Walter Jones Jr.

Election Reformer

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Walter Jones Jr.'s boyish appearance belies his 42 years, yet somehow is fitting for a legislator who calls for honesty in campaigning with the zeal of a youthful reformer.

"Bless him. The world needs idealists like Democratic state Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. from Pitt County," editorialized The News and Observer of Raleigh after he proposed a constitutional amendment to nullify the election of anyone who slanders his opponent.

Jones also is pushing a bill to imprison or fine officeholders who try to bully state employees into supporting them. The House State Personnel Committee took its first look at the measure Wednesday, but didn't vote.

At first glance, it's strange that such housecleaning efforts would come from a man who, as the son of a 10-term congressman, has had ample opportunity to view politics close up and grow accustomed to its less savory side.

But Jones says the example set by his father, U.S. Rep. Walter Jones Sr., inspired him.

"When you've ... seen this man campaigning and working, and always taking the high road, and he's been re-elected over and over again, you've got to figure he's on to something," said the younger Jones in an interview.

"He's always been honest and straightforward with people, and I think people do want to see integrity in their representatives. ... Some people seem to think that's being naive, but I hope not."

Jones, raised in Farmville, came to Raleigh in 1957 as a legislative page with a group of students that included another future state representative — Martin Lancaster of Goldsboro.

"In those days, you stayed for the entire session instead of just a week like they do now," said Jones. "That experience gave me the opportunity to see the legislative process, and I found it extremely interesting."

He attended North Carolina State University for three years. In 1966, he transferred to Atlantic Christian College in Wilson to complete a history degree and run his father's small-equipment business, freeing the elder Jones to launch his first congressional campaign.

A political career of his own was "always in the back of my mind," said Walter Jones Jr., who established a public-relations firm and married a schoolteacher. They have a 13-year-old daughter.

In 1983, Jones was appointed to complete the unexpired term of state Rep. Sam Bundy, who died shortly after the session began. Jones won another term last fall.

During the same election, his father was re-elected overwhelmingly — after a hard-fought

Democratic primary campaign in which his opponent charged that the 71-year-old congressman was trying to hold his 1st District seat until his son is ready to take it over.

The younger Jones says he "would never close the door on the possibility" of seeking the office, but insists that's not the plan now.

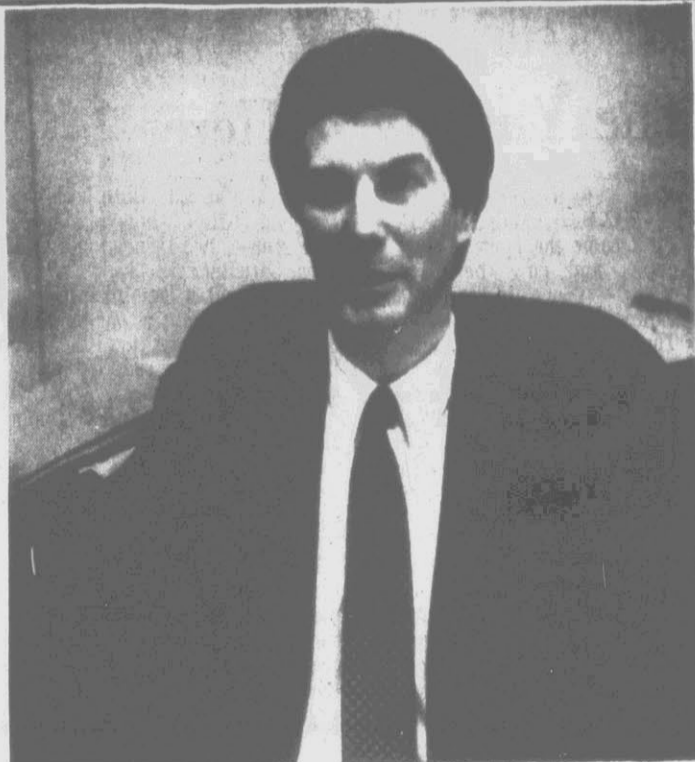

Although his campaign reform measures are attracting more attention, Jones says the most satisfying part of his job is helping constituents solve personal problems, most involving bureaucratic entanglements.

But he vows to devote considerable energy to his election bills — even though critics view the proposed slander amendment as a longshot that would impose unconstitutional restraints on free speech. He says he was "amazed" by the revulsion for negative campaigning his constituents expressed last year.

"Politics is a hard game, I realize that. It's tough," said Jones. "But ... you don't see the GM dealer knocking the Ford dealer in his ads. He's selling you his product ... and he says 'look at me, look at what I have.' I don't know why we can't do that during campaigns."

"I'm not naive enough to think that one person or one bill's going to change the future, but it's a start."

FRESH FACE — State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. of Pitt County, shown in his legislative office in Raleigh, is being viewed by some as a fresh new face in the General Assembly. Jones has tackled head-on problems with election campaigns such as the name-calling by candidates that highlighted the 1984 races. (AP Laserphoto)

County Officials Ask More Land Zoned Health Care

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A county official Wednesday told members of Greenville's Medical District Study Committee he "personally" did not feel enough acreage in the area encompassing Pitt County Memorial Hospital and the ECU School of Medicine had been zoned for health care.

That observation, made by County Manager Reginald Gray, was a "very valid point," city planner Lynne James said in an interview today.

"I don't think anybody prior to this meeting has come out and said there are not enough acres zoned health care ... most have focused on medical arts rather than on health care," she said.

According to Mrs. James, who serves as coordinator for the medical district study committee, the health care zoning designation is more narrowly defined than medical arts and therefore provides more protection.

Approximately 8 percent of the 1,790-acre medical district is zoned health care — a designation that allows such uses as hospitals, nursing homes, rehabilitation centers, sanitoriums or care homes, some types of outpatient clinics and medically related research facilities. ECU and PCMH holdings in the district, which total 100 acres, are zoned health care.

The basic difference between health care and medical arts zoning, she explained, is that health care is geared more toward institutional cases where people stay and receive treatment. Medical arts zoning encompasses doctor's offices, diagnostic centers, research labs, light industrial facilities, florist shops, restaurants and pharmaceutical concerns, to name a few. Approximately 249 district acres are zoned medical arts.

Saying now is the crucial point from which the medical district can either evolve into something "we can be ashamed of ... or proud of," County Commissioner Charles Gaskins — who also attended the Wednesday meeting — urged the committee to uphold protection precedents set by the original medical district study committee in 1975 recommendations.

Pitt's United Way Selects Richardson As '85 Leader

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Dr. Jack Richardson was named 1985-86 president of the Pitt County United Way Wednesday during elections held at the organization's annual meeting and awards luncheon.

"The United Way truly is an organization of the community," Richardson said. "Through its board of directors, executive committee, allocations committee and campaign volunteers, the United Way listens to make every attempt to meet the needs of the community and its citizens."

"Because of the commitment to hard work by all of these people, the organization is sound. It has a track record we can be proud of," he added.

Frank Grooms was elected first vice president and John Ferren was named second vice president of the organization. Secretary will be Mike Columbo and treasurer Andy Warren. Attorney James Cheatham will continue as legal counsel.

Outgoing campaign chairman Andy Warren presented awards to the companies who contributed to the 1984-85 United Way campaign.

Gold medal awards were given to two local companies for significant achievement in the campaign. The largest contributor in the campaign was Burroughs-Wellcome, with a total contribution of $118,830, and the largest donation per employee was made by Procter and Gamble, with an average gift of $150 and a per capita gift of $141.

The chairman's award was given to Pitt County Memorial Hospital and to Yale Materials Handling Corp. for contributions above their 1983 totals. Pitt Memorial donated 57.6 percent more than in 1983, and Yale contributed 40.9 percent more than in the previous campaign.

Noted for their assistance in the 1984 campaign were John Griffin of Pitt Community College, who assisted in

Farmville Observes Arbor Day

FARMVILLE — A tree planting and a groundbreaking for a gazebo highlighted an Arbor Day celebration held on the Walter B. Jones Town Commons in Farmville Wednesday afternoon.

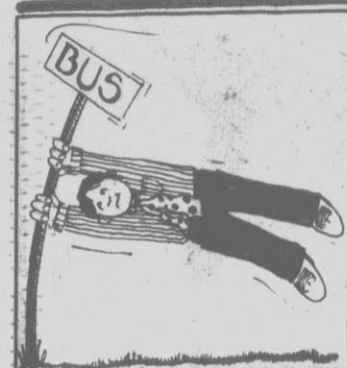

A willow oak was planted on the Commons, the 200 block of North Main St., by members of the Children of the American Revolution of Farmville. The groundbreaking led by Mayor John Walston, Commissioner LeRoy Redden and Mrs. Larue Moye, chairman of the Walter B. Jones Town Commons Beautification Committee, marked the spot where a gazebo bandstand will be erected on the Commons. According to Mrs. Moye, who addressed those present for the celebration, this structure will preside over a park which will include curving walkways, additional trees and shrubs, tables and benches. She acknowledged Patsy Davis Duke, a former Farmville resident, who was instrumental in beginning the plans to beautify the Town Commons several years ago, and recognized the beautification committee made up of 12 Farmville citizens. Also recognized were winners of a recent poster contest held in the Farmville schools.

State Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr. expressed his family's appreciation for the Commons being named for his father, U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones Sr., D-N.C.

Tree City recognition, which Farmville has received for the past several years, was brought by Herman Terry of the North Carolina Forestry Service. Philip Evancho, Pitt Community College artist in residence, sang and the Farmville Central High School Band played.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride was escorted by her father. Her sister, Jodi Copeland of Atlanta, Ga., was maid of honor. The bride wore a RonLo Vece gown of ecru silk satin featuring a sabbina neckline, fitted bodice and caplet sleeves of re-embroidered peau d'ange lace and point d'esprit. Applied satin rosebuds adorned the skirt and cathedral train which was swept up in tiers to form a bustle. She carried a bouquet of calla lilies, white roses, phalaenopsis orchids and stephanotis tied with a satin bow. Her veil was attached to a cascade of seed pearl flowers.

A cocktail hour and seated dinner followed the wedding ceremony.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to California. The bride is a graduate of the University of Maryland at College Park, Md. The bridegroom is a graduate of the Lawrenceville School in Lawrenceville, N.J., and the University of Pennsylvania, Wharton School of Business and Finance. The Yummy Is Here

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine
First came the Preppy, then the Yuppie, and now there is the Yummy — Young Upwardly Mobile Mommy.

The Yummy can be recognized by her clothes, her husband and how she brings up her baby, according to the Yummy's official handbook in the April issue of Redbook, written by C.E. Crimmins, who previously wrote a handbook for YAPS — Young Aspiring Professionals.

The typical Yummy is 25 to 44 years old, lives anywhere in the U.S., and may work outside the home — but her major role consists of raising America's future generation of aspiring fast-trackers.

The Yummy dresses for mess with a designer jacket or handknitted sweater in a dark color to hide cereal stains. She wears jeans, designer sweatsuits and running shoes for housework. Her flexible briefcase may hold anything from fresh pasta to disposable diapers. She wears a childproof hairdo.

The Yummy drives a station wagon, drinks white wine and in role models favors Princess Diana, Jane Pauley, Jane Curtin, Susan Saint James and Meredith Baxter Birney.

Jane Fonda is the Yummy emeritus — she has a beautiful body, part-time work that earns millions, and a cute family.

The Yummy tends to marry a Yummy — Young Upwardly Mobile Papa — who watches his weight, uses the word "father" as a verb and cooks at least one gourmet specialty. Role models include Alan Alda, Bill Cosby and Prince Charles.

Yummies and Yumpys plan their children, consider themselves a "childbirth team" during pregnancy and from prenatal days plan every move to impact on the baby's future earnings.

Nothing but the best will do for a Yummy's baby. The essentials include Snuggli Infant carrier, handmade crib quilt, Christian Dior christening outfit, $50-plus car seat, goosedown comforter, designer bibs, Izod stretchsuits and flashcards with Shakespearean characters.

As the Yummy's child grows, it will acquire a dress-for-success nursery school uniform, a doll that took three hours of standing in line to buy, and an L.L. Bean book bag carrying ballet slippers, Suzuki sheet music, two Disney videotapes or one Care Bear.

Yummies often have plain names like Mary or Debbie, but for their children they lean toward fancy Biblical names and recycled family surnames as first names.

The upwardly mobile Mom's kitchen comes equipped with a microwave oven, pasta machine, cappuccino maker, food processor and perhaps a tortilla press and zucchini corer.

If her children balk at eating upscale food, she can try replacing peanut butter and jelly with cashew butter and kiwi jelly, a grilled cheese sandwich with a grilled brie sandwich and macaroni and cheese with spinach macaroni and smoked gouda. To canned spaghetti, she can add a sprig of fresh basil.

There's a special Yummy vocabulary. Her children aren't born, they are "birthed." When her husband takes care of the child, he has a "fathering experience."

Eventually the Yummy grows beyond her child-rearing years. That's when she begins a new career or travels to exciting places, boasting about her grown-up, fast-track superachiever children.

"In short," Crimmins wrote in Redbook, "Yummy yields gracefully to the forces of aging and becomes Mummy, the Mature Upwardly Mobile Mommy."

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

This is an official notice! Next Thursday, anyone having anything belonging to the Bombeck household can return said items with no questions asked. Everything will be accepted, regardless of condition, with no reprisals.

I hate to resort to this kind of public proclamation but I no longer have enough kitchen utensils to get a meal. All my bread pans, cake pans and baking dishes have been carted away by our kids who took home leftovers. My coffee mugs are rolling around under the brake pedals of a thousand cars.

My pans and skillets disappeared during the last camping trip one of them took. The silverware has been missing since one of them entertained for more than four people.

I'd like to see our blankets again — the soft woolly ones that used to be folded at the end of my bed. They were "borrowed" when someone got out-of-town guests who crashed. I'm reduced to throwing my bathrobe over the bed when a chill hits.

And wouldn't it be wonderful to walk by the bookshelves and see books again? One by one they seem to have developed legs... even the cookbooks that were stored in the kitchen. The warranty manuals are still with me... but one can read just so much fiction.

I got the idea of an "honor day" from a library somewhere that begged people to return books they have had for years. They would forego the fees just to get the books back. And I said to myself, "Erma, how would you like to see your white sweater that Marge wore home one night when it turned cold? Or that cute little piepan that said, 'PIES BY ERMA' that one of the kids carried off? Not to mention the suitcase that you loaned to a guest who bought too many souvenirs during a visit."

I have been married 36 years and I no longer have a can opener, a cookie sheet, a hair dryer, a juicer, an umbrella, a wok, a paring knife that will cut through margarine, a beach towel, or a yardstick in the house.

For awhile, my husband and I considered going on the new "Newlywed Game," but we weren't sure we would understand the questions.

The house is beginning to have a hollow sound, like when a realtor walks you through a house that is not occupied. But all that is going to change come next Thursday. I just know it.

So, all of you out there who are holding half of my house hostage, please bring the items back to where they belong.

No children, please.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

New York Reader Says Thanks To Abby

DEAR ABBY: The letter signed "Just Woke Up in California" moved me to tears. The writer, who had always given his elderly mother expensive gifts, vowed to give her a gift of himself—to spend more time with her and to tell her in so many words that he loved her while he still had time.

My 90-year-old mother lived with me until she died a year ago. For 20 years I had been her shopper, chauffeur, confidant, mainstay, etc., and I'm sure she knew from my actions that I loved her very much, but only once since I was a grown man did I say, "I love you, Mother"—and that was on her deathbed.

So, I also just woke up, and have promised myself that when I marry, I shall verbally convey such loving feelings to my wife—something I failed to do for my mother.

Thanks for listening. And thank you, Abby, for teaching good people how to be better.

IMPROVING WITH AGE IN NEW YORK

DEAR ABBY: I am 17 (nearly 18) and am going with a very special guy whom I like very much. I know he feels the same way about me. We seem to be getting closer and closer and may be heading for a serious relationship.

The problem goes back to when I was 15. I lost my virginity to my first boyfriend. At the time, I thought I was going to marry him, but it didn't work out that way, and we drifted apart.

The guy I'm going with now knows nothing about my not being a virgin. I am a Catholic, and all Catholic girls are supposed to keep their virginity until the day they marry. Since I am no longer a virgin, how can I explain it to him? How can I explain it to any guy who asks me to marry him?

I feel so ashamed. Many times I burst into tears because I don't know how I will ever be able to tell the man I marry. Please help me.

NO NAME OR TOWN, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: When you marry, are you going to ask your husband if he's a virgin? And if he is not, do you think you have the right to question him concerning his past sexual experiences? Of course not. It's none of your business.

The same is true concerning you. Your past is none of his business. What's done is done. Don't dwell on it.

DEAR ABBY: My parents have been divorced since I was 14. I'm 20 now and have a good relationship with both my parents, but my mother resents my father for several things he has done to her as well as to me and my sister. I've learned to put things in the past and leave them there. I love my father as much as I love my mother, but Mother doesn't understand that. She doesn't expect me to hate my father, but she doesn't like it when I talk about the trips he takes with his new wife or anything he does, so I don't mention it.

I am engaged to be married and I want both parents to give me away.

My mother wants to give me away and says if I insist that my father share in that honor, she will not attend my wedding. We had a long talk about it and I cried for two days. I then decided to let my mother give me away, but she knows I'm not happy about it.

Have you any suggestions?

WORRIED SICK

DEAR WORRIED: In such situations I urge parents to give their marrying child the gift of happiness on his or her wedding day, and put their own feelings aside. Your mother is wrong to punish you in her determination to punish your father. Since you love them equally, make it both or none—and ask a favorite relative or dear friend to "give you away."

Love may be a sweet mystery of life to some, but a Yale psychologist and his colleagues believe it can and should be studied and understood.

"With a national divorce rate approaching 50 percent and actually exceeding this figure in some locales," Yale's Robert J. Sternberg wrote in the April issue of Science Digest, "it is more important than ever that we understand what love is, what leads to its maintenance and what leads to its demise."

Sternberg's research centered around responses to two tests. One, designed by George Levinger and colleagues at the University of Massachusetts, measures the extent to which particular feelings and actions characterize a relationship.

The other "love scale," devised by Brandeis University psychologist Zick Rubin, measures three aspects of a love relationship — need for another person, predisposition to help another, and exclusiveness and absorption in the relationship.

The components of love revealed by the love test questionnaires include promoting the loved one's welfare, experiencing happiness with that person, high regard for the person, dependability in time of need, mutual understanding, sharing, receiving and giving emotional support, intimate communication and valuing the loved one in one's own life.

The scientists found love was a combination of emotions, not a single emotion, and that its nature was similar from one relationship to another. The same components go into the love of a lover and, say, a father.

The amount of love people feel in different close relationships may vary widely, with slight differences between men and women.

Men were found to love their lover most and their sibling closest in age the least. Their best friend of the same sex ranked second to their lovers. Mother and father were in the middle of the list, with no marked preference for either parent.

Women loved their lover and same sex best friend about equally, and like men loved their sibling closest in age least. Parents again were in the middle of the list, with a tendency to prefer the mother.

The love studies suggest there are two important aspects of satisfaction with a love relationship. One is that the more two people love each other, the more satisfaction they enjoy.

The second concerns ideals. The closer a lover matches a person's ideal of a lover, the more satisfaction. Unrealistically high ideals can cause dissatisfaction and ruin romance.

The study found that perhaps the most important variable in the success of a romance was the correlation between how a person would ideally like his partner to feel toward him and how that person perceives his partner really does feel toward him.

