Firefighters Continue To Battle Eastern Blaze

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
CRESWELL, N.C. (AP) — A 25-mile-wide fire that destroyed more than 90,000 acres in eastern North Carolina has been partially contained, but efforts to control the northward movement of the fire are continuing, a state Forest Service spokesman says.

E.F. Corn of the N.C. Forest Service said the estimated fire damage had been upgraded from 80,000 to 90,000 acres today, and the fire was partially contained around New Lake, which is also called Alligator Lake in Hyde County.

"The wind shift has allowed that area to be partially contained," Corn said. "But we are not at all saying that the fire is under control. There are still some areas (further north) that are still in danger."

Corn said the southern section of the fire had been partially contained and emphasis today would be on containing the northward movement of the blaze.

Meanwhile, officials hoped for rain that forecasters said would not come soon.

"We need a good soaking rain," said Tom Ditt of the state Division of Emergency Management. "The situation in eastern North Carolina is that it's burning underground ... with peat and other organic materials, that presents a lot of problems."

Jan Price of the National Weather Service in Raleigh said there was no rain in the fire area Sunday and none was forecast for the next couple days.

Northwesterly winds were gusting to about 30 mph today, said Chrystal Stowe, another emergency management spokesman, but no towns were threatened on the fire's present course.

"But if we get another wind shift like we did yesterday, that situation could change," Ms. Stowe said.

About 75 firefighters from the N.C. Forest Service were to begin setting up irrigation systems today to prevent the fire from crossing roads in the fire area, which runs parallel to the Intercoastal Waterway in Tyrrell County.

"They'll be using diesel lift pumps from the Department of Transportation to spray around the fire line area," said Ms. Stowe. "They have brought in 20 of them and placed them on standby."

The blazes in Washington, Tyrrell and Hyde counties were visible 40 miles away, and ash traveled 20 miles. Firefighters said the biggest problem they faced was wind, which gusted up to 20 mph and changed direction at least three times Sunday.

"It's hard to fight it because of the wind," said Creswell Fire Chief James Davenport.

"We were cutting trenches in between houses and just when we got it done, the wind changed, and the side of the fire became the front, and we didn't have time to cut new trenches," he said. "We just evacuated (houses in the area)."

Larry Such, a spokesman for the N.C. Fire Service, said, "It's been useless putting anything on it ... You just have to let it go and hope it will burn out without destroying anything."

About 12 homes were evacuated in the Gumneck Landing community Saturday, and another 14 people were asked to leave their homes in Scotia Sunday, according to Ms. Stowe. The families were later allowed to return to their homes.

Meanwhile, a 600-acre fire broke out Sunday night in Onslow County, but Ditt said no one was evacuated in that area.

Firefighters called in five water-carrying helicopters Sunday to hold back flames while they evacuated 12 families from the Gum Neck Landing area of Tyrrell County, said Dane Roten of the state Division of Forest Resources. The families later returned to their homes.

State forestry worker Tom Sabiny said the winds were driving sparks across firebreaks and starting new fires up to a half-mile behind firefighters.

A shelter was set up at Columbia High School, but the 14 people who had arrived at the shelter returned to their homes Sunday night.

In the fire's path, families loaded their furniture on any available trucks and began moving away from the blaze.

"I've seen several trucks with furniture go by today," said J.Z. McGowan, a farmer who gathered with others at a small country store south of Creswell. "They were leavin'. The fire would burn them up if they didn't."

"You could see it for miles last night," McGowan said. "Ain't no tellin' how many acres it's burned. I'll tell you this, it's the worst fire in North Carolina — ever."

It was not known when the fire might be contained, Such said.

"We'll try to get behind the fire. One of the problems we have is that the soil in the area is so organic in nature, that it burns long after the foliage has been burned," Such said.

"The worst thing about it is you'll (Please turn to page 10)

Tobacco Beds Need 'Plenty Of Water'

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The bone-dry weather this spring has left tobacco beds across the county extremely dry, say local agricultural officials, and in need of "plenty of water."

Problems with plant beds in Pitt County are "very real," said Tobacco Agent Mitch Smith. "The (tobacco) beds are very dry and irregular. There is a big need for more plant uniformity," he added. Water will "work wonders" on existing plants in tobacco beds "if the temperature is right."

Some beds, Smith said, contain seeds that have not yet germinated because of dryness. In those cases, reseeding is a possibility, he said, since it takes seeds approximately 38 days to germinate. "If conditions are right, some plants can be transplanted in 35 days," he said. "These plants may provide some competition to the earlier plants."

"For reseeding, farmers should use one-third of the amount of seed used to seed the bed initially," Smith said. After overseeding, "the main emphasis should be placed on plenty of water on the bed," he added. "A small sprinkle will not cut it." The dry weather has caused the salts in the soil to move to the surface of the bed, he said.

Managing plant beds for optimum growth "is very important this year," Smith said, because of the dry conditions. To do so, growers should incorporate three cultural practices — irrigation, punching holes in the curtain that covers the beds for ventilation and removing the curtain entirely.

To irrigate, farmers should remove the curtain from the beds around 1 p.m., "put plenty of water on the bed and leave the curtain off until night," Smith said. "If the temperature is expected to dip below 45 degrees Fahrenheit during the night, the curtain should be replaced."

When the temperature rises into the 70's and 80's during the day, the possibility of heat damage to plants in the beds "is very serious," Smith said. Hot, humid, days with no breeze provide the greatest threat, he added.

Farmers should check the temperature in the plant beds with a thermometer and ventilate whenever necessary, Smith said. "From the time of germination until plants are the size of a quarter is the time when they receive the most heat damage."

Gorbachev Agrees To Summit

By ROXINNE ERVASTI
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev, in a statement coinciding with visits by U.S. congressmen and a key Dutch official, said he has agreed to a superpower summit with President Reagan and has ordered a temporary freeze in deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe.

The new Kremlin leader also called Sunday for a U.S. moratorium on deployment of medium-range rockets in Europe and research on space-based missile defenses.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, with President Reagan at his ranch near Santa Barbara, Calif., said deployment of 572 U.S. missiles in Europe would continue as scheduled.

A freeze would preserve a 10-1

Soviet advantage in medium-range rockets, Speakes said. He said Gorbachev's offer was "not enough."

Speakes also said he did not believe Gorbachev's statements indicated a summit meeting was any closer.

The official Soviet news agency Tass today branded as "a gross lie" U.S. statements that the Soviet Union has a superiority in medium-range rockets in Europe, and said the Reagan administration had failed to count British and French nuclear forces and U.S. nuclear-capable bombers based in Europe.

"Washington has hastily dismissed the U.S.S.R.'s new peace initiatives," Tass said.

"It seems the U.S. administration wishes neither this, nor the other — neither the arms reduction, nor the renunciation of the arms buildup," the Soviet news agency said.

Gorbachev made the announcement of a unilateral freeze on medium-range rocket deployments in an interview with the Communist Party daily Pravda.

An English translation of the interview was distributed by Tass on Sunday. The interview appeared in today's Pravda.

"Starting with this day, and I want to emphasize this, the Soviet Union is introducing a moratorium on the deployment of its intermediate-range missiles and suspending the implementation of other reply measures in Europe" until November, Gorbachev said.

"At the same time the deployment of American intermediate-range missiles in Europe should be terminated and, correspondingly, the buildup of our reply measures," he said. However, Gorbachev did not tie the Soviet moratorium to a suspension of NATO deployments.

Gorbachev said after November, "the decision we will make depends on whether the United States follows our example: Will it stop or not the deployment of its intermediate-range missiles in Europe."

The announcement came as a delegation from the U.S. House of Representatives led by Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., and Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., arrived on a visit that may include a meeting with Gorbachev.

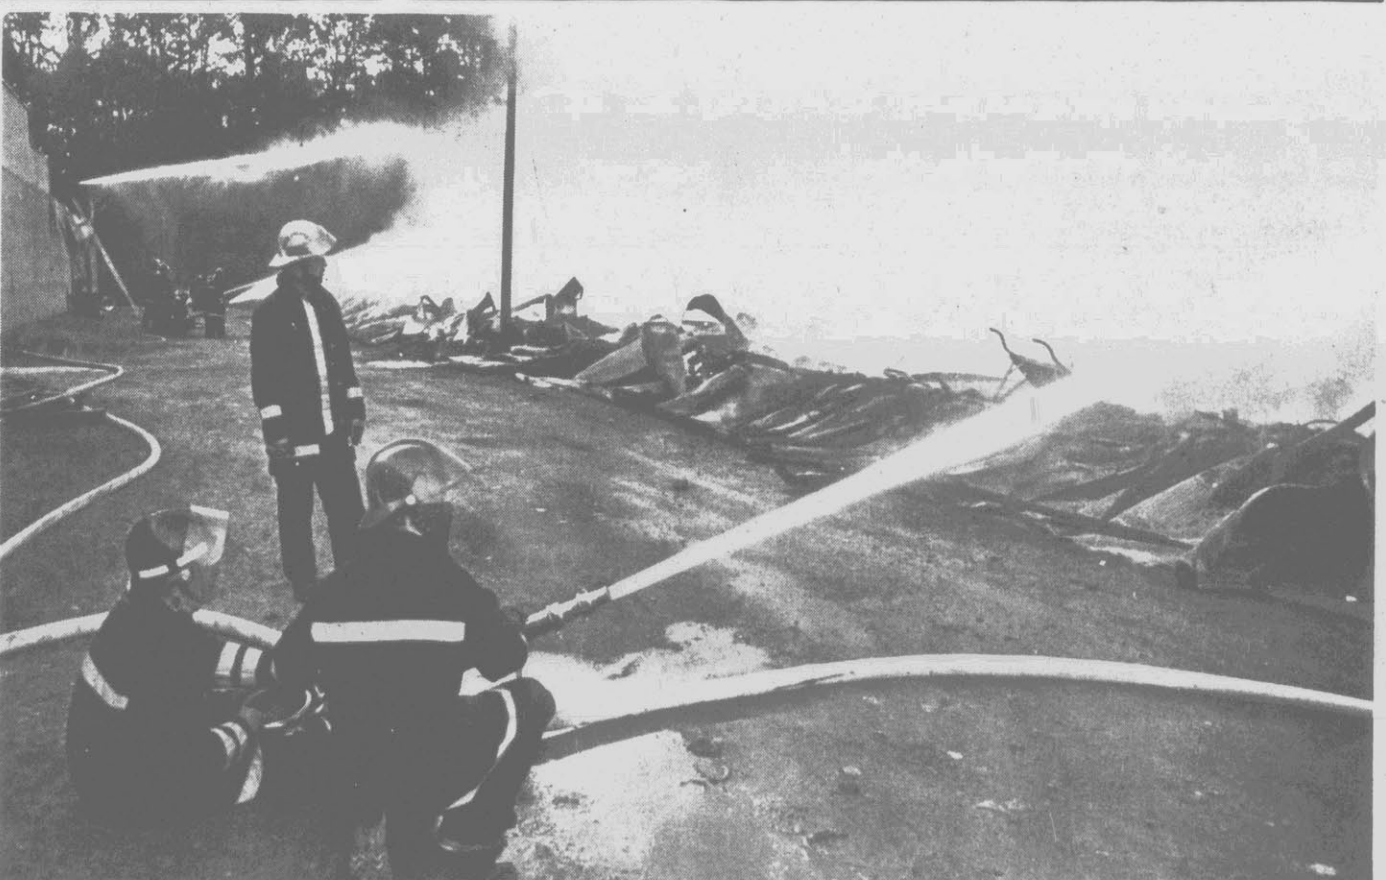

O'Neill said today that Gorbachev's readiness for a summit "augurs well for world peace." Michel said the moratorium is "real" (Please turn to page 10)

FARMVILLE WAREHOUSE DESTROYED ... Firemen direct streams of water to cool the smoldering rubble of a Planters Warehouse building east of the Marlboro intersection that was destroyed by fire early Sunday. Assistant Fire Chief Ray Mewborn said the blaze, in one of two Planters buildings on the site, was reported about 5 a.m., and said Farmville firefighters, assisted by firemen and equipment from Falkland, Fountain, Bell Arthur and Winterville, fought the fire for about 5 1/2 hours. Mewborn said that "the bulk of the fire was on the east side of the warehouse" when the first firemen arrived at the scene, but he said the blaze quickly "spread all the way across" the wood-frame structure. The destroyed warehouse, behind another Planters building which received minor damage, was used for storage and a weekend flea market, according to Mewborn. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Emergency Chopper Answers 1st Call

Eastern North Carolina's emergency helicopter ambulance took to the air this morning just two hours after the service became operational, a Pitt County Memorial Hospital official reported this morning.

"We went into service at 7 a.m. and got our first request around 9 a.m. to take a Wilmington cardiac patient to Duke University Medical Center," Dr. Nicholas Benson, East Carolina University assistant professor of emergency medicine and medical director of the air ambulance program, said in a telephone interview shortly after the helicopter lifted off from the Pitt County Memorial Hospital helipad.

Noting the service's back-up, training aircraft had to be used for this morning's flight, Benson said it would not be long before EastCare, a Bell LongRanger II jet turbine engine helicopter leased by PCMH and the ECU School of Medicine, would be put to use. The new orange, blue and white aircraft arrived in Greenville Sunday and will replace the training vehicle as soon as flight nurses familiarize themselves with the craft, Benson said.

The second of its kind in the state and the only one of its kind in eastern North Carolina, the air ambulance service is designed to provide rapid emergency transportation with advanced critical care for gravely ill or injured patients within a 120-mile radius of Greenville.

The only other hospital-operated emergency air ambulance service in the state is run by Duke. Prior to opening of the Duke program, patients in need of air transport were serviced by MAST, a military transport service staffed by Fort Bragg personnel and coordinated by North Carolina Memorial Hospital in Chapel Hill. Over the past year or so, however, the military has been scaling down MAST operations because "the program was not cost effective," Benson said.

According to the trooper both vehicles were traveling east on Industrial Boulevard (Secondary Road 1529). "One tried to pass the other" and "some contact was made. Neither stopped for the stop sign" at the intersection of SR 1591, and "both ran into a field."

Featherston, who said the Bain car burned following the collision, said both Bain and Huber were charged with driving while impaired, speed competition, careless and reckless driving, operating left of center, and failing to stop for a stop sign.

