Pentagon Cites Rapid Soviet Buildup

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union is continuing a rapid buildup and modernization of its nuclear and conventional forces and is farther along than the United States in developing various "Star Wars-type" defenses, the Pentagon reported today.

The Soviet buildup is reflected in the emergence of new ballistic and cruise missiles; construction of much more capable submarines and fighter and bomber aircraft; an increase in the number of ground forces from 194 active divisions to 199 active divisions, and the development of large bases outside the Soviet Union such as at Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam, the report states.

It is also reflected in the assignment of more than 10,000 scientists and engineers to work just on high-energy lasers, and a "high-priority" focus on the militarization of space that includes development of a heavy-lift rocket, a space shuttle and a smaller "space plane" that could be used to defend manned space stations.

The 143-page study, titled "Soviet Military Power 1985," was released this morning by Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger. It is the fourth in a series of annual reports described by the Reagan administration as offering the most comprehensive review available of the military threat facing the United States.

"They continue to press ahead with modernization of all elements of their strategic and conventional forces," Weinberger said. "The defense programs that we have and our allies have are trying to redress some of the critical deficiencies in the military balance."

The defense secretary also made it clear the report's emphasis on the Soviet Union's Star Wars-type research was no accident. The Soviets have made the American research effort a focus of the Geneva arms talks because they don't want to lose a monopoly, he said.

The Soviet efforts "are very substantial. They've gone on for a long time. And they're very clearly pointed toward acquiring the precise kind of capability that they not only deride but argue is so terribly destabilizing and dangerous. And from their point of view, it probably is, because it would mean it would break their monopoly."

Despite the extent of the Russian buildup cited in the report, a senior Pentagon intelligence official said

Soviets Agreeable To Summit Session

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mikhail S. Gorbachev, the new Soviet leader, has "agreed in principle" in a letter to President Reagan that they hold a summit meeting to discuss a wide range of issues involving the two superpowers, an administration official said today.

But the official, who declined to be identified, cautioned that "no time or place" for the summit, which Reagan proposed last month, have been chosen. The official said two possibilities were Helsinki, Finland, in August, and the U.N. General Assembly session in September in New York.

"Basically, it's positive," the official said of Gorbachev's response, which was received last week. "We'd like a summit," the official said.

But he stressed that further diplomatic exchanges would be needed to lay the groundwork for a Reagan-Gorbachev summit.

In an Oval Office interview with the Washington Post, the president refused on Monday to discuss the contents of Gorbachev's letter but said he was "hopeful" that a summit could be held.

The president invited the new Soviet leader in a letter he sent with Vice President George Bush to the funeral in Moscow last month of Gorbachev's predecessor, Konstantin U. Chernenko.

The source said the agenda for a summit would go beyond efforts to limit nuclear weapons, now in negotiations in Geneva, Switzerland, to include other issues of interest to both sides.

For instance, Reagan administration policy is to press the Soviets on human rights at every top-level U.S.-Soviet meeting.

Helsinki, one of the possible sites, is where the two superpowers and 33 other countries in 1975 concluded an agreement to ease East-West tensions. The agreement committed the signatories to improving basic human rights while tacitly acknowledging the post-World War II boundaries in Europe and each side's sphere of influence.

The 10th anniversary of the signing will be marked with a ceremony in the Finnish capital in August. In the past, administration sources have suggested Helsinki was an unlikely summit site.

Pitt Unemployment Lowest Since 1977

Curtailment of federally supplied supplemental benefits should not place a hardship on the approximately 120 unemployed area residents who have been receiving assistance because the county is now entering its best hiring period, an Employment Security Commission representative said this morning.

According to Jim Hannan, manager of the Pitt County ESC office, the supplement program will be closed out this week as the result of an improving area unemployment rate, a rate he said is now at its lowest since March 1977.

At the time supplemental benefits were made available, the unemployment rate in Pitt County was 9.1 percent. In March of this year, the county's unemployment rate was 5.3, the lowest since March 1977.

Saying he hoped to place those who have been receiving benefits soon, Hannan explained that spring usually brings an upswing in employment opportunities. "Farming, construction, building in general, just about everything has picked up," he said.

The program, begun in 1982 during President Ronald Reagan's first term in office, was enacted to help unemployed individuals make it through the recession. Under program provisions, persons receiving assistance had to have collected all allowable unemployment compensation and had to be virtually unemployable. "These were people there were strictly no jobs for; people who could not be placed," Hannan explained.

City Board Approves Two Summer School Programs

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The 1985 summer programs to be conducted at Wahl-Coates Laboratory School and Rose High School received approval at the April informational meeting of the Greenville Board of Education Monday night.

The summer school at Wahl-Coates will consist of two classes with 20 students each, and is designed for students enrolled this year in grades three and six who were not promoted and who need remedial help in reading and/or math. Also, if space permits, students not promoted in grades four and five will be accepted.

Promotion or repeating the same grade for school year 1985-86 will depend on the performance and achievement of students taking the summer school remedial courses.

Transportation to and from Wahl-Coates is the responsibility of the parents or guardians of students. There is no tuition charge; however, a fee will be charged for instructional supplies.

Applications should be made early, and no later than May 31, school officials said. Notification of students accepted will be made June 7.

The summer school at Rose will be identical in structure to the program last year. The beginning date will be announced later. Contingent on a minimum of 10 students enrolling per class, various courses will be taught as dictated by demand.

One important difference from previous summer school programs at Rose High is that this year students from Pitt County schools will not be charged an out-of-area fee.

Information on the supply fee for Wahl-Coates and the fees for the Rose High program are available by calling the central office at 752-4192.

Authorization was granted for the school staff to submit applications (Please turn to page 7)

Sunbird Will Serve Area As 'Piedmont Commuter'

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Sunbird Airlines, which has provided commuter airline service to Greenville since August 1980, will become a "Piedmont Commuter" on May 1, a spokesman for the company said today.

Jan Bennett, contacted by phone at Sunbird's Denver, N.C., headquarters, said that Sunbird will still have its "own identity," as well as its own planes and pilots.

But she said the aircraft will be painted with Piedmont Airlines' colors, "white with a blue stripe" and have "Piedmont Commuter" painted on the cabin, "Piedmont Commuter System" with the Piedmont logo on the tail, and "Operated by Sunbird Airlines" beside the passenger entry door.

Service to Kinston and Wilmington will be dropped May 1 and service to Anderson, S.C., will be added.

Service to Pitt-Greenville Airport,

Ms. Bennett said, will still include three arrivals and three departures a day, although there will be "less connecting time in Raleigh and Charlotte. Passengers won't have as long to wait" for connecting Piedmont flights.

She also said passengers boarding Sunbird in Greenville will have "all fares that Piedmont has ... 30-day advanced ticketing, the family plan,

Pactolus Container Site OK'd

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday approved the purchase of the Pactolus solid waste container site and agreed to a request to ask the Department of Transportation to build a road at the south end of the Pitt Community College campus to link N.C. 11 and Secondary Road 1131 which runs behind the PCC campus.

The board approved the purchase of the Pactolus container site after County Manager Reginald Gray said Ferd Satterthwaite had agreed to sell the property — now leased by the county — for $1,500 ($1,600, less the $100 paid on the lease).

Vernon White, a member of the PCC board's Buildings and Grounds Committee, asked commissioners to request the DOT to build the access road at the west end of the school's campus with secondary road fund allocations.

White told the board that the secondary roads at the north end of the campus and in front of the campus, parallel to N.C. 11, were built by the DOT after the campus was formed.

White said the DOT has agreed to extend the secondary road running in front of the campus — complete with curb and gutter — to the southern property line as part of the master plan for the campus, at a cost of about $70,000. But he told the commissioners that funds to extend Secondary Road 1708 (the Cannon's Crossroads Road) from N.C. 11 to SR 1131 at the southern end of the campus are not available.

He then asked commissioners to request the DOT to use secondary road funds to fiscal year 1985-86 to grade and stabilize the road and to pave it in 1986-87.

Commissioners Monday also adopted a resolution supporting an airport authority request to have the Federal Aviation Agency install an instrument landing system at Pitt-Greenville Airport.

Airport officials said today that the equipment for the system would cost a half-million dollars and would be maintained by the FAA.

In other business, the board gave approval to a reduction in force policy for the mental health center.

Steve Creech, director of the center, said the policy, approved earlier by the mental health area board, would first drop part-time and temporary positions from the payroll, then drop employees by seniority. In the case of equal seniority, cuts would be made on the basis of performance, he said.

The board took no action on a request by the Pitt County Council on Aging for approval of an application and $16,700 to match a federal grant for a foster grandparent program.

County Attorney W.W. Watson told commissioners that the U.S. Eastern District Court has ruled in the county's favor in a bankruptcy case involving Stroud Wholesale of Ayden.

The federal bankruptcy court had authorized the sale of the Stroud Wholesale property and subordinated the county's tax liens in the distribution of the proceeds from the sale.

Judge Earl Britt, hearing the case on appeal, Watson reported, ruled that the bankruptcy court erred, and that Pitt County should recover the tax on the property.

The board scheduled a workshop meeting for 10 a.m. April 12.

The molded bodice, covered with chantilly lace re-embroidered in pearls and crystals, was fashioned with a sabrina neckline edged in scallops and the leg o' mutton sleeves ended in fitted sleeves of lace with scallops at the wrists. The bouffant gathered skirt stemmed from the lowered waist under pearled lace scallops extending into a built-in chapel length train. Her headpiece was a fingertip veil of illusion with silk Venise edging which was held in place by a Camelot cap overlaid in matching lace beaded with pearls. She carried a round nosegay of carnations, daisies, baby's breath with a touch of dusty rose tied with ribbons and streamers.

Connie Smith of Charlotte served as maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Tammy Page of Ayden, Karen Oakley of Greenville, sisters of the bride, Tena Hardee of Greenville and Terry Richardson of Rocky Mount, sister of the bridegroom. Brooke Allen of Farmville was flower girl.

Each of the attendants wore a formal gown of mauve chalk tissue taffeta and white organza designed with an open neckline featuring a ruffle of white organza with mauve chalk pencil edging. The bodice was off-shoulder and a sash encircled the natural waistline. Each carried an arm bouquet of carnations, baby's breath and fern tied with dusty rose ribbon and streamers. The flower girl carried a white wicker basket tied with dusty rose ribbons and streamers. She wore a tea length dress with a lace trimmed ruffle with a sheer organza pinafore with double edged lace and pink satin ribbon trim.

Honorary attendants were Sandy Sowerby of Elizabeth City, Ronda Holland and Sally Grant of Goldsboro, Sandi Nowell of Raleigh, Laura Fairbanks of Farmville, Susan Persinger of Henderson and Danielle Elks of Chapel Hill. They were honored with corsages.

MRS. RICHARDSON

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Grandchildren Will Remain Yours

DEAR ABBY: Our 34-year-old daughter died four months ago, leaving a wonderful husband and three small children. She was our only child and we are heartbroken. If our son-in-law marries again, and he probably will, he will have another mother-in-law and father-in-law. What about us, Abby? Can we still consider ourselves his "in-laws"? And will our grandchildren still be our grandchildren?

HEARTBROKEN

DEAR HEARTBROKEN: Although your grandchildren will always be your grandchildren, your son-in-law will be your former son-in-law. You can certainly consider him a member of your family because he is the father of your grandchildren, but legally you are no longer related.

DEAR ABBY: Several years ago you ran a "Test Your Knowledge of Homosexuality" quiz. Will you please run it again? Thank you.

R.M.G., HOUSTON

DEAR R.M.G.: Here it is:

DEAR READERS: How much do you know about homosexuality? Mark the following statements "True" or "False."

- Homosexuals commit more crimes than straight people.
- Everyone is born straight, but some become gay because they have been seduced by a gay person early in life.
- You can always tell homosexuals and lesbians by the way they act, dress and talk.
- If a person is gay, no amount of therapy or motivation can change him.
- Boys raised by domineering mothers and weak (or absent) fathers usually turn into homosexuals.
- Gay people can never become mothers or fathers.
- Homosexuals are more inclined to molest children sexually than heterosexuals.

