Medical District Entering Boom Period

(Editor's Note: This is the last of three articles on development of medical complexes in North Carolina.)

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

By all accounts, Greenville's medical district could be considered a boomtown, though not in the traditional sense of the word. The need for health care, unlike a vein of gold, is rarely exhausted.

Little more than a field prior to development of Pitt County Memorial Hospital in 1973, the hub of the 1,790-acre medical district today is the site of a 560-bed regional medical center that serves residents of 29 eastern counties — a center where growth has been so rapid it has outstripped two of three master plans over a nine-year period ... a center where the teaching facility (the East Carolina University School of Medicine) is "ahead in terms of development of all the schools in the country that developed when it did," according to University of North Carolina School of Medicine Dean Stuart Bondurant.

Along with growth of the hospital/medical school complex came escalating land values, "significant" heightening of commercial concern and an increase in traffic volume — matters that prompted the Greenville City Council in December to create a medical district study committee, a nine-member task force directed to review patterns and problems in the district and make recommendations on future development within a four- to six-month period.

Now in its second month of study, the committee hopes to make its recommendation to the council within the set time frame, according to Chairman Dick Flye. Flye, area manager of Carolina Telephone and Telegraph, chairs the committee. Other members of the at-large study group include Wayne Adams, E.F. Hutton representative and former land surveyor; Tom Baines, copy editor and former city reporter for The Daily Reflector; Charlie Berkey of Procter and Gamble; Janice Faulkner, executive director of the ECU Regional Development Center; Phil Dixon, local attorney; Wes Hankins, acting chair of geography and planning at ECU and former chairman of the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission; Dick McKee of Procter and Gamble and chairman of Evergreen, a non-profit organization involved in inner city revitalization, and Dan Worthington of Norcott and Company Funeral Home.

To date, issues covered by the committee include traffic volume, drainage, hospital and medical school growth, recommendations of the city's first medical study committee presented in 1975, and county involvement in district management and growth.

Information to come out of weekly luncheon and night meetings of the committee include the following:

The East Carolina University School of Medicine is "ahead in terms of development of all the schools in the country that developed when it did." — Stuart Bondurant, dean, University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

Traffic Volume — Targeted by Flye as one of the more important considerations in future development of the medical district, traffic volume passing through the area on Stantonsburg Road is now estimated at 14,000 cars per day, a figure expected to escalate to 20,000-plus when a four-lane segment of U.S. 264 between Greenville and Farmville is completed in 1987.

Key elements in containing the level of traffic will be installation of a northwestern loop of U.S. 264 bypassing the city and medical district, and extension some time in the future of Arlington Boulevard, Flye said in an interview Monday. According to a North Carolina Department of Transportation representative who spoke to the committee in March, extension of Arlington would provide the greatest relief (25 to 40 percent) for the area because extension would create an alternate route for residents of the city's most heavily populated area — the south side of town, specifically those residential areas surrounding Greenville Boulevard.

Extension of Arlington Boulevard was targeted in May by council members as the city's No. 3 priority behind construction of the northwestern loop and widening portions of Evans Steet. The loop project and Evans Street widening are included on the state's 10-year Transportation Improvement Program (TIP), adopted Dec. 14, 1984.

The loop project, now in the preliminary design phase, is scheduled for right-of-way acquisition in 1987. Construction contracts for the 7.5-mile loop, expected to decrease hospital area traffic by 10 percent, are to be let in August 1988; cost has been projected at $17 million. No state or local funds have been designated for extension of Arlington.

Drainage — Also a top committee concern, according to Flye, are drainage problems in the medical district. While city engineers report drainage facilities of the ECU School of Medicine are adequate, they report PCMH is having some problems because of an undersize drainage system — a situation Ralph Hall, PCMH vice president of facility management, pointed out in a February meeting with committee members. According to Hall, the hospital area is drained through a central pipe that empties into a retention pond that eventually allows run-off to enter the Tar River. Further construction of impervious surfaces like parking lots in the medical district could add to the problem.

"The system is now known to back up and lift manholes in the parking lots," Hall said in the February presentation. "If we further develop surrounding land, run-off will be increased," he explained.

Tass Steps Up Spying Charge

By The Associated Press

Tass today accused U.S. Army Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. of spying on a Soviet military installation in East Germany before he was slain, and said his actions were "gross violations" of a 1947 agreement.

Tass also insisted a sentry gave Nicholson clear warning to halt before he fired the fatal shots.

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger called the killing "a totally unjustified act," and repeated the American government's contention that Nicholson was given no warning before he was killed

Sunday. Weinberger, speaking in Luxembourg before a NATO meeting, said the killing was "very reprehensible."

In a Russian-language report in Moscow, the official Soviet news agency said the American was found taking photographs through the window of a storage facility at a closed installation, and that the sentry demanded in Russian and German that he stop. It described Nicholson's actions as a "spying operation."

Nicholson spoke fluent Russian.

Tass said that when the intruder, who at that point was not known to be an American soldier, tried to escape, the sentry fired a warning shot in the air.

"Because, after that, the intruder did not stop, the sentry was compelled to use his weapon. The violator was killed by gunfire," Tass said.

"The above mentioned intelligence actions of the American military serviceman are gross violations of the agreement ... of April 3, 1947"

REFLECTOR HOTLINE

Hotline gets things done. Write and tell us about the problem or issue into which you'd like for Hotline to look. Enclose photostatic copies of any pertinent information. Our address is The Daily Reflector, Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835. Because of the large numbers received, Hotline cannot answer or publish every item we receive, but we deal with all of those for which we have staff time. Names must be given, but only initials will be published.

QUILT APPEAL

The Women's Council of Realtors has asked Hotline to appeal for participation in the creation of a "signature quilt" which will become a permanent wall hanging in the Ronald McDonald House to be built near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The quilt is to be made by Gwen Lee, who is donating her labor, as a project of the Women's Council of Realtors. Completion is set for the end of 1985. Any individual who wishes to have his or her signature embroidered onto the quilt may do so by donating $10; any company by donating $50. Proceeds will go to the Ronald McDonald House. The deadline for submitting signatures and accompanying donations is April 15. Call Jean Hopper, Women's Council of Realtors president, 355-73000 for information.

South African Police Intercept Ministers, Praying Protesters

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police today detained three leading ministers and rounded up hundreds of supporters who fell to their knees and prayed when they were ordered to break up a march against white-minority rule, witnesses said.

Meanwhile, new rioting broke out near Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean, where racial unrest in the past five days has resulted in 30 or more deaths.

The protesters — estimated at between 200 and 300 — were rounded up after they had just left a Methodist church in Cape Town, where a memorial service was held for 19 blacks shot and killed by police last Thursday.

Witnesses and the South African Press Association said police surrounded the crowd, which was marching toward the Parliament building half a mile away to protest white-minority rule. When police ordered the marchers to disperse, they dropped to their knees and began to pray and sing "Onward Christian Soldiers," witnesses said.

The crowd remained calm as police led away the ministers, then packed the protesters into vans. It was not known at the time of the mid-afternoon incident whether the marchers were arrested or simply removed from the street.

Among those detained was Rev. Beyers Naude, secretary-general of the South African Council of Churches. Naude, a white, was once a high-ranking dominee, or preacher, in the pro-apartheid Dutch Reformed Church.

Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches, was also taken away, the press association said. Boesak, a minister in the Dutch Reformed sister church for non-whites, is of mixed race.

The Rev. Abel Hendriks, a white former leader of the Methodist Church, was also led away, the witnesses said.

Parliament was scheduled to debate the behavior of police who killed the 19 blacks last Thursday.

A police spokesman in Port Elizabeth, on the Indian Ocean, said police fired tear gas in four separate incidents in the township of Langa, where the 19 were killed, and in nearby Kwanobuhle where blacks armed with sticks and long knives known as "pangas" roamed the streets.

Black policemen and township officers, often suspected of collaborating with the white-minority government, are becoming more frequent targets of attacks by angry blacks.

There were no reports of casualties in today's unrest. A spokesman at police headquarters in Pretoria issued a warning for all non-residents to stay out of black areas.

Radisson Dispute Broadens

Partner Files Countersuit

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

James D. Carter, a partner in the Radisson Inn, has filed an answer and counterclaim to a suit brought by the other partner in the project, Dr. Howard Satterfield, — which charged Carter with spending "large amounts" of money belonging to the Radisson project for "totally unrelated" purposes — denying the charges and asking for, among other things, the dissolution of the partnership and more than $11 million in damages.

Carter and Satterfield — as partners in Leisure Development of Greenville — are involved in construction of the new six-story Radisson Inn on Greenville Boulevard, which began in mid-1984.

Satterfield's suit, filed in early February, naming Carter, Carter Development, Sanjay Inc. and others, charges that "large amounts of money" belonging to the partnership "have been expended" by Carter "for purposes totally unrelated" to the Radisson project. The suit asks, among other things, that Satterfield recover all damages caused by Carter's alleged "conversion of property" belonging to the partnership and that a "constructive trust" be placed on assets belonging to Carter, Carter Development,

Sanjay and others "to the extent assets were acquired with partnership funds."

According to the suit, Sanjay is listed as the general contractor for the Radisson project while "Carter Development is performing all acts as general contractor." Both Carter Development and Sanjay are controlled by Carter.

Among other things, Satterfield's suit alleges that Carter has used partnership funds: "to purchase assets of Leisure Marble;" to make monthly payments on a $250,000 Mitsubishi MU2J airplane in Carter Development's name; to pay off personal loans totaling $55,952 at two Florida banks, and to purchase a crane and backhoe in Carter Development's name.

The suit also charges that Carter is drawing $10,000 a month as project supervisor, which the suit alleges is "excessive."

Carter's answer denies he has used partnership funds for purposes unrelated to the Radisson project, and that "all payments from the construction loan proceeds were approved by Satterfield ... (who) ... knew of and approved all payments."

The answer, which alleges that Satterfield "has improperly failed

Quota Club Receives Charter Saturday Night

Greenville City Manager Gail Meeks became the first president of the Quota Club of Greenville at a charter dinner Saturday night.

Lynn Stephenson, president of Quota International, presented the new club its charter and membership into Quota International. Quota International is a worldwide service organization of executive and professional women united in service to the hearing impaired. There are 470 quota clubs in nine countries.

Joining Ms. Stephenson for the charter presentation were two former Greenville residents, Lib Johnson and Lila Burden, both current members of the Quota Club of Raleigh. Ms. Johnson is coordinator and Ms. Burden is president of the Raleigh Club. Also present was Eva Elmore, lieutenant governor of the 19th Quota District.

Charter members of the new club are Mary Ann Bennett, Kathleen Beetham, Nadine Bowen, Peggy Briley, Kim Carraway, Susan Congleton, Sandra Coughlin, Frances Faust, Amy Fleming, Blanche Forbes, Carolyn Gorham, Vickie Grace, Linda Gurganus, Judith Harrington, Gwynett Hilburn, Bette Hudson, Teresa Jewell, Mary Margaret Means, Gail Meeks, Kate Phillips, Polly Piland, Terry Shank, Nancy Short, Janet Stoughton, Nancy Warren, Nina Weston and Patricia Wilson.

Members of the executive board include Gail Meeks, Teresa Jewell, Judith Harrington, Nancy Short, Kathleen Beetham and Janet Stoughton.

In the past, the Raleigh Quota Club has given scholarships to East Carolina University's program for the hearing impaired and was one of the sponsors for a music festival for hearing impaired students. A dance team from the festival performed at a Quota District Conference representing North Carolina and Virginia.

The group will have dinner meetings on the third Thursdays.

Standard Flower Show To Have 400th Anniversary Theme

A standard flower show will be held at the N.C. Museum of History in Raleigh Saturday and Sunday. The theme will be "Raleigh and His Visions" in connection with the museum's new exhibit "Raleigh and Roanoke."

The floors of the Archives and History/State Library Building will boast arrangements interpreting the 400th anniversary theme according to Mrs. James Barbot, chairman.

More than 75 different arrangements plus potted plants are expected for the event. Sponsored by the Garden Club of North Carolina and the Wake County Committee of America's 400th Anniversary, the show is being staged by members from District 10.

Arrangements will interpret various themes relating to the exhibit. For example, Mrs. Barbot pointed out, one arrangement of various colored flowers will represent the jewels in the crown of Queen Elizabeth I.