The drivers and passengers were taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment of their injuries, Featherston noted.

Knowledge Urged

Osteoporosis is a disease that reduces bone mass, and it's an underlying cause of many hip, wrist, and other fractures in older people, particularly women, medical experts say.

The North Carolina Medical Society urges that every woman in the state learn about osteoporosis. The disease affects as many as 20 million Americans, and it has been estimated that it's a factor in some 1.3 million bone fractures every year.

Though there is no cure for osteoporosis, there are effective ways to treat the disease and prevent it, doctors say. The hormone estrogen and the mineral calcium are useful in treating or preventing the disease and proper diet, sunlight and the right sort of exercise are also important, according to medical experts.

Kicking Cocaine Addiction Harder Than It Appears, Says 17-Year-Old

GREENSBORO (AP) — A high school senior trying to kick the cocaine habit says many people say they could stop taking the drug at will, but it isn't that easy. "A lot of people say they can stop anytime they want to, and I said, 'Yeah, that's what I used to say,'" said Catherine, 17, whose senior year of high school has turned into a nightmare of late hours, wasted money and lies. She agreed to talk to the Greensboro News & Record about her habit if her last name was not used. Catherine said her acquaintances weren't impressed when she proudly told them she hadn't snorted cocaine in two weeks. "Other people looked at me like, 'Big deal,'" she said. "But when you've been getting fried almost every night for months, it is a big deal." After blurting out a tearful confession to the assistant principal at her Guilford County school six weeks ago, she has tried to stop using cocaine. With the help of the Greensboro Drug Action Council, she has had only one relapse. "I wish I could still do it just once in a while," she said. "But then I think, 'No, no, no. I can't do a little bit because I'll just get carried away." Catherine said she first tried marijuana and alcohol in the eighth grade as an experiment. The next year she snorted cocaine. "I didn't do it that much because I didn't have a job, so I didn't have money," Catherine said. Last spring, she got a part-time job as a waitress. She could buy cocaine. One night last June, she and a few friends bought a gram for $100. "It was the first time I had ever bought any," she recalled. "All I wanted to do was more. It made me feel like I was Superwoman, like I could do anything. The world was mine." She rushed home to get $100 in change she had saved from tips and bought more. When the night ended, close to $200 of cocaine had gone up their noses. After that night, cocaine became the focus of her life. When she finished work at 9 p.m., it was party time. Several nights a week, she'd get high on coke bought from friends who were no longer in school. "I rarely made it home before 1 (a.m.)," she said. Often, she'd sneak up the stairs at dawn. She'd pretend to leave for school, go to a friend's house, then return home after her mother left for work. Last fall, Catherine's mother began suspecting a drug problem. "I'd say, 'Let's talk,' and she'd say, 'I don't want to talk about it.'" "When you see the personality change, the lack of interest in school, the change in friends, you hope it's pot and nothing more. I'd never encountered cocaine before. I didn't know what to look for when someone's using it." Her mother shuddered at the recollection of the daughter who had become someone she hardly knew. "Sometimes I just wanted to draw away from her. She had been a sweet, dear, adorable child, a caring person. I wanted that daughter back." But Catherine was busy trying to stretch her $150-a-week salary to buy more cocaine. She asked dealers to let her buy cocaine on credit, and once she put up the jade-and-diamond ring her mother had given her, a remembrance of her mother's father. She made sure she paid off the debt and got the ring back. "No matter how strung out I was, I knew I had to get my mama's ring back," she said. Things began to change almost six weeks ago, when Catherine ran into her ex-boyfriend. "He told me how people said I was into drugs. He told me I was a drug addict. I thought, 'If he thinks that's the only thing that matters to me, then we can't get back together.'" Already crying, Catherine was called to the assistant principal's office for cutting class. The assistant principal asked her what was wrong. Cautiously, he asked if drugs were involved. "Finally I said that it has a lot to do with it, that my main problem was cocaine, that I had to get off of it, that it was messing up my school work, it was killing my mom." "I just realized that it wasn't the way I wanted my life to be," she said. "I thought, 'If I don't stop now, it's going to get worse.'"

Jackson Urges Unity

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Farmers and urban blacks should unite to fight for a moratorium on farm foreclosures and for changes in domestic policies, the Rev. Jesse Jackson says. "Rural white farmers and urban black consumers must rise above historic racism and sexism and see our common struggle," Jackson said Sunday at Kansas City International Airport. He made the stop in Kansas City to give an Easter message at the Metropolitan Missionary Baptist Church, which received national attention when six children who attended its day care center were found to have received broken limbs. Jackson was to address a farm rally today. About 65 farmers and other spectators chanted "Jesse, Jesse" as Jackson greeted members of the American Agricultural Movement and the National Farmers Organization, some of whom traveled 90 miles to meet his plane. Jackson was invited to Missouri by Perry Wilson Sr., a 73-year-old farmer who owns 130 acres of farmland scheduled to be auctioned on the Clinton County Courthouse steps in Plattsburg. The farm rally was organized by Missouri Groundswell, a grassroots organization of civic and religious groups sympathetic to the farmers' plight.

Wilson said he agreed with Jackson's call for unity among blacks and whites and urban and rural residents. "We've stayed separate too long — kept people divided," Wilson said. "There's nothing like unity. We just haven't had any support at all from this Reagan administration." His son, Randy Wilson, added, "We are hoping Jesse's stature can get our word out." Jackson preached his Easter message at a church spotlighted by a county grand jury investigation into injuries received by infants who attended the church's day care center.

A CHILD'S CHEWING HABITS

Have you ever watched the way your child chews his food? Does he chew his food in a straight up and down motion or is the motion "off side"? A child's chewing habits are an important clue to the alignment of his teeth. If they are not properly aligned, he may be compensating for this by developing chewing habits that can cause serious dental problems. Malocclusion, for example, is the irregular alignment of teeth and improper meshing of the teeth during chewing. This dental problem may be the result of poor jaw relationships and improper muscle action. When the condition becomes severe it may cause deformation of the jaw and face. It can also have an adverse effect on the teeth. When a child's teeth are out of alignment, this not only interferes with good chewing habits, it can also cause teeth to become crooked and more susceptible to decay. Dental care should begin at the earliest possible age to protect your child's dental health. Poor chewing habits may be a sign he has a dental problem that needs correcting.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Living Will Has Short Life In Some States

DEAR ABBY: Six years ago my mother signed the Living Will in order to ensure that should she become terminally ill, she would not be hooked up to machines to keep her alive after there was no hope for her recovery. After watching her own mother die a painful, lingering death in a nursing home, she vowed never to impose that kind of suffering and expense on herself and her family.

Three years ago my mother suffered a severe stroke, and she's been in a nursing home with nurses around the clock ever since. We just learned that in our state (California) the Living Will is good for only five years—after that, it must be re-signed in order to be valid.

Abby, because you have publicized the Living Will so widely in your column, I think you owe it to your readers to publish this letter and alert them to this fact.

FOR DEATH WITH DIGNITY

DEAR FOR: I agree, and thank you for writing. California is one of the four states in which the Living Will must be re-signed in order to keep it valid. The other states that require re-signing are Georgia, Idaho and Wisconsin, and until they change their laws—and there is a concerted effort to have them do so—Living Wills must be re-signed in order to be valid. In all other states, they are valid for life.

I believe that all Living Wills should be valid for life unless the person revokes it. In California, Idaho and Wisconsin, Living Wills must be re-signed every five years; in Georgia, it's required every seven years.

For those who do not know what a Living Will is, it is a document stating that should you become terminally ill with no hope for recovery, you do not want your life prolonged by artificial means.

Those interested in obtaining a Living Will should write to: Society for the Right to Die, 250 W. 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10107.

The organization not only will send you the current form of Living Will for your state, it will inform you of any special provisions or requirements you should know about.

The Society for the Right to Die is a non-profit organization. It does not charge for Living Wills, but in order to cover the cost of the documents and mailing, I sent a check for $10 requesting five documents—one to give to my physician, my clergyman, and three for family members.

In my view, it's the best investment in peace of mind I've ever made.

Pat's Pointers
By Pat Trexler

The sheer elegance of this classic Swedish medallions afghan will have your friends asking how you did it. If you wish, you can let it be your secret that Swedish weaving on monk's cloth is probably the very simplest of the needle arts.

If you can thread a needle and weave under and over the blocks of threads that make up the monk's cloth weave, then you can create this stunning home accessory. Knitting worsted-weight yarn, the monk's cloth and a tapestry needle are all that you will need to complete this exciting project.

To obtain directions for making the Swedish Medallions Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. WL-0407 with $1 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 810, North Myrtle Beach, S.C. 29597.

Or you may order Kit No. W-0407 by sending a check or money order for $27 to Pat Trexler at the same address. The kit price includes the instruction leaflet, yarn in two colors, monk's cloth and the shipping charges. Please specify your choice of the following color combinations: royal and Wedgwood blue; mint brown with cocoa; rose with China rose.

At sometime in your past — probably as a child — you may have done Swedish weaving. This craft is also called huck weaving, Swedish darning or simply running stitch.

It is more traditionally worked on huck fabric or huck toweling, although the monk's cloth versions are becoming more popular. What these fabrics have in common are distinctive raised threads at measured intervals. These raised threads are known as "floats."

A needle is threaded with yarn and passed under the floats following a pattern chart. Most pattern charts show a staggered series of double vertical lines (although occasionally a designer will use single vertical lines). In either case, the vertical lines represent the "floats" of the fabric so that you can readily see where the needle should go.

One pattern line is worked all across the pattern before going on to the next pattern line. As a general rule, it is best to start in the center of the fabric and work first from the center to the left edge and then return to center and work to the right edge.

There are two reasons for doing this. First, whenever possible, it is easiest to work a full line with one strand of yarn. When you start in the center of the pattern, pass the needle under the center float and leave the right half of the yarn hanging free while working to the left edge. Then pick up the right half to work in the opposite direction. In this way, you are not working with an excessively long strand at any one time.

Also, unless you are working a perfectly straight pattern line, this is the best way to center your design on every pattern line.

These explanations may be clearer if you look at the accompanying sample chart. The lower part of the chart illustrates a perfectly straight pattern line that can easily be worked from side to side if you choose to do so.

The upper part of the chart illustrates a symmetrical zigzag pattern line. In this case the dot on the chart denotes the center of the pattern. Starting at the center, just keep repeating the pattern line first to one edge and then to the other. You will find that after just one or two repeats you no longer need to look at the chart.

Yet another poll shows the Vietnam War is not popular in the minds of most Americans. A New York Times poll found 73 percent of the people questioned believe the U.S. role in Southeast Asia was "wrong".

Yet, the same poll showed only three in every five Americans know the United States sided with South Vietnam in that conflict, posing the question of how many individuals among those questioned knew why the U.S. intervened. Read on.

The poll also showed 54 percent were in favor of using American troops if Western Europe was invaded (32 percent opposed) ... somewhat more than in 1974, when a poll showed equal numbers favored intervention in Europe and opposing intervention.

Comparative data leaves various conclusions open to a reader. To us, the broader one is that a stunning number are ignorant as to why President Kennedy ordered involvement in Vietnam. (Basically the same reason President Truman ordered a U.S. role in South Korea; both were to stem invaders of pockets of democracy in Asia.)

Unquestionably, war is the least desirable solution to world or national problems; at the same time, when alternatives fail, events can and do dictate the hardest kind of choices.

The same Times poll saw a greater number (61 percent) saw government as being unduly influenced by "a few big interests." It has long been that way.

Agricultural interests, communications interests, health interests, religious interests, transportation interests, business interests, education interests, retiree interests, banking interests, conservation interests, fields of poverty and unemployment have their spokesmen (one could go on and on) and all have a strong voice in governmental processes.

Would you have it any other way?

Legend

The Greensboro attorney seeking a pardon for William Sydney Porter can have only warmth, affection and pride in the convicted bank embezzler. We share them with him. Nevertheless, he is wrong.

Porter became known as O. Henry, a writer of short stories ... a master, really ... providing entertainment and pleasure to untold millions of people during his lifetime and the 75 years since his death. Generations to come will similarly enjoy O. Henry's genius.

The North Carolina native always insisted on his innocence, but the courts of his day found otherwise and he served almost 3 years in prison for the crime.

That part of his life has long since become a part of the writer's personal story, a part of his mystique, a part of tradition. It should be left untouched. Somehow the shadow ennobles O. Henry's strength of character as well as providing the real-life lesson that all of us some time or another need — that no matter the depth of our despair, people can rise above and far beyond the low point in their lives.

Many heroic figures have a shadow in their past and a piece of paper denoting a "pardon" today would mean little to Wm. Sydney Porter. If he were alive, it would be a different story; one which he could retell. Don't touch the legend.

Waving The Magical Wand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Speaker Thomas O'Neill, glumly surveying the carnage, said, perhaps even partly in admiration, that he had never witnessed the equal of the campaign waged by President Reagan and the administration for passage of the MX missile.

"I've never seen as all-out an effort ...," O'Neill said. "They pulled out all the stops."

There, in bright lights on the electronic tally board in the House, glared the evidence: 219 for the MX, 213 against.

The week before, Reagan subdued the Senate 55-45 on two separate votes and a day after O'Neill's wonderment, the House dutifully succumbed for the second time, 217-210.

As a result, Congress had given its approval for the production of 21 of the 10-warhead missiles at a cost of $1.5 billion to be housed in silos until they are needed.

Given the closeness of the vote, it seems apparent that Reagan had to use every option in his arsenal to assure passage of the MX — and to impress the venerable Speaker with his virtuoso performance.

After all, O'Neill has watched many presidents exert their powers on Capitol Hill, including Eisenhower, Kennedy, Johnson, Nixon, Ford and Carter.

And he was on the losing end of Reagan campaigns to cut the domestic budget and to raise taxes during the administration's first term — two very impressive victories — and yet O'Neill considered this latest one the best.

What made Reagan so successful this time around?

The most compelling argument he used, which certainly was the overriding edge, was that rejection of the MX would rob U.S. arms negotiators of a "bargaining chip" as they sit across the table from the Soviets in Geneva.

The fact that Reagan urged passage of the MX last year with the argument the weapon was needed because the Soviets were refusing to negotiate arms control seemed to have no impact. Nor did the premise that the Soviet Union is much more concerned about "Star Wars" than MX.

