South Africa Orders Probe Of Shooting Deaths

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Under fire at home and abroad, the white-minority government appointed a judicial commission today to urgently investigate the police killings of 18 black protesters who were marching to attend a funeral.

Opponents of the white-minority government voiced outrage over the shooting deaths. "I am deeply shocked by this tragedy. It would appear that police fired indiscriminately into an unarmed crowd," said Helen Suzman, veteran member of the white Progressive Federal Party.

But Law and Order Minister Louis le Grange said the 3,000 to 4,000 blacks in Uitenhage's Langa township knew they were marching illegally Thursday toward a white area, and had pelted police with rocks and gasoline bombs before officers opened fire.

Still, he said President P.W. Botha had approved the formation of a judicial commission to "investigate all the circumstances" of the police shootings and to report urgently to the government.

Police spokesman Lt. Henry Beck said in the capital Pretoria that one more body was discovered, raising the death toll to 18, and that 23 of 29 wounded were in hospitals. Beck said 12 of those killed were men, three women and three children.

It was the bloodiest single incident in a year of racial unrest in South Africa that has left 244 dead in protests against white-minority rule. The shootings came on the 25th anniversary of a similar police volley of gunfire in Sharpeville that left 69 protesters dead.

Police said the homes of nine black policemen in Uitenhage's townships were damaged by gasoline bombs during the night, but that no one was injured. Black police and township council members, often viewed by blacks as collaborators with the government, have been targets of increasing attacks.

The demonstrators were bound for Kwanobuhle, Uitenhage's other black township, to attend a vigil for three people killed in a clash with police 10 days ago. Le Grange said they were led by a man dressed in black carrying a brick.

"The fact that many people were armed with stones, sticks, bricks and even petrol (gasoline) bombs makes it clear that they were not a peaceful crowd of mourners on their way to a funeral," le Grange said.

Le Grange told Parliament the crowd refused a police order to turn back and then began stoning and throwing gasoline bombs at a contingent of 19 policemen. He said police were surrounded and had no choice but to open fire.

The Johannesburg Star quoted witness Melikhaya Mnyaka as saying: "The police never talked to us. They never even told us to disperse. A youth riding a bicycle was in front of the throng of people and he was the first victim. After that, the police shot at random."

Another witness, Mthembu Dano, told the Star, "I didn't see anybody carrying weapons and there was certainly no warning from the police to disperse."

The Rand Daily Mail newspaper in Johannesburg quoted eyewitnesses as saying "they did not see any provocation by the crowd prior to the police opening fire."

Uitenhage's mayor, Joseph Kitching, and business leaders in the area near the Indian Ocean city of Port Elizabeth called for urgent consultations with black leaders to defuse tensions.

The Azanian Students Organization, an anti-apartheid group, asked: "What we want to know from the Botha government is whether it has become illegal to protest peacefully against apartheid."

Rain Eases Fire Threat

By MARY SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A steady spring rain put a damper on the danger of local brush fires today and eased the minds of area forest officials who for days have worried over tinderbox conditions ideal for spawning forest fires.

Greenville Utilities reported .04 inch of rain fell in Pitt County by 7 a.m. and precipitation continued throughout the day.

The rain prompted the North Carolina Forest Service this morning to lift the burning ban which has been in effect for over a week. Local forest officials say the rain has alleviated severely dry conditions in the county which have persisted for several weeks and, along with high winds, contributed to least one major area forest fire. "The rain is going to help us out depending on the amount and duration of it," Mark Webb, Pitt County Forest ranger, said.

Earlier in March, 10 acres of woodsland north of Greenville burned when wind whipped flames from a burning field across a road, fire officials said, and into the forest.

Farm officials said today the rain would benefit small grains and recently planted corn in the county, two crops suffering from the late-winter dry spell. "In some locations, especially in sandy areas, small grains are not growing well and this rain will help," according to Pitt Extension Agent Sam Uzzell. "In addition some corn that has been planted in the county will probably begin germination now."

Uzzell said home vegetable gardens are "also due a good rain," and predicted the precipitation would help soil moisture.

The low pressure systems that brought rain to the area will be moving out of the picture, say weather forecasters, but there will be little clearing as another low pressure area pushes into the state by Sunday.

Most of the heavy rain was expected to taper off by tonight, but cool northeast winds will keep some moisture around.

The mercury dipped to a low of 38 degrees early today, according to GUC, and highs reached the upper 40s. The forecast calls for light rain and drizzle over the state tonight and into Saturday. Lows tonight will be in the upper 30s and low 40s while highs Saturday will be in the upper 40s and 50s over most of the state.

FOUND BRACELET

I was recently going through some boxes I had in storage and found a POW-MIA bracelet I used to wear. I never have known what became of the Air Force major whose name was on my bracelet. Did he return fromm Vietnam? Was he killed there? Or is he still listed as missing in action?

Is there any organization or agency that may be able to help me find out about this person and locate him if he remains alive? I'd like to send either him or his family the bracelet. J.G.

Reagan Renews Bid For Summit

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says it is "high time" for a superpower summit and he would like to meet with Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the new Soviet leader, if only to straighten out relations a little bit.

Instead of insisting at his news conference Thursday night on a summit scripted for success, Reagan said "there are a number of things" he could discuss with Gorbachev if they got together.

The recently revived arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland, evidently are one of the topics he has in mind, although Reagan offered no specifics.

Gorbachev, who took over last week, has not replied to the invitation Vice President George Bush carried to Moscow while attending the funeral of Konstantin U. Chernenko.

But Reagan decided not to consider the absence of a reply a rebuff. "The man has only been in office for a few days and I have some idea of what is confronting him now," he said with understanding.

In fact, Reagan said. "I think there is a good chance" Gorbachev will accept and come to the United States.

"It's our turn to be the host," Reagan said.

The last U.S.-Soviet summit was held in Vienna by former President Jimmy Carter and the late Leonid Brezhnev in 1979. The two before were hosted by the Soviets, in Moscow and in Vladivostok.

Reagan is the first U.S. president since Herbert Hoover not to have met with a Soviet leader. He had expressed a willingness many times to have a summit meeting, but Brezhnev, Yuri Andropov and Chernenko, his Soviet counterparts, were all in fragile health at the time.

At those times, Reagan did not accept the theory that summit meetings were helpful if only to clear the air and reduce tensions. He usually demanded that any he participated in would have to be geared to success.

But, at the news conference Thursday night, Reagan did not set any conditions. He said what he had always meant by an agenda was "mutual problems that confront us."

Prices Increase

WASHINGTON (AP) — The steepest food price rise in six months drove consumer costs up 0.3 percent last month, the government said today. Analysts blamed the devastating Florida freeze as the main culprit.

Gasoline prices fell 2.5 percent in February and were 4.7 percent below the level of a year ago. Industry watchers say, however, that the three-month trend has turned around and prices at the pump will continue rising in the coming weeks.

Coupled with the 0.2 percent overall gain in January, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index so far this year has risen a moderate 3.3 percent at an annual rate.

This compares with a 4 percent rise last year. Analysts expect inflation will run at the same pace for all of 1985, giving Americans their fourth straight year of moderate inflation.

Food costs, paced by a 2.9 percent gain in fruit and vegetable prices, rose 0.5 percent in February. The fruit and vegetable gain was more than double January's rise.

Tomato prices shot up 18.7 percent. Apple and banana prices also rose dramatically as these fruits were often substituted for citrus.

Forecast

Cloudy with 30 percent chance of light rain through Saturday. Low in upper 30s. High in upper 40s.

Looking Ahead

Chance of rain Sunday. High in 60s, low in 40s. Partly cloudy and cooler Monday. High near 60, low in 30s. Fair Tuesday. High in 60s, low near 30.

Survey Shows Divorced Men Face Problems

By DIANE M. BALK
Associated Press Writer

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Divorce may be harder on men than women, and practice doesn't make it any easier, a sociologist has concluded from a survey of Dayton area residents.

Leonard Cargan, sociology professor at Wright State University, included never married, once-divorced and twice-divorced residents in a survey he spun off a singles program. He says he's interested in the topic because "up until 1981 I was a single man."

"Back in 1973, I started a singles program in Dayton called Interaction," he said. "I've always been interestd in singles and dealing with singles."

He made an earlier study of singles and marrieds to separate myths and realities of being single.

"Out of that study came the fact that it appears that the people that have the most trouble with being single would be the divorced male," Cargan said.

That led to the second study on which he compiled data last year. That was the basis of an article by two professors from the University of Windsor, Canada, that is being edited for submission to sociological journals.

"There have been a few comparisons of singles and marrieds, but none that I know of did divorced and redivorced," Cargan said.

Out of 1,400 questionnaires sent to the Interaction mailing list, 205 were returned by females and 111 by males. Of that sample, 146 women and 58 men had been divorced once; 25 women and 20 men had been divorced more than once.

"When we think of divorce, we usually think a woman comes out the poorest," Cargan said. "If you're dealing with finances, she does. She's going to have financial problems. Maybe she didn't have the education. Going back to the job market, she's going to get perhaps a lower-paying job.

"But she's got almost everything else going for her. Usually she gets the familiar house, custody of the children. Being a woman, she has a nurturing, different kind of relationship with friends than a man does. Usually, she has the kind of relationship where she can talk to friends about things that are troubling her. Usually she gets more support from her family and other relatives.

"What does the man get? He had to leave the familiar home, neighborhood, perhaps even the friends. He doesn't have that kind of relationship with friends that a woman does, doesn't have the children, he's usually alone, and he's lost his main role, that of provider. He finds himself sitting home alone slurping his beer and watching the tube. He also finds that single life isn't as great as he thought it would be."

Lack of a satisfactory sexual relationship is among the top male gripes, Cargan said.

Redivorced men listed depression as a problem twice as often as redivorced women, but were the least likely to seek therapy.

Single males are more likely to have tried suicide than females, but for the redivorced, the woman is most likely to have tried suicide. Extreme drinking behavior is more characteristic of men.

Seventy percent of redivorced women and 72 percent of divorced women wanted the divorce, while 49 percent of the males wanted the divorce, and 22 percent of redivorced males wanted the divorce, Cargan said.

Men said the most help in adjusting to divorce came from a positive attitude, new friendships, keeping busy, social activities, dating and expressing feelings. For women, they found the feeling of independence, a positive attitude, being able to express feelings, new friendships, keeping busy, and social activities the most helpful.

For women, the No. 1 problem was money, followed by having enough time to get things done. For men, the main problem was having enough time to do things, followed by forming new relationships.

Comme Des Garcons Comes Out Of The Trash Bin

By SUZY PATTERSON
AP Fashion Writer

PARIS (AP) — Very chic and creative was a general opinion after the Comme des Garcons ready-to-wear show today, the latest in the winter collections now running in Paris with up to a dozen shows a day.

The choice is vast as buyers and press slog along muddy paths to tents in the Tuileries Gardens, but long, voluminous clothes with some narrow knit catsuits are dominating the early shows.

Rei Kawakubo at Comme des Garcons went all black and white.

This Japanese designer who shocked or pleased the fashion-watchers several years ago with her ashcan fashions full of holes and tatters has turned around to produce clothes that could be seen on the streets.

Of course, you'd still have to be young and beautiful or very daring to wear most of these outfits. But at least Kawakubo left the models' faces alone, instead of painting them up with scars and spots as in the past.

The big "idea" here is to button your jacket or coat unevenly, bunched up with an uneven hem to look as if you're slightly tipsy and raffish, or just don't care.

Pinafores and black and white jersey overall outfits — well below the knee of course — are often worn with black and white or all black suede and calf saddle shoes. The hats are usually outsized berets with a brimmed effect.

MED STUDENTS DOWN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Fewer students were admitted to the nation's medical schools in fall of 1984 than the year before, according to Ob.Gyn. News.

The medical journal reports that 16,395 students were admitted to the 127 U.S. medical schools in 1984, a 0.5 percent decline from the 1983 enrollment. The number of applicants was 25,994, a slight increase over the 1983 figure and the only annual increase in the applicant pool since 1974-1975.

According to the publication, the total number of medical students enrolled in the nation's schools decreased from 67,327 last fall to 67,016 this past fall — the first time in 37 years that total enrollment has gone down.