Admission to "Raleigh and Roanoke" is free and a catalogue is available for purchase. For the exhibit, museum hours are Monday, Tuesday and Thursday, 9 a.m. to 8 p.m.; Wednesday, Friday and Saturday, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Sunday, 1-6 p.m.

America's 400th Anniversary is a celebration being hosted by North Carolina until 1987 to commemorate the Roanoke Voyages of 1584-1587. The voyages, sponsored by Sir Walter Raleigh, brought the first English explorers and settlers to the new world.

For information contact America's 400th Anniversary Committee, 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh, 27611.

The N.C. Museum of History, an agency of the Department of Cultural Resources, is located at 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh.

President Of Jaycee Women Visits Here

Paula Turlington of Lexington was a special guest at the meeting of the Greenville Jay-C-ettes held last week. She is president of the N.C. Jaycee Women.

She told the group about the future direction of the women's organization.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

After years of research and more than a billion dollars in losses by electronic giants, someone is finally ready to admit a home computer for housewives is impractical.

That is because computers are designed by men who have no idea what housewives do. They visualized a billion women sitting around an electronic hearth warming their hands over Christmas card lists and recipes.

It never occurred to them that you can't program what a wife and mother does. What we know can never be stored.

How can you program menus without noting who will eat only brown food, who is allergic to shellfish and who makes disgusting, tasteless remarks over sweetbreads? Also who eats after ball practice, who works late on Wednesdays and who isn't eating at all.

A mother would be a fool to store in her computer all of her secrets like where she hid the can of tennis balls that bounce, the Halloween candy and the distributor to her car.

Our world is too high-tech for a home computer. What to wash and what to dry clean, what fades in hot water and how many inches a pair of jns will shrink in the waistband would blow a normal computer's terminal.

And how many computers could possibly come up with an answer to, "Where is it? Don't get up." If you knew where it was when you put it in the computer, it wouldn't be in the same place two hours later anyway.

Sometimes, I think it might be nice for a computer to identify what is in the leftover dishes in the back of the refrigerator before I throw them away, or for me to be able to tap a few keys and see on the screen who borrowed my white sweater or what happened to my piece of navy luggage, but it isn't all THAT important.

Trying to put the activities of a housewife into a computer is like trying to domesticate a water snake. Our energies and our activities are not an exact, absolute science.

A home computer is not what we need. We need someone to clean the toilets. Not one of those little mythical Tidy Bowl men that swish around the bowl, but an honest-to-goodness man!

We need a conveyor belt that runs from the supermarket to our homes to eliminate all the grocery hustling. We need pamper bed linens that self-destruct in a week's time and all we do is put new ones on. And as Phyllis Diller observed, "We need a stove that flushes."

A product like a computer should fulfill a need, not the other way around. Until it makes a meat loaf that doesn't fall apart, it's just something else to dust.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Approximately 12 million homes now have a personal computer.

Dear Abby

Lack Of Biking Skills Has Student Spinning His Wheels

DEAR ABBY: I am a 21-year-old male college sophomore, reasonably intelligent, with no physical or mental problems—except for the one I'm writing about. I never learned how to ride a bike.

When I was growing up I never owned a bike, and I didn't have the courage to ask any of my friends who had bikes to teach me. I grew up feeling inferior, but the pain of not being able to ride a bike was pushed out of my mind during my teen years when I learned how to drive my father's car.

Now that I'm in college, I really need a bike because I live two miles from school and there's no bus service near me. Driving a car is out of the question because there's no place to park.

Is there a place where adults are taught to ride a bike? In private, I mean, because at my age I'd feel like a fool trying to learn in a park or some other public place where people could see me. Please answer soon. This is eating me up.

ASHAMED

DEAR ASHAMED: Don't be so hard on yourself. It's no crime to be unable to ride a bike.

Ask a friend who bikes to teach you on a country road. Or go to a shop where bicycles are sold; the people there will find a teacher for you. They may even suggest training wheels. You can do it. People have learned to ride a bike in their 60s; you're just a kid. Get going.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife and I are having an ongoing disagreement concerning our 5-year-old son. (We have joint custody.) She insists on having the boy sleep with her every night that he is in her care. I don't think it's healthy for the boy, and I have told her so, but she has one excuse after another.

Memorial Cracks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Small cracks have been discovered in the granite panels of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial which bears the names of 58,000 war dead. But the monument's architects say the flaws pose no threat to the structure.

One of the volunteers who works at the memorial first brought the cracks to the attention of the U.S. Park Service which looks after the $8.8 million federal monument.

The cracks are in several of the 140 black granite panels inscribed with names of the dead.

National Park Service officials estimate that there are about eight of the horizontal cracks, appearing waist high, and ranging in length from one inch to six inches. Park technician Timothy Trainer, who is stationed at the monument, described the cracks as being "barely visible."

"You could walk by the memorial for eight years and look at every name and not see them (the cracks)," agreed architect Kent Cooper, whose firm, the Cooper Lecky Partnership, is the architect of record.

STORE RECEIVES FIRE DAMAGE — The Kash & Carry on N.C. 33 about seven miles east of Greenville received some fire damage shortly after 8 a.m. this morning. According to store supervisor Mike Austin, employee Michelle Sutton was starting the deep-fat fryer when it apparently got too hot and caught fire. Austin said Ms. Sutton and employee Kathy Kite were in the store at the time of the blaze and were not injured. Austin said they tried to put out the fire with an extinguisher, but could not contain the blaze due to the thick smoke. Austin said a damage estimate was not available. Firemen from Simpson and Eastern Pines responded to the call. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Budget Leaders Freezing 3,087 Jobs Now Open

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative budget leaders today clamped a funding freeze on 3,087 vacant state jobs, a move they said could save $60.1 million a year.

"We're trying to do what we can ... to see that government is run as efficiently as possible," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, co-chairman of the Joint Base Budget Committee.

The jobs will be eliminated unless department and agency leaders convince budget subcommittees they are vital, said Rand and Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, the other co-chairman.

The greatest number of vacant positions — 1,090 — are under the Department of Transportation. Another 855 are under the University of North Carolina system, 395 under the Department of Human Resources, and 201 under the Department of Correction.

One-third of the jobs have been unfilled for at least six months, Etheridge said. One EKG technician's post has been vacant since 1975.

The freeze will take effect July 1, when the 1985-86 fiscal year begins. Etheridge said he hoped agencies would not spend additional money from this year's budget on the vacant positions or other unauthorized projects.

The lawmakers said they feared that departments and agencies were diverting money appropriated for unfilled jobs to other projects. "Clearly there must be accountability in the budget process," said Rand. "You shouldn't use money appropriated for apples to buy oranges."

Rand said the announcement was not connected with or inspired by the creation of the Governor's Efficiency Study Commission, which met for the first time Monday.

Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican, said he hoped the panel — led by retired NCNB Corp. chairman Thomas Storrs — could save up to $200 million a year.

"We've been working on this for about three weeks and ... had the paperwork ready on Friday," said Rand. "It's not in response to anything the governor's done."

He said he hadn't consulted with Martin, but expected no resistance.

Police Investigate 10 Reports Of Thefts

Greenville police are investigating 10 thefts reported to the department Monday.

Officer B.W. Lewis said money was taken from a safe at the Foodland supermarket at West End Circle in an incident reported at 6:53 a.m., while Officer E.C. Moore said an adding machine and telephone answering machine were taken from the Charlotte Liberty Mutual Insurance office at 1010 S. Evans St. in a break-in reported at 8:20 a.m., and $40 in cash was taken from 801C New Town Project in a break-in reported at 3:01 p.m.

Officer H.D. Hines said a tool box was taken from 1117 Ragsdale L Road in an incident reported at 20:14 a.m., while Officer J.C. Mulford said a purse containing $15 in cash was taken from 212 W. Fifth in connection with an incident reported at 1:52 p.m.

According to Officer F.G. Pruitt, a ladder valued at $18 was taken from 302 Dellwood Drive in an incident reported at 4:03 p.m. and $600 worth of tools were taken from the back of a pick-up truck parked in the Farm Fresh parking lot off Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 8:52 p.m., while Officer P.W. Worthington said a wedding band valued at $115 was taken from Pugh's Tire Service at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets in an incident reported at 4:55 p.m.

Officer W.R. McLawhorn said a tape player was taken from 301 Biltmore St. in a break-in reported at 9:16 p.m., while $5.30 in change and two pairs of slacks valued at $36 were taken from a car parked at Harvey's Restaurant on Memorial Drive in an incident reported at 9:23 p.m.

Helms Says Religion Before Politics

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms says religion precedes politics in America and "provides the only basis of sound political order" in the country.

"Nowhere is there an agreement to separate religion and politics" in this country," he told a group at Clemson University Monday. "We've relied on religion to form the very foundation of our existence as a nation."

The conservative Republican spoke as part of Clemson's "Religion and Politics in America" series.

Helms said efforts by New York Gov. Mario Cuomo and Democratic presidential candidate Geraldine

Ferraro to separate their religious and political beliefs, specifically on abortion, "failed miserably."

"The American electorate sealed that defeat in 1984 and the Democrats carried only one state," he said.

Basics

North Carolina's efforts to assure a balanced basic education for all its youngsters coincide with the advice of new Education Secretary William Bennett.

Bennett, in addressing a meeting of school administrators, was critical of "an incoherent design" in the nation's schooling. He credited a drift in curriculum as resulting from economic trends, social concerns and college entrance exams.

Any of those factors might vary from one system to another across the land; which pretty well sums up reasons for diversity among American schools.

He asked the education group to start meeting with citizens to decide "what we want our children to learn." Bennett left no doubt as to his feelings: a return to fundamentals — strong in history, English, mathematics and science. He told his listeners that if they did not do it, others would, and it would not be the federal government.

"Teach time-tested things," he said, "and good, time-tested things will be remembered." He made a persuasive case. He may also have been remembering the basic education he received years ago. We know adults tend to idealize certain parts of their childhood memories ... crediting their early school years as "making me what I am today" and there remains the question, "Is that good enough for the rest of the 1980s, the 1990s and beyond?"

There is no sure answer. The horizons of knowledge have braadened immeasurably over the years. So much so, that most adults admit their learning processes never did cease with conclusion of their formal education.

Twelve years of schooling may seem a lifetime to most youngsters, but their schools are literally racing a clock to turn out a product that can cope with tomorrow. The time is so short, and there is so much to be accomplished.

There is possibly room in that time-frame to include introduction to the many good things that enrich living. Still, we must admit it is the basics Secretary Bennett advocates that brings other broadening fields into reach.

Success

This is the off season for the Pitt County United Way but the organization held its annual meeting last week to honor those who have contributed and worked for its success.

Jack Richardson, president of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital, is the president of United Way for 1985-86 and other officers have been named.

Richardson said the Pitt County United Way is sound. "It has a track record we can be proud of."

Indeed it has. United Way has a record of meeting its financial goals in recent years and the campaigns have been speedily carried out. Many individuals, businesses and industries contribute to making the Pitt County United Way the success it has become. We are certain that under the new leadership the organization's success will continue this year.

Explaining Too Much

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Members of Congress are mostly a tough-skinned group, but one thing almost guaranteed to rattle some cages is criticism about junkets — those trips abroad so nobly labled "fact-finding missions."

Witness the recent behavior of the Senate's two Bobs — Republican leader Robert Dole and top Democrat Robert Byrd.

Claiming it was the Senate's duty to see the initial session of the U.S.-Soviet arms talks first hand so it could properly fulfill its obligation to ratify treaties, the two Bobs led a group of 10 "observer" senators to Switzerland, where negotiators from both sides did little else than introduce themselves.

What was most interesting was that the two Bobs seemed to spend less time "observing" than explaining why they were "observers."

In a news release issued as the talks started, Dole and Byrd went through great lengths to justify their presence in Geneva.

They quoted Secretary of State George Shultz welcoming their move. They reminded the public of the "Senate's constitutional role to advise and consent." And they issued a joint statement describing themselves as "officially designated observers on the U.S. delegation."

On their return, there was more of the same. But this time, the "observers" declared victory.

Dole again explained that "the Senate has an important constitutionally based role in the process of achieving and approving any arms control agreement" and argued that the bipartisan effort "strengthened the hand of our negotiators in their

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has condemned the Soviet slaying of a U.S. Army major as unjustified and the State Department is calling it murder. But amid the tough talk there was no clear sign of a downturn in superpower relations.