Beyond the arguments, however, was Reagan's personal involvement, which included numerous telephone calls to legislators — some even from Air Force One — and a triumphant appearance before Senate Republicans only hours before the vote.

For members of the House, Reagan used a slightly different m.o., rolling about 100 members to the White House for a high-level briefing that included Max Kampelman, the chief Geneva negotiator. Kampelman had to fly from Switzerland to help out.

Were there any hard and fast trade-offs to get votes? Nobody really knows.

But White House spokesman Larry Speaker made it quite clear publicly that Republicans who voted with Reagan on the MX, as well as other crucial votes to come, would not be RALEIGH — A higher birth rate and improving medical technology are pushing the price of North Carolina's perinatal program up steeply.

The demand for, and the price of, the program is rising so rapidly, state budget analysts recently told a legislative budget committee, that almost any reasonable increase in funding which they might give the program would fail to be enough.

The perinatal program helps high-risk pregnant women and prematurely born children. The program receives much of the credit for the state's improving infant death rate. In the past half dozen years, North Carolina's infant death rate has dropped by 25 percent. Because other states are pursuing similar medical programs, North Carolina's infant death rate remains among the worst in the nation.

"I wouldn't want to say that no matter how much money you put into this program it wouldn't be enough," Ernest Spence, a state budget administrator, told the Base Budget Committee on Human Resources. "But it appears that way ... When you come back here in 1987, you'll have some of the same issues before you then even if you appropriate $15 million" this year.

The program is running in the red. Last year, roughly 1,700 children were served by the program. This fiscal year, an $8.8 million budget was formulated based on state money and federal block grant funds. On March 11, the program was so far beyond its budget that the state warned medical providers that it would not authorize any more patients. As the program stands now, it has authorized spending of almost $1.3 million beyond its budget. That money will have to come from next year's budget.

If the Legislature were to order the program re-started for the rest of this fiscal year, the budget overrun would amount to nearly $4 million by June 30, the last day of fiscal 1985. It would cost the state almost $15 million to fund the program fully for fiscal 1986 and $16 million for fiscal 1987, legislative staff has estimated. (But the staff warns that even that estimate may be low because it does not assume any growth in number of people using the program.)

Dr. Ronald Levine, director of the N.C. Division of Health Services, says there are several reasons for the dramatic upturn in the cost of the program. The birth rate, which has been falling, is increasing again.

Also, medical technology is getting better and better. Extremely small children born prematurely today can be saved. "We're talking children you can fit in the palm of your hand," said Jim Johnson, a legislative staff analyst. Dr. Levine adds that these early babies are extremely expensive to save. The younger they are, the longer they stay in infant intensive care.

Finally, Dr. Levine says he thinks the federal "Baby Doe Regulations" are scaring small hospitals into trying to save children who maybe have no chance. The regulations say all possible care must be given so smaller hospitals send the children to the expensive research hospitals.

The Legislature is in a bind in this area. Under the perinatal program, the state is actually paying only about half of a hospital's cost of caring for these children. When the program's funds run out, the hospitals had to take the entire burden. Several hospitals have lost in the area of $1 million dollars just on indigent perinatal care.

The perinatal debate is part of the much larger debate over how the medical bills of the indigent will be paid. The hospitals say they can't pay. And the insurance companies complain that the hospitals shift the cost to paying customers. This is one problem the Legislature can't duck.

A Problem Needing A Solution

Maureen Backs Bush, Kirkpatrick

WASHINGTON — Although her father only hints that he wants his vice president to succeed him, Maureen Reagan does not disguise her choice for the 1988 Republican ticket: George Bush for president, Jeane Kirkpatrick for vice president.

As consultant to Republican National Chairman Frankahrenkopf, the president's dynamic daughter arranged the big April 3 "Welcome Party" celebration in Washington noting Mrs. Kirkpatrick's conversion from Democrat to Republican. Vice President Bush was expected to "drop by" in an unscheduled appearance.

Maureen has no great affection for Rep. Jack Kemp, Bush's prospective chief rival for the 1988 nomination, and did not invite him to address the Kirkpatrick party. However, Kemp is making his own contacts with the former U.N. ambassador. She addressed the Kemp Forum in Buffalo recently, and a private dinner between the Kemp and Kirkpatrick families is planned.

The description of new Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev that President Reagan likes best came from a top Western leader: "Khrushchev in a $900 suit."

The leader, who met Gorbachev at Konstantin Chernenko's funeral in Moscow, gave the description to Reagan privately. That both titillated and worried the president.

Khrushchev was one of the toughest of all Soviet leaders, threatening to "bury" the West and almost provoking nuclear war by putting Soviet missiles in Cuba. "Khrushchev in a $900 suit" suggests Gorbachev's charm conceals a brutal instinct for the jugular.

As part of the battle waged within the Reagan administration over how hard to fight for aid to the Nicaraguan freedom fighters, a State Department study of contra leaders intended to improve their image was nearly suppressed.

The study shows that nearly all the top freedom fighters are free of past association with Nicaragua's dictatorial Somoza regime. But Secretary Bernard Kalb, representing the public information office, argued that the study of the contra leaders was going into areas that were not the department's business and ordered a freeze.

Ambassador Otto Reich, the State Department hard-liner pushing the program to aid the contras, intervened. After some editing changes, the document was OK'd for future release. But that is only one skirmish in a widespread struggle over the administration's degree of commitment to the freedom fighters.

Winston Lord, who served as Henry Kissinger's top aide in the Nixon administration, appears certain to be nominated as U.S. ambassador to China. Conservatives are complaining for two reasons: the Kissinger connection and Lord's present job as head of the Council on Foreign Relations.

Senate confirmation, however, looks sure because of Lord's sponsorship: Ronald Reagan himself. The president's interest resulted from Lord's briefing before Reagan's trip to China last year. Reagan was also intrigued by Lord's wife, novelist Bette Lord, whose Chinese Nationalist family left mainland China in 1946.

A footnote: More controversial is Secretary of State George Shultz's desire to send Deputy Secretary Kenneth Dam to the Soviet Union as ambassador. Dam would be going to the nation's most demanding ambassadorial listening post with no prior diplomatic experience abroad.

Gov. Terry Branstad of Iowa is a conservative Republican and Reaganite, but is growing ever angrier at the administration's handling not only of the farm crisis but of himself.

Branstad steamed when his scheduled meeting at the White House recently was abruptly canceled (without explanation but probably because of the MX vote). He was further miffed a week later when his meeting with Policy Director John Svahn was set back an hour. After the meeting, he was boiling over with complaints that the administration was reneging on farm credit promises.

Branstad's problems with the president probably help his election prospects for next year. Sen. Charles Grassley has been opposing the White House down the line ever since the president's men threatened reprisals against the conservative Republican for non-support in the Senate. Grassley, trying to be the first Iowa senator re-elected since 1966, is rising in state polls as fast as Reagan falls.

forgotten in 1986.

For those "friends," Reagan would be available for fund-raisers and campaign appearances in the 1986 elections.

Anything beyond that remains a subject of conjecture with Democrats hinting, without any proof, that the administration was buying up votes with favors.

When the question was raised, House Democratic leader Jim Wright of Texas chimed in with, "Let's just say he's leasing them for a short while," and O'Neill reminded reporters the administration has a variety of programs that he can direct to congressional districts.

O'Neill Says Summit Good For World Peace

MOSCOW (AP) — U.S. House Speaker Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill said today that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's decision to accept an invitation for a summit meeting with President Reagan was a good omen for peace.

O'Neill, D-Mass., who arrived in Moscow on Sunday, was responding to comments made by Gorbachev to the Communist Party newspaper Pravda, and distributed by the Soviet news agency Tass.

In the interview, Gorbachev also said the Soviet Union would freeze deployment of nuclear missiles in Europe until November.

"I think it augurs well for world peace when the two dominant nations of the world can get at the table and sit down ... If they only keep talking that's the most important thing," O'Neill said as he and 12 other members of Congress left their hotel to begin their meetings with Soviet parliamentarians.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said he thought the summit should be held at the same time as the U.N. General Assembly in the fall.

Michel said the proposed Soviet moratorium on medium-range missile deployment in Europe is "really nothing new from our standpoint." "It's a freeze on an imbalance that's about 10 to one in their favor," he told reporters.

U.S. officials have said that O'Neill has set aside time on his itinerary for meetings with Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko on Tuesday and Gorbachev on Wednesday, but there has been no confirmation such meetings will take place.

Asked what he would tell Gorbachev about Reagan if he meets the Soviet leader, O'Neill quipped, "I'm going to tell him that he got 59 percent of the vote and he whaled my party."

Michel said he would tell the Soviet leader that Reagan is a "very honorable, decent individual and one that has been striving for reductions in nuclear arms."

"We have yet to see the Soviets put anything on the table at Geneva" that would lead to such reductions, Michel said.

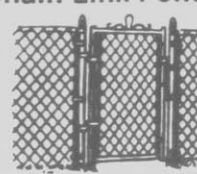

O'Neill rejected reporters' questions suggesting Gorbachev's offer may have been timed to coincide with his visit, saying the trip was scheduled to follow a visit last month by Politburo member Vladimir V. Shcherbitsky and Soviet parliamentarians to the United States. Shcherbitsky met Reagan during that visit.

The members of Congress and their aides have talks scheduled with members of the Soviet Parliament and officials of the trade and agriculture ministries.

Besides O'Neill and Michel, the congressmen are Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill.; Silvio Conte, R-Mass.; Deibert Latta, R-Ohio; Joseph M. McDade, R-Pa.; Charles B. Rangel, D-N.Y.; John P. Murtha, D-Pa.; Ralph Regula, R-Ohio; George Miller, D-Calif.; Marty Russo, D-Ill.; Norman Sisisky, D-Va., and Frank Guarini, D-N.J.

Protesters Rally At New Missile Site

MOLESWORTH, England (AP) — Anti-nuclear demonstrators taking part in an annual protest converged today on what is to be the second U.S. cruise missile site in Britain, arguing that a freeze on Soviet missile deployment eliminates the need for the weapons.

About 1,200 people camped out Sunday night on a 10-acre plot of Defense Ministry land, 200 yards from the U.S. Air Force base under construction at Molesworth, 65 miles north of London. A police force of about 2,000 also was on hand.

The protest was organized by the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament. Its chairwoman, Joan Ruddock, said Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's announcement Sunday that his country is halting deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe until November deserved President Reagan's serious consideration.

"The Americans really have no excuse for bringing more cruise missiles into Britain now," Mrs. Ruddock said. "Mr. Gorbachev has taken an historic independent step and President Reagan should seize the opportunity to respond."

The protest organization said up to 20,000 demonstrators were expected to join the rally at the end of an annual four-day Easter weekend protest.

One of the protest leaders, William Irving, told the British Broadcasting Corp. that the demonstrators will join hands to form a ring around the base and later would place pennants in the ground to mark their places.

"We will ring the base literally," Irving said. "We'll ring it with people and we'll ring it with sound. We're going to take up bells, cymbals, castanets, anything that goes jingle jangle."

The Molesworth base is to begin receiving 64 of the nuclear-tipped missiles in 1988 under NATO's five-year deployment plan for installing 464 cruise and 108 Pershing-2 missiles in five Western European countries.

Britain's first cruise missiles arrived at the U.S. Air Force base in Greenham Common, 50 miles west of London, in November 1983. A total of 96 are to be deployed there.

Britain's peace protesters have held annual demonstrations at Easter for several years. The majority of the protesters marched over 40 miles from five English towns to Molesworth. Others traveled by train, bicycle, car and coach.

Many of the marchers were dressed in nylon jackets and boots for protection against heavy rain that turned the site and adjoining paths into a quagmire. They carried banners and black flags and wore anti-nuclear buttons and emblems.

Although some Molesworth residents and farmers have objected to the rally, signs of protest were rare. Signs with the inscription "Locals Say CND Go Home," were placed on some telephone poles, and farmers placed machinery at the entrances to fields where crops were growing.

The general secretary of the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament, Monsignor Bruce Kent, led a 15-mile march to the protest site from the nearby town of St. Neots. He said most of the people he saw en route were "very friendly" and his group only met one opposition group that shouted at it.

"It appears there are a number of people living around here who are positively hostile toward us, but I think there are many others who have been frightened unnecessarily through reading and hearing things that are untrue," the Roman Catholic priest told a reporter.

A $10,000 Easter Egg

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — A 5-year-old boy dug through a ton of Easter grass and came up with the grand prize in the Marquette Hotel's fourth annual Golden Easter Egg hunt — a medallion which he traded in for an egg worth $10,000.

"I'm going to use it to buy stuff," Nicholas J. Hall said on Saturday after he was presented with the five-ounce, 14-karat gold egg. But his father, Tracy, had other ideas, saying it would go toward Nicholas' college education.

Paula Marie Zembal, 6, won the second-prize sterling silver egg worth $2,500.

Nicholas and Paula were among 1,000 youngsters who took part in the hunt. Also hidden in the Easter grass were 5,000 candy eggs.

Mental Health Perspectives
Depression by Marsha L. Mills, Communications Specialist

Depression, the feeling of sadness, disappointment or loneliness, is a common problem in America today. Depression may lead to withdrawal, loss of enjoyment of life, physical discomfort, etc. Although depression affects each of us in different ways, most people feel down or "blue". Symptoms of depression to be aware of include: neglect of responsibilities, loss of appetite, poor memory, inability to find pleasure in anything, sleeping disturbances, chronic fatigue, nausea and indigestion. Everyone experiences some or all of these symptoms at some time, but when symptoms are severe over a long period of time, it's time to seek professional help. Depression doesn't have to ruin your life. Understand the facts, recognize the symptoms, and know where to seek professional help if depression is persistent or severe.

Church Production Has Regional Appeal

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

FARM LIFE, N.C. (AP) — For 11 days each year, a small section of Jerusalem set in the cornfields and pine woods of Martin County springs to life, attracting thousands of visitors and drawing nearly every resident of this rural community under its spell.

"The Message of Easter" started out five years ago as a special holiday service for Piney Grove Baptist Church. That special service, with its amateur cast and plywood backdrops, relied on oral advertising to draw an audience from the surrounding farming community.