CELERY CHICKEN

2 large outer ribs celery (each about 2 ounces), thinly sliced (2 cups packed down)
Clear fat-free chicken broth
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
½ cup milk
¾-pound cooked chicken white meat (2 cups cut in ½-inch cubes)
¾ cup cornflake crumbs mixed with 2 tablespoons butter (melted)
Salt and pepper to taste

Steam celery until tender in a steamer with a solid-bottom insert — about 10 minutes; drain, saving liquid. To liquid add enough broth to make 1 cup. In a medium saucepan over moderate heat, melt butter; stir in flour. Off heat, gradually stir in broth mixture and milk, keeping smooth. Cook over moderately low heat, stirring constantly, until thickened and boiling. Add celery, chicken and salt and pepper and mix well. Turn into a 10 by 6 by 2-inch baking dish. Sprinkle with cornflake mixture. Bake in a preheated 400-degree oven until bubbling around sides, center is hot through and top is golden brown — 20 minutes. Makes 4 servings.

Neighbors Do Slow Burn While Firemen Won't Fight

DEAR ABBY: What a strange coincidence! On the same day you printed a letter signed "Grateful in Millsboro, Del.," praising the heroism of volunteer firemen, this Associated Press item appeared, datelined Salem, Ark.:

"Volunteer firefighters refused to fight a fire that destroyed Anthony Brazil's $150,000 house and killed the family dog because they said he had not paid $20 in annual fees.

"'They just sat there and watched it burn. We have nothing left but the clothes on our backs and our cars,' Brazil said.

"The chief of Salem's volunteer fire department, Ronnie Courtney, said, 'We've had a policy for a number of years. If you're not a member, we don't fight the fire. The fire association charges $250 to put out a fire, but the fire victim must be a member whose $20 annual dues are paid.'

"Brazil and his wife were at church when Brazil's brothers discovered the blaze Sunday morning. Courtney said flames were coming out of windows when firefighters arrived in three trucks, staying near the house to make sure the fire didn't spread.

"Neighbors offered to pay the $20 and the additional $250 if the department would fight the fire, but the firefighters refused.

"'The firefighters were just standing around. As a matter of fact, they were out hosing their new fire truck down in the street to keep it clean,' said Barney Taylor, a member of the church the Brazils attend."

PETER W. MANY JR.,
NEW ORLEANS

DEAR PETER: Thanks for sending the item. I received several from other parts of the country.

I cannot understand how any person could justify the actions of the Salem, Ark., volunteer firefighters.

If their chief, Ronnie Courtney, or any of the volunteer firefighters who stood by refusing to fight a fire that destroyed a house and killed a family dog has anything to say in their defense, please write. I will be glad to print it.

DEAR ABBY: In the hope that I may help others, I have donated my organs to the Living Bank in the event of my death, and I carry a donor card in my wallet indicating that all usable organs (eyes, kidneys, etc.) have been promised by me for that purpose to improve the quality of life for the living.

I carry my card at all times so my wishes can be carried out immediately. My doctor has this on his records.

Now for the problem: My husband says he will not carry out my wishes should I die before he does. My question: Does he have the right to stand in the way of my plans? And how can I prevent him from doing this?

LIVING IN A SMALL TOWN

DEAR LIVING: Your husband has no "right" to stand in the way of your plans—indeed he has a moral obligation to carry out your expressed wishes. How can you prevent him from doing this? You can't, if he is in charge of your remains at the time of your death. Just pray to outlive him.

DEAR ABBY: Who was the wise soul who wrote, "Any woman who will accept attention from a married man—no matter how lonely, misunderstood, henpecked, mistreated, neglected or unhappy he claims to be—is stupid, cruel, cheap, dishonest and shortsighted"?

BONNIE

DEAR BONNIE: I did.

Tass Says Soviets Ready For Return To Detente But Retains Arms Stance

MOSCOW (AP) — The official news agency Tass, in an unusually lengthy report, says the Soviet Union is ready for a return to detente, the policy of peaceful superpower coexistence that developed during the 1970s.

However, Tass did not report any change in the Kremlin's position on arms control, reiterating the Soviets' strong opposition to U.S. research into a space-based missile defense system.

The Tass report covered the first known meeting of the ruling Politburo since Mikhail S. Gorbachev became Communist Party chief. The report was transmitted Thursday in about 800 words compared with the usual 200 to 300.

"The experience of detente of the 1970s has proved that relations with capitalist countries can also develop well in the spirit of peaceful coexistence and cooperation, provided both sides are ready for it. The Soviet Union is ready to follow this line," Tass said.

Detente eroded in the late 1970s for reasons that included disagreements on arms control issues and the Soviet decision to send troops into Afghanistan in 1979.

In Washington on Thursday night, President Reagan said it was "high time" for a U.S.-Soviet summit meeting.

Vice President George Bush carried an invitation for Gorbachev to visit the United States when he attended the funeral of Konstantin U. Chernenko, the Communist Party chief and Soviet president who died last Monday at age 73. Reagan said at a news conference, "I think there is a good chance Gorbachev will accept and come to the United States."

Reagan also urged the U.S. House to follow the Senate's example and approve a $1.5 billion appropriation for 21 more MX nuclear missiles. Reagan said the House would hurt the chances of success at the Geneva talks if it fails to approve funding for the missiles.

In keeping with protocol, Gorbachev was the first official mentioned in the Tass report. Prominent attention also was given to Premier Nikolai A. Tikhonov and Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko. No mention was made of Chernenko.

The Tass dispatch indicated the Kremlin planned to continue issuing weekly reports on meetings of the Politburo, the political bureau of the Soviet Communist Party. That practice began under the late President Yuri V. Andropov and continued under Chernenko.

Tass said the Politburo "pointed out the importance" of the talks Gorbachev, Tikhonov and Gromyko held with visiting dignitaries last week. It did not say the officials were in Moscow for Chernenko's funeral.

Gorbachev's meetings with Western leaders are proof "of the policy of the consolidation of peace and the establishment of equitable relations between nations (that is) consistently pursued by the Soviet Union," Tass said.

The Politburo called for "efforts aimed at preventing the arms race in outer space and stopping it on earth, at limiting and reducing nuclear armaments, which would become a step eventually leading to the elimination of nuclar weapons completely and everywhere," Tass said.

The Soviets have bitterly opposed President Reagan's plans to develop space-based missile defenses, and have sought to place the responsibility for compromise and progress in negotiations on Washington.

Tass said the Politburo heard a report by member Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky on his U.S. visit, cut short after Chernenko died on March 10. It did not say that Shcherbitsky had met with President Reagan.

With Chernenko's death, the membership in the Politburo fell to 10, which Western diplomats say is its lowest level in 20 years.

Reagan Rules Out PLO In Mideast Negotiations

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he would favor a meeting between U.S. negotiators and a delegation of Jordanians and Palestinians to promote Middle East peace, but not if the Palestine Liberation Organization was represented.

Reagan also said he would not permit American diplomats to play a direct role in talks between Arabs and Israelis.

"They've got to understand we are not getting into the direct negotiations," the president said Thursday night during a nationally televised news conference. "That's none of our business."

By contrast, it was then-President Jimmy Carter's personal mediation of the Camp David talks between Prime Minister Menachem Begin of Israel and President Anwar Sadat of Egypt that led to the signing of the first peace treaty between an Arab state and Israel.

However, Reagan disputed suggestions that he was pursuing a policy of disengagement from Mideast diplomacy, noting that another U.S. envoy would visit the region in several weeks.

Reagan said U.S. diplomats would not deal with the PLO because "they still refuse to agree or admit that Israel has a right to exist as a nation."

"There's a large Palestinian community and I'm sure that there are people that do not consider themselves represented by the PLO," the president said.

Reagan was more upbeat about the possibility of a summit meeting with the Soviet Union's new leader, Mikhail Gorbachev, saying, "I think it's high time that we did this." He said the prospects for a summit should be good.

The president added he wasn't discouraged by the new leader's failure to accept his invitation to attend a summit in the United States.

"The man has only been in office for a few days, and I have some idea of what is confronting him now," Reagan told reporters.

The president defended South African police who shot into a crowd of demonstrators Thursday, killing 17 people, and Israeli forces that fired on and killed a Lebanese camera crew working for CBS News in Lebanon.

Reagan was asked if he was considering changing his policy of using diplomacy to oppose the white South African government's segregationist rule in the wake of the shootings.

He said to suggest that all the violence was coming from the police side was to ignore "the fact that there was rioting going on." He said some of the police involved were black and that there is "an element in South Africa that do not want a peaceful settlement of this — who wants a violent settlement, who want trouble in the streets, and that is what's going on."

There are conflicting reports from South Africa as to whether the demonstrators, who were marching to protest earlier deadly clashes with police, were carrying sticks, stones and gasoline bombs — as officials said — or whether the police attacked without provocation.

Reagan also declined to criticize Israeli troops who fired on a CBS News crew in southern Lebanon, saying, "I'm quite sure ... this was not a deliberate killing." He called the incident a tragedy but said, "These things can happen" in a war in which one side wears no military uniforms.

In a statement, CBS protested "what eyewitnesses call an unprovoked and deliberate attack by Israeli forces."

Reagan opened his third news conference of the year by warning that U.S.-Soviet arms talks could be doomed if the House fails to follow the Senate's lead in voting to release funds to produce 21 more MX missiles.

"No request by an American president for a major strategic system deemed vital to the national security has ever been denied by an American Congress," Reagan said. "And unless that tradition is maintained next week in the House, there's little prospect of success at Geneva."

On other issues, the president:

—Disavowed statements by his spokesman, Larry Speakes, and others, that he might not campaign for Republicans in 1986 if they vote against the MX.

"I've never done that ... I'm not going to hold a grudge on anyone," Reagan said.

Traveler

Memories can play us false, but the impression is strong there has seldom been a vice president who has been entrusted with so many foreign assignments as George Bush.

The man (often accompanied by his wife) has become a veteran in the art of living out of a suitcase as well as setting some sort of record in flight time from one part of the world to another.

It speaks well for his qualities of physical endurance as well as abilities and great trust in his absolute loyalty, familiarity with diverse fields, his discretion and diplomacy. In short, he can be depended upon.

Mr. Bush's travels in recent weeks have ranged from Latin America to Africa and Europe ... with occasional touch-downs at home base. It compares well with former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's travels at his best.

Vice presidents traditionally talk of taking an active part in affairs of government rather than the usual role of sitting in the wings. It never seems to work out that way. This vice president has been called on so frequently to represent U.S. interests abroad he can have no complaints on that score.

President Reagan (and the nation at large) is fortunate.

It's reasonable to think Mr. Bush is looking forward to his own "spring break." He has earned it.

Honor

We can think of no better honor for any municipality than to be cited for its proliferation of trees.

Farmville has received such an honor for the past several years. It was honored Thursday as a Tree City with the citation brought by Herman Terry of the N.C. Forestry Service.

In honor of the occasion there was an official tree planting on Arbor Day in the Walter B. Jones Town Commons. The willow oak was planted by members of the Children of the American Revolution. A groundbreaking was also held for a gazebo bandstand to be erected on the commons.

Nothing makes a community more attractive than a large number of trees. They can be in parks, along streets, or on private property. Whereever, trees make any community more livable. The greenery puts oxygen in the air and provides shade in the summer.

Obviously the people of Farmville have been careful to preserve and add to the trees in the community. Their efforts have been duly noted and they are to be commended for it.

Shultz Retains Oval Office Clout

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's quick refusal to attend Konstantin Chernenko's funeral was a highly unusual setback for Secretary of State George Shultz, chief advocate in the Reagan inner circle pushing the president to attend.

Contrary to published reports, national security adviser Robert McFarlane was not enthusiastic about a Moscow trip for Reagan. In McFarlane's view, the president would be only one among scores of heads of state paying court to new Communist Party boss Mikhail Gorbachev. Even Michael Deaver, normally the administration's most enthusiastic detentist, worried about loss of prestige for Reagan.

The president's rejection of Shultz's advice, however, does not extend to other matters. Reagan's chief diplomat continues to ride high in prestige and power inside the Oval Office.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who as a liberal Northeasterner never has shown much interest in agriculture, is about to join farm-belt Democrats in pushing for federal help to ease farmers through the current crisis — thereby increasing speculation about a try for the 1988 presidential nomination.

Rep. Dan Glickman, a moderate from Kansas, has been delegated by other farm-belt Democrats trying to enlist Kennedy's prominence to press for federal help to the farmers. The senator's aides fret that this sudden interest in an area that has never before concerned him, coming on top of his anti-South African efforts, may look like political opportunism. Nevertheless, Kennedy is likely to join the farm bloc.

An ironic note: Sen. John F. Kennedy attracted national attention in the 1950s by breaking from Democratic policy and supporting the Republican administration's low price support policy.

Donald T. Regan showed he intends to run things with a firm hand as White House chief of staff when he turned down a deal worked up by Communications Director Pat Buchanan and political director Ed Rollins to split between them supervision over the politically-sensitive public liaison office.