In fact, Reagan told reporters Monday, the incident "would make me more anxious" to go to a summit with new Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, whose elevation to power ushered in a warming trend in U.S.-Soviet relations.

Other U.S. officials emphasized they had not completed their investigation, which has produced an account of the shooting Sunday of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. that differs starkly with the Soviet version.

"What it will lead to I don't know," a cautious State Department official said. But he resisted comparisons to the Soviet interception and destruction of a South Korean airliner in September 1983, noting that incident involved a civilian aircraft and the loss of 269 lives.

At the time, Reagan unleashed a diplomatic barrage at Moscow, accusing the Kremlin of a "barbaric act." He followed up that rhetoric with a few measured reprisals, including a ban on landings by Aeroflot, the Soviet civilian airlines, in the United States.

The Soviets' lack of repentance over the airliner tragedy may have contributed to Reagan's punitive steps. But this time the Soviets swiftly sent their regrets through Oleg M. Sokolov, a high-ranking diplomat who called on Richard R. Burt, the assistant secretary of state for European affairs.

And Sokolov ran into a verbal buzzsaw.

"My tone was one of very stern and serious about this matter," Burt told reporters later. Asked to assess the Soviet version, which included allegations that Nicholson entered a restricted area and tried to flee before he was shot, the U.S. official said: "They are wrong, dead wrong."

Other officials described Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz, who briefed the president in the Oval Office, as outraged. Apparently, Nicholson is the first U.S. or Soviet officer ever gunned down in Germany while carrying out monitoring activities permitted under a 1947 agreement.

Several Soviet officers, carrying out similar activities in West Germany, were detained and at least one French officer died under questionable circumstances, said a U.S. official who demanded anonymity.

"But this is the first time anyone was shot head-on," he said. "The Soviets know in no uncertain terms how we feel. It casts a cloud over the effort under way since Gorbachev took over."

But a White House official called the shooting an "egregious error" and said "I don't see it in KAL (Korean Air Lines) dimensions."

He said it was too early to tell whether U.S.-Soviet relations would suffer. "It doesn't help, but it may depend on how regretful they are."

Apart from the potential diplomatic fallout, the accounts presented by Burt at the State Department and the Soviet Embassy here differed in almost every major respect.

The Soviets said Nicholson and his driver entered restricted territory and disregarded warning signs in Russian and German. Burt said they were 300 to 500 yards away, on the south side of a highway that delineates the restricted area. The State Department official said there were no signs posted.

Also, he said Nicholson did not try to run away. In fact, Burt said, he fell wounded by the second or third shot — and Soviet sentries kept Nicholson's companion from approaching the major with a first-aid kit even while Nicholson called out "Jess, I'm shot."

According to Burt, it took an hour for the Soviets to provide medical help. By then, the official said, Nicholson was dead.

"There was completely no justification for the murder of Major Nicholson or for the use of force of any kind," Burt said.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I hereby defend Bernard Goetz for his courage and defense of himself in shooting four teen-age boys on a New York City subway for attempting to hassle and hustle him for money and any attempt to harm his person.

Goetz has an impeccable reputation as a lone frail scholar who tends to his bussiness and is a good neighbor. He had previously been mugged and beaten mercilessly by thugs, asked for legal permission to carry a firearm for his personal protection, was twice denied, but took it upon himself to protect himself, regardless. Exactly as President Ronald Reagan is now asking Congress to submit to his requests for the protection of America.

To justify the ends of this debacle, each boy confronted should have his personal criminal record opened, exposed, scrutinized for public observation by every means of the news media and television. Goetz is not a hero or villain, nor does he desire such. He is just another victim of a society that is tolerating this menace with a slap on the wrist, psychological evaluation and culprits left in the hands of parents that have never controlled them.

In the city of Kinston there have been three murders recently in homes, shops and otherwise, perpetrated by those who have yet to be cornered. Americans are afraid to walk the streets in broad open daylight and it is time to put a stop to this hoodlumism. The United States Supreme Court should try this case, and age or any loophole to protect the perpetrators of crime should be closed for the protection of people; otherwise, we shall all be looking for instrumentations of help when and where needed.

This article comes from one who has been mugged, threatened, cursed, pushed off the streets and knows of what I speak.

Blackmail — open and flagrant blackmail!

We already have thousands of times the explosive power of World War II. If we use only 10 percent of it, we risk wiping out human life in the Northern Hemisphere, without a shot from the U.S.S.R.

The administration tells us that the Soviets "came back to the bargaining table" because of the MX and Star War proposals, but not that they broke up the preceding talks because we deployed Cruise and Pershing missiles.

Two of the people who head our delegation to the arms talks take a very dim view of arms control. The administration paints their job in aggressive terms, rather than in terms of finding common interests. Success apparently depends on the Soviets accepting U.S. terms — unconditional surrender, you might say. We aren't likely to get it.

Yet congressmen have reason to fear that if they vote against the MX, they will be held responsible for the failure of the talks.

That's blackmail, and just as dishonorable between branches of government as between individuals.

Strength For Today

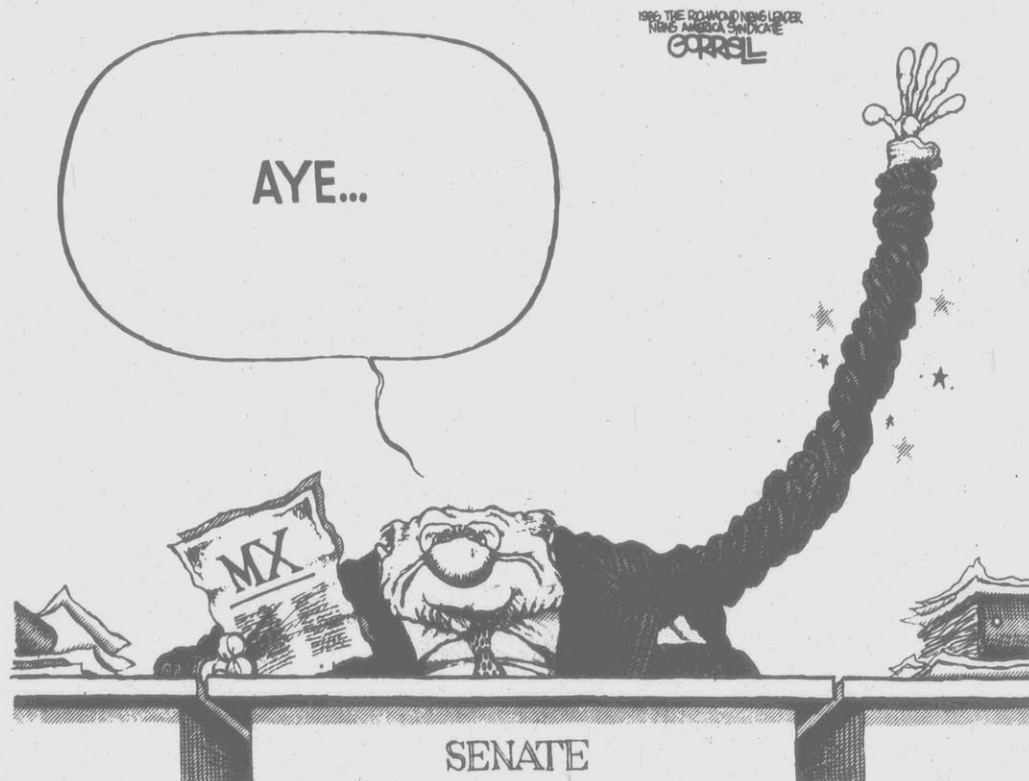

There is a great difference between business and busy-ness. In business we get something accomplished. In busy-ness we run around in circles.

The most successful business executive I ever knew never had a paper on his desk. He spent a great deal of time in silent pondering. When a decision was needed, he had one.

In contrast to this man, I remember another who could always tell everybody how to do everything. He was busy from morning until night but never seemed to accomplish anything. This unsuccessful man's life was wasted in busy-ness.

If we want to achieve success in this world, let us realize that Destiny (spelled with a capital D), means business. We cannot trifle with Destiny. Jesus said, "My heavenly Father worketh until now, and I work."

Boom Times Ending

RALEIGH — For the past four years, the state's Highway Fund has been in pretty good shape. Following a 3-cent state gas tax increase, the Department of Transportation undertook a major maintenance program. After a 5-cent federal tax increase, DOT dramatically increased new road construction.

But the boom times may be coming to an end. There are signs that the Highway Fund is headed back in the direction of trouble.

"It's the same problem we've had in the past," says Marvin Forman, deputy state budget officer. "Revenues are growing at three, four or five percent and costs are growing at from 10 to 15 percent."

Before the 1981 General Assembly passed the gas tax increase, the state's roads were in tough shape. Jim Harrington, DOT secretary, says that in 1981 the state had 6,100 miles of roads in need of repaving and another 6,700 miles in need of resealing or other maintenance. But because the Highway Fund was in such serious trouble, only 350 miles of road were being repaved each year.

The tax increase changed that. The new money has allowed DOT to put the number of repaved miles to an average of 3,200 a year for the past four years. That pace allowed DOT to reduce the list of roads in need of repaving to 4,000 miles and those in need of resealing to 2,600.

Harrington says that the days of catching up are over. From now on, DOT will be fortunate simply to stay even with the demand. Harrington told a budget committee in the legislature recently that he hopes to average 2,550 miles of repaving each year for Gov. Jim Martin's first term. At that level — 650 miles less than during the previous four years — the backlog of roads in need of repair will remain steady.

"Our period of catch up is over without our having caught up," Harrington said in a later interview.

Harrington is trying to figure out why the cost of fixing roads is rising as quickly as it is. He's ordered a study to determine why supply costs for road work are rising faster than the general rate of inflation.

"To give you any reason now would be premature," he said. "There is obviously an increase in cost that exceeds the general inflation."

encounters with the Soviet delegates."

In speeches on the Senate floor the following day, the two Bobs continued. The observers, the majority leader claimed, "were not negotiators but had a substantive role to play, to serve as the eyes and ears of the Senate in Geneva."

Thank heaven. Without 10 pairs of Senate eyes watching, the remaining 90 members might not know what a handshake between U.S. and Soviet negotiators looked like.

The trip was apparently such a resounding success that the Senate leadership has decided, at least for now, to go through with plans to send members over to Geneva every once in a while to keep their eyes and ears focused on the talks.

But more than a few people wondered if such a quasi-permanent Senate base would be established if the talks were being held in, say, steamy Jakarta rather than picturesque Geneva.

And it wasn't just the normally surly media that was complaining.

No, at least one senator who remained in Washington to deal with more mundane subjects like the federal budget and its more than $200 billion deficit saw some problems with the trip.

"Dole's gone over there for a photo opportunity," declared Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., as a deadlocked Senate Budget Committee struggled with whether it should recommend taxes as part of a deficit reduction plan.

Maybe the two Bobs explained too much.

Maybe they should have followed the lead of the House, which had planned to send an even larger delegation to Geneva, then announced it would send no one, and then wound up sending a more modest contingent.

General Dynamics Cuts $23 Million From Bill For Cookbooks And Beds

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Dynamics has withdrawn $23 million in bills it submitted to the Pentagon for items such as cookbooks and beds, but the nation's biggest defense contractor is still under fire from members of Congress angry about a wide range of business practices.

"I have serious questions as to whether you should remain as chairman," Rep. Jim Slattery, D-Kan., told General Dynamics board chairman David Lewis on Monday.

Slattery's comment, to which Lewis did not respond, capped a day-long session of the House Commerce investigations subcommittee at which Lewis was repeatedly criticized for company actions.

General Dynamics, the Pentagon's largest contractor, builds F-16 jets for the Air Force, M-1 tanks for the Army, most of the Navy's submarines and a wide range of other equipment and weaponry.

In the wake of problems at the firm's Electric Boat submarine-building division, General Dynamics is now being investigated by three congressional subcommittees and various federal agencies looking into allegations of stock manipulation, false billing, illegal gratuities and security violations.

Three weeks ago, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger suspended overhead, or administrative, payments to the company for 30 days because of revelations that the Pentagon has been billed for items such as country club memberships and boarding an executive's dog.

Lewis, admitting the billing practices "left much to be desired," told the subcommittee that the firm is withdrawing $23 million of the $170 million in claims it billed the Pentagon from 1979 to 1982.

Those claims include $546 for a bed in 1980 and a December 1982 bill of $120 for 10 cookbooks, according to documents released Monday by the panel.