The advertising style hasn't changed, but the production last year drew an estimated 10,000 people.

"We put it on the first night (in 1980) and had, oh, maybe 200 people," said E.T. Taylor, a church member who wrote and produces the drama. "The next night we had maybe a few more. We had decided not to do it on Easter night because we figured everybody would be with their families.

"But it rained one of the nights we had scheduled, so we went ahead with it on Sunday night," Taylor said. "All the seats were filled and people were just pouring out everywhere — sitting on blankets and lawn chairs, crowding in anywhere they could find room. We figured about 3,200 people saw it that first year."

The inaugural season led church members to believe that people would turn out for their drama, even if it was a half-dozen turns down country roads from the nearest major highway. And they set out to make the production worth the search.

Carpenters and electricians from the congregation pitched in to build Taylor's vision of a Jerusalem street. The 400-foot-wide set includes three-dimensional versions of the Temple, Pilate's court, Caiaphas' court, the upper room, the tomb and the Garden of Gethsemane — complete with spring flowers.

A church member who specializes in electronics wired borrowed theatrical lighting and a sound system. A control tower went up and bleacher seating for 1,700 was added.

"I was real fortunate in having people who could take what I knew I wanted and make it real," Taylor said, as he walked down the street of his imaginary Jerusalem. "Some of this was sketched on napkins, matchbook covers, you name it."

The church doesn't charge admission or take offering, but Taylor said donations have come in anyway, helping the church buy some of its own equipment.

Opening night this year drew 13 buses, including a charter bus from Winston-Salem, and cars filled the field. The 70-minute drama attracts so many people that the nearest motel — 10 miles away in Williamston, gives special rates to four groups who come to the play.

Of the congregation's 230 active church and Sunday school members, 180 work in the production, Taylor said, including 133 in the cast alone.

"This is something I'd always wanted to do," said Taylor, who works at a textile plant in Washington and considers theater his hobby. "I had worked on it for four years before we ever put it on."

"The one thing it's done is show us that we can do things we never thought we could," said Dale Lilley, the county emergency management services coordinator who has portrayed Judas for the last two years. "The whole church just pulls together for this. It's just like a family."

There are no speaking parts in the drama. A narrator reads the script Taylor fashioned from the Bible, while the characters move through their parts on the elaborate set.

While the technical effects have a professional finish, the actors are all amateurs — farmers, millworkers and housewives from the community. Taylor says he prefers it that way.

"I've been to some other passion plays where they used professional, paid actors," Taylor said. "I wouldn't want to put off on them, but I remember one where the actor portraying Jesus was a professional who never turned his back on the audience. He was the star and he wanted to be sure the audience knew it."

"Jimmy (Gillespie, who has portrayed Jesus all six years) sometimes gets in awkward positions and staggers," Taylor said. "But that's how it must have been with what Jesus went through. It may not be as professional, but I prefer this because it's a labor of love."

Gillespie, who bears a stunning resemblance to artists' conceptions of Jesus, said he tries not to think about the role he plays each year.

"I can't come up to what He was," Gillespie said. "I don't think anybody can."

Taylor concedes the production is not what anyone would expect from a small church in the countryside.

"We went to a Southern Baptist meeting on church drama and I carried along a videotape," Taylor said. "One of the experts there looked at it. All he could say was that we couldn't do what we were doing — that it was impossible."

"I guess if we had asked somebody about it when we started, they'd have told us the same thing," he said. "But we didn't know any better, so we just went ahead and did it."

Mom Longs For Reunion With Her Daughter

FRANKLIN, N.J. (AP) — Sharing her first Easter with the son she put up for adoption 41 years ago, Betty Williams had but one wish: to find the daughter she gave up a year later.

Mrs. Williams, 60, was reunited last month with her son, the Rev. Mike Beyer. She had not seen him since she put him up for adoption in Los Angeles as a 3-month-old infant in 1944.

Unknown to each other, the two began searching for their pasts on different coasts in 1984. They were reunited March 26, after members of Beyer's Calvary Chapel in San Pedro, Calif., raised $3,800 to send their minister to meet his natural mother.

"A mother is a mother," said Mrs. Williams, explaining why she made the difficult decision to tell her husband and their three sons about her secret past. Mrs. Williams said she got pregnant as a teen-ager in Southern California, giving up her boy to a children's aid society.

"I made two mistakes," she now says, admitting she also had an illegitimate daughter a year later in Chicago. The girl, born Georgia O'Brien, would be 40, her mother said.

Both Mrs. Williams and Beyer, born Lawrence Paul Thorsen, hope to compound their new-found joy by finding the third member of their family. They hope publicity about their reunion will reach her.

For now, mother and son are content to share their happiness. The two began Easter at the Pompton Reform Church in Pompton Lakes, and Mrs. Williams spent the rest of Sunday showing off her new-found son and his wife to relatives.

Beyer, whose adoptive mother is still alive, said he feels like he's found a third parent. His adoptive father is dead; the reunited mother and son made no mention of Beyer's natural father.

"It was like we were always together," the minister said, bringing a sigh from his mother.

"You never forget your child," Mrs. Williams added.

Beyer said the emotional reunion began March 1, when he had the uneasy task of placing a coast-to-coast call to a stranger he had just been told was his mother.

Not knowing even if their relative was still alive, both began their searches independently about a year ago.

"The last three or four years, I just really had a deep desire to find my roots," Beyer said.

"I always thought of him on his birthday," Mrs. Williams said, adding Beyer was born Dec. 30. She said her interest grew after seeing other reunited families on a television talk show.

Mrs. Williams said she and her husband, Roger, contacted a consultant in Southern California they had been told could help with their search. Gail Becksted of Simi Valley, Calif., identified herself as a certified independent search consultant.

Ms. Becksted said she helps in such cases, usually charging only for expenses. She said she had all but exhausted her search when she took a final look for Beyer's original name in an Orange County-based computer library. The results were positive, since Beyer had registered with the service.

According to the computer library's rules, Mrs. Williams was required to write a letter to the son she had never met, giving him the opportunity to turn a meeting down.

"After 40 years, I had to write, 'My Dear Son...,'" she recalled.

The library gave the letter to Beyer, along with his mother's telephone number.

"I remember praying that the Lord at least let me get back to my house, so I could at least make the phone call," Beyer said.

He recalls his exact first words to the woman on the other end of the line. "I said, 'I think I'm speaking to my mother.'"

"When he said, 'Is this Betty Williams?'" she recalled, "I had a feeling it was my son."

Schroeder Enjoys Home Cooking

By STEVE SWIFT

Associated Press Writer
LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Artificial heart patient William Schroeder ate a home-cooked breakfast and said Easter Sunday prayers with a priest during his first full day living outside of a hospital.

The 53-year-old Schroeder, who on Saturday became the first artificial heart recipient to be released from a hospital, spent a restless night in his new home. Bob Irvine, a spokesman for Humana Inc., said in a taped message Sunday.

His wife, Margaret, cooked an Easter breakfast of eggs, juice and coffee, which Schroeder "wolfed down," Irvine said.

A priest from a local Catholic parish visited the couple in their apartment across the street from Humana Hospital Audubon and prayed with them, he said.

"Mrs. Schroeder indicated they are both very pleased with their new surroundings," Irvine said.

Artificial heart recipient Murray Haydon, whose recovery has been overshadowed by Schroeder's discharge, is stable and doing well at Audubon, his doctor said.

His progress has lagged behind the early pace set by Schroeder, but that has been the result of the heart team trying to protect him from major complications such as the Dec. 13 strokes that beset Schroeder in his 133-day hospital convalescence.

Haydon, a retired Louisville autoworker, received a Jarvik-7 pump Feb. 17, but suffered excessive bleeding and was returned to surgery March 2 to allow doctors to plug the leak in the remnants of his natural heart.

Schroeder's experience outside the hospital will give artificial heart patients and the team of implant surgeon William C. DeVries further blueprints on which to plan treatment.

"Over the next several weeks we're going to find out what it's like with a patient in a home environment. If he does well and things look good, then the next step would be to work toward Jasper," DeVries said, referring to a possible 90-mile van ride to Schroeder's Indiana home.

Fishing trips, one of Schroeder's personal post-hospital goals, may come later.

Humana Inc., which is sponsoring DeVries' research, has not calculated the cost of Schroeder's hospitalization, but will release the figure later.

Mrs. Schroeder said she and her husband will develop a daily routine at the apartment.

RTI Project Will Aid In Locating Veterans Exposed To Agent Orange

RALEIGH (AP) — A $10 million effort at the Research Triangle Institute to locate thousands of Vietnam veterans has made a fresh start in researching the effects of Agent Orange, an official says.

"We're taking off from ground zero," said Robert Diefenbach, an Agent Orange public health advisor for the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"There are a lot of vets and their families out there who are ill and who do not know why they are ill," Diefenbach said. "There is nothing more disturbing in the world than to be in that situation."

The RTI telephone canvass is seeking more information on physical health from about 35,000 Vietnam veterans on whether chemicals dropped from aircraft became slow-acting poisons for some American troops.

"A good deal of suspicion has been cast by vets on their exposure to Agent Orange," Diefenbach said. "All they know is they were there, were sprayed by something, and are ill."

About 18 million gallons of Agent Orange and other color-coded herbicides were dumped all over South Vietnam between 1962 and 1971 to deprive the enemy of food and vegetation cover.

Interviewers from the institute will also be traveling nationwide, doing in-depth psychological surveys.

RTI's study is part of a larger Agent Orange investigation by the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. The CDC is providing lists of veterans' names and will interpret the results of the study.

For the Agent Orange study, teams of telephone interviewers are on duty from 8 a.m. to midnight six days a week and from 1:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. on Sundays. Telephones may continue ringing until September 1987.

"We have well over 2,000 interviews so far ... We expect to do 35,000 to 36,000," said Michael F. Weeks, director of RTI's $6.4 million Agent Orange project.

The telephone interviews have tracked down Vietnam veterans in Australia, Hong Kong, Thailand, Scotland and Norway. There are provisions for personal interviews — no matter where — if the veterans absolutely refuse to be interviewed by telephone.

A total of 43,000 Army veterans have been identified in advance for the study, though RTI does not expect to find all of them. The veterans who are contacted have been pre-grouped into various categories by using military records. Some are more likely than others to have been exposed to Agent Orange in Vietnam. Some served in other countries during the years of war.

RTI's $3.6 million study of post-war psychological problems will center around Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, the umbrella name for a variety of delayed reactions to war and other traumatic events.

"It is the first psychological epidemiology study of national scope to be conducted in the U.S.," said Dr. William E. Schlenger, an RTI psychologist who is one of the project's three principal investors.

Some interviewees will be combat veterans and some will have served elsewhere during the Vietnam War era. For purposes of comparison, there will also be a group of Vietnam-era civilians.

Some Vietnam veterans will be re-interviewed by psychiatrists and psychologists. Families of some Vietnam veterans will also be asked to participate.

VA Hospital Target Of Patient Charge

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — An attorney says a Goldsboro man who has had an open wound since a 1978 heart operation is in a "tragic situation," but the Veterans Administration hospital where the operation was performed was not negligent.

Walter M. Harrell, 54, blames the Veterans Administration hospital in Durham for the wound, which has persisted since his heart operation seven years ago. And he said the VA's refusal to release records stymied his malpractice suit.

"They've got some very dirty practices up there," Harrell said in a telephone interview. "I developed a staph infection that I think I probably got in the operating room. They had to operate again to let the pus out ... I had three operations in three weeks."

Horace England, the attorney who represented the hospital in Harrell's malpractice suit, said it was dismissed in U.S. District Court and that the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Richmond, Va., upheld the decision.

"We made an investigation and found there was no negligence which was the proximate cause of Mr. Harrell's injury," England said, adding, "Mr. Harrell's is rather a tragic situation."

Harrell, a retired Air Force pilot, said he was 30 percent disabled before the first operation.

"Now I'm completely, totally disabled," he said. "It's been a mess. The wound itself didn't ever heal. It still drains and I stay in pain with it 24 hours a day. I just lay here on the sofa and hurt."

Harrell said the malpractice suit was thrown out because he couldn't get access to his medical records.

"They passed a law about the same time as our suit was filed that they didn't have to release the record," he said.

England said the decision was based strictly on the investigation of the circumstances in the original operation.

Harrell said his wife is considering another appeal and is working to improve conditions at the hospital.

"We've written congressmen. We've had the place inspected," Harrell said. "They're using veterans up there as guinea pigs. Those old veterans who can't go anywhere else."

Harrell said his main concern now is with improving conditions because there is nothing more than can be done for him.

"I left the hospital a month ago," he said. "The prognosis was they could operate on me, take out my entire breast bone and rib cage. That would be a seven-hour operation. And they couldn't guarantee I wouldn't have the same pain."

Development Is Opposed

BLACK CREEK, N.C. (AP) — A federal agency is reviewing a request to fund a model $1.7 million housing development for low-income farm workers, although the proposed host town rescinded its endorsement of the project, officials say.

"We are putting out some decent housing with control and supervision ... to give (farm workers) an opportunity to live like everybody else," said Fannie M. Corbett, executive director of the Wilson Community Improvement Association, which is sponsoring the project.

But some Black Creek residents are trying to block the apartment-style development, saying the migrant residents would lower property values and increase crime.

"The town is literally in an uproar," said Roland Godwin, a member of the Black Creek town board. "They don't want it, and they feel like it's being shoved down their throats."

The town board of Black Creek, a farming community of about 575 residents, last month rescinded its endorsement of the project and retracted its offer to provide water and sewer services.

One of the speakers at a recent town board meeting called the project "a cess pool for humans."

Ms. Corbett said the project is needed in rural areas and would help both farmers who cannot afford to provide good housing and workers who often settle for substandard dwellings.

Fellow White Supremacists Aided In Capture, Lane Says

DENVER (AP) — Neo-Nazi David Lane says he knows nothing of the machine-gun slaying in Denver of a Jewish talk show host, but federal authorities have linked him to the murder.

In a copyright story Sunday in The Rocky Mountain News for which he was interviewed by telephone from a holding cell in Winston-Salem, N.C., Lane also said he feels betrayed by his fellow white supremacists. He added he thinks some of them helped bring about his recent capture.

