Today's Farm Woes Similar To Those Of Decades Ago

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

To comprehend the current state of agriculture in North Carolina takes a glimpse into the past, say agriculture extension specialists from North Carolina State University.

The past 10 to 15 years have had a direct effect on the nation's and the state's agricultural economies, but the big picture goes back as far as 60 years, when the United States was recovering from a war, an economic boom and heavy inflation, specialists say.

The current predicament of agriculture, with heavy debts, shrinking markets and exports, is "similar to what happended in post-World War I America," said Dr. Dale Hoover, head of NCSU's Department of Economics and Business. "What we are looking at is the aftermath of a land boom and prosperity rise like the one the nation experienced after the first World War."

This is the first article in a three-part series exploring the state of agriculture as it exists in North Carolina today and how it got there.

At an NCSU media briefing on agriculture earlier this week, Hoover estimated that one-sixth of the farmers in America today face financial difficulty. The factors which led to the current situation, he said, include the "land boom of the 1970s and the prosperity rise which did not continue" and "heavy exports which did not continue." As a result, agricultural growth "is not steady but irregular," Hoover said. "On a chart that plots net income from farming, 1970-1984, the line representing income is much more even in the early to mid-1970s," He said. "The line that represents income in the

NAACP Leader Is Dead

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Kelly Alexander Sr., chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and a quiet but forceful civil rights crusader for 40 years, has died at the age of 69.

"My objective is for people to learn to love each other and live happily together," Alexander said in an interview last year. "I don't think there's any better Utopia than that. If we ever can reach that, we'll be making progress."

His son, Alfred Alexander, 32, said today his father had been suffering from stomach pains, but that the cause of death had not been determined. He was rushed to Charlotte Memorial Hospital where he was pronounced dead at 11:47 p.m. Tuesday.

A Charlotte funeral home director, Alexander was elected chairman of the 400,000-member NAACP last year and re-elected early this year. He had been a member of the NAACP board of directors since 1950.

Rose Counselor To Get Award

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Students, fellow counselors, faculty members, friends and officials all assembled in the Rose High School auditorium Tuesday afternoon to congratulate counselor Jean Creech and to wish her bon voyage for her trip to New York City today. Mrs. Creech, earlier in the year winner of the North Carolina Counselor of the Year Award, has recently been chosen as the recipient of the National Award for Secondary Guidance Counselor for 1985.

This is the first time for Greenville or Pitt County schools that a counselor has been chosen for the prestigious annual award sponsored by the American School Counselor Association. Presentation of the award will be made during the annual convention of the association on Thursday.

Greenville Mayor Janice Buck said Tuesday that "education is very important in all our lives. When one stands out, as Mrs. Creech has, we need to let her know we are very proud of her. On behalf on the citizens of Greenville, I congratulate you, Jean."

Rose Principal Howard Hurt, summarizing the assistance and guidance Mrs. Creech has provided students since coming to Rose High School in 1969, said: "It is not often we have a chance to have one of ours honored at the national level. Our purpose today is to honor Mrs. Creech." Hurt added that in a broader sense, the award being accorded Mrs. Creech constitutes a recognition of the achievements of other faculty members and of the student body. "We all share in an honor such as this."

Betty Raynor Casey, mother of two Rose High graduates, and one of the parents instrumental in the initial nomination of Mrs. Creech for an award at the state level, expressed appreciation for "the many parents and students who have so warmly supported the nomination and who have given

Board Boosts Industry Funds

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — The Farmville Commissioners Tuesday night voted to double their funding of the Farmville Economic Council and several of the commissioners voiced the opinion that the board would also look kindly on the funding of special projects for the Economic Council. The yearly funding will now be $10,000.

There was considerable discussion of accountability of the Economic Council to the town, its largest funder, and several members of the audience expressed the belief that the Farmville Economic Council, formed long before most communities had industrial development bodies, has been instrumental in making Farmville prosperous. Frank Gill, president of the Economic Council, told of a number of projects and tools the council plans to develop in the near future to make the community more competitive in the industry-seeking field "now that every crossroads has an industrial development council."

A public hearing was held on the rezoning of the old Farmville Lumber Yard at the corner of East Cotton and South Contentnea streets from light industrial to R-5 residential. Approval was given by the board following a favorable recommendation by the planning board. David Goins and Roland Williams have expressed interest in building apartments on the site.

A second public hearing on the 1985 Community Development Block Grant Application was held. The housing improvement target area is bounded by George, Bennett, Perry and Main streets. Streets targeted, according to Mike Barnette, engineer with McDavid and Associates which would administer the grant program, are Humphrey, Zeno, Hines, Baldree, and Blalock for paving and Cameron for resurfacing.

LaRue Evans of the Pitt County Historical Society addressed the board on a proposed project of the historical society to study every structure in the county not already studied for historical significance. She asked for the town's monetary participation in the project, expected to take about 18 months. The board told her the matter would be considered.

Approval was given for the resubmission of the housing development grant. The developers, Square Six Inc., have secured a private mortgage company to handle the application process and will submit application to the North Carolina Housing Finance Agency for financing of the balance not funded by the Housing Development Grant. Twenty percent of the apartments will need to be rented to low and moderate income persons. The proposed 20-unit two-story apartment complex would be situated on a 70,000-square foot parcel at the corner of Walnut Street and Horne Avenue. Included would be six one-bedroom units and 14 two-

BRANCHES AT EYE LEVEL

The other day I witnessed a woman who, when she looked at the person with whom she was walking, was hit in the face when she ran into overhanging branches on the sidewalk in front of North Carolina National Bank on Second Street. These should be cut. J.R.

And they were within an hour after Hotline called Mayo Allen, director of the city Public Works Department. Allen said he appreciates your call, that Public Works does not employ anyone to look for "trouble situations" like branches overhanging sidewalks at a level that would affect pedestrians' safety, blind corners, overgrown lots, ditches, and the like. "We ask our employees to watch for them," he said, "but also rely heavily on the public to let us know what needs doing." He asked that Public Works, 752-4137, be called immediately whenever any such problem is noted by anyone.

EXTERMINATOR? — Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., wears an exterminator's jumpsuit while announcing his war on Capitol Hill cockroaches Tuesday. Conte says he is tired of seeing roaches waltzing on his desk, and has arranged for the donation of 35,000 bait tray debugging devices for the congressional offices. (AP Laserphoto)

Solon Turns Into Roach-Buster

WASHINGTON (AP) — The way Rep. Silvio Conte tells it, there are so many cockroaches in the nooks and crannies of congressional power on Capitol Hill that when he opens his office door late at night the roaches are waltzing his desk around the room.

Brigades of roaches are on the march, he said, "at least a trillion of them."

So, fueled with a stream of one-liners, wearing plastic bugs and encouraged by a gift of 35,000 roach traps from a home-district "roach-buster" manufacturer, the congressman launched his "Conte-Crush-a-Cockroach Campaign" Tuesday on the marble steps of the House of Representatives.

While tourists asked, "What is that man doing?" Conte, helped by an aide, stripped off his blue blazer with the seal of the House on the breast pocket and pulled on an exterminator's white jumpsuit dotted with large pinned-on plastic bugs.

He appealed to President Reagan to enlist in the cockroach war "to get rid of as many of the troublesome cockroaches that run around the halls of Congress as possible."

"So please join me in this war on Capitol cockroaches and — squash one for the Gipper," Conte told the wondering crowd.

As he talked, peering out from beneath a white cap emblazoned with an anti-roach symbol, he brandished two yellow flyswatters and a large cannister of bug spray. Two publicists stood behind him with giant photo blowups of roaches climbing over a cucumber and cheese.

"I don't believe this," one was overheard to say, presumably off the record.

The Massachusetts Republican said he has a personal reason for wishing to rid the capitol of creepie crawlies.

"Ever since I've been here, every time I came into my office at night my desk was moving around the room," he said. "I'd walk in the door at night and my desk was doing the Cucaracha."

Conte persisted: "In my 27 years down here I've run into all kinds of cockroaches in and around the Capitol. I've seen the beady-eyed Midwestern cockroach, the pesky little New England cockroach, the June-bug cockroach from down South, as well as the Rodeo cockroach, usually found only west of the Mississippi.

"We've been pushed around long enough by these roaches," he said. "We've had it."

Various Pates Are Tasty Treats

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

One of the Western world's favorite appetizers is pate. These delicacies are interesting to make and present a festive appearance.

The origin of pate is vague, but France has probably done more to develop it than any nation. French pate de foie gras made from goose liver is considered the ultimate in the field. And it should be, considering such costly ingredients as the specially developed liver and truffles.

The French have also developed a number of cheaper pates, especially in the provinces, such as a chicken and ham mixture from Rouen, game pate from Perigueux, woodcock from Montreuil, duck from Amiens and fish from Abbeville.

Local herbs are added to these pates, with a dollop of local wine, or perhaps some cognac.

In the French countryside, farm families make a cheaper, more substantial variety which is actually a glorified meatloaf. Known as terrine, the name of the earthenware dish in which it is baked, this version is usually made from pork sausage mixed with minced pork liver.

Before placing this mixture in the terrine, its interior is usually lined with strips of pork fat. Fat strips should also cover the top of the pate.

The birthplace of pate is still a mystery. It is known that many years ago, the royal court in Czarist Russia featured appetizers made from meat and fish pastes. Similar delicacies appeared later in Greece and eventually spread to Scandinavia, where they became part of the famous smorgasbord.

Here is a recipe for a country pate.

1½ pounds pork liver
1 cup milk
1 pound fresh pork fat
1½ pounds lean pork
5 tablespoons butter
¼ cup chopped scallions
½ teaspoon chopped garlic
3 tablespoons heavy cream
2 teaspoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons flour
1 egg, beaten
½ teaspoon allspice
1½ tablespoons salt
⅛ teaspoon ground black pepper
¼ pound baked ham cut in quarter-inch cubes

Soak liver in milk for 2 hours and drain. Slice half of pork fat for lining the terrine. Grind remainder with lean pork and liver. Place scallions and garlic in pan with butter and cook 5 minutes. Add, plus cream, lemon juice, flour, egg, spice, salt and pepper, to the meat mixture. Knead with both hands and beat with wooden spoon till well mixed. Fold in ham cubes. Place meat mixture in the fat-lined baking pan, with added strips of fat atop. Cover terrine and place in a large baking pan in a 350-degree preheated oven, half filling pan with water. Bake about 2 hours, until fat and juices have risen to the top. Take terrine from oven and remove cover. Cover molded mixture with foil and weight with heavy pan atop. Let cool at room temperature, then chill in refrigerator. Remove weight and foil and serve, cutting into slices. Good with a chilled dry white wine. Serves 10 to 12.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

A mother has to make a decision early in her life.

She either goes down as the world's greatest cook or she sets an example of "sharing" for her children by accomodating every surprise guest they bring home for a meal.

I made my decision.

That's why there's an entire generation out there who believe Mrs. Bombeck serves half-macaroni and half spaghetti with a sauce so pale it won't stain a tablecloth — and chicken parts that aren't identifiable even to another chicken.

Some mothers, when faced with a food shortage during a surprise guest attack, will put the FHB plan into action ...Family Hold Back.

It always reminds me of the brilliant story told by the late humorist, Sam Levenson. Sam was one of eight children and "company" had its privileges. Before the meal, his mother told the kids, "When the meat is passed around say, 'No, thank you. I'm not hungry,' so our guest won't think he's taking the food out of our mouths." It worked, but when dessert was served, his mother sailed it quickly by the kids saying, "You didn't eat your dinner! So you don't get dessert!"

I have never served pork chops in my life that I didn't have unexpected company. There is nothing you can do to make a pork chop look bigger. I've tried. I've breaded them so that the egg fans out two inches on all sides, tucked dressing around them like a skirt, and arranged them on a saucer, but they still look like what they are...not enough pork chops.

Sometimes I think the Academy of Arts and Sciences should honor the acting ability of a mother who sits at a table nibbling on a bone sandwich and feigning fullness.

Let's hear it out there for the woman who has dinner cooking when company drops in. They won't go or they won't stay. She pleads, "I've got plenty." They accept. She then goes to the kitchen where she drops on her knees in front of the oven containing two stuffed peppers and prays, "Lord, I know you haven't done it for a long time, but I'm begging."

There isn't a cook out there reading this column who does not have her favorite too-many-people-too-little-food menu which grew out of desperation. Mine involves a crew from a mazagine who were doing a story on my family. Throughout the day the cast of characters grew and grew.

I ended up with nine for dinner, plus a three-pound turkey breast that looked like a dead sparrow, a bowl of dressing (cornbread, pork and beef combined), six croissants cut in half, a platter of fruit containing a stack of grapes, one apple and two strawberries, and a mound of cottage cheese with one tomato cut up. I topped it off with a 1981 Christmas fruitcake which went a long way...possible because it was frozen like a rock.

I told Mother I thought they would appreciate my hospitality and would forget about the meal.

I didn't believe that for a minute. Neither did she.

When Earth was small, some flying chunks called planetesimals were probably large enough to break the growing planet apart, says National Geographic. However, each time this happened, Earth reassembled somewhat bigger than before.

Dear Abby

Most Family Histories Reveal Some Treasure And Some Trash

DEAR ABBY: "Missing Link" wrote: "My children, now middle-aged, are demanding that I write a family history, as I've had a very successful, colorful life, have traveled extensively and have many grandchildren. I have avoided doing so because I was illegitimate and had a very unhappy and humiliating childhood. Should I confess all to the entire family and brazen it out? As for friends, I doubt that they would care. I'm nearly 75 and have few contemporaries left."

My husband assumed "Missing Link" was a woman, and I assumed it was a man. Who is right?

TANYA

DEAR TANYA: You are. Interestingly enough, my readers were almost evenly divided concerning my advice. I said, "It's a fascinating story and part of their heritage. If you fear that your family will think less of you, you're wrong. They will probably think more of you."

Here's a typical letter from a reader who agreed with me:

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for advising "Missing Link" to tell his life story. A year before my father died, I was able to convince him to tape-record several long conversations we had concerning his life. Although he died a very wealthy, self-made man, he talked for hours about his failures, his disappointments, his regrets and the lessons he had learned over the years. (His successes had been well-publicized.)

I had his monologue transcribed into a book, and I added appropriate pictures. I plan to give them to his grandchildren next Christmas. This will be a gift that money can't buy.

Pass this idea on, Abby. So much history is lost forever because most people are reluctant to admit their human failings.

NO LINKS MISSING

DEAR NO LINKS: Read on for an opposing view:

DEAR ABBY: You advised "Missing Link," the 75-year-old woman, to go ahead and write her memoirs—the bad with the good.

You must have a screw loose. If I were to tell the true story of my life, the rattling of skeletons in my closet could be heard in the next county.

I have been a prostitute, a drunk, a con artist, a felon and a drug user. Fortunately I was able to leave all that behind me.

If I ever write my life story, I wouldn't want anyone to read it until after I am dead. And I am only 56.

"Her rumblings abdominal

"And everyone thought it was me!"

DEAR RETIRED: Another gut-issue limerick that's been around for a long time:

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. G., WATERVILLE, MAINE: Concerning disciplining a child, nobody said it better than Philip Wylie in his essay titled, "Why a Child Is Important":

"To give a child material things and withhold discipline is more cruel than to strangle it. For such a child is headed for a lifetime of emotional strangulation—a walking death. Parents who leave untouched the immense problem of child discipline and substitute the abundant gifts do not actually love their children at all. They love things."

Royal Shopping Favorites Listed

The high price of the dollar and the low value of the British pound mean American tourists in London can indulge in a royal shopping spree — at the places royalty patronizes.

A rundown on the shops royalty favors — from Princess Diana's hatmakers to Queen Elizabeth's chocolateer — appears in the April issue of Town & Country, excerpted from the book "The Royal Shopping Guide" (Morrow). It includes:

Benson & Hedges Ltd., tobacconist to HM The Queen, also served Edward VII. When he was still Prince of Wales, he had some cigarettes made there, popularizing cigarettes in England.

Bradleys (Knightsbridge) Ltd. is where the Princess of Wales, Princess Anne and Saudi and European royalty buy lingerie. Nightgowns run from $23 upward and Bradleys can fit you for anything from your first bra to your last corset.

Bruce Oldfield Ltd. is one of Princess Diana's favorite designers. Oldfield keeps comments on Diana's clothes to a minimum saying, "We're not really supposed to talk about it. I think the protocol is to never deny but never elaborate."

C. John (Rare Rugs) Ltd., suppliers of carpets to HM The Queen, offers carpets, none under 100 years old. Tourists might buy a small piece of late 19th century needlework for $150.

Collingwood of Conduit Street Ltd., jewelers and silversmiths to HM The Queen and jewelers to HM The Queen Mother, made the wedding band for Princess Diana from the same Welsh gold nugget used for the weddng rings of The Queen Mother, Queen Elizabeth and Princess Margaret.

The General Trading Co., suppliers of fancy goods to HM The Queen, HM The Queen Mother and HRH The Duke of Edinburgh, also has a bridal service where it was rumored the Prince and Princess of Wales had their wedding list.

H.R. Higgins (Coffee Man) Ltd., coffee merchants to HM The Queen, sells 26 varieties of coffee.

Hatchards Ltd., booksellers to HM the Queen, HM The Queen Mother, HRH The Duke of Edinburgh and HRH The Prince of Wales, is the only London bookstore to be granted a Royal Warrant.

Hawes & Curtis Ltd., tailors to HRH The Duke of Edinburgh, charge $713 and up for a three-piece suit and from $675 for the two-piece suits Prince Philip prefers. "Everything about Prince Philip is immaculate," said royal tailor John Kent. "He doesn't follow fashion, he's a classic dresser. The cut of his suits has not changed since we first dressed him in 1946." Princes Andrew and Edward and Frank Sinatra also shop here.