The final and most important factor was liking. Sternberg said Rubin devised a liking scale that was even better at predicting satisfaction in romantic relationships than the love tests.

Restraints

More and more we sense a tide of approval for adoption of a North Carolina mandatory seat belt law. Legislative debate has been heard, but opposition lacks a rallying cry, a commitment or a thought-out line of argument.

All the logic appears predisposed in favor of buckling-up or face a $25 fine. One cannot argue with the fact that some 1,200 people die in North Carolina automobile accidents every year, and other data suggesting more than half of those would be alive today if they had buckled up.

Add to that, the presumed reduction in insurance pay-offs to families of the dead, injured or maimed ... and financial benefits potentially accruing to all N.C. motorists through lowered rates attributable to a lessened drain on insurance company resources. It's very persuasive.

The bill's Senate sponsor, Sen. R.S. Warren, adds what to us is a real bone-crusher: "Forget the cost savings from medical costs and insurance. Forget about reducing deaths. Look at it from this standpoint — it's either that, or airbags."

That did it. Installing airbags in new cars would add $500 to $700 per car's price, and double that to have the airbags repacked if they are ever inflated. Airbags never have been our ideal recourse and the attached dollar-signs make them even less so.

The U.S. Dept. of Transportation has said it will order American-made automobiles to have airbags or other automatic safety device unless states with two-thirds of the nation's population are covered by mandatory seat belt laws by 1989.

Just the thought of an airbag accidentally inflating when least wanted can make a driver's palms sweat.

A sore point lingers and festers: in his (or her) heart every motorist knows seat belts are the safe and sane way to go; but about 80 percent of us don't use the belts.

There's a public hearing on the Senate measure set, but from here it is doubtful anything new or constructive can be contributed. The ramifications have been talked up and down and sideways for many months. It's time to buckle down.

Change

It seems only yesterday that North Carolinians were firm believers in the cause of no-taxes on tobacco products. Other states and Uncle Sam were much less inclined.

Cigarette prices in North Carolina continued low, soaring elsewhere across the nation. The price differential became so great that cigarette-smuggling became a major plague with trucks and vans wheeling low-priced cigarettes from North Carolina into other areas for quick sale and quick profits. Visitors often returned home with suitcases full of cheap cartons.

Other states were busy adding millions of dollars to their revenues and the smuggling fanned ill-will toward tobacco producers who vigorously fought the national trend.

It's much easier these days for tobacco-area legislators to publicly talk about cigarette taxes. They can openly consider taxing cigarette companies 1 cent a pack and repeal the 2-cent state tax on each pack of cigarettes purchased in the state. There's little fussing.

Things have changed.

Tough Stance From The White House

WASHINGTON — Republican Sen. Charles Grassley may have been lionized back home in Iowa for his blanket opposition to the Reagan administration inside the Senate Budget Committee, but he faces reprisals from a transformed White House no longer willing to turn the other cheek.

Grassley and fellow Republican senators who abandoned Ronald Reagan during Budget Committee voting will find themselves abandoned by the president when they seek re-election in 1986, if White House resolve holds up. What's more, they may find sources of campaign financing dried up.

Such is the new hard nose of the White House under Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan. While sprees of independence such as Republican gutting of the president's budget would have nurtured new negotiations during the White House regime of James A. Baker III, Don Regan shows no quarter.

That became clear with the president's speech to the American Business Council recently, warning he will not accept Budget Committee rejection of his domestic spending plans with its implicit thrust toward higher taxes. But not spelled out was Reagan-Regan determination to allow no Republican senator to thumb his nose at the president with impunity.

Nose-thumbing was so chronic in the days immediately following Reagan's landslide re-election last November that he seemed the lamest of lame ducks. Sen. Robert Dole's distance from the president was an asset in his successful drive to become majority leader. No disapproving voice was heard from his colleagues when Dole, before the president's budget was even completed, issued his still unfulfilled promise that Senate Republicans would write their own.

Even though the Budget Committee's defense cut was unexpectedly deep, no less surprising was across-the-board rejection of Reagan's first serious attack on "middle-class welfare." Back came laboratory test. Lawyers are conducting overly extensive discovery hearings and in the process they're running up huge bills for their clients.

"There is no question that discovery has become one of the most significant factors in the cost and length of litigation," says Allen Briggs, lobbyist for the N.C. Academy of Trial Lawyers.

Discovery occurs before a trial as lawyers try to find out as much as possible about the other side. One lawyer writes out a list of questions and the lawyer for the other side has to answer them.

In North Carolina law, discovery is "totally wide open," says Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, an attorney. He wants the state to adopt the federal laws for discovery. He hopes such a move will end what he considers to be abusive discovery practices that merely run up the costs of a lawsuit and sometimes intimidate the non-rich into dropping or settling their lawsuits.

"Hours and hours, days and days, can be spent just running the meter" in discovery, Hackney said. "They're asking for a lot of useless information or they're asking someone to produce information which is readily accessible."

"Most law firms now have word processors and on these they have a set of (questions) for most any kind of case," Hackney said. "They just turn on the word processor and without any regard to the particulars of the case, they ask their questions."

For example, Hackney says lawyers in an alimony case will often ask their opponent to produce a copy of his or her joint tax return with the ex-spouse. They'll do this even though they already have their own copy of the return. Another example, he said, is requesting a copy of a motorist's driving record even though the lawyer could easily obtain that through the motor vehicles office.

As the cases get more complicated, the requests for discovery information get more complex. Both Briggs and Hackney said discovery can be used to intimidate a party. "Sometimes it's used to drive up the costs," Hackney said. "In cases where a plaintiff is suing a wealthy defendant, the defendant's lawyers can keep the pressure on the plaintiff to just give up by dragging on the discovery process," Briggs said.

Hackney says he doesn't want to end the practice of discovery. "It is supposed to be something of a free-wheeling process. You ought to be able to discover new and relevant information," he said. "But I want to get control of what are the abusive discovery practices."

Under Hackney's bill, the federal procedures would be adopted. The procedure for getting a judge to rule that discovery is being abused is much more streamlined under federal law than state law. Also, he said, there are standards set out in the federal law which define what is proper and what is not.

The federal law also allows the attorneys in a case to meet with the judge before discovery begins and to discuss what the acceptable parameters of discovery will be.

Hackney says that since the federal law was changed several years ago, discovery costs and time have been reduced.

Strength For Today

Most people regard faith as simply the capacity and willingness to believe certain things. The Bible teaches certain truths. We believe these truths; therefore, we say, we have faith.

But this is not the Biblical idea of faith. Faith involves belief, but faith goes far beyond belief. We are told in the Epistle to the Hebrews (11:1) that faith is "the evidence of things not seen," or "the giving of substance to things hoped for." In other words, faith is a spiritual power. It is a capacity of heart and mind which enables us to create something — to give it substance.

Faith is the capacity of the human heart and mind whereby we assist God in his process of creation and achievement. And when we do this, we and God himself become partners in projects which lead to a triumphant achievement.

Getting The Other Side

WASHINGTON — The papers had a great time recently with the case of Vice Adm. Joseph Metcalf. By the time the scornful voices of the media were done with him, Metcalf had been cast in the role of a specially privileged naval officer who had received kid glove treatment.

"He got off easy," declared one television commentator, "while enlisted Marines who had done exactly the same thing were court-martialed."

Well, a closer look at this affair discloses that Metcalf did not get off "easy," considering his high rank and his trivial offense, and the court-martialed Marines had not done "exactly the same thing." In fairness to a distinguished officer, the record should be put straight.

You will recall that a force of U.S. Marines and Rangers, under Metcalf's command, invaded Grenada on Oct. 25, 1983. After a few days of intense fighting, the action ended. Our forces captured a large quantity of Soviet-supplied arms and ammunition.

On Nov. 2, through his chief of staff, Metcalf formally requisitioned 24 captured AK-47 rifles and magazines to go with them. "The items are to be utilized as command presentation articles." Moreover, the rifles were to be rendered inoperable by removal of their firing pins "and shall be permanently disabled upon arrival home station, Norfolk." The requested weapons thereupon were packed into five crates and put aboard Metcalf's plane from Barbados to Norfolk on Nov. 3.

Meanwhile, on Nov. 1, customs agents at Norfolk had been tipped that efforts would be made to smuggle Soviet weapons from Grenada into the United States. All aircraft arriving from Barbados were to be closely inspected. A team of inspectors headed by Jack Ragsdale boarded Metcalf's plane on arrival about 3:30 in the afternoon. Ragsdale asked if any automatic weapons were aboard. Metcalf's chief of staff, Capt. Conrad Ward, immediately identified the crates of weapons. The AK-47s then were taken into custody. On Nov. 8 a gunnery expert at the Norfolk Armory confirmed that the weapons were inoperable and that the magazines contained no ammunition.

Adm. Metcalf's offense was that he was ignorant of a certain naval regulation 3460.7(a), which implemented a Department of Defense regulation, which implemented the Gun Control Act of 1968. Because his unfamiliarity with the regulation "was deficient for an officer of his grade and responsibility," Metcalf was given a formal letter of caution. At flag rank, this hurts.

What about the enlisted men? As the fighting on Grenada subsided, more than 300 Marines liberated (so to say) rifles and pistols that had been lost by the island's defenders. They were warned that such trophies must be turned in to be disarmed and registered. More than 300 Marines obeyed the rules, received amnesty, and had 350 trophies returned to them.

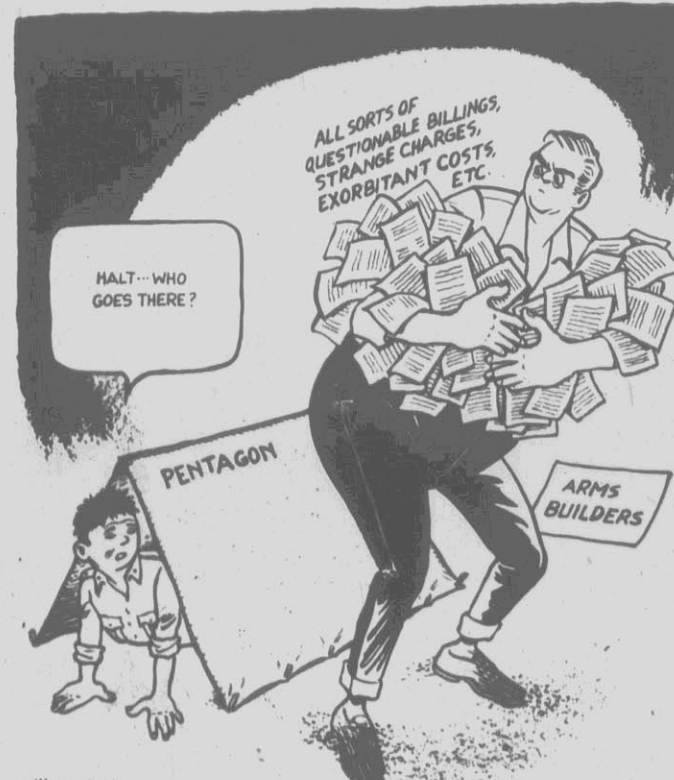

But there were exceptions. A handful of Marines, attached to the 2nd Amphibious Assault Battalion of the 2nd Marine Division, set out knowingly to violate the law. They concealed captured weapons behind bolted metal panels and within void spaces of amphibious tractors. Back in the United States, Cpl. C.P. Kalman was charged with selling not only a captured AK-47 rifle but also an anti-aircraft or anti-tank rocket. Sgt. J.W. Newman and Lance Cpl. J.A. Cockrill were charged with selling hand grenades. Gunnery Sgt. C.W. Dedmond was charged with selling two Soviet 7.62 mm bolt action rifles. Gunnery Sgt. B.H. Coates was charged with dealing in other captured weapons.

The several defendants pleaded guilty. They were sentenced variously to fines, imprisonment and reduction in grade. The longest sentence (seven years, reduced to three years when he agreed to identify other Marines involved in the illegal activities) was imposed upon Kalman.

What the record discloses is that Adm. Metcalf acted openly at every step of the way. He left a paper trail a yard wide. By contrast, the court-martialed Marines willfully engaged in criminal conduct. The offenses weren't "the same thing" at all.

Moral for the media: Get the other side of a story; and consider the possibility that an admiral may have been merely mistaken, while the poor little Marines were crooks.

Soviet Diplomat Shot In India

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Two assailants riding a motorcycle shot and killed an official of the Soviet Embassy and wounded his wife and driver today as they drove near the embassy, police said. The killers escaped.

Police said the slaying may be tied to the recent disappearance here of another Soviet diplomat.

Thakur Jagdish Singh, chief officer of a district police station, said 48-year-old A. Khitzichenko and his wife were returning from a market in their chauffeur-driven car when the two men fired at least six shots from automatic pistols.

Shots were fired through the back window, right side window and windshield, Singh said.

Khitzichenko's wife, 43-year-old Nina Aleseevna, and the driver were slightly hurt by glass splinters, Singh said. They were treated and released at a New Delhi hospital, he said. The driver's name was not available.

Soviet Embassy spokesman

Vladimir N. Tsatsyn said Khitzichenko was a member of the mission's economic division. He said he had no details of the slain Soviet's background and "no indication" of why he was killed.

New Delhi's police commissioner, Suryakant S. Jog, told a news conference that police suspected the slaying was linked to the recent disappearance of another Soviet diplomat in the Indian capital.

Igor Gezha, 37, a third secretary in the Soviet Embassy's information department, vanished last Sunday after he went jogging in a city park.

"It may be a coincidence that both are Russians, but I would look at both as having special significance," Jog told reporters.

Jog identified Khitzichenko as a senior engineer in the embassy's council of economic affairs, or economic department, and said he was hit by at least four bullets in the right temple, the chest, the right wrist and below the neck.

After the driver stopped the car, "the motorcyclists came alongside and pumped a couple more rounds from the side and the front," Jog said.

He said the nationalities of the assassins was not known, but he quoted a driver and another witness as describing them as having "fair" or "wheatish" complexions.

Deputy Police Commissioner B.K. Gupta said, "Witnesses said they were not Europeans."

Police described the motorcycle driver as well-built, of medium height and 27 or 28. The other man was about the same age, had a beard and was about 6 feet tall.

"We have flashed the descriptions all over the country," Jog said. "Our main concern is the airports, railway stations and road exits to Delhi."

Police had questioned several Afghan exile groups here opposed to the Soviet military intervention in Afghanistan in connection with the first Soviet diplomat's disappearance.

Jog said police would "not necessarily" question them again in connection with today's killing.

Some Indian newspapers have speculated that Gezha defected, but Western embassies said they know nothing about his whereabouts.

"We have kept all theories open," Jog said.

The Indian government condemned the "shocking killing" and assured the Soviet Embassy that authorities were giving "highest priority" to finding those responsible and protecting Soviet diplomats.

Khitzichenko would be the second foreign diplomat slain in India in the past three months. Percy Norris, Britain's deputy high commissioner in Bombay, was shot dead while riding to work on Dec. 27.

A little-known revolutionary organization of socialist Moslems claimed responsibility, saying Norris was a spy. No arrests have been made in that case.

Khitzichenko's slaying also comes two months after the unearthing of a major spy network in India involving foreign diplomats.

Eighteen people, including government officials and employees, have been arrested for alleged participation in a ring supplying copies of classified government documents to foreign embassies.

France's deputy military attache was recalled to Paris in connection with the case. Unconfirmed Indian news reports said diplomats from the Soviet Union, East Germany and Poland were also involved.

Satellites Launched

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today launched eight satellites, Cosmos 1635 through 1642, from a single booster rocket, the official news agency Tass said.

It said all the satellites were circling Earth along orbits close to those planned, between 926 miles and 954 miles from earth's surface, with one revolution every 116 minutes.

Tass gave no further details beyond standard Soviet reports that the satellites were designed to continue space exploration and that that equipment on board was transmitting data back to Earth.

White House Says Reagan Testing Two Hearing Aids

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is wearing hearing aids in both ears in an attempt to balance his hearing and not because it is failing, a White House spokesman says.

"He is experimenting with two hearing aids on a trial basis off and on," assistant press secretary Robin Gray said Wednesday.

The 74-year-old president started wearing a hearing aid in his right ear in 1983.

Gray said the second device was added in an effort to balance the president's hearing and not because of any change in Reagan's hearing power. The president's hearing "is essentially the same as five years ago," he said.

The president has been experimenting with the two devices "for some time," Gray said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, reporting on the results of the president's general physical examination earlier this month, said Reagan's hearing was not tested this time because he had a hearing examination in California last summer. "There's no change in his hearing over the past five years," Speakes said.

Reagan himself, however, told an interviewer less than two years ago that his hearing "continues to deteriorate" as the result of damage to his right ear caused by the firing of a handgun too near his ear on a movie set nearly 50 years ago.

Reagan's physician, Dr. T. Burton Smith, refused to discuss the president's hearing or the new device.

Gray said Smith told him the president's hearing in his left ear "is good."

"This is simply a way to achieve a more balanced audio effect," Gray said. "Some people who use hearing aids experience a more balanced pattern when using two hearing aids."

Gray said he did not know what type of new aid the president was using, nor did he know whether the president had expressed a reaction to the experiment.

Pushy Judge Draws Complaint

DENVER (AP) — Denver Probate Judge Field Benton was miffed when he saw a big van sitting in his reserved parking space near the courthouse, so he revved up the engine of his Land Rover and pushed it out of the way.

Problem solved, he went to work. But when Denver Patrolman David Madrid came out to get his van Wednesday morning and found it pushed aside, he flagged down another officer and signed a complaint, claiming "criminal mischief."

The judge, interviewed later, swiftly offered a defense: The sign on the space clearly said it was reserved for him between 6 a.m. and 6 p.m. and warned that anyone who parked there during that time could end up having the vehicle towed.

"He was parking in my parking place. All I did was park in my parking place," Benton said.

Madrid said he had parked in the slot Tuesday night when the police lot was full, and when he got off duty at 7 a.m. Wednesday he waited for a telephone call from his wife before leaving at 8:50 a.m.

The judge admitted the whole thing was a little embarrassing, but he said he didn't look at it as criminal mischief.

"Maybe a little childishness on my part," he said.

The officer's complaint was pending.

Prison Report

LONDON (AP) — Two British aircraft engineers held in a Nigerian prison are sleeping on a cement floor in a crowded rat-infested cell, and were given no food for 12 days, says a member of Parliament.

Liberal Party legislator Malcolm Bruce stated in a letter to the British Foreign Office on Wednesday that for 12 days, Kenneth Clark and Angus Patterson survived on food that another British prisoner shared with them.

The two men, both of Aberdeen, Scotland, appeared in court in Nigeria's capital of Lagos this week charged with stealing a Hawker Siddeley executive jet. They had been acquitted on the same charge on Jan. 18 but were rearrested.

Memorial March Ends In 16 Deaths As South African Police Open Fire

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police opened fire on a crowd of more than 3,000 blacks trying to march from their black township to a white suburb near Port Elizabeth today, killing 16 blacks and wounding at least 22, police said.

The shooting occurred as blacks throughout South Africa gathered in memory of the 69 people shot and killed in the black community of Sharpeville 25 years ago — the bloodiest clash in years of protests against white minority rule.

Maj. Steve van Rooyena, police spokesman, said the situation in Uitenhage was "tense but under control" by midday. Uitenhage is an automobile manufacturing center near Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean.

Van Rooyena said the shooting began when the crowd started marching the mile from Uitenhage's black township of Langa to a nearby white suburb.

A spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria, Lt. Henry Beck, said 16 blacks had been killed and 22 wounded. Police initially said 14 were killed and at least 25 wounded.

Van Rooyena said the marching blacks "were confronted by the police (but) they did not disperse. They stoned the police, who acted partly in self-defense and partly to stop them from reaching the white area."

He said he did not know why the crowd gathered or began the march, but said it was possibly related to the Sharpeville anniversary.

Mono Badela, a black journalist for Citipress, a Johannesburg Sunday newspaper, visited the scene soon after the shooting. He said a fire truck washed the victims' blood off the street.

Badela said eyewitnesses told him the crowd was trying to march through town to another black township, Kwanobuhle, to the funeral of three blacks killed in rioting 10 days ago. The crowd didn't know the funeral had been banned by a magistrate several hours earlier, he said.

Badela said the owner of a shop 50 yards from the shootings told him that police in armored vehicles ordered the marchers to turn back, and that stoning and shooting broke out. The sequence of events was unclear, he said.

Badela said he was ordered out of Langa after police saw him conducting interviews. Kwanobuhle also was "teeming with angry youths," he said. "Tires were burning in the streets, stones were being thrown."

The journalist said the clash took place on the first day of a two-day protest strike in Uitenhage against restrictions on funerals for riot victims. He described the downtown area as "deserted."

In Sharpeville and nearby townships youths boycotted school and stoned police and passing cars. Police used tear gas to break up crowds of young blacks.

There were no reports of casualties in Sharpeville, 50 miles south of Johannesburg.

Whites driving through the community were stoned. Reporters were denied permits to enter the community, but were allowed to make brief tours.

Ben Scott, the town secretary of Sharpeville, said students first went to school, but then left. Some black youths said militant students warned youngsters to leave their classrooms and boycott for the day.

On March 21, 1960, several thousand blacks gathered at the Sharpeville police station to protest laws requiring them to carry passes proving they had the right to be in urban townships outside of black tribal homelands.

Accounts still differ on whether the protesters provoked police. But officers opened fire on the crowd, killing 69 blacks and wounding 178. A doctor later said 52 of those killed had been shot in the back. The shootings made Sharpeville a symbol of the black rights movement.

Last September, Sharpeville again became the focus of unrest when a black protest against rent hikes erupted into violence. In Sharpeville and neighboring townships, an estimated 60 blacks were killed in several days of rioting.

Blacks have rioted around the country over a variety of grievances, fueled by a severe economic recession. Opponents say the reason for the unrest is growing black resentment over the continued denial of basic political rights.

Sharpeville, a community of at least 45,000, as well as the nearby townships with a black population totaling 350,000, had been relatively quiet in recent months. But residents continued to refuse to pay rent, and 93,000 black students boycotted classes from September to the end of the year.

Jordanian Airline Offices Bombed

By The Associated Press
Assailants lobbed explosives in the offices of the Royal Jordanian Airlines in Rome, Athens and the Cypriot capital of Nicosia within a 90-minute period this morning, setting off blasts that injured a total of five airline employees.

There was no claim of responsibility for any of the blasts. Witnesses and police said all the explosions were caused by young dark-skinned men and all the bombers escaped.

Radical Palestinian groups and Arab states have been bitterly critical of the joint peace initiative recently announced by King Hussein of Jordan and Yasser Arafat of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

In Athens, a young man wearing a yellow windbreaker tossed two explosive devices, apparently hand grenades, in the airline offices in the city center, witnesses said. One of the bombs did not explode.

"He came into the office as if he were a customer and then threw two bombs. All the windows shattered," said a Jordanian Airlines employee. Police said the same man had been in the office earlier, speaking Arabic with two other men.

Police said three employees were injured, one seriously, in the 10:30 a.m. local time (3:30 a.m. EST) blast.

The attacker ran downstairs and disappeared in crowded Syntagma Square, police said. Police cordoned off the building and stopped traffic in crowded Philhellenon Street pending the arrival of bomb disposal experts.

"It sounded like a car crash, but I looked around and saw glass falling into the street from the Alia building," a kiosk owner said.

Police later identified the injured as Hali Hamideh, 35, Alia's manager for Greece, Maria Zaharou, 43, and Aris Tsiligirian, 40, both Alia employees.

A police spokesman, who declined to be identified, said the three were hospitalized but "out of danger."

Police in Rome said a young man threw two small hand grenades into the Royal Jordanian Airlines office in downtown Rome at 9:40 a.m. (3:40 a.m. EST), injuring two female employees. Police said a third grenade went off outside the building, causing no injuries.

Arms Negotiators Will Split Into Teams

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet arms control negotiators agreed today to divide into working groups on strategic, intermediate and space weapons next week for the first time since negotiations began March 12.

The decision was announced by the U.S. delegation after a two-hour meeting between the American team, headed by Max M. Kampelman, and the Soviet delegation headed by Victor P. Karpov.

The subgroups will deal with long-range missiles, medium-range missiles and space and defensive weapons, as envisioned in the U.S.-Soviet agreement in January that paved the way for the talks.

"We have agreed that negotiating groups will begin their work on Tuesday, March 26," said a statement by the U.S. spokesman, who has requested that his name not be used.

Earlier, Karpov told reporters the decision on logistics for the working groups was "not a problem." Asked how the talks were proceeding, he said simply, "we're talking."

Before the fourth round of talks started, Karpov said U.S. congressional votes on the MX missile were an American "internal affair."

The Soviet news agency Tass has been critical of the Reagan administration's support for the MX. Asked for comment on this week's Senate vote approving production of MX missiles, Karpov said:

"That's U.S. internal affairs. I discuss my affairs with the delegation of the United States," and he pointed toward the top floor of the building, where the U.S. team was waiting for the Soviet delegation. He walked away without answering other questions.

Details of the talks are being withheld from the public under an agreement between the two delegations.

The January agreement between Secretary of State George Shultz and Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko of the Soviet Union — described by U.S. officials as a blueprint for the arms talks — says each delegation will be divided into three groups.

However, the Soviet Union has publicly stressed a clause in the communication calling for the areas to be discussed "in their interrelationship," while the United States has said any agreements in one or two of the areas should be implemented even if differences remain in the other.

Kampelman will head the subgroup on space weapons, with Soviet Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, John G. Tower will deal with long-range missiles with Karpov and Maynard W. Giltman will handle medium-range rockets with Alexei A. Obukhov.

A key factor in the space talks is expected to be President Reagan's plan for a space-based defense system, the strategic defense initiative, which has been dubbed "Star Wars."

The $26 billion research program will examine the feasibility of creating a space-based shield against nuclear missiles.

The Soviet Union has criticized the plan, saying it would cause the militarization of space and would violate the 1972 superpower anti-ballistic missile treaty.

Tass on Wednesday turned its criticism to the strategic MX missile, which Congress is voting on this week.

The Senate voted to release $1.5 billion for 21 MX missiles, while the appropriations committee of the House of Representatives narrowly voted to recommend against releasing the money. The full House will vote on the MX next week.

Tass accused Reagan of applying "unprecedented pressure" on senators to influence the vote.

The president has argued that approval of the MX program would bolster the U.S. position at the Geneva arms talks, while critics say it would be destabilizing to deploy the strategic missiles at the same time talks were being conducted to limit them.

Reagan wants eventually to deploy 100 of the 10-warhead missiles in existing Minuteman silos in the western United States.

Iranian-Iraqi War Escalates As Air Attacks Reported In Several Areas

By The Associated Press
Iran reported today new Iraqi air and missile attacks on civilian targets and Iraq claimed it "occupied enemy positions" along the war front, a day after Tehran was blacked out during a speech by Iranian leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency, monitored in Nicosia, Cyprus, said Iraq fired two missiles into the western city of Dezful and Iraqi jets bombed Hamadan, also in the west, early today. No details of the attacks were given.

In another report by IRNA, monitored in London, Iran said Iraqi aircraft bombed the city of Ilam and that a "number of people were either martyred or wounded" and houses damaged.

There was no immediate comment from Iraq on the reported attacks on the Iranian cities.

But in a war communique issued in the Iraqi capital of Baghdad, the armed forces said two Iraqi brigades took part in a "daring attack" in the southern sector of the battlefront and "occupied enemy positions."

The communique did not disclose the exact location of the battlefield. The "enemy forces were crushed and most of the enemy soldiers were killed, including their commanders Sherif Kerimi and Hoshank Moqaddemi," the communique said.

Iraqi jet fighters downed an Iranian F-4 warplane today near Hamadan shortly after Iraq called on the population of Ahwaz to evacuate in 72 hours beginning at midday, an Iraqi military spokesman said on the state radio.

The Iranian news agency "strongly" denied Iraq's claim it downed the warplane.

Despite the blackout Wednesday, Khomeini vowed the war with Iraq would continue "unless the international community accepts Iran's right to punish the aggressor."

The Iranian leader also reiterated his demand for the ouster of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

IRNA said reports of Iraqi sorties over Tehran prompted the blackout during Khomeini's speech. An Iraqi spokesman in Baghdad said Wednesday Iraqi warplanes bombed six Iranian cities but not Tehran.

Iraqi jets attacked Iran's Kharg Island oil port in the Persian Gulf and blew up the supply ship Bargir, killing six Iranian crew members, sources in the gulf reported. Neither Iraq nor Iran reported an air raid on Kharg. The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said oil tankers loading at Kharg were not damaged in the attack.

WAREHOUSE DESTROYED — A firefighter runs past the crumbled wall of a Plainfield, N.J., warehouse that was destroyed by fire Wednesday. The fire at the warehouse, used to store plastic pipes, caused the evacuation of the neighborhood because of fumes carried off by the smoke. (AP Laserphoto)

Burning Plastic Sends Off Caustic Fumes; 85 Injured

PLAINFIELD, N.J. (AP) — Hundreds of evacuated residents were kept away from their homes today by caustic smoke from burning plastic pipes in the heart of a stubborn warehouse fire, authorities said.

More than 85 people were stricken by fumes after the smoky fire broke out in the block-long, one-story building at 12:16 p.m. Wednesday. About 100 firefighters continued to battled the blaze today.

City schools were ordered closed today, said Police Officer Joseph Brennan.

"It's really deep-seated," said fire department Lt. William Darby, explaining that the warehouse's roof had collapsed, making it difficult for water to reach the fire.

Patricia Turner, a city spokeswoman, estimated that about 1,000 people lived in the five-block evacuation area and the American Red Cross said about 200 people sought overnight shelter at Plainfield High School.

Darby said the fire would likely burn well into the day and residents would probably be allowed to go home later today after Department of Environmental Protection workers determine the air is safe to breathe.

One person was admitted to Muhlenberg Hospital and at least 72 were treated and released Wednesday for smoke inhalation, eye irritation and skin rashes, said a hospital spokesman. Another 10 were under observation early today.

When polyvinyl chloride burns, it emits a caustic hydrogen chloride gas, which can burn skin and eyes and may be harmful if inhaled, said DEP spokesman James Staples.

Reagan Plans News Conference

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan likely will face questions about a possible summit meeting with the Soviet Union's new leader and the rough sledding his budget proposal has had in Congress when he holds his 29th White House news conference tonight.

Reagan's half-hour question-and-answer session with reporters will be broadcast by the major radio and television networks live from the East Room at 8 p.m. EST.

Since his last news conference one month ago, Soviet leader Konstantin U. Chernenko died and was succeeded by Mikhail Gorbachev, whom Reagan promptly invited to join him for a summit meeting in the United States. There has been no clear response reported from the Soviet Union, and no meeting has been scheduled.

Reagan's budget, which calls for $30 billion in defense spending increases and $40 billion in domestic spending cuts, was rejected by the Republican-controlled Senate Budget Committee last week. And House Budget Committee Chairman

William H. Gray III, D-Pa., said Wednesday, "The president's plan has been so seriously rejected, there aren't even any Republicans over here planning to introduce it."

However, the president appears to have nipped early attempts in both houses to include a tax increase as part of the government's deficit reduction effort.

Reagan's strength as a second-term president has survived its first crucial test in Congress, where the Senate voted to continue funds for the controversial MX missile the president insists he needs as part of the defense buildup and to demonstrate U.S. determination at the Geneva arms talks, which resumed last week.

Reagan also may be questioned about the resignation of his labor secretary, Raymond J. Donovan, who last week was ordered to stand trial on a 137-count larceny and fraud indictment growing out of activities that occurred before he joined the administration.

And he could be asked to explain the U.S. role in renewed efforts for Middle East peace talks.

Open Door

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Brazil, which came under civilian rule last week after 21 years of military domination, will be a refuge for political exiles, says a high official of the new administration.

"Brazil's doors are open. Political exiles no longer will be expelled," Marcelo Cerqueira, legal counselor of the Justice Ministry, told the Associated Press by telephone.

"We are here to work for democracy and freedom. Any foreigner suffering from political persecution can seek our help, without even making an appointment in advance."

Under the former military regime, foreigners were routinely expelled for not having proper residency papers. Civil rights lawyers complained that some were extradited for political reasons.

Survey Shows More Teens Using Cocaine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing figures showing an "alarming" level of cocaine use among high school students, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler says her department plans new efforts to combat teen drug abuse.

Mrs. Heckler told a Senate subcommittee on Wednesday that a survey of high school seniors last year found 6 percent were users of cocaine, once an exotic and expensive drug, but now becoming more available because of lower prices.

"While cocaine use has been viewed as mostly an affliction of the young and upwardly mobile, there are some indications that it is breaking out of this group, spreading even to our vulnerable teen-age population," Mrs. Heckler told the Senate Permanent Subcommittee on Investigations.

"This is happening just as we are able to understand the severe medical and emotional consequences of cocaine usage," she added. "Cocaine is not a harmless recreational drug. It is a poison."

Mrs. Heckler later told a reporter she was "very surprised" by the survey results, particularly because the same study showed a decline in alcohol and marijuana use among students. The secretary said she plans to develop a special program to combat cocaine use in the schools, with an announcement likely in about two weeks.

While she could not quote a street price for cocaine, Mrs. Heckler said she knew it had dropped to the point that students could afford it. Another witness at the hearing said a cocaine derivative can be purchased in Southern California for $10 to $25.

The study Mrs. Heckler cited noted wide regional variations from the nationwide rate of cocaine use among high school seniors. In the Northeast, the study said 11 percent admitted they had used cocaine in the past month. In the West the figure was 9 percent, in the South just over 4 percent and in the North Central states just over 2 percent.

"The figures are alarming, particularly because of the addictive quality of cocaine," she said. Laboratory tests have found rats given access to unlimited quantities of cocaine eat the substance, to the exclusion of everything else, until they die, she said.

Mrs. Heckler said the same survey, conducted by HHS and the University of Michigan Institute for Social Research, found that daily use of alcohol was reported by 5 percent of high school seniors in 1984, down from 7 percent in 1979.

In addition, she said, only 5 percent of the seniors said they used marijuana daily, less than half the 11 percent of the peak year, 1978, and the lowest ever recorded by the survey.

Total usage of marijuana also declined, she said, from 37 percent in 1978, to 27 percent in 1983 to 25 percent in 1984.

She said later, however, that the figures "are still unacceptably high. We're still looking at 25 percent, and frankly that percentage translates into millions of American children."

Another witness at the hearing was television star Gerald McRaney, who is co-star of the CBS television program "Simon & Simon" and a leader of a drive within the television industry to deglamorize drug use.

He said a cocaine derivative called "coke-rocks" is now selling in California for from $10 to $25. At that price, it is likely to be available soon nationwide, he said.

Alaskan Musher Becomes First Woman To Win Sled Dog Race

NOME, Alaska (AP) — Libby Riddles had to endure 1,100 miles of blizzards, sub-zero temperatures and screaming winds to become the first woman ever to win the Iditarod Trail Sled Dog Race.

The 28-year-old musher from western Alaska already has plans for part of her $50,000 in prize money — buy a ticket to Hawaii.

But first, she said, "I've got to hire a dog-sitter."

Ms. Riddles and her 13-dog team cruised into the finish chute on Nome's Front Street on Wednesday at 9:20 a.m. after 18 days, 20 minutes and 17 seconds on the trail, the fourth slowest Iditarod run on record.

Grabbing second-place and $30,000 in prize money was Duane "Dewey" Halverson of Trapper Creek. Halverson, Ms. Riddles' former boyfriend from their hometown in St. Cloud, Minn., arrived under the log arch finish line with an elapsed time of 18 days, two hours, 45 minutes and 36 minutes.

Standing on a platform, Ms. Riddles clutched a bouquet of yellow roses, which quickly withered in the 15-degree temperatures.

It was Ms. Riddles' third Iditarod. She placed 18th in 1980 and 20th in 1981. "Now I could die and it would be all right," she said.

The dangers of the Iditarod give a musher cause to contemplate dying. Ms. Riddles started her surge ahead of the pack three days before the finish, at Shaktoolik, when she pushed her team into a howling gale that nobody else dared challenge.

And she spent a "cold and miserable" night alone on the ice of Norton Sound, knowing it was her only chance to beat the fast team driven by Rick Swenson.

Ms. Riddles used the same dog team her boyfriend and training partner Joe Garnie used last year to place third in the Iditarod.

Ms. Riddles and other women mushers have raced in the shadow of Susan Butcher, who has finished in the top 10 six of the seven times she has run the Iditarod. Twice Ms. Butcher was second and her exploits have been covered heavily by national television networks and magazines.

But Ms. Butcher was knocked out of the running early when a moose stomped through her team, killing two dogs and severely injuring several others.

The 13th annual running of the race was jinxed from the start by bad weather, bad trail and bad luck.

Storms caused race officials to halt the race twice, for a total of 87 hours as they scrambled to fly dog food to checkpoints.

At least 15 of the original 61 entrants had scratched by Wednesday. Another musher, Wes McIntyre of Ninilchik, was disqualified for "cruel and inhumane treatment" after one of his dogs died from a blow.

Nine dogs died along the trail. Race officials said all but McIntyre's died accidentally.

Supreme Court Says Crime Suspect Can't Be Forced To Have Surgery

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virginia prosecutors, believing that Rudolph Lee Jr. was shot by a Richmond store owner whom he is accused of trying to rob, wanted to have the bullet in Lee's chest surgically removed to obtain possible evidence.

But the Supreme Court said Wednesday that forcing such surgery, even though it is likely to yield evidence of a crime, would violate Lee's constitutional right of privacy.

In two other criminal justice decisions, the court:

— Used a case from South Carolina to relax its rules about how long police officers may detain people suspected of a crime when they do not have enough reason to arrest them.

— Ruled in a Florida case that police may not force a criminal suspect to accompany them to a police station for fingerprinting without a court's permission.

— Decided states may continue to use deadly drugs to execute condemned murderers.

In the surgery case, Virginia prosecutors allege that Lee was shot June 18, 1982, by store owner Ralph Watkinson during an attempted robbery.

Police found Lee eight blocks from Watkinson's store. He was suffering from a gunshot wound to the chest and told the officers he had been shot by two individuals who attempted to rob him.

After an investigation, police decided that Lee was lying. He was charged with attempted robbery and with shooting and wounding Watkinson. Lee is awaiting prosecution.

The decision by the court Wednesday said the request by prosecutors to have the bullet removed from Lee's chest was an "unreasonable" intrusion of the suspect's privacy.

The court said Virginia prosecutors failed to show a compelling need for the bullet since they reportedly have an eyewitness to the crime.

If prosecutors decide to make Lee stand trial, they will not be able to obtain the bullet as possible evidence against the suspect.

