Reagan Now Is Ready For Only Casual Meeting

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, stepping back from a full-scale superpower summit, is ready to hold merely a get-acquainted "meeting" with Soviet chief Mikhail Gorbachev, probably at the U.N. General Assembly this fall, White House officials say.

In a sudden shift, the administration drew a sharp distinction Wednesday between a "meeting" and a "summit" — two terms that top White House officials had used interchangeably for weeks.

Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, said a "summit" would have to await more progress toward resolving U.S.-Soviet differences, while a "meeting" could occur any time.

The new tactic clearly was intended to dampen expectations that a Reagan-Gorbachev conference would produce any breakthrough in U.S.-Soviet relations or agreement on major problems, such as arms control. In reality, any Reagan-Gorbachev meeting is certain to be called a summit.

"Based upon a somewhat romanticized portrayal of certain summits of past generations, the very term 'summit' has taken on an inflated meaning," McFarlane said.

"If asked, I expect that most Americans would say summits make things better," he added. "Well, the truth is that some have and some haven't."

He said a meeting, in contrast to a summit, could not fail since its only objective would be for two leaders to meet and exchange views.

"I am saying that for a meeting, you shouldn't have high expectations; that it is useful but you shouldn't expect fundamentals to have changed nor to mark a long list of solved problems," McFarlane said.

Vice President George Bush, appearing on the CBS morning news, said Reagan has "made it clear to Mr. Gorbachev ... that he wants to have a meeting."

He added that a summit would require "lots of preparation, lots of almost foreseen results" and said that a less formal meeting seemed more likely.

McFarlane said Reagan — after reviewing the results of meetings and summits in the Eisenhower, Kennedy and Johnson administrations — concluded that "it is unrealistic to expect that getting together at the summit could produce any fundamental change in the way that the Soviet Union views the world or its own self interest."

He spelled out the administration's position in a hotel meeting room, as Reagan remained in seclusion at his mountaintop ranch.

In Moscow, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill met with Gorbachev on Wednesday, delivering a personal letter from President Reagan to the Soviet leader.

Bush said the letter was "a follow-on to the letter that I handed Mr. Gorbachev when we made — George Shultz and I made — the initial contact with him. An opening ... with not a lot of detail in it."

Rep. Robert Michel, R-Illinois, who was one of three congressmen accompanying O'Neill, said Gorbachev told the group he hoped "eventually the two would get together."

FLOODING FIRES IN PEAT BOGS — Workers of the North Carolina Division of Forest Resources using large pumps work to flood about 300 acres of Rich Farms in the fire-stricken area of eastern North Carolina Wednesday afternoon in an effort to extinguish fire in the peat bogs. Firefighters continued to pump water from nearby lakes today. Larry Such

Fire Damages Set At $51 Million

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
SCRANTON, N.C. (AP) — Officials are expected to decide within a month whether to designate fire-ravaged parts of North Carolina federal disaster areas, Gov. Jim Martin said.

"Due to the scope and nature of this disaster, the resources of these communities and our state must be supplemented by federal assistance," Martin said in a letter to President Reagan. "The loss of valuable timberland and crops is expected to have a substantial impact on our state's economy."

Martin said Wednesday the fires that have plagued western and eastern North Carolina have caused more than $51 million in damages while burning 119,000 acres in parched coastal lowlands and dry mountain forests.

Firefighters continued to pump water from nearby lakes into parts of the fire today. Larry Such at the fire command post in Scranton said about 150 U.S. Marines from Camp Lejeune set up camp Wednesday north of Lake Phelps.

"It'll be several weeks before we get the groundfire out," Such said. "What we might do is make sure we secure the perimeter then get local farmers to take care of the fire on their own land."

Firefighters continued to expand the network of canals from which water can be pumped into the smoldering fields, he added.

"It's still looking pretty good," said Obie Willingham of the N.C. Forest Service. "We're down to the old, mundane mop-up type operation now. It's just dirty work."

The weather forecast continued to call for dry conditions, Such said. "We haven't had any measurable rain since the 21st of March," he said.

On Wednesday, firefighters flooded fields to combat peat fires burning underground "just like gas" in Hyde, Tyrrell and Washington counties.

"It's only ash but it's hotter than hell," Owen Maxwell, manager of 13,000-acre Rich Farms south of Alligator Lake in Hyde County, said of white ash covering fields designed for corn, soybeans and wheat.

"This peat is a most amazing stuff. It can smolder underground and you never see the smoke, then suddenly it'll erupt."

Maxwell said stumps that had been covered during earlier ground clearing were exposed after the rich, organic soil burned away. In some places, craters three feet deep had been caused by the smoldering soil.

While Maxwell's 20-man crew operated five pumps to flood about 300 acres in hopes of controlling an underground burn, the governor told a news conference in Raleigh that fire damaged $47 million in timber across the state since April 1. Property damage in forest fires in the western mountains totaled about $4 million, and property damage — still being assessed — in the sparsely-settled east stood at $665,000.

Fire burned at least 99,000 acres in eastern North Carolina and more than 7,000 acres in the west. Other fires in various counties accounted for the remainder.

On Wednesday, a huge smoke cloud could be seen from the air stretching 20 miles south of the Tar River and beyond. Below were acres and acres of smoldering fields, forests full of fire, stripped tree trunks and flooded areas near Lake Phelps and Alligator Lake.

"If it wasn't for the peat, we'd probably be going home soon," Such said. "It'll probably be several weeks before we get all the ground fire out."

Pumping operations were expected to take days to complete. Ditches leading from lakes and streams were shored up with earthen dikes and water in the small canals was pumped into fields through hoses and irrigation systems.

Martin said 74 homes were destroyed across the state by fire, but 37 were vacation homes and probably not eligible for disaster assistance.

Officials said the eastern fires have had one beneficial side effect in helping to ensure a new generation of pond pines. But experts said forest fires in the western part of the state may have caused serious soil damage.

Jim Gregory, associate professor of forestry at N.C. State University, said heat from the eastern fires would cause pine cones to pop open, letting seeds fall to the peat bogs below.

"The whole plant system is adapted to fire," Gregory said.

But the fires in the mountain hardwood forest of western North Carolina scorched some land so severely that soil erosion is possible and the productivity of the land may not return for several years, officials said.

The reason is the fire's extreme heat, caused by winds that drive the flames uphill and preheat the trees before they ignite. Fires last week damaged and killed hundreds of acres of mature trees that usually escape singed but healthy.

"I saw some of the hottest fires I have ever seen in 20 years of eating smoke," said Bill Williams, a forester with the N.C. Division of Forest Resources.

Limits Placed On Park Picnics

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

More detailed regulations relative to group picnics at River Park North were approved Wednesday night at the April meeting of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission.

Boyd Lee, executive director of the Recreation and Parks Department, explained that due to the growing use of the park's picnic facilities, regulations more comprehensive than the initial general ones approved in 1983 were needed.

The new regulation covers five basic requirements:

"(1) No group picnics are to be held at River Park North with more than 250 people in attendance or with more than 75 cars to be parked in the parking lot during regular operating hours. Larger groups may be accepted on days when the park is currently closed to the public.

