pace turned in during the last three months of 1984.

Most forecasts expect economic growth for all of 1985 to be 3.5 percent to 4 percent. While this pace would be strong enough to send unemployment lower, it would be far below the three-decades-best 6.9 percent rate turned in last year.

The 0.3 percent gain in personal income in February was the lowest since an identical increase last May. Much of the February gain was attributed to a strong increase of $6.3 billion in private wages that followed an increase of $3.2 billion in January.

However, payrolls at manufacturing plants declined $1.1 billion in February following an increase of $1.4 billion in January.

Government wages and salaries increased $2.3 billion last month, a smaller gain than the $4.9 billion January increase, which had reflected a 3.5 percent pay raise for most federal civilian employees and a 4 percent pay raise for the military.

Government transfer payments increased $1.9 billion in February, down sharply from an $18.4 billion gain in January that stemmed primarily from increases in Social Security payments.

Farm proprietors' income dropped $3.6 billion in February following a decline of $5 billion in January.

One of the key forces driving the economy has been consumer spending. The February gain of 0.7 percent included a sharp increase in purchases of clothing and other non-durable goods. Consumers increased spending for these items by $10.9 billion last month compared to an increase of $3.5 billion in January.

Spending for durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, rose $700 million in February following a decline of $2.3 billion in January.

Navy Ship Makes Sharp Turn, Hurts 20

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Three crew members and a civilian worker were airlifted from the destroyer tender Yellowstone to a hospital after the vessel went into an "unanticipated roll" while heeling from a sharp turn at 20 knots, the Navy says.

Sixteen crew members were treated in the ship's dispensary for minor injuries.

The roll occurred at 1:55 p.m.

Monday in the Atlantic Ocean 17 miles east of Cape Henry while the 623-foot ship was on scheduled sea trials, Cmdr. Robert F. Prucha, public affairs officer for Naval Surface Force, Atlantic, said Tuesday.

He described the 20-knot turn as "sharp," and said, "They didn't expect it to go as far as it did."

Some cabinets and equipment broke loose in the maneuver, Prucha said, and an investigation has been launched because injuries were involved.

Names and conditions of the injured were not available Tuesday night. The ship was refueling here, and the officer of the deck refused to comment.

Prucha said the four hospitalized men, including a civilian shipyard worker, may have suffered some broken bones. He said they were taken to Portsmouth Naval Hospital by a Coast Guard helicopter.

Prucha described the 16 injuries treated aboard the Yellowstone as "mostly bumps and bruises."

The Yellowstone, with a crew of about 1,100, was undergoing trials after recent maintenance work, Prucha said.

The Coast Guard said winds offshore were running 20 knots to 30 knots and seas were three to six feet Monday afternoon, which Prucha said would not have much effect on normal sea trial turns.

Cartier's Indicted In Tax Case

NEW YORK (AP) — Cartier Inc. denies it, but city and state officials say the prestigious Fifth Avenue jewelry store has been offering buyers a gem of a deal: $3.5 million in tax-free jewels.

Cartier and two of its managers have been indicted on charges of evading at least $260,000 in sales tax in 125 transactions from 1980 to 1983, Attorney General Robert Abrams and Mayor Edward Koch said Tuesday.

The scheme involved sending merchandise to out-of-state addresses to avoid New York City's 8.25 percent sales tax, Abrams said. Buyers were most likely to avoid taxes on the highest-priced items, with 90 percent of the transactions involving $10,000 or more going untaxed, he said.

Only one-third of the transactions at Cartier were taxed during the period under investigation, which revealed illegal transactions worth more than $3.5 million, Abrams said.

The average illegal sale involved $28,000 worth of merchandise and the evasion of more than $2,300 in taxes, he said.

Dummy packages frequently were mailed while customers took the merchandise home with them, while at other times, the goods would be sent to an out-of-state relative or friend of the buyer, Abrams and Koch said.

"This is a systematic practice," Abrams said. "It was a storewide policy" which involved sales clerks, the manager and people in the shipping department, he said, adding that the probe is continuing.

Cartier was charged with 255 counts of falsifying business records and 12 counts of offering a false instrument for filing, said Abrams.

S. Howard Warnock, the manager, was charged with 156 felony counts and Thomas J. Foster, the assistant manager, with 124, Abrams said.

The firm could be fined up to $10,000 on each count if convicted. The two men would face fines of up to $5,000 and up to four years imprisonment on each count.

Neal Gordon, Cartier's general counsel, said he had not seen the indictment and intends to respond in court. Cartier policy is and "always has been" in compliance with tax regulations, he said.

"We stand behind" Warnock and Foster, Gordon said.

Warnock was arraigned Tuesday and released on $50,000 bond and Foster was released on $25,000 bond for an April 2 hearing.

Sentenced

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Eight men have been sentenced to six month prison terms after being convicted of converting from Hinduism to Christianity in this Hindu kingdom.

The eight men told Judge Parashuram Jha their ancestors were Hindus, "but we believe in Jesus Christ."

The district court at Dadeldhura in western Nepal acquitted six other men on grounds their conversions had taken place outside Nepal, in India. The judge also ruled there was insufficient evidence to support the charge against the six of attempting to convert others to Christianity.

The 14 men were arrested last May. Ninety percent of Nepal's 15 million people are Hindu and about 7 percent are Buddhist.

Iraq Opens Up New Air Offensive Against Iran

By The Associated Press
Iraq launched new air raids on Iranian cities today as hundreds of foreigners boarded special flights out of Iran's capital Tehran after Iraq vowed to shoot down any planes in Iranian skies.

Prime Minister Hussein Musavi of Iran called Iraq's threat "insane." He warned Iranian missiles would destroy Baghdad's airport and said the Iraqi capital would be turned into "a pile of rubble for its rulers" if the threat was carried out, Iran's media reported.

An Iraqi military spokesman said a series of raids on "selected targets" in the Iranian cities of Isfahan, Karmanshah and Bushehr were carried out today by Iraqi warplanes.

There were no immediate reports of casualties or damage. The spokesman, who was not identified in his statement read over Baghdad radio, said the planes returned safely to base after inflicting "accurate hits" on their targets.

The Baghdad government warned Sunday that starting Tuesday night "any target that passes through Iranian air space will become a possible target." British Airways announced it was cancelling all its flights to Tehran, Iran's capital. The West German national airline Lufthansa, meanwhile, flew 357 Europeans out of Tehran Tuesday and Turkish Airlines evacuated 200 Turks.

A government spokesman in Tokyo said some of the 600 Japanese residents already had left.

Airline officials in Dubai said that Iran Air was flying daytime trips only.

Meanwhile, an Iraqi war communique said Iranian gun positions continued to shell Basra, Iraq's second city 300 miles south of Baghdad, for the sixth straight day, "hitting residential areas and causing material damage."

Another communique said that an unspecified number of Iraqi civilian residents were killed or wounded in the Basra shelling.

The border war between the two Moslem nations has been going on for 4½ years but has escalated recently into attacks on civilian targets.

In Washington, the New York Times today quoted senior Reagan administration officials as saying Iran has apparently suffered a crushing defeat in the weeklong ground offensive north of Basra.

The report said officials estimated Iran sent 30,000 to 50,000 soldiers and badly trained volunteers across the border and that most of them were killed.

"I don't think the Iranians know how many people they have lost," one senior official was quoted as saying. "But it is in the tens of thousands, we think."

Iraqi military commanders said their troops had driven the Iranian invasion force from the southern border marshes except for the area around oil-rich Majnoon Island, and took journalists on a tour of the area. Iran seized Majnoon in a similar invasion in February 1984.

Iran claimed it hit Baghdad with a ground-to-ground missile Tuesday and witnesses said the explosion demolished four houses, killing 14 people. Iraq said its warplanes struck five Iranian cities.

Iraqi officials refused to say anything about the explosion in Baghdad, but Iran claimed it was caused by the fourth long-range missile fired into the city in five days. Iraq also made no statement about an explosion Monday, but blamed the first two on saboteurs' bombs.

Conflicting claims by the two sides often cannot be confirmed because Western reporters are rarely allowed into the areas where attacks are reported.

In the Saudi capital Riyadh, the foreign ministers of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council ended a three-day meeting Tuesday to discuss ways of ending the war. Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, the United Arab Emirates, Bahrain, Qatar and Oman are linked in an economic integration and defense pact.

High Heels And Fur Must Go

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A high-heeled state worker wearing a knee-length fur coat and waving a warning sign is too distracting to motorists, the state Department of Transportation has decided.

So Santina DeSantis on Tuesday was ordered to don workboots and men's clothing and leave her muskrat coat at home.

"I'm stuck out here for eight, nine hours a day," the 42-year-old DeSantis said Tuesday. "I want to be warm, that's all."

As workers prepared to rip apart a Providence street to install underground communication wires, Ms. DeSantis stood near them, waving a red flag at passing motorists. She wore a hard hat, leather gloves, high-heeled shoes and the fur.

"It's just a plain old muskrat coat," she said. "I'd rather wear it than have it hang in my closet. I've been wearing it since the cold weather started," she said.

Gordon Cerow of DOT spoke to her Tuesday.

"He told me I should wear combat boots and jeans and I should wear men's clothes so I won't attract attention," she said. "He said there was a meeting the other day, and they didn't think my coat was appropriate. Those are the rules, so I've got to comply."

Japan To Buy U.S.-Made Satellite In Effort To Cut Huge Trade Surplus

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's most influential business organization has agreed to cooperate in buying a U.S.-made satellite to try to reduce Japan's huge trade surplus with the United States, an organization official said today.

Norihige Hasegawa, chairman of Sumitomo Chemical Company Ltd. and vice chairman of Keidanren, the Japan Federation of Economic Organizations, said, "We started talking at a meeting this morning about buying a satellite" from the United States.

The move represented an apparent about-face by the organization. Hasegawa said the organization was "generally not in favor of buying a satellite, but during today's discussion, political leaders for the first time were agreeing to such a purchase."

When asked why Keidanren had changed its mind, Hasegawa said simply, "This satellite may not be economical, but we're buying it because the United States wants us to." He did not give details on the estimated cost of the satellite.

Hasegawa said Keidanren still hadn't decided what company would supply the satellite or when the purchase would be made.

"There are so many people involved," he said, adding that a consortium of Japanese companies would make the purchase. He said Keidanren would probably act as coordinator.

Present at the meeting were three top members of Japan's ruling Liberal Democratic Party: Secretary General Shin Kanemaru, Executive Board Chairman Kiichi Miyazawa and Policy Board Chairman Masayuki Fujio.

Kanemaru's staff told The Associated Press, "We haven't heard anything about the meeting, but that doesn't mean it didn't happen."

Keidanren officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, also said they had no word on the meeting.

About two weeks ago, Keidanren Chairman Yoshihiro Inayama rejected the idea of purchasing U.S. satellites, saying, "Japan does not have a need for satellites now. How can you buy what you don't need? It can't even become the subject of discussion."

Last year, the United States suffered a $36.8 billion dollar deficit in trade with Japan. It has begun a concerted effort to open Japan's market further to U.S. telecommunications and electronics equipment, forestry products and medicine and medical equipment.

The United States also has urged Japan to buy satellites after the conversion of Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Public Corp. into a private company on April 1.

Demand in Japan for satellites and transponders, devices for relaying electronic signals, is expected to expand dramatically with the liberalization of Japan's telecommunications industry. Up to now, Nippon Telegraph and Telephone could only purchase satellites developed by Japan's Space Agency, and Japanese government policy was to encourage the development of home-grown satellite technology.

