Tornado Anniversary May Stir Emotions

By SUSAN TACKER
Reflector Staff Writer

One year ago tomorrow, a tornado twisted through Lenoir, Pitt and Greene counties. It left nine dead, over 100 injured, and millions of dollars worth of property damaged. Many of those surviving experienced emotional difficulties.

Called Post-traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) by publications from the American Psychiatric Association, symptoms can show up immediately after the disaster or can surface months or even years afterwards. And people involved in the tornado could likely suffer an "anniversary reaction" one year later, right when they feel they've gotten their lives back on track, the association says.

The symptoms of PTSD range from recurrent, intrusive thoughts of the tornado, nightmares, loss of the ability to enjoy activities that were once enjoyed, and sleep disturbances, to hyperalertness, loss of the ability to feel emotions, impaired memory, difficulty concentrating or finishing tasks, or painful guilt feelings about surviving when some didn't.

Leslie Parker, a Pitt County Mental Health Center social worker with Tornado FOCUS (Followup and Community Support), said it's important to remember that it is normal to have a reaction to a disaster. Support groups formed to "allow individuals to come together to talk about their experiences and to share stories," according to Ms. Parker. "A lot of people felt really isolated. They felt like nobody else knew what they had been through, or that nobody cared. Some felt like their relatives and friends were tired of hearing about it. The group gives them a chance to talk about it. They can tell their story as many times as they want to, and they find out that they're not alone in their feelings."

Children also show symptoms of PTSD, according to child psychiatrist and ECU associate professor of psychiatry Dr. Lesly Mega. "It's felt that younger kids aren't as affected by events as older people," said Dr. Mega. "I don't believe it, but in general, people do."

Dr. Mega and Sudhakar Madakasira, an assistant professor of psychiatry, worked in area schools in which many of the children directly affected by the tornado were enrolled. They found that although only 10 percent of the children were directly affected (they or someone in their family being hit by the tornado), 25 percent of all the children showed many symptoms of PTSD. "To be diagnosed as having PTSD these children had to have several symptoms," said Dr. Mega. "But at least half of all the children showed some symptoms."

Seventy-five percent of all the children questioned admitted to "feeling bad because other people were hurt more" than they were, and 40 percent were scared more by loud noises. Appetite changes, fear of another tornado, and fear of separation from family members were all common symptoms. "The point is," said Dr. Mega, "that you don't have to be a direct victim to have these symptoms. Even those who were not hit can."

According to Dr. Susan McCammon, assistant professor of psychology at ECU, "Lots of times people have what is called an anniversary reaction after some kind of traumatic event, like the loss of a spouse, often around a significant date. From anecdotal reports, it seems that people often re-experience some of the symptoms. They may have trouble with feeling

Start-Up Funds OK'd

Farmers Market Gets County's Final Approval

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Tuesday gave final approval for the use of a 5.19-acre site on the old County Home farm for a permanent farmers market, and approved a budget which includes up to $11,390 in county resources as start-up funds for the market's first year of operations.

As approved, the farmers market will be located at what is now the site of the county animal shelter, near the solid waste container site, on the County Home Road.

Gene Brown, representing the Pitt-Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce's agri-business committee, reported to the board that a $2,500 planning grant from the N.C. General Assembly has been used for preliminary design work on a 50- by 150-foot building. He said another $120,000 state grant will be used to build the facility and provide parking.

Another agribusiness committee representative, Malcolm Green, told commissioners that the estimated budget for first year start-up and operations amounts to $25,400, including salaries, utilities, maintenance, promotion, depreciation and contingencies.

Green said rental income for the first year is estimated at $12,210, with other income estimated at $1,800, leaving a balance of $11,390, which the board agreed to underwrite if necessary.

The dedication of the site and approval of the budget clears the way for application to be made for the $120,000 construction grant from the state department of agriculture.

Eddie West, superintendent of county schools, reported that "things are going well" toward consolidation of the city and county school systems.

West said bids on the new elementary school, to be located on the County Home Road near Bell's Fork, should be awarded in May, and said bids for the addition of 18 classrooms and other work at D.H. Conley High School and the addition of 16 classrooms and other work at North Pitt High School could be awarded as early as July.

Commissioners took no action on a request by Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Area Chamber of Commerce for "$3,000 from the county" to help fund the cost of a display board that would be used to promote Greenville as a convention and conference center.

Walker, saying that "traveling persons spend an average of $140.20 a day," said Greenville has the potential to draw conventions and conferences. The income would help

NATO Backs Space Research

LUXEMBOURG (AP) — NATO defense ministers today unanimously urged the United States to continue its space-weapons research program, declaring it to be "in NATO's security interest."

The alliance defense chiefs, ending a two-day strategy session on nuclear arms policy, also said they "strongly support" the U.S. position at the renewed arms control talks with the Soviets.

"We support the United States research program into these technologies, the aim of which is to enhance stability and deterrence at reduced levels of offensive nuclear forces," a NATO declaration said.

"This research ... is in NATO's security interest and should continue," the declaration said, adding that the defense ministers welcomed the U.S. invitation to participate in the space weapons research.

Lord Carrington, the NATO secretary-general, told a news conference the defense ministers also condemned the shooting in East Germany of a U.S. Army major as a "wholly unjustifiable act of violence."

U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said he was "completely satisfied" and "extremely pleased" with the alliance's support for the U.S. research effort to develop a space-based defense against missiles.

Weinberger told the news conference that some "misunderstandings" had developed among some of the allies about the strategic intentions of the Reagan administration — particularly regarding space weapons.

He said he "seemed to be able to clear up" these misunderstandings at the Luxembourg meeting.

On Tuesday, Weinberger formally invited the NATO allies, plus the governments of Japan, Australia and Israel, to join in the research effort. He said later he saw "a lot of willingness to participate" in the multi-billion dollar program, nicknamed "Star Wars" by critics.

MX Issue Heads For Final Vote

WASHINGTON (AP) — With three votes down and one to go, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill says the last hope of stopping spending for the MX missile is to convince conservative Democrats it bears too high a cost.

"That's the only argument we've got out there," O'Neill said in the aftermath of the slender 219-213 vote by which the House on Tuesday voted to authorize $1.5 billion to build a second installment of 21 MX missiles.

"Certainly, we're going to try and switch it around," the speaker said. "It comes down to the fact that a lot of conservatives in my party will have to look at the price tag."

Other Democrats called the vote "the high-water mark" for the missile system.

They predicted that even if the House votes to appropriate the money, future administration requests for the MX will be slashed and President Reagan will never get the fleet of 100 MX missiles he seeks.

The second vote, to actually appropriate the MX money, was expected today or Thursday.

Reagan hailed the House action as "a vote for peace, for a safer future, and for success" at the arms control talks with the Soviet Union in Geneva.

Republicans applauded but many Democratic liberals booed and hissed as Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., defied the majority opinion in his party to defend MX as a potent bargaining lever that can be used to pry an acceptable arms reduction agreement from the Soviet Union at the Geneva talks.

"To vote no on these missiles would be in effect giving help to the Soviet Union," said Aspin, who is chairman of the House Armed Services Committee.

"Ladies and gentlemen of the Congress, I beg of you, the negotiators are at the table, let's give them the tools so they can do the job," Aspin said.

A total 158 Republicans and 61 Democrats voted for the MX spending. Voting against it were 189 Democrats and 24 Republicans. By tradition, O'Neill as speaker did not vote and there are two vacancies among the 435 House seats.

Many House vote counters had expected a larger victory margin for MX, mostly because of the lobbying blitz staged by Reagan, who ordered home chief U.S. arms negotiator Max Kampelman home from Geneva to help make the case among fence sitters.

"Even though there was enormous pressure, a lot of people broke against the president because of budget problems," said Rep. Norman Dicks, D-Wash.

"What made it so close was the Union Of First State Bank, First Citizens Set Thursday

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The merger of First State Bank with First Citizens Bank, approved by the shareholders last year and the required regulatory agencies earlier this year, will take effect Thursday.

Although the merger will be legally completed, bank officials say it will take several months to complete the transfer of First State accounts to the First Citizens system and customers will be advised as the conversion progresses.

First State, with headquarters in Winterville, was formed in January 1906 and opened the first of three branch offices in Greenville in 1970. On Dec. 31, 1984, First State reported assets of $51.27 million and deposits of $43.54 million.

First Citizens, headquartered in Raleigh, opened its first office in 1896 in Smithfield. The bank, which ranks fifth in the state, now serves 60 North Carolina counties with 276 offices in 130 towns, including branches in Grimesland and Grifton.

First Citizens, the subsidiary of First Citizens Corp., has assets of $2.16 billion and deposits of $1.86 billion on Dec. 31.

"We are enthusiastic that this merger will be a success" and are "happy to have the opportunity to serve the Winterville and Greenville communities," Lewis R. Holding, First Citizens' chairman said.

First Citizens has made a commitment to keep every

Want Ad In Newspaper Offers Job With A Twist

By JOE CLARK
Philadelphia Daily News
PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Joe Connor was looking for someone who could spend the wee small hours of the morning twisting away until the sun came up. Not just anyone, either. Connor wanted someone who could twist with authority, experience. Someone who could do maybe 50 twists a minute.

So he placed an ad in a South Philadelphia weekly newspaper. Connor had hardly let out a yawn before his phone started ringing incessantly. He had to look no further than his first candidate, a middle-aged woman who could do 40 twists a minute.

She more than cut the mustard to twist pretzel dough till down on the floor of Connor's soft pretzel shop here, which for more than a century, Connor says, has been the home of the Bakerite Soft Pretzel Co.

Of the dozen or so soft pretzel firms in the city, Connor, 62, believes his is the oldest and "probably the smallest." A former laundry salesman, Connor got into the operation about 15 years ago to help out his ailing father-in-law, whose father founded the business 125 years ago.

Connor says he advertises for an "experienced" extra hand or two every winter in case one of his two pretzel twisters gets bent out of shape with a cold.

Finding an experienced twister, says Connor, is no problem. "There's plenty of them around," he said. "I must have gotten about 25 calls."

Connor says automatic twisting machines have bitten deeply into the ranks of hand twisters. Twisting by hand, says Connor, is a skill one doesn't forget — once a twister, always a twister.

"There's a knack to it," says Connor. "It takes time. It's all in the hands. It's like tying a pretty ribbon.

If you don't know how to do it, you get all screwed up, get disgusted."

And the woman who landed the job through the want ad tied a pretty neat ribbon. She was the first — and only — person to audition, and after twisting 40 pretzels in a minute, had the job. "You could tell she had done it before," Connor said.

Connor and his two full-time employees start twisting about 2 a.m. Four hours later, the pretzels are on their way to street vendors, stores and a couple of schools.

Connor would not say how many pretzels his bakery turns out a day. "It's a trade secret," Connor said, twisting his way out of the question.

Mrs. Smith Gives DAR Program

Mrs. Wetzel Smith presented the program at the meeting of the Susanna Coutanch Evans Chapter DAR held Thursday at the home of Mrs. Larry Whitlow.

She told of the DAR insignia and showed slides.

Reports were given from delegates and alternates attending the state conference in Pinehurst. Regent Mrs. Donald C. McLane Jr. said the chapter had received awards for state honor roll, Gertrude Carraway Scholarship and for work on the U.S. flag. Dorothy Brannen, of Rose High School, attended the awards luncheon to receive her award for the state outstanding American history teacher.

Members voted to present a good citizenship medal to a deserving student at Wellcome Middle School.

Dr. Lois Staton, national defense chairman, reported on John Whitehead's article "Separation of Church and State — Myth or Fact." She accompanied her report with copies of McGuffey readers.

A Fusing Solution

If you're having problems with fusible interfacing, there are several explanations — and solutions.

— Not enough time: 10-15 seconds is longer than most people realize. Clock or count the time carefully — 1 Mississippi, 2 Mississippi, 3...

— Not enough pressure: You must press down firmly on the iron. The weight of the iron alone does not give enough pressure. A hand held steamer cannot be used for fusing.

To increase the amount of pressure exerted, lower the ironing boards before fusing. The change in leverage will help put your weight into the fusing process.

— The fabric/finishes: Some fabrics just can't be fused. The finish and/or surface prevent a fusing agent from penetrating. These fabrics require a sew-in.

Did You Know?
— Eighty percent of apparel manufactured today used fusible interfacing.

— Bubbling can be caused by fabric shrinkage and interfacing remaining stable. Fusible interfacings do not require pre-shrinkage, but you should pretreat the fashion fabric. This is especially important in 100 percent cotton, linen, silk and imported woolsens.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Correcting Errors Can Be Disastrous

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away after a brief illness. In the obituary published in our local newspaper, her age was given as 89.

Abby, my mother was only 80, so it was apparently a typographical error.

Now this may not seem very important to some people, but Mother was a very vain and prideful woman who would never tell her age.

Because of this typographical error in her obituary, everyone will think she was nine years older than she actually was.

Should we ask the newspaper editor to publish a correction? I say we should. The rest of the family says to skip it.

OUTVOTED IN OHIO

DEAR OUTVOTED: Sometimes it's better to leave bad enough alone. In support of my advice, I offer the following from the California Newspaper Publishers Association. It is an example of a typographical error in the classified section of a small-town newspaper, and the subsequent disastrous attempts to correct it:

(Monday) "FOR SALE—R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 948-0707 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

(Tuesday) "NOTICE—We regret having erred in R.D. Jones' ad yesterday. It should have read: One sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 948-0707 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7 p.m."

(Wednesday) "NOTICE—R.D. Jones has informed us that he has received several annoying telephone calls because of the error we made in his classified ad yesterday. His ad stands correct as follows: FOR SALE—R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 948-0707 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who loves with him."

(Thursday) "NOTICE—I, R.D. Jones, have no sewing machine for sale. I smashed it. Don't call 948-0707, as the telephone has been out. I have not been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday she was my housekeeper, but she quit."

DEAR ABBY: "Al C. in Newberg, Ore." wrote: "My wife and I have a disagreement we think you can settle. Do women have one more rib than men?"

Your answer was: "Dear Al: Men and women have the same number of ribs. (Who is ribbing whom?)"

Abby, you quote Scripture from time to time, so I would have thought that you would remember Genesis 2:21-22: "And the Lord caused a deep sleep to fall upon Adam, and he slept; and he took one of his ribs, and closed up the flesh instead there of. And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, he made a woman, and brought her unto the man."

Women have one more rib than men.

FUNDAMENTALIST

DEAR FUNDAMENTALIST: With all due respect to the Old Testament, he who seeks the knowledge of the number of ribs hath man and woman had best look upon the X-rays of both. Then let him go forth and compareth.

CONFIDENTIAL TO S.G.J., TRENTON, N.J.: The Trenton Times is no more immune to typographical errors than any other newspaper, but sometimes it's wise to leave bad enough alone.

Protectionism

America's textile industry, of which so much is based in the Carolinas, has been one of the casualties of cheap foreign imports and the muscle-bound dollar. Those two factors have had a lot to do with the closing of plants and resulting unemployment for hundreds of thousands of people. Our textile and apparel trade deficit reached a record $16 billion in 1984, about 13 percent of the record imbalance of $125 billion incurred that year.

Small wonder that Congress is beginning to move on the problem. More than 130 members of Congress have pledged their support to legislation designed to restrict textile and apparel imports, thus saving jobs in the largest single sector of the U.S. manufacturing economy.

That tackles part of the problem ... and it isn't enough. The strong dollar is the other half of the problem.

Imposition of trade restrictions (protectionism) has always ranked very low in the administration's economic philosophy and is traditionally frowned upon. Experience in recent years with Japan's self-imposed limitation of automotive exports to the U.S. saw mixed results.

It provided our own auto industry breathing time to rebuild and repair its financial structure, but it also resulted (we're told) in higher prices for both imports and our own product. In effect, the American people were paying a price for the remedial measure. Actually, our own industrial versatility is such that we literally need few, if any, of the manufactured items our country imports.

We suspect conditions are such that an atmosphere of protectionism is developing in the United States; a pity, because our consumers should enjoy the right to shop around and buy the products they want for the best available quality and price.

New Secretary of Labor William Brock is not a protectionist (nor is his boss). Their views have a lot of supporters, and pose a very large cloud over prospects for passage of that kind of congressional legislation.

Over the long haul, American interests would be best served by solving the problem with the American dollar. Its strength is an embarrassment. No safe and sane solution has yet been determined.

Scholars

East Carolina University has launched its University Scholar award program with the selection of six young scholars to receive $3,000 for up to four years of undergraduate study.

Chancellor John Howell has said the implementation of the program is more gratifying to him than anything that has occurred during his years of association with the university.

"I regard this program as a milestone in the advancement of this institution and the most significant action take during my chancellorship," Dr. Howell has said.

Funds to endow the scholarships are being contributed by those who are interested in drawing to the university young people of considerable talent.

The number of awards presented, each backed by a $40,000 endowment, is expected to grow.

The development of the University Scholar award program is, indeed, one of the most important developments at ECU in some time. The program will allow the university to attract students who are outstanding academically, and exhibit qualities of leadership.

East Carolina University must seek outstanding students, if it is to reach its full academic potential. A prestigious scholarship program had been demonstrated to attract the best academically. Now the university has such a program.

Fight Pits Liberals Vs. Conservatives

RALEIGH — The first major liberal vs. conservative battle of the 1985 General Assembly appears to have begun. Call it "comparable worth" or call it "pay equity," but a plan to re-order state employee salaries promises to set off the kind of battle that only the Equal Rights Amendment heretofore had been capable of prompting.

Almost everyone will agree that state salaries don't always make sense. A highly educated librarian, for example, might not make much more money than a janitor. Those who advocate a re-ordering of state salaries say jobs which women have traditionally held are paid less than those traditionally held by men.

In 1984, the General Assembly approved a $600,000 appropriation to have an independent analyst put a point value on every state job. The idea is to eventually adjust salaries to eliminate inequities.

But since that study began, conservatives have been complaining that the comparable worth study could have wide-range ramifications throughout the North Carolina economy. In mid-March, an influential moderate Democrat filed a bill that would stop the study.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, co-chairman of the committee overseeing the study, says the legislature never really debated the comparable worth study. In 1984, he says, the appropriation was slipped into the budget at the last minute, at a time when legislators were rushing to go home. "Something of this scope needs some debate," he said. At the least, he argues, his bill to repeal the study will give the legislature a chance to talk through the idea of comparable worth.

Wright says he hasn't made up his mind on comparable worth, but he can list a bunch of arguments against it.

At the heart of his opposition lies his belief that salaries should be determined by the laws of supply and demand. "Here we're saying that free enterprise has to be taught in the public schools," Wright said, "and comparable worth is the antithesis of the free enterprise system."

A person's salary is now set by the demand for his services, Wright said. With the comparable worth study, a group of analysts are making a subjective determination of what they feel a person should be paid. "That is an artificial means of determining salaries," Wright argued.

Then consider the ramifications of the study, Wright says. In the state of Washington, the legislature conducted a study and determined the state couldn't afford the proposals. But state employees sued, used the study for evidence, and a court ordered the legislature to raise salaries by a half billion dollars. "It could break the budget," Wright warns. Wright says comparable worth is also bad politics for the Democratic Party. "This whole idea is considered to be very anti-business ... because they fear that it will spread to them. I don't think the Democratic Party wants to create that image."

Although many large companies already use a point system for determining salaries, many other business leaders worry that comparable worth will shake up the labor market and drive labor costs through the roof.

Wright is chairman of the House Judiciary II Committee which will consider the repeal bill. House Speaker Liston Ramsey says, "I'm not going to bother with it (comparable worth)," and betting is that the House will repeal the study.