Henry Maxwell & Company Ltd., bootmakers to HM The Queen, boasts that a pair of shoes it made in 1935 are still in use.

John Boyd makes hats for Princess Anne, Margaret Thatcher and for Princess Diana.

Justin De Blank (Provisions) Ltd., bakers to HM the Queen, sells 30-40 types of bread, as well as items from quiche to sausage rolls.

Neville Daniel Ltd., hairdressers to HM The Queen, offers a cut and blow-dry to commoners for $24.

Necessity

ECU Chancellor John Howell appeared before the General Assembly's Joint Base Budget Committee on Education last week and one of his major points was the need for additional funds for indigent patients who are admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital by ECU medical faculty members.

Howell reiterated that PCMH is becoming a regional medical center and thus draws patients from throughout eastern North Carolina. Some can't pay their bills. While indigent patients from Pitt County are paid for by the hospital, it falls to the university to pay for those from outside Pitt County.

The medical school this year will fall short about $700,000 and if the state also pays for neonatal intensive care patients an additional $800,000 would be needed.

Medical School Dean William Laupus said $1.5 million for 1985-86 was being requested and $2 million for the fiscal year which starts July 1, 1986. Laupus also noted that because some county hospitals are being replaced by for-profit hospitals more indigents are coming to PCMH.

The request for the funds had already been included in the requested budget and the ECU officials were appearing before the committee to explain the needs. Rep. Ed Warren indicated that the funds for indigent patients are likely to remain in the budget.

It is a fact of life that some patients are unable to pay for hospital treatment. It is also obvious that PCMH in its role as a county hospital cannot pay for indigent patients from other counties. Thus it is necessary for the state to absorb this costs through the medical school's budget.

Force

When the Supreme Court ruled police may not shoot at unarmed, fleeing criminal suspects who pose no apparent threat to officers or the public, it confirmed a guideline applied in almost half the states.

The opinion held a state's interest in capturing criminals is outweighed in some instances by the suspect's rights. "It is not better that all felony suspects die than that they escape," said Justice Byron White, using an argument that stretches the point at issue beyond understanding.

Not all law enforcers agree with the court. They claim officers would be unnecessarily hampered if they are forced to make split-second decisions on when it is permissible to shoot at an escaping suspect.

The news report left it unclear as to whether "warning shots" are allowed.

Aside from making a single policy on deadly force applicable in all 50 states, the justices have inadvertently added one more criteria for hiring good lawmen: they must all now qualify as being exceptionally fast in the 200-yard dash.

Change Proposed In Divorce Law

RALEIGH — Anyone who has been through the break-up of a marriage knows how difficult it can be to reach a separation agreement. At the time that personal emotions are strongest, two people have to decide how they'll divide their children, their property and their future income. Many times, the decision is finally made by a judge.

Because of a 1978 N.C. Supreme Court decision, the trauma of trying to reach a separation agreement actually works against couples who want to try to get back together. That decision says that if a couple gets back together for even a single day and resumes marital relations, the separation agreement is void and the whole negotiation process has to start over.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, a Goldsboro lawyer, says the law actually discourages reconciliation. "If I have a client who comes to my office after we've worked and worked and been to court and had a knock down, drag out fight (over a separation agreement) ... I have to advise them that (reconciliation) is probably not a good idea," he said.

State law shouldn't discourage reconciliation, he says. "I think we ought to be looking for a way to encourage reconciliation rather than discouraging it. We have enough divorce in the state."

Lancaster has filed a bill that would overrule the 1978 Supreme Court decision in the Murphy vs. Murphy case. Chief Justice Susie Sharp wrote at the time that even one act of maritial relations voided previous separation agreements and orders.

Under Lancaster's bill, a separation agreement would not be voided if a couple got back together for less than a year. If they stayed together for 30 days or more, however, the agreement would be temporarily suspended. That is, any alimony or child support would not have to be paid during the suspension.

The bill would apply the same suspension provisions to "divorce from bed and board," a legal term for a provisional divorce, and temporary alimony that is ordered in expectation of a permanent alimony order.

In 1983, Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, tried to accomplish much the same thing. He got it through the House but lost in a close Senate vote. Hackney's problem may have been that he used the words "sexual intercourse" in his bill and conservatives saw it as some kind of attack on the moral character of the state.

But before Justice Sharp's 1978 decision, this was how the law worked. Since then, Lancaster told the Judiciary III Committee, the law has been abused. "One spouse can seduce the other and go back in and renegotiate the agreement if they felt they got a bad deal," he said.

In an interview, one lawyer at the meeting told of a case she'd seen. A women who didn't like the settlement she was awarded "got all dressed up and seduced her husband." He'd spent $2,000 on legal fees going through the first settlement process and as his estranged wife left him that evening she said she'd be re-opening the settlement process in hopes of getting a better deal the second time around.

In committee, Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, agreed with the general principle but questioned Lancaster's time periods. Lancaster said he'd propose 30 days for suspension and a final limit of one year just to get the debate started. He said he's open to other suggestions.

Hackney won't predict if this bill will fare any better than his 1983 bill. But he says the change is "so much needed, it will eventually pass."

Job Corps Vs. Job Programs

WASHINGTON — A dispute over the effectiveness of jobs programs for disadvantaged young Americans has put Ronald Reagan in an unlikely position.

In the fall of 1982, the president signed into law the Job Training Partnership Act. While he took partial credit at the time for aiding thousands of the unemployed with the measure, few people took his enthusiasm seriously; Reagan, after all, had fought the legislation to the bitter end, acquiescing only when it was clear that Congress wasn't ready to give in on jobs as it had on taxes and military spending.

Now the administration appears to be one of the Job Training Partnership Act's biggest advocates, but not because it suddenly believes that employment programs need defending. Reagan simply wants to abolish the Job Corps and knows he can't do so without preserving some kind of federal assistance.

The Job Corps is a $600-million-plus program whch serves about 40,000 youths annually in about 107 locations. That works out to about $15,000 per participant on an annual basis, about the amount it takes to send a kid to Bennington College or Harvard.

In contrast, about 500,000 people are helped by the Job Training Partnership program, which provides block grants (about $1.9 billion this year) to communities for distribution to companies that hire and train unemployed youths for about eight weeks with the possibility of longer-term work.

The administration says that in the first nine months of the program, about 153,400 youths obtained training at a cost of about $3,287 each.

If you took those differences on face value, you could easily conclude that the Job Training Partnership Act gives more bang for the buck — and without the horror stories that helped kill its predecessor, CETA.

But even during its heyday, CETA never precluded the Jobs Corps — nor was it intended to. Why? Because there are the hard-to-employ and then there are the really-hard-to-employ. One type may actually need only the eight weeks of training that the Job Training Partnership Act provides; the other, no less than the eight months prescribed by the Job Corps.

The difference seems to have gotten into the heads of such leading Job Corps supporters as Democratic Rep. Gus Hawkins of California and Senate Republicans Lowell Weicker of Connecticut and Orrin Hatch of Utah, but not that of Reagan or his minions.

In recent Senate hearings, Weicker exposed how the administration has also manipulated figures to push its argument that the job training partnership program is the more efficient of the two at issue. The Office of Management and Budget says, for example, that only 35 percent of Job Corps participants graduate into the working world, compared to two-thirds of those aided by the Job Training Partnerships Act. But Weicker pointed out that the administration must have missed somebody in calculating its Job Corps figures. Because in 1984, the program placed as high a percentage of its participants as the Job Training Partnership Act.

As it turned out, yes, the budget office had excluded graduates who'd gone on to college. Moreover, federal head-counters had begun looking for former Job Corpsians six months after they'd finished the program; even Senate Republican aides admitted that it was more difficult to locate alumni at that point (OMB found only two-thirds of the graduates on which it was basing its calculations).

One of the president's justifications for cutting jobs programs is that the pool of youth is also shrinkinng overall, by itself an accurate observation. Yet Weicker has found that the number of disadvantaged youths has actually increased. be it modestly.

The administration's approach here is reminiscent of that taken to treat emergency unemployment insurance, which was to expire at the end of March.

Keeping The Family Together

The boom in home computers hasn't materialized, and one of America's most glamorous industries is running out of steam. There is a lot of finger-pointing as to who is responsbile. The retailers blame the manufacturers for advertising products that do not exist. The manufacturers fault their sales forces for failing to move the machines out of the warehouse. The salespeople blame the market research departments for predicting everyone in America was dying for a home computer, and the market research people say the public lied to them.

Applegate, a market researcher, showed me a printout of the survey his firm had taken 12 months ago.

"We asked 50,000 people if they would buy a home computer in the next year and 49,910 say they would. Then we asked them why and 67 percent said to balance their checkbooks and 38 percent said so their kids could someday go to the moon.

"On the basis of these figures we predicted that there would soon be a computer in every home. When our forecasts proved too optimistic we decided to find out why.

"We discovered some interesting things. For example, we found the people who couldn't balance their checkbooks were too stupid to learn how to use a computer to do it for them.

"And it turned out the ones who said they were going to get them for their kids decided to use the money to buy a video recording machine for themseleves instead."

"Too bad they didn't say that the first time around."

"We also discovered consumers who had owned a machine were telling everyone that computers were not 'user friendly.' When we asked exactly what they meant by that, they said every time they did their taxes on one it always resolved a dispute in favor of the IRS. They felt since they owned the computer, the least it could do is be on their side."

"Didn't they feel a computer's graphics capability made it a valuable tool in the home?"

"We asked people about that and they said for the first week they enjoyed cutting up a pie into equal shares, but by the second week the thrill was gone. As for charts — it's amazing how little they mean to most households. I interviewed one man who kept putting them up in the kitchen to illustrate his wife's productivity, or lack of it, and she sued him and his computer for mental cruelty."

I asked Applegate if he thought the home market for computers had been saturated.

"It has until we come up with new uses for them. We must prove to the consumer that a computer can do the job easier than he can. For instance, one father we talked to said he would buy a computer if it had the ability to call every house in the neighborhood on Friday night and locate his high school-age daughter when she was supposed to be home. Another person said she would buy a computer if it were programmed to answer all 'junk telephone calls' and short-circuit the machines making them.

"Another person said he wanted a computer that could cripple the department store computer which was dunning him for a bill. The biggest reason people want computers now is to incapacitate and kill other computers that are threatening people's lives. I have recommended that home computer companies in their new advertising campaigns stress the 'hate' factor that people feel for the big machines. If we can persuade Americans they need computers in the home to defend themselves against corporate computers, we'll be back in business."

Applegate's research revealed that one of the reasons home computer sales had fallen off is that they had no sex appeal. Women hated the look of them in the room. So after a month, the majority of machines would up un a closet, usually covered with someone's Nehru jacket.

"How do you propose to get women to accept a computer in the home?" I asked.

"By getting Geraldine Ferraro to do a TV commercial saying it's the only thing that keeps her family together."

Strength For Today

Robert Louis Stevenson, that maker of apt phrases, once remarked that if a man loves the labor of any trade apart from the question of success or fame, the gods have indeed called him.

There is a thrill which comes from a task well done which can be surpassed by few statistics in life. To do something worthwhile, to make something, to start a movement which rolls along to fine completion — this is a living indeed.

Jesus declared that his heavenly Father worked; "and I work," he added. And he made that statement with pride. He was not born in a king's house; he was born to a humble carpenter and his wife, and the birth actually took place in a stable.

Get on the side of the workers. They make the world go round. They are God's choice noblemen.

NASA Says Soviets Plan Ambitious Space Schedule

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Unmanned spacecraft bearing the flag of the Soviet Union will probe two planets, map the moon, look at Halley's Comet and maybe explore an asteroid within the next decade, according to a NASA expert.

Mike Duke, a lunar and planetary scientist at the Johnson Space Center, said the Soviets are devoting a great deal of attention and effort to exploring the inner planets in the solar system using unmanned probes.

"The Soviet program seems to take more of their national attention than it does in this country," said Duke, who talked in March with a group of Soviet scientists who attended a conference on lunar and planetary studies here.

Among the planned projects, he said Tuesday, are:

—A 1986 two-stage craft that would explore Venus and Halley's Comet.

—A 1988 mission to Phbos, a moon orbiting Mars.

—A 1989 lunar orbiter that would circle the moon's poles.

Duke said the Phobos mission would put a spacecraft within a few hundred feet of the surface of the Martian moon. The craft, in effect, would become another moon of Mars, orbiting very close to Phobos.

Once in place, it would hit Phobos' surface with lasers and an instrument on the craft will analyze the reflected light to determine soil composition.

"Nobody's tried that before," Duke said, noting that the process works in the laboratory.

A Soviet craft in polar orbit of the Earth's moon will produce a map and gather data in areas not studied during America's Apollo program.

The Venus mission will include a two-staged craft that will have a launch timed to rendezvous with Halley's comet in June 1986.

The craft first will be sent to the vicinity of Venus, where one stage will separate and drop toward the planet's surface, deploying instrumented balloons which will float in the thick atmopshere, gathering chemical data. The rest of the craft will land on the planet's surface.

A second stage will continue on toward a rendezvous with Halley's Comet, which returns to Earth view every 76 years.

Duke said the Soviets planned to gather data on Halley's composition, including the dust streaming away, the coma, or comet center, and the gas given off by the frozen chunk of space matter.

The Soviets also are considering sending a probe to an asteroid named Vespa, one of the largest in the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter, in the 1990s, Duke said.

Congress Exerts Pressure To Curb Japanese Barriers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pressure on the Reagan administration to overcome Japanese trade barriers is gaining momentum in Congress, where the House joined the Senate in clamoring for retaliatory tariffs and quotas if needed.

"This tells the Japanese and the president that enough is enough," Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill., declared Tuesday as the House approved 394-19 a non-binding resolution urging "all appropriate action" by Reagan to end an alleged freezeout of numerous U.S. products.

In the Senate, the Finance Committee voted 12-4 to force Reagan to use his trade powers to push the Japanese for market access. The bill would compel Reagan to strike back with tariffs and quotas unless he could obtain compensation for sales lost because of alleged Japanese "unfair trade practices."

It was a stronger version of a non-binding measure approved on the floor Thursday.

But it was unclear how soon the Senate bill would reach the floor. Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., told reporters it would not come up "for a while." He called it "something that's good to have on the calendar" because it would strengthen Reagan's hand in trade talks with Japan.

Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Finance Committee, said, however, that he expected it to become law if the House Ways and Means Committee approved "anything at all" that was similar.

Japan reacted sharply to the congressional actions and dispatched a senior official to Washington.

"The legislation that passed yesterday in the Senate Finance Committee is not only a discrimination against Japan, but a threat against the free trade system," Japan's Foreign Ministry said in Tokyo in a statement. "We strongly hope that this bill will not be enacted on behalf of U.S.-Japan relations and on global trade."

Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone was quoted by Japan's Kyodo news agency as saying the Finance Committee vote was "very severe."

'Old Country' Mayor Leaves Smiling Faces

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Wearing a traditional Bavarian costume, 70-year-old Bob Bauman is the official greeter and toastmaster at Das Festhaus in Busch Gardens, The Old Country, a 360-acre entertainment park in Williamsburg, Va. He has been employed as burgermeister in the Germany section of the theme park since The Old Country opened in May 1975.

Bauman was in Greenville recently to publicize The Old Country's 10th anniversary.

As the "mayor" of The Old Country, Bauman performs German drinking songs and ballads in Das Festhaus, modeled after beer halls in Munich. Also entertaining in Das Festhaus are German oompah bands and German dancers.

"It's a rousing, fun place and I'm glad to be a part of it," Bauman said in the German dialect he has adopted as part of his character. "I try to help (park) visitors have a good time like we know it in Germany. I try to get everyone involved in participating — to sing and lock arms with his neighbors and sway to the music."

His ancestors come from the Bavaria, but Bauman is American. A retired military man, he traveled in Germany for four years and learned the language and customs. He also studied voice in Wurzburg, Germany.

"I have been singing since I was 14," the burgermeister said. His singing background includes rock 'n' roll and country and western music. He has given church recitals in Germany, performed before the Emperor of Ethiopia and sung the national anthem at the Rice Bowl in Tokyo.

Bauman continued to sing in community theatre and civic opera productions after retiring to Virginia. He auditioned for the part of burgermeister before the opening of The Old Country and was immediately hired.

"My repertoire began as 10 German songs, and now I know several hundred," Bauman said.

Two of the German songs requested the most at Das Festhaus are "In Munchen Steht Ein Hofbraus Haus" and "Edelweiss," Bauman noted.

"I have had some touching moments in Das Festhaus," he said. "One day a family came rushing to me and asked me if I knew the German song 'Morgan,' which means 'morning.' They told me they were in Germany 16 years ago when their youngest daughter was born. The popular song in Germany at the time was 'Morgan,' and that is what they named their daughter. When I sang the song for them, they cried. It was the first time they had heard it in 16 years."

Burgermeister Bauman wears original Bavarian dress, including lederhosen (short leather pants — Bauman said his are made of deer-skin), suspenders, a vest with hand-carved deer horn buttons, and a German hat covered with pins and buttons.

He raises a German stein and sings to his audience in Das Festhaus. He also dances and tries to involve the audience in the festivities.

"American people are more stiff and hesitate to lock arms with their neighbors," Bauman commented. "I try to loosen them up. If they come in Das Festhaus without a smile, they go out with one."

Hospitality

Bob Bauman, burgermeister at Busch Gardens, The Old Country, in Williamsburg, Va., greets park guests with his brand of German hospitality. As "mayor" of Das Festhaus, Bauman leads the park visitors in German songs and dances.

Gunman Holds Pupils Hostage For 4 Hours

DETROIT (AP) — Two 8-year-old boys and a 7-year-old girl held hostage by a gunman at an elementary school remained calm and even helped their captor by looking out the window for him during a four-hour seige, police said.