Belgians Back Plan For Missiles

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — After 15 hours of heated debate, Parliament today backed Prime Minister Wilfried Martens' decision to deploy NATO nuclear missiles in Belgium.

The vote of confidence, approved by 116-93 with one abstention, was a major victory for Martens, who had been expected to win by a narrow margin, and a victory for the Reagan administration, which had strongly urged the deployment. On Friday, Martens informed the house his government had deployed the first 16 of the 48 U.S.-made missiles Belgium pledged in 1979 to base on its territory. He insisted the deployment was defensive, not aggressive, and was needed to offset Soviet SS-20s in Eastern Europe.

President Reagan had told Martens during the Belgian leader's January visit to Washington that Belgium's support was needed to bolster the West's hand in the U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

Two members of the 212-seat House of Representatives were absent. Martens needed 107 votes. The house is the leading assembly in the Belgian Parliament. Senate approval is considered a formality.

The debate began at 2 p.m. Tuesday, and the vote came at 4:50 a.m. today, two days after a rally in Brussels, where more than 100,000 demonstrators called for the defeat of Martens' four-year-old coalition.

Foreign Minister Leo Tindemans said: "Politicians must not always blindly follow public opinion. We don't want to be Chamberlains or Daladiers who followed their public opinion."

He was referring to British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and French Premier Edouard Daladier. The two signed with Adolf Hitler the 1938 Munich accord, which they believed would avoid World War II.

At one point in the debate, pacifists in the public gallery threw pamphlets and paper bags filled with dirt from Florennes, the air base where the missiles are being deployed. They were whisked away by military policemen.

At least five of Martens' party representatives were said to oppose deployment. A negative vote from them could have threatened the government's seven-seat majority. Martens hurriedly called back two ministers from abroad for the vote.

But last minute changes of mind left only one opponent and one abstention within Martens' own ranks.

Martens' own floor leader, Luc Van Den Brande, who led opposition against the deployment within the party, finally voted for it — although he said he remained theoretically opposed to it.

"I still believe the government should not yet have decided the deployment, and should have made a last try," he said. He said he even offered to resign as floor leader but that his party asked him to stay on the job.

The North Atlantic Treaty Organization decided in 1979 to deploy 572 medium-range cruise and Pershing 2 missiles in five European nations — Britain, West Germany, Italy, the Netherlands and Belgium.

Since that five-year old commitment, however, anti-nuclear sentiment has spread in Belgium, giving afterthoughts to some members of Martens' own Flemish Christian Democratic Party.

Only the Netherlands has yet to make a final deployment decision, which is expected on Nov. 1.

Tindemans said deployment was the only solution and rejected other proposals, including bilateral talks.

To back up his point, the foreign minister reminded his audience that former Belgian Foreign Minister Pierre Harmel once tried bilateral talks with Poland and that "his Polish interlocutor had ended in a mental asylum."

ECKERD GIVES YOU TWICE AS MANY REASONS TO USE SYSTEM 2

Thompson Becomes Own Producer

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Guitarist and singer Robbin Thompson leaned back in the booth and talked casually about his friend, Bruce Springsteen.

"When Bruce was in Greensboro, he invited me to come on stage and play 'Twist and Shout' with him and Gary U.S. Bonds," Thompson said on a recent trip to Greenville to play at a local nightclub. "It was great to see him again."

Fourteen years ago, Thompson was lead singer in a band called Steel Mill. One of the members of the band was Springsteen.

"I was attending college at Virginia Commonwealth University in Richmond and was in a band called Mercy. Bruce was in a band from New Jersey, and we met and began playing together." Steel Mill never recorded an album.

But Thompson is including a song he and Springsteen used to play on his fourth album, "Better Late Than Never," which will be released in May.

"I am totally financing and distributing the album myself, because I don't feel I've gotten a good deal from the company I've been with. I've been in the business long enough to know what I'm doing and I think I can be successful."

Thompson said he has been "making money playing since I was 15" and he recorded his first record at the age of 17.

When he is not recording or touring, Thompson writes commercial jingles. He graduated from VCU with a degree in advertising.

"I write the jingles for a lot of regional (Virginia) advertisements," he said, "including the Virginia Beach tourism commercials and local banks." He also has composed music for national products such as Stihl Chain Saws and Swisher Sweet Cigars.

"I have written music for college sports at the University of Virginia and the University of Richmond," he added.

"I make about the same amount of money on performing as I do on advertisements," Thompson said, "but my mainstay has been music in any form."

He is the two-time winner of the American Song Festival, in 1975 and in 1983. His last album, "Two Bs Please" (referring to the spelling of his first name), sold 20,000 copies and was more popular in Europe than in the United States. (Thompson has toured in England and Germany.)

One of Thompson's most popular songs, "Sweet Virginia Breeze," was considered by the state legislature of Virginia to replace "Carry Me Back to Ole Virginny" as the official state song.

Thompson has been playing solo for about a year, but will begin touring with his new band in support of "Better Late Than Never" after the album's release.

Argentine Leader Urges Non- Intervention

WASHINGTON (AP) — Argentine President Raul Alfonsin is winding up a state visit to the United States after cautioning President Reagan that the search for peace in Central America must be guided, by the principle of non-intervention.

Alfonsin was addressing a joint meeting of the House and Senate today after meeting privately with Reagan for about an hour on Tuesday.

A senior administration official said Reagan reiterated his support for rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua. He said Alfonsin "did not respond directly."

Earlier, in an arrival ceremony on the White House lawn, Reagan said, "The free people of this hemisphere must not stand by and watch the communist tyranny imposed on Nicaragua spread to the free lands of the Americas."

In his response, Alfonsin said:

"I am convinced that it is through dialogue that we will be able to reach peace. And on the basis of the principle, the long-standing principle of international law in Latin America of non-intervention, that will give us, of course, the possibility of democracy and pluralism in democracy to succeed without extra-continental interventions."

The senior official, who spoke on condition that he not be identified, said Alfonsin's reference to non-intervention was not discussed in the private meeting. He also said it represented "a standard policy in the hemisphere."

Asked if Alfonsin appeared to be disassociating himself from U.S. policy, the official said, "We didn't take it that way."

In his private meeting with Reagan, he said, Alfonsin did not discuss the issue of aid to the rebels, known as the contras.

At the arrival ceremony, Reagan seemed to suggest that Argentina, with an annual inflation rate approaching 800 percent, should follow the lead of his own administration in dealing with economic troubles it faced on taking office.

"Had we channeled our efforts into finding easy and short-term answers, had we looked to redistribution of existing wealth, rather than creating more, we would still be trapped in a seemingly endless morass," the president told his visitor.

Alfonsin, noting that his country has a foreign debt of more than $40 billion, replied that "in Latin America we are ready to govern with the austerity that our times are demanding" and "we are making the necessary adjustments."

"But we cannot make adjustments that will actually impose sacrifices on those who have less," Alfonsin said. "And to ask from our peoples in that precise sector a bigger effort is no doubt to condemn them to marginality, to extreme poverty, to misery."

Argentines would disagree with elements of austerity programs drawn up by the International Monetary Fund and others to deal with its economic woes.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market stalled early today, failing to follow through on the rally of the previous session that was prompted by the dollar's decline.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged down .11 to 1,270.98 in the first half hour.

But gainers took a 3-to-2 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

On world currency and bullion markets, trading was erratic after Tuesday's frenzied session, in which the dollar staged its biggest one-day drop in at least 14 years and gold posted its sharpest gain in more than a decade.

Fears of renewed U.S. inflation, strife in the Middle East and worries about the closing of Ohio's state-chartered savings and loans were cited.

The dollar's decline was viewed as good news on Wall Street. It raised investors' hopes that multinational companies' earnings would improve, analysts said.

In Columbus, Ohio, legislation was signed today allowing 69 closed savings and loan associations to open and give depositors the opportunity to withdraw $750 per month until state officials permit the institutions to resume normal operations.

Gov. Richard Celeste, who on Friday ordered the savings and loans closed for three days to stem a run by depositors and then extended the so-called bank holiday through Tuesday, quickly signed the bill passed early today by the Legislature.

Meanwhile, the Commerce Department said today that Americans' personal income rose 0.3 percent in February, half the gain of the previous month and the smallest increase since an identical rise last May. Consumer spending was up 0.7 percent last month, compared with a 0.8 percent increase in January.

On Tuesday, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials jumped 21.42 points to 1,271.09.

Gainers outpaced losers by 2-to-1 on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 119.17 million shares, against 94.02 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index rose 1.40 to 103.91. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.81 at 224.65.

Court Upholds Use Of Lethal Injections

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court today allowed continued use of lethal injections to execute death row inmates.

The court unanimously ruled that federal drug regulators are not required to ensure that the injections do not produce a slow and painful death.

The 9-0 decision shields from legal attack the Food and Drug Administration's decision not to test the drugs used in lethal injections.

The court overturned a federal appeals court ruling that ordered the FDA to ban lethal injections unless it determines they kill quickly and painlessly.

The U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals here ruled in 1983 that states must suspend use of the injections.

But Chief Justice Warren E. Burger blocked that ruling, pending Supreme Court review of the appeals court decision, and permitted states to continue to use the injections.

Zoning ...

the commission and City Council, would use freon, not ammonia, as a coolant. "It's not our intent to increase the level of ammonia refrigeration," he said.

Edwards added he hoped rezoning the portion of property fronting Millbrook Street to office and institutional would provide protection of some degree against noise.

In other business, the commission tabled for 30 days a request brought by Jonathan R. Day to rezone acreage located behind and east of Warren Street from residential agricultural to high density residential.

Commissioners expressed concern that approval of the request could result in a sandwich situation wherein single-family homes on Warren Street would be locked between possible multifamily development on the east and existing multifamily development on the west, and urged Day and Warren Street residents to work out a compromise involving some sort of buffer system.

High density residential (R-6) zoning allows single-family, duplex and multifamily construction. Warren Street and other area residents speaking at the meeting told the commission they were afraid development of impervious surfaces on the property would escalate an already bad flooding problem. According to one resident, who said he takes frequent walks in the acreage up for rezoning, the back portion of the land has flooded six to eight times in the past 20 years.

Residents also expressed concern that development would increase traffic problems. Tar River Neighborhood Association President Inez Fridley in comments to the commission expressed the association's support for residents opposing the proposal.

In other action, commissioners approved a proposal expanding restrictions on placement of television satellite dishes. Provisions of the proposal include a five-foot setback requirement for back-yard placement, a 15-foot diameter size maximum for placement in back yards, limited roof top mounting (dishes mounted on roof tops may not exceed four feet in diameter), and a limitation of one television satellite dish per residential lot. Under the proposal, antennae may not be located in side yards. The proposal will now go before City Council for final consideration.

Also approved at Tuesday's meeting were the following items:

•A request by James H. Ward II and Katherine B. Ward to rezone 1.8 acres from residential agricultural to high density residential. The property is located on the west side of Evans Street Extension (Tar Road or SR 1700), approximately 130 feet north of Sara Lane. Ward, who is a member of the Planning and Zoning Commission, was exempted from the vote by commission action.

•A preliminary plat of Plaza Park Subdivision, located at the western end of Cheyenne Court, east of and adjacent to Wedgewood Arms Apartments. The proposed development involves four tracts with a total area of 4.19 acres and construction of a cul-de-sac. The plat was met with opposition by area elderly residents who said construction of a cul-de-sac instead of a through street on the property would create traffic problems. Saying a previous proposal to establish a through street on the property had already been denied because it could create substantial traffic problems, the commission approved the plat.

•A request by the city to annex 1.67 acres in Westhaven Subdivision, located at the eastern end of Cedarhurst Road, approximately 147 feet east of Kempton Drive. The subject property is contiguous to the present city limits.