— If a person has one or two sexual experiences with someone of the same sex, he is gay.

— The American Psychiatric Association classifies homosexuals as "sick."

— Homosexuals can be legally married to each other under the law in the United States.

— Most homosexuals try to convert young people into becoming gay also.

— Children raised by gay parents (or gay people) usually become homosexuals themselves.

How did you score? If you marked all 12 statements "False," you are very well informed.

If you marked nine or more statements "False," you are fairly well informed.

If you marked four or more statements "True," you have a great deal to learn about homosexuality, because all of the above statements are false!

DEAR ABBY: During the last few years, I have spent a small fortune trying to find a comfortable brassiere. I have a large drawer filled with practically new brassieres—none of which I can wear.

I have tried different brands and have been fitted by professionals in Ypsilanti, Detroit and Ann Arbor.

The president will be Carmen Bradley. Other officers will include Vice President, Janice Hopkins; Treasurer, Pat Lindsey; Recording Secretary, Audrey Harsany; Corresponding Secretary, Carol Wigent. A social hour followed the meeting.

A model meeting was held at the home of Stephanie Evancho. Each officer and committee chairman explained her job and duties to the new pledges, who are Nancy Galloway, Linda Patterson and Patsy Garzik.

About three-quarters of those 65 and older live in homes they own.

Sorority Hosts Workshop For Leadership

Iota Kappa Omega Chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority recently hosted a high school leadership workshop titled "Our Emerging Young Black Leaders."

High school students identified by their guidance counselors as potential leaders were invited from Rose, Ayden-Grifton, North Pitt, Farmville Central, and Washington High Schools. Eighty-five students attended. The workshop was held at East Carolina University and co-sponsored by the Organization of Black Faculty and Staff.

Wade Johnson, featured speaker for the event, spoke on the theme. He is a drug counselor for the Pitt County schools. Edward Carter, mayor pro tem of Greenville, conducted a workshop on "Strategies for Leadership." Gwendolyn Lee, employed in the Office for Student Opportunity, ECU Medical School, led a second workshop titled "Strategies for Education."

Connie Shelton and Lawrence Scott Summers, ECU seniors, and Martha Britt, attending N.C. State University, comprised a panel and discussed the proper balances between academics, athletics, and social life in college.

Addie Gore registered the workshop participants. Jean Carter, president of the chapter, gave the welcome; Joyce Pettis, president of the organization of Black Faculty and Staff, emphasized the significance of the workshop. Jacqui Hawkins recognized outstanding youth leaders in the group and Patricia Artis introduced the speaker. Jennifer King-Congleton conducted the workshop closing. All students who attended were given certificates recognizing their accomplishments or their leadership potential.

Pat's Pointers By Pat Trexler

Put yourself in the front of the fashion scene with the newest sweater look from Europe. Fashioned after a $300 sweater found in a Danish boutique, this striking diagonally striped sweater blouse will make the simplest skirt or pants look like a million.

Knitting on the bias, you are never working with more than one color on a single row — the diagonal stringing forms almost like magic. Although any yarn that works to a five-stitch-per-inch gauge may be used (you can even use up leftover odds and ends), the sweater is especially elegant when worked with the designer yarns used for the model — a slubby cotton/linen/acrylic, one shade of silky ribbon and a brushed acrylic blend.

To obtain directions for making the Danish Diagonal Sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. KL-0331 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. K-0331 by sending a check or money order for $42 for the small size or $45 for the medium and large sizes to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and designer yarns in your choice of "Caribbean sea" tones or "coral sands" tones. Please specify your color choice.

Dear Pat: I see so many beautiful summer knits in retail shops, magazines and mail-order catalogs, but I never see any but plain yarns in cotton. Where can I find specialty yarns? — Sarah B., Omaha, Neb.

Almost every city has at least one privately owned yarn shop where you are most apt to find this year's exciting crop of new yarns. But even this type of specialty shop may find it a problem to stock large quantities of the fashion yarns. Most can, however, show you color cards of yarns that can be special ordered.

Dear Pat: It seems to me that yarns are getting more and more expensive every year — almost to the point where you save little by making your own garments. I love to knit and crochet, but like to feel that I am saving money when I do so. Don't the yarn manufacturers realize they will lose customers if they keep raising prices? — Ann L., Denver

While it's true that, like everything else, many yarns are increasing in price, the basic yarn types have gone up less than most items we buy. The advent of mass merchandising chain stores have kept the prices of these basic yarns down considerably.

It's also true that you can find very reasonably priced ready made sweaters at these same discount houses. At the same time, you can find sweaters selling in boutiques and better dress shops for several hundred dollars.

So you can still save quite a bit by making your own — it really all depends on the look you want to achieve.

While $40 or $50 may sound terribly steep for yarn, if you can make an elegant knit that would sell for four or five times that amount retail, you have saved a great deal.

I think there is a use for yarns in every price range. I would never spend a great deal for a child's sweater, for example, as they are so likely to be lost or damaged.

Also consider the type of knitting your projects call for. When you are using intricate pattern stitches, you often get better results from a smooth basic yarn than with a highly textured yarn.

One excellent compromise is to use brushed acrylic yarns. These yarns can lend an air of elegance to almost any design at a very reasonable price.

At other times, you can stay in a moderate price range (and put an item in the quick-knit category) by combining two different types of yarn in a single garment. An all-ribbon knit blouse, for example, can easily cost $65 to $100 to make. By combining the ribbon with a less expensive yarn and using large needles, you can cut the cost almost in half.

There are always people who say you should never use a cheap yarn when you consider the time it takes to knit or crochet an item. But if you get pleasure simply from the act of knitting or crocheting — most of us engage in the needle arts for this reason — and can't afford the higher priced yarns, by all means buy what you can afford and enjoy your stitching.

BIAS-KNIT...striped sweater is worked in designer yarns for a dramatic look.

Prudence

Complexities of foreign aid are such that for the sake of brevity one must deal with the multipackaged $13.2 billion as a whole. The measure is being argued before several congressional committees (and subcommittees), most of whom are looking for possible reductions. We think it's time, too.

In other years and other administrations this space has argued in behalf of foreign aid appropriations on the grounds they represented a bolstering of U.S. security goals around the world. The argument is wearing thin.

For one thing, foreign aid has been a major item in U.S. budget-making for decades. It is easy for us to visualize some recipients have necessarily "adapted" and become so dependent upon the American taxpayer that standing on their own two feet may have become a forgotten responsibility.

For another, our aid to dictatorial regimes has been as commonplace as aid to democracies. That rankles. Surely, if help is needed, a touch of favoritism is owed democratic governments.

Thirdly, our own country is struggling with economic problems that are so great they overshadow the needs of many who have become habitually dependent upon our largesse.

Preoccupation with the wants of our overseas dependents should not blind us to the economic dangers our country is facing... America's needs should be paramount. After all, both our spenders and savers could agree some reductions in domestic welfare programs were in order.

As of today a prime need is to get our financial books in balance.

There is no one to whom we could turn for "foreign aid" if our lack of prudence results in economic disaster.

Some may have forgotten, but years ago it was accepted we could not serve as policeman of the world; now would be a good time to reconsider just how many dependents we can support.

"Birdbrain" is a scornful term, though we all know that mama birds tend their young up to a certain point — then no more. They let their fledglings know they are expected to learn to fly and fend for themselves.

They do.

RALEIGH — North Carolina may be making great strides forward with the development of a high technology economy. But for the 750,000 functionally illiterate North Carolinians, 21st century jobs are of little good. They don't have the skills to do the work.

A legislative budget committee heard some good news on the illiteracy front recently, however. The problem hasn't been solved but Central Piedmont Community College may have come up with one of the best attacks on illiteracy yet developed.

CPCC has developed a computerized illiteracy program that allows an adult to progress one reading grade in about one-fifth as much time as he'd spend in a classroom. This individualized program is even faster than one-on-one tutoring.

According to Dr. Richard Hagemeyer, CPCC president, the average adult student reading below the fourth grade level will progress one reading grade after 30 to 35 hours of study. For those reading at fourth grade or better, advancement takes even less time, 25 to 30 hours, on average.

To date, individual tutoring has been considered the fastest way for a non-reader to progress. Hagemeyer said individual tutoring usually brings a student along at a rate of one grade for 50 hours of study. For adults who sit in a classroom taking Adult Basic Education, reading improvement usually comes at the rate of one grade for every 150 hours of study.

In adult reading instruction, speed is essential, Hagemeyer says.

"We believe that one of the solutions (to illiteracy) has to be some kind of method or technique that is more time effective," he said in an interview. "It just takes too long for an individual to succeed if he has to spend 150 hours to progress one grade level."

Take for example the case of an adult male with a family. He reads at the fourth grade level and wants a better job that requires an eighth grade reading proficiency. Taking ABE classes, it will take two hours of class, two nights a week for 37 weeks to progress one grade level. He can't take the job for three years.

"With a more time effective methodology, these people can see they are making progress. They'll persist and they'll succeed," he said.

Since mid-1983, the CPCC program has had more than 1,100 students. About two-thirds stick with the program, an extremely high retention rate for a literacy program, according to educators who spoke to the budget committee.

CPCC operates the program at four sites, the main site being in a low to middle income neighborhood shopping mall in Charlotte. Hagemeyer says non-readers are often very ashamed of their problem and will not enter a reading program if they have to go to a community center or local school where people will know them. Working with computers in the shopping mall, these non-readers have found the kind of anonymity that helps them get over their insecurities, he said.

Hagemeyer hopes the program will spread across the state. First Union National Bank, one of the original sponsors of the CPCC program, has pledged $50,000 to help it get started in other communities.

Members of the budget committee were astounded by what they heard. The CPCC program is not only faster, it may also be cheaper in the long run.

Sen. Marvin Ward, D-Forsyth, chairman of the Education Base Budget Committee, says the program should be tried in other parts of the state with an eye toward eventual statewide expansion.

Regan Riding High

WASHINGTON — The failure of Edward Rollins to achieve his dream of becoming secretary of labor testifies to the power, style and outlook of Donald T. Regan, riding high after two months as White House chief of staff.

Rollins was rejected by Regan. Alone on the new White House team, Rollins as political director had not been hand-picked by Regan. In denying Rollins the Cabinet post virtually promised him, the new chief of staff dramatically demonstrated that the influence of his predecessor, James A. Baker III, has ended. He also confirmed his own clean lines of authority, reduced intrigue and lifted White House morale. But Regan's unobtrusive display of power could cause future resentments, particularly on Capitol Hill.

Picking the justifiably respected William Brock also reflects Regan's establishment bias. While Brock probably will get on better with AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland than Rollins would have, he may not be so well equipped to infiltrate unions with Reaganite rank-and-file. The choice is a negative signal for party realignment along populist-conservative lines.

It also suggests to the Republican faithful that loyal service to Ronald Reagan may be its own reward. In return for Rollins' masterly management of Reagan's re-election campaign, the White House botched a half-hearted effort to make him postmaster general. But he had been encouraged by Baker that the labor portfolio probably would be his once Raymond Donovan quit.

When Baker and Regan swapped jobs, Regan was uneasy about Rollins' background as a Baker lieutenant and his stated 1988 presidential preference for Vice President George Bush. But Sen. Paul Laxalt and political consultant Stuart Spencer went to their friend the president to successfully boost Rollins.

That Regan still had problems with Rollins became obvious two weeks ago. Rollins and Communications Director Patrick Buchanan had worked out power-sharing for the politically sensitive Public Liaison Office, with Rollins in operational control. No way, said Regan, who handed it all to Buchanan.

Still, it was widely assumed that when Donovan resigned, Rollins would get the labor post he openly — perhaps too openly — coveted. Bush and Baker supported him, and he had the blessing of Sen. Orrin Hatch, chairman of the Senate Labor Committee. But Michael K. Deaver, the lame-duck deputy chief of staff, has no love for Rollins and was preparing a final shot before he leaves the White House.

Deaver's choice was James C. Miller, the esteemed chairman of the Federal Trade Commission whose appointment would be celebrated at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce but who scarcely seemed appropriate for labor. Appreciating this, Regan quietly tapped Cabinet colleague Brock.

