April Frost Covers Countryside With Mask Of Winter

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A light layer of frost on rooftops reminded area residents this morning that the face of spring often wears the mask of winter.

A late-season cold snap dropped the mercury to around freezing early today, creating concern over the fate of fruit and horticulture crops in Pitt County. Agricultural officials said they did not know the extent of injury to area crops from the unseasonably cold temperatures but that they expected damage in some areas.

Of particular concern is the county's strawberry crop, currently in a critical stage, growers say. Most strawberry producers in the county reported they prepared for the cold by utilizing irrigation equipment to coat plants with ice, insulating them from damaging sub-freezing temperatures.

Martha McLawhorn, who with her husband Billy tends a pick-your-own strawberry operation near Ayden, said her husband was "up all night last night tending to the plants" and that their fields escaped damage "as far as I know." The McLawhorns activated an irrigation system in the fields, turning the plant beds into a sheet of ice.

Pitt extension agent Sam Uzzell said this morning he had reports of corn in the county that was "yellow and fallen over" from cold damage. Producers in low-lying areas can also expect some cold damage to fruit, he added.

According to Greenville Utilities, the temperature dipped to a low of 33 degrees early today, bone-chilling for mid-April, but above the mid-20s that weather forecasters predicted. Unofficial temperature readings across the county indicate the mercury may have fallen as low as 28 degrees in some areas.

Record lows for the date were established today in Greensboro, where the temperature dipped to 24; in Asheville and Raleigh-Durham, each of which recorded a 23-degree reading, and at Charlotte, where the low was 28.

Temperatures will gradually become warmer in North Carolina as a strong high pressure system responsible for record-breaking cold weather moves offshore, the National Weather Service said. Even with the warming trend, however, temperatures will remain below the seasonal average tonight. Lows will range in the 30s and lower 40s.

Warmer weather is in store Thursday, when highs are expected to reach into the 60s and low 70s.

GUC Sets Aside $412,000 For Annexation Projects

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission Tuesday set aside $412,000 for plans and easements for sewer lines to serve areas that may be annexed by the city, and agreed to hold a public hearing on a revision to utility regulations that would require city residents to connect to GUC sewer lines.

The money earmarked for sewer plans and easements included $192,000 for plans and $75,000 for easements in the Brook Valley area, $15,000 for plans and $15,000 for easements in the Oakgrove area, $40,000 for plans and $15,000 for easements along the Belvoir Road, $15,000 for plans and $15,000 for easements at Floral Park, and $30,000 for easements for the River Bluff outfall.

Commission board members also awarded a contract to Rivers and Associates for $192,000 to begin planning and easement mapping in the Brook Valley area, a project that GUC General Manager Charles Horne said would take about a year to complete. The acquisition of easements needed before construction could begin on the sewer lines in Brook Valley is expected to take an additional year, Horne told commission members.

Present utility regulations require that the owner of all structures used for human occupancy "install suitable toilet facilities" and "connect such facilities directly with the proper public sewer ... within 90 days after date of official notice to do so" if the sewer is within 150 feet of the property line.

The proposed changes in the regulation would require, first, that owners of buildings abutting on any street, alley or right-of-way "in which there is a public sanitary sewer that was installed prior to July 1, 1985, and the owner is currently receiving water service to the property" to install proper toilet facilities and connect them "with proper public sewer ... on or before July 1, 1987," at a charge of "one-half of the fees current at the time application is made for sewer service."

Secondly, the proposed changes would require owners of property adjacent to streets, alleys or rights-of-way in which sewer is installed "after July 1, 1985," to install toilet facilities and connect them with public sewer lines "within 90 days" after official notice to do so is given.

The proposed changes also include a provision that failure to comply with the regulations "will result in termination of commission's water service" to the property.

In other business, the commission approved a request by representatives of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce's East Carolina University athletic committee to paint a sign — "Welcome to Greenville and ECU ... Home of the Pirates" — on the southside elevated watertank on Greenville Boulevard, provided the chamber agrees to maintain the sign for the life of the existing coating system on the tank

Harris To Build Center

Construction of a new Harris Supermarket — the eighth in a locally owned chain — is expected to get under way in 30 to 45 days at Bells Fork on N.C. 43, south of the Greenville city limits.

The 40,000-square-foot grocery is part of a shopping plaza that will include, among other things, an office complex for the Harris chain, a hardware store, a dry cleaning business, a computer sales office and a beauty parlor.

Durward Harris, developer of the shopping plaza said the retail center, said the $2 million development probably will be called Harris Plaza.

Harris said site work is already under way and he said construction work at the shopping center is expected to be completed sometime in December.

The Harris Supermarket chain at present includes four stores in Greenville — the newest of which opened in September on Memorial Drive at the Airport Road intersection — as well as stores in Ayden, Bethel and Tarboro.

Harris said the new Bells Fork store will include a hog-processing facility — "not a slaughterhouse," but a facility for processing whole hogs, including a smokehouse — that will enable Harris to produce sausage, cured hams and other pork products for the Bells Fork and other Harris stores.

Dow Jones Official Praises Area Economy, ECU Role

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Ray Shaw, president and chief operating officer of Dow Jones, came to Greenville Tuesday bringing compliments for East Carolina University, Greenville and eastern North Carolina, but little knowledge of local economics.

Long a journalist, the Oklahoma native who now heads the company which publishes the Wall Street Journal, spoke at a Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce afternoon program co-sponsored by Branch Banking and Trust Company and the ECU-BB&T Center for Leadership Development. He showed and later admitted his ignorance of this region's tobacco dilemma by stating that farmers in the Midwest are having big problems, but farming here seems in good shape. Always good-natured, when a member of the audience told him how much the value of tobacco land has dropped in the past year, he commented, "That's why one needs to talk about agriculture in New York, not North Carolina."

Shaw said one of his children and a daughter-in-law are graduates of East Carolina University and he expects another of his children to graduate from here soon. He said he has always been impressed with the way this university provides outreach to eastern North Carolina and feels this effort sets it apart from most universities. He also commented on the quality of life here — he and his wife have a vacation home on the Outer Banks — and on the educable and willing labor force here.

He said eastern North Carolina is fortunate it was skipped in the great textile push.

He said he believes the national economy is slowing a bit, with the Gross National Product down for the second quarter, but said, "That's not all bad. It's impossible to keep growing and keep inflation down." He said he believes the national economy will remain strong through the rest of this year and well in 1986.

He said housing and real estate are experiencing strong demand nationwide, but that many younger families are leaving the northeastern part of the country, because there they are priced out of the housing market.

New England is coming back, he said, with high tech and government work strong. Pennsylvania and New York are still staggering under the cutbacks in steel and other heavy industries. The Southeast is a patchwork quilt, with some areas strong, some not. He said the region is fortunate not to have had the deep economic swings that most of the rest of the country has experienced.

He was scheduled later to hold a private seminar for the businessmen participating in the BB&T Center for Leadership Development.

Ayden Board To Request $724,453 In Block Grant

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The town of Ayden will submit an application to the state of North Carolina for $724,453 in Community Development Block Grant funds. Members of the Town Board of Commissioners have decided.

The board approved the application, which will compete for funding with nearly every municipality in the state, at its monthly meeting Tuesday. Community Development Block Grant funds are available to communities for demolition, renovation and paving in low-income and middle-income neighborhoods. The application outlined the target areas for the 1985-86 community development project and the work that will be completed if the funds are approved.

The application, which was researched and prepared for Ayden by Talbert, Cox and Associates, includes three proposed projects. The first, designated C-1, targets an area along East Avenue and Turnage Street and requests approximately $300,000 for renovation of 38 substandard dwellings in the area, demolition of three dilapidated dwellings and relocation of three families to standard housing units.

The second project, designated C-2, asks for another $347,000 for renovation of dwellings in the South Jackson Street area. The third, termed C-3, requests around $100,000 for renovations to the old Ayden Middle gymnasium, now tentatively designated the Ayden Recreation Center.

Talbert, Cox and Associates told commissioners the application would probably score well in competition for monies but that a high score was no guarantee of funding.

In other business: •In a budget amendment, the board appropriated $6,762 from the library trust fund to complete a paved parking lot around the structure

•Marcus McClanahan, administrative assistant for the town, briefed commissioners on a proposed ordinance on abandoned structures in the town. The ordinance, if approved, would allow the town to start condemnation procedure and demolish abandoned structures that are "hazardous to the health and safety of residents or a fire hazard."

•Commissioners reviewed proposed regulations on use of the Old Middle School property. The regulations set tentative rent schedules for use of the facility and provide guidelines for the type of activities allowed at the facility. No action was taken.

•The board approved a $630 contract with Jan Murphy to audit the Housing Authority budget. It also approved sale of a surplus Housing Authority truck to the Kinston Housing Authority for $2,000.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

These are questions often asked about carpet care:

1. Why does so much carpet fiber come up with my cleaner? Am I wearing out the carpet?

It is normal for loose fibers to be present in new cut pile carpets. This is manufacturing debris left in the pile when some carpet is tip-sheared. Even though it seems like a lot of fiber, it is minor compared to the total fiber content. Regular vacuuming removes the shedding fiber without harming the carpet.

2. When I vacuum, I have light and dark tracks. How can I eliminate this?

The apparent shading from light to dark is characteristic of dense cut pile carpet such as plush. It's caused by light reflecting from the surface. The tips of the carpet tufts reflect less light than the sides. When the tufts lean over, that area appears darker than one where the tufts are leaning in the opposite direction.

For a uniform effect, make the final cleaning stroke in the same direction across the carpet.

3. Why is pet hair so difficult to remove?

Animals have oil in their hair, causing it to cling when deposited on carpet and upholstery. The longer it remains, the more it will penetrate into the carpet pile or fabric weave. Regular and prompt removal will minimize accumulation. For carpet, an agitator cleaner is best to brush the hair out of the carpet pile.

4. My carpet seems to be getting fuzzy, especially in traffic areas. Is my vacuum cleaner causing this?

No, fuzzing is the hairy effect on the carpet surface caused by wild fibers or slack yarn twist, or by fibers slipping out when walked on. There is a natural tendency for the fiber ends to separate a bit and let loose excess yarn. Continue vacuuming until fuzzing stops.

5. What is the best way to clean carpeted stairs?

Steps with carpet should be cared for regularly. The upholstery nozzle or a brush attachment will work best for cleaning and raising the carpet pile. The more suction you have, the quicker you can remove the soil and raise the carpet pile.

6. How many strokes with my vacuum cleaner are necessary?

Heavy traffic areas should be vacuumed daily, with seven strokes for a thorough cleaning. Areas receiving little traffic can be vacuumed once a week or every three or four days, with three or four strokes for adequate maintenance.

7. When I move heavy furniture, the depressions don't come up even after vacuuming; how can these areas be raised?

Depressions occur when heavy furniture remains in one position for a long time. Shift the location of furniture to help prevent permanent depressions. After the furniture is moved, brush the area with your fingertips to loosen and stand up the matted tufts. After several days, if the depressions are still noticeable, hold a steam iron two or three inches above the carpet and allow the steam to flow into the depressions.

DO NOT let the iron touch the carpet. After steaming, brush gently, except on acrylic fiber on which a coarse comb works best. What type of vacuum cleaner is best for oriental rugs? How can I avoid catching the fringe in the cleaner?

Room-sized orientals are best cleaned with an agitator cleaner.

When approaching a fringed edge with an upright cleaner, lift up the cleaner nozzle by pushing down on the handle. This will allow cleaning to the fringe, but will raise the nozzle and avoid catching the fringe. When using a canister with a power nozzle, stop before reaching the fringed edge. Fringe may be cleaned with suction, using the upholstery tool or floor brush.

Clearing The Way

Pitt Schools Superintendent Eddie West, who will soon also be superintendent of the schools in the Greenville system, has announced administrative reorganization appointments for the upcoming merger of the two school systems.

The reorganization process creates nine new positions and, in filling the positions, West has drawn upon the personnel in both school systems' administrative offices.

We are moving along with the merger process which formally takes effect on July 1, 1986. There will be a period when administrative personnel will be wearing two hats as the short-term business of the two separate school systems continues, but the administrators move into the long-range work required of their new positions. It is clear that they should know their new assignments as quickly as possible so they can begin the planning that is necessary to developing a county-wide school system which will be second to none. The assignments have now been made and that is as it should be.

Success Story

The naming of Therese Knecht Dozier as 1985 National Teacher of the Year is a classic "Only in America" story.

Mrs. Dozier is a teacher in Columbia, S.C., who had a perfect 4.0 average at the University of Florida. After teaching in Florida she moved to Columbia where she now teaches. It is the kind of background that might be expected of the winner of such a prestigious award — except Mrs. Dozier started life in Vietnam, the daughter of a Vietnamese woman and a former German SS officer. She and her brother eventually wound up in a French orphanage where they were adopted by an American officer and his wife. They then came to the United States to lead the conventional life of middle class Americans.

Mrs. Dozier sees teaching as "a way of repaying the debt" for the opportunities she has received in this country. As do most educators, she feels frustration with the public's perception of teaching but it is obvious that she is giving the profession her best ... and her best is very good.

The sequence of events which brought Mrs. Dozier to America was clearly very fortunate for her, but now we have seen it was also very fortunate for America.

Public Speaks Through Lobby

WASHINGTON — Recent remembrances of the events that spawned the Voting Rights Act of 1965 seem to have had little effect on Ronald Reagan's Justice Department.

Late last month, Justice informed officials in Selma, Ala., that it had approved the move of a polling site from a community services building to a new annex of the county courthouse. The Dallas County Commission had already switched the site without clearance from Justice, ostensibly in violation of a key provision of the voting rights law.

Career attorneys at Justice, in fact, are said to have advised higher-ups that the unauthorized shift undermined black franchise and that the polling site be moved back to its original venue. But Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds, who has been tapped for promotion by new Justice chief Edwin Meese, apparently overruled their recommendation. Never a friend of the Voting Rights Act, the Reagan administration loathes enforcing laws it doesn't like.

Selma blacks don't need to be shown the irony of the administration's decision. Because of a bloody march that took place 20 years ago last month in their city of about 27,000, the voting rights movement reached critical mass.

Since then, the size of Selma's population hasn't changed, but the community has undergone a dramatic transformation. The Albert Hotel (where Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. was kicked in the groin) and the old city jail are gone, as are the racial barriers that assured whites-only access to the basic municipal services. Two blacks now serve on the five-member city council.

In 1980, the council had 10 members — five whites, five blacks — from an equal number of voting wards, and a white president elected at large. Shortly before the 1984 election, U.S. District Court Judge W. Brevard Hand reduced the number of wards and council members by half. He was annoyed by the failure of local officials to agree on a redistricting plan after the 1980 Census.

The judge's action left two black and two white wards and one that would be considered in political jargon, "swing." Whites actually enjoyed a slight edge in population in the swing ward, and a white subsequently won its city council seat.

Yet black officials and civil rights activists charge that one of the reasons for his victory was that in 1982 the all-white county commission had moved a polling box from a community center in a black neighborhood to the new annex of the Dallas County courthouse, about nine city blocks away. It was there, two decades ago, that about 150 blacks lined up to register to vote at the front door instead of the side door, as they'd been instructed. Sheriff Jim Clark had them all arrested and marched off to a detention camp.

Joe Smitherman, Selma's mayor then and now, told us that county officials had moved the box, which is used in city and county elections, in the interest of conveniencing all Dallas County voters (he says crowds seeking such services as food stamps at the community center interfered with polling activities). At the time, he added, that action caused no controversy.

Yet Hank Sanders, a black Selma lawyer and Alabama state senator, contends that the symbolism of the courthouse has discouraged many blacks from voting there. "The whole atmosphere (there) is not conducive to black voter participation," he said in a telephone interview.

Voting figures obtained from the Justice Department by the National Public Radio seem to support Sanders' contention. They indicate that only 38 percent of black registered voters went to the polls in the 1984 general election, down from 55 percent in the 1980 primary. In 1982, according to NPR, the black turnout was 36 percent.

Such a sharp difference may have underscored arguments within Justice for moving the box back to the community services center. If nothing else, the county commissioners' action, which under law required Justice Department approval, constituted grounds for an earlier investigation.

Yet the present administration is one that, with a few high court victories in civil rights cases under its belt, seems uninterested in making even a passing effort at enforcement where black — not white — voting rights are under attack.