•A request by North Carolina Equipment Co. to close a section of Allen Avenue, approximately 282 feet in length, located on the west side of Memorial Drive just north of West End Circle.

In final business, commission Chairman Ric Miller announced the addition of a new commission alternate, Carolyn Ferebee. Ms. Ferebee, principal of Third Street School, was appointed by the City Council in regular March session.

Indiana Tops Richmond; Virginia Advances In NIT

By The Associated Press

The regular season may have been disappointing for both the Indiana and UCLA basketball teams. However, both seem determined to make up for it in the National Invitation Tournament.

For the second game in a row, the Hoosiers and Bruins were big winners as Indiana crushed Richmond 75-53 and UCLA routed Nebraska 82-63 in second-round action Tuesday night.

Indiana, a 15-13 team during the regular season, had opened the tourney last week with a 79-57 bombing of Butler. UCLA, 16-12 before the start of the NIT, had routed Montana 78-47 in the NIT's opening round.

Their runaway victories Tuesday night sent Indiana and UCLA into Saturday night's quarterfinals. Also advancing were Virginia with a 68-61 triumph over St. Joseph's (Pa.), Marquette with a 56-54 decision over Cincinnati and Fresno State with a 66-55 defeat of New Mexico.

In second-round games tonight, South Florida plays at Louisville, Southwestern Louisiana is at Tennessee and Tennessee-Chattanooga visits Lamar.

Uwe Blab scored 17 points as the Hoosiers, taking control with 12-3 spurts early in each half, rolled past Richmond in Bloomington, Ind.

The smaller Spiders trailed by nine points at halftime and closed within seven before Indiana's second-half streak put the game out of Richmond's reach.

Indiana outrebounded Richmond 39-25 for the game, and the Hoosier passers — led by Stew Robinson and Dan Dakich with seven assists apiece — set up 22 baskets for their teammates, compared with only eight assists for the Spiders.

"When we get our center rebounding, it's a very big plus for us," said Indiana assistant coach Jim Crews, speaking in place of Coach Bob Knight, who has refused to answer reporters' post-game questions since early in the season.

Richmond Coach Dick Tarrant said Blab "was too much for us. We just couldn't match up to that. Blab played quite well."

Reggie Miller scored a career-high 29 points to lead UCLA over Nebraska at Pauley Pavilion. The Bruins led by as many as 13 points in the first half and held a 41-31 lead at the intermission. Nebraska never seriously threatened thereafter, as the Bruins led by as many as 21 points.

"It was a great team effort," said UCLA Coach Walt Hazzard. "I told my team 'Just take me back to the Apple.' I would love to go back to Madison Square Garden and show the people back there the real Bruins."

In Charlottesville, Jim Miller, Tim Mullen and Olden Polynice led a second-half Virginia surge as the Cavaliers defeated St. Joseph's. Polynice led the Cavaliers with 15 points while Miller added 14 and Mullen 12, and the trio accounted for 29 of the Cavaliers' 34 points in the second half.

"As usual we had our normal dry spells out there tonight on offense," said Virginia Coach Terry Holland. "But we played defense well enough to have a chance to win the game."

"Early in the game we were a little stagnant and they jumped out to a big lead (15-7 with 12:10 remaining). We went to the man-to-man defense to get our feet moving in the hopes we could do something on offense."

Kerry Trotter and Mandy Johnson scored 12 points apiece to key Marquette's win at Cincinnati. The score was tied seven times in the second half, the last time at 52 with 2:46 remaining. Marquette center Walter Downing put the Warriors ahead to stay, 54-52, by sinking a six-foot jump shot at the two-minute mark.

"I think we missed the front end of nine one-and-ones, but we played pretty good when we had to, and we made the baskets when we had to," Marquette Coach Rick Majerus said.

Scott Barnes scored 19 points and Mitch Arnold added 16 as Fresno State beat New Mexico.

Rose Takes Advantage Of Ram Errors In 12-4 Win

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

SNOW HILL — Rose High School took advantage of 10 Greene Central errors, added 11 hits and romped to a 12-4 baseball victory over the home-standing Rams yesterday in a non-conference baseball game.

The Rams, handicapped by a couple of players at new positions, saw Rose score six unearned runs in the first five innings before the Rams even got anything started themselves.

Steve Wall picked up the win, his third against no losses. He came out after five in favor of Battle Emory, who went the last two and gave up all four of the Ram runs, along with six hits. Wall limited Greene Central to just one hit in his tour of the mound.

"I thought Steve threw the ball well again," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "But we didn't swing the bats very well, and our fielding wasn't the best either."

Of Rose's hits, five were for extra bases: doubles by Doyle Kirkland, Mike Wooten and Larke Weatherington, and triples by Tony Taylor and Van Alston. However, Rose didn't hit the ball well with men on base, stranding 11 in the game.

On defense, Rose made three errors.

The Rams were missing their regular shortstop and had to move in a man to replace him. He got off to a shaky start, making four errors before finally settling down to the routine. "We only had one senior on the field to start the game," Coach Jim Fulghum said.

Both teams had scoring opportunities early, but it was the third inning before Rose finally broke the ice. With one down, Wall reached on an error and courtesy runner Alston scored on a triple by Taylor to deep center.

In the fourth, two more Rose runs came over — also helped by errors. Lenny Langley walked but was cut down on Wooten's fielder's choice. Weatherington grounded back to the third baseman, who booted the ball, but the shortstop picked it up and fired to first in time for the out. Wooten, meanwhile, kept going around second and slide into third as the relay was thrown away. Wooten then scrambled on home with the second run.

Jones kept it going with a walk. He stole second and went on to third on an error on the throw-down. Kirkland also walked and when Eric Jarman's grounder was errored, Jones scored.

Rose ran the lead to 6-0 in the fifth. Taylor opened with a single and Joey Hallow, attempting to sacrifice, reached on an error when the first baseman didn't tag the bag on a perfect throw. Langley's grounder got Hallow at second and Langley stole up a base. With two away, Weatherington's grounder was bobbled, allowing both runners to score. Weatherington stole up and Jones reached on an error, scoring Weatherington.

Four more Rose runners crossed the plate in the top of the sixth. Wall singled and Taylor walked. Gary Scott walked and with one down, Wooten doubled to right scoring courtesy runner Travis King, but runner Mike Maxon was cut down trying to score. Weatherington followed with another double, scoring Scott and Wooten, and Alston followed with a triple, scoring Weatherington for a 10-0 lead.

Greene Central finally got on the board in the sixth. With two away, James Hill singled and moved up on a passed ball, scoring on a double by Gary Ginn. Barry Ginn singled in the second run and Jamie Lang moved him to third on a base hit. A balk scored the third run.

Rose added its final two in the top of the seventh. Jarman walked and Emory singled. With two away, Robbie Ehrmann singled in Jarman. Courtesy runner King then scored when Wooten reached on an error.

One more scored for the Rams in the bottom of the frame. Ervin Collins singled and advanced on a freaky fielder's choice. The grounder, back to short, was relayed to second, but the base was missed. The relay to first, however, got the batter. Adrian Smith followed with a single, and Ken Gray walked, loading the bases. Hill grounded out scoring Collins.

Wall, Taylor and Wooten each had two hits to lead Rose, while Collins had a pair for the Rams.

The win boosts Rose's record to 4-1, while the Rams drop to 1-5-1.

Rose returns to action on Friday, hosting Havelock. Greene Central is back in action on Thursday, hosting Farmville Central in its first Eastern Carolina Conference action.

D.H. Conley Holds Off Chargers 13-11

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

LITTLEFIELD — Shane Adams ripped a three-run homer in to cap a 10-run rally in the fourth inning as the D.H. Conley Vikings defeated Ayden-Grifton 13-11 Tuesday in high school baseball action.

Todd Cochran ripped four hits in as many at bats to lead a 16-hit attack by the Vikings. Adams finished with three hits, while Randy Mills added two hits and scored three runs.

Winning pitcher Bronswell Patrick came on in relief of Paul Hill in the bottom of the third but earned the victory when the Vikings erased a 4-0 deficit in the fourth.

"We were coming off a win at Kinston when we only made one error and played well," Conley Coach Alan Wilson said. "Ayden-Grifton hit the ball, and we got behind early.

"We hit the ball, and had a big 10-run inning to get us back in the game."

Gene Johnson, who paced the Chargers with three hits, led off the bottom of the second with a solo homer.

Ayden-Grifton added three more runs in the third, with Terry Garrett opening with a single. After two outs, Shannon Peede reached first on an error to plate Garrett. Eddie Brown and Johnson walked to load the bases, and Ty Little singled in one run before a base on balls to Tony McLawhorn forced in the fourth Charger run.

Patrick came in and got Curt Tucker to ground into a fielder's choice to end the inning.

Lee Hardee opened Conley's rally with a walk, and Randy Mills followed with a single. After Adams popped up attempting to bunt, Mike Elks singled in Hardee for the first run. Hill doubled in Randy Mills and Elks, and he scored on a two-out single by Steve Mills.

Steve Mills stole second and third before Cochran walked, and a balk by Leslie Moore forced in another run. Bryant reached first on an error to put runners on first and third, and Hardee singled in Cochran.

Randy Mills ripped his second hit of the inning to drive in Bryant, and Adams ripped his homer over the fence in right for a 10-4 lead.

Mike Burnham opened the bottom of the fourth with a double, and Wesley Hardee followed with a base on balls. Ayden-Grifton plated a pair of unearned runs when a shot by Jackie Conway got past Randy Mills at shortstop and rolled past Steve Mills in center.

Hill returned to the mound for the Vikings and struck out the side and closed the game for a save.

Cochran singled in Steve Mills in the top of the fifth to give Conley an 11-6 lead, but the Chargers fought back with three runs in the bottom of the frame.

Tucker singled in two runs and later scored on a throwing error as the Chargers trimmed the margin to 11-9.

In the sixth, Randy Mills walked and later scored when Elks reached first on an error to maintain a 12-9 edge.

Johnson singled and scored on a hit by McLawhorn in the bottom of the sixth to trim the margin to 12-10.

But Conley scored again in the seventh as Cochran singled and scored on a single by Bryant for a 13-10 spread.

Conway singled after one out in the bottom of the frame, and after two out Brown singled in Conway. Johnson followed with a single, but Hill recorded a strikeout to end the game.

"Our guys battled, but Conley hit the ball well," Ayden-Grifton Coach Chris Ross said. "I thought we were in there till the last pitch; we just fell short.

"There are going to be days when things don't go your way; we've sure had some so far."

Ayden-Grifton slipped to 2-3 on the season and opens its Eastern Carolina Conference slate Friday atouthWest Edgecombe.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — Illinois State led Central Florida by scores of 21-0 and 24-6 in a football game last fall but finally lost the game by a score of 28-24.

The coach of the losing team, Bob Otolski, thought that was hard to take but his troubles were only beginning. Trying to reach the press box at Orlando Stadium to do a post-game radio show, he was trapped in the elevator.

He got out finally and decided to use the stairs. But he encountered a locked gate leading to the press box and could not open it. He never did make the radio shows.

North Pitt Slips Past West Craven

BETHEL — Neal Everett's home run tied West Craven at 5-5 in the bottom of the seventh inning for North Pitt and the Panthers pushed over the winning run in the eighth for a 6-5 baseball victory yesterday.

West Craven pushed over two runs in the top of the first to take the initial lead. Mike Fulford singled and Randy Elks cracked a two-run homer.