Lee currently is in prison on other charges.

In the South Carolina case, the justices reinstated the marijuana-smuggling convictions of two men detained by police for 20 minutes before they were arrested.

The high court never has said precisely how long police may detain someone while investigating a suspected crime, and it did not do so Wednesday.

But writing for the court, Chief Justice Warren E. Burger said courts should consider whether police "diligently pursued a means of investigation that was likely to confirm or dispell their suspicions quickly."

He said police may detain criminal suspects without arresting them while making such investigations.

In the third case, the court threw out the 1981 burglary and sexual battery conviction of Joe Hayes, sentenced to 99 years in prison in connection with a series of crimes in Punta Gorda, Fla.

The court said Hayes unlawfully was forced to accompany police to a police station for fingerprinting.

But at the same time, the court said police officers sometimes may be justified in fingerprinting criminal suspects when stopping them for questioning — even though the officers do not have enough reason for making an arrest.

The court also overturned a 1983 decision by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Washington that ordered the Food and Drug Administration to ban lethal injections for condemned prisoners until the FDA determined the injections kill quickly and painlessly.

Attorney Says Goetz Will Testify

NEW YORK (AP) — Subway gunman Bernhard Goetz will testify before a grand jury next week to head off what his lawyer says is a "politically motivated" attempt by the district attorney to indict him for attempted murder.

Goetz will testify March 29, the last day of deliberations for the panel considering his case, Barry Slotnick, Goetz's attorney, said Wednesday. Goetz did not testify before an earlier grand jury.

Meanwhile, a witness who has testified before the second panel testified that when Goetz shot four youths on a New York subway Dec. 22, he "looked professional. He wasn't sloppy. He knew what he was doing."

Victor Flores, a Transit Authority employee who was riding in the car when Goetz began shooting, told the New York Daily News in today's editions that he testified, "I don't think there was a reason for the shooting."

And he said he told the panel "I didn't feel threatened by anybody."

Flores, 47, also told the News the second grand jury presentation has been "more thorough" than the first, which he called "sort of rush-rush."

Goetz agreed to testify although he was not granted immunity from prosecution, Slotnick said.

But Slotnick said Goetz's defense team decided to let him testify this time because they believe Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau will make "an overzealous presentation" in a "politically motivated" move to get an indictment.

Concord, N.H., police Inspector Robert Libby told the New York Post that New York detectives had corroborated Goetz's story that the four youths had approached and surrounded him, asking for money.

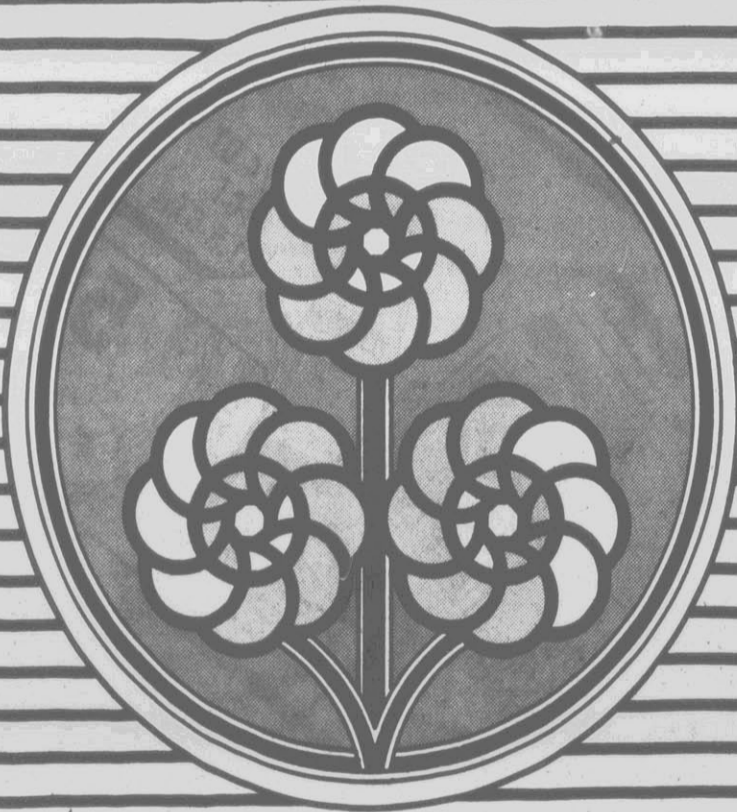

"Apparently the four surrounded him with one getting very close,"

Libby told the Post. "One allegedly asked for $5, and, according to the shooting victims, Goetz replied that he had $5 for each of them and then shot them."

ABC-TV has obtained copies of audio tapes of Goetz's account of the shooting given to police in Concord, according to Goetz attorney Joseph Kelner and network officials. The tapes will air tonight on ABC's "20-20" program.

The tapes were evidence presented before the first grand jury that considered the Goetz case. In New York, divulging grand jury evidence is a felony.

House Now Likely To Approve MX

WASHINGTON (AP) — The congressional battle over the MX missile, the winner of two carbon-copy votes in the Senate, moves on to the House where some opponents concede another major victory for President Reagan is in the offing.

"I wish it wasn't so, but there have always been the votes to pass it," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., said. "In my assessment, it's always been gone."

"I think there is in the House now about a 10-vote victory" for MX, said Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. "And the president has just started making calls on the House side."

But other MX foes, encouraged by Wednesday's 28-26 recommendation by the House Appropriations Committee to kill MX spending, predicted the final tally will be extremely close, with an upset possible.

"It's a hard fight," said House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., an MX opponent. "It's a vote of conscience. We still think we have an excellent chance of winning."

But he acknowledged that personal lobbying by Reagan for the weapons system injects an extra dimension that is difficult to overcome. "The power and the popularity of the president is awesome — it's as awesome as the weapon itself," O'Neill said.

Reagan is "one of the greatest lobbyists of all time," said House Democratic Whip Thomas S. Foley of Washington.

However, another opponent, Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., said he thinks the issue will be settled by five or six votes either way and that there is "real hope that we are going to win this vote."

The Senate endorsed the MX missile program for the second consecutive day Wednesday, voting 55-45 to approve spending another

$1.5 billion for a second installment of 21 MXs. The margin was identical to that in an initial vote on Tuesday.

Under an agreement arrived at last fall, two votes are required in both houses of Congress, one to authorize the money and the other to actually appropriate it.

The two House votes are scheduled for Tuesday and Thursday of next week.

Reagan ultimately wants to place 100 MXs in underground silos in Nebraska and Wyoming to replace the aging force of Minuteman missiles that comprise the land-based portion of the U.S. strategic arsenal.

A major argument against doing that, according to MX opponents, is that both the silos and missiles will be vulnerable to Soviet attack, thus posing the possibility the United States might be forced to fire its missiles on warning of Soviet attack.

Labor Gives Glad Hand To Brock

WASHINGTON (AP) — William E. Brock, President Reagan's choice as new labor secretary, is being welcomed by organized labor to a post that has drawn the wrath of most union leaders over the past four years.

Brock was nominated Wednesday to succeed Raymond Donovan, whose relations with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland were non-existent after Donovan angered the labor federation's chief early in the Reagan administration.

Donovan resigned last week after being ordered to stand trial on 137 counts of grand larceny and fraud.

Tipped off to the appointment by Brock himself just before Reagan's announcement, Kirkland issued a statement saying, "We look forward to a new and constructive relationship with the Labor Department."

Teamsters President Jackie Presser said the union, one of the few to endorse Reagan for re-election, was "delighted with the appointment."

Brock said his primary job "is to do whatever I can to create as many jobs as I can."

Betty Southard Murphy, a Republican and former chairwoman of the National Labor Relations Board, said Brock will be able "to build bridges" to organized labor on the issue of foreign trade.

In his current post as the administration's trade representative, Brock has grappled with soaring U.S. trade deficits, which totaled $123.3 billion last year.

That's a problem of vital importance to union leaders representing American workers who have been laid off because of increasing imports.

Elbe Vets Hold First Reunion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The four men rushed toward each other's arms at the oaken bar, grabbed huge glasses of draft lager or soda water, and began reliving that day — April 25, 1945 — when they met the Russians on the sunlit banks of the Elbe at Tornau, a village about 75 miles south of Berlin.

The first American soldiers to link up with Soviet troops at the Elbe River, dooming Nazi Germany to final defeat, met for the first time in nearly 40 years on Wednesday — to laugh, compare waistlines and recall the day they made history with a bedsheet flag.

A British television crew brought the quartet of wartime buddies together at the Dubliner, an Irish pub at the foot of Capitol Hill, to film their reminiscences for a documentary on the end of World War II in Europe.

There was no script, and none was needed.

The guy in heavy horn-rim glasses was William D. Robertson, 61, a retired neurosurgeon from Culver City, Calif. Back then, he was a young Army second lieutenant leading a reconnaissance patrol 20 miles ahead of the 273rd Regiment of the 69th Infantry Division.

His companions were Cpl. James J. McDonnell, now 62 and the deputy fire chief of Peabody, Mass.; Pfc. Frank Huff, now a retired mechanic, aged 63, who lives in rural Flint Hill, Va., and Pfc. Paul Staub, who at 59 is a clothing store manager from Levittown, N.Y.

"We're all more handsome, we're all more mature, and we're all smarter not to do it again," Robertson said. McDonnell slung an arm around Robertson's shoulder and said, "You're still my lieutenant." Staub, squinting at a fading wartime photo of the group, told McDonnell: "You were the only one who looked like a soldier. The rest of us looked like a bunch of deadbeats."

As the comrades in arms entered Tornau that spring day in 1945, they

came under intense Russian sniper fire from across the river. The Americans begged a bedsheet from an old German woman, machine-gunned the door off the village pharmacy and found some chemical dyes inside. They painted red stripes on the sheet for a makeshift Old Glory, but there was no blue dye for the field of stars.

With the sheet tied to a crooked tree branch, they climbed to the top of a church steeple, waved their homemade flag and yelled for a cease-fire. The shooting intensified. In a nearby prison camp, Huff found an English-speaking Russian who shouted across the Elbe that the flag wavers were American soldiers.

The shooting stopped, and the four crossed a bomb-damaged bridge to embrace their Russian comrades, the bloodied and bandaged vanguard of Gen. Ivan Konev's 1st Ukrainian Army.

"Once they recognized us, we were all buddies," McDonnell said. "We couldn't speak Russian, and they couldn't speak English, but the hugs and the handshakes said it all."

Robertson posed for a picture that was published around the world. He was shaking hands with a grinning, bemedalled Lt. Alexander Sylvashko, now a 62-year-old high school principal in a small village in Byelorussia.

The schnapps flowed. "Somebody got my wristwatch, and I got his," Robertson said. Insignias were torn off shirt collars. One Russian gave Robertson a gold wedding band, which he thought was symbolic of the occasion. "There was a great sense of relief — this is it, the war is over," he recalled.

The Allied drive from the beaches of Normandy and the Soviet onslaught from the East ended at the Elbe, dividing the German armies and sealing the collapse of the Third Reich. Two weeks later, the Soviet erected roadblocks and barriers, Robertson said, and "the spirit of free comradeship was over."

"It's too bad the spirit of that day doesn't endure today," said McDonnell. "If it did, we wouldn't have to worry about the MX missile or anything else."

Before Robertson and his platoon arrived in Paris to be toasted with champagne, they visited Allied headquarters at Rheims and met their supreme commander, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, who promoted each man on the spot.

They gave Ike their homemade American flag as a souvenir. They don't know what happened to it. Archivists at the Dwight D. Eisenhower Library at Abilene, Kan., say the flag apparently was lost in the tumult over the war's end.

Jet Burns

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A U.S. Air Force jet burned after taking on fuel at Cairo International Airport, the Air Force said. No one was aboard the plane at the time, but two Egyptian firemen reportedly were hurt fighting the fire.

An Air Force statement said the fire began "during ground maintenance operations following routine refueling of the aircraft." It said the Air Force will investigate the cause of the fire.

The Air Force said the plane carried 12 people, including a crew of five. Based at Barksdale Air Force Base, La., the KC135 was attached to the Second Bomb Wing of the U.S. 8th Air Command. The Air Force said the group was on a flight from Riyadh, Saudi Arabia, to ferry officers on an inspection tour of overseas air bases.

Fed Offers To Supply Funds For Ohio Thrifts

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Most of the 69 Ohio savings and loans closed nearly a week ago could reopen for limited business by Friday, with the Federal Reserve offering supplies of currency to protect against runs by fearful depositors, officials said.

Sixty people lined up outside the Mansfield office of Savings One on Wednesday as the savings and loan reopened for limited service. Bank president Bob Masters said the institution had ordered truckloads of cash to avert a liquidity crisis, but there were no problems.

Gov. Richard Celeste closed 69 S&Ls on Friday to prevent a run by depositors in the wake of March 8 closing of Home State Savings Bank of Cincinnati, which said it had lost millions because of loans to a Florida government securities firm.

Deposits at the savings and loans closed by Celeste were backed by a private insurance fund which was strained by the Home State closing. The institutions now must apply for federal deposit insurance or equivalent coverage.

"I think the governor may be right; in the long run we may have stronger banking in Ohio," Masters said of the so-called bank holiday. "But it's a painful way to achieve it."

Century Savings, with offices in Columbus, Newark, Toledo and Cincinnati, obtained vault cash from a Cincinnati commercial bank to prepare for its reopening today, said Century vice president William D. Connelly.

"It's more than we usually carry, because we don't know what to anticipate tomorrow," Connelly said. Another Cincinnati S&L reopened Monday.

Most of the Ohio S&Ls may be able to open on a limited basis by Friday under terms of an emergency law passed Wednesday that allows each depositor to withdraw up to $750 a month, said Thomas Batties, state superintendent of savings and loans.

The Federal Reserve in Cleveland had agreed to make its discount window available to those institutions that open, providing them with a source of cash if needed, Batties said.

"One of the things we're concerned about is that they have adequate liquidity to meet ... some of the fearful depositors that they might encounter on their first days. That's one of our primary considerations," said Batties.

During the past week, the institutions continued to receive deposits mailed to them, but were unable to register the money on their books, said Connelly. "No one's been able to deposit. The computer terminals were turned off."

He added that Century employees remained on salary during the period.

"I've had hundreds of calls from people assuring me that they're going to leave their money with us," said Theodore Simson, chairman of First State Savings and Loan Co. of Columbus. "We have $50 million here ready to pay depositors if we have a run."

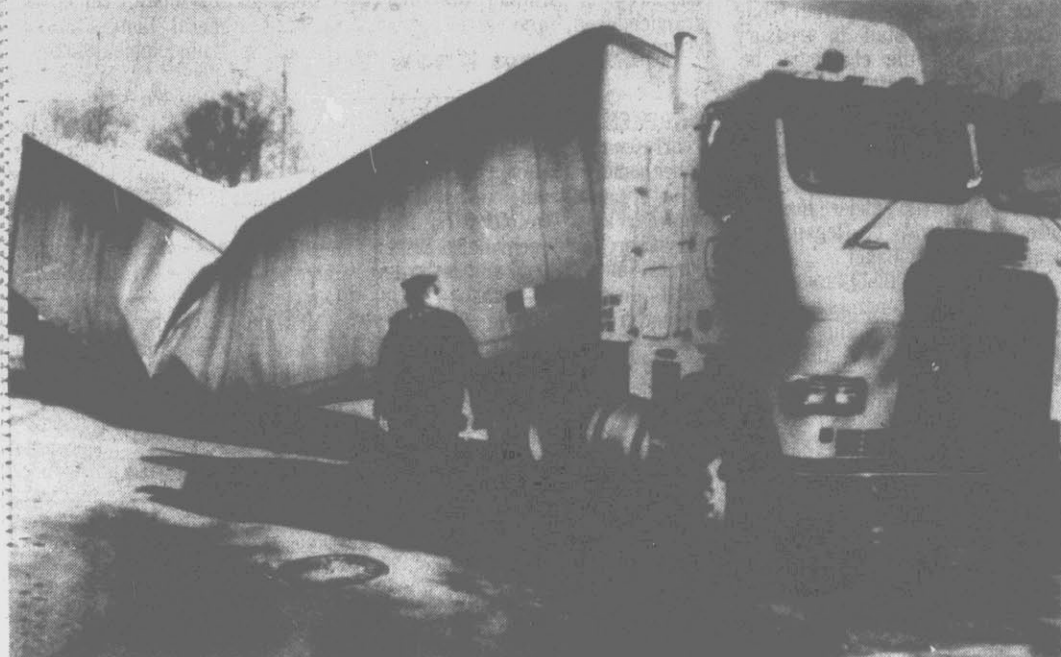

Celeste huddled with about 125 executives of the closed savings and loans Wednesday, going over new regulations governing reopenings that will reunite 500,000 depositors with their money.

Institutions that apply for federal insurance or otherwise demonstrate to state officials that they can meet depositors' demands will be allowed to open on a full-service basis, with no limits on customer withdrawals or deposits.

Credit Red Tape Cut

WASHINGTON (AP) — A change in government regulations will enable qualified institutions in the Farm Credit System, a cooperative often called the farmer's lender of last resort, to get speedier service on federal loan guarantees.

As a result of the change, Agriculture Secretary John R. Block said Wednesday that qualified lending institutions are now eligible for the Agriculture Department's "approved lender" program, which allows red tape to be snipped so hard-pressed farmers can get their loans in a fraction of the time usually required.

Most of the system's production credit associations and federal land bank associations will be brought into the approved-lender program of the Farmers Home Administration, Block told a news conference.

The action means farmers will have access to a greatly expanded credit base and the use of FmHA loan guarantees to help restructure debts as the 1985 crop season progresses, officials said.

Block also dismissed any suggestion that the administration might reconsider its opposition to a plan passed by Congress and vetoed March 6 by President Reagan to advance farmers part of their price support loans on 1985 crops. Normally, the loans are made at the time of harvest or thereafter.

"We're not even looking at it," Block said. "What we are doing is saying clearly that the programs we have will work, and we want to make them work."

But the secretary said the expansion of the approved lender program will accelerate the delivery of badly needed credit to farmers.

Block said the expansion not only will broaden the credit base for farmers wanting FmHA guarantees but will mean "a five-day turnaround time on applications" against 60 to 90 days without approved-lender status.

Under the program, FmHA will accept an approved lender's loan documents and security checks, thus avoiding a duplication of time-consuming and costly effort.

"This is a new program, and had we gone and passed some other new program by the Congress, we would not have had it ready to go before summer," Block said. "These things just take time."

There are about 900 lending institutions in the Farm Credit System, including production credit associations, land banks and banks for cooperatives.

Often called the lender of last resort for hard-pressed farmers, the system carries about 32 percent of the total U.S. farm debt, compared with about 24 percent by commercial banks and 12 percent by the FmHA.

Life insurance companies, individuals and others make up the remainder of farm lenders.

Donald E. Wilkinson, governor of the Farm Credit Administration, the independent federal agency that oversees the Farm Credit System, said the production credit associations and land banks would be urged to cooperate in the expanded USDA program.

"There is an extreme degree of urgency," Wilkinson said. "There was no time for any new programs" to be designed from the ground up

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed early today following news that the economy is growing at a surprisingly sluggish rate of 2.1 percent so far this year, down dramatically from the pace set in 1984.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 3.09 points to 1,268.33.

But losers took an 8-to-7 lead over gainers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The Commerce Department said this morning it estimates growth in the broadest measure of economic health — the gross national product — at its slowest rate since the 1.6 percent pace turned in from July through September last year.