The company is also changing its procedures for billing the Pentagon to make sure that future claims can be fully justified, Lewis said.

The new policies "will be totally satisfactory to the Department of Defense," Lewis said.

He also defended the 1983 hiring of George Sawyer, who moved to General Dynamics from the Pentagon, where he was assistant Navy secretary in charge of shipbuilding and who was involved in the controversy over cost overruns on the submarine contracts.

Lewis said he called Sawyer in March 1983 because he heard Sawyer "was looking for a job." He said that in negotiations with Sawyer, General Dynamics' officials tried to make sure there was no conflict of interest.

Lewis acknowledged he was quizzed about Sawyer recently when he was called before a federal grand jury in Hartford, Conn., which is apparently investigating Sawyer's hiring.

Lewis also criticized James R. Ashton, a former General Dynamics official who was moved to the Electric Boat division in 1980 and left within a year after he was passed over to be general manager of the Groton, Conn., facility.

CLERGYMAN — Archbishop John Roach, who heads the St. Paul-Minneapolis Archdiocese, ponders a question at a news conference Monday in St. Paul. He had pleaded guilty to driving while drinking. He paid a $445 fine and faces two days in jail. (AP Laserphoto)

Archbishop Uses DWI Guilty Plea

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Archbishop John Roach, who pleaded guilty to a charge of drunken driving, says his experience has opened his eyes to the problems created by combining driving with alcohol.

"I feel a special responsibility now, having had to face my own flawedness, to invite everyone — especially young people — to join me in promising God, that with his help, we will never again risk the consequences of drinking and driving," Roach said Monday.

Roach, head of the St. Paul-Minneapolis archdiocese and an immediate past president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, entered the plea Monday in Chisago County court.

He was ordered to spend 38 hours in jail and pay a $445 fine. Roach initially entered an innocent plea on March 8, but he said the plea was based on a legal technicality and was never a change in his admission of guilt.

"I wish to restate my sorrow and contrition for my actions and again apologize to those I have disappointed," Roach said. "I thank God that no one was physically hurt...."

"Unfortunately, many perceived that my not-guilty plea reversed my previous admission of guilt and my apology for what I know was a very serious error," he said. "I have never reversed my admission of guilt, and my guilty plea today is the best evidence of that admission."

And he told a news conference he "publicly acknowledged imprudence and bad judgment for operating a car while under the influence of alcohol."

A Chisago County deputy sheriff arrested the 63-year-old archbishop on Feb. 21, after police said his car brushed a wall of a grocery store in Lindstrom.

Labor Department Disputes New Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The percentage of out-of-work Americans covered by unemployment insurance is sinking to a new low that is about half what it was in the late 1970s, according to a study released today.

The Labor Department, however, disagreed with the study, issued by the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities.

The center analyzed the impact of the impending expiration on March 31 of federal supplemental compensation, which provides eight to 14 weeks of jobless benefits to unemployed people after regular state-financed benefits run out. State benefits run up to 26 weeks.

In addition to the 325,000 unemployed receiving the supplemental benefits, "an additional 3.2 million jobless workers could be adversely affected" by the program's expiration, concluded the center, a non-profit organization financed by several foundations and church groups.

The 3.2 million unemployed "are now in their first 26 weeks of unemployment," the report said. "Until now, these workers would have been protected for another eight to 14 weeks if they failed to find a job by the time the 26 weeks of state benefits were up."

Steve McManus, a Labor Department spokesman on unemployment matters, said FSC was envisioned by Congress in 1982 as a temporary program to help out during a time of high unemployment.

"Their argument is that as long as there is one person collecting, we shouldn't end the program," McManus said. "We just don't think that is feasible. With the expansion of the economy, we don't think the program is warranted."

The report said that "in 1984, only 34 percent of the unemployed were receiving unemployment benefits in an average month, the lowest level ever recorded in the program's history. With the end of FSC, this level is likely to fall to 30 percent, or even lower, in 1985."

This compares with 50 to 70 percent of the unemployed receiving benefits in the late 1970s.

"In 1977," said the report, "when unemployment rates were at comparable levels and when the economy was at a similar stage of recovery from a major recession, the percent of the unemployed who received benefits was approximately 60 percent. During the 1974-75 recession, coverage was as high as 81 percent."

But McManus said the comparison with the 1970s is invalid. During that period, a third program of extended federal-state unemployment benefits was in extensive use because of high unemployment. The program still exists, but because unemployment rates have declined, it is only in use in Alaska and West Virginia, McManus said.

Reagan Pushes Lobbying Effort For MX Support

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan waged a last-minute lobbying blitz to persuade House members that success at the Geneva arms talks hinges on today's vote on producing more MX missiles.

Reagan and chief negotiator Max Kampelman, a Democrat, repeatedly exhorted House members Monday with the message that the MX system is needed as a bargaining tool in the arms talks now under way in Geneva, Switzerland.

Kampelman went further, saying a congressional decision to kill the MX would represent a serious intrusion in the negotiating process and "would inevitably delay the negotiations."

But an MX opponent, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., said

Kampelman's mission to Washington on vote's eve was an attempt to give the MX "a sugar coating of arms control, to bathe it in the glow of Geneva." He and other MX foes argue the weapon is too expensive, destabilizing and too vulnerable to a Soviet first-strike attack.

Reagan told an invited group of more than 100 House and Senate members gathered under the gleaming chandeliers of the East Room of the White House that, "If we don't want to see our hopes evaporate, we must continue to demonstrate the resolve to carry the negotiations to a successful conclusion on a sound basis."

"If we fail, we'll be signaling to the world that on this issue we are irresolute and divided," Reagan said. "And the Soviet Union will see that, in dealing with the United States, propaganda and stonewalling are much more profitable than good faith negotiations."

ANYTHING YOU WEAR
4,000 HOURS A YEAR
BETTER BE COMFORTABLE.

So Pearle makes sure your contacts are comfortable.

And stay that way, for as long as you wear them.

That's pretty important when you consider that lenses are worn, on the average, 11.5 hours a day. Or, 4,000 hours a year.

Yet the comfort of your lenses depends greatly on how well they're cared for.

Now, at Pearle, we've sold over 1 million contact lenses.

So we've learned a thing or two about their care.

For instance. It's important to have lenses that are right for you. Right from the start.

At Pearle, we have virtually every type of lens on today's market. Hard lenses. Soft lenses. Extended wear. Soft tinted. Even bifocal lenses.

Which lens is right for you? Our team of professionals will determine that, based on your prescription and lifestyle.

We'll also make sure you get the follow-up care you need.

So if you're buying contact lenses, come on in during our Contact Lens Care Month. And get the right kind of eyewear. From professionals who really care.

Iran Warned Against Engaging in Terrorist Activities

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane, asserting that America must be prepared to take military action against pro-terrorist states, says Iran could become a U.S. target for supporting Shiite militants in Lebanon.

Speaking Monday night to a gathering of the National Strategy Information Center, a private research group, McFarlane said the U.S. response to anti-American terrorism should not be limited to targeting terrorists but to the nations which sponsor them as well.

"We should be prepared to direct a proportional military response against bona fide military targets in a state which directs terrorist actions against us," he said.

McFarlane did not link his speech to the latest wave of terrorist violence in Lebanon, where gunmen kidnapped a British journalist on Monday. In addition, a Frenchman who directs a cultural center in Tripoli has been missing since last Saturday, an apparent kidnapping.

But in what appeared to be a reference to anti-U.S. terrorism in Lebanon, McFarlane said there is "sufficient evidence that radical Shiite terrorists are responsive to Iranian guidance for us to hold Tehran responsible for such attacks against U.S. citizens, property and interests."

The statement reflects the U.S. belief that a Shiite group operating in Lebanon — reportedly with Iranian backing — was responsible for the car bomb attacks on American Embassy installations in Beirut and the bombing of the Marine garrison at Beirut airport in October 1983.

As many as eight foreigners are believed to have been kidnapped in Lebanon in the past two weeks. No clues have emerged to the whereabouts of any of the victims, who include American journalist Terry A. Anderson, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press; three Britons and two French diplomats. Two other French citizens are missing and feared kidnapped.

Anonymous telephone callers have claimed responsibility for all the recent kidnappings, as well as the abductions of four other Americans missing in west Beirut, in the name of a group called Jihad Islami, or Islamic Holy War.

In his speech, McFarlane also said nothing has occurred in recent years to modify the U.S. view, outlined during the early months of the Reagan administration, that the Soviet Union sponsors terrorist activities as well.

Under questioning, however, he said the United States has no independent evidence that Moscow had a role in the 1981 attempt on the life of Pope John Paul II.

McFarlane's speech represented the strongest U.S. statement on the terrorism issue in recent months.

"We must be free to consider an armed strike against terrorists and those who support them where elimination or moderation of the threat does not appear to be feasible by any other means," he said.

"Many countries, including the United States, have the specific forces we need to carry out operations against terrorist groups. If we do not use those forces where they are clearly justified, we get neither the direct benefits nor the deterrent value of having such forces in the first place," he said.

McFarlane said use of force must be an option even if it threatens innocent bystanders who are being used as a shield by terrorists.

"This fact clearly must be of deep concern to us as we choose appropriate instruments of response in each case," he said.

"Yet we cannot let it freeze us into paralysis. That is exactly what the terrorists expect. Just as we will not bargain with terrorists ... we cannot and will not abstain from forcible action to prevent, preempt or respond to terrorist acts where conditions merit the use of force."

CBS Says Soviets Bugged Typewriters In Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even the typewriters were bugged at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow, where Soviet eavesdropping may have seriously comprised highly classified information, a television network reported.

According to CBS News, the bugged typewriters were in use from 1962 until the operation was uncovered in 1984.

"For at least one year and probably longer, the American Embassy in Moscow was the victim of a sophisticated electronic spy operation which gave Soviet leaders an inside look at what U.S. diplomats were doing and planning," CBS correspondent David Martin said Monday.

A State Department spokesman, Joseph Reap, said when asked about the CBS report, "We do not comment on alleged intelligence activities."

Citing unnamed "informed sources," CBS said Soviet agents secretly installed tiny sensing devices in about a dozen embassy typewriters.

"The devices picked up the contents of documents typed by embassy secretaries and transmitted them to antennas hidden in the embassy walls," it said. "The antennas, in turn, relayed the signals to a listening post outside the embassy."

CBS quoted one intelligence officer as saying the potential compromise of sensitive information should be viewed with "considerable seriousness."

"Another intelligence expert said no one knows for sure how many or what secrets were compromised. A third official called the entire affair a fiasco," the report said.

It added that intelligence specialists now believe Moscow was running an earlier version of the eavesdropping operation. An antenna discovered during the cleanup after a 1978 fire at the Moscow embassy "now appears to have been part of that earlier operation," CBS said.

In past years, U.S. security officers assigned to Moscow have had to cope with a wide variety of Soviet snooping efforts targeted on the embassy.

FORECAST FOR WED. MARCH 27, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: This is a very unusual day. Most everyone is in a restless and vivacious mood and there will be upsets and sudden changes that need to be taken in their stride.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) If you adopt a new stance and make new contacts, you will be able to make greater progress today.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Discussions with experts in business will give you a good idea how to handle some important matter well.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) A partner can give you fine ideas even though he is impatient and likes to make changes on a moment's notice.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Be more steady at handling your work and don't procrastinate so much. A co-worker has a good idea.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You may get a surprise invitation from a friend, but be sure to accept it since it may bring you a wonderful time you had not expected.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Some outside affair could be changed which would disturb family relationships, if you permit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Some new plan may seem outrageous, but it is the best way to make progress at this time. A sudden trip may be in the offing.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Monetary affairs may take on a different perspective than you thought, but accept since it enures to your benefit.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) A partner may not finish what has been started and this could upset you, but be patient and you get right results.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) A good friend needs your help with some problem, so give it, though you may have to put aside work for while.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Plan to bring good friends together with your mate and have a delightful time together this evening.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your family is interested in some outside projects, so be of assistance to them. A bigwig may enter your abode with good results.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can quickly handle any emergencies that may arise and will be very inventive, so plan for a fine education to make the most of these fine talents. Show how important it is to complete one task before taking on another, and once this is learned, there is no limit to success.

At BB&T, The Quality Comes Through.

When more and more banks seem preoccupied by the idea of crossing state lines, we thought you might appreciate hearing from a bank that calls North Carolina home and not just home base.