The unidentified man slipped into the second-grade classroom at William C. Loving Elementary School on Tuesday, then told police he wanted a car, some cash and a "new start in life."

He fired shots into the classroom ceiling, but released the hostages unharmed four hours later.

Police Cmdr. Jerome Miller said the children remained calm and even seemed to have fun. "They were kind of playing," he said. "They were helping him, looking out the window for him."

"He's a nice man," hostage Landrus Thomas said after his release. "He asked the police if we could have some pop. He didn't try to harm us or nothing."

A suspect described as a jobless 19-year-old from adjacent Hamtramck was being held today pending formal charges, Sgt. Daniel Carr said.

In addition to Landrus, 8, Miller identified the hostages as Jesse Payton, 8, and Tennille Wilson, 7.

The gunman mingled with parents to enter through the only one of 14 doors that was unlocked at about 11 a.m., Detroit Public Schools Superintendent Arthur Jefferson said.

He went to Room 174 and sat on a stool near the teacher's desk, the superintendent said."The teacher asked him 'How may I help you? Do you have a child in this room?'" Jefferson said.

"He said 'I need help,'" Jefferson said, adding the man then reached into one of two garbage bags and pulled out a .22-caliber rifle.

The gunman said he "wanted a new start in life" and demanded a car and $8,000, Miller said.

"He wasn't incoherent," said Deputy Police Chief James Bannon, who described the man as "very intelligent, seemingly bright, well-spoken and very polite."

During the siege, police granted a request for food, delivering soft drinks, chips, peanut butter sandwiches, cigarettes and a radio the gunman said he wanted.

Police had been negotiating with the man when he came out of the room and threw down the gun, Miller said.

Senate Panel Cuts Missiles

WASHINGTON (AP) — A decision by the Senate Armed Services Committee to cut President Reagan's request for MX missiles next year by more than half set the stage for yet another act in the long-running drama over the nuclear weapons.

The Republican-led panel voted 10-9 along party lines in closed session Tuesday to authorize the Pentagon to buy only 21 of the 10-warhead intercontinental missiles in fiscal 1986, compared with the 48 sought by Reagan.

The decision, reported by Senate sources who declined to be identified, came as the committee began drafting a Pentagon authorization bill for the fiscal year starting Oct. 1.

Congress Moves To Kill Strict Tax Record Law

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proving the government can jump when the people speak, Congress is about to kill a year-old law that requires strict record-keeping for tax-deductible motor vehicles and home computers.

"This is something you can go home and brag about," Rep. Beryl Anthony, D-Ark., crowed to colleagues Tuesday night just before the House voted 412-1 to repeal the law. Only Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass., voted no.

Rep. Buddy Roemer, D-La., who led the fight for repeal, proclaimed a "victory for the little people ... who were asked last year to drive with one hand and keep records with the other."

The Senate was ready to jump on the bandwagon today and pass a similar repeal bill.

The Senate Finance Committee and House Ways and Means Committee, responding to a flood of mail from farmers, business people and moonlighters, approved separate repeal bills Tuesday. Both measures would wipe out the requirement in last year's law — which was enacted in an effort to keep people from claiming tax deductions for personal use of their cars and other equipment — that demanded "contemporaneous" records.

The Internal Revenue Service estimates that well over $3 billion of business deductions, most relating to automobile use, are claimed falsely each year. A House committee estimated the record-keeping rules apply to 30 million vehicles.

Nobody spoke against repeal. But Rep. Henson Moore, R-La., said that while the IRS went too far in its interpretation of the contemporaneous requirement, some legislation is needed to keep people from cheating. Outright repeal will be popular, Moore said, but "what does that portend for our efforts to reform the tax code in general?

Courthouse Escape Try Ends In Shooting

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A murder suspect who "should have been shackled so tight he could hardly breathe" was hospitalized under heavy guard today after an escape attempt in which he killed an attorney and wounded a bailiff, officials said.

Ronnie Lee Gardner was being taken to the Metropolitan Hall of Justice for a hearing on a first-degree murder charge when the state's key witness "walked up and handed him a gun," said Salt Lake County Sheriff Pete Hayward.

Gardner, 23, was shot in the shoulder by a prison guard before he opened fire and was surrounded and captured moments later in front of the downtown Metropolitan Hall of Justice, Hayward said.

"It appeared to be well-planned," he said, adding that a bag containing men's clothing was found under a sink in the women's basement restroom.

An unarmed woman arrested on foot a mile away and identified by Hayward as Darcy Perry, 34, was under arrest today and likely would face a capital homicide charge for slipping Garner the gun, Hayward said.

Gardner, who had a record of escapes, had two prison guards accompanying him instead of the usual one and his hands shackled at the waist, and Hayward said, "He should have been shackled so tight he could hardly breathe."

Shot in the shoulder, and with blood streaming down his clothes, Gardner confronted bailiff Nicholas G. Kirk, 58, who was unarmed and had just stepped off an elevator, the sheriff said. Kirk was shot below the belt buckle.

Gardner then fled into a clerk's office, where attorneys Michael J. Burdell, 36, and Robert Macri were getting court files. Burdell was hit in the eye by a bullet and died later in surgery.

Jaycee Women Say They Want Out

FERGUS FALLS, Minn. (AP) — A Jaycees women's auxiliary that organized after a 10-year battle and a U.S. Supreme Court ruling has become disenchanted with the male-dominated Jaycees and will break away, an official said.

The 5,000 Minnesota Jaycee Women voted "overwhelmingly" in a mail ballot to disaffiliate from the Jaycees and reorganize as Minnesota Women of Today, Barbara Fish, president of the organization, said Tuesday night.

After the Supreme Court last year forbade discrimination against women the U.S. Jaycees were forced to accept women, but some states decided to end auxiliaries, "so our membership has been declining," Ms. Fish said.

"We don't want to be in the Jaycees," she said. "We want to be a separate organization. We didn't have a voice in their decision to do away with auxiliaries.

Collisions Reported

An estimated $2,700 damage resulted from three traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Tuesday.

Officers said an estimated $500 damage resulted to each of two cars involved in an 11:12 p.m. collision on Greenville Boulevard, 100 feet east of the 14th Street intersection.

Police, who identified the drivers of the cars as Harry Victor Thompson of Route 3, Windsor, and John Howard Duvall of Route 5, Greenville, charged Thompson with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety.

Mary Hodges Williams of 1619 E. Wright Road was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of a 3:10 p.m. collision on 10th Street, 500 feet west of the Rock Springs Road intersection.

Investigators reported the Williams car collided with a vehicle driven by Elizabeth Ann Manderfield of Woodbridge, Va., causing $50 damage to the Williams car and $800 damage to the Manderfield auto.

Cars driven by Alvin Duffy Lincoln of 1110 W. Wright Road and Tony Felix Cooke of 416 Kings Arms Apartments collided about 2:22 p.m. at the intersection of 10th and Monroe streets, resulting in an estimated $700 damage to the Lincoln car and $150 damage to the Cooke car.

Martin OKs Revenue Bonds

WILLIAMSTON — Martin County Commissioners have approved the issuance of industrial revenue bonds by Weyerhaeuser Co., not to exceed $25 million, to pay for the reconstruction of a pollution control device on Welch's Creek at the Martin and Washington County boundary line.

The approval action took place at the board's meeting this week.

"Weyerhaeuser is able to borrow money this way to make the air cleaner and keep in compliance with environmental regulations," said Commissioner Russell Griffin. "It doesn't obligate the county in any way. They just need our approval."

Money from the sale of bonds will be used to pay for reconstruction of an electrostatic precipitator on a recovery boiler and the construction of a pollution control device which will burn sulfur gases.

County Attorney W.R. Peel said "the bond money is not going to improve (the company's) profitability. It will not do anything but improve the environment."

Construction began last summer on the Total Reduced Sulfur (TRS) system, according to Bill Nevener of Weyerhaeuser's regional office in New Bern. "It collects sulfur gases and incinerates them to get at the odor around a pulp mill," Nevener commented. "It won't totally eliminate the pulp mill odor, but it should greatly reduce it."

A Reflector Review

Thesis Exhibit Shows Energy, Diversity

The 1985 Graduate Thesis Celebration at East Carolina University School of Art's Gray Art Gallery, which opened March 15, has only two more days on view after today. Friday is its final day.

This year's exhibition is characterized by enormous energy and diversity of approach.

Of the nine participating artists, all finishing their graduate degree requirements, seven are painters. Painting styles range from the figurative abstractions of Donna Gregory characterized by several jazz-theme subjects, to the primitive symbolic imagery of German-born Brigitta Weyer.

Two artists chose to create constructed environments in Gray Gallery. Wiley Hicks, who hails from West Virginia, built a full-scale model of a cafe from his past in his home state. He created electronic and kinetic sculpture pieces using neon light, electric fans and rear-screen slide projectors. His works amply document the trend in recent years for sculpture to move away from the single object to the interplay of forces and ideas.

Patrick Keough chose to utilize his knowledge of choreography, photography and video to produce a videotape of a performance he created with faculty help which was originally performed by the ECU Dance Theater. The installation in Gray Gallery involves a video presentation, and black and white photographs of dance scenes from the original performance.

Other painters in the group include Katherine McCleneghan, George McKim, Pinckney "Hugh" Heaton, Christopher Montgomery, and Gary Nemcosky.

Nemcosky chose to use his paintings in a sculpltural context, juxtoposing icons of America and Russia to create a spatial tension, and by extension, a statement about political tension that characterizes our time.

As a whole, the painters show evidence of the technical competency for which the ECU School of Art is justly famous. The show also reveals the diversity that characterizes not only the ECU art faculty, but the current national art scene as well.

Gallery hours at Gray Gallery are from 10 to 5 daily Monday through Friday and from 1 to 4 p.m. on Sunday.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed lower today in a carryover of selling from late in Tuesday's session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 2.10 to 1,263.58 in the first half hour.

Losers took a 3-2 lead over gainers in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said the market's recent sluggish behavior has prompted investors' interest in stocks to dwindle, at least for the moment.

Though many analysts insist that the economy remains healthy, talk of a possible business slump starting later if the year continues.

The firm of Oppenheimer & Co. recently forecast a recession beginning around mid-1985. The economy is "losing, not gaining, momentum," said Oppenheimer's Francis H.M. Kelly in a commentary published Tuesday.

Brokers also say there is a great deal of uncertainty about the future course of the Federal Reserve's credit policy. Advance estimates are that the Fed's weekly report after the close on Thursday will show a large increase in the money supply.

Trans World Airlines rose 1/8 to 13 1/4 in active trading. The company posted a 50.6 percent gain in passenger traffic for March, in part because of a strike at a primary competitor, Pan American World Airways.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines dropped 1/4 to 127 1/2; Ford Motor lost 1/8 to 42 5/8, and Johnson & Johnson was up 1/4 at 40 7/8.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.07 to 1,265.68.

Declining issues outpaced gainers by 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 101.66 million shares, against 89.90 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks dropped .37 to 104.53. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was off .96 at 228.57.

generously of their time and effort to help make this honor possible." As an example of such support, she read a letter to the state awards chairperson from a Rose High graduate and his parents enumerating the assistance he had received from Mrs. Creech during his years at Rose.

Others congratulating Mrs. Creech during the Tuesday ceremony were Joan Giordano of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, who presented Mrs. Creech a resolution of appreciation from the chamber; former city school Superintendent Delma Blinson, and Ann Harrison, director of pupil personnel for the city schools.

Mrs. Creech told the gathering "I never could have won without the dedicated work of my co-counselors, Mrs. Doris Hudson, Miss Wanda James and Mr. John Leich. The award belongs as much to them, and also to the faculty and students, as it does to me."

Following the recognition ceremony in the auditorium, guests, officials and faculty members attended a reception held in the Rose cafeteria.

Mrs. Creech is a magna cum laude graduate of Atlantic Christian College and received the master's degree from East Carolina University. She and her husband, Smith, have three children, Bobbi Creech of Raleigh and twins Judy Mewborn and Jerry Creech, both of Greenville, and three grandchildren.

Other places where Mrs. Creech has taught in 23 years of teaching and counseling have been at Roland Grice Junior High School in Wilmington and at George R. Edwards Junior High School in Rocky Mount.

Farms ...

1980s is jagged."

For example, Hoover's chart indicates that net income from farming in the United States peaked in 1973 at $34 billion. It then began a steady decline which continued until 1977, when income bottomed out at around $18 billion. From 1977-1979 income again rose to around $32 billion.

Then, in 1980, income plummeted to around $20 billion, then leaped to $31 billion in 1981. It fell to below $18 billion in 1983, then rocketed back to $30 billion in 1984.

Although North Carolina "did not experience as much of a boom" as other parts of the nation and has "not experienced as much of a drop," Hoover said, the impact of the national trend "has been felt heavily in the state."

A chart that plots net income from farming in North Carolina for 1970-1984 indicates the same peaks and sharp drops, Hoover said, but on a smaller scale. According to the chart, farm income in the state increased steadily from around $600 million in 1970 to $1.1 billion in 1973. From 1973-1976 it decreased slowly to just under $1 billion, then dropped by 1977 to under $700 million. Then, Hoover said, "the roller coaster rides begins."

From 1977-1978 farm income in North Carolina shot from around $700 million to over $1.2 billion. In 1979, it dropped to below $900 million, then to below $700 million in 1980. From 1980-81 income again rose to over $1.1 billion, then plunged to $750 million in 1983. By 1984 it again reached the $1 billion level.

Hoover said several "national factors influenced the current state of agriculture" and the irregular growth pattern that began in 1980. For example, high interest rates, high inflation and the high value of the dollar, along with the economic boom of the early 1970s, combined to create the current situation, he said.

"Land prices boomed, but fell dramatically at the onset of the 1980s," Hoover said. Agricultural land values are "currently returning to the level of 1974 or so," he said.

During the prosperity of the 1970s, many farmers "debted themselves heavily to purchase land and equipment for expansion," Hoover said. "As a result, many of them are struggling in the 1980s with high interest payments on expansions that did not pay off when the boom ceased."

Hoover said he identified a farmer in financial difficulty as "an individual who has not been able to meet his obligations" in the past year. He had no data, he said, to indicate which farmers make up the estimated one-sixth in the nation that are in trouble. "What data we have indicates that there is a lower proportion of small farms in trouble than large farms," he said. He defined a large farm as one whose gross sales top "several thousand dollars a year."

"The number of small farms in trouble is larger," Hoover said, "but percentage-wise, the large farms are hit harder." Young and middle-age farmers are disproportionately represented in this one-sixth, he said, "because they are the ones that typically expanded during the land boom."

Hoover said that non-farm income for farmers is "the thread that is holding many farms together right now." In 1985, non-farm income for farmers has become "more important than ever," he said, "because the farmer is using this to pay the huge mortage payments incured when interest rates were high." He predicted the amount of non-farm income used to subsidize farm operations would continue to increase in the 1980s.

Pirates Sweep ACC, Hitters Bury Bulldogs

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILSON — East Carolina baseball coach Gary Overton was a little worried going into last night's doubleheader against Atlantic Christian. The two teams had fought through a pair of wild games earlier in the year in Greenville, and the Pirates were awefully low on their pitching ladder.

Overton was hopeful that the Pirate bats would overcome any pitching problems they might run into.

He needn't have worried. The Pirate bats were there in force, led by Winfred Johnson, who had a fine five for six night, driving in six runs as the Pirates overwhelmed the Bulldogs, 10-4 and 10-5.

In the first game, the Pirates banged out 11 hits and followed that with 15 in the second game.

"We had a very offensive night," Overton said afterwards. "We swung the bats well and we got a lot of runs. I thought we played well defensively and just had a pretty good night. There's really not a lot to say after a night like this."

Craig Van Deventer got the call in the opening game, picking up his first win of the season. He did need help from Tom Webb, however, who gained a save, also his first.

Overton had originally planned to use Webb as the second game starter, but changed instead to Chubby Butler, but ACC knocked him out early and Jim Peterson came on to record his third win in five decisions. Mike Christopher came on for the final inning and all three are expected to see action later this week when the Pirates play a five-game series with ECAC-South foes American and Richmond Friday, Saturday and Monday.

"I thought Peterson threw well for us, something we've needed. And I was glad to see Craig come through with a good outing, too," Overton said.

The Pirates struck for their first run in the first inning of the opener. With one down, Greg Hardison walked and scored on Johnson's single to left after having advanced on a fielder's choice.

Atlantic Christian matched that with one in the bottom of the frame on a homer by Greg Fulton to right field.

East Carolina went back out in the third, scoring four times. Hardison led off, reaching on an error. Chris

Alston, Wall Lead Rose Past Beddingfield 10-2

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILSON — Van Alston ripped four hits and drove in three runs while Steve Wall scattered five hits and struck out 11 as the Rose Rampants thrashed Wilson Beddingfield 10-2 Tuesday in Big East high school baseball action.

Alston's four hits brings his total for the season to nine in just 10 at bats. He had been used in a reserve role until starting against the Bruins in the designated hitter slot.

Wall improved his record to 4-1 on the season, while the Rampants are 5-3 overall and 1-2 in the Big East.

"I was very glad to get the win," said Rose Coach Ron Vincent, whose team was pounded twice last week by Big East opponents. "I thought Steve Wall was really pitching well.

"Sometimes teams that are supposed to be good get down when things don't go their way. Our frame of mind is much better this week."

Doyle Kirkland was hit by a pitch, Eric Jarman reached first on a fielder's choice and Tony Taylor walked to load the bases in the top of the first. Alston followed with a two-run double, and James Matthews blasted a three-run homer to cap a five-run rally by the Rampants.

Rose added another run in the first when Tony Taylor beat out an infield single, went to second on a throwing error by the shortstop and scored on a single by Alston.