The economy grew 6.8 percent during 1984.

The report also said inflation is heating up.

A measure of prices tied to the GNP — the implicit price deflator — is rising at an annual rate of 5.4 percent in the unfinished first three months of the year, the fastest rate since a 5.6 percent pace in the second quarter of 1982.

Early volume leaders were AT&T, down 1/8 at 21 1/2, Chesapeake-Pond's, up 1/8 at 32 1/2 and Diebold, up 1/4 at 52 1/4.

Concept Of Tax Reform Remains Alive And Active

WASHINGTON (AP) — Surprise. Tax reform is alive.

The sweeping tax reform plan drawn up by the Treasury department seemed to fade from sight late last year after it was politely shunned by President Reagan and cold-shouldered by a Congress preoccupied with deficits and missiles.

But, "It's moving much faster than people realize," says Rep. Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif., a member of the tax-writing House Ways and Means Committee.

"I think that the odds for tax reform have improved substantially over the last month or so from what many of us would have expected," said Rep. Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, another Ways and Means member.

"There are days I think it's over 50-50 and days I think it's under 50-50," Gradison added. "But I wouldn't have put it anywhere near that level some months ago."

Last November, when the Treasury Department delivered the tax-overhaul plan that Reagan had asked officials to draft, the president avoided endorsing the package and simply praised its broad goals.

Then there were predictions that any effort by the administration and Congress to increase the tax burden on corporations in order to streamline individual income tax rates would wither under a relentless assault by armies of lobbyists.

But now, even the lobbyists say a tax reform measure stands a good chance of becoming law.

Among the factors contributing to the health of the effort is James A. Baker III's recent move from White House chief of staff to treasury secretary and the chemistry between Baker and House Ways and Means Chairman Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

Baker has been moving quietly and carefully to rework the proposals drawn up under his predecessor, Donald T. Regan, who swapped jobs with Baker.

Baker has said that sometime in May he will send Congress a new tax package the president supports and that retains most of the basic features of the earlier plan, including a top personal tax rate of 35 percent or less.

the production of the campaign slide and tape show, and Frank Fraboni of WNCT-TV, who narrated the slide show.

Outgoing president John Williams, who conducted the program, said "the achievements of the United Way would not exist without the tremendous support it receives from the people of Pitt County. Because of this loyalty, contributions to the Pitt County United Way have doubled in just five years."

This year's United Way campaign, which will begin in September, will be led by Richard Tolmie. In an interview following the banquet, Tolmie said he is organizing his strategy for the 1985 United Way campaign, although no goals have been set at this time.

"With the strong support of the community and the volunteerism that has been a hallmark of previous Pitt County United Way campaigns," Tolmie said, "our goal is to continue to provide the resources to support the over 25 agencies that are a part of the Pitt County United Way."

Safety Board Chief Blasts Inaction Against Drinking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the National Transportation Safety Board today chastized the Transportation Department for not moving quicker to impose regulations prohibiting the use of alcohol or drugs by freight and passenger train engineers.

NTSB Chairman Jim Burnett said he found it "incredible" that, as far as federal laws are concerned, an engineer "can consume a bottle of whiskey while at the controls."

Burnett made the remarks as the board prepared to issue its final report on two train collisions a year ago in Colorado and Wyoming — both involving alcohol or drugs — in which seven people died.

Partly in response to those accidents, the Federal Railroad Administration proposed a broad-ranging and controversial regulation last June that would prohibit the use of alcohol and drugs by engineers and give railroads more leeway to check for alcohol and drug abuse among their workers.

But Burnett expressed frustration that the regulation has not been put in force. He accused the railroad administration, a Transportation Department agency, of reacting to publicity when a major rail accident involving alcohol occurs but then "sidetracking" the issue once public interest subsides.

Extension of Arlington Boulevard was targeted in May by the City Council as Greenville's No. 3 highway priority. No funds have been committed for the extension on either the state or local level. However, projects targeted as the city's number one and two priorities (northwestern loop of U.S. 264 and widening of portions of Evans Street) are included on the state's 10-year Transportation Improvement Program (TIP), adopted Dec. 14, 1984.

"You cannot let plans be jerry-mandered to fit development needs," or suit political concerns, Gaskins said, adding he felt the city's medical district development plan needed to be reviewed at least every five years. To date, the study now being conducted by the city-appointed committee is the first review of the plan since it was adopted in 1975. Members of the current study committee include Chairman Dick Flye, Wayne Adams, Tom Baines, Charlie Berkey, Phil Dixon, Dick McKee, Wes Hankins, Janice Faulkner and Dan Worthington. The committee is expected to pass on its recommendation for future development of the Pitt-Greenville medical district to the City Council in several months.

Other concerns of Pitt County government regarding development of the medical district, Gray and Gaskins noted, include traffic flow, land acquisition and parking facilities.

"Traffic (in the medical district) is now horrendous and will be even more so when additional cars are 'dumped into the area,'" Gray said, referring to increases expected upon completion of a four-lane U.S. 264 link from Greenville to Farmville now under construction. The highway, slated for completion in 1987, is expected to increase traffic

Pirates, Seahawks Split Twin Bill

WILMINGTON — East Carolina University snapped an 11-game winning streak by UNC-Wilmington in their first ECAC-South baseball meeting of the year yesterday, winning the first game of a doubleheader, 3-2. The Seahawks bounced back in the nightcap to win the second game, 8-3.

The split left the Pirates with a 13-4 overall record and a 1-1 ECAC-South mark. UNC-W climbs to 17-4 overall and 6-2 in league play.

"We came out with a split and we're happy," Coach Gary Overton of East Carolina said. "After winning the first game, we had the momentum to take the second, especially after leading 2-1 in the second inning. But Wilmington came back nicely with some timely hitting."

The Pirates, after taking a 2-0 lead in the top of the third saw the Seahawks rally for single runs in the third and sixth to tie the first game at 2-2. But East Carolina pushed over a run in the top of the seventh and Winfred Johnson sat the Seahawks down in order in the bottom of the frame to capture his fifth victory of the season.

"The first game was excellently played," Overton said. "It had good hitting, good fielding (no errors) and good pitching. And I have to give a lot of credit to our guys for coming back and winning after they had tied it up."

In the second game, Overton said that starting pitcher Jim Peterson and reliever Mike Christopher neither had their good stuff and the Seahawks took advantage of it. "We had our chances but we just couldn't get anything started."

The Pirates left two runners stranded in the third, two more in the fifth and left the bases loaded in the sixth.

In the opener, the Pirates took the lead in the top of the third. Mark Shank walked and was sacrificed up. He scored on Chris Bradberry's double down the line in left and Jay McGraw singled to drive in Bradberry.

The Seahawks came back with a run in the bottom of the inning. With two away, John Catalano walked and Bobby Reynolds singled. Tommy Griffin followed with another hit, scoring Catalano.

UNC-W tied it up with another run in the sixth. With one away, Gary Hall singled to left and Scott Brady got a hit up the middle. Reggie Redd reached on a fielder's choice, scoring Hall. UNC-W went on to load the bases on a single and a walk, but Johnson fanned the final batter to get out of the jam.

Then, in the top of the seventh, the Pirates pushed over the game-winner. With one away, Hardison doubled down the line just inside third. He scored when Bradberry doubled over the head of the centerfielder.

Bradberry led the ECU hitting in the game with two, while Hall had a pair for the Seahawks.

UNC-W wasted little time in striking for the lead in the second game, scoring in the bottom of the first. Catalano doubled, moved up on a deep fly and scored on a passed ball.

The Pirates rallied for two in the second, however. Mike Sullivan got a one-out walk and Mark Cockrell singled to left. When the ball got past the fielder, Sullivan came all the way to score and Cockrell ended up on third. He scored on Jim Riley's sacrifice fly.

The Seahawks moved back out with three in the third, taking a 4-2 lead that they never gave up. Griffin led off with a walk and Hall singled. Both advanced on an out and scored on a double by Redd. On the play, Bradberry tried for a diving catch on the play, but the ball bounced out of his glove then hit the ground. Chuck Jones followed with a single, scoring Redd.

Another UNC-W run scored in the fourth, that on a homer by Catalano.

One more Seahawk run scored in the fifth. With two away, Jones singled and Steve Tomancheck walked. Tim Langmeyer singled in Jones.

The final two crossed in the sixth. Reynolds singled and Griffin walked. With two away, the two runners each stole up, and scored on a single by Redd.

East Carolina rallied for one run in the seventh. Hardison reached on an infield hit and Johnson was safe on an error. McGraw then singled in Hardison.

Redd and Jones led the Wilmington hitting with three each while Catalano had two. Bradberry and McGraw each had two for the Pirates.

East Carolina returns home this afternoon to host North Carolina at 3 p.m. and will entertain Framingham State on Friday at 3 p.m. They again take to the road for an ECAC-South doubleheader at Richmond on Sunday.

Gatlin 'Assists' Maryland To Another Banner Year

Special To The Reflector COLLEGE PARK, Md. — "Gatlin in the forecourt, spins right, fakes left and throws the lob, on what a slam by Lenny Bias! The 6-8 junior can really sky!"

A play like that typifies Cole Field House sold out and going crazy.

Most will say, "What a play by Bias." However, the basketball mind knows that the key to the whole thing was the perfectly executed lob-pass.

Grimesland, N.C.'s, own Keith Gatlin, now a sophomore at the University of Maryland, is doing the thing he does best in College Park, perform magic on a basketball court. Running the fast break and hitting the open man are two of his specialties.

In a season where his primary responsibility is to make sure the duo of Bias and Adrian Branch get the ball in scoring position, Gatlin has managed to grab a little of the limelight for himself.

On January 30, Keith broke a Maryland record by dishing out 13 assists against the University of Virginia.

"Keith hits people on the court sometimes I don't see," said head coach Lefty Drisell. "His instincts and court sense are very rare."

On February 17, the Terrapins were in the middle of a slump that would have them drop four Atlantic Coast Conference games in a row. With the team struggling someone forgot to tell Keith as he hit 14 of 15 from the field for a career high of 28 points against Clemson.

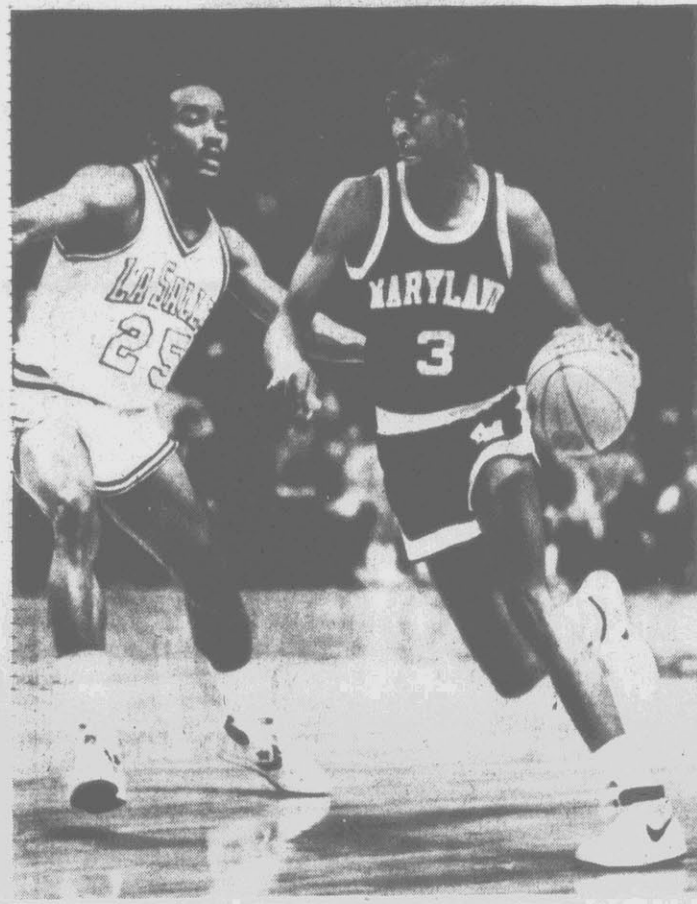

In directing Maryland to a 23-10 regular season record, Gatlin set a new single season assist record breaking the old mark set by former Terp All-American John Lucas, and is still adding to the record.

Gatlin came to Maryland with a host of credentials. The much sought-after point guard was the North Carolina high school "Player of the Year" in his senior season, averaging over 25 points per game at D.H. Conley High. He played in both the McDonald's All-Star game in Atlanta and the McDonald's Capital Centre Classic in Maryland.

As a radio and television major, Keith forgoes no problem with the combination of student and athlete. "If you put school in its proper perspective, academics then athletics, there is no reason why you won't succeed. Besides, even if I went astray Coach would set me straight."

CBS basketball analyst Billy Packer describes Gatlin's outside shot as "an unorthodox set-shot jump-shot with outstanding rotation on the ball." If ACC fans have enjoyed Gatlin's floor play in his first two years at Maryland, they may be in for a new twist come next season. "Next year, Coach may ask me to score a little more," he said.

Maryland, playing in the Southeast NCAA Regional, faces Villanova on Friday.

Lady Jags Shoot For State Title

By JIMMY DUPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

When Farmville Central's Lady Jaguars faced top-ranked and unbeaten SouthWest Edgecombe in the District II high school basketball tournament, many people counted them out of the running.

Two weeks later, the Lady Jags find themselves preparing for a showdown against the Lady Warriors of West Caldwell for the state championship. The game is set for Friday at 7 p.m. at Elon College.

West Caldwell brings impressive statistics to the contest. The Lady Warriors won 24 straight games to hold a 26-1 record after losing to 4-A power McDowell in the third game of the season.

The Warriors, champions of the Northwestern Conference, defeated West Henderson 55-52 in the west regional final to earn their berth in the state championship game.

West Caldwell will have a noticeable height advantage with 6-1 junior center Schonna Banner leading the offense with a 19.7 points per game average. Senior shooting guard Chrissy Thomas chips in 16.3 points, while 5-8 forward Toni Steed provides power inside with 10 rebounds an outings.

Rounding out the Warriors' starting rotation are defensive stalwarts Monie Hardison and Mandy Forney. West Caldwell utilizes man-to-man defense most of the time, but Coach Karen Trivett likes zone trapping defense as well.

"We like to mix it up," Trivett said of the Warriors' defensive scheme. "We like to run when we have the opportunity. I think we would have an advantage if we faced a team that wasn't real quick."

Sophomore Lisa Lang leads Farmville on offense averaging just under 20 points per game and is the Jags' leading rebounder. Point guard Debra Joyner directs the Farmville offense and has become a threat from outside in the Lady Jags' rise to the title game.

Forward Joy Peaden tipped in a shot at the buzzer to give Farmville its 52-51 victory over Apex in the East Regional finals last Saturday, and senior Stephanie Newton starred in the Lady Jags' victories over SouthWest and Havelock in the district tournament.

The trip to the state tournament is the first for veteran Coach Hilda Worthington, and she said her squad has concentrated as much as could be expected this week in practice.

"They've worked real hard; we're all very proud of them," Worthington said. "Hopefully they'll be able to maintain their concentration. There's been a lot of things going on around (the school) in preparation."

"The biggest thing at this point is to stay calm and remember what we're going up there for. I'll know better how they're doing Friday on the trip (to Elon College)."

Both coaches anticipate a battle inside from the outset. Lang, Newton and Peaden have dominated the boards in tournament action, but West Caldwell is accustomed to inside struggles.

"At 5-8, Steed's our top rebounder with about 10 a game, but she plays bigger," Trivett said. "I've been told Lang plays much the same way. We don't fold in physical games; we just like to go out and play and not worry about what type of game it is."

Neither team enjoys the luxury of depth, as Trivett and Worthington have limited themselves to eight regulars most of the season.

"We go about eight deep, but after that we're very young and inexperienced," Trivett said.

Farmville Central plans to carry a sizable contingent, as "two or three" busloads of fans will make the trip.

"This is a great opportunity for us," Worthington said. "Everyone's been very supportive; we're going to give it our best shot."

Loyola Is Seemingly Calm About Facing #1 Hoyas

By The Associated Press

If Loyola of Chicago is apprehensive about facing No. 1 Georgetown, the Ramblers aren't saying so.

"I'll post up anybody," claimed Alfredrick "The Great" Hughes, the second-leading scorer in the nation. "It really doesn't matter who it is, because I know what I can do."

But the question is: How will Hughes and his No. 14 Loyola team do tonight against Georgetown in the NCAA East Regional semifinals in Providence, R.I.?

The Ramblers, a cocky collection of Chicago-area players, are a free-wheeling offensive machine that is second in Division I scoring (85.8 points per game) and are led by Hughes, who averages 26.9.

Loyola began the season unranked, got routed by Oklahoma and also lost to Louisiana State and Marquette early on. But the team has won its last 19 games, which is the longest victory streak in the nation and includes NCAA tournament triumphs over Southern Methodist and Iona.

Faced with the prospect of playing the powerful Hoyas and three-time All-American center Patrick Ewing, the 27-5 Ramblers plan to keep doing the things they have done all season.

"Unlike other teams, we don't try to get the ball inside," Coach Gene Sullivan said. "We try to get the ball outside."

That's partly because Loyola's tallest starter is 6-9 center Andre Moore. But that's also because Sullivan has confidence in his gunners, especially the 6-5 Hughes.

"He does force a shot now and then," Sullivan said of his senior swingman. "And he always will because he believes he's going to make every shot."

"But he's a 50 percent shooter. I don't want to contain him. I want to turn him loose," Sullivan said.

Teaming with Hughes are Andre Battle, a senior guard averaging 20.6 points, and Carl Golston, a junior point guard averaging 15.1 and leading the nation with 9.3 assists per game.

"They're free to take any shot they want," Sullivan said.

The coach also said his entire team was free to relax before the game.

"We don't have bedchecks. I don't know what they're going to be doing tonight," he said. "If we win tomorrow, we'll celebrate."

Loyola won the NCAA championship in 1963. Georgetown, continuing its bid to be the first team to win consecutive NCAA titles since UCLA in 1973, has won 14 straight games. The Hoyas have beaten Lehigh and Temple in the tournament so far.

Rose Girls In Easy Win

Lisa Pagel won three events to pace Rose High School's girls' track team to a lopsided 119-12 victory over a undermanned Rocky Mount team yesterday.

Rose captured every event on the day to win the meet handily. Pagel captured first place in the long jump and both of the hurdles events, while Amy Moore won both of the distance runs.

Pagel's time of 51.9 in the 300-meter hurdles, a new event this year, set the standard for both the Rose track and the Rampettes, in its first running this year.

Rocky Mount had less than a dozen members to its team and offered little challenge to the dominance of Rose in the meet.

Now 2-0, Rose travels to Wilson Beddingfield on Monday.

No Special Plan To Stop Texas

By The Associated Press

Western Kentucky Coach Paul Sanderford says he has no special plan for destroying top-ranked Texas' dream of playing on its own floor next week in Austin at the finals of the NCAA women's basketball tournament.

"We're going to show up," he said of tomorrow night's Midwest semifinal encounter at the Lady Hilltoppers' home in Bowling Green, Ky. "I just hope that they don't beat us by more than 30 points or I'll never talk to (Texas Coach) Jody Conradt again."

"Actually, all the pressure is on them. We've got nothing to lose," Sanderford said.

No. 14 Western Kentucky, 26-5, meets the Longhorns, 28-2, after No. 13 Tennessee, 22-9, plays No. 6 Mississippi, 28-2, in a rematch of the Southeastern Conference semifinal won by Tennessee at Oxford, Miss.