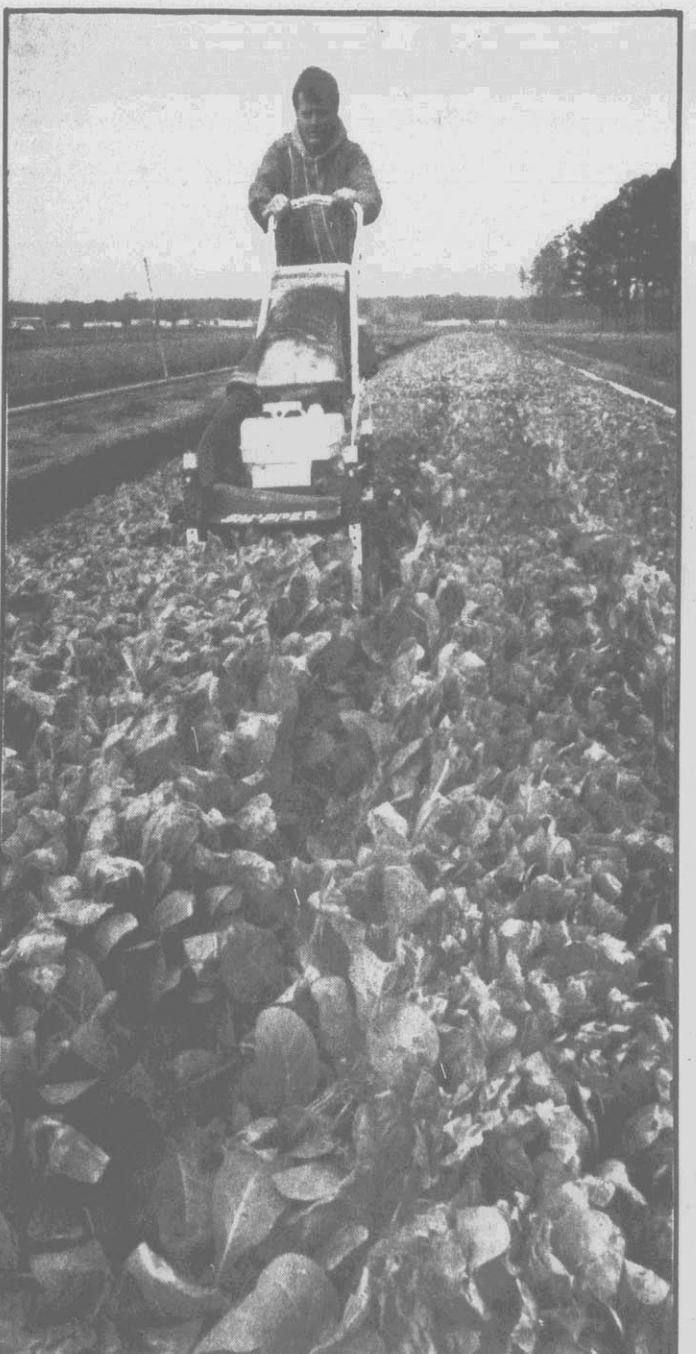

"(2) No group shall reserve the picnic shelter for more than six hours in one day.

"(3) Individuals/groups must have the approval of the park supervisor before using radios, tape/record players, amplifiers, PA or sound systems.

"(4) The use of any special equipment, amusement conveniences, or special use requests for items to be brought into the park must be approved by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

"(5) Groups will not be allowed to bring in outside concessionaires without prior approval of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department."

The basic need for the expanded picnic regulation, Lee told commissioners, is to be able to ensure a maximum degree of safety for large gatherings. For such gatherings, a fee is charged which provides for more recreation personnel to be on hand for control and safety. (Please turn to page 5)

PLANT BED CLIPPING — Pitt Extension Agent Mitch Smith mows a tobacco plant bed on the David Haddock farm with a specially modified mower designed to clip the plants an inch and a half above the bud. Clipping, an old cultural practice that tobacco specialists are experimenting with in 1985, promotes uniformity of growth in plants and delays premature flowering, Smith said. The extension service will mow beds in five Pitt County locations this spring. (Reflector Photo By Mary C. Schulken)

Infection Rate At PCMH Is Below The National Average

The infection rate at Pitt County Memorial Hospital is consistently below the national average — around two percent, according to Sara Krantz, hospital epidemiologist and the hospital's first full-time infection control practitioner.

The national average is 4.5 percent for teaching hospitals having more than 500 beds, she said.

Jack Davies, PCMH infection control practitioner and microbiologist with worldwide experience in infection control, said some 60,000 persons in the United States die annually from diseases they contracted while they were hospitalized. "That's more than the number who die on the nation's highways," he said. "We consider this a national tragedy." Hospital-acquired infections not only place patients at undue health risk, but cost patients and the hospital money — an average of $700 per day, Krantz said. She estimated that, at Pitt Memorial, that can mean some $2.1 million in added expenses. For that reason, the epidemiologists believe their work makes good business sense.

The primary purpose of infection control is to identify and prevent unnecessary infections among hospital patients and employees. The PCMH infection control staff is also serving as a resource on infectious diseases in Eastern North Carolina, according to Kathy Eastwood, the newest infection control practitioner at PCMH. Health professionals in hospitals, clinics, and doctors' offices call frequently to get advice on identifying and controlling infections, she said.

In January the department received certification by the Association for Practitioners in Infection Control. The certification followed successful completion of an intensive eight-part examination based on the latest body of infection control data.

The PCMH infection rate is about as low as it can be expected to get, the epidemiologists agree. Yet the effort toward eradicating nosocomial infections — those acquired by patients after they enter the hospital — never ends, they say. The patient population is constantly changing, as are the staff and physician populations. Thus there is always the potential for the introduction of new infections in the hospital environment.

The epidemiologists begin their work by evaluating the lab reports of all positive cultures. They then look for similarities between different types of suspicious germs to determine if they may have been hospital-acquired. Once a germ is identified, they begin trying to isolate and eradicate it. Just as importantly, they discuss the problem with staff members of the units involved and try to determine if any of their work habits may have contributed to it. They also do special education programs on particularly persistent problems.

In some cases, people outside the hospital must be educated, Eastwood said. A year ago, for example, four instances of salmonella were discovered in various parts of the hospital. The epidemiologists methodically traced the disease to a pregnant woman who worked in a local industry. They then notified the local Health Department, whose staff in turn educated the plant's operators on ways to protect their workers from salmonella.

"The single most important thing you can do to prevent the spread of most infection is hand-washing," Ms. Krantz advised. She said hands should be washed after contact with someone who is ill, after handling contaminated items, after using the toilet, after blowing one's nose, after covering a sneeze or cough, and before eating, drinking or handling food.

At Wit's End

By Erma Bombeck

You can pack your kids with vitamins, teach them the alphabet and how to tell time. You can expose them to humor, the arts and travel. You can advise them on handling rejection and disappointment. You can get a "Yes, Ma'am, please and thank you" out of them on a good day.

But you can't teach them courage. And you can't take the credit for it, either.

Parents tend not to recognize courage in their kids when they see it. When a baby fights for its life, we call it "spunk." When a toddler falls down and gets up again, we call it "stubbornness." When a teenager says no to drink or drugs when all his contemporaries are saying yes, we call it "common sense." When a child hangs on to a principle against some stiff odds, we label it "non-conformist."

It's courage.

A handicapped student, who attends a university in the South, wrote me an unusual letter about courage. "I have cerebral palsy," she wrote, "and my mother has never accepted this or, as a result, me. She was given a child less than perfect and she curses me for a lot of things that were problems to her long before I came along."

"I have learned a lot through my handicap. A girl has to be resilient when her friends decide to hide her crutches. I have learned to laugh at myself to save my sanity. Once by book bag was so heavy I fell over backwards and couldn't get back up. I laughed until my sides split I felt so ridiculous. From that day forward my teacher, who helped me up, called me Turtle. It isn't my Mom's fault. I love the lady with all my heart and realize mothers of handicapped children aren't saints. They're just

Gold Star Parents Honored

The Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary Charles Gray Morgan Post 7032 entertained Gold Star Parents Friday night.

Harry Adams, district commander, welcomed the parents. He commended North Carolina as being first in the nation in membership. The response was given by Mrs. Francis Wheliam, one of the honorees.

Rosa Lee Boyd, chairman of the Gold Star Committee, was in charge of the program. Entertainment was provided by Anna Lisa Smith of Ayden, who played the accordion. She was introduced by Winnie Nelson of the Ayden post. Margie Tyson, auxiliary chaplain, read a poem in honor of deceased soldiers.

The post home was decorated throughout with arrangements of spring flowers. White carnation corsages were given to the Gold Star mothers.

A covered-dish supper was served during the evening.

Round Table Members Celebrate 75th Anniversary

Members of the Round Table Book Club celebrated the club's 75th anniversary at a luncheon held at the Greenville Country Club Tuesday.

Members and guests were greeted by the anniversary committee composed of Mrs. H.T. Patterson, chairman, Mrs. R.H. Duncan, and Mrs. D.R. Taylor. Mrs. Taylor presided at the register. The luncheon table featured the anniversary cake, floral arrangements of yellow and white daisies reflecting the club's colors and flower, and crocheted baskets filled with yellow candies and handmade book marks.

Mrs. W.V. Tyson gave the invocation. Mrs. Henry Wanderman, president, welcomed as guests Mrs. John Howell, Catherine Murray, Nancy Smith and Mrs. Edward Davis, president of Carpe Diem Book Club which was organized under the sponsorship of the Round Table.

Mrs. H.W. Mims, program chairman, presented Mrs. D.R. Taylor who presented the histories written at intervals during the 75 years the club has existed. She recalled the manner in which clubs were organized at the beginning of the 20th century, the interests of the club members and the activities during different periods. She pointed out the cultural, economic and social progress of the last 75 years. She noted that three present members are descendants of charter members: Lelia Higgs is the daughter of Mrs. E.B. Higgs; Mrs. R.H. Duncan is the granddaughter-in-law of Mrs. J.W. Higgs and Mrs. W.R. Wright is the granddaughter-in-law of Mrs. R.H. Wright.

Mrs. Taylor expressed gratitude for the contribution of the charter members and reaffirmed loyalty to the purposes and ideas of "The Ladies of the Round Table."