After one out in the fourth, Ty Jones ripped a ground-rule double to right and Kirkland reached first on a fielder's choice. Jarman drove the ball to deep center, but the fielder missed the ball allowing Jones to score. Kirkland was picked off third base as he attempted to return to the bag. Wall doubled to right driving in Jarman for an 8-0 Rose lead.

Beddingfield finally got on the board in the fifth. Ashley Edwards walked, went to second on a throwing error by Wall on a pickoff attempt, moved to third on a balk and scored on a single by Chuck Maddrey.

But the Rampants retaliated with two more in the sixth. Kirkland reached first on an error, then scored on a triple by Jarman. A sacrifice fly by Wall plated Jarman with the final Rose run.

Beddingfield rallied in the seventh as Maddrey reached on a fielder's choice, went to second on a two-out single by Shane Baker, took third when Ron Frankfort reached first on an error and scored on a passed ball.

Wall struck out Bruce Proctor to end the game.

Rose travels to Kinston Thursday at 7:30 p.m. and opens play in the Pitt County Easter Tournament Saturday at 5 p.m. against North Lenoir.

Villanova, Fans Celebrate 1985 NCAA Championship

VILLANOVA, Pa. (AP) — Harold Jensen, a finance major at Villanova University and a member of the NCAA all-tournament team, walked wearily down the beer-stained hallway of his dormitory.

It was Tuesday afternoon, 15 hours after Villanova had won the NCAA basketball championship and 28 hours since Jensen and most of his teammates had slept.

Since the 66-64 upset over Georgetown in Lexington, Ky., there had been all-night parties at the team hotel, an early bus ride to the airport, a flight home, a bus ride and parade through downtown Philadelphia and, finally, another bus ride back to the school's Main Line campus.

The previous night, thousands had packed the quadrangle outside Jensen's dormitory, Sullivan Hall, dancing and screaming around a bonfire until 5 a.m. Most of the trash and broken glass was cleaned up by the time the team arrived.

"It's great to have the season end this way," said the 6-foot-4 sophomore who scored 14 points on five-for-five shooting. "It's been a total team effort the whole way. It felt so good to be able to contribute."

Classes were not held Tuesday and Wednesday marked the beginning of Easter break at Villanova. Jensen said he was heading for home, to sleep and study.

"I definitely have to get back into the book scene again," he said.

Jensen called the parade and rally in Philadelphia "unbelievable. There were thousands of people there."

The team stood on a flatbed truck that made a short loop through Center City and deposited the new champions in John F. Kennedy Plaza, where a crowd estimated at 25,000 cheered their every syllable.

"I am proud of you and the city is proud of you," said Mayor W. Wilson Goode, speaking by telephone from a meeting in Pittsburgh. "I'd like to commend this outstanding team for an outstanding job."

Coach Rollie Massimino took the microphone, saying, "They deserve it, they did it.

"I told you when we left school on Wednesday that we were going to have a heck of a party. And they did a tremendous job and won the national championship."

Senior center Ed Pinckney, who had 16 points and six rebounds in the title game and was named the tournament MVP, thanked the crowd for its support.

"There wasn't anybody in the country but all you people that believed that we could do it and we did it and Villanova is No. 1," Pinckney said,

The crowd gave one of its loudest cheers for trainer Jake Nevin, 78, who is afflicted with Lou Gehrig's disease. He sat in his wheelchair with the Rupp Arena net around his neck.

"I'm exhausted, emotionally drained," said senior playmaking guard Gary McLain as autograph and picture seekers gathered around him. "I'm going to get some sleep and then catch up on my schoolwork. I'm behind a lot because of the tournament, but I will graduate on time."

Massimino says all 34 seniors in his 12 years at Villanova have graduated on time, and he expects McLain, Pinckney, Dwayne McClain and reserve Brian Harrington to keep the record intact.

As McLain walked down the street, he posed for pictures, waved and smiled at well-wishers. A friend slipped McLain's travel bag off his shoulder and carried it for him. A car drove by, its horn blaring.

Jaguars Run Past North Pitt, 7-2

BETHEL — Mark Wooten doubled in three runs to spark a four-run, fifth-inning rally as the Farmville Central Jaguars thumped North Pitt 7-2 Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school baseball action.

Billy Godley went the distance on the mound for the Jaguars, scattering eight hits. Godley also led Farmville with two hits, as the Jaguars posted just six in the game.

Farmville jumped on the Panthers for one runs in the top of the first, but North Pitt evened the score in the bottom of the frame. Alfred Braxton singled for the Panthers and moved to second on a wild pitch. Neil Everette singled, and Braxton took home on a passed ball.

After taking a 2-1 in the second, Farmville plated four more in the fifth to put the game out of reach. Randy Daniels and Godley walked, and Greg May was hit by a pitch to load the bases. Daniels was out at home on a fielder's choice by Brian Windham, and Wooten followed with a double to plate three runs. Dennis Tripp added another double to drive in Wooten for a 6-1 lead.

Farmville added another run in the top of the sixth, but North Pitt scored in the bottom of the frame for the final margin.

North Pitt remains idle until opening play in the Pitt County Eastern Tournament Saturday at 8 p.m. against host D.H. Conley.

WILLIAMSTON — Roanoke High School rallied for four runs in the top of the seventh inning and overcame previously unbeaten Williamston, 6-3, Tuesday in a Northeastern Conference baseball game.

The Redskins, who had had little success in their previous outings this spring, spotted the Tigers a 3-0 lead before rallying in the final two frames.

Williamston took the lead in the first, scoring three times. Tommy Wynne singled and Les Thomas walked. Jesse Ward reached on an error that allowed Wynne to score the first run. Troy Raynor's sacrifice fly scored Thomas, while Mike Leggett singled in Ward.

It stayed that way until the sixth, when Roanoke rallied for a pair, closing the gap to 3-2.

Then, in the seventh, the Redskins went on the warpath for four big runs to claim the win. With two away, Gene Taylor walked as did Rickie Taylor. James Walters doubled in both runners. Stacy Wallace walked and Charles Craft reached on an error, scoring both runners for the final 6-3 advantage.

Roanoke was led by Mickey Knox, who had two hits, one of them a double. Wynne had two hits to lead Williamston.

Bradberry walked and Johnson doubled to right center, scoring Hardison. Both runners scored on a single by Jay McGraw for a 5-1 lead.

In the fifth, ACC rallied for three to close it to 5-4. Al Hardison and Gary Kendall both walked, moving up on an infield out. Rick Olivere reached on an error, scoring courtesy runner Billy Godwin, and he stole up. Kenny Moore's sacrifice fly scored Kendall and an error on the relay let Olivere score.

East Carolina closed out the scoring with five more in the sixth. With one away, Hardison singled and scored on a triple to deep center by Bradberry. Bradberry scored on Johnson's sacrifice fly — the first of three he was to have on the night. Mike Sullivan singled and McGraw got a hit. Mark Cockrell finished off the scoring with a homer to left center, driving in three runs.

Johnson went four-for-four in the contest, while Hardison and McGraw each added two hits. Atlantic Christian was led by Fulton, who had three, the homer and two doubles.

East Carolina pushed over a run in the first of the second game for a quick lead. Hardison doubled and Bradberry singled. Johnson added another hit, scoring Hardison.

Two more crossed in the second. With one away, Cockrell reached on an infield hit and Mike Wells singled. Both were sacrificed up, and Mark Shank walked. Greg Hardison's grounder was errored at second, allowing Cockrell to score and Bradberry walked, forcing in Wells.

The Bulldogs came up with four runs in the bottom of the third, taking a 4-3 lead, their only lead of the night in either game. Paul Shows walked and with one away, Joey Combs and Kendall both singled, loading the bases. Steve Satterwhite singled in Shows and Moore singled two more over. Fulton got a hit, driving in Satterwhite with the fourth run.

It was a short-lived lead for the 'Dogs, however, as the Pirates — who scored in every inning — came up with three in the top of the third. McGraw doubled and took third on Jim Riley's bunt that was relayed to third too late for a play on McGraw. Cockrell walked but was cut down at second on Mike Wells' grounder, which scored McGraw. An error on the play let courtesy runner Mont Carter score, too. Robert Langston reached on an infield hit, moving Wells to third, and he scored on Shank's sacrifice fly.

One came in in the fourth. Bradberry again tripled, scoring on Johnson's second sacrifice fly.

The fifth saw another run score. Wells reached on an infield hit, advanced on a passed ball and scored on a hit by Shank.

The sixth saw another run score. Johnson walked and came all the way home when Riley's single went through the outfielder's legs to the fence.

The final Pirate run came in the seventh. Hardison reached on a fielder's choice and stole second, moving on to third on an error on the play. He scored on Johnson's third sacrifice fly.

Atlantic Christian's fifth run came in the fifth. Fulton doubled — his third of the night — and scored on a single by Shows.

Bradberry had three hits to lead the Pirates while Shank, McGraw, Riley and Wells each had two as every member of the Pirate lineup got at least one. Fulton had two for ACC.

The win boosted the Pirates to 19-7 on the year, while the Bulldogs drop to 16-16-1.

East Carolina returns to action Thursday afternoon, traveling to Chapel Hill to face the University of North Carolina. They are back home Friday, hosting ECAC-South foe American in a doubleheader.

Rose Girls Slip Past Beddingfield

WILSON — An error on a grounder by Casey Drewery in the top of the seventh allowed two runs to score as the Rose Rampettes rallied past Wilson Beddingfield 5-3 Tuesday in Big East 4-A high school softball action.

Vicki Parrott paced Rose with three hits in four trips to the plate, while Melissa Stanley went 2-3. Tammy Newton, Suzanne Tadlock and Amanda Smith each went 2-4 for the Rampettes.

Beddingfield had taken a 3-0 lead in the bottom of the fourth, but Rose battled back in the final frame to improve its season mark to 5-2 overall and 2-1 in the Big East.

In the seventh, Stanley reached first on an error, and Parrott singled to open the rally. Newton reached first on a fielder's choice, and Stanley scored when Beddingfield attempted to force Parrott at second. An error on a grounder by Renee Murray loaded the bases, and Lisa Harkley singled in Parrott and Newton to even the score at 3-3.

The throw from shortstop on Drewery's grounder pulled the first baseman off the bag as two more runs scored for the Rampettes.

Ferry To Duke; Shot Clock In

HYATTSVILLE, Md. (AP) — Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski says the 1985-86 Blue Devil team will be a good one anyway, but the addition of prep star Danny Ferry will help the club maintain its national status.

Ferry, one of the most highly recruited big men in the country and Parade Magazine's prep player of the year, announced his intention to play college basketball at Duke. The 6-foot-10, 230-pound son of Bob Ferry, owner of the Washington Bullets of the National Basketball Association, had narrowed his choices down to North Carolina, Maryland and Duke.

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Shoot it or lose it, the NCAA Men's Basketball Rules Committee decided.

The panel's decision Tuesday means Monday night's championship game — won by Villanova, master of the delay game — will be the last without the 45-second shot clock. The clock — forcing teams to shoot or forfeit the ball within 45 seconds of taking possession — will stay on the whole game, all season long.

JORDAN'S COOL

CHICAGO (AP) — The rookie sensation of the 1984-85 NBA season, Michael Jordan of the Chicago Bulls, continues to awe even his teammates.

"The thing that's most amazing about Jordan," teammate Steve Johnson commented, "is that he is able to practice in the morning, give interviews all afternoon, and still be able to concentrate on the game at night. Speaking only for myself, I get so keyed up for a game that I won't answer the phone on game day even if it's my mother calling."

Jordan Arranges 'Summit' With Martin

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan has arranged a summit meeting between himself, Gov. Jim Martin and House Speaker Liston Ramsey, saying they should air their differences to each other, not the media.

"It's time we started working together like we're supposed to," Jordan told reporters Tuesday. "It's necessary that we establish the right kind of dialogue."

Martin welcomes the opportunity to mend fences, said his press secretary, Tim Pittman.

"I don't think anybody's saying things are beyond repair," said Pittman. "He's interested in keeping the lines of communication open."

Jordan sent Martin a letter proposing Thursday's summit after the Republican governor denounced the Democratic Senate leadership in a news conference Monday.

Martin labeled as "repulsive" and "arrogant" the Senate's refusal to debate a gubernatorial veto bill after it was voted down in a hastily convened committee meeting last week.

It was the latest in a series of statements displaying Martin's growing resentment of what he says are legislative attempts to erode his authority.

"I guess I woke up this morning and the governor said in the paper that I was arrogant," said Jordan. "I've never been called arrogant before."

He turned aside questions about who was at fault for the deterioration of relations, saying he didn't want to make things worse.

Jordan said the three would "sit down ... and discuss how we can have better communications ... and not talk through the media all the time."

Ramsey said in a brief interview that he would attend. "I don't know what the purpose is, but I'm going to go."

I. Beverly Lake, Martin's chief lobbyist, said the governor, Ramsey and Jordan had discussed their differences before but had never gotten far beyond clearing "the current crisis."

"Hopefully this would be the beginning of a real good dialogue between them which would carry forward," said Lake. "I really think the key to it is the leadership meeting the governor halfway, and they have not. He (Martin) has held out the olive branch time and time again."

Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said he encouraged Republicans at a caucus Tuesday not to "make any tactical decisions until after the meeting (Thursday)."

House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said Tuesday afternoon she had not heard about the summit before Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore, planned a news conference for Thursday morning to unveil his veto bill.

"I don't want to do anything to jeopardize any good will the governor may get from the meeting," said Ms. Cochrane. "The veto was intended all along to go hand in glove with succession. I will call the meeting to ... Craven's attention."

A bill that would let the state's voters amend the Constitution to prohibit governors from seeking consecutive terms was enacted Tuesday as the House approved a minor Senate amendment.

IN THE STATE

Pay Study Plan Switched

RALEIGH (AP) — The House has tentatively agreed to replace an outside consultant's study of comparable worth in state jobs with an investigation of state pay classifications by a legislative commission.

Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, who sponsored the bill to end the study, Tuesday endorsed an amendment by Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, that would replace the outside study with a Personnel Classification Study Commission of 10 legislators.

That commission would report back to the Legislature in 1987. "If it finds instances of discrimination, then it should make recommendations for correcting them," Pulley said.

The bill passed its second reading 92-21, but Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake, objected to a final reading. If the bill passes its final reading scheduled today, it will move to the Senate.

Supporters of the comparable worth study contend that female-dominated occupations routinely pay less than male-dominated jobs. They charge that pay inequity between dissimilar jobs is the result of sex discrimination.

Senate Delays School Vote

RALEIGH (AP) — Questions about the cost of a basic education plan and fears that it might usurp the authority of local school boards prompted the Senate to delay voting on the landmark program.

The eight-year program has been estimated to carry a $640 million price tag, but Senate Majority Leader Ken Royall, D-Durham, moved Tuesday to delay consideration of the issue until Thursday while legislative staffers prepared a cost analysis.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, the bill's sponsor and chairman of the education panel that approved it, said objections surfaced overnight and seemed to be based on erroneous information.

"I came to the conclusion that there is a great deal of misinformation being circulated around this state about this plan," said Winner. "There's a myth that somehow this program takes all the decisions out of the local boards' hands and gives it to the state. That's just not true."

Phillips Calls For Change

RALEIGH (AP) — There is an urgent need to overhaul North Carolina's public education system, state Schools Superintendent Craig Phillips told lawmakers reviewing proposed legislation on the matter.

"Now is a most appropriate time as controversy, misunderstanding and an obvious concern over the crucial need for a strong, credible and effective voice for ... education in this state is uppermost in the minds of those who seriously care about (education)," he told the Senate Education Committee on Tuesday.

Phillips proposed that the superintendent continue to be elected statewide and become the chairman of the State Board of Education. He also said the superintendent should cease to run day-to-day operations of the Department of Public Instruction and that a chief executive officer oversee the entire state education bureaucracy.

The committee is studying a Senate bill that would revamp North Carolina's system of governing public elementary and secondary education. It would enlarge the state board and have it appoint the superintendent, who now is an elected member of the Council of State.

Phillips said his plan would "provide clearly for a strong governing body with a strong single executive officer and maintain the direct accountability to the public of the elected state superintendent as full-time chairman of the State Board of Education."

Currently, the board elects its chairman — usually the governor's choice. A 1971 rewrite of the Constitution removed the superintendent from the board.

Eaglets Found In Hyde

RALEIGH (AP) — Two wild bald eaglets have been spotted in a Hyde County nest near the Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge, and are being raised in the same nest where two young eaglets were discovered last year, a wildlife official says.

Larry Ditto, manager of the Mattamsukeet National Wildlife Refuge, said he believed that the parents of the eaglets are the same pair that produced last year's eaglets. It is the only known wild nest in North Carolina.

Ditto has been observing the birds through a telescope which is located more than a quarter-mile from their nest.

Ditto first spotted the adult eagles near the nest Jan. 12. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service agents in an airplane saw one of them sitting in the nest Jan. 24.

Although only a month old, the eaglets have a wing span of 4 to 5 feet.

Sheriff, Deputies Face Vote Charge

CHARLOTTE (AP) — In the latest chapter of a probe that has led to indictments of 37 people in western North Carolina, Cherokee County's sheriff, two deputies, a magistrate and another man have been indicted on vote-buying charges.

"This is a mountain way of life," said Craig Donsanto, who has headed the U.S. Justice Department's section on election crimes since it began in 1976.

Cherokee County's sheriff since 1970, Democrat Blain J. Stalcup, 52, was named in 25 counts of the 35-count indictment handed down by a grand jury meeting Tuesday in Charlotte. He was charged with one count of conspiracy, 23 counts of vote-buying and aiding and abetting and one count of bribery.

Chief Deputy Jimmy Edward Cole, 39, was charged with conspiracy. Deputy Marshall Glenn Holloway, 52, was charged with conspiracy, 29 counts of vote-buying and aiding and abetting and one count each of bribery, obstruction of justice, trying to influence someone to commit perjury and influencing and threatening a witness.