Liberal proponents of comparable worth are well-positioned to defend their study in the Senate, however. Their opinions will be told in an upcoming column.

A Taste Of Knowing How To Live

The recent savings and loan scandal in Ohio has shaken the banking industry very badly. What happened was the Home State Savings Bank had invested its depositors' money in a Florida company that specialized in dealing in government securities. The company was shut down by the SEC after it couldn't account for millions of dollars of bonds it claimed to have on hand. When word got back to Ohio that Home State was stuck with bad paper, the good citizens of Cincinnati decided it might be prudent to take their money out of the bank while there was some still left.

Unfortunately everyone got the idea at the same time, and panic set in, not only for Home State customers, but also for other banking institutions in Ohio. The governor had no choice but to declare a long bank holiday to cool down all the people who were screaming for their savings. I asked a former Ohio banker (not Home State) who also got burned how something like this could take place.

"We made a mistake. It could have happened to anybody."

"That's what the people of Ohio are afraid of," I said. "Why would a bank risk so much money with a small Florida securities company?"

"You should have seen their offices in Florida. Every dealer had a suite overlooking the ocean."

"You mean you invested your depositors' money in a firm because you were impressed with their offices?"

"Of course not. I didn't give them any funds until the officers took me for a ride on their 70-foot yacht. I'll say this, people in Florida really know how to live."

"Hold it," I said. "Bankers don't risk their customers' savings in a company just because it owns a yacht."

"It wasn't only the yacht. They also paid more interest than other firms in the bond business. The competition for deposits is fierce these days, and if we can offer just a quarter of a percent more to the public we can put them guy across the street out of business. People don't understand that we can't let their money sit in our vaults. If we offer them a higher rate of interest, then we have to get a higher rate of interest for ourselves. That's why we went to Florida. They were able to pay us more, and at the same time it was safe because they were backing our deposits with government securities. Is that a sure thing, or isn't it?"

"Probably, except many of the securities didn't exist."

"Now you're getting into technicalities."

"Why didn't you ask to see the bonds?"

"We did. Do you think we're from Missouri?"

"And what happened?"

"They showed them to us and then put them back in the safe."

"Didn't it occur to you that they might have been showing the same collateral to different customers over and over again?"

"Frankly it never crossed our minds. This one guy had a home you wouldn't believe, with a tennis court, Olympic-size pool and race horses. Nobody lives like that unless they're honest."

"In retrospect wouldn't your bank have been better off if you had taken the bonds back to Ohio instead of leaving them in Miami?"

"I couldn't have done that. If I had asked for the securities I would have hurt their feelings, and they would have told me to invest my money somewhere else."

"Perhaps that would have been the best thing that could have happened to you. At least you wouldn't have tossed all your depositors' money into the Okefenokee swamp."

"Yeh, but at the same time I would never have gotten such a good interest rate for them either."

To the editor:

I read with a great deal of interest the article published in the Reflector by Stuart Savage about the March 28, 1984, tornadoes.

It so happens that when that terrible tragedy struck I was a patient in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. How come in Mr. Savage's article no mention was made of the gallant work done by the doctors, nurses, staff, other workers at the hospital? All of these people worked incessantly — all night long — to relieve the suffering of many. I feel that they deserve some praise for their efforts.

To The Editor:

People in the Ayden fire district! What does it take to get your attention? Do you realize that we are in need of a new fire truck? Many of you must not! Do you know that for the price of joining the rural fire association you are in effect buying yourself, your family and your home fire protection? Do you not want fire protection? Do you think that the county is going to provide a truck for you? Do you think that in some way you are already paying for fire protection? Would you rather the fire department did not respond to your home if you do have a fire? Think about this. We are a long way from having the money we need for our truck, and it is our truck. For $50.00 you are buying a fire truck, a fire station to house it in and the men and manpower to man them.

Again, think about it! Suppose you lost all of this. What would it cost you? Some people have tried so hard and some of you will not help yourself.

Strength For Today

Have you ever come into contact with a highly educated person who hadn't a grain of sense in his head?

This often happens, and we never encounter such a situation without being filled with incredulity and wonder. How can it be that people who know so much often turn out to have no wisdom at all?

Wisdom is more than mere information. It is the capacity to use information or knowledge. Many of the great leaders in every century have been men of meager education, but they had a wonderful capacity to put into practical use the information they had. These people were truly wise.

So let us get as much learning as we can, but in our getting it let us make sure that we are developing a capacity to use this learning. For the use of such learning constitutes wisdom.

Erroneous Storm Signals

WASHINGTON — Showing the "degree of difficulty" in political acrobatics necessary to pass tax reform, Deputy Treasury Secretary Richard Darman inadvertently set off erroneous storm signals on Capitol Hill.

In one of a series of secret sessions with principal congressional players, Darman suggested that doubling the personal tax exemption to $2,000, as proposed in last year's Treasury tax plan, might be excessive. That set off alarms among the coterie of House Republican tax reformers: Could the new Baker team at the Treasury be sabotaging the very proposal it inherited from the old Reagan team?

The answer: almost certainly not. Acting as agent for Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, Darman is devoting his considerable energies nearly full-time to shaping a tax reform package that can pass. That requires a balancing act that will calm the special interests without diminishing the popular appeal of tax reform.

Ultimate prospects for passage will depend mainly on how effectively President Reagan sells the program to the country. But if the president is to have a chance, the secret conversations between administration officials and congressmen of both parties must file down the rough edges of the original Treasury plan.

That means going slower with limits on tax deductibility for business depreciation, oil and gas drilling expenses, charitable contributions and employee fringe benefits, among other provisions. It also means a lower top marginal tax rate than the 35 percent in the original Treasury plan.

The heart of tax reform is this: Encrusted protections built into a high-rate Internal Revenue Code should be less essential to upper-bracket taxpayers when their rates are lowered. But 35 percent is not enough. The 30 percent in the Democratic Bradley-Gephardt bill might do it; the Republican Kemp-Kasten bill's 24 percent certainly would.

But if the bill is neither to gain nor to lose federal revenue, Baker and Darman must balance lower rates with some additional tax sources. So it was that Darman suggested possible trimming of the proposed $2,000 exemption.

His words seeping across Capitol Hill galvanized populist Republicans. Having chafed under four years of Baker-Darman direction at the White House, they sounded the alarm. They began charging that Baker's real interest in tax reform was to win laurels back in Texas for saving the oil industry, paving the way for a possible run for governor next year. They also claim to see budget director David Stockman, no friend of tax reform, behind the opposition to the doubled exemption.

But that is a distortion of what Darman is trying to do. He is following the president's injunction for an unspecified increase in the personal exemption, but thinks that to improve the bill's revenue the increase may have to be scaled back from $2,000. Each $100 shaved off the exemption would produce about $5 billion in revenue.

Furthermore, Darman has understood from the start that increasing the personal exemption is essential to build populist appeal for tax reform among the nation's working families. Tax reform is a realigning political issue which would require Ronald Reagan to sound more like Dixon, Ill., than Rodeo Drive and to risk alienating longtime Republican constituencies.

House Panel Seeking Way To Cut Foreign Aid Funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite administration claims that national security will be harmed, Congress is trying to slash President Reagan's foreign aid proposal, led by lawmakers battling budget deficits and tired of U.S. support for controversial dictatorships.

"I fully intend to cut your budget by $1 billion," Rep. David Obey, D-Wis., chairman of the House Appropriations subcommittee, told a State Department official at a hearing Tuesday. "Can't we afford to limit (some aid) for a year or two until we get our house in order?"

Other committees were already at work cutting Reagan's request for $13.2 billion in foreign aid for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee tentatively decided to freeze spending at 1985 levels, about $600 million less than Reagan requested. The chairman of the panel, Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., said the freeze proposal "has not left the administration particularly happy," but, "we are attempting to arrive at a bill which has a hope of passing on the floor."

Over in the House, the foreign affairs subcommittee proposed a plan worth about $250 million less than the president wanted.

Reflecting traditional congressional support for Israel, the subcommittee dealing with the Mideast left intact Reagan's proposal for $3 billion in economic and military assistance to Israel and $2.33 billion in similar aid for Egypt.

The panels, however, recommended cuts in proposed aid or restrictions on its use in many countries, notably the Philippines, Pakistan, Turkey and Lebanon and other nations identified by the administration as vital links in global security.

Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., head of the Asia subcommittee, said that instead of hiking assistance to such regimes, the administration should cut aid to encourage reforms.

"The Philippines continues to be led by corrupt officers," Solarz said.

Noting that a Pakistani businessman recently was caught in the United States allegedly trying to buy equipment usable in an atomic bomb program, Solarz suggested that the Asia subcommittee's proposed $25 million cut in Pakistan aid would show that the United States is serious about halting the spread of nuclear weapons.

The administration, nevertheless, warned that without the full funding, U.S. security interests would be harmed.

Secretary of State George P. Shultz sent the House committee a lengthy, program-by-program defense of the Reagan proposal, urging the panel to reject many of the subcommittees' recommendations.

In a typical objection — to the cut in aid to the Philippines — Shultz said the proposal "virtually ignores the gravity of the growing communist insurgency in the Philippines and the need to help the Philippine military deal effectively with this threat."

William Schneider, under secretary of state for security assistance, refused to budge when Democratic members of the appropriations subcommittee urged him to list just a few countries where aid could be cut.

In every case, reductions from the president's proposal would cause "irreparable harm" to U.S. security goals around the world, Schneider said.

"We would be forced to abandon our foreign policy commitments," he said.

Langhorne Motley, assistant secretary of state for Inter-American affairs, said that without the proposed $1.5 billion for economic assistance and $357 million for military aid to Latin American, countries such as El Salvador, Guatemala and Honduras would be unable to defend themselves against "violence bred by poverty and injustice and in many cases abetted by hostile external forces."

Testimony 'Cleared'

WASHINGTON (AP) — When top officials of government agencies testify before Congress, their statements are routinely cleared and edited and even rewritten after delivery by the Office of Management and Budget, an OMB spokesman says.

The practice came to light when Rep. G.V. "Sonny" Montgomery, chairman of the House Veterans Affairs Committee, angrily complained in a letter to the head of the Veterans Administration about budget office review of testimony before his panel.

Montgomery also complained about OMB's review of written answers to questions posed to the VA by the committee.

Edwin L. Dale Jr., OMB spokesman, confirmed Tuesday that the budget office requires all agencies to submit to it for review the congressional testimony of officials. Material reviewed includes both prepared comments before delivery and afterward, when committees allow agencies to proofread the transcripts prior to publication, he said.

Security May Prompt Closing Of Pennsylvania Ave.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The block of Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House, offering a picturebook view of the president's mansion famous in newsreel footage and countless tourist snapshots, may be closed to automobile traffic as part of heightened security against terrorism, officials say.

Closing the six-lane thoroughfare in front of 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue would reduce concerns "about car bombs, truck bombs" crashing through the reinforced metal gates, says Rep. Frank Wolf, R-Va., a member of a House Appropriations subcommittee who asked about the proposal at a hearing Tuesday.

And it would create "a campus effect around the White House," according to government officials who disclosed the idea.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III revealed the plan when asked about it at the hearing, but said it is "still very much in the planning stage" and only one of many security proposals under consideration in the wake of increased concern about terrorism.

The Reagan administration has requested an additional $4.1 million for the current fiscal year for extra security around the White House, neighboring Treasury Department buildings and the Naval Observatory grounds, site of the vice president's residence.

"We believe that these improvements are critical due to the recent events worldwide and the increased effect of terrorist activity in this country," Baker said.

The Senate wing of the U.S. Capitol was damaged in a November 1983 bombing and throughout official Washington anti-terrorist barricades have sprung up in an attempt to thwart car-bombings such as one that killed more than 250 U.S. servicemen in Beirut in October 1983.

Concrete barricades, some decorated as flower boxes, already have been placed around the White House, and adjoining East Executive Drive was closed to public traffic last year.

Wolf said one idea would be to erect barriers on Pennsylvania Avenue between 15th and 17th streets, closing the area to vehicles and turning it into a pedestrian mall. City officials say that section of the avenue averages 31,600 vehicles a day, a number of them out-of-state cars that slow to a crawl for a glimpse of the manicured grounds and pillared mansion.

"It will be a White House decision, a decision on whether to close Pennsylvania Avenue," Baker told the committee.

The Secret Service, which is part of Baker's department, said Tuesday that procedures have been changed to prevent repetition of an incident in which an intruder strolled into the White House with the Marine Band on Inauguration Day.

Spokesman William Corbett said the Secret Service has changed rules for taking large groups into the White House. He declined to provide details but said visitors to the mansion "wouldn't notice it at all."

Flaglady Wins Fight To Wear Fur

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The state Department of Transportation says it made a mistake when it told Santina DeSantis to leave her fur coat at home and wear workclothes when on the job as a construction site flaglady.

"As far as the department is concerned, it's OK," DOT spokesman Paul A. Kelly said Tuesday. Her high-heels, however, are unsafe and she won't be permitted to wear them while working, Kelly said.

Gordon Cerow of the DOT's Public Works Division told the 42-year-old North Providence woman that her knee-length muskrat coat and high-heels distracted motorists and could cause an accident.

WHITE HOUSE SECURITY — Automobile and pedestrian travel on Pennsylvania Avenue in front of the White House may be banned for security reasons under proposals aired Tuesday. The White House is visible at the far right in this photograph. (AP Laserphoto)

Anthony Ciacciarelli, the division's chief of construction, agreed with Cerow. But Kelly said William Carcieri Jr., the division's deputy director, Tuesday overruled the two.

"Carcieri says the coat does not violate the rules," Kelly said.

Ms. DeSantis on Tuesday agreed about the shoes. She didn't know about Carcieri's decision, but she wore her fur anyway.

She tried a waist-length jacket one day last week. She tried a heavy sweater under the jacket, and a heavy sweater under the heavy sweater. Nothing worked.

Florida Firm Enters Bankruptcy

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — ESM Government Securities Inc., whose collapse March 4 prompted a financial crisis for 70 Ohio savings and loan associations, has been placed in bankruptcy, owing investors $320 million.

The filing of bankruptcy papers Tuesday by court-appointed receiver Thomas Tew allowed the seizure of at least $2 million more for creditors, but Tew said he has accounted for only about 10 percent of the $320 million.

ESM's two dozen creditors include Home State Savings Bank of Cincinnati, which closed its doors

March 8 amid runs by depositors, a half-dozen other S&Ls and 16 municipalities.

In an emergency hearing Tuesday, Tew, a Miami lawyer, filed a Chapter 7 petition under the U.S. Bankruptcy Act, enabling ESM's assets to be liquidated and divided among the creditors.

Creditors had sought Tuesday's hearing in an attempt to seize $2 million in "preferential transfers" — money paid to insiders — made March 26, 1984. U.S. bankruptcy laws allow a trustee to retrieve up to 1-year-old transfers.

"We came to the unanimous conclusion that we must file the petition immediately," said Richard Critchlow, a Miami lawyer representing Tew. "If we wait until after today, the $2 million will be lost."

With the quick $2 million the bankruptcy filing should bring in, Tew will have seized $32 million in ESM assets since the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission closed the Fort Lauderdale company's doors March 4.

Tew's motion to place ESM in bankruptcy proceedings was approved by U.S. District Judge James C. Paine in West Palm Beach. The judge, who had been handling the case in Fort Lauderdale was unavailable.

Meanwhile in Tampa, State Comptroller Gerald Lewis said his Department of Banking and Finance needs more power to punish securities companies that refuse to provide information subpoenaed by the state.

He said ESM apparently "falsified accounting records ... to deceive not only representatives of my office but local and federal officials as well as other regulatory agencies."

Bennett Backs 'Choice' In Schools

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary William J. Bennett said today parents should be given more choice over what public schools their children attend and be allowed tax breaks to help them afford private schools.

The new education secretary urged educators to pay heed to what he called "the three C's" — content, character and choice — as well as the traditional three R's — reading, writing and arithmetic.

"All parents, not only the affluent, must be able to exercise greater choice in what, where and how their children learn," Bennett said in a speech prepared for delivery today at the National Press Club.

In his prepared remarks, Bennett made no mention of the administration's plan to cut loans for middle-class college students and cap aid for the neediest students. It dealt solely with ways to raise school standards and give parents more choice over what schools their children attend.

Bennett sparked a controversy last month by suggesting that college students divest their cars, stereos and beach vacations to accommodate cuts in federal aid.

He said the administration would press ahead with efforts to enact a tuition tax credit and to give parents of poor children vouchers to buy remedial education at public or private schools.

Improving the public schools "can only be done by redesigning public education," Bennett said. Parents must get more choice both "within public education and between public and non-public education."

Bennett said voucher plans, such as the states of Tennessee and Minnesota are considering, are among the most promising ways to promote choice.

Minnesota Gov. Rudy Perpich has proposed allowing families of junior and senior high students to choose public schools regardless of district lines, with state per-pupil aid following the student to the school he or she elects to attend.

Bennett said the administration's proposed $300 tuition tax credit to cover as much as half the cost of private tuition "would give some small relief from the burden of having to pay the full costs of both public and non-public education."

The tuition credit bill was bottled up in the last Congress, and it faces tough sledding in this session, given the huge federal deficit and the bipartisan search for ways to eliminate existing tax breaks.

Bennett, a former philosophy professor, said there are certain subjects every student should know, including how mountains are made and how poems work.

"We should not hold some students to lesser things, pushing them into educational backwaters while everyone else is advancing upstream," he said.

"They should know where the Amazon flows, and what the First Amendment means. They should know about the Donner Party and slavery, and Shylock, Hercules and Abigail Adams, where Ethiopia is, and why there is a Berlin wall."

"We must teach thoughtfulness, fidelity, kindness, honesty, respect for law, standards of right and wrong, diligence, fairness and self-discipline," he said. Teachers and principals must "know the difference between right and wrong, good and bad, and ... make an effort to live the difference in front of

General Electric Indicted For Alleged Fraud In Costs

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — General Electric Co., faced with $800,000 in cost overruns on nuclear-warhead contracts, charged the amount to other government projects, according to an indictment against the nation's fourth-largest defense contractor.

GE on Tuesday denied any criminal wrongdoing and said it would "work out all the issues arising out of this matter."

The company "mischarged" the government for the $800,000 in overruns on a contract for refitting components for the Minuteman Mark-12A intercontinental ballistic missile re-entry system, said U.S. Attorney Edward Dennis.

The 112-count indictment resulted from a four-year investigation arising from irregularities uncovered by a routine Defense Contract Audit Agency probe of GE's internal accounting, Dennis said.

GE is charged with four counts of "making and presenting false claims to the United States" and 104 counts of making false statements to a U.S. agency by falsifying employee time cards.

GE employee Joseph Calabria and former employee Roy Baessler are charged with two counts each of "making false declarations" to a grand jury.

GE spokesman John Terino, reading from a statement after the indictment was announced, said the company denies any wrongdoing but is willing to cooperate in resolving the matter.

"It is alleged that incorrect charges were entered on employee time cards submitted five years ago," said Terino. "Involved are 100 time cards out of approximately 100,000 time cards."

Wash 'N' Wear Bandit Nabbed

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A man known as the Wash 'N' Wear Bandit was clean but he wasn't neat, and that proved to be his downfall, police said.

The unusual burglar had a habit of showering and changing into fresh clothes before leaving the scene of his crime, but he left the dirty clothes behind.

At one of the homes, he apparently forgot to check the pockets of his dirty pants, where investigators found a rent receipt with his name and address, said Fort Lauderdale police officer William Cutler.

David Smith, 18, confessed to nine break-ins when police confronted him with the evidence Tuesday, Cutler said. Smith was driving a stolen car when he was picked up, Cutler said.