"If I knew what an absolute lack of racial pride there is in the remainder of the white race, I would never have gotten involved (in the white supremacist movement)," said Lane, accompanied by his attorney in a U.S. Marshals Service holding cell shortly after being denied bail Friday.

Lane said radio talk show host Alan Berg, who was Jewish and antagonized neo-Nazi sympathizers on his radio show, is a worse enemy dead than alive.

"I thought he was more destructive to the purposes he set out to defend," Lane said.

Lane was arrested March 30 in the parking lot of a Winston-Salem shopping center on a warrant charging him with counterfeiting in Philadelphia. FBI agents won't say how they tracked him down, but there are allegations that authorities were tipped off by a Lane colleague or may have traced calls Lane made from a phone booth.

Lane's court-appointed attorney, Thomas Keith, would not allow him to be questioned about ties to The Order, the anti-Semitic group that agents say masterminded Berg's June 18 death and was planning a violent takeover of the U.S. government.

Lane spoke briefly about the federal probe that has resulted in the arrests of at least 26 people in 13 states.

"We scared the hell out of them," he said of the FBI.

According to testimony by FBI agents, Lane — as one of The Order's founding members — took part in counterfeiting and helped the group in a $3.6 million armored-car robbery in Ukiah, Calif., all within weeks after Berg's death.

Those activities and others were done to raise money for a war on the U.S. government, which the group calls "ZOG," or Zionist Occupation Government, according to legal documents.

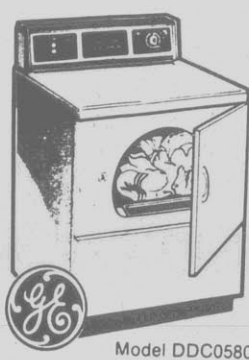

Much of the FBI's information has come from confiscated documents from members of The Order and unnamed sources. Lane said those sources include people who are being held on trumped-up charges and are unable to defend themselves adequately.

"The police powers of the federal government are awesome," Lane said. "No communist country, no Russia could have more police powers over its citizens than the United States."

Lane, 46, said he was indirectly drawn into the white supremacist movement during the Vietnam War. He said he sympathized with "left-wing kids" who opposed the war, but only because it was one he says the government wasn't interested in winning.

Officials Say Same Thing, Differently

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When two Cabinet officers offered differing views of the Reagan administration's position on "cargo preference" legislation in Congress, it appeared a first-class feud had erupted between Agriculture Secretary John R. Block and Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

But by last weekend, soothing lotion had been applied in hopes of preventing further political bruises. Each was right, went the explanation, although some observers remained unconvinced.

Last Wednesday, Block called a news conference to announce "the administration's very strong and solid support for legislation which will provide for altering the cargo preference rules."

The object of several bills in Congress is to exempt federally subsidized commercial sales of farm products from a requirement that at least 50 percent of the commodities be carried in American-registered ships. The reason is that U.S. flag ships are more expensive to use than vessels under foreign flags.

A few hours later, Mrs. Dole issued a statement saying that she understood the White House was not at this time supporting the legislation referred to by Block.

The legislation and the administration's involvement stem from a U.S. District Court ruling on Feb. 21, which held that shipments of agricultural commodities financed under the Agriculture Department's "blended credit" program are subject to provisions of the 1954 Cargo Preference Act.

As a result, USDA was forced to suspend $536 million worth of credit for the sale of grain and other products to Egypt, Iraq, Morocco and Tunisia.

Block was specific about what he said was the administration's policy regarding the legislation to overturn the court ruling.

But so was Mrs. Dole, who said it was the understanding of the Transportation Department that the administration "is not at this time supporting legislation to change the inter-relationship between the cargo preference laws and the blended credit program."

The next day, on Thursday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes insisted that there was no dispute between Block and Mrs. Dole because both departments agree that the law should be returned to its status before the court ruling. They differed only in whether that effort should be made through a court appeal or through legislation, he said.

"They seem to be saying the same thing, that we would pursue it through the Justice Department ... in an effort to get a court ruling on that, and then if that didn't work out we would then favor some clarifying legislation, Speakes said.

A senior USDA official, Undersecretary Daniel Amstutz, reiterated Block's assertion on Thursday before the Senate Agriculture Committee that the administration supports the legislative route.

On Friday, Block told a group of reporters during a wide-ranging interview that he and Mrs. Dole really are on the same wave length.

"I don't see a real contradiction in it," Block said. "Even Secretary Dole appreciates that if we can't get some progress we will be going forward in support of this legislation."

In other words, he said, the legislative push will continue while the administration makes up its mind on whether to appeal the court decision. That would not have to be decided for another three weeks or so, Block said.

But a drawn-out legal process might require a lot of time, and it is possible to get legislative action much more quickly, he said.

Block said the possibility of a dual procedure involving Congress and the courts was brought up almost immediately after the Feb. 21 ruling.

Why wasn't this possibility mentioned at his April 3 news conference?

"Because my judgment is that the quickest correction of the problem is the legislative route," Block said.

The Dole-Block exchanges prompted the National Association of Wheat Growers to observe that "baseball season doesn't start until Monday, but already we're being treated to the administration's version of 'who's on first' base, the old comedy routine.

Henry Nesheim, president of the association, said President Reagan should "clearly reaffirm his support" for the legislation to restore the cargo preference exemption to the blended-credit program.

Pollution Report Creates Dispute

ROME, Ga. (AP) — A recent report citing pollution problems in the Coosa, Etowah and Oostanula rivers has irked state and local officials who say it ignores cleanup efforts that have been made over the past 10 years.

The group that released the report, however, said the information was compiled by the federal government using data from state and local officials.

The report released last month by the Environmental Defense Fund warned that restrictions have been placed on fishing in the rivers that converge in Rome because of toxic waste contamination.

"It's a lie," said Gene Welsh, chief of the state's water protection branch of the Environmental Protection Division. "It's kind of irritating. The report is far from factual. It listed the problems of years ago, and not what has been done to correct it."

The problems stem from the 1976 discovery that dangerous levels of polychlorinated biphenyls, a substance found to cause cancer in laboratory animals, was found in the fatty tissue of fish taken from the Coosa River.

The waste was being discharged from Rome's sewage treatment plant, and the source was believed to be a nearby General Electric plant which made telephone pole transformers using PCBs.

Commercial fishing in the river was then banned by the state, and warnings were issued against eating large quantities of fish from the water.

In the years since, officials say steps have been taken to correct the situation and the levels of PCBs in the Coosa have dropped.

"The quality of the Coosa River basin is better now than it's ever been. That's what upsets us so much about the report," City Manager John Bennett said. "Some of the fish may be toxic, but not the water. It never has been. And the funny thing is, there isn't any commercial fishing to speak of on the Coosa anyway."

Sample Helpful

Correct use of a nematode assay can save growers money during the growing season, according to Pitt Extension Agent Mitch Smith.

"The time that the sample is taken and the care the sample is taken with can greatly influence its effectiveness," Smith said. "Samples taken during the spring can be expected to have a tenfold reduction in the number of nematodes detected in contrast to a fall sample."

For example, he said, if a fall sample reveals 3,000 nematodes present, a spring sample would be expected to reveal around 300 nematodes present. "Growers should carefully examine nematode assays and act accordingly," Smith added.

The sudden weather changes that have been occurring lately are ideal for bringing on pneumonia problems in growing swine. A number of swine producers have been experiencing this problem.

In treating pneumonia in swine, it is important to know what type of pneumonia you are dealing with — mycoplasma, pasteurella or hemophilus. A post-mortem examination by a veterinarian and culturing of tissues can be money well spent in treating pneumonia properly.

Mycoplasma pneumonia is a chronic disease. A high percentage of pigs are affected, but the death loss is low. Pigs with mycoplasma pneumonia may have a dry cough which persists indefinitely. Other conditions such as influenza, pasteurella pneumonia and lung worms also cause this coughing and should be considered in making a differential diagnosis.

Severe pneumonia may result when mycoplasma pneumonia is complicated by large numbers of ascarid larvae passing through the lungs. Sulfas and antibiotics and very useful in the control of secondary bacterial pneumonias.

Hemophilus pleuropneumonia is a severe, often fatal pneumonia of growing finishing swine caused by a bacteria. It has a short incubation period and sudden death can occur. Pigs of all ages are susceptible but most commonly affected are those from 40 pounds to market weight. Sudden death of apparently healthy pigs is frequently the first sign of this pneumonia. This sudden death usually follows a stressful period such as mixing, moving or sudden weather change. In less severe cases as we most often see, infected pigs may have abdominal breathing (thumping), high fever (104 degrees to 107 degrees) and are reluctant to move.

A veterinarian can be most helpful in diagnosing a pneumonia problem and recommending drugs to control the problem. Poor ventilation and overcrowding often triggers the problem so adequate ventilation is a must. Good nutrition, a warm, dry, dust and draft-free environment and parasite control can minimize the effects of pneumonia in pigs.

You're looking at the best reasons for using Vernam® in peanuts.

Nutsedge. It's your biggest weed problem. If you treat only yellow nutsedge, you could be overlooking another problem weed: purple nutsedge. But there is one herbicide that can control both varieties. Only one. Vernam.

And Vernam has a lot going for it besides nutsedge.

Like sicklepod, morningglory, pigweed, lambsquarters, Florida purslane, and 15 other grass and broadleaf weeds. In a tank mix with Balan® it gets tough buffalo grass as well. Also, since Vernam is applied preplant incorporated, you get reliable coverage in wet or dry weather. With Vernam, you don't have to rely on precisely the right amount of rain to do the job.

You know nutsedge is a problem in your peanuts. And you know Vernam can get the job done. Peanut farmers like you have gotten year-in, year-out reliable weed control with Vernam since 1968. Make Vernam the backbone of your weed control program. Follow label directions. Stauffer Chemical Company, Agricultural Chemical Division, Westport, CT 06881.

Introducing Reward.™

Selective Herbicide

It leaves sicklepod defenseless.

Reward reduces the waxy "armor" on sicklepod leaves so later postemergence sprays can attack more effectively.

Reward knocks back early sicklepod and forces later-emerging sicklepod to grow up in the shade of your soybeans' canopy.

You can hardly find a tougher-to-control weed in your soybeans than sicklepod (or coffeeweed). But sicklepod has two defense mechanisms that new Reward helps you crack.

First, sicklepod has a tough waxy coating that is almost impossible to penetrate by most postemergence herbicides. Reward, applied preplant, reduces these foliar waxes. So your postemergence sprays can stick and adsorb better and knock out sicklepod more effectively.

Second, sicklepod grows fast in full sun but grows poorly in the shade. Reward knocks back first flush sicklepod to give your beans a head start. Later emerging sicklepod never has a chance, because by that time your soybeans have started to canopy.

If sicklepod is one of your biggest problems in soybeans, knock it defenseless with new Reward. See your dealer for all the details now. Stauffer Chemical Company, Agricultural Chemical Division, Westport, CT 06881.

Economists Suggest Tackling Trade Deficit Instead Of 'Bashing' Japan

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should forget about "bashing" Japan with sanctions and instead attack the record trade deficit by eradicating the red ink in the federal budget, two former chief White House economists say.

Alan Greenspan and Charles Schultze say the trade retaliation against Japan being considered by Congress could provoke a global economic war and do nothing about the root cause of U.S. trade deficits — the strong dollar.

"It's a no-win game," said Greenspan, who served under President Ford. "It may be satisfying to bash the Japanese ... but surely it is we who are hurt more than they and it strikes me that it's a very shortsighted policy."

Schultze, who served under President Carter, said retaliation advocates are making Japan the scapegoat for the inability of the United States to cut its budget deficit.

The red ink, he said, produces a strong dollar in relation to other currencies, making U.S. products less competitive overseas and foreign goods bargains for for American consumers.

"We need to raise taxes," Schultze said. "We need to cut back on defense spending. We need to do something about about Social Security spending. ... That's what's fundamentally driving the dollar up."

The economists made the comments on ABC-TV's "This Week With David Brinkley." Appearing on the same program, Peter Sato, economic affairs minister at the Japanese Embassy, said he was sure his nation would agree to trade concessions.

Two other participants, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Packwood, R-Ore., and committee member Daniel Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., differed about retaliation, but both said Congress is angry about Japanese trade barriers.

Greenspan said U.S. protectionism would create "high prices in the United States and probably high interest rates and it probably induces a retaliation on the part of our other trading partners."

Schultze said Japan's trade policies were not the main cause of America's record worldwide trade deficit of $120 billion in 1984, $37 billion of it with Japan.

He said the United States should not respond by enacting "some major new barrier to world trade, starting with the Japanese, leading to retaliation. Bashing the Japanese ... is very dangerous in the long run to our security, to world trade in general."

Greenspan said Congress and the Reagan administration, which has been negotiating for trade concessions from Japan, "may be fighting the wrong war at the wrong time" because the dollar may weaken late this year or next.

Sato said Japan does "not want to have a trade war. ... We are prepared to talk about anything you raise."

He said his government was prepared to go along with some U.S. demands for lower tariffs on such items as plywood and to open Japan's markets to more U.S.

telecommunications equipment.

Asked if the trade proposal scheduled to be unveiled this week by Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone would open Japan to more U.S. products, Sato replied, "I'm sure of that."

Moynihan agreed that the strong dollar is the problem, but Packwood said it "is not the principal reason for our trade deficit."

Asked about reports that Nakasone may propose a two-year phase-out of some trade barriers, Packwood said: "It's too late."

Jury Selection To Begin In Retrial Of Von Bulow

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer
PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Claus von Bulow, whose conviction of trying to kill his wealthy wife with insulin injections so that he could marry another woman was thrown out on appeal, heads back to court today "very optimistic" about his retrial.

The 58-year-old socialite was absent for weeks of pretrial hearings, but defense lawyer John Sheehan says von Bulow will be in court today and throughout the expected two-week jury selection process.

The attorney said Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande will be asked to rule on a prosecution request to sequester the jury.

The jury was not sequestered in 1982 when the Danish-born financial consultant was found guilty of twice trying to kill Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, 53, by injecting her with insulin in the couple's Newport mansion.

That conviction was overturned last year by the Rhode Island Supreme Court on state constitutional grounds. Mrs. von Bulow has been in a coma since December 1980 and her doctors say she will not recover.

In the first trial, prosecutors argued that von Bulow hatched a plot to kill his wife so that he could marry his then lover.