North Pitt came right back with three in its half of the inning. With two away, Neal Everett singled and John Hobbs reached on an error. Alfred Braxton drove in both runners with a double and Jeff Lloyd singled, scoring Braxton with the go-ahead run.

The Panthers added one in the second, but West Craven added one in the fourth then took a 5-4 lead in the sixth.

Everett tied it up for the Panthers with his homer in the seventh. Then, in the eighth, Thomas Wright and Thomas Lynch both walked. Jarvis Massenburt reached on a bunt single, loading the bases. A pickoff try at third base went awry, however, allowing Wright to score the game-winning run.

Neal Russell and William White each had two hits for West Craven while Everett had two hits to lead the Panthers.

North Pitt, now 2-2, plays host to Charles B. Aycock on Friday in its first Eastern Carolina Conference action.

Rice Architect Of Tech's Rise

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins may be the mastermind behind the mercurial rise of the sixth-ranked Yellow Jackets among the college basketball elite, but Athletic Director Homer Rice has been the architect of the sports resurgence at the Atlanta school.

Rice, 57, came to Tech in 1980 with a five-year plan to upgrade each intercollegiate sport as well as the facilities at the school which is celebrating its 100th anniversary in 1985.

He is right on target in most other sports, but basketball has been the over-achiever under the direction of Cremins.

"I didn't think we'd have this much success this quickly," Rice said Monday while savoring Tech's 70-53 victory over No. 15 Syracuse the day before. The victory left the Yellow Jackets one of 16 teams still alive in the NCAA single-elimination basketball tournament. They face No. 12 Illinois Thursday night in the East Regional semifinal in Providence, R.I.

Rice brought in Cremins, who played collegiately at South Carolina and had been a winner in his first coaching job at Appalachian State, in 1981 after the Yellow Jackets suffered through a 3-23 season.

Cremins, 37, led Tech to an 18-11 record and a National Invitation Tournament appearance last season before capturing the Atlantic Coast Conference title this year with a 26-7 record entering Thursday's game.

"I believed we could become competitive in the conference, but right now we're at least two to three years ahead of schedule," said Rice. "I thought it would take about five years to become competitive."

And he believed Cremins was the one to do it, selecting him over an established coach.

"I had my eye on this young man for a long time," said Rice, whose background includes head football coaching jobs at Cincinnati and Rice and with the National Football League Cincinnati Bengals as well as athletic director at North Carolina and Rice.

"He was at South Carolina and beat us when I was at North Carolina. He was a leader and competitor, not a great player, but he had the ingredients then to do what he is doing now. He was a natural in my way of thinking," said Rice.

Other sports are also on the upswing competitively. The football team concluded a 6-4-1 season in 1984 under fifth-year Coach Bill Curry, including a 35-18 victory over Georgia, its first in six years over the in-state rival. The baseball team was 35-18 a year ago and is currently 14-2.

In addition, under Rice's direction, a $7 million athletic center that houses administration offices, locker rooms, training room, weight room, dining hall and equipment room was completed three years ago.

The baseball complex has been upgraded and is among the finest in the Southeast. Plans are in the works to renovate the football stadium and basketball coliseum.

But the basketball program is the darling of the 11,200 students and administration.

"The timing is perfect since this is Georgia Tech's centennial and will be included in the history of the first 100 years of the school," said Rice. "This will perhaps be the climax because it's our first championship in the ACC."

"It's unbelievable, incredible how it happened. It is certainly going to be a great story for our historians. But more than that, it has helped make believers of what we are trying to do," he said, referring to Tech's Total Person Program.

The program is designed to train student athletes not only in the classroom, but also to teach motivation, goal orientation and "even little things like how to write a resume. That is our purpose," said Rice.

"We want to train them to become successful in their total life" not just sports. "And we're doing it with high principles, doing it right and not breaking any rules," he said.

As far as the basketball program and beating Illinois, Rice said "we know it will be very difficult. But our kids will not quit. I feel they'll battle to the last straw. One thing I do know, however, I don't think either one will be thinking about Georgetown."

Brown Is Charged

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Pro football Hall of Fame member Jim Brown has been formally charged with one count each of rape, sexual battery and assault in connection with an alleged attack on a woman at his home last month, a prosecutor said.

The charges were filed Tuesday in Municipal Court and Brown was scheduled to appear Thursday morning for arraignment, said Deputy District Attorney Vivian omoza.

Deputy District Attorney Sandra Buttitta said Monday that prosecutors decided to charge Brown after a 33-year-old teacher complained that Brown punched her repeatedly in his Hollywood Hills home Feb. 19 to force her to have sex with him and a companion, Carol Moses.

Brown, who maintains he is innocent, had until Monday morning to produce two witnesses he claimed would clear him before prosecutors decided whether to file charges, Buttitta said. He failed to produce those witnesses.

Brown has been free on a $17,500 bond. Moses, 22, who was free on $1,000 bond after being booked for investigation of sexual battery, was not charged.

Brown played nine years in the National Football League with the Cleveland Browns before retiring in 1965. He was pro football's all-time leading ground-gainer until his record was broken by Walter Payton of the Chicago Bears in 1984. After retiring from football, Brown became an actor, starring in such films as the "Dirty Dozen."

Tigers Need Inside Game Against UNC's Tar Heels

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn Coach Sonny Smith says his basketball team will have to "wad up like chewing gum in the lane" to hold North Carolina's lanky players off the boards when the two squads collide Friday.

"We'd prefer a wide open transition game," said Smith, whose team is noted for its quickness. "But I think the game will come down to rebounding.

"In order to combat their size advantage, I think we'll wad up like chewing gum in the lane," he said. "We can't let North Carolina control the backboards."

Smith's remarks came Tuesday during a conference call with North Carolina Coach Dean Smith at a news conference.

Auburn and North Carolina play an NCAA Southeast Regional semifinal game on Friday at the Birmingham Civic Center.

At 6-foot-8, Chuck Person, Auburn's leading shooter, is also the team's tallest player and its leading rebounder.

At 6-11, Brad Daugherty dominates his team's rebounding effort, pulling down 9.7 a game. He also gets help from forwards Joe Wolf and Dave Popson, both 6-10.

Nevertheless, Dean Smith also said he was worried about rebounding.

"Auburn is a tremendous rebounding team," he said. "They got a lot of second shots in the first two rounds" of the NCAA tournament.

North Carolina will have to contain Person, "a tremendous all-around player," and keep Frank Ford "off the boards," the Tar Heel coach said.

Looking over Auburn's likely starters — two freshmen, two sophomores and a junior — Sonny Smith made no excuses for his team's relative inexperience.

"It's no fluke that we've advanced this far in the tournament," he said. "This will be a real test for our young club, but we're capable of playing with anyone."

North Carolina, whose probable starters also include only one senior, goes into the tourney playing its best basketball of the year, Dean Smith said.

"We've improved," he told reporters at the news conference. "We're not pressing as much as we have in the past, but we are playing more zone defense. And Brad Daugherty and Warren Martin are playing great for us inside."

Auburn, now 22-11, reached the semifinals by defeating Purdue and Kansas, while North Carolina, 21-10, got there by whipping Middle Tennessee State and Notre Dame.

According to Sonny Smith, the game against Kansas helped his players prepare for the Friday's semifinal game.

"We were fortunate enough to play Kansas because they play with a style that is similar to North Carolina's," he said. Both teams get the ball inside against the zone, make quick transitions and do a good job of switching defenses, he said.

UNC-Charlotte Refuses To Pay Laurinburg Fee

LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina-Charlotte refused a request from a Laurinburg Institute official to pay star basketball player Clinton Hinton's tuition at the prep school, UNCC's sports information director says.

Mark Colone, the school's sports information director, said the university refused the request to pay star Hinton's tuition at the Scotland County school that has produced such basketball players as Charlie Scott, Sam Jones and Chris Washburn.

"We told them we couldn't do that because it would be an outright violation of NCAA rules," Colone told WRAL-TV in Raleigh on Tuesday.

Hinton, who now plays for the 49ers, was the Sun Belt Conference rookie of this year. Hinton and West Virginia's Holman Harley are the subjects of an NCAA investigation into charges that college athletes received class credit at Laurinburg for work they did not perform, the station reported.

Pinckney Love, the former academic dean at Laurinburg Institute said earlier of Hinton and Harley,

"they simply paid their tuition got their grade point averages and moved onto their college basketball careers."

An NCAA investigator met with UNCC athletic officials and Hinton last week, Colone said. Colone said the NCAA wants to know who paid Hinton's $1,350 summer school bill at Laurinburg, Hinton told the NCAA that his family could not afford to make the payment and that UNCC did not pay the money, Colone said.

NCAA regulations forbid universities or their athletic representatives from funding pre-college educational expenses of their recruits.

Colone said late last summer, UNCC had not received Hinton's transcript so assistant basketball coach Melvin Watkins contacted a Laurinburg official, Colone told WRAL-TV that the unnamed Laurinburg official told Watkins there would be no transcript without payment of the bill.

Colone said the Laurinburg official asked Watkins to have the university "come up with the money" and that Watkins refused.

Hooper Is Renamed PCMH Board Chairman

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Trustees have re-elected Reid Hooper as board chairman.

Other officers named Tuesday night were Gene Paramore, vice chairman; Mamie Smith, secretary; Bernice Turnage, treasurer; Norma VanVeld, assistant treasurer, and Brenda Wagner-Sumner, parliamentarian.

Wayne Peterson, president of Carolina Telephone, of Tarboro and Bill Flowers, a Plymouth banker, joined the board as new members.

It was reported that the executive committee earlier in the day heard a report on a new "flexible compensation" plan for hospital employees and that the personnel committee will be further studying it during the next month. An Atlanta consulting firm, Hewett and Associates, has been retained to advise the personnel department on how such a plan can be begun and carried out.

It was reported that February was significantly busier than February, 1984, with 12,286 patient days versus 11,417 last year. PCMH's growth rate is the highest of 16 of the largest hospitals in North and South Carolina, it was noted.

Flight nurses are being trained and pilots are here for the hospital helicopter ambulance service which is expected to begin transporting patients perhaps by April 8, it was reported.

The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals survey team will be here April 2-4, it was announced. This survey, done at the hospital's invitation, is an intense study of the hospital's quality of service and a favorable report is a public statement of that quality, hospital vice president Fred Brown told the board.

Jack Richardson, hospital president, reported that he and East Carolina University Medical School Dean Dr. William Laupus have visited Minneapolis, Minn., to learn more about the services of a firm which administers smaller hospital programs. He thinks this firm might be of service to the East Carolina Health Services effort to assist smaller hospitals in the region in offering the services needed by patients in their areas.

Half the medical staff was reapproved for staff privileges, following a recommendation by the medical staff credentials committee.

An educational program on the PCMH Regional Rehabilitation Center and its plans and activities was given by Dr. Ulrich Alsentzer, medical director of rehabilitation services, and Debbie Davis, assistant vice president for rehabilitation services. Ms. Davis told the board that a residency program in psychiatry (rehabilitation medicine) may be established here sooner than was originally thought, perhaps within the next three years. It would be only the third in the Southeastern United States.

Capital expenditures were approved as follows: for the operating room, a ceiling-mounted microscope at $60,000; for radiology, a multifrequency transducer instrument guide, $11,250, and for radiology, motorized film and report files, $65,000.

Legislators KO Minimum SAT Score In UNC System

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislature has no business setting college admission standards, lawmakers said as they overwhelmingly defeated a proposed minimum SAT score of 700 for entrance to the University of North Carolina.

"It's not our role in the General Assembly to make this kind of decision for the university system," Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, told fellow members of the House Higher Education Committee on Tuesday.

