For Nicaraguan Situation

White House Hints Peace Plan Coming

By MIKE SHANAHAN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is prepared to offer "new ideas" for dealing with the leftist government of Nicaragua while triggering a process leading toward a congressional vote soon on releasing $14 million in aid to rebels battling the Sandinistas, a White House spokesman said today.

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes declined to spell out Reagan's new proposals, but said the president "has some suggestions, ideas he will be discussing."

On Capitol Hill, congressional sources said the administration plan includes a comprehensive proposal designed to encourage the Sandinistas to negotiate a peace settlement with the rebels.

Late Wednesday, Reagan sent Congress a report that will set up a congressional vote, probably around April 19, for release of the $14 million in aid, Speakes said. The report, which is classified, outlines the administration's arguments for assisting the rebels.

Submission of the report was ordered by Congress last year as a condition for releasing the funds. With the report in hand, administration backers can submit a resolution in both the House and the Senate seeking money for the rebels.

Once the resolution is submitted, the House and Senate have up to 15 days to vote on the matter.

The proposal for the $14 million describes the assistance as "humanitarian," instead of direct military, aid, one congressional source said.

The source said the definition of humanitarian would include trucks, uniforms and various kinds of logistical support, but no weapons.

Reagan was set to announce that if the Sandinistas refused to negotiate with the rebels, the U.S. would then resume direct military help, the source added.

At the White House, it appeared likely Reagan would associate himself with a statement signed by Nicaraguan opposition leaders March 2.

That statement accused the Sandinista regime of plunging the country into a crisis and demanded a national dialogue with the government plus sweeping changes in the Nicaraguan government and army.

Beyond that, the statement demanded dissolution of the National Assembly and new elections. The document also said the Nicaraguan government must respond by April 20 if there is to be any hope for "a peaceful resolution of the national crisis."

A copy of the document was made available at the White House.

Reagan's action comes on the heels of a warning from a White House ally, House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois, that the administration's hopes for the $14 million in rebel aid was "dead in the water."

Beyond that, Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole of Kansas had said it would be difficult for the Senate to take up the controversial matter in the next few weeks as it works on the budget and deficit-reduction efforts.

More Tar Heel Farmers Face Lean Times

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The current financial plight of North Carolina's farmers began in the 1970s when agricultural producers in the state "followed the national trend of expansion, buying land and going into debt," according to Dr. William D. Eickhoff, extension economist at North Carolina State University.

Eickhoff said that although the large majority of farms in North Carolina are financially sound, the number of operations in financial difficulty "is increasing at a high rate."

Based on data in a report titled "The Current Financial Condition of Farmers and Farm Lenders," published in the United States Department of Agriculture's Agricultural Information Bulletin No. 490, Eickhoff estimated that 1,896, or 2.4 percent, of the farms in North Carolina were technically insolvent in 1984. Technical insolvency is defined as having a debt/asset ratio over 100 percent. Debt/asset ratios were computed, he said, by dividing total farm debt by the value of a farm's assets. He estimated that in 1985 the number of technically insolvent farms would rise to 2,923, or 3.7 percent.

This is the second in a three-part series exploring the state of agriculture in North Carolina today and how it got there.

In addition, Eickhoff said data indicated that another 1,896 farms (2.4 percent) in the state experienced extreme financial problems (debt/asset ratio of 70-100 percent) in 1984. He estimated that number would increase to 3,239, or 4.1 percent, in 1985.

Perhaps the largest increase in the numbers of farmers in distress is predicted for those with serious financial problems, or a debt/asset ratio of 40-70 percent. Eickhoff predicted 5,688 farms (7.2 percent) in the state were in this category in 1984 but said he expects the number to rise to 13,193 (16.7 percent) in 1985.

Eickhoff also pointed out that data indicated that 69,520 farmers in North Carolina, 88 percent, experienced no apparent financial problems (debt/asset ratio under 40 percent) in 1984. He estimated that in 1985 this number would decrease to 59,645, or 75.5 percent.

"We (North Carolina) do have a very large number of farms operating soundly financially," Eickhoff said, "but the point is, in 1985, the state could have nearly 3,000 farms that are technically insolvent and over 3,000 in extreme financial distress. Six thousand farms in trouble is a very realistic figure in 1985."

Because of declining farm income in the state, many farms operating both soundly and on the borderline, Eickhoff said, are depending heavily on non-farm income to keep them in the black. He estimated that in 1985 farm income in North Carolina would drop to $850 million — down from $1 million in 1984.

In contrast, the amount of farm debt has increased steadily in the state since 1970, based on comparisons between dollars of farm debt and dollars of net income, Eickhoff said. According to his data, in 1970 a farmer could expect 1.48 dollars of debt for each dollar of net farm income. In 1980 this figure rose to 3.94 dollars of debt for each dollar of farm income and in 1985, he estimated that farmers would incur 4.83 dollars of debt for each dollar of farm income. "What this figure means is that it takes farms 4.83 years to pay off the debt incurred for the dollars earned," Eickhoff said.

The economist also cited a high percentage of loans with delinquent payments reported by the Farmers Home Administration earlier this year as an indication of the financial stress on farmers. The agency, which offers credit to farmers considered ineligible by private lending organizations, reported a delinquency rate of 39 percent in North Carolina as of Jan. 31. Eickhoff acknowledged that January "is a time when delinquency rates are normally higher" but said 39 percent "distressed" him.

That rate compares with a 27 percent delinquency rate reported by FmHA in September 1984, and a 23 percent rate in September 1983. According to Eickhoff, FmHA serves 10,083 borrowers in the state, and a delinquency rate of 39 percent represents around 4,000 of them.

Eickhoff said Production Credit

Corp., a private lending agency, "knows their delinquency rate is up" but said no concrete figures were available.

The economist said a "large erosion in the value of farm land in the state" is another economic indicator of farmers' financial futures. Based on observation by agricultural extension agents and North Carolina farmers, he estimated that value per acre for open cropland in a typical eastern North Carolina county, such as Wilson, declined from $2,000 per acre in 1980-81 to $1,200 in 1985. That figure represents "farm land sold for farm purposes," he added.

"With declining farm income in North Carolina, we have an extreme number of farmers with the inability to meet total debts," Eickhoff added. "We will likely see a large attrition rate in the state in the next few years."

FAR TRIP TO FARGO

About two years ago Glaster Jordan of Route 1, Greenville, lost his wallet. He wasn't sure how or where, except he thought it was while he was at work at the Sterling Radiator Division of Reed National Corp. in Farmville.

On March 28 the mystery was solved. He opened his home mailbox to find a package containing his wallet with all his cards and the $11 in cash that had been in it. "The woman who sent it didn't even take out the $1.28 she had to spend for postage!" he said.

The wallet was returned to him by someone at Grant Mechanical Inc. in Fargo, N.D. Enclosed was a note saying, "This billfold was found inside a Sterling duct furnace by one of our workers at a job site."

Jordan said he has sent a thank you note to the sender with a request that she let the worker know how much he appreciates getting his wallet back.

Dansey Suit Countered By Evans Bid For $6.07 Million In Damages

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

A suit filed earlier this year by Greenville developer W.E. Dansey Jr., seeking $32,626 from Ann D. Evans and the estate of Lewis W. Evans for work done on a portion of Arlington Boulevard has been answered with a counterclaim and third party complaint which asks $6.07 million in compensatory and punitive damages from Dansey and Philip E. Carroll (trading as Carroll and Associates).

Dansey's complaint charges that in January 1976, he entered into an option agreement with Lewis and Ann Evans, under which he was entitled to either a credit or a refund from the Evanses for one-half the cost of installing water, sewer and other utilities and paving along portions of Arlington Boulevard.

After Dansey exercised his option to purchase all of the Evans land, according to the complaint, Dansey "caused additional work to be done ... at a cost of $65,626" in 1983 and 1984. Payment of half that amount — $32,626 — has not been made, the complaint charges, and, as Arlington Boulevard has not yet been improved from the intersection of Red Banks Road to the eastern property line of the parcels purchased under the option, additional expenses will be incurred.

The suit asks payment of the $32,626 and "one-half of the cost of paving, water, sewer and utilities expended ... in the future for the purpose of extending Arlington Boulevard ..." to the property line of the parcels purchased under the option.

In her answer, counterclaim and third party complaint, Mrs. Evans, (Please turn to page 15)

Double Ring Ceremony Is Performed On Saturday

Annie Ruth Johnson of Greenville and Dennis Morris Clinton of Aurora were united in marriage Saturday at 4 p.m. at the home of Mary Gilbert. The Rev. Tyrone Turnage officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Evangelist Maggie Thompson of Bethel. She was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her uncle, Clarence Carney of Tarboro. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Maceo Clinton of La Grange.

The bride wore a formal gown of white sheerganza and chantilly lace. It was designed with a high neckline and a sheer V-yoke etched with pearls and accented with a crystal pleated ruffle. The lace bishop sleeves were closed with crystal pleated ruffles and bridal buttons. The flowing lace applique skirt was bordered with a crystal pleated ruffle and ended in an attached chapel train. She wore a white bridal picture hat overlaid with chantilly lace etched with pearls. A gathered lace ruffle edged the brim. A Dior bow and white silk rose with silk illusion extended down the back of the hat.

The maid of honor was Mary Gilbert of Greenville. She wore a red satin floor length gown accented with puff sleeves, low neckline and full bodice. She wore a white hat.

The flower girl was Monica Williams of Ayden. She wore a dress similar to that of the maid of honor. She wore baby's breath in her hair and carried a white wicker basket filled with red and white petals.

The best man was Lester Clinton of Goldsboro, brother of the bridegroom.

The mother of the bride wore an ivory floor length pleated gown with a matching coat. She wore a matching corsage.

James King was pianist for the ceremony.

The wedding was directed by Rachel Williams of Greenville and Mary Gilbert.

MRS. CLINTON

The bride is employed at Procter and Gamble in Greenville and the bridegroom is employed by Texas Gulf in Aurora.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip.

A reception was held after the ceremony at Mr. C's Lounge. Rachel Short presided at the guest register and Clemitine Duncan poured punch. The mother of the bride said goodbyes.

The bride was honored at a shower and an after party at Mr. C's Lounge.

Homes Tour Set In Raleigh

A spring homes tour featuring eight Raleigh homes will be sponsored by the N.C. Museum of History Associates April 18-20.

Architecture ranges from colonial to contemporary. Chairmen of the tour are Mrs. Joseph Turner and Mrs. Robert Burrows of Raleigh.

According to Mrs. Turner, proceeds from the tour will benefit the state history museum through artifact purchases, preservation of the collection, exhibitions and educational programs in every county of the state.

For ticket information contact the Museum Associates at 109 E. Jones St., Raleigh.

The houses will be open from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Booklet Published On Contraceptives

Oral contraceptives are the most popular reversible birth control method in America, with more than seven million women taking them daily. Taken properly, the combined estrogen-progestogen pill is 99 percent effective and the progestogen-only "minipill" is 98 percent effective in preventing pregnancy. They are probably the most extensively studied medication in history, yet they are not fully understood.

The National Institutes of Health has recently published a booklet which explains the advantages and disadvantages of oral contraceptives. It points out that while oral contraceptives are not for every woman, recent studies show them to be safe for most young healthy non-smokers. For a copy of Facts About Oral Contraceptives, send 50 cents to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 410N, Pueblo, Colo.

The patient leaflet that comes with all pills contains a complete list of potential complications. Most side effects of birth control pills are minor. The most serious side effects — an increased risk of blood clots, heart attacks and stroke — are also the most rare. Even these may be overstated, some experts say, since most of the research was done before the introduction of the low-estrogen pill and the progestogen-only "minipill."

There is no firm evidence that the pill causes cancer, and current research suggests that women who have used the pill for at least one year have half the average risk of developing cancer of the ovary and of the endometrium (lining of the uterus). There appears to be little risk that its use leads to sterility. In fact, new types of pills, which are safer, protect many women from pelvic inflammatory disease, which can cause infertility.

The most important outcome of recent research is that groups of women with a high risk of developing pill complications have been identified. These include smokers, women over 35, and those with a history of such illnesses as heart or liver problems, high blood pressure, certain cancers, diabetes, epilepsy, obesity or asthma.

Along with the pamphlet, each order will receive a free copy of Consumer Information Catalog, which lists more than 200 other free and moderately priced federal booklets on a wide variety of subjects.

Wife's Loyalties Torn In Heirloom Tug-Of-War

DEAR ABBY: It seems that my mother-in-law, who lives quite a distance, promised both my husband and his older sister the same piece of antique furniture. Both have admired this piece for a long time.

Recently, my husband returned from a visit to his mother's triumphantly bearing this treasure. It is now sitting in my living room, and I haven't the nerve to tell my sister-in-law we have it. (She lives near us and visits often.) I am dreading her visiting us and seeing it here, as I am sure the sparks will fly!

Frankly, the piece doesn't mean that much to me. I've tried to get my husband to offer it to his sister, but he flatly refused, saying, "This is the only decent thing I have from my mother's home; my sister has already managed to get everything else."

I suppose it's true, but I like my sister-in-law a lot, and I'm torn between the two of them. They are both very stubborn, and I need some advice on how to keep peace in the family.

IN THE MIDDLE

DEAR IN: You are not in the middle unless you put yourself there. If your sister-in-law has most of the heirlooms, and this is the only "decent" piece left, I can't blame your husband for feeling that this one belongs to him. Stay out of it. And while we're on that subject, read on:

DEAR ABBY: My grandmother is a wonderful, generous lady, but she has already caused a lot of hard feelings in the family because she keeps promising the same pieces of jewelry to three or four members of our family.

I don't want to appear grabby, but when my grandmother promised me her pearl necklace, I should have asked her to put it in writing.

OUT OF LUCK

DEAR OUT: If you had put those pearls of wisdom into action, you'd have soon found out whether your grandmother was stringing you along.

DEAR ABBY: Our parents' anniversary is coming up soon. Some of us would like to make them a gift of a family portrait including their children, their children's spouses and their grandchildren.

We want to limit this portrait to legitimate family members only, which would exclude the mother of one of the grandchildren and her son from a previous relationship.

We would like to include our brother and his legitimate child without including the woman he lives with and her illegitimate son. Is it possible to do this without causing hard feelings?

PROBLEMS IN SOUTHERN CALIF.

DEAR PROBLEMS: No. Abandon the idea. There are no illegitimate children; just illegitimate parents.

DEAR ABBY: Should you ever doubt that women are paid less than men for doing the same job, let me

Did you ever wonder who buys the cars driven on television by the Fall Guy or the Dukes of Hazzard when they're finished with them?

Our kids buy them.

Oh, the salesman doesn't come out in so many words and say that they've been dropped from a helicopter or sailed over a cliff, but there are a million little telltale signs.

The way the steering wheel shakes when you put the car in park. The paint on the fender that doesn't match the paint on the other fender, or the paint on the trunk, or the paint on the roof. The way the car runs only when a camera is rolling and a union director is on the scene.

You can't tell a kid anything about buying a car. If it shines, has bucket seats, and a name they can't pronounce, they'll go for it every time.

This is a report I received personally from my husband and son who had just been car shopping.

"Dad! I don't know why you're so suspicious. It was a great car."

"A 1979 car with 500 miles on it?"

"The salesman told us. The owner didn't use it a lot in his work."

"It was a getaway car."
"Mom, you should have seen it. It's a hatchback..."

"It was not a hatchback," interrupted my husband, "until a garage door fell on it."

"So, it's a little dink. It can be hampered out."

"The tailpipe is held on with electrician's tape, the windows are stationary, the springs are shot and the motor won't turn over."

"It's a classic," said our son. "In ten years that little baby will be worth its weight in gold."

Throughout the years, we have had no success whatsoever in advising our kids about the cars they buy. That is not to say we haven't been involved in them.

We towed one from L.A. to Phoenix (obviously the one driven by Jim Garner in "Rockford Files"). We had one on cement blocks in the driveway for six months (a dead ringer of the one driven by Gene Hackman in "The French Connection"). There was one we used to drive every week to a body shop to visit so we'd remember what it looked like (the one driven by Paul Newman in "Harper"). Oh, and there was the strange one that only ran after the motor was turned off (Obviously altered by the A-Team).

But they're classics.

Majority Of Working Mothers Feel Guilty About Leaving Kids

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine

The majority of American mothers work outside the home and they have one thing in common — guilt.

Working mothers fear their absence from the home will hurt their children but, according to an article in the April issue of Redbook, the experts advise them not to worry.

The consensus among social scientists, who have been researching the problem since the 1930s, holds that a mother's working has no predictable effect on children. What does matter is whether a mother feels good about whether she works or stays home.

Lois Hoffman, a psychologist at the University of Michigan and a researcher into maternal employment, said that when working mothers are happy about their decision to work, they are more likely to encourage their children's independence.

"These kids are proud of learning how to take care of themselves," said Sally Wendkos Olds, author of "The Working Parents Survival Guide." "The older kids of working mothers even speak a little condescendingly of their friends who have had less responsibility at home and are 'helpless.'"

The experts say working mothers must not only be comfortable with the decision to work, but also must be happy in their jobs. Some studies indicate children of mothers who are dissatisfied with their jobs show more signs of poor adjustment than children of nonworking mothers or mothers who like their work.

A common worry among working mothers is that working outside the home will interfere with the mother-child relationship. Not so, concluded Sally Kilmer in a review of the literature on day care published in "Current Topics in Early Childhood Education."

"Whatever the unique features of mother-child relationships," she wrote, "they clearly were maintained even though children began group care as young as two to three months of age and were away from their mothers up to 40 or more hours a week during the first three years of life."

Children of working mothers also may benefit by receiving extra paternal care. Not every father pitches in. But those who do, said Diane Ehrensaft, a psychologist at the Wright Institute in Berkeley, Calif., are rewarded with "a very intimate child-parent relationship that might not have developed between them if the mother were at home full time."

She added that having two working parents can broaden a child's perception of sex roles.

"In cases where both parents define themselves as 'primary' and parenting responsibilities are equally assumed," she said, "the children develop a broader sense of self. The roles they choose in life won't be dictated by their sex."

A survey on working mothers, conducted by the University of Arizona and representing about one-third of the country's pediatricians, found the majority of respondents viewed favorably the idea of working mothers.

One group differed, according to Redbook, and voted that children of employed women were at higher risk than those of nonworking mothers. The doctors who disapproved were older male pediatricians whose wives do not work outside the home.

Adult Tonsillitis: Persistent, Recurrent

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

Tonsillitis is not just a childhood disease — it also afflicts a surprisingly large number of adults.

While it is not a dangerous infection, according to an article in a recent issue of Cosmopolitan, it can be annoyingly persistent — and recurrent.

The tonsils are masses of bacteria-fighting lymphoid tissue with a porous surface of 12 to 20 mucus-lined pits, called crypts.

Once thought useless and routinely removed in childhood, today they are believed to play a role in immunological development and, although their function is not clear, they are no longer casually removed.

Symptoms include severe sore throat, fever, swollen glands, earache and general weakness.

"Penicillin is still the best drug to fight tonsillitis," said Dr. W. Shain Schley, associate professor of clinical otolaryngology at New York Hospital-Cornell Medical School. "Allergic patients are given erythromycin."

He also prescribes that patients "stay home, keep warm and avoid drafts." It is important to use your entire prescription — an incomplete course of antibiotics allows bacteria to become resistant to the drug.