The defense said that Mrs. von Bulow brought on her coma herself through drug and alcohol abuse and that her husband was the victim of a frame-up concocted by her children from a previous marriage.

Von Bulow arrived at the fashionable Biltmore Plaza, a five-minute walk from the Providence County Courthouse, about 6 p.m. Sunday.

Accompanying him in a luggage-filled station wagon were his teenage daughter, Cosima, and his companion, Andrea Reynolds.

Von Bulow said he "feels very good and very optimistic going into the trial." He declined to comment further.

Ms. Grande was expected to dispense with a formal arraignment, opting to tell potential jurors that von Bulow has pleaded innocent to both attempted-murder counts.

During the first trial, jury selection took eight court days, but two factors could extend the process this time.

First is the extensive publicity surrounding the celebrated case.

Publicity was intense before the original trial in 1982. But it grew dramatically during the nine-week trial, much of which was televised, and kept up during the appeals process, subsequent reversal and the steps leading to the second trial.

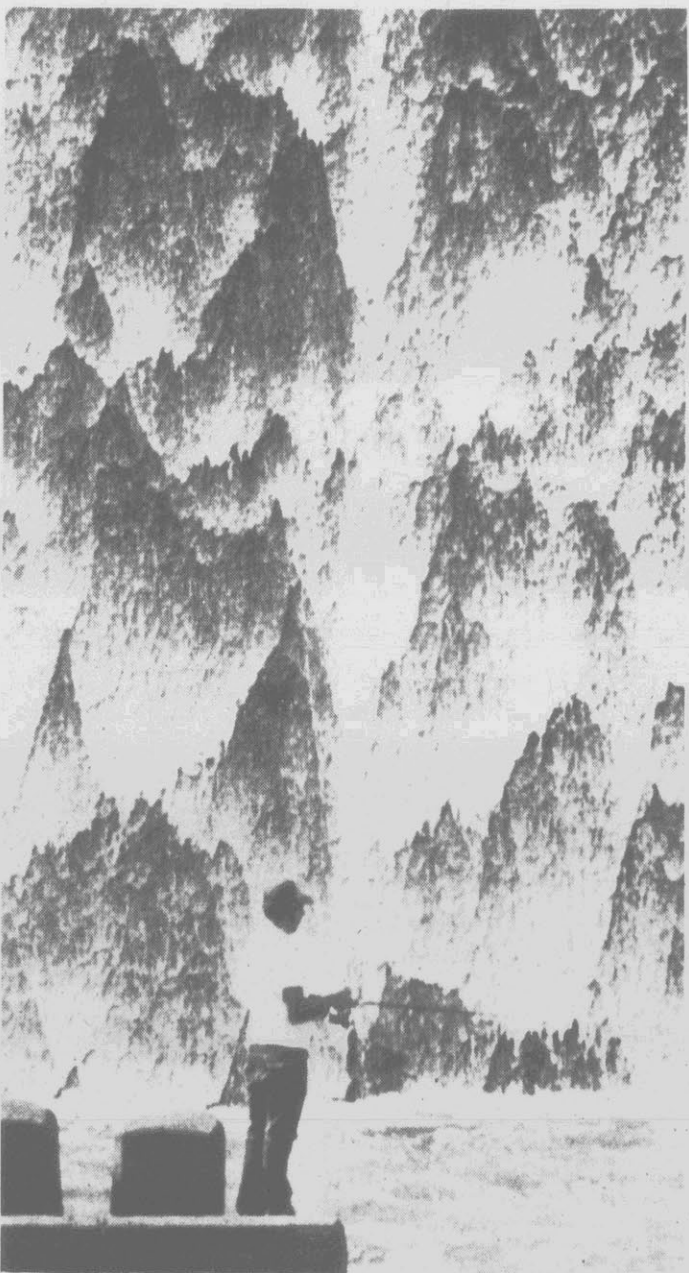

"You want to make sure you have 12 impartial people who have no knowledge of the case," said Sheehan. Asked how difficult that would be for the retrial, he replied, "That's what we'll find out Monday."

Another factor that could slow down jury selection is the judge's denial Friday of a prosecution motion to delay the start of the trial.

The state said it needed more time to prepare for additional defense witnesses, and Ms. Grande said she may end jury selection early each afternoon or recess for a full day to give the state time.

Ms. Grande ordered a juror draft nearly twice the usual size, about 50 potential jurors from 250 randomly selected Providence County registered voters.

Sheehan said the judge has not imposed time restrictions on questioning of each potential juror, but could once the process starts.

Liz Goes Home

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actress Elizabeth Taylor was released from St. John's Hospital to spend the holidays at home after undergoing tests for a chronic back problem, a spokeswoman said.

"She completed her tests and was sent home" Sunday, said hospital nursing official Margareta Lofgren.

Miss Taylor, 52, had been admitted Thursday, said nursing supervisor Mary Jane Thomas.

Hospital officials refused to elaborate on the back problem that kept Miss Taylor hospitalized through part of Passover and Easter.

She had made recent headlines by losing 45 pounds, dying her hair blond and undergoing treatment at the Betty Ford Center for Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation in Rancho Mirage.

The actress won Academy Awards for performances in "Butterfield 8" in 1960 and "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf?" in 1966.

Other film credits include "National Velvet" as a child star, "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," "Cleopatra" and "The Mirror Crack'd."

She just finished making a movie for television, "Malice in Wonderland," in which she portrays a Hollywood gossip columnist. It has not yet been broadcast.

Also due in Moscow this week are a U.S. Senate delegation and the Dutch Foreign Minister Hans van den Broek. Of the five NATO countries involved in the deployment plan, only the Netherlands has not given final approval.

Asked its reaction to the Gorbachev statement, a Dutch Foreign Ministry spokesman said, "We refer only to our first of June decision of last year, and that says in fact that we will decide on the first of November" whether to deploy U.S. cruise missiles. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

The Netherlands has said it will base its decision on Western estimates of Soviet missile strength.

NATO Secretary-General Lord Carrington said recently that at least 134 U.S. Pershing 2 and cruise missiles have been deployed in Europe, while the Soviets have deployed 414 medium-range SS-20s, each of which can carry three nuclear warheads.

The Reagan administration has said it is not willing to suspend missile deployment in Western Europe and research on space-based missile defenses without reaching an arms control agreement. The two nations currently are conducting arms control talks in Geneva, Switzerland.

Gorbachev, 54, became Soviet Communist Party leader March 11 after the death of Konstantin U. Chernenko. Reagan proposed a summit in a letter delivered by Vice President George Bush when he attended Chernenko's funeral. Last week, U.S. officials said they had received a "positive response."

plow a fire break, and the fire will come up on it and burn over it, because of the peat," Davenport said.

Meanwhile, the fires that raged through western North Carolina Thursday, Friday and Saturday destroyed 7,425 acres of U.S. Forest Service land and caused $4 million in private property damage, Ditt said.

He said the U.S. Forest Service figure did not include private land that was destroyed.

Burke County accounted for more than half the private property damage, with an estimated loss of $2.58 million. U.S. Forest Service lands totaling 3,500 acres were destroyed, he said, along with 27 houses, five mobile homes, two businesses, seven automobiles and 17 outbuildings.

Kay Scott of the state Division of Forestry Resources said two new fires broke out in Transylvania County Sunday, but had been contained by late Sunday afternoon. One of those fires destroyed three homes, she said.

Death Row Inmate Dies

CINCINNATI (AP) — A man on death row for killing three people died of an apparent heart attack which authorities said may have been caused by drugs he was taking for depression.

Autopsy results aren't expected for about two weeks for Terry Coffman, 29, who died Friday at the Southern Ohio Correctional Facility at Lucasville. Bob Prosser, spokesman for the Ohio Department of Corrections, confirmed the death Saturday.

A spokeswoman in the Franklin County coroner's office said, "It's very indefinite what happened to him at this point." Prosser said the death might have been drug-related.

Coffman, convicted of killing members of a Clinton County family, "was taking some anti-depressants. I don't know what it was," Prosser said. "He had some sort of reaction to it, an overdose. I haven't confirmed this, but it's possible that he may have been saving his medication."

Coffman's attorneys, D. Shannon Smith and James Perry, said they were told that Coffman apparently consumed a large amount of pills that he may have accumulated over a long period of time.

"He was preoccupied with (suicide). There was a lot of remorse. He was a very depressed man," Smith said.

Capitol Burns

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — A fire in the former South Korean capitol building, being renovated to house the National Museum, sent clouds of black smoke over parts of downtown Seoul. Fire officials said there were no injuries.

Museum officials said nothing had been moved into the domed stone structure. It took firemen about 30 minutes to extinguish the blaze, and damage was confined to the fifth floor, officials said.

Damage was estimated at $14,000. Fire officials said the fire was started by a welding torch being used in the renovation.

Built by Japan after it annexed the Korean peninsula in 1910, the structure was headquarters for the government-general and the Japanese colonial government until Korea after World War II.

Miller Holds Off Stephenson For Title

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. (AP) — Alice Miller describes herself as an unspectacular golfer, nervous when the pressure's on, and aggressive only because "I don't want to beat myself."

Miller either needs to re-evaluate her golf game — or she's putting everyone on.

Playing brilliantly despite the pressure of leading the LPGA's most prestigious tournament, Miller shot a 5-under-par 67 Sunday to win the $400,000 Nabisco Dinah Shore.

Heating up the 95-degree afternoon for Miller was a golf charge Arnold Palmer would have been proud of, with Jan Stephenson staging this rally.

Beginning the last 18 holes four strokes off Miller's pace, and falling behind by five shots at one point on the front nine, Stephenson began edging closer and finally pulled to within one stroke.

But Miller, who'd began the day with a one-shot lead on Patty Sheehan and Judy Clark, let Stephenson no closer and quickly rebuilt her pad.

At the end, after Miller punctuated her round with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole, she was at 13-under-par 275 for the 72 holes at Mission Hills Country Club, matching Donna Caponi's tournament record of five years ago.

Stephenson, despite her closing 66, wound up three shots behind the winner.

"Jan had a real hot hand putting, but so did I," Miller said after she'd locked up the $55,000 winner's prize, easily the largest of her seven-year LPGA career.

"Fortunately, she was starting the round from far enough back that even a 66 wouldn't do it."

Stephenson, who ended a two-year winless string just two weeks ago, seemed delighted to finish second and collect $36,000.

"I'm so happy," said Stephenson, plagued by putting problems during her victory drought. "When I'm putting good, everything about my game is good."

"I knew Alice would be someone who could hang on said. She kept coming right back all day long," said Stephenson, who needs only a victory in the Dinah Shore to become the first in LPGA history to win all four of the women's major tournaments.

Clark finished third, carding a 70 that left her four strokes back. She collected $26,000 for her finish in what is one of the LPGA's richest tournaments.

Beth Solomon had a 68 and Denise Streibig a 69. Both finished at 281. Pat Bradley was next at 283.

Sheehan faltered, shooting a 75 that left her back in the pack at 285.

"I was as nervous as I could be. But I knew I would be, so I tried to control it," said Miller, who finished with a card of 70-68-70-67. "I wanted to just stick to my game plan; hit greens and wait for the putts to drop."

"I keep saying that I didn't want to beat myself," added Miller, a 28-year-old former Arizona State golfer. "I'm not a real spectacular player, but I've worked so hard to be a consistent player."

Asked if the victory, her fourth tour triumph, would give the endorsement side of her career a boost, Miller replied: "I'm not a real marketable name at this point, but this will certainly help."

While Stephenson seemed to have the momentum heading in the final few holes, Miller refused to fold.

After Stephenson, playing in the threesome ahead of Miller, had narrowed the difference to a single shot, Miller rolled in a 12-foot birdie putt on No. 16 to go 12-under-par for the tournament. Moments later, Stephenson missed a six-foot putt for par on No. 17 to drop back to nine under.

Stephenson birdied No. 18 to again cut the difference to two strokes, but Miller came along and iced the cake with her closing birdie putt.

The winner's share vaulted Miller — who previously had finished second, third, fourth and fifth in LPGA events this year — to the top of the tour's 1985 earnings ladder, with $131,625.

McEnroe Entertains Crowd After Connors' Forced Exit

CHICAGO (AP) — John McEnroe found himself bending over backward to please a crowd disappointed because Jimmy Connors couldn't bend at all.

"It's never happened," Connors said Sunday after a torn muscle in his lower back forced him to default the finale of the $325,000 Volvo tennis tournament against the world's top-ranked player.

"Maybe that's it," added the tourney's No. 2 seed and recipient of a $25,000 check as runner-up. "I played too many times hurt in the past and it's finally caught up with me. . . I'm no kid any more."

It was the first time in nearly 15 years on the professional tennis circuit the 32-year-old left-hander failed to take the court. He warmed up for 15 minutes before making the decision.

McEnroe amused the Pavilion crowd of 6,445 with some excellent shotmaking and a few comic stunts in an exhibition victory over Eliot Teltscher, the No. 5 seed in the tournament and a last-minute substitute.

In a bid to keep the patrons pleased, the tournament's promoters also took advantage of a new rule and extended the doubles match between the team of Johan Kriek and Yannick Noah and the U.S. Davis Cup duo of Ken Flach and Robert Seguso to a best-of-five contest.

It was a blessing for the pairing of Noah and Kriek, who stormed back from a 2-0 set deficit to post a 3-6, 4-6, 7-5, 6-1, 6-4 win and split the $15,000 first-prize purse. Flach and Seguso divided $7,500.

McEnroe, however, appeared only slightly more pleased than the crowd at Connors' default, despite picking up $50,000 and his first title by default.

"If I knew I was going to win, I wouldn't have minded (Connors' default) as much," McEnroe said, recalling a tournament final three years ago in Antwerp, Belgium, when he played a similarly ailing Ivan Lendl.

"Lendl told me three or four times during the match he definitely wouldn't finish — and I ended up losing to him in four sets," he said.

"So until the bottom line was clear (Sunday)," McEnroe added, "I wasn't going to take anything for granted."

In Palm Beach Gardens, Fla. Hana Mandlikova may have lost her $100,000 Ford Challenge Cup tennis match to Chris Evert Lloyd, but she won a good sportswomanhood award when she protested and changed a match-point line call that went in her favor.