"He said he got dirty knocking over plants and stuff," Cutler said. "He said he didn't actually take showers in the homes, he just cleaned up a little."

Cutler said Smith has been charged with burglary, grand theft and auto theft.

Storms Strike Southwest

By The Associated Press
A wild spring storm unleashed tornadoes and winds gusting to 90 mph in Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma, destroying buildings and churning up a dust storm that caused a 35-vehicle pileup and blew windows from a Denver high-rise.

No deaths were reported in the thunderstorms, wind and tornadoes that raked the Plains on Tuesday, but at least four people were injured, one critically.

Forecasters planned to watch the "strength of the weather pattern" today after tornadoes destroyed a small building Tuesday at Logan, Kan., said Paul Fike of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Thunderstorms will extend today from the Mississippi Valley across much of the Plains, the Great Lakes, the Ohio and Tennessee valleys and into eastern Oklahoma and western Arkansas, the National Weather Service said.

Rainshowers, with snow in the mountains, will stretch from the northern Pacific Coast to the northern High Plains.

The Logan tornado picked up a metal building, "slammed it into a tree and then it slammed into a house," said Phillips County Sheriff LeRoy Stephen.

Twisters also were seen in Ada, Okla., and Silvertown and Floydada, Texas.

Strong thunderstorm winds destroyed two houses and injured two people near Purcell, Okla., and damaged buildings near Lindsay, Okla., and Jefferson, Iowa, authorities said.

In Colorado, winds blasting dust up to 76 mph caused a 35-vehicle, half-mile-long pileup on Interstate 25 about 20 miles north of Denver, said state patrol Troop F.L. Thurlow. One man was in critical condition, another fair at St. Anthony Central Hospital in Denver, Thurlow said.

In downtown Denver, "there was a lot of noise and a lot of glass but, luckily, no one was hurt" when wind popped windows from the 32-story Barclay Towers condominiums and drove them across a mall and through eight glass panels in Tabor Center shopping arcade, said Tim Gonerka, vice president and general manager of the arcade.

The wind hit 76 mph in Boulder,

Colo., gusted to 74 mph in Colorado Springs, to 64 mph in Pueblo and to 52 mph at Stapleton International Airport, said forecaster Mike Holzinger.

The Colorado State Patrol warned high-profile vehicles off state highways.

Police in Dallas, where winds gusted to 90 mph at Love Field, cordoned off a square mile of streets and looked Tuesday night under the glare of helicopter searchlights for injured people in an apartment complex where windows were blown out and some roofs collapsed.

Officials said they found no injuries there, but about 2 miles away, a man suffered a broken collarbone when the wind overturned his car.

Wind also damaged two service stations and brought Big Tex, a 20-foot-high cowboy advertisement for a liquor store, to its knees.

In California, after a moisture-laden storm swept down from the Gulf of Alaska on Monday, snow accumulations were reported Tuesday of 30 inches at Weaverville, 18 at Westwood, 15 at Mammoth Lakes and 14 at Norden.

Soviet Papers Carry Shooting Report

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet newspapers and radios today carried a report by the official news agency Tass that said the shooting of a U.S. officer by a Soviet sentry in East Germany was "regrettable," but charged the officer was spying and blamed America for his death.

The Tuesday Tass report claimed the U.S. government was spreading "a deliberately false" version of what happened.

The United States says Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson was on a legitimate mission, in an unrestricted area, and the shooting was tantamount to murder. A U.S. Embassy spokesman in Moscow called the report by the official Tass news agency an attempt "to justify an action that just cannot be justified."

Michael Burch, a U.S. assistant defense secretary, said Tuesday in Luxembourg, "When we find the Soviets, even in restricted areas, we simply take their cameras away and send them home. We don't shoot them."

In Washington, State Department spokesman Bernard Kalb commented, "We can only say that our reaction is one of disgust that the Soviets would compound their inexcusable killing of Maj. Nicholson with such an obviously tendentious account of the events."

A Soviet sentry shot Nicholson on Sunday near the East German town of Ludwigslust about 30 miles from the West Germany border. U.S. officials said Nicholson's driver was prevented from going to the wounded man with his first aid kit, and the major was left to die without medical attention.

The Americans say Nicholson and Sgt. Jessie G. Schatz were on a routine surveillance tour permitted under the 1947 agreement that provides for liaison missions on both sides. Since the end of occupation, the main function of the missions has been intelligence gathering.

Tass said in its report that Nicholson "secretly approached" a military equipment storage facility in a camouflage uniform, opened a window and was taking pictures. It said the sentry shouted a warning in Russian and German, fired a warning shot, then shot to kill when the American tried to flee.

Nicholson spoke fluent Russian. In Frankfurt, West Germany, a U.S. diplomatic source said the facility was a tank storage shed and that Nicholson was standing outside it, "near, but not on, restricted ground." The source, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he could not say exactly how far the American was from the shed.

ABC News reported Tuesday night that it learned the officer must have passed through a restricted area to get to where he was shot, it did not identify the sources of the report.

Tass said the incident was "regrettable, but the entire responsibility for it lies with the American side, which is now circulating a deliberately false version of what happened."

Tass said the "intelligence actions of the American servicemen are a flagrant violation of the April 3, 1947, agreement" under which the U.S., British and French missions were established at Potsdam and three Soviet missions were set up in the other occupation zones.

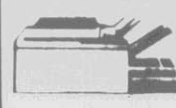

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that after an autopsy is completed, Nicholson's body will be flown from the U.S. Air Base at Rhein-Mein, West Germany, by Air Force jet to Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington for burial in Arlington National Cemetery. No timetable was announced.

Tass alleged that "American servicemen have committed such unlawful actions before."

It mentioned only one instance. It said that in August 1982 American servicemen on a "military reconnaissance" mission tried to evade Soviet authorities and "deliberately ran down a Soviet army officer, inflicting grievous bodily harm to him."

Plant Will Open Soon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Union Carbide's toxic chemical plant in Institute, W.Va., has been inspected with "a fine tooth comb" and presents no danger of a Bhopal-type tragedy, the company's chairman says.

Warren Anderson, the head of Union Carbide, said the firm will go ahead with its plans to reopen the facility, where production of methyl isocyanate was halted last December after more than 2,000 people were killed when the gas was released from a Carbide subsidiary in Bhopal, India.

"If I had any expectation we would prove hazardous to the people of West Virginia, that plant wouldn't reopen," Anderson told a joint hearing Tuesday by two subcommittees of the House Energy and Commerce Committee.

"That plant has been gone over with a fine tooth comb" by federal and state officials and Union Carbide safety teams, according to Anderson, whose assurances were greeted with skepticism by some members of the subcommittees.

Anderson said that Union Carbide's investigation in India found that the Bhopal release was caused by a "deliberate or inadvertent introduction of a large amount of water" into a storage tank.

REFUSES TO TESTIFY — Bernhard Goetz arrives at his Manhattan apartment building Tuesday after he declined to testify before a grand jury about the shooting of four youths on a subway train last year. Prosecutors said Goetz attempted to limit jurors' questions about his conduct. (AP Laserphoto)

Grand Jury Turns Down Goetz' Terms

NEW YORK (AP) — "Speechless" after his terms for testifying before a grand jury were rejected, Bernhard Goetz blamed prosecutors for taking away his chance to tell the panel why he shot four youths on a subway train Dec. 22.

But District Attorney Robert Morgenthau said that when it was time for Goetz to testify Tuesday, he tried to "unreasonably and unfairly limit the grand jury's inquiry" by insisting questions be limited to the events of two days last December.

Goetz's case took another twist later Tuesday, when police accused James Ramseur, who told the grand jury Goetz shot him and his three companions without provocation, of falsely reporting his own abduction.

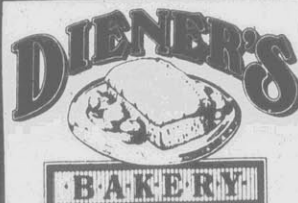

"I begged to testify before the grand jury," Goetz told The New York Post after leaving Morgenthau's office. "The DA's office wouldn't let me. ... All the DA wanted to do was to push and probe in another effort to stack up some more charges against me."

Goetz's attorney, Barry Slotnick, complained that prosecutors "wanted to question him about anything and everything," including reports Goetz bought guns in Florida and brought them illegally into New York.

With the end of its term two days away, the grand jury was thought to be near a decision on Goetz, who was indicted on firearms charges by another grand jury two months ago but not indicted on attempted murder charges. Morgenthau, citing a new witness, resubmitted the case to a new grand jury March 13.

Slotnick said Goetz was willing to waive immunity from prosecution for anything he said about events of Dec. 22 and Dec. 30, the day before he surrendered.

British Kidnap Victim Released In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — British metallurgist Geoffrey Nash, kidnapped nearly two weeks ago from the streets of mostly Moslem west Beirut, has been released unharmed, British diplomats said today.

In London, a British Foreign Office spokesman said Nash "was released about midnight last night. He is safe and well."

Ambassador David Miers in Beirut confirmed Nash's release, but said he could not provide details.

The Foreign Office said Miers had spoken with Nash this morning.

The radical Jihad Islami organization, believed composed of fundamentalist Shiite Moslems with ties to Iran, claimed responsibility for abducting the 60-year-old Nash on March 14 as he was leaving his home in west Beirut.

Nash, who works for the Lebanese government, was one of at least nine Westerners who have recently been abducted or who have disappeared in Lebanon, mostly in the western sector of the capital.

Neighbors reported seeing Nash forced into a yellow car by three gunmen. He apparently was on his way to work.

Jihad Islami, whose name means

Islamic Holy War, said it wanted to drive Western "spies" and "agents" out of Beirut.

The day after Nash was kidnapped, British businessman Brian Levick, 59, was seized, and one day after Levick's abduction, Terry A. Anderson, 37, chief Middle East correspondent for The Associated Press, was kidnapped.

There has been no word on the fate of Levick, Anderson, or the other kidnapped or missing Westerners.

The latest kidnap victim was British writer Alec Collett, 63, abducted Monday at a highway junction south of Beirut while on an assignment for the U.N. Relief and Works Agency.

"We don't have any new information at all on his whereabouts," an UNRWA spokeswoman said today. She declined to be named.

She denied reports that the 13 or 14 non-Lebanese UNRWA personnel have been ordered to leave Lebanon after Collett's abduction, but she said two have already left the country "because they are British."

The decision that they should go, she said, was taken before Collett's kidnapping.

After Nash's kidnapping, the British government closed its visa section in west Beirut. The main embassy building in mostly Christian east Beirut remained open.

Nash is married to a Lebanese woman, Waddad, who has been sending letters to newspapers in Beirut pleading for his release "for my sake and the sake of his children." She said she and her husband had lived in Lebanon for 37 years.

The most recent letter was published by the independent An-Nahar newspaper on Saturday.

Mrs. Nash said that they have a daughter who lives in Lebanon and a son in France. She also said Nash suffered from heart problems that required frequent medication.

The circumstances of his release were not clear, but it had been predicted in an anonymous telephone call to a Western news agency in Beirut on Tuesday from a previously unheard of group, the Khaibar Brigades.

The caller said the group had kidnapped Nash, another Briton and three French diplomats. He said that "after our investigation" it was decided that the two Britons and a woman French captive would be released "very soon."

But there was no immediate word today on the whereabouts of the other Briton, Levick, or the French woman, Danielle Perez.

A spokeswoman for the French Embassy in Beirut, when told of Nash's release, said, "We are happy for this news, but we have no word whatsoever on our people yet."

Last Friday, gunmen abducted French Vice Consul Marcel Fontaine as he was buying morning newspapers on his way to work. Embassy protocol officer Marcel Carton and his daughter, Mrs. Perez, a secretary at the embassy, disappeared the same day.

Blast Hits Baghdad

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — A powerful blast rocked Baghdad today and sent up a mushroom-like cloud of white smoke on the city's western edge, shortly after Iran said it fired a ground-to-ground missile at the Iraqi capital.

Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency IRNA, monitored in Cyprus, said the attack was in retaliation for Iraqi raids on Tehran today and Tuesday that killed 12 people and wounded 18, and on other Iranian cities.

From the roof of The Associated Press office in Baghdad, this reporter watched the billowing cloud. Ambulances with wailing sirens, fire engines and police vehicles raced across the city. There were no immediate reports of casualties.

The blast was the sixth heard in the Iraqi capital in 13 days, each blast accompanied by an Iranian claim that it had lobbed a long-range missile into Baghdad.

Iran's news agency, IRNA, later said that Iranian artillery also shelled Iraqi border towns from dawn to noon.

An Iraqi military spokesman said in a Baghdad radio statement today that "a chain of daring raids were mounted at dawn against selected targets in the heart of Tehran and hit the cities of Qazvin and Kashan."

The report did not mention casualties or damage. The broadcast, monitored in the Persian Gulf island nation of Bahrain, quoted the same spokesman as adding all Iraqi aircraft returned safely to base after the raids. It did not elaborate.

U.S.-Soviet Negotiators Open Debate On Rockets

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. negotiators, armed with congressional approval for more MX nuclear missiles and the backing of NATO defense ministers for research into space-based defenses, opened talks with Soviet officials today on the possible reduction of long-range rockets.

The U.S. delegation, headed by Ambassador John G. Tower, and the Soviet team, led by Victor P. Karpov, met at the offices of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Their meeting, as part of a three-tiered program of arms talks in Geneva, effectively revived the Strategic Arms Reduction Talks that were suspended in December 1983 in a Soviet protest against NATO's deployment of medium-range missiles.

The talks began hours after the House of Representatives, voting 219-213, approved $1.5 billion for a second installment of 21 of the long-range, nuclear-tipped MX missiles.

Asked whether the Tuesday night vote in favor of the controversial MX would affect the talks, Karpov told reporters: "We'll talk here."

In Luxembourg, 12 NATO defense ministers unanimously urged the United States to continue research into a space weapons program, declaring it to be "in NATO's security interests."

The alliance defense ministers, ending a two-day strategy session on nuclear policy, also said they

"strongly support" the U.S. position in the arms talks.

Reagan administration officials had said support for the MX and the anti-missile research program, popularly known as "Star Wars," would strengthen the hand of U.S. negotiators in Geneva.

MX missiles are designed with 10 nuclear warheads and can travel distances of more than 8,000 miles.

Max M. Kampelman, leader of the U.S. negotiating team, had been recalled from the arms talks to try to sway Congress members who were reluctant to vote for the MX money.

He returned to Geneva on Monday, two hours before the opening of the first detailed discussions on space and defense weapons.

The arms talks resumed on March 12 after a 15-month break. The Soviets had quit two parallel sets of talks — one dealing with medium-range missiles, the other, long-range — to protest NATO's deployment of the first of 572 U.S.-built Pershing and cruise medium-range missiles.

The North Atlantic Treaty organization said the missiles were needed to counter Soviet rockets trained on Western Europe.

When the arms talks were resumed, the discussions were divided into three sets — one for medium-range weapons, one for long-range, and one for space weapons.

Negotiators specializing in medium-range rockets were scheduled to get down to discussions on Thursday.

Kampelman is the U.S. team's leader as well as chief negotiator for the space arms set of talks.

Both sides have refused to tell reporters what specifically was discussed in these first sessions.

The Soviet Union has kept up an attack on U.S. research into the space-based defense system.

"The United States is trying to escape retaliation by hiding behind an anti-missile shield that would allow it to deliver a first nuclear strike," Soviet delegate Victor Issraelyan told the 40-nation Geneva disarmament conference, which is unrelated to the superpower talks.

Issraelyan outlined six proposals to "avert an arms race in outer space." They included prohibitions on testing and deployment of weapons based in space or on Earth and aimed at targets in space or on Earth; as well as "new antisatellite systems."

He said, "To this end we are ready to engage in concrete negotiations."

China's delegations proposed a moratorium on development, testing and deployment of space weapons while the two superpowers negotiate on space arms.

S. Koreans Delay Return Of Torpedo Boat To China

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The government blamed bad weather today for a delay in returning a Chinese torpedo boat along with six crewmen killed in a reported mutiny and 13 surviving sailors.

South Korea has denied unofficial reports that the crew had mutinied in an effort to seek asylum on the Nationalist Chinese island of Taiwan.

It said the mutiny was not politically motivated. Two of the 19 crew members were wounded.

A government spokesman announced that because of bad weather the ship and crew would be sent back to China on Thursday instead of today.

The government weather bureau reported rain and strong winds, kicking up 12-foot-high waves, in the Kunsan area.

Reports from Taiwan over the weekend said the Chinese Nationalist government would welcome any of the crew who wanted to go there, and Tuesday Taiwan said it was "extremely dissatisfied" with South Korea's decision to return the torpedo boat and crew members to China.

A Foreign Ministry spokesman in Taipei said the Chinese Nationalist government had asked South Korean authorities for permission to interview the crewmen, but the request was turned down.

South Korea and Taiwan, both with strongly anti-communist governments, have long have maintained close ties.

South Korea said on Tuesday that China had apologized for the intrusion into South Korean territorial waters by three Chinese navy ships in search of the torpedo boat.

China's Foreign Ministry spokesman, Ma Yuzhen, declined to comment on the delay when questioned today by reporters at a weekly briefing in Peking.

South Korea's official Yonhap news agency said today in a dispatch from the west coast port city of Kunsan, where the boat had been taken into tow, that the two alleged mutineers had been separated from the other crewmen for "security reasons." It said the two were transferred from the hotel where they and the survivors had been lodged and were put aboard a South Korean patrol boat at Kunsan.

Government spokesman Lee Won-hong announced that China had pledged to try to prevent the recurrence of such incidents and that "necessary measures" would be taken against those responsible for the intrusion.

Pro-U.S. South Korea and Communist China have no diplomatic relations but contacts were made through channels in Hong Kong.

Earlier announcements by South Korean government authorities said an investigation had found the two crew members were responsible for the shooting of the six crewmen. The South Korean government said the two mutinied because they had been reprimanded and feared punishment when their boat returned to China.

Government Issues Alert Over Devices

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is warning that an unknown number of battery-powered heart defibrillators could go dead in the middle of a medical emergency, possibly allowing a heart attack victim to die rather than be revived.

In a safety alert issued Tuesday to hospitals and rescue squads, the Food and Drug Administration said the lifesaving equipment "may fail suddenly and without warning" because of defective power packs that go dead prematurely.

"Failure of the defibrillator to operate can result in failure to revive a patient who might otherwise have been saved," the agency said. Spokesman Dave Duarte said the agency does not know if anyone has died because of the battery failures.

The FDA also said that testing the batteries, manufactured by General Electric Co., "will not reliably identify batteries subject to the potential failure." The batteries will test normal until they actually begin to fail, GE spokesman Bud Schaller said.

Two defibrillator manufacturers earlier issued a recall for some 11,000 machines because of the faulty GE batteries. The FDA's warning said a third manufacturer issued a recall last Thursday, and an unknown number of other companies also may have used the GE battery packs.

A heart defibrillator is a lifesaving device that delivers an electric jolt to the chest of a heart attack victim. The charge often can restore a regular heart beat to a patient whose heart has lapsed into useless, irregular beat called fibrillation.

In battery-powered defibrillators, such as those used in ambulances or emergency rooms, the electric jolt comes from a capacitor that is charged by the battery pack. If the batteries go dead, FDA noted, they cannot charge the capacitor, and the defibrillator will be unable to give the lifesaving electric shock.

The FDA confirmed to The Associated Press on March 15 that two manufacturers — Physio Control Corp. and Datascope Corp. — had issued voluntary recalls for nearly 11,000 hospital and ambulance defibrillators because of potentially defective batteries.