After 20 years of progress, Selma's blacks have to wonder if they are being victimized again.

A Question Of Enforcement

WASHINGTON (AP) — In theory, this is the week the American people are getting a chance to buttonhole members of Congress and tell them how they ought to vote on the budget and on aid to the rebel forces in Nicaragua.

But, as is so often the case, the average citizen who wants to be heard must stand in line behind hordes of people being mobilized by lobbyists on both sides of the issues.

Key votes on the budget and Nicaragua are expected in Congress before the end of the month.

The citizen who just pays taxes and votes regularly will have to compete for attention with the campaign contributors and other political heavies being mobilized by the White House and its allies in the battle to win support for President Reagan's program.

That citizen, if he or she is not part of an organized constituency, also must also try to be heard over the well-orchestrated campaigns mounted by groups including senior citizens determined to put pressure on Congress to reject the proposal to cut 2 percent from the cost-of-living increase for Social Security recipients.

A lot of the lobbying is incidentally aimed at those citizens not affiliated with any of the organized groups, who are comparable to the uncommitted voters in an election.

None of the people pushing Reagan's programs is as effective lobbying the uncommitted as the president himself. For weeks, Reagan has devoted most of his weekly radio addresses to denunciations of the Sandinista government in Nicaragua and appeals for support of his request for $14 million to aid the anti-government rebels.

Few people in America can better testify to Reagan's skills as a communicator than Walter F. Mondale, who took a historic beating at Reagan's hands in the 1984 election. Said Mondale, "President Reagan's ability to communicate — even things that I think are demonstrably not accurate — verges on genius."

While much of the lobbying is aimed at individuals, in this age of computers and electronic mail, of video cassettes and satellite hook-ups, the power of groups with access to technology is magnified.

Shortly after Reagan and Senate Republicans reached their compromise on the budget, a legislative alert went out from the American Association of Retired Persons to signal the 18 million-member group's volunteer leaders that it was time to step up the campaign to defeat any effort to limit cost-of-living increases for Social Security recipients.

The senior citizens' lobbying group also has run newspaper ads headlined: "The Budget Deficit: A Question of Fairness." The ads go on to ask, "Is it fair ... to cut back on Social Security, Medicare, Medicaid, job training, housing and student loans to help deal with the budget deficit, while ignoring massive federal tax giveaways to large corporations and wealthy individuals?"

Meanwhile, at the White House, Vice President George Bush was giving pep talks to business groups in an effort to get their help in passing the budget compromise. Legislative strategists also were meeting at the White House to decide the best way to duplicate Reagan's recent victory on funds for the MX missile.

For that fight, the Republican National Committee was called upon to mobilize GOP activists throughout the country to alert contributors to use their influence on wavering members of Congress to bring them into line.

Another method is to make people available to local newspapers and radio and television stations for interviews. Edward Rowley, former arms negotiator, was one of the key figures the Republican National Committee made available via satellite hookup to local broadcast stations for interviews on the MX.

Grass-roots lobbying has come a long way from the days when a concerned citizen might go to the local service club luncheon to get a word with the congressman at home for the Easter recess.

The Big House Scheme

I always depend on Simon Wallin for inside information on the stock market.

The other day I got a call from him. "I have only one word to say to you," he whispered.

"I'm listening," I told him.

"Prisons."

"Prisons? What the hell kind of stock market tip is that?"

"Private prisons are soon going to be bigger than private hospitals. Incarceration is a growth industry, and I want you to get in on the ground floor. There's a new company just starting up called Big House Inc."

"Come on. How are people going to make money on prisons?"

"God management and tax breaks," Simon said. "There's an unbelievable demand for new prisons in every state in the union. The public wants criminals locked up, but they refuse to pay for the jailhouses. So they are giving out franchises to private entrepreneurs who have figured out a way of making money on the penal system."

"I don't get it. If the government is running in the red putting people away, how can the private sector get the system in the black?"

"It's the way prisons are financed. When the government builds a prison complex it has to borrow money from the public. If a private company builds it, then it becomes a tax shelter."

"They're going to lock up prisoners in tax shelters?"

"We're not going to put prisoners in tax shelters, we're putting investors in them."

"Okay, so I'm in a prison tax shelter. Now what happens?"

"Big House Inc. leases it back to the government and gets a management contract to run it. We receive the depreciation on the prison as well as a daily fee for each prisoner we take care of."

"I'm not sure I want to make money on people who are locked up."

"You'll be doing the inmates a service because Big House Inc. will treat the prison population much better than the bureaucrats treat them now. After all, they have a vested interest in the convicts' happiness. In order to make money they have to count on word-of-mouth. If former inmates start bad-mouthing Big House in the underworld, offenders will ask to be sent to the competition's prisons after they're caught."

"What about conflict of interest? Suppose a person is up for parole, and Big House doesn't want to give it to him because they'll be stuck with an empty bed. I would hate to deprive a man of his freedom just because I'm afraid of losing his business."

"You have nothing to worry about on that score. There's a waiting list for every prison in America. Most states are guaranteeing private prison corporations 105 percent occupancy for the next 20 years."

"Won't prisoners be resentful that people are trying to make money on them?"

"Now when they realize private companies have a lot more to offer the public institutions. Big House is putting in the best security equipment money can buy, so no one can break into a prison that doesn't belong there. We're also installing the latest athletic facilities, cable TV, workshops and leisure activities. Their guards have been instructed to wish every prisoner a nice day. They have put 'How Did We Do?' questionnaires in all the cells asking inmates to compare them with other prisons they've been in. Our business is to make the consumer, in this case the inmate, consider Big House a home away from home. That's the only way you get repeat business."

"It sounds awfully good on paper, but I still don't understand how, if they're going to provide all these services, Big House will still make a big profit on running a prison institution."

"It's quite simple," Simon said. "They're going to serve all the inmates airline food."

Count Starts For Friday's Launch

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The countdown began today for Friday's launch of space shuttle Discovery, with Sen. Jake Garn riding as a congressional observer on the first of two shuttle missions scheduled this month.

The clock started at 2 a.m. with the traditional "call to stations" that summoned more than 50 engineers, technicians and computer experts to their consoles in the launch control center three miles from the launch pad.

In the first step of final preparations for launching the mission, delayed on five earlier occasions, the ship's electrical power was turned on and the operation of data processing and backup flight control systems was verified.

Discovery is scheduled to lift off at 8:04 a.m. Friday for a five-day mission during which the crew will deploy two commercial communications satellites, conduct medical experiments and operate a drug processing machine.

Sister ship Challenger was to be towed later today from a processing hangar to an assembly building to be mated with an external fuel tank and two solid fuel booster rockets.

Three days after Discovery lifts off, plans call for Challenger to be transported to the launch pad to be groomed for an April 29 launch carrying a European-built space laboratory.

Discovery's seven crew members flew here Tuesday from their training base in Houston, and commander Karol Bobko told reporters, "We're all anxious, we're all ready, the vehicle is ready and the payloads are ready, so we should be leaving Friday."

Referring to five earlier postponements of the launch, pilot Donald Williams said, "We're going to do it right this time."

Garn, a Utah Republican, is making the trip in his capacity as chairman of an appropriations subcommittee that oversees spending by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. He said the experience will give him better insight into the agency's operations — much as visiting a toxic waste dump or a Veterans Administration hospital helped him understand problems there.

During the flight, Garn will be subjected to medical tests to determine how well he adjusts to weightlessness.

The other crew members are mission specialists Margaret Rhea Seddon, David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman and payload specialist Charles Walker, an engineer with McDonnell Douglas Corp.

Walker is making his second space trip to operate a drug processing device to produce an undeclosed hormone. The hormone will be tested on animals and humans as McDonnell Douglas and its partner, Johnson & Johnson, seek Food and Drug Administration approval to mass produce it in space and market it back on Earth.

Walker successfully made test quantities of the hormone on a flight in September, but they became contaminated by a bacteria. To prevent a recurrence, stronger sterilizing chemicals will be used on the equipment and cooler temperatures will be maintained.

Remains Of Six More U.S. Servicemen Are Identified

WASHINGTON (AP) — Six American servicemen killed in Vietnam have been positively identified 16 years and more after they were lost in combat in Southeast Asia, the Pentagon says.

The six — four Air Force officers, a Marine and a soldier — were identified over the past month at the Army's Central Identification Laboratory in Honolulu, Hawaii, Pentagon spokesman Michael I. Burch said Tuesday.

Caskets bearing the men were to be transported by air from Hawaii to Travis Air Force Base in California later today while relatives make burial plans, added Maj. Keith Schneider, an Army spokesman.

Schneider said the four Air Force officers were shot down in their aircraft over North Vietnam in 1965 and 1968 and subsequently listed as missing in action. The other two were captured during ground combat in South Vietnam and were listed as prisoners of war who died in captivity, he said.

The Pentagon identified the men as:

- Air Force Col. Melvin J. Killian, of Council Bluffs, Iowa, reported lost over North Vietnam on Sept. 30, 1965.
- Air Force Maj. Cleveland S. Harris, of Birmingham, Ala., reported lost over North Vietnam on Feb. 29, 1968.
- Air Force Maj. Chambliss M. Chesnut, of Little Rock, Ark., reported lost over North Vietnam on Sept. 30, 1965.
- Air Force Capt. Michael D. Chwan, of Bayonne, N.J., reported lost over North Vietnam Sept. 30, 1965.
- Army Sgt. Gerasimo Arroyo-Baez, of Maunabo, Puerto Rico, reported as having been captured in South Vietnam on March 24, 1969, and subsequently dying in captivity.
- Marine Sgt. Robert C. Sherman, of Danville, Ill., reported as having been captured in South Vietnam on June 24, 1967, and subsequently dying in captivity.

The Vietnamese had said last month when they returned the remains that they thought they were those of five American servicemen. But extensive tests at the lab produced six positive identifications, Burch said.

Burch said Arroyo-Baez and Sherman were the first American servicemen whose remains were recovered after dying in POW camp in South Vietnam.

Schneider said there were 35 other men still listed as having died in captivity in South Vietnam whose remains have not been recovered. The Pentagon had previously identified the remains of 23 men who died in prisons in North Vietnam.

Patti Chesnut, the widow of Chambliss Chesnut who now lives in Houston, called the return of her husband's remains "the last chapter."

"I didn't know what to say 20 years ago. I still don't know what to say," she said.

Chesnut and Chwan were shot down in the same plane in 1965. The two had trained together at MacDill Air Force Base in Tampa, Fla., before going overseas.

"I was shocked after 19½ years of not having an answer," said Chwan's widow, Dana, who still resides in Tampa. "I never really expected that his body would be returned so he could be buried in American soil."

Teaching Staffs Steady As Enrollment Falls

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL, Associated Press Writer
 WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's public schools enroll almost 6 million fewer students today than a decade ago, but the number of teachers and school administrators has declined only slightly.

The National Education Association reported Tuesday that there are 2.1 million classroom teachers, earning an average of $23,546. Those teachers are part of a total instructional staff, including principals, supervisors and others, that now numbers 2,435,663, or only 17.527 less than in 1974-75. The average salary for the entire instructional staff is $24,569.

In 1974-75, when the last of the baby boom generation was still in school, more than 45.1 million children showed up for classes in the fall. By last fall, public school enrollment had dropped to 39.37 million.

The staff size has shrunk less than 1 percent in that period, despite the 12.8 percent enrollment drop. Student-teacher ratios have shrunk, but many schools have hired additional teachers for handicapped students and other special needs.

Many governors and school reformers have been pressing for pay hikes in the past two years to attract brighter recruits into the profession. The NEA said classroom teacher salaries rose 7.3 percent in the past year.

The NEA's research department, in a report based on an annual survey of state education agencies, also reported the schools are spending an average of $3,429 to educate each public school student.

That is 7.8 percent more than the $3,182 it cost last year. The per pupil costs ranged from a high of $6,867 in Alaska to a low of $2,182 in Utah.

Average teacher salaries ranged from a high of $39,751 in Alaska — a state with a high cost-of-living — to a low of $15,971 in Mississippi, where thousands of teachers recently staged wildcat strikes to protest their pay.

The Mississippi legislature last month approved a package, over Gov. Bill Allain's veto, that will provide $4,400 in raises — including some merit pay — over the next three years.

Meanwhile, the National Catholic Educational Association reported Tuesday that minorities now comprise more than 20 percent of the students in Catholic schools. Minority enrollment has increased by 127,000 students since 1970, even while overall Catholic school enrollment has fallen by almost 1.5 million.

The association reported Catholic schools suffered an enrollment drop of 66,000 students, or 2.2 percent, in the past year. There are now 7,891 Catholic elementary and 1,449 secondary schools, or 61 fewer than in 1983-84, with 2.9 million students.

For the seventh consecutive year, the largest share of public school funds came from state governments. The states provided 49 percent of the public schools' $137.6 billion in revenues for the current school year, the NEA said. Local governments paid $61.6 billion, or 44.8 percent, while the federal government picked up the rest of the tab: $8.6 billion, or 6.2 percent.

That was down from 6.6 percent in 1983-84 and "is the lowest level of federal funding since the 1960s," the NEA said.

Five years ago, the federal government paid more than 9 percent of the school budgets.

The report, "Estimates of School Statistics, 1984-85," also showed:

— The 10 states with the highest average salaries for classroom teachers are: Alaska, $39,751; New York, $29,000; District of Columbia, $28,621; Michigan, $28,401; Rhode Island, $27,384; Wyoming, $26,709; California, $26,300; Minnesota, $25,920; Maryland, $25,861 and Illinois, $25,829.

— The 10 lowest are: Mississippi, $15,971; South Dakota, $17,356; Maine, $18,329; New Hampshire, $18,577; Oklahoma, $18,930; Arkansas, $18,933; Vermont, $19,014; West Virginia, $19,563; Louisiana, $19,690 and Idaho, $19,700.

— High schools will graduate 2,483,861 students this year, down 1.4 percent from 1983-84 and 12.5 percent less than in 1975.

— Classroom elementary teachers earned $23,092; high school teachers, $24,276.

L.A. Mayor Re-Elected

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Voters showed what "this great and culturally diverse city can do" by electing Mayor Thomas Bradley to a historic fourth four-year term by the largest margin of his career, the triumphant Democrat told supporters.

Bradley's resounding win over his nearest challenger, Councilman John Ferraro, who tried to tarnish the generally positive image Bradley enjoys, was even bigger than his 64 percent to 32 percent victory in 1981.

Ferraro conceded the race early today with 24 percent of the vote counted. With 2,341 of the 2,367 precincts in, or 98.9 percent, Bradley had 295,778 votes, or 67.7 percent, to Ferraro's 133,306, or 30.5 percent.

"Los Angeles has made history tonight," Bradley, 67, the son of Texas sharecroppers and grandson of slaves, told supporters. "You have shown (what) this great and culturally diverse city can do.

The only other Los Angeles mayor elected four times was Fletcher Bowron, but his first term, starting in 1938, was only for two years.

State Department Curator Issues Call: Give The Secretary A Home

WASHINGTON (AP) — Concerned about the $1 million cost of safeguarding the homes of the last five secretaries of state, the State Department is searching for a permanent residence despite criticism it will lead to "grand princely palaces" for government officials.

Clement Conger, the State Department curator, is quietly urging any well-heeled Washingtonian who has a nice, secluded home to give it to the nation as a permanent residence to be used by whomever is secretary of state.

In a recent telephone interview, Conger said the donor would receive a tax deduction, and the taxpayers would save the money it now costs to make security improvements on the homes of the secretaries of state.

But Rep. Tom Petri, R-Wis., said last week the proposal was "totally inappropriate to a democracy" and ultimately would result in "all major officials, including the speaker of the House, holding forth like great lords in grand princely palaces scattered about the city."

Petri said, "If the secretary of state has a grand residence provided free of charge, can we deny this same perk to the secretary of defense? And how about the secretary of the treasury? ... And the director of the CIA certainly has security problems as great as anyone's."

Asked about the criticism, Conger replied, "I can see State, Defense, and CIA, but that's where it should stop."

An aide to Petri, Joe Flader, said the move could end up costing the government money rather than saving it.

For instance, for a home valued at $2 million, the donor — who undoubtedly would be in the 50 percent tax bracket — would receive a tax savings of $1 million. By donating the home, the owner also would avoid paying any capital gains taxes.