Mrs. Tyson presented the flower arrangement to Mrs. E.E. Rawl, the oldest member in membership years, and to Lelia Higgs.

Jane Vaughn To Be Guest Speaker

The Greenville Christian Women's Club brunch will be held April 18 at the Greenville Country Club. The brunch begins at 9:30 a.m. The theme for April is "April Showers Bring May Flowers." Interested women are invited to attend.

A showing of spring and summer fashions will be presented by Susan's. Jane Vaughn of Greenville will be the guest soloist. The speaker will be Kathy Meckes of Kansas City, Mo. Formerly employed in fashion merchandising, her job for the past seven years has taken her across the United States and Canada.

For brunch and free nursery reservations, call 756-6175 or 756-8019.

The local Christian Women's Club is one of more than 2,100 in North America.

Mrs. Dail Is Council President

Mrs. C. Frank Dail has been elected president of the Greenville Book Club Council. Mrs. Boyd Lee, president of the Fidelis Book Club, is the outgoing president.

The council membership is made up of 26 book club presidents. Calendar dates for 1985-86 club meetings were planned and suggested outstanding club programs were discussed.

Mary Ann Pennington, director of the Greenville Museum of Art, told of the chartered bus trip to Chingu-Penn May 2. Reservations should be made by April 16 at the museum. She also said the museum would continue providing luncheons for members of a book club at the museum.

Blood Pressure Clinic Held

Nearly 70 persons attended a blood pressure clinic held at the West Greenville Recreation Center Saturday.

Thaddeus Sutton, Laddeus Sutton and Wayne P. Smith of the East Carolina University School of Medicine checked blood pressure and answered questions about the dangers of persistent hypertension.

The Ivy Leaf Pledge Club of Iota Kappa Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority sponsored the clinic as a community service project, especially for the benefit of elderly and low-income persons. Phyllis Stevens gave the introduction. Helena Woodard made a presentation and showed a film on hypertension. Mrs. Beulah Moore, mother-in-law of Thaddeus Sutton, distributed pamphlets and brochures that included blood pressure record cards. Madeline Wiggins registered guests and served refreshments.

Members of the Iota Kappa Omega chapter of Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority took part.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Health Isn't Enough For Lightweight Blood Donor

DEAR ABBY: I am a strong, healthy woman of 34. I just had a complete physical examination and passed with flying colors, so after my doctor gave me a clean bill of health, I went to the Red Cross blood donor center to build up a blood bank for my family. Guess what? I was turned down. Why? Because I don't weigh enough. I weigh 99 pounds and I'm 4 foot 11. I am not underweight for my height. I have four children, and I wanted so much to build up a blood bank in case someone in my family needs a transfusion. I'd feel so much better knowing it was my blood they were getting. Doesn't that make sense to you, Abby?

Please print this. Maybe the Red Cross will change the rules about donating blood. Thanks from ... CHARLESTON, W.VA.

DEAR W.VA.: It makes sense to me, and so does the idea of giving one's own blood to store at the blood bank in case a family member needs a transfusion. But, please be aware that stored blood is not "good" indefinitely. I am informed that 35 days is the time limit.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a dinner date riding on your answer. If someone says, "I don't like spinach," would you say, "Me neither" or "Me either"?

My husband grew up saying it one way, and I grew up saying it the other way.

QUIBBLING IN MADISON

DEAR QUIBBLING: I would say, "Neither do I." Unless, of course, I liked spinach.

DEAR ABBY: It's high time this subject had a good airing. I refer to fragrance pollution!

Now that men as well as women are using perfume and cologne, the commingling of fragrances in enclosed places such as elevators and offices can be nauseating.

Years ago, a lady applied a little dab of perfume behind each ear, and as she passed, the subtle scent of gardenia, orange blossom or lilac followed her. Today, fragrances are about as subtle as a meat cleaver. They're heavy, overpowering, and frequently used in suffocating quantities.

The first perfumer who comes out with a fragrance that smells like good old-fashioned soap and water is going to get my business.

ALL CHOKED UP

DEAR CHOKED: Well said. Here's a plea for those who are fond of using scents: Use some common sense, please; and a little dab will do ya.

DEAR ABBY: Voter registration may not be necessary in North Dakota, but there are valid reasons why registration is important in other states.

In Ohio, we have 7.8 million people of voting age—that's 15 times the number in North Dakota.

In our state, registration is necessary to prevent voting fraud and maintain an orderly electoral system. We have a long record of fair and efficient elections. In Ohio, citizens can register everywhere from state park campgrounds to fast-food restaurants! Our system works for us.

Obviously, states with large populations have to take precautions that smaller states may not need. Doesn't that seem logical, Abby?

SHERROD BROWN,
OHIO SECRETARY OF STATE

DEAR SHERROD BROWN: I'll

vote for that!

(Every teen-ager should know the truth about drugs, sex and how to be happy. For Abby's booklet, also available in Spanish, send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Abby, Teen Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Fighting The Battle To Get Along

Nothing Gained

There is room for disagreement over White House reaction to Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's statement on a prospective summit meeting with President Reagan. There could be something more than meets the eye in announcing a temporary freeze in deployment of Soviet missiles in Europe and urging the United States to a similar measure.

The response resembles a knee-jerk reaction. Washington objected on the grounds it would protect (possibly until the end of '85) the 10-to-1 margin held by Russia in the deployment of missiles in Europe. So the response was, "It's not enough."

Enough for what? With a 10-1 advantage today there is no indication of imminent conflict. Does Washington then anticipate a worsening outlook any time in the months to come? We doubt it, for if that were the case this country would be rushing toward a better degree of parity.

Does it mean West Europe's defenses would deteriorate during the freeze in deployment? They could hardly worsen.

Meanwhile, Moscow was given a propaganda instrument.

Washington could have responded with an "OK" for a given time-frame during which a meeting would be held to see just where the two sides could go from there. If intransigence prevailed we would have lost little because the 10-1 margin would have seen no change and both sides still on Square One. If something good emerged, it would be precisely what both sides say they want.

The White House has been depicted as truly looking for breakthroughs in the cold relations with Moscow, and that carries with it elements of risk and a certain degree of trust. Observers cannot say we've missed a boat because so many factors are involved.

Still, we wish even the smallest of hopes could have been given more time and room for growth.

No Quotas

Gov. Jim Martin is not alone in his distaste for quota systems in the hiring of women and blacks for the state's Highway Patrol. He'd like to be rid of it, and adopt in its stead the equal opportunity policy.

We could easily go along with that as long as results were compatible with the actual hiring of more minorities to serve in the SHP. The quota system is distasteful in that it assures filling the ranks via body-count rather than recruiting the best qualified; it is patronizing; it imposes numerical limits; it is likely to induce an undercurrent of divisiveness within the ranks of a relatively small, elite body of lawmen whose esprit de corps counter-balances their few numbers.

The recruiting practices of the SHP are unfamiliar to most of us, but it's pretty plain a good mix of well-qualified applicants requires deliberate seeking-out rather than the simple filling-out of forms by job-seekers.

RALEIGH — So much for all that post-election talk about cooperation between the Democratic Legislature and the Republican governor. This mixed political marriage has seen little cooperation in its first four months.

Republicans, who are growing increasingly frustrated by the fact that the Legislature is more powerful than the governor, are ranting about the partisanship of the Democrats. In some cases, they're right. The Democrats are acting in a partisan manner. But in other cases, the Republicans are wrong. The Democratic Legislature is doing nothing more than can be expected of any politician, or almost anyone working anywhere. They're protecting their turf.

There have been five big battles this session where the cry of partisanship has been raised. In three, it was raised justifiably. In the other two, it was not.

The Democrats have moved to strip the governor of his power to appoint members of the State Board of Elections and to strip the board of its power to replace current executive director Alex Brock. "That's nothing but pure partisan politics," admits Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, chairman of the House Judiciary II Committee.

Democrats obviously feared that Martin would do to them what Gov. Jim Hunt had done to the Republicans. That is, they were afraid Martin would find some registered Democrats who think like Republicans and put them in the spots reserved for Democrats. It's how Hunt worked and the Democrats figured they didn't want that happening to them.

Early in the session, the Democrats ranted about Martin's delays in bringing his spending and tax package to the assembly. Then they delayed the date for his State of the State address. This has also been seen as partisan bickering. The popular theory now is that the Democrats wanted to let Martin know early that the Legislature is the boss.

Finally, Democrats first expressed interest in, but then began deserting, Martin's tax cut plan. Martin wanted Democratic co-sponsors for the cuts but the Democratic leadership put out the word that such sponsorship would not be healthy for Democrats.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, sponsor of the bill, says Martin is partly responsible for the loss of Democratic co-sponsors. By failing to get the tax cut bill to the assembly on the day after his speech, he lost his momentum and allowed the Democrats, in their caucuses, to scare away support.