Our overriding interest is in delivering the highest quality financial services to the people in North Carolina in ways that offer the best overall value.

A case in point is UVEST® Brokerage Services. UVEST was designed as a way for our customers to save up to 70% in brokerage commissions.

With toll free service, UVEST provides up-to-the-minute market information as well as prompt execution of trades.

But it's what UVEST doesn't have that's really impressive.

UVEST commissions are up to 70% lower than those of most brokerage houses. And since the brokers receive no commissions, you'll find you're never under any pressure to buy anything.

UVEST is available by itself or as a part of a much more comprehensive personal financial plan we call OMNI BANKING.

OMNI BANKING supplies a wide range of financial services designed to facilitate, not only your day-to-day banking, but also your long-term financial planning.

Every element of OMNI BANKING is of the highest quality. You receive, for example, interest-earning checking with checks designed to identify you as a special customer.

You have access to a pre-arranged line of credit at prime rate for your personal use. We even provide a special personal financial review to assist you in analyzing your financial objectives and devising strategies to meet them.

And that's just a sampling. At BB&T, we realize that the quality of the service is inseparable from the quality of the person who renders it.

That's why we place such importance on the attitude of our people. It's an attitude that's reflected, for example, in our deeper commitment to understanding the full range of your long-term financial needs.

It becomes apparent, too, in our responsiveness to your requests. Because we know that, in today's fast changing world, your requirements will become ever more varied and complex in the future.

Finally, the BB&T attitude is evident in the kinds of insight we can provide. Because we realize that, the more insight we can provide for you, the more rewarding the relationship will be for both of us.

Come to BB&T.

And discover how the quality comes through in everything we do.

District ...

Monday's meeting of the study committee, told members land subject to ponding or light flooding and acreage designated as wetland are predominant in the medical district. While some of these areas can be upgraded to allow construction, Coffey and City Engineer Tom Tysinger said almost 300 of the medical district's 1,790 acres are not usable or are severely restricted by soil conditions. Development in those areas, located primarily in the floodway and floodplain adjoining the Tar River, is strictly regulated.

Hospital and Medical School Growth — Representatives of both PCMH and the school of medicine told committee members they expect their institutions to expand in coming years. PCMH is working on expansion of its surgery department to include a new open heart program as well as enlargement of the radiology department. A project to expand laboratory medicine facilities is still in the planning stage. And while the hospital's physical plant is expanding, so are the numbers of people who visit the complex daily. Hall estimated about 5,000 people come to the medical center each day, 52 percent from out of the county.

The ECU School of Medicine will outgrow the Brody Medical Sciences Building by 1987, Dean William Laupus told the committee in February. The structure was completed in mid 1982. According to Dr. Laupus, additional space is needed to house research animals, magnetic resonance imaging equipment and biotechnology research. Laupus added that while the amount of land left in school holdings is adequate for current expansion plans, he said it is not sufficient to handle all projected growth.

Zoning — The majority of speakers to come before the committee have said the medical complex will probably require more space than was originally projected in 1975 by Greenville's first medical study committee. The first of its kind ever attempted in Greenville, the study produced two new zoning designations — Medical Arts and Health Care, zoning classifications that comprise 20 percent of the district. Ruth Trevathan, a former member of the first study committee, told members of the current committee in March she did not feel enough acreage was zoned Medical Arts, saying: "People said then (in initial study proceedings) we'd never have enough medical arts."

County Manager Reginald Gray said he personally did not feel enough acreage was zoned for Health Care purposes in a later March meeting.

Approximately 8 percent of the district is zoned Health Care — a designation allowing such uses as hospitals, nursing homes, rehabilitation centers, sanatoriums or care homes, some types of outpatient clinics and medically related research facilities. ECU and PCMH holdings in the district, which total 100 acres, are zoned Health Care.

The basic difference between Health Care and Medical Arts zoning is that Health Care is geared more toward institutional cases where people stay and receive treatment. Medical Arts zoning encompasses doctors' offices, diagnostic centers, research labs, light industrial facilities, florist shops, restaurants and pharmaceutical concerns, to name a few. Approximately 249 acres of the district are zoned medical arts. Other zoning classifications in the area include Shopping Center (CS), 36 acres; Highway Commercial (CH), 55 acres; Downtown Commercial Fringe (CDF), 14 acres; Office and Institutional (O&I), 167 acres; Residential-Agricultural (RA-20), 300 acres, and Floodway, 78 acres.

The majority of acreage designated for commercial purposes is located along Memorial Drive and on short strips of Fifth Street near the Pitt County Office Building and on Stantonsburg Road near Doctor's Park.

Saying the committee was a third of the way through with its study, Flye commented in the Monday interview that upcoming sessions will focus on aesthetics in the district as well as development of Charlotte's University Park, a community medical center recommended as a model. Also in the works is a field trip to Chapel Hill and Durham to tour medical centers in those cities. By late spring or early summer, Flye said the committee should be conducting public hearings to hear from area residents, land owners and developers.

and refused to make any capital contributions to the partnership," said the "airplane is properly owned and operated by Carter Development;" that the personal loans at the Florida banks helped to defray development expenses for the Radisson project; that the contract between Leisure Development and "Sanjay/Carter Development provided that the contractor would be reimbursed for certain projects costs (including the crane and backhoe); and that the $10,000 per month payment as project manager "was reasonable" and was approved by the construction lender, and that "Satterfield knew and agreed to the amounts budgeted for payment to the project manager."

In the counterclaim, Carter charges that Satterfield did not make "an initial cash contribution of $550,000" as provided for when Leisure Development was formed in May of 1984 or "a capital contribution of $59,000" that was requested in August of 1984.

"As a result of Satterfield's refusal to make his required capital contributions, the partnership has had to rely upon contributions by Carter to meet certain of its obligations other than those funded by its construction loan," the counterclaim said.

The counterclaim also charges: that "Satterfield's refusals to make capital contributions and to consent to additional financing have been unlawful and unreasonable, have been in breach of the partnership agreement, and have been part of a wrongful, deliberate and malicious design by Satterfield to disrupt, impede and destroy the partnership business and to harm Carter and his affiliated entities;" and that Satterfield "has further wrongfully acted to disrupt, impede and destroy the partnership business and harm Carter by (1) publicizing false and defamatory accusations impugning the integrity and character of Carter, (2) accusing Carter of improperly diverting partnership funds for his own benefit and of improper management ... (3) characterizing the partnership as being in financial distress and (4) attacking the integrity of Sanjay and Carter Development."

Charging that "Satterfield's actions ... have had an adverse effect on the project," Carter's counterclaim asks: a decree of dissolution of the partnership; the right to continue the business of the partnership; $1 million in actual damages and $1 million in punitive damages from Satterfield (for Carter) for breach of the partnership; $1 million in actual damages and $1 million in punitive damages from Satterfield for Carter, Carter Development and Sanjay because "Satterfield's wrongful statements have been slanderous" to Carter, Carter Development and Sanjay; and $500,000 in actual damages and $500,000 in punitive damages for Carter, Carter Development and Sanjay for "tortious interference with the contractual relations and prospective economic advantage" of Carter, Carter Development and Sanjay.

Carter's answer and counterclaim also includes a motion for the addition of a third party — First Hospitality Services Inc. (a hotel management firm) and Donnie Mozingo, "the son-in-law of plaintiff Satterfield," as defendants.

The third party complaint charges that First Hospitality and Mozingo "have wrongfully combined, conspired and cooperated with Satterfield to force Carter out of the partnership;" and that First Hospitality and Mozingo "are jointly and severally liable with Satterfield" to Carter, Carter Development and Sanjay for the damages sought in the counterclaims.

Construction work is continuing on the Radisson project, and Monday, Richard Friedman, president of Plaza Hotel Management Inc, the Greenville-based management company for the Radisson, announced plans to add 200 guest rooms to the project.

The present 148 rooms now under construction are scheduled for completion this summer, and Friedman said work on the multistory tower containing the additional 200 rooms should begin before the end of the year, "hopefully within the next six months."

Warlord Offer

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Khun Sa, the notorious "opium warlord" of Burma, says he is willing to help the United States and Thailand suppress the illicit narcotics trade, the Bangkok Post reported.

The English-language daily said he made the offer in a recent interview by radio from his stronghold in Burma opposite Thailand's Chiang Rai province.

The paper also quoted him as claiming that there were no opium fields or heroin factories in areas under his control. It did not elaborate on his purported offer of help to U.S. and Thai officials.

Khun Sa's estimated 1,000-strong Shan United Army operates in rugged terrain near the Thai border.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices were mixed today amid concern over proliferating signs of weakness in corporate earnings.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.54 to 1,261.48 in the first half hour.

But losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Profit worries began to spread on Wall Street after International Business Machines said late last week that its first-quarter earnings would come in below comparable year-ago levels.

Late Monday General Electric said its first-quarter profits would fall short of expectations. Then, this morning, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing lowered its quarterly earnings projection as well.

All three companies have wide followings on Wall Street, and are components of the Dow Jones industrial average. Analysts said their estimates intensified investors' concern over evidence of slower-than-expected growth in the economy.

One problem for many companies, including the large multinationals, has been the lofty level of the dollar in foreign exchange. It has dampened demand for U.S.-made goods abroad and subjected domestic sales to increased competition from imports.

However, analysts also said a slowing economy could have some beneficial effects over the long term, by taking some pressure off interest rates and the dollar.

IBM shares, which fell 3 1/4 points Monday, held steady at 124 1/2 this morning. GE and Minnesota Mining did not trade in the early going.

On Monday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.51 to 1,259.94.

Declines outpaced advances by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 74.04 million shares, against 99.25 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .60 to 103.05. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .95 at 224.04.

Permit Denied

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Municipal authorities in Zagreb have denied a permit for the opening of a huge new mosque, saying it is an Islamic center and not a house of worship, local newspapers reported.

The city government also said the mosque, the third-largest in Europe, was illegally built with a floor area six times larger than provided for in the original building permit, the Express Politika newspaper said Monday.

The authorities said the complex would also include a movie house, a slaughter house, a sports center, and Islamic restaurant and other facilities "not permitted by regulations governing the work of religious communities," the report said.

"City Hall Notes", the City's bi-weekly radio program, is aired on WOOW Radio each Tuesday and Thursday morning at 10:25 A.M.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home tonight from 7 to 9.

In loving memory of Katie Grimes, our mother who passed away on March 26, 1984.

Dear Mother,
It seems like only yesterday that God called you away.
Your memory stays in our hearts as we think of you each day.
The happy times we shared together in many years gone by.
Seem to be more precious and sometimes even make us cry.
We're thankful for all the years we had to know and love you so.
We needn't be so sad for God will bring us together again and we'll be happy and glad.
For, mother dear, like the rose whose petals in the end must fall,
We'll see you some day in heaven
when we hear our Lord's heavenly call.

Announcing Wheat's Southeastern Growth Fund.

Over the last fifteen years, the economic growth of the Southeast has outpaced that of the rest of the nation. Population, personal income, total employment, export manufacturing, and housing have grown faster here than in the nation as a whole.

To allow a broad range of investors to take advantage of investment opportunities in this fast-growing region, we are proud to introduce the Southeastern Growth Fund.

Managed by Wheat Investment Advisors, Inc., an affiliate of Wheat, First Securities, Inc., the Southeastern Growth Fund will invest primarily in common stocks of selected companies with headquarters or principal operations in the Southeast.

The Southeastern Growth Fund offers an excellent opportunity to invest in a professionally managed and diversified portfolio. There is no initial sales charge, so all your dollars go to work immediately. The minimum initial investment is $1,000 ($250 for IRAs).

Wheat knows the Southeast. We watch it. We study it. We live in it. Let us put our knowledge and experience to work for you. Mail the coupon below, or call your nearest Wheat office today.

Knight Says He Hasn't Burned Out

By The Associated Press
If Bob Knight is suffering from burnout, the Indiana University coach says he doesn't know about it.
Knight has been on a virtual non-stop coaching merry-go-round for the past two years, going from leading the 1983-84 Hoosiers into the NCAA Tournament to guiding the United States Olympic basketball team to a runaway gold medal and back to this season's Hoosiers.
But Knight's team has been a major disappointment this year, going just 15-13, and his behavior on the sidelines has been, at times, even more volatile and unpredictable than ever before. Given Knight's previous histrionics and temper tantrums, that's saying a lot.
About blaming it on a case of burnout, however, Knight said Monday that it just isn't so.
"People that have said that have said it without really talking to me or when talking to me, haven't believed what I've said," Knight said at a news conference at Madison Square Garden where his Hoosiers will play Wednesday night in the semifinals of the National Invitation Tournament.