Tennessee was counted out of the tournament by many six weeks ago before Olympic Coach Pat Head Summitt launched a stretch drive run that has produced 10 straight victories and the SEC title.

In the East Regional, Old Dominion Coach Marianne Stanley noted that the days when her team could automatically think about the finals are a thing of the past.

"You just can't look past anybody anymore," said Stanley, whose fifth-ranked Monarchs, 27-3, will enjoy the comforts of home at Norfolk, Va., for the East competition tonight and Saturday.

"Right now, North Carolina State is the biggest game on our schedule because it's the one that gets us to the next round," Stanley said.

She has good reason for not looking past the 12th-ranked Wolfpack, 25-5. Coach Kay Yow's squad defeated ODU in Norfolk in late January. Last year at the same site, N.C. State frittered away a 14-point lead and lost the East semifinal contest in overtime.

"Our kids love to play Old Dominion," Yow said. "One reason is that many of them are from that area so it's just as much a home game on our side."

Before N.C. State and Old Dominion meet, No. 9 Penn State, 28-4, and No. 7 Ohio State, 27-2, play in the opener with both teams having ideas of being the Cinderella qualifier for the Final Four.

The Buckeyes defeated Penn State earlier in the season.

"I showed our guards the game film the other day and asked them 'what offense is that?'" said Penn State Coach Rene Portland. "They couldn't tell me."

Tonight in the West Regional, Southern Cal superstar Cheryl Miller will be working to avoid being a Final Four spectator for the first time in her three-year career.

The two-time defending national champions, 21-8, need to upset No. 3 Long Beach State, 27-2, the West's top seed, at UCLA's Pauley Pavilion.

Southern Cal split the season series with its WCAA opponent. However, should Miller and her teammates pull the upset, they will not exactly be Texas-bound.

On Saturday, they would have to face either No. 18 UCLA, 20-9, which has two victories over Southern Cal, or No. 8 Georgia, 26-4, the preseason national favorites which destroyed USC's Women of Troy in Athens, Ga., in early January.

No. 4 Louisiana Tech, 28-3, the top Midwest seed, appears to be heading for a showdown with nearby rival Northeast Louisiana, 28-1, the nation's second-ranked team, on Sunday. But both schools have some Friday business scheduled first.

Northeast Louisiana, the host school, meets No. 10 Auburn, 25-5, before Louisiana Tech plays No. 20 San Diego State, 21-8.

The Techsters are aiming for their seventh straight Final Four appearance and would like to give co-coach Sonja Hogg, who announced her retirement earlier this week, a good sendoff.

The game will be shown live on CBS-TV starting at 9:10 p.m. EST. The matchup will follow the opening East regional semifinal between No. 6 Georgia Tech and No. 12 Illinois, which will be televised by CBS on delayed tape after the Loyola-Georgetown game.

Illinois, 26-8, was the Big Ten runner-up and has beaten Northeastern and Georgia in the tournament. The Illini victories have come without 6-8 center George Montgomery, who was injured late in the season.

In other NCAA games tonight, the Midwest Regional in Dallas will pit No. 8 Louisiana Tech, 29-2, against No. 4 Oklahoma, 30-5, and Boston College, 20-10, versus No. 5 Memphis State, 29-3.

On Friday night, the Southeast Regional in Birmingham, Ala., will feature Maryland, 25-11, against Villanova, 21-10, and No. 7 North Carolina, 26-8, against Auburn, 22-11.

Also on Friday night, in the West Regional in Denver, No. 16 North Carolina State, 22-9, plays Alabama, 23-9, and No. 3 St. John's, 29-3, takes on Kentucky, 18-12.

Hale Injury Is Greater

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Doctors at the University of North Carolina say because guard Steve Hale suffered muscle tears in addition to his separated shoulder, the basketball player's recovery will be prolonged.

Hale was injured in last week's first-round game against Middle Tennessee State in the NCAA Southeast Regional at South Bend, Ind. He underwent surgery on Sunday.

"Steve has played against every great player we've met this year," Coach Dean Smith said during a news conference Tuesday. "He has outstanding field goal and free throw percentages. He should be as good as new in about a month."

Dr. Timothy Taft performed the two-hour operation and termed the procedure a success. He said the muscle tears would require a longer than usual recuperation period, but he did not elaborate.

Hale, a pre-med student at UNC, is expected to miss several weeks of classes. In the meantime, his parents have come from Oklahoma and his mother is attending her son's classes and recording lectures.

Vols Rally In Final Seconds

BY KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

With Tennessee down by five points with 19 seconds to go, no one would have given a deflated basketball for the Volunteers' chances against Southwestern Louisiana.

Tony White was pumped up, though.

"Tony White was absolutely magnificent," Tennessee Coach Don DeVoe enthused after watching his 6-foot-2 sophomore guard lead a thrilling comeback that gave the Volunteers a 73-72 victory Wednesday night in a second-round game of the National Invitation Tournament.

"Tony wanted the ball and he was hot," DeVoe said of White, who had a field goal and two free throws in the last 19 seconds as the Volunteers pulled off what DeVoe called "one of the best comebacks I've ever had a team make" and advanced to Saturday's quarterfinals.

Louisville and Tennessee-Chattanooga also won second-round tests Wednesday night to complete the quarterfinal field for this weekend. Louisville defeated South Florida 68-61 and Tennessee-Chattanooga tripped Lamar 85-84 in overtime.

On Saturday, it will be Virginia at Tennessee and Fresno State at UCLA. On Sunday, Marquette will play at Indiana and Tennessee-Chattanooga will play at Louisville. The semifinals and finals will be played at New York on March 27 and March 29.

The Volunteers were losing 72-67 with 19 seconds remaining when White scored to pull them within three points. Tennessee called a timeout and came back with White deliberately fouling 6-4 Cajun guard George Almones.

Almones missed his free throw, and Vol guard Fred Jenkins raced down the court to score on a 15-footer, pulling Tennessee to within 72-71 with 10 seconds to go. Tennessee got the ball back immediately when the Cajuns couldn't get it inbounds, and Cajun forward Randal Smith fouled, setting up White's free throws.

"Every loss is very disappointing, but certainly in a tournament situation, it adds to it because you don't get to continue playing," Southwestern Louisiana Coach Bobby Paschal said.

Manuel Forrest scored 21 points, including three baskets as Louisville erupted for the first 14 points of the second half, to lead the Cardinals past South Florida.

Louisville led by just 34-31 when Forrest started the game-breaking run with a jumper from the baseline. Louisville held a commanding 48-31 advantage by the time Mike Abram scored the last basket of the streak with 15:10 remaining.

The victory in Louisville improved the Cardinals' record to 18-16 and guaranteed that they will have a winning season for the 41st consecutive year.

Louisville Coach Denny Crum credited the victory to a change of defensive strategy that kept the ball away from South Florida's Charlie Bradley in the second half after he had scored 11 in the first. "We switched defenses and put a little pressure on Bradley and took him out of the offense," Crum said, noting that Bradley scored only two points after intermission.

South Florida Coach Lee Rose said he generally agreed with Crum, although it was "difficult to analyze exactly the total turnaround at the start of the second half."

James Hunter scored on a baseline drive with nine seconds left in overtime to lead Tennessee-Chattanooga to a heart-stopping road victory over Lamar.

The Moccasins, who trailed by seven points with 1:19 left in regulation, forced the overtime when guard Gerald Wilkins scored at the buzzer to tie the game at 77.

Wilkins, younger brother of Atlanta Hawks' star Dominique Wilkins, played 44 minutes and led all scorers with 27 points. Center James Gulley paced Lamar with 23 points while guard Jerry Everett added 20, including 18 in the second half and overtime.

"Gerald Wilkins is possibly beyond comment," said Tennessee-Chattanooga Coach Murray Arnold. "Awesome is too mild a word for his play."

Lamar Coach Pat Foster took some blame for the loss.

"It was an intense game, a tough game for us to lose," he said. "I can blame myself for it as much as anyone else."

Glasson Knows He's Ahead, But Who's In Second Place?

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Billy Glasson blasted his way through the confusion in the rich Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational golf tournament.

Glasson, who said he plays "in constant pain" from an arthritic condition in his knees, fired an 8-under-par 62 Wednesday in the first round of this five-day, 90 hole event.

The spectacular effort, capped off by a birdie-birdie-birdie finish:

—Matched the low score on the PGA Tour this year.

—Was the best round of Glasson's life.

—Set a record on the Tropicana Country Club course.

—And, kept Glasson from becoming involved in the confusion over who was in second place.

It could be Tom Watson.

Or, depending on how it's figured, it could be a tie among Scott Hoch, Phil Blackmar and Paul Azinger.

Either way, Glasson's round put him three shots in front of Blackmar, Azinger and Hoch, who had 65s. That's on a numerical basis.

In relation to par, he was two shots in front of Watson, a six-time Player of the Year.

The confusion arises from the format for this event that offers a total of $1,042,000 in prize money, the most on the American tour.

The pros are required to play one round on each of three courses — Tropicana, Desert Inn and Las Vegas — each day with a four-man amateur team, before the field is cut for the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday at Las Vegas.

The three courses carry different pars, 70 at Tropicana, 71 at Las Vegas and 72 at Desert Inn, where Watson shot a 66 and played the four par-5 holes five under par.

"I'm just glad to be around the lead, instead of trying to catch somebody from six or seven shots back like I've been doing," Watson said.

Tied with him, on a numerical basis, at 66 were Frank Conner, Larry Ziegler, Willie Wood, Ron Streck and Wayne Grady. Conner and Grady played at Las Vegas and were 5-under-par. Ziegler, Wood and Streck played at Tropicana and were four under par.

Defending champion Denis Watson had a 72 and U.S. Open champ Fuzzy Zoeller a 73, both at Desert Inn. Mark O'Meara, who won the Crosby and has a shot at a $250,000 bonus prize if he can also win here, struggled to a 73 at Tropicana.

Junior Champions

The Tigers captured the Junior Youth Basketball Championship of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department this year. Members of the team are, first row, left to

Faculty, Alumni, Students To Have Say In Selection

GREENWOOD, S.C. (AP) — A committee of Clemson University's trustees has said it will recommend that faculty, students and alumni be assured a voice in who succeeds president Bill Atchley.

The procedure the planning committee favors would make it unlikely the new president could be on board when Atchley leaves July 1. Atchley resigned March 1 amid a state investigation into illegal dispensing of drugs to athletes at the school.

During a 2½-hour meeting Wednesday, the committee agreed to recommend to trustees on Sunday a selection process to "expedite this as reasonably as possible, and at the same time allow all the interested parties, which includes faculty and students and alumni, to be involved in the process," trustee Jim Bostic said.

Committee members would not comment on the selection timetable they will propose to the board Sunday, but it reportedly would make it unlikely a search could be completed by the time Atchley leaves.

During the special 2 p.m. Sunday meeting in Columbia, called at the request of six trustees, the board is scheduled to adopt a presidential selection procedure and to receive another briefing on the drug investigation.

The request for the special meeting Sunday was prompted partly by reports that some trustees might try to move quickly to name Atchley's successor, which probably would preclude involvement by faculty and students.

Of particular concern to faculty members was the idea that the board might bypass screening and selection committees embodied in current policy, sources have said.

Under a procedure established in 1977 when the board was preparing for the search that led to Atchley's hiring, a 10-member screening committee of trustees, students, faculty, staff, and representatives of alumni and the Clemson University Foundation would sift through all applications. A 1983 policy change added a Clemson Extension Service representative to the committee.

About 10 applications would be sent to a selection committee that would include three trustees and the presidents of the Faculty Senate and the student body. That committee would make recommendations to the trustee board, which hires the president.

Also at the Sunday meeting, trustees have said they hope to determine why Atchley was not immediately told about statements by two coaches that they gave prescription drugs to an athlete.

Clemson Vice President for Business and Finance Melvin Barnette and former Athletic Director Bill McLellan waited about a month before telling Atchley that Sam Colson and Stan Narewski had admitted they gave prescription drugs to athletes.

Atchley told the Anderson Independent-Mail Wednesday he was "unhappy and angry" that he was not informed of progress in the investigation.

"Any chief executive officer should have been told," he said.

Murder Charge Filed In Martin

WILLIAMSTON — Tobie Earl Smith, 30, of Chocowinity and Williamston has been charged with murder in the shooting and stabbing death of his estranged wife at her 704 Hamilton St. home here Tuesday afternoon.

Linda Faye Short Smith, 24, was found on the floor of her house by her 17-year-old brother, Keith Short, when he returned home from school, officials said. Police were called by a neighbor reporting a break-in at the residence at 3:19 p.m. and arrived at the scene at 3:22.

Ms. Smith was pronounced dead at Martin General Hospital a short time later.

Coroner Jerry Beach said Ms. Smith had three wounds to her upper back and one in the upper right chest. "She appears to have been stabbed and shot," he said, but "it is unclear which were stabbing wounds and which were bullet wounds."

A butcher knife was found next to the body and a .22 caliber rifle was found in Smith's possession when he was taken into custody by the North Carolina Highway Patrol near Chocowinity about 4 p.m. Tuesday, officers said.

Ms. Smith worked in Robersonville, while officers said Smith, who lived in Chocowinity during the week and sometimes returned to the Hamilton Street home on weekends, worked in Washington.

Investigators, who said the couple had been separated about four years, said Smith was at the home when the Smith's 5-year-old son returned from school. The child was told to go outside and play and shortly thereafter Smith came out, put the boy in Ms. Smith's car and drove away.

Officers said Smith was taken into custody after he dropped his son off at Smith's mother's house in Chocowinity.

Smith, being held without privilege of bond at the Bertie-Martin jail, was scheduled for a first appearance hearing today.

Group Wants Black To Head Schools

WILLIAMSTON — A contingent of concerned blacks, along with members of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, have declared they want the Martin County Board of Education to consider the possibility of hiring a black as superintendent of the county schools.

The school board will be selecting a superintendent to replace Eugene Rogers, retiring at the end of this school year.

One spokesman, Earl Newsome, told the approximately 60 persons attending the meeting, "we feel you aren't satisfied with the educational system in Martin County as to its hiring practices in relation to the minority race."

In light of the already passed deadline for applicants to apply for the superintendent's position, some at the meeting expressed the belief it was too late to do something — others maintained that regardless of the deadline, now was the time to start in an effort to see more blacks in top positions in the school administration. Concern was cited about the lack of black principals at the high school level. Other concerns mentioned were what some believed to be the need of a black assistant principal at the Jamesville school, and what the contingent feels is the need for black teachers to replace retiring black teachers.

Martin County NAACP president Robert Barnes called for unity. "We feel it is only fair that we work together, black and white," he said. Barnes read a letter which earlier was sent to the school board calling for the hiring of a qualified black superintendent or assistant superintendent.

that would schedule a referendum for November 1986.

Voters would be allowed to keep the current system, under which governors and lieutenant governors may seek a maximum of two consecutive four-year terms, or return to the pre-1977 system of a single four-year term.

Senate Panel OKs Vote On Succession

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposal to let the state's voters prohibit governors from seeking consecutive terms won Senate committee approval today, and a floor vote is expected next Tuesday.

House Committee Backs Higher Drinking Age

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The legal drinking age for beer and wine would be raised to 21 on September 1, 1986, under a bill approved today by the House Alcoholic Beverage Control Committee.

"We felt the mandate for the subcommittee was to find a way for North Carolina most gracefully to comply with the federal mandate (to raise the drinking age to 21)," said Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, the chairman of the subcommittee that hammered out the bill. Congress has given the states until October 1986 to raise their drinking ages to 21 or lose federal highway funds. That order is being fought in court by several states which claim it infringes on state rights.

The bill approved today would keep the drinking age at 19 if the federal mandate is ruled unconstitutional.

"I'm kind of sorry to see that provision in there," said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir. "I do not think we're responding to what the mood of the general public is."

Students representing the University of North Carolina, North Carolina State University and Duke University asked the committee to reject the bill and join the legal battle with other states.

"This is a bill I'll vote for in committee, but probably vote against on the House floor," said Rep. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg. "We give the right to vote to 18-year olds, which to me is a much more important right than being able to drink a beer. They can help pick who serves in the Legislature, and even serve in the House themselves, but we're telling them they can't drink."

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, asked why the subcommittee decided to raise the age in 1986 rather than doing it this year. He said some studies indicated raising the age would save 1,250 lives each year.

But Wright said the subcommittee also looked at other studies which disputed the contention that more teen-agers are killed in accidents with the lower drinking age.

FCC Chief Urges Sale Of Channels

WASHINGTON (AP) — Auctioning the rights to non-broadcast airwaves could raise at least $1 billion for the federal treasury, the head of the Federal Communications Commission says.

FCC Chairman Mark S. Fowler, testifying before a congressional hearing Wednesday, estimated that the government could have reaped a billion-dollar windfall had it sold lucrative cellular car telephone licenses for the nation's 90 largest cities rather than giving away the frequencies for free.

"We basically have one of the biggest welfare programs in the country at the FCC," Fowler said.

Speaking before the Senate Commerce subcommittee on communications, Fowler vented his frustration with the time-consuming and costly procedure now used to allocate scarce communications channels.

He made it clear he was not thinking of auctioning off TV channels or AM and FM radio bands, but thought it would be possible to sell cellular frequencies, communications satellite channels and various portions of the spectrum used for microwave data and voice transmission.

But Bob Raish, a Washington attorney who represents cellular and microwave interests and private radio users, said Fowler's proposal would insure that the people would own all the available frequencies.

He called the proposal "an economist's idealistic approach to a very complex technical subject."

In fact, many slices of the electromagnetic spectrum — the airwaves — already go to the highest bidder since the winning applicant is free to sell his operating permit — subject to FCC approval — to any other person.

For example, the winning applicant for an exclusive cellular frequency in San Francisco recently sold an interest in the corporation to PacTel Mobile Access for an undisclosed price.

"We've given away cellular licenses that are worth millions of dollars," Fowler told the subcommittee. "If we had auctioned off cellular licenses in the markets one through 90, there are some estimates that say we would have put more than a billion dollars in the U.S. Treasury."

In its application-approval procedures, the FCC switched from comparative hearings to lotteries when it became clear that the crush of cellular license filings was creating great delays in making new technology available to the public.

If an auction were staged, applicants would save money now spent for lawyers and engineers employed to prepare applications and shepherd them through the regulatory system, Fowler said, and the government would save money by not having to process stacks of applications.

Congressional approval would be sought before the FCC moved ahead with auctions.

Economic Growth For Year Lagging Behind 1984 Level

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy is growing at a surprisingly sluggish rate of 2.1 percent so far this year, down sharply from the pace set in 1984, the government estimated today.

The Commerce Department put growth in the gross national product — the broadest measure of economic health — at its slowest rate since a weak 1.6 percent pace turned in from July through September last year.

In other bad news, the report said inflation is heating up.

A measure of prices tied to the GNP — the implicit price deflator — is rising at an annual rate of 5.4 percent in the still-unfinished first quarter, the fastest clip since a 5.6 percent pace in the second quarter of 1982.

The new report caught analysts by surprise.

Most had been predicting the economy was growing at an annualized rate of around 4 percent this year, about the rate they expect for the entire year.

While that pace would be below the 6.8 percent growth turned in during 1984, it would still be a healthy rate for the third year of an economic recovery.

Most economists believe the economy must expand at a pace of at least 3 percent to create enough new jobs to keep unemployment falling.