Brock's past proves that Reaganite credentials counted for little. As Republican national chairman in 1980, he was slow to recognize Reagan's nomination even after the primaries (which explains why he barely got even the unprestigious U.S. trade representative's portfolio). After the president backed a proposed Department of International Trade (a dubious decision since reversed), Brock quietly lobbied against it in Congress.

Brock's real qualifications for labor may have less to do with his wide political and government experience than his respectability. Regan, probably the richest man in the administration, talks about "S.U.M." for "screw-you money" (a bowdlerization of what he actually says) as a most desirable attribute for public service. That means a government official with an ample bankroll need not bow to anybody. Brock, a man of inherited wealth, has plenty of S.U.M. Rollins, who comes from working class origins and has spent his life as a political staffer, does not.

Beyond S.U.M., Brock's nomination guaranteed favorable editorials in the Washington Post and New York Times.

Public Forum

To the editor:

On March 15, 1985, the music therapy department of the ECU School of Music presented a program in honor of the late Bobby Gowen featuring music therapy clients. Demonstrations of the music therapy process as well as performances on instruments ranging from the piano to the guitar were included.

It is rare that handicapped individuals have an opportunity to express themselves musically and/or to receive public recognition for their efforts and they obviously enjoyed themselves very much. One could see feelings of pride and happiness on the faces of the performers.

As the mother of one of the participants, I am grateful to the school of music, Dr. Rosemary Fischer, and the student teachers who work with the young musicians so creatively and in such a warm, caring framework. Greenville is fortunate to have this service available.

—Elisha Douglas— Strength For Today

To what extent should we bow to the demands of conformity, and to what extent should we be rebels?

This is a question everyone has to answer for himself or herself. Conformity has its advantages and at times rebellion also. When there is evil in the world, we should rebel against it. When we encounter something which appears to us to be right and advantageous both for ourselves and for others, we should conform ourselves to things as they are. Every religious system requires a certain amount of conformity on the part of its members. Good citizenship requires conformity to basic requirements of order and justice.

Life is primarily a matter of balance. God insists on giving us choices and compelling us to make them whether we want to or not.

Each individual must decide whether he or she will be a conformist or a rebel.

Close Vote

Two close votes in the House of Representatives cleared the way for adding 21 MX missiles to the U.S. defenses. Otherwise, the administration's victory was not too impressive.

Foes are already saying the approval "probably" marks the high water point in the running argument over funding and building up of the planned MX arsenal. We are inclined to think so, too.

The White House made much of the fact that a positive vote would comprise a message to negotiators in Geneva that this country was determined to bolster its nuclear armament despite the dangers of a swelling budget and a shared dread of holocaust. Much was made of its importance as a symbol to the Russians.

That value was watered down by the narrow margin of approval. The follow-up "high water point" analysis has another undermining impact.

A new rallying cry will be needed next time when a follow-up authorization and funding of the MX goes before Congress.

Change The Treaty Or Forget It

WASHINGTON — For the past 36 years, through the administrations of eight presidents, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been tossing around the Genocide Convention in the same way that a bored child plays with a broken toy. It is time for the committee either to approve this generally useless and potentially dangerous treaty, or to vote it down so decisively that we will be done with the matter for a least another two years.

The U.N. General Assembly adopted the Genocide Convention in December 1948. Harry Truman sent it to the Senate for ratification the following year. The thing has been languishing in committee ever since. The wisest course would be to pronounce it dead and get on to legislative business that truly matters.

Who needs this treaty? Since 1967 Wisconsin's Sen. William Proxmire has made 3,000 speeches in support of the Genocide Convention, but if the gentleman has provided a convincing explanation of how this would benefit the United States, it has escaped the notice of this observer. The senator was on his feet just the other day, speaking to the plight of Andean villagers in Peru who are the victims of "political killings" by both government and guerrilla forces. But the convention, owing to the objections of the Soviet Union back in 1948, does not cover "political killings."

Well it is said the United States ranks as a pariah in the family of nations. Almost 100 other countries have ratified, among them France, Britain, Canada, West Germany, the Soviet Union and the Soviet satellites. We are left in the miserable company of — ugh! — South Africa as the only two nations of consequence yet to go along. If everybody else is agreeable to so high-minded an accord, why should the United States stay aloof?

One answer lies in the nature of our constitutional system. Once ratified, this treaty would become part of the "supreme law of the land." Certain of its provisions, having potentially to do with the extradition of American citizens and their trial by foreign courts, could deny an accused person all the protections of due process of law that lie at the heart of our system of jurisprudence.

The convention is worded so ambiguously that its provisions could mean as much, or as little, as judges might read into them. For example, the document defines genocide not only as killing members of a national, ethnic, racial or religious group, but also as causing "serious bodily or mental harm" to members of such a group. What is "serious"? What is meant by "mental harm"?

Genocide is further defined as deliberately inflicting on a group conditions calculated to bring about its physical destruction in whole or "in part." What is "part"? Ordinarily genocide is thought of in terms of governmental action: Nazi Germany and the Jews. But this treaty is not so confined. It would punish acts committed by public officials "or private individuals."

Under Article IX, disputes relating to application of the convention would not be settled in our own courts. No indeed. Disputes would be submitted to the International Court of Justice "at the request of any of the parties."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has prepared eight statements of reservation or understanding that would cure these and other defects. His resolution would make it clear, among other things, that the crime of genocide can be committed by governments only; that the convention would not override other provisions of the Constitution; that "in part" means "in substantial numbers"; that "mental harm" means deliberate and permanent impairment of the brain, and that the jurisdiction of the World Court may be invoked only if "all parties" to a dispute agree.

Several of these reservations have received committee approval in times past. All of them are prudent. My own thought is that the Senate would do poorly to write so murky a treaty into our supreme law in the name of international public relations. The Helms resolution would make the thing barely acceptable. With these reservations, the committee might defensibly vote aye. Without them, no.

Tobacco May Be Its Own Best Alternative

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — While small tobacco counties might find financially appealing alternatives in alfalfa, hay, ornamental plants, broccoli and hogs, major leaf-growing counties shouldn't switch gears, an agriculture official says.

"Alternatives will look more attractive in these areas and enterprise diversification will likely occur depending on individual producer's access to capital, labor and their preferences for risk," Edmund A. Estes, extension economist at North Carolina State University, said Monday during a media briefing on agriculture.

But Estes said even without federal price supports, growers in big leaf-producing counties may find tobacco is the most attractive cash crop.

"In major tobacco counties, what the alternative is, in my opinion, is tobacco," he said.

Deregulation, including the removal of government quotas, would likely spark greater production of tobacco, Estes said. While tobacco income per acre may drop from $1,700 to $350, he said, increasing demand will help offset the losses.

"If a 30 percent price decline occurs, then gross tobacco income will be equivalent to the current gross tobacco income level if a 400 percent (increase in output) occurs," he said. "This level of return may crowd out alternatives which do not offer similar returns and there may be a reduction in non-tobacco crops grown."

William D. Toussaint, an N.C. State extension economist specializing in tobacco policy, said growers would have to hope the surge in production helps reduce imports as lower prices created a bigger world market for U.S.

"It's not going to be very much in terms of domestic consumption (increases)," he said, adding that with imported tobacco currently costing 90 cents a pound, competitive prices would be "down near the cost of production if there's deregulation."

Toussaint said there is evidence that deregulation would concentrate tobacco farms in the southeastern part of North Carolina but said there is less of a threat that South Carolina, Georgia and Florida will take over production.

"At 20 to 30 cents for renting quota in Georgia and Florida, it appears it is not all that profitable," he said. "It took tremendous irrigation to grow comparable yields (to North Carolina)."

The strength of the dollar on world markets hurt all North Carolina farmers, forcing one in every six into "serious financial problems" in 1984, said Dale M. Hoover, director of N.C. State's department of economics and business.

"We are anticipating a decline in net farm income," added William Eickhoff, an N.C. State economist specializing in farm management and taxes. "Loan repayment is going to become more and more difficult."

Of 10,083 farm borrowers in the state 3,932 already are delinquent by 30 days or more, he said. In 1985 it's estimated that the number of farmers facing insolvency or extreme financial problems will rise from about 3,700 in 1984 to nearly 6,000.

"It is possible we will have a significant attrition rate among farmers in this state in the next few years," Eickhoff said, citing eroding land values and poor investment strategies as factors in the increasing debts.

Fires Burn 800 Acres

SHALLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — High winds and low humidity fueled fires that burned at least 800 acres of forest in Brunswick County and forced the evacuation of more than 2,000 students in Wilmington, officials said. No injuries or deaths were reported in either blaze Monday.

Dane Roten of the Division of Forest Resources of the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development said the blaze near Shallotte had burned between 800 and 1,000 acres of timberland as of about 6 p.m. Monday.

In Wilmington, a blaze near two schools prompted the evacuation of at least 2,000 students before some 300 firefighters brought it under control late Monday afternoon.

The fire near Hoggard High School and Roland Grice Junior High School in southeast Wilmington "started this morning, and because the wind was gusting, it spread very rapidly," said Sgt. Dennis Cyphers of the Wilmington Police Department.

The fire "burned all the way into the school yard at the high school" and into a wooded area at the back of the athletic fields of the adjacent junior high school, Cyphers said.

Fishermen Catching Dead Crabs

RALEIGH (AP) — Commercial fishermen are catching dead crabs in the Pamlico River near Bath in the same general area where diseased fish have been caught in the past several months.

Roy Carden, a spokesman for the N.C. Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, said Monday preliminary observations indicate the crab kill was caused by low oxygen levels in the water caused by dry conditions in eastern North Carolina.

He said the department's Environmental Management and Marine Fisheries divisions were studying the area near Bath and Durham creeks where dead crabs were reported last week.

Death Sentence Is Upheld

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court Monday let stand the death sentence of a North Carolina man who beat his mother-in-law to death.

The court refused to hear David Earl Huffstetler's arguments that he was improperly sentenced to death for the New Year's Day 1983 murder of Edna Cordell Powell, 65, in the Gaston County community of Kings Mountain.

Police said Huffstetler beat Mrs. Powell to death in her home, next door to where he and his wife lived.

Namesake Scheme Charged

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Attorney General's Office has filed suit against a Winston-Salem man who incorporated people's names without their permission and then tried to sell them the corporations.

The suit charges that Haywood E. Whichard and Tara Mela Inc. formed corporations in the names of individuals and then offered to sell them the corporations for $1,275 each.

"The defendants advised the individual that if he did not purchase the corporation, the defendants would sell it to others 'less creditworthy,'" the lawsuit said.

"The clear and intended effect of this solicitation was to obtain money with an implied threat that if the individual did not purchase the corporation the result would probably be serious damage to the individual's reputation," the lawsuit said.

Whichard, who says he buys and sells real estate and has done some inventing on the side, said in an interview Monday that most people didn't realize that someone else could form a corporation in their name. He said his intent was misunderstood and he has already scrapped the idea.

He said he formed five corporations this year in the names of various individuals at a cost of $90 each.

"I got a response from two of them, well, actually two of their attorneys," Whichard said. "And they implied that if I did anything with those corporations to damage their names that they would file a lawsuit."

"This is over and done with," he said. "I did not sell and never offered the corporations to anybody after I found out how these people acted."

Ballenger Has Surgery

RALEIGH (AP) — State Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, underwent surgery Monday for removal of a section of his colon and will miss about a month of legislative action.

"He's going to be in good shape," said Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman, R-Iredell. He said the operation was "serious" but that doctors emerged from the surgery "smiling."

Doctors removed several benign polyps from Ballenger's colon Friday, but decided to remove part of the organ.

The surgery took place in Catawba Memorial Hospital in Hickory.

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Jay James fired his employees six months ago, but he says his business hasn't suffered a bit.

The 13 employees of The James Co., which manufactures computer furniture, report to the same plant every day, but they don't work for James. They're employed by Stafflease Inc., a company that leases James' former employees back to him.