North Carolina Magistrate Hubert Winston Craig, 42, was charged with conspiracy and six counts of vote-buying and aiding and abetting. Paul D. Parker, 50, was charged with conspiracy and six counts of vote-buying and aiding and abetting.

No one in the Cherokee County Sheriff's Department in Murphy could be reached for comment despite repeated telephone calls.

"This is the most massive federal investigation ever in western North Carolina," said U.S. Attorney Charles Brewer. "I don't know where it's going to end, but it (vote buying) is very widespread."

The indictment said the defendants conspired to pay people with cash or liquor to vote with absentee "one-stop" ballots, which the voter casts at the polling place before Election Day, in an effort to get Stalcup re-elected.

Stalcup and Holloway are accused of trying to bribe a witness appearing before a grand jury meeting last summer in Cherokee County. Holloway is accused of trying to intimidate a witness into giving false testimony.

State Bans Outside Fires As Woods Burn

By The Associated Press

North Carolina officials reimposed a statewide ban on open burning after sparse rainfall, high winds and low humidity fueled fires across dry woodlands for the second straight day.

The ban reissued at noon Tuesday canceled all burning permits and open burning except enclosed fires within 100 feet of an occupied dwelling.

Burning permits were canceled for five days in mid-March.

Forest fires forced the evacuation of about 2,500 students from two New Hanover County schools Tuesday, less than 24 hours after fires sent 1,600 students and teachers from another high school, officials said.

No damage was reported to the schools — Trask Junior High School and Laney High School — said Wrightsboro Volunteer Fire Department Chief Leonard Long.

Firemen were still fighting the fires late Tuesday night and smoke continued to block vision along some roads in the area.

Long said the cause of the fire that threatened the schools north of Wilmington was unknown.

Elsewhere Tuesday, firefighters battled a forest fire that broke out along both sides of N.C. 53 near the Bladen-Cumberland county line. The blaze, which started at 11:45 a.m., charred about 125 acres.

Fire Alarms Turned Off At A&T Dorm

GREENSBORO (AP) — A fire that drove more than 380 students at North Carolina A&T State University out of their dorm Monday night had to be reported by telephone after students found fire alarms disconnected, authorities said.

Battalion Chief D.D. Shumate said alarms at C.L. Cooper Residence Hall had been turned off several weeks ago by dorm personnel because there had been too many false alarms. No one was injured in the fire that was reported by campus security shortly after 8:45 p.m. Monday.

"It defeats the whole purpose of having the alarms," Shumate said. "It could have been a lot worse."

Greensboro Fire Department officials have notified the North Carolina Department of Insurance about the incident, said Capt. James Alexander. It is a violation of state law for a fire alarm system to be turned off in a university dormitory, he said.

Fuses had been removed from the system rendering it useless, Alexander said. The building also is missing several fire extinguishers, Alexander said.

The blaze, which began on the second floor when a wall socket ignited a bed and gutted a room, sent billowing smoke throughout the rest of the building.

Shumate said fire damage was confined to one room, but that the second floor had serious smoke and water damage and the first and third floors had moderate smoke damage.

Highway Patrol, Statesville Face Hiring Challenge

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, continuing its assault on mandatory hiring quotas, is telling officials in some 50 states and cities to revise their affirmative action plans.

The Justice Department revealed for the first time Tuesday the names of localities which received letters from its civil rights division earlier this year asking officials to modify affirmative action programs.

Some of the nation's largest cities, including Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles, Miami, Philadelphia and San Francisco, are affected by the request. The Iredell County, N.C., city of Statesville also was notified by the Justice Department.

Among states notified of required changes in their affirmative action plans were Arkansas, Maryland, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina and Ohio. Among the workforces in those states, the N.C. Highway Patrol was notified that it had to make changes.

Highway Patrol Commander Jack Cardwell said he was not aware of the decision, but said there was no problem meeting government guidelines.

"The highway patrol is under a court decree for employment of minorities and women, but there's no real problem for us," Cardwell said.

Statesville mayor David Pressly said affirmative action has worked for his town after legal problems surfaced.

"It's gone smoothly since I've been mayor," said Pressly, who was elected in 1983. "Back in the '70s, the city was sued by a fireman who said he was fired because he was black. The city entered into a consent decree and has been under that since that time."

Pressly said he had not seen the decision from Justice, but speculated that some requirements might be eased.

"I know we've been absolutely consistent with the requirements. One of them was that we report on the applicants and then report those who were hired," he said. "My guess would be that it would be that the requirements have been lifted."

The disclosure of the localities involved came a day after a federal judge overturned a quota system intended to increase black representation in the District of Columbia Fire Department.

The Justice Department had gone to the U.S. District Court here seeking to have that affirmative action plan struck down.

Ports To Buy Inland Tract

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The North Carolina State Ports Authority's board of directors has voted to buy land for an "inland port" connecting Charlotte with Wilmington by rail.

Six acres at the site of a transfer terminal in Charlotte will be purchased "by negotiation and, if necessary, by condemnation," Ports Authority board member F.B. Holding said Tuesday at a directors' meeting in Charlotte.

The terminal, leased for 15 months, has helped the Wilmington port compete with Charleston, S.C., Norfolk, Va., and other ports linked to the Piedmont by four-lane highways.

The Charlotte Intermodal Terminal allows full shipping containers to be transferred from trucks to rail cars for shipping to and from Wilmington. Begun in January 1984, it is the only one of its kind operating in the nation.

Meanwhile Tuesday, the Ports Authority directors learned that the state's two ports should show a profit of about $1.3 million in fiscal 1985 despite a projected loss of $665,000 at Morehead City.

"Our ports are in pretty good shape," finance chairman L.M. Fetterman said at a directors' meeting in Charlotte.

Together, the ports at Wilmington and Morehead City are expected to show a profit of $1,331,441 for the year ending in June, Fetterman said. That's down from the $1.8 million profit posted last year. The record profit for the two ports was $2.2 million in fiscal 1982.

SHOPPING CONCEPT — Marc Wilcox, a clerk at the Price Club in San Diego, loads carts for shoppers earlier this month. The warehouse clubs are new outlets wehich are appearing in cities across the country and are generating so much interest that the industry is expected to grow dramatically to annual sales of $20 billion by the early 1990s. Wholesale-Retail Sales Clubs See Rapid Growth

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

Warehouse clubs, stores where both wholesale and retail customers can shop as members, are multiplying so rapidly across the country that one estimate forecasts their annual sales will quintuple to $20 billion by the early 1990s.

"It's one of the most exciting concepts to come along in many years," said Ronald Loveless, senior vice president of the Sam's Wholesale Club division of Wal-Mart Stores Inc. of Bentonville, Ark.

Joseph Ellis, a retail analyst with the investment firm Goldman Sachs & Co. in New York, said: "We see the warehouse club industry as being in only the early to middle stages of its development, with enormous potential ahead for its major participants."

More than 64 warehouse clubs have opened and 111 are expected to be in operation by the end of this year, Ellis said in a recent report.

The clubs — some cities have more than one — are not easy to describe.

"We describe these things as a wholesale-retail, cash-and-carry, membership-only warehouse," Loveless said.

The clubs typically are housed in a warehouse-type building of 100,000 square feet or so, with a concrete floor and racks for displaying the merchandise.

All shoppers must present identification to get inside, where they use extra-large or flatbed carts. Only cash and checks are accepted, and there is no delivery.

Wholesale members — operators of restaurants, motels, hotels, service stations, vending machines and offices of all types — pay an annual membership fee of around $25. These customers, who do their personal shopping at the clubs, too, represent about 50 percent to 60 percent of the business.

Group members, employed by government agencies, public utilities, banks and savings and loans, pay a 5 percent surcharge on the merchandise they buy. At some clubs, they also pay an annual membership fee of around $15.

The clubs, which generally do not advertise, sell brand merchandise that has a high turnover. Offering fewer items than traditional retailers, they sell food, liquor, sundries, appliances, housewares, apparel and other soft goods, and hard goods like batteries and tires.

"Although on the front end that doesn't sound particularly appealing to the shopper, when they look over the merchandise assortment, they get excited about that," Loveless said.

Sol Price, co-founder of Price Co., the industry pioneer, asked: "Would you believe it if I told you the Price Club was the third most-talked about attraction in San Diego next to the zoo and Sea World?

"Why is it exciting to so many people? I'm not sure I want to tell," Price said. "I'm sure price has an awful lot to do with it. I think price alone wouldn't do it. It's got something. And I'm not sure whether it was planned. But it's there."

Price Co. was founded by Price and his son, Robert, in 1976 in Southern California as a wholesale-only business. But it did not generate enough sales, so the Prices decided to open up to group members a few months later.

"We knew there was a need for something like this, but we didn't dream we'd turn up the volumes we turned up," Sol Price said.

The 11 Price warehouses in operation throughout the 1984 fiscal year averaged an estimated $92 million in sales each, Ellis said. At least five Price Clubs will exceed $100 million in volume in 1985, he estimated.

"Price Club's enormous success has spawned myriad 'clones' that are systematically staking out markets all over the country in an effort to be the first in each area to establish this exciting new wholesale-retail concept," Ellis said.

Loveless, at Wal-Mart, said, "Our chairman, Sam Walton, is always studying other forms of retailing and naturally was interested in the concept based on the figures Price was producing."

The industry's key players include Costco Wholesale Club of Seattle; Pace Membership Warehouse of Aurora, Colo.; Wholesale Club of Indianapolis; Warehouse Club of Niles, Ill.; B.J.'s Wholesale Club, a unit of Zayre Corp. of Framingham, Mass., and Seattle-based Pay 'N Save Corp.'s Price-Savers.

New Gas Leak

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Union Carbide confirmed Tuesday chlorine leaked from its plant in Bhopal last Thursday and three of its workers were treated for exposure to the gas.

The company also said that rainfall leaked into an empty acid tank Monday, creating a small cloud of harmless white fumes.

"The management regrets these incidents which have been the cause of some anxiety among the local residents," said a company statement read in New Delhi by spokesman S. Kumaraswamy.

Chlorine is a toxic gas used in the production of insecticides and other chemical products.

A leak of methyl isocyanate from the plant on Dec. 3 killed more than 2,000 people in the world's worst industrial accident, and exposed 200,000 to the gas. The government closed the factory and placed it under the control of India's Central Bureau of Investigation.

Earlier, Motilal Vora, the Madhya Pradesh state chief minister, told the state assembly in Bhopal: "There is no toxic chemical left in the plant and whatever other chemical is stocked is being removed from the plant."

Former Cat Burglar Had Career With Many Lives

By MOIRA BAILEY
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Ian Gale, a confessed cat burglar who once was a practicing psychiatrist, plotted his first burglary a decade ago while sipping wine with his lover, a woman he called Moonbeam who, he said, wanted to be robbed.

The woman, a divorcee who had run out of cash and credit, received more than $5,000 from an insurance company following the burglary, Gale said. And he added "thief" to a list of credits that included law school graduate and part-time professor.

Five years later, an armed sheriff's deputy jumped on the hood of Gale's car, pointed a gun at him and ended his "Jekyll-Hyde" existence.

Gale's faster lane of money, motorcycles, travel, love affairs and burglary has dead-ended at a Columbia prerelease center where he began in 1979 serving a 15-year sentence for housebreaking and grand larceny.

"I had really quit about two or three weeks before I was arrested. I was bored with that," the slender 46-year-old inmate, whose dark hair brushes the collar of a black jogging outfit, said in an interview. "There's no question that I lived a few different kinds of lives and that they were in many ways inconsistent with one another."

Investigators said the studious, well-dressed man amassed a small fortune of goods from the homes of well-to-do Columbians.

Authorities estimated he had more than $200,000 in stolen items — ranging from machine guns to rare coins and furs — that were found in July 1979 behind a locked door of Gale's suburban home. There were reports he stole up to $500,000 in valuables while moonlighting as a thief.

Gale, however, calmly disputes those figures — and the public's perception of him.

"I didn't go out and decide, well, I'm going to be a burglar," recalled Gale, who pleaded guilty to eight counts of housebreaking and grand larceny. "She needed help and I wanted to help her, OK?"

But stealing became "an addicting experience," admitted Gale, who lost his medical license when he was sentenced to prison. In his autobiography, he described the experience of burglarizing the wealthy as "like a chess game" and often waxed poetic on his experience of padding silently through another's house, analyzing their lives based on their possessions.

The Pennsylvania graduate of Temple Medical School and the University of South Carolina Law School now works as a trustee clerk at the pre-release complex. With time off for good behavior, prison officials say Gale could be released in two more years.

Gale recently waived a parole board appearance, saying he would rather serve the remaining two years than live under the scrutiny of parole.

He spends his time reading "whatever people send me" and passes the balance of his time watching television, lifting weights, playing volleyball or softball and organizing recreational activities.

Imprisonment, he said, "has been a terrible waste as far as society's concerned."

Gale contends his medical license was unfairly revoked, robbing him of a chance to donate thousands of dollars in medical services to the state while in prison. He has filed lawsuits charging he has been unfairly denied admittance to work-release programs.

But some authorities don't agree.

"Obviously, Gale is a very sick man," said Solicitor James Anders prior to Gale's last scheduled parole hearing. Gale has accused Anders of blocking his chances for work-release and parole for political reasons.

Gale admits his crimes but stresses they never violated the doctor-patient relationship.

"I didn't go around breaking into patients' homes and I have that reputation," he said. "I've had a couple of people that have ended up going into the hospital as a result of my being yanked out of their lives at that particular point in time ... I was a conscientious physician."

But Gale said he never worried about the other implications of juggling work, family and housebreaking.

As chronicled in his recent autobiography, "In From The Rain," Gale's parents named him for a film actor who starred in "The Adventures of Robin Hood." As a child, his favorite books were "swashbucklers" and Gale daydreamed about becoming a pirate.

His second wife, whom Gale courted and married after he was in prison, describes her husband as "a Rhett Butler" character from the movie "Gone With The Wind," who feels "he was born 100 years too late." She asked not to be identified by name.

But Gale said cynicism took root during the Vietnam War era, turning "a very conservative and moralistic work ethic" from his childhood inside out.

"I have wrestled my whole life with questions of morality and ethics," he said. But upon entering the professional world, "everyone had a racket. It didn't make any difference if it was doctors, if it was lawyers, if it was judges, if it was business people."

He reached a point where "you get to feeling omnipotent, you're never going to get caught, you can do and accomplish everything."

Looking back, Gale said he wasn't happy with his double-edged existence.

"It's exhilarating. It's exciting, but life is not all just excitement," he said. "If you would have told me, 'Hey ... you're not happy,' I would have told you 'you're nuts.'"

Now, Gale claims he is spiritually renewed and doesn't dwell on his past. He says he can't look to the future — "I don't know what the world out there is like any longer" — but the list of possibilities is growing.

"I'll pick myself off and shake the dust off ... I'll do something. It may be sit on a beach and fish, ride around on a motorcycle. It may be going to Ethiopia ... I might like to go and be a consultant to a police department about burglaries. I've thought in terms of starting my own security agency."

Horse Trading Becoming Major International Business

SAXONBURG, Pa. (AP) — Mary Garfield is proud of her American-bred horses, but she's adding rarer, foreign breeds to her line because wealthy investors in search of a handsome steed and big profits have turned up the heat in the horse business.

American Thoroughbreds are still the equestrian Rolls-Royce, attracting buyers from around the world, but the money being poured into the U.S. arena has made the importing of foreign horses a lucrative line.

It is "the hottest thing going," said Bobbie Lieberman, editor of Modern Horsebreeding and Professional Horseman.

"People invest in horses in the same way that they invest in gold," said Michael Nolan, administrative director for the American Horse Council. "Horses are an international commodity that is increasing in value. And they're a little more exciting than a pile of gold sitting in a bank vault."

Mrs. Garfield, who for most of her 40 years has raised a standard mix of Thoroughbreds, Arabians and quarterhorses, recently began investing in warmbloods — horses bred almost exclusively in Europe for Olympic-style competition.

"It's not that I think it's the only good horse. But I thought warmbloods were a good thing to get into," she said. "I think there's a market in this country for well-bred, healthy young performance stock."

Big-boned and well-muscled, warmbloods are bred mainly for jumping and dressage, a type of exhibition riding in which horses perform difficult steps and gaits. They include such breeds as Hanoverians, Trakehners and Holsteiners.

They appeal to people who would rather see their horse make it to the Olympics than stand in the winner's circle at the racetrack.

In 1984, almost 5,000 horses were imported from overseas, about 25 percent more than the 3,923 horses brought over in 1981, the U.S. Department of Agriculture says.

The numbers are relatively small compared with the rest of this country's horse population, estimated at 8 million by the American Horse Council, but imported horses are commanding high prices.

"This is strictly for the wealthy," said Ms. Lieberman. "We're talking investments of $200,000 and up. ... At the international level, it's a pretty elite group of people."

The total dollar value of the imports is unknown. The government does not keep figures because there is no duty on horses, Nolan said. But he noted that U.S. horse exports, which numbered about 2,800 in 1984 or a little more than half the number imported, were valued at more than $200 million.

"There's status involved with importing horses," said Ms. Lieberman. "I've been told that having an asterisk before a horse's name — which means a horse is imported — will add $10,000 to $15,000 to its value."

Mrs. Garfield already had eight American-bred Trakehners at her farm near Saxonburg, about 35 miles north of Pittsburgh, before she visited Denmark and West Germany last summer and bought two 6-month-old warmbloods, anticipating that their foreign breeding would interest buyers.

"If American breeders do successfully produce a good performance horse, they have to bring it to the attention of the people who have the big bucks to buy them," she said. "But for now, they're going to Germany and Sweden and spending their big bucks over there."

Nolan warned, however, that importing "is not for everyone," especially "not for someone who is new to the business."