No soap, said Regan. He wants an organizationally clean operation with either Buchanan or Rollins in charge. The betting is that he will pick Buchanan. That's good news for the New Right, which distrusts Rollins but counts on Buchanan to keep close contact with pro-life activists and evangelicals through the public liason office.

A footnote: Rollins soon will begin beefing up his political office by naming Haley Barbour, one of the South's most respected Republican political operatives, as an aide. In 1982, Barbour was Republican nominee running against Democratic Sen. John Stennis in Mississippi.

Not only was President Hosni Mubarak's Middle East peace plan publicly rebuffed by President Reagan, but the Egyptian leader struck out when he pleaded for U.S. help in delaying a U.N. Security Council vote on Israel's "iron fist" policy in southern Lebanon while he was visiting Washington.

Mubarak was alarmed by the certainty of a U.S. veto of the Security Council resolution condemning Israel at the moment he was conferring with Reagan on a state visit. The veto, he feared, would damage him throughout the Arab world at a time when he is trying to mend fences with fellow Moslems.

But the U.S. delegation at the U.N. informed the Egyptians they could not delay the veto by departing Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick. That mirrored the president's rejection of Mubarak's request for him to get personally involved in mediation between Israel and the Arabs.

A blistering telephone call from ex-governor Reubin Askew was the key factor that changed Florida Attorney General Jim Smith's plans to switch from Democrat to Republican and become GOP candidate for governor next year.

Smith, a politically attractive 44-year-old conservative, was to be a jewel in the party realignment crown. He had paid a secret visit to the White House, and national GOP operatives were licking their chops over a ticket of Smith for governor and Mayor Bob Martinez of Tampa for lieutenant governor.

That's when the pressure was applied to Smith by Gov. Bob Graham, Sen. Lawton Chiles and Democratic State Chairman Charles Whitehead. But the call from the normally soft-spoken Askew made the difference. Now, Smith will seek another term as attorney general as a Democrat and Martinez probably will be the Republican choice for governor.

Sympathy For The Allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan apparently is more reluctant to criticize violence at the hands of South African police and Israeli troops than brutality and human rights violations by Communist governments.

At least, that was the impression during his news conference Thursday night.

Asked about the killing of 17 South African blacks by the police when they fired on an anti-apartheid demonstration, Reagan said he saw no need to put more pressure on the white government of that country to change its ways. He declined to condemn the government and instead suggested that blame partly lay with "an element in South Africa that do not want a peaceful settlement of this — who want a violent settlement."

The president was equally reluctant to place blame on Israeli troops who fired on a CBS camera crew in South Lebanon, killing two men and critically wounding a third. He said the Israelis were returning hostile fire from people in civilian garb.

Presidents tend to react more sympathetically to the actions of allies and seize upon the misdeeds of their enemies. During his campaign against Jimmy Carter in 1980, Reagan condemned the incumbent's human rights policy for singling out violations by anti-Communist countries while ignoring those of the Soviet Union and its allies.

What Reagan demonstrated in his comments Thursday night was a reluctance to condemn brutality by governments he sees as anti-Communist with the same vigor he castigates such actions by Communist governments.

Caution may have been understandable in responsing to the incident in Lebanon, which took place during combat although CBS called it "an unprovoked and deliberate attack by Israeli forces."

"I'd like to know all the details of this," Reagan said when asked about the incident in which the three men, all Lebanese, were shot.

"I'm quite sure in combat of that kind this was not a deliberate killing," he added.

The details of the incident in South Africa were clearer. About 3,000 blacks were demonstrating to mark the 25th anniversary of the Sharpeville shooting in which 69 blacks were killed. Police fired upon the marchers and 17 were killed.

South African authorities claimed the marchers were confronted by police and refused to disperse and threw rocks at the officers. Other witnesses said the shooting was unprovoked by the marchers.

The president accepted the South African government version, although earlier in the day Secretary of State George Shultz said "violence as a tactic to break demonstrations is a deplorable tactic and I am not prepared in any way to try to defend it."

Reagan said it was "significant" that "some of those enforcing the law and using the guns were also black — black policemen."

"I think to put it that way — that they were simply killed and that the violence was coming totally from the law and order side ignores the fact that there was rioting going on in behalf of others there," he responded.

When asked if the unarmed crowd posed that much of a threat, Reagan said there has been increasing violence in South Africa, which he blamed on an element opposed to a peaceful settlement and added, "I think all of us find the system there repugnant, but we're going to keep on trying to contribute to a peaceful solution if we can."

To the inevitable question about Nicaragua, the president had predictably tough language with no reference to a peaceful solution:

"The United States is trying to help people who had a communist tyranny imposed on them by force, deception and fraud and either we continue with that tradition, which has always been ours, or we give that up entirely, and I don't think we should give that up."

Secrecy For Defense

WASHINGTON — If the Pentagon has its way this year, nearly $10 billion in tax dollars could go to top-secret programs over which the public has little or no control.

That is the contention of the Washington-based Center for Defense Information in light of the private research group's analysis of Defense Department classified budget requests for 1986.

According to the center, the Pentagon's $9.8 billion proposal for secret weapons research and procurement is more than one and a half times the amount appropriated by Congress for 1985 and more than double the allocation for 1984. The center estimates that "black," or secret, program needs will total $11 billion in 1987.

Although the existence of an advanced bomber program, better known as Stealth, has been essentially acknowledged by the Defense Department, only the armed services involved know the exact nature of the secret projects for which they hve given such names as Prarie Schooner, Bernie and Constant Pieces. The center contends, however, that much of the money is intended for intelligence and communications programs as well as weapons procurement (including nuclear missiles) that has otherwise slipped from the publicly disclosed portion of the Pentagon's budget.

Gene La Rocque, the retired rear admiral who runs the center, says that the Reagan administration's shift to secret programs marks a reversal in Pentagon policy stretching over the previous 20 years.

"We used to hide a little money for the CIA, but we never dreamed of hiding big sums from the public," recalled La Roque, who was a top Navy planner during the Kennedy and Johnson administrations. He said that, in the view of former Defense Secretary Robert McNamara, full disclosure of military programs was essential to the Pentagon's overall goal: deterrence. McNamara's approach was followed by every successive defense secretary until Caspar Weinberger, La Rocque added.

To date, of course, there's been open debate as well as bidding for involvement in the research program that seem to have the Russians most upset — the Strategic Defense Initiative, better known as "Star Wars." But La Rocque says that, if preliminarily successful, SDI would probably go underground. In the meantime, he predicted, the increasingly covert portion of the defense budget could further undermine public confidence in the Pentagon and even hurt relations between the services, which always want to know what one another are doing.

The Internal Revenue Service is auditing an even smaller share of personal tax returns than in the past. Overall, the IRS audited returns at a rate of 127 per 10,000 in 1984, down from 150 per 10,000 in 1983.

Yet in 1984 the IRS audited 4 percent of those who'd earned $50,000 or more, up from 2.6 percent in 1983.

Strength For Today

Some people live too much in the present. They are contemporaneous in every attitude, lacking any sense of the higher values which give life its meaning.

There are just as many people who live too much in the future or in the past. They either waste time dreaming about future pleasures, riches or power they will never enjoy, or brood over a traumatic past they can never change.

Happy living depends in large measure on keeping an even balance between past, present, and future. A person who lives too much in any of these periods robs his life of the contributions which the other two can make to it. Accepting the past for what it should be — a learning experience, utilizing the present as opportunity at hand for rich and meaningful living, viewing the future as the area for practical, long-range planning — this is a prescription for happy living.

Redress For Past Wrongs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Laws are moral and ethical values expressed as rules with which societies try to regulate themselves. It is accepted that lawbreakers should be punished, ideally in a way that repairs the damage done to their victims.

In some cases, penalties in the form of monetary awards are used to make victims "whole." But that is not always possible. Jailing a robber who has spent the money he stole does not help the victim he left penniless. Executing a murderer does not raise his victim from the grave. In these cases, the criminal pays his penalty to society, not his victim.

The situation gets more complicated when society decides to change its rules, to outlaw behavior today that it permitted yesterday.

Twenty-one years ago, the United States made racial discrimination in the workplace illegal. The law made clear how employers had to conduct their hiring and promotion practices in the future, but it left open what, if anything, would be required to remedy what was done in the past.

In some cases, especially in government employment, the remedy proposed was "affirmative action." In plain English, that meant to give people in groups that had been discriminated against in the past special consideration for jobs now. The remedy applied almost solely to current job seekers because it was seldom possible to reach back and provide help for those who had been denied jobs or promotions based on race in the past.

The arguments over affirmative action are fairly straightforward. Supporters say without the means to catch up after centuries of discrimination, minorities would continue to suffer for many more decades. Opponents say affirmative action unjustly denies opportunity to innocent people today in an effort to redress wrongs that were committed in the past by others.

The administration's policy on affirmative action has been carried out in a number of cases by supporting individuals and groups that have challenged such plans after they have gone to court. But last week, the Justice Department took a direct initiative by filing suit itself seeking to strike down an affirmative action hiring plan for the Washington, D.C., fire department.

The courts will decide some of the issues in this dispute, but they will not put it to rest. As long as the economy provides fewer jobs than prospective workers, the argument will continue to dog the nation's conscience, another example of what Gunnar Myrdal called the American dilemma.

Robbery Arrest

Greenville police have charged Laverne Williams, 33, of Morehead City with armed robbery in connection with the March 4 robbery of Hardee's restaurant at 2907 E. Tenth St.

Sgt. D.D. Heinz said Williams was taken into custody at his Fisher Street home in Morehead City and returned to Greenville, where he is being held in the Pitt County jail under a $50,000 bond.

The arrest, Heinz said, resulted from a joint investigation involving local officers, the State Bureau of Investigation, Kinston and Morehead City police and Lenoir County sheriff's deputies.

The Hardee's robbery was reported at 2:59 a.m. Officers said two masked men, armed with pistols, entered the fast food restaurant, demanded money, then shut the employees in a walk-in freezer after taking about $535 in cash from register drawers and other locations in the store.

Heinz said that Williams is awaiting sentencing on three breaking, entering and larceny convictions in Prince George County, Virginia.

Eastern Pines was assisted by the Winterville Fire Department in fighting the blaze. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Children Escape Fire

STOKES — Fire destroyed a home near here Wednesday afternoon. Three children who reportedly were home alone at the time vacated the house and were cared for by neighbors.

Stokes Fire Chief Bruce Bland said the walls of the frame house were falling in when firemen arrived shortly after the 5:21 p.m. alarm went in. He said there was fear at first that a 2-year-old was inside the fully fire-engulfed house, but it was later determined that this child was safe in Greenville with the mother. The Staton House Fire Department assisted Stokes in extinguishing the fire.

The house, reportedly occupied by Felton and Shirley Spencer, their children, and another woman and her child, was located across State Road 1544 from Stokes Elementary School on the Lucille Warren Briley farm.

The Pitt County Department of Social Services confirmed that a protective services investigation about why the children, reported to fire officials to be 7, 8 and 9 years old, were at home alone is under way.

Study Shows 4th Graders Study 60 Percent Of Day

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average fourth grader spends only 60 percent of his class day learning science, social studies and the three R's, according to a survey of principals released today.

The Association for Supervision and Curriculum Development said its survey indicates the largest bloc of time is spent on reading and language arts: 100 minutes a day.

Math classes lasted an average of 52 minutes, social studies 34 minutes and science 28 minutes, the association said.

The report was released simultaneously at a meeting in Chicago and at the annual Education Writers Association conference in Boston.

The school day typically runs 5½ hours, 180 days a year, with 92 minutes each day consumed by recess, lunch, special programs and activities other than regular classroom instruction.

The fourth-graders also spend an average of 22 minutes a day in health classes, 15 minutes for physical education, 14 minutes for music and 13 minutes for art.

Educators have been under pressure in recent years to step up the amount of time devoted to instruction. The National Commission on Excellence in Education suggested lengthening both the school year and the school day — moves that have not been widely adopted.

An extra half-hour a day in class adds up to 16.4 extra school days over the course of a year, and 114 extra days from kindergarten through grade six, the report noted.

"The student with the longer day thus completes two-thirds of an additional year" before reaching the seventh grade, noted the report by Gordon Cawelti, the association's executive director, and Janice Adkisson, an assistant director for research and information.

The association, which has 61,000 members, surveyed a random sample of 4,000 public elementary school principals in January 1984. Some 1,522 responded to the survey.