In its new warning, the FDA said a third manufacturer, Hewlett Packard, issued a recall last Thursday for two models of its machines. Duarte said he did not know how many Hewlett Packard machines were affected.

But the agency also warned that "other makes and models could present a similar hazard."

"FDA and GE are investigating the possibility that other manufacturers of defibrillators may have used these batteries."

"We are not providing battery model numbers or specific date codes at this time because such information may not be readily accessible on the battery packs, and because GE is still conducting testing for other possibly defective lots," the agency said.

"Users of all defibrillators with rechargeable batteries should contact manufacturers of their equipment for further information as it becomes known," said the safety alert signed by John C. Villforth, director of FDA's center for devices and radiological health.

Meanwhile, Villforth said emergency labels should be applied to all battery powered defibrillators warning of the potential problem.

Investor Purchases CBS Stock

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — A New York investor who contributed to Sen. Jesse Helms' last re-election campaign reportedly bought $240 million worth of CBS stock, but spokesmen refused to say whether he backs the Republican's attempt to take over the network.

Ivan F. Boesky and his wife, Seema, each contributed $2,000 to Helms' campaign last year, according to finance reports filed with the State Board of Elections.

The New York Times reported Friday that Boesky had bought a $240 million block of CBS stock — 7 percent to 8 percent of the outstanding shares. In a national mailing this year, Helms urged his conservative followers to end what he called the liberal bias of CBS News by buying network stock and becoming "Dan Rather's boss."

A lawyer for Fairness in Media, the group formed to run the CBS takeover effort, declined to say Tuesday whether Boesky is part of the campaign.

"Delighted as we were to see Mr. Boesky, who obviously is a Helms supporter, had purchased a large block of CBS stock, we cannot comment on any relationship between Mr. Boesky and Fairness in Media since we have not disclosed to the Securities and Exchange Commission the identity of any third parties with whom we've been conducting discussions," lawyer James Cain said.

A spokesman for Boesky said, "He neither confirms nor denies that he has any CBS stock. As a result, your second question, whether he is working with Mr. Helms, is irrelevant."

According to records at the Federal Election Commission, Boesky also made political contributions to Democratic candidates, including Walter Mondale. A lawyer who has done business with Boesky described him as "an apolitical type."

Edward Atorino, a media analyst in New York for Smith Barney. Harris Upham & Co., said Boesky "hopes to buy in anticipation of someone else paying a higher price, and he usually doesn't stay around for the finish."

Suit Covers All Things Living

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Federal attorneys have asked a judge to dismiss a lawsuit filed by a Las Vegas, N.M., woman on behalf of all living beings, including her dog Nanki-Poo.

Frances Tyson, 72, sued President Reagan, Vice President Bush and several Cabinet members in January, calling for a halt to the buildup of nuclear weapons.

Nanki-poo's paw print was affixed to the lawsuit.

The government said in its response to the lawsuit that Ms. Tyson showed only a potential injury to herself and others.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ronald Ross said the lawsuit is moot because the courts have no jurisdiction over matters of U.S. security.

Ms. Tyson describes herself as "a conservative person who doesn't want to see life on this planet wiped out."

Woodpecker Raps Down Utility Pole

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — A utility pole damaged by woodpeckers crashed to the ground, leaving an estimated 170,000 Florida Power Corp. customers without electricity for up to 90 minutes, company spokesmen said.

Brock Lucas of Florida Power Corp. said the failure occurred at about 4:30 a.m. Tuesday and power was restored to customers in Pinellas and Pasco counties by 6 a.m.

Tampa Electric Co. customers in Hillsborough County, where the pole fell, were not affected, said spokesman Larry Shriner.

Shriner said the damaged pole, owned by the Tampa company, supported a two-way line that allows the two utilities to feed power to each other. The wooden pole fell, taking another pole and the line down with it, he said.

"Woodpecker damage is unusual but not unheard of," Shriner said. "In this case, the pole snapped fairly high up. The birds worked on it and at a certain point it came down."

Couple Finds Career As Writing Team

By SHARON COHEN
Associated Press Writer
KILDEER, Ill. (AP) — She was a restless housewife, he a bored businessman. Together they've plotted a new life of bedrooms and boardrooms, danger and deception. Drug smuggling schemes. Tempestuous affairs. And a little meddling with mobsters for good measure. No day is complete without one or another for Anne and Ed Kolaczky.

They're a husband-wife writing team — their joint pen name is Andrea Edwards — creating a corporate America in which women make it to the top but without risks that would make even the periled Pauline pale.

It's part fact, part fantasy. And, they hope, all entertainment.

"We can't really make (our books) a treatise on actual business situations," said Ed, 48, who spent 23 years as an executive for IBM Corp. "To be perfectly frank, that might be a little dull."

What they do is take timely women's topics — divorce, unwed motherhood, the conflict over marriage vs. career — set them in a big business arena and add a little derring-do.

Together the Kolaczys have collaborated on eight books, including modern love stories.

But the corporate life is what women want to read about, said Anne, 35, who began writing historical romances in 1976 out of boredom in her career as wife and mother.

"There are so many more women in business now," added Anne, who taught elementary school before she married in 1972. "Even if there's not so many on the executive level, they like to see themselves up there."

In Andrea Edwards' world, women give orders, make tough business decisions and occasionally, wheel and deal.

All the heroines, Anne said, are independent and "competent. They're successful in their careers. And they end up with the guy because they want him, not because they need him."

But getting to the happy ending (they always have a happy ending) isn't trouble-free.

In "All Too Soon," heroine Jaylene Sable gets mixed up with drug smuggling, is haunted by her past, has a scheming rival out to destroy her, and becomes pregnant after an affair with a dashing consultant.

In "Power Play," Antonia James, an accountant, uncovers a scheme involving mob laundering of money. Someone tries to kill her by burning down a building while she's in it.

"A typical day at the office," Ed said.

The Kolaczys write about business because it's what Ed knows best, having sold computers at IBM before quitting in 1982 to team up with his wife.

"He just knows the corporate world and can weave a woman's story into that type of setting," Anne said. "I get lost."

Still, Anne is the undisputed boss. In a women's market, Ed said, "the final product really has to be Anne's gut feel."

That also goes for their contemporary romances, including their latest, "Captain Wonder," a love story between a divorced teacher and a TV hero similar to "Mr. T."

Anne and Ed work from their home, about 40 miles north of Chicago, but not side by side.

"We don't work together," she said. "We'd kill each other. He doesn't understand you need silence when you work."

Though they work together smoothly, their partnership wasn't a natural one in the beginning.

"It was three months of high tension," recalled Ed, the wise-cracking half of the team. "I'm sure she thought of maiming me or killing me."

"The first year was pretty difficult," Anne agreed. "I wouldn't take a stand on things. I wasn't used to working with someone. I was afraid I would offend him."

But now they've established a working pattern: Ed usually comes up with the basic idea, keeping files of newspaper clips or business magazines such as Fortune or Business Week.

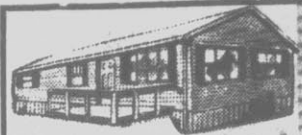

He writes about 70 percent of the first draft, Anne does the remainder and then edits it, rewrites and fashions the story line.

Sometimes they disagree but, Anne said, "He told me long ago I could be boss. I sometimes have to put my foot down."

Andrea Edwards' novels take six months to produce, the shorter romances about two months. The Kolaczys have several books in the works.

Their writing career is flourishing. So is their marriage.

"We've become close friends," Ed said. "You have to be, you're here all the time. It's like being here together 38 hours a day."

Tuesday Thefts

Police are continuing their investigation of two thefts reported to the department Tuesday.

Officer J.M. Jones said a wallet containing $51 in cash was taken from the Pitt County Mental Health Center in an incident reported at 1:53 p.m., while Officer W.R. McLawhorn said a radio, television set, crock pot, coffee pot, food mixer and 12 coffee cups were taken from a camper parked at a construction site on Memorial Drive in a break-in reported at 3:45 p.m.

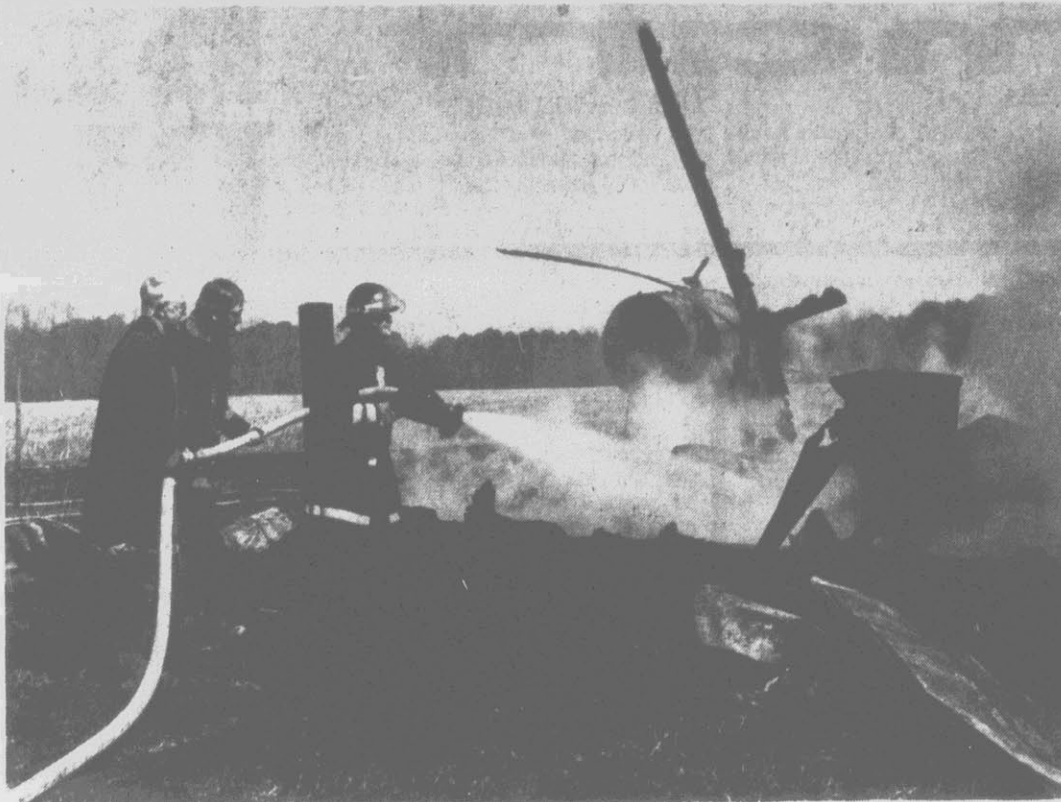

Warrant Issued

Greenville police are looking for Charles Curtis Haislip, 28, of 316 St. Andrews Drive in connection with the theft of $5,000 from the Foodland supermarket at West End Circle.

Detective Howard Conner said a warrant charging Haislip with embezzlement in connection with the incident, reported at 6:53 a.m. Monday, has been issued.

Conner said Haislip, an assistant manager, closed the store Sunday. Employees opening the store Monday morning found the cash missing from a safe.

Haislip did not report for work Monday and is believed to be out-of-state, Conner said.

BARNs BURNED — A spreading grass fire Tuesday afternoon destroyed two barns and damaged a shelter on the Betty Ruth Staton property north of Greenville on the Staton Mill Road. According to Staton House Fire Chief Darrell Williams, the fire apparently began from a cigarette thrown on the road side and spread into the field, igniting the two barns and a shelter. Damage estimates were said to be about $6,500. Williams said Stokes, Bethel and Robersonville fire departments also assisted in fighting the 1:36 p.m. blaze. There were no injuries reported. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Multimedia Project

Students in Maureen Markland's transition program at Third Street School have been involved in a multimedia project, "Young Authors," writing and publishing children's stories.

Students took pictures of classmates in the process of writing and publishing, and developed a slide presentation, with a script to accompany the show. They worked with WUNC-TV (PBS) on a film for television viewing, and two third grade students, Tony Bullock and Alton Cogdell, traveled to Raleigh to present the dialogue portion live. The show will be aired over PBS from 8:30 to 9 a.m. Tuesday and April 16.

Dr. Roger Dudek, assistant professor of anatomy at the East Carolina University School of Medicine, has been awarded a research grant from the Diabetes Research & Education Foundation.

Dudek received his doctorate in anatomy and cell biology from the University of Minnesota and has been associated with ECU since 1980. He is one of eight chosen from over 100 applicants.

Items scheduled for consideration at Thursday's meeting of the Greenville Board of Adjustments include the following:

•Resolution of appreciation for George Alvan, former board chairman, for service rendered.

•Public hearing on a request for amendment of a special use permit by James G. Rice. The amendment involves a permit issued in August 1979 for Arlington Self Storage Units and was necessitated by a change in the facility's design. The property, zoned for office and institutional use, is located on the north side of Arlington Boulevard, east of Seaboard Coastline Railroad.

The board will meet at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall, located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets.

Service Scheduled

Bells Chapel Holy Church will hold a building fund service tonight at 7:30. Speakers for the event include Sandra Bryant and Evangelist Emma Forbes.

PTA Meeting

The Wahl-Coates School PTA will meet Thursday at 7:30 p.m. in the school auditorium. A PTA film, "Better Safe Than Sorry," will be shown.

Delinquent Taxes

The city of Greenville will begin public advertisement of delinquent taxes April 8. Separate listings on real and personal property taxes will be published.

A spokesman said that since mortgage-loan companies may have failed to pay both real and personal taxes from escrow accounts, property owners are encouraged to check with the city collection office prior to April 1 to inquire about the status of tax payments. Calling before April 1 will allow the city sufficient time to remove from the advertisement lists names of property owners who have reconciled delinquent taxes.

Questions should be directed to the city collection office, 201 W. Fifth St., or call 752-4137.

the economy of the city and county, he suggested.

At present, there are 802 motel rooms available in the city, Walker said, while there will be 1,063 rooms available by the end of the year.

Walker, who said the cost of the display will be $5,000, said the city of Greenville has agreed to allocate $2,000 to the project.

Commissioners also delayed action on a request by Jeff McAllister, director of the Pitt County Council on Aging, for $16,000 to match $167,000 in federal funds to establish a foster grandparent program.

McAllister said the program would provide funds to pay low income persons 60 years old or older $2.20 a hour for up to 20 hours a week to work with children on a one-to-one basis in various youth programs throughout the county.

In a discussion of the budget for the coming fiscal year, commissioners told County Manager Reginald Gray to prepare a budget for their consideration that reflects no tax rate increase and no pay increase for county workers.

depressed or sad, maybe sleep problems ... One thing we'll be seeing now, I predict, is something that is probably compounding the anniversary reaction — the fact that it's tornado season again. One thing we saw very strongly in a number of people was a tremendous fear of storms."

Neurologist Dr. Ross Shuping said there has already been some incidence of anniversary reaction among those hit by the tornado. Some symptoms, such as headaches, sleep problems, anxiety, sweating, and heart racing, symptoms that seem to have no physical origin, may signal a recurrence of PTSD. Often people are not aware that the anniversary of a disaster or other traumatic event could be the cause such symptoms.

"When the anniversary comes again, people can get symptoms again," said Dr. Mega. "It's important for people to know that it's related to a trauma in the past, so they can begin to work it out. And this is not unusual."

Dr. Madakasira stressed that those with adequate social support who were able to talk about their experiences with family, friends, or neighbors, seemed to have fewer problems adjusting. He also said that if someone is still showing symptoms now, it is important to seek expert help.

Complications of a stress reaction can show up in a variety of ways, said Dr. Madakasira. Marriage difficulties, drinking problems, loss of a job because of an inability to concentrate or complete tasks, and personality changes such as irritability could be considered complications of PTSD if these have occurred since the tornado.

The best way to cope with PTSD or an anniversary reaction is to talk about the experience with a relaxed partner, someone who won't be upset by talking about the disaster, said Dr. Madakasira. Talking with experts and learning relaxation techniques could be helpful. Acknowledging that anxiety is a normal reaction and learning to deal with what happened are both important.

Learning what others do to cope with their feelings and fears can play a large part in accepting the tornado's effects, said Ms. Parker. There will be a support group meeting Thursday night, the anniversary date, in the Paramore Building behind Salem Methodist Church in Simpson, beginning at 7:30. "It will be a sort of celebration," Ms. Parker said.

Strike Ends

LONDON (AP) — The Sun, Britain's biggest-selling newspaper, has resumed publication after a seven-day strike by print workers.

Publication resumed after management and union officials agreed to jointly review the problem that caused the walkout — the repeated breakage of printing plates — said a company official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Management said the plates were being broken deliberately to slow production. The two unions involved denied the allegation and said the printing plates were a safety hazard.

More than 5,000 items, said to be worth $2.34 million, will go under the hammer June 5 less than two years after the museum opened in the 56-year-old Whitehall Theater near London's Trafalgar Square.

The museum is owned by Paul Raymond, Britain's nude show pioneer and leading erotic magazine publisher.

Martin To File His Tax Package

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's sweeping tax-cut package, which he estimates would reduce state revenues by $489 million by 1989, was expected to be filed in the Legislature today.

"We've got the momentum going for tax relief," said Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman, R-Iredell, the bill's likely sponsor. "I'm ready to get on with it."

Redman was to meet early this afternoon with Martin's chief lobbyist, Beverly Lake, to make final arrangements. The bill was in the Legislature's computer this morning, Redman said.

The bill calls for elimination of the property tax on intangible assets and the 3-percent state sales tax on food as of Jan. 1, 1986. It seeks a two-year phaseout of the property tax on business inventories between Jan. 1, 1986, and Jan. 1, 1988.

Northern Nash Shuts Down Rose, Rolls Up 10-0 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RED OAK — Northern Nash pitcher Maurice Cooper weaved a neat three-hit shutout as his Knights rushed past Rose High School, 10-0, yesterday in their Big East Conference baseball opener.

The Rampants were unable to get anything started in the game thanks to Cooper's pitching and some timely fielding by his teammates.

Rose's starter, Steve Wall, who suffered his first loss in four outings, didn't throw that badly — until the fifth inning — but he got little support behind him. The Rampants committed four errors and had four passed balls, which led to four early unearned runs, giving the Knights a lead that the Rampants could not overcome.

Then, in the fifth inning they stormed through seven hits, one of them a two-run homer, to score six times and put the game away.

Rose did have a few chances. In the second inning, Tony Taylor doubled down the left field line but got no further. Double plays in the third and fourth helped Cooper get out of a jam after he had walked two batters in each frame.

Doyle Kirkland doubled to open the sixth, but a strikeout, a fly ball and another fly ended that threat.

Northern, meanwhile, wasted little time in jumping on the scoreboard. Jesse Hunter led off the first with a fly to center that was errored, going all the way to the fence. By the time it was chased up, Hunter was on third base. He scored from there on Charlie Long's ground out. John Adams then walked and stole up. After taking third on an out, he scored on a single by Sam Vines.

That hit was the only one Wall allowed until the fifth when he was finally chased.

But Northern added two more unearned runs in the second without a hit. Wall struck out Jack Medlin, but he reached on a passed ball, moving to second on a wild pitch. Gary Wallace reached on an error and moved on to second on another error on the relay. Medlin scored on another passed ball, which put courtesy runner David Gaylord on third. He then scored on Long's sacrifice fly to center.

The Knights finished it off in the fifth, scoring six times. Long opened with a single and Adams got a hit. He was erased at second, however, on Cooper's fielder's choice. The two runners pulled a double steal, with Long scoring the first run.

Vines followed with a double to right, scoring Gaylord, running for Cooper. But the relay caught Vines off second and he was run down and tagged out. Tim Wilson, however, hit another double to right and that spelled the end for Wall. Battle Emory gave up a hit to Medlin, and a balk scored Wilson. Wallace single in Medlin and Arrington followed with a homer to right, closing out the scoring.