In addition, the government probably would be called upon to pay for the operating expenses of the home.

In any event, nothing seems imminent yet. "We're not going out on any high pressure campaign at all, but are letting the public know we'd be receptive to a property if it's offered," Conger said. "It takes time for people to consider this."

It's unlikely that the current secretary of state, George P. Shultz, would be the first tenant. But the State Department confirmed it has spent more than $1 million on "security-related equipment" for Shultz's home and those of his four predecessors.

Swedish Transplant Patient Stable

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — A Swede with an "enormous will to live" was in stable condition today, three days after surgeons gave him the first permanent artificial heart implanted outside the United States, hospital officials said.

Dr. Bjarne K. H. Semb, a Norwegian surgeon who led the implant team, described the patient Tuesday as in "unexpectedly good shape" following the Sunday operation. Spokeswoman Tanja Blanck at Stockholm's Karolinska Hospital, where the operation was performed, said today the patient was in "unchanged, stable condition."

Semb had told a news conference that the patient, a man in his mid-50s, was "off the respirator, awake and talking." Semb said the patient requested he not be identified.

The Swedish news agency TT and two

Stockholm newspapers today identified the patient as Leif Stenberg, 53, who in the 1960s and 1970s was known in Swedish news media as "Mr. X" while under investigation for alleged tax evasion and other activities.

Ms. Blanck refused to confirm the reports. Stenberg's attorney, Bjorn Rosengren, declined in an interview with The Associated Press to identify the patient as his client. But he confirmed that he told the Swedish news agency he "would be delighted if he (Stenberg) manages this operation. Stenberg is a guy who has a lot of trouble."

Stenberg was indicted for tax evasion in 1978. A trial is pending, but doctors have testified he was too ill with a heart condition to go to court.

The 12-member team at Karolinska Hospital removed the patient's natural heart and put in its place a metal and plastic Jarvik-7 heart. Doctors did not explain why they did not announce the operation until Tuesday.

Semb said a second operation was performed after the implant because of technical problems. He did not elaborate, but said the two operations lasted more than five hours.

The patient was the fourth recipient of a permanent artificial heart. The previous three implants were performed in the United States, also using the Jarvik-7 heart.

The surgeon said it was difficult to predict the course of the patient's recovery. "Our goal is to discharge him in three or four weeks," he said.

Soviets Will Keep Afghanistan Policy

WASHINGTON (AP) — A senior State Department official says Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev has signaled the Soviet Union isn't about to ease its harsh crackdown against rebel forces in Afghanistan, which has included saturation bombings and incursions into Pakistan.

Michael H. Armacost, U.S. undersecretary of state for political affairs, said Tuesday the administration has talked with the Soviets on several occasions about cross-border incursions into Pakistan and warned that the Soviets' Afghanistan policy could restrain improvement in U.S.-Soviet ties.

On another subject, Armacost said the United States believes Pakistan when it says it is not trying to develop nuclear weapons.

Regarding Afghanistan, Armacost said a continuation of the existing harsh Soviet policies was signaled by the meeting Gorbachev held in Moscow with Pakistani President Mohammed Zia ul-Haq during the funeral for Konstantin Chernenko in Moscow last month.

"It was in that context of a toughening of Soviet policy that Gorbachev spoke to Zia, and it was an indicator there wasn't going to be much change in that stance," Armacost told the Overseas Writers group here.

"Above all, Mr. Gorbachev represented himself as a man who intended to maintain continuity in their policies, and their policies in Afghanistan have been pretty tough in the course of the past year," he added.

He cited saturation bombings in Afghanistan and cross-border incursions into Pakistan in which there have been "a substantial number" of Pakistani casualties.

The Soviets, who invaded Afghanistan in 1979, have about 110,000 troops in that country.

Confession 'Forced'

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A key suspect in the kidnap-killing of a U.S. drug agent, charged with violating several federal laws, told a judge at his arraignment that he had been tortured and forced to sign a confession.

"The signature is mine, but the statements are false," said Rafael Caro Quintero. He was kept behind bars during all of the 14-hour court hearing on Tuesday.

Meanwhile, Elsa Valencia, a spokeswoman for the Mexican Attorney General's office said a man authorities believe to be Mexico's top drug trafficker was arrested Tuesday with 23 other people in the Pacific coast resort of Puerto Vallarta.

She identified the man as Ernesto Fonseca, 60. Fonseca and the others, who were not identified, were turned over to the army and then transferred to Mexico City, where they were being held at an undisclosed location, she said.

A large quantity of weapons also was seized, she said. Officials did not provide further details.

Caro Quintero, allegedly one of Mexico's major drug traffickers, is charged with "crimes against the health" of the nation, criminal conspiracy and weapons smuggling. The Attorney General's office has said he also could be charged with homicide or kidnapping in Guadalajara.

Crimes against health of the nation may include a variety of producing and trafficking in illegal drugs.

Recruiter Cites Teacher Shortages

By PAMELA S. JOHNSON
ECU News Bureau

The Bakersfield, Calif., city school district could hire every one of East Carolina University's 34 graduates in intermediate education this year and put them to work immediately. But even that would not solve Bakersfield's school teacher shortage entirely.

According to Marvin Belcher, a "teacher-talent scout" for the San Joaquin Valley city of 200,000 about 125 miles north of Los Angeles, Bakersfield has openings for at least 50 intermediate grade (K-8) teachers.

"It's that bad," Belcher said. And the shortage, nationwide, is growing worse.

Belcher was on the East Carolina University campus to make contact with and interview teacher graduates at schools throughout the area. North Carolina and California are among some 15 to 20 states with reciprocal teacher certification agreements.

"Because of the lack of employment opportunities in the past, as well as low teacher salaries and turmoil in the classroom, the demand for teachers is increasing in greater proportion than schools are graduating them," the California recruiter said in an interview.

"Add to the above the increasing attendance in the lower grades because of the increased birth rate, and the average age of today's teaching force — nearing retirement age — and one begins to see the opening of a tremendous market for qualified teachers everywhere," he said.

A former teacher and principal himself, Belcher has been an employee relations counselor for the Bakersfield city school district for the past nine years.

"The desire and need for qualified, committed teachers is not unique to Bakersfield alone," he said. "It is classic of the trend that has been occurring nationwide for the past 10 years."

"Teaching is a serious enterprise," Belcher said. "We must not fail. We must educate and place high quality teachers who are committed to teaching and to helping students reach their potential. We cannot sell our future or our children's future short."

Belcher met with officials of the ECU Career Planning and Placement Service and talked with a number of ECU teacher education graduates. He plans to return next year.

"This is not a problem that can be solved in one visit, in one year. It cannot be solved in four years. The solutions will have to be long range," he said.

Furney James, director of the ECU Career Planning and Placement Office, said the impact of the problem of under-enrollment in teacher education programs "has not yet hit us." He said he agrees with recruiters such as Belcher that "it will take several years before the pendulum swings back enough."

Belcher and James also believe that changes in the teaching profession must be brought about in response to the shortage of teachers and the growing demand.

These changes must include increased salaries, better working conditions, higher student performance, increased classroom discipline and increased respect for teachers, they said.

Life On The Pond

Toads, And Humans, Await Big Night When Love Trills Return

By JIM HEINTZ

Associated Press Writer
URBANA, Ohio (AP) — The sound of toads looking for lovers "can drive you nuts," but a Cedar Bog Nature Preserve naturalist expects a large crowd to turn out when the toads start trilling.

Terry Jaworski has set up a telephone chain to notify people when the toads at Cedar Bog, between Springfield and Urbana, return to ponds and start their calls.

Unlike swallows or buzzards returning home to roost, toads don't go by the calendar — they wait for the first night the temperature stays above 60 degrees.

When the time comes, Jaworski will call all the people on his three pages of names, and each of them will call two or three others to come out and listen.

What they'll hear won't strike human ears as romantic.

"It's a grating sound, it's not a joy to hear," Jaworski said. "It can drive you nuts and almost drive you away."

But that doesn't keep humans from finding it appealing. Jaworski said he established the telephone chain after "some what I call 'normal' people came out last year and became quite enthusiastic about it."

The observers are not motivated by reptilian voyeurism, he said.

"It's not a sexual orgy, not in human sexual terms; that's not the sense of it," Jaworski said.

"The drama is that all life returns to the pond," he said. Toads spend most of their lives on land and go back to water only during mating season, he said. "Humans carry their ponds with them."

Jaworski said he finds the toads' trilling a moving sound because "it's a touchstone with the past. I wonder what it was like in the past when the environmental trigger took place and the brontosaurus and the stegosaurus started to trill."

Firm Says Bible Points Way To Oil

BOSTON (AP) — A fundamentalist Christian company that contends the Bible has led it to vast oil reserves under a mountain in Israel has been blocked from selling stock in Massachusetts.

Secretary of State Michael Connolly issued a cease and desist order Tuesday against Ford Oil and Development Inc. of Largo, Fla., contending the firm misleads investors into believing their money will be used to drill for oil that has already been discovered near Mount Carmel.

"Through the company's advertisements and marketing, investors are hearing that money is going to flow like wine from the wells and they hear that it's God's will that all the money be shared among many believers," said Stephen Snyder, Conolly's chief of enforcement.

"Investors aren't hearing the whole story," he added. "We're concerned about protecting investors who may be receiving false information."

But the company's attorney, Morton Berger of Spring Valley, N.Y., charged that the secretary of state is picking on fundamentalist Christians who chose to interpret the Bible literally.

In its information document available to all potential investors, Ford Oil "states they are not going to follow good business practices, but they are going to follow the Scriptures as they see them," Berger said.

Correction

The amount of a historical survey to be conducted by the Pitt County Historical Society was incorrectly reported in Tuesday's edition of The Daily Reflector. The study will cost approximately $30,000, not $300,000. In addition, the society is seeking total county municipal donations of $4,300 to help fund the study, not $4,300 from each municipality.

MASONIC NOTICE

There will be a stated communication at Crown Point Lodge 708 at 7:30 p.m. Thursday. Supper will be served at 6:30 p.m.

MEETING

Pitt Lodge No. 234 and Golden Rod No. 234 will hold a joint meeting Wednesday at 8 p.m. at the Elks Home.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market advanced broadly today, getting a lift from hopes for lower interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials moved up 7.29 to 1,261.15 in the first half hour.

Gainers outnumbered losers by nearly 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Interest rates fell in the bond market Tuesday and early today after Paul Volcker, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, expressed some misgivings about the economic outlook.

At a conference of the Export-Import Bank, Volcker said overall growth might falter because of problems afflicting the manufacturing, mining and farming sectors of the economy.

Analysts said his comments did not have upbeat connotations for the near-term outlook for corporate profits.

But they added that traders interpreted his remarks as a signal that the Fed was likely to follow a credit policy that encouraged lower interest rates.

Unocal dropped 1/2 to 47 1/2 and Diamond Shamrock was delayed in opening. There was speculation on Wall Street that Unocal might seek to acquire Diamond Shamrock in a move aimed at fending off a takeover bid by a group led by T. Boone Pickens, chairman of Mesa Petroleum.

Among actively traded blue chips, International Business Machines rose 3/4 to 125 3/4; General Electric climbed 3/8 to 59 1/4; General Motors added 1/2 to 73 1/4, and American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/8 at 21.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose .88 to 1,253.86.

But declines slightly outnumbered advances on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 83.98 million shares, against 79.96 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .04 to 103.32. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .88 at 228.39.

(15 years), that the GUC staff approve of the firm selected to paint the sign, and that any damage to the existing coating system occurring while the sign is being applied be restored to the original condition.

Wadie Lewis, superintendent of GUC's water and sewer systems, estimated the sign would cost about $2,500.

Lewis reported that the city's new 10.5 million gallon-a-day wastewater treatment plant has been undergoing clean water testing for about two weeks and said wastewater was scheduled to be pumped to the plant beginning this afternoon.

Following the meeting, Lewis said that after testing is completed, both the old and new plants will be operated from six to 14 weeks before the old plant is closed.

Malcolm Green, electric department superintendent, reported that load management operations during the month of March cut $141,078 from the commission's March power bill.

Green said load management switches on water heaters saved $83,587, while voltage adjustments provided an additional savings of $54,694. Another $2,806 was saved by the water plant generating its own needs during peak use periods.

Green said the demand reduction for March represented 4.87 percent of the total March billing.

Commission members adopted a resolution declaring three propane tanks located at the old power plant railroad siding — one 18,000 gallon tank and two 15,000 gallon tanks — as surplus and offering the tanks for sale.

Bids were awarded for the purchase of 50 padmount transformers to Central Moloney for $51,600 and for 15 padmount transformers to Power and Telephone Supply Co. for $25,575.

WAYNESVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Three men were taken into custody this morning in Arkansas for questioning in connection with the shooting of a North Carolina Highway Patrol trooper who was killed near the detour of rockslide-blocked Interstate 40, according to authorities.

Arkansas State Police spokesman Larry Patterson said the three men were taken into custody about 9 a.m. in West Memphis, Ark., after being seen crossing the Arkansas-Memphis Bridge.

He said the three men had not been charged but would be questioned in connection with the slaying, which led to a massive manhunt in two states.

Johnson Leads ECU Over State

Raleigh — Winfred Johnson, named yesterday as the ECAC Player of the Week, showed N.C. State just why as he helped East Carolina to an 18-6 baseball victory over hosting N.C. State.

Johnson led a parade of home runs in the game, hitting a three-run shot in the first inning that placed the Pirates into a 3-0 lead. The homer was one of seven in the game, and it was Johnson's 19th, breaking his own season record of 18 set last year. Johnson finished the day with five hits in six trips, one of the others a double. His lone out came on a hard liner between short and third that the third baseman made a diving stop of and was able to throw Johnson out going to first.

Mont Carter, Chris Bradberry and Jay McGraw also added homers for the Pirates as they banged out a total of 19 hits on the day. Every Pirate in the lineup managed at least one hit.

Johnson with six runs batted in brought his total over the last seven games to 24. He's been 15 of 26 with five homers and three doubles over the period.

Mike Christopher went the dis-ance in claiming the win, his seventh against no losses. He gave up 14 hits, but only three of the six runs against him were earned. He struck out 11 and walked three.

"Obviously it's our best offensive effort of the year," Coach Gary Overton said. "I'm very happy with the win. I think we may have played as well as we have all year, in fact, it may have been the best game we played all year. Winning a big game on the road may be a shot in the arm for the rest of the season. If we use this as a springboard for the rest of the season, we may have a chance to finish on an up-note."

Overton said he was surprised that Christopher got in a complete game, "especially on three days rest. But he threw the ball well. He mixed up his pitches well and controled the game. He kept their batters off balance the whole nine innings.

"Winfred is a catalyst who has a knack for taking big games like yesterday and being a strong leader. He lets his bat do the talking and I think it's safe to say it spoke pretty loudly yesterday," Overton added.

In addition to Johnson's hitting, Carter (double) and McGraw each added three hits, while Bradberry and Hardison each collected two.

State was led by Andrew Fava and Jim McNamara with three each, while Mick Billmeyer and Dickie Dalton each had two.

East Carolina took the lead in the game in the first inning on Johnson's three-run shot. Mark Shank and Bradberry had both reached base ahead of him. The Pirates also added a fourth run in the frame. Carter doubled and came around on singles by McGraw and Jim Riley.

State came up with one each in the second and third, while the Pirates added one in the third. State then tied it up with three in the fifth.

East Carolina took the lead for good in the sixth, scoring twice with Mark Cockrell driving in the go-ahead run. ECU scored in each of the remaining innings, getting two more in the seventh, six in the eighth and three in the ninth.

State got one more in the ninth. Alex Wallace, Billmeyer and Fava each hit homers for State.

The loss dropped N.C. State to 25-14 on the season, while the Pirates climb to 24-9.

The Pirates return home on Thursday night, hosting N.C. Wesleyan at 7 p.m.

Kinston Is Champ, Conley 3rd

Hollywood — James Watson fired a three-hitter and Whit Whitley ripped a two-run homer as the Kinston Vikings ripped North Lenoir 14-3 in the championship game of the Pitt County Easter Baseball Tournament played at D.H. Conley.