"They were a little nervous at first," James said. "Because we're a small company, it had worked like a family. They felt like maybe we were cutting the umbilical cord, as it were."

"But the transition was smooth and nobody feels any difference," James said. "After a few days, everything was back to normal again."

The idea of leasing a staff from a private company started about six years ago on the West Coast, said Will Collins, president of Stafflease.

It relieves businessmen of personnel management headaches, Collins said, and offers employees better fringe benefits than those usually available at small businesses.

"The benefits are a package that we offer, generally at a less expensive cost because of our group numbers," Collins said. "Our benefit program right now is comparable to any corporate program, but we offer it to smaller business who normally can't afford it."

Collins said he started Stafflease 18 months ago and now has clients ranging from small manufacturing firms to doctors, lawyers and dentists. He has concentrated on the Research Triangle Park area, but hopes to expand to other North Carolina cities.

"There's one thing that large companies have in common with small companies, and that is their employees," Collins said. "In a lot of small businesses, employees wear many hats and have a more direct impact on the business. It's not that corporate employees aren't important, but small companies place a lot more responsibility with individuals."

Stafflease hires and fires the employees assigned to work for James, but James said there are benefits for managers and employees in that arrangement.

"If we have a little problem that needs mediating, he (Collins) is our head man in the negotiations," James said. "It's good to have an outside person like that, particularly someone with some experience. It allows a small company to have a professional personnel director."

"It has the additional benefit of me or my plant manager not having to do all the preliminary interviewing of people for jobs," James said. "Stafflease does all the preliminaries — advertising and preliminary screening."

Martin, Democrats Trade Jobs

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has labeled "arrogant" and "repulsive" a series of legislative moves he says are designed to rob him of authority, but Democratic lawmakers are unrepentant.

"The pattern is clear," said Martin. "Either out of an attitude of partisan intransigence or cavalier disrespect, (the) legislative leadership is not content with the traditional and constitutional separation of powers."

House Speaker Liston Ramsey retorted that the Republican governor "doesn't understand the legislative process."

The exchange took place Monday after a tough week for Martin in the Legislature, where Democrats outnumber Republicans 120 to 50.

A Republican bill to let the voters decide whether to grant the governor veto power was killed in a Senate committee last Thursday, and the Democratic majority refused to consider the measure on the floor.

Meanwhile, the Senate approved a bill to let the voters reconsider letting the governor seek a second consecutive term.

Last Tuesday, the co-chairmen of the Joint Base Budget Committee ordered a freeze on hiring for vacant state jobs and said their panel would eliminate any unfilled positions considered unnecessary July 1.

Martin said he welcomed the examination of the jobs, but that the freeze was unconstitutional.

The Senate tentatively approved Friday a bill to restrict Martin's control over the State Board of Elections and prohibit him from firing its director.

Also Friday, a House committee voted to transfer jurisdiction over the state missing-children center from the Martin administration to the Democrat-controlled Attorney General's Office.

"The need for the executive veto has been clearly demonstrated as legislative leaders continue to assault the office of governor and its constitutional prerogatives," said Martin in a news conference.

Martin called on Ramsey to permit committee and floor consideration of the veto issue.

Ramsey said no one in the House had introduced a veto bill. "Is the governor asking me to introduce his legislation for him? The answer is no," he said. "The speaker doesn't let anything out or keep anything in.

That's up to the members."

He added, however, that he strongly opposed the veto.

"The executive branch has certain constitutional rights ... but veto power is not one of them," he said. "I am not ready as speaker to give away anything in the way of a constitutional amendment that would weaken the legislative branch."

GOP lawmakers who spoke on the condition that they not be identified said a veto bill probably would be introduced in the House by midweek.

GHA Awards Certificates To 5 Moyewood Residents

Five residents of the Greenville Housing Authority's 30-unit Moyewood II development have been awarded certificates for taking exemplary care of their homes, Sallye Streeter, GHA director of resident affairs, reported Monday.

The certificates, Mrs. Streeter explained to board members attending the authority's monthly meeting Monday night, are part of a program designed to encourage more families to take better care of their units. The certificates are presented following annual inspections of developments.

Receiving certificates were Martha Randolph, Reberta Clark, William Taft, Vanessa Arrington and Louis Jones.

Next on the inspection list are units at Moyewood I, slated for examination in April.

In other business, Mrs. Streeter reported that average rent at housing authority developments in March totaled $120.03. Rent at Meadowbrook was $103.32; Kearney Park, $133.62; Moyewood I, $130.32; Moyewood II, $134.67; Newtown, $109.96; Hopkins Park, $98.76 (the rental rate for this development is scheduled for re-examination to bring payments more in line); and West Meadowbrook, the authority's newest development, $113.03. The authority has a current waiting list of 470 prospective residents. All units at West Meadowbrook have been leased.

Mrs. Streeter also reported that new ranges had been installed in all units at Moyewood II and in a portion of Moyewood I units. A number of the old stoves replaced at the two developments had been in use for 16 years.

Authority Assistant Director Ken Nolan reported that modernization efforts at Kearney Park are moving along. He said 80 percent of storm sewer work is complete, 60 percent of electrical work is complete and 40 percent of interior work involving installation of cabinets is complete.

Nolan also said he had completed preparation of plans and specifications for scheduled Meadowbrook modernization and that bids on the project will be opened May 1. Improvements will be paid for by GHA out of operating funds and include installation of metal on unit soffits and gables, and replacement of existing doors and windows.

Activity in GHA's Section 8 (private housing leased to income eligible applicants) remained at its normal level in March, Authority Director Joe Laney reported in final business. Laney said 113 of 150 authorized units of existing Section 8 housing (as opposed to new construction) were occupied, pointing out the number of unoccupied units seems higher because of the recent addition of 30 new Section 8 units.

Three of GHA's 109 Section 8 moderate rehab units are unoccupied, and 59 of 60 units at University Towers, the authority's development for elderly residents, are occupied.

LEGISLATIVE DISCUSSION — State Reps. Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed Warren and State Sen. Tom Taft, left to right, attended a legislative coffee held Monday morning at the Humber House. Democrats Propose Tax Levy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some House Democrats are proposing to increase federal revenues through a minimum tax on corporations and individuals.

The co-authors of the measure, Reps. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., and Marty Russo, D-Ill., say their plan would make the tax system more fair, but it also would increase the federal tax bill of large corporations and wealthy individuals by $15 billion next year.

House Democratic leaders have said they would oppose any general tax increase to reduce deficits unless President Reagan made the proposal, but the plan proposed Monday by Schumer and Russo would allow legislators to back the idea of tax reform — a popular idea in Congress this year — and raise revenues without calling the move a tax increase.

Treaty Signed

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Acting President Victor Martinez has signed into law a Vatican-mediated treaty with Chile designed to end a century-old border dispute at the tip of the South American continent.

The treaty still requires ratification by Chile's military government.

deductions, credits or other exemptions claimed.

In addition, the plan also would allow only five deductions — charitable contributions, medical expenses, state and local taxes, casualty losses and interest expenses on a principal residence.

Last November, the Treasury Department delivered a tax overhaul plan the president requested. Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III is now reworking that plan and has said he will send Congress a new package sometime next month.

That package, as well as several other tax reform plans being circulated on Capitol Hill, would compress the current personal income tax structure of 15 rates for single people and 14 for joint returns.

Administration officials have said their aim is to use additional revenues from increased corporate taxes to lower personal income tax rates. The president has emphasized that he prefers to cut federal spending to reduce the government's red ink.

However, many Democrats have said that spending cuts alone will not do the job and increased revenues will be necessary to shrink the deficits.

There is considerable support in Congress, including on the tax-writing committees, for a tougher minimum tax on corporations and individuals. It responds to the widespread perception that rich people are getting away without paying their fair share.

The movement has gained additional support this year with release of an Internal Revenue Service report that 299 couples and individuals with incomes above $200,000 a year paid no U.S. income tax in 1982.

"When I talk to the people back home I see that their concern is not some complicated tax reform, but that everyone must pay their fair share," said Russo, a member of the Ways and Means Committee.

"Is it unfair to insist that profitable corporations like General Electric and General Dynamics pay some taxes," asked Schumer, a member of the Budget Committee. "We don't think so."

The plan would place a minimum tax of 25 percent on individuals and corporations with taxable income of $100,000 or more, regardless of number of warheads deployed on submarines, because each U.S. missile carries eight to 10. But as of early 1985, the Soviets had 62 modern ballistic missile submarines carrying 928 missiles, compared to the United States' 36 submarines with 640 missiles.

The Soviets launched a new class of attack submarine in 1984, designated the Akula. The Soviets are now "producing or testing nine different classes of submarines."

The Soviets are working on two new classes of land-based intercontinental missiles, including one that would be larger than the SS-X-24. The Soviets still enjoy a substantial lead in the number of warheads deployed on land-based missiles.

Monday he would not trade American forces for those of the Soviet Union. But the official, who asked not to be identified, added the report proves "there is a relentless drive to provide the Soviet forces with an offensive capability."

The official added he was most concerned by the continuing buildup in Soviet submarine forces.

Much of the information on specific weapons contained in the new report has been disclosed in recent months. For example, Defense Department officials confirmed last month the Soviets were preparing to deploy two new intercontinental ballistic missiles — the SS-X-24 and the SS-X-25 — and that the latter is considered a violation of arms control agreements.

The new report elaborates on those statements, saying the SS-X-24 — which can carry up to 10 warheads — is expected to be deployed next year. The smaller, single-warhead SS-X-25, however, will be deployed this year, the report adds. It has been designed for launch from mobile tractor-trailers, and thus will complicate U.S. surveillance efforts.

While the report also provides additional details on a host of other weapons, it strikes new ground in discussing the Soviet Union's "Strategic Defense and Space Programs," equating them to the U.S. Star Wars research program that has become a source of contention at the Geneva arms talks.

According to the report, the Russians are engaged in a massive research program that is every bit if not more ambitious than that of the United States. And they are focusing on many of the same technologies that President Reagan has identified as targets for American research, such as lasers and particle-beam weapons.

"The USSR's high-energy laser program ... is much larger than the U.S. effort," the report states. "By the late 1980s, the Soviets could have prototypes for ground-based lasers for ballistic missile defense. They already have ground-based lasers that could be used to interfere with (low-orbit) U.S. satellites."

The Soviets also "have begun to develop at least three types of high-energy laser weapons for air defense," and have mounted "a vigorous program" to develop particle-beam weapons. They are also conducting research "in the use of strong radio-frequency signals that have the potential to interfere with or destroy components of missiles, satellites and re-entry vehicles."

Coupled with such futuristic research are continuing improvements to the Soviet Union's early-warning radar network and expansion of the existing anti-ballistic missile defense system deployed around Moscow, the report adds.

As for other weapons, the report offers these observations:

—In 1984, the Soviets deployed three modern ballistic missile submarines, including a third giant Typhoon-class sub — the world's largest. Each Typhoon-class submarine carries 20 ballistic missiles equipped with six to nine warheads. The report notes the United States still holds a significant lead in the for Chapter I and Chapter II federal funds. Also approved was a request to enroll toddlers and preschoolers in the Agnes Fullilove Child Care Center in the national school lunch program. Two children enrolled in the center are presently qualified for the lunch program.

Dr. Mary Hoffman, professor in the University of Illinois School of Music and currently a clinician in a three-day music inservice program in the city schools, was introduced to board members by Dr. Charles Moore, president of the Arts Advisory Council of the city schools.

"I am aware of the magnificent program in North Carolina in the arts in schools," Dr. Hoffman commented. "Experience has shown that those who do well in arts do well also in basics such as reading and writing."

Dr. Hoffman's inservice program is made possible by a grant from the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

In a joint presentation, Charles Ross and Rebecca Oats, directors of elementary and secondary education, respectively, gave board members a brief run-down on the Basic Education Program (BEP) being developed by the State Department of Public Instruction. One primary purpose of the program is to specify how much of which particular resource, state or local, is needed to assure that each child has access to a sound education.

Within this overall concept, "The Standard Course of Study" has been developed to provide detailed information on the curriculum by grade and subject area.