Earl Hughes was born in Sanford, Florida and moved to North Carolina at the age of five. Earl's parents were tenant farmers and Earl was one of ten children. After graduating from high school, he went into the Army for two years after which he then graduated from Atlantic Christian College in 1956 with a degree in Business Administration. Since then, Earl has worked with several companies one of which was a garment manufacturer where he held the position of Merchandiser and was very successful, financially. However, he could never find or buy happiness. Presently, he is serving as Fraternal Coordinator with the Woodmen of the World in Eastern North Carolina.
He is married to the former Pauline Haddock of Kinston and they have three children, Brenda Turcotte, age 20; Pauline, age 15, and Brent Earl, age 10. A former pastor took Earl to his first Full Gospel Businessmen's Fellowship meeting where a new joy was revealed to Earl which drew him into the chapter where he is a member. He has served as vice-president, and is now President of the Kinston Chapter. Earl and his family attend Spillmen Memorial Baptist Church, where Earl is a Deacon. He is active in Lay Renewal of the church.
In 1973, after many years of church membership, he met Jesus "face to face" and was "born again", and filled with His Spirit. He said the journey has gotten sweeter everyday and "His Joy" is given to share. New power is breaking forth in his life now, like never before. "Praise the Lord." Earl now knows that real success can only come from Jesus. The "Joy of the Lord" is my strength.

Red Helps Get Reagan's Attention ... Sometimes

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — You don't have to wear red to get called on at President Reagan's news conference, but it helps.

The president demonstrated that Thursday night after the Wall Street Journal put him on the spot by reporting that journalists were vying for his attention by wearing first lady Nancy Reagan's favorite color.

Sure enough, at least 10 of the 18 reporters the president recognized were wearing red — four women in red dresses and six men with red neckties. At least five of the scribes wore other colors. Three men had their backs turned and a reporter trying to keep track couldn't see their ties.

Reagan called first on Helen Thomas of United Press International, saying, "I know that Nancy upstairs would die ... if I didn't call on you in that pretty red dress."

"That's why I wore it," Ms. Thomas replied.

Actually, she was a sure thing, because it was her turn under a system that gives the first question to the senior wire service reporters on an alternating basis.

Michael Putzel of The Associated Press drew the second question.

"Where's your red tie?" Reagan asked.

"Doesn't always work," quipped Putzel, who was wearing a green one.

The third question went to veteran White House reporter Jeremiah O'Leary of she Washington Times, who sported a dull-colored cravat without a trace of red.

But Reagan then called in turn on red-clad Lesley Stahl of CBS and Jane Mayer of the Wall Street Journal, whom he called the "girl in a red dress just over your shoulder, (who) started the whole thing."

Sam Donaldson of ABC and Chris Wallace of NBC, both wearing red ties, were next. Donaldson insisted he always wears a red tie.

Patricia Wilson of Reuters, in beige, was next. "I don't have anything red," she said.

Reagan is known to preview the crowd on a television monitor before the news conference, giving him a chance to pick out in advance whom he will call on, but he apparently makes up his mind on the spot in some cases.

Altogether a reporter counted nine women in red dresses. The red ties were harder to spot, but there were five in the front row alone. The White House East Room, where the press conference was held, seats more than 100 persons.

Wearing red wasn't any guarantee, however, as Connie Lawn, a free-lance radio journalist, found out.

"This is old and out of style, but it's the only red dress I have," she said as she entered the room. "I wore green the last three times, and it didn't work."

Ms. Lawn didn't get called on Thursday night, either.

Incidentally, Reagan was wearing a maroon tie with grey stripes.

Scientist Reports Quasars

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A University of Pittsburgh physics professor has reported finding the most distant object yet discovered with an optical telescope, two quasars he says are more than 10 billion years old.

The discovery of the quasars, also called quasi-steller objects, was reported Thursday in the British journal "Nature," in an article by Dr. Cyril Hazard of the University of Pittsburgh and Richard McMahon, a post-graduate astronomy student at Cambridge University, England.

Hazard, 56, helped discover quasars in 1963 and said the recent find can aid scientists studying the beginning of the universe. His calculations show that light was emitted from the quasars more than 10 billion years ago.

"We're looking back ... three-fourths of the way back to the origin of the universe itself," he said.

The quasars emit such brilliant light they are visible at great distances, as far as 10 million light years away, Hazard said. "You can see right out to the very distant parts of the universe."

The distant objects can help scientists who want to find out how the universe is shaped and more about the formation of galaxies like our Milky Way.

Using a telescope in Australia, Hazard located the two quasars by a distinctive "red shift" in the light they emit, caused by the tremendous velocity of their movement away from Earth.

"The red shift in a certain sense is a measure of how distant they are, which is a measure of how long the light has taken to get to us," he said.

His calculations show the largest of the quasars is moving at 90 percent of the speed of light, which is 186,000 miles per second.

Hazard said a quasar is about the size of a solar system, but is immensely more powerful than stars like the sun.

"It's pouring out a vast amount of energy, so much energy that the light from it completely swamps the light from 100 billion ordinary stars in the galaxy," he said.Because of that, it is visible at great distances.

Hazard said his most recent discovery came last fall when he was searching a part of the sky about 12 times the size of the full moon, or 36 square degrees in a sky totalling about about 40,000 square degrees.

Parents Influence Teens' Behavior

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Teen-agers living with one parent or stepparents show much higher rates of "deviant behavior" than those living with both parents, regardless of income or ethnic background, according to a new study.

Stanford University Professor Sanford Dornbusch, a sociologist and the main researcher of the study, said Thursday it was based on a nationwide sample of 12,000 youths age 12 to 17.

Deviant behavior, as defined in the study, included arrests, truancy, running away and smoking at an early age.

In families with both parents, the study showed no difference in social behavior when one or both parents worked, Dornbusch said.

But the higher rates of deviancy in teen-agers with stepparents was "especially surprising," he said. "When controlled for income, it still stands up. It's more surprising because stepparents don't usually have the same economic problems as single-parent families."

The study, developed out of a 1970 National Health Examination Survey funded by the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, will be published this spring in the University of Chicago's "Child Development" magazine.

"The data had never been looked at in this way to see how deviant behavior related to the single-parent and stepparent experience," said Dornbusch, former president of the American Sociological Association's social psychology and education groups.

"We're really very puzzled," Dornbusch said. "Behavior was very similar between the single-parent and stepparent kids."

Families with stepparents were mostly the result of a divorce rather than the death of a parent, Dornbusch said.

Researchers from Stanford's Center for the Study of Youth Development interviewed a sampling of the youths and parents and collected school records.

"We found single parents gave their kids greater autonomy earlier in deciding how late to stay out, how they spent money, and so forth," he said.

"When young people make those decisions all by themselves at too early an age, it's much more likely to produce deviance" even when the parent's education or income is taken into account.

Census Bureau statistics show that half of all American youths will find themsleves in a single-parent household before they reach 18, he said, and single-parent families account for 21 percent of U.S. households.

"Additional adults living in the households with single parents helped in reducing deviant behavior," Dornbusch said. "We couldn't tell from our data whether the additional adults were grandparents, lovers, friends, aunts or uncles."

The study has important implications for policy-makers, he said.

"The government penalizes parents in programs like Aid To Families with Dependent Children if they have other adults living with them," he said. "We feel that having adults moving in should be encouraged rather than discouraged."

He said the government policy "tends to treat single-parent families as aberrations, but they are such a high proportion of the population that we can't ignore them."

Roman Catholics Reporting Ferment Over Women's Role

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

In more ways that one, the Roman Catholic Church is having woman trouble.

A growing number of Catholic women "feel they're being stepped on" by the church, says Catholic Scripture scholar Pheme Perkins of Jesuit-run Boston College.

Strains over women threaded a current Vatican-ordered investigation of U.S. religious communities, an attempt by U.S. bishops to draft a document on women, special pressures on some nuns and driving out of two for holding public office.

"Ominous signs are in the air," writes Sister Ann Patrick Ware. In a new book on updated styles of American nuns, "Midwives of the Future," she says indicated papal moves could "undo the work of renewal" by women's orders.

So sharply have church tensions built up about women that several of their leaders are objecting to the propriety of a planned pastoral letter about them by the church's all-male U.S. hierarchy.

Mathematician Mary Leach, a panelist at a recent Washington, D.C., hearing, said that women under the discriminatory, patriarchal church structure "are like Lazarus beneath the table with morsels being flung" down at them.

The Leadership Conference of Women Religious, representing superiors of most of the nation's 120,000 nuns, called for an indefinite postponement of such a letter, saying the church lacks sufficient theologial understanding for the effort.

Sister Marjorie Tuite of the National Assembly of Women Religious, said any pastoral letter should be "on sexism, not on women. You don't write pastorals on victims, you write them on issues."

Several other women's group voiced a similar view, and also said admission of women to the priesthood is fundamental to any real moves toward justice to women. However, the pope has ruled out women's ordination.

The women's issue also has loomed in other ways, including the Vatican ultimatum to 24 American nuns to retract publicly their statement about abortion, or be expelled — a case simmering for months.

The nuns had been among 97 signers of a statement that blanket condemnation of abortion in all instances was not the only "legitimate Catholic position," and urging discussion of the matter.

One of the signers, Sister Judith Vaughan, already has felt reprisal.

She runs a shelter, the House of Ruth, for homeless, pregnant women and their children in Los Angeles, and the archdiocesan social services director has ordered no more clients referred to the shelter.

She said the archdiocese, which previously provided a small part of the shelter's budget, "is punishing the very women the pro-life people say they are for and are trying to help."

After the ultimatum to the nuns, an organization, Catholics for a Free Choice, reports that a survey of 2,000 Catholic theologians and scholars, in which 498 responded, 49 percent said "abortion can sometime be a moral choice."

Meanwhile, a Vatican-initiated investigation of religious orders, including nuns, is going on. Among other things, the pope says the nuns should return to identifiable habits — a medieval mode of dress most American nuns have abandoned.

The inquiry also was looking at the new constitutions of the orders, developed in the wake of the reforming Second Vatican Council, allowing greater freedom and diversity of service and participatory governance.

In the past, authoritarian rule of women's communities by superiors "encouraged adult women to be thorough, hardworking 'children' who could not be trusted ... to assume personal and group responsibilites," writes Sister Frances B. Rothluebber of Milwaukee.

A former president of the Leadership Conference of Women Religious, she writes in the National Catholic Reporter that "the mother-daughter obedience pattern encouraged conformity, manipulation and victim-like self-surrender.

"It kept women unhealthily dependent."

However, only this month, a Vatican office stirred another furor, saying that at the pope's direction, it would rewrite the constitution of the worldwide Discalced Carmelites to put them back under their original 16th century regulations.

The order includes more than 1,000 sisters in 65 contemplative monasteries in this country. The Vatican action apparently meant scrapping some of the post-Vatican II reforms under which the sisters have lived in recent years.

Israeli Troops Hit Another Village

By JUAN-CARLOS GUMUCIO
Associated Press Writer

Israeli soldiers raided another Shiite Moslem village today, shooting and killing one man and detaining 300, a U.N. spokesman said. The raid came a day after police said Israeli troops killed 30 people, including two members of a CBS News camera crew, in a similar operation.

Police said 68 people were wounded in Thursday's action against suspected guerrillas.

Meanwhile, Israeli newspapers reported today that Israel would complete its pullout of southern Lebanon in May, four months ahead of the original schedule. Today's raid was staged in Qlaile, a village of 5,000 about 25 miles southwest of the scene of Thursday's raids, in an area patroled by U.N. peacekeeping soldiers.

U.N. spokesman Timur Goksel said one man was killed and another wounded in Qlaile. He said the circumstances of the shootings were not known.

Military sources in Tel Aviv, who spoke on condition they not be identified, confirmed that an operation was under way in Qlaile, but said they had no details.

Goksel said a platoon of 20 Fijian soldiers from the U.N. contingent were in the village watching the Israeli operation. About 300 men were taken into a school for questioning, he said.

During the raids on Thursday, terrified village residents fled into the mountains to avoid the Israelis. Police said their station in the southern port of Sidon compiled casualty figures from hospitals and villagers.

Lebanon's newspapers called the raids a "massacre" and described the Israeli raiders as "barbarians." The state radio called it "a cold-blooded atrocity."

In a letter to Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, CBS protested "what eyewitnesses call an unprovoked and deliberate attack by Israeli forces." The network said a third CBS employee, a driver, was critically injured.

The Israeli military command said a tank in the village of Kfar Melki opened fire on "armed men who had taken firing positions" and added: "It appears that the CBS crewmen were among the armed men in the village."