Lloyd, ranked No. 2 in the world, beat third-ranked Mandlikova 6-3, 6-3 in Sunday's 70-minute final.

Ahead 5-3 in the second set, Lloyd reached match point when Mandlikova, of Czechoslovakia, fell to 30-40.

Lloyd returned a ball to the baseline, which was called out by the lineman, deucing the score. But both Mandlikova and Lloyd disagreed, saying the call was good.

The umpire agreed with both players that a let should be played.

Evert won the replayed point — and the match — when Mandlikova missed a backhand volley.

Mandlikova defended her decision to contest the vital call.

"The ball was good. What could I do?" she asked. "It was a bad call."

Lloyd complimented her Czech opponent for the act.

Elks Hurls Conley Past North Pitt 4-0

HOLLYWOOD — Michael Elks hurled a three-hitter and recorded nine strikeouts as the D.H. Conley Vikings whipped North Pitt 4-0 Saturday in the final game of the opening round of the Pitt County Easter Baseball Tournament.

Fred Bryant led the Vikings with a 2-2 performance at the plate.

Conley took the lead in the first when Todd Cochran singled, Bryant and Lee Hardee walked to load the bases, and a wild pitch allowed Cochran to score.

The Vikings added three more in the third. Steve Mills ripped a leadoff single, stole second and Cochran reached first on an error. A pickoff attempt by North Pitt sailed into right field allowing Mills to score and Cochran to take third. Bryant singled in Cochran, and courtesy runner Martin Anderson stole second.

Hardee rolled a grounder to advance Anderson, and a squeeze bunt by Randy Mills plated Anderson.

Conley faces North Lenoir tonight at 8 p.m. in the second round of the winners' bracket, while Kinston plays Farmville Central at 5 p.m.

Careers End, Blossom In Spring

By The Associated Press
The flowers that bloom every spring in baseball's training camps also signal the end of the line for some familiar names.

While heralded newcomers like shortstop Shawon Dunston (Chicago Cubs), shortstop Ozzie Guillen (Chicago White Sox), outfielders Daryl Boston (White Sox) and Nelson Simmons (Detroit) and pitcher Joe Hesketh (Montreal) are expected to have an impact this season, the list of veterans who couldn't cut it this spring and disappeared from major-league rosters would have made a pretty good team at one time.

How about catchers Jeff Newman (Boston), Jim Essian (Oakland) and Ned Yost (Texas)? Or first baseman Mike Squires (White Sox)? You can round out the infield with second baseman Jim Anderson (Texas), shortstop Tom Verzyer (Cubs) or Jerry Dybzinski (White Sox), third baseman Todd Cruz (Baltimore) and outfielders Mickey Rivers (Texas), Darrell Brown (Minnesota) and Max Venable (Montreal).

For starting pitchers, say farewell to Bob Walk (Pittsburgh), who started the opening game of the 1980 World Series and won it for Philadelphia; Rick Waits (Milwaukee), a nine-year major-league veteran who won 13 games for Cleveland in 1978 and 1980 and 16 in 1979; Jeff Russell, who stayed in Cincinnati's starting rotation all last season despite a 6-18 record, and Sid Fernandez, a minor-league strikeout whiz who was 6-6 in 15 starts with the New York Mets a year ago.

For relief there are Ron Reed, who led the White Sox with 12 saves, including the 100th of his career; Joe Sambito, plagued by elbow problems the last three years but whose 72 saves are second on the Houston Astros' all-time list, and Mike Armstrong (New York Yankees), who had a 10-7 record for Kansas City in 1983 and was the No. 2 man in the Royals' bullpen behind Dan Quisenberry.

Others who failed to survive the final cut include infielder Eddie Jurak (Boston), third baseman Tom O'Malley (White Sox), pitcher Tom Tellmann (Milwaukee), infielder Houston Jimenez (Minnesota), pitcher Roy Lee Jackson (Toronto), infielder Randy Johnson (Atlanta), catcher Bobby Ramos (Montreal) and catcher Glenn Brummer (St. Louis).

The world champion Tigers didn't stand pat despite winning 104 games a year ago. Chris Pittaro, whose father is the baseball coach at Rider College, has never played a game above the Class AA level (he batted .284 for Birmingham of the Southern League last year), but has been handed the third base job. And Simmons, who hit .433 in a nine-game trial at the end of last season, will be the designated hitter. The switch-hitting Simmons belted seven home runs during the exhibition season.

There will be some intriguing experiments in Chicago, where Dunston has replaced veteran shortstop Larry Bowa to start the season for the Cubs; across town where the White Sox are counting on Guillen and center fielder Boston to help them bounce back from last year's fifth-place finish, and in Philadelphia, where the Phillies have given jobs to John Russell (first base) and Steve Jeltz (shortstop). The emergence of Jeltz enabled the Phillies to trade Ivan DeJesus to the Cardinals.

The slick-fielding Guillen, who was acquired from San Diego in the LaMarr Hoyt-Tim Lollar trade, hit .296 for Las Vegas in 1984, struck out only 40 times in 477 plate appearances and led the Pacific Coast League with 362 assists.

Guillen has never appeared in a major-league game but Boston was called up three times last season and tripled off Texas knuckleballer Charlie Hough in his first at-bat. However, he finished with 14 hits in 83 trips for a .169 average.

Dunston was the No. 1 selection in the June 1982 amateur draft. He began the 1984 campaign at Midland of the Class AA Texas League, batting .329 in 73 games. But he slipped to .233 in 61 games when elevated to Iowa of the Class AAA American Association.

The Phillies, trying to shore up a porous infield, have no qualms about Jeltz's glove. He was called up last Sept. 1, started all but three games during the month and committed just one error in 129 total chances. However, he hit just .206 after a .220 average in 134 games with Portland of the PCL.

Russell, who also catches and plays the outfield, batted .283 in 39 games with the Phillies after being called up last August. He hit 27 homer runs for Portland in 1983 and 19 in 93 games last season before being brought up.

The Baltimore Orioles have high hopes for third baseman Fritz Connally, who was acquired from San Diego after batting .310 with 16 homers at Las Vegas.

Herm Winningham, one of four players acquired from the Mets in the Gary Carter deal, has enabled the Expos to move Andre Dawson and his ailing knees from center field to right. He batted .281 for Tidewater of the International League and .407 in a 14-game trial with the Mets.

The spring shoulder injury to Milwaukee's Dion James created an opening in center field for Doug Loman, who hit .324 with 18 homers for Vancouver of the PCL and homered twice in 23 games with the Brewers.

Pitchers expected to move into their teams' rotations include Montreal's Hesketh (12-3 at Indianapolis of the American Association and 2-2 with a 1.80 ERA after the Expos brought him up); Minnesota's Rich Yett (12-9 at Toledo); Milwaukee's Teodoro Valenzuela "Teddy" Higuera (a Texas League-leading 2.60 ERA at El Paso).

Jamesville Falls In Eighth, Pam Pack Whips Creswell

JAMESVILLE — Gene Taylor legged out an inside the park homer in the bottom of the eighth to lead Roanoke's Redskins past Jamesville 7-6 in the Jamesville Invitational Baseball Tournament Saturday.

After trailing 4-3 going into the fifth inning, Richie Ange scored on a passed ball and Pee Wee Groover singled in Terry Perry and Whit Brown to give the Bullets a 6-4 edge. But Roanoke evened the score in the bottom of the frame before pulling out the extra-inning win.

Stacy Wallace led Roanoke with three hits in four trips to the plate, while Taylor went 3-3. Alex Mobley and Sammy Respass each went 2-4 for Roanoke.

Groover paced the Bullets with two hits in four at bats.

Sam Stephenson notched 15 strikeouts and fired a one-hitter to lead Washington past Creswell 13-0. Stephenson had a no-hitter going into the seventh, but Chris Melton ripped a one-out single for Creswell to break the string.

David McIver paced the Pam Pack with a 3-5 performance at the plate, while Steve Oden, John High and Marty Hodges each went 2-5.

Robert James went 4-4 and Glenn Hardison recorded a two-hitter as the Williamston Tigers pounded North Edgecombe 9-1.

Williamston took a 3-0 lead in the first, as Hardison and James each drove in a run with singles. Tommy Wynne finished with two hits for the Tigers.

Sal Valvo ripped a two-run homer in the first to lead St. Francis to an 11-7 victory over Bear Grass in the opening game of the tourney. Eric Karney went 3-4 to lead St. Francis, and Pat Cullen, Mark Diebold and Tim Bain had two hits each.

Lawrence Watson and Ed Holliday paced Bear Grass with two hits each.

St. Francis was scheduled to play

Williamston at 5 p.m. today in the winners' bracket, with Washington taking on Roanoke. In the consolation bracket, Bear Grass faced North Edgecombe at noon, and Creswell played Jamesville at 2:30 p.m.

Evert Lloyd's Admirer To Miss Tournament

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP)—A 38-year-old man who has been infatuated with Chris Evert Lloyd for more than a decade and says he wrote more than 200 letters to the tennis star has been ordered to keep away from her.
 Circuit Judge Thomas Sholts, who issued the restraining order, said John Mallouk's passion was more obsession than love.
 "This is almost like a (John) Hinckley-Jodie Foster situation," Sholts said, referring to the man who shot President Reagan in an attempt to draw the movie star's attention.
 The situation came to a head this week when Lloyd, 30, was scheduled to play in the Ford Challenge Cup tournament at PGA National. The courts are only a few blocks from Mallouk's house.
 At the request of tournament officials, Sholts issued a 10-day restraining order Friday, barring Mallouk from the event.

 So, while the No. 2-ranked women's tennis player in the world beat Canadian Carling Bassett 6-2, 6-1 Saturday, the man who has worshipped her since 1971 sat dejectedly in his villa.
 Lloyd went on to win the final and pick up $100,000 in prize money Sunday.
 "Right now, I don't have the incentive to write anymore," Mallouk said Saturday. "So now the question is whether to go on with the noble cause or just bag it."
 Mallouk, who says he lives off his real estate investments, says anyone who compares him with John Hinckley just doesn't understand.
 "I'm no John Hinckley," he said. "I wouldn't say I'm obsessed with her; I think single-minded would be the better word."

Division Title Special For Denver Nuggets

By The Associated Press
 Division titles might be old hat to the Celtics, Lakers and 76ers, but it's still special to the Denver Nuggets.
 Second-place Houston's 126-105 loss to San Antonio clinched the National Basketball Association's Midwest Division crown for the Nuggets on Sunday night, even before they beat Golden State 130-125.
 "Most of the preseason polls I saw had us fifth or sixth," veteran center-forward Dan Issel said. "We might be a rung under as far as talent entering the playoffs, but this team has a lot of heart that compensates for the talent that teams like Boston and the Lakers have."
 Alex English had 47 points and 10 rebounds for Denver, which won its first division title since 1977-78. The Nuggets, 51-27, are 24 games over the .500 mark for the first time since the team entered the NBA in 1976.
 "It's been different on this team, there's a real camaraderie that I haven't seen in all my years in basketball," English said. "It's a great thing to win a division title. I just wish I could share the champagne with everyone here."

 In other NBA games, it was Boston 114, New York 102; Los Angeles Lakers 135, Portland 133 in overtime; Detroit 113, Milwaukee 91; Phoenix 125, Seattle 110.
 Denver led 73-48 at halftime, then led down in the second half after the Rockets-Spurs score was announced. The Nuggets increased the margin to 85-57 early in the third period before Golden State rallied to within three points on several occasions late in the game.
 "I really didn't want the players to know about the San Antonio-Houston score, but it's tough to hold it back," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "It's a big thrill for the players and me to win this thing. It's been our goal since Day 1. Division titles don't come along that often and I'm going to enjoy it along with the players."
 Lafayette Lever, who had 22 points, 11 rebounds and 11 assists, said, "Once we heard the score from San Antonio we wanted to celebrate, but we first had to play."

Chamberlain Right For Wallenberg Part

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Richard Chamberlain, still boyish after all these years, stars as Raoul Wallenberg, a real-life character who justly deserves being called a hero, in a miniseries that tells the story of the Holocaust in a compellingly different way.

The two-part thriller, "Wallenberg: A Hero's Story," is on NBC tonight and Tuesday night.

Has it really been a quarter century since Chamberlain rocketed to fame in "Dr. Kildare" in 1961? Since then, he's become Mr. Miniseries with leading roles as the swashbuckling John Blackthorne in "Shogun" and the tormented priest in "The Thorn Birds."

You may see a few lines on his face, but he's still the perfect choice to play Wallenberg, a 33-year-old Swedish aristocrat who used his diplomatic cover to save the lives of tens of thousands of Hungarian Jews in 1944.

In this age of hype, Wallenberg deserves all the best TV adjectives: brash, brave, charismatic and charming, and Chamberlain cuts a dashing figure bringing him to life.

Even his accent fits. Wallenberg received a degree in architecture from the University of Michigan, and Chamberlain's English has a modified Swedish lilt.

Wallenberg's adversary in Hungary was none other than Adolf Eichmann (Kenneth Colley) who rode shotgun on Hitler's "final solution" scheme to wipe out the Jews.

Although the Hungarian leader, Adm. Nikolas Horthy (Guy Deghy), was an avowed bigot — "I was an anti-Semite before you were born," he tells Eichmann — he draws the line at death camps. He also notes that Jews have been an integral part of Hungary's economy for centuries.

But Wallenberg knows that the strings of every puppet can be tightened and that the Nazis have gotten some trainloads of Jews past the Hungarian authorities. One such death caravan is pulling out of the train station when Wallenberg first arrives in Hungary. Wallenberg's outrage and helplessness are conveyed through Chamberlain's twisted face and hands outstretched against the window.

This dedicated man of action cuts through the red tape and prints Swedish citizenship papers to give the Hungarian Jews protection. Eichmann calls them "magical cards that change Hungarians into Swedes," but, most of the time, he's forced to honor them.

Wallenberg sets up safe houses for the Jews under the colors of the Swedish flag, even charming Hungarian soldiers to guard them with references to promotions.

In return for more benevolent treatment of the Jews, Wallenberg assures the Nazi and Hungarian leaders that he would be a friendly witness in any post-war criminal trials. This leverage doesn't work with Eichmann, though, and some of the miniseries' strongest scenes involve the two rivals.