D.H. Conley eased past Farmville Central, 4-1, to win third place while Rose High School tripped New Bern, 7-1, to take fifth. Ayden-Grifton nipped North Pitt, 5-3, in the seventh place game.

Watson was named the tourney's most valuable player, while teammates Greg Jones, Felton Mason, David Mitchell, Tom Vermillion and Whit Whitley were named to the all-tournament team. Jones pitched six perfect innings before walking the leadoff batter in the seventh and finished with a no-hitter as Kinston ripped Farmville 10-0 Monday in the semifinals.

Bobby Simmons, Jay Parris and John Johnson of North Lenoir were named all-tourney, along with Shane Adams, Steve Mills and Todd Cochran of host Conley.

Also voted all-tournament were Robert Evans and Mark Wooten of Farmville Central, Steve Wall and Doyle Kirkland of Rose, Timmy Edwards of New Bern, Gene Johnson of Ayden-Grifton and Scott Rawls of North Pitt.

The New Bern Bears were awarded the sportsmanship trophy.

Shane Adams singled in Steve Mills in the bottom of the first and freshman Bronswell Patrick pitched six scoreless innings before recording a 4-1 victory for third place in the tournament.

Hugh Moore and Brian Windham paced the Jaguars with two hits each, while no one had more than one hit for Conley.

Conley took control in the first when Steve Mills and Todd Cochran walked, advanced on a single by Fred Bryant and Mills scored on a fielder's choice by Adams. Cochran crossed the plate on a delayed double steal as Adams went to second.

In the fourth inning, Adams singled and Randy Mills followed with a sacrifice bunt. Adams continued to third when no one covered the bag and was awarded home on interference as Conley increased its lead to 3-0.

After one out in the sixth, Michael Elks doubled to left. Amzie Hoffner ripped a two-out single, and Elks later scored on a passed ball.

Patrick gave up nine hits but pitched his way out of trouble three times with runners in scoring position.

In the top of the first, Randy Daniels reached first on a fielder's choice and Billy Godley singled. Daniels was thrown out attempting to take third, and Godley stole second after two out. Patrick struck out Greg May to end the threat.

Brian Huber singled to open the second inning, and he went to second on a wild pitch. A single by Windham put runners at first and third, but Patrick struck out Mark Wooten and Dennis Tripp before Robert Evans grounded out to end the inning.

The Jaguars had runners on second and third with one out in the third, but again Patrick retired the side with a pair of strikeouts.

Farmville finally got on the board in the top of the seventh, as Evans opened with a single and moved to third on a one-out double by Daniels.

A sacrifice fly by Godley pushed across a courtesy runner, and May drove a long fly to right field as Patrick improved his record to 5-1 on the season.

In the game for fifth place, Rose stalled an early threat by New Bern, then charged ahead for good.

The Bears put their second and third runners on via a hit and an error, but a double play got Rose out of the inning undamaged.

Then, in the bottom of the frame, the Rampants moved ahead for good. With one down, Eric Jarman singled and stole second. He scored on a single to center by Van Alston. Alston advanced on an error, but was thrown out trying to score on a fly ball to center.

The Rampants added three more runs in the third. Travis King was safe on an error and Larke Weatherington singled. Both were sacrificed up and King scored on a ground out by Jarman. Alston was safe on an error, allowing Weatherington to score. Alston stole second, moved to third when the thrown out sailed into center, and scooted on home when the relay from center was too high for the third baseman to handle. That made it 4-0.

New Bern, after threats in the third and fourth, finally broke the ice with a run in the sixth. Timmy Edwards singled and Riley Hughes ran for him, moving up on a passed ball. Robbie Norris singled to center, scoring Hughes, but the hitter was thrown out trying to stretch his hit to a double.

New Bern threatened again in the seventh, but again, failed to get anyone over.

Rose closed out the scoring with three runs in the bottom of the sixth. Steve Wall doubled to right and courtesy runner Joey Hallow advanced on a wild pitch. Tyrone Jones walked and then stole second. Robbie Erhmann brought Hallow home with a fly to left and James Matthews reached on an error, allowing Jones to score. King was also safe on an error. Weatherington's grounder got King at second, but the relay for the double play was wide, allowing courtesy runner Mike Wooten to score with the seventh Rampant run.

Wall, who went the distance for his fourth win against one loss, scattered eight hits, walked two and fanned two. Norris, the loser, gave up only five hits, walked two and struck out three. Only two of the

Vikings Make Trade; In Position To Draft Kosar

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Both the Minnesota Vikings and the Cleveland Browns have engineered trades aimed at acquiring University of Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar and the Vikings say they will lose no time in trying for an agreement.

"We've been saying all along that he's been at the top of our list, and now we are in a position to negotiate with him," Minnesota General Manager Mike Lynn said Tuesday night. "We will be talking with his agent and his father very soon."

However, Kosar was said to be contemplating a strategy that would put him with the Browns.

The Vikings made their announcement first, saying they had reached an agreement with Houston for the Oilers' first-round pick, No. 2 overall, in the April 30 National Football League draft. But then the Browns said they had made a deal with the Buffalo Bills for their selection, the first, in the supplemental draft, if one is necessary.

Kosar could not be reached for comment but his father, Bernie Sr., said at his Boardman, Ohio, home, "We'd like to hear Minnesota's story because they have the rights now."

"Minnesota is an option we'd consider," the elder Kosar added. "But we know Cleveland is very interested."

"Bernie is in a unique situation," Kosar said. "If the league does not receive a written notification from us by Monday, April 15, then he is not part of the April 30 draft. That would leave us the possibility of a supplemental draft."

Lynn described as "bizarre" the possibility of Cleveland getting Kosar in a supplemental draft.

"It is something that might have to be addressed by attorneys," Lynn added.

Kosar, who has two years of college eligibility remaining, has not informed the league that he plans to be eligible for the regular draft and has until April 15 to do so, said league spokesman Joe Browne.

A source close to Kosar said the quarterback probably would not make himself eligible until after April 30, and thus would be available in a supplemental draft. Kosar, reared near Cleveland, has expressed a preference for playing with the Browns. His father said, "I'm a Browns fan and my kids are Browns fans."

Lynn said Kosar "has declared himself eligible for the 1985 draft. The fact that the notification has not been received in writing shouldn't matter. It's just one more bureaucratic piece of paper that will flow. It just complicates the issue."

"It may get down to a legal question," said Bud Grant, the Vikings' coach. "It seems that he declared for the draft publicly and he hired an agent, so it appears to us that he should be in the draft."

Kosar's father, however, said the young quarterback had never said he would submit to the NFL draft. "He announced that he would forego his last two years of college football to try pro football — that's it," he said.

To obtain the Oilers' first-round choice, the Vikings gave up first-and second-round selections. Minnesota had been slated to choose third, one selection after Houston.

"We have acquired the Buffalo Bills' right for Bernie Kosar in the supplemental draft if such a procedure becomes necessary," Browns spokesman Kevin Byrne said. "The Browns have traded undisclosed draft choices and future considerations to Buffalo for the Bills' first pick."

"We understand that Bernie Kosar has not notified the NFL that he would like to be included in the normal draft," Browns majority owner Art Modell said. "We made the trade for the supplemental pick as a backstop. In the meantime . . . we will attempt to make a deal with Minnesota."

Buffalo, which has the No. 1 pick on April 30, has already signed defensive lineman Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech. Because Buffalo has already signed Smith, the Vikings may begin negotiating with Kosar immediately.

Kosar, as a redshirt freshman, led Miami to a national championship two seasons ago. He decided this spring to complete his coursework over the summer and pass up his remaining two years of college eligibility to turn pro.

Kosar's agent, John Galetka, said the Minnesota-Houston trade was "a complete surprise to me." Galetka told Miami radio station WGBS he had talked to Oilers General Manager Ladd Herzog frequently in the last few days and at "no time did he bring up Minnesota in trade talk."

Women In Loss

CHAPEL HILL — The Lady Tar Heels of North Carolina swept a college softball doubleheader against East Carolina Tuesday.

The Lady Pirates lost the first game 2-1 and the second 3-1.

Further details of the game were not available.

Two Commit To Lady Pirates

East Carolina women's basketball Coach Emily Manwaring announced Wednesday the verbal commitment of three players to join the Lady Pirate squad for the 1985-86 season.

Greta O'Neil and Rose Anne Miller, both All-State centers from South Carolina, will join Delphine Mabry who returns to the ECU roster after sitting out last season.

O'Neil, a 6-2 center from Elko High in Williston, S.C., was voted All-State by the South Carolina Coaches Association and will participate in the High School All-Star game slated for April 13 in Columbia. O'Neil, a left-handed shooter, averaged 24.6 points per game, 15.5 rebounds and three blocks for 1-A Elko High. She scored 40 points on four occasions and finished the season fifth in the state in scoring. O'Neil ran up career totals of 1,849 points and 995 rebounds for Elko.

Miller, also a 6-2 center, was named to the 2-A All-State squad and the high school All-Star game. She was named conference most valuable player and was tabbed for the all-tournament team. Miller was a two time all-conference selection and team MVP three years in a row for Newberry (S.C.) High. She averaged 20.7 points and 16.4 rebounds in leading Newberry to a 16-7 season. Her rebound total of 362 in a year is a school record as is her total of 28 rebounds in one game. She scored 1,267 points in her four-year career at Newberry.

Junior guard Delphine Mabry returns to the Lady Pirate squad after an outstanding season in 1983. She was second on the squad in scoring with 10.4 per game and led the team with 78 assists and 50 steals. She led the Lady Bucs to their first ECAC-South championship and is expected to contribute immediately.

Brunansky Powers Twins' Victory

By The Associated Press
Tom Brunansky may have lost a friend and the American League may be in trouble.

Brunansky, Minnesota's 6-foot-4 right fielder, drilled a two-out, three-run homer to break a tie and lead the Twins to a 6-2 victory over the California Angels in the opening game for both teams Tuesday night.

The homer was delivered by Mike Witt, a good friend of Brunansky's when the two played together on the Angels.

"We're still good friends."

Brunansky, who was traded from the Angels to the Twins in 1982, said. "Tomorrow we will be."

Tomorrow may have finally arrived for Brunansky, who hit 32 home runs last year despite a horrendous start that saw him hitting .231 on July 19. The California native rallied to finish with a .254 batting average and hit 18 of his homers in the final 70 games.

"He's got a lot of potential," Minnesota Manager Bill Gardner said of his outfielder, who just agreed to a six-year, $5-million contract. "If he gets off to a good start, he can hit 40, 45 home runs. He usually hits most of his homers in the second half."

In the only other American League games played Tuesday, Seattle beat Oakland 6-3 and Chicago downed Milwaukee 4-2.

Witt, who ended the 1984 season with a perfect game, lost his chance at a second consecutive no-hitter on the third pitch of the game as leadoff hitter Kirby Puckett grounded a single to left. Mickey Hatcher, who added insurance with a two-run homer in the ninth, then singled to right, sending Puckett to third. Kent Hrbek grounded into a double play and Puckett scored for a 1-0 lead.

The Angels tied it in the sixth off starter and winner Frank Viola, the winningest left-hander in the majors last year with 18 victories. Viola was the pitcher of record in the Twins' last victory — Sept. 24 against Chicago — before Minnesota dropped five straight to fall out of the American League West pennant race.

Rod Carew singled, was sacrificed to second and scored on a single by Bobby Grich, who also drove in the Angels' other run with an eighth-inning single that chased Viola, who allowed four hits in 7-2-3 innings.

It took Brunansky to break the tie and ruin the return of California Manager Gene Mauch, who left the team after the 1982 season.

"That was the first mistake he made on me all night," Brunansky said of Witt. "I feel great. It's a great way to start the season and I hope it continues."

Mariners 6, Athletics 3
Al Cowens had three hits and drove in two runs to lead the Mariners to their fourth straight opening-day victory and seventh in their nine inaugural performances.

Cowens paced a 13-hit attack as Oakland starter Chris Codiroli surrendered 12 hits in just over four innings of work.

"I hope I can continue to swing the bat like this all season," Cowens said. "The results aren't always going to be the same though. But tonight I was able to find a hole."

White Sox 4, Brewers 2
Tom Seaver, making a record 15th opening-day start, scattered five hits over 6-2-3 innings as the White Sox ruined Milwaukee's home debut.

Seaver, who has a 7-1 opening-day record, struck out three and walked one in breaking the record held by Walter Johnson.

The White Sox capitalized on two errors by Milwaukee second baseman Jim Gantner to score twice in the first inning. Rudy Law reached first when Gantner dropped a pop-up near the right-field line. Moose Haas walked Harold Baines and Greg Walker lined a single to center for the first run. Ron Kittle followed with a grounder to third that saw Walker forced at second, but Gantner's relay pulled first baseman Cecil Cooper off the bag and Baines scored.

Hooker Leads Lady Rams

SNOW HILL — Chanel Hooker ripped a three-run homer in the fourth, then legged out a two-run triple in the sixth to lead Greene Central's Lady Rams to a 12-7 upset over previously unbeaten Northern Nash Tuesday for the championship Greene Central Invitational Easter Softball Tournament.

Hooker finished with three hits adding a double to her total. Jenny Hardison and Cynthia Jones each went 2-4 for the Lady Rams, now 14-1 overall and 4-0 in the Eastern Carolina Conference.

In the fourth, Hardison singled and Sharon Dawson reached first on a fielder's choice before Hooker's homer tied the score at 6-6.

Greene Central plated five runs in the sixth to put the game out of reach. Jones reached first on an error, Dawson walked and Hooker followed with a triple. Herring doubled in Hooker, and Cyndi Hicks singled in Dalen Herring. Warren singled Hicks for a 11-6 lead.

Northern Nash plated a run in the bottom of the sixth, and the Lady Rams responded with a run in the seventh to maintain the final margin.

Greene Central hosts Southern Nash Tuesday in an ECC matchup.

Washington Tops St. Francis For Title

JAMESVILLE — Washington High School rallied for a run in the bottom of the seventh to tie it up, then pushed over a run in the eighth to top St. Francis and gain the Jamesville Easter Baseball Tournament championship last night, 5-4.

Jamesville won the consolation title, outlasting North Edgcombe, 16-15.

In the championship game, both teams scored twice in the first inning, with St. Francis moving back out with a run in the third. Washington tied it up in the fourth, 3-3, but St. Francis went back out, 4-3, scoring once in the sixth.

In the seventh, the Pam Pack tied it up. Steve Oden walked and was sacrificed up. Sam Stephenson, named as the tournament's Most Valuable Player, cracked a double, driving in Oden for a 4-4 deadlock.

Then, in the eighth, Washington got the winning run. Rob Jackson got a pinch-hit double and Frank Deaner walked. Marty Hodges hit a slow roller to second, but the relay to home was not in time to get Jackson as he slid in with the winning run.

Stephenson and Jimmy Williams each had two hits to lead Washington, while Ron Yoviene had three to pace St. Francis.

In the consolation title game, Jamesville raced out to a 7-2 lead in the first inning and expanded that to 12-3 by the end of the first three frames.

Coach Jerry Ange began substituting freely at that point, but North Edgcombe suddenly put together a rally, scoring ten runs over the next three, while Jamesville managed only two. That made it 14-13 for Jamesville with an inning left to play.

In the top of the seventh, North Edgcombe took the lead, scoring twice, 15-14. But Jamesville rallied for a pair on the bottom of the frame to win it. Pee Wee Groover singled and Earl Bowen got a hit. Chris Jones was safe on an error, loading the bases. Greg Hardison then singled, driving in both Groover and Bowen to win the game.

Hardison led the Jamesville hitting with four, one a triple. Kevin Perry, Jones and Groover each had three and Bowen had two. Jones had a three-run homer in the first inning for the Bullets.

North Edgcombe was led by Calvin Brown, Jeff Whitaker and Jimmy Norwood, each with two.

Jamesville is now 7-2 overall and returns to Tobacco Belt play on Tuesday, hosting Creswell.

Vida Blue Returns To Winning Form

By The Associated Press
It took only two pitches. It was enough to get Vida Blue back into the victory column, a place he hasn't been in a long time.

"I loved it, hearing that Blue, Blue, Blue cheer again," beamed Blue, the winning pitcher as the San Francisco Giants beat the San Diego Padres 4-3 Tuesday in a National League season opener.

Blue's last victory in the major leagues came in 1982. A lot has happened to him since then.