In New York, CBS identified the two as cameraman Tafik Ghazawi, 47, and soundman Bahije Metni, 37. Both were Lebanese. CBS said they were killed by Israeli fire.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said 21 guerrillas were killed and large quantities of arms, including mortars, rocket-propelled grenades and explosives were seized in raids on the villages of Houmine al-Tahta, Srifa and Jbaa.

The sweep was the latest in a month-old Israeli crackdown on Shiite towns and villages in an attempt to halt guerrilla attacks on Israeli forces. Israel invaded Lebanon in June 1982.

It was Israeli army's second major operation beyond its front line since Feb. 16, when it pulled out of Sidon in the first phase of a three-stage withdrawal from Lebanon.

One Lebanese military source said about 60 Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers moved through the town of Arab Salim at dawn and branched out to raid the villages of Houmine al-Tahta and Jbaa as well as Sarba, Jal el-Arab, Roukine, Roumine, Ankoun, Kfar Fila and Kfar Melki.

Reporters at the scene were told the Israelis did not enter Ankoun and Kfar Melki. However, both villages were hit by Israeli tank fire.

From Ankoun, one Israeli tank and one armored personnel carrier as well as several army trucks could be seen in Houmine al-Tahta, 1½ miles to the south.

Several explosions were heard, and a brown cloud of dust rose over the village. Reporters who entered the village after the Israelis left said more than a dozen houses were dynamited.

Reporters said ambulances began reaching Houmine al-Tahta after the Israelis left. They saw about 20 burned out cars apparently hit by Israeli shells and were told by villagers that 75 men had been taken away.

One reporter said he counted 13 bodies lying in the streets.

The Lebanese Foreign Ministry in Beirut called in the diplomatic representatives of the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain, France and China to protest the Israeli raid. The five nations hold permanent seats on the U.N. Security Council.

Ex-Nazi Officer Freed By Dutch

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Former Nazi SS officer Pieter Menten, who served six years in prison for complicity in the murders of dozens of Jews in Nazi-occupied Poland, was freed early today for good behavior.

Shortly after midnight, Menten, 85, was whisked from the Scheveningen prison in his lawyer's car and brought to the central Dutch village of Blaricum, where he lived until his arrest in 1976.

Dutch Justice Ministry spokeswoman Toos Faber said Menten was released before daybreak to avoid a large number of journalists at the prison gates.

On Thursday, the Irish government banned him from entering Ireland, where he owns a 22-room mansion near Leamybrien in the county of Waterford. His wife Meta lives there and had increased security at the house as Menten's release date drew closer.

Although the couple divorced after his arrest, they have stayed in close contact, Menten's lawyer said.

The Dutch-born Menten was sentenced to 10 years in prison in 1980 in connection with the 1941 slayings. But he was released for good behavior after serving two-thirds of his sentence, including pre-trial confinement, according to the Dutch Justice Ministry.

French Vice Consul Kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Three men armed with pistols kidnapped France's vice consul this morning as he walked to work in west Beirut, and two other French embassy employees failed to report to work, the embassy and witnesses said.

Embassy spokesman Marcel L'Augel said the vice consul, Marcel Fontaine, was abducted. It was the fourth kidnapping of a Westerner in mostly Moslem west Beirut in the past eight days. Terry A. Anderson, the chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was seized last Saturday.

L'Augel identified the two absent employees as Marcel Carton, 62, protocol officer, and his daughter, Mrs. Danielle Perez, 34, who worked as the secretary for the cultural section.

He said that the father and daughter had left their mid-city home together at 8:30 a.m. and that there was no news of their whereabouts six hours later.

Another French Embassy official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said: "People are panicky and because they did not show up, which is not their habit, the alarms have been sounded."

He said there was no evidence they had been kidnapped but that an investigation was under way.

A senior embassy official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said Fontaine had worked at offices in both east and west Beirut since late 1982.

The Christian radio station Voice of Lebanon said Fontaine was on his way to the French Embassy when he was abducted.

Witnesses, who spoke on condition they not be identified for security reasons, said Fontaine left his high-rise apartment building shortly after 8 a.m. and walked to a nearby newsstand.

The witnesses said three gunmen got out of a BMW car and entered the newsstand. One of the men put a pistol to the back of the shop owner and ordered him not to move, and another put a pistol to Fontaine's head, pulled him out of the shop and into the car, they said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the kidnapping.

"We have no information whatsoever about Mr. Fontaine," said the French Embassy official. "We are making contacts for information on him." He made an appeal to the kidnappers to release the diplomat.

In Paris, the French government condemned the kidnapping as "an act of terrorism," and called on Lebanese authorities "to take all possible action" to obtain his release.

Revenue Sharing Cuts Hit Oregon, Wyoming Hardest

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Oregon and Wyoming would suffer the largest percentage loss of federal aid going to the states under President Reagan's proposed fiscal 1986 budget, an organization of state governments estimates.

Cuts in federal forest and mineral resource programs proposed in the Reagan budget would hit those states hard, according to the analysis by the Federal Funds Information for States, a joint service of the National Governors Association and the National Conference of State Legislatures.

Oregon would lose $259 million, or 17.9 percent, the study said. Victor J. Miller, director of the organization, said the state's loss was proportionately large because of the money it receives from federal forest service programs to harvest trees on federal lands.

"The Reagan administration proposes to reduce the level of reimbursement to counties substantially," he said. "They're heavily affected by this proposal."

Similarly, he said, Wyoming would lose to cuts in revenue shared with states for federal mineral leasing. Wyoming's loss would be $54 million, or 10.3 percent, the study said.

Those losses would be small, however, compared to the dollars lost by New York and California. The study said Reagan's budget proposal would reduce federal outlays to New York by nearly $1.25 billion and to California by $736 million.

They would be followed by Ohio, $534 million; Michigan, $468 million; Texas, $444 million; Florida, $380 million; Illinois, $374 million; Pennsylvania, $362 million; Oregon, $259 million; and Georgia, $242 million.

The Reagan proposals for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 were compared with the amount the states would require to continue providing current services. The total money lost to the states in the first year would be $9.2 billion, the study said.

"States can deal with cuts of this magnitude in three ways," said Raymond C. Scheppach, executive director of the governors association. "They can eliminate federal programs. They can eliminate state programs to replace lost dollars in federal programs, or they can raise taxes."

By percentage of loss, California wouldn't be among the 10 biggest losers, and New York would be only the eighth biggest loser, according to the analysis.

Other big losers by percentage would be Florida and Ohio, 9.8 percent each; New Mexico, 9.6 percent; Maryland, 9.4 percent; North Carolina, 9.3 percent; New York, 9.2 percent; Michigan, 9.1 percent; and Iowa, 9.1 percent.

Miller said Florida's loss appeared large because it was expanding Medicaid coverage, while the budget proposal would freeze Medicaid grants at 1985 levels.

Larry Dzieza, author of the analysis, said the group calculated money going to state and local goverments from more than 200 programs, from big ones such as general revenue sharing and Medicaid to less sweeping ones such as child health, water treatment and forest programs.

The study also gave figures for losses in federal budget authority, which includes money that would be authorized in 1986 but not spent until future years. That loss would total $22.5 billion, it said.

Ohio Cracks Down On Unauthorized Openings By State-Chartered Thrifts

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Only one of the state-chartered savings and loans closed by the governor had permission to open today after officials ordered institutions that had reopened without authorization to shut down.

State Commerce Department Director Kenneth Cox declined Thursday to identify the thrifts he ordered to close, but said that regulations are not yet in place to allow the institions to reopen for limited business. The regulations were authorized by emergency legislation Wednesday, and officials were still working Thursday to put the finishing touches on them.

Meanwhile, state Attorney General Anthony Celebrezze Jr. appointed Cincinnati lawyer Lawrence A. Kane, 55, as special prosecutor to investigate the collapse of Home State Savings Bank.

Kane, a former county prosecutor who has taught criminal law, will seek indictments if necessary and look for any violations of regulations involved in the collapse of Home State, Celebrezze said.

The Cincinnati-based S&L closed March 8 amid disclosures it could lose millions it had invested in ESM Government Securities Inc., a Fort Lauderdale, Fla., firm that collapsed. The closing sparked a run on Ohio's thrifts that prompted Gov. Richard Celeste to order a total of 70, including Home State, closed last Friday. One thrift reopened Monday.

The state Legislature on Wednesday passed emergency regulations allowing the state-chartered thrifts covered by private insurance to open on a limited basis to give 500,000 depositors access to $750 a month of their money. It also set up procedures for the S&Ls to obtain federal or equivalent private deposit insurance.

Celeste aide Brian Usher said "a handful" are close to approval for full service, and that the approval could come today or Monday.

Cox said Thursday that only Century Savings — with offices in Newark, Columbus, Cincinnati and Toledo — had state authorization to reopen for full service.

In the Columbus suburb of Upper Arlington, Clay Brown, 18, was one of about a dozen depositors lined up outside the Century Savings branch.

"It's nice to be able to get money when I need it — or today, I just deposited money," said Brown. "The only problem was not knowing when I'd be able to get the money because I'm going on a trip Saturday."

Wash 'N' Wear Bandit Sought

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Police can't seem to corner the "Wash 'n' Wear Bandit," who has broken into at least four houses only to leave after taking a shower and picking up a fresh change of clothes.

They say they can't figure him out either.

The quick-change artist hasn't stolen anything except one change of clothes at each house he's hit. And when he dons the new duds, he leaves the dirty ones behind.

"People must think I'm a little wacky," said Fort Lauderdale police officer Ronald Centamore. "The day after this guy breaks into their house, I'll show up with some clothes, and I'll ask them: 'Are these your clothes?' "

The daring burglar always works in broad daylight, and he usually lingers around the house, Centamore said.

"He'll come in, use the shower, borrow your deodorant, maybe get a shave, and then go," he said.

THE TRAVELER, OR STRANGER IN THEIR MIDST!

AMONG THE ISRAELITES, HOSPITALITY TO STRANGERS WAS NOT ONLY A TRADITIONAL ETIQUETTE BUT IT WAS WRITTEN INTO MOSAIC LAW (EX.22:21 23:9) (DEUT. 10:19). NO DEVOUT PERSON WOULD DELIBERATELY AVOID THE CHANCE TO HELP A STRANGER. IN A LAND THAT WAS EXTREMELY HOT AND WATER SCARCE, JUST A COOLING DRINK WAS VERY IMPORTANT TO "THE STRANGER PASSING THROUGH"! IT WAS ALSO THE ETIQUETTE OF THOSE TIMES FOR NO MAN TO DRINK FROM A WELL THAT WASN'T HIS--UNTIL HE WAS ASKED, OR OFFERED THE WATER, BY THE WELL'S OWNER. DRAWING WATER FROM THE WELL OF A TOWN WAS THE DUTY OF THE YOUNG MAIDS AND SO IT FELL TO THEM, QUITE OFTEN, TO COME TO THE AID OF A THIRSTY STRANGER. THIS LITTLE ACT OF "COMFORT TO THE TRAVELER" WAS SO INGRAINED IN THE PEOPLE, THAT WHEN JESUS CHARGED HIS DISCIPLES TO PREACH, AND TO HEAL, AND TO DO GOOD TO THE MULTITUDES, HE REFERRED TO IT AS GIVING "A CUP OF WATER IN MY NAME!" (MARK 9:41)

Howell.

"Nothing has been more gratifying to me during my years at ECU than the implementation of the University Scholars awards program,," said Dr. Howell. "I regard this program as a milestone in the advancement of this institution and the most significant action taken during my chancellorship."

Howell said he has never been involved with a university project that has created greater position enthusiasm for the enhancement of the academic program and its image of excellence than the university awards project.

"The scholarships came about from interested people who wanted to contribute to the university specifically for young people who had a considerable amount of talent," said Dr. Charles Seeley, director of admissions. "The intent of the scholarship was to develop a program to honor outstanding students, both academically and in every other respect, like leadership and participation in school and community affairs."

James L. Lanier, vice chancellor for instututional advancement, said the scholarships will be "a major prestige award that will allow us (the university) to compete head-to-head for the brightest young leaders in North Carolina and throughout the country."

One hundred and eighty high school students were nominated by principals for the awards this year, and those applicants were cut to 60 by the admissions office. Those semifinalists were screened by four regional committees.

Ten finalists were then invited to the Greenville campus for the final selection process, including interviews with a committee made up of members of the university community including students, alumni and faculty.

A minimum of seven new awards will be presented each year, Lanier said.