"I left Los Angeles the day after the final game (of the Olympics) and I went up into Montana and spent about three weeks fishing and relaxing. And I went back home and did a little work at home with recruiting and so forth, and then went back out to Montana for another three weeks on a hunting and fishing trip. I did absolutely nothing but that."
Not too taxing. And Knight didn't get down into the trenches too soon after that, either.
"Then, as practice started, I was probably less involved with actual practice," he continued. "I kind of let the assistant coaches take it and relaxed, and when we'd get into 5-on-5, I'd get involved."

No one has accused Knight of being especially aloof or detached this year, though. Instead, people have wondered if he has been too intense — witness his throwing a chair onto the court during a game last month with Purdue, which earned him a one-game suspension.
Knight claims this season hasn't been rougher or easier than any other in his 20-year coaching career.
"I've never been any more worn or less worn — no season has been more difficult or less difficult," he says. "It was a routine season in terms of the drain on me, I think."
It wasn't even the most frustrating for the man who has led Indiana to two NCAA crowns and an NIT championship.

"Frustrations can come at any time and I've been frustrated when we were undefeated, let alone seasons when we've lost games," said Knight. "The frustration to me comes from how we play."
"We started out not very good, lost to Louisville and we had Louisville down 20-9 and ended up getting beat by 12. We had Notre Dame down by six and within a matter of that same half we were down by 13 or 14."

"We got off to a 1-2 start and then played pretty well for the next 10 or 12 games, and then teams played well against us. They did the things against us they should have done, and teams in our league haven't always done that."
"Sometimes I've sat there in amazement of what's being played against us because, if I could dictate what they were going to do, many times I would have picked exactly what they were doing."
"They did a much better job playing against us this year than I think they normally have. We just couldn't get the thing going."

Which delighted people at every other school in the Big Ten, where they love to hate Bob Knight.
"I would think that if our record while I've been at Indiana had been mediocre over 14 years, there would be very few people hollering and screaming at me when I went into somebody else's arena," he said in answer to those critics. "I've been there longer than anybody else in the Big Ten and we've won much more often."

Estes Named Furman Coach

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Furman University has hired Presbyterian College basketball coach George "Butch" Estes as men's basketball coach to replace Jene Davis, who resigned March 6.
Estes comes to Furman from the NAIA school in Clinton, S.C., where he took a struggling program and turned in 20-win seasons in the last three of his five seasons on the job. Estes is Furman's 12th basketball coach.
"This for me is a dream come true," Estes said Monday. "I think any young coach aspires to have a chance to compete at the NCAA Division I level, and I'm real excited about the opportunity."
Davis resigned after three seasons at Furman. In Davis' last season, Furman went 7-21 and lost to Tennessee-Chattanooga in the first round of the Southern Conference tournament.
Estes, 36, played basketball at North Carolina and went to Citadel, where he earned a master's degree.
His Blue Hose team went 24-8

during the last season, advancing to the finals of the NAIA District 6 Tournament, where the team lost to the College of Charleston.
Estes' career coaching record is 92-63 in five seasons at Presbyterian. Before taking the Presbyterian job, Estes served stints as an assistant at The Citadel, East Carolina and Rice.
Estes is a native of High Point, N.C. and played basketball at High Point Central High School.
He said the Southern Conference is a tough league, and he's not counting on recruiting to build a team quickly.
"We'll have a team that will play hard," he said. "We'll be exciting in terms of the fast break and getting the ball up and down the floor, and I think we'll play good defense."
"One of my goals is to make sure our athletes graduate, and I think the university lends itself to that," he said. "Another goal I have is to increase the support for the entire athletic program and attendance at our basketball games."

UNC Center May Miss Deadline

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — The builder of UNC's Student Activities Center has told university officials that the sports complex may not be finished for another year.
The builder also said the construction contract must be divided into two projects if fans are going to see Tar Heel basketball games at the complex as scheduled next winter.
The portion of the arena where the UNC basketball team will play is scheduled to be finished by mid-July, said Farris Womack, vice chancellor of business and finance at the University of North Carolina. But the project contractor, the Paul N. Howard Construction Co. of Greensboro, does not expect to complete the swimming pool area until the spring of 1986, he said.
Unless the contractor and UNC agree to change the contract to allow for two separate projects, the first home game of the men's basketball season will be played in Carmichael Auditorium, which was "retired" during the Tar Heels' last home game Feb. 23, said John Swofford, UNC athletic director.

Chargers Top South West; Conley Halts Kinston, 1-0

PINETOPS — Ayden-Grifton's Chargers took a 4-0 lead in the first three innings and went on to take an 8-3 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball win over South West Edgecombe yesterday.
The Chargers took the lead in the top of the second, scoring a single run. Tony McLawhorn walked and courtesy runner Jesse Hooker stole both second and third. He scored when Mike Burnham's grounder was errored.
Ayden-Grifton came back with three more in the third, running the lead to 4-0. Shannon Peede reached on a fielder's choice, erasing an earlier runner. Eddie Brown singled and both runners took an extra base on an error. Peede then scored on a wild pitch. Gene Johnson walked and stole up, and McLawhorn sacrificed Brown over. After Frank Mills walked, Curt Tucker singled to drive in Johnson.
Ayden-Grifton went on to add one in the fourth, two in the fifth and one in the sixth for its eight run total. South West scored all three of its runs in the fifth.
The Chargers are now 3-3 overall and 1-0 in the league. They travel to Charles B. Aycock today.

and walked three as he won the pitching duel with Kinston's Felton Mason. Mason allowed but three hits, striking out six and walking one.
The lone run in the game came in the fifth inning. Amzie Hoffner led off with a triple to left field for the Vikings. The first pitch to the next batter was wild and that allowed Hoffner to streak home for a 1-0 lead that held.
No one on either team had more than one hit.

The Vikings are now 7-0 and play host to Farmville Central on Friday.

EC Runner Blames Travel Method In Evans' Death

By The Associated Press
East Carolina University track and field performer Ruben Pierce says prior to a fatal accident Sunday his teammates had often complained of having to drive school vans on trips to out-of-state track meets.
Erskine Evans, 21, was killed and eight team members, including Pierce, were injured Sunday after one of two vans carrying athletes flipped over en route to Greenville from the Georgia Relays at Athens, Ga. The accident occurred at 1:50 a.m. on U.S. 264 in Wilson County about 18 miles west of Wilson, according to Bob Helmick, ECU associate athletic director.
Pierce, who made his comments to a Fayetteville newspaper, said teammate Kenneth Daugherty was driving the van at the time of the accident.
"We'd complained about it before," said Pierce, a member of the ECU 400-meter relay team. "I guess it takes somebody to die from this to realize that something should be done about it."

ECU Chancellor Dr. John Howell told The Fayetteville Times the athletes usually alternate with not more than one person driving more than two hours.
"They're adults. They have their driver's licenses," Howell said.
Track and field coach Bill Carson said a designated driver practice was normal procedure and had been during the 18 years he had coached at East Carolina.
"We don't do anything else that somebody else doesn't do," Carson said. "Everybody does it that way ... If you're rested up, you can go an hour and a half. I don't think the boy was asleep. We had just changed (drivers) at Asheboro and we were going to change again at Wilson."
Pierce said Daugherty had been driving "no more than an hour" when the accident occurred.
Pierce, along with teammates David Parker of Roanoke, Va., and Phillip Estes of Charlottesville, Va., were treated and released Sunday from Wilson Memorial Hospital.

Evans, a junior who ran high school track for Greenville Rose, died about 11 a.m. Sunday in Pitt Memorial Hospital of massive head injuries, said Patty McRae, nursing administrator.
"I think we should have a bus driver," said Pierce, who was riding in the front passenger-side of the van next to Daugherty. "Since I've been a freshman we've done it like that (student-athletes taking rotations behind the wheel when driving to and from meets). You wouldn't think you'd have to drive in college after running (in a meet)."
Pierce said just before the accident occurred that he had said to Daugherty, "Just 54 miles to go." Pierce said when the van started to veer to the right of the road, he yelled Kenneth's name. Pierce said Daugherty had dozed off at the wheel.
Daugherty then yanked the van back to the left, according to Pierce, and the swerving vehicle flipped over on its side three and a half times.
"When we started flipping," Pierce said, "I just stuck my face into my pillow. I worried when we started flipping. But when we stopped, I figured since I was OK everybody else was, too."
He said Evans apparently had been thrown out onto the highway during one of the flips of the van.
Pierce, who said his injuries included a pulled groin, a hip pointer and a bruised back, said he will not run again with the track team this season. Carson said the students involved in the accident will withdraw from school for the remainder of the semester to avoid falling behind in their studies.
At this point, only two or three people will compete for the ECU track team through the remainder of the season, Pierce said.
"I'll probably run next year," he said. "I know I won't ever again if we (the athletes) have to drive."

Rose Girls In Easy Win; Valkyries Nip E. Wayne

STANTONSBURG — Keya Spell captured both of the weight throws as Rose High School's girls' track team rolled up a 95-26 victory over Wilson Beddingfield yesterday.
Beddingfield had the only other double winner of the day with Kim Austin taking the long jump and the 100-meter hurdles.

ROUND BALL BREAK — Gov. Jim Martin sometimes has a schedule that just doesn't allow breaks. But Monday was a little different, as he took the time out to get in a little one-on-one basketball with his son, Ben, outside the Executive Mansion. (AP Laserphoto—

Senate Panel Draws Input On Tax Credit For Gasohol

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Fuels made with alcohol deserve no better treatment than gasoline, opponents of a tax break for gasohol say, but supporters warn that repealing the reduction could backfire if another oil shortage hits.

"We believe that competing fuels should be treated equally and that competitive market forces should be allowed to direct them to their most economic use," said Neal Menefee, area marketing manager for Exxon Co., during a Senate Finance subcommittee hearing Monday.

"What happened in the 1970s could happen again," responded Howard Kramer, lobbyist for Southland Corp. Should the Iran-Iraq war disrupt Western oil shipments, there could be another shortage, he said.

At issue is a bill that would repeal a 5-cent per gallon tax exemption on the sale, distribution and use of alcohol fuels, including "gasohol," which is 90 percent lead-free gasoline and 10 percent ethyl alcohol.

The bill would take effect July 1, the date on which the current exemption on fuels made with North Carolina products is scheduled to be expanded to cover fuels made with out-of-state materials. Sponsored by Rep. Gerald Anderson, D-Craven, the bill easily passed the House but encountered sharp protests before the Senate Finance Committee.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, chairman of the subcommittee studying the bill, said he hoped action would be taken this week.

Anderson told the subcommittee the exemption was supposed to lure alcohol-fuel producing companies to North Carolina.

Instead, the exemption has encouraged the importation of foreign-made ethanol, he said. The U.S. imported 170 million gallons of ethanol last year, including 136 million from Brazil, he said.

"How is that helping North Carolina and our government?" said Anderson. "No one's subsidizing my business or your business; why should we subsidize them?"

The bill would allow anyone building a plant to claim a 20 percent tax exemption, plus another 1 percent if the plant used alternative fuels.

Bill Horton, president of Diversified Fuels Inc., said repeal of the exemption would jeopardize a $150 million ethanol-producing plant he is constructing in Selma that would create 500 jobs.

A major oil company close to agreeing to market fuel from the plant would back off if the tax break were repealed, Horton said. Former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten, representing Horton, said he had "based his (plant's) whole existence" on the break.

Transportation Secretary Jim Harrington, citing estimates that the tax break could cost the state's highway fund $35.7 million over two years, which he called "a very definite cloud on the horizon."

That much money represents one-third of the total appropriation for secondary roads one-fourth of the funds the state must allocate to match federal grants, and resurfacing of 1,000 miles of roads, said Harrington.

The House approved 77-31 and sent to the Senate a bill under which a state employee in arrears to the state would have each paycheck docked by 10 percent until the debt is paid.

One-Lane Road Best For Trucks

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Trucking officials say despite the slow going, they prefer a temporary one-lane road carved into a mountain on Interstate 40 over detour roads around two tunnels blocked by a rockslide.

"They're holding down their speed to about 20 miles an hour. And they're supposed to have a trooper over there 24 hours a day. It's just a temporary bypass," Buddy Smith, terminal manager for Roadway Express Inc. in Asheville, said Monday.