Proper bed rest alone will help the body rid itself of tonsillitis without medication.

"Recovery just takes a lot longer," said Dr. Lester Coleman, attending surgeon at New York's Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital.

Unfortunately, relapses and recurrences are hard to prevent, particularly among active women.

"You can get reinfected when something lowers your resistance: stress, a chill, bad weather, exertion," Schley said, adding that tonsillectomy is reserved for chronic cases.

"This is a controversial subject, and one must examine each case separately," he said. "In general, however, most doctors feel that at least three episodes of tonsillitis per year for two consecutive years qualify a patient for surgery, as do five episodes in one year."

Specialists also recommend removing healthy tissue if it becomes so enlarged that it interferes with breathing and swallowing — the reason for Olympic skater Linda Fratianne's 1978 tonsillectomy.

Doctors generally wait to operate until the active infection subsides. The average juvenile spends 48 hours in the hospital for a tonsillectomy, while an adult may be hospitalized for several days. Surgery usually is performed under general anesthesia. Complications are rare.

Adults seldom tolerate tonsillectomy as well as children.

"Their tonsils are likely to be larger, with more adhesions, so dissection is more difficult," Schley said.

Acute postoperative discomfort lasts about five days for children, but eight to 10 days for their elders.

For pain, doctors prescribe soft food and painkillers such as Demerol, codeine or Tylenol with codeine. Eating even foods such as ice cream or soup can be painful.

"All anyone really needs is a couple of sodas for fluid and sugar," Manhattan's Coleman said.

Anyone contemplating tonsillectomy should keep a record of their illnesses, Cosmopolitan advises, and be sure their doctor isolates the cause to help in making a decision about surgery.

"Surgery will not eliminate sore throats entirely," Coleman said. "However, it may reduce their frequency and severity."

Trade

It was a bad week on the foreign trade front. There was a Commerce Department report the February trade deficit climbed to $11.4 billion during the month; 11 percent higher than January's figure and the highest monthly imbalance since September.

There was Japan's announcement it would export 25 percent more cars and trucks to the United States in fiscal 1985. (This was the "restraint" in exports indicated by the Japanese government.) And that blew the lid off congressional cool.

All the pent-up frustration, worries and resentment hit the fan. It was a prelude to things that may follow.

The Senate unanimously voted a furious resolution calling for retaliation unless Japan opened its own markets to American goods. The House was no less angry.

We'd look for Tokyo to say, "Hey, we're willing to talk." But over the years Tokyo has always been willing to talk and somehow they rarely give much of anything in exchange. The same barriers to American goods remain in effect.

It's no accident our largest deficit in foreign trade is with Japan. They want it that way and have no scruples about setting conditions that effectively keep the balance sharply in their favor. They have been told often Washington is averse to "trade wars," and have long used that knowledge.

The Senate resolution, coupled with strong sentiments in the House, may influence the administration to do more than talk tough. Even the White House could get tired of being a punching bag.

A large sale of telecommunications equipment to Japan is in the wind. It could be that Tokyo will argue that deal will counterbalance its own sharp increase in automotive exports, but it would be stretching the facts beyond resemblance to reality.

And this, mind you, is just Act I.

Harmony?

Whatever happened to those assurances of harmony between the administrative and legislative branches of N.C. government during the first weeks of Martin's incumbency?

Recently it appears to have deteriorated into nonstop feuding. That is not good.

There is always the risk that in a heated exchange incautious words may be spoken that could forever rupture harmonious government. We can't afford that.

Tar Heel voters sent a new governor and an army of lawmakers to Raleigh for one thing: to do their level best for our North Carolina. That "level best" does not include playing games of one-upmanship.

Come on, people! The campaigning and elections are now history. It's time to get this show really on the road.

Enjoying Life While You Can

BOCA RATON, Fla. — Public utility executives from 17 Southeastern states, speaking a little sunshine, recently assembled here. Their principal guest speaker was Louisiana's Sen. Bennett Johnston. He rained all over them.

Johnston is the top-ranking Democrat on the Senate's Committee on Energy and Natural Resources. When it comes to the production of electric power, he is probably the most knowledgeable member of the Senate. When Johnston speaks, everybody listens.

He told the executives he recently had made a study of prospective electric power rates in his own states. Over the next five years, he said, rates for residential consumers in Louisiana will go up by 50 percent to 80 percent. By 1990 these rates will be four times what they were in 1975. "I believe the trend holds true nationwide."

Increases of that magnitude, he predicted, would set off a "political firestorm." Utilities will be operating in an atmosphere of almost total hostility, from industry, from consumers, from regulatory agencies, from a critical press.

Why the gloomy forecast? Johnston recalled the happy days when life was reasonably predictable for utility executives. The rule was that demand for electric power would increase by a factor of 8 percent a year — and year after year these projections were on the nose. In those days a utility president could predict not only his demand but also the cost of capital, the cost and time of construction, and the prospective rate of return on investment.

Nothing is so easily predictable now. Most projections of demand now range between growth rates of 3.5 percent to 4.8 percent a year. The utility that relies upon the old 8 percent favor is steering a risky course. At these lower levels of expectation, by the year 2000 the United States will need between 300 and 400 new 1,000-megawatt plants that have not yet been planned.

What will these new plants cost? It depends upon the cost of capital, the rate of inflation and the uncertainties of construction. None of these factors can be surely predicted. Utilities face a dilemma: to build or not to build. If companies take a course that is too prudent, they may be risking rotating blackouts; homes and factories might find their power on for two hours and off for two hours. The companies would properly be accused of preventing economic growth in their service areas. But if companies overbuild, at the skyrocketing cost of plant construction, they risk "varying degrees of disaster — bankruptcy, dilution of stockholders' equity, and triple-B bond ratings."

The prospect, in brief, is for a "political revolution of a kind, quality and intensity that has never been known in this country." Most of our people could tighten their budgets for food and clothing; they could do without certain expenses for entertainment and transportation, but they cannot do without power. Said Johnston dryly: "We've gotten used to the electric light." If power is not available, or if power is available only at what is regarded as exorbitant cost, the public will be howling.

The senator had a few suggestions. The howling will not be quite so loud, he said, if the utilities launch an intensive effort to educate the public in the costs of building new plants. More utilities should switch to gas-fired plants. New technology offers hope for clean coal-burning plants that will not contribute to acid rain.

Johnston still is sold on nuclear energy, even though 108 projected nuclear plants have been canceled and no new ones have been ordered since 1978. The problem, he said, lies in the "highly legalistic, confrontational, adversarial, paper-chasing, lawyer's delight" of a nuclear licensing proceeding. Europe and Japan build nuclear plants in six years; here it takes 12. We have to do better or we will have to forget the nukes entirely.

Outside the hall where Johnston spoke, the sun was shining, the water was sparkling and a nice breeze was weaving through the palms. Enjoy life while you can, the senator seemed to be saying, for the utilities are approaching a winter that will be 15 years longer.

A Battle Over Status And Turf

WASHINGTON — When Gen. Vernon A. Walters handed Secretary of State George Shultz a letter recently "resigning" as President Reagan's choice for U.N. ambassador because of limitations the secretary had imposed on him, a startled Shultz waved it off with a time-buying remark: "I'm not empowered to act on that."

Shultz, protecting his diplomatic turf, felt trapped. If he accepted the letter, he would run afoul of the president, who very much wanted Walters to succeed Jeane Kirkpatrick at the United Nations. If he refused it, he ran the risk of Walters getting the right to attend National Security Council meetings, as he desired.

Shultz's effort to buy time failed. Walters will succeed Mrs. Kirkpatrick with the status of the job (including attendance at NSC meetings) undiminished, as he had been promised when first offered it. But Shultz and his allies in the Foreign Service bureaucracy have lost only a round. Mostly, they have been winning their struggle for a traditional foreign policy controlled by the career service, a battle waged daily on multiple fronts.

That struggle has added new tension to the relationship between secretary of state and U.N. ambassador, strained since Dwight Eisenhower elevated the status of Henry Cabot Lodge in 1953. The difficulty of treating a subordinate as a Cabinet and NSC colleague was enlarged when Mrs. Kirkpatrick evolved as the conservative movement's militantly anti-communist answer to State Department caution.

Relief at State over Mrs. Kirkpatrick's departure has been mitigated by the identity of her successor. Dick Walters, who began his diplomatic career as Richard Nixon's interpreter and has flourished as Ronald Reagan's troubleshooter, has all the potential of becoming a darling of the Right, equally troublesome to the elite corps of foreign policy officers as Mrs. Kirkpatrick. Consequently, word was leaked months ago that Mrs. Kirkpatrick's successor would sit on neither the Cabinet nor Security Council.

Efforts to reduce Walters from Cabinet status failed quickly, but ambiguities arose about his participation in NSC deliberations (where the president makes major national security decisions). On March 22, Walters went to the White House to see NSC Director Robert McFarlane in hopes of clearing away those ambiguities.

While waiting in the lobby, Walters was informed that "the president is ready to talk to you" on the telephone. Amazed, he picked up the phone and for the first time was officially asked by the president himself to take the U.N. job (Shultz had insisted on making the original offer in Reagan's behalf). Walters naturally said yes.

Minutes later, McFarlane received Walters and informed him of the decision privately reached by Shultz and the White House excluding Walters from regular NSC attendance. Having just told Reagan himself that he accepted the job, Walters wondered how he could now refuse. He resolved his dilemma three days later when he forced the issue by handing his "resignation" to Shultz.

Walters really did want out when he handed Shultz that letter. Indeed, had it not been for private counsel from no less than Richard Nixon, George Bush and William Casey, he might have yielded to despondency and really walked away.

Instead, he followed Nixon's advice to "hang tough." From Vice President Bush and Casey, former and present directors of the CIA (where Walters served Nixon as deputy director), came quiet encouragement. When Shultz lobbied the president to keep Walters out of the Cabinet as the first step toward blocking him from the NSC, Bush "wouldn't buy it," one high-level presidential adviser told us.

On mid-morning the day after Walters handed his letter to Shultz, he was telephoned by McFarlane in a call that finally settled his status on the NSC. He would have exactly the same status, McFarlane told Walters, as Jeane Kirkpatrick. That was not full membership (there are only four statutory NSC members) but would mean fairly regular attendance at meetings.

Since that is all Walters ever asked, the battle over status and turf that almost unhinged one of Reagan's better appointments has ended its first phase. The cause of that struggle lies not only in the peculiarity of a single, unique ambassador with policymaking powers but also in the secretary's determination to conduct an orderly foreign policy with the help of the career service.

Dick Walters sitting regularly at the NSC table continued to threaten Shultz's objective. That explains why the tense backstage events are likely to be repeated in the future.

Is There Progress In The Trade Talks?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Recent statements by the Reagan administration on the status of U.S.-Japanese trade negotiations suggest that only modest progress is being made on opening up Japanese markets to American goods.

President Reagan and Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone agreed three months ago to tackle the ballooning U.S. trade deficit, but despite increasing pressure from Congress for sanctions to force remedies by the Japanese, the administration is taking a soft line and publicly discussing the trade talks in often confusing and murky terms.

At times, the administration is almost pleading with the Congress and the public to believe progress is being made.

In a printed statement Tuesday, the State and Commerce departments said, "We have been making progress." The word "have" was underlined for emphasis.

The administration had scheduled a press briefing by four top trade officials on Tuesday. Ten minutes before the scheduled briefing, the session was canceled.

Instead, the eight paragraph joint statement from the two Cabinet departments was handed out. White House spokesman Robert Sims said the statement was issued in lieu of the briefing because "we want to be precise about it."

On Monday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said "the government of Japan made new commitments on trade issues" during a weekend meeting between Nakasone and two U.S. envoys. But Speakes refused to provide details.

However, in Tokyo on Tuesday, Japanese newspapers quoted Nakasone as telling the Japanese parliament, "I made no new promises."

"The fact is that the prime minister has given an accelerated prominence to the resolution of some issues that we do believe are critical," Lionel Olmer, the under secretary of commerce for international trade and one of the envoys who met with Nakasone, said Tuesday night on PBS' "MacNeil-Lehrer Newshour."

On Jan. 2, Reagan and Nakasone met in Japan and agreed to try to lower barriers to U.S. sales in Japan of telecommunications products, electronics, forest products and pharmaceuticals and medical equipment.

The initial talks between the two countries have focused on the telecommunications market because on Monday, Japan ended its government-owned telephone monopoly.

The statement issued Tuesday said, "The United States and Japan have reached basic understandings on the regulatory regime for the telecommunications sector in Japan, which went into effect April 1."

Echoing previous reports from Tokyo, the statement said Moriya Koyama, Japan's vice minister of posts and telecommunications, had given Olmer assurances that "standards and requirements would be further reduced with the aim of making the regulatory process equitable between Japan and the U.S. and will be based on the principle that the choice of terminal equipment and communications protocols should be left to the user."

"The simplification of standards and requirements is to be completed, with the participation of U.S. experts, within 60 days," the statement said, adding that Nakasone "gave his assurances that American companies would be represented on bodies that set standards and make rules, and that this too would be done at an early date."

The statement added that U.S. negotiators will be leaving for Japan soon to continue technical discussions.

The actions noted in the statement do not go much beyond progress

Olmer reported in mid-March. The statement also said the United States "will continue to pursue further market opening actions to remove formal and informal barriers in the telecommunications area."

Although Nakasone has given assurances of help, Olmer acknowledged that in Japan's telecommunications sector "there're an awful lot of vested interests at levels way below the prime minister's who don't want to see the liberalized trade take place."

Nonetheless, Tuesday's statement contained remarks apparently aimed at members of Congress who want to see strong action against Japan.

Strength For Today

After Jesus had been crucified and had risen from the dead, he was with his disciples for 40 days.

During that time he talked with them about the kingdom of God. After listening to what he had to say about the universal spiritual kingdom of God, his disciples inquired of him eagerly: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom of Israel?" After 40 days dwelling upon themes that were spiritual and universal in their application, the disciples were still thinking in terms of the restoration of their nation.

The Lord's answer was, "Ye shall receive powers." With that power (which we call the Holy Spirit), the problems of life — individual, national, world-wide — would be worked out. You and I do not know what God has in store for us, but if we open our hearts and receive the Spirit, then we will be led into the ways of truth.

Turkish Jet Hits City, Killing 13

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — A Turkish air force jet crashed today into a business district in the western city of Balikesir, killing at least 13 people and injuring 21, a government official said.

News agency reports said the plane was an F-104 and that one pilot was killed, but that the co-pilot ejected safely and suffered only minor injuries.

Provincial Gov. Bayram Ozen said the aircraft crashed into a coffeehouse in the middle of furniture and carpenter shops at the outskirts of Balikesir.

The governor told The Associated Press by telephone that the death toll could mount as rescue workers cleared away rubble.

Ozen declined to give any information about the aircraft, saying the Turkish military would have a separate announcement on that.

The independent Hurriyet news agency said the F-104 Starfighter was on a training flight when it developed mechanical failure.

The jet exploded as it hit the ground and touched off a fire which quickly spread to surrounding shops, Ozen said.

"We put out the fire. Now we are clearing the rubble and we shall not know the exact death toll until this is completed," he said.

Study Group Reports Bias In Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private human rights group said today there are "serious human rights problems" in Nicaragua, many of which have resulted from emergency measures taken by the government to combat anti-communist resistance forces.

A 159-page report by The Lawyers Committee for International Human Rights focuses on a special system of popular tribunals established in 1983 to try people accused of national security offenses.

The report also faults the Reagan administration, for making "seriously misleading and exaggerated" allegations of human rights abuses by the Nicaraguan government.

While asserting that the rebel forces are engaged in an "armed — and often brutal — insurgency," the investigators said it finds some aspects of the government's response, including the creation of the tribunals, to be "disturbing and unwarranted."

The study, titled "Nicaragua: Revolutionary Justice," said the tribunals — known as Popular Anti-Somoza Tribunals — have an institutional bias in support of the Sandinista government.

It noted that the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights has said the tribunals are "composed of members of the militia, reservists, militants and supporters of the Sandinista National Liberation Front, in other words, the political enemies of the accused. As a result, their impartiality, fairness and independence of judgment are seriously compromised."

Th report noted that only one member of the three-member tribunals is a lawyer, while the other two are selected on the basis of their leadership in pro-Sandinista political groups.

Nonetheless, the report said the tribunals are capable of justice in individual cases. As an example, it said, many Miskito Indians charged with collaboration with rebel forces were granted amnesty after their cases were presented before a tribunal.

The report is based on four investigative missions to Nicaragua over the past 15 months, including a January 1985 visit. During each visit, interviews were conducted with Interior Minister Tomas Borge, Supreme Court justices and many others.

President Reagan's description of Nicaragua as a "totalitarian dungeon" has fostered a climate that is "anything but conducive to constructive criticism," the report said.

It also accuses the administration of "substantial responsibility" for abuses committed by the resistance forces because of the U.S. program of assistance for that group.

The United States provided $80 million to the so-called "contras" until last spring when funds were cut off by the Congress. The administration is now seeking $14 million in additional assistance.

According to the report, the contras are responsible for a "pattern of killings, beatings and violent harassment of unarmed civilian non-combatants."

The report said there have been instances of human rights violations committed by Nicaraguan security forces but that the government has taken a number of corrective measures. As an example, it said that 13 soldiers were convicted in March 1984 for abuses committed in Pantasma.

Jeane Kirkpatrick Officially Makes Change To GOP

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former U.N. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick has jumped to the Republican Party, but one of her allies among conservative Democrats says he doesn't expect her political conversion to signal a rush to the GOP.

"It seems to me to be less than a landslide," said Ben Wattenberg, a founder along with Kirkpatrick and others of the Coalition for a Democratic Majority.

Wattenberg said Mrs. Kirkpatrick and Elliott Abrams, an assistant secretary of state, were the only two CDM members who switched party affiliation, although several others had gone to work in foreign policy and defense positions in the Reagan administration.

A fellow at the American Enterprise Institute, Wattenberg made his comments Wednesday shortly after Mrs. Kirkpatrick informed Montgomery County, Md., election officials she wanted her registration switched from Democrat to Republican.

Wattenberg said the bright side for the Democrats might be that her defection "in some way, large or small, may say to Democrats, now we've lost somebody who's a very bright person, who's an admired person. We have got to do things so we don't start losing people like that again."

He called Mrs. Kirkpatrick someone who expresses her views "about as well and elegantly and intelligently as anyone in America. In that sense, she is surely a great asset to the Republican Party." There was no doubt GOP officials agreed.

At a news conference, Maureen Reagan, the president's daughter, said, "We are very thrilled," and Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf Jr. chimed in, "I can think of no greater pleasure to me."

The two accompanied Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who said that despite the fact she "was born a Democrat" and "grew up a Democrat," she felt the party had moved away from her.

"I am tired of swimming against the current of my own party," she said.

Recently, she added, when people asked her, "Aren't you a Democrat?" she had increasing difficulty answering honestly.

"I didn't feel like a Democrat anymore," she said.

Her conversion apparently did not diminish her admiration for some past Democratic leaders.

"If Harry Truman were running for president today, I would vote for him," said Mrs. Kirkpatrick. She noted that another Truman supporter back in 1948, when she cast her first vote, was Ronald Reagan.

Street Opens, Car Slips In Sinkhole

DALLAS (AP) — Joanne Przyborowski had just turned into Lakeland Drive when Lakeland Drive suddenly turned in on her.