To a horse's selling price — "$20,000 is probably the minimum value of the horses being imported," he said — must be added shipping costs.

"You're looking at $4,000 to $5,000 to get a horse from there to here. That's a bottom line figure," he said. "And the health regulations are a real bear."

Phil Case, an international businessman who lives in Staunton, Va., thought he knew about red tape and regulations. But what he knew was not enough to fight the Agriculture Department, which denied entry to three Achal-Tekes he bought at an auction in 1978 in Moscow.

The federal agency said the horses carried antibodies of an unusual disease in their system.

"All of a sudden I had three horses ... that I wasn't going to be able to bring into the States," Case said.

After a year, Case found a method to remove the antibodies from the horses' systems. But by then, one mare had died in an accident and boarding his horses for a year had cost him about $15,000 per horse.

Since then, Case has been concentrating on breeding. But like any speculative investment, the price of his exotic, desert horses is subject to demand, and Case said he has no idea what that will be.

"I'm either going to have a little gold mine or just an awful lot of pretty horses," he said.

HORSE BREEDING — Mary Garfield holds a 6-mont-old Danish Warmblood filly on her farm near Pittsburgh recently. The filly is one of two European horses that she has imported in the past year to use as breeding stock for the developing international horse trading business. (AP Laserphoto)

Jet Crashes

HANOVER, West Germany (AP) — A West German air force jet crashed Monday in the northern state of Lower Saxony and the pilot and navigator parachuted to safety, police said.

The Alpha Jet disintegrated on impact in a rural area between the towns of Cloppenburg and Quakenbrueck, according to a statement issued by Hanover police.

Oregon School Provides Education For Boarders

CRANE, Ore. (AP) — The editor of the school paper missed deadline because he's home vaccinating cattle. The big guy wearing leather chaps is on the school board. The principal keeps a shotgun behind his desk, and the rulebook prohibits students from chewing tobacco — but only during mealtime.

Crane Union High School is Oregon's — perhaps the nation's — only public boarding school. Surrounded by high desert in the southeast corner of the state, the 66-year-old school remains a refuge of old-fashioned discipline and frontier values. "It's like one big family here," a teacher says. "The fights and the good parts, too."

The high school, along with a small grade school serving only day students in the immediate vicinity, makes up nearly the entire town of Crane, a dusty railstop 28 miles east of Burns that has a post office but no grocery store and more tumbleweeds than people.

Crane's 77 high school students come from a school district bigger than Connecticut and Delaware combined, a sprawling and almost deserted tract of sagebrush, ghost towns and cattle ranches that stretches 185 miles from north to south.

Most Crane students simply live too far away to be driven to school every day over the gravel and dirt roads of eastern Harney County, and so the district doesn't bother owning or operating a school bus.

"Essentially, that's our school bus over there," says Superintendent Bill Thew, jerking a thumb at the two-story dormitory that houses Crane's 60 boarding students. "It's an absolute necessity. You couldn't run school here any other way."

Thew, 48, also serves as principal in this tiny but close community of versatile teachers and rough-cut, straightforward ranchers' sons and daughters. His school has changed only superficially in three generations.

Urban vices don't wear well at Crane, as the occasional city boy or girl whose parents move to Harney County quickly finds out. "City kids either learn to fit in or find a way out of here fast," Thew says. "Our kids won't put up with certain kinds of attitudes. You get someone messing with drugs, they'll turn him in themselves."

Set at the foot of a desert butte, Crane is a collection of modern, metal buildings constructed in 1968 to replace a single large brick schoolhouse that burned to the ground the year before.

Teachers live on campus — there's nowhere else to live in Crane — in an assortment of older wooden houses and modern trailers owned by the district, which rents housing to its employees for as little as $100 a month.

Regular Crane students pay nothing besides their parents' taxes for their education. The school strongly discourages out-of-district students, but over the years has taken a handful of outsiders — sponsored by local residents — for $1,000 a year each.

Going to school around the clock from Sunday evening until Friday afternoon is, depending on who's doing the talking, exasperating, educational, stifling or fun.

Chris Siegner tends toward the philosophic. The 17-year-old senior, quarterback of Crane's eight-man varsity football team, commutes 110 miles one way each week from his family's Wrench Ranch, south of Fields.

"Really, I'd probably rather go to a school I could go to and from every day," he says. "Sometimes you can spend too much time here. It gets to be depressing, but it's the only way they can do it around here."

Life in the Crane dormitory is as simple and spare as the desert itself. Boys live on the ground floor, girls on the second, and no one — "Never, ever," Thew says — is allowed to visit the wrong floor.

Generally assigned two to a room, students are up by 6:30 in the morning and back in their rooms by 9:30 at night. Lights out is 10:30 p.m.

A lounge offers television from Boise, and two pool tables in the dining hall find regular use. The students do all dormitory maintenance as well as work in the kitchen, which puts out three hearty, buffet-style meals and an evening snack each day.

Discipline at Crane is quick and sure. Profanity in the dorm might call for being "dormed" for a week. Any involvement with alcohol or drugs — even possession of an empty beer can — draws a week's automatic suspension for the first offense, expulsion for the second. No one has been expelled yet.

Crane's curriculum includes only a handful of college-prep courses — college-prep English is given in alternating years — but the auto and wood shops would be the envy of many larger schools. And sports are a mainstay.

Despite pay that is comparable to rural high schools around the state and better-than-average facilities, Crane has a hard time attracting and holding teachers.

"I think we have the best school in the state," Thew says. "The only thing is, you have to be ready to live 30 miles from the nearest grocery store. You have to be ready to drive three hours for any serious shopping."

Singing Can Be Difficult Work

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Don't ever let anyone tell you that professional singers don't work for a living.

Just ask the classical basso or soprano who routinely drops a couple of pounds in the process of performing an opera.

Singing — particularly opera singing — is an athletic event, say two University of Arizona researchers who have completed a study on how classical singers breathe when they perform.

But using the lungs, rib cage and abdomen correctly can make the job a whole lot easier, they say.

"Trying to sing without using the respiratory system properly is sort of like trying to play an organ that doesn't have a windbox," said Thomas J. Hixon, a professor of speech and hearing sciences. "The excellent singer uses his respiratory system to the fullest."

Because they don't use microphones and they often must sing above the music of an orchestra, classical singers "tax everything" when they perform, said Peter Watson, a UA research assistant who directed the study.

With the aid of modern technology, opera singers can train to make their singing "more efficient" and acquire skills more quickly, the researchers said.

Singers now can visualize how they are using their lungs, ribs and abdomen when they perform — and they can learn to use the respiratory system more efficiently, said Hixon, who developed the technology.

The scientists concluded that how the singers thought they breathed was in stark contrast to how they actually used their respiratory systems, and that people with untrained voices had far different breathing patterns while singing than professionals.

Watson and Hixon wrote that professional singers seem to breathe and talk just like other people — when they aren't singing.

But in singing, "the abdomen served as a posturing element that mechanically tuned the diaphragm (the tendons and muscles between the abdomen and the chest) and rib cage to optimal configurations for performance," they wrote.

The rib cage "operated as a pressure-flow generating element" that regulated breathing out. The diaphragm worked biomechanically to reinflate the lungs.

Lawn Care Industry Comes Under Fire Over Use Of Its Pesticides

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

WAUCONDA, Ill. (AP) — The people who keep your lawn thick and green, and earn more than $210 billion a year doing it, are fighting more than crabgrass this spring. They also face a groundswell of concern over how they use pesticides.

From Eugene, Ore., to Dairyland, Wis., and Montgomery County, Md., communities are proposing ordinances based on the assumption that lawn care can be hazardous to your health.

They are watching this town of 5,700 people 40 miles northwest of Chicago, where a year-old law forbids companies like ChemLawn and Lawn Doctor to spray pesticides unless they post signs warning people to keep pets and children off the grass for 72 hours. The lawn care industry is challenging the ordinance in court, contending local governments have no right to regulate it.

A federal judge has promised a decision by June 21.

The lawn care industry, less than two decades old, says the concern about pesticides is unwarranted. ChemLawn and Lawn Doctor, the nation's two largest lawn care firms, assert the diluted mixtures applied to lawns are less toxic than aspirin, caffeine or cola drinks.

But Dr. Samuel Epstein, author of the book, "The Politics of Cancer," says the industry would not be fighting local ordinances so strongly if the chemicals were as safe as they say.

The companies argue that it would be too costly to comply with a host of local ordinances that might make varied demands about signs and how to word them and where to put them. In addition, the companies say, some places would ban chemicals, some would permit them.

The suit against Wauconda contends such ordinances are an illegal intrusion, harmful to business, and a violation of the commerce clause of the U.S. Constitution.

"It's really a question of whether or not local governments have the right to regulate an industry that's more than adequately covered by state laws and regulations," said David Dietz, director of the Pesticide Public Policy Foundation, a lobbying group that filed the Wauconda suit last year.

Proponents of the ordinance say they just want to know where chemicals are sprayed so they can avoid those areas.

Lawn companies usually treat customers' grass with fertilizers, weed killers and insecticides four to six times a year. Commonly used chemicals include dicamba, 2,4-D and mecoprop, all undeniably toxic in concentrated form and all approved for use by the federal Environmental Protection Agency. State laws require professional applicators to be trained to use them.

All this may baffle homeowners who are readying lawn spreaders or contacting lawn care companies to treat their yards. They can buy the same pesticides and herbicides the big companies use in their local hardware stores and gardening centers. Why the hubbub?

There is "indiscriminate and promiscuous use of a wide range of toxic material," said Epstein, professor of occupational and environmental medicine at the University of Illinois Medical Center.

Laboratory research indicates that the chemicals in question can cause cancer and birth defects in test animals, but no studies have examined the effects on humans when the chemicals are diluted and applied to lawns.

Nevertheless, he said, "In the deadly battle against the fierce dandelion, is it worth spreading around these toxic chemicals?"

June Larson spearheaded passage of the Wauconda ordinance after her daughter, Kathleen, developed severe allergies to pesticides years ago. Recently, she said, she was angered by the sloppy work of a lawn care worker. "He turned on the hose before he got to the lawn," she said. "The wind was blowing and the stuff was flying everywhere except the lawn where it was supposed to go."

Such incidents occur "in an extremely small percentage of cases," said Dr. Edward Calabrese, a professor of toxicology at the University of Massachusetts.

"I think the ordinance, generally speaking, is an overreaction by the general public stemming from an exaggeration of the perceived risks," he said. Because of the disagreement among scientists, "those people who feel the toxicologists who are warning of the danger are correct have a right to get out of the way," said Mary O'Brien, spokeswoman for the Northwest Coalition for Alternatives to Pesticides, in Eugene, Ore.

The lawn care industry is less than two decades old, but already boasts annual profits of $210 billion. Last year ChemLawn, a 16-year-old firm based in Columbus, Ohio, had $290 million in sales and Lawn Doctor, based in Mattawan, N.J., reported $30 million.

Anti-pesticide advocates say the pursuit of the perfect lawn has gotten out of hand. "The concept of a perfectly manicured lawn in which no dandelion is ever present is a very strange concept and one that has been assiduously fostered by the lawn care companies," said Epstein.

"One of the things we do is urge people to alter their expectations of what is attractive," Ms. O'Brien said. "Clover and even dandelions in some cases may not be unattractive."

But such arguments hold little sway with lawngrowers. The U.S. Department of Agriculture surveyed homeowners and found "one of their major criteria is uniformity," said James Murray, a USDA turf and lawn specialist.

"Any weeds in there are real objectionable to them."

Television Talk-Show Host Provides Personal Touch

By MARK PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Television is the most intimate medium, and Sally Jessy Raphael offers viewers something personal — really personal.

"If you want to talk sex over breakfast, I'm your girl," she said in an interview after a recent show, which originates at KSDK-TV in St. Louis. "We're taking the issues of the world and leaving them to the other guys. Love, romance, human relationships and the fun things of life are ours."

Few holds are barred or even discouraged in the 30-minute, five-day-a-week program.

"The unpredictability is a big part of our appeal," said Burt Dubrow, the show's executive producer.

On one day Ms. Raphael will deal with 120 infants and toddlers brought to the studio for a pediatric free-for-all and baby-food taste test, and the next day talk to a troupe of male burlesque dancers, or clothing designer Alexander Julian, or commuter spouses, or couples who swap sex partners, or a woman who had a lesbian relationship while she was a nun.

"Some of the stuff we do is pretty racy," Dubrow said. "(But) the public is catching up with us."

Since the show first appeared in St. Louis 1½ years ago on a trial basis, it has been syndicated by Multimedia Entertainment to more than 50 other markets, including New York, Boston, Miami, San Diego and New Orleans.

Not bad, considering Dubrow's reaction when he first crossed paths with Ms. Raphael at a station in Cincinnati, where she was appearing as a guest on a talk show.

"I thought, 'Who ... is Sally Jessy Raphael anyway?'" Dubrow said.

She was then, and still is, the host of a very successful nighttime radio call-in show on NBC's Talknet, broadcast in 160 markets. She has anchored the news on WPIX-TV in New York. She used to be the host of a cooking show — and has "stayed away from kitchens ever since." She's been an album-rock disc jockey and a rip-and-read newscaster for the dinkiest of radio stations. She has lived in Mexico, Paris and Puerto Rico. She now spends three days a week in St. Louis, the others in New York.

She is "somewhere over 40," short, very blonde, and wears bright-red eyeglass frames, which are always slightly askew. She is married with eight children, "some adopted, some foster and some biological," most girls. She is a connoisseur of wine and chocolate and drives an inexpensive van. She and her husband work in tandem at home, each "taking care of anything the other hasn't gotten to."

While working with her in Cincinnati, Dubrow said, "There pretty much was an immediate rapport." He sensed Ms. Raphael's special ability, and he sold her to his boss. Multimedia sent them off to St. Louis to do a local show. There were problems to work out, and St. Louis provided a tolerant environment for that.

The ascent has been sudden, but a long time coming.

"I've paid my dues," she said. "I'm in my 28th year in broadcasting. I don't know anybody more deserving of this than moi, Miss Piggy."

She is flattered that the show has been likened to Phil Donahue's. But she prides herself in the differences, especially one.

"He's a boy and I'm a girl," she said.

Her style is eclectic. "If Phil Donahue married David Letterman, they'd have Sally Jessy Raphael," Dubrow said.

Ms. Raphael might coddle a guest before letting fly with a blunt comment or question. She'll coax her audience to be direct, to get to the juicy stuff.

"One needs to come to one's performance caring about others more than about yourself," she said. "The audience and I are sharing a learning experience."

The show caters primarily to women.

"As a woman, I feel I've been where they have and I can relate and talk about what really matters to them," Ms. Raphael said.

She is especially good at making the television audience feel like it is part of the show. At an opportune moment, she'll look straight into the camera, furrow her brows, pause and whisper — as if only to you — something like, "Can you believe what this person is saying?"

"TV has lost a lot of intimacy," Dubrow said. "We're bringing some of it back. This is sort of the adult version of Mr. Rogers."

Short Actor Finds Role In Opera

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Kenny Baker doesn't sing a note in Richard Strauss' "Der Rosenkavalier."

But when he comes on in the first act with the rest of Baron Ochs' disreputable retinue, everyone in the audience seems to be drawn to him.

Baker is 50 years old and is 3 feet and 8 inches tall. He weighs around 70 pounds. He cavorts about the huge stage like a runaway football, round and round the singers and up and down the staircase, getting in the way and chasing women.

"It's my first opera and I'm the light relief," he said in an interview. "I'm having some fun here. I haven't found it strange — it's like pantomime, really."

He speaks of being short, of dwarfs and midgets, without reservation.

"Midgets are perfectly formed people in miniature," he explained, "whereas dwarfs have normal-sized bodies, but short legs and arms. I have a dwarf's arms and legs, but the rest of me is like a midget."

"I have trouble with light switches, door handles, lavatory chains and spring doors like this one here. I haven't the height or the strength for leverage.

"And lift (elevator) buttons. I always wind up in the basement."

In 1977, Baker was the most famous short man in the world but few knew his name and no audience ever saw him: He was inside the robot R2-D2 in the hit movie, "Star Wars."

"I worked the levers," he said. "The outdoors scenes were made in Tunisia. We were on salt flats near the Algerian border. The robot once went haywire when the radio controls crossed and one of the Jawas crashed into me. It was a bit noisy."

When he was born to normal-sized parents in Birmingham in 1934, no other member of his family had been short. "From the time I was about 8 I knew I wasn't going to grow taller," he said.

"I was married 15 years ago. My wife, Eileen, is short and we have two boys, Kevin, 10, and Chris, 13, and they are normal height."

Baker's parents were part-time musicians, and he grew up in a home filled with dancing, singing and music. He wanted to be a commercial artist but never got to art school. When he was 16, he met a member of Burton Lester's Midgets troupe.

"I said I had just left school and he asked me if I'd like to be in their show," Baker said. "So I saw Burton and he said, 'What can you do?' I said I could roller skate, ride a bike and whistle. I joined them and did all that, and conjuring tricks, played drums and comedy routines as well."

Baker has since done just about everything from being a disc jockey to performing at children's parties, holiday camps, agricultural fairs in Canada and cabaret in Nevada.

He was the Plumed Dwarf in the movie version of "The Elephant Man." The movie was seen by "Der Rosenkavalier" producer John Schlesinger and led to the Covent Garden part.

Baker also appears in the Academy Award nominated "Amadeus."

In 1960, he played Dopey in "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs on Ice" in London. It ran 14 months, was awarded a Royal Gala Performance in the presence of Queen Elizabeth II and then toured Europe and South Africa.

Pay Equity Concept Finds Warming Reception

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration may consider the idea as crazy as Looney Tunes, but pay equity — also known as comparable worth — is finding a more receptive audience in state and local governments across the country.

All but seven of the 50 states are studying or moving toward the goal of comparable worth: paying men and women comparable wages for jobs that require similar education and carry similar responsibility.