A rock slide that sent 40,000 tons of box-car sized boulders tumbling down the mountain March 4 crushed the entrance to one I-40 tunnel, blocked another and left the roadway buried.

Assistant Highway Administrator Billy Rose estimates it will cost $1 million to clean up the slide and repair the damage to I-40. North Carolina has requested special federal funds to cover the cost.

The temporary bypass road built by state Department of Transportation crews opened Saturday. The temporary road is between the eastbound tunnel and the sheer drop-off into the river below.

"Eastbound traffic is using that road and westbound traffic is crossing over and going through the tunnel that used to be for eastbound traffic," said Ervin Shepherd, road manager for ABF Freight in Asheville.

Before the temporary section was completed, traffic between Knoxville, Tenn., and Asheville was detoured onto U.S. 25-70, a narrow, winding road that some truckers described as "no better than a mule trail."

Three tractor-trailers fell into ravines along winding detours, killing two North Carolina men and seriously injuring another. In each case, the rear wheels of the rigs slipped over the side of the road, which was not designed for longer trailer rigs.

Shepherd said the detour added only 40 miles to the trip, but it took far longer in terms of time and stress on drivers and equipment.

Even with the delays on the bypass, truckers are happy they'll no longer have to use the detour.

"It's a big help," Shepherd said.

Traffic snarls plagued the town of Hot Springs, a headache for Sheriff E.Y. Ponder, who Monday said detour traffic is down 90 percent since Saturday, when the temporary section opened.

"This road just wasn't prepared to carry that kind of traffic," Ponder said. "We'd be glad to have a road that could take the traffic."

Wachovia BankLineSM

The prime-based line of credit up to $50,000 or more that's as easy to use as writing a check.

There's no easier way to borrow in North Carolina than Wachovia BankLine, a prearranged line of credit up to $50,000. Simply write a check — at any time, for any amount up to your credit limit.

BankLine is inexpensive, too. The interest you pay is tied to Wachovia's Prime Rate.* And unlike most banks, Wachovia bases your interest rate on your credit line, not the amount you borrow.

Wachovia also offers Equity BankLine, a line of credit of $10,000 or more based on the equity you have in your home. There are no loan origination fees, although the normal mortgage loan closing expenses apply when the line is established and at every 10-year anniversary.

BankLine	Your credit line:	Your interest rate:	APR for February is:
(unsecured or secured with liquid assets)	$10,000 or more	Prime + 1%	11.50%
	$ 5,000 to $9,999	Prime + 1½%	12.00%
	$ 2,500 to $4,999	Prime + 2½%	13.00%
Equity BankLine	$10,000 or more	Prime + 2%	12.50%
(secured by real estate)

Your rate may vary monthly. If the Prime Rate goes down, so does your interest rate. But no matter how high the Prime Rate should go, under present North Carolina law the maximum Annual Percentage Rate (APR) you will be charged on unsecured lines is 18%; on secured lines, 15%. The minimum rate is 8% APR.

Talk to a Personal BankerSM soon about BankLine. Find out how easy and inexpensive borrowing can be.

Wachovia
Bank & Trust

*"Prime Rate" refers to that interest rate set by the Bank from time to time as an interest rate basis for commercial and consumer borrowings. The Prime Rate is one of several interest rate bases used by the Bank. The Bank lends at interest rates above and below the Prime Rate.

Actress Is The Marrying Kind

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Leigh Taylor-Young, a veteran of two unsuccessful marriages, has discovered that she is the marrying kind, after all — as a minister, not a bride.

"I just love marrying people," says Ms. Taylor-Young, 40, who has married off about a dozen couples since she was ordained several years ago under the tutelage of American spiritual teacher John-Roger.

The actress, who played in "I Love You, Alice B. Toklas" and "Soylent Green," says, however, that she only performs marriages for friends and that she is concentrating once again on her acting career.

Since giving up movie-making the mid-1970s, she has lived in New York, New Mexico, Europe and at an ashram, or Hindu monastery, in the Himalayan foothills.

Back on the West Coast, she has made two unreleased movies, "Secret Admirers" and "The Jagged Edge."

She was married to actor Ryan O'Neal and Columbia Pictures production chief Guy McElwaine.

Arts Awards

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Lena Horne, artist Willem de Kooning and writer Isaac Bashevis Singer were among 12 recipients of the Governor's Arts Awards.

The winners, announced Monday by Gov. Mario Cuomo and Kitty Carlisle Hart, chairman of New York State Council on the Arts, will receive their awards May 1 at a ceremony at the Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Others named included Sidney Lumet, director of "The Verdict," "The Pawnbroker," "Fort Apache, the Bronx" and other films, and Brooke Astor, who as president of the Vincent Astor Foundation has directed more than $130 million to social and cultural projects.

'Amadeus' Tops Oscars With Eight Awards; Sally Field Best Actress

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Amadeus," a soaring drama of rivalry and a celebration of Mozart's musical genius, waltzed off with eight Oscars, five more than its closest competitor, the true life Cambodian war story "The Killing Fields."

Sally Field claimed her second Oscar for best actress as the courageous farmer in "Places in the Heart," at a streamlined Academy Awards ceremony Monday night televised to most of the world, including China for the first time.

"The Killing Fields" took home three Oscars, with the victory of Haing S. Ngor, a Cambodian refugee, marking an emotional high point in the presentations.

Ngor, who endured torture in his homeland which mirrored the agonies of his movie role as an assistant to a newspaper reporter, held his Oscar aloft in declared, "This is unbelievable. But so is my entire life."

The 57th awards went down in history as one of the shortest ever: three hours, five minutes — 40 minutes less than last year's marathon telecast. Recipients, hounded by red warning lights and threats that the orchestra would cut them off if they exceeded the 45-second time limit, kept acceptance speeches short.

"A Passage to India" and "Places in the Heart" each won two Oscars. The all-time top Oscar winner was "Ben-Hur" with 11 in 1959.

Best actor of the year, F. Murray Abraham of "Amadeus," told the TV audience of an estimated one billion viewers: "It would be a lie if I told you I didn't know what to say because I've been working on this speech for 25 years," but he said none of those speeches fit the time limit.

Abraham, 45, who portrayed Mozart's jealous rival, Salieri, expressed regret that he could not share the Oscar with co-star and fellow nominee Tom Hulce, who played the eighteenth-century Austrian composer.

"There's only one thing that is missing for me tonight and that is to have Tom Hulce standing by my side," he said.

Miss Field, 37, claiming her second Oscar for best actress as the courageous farm woman of "Places in the Heart," accepted her award through tears.

"This means so much more to me this time," she said. "I think the first time I hardly felt it because it was so new."

She won in 1979, portraying another strong-willed woman in "Norma Rae."

The gowned, bejeweled and tuxedo-clad crowd at the Los Angeles Music Center gave a standing ovation to veteran actor James Stewart, recipient of an honorary Oscar presented by Cary Grant.

With typical modesty, Stewart, 76, thanked his colleagues and movie audiences, saying: "You've given me a wonderful life. God bless you."

Best supporting actress winner Dame Peggy Ashcroft, the charismatic English visitor of "A Passage to India," was absent, having remained in England for the funeral of her friend, Sir Michael Redgrave. Her award was accepted by Angela Lansbury.

The 77-year-old Ms. Ashcroft, recently seen in TV's "Jewel In The Crown," once said, "I've never really wanted to be a film star. It seems to lead only to tax problems."

The only best-picture nominee to end the night without any Oscars was "A Soldier's Story."

The widely predicted "Amadeus" sweep began early in the show with awards for makeup, sound, art direction, costume design and screenplay adapted by Peter Shaffer from his own play.

Milos Forman, the director who guided the Czech-made Orson picture, hailed the collaboration of artists in Czechoslovakia, saying, "This kind of recognition is encouraging for more than box-office reasons."

Forman, 52, who won the best director Oscar in 1976 for "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," left his native Czechoslovakia 16 years ago. "Amadeus" was his first film there since he became a U.S. citizen.

The award for best foreign-language film went to "Dangerous Moves," a Swiss film about a chess match.

A new generation of superstars was represented with Oscar winners in the music categories. Prince claimed an Oscar for best score, "Purple Rain," and Stevie Wonder for best song, "I Just Called To Say I Love You" from "The Woman In Red."

Prince, wearing a blue sequined hooded outfit, came onstage with two members of his band and declared, "I could never have imagined this in my wildest dreams."

Wonder, the much-honored blind musician, expressed surprise at the award and told the audience, "From my heart, I love you."

Maurice Jarre, who won the Oscar for best original musical score for "A Passage To India," drew laughs when he commented, "I was lucky Mozart was not eligible this year."

Oscar's Production Receives An Award

LOS ANGELES (AP) — And the winner is: the 57th annual Academy Awards presentation for the best, the most entertaining and shortest Oscar show in memory.

What a contrast to the bloated and tedious shows of recent years.

It zipped along.

It was witty, imaginative, sparkling and original.

From Haing S. Ngor's touching acceptance as best supporting actor for "The Killing Fields" to Sally Field's teary, emotional thank you for her second Oscar as best actress for "Places in the Heart," it was a show that pleased.

It was as exuberant as "Amadeus," the night's big winner with eight Oscars.

Monday night's show should win back the audience that drifted away during 1984's marathon three-hour, 45-minute production.

According to the Nielsen ratings, last year's show attracted 25.7 million households and a 50 percent share of the audience, down from 32.3 households and a 59 share in 1983.

The worldwide audience this year was estimated at 1 billion, although not all saw it live.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences decided to take over the production reins after a single individual in the academy produced it last year.

They promised to bring in a show under three hours. They almost made it.

Sir Laurence Olivier shortened it a little when he dispensed with listing the best movie nominees, simply announcing "Amadeus" as the winner, and it was three hours, five minutes when host Jack Lemmon called it "a wrap."

Hendon Says Garwood May Help Locate MIAs

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Maps, names, dates, locations and other information provided by ex-Marine Pvt. Robert Garwood enhances his story that captured American soldiers may be alive in Southeast Asia, U.S. Rep. Bill Hendon says.

"The credibility of what Garwood has said here is enhanced by what he supplied the (Wall Street) Journal, which was a virtual carbon copy of information that has been in possession of our intelligence agencies for some time, showing a large number of (American POWs) being held alive and captive at a specific location as late as 1982, based on information given by a source that passed two government administered lie detector tests," Hendon said Monday.

He said he would not "divulge anything specific" about Garwood's material.

In a press conference last Friday in Washington, Garwood said he had dropped a request for immunity from further prosecution and had given Hendon information on living American POWs.

Hendon, R-N.C., said he examined the information Sunday and confirmed that Garwood's material contained maps and other materials compiled by Garwood.

The former Marine told the Wall Street Journal in December he knew of living American POWs in Vietnam in the late 1970s.

Pentagon officials have said that there have been no American prisoners alive in Southeast Asia since the early 1970s.

Garwood was captured in Vietnam in 1965 and returned to this country in 1979. He was convicted of collaboration in a court-martial at Camp Lejeune, but acquitted of desertion.

Garwood, who said he worked as a mechanic fixing Vietnamese military vehicles, told the Journal he saw as many as 70 Americans alive at two prison camps in Hanoi and saw a boxcar carrying POWs moving through North Vietnam. Garwood has also said he is willing to visit Vietnam with American search teams to prevent the Vietnamese from sanitizing information and misguiding team members.

Hendon said Garwood's packet "may well assist in bringing our POWs home" and said he is "trying to reach the newly appointed chairman of the MIA-POW task force for further discussion."

Fiancee Upset By Court's Denial Of Bailey Appeal

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Evangeline Grant Redding says she hasn't given up hope that her fiance, James Briley, will be freed despite the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to let stand the convicted killer's scheduled April 18 electrocution.

"We are going to seek a new trial for him, based on the fact that he is innocent," Ms. Redding said Monday. "I think if this country really stands for justice and freedom for all, we are going eventually to see him walk out freely and not be executed."

But the 44-year-old Halifax woman acknowledged her disappointment in the high court's ruling.

"I am an angry black woman this morning," Ms. Redding said. "It's very disappointing, but I'm sure that he's not surprised considering the conservative nature of the Supreme Court."

Ms. Redding, a free-lance writer, is scheduled to marry Briley on Friday at the State Penitentiary in Richmond, Va. Briley, 28, is scheduled to die for his part in the 1979 killings of a pregnant woman and her 5-year-old son.