On two other measures, however, the Republicans are blowing hot air in claiming partisanship.

Martin got all exercised when he didn't get the veto power. "That had nothing to do with him," says Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland. "It's a false issue. It's something he never mentioned during his campaign."

Other Democrats noted that they wouldn't give the power to any governor, regardless of party. To do so would diminish the Legislature's power and no one gives things away for nothing.

Martin also complained about a budget committee freeze on state hiring to fill long vacant positions. But again, legislators see that freeze as part of their job. "It's a committee responsibility to examine the base budget," Rand says. If the jobs have been vacant for a long time, maybe they're not needed and that kind of decision is a legislative responsibility, he said.

Martin and the Legislature are fighting all right. But it's not just because one's Democrat and one's Republican. It's partly because legislators and governors, like cats and dogs, just can't get along.

Court's Ruling Misses A Point

WASHINGTON — Most of the comment on the Supreme Court's recent decision in the Garner case dealt with the consequences of the decision. Would the police be seriously hampered by the severe limitations the high court placed on the use of deadly force? Lost in the discussion was a larger and more important issue of constitutional law.

The case arose one night in October 1974, when police in Memphis, Tenn., were called to the scene of a burglary in Progress. Officer Elton Hymon heard a door slam and saw someone running from the house. He called out "police, halt!" but the person started to jump a fence and flee. Hymon fired once: The bullet struck 15-year-old Edward Garner in the back of the head. He died on the operating table at a nearby hospital.

Subsequently Garner's father brought a civil action in U.S. District Court under Title 42, Section 1983, of the U.S. Code. This is the post-Civil War statute that permits suit against persons acting under the color of law who violate the civil rights of others. The 6th Circuit upheld Garner's right to sue the city of Memphis, but ruled that the plaintiff could not recover against Officer Hymon; the police officer had acted in good-faith reliance upon Tennessee law permitting the use of deadly force in the arrest of a fleeing felon.

So much for the facts of the case. On March 27, in an opinion by Justice Byron White, the high court basically affirmed the 6th Circuit. The whole case turned upon an interpretation of the Fourth Amendment, which protects us against "unreasonable" searches and seizures. Six members of the court found the use of deadly force to be unreasonable — that is, unconstitutional — unless an officer has probable cause to believe that the suspect poses a threat of serious physical harm to the officer or to others. Most big police departments already follow such a policy, and the opinion probably will have no calamitous consequences.

But the three dissenters, speaking through Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, made a point that merits a pause for thought. At the time the Fourth Amendment was written into the Constitution in 1791, Officer Hymon's conduct would have been absolutely permissible. The common law of the period is too clear for disputation. Fidelity to old rules of constitutional construction, said Justice O'Connor, "requires us to impose a heavy burden on those who claim that practices accepted when the Fourth Amendment was adopted are now constitutionally impermissible."

Justice White, speaking for the majority, dismissed this protest with a lordly wave of his hand: "Because of sweeping change in the legal and technological context, reliance on the common-law rule in this case would be a mistaken literalism that ignores the purposes of a historical inquiry."

Mistaken literalism! Some of us were reared in the doctrine that the intention and the understanding of the framers of a constitutional amendment provide the very pole star of construction. Only when "historical inquiry" is uncertain may judges impose their own notions of what "sweeping change" requires.

I don't want to defend a bang-bang approach to law enforcement, but the dissenters had the better of the argument in the Garner case. The nighttime arrest of a fleeing burglar is a nerve-tingling experience beyond the imagination of ivory-towered judges. Is the man armed? Has he just committed rape or murder in the course of burglary? (An average of 280,000 such crimes are committed by burglars every year.) Is the escaping suspect a pathetic little 15-year-old boy or a career criminal with a record of violent crimes? O'Connor is right in protesting the majority's creation of "a constitutional right to unimpeded flight."

The majority's action raises a ludicrous prospect: A police officer, making a snap judgment, shoots at a suspect and only wings him. The suspect is convicted of burglary and given a light sentence. It transpires that he was not armed. Released from prison after a few months, the convicted burglar then sues under Section 1983 and wins a $100,000 judgment for violation of his civil rights. If the law says that, as Mr. Bumble remarked, the law is idiotic.

The fire that occurred at the Farmville Planters Warehouse Easter Sunday could have been a major disaster to the residents of Guardian Care of Farmville. But thanks to the volunteer fire departments of Farmville, Fountain, Pactolus, Falkland, Bell Arthur and Winterville, what could have been a disaster was prevented.

It is a great comfort to know that there are so many dedicated firemen in our area.

Signal-Switching On A Summit

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — The White House publicity engines are alternately roaring and sputtering about a possible summit meeting between President Reagan and Soviet chief Mikhail Gorbachev.

On the one hand, Reagan and his lieutenants have fueled speculation almost daily with on-the-record comments and background briefings that suggested steady movement toward a summit, which would be the first since 1979.

On the other hand, the White House tries to dampen the speculation, telling reporters not to expect anything soon, saying that any meeting has to be carefully prepared and complaining that the press is creating too much anticipation.

Until Sunday, the White House was single-handedly managing the summit story, broadcasting not only Reagan's invitation and also leaking receipt of Gorbachev's reply.

Gorbachev finally broke his silence about a possible summit in an interview Sunday with the Communist Party daily, Pravda.

He coupled his acceptance of Reagan's invitation with an announcement that he had ordered a freeze on deployment of medium-range missile deployments in Europe. He said he hoped the United States would do likewise.

That put a chill in the administration's sunny statements about a summit.

The White House quickly labeled the missile freeze as a propaganda ploy and said a freeze on U.S. deployments would lock in a heavy Soviet advantage.

Suddenly, prospects for a summit didn't seem so hopeful.

"It seems to me less likely that he (Gorbachev) would find it feasible for an early meeting," said White House national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane.

However, he said the United States remains "open" on the timing of a summit. "He (Reagan) is open to a meeting occurring at the convenience of the other side. The ball is still in their court."

A day later, White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan began stressing that a meeting would require "a lot of groundwork" and would have to produce some results.

Several weeks ago, the White House had emphasized that Reagan had dropped his insistence on prior assurances of tangible results from a meeting.

Regan sounded a different theme this week. "We think it would be a big letdown, not only for Americans but also for the rest of the world, if the two leaders were to meet and accomplish nothing."

All of the attention has produced unhappiness among some White House aides who think too much publicity is being generated.

"It doesn't help us to get the kind of summit we want if we appear overeager," said one White House aide, speaking privately.

"Any publicity, until you have worked out an agreement, has the potential for making a summit less likely," the official added.

Officials say preparations for a summit are under way at a very-low diplomatic level.

Pitt Boys Club Will Join In National Celebration

The Boys Club of Pitt County will join with more than 1,200 Boys Clubs throughout the United States to celebrate National Boys Club Week, April 14-20.

A week in April is set aside each year to recognize the accomplishments of the Boys Club movement as they serve more than 1.25 million young people in all 50 states.

The Boys Club began 125 years ago when people in various New England communities opened rooms to provide boys a place for recreation during afternoon and evening hours.

The emphasis is no longer simply on recreation and "taking boys off the streets." Today, Boys Clubs have emerged as a leading youth program emphasizing citizenship and leadership development, social recreation, outdoor/environmental education, health and physical education, cultural enrichment and youth employment/education.

Groundwork was laid in 1966 to bring a Boys Club to Greenville. After several meetings and studies, the Boys Club of Greenville Inc. opened its doors in March 1969. For a short time, the club operated from the old Pitt County Fairgrounds. Later that year, the Boys Club purchased the West Greenville Presbyterian Church on Skinner Street to be used as the main club house. The Boys Club of Greenville underwent two name changes as it geared itself to serving the youth of Pitt County. Today, it operates as the Boys Club of Pitt County, Inc.

In 1976 plans were made to construct a new Boys Club facility to provide adequate space for approximately 500 boys. After more than three years of planning, the board of directors endorsed a fund-raising program of $500,000 to construct a new facility.

The new club building, located at 502 West Arlington Boulevard, was completed and dedicated on Nov. 1, 1981. The club currently serves more than 850 boys ages 6-18.

One goal is to teach each boy respect not only for himself, but for others as well and to teach him to develop a good attitude about playing with others. The club emphasizes honesty, fair play, and sportsmanship. These attitudes can be learned in the environment that is present in the Boy's Club.

The local club is funded entirely by contributions from the community. It is assisted with its operating funds by the Pitt County United Way, civic clubs, businesses, industry and individual contributors.