Gary Scott came on then to get the final out and to finish up the game.

"We were bad, very, very bad," a disappointed coach Ronald Vincent said afterwards. "Our pitching was bad, our catching was bad, our hitting was bad, our infield was bad and our outfield was bad. I just hope that we'll play better from here on."

"I really don't think we went at it hard either. We just went through the motions. Northern Nash has a good team, but we should have played better."

The loss dropped Rose to 4-2 on the season, 0-1 in league play. Northern Nash climbs to 6-0, 1-0.

Rose returns to action on Thursday, hosting Rocky Mount at Guy Smith Stadium in Greenville.

Godley Hurls Jaguars To Win

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

FARMVILLE — Billy Godley fired a four-hitter and struck out 10 as the Farmville Central Jaguars blanked SouthWest Edgecombe 3-0 Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school baseball action.

Godley also drove in the game-winning run with a single in the fifth inning as the Jaguars improved their overall record to 2-5 while 2-0 in the ECC.

"Billy got into a little trouble in the sixth, but he managed to work out of it," Farmville Coach Bill Davis said. "We played better in the field than we have in most of our games, but we still aren't swinging the bats as well as we should."

"To be a contender, we're going to have to swing better."

The Jaguars managed just six hits off SouthWest pitcher Billy Braswell, who struck out nine and walked two in going the distance on the mound. Other than the three runs in the fifth, the Jaguars never put runners in scoring position with less than two out.

Godley doubled in the first after two outs and went to third when the ball got by the right fielder. But Braswell struck out May to end that threat.

Then in the fourth, Brian Windham walked after one out and was later safe at second on an error of a fielder's choice by Brian Huber. Mark Wooten went down on strikes for the second out, and Dennis Tripp reached first on an error to load the bases. But Braswell pitched out of the jam with another strikeout to maintain the scoreless effort.

But in the fifth, Hugh Moore looped a single up the middle to open the decisive rally. Randy Daniels singled to left, and Godley drove the ball to center field allowing Moore to score the eventual game-winning run. Daniels and Godley moved to second and third on the play at the plate.

Greg May followed with a two-run single to right, and he took second when the fielder bobbled the ball. But Braswell recorded a pair of strikeouts to close the Jaguars' rally.

Godley walked Mark Pittman to open the top of the sixth, and Pittman stole second. Braswell followed with a base on balls, but a pop up in the infield and a pair of strikeouts by Godley ended the Cougars hopes of evening score.

After Godley struck out the first two batters in the seventh, Andy Varnell beat out an infield single. Varnell stole second and moved to third on a passed ball, but Godley struck out Tony Nichols to end the game.

"I've seen a lot of things happen with two out in the seventh," Davis said. "Baseball is as much mental as it is physical; you have to be tough. If there is something negative I have to point to about this game, it would be that I'm disappointed with our intensity. I'm hoping that will pick up as our younger kids gain experience."

Farmville hosts D.H. Conley Friday in a non-conference, cross-county battle.

Patrick Ewing listens to questions at a news conference Tuesday in New York. Ewing, a Georgetown All-American, was named as the 1985 Eastman Award Collegiate Player of the

Dalton Once Worried If He'd Ever Walk Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four years ago, Ralph Dalton worried about whether he would ever walk again. Now the man who backs up Georgetown All-American Patrick Ewing finds himself a mainstay on a team bidding for its second straight NCAA title.

"It happened during an intrasquad scrimmage," says Dalton, recalling the 1981 injury that almost ended his career. "I just fell on the floor. The knee snapped and I tore some ligaments. The doctors said there was some nerve damage."

Coach John Thompson had asked Dalton to attend military school for two years before entering Georgetown and now that hard work was disappearing in an operating room.

"When he got hurt, I wasn't concerned about his career so much as his ability to function," said Thompson. "I thought he would be really, seriously restricted."

But the 6-11, 240-pound senior was on the court again in eight months. He plays now only with a massive knee brace and a right shoe that looks more like an army boot, reaching almost all the way up his calf. The reward has been trips to the Final Four in each of the last two years.

On Saturday, the Hoyas will play St. John's for the right to face the winner of the Villanova-Memphis State game in the tournament finale.

While everyone looks to Ewing as the main force behind the 34-2 Hoyas, the defending national champions are far from a one-man team. Never was that more evident than in last week's regional final, however, when Dalton helped Georgetown keep pace with Georgia Tech while the foul-plagued Ewing sat on the bench for 13 minutes of the second half.

Three times in the final 5:23 the Engineers pulled to within two and (See DALTON, Page 18)

PIKEVILLE — John Thomas ripped a pair of homers to lead C.B. Aycock to an 11-4 victory over Ayden-Grifton Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school baseball action.

Thomas finished with 3-4 performance at the plate, but it was four homers by the Falcons that sealed the victory.

Ayden-Grifton got on the scoreboard first with a run in the top of the second. Tony McLawhorn singled, and courtesy runner Jesse Hooker stole second and went to third when the throw sailed into center field. A fielder's choice by Frank Mills drove in Hooker. Thomas and John Herring belted back-to-back homers in the bottom of the second to put Aycock ahead to stay.

In the fourth, Herring walked and later scored on an error in center field for a 3-1 Falcons' lead.

Thomas and Paul Summerlin both homered in the fifth to lead a seven-run barrage.

"We just got beat by the lang ball," Ayden-Grifton Coach Chris Ross said. "Our pitching was somewhat weaker than I would have liked, but they swung the bats real well. We just weren't competitive enough on the mound."

The Chargers, now 3-4 overall and 1-1 in the conference, host Southern Nash Thursday.

WHEAT SWAMP — Stan Robinson and Bobby Simmons each ripped three-run homers to lead North Lenoir to a 12-2 victory over Greene Central Tuesday in high school baseball action.

Jerry Waters led the Hawks with three hits, while winning pitcher Steve Quinn struck out five and gave up just four hits in going the distance.

Robinson's blast came in the first inning and capped four-run rally.

After Greene Central plated a run in the top of the fourth, North Lenoir added two more in the bottom of the frame to maintain a 6-1 edge.

The Rams added another run in the fifth, but Simmons' homer highlighted a five-run effort in the sixth.

"We looked very good in practice, but when it comes time to squeeze the trigger we just can't do it," Greene Central Coach James Fulghum said. "It's just a matter of getting it done in the games."

STANHOPE — Bob May hit a three-run homer in the bottom of the sixth inning to climax a Southern Nash rally that downed North Pitt, 11-7, in an Eastern Carolina Conference baseball game Tuesday.

North Pitt grabbed the initial lead in the contest in the opening inning, scoring four times. Jarvis Massenburg led off by reaching on an error, as did Neal Everett. John Hobbs then cracked a three-run homer. Thomas Wright kept it going by getting a hit. He came around on infield outs to score the fourth run.

The Panthers added one in the second, while the Firebirds came up with two. Another North Pitt run crossed in the third but Southern connected for three, all on a homer by Mike Boykin.

Both teams scored a run in the fifth to leave the Panthers up, 7-6.

Then, in the sixth, the Firebirds rallied for five to gain the win. Jeff Morgan and Brian Marlowe both walked and Lynn Webb singled in Morgan. Tony Hendrix doubled, driving in Marlowe to put the 'Birds in the lead, 8-7. May then provided the insurance with a three-run homer.

May led the Firebird hitting with three while Hendrix had two. Everett and Wright each had two for North Pitt.

The Panthers are now 2-3 overall and 0-1 in league play. They travel to Greene Central on Thursday for their next action.

The Lakers drew first blood, scoring a run in the top of the first. Todd Gibbs singled and moved up on an out. Watson then reached on an error, scoring Gibbs with what was to be the only Laker run.

Chocowinity tied it up with one in the third. Maurice Tripp and Patrick Wells both walked. Larry Harding singled to score Tripp.

Then, in the fourth, the Indians pushed in two runs to take a 3-1 lead. With one out and a runner on, Brian Badeau reached on a fielder's choice that left two away. Ronnie Craig walked and Tripp singled to load the bases. Wells walked, forcing in Badeau. Louis Albritton then singled in Craig but Tripp was thrown out at the plate.

The victories avenged a previous loss at VCU and improved the Lady Pirates' record to 15-7-1. East Carolina hosted North Carolina Wesleyan today in a doubleheader, and the Lady Pirates host South Carolina Saturday at 2 p.m. in a twinbill.

Williams To Sign With ECU

John Williams, a 6-3, 170-pound guard from Atlantic City, N.J., has given an oral commitment to sign with East Carolina University, basketball coach Charlie Harrison announced today.

Williams, who played under Coach Bill Devenny at Atlantic City High School, was the starting point guard on a team that went 24-3, reaching the South Jersey Group IV semifinals before losing out.

A two-year starter, Williams played the off-guard position as a junior, and Harrison said he is most likely to play that spot for the Pirates. He averaged 12.1 points a game and 4.5 assists, making the second team all-conference team.

"We are really fortunate to get John. He's an awfully good player," Harrison said.

A left-handed shooter, Harrison said he is a good scorer from the perimeter.

Williams' commitment brings to four the number recruited by the Pirates this year. During the early signing period, the Pirates inked Immanuel Jones of Washington, D.C.; Al Clark of Oakton, Va., and Jeff Kelly of South Orange, N.J.

The national signing date comes in April and Williams' commitment will not become official until then.

The death of anyone in an accident, be he athlete or not, is a tragedy.

But it would seem that some areas of the media have been casting about over the recent days to find a scapegoat — someone or something to point a finger at and say "You're guilty!"

That, we believe, is a disservice to Erskine Evans, who died in the accident, and not only East Carolina University, but sports programs throughout the nation.

One media outlet quoted members of the East Carolina track team as saying having to drive to meets in vans was the culprit — that buses should be provided. Another media went so far as to say that because ECU's track is in disrepair that the lack of home meets was at fault.

Nonsense!

Certainly traveling to and from athletic events in vans is uncomfortable to say the least. We've done it, traveling with ECU athletic teams, and it's no fun. But ECU and schools all over the country have no other way of getting things done within the budget they must work with.

It would be nice to be able to send every team, no matter what it's size, on a nice big bus. East Carolina nearly went so far as to purchase a bus a few years back.

But look at last weekend's schedule. The baseball team had a doubleheader in Richmond and had to travel there. The track team, of course, attended the Georgia Relays in Athens, Ga. The women's softball team was in Tallahassee, Fla., for a tournament. The men's tennis team was scheduled in Norfolk and Richmond. The women's track team was scheduled for a meet in Gainesville, Fla.

No one bus could have handled it all. So which team would have gotten it? We don't know.

The cost of chartering a bus is not small. East Carolina's budget certainly does not allow the cost for all those trips for just one weekend by bus. The only alternative would be to cut back on the schedules.

We don't think that the athletes would prefer that solution.

If there is an ogre in the program, it is the problem of having to get into a vehicle, be it a bus or a van or a car, following an athletic event and drive for hours to return.

A short trip, three hours or so, might not be bad. But on anything more than that, efforts should be made to build in overnight plans. After competing in any event, be it track, or what have you, there is an increased fatigue factor.

It might also be asked too if the van was equipped with seat belts and if so, how many of the passengers were wearing them.

Certainly, staying an additional night on the road is costly, too, but not as much as the cost of driving a bus. And even then there is a fatigue factor on the driver of the bus, too. We recall one bus trip with the ECU basketball team, returning from Atlanta, Ga., when the driver was beginning to nod off and drift off the road before getting us back to Greenville.

East Carolina will continue to have some of its teams travel by van, just as other schools will do. Hopefully, increased support from gate receipts, donations through the Pirate Club and other proper sources will allow future teams to spend the night on long trips.

The death of Evans, a former Rose High School track star, was a very unfortunate thing, no question about it. We are all poorer through his loss. The fact remains that in our 21 years of experience with ECU, Evans' death is the first one in a trip-related accident. There have been accidents — that must be expected. But to our knowledge, the accident Sunday was the first in those 21 years in which an athlete has been injured.

We suspect that a national survey would find East Carolina's record an outstanding one.

Dalton...

two of those times it was Dalton on the line, canning free throws that helped preserve the 60-54 victory.

"I'm supposed to be prepared if it comes down to me," said Dalton, a 63 percent foul-shooter who hit four straight against Tech. "Saturday, I was fortunate that it came to me and I was able to come through."

His teammates appreciate what the bulky Dalton does, even if it doesn't draw attention from elsewhere.

"Ralph has meant a lot to the program, through his character, his personality and his strength," says forward Bill Martin, who came to Georgetown in the same year as both Dalton and Ewing. "Ralph has suffered a lot. But he plays and works hard, and this year he may be playing better than he ever has."

Given one of his few moments in the limelight, Dalton instead deflects the attention to the selfless game Thompson coaches.

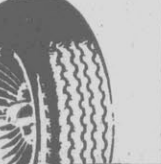

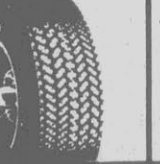

"I have to give the credit to Coach Thompson," says Dalton, showing a sheepish smile that contrasts sharply with his physical play on the court. "He's the one who prepared me, just like he's prepared the whole team. It wasn't me you saw doing the job on Saturday. It was the whole team pulling together. I was just in the spotlight."

"My time has always been like that, especially around tournament time. You can never tell what's going to happen. I accept it. I enjoy it."

"He's meant an awful lot to us, and people are just starting to realize that," Thompson says.

Tulane Player Denies Point

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Tulane University's all-star center John "Hot Rod" Williams, one of two students arrested in an alleged point-shaving scheme involving the Green Wave basketball team, says he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

"I have nothing to do with this," the All-Metro Conference selection said Tuesday as he arrived at the Orleans Parish District Attorney's office. "I have too much at stake," the 6-foot-10 senior said.

The 23-year-old Williams and 21-year-old Gray Kranz were arrested Tuesday and accused of involvement in point shaving in at least two games — against Final Four participant Memphis State and Southern Mississippi. Warrants were issued for two other Tulane basketball players, authorities said.

Orleans Parish District Attorney Harry Connick said at a surprise news conference that Williams, a senior from Sorrento, La., and Kranz, of New York, as well as 6-7 sophomore swingman David Dominique, 19, of New Iberia, La., and 6-0 senior guard Bobby Thompson, 21, of New Orleans, will be booked for violations of Louisiana sports bribery laws. Dominique and Thompson were still at large late Tuesday, authorities said.

Kranz also will be booked on multiple violations of controlled dangerous substance laws relative to possession of cocaine and distribution of the drug, Connick said. Authorities have not said what role Kranz, a non-player, had in the alleged scheme.

When rumors of point-shaving surfaced on the Tulane campus a month ago, basketball coach Ned Fowler said he and Athletic Director Hindman Wall began their own in-house investigation. "I didn't feel there was any substance to the rumors at the time," Fowler said when reached at his home late Tuesday.

"I'm very upset — flabbergasted. This is the last thing I ever thought would happen to any of my players or my team," Fowler said. "I'm very confused. I see... evidence they have."

Williams, who averaged 18 points and 7.9 rebounds per game this season for the Green Wave, has been a standout in the conference since he was named Freshman of the Year. Williams, who according to several National Basketball Association scouts, was considered to be a certain first-round draft choice, was the conference's Player of the Year in 1984.

Tulane finished the 1984-85 season a disappointing 15-13 and a 6-8 mark in the conference. The Green Wave was eliminated by Cincinnati in the first round of the conference tournament.

The games involved in the alleged scheme were against Southern Mississippi on Feb. 2 and Memphis State on Feb. 20, Connick said. Both games were played at Tulane.

Williams scored 14 points in the 60-49 loss to Memphis State, a game in which Tulane was a four-point underdog. He was 5-for-12 from the field and made 4 of 6 free throws.

In the Southern Mississippi game, won by Tulane 64-63, Williams played erratically in the first half, making just one of eight shots. He wound up with 15 points for the game. Tulane was a 10½-point favorite to defeat Southern Mississippi.

The last point-shaving scheme involved six Boston College games during the 1978-1979 season, with a member of the team, Rick Kuhn, among those convicted of conspiracy to commit sports bribery and jailed.

College basketball was rocked by gambling-related fixes in the 1950s, with many top teams and players involved, including the City College of New York team of 1949-50, which won both the NCAA and National Invitation Tournaments.

Connick said the maximum penalty for violation of Louisiana's sports bribery five-year jail sentence.

The district attorney said the situation was widespread. It involved the state of Louisiana, probability, gambling states.

Growing Enthusiasm For Smith To Stay At Auburn

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Auburn basketball Coach Sonny Smith, who complained about lackluster support when he abruptly resigned last month, says the growing enthusiasm of players and fans during the Tigers' Cinderella postseason was one reason he changed his mind.

"The reasons (for leaving) were overshadowed by the players," Smith said after withdrawing his resignation Tuesday. "They've all been in to see me. It's been a campaign. That was sort of the turning point."

Smith also cited "the overwhelming support I got from Auburn alumni and fans in the form of letters and telephone calls," which he said have kept two secretaries busy since Auburn was knocked out of the NCAA Southeast Regional playoffs by North Carolina last Friday.

The Auburn coach, who never fully explained his initial reasons for resigning, did not elaborate on his change of heart as he issued a prepared statement Tuesday. But he planned to make further comments at a news conference today.

Auburn Athletic Director Pat Dye confirmed Tuesday that Smith had withdrawn his resignation, and said: "We believe it is in the best interest of our basketball program to have him remain at Auburn."

Smith, 48, stunned Auburn basketball fans by announcing his resignation plans Feb. 8. It was reported at the time that Smith had a conflict with a member of the Auburn board of trustees, State Finance Director Henry Steagall, a key basketball supporter at Auburn.

But Steagall denied the reports and Smith admitted Steagall played no role in his decision to resign. However, Smith also disagreed with Steagall's description of their relationship, which the trustee called supportive.

The resignation also came as Auburn was finishing a roller-coaster regular season that ended with a 16-11 overall record and an 8-10 Southeastern Conference mark.

Then, driven by the realization that Smith was leaving, Auburn won its first SEC tournament championship and pushed on into the NCAA tournament where the Tigers knocked off Purdue and Kansas, its first ever NCAA tourney victories, before falling to North Carolina.

Along the way, the support for Smith grew. Large crowds greeted the team when it returned to Montgomery's Dannelly Field and signs carried to games asked Smith to stay.

with three runs in the second, but SouthWest matched that in the third, then took the lead with one in the fourth and two in the fifth. Farmville rallied to tie it up with three in the sixth.

After neither team scored in the seventh, SouthWest pushed over three in the top of the eighth and held Farmville to just two for the win.

P. Gorham, Bell and Johnson each had two hits to lead SouthWest, while Pam Ellis, Debra Joyner and Kim Johnson each had two for Farmville. One of Johnson's hits was a double.

Farmville Central is now 0-7 overall and 0-2 in league play. They travel to Conley on Friday.

Tennessee, Indiana Battle In NIT Semifinal Game

NEW YORK (AP) — For five years, Don DeVoe was at Bobby Knight's side. But tonight, he'll be across the court when their basketball teams play in the semifinals of the 48th National Invitation Tournament.

"Whenever you play against a Bobby Knight-coached team, you'd better be ready to play," said DeVoe, who leads his Tennessee Volunteers against Knight's Indiana Hoosiers prior to the UCLA-Louisville game. "We're going to have to be at the top of our game, but our players are looking forward to this opportunity."

Because he was Knight's assistant coach at Army in the late 1960s, DeVoe knows exactly what to look for in the contest at Madison Square Garden.