He was released by the Kansas City Royals in August 1983 with an 0-5 record. Later that year, he pleaded guilty to a cocaine charge and spent three months in jail. He was suspended for the 1984 season by then-Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

"It was a very good feeling just to be out there," Blue said after the victory.

In other NL openers, New York edged St. Louis 6-5 in 10 innings, Chicago nipped Pittsburgh 2-1, Houston got by Los Angeles 2-1 and Atlanta beat Philadelphia 6-0.

Blue, 35, went to spring training as a non-roster player and made the team as a reliever. He entered the season opener — to a standing ovation from the Candlestick Park crowd of 52,714 — with two outs in the top of the ninth inning and a runner on third. Blue got Terry Kennedy on a fly ball, and then watched rookie Chris Brown single home the winning run in the bottom of the ninth.

"They won't all be that easy," Blue said. "I'm just glad I was able to come out of the bullpen, get that last out and keep us in the ballgame. That's what relief pitching is all about."

Ironically, the last time the Giants won a season-opener was 1979, and the winning pitcher was Vida Blue. That day, he pitched a complete game to best Cincinnati's Tom Seaver.

Tuesday's victory came in the Giants' first game under new Manager Jim Davenport. The team got a strong performance from starter Allee Hammaker, who had been injured for much of the last two seasons. Hammaker pitched 6 1/3 innings, allowing one run on three hits.

"I was very impressed with him. He could be a big addition, after them not having him," said Dick Williams, manager of the NL champion Padres.

LaMarr Hoyt, the 1983 Cy Young winner acquired Diego in a trade with the Chicago White Sox, started for San Diego. He yielded three runs on six hits in seven innings.

"I was in command of all my pitches," Hoyt said.

San Francisco pushed across the winning run on a single by Jeff Leonard, a sacrifice by Bob Brenly and Brown's single off Luis DeLeon.

"The first week of the season usually is a disaster for the Giants," Blue said. "Winning the first game doesn't mean all that much, but at least it's a positive."

Mets 6, Cardinals 5
Gary Carter endeared himself to New York fans in his first game as a Met by belting a home run with one out in the bottom of the 10th inning to beat St. Louis.

Carter, acquired by the Mets from Montreal during the off-season, got off to a rugged start in his New York debut. He was hit by two pitches and was charged with a passed ball before his game-winning blow off Neil Allen.

Neither New York's Dwight Gooden, at 20 years old the youngest opening-day pitcher in baseball history, nor Joaquin Andujar of St. Louis was particularly sharp.

George Foster cracked a solo homer for the Mets and Jack Clark, acquired from San Francisco, homered for the Cardinals.

St. Louis sent the game into extra

Reid Ross Tops Rams

WILSON — Reid Ross of Fayetteville pushed over six runs in the top of the fourth inning and gained a 7-2 baseball victory over Greene Central yesterday in the game for seventh place in the Wilson Breakfast Optimists Tournament.

Reid Ross took the initial lead in the third inning, scoring a run. Greene Central came back in the bottom of the frame with two, however, taking the lead for the only time in the game.

Allen Brown walked with Jerome Flowers running for him. Flowers stole second and scored on Gary Ginn's single. Ken Wade walked and Daren Radford singled, scoring Ginn.

But Reid Ross then rallied for six in the top of the fourth. David Rhodes reached on an error and stole second. He scored on Kevin Grant's single. Jeroms Askev walked and Mike Downs' sacrifice fly scored Grant. Bobby Moreau singled in Askev and Brent Ross walked. Phil Thompson singled to load the bases and Mike Adams singled in Moreau. Ross and Thompson scored on a hit by Rhodes with the final runs.

Adams led Reid Ross with three hits and Brent Ross added two. Gary Ginn and Wade each had two hits for Greene Central.

The Rams, now 2-12-1, return to action on Tuesday, traveling to Southern Nash for an Eastern Carolina Conference matchup.

Mark O'Meara Sets 1985 Masters Goal

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Mark O'Meara has set a rather simple goal for the 49th Masters golf tournament.

"I would like to play well enough to make the cut and have a shot, just have a chance, on Sunday," O'Meara said Tuesday.

"If I get to swinging the way I know how, I think I'll do well," he said.

"I've proven I can win and winning is like a learning process. You have to learn how to win out here."

O'Meara, who finished second to Tom Watson on the 1984 money list, won his first professional title at Milwaukee last season and then put together victories on consecutive weekends this year in the Crosby and Hawaiian tournaments.

He's been in a slump since those successive triumphs, missing cuts in three consecutive events and placing 65th and 17th in two others.

A major golfing event isn't the ideal place to try to break out of a slump, but O'Meara believes he began to get his game back in the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago.

"I finished 17th but I hit the ball well," he said.

There is no clear-cut favorite in the field of 77 — including seven amateurs — that will begin the 72-hole chase for the coveted Masters title on Thursday.

Watson, a five-time British Open champion, has been considered the player to beat at Augusta in recent years, but he hasn't won a tournament this season. He has won the Masters twice and shared second place three times.

Jack Nicklaus, who owns a record five Masters titles and 17 major professional championships, has only one victory in the last two years.

Ben Crenshaw realized one of his greatest goals last year when he finally won this prestigious event, but he hasn't done anything since — missing the cut in nine of the 21 events he has entered since winning his green jacket 12 months ago.

Seve Ballesteros, the dashing Spaniard with two Masters titles, hasn't had a good season, either. He won the tournament at New Orleans, reduced to 54 holes because of inclement weather, but he did little before that and nothing since. He is the current British Open titleholder.

Lanny Wadkins, who like O'Meara won two events earlier in the year, has only two top ten finishes in his 12-year Masters career, and he's missed the cut at Augusta National five times.

The field also includes two other two-time winners this year — Calvin Peete, who captured the TPC after winning at Phoenix earlier, and Curtis Strange, who won the Honda Classic and Las Vegas Invitational.

PGA champion Lee Trevino, who has said the Augusta layout is not conducive to his game, is making his 14th Masters appearance and Fuzzy Zoeller, last year's U. S. Open champ, is shooting for his second Masters title.

Tom Kite also figures to challenge for the championship. He has finished sixth or better in eight of the last nine Masters, missing an opportunity to win last year when he carried a one-shot lead into the final round before falling out of it with a three-over-par 75.

Long-hitting Australian Greg Norman and 1983 champion Craig Stadler, who has three second-place finishes this year, could be a factor.

Two of the favorites of the gallery undoubtedly will be Arnold Palmer, a four-time winner, and South African Gary Player, who had won the Masters three times.

Player, who will be 50 on Nov. 1, hasn't played in a tournament since January.

"I've never done that before and I know it's not smart," Player said. "Realistically, if I can make the last day, I'll be happy. Everyone else is coming in here sharp, tuned. I'm not tournament sharp. I haven't played competitively."

runs he allowed were earned as his teammates made eight errors behind him.

Jarman led the Rose hitting with two, while Norris and Steve Stille each had two for New Bern.

"We've played a lot better these past two days," Rose coach Ronald Vincent said. "Steve did a good job pitching. He didn't have his good stuff, but he kept the ball in the strike zone. The defense played better than it has been. Both of the errors we had were tricky popups that were blown around by the wind."

"We made some things happen today offensively. I'm really pleased to have won this one," he added.

Rose is now 7-5 on the year and while New Bern is 8-6. The Rampants return to action on Tuesday, hosting Wilson Fike in a Big East game.

Ayden-Grifton broke open a 1-1 tie in the third inning to go on and claim seventh place over North Pitt.

The Chargers scored first, getting a run in the top of the first. Shannon Peade doubled and scored on Eddie Brown's hit.

But the Panthers came right back with one of their own in the bottom of the frame. Jarvis Massenburg walked and Lee Eakes singled. Scott Rawls walked, loading the bases. Thomas Lynch grounded into a fielder's choice that got Massenburg at the plate, but Thomas Wright singled, scoring Eakes.

In the third, Ayden-Grifton scored twice for a 3-1 lead. Wesley Hardee reached on a two-base error and scored on a double by Peade. Brown then singled in Peade.

A fourth Charger run crossed in the fourth. Jackie Conway reached on an error and stole second. He scored on a hit by Hardee.

In the top of the seventh, Ayden-Grifton got another run. Gene Johnson was safe on an error and advanced on a wild pitch. He scored on a single by Tony McLawhorn.

North Pitt rallied for two in the bottom of the seventh, but fell short.

Billy Warren walked as did Massenburg and Eakes, loading the bases. Rawls reached on catcher interference, scoring Warren. Wright then walked, bringing home Massenburg.

A popup and a strikeout ended the threat, however.

Peade had two doubles to lead Ayden-Grifton while Brown had two hits also. No one had more than one for North Pitt.

The Chargers, 6-7, play Roanoke on Tuesday at Littlefield, while North Pitt returns to league play at SouthWest Edgecomb.

Firefighters Trying To Flood Out Underground Fires At Lake Phelps

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
SCRANTON, N.C. (AP) — Marines from Camp Lejeune were among those set to pump water from nearby lakes onto fires in eastern North Carolina today, as authorities hoped to finish containing the blazes.

"Our main strategy at this point is to try to finish containing the fire. We'll be widening our firebreaks, and we'll start to pump water into some areas," said Tom Smith at the fire command post in Scranton.

Kay Scott, spokeswoman for the North Carolina Division of Forest Resources, said firefighters would begin flooding 18,000 acres south of Lake Phelps in Hyde County, using water from the lake, to put out the ground fire there. She said the operation would take almost three days to complete.

"That should do a good bit for our containment effort, and then we'll hopefully start putting it out in some areas," said Smith. He added the blazes probably would not be completely extinguished for a month because of the peat in the area.

The fires have destroyed 95,000 acres of brush and peat bogs in Hyde, Washington and Tyrrell counties since Saturday.

"It's not an open and running fire," said Obie Willingham of the North Carolina Forest Service. "We've got it pretty well hemmed in, but it's still a very dangerous fire."

At Pungo Lake National Wildlife Refuge, fire on Monday "raced through there faster than any man can run," said refuge manager Larry Ditto.

Workers using huge plows widened firebreaks as fire burned as deep as eight feet in peat bogs, producing "tremendous energy," Willingham said. More than 500 people have battled the blazes.

In addition to the 95,000-acres, fires burned 2,500 acres in the Pungo refuge and another 2,000 acres near Elizabeth City to the north across Albemarle Sound.

By noon Tuesday, a total of 26 structures had been destroyed, many unoccupied summer residences on Lake Phelps. Spectators were becoming "a real problem," Willingham said.

A woods fire was reported late Tuesday afternoon near the Broad Creek community of Carteret County, and 1,000 people were evacuated, then allowed to return to their homes, Ms. Scott said. But no homes were burned, and the fire was later contained, she said.

A fire that broke out Tuesday near Longwood in Brunswick County on U.S. 17 was contained by 10 of the division's tractor plow units.

The fire has burned 44,460 acres in Tyrrell County, 19,040 in Washington County and 31,160 in Hyde County, Ms. Scott said.

Wildlife in the area headed for roadways for safety, officials said. In some cases, deer were so confused by the smoke that they allowed people to pet them. Wildlife officials reported some injuries to bears.

"We've got deer running around everywhere," Willingham said. "It makes for hazardous driving with all the smoke."

The state Insurance Department estimated damages to private property in Washington County at $665,000 on Monday, but estimates were not complete for Hyde and Tyrrell counties. In western North Carolina, forest fires destroyed $4 million of property last week and consumed more than 7,000 acres. Willingham said the worst fire in the area burned 110,000 acres in 1962. "We're shooting for the record and the weather's cooperating with us," he said. "Northwest winds are the worst because it puts pressure on the Intracoastal Waterway."

Natural Gas Rates Cut

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Utilities Commission ordered a $22 million reduction in natural gas prices Tuesday that could mean savings of about $35 a year to residential customers.

The commission ordered the reduction for North Carolina Natural Gas Corp., North Carolina Gas Service (a division of Pennsylvania & Southern Gas Co.), Piedmont Natural Gas Co. and Public Service Co. of North Carolina.

The reduction, sparked by a cut in prices charged to gas companies by the pipeline company that supplies them, is effective through Nov. 1 and retroactive to April 1.

The yearly reduction would be $44 million, said Robert Bennink Jr., the commission's general counsel. Last month Transcontinental Gas Pipeline Corp. said the company expected to continue to offer the reduced rates in winter.

If the rates are continued, the annual savings to a typical residential customer would be about $35, according to figures from the commission's Public Staff, which represents consumers.

The reductions would occur during warm months, so industrial and commercial users probably would achieve the greatest savings during that period.

Taft Balks At Age Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The drinking age for beer and wine would increase from 19 to 20 but violators would have no criminal record under a bill approved by the Senate Judiciary III Committee.

"I find it repugnant to have to vote on this," said Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, before the panel approved the measure Tuesday.

Taft said he did not want to have to tell "young people who are old enough to fight and die" that they are not "to have a drink of beer or a drink of wine."

The bill would make it an infraction, rather than a crime, for 19- or 20-year-olds to purchase or possess beer or wine. The provision includes a fine of $25, but no court costs.

The bill, already approved by the House, would take effect Sept. 1, 1986 if the Senate backs it.

The measure also stipulates that the drinking age will remain at 19 for beer and wine if Congress drops its mandate that states adopt a 21 drinking age by October 1986 or lose 5 percent of their federal highway funds.

Taft said the federal law made it necessary for him to vote to approve the bill or help North Carolina lose about $10 million the first year and $20 million the next year if the state did not increase the drinking age.

Philip Morris Rejects Tobacco Buyout Plan; Rose To Seek Tax

RALEIGH (AP) — Tobacco groups have taken different stands on U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose's plan to introduce a bill to earmark part of the federal excise tax on cigarettes to fund the federal tobacco program.

"I have had it up to my proverbial ears with Philip Morris," the North Carolina Democrat said Tuesday after the company, the nation's largest cigarette manufacturer, refused to take part in a buy-out of tobacco surpluses.

The company said it would not risk potential "multibillion-dollar treble damage" antitrust lawsuits by participating in an industry buy-out to rescue the tobacco program.

T. Carlton Blalock, executive vice president of the Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina, defended Philip Morris' action, saying the company has "some justifiable concerns."

Blalock repeated his call for Rose and other tobacco-state congressmen to push legislation to satisfy all the cigarette manufacturers. He said he regretted Rose's promise to introduce the tax legislation next week.

The association says it has more than 3,000 member farmers, but most of its funding comes from cigarette manufacturers and leaf dealers.

John N. Parker, commodity director of the N.C. Farm Bureau Federation, said that group supported Rose's bill.

Parker said he still hoped for a negotiated buy-out, but he added, "I guess we've explored all the possibilities."

In a letter to Rose, Philip Morris President John A. Murphy said the company stood firm that its participating in a buy-out would come only if Congress passed legislation that granted it one-time immunity from antitrust lawsuits.

"Phillip Morris' letter is filled with friendly sounding words, but the bottom line is 'no' to the buyout," Rose said. "I plan to introduce my tax bill next Tuesday and begin soliciting support for it."

Rose said there was no chance that Congress would give Philip Morris the legislation it wants.

Rose has been using the threat of his tax legislation to try to force cigarette manufacturers to take part in a buy-out of huge tobacco stocks that threaten the financial survival of the grower-financed program.

Rose's plan is to set up a trust fund, using up to 2 cents of the existing 16-cents-per-pack tax, to fund the leaf program. The tax would rise or fall with the level of the surpluses.

Cigarette companies strongly oppose such earmarking because of the prospects of tagging other programs — such as the Medicare program — to a spiraling cigarette tax.

Under the proposed buy-out plan, the major cigarette manufacturers would buy the surpluses in exchange for lucrative discounts and dramatic reductions in the federal price support level.

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has agreed to a plan that would be implemented administratively this year, with tobacco-state lawmakers committed to passing major reform legislation before the 1986 tobacco markets open.

Reynolds dropped its demand that the legislation also contain antitrust protection from any lawsuits from private individuals who might accuse the companies of price-fixing.

Briley's Dad Calls For Help

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The father of condemned murderer James D. Briley, scheduled to die next week in Virginia's electric chair, said he hoped opening his home and his privacy to make a public plea for clemency would accomplish something.