As she attempted to ease her Lincoln through the water that gushed from cracks in the street Wednesday morning, Mrs. Przyborowski felt the front wheels begin to sink.

And before she knew it, Lakeland Drive had become more lake than land — more like a car pool.

The grill and hood quickly slipped six feet through the deteriorating asphalt until the entire front end was submerged in a rapidly widening, water-filled sinkhole.

"It started coming in the bottom of the door on my side, and all we could do was just scramble to get out," said Betty Benningfield, Mrs. Przyborowski's passenger. "By the time we did, the water was up to the windows."

Neither woman was injured, but the car may be a total loss. And a soaked and shocked Mrs. Przyborowski was so stunned by the mishap she was unable to talk about it without breaking into uncontrollable sobs Wednesday afternoon.

Airliner Veers

LONDON (AP) — Passengers said a Trans World Airlines Boeing 747 bound for New York veered off the runway as it prepared to take off, but the pilot brought the plane to a stop and no one was injured.

A statement from TWA's London office said only that "on taxiing, prior to takeoff, the nose wheel went off the taxiway onto soft ground" at London's Heathrow Airport. Passengers said the pilot told them a hydraulic failure in the nose wheel caused him to lose control of the jet.

The hole in the east Dallas street was caused by a ruptured 12-inch water main, said a Dallas Water Utilities official. First reports of water spewing up through the pavement came at 7:09 a.m., and an emergency crew was dispatched, she said.

By the time they arrived a half-hour later, the hole had consumed a 15-by-10-foot chunk of pavement and eaten away the soil to a depth of about 10 feet.

Mrs. Benningfield said she drives to work on Lakeland Drive "to avoid dangerous highways."

GIANT POTHOLE — Workmen remove an automobile from a giant pothole in Dallas Wednesday. A leaky water main had caused the earth under the street to crumble, letting the street fall in. The car, driven by Joanne Przyborowski, sank as the pavement gave way. (AP Laserphoto)

Millions Sought To Restore Spire

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
SALISBURY, England (AP) — England's tallest cathedral spire, after rising majestically for 670 years above Wiltshire meadows, is crumbling, and those who love it are hoping $7.8 million worth of concern will save it.

When the 404-foot gray stone spire went up, roads were rebuilt so travelers crossing the chalky, gentle hills of the Salisbury Plain could always have it in view.

After a 380-step climb that leaves the out-of-shape out of breath, Roy Spring, clerk of works in Salisbury, emerges at the top where the spire starts and pokes his finger into a crumbling block of stone.

"You see how it is," he said. "I don't say it's going to fall down next week, but weather and pollution have worn the stonework so thin in places that it could give way and cause the whole spire to collapse. And it weighs 6,400 tons."

The $7.8 million that protectors hope to raise is "a lot of money, but we either sweep the problem under the carpet for our successors to deal with or do a proper job now," says Spring.

Peter Taylor, a consultant engineer, has devised steel girdles that will be bolted inside the spire while the defective stones are replaced by masons working on scaffolding outside.

One reason for the high cost is that specially designed, wind-resistant scaffolding must rest on the cathedral walls, not the tower, involving a huge bridging operation.

"I'm very sure that Americans would love to take a 14th century spire off our hands," Spring says, replying to a suggestion that it would be cheaper to remove the spire than to repair it.

"But this cathedral and its spire grows on you and takes hold of you," says, recounting the oft-told story of how the roads were rerouted for viewers' sake.

The cathedral was built in 30 years during the reign of King Henry III and finished in 1265. Then the tower was raised — first to a height of 220 feet and then the 184-foot top was added — and completed by 1315, said Spring.

"I disagree with all the guidebooks, including the ones we sell, which say it was 50 years later, and I've examined every inch of it, swinging in a bo's'n's chair from the capstone," he said.

Salisbury Cathedral has no royal burials. It does have a contemporary copy of the 1215 Magna Carta, the oldest clock in England and the tomb of Sir Thomas Gorges, an Elizabethan ancestor of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, the leader in founding the state of Maine.

Immortalized in the paintings of John Constable, the cathedral symbolizes the peaceful beauty of the English countryside. It is surrounded by lawns, and swans glide down the rivers that flow beside it.

The financial appeal, which is also to pay for repairs to the tower and the west front, will be launched with a service attended by Prince Charles, the fund's patron. No government help is expected.

Spring plans to start on the project this winter by reinforcing the spire.

"Because I'm a medieval man myself, we shall use only tried and tested methods," he said.

"When you get down to it, there has to be a man with a mallet and chisel and a lump of stone."

Americans contributed $1 million to a 1974 appeal to save the sister Anglican cathedral at Canterbury from decay.

"We plan to ask the people in the diocese first and then the rest of Britain. Not until we've got a tidy sum will we go abroad, to the United States and the Commonwealth," said the director-general of the appeal, Nicholas Tate.

Edward Naylor, a 67-year-old retired engineer and his wife Jean, from Chapel Hill, N.C., who were visiting friends in neighboring Dorset, dropped a donation in the box toward the cathedral's $1,700 daily operating costs.

"We could see the spire from everywhere, so we had to come," Naylor said.

Neves Has Surgery

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — President-elect Tancredo Neves, 75, underwent his fifth abdominal operation in three weeks today, the government said. A spokesman said Neves also developed respiratory problems.

Press spokesman Antonio Britto said a minor operation had been needed to remove two new spots of infection found in his abdominal wall.

He said Neves was "okay" following today's surgery, in which an incision of about 1½ inches was made. He said the president-elect had developed respiratory problems.

Britto said doctors had reasons for optimism because of what he called Neves' physical resistance and determination, but said his overall situation "requires caution."

Doctors at Sao Paulo's Clinical Hospital, which is among the largest and best-equipped in South America, were examining Neves' lungs, but so far had not found any indications of pneumonia, the spokesman said.

SPIRE APPEAL — With Salisbury Cathedral and its tall spire as a backdrop, Roy Spring talks about an upcoming appeal for $7.8 million to save the monument. The stonework in the spire, tallest in England, is crumbling after more than 600 years. (AP Laserphoto)

GAO Says Radar Effort By Air Force Is Wasteful

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force is wasting $1.2 billion by developing its own radar jamming equipment for combat aircraft while at the same time working on a similar jammer with the Navy, congressional investigators have concluded.

The General Accounting Office also concluded the Air Force began production of new jammers without operational testing even though the system it is replacing proved unreliable.

The previous jammers, which are electronic devices that emit electronic signals that interfere with radar-controlled air defense weapons, broke down so often that a top Pentagon official said he found it "difficult to support continued production. ..."

The investigators were to present their findings today in testimony prepared for a House Government Operations subcommittee. Air Force witnesses were set to defend the program — mostly behind closed doors because much of the information is classified.

An Air Force official, speaking only on condition he not be named, said in an interview the GAO findings on waste are incorrect because the Air Force cannot use the Navy-compatible jammers in its older aircraft.

Newer Air Force planes will use the compatible system, and the service has ordered 1,800 of those jammers, up from an initial requirement of 580, the official said.

But he contended it would cost "four times more" to install the compatible system in older planes than to adapt the Air Force's own jammers.

"The down time of the plane would be 90 to 120 days" to install the compatible system, the official added.

The Air Force installed its first jammers during the Vietnam War. A sophisticated substitute called the ALQ-131 was produced from 1979-84, and the new Air Force-only version, scheduled for initial delivery this month, is an improved model of the ALQ-131.

The jammer from the joint program is called an ASPJ, and it is due for installation on Navy and Air Force planes in the spring of 1988.

"Savings expected to result from use of a common jammer were estimated to be $1.2 billion," according to testimony of Frank C. Conahan, director of the national security and international affairs division of the GAO.

"Our review showed that rather than promote common use of ASPJ as intended by various committees of the Congress, the Air Force has decreased its planned use."

"It has continued acquisition of several versions of the ALQ-131, increased its planned use of that jammer, and is developing upgraded versions of other jammers. As a result, potential cost savings and other benefits inherent in common service programs have so far not been fully realized."

Development and production cost of the two separate systems is expected to reach nearly $8 billion over the lifetime of the programs, according to committee chairman Jack Brooks, D-Texas.

Referring to the projected savings of a joint program, Brooks said, "That's just another way of saying that $1.2 billion will be wasted over the lifetime of the systems if the Air Force continues its present course of separate development."

The GAO investigators also quoted from the June 1983 memo to the Air Force by Dr. Richard DeLauer, under secretary of defense for research and engineering.

DeLauer wrote, "I am disturbed that after almost seven years of continual test, fix, and retest, the ALQ-131 has not been shown to be effective, reliable or maintainable in an operational sense."

"In light of the previous track record ... I find it difficult to support continued production of this system."

The Air Force official interviewed about the program said there was "poor reliability" initially, but contended "we increased the reliability by more than double."

Safety Panel Plans Study Of All-Terrain Vehicles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Consumer Product Safety Commission, reacting to a sharp increase in deaths and injuries involving three-wheel all-terrain vehicles, is launching an investigation of the increasingly popular recreational machines.

The commission voted unanimously Wednesday to set up a special task force to look into the dangers of the vehicles, known as ATVs. It also launched the formal process that could lead to safety regulations or even a recall of the machines.

The commission's action also included the announcement of a series of public hearings on the subject and a call for information from the public on problems with these vehicles.

Three-wheel all-terrain vehicles, which have swept onto the market in the last three years, are used most often in rural areas of the West, Southwest and New England, carrying riders through woods and over fields in much the same way snowmobiles are used in winter.

Because of the three-wheel tricycle-like design, however, problems have been encountered in turning corners, and roll-overs have been reported in many accidents.

Reports collected from hospital emergency rooms indicated 14 deaths and 8,585 injuries in connection with ATVs in 1982. Those figures rose to 42 deaths and 27,554 injuries in 1983, and incomplete reports show at least 48 deaths and 66,956 injuries last year.

"The time for talk is over; the time for action is at hand," Commission Chairman Terrence Scanlon said.

Drug Raid Turns Up Corpse, Arms Cache

WILTON, Calif. (AP) — Deputies in an armored truck crashed an electrified fence and booby-trapped front door to get into a farmhouse fortress and found a drug laboratory, a cache of automatic weapons and a decomposed corpse, authorities said.

Nine people, including two juveniles, were arrested in the house, which was guarded by pit bull terriers and bulletproof windows that deflected tear gas canisters, said Sacramento County sheriff's spokesman Roger Dickson.

The Wednesday raid capped a two-month probe stemming from reports by suspicious neighbors who told police about the log-and-wire electric fence, the five pit bulls that wandered through the acre of land around the house and armed residents mowing the yard.

"They knew something was going on," said Sheriff's Sgt. Morris Bailey.

The drug laboratory was capable of producing $500,000 worth of "speed," or methamphetamine, each day, said state narcotics agent Joseph Lindsay.

City-County Narcotics Lt. Hal O'Kane said the suspects probably distributed to at least a hundred dealers. "If you look at it that way, potentially their customers numbered in the thousands," he said.

"When I heard all the noise this morning it didn't surprise me," said neighbor Judy Conn. She said the house was always "dead quiet" during the day but at night "cars started pulling up."

About 40 deputies surrounded the house, located in an area of farms and isolated mobile homes 22 miles southeast of Sacramento, and told the residents to surrender, Bailey said. Several people, including women and teen-agers, emerged from the home, but two men refused to come out, he said.

The raiders, armed with search warrants and firing tear gas that was deflected by bulletproof windows, used patrol cars to ram the fence and a 12½-ton armored truck to crash the door, touching off a blast that sent flames through the house, which was demolished, Dickson and Bailey said.

The truck was one of two on loan from the Rancho Seco nuclear power plant, which is required to have such vehicles under federal law, Bailey said.

Two men, one with an automatic pistol, fled the flames and were arrested outside, Bailey said. Those arrested were held on drug and arson charges.

Investigators found the badly decomposed corpse in an automobile baggage carrier amid loose debris in a barn near the house. The corpse could not immediately be identified.

Rifles, drug manufacturing equipment and instruction manuals, cartridge belts, ammunition boxes, gun barrels and various automatic weapons, including an automatic rifle, were found in the charred debris. The house also contained a sophisticated machine shop, including an expensive lathe, Bailey said.

Numerous rounds of ammunition were detonated by the fire, he said.

Hours after the raid, officers searched the grounds, poking through burned timbers, he said. A large barn at the rear of the property contained equipment to build a second drug laboratory.

Dickson identified the adults arrested as Edward Kenney Jr., 40; Janice Kenney, 36; Edward Kenney Jr. II, 18; Diane Martinez, 31, of Sacramento; Joey Coleman, 18, of Acampo; Laura Gunter, 20, and Barbara Gunter, 18, both of Wilton. The Kenneys lived in the house that was raided.

The Kenneys, Ms. Martinez and Coleman were charged with manufacture of methamphetamines and possession of automatic weapons. Seventeen-year-old and 14-year-old boys and the Gunters were charged with conspiracy to manufacture methamphetamines. The male Kenneys were also charged with arson.

The adults, except for the senior Kenney, were held on $500,000 bond. Kenney, who scuffled with officers, was taken to University Medical Center for observation. The two boys were taken to juvenile hall.

Big Waist Pays Off

GREECE, N.Y. (AP) — Ken Dutcher admits he's no Cinderella, but after all, he didn't have to wedge his beefy foot into a magic slipper.

Instead, the rotund Dutcher won a $500 wardrobe for filling out a pair of extra-spacious pants on display at a new store for big, tall and short men.

The charcoal-gray trousers are size 76, meaning they have a waistline of 6 feet, 4 inches.

"Did I feel like Cinderella? No, I felt like King Kong," he said Wednesday. "When I got to the door, I didn't have to introduce myself, that's for sure."

Dutcher, 42, an unemployed truck driver who lives in the Utica suburb of Clark Mills, is 5-feet-9 and says he weighs about 500 pounds.

"There's a lot of heavy people, and they won't come out of the walls," he said. "They all send their wives or girlfriends or whatever to buy their clothes for them."

"I mean, let's face it, heavy people are embarrassed," he said. "If you've got a sense of humor about it, it doesn't bother you."

U.S. Will Restrict Soviet Fishing Fleet

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department has given notice that it plans to sharply restrict the right of the Soviet Union to fish in U.S. waters because of a Soviet violation of international whaling rules.

Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige announced Wednesday that the Soviets face a 50 percent reduction in the size of the catch they will be allowed to harvest in U.S. waters for the remainder of the year.

The decision, which will not become final until after a review by Secretary of State George Shultz, marked the first time the United States has moved to impose penalties against another country for failing to honor whaling quotas established by the International Whaling Commission.

Baldrige said he was acting because the Soviet harvest of 2,403 minke whales in waters off Antarctica from November through March exceeded the quota of 1,941 whales set by the commission.

Under U.S. law, Baldrige must restrict a country's fishing rights within the U.S. 200-mile territorial limit if that country is not abiding by IWC rules.

The Soviets had just begun fishing in U.S. waters again last fall after the United States lifted a restriction imposed following the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan in 1979.

For the first six months of 1985, the Soviets had been granted a quota of 22,000 metric tons of fish. They have already harvested about 36 percent of that quota.

The ban will mean the loss of 50 percent of the remaining quota for the year.

Chemicals In Vegetables May Help Fend Off Cancer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — A class of cancer-preventing chemicals in cabbage, brussels sprouts, broccoli and cauliflower might be used to protect people against toxic compounds and make radiation treatments and chemotherapy safer, a researcher says.

The chemicals, called dithiolthiones, inhibited cancer formation, reduced radiation damage and protected against harmful toxic materials when fed to rats and mice, said Dr. Ernest Bueding, a pharmacologist at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore.

He said radiation therapy and chemotherapy to combat cancer sometimes damage non-cancer cells, spurring formation of other tumors after the original cancer has been treated successfully.

Because dithiolthiones seem to protect healthy cells but not cancerous ones, they might be administered in conjunction with radiation or chemotherapy to prevent subsequent cancers, Bueding said Wednesday at the American Cancer Society's annual science writers' seminar.

Laboratory animals given dithiolthiones also were protected against the toxic effects of carbon tetrachloride, a common industrial chemical, and acetaminophen, the active ingredient of painkillers such as Tylenol, he said.

"Such protective effects could provide opportunities for reducing the hazards (to humans) associated with the exposure to, or administration of, these compounds," Bueding added. "Moreover, this type of protection may extend to other as yet untested toxic agents."

The National Academy of Sciences has previously reported scientific evidence indicating consumption of such vegetables as cabbage, brussels sprouts, broccoli and cauliflower is associated with a reduced incidence of cancer in humans.

The American Cancer Society and National Cancer Institute have recommended people eat more such vegetables — as well as other fruits and vegetables containing fiber — to reduce their cancer risk.

Bueding said his studies with rats and mice show "the prevention of cancer by vegetable diets could be accounted for, at least in part, by the presence of dithiolthiones in cruciferous vegetables," or vegetables of the mustard family, such as cabbage.

In addition to identifying these chemicals as cancer-preventing agents, Bueding said further research disclosed dithiolthiones enhanced specific defense mechanisms in the animals.

When the rats and mice were given dithiolthiones, their body tissues were found to contain increased levels of glutathione, a compound necessary for proper conversion of food to energy in cells. Glutathione also is involved in many processes that detoxify harmful materials in the body, Bueding said.

"Inactivation and subsequent excretion of toxic compounds, including carcinogens, prevents them from combining with vital compounds of the cell, thereby providing protection," he explained.

Bueding concluded, "Better understanding of the biological properties of dithiolthiones could be of value for the protection of man against injury by chemical and physical agents."

Dr. Saul B. Gusberg of New York's Mount Sinai School of Medicine said Bueding's research "has done a very important, interesting and delicious thing for us" by identifying dithiolthiones as the anti-cancer ingredient in vegetables.

However, he joked that the research may not help increase consumption of the beneficial vegetables because "some people say, 'What's life (like) eating brussels sprouts?'"

Penicillin Cures Type Of Arthritis

BOSTON (AP) — A decade after they discovered a strange form of arthritis called Lyme disease, Yale doctors say they may have found an effective way to cure it with penicillin, according to a report published today.

Lyme disease, which is spread by deer ticks, is becoming increasingly common along the Atlantic coast and in the northern Midwest. It is also found in foreign countries.

If given early, antibiotics can stop the disease. But advanced cases can result in a kind of joint inflammation that resembles rheumatoid arthritis.

In their latest research, doctors have found that injections of penicillin often seem to cure this arthritis.

The disease is caused by a variety of bacteria, known as a spirochete, that is carried by ticks called Ixodes dammini. The bugs, in turn, infest deer. Until now, doctors were unsure whether the bacteria itself causes the arthritis or whether it develops from a runaway immune response after the germ is gone.

"We are thrilled that a goodly percentage of these individuals are cured apparently by penicillin," said Dr. Stephen E. Malawista, "because

Five Local Thefts

Investigation is continuing into five thefts reported Wednesday to Greenville police.

Officer H.D. Hines said a radio-tape player was taken from a vehicle parked at 902 E. 14th St. in an incident reported at 9 a.m., while Officer D.R. Best said a go-kart frame was taken from 613 Norris St. in an incident reported at 12:45 p.m.

Sgt. D.A. Jackson said two refrigerators were taken from a building at Twin Oaks Condominiums on David Street and an electrical panel was taken from 907 Cherry Court in break-ins reported at 1:15 p.m. Officer S.D. Furr said a radio-cassette player was taken from a vehicle parked at the Space Castle on Greenville Boulevard in an incident reported at 9:10 p.m.