Proponents of comparable worth contend wages in job fields dominated by women are depressed due to a long history of sex discrimination. But a draft report by the Civil Rights Commission, to be voted on April 11, concludes the concept is "profoundly and irretrievably flawed" both as a theory of and remedy for discrimination.

Clarence Pendleton, head of the civil rights panel, has called comparable worth "the loonies idea since Looney Tunes." William Niskanen Jr., a former White House economic adviser, dismissed it as "a truly crazy proposal."

Nevertheless, a pay equity program was begun with little fanfare four years ago in Colorado Springs, Colo., after a study disclosed, among other things, that secretaries were making $300 less per month than truck mechanics.

"It was fair and appropriate," said Republican Mayor Robert Isaac. "Our pay is public. When you have 3,000 employees, it's extremely important to have internal equity."

Business groups are among the most vocal opponents of the concept, afraid that changes in government wage scales will drive up their employment costs as well.

The U.S. Chamber of Commerce contends that comparable worth is equivalent to "bureaucratic control of the economy" and "wage controls for the entire economy." The chamber calls it "a critical issue if freedom of contract is to be continued in the United States ... Writing bureaucratic control of our wages into the Constitution would be a disaster beyond comprehension."

But despite the criticism, the states are moving ahead with their own comparable worth programs.

According to the National Committee on Pay Equity, 17 states are evaluating their employee pay scales to identify wage disparities, while five others — Idaho, Iowa, Minnesota, New Mexico and Washington — already have adopted revision plans and raised some salaries.

Some type of pay equity bill has been passed in 22 states, with measures pending in 10 other state legislatures, the committee said. At the same time, lawsuits filed by unions and others are pending in 14 states. Arguments are scheduled Thursday in Washington state's appeal of a federal court order to raise wages for workers in woman-dominated jobs.

At the federal level, a House bill on comparable worth calls for a job evaluation study of the federal civil service system. A Senate bill would study the wage scale in agencies overseen by Congress, such as the General Accounting Office.

The controversy over comparable worth runs deep, centering on whether there is discrimination in present-day wage scales and whether discrimination is a cause of the 41-cent-per-dollar wage gap between men and women.

"Whenever you have segregation, you have wage discrimination that flows from it," says Winn Newman, an activist attorney involved in several major pay equity cases. "Before 1960, there was open discrimination and segregation. We don't talk about black jobs today, but we still talk about women's jobs."

Newman and his colleagues believe current wage scales reflect past discrimination and should be adjusted within individual plants, offices, local governments and other work units. They do not advocate across-the-board wage scales for the entire economy and do not believe pay equity will negate market forces.

As Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, once put it: "They said the same thing about slavery and child labor — if you free the slaves, you're going to upset the marketplace."

The administration disagrees with two key points: that there is hidden discrimination in women's wages and that comparable worth would not impair the marketplace.

"The attitudes of the past do not in fact determine salaries today," said Linda Chavez, staff director of the Civil Rights Commission. "What determines salaries today is the marketplace. I would like to see that continue. It is the fairest, most equitable system."

The commission report acknowledges that women are concentrated in lower-paying job categories such as nursing, teaching and clerical work, a situation Ms. Chavez attributes partially to socialization and past educational discrimination.

"But you don't remedy those problems by burdening an employer and forcing an employer to abandon a neutral, non-discriminatory practice," she said. "Do I think it is the government's role to insist that 50 percent of secretaries be men? No, I don't. What the government can do is guarantee that everyone has the opportunity to be hired."

Counters Marsha Levick, of the NOW Legal Defense Fund: "The only way to achieve integration of the workforce is to raise women's wages so that men will go into those jobs."

While Ms. Chavez attributes the wage gap between men and women to differences in experience, education and family responsibilities, Newman says two-thirds of the gap is due to sex-based discrimination. He and his colleagues are using the Civil Rights Act of 1964 as their primary weapon.

"The pay disparity between a seamstress and an upholsterer would not meet the test of the equal pay law (the Equal Pay Act of 1963) but can be prosecuted under the Civil Rights Act," Newman said.

One of the many arguments used by opponents of pay equity, particularly business groups, is that it is too expensive. But at least one major corporation — AT&T — has recalculated job categories and pay scales after a three-year study of comparable worth and technological changes. Some government jurisdictions — Minnesota and Colorado Springs among them — are handling the expense by phasing in raises.

Opponents also contend it is impossible to rate jobs. But Newman says two-thirds of the nation's employers, including state and federal civil service systems, already use point systems to evaluate jobs according to skills, responsibility, work conditions and other criteria.

Ms. Chavez says employers do not use a point system to decide wages. "It is not the final determinant," she said. "Employers do not ignore the marketplace."

The director predicted that states modifying their wage scales to conform to the comparable worth concept "are in fact headed for enormous problems." She said blue-collar workers in San Jose, Calif., are very unhappy about their new system and some Minnesota legislators are trying to stop requirements that local governments change their wage scales.

Comparable worth advocates regard the Minnesota scenario as ideal. The state is two-thirds through a four-year, voluntary phase-in of pay raises affecting 8,200 of its 34,000 employees, most of them in the clerical and health care fields.

Family Watches Film

BROCKTON, Mass. (AP) — The family gathered around the television set to watch a film based on their own true story, but 3½-year-old Brian Bobillier slept through the account of his mother's sacrifice that allowed him to live.

His mother, Susan Cummings, learned she had cancer while undergoing treatment for drug abuse, then rejected doctors' advice to have an abortion that would allow her to continue to have chemotherapy that might have prolonged her life. She died when she was 17, two months after Brian was born 14 weeks prematurely on Nov. 15, 1981.

The film based on her life, "Love Lives On," was shown on ABC Monday night. Brian's family videotaped the film so he can see it later, The Boston Globe reported Tuesday.

Miss Cummings' father Bernard, who with his wife is raising Brian, said the depiction of his daughter's story was accurate, sensitive and well-done.

"As tough as it was to watch the movie, we learned an awful lot about ourselves and our daughter, the values we taught her," he said. "It just proved us right."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip — KNOW THAT THE ROUGH TREE SURGEON'S BARK IS WORSE THAN HIS BITE.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: P equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Cholesterol Study Cites Benefits Of Brew, Oats

TON (AP) — Could the answer to decreasing the risk of heart attack or stroke lie in a diet heavy in oatmeal and beer?

Maybe so. Scientists at the Agriculture Department and the University of Wisconsin say they have identified chemical compounds in oats and barley that substantially lower cholesterol in blood plasma of laboratory animals.

The department's Agricultural Research Service reports that their work could lead to a reduction in the use of drugs to control diet-related diseases of the heart and circulatory system.

Drugs now being tested in humans to lower cholesterol must be taken in large doses and cause side effects including nausea and headache.

"Laboratory animals that consumed these drugs showed signs of stress on internal organs in addition to lowered cholesterol," said David M. Peterson, head of the university's Cereal Crops Research Laboratory at Madison, Wis.

"But animals that consumed much smaller amounts of two compounds from barley had similarly lowered cholesterol without sign of harmful effect," he said.

The two cholesterol-reducing compounds found in the grains are triglyceride and tocotrienol. Neither has been tested in humans, but rats, chickens and pigs have grown quickly without getting fat on diets containing them, Peterson reports.

If results in humans are similar, farmers may have to increase oat and barley production to meet demand. Agriculture Department figures show that only about 7 percent of the oats and almost none of the barley now grown in the United States is used for human food.

The food most abundant in the cholesterol-blocking agents is oatmeal, but barley — which Peterson says is richer in the compounds — is consumed almost exclusively in the form of beer and liquor.

New Elections

RANGOON, Burma (AP) — Burma will hold general elections for a new Parliament and People's Councils from Oct. 6 to 20. The new Parliament is scheduled to meet Nov. 4 to form the new government.

The last general elections were held in October 1981, when voters elected the 475-member unicameral Parliament and decided 187,568 seats for People's Councils.

Burma is governed by a one-party system under the Burma Socialist Program party.

New Magazine Explores Caribbean Basin Countries

By GARRY MITCHELL
Associated Press Writer

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — "Let's kill communists with jobs, not with bullets."

Citing that credo, the Alabama-based quarterly magazine "Caribbean Today" premiered last year with opinions on both sides of the political, economic and military troubles in the Caribbean basin area.

It did not go unnoticed. A published interview with Nicaraguan Interior Minister Tomas Borge, explaining the views and goals of the Sandinista revolution, brought a rebuke from U.S. Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Mobile, who called Borge a liar.

Such lively debate excites Arthur Tonsmeire Jr. of Mobile, publisher of the magazine, chairman of First Southern Federal Savings and Loan, and first vice president of Inter-American Savings and Loan Union in Mobile.

Tonsmeire owns a 2,000-acre resort island off the Honduran coast which he acquired 25 years ago. His familiarity with the area led to his interview with Borge.

The magazine is owned by the Caribbean International Foundation, a group of Mobile businessmen and educators who are seeking to "improve communications between the people of the United States and the people of the Caribbean Basin countries," said Tonsmeire, who serves as the foundation's president.

"The Caribbean Basin countries are right at our doorstep, and we should be developing a lot of business with them," he said.

Tonsmeire, 71, said the magazine is just one part of an effort to improve business and communication with those countries at the Southeast's doorstep.

Tonsmeire said the foundation also hopes to benefit the University of South Alabama in Mobile by developing "student and faculty exchange programs with countries."

"Mobile is pretty much a provincial sort of place. We think that developing a lot of foreign interest in South Alabama will make a contribution. But we don't expect this to be limited to South Alabama."

Once the magazine becomes established and produces a profit, some of the proceeds would benefit the exchange program, Tonsmeire said. He said the first two scholarships may go to two Nicaraguans — one from the Sandinista government and one from the "private sector."

Tonsmeire said he asked Borge about sending a Nicaraguan student to South Alabama and Borge agreed to do that.

The magazine now has a circulation of 15,000 in the United States and 3,000 in Latin America, and reaches all congressional members, according to Managing Editor T. J. Potts Jr.

Potts said the publication began with a separate Spanish-language edition printed in Costa Rica, but that proved too expensive. Articles now are followed on the same page by a synopsis in Spanish printed in New Orleans.

"Our largest area of readers is Washington, D.C." Potts said. "Every member of Congress receives one and all members of the Chambers of Commerce in the Caribbean area."

Potts said the response to the magazine has come mainly in the form of letters, translated in Mobile by Dora Maria Gurdian of Nicaragua. "Our paid subscriptions are gradually growing at a rate of about 25 or so a week," he said.

The magazine's goal is to show both sides of the political debate, Tonsmeire said. "We're trying to stick basically to business and politics."

Tonsmeire, still struggling with the Spanish language, said he was in Honduras about a month ago and returns there about six times a year.

State's Brick Industry Finds Solid Footing

By TOM MINEHART
AP Business Writer

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Brick manufacturers in North Carolina — the nation's No. 1 brick producer — are economically healthy again after hitting the wall in 1982, industry officials say.

"The brick business is booming right now," said Marion Cochran, general manager of the Greensboro-based Brick Association of North Carolina. "We feel like there's definitely been a return to using brick in the residential market."

The association represents all 19 of the state's brick manufacturers, who are headquartered from Fletcher in the west to Rocky Mount in the east. North Carolina manufacturers sold 921 million bricks last year, compared to 565 million in 1982.

Part of the comeback is due to a decline in interest rates that has fueled homebuilding, said association assistant general manager Pete Cieslak.

"We live and die with the housing industry in general," he said.

Cieslak said brickmaking is a $700 million industry in North Carolina, which produces 15 percent of the brick in the nation.

About 535 million of the bricks produced here last year were used within the state, and 70 percent of these were used in the residential market, he said.

Most of the bricks shipped out of state are used in commercial building, including skyscrapers in Chicago and New York. North Carolina bricks sell for $115 per thousand to $200 per thousand, compared to $400 or $500 for bricks made near Chicago, said Cieslak.

The cost is lower here primarily because there are so many manufacturers competing with each other, he said. Illinois, for example, only has three manufacturers.

"It's still basically a family-type business," he saidl. "It's still a very labor-intensive-type business."

Cieslak said 1982 was the worst year since the association began keeping records in 1971. The best year was 1978, when North Carolina manufacturers shipped 1.2 billion bricks.

One point in their favor is that cedar and redwood sidings are not as popular as they used to be, he said. The association forecasts a shipment of 850 million bricks this year.

Cochran said most manufacturers have switched from natural gas-fired kilns to cheaper fuels like coal and sawdust.

"Six of them seem to be waiting around on a better fuel," he said. "It costs about $1.5 million to convert to sawdust."

States Finance Special Programs With Tax Checkoffs

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — In Arkansas, taxpayers volunteer to pay for improving the stadium where the Razorbacks play. Idahoans fight drug pushers. And Illinois residents help maintain the state veterans' home.

It's all done through state income tax "checkoff" programs. The Federation of Tax Administrators found last year that 33 of the 40 states with an income tax allow taxpayers to check a box on their tax returns and designate money for one or more worthy projects.

The granddaddy of them all is the $1-per-taxpayer federal checkoff for the presidential election campaign fund. Sixteen states have their own political checkoffs.

The most popular state checkoff goes for conservation or wildlife preservation — 31 states have them and Ohio has two. Eight states have checkoffs for programs to treat or prevent child abuse. Four help the U.S. Olympic Committee. Three benefit the arts. West Virginians may give money to lower utility rates for the poor; Californians are allowed to donate to a senior citizens' political organization.

All the miscellaneous state checkoffs and the political funds in California, Iowa, Massachusetts and Montana actually reduce a contributor's tax refund. The campaign funds in a dozen states work like the federal system: the taxpayer simply dictates how a small share of his or her taxes is to be spent.

None of the checkoffs generates huge amounts of money. For example, California's five checkoffs produced only about $2.5 million last year, the tax administrators estimate. About 40,000 Louisianans earmarked $315,000 to the state wildlife fund in 1982.

At the federal level, pending bills would permit a federal checkoff to help U.S. Olympians, fund an organ-transplant bank and reduce the federal debt.

So far this year, 1,084 couples and individuals have accepted an invitation by Internal Revenue Service Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. and mailed donations to cut the federal debt. The tax-deductible contributions, ranging from 1 cent to $54,006, total $197,910.

The Fifth Amendment to the Constitution protects a person against being required to give self-incriminating testimony but it is little help in U.S. Tax Court.

Harry F. Ferguson of Anaheim, Calif., cited the Fifth Amendment in refusing to complete his tax return, saying the information could be used to prosecute him for a non-tax crime.

The Tax Court last week found there was nothing to indicate Ferguson's testimony or records posed any real danger of self-incrimination. Even more basic, however, is the fact that when a taxpayer sues to dispute an Internal Revenue Service tax assessment, the burden is on the taxpayer to prove the IRS is wrong.

But that can't be done if the taxpayer refuses to present his evidence, the court held in dismissing Ferguson's suit.

Free the Eagle, a conservative lobbying group, has a new prescription for what ails the federal income tax. The 37 percent of taxpayers who itemize deductions would be given the option of continuing to itemize or of taking the easy way out by forgetting their deductions and paying a 20 percent tax, regardless of income.

The idea is from financial adviser Howard Ruff, who says that in exchange for the simplicity, he would forgo the tax shelters and other deductions that gain him a 10 percent tax rate. He contends it would boost revenues by coaxing high-income people out of tax shelters.

It also would produce giant tax cuts for some of the nation's wealthiest people, who now are taxed at rates of up to 50 percent.

For example, if a couple earned $300,000 last year and had average deductions, they would have been left with taxable income of $227,000 and paid tax of $94,900 under present law. Under Ruff's plan, their taxes would have been $58,520.

Rep. Carroll A. Campbell Jr., R-S.C., has offered a bill giving taxpayers who don't itemize deductions a credit of up to $15 for tax-return preparation costs. Anyone who itemizes already is permitted a deduction for such fees.

Campbell says the credit would actually save the government money by encouraging more people to hire professionals. He noted the rate of errors on returns prepared by taxpayers is more than double that for returns filled out by professionals.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes March 22-27. There were no Senate votes during the period.

House

COMMITTEES — By a vote of 254 for and 158 against, the House approved a partial budget of $48.01 million for its committees in calendar 1985. Later, it will take up a companion measure that will push total 1985 spending for the 25 committees well above $80 million.

This measure (H Res 100) did not require Senate approval.

The $48.01 million represents an increase of 4.45 percent over comparable 1984 expenditures, including a 3.5 percent hike to cover a pay raise for committee staffers. Most committee spending is for staff salaries, with travel and communications also claiming large outlays.

Supporter Joseph Gaydos, D-Pa., said the budget measure is "fiscally responsible and fair and equitable" and that the House "through its committee system will be able to effectively and adequately discharge its consistutional obligations."

Opponent William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., said he was "saddened" that House members were increasing spending on themselves while preparing cuts in programs for their constituents. He said this recalls the adage that "the king can do no wrong."

Members voting yes favored the committee funding resolution.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8.

Those voting no were William Cobey, R-4; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9; James Broyhill, R-10, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

MX — By a vote of 219 for and 213 against, the House kept the MX missile alive by authorizing $1.5 billion this fiscal year for its continued production. Later, the House gave final congressional approval of the outlay, handing President Reagan a major victory.

Congress now has funded 42 copies of the 96-ton, 10-warhead MX, which is to replace the Minuteman III as the nation's land-based missile.

Soon it will take up Reagan's request for $4 billion in fiscal 1986 MX money, enough to build 48 more missiles. Reagan ultimately wants 100 copies.

Supporter Henry Hyde, R-Ill., referred to the ongoing Soviet-U.S. arms talks in Geneva and said: "You gentlemen on the left may wish to have our negotiators walk around Geneva leading a French poodle on a leash. I prefer a Doberman pinscher, and a hungry Doberman pinscher. It's called incentive."