"God made some folks smart and God made some folks athletes, and I think both ought to be given a chance," added Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham.

Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, sponsor of the bill, said he realized the Scholastic Aptitude Test isn't the only yardstick by which the 16 UNC schools measure an applicant.

But "I know something's got to be done" to upgrade standards, the former high school teacher and coach said.

"I don't think that the university system should be a minor league for professional sports, and I think that's what some of them are trying to do," said Chapin.

His bill — and an identical one sponsored by Rep. Frank Rhodes, R-Forsyth, that also was killed — drew heavy opposition from UNC President William Friday and other university officials.

They said a system-wide minimum with no exceptions would be unfair and unrealistic, and that setting admission policies should be left to the UNC Board of Governors and individual campuses.

"We've got a long list of students who have gone through the system and done outstanding work despite scoring less than 700," said Raymond Dawson, UNC vice president for academic affairs.

He told the committee last week that the average SAT score among students at all five predominantly black UNC schools was below 700 between 1974 and 1984, and warned that a minimum of 700 would be "devastating" to the system's desegregation effort.

The SAT measures verbal, reasoning and mathematical skills. Universities also consider an applicant's high school grades, extracurricular activities and recommendations. Chapin said he decided to introduce his bill after hearing Friday tell the committee weeks ago he had favored a minimum SAT score for years. Chapin acknowledged Tuesday he misunderstood Friday, who said he was talking about a nationwide plan for freshman athletes.

He offered a substitute bill, which the committee unanimously rejected, to require that applicants meet one of two standards. The first was a minimum SAT score of 600 in the 1986-87 academic year, 650 in 1987-88 and 700 in 1988-89 and thereafter.

History Day Winners Listed

Approximately 200 students from 16 northeastern North Carolina schools were at East Carolina University for ECU's annual National History Day Contest recently. The students entered individual and group projects relating to this year's History Day theme, "Triumphs and Tragedies in History."

The winners, representing schools in Williamston, Columbia, Gatesville, Sunbury and Greenville, are eligible for the state competi-

Second Attorney Proposed For Poor In Capital Cases

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Indigent people on trial for their lives should be assured of having two state-paid lawyers to handle the "horrible burden" of a capital case, a Senate committee has been told.
"If capital punishment is going to be a reality in this state, and we know it is because we've already executed two, then we need to make every effort to protect these people's rights," Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said Tuesday.
Rand told the Senate Judiciary IV

Committee the state already spends $1.1 million a year to defend poor clients, and adding a second attorney for the defense in a capital case would cost the state an estimated $500,000 a year.
Last year, there were 255 capital cases in North Carolina involving indigent defendants represented by only one court-appointed lawyer, Rand said.
Committee Chairman R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, and Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, both attorneys, said the bill is not designed to line lawyers' pockets.

"If you're a competent lawyer and have a good practice, you'll lose money on every one of these cases," Soles said.
The bill was sent to a subcommittee to work out details on when an assistant counsel would be appointed. Rand suggested the subcommittee consider requiring district attorneys to declare before a trial whether they plan to seek the death penalty.
In other legislative action:
A bill supporters say would give North Carolina a 20-to-1 return on its investment in diagnosing defects in newborns was approved by the House Health Committee.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said the bill would appropriate $100,000 in 1985-86 and $120,000 in 1986-87 to screen all North Carolina infants for phenylketonuria and hypothyroidism. The bill also calls for a study of extending the screening to galactosemia.
All three metabolic disorders can lead to mental retardation and severe medical problems if undetected, but if treated early can be controlled.
Screening would cost about $1.50 for each child while a child suffering PKU could be institutionalized for its entire life span at a cost of up to $3 million, said Neil Kirkman, a pediatrician from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

A Senate Agriculture subcommittee has delayed action on a bill to give tobacco growers a tax credit equal to their assessment payments because of possible changes in the federal tobacco program.
"We've heard the assessment may be rolled back," Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, told the panel. "If they do that, the bill won't make any sense."

Soles said federal officials, growers and tobacco companies have been negotiating about cutting the assessment growers pay for leaf that goes to stabilization in return for a lower guaranteed price on tobacco.
In other action, Allen Spalt of the Rural Advancement Fund asked the committee to consider legislation requiring an Agriculture Department review of hog and poultry contracts.
The House will take up the matter Wednesday.

Interstate 40 Tunnel May Be Open To Public Traffic In Three Weeks

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

Truckers — including one killed last weekend — using narrow mountain detours in lieu of a stretch of Interstate 40 blocked by a massive rock slide may be rolling back onto the interstate in three weeks, officials say.

"We're not doing too bad with all that traffic coming in through there (on U.S. 25-70)," said Capt. C.H. Long, troop commander for the Asheville division of the state Highway Patrol. "It's terrible to have a fatality. But we've been lucky, real lucky."

The March 5 rock slide sent thousands of tons of rock and dirt crashing down onto an I-40 tunnel four miles from the Tennessee line, crushing the entrance to the westbound tube and blocking the entrance to the eastbound tube with boxcar-sized boulders.

Highway workers have been blasting and removing rocks from the front of the eastbound tube, which will be used for westbound traffic during the nine months it takes to repair the westbound tube, said state Department of Transportation spokesman Bill Jones. A narrow access road between the mountain and the Pigeon River is being paved for use by eastbound traffic, he said.

"We're very happy with the way it's going," Jones said. "We're looking at about three or four weeks before the eastbound tunnel is open."

Workers still must blast more rock off the cliffside that spawned the rock slide.

"This presents a problem because we don't know what's going to happen when we blast," he said. "Everything could be fine, but it could dump a whole lot more rock we have to clean up."

Meanwhile, trucks and cars using the major route between North Carolina and Tennessee have been forced onto two major detours: U.S. 19-23 for traffic into Tennessee and U.S. 25-70 for traffic from Tennessee and for twin trailers in both directions. Accidents on the detours have claimed the life of one trucker.

William C. LaMotte, 44, of Belleville, Mich., died Sunday when his tractor-trailer plunged over the side of U.S. 25-70.

LaMotte's truck fell where the road's shoulder was broken March 6 when Ohio driver Michael Zimmer's tractor-trailer crashed into a ravine. Zimmer, 20, was in satisfactory condition Tuesday at Memorial Mission Hospital in Asheville, but a nurse said he would need more surgery on his legs.

Long said there were 15 accidents on U.S. 25-70 between March 11 and March 17 — 13 of them involving tractor-trailers. He said LaMotte and Zimmer have been the only major casualties so far, and there have been no major accidents on U.S. 19-23 since it was designated a detour.

"(U.S.) 25-70 is about the same distance as the interstate, but it's a lot curvier and it's all two-lane roads," said Long. "They've got a lot of mountains to climb over, and time-wise, it's quite a bit of difference — about one and a half or two hours."

Some curves are so sharp that trucks must wait for oncoming traffic to stop before they try to negotiate them, he said.

"The problem is the length of the trailers they're running now," he said. "The road was built when they had trucks 38 feet long, but now some are 48 feet. They stretch 'em out and they can't bend 'em around."

Ten extra troopers were assigned to the detours, and at least three men are on line patrol 24 hours a day, Long said.

"The visibility of a marked patrol car helps," he said. "Then we can assist if we're needed."

IN THE STATE

CONGESTED — U.S. 25-70 from Hot Springs to Asheville is a winding, twisting road through North Carolina's mountains but it is now the main route for traffic after tunnels on Interstate 40 were closed by a rockslide. One fatal accident and several serious incidents involving large trucks have occurred. The detour, a normal 30-minute drive, can now take more than 90 minutes because of traffic such as that shown above. (AP Laserphoto)

State Retail Sales Double Rate Of National Growth

CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina's retail sales are growing twice as fast as burgeoning retail sales nationwide, an industry official says.

"It's because North Carolina has such a vibrant economy," said William Rustin Jr., president of the North Carolina Retail Merchants Association in Raleigh. "There are pockets where it's tight. But ... Mecklenburg County's going great guns, expanding in all directions. The Triangle area up here is just working at its peak and the Triad is the same way."

Rustin said North Carolina retail sales in February were up 14 percent over February 1984 and up 13 percent for the year to date.

"We've been pretty well doubling what the national figures have been for a good period of time," said Rustin, whose figures are based on reports from more than 1,000 stores around the state.

Nationwide, retail sales climbed 6.3 percent from February 1984 to February 1985, the U.S. Commerce Department announced last week. Sales rose 1.4 percent from January to February, almost triple the 0.5 percent gain in January and the biggest monthly gain since November's 1.5 percent.

Department officials said the increase was fueled by demand for new cars and department store goods. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldwin said it would help retailers reduce swollen inventories and spur further gains in domestic production and employment.

Rustin didn't have monthly retail sales figures for North Carolina or the total amount sold in the state in February. But last year he said retailers sold an estimated $33 billion worth of goods.

North Carolina retailers were led by food, with a 17 percent increase over February 1984, followed by soft goods at 15 percent, building materials at 13 percent, durable goods at 13 percent and general merchandise at 7 percent.

Rustin said building supply firms have consistently been running a point or two above the North Carolina retail sales growth average.

"They got it both ways," he said. "If people are building, they've got a lot of penetration. Same if they're doing it themselves when the house gets older."

N.C. Fruit Crop Hurt By Freeze

CASTLE HAYNE, N.C. (AP) — An early spring freeze has nipped eastern North Carolina fruit and berry crops, including the peach crop, which froze out in 1982 and 1983 and brought low prices last year, growers and agriculture officials say.

About 15 farmers have begun peach orchards in Columbus County and about five of these are in production, said Columbus County Extension Chairman Garland McCullen. He said early varieties of peaches were hurt by Tuesday morning's freeze, while later varieties probably escaped much damage.

The state's major peach producing area in Sandhills counties sustained a double whammy with warm, early winter temperatures preventing trees from going into complete dormancy. As a result, severe bud damage occurred in January, said Danny McInnis of the Candor area, past president of the North Carolina Peach Growers Association.

This week's freeze wiped out most of the remaining peach crop potential in North Carolina, he said.

Strawberries and blueberries also felt the cold, although the extent of damage was not known.

"It got a lot of the blooms," said Henry Flynn, who grows strawberries about two miles west of Hallsboro on U.S. 74-76.

"I don't know how many. Probably the first and second pickings. I haven't got too many blooms now," Flynn said.

The fate of the blueberry crop won't be known for a day or two, said Tom Blake, superintendent of the Horticultural Crops Research Station at Castle Hayne.

"I'm afraid it got some berries," McCullen said. He said the mercury dipped to 22 degrees at 6 a.m. Tuesday at his home, two miles north of Whiteville.

C.M. Mainland, extension horticulturist, said earlier that the blueberry crop probably escaped any serious damage in the January freeze because it was dormant.

The temperature dropped to 17 degrees at the station's fields near the Dixie Cement plant northeast of Castle Hayne early Tuesday.

For three to four hours, the temperature was below 26 degrees — a critical temperature for blueberries, Blake said.

Strawberries are no longer a major crop in southeastern North Carolina, but 150 to 250 people grow small acreages, mostly for pick-your-own harvesting.

The deep January freeze also killed off new growth brought on by warm December and early January weather. Strawberry plants were reaching blossom stage prior to the most recent freeze, which killed blossoms.

Pauline Council of Hallsboro said the J.B. Council strawberry crop was irrigated Monday night and Tuesday morning to protect the buds and blossoms. She couldn't estimate the damage. The Councils grow berries to sell at their stand in Hallsboro. She said the plants were hurt by the January freeze.