Activities planned for National Boys Club Week locally include: April 14 — Boys Club members will attend the church of their choice; April 15 — Kirk Dominick, 1984 "Youth of the Year" will join Chet Emerson on the "Carolina Today" show on WNCT-TV at 7:25 to discuss the weeks' activities, and a Quiz Bowl will be held in the afternoon. Awards will be presented to all participants; April 16 — "Mountaineer Blues," a play directed by Betty Seearce, will involve Boys Club members, and an open house is planned from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.; April 17 — Gamesroom Day: introduction to new games with tournament competition in various games; April 18 — Spring Achievement Banquet, recognition of club members for achievements during the previous months, with a covered dish supper beginning at 7 p.m.; April 19 — Overnight Lock-In from 7 p.m. to 8 a.m.

purposes. Also, in the event a large group wishes to book the park for a day when the park is normally closed (currently that day is Monday), that will involve a fee considerably higher than groups authorized to use picnic facilities on regular operating days. Groups of a size larger than can be transported in a maximum of 75 cars may be asked to agree to use buses in order not to create an unmanageable parking problem.

Within the next several weeks, commissioners will be looking into ways to establish an advisory board or board of trustees to work with the Science-Nature Center to be constructed in the near future. Lee told the commission that "the main functions of such a committee or trustee group will be to promote the center, to work as a liaison with the community, to help form exhibits for the center, and to raise money for the center's work."

He said that most committees of this nature "generally has about 25 members which represent all areas of the community. What is especially important is that we get people with a real interest in science and nature projects, people who will work, not just someone willing to have their name put on a list."

In the matter of the earlier proposed Park Watch program, commissioners tabled action until the next monthly meeting. It was suggested that one approach not previously considered is to integrate a park watch program into the existing Community Watch Program.

Student Hikers Find Explosives' Cache

YANCEYVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Plastic explosives, TNT, fuse and blasting caps were taken from eight Caswell County high school students who said they found them on a hike and gave them to friends, police said.

Police were called last Tuesday after a teacher at Bartlett Yancey High School found a blasting cap in the school's main lobby, Caswell County Sheriff's Department officials said, adding that administrators later discovered plastic explosives in the book bag of a 10th grader.

An undisclosed number of students happened upon the explosives while hiking past an open shed on a farmer's property in Caswell County, police said. The land belongs to a fire training instructor who used the materials for demonstrations, police said.

"They took this stuff that the kid had brought to school and they also went to the kids' houses," said Capt. Pete Eschbach, a military spokesman at Fort Bragg in Fayetteville.

Nine pounds of plastic explosives, more than two pounds of trinitrotoluene, 100 feet of fuse, 170 blasting caps and 200 feet of detonation cord were rounded up last Thursday and blown up at the U.S. Army Explosives Disposal Station at Fort Bragg, officials said.

Wrecks Leave Two Injured

Two persons were injured and an estimated $9,700 damage resulted from four traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police Wednesday.

Officers said vehicles driven by Pamela Renee Causey of 1121 S. Evans St., Gerald Lee Johnson Jr. of 118 Garrett Dorm, and Sandra Ruth Corbett of 113 Ridge Place were involved in a 4:34 p.m. collision at the intersection of Reade and Evans streets.

Investigators, who said Ms. Causey was injured, set damage at $1,500 to the Causey car, $1,700 to the Johnson car and $1,500 to the Corbett truck.

Cars driven by Mark Christopher Wooles of Route 3, Greenville, and George Garth Hanrahan Cherry of 1016 Colonial Ave. collided about 8:20 p.m. at the intersection of Elm and Third Streets, injuring a passenger in the Wooles car and causing $1,800 damage to the Wooles vehicle and $1,500 to the Cherry car.

Police charged Cherry with failing to stop for a stop sign.

Joanne Campbell of 317 King George Road was charged with failing to stop to avoid an accident in connection with a 10:06 p.m. mishap at the intersection of 14th Street and Greenville Boulevard.

Damage from the collision was estimated at $200 to the Campbell truck and $700 to the Jordan car.

Vehicles driven by Lenon Green of Route 1, Grifton, and John Steven Hefner of Belmont collided about 5:56 p.m. at the intersection of Memorial and Sylvan drives.

Officers, who charged Green with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $300 to the Green car and $500 to the Hefner truck.

Parliament Place Is Opening

Ribbon-cutting ceremonies marking the opening of Parliament Place at 300 E. Arlington Blvd. are scheduled to be held at 5 p.m. today.

The 18,000-square-foot executive office condominium project includes 18 thousand-square-foot suites, with the versatility of combining two or more of the suites to provide more space, according to Myles Cartrette.

Cartrette is owner of Cartrette Construction Co., the builder of the project, and Parliament Development Co., the developer.

Parliament Place is a two-story masonry brick building with exterior and interior Williamsburg detail and custom-made Williamsburg-style cottage windows.

Each suite has 9-foot ceilings and features a kitchen, including microwave oven, and ceramic baths.

Aside from the Williamsburg-style architecture, Cartrette said, the project is unique in that "you can own downstairs" and someone else own the second floor. "That makes it different."

Present occupants of Parliament Place include Mavis Butts Realty, Polly Piland-State Farm Insurance, and Cartrette Construction Co./Parliament Development Co., with Coastal Interiors and Action Advertising scheduled to open offices in June.

meeting will be held Friday at 10 a.m. at the clubhouse.

East In Magazine

U.S. Sen. John East has been featured in the last two issues of U.S. News and World Report magazine.

The April 1 issue of the magazine contains an interview with East in which the senator voices support for President Reagan's position of opposing the communist government of Nicaragua.

In the article "Should U.S. Help Oust Nicaragua's Government," East is quoted as saying the United States should offer help to the contras because the Sandinistas betrayed "the democratic revolution that was promised" and imposed a Marxist-Leninist dictatorship, an "extension of Soviet power onto the mainland of our own hemisphere."

In the April 8 issue's "Washington Whispers" section, the magazine lists key Republican supporters of the president, and says "Atop the roster of GOP incumbents deemed most deserving of Reagan's campaign help: John East of North Carolina and Alabama's Jeremiah Denton."

Exercise Court Can Accept Wheelchairs

ECU News Bureau
An outdoor physical fitness court constructed at East Carolina University may be the area's first exercise facility designed for wheelchairs. The court will open officially on Friday at 11 a.m.

The court will be used as an extra teaching station for those handicapped students registered for physical education classes. It will also serve as a recreational area which can be used for leisure activity. Porretta said ECU students and area residents may use the new facility. Written information and individual instruction will be given to anyone using the court for the first time.

"To my knowledge, it is the only one of its kind in eastern North Carolina," said Dr. David L. Porretta, a professor in the department of Health, Physical Education, Recreation and Safety and director of the Special Physical Education Program for handicapped students. Porretta says the court, which he designed, is similar to the Wells Fargo Free Wheeling Fitness Court and includes specially constructed obstacles and activities that promote physical fitness for people in wheelchairs. The court is located in an area adjacent to Minges Coliseum on the ECU campus.

For information, contact Porretta (757-644) in Minges Coliseum or inquire at the department of intramural-recreational services in Memorial Gym. The ECU Handicapped Student Services Program is the largest of its type in the University of North Carolina system and offers counseling, transportation, special housing, and individual assistance to students with physical disabilities. In addition, campus streets, sidewalks and buildings at ECU have been constructed with ramps and elevators to make them "barrier free" and accessible to wheelchairs.

Seniors Seminar Planned Tonight

Local business leaders and East Carolina University administration officials will lead seminars for graduating seniors at Senior Information Night (SIN) tonight in Mendenhall Student Center. SIN is sponsored by the ECU Senior Council, the ECU Alumni Association and the ECU Student Government Association and is intended to help students participating adapt to their post-college roles as professionals.

Seminars and leaders are: "Time Management," Cynthia Kittrell, annual support director at ECU; "Developing Your Professional Image," Dr. Edward Wheatley of the ECU School of Business; "Planning Your Career Strategy," Jake Dove and Lisa Daniel, personnel managers, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.; "Management and Leaders in the Outside World," James Lanier, ECU vice chancellor for institutional advancement; "Managing and Investing Your New Money," Nancy Frazelle, investments specialist, Merrill Lynch, and "Look for the Silver Lining: Fringe Benefits and Insurance," Rebecca Harris, ECU's planned support and special gifts director.

Welcoming remarks will be given by Sven Van Baars, senior class vice president, and Judge Gerald Arnold of the N. C. Court of Appeals at 6 p.m. Judge Arnold is president of the ECU Alumni Association.

Army Signs Pact To Buy Italian Guns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army says it has formally signed a $9.5 million contract with a subsidiary of Italy's Beretta Corp. to begin replacing the Colt .45 with a 9mm handgun.

The selection of the Beretta 9mm gun over those of six competitors was announced by the Army back in January. But until this week, one of the losers had a petition pending for a temporary injunction against the awarding of the contract to Beretta.