To fine-tune the standard course study requirements, "The Competency-Based Curriculum" has been published — a multi-volume, 5,000 page document which goes into great detail to define the competencies expected to be taught to students in North Carolina.

"This is potentially the most drastic change in public education in North Carolina since 1933," said Dr. Delma Blinson, former superintendent of city schools and now a consultant to the school board. "It will determine what the responsibilities of the state, of each individual county will be."

In executive session, the board approved the designation of 17 staff members for career status effective with the 1985-86 school year; a maternity leave, and retirement of one staff member.

Police Report Three Collisions

An estimated $5,750 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Monday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted from a 4:20 p.m. collision at the intersection of 14th and Fleming streets involving cars driven by Johnny Wayne Sharpe of Route 4, Greenville, and Willie Wendell Hines of Greenville.

Police, who charged Sharpe with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety and Hines with a license restriction violation, set damage at $1,200 to the Sharpe car and $1,400 to the Hines vehicle.

Cars driven by Tara Marie O'Brien of 105A Kings Arms and Regina Monique Wright of 231 Orton Drive collided about 7:15 p.m. at the intersection of Elm and 14th streets, causing $700 damage to the O'Brien car and $900 damage to the Wright vehicle.

Anthony Walker of Winterville was charged with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident following investigation of a 5:13 p.m. collision on Greene Street, 20 feet south of the Mumford Road intersection.

Investigators, who identified the drivers of the other cars involved in the mishap as Joan Carrol Gibson of Route 11, Greenville, and Ellen Patrice Amendolara of Route 5, Williamston, set damage at $450 to the Walker car, $800 to the Gibson car and $300 to the Amendolara vehicle.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened slightly higher today, extending the modest gains of the previous two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 1.43 at 1,274.18 after the first half-hour of trading.

Advancing issues took a 4-to-3 lead over declines among those listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

The market has moved in a narrow range over the past few weeks amid uncertainty about the outlook for the economy and corporate profits.

Recent government reports have provided mixed signals about the state of the economy.

For example, the government reported on Monday that new factory orders fell 0.2 percent in February. But at the same time, the figure for January, which had originally showed a 0.9 percent drop, was revised to an increase of 0.2 percent.

In addition to the conflicting evidence on economy, a number of companies and the analysts that follow them have lowered their estimates in recent weeks of potential first-quarter earnings.

Fairness In Media Financially Viable

WASHINGTON (AP) — A campaign by conservative groups to assume control of CBS Inc. is financially viable, but the legal bills are "phenomenal," says the executive director of the National Congressional Club.

"We're not on the verge of shutting down; we're going strong," R.E. Carter Wrenn, also an official with the Raleigh, N.C.-based Fairness in Media, said Monday.

The Wall Street Journal reported Monday that FIM "appears to be stymied" by CBS's legal efforts and that the group "may be running short of funds."

Both FIM and the Congressional Club have begun direct-mail appeals to help pay their legal fees.

Wrenn said the Congressional Club and FIM will continue to take the offensive in their battle against CBS. Wrenn said FIM on Monday mailed another nationwide letter with a goal of raising $150,000 to pay the cost of its first mailing.

On Tuesday, Wrenn released a statement from Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., in which Helms says FIM is launching a fund-raising campaign to raise money to reach CBS stockholders.

In the release, Helms said FIM must raise the $150,000, including $32,000 in the next two weeks, "if the project of contacting CBS stockholders is to succeed."

Helms has said he is not a member of FIM, but supports its goals.

"FIM intends to proceed rapidly and aggressively," Helms said in the release. "Obviously our next goal is to invite CBS stockholders to decide for themselves whether CBS has a record of biased, unfair and anti-Reagan reporting."

Helms said "CBS may as well get ready: We believe their days of misleading the public are nearing an end."

The takeover battle has sparked two lawsuits. CBS, in a suit in U.S. District Court in New York, accused the groups of violating securities law and sought to deny FIM a list of its shareholders. After a six-week legal battle, the network turned over the list last week to FIM.

Before the network gave FIM the list, Dunn, N.C., newspaper publisher Hoover Adams, acting on behalf of FIM, sued CBS to get the list.

In two recent mailings, FIM and the Congressional Club have asked supporters to help pay their legal bills.

Toronto Maintains Tight Security Stance

TORONTO (AP) — Police maintained tight security measures throughout Toronto's transit system today after the threat of a bomb attack cut ridership Monday by 35 percent.

Thousands of police patrolled subway platforms this morning after sweeping subway lines with tracking dogs last night to check for explosives reportedly planted by Armenian terrorists.

Plainclothes officers mixed with early-morning strap-hangers and patrol cars guarded vulnerable spots such as bridges and viaducts.

A meeting will be held today to determine if the heavy security measures will be maintained, officials said.

Police Chief Jack Marks said Friday that the Royal Canadian Mounted Police had received a letter from a group calling itself the Armenian Secret Army for Liberation of Our Homeland.

Carolina fares, military and military dependents. Sunbird and Piedmont will have the same fares and the same rules ... such as denied boarding compensation."

Ms. Bennett said Greenville is one of Sunbird's best markets. Overall, she said, Greenville has ranked third in total advanced bookings, although it "dropped to fourth last week."

In February, when 453 passengers boarded and 428 deplaned, Greenville was second only to Charlotte, she noted.

After Sunbird becomes a "Piedmont Commuter," Ms. Bennett said "we will have our own people in Hickory, Winston-Salem, Athens, Greenville, and a new market starting May 1, in Anderson, South Carolina." Piedmont will be responsible for ticketing and ground handling in Raleigh, Atlanta, Asheville and Greenville-Spartanburg," while in Charlotte, Piedmont will be doing ticketing and Sunbird will retain ground handling duties.

Sunbird, which now serves 12 cities with 61 daily flights, will serve 10 markets with 65 flights beginning in May.

Piedmont also will handle reservations, she said. "When you call our toll-free number, it will automatically be transferred into the Piedmont reservations center."

Jim Turcott, Pitt-Greenville Airport manager, said this morning that he was pleased with the new Sunbird-Piedmont operation.

Local area residents, he said, will be able to fly from Greenville at the same cost as flying from Kinston or Raleigh. The only reason to drive to another airport, he suggested, "is if you want a larger plane."

Sunbird now uses 15-passenger Beech 99's, with one 30-passenger Short 330 operating in the Hickory market, according to Ms. Bennett. But she said Sunbird has plans to upgrade service to Greenville with a Short 330 in the near future.

Roy Hagerty, a 1967 graduate of Rose High School, and his older brother Harry Hagerty Jr., a Washington, D.C., stockbroker, purchased Sunbird Airlines in 1984. The Hagertys are sons of Harry E. Hagerty, former Greenville city manager and former chairman of the Greenville Utilities Commission.

No April Fool, Villanova Wins It

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Far from owning a place in the history books, Georgetown and Patrick Ewing are mere footnotes to Villanova's place in the NCAA's record book.

The Hoyas were all but conceded a second consecutive national championship before the basketball tournament began — even before the basketball season began — and most certainly before Monday night's final against Villanova began.

"We're going to have to play a perfect game against Georgetown to win," roly-poly Rollie Massimino, the Wildcats' animated coach, had said before they pulled off one of the sport's greatest upsets with a 66-64 victory.

His prediction wasn't far off. More accurately, his players weren't.

They hit 78.6 percent of their shots from the field — 22 of 28 shots overall and nine of 10 in the second half — to surpass both the championship-game record of 67.4 percent by Ohio State in 1960 and the tournament record of 75 percent by Northeastern in the opening round a year ago.

The Hoyas were supposed to become the first team since the 1973 UCLA Bruins to win consecutive titles. They were supposed to join UCLA, Oklahoma A&M, Kentucky, San Francisco and Cincinnati as repeat champions.

And Ewing, the monolithic 7-footer with the wingspan of a condor, was supposed to join the select company of Lew Alcindor, Bill Walton, Jerry Lucas, Alex Groza and Bob Kurland as a multiple winner of the tournament's Outstanding Player Award.

It all came crashing to the court in Rupp Arena. Ewing alone missed as many shots as the entire Villanova team, getting his 14 points on 7-of-13 from the field.

He was his usual awesome self — three consecutive slam dunks late in the first half — but lithe, 6-9 Ed Pinkney aced Ewing out of his greatest triumph and grabbed it for himself.

It was Pinkney, with five of seven from the field and six of seven from the foul line, six rebounds and five assists, who was selected the tournament's premier player and who joined fellow seniors Dwayne McClain (with a game-high 17 points) and Gary McLain in fulfilling a dream.

They had vowed as freshmen to give Massimino ("a father, a brother, a boss and a coach," McLain had called him) a trip to the Final Four before they were graduated.

They did more than that. And they did it by overcoming some extraordinary odds.

They had to upset one team after another — Dayton (in Dayton), then Michigan, Maryland, North Carolina and Memphis State.

Still, no team had come out of a national championship final with a poorer record than Villanova's 25-10 (N.C. State was 26-10 two years ago after upsetting Houston). And none had ever won the title after finishing the season out of The Associated Press' Top Twenty rankings.

Long before this first all-conference final since Indiana beat Big Ten rival Michigan in 1976, the Wildcats had lost twice to Georgetown. And they had finished only tied for third behind St. John's and Georgetown in the Big East.

"These kids are just great,"

Massimino told a post-game news conference, the emotion welling up and spilling from his eyes as he sat with his trio of seniors and sophomore guard Harold Jensen.

"Everybody wrote us off," Massimino said. "They said we didn't have a chance to win . . . Every one of you people said we had no shot, we shouldn't have even played the game."

In fact, the NCAA says they've never played a championship game before. But numbers lie. In 1971, two years before Massimino's reign began, the Wildcats lost 68-62 to UCLA, but their runner-up listing was "vacated" by the NCAA after it was discovered Villanova's Howard Porter had signed a professional contract prematurely.

They were Davids facing a Goliath and his army of sharpshooters.

They were Rocky, real-life fighters from the outskirts of Philadelphia.

They were The Little Engine That Could, panting, "I think I can, I think I can . . . I thought I could, I thought I could . . ."

They had the ultimate weapon on their side. Not a slingshot. Not an overhand jab. Not even a coal-fired engine, even if their dream burned brightly.

They had time. Monday night's game likely was the last the NCAA will play without a 45-second shot clock.

"If we're up by a point with three minutes to go, we just use the expression, 'We have enough,'" Massimino said.

With barely 2½ minutes to go in the first half, the Wildcats were down by a point. McLain allowed the ball to bounce once in front of him as he spread his arms wide. A roar went up from the capacity crowd of 23,124 as the Wildcats spread out. They worked the clock like a Stradivarius.

With four seconds to go, Harold Pressley followed Chuck Everson's miss with a basket that put Villanova in front 29-28 at the half.

"They were playing cat-and-mouse," said John Thompson, the Georgetown coach. "It wouldn't make much difference whether we were up by one or down by one coming in at halftime."

It made quite a big difference. The teams traded baskets in the opening 50 seconds of the second half. Georgetown didn't regain the lead again until going up 42-41 with 10:13 to go.

They never got farther ahead than that one-point edge. And only once in the entire second half did they have both the lead and the ball.

That came with 3½ minutes left and the score 54-53.

Then Thompson, looking for a way to force Villanova out of its zone defense, ordered the Hoyas into a stall of their own. It lasted five seconds. Then Harold Broadnax bounced the ball off his own leg and into Jensen's hands.

The Wildcats got the ball back. And they got the lead for good 49 seconds later when Jensen scored on a 16-foot jumper from the right side, the last of the five shots he took from the field — and that last of the five he hit.

The clock was Thompson's enemy

His sharpshooting forward, Reggie Williams, had played 19 minutes in the first half and had hit five of seven shots.

But in the second half, Williams' ankle, twisted during the St. John's semifinal game, began to ache. And Thompson needed the ball.

"We got to rotating Reggie a lot more," Thompson said. "We were trying to get Broadnax in the game for defensive pressure. We knew once we got behind by six points or four points that it'd really be in their favor." Williams played just 10 minutes in the second half and missed his only two shots.