Opponent Les AuCoin, D-Ore., said the MX "is the Pearl Harbor of our missile fleet" because the Pentagon is unable to securely base it. "It is a dead, fat sitting duck, vulnerable. It tells the Soviet high command, 'Here is my glass jaw. Come, hit it. Come, knock me out.'"

Members voting yes supported the MX missile.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Valentine, Whitley, Cobey, Neal, Coble, Hefner, McMillan, Broyhill and Hendon.

Those voting no were Walter Jones and Rose.

Cambodian Report

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The pro-Vietnam government of Cambodia says 10,000 guerrillas were "wiped out" and hundreds more captured in a dry-season offensive in which all major rebel camps were overrun.

Cambodia made the claim in a statement by the official SPK news agency that was monitored in Bangkok.

Official Indochinese media claims are widely regarded as exaggerated.

"Going Once, Going Twice..."

This rare violin is expected to draw bids as high as 300,000 British pounds — about $350,000 — when it is auctioned in London today. The violin was made in Cremona, Italy, about 1723, by the famed violin maker Antonio Stradivari. Scholars estimate that about 700 of the 1,116 violins Stradivari made survive. Another Stradivari dated 1733 sold for $297,250 at a 1979 auction in London. The world's smallest playable violin is only two inches long.

DO YOU KNOW — From which ancient instrument are the violin, guitar, and ukelele all derived?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Gustave Eiffel designed the iron framework that supports the Statue of Liberty.

Marijuana Trade Booms In Tiny Central American Nation

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

ORANGE WALK, Belize (AP) — He sizes a visitor up in a practiced way, swats at the flies on the rotting produce in his grimy market stall and lays out the deal:

"Tell us how much marijuana you want and when and we'll deliver it to your plane," he says. "Five hundred pounds? We can do it in a day. We have the runway and we have the security. It's guaranteed. We flew 1,500 pounds out in a load last week. No problems."

And, he adds, "I'll get you the really good stuff."

The product is Belize Breeze, a powerful, seedless marijuana that has popped up everywhere in this tiny Central American country. Income from sales in the United States, where nearly all of it goes, easily surpasses the income from sugar, the traditional top money-earner.

Political pressures scrubbed an American-financed plan to spray the marijuana and, as a result, production has skyrocketed, making Belize a major headache for American drug control agents.

The greengrocer's unimpressive business front belies a huge and growing industry. If there's a big marijuana deal here, this jovial man with the torn shirt, pot belly and homemade tattoo likely will be involved.

There are many like him in Orange Walk, a kind of boom town where sugar is king no more.

A good grade of Belize Breeze, he said, sells here for about $25 a pound in large lots and will cost a wholesaler in the United States four to five times that price. By the time the marijuana gets to the street, its price will be multiplied many times more.

In three years production has soared, making Belize a major source of the drug imported to the United States.

Tons a week are flown from clandestine strips across the country, making Belize a major target of American eradication efforts.

The millions of dollars it brings in, government officials here say, threatens to corrupt the police and military.

Murders, which were rare outside of family or land squabbles, are up sharply, especially in marijuana-marketing centers.

Estimates of how much will be grown this year vary among drug agents and U.S. Embassy officials from 500 to 2,300 metric tons with a retail value of up to $100 million.

The size of Massachusetts, Belize is virtually an unpoliced country. It has a population of only about 150,000 people and a national police force of about 600 that also must patrol the tense border with Guatemala. The farmland is rich and isolated; the main marijuana market is only a two- or three-hour flight away.

Wedged between Mexico and Guatemala, Belize has had a tradition of local use of marijuana since East Indian laborors brought it with them in the 19th century. The quantities now harvested for export are recent and follow the collapse of world sugar prices, which are half of what they were five years ago.

The United States directed a program that involved two sprayings with the controversial herbicide paraquat in October and December of 1983 and covered about 3,000 fields.

"In the first two years we hurt them," said a drug agent.

Political pressures to halt the spraying started almost immediately, and the government of George Price, which was in political trouble, stopped it.

Those who urged the end of spraying used environmental arguments, although an equivalent of paraquat is sold all over Belize and has been widely used here for years.

"The fact is that a lot of people didn't want their marijuana sprayed," said a U.S. embassy official who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The official claimed the new government of Manuel Esquivel, which took office in December, appears dedicated to tackling the problem through resumed paraquat spraying or other methods but has not yet outlined its plans.

Not much of the drug money comes back to Belize. It's hard to find visible signs of new wealth in this poverty-stricken former British colony, but there are signs of change.

In the vegetable merchant-cum-dealer's house where he shows off his wares a new color television set sits on an orange crate, next to a new stereo.

Expensive, lavishly outfitted four-wheel drive vehicles cruise the dusty streets.

"In some towns you see a lot of people all of a sudden with new cement block houses and rolls of American money. That didn't come from selling rice and beans," the embassy official said.

A top-ranking officer in the Belize Defense Forces defended his troops' dedication in hunting down the marijuana fields. He said they destroyed about 1.5 million plants last year, an amount he calculated at about a fifth of the crop.

"But I don't care who you are, American, Guatemalan, Belizean, each man has his price and some day he will be faced with a situation where he can't say no," he said.

A Defense Force private makes $6 a day. A rural police officer makes about $200 a month in a country where the U.S. State Department pegs the cost of living at slightly higher than that of Washington, D.C.

"Buying off these people is just another operating expense," the drug agent said.

Figuring Date Of Easter Celebration No Simple Matter

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The major Christian festival of Easter is at hand, with most Americans preparing for the event unaware of the complexity involved in determining just when to observe the celebration.

Indeed, as happens more than half the time, there will be two Easter celebrations this year — one for churches tracing their roots to Rome, the second for Orthodox congregations.

This year the two are only a week apart, April 7 for the Western churches, April 14 for those from the East.

To the average person, determining the date of Easter simply means flipping open a calendar and looking at the Sundays in late March and April to see which is labeled Easter.

But calendar-makers don't choose the date by whim — they consult a slender booklet entitled "Astronomical Phenomena," jointly published by the United States and British governments.

And the date printed there is derived from centuries of church debate and tradition that is consulted by scientists at the U.S. Naval Observatory and the Royal Greenwich Observatory, which calculate official calendar events for the two nations.

In its simplest form, the date of Easter is based on the resurrection of Jesus, three days after his crucifixion.

That occurred at the time of the Jewish holiday of Passover, the 14th of the month of Nisan on the Jewish calendar.

The current confusion, however, derives from attempts to translate that date to the Christian Julian, and now the Gregorian, calendars.

The Christian calendars are based on the cycle of the sun, covering 365 days in a year.

But the Jewish calendar derives from the moon and has only 354 days. In order to make that cycle come out even with the seasons, a leap month is added seven years in every 19, explained Rabbi Daniel Zemel of Temple Micah in Washington.

That month, Adar II, is inserted immediately before Nisan — which contains Passover — resulting in wide variations in the occurrence of Passover in terms of solar dates used on the Christian calendars.

The first dispute over dating Easter arose in the second century A.D., in a division over keeping the observance at Passover — which can be any day of the week — and always observing it on Sunday because that was the day recorded for the Resurrection.

Those insisting on the Passover date were known as the Quartodecimans, from the date Nisan 14. But those urging Sunday celebrations prevailed.

To help churchmen who needed to calculate which Sunday it would be, the Council of Nicea in 325 A.D. set out a formula still generally in use, although complicated by the later change from the Julian to Gregorian calendars.

That formula set Easter as the first Sunday after the first full moon following the spring equinox.

While generally falling on March 21, the equinox was actually on March 20 this year. With the first full moon on April 5, this year's Easter date is April 7.

To Orthodox ecclesiastics, however, this approach did not follow the Bible, so they celebrate a different date in some years.

Theo Tselepis of Saints Constantine and Helen Greek Orthodox Church in Washington explained that this, too, stems from the date of the Jewish Passover holiday.

Jesus celebrated Passover before being crucified, according to the New Testament. Thus, the Resurrection cannot be observed before or at the same time as Passover, if the Biblical sequence of events is to be followed, according to Orthodox reckoning.

So, with the week-long Passover celebration beginning at sundown April 5, the Orthodox Easter could not occur until April 14.

Because of these variations in observance, Easter can occur between March 22 and April 25 for the Western Christian churches, while the range for Orthodox Easter extends from April 4 to May 8.

FORECAST FOR THURS. APRIL 4, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Until noon there is a considerable amount of confusion about getting associates to agree to practical modes of expression but later you find one who agrees with you.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Don't enter into that argument between a partner and a government official, and later you can get backing you need.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) An associate and a newcomer may argue, but don't get involved, then after lunch you get a new perspective on your career.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Instead of worrying about some business affair and entertainment plans, handle whatever arises in an efficient manner.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) An outsider and a family tie team up to gain their way, but rise above this and win out.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Consult with a clever person you know and you can solve that confusing situtation about your regular job and an outside affair.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Keep busy at work ahead of you and forget about spending a lot of money for amusement. Avoid one who may be jealous of you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) You find it hard to solve some problem in the morning, so get at work facing you that is easy to do.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Don't ask for a favor of a friend in the morning, or you will be disappointed. Others can be more cooperative later.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Business affairs can be made more simple and profitable now, and tonight a good friend can be very helpful to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You may find it difficult to get the information you need concerning a new matter in the morning, but later a bigwig helps.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be sure you study some account carefully before you take care of it and avoid costly error. Be happier with your mate.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) A partner could be difficult during the daytime but later you can come to a find meeting of minds. Be more sure of yourself.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can easily get along with others and upon reaching maturity will make a fine partner, so be sure to teach to follow the Golden Rule early in life. One who will do well in whatever professions require precision and neat work. One who will go a long way.

Easter Week Has Spotlight On Hens

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — The Easter bunny gets the credit, but the nation's hens are the ones laying the millions of eggs that will be painted and placed in baskets or tucked away in hiding places in yards and parks Sunday.

With one Easter egg hunt by itself accounting for 60,000 eggs, the week is the biggest of the year for egg producers.

Egg City of Arkansas, which sells eggs to 600 stores in 16 states, will nearly double its normal sales this week, sales manager Carolyn DeVenney said by telephone Monday.

The Hope, Ark., company normally sells 1.4 million eggs a week, she said, but this week expects volume to reach to 2.7 million.

It doesn't matter that hens can't double their output of eggs for that week, said Don Allen, executive vice president of the Arkansas Poultry Federation. "There's always an oversupply of eggs," he said.

Nationwide, Allen said, egg producers can cover the demand during the spring holiday. But doing so means fewer eggs for "egg-breakers," businesses that mix eggs with other ingredients to make products such as cake mixes, Allen said.

According to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Arkansas, California, Pennsylvania, Indiana, Georgia and Florida produce more than one-third of the eggs consumed in the country. The national output in 1983 totaled more than 68 billion egghe USDA said.

Al Pope, president of United Egg Producers of Decatur, Ga., a promotional organization, said the industry generates $3 billion a year.

But it runs into problems after Easter.

"You can't turn the hens off like a spigot," he said. "Traditionally, the egg market takes a nosedive after Easter for six to eight weeks."

Proposed Hospital Merger Based On Costs

By COTTEN TIMBERLAKE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Increased competition and the desire to hold down costs led to the proposed merger of Hospital Corp. of America and American Hospital Supply Corp., company officials said, and analysts predicted similar combinations in the $400 billion industry.

The $6.6 billion deal, which would be the fourth-largest corporate merger in U.S. history, would create the nation's largest health care concern. Hospital Corp. is the largest for-profit hospital chain with about 420 facilities and American Hospital is the leading supplier of health care products.

Shareholders are to vote on the proposal in June.

"What the buyers of health care have been saying is, 'We want to keep that high quality but we really are only willing to pay so much,'" Karl D. Bays, chairman and chief executive of the Evanston, Ill.-based American Hospital said at a New York news conference. "They're looking to us to be more efficient."

"We have gone from a regulated, cost-plus environment to a deregularized movement with a competitive, highly competitive market system," said Dr. Thomas F. Frist Jr., president and chief executive of Hospital Corp. "Increased efficency will be rewarded."

The $400 billion-a-year health care industry has been pinched by new federal restrictions on Medicare payments to hospitals and a trend toward out-patient and alternative care.

Larry Feinberg, an analyst with the investment firm Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said of the merger: "I think it's a very solid concept. I think they are addressing what needs to be addressed in American health care.

"Basically the health care system is becoming extremely competitive. There are problems in both the hospital side and the supply side. There has been a shift in purchasing power away from the providers to the consumers. The winners are going to be the ones who provide the highest quality at the best price."

Feinberg said 40 percent of the hospital beds in this country are empty and predicted that other mergers would follow among hospital groups, hospitals and suppliers.

"There will be more integration in the system to help keep costs down now that this barrier — this so-called barrier — between the two industries seems to have been broken down," he said.

The Justice Department or Federal Trade Commission would review the merger for any possible antitrust problems, said Justice Department spokeswoman Amy Brown in Washington. Such scrutiny is routine for all large mergers, she said, and the two companies expressed confidence that theirs would get a green light.

Under the proposal, which Frist said he first broached about six years ago, American Hospital and Hospital Corp. would operate as separate units.

Combined 1984 assets of the two companies were $7 billion, revenues were $7.6 billion, and net earnings were $535 million, the companies said. Together, they employ 110,000 people.

Frist and Bays said the merger would give American Hospital a virtually guaranteed market in Hospital Corp.'s hundreds of hospitals. Hospital Corp. hopes that some of American Hospital's other customers would become part of the Hospital Corp. system, they said.

Under the agreement, holders of Hospital Corp.'s 88.1 million common shares would receive one share in the new holding company for each of their shares.

Light-Activated Drug Gives Broad Coverage

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A new technique that uses a light-activated drug to kill cancer cells in blood from certain leukemia patients may be useful in treating some blood cancers and diseases such as arthritis and lupus, a researcher says.

When blood was removed from the bodies of two patients with the rare, extreme form of one type of leukemia, treated and returned to their bodies, it appeared to stimulate their immune systems to slow the uncontrolled, cancerous production of white cells, said Dr. Richard M. Edelson.

But the technique has only limited potential for halting some blood cancers and is really aimed at treating symptoms of those cancers and of so-called auto-immune diseases, including myasthenia gravis, lupus and arthritis, said Edelson, of New York's Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center.

It might eventually be used to sharply reduce the symptoms of the diseases by killing abnormal white blood cells after they are produced, he said Monday during the American Cancer Society's science writers' seminar.

Edelson used the method on 11 patients with the leukemia version of a cancer called cutaneous T cell lymphoma, in which malignant T lymphocytes — a type of white blood cell — invade the lymph nodes and skin and circulate in the blood.

The patients were given a form of the drug psoralen, which occurs naturally in some fruits and vegetables but by itself has no known effect. Each patient's blood was then removed through an arm vein, routed through a clear plastic tube — where it was exposed to a mild ultraviolet light — and put back into the patient through another arm vein.

The ultraviolet light activated the drug so it killed the cancerous white blood cells. The drug reverted to its inactive form as it reentered the body. Three patients didn't improve, but eight had decreased symptoms.

Two of the eight showed sharply reduced cancer cell production even after treatment stopped, suggesting the method somehow stimulated their immune system to combat the leukemia.

Because this "photochemotherapy" technqiue killed the cancerous cells outside the body, it avoids the harmful side effects of conventional chemotherapy, which damages or kills cells throughout the body, not just cangerous ones, Edelson said.

While conventional chemotherapy drugs also might be used to treat blood removed from the body, the toxic drugs would have to be filtered from the blood before it was replaced — a costly and complex step unneeded with the light-activated drug, he said.

Arthritis and other auto-immune diseases occur when the body's disease-fighting immune system attacks the body itself by overproducing other types of white blood cells. So photochemotherapy might be used to kill or damage those cells to reduce the symptoms of such diseases, Edelson said.

"The ultimate use of this therapy in any particular disease is an open game," he said. "Right now, we're at an extremely early stage."

In arthritis, abnormal white blood cells attack the joints. In lupus, they attack the kidneys, skin, nerves and joints. And in myasthenia gravis, they attack muscle.

Edelson doubted the method would work against acute, childhood leukemia because cancerous white blood cells proliferate very rapidly in that disease.

Another in an excellent series of workbooks shows that high cards are not always an asset. (Blocking and Unblocking Plays in Bridge, by Terence Reese and Roger Trezel. Frederick Fell, paperback, 64 pp. $5.25 postpaid from The Bridge World, 39 West 94th St., New York, N.Y. 10025.)

With their usual clarity and brevity, the authors make a difficult subject look simple. As they point out, the plays are not difficult to execute — the problem comes in anticipating them. Consider the above example.

"Every bid made by an opponent (and every failure to bid, for that matter) provides some indication about the lie of the cards. Even when the overcall seems not to affect the play, it is important to take note of any clue to the distribution.

"Against four hearts, West leads the ace of spades. Before playing from dummy, South must consider where he wants the lead to be at trick two. He has certain losers in clubs and spades and must avoid losing two trump tricks. As West has overcalled and is, therefore, marked with length in spades, East is more likely than West to hold four hearts. As West might hold a singleton ace, it would be a mistake to lead a heart from dummy. South makes his first good play by unblocking dummy's king of spades.

"... West continues with a second spade, taken by the queen. A low heart goes to the king and ace, and East exits with a diamond which goes to dummy's king. On the jack of hearts West discards a spade.

"South must take care of his third diamond, so he plays a diamond to the ace and returns the five. He must be sure to ruff with dummy's eight of hearts, so that he can play back the four and pick up East's 10-6. Suppose, instead, that he ruffs with the four and returns the eight. East will not cover, so the eight wins; but then West will win the third round of clubs and play a spade, enabling East to make his ten of hearts and defeat the contract."

This booklet is five dollars well spent.