Their first conversation begins with guarded courteousness that masks the underlying tension and hostility. Colley, a British stage actor, flip-flops between the two sides of Eichmann: the cool, civilized exterior and the cold, heartless interior.

Filed entirely in Yugoslavia, "Wallenberg" is a moving, intensely committed story that provides a personal deviation from the almost-numbing mass-of-humanity efforts previously done on the Holocaust.

"Wallenberg" is the first part of the Dick Berg Film Festival. Berg also is executive producer of "Space," next week's 13-hour blockbuster on CBS.

Gerald Green, who won an Emmy Award for NBC's 1978 "Holocaust," wrote "Wallenberg."

Tenor III, Calls Off 4 Concerts

MIAMI (AP) — Tenor Luciano Pavarotti is fatigued and has canceled four appearances scheduled here next week, local opera officials said.

The world-famous tenor was to appear in Verdi's "Ernani" with the Greter Miami Opera to commemorate the 20th anniversary of his debut in the United States.

The company has received a cable saying Pavarotti is "under doctor's order ... to take a rest cure from two to three weeks," said Robert Herman, general manager of the Greater Miami Opera.

He said Pavarotti is resting in his home in Modena, Italy.

The tenor is fatigued and indisposed in part because of his excessive weight, Herman said.

Nunzio Todisco, a Neapolitan tenor who has sung "Ernani" with the San Francisco Opera, among others, will replace Pavarotti in Miami.

Pavarotti has been singing "wonderfully, but he's tired," said Emerson Buckley, who will conduct the opera in Miami and most recently conducted for the tenor on March 24.

"I know he saw a doctor in New York last Monday because he was exhausted from the constant singing and traveling he's been doing," Buckley said Sunday.

He added that Pavarotti has also canceled an appearance in Venice, Italy.

Pavarotti made his American debut with the Greater Miami Opera opposite Joan Sutherland in a 1965 production of Donizetti's "Lucia di Lammermoor."

In his cable Pavarotti said he was "unhappy I will miss this engagement for the 20th anniversary celebration ... but unfortunately I must take this step."

Final Bow

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — After eight years on the podium, Edo de Waart has taken his final bow as conductor for the San Francisco Symphony.

De Waart, leaving to become music director for the Netherlands Opera, was honored Saturday night by the sell-out crowd of 3,000 with dozens of bouquets, three curtain calls, a five-minute standing ovation, and a rare fanfare by the orchestra's horn section.

Film Draws Tourists To Village

By GERD BRAUNE
Associated Press Writer

WOPPENROTH, West Germany (AP) — Thousands of tourists have been trekking to this remote village to see the setting of a gripping epic film about Germany's Nazi past.

Focusing on three generations of the Simon family in the fictional village of Schabbach from 1919-82, the saga called "Heimat" was recently featured at the New Directors Film Festival in New York.

"Heimat," which means "homeland" in German, captured the public's imagination last fall when it ran for 11 episodes on West German television. Each installment was seen by an estimated 10 million viewers.

The full-length movie premiered at the Munich Film Festival last fall to rave reviews and has been praised by critics throughout Western Europe for its accurate and moving portrayal of German family life in a rural setting.

Running 15 hours and 40 minutes, the film is the longest ever made for showing in cinemas, director Edgar Reitz said.

Reitz decided to tackle a film about Germany's Nazi past while watching the American TV miniseries, "Holocaust," on the German network in the late 1970s.

"I saw how it was all taken seriously and how the question of guilt in German history was being discussed by all the great German intellectuals on the basis of this travesty," Reitz said in an interview. "I watched the horrible crocodile tears of our nation."

"Heimat" focuses on a peaceful farm society between two world wars, the destructive effects of Nazism and the community's ultimate recovery.

Reitz spent more than five years shooting "Heimat" on location in Woppenroth and the neighboring village of Gehlweiler, using dozens of local residents as actors and extras.

Ever since the TV series, the tranquil Hunsrueck (Houndsback) region between the Mosel and Nahe rivers in west-central Germany has enjoyed an unprecedented popularity with tourists.

Scores of visitors intrigued by the story have been arriving almost daily at Woppenroth as they look for Schabbach, many apparently unaware that it was a fictional village.

Not to disappoint the guests, Woppenroth Mayor Toni Sulzbacher every morning hangs up a sign reading "Schabbach" outside his village. In the evening, he removes the sign for safekeeping.

"The sign became so popular that I take it home now because three of them disappeared overnight," Sulzbacher said.

Sulzbacher, who was born in 1927, said "Heimat" became so popular because it is a "realistic depiction of life" in the region over six decades.

Residents of the two villages were glued to their television screens while "Heimat" was shown. Most of Woppenroth's 40 senior citizens who lived there in the pre-Nazi era praised the accuracy of the film.

"Heimat" depicts German life in the village from the end of World War I, through Hitler's rise to power and the fall of the Third Reich, the economic recovery of the 1950s to the contemporary anxiety about nuclear weapons.

It starts when a 30-year-old former World War I soldier, Paul Simon, saying he is going to have quick a beer, deserts his wife Maria and goes to seek his fortune in the United States.

Paul, who was a blacksmith in Schabbach, becomes a successful "self-made" man, but the action stays in Schabbach, centered around his family and other villagers and their daily lives.

Two signers of the Declaration of Independence were born on April 8: Lewis Morris, in 1726, and William Williams, in 1731. The Continental Congress did not make public the names of the Declaration's signers until January of 1777 — perhaps to prevent sealing their fate as traitors. One signer, undaunted, added his address: "Charles Carroll, of Carrollton," in Maryland. He wanted to be sure the British would know where to look for him, if they decided to hang him.

DO YOU KNOW — Who was the first person to sign the Declaration of Independence?

FRIDAY'S ANSWER — The giant sequoia tree is practically fireproof because its sap is nonresinous.

ADVERTISING OF TAX LIENS OF REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the City Council of City of Greenville, dated March 14th, 1985, I am hereby advertising tax liens for the year 1984 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs, and the omission of interest and costs from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The real estate that is subject to the lien, the name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and the property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

Tobacco Pests

Two of the most prevalent insects of the tobacco plant bed are the cutworm and the vegetable weevil, Pitt Tobacco Agent Mitch Smith said.

The cutworm is a brownish-black insect hidden by day that growers may have to dig to uncover, Smith said. The vegetable weevil is a small legless worm which ranges from one-fourth to one-third inch in length. The weevil is pale green and destroys leaves by chewing them, he added. Damage can often be identified by ragged leaves on the plants.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♦K1095 ♥7 ♦83 ♠KJ10762

The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 NT Dble Pass ?
 What action do you take?

A.—Partner's double is for penalties, and had it been your lead you would pass and expect a substantial gain. But partner is going to be on lead and he will almost surely lead a red suit, which is odd-ton to cost your side both a trick and a tempo. Since you don't want to defend under those circumstances, jump to three clubs. That shows a good suit and a distributional hand not too rich in high cards.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♦KJ984 ♥A876 ♦K8 ♠Q6

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 1 ♥ Pass 2 ♥ Pass
 3 ♥ Pass 4 ♥ Dble ?
 What action do you take?

A.—You have a minimum opening bid and no first-round control to show, so the only bid you could even consider is a signoff in four hearts. But why bid at all? Pass, and give partner the opportunity of making another cue-bid below game level if he so desires.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♦4 ♥QJ10762 ♦983 ♠742

The bidding has proceeded:
 West North East South
 1 ♠ Dble 3 ♠ ?
 What action do you take?

A.—East's raise to three spades is preemptive. While you have little in the way of high cards, your distribution is attractive and your hand has excellent playing potential. At the risk of seeming reckless, we suggest that you bid four hearts.

Q.4—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
 ♦J85 ♦J10762 ♠AK975

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♦ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?

A.—You could be cold for a grand slam, but there are hands where you might not even make game. However, we would take an optimistic view and make the strongest bid available to us as a passed hand, a jump shift to three clubs. That is a one-round force and guarantees a good fit for partner's suit.

Q.5—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♦63 ♥J1072 ♦Q95 ♠K1092

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass Pass 1 ♦ 1 NT
 Pass Pass Dble Pass ?
 What action do you take?

A.—Partner's reopening double shows a good hand. From your holding, it is obvious that East is going to get little, if any, help from his partner. Pass — this could be a real bonanza.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
 ♦Q9852 ♥93 ♦J1076 ♠AK

The bidding has proceeded:
 South West North East
 Pass 1 ♠ 1 ♥ Pass
 1 ♠ Pass 2 ♠ Pass ?
 What do you bid now?

A.—Your vulnerable partner has taken two bids and you have a hand which is as close to an opening bid as you could have and yet pass. If four spades isn't a viable contract, we'll eat our collective hats. Bid it.

A Variety Of Activities Marked Easter Across U.S.

By The Associated Press

Egg hunts, strolls in the sunshine, nuclear weapons protests and traditional church services marked Easter Sunday as millions of American Christians celebrated the resurrection of Jesus.

Tens of thousands of New Yorkers, some wrapped in furs against a brisk wind, turned out for the ritual promenade down Fifth Avenue, which dates back to the latter half of the 19th century.

At Stone Mountain Park near Atlanta, about 8,000 children hunted for 60,000 Easter eggs. And Washington began its week-long Cherry Blossom Festival with the traditional lighting of a Japanese stone lantern at the Tidal Basin.

About 13,000 people attended an Easter service at the Hollywood Bowl in California that was highlighted by the release of 200 pigeons, while at least 1,500 people attended a service at Mount Rushmore in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

In Philadelphia, the day was marred by a surge of looting and vandalism that broke out after thousands of youths jammed the downtown movie and arcade area. At least 12 people were arrested, police said.

The annual Easter egg roll on the White House lawn, dating back to first lady Dolly Madison, was scheduled for today for children 8 years old and younger. President Reagan and his wife Nancy are vacationing at their Santa Barbara, Calif., ranch and will not attend.

In New York City on Sunday, hats abounded at the promenade down Fifth Avenue.

Noel MacFetrich's bonnet consisted of a stuffed chicken roosting atop a top hat. Beneath he wore a tuxedo with a chicken-wire bow tie and cummerbund.

"It's Easter," he said when asked about his unusual topper. "It could have been a rabbit, I suppose."

At Ellsworth Air Force Base near Rapid City, S.D., security police detained four people who tried to put Easter lilies on a runway, according to Air Force Capt. David Turner. He said the four would be turned over to U.S. marshals for arrest for trespassing on a military installation.

About 56 people gathered on a ranch next to the base for a sunrise service organized by the Easter Lilly Peace Project, said group spokesman Greg Spanton, who said the event was also intended to draw attention to the farm crisis. It was the fourth such protest in as many years.

The three men and a woman who were arrested tried to place 35 lilies on the runway, one for each B-1 bomber scheduled to be stationed at Ellsworth in the near future, Spanton said.

"No matter how hard I stretch my imagination I can't imagine the risen Christ embracing a B-1 bomber or an MX missile," said ranch owner Marvin Kammerer.

At the Hollywood Bowl's 65th annual sunrise service, 200 pigeons were released after readings by actors Ted Knight and Jo Ann Pflug and music from several orchestras and choirs.

"We had about 350 people on stage," said organizing committee president Bud Hermann, who put the attendance at 13,000. "It was great."

The half-hour service on the viewing terrace of Mount Rushmore near Keystone, S.D., was attended by 1,500 to 1,600 people, estimated Mount Rushmore National Memorial Superintendent Bob Reynolds. The service is a tradition started in 1949.

Chaplains from the branches of the military conducted an annual sunrise service at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia just outside Washington.

In the city, a 300-year-old Japanese lantern was lit to open the Cherry Blossom Festival, a spring attraction.

The Tidal Basin is lined by hundreds of pink-and-white cherry blossoms that Japan sent in 1912 as a gift to President William Howard Taft and his wife.

The city of Tokyo gave the lantern to the nation's capital in 1954 to commemorate the centennial of Commodore Perry's mission to Japan.

In Philadelphia, Mayor W. Wilson Goode, calling the melee "a case of too many young people being in one area at one time," said police estimated that 5,000 youths were in a three-block area.

EASTER LOOTING — Ken Timms, manager of the Chestnut Street Athletes Foot store in downtown Philadelphia, looks over the damage done to the store after a looting spree erupted from some of a crowd of two-to-three thousand people in the center city shopping district Sunday. Million Said To Have Virus

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than one million Americans are infected with the virus suspected of causing Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome and as many as 20 percent could contract AIDS or some other disease, a federal scientist says.

"Whether all will die is unclear," says Dr. Robert C. Gallo, chief of the tumor cell biology laboratory at the National Cancer Institute. "Some might simply have an enlargement of the lymph nodes and go no further."

Gallo, who helped discover the suspected cause of AIDS, made the comments in an interview Saturday that summarized his recent presentation to the Imperial Cancer Research Fund Laboratories in London.

He said his "best estimate" is that more than one million Americans already have the suspected virus and that from 10 percent to 20 percent could contract AIDS or another disease.

U.S. health researchers say that as of March 18, AIDS was fatal in 4,300 of the 8,853 cases reported in the United States.

Gallo said his estimate was conservative and "just a guess" based on limited data, including estimates of the number of the most susceptible people in this country and the percentage believed to have sought medical treatment.

The Real Estate Corner

WE'VE CHANGED OUR MIDDLENAME, NOT OUR COMMITMENT TO YOU.

The sign says First Citizens Bank. But inside, you'll find the same people who served this community for First State Bank.

You see, before the merger of First Citizens and First State, both banks were committed to giving customers personal attention, honest advice, and efficient service they could always count on. Because of our similar banking philosophies, we were able to merge without any shakeups or major changes.

And if you bank at First State Bank, in either Greenville or Winterville, you're now a customer of First Citizens Bank statewide. That puts more than 270 banking offices across North Carolina at your service.

Need to cash a check in Asheville or make a deposit in Wilmington? No problem. Just look for a First Citizens Bank.

For most First State Bank customers, banking will continue unchanged. But for customers who may need specialized services, First Citizens can, we believe, provide any banking service that a person or company may need. That's a benefit of banking with First Citizens, one of the soundest two billion-dollar banks in the United States.

So drop by your nearest First Citizens Bank and talk with the friendly people. They'll be the same people you knew before the sign changed.