The third quarter slump in activity last year had brought on worries of an impending recession. Those fears were eased when growth rebounded in the final three months of last year. Today's report, however, revised the extent of that rebound from an earlier reported 4.9 percent rate to a slightly smaller 4.3 percent pace.

The Commerce Department's "flash" estimate of growth is made before a quarter is over. Today's report contains complete data only for January with estimates for February and March. The quarterly estimate is subject to several rounds of revisions later in the year. Much of the deterioration in growth stemmed from the jump in the inflation rate.

Before inflation was taken into account, the economy was calculated as expanding at an annual rate of 7.6 percent in the first quarter, actually up from the 7.1 percent rate of the fourth quarter last year.

Researcher Develops Plastic-Coated Filler For Tooth Cavities

NEW YORK (AP) — A new method for filling some cavities without pain or anesthesia by essentially plastic-coating the teeth is showing early promise in a trial with patients, a researcher says.

By using a composite material to fill in the hole, then covering the tooth with a clear plastic sealant, decay can be stopped without drilling into the sensitive portion of the tooth, according to results of a two-year study of 82 patients at the Medical College of Georgia in Augusta.

"I'm trying to minimize trauma for the nerve of the tooth and also for the patient, especially the young patient who might develop a lot of fear," said Dr. Eva J. Mertz-Fairhurst, associate professor in the department of restorative dentistry at the college.

The minimal drilling required for the technique is only on the surface of the tooth and usually requires no anesthesia, she said Wednesday. But if the tooth is so decayed that it is sensitive to cold water or a rush of air, anesthesia will be needed to carry out the procedure, she said.

Her study, to be presented today in Las Vegas at a meeting of the International Association for Dental Research, deals with cavities in the pits and fissures of the back teeth. Fluoridation has reduced cavities elsewhere in the mouth and most cavities now occur on the chewing surfaces of the back teeth, she said in a telephone interview.

In the usual filling procedure, silver-colored amalgam is implanted after drilling has removed the decaying portions of the tooth and shaped a hole to hold the filling, she said. Her approach uses a composite material, a mix of ingredients like plastic and ceramic particles, quartz and other fillers, plus a chemical that will grab onto the outer portion of the tooth to hold the filling in place.

The drilling on the tooth surface helps the bonding process, she said. Although decay-causing bacteria are left in the tooth, they starve because the composite material and the sealant cut off the supply of nutrients they get from food in the mouth, she said.

Amalgam fillings sometimes develop tiny leaks that allow decay to start again within the tooth, but Ms. Mertz-Fairhurst said her procedure should prevent leakage.

So far in her study, the new fillings have held up as well as standard fillings placed in the same patients and the cavities have not enlarged beneath them. She hopes to study the patients for six years.

Dr. Joyce Reese, health scientist administrator in the caries and restorative materials program at the National Institute of Dental Research, said this week the new method is innovative.

"I think her preliminary data is certainly very promising," Ms. Reese said. "We certainly would want a longer period of time to observe this."

If the new method proves successful, it will conserve tooth structure that now is removed for the filling, Ms. Reese said. Besides, it is "certainly more comfortable for the patient," she said.

Court Says Confession Cannot Be Used In Trial

BALTIMORE (AP) — A federal judge today threw out a statement by a Navy intelligence analyst admitting he leaked three classified spy photos of Soviet ships under construction to a British military journal.

The Oct. 1 statement by Samuel Loring Morison was made after he requested an attorney, so FBI agents violated Morison's right to counsel when they continued interviewing him, U.S. District Judge Joseph H. Young ruled.

Young said he would not permit the statement to be admitted as evidence when Morison is tried on espionage charges of theft of government property and transfer of classified government material.

Morison, 40, of Crofton, who held the Navy's highest civilian security clearance after working 10 years at the Naval Intelligence Support Center in Suitland, is charged with removing three photographs marked "Secret" from a colleague's desk and mailing them to Jane's Defence Weekly last July.

The photographs, later published by Jane's and several U.S. newspapers, were taken by U.S. espionage cameras and showed ships being built in mid-July at the Soviet Union's Nickolayev shipyard.

Prosecutors said publication of the photographs have damaged U.S. defenses because it revealed the sophistication of U.S. intelligence equipment.

Morison has pleaded innocent. His main defense argument has been that the 1917 federal espionage statute under which he is charged is unconstitutionally vague.

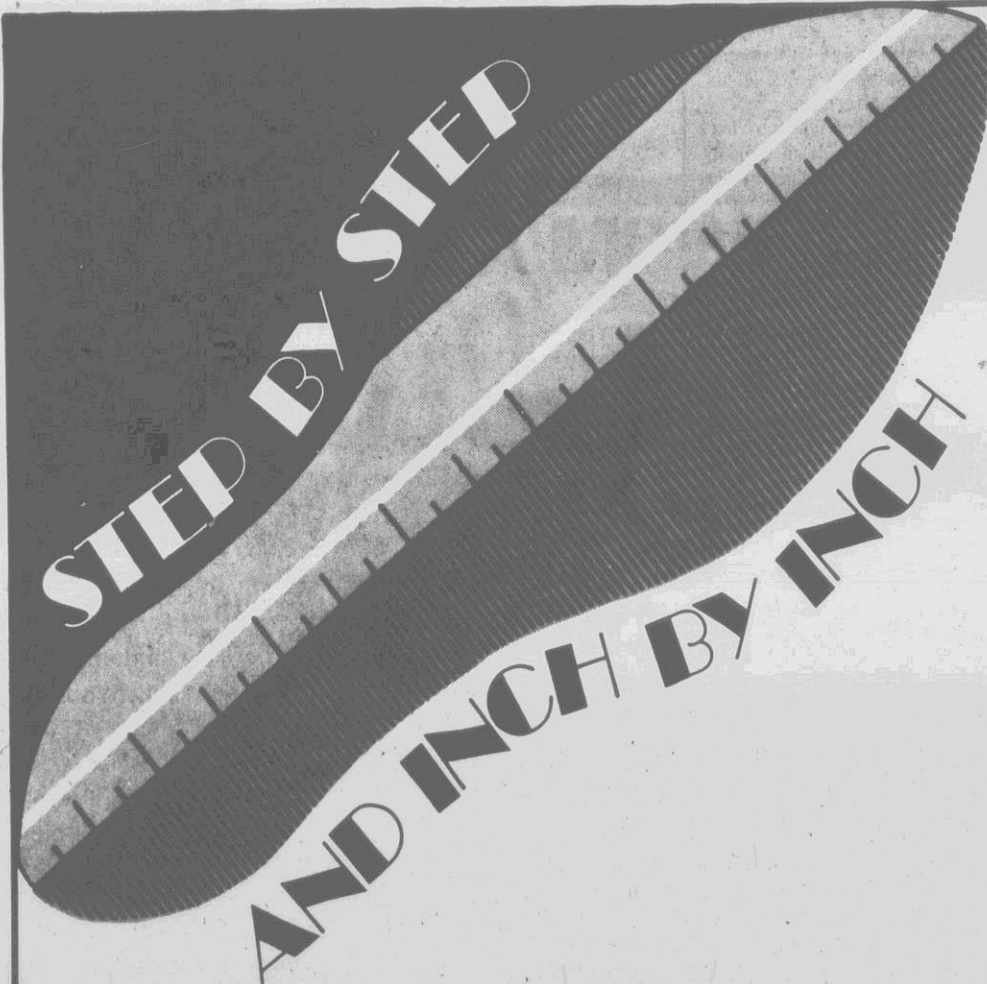

Morison's Oct. 1 statement fills five typed pages of notes by FBI agents who interviewed him upon his arrest.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Schatzow argued that the entire statement should be admitted as evidence because Morison signed a form waiving his right to refuse to answer questions without an attorney present.

Morison's interview was interrupted frequently as he tried in vain to reach an attorney friend and later a public defender by telephone. But Schatzow argued that Morison continued answering questions freely, even after being reminded that he could stop talking whenever he wanted to.

Morison's attorneys argued that the intelligence officer, suffering from physical and psychological stress due to his arrest, was unable to knowingly waive his rights.

In his decision, Young said the first part of Morison's statement is admissible as evidence because Morison had signed the waiver and did not immediately request an attorney.

3 WAYS TO SAY "CHARGE IT"

Writer And Death Row Inmate To Marry

By JODY TAYLOR

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — After only three non-contact visits with James Briley, a North Carolina woman says she's marrying the Virginia death row inmate "to give me credibility to fight for him."

"I do believe in his innocence," said Evangeline Grant Redding, 44, of Halifax. "He received an unfair trial. He did not have the media coverage from his point of view, because the intellectual community, the black community and intellectual whites, have not stood up..."

The author of a self-published book on the problems of black women, Ms. Redding plans a March 29 wedding with Briley, one of six death row inmates who escaped last May from Virginia's maximum security prison in Mecklenburg County.

JAMES BRILEY

Briley, 28, is scheduled to be executed April 18 for the 1979 murders of a Richmond woman and her 5-year-old son, but Ms. Redding is making other plans.

"He is amazingly hopeful," Ms. Redding said. "He puts a lot of hope into my heart. I have a place here. I'm restoring an old house. I'm hoping and planning that we will have finished the house by the time he's out."

Ms. Redding, who once hosted a television program called "Together" and later was a television producer on the North Carolina Public Television Network, said her interest in Briley was initially sparked when she decided to write a book about him.

Briley and his brother, Linwood, who was electrocuted Oct. 12, were described as the masterminds of last May 31's escape of six death row prisoners, the largest such breakout in the nation. The escapees were recaptured within three weeks.

"When his brother was murdered by the state of Virginia, I wanted to be a supportive friend," Ms. Redding said. "I wanted to see if I could do some writing about their lives, what had happened to them. The fact that they escaped sort of set them apart, put a mysterious aura around them."

"In many eyes, they were heroes," she said. "Many people in the North Carolina area prepared their cars with gas, so if they came across them, they could help them get away. If they could escape a death row situation like that, maybe some of us could escape from the economic pressures, the racial pressures we suffer every day."

But when Ms. Redding tried to get into Mecklenburg prison to discuss writing the book, she said prison officials turned her away, "concerned that I might help them break out."

Ms. Redding said she received clearance to see Briley on March 2.

"He's gorgeous," she said. "He's tall and thin. He is very positive, a very sincere person with high intellect. He writes lovely letters."

Briley was transferred from his cell at Mecklenburg Tuesday to the State Penitentiary in Richmond because "there had just been too many rumors about a possible escape plan," Mecklenburg Warden Toni V. Bair said.

Ms. Redding said she didn't know how that would affect the wedding plans.

"They normally move death row prisoners 15 days prior to the execution date, so we expected him to be moved April 3," Ms. Redding said. "I think they are trying to wear him down mentally. The way he describes it to me, his cell has only a wall separating it from the execution cell. He says he hears the generator from the execution chamber go on and off all day and all night."

Briley's attorneys have appealed his death sentence to the U.S. Supreme Court twice. The attorneys have filed another appeal for a hearing, but no decision has been announced.

Briley's guest list includes his mother, father, daughter and cousin, and Ms. Redding said she wants both of her daughters to attend.

"It is a sweet, romantic ceremony," she said. "We've written vows to one another."

Duke Study Asks If Some Cancers Can Be Contagious

DURHAM (AP) — A "persistent" Charlotte woman who said four members of her family were stricken with cancer after an ill South African relative visited led Duke University Medical Center doctors to probe whether some cancers are contagious, a researcher said.

Dr. Seymour Grufferman said the woman began calling the Duke Cancer Information Service in 1983, insisting that family members had gotten the rare Burkitts lymphoma cancer after a visit in 1982 by a South African relative. The woman, who has not been identified, is a sister-in-law of one of the cancer patients.

Grufferman said like other physicians he "brushed her off," but finally made inquiries and found significant evidence to suspect a "transmittable agent."

Scientists at several institutions including Dr. Joseph Pagano, director of the University of North Carolina's Lineberger Cancer Research Center in Chapel Hill, have been investigating since.

In a scientific presentation Wednesday sponsored by the Duke Cancer Center, Grufferman said federal government scientists reviewing Duke's proposal for funding to study the cases have insisted that it be labeled "a hazardous project."

However, Grufferman said there is no cause for panic. It is estimated that 80 to 90 percent of Americans have immunity to the suspect virus. For those that don't, the agent may pose a serious hazard, said the epidemiologist and professor of pediatrics in the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center.

He said researchers involved in the study will have to be warned, tested and protected from potential infection.

The visitor, a 65-year-old South African woman, also had spent time in four households in Georgia, California and Washington. Within 11 months, one adult in each household developed some form of lymphoma cancer.

Grufferman said a fifth case outside the family may be developing, but is unconfirmed.

"Even though the numbers are small, when you think of 4 out of 11, or 5 out of 12, this is a frightening kind of thing," he said.

During her American visit, the African woman was sick, showing classic symptoms of infectious mononucleosis, Grufferman said. She returned home and recovered, but has since experienced a similar illness.

Mononucleosis and African Burkitts lymphoma cancer have been associated with the Epstein-Barr virus, but scientists do not fully understand the relationships.

Tests on the four Charlotte family members, 37 to 67 years old, revealed that only one actually had Burkitts lymphoma, which is very rare in the United States especially among adults. It is common in central Africa.

But researchers are concerned that all four developed some lymphoma cancer in such a short time after what appears to be a "common exposure," Grufferman said. He said it appears a variety of lymphomas are related to the same exposure.

He said two of the cancer victims had no immunity to EBV, a "bizzare" fact that has scientists "puzzled" because of the prevalence of the virus and mononucleosis in America. Another had "unusually high levels" of antibody to the virus, suggesting a past infection by EBV.

"Two years ago if you'd asked me can cancer be transmitted from one person to another I would have had to say no. But along came AIDS (Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome) and now this," Grufferman said. "We could be all wet. It could be chance," he said. "We keep trying to knock it down, and it keeps coming back up. Our results have been confirmed in numerous other laboratories."

One of the cancer victims has died, two appear to have been cured by chemotherapy — which is particularly effective in treating Burkitts lymphoma, and one still shows symptoms, Grufferman reported.

Neither the victims nor the cities were identified.

Tusk Poachers

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Ten people have been arrested in connection with the recovery of 924 elephant tusks taken by poachers in southeastern Kenya, The Kenya Times reported.

The newspaper, organ of Kenya's ruling party, did not identify those arrested but quoted local officials as saying they would appear in court soon.

The tusks are believed to be worth around $300,000 and represent the slaughter of some 462 elephants in areas of Kenya bordering Somalia, the paper said.

Hunting has been illegal in Kenya since 1977. But poachers, many of whom are believed to come from neighboring Somalia, take a heavy toll of the nation's wildlife.

Spy Trial

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — A retired West German navy commander has gone on trial on charges of spying for the intelligence service of Communist East Germany.

Cmdr. Wilhelm Reichenburg, 63, is accused of passing information on West German security affairs to East Germany over a 16-year period. Reichenburg was arrested last summer, six years after his retirement from active service.

Tobacco Legislation

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Nebraska congressman said he would introduce farm legislation in the House similar to a Senate bill introduced by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., but would propose slashing price supports for tobacco.

The tobacco farm program would be included in a proposed 1985 farm bill to be introduced by Rep. Harold Daub, a Republican.

Meanwhile, a proposal was introduced in the House that would double the federal excise tax on cigarettes and earmark part of it for the nation's Medicare health-care program for the elderly.

Reps. Thomas J. Tauke, R-Iowa, and Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., introduced the tax legislation, which would raise the federal excise tax on cigarettes to 32 cents from 16 cents a pack Oct. 1. The tax is scheduled to drop to 8 cents from 16 cents on that date.

MICROWAVE COOKING FOR FISH

- (1) Allow 5 minutes cooking time on high for every pound of seafood.
- (2) Check for doneness. Since seconds make a difference in microwave cooking, it is important to check cooking progress before the end of designated time.
- (3) Since seafood cooks much faster than other meats, you should prepare the seafood item last.
- (4) To test, if the fish is done, test with a fork. If it flakes off easily, then the fish is done.
- (5) In preparing seafood in dishes, cover with plastic wrap, leaving one corner turned back to allow steam to escape. Recipes requiring a bread or crumb coating should be cooked uncovered or lightly with a paper towel to prevent sogginess and spattering.
- (6) Rotate the dish during cooking process to ensure even heat distribution.
- (7) Seafood can be baked, broiled, poached or steamed in the microwave, but frying should be discouraged.

Seat Belt Debate Centers On Individual Freedoms

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Whether they saw mandatory seat belts as the first step to outlawing health hazards like smoking or as a simple way to save lives and money, speakers at a public hearing knew freedom was at stake. "I look upon this bill as an impingement of our right to make decisions that will affect us and only us," Phil Stanley of Cary said Wednesday. "Do the proposers of this bill smoke, drink, use caffeine, use table salt; any of these things that studies show cause cancer? They have a constitutional right to do that. ... They kill themselves, too."

"Seat belts could save 400 lives in North Carolina each year," countered Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, who introduced a bill to require seat belt use. "They could prevent hundreds and hundreds of severe debilitating injuries and millions and millions of dollars in health care costs (and) loss of wages. Those are costs that we're paying, not just those who don't use seat belts."

Four of 17 speakers opposed the bill, but even supporters mentioned the conflict between seat belts and freedom. "When we the people are adversely affected by Social Security benefits (paid to crash victims) ... by welfare costs, insurance costs, I say to you freedom of choice is pure folly," said Col. Edwin Guy of the Governor's Highway Safety Program.

"There's no way I can go out on the highway and kill myself unbuckled and not affect you," said B.J. Campbell of the Highway Safety Research Center in Chapel Hill, adding that seat belts could prevent two out of three traffic deaths.

However, Kim Steffan, a law student at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said there is "no legitimate public interest to be served" in requiring seat belts.

She said it would show "disrespect for individual judgment and violates an individual's right ... to be left alone."

"The least a democratic legislature can do is submit it to the people in a referendum," Ms. Steffan concluded.

"Don't take my privilege away from me to decide how I want to die," said Macon Johnson, a Camden County commissioner who said his daughter-in-law survived a crash because she did not wear a seat belt.

Ken George, who described himself as a traveling salesman, had a novel argument for seat belts.

"I've had several accidents, one with a motorcycle," he said. "If someone had been crippled or disabled, my fault or not, it would have weighed heavily on my conscience. The law ought to protect us from guilty consciences."

House Impatient Over Waste Plan

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A presentation about North Carolina's future treatment of hazardous waste drew questions from House members apparently impatient with the state's efforts.

"We were told (in 1981) that all we needed was one treatment facility located in Mecklenburg County, and that's what you're telling us now," Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, told Dr. Linda Little of the Governor's Waste Management Board on Wednesday. "All we've really done in disposing of hazardous waste is send it to South Carolina."

"We've been trying to see if the private sector would do this process," Ms. Little told the House Committee on Water and Air Resources. "We have asked them to consider North Carolina and we've told them we're interested primarily in treatment."

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said the initiative for treating hazardous waste has always rested with the Legislature.

"As late as 1983, debate was still raging in the General Assembly on what we were going to bury," he said. "As late as 1984, there was resistance in the bureaucracy to the bill we passed to require treatment of wastes."

In her presentation, Ms. Little told the panel that board-sponsored research showed North Carolina generates 97 million to 105 million pounds of hazardous wastes that must be treated off site.

She said there are three companies applying for waste-treatment facilities — incinerators in Mitchell and Caldwell counties and a Greensboro facility that wants to expand to treat contaminated water.

"It's not as though we have nothing," she said. "It's just that we don't have enough."