As the clock's final seconds evaporated, the two teams clung to themselves in far different ways.

Villanova's Cinderellas, able to celebrate 55 minutes before midnight, hurled themselves onto court-side press tables.

The Hoyas, who had lost by one point to North Carolina in the championship game three years ago, had buried Houston 84-75 last year and now had lost by two, encircled Ewing at their foul line.

Later, as the huge center strode to midcourt to accept a runner-up memento, he thrust an index finger skyward.

"I think I had a great career at Georgetown," he said later. "We might not have won the ballgame, but I still think we're No. 1."

So did Pinkney.

"Tonight, we might have been the better team," he said. "But I wouldn't want to play them 10 times. I think they'd win a lot of those, without a doubt."

Ewing's season ended with the Hoyas a 35-3 team. The Ewing era at Georgetown ended with the Hoyas' four-year record at 121-23.

In barely a month, seven teams in

Wildcats Believed In Selves Because Nobody Else Would

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — With 10 seconds left in the NCAA championship game, Villanova senior guard Gary McLain looked up at the scoreboard, flashed the No. 1 sign, and said "it's over. We did it."

What the unranked and decided underdog Wildcats did was defeat No. 1 Georgetown 66-64 Monday night and finish the quest of three seniors who believed they could accomplish what many said was impossible.

It was fitting that McLain, who convinced fellow seniors Ed Pinkney and Dwayne McClain to attend Villanova, should have the honor of proclaiming the victory.

"Our beliefs took us to this point and that alone," said McLain, who boldly promised Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino a Final Four appearance as a freshman.

"We had to believe in ourselves because nobody else did."

"Every one of you people said we had no shot. We shouldn't have even played the game," said Massimino.

"These kids are just great. Everyone wrote us off, said we didn't have a chance to win. They didn't listen."

It started four years ago at a prep basketball camp where the "Three Musketeers" met. It ended in Rupp Arena with McLain consistently breaking a Georgetown press, and McLain and Pinkney scoring 17 and 16 points against a much taller Georgetown front line.

Villanova shot 90 percent (9 for 10) from the field in the second half, and finished with an NCAA record 78.6 percent (22 of 28) for the game against a Georgetown defense that had held teams to less than 40 percent shooting during the season.

Sophomore Harold Jensen, who was named to the all-tournament team along with Pinkney, McLain and McLain, made all five of his field-goal attempts and helped his elders reach their dream by making four of five free throws in the final 1:24.

"I'm proud of making the all-tournament team," Jensen, the team's sixth man, said. "I would have voted for all our guys, the coaches and the people in the stands. They deserve it."

McLain had only two turnovers against the full-court pressure.

"We are No. 1 through team effort," McLain said, tears inching down his face as he jubilantly danced around the court with the championship trophy clutched to his chest.

The three seniors eagerly examined their championship watches after the game, and hugged whoever came within reach.

"You just can't imagine what this feels like," said McLain. "We worked so hard for this. We knew we could do it."

The key, said McLain was a little time alone Massimino mandated for each player on Monday after the team attended Mass.

"I told them to go upstairs and just take 15 minutes by themselves," Massimino said. "I wanted them to think about two things — to play with the idea of winning, instead of playing not to lose, and second they were good enough to win."

"It was a one shot deal, they can beat anybody in the United States."

"That time really made the difference," McLain said. "In that time, we had time to think of all we've been through to get here and how we could do it."

For Pinkney, named the tournament's Most Outstanding Player, it was not his best performance against Georgetown, but the most memorable.

As a sophomore, Pinkney pumped in 27 points and grabbed 22 rebounds in Villanova's first-ever victory over Georgetown.

"We put 100 percent heart into it all year, and it finally paid off," Pinkney said.

So an era that started with three young players and their bold predictions, ended with each hugging the man they did it all for amid a crowd of reporters and photographers.

"Gary told us we could do it," McLain said.

"I can say it, 'We're No. 1. Exclamation point, exclamation point,'" McLain answered.

Pirates Add Big Lineman

East Carolina University football coach Art Baker has announced the signing of Todd Drugac, a defensive lineman from Denville, N.J.

Drugac, a 6-2, 255-pounder, is the 20th freshman to be signed by the Pirates this spring.

Drugac attended Boonton High School in Boonton, N.J., where he was a three-year letterman in football, also earning three letters in wrestling and one in baseball. In football, he played offensive and defensive tackle. As a junior, he was named the most improved player on the team. As a senior, he had 60 tackles, 18 of them solo and had five quarterback sacks.

The Pirates also announced the signing of Southern Wayne's Robbie Robinson and Miami's Harry Howard, who inked grants in mid-March.

Robinson, a 6-1, 220-pounder played linebacker and fullback for Southern Wayne.

Howard, a 6-1, 190-pound wide receiver, is from Miami, Fla., and caught 28 passes for 495 yards and six touchdowns as a senior. He was named to the all-inter city team in Miami and was his team's most valuable receiver.

The Pirates still have one grant they can award.

Olson Withdraws From Consideration

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Lute Olson says he got interested in the possibility of being Kentucky basketball coach in a fit of pique. That's over, and so, he says, is his attraction to "the General Motors of basketball."

Olson, the coach at Arizona, and Alabama-Birmingham's Gene Bartow both headed home Monday after making it clear they don't want to take over leadership of college basketball's winningest program.

That left university officials without two leading candidates, but Athletic Director Cliff Hagan insisted that he still had "a big list."

"We're going to do it on our time and our schedule," university President Otis Singletary said when asked if he was concerned about the upcoming signing date or the end of the NCAA basketball finals. "I must have been asked about this more than 2,000 times today."

Three men reportedly were still in the running for the job that Michigan Coach Bill Frieder likened to the nation's No. 1 auto conglomerate: Dick Parsons, a former assistant to retiring UK head Coach Joe B. Hall; South Florida's Lee Rose; and Mississippi State's Bob Boyd.

But Singletary said it would be wrong to assume the list was down to two or three men.

"That wouldn't be any more accurate than 80 percent of the stuff we've read," Singletary said Monday night. "I've a hunch they'd (the candidates) kind of like the folks at home to know they're being considered."

With 2,000 basketball coaches in town for the NCAA finals and a concurrent coaching convention, it was reported over the weekend that Olson was Kentucky's choice and then that Bartow was back in the running.

Olson flew home to Tucson Monday without seeing unranked Villanova beat defending national champion Georgetown 66-64. He also was not seen at Saturday's semifinal games.

The Lexington Herald-Leader reported that Olson pulled out of the running Sunday night after being unable to reach agreement with Kentucky officials. But he told a news conference in Tucson that a flood of sentimental support, his love of Arizona and the retraction of a critical newspaper story all played a part in his decision.

"The overriding decision in pulling my name out was the fact that we love Tucson," Olson said.

He added that an erroneous story Wednesday in the Arizona Daily Star implying impropriety in the purchase of basketball uniforms at Arizona, and retracted the next day — was "the spark that ignited" his decision to look into the Kentucky job.

Olson said money and the pressure of Kentucky's winning tradition were not issues for him.

"There isn't anyone who can put more pressure on me than me," he said.

But he suggested that the prospect of a fishbowl existence with little privacy was a factor.

In an interview Monday night, Bartow denied published reports that the excitement of the Final Four had rekindled his interest in the job Hall resigned March 22.

"At one time I thought I wanted it," Bartow told ABC Radio Sports. "But I have an awfully good job at UAB and I started the program ...

It is kind of an emotional thing with me now.

"From an emotional standpoint, I'm attached to UAB," he said.

Rose and Parsons both have strong ties to Kentucky. Rose is a Lexington native and coached across town at Transylvania University.

Parsons was an aide to Adolph Rupp and Hall and has been a university fundraiser the last five years.

Tripp Leads Tribe Win

CHOCOWINITY — Maurice Tripp fired a three-hitter on the mound and ripped three hits to lead the Chocowinity Indians to a 12-6 thrashing of Bath Monday in Tobacco Belt 1-A high school baseball.

Tripp drove in a pair of runs in the sixth inning to cap a five-run rally by the Tribe, while Tim Elks went 2-3 with a pair of RBI.

Bath took a 2-0 lead in the top of the first, but Chocowinity trimmed the margin with a run in the bottom of the frame. The Tribe plated two more runs in the third and put the game out of reach with four in the fifth.

Lewis Albritton opened the fifth with a walk and advanced to second on a fielder's choice. Jamie Stokes doubled in Albritton, and Elks singled in Stokes. After Brian Badeau singled, Ronnie Craig rapped a two-run single for a 7-2 Tribe lead.

Top scored four more runs in the top of the sixth, but the Tribe rallied with five in the bottom of the inning to put the game out of reach.

Chocowinity, now 2-4 overall and 2-3 in the Tobacco Belt, travels to Bear Grass tonight at 7 p.m. for another league matchup.

Ewing Maintains Opinion

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — The award was for second place, but Georgetown's Patrick Ewing let a frenzied Villanova crowd know the Hoyas were still No. 1.

Minutes after dropping a 66-64 verdict and the NCAA championship

Monday night to the Wildcats, Ewing proudly took the award stand and thrust his index finger skyward, signifying that one loss could not dampen a 35-3 season.

"We might not have won the ball game, but I still think we're No. 1," said Ewing, who in his four years took Georgetown to three NCAA tournament finals, losing twice by a total of three points, and a 121-23 record.

"They won the game. They get the national championship, but we still feel good about ourselves. We're still the No. 1 team in the nation," added guard Michael Jackson.

Even Villanova center Ed Pinckney, voted the tournament's outstanding player, was hesitant to claim a Wildcat domination over the Hoyas.

"I think tonight we may have been the better team, but I wouldn't want to play them 10 times — let's put it that way — in one season. If we did that, we'd lose a lot of them without a doubt," Pinckney said.

Georgetown, which had its 29-game winning streak stopped by St. John's earlier in the season, got to the finals by beating the Redmen for the third time in a row. The Hoyas couldn't repeat that against Villanova, which had dropped two earlier games to the Big East power.

"We beat one of the greatest teams in history. They played extremely well and we played great," said Villanova coach Rollie Massimino, whose Wildcats shot a championship game record 78.6 percent (22 of 28) from the field.

"Villanova played their game, shooting 79 percent was a perfect game," said Hoya forward Reggie Williams.

"What can you do?," asked Jackson. "They were hitting the shots from the outside and those were the shots we wanted them to take."

"We had a hand in their face," Jackson said. "One shot they took was wide open. The rest they had a hand in their face."

The Hoyas descended from their throne with honor and dignity.

"We know how to win and we know how to lose. I just don't want to make a habit of losing," Coach John Thompson said.

The Hoyas huddled briefly at their free throw line after the final buzzer, hugging Ewing before silently going to their bench for the last time as a team.

Later there were more hugs and even a few smiles exchanged between the players, who applauded the Wildcats as they accepted the first-place trophy, before they left the court.

"I don't look at it as a loss," said reserve center Ralph Dalton. "We went out and played a good game. We had a successful season. I don't see anything to be ashamed of. We got beat by a good team. Coach (Thompson) told us he was proud of us. He said we did a good job."

"We went down in history last year, but we wanted this one very badly," Williams said. "We kept the pressure on them, but they made

Aycock Blanks New Bern 12-0

NEW BERN — Jay Surles went 3-3 at the plate with two runs batted as Dallas McPherson hurled E.B. Aycock to a 12-0 shutout over New Bern Monday in junior high baseball action.

John Bolden went 3-4 with a pair of RBI for Aycock, while Brian Wille also drove in two runs.

Aycock, now 2-0 on the season, hosted Washington today.

their free throws at the end (11 of 13 in the final 2:11) and that made the difference. They were pretty calm.

"They played their game and in the first half we probably didn't (play ours)," Williams said. "We'd been in tough games before. It was nothing new."

"I think Villanova played an excellent game," said Ewing, who finished with 14 points and only five rebounds. "They were slacking back on me more than they had in the past. I thought my teammates responded by hitting their shots."

"I definitely feel all the praise should go to Villanova," said Thompson. "They deserved to win that game and the national championship. They shot extremely well. Villanova won the ball game fairly. We have no complaints."