"The fund-raising has gone well," he said. "Each award is backed by an endowment of $40,000 ... No corporate money is involved. We invest the money and use the interest to fund the scholarships."

Lanier said the funds for 15 University Scholars awards have already been committed by donars. Six of the endowments have been provided by the families of members of ECU's Board of Trustees.

"Most of the scholarship recipients will have the opportunity for a semester or summer of foreign study provided through the Thomas Rivers Foreign Exchange Program," Lanier added.

Johnson Paces Heels By ECU

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

As has happened so many times before at Harrington Field, a man named Johnson was the hero of the game — but this time, unfortunatly for East Carolina, it was not Winfred Johnson.

Instead, it was North Carolina's Scott Johnson, who went five for five, including three home runs, a double and a single, driving in five runs as the Tar Heels ripped ECU, 19-5.

The Tar Heels caught the Pirates at the bottom of their pitching order between two conference doubleheaders. And while the Heels were also low in their order between games, the quality of their depth told. (North Carolina carries a full load of scholarships in its program; ECU has less than half as many.)

While Johnson was pounding homers, his teammates chipped in two. Walt Weiss hit a two-run shot in the first to put the Heels ahead for good, while Devy Bell added a two-run roundtripper in the second. Olympian B.J. Surhoff added a solo shot in the ninth, and had a total of four hits on the day.

Overall, the Tar Heels banged out 20 hits against three Pirate pitchers.

Pirate coach Gary Overton gave Danny Culpepper his first collegiate start against the Heels, and they chased him in the second inning after scoring nine runs. Chubby Butler followed, pitching well until the eighth, when he was finally chased after allowing seven runs. Tom Webb allowed the final three, two of them on homers.

"They swung the bats very well, very well," Overton said in understatement. "We got caught with our top four (pitchers) having gone in the last four days. I thought Danny threw well against (N.C.) State, and we hoped that he could do the job today. Chubby threw well, too, until the eighth."

The Pirates, meanwhile, got only three hits, one of them a two-run homer by their Johnson — Winfred. It was Johnson's 11th of the season and 40th career slammer.

East Carolina ran starter Blaine Deabenderfer in the second, but reliever Doug Torborg, the son of former major league manager Jeff Torborg, shut them down. Over the final seven and a third innings, he gave up only one hit. He walked three and fanned four.

The Tar Heels also played excellent defense, pulling off three double plays and several times came up with fine moves to rob Pirates of hits.

East Carolina, meanwhile, committed four errors, turning in five unearned runs. But they too, had a few good defensive plays. Catcher Jim Riley picked off Matt Peluso off second in the second inning. Shortstop Greg Hardison made a diving stop of a drive off the bat of Alvin Taylor in the third and threw out Peluso at second lying on his stomach in the infield.

North Carolina put the game away in the first inning, scoring four times. Jim Stone singled and Weiss homJed to left. Then, with one out, Bell reached on an error, with Johnson cracking a two-run homer to right.

The Pirates rallied for two in their half of the frame. With two away, Chris Bradberry singled and Johnson homered to straight-away center, cutting the lead to 4-2.

But in the second, the Tar Heels added five more, chasing Culpepper. Taylor walked and moved up on an out. Weiss walked and both runners scored on a double by Surhoff. Bell followed with a two-run homer and Johnson backed that up with his second straight round-tripper, upping the lead to 9-2.

The Pirates came back with three in the bottom of the inning without benefit of a hit. Riley, Robert Langston and Mark Shank all walked. A wild pitch scored the first run and Hardison hit a sacrifice fly to bring in Langston. Another wild pitch let Shank score.

But — for East Carolina — it was the last gasp.

North Carolina added two in the fourth. Surhoff singled as did Bell, reaching on a pop-up that fell between converging fielders. Johnson singled in Surhoff and Matt Merullo's sacrifice fly scored Bell.

Another run crossed in the fifth on a freak play, making it 12-5. Taylor walked and Stone struck out. The final strike was a wild pitch, however, and when it bounced away, Stone took off for first. Forgetting Stone had no right to the base since it was occupied, Riley scooped up the ball and fired to first, overthrowing the base. Taylor, who had moved up on the wild pitch, came the rest of the way on the overthrow.

Four singles, a walk,a sacrifice fly and an error let five more score in the eighth and homers by Surhoff and Johnson accounted for the final two runs in the ninth.

The Tar Heels improve their record to 14-10 with the win, while the Pirates slip to 13-5.

East Carolina is to play host to Framingham State today at 3 p.m. and the Pirates travel to Richmond for an ECAC-South doubleheader on Sunday. They are back in Wednesday for a doubleheader against Ohio University.

Old Dominion Women Oust Lady Wolfpack

By The Associated Press

The Long Beach State women's basketball team was nearly perfect, and it had to be to beat Southern Cal.

"We were really ready tonight," said Long Beach Coach John Bonvicini after Thursday night's 75-72 victory over the defending national champions in the NCAA women's tournament. "We started off the game very strong and had good transition play."

The victory keyed regional play Thursday night that saw Georgia swamp UCLA 78-42 in the other West Regional game, and Ohio State defeat Penn State 81-78 and Old Dominion trim North Carolina State 77-57 in the East.

Regional play continues tonight as Tennessee plays Mississippi and Texas faces Western Kentucky in the Mideast Regionals at Bowling Green, Ky., and Auburn takes on Northeast Louisiana and Louisiana Tech plays San Diego State in the Midwest at Monroe, La.

Kirsten Cummings scored 20 points to lead Long Beach State over Southern California. Long Beach State outscored the defending champions 25-2 during an 11-minute span in the first half and then held off Southern Cal's furious rally in the final minutes.

"In the first 20 minutes we couldn't do anything right and Long Beach could do nothing wrong," said Southern Cal Coach Linda Sharp, whose team had won the NCAA title the last two years.

"In the second half, we were much better and played an aggressive style defense. In the first half, we were way off in our execution and rebounding. We only shot 28 percent in the first half compared to 67 percent for Long Beach. That's why we were so far behind.

"I'm really proud how we got back in the game. It showed a lot of character and pride."

In the other West Regional semifinal game at Los Angeles, Teresa Edwards scored a game-high 21 points to pace the eighth-ranked Georgia Lady Bulldogs to an easy win over the Bruins. Janet Harris contributed 17 points for Georgia, which improved its record to 27-4.

"The big difference tonight was confidence," said Georgia Coach Andy Landers. "We had it and UCLA didn't.

Landers said his team's defense made the difference in the game.

"We won it on the defensive end and dictated the tempo of the game," he said. "Our players played as hard and determined as they could and were under control."

Ohio State beat Penn State in the East Regionals at Norfolk, Va., behind a 31-point performance by Francine Lewis.

Kahadeejah Herbert led the Nittany Lions with 18 points. She put Penn State ahead for the last time with 1:56 remaining with a 21-foot jumper to make it 76-75.But Lewis and Jodi Roth, who had 16 points for the Buckeyes, scored consecutive baskets to give the Buckeyes the lead for the remainder of the game.

Donna Harrington's 14-foot jumper with 2:01 left gave Old Dominion the lead for good as the Lady Monarchs defeated North Carolina State. The Wolfpack failed to score in the final 3:23.

"I thought there was a noticeable difference at halftime in the three areas we needed to have: turnovers, free throws and rebounds," said Old Dominion Coach Marianne Stanley.

Hazzard Wants Second Chance In The Big Apple

By The Associated Press

In his last visit to New York earlier this season, his UCLA Bruins were embarrassed by the St. John's basketball team. Walt Hazzard wants a second chance in the Big Apple.

"If we can get back to New York, it will make our year," the UCLA coach said as he prepared his team for Saturday night's National Invitation Tournament quarterfinal game with Fresno State.

A victory would send the Bruins into the NIT semifinals next Wednesday night at Madison Square Garden. It was at the Garden that they suffered a humiliating 88-69 loss to St. John's last Dec. 22.

"Trying to win a championship is always difficult," Hazzard said. "You have moments when you're tested, when you can go one way or another. I hope those moments are behind us ... but we'd better be tough."

In another quarterfinal game Saturday night, Virginia plays at Tennessee. On Sunday night, it's Marquette at Indiana and Tennessee-Chattanooga at Louisville.

With the reputation that Fresno State fans have for supporting their team on the road, Hazzard is hoping that more UCLA has more support at Pauley Pavilion than the visitors.

"I want to see more (UCLA) blue in the stands than (Fresno) red," Hazzard said. "Tell the (USC) Trojan fans to put some blue on and show up. Anybody who's wearing red should have to wear a trenchcoat."

Fresno's "Red Wave" is notorious for showing up, home or away, in large numbers and a lot of red clothing. About 5,000 Fresno fans turned out for the Pacific Coast Athletic Association tournament in Los Angeles two weeks ago.

Fresno coach Boyd Grant said he had "no idea" how many Bulldog supporters might make the return trip to Los Angeles.

"It depends," he said. "We'll have to wait and see how many tickets they send up here and how fast they go. If they go quickly, maybe our people will buy up some of the ones they don't use. I'd like to have five or six thousand down there, and we're capable of that. I just don't know what the fever is."

UCLA drew crowds of 4,280 and 7,228 to its first two NIT games, both in Pauley Pavilion. Fresno's first- and second-round games, both at home, were sellouts in 10,132-seat Selland Arena.

The Bruins moved into the quarterfinal round with a 78-47 victory over Montana and an 82-63 decision over Nebraska. Fresno State defeated Santa Clara 79-76 in three overtimes and New Mexico 66-55.

Virginia was a 56-55 victor over West Virginia and also defeated St. Joseph's (Pa.) 68-61, while Tennessee defeated Tennessee Tech 65-62 and Southwestern Louisiana 73-72.

Marquette beat Bradley 77-64 in the first round, then took a 56-54 win over Cincinnati in the second. Indiana's first two victories were a 79-57 beating of Butler and a 75-53 triumph over Richmond.

Tennessee-Chattanooga edged Clemson 67-65 and then beat Lamar 85-84 in overtime, while Louisville tripped Alcorn State 77-75 and then South Florida 68-61.

Georgia Tech Tops Illinois, 61-53

By The Associated Press

The final play was set up for Michael Adams, who already had one buzzer-beater for Boston College in the NCAA Tournament.

But it was Andre Turner who made the game-winning, 17-foot jumper for Memphis State — again.

"I'm never happy to have to take that last shot," Turner said Thursday night after his basket with one second remaining lifted No. 5 Memphis State over Boston College 59-57 in a Midwest Regional semifinal game. "I'd rather be up by 12 points."

The victory in Dallas put Memphis State into Saturday's Midwest final against No. 4 Oklahoma, which downed No. 8 Louisiana Tech 86-84 in overtime when All-American Wayman Tisdale's short jump shot bounced on the rim five times before falling through the basket with two seconds left.

Also on Thursday night, top-ranked Georgetown continued its drive toward a second straight NCAA championship by beating No. 14 Loyola of Chicago 65-53 in an East semifinal in Providence, R.I. The Hoyas, who got a strong second half from All-American Patrick Ewing, on Saturday will face No. 6 Georgia Tech, which used a second-half burst to defeat No. 12 Illinois 61-53 in the other East semifinal.

Tonight, Maryland faces Villanova and No. 7 North Carolina takes on Auburn in the Southeast semifinals in Birmingham, Ala., while No. 16 North Carolina State plays Alabama and No. 3 St. John's meets Kentucky in the West semifinals in Denver.

Turner, who hit a 17-footer with five seconds left in overtime Sunday to give the Tigers a 67-66 victory over Alabama-Birmingham in a second-round game, got his chance after Boston College squandered its final opportunity.

When Memphis State's William Bedford missed the front end of a one-and-one, the Eagles held the ball for two minutes before calling two timeouts with 14 seconds remaining to design the final play.

"We wanted to get the ball to Michael to take the last shot, like he did against Texas Tech," Boston College Coach Gary Williams said. In that first-round game against Texas Tech, Adams sank a 25-foot shot with five seconds left to win it.

But Boston College's play this time went askew when Roger McCready took a pass and dribbled the ball off his leg. The loose ball was recovered by Memphis State's Vincent Askew, who fed Turner.

"There wasn't a lot of pressure, though," Turner said. "I knew we would win or go into overtime."

Turner, who scored with 12 points, again filled the void left by Memphis State All-American Keith Lee, who has struggled with foul trouble so far in the tournament. Lee, who has been averaging 20 points per game, was called for three fouls in the first 5:14 of the game and wound up with just eight points.

In that game against Alabama-Birmingham, Lee scored 28 points but fouled out one minute into the overtime. At that point, Turner told his teammates that he wanted the ball and wanted to be the one to win the game.