A federal judge in Bangor, Maine, on Monday denied that request of the Maremont Corp. of Saco, Maine, clearing the way for the Army to proceed. It announced Wednesday that the contract had been signed.

Although no injunctions have been issued, both Maremont and the Smith & Wesson unit of the Bangor Punta Corp. are pursuing their lawsuits.

The Army said the Beretta U.S.A. Corp. of Accokeek, Md., a subsidiary of the Italian gunmaker, has received a first-year contract totaling $9.5 million for 52,930 9mm guns. It also said that while contracts will be awarded on an annual basis, the Army has negotiated an overall five-year deal for 315,930 weapons worth a total $56.4 million.

The 9mm Beretta will be used to replace an inventory of roughly 400,000 Colt .45 pistols first used by the military in 1911.

The Army has determined that the Colt should be replaced by a 9mm gun not only because the latter is lighter and more accurate, but also because it has already become the standard sidearm of America's allies in Europe.

Mazda Rejects Recall Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mazda Motor Corp. has told the government it does not plan to call back 700,000 cars on which federal officials had recommended a safety-related recall for potential steering control problems.

Mazda told the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration on Wednesday there had been no incidents of "idler arm pin" failure in the affected cars — all rear-wheel-drive Mazdas sold in the United States between 1977 and 1983.

NHTSA last month "strongly recommended" a safety-related recall of the cars, citing tests in which vehicle control had been reduced when idler arm pins failed at speeds greater than 20 mph.

"We have opened an engineering analysis to investigate this matter because we believe that fracture of the idler arm pin can result in loss of vehicle control and that loss of control represents a potential safety problem," NHTSA told Mazda.

NHTSA became involved after Mazda notified the agency that there had been 12 instances of idler arm pins failing in eastern Canada, where salt on the roads accelerated vehicle corrosion. Mazda spokesman Ron Hartwig said from Los Angeles. None of the incidents resulted in accident or injury, he said.

Leaky Device May Cause One Astronaut To Stay

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A drug-processing machine aboard space shuttle Discovery sprang a leak today, raising the possibility that one of the seven crew members might be removed from the mission scheduled for launch Friday.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration said workers discovered fluid seeping from the machine, which Charles Walker, an engineer for McDonnell Douglas Corp., would operate during the flight.

Susan Flowers, a spokeswoman for McDonnell Douglas, said engineers were trying to determine the source of the leak and whether it can be fixed in time for launch. She said that if the problem cannot be resolved, Walker might not fly.

NASA said it would not delay the flight, which includes Sen. Jake Garn in the crew, to wait for the machine to be fixed.

Launch is set for 8:04 a.m. EST. Weather conditions were reported favorable.

The drug machine is designed to separate biological material in an electrical field to produce an undisclosed hormone to be tested on animals and humans. McDonnell Douglas and its partner in the venture, Johnson & Johnson, will seek Food and Drug Administration approval to mass produce the hormone in space and market it.

Walker successfully produced test quantities of the hormone on a shuttle flight last year, but they became contaminated by bacteria. Procedures have been changed to prevent a recurrence.

Meanwhile, Walker, Garn and the other crew members attended flight briefings and underwent final pre-flight physical examinations today.

Commander Karol Bobko and pilot Donald Williams flew a jet early today, practicing landings on a three-mile runway where Discovery is to land next Wednesday after five days in space.

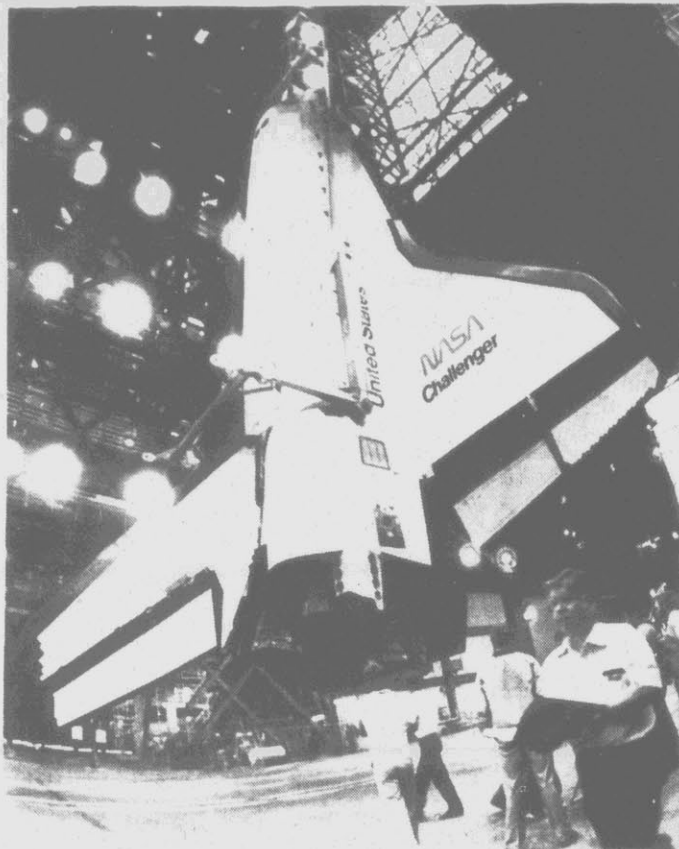

The other crew members are mission specialists Margaret Rhea Seddon, David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman.

All but Walker have waited out five postponements of the mission since it was originally scheduled for launch on Feb. 20. Walker was added when the flight was shipped from shuttle Challenger to Discovery.

Garn, a Utah Republican, is making the trip as a congressional observer. He is chairman of an appropriations subcommittee that oversees spending by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and he says the experience will help him in his oversight role.

During the flight Garn will be the subject of several medical experiments. On launch, he will be monitored by five sensors attached to his head, four on his stomach and three on his chest.

Flight surgeons hope these and other medical tests planned by Ms. Seddon, who is a surgeon, will shed light on how the human body adapts to weightlessness and why nearly half the shuttle astronauts to date have suffered from space motion sickness.

HANGING IN THERE — The space shuttle Challenger is suspended inside a building at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida as preparations go on for a scheduled launch on April 29. A sister shuttle, Discovery, is scheduled for its next space flight on Friday. (AP Laserphoto)

TO ALL TELEPHONE COMPANY SUBSCRIBERS NOTICE OF HEARING

DOCKET NO. P-100, SUB 80
BEFORE THE NORTH CAROLINA UTILITIES COMMISSION

In the Matter of Investigation to Consider Optional Program
Established by the Federal Communications
Commission to Assist Low Income Telephone
Consumers Through an Interstate Residential Subscriber Line Charge Waiver Mechanism

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that by Decision and Order adopted on December 19, 1984, in CC Docket No. 78-72 and CC Docket No. 80-286, the Federal Communications Commission ("FCC") provided for the implementation of a federally mandated "interstate subscriber line charge" for residential and single line business telephone customers of $1.00 per month effective June 1985. The interstate subscriber line charge will be increased to $2.00 per month in June 1986, and will be frozen at that level pending further proceedings before the FCC.

In its Decision and Order of December 19, 1984, the FCC adopted an optional program to assist low income households through a residential subscriber line charge waiver mechanism as a necessary and appropriate first step to ensure the preservation of universal telephone service. Specifically, the FCC stated that it would establish:

"...an optional program providing for a 50 percent reduction in the subscriber line charge for customers meeting a state established means test subject to verification. The revenue shortfall would be funded through the interstate carrier common line charge. States taking advantage of this assistance mechanism would be required to make an equal monetary reduction in the local exchange rate for subscribers who qualify for the subscriber line charge reduction. The reduction in local rates would be funded from intrastate sources..."

Based on the foregoing, the Commission concludes that a general investigation should be instituted in North Carolina for the purpose of determining whether a program can and should be implemented in this state designed to assist low income households through the interstate residential subscriber line charge waiver mechanism recently established by the FCC. In this regard, the Commission concludes that it may be in the public interest to adopt procedures in North Carolina designed to secure relief from the interstate subscriber line charge for low income households.

The Commission has determined that the issues to be considered in this investigation should include, but not be limited to, the following:

1. Whether implementation of an interstate subscriber line charge waiver mechanism for low income households would be in the public interest in North Carolina and consistent with federal and state law and applicable FCC and North Carolina Utilities Commission orders, rules, and regulations.
2. Whether implementation of an interstate subscriber line charge waiver mechanism would be an effective tool to help preserve universal telephone service for low income households in North Carolina.
3. If an interstate subscriber line charge waiver mechanism is authorized,
 - a) What means test should be established and utilized in North Carolina to identify eligible low income households? Would it be appropriate to utilize programs such as supplemental security income (SSI) and aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) or other such programs to establish a state means test?
 - b) Is the general revenue requirement a reasonable source of revenue to be utilized to fund the matching or equal reduction in local rates for those eligible subscribers as required by the FCC in order for North Carolina to take advantage of this assistance program for low income households?