Turner Says Met Helms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atlanta businessman Ted Turner has acknowledged to CBS attorneys that he held discussions with Sen. Jesse Helms and a conservative group about taking over the network, a newspaper reported today.

Quoting unidentified sources familiar with a deposition given Monday by the sports and cable television executive, The Washington Post said Turner admitted that his discussions with Helms and Fairness in Media included proposals on how the parties might cooperate in a bid for CBS and how the new owners might change the network's programming.

In Atlanta, Turner Broadcasting Systems spokesman Art Sando confirmed Tuesday that Turner gave the deposition, but declined to provide further details.

The newspaper said Turner refused to say if he plans to launch a takeover bid for CBS on his own. Turner's lawyers advised him throughout the deposition to restrict his comments to his relationship with Helms and the North Carolina-based FIM, the newspaper said.

The Post added that while spokesmen for both CBS and Turner refused to comment on the deposition, which is not yet a public document, sources on both sides confirmed privately that Turner had disclosed details of his relationship with Helms and FIM to CBS lawyers.

In the deposition, Turner was questioned in connection with a CBS suit that charges Fairness in Media with violations of federal securities laws, improper political activities by tax-exempt organizations and illegal corporate political contributions.

Sando said Los Angeles attorney Jack Zepp, whose firm specializes in corporate takeover cases, was representing Turner.

'Cosby' And 'Family Ties' Lead Ratings

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "The People's Choice Awards" was the 13th-rated show last week, but the 12 regular series ahead of it reflected the public's real television favorites. Once again, it was NBC's most popular comedies — "The Cosby Show" and "Family Ties" — and prime-time's biggest serial addictions — "Dynasty" and "Dallas" — leading the way in the 25th week of the 30-week prime-time season. According to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co. for the week of March 11-17, "The Cosby Show" had a 28.3 rating, or 24 million homes, followed by its Thursday night stablemate, "Family Ties," with a 24.2 rating. ABC's "Dynasty," the season's No. 1 show, also had a 24.2 rating. NBC's "The A-Team" was fourth, with 23.3, and CBS' "Dallas" had 22.7. Following the leaders were CBS' "Murder She Wrote," CBS' "60 Minutes," NBC's "Cheers" and CBS' "Crazy Like a Fox," tied for eighth, and ABC's "Hotel." "What's distinctive about last week was there was nothing special at all," said Curt Block, an NBC vice president. For the week, CBS edged NBC again, with an average 15.8 rating. NBC had a 15.7 and ABC had a 14.3. Season to date, CBS has averaged a 17.1 rating to NBC's 16.3 and ABC's 15.6.

A rating of 1 equals an audience for a given minute of 1 percent of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes. The highest rated special-event program last week was CBS' "People's Choice Awards," which finished in 13th place, with a 19.2 rating. That was a decline of nearly three points from last season, but CBS said it was a solid performance considering NBC's revitalized Thursday night lineup. The top-ranking movie was a repeat of "The Burning Bed," which remains the No. 1-rated film this season. In October, "The Burning Bed," starring Farrah Fawcett as a battered wife who eventually kills her husband, had a 36.2 rating and was watched by more than half the viewers. This time, it ranked 22nd with 17.1 rating and was watched by a little more than a quarter of the viewers. "Repeating movies within the same regular season is a new attitude," said Block. "Audiences are more accepting of it. Cable does it all the time. They even repeat movies the next day. We've learned for some movies you don't have to rest them a year and a half." ABC beat CBS in the battle of new Friday series. ABC's "Mr. Belvedere," starring Christopher Hewitt as a male housekeeper and surrogate parent, ranked 21st with a 17.2 rating, beating the debut of CBS' "Detective in the House," starring Judd Hirsch, and NBC's month-old "Code Name: Foxfire." "Detective in the House" tied for 39th. "Foxfire" was 63rd out of 69 programs. The five lowest-rated prime-time shows, in descending order, were CBS' "Alice," "Missing" ("The CBS Wednesday Night Movie"), NBC's "Silver Spoons," the NBC documentary "Women, Work & Babies," and CBS' "Otherworld," with an 8.5 rating, or 7.2 million homes.

NBC's "Today" had a 4.6 and the "CBS Morning News" had a 3.5. The morning broadcasts combined 13.9 rating, or 11.8 million homes, would have been good enough for 45th place in prime time. Last week, the three-network evening newscasts totaled a 34.8 rating, which equals 29.5 million homes. The "CBS Evening News" had a 13.1 rating to an 11.1 for the "NBC Nightly News" and a 10.6 for ABC's "World News Tonight."

ABC Special Will Provide Network Debut For Priest

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the past 25 years, many of television's biggest stars have worked for producer Ellwood "Bud" Kieser in local and syndicated productions, but it took him that long to make it to the networks. ABC will broadcast his network debut, "The Fourth Wise Man," as a one-hour Easter special on Saturday, March 30. It stars Martin Sheen, Ralph Bellamy, Alan Arkin, Eileen Brennan, Richard Libertini and Lance Kerwin. It is a first for a Roman Catholic priest and a Catholic production company, for producer Kieser is the Rev. Ellwood Kieser, the head of Paulist Productions. Since 1960 he has been the executive producer of "Insight" and he is the president of the Human Family Institute, which awards the Humanitas Prizes each year.

"In the drama, based on a short story called 'The Other Wise Man' by Henry Van Dyke, a Protestant minister, Sheen plays a magi who studies the prophecies and hopes to find the Messiah. He pursues him for 33 years, only to miss him at every turn, until he finally finds Christ in the final moments of his life. Kieser is developing other movies for the networks and is producing a syndicated series called "Buchanan H.S.," set in a high school newspaper office. "We are moving into the mainstream, and we're hoping 'The Fourth Wise Man' will be the first of many," he said. "I think several things brought about the change. I think the public has shown a regard for religious values they didn't have before. I think the regard for our production company has grown. I think the commercially sponsored 'Family Specials' we did for Capital Cities Communications helped bring us into the mainstream." He said he found his move into network competition "an interesting experience."

Kieser said he is also developing a feature film on Oscar Romero, archbishop of San Salvador, who was assassinated in 1980, and a three-hour special on Dorothy Day, the founder of the Catholic Worker movement. "Buchanan H.S." is a half-hour show which will explore the moral dilemmas of today's teen-agers. "Teen-agers are a neglected segment of our population, but spiritually a very needy segment," he said. Kieser said he is also developing a feature film on Oscar Romero, archbishop of San Salvador, who was assassinated in 1980, and a three-hour special on Dorothy Day, the founder of the Catholic Worker movement.

That figure is a failure in prime time, but it would be a record-breaker in the morning, where ABC's "Good Morning America" showed its highest viewing levels since summer with an average 5.8 rating for the week ending March 8.

He said he was encouraged to enter the mainstream by Jim McGinn, director of development for Bristol-Myers and writer of a dozen "Insight" scripts. Bristol-Myers is sponsor of "The Fourth Wise Man." "Insight" was for many years Kieser's vehicle for spreading spiritual values. It was the most widely televised religious TV series, and at its height was seen on 274 stations. It tackled such subjects as the plight of the working man, prison reform, genetic manipulation, child abuse and the theology of liberation. But the deregulation of television has made it more difficult to get good timeslots. "Insight" is still being distributed, but no new shows have been made since 1983. "For years it seemed that our best investment was 'Insight,'" he said, "and now it seems to be movies. As one door was being closed, another was being opened." Kieser, who is 6-foot-6, was born in Philadelphia in 1929. He became a Paulist priest in 1956. Although he

Legislators Study Changes In Penalty For Tax Fraud

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State tax cheaters could face amnesty — or felony charges — under alternative proposals discussed by the Budget Committee on General Government.

Revenue Secretary Helen Powers told the panel Tuesday that amnesty would be "a temporary relief." "As a permanent, ongoing thing I don't think I would favor it," she said. "I would like to see us tighten our statutes on people who don't file returns."

Deputy Revenue Secretary James Senter added that amnesty "would not be worthwhile unless you give us felony provisions."

He said current law makes tax fraud or evasion a limited misdemeanor punishable by six months in prison. A bill introduced last session to upgrade the penalties to a felony got through the House after the penalty was made a two-year maximum but never got out of the Senate, he added.

Ms. Powers urged the panel not to cut the Revenue Department's proposed $34.9 million budget, which calls for $900,000 in expansion funds for 1985-86. She said the 3.5 percent increase would be enough if "managed very carefully during the coming year."

Ms. Powers said her staff is looking at ways to upgrade its facilities.

"We are literally bursting at the seams in revenue," she said. "I believe this need has long been overlooked."

Meanwhile, state Auditor Ed Renfrow defended educating employees on state time when members questioned policies giving professional staff members 40 hours a year to keep up with changes in audit procedures.

"Why can't they do that on their own time?" asked Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, after staff members said the time lost was enough to pay for three department positions.

Renfrow said "we wouldn't be an effective auditing organization" without such policies.

"You pass a lot of laws, rules and regulations that you expect to be adhered to," he said. "We go over all those changes and the appropriations bills. I doubt very seriously if many of them would read it (the appropriations bill) on Saturday afternoon while the basketball game's on."

Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, co-chairman of the committee, asked whether other agencies provided similar time off for continuing education.

"I don't know of any agency in government that doesn't use state time to keep up skills," Renfrow said. "Even the Legislature does it. You have training seminars for new legislators. You have training seminars for county commissioners."

House Panel Hears Debate On Open Meetings Proposal

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill designed to strengthen North Carolina's open-meeting law would mire government actions in uncertainty, opponents say.

The bill, introduced by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, would empower courts to negate actions taken in illegally closed gatherings. Such a ruling could come within 90 days of the time the disputed action is made public, Miller told the House Judiciary I Committee on Tuesday.

"It appears that this ... would place at least a 90-day cloud over the actions" of governmental bodies, said Ron Aycock, executive director of the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners.

But Hugh Stevens, who represents the North Carolina Press Association, said the current law "simply doesn't deal with the real problem. It's locking the barn door when the horse has gotten away."

Currently, if there's a violation the courts can do nothing but warn the offender not to do it again, he said.

Stevens said the law is generally respected, but that some governmental and regulatory bodies flout it.

"They simply won't acknowledge the policy ... that the people's business ought to be done in the sunshine," he said. "They look for any opportunity to subvert" the law.

Attorneys for local governments and hospitals warned that the bill, favored by Gov. Jim Martin, could be abused by people wanting to delay implementation of land transactions, bond issuance, zonings and other controversial decisions.

Most lawsuits under the bill would be filed by opponents of the action, not by people concerned about whether it occurred in a legal setting, Aycock said.

Aycock said emergency appropriations for such projects as delivering meals to the elderly might be held up if county commissioners fear the action will be challenged.

Other critics focused on the provision that permits challenges within 90 days after the action is brought to light, saying the law doesn't make clear when the move has been legally made public.

"That could be years and years," said Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance.

Steve Morrisette, lobbyist for the North Carolina Hospital Association, "the burden is on the press association to prove" the current law is insufficient.

"There now is a pretty strong amount of protection (of) the public that its business will be done in the open," he said.

Some members of the press association want an even tougher law that would make violation a crime, Stevens said. But most are more interested in encouraging compliance than punishment, he said.

"We're not here to put people in jail or make them pay fines ... or hold them up to public embarrassment," said Stevens.

The current law, passed in 1979, states that "legislative, policy-making, quasi-judicial, administrative and advisory" functions of government must be "conducted openly."

The law permits closed sessions for consideration of such matters as hiring, firing or disciplining personnel, buying property, pending litigation, and civil disorders. In each case, final action must be taken in public.