It has been such clutch play throughout his three years at Memphis State that has led Coach Dana Kirk to call Turner "The Little General."

"I'm going to put a sixth star on his five-star general status," Kirk said.

Turner's heroics helped blunt a furious rally by Boston College, which trailed by 12 points midway through the second half. Two foul shots by McCready enabled the Eagles to pull even at 55-55 with 4:31 left.

Bedford finished with 23 points for Memphis State, 30-3, the champions of the Metro Conference. Stu Primus had 14 for Boston College, 20-11, of the Big East.

Next in line for Memphis State will be Oklahoma and Tisdale, a three-time All-American.

Tisdale scored 23 points, eight of them in overtime, and hit the game-winning shot from just outside the lane.

"It seemed like it took forever to go in," said Tisdale. "I had two men on me and tried to shoot it soft so I would get the bounce. I did, a bunch of them."

Said Coach Billy Tubbs: "We designed that last play. How many times did the ball bounce?"

Louisiana Tech called a timeout after Tisdale's shot, then threw a long inbounds pass into the frontcourt and called another timeout with one second left.

But an attempted inbounds lob to Karl Malone hit the rim and bounced away as time ran out. Malone, the Bulldogs' top player, scored 20 points and had 16 rebounds as Louisiana Tech, the Southland Conference champion, finished 29-3.

Oklahoma, the Big Eight Confence winner, is 31-5.

Georgetown won with the weapons it has used all season — Ewing, the three-time All-American center, and a relentless defense.

Ewing, who limped off the court with 1:25 left in the first half with an ankle injury, scored 14 of his 23 points against Loyola in the second half and was his usual dominating self, winding up with 14 rebounds and five blocked shots.

Loyola entered the game with a 19-game winning streak, the longest in the nation, and had been counting on Alfredrick Hughes, a 6-foot-5 senior swingman who was second in the nation in scoring with nearly 27 points per game.

But the Hoyas held Hughes, who had scored in double figures in 94 straight games, to just eight points — partly because he missed the final 10 minutes of the first half after picking up his third foul.

Loyola, 27-6, the Midwestern Cities champion, led 28-26 at halftime and was still ahead 38-36 early in the second half after two long shots by Hughes.

But then Ewing and his teammates went to work, scoring eight straight points to take control.

"They do their thing and I work myself in when my time comes," Ewing said.

Georgetown, of the Big East, improved to 33-2 with its 15th straight victory and will now meet Georgia Tech, which got good outside shooting from Mark Price and good inside play from 6-11 Yvon Joseph and 7-foot John Salley in tripping Illinois.

With Georgia Tech holding a 39-35 lead, the Yellow Jackets went on a 13-2 tear to take a 15-point lead with about seven minutes left.

Doug Altenberger single-handedly tried to rally the Illini with outside shooting, scoring his team's next 14 points as Illinois closed to 55-51 with 1:34 remaining.

But Illinois was forced to foul, and Altenberger fouled out a few seconds later.

Price led the Atlantic Coast Conference champions, 27-7, with 20 points and Joseph and Salley had 14 apiece. Altenberger scored 24 for Illinois, 26-9, of the Big Ten.

Glasson Holds To Vegas Lead

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Billy Glasson has a set routine after finishing a round of golf on the PGA Tour.

"I go back to the hotel and ice down my knees for about a half hour. Then, if I can walk, I go down for dinner. If I can't walk, I order room service," Glasson said.

Those oft-injured knees, four times the objects of surgery, could be a major factor in the closing rounds of the five-day, 90-hole Panasonic Las Vegas Invitational golf tournament.

"I handle four rounds pretty well," the 24-year-old longshot said after a 68 had enabled him to retain the lead Thursday in the second round of this event that offers a total of $1,042,000 in prize money.

"But five rounds is going to be a pretty good haul for me. I'm still rehabilitating from the last surgery" Dec. 24, he said.

Glasson, who twice lost his Tour playing rights due to lack of performance, said he injured his knees in schoolboy athletics — "football, baseball, basketball. I'm paying the price for having fun when I was younger."

He wears braces on both knees, moves slowly and with obvious discomfort from what he said was an "arthritic condition mixed in with other goodies."

Despite his problems, Glasson, a career-struggler now in his third season on the Tour, completed two rounds in 130 and, held a one-shot lead over the formidable figure of Tom Watson, a six-time Player of the Year and five-time British Open champion.

Watson had a 65, 5-under-par, at the Tropicana Country Club, the shortest and easiest of the three desert courses used for this event. Glasson and Watson, who have played different courses, each is 11 under par.

Glasson, who dropped a long-distance putt, 40-50 feet, for birdie on his last hole at the par 71 Las Vegas Country Club, also had an opening 62 at Tropicana. He now goes to the par 72 Desert Inn for his third round. Watson has played Desert Inn and Tropicana and will play his next three rounds at Las Vegas.

Frank Conner, with a late 68 at Desert Inn, was third alone at 134, nine under par. He now goes to Tropicana under the format that requires the pros to play one round on each of the three courses, each day with a 4-man amateur team, before the field is cut for the final two rounds at the Las Vegas Country Club.

Tied for fourth at 136 were Tom Kite, Tim Simpson, Mike Smith and Fred Couples. Kite and Simpson each shot 69 at Las Vegas and were 5-under-par. Couples and Smith had 69s at Desert Inn and were 7 under.

Defending champion Denis Watson of South Africa shot a 72 at Tropicana and was 2-over-par at 144. U.S. Open champion Fuzzy Zoeller had a 69 at Tropicana and was even par at 142. Mark O'Meara, who can acquire a $250,000 bonus is he's able to couple a victory here with the title he won in the Bing Crosby, shot 70 at Las Vegas and was 2-over-par at 143.

Eagles Netters Win Over Rose

Jaguars Hold Off Rams For 6-3 Win

SNOW HILL — Farmville Central twice fought off Greene Central to score a 6-3 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball victory over the Rams Thursday.

It was the opening league game of the season for both teams, and for the Jaguars, their first win in six outings.

Farmville struck first, getting a run in the fourth. Randy Daniels walked and Billy Godley reached on an error, moving Daniels to third. He scored from there on Brian Windham's sacrifice fly.

But the Rams struck back to tie it in the bottom of the fourth. Kevin Wade singled and with two away, came around to score when Jerome Flowers reached on an error.

Both teams scored twice in the fifth inning, making it 3-3.

Then, in the sixth, Farmville got what proved to be the winning run. Brian Huber reached on a three-base error, scoring on a double by Mark Wooten.

The Jaguars picked up two more in the seventh to wrap up the scoring.

Hensley On Pole

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Jimmy Hensley isn't quite satisfied with having grabbed the pole position for the Late Model Sportsman portion of Sunday's Miller 500 NASCAR race.

"Our fastest lap all day was the one that got the pole," Hensley said Thursday after recording a lap of 92.04 mph. "It feels real good right now, but Sunday will be a different story. What really counts is coming out a winner on Sunday."

Keeping Up With "The Times"

British readers recently celebrated the 200th birthday of the London "Times." Abraham Lincoln once compared the persuasive power of the "Times" to the power of the surging Mississippi River. Jane Austen refused to miss reading even one issue and ironed it out if it arrived damp. The poet Coleridge was turned down when he applied for a writing job at the "Times." Sir Edmund Hillary had a copy of the "Times" with him when he scaled Mount Everest in 1953.

DO YOU KNOW — Which Australian tycoon owns both the London "Times" and the New York "Post"?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Bach wrote most of his works in the baroque style of music.

Beverly Sills Will Host PBS Fund-Raising Gala

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Beverly Sills remembers sitting in the balcony of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, stifling even in winter, eating corned beef sandwiches and sipping iced tea.

"I knew someday I would sing down there, on that stage," Miss Sills says in her introduction to "Gala of Stars 1985," which will be broadcast on public television Sunday night. "And I did, just once, a performance of 'Fledermaus.'"

Miss Sills, the retired New York City Opera soprano who is now general director of the company, is back as hostess of "Gala," the biggest single production in the annual spring drive to raise money for Public Broadcasting Service stations.

The two-week Festival '85, which ends with the "Gala of Stars" broadcast, had raised $11 million in viewer subscriptions through the first five days of the campaign, an increase of nearly 30 percent over the same period a year ago.

Festival '84 encouraged $30.6 million in subscriptions.

Though the format for the "Gala of Stars" has remained much the same over the years, the talent — with the exception of Miss Sills and James Levine, conductor of the Metropolitan Opera orchestra — has changed with each program, though some performers have appeared more than once.

This year's three-hour show in Brooklyn includes selections from the Met's new production of George Gershwin's "Porgy and Bess" and two movements from Andrew Lloyd Webber's "Requiem."

The lineup of performers includes opera singers Grace Bumbry, Placido Domingo, Kiri Te Kanawa and Robert Merrill, dancers Merrill Ashley and Sean Lavery from the New York City Ballet, pianists Lukas Foss and Leonard Pennario, and jazz vocalist Cleo Laine and her husband, composer-performer John Dankworth.

Introduced in 1980 as the cornerstone program in public TV's spring fund-raising effort, "Gala of Stars" has generated more than $9 million in audience subscriptions in five years, or nearly five times the amount spent to produce the show.

Last year's "Gala" was the most successful yet in that respect. The program's $400,000 pricetag was offset by $2.16 million in viewer pledges.

Public TV stations normally call on celebrities and other widely recognized personalities to implore the audience to contribute, and, in a sense, "Gala of Stars" is an exaggerated exercise of that tactic.

For the current drive, Britain's Granada TV dispatched stars of the enormously popular "Masterpiece Theatre" presentation, "The Jewel in the Crown," to Boston, New York and Washington.

In Washington, with two cast members urging the audience on, WETA had raised nearly $60,000 by the end of the final episode last Sunday night.

This year's "Gala" was the first staged outside Manhattan. In the past, the program's producers considered making it a truly national show.

"At one time, we had hoped to have a two-coast program, with entries from both New York and Los Angeles," said Hudson G. Stoddard, vice president for development at WNET in New York, the PBS station that introduced "Gala of Stars" in 1980 and continues to produce the extravaganza for the system.

"We could never obtain the resources to do the show that way, though we still talk about that kind of effort," Stoddard said. "I think it would be of great advantage to everyone."

Despite inflation, WNET has managed to keep the cost of the "Gala" at around $400,000, and for the middle four programs, producers were able to enlist national underwriters to cover at least part of the expense. This year, Abraham & Straus, the Brooklyn-based department store, provided more than $20,000 to help pay for the local presentation.

Student On Tour

Millard Andre Bell of Greenville, percussionist and a student in the North Carolina Central University Department of Dramatic Arts, Durham, is one of the musicians on tour with the production of "Bubbling Brown Sugar," a musical.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Millard F. Bell.

The tour opened March 16 in Wilmington and will be presented in Ahoskie on Friday, in Henderson on March 23 and in Charlotte on March 30. The production will also be presented during May and June at The Governor's Inn between Raleigh and Durham, with plans for a showing later at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, D.C.

Treatment

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Guitarist Jerry Garcia of the acid rock group Grateful Dead has agreed to go through a drug treatment program in return for dismissal of drug possession charges against him, a prosecutor said.

Garcia, 42, was arrested in January while driving in a park and charged with heroin and cocaine possession, Assistant District Attorney Al Giannini said.

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MARCH 23, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is certainly a day for you to get into whatever Saturday pursuits face you that require a considerable amount of running about or that are of a manual nature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A myriad of personal matters requires your attention so get at them early. Steer clear of a tricky individual.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put aside other matters and clear up all those personal affairs that need your attention. Help one who is disabled.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Good day to visit good friends and be happy with them, but be sure to take care of that obligation in the evening.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You can handle outside affairs very well during the day, but steer clear of an irate associate in the evening.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) The day is fine for making new contacts and friends, but the evening is best spent at home. Take necessary health treatments.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Fine day for making collections and paying bills that are pressing. Try to please the one you love without spending too much money.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Talks in the outside world can produce fine results today, even if others seem impatient. Follow their advice.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Ideal day to consider those tasks that you have neglected to do and to get at them enthusiastically.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be off to amusements you like early so that you get relief from tensions. Later, handle regular chores.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Ideal day to handle family affairs and have everything working efficiently at your abode. Later, invite guests in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You have many errands and calls to make, so get an early start on them, since you have little time during work days.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan just how you can have a greater abundance in the future by using more modern methods. Consult a financial expert.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be very alert to whatever is happening, so be sure to give as fine an education as possible since your progeny can accomplish a great deal in life. This child will have an unusual kind of life and is able to surmount anything.