"I expect Bobby Knight to be Bobby Knight, and that is to take the ball inside, especially to his big man (7-foot-2) Uwe Blab," DeVoe said. "And, of course, if you slack off on Steve Alford, he's going to put the ball in the basket. He's got a great inside-outside punch with this basketball squad."

While Tennessee does not have the basketball tradition of the other three teams in the NIT's Final Four, DeVoe doesn't think his team should take a back seat to any of them in this tournament.

"We certainly don't have the image that the other teams do," DeVoe said, referring to the 15 NCAA titles accumulated by the other three, "but this Tennessee team has played some very fine basketball at times this year and even though we're small, we seem to be able to make enough big plays to stay close. And in recent NIT games, we've been a great come-from-behind squad."

So far, all of Tennessee's games in this tournament have been close ones, including a 73-72 win over Southwestern Louisiana when the Vols came back from a five-point deficit in the last 19 seconds.

Knight said he hasn't had a chance to scout Tennessee, but noted with a smile, "They've got a helluva coach because I trained him. Don was with me for five years at West Point, and he's done a great, great job at three different schools, which I think is a testament to his coaching ability."

After DeVoe left Knight, he coached at Virginia Tech, where he won an NIT title in 1973, and Wyoming before taking over the Vols' program.

"He's been good at each of those places," Knight said. "Don's teams play very hard, and other than that I don't know much about them. I've not seen them play."

This is Knight's seventh NIT appearance as a coach, including his third with Indiana which he won with in 1979. DeVoe is in his second NIT tourney with Tennessee, after losing in last year's quarterfinals.

The winner will advance to the final Friday night against the Louisville-UCLA winner.

UCLA, after a slow start this season, turned things around and is now the hottest team among the NIT's Final Four, having won 11 of its last 12 games.

"We've just worked hard — worked hard all the way through," Coach Walt Hazzard said. "We didn't change much, except for putting (6-foot-1 guard) Montel Hatcher in. That was the only significant lineup change. But, other than that, we just watched some boys become men throughout the course of some real tough and difficult tests."

Hazzard said his Bruins "came of age" during the Pacific-10 Conference season.

"We were very competitive there," he said. "Everytime we stepped on the floor, other teams knew they had a battle on their hands."

In an earlier meeting this year, UCLA beat Louisville by 10 points. But many of the Cardinals feel they are a better team than the one that lost to the Bruins.

Louisville guard Mike Abram said the club still has "dry spurts, but we've narrowed them down to two minutes instead of like it used to be. We're reacting instead of thinking, which is how it has to be."

His running mate at guard, Jeff Hall, said the Cardinals have been "fitting pieces and pieces together as we go. We're close to what we want."

St. John's Prepares For Rematch With Hoyas

NEW YORK (AP) — Coach Lou Carnesecca says that playing well won't be good enough for St. John's against Georgetown in the NCAA semifinals Saturday.

"It's not like we don't know who they are," Carnesecca said of the top-ranked Hoyas, who beat the Redmen twice in three meetings this year. "To beat Georgetown, you can't afford to have an off day. In fact, a good day won't do. You need a great day."

"We can't afford to make any more mistakes," the St. John's coach said, "or we put the balls away."

Carnesecca will be making his Final Four debut after 17 years as St. John's coaching, but he says he isn't satisfied with just making it to Lexington, Ky.

"I always wanted to get there," he said. "But it's not enough to get there. You want to stay there. Now we have to go for broke."

"We want a whack at the whole ball of wax. A lot of people are so happy to get there, they forget why they're there."

No. 3 St. John's halted Georgetown's 29-game winning streak with a 66-65 victory when the two played at Landover, Md., in their first meeting. Georgetown won the next two meetings easily, including a 92-80 decision in the Big East Tournament final.

But as the top seed in the NCAA West Regional, the Redmen beat Southern, Arkansas, Kentucky and North Carolina State to reach the semifinals.

Carnesecca said his team played poorly in the two losses to Georgetown.

"If you look at the last two losses, you can see that we were not beaten badly," Carnesecca said. "We gave the games away. As much as they were good, we beat ourselves. We made mistakes."

The 60-year-old coach said he may let his center, 7-foot Bill Wennington, stick with 7-0 All-American Patrick Ewing 1-on-1.

"We may have concentrated too much on Ewing and forgot about the other guys," Carnesecca said. "He (Wennington) has played him as well as anyone around, and maybe we should let Ewing get his bundle and concentrate on stopping the others."

"If you concentrate too much on the big fellow, the other guys will chop you up — Michael Jackson, Ralph Dalton, Reggie Williams."

Reagan Seeks Exclusion From Bill Cutting Library Cost

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, a champion of voluntary giving, so far has passed up an opportunity to let his supporters assume some of the government cost of operating a future Reagan presidential library.

He was asked this month to lend his support to a bill that would force private fund-raisers for presidential libraries to put up an additional 20 percent for building operations and personnel costs.

The White House hasn't said how the Reagan feels about that, but the president often has said more volunteer efforts from the private sector could help cut government spending.

When the issue arose last year, Budget Director David Stockman said the administration supports the 20 percent requirement — as long as it doesn't affect Reagan's projected library.

Two weeks ago, Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., the chairman of a House subcommittee that was considering a bill to reduce the government's expenses of operating presidential libraries, wrote Reagan again.

"I think it would be unconscionable to ask future generations to be saddled with the cost of operating your library, when funds for an endowment could easily be raised as an adjunct to the general library fundraising effort," he said.

English wrote that he was soliciting "your personal support," and asked for a reply by March 26. No reply had been received by the time the subcommittee met on Tuesday and the bill was unanimously recommended for passage — with the Reagan exclusion intact.

After the vote, a letter arrived from M.B. Oglesby, assistant to the president for legislative affairs, saying the request had been "transmitted to the appropriate officials for consideration."

Under current law, presidential libraries are built with private funds and then are donated to the federal government. Uncle Sam pays the bill for upkeep and staff, currently $15 million a year.

The papers of Presidents Hoover, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Truman, Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson and Ford are stored in libraries bearing their name. Similar facilities for Presidents Nixon and Carter are in the planning or building stage.

The bill, which English's information subcommittee sent on to the full House Government Operations Committee, would defray those $1.5 million-a-year operating expenses of each library by using the income from the 20 percent endowment.

"For future presidential libraries, the anticipated appropriation would be cut by one-half," English wrote.

Published reports have said that the Reagan library, to be built at Stanford University, will cost $45 million. A $9 million endowment, earning 10 percent a year, would pay for more than half the upkeep.

Last year, when a nearly identical bill was before the House, Stockman wrote that the administration would support the measure if it were changed "to exclude the library of the current president."

That was done, but the bill died in the crunch of legislation toward the end of the term.

The bill passed Tuesday by the subcommittee applies only to "any president who takes the oath of office as president for the first time on or after Jan. 20, 1984."

"Library operating costs are ongoing in nature," English wrote the president. "Consequently, to exclude your library from the endowment requirement would mean the additional appropriation of at least $750,000 per year, in perpetuity."

Court Says Nativity Scene OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — An evenly divided Supreme Court today upheld a ruling that forces a New York community to provide public land for a privately sponsored Christmas Nativity scene each year.

The justices, by a 4-4 vote, ruled that Scarsdale, N.Y., must permit the placing of a Nativity scene in the park in the middle of town.

Such tie votes do not set any national precedent because it is possible that in some future case the same issue will be decided by all nine justices.

Justice Lewis F. Powell, who missed hearing arguments in the Scarsdale case while recuperating from prostate surgery, did not participate in deciding the case. The tie vote automatically upheld a ruling by the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, but the justices issued no opinion of their own.

The court's one-sentence upholding of the lower court's ruling did not tell how each individual justice voted.

The Scarsdale case had been seen as an opportunity for the nation's highest court to further explain its ruling last year that allowed communities, if they so choose, to sponsor displays depicting the Biblical version of the birth of Christ.

The court ruled, 5-4, in a case from Pawtucket, R.I., last year that the city did not violate the constitutionally required separation of church and state when it included a Nativity scene — or creche — among its annual Christmas decorations.

Scarsdale, an affluent New York City suburb of 17,000, had over the years permitted Nativity scenes in Boniface Circle, a public park in the center of the village's business district.

But, amid growing protests from Jewish organizations and others, the village board of trustees in 1982 voted not to permit a display.

Two groups of village residents, including representatives of seven Catholic and Protestant churches, sued the village board over its decision. Their lawsuit said the ban on Nativity scenes violated their free-speech rights.

Harassed Student Shoots School Boy

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — A 14-year-old student who had been harassed by an older classmate took a gun to school today and shot the boy in the chest on the playground, officials said.

The injured boy was taken to Santa Rosa Hospital, where his condition was undetermined, spokeswoman Molly Gofron said.

"I don't think he was wounded very seriously," said Jay D. Brown, assistant principal Page Middle School.

A student was taken into custody at the school with a .22-caliber pistol just minutes after the 7:45 a.m. shooting, said police spokesman Paul Buske.

The shooting occurred when the older student again started harassing the boy, who then pulled out the gun and shot him, Buske said.

Brown said the shooting took place on the playground before school began and was witnessed by other students.

Aircraft Damaged Slightly In Carrier Landing Effort

NORFOLK, Va. (AP) — Five aircraft received minimal damage when a Navy jet attempting a night landing on the carrier Nimitz missed an arresting cable and struck other planes on the flight deck, a Navy spokesman says.

Lt. Cmdr. Dale Smith said the tailhook of the E-2C Hawkeye missed the cable used to bring landing planes to a halt, and hit three parked aircraft. Another aircraft was damaged by flying debris.

"The repairs to the four aircraft that were parked should be minimal and not take too long," Smith said. "The repairs to the E-2C also should be done on board if we get the proper parts to the carrier."

There were no injuries in the accident early Tuesday during routine flight operations in the western Atlantic Ocean, about 160 miles northeast of the Virgin Islands, Smith said.

Smith said it "is not uncommon" for airplanes to miss arresting cables. When it happens, he said, pilots respond by flying over the flight deck and circling the ship to make another landing attempt.

"The plane strayed to the right of the center line on the deck, and its right wing tip struck the tails of three parked aircraft as the pilot lifted off to come off and attempt another landing," Smith said.

Smith said the Hawkeye, which is equipped with computerized gear used to track airborne and surface targets, landed without difficulty on its next attempt.

The parked aircraft sustaining damage were identified by Smith as an A-6E Intruder bomber, an F-14 Tomcat fighter jet and two A-7E Corsair light attack aircraft.

The Navy was unable to provide specific details on the damage caused to the aircraft, but Smith said initial estimates placed damages at less than $500,000.

The accident did not affect the ship's operating schedule, the Navy spokesman said.

The Navy was conducting an investigation into the cause of the accident, he said.

Gold Fever

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — Gold fever has gripped residents of a mountainous area in Serbia after reportedly rich deposits of gold and platinum were discovered, the Belgrade daily Politika reported.

"They all tried to hide the real truth about the gold. But we are convinced that the gold fever, which has spread among both experts and villagers at the foot of the Golc and Zeljina mountains, cannot be concealed from the public eye any longer," the daily said.

The paper said professional geologists are also prospecting in the area.

Shootings

TUNIS, Tunisia (AP) — A farmer killed 12 people — including his mother, sister and pregnant wife — with shotgun blasts before committing suicide, police say.

The incident occurred in the small town of Fahs, 40 miles south of Tunis. Police said the farmer, Ben Jebir, 28, had been treated several times in a Tunis mental hospital.

Seat Belts Buckling In Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of mandatory seat belt legislation facing dwindling Senate support may resurrect an even more controversial issue to save the bill.

Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, had carefully worded his bill to say juries may not consider the use of seat belts in awarding damages due to a crash. But Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, told the Senate Tuesday that without the provision the bill could run afoul of federal guidelines.

Warren said the bill would face a more difficult road to passage if amended to include mitigation of damages — an issue that has met strong legislative resistance before.

"This would have two effects," he said. "It would clear the matter up for some people and there are others who say if it changes present laws they cannot support it."

The controversy came because of a federal Department of Transportation promise that if enough states adopt acceptable seat belt laws DOT will not require expensive air bags in cars built after 1989.

The bill seemed to be doing well as the Senate rejected attempts to add working farmers and back-seat passengers to its provisions. But Warren said he may have been lucky when senators voted 28-21 to return the bill to the Senate Judiciary Committee after the debate.

"The bill seems to be in some trouble," said Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, Judiciary I chairman. "It's probably going to have trouble getting out of committee if comparative negligence is added on the bill."

"I would like to see the seat belt law passed," said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan. "Right now it's in trouble. Any time you add issues on top of a bill you tend to lose people."

Warren said he had 29 firm votes for the bill, which would require seat belts for most front-seat passengers not covered by child-restraint laws.

The bill would exempt people with medical reasons as well as users of motorcycles, vehicles with more than 10 seats, delivery trucks with frequent stops, vehicles not required to have belts and pickup trucks being used for business or agriculture. After 15 months of warning tickets, violations would carry up to a $25 fine.

Supporters voted 26-23 against an amendment to bring pickup trucks under the bill after Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said it would erode support of lawmakers from rural areas.

By the same vote, the Senate approved outlawing roadblocks erected solely to check compliance. An amendment that would have extended the bill to back-seat riders failed 26-23 after Warren said, "A mile down the road, Johnny has decided he isn't going to be buckled up no more and leaves his mother in violation."

Requiring seat belts is "a public health cure we know works," said Warren, repeating the estimate that 400 North Carolinians would be saved each year. "They cost our state hundreds of millions of dollars" in insurance costs, lost productivity and workers compensation.

Warren said the turning point may have come when he moved to cut off debate, and Jordan ruled opponents won the voice vote and that Warren's request for a roll call came too late.

"I thought the (opponents) were just louder," Warren said. "I thought we had the votes."

Weevil Program Started In West

WASHINGTON (AP) — The boll weevil, long a destructive pest of cotton in the South, has also become entrenched in parts of the West, where a program to eradicate the weevil is under way, says the Agriculture Department.

The program began with this spring's cotton planting operations in Arizona, California and northern Mexico, Bert W. Hawkins, administrator of the department's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said Tuesday.

Boll weevils were first detected in California in 1982, following a rapid buildup in their numbers in southern Arizona and adjacent areas of Mexico.

Hawkins said the infestation in the Southwest marks a significant increase of the pest's historical range, which for nearly a century was limited to Cotton Belt states from Texas to Virginia.

The eradication program is being carried out in cooperation with cotton producers, the state governments of Arizona and California and the plant protection service of the Mexican government, he said.

Methods include aerial and ground applications of the pesticide malathion and the observance of planting schedules within certain dates so that the boll weevil's reproductive cycle is disrupted.

Hawkins said traps also have been set throughout the 300,000 acres in the boll weevil area to help monitor the level of infestation.

Adams Will Push Suit Against CBS

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite CBS Inc.'s decision to hand over a list of its 24,000 shareholders to the conservative group Fairness in Media, a North Carolina newspaper publisher says he won't drop his suit against the network.

"My feeling is they should give us the list without any restrictions," Hoover Adams, publisher and editor of the Dunn Daily Record, said Tuesday. "At this time, I do not intend to withdraw my suit."

Adams, who sued in New York state court seeking a copy of the list, said he didn't know if it had arrived in time to allow FIM to launch a proxy fight, but he believed such a fight would occur eventually.

"It's going to be awfully difficult to stage a proxy fight between now and April 17," the date of CBS annual shareholder meeting, said Adams, who is a CBS shareholder. Adams has said he is not a FIM member, but sued on the group's behalf to get the list.

Adams said a list of stockholders was delivered to the offices of his New York lawyers, Olwine, Connelly, Chase, O'Donnell and Weyher, about noon Tuesday.

He said he thought some of CBS's restrictions were "unfair and illegal" and his suit would have the network turn over the list with no limitations.

CBS announced that it would deliver the shareholder list Tuesday to FIM. CBS said FIM, which is associated with Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., had agreed to certain conditions on the list's use and disclosure.

Helms, who has said he is not an FIM member, wrote more than 1 million conservatives asking them to buy CBS stock to end the network's "liberal bias" and "become Dan Rather's boss."

In a news release Tuesday, Jim Cain, a Raleigh attorney who represents FIM, called the release of the list "a great victory for FIM."

The conservative group "will use the list to contact CBS stockholders in support of our campaign and to end the bias and bring fairness to CBS news reporting," Cain said.

Adams said he planned to attend the shareholders' meeting in Chicago but said "I don't know yet exactly what we'll do ... Eventually, I certainly think we'll try to stage a proxy fight, but that remains to be seen."

He said he was "pretty sure there'll be a mailing going to stockholders shortly."

CBS said the group agreed to use the list only for soliciting shareholder proxies, a tender offer, a special meeting or other shareholder action that would bring a change in CBS management or policy.

Cain said the group may call a special stockholders meeting after the April 17 meeting.

While FIM agreed to return the list to CBS after the April 17 meeting, CBS agreed to make it available to FIM at any time on five days notice for any of the agreed-upon purposes, Cain said in the release.

The group also agreed to return all copies of the list after CBS's annual shareholder meeting.

The list will not be made available to other groups linked to Helms, and it will be shown only to certain members of the group and to a professional proxy solicitation firm, CBS said.

Fairness in Media has said it is considering a proxy fight to seek seats on CBS's board of directors. It also has said it is considering making a tender offer for CBS.

CBS has said it would fight any takeover attempt.

Ann Landers Gets Doctorate

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — After years of giving advice to the luckless and lovelorn, columnist Ann Landers now will be able to add the title "Doctor" to her name.

The 66-year-old adviser, a longtime Wisconsin resident, will be awarded an honorary doctorate of humane letters from the University of Wisconsin-Madison on May 18.

Eppie Lederer, who uses the pen name Ann Landers for her syndicated advice column, will be cited for her "strong commitment and tireless service to medical education and research," the school said.

Her special interest in cancer research has led to her membership on the national board of the American Cancer Society and the board of the National Cancer Institute.

Strike Ends

'Gift of Life' Has Human Stories of Organ Transplants

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Gift of Life," tonight's CBS documentary on organ transplants, shows that such presentations can be graphic, gripping and uplifting without overdoing it.

We see a heart's first beats in a new chest and a liver entering a young boy's body, but not enough surgery to turn a queasy stomach. We see a woman overwhelmed by her first sight of her husband after he gets a liver, but never are forced to wallow in emotionalism.

We see the wonders of transplants, but also find they don't always make life rosy.

From the opening scenes, with an organ transplant team hustling down corridors with coolers bearing a heart and a liver, to the closing happy scene at the bedside of a child who just got a kidney, the hour-long documentary tells moving and profoundly human stories.

Bill Kurtis, the correspondent, sets the tone early:

"For a year, we've been watching transplants. Not the headlines of artificial hearts, high costs or medical ethics. We've been watching what it means to the people who get the organs, the people who give them, and the doctors who do the operations."

And to the documentary's credit, we get to watch, too. The camera thrusts us into the stories as they unfold. We watch Al and Karen Lilly, a young couple in Reading, Pa., stroll through a shopping mall, bathe their kids — all the while their voices and others describing their tense, eight-month wait for a liver to save Al's life.

In scenes of their life from that time, Karen endures Al's worried questions about going with him to the hospital, talks about taking over Al's role as the strong one and confesses her delusion that maybe, just maybe, Al will get better on his own.

But he doesn't. Medications turn his face from cadaverous to chubby. Finally, we see him enter the hospital for his transplant. We watch scenes of the surgery, his recovery and his trip down a hospital corridor toward home with a new liver.

Ninety percent of transplant organs are kidneys, and the documentary tells that story through children.

ABC Ties NBC For TV Ratings Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — What a difference a night makes.