Accordingly, the Commission hereby requests and solicits comments, proposed rules, proposed tariff changes, and/or any other relevant information from parties having an interest in the issues germane to this investigation. Initial written comments should be filed with the Chief Clerk of the North Carolina Utilities Commission, P. O. Box 29510, Raleigh, North Carolina 27626-0150, not later than Friday, April 26, 1985. Any person filing initial comments will then be allowed to file reply or supplemental comments on or before Friday, May 10, 1985. After consideration of the initial comments and any responses thereto, the Commission will enter further orders as appropriate in this docket.

Any person desiring to intervene in the matter as a formal party of record should file a motion pursuant to North Carolina Utilities Commission Rules R1-6, R1-7, and R1-19.

The Public Staff of the Utilities Commission, through its Executive Director, is required by statute to represent the using and consuming public in proceedings before the Commission. Statements to the Executive Director should be addressed to:

'Tiny' Falls, 12 Men Get Him To Bed

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — It took 12 paramedics armed with a wide sheet of canvas 30 minutes to lift a 450-pound man who had fallen out of bed in his apartment.

John Krauss, 61, was taken to Bayfront Medical Center Tuesday and placed on two side-by-side hospital beds.

Krauss, called "Tiny" by his friends, said he fell from his bed and hit his head Monday.

"I'm not strong enough to pick myself up off the floor," he said.

He said he lay on his apartment floor all Monday night until neighbors heard him calling at 9:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Paramedics strained for 30 minutes to push Krauss onto a sheet of canvas and squeeze him through his apartment door.

"We were afraid he'd smash the stretcher, he's so big," said fired Lt. George Vickers.

Krauss, who weighed 106 pounds in the first grade, said he has a gland problem.

"Of course, I like to eat too, you know," he said. "I love sweet things."

At the hospital Krauss was treated for a bruised hip and told he must stay for two or three days.

"The doctor wants me to go on a diet," he said.

Boston Police Get 'Darth Vader' Look With New Armored Shields

By SUZANNE SPRING
Associated Press Writer
BOSTON (AP) — Police have taken up a new weapon against crime: hand-held shields called "Body Bunkers" that make officers look like medieval knights in black armor while allowing them deflect bullets from almost any gun.

The shields, in models up to 4 feet tall that cost nearly $2,300, "give us another edge," Police Superintendent Martin Mulhern said Wednesday. "This is not a fair game.

What are we supposed to say, 'Go ahead and shoot at us?'

Boston police are the first in the country to order the shields from Pro-Tech Armored Products of Albany, N.Y., said company President Arnold Piacentini. But, he added, "We are delivering them to three other agencies this weekend, including one agency of the U.S. government."

The shields were developed by retired Green Beret Dennis R. Hebler.

"Shields go back to the days of the Romans," Mulhern said. "But these are like an armored truck that can go inside a building. They can defuse a situation."

Mulhern said the Boston Police Department owns enough of the heavy-duty fabric-and-metal shields to protect five squads, but he would not reveal the precise number.

"Criminals read the paper," he said. "We don't want to let them know what we've got in our arsenal."

Mulhern said the department plans to buy enough shields to protect any full shift of officers among the 1,800-person force.

The shields come in three sizes. The largest, 24 by 48 inches, weighs 30 pounds and costs $2,290. The smallest shield, 18 by 30 inches, weighs 9 pounds and costs $915.

"Heavy? When your life is a factor, you don't think about weight," said Mulhern.

The shields, which have small bulletproof viewing slots, can deflect bullets from shotguns, 9mm pistols, .357-caliber Magnums and a variety of other weapons, said Mulhern.

"It stops just about everything," he added. "It's incredible."

Mulhern said the force has used the shields during drug raids and arrests since last summer and they have been especially useful in the fight against drug warfare in the city's Roxbury section.

"One time we went into a building and the people inside just dropped their guns," he said. "They realized it's pointless to shoot at us now."

"Our officers think the shields are great. I don't think they'd hit a building without them anymore. It's changed our whole procedure."

Cuomo Tells Editors: Don't Worry

WASHINGTON (AP) — New York Gov. Mario Cuomo says there is a natural tension between the media and the people they cover, and newspaper editors shouldn't worry too much about complaints from public officials.

In a speech on Wednesday to the American Society of Newspaper Editors, Cuomo said, "What would concern me far more than the frequent complaints by public officials would be a constant chorus of praise from elected officials for the stories they read about themselves in the paper. ... If they were content with each editorial and comfortable with every story, then I'd really be worried."

The day Cuomo spoke, The Washington Post published a long article critical of his record as governor and describing him as reacting "angrily to stories he dislikes." The article said the governor's "sensitivity to what is written about him is legendary, even for a prominent politician."

The governor concluded his thoughts about how concerned he'd be if politicians were happy about what they read about themselves, by saying, "Today, I'm not worried. At least not after reading the papers this morning."

All in all, Cuomo offered the editors a sympathetic view of media concerns at a time its credibility is under fire.

He said the First Amendment to the Constitution guaranteeing freedom of speech and of the press "was not designed to set up standards of excellence to judge the press by."

Much of the current criticism, he said, has "nothing to do with the soul of the institution." Rather, he added, it stems from the fact the press is now "the focus of public attention."

"It will happen to any institution in this country that gets examined," said Cuomo, "and I don't think you should feel terribly defensive about it."

WASHINGTON (AP) — America's median age now tops 31 years, the highest average in the nation's history, and the Census Bureau predicts the population will continue growing older.

The median age of the U.S. population climbed to a record 31.2 years as of last July 1, the bureau reported, up from 30.9 a year earlier. That means half of all Americans are older than 31.2 years, and half younger.

The median age will continue rising, the bureau says, as the huge post-war baby boom generation enters its middle years, accompanied by improvements in medical care which are helping larger numbers of the very old stay alive.

At the same time, the small "baby bust" generation of the late 1960s and 1970s did not provide enough youngsters to balance their predecessors and hold down the median age of the nation.

"The median age has increased each year since 1971, when it was 27.9 years. This aging trend is expected to continue as the early baby boom generations head toward middle age," said the study.

Earlier studies projected that the nation's median age will climb to 33 by 1990 and continue rising to 39.3 by the year 2020.

The nation first edged past the benchmark of 30 in 1950, when the median age climbed to 30.2, as small numbers of births during the Depression and World War II failed to balance aging earlier generations.

However, the jump in new babies after the war pulled the median age down to 27.9 by 1967. It began rising steadily again in 1972 after moving erratically for a few years, and hit 30 again in 1980.

The high mark of 30.2 set in 1950 was finally topped in 1981 when the median edged to 30.3.

Leading the way in setting the 1984 record were sharp increases in the number of middle-aged Americans and of the very old.

While the nation's population grew 4.2 percent between 1980 and 1984, the 35-to-44 age group increased a whopping 19.5 percent.

And the number of Americans aged 85 and over was close behind with a 19.4 percent increase.

"Both of these age groups will continue to grow for some time. The growth of the 35-to-44 age group will be especially pronounced as the smaller pre-World War II and World War II birth cohorts are increasingly replaced by the much larger post-World War II group, the study continued.

Those large increases were followed by an 11.5 percent jump for the 75-to-84 age group, and growth of 10.3 percent among people aged 25-to-34.

On the other hand, the number of people aged 14-to-17 fell by 9.5 percent and the age 5-to-13 population dropped by 3.2 percent, reflecting the baby bust of the late 1960s and 1970s when delayed marriage and increased attention to education and careers caused many women to delay childbearing.

There was an increase in the under 5 age group, but the report noted that this "reflected larger numbers of women in the childbearing ages rather than an increase in fertility rates."

"The black population is considerably younger than the white population," the study observed, with the median age of blacks 26.3, compared to 32.2 for whites. Both groups have followed the same aging trend, however.

By gender, women had a median age of 32.5 as of 1984, compared to 30.0 for men.

Men gained slightly on women, with a sex ratio of 94.9 men per 100 women last year, up from 94.8 in 1980.

Overall, the study estimated the U.S. population at 236,681,000 as of last July 1, up from 227,061,000 in 1980. The black segment of the population increased 6.7 percent during that period to 28,609,000, while whites increased only 3.2 percent, to 201,358,000.

IRS Says Don't Skip Your Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is embarrassed by computer foulups and angered by allegations that some employees have destroyed tax returns. But, says its boss, don't think it's a good time to skip filing a tax return.

"If they do, they'll do it at their peril," says IRS Commissioner

Roscoe L. Egger Jr.