Americans' Health Charts Improve

WASHINGTON (AP) — The health of Americans continues to improve by almost every measuring stick, the government reported today, but a few disquieting exceptions prompt health professionals to say there still is work to be done.

The Department of Health and Human Services, in its annual report to the nation on the health of its people, said today that Americans, both men and women, are living longer, healthier lives.

Infant mortality continues to decline, though at a slowing pace that worries some. Life expectancy is up. Deaths from heart attack and strokes are down. And people are changing their living habits in ways that portend more improvement and still longer lives in the future.

"Progress is the word that best defines and describes the health status of the American people," said HHS Secretary Margaret M. Heckler in her introduction to the report. "There are, of course, lags and aberrations. We certainly cannot rest on our laurels."

But, she added, "It is clear from the basic health yardsticks that the United States is moving in the right direction."

The 188-page report, titled "Health, United States, 1984," notes in its statistical review:

— A child born today can expect to live 74.7 years, based on the 1983 data analyzed, more than a third longer than the 47.3 years of a person born at the turn of the century and a full year's increase since 1980. For newborn girls, life expectancy is 78.3 years; for boys, 71.0 years.

— While whites still can expect to live longer than blacks, the racial gap is narrowing because blacks are catching up. The racial difference dropped from 8.4 years in 1950 to 5.6 years in 1983.

— Americans who reached their 65th birthday in 1983 could expect to live another 16.8 years. In 1970, that figure was 15.2 years.

— Infant mortality dropped to 10.9 deaths per 1,000 live births, a decline from 11.2 in 1982 and from 16.1 in 1975.

— Deaths from heart disease declined by 26 percent between 1970 and 1983, when statistics are adjusted for age, and stroke deaths dropped by 48 percent during the same period.

— People see their doctor more often — 74.5 percent within the last year, compared with 66 percent in 1964 — and the increase is coming primarily among the lower income groups.

Despite the heartening news, however, the report also contained some disquieting statistics.

While cigarette smoking has declined dramatically among American men — to the point that the number of ex-smokers is beginning to rival the number of current smokers — the same is not true for women.

Opening lead: Four of ♠.

The poet muses about the way of a man with a maid. Bridge players are more interested in the struggle between declarer and the defenders.

North's raise to two no trump was overly aggressive, despite his five-card suit. To have any chance for game, South would have to have both a maximum no trump with a good club fit. Indeed, South held just that, but even so he had to resort to guile in an attempt to make nine tricks.

West got his side off to the best lead of a spade. Since declarer needed the ace of spades in dummy as an entry, he won in hand and paused to take stock. Even with four club tricks, he could count only eight tricks. If he knocked out the ace of clubs, the defenders would force out the ace of spades. Then, when declarer tried to set up a ninth trick, they would be able to cash enough tricks to defeat the contract.

Therefore, declarer elected to try to sneak his ninth trick immediately. At trick two, he led a low heart.

West was about to play low reflexly, when he stopped to mull over the matter. Why was declarer leading a heart instead of going after the clubs? Could it be that he wanted to steal a trick early?

After careful thought, West decided that declarer was unlikely to come to nine tricks without any tricks in clubs. So he hopped up with the ace of hearts and reverted to spades. That left declarer without resource — he was forced to bow the knee.

Winners

NEW YORK (AP) — It may not be the Academy Awards, but Eddie Murphy and Sally Field were voted best actor and actress by 5,000 students, ages 11 to 14, across the country in a contest sponsored by Junior Scholastic magazine.

Murphy, 23, won a Son of Oscar award for his performance in "Beverly Hills Cop," which came in second to best picture, "The Karate Kid." Miss Field, 38, was chosen for her performance in "Places in the Heart" — for which she is also an Oscar contender.

Eviction

BATH, England (AP) — Actress Jane Seymour has won an eviction order against a gardener who was living in her $600,000 Tudor mansion.

A court in this western England city ordered Miss Seymour's gardener, Danny Batey, and his girlfriend to leave an apartment in the mansion within 21 days.

Batey, who was fired last month, told the court Thursday that he had nowhere else to live. Films featuring Miss Seymour, 34, include "Live and Let Die" and "Battlestar Galactica."

Actress To Challenge Ruling

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Vanessa Redgrave says she will fight a judge's ruling that the Boston Symphony Orchestra had a right to cancel her scheduled appearance following complaints about her political activities.

The Academy Award nominee for best actress for her role in "The Bostonians" said Thursday that the ruling "has put every civil right in danger."

Miss Redgrave sued the orchestra for $5 million after it canceled six 1982 performances of Stravinsky's "Oedipus Rex," which she was to narrate.

She contended that she was blacklisted for political reasons — including her support of the Palestinian Liberation Organization — and that she could not get work for 14 months after the cancellation.

Monkeys Offer Basis For Tests Of AIDS Vaccine

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Scientists are using monkeys in preliminary testing of a limited vaccine for Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, which has been blamed for nearly 40 deaths in North Carolina.

"We're immunizing primates" with a sample vaccine, said Dr. Dani Bolognesi, deputy director of the Duke Comprehensive Cancer Center in Durham. Researchers will determine if the monkeys get AIDS.

While other experts have predicted the vaccine would be available within five years, Dr. Robert Gallo, who is credited with isolating the virus that brings on AIDS, declined to predict a timetable.

"We've surprised people before. The pace of science is a lot faster than it was a few years ago," said Gallo, chief of the National Institutes of Health Tumor Cell Biology Laboratory.

Gallo made his remarks in an interview Thursday following a speech to some 400 fellow cancer and molecular cell researchers at the University of North Carolina's 9th annual symposium, "Springboards for the Future."

Gallo's discovery of the HTLV-III virus about 2½ years ago, midway into the AIDS epidemic, astonished the medical community. Gallo is at the center of a team, including Bolognesi, that is trying to develop an AIDS vaccine.

Bolognesi shares Gallo's optimism about a vaccine.

"This is not 1907. This is 1985 and we can do amazing things with molecular techniques," Bolognesi said. "Nobody knows what the time frame will be."

AIDS has struck nearly 9,000 Americans killing more than 4,000. It has claimed the lives of nearly 30 of 52 victims in North Carolina. The disease disables the immune system making victims suseepitble to a host of infections.

Gallo said he and other researchers suspected a gene labeled LOR in the HTLV-III virus genetic code somehow damages the human immune system's T-4 cell.

But he said certain populations in Africa, the suspected source of the virus, apparently have developed immunities to the virus. Recent testing in children 5 to 7 years old in Uganda found that 65 percent were infected, but these children did not appear to have AIDS.

AIDS is becoming a worldwide epidemic, he said.

"Once it came to America, it fanned out; it went to the rest of the world."

He reiterated federal statements that the virus is not transmitted casually, through household contacts or in restaurants.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: KEEN MANAGER OF VERY INSOLVENT HOCKEY TEAM IS FLYING "COACH."
Today's Cryptoquip clue: J equals T

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Liquor ID Cards Proposed

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — Wayne County ABC officials say they'll seek legislation to require anyone who buys liquor to have an identification card.

In a meeting Wednesday, ABC manager Carroll Steele said a liquor control card would provide better control over the sale of alcoholic beverages to minors.

"Now we have to rely on the (ABC store) clerks' abilities to tell ages," Steele said.

Steele suggested the identification cards could be made at the state's Division of Motor Vehicles at a cost of $4 each. He said the county would receive part of the revenue from the cards.

ABC officials said they would discuss the issue with state Sen. Henson Barnes of Goldsboro. ABC board member Max Futrelle said the card could be taken away from people who are convicted of alcohol-related offenses.

In other action, the board reduced from 23 cents to 20.5 cents per mile the amount of money paid to ABC employees who drive their personal cars for business.

The action would allow officials to avoid additional paperwork required by the Internal Revenue Service. Wayne County Commissioners took the same action earlier this month.

Legislator Questions Need Of State Study Of Jobs' Comparable Worth

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A $650,000 study of comparable worth in state jobs could be dangerous to the state and has never been fully debated in the Legislature, a House committee was told.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, told the House Judiciary II Committee on Thursday that a similar study in Washington found the state should spend $800 million to $1 billion in salary increases. The state ignored the study, which was later used as evidence in a discrimination lawsuit the state lost.

He said the authorization for the study was quietly slipped through the Legislature last year as part of an appropriations bill and not debated. The language in that bill, he said, did not make it clear what would be studied.

"So many people have told me they favor this study because someone doing the same job as someone else deserves the same pay," said Wright, who has introduced a bill to end the study by a private consultant. "That has been the law of the land for 20 years and is not what this study is about."

He told the committee documents relating to the study use the terms "pay equity" and "comparable worth" interchangeably, but the two are not the same.

He said pay equity relates to comparing state government pay to the same jobs in private industry, while comparable worth compares different jobs.

Wright, who is co-chairman of a legislative committee set up to receive study reports, said work plans for the study appeared to ignore a mandate that supply and demand be taken into account when deciding which jobs are worth more than others.

The work plan says that supply and demand "may be included" as factors in weighing jobs where they are considered "fair and equitable," Wright said.

"The market takes care of (paying what a job is worth) better than a study commission,," Wright said.

"It would appear that child care workers should be paid more than zookeepers because they take care of children, rather than wild animals," Wright said. "But there are a lot of people who know how to take care of children, while the ability to take care of wild animals is a rare skill and involves more danger."

"I am a firm believer in the free enterprise system that has brought us where we are over 200 years," said Rep, Charles Woodard, D-Wayne, who moved the bill be given a favorable report.

But Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, retorted, "The last time the marketplace took care of anything that I know about was 150 years ago — and they called it slavery."

Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake, requested a public hearing and blocked committee action on Woodard's motion.

Wright, the committee's chairman, set the hearing for Wednesday at 3 p.m. in the legislative auditorium.

House Approves Bill Giving Right To Sell Beer And Wine To Stores

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Stores that could sell both beer and wine before 1981 would be able to do so again under a bill approved 64-46 by the House over conservatives' fears it would increase alcohol abuse by the young.

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, said the bill would allow off-premises wine sales by "service stations, barber shops, shoeshine stands, porno stores and X-rated theaters."

"We're talking about a product that consists of up to 17 percent alcohol," he said. "That's potent stuff."

Privette said the bill would add to the "needless slaughter of so many of our young people" in highway accidents.

Rep. Brad Ligon, R-Rowan, agreed that the bill would make alcohol more easily available to fourth-, fifth- and sixth-graders.

But Rep. Billy Clark, D-Cumberland, who saw the bill win tentative approval Wednesday by a scant 53-52 margin, repeated that the bill simply corrects an oversight made in rewriting alcohol control laws in 1981. He said before 1981 convenience stores and gas stations could get permits for both beer and wine. After the rewrite, they could get only beer permits.

Clark said it is unfair that a store opening after 1981 could not sell wine while an identical store operating before the mix-up could sell both wine and beer.

"What we are doing is a proper thing," added Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, who changed his vote on the bill. "We're talking also about the way a consumer chooses a product that is already endorsed by the state in its sale."

"This is very carefully surveyed by the ABC Commission in granting these licenses for off-premises sales," said Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance.

"For the life of me I can't see anything wrong with this bill," said Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange. "There may be, in fact, a constitutional problem with the current law."

In other legislative action:

The House voted 107-3 to tentatively approve a bill to keep laws governing stopped school buses in effect.

The bill met resistance because of an experimental provision enacted in 1983 to let motorists pass stopped buses on five-lane highways that have a middle turning lane.

"This is the year of the child and I think this is an anti-child bill and we ought to kill it," said Rep. Tim McDowell, D-Alamance.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, the bill's sponsor, explained that the law stipulates that in such circumstances it is illegal for school buses to let children off on the wrong side of the highway or to pick them up if they cross the road. And he said if his bill is not enacted, all laws governing stopped school buses would be repealed.

Final House approval was expected later today.

Rep. Luther Jeralds, D-Cumberland, filed a resolution authorizing the Legislative Research Commission to study the teaching of adolescent sexuality in public schools, although he acknowledged it might be controversial.

"We have a growing problem with teen-age pregnancy and most of them are in schools," he said. "I think it's necessary from an educational, moral and economic standpoint."

Jeralds said moves to cut state funding for abortions sparked the resolution along with concerns about high infant mortality.

"Even with the abortion funds in place, the number of them that are getting pregnant and carrying them to term is still astounding," Jeralds said. "Ignorance has a lot to do with it. And if it doesn't help reduce the pregnancies, it would help reduce some of the infant mortality."