"But I don't know what," James L. Briley said during a news conference Tuesday night in his gray stucco home. He sat on the sofa with two nieces, a brother and his son's wife.

The family's oldest son, Linwood, was executed Oct. 12 for the murder of a Richmond disc jockey.

James D., 28, is scheduled to die April 18 for the murders of a Richmond woman and her 5-year-old son. A third Briley son is serving two life terms for those crimes.

Linwood and James Briley were two of the six inmates who broke out of Mecklenburg Correctional Center last May 31 in the largest death row escape in the nation's history. The Brileys were recaptured three weeks later in Philadelphia.

Their father had shunned public comments and appearances until Tuesday.

"Van wanted this," he said of James D.'s wife Evangeline, who organized and stage-managed the news conference. She married James D. March 28 in a ceremony at the State Penitentiary, which houses Virginia's electric chair.

The elder Briley had prepared a written statement but didn't read it. "I wouldn't be able to carry it through," he said. "I'm getting to the place where I hate to go see my son" in shackles and handcuffs.

"I wish it helps someone else, that no one else would go through what I'm going through," he said. "I really don't believe they did it. I never will believe it."

The family continued to insist on the innocence of all three sons, claiming they were convicted and sentenced because they were poor and black. James D. Briley's appeals have been turned down three times by the U.S. Supreme Court.

"We have only love and sympathy for the victims and their families. And words can never express the heartache, the pain and emotional stress that we have suffered," the statement from the senior Briley said.

"Our purpose is to reach out to every home and every heart of the people of Richmond and the state of Virginia. We plead for your support. Call or write Governor Robb and ask that our son's life be spared."

The only practical avenue left for Briley to escape execution is executive clemency. Gov. Charles S. Robb has been in office during the two executions that have taken place in Virginia since the new death penalty statute was enacted in 1977.

Briley's lawyers were not present at the news conference.

Although Evangeline Briley spoke vaguely of "anticipating" other legal efforts she, too, said, "Clemency is the only hope we have to save James Briley."

"I have a bit of hope Robb will exercise clemency," she said. "I won't be surprised if he doesn't."

Senate Panel Approves Seat Belt Bill, Bypasses Referendum

RALEIGH (AP) — Mandatory seat belts won't be up for a public referendum but if the law passes the U.S. Department of Transportation will have a vote on how long it last, a Senate committee ruled.

The Senate Judiciary I Committee voted 6-2 Tuesday to approve a bill by Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, to require seat belts. But the action came after they handcuffed the bill to future DOT rulings on whether it passes federal muster.

"The way it's drafted is a brilliant move," said Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, chairman of the Senate Judiciary I Committee and an acknowledged opponent of mandatory seat belts.

By the same vote, the panel voted against an attempt to give voters a chance to approve the bill.

"We've heard from the federal government," said Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford. "We've heard from the automobile industry. Maybe we ought to hear from the people of North Carolina."

Sawyer said the people deserve a voice when lawmakers "invade personal freedoms in the manner in which we are doing it."

But Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, said, "My personal freedom is also at risk when they don't wear them," noting that an unbelted driver may more easily lose control of a car.

Barnes said the bill would go before the Senate next week. Warren said 29 of the 50 senators have pledged support for the compromise.

The law would be repealed if it fails to meet federal guidelines designed to stave off mandatory air bags on automobiles in 1989. While most supporters say they are most interested in saving lives, Warren said others want to avoid the cost of air bags that the DOT will mandate if two-thirds of the U.S. population is not covered by seat belts.

"There comes a time when we must compromise," Warren said. "Without the amendment, some people that were committed to vote for it would not."

Another amendment by Sawyer to repeal North Carolina's law if the federal government changes its guidelines failed 6-2.

Sawyer said if the 16 states with two-thirds of the U.S. population enact seat-belt laws the DOT may become concerned that the rest of the nation has no protection and might be "tempted to go ahead and implement the air bags anyway."

He said the primary purpose of Warren's amendment appeared to be federal compliance and asked, "Why not go a step further?"

Warren said his amendment goes far enough and drew laughter from committee members when he asked if Sawyer, a staunch opponent of the bill, would support seat belts if the amendment passed.

"You don't have to answer that," said Barnes. "Senator Warren has made his point."

Hipps supported the bill but chided senators for compromising on the issue of safety.

"If it's a good law, we should pass it," he said. "It's going to save lives. I really don't like the idea of saying, well, it's great to save lives but if the federal government doesn't go along with it we're not going to require seat belts anymore."

The committee substitute approved by the panel clarified that pickup trucks exempted from seat belts must be registered as farm or commercial vehicles. Otherwise, the bill would cover drivers and front-seat passengers in cars and trucks equipped with belts unless physical handicaps prevent the use of restraints. Exemptions would be granted to deliverymen who must stop often.

The law would take effect Oct. 1 with warning tickets issued until Feb. 1, 1987. Then violators could be charged a fine of up to $25 plus court costs. Those not wearing belts would be charged if they are over age 16. Otherwise the driver would receive the citation.

'A-Team,' Basketball Top Weekly Television Ratings

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Villanova shocked Georgetown in the second-highest-rated NCAA basketball final ever broadcast, but "The A-Team" won the contest for viewers, leading NBC to a ratings victory last week.

The No. 1 "A-Team" had the help of nine hours of "A.D.," which provided NBC with respectable ratings over four nights, according to figures released Tuesday by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

In all, "A.D." finished with an average 19.2 rating, ranking No. 6 for this season's long-form broadcasts. Two of the four parts of the miniseries ranked in the Top 10 during the week of April 1-7, while the final two installments were 16th and 19th, respectively, reflecting lessening viewer interest.

NBC averaged a prime-time rating of 16.0, compared with CBS' 15.4 and ABC's 15.2 during the week. With two weeks left in the 30-week season, CBS has a 17.0 rating, NBC a 16.3 and ABC a 15.5.

A rating measures the percentage of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes tuned, on average, to a given minute of a network's broadcasts.

"The A-Team" had a 24.0 rating, followed by CBS' broadcast of Villanova's upset over Georgetown in the NCAA final, with a 23.3 rating. Only the 1979 championship between Magic Johnson's Michigan State and Larry Bird's Indiana State did better.

ABC's "Dynasty," tied with CBS' "Dallas" as the season's No. 1 show, was third, and Part 3 of "A.D." was fourth. The next four slots went to CBS series: "Murder, She Wrote," "Simon & Simon," "Crazy Like A Fox" and "Magnum, P.I." Part 2 of "A.D." was ninth and ABC's "Hotel," 10th.

It was an atypical week, because "A.D." pre-empted NBC's "The Cosby Show," 1985's most popular series, while CBS broadcast the movie "Stormin' Home," which was 41st out of 61 shows, instead of the hit series "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest."

CBS, which has won 20 weeks this season, also was hurt by the poor performance of the movie "Guilty Conscience," which ranked 53rd.

NBC's 3-hour movie, "Florence Nightingale," starring Jaclyn Smith, was a major disappointment, finishing 52nd.

With J.R. Ewing out of the way, ABC and NBC placed five Friday shows in the Top 30. ABC had "Webster" (No. 22), "Mr. Belvedere" (27th) and "Benson" (28th). NBC's "Knight Rider" tied for 22nd, and "Miami Vice" was 30th.

NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff had joked that, with "The Dukes of Hazzard" canceled, the car audience might be available if "Knight Rider" were permanently transported to Friday night next season.

"This may solidify our plans," said Gerald Jaffe, NBC's vice president for research projects. Jaffe also predicted that "Miami Vice" will be among the top three programs this summer. Its popularity has been climbing, and the competing "Falcon Crest" has not fared well in summer reruns.

Only one Saturday show cracked the Top 30, CBS' "Airwolf," in 26th. Network researchers say the use of video cassette recorders affects Saturdays more than any other night. The three-network share — percentage of sets on that are tuned to the networks — is 69 on Saturdays, down from 74 a year ago.

"That's a big difference," said Mike Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement.

This season, the three-network share has averaged 75 on Fridays, down from 77 a year ago, and it has been 79 on Sundays, down from 80 a year ago.

Last week's newly introduced series did not excite viewers. ABC's "Me and Mom," another detective show with odd-couple partners, ranked 44th, one notch ahead of CBS' "Lucie Arnaz Show."

The bottom five shows, in descending order, were: NBC's "Punky Brewster," the movie "Dead Men Don't Wear Plaid" on CBS, CBS' "The Jeffersons," NBC's "Silver Spoons" and "The Disney World Easter Parade" on ABC.

Cicely Tyson Wins Back Pay

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Cicely Tyson says that she regretted having to take action against a theater group created by Elizabeth Taylor and producer Zev Bufman, but she is pleased with the outcome.

Arbitrator Richard G. Green in New York ordered The Elizabeth

Theater Group to pay Miss Tyson back wages of $607,078 due her since her firing from the cast of "The Corn Is Green" on Sept. 16, 1983, Miss Tyson's manager said Tuesday.

The company fired Miss Tyson after two weeks of Broadway performances, alleging that she failed to tell management she could not appear one night and that she refused to take direction from the play's director, manager Larry Thompson said.

An airline flight delay caused Miss Tyson to miss one performance, Thompson said Tuesday, adding that Miss Tyson cooperated with the director.

Chen Sam, Miss Taylor's spokeswoman, said Tuesday from New York that "Miss Taylor has nothing to do with (the dispute). It's between Mr. Bufman and Miss Tyson."

Bufman and spokesman Charlie Cinnamon were in Tampa, Fla., Tuesday and did not return calls made to Cinnamon's Miami office.

"I regret having to take this action against The Elizabeth Theater Group," Miss Tyson, 51, said in a statement released by Thompson. "However, I'm delighted that we won."

Old Crop-Dusting Plane Joins Drug War

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer
ALBANY, Ga. (AP) — After two decades of service over peaceful farmlands, a crop-dusting airplane is going to war in a government-sponsored program aimed at wiping out drugs in the growing fields of Asia and Latin America.

Equipped with a powerful new engine, a cockpit full of sophisticated navigational aids and armor plating at critical locations, the Ayres Turbo Thrush soon will be spreading plant-killing chemicals in remote areas favored by growers. It can swoop down on marijuana fields in the lowlands or zoom up 10,000-foot mountains to reach small plots of opium poppies.

The Ayres Corp., one of only three producers of crop-duster planes remaining in the United States, has been making its sturdy yellow Thrushes at a 205,000-square-foot plant in Albany since 1977.

Ayres, which is the only crop-duster airplane producer participating in the government program to wipe out drugs, supplied the first of three planes to the State Department in 1983. Two are being used for tests in Burma and Colombia and the third is being used for pilot training in Albany. A fourth plane will be delivered by June, according to Bill Brodbeck, the company's international sales manager.

Fred Ayres, 54, president of the corporation, said all but the first three developmental Thrushes will be equipped with 1,650 horsepower turbine engines, instead of the standard 750 horsepower turbines. This will enable them to operate at higher altitudes with heavier loads.

"People who fly up and down mountains will have people shooting at them," said a State Department official who is supervising the project. "The extra horsepower is a safety factor."

The official, who requested anonymity, said the Turbo Thrushes will be supplied under a foreign assistance program to countries that request them and agree to supply pilots.

Mexico and a few other countries have been using helicopters for such operations, but they are more expensive to operate and carry smaller loads of herbicide than fixed-wing aircraft. They also operate at lower speeds, making them more vulnerable to small-arms fire.

Ayres, which has sold single- and double-seat Thrushes for commercial use in 80 countries, started with its standard plane and modified it to meet State Department specifications.

The final version for use in the battle against drugs is a blue two-seater, with a high frequency radio, a global navigation system similar to those found in jetliners and an extra large hopper in front of the pilot for liquid or powdered chemicals. The herbicides are dispersed through nozzles fitted to "booms" beneath the wings.

Ayres hopes his company can build at least 50 of the $700,000 planes, which carry more fuel than standard Thrushes and have self-sealing auxiliary fuel tanks similar to jet fighters. They also have dual controls and extra windows for better observation.

"More and more countries are beginning to realize that drug abuse is not just an American problem," said the State Department official, noting that drug trafficking is helping to finance revolutions and corrupting societies.

"Narcoterrorism is a real threat," he said.

A crop duster for 15 years before he got into manufacturing, Ayres purchased the Albany plant in 1977 from the Rockwell Corp., which developed the Thrush and began producing it in the mid-1960s with a piston engine. Ayres fitted it with a turbine engine, which is cheaper to operate and requires less maintenance than a piston engine. Ayres continues to produce 20 to 25 commercial crop-duster airplanes per year at a cost of about $394,000 per plane.

A commercial crop duster can spray 2,000 to 3,000 acres of farmland in a day, and Ayres believes his planes can cover at least 500 acres a day in the rugged drug-growing regions.

"You can take one airplane and one pilot and destroy more (opium) crops than 20 helicopters and 200 troops," he said.

Ayres said aerial applications of herbicides are effective on all three types of plants from which drugs commonly are derived — opium poppies, used to make heroin; cocoa bushes which yield cocaine; and marijuana plants.

"I travel all over the world and I see how disruptive the drug culture is to established governments and economies," he said, adding that he was honored the government selected his firm for the project. "We expect to be building this airplane for the State Department for a long time on a steady basis."

Crew Recreates Civil War Scene

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Across the harbor from Fort Sumter, a riotous celebration erupts on Charleston's Battery as the South again secedes from the Union.

A few blocks away in the Mills House Hotel, Hal Holbrook in the guise of Abraham Lincoln reviews the text of his inaugural address. Across town Elizabeth Taylor portrays a madam in the depiction of a New Orleans bordello.

Antebellum America is being recreated for the $25 million television series "North and South" in the city where the Civil War began.

Warner Brothers crews have been filming for about a month and will labor in Charleston through the end of April before moving on to locations in Natchez, Miss.; St. Francisville, La., and Reader, Ark. Filming began in California in February.

State officials say the production to air this fall on ABC is the largest film project in the state's history and will pour $4 million into the local economy.

The 10-hour series is based on John Jakes' popular novel about two families — one from the North and one from the South. It stars Patrick Swayze and James Read and features cameo appearances by stars such as Miss Taylor, Holbrook and Morgan Fairchild. The executive producer is David Wolper who brought "Roots" and "The Thorn Birds" to television.

The Mid-East Commission on behalf of the Office of the Rural Private Industry Council is soliciting potential deliverers for the operation of the Title II-A and II-B (Summer Youth Employment Program) under the Job Training Partnership Act. All potential deliverers of JTPA Programs in Beaufort, Bertie, Hertford, Martin, and Pitt Counties who are interested in bidding can obtain a Request for Proposal package on or after Thursday, April 11, 1985 from the Regional JTPA Specialist at the Mid-East Commission, 1 Harding Square, P.O. Drawer 1787, Washington, North Carolina 27889.

The RFP bid packages are due in the Mid-East Commission's Office no later than 12:00 noon on Thursday, April 25, 1985.

Additional information on the Request for Proposals may be obtained from Carolyn Gorham at 919-946-8043. All responses must be sealed.

Georgian Says Plumbing Can Indicate Social Change

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer
TIFTON, Ga. (AP) — For Doug Bachtel, flush toilets are more than a convenience. He uses them to chart progress in a state where people in more than 75,000 homes still trek to outhouses.

Bachtel, a 33-year-old rural sociologist, works for the University of Georgia's Cooperative Extension Service and is the author of the best-selling "Georgia County Guide."

The guide, 6,000 copies of which are printed each year, contains information on virtually all aspects of life in the state — divorce, crime, alcoholic beverage consumption and, of course, "housing units lacking complete plumbing."

"Houses without flush toilets are usually discussed in a lighthearted manner, but interestingly they are correlated with many other social indicators, including low basic skills test scores," he said.

In 1980, Talbot County, in west-central Georgia, led the state in households without indoor plumbing with 621, or 26.3 percent, of its 2,362 homes. Statewide, 75,618, or 3.76 percent, out of 2,012,640 households lacked plumbing that year, the last one for which the figures are available.

"From what I understand, the Talbot County officials recognized through looking at the County Guide that they had a problem and were able to secure a federal grant to provide the people with plumbing," Bachtel said.

A native of Colorado Springs, Colo., with a doctorate in rural sociology, Bachtel examines reams of statistics to compile the annual guide.