Possession Count

Larry Donnell Jackson, 31, of 104 Jossie Lane was arrested by Greenville police Wednesday on drug and weapons charges.

Sgt. D.D. Heinz said Jackson was taken into custody about 2 p.m. on charges of possession of marijuana and carrying a concealed weapon.

Rape Charges

Greenville police have arrested Joseph Harris, 16, of 110A Howard Circle, and two juveniles on first degree rape and first degree sexual offense charges.

Detective C.E. Weatherington said the three have been charged in connection with the rape of a 14-year-old girl in Greenville on Sept. 21, 1984.

The incident occurred in a house in the Moywood area, the officer said.

Fire Damaged Home

A home in the Sweetbriar neighborhood near Simpson was severely damaged by fire and smoke Wednesday afternoon.

Terry Payne, assistant county fire marshal, said approximately $20,000 damage resulted to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Morgan. Payne said the fire apparently started in a bedroom while the Morgans were away.

The Eastern Pines Fire Department, assisted by Simpson, responded to the 1:32 p.m. fire call.

Services Scheduled

Easter services will be conducted Friday through Sunday at New Covenant Holy Church.

The New Covenant Bible school will present a musical playlet, "Footprints of Jesus," Friday at 8 p.m. A joy night service Saturday will be led by the Rev. Devin Pickett, a high school student from Maple Hill, and the junior choir. Sunday worship at 11 a.m. will be conducted by the Rev. Ollie Harris and the combined choirs. At 6 p.m. Sunday, an Eastern program will be presented by the Sunday school.

Memorial Service

A memorial service and portrait unveiling honoring the late Bishop W.L. Jones will be held at 8 p.m. Friday at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church, corner of Hudson and Ward streets.

Jones was pastor of Mount Calvary for 28 years and a member of the United American Free Will Baptist denomination. Music at the memorial service will be provided by the Mount Calvary Mass Choir.

Quarterly Meeting

A quarterly conference will begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday at Corey's Chapel Free Will Baptist Church at Worthington Crossroad.

At 7:30 p.m. Saturday Holy Communion will be observed with the Rev. J.H. Wilkes and Burney's Chapel Church in charge.

Church school will be at 9:30 a.m. Sunday and at 11 a.m. Vice Bishop J.B. Taylor and Haddock Chapel Free Will Baptist Church will be in charge. Dinner is at 2 p.m. and at 3 p.m. the Rev. J.W. Randolph and Joe's Branch Church will be guests.

Free Clinic

A free blood pressure clinic will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday at West Greenville Recreation Center, corner of West Fifth and Nash streets.

Trained medical personnel will be on hand to check blood pressure. The clinic is sponsored by the pledges of Iota Kappa Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority.

Musical Program

A musical program will be held at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at Mayo's Missionary Baptist Church in Bethel featuring the Whichard Holy Church of Power Junior Choir and other groups.

Bundy Book Fair

Sam Bundy School will hold a book fair from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. through April 16, except 3:30-6:30 p.m. April 15, in the school media center.

Books are available for both students and parents. Proceeds go to the school.

Meals On Wheels

The Meals on Wheels program began Monday in Winterville with delivery of 14 meals. Volunteers in the program are Eldress Rhurama Knox and Mr. and Mrs. Les Jones. Program coordinator is Mrs. Eula Mae Jones.

Environmental Work

Eight senior students in the East Carolina University School of Art's environmental/interior design program have assembled an environmental installation for public viewing through Saturday.

The exhibition, located in the lobby of the Willis Building at First and Reade streets, is "post modernist" in style and composed of diverse materials, said Mindy Machanic, environmental design instructor.

"The show conveys a sense of a new place within the existing space," said Ms. Machanic. She said the installation features a small building within the larger space of the Willis Building, with a frieze consisting of plaster casts of the faces of the student artists.

Design students involved in the show are Angela Woodard, Pamela Westra Carson, Michael Steiner, Patti Harrill, Carol Tait, Tina Benson, Susan Kronz and Cynthia Popatak.

Easter Play

The Young People Christian League of Cherry Lane Free Will Baptist Church will sponsor an Easter play, "From Dark Morning Into Dawn," on Friday at 7:30 p.m.

Board Takes No Action On Pay

WILLIAMSTON — No action was taken by the Martin County Board of Education at its April meeting on a request for a pay supplement for county teachers.

The request was presented by Marie Robertson, president of the county chapter of the N.C. Association of Educators, who said the supplement is needed to attract teachers to the county. She spoke on behalf of the supplement committee, established earlier this year by the board of education.

The recommendation is for a pay supplement of 1 percent of a teacher's present pay, which would mean individual supplements ranging from $150 to $230 annually. The proposal, according to Mrs. Robertson, would cost the county about $60,000 annually.

Board Chairman Macon Holliday pointed out the board has asked for supplemental pay twice within the last five years. "I feel if the money is available and we can get it, this board would be in favor of a supplement," he said. Board member Zack Gurkin agreed, but commented "I think someone is going to have to be sold on it other than this board."

Republican Files Veto Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — A Republican state representative today filed a bill that would let the state's voters grant the governor veto power, saying the Legislature has become too powerful.

"The people of North Carolina deserve the right to decide whether the missing link in our check and balance system should be approved," said Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore.

Flanked by other GOP lawmakers at a news conference, Craven said his bill would schedule a statewide referendum on the veto for November 1986.

If approved, the amendment would allow the governor to reject entire bills and specific items in the budget. A three-fifths vote of the House and Senate would be needed to override a veto.

Craven noted that North Carolina is the only state whose governor has no veto power.

"Under existing ... conditions, it is possible for a governor to sit on the sidelines, not having to act on a bill while the General Assembly grapples with a complex or politically sensitive matter," said Craven.

The veto would "bring North Carolina into a full flowering of the separation of powers among equal branches of the government which was envisioned by our founding fathers," he said.

Gov. Jim Martin, who called for a gubernatorial veto in his State of the State address, Monday, blasted the predominantly Democratic Senate for killing a veto bill last week.

The Senate Judiciary I Committee voted to kill the measure, sponsored by Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford. Later, the Senate refused to revive the bill on the floor.

Martin called the moves "repulsive" and "arrogant."

Craven insisted that his bill was not partisan, and that he hoped Democrats would support it. But he and other Republicans warned that if the Democratic leadership didn't give the bill a fair hearing, the GOP would use it against them in the 1986 election campaign.

Negotiators Have Lunch

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — U.S. and Soviet delegates met for more than 2½ hours today in the second negotiating session devoted to reaching a superpower agreement on medium-range missiles.

A U.S. spokesman said members of the two negotiating teams have also begun informal social contacts outside the sessions.

The spokesman, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said informal contacts at all levels of the U.S. and Soviet delegations began last week, and are "continuing and expanding."

The spokesman confirmed that Max M. Kampelman and Yuli A. Kvitsinsky, who head the subgroups on space and defense weapons, had lunch together on Wednesday.

A source who told The Associated Press of the encounter said the two men spent two hours at a Geneva restaurant and spoke in English. The source, who declined to be identified, said it was not known what was discussed.

Today's session on medium-range weapons, between teams headed by Maynard W. Glitman for the United States and and Alexei A. Obukhov for the Soviet Union, was held at the U.S. arms control offices. It lasted two hours and 45 minutes.

No details of the talks were released, in keeping with the confidentiality agreement reached by both sides.

$1.5 Million Fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Chrysler Corp. will pay a $1.5 million fine to settle a government civil suit alleging that the No. 3 automaker dumped excessive amounts of assembly plant wastes into public sewer systems, the Justice Department said today.

The department said that a civil complaint alleging violations of the Clean Water Act was filed in U.S. District Court in Detroit, and that it was accompanied by a proposed consent decree signed by company executives.

Under terms of that decree, under which Chrysler did not admit the alleged violations, Chrysler also agreed to bring itself into full compliance with provisions of the antipollution law by July 15.

The case developed jointly by the Justice Department and the Environmental Protection Agency represents "one of the largest civil penalty agreements ever negotiated under the Clean Water Act," said F. Henry Habicht II, assistant attorney general in charge of the Land and Natural Resources Division.

He said the consent decree, which would become final after a 30-day public comment period and approval by the court, would resolve the civil complaint.

Suit ...

individually and as the executrix for the estate of her husband, who died in June 1984, charges that Dansey, who purchased the last tract under the option in October 1981, is not entitled to compensation because he "breached his obligation and duty under ... the option agreement by fraudulently and willfully refusing and failing to pave and to install water and sewer in those portions of Arlington Boulevard running along the east line" of each of the tracts he purchased.

The answer also charges that Dansey breached his obligation under the option agreement "in that such portions" of the paving and installation of water and sewer "that were actually performed, were not done in a workmanlike manner or in accordance with the standards of the city of Greenville and the North Carolina Department of Transportation."

In her counterclaim, Mrs. Evans charges that Dansey "willfully, wantonly, recklessly and fraudulently misrepresented" that he "would assume the obligation of performing and completing paving, sewer and water improvements" on those portions of Arlington Boulevard adjoining the tracts purchased under the option.

By Dansey not completing the work on Arlington Boulevard, the complaint charges, Mrs. Evans has "suffered delay in the sale and development of the remaining Evans' land adjoining Arlington Boulevard," resulting in the loss of lot and parcel sales, the loss of profit, and the loss of use of income derived from sales.

The suit also charges that Mrs. Evans "will incur substantially greater expense for the completion" of the work left unfinished, due to the increases in costs of construction as well as for the costs of repair and correction of defective paving, sewer and water work previously performed on the road, which "damages are in excess of" $1.01 million.

In addition, the counterclaim charges that Dansey and Carroll "with malice and intent to gain financially ... conspired with each other to depress the market value of the Evans property, to restrain and eliminate, for their own financial advantage, competition in development" by the Evanses "and through their actions acquired portions of the Evans' property for less than the fair market value."

The third party complaint charges that Carroll, trading as Carroll and Associates, breached his obligations under a May 1973 contract with the Evanses by "failing to supervise the paving, sewer and water work" along Arlington Boulevard; "failed to arrange and coordinate financing for development;" and "intentionally failed to supervise the surveying and engineering work upon said land ... failed to develop a land use plan and master plans ... failed to sell improved or unimproved lots since 1978," and other charges.

The counterclaim and third party complaint asked for compensatory damages of $1.01 million, punitive damages of $2.2 million and, because of "unfair or deceptive acts in or affecting commerce," treble damages of $3.03 million, from Dansey and Carroll.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market lost more ground today, continuing its retreat of the past two sessions.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down 14.69 points Tuesday and Wednesday, dropped 3.20 to 1,254.86 in the first half hour today.

Losers took a 4-3 lead over gainers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said most traders weren't looking for much from the market today with a long holiday weekend approaching. The markets will be closed for Good Friday.

Wall Streeters are generally pessimistic about forthcoming earnings reports for the first quarter. Several major companies have already said their results will come in below earlier expectations.

Brokers said traders were also wary about making any big commitments before the Federal Reserve's weekly report on the money supply, due out after the close.

Advance estimates call for the figures to show a sizeable increase in the basic measure of the money supply.

CBS climbed 3½ to 113. The stock has been the subject of intense takeover speculation lately, although the company has denied it has any plans for such a transaction.

Among today's other early volume leaders, American Electric Power rose ½ to 21¾; Chemical New York gained ¼ to 37½, and United Technologies was down ¼ at 39½.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 7.62 to 1,258.06.

Injury List Is Growing As Yankees Plan Opener

By The Associated Press

If the New York Yankees hope to get off to a quick start in 1985, they'll have to do it without the speedy Rickey Henderson.

And without Ron Guidry. And without John Montefusco.

The Yankees continue to generate as many medical reports as baseball reports this spring, and the latest news is that Henderson and Montefusco will start the season on the disabled list and that Guidry won't be starting opening day.

"I could go out and be ready Monday, but there's always the possibility it could still be hurt," said Guidry, who was scratched from starting the opener Monday in Boston because of a stiff neck. "Or I could pitch and hurt it worse."

"I wouldn't be doing the team any good by sitting on the bench for two weeks," Guidry said Wednesday, prior to missing a planned start in a night exhibition game against the Chicago White Sox.

Now, Guidry is scheduled to pitch the fourth game of the season, in Cleveland on April 13, while 46-year-old Phil Niekro will start the season against the Red Sox.

Henderson, the base-stealing whiz the Yankees acquired in December from Oakland, was placed on the 15-day disabled list, retroactive to March 30. He has been bothered by a sprained left ankle that was hurt in a game against Boston two weeks ago.

Henderson will remain at the Yankees' training site in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., while recuperating. He is eligible to be activated April 14.

Montefusco, who has been hobbled by a nerve problem in his left hip, was put on the 21-day disabled list, retroactive to April 1.

The latest rash of injury-related moves follows a spring in which Don Mattingly, last year's American League batting champion, and Dave Winfield, the runner-up, both missed several games with ailments.

Meanwhile, Harold Baines continued to have a torrid spring — at the expense of the Yankees. He increased his exhibition average to .439 by going 3-for-4 Wednesday in leading the Chicago White Sox past New York 11-3.

Baines drove in three runs — he has 16 RBI this spring — with a run-scoring double in the first inning to extend his hitting streak to 10 games.

In the second inning, Baines had a two-run single and Greg Walker added a three-run homer.

A rare mental lapse by Boston right fielder Dwight Evans helped the Detroit Tigers score five runs in the seventh inning to beat the Red Sox 7-6.

With one out and the bases loaded, Barbaro Garbey hit a sacrifice fly that Evans caught on the warning track. But Evans thought his catch made the final out of the inning, and held onto the ball as Kirk Gibson scored from second base.

Dave Stieb tuned up for his season-opening start for Toronto by allowing one run on three hits over seven innings as the Blue Jays beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 2-1. Len Matuszek, traded by Philadelphia to Toronto on Monday, singled in his first at-bat for the Blue Jays and scored on a double by Buck Martinez, who later hit a sacrifice fly.

Cecil Cooper's two-run homer in the ninth inning carried the Milwaukee Brewers over the Seattle Mariners 7-5.

Juan Samuel's two-out infield single in the bottom of the ninth inning drove in the winning run as the Philadelphia Phillies downed the St. Louis Cardinals 3-2.

Mike Warren, starting in place of Mike Norris — who was put on the disabled list — went five innings in helping the Oakland A's past the San Francisco Giants 11-2.

A single by Terry Francona and a double by Vance Law keyed a three-run burst in the seventh inning that carried the Montreal Expos over the Baltimore Orioles 7-5.

Kent Hrbek's RBI single in the first inning started the Minnesota Twins to a 3-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. The losing pitcher was Jerry Reuss, who had won his first five spring decisions.

Phil Garner and Tim Tolman drove in four runs apiece to lift the Houston Astros over the New York Mets 12-2.

Paul Zuvella drilled a three-run double that capped a six-run eighth inning that rallied the Atlanta Braves past the Texas Rangers 8-4.

Dane Iorg delivered a bases-loaded single, sparking a four-run eighth inning that paced the Kansas City Royals over the Cincinnati Reds 4-1.

Steve Lake tripled, doubled and singled and drove in four runs, helping the Chicago Cubs over the Cleveland Indians 8-4.

Brian Downing had three hits as the California Angels shaded the San Diego Padres 4-3.

In other baseball news, Milwaukee cut seven players, including pitcher Yutaka Enatsu, who was trying to become the first Japanese player in 20 years to play in the major leagues.

Enatsu, 36, made three strong relief appearances to start the spring, but was roughed up in his last three outings. He finished spring training with a 1-1 record and a 4.91 ERA over 11 innings.

"After the first few times he pitched, I thought he had an excellent chance of making this ballclub," Milwaukee Manager George Bamberger said. "But he is 36 years old. We have super young talent in our farm system, and if we kept him one season max, we couldn't afford to do that."

Enatsu, who had a 216-153 record and 196 saves in 18 seasons, was not bitter about not making the roster.

"I believe I got a fair opportunity," he said through an interpreter.

Guilford Tops ECU

GREENSBORO — Guilford College, the defending Division II national champions, rolled over East Carolina University's women's tennis team yesterday, 8-1.

The lone Lady Pirate victory came in the number one doubles match where Ann Manderfield and Janet Russell combined for a 6-3, 6-4 win.

The loss dropped the Lady Pirates to 3-5 on the spring. They travel to Old Dominion today.

Summary:

Julie Tupper (G) d. Janet Russell, 6-3, 6-1.
Jennifer Friend (G) d. Ann Manderfield, 6-0, 6-0.
Melany Bisduff (G) d. Ty Myers, 6-1, 6-2.

Area Baseball Teams Set To Open Tournament Play

A number of area baseball teams will join in action this weekend in Easter baseball tournaments. All five of the Pitt County teams will be involved in the annual Pitt County Tournament, to be played starting Saturday at D.H. Conley High School.

Greene Central will be involved in the sixth annual Wilson Breakfast Optimist Club Tournament in Wilson, while Bear Grass, Williamston, Washington, and Roanoke will play in the Jamesville Invitational. Both of those also start on Saturday.

In the Pitt tournament, action will begin at 11 a.m. Saturday with Kinston taking on New Bern. Ayden-Grifton and Farmville Central will clash in the second game at 2 p.m.

North Lenoir takes on Rose High School at 5 p.m. with hosting Conley meeting North Pitt at 8 p.m.

Following the day off on Sunday, play will resume on Monday with four games. In the opening contest, at 11 a.m., the losers of the first two games play, followed at 2 p.m. by the losers of the two Saturday night games. The Saturday afternoon winners meet at 5 p.m. with the Saturday night winners clashing at 8 p.m.

Tuesday, the finals will be held, with seventh place decided at 11 a.m., fifth at 2 p.m., third at 5 and the championship at 8.

Greene Central is scheduled to face Wilson Fike in the 5 p.m. game of the Wilson tournament, to be played in Fleming Stadium.

In the other first round games, Beddingfield takes on Smithfield-Selma at 11 a.m. with Fayetteville Reid Ross facing Raleigh Sanderson at 2 p.m. In the night pairings along with Fike and Greene Central, Hunt takes on SouthWest Edgecombe at 7:45 p.m.

The tournament will follow the same format as the Pitt Tournament on Monday and Tuesday, playing to an eight-place finish.

Jamesville, however, will not play to a full eight places, but to a championship and a consolation title.

Saturday, St. Francis opens at 12 noon against Bear Grass, followed at 2:30 by North Edgecombe and Williamston. Washington takes on Creswell at 5 p.m., followed by Roanoke and Jamesville at 7:30 p.m.

The losers of the first two games play Monday at 12, with the other losers meeting at 2:30 p.m. The Saturday afternoon winners play at 5 p.m. and the other winners at 7:30 p.m.

Tuesday, the winners of the losers bracket play at 5 p.m. for the consolation crown, with the championship at 7:30 p.m.

League Playoffs Expand To 7

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — With time running out, negotiators for major league baseball players and club owners agreed to expand the league playoffs for one season with some fancy footwork.

The two sides sidestepped a settlement Wednesday on their main topic of disagreement — distribution of an additional $9 million in television revenue from the two extra games in each league — for the time being. The two sides agreed to place the money into escrow next Sept. 16 if the overall issue of splitting broadcast revenue isn't resolved by then.

The two sides had to come to a decision on the 1985 playoffs because of a deadline imposed by network television, which had to make scheduling arrangements.