Ms. Little agreed that sites are often chosen to accommodate industry, not the state, but said privately owned facilities must take waste from other states.

She recommended that the state encourage modular treatment units that can be upgraded as new technology develops.

A bill that would allow Dare County to levy a 3 percent tax on real estate sales cleared a Senate committee after local government officials said the revenues are critical to handle problems of rapid growth.

If the tax is approved, the seller of a $100,000 home in the county would face a $3,000 tax bill, with the money earmarked for capital improvements like schools and water lines.

While county officials and mayors of the county's five incorporated towns backed the bill before the Senate Finance Committee, it received strong opposition from local real estate and home building interests.

Jim Andrews, who represents a group of local builders, said the tax could not be figured into appraisals of homes if sellers tried to pass the cost of the tax to buyers.

"Some people have told me we ought to let the 'rich Yankees' help pay for improvements," Andrews said. "If you try to sell one of these 'rich Yankees' something for $2,000, $3,000 or $4,000 more than it's appraised, you'll find out why they're rich."

Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, the bill's sponsor, said it would take a 254 percent increase in property taxes to generate the estimated needed because of the county's rapid growth. He said the tax, which $3 million a year that would come from the land transfer tax.

Sen. Bob Somers, R-Rowan, has filed a bill to allow drivers to renew their licenses by mail. The mail-in forms would be accompanied by a doctor's certificate that the driver suffers no mental or physical condition that keeps him from driving, plus a certificate from a physician that the driver meets vision standards set by the Department of Motor Vehicles.

The bill carries an added $2 fee to cover the costs of the renewal sticker and mailing.

The Senate voted 46-0 to pass a committee substitute for a House bill that would let Health Maintenance Organizations provide dental services as well as medical services.

BEAUFORT LEGISLATOR — Rep. Howard Chapin, a Washington Democrat, listens as the House debated his proposal this week to establish a 700 minimum score on the Scholastic Aptitude Test for new students in the University of North Carolina system. That proposal was rejected, but he won House approval of another bill to change the name of the Tar River in Beaufort County to the Pamlico River. (AP Laserphoto)

House Panel Takes Up Bill By Jones

RALEIGH (AP) — Soaring campaign costs have made politicians more prone to cross the line between an innocent request and an improper demand for support from state employees, says Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt.

"Because of the 'megabucks' that are necessary to spend in order to win a district or state election, some overzealous supporters in and out of state government have applied undue pressure on those that are not supporting certain candidates," said Jones.

The House State Personnel Committee on Wednesday began studying Jones' bill to toughen the statute against political harassment of government workers. There was no vote, and none is expected soon, said committee chairman Petty Stamey, D-Wake.

Under the bill, threatening a state employee with dismissal or other retribution for failing to support, contribute to or work for a certain candidate would be punishable by up to six months in prison and a $1,000 fine.

Currently, a violator may be disciplined on the job but not prosecuted.

"From reports that I received during the past election, the law as it is now has no impact," said Jones.

"People do not see the present law as strong enough to prevent intimidation."

Jones said he had a number of written complaints from the 1984 election but wouldn't disclose their contents, saying he didn't want to dwell on the past.

The bill drew praise from committee members and state employee representatives, but some said it wasn't clear who would be affected.

'20-20' Explores Subway Shooting

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — The Bernhard Goetz case reaches prime time tonight when ABC News' "20-20" reconstructs the subway shooting scene and a Harvard lawyer analyzes Goetz's actions step by step, then rejects his self-defense contention.

"The bottom line is that society hungered for a Bernhard Goetz. Unfortunately, they didn't get one," Gerald Rivera, a "20-20" correspondent, told The Associated Press before tonight's broadcast, which is devoted entirely to what Rivera calls the facts and myths of the Goetz case.

"If you think about it, this was a relatively minor incident," said Rivera. "No one died, yet three months after the fact, the Goetz saga has become a myth-making phenomenon."

A tape of the broadcast was not available for preview, but these are its major elements, according to Rivera and executive producer Av Westin:

—A reconstruction with actors of the scene last December when Goetz shot four youths on a subway car.

The reconstruction is based on accounts by three of the wounded youths and the two-hour video-taped confession Goetz made to law officers when he surrendered in Concord, N.H., nine days after the shootings. ABC viewed the tape but tonight will only air parts of the audio track, the first time the public will hear any segment of the confession.

By showing spatial relationships on the subway car, Westin said, the reconstruction may shed light on Goetz' feeling that his life was in danger. Westin said the actors representing the subway riders act in "neutral" ways. They all wear blue coveralls. A gun is pointed, but it is never fired in the re-enactment.

—An examination by Arthur Miller, Harvard's noted Constitutional law expert, of Goetz's movements and whether deadly force was a reasonable response every step of the way.

In the reconstruction, Miller examines whether Goetz was provoked, whether he could have retreated and whether deadly force was the only remaining recourse. Through a step-by-step, freeze-frame study of the re-enactment, Miller concludes that Goetz was probably not afraid for his life at every stage, Rivera said. Westin added that Miller "very strongly disputes the self-defense defense of Goetz."

—What Westin calls a "time-and-motion" study that charts shifting public opinion as new details were released, including what politicians have been saying. New York City Mayor Edward Koch will be interviewed on the broadcast.

—A profile of Goetz that includes new footage shot by ABC in his apartment. Goetz permitted the camera session but refused interview requests from Rivera and Barbara Walters on the advice of his counsel, said Rivera.

In addition, ABC solicited man-in-the-street reactions from Concord; Santa Cruz, Calif., what Westin calls "the last bastion of hippies"; Moscow, where people have a "definite knowledge of who Goetz is," according to Westin, and Tokyo, where subway crime is also a problem.

—Interviews with Troy Canty and James Ramseur, two of the teenagers shot by Goetz, and Shirley Cabey, the mother of Darrell Cabey, the most seriously wounded youth. ABC will also show what it calls "exclusive video" of Cabey in his hospital bed, shot by Cabey's brother. "There's a value in seeing the victim of this shooting," said Westin.

In the Canty interview, which Rivera said the youth was very reluctant to give, Canty says he asked Goetz for money, but made no demands.

"He feels very hostile to the press.

He feels unfairly portrayed as a potential killer and violent street criminal," said Rivera. "He admits he's a punk or a petty criminal, but he's certainly not a monster."

Rivera said all the youths wanted ABC to pay for their cooperation, but no money was paid to anybody.

"These people are punks ... petty thieves," said Rivera. "We know from two sources that they had screwdrivers and were on their way to get quarters from video games. But the key thing is that whatever they did, it wasn't deserving of capital punishment."

Although "20-20" has done full hours on single subjects before, such as drug running and cancer, this is the first time the broadcast has

OUSTED — Stephen Bochco, co-creator and producer of NBC's "Hill Street Blues" and the man who guided the show to an unprecedented 25 Emmy awards, said Wednesday he is leaving the show after being asked to resign by MTM Enterprises. (AP Laserphoto)

Shakespeare, Or Money-Back

CHICAGO (AP) — How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is to have an empty theater for "King Lear."

Tickets for a production of Shakespeare's 380-year-old tragedy failed to sell, and, feeling necessity's sharp pinch, producer, director and star Joseph Ehrenberg cooked up a refund offer.

"We invite you to a performance of ... 'King Lear' at the appropriate admission price," the latest advertisement by the Chicago City Theater says. "If you find it without redeeming theatrical value, we shall cheerfully refund your money."

So far, no one has asked for the $10 refund, which must be requested before intermission, Ehrenberg said Wednesday. But attendance is averaging just 30 a night since the play opened Feb. 20 in a 144-seat theater.

"King Lear" is the story of an old king who divides his realm between two of his three daughters, who then destroy themselves through their greed. The king dies of a broken heart.

Starting Over

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — "It's kind of like we're starting all over again," says Steve Lukather, guitarist with the Grammy Award-winning rock band Toto, which is embarking on its first U.S. tour in three years.

The Los Angeles-based group, which won six Grammys in 1983 for its multimillion-record-selling "Toto IV" album, opened a 50-city tour Tuesday at Arizona State University.

The group had been away from the American stage since October 1982.

Opening lead: King of ♠.

There has been considerable dispute over whether it is better to lead the ace or the king from a holding that includes both. Both sides, however, concur that, if you hold ace-king bare, you should reverse your normal order of leading. One of the most cogent arguments in favor of the king is this hand from a recent tournament in England.

West's bid of four no trump was a takeout for the minor suits — a double would have been a three-suit takeout. East bid the value of his hand and South judged well when he elected to take the save at seven hearts.

East-West conventionally were leading ace from ace-king, so when West selected the king of spades as his opening lead it could be from only one of two holdings — the ace-king alone or the bare king. And who was going to lead a bare king against a grand slam?

Declarer quickly took advantage of the situation. He ruffed the opening lead, cashed the ace of hearts to fell the king, then entered dummy with a trump to the seven. He ruffed a spade to drop the king, then crossed back to the table with the nine of trumps to take four discards on the good spades.

Had East-West been leading king from ace-king, West would have led the ace of spades. Now declarer would have been faced with a guess after getting to dummy with a trump — should he play West for the A-K alone, in which case a ruff would set up the suit, or should he play him for an unsupported ace, in which case he could take a ruffing finesse against East? Declarer didn't have the entries to try both lines.

VDT Use Discussed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education, not legislation, is the answer for workers complaining that hours of typing on video display terminals are causing eye problems and neck and back pains, a spokesman for VDT manufacturers says.

However, a union official says laws are needed to help workers "at the mercy of employers of whom the vast majority are, at best, ambivalent on VDT protective measures."

Vico Henriques, president of the Computer and Business Equipment Manufacturers Association, squared off Wednesday against David Eisen, health and safety director for The Newspaper Guild, at a VDT symposium sponsored by the American Optometric Association.

Henriques said there could be temporary ill effects from spending long VDT hours in poor lighting with an awkward machine layout and a lack of work breaks — three things the union's recommended legislation would deal with.

But those situations leading to sore muscles and tired eyes are something "the educated supervisor and the educated user can work out in a satisfactory manner" without a law intruding, he said.

Eisen replied that workers shouldn't have to count on employers to choose by themselves to emphasize health matters, especially when it might not be clear to bosses that such an emphasis would have an economic payoff.

He noted that he and spokesmen for the computer association have met frequently in the past year or so, testifying for and against VDT legislation that has been introduced in about half the states. Both sides say more than 10 million Americans use VDTs at work, with that figure expected to rise to about 40 million by 1990.

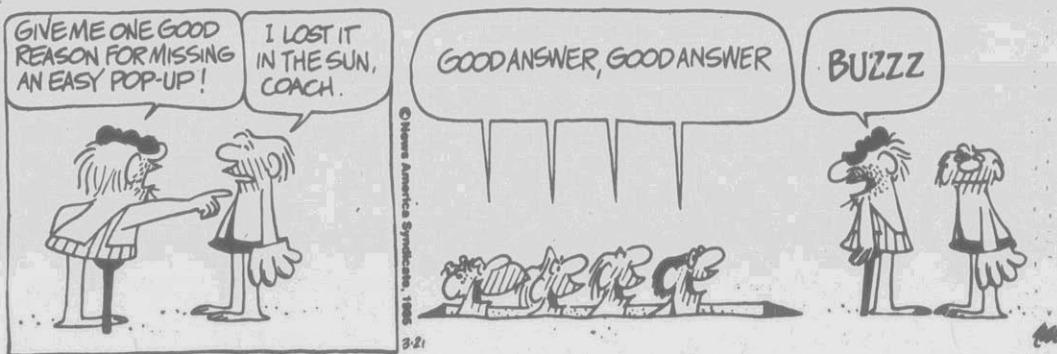

Video display terminals are electronic machines displaying on a TV-like screen the words or numbers being typed.

One optometrist speaking at the meeting, Dr. Vincent King of Ferris State University in Big Rapids, Mich., said there is no proof that new eye problems are caused by VDTs, though working with such machines can aggravate existing ones.

Acupuncture

TOKYO (AP) — A senior official in the ruling Liberal Democratic Party says he will accept an offer from China to send an acupuncture specialist to treat former Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka, who suffered a stroke on Feb. 27.

Susumu Nikaido, the party's vice president, said in a telephone interview that he would inform the Chinese of the acceptance during a visit to Peking next week.

A Chinese Embassy official earlier this month visited the hospital where Tanaka is staying and said China was ready to send a specialist. Tanaka, 66, was prime minister in 1972 when Japan normalized diplomatic relations with the Communist government in Peking.

FOCUS

A Bach Tricentennial

The great composer Johann Sebastian Bach was born on this day 300 years ago in Eisenach, Germany. About 60 to 70 members of the Bach family were known to have been musicians. J.S. Bach was a devout Lutheran. He often wrote the initials "I.N.J." on his compositions. The initials stood for the Latin words meaning "In the Name of Jesus." J.S. Bach's two marriages produced 20 children. Two of his sons, Carl Philipp Emanuel and Johann Christian, also won fame as composers.

DO YOU KNOW — In what musical style did Bach write most of his works?

Las Vegas Hotel Owners Complain That Delegates Replacing Tourists

By TIM DAHLBERG
Associated Press Writer
LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Some hotel guests are more welcome than others.

In a city with 56,000 hotel and motel rooms, some hotel owners would prefer more guests who are tourists and fewer who are convention delegates.

The reason is simple: money. The average tourist spent an average of $1,057 gambling during a Las Vegas stay compared to $645 for an average convention delegate, according to a report commissioned by one of the city's resorts.

Over the years, millions of convention delegates, drawn by the idea of mixing a little pleasure with business, have flocked to Las Vegas, pumping billions of dollars into the local economy.

Some 1.1 million delegates visited Las Vegas in 1984, about 8.5 percent of the total number of visitors. A total of 475 conventions or trade shows were held here during the year.

But the biggest of those conventions are drawing fire from some hotel owners who complain convention delegates are disproportionately displacing the tourists.

And, in a city where the money is made at the gaming tables, not the front desk, the issue is generating heated debate.

"It's absolutely dead here in the daytime during a big convention and not much better at night," said William Bennett, chairman of the Circus Circus resort. "Our rooms are full but we have such low room rates it makes little difference. We make our money in the slot machines and on the tables."

Bennett, who says he has the support of several fellow hotel owners who are reluctant to speak out publicly against the convention business, said he particularly objects to the half-dozen or so annual conventions that draw more than 50,000 delegates.

A report commissioned by Circus Circus showed convention delegates begin displacing tourists when they occupy more than 25,000 of the town's 56,000 hotel and motel rooms.

The report, compiled by Booz-Allen & Hamilton, an international management consulting firm, came up with the average amounts spent by delegates and tourists.

"They come here and spend eight to 10 hours a day at the convention hall on their feet and all they want to do is have a drink or two and get something to eat," said Bennett.

Bennett's hotel, like a number of others in Las Vegas, offers low rates for its 1,600 rooms — often renting them for less than $20 a night — and almost giveaway food prices. Circus Circus and many other resorts count on the gamblers to make up the difference.

At the Las Vegas Hilton, which adjoins the Convention Center and offers its 3,200 rooms at much higher prices than Circus Circus, the attitude is different.

The Hilton, like the MGM Grand Hotel and Caesars Palace, depends on conventions to fill the large number of rooms it has available on a daily basis. Conventions like the Consumer Electronics Show that brings nearly 100,000 people to town in the slow month of January are welcomed with open arms.

"If you can get 90,000 people in the first week of January here and you don't go on your knees and kiss them, then there's something wrong with your mental capacity," said Henry Lewin, the Hilton's executive vice president.

Lewin said conventioners may not gamble as much as other tourists, but still need a place to sleep along with food and drink.

"Convention business is a must, convention business is good and convention business is unreplaceable," said Lewin. "That does not mean everybody has to do the same thing as the Hilton because they don't have 3,200 rooms. If I had Circus Circus, I would not have conventions either."

Tom Engelman, an MGM vice president, said a 500-room, three-day convention, booked at $50 a night and averaging $25 per person for food and beverages guarantees the hotel $150,000 in revenues and attracts 1,000 people to feed the other services, including the casino.

But Engelman admitted some conventioners are more desirable than others, with "auto people, oil people and horse people" topping the spending list and doctors and educational and religious groups at the bottom.

Frank Sain, executive director of the Las Vegas Convention Authority, which operates the huge Convention Center complex as well as a smaller convention area near downtown, said the key is to try and balance conventions so they displace as few tourists as possible.

Study Links Type A And Heart Attacks

BOSTON (AP) — Maybe those aggressive, irritable type A's can now relax. New research suggests their hard-driven, impatient approach to life doesn't seem to be so bad for their hearts after all.

People with type A personalities are folks who get edgy in traffic and exasperated in lines. According to a widely held theory, they face an unusually high risk of dying from heart attacks.

But this idea, first proposed in the 1950s, has been questioned by a series of recent studies, including one published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

"We have serious reservations about its usefulness in predicting coronary disease or its complications," said Dr. Arthur J. Moss of the University of Rochester, one of the researchers.

Their study found that after a heart attack, the type As survive just as long as more easy-going people, the type Bs.

Other recent research has turned up no evidence that type As are more likely to suffer initial heart attacks, either. And doctors have been unable to find any sign that these people are more likely to have fatty deposits in their heart arteries, a major cause of heart attacks.

"If you just look at type A, the relation (with heart disease) is not a strong one," said the study's director, Dr. Robert B. Case of St. Luke's-Roosevelt Hospital Center in New York.

The researchers measured the behavior of 516 patients within two weeks of their heart attacks. About two-thirds of the victims were type As, and the rest were type Bs. One to three years later, nearly 10 percent of the patients had died, but there was no significant difference in the groups' death rates.

"We would recommend that the medical profession focus on more significant and important factors to reduce morbidity and mortality," said Moss. "We think it would be very unwise for companies to try to convert employees from type A to type B."

The researchers asked patients to fill out multiple-choice questionnaires and used their answers to classify them as type A or type B.

Dr. Meyer W. Friedman, who pioneered the study of type A behavior at Mount Zion Hospital in San Francisco, said this is the study's biggest shortcoming, because the condition cannot be diagnosed with multiple-choice questions.

A physical exam and interview are necessary to spot type A behavior, he said. Among the telltale symptoms are brown skin around the eyes, frequent clenching of the fists and facial tics.

Friedman estimates that 95 percent of all heart attack victims under age 65 are type As. He said the researchers' contention that a third of the study patients were type B was "impossible" and "a contradiction in terms."

Case and some other critics of the type A theory believe that personality may play a role in heart disease. But they suggest that the risk is high for those consumed by hostility and pent-up anger, not type As in general.

Bahais Killed

PARIS (AP) — The Bahai Information Office of France says that two Bahais were killed in Iran during February and March, bringing the number of Bahais executed over the past six months to 18.

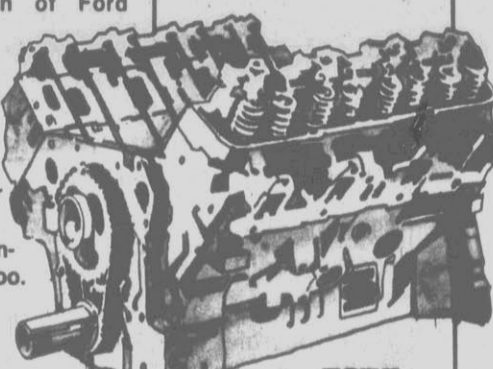

The office said in a statement that there had been a "wave of arrests" of Bahais in January and February and that a recent inquiry shows that 707 Bahais are imprisoned in Iran.