The guides — "We sell out every year," Bachtel said — are given to state and county lawmakers and are sold for $7 each to Chamber of Commerce officials, public health workers, bankers, Realtors, businesses, libraries, schools and physicians.

One veterinarian, Bachtel said, used the guide to help him pick a county to settle in. The vet found one with an abundance of cattle and no one to keep them healthy.

"I put together information for ps ranging from forestry to nutrition. All but two of Georgia's 159 counties have extension agents whose main job is to help farmers grow crops."

Bachtel estimated there are about 1,000 rural sociologists around the country who study problems in rural America such as poverty, infant mortality and low scholastic achievement and recommend changes.

"School boards, for example, need to know how many school-age kids will be around in coming years," he said. "County commissioners need to know how many people moved in so they can better deliver services."

Besides the guide, Bachtel edits a quarterly newsletter that examines problems facing Georgia; in 11 editions to date, he's covered such issues as population growth, unemployment, voter apathy and forestry.

Based on five years of studying problems in Georgia, Bachtel predicts that the major issue for the state in the 1980s will be land usage, followed by education, poverty and health.

Expansion of urban areas such as Atlanta, sparked by the state's rapid economic growth, will deprive Georgia of scenic areas that traditionally have been used for farming and timber, he said.

"If we keep expanding and expanding, we won't have that scenic beauty. We'll be just like a lot of other states," he said. "You can have development, but it should be tailored for local needs and it can be pleasing and functional."

Calling the state's lack of voter participation "absolutely frightful," Bachtel noted that most of Georgia's eligible voters failed to cast ballots in the last 24 presidential elections. Even when native son Jimmy Carter, a former Georgia governor, ran in 1976 and 1980, the state ranked 49th and 48th, respectively.

"It goes back to our lack of education and some general apathy," he said, noting that 43.6 of the state's residents lack high school diplomas. "I think a large part of our problems stem from these people who can't totally understand the complexity of the issues facing us."

Bachtel, who admits statistics can be less than exciting, for the past 12 years has kept black widow spiders as pets in a large pickle jar on his desk.

Tour Demonstrates Role Of Traditions

RALEIGH — Folk artists in North Carolina will demonstrate the role traditional black music, dance and narrative have played in the lives of black Americans during the North Carolina Black Folk Heritage Tour. The tour is sponsored by the Folklife Section of the N.C. Arts Council.

A capella spirituals, jazz, breakdancing and Brer Fox and Brer Rabbit stories are a few of the black folk art forms that will be presented.

Tour members will perform at three locations — at the John A. Holmes High School, Edenton, Saturday at 8 p.m.; next at the Little Rock AME Zion Church, Charlotte, on April 20 at 8 p.m., and the final presentation at Rochelle Middle School, Kinston, on April 28 at 3 p.m.

Chuck Davis, director of the African-American Dance Ensemble, will narrate the program. Others taking part in the tour program are The Badgett Sisters from Yanceyville; blues guitarist Algia Mae Hinton of Zebulon along with John Dee Holeman and Quentin "Fris" Holloway of Durham; The Mighty Wonders of Winston-Salem; and a troupe of breakdancers.

Tickets will be sold by host organizations. For ticket details, call: Edenton, 335-3286; Charlotte 704/374-1565; and Kinston, 523-0003.

For more details on the Black Folk Heritage tour, write to: Folklife Section, N. C. Arts Council, 109 E. Jones Street, Raleigh, N.C., 27611, or call 733-7897.

Conference Focuses On Cultural Issues

RALEIGH — A two-day conference on cultural facilities in North Carolina counties will be held Friday and Saturday at the Durham Arts Council, 120 Morris St., Durham.

Congress Eyes Controls On Chemical Industry

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Spurred by the Bhopal disaster, Congress is moving abruptly into a new environmental frontier — trying to impose air quality controls on the vast U.S. chemical industry.

"This is the last big unregulated piece of environmental protection," says Rep. James Florio, D-N.J., chairman of the commerce subcommittee of the Energy and Commerce Committee.

Both Florio and his partner in the effort, Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the Energy and Commerce health subcommittee, say they are hopeful about action this year or next on proposals to identify and control the hazardous substances emitted from some or all of the nation's 6,000 chemical plants.

When the 98th Congress left town last fall, such regulation was low on the environmental agendas for 1985, which were focused instead on amendments to the water quality act and the "Superfund" toxic dump cleanup law.

But when lawmakers returned in January, a new word had entered their vocabulary — Bhopal, the city in India where more than 2,000 people died last December from methyl isocyanate gas that escaped from a Union Carbide plant.

Seizing on Bhopal, Waxman and Florio have held a series of hearings critical of the Environmental Protection Agency and the chemical industry.

"We are finding that large numbers of chemicals are going into the air that are either known to be hazardous or suspected to be hazardous," Waxman said.

After discovering that EPA lacks even an up-to-date list of the locations of U.S. chemical plants, Waxman wrote to 86 large companies asking them for information about substances released into the air from their manufacturing.

Responses from 67 firms produced a list of 204 chemicals regarded by the industry itself as hazardous. Only five of the chemicals are regulated by EPA, which has had legal authority since 1972 to order emission limits on any substance it deems harmful to humans.

Waxman said his survey findings represent "a serious condemnation of the EPA's abdication of responsibility. ... It is a sad commentary that no government agency has ever attempted to gather this information."

He is critical of an EPA system that is still studying mustard gas, the killer of soldiers in World War I, and does not include methyl isocyanate in the current studies.

He said the EPA is "running around in circles, chasing tails. They won't list a chemical until they're ready to regulate it and they're not ready to regulate it until they list it. They work themselves into inaction."

The hearings also have focused on two of America's chemical centers — West Virginia's Kanawha Valley, where cancer rates are 25 percent to 100 percent higher than the national average, and northern New Jersey, where toxic releases regularly force residents to seek medical treatment.

On the Senate side, Environment Committee Chairman Robert Stafford, R-Vt., recently released a Library of Congress study estimating that as many as three out of four Americans live "in proximity" to a chemical plant.

"It's a national problem," Florio said. "We regulate waste. We regulate water. But we don't regulate chemical production facilities. These companies are reporting or not reporting to whoever they choose. There's no uniformity. There's no one regulating or monitoring safety of production facilities."

EPA spokesman David Cohen said that regulating a chemical is "an enormous, complicated procedure."

The five regulated chemicals are mercury, asbestos and beryllium, all done in 1973; vinyl chloride, 1976; and benzene, 1984. Cohen said three other substances — coke oven emissions, airborne radioactive particles, and arsenic — are close to being listed as hazardous.

Cohen said 20 to 25 others are being studied in a process that balances toxicity with how widespread it is.

Peter Infante, a scientist with the Occupational Health and Safety Administration, told a recent Florio-Waxman hearing that "every increase in a dose of carcinogens increases our risk" of getting cancer.

Jeffrey Van, a spokesman for the Chemical Manufacturers Association, said the industry has "never been opposed to regulating substances that need regulating."

But neither Van nor Bill Gullidge, associate director of CMA's environmental division, could define such substances or offer any specific form of regulation.

At a recent hearing, executives of Union Carbide, Monsanto and American Cyanamid said they could support stronger regulation, although none mentioned anything specific.

Church Plan Provides Education To Poor

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — In 1955, the father of eight children gave half his house in a Caracas slum to a Roman Catholic priest who wanted to open a school for poor children.

Thirty years later, the deal made with a handshake has given rise to Latin America's fastest growing privately funded project to help the poor.

"We have been growing ever since," said the Rev. Jose Manuel Velaz, 70, a Jesuit, whose brother Jose Maria, 74, made the original deal with Abraham Reyes, a bricklayer.

Now there is "Fe y Alegria" (Faith and Joy), a movement that has 431 schools all over Latin America and cares for 270,000 children of poverty-stricken urban and rural areas.

It is also aiming at opening branches in Zaire and Ivory Coast in Africa.

"We wanted our very name to be a motto and a motivation," Velaz said in an interview. "We have faith in God and, fundamentally, faith in man and in his essential goodness and talents."

His brother's enthusiasm for the school soon gained him the support of other people who wanted to contribute to steer ghetto children away from illiteracy, crime and prostitution.

"These are the people governments don't care for, these ghetto people," said the Rev. Antonio Luis Gimenez, a Spanish-born priest who now runs Faith and Joy in Caracas.

Although for many years Venezuela has been considered an oil-rich country, hundreds of thousands of people live in shantytowns clustered on the edge of Caracas and other big cities, in conditions similar to the millions of have-nots all over Latin America.

Even policemen are afraid to go into the slums, where poverty, unemployment and lack of such services as running water exist along with crime.

Slum gangs often control entire areas and the dwellers have to pay "peaje" (a fare) to go back to their huts after the day's work. Some who refused have been stabbed or shot to death.

The Velaz brothers moved into the slums with the help of dozens of nuns, who could go unharmed to places police wouldn't dare to go.

Once the priests were established, the people of the slums became active in the work of Faith and Joy and offered the priests and nuns rooms in their tin-roofed shacks for classes.

"These people may not have money, but they are often very rich in human values, and willing to share whatever little they might have," said Jose Manuel Velaz.

Eventually the nuns moved permanently to the slums, and gradually their schools became the center of the community.

"In Barrio Union de Caracas our school was for many years the mail-distribution center with nuns calling the addresses with loudspeakers from the flat top," Velaz said.

People also came late at night to use the only available telephone in the area because of a medical emergency.

After children started to attend classes — many for the first time in their lives — Faith and Joy hired teachers of arts and crafts and opened workshops where the youngsters could learn a craft.

Money comes from yearly raffles and donations. Last year the raffles grossed more than 6 million bolivares (about $500,000 at the free-exchange rate).

MICROWAVE COOKING FOR FISH

- 1) Allow 3 minutes cooking time on high for every pound of seafood
- 2) Check for doneness. Since seconds make a difference in microwave cooking, it is important to check cooking progress before the end of designated time
- 3) Since seafood cooks much faster than other meats, you should prepare the seafood item last in your meal preparation
- 4) To tell if the fish is done, test with a fork. If it flakes off easily, then the fish is done
- 5) In preparing seafood in dishes, cover with plastic wrap, leaving one corner turned back to allow steam to escape. Recipes requiring a bread or crumb coating should be cooked uncovered or lightly covered with a paper towel to prevent sogginess and scattering
- 6) Rotate the dish during cooking process to ensure even heat distribution
- 7) Seafood can be baked, broiled, poached or steamed in the microwave, but frying should be discouraged

Southwest Virginia Coal Town Tries To Overcome Strip Mine Problems

By DOROTHY GAST
Associated Press Writer
CLINTWOOD, Va. (AP) — Mayor Bernard Rakes watched his basement fill with mud when a coal company attempted to build a road behind his house last year.

That's one reason he sympathizes with residents' complaints about having strip mines as neighbors. Like much of Appalachia, Clintwood virtually lives and dies with the coal industry. And like other coal country communities, it has attempted to control strip mining within its boundaries to protect homes, roads and residents' peace of mind.

"There's been mining in and under this town for 50 years," Rakes said. "I guess there's been a lot of damage. Blasting tore people's houses up."

Clintwood, a town of 1,369 near the Kentucky border, last fall passed an ordinance that calls for local inspections of strip mines operating within corporate limits or hauling coal from a mine to a highway on town roads. Clintwood is one mile square, but would double in size if, as planned, it annexes adjoining land.

It has hired an engineer to inspect town mines for compliance with state and federal laws. It levied a fee of 25 cents per ton of coal. The fee pays the inspector's salary, in addition to the cost of mending homes and roads damaged by mining operations. Mines granted permits must post a $500,000 security bond.

In neighboring Norton and Wise, surface mining has been banned unless coal is discovered in the course of property development.

Wise is slightly more than three square miles; Norton is seven square miles.

Some Kentucky towns regulate strip mining, state officials say, but a precedent-setting court ruling stopped Pennsylvania communities in their efforts. West Virginia doesn't have any strip mines within town limits, said Pete Pitsenbarger, chief of the reclamation division of the state Department of Natural Resources.

In Clintwood, explosives go off like an alarm clock at about 7 a.m. daily. Residents have complained that blasting has warped floors and made it difficult to shut doors.

Officials with mine regulatory agencies in Appalachian states said living in coal country often entails making some sacrifices. Federal law now requires mine operators to reclaim their surface mines and to pay into a fund to patch up abandoned ones, the officials said, but other problems are difficult to alleviate.

"You can't regulate what another person is going to do with his land — at least not to the 'nth' degree," said Charles Gummo, chief of the division of monitoring and compliance for Pennsylvania's Bureau of Mining and Reclamation.

"People want to be able to stop the mine across the street just because it's a nuisance. There's a difference between whether you think it's a nuisance and whether I think it's a nuisance and whether the courts think it's a nuisance."

Officials in communities where coal has been stripped say the mines involved are usually scrupulous about following state and federal mining regulations. But when a company is mining near residences, they say, there are bound to be complaints.

Ralph Mulhollen, a member of the Board of Supervisors in Richland Township, Pa., outside Johnstown, said officials attempted to ban coal mining last decade by writing a prohibition into the zoning ordinance. Gummo said at least two to three dozen Pennsylvania communities tried to do the same thing.

The ban in Richland Township was prompted by residents' fears that miners would make too much noise, spill coal on highways and ruin roads. The Cambria County Court ruled that Richland Township couldn't "zone out" strip mining, Mulhollen said, and the supervisors amended the ordinance in 1980 to designate certain areas where it would be permitted.

"There was one surface mining operator who came in and took out the coal in an area," he said. "Once they started stripping, we never saw a truck, we never saw coal on the roads and our roads weren't ruined. We never had another complaint."

Clintwood Town Attorney John Farmer said the Virginia community attempted to satisfy both residents and the mining industry with its ordinance, a compromise from an initially proposed ban.

The person who's not pleased is Mayor Rakes.

Mountain Enterprises Coal Co., which has mined in the Clintwood area for more than three years, has refused to pay the 25 cent-per-ton fee, and the Town Council has sued. Mountain Enterprises has asked the Dickenson County Circuit Court to declare the ordinance invalid.

"About everyone around here has a job related to coal," Rakes said.

Florida Man Turns Old Car Into Dream

By JOHN PLATERO
Associated Press Writer
PALM SPRINGS, Fla. (AP) — Denny Smallridge is a friendly individual who would share most anything with a close friend — except his car.

Not the early 1930s may never have encountered one of these. Only about 200 of the 1931 Auburn "Boat Tail" roadsters were ever made at the Indiana plant.

It was a rare car even then, explains Smallridge, because it was a limited edition model and its cost was an extravagant $3,000 or so.

"It was a gentleman's car," says Smallridge, president of an air-conditioning firm here, as he gingerly wheels the two-seater through a residential section of town. Heads turn, drivers stop and pedestrians stare at this rare, vintage automobile.

Smallridge estimates there may be a half dozen vehicles like his in running condition around the country, but he hasn't encountered one that can match the authenticity of this car.

What makes his "Boat Tail" so special is he restored the eight-cylinder convertible exactly as it was when it rolled out of the Auburn, Ind., factory. That includes such minute details as the same type of wiring, materials, paint, fabric and screws and bolts as were used 54 years ago.

Since many of the car's parts and accessories are unavailable, they had to be recast or machined according to original specifications.

"I've kept all the bills, but I've never totaled them. If I knew how much it cost me, it might take part of the fun out of it," he said.

He vividly remembers spending $85 apiece to have new door handles made, $184 to reproduce a small oblong-shaped rear view mirror and over $1,200 for castings to hold two pieces of glass that make up the car's windshield.

Admittedly, he fell in love with the vehicle from pictures received from a Philadelphia estate that had it for sale.

The bullet-like rear end for which it was given the "Boat Tail" nickname is eye-catching. Some of the amenities, like a special compartment for a bag of golf clubs, a center spotlight that turns with the steering wheel and an independent lubricating system for clutch bearings, springs and shackles, were irresistible.

Smallridge purchased the car unseen for a price he won't divulge. What he got was a car body loosely bolted onto the chassis and several boxes filled with parts. Rust and corrosion had taken their toll, requiring endless days and nights of manual labor for refurbishing.

"The four motor compartment latches took 30 hours each just to prepare them for finishing," he says.