The agreement was announced jointly Wednesday by Don Fehr, acting executive director of the Major League Players Association, and chief management negotiator Lee MacPhail following a one-hour afternoon meeting.

"This was worked out separately for 1985 because we had to make a commitment to NBC," said MacPhail. "However, once we have an agreement with the players' association to cover everything, the best-of-seven playoff will become permanent."

"These escrowed revenues would remain a matter for negotiation as a part of the total agreement which is now being negotiated," an announcement distributed by the two parties said.

Under the agreement, one of the leagues, yet to be determined, will begin its championship series on Tuesday, Oct. 8 with games also on the Oct. 9, 11, 12, 13, 15 and 16, if necessary. The other league would play Oct. 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 15 and 16. The best-of-seven World Series will start on Saturday, Oct. 19, with games also on Oct. 20, 22, 23, 24, 26 and 27.

Management has been negotiating with the union since last November to replace a Basic Agreement which expired on Dec. 31. The union has asked for a one-third share of baseball's television income, including a $1.2-billion six-year network package, to be applied toward pension benefits.

Following the announcement, the negotiators reconvened to continue discussion on other topics affecting a new Basic Agreement. The afternoon session represented the 21st since negotiations began last November.

The two sides also agreed to meet again on April 15 in New York.

"We are pleased with the constructive attitude of Don Fehr and the Players Association in helping to resolve this problem," said MacPhail, president of the owners' Player Relations Committee. On Tuesday night, MacPhail said that agreement to expand the playoffs would have to be reached by Wednesday, or it would be too late to implement them this season.

"We hope to move on from here to tackle the problems that still exist before a final Basic Agreement is realized."

The two sides were under a deadline if they wished to expand the playoffs this season. NBC-TV, which will carry the playoffs, had agreed to expand its share of the postseason payoff by $9 million, but had urged a quick decision.

The Players Association sought $3 million, one-third of the additional money.

Owners wanted to table the issue of distribution of money until it could be negotiated in collective bargaining. At the same time, the PRC wanted to give the network a commitment that seven games, instead of five, would be the new format.

A best-of-five format has been used for the league championships since the American and National leagues established four divisions in 1969.

While the expanded playoffs was the most pressing issue, other more serious points appear no closer to being settled. They include revisions of both free agency and arbitration and a specified expansion program.

Talks on the four-year Basic Agreement that just expired led to a 1981 mid-season strike over free agency compensation.

Despite the fact that major league ballplayers are preparing for a new season without a new labor agreement, talks appear to proceed devoid of a sense of urgency.

Both sides appear to be resigned to continue negotiations through the summer and are wary of imposing any deadlines.

Eagles Named To Replace Russo

RUSTON, La. (AP) — Andy Russo has resigned as basketball coach of Louisiana Tech, which was ranked No. 8 in the country with a 29-3 record, and assistant coach Tommy Joe Eagles has been named to succeed him.

The University of Washington said Wednesday that Russo would be the Huskies' new basketball coach, and Louisiana Tech said minutes later that Eagles had been moved up to take his place.

Russo led Tech to the NCAA playoffs this year. The Bulldogs lost 86-84 to Oklahoma in the NCAA Midwest Regional. The team was 26-7 last year, when it also made it to the NCAA tournament.

Eagles, 36, said he was happy about his new job.

"I don't think it is any secret how much I love Louisiana Tech," he said. "This is one of the happiest days of my life."

Demons Run By Rose In Meet

Fike High School rolled up a 90-51 victory over Rose High School in a Big East boys' track meet yesterday.

The Golden Demons won eight of 13 individual events and swept the three relays.

Rose did have one double winner in Martin Norville, who took the high and triple jumps. Thompson of Fike won the discus, the 110-meter high hurdles and the 100-meter dash to pace the Demon victory.

The loss drops Rose to 5-2 on the year.

Fike Ends Rose Girls' Win String

Wilson Fike High School ran past the Rose High School girls' track team yesterday, 79-53, breaking a 28-meet winning streak for the Rampettes.

Fike was the last time which had beaten the Rampettes, back in 1983. Since then, the Rose girls had reeled off two years of unbeaten regular season meets before bowing again to the Lady Demons.

Fike limited Rose to only four individual event wins and to winning just one of the three relays. Fike had two double winners on the day, Lane Moore, who took the long jump and 100-meter dash, and San Hall, who won the 100-meter and 300-meter hurdles events.

Rose's Lisa Pagel set a new school record in the 300-hurdles with a time of 49.1 seconds, finishing second.

Rose, now 4-1, will take part in the Fike Relays on Saturday.

Only Known Wild Eagle Nest Location Is Guarded Secret

RALEIGH (AP) — The only known wild bald eagle's nest in North Carolina is occupied this year, possibly by the same birds that came there to breed a year ago, wildlife officials say.

"The birds aren't banded, so we can't say for sure," said Kelly Davis, a biological technician at Lake Mattamuskeet. "But birds of prey often return to the same nest year after year, and they are nesting about the same time."

"Eagles are monogamous and they breed for life," Ms. Davis said. "There have been reports of banded birds returning to the same nest year after year, so we are pretty confident that they are the same birds."

The new eaglets were first seen Monday.

"I could see two heads and parts of their bodies," said Larry Ditto, manager of the Mattamuskeet National Wildlife Refuge. "Both were sitting up and one was watching the other flapping his wings."

The federal wildlife refuge in Hyde County has been the home of a hacking program since 1983. Young eagles from wild nests in other states are brought to the refuge when they are about seven weeks old, fed in the huge cages about 35 feet in the air, and then released when they are about 11 weeks old.

But in late January 1984, a pair of eagles came to private land near the refuge with their own ideas about nesting. On January 21st, Ms. Davis said birds were seen again on the same nest. On March 15, they were seen perched on the nest as if they were feeding young birds.

"The wild nest lends some credibility for the hacking program," Ms. Davis said. "It is encouraging for us. The wild birds kind of beat us to the draw. But this is eagle country and that's what it's all about."

The exact whereabouts of the birds are a secret. Ms. Davis said the landowners first reported seeing the birds last year, and have been very protective of the endangered birds since.

"We think the landowners are very special," Ms. Davis said. "They want to be completely anonymous because they don't want people to know where the birds are. They noticed last year that there were eagles flying near their land, I suggested that they watch them and see where they were going. Later the landowners let us know that (the birds) were carrying sticks, as if they were building a nest."

Ms. Davis and other officials at the refuge have permission from the landowners to watch the birds from a distance of about a quarter-mile, through a telescope. Because of the distance, she can't be sure how many eagles have hatched. But she said no one makes any attempt to go near the nest.

"The nest is not near any main roads and no wise person would attempt to get near it. It is in a swamp forest, where there are briars, poison ivy, snakes. Last year, the information on the eagles wasn't let out until we were sure the birds had left the nest," she said.

Ms. Davis said she goes to watch the birds several times a week, usually in the morning when feeding behavior is the most intense. The landowners, who have been doing their homework on eagles since the birds nested on the property, also provide information.

"I get the feeling that what is most important to (the landowners) is that (the eagles) be able to nest without bother," Ms. Davis said. "Right now, with one nest, the best thing to do is just let those birds nest. Later, we might be able to band a few nesting eagles and get more information, but we don't want to push our luck."

Melinda Welton, a biologist for the State Wildlife Service, said 33 bald eagles were counted across the state during a period between December and January. In a 1983-84 study by the National Wildlife Federation, 11,747 bald eagles were counted in the United States.

Ms. Welton said land use practices could dictate the nesting patterns of the birds. As many as 64 eagles were sighted in Virginia during a recent counting period, but she said North Carolina may never reach that level.

"There is so much farming (in eastern North Carolina) that we may never get that high," Ms. Welton said.

The Mattamuskeet Wildlife Refuge has been a good nesting place for eagles because of its close proximity to the Pamlico Sound, where the birds can fish for small waterfowl during the winter, Ms. Davis said. It is possible that more wild eagles could be attracted to the area, or that more nests exist farther back into the swamp where they cannot be seen, she said.

"Our goal is to get 10 nesting places in the state," Ms. Welton said. "We are one-tenth of the way there."

Bird Returns; Boston Is Cured

By The Associated Press

There was nothing wrong with the Boston Celtics that the return of Larry Bird couldn't cure, but the Philadelphia 76ers still can't figure out what to do about the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Bird missed two games with bursitis in the elbow of his shooting arm and Boston promptly lost two games in a row for the first time all season. But he returned to action Wednesday night and scored 35 points in leading the Celtics to a 119-103 National Basketball Association victory over the Indiana Pacers, who suffered their 12th consecutive setback.

Boston's victory increased their Atlantic Division lead to five games over the Sixers, who were beaten by Cleveland for the fourth straight time 113-110. The Cavaliers, still 10 games under .500 despite a 31-24 record since a 2-19 start, are the only team to beat Philadelphia four times this season.

"I'm very concerned, especially at this time of year," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham. "We had no patience, took bad shots. Every time we play them something different hurts us. They've got a lot of depth. Someone else always seems to contribute."

Elsewhere, San Antonio whipped the Los Angeles Lakers 122-108, New Jersey trimmed New York 113-100, Chicago downed Washington 100-91 and the Los Angeles Clippers shaded Kansas City 124-122.

With the score tied 6-6, the Celtics took control against Indiana with a 13-point run in which Bird scored the last 11 en route to a 16-for-28 shooting night. Kevin McHale added 26 points for Boston while Vern Fleming led Indiana with 20.

"The elbow feels pretty good," said Bird, who played 39 minutes. "A couple of times on long passes I came up short so I didn't take a lot of long shots. Sitting out two games was like being in a cage. It feels good now and if I can extend my arm, I'll play."

"I came back tonight because we have a lot of injuries. I don't think I could have played last night (Tuesday), but I woke up today and the elbow felt good."

Cavaliers 113, 76ers 110

Cleveland hit eight consecutive free throws in the final 2:33, four by Phil Hubbard, to post its fifth consecutive triumph and spoil a Philadelphia comeback. The Sixers trailed 99-89 with 9:51 remaining but evened the score at 105-105 with a 16-6 burst. With the score tied at 109, Hubbard hit two free throws and Philadelphia's Charles Barkley one before Cleveland's Lonnie Shelton ended the scoring with a pair from the foul line.

The Cavaliers, who have taken four of six meetings with the Sixers, didn't make a field goal in the final 2:33 but were 8-for-8 at the line. World B. Free led Cleveland with 25 points and Hubbard added 23 while Malone had 26 for Philadelphia.

"The breaks went our way," said Hubbard. "We just didn't give up. We've been playing great basketball."

Cleveland Coach George Karl said the Cavaliers, who are three games ahead of Atlanta in the race for the final Eastern Conference playoff berth, "had good defense, good ball movement, a great first half. We just gutted it out in the second half. That was playoff basketball out there, a lot of intensity."

Spurs 122, Lakers 108

San Antonio played without George Gervin, who has a sprained ankle, while Los Angeles was minus flu-stricken Kareem Abdul-Jabbar. Mike Mitchell paced the Spurs with 36 points and added 14 rebounds while Johnny Moore had 17 points, eight steals and 13 assists. James Worthy was high for the Lakers with 32 points.

Nets 113, Knicks 100

Albert King scored 23 points and Buck Williams added 22 points and 15 rebounds as New Jersey gave Stan Albeck his 300th victory as a pro coach. Micheal Ray Richardson added 17 points and a season-high 17 assists. The defeat stretched the Knicks' losing streak to six games and was their eighth in a row against the Nets. Ernie Grunfeld led the Knicks with 26 points.

Bulls 100, Bullets 91

Michael Jordan scored 14 of his 25 points as Chicago outscored Washington 30-10 in the third quarter. The victory was only the third in the last 21 road games for the Bulls but clinched a playoff spot for the first time in four seasons.

Leading 50-49 at halftime, the Bulls stormed to an 80-59 lead with 1:15 remaining in the third period. Orlando Woolridge also scored 25 points for Chicago. Jeff Malone had 22 to lead the Bullets.

Clippers 124, Kings 122

Derek Smith scored a career-high 41 points and the Clippers survived a late scare. Kansas City cut the Clippers' 99-90 lead to three points with 5:32 left when Smith took charge. He scored six points to key an 8-2 spurt that lifted Los Angeles to a 120-111 lead. Reggie Theus, who passed the 10,000-career-point mark, and Otis Thorpe each had 20 points to lead the Kings.

Norm Nixon's sixth assist of the game that set up Smith for a slam dunk late in the second quarter moved him past Dave Bing into eighth place on the all-time NBA assist list. Nixon finished with 12 assists to give him 5,404 in his career.

Kansas City Kings Seeking To Find Greener Grass

NEW YORK (AP) — The Kansas City Kings, a financially troubled franchise that has already moved twice in the past, is one big step closer to moving again.

On Wednesday, a special committee of National Basketball Association owners approved the team's request to move to Sacramento, Calif. The decision by the five owners must be ratified by a majority of the league's 23-member board of governors at a meeting April 16 in New York.

In fact, the Kings, mired in last place in the Midwest Division with less than two weeks remaining in the NBA season, have already sent much of their equipment and some of their office workers to Sacramento.

"If a first-class permanent arena is constructed, Sacramento can successfully support an NBA franchise," Portland owner Lawrence Weinberg, the committee chairman, said in a statement.

"If a permanent arena meeting NBA standards is not ready to open for the 1987-88 season, the NBA will have the right to purchase and relocate the Kings franchise," he said.

Should the move be formally approved, the Kings would play next season in a temporary facility now under construction that could seat 10,400. That arena, to be completed in September, was originally designed to be a warehouse, and permits have not yet been granted to convert the building into an athletic facility.

Local plans call for a larger arena, just north of the city and near the temporary site, to be built for the 1987-88 season.

"The plans for our permanent arena are right on schedule. We plan to be in an arena with seating of more than 16,000 for the 1987-88 season," said Kings assistant general manager Bob Whittits.

Moving would be nothing new for the franchise.

The Kings were formed as the Rochester (N.Y.) Royals in 1948, moved to Cincinnati for the 1957-58 season and became the Kansas City-Omaha Kings in 1972 before dropping the Omaha designation in 1975.

Winless Lopez Is Encouraged

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Nancy Lopez, who has yet to win on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour this year, is encouraged by the way she has been hitting the ball.

"I've been hitting ball probably as good as I ever have," said Lopez, who will be one of the favorites who will tee off today in the $400,000 Nabisco-Dinah Shore Invitational.

Lopez said her confidence is high going into the LPGA's most prestigious tournament and that she's "striking the ball really well."

A winner of 17 tournaments in 1978-79, Lopez captured the Dinah Shore in 1981.

The 72-hole event at Mission Hills Country Club continues through Sunday, with a winner's prize of $55,000. The final two rounds will be televised nationally by NBC.

Lopez, however, will have Jan Stephenson and defending champion Juli Inkster leading the field of challengers.

Stephenson snapped a two-year winless string when she won in Glendale, Calif., two weeks ago.

"Winning that tournament was very important to me," said Stephenson, who mentioned during the Glendale event that she was making putts for the first time in two years. "It was like all the clouds went away."

"My attitude's great again. I can't wait to go out and practice and play. I can't wait for the Dinah Shore to begin," she said.

Inkster, who as a tour rookie last year, beat veteran Pat Bradley in a playoff for the Dinah Shore title, has the most incentive to win.

If she can successfully defend her title, Inkster will collect a $1-million bonus offered to a player who can win the Dinah Shore two years in a row. Sandra Post won in 1978 and 1979, but no bonus was offered at the time.

Inkster, who appears to like her chances of repeating, said, "I think I can win. I have as good a chance as anybody, maybe a better one since I won it last year."

"I think there are about 160 other LPGA members who'd like to be in my shoes," she said. "I've really got nothing to lose."

The prestige of the tournament, which began 14 years ago, provides enough motivation even for those players who aren't chasing $1 million.

Stephenson said she believes the tournament compares to the men's Masters.

"It's prestigious, it's colorful and exciting. It has the big money, and it has TV coverage."

"Winning the Dinah Shore is very important to the players on the tour," Lopez said. "It's a first-class tournament with a big field, tremendous galleries and the opportunity to earn big money."

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's Lady Bullets kept their unbeaten string alive yesterday, rolling up a 22-1 rout of Belhaven.

Jamesville pushed over a run in the second inning, then saw it matched by the Lady Bulldogs in the top of the third.

But after that, it was all Jamesville. The Lady Bullets added four in the bottom of the third, added five each in the fourth and fifth and seven in the sixth to cap the game.

Jennifer Getchell, who hurled the win, also led the hitting for the Bullets with three. Dana Byrum, Robin Gardner, Cindy Rogers and Kim Phelps each added two hits. No one had more than one for Belhaven.

Jamesville is now 6-0 overall and 5-0 in Tobacco Belt Conference play. They return to action on April 16 at Creswell.

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville's Bullets remained unbeaten in Tobacco Belt baseball action yesterday, rolling over Belhaven, 9-5.

The Bulldogs took the initial lead, however, scoring a run in the top of the first. Griffin walked and Willard McCloud doubled him over.

Jamesville came back with two in the bottom of the frame to go on top. Kevin Perry walked and stole up before Richie Ange walked. Both advanced on a passed ball and scored on Whit Brown's single.

Belhaven tied it up with one in the top of the third and then took the lead with three more in the top of the fifth.

King Is Sure Bet For Score Title

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Bernard King of the New York Knicks, who underwent surgery this week to repair a torn ligament in his right knee, is a certain winner of the National Basketball Association scoring title despite playing in only 55 games.

King, who averaged 32.9 points per game and scored 1,809 points before being sidelined for the rest of the season, will be the first scoring champion to benefit from a 1974-75 rules change that said a player must score at least 1,400 points or play 70 games to qualify for the scoring title. Before 1974-75, playing at least 70 games was the only requirement.

A 1969-70 rules change said the scoring champion would be based on average rather than total points, and before King, Jerry West in 1970 was the only player to benefit from that change. He scored 2,309 points that season in 74 games, averaging 31.2, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 2,361 in 82 games, an average of 28.8.

This season, at least eight players will wind up with more points, but lower averages, than King. Runner-up Larry Bird is more than four points per game behind the leader and would have to average about 80 per game to catch up.

The only scoring champion to play fewer games than King was Max Zaslofsky of Chicago in 1948, when the season was only 48 games long.

Moses Malone, with a big lead over runner-up Buck Williams of New Jersey, apparently will become the first NBA player to win five straight rebounding titles, surpassing Wilt Chamberlain, who twice won four consecutive rebounding crowns.

What is it like to have a rebounding wizard like Malone on your team?

"It's like having an atom bomb and you're the only one who has one," says 76ers teammate Clint Richardson.

Houston Twin Towers Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olajuwon are on the verge of becoming the first teammates in 16 years to each average 20 points and 10 rebounds. Wilt Chamberlain and Elgin Baylor of the Lakers were the last to do it.

From the nostalgia dept: Dallas' Dick Motta coached Kansas City Coach Phil Johnson on the 1959 Idaho Class AA state championship team in Grace, Idaho, and later at Weber State at Ogden, Utah.

Golden State Coach John Bach played collegiate basketball at Fordham University, where his coach was Vince Lombardi, who later went on to some success in football.

After his team yielded 145 points to Golden State, including 86 in the first half, San Antonio Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons told his players on the bus, "Let's get out of here before they score again."