A hugely successful Thursday night, led by "The Cosby Show," has been credited with turning long-suffering NBC into the second-place network this season. Last week, NBC series did well again on Thursday, but so did ABC's, for the first time this season.

ABC and NBC tied for first place, with a 15.8 rating, for the week of March 18-24, while CBS, which normally does well on Thursday, plummeted to third, with a 15.0.

according to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

CBS' problems were attributed to the failure of NCAA basketball tournament, which pre-empted the popular "Simon & Simon" and "Knots Landing," to draw large enough audiences.

ABC scored on Thursday with a "20-20" broadcast devoted entirely to the Bernhard Goetz subway shooting case and two new series.

According to ABC, "Wildside" achieved ABC's best rating for a series in the 8 p.m. timeslot on Thursdays in two years; "Eye to Eye" had the highest ABC series rating at 9 p.m. since October 1982, and "20-20" scored its best rating in nearly four years.

"20-20," the No. 47 show this season, ranked 12th last week. "Eye to Eye" was 15th, and "Wildside" was 28th.

Still, NBC won the night because of the No. 1-ranked "Cosby Show," which had a 25.9 rating, second-rated "Family Ties" and No. 5 "Cheers" — all repeat episodes. The NCAA regional game (Boston College-Memphis State or Georgetown-Loyola) ranked 58th with a 12.0 rating.

"The ABC shows did better because they debuted against college basketball," said Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president for research projects. "Simon & Simon" will be back next week against "Eye to Eye," and they're the same show."

With a few exceptions, prime-time sports do not have broad appeal. CBS also was hurt Friday night by the St. John's-Kentucky NCAA tournament game, which ranked 70th and last for the week, and by not having "Dallas."

"It was an atypical week," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement. "ABC's new shows got off to a good start, but let's see if they can sustain it next week."

Comedy again dominated the Top 10. Besides "Cosby," "Family Ties," and "Cheers," CBS' Monday night duo performed well: "Newhart" was sixth and "Kate & Allie" was seventh.

Other Top 10 shows were ABC's "Dynasty," third; CBS' "60 Minutes," fourth; NBC's "The A-Team," eighth; "California Girls" on the "ABC Sunday Night Movie," ninth; and NBC's "Riptide," 10th.

The bottom five included the final episode of CBS' "Alice," when the diner was closed, in 67th place, followed by NBC's "Silver Spoons," ABC's "Ripley's Believe It or Not," NBC's revamped "Under One Roof" and the St. John's-Kentucky game.

With four weeks left in the prime-time season, CBS has averaged a 17.1 rating to NBC's 16.3 and ABC's 15.6.

A rating measures the percentage, on average, of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes tuned to a network during a given minute of prime time.

The evening news competition has not varied much from a year ago, despite all the promotion this month for anchor Tom Brokaw on the "NBC Nightly News."

Last week's figures showed the

"CBS Evening News" leading, with a 12.8 rating to 11.3 for "Nightly News" and the 10.6 for ABC's "World News Tonight."

During the same week in 1984 "CBS Evening News" rated 12.9, "Nightly News" 11.2, and "World News Tonight" 10.6.

Winter's Cold Could Mean Business For Nurserymen

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — North Carolina's $45 million nursery business should thrive this spring as homeowners and landscapers replace trees and shrubs harmed by the winter's bitter cold, an expert says.
"I think that for those nurserymen who took the time and prepared for winter, it looks like a fantastic crop coming on," said Vinny Bonaminio, extension horticulture specialist for commercial nursery products at North Carolina State University in Raleigh.
He said competitors to the south were less prepared for the cold, which reached 9 degrees below zero on Jan. 21 in some parts of North Carolina. The resulting shortage is forcing up prices for the plants that survived, he said.

"I think we'll be driving that buggy instead of riding it," said Bonaminio. "There'll be a lot of replacement and renovation. The prospects this year are excellent."
But for nurserymen without as much protection from the cold, the dry and cold years of 1983 and 1984 have been "the most disastrous years for the industry," said Bill Wilder, executive director of the Knightdale-based North Carolina Association of Nurserymen.
"The nursery business has a slow turnaround — normally plants are two to seven years old when they're sold," he said. "You can't bounce right back."
Wilder didn't have a dollar estimate on the amount of damage, but he said few nurserymen have been forced out of business because the nature of tree-growing forces them into a commitment of several years.
The association represents about 550 of the state's estimated 2,030 nurserymen, most of whom run small family operations, Wilder said. The state's nurseries range from one-tenth acre up to about 300 acres.
"In North Carolina we probably have the largest variety of plant materials grown than any state I know of because we have the high elevations down to the coast," Wilder said.
Mountain nurseries produce hemlocks and boxwoods that are shipped off to the cooler north, while operations in the southeast grow semitropical plants like palms and exotic grasses.

Nurseries statewide grow everything from sod and fruit, flower and shade trees to hundreds of varieties of shrubs — "about everything you see that's green," he said.
One of the changes in the industry over the past several years has been the move to growing plants in containers rather than fields. Wilder said these nurseries can grow the same volume of trees and shrubs and a much smaller area.
Another trend has been the growing involvement of large conglomerates, although North Carolina's nurseries still tend to be small and family-owned, he said.
"The strictly nursery-type operations offer more personalized service than the large stores," said Wilder, whose organization has begun a certification program to ensure that nurserymen can give consumers all the information they need on plant varieties, care and diseases.
"A lot of them are part-time people who grow a small number of plants for therapy as well as a few extra dollars," he said.
Nurseries do about 80 percent of their business from mid-March through May. Their customers are other nurserymen, garden centers, landscape contractors and homeowners.
"The weather can be an extreme factor," said Wilder. "If you get four or five bad weekends in a row during planting season, when everyone is really interested, it can make a lot of difference in volume."
Nurserymen face the same weather problems as farmers, but they haven't been hit as hard by the economic problems because most haven't bought a lot of land on loan, said Wilder.
"Nurserymen by their nature are pretty conservative," he said.
"The nurseryman is generally a person who is very methodical, very much interested in the ecological balance, who probably does his job more for satisfaction than the dollars. It's not what I'd characterize as high return on investment."

'Free' Phone Calls To Santa Bring Whopping Bills To Pay

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Randy Grimm didn't know it cost 55 cents every time he called a sports trivia game, so the 15-year-old dialed it 330 times last month hoping to answer the quiz correctly and win a prize.
On Monday, his mother, Judith Grimm, received her telephone bill: 18 pages long, with more than $190 worth of "976" calls.
"I don't know who was more shocked, him or me," she said Tuesday. "I about had a heart attack. I just couldn't believe it."
Believe it, said Pacific Bell. And pay it.
But Ms. Grimm doesn't want to pay, and neither do the parents of Josie Aaronson-Gelb and Rachel Kreps-Falk, who repeatedly called a Santa Claus message last December, not knowing it was costing 50 cents a shot.
Josie and Rachel, both 7, are plaintiffs of record in a $10 million lawsuit filed Tuesday in San Francisco Superior Court against Pacific Bell and the company that operates the Santa Claus line.
Public Advocates Inc. attorney

Robert Gnaizda, who filed the class action suit, said Pacific Bell would not reveal the company's name, so he refers to it in the suit as "Santa Fraud Company."
The suit accuses Bell and "Santa Fraud" of deceptive advertising "designed to falsely mislead children into believing the calls are free" and inducing them to call repeatedly.
Pacific Bell spokesman Jack Saunders said he had no comment on the lawsuit because he had not seen it. However, he said that under state Public Utilities Commission rules, the utility's only responsibilities with respect to 976 numbers are to provide a working line and to insist that advertising clearly state the cost for the calls.
The suit, filed on behalf of all California children, asks for a refund for an estimated 100,000 families and $10 million in punitive damages to set up a children's protection fund to fight deceptive advertising.
"My friend said it was a real neat number. It was fun to call," Josie told reporters at a news conference at the law offices of Public Advocates Inc.
"Call me tomorrow," Santa said at the end of his message, "and I'll tell you a story about my reindeer."
So Josie put Santa on her telephone list, alongside her friends' numbers, and called him every time he asked her to — a total of 45 times before Christmas, including seven times on Christmas Eve, when his message changed hourly.
"Josie believed it was free, with good reason, because when she called the messages, they never told her it cost anything," Gnaizda said, adding that the 50-cent charge sometimes was mentioned quickly either orally or in small print on the television advertisement, but not at all on the actual messages. The Public Utilities Commission has approved a $2-per-call charge for next December, he said.

CBS Says Shooting Accidental

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israel's prime minister has turned down a CBS request for an inquiry into the killing of two newsmen by an Israeli tank crew, but a network vice president says he is satisfied the shooting was not deliberate.
"I now believe, even without complete information, that it was certainly not a deliberate attempt to fire tank guns against our camera crew," Ernest Leiser, vice president of CBS, told reporters Tuesday after meeting with Prime Minister Shimon Peres.
"Knowing what I now know, we might have qualified our language somewhat," Leiser said, referring to the original CBS charges that the attack was deliberate.
But he indicated that criticism still seemed in order. "I don't know yet if the action is not susceptible to criticism ... I am not persuaded it was not an excessive use of force," Leiser said.
Peres' spokesman, Uri Savir, said the prime minister "expressed his sorrow about this tragic event" and said there "was no intention to fire at and harm any journalist."

Scientists Help Africa Boost Food Supply

By ROBERT WELLER
Associated Press Writer

IBADAN, Nigeria (AP) — Scientists from 45 nations are at work here helping Africa's small farmers grow more and better food for the continent's hungry millions.

They already have developed faster growing and higher yielding varieties of African staples — cassava, yams, cowpeas (blackeyed peas), sweet potatoes and corn — that also are more pest and disease-resistant, require less rainfall and are more suitable to African tastes.

"It's like designing a new plant," said Jibade O. Oyekan, spokesman for the International Institute for Tropical Agriculture. "We know the prejudices of local consumers, which resistances are needed, the right height for the convenience of farmers and that it must be high yielding."

Since its creation in 1967 by the Rockefeller and Ford foundations, the institute also has developed ways of cultivating fragile tropical soils to preserve nutrients.

"Research on this continent on food crops basically started with this institute," said its director general, Ermond Hartmans, a Dutch-born American and former University of Minnesota professor.

Agricultural research in Africa previously focused on expanding cash crops for export, and researchers in the United States and other developed nations had little interest in cassava or other African food crops.

Institute scientists, working on 2,469 acres donated by Nigeria, have worked to bridge the technology gap that has resulted in imported food being cheaper than local food even after transport charges.

Many of Africa's food problems are beyond the range of scientists: low prices that discourage production, the collapse of road systems and the lack of agricultural extension services to spread new technology.

Hartmans said researchers, using the latest genetic engineering, can grow plants in a test tube, fusing cells from different plants to produce new strains.

"We have changed the nature of the cowpea plant. We made it erect — it was bushlike — and shortened the growing period from 110 days to 60," Hartmans said in an interview. The plant survived Botswana's drought last year.

Hartmans said discoveries at the institute outside this university city 60 miles north of Lagos, the capital, could ultimately benefit farmers in developed countries because diseases know no boundaries.

The institute-developed cassava illustrates the range of its work on the chief source of calories for 200 million people in tropical Africa.

In recent years, the cassava mealiebug and green spider mite have caused damage estimated at $2 billion in Africa, cutting harvests from 30 percent to 80 percent in 30 nations.

Institute scientists assigned to combat the pests decided they wanted to avoid expensive pesticides because of their residual effects and because both pests were highly resistant to pesticides.

Hartmans noted both the cassava plant and its pest had originated in South America "so we decided since we have exotic pests from South America who have no enemies here, we would find their enemies and bring them here."

The institute brought in a species of wasp that kills the mealiebug with no bad side effects. The wasp has wiped out the mealiebug in most of Nigeria and is being used in 25 other African nations. Work is continuing on a predator for the mite.

An institute scientist, Sang Ki Hahn of South Korea, developed a strain of the spindly, treelike cassava plant that matures faster, produces several times the yield of local cassava and is disease resistant.

Hahn won Britain's Guinness Award for Scientific Achievement, but said he feels even more honored by the decision of the village of Ikire to make him a chief because of his achievement.

He added that the institute is being flooded with requests for his cassava and it is now grown on 2.4 million acres in Nigeria and is being introduced in neighboring nations.

Hahn now is working on yams, a former staple that has become a luxury in competition with cheap imported foods that once were the luxuries.

Hartmans said he is cheered by the interest African farmers show in the institute and added that it is proof that there is hope for agriculture on the continent, despite drought, famines and chronic food shortages since independence in the 1960s.

Hartmans said hybrid crops aren't the only answer, explaining that farmers can double their production "almost overnight" by abandoning the system of leaving much of their small plots uncultivated for several years to restore nutrients.

Hartmans said the farmers could use their fields nearly continuously if they stopped plowing up the top soil. The institute has developed a low-tillage system of shooting seeds into the ground without disturbing the fragile and shallow top soils of Africa.

England Is Computerizing William's Domesday Book

By MARK S. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Domesday Book, William the Conqueror's great survey of his newly won island and the seminal record of English nationhood, is being rebound, photographed and computerized for its 900th birthday next year. Copies will be sold for about $2,150 a set.

Its 887 pages record every known landowner and scrap of property in William's domains.

A modest controversy has arisen, however, over plans by the Public Record Office, keeper of the book, to divide Domesday (pronounced doomsday) into five volumes — ending 700 years during which it has existed as two, Great Domesday and Little Domesday.

How many volumes there were in Domesday's first 200 years isn't known.

Great Domesday, the first volume, has 412 sheepskin pages and covers 31 English counties — all but four in the far north, where William's hold was tenuous, and three in the southeast.

Those southeastern shires — Essex, Suffolk and Norfolk — are dealt with in Little Domesday, an even more detailed accounting 475 pages long.

William, who invaded England from what is now the French province of Normandy and defeated Saxon King Harold in 1066, ordered the Domesday survey during his Christmas Council at Gloucester in southwest England in 1085.

"William had ravaged the country, killing almost every man and boy between the (river) Humber and the Tees, and after 20 years he decided to do a survey to see what was left," said Jane Cox, who is organizing Domesday's anniversary exhibition.

Perhaps more important, William needed a basis on which to tax his new subjects. So he demanded a scrupulous listing of all landowners, their lands and what was on them — from livestock to peasants, pots and pans.

The survey, conducted by local juries of six Normans and six Englishmen, was completed in eight months in 1086. Its results were sent to Winchester, the royal capital in southeastern England, where clerks drew up the pages later dubbed Domesday Book from the Middle English "dom," meaning judgment.

The Domesday record was moved to London probably in the 12th century when the royal capital reverted to Westminster. In 1869, the two volumes were given their first modern bindings by the Public Record Office and went on display in a glass case.

Domesday is a unique and priceless record whose pages are remarkably well preserved.

But its last rebinding in 1952 was much too tight, making the stiff parchment pages difficult for scholars to turn and almost impossible to read near the spine.

So the record office has begun taking the volumes apart with a scalpel, softening the sheepskin with humidifiers, cleansing the bound edges of glue, repairing tears and missing fragments.

It's a laborious process, probably 18 months' work by the time it's finished. But for the three experts carrying it out inside a special security cage in a building on London's southwestern outskirts, it's a labor of love.

"We want to ensure that Domesday is fit to last another 900 years," said Helen Ford, head of the record office's conservation department.

The plan to divide Great Domesday into two volumes and Little Domesday into three has caused "faint stirrings of anxiety among medieval scholars" who believe the nature of the book will be altered, according to London's Observer weekly.

But Ms. Ford said none of the stirrings have reached her office. "All the academics we consulted were rather enthusiastic," she said.

Academics have pored over Domesday Book for centuries, mining its pages for rich detail on village life in the Middle Ages.

Though much of the record is arid recitation, there often are gems, such as the revelation of the existence of England's only female jester, called a "joculatrix."

But Domesday is more than a mere curiosity. Over the centuries it has been cited — and still is today on occasion — as legal evidence in land ownership disputes.

Of 13,000 place names mentioned, all but a handful can still be found on maps.

In many ways, the record of Domesday defined England as a nation and that set off the planning for a gala celebration next year.

"The anniversary has stirred feelings of patriotism and nostalgia for Olde England," Ms. Cox said. "There's going to be a national festival."

Pope Cautions Youth On Ads

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II on Tuesday warned young people to resist the temptations of consumerism and "the fascination of deceptive mirages" in misleading advertising.

In a letter sent to Roman Catholics worldwide, the pontiff also warned against the denigration of women by so-called progressive societies and lack of respect for traditional values.

The letter, titled "To the Youth of the World," was sent to mark the U.N.'s International Youth Year, coinciding with a pilgrimage by thousands of young people from more than 60 countries to meet with the pope in Rome.

"Dear young people, you are under threat from the bad use of advertising techniques, which plays upon the natural tendency to avoid effort and promises the immediate satisfaction of every desire," he wrote.

"How many young people, succumbing to the fascination of deceptive mirages, give themselves up to the uncontrolled power of the instincts," he asked.

Specifically, he cited the dangers of drugs, alcohol and misguided youths who have been instilled with the idea that only through "organized terrorism ... can the world be made a better place."

More than 150,000 youths — including several hundred Protestants and Japanese Buddhists — are expected to take part in religious ceremonies Saturday.

Air Force Academy Shifting Into Computer Age In Big Way

By S.J. GUFFEY
Associated Press Writer
AIR FORCE ACADEMY, Colo. (AP) — When the Class of 1990 gets its wings, members should be better prepared for the Computer Age than any previous Air Force Academy graduates. By the fall of 1986, each Air Force cadet will have a personal computer.

The Air Force, youngest branch of the U.S. military, had a reputation for being high-tech long before the phrase even existed. Yet a major reason for the push toward PCs is a centuries-old tradition: the volume of work crammed into a cadet's life.

This summer, dormitories and classroom buildings will be wired with coaxial cable. Next spring, the Air Force will ask for bids on the personal computers themselves.

It won't be the first campus with a PC for every student; several now require their students to buy individual microcomputers. But Air Force is the first military academy to make PCs standard issue, as much a part of a cadet's study gear as books and a desk.

"I think the driving factor in our decision has to do with the scarcest resource we have, which is cadet time," said Brig. Gen. Ervin Rokke, dean of faculty at the academy.

The 4,400 cadets "have a substantial academic load," Rokke added with understatement.

A cadet's life includes six classes a semester, required intramural or intercollegiate sports and the pervasive belief that future leaders should do something constructive with nearly every waking hour.

The academy already has clusters of microcomputers, and an overview course on computers has been required since 1968. Most of the nearly 400 PCs on campus, including one beside Rokke's desk, are Zenith 100s, he said.

The new system will include an electronic bulletin board, where cadets can learn of events, assignments and messages. An electronic mail system will make it easier to get notes to and from the faculty.

There will be few, if any, restrictions on how the computers are used.

"I think cadets will find that the easiest way to write their girlfriend or boyfriend is to sit down at their personal computer," Rokke said.

The faculty committee that outlined the academy's requirements considered adding more terminals for mainframe computers now in use, said Col. Erlind Royer, an electrical engineering professor.

"But with the expansion of computers in all academic fields, we would have to buy larger and larger machines to keep up," Royer explained.

Keeping up already is hard, since each of the 20 academic departments has had access to computers since January 1984.

Not every department was ready with open arms, Rokke said.

"One of our most senior philosophy professors was not particularly interested in bringing his department into the Computer Age," the general said. "His skepticism lasted three months."

Now, "virtually every department uses computers in some respect," said Lt. Col. William Ayen, a computer science professor who is director of plans and programs for Rokke.