The restoration project was completed in May 1984. Since then, he has entered the classic, painted cream and light milk chocolate, in several car shows, along with the Ford Mustang and 1940s-era Pontiac he owns. Each time, the "Boat Tail" won the blue ribbons.

He's been offered upward of $80,000 for the car, which has had 1,900 miles on it since last May. "I rather doubt I would sell it for any price," he said.

Study Says Parents, Doctors Aren't At Fault In Baby's Brain Disorders

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It may be hard for parents to accept, but they cannot blame their doctor or themselves when their newborn child suffers brain disorders, says an expert panel.

Most cases of babies born with neurological defects cannot be blamed on a specific cause or negligence by the parents or the doctors involved, a National Institutes of Health panel said Monday.

In releasing a 450-page report on brain disorders in the newborn, the group said doctors rarely can isolate a specific event in the development of a fetus that is solely responsible for a brain defect.

While a number of events can be factors, such as trauma or decreased oxygen supply during labor, most children who suffer these problems at birth end up being normal and healthy.

Dr. John M. Freeman of Johns Hopkins Hospital, chairman of the panel, told a news briefing that people increasingly want to know the cause of defects in their newborns, sometimes in order to attach blame.

"Our report indicates that for the vast majority of infants with these disorders, we cannot find a cause," Freeman said, "Therefore, we certainly cannot fix blame."

The report is not a "whitewash" to exonerate obstetricians who are increasingly being sued by parents of youngsters with brain disorders, he said.

"There is less tolerance for imperfection, but people have to understand that there is a lot we don't know," Freeman said in an interview. "As people limit the size of their families, they want the one or two children they have to be perfect babies."

"That is not always possible, no matter how hard everyone tries," he continued.

Dr. Luella Klein, president of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists, agreed with the report's conclusion that most childhood neurological problems are not related to events during labor or delivery.

In some parts of the country, she said, obstetricians pay annual malpractice insurance premiums exceeding $80,000 because of lawsuits from distressed parents seeking to blame their child's problems on someone.

"Malpractice should be for professional liability and not outcome," she said.

Freeman said the report is a "watershed" in understanding brain dysfunction and in focusing research on what is needed to answer questions about newborn brain disorders. Some experts estimate that these problems afflict less than 5 percent of the 3.5 million live births in the United States each year.

The report followed a two-year study by a panel of experts assembled by the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development and the National Institute of Neurological and Communicative Disorders and Stroke.

The study said a number of factors can contribute to mental retardation, cerebral palsy, epilepsy and other disorders that appear after birth.

Cerebral palsy is a deficit in motor skills that can result in partial paralysis or limb spasms. Epilepsy is a disorder resulting from brain injury in which misfiring nerve cells cause seizures and spasms.

Premature birth is a strong risk factor for cerebral palsy, and reduced oxygen supply to the fetus during abnormal labor and delivery increased the risks of mental retardation, the report said. And most mental retardation appears to have genetic or biochemical roots not related to birth events, it said.

However, it continued, relatively few infants who experience these problems at birth go on to develop neurological handicaps, making it hard to attribute a particular birth event as the cause of later problems.

Pioneering Surgeon Unable To Practice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Chinese doctor who pioneered the use of microsurgery to reattach severed limbs says he can't get a license to practice in the United States because his records were lost during China's Cultural Revolution.

"I have not been able to do surgery for more than one year. It's terrible," said Dr. Joseph Bao, 48, whose application to take California's medical licensing exam was rejected after he moved to Los Angeles last year.

Bao helped perform the world's first reattachment of a severed hand in 1963 at People's Hospital No. 6 in Shanghai, Dr. Charles Ashworth, president of the American Society for Surgery of the Hand, said Monday.

Bao also helped replant nearly 1,000 hands, fingers, feet, legs and arms.

California's Board of Medical Quality Assurance won't allow Bao to take the test because he was unable to submit necessary documents, the newspaper Physician's Weekly reported Monday.

The papers were either lost or destroyed during the Cultural Revolution launched by Chinese leader Mao Tse-tung from 1966-76, when many intellectuals and professionals were forced into the countryside and made to work on communes.

The Red Guard requisitioned the first floor of Bao's three-story home in Shanghai during the revolution, but he continued to practice until he left for the United States in 1984 to rejoin his wife, who had arrived a year earlier to be with her father.

Marc Grimm, who manages the board's licensing division, held out hope Bao could obtain a license if a California medical school appoints him to its faculty — an alternative to taking the test required of foreign-trained physicians.

"I think he looks really good," Grimm said in a telephone interview from Sacramento. "It's just a matter of getting all the administrative pieces together. He's definitely a physician of note in terms of his microsurgery techniques."

Ashworth, a professor of orthopedics at the University of Southern California, said he would begin work immediately to get Bao appointed to USC's medical faculty.

Microsurgery is surgery performed with the aid of a microscope so that tiny nerves and blood vessels can be sutured together.

"The Chinese have been pacesetters in development of the whole field, and he (Bao) has been right at the forefront," said Dr. Roy Meals, chief of hand surgery at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Bao said documents detailing his medical training and experience were kept at Shanghai's First Medical College, which was closed during most of the Cultural Revolution. He said the documents were destroyed or discarded, and couldn't be found.

Because he can't practice medicine without a license, Bao has been performing research at Ashworth's private office and at Los Angeles' Orthopaedic Hospital since he arrived here a year ago to join his wife and two daughters.

Grimm said that if Bao is appointed to a medical school faculty position, he cannot set up a private practice until he gets a license after a two-year waiting period. But with board approval, he will be able to perform surgery at a medical school hospital, and even treat private patients if he bills them through the hospital.

The state licensing rules are meant to protect the public against inadequately trained foreign physicians, Grimm said, noting most of the state's 23,000 pending license applications are from foreigners.

Despite his difficulties professionally, Bao said he enjoyed being in the United States.

"I like it here. People are kind and reasonable," he said.

Today's Cryptquip clue: X equals N

The Cryptquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

We hang our heads in shame — we forgot that our good friend and erstwhile teammate, Lee Hazen, celebrated his 80th birthday on April 2. If anyone can lay claim to being 80 years young it is Lee, who still spends a full five days a week practicing law in New York City.

Lee has lost little of the bridge skills which brought him many national championships and selection to North America's world championship team some 30 years ago. Here is a simple example of the clarity of his thought, from a rubber bridge game only a few weeks ago.

After the two club overcall, North's jump to four hearts showed a good hand. Since it was obvious that North's good hand did not include a high heart honor, he had to have a hand that contained a wealth of controls. So Hazen went straight to the heart slam.

West led the king of clubs, and Hazen was somewhat disappointed to find that his partner's best suit was the one bid by the enemy. Can you spot the best line for twelve tricks?

The key play came early. Declarer won the ace of clubs, sluffing a diamond from hand, then led the eight of clubs and ran it, shedding another diamond. When that forced the queen, dummy's jack of clubs took care of declarer's remaining diamond loser.

Had the eight of clubs lost to the ten, declarer might still survive by means of a double squeeze. On a different layout of the cards, West would have to hold the high club and East would have to guard diamonds, so neither could hold three spades.

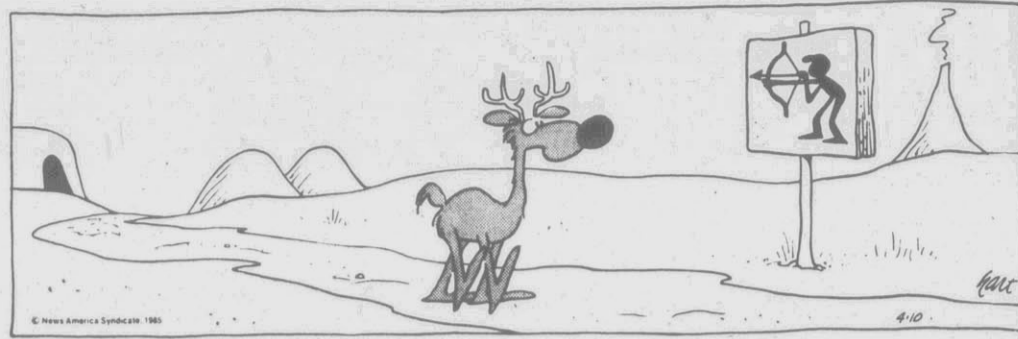

Note that the jack of clubs at trick two would be an inferior play. After that loses to the queen, declarer won't know whether to play for the ruffing finesse of the ten or the squeeze. Also note that no squeeze is possible on this distribution unless the defenders err.

BOISE, Idaho (AP) — The quick success of a referendum petition indicates that a vote to repeal Idaho's new right-to-work law also will succeed, the state's top AFL-CIO official says.

A 30-day drive produced nearly 61,000 signatures, far more than the 32,666 required for calling a referendum, Jim Kerns, Idaho AFL-CIO president, said.

The referendum will be included in the next general election in November 1986, state election officials said. The Legislature enacted the law in January, making Idaho the 21st state banning union membership as a condition of employ-

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes March 28 through April 3.

House

BURTON — The House passed, 342 for and 69 against, and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 1373) to name part of the Point Reyes National Seashore near San Francisco after the late Rep. Phillip Burton, D-Calif., a leading environmentalist in Congress.

Supporter John Seiberling, D-Ohio, said: "Phil, I know that, wherever you are, you are looking on the work that this Congress and this House have done to protect wilderness areas and smiling. This is our way of saying thanks."

Opponent Robert Walker, R-Pa., noted that this marks the first naming of a National Park Service unit after a member of Congress, and that the Interior Department opposes setting such a precedent.

Members voting yes wanted to establish the Phillip Burton Wilderness in California.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; James Broyhill, R-10, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

Those voting no were William Cobey, R-4; Howard Coble, R-6, and Alex McMillan, R-9.

FREEZE — The House adopted, 369 for and 36 against, an amendment to freeze the fiscal 1986 National Aeronautics and Space Administration budget at its 1985 level of $7.51 billion.

This is $350 million below the 1986 NASA budget sought by both the Administration and the Democrat-controlled House Committee on Science and Technology.

The bill (HR 1714) was sent to the Senate.

It was the first major 1986 authorization bill to be voted on this year by the House, and thus the first test of the "freeze" approach to deficit-reduction.

Across-the-board freezes of a departmental budget almost always have been rejected by Congress because they trample on too many pet programs of individual lawmakers.

However, the margin of this vote indicated that such a drastic strategy may fare better this year as members become increasingly frustrated by their inability to control federal spending.

Supporter Dan Glickman, R-Kans., said "we are bleeding to death because of high deficits, and if we do not start (corrective action) here, we will never start anywhere."

Opponent Bill Nelson, D-Fla., said it was wrong to inaugurate the freeze approach with the NASA budget, because that is "the one agency that is advancing our science and technology ... which is the future of our country."

Members voting yes wanted to freeze the 1986 NASA budget at 1985 levels.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, Valentine, Whitley, Neal, Coble, Rose, Hefner, McMillan, Broyhill and Hendon.

Senate

JOBLESS — By a vote of 34 for and 58 against, the Senate refused to extend for six months a program that gives supplemental unemployment benefits to the long-term jobless. The extension would have cost an estimated $1 billion.

After rejecting this amendment, the Senate unanimously passed and sent to the White House a bill (HR 1866) to phase out the program. The House earlier approved the bill on a non-record vote.

Under the phase-out, current beneficiaries will receive checks until their eligibility runs out over the next several weeks, and the program then will be terminated.

The supplemental program, an anti-recession law enacted in 1982, is providing up to 14 weeks of extra jobless pay to some 325,000 individuals who have exhausted their normal 26-week allotment of unemployment checks.

Senators voting no were opposed to extending the supplemental unemployment compensation program.

North Carolina Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, R, both voted no.

AUTOS — By a vote of 51 for and 42 against, the Senate adopted a tax amendment for the benefit of those who use their automobiles primarily for business purposes.

An individual who uses his auto for business at least 75 percent of the time would be allowed to claim a 100 percent business deduction. Some personal auto costs thus would become tax deductible.

The provision was included in a bill to repeal the IRS requirement that taxpayers keep daily logs to document business use of their autos. Records still must be kept but they need not be "contemporaneous."

The bill (HR 1869) was sent to conference with the House, which passed a similar repeal measure on a non-record vote.

Voted ...

Supporter Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyo., said it was unreasonable to tax "minute personal use of predominantly genuine business vehicles."

Opponent Robert Packwood, R-Ore., called it "a very expensive amendment" that would cost the Treasury $1 billion annually.

Senators voting yes supported more favorable tax treatment for individuals who use their autos primarily for business.

Sens. East and Helms both voted yes.

CORPORATE — The Senate refused, 46 for and 47 against, to kill a tax provision that benefits individuals who make personal use of their corporate aircraft. The vote occurred during debate on HR 1869 (above).

Under present law, the IRS sets the value of personal use of company jets as equivalent to the cost of chartering a comparable aircraft. That amount is taxable.

Language in HR 1869 directs the IRS to compute the value according to a formula based on the weight of the plane. Further, the amount to be taxed cannot exceed the cost of a first-class commercial aircraft ticket between the same points.

This would cut federal revenue by an estimated $10 million annually.

Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, who wanted to kill the provision, said it was wrong for the Senate to aid corporate executives on the same day it was cutting unemployment benefits (above).

Opponent Steven Symms, R-Idaho, said IRS policies such as the one under debate "make people call them quite aptly, instead of the IRS, the infernal revenue service."

Senators voting no wanted more favorable tax treatment of individuals making personal use of company aircraft.

Sen. East voted no and Sen. Helms voted yes.

Researchers Develop Technique To Halt Failures Of Replacement Heart Valves

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers believe they have found a way to prevent the most frequent cause of failure in the replacement heart valves from pigs that are implanted into thousands of humans each year. Implanted devices fabricated from pig heart valves are used to replace diseased human valves in 30,000 Americans annually, and scientists say a buildup of calcium and other minerals in the replacements is the most frequent reason for failure.

In a report prepared for publication Tuesday in the journal Science, researchers said studies with animals show that valve-clogging can be prevented by continually releasing an anti-calcification drug nearby.

Dr. Robert J. Levy, of Children's Hospital in Boston and Harvard Medical School, says putting a time-release drug source near the valve delivers the medication where it is needed without interfering with mineral balance elsewhere in the body.

Levy said in a telephone interview that he has implanted replacement valves and drug sources into four sheep as the next stage of the research he reported in Science, which involved rats.

If subsequent work is successful, he said, human trials with the technique could begin in two or three years.

More than 300,000 porcine, or pig, valves have been implanted into humans since 1971 in this country, Levy said.

Calcification, the most frequent cause of clinical failure, requires removing and replacing the porcine valves after five years in more than 50 percent of child patients and in up to 10 percent of adults, he continued.

Levy said he believes the problem is worse in children because of their faster metabolism of minerals, particularly phosphorous.

Whatever the reason, many doctors have given up using the preferred porcine valves in children because of the complications and instead use mechanical valves, which cause more blood cell damage and increase the risk of clotting, he said.

"Because of the flow through mechanical valves, they tend to evolve blood clots," he said. "This means patients have to take anti-coagulants and these can be hard to regulate, particularly in children."

In an earlier study, Levy used systematic doses of an anti-calcification agent known as EHDP to block valve-clogging in animals. However, he found that circulating the drug throughout the body caused severely decreased weight gain and bone development.

To overcome these problems,

Children's Hospital researchers, working with Jacqueline Wolfrum and Dr. Robert Langer of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and Dr. Frederick J. Schoen of Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, decided to administer the drug only at the valve.

To dispense the drug, they place it in a one-half-inch-diameter, porous plastic hemisphere that slowly released EHDP ad implanted it next to a valve under the skin of young rats. This research technique accelerates mineralization in valves.

The researchers found that after 84 days, there was minimal calcification in valves next to

EHDP-laced implants and no adverse bone development side effects. In control rats with dummy implants, there was extensive clogging in the valves. In fact, the amount of calcification by 84 days was comparable to accumulations seen after several years of human implantation, they said.

Newspaper publisher Joseph Pulitzer was born on April 10, 1847. Born in Hungary, he left home at 17 in search of military adventures. But, because of his poor health and bad eyesight, he was rejected by the armies of three countries. Yet he was recruited for the Union Army and served briefly in the Civil War. He made a fortune owning the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, and bought the "New York World" in 1883. That newspaper ran the first cartoon series, the "Yellow Kid."