A welcome respite from the "win at any costs" philosophy was provided recently in a Jazz-Lakers game in Salt Lake City.

Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley called a timeout when Lakers forward James Worthy was accidentally poked in the eye. When the timeout was over, Jazz Coach Frank Layden called another timeout, although he realized Worthy was disqualified from the rest of the game if he couldn't recover in time to shoot his own free throws.

"I gave it (the timeout) to them so they could get Worthy back on the floor," Layden said. "I think the fans pay to see Worthy play. It's the way I like to play. I'm not looking for some advantage."

Although Worthy ultimately was unable to play any more that night, Riley appreciated the gesture.

Crenshaw Hopes To Turn Game Around At GGO

GREENSBORO (AP) — Ben Crenshaw, in a slump most of the season, hopes to turn his game around this week in preparation for the defense of his Masters title.

"There's some encouraging signs. I'm starting to hit the ball with more authority," Crenshaw said before teeing off today in the first round of the $400,000 Greater Greensboro Open golf tournament. He will defend his Masters crown next week in Augusta, Ga.

"I'm starting to feel pretty good about things," said Crenshaw, who was disqualified once and missed the cut three times in his first six starts this season.

A two-week break from competition helped greatly, he said.

"I wasn't ready to come out this year. I was tentative, trying to guide the ball, then putting too much pressure on myself."

"There's nothing wrong with my game. I'm hitting more good shots all the time. I'm starting to feel better about it, just like I did about this time last year," he said.

event last year before going on to his career-high triumph in the Masters.

"I've had some good success here," he said. "I went to Augusta on Monday and played a practice round then."

"But I need the competition I'll get this week. And it would have done me no good to go home this week. I'd just be sitting and fretting and getting nervous."

"A good tournament here would help."

He faces major opposition in the 144-man field that is chasing a $72,000 first prize over the Forest Oaks Country Club course.

Chief among them are Ray Floyd,

Craig Stadler, defending champion Andy Bean, Lanny Wadkins, U.S. Open titleholder Fuzzy Zoeller, Peter Jacobsen and Danny Edwards, a two-time Greensboro winner.

Zoeller confirmed his comeback from surgery with a victory earlier this season. Wadkins took two early-season titles. Bean and Stadler both have played well without winning. And Jacobsen has scored two runner-up finishes in his last four starts.

Other standouts include Hubert Green, 1985 PGA Tour winners Mark McCumber and Woody Blackburn, and South African Denis Watson, a three-time winner last year.

Carolina Athletes Cleared Of Charges

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — University of North Carolina athletes Brad Daugherty and Brian Johnston, who were exonerated on assault charges, say they have no hard feeling against a man who implicated them.

District Attorney Carl Fox said Wednesday that the two UNC-Chapel Hill athletes were not involved in an assault on John S. Hinkle, who filed charges Friday night after being assaulted in a Chapel Hill bar, He's Not Here.

"Mr. Hinkle ... was not able to say who it was who assaulted him," Fox said at a news conference. "Mr. Hinkle was simply informed by some other persons who allegedly saw the incident that Mr. Daugherty and Mr. Johnston were involved, when in fact the evidence indicates that they were not."

Fox said one athlete, whom he didn't identify, had confessed his involvement in the assault.

Daugherty, a center on the Tar Heel basketball team, and Johnston, a football player, said they have no hard feelings toward Hinkle, but said they were hurt by the media attention the case received.

"It makes it hard for me and Brian to go through everyday life," said Daugherty, who said he and

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A full moon day that brings about quick and decisive activity where relations and dealings between various parties are concerned so you would be wise to consider all sides.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Study well both your opponents and associates and know how to come to a better agreement with all of them.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You can accomplish a great deal, whether in business or personal life today, so get busy early in the day.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Early concentrate on entertainment that can bring great happiness. Make appointments which are necessary.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Get matters at home nicely arranged so that you can have a very happy weekend. Extend invitations to dinner.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Study the important communications you have to handle today and do so with true finesse.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Study your property and know how to improve it so that it becomes more valuable and comfortable.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) A good day to visit your beauty or barber shop and make yourself more attractive. Then get social plans made with friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Some new plan you have for attaining your aims has a good chance of being successful, so go ahead with it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Try to show more affection for friends you have neglected of late, and be loyal. Be wary of one who may be jealous of you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Analyzing how far you have advanced where your career is concerned will show you how to proceed in the future.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) You are mentally toying with new aims and get the right slant on how to make them work for you.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Your intuition is good both today and tonight, and you can work out business affairs and romantic ones well in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she can tune in on the wants and needs of others and will want to do everything in his, or her power to assist them upon reaching maturity. However, teach early to first be good to the self so that your progeny will be in a better position to help others and not lose out in the game of life.

Teen-Agers Found Dead In Trailer Blast

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The bodies of two teen-age girls, each with multiple stab wounds, were found inside a mobile home gutted by an explosion, and a Raleigh man who fled the scene with his clothes on fire was critically burned, police said.

Melvin Coleman, 36, was in critical condition today at North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill with burns over half his body, said spokeswoman Kathy Neal.

Police said he fled the scene of the blast and was apprehended after a car chase that ended in a collision of Coleman's car and a police car. No charges had been filed Wednesday night.

Coleman was indicted Monday by a Wake County grand jury on charges of rape, incest and taking indecent liberties with his daughter, Marian "Mimi" Coleman, 13, and stepdaughter Monica A. Cobb, 17.

Their bodies were found in the mobile home's ruins.

State Medical Examiner Page Hudson said each victim had multiple stab wounds.

Evelyn Coleman, Coleman's estranged wife, lived with her two daughters at the trailer. Raleigh police Maj. J.V. Haley said the girls were at the home when their mother left for work.

Raleigh Police Chief Frederick Heineman told a Raleigh television station Wednesday night that police were convinced the two girls were killed before the explosion.

Dr. John Butts of the state medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill said an autopsy was being performed Wednesday night.

"I don't think they burned to death," Butts said in a telephone interview. "Other than that, we can't comment."

The blast occurred Wednesday morning after the man called his estranged wife and "said he was going to kill the kids," said neighbor Lucille Sturdivant.

Raleigh police Capt. E.O. Lassiter said an officer in the vicinity of the Shenley Square trailer park heard the blast and saw a man "literally on fire" fleeing from the trailer.

"It definitely was an explosion," Lassiter said. "It could be a bomb or a gas heater explosion. We don't know."

"The subject was leaving the scene and the officer gave chase," Lassiter said. The man was later apprehended after his car collided with a police car. Garner policeman Barry Moore suffered a broken foot in the accident.

The cause of the 9 a.m. explosion, which ripped out the aluminum walls of the trailer and blew away windows, was under investigation.

Clara Morgan, mother of a neighbor, said she heard an explosion that "shook the trailer."

"I thought a car had hit the trailer," Ms. Morgan said. "I saw dark smoke coming out of the air conditioner and then a big fire. Then I saw the guy knocked from the back of the trailer. I saw his legs and they looked like pink flesh burning. He ran."

Ms. Morgan said a policeman caught the man and tried to put out the fire in his clothes, but he got away.

"He got into his car and locked both doors and then he went off," Ms. Morgan said.

The indictments returned Monday had not been served on Coleman, but Wake County District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said that Coleman had earlier retained an attorney after he had been questioned by police about the incidents.

Paper Says CBS Considers Possible Merger With GE

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS Inc., fearful of a takeover attempt by cable television magnate Ted Turner, has discussed a "friendly" merger offer with General Electric Co., The New York Times reported today.

Wall Street sources told the Times the merger offer would be taken up only in the event of a serious, unfriendly attempt to purchase CBS. CBS denied that any such discussions had occurred, and GE declined to comment, the Times said.

The Times reported Wednesday that Turner was preparing to acquire CBS and had received financial commitments of $100 million from MCI and former U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon.

"I don't think there's any way I could overstate how hard we would fight an acquisition," CBS Chairman Thomas Wyman said on the "CBS Evening News." Network spokeswoman Anne Luzzatto declined to comment further on the Times report.

Earlier Wednesday, MCI Communications Corp. denied it has committed any money to help Turner try to take over CBS Inc., although the company said it had discussed the possibility.

MCI spokesman Gary Tobin said: "We are often invited to sessions held by investment bankers and investment houses to discuss potential investments and we often attend them. We did attend a session where the topic of CBS came up."

Wall Street analysts, meanwhile, remained skeptical Turner could afford the estimated $4 billion to $5 billion pricetag for all of CBS, or even the cost of acquiring a 51 percent interest in the company.

CBS stock closed Wednesday at 109 3/8, up 2 7/8 from Tuesday's close.

In its Wednesday story, the Times quoted unidentified industry sources as saying that Turner, who owns 80 percent of Turner Broadcasting Co. of Atlanta, was in Washington recently and in New York this week seeking financing for a takeover.

The sources told the Times that Turner had secured commitments of about $50 million each from Simon and MCI, the long-distance company based in Washington.

CBS, which employs 31,000 people, had a profit of $212.4 million on revenue of $4.92 billion in 1984.

Turner Broadcasting, with 900 employees, had a profit of $8.1 million on revenue of $210.6 million in the first nine months of 1984.

Meanwhile, in Raleigh, N.C., Sen. Jesse Helms said his allies are trying to raise $150,000 so they can contact CBS shareholders and "determine who and how many agree that CBS reporting has been unfair to President Reagan."

In January, a group affiliated with the conservative Republican announced a campaign to urge supporters to buy stock in CBS to try to gain control because of what it called biased news coverage.

On Friday, officials of the Raleigh-based group, Fairness in Media, said they would not mount a proxy battle at the company's annual shareholder meeting in Chicago on April 17. But they said they would continue their battle to gain control of CBS.

On the floor of the Senate Wednesday, Helms charged that the president of CBS Inc. makes golfing trips with the company airplane. His comments came during debate on an amendment by Sen. Howard M. Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to assure that the Internal Revenue Service does not weaken rules that require corporate executives to report as income the personal use of a corporate airplane.

CBS officials were quick to respond. William Lilley III, a senior vice president for the network, said "Mr. Helms, as CBS has learned throughout all of this, again has his facts wrong."

New Trial

RALEIGH (AP) — A Winston-Salem woman convicted of second-degree murder last year in the 1983 shooting death of her husband is entitled to a new trial, the N.C. Court of Appeals has ruled.

In a unanimous decision, three appeals court judges said that three errors by Judge Thomas W. Seay Jr. justify a new trial for Deborah Kaye Temples.

Mrs. Temples was sentenced to 15 years in prison after being convicted of shooting Mark Walker Temples, after an argument in their home on Aug. 8, 1983. Mrs. Temples, who said she shot her husband in self-defense, has been free on bond pending her appeal.

The appeals court panel ruled that Seay, who presided over Mrs. Temples' Forsyth Superior Court trial in March 1984, allowed improper testimony and evidence to be introduced during the trial and gave misleading instructions to the jury.

Mrs. Temples testified that she shot her husband after a fight in which he had cursed and struck her, knocking her to the floor.

According to testimony at the trial, Mrs. Temples put a gun to her head with the idea of committing suicide, when her husband became enraged and threatened to pull the trigger if she put the gun back to her head. Mrs. Temples testified that she believed that her husband would kill her and fired five shots.

Mildred Button. Mrs. Button died from a pool of blood that formed beneath the outer layer of the brain which was caused by a blow to the head, according to testimony.

During a sentencing hearing immediately after the verdict Wednesday, Assistant District Attorney Billy VanStory asked that Button receive the maximum penalty of 20 years in prison.

Defense attorneys asked that Button receive a pre-sentencing psychological evaluation and have time to get his affairs in order before reporting to prison. Both requests were denied.

Superior Court Judge Lynn Johnson ruled that the aggravating circumstances of Mrs. Button's age and frailty outweighed mitigating circumstances of Button's clean military record and his good character.

In addition to the 10-year prison term, the judge recommended a psychiatric evaluation in jail and work release as soon as Button is eligible.

Pipeline Fight

ROANOKE RAPIDS, N.C. (AP) — The Roanoke River Basin Association has committed itself to increased legal activity and a fund-raising campaign in an effort to stop a pipeline that would supply Virginia Beach with water from Lake Gaston.

"We need to stay in this fight," said Harold E. Carawan, chairman of the association and a resident of Gasburg, Va., a community on the lake that straddles the Virginia-North Carolina border. "We feel the 1.3 million people in this river basin will come out and support us."

V. Earl Stanley of Lawrenceville, Va., the RRBA's treasurer, said at the group's meeting here Wednesday that the association wants to raise $100,000 in addition to $73,000 owed to lawyers representing the group in federal courts in Raleigh and Norfolk.

The RRBA raised only $38,748 during its last fiscal year in similar fund-raising campaigns, but Stanley said he was confident the group could raise enough to maintain an effective legal challenge.

Virginia Beach wants to build an 85-mile, $175 million pipeline starting at the Pea Hill Creek portion of Lake Gaston in Brunswick County, Va.

Place To Stay

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — A man who came to the police asking for a place to stay got his wish, but only after leading officers on a 10-mile chase in which a N.C. Highway Patrol car and a truck were demolished, officials say.

Officers said John Gauland, 22, of Brooklyn, N.Y., entered the Henderson County station at 2:15 a.m. Tuesday, asking for a place to stay. Lt. R.W. Breedlove said he spotted a pickup truck with a broken window parked in front of the station and asked Gauland about it.

When he was questioned about the truck, Gauland ran out the door and jumped into the truck, police said.

Police said they pursued him north on U.S. 1 after learning that the truck was stolen.

Police said Gauland tried to pass a trooper near the site of a roadblock, crashed into a trooper, lost control of the vehicle and almost overturned.

Gauland was charged with speeding 90 mph in a 45 mph zone, speeding in excess of 50 mph while trying to elude an officer, driving without a license, driving while impaired by alcohol, careless and reckless driving, and other charges.

He was being held in the Vance County Jail with bond set at $10,000 Tuesday.

Son Convicted

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fayetteville man was sentenced to 10 years in prison after being convicted of voluntary manslaughter for the beating death of his 81-year-old mother last fall.

Earle William Button, 62, had been charged with second-degree murder in the Oct. 4 death of his mother,

Center Planned

DURHAM (AP) — Mitsubishi Semiconductor America Inc. has announced its plans to enter the custom-made semiconductor business by creating an integrated circuit design center, its president says.

The semiconductor manufacturer is "taking a step toward the future" to develop and produce semiconductor memory chips to the specifications of its customers, said Mitsubishi president Kazuo Watanabe at a news conference Wednesday.

Watanabe said the company will hire about 40 or 50 electronic engineers from major universities across the country this summer who will eventually work with Japanese engineers in the design center.

An open letter to all women who use Playtex® Tampons

Soon you will find new Playtex Slender, Super and Super Plus tampons in your store. These Playtex tampons will no longer be made with a highly absorbent fiber containing polyacrylate. Playtex "Regular" tampons now being produced and distributed do not contain polyacrylate and are not affected by the change.

Why is Playtex doing this? Because there are some questions about whether or not certain super absorbent substances, such as polyacrylate, increase the risk of Toxic Shock Syndrome.

Playtex will continue to support research on the subject of Toxic Shock Syndrome. In the meantime, we have decided to act now by eliminating any controversy that might exist associated with polyacrylate by voluntarily eliminating it from our products.

If you have Playtex Slender, Super or Super Plus tampons, Playtex will replace them without charge. Discard these tampons and mail just the front panel from the empty box (or boxes) to: International Playtex, Inc., P.O. Box 7010, Dover, Delaware 19903.

You will receive a coupon that you can redeem for a free package of new Playtex tampons, plus a refund for the cost of your postage. These tampons will begin appearing on store shelves by mid-April. Be sure to include your name and address. Allow 4-6 weeks for delivery.

Critics Delay Anti-Threat Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — Critics delayed action on a bill to keep candidates from soliciting political support from state employees despite claims that they need not fear the measure would lead to false accusations.

Rep. Walter Jones, D-Pitt, said there's nothing to prevent employees from fabricating charges against candidates now.

"I'm a candidate. I expect to seek re-election ... and I don't fear this bill," he told the State Personnel Committee on Wednesday. "I don't fear that state employees will lie about me."

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, disagreed.

"We're going to see instances at election time where some disgruntled state employee goes to a magistrate and says he was threatened, and the magistrate will have no choice but to issue a warrant," he said, adding that the potential for abuse would be "far worse than what we've had in the past."

Jones' bill would make it illegal for elected or appointed officials to threaten state workers with dismissal or other discipline for failing to support or contribute to any political candidate, cause or party. Violation of the misdemeanor would be punishable by six months in prison, a fine of up to $1,000 or both.

Jones told the panel his interest in the bill stemmed from several cases last summer in which government employees were threatened. He declined to give details, but said the situation "got out of hand."

"With the huge cost of conducting campaigns, the pressure is growing to raise money," said Jones. "Something's got to be done."

Reps. Betty Wiser, D-Wake, and Jim Cole, R-Watauga, said they also had gotten complaints in their areas. But Hunter said many of the alleged threats probably were innocent requests for help that the employees misunderstood.

"We're really putting a cloud over candidates' heads, making it difficult for them to get contributions," he said, adding that a simple request to buy a ticket to a fund-raiser could be construed as a threat if someone imagined he would be punished for declining.

Committee chairman Rep. Peggy Stamey, D-Wake, said district attorneys could refuse to prosecute a complaint that appeared frivolous. But Hunter said most would avoid such a judgment, fearing accusations of bias, and "let the jury decide."

Jones also said that officials or candidates would not be liable for threats made by their aides. "It would have to be a direct threat ... from your mouth," he said.

The committee decided to hold the bill until next week's meeting rather than send it to a subcommittee.

"I don't believe in rushing a bill and end up putting a piece of garbage on the floor," said Ms. Stamey.

Democrat Files Bill To Abolish Primary

RALEIGH (AP) — A Democratic senator wants to end North Carolina's presidential primary, but Republicans say they've done well with the primary system and want to keep it.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said Wednesday the Democratic Party fared better when convention delegates selected in state conventions picked the presidential nominee.

"Any sort of system that selected Franklin Delano Roosevelt, Harry Truman and John Kennedy must have been doing something right," Rand said. "We had more success with that system (in presidential elections) than we have had with primaries."

"I think the problem with the Democrats has not been the process by which the candidate has been nominated, but the candidate that has resulted from the process," said state GOP chairman Bob Bradshaw. "I don't believe that taking the process away from the people is a step in the right direction."

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, the Senate minority leader, said with Republicans like Jack Kemp and Howard Baker as possible GOP presidential candidates, he wanted to keep the primaries.

"From what I can see on the horizon, I want the primaries to stay," Redman said. "We've done pretty well with them."

Rand said the presidential primary season has become a contest of fund-raising and television packaging.

"The presidential primary campaign becomes an endurance contest to see who looks better on television for the longest," Rand said. "The amount of money spent for a presidential campaign is a national problem and primaries add to that."

Rand said North Carolina's primary comes too late to give the state much impact in picking a candidate, but a convention process could put the state delegation in a strong position in a convention fight for the nomination.

"The Democratic Party needs to reserve its energy for the fall," Rand said.

Senate Panel OKs Day Care Proposal

RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of tighter child day-care regulations say they have stifled the last objections to the bill, but at least one official says the decision to weave several bills into one could cause trouble.