The law allows people who think a violation is imminent to get an injunction prohibiting it, but that seldom happens because violations usually aren't discovered until too late, Stevens said.

The committee did not act on the bill, and Miller, committee chairman, said there would be more discussion on it next week.

ANCHOR INSPECTION — The 1,350-pound anchor of the historic Civil War ironclad U.S.S. Monitor is lifted from its special storage tank at East Carolina University for periodic inspection. The anchor is to be removed from its tank and placed on exhibit by the National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration next September. The anchor was recovered from the shipwreck site in 1983. Woman Finds Dream As Waitress BOONE, N.C. (AP) — Some people fantasize about being rich and famous or being powerful and strong, while others dream about finding danger and adventure.

But Charlotte businesswoman Lynn Martin had a different kind of dream — she dreamed about working at the Boone Drug Co., a center of activity in downtown Boone and home of the locally known coffee club.

She recently fulfilled her dream. "You wouldn't believe how much fun this is," said Mrs. Martin, while sitting down to eat after the lunch rush. "It doesn't seem like work to me."

Mrs. Martin, who lives in Fort Mill, S.C., with her husband Bill, and daughter, Ashley, decided during one of the regular family visits to the mountains that she wanted to work at the drug store for a week. The Martins own a chalet in Boone and come up on weekends once or twice a month — they've been coming to Boone since their honeymoon seven and a half years ago.

"I would go back and say, 'Gosh, I would love to do that. I would love to be a waitress at Boone Drug,'" she said. "My husband would say, 'Why don't you ask?'"

Mrs. Martin admits that she was nervous about asking, afraid that the owner, Joe Miller, would laugh.

"I have 15 employees, and I interview people all the time," she said. "But to ask someone for a job for a week and without them thinking you're crazy is hard."

Finally, on a trip to the mountains a few weeks ago, Martin made her ask. "He said, 'We are going to Boone Drug for lunch and I want you to ask him,'" said Mrs. Martin.

So she did, and Miller didn't even laugh. "He didn't laugh at me," she said. "Everybody has one thing they want to do."

So she arranged to leave her business for a week — she owns Carolina Answering Service in Charlotte — with the encouragement of her employees who even gave her a waitress cap, an apron and several tips on waiting such as what kind of shoes to wear.

And after four days of work, Mrs. Martin has no regrets.

Klan Group Changes Name, Threatens To Take Up Arms

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Glenn Miller, leader of the Confederate Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, is divorcing his group from the Klan and threatening a guerilla war against the federal government if it jails him.

His group changed its name Friday to the White Patriot Party, he said.

"We want to reach the hearts and minds of our people, and we cannot do that under the name Ku Klux Klan," Miller told reporters Tuesday in a short news conference in front of the Legislative Building.

The White Patriot Party has "contingency plans" to use the "armed resources at our disposal" to go to war against the government and punish "federal tyrants and their puppets" if they arrest him or his followers, Miller said.

He said the government is trying to frame him, but would not say which part of the government is after him or how he will be trapped.

"We know through inside government sources that the federal government is at this minute, plotting to frame myself and possibly other leaders within our organization," Miller said. "They have been

GLENN MILLER

He said most people are ignorant of his group's real purpose — white supremacy — because the "Jewish-controlled" news media has convinced the country that its real goal is subjugation of blacks.

"People think it's the role of our life to make blacks behave themselves," Miller said, adding that is not true. "If blacks started acting civilized and human, more white people would be receptive to the idea of mingling with them."

"Our main enemy is the Jews. They force us to race-mix," he said.

Miller, who ended his speech with a Nazi salute and by proclaiming, "Hail victory and white power," said his group will change its tactics slightly, although it will continue to march under the Confederate battle flag. Dressed in battle camouflage as is usual for him, Miller said the White Patriot Party will not wear Klan sheets or robes.

The party retains a "deep respect" for the Klan, Miller said, although "masses are not going to join the Ku Klux Klan."

Miller would not explain how his organization will change to endear itself to the general public, except by taking a new name.

ordered by their Jew masters to stop Glenn Miller and to shut me up." Miller said his group has 1,500 members, who will work "legally and peaceably within the system as long as the federal government does." But he says the group will take up arms if the government tries to take away "our hopes and dreams for a united free people."

A Lot of Hoop-la

Tomorrow, NCAA regional basketball tournaments begin. The first 5-man college basketball game was played on March 20, 1897. Yale defeated Pennsylvania, 32-10. Many people claim James Naismith invented basketball in 1891 at the Springfield, Massachusetts, YMCA. Players tossed a ball into peach baskets at either end of a court. Some people say the game comes from the 16th-century Aztecs. The winner of that game received the clothing of everyone present!

DO YOU KNOW — Which team won the 1984 NCAA Division I championship?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — The swallows usually leave San Juan Capistrano on October 19.

Experts Warn Poison Can Become Deadly Substance For Any Child

WASHINGTON (AP) — After eight years of teaching people how to prevent childhood poisonings, Pauline Coker thought she had covered all the bases in her own home.

But, out of sight for only moments, her 2-year-old daughter Kristen found the blood pressure medicine in her visiting grandfather's suitcase and swallowed some of the pills before being discovered.

A dose of syrup of ipecac emptied the child's stomach to bring the incident to a safe, if uncomfortable, ending, Mrs. Coker explained Monday. But, she told a news conference marking the start of National Poison Prevention Week, it shows that unexpected danger can threaten any child.

Wary of dangerous medicines, chemicals and other possible poisons around the home, Mrs. Coker said she failed to consider items visitors might bring with them, despite her work as a consumer adviser at the Food and Drug Administration.

Indeed, Poison Prevention Week Chairman William W. Bradley observed that grandparents are being given special attention this year, since they are increasing as sources of medications ingested by children.

Older people are likely to have medications with them or in their homes, officials explained, but may not have them locked away or in child-resistant containers because they do not normally have children around them.

Chairman Terrence M. Scanlon of the Consumer Product Safety Commission noted that a recent study by Children's Hospital in Birmingham, Ala., found that 36 percent of cases when children ingested prescription medicines occurred at the homes of grandparents.

"As parents, despite our most vigilant efforts, our active, curious children will seek and discover. Fifty to sixty percent of children will be victims of poisoning before their fifth birthday," warned Dr. Toby Litovitz who directs the National Capital Poison Center at Georgetown University Hospital.

Thanks to better medical care, deaths from poisoning have declined over the years, but the total number of incidents of children ingesting poisons remains higher than ever, Ms. Litovitz commented, estimating the total at a half-million cases annually.

And she said a major reason is failure of adults to use child-resistant packages for medications. She urged adults to be patient and use those containers, which can help save children's lives.

"Even though they are only child-resistant and not childproof, studies demonstrate that they decrease the risk of accidental pediatric ingestion by a factor of six," Ms. Litovitz said.

Scanlon noted that the theme of this year's poison prevention week is "Children Act Fast ... So Do Poisons," and he urged parents to place dangerous medications, solvents, cleaning fluids and such materials safely away from children.

"In fact, anyone who might have a child visit in their home needs to recognize the responsibility of protecting that child from preventable danger," said Bradley.

Bradley did present good news at the session, noting that when poison prevention weeks were begun in 1961 there were some 450 childhood deaths from poison each year. Now poison control centers around the nation — like the one run by Ms. Litovitz at Georgetown — have helped cut that toll to 53 deaths as of 1981.

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon, you have the chance to wind up some matters which have been hanging over from the past and which have been pretty difficult to solve.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Morning should be spent getting chores done and later you can study what it is you most desire in life.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) First get your personal goals well clarified in your mind and then find the right way to gain them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Don't take any risks with your reputation in the morning and then you can study how best to gain cherished longings.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You have to work new ideas out better if you want to be successful with them. Avoid a certain stranger.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) If you argue over some business affair in the morning, you would easily get into trouble. Find better ways of handling things.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't get irritated with an associate over some pending deal and thereby put a monkey wrench into the works.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Compose yourself early and you can accomplish a great deal today and make real progress. Be gentle with co-workers.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You find it hard to arrange for entertainment, so get busy at some work that is worthwhile. Co-workers are cooperative.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Do nothing that home ties may feel you are not appreciative of them in the morning. Enjoy amusements together.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A letter could worry you in the morning if you permit, but the evening can be very delightful at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Don't jump from property to financial matters and suffer a loss during the day, but study periodicals for data at night.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Some project may seem difficult to complete, but perhaps you are too tense, so relax and all is fine.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will need to be taught the right principles and tenets early in life that will be helpful. Upon reaching adulthood, your progeny can be most dynamic and have wonderful ideas that can bring much success.

Bees See Like Man

After WASHINGTON (AP) — Honey bees see better, or at least more like humans do, than bee-watchers have long thought, a Princeton University biologist says.

Not that they care to see most of the things humans look at. If a bee lands on your television or your book — or you — there is still no scientific evidence that it really knows what it's watching.

What bees want to see are flowers from which to extract nectar. And biologist James L. Gould's study, published in today's issue of the journal Science, says their ability in that area has been underrated.

"Some studies have suggested that bees remember only isolated features" such as the angles or spaces between lines in a flower pattern rather than the photographic images that are typical of humans and other animals with backbones, says a summary of his study.

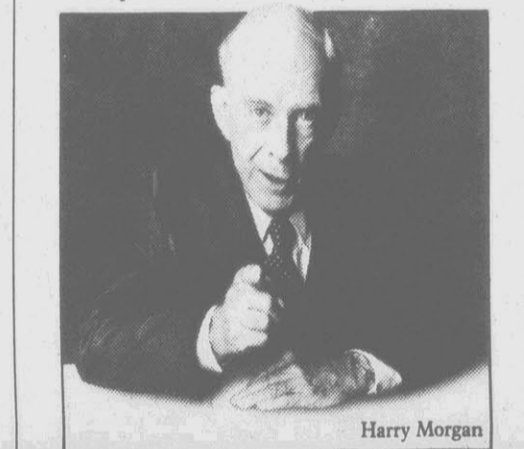

However, the summary says his study shows that bees, like humans, actually see "a low-resolution eidetic image," in other words something akin to a photograph.

Gould devised an elaborate series of vision tests in hopes of learning what a bee sees — besides color — that enables it to recognize appropriate flowers.

The bees in his test were shown various choices of flower drawings, receiving sucrose rewards when they flew to what he had determined in advance would be "correct" choices.

Nights-Only Restaurant Is Haven For Insomniacs

CLAIRTON, Pa. (AP) — The Bluebird Restaurant hasn't seen the light of day since World War II. It's a cozy, friendly place where insomniacs seek comfort, dates linger into the night, gamblers count their money and regulars savor the sweet taste of permanence.

"You always run into someone you know," said Bob Shuster, 42, a Clairton native who has lived all over the country. "I've been coming here since I was a kid.... In 40 years, all they've changed is the tablecloths."

The restaurant's unusual hours — 9 p.m. to 4 a.m. Tuesday through Thursday and to 5 a.m. Friday and Saturday — haven't changed in more than 40 years.

"The night was always good to us," said owner George Romanos, 60. "I tried other businesses. I just didn't like it. This is a fun place. I not only make a good living here, I have a lot of fun, too."

In decades past, the Bluebird drew customers from the nearby steel mills along the Monongahela River. Now the mills are quiet and many storefronts in this once-thriving Allegheny County town are boarded up.

Still, the 62-year-old restaurant thrives through the night, drawing its customers "from as far as 30 to 50 miles away" and offering them hearty one-pound steaks, fresh sauteed mushrooms and Greek-style onions and peppers in tomato sauce.

"When you get a little reputation, people will come from all over. If we depended on Clairton, we wouldn't be here," Romanos said.