"Whether there will be other legal proceedings (before the execution date) I don't know," said Gerald T. Zerkin, a lawyer who represented Briley's appeal.

Zerkin said he was uncertain what the inmate's defense lawyers would do next but said one option would be appealing to Virginia Gov. Charles S. Robb for clemency.

"I'm aware of no legal impediment to prevent the execution from being carried out," said a spokesman for Virginia Attorney General Gerald L. Baliles.

Briley was one of three brothers who, with a friend, engaged in a series of murders in the Richmond area in 1979. The group was linked to 11 killings.

Monday's decision involved Briley's role in a triple-murder in which Judy Barton, who was eight months pregnant, was raped and shot in the head four times; her child, Harvey Barton, and the boy's father, Harvey W. Wilkerson, also were shot in the head.

Briley is a younger brother of Linwood E. Briley, who police called the leader of the gang. Linwood Briley was executed last Oct. 12 for the murder of John H. Gallaher, a Richmond disc jockey.

Another brother, Anthony Briley, received a life term plus 119 years in prison for his part in four murders.

"The people of Virginia and this country should be concerned about the conspiracy against the Briley brothers and the violent system that allows people to be imprisoned and murdered by the state," said Ms. Redding, who said she was going to Richmond Monday afternoon to prepare for the wedding.

Ms. Redding, who is writing a book on Briley, said she had not talked to her fiance since the court ruling.

Linwood and James Briley participated in the largest death row escape in U.S. history last year, in which six inmates broke out of the Mecklenburg Correctional Center near Boydton, Va., on May 31. The Brileys were the last to be recaptured. They were arrested in Philadelphia last June 19.

The appeal rejected Monday did not challenge Briley's convictions, but argued that jurors were not given a "clear explanation" of how they should consider mitigating circumstances.

Workers Challenge State Firing Policy

RALEIGH (AP) — State government will become "a barren place" if changes aren't made in policy governing the hiring and firing of state workers, says the head of the North Carolina State Employees Association.

"I firmly believe that we are going to reap what we sow," said Butch Gunnells, the 12,000-member association's executive director. "If we do nothing but wage war every time a new administration comes in we're going to make state government a barren place to come and stay."

More than 100 state employees have been dismissed under Republican Gov. Jim Martin, swept up in the wake of changing administrations from Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt.

Some lawmakers are proposing changes in the state personnel system that exposes more than 19,000 of 50,000 state workers to possible political firing or demotion without rights to a hearing or appeal.

"It's a moment that we won't have again soon, I expect," Gunnells said. "It's a rare opportunity to really make a legitimate change and a change that would make career service in state government a lofty goal and be something that would encourage people to come to work for the state."

Some blame the problem on a series of changes to the 1949 State Personnel Act, which outlines grievance procedures. The act exempted certain employees from such protection, mainly elected officials, their chief assistants and those with less than six months' service.

In 1975, the Legislature raised the number of exemptions to include employees in "policy-making positions." That affects about 1,700 workers.

Under Hunt, the number of exemptions rose when the 1977 General Assembly extended the probationary period for state employment. That means more than 17,400 workers — all those with less than five years — find their jobs unprotected.

A survey of a dozen states by the Institute of Government at the University of North Carolina found North Carolina's five-year probation was by far the longest. The period in the other states ranged from six months to a year.

But there are signs that North Carolina's law could undergo further changes.

Two senators recently introduced a bill to cut the probationary period to two years. And Rep. Margaret Stamey, D-Wake, said she might enter a bill next week to reduce that period even more. Her bill also would try to make clear what policy-making positions are.

"The thrust of our legislation is to have truly policy-making positions established and clearly define that these 17,000 (employees) out here don't belong in that category and never should have been in that category," said Ms. Stamey, who chairs the State Personnel Committee.

"The way to act is now, too many people are vulnerable," she said. "We are the largest employer in the state. You know you cannot attract and keep employees who feel vulnerable."

Report Contends Catholic Schools Have Improved

WASHINGTON (AP) — A parochial education group today unveiled an unusual portrait of America's Catholic high schools, once burdened with a second-class image and now basking in a reputation for academic rigor.

The study by the National Catholic Educational Association was funded by the Ford Foundation and carries a preface by former Education Secretary T.H. Bell, who said, "Many educators have been unaware of the tremendous contribution of Catholic schools."

The 254-page report, "The Catholic High School: A National Portrait," provides "a picture of Catholic secondary schools which has not previously existed," Bell said.

The study chronicles the sweeping changes in the faculties of the nation's 1,464 Catholic high schools, which enroll nearly 1 million students.

"In 1962, 69 percent of Catholic high school teachers were priests, brothers or sisters," the report said. Today, they account for only 23 percent of Catholic high school teachers.

Eleven percent of the students are non-Catholic, and nearly 18 percent belong to minority groups. Only 28 percent of the schools ran deficits in 1982-83, although tuition — typically $1,230 a year — covers only two-thirds of their expenses.

The report "will be good news to many — particularly educators whose memories stretch back to the 1960s, when Catholic high schools were popularly viewed as second-class, second-rate and a pale copy of what good education was all about," the association said. The schools then "were accused of being too small, too 'religious' and too sheltered from the world."

But the report also pinpoints some financial weak points, spotlights a high turnover rate among teachers and concludes that educating the handicapped "is not a high priority in most Catholic high schools."

A controversial report by sociologist James Coleman in 1981 concluded that Catholic high schools outperformed public schools, even when differences in family background were discounted. Some critics have challenged Coleman's findings.

The new report is based on a survey of all Catholic high school principals in September 1983. Some 910, or 62 percent, of the principals completed the 56-page questionnaire.

Among its findings: —83 percent of the Catholic high school graduates go on to college, compared with 52 percent of all graduates. More than 80 percent of the students are on the college preparatory track, while only 10 percent follow a business or vocational course of study and 9 percent are on a general track. In public schools, 46 percent are on the academic track, 43 percent general and 11 percent vocational.

—Thirty-one percent of all students in 1982 came from families with incomes below $20,000; 34 percent from those earning $20,000 to $30,000, and 35 percent from those earning more than $30,000. Only 6 percent came from families earning less than $10,000; 11 percent of all U.S. students' families earned that little.

—Black enrollment in Catholic schools (7 percent) was lower than in public schools, but Hispanic enrollment (8 percent) was higher.

—54 percent of the Catholic teachers have five years of experience or less; only 8 percent of public high school teachers have less than five years' experience. The average starting salary is $11,121, compared to more than $14,000 in public schools.

—In 1962, 49 percent of the Catholic faculty were nuns; today they comprise only 14 percent.

The report said that, for many students and parents, the reason for attending Catholic schools is their climate. "The traditional qualities of concern for academic excellence, the emphasis on order and discipline, and the infusion of school life with an emphasis on religious attitudes, activities and values are precisely what attract them."

It said schools with a high proportion of lay teachers "place slightly less emphasis on student religious development."

The schools typically require 3½ years of religion courses, and most schools start half or more of all their classes with a prayer. Fifty-eight percent require even non-Catholic students to attend liturgical functions.

The report also said students who enter Catholic high schools "are more academically motivated than students entering public schools."

The St. Marys Catholic Foundation helped pay for publication and distribution of the report.

Opening lead: Jack of ♦.

So far, it had been a lean year for Trump Coup Tommy. Suits had been breaking well and he had been botching more than his usual quota of contracts. In addition, his fellow club members had learned not to double him in those cases where they held a lot of trumps. As our readers are aware, Tommy is a duffer at the table except in those rare cases where trumps are stacked. Things began to turn when a stranger came to town and visited the bridge club. Unaware of Tommy's peculiar talents, he doubled him at four hearts. At the best of times that would not be a smart tactic—it was unlikely that East could defeat the contract more than one trick. In exchange for a measly 100 points, he brought out the beast in Tommy.

West led the jack of clubs. The stranger captured dummy's queen with the ace and shifted to the queen of diamonds. Tommy won on the table and, had there been no double, the correct play would have been a trump to the queen. But since East had advertised his trumps, Tommy finessed the ten of trumps.

As he had already lost a club trick and had at least one sure trump loser, Tommy had to hold his diamond losers to one to have any chance. So he led his singleton spade and boldly took the finesse. When that held, three diamonds were sluffed on the ace-king of spades and king of clubs. Tommy ruffed a club in hand, then exited with his remaining diamond. No matter what West returned, all Tommy had to do was ruff and exit with a trump. The defenders would then be forced to lead a trump into his ace-queen tenace, and the game was in the bag.

The Bear Facts

Recent events have renewed interest in the Soviet Union, the largest country in the world, covering one-sixth of the world's land area. The Soviet Union contains every type of climate except the distinctly tropical. Its highest point is Communism Peak, elevation 24,590 feet, located near the junction of Afghanistan and China. Slavic groups make up about 75 percent of the population. Scandinavian chieftains established the first Russian state in the 9th century.

Cremation Officially 100 Years Old

LONDON (AP) — Cremation, the preferred route to the hereafter on this crowded island, is officially 100 years old today.

With the motto "Save the Land for the Living," a society of 19th-century intellectuals led by Queen Victoria's surgeon witnessed Britain's first formal cremation in Christian times on March 26, 1885.

A century and almost 11 million cremations later, 67 percent of Britons choose the method, giving Britain the highest rate in the world. In 1940, only 3.8 percent of Britons decided to have their remains incinerated instead of buried.

Britain's first official cremation was at Woking Crematorium in southern England. The crematorium chose to celebrate the anniversary today with a religious ceremony for members of the Cremation Society of Great Britain.

Weyerhaeuser Strike Results In Violence

By The Associated Press

A union leader warned that "things may get rough" after a striking woodworker was struck and injured by an independently owned tractor-trailer rig entering a Weyerhaeuser Co. plant in Oklahoma.

A strike over wages began at midnight Monday, idling 2,300 workers at three plants in Arkansas and one in Oklahoma, said company spokesman Leon Robinette. The incident Wright City, Okla., was the only one reported Monday, he said.

At Mountain Pine, Ark., lumber truck drivers pulled into a mill without slowing down, sending strikers jumping out of their paths.

Local 5-15 of the International Woodworkers of America set up pickets at the four plants following the failure of the union and the company to agree on a wage package for a new contract.

An empty truck entering the Wright City plant to pick up a load of lumber struck Joe Rymer, 34, of Wright City, Robinette said.

Rymer was taken to a local hospital, where his injuries were said to be not serious, the company spokesman said. Union officials, however, sent Rymer to a hospital at Paris, Texas, for further examination.

Though the truck that hit Rymer was not owned by the company, one union official said the incident could have severe consequences.

"We told the company we wanted a peaceful walkout, and now this happens. Things may get rough," said Elmer Miller, a bargaining-team member who said he was with Rymer when he was hit.

In Arkansas, pickets also went up at company operations at De Queen and Dierks.

Rape Charge Is Reinstated

PITTSBURGH (AP) — A judge who dismissed a rape charge against a man because the 13-year-old alleged victim arrived for court late has reversed his decision in the wake of courthouse protests and a backlash of public criticism.

"I think it's terrific," Carol McCullough, president of the South Hills Chapter of the National Organization of Women, said Monday after Judge J. Quint Salmon reinstated the rape charge against Geoffrey Adams, 27, of Pittsburgh.

"The attorneys are reviewing the jammed up trial list to determine when the case can be retried," Salmon said. "It will be retried as early as possible."

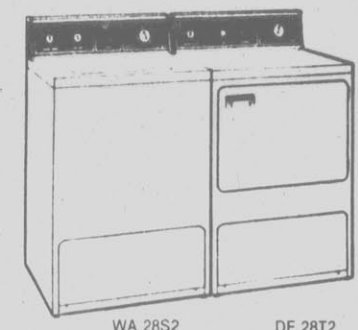

Adams was accused of beating and raping a 13-year-old girl in the back of a car. When the alleged victim and her mother were delayed in traffic and arrived at court between 15 and 30 minutes late, Salmon dismissed the case, saying it was the prosecutor's responsibility to bring witnesses to court on time.

Protesters responded by picketing the courthouse and Salmon's home.

Salmon, 77, a retired Beaver County judge who works when needed in Allegheny County to ease the court's backlog, declined to say whether the protests persuaded him to reinstate the case.

"I will say that the demonstrations are obviously an organized attempt on someone's part to try to influence me, and that is against the law," he said.