"I don't think it's as good as it could be if you could iron out the problems with the weaker bills," said John Lail, director of the Office of Day Care Licensing, after the Senate Children and Youth Committee approved the omnibus bill Wednesday. "Some are not as strong as the others; not as well written. It could drag even the strong bills down."

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, committee chairman, disagreed, saying, "The strong (sections) will pick the others up." He said the bill will probably go to the full Senate next Wednesday or Thursday and that it is unlikely to be amended further.

New standards, inspection procedures and a special unit on child abuse and neglect are in the package, which also would bring 4,500 day-care plans under state inspections for the first time.

"The fiscal note is going to be staggering" when the costs of the bills are combined, said Lail, with $1 million going to day-care plan inspections alone.

Hipps, who had trouble finding all of the fiscal notes for the individual bills, said the money for the legislation is already in the appropriations bill.

During committee action Wednesday, Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, amended the bill to exempt church-run day care from training, education and age-appropriate activities called for by the legislation. Religious groups agreed to remain covered by safety, health, sanitation and nutrition sections.

Hipps said the compromise removes what may be the last roadblock to passing the bill.

"If this brings them into full support on the bill, they've got a deal," he said.

Senator Says Tax Plan Faces Change

RALEIGH (AP) — The intangibles and inventory taxes and the sales tax on food and drugs probably will undergo change, but won't be eliminated as Gov. Jim Martin wants, a Senate leader says.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, co-chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, appointed a 10-member subcommittee Wednesday to hammer out an omnibus tax-cut bill.

The panel is expected to report to the full committee in about three weeks, said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, adding that prolonged negotiations with the House would be needed to fashion a mutually acceptable package.

"Normally there are differences between the House and Senate over something this major, and it usually ends up in a conference committee," said Jordan. "The big question is how much we'll be able to cut and we don't know that yet."

Thomas said there is considerable support in the Senate for lifting the intangibles tax on bank deposits, but not necessarily on stocks and bonds.

An income tax credit for low-income food tax payers and a partial credit on the inventory tax are possible, along with reform of the inheritance tax, he said.

House and Senate tax committee leaders have been negotiating privately for "some time," Thomas said. He said the House was "further along than we are" although its Finance Committee has dealt only with minor bills in its meetings and has no counterpart to the Senate subcommittee.

The talks have revealed significant disagreement over which taxes to cut and by how much, he said.

House Finance Committee chairman Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, said, "When the Senate produces a bill, we'll be ready."

Senate subcommittee members, in addition to Thomas and Finance co-chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, include Sens. Joseph Thomas, D-Craven; Bill Staton, D-Lee; Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir; Aaron Plyler, D-Union; Tony Rand, D-Cumberland; R.C. Soles, D-Columbus; Bill Redman, R-Iredell; and Paul Smith, R-Rowan.

Martin, who made tax reform the centerpiece of his winning campaign and his legislative program, last week submitted a bill calling for repeal of the property taxes on intangible assets and business inventories and the state sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines.

He estimates that the cost of the package would be $70.3 million in fiscal 1985-86 and increase yearly, hitting $489 million when fully implemented in fiscal 1988-89.

Redman is sponsoring the Martin bill, while Democrats have introduced more than a dozen tax-relief measures including partial or local-option repeal of the intangibles and inventory taxes, repeal of the inheritance tax, an income tax credit for food tax payments, and an income tax cut on the first $2,000 assessed.

The latest came Wednesday as Rand proposed a 10-year phaseout of the inheritance tax on farms. "I think this would encourage people to remain on the farm and stay in agriculture," he said.

Rand, chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said it appears the state can afford to cut taxes, but by less than Martin wants.

"That's just not realistic in light of the education spending we need to do ... and you look at the 5 percent revenue increases in February and realize the economy's not growing as fast as it was," he said.

Coronary Angioplasty Offered at PCMH

By CAROL BLACKLEY TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

A non-surgical treatment for coronary artery disease known as PTCA — percutaneous transluminal coronary angioplasty — is now being done at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, affording Eastern North Carolinians access to an alternative to heart bypass surgery without leaving the region.

The procedure consists of running a guiding catheter, usually from an entry made in an artery in the groin, into a blocked coronary artery to just past the site of the blockage. A smaller dilatation catheter is then threaded through the outer (guiding) catheter to the site. The balloon portion of the dilatation catheter is placed in the middle of the blockage. A small amount of dye may be injected so the physician conducting the procedure can see the artery more clearly. He will then inflate the balloon section of the catheter one or more times at that point to break up the fatty tissue and open the passage. All this is done under fluoroscopy — live x-ray — and with a heart monitor, so the physician can see at every moment what's going on in the coronary artery in which he's working.

Done with the patient awake, the procedure takes place in the cardiac catheterization laboratory. The patient is able to cooperate and tell the physician if he or she is experiencing any discomfort. The patient who has the procedure have already had a catheterization which sighted the blockage of vital blood flow to the heart.

The procedure has been done in the PCMH heart catheterization lab only since late last fall. Though a number of local physicians were qualified to perform it, it could not begin here until a cardiac surgery program was underway, because every angiography must be done only when there is a cardiac surgical team standing by. Only one in every 20 patients will need to go from the cath lab immediately into surgery, Dr. Douglas Privette said, but the procedure has to have that backup. He explained, "In rare instances, the lesion we're attempting to unblock closes up completely and then the patient must be maintained artificially until a surgeon can unblock the vital artery."

Dr. Privette is a cardiologist in private practice in Greenville who does the procedure. He said this procedure, like bypass surgery, is only palliative in nature, that is it's a treatment, not a cure, for the effects of coronary artery disease.

It's a way to avoid or postpone bypass surgery, sometimes by several years," he said. "It is often used when there is only one seriously blocked coronary artery and when the patient, because of other health problems, is not a good surgery candidate. "It's much easier for the patient and his or her family to deal with than is bypass surgery," he said. "Hospitalization for coronary angiography is usually only about three days and the patient can often be back at work in five days. The cost to the patient and/or his insurer is usually about $5,000, whereas bypass surgery can cost $20,000 to $25,000."

So far, only patients with one lesion have been treated at Pitt Memorial, but some medical centers in the country are treating multiple lesions this way, Privette said. So far no one treated here has had to go immediately into surgery.

The patients who elect to make major lifestyle changes like adopting much better eating habits and giving up smoking and beginning serious exercise programs can often slow the progress of coronary artery disease and alleviate their symptoms for long periods, he said.

One out of three persons restenose (have an artery reclose or practically reclose) within six months. Scar tissue sometimes develops. The restenosing is usually noted by the patient himself or herself because of chest pain, though it's also watched through regular checkups by a physician.

Privette pointed out that angioplasty — introduction of a balloon into arteries to open them — has been done in other parts of the body for several years and continues to be done — in the limbs, in the kidney area, wherever there is a blockage. Much is done at PCMH.

Coronary angiography was developed by Dr. Andreas Grundzig in Sweden about five years ago. He has since moved to Emory University in Atlanta and there he teaches the procedure to many physicians each year. Dr. Privette studied there, as did several of the technicians who work in the PCMH heart catheterization lab. Dr. William Minter who has assisted Dr. Privette with angiographies studied at Vanderbilt University. Several other local physicians have either been certified in the procedure or expect to be certified soon.

Prior to development of the local program, some Eastern North Carolinians were sent to Emory for the procedure. Some still go to Duke and Chapel Hill.

"Coronary angiography is a very appropriate and useful adjunct to our cardiac surgery program here," Dr. Randolph Chitwood, chief cardiac surgeon, said. "With this procedure and the occasional use of streptokinase" (an enzyme for breaking up coronary blockages) we feel we're able to offer people in Eastern North Carolina anything they can receive anywhere for the treatment of coronary artery disease. This procedure is necessary to make our coronary care program the first-class service it is."

The equipment used to conduct a coronary angioplasty is shown. The physician performing the procedure uses air pressure to inflate the "balloon" which breaks up fatty deposits that threaten to totally block vital coronary arteries.

Maternal PKU Is Found Causing Brain Damage Some 20 Years Later

By Linda A. Haac
"Developments" Editor
UNC Child Development Institute

Despite 20 years of effort in the earliest, largest and most successful program to screen and treat Americans for a genetic disease, doctors may have only temporarily halted the effects of a rare metabolic disorder known as phenylketonuria or PKU.

Its effects are now showing up in children of the females successfully treated. The children are being damaged in the womb by the level of the chemical phenylalanine in the mother's blood. Maternal PKU is what researchers in North America and Europe are calling this newly seen development.

If people who inherit PKU disorder are not diagnosed in infancy and controlled by diet during childhood, the condition leads to severe mental retardation. A faulty gene keeps the body from breaking down and using phenylalanine, an amino acid found in protein. This dramatically interferes with the growth of the brain. Thanks to nationwide testing of infants for PKU since 1965 and the treatment of those who inherit the disease, youngsters with PKU are reaching child-bearing age as healthy and productive citizens.

The sharpest rise in PKU victims will come in the mid- to late-1980's predicts Dr. Henry Neil Kirkman, chief of genetics and metabolism at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and researcher with the Biological Sciences Research Center in Chapel Hill.

No more youngsters are inheriting the PKU gene than in previous decades, Kirman and others have found, but children of those treated are beginning to be born. Maternal PKU works like fetal alcohol syndrome in which a child is damaged before birth by a toxic substance. In this case, a natural amino acid is the culprit.

For two decades now, newborns in the United States have routinely had their heels pricked before leaving the hospital to obtain a blood sample for a PKU test. Excess levels of phenylalanine in the blood point to the gene for the disease. Each week across the country, an average of five infants are found to have PKU. They are quickly placed on a special low-phenylalanine diet to limit their intake of the amino acid.

The progress of these youngsters is followed during childhood by doctors at special PKU clinics throughout America. Between the ages of 10 and 12, once their brains have developed enough they are usually taken off the highly restrictive diet. Phenylalanine again builds up in their bodies, but only barely affects the almost mature brain.

"The amino acid doesn't seriously affect an adult, but when a PKU woman gets pregnant, the developing nervous system of her fetus, even more vulnerable than a newborn's, is assaulted by the high amount of phenylalanine in her blood," Kirman explained.

"The baby's brain will be irreversibly damaged by the amino acid before birth, even though the baby was normal at the moment of conception and did not inherit the PKU gene," the geneticist said. "A woman with the disorder needs to go back on her childhood diet before becoming pregnant, or else she risk having an extremely retarded youngster."

Dr. Kirkman tells of Mary Jones (not her real name), an 18-year-old college student from North Carolina, has PKU. Having inherited the gene, she was saved from its effects before birth because her mother's body acted the way a dialysis machine does for kidney patients, filtering out the excess phenylalanine that she could not use.

After her delivery, the amino acid increased in her body to a dangerous level. If she had not been treated, the effect of the phenylalanine would have been devastating. From shortly after her birth, she was fed, not breast milk or standard infant formula, but a foul-smelling milk substitute that tastes like raw potatoes.

PKU children think it's great since that is all they have known since they were one-to-three weeks old," Kirkman pointed out. "Unfortunately, there is no natural food low in phenylalanine that is not also dangerously low in protein."

To make the special "milk," proteins are broken down into their individual amino acids, then filtered through charcoal to extract phenylalanine.

Once Miss Jones began eating solid foods, she was limited to fruits, some grains and certain vegetables. She was not allowed to have meat, eggs nor dairy products. She continued to drink her special milk till she was 7. At 12½, she was taken off the diet.

Now, however, Miss Jones has been told that she needs to begin to follow the diet again before she conceives a child. Otherwise, there is a 90 percent chance that any baby she would bear will be severely retarded, with an IQ below 60.

But even if she goes back on the diet, doctors cannot promise her that all of her babies would have normal intelligence.

Until recently, the story of PKU had appeared one of success. Early in the 1960's, Dr. Robert Guthrie developed a simple inexpensive test for the disorder that allowed hospital staff to draw a blood sample from a baby, put a drop on a special paper and mail it in a regular envelope to a central laboratory. The amount of bacterial growth around the blood droplet indicated whether the infant had inherited the PKU gene.

About the same time, researchers in pharmaceutical houses developed the milk substitute that provides the protein PKU children need without the phenylalanine. With the test and the treatment in hand, parents and others lobbied legislators to pass state laws requiring PKU screening. Many states did and hospitals and physicians in other states voluntarily instituted testing for the gene.

But now Kirkman and other PKU workers see difficulties ahead. Will women with the disease plan every baby, go on the diet before pregnancy and stick to it? Will they once again take the equivalent of 1½ quarts a day of the special milk they need and may now find repulsive, especially if they have morning sickness. Will they pay the cost — now about $40 a week?

Several dozen babies have already been born retarded from maternal PKU in the United States. Over 1000 women with the disorder are now old enough to have children and the number increases each year. All need to be made aware of the risk they face.

Silent Ischemia Is Preventable, Researcher Says

Silent ischemia, the possibly fatal heart condition that has puzzled cardiologists because of its symptomless nature, can be prevented, according to a California researcher.

Dr. William E. Shell, associate professor of medicine at the University of California at Los Angeles School of Medicine, told a symposium in Anaheim, Calif., recently that the small medicated skin patches commonly worn by angina sufferers can have a dramatic measurable effect on the painless episodes in which the heart is deprived of the blood it needs in order to remain healthy.

Shell's was said to be one of the first public reports to suggest that this silent form of heart disease can be successfully treated by a simple widely available preventative worn on the skin. Shell expressed concern that, if left untreated, silent ischemia may lead to sudden death.

"There are some patients who simply never feel pain," Shell told cardiologists attending the symposium sponsored by Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in conjunction with the annual meeting of the American College of Cardiology, held recently. "They're having all kinds of (ischemic) episodes...and they simply don't feel pain."

Shell explained that ischemia occurs when there is an insufficient supply of blood reaching the heart. Ischemia has long been associated with painful angina, but researchers now are showing that many angina sufferers also experience episodes of ischemia in which there is little or no pain. Unfortunately, Shell noted, it appears that the more ischemic episodes a patient has, the greater that patient's chances of sudden death. Recent reports have indicated that as many as 80 percent of ischemic episodes may be silent.

The finding that many patients have "silent" ischemic episodes, in addition to painful attacks of angina, comes largely from the use of 24-hour ambulatory electrocardiography, popularly known as Holter Monitoring or walking EKG, in which a patient wears a small recording device that produces an electrocardiogram over the course of an entire day, as the patient pursues normal daily activities.

Shell explained that, in patients whose walking EKGs revealed silent ischemic episodes, the unwelcome events could be curtailed and in some cases virtually eliminated through use of a small skin patch containing the drug nitroglycerin.

"We've been able to reduce them to near zero," Shell said. He said the patients he studied were chosen after close monitoring showed they had all suffered many silent ischemic episodes.

The patients had no idea that episodes occurred," Shell said. "Indeed," he added, "many of the episodes were recorded as patients slept."

Vet Says Chocolate Is Lethal For Dogs

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Dogs that eat chocolate treats such as candy Easter bunnies can die from satisfying their sweet tooth, an Ohio State University veterinarian warns.

Pamela Hand, an instructor at Ohio State's outpatient clinic of the College of Veterinary Medicine, says veterinarians recently realized chocolate can be lethal to dogs.

"Chocolate contains theobromine, which is similar to caffeine. It has similar effects as caffeine — it causes cardiac muscle stimulation and central nervous system stimulation," Ms. Hand said Wednesday.

"Depending on the dose, the substance can cause illness or death in dogs, just like it could in humans," she said.

"If a 10-pound puppy eats two ounces of milk chocolate, it can be poisonous," Ms. Hand said, noting that a 5-pound puppy which ate a one-pound chocolate bunny last year died within 24 hours.

"I know of a situation where a 40-pound springer spaniel ate a 2-pound bag of chocolate chips and died. There's individual variation in everything. The higher the dose, the greater the chance it could be fatal."

The danger is not as acute in humans because their bodies handle chocolate at a different rate than dogs, Ms. Hand said.

"It would be toxic to cats, but cats do not have the same sweet tooth that people or dogs have. They would be much less likely to eat it," she said.

"The symptoms usually start out with restlessness or nervousness, anxiety, or agitation," Ms. Hand said. "They can show vomiting and diarrhea and often times they develop seizures. If they get to the point where they're showing seizures, like an epileptic fit, that's a very bad prognosis."

The potential for dogs eating chocolate exists year-round, but probably increases around holidays such as Easter, Valentine's Day and Mother's Day.

She suggests if pet owners see their dog eating chocolate, they should contact a veterinarian immediately.

"There is no antidote. If it's within a short period of time following ingestion we would recommend inducing vomiting. There are suggestions we can give them."

Pentagon Audit Says Government Paid General Dynamics Too Much

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A team of auditors ordered to scrutinize the administrative expenses of General Dynamics Corp. has concluded the Pentagon paid too much in overhead claims to the giant defense contractor, sources say.

The completion of the audit means that a freeze on overhead payments imposed last month will soon come to an end, but it also means the firm is facing a new fight with the Pentagon over "the way they do business and what they charge the government," one source added.

The sources, none of whom would discuss the matter unless guaranteed anonymity, refused to specify late Wednesday exactly how much money was involved.

"All I can say is that it's a pretty good piece of change," said one source. "I can't say more because we're still studying our options. But it won't be very long before we spell it all out."

The sources said the results of the audit, ordered by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger on March 5 when he announced a 30-day freeze on all monthly overhead payments to General Dynamics, were presented Wednesday to Deputy Defense Secretary William H. Taft IV.

The freeze had affected "general and administrative claims" by General Dynamics estimated to total $40 million a month. Weinberger ordered the freeze as part of a "get tough" campaign against defense contractors, saying he wanted "a complete and comprehensive review of billing procedures at all General Dynamics locations" before resuming payments.

The defense secretary also said at the time he was fully prepared to extend the freeze until the audit was completed. One source said Wednesday the freeze might still be extended beyond its scheduled expiration on Friday, "but the auditors have, in fact, completed their work."

"If the freeze is extended, it will only be until some final decisions are made on the auditors' recommendations," the source added.

Asked what type of decisions had to be made, the source replied: "On the method of recovery (of funds)."

A spokesman for General Dynamics, Alvin A. Spivack, said Wednesday evening the firm had not received any word of the suspension being lifted or been informed of any audit results. He declined further comment.

When he announced his crackdown on General Dynamics, Weinberger indicated he expected his auditors to determine whether the firm had improperly billed taxpayers for corporate trips and other expenses. The action followed congressional hearings that spotlighted a number of questionable bills submitted by General Dynamics, including a claim for the cost of boarding a dog in a kennel and country club expenses.

General Dynamics Chairman David Lewis subsequently acknowledged the company's billing practices "left much to be desired." He then announced the firm was voluntarily withdrawing $23 million of the $170 million in overhead claims it submitted to the Pentagon from 1979 to 1982.

The sources indicated Wednesday, however, the company's action had not solved the problem.

"Look, the sexy stuff like dog kennel fees has been taken care of," explained one source. "They've found some other things — more technical things — like data processing and the way they bill workman's compensation."

Another source said he was sure General Dynamics would challenge the auditor's findings, "but at least we'll have the money in our pocket until the matter is resolved."

The standard audits performed by the Pentagon of a contractor's bills normally are done months if not years after the actual payment, meaning the company has the use of any contested money during the interim.

General Dynamics, which in fiscal 1983 was the nation's largest defense contractor, builds all the Navy's Trident missile-firing submarines, most of its attack subs, Army tanks, F-16 jet fighters, Tomahawk cruise missiles and a variety of other weaponry.