Williams Sets UNC Record

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — Former Rose High School star Roger Williams fired a four-hitter and recorded a school-record 19 strikeouts and B.J. Surhoff slammed three homers to lead North Carolina to an 11-0 Atlantic Coast Conference baseball victory over Duke Monday.

Williams, 5-1, broke the North Carolina single-game strikeout record of 17 held by David Kirk against North Carolina-Charlotte in 1980.

Williams got all the runs he needed when the Tar Heels, 24-11-1 and 5-2-1 in the ACC, scored four runs in the first inning.

Surhoff, who tied a school record with his three homers, smashed a three-run blast in the first, a two-run shot in the fourth and a solo homer in the eighth.

Scott Johnson, blasting his 15th homer of the season, scored the fourth run of the first inning.

North Carolina scored two more runs in the second, two in the fourth and another run in the fifth to chase Duke starter and loser Alan Soyer, 3-2.

The Blue Devils drop to 14-7-3 and 3-4-1.

Villanova Students, Fans Celebrate

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — The campus-wide celebration that erupted when the Villanova Wildcats became national collegiate basketball champions roared into the early-morning hours as revelers awaited the return of their heroes.

The team, which defeated Georgetown 66-64 in Monday's NCAA title game, was returning to Philadelphia from Lexington, Ky., for a parade and rally in Center City.

After the downtown activities, it's back home to the litter — and glass-strewn Main Line campus for more celebrating.

"Georgetown got too big for their britches," said freshman Chris De-nuel of Allentown, who was dancing in the crowded central quadrangle more than three hours after the game ended.

Within an hour of the final buzzer, the quadrangle was filled with at least 5,000 people, police estimated. Rock music blared, skyrockets, Roman candles and firecrackers exploded and students hugged whomever was nearby.

"This is the most awesome place in the world right now," Ms. De-nuel said. "No one thought we could do it, but I knew we would."

Kevin Nemsick, her dancing partner as Marvin Gaye blasted into the night, said, "This is my first year in school, and it's a great way to get started."

Hundreds swarmed into the nearby intersection of Lancaster and Ithan avenues, climbing onto traffic lights and bringing traffic to a virtual halt. Pickup trucks loaded with screaming students slowly rolled through the crowd.

Radnor Township police, bolstered by 50 state troopers, about 40 campus security officers and a handful of Delaware County deputy sheriffs, closed Lancaster Avenue before midnight.

At least 12 people were arrested, most on drunk and disorderly charges, according to Radnor police detective Jack Kelly. A celebration after Villanova's semifinal victory over Memphis St. Saturday resulted in some tipped cars and vandalism.

"We'll see what damage they come up with in the morning," Kelly said.

Sixteen people were taken to Bryn Mawr Hospital for treatment of injuries, according to nursing supervisor Charlotte Beirne. "Mostly cuts, a couple of fractures, some sprains, but nobody has been admitted — so far," she said shortly before 4 a.m.

University officials took extra precautions before Monday's game, distributing fliers warning that those without proper ID would not be allowed in residence halls.

About 2 a.m., after several windows had been broken in the all-male Sullivan Hall, resident advisers were posted at entrances to check IDs. About 10 state troopers then walked through the dorm, floor by floor, checking for non-residents.

"There are lots of foreigners here, and they trashed our dorm," said junior Bob Pugh, a member of the swim team. "Then the troopers came through looking for kids without a Villanova ID. They were all eight feet tall."

"It's almost expected this close to the city. Where there's this much good, there's bound to be a little bad."

But for the most part, the campus was all smiles and shouts and madness. By 2 a.m., a bonfire had been started in the quadrangle, fueled by furniture and branches snapped off by students who had climbed into trees for a better look at the goings-on.

Paul Schmid, a sophomore from Long Island, hugged a friend, let out a whoop and pointed at himself, saying: "This is Kid Happy right here."

By 2:25 a.m., the noise level had eased somewhat and traffic leaving campus was allowed to pass through the crowded intersection. But the party showed no signs of stopping.

"This is the wildest thing that ever happened here and it's going to go on all night," said Robin Moskaluk, a senior from Westfield, N.J.

"For the rest of the year," added Dave Gonsalves of Fairfield, Conn. "This is a dream come true." said

San Antonio Ambushes Portland Breakers 33-0

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — The first two United States Football League games in this city were wild, exciting affairs. The Portland Breakers would just as soon forget about the third.

"I can't explain it," Portland Coach Dick Coury said after his team was flattened by the underdog San Antonio Gunslingers 33-0 Monday night.

"We just got totally beaten offensively and defensively. San Antonio played an excellent game and deserved to beat us and beat us good. It wasn't even close."

A total of 19,882 people came to the game, even though they had to miss the televised NCAA basketball championship game. Most of them were gone by early in the fourth quarter.

While the game was a nightmare for Breakers' officials who are trying to establish the team's identity in this town, it was a dream come true for the embattled Gunslingers and quarterback Rick Neuheisel.

The former UCLA star, benched three weeks ago for failing to ignite the slumbering San Antonio offense, threw a pair of touchdown passes to lead the Gunslinger victory.

"It's no fun to go to the bench," said Neuheisel, who completed 13 of 17 passes for 152 yards against the spiritless Breakers. "Anytime the offense stalls, the quarterback is the heavy. I'm just glad I got a chance to come back and I'm really happy the way things went."

"We haven't looked very good in the last few weeks, especially on offense," said San Antonio Coach Jim Bates. "We had to get some confidence."

San Antonio, 2-4, had scored just 46 points in its first five games and was a two-touchdown underdog against Portland, which dropped to 2-4 and lost for the first time in three games at home.

The Breakers' offense — plagued by turnovers, penalties and dropped passes — never was able to move against the San Antonio defense after the game's opening minutes.

Portland quarterback Matt Robinson completed 5 of 19 passes and threw three interceptions before leaving the game after three quarters.

One of the pickoffs by Gunslinger lineman Ken Neil at the Breakers' 14 yard line set up Nick Mike-Mayer's 33-yard field goal to give San Antonio a 13-0 lead with nine seconds left in the half. Neuheisel had hit Joey Hackett with a 14-yard scoring pass and Mike-Mayer had booted a 43-yard field goal to put San Antonio on top 10-0.

Mike-Mayer added a 38-yard field goal with 4½ minutes to play in the third quarter to make it 16-0.

Seconds later, the Gunslingers' Rock Richmond stole another Robinson pass and returned it 32

FOCUS

Mother of Exiles

The sculptor of the Statue of Liberty, Frederic Bartholdi, was born on this day in 1834. The statue stands 151 feet, 1 inch tall from the sandals to the top of the torch. It is made of more than 300 thin sheets of copper molded over an iron framework resembling an oil derrick. Fourteen lamps totaling 14,000 watts shine out from Liberty's torch. Inscribed on the pedestal is the poem, "The New Colossus," by Emma Lazarus. It calls the woman holding the torch "Mother of Exiles."

CBS Mystery 'Guilty Conscience' Gives Viewer Puzzle Within Puzzle

By JERRY BUCK
 AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) - There is little that you can say about Levinson and Link's latest murder mystery, "Guilty Conscience" on CBS tonight, without revealing a clue.

You can say that it's another dazzling twister by Richard Levinson and William Link, television's foremost mystery writers. You can also say it's a puzzle within a puzzle within a puzzle that will keep you guessing until the end.

"CBS ran an ad the other day and they gave away five important twists in the plot," said Levinson. "Guilty Conscience" stars Anthony Hopkins, Blythe Danner and Swoozie Kurtz. David Greene directed.

Hopkins stars as Arthur Jamison, a prominent criminal attorney who plans to kill his wife (Miss Danner) because he is being pressured for a divorce by his mistress (Miss Kurtz). He figures a divorce would be too costly. Too bad for Jamison, because his wife doesn't plan on becoming a victim.

"This is the third in a trilogy of highly stylized mystery thrillers," said Levinson. "The first was 'Murder by Natural Causes,' with Hal Holbrook, Katharine Ross and Barry Bostwick. It was about magic and illusion. The second was 'Rehearsal for Murder,' with Robert Preston, Jeff Goldblum and Lynn Redgrave. It was done within the context of the theater."

"Guilty Conscience" is within the context of the legal system, the law. That's all we want to say about that since the whole purpose of the piece is to play a game with the viewer, which is: Wouldn't it be interesting if you could have your trial before you committed the crime?"

Levinson and Link are co-creators with Peter Fischer of CBS' "Murder She Wrote," the only closed mystery (the viewer doesn't know who did it until the end) on the air today. Angela Lansbury plays a mystery novelist with a knack for turning up just in time for a murder and staying around to solve it.

"What pleases us about the show, which the critics missed, is that this is one of the few dramas with a woman as the star," said Levinson. "Police Woman" had a woman star but she was always rescued in the third act by her male co-stars. "The Bionic Woman" was a spinoff. ... There are a lot of situation comedies that have women leads. But this is a woman of a certain age who is in a mystery without any car chases."

Levinson and Link have been fascinated by mysteries all their lives. They grew up together in Philadelphia and were drawn together because they had the same interests. Both are amateur magicians, a talent they used several years ago to write the Broadway play "Merlin."

They adapted "My Sweet Charlie" for television and helped pave the way for TV movies. They also wrote such movies as "That Certain Summer," "The Execution of Private Slovik" and "Prototype." But they're probably most famous for "Columbo," the mystery series starring Peter Falk as the tenacious raincoat-clad detective.

"Columbo" was an inverted mystery because you knew who did it from the beginning," said Levinson. "NBC was worried that no one would watch if they knew who the killer was."

"It's interesting that Alfred Hitchcock only did one whodunit in his career, 'Murder' in 1930," said Link. "The characters take you along in drama, but in a mystery you have to maneuver the characters where you want them to go. It's much more difficult. We always tell young writers at symposiums to read mysteries to learn how to write. They always have a strong spine (plot)."

"The only problem for us is not to become typed as mystery writers," said Levinson. "Most of our movies have been drama."

They are at work on their second book about the television industry. The first was "Stay Tuned," a personal account of their experiences. The new book will be a collection of interviews with the actors, writers, directors, producers and others who make television. They wanted to call it "Talking Heads" but found there was a rock group with that name.

The two are also collaborating with Peter Fischer on another series for NBC, called "Blackie's Magic." It is, of course, about a magician.

PAUL NEWMAN

Newman Funds Research Center

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Actor Paul Newman, whose 28-year-old son died from an alcohol and drug overdose, said he will give $1.2 million to the University of Southern California for a research center dedicated to preventing drug abuse.

The money will come from the Scott Newman Foundation, created by the actor and his family to fight drug abuse after his son's death in 1978, Newman said Monday.

The grant also will endow a Scott Newman Chair in pharmacy at the university.

"Rehabilitation is much less effective than preventative methods, and that's what we're talking about," said Newman, 60.

The money to be donated by the foundation comes in part from profits from "Newman's Own" brand food items including salad dressing, spaghetti sauce and popcorn.

A Reflector Review

'Starman' Lovable

"Starman" is a sweet sleeper movie which deserves to be seen.

Jeff Bridges was nominated for an Oscar for his role as an alien whose ship was shot down over Wisconsin by a paranoid military. He clones a new body from a lock of hair from a young widow's late husband, and appears before her in her husband's body, minus her husband's knowledge.

Karen Allen as the young widow is a perfect foil, sweet yet feisty, for Bridges' chicken-walking, rubber-faced loveable alien who means nobody harm, but who just wants to get to Arizona for a rendezvous with his own kind. It's a joy watching him learn about being human while she learns to care about this stranger in the body she used to love.

The movie suffers from the E.T. syndrome of bad-scientist-bureaucrat who wants nothing more than to dissect the alien vs. good scientist who only wants to be friends and help him escape.

John Carpenter, a director mostly known for his slash-and-gore movies, sets up some scenes for us, so we can see what's coming, but that doesn't really get in the way of our enjoyment. There's an annoying hint of messianic tone towards the end, but it's small and almost forgivable.