"There are people out all night long," said his wife, Laura, 60. "People who work — bartenders, show people — people on dates. Groups have reunion classes here. The young people like this place because it's not plastic."

The older people who grew up with the Bluebird "love to come and reminisce," Romanos said.

There's nothing fancy or gimmicky about the Bluebird. The decor is plain, the food plentiful.

A 50-year-old neon sign, showing a bird outlined in blue and the word "restaurant" spelled out in pink, flashes its message in the cold night air.

The booths, the counter, even the coffee urn and marble-glass splashboard behind shelves of water glasses have been fixtures since the business was moved from another part of town to St. Clair Avenue in 1938.

"Everything is fresh," Mrs. Romanos explained. "We have no freezers."

"And we never have any leftover food," said Romanos' 79-year-old mother, Annie, who founded the restaurant with her husband in 1923.

In those days, Mrs. Romanos said, the diner was open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, "the way all the restaurants were back then."

Food shortages during World War

II forced the Bluebird to cut back its hours. But rather than curtailing the night trade, the day business was dropped because Annie Romanos' husband, George, "always made more money at night."

"There was no waste or preparation. And he just didn't like daytime people. He liked the swingers," Romanos said.

Colorful characters like "bootleggers, whores and gamblers" patronized the Bluebird, Romanos said.

On weekends, the weekday in-

"Louie Armstrong and Jose Greco were here. We had a five-piece band in here already. Lots of stories are in this place," he said with a broad smile.

"There used to be this gambler who came in here," he said, leaning back in his chair. "He'd bring his satchel in and have my dad watch it while he ate. Finally I got up enough nerve to ask him how much was in there. He told me $30,000. I was making $50 a week then and this guy has $30,000 sitting in his case."

On weekends, the weekday ininsomniacs and loners are replaced by lovers on dates, Romanos said.

"Daylight people are working people," said Theresa Kessler, 50, a waitress at the Bluebird for 16 years. "They have a 10-minute break or a half hour or 45 minutes for lunch."

"At night, it's altogether different," she said. "They're in no hurry to get home. They're relaxed. These are the best people to wait on, believe me. And they love to eat. You can't believe the food. They eat more than daylight people."

Capistrano Swallows Return

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (AP) — The cheers of tourists and the ringing of church bells greeted the swallows of San Juan Capistrano on Tuesday as they completed their annual journey to an old mission in this coastal town.

Eighty-nine-year-old Paul Arbisio and his grandson, Mike Gestelum, 29, tolled four cast-iron bells in the garden of the Mission San Juan Capistrano while a half-dozen swallows circled overhead.

Arbisio said the loud pealing of the bells sometimes frightens the shy birds away, "but we ring them anyway," to let the people know the birds have arrived.

Arbisio has been the mission's official swallow spotter and bellringer for the past four decades.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes between March 7 and March 13. There were no contested Senate votes during the period.

HUNGER — By a vote of 286 for and 124 against, the House extended the life of its Select Committee on Hunger for another two years. The resolution (H Res 20) did not require Senate action.

The panel's budget during the 99th Congress is estimated at $1.3 million. Because it is not a standing committee, it cannot pass legislation. It is one of five select committees in the House, along with ones dealing with narcotics (below), intelligence, children and families, and the aging.

Supporters say a special committee is needed to give the hunger issue the undivided attention it deserves. Critics say a non-legislative committee on hunger is unjustified in view of budget deficits and the fact that at least eight standing committees already have jurisdiction over the issues.

Supporter Hamilton Fish, R-N.Y., said "at a time when we see an entire (African) continent suffering drought and famine, and our own physicians are terming hunger in America epidemic, we can do no less than to reauthorize this committee, to continue the fine work that it is doing."

Opponent Trent Lott, R-Miss., said: "Let's spend the $1.3 million the committee will be requesting in the 99th Congress on feeding the hungry instead of further studies on hunger."

Members voting yes wanted to keep the special hunger committee in existence for at least another two years.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; William Cobey, R-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

Those voting no were Howard Coble, R-6, and James Broyhill, R-10.

DRUGS — The House approved, 310 for and 94 against, a resolution (H Res 22) to renew the life of its Select Committee on Narcotics Abuse and Control.

The panel was created in 1976 as a "temporary" committee, and has since been renewed with each new Congress. Lacking authority to pass bills, its main function is to collect information and make recommendations to the several standing committees with jurisdiction over narcotics issues.

The committee's 1985-86 budget is estimated at $1.5 million.

Supporter James Scheuer, D-N.Y., said that in the House only the select narcotics committee has the time and expertise to effectively address drug issues, and that "it would be an absolute tragedy if the (committee) were to disappear and each of these (standing) committees was left to struggle with the problem of drug addiction..."

Opponent Bill Frenzel, R-Minn., said: "You do not bring narcotics peddlers to their knees by hiring additional congressional staff... If we want to spend this kind of money against narcotics, then let us beef up our control points, let us beef up the Drug Enforcement Administration..."

Members voting yes wanted to keep the select committee in existence.

North Carolina members voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Cobey, Neal, Rose, Hefner and McMillan.

Broyhill voted no. Coblen and Hendon did not vote.

New Churches

BERLIN (AP) — New churches have opened in three East German cities over the past six weeks with the support of the Communist government, says the official news agency ADN.

The agency, in a report on what it called cooperation between church and state, said the churches had opened in Gotha, Gera and Rostock. Two new parishes have been created in districts of East Berlin with new housing projects, it added.

There are an estimated 10,000 churches and chapels in East Germany. Authorities, often using money donated by West German church circles, have rebuilt about 3,000 churches damaged in World War II.

Pittsburgh, Stung By Planned Loss Of Gulf Corp., Seeking New Center

By EARL BOHN
 Associated Press Writer
 PITTSBURGH (AP) — The 38-story downtown headquarters of Gulf Corp. is up for sale, and the city stands to lose 1,500 jobs with an annual payroll of $54 million.

As a result of the merger of Gulf into Chevron Corp., Pittsburgh is losing one of the companies that helped make the city the nation's third-largest home for Fortune 500 companies. Gulf set up its headquarters in Pittsburgh in 1922.

But, at the same time, the University of Pittsburgh is negotiating to acquire and convert Gulf's suburban research facilities into a scientific research and business development center.

"As a Gulf facility it supported 1,600 people when it was going full bore. As a high-tech incubator, it has the potential to create that many jobs every few years in new businesses," said Richard K. Olson, president of the Foundation for Applied Science and Technology, a non-profit arm of the university.

Olson said he expected an announcement this month on the result of negotiations for the center, one year after Texas oilman T. Boone Pickens Jr.'s bid to take over and break up Gulf drove the company into Chevron's arms in a $13.3 billion merger, the largest business combination in U.S. history.

The Pitt foundation, recently authorized by Chevron to seek government financing for its venture, would assemble scientists, seek research contracts and eventually invite entrepreneurs to test or "incubate" new ideas at the 54 buildings at the center, Olson said.

If successful, Pitt's effort would boost Pittsburgh's drive to lessen the area's dependence on such declining manufacturing industries as steelmaking and foster jobs in emerging industries.

"Biotechnology!" exclaimed Olson. "Organisms to extract uranium from ore ... to metabolize oil slicks ... to metabolize coal into gas."

"It's hard to think of a business today that isn't going to be impacted by this biotechnology revolution," he said in a recent interview.

Such a center would be Pittsburgh's second research plum within a year. Carnegie-Mellon University recently won a five-year, $103 million contract from the Department of Defense to establish a center for research into computer programming. The software institute is expected to eventually employ about 250 people and to attract related businesses.

Pitt's venture, in which Olson said other universities and companies would be invited to participate, might not be much comfort to the approximately 1,500 Gulf employees whose jobs will soon be eliminated or moved to Chevron's headquarters in San Francisco. Their payroll amounted to approximately $54 million in 1984.

Those workers, 900 at the suburban Harmarville location and 600 at the Gulf Building, are among about 10,000, some from Chevron and but mostly from Gulf, who face early retirement or dismissal from the merged company by year's end, according to Chevron officials.

Gulf's exodus is likely to be felt for some time, according to civic leaders.

"It's not calamitous, but it's a setback," said Jacques Kahn, president of the Golden Triangle Association, a downtown merchants' group. "We brag when we bring in a company that has 100 employees. So when you lose one the size of Gulf you can't minimize it," he said.

"We will miss Gulf. They've been a model corporate citizen. I mean that," said Justin Horan, president of the Greater Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce.

Gulf Chairman James E. Lee was a director of about 10 civic organizations, and the company contributed more than $2 million in 1983 to 50 Pittsburgh institutions.

"Gulf's people have been extremely busy and dedicated to United Way," Horan said. "They've been major financial supporters to our educational institutions and health care facilities. Gulf has been a major supporter of all the things that helped this be a great city."

 Meanwhile, at the 85-acre Harmarville research center and in Gulf's granite headquarters, which opened in 1932, employees await word of their future.

The middle- and lower-level managers not invited to San Francisco by Chevron will receive relatively generous severance benefits. But they hardly approach the millions of dollars in "golden parachutes" that Gulf's managers — Lee, President
 Edward B. Walker, Executive Vice President Harold Hammer and others — arranged for themselves.

Lee would not consent to be interviewed, according to Gulf spokeswoman Susan Breon, who explained that "Chevron managers have indicated there's not much to be gained by doing so."

Opening lead: Jack of ♥.

Sometimes your contract depends purely on technique. At other times you will need a slice of luck as well.

This department disagrees with North's choice of opening bid. Whether North-South play four- or five-card majors, the correct opening bid with his hand is one diamond - the suit below the short suit. But that is purely academic, since North-South reached an excellent contract played from the right side.

West led the jack of hearts, which ran to declarer's queen. South took advantage of being in his hand to try the diamond finesse. East won and returned a heart to dislodge the ace. Since declarer did not have enough tricks to run for home, he had to fall back on the club finesse. When that lost, West had more than enough heart winners to defeat the game.

Winning the first trick in the closed hand turned out to be a liability. Even though diamonds is the partnership's best combined holding, it is necessary for declarer to hope either that one of the minor-suit finesses will work or that hearts are 6-2. And to cater for the latter possibility, he should attack the danger hand's entry first.

Correct technique is to cross to the table at trick two with a spade and run the ten of clubs. If the finesse succeeds, go after diamonds immediately and assure nine tricks - don't repeat the finesse in case West is holding up the king of clubs. If the club finesse loses, win the heart return, come back to hand with a club and try the diamond finesse. If that loses, your one last chance is that hearts are 6-2. Since that is the way the cards lie, you bring home the contract even though both finesses fail.

Teachers End ECU Session

Thirty-two high school and junior high school life science teachers have completed the second session of a National Science Foundation-sponsored short course at East Carolina University. The group met for a recent two-day forum arranged by the ECU Department of Science Education and directed by Dr. Carolyn Hampton.

Dr. Charles E. Bland, chairman of the ECU Department of Biology, led the teachers in a workshop on microscopy. Dr. Jack Brinn of the ECU School of Medicine addressed the group on recent developments in cytology. Dr. Hampton led the participants in a review of cell and molecular biology curriculum materials.

Participants from Pitt County were: Leslie Brinson, Glenn Cox, Nancy Evans, Mary Koonce, Ruth Riddle, Connie Bright, Ruby Jackson and Nancy Wynne.

Each participant presented materials he or she developed for classroom use in the area of cell and molecular biology and shared ideas and teaching strategies to help bring some of the latest developments in cell and molecular technology to their pupils.

The participating teachers were selected for involvement in the program last year after attending a fall session on campus.