Psychic bidders remember and boast about their rare successes; they tend to overlook their many failures. East's efforts on this hand produced a spectacular Pyrrhic victory.

After North's takeout double, East's bid of one spade would be considered mandatory my most psychers. South correctly doubled to show a spade suit, then bid hearts at his next turn. We are at a loss to understand North's raise to three hearts — perhaps he feared a bad spade break, or was worried that his partner might have only three spades and five hearts.

East had succeeded in his objective — he had kept his opponents out of their 4-4 spade fit. However, at four spades — the contract North-South would probably have reached had East not indulged in his shenanigans — declarer would have had to lose three side-suit tricks and a trump. Let's follow what happened at the rather strange contract of four hearts. West led the king and ace of clubs and continued with a third round of the suit. (No other defense would have been any better.) Dummy's queen won and declarer sluffed a spade. Declarer led the jack of trumps from the table and, when that was allowed to hold, he continued with the ten of hearts, overtaking in hand with the queen.

South was fortunate that, when West won the ace of hearts, he could not continue another club, which would have forced declarer to ruff. No matter what West chose to return, declarer would be able to win in hand, draw the last trumps and come to ten tricks via three trumps, two spades, four diamonds and a club.

Perhaps we should rewrite our bidding texts to cater for 4-2 fits instead of 4-4!

Cyndi Lauper Wins Six Video Awards

By BRUCE V. BIGELOW
Associated Press Writer
SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Eccentric songstress Cyndi Lauper dominated the American Video Awards as her "Time After Time" and "She Bop" won a total of six honors, including best pop video and top female performance.

The romantic "Time After Time" took the pop video and female performer awards Wednesday night along with best director for Ed Griles and best lighting design for Michael Negrin. "She Bop" won best choreography honors for Pat Birch and best costume design for Laurel Wills and Biff Chandler.

"Heart of Rock and Roll" by Huey Lewis and the News was named best group performance; "Eat It" by "Weird Al" Yankovic won best performance by a male artist; "When Doves Cry" by Prince, claimed best soul video; and "Where's the Dress" by Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley was named best country video.

The National Academy of Video Arts and Sciences staged the third annual awards at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium with radio's Casey Kasem, jazz star Herbie Hancock and TV personality Lisa Hartman as hosts. The taped show will be carried later via syndication.

Miss Lauper, 31, who won a Grammy in February as best new artist and was nominated seven times for video honors, didn't let down her colorful image Wednesday. With hair in a wild plume of orange, red and a few other colors, she wore brown paisley pajamas and a cartridge belt with celluloid filmstrips draped over her shoulders.

"When I wrote it, I didn't sit down to write a hit song," Miss Lauper said of "Time after Time." "I wrote it to be a very special song that was very, very real. It was based on very real feelings."

The video portrays a woman breaking up with her boyfriend.

Ken Kragen, the driving force behind the pop charity project, "USA for Africa," received a special humanitarian award.

"USA for Africa is not about taking awards," Kragen said. "It's not about accepting credit. It's about feeding people."

Yankovic accepted the award for "Eat It," a takeoff on Michael Jackson's single "Beat It" from 1983, in the best male performer category. The other nominees were Bruce Springsteen, Don Henley and George Michael.

"I'm sure that Bruce Springsteen is crying right now. I feel real bad about it, but that's the business," said Yankovic, whose comedy album picked up a Grammy earlier this year.

Yankovic's video about fear and loathing at the breakfast table used the same sets as Jackson's video about gang warfare but had the fighters square off with forks.

Yankovic impersonated a couple of Michael Jackson dance steps as he presented an award for best home video to Michael Jackson's sister, Rebbe, who accepted her brother's award for "The Making of Michael Jackson's Thriller."

Huey Lewis and the News' "Heart of Rock and Roll," a montage of their nationwide road show, beat out Van Halen, REO Speedwagon and Wham!, which was named best new video artist for "Wake Me Up Before You Go Go."

"The Making of Michael Jackson's Thriller" also received an award for best long form video.

Prince's award was accepted by Apollonia, who starred with him in the film "Purple Rain." Clad in a see-through black negligee, she told the celebrity-studded crowd: "Prince is working this evening. He's viciously doing what he does best."

Chuck Mangione's "Diana D" won a best editing award for Zbigniew Rybczynski and best set design was given to Gray Lipley for "The Wild Boys" by Duran Duran.

Along with Miss Lauper's "Time After Time" and Springsteen's "Dancing in the Dark," the other nominees for best pop video were Philip Bailey's "Easy Lover," Paul McCartney's "No More Lonely Nights" and Thomas Dolby's "Hyperactive."

Rod Stewart, whose "Young Turks" video was selected best of the year at the first American Video Awards in 1983, was honored as a member of the NAVAS Hall of Fame.

Candidates included all videos produced and distributed to cable or broadcast television between Dec. 2, 1983 and Dec. 1, 1984. Nominees were selected after two ballots by the 500 eligible members of the academy, which was founded in 1980 for professionals in the new video industry.

Dance King Reaches 90

HONOLULU (AP) — Arthur Murray, the bossa nova king and television's stone-faced waltz merchant, marks his 90th birthday today with a cold glance at death and a good-humored dare: "Make me smile."

With age, Murray has bent a degree or two from vertical. He is trim and physically fit but no longer the poker-backed figure who demonstrated the tango, the rhumba, the bossa nova and the cha-cha with wife Kathryn on "The Arthur Murray Party."

He sees the beginning of his tenth decade as no cause for rejoicing. "You get nearer the grave," he said.

Dressed in a long-sleeve blue shirt and gray slacks, Murray was in a whimsical mood during a recent interview at his Diamond Head apartment. "Make me smile," he dared the photographer.

In fact, Murray does smile. You might too, in his nimble shoes.

Within his penthouse is a multimillion-dollar art collection; outside is a sweeping view of Waikiki Beach. It's a long way from the Lower East Side of New York where he was born of poor immigrant parents from Austria.

"I started out with a strong inferiority complex," Murray said. "I didn't think I had any ability."

Starting with one dance studio at the age of 18, he built a nationwide chain of 500 studios, developed a television show which lasted off and on for 11 years, then managed a $15 million investment portfolio.

"There were 180 people I invested for over four years," he said. "They got back 350 percent of the money they invested."

He no longer manages other people's money, but still gives advice.

"Today I feel that the biggest mistake people can make is to invest their money in the stock market. And if they're in, they should get out."

He suffered a tennis injury to his shoulder a year and a half ago, which keeps him on prescription drugs and prevents him from raising his right arm, but he has no trouble dancing. For exercise he swims in the Pacific Ocean.

Gospel Singer Tops Dove Awards List

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Sandi Patti, chosen top gospel artist for the third time in four years, says she is motivated to perform not by the awards she receives, but by her faith in the message of her songs.

Early today, Miss Patti joined about 100 other gospel performers at a Nashville studio to record a Christian music sequel to "We Are the World," the successful effort by pop singers to help aid African famine victims.

"I would be doing what I'm doing even if there were no awards, because I believe in what I'm doing," Miss Patti said after winning three top honors at the 16th annual Dove awards Wednesday night.

"I believe in what the Lord is doing in people's lives," said the 28-year-old Anderson, Ind., singer, whose hits include "More than Wonderful" and "Upon This Rock."

It was the second year in a row and third in the last four that Miss Patti has claimed the gospel music industry's top award. She also won female vocalist of the year honors for the fourth straight year and inspirational album of the year for "Songs from the Heart."

After the award ceremony, Miss Patti and other singers jammed a recording studio and spent about an hour in prayer before they began recording "Do Something Now," the proceeds of which will go to African famine victims.

Compassion International, a relief agency based in Colorado Springs, Colo., will distribute the proceeds after the song is released in about three weeks, organizers said.

The Dove award for song of the year went to "Upon This Rock," written by Gloria Gaither and Dony McGuire and recorded by Miss Patti.

Steve Green, who sings "Proclaim The Glory of The Lord," was named top male vocalist, and Michael W. Smith, who co-wrote song of the year nominee "Angels," was picked as songwriter of the year.

Other Dove awards included instrumental album of the year, "Celebrate the Freedom" by Phil Driscoll; worship and praise album of the year, "The Praise in Us" by Neal Joseph; and musical album of the year, "The Race is On" by Steve Taylor.

Smith said his award signaled a wider acceptance of less traditional gospel songs.

"I write rock 'n' gospel that's more contemporary and not so much for the church," he said.

Confiscated Paper Lists Plot To Overthrow U.S.

ROANOKE, Va. (AP) — A neo-Nazi document found on white supremacist David Lane when he was arrested last week in North Carolina details a shadowy organization that seeks the violent overthrow of the U.S. government.

The handwritten document, attached to a search warrant unsealed in U.S. District Court in Roanoke Wednesday, outlines the purpose, structure and membership of the Bruders Schweigen, also known as The Order. Authorities say the group is responsible for a series of armored-car holdups and shootouts with police across a number of Western states.

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney Kenneth McAllister filed papers in U.S. Middle District Court in Greensboro, N.C., Wednesday urging that Lane be held without bond and returned to Pennsylvania.

Police seized the document when they arrested Lane in Winston-Salem, N.C., Saturday on counterfeiting charges filed in Philadelphia. He is being held in the Forsyth County Jail under no bond.

Lane, 46, of Denver, Colo., also is wanted for questioning in connection with the slaying of Denver radio talk-show host Alan Berg.

"We are realists," the document states, "recognizing that under the current one-man, one-vote democratic system, we are outnumbered a hundred to one, not only on this continent, but worldwide, by a coalition of blacks, browns, yellows, liberals, communists, queers, race-mixing religious zealots, race-traitors, preachers, and judges.

"All of these are under the total control or influence of organized Jewry, and all of them desire nothing more fervently than the extermination of any white man so courageous as to make a public statement advocating the continued existence of his race."

The 18-page document is signed "The Bruders Schweigen, David Lane." It states that Bruders Schweigen, German for Silent Brothers, is taken "from an old German poem in which a group of soldiers declare that they will be true to the memory of their kinsmen, even though all the rest of the nation be disloyal."

The document refers to the U.S. government as the ZOG, Zionist Occupation Government. "We have decided to raise the sword against ZOG," it states, "knowing full well the consequences and that perhaps we seal our own fate."

Patrick County Sheriff Jay Gregory has called Lane his most "serious suspect" in the Dec. 3 robbery of the Meadows of Dan branch of the First National Bank of Stuart.

In addition to the document, a gun and clothing similar to that used by the Patrick County bank robber were found after Lane's arrest.

According to a search warrant and other federal court documents, Lane was carrying a 9mm black automatic handgun when he was arrested Saturday at a Winston-Salem shopping center. A masked man carrying a black automatic handgun had robbed the Meadows of Dan bank, Gregory said.

Authorities said Lane spent at least a month before his capture hiding out in a Patrick County farmhouse belonging to James Keith Atkins of Greensboro, the second-highest-ranking member of the Aryan Crusaders for Christ.

Atkins and one other member of the Aryan Crusaders, who were arrested along with Lane, have been released, and no charges have been filed against them.

In the documents Wednesday morning, McAllister argued that Lane might flee if he were freed on bond. Lane has no family in North Carolina and has been unemployed since about August of 1983, court documents said.

McAllister's motion argued that holding Lane without bond would "reasonably assure the appearance of the defendant at trial and reasonably assure the safety of any other person and the community in this case."

A briefcase, duffle bags, backpack and 24-inch suitcase found in the farmhouse were taken to the Patrick County Jail, where they were kept until a search warrant was obtained Monday from U.S. District Court Judge Jackson Kiser.

According to the warrant, items found in Lane's luggage included a copy of Hitler's "Mein Kampf," California and Iowa birth certificates for a William Eugene Johnson, military-style clothing and equipment, and ammunition.

Also Wednesday, the leader of Aryan Crusaders for Christ in North Carolina said Lane is "a true brother."

"I didn't have the privilege" of meeting Lane, Roland Wayne Wood said. "I would have shook his hand."

Wood is a defendant in the $48 million civil suit being heard in federal court in Winston-Salem. The suit was filed against Klansmen and Nazis by survivors of a shootout at a 1979 anti-Klan rally in Greensboro, where five Communist Workers Party members died.

The Order had ties to North Carolina racist groups long before Lane was arrested, Klan observers and Wood have said.

Wood said the doctrine of his group and The Order is based on the concept that white Aryans are the true Israelites, and that Jews are satanic imposters.

Aryan Nations, he said, is a group "teaching the truth about identity, teaching the truth about white people." He said the groups oppose race-mixing.

Tobacco Hearing Planned

By The Associated Press
Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C. is urging tobacco growers and non-farmers from the 6th Congressional District to testify during a hearing Friday in Greensboro so Coble can "get first-hand information on tobacco and the federal programs which affect the crop."

"The information we gather ... will be of great help to us as we continue to debate the future of tobacco on Capitol Hill," Coble said.

Coble said he will be joined at the hearing by a tobacco specialist from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, J.W. York, and Congressman Pat Roberts, a Kansas Republican who sits on the House Tobacco and Peanuts Subcommittee.

Coble said he has mailed out personal invitations to 14,000 farmers in the 6th District.

In another tobacco development, Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C. said Wednesday he has given Philip Morris, Inc. until April 15 to agree to a plan in which cigarette manufacturers would purchase more than 1.4 billion pounds of surplus tobacco.

If the company does not agree by that date and if no alternative plan to save the tobacco price support system can be found, Rose said he will introduce a bill requiring that cigarette excise tax funds to be used to support the tobacco program.

The bill would eliminate the "No Net Cost" assessments farmers must now pay to operate the program. Rose said his bill would earmark two cents from the excise tax consumers pay on each pack of cigarettes for a "tobacco equalization fund" that would finance the entire tobacco program.

"I believe I've got the votes to get this passed," Rose said.

Some PKU clinics are beginning to advise girls with the gene to stay on the diet, despite the personal sacrifice and expense to them and their families and the government-supported programs that sometimes foot the bill for PKU treatment.

A concerted way must be developed to follow females with PKU throughout their adolescence and child-bearing years, just as they were worked with in early childhood. The National Institute for Child Health and Human Development has launched a seven-year study of its consequences, involved some 40 states, Western Europe, the British Isles, and Poland.

The defective gene strikes approximately one of every 10,000 persons of Western European extraction, but is rarely found in Japan, Finland and among blacks, who have only a one in 70,000-to-100,000 chance of inheriting the disorder.

Kirkman also sees an additional problem that must be dealt with. The trend towards early hospital discharge for new mothers and their newborns must be dealt with, since the blood test for PKU is most accurate if done when the infant is three to five days old. A program must be set up to do the testing even after discharge from the hospital if early discharge is used.

Tarboro Receiving Development Grant

RALEIGH (AP) — Natural Resources and Community Development Secretary Thomas Rhodes Wednesday announced a total of $1.9 million in preliminary economic development awards to four municipalities and four counties.

"We are especially pleased that these projects will create over 1,100 jobs and result in the investment of more than $29 million in other funds," Rhodes said.

Congressmen Urging Textile Quota Checks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is coming under fire from Republican members of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee for not being more forceful in policing textile trade agreements.

Representatives of the U.S. Customs Service, the Department of Commerce and the Office of the U.S. Trade Representative appeared before the trade subcommittee Wednesday and heard pointed attacks on their effectiveness in stopping circumvention of the agreements.

Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., told administration witnesses their efforts "appear to have been hit and miss."

"It looks like you fly by the seat of your pants in the absence of clear guidelines" from the administration, Crane said.

And Rep. Ed Jenkins, D-Ga., the sponsor of sweeping legislation that would establish a new system of import quotas to protect American producers, noted that current trade agreements were designed in part to protect U.S. jobs.

"If that is your responsibility, then you're not doing a very good job," Jenkins said, noting that more than 200,000 textile jobs have been lost in the last three years.

The witnesses countered that the strength of the U.S. dollar is primarily responsible for the flood of textile imports that is threatening the existence of the domestic industry.

But Rep. Carroll Campbell Jr., R-S.C., said the problems of the American textile industry "are not wholly the fault of the dollar." He said part of the problem is "the way our trade agreements are being enforced."

"The fact is, we have set up rules," Campbell said. "Now, how do we enforce them? Our trading partners are finding ingenious ways to circumvent the rules. What else do we need to do? Do we need more tools?"

John P. Simpson, the director of the Customs Service office of regulations and rulings, said there is "no way we will ever be able to detect every violation" of textile trade agreements.

But, he added, "The job we're doing now is not only credible, but is as effective as you can reasonably expect."

Walter C. Lenahan, the deputy assistant secretary for textile and apparel trade for the Commerce Department, said the administration's textile import control program is "responsible" and "provides a measure of assistance to our domestic textile and apparel industry."

Wild Chickens Getting Control Of Rural Home

FRANKLIN TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Carol Patterson "didn't see any chickens" 11 years ago when she bought her house on a tree-filled one-acre lot in rural Gloucester County.

But soon after she planted a garden, wild chickens started coming out of the woods to peck at her tomatoes, dig out her tulip bulbs and coat her yard and front porch with droppings.

Their numbers have increased to the point where Ms. Patterson no longer allows her children to lie on the living room rug to watch television because of concern that foot traffic through the front porch has made it unsanitary.

"At this point, I'm getting disgusted," said Ms. Patterson, who estimated that 150 wild chickens regularly strut around her property.

She has tried everything to rid her lot of the fowl intruders.

She tried to take her neighbor, bird lover Valentine Koch, to court to stop him from feeding the birds but a judge threw the case out, ruling there is no law against wild chickens.

Many people have suggested she turn the feathered nuisances into meals.

"If somebody wants to make chicken dinners out of them, more power to them," she said. "I'm ready to have everybody down for a chicken barbecue ... I'll even do the cooking."

But Ms. Patterson "wouldn't even think" about eating the chickens because they have not been inoculated against avian flu, a recurring poultry disease in the region.

After failing to get much help from government officials, Ms. Patterson has turned to what she calls her "Annie Oakley" approach.

"I'll take the BB gun out every now and then when I get totally frustrated," she said. "I'll try to scope it out as best I can. I'm not a very good shot."

But when the gunfire subsides, the chickens strut right back.

Ronald Dixon, the township's animal warden, says the chickens may have been abandoned by a previous owner and wandered into the woods several hundred yards behind the house. He said none of the neighbors has complained about a problem.

Mayor Astor Giovannazzi said he would introduce an ordinance restricting chickens. Only pigs and dogs are now prohibited from running loose.

Despite it all, Ms. Patterson said she still likes chickens, although the experience has caused her to cringe when she sees them approach.

"You see a mother coming with five little ones and you think, 'Uh oh, here they go again.'"

Song Is No. 1

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "We Are the World," the song recorded by a 45 pop music stars to help African famine victims, has hit No. 1 on Billboard magazine's charts.

The song featuring the likes of Dionne Warwick, Kenny Rogers, Bob Dylan and Stevie Wonder became No. 1 in the United States on Wednesday "and more importantly, it's No. 1 across the board on the hot singles, the top 30 in sales and the top 30 in airplay," Billboard associate publisher Tom Noonan said.

The single fell short of predictions that it would skyrocket to No. 1 in two weeks, but Noonan said sales in the single's fourth week were strong and seemed likely to last.

More than 3 million of the seven-inch $1.98 version of the single had been sold, while just over 500,000 of the longer 12-inch, $4.98 single had been sold, Columbia Records said.