The alien has a stupendous range of powers of life and energy, often with the help of mysterious balls that glow in his hands, but he's lacking in the power to get himself to Arizona under his own steam, or to save his own life in a hostile environment - and therein lies the wonder of the movie. We know he'll make it, but how?

And we do want him to make it, for without obvious heartstring tugs, Jeff Bridges manages to make this alien very lovable. Rated PG: little kids could see this.

Court To Study Rights Violation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, taking a fresh look at criminal confessions, is studying whether a suspect's rights are violated when a police officer promises psychiatric help instead of prison in return for an admission of guilt. The court agreed Monday to consider throwing out a murder conviction of a New Jersey man who confessed to a 1973 killing after an officer, playing the "friendly cop," told the suspect he was not responsible for his actions.

The court, in a case it probably will not decide until next year, will hear an appeal by Frank M. Miller, convicted of murdering Deborah Margolin, 17, on Aug. 13, 1973, near her home in East Amwell Township. Her body was found in a creek, her throat and breasts cut.

Prosecutors said Miller first approached the girl while she was sunbathing at her house in a rural area. They said he lured her away from the house by telling her he saw a heifer wandering nearby.

Miller, who had been previously convicted of carnal abuse, was questioned for about one hour by a state police detective who told the suspect, "I want to help you, because you are in my mind, you are not responsible."

The detective promised to get Miller "proper help" with a psychiatrist.

Miller gave increasingly damaging statements and passed out after confessing.

The New Jersey Supreme Court, by a 4-3 vote, ruled that the confession was voluntary and that the detective's "friendly cop" approach did not violate Miller's rights.

Miller had been given so-called Miranda warnings that he was entitled to a lawyer and any statement he made could be used against him.

Last August, the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld the state court ruling.

The federal appeals court, which heard a tape of the police questioning of Miller, said it had limited power to review the state court's decision that the confession was voluntary.

A state court's determination that a confession is voluntary is basically a factual question about the suspect's state of mind, and the state court's decision is presumed under federal law to be correct, the federal appeals court said.

The "scope of federal supervision of the interrogation process" is limited as long as police have given the suspect his Miranda warnings, the federal court said.

It noted that Miller did not undergo a particularly long period of questioning, was not denied food or necessities and was not physically abused or threatened.

"The objective facts support a factual inference that the defendant's 'state of mind' was such that the confession was voluntary within the meaning of the Constitution," the appeals court said.

JEANINE DECKERS

'Singing Nun' Death In Declared Suicide

WAVRE, Belgium (AP) — The Belgian news agency says Jeanine Deckers, the guitar-playing "Singing Nun" who became world famous with her 1963 song "Dominique," committed suicide along with a friend at a home they shared. She was 52 years old.

The news agency, Belga, quoted a police officer as saying police were alerted Monday by friends who had not heard from the two women. It said police found their bodies and said the two died of a massive dose of sedatives.

Miss Deckers' friend was not identified in the agency's report.

The women had left a letter, explaining their suicide and asking for discretion, the officer was quoted as saying. The news report said the two women had been depressed, partly because of the financial problems of a children's institution they ran.

Miss Deckers, who joined the Dominican convent of Fichermont near Brussels in 1959, left the order in 1966.

She was noted for her high, sweet voice and was pressed to make a record. Her first one, "Dominique," was an immediate world hit in 1963. More than 100 different versions of the song were made, including an electronic one she did in 1983. However, she never equaled the success of her first record.

After she left the convent she adhered closely to its rules. She tried with her friend to run an institution for handicapped children but had to give up for lack of funds, the agency's report said.

Bridge in Mexico is booming. Cable television there carries two bridge programs, and now Mexico has become the first country in this hemisphere to have its international team sponsored by a commercial corporation — Ford Motor Co. of Mexico. Ford will pay the expenses of the Mexican team to Montreal for matches against Canada and Bermuda and, if the team wins that playoff and becomes the second North American team in the world championships, Ford also will pick up the team's expenses to the world championships in Brazil.

Heading the Mexican team is Dr. George Rosenkranz. He held the South cards on this deal from the final selection matches for the Mexican team. Once he had described a very strong hand by his takeout double and jump, he felt he had done enough and passed East's three spade preference. However, when his partner showed a flicker of life by competing with four clubs, Dr. Rosenkranz elected to go on to game.

West led the jack of hearts, covered by the queen and king and taken by the ace. Declarer realized that to draw even one round of trumps could jeopardize his contract — since he would have to surrender the lead in a red suit before getting back to his hand, the defenders could lead a second round of trumps. As declarer had three spade losers to take care of, that might prove fatal.

So at trick two declarer simply returned a heart. The fact that the nine of hearts was set up as a trick was incidental. Declarer now had sufficient entries to his hand via two heart ruffs and a trump to ruff his spade losers on the board. The only precaution he needed was to ruff his fourth spade high to prevent an overruff. The defenders could score no more than a trick in each red suit.

Arms Talks Stalemated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Geneva arms control talks aren't going anywhere as long as Moscow continues to focus on the U.S. "Star Wars" project, Edward L. Rowny, special adviser to the president on arms control matters, said today.

Rowny said Moscow is avoiding discussing curbs on offensive nuclear arms, which he said is the main object of the talks which opened March 12. Rowny's remarks were the most explicit statement by a senior administration official yet that the talks had so far been disappointing.

"If there is to be progress toward reducing nuclear arms, Moscow's attitudes must change," Rowny said in a speech prepared for the St. Louis Committee on Foreign Relations in St. Louis. A copy was obtained here in advance.

Aides said the speech had been cleared by the White House.

Rowny said the Soviets would have to "bear the onus of world public opinion" if the talks fail.

He suggested that the Star Wars proposal is so tentative, and so far off in time, that it shouldn't be a significant factor in the talks now.

"Reducing the threat of nuclear war now by an agreement on reducing today's offensive arms is far more important than discussing what might happen a decade or two hence if strategic defenses prove feasible," Rowny said.

He said Moscow also is engaging in research programs into defensive systems, adding, "What the Soviets seem bent on doing is continuing their own research while trying to stop ours."

Rowny, who was the chief U.S. negotiator at the last round of strategic arms reduction talks that Moscow broke off in late 1983, said the United States has made "several attractive proposals" for curbs on offensive weapons.

Federal Study Cites Evasion Of Cost Data

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two congressional subcommittees are opening a joint examination of how General Dynamics managed to run up $1 billion in cost overruns on a fleet of attack submarines, as a new study accuses the nation's largest defense contractor of holding back information on the overruns.

The congressional staff study concludes that General Dynamics was able to obtain a second contract to build 11 additional attack submarines "by withholding from the Navy information about cost overruns on (seven) submarines already being built and by proposing prices that it should reasonably have known were less than the costs of construction."

Richard Kaufman, an expert on defense procurement for the congressional Joint Economic Committee, said in the study that company documents show that at about the time the contract was awarded, General Dynamics executives were discussing the need to submit a claim to obtain reimbursement for the cost overruns.

The Navy eventually paid General Dynamics $739 million to settle those claims, part of the total $2.5 billion it eventually cost the Navy to procure the 18 submarines.

Former Navy Secretary Edward Hidalgo, who negotiated the settlement of the General Dynamics claims, was scheduled as the lead-off witness today at hearings conducted jointly by Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., vice chairman of the Joint Economic Committee, and Sen. Charles E. Grassley, R-Iowa, chairman of a Senate Judiciary subcommittee.

The Kaufman report said General Dynamics submitted to the Navy one set of estimates concerning manhours and schedules of the submarine construction "while withholding other estimates that would have raised greater concerns about contract performance."

This suggests, the study said, "that the company, in effect, had two sets of records."

"General Dynamics knew, from estimates made by responsible officials, that completion of the submarines would require many millions more of manhours than were being reported by the Navy," the report said.

"General Dynamics knew, from estimates made by responsible officials, that deliveries of submarines would be delayed many months more than were being reported to the Navy," it said.

Drug May Cure Cancer In Brain

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Large doses of a drug used in chemotherapy eradicated brain tumors in 11 of 30 people treated and could eventually help cure 80 percent of the 5,000 U.S. cases of a deadly brain cancer, a researcher said.

Dr. Isaac Djerassi, a cancer specialist at Philadelphia's Mercy Catholic Medical Center, said he used Methotrexate to treat 30 patients with astrocytoma, a cancer of the supporting tissues of the brain.

Seven of the 30 given Methotrexate didn't respond to the drug. Tumor size was reduced in eight others, who died either because the cancer recurred or their tumors were very large when they started treatment, Djerassi said.

However, the tumors disappeared in 11 of the patients, two are in partial remission and another two are progressing toward complete eradication of their tumors — a success rate of about 43 percent, he said Monday.

"The news is good for brain tumors," Djerassi said at an American Cancer Society science writers' seminar. "They are unresponsive to other treatments, but appear to be exquisitely sensitive to Methotrexate."

Most of the 5,000 Americans who contract the cancer each year die, he said. Methotrexate was used successfully to treat Sen. Edward Kennedy's son for bone cancer 1973. The younger Kennedy had to have his leg amputated but the cancer was successfully treated with the drug.

Conventional chemotherapy usually is ineffective against brain tumors because internal barriers prevent most chemicals in blood from reaching the brain.

Djerassi said he was able to use Methotrexate successfully because the patients were given such high doses that the chemical reached their brains.

However, such dosages also attack growing cells other than cancer, and would have killed the patients along with their tumors if the drug had been administered alone.

Methotrexate kills cancer and other growing cells by replacing the folic acid they need to grow and divide, he said. He prevented the death of normal cells by giving the patients folic acid with hydrogen atoms attached to it.

The doses of this antidote were large enough to let normal cells survive but small enough to let the Methotrexate kill cancer cells without interference, he said.

Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr., director of the National Cancer Institute, expressed skepticism that doctors would be able to handle this delicate procedure to avoid harming patients.

Djerassi replied that even some deaths from improperly administered Methotrexate are preferable to the current high rate of death from brain tumors and that most young doctors are being trained to use the drug.

Methotrexate has been used in chemotherapy for 30 years and has been used successfully in treating certain blood, lymph and bone cancers.

Djerassi said four of his patients have survived three to 18 years after their tumors were diagnosed, and 1½ to 17 years after treatment was halted, so he said he considers the treatment a cure.

Further research into the use of Methotrexate combined with other drugs and radiation therapy should make it possible to increase the cure rate to about 80 percent, Djerassi said.

Last month, researchers in Boston reported that low doses of Methotrexate were used successfully to ease the pain and swelling of rheumatoid arthritis in victims not helped by other medications.

Role Of Viruses In Cancer Cited

SAN DIEGO (AP) — If viruses do cause cancers, as some researchers suspect, it would take "very intimate contact" for the disease to spread from one person to another, says the director of the National Cancer Institute.

"We probably have underestimated the role viruses play in human cancer," Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr. said Monday.

DeVita said during the American Cancer Society's science writers' seminar that he believes viruses will prove responsible for most lymphomas, cancers of the lymph nodes.

"Evidence is very strong that people with liver cancer have had prior exposure to the hepatitis virus . . ." he said. "I have little doubt hepatitis vaccine will not only wipe out hepatitis, but liver cancer."

There also is good evidence that papilloma viruses, which normally cause warts, cause tumors of the cervix in women, DeVita said.

He emphasized that cancers known to stem from viruses cannot be transmitted by sneezes or other casual contact.

"You need very intimate contact" through sex or exposure to contaminated, transfused blood, he said. "It's not easy, thank God."

Recent reports that several people in North Carolina developed cancer of the blood cells after being visited by someone with the disease may turn out to be nothing more than coincidence, he said.

The NCI now spends about $100 million annually investigating the role of viruses in cancer, DeVita said.

The idea that viruses can cause human cancer drew intense scientific interest in the late 1950s and early 1960s after viruses were found responsible for cancers in animals, DeVita said. But the concept faded when research efforts failed to establish definite links with human tumors.

In the late 1970s, however, the NCI's Dr. Robert Gallo discovered a form of leukemia was caused by a virus that invades human T cells — white blood cells that are part of the body's disease-fighting immune system, DeVita said.