In the physics department, one program composes exams. It chooses from among a variety of questions and comes up with a slightly different test each time someone needs one. It's now doing about 40,000 different tests a year, estimated Col. John May, vice dean of the academy's faculty.

In chemistry, the beakers and Bunsen burners are gone. A terminal screen displays the shapes of lab utensils, and students have to decide what goes in when and whether to turn up the flame.

Very cost-effective, said Ayen, noting the amount saved in not replacing broken glassware.

"It doesn't smell as bad," added May.

If it seems that we too often stress the need to plan your campaign before you play to the first trick, it is only because we have seen so many sound contracts put on the floor by failure to pay due care. Here's another example.

The auction was quite straightforward. Against three no trump, West led his fourth-best spade. Since there was a slight chance that West was leading from the queen-jack of spades, declarer opted to play low from dummy. That proved fatal. He captured East's jack with the ace, cashed his three heart honors and led a club to the jack, which won.

Declarer took advantage of the entry to the table to cash the king of hearts before reverting to clubs. West held up the ace of clubs one more round, then shifted to a diamond. East won the ace and returned a spade, which forced out dummy's king. Declarer had taken only eight tricks, and he had no way to get to his hand to score the good club. The defenders got two spade tricks, two diamonds and a club.

There were nine tricks there for the taking as long as declarer made sure that he could get from hand to hand. Had he studied the problem before playing to the first trick, he would have found a simple solution to his problem. All he had to do was to win the first trick on the board with the king.

Now declarer cashes his top three hearts, and leads a low club to the table's ten. (Should that lose to the ace, the jack will serve as an entry to dummy.) After cashing the fourth heart, declarer continues clubs to set up his ninth trick. He still has the ace of spades in hand as an entry to the club.

House

FISH — By a vote of 268 for and 133 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill to extend a Great Society-vintage commercial and sport fishery program that President Reagan wants to terminate.

The bill (HR 1025) extends the Anadromous Fish Conservation Act for three years, through fiscal 1988, at a cost of $7.5 million annually. Rep. Walter Jones, D-N.C., said "these are fish that migrate from the ocean to fresh water to spawn," such as salmon, striped bass and shad.

Enacted in 1965, the law pays at least half the cost of a variety of federal-state programs aimed chiefly at increasing the stocks of spawning fish.

Supporter Norman Lent, R-N.Y., said that in opposing the program the administration "disregards the many benefits that anadromous fishery resources provide to the nation through the activities of the country's sport and commercial fishermen."

Opponent Robert Walker, R-Pa., said: "We keep overspending and overspending and overspending (and) it all adds up to the spending that goes into the deficit that we are now faced with."

Members voting yes wanted to extend the life of the program aiding commercial and sport fishing interests.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were: Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

Those voting no were William Cobey, R-4; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9, and James Broyhill, R-10.

RESEARCH — By a vote of 252 for and 149 against, the House failed to achieve the two-thirds majority needed to pass a bill (HR 1028) to fund research at the nation's several dozen fisheries.

Sponsors said they will take the bill back to the floor under normal parliamentary procedures, which require only a simple majority for passage.

The bill seeks to repeal the Commercial Fisheries Research and Development Act, which the Administration has criticized as unwarranted federal intrusion — and spending — in areas that are the responsibility of private enterprise and state governments.

In effect, it would repeal all of that law except for research functions and a few other provisions. It proposes spending $5 million annually on research and $2.5 million in emergency aid to commercial fisheries hit by natural disasters.

Supporter Don Young, R-Alaska, said: "We should cut the budget, but this is an area that needs to be financed."

Opponent Robert Walker, R-Pa., said: "This is how we add onto those deficits..."

Members voting yes wanted to enact a new research and disaster aid program for fisheries.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Hendon.

Those voting no were Cobey, Coble, McMillan and Broyhill.

Senate

MX — The Senate approved, 55 for and 45 against, an outlay of $1.5 billion this fiscal year for production of 21 additional MX missiles.

This would raise to 42 the number of MX's in the nation's nuclear arsenal. President Reagan has requested 100 copies of the multi-warhead, 96-ton missile, which would form the new land leg of the Triad missile deployment scheme.

The MX is to be housed in existing, though reinforced, Minuteman silos. Critics and supporters disagree over whether those silos could withstand a Soviet first-strike and, therefore, on whether the MX would help to keep the peace or nudge the superpowers close to a nuclear exchange.

This vote authorized the $1.5 billion outlay. By an identical margin, with all senators voting the same way, the Senate later voted to release the money. The House then took up the issue.

Supporter Thad Cochran, R-Miss., said "if the Congress should withhold funding for the MX missile program, the Soviets would have less reason to negotiate a treaty" in behalf of arms control.

Opponent Carl Levin, D-Mich., said "Congress should not be intimidated into building a militarily useless... destabilizing... weapons system by unsubstantiated claims linking MX to the fate of arms talks."

Senators voting yes supported the MX.

North Carolina Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted yes.

New York Lawyer Finds Dream Helping Farmers

SWAINSBORO, Ga. (AP) — If the warmth of the Deep South didn't lure Brent Merrill from his childhood home in New York City, the prospect of an education at Emory University and dreams of law school did.

Years later, with two diplomas and a brief Navy career behind him, it was the smell of tilled earth and the appeal of family life in a country town that dissolved all his plans to return North.

"I once intended to go back to New York to practice law," the 42-year-old Swainsboro resident said, "but over the years I got so entrenched here. There really wasn't any reason to leave."

In addition to his marriage to a south Georgia woman, it was a growing fascination with the plight of farmers in the region which kept Merrill and his law practice in Emanuel County's seat of 9,000.

Today, he puts in many hours in his plush office on Main Street. But another side of Merrill exists six miles from town, beyond a dilapidated gate and down a rutted dirt road winding off through a forest. There a 65-acre farming experiment illustrates Merrill's attention to his profession.

"What I do, generally, is represent farmers in trouble," he said. In recent years, he said, droughts, financial complications and other factors have spawned an "extraordinarily common" predicament: farm families finding themselves on the verge of bankruptcy and foreclosure.

"When I first started representing farmers, I realized I didn't know anything about it," Merrill said. "I wanted to understand, and I always thought the best way to do that was to try it yourself."

So he purchased the small farm, 65 acres of fields and forest, and set out to learn the ways and problems of the people he represents in court.

"It was really more of a crack at farm management," he said, gesturing across a fallow field where soybeans, peanuts, corn and cattle herds have stood in recent years. "Since I had my law practice, I never had to support myself with the farming," he said.

Merrill, who came to Georgia as a teen-ager, arrived in Swainsboro in 1971 from an assistant attorney general's position in Atlanta. After five years with a local law firm, he started his own practice in 1976.

"And by 1980 I was heavily involved with financially troubled farmers," he said, putting about 25 percent of his clients in that category. "But I needed to know what it was all about."

He read books and enlisted the assistance of friends for his agricultural ventures, hoping to make a profit at an occupation that leaves so many of his clients destitute.

With the help of friends, he built a small barn on the farm and bought a tractor. "I figured if I could fly a helicopter," the former Navy man said, "then I could drive a tractor."

Besides sporadic farming on his land, he embarks on occasional joint ventures with other farmers. This year's project is a large field of Vidalia onions leased from a Metter farmer. "He had the technical know-how and the land," Merrill said, "and I had the money."

With a full-time legal practice, his farming enterprises, his family and his part-time duties as commander of the Navy's Augusta-based Weapons Station Unit, he has little time for hobbies.

"I don't hunt or fish," he said, staring at several sets of deer tracks near the barn. "But I do plan to build a cabin out here someday. Someplace to just get away and be with the kids."

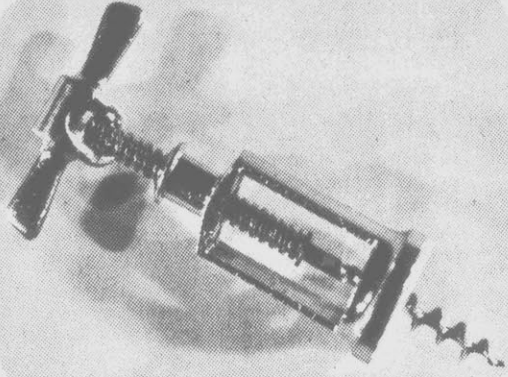

But for now, much of Merrill's time is taken up by farm families and their ongoing bouts with bad weather, creditors and the courts. During the past decade, the problems of farmers and their huge investments every year have grown progressively worse.

"Even some of what we call the small farmers can have debts from 25 percent above to anywhere from 300 to 400 percent above their assets," he said.

And about 25 percent of the state's farmers, he said, are "financially terminally ill." Farming in Georgia has gone from the "great American dream" to a year-to-year battle for survival, he added.

In a test of bankruptcy legislation and its application to farmers, Merrill represented a Davisboro farmer who had lost much of his land to creditors.

Taps Reopen

TORONTO (AP) — Ontario's beer stores have reopened after a month-long shutdown caused by a labor dispute.

Brewers' Warehousing Co. Ltd., which operates the beer stores, and the province's three biggest breweries ended a lockout of 3,600 workers after the 11th of 12 union locals ratified a three-year contract.

The breweries ended the lockout, which cost millions of dollars in lost sales, at five of six plants Saturday and supervisors started recalling workers Sunday.

American beer was imported during the shutdown to ease the shortage.

Taiwan Indicts Trio In American's Death

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Taiwan's former military intelligence chief and two of his aides were indicted Tuesday in connection with the killing of an American journalist in California last year, the Defense Ministry said.

In a press statement, the Defense Ministry gave no date for the trial of the three: Vice Adm. Wong Shi-ling, 58, who was dismissed as director of the ministry's intelligence bureau; his deputy, Maj. Gen. Hu Yi-min, 58, and Col. Chen Hu-men, 41, a deputy section chief in the agency.

If convicted by the military court of five judges that will try them, the defendants could be sentenced to death.

The three, as well as three reputed gangsters indicted last month by the Taipei District Court, are accused in the killing of journalist Henry Liu, 52. Liu was shot to death in the garage of his home in Daly City, Calif., in October.

Liu's writings were critical of the Nationalist Chinese government of Taiwan, and his wife, Helen, has claimed his killing was intended to silence him. The Taiwan government has denied any involvement in the slaying.

Two of the three reputed gangsters — Chen Chi-li, 41, and Wu Tun, 35 — will go on trial April 2. The third, Tung Kuei-sen, 33, is still at large and under Taiwan's judicial system he cannot be tried in absentia.

On Monday, when it was announced that indictments would be filed shortly against the intelligence officials, the Defense Ministry's spokesman, Maj. Gen. Chang Hui-yuan, said their court-martial would be held in an open court.

At a pre-trial hearing last week for the two reputed gangsters, Chen Chi-li told the Taipei District Court that Vice Adm. Wong ordered him to kill Liu because he was a double agent who had spied for Taiwan and China.

After 50 Years, National Theater School Is Opened

DENVER (AP) — With little fanfare but high expectations, the curtain has risen on the National Theatre Conservatory, the first national theater school in the country.

It has been a while in coming. The conservatory is the "Academy" part of the American National Theatre and Academy, created by a congressional charter signed in 1935 by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"It has a good chance of in five to 10 years being the most important theater school in the country. Not the biggest, but the most sought-after training in the country," boasts director Allan Fletcher.

Its intensive, three-year program trains students in skills from mime to martial arts. Guided by 16 staff teachers and other guest artists, the actors learn to sing, to stand, to speak. They also become apprentices at the Denver Center Theatre Co. of the Denver Center for the Performing Arts.

"My hope is that we can make this work and show the professional theater and education establishment that training of professional artists should be moved from colleges and universities and placed inside theater companies," says artistic director Donovan Marley.

ANTA was the vision of theater enthusiasts and actors who more than half a century ago thought it time the United States had a national theater school. The vision stayed just that for decades because money and facilities were lacking.

The American National Theatre is now in the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., but backers thought it would be too expensive to place the conservatory there, too.

Then Don Seawall, board chairman of ANTA and of the Denver Center, suggested the center take the conservatory under its wing.

When the NTC opened its doors Oct. 1, 1984, it had 22 first-year students chosen from auditions in 10 cities and 15 second-year transfer students.

These are not wide-eyed neophytes but professionals who want to stretch the limits of their ability.

Thirty-year-old C.J. Keith of Palo Alto, Calif., left an acting job with a repertory company because she wanted the challenge of conservatory training.

"We're all talented. But we want to be more than talented... so we can do 'Hamlet' one night and 'Carousel' the next," she said.

Administrator Karen Hall, former registrar and admissions coordinator at the Yale School of Drama, said people were realizing "that instant star stuff just doesn't happen. ... I think there's a new surge toward 'what do I have to do to be a good working actor for the rest of my life?' rather than focusing so much on marketability at that moment."

For its first two years, the conservatory will offer only an acting program, but later it will teach directing, playwriting, theater design and theater management. By the 1990s, film production, musical theater and television production are to be added.

Ms. Hall defined a conservatory as a place where people can learn in a "protected" environment. This conservatory is found behind a series of black doors in the old police headquarters in downtown Denver. There, feet shuffle in ballet exercises, voices slide up and down practice scales and veterans of soap opera and summer stock speak their lines.

Marley said the conservatory did not want to suffer from "generalities."

"We are looking at a specific span of plays, or repertory, and we are training artists that will do that well. ... A generalist cannot be specific, but someone who's taught in very specific ways can generalize. Survey courses don't make actors."

Ultrasonic Pest Device Repels Insects And Rodents Without Costly Chemicals Or Ineffective Traps

The secret is ultrasonic sound waves that repel mice and other insects from your home. These sound waves imitate the super-sensitive auditory and nervous systems of insects and rodents forcing them from the sound protected areas. And there are no clean-ups of dead insects or rodents to worry about. Pests are effectively repelled by sound waves not killed by messy chemicals.

The Ultrasonic Pest Control Device emits sounds far above the hearing range of humans and most household pets, making it completely safe.

Push-to-test button. Also mounts on wall.

WE BAKE MORE BREAKFAST BISCUITS

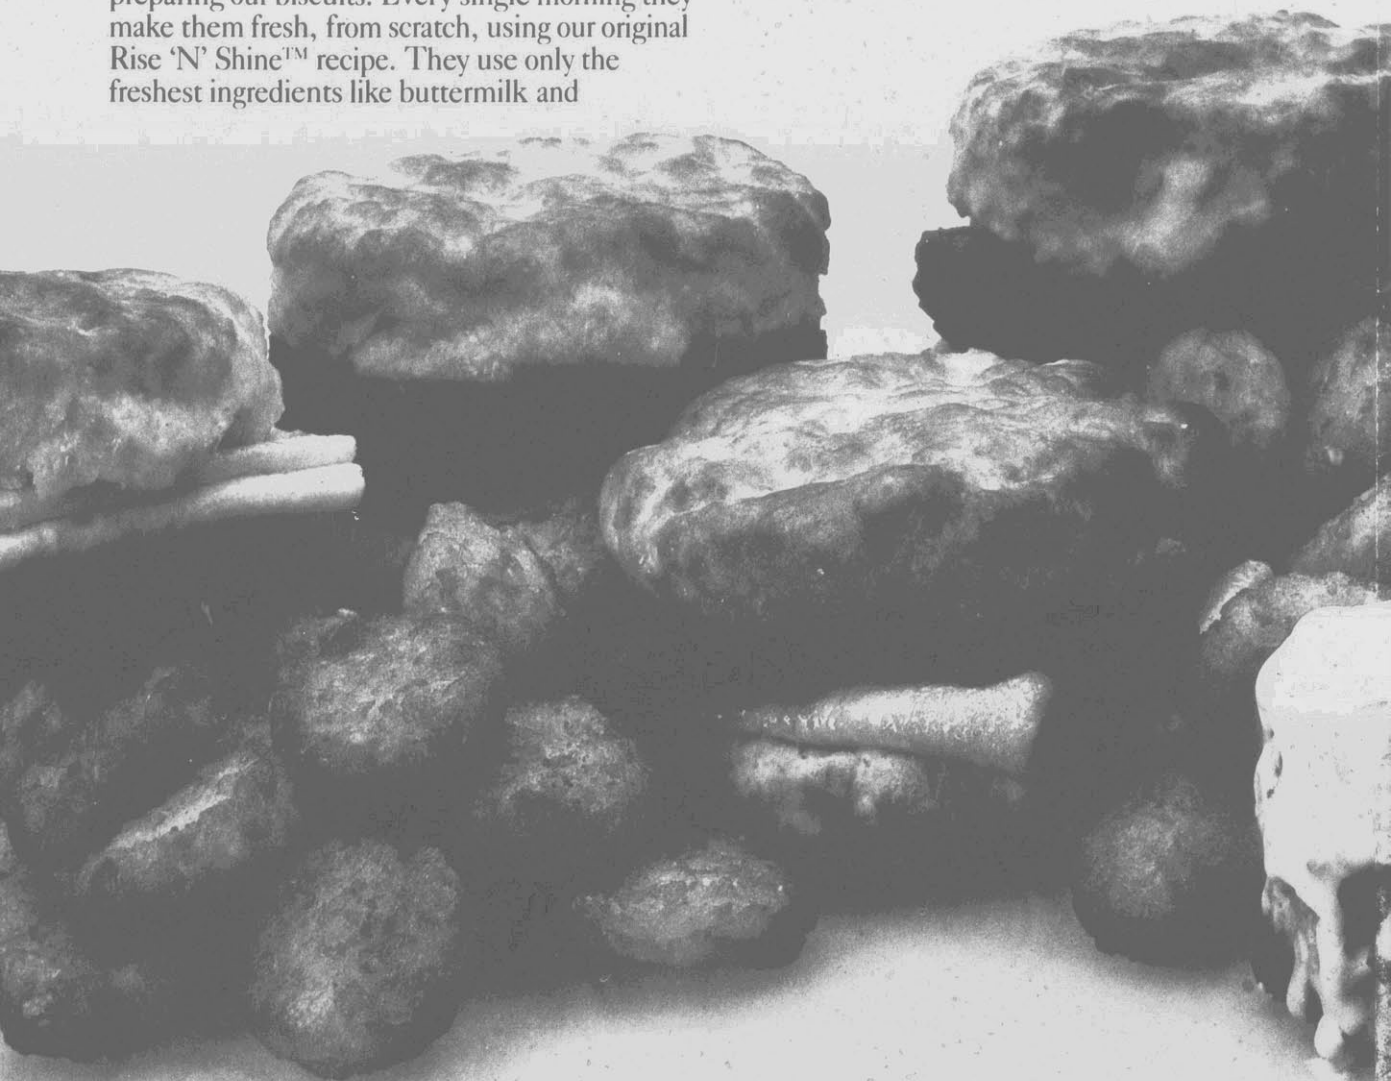

Even before the sun is up, our special Hardee's® biscuit bakers are in our kitchens preparing our biscuits. Every single morning they make them fresh, from scratch, using our original Rise 'N' Shine™ recipe. They use only the freshest ingredients like buttermilk and flour. Then they watch over them to make sure they're baked to a golden brown. After that, they fill them with your favorite fixin's. So from our plain biscuit to our Sausage 'N' Egg Biscuit, Bacon 'N' Egg Biscuit, Steak 'N' Egg Biscuit, and Cinnamon 'N' Raisin™ Biscuit, you can be guaranteed you're getting that delicious Hardee's homemade taste in every bite. No wonder we bake more breakfast biscuits than anyone else.

Besides our delicious Hardee's biscuits, every morning you can also enjoy our tasty Hash Rounds, fresh orange juice, and pipin' hot coffee. You really shouldn't start your morning without us.

We're Hardee's and We're Number One.