"I am not concerned" that the agency's image as an efficient tax collector might be scarred so badly that people have little fear of getting caught if they cheat or don't file, Egger told a news conference Wednesday.

"This system is doing exactly what we planned it to do," he added, while acknowledging that, due to computer problems, the IRS is far behind schedule in processing individual tax returns.

Through April 5, the most recent figures available, the IRS had received 59.5 million returns but processed only 36.1 million. That is 20 percent behind last year's pace in processing.

Each of the 10 regional service centers is behind schedule.

Award Accepted

CALCUTTA, India (AP) — Mother Teresa said she will accept the Medal of Freedom, the highest U.S. civilian honor, "for the good of the poor people."

Mother Teresa, founder of the Roman Catholic Church's Missionaries of Charity, won the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize for her work with the poor of Calcutta.

"If they give me the award (the Medal of Freedom) I will accept it for the glory of God and the good of the poor people," the Albanian nun told The Associated Press. But she said she would not be at the White house on May 23 to accept the award.

Child Dependent On Human Milk Turns 4

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Phyllis Smith coordinates shipments of mother's milk from 47 states and 2,500 donors a month, mixing the milk for her 4-year-old daughter, who can't eat or drink anything but water or human milk.

Doctors who said Lacie Smith would not live past age 3 now say that with each day she survives, the chances increase that she may outgrow her need for mother's milk.

Meanwhile, the tot must drink three gallons of the milk daily. Donors — nursing mothers, women whose children have died or mothers of premature babies who want to breastfeed later — typically give 1.5 to 7.5 ounces each.

"I've devoted my whole life to it," Mrs. Smith, who has prepared news releases, fliers and instructions to women who want to donate, said Wednesday. Thousands ask, but only a small percentage actually supply Lacie with milk.

The family will mark Lacie's fourth birthday Monday with a trip to Tennessee, where the child will film a commercial for public television on the need for a national network to coordinate donations of mother's milk to children with similar problems.

The Smiths leave today on the trip, which will include a birthday celebration in Memphis with Federal Express workers, who handle free of charge many shipments to the Smith home in the southern Oklahoma town of Milburn.

A party for Lacie and donors from several states is planned Saturday.

The four years have been hectic and expensive for Acie L. Smith, 39, the manager of the Johnston County Rural Water District, and Mrs. Smith, 36, who gave up teaching high school biology and chemistry after Lacie's birth.

The family has spent $20,000 on shipping, although Federal Express took on much of the expense as a medical emergency case in 1983 and began flying milk to Durant, 40 miles east of Milburn, free of charge, Mrs. Smith said.

She sometimes freezes the milk into a sherbet or "milkshake," but much of it Lacie drinks by bottle. Lacie's digestive system can't tolerate food, and it makes her sick, her mother said.

Various medicines have not reduced Lacie's intolerance to food.

Mrs. Smith said her daughter first developed the allergies to nourishment other than mother's milk when she was about 6 months old. The problem, which may be hereditary, has otherwise not affected Lacie's development, she said.

Although Lacie needs more milk now than ever, Mrs. Smith said the logistics of securing it from women from Maine to California have become easier. The milk arrives at the Smith home by almost every method of transportation — truck and train, commercial airliner and private plane, state trooper or brewery driver.

Women who donate are sent sterilized bags and instructions on how to get the milk to Milburn. They're asked to complete a questionnaire about possible health problems, foods they eat or binge on, and any medicines they take.

The milk of about 20 women is mixed to minimize any illness or problem from an individual donor before Lacie can drink it, Mrs. Smith said.

"I'd love for the headlines to say 'Lacie Can Eat,'" she said.

Diversified Group Calls For More Corporate Taxation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Unions, consumer groups, a church and older Americans are asking the public to demand higher taxes on U.S. corporations.

Their target is $90 billion worth of what they call "tax loopholes" — special provisions in the law that reward businesses for increasing investment in plant and equipment.

"While average American families are paying higher taxes than ever before, many giant corporations are paying nothing — in fact, they are actually making money off the tax system," Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, said

Wednesday in endorsing a new organization called Citizens Organized to Restore an Effective Corporate Tax.

Next Monday, the deadline for individuals to file their tax returns, the coalition will circulate petitions around Post Offices in at least 40 cities, looking for signatures to influence Congress.

"With a deficit of $200 billion each year, we cannot afford a tax code which is giving away $90 billion to $100 billion in corporate tax subsidies this year alone," John Claybrook, president of the Public Citizen lobbying group, told a news conference where the drive was announced. "The inequities will not be removed without grass-roots pressure on Congress to enact fair tax laws."

For ammunition, the group is citing a 1984 study by the labor-financed Citizens for Tax Justice, which found that 128 of 250 major profitable corporations that it surveyed paid no federal income tax in at least one of the three years from 1981 through 1983. In addition, many received refunds of taxes paid in previous years.

Those companies wiped out their federal tax burden by paying taxes to the states or to foreign countries and by claiming tax breaks designed as incentives for building plants and buying equipment. One of those incentives — accelerated depreciation — was liberalized by President Reagan's tax cut enacted in 1981; another, the investment credit, has been in effect most of the time since 1962.

The coalition is seeking repeal of those incentives and others that are targeted to selected industries. A tax-overhaul plan recommended last year by the Treasury Department also calls for repeal of some of the same provisions.

Other members of the coalition include the United Church of Christ, Consumer Federation of America, Environmental Action, several unions and the National Council of Senior Citizens.

In its petitions, the new group points out that corporate taxes, which in 1960 produced one-quarter of all federal income taxes, now account for 8.5 percent.

"Corporate loopholes now cost far more than all federal programs for the poor," says the petition.

The petition to Congress adds, "As people who pay our taxes, we are outraged by the $90 billion in corporate tax loopholes which allow General Electric, W.R. Grace & Co. and hundreds of other corporate tax avoiders to pay little or nothing in taxes. ... By putting corporations back on the tax rolls, we can reduce the deficit and actually cut taxes for middle- and low-income taxpayers."

Mother Goose Undergoes Sexist Overhaul

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Father Gander, aka Douglas Larche, says Mother Goose is sexist.

Boys play all the strong roles in Humpty Dumpty, Peter Piper, Peter, Pumpkin Eater and Little Jack Horner, Larche said, so he recast the nursery rhymes for a vision of a fairy world without sexism, racism or violence.

"Every person likes to feel he or she is important," Larche said. "One of the goals of this book is to make little girls feel as important as little boys."

In "The Equal Rhymes Amendment," Humpty Dumpty gets put together this time, not by all the king's horses and all the king's men, but by women and men.

Peter Piper, who picked a peck of pickled peppers, is still looking for the peck of pickled peppers he picked.

But now there's Candace Carter, who canned a case of candied carrots. And for every little Mary there's a Larry, just as contrary, watching his garden grow.

But there are other types of messages in these revamped rhymes.

Jack Spratt avoids fat to stay cholesterol-free, and a twinkling little star may lose its sparkle if pollution is not kept in check.

Larche, 36, a consultant with the Iowa Department of Public Instruction, said he began groundwork for the book almost a decade ago and libbing lines during bedside reading to his two children.

"When my son, Jason, was small he gloried in the exciting adventures of nursery rhymes because he could imagine himself as the hero of almost every story," Larche recalled. "But when my daughter, Elisa, was born, somehow it didn't quite work."

Larche began filling in where the tales left off, to give Elisa new status in what seemed a male-dominated world. He worked to elevate her above the role of seamstress, flower-tender, frightened curd eater or prisoner of the fabled pumpkin shell.

"It seemed every time I read to her I was having to adapt the rhymes as I went along ... so she could be a star," he said.

"On the other hand there is an attempt to give equal opportunities to boys, so they can tend flowers if they want or cry if they want."

Another example: "Jack be nimble, Jack be quick. Jack jump over the candlestick. Jill be nimble, jump it, too. If Jack can do it, so can you!"

Larche's nursery rhyme characters inhabit a world where blacks, Hispanics, American Indians and whites go hand-in-hand, where boys can cry and girls can be tough.

"In these rhymes you'll find people in wheelchairs fishing, you'll find folks using their crutches to get apples out of trees, you'll find blind kids climbing trees," said Larche, who is blind in one eye and impaired in the other.

Elisa is 10 now, and Jason is 12. They are beyond the age of bedside nursery rhymes, but Larche said he hoped his book would win younger generations.

In 1979, he tried publishing an earlier version of the book but said he did not have the money or the marketing savvy to make it fly.

Now he has put out 2,500 copies in a first printing of the book, done in collaboration with illustrator Carolyn Blattel, a dwarf who has won acclaim for her brightly colored sketches.

"Maybe it was just a little bit ahead of its time," he said.

Foreigners Outnumber Americans In U.S. Patents

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of foreign countries collected 42 percent of the U.S. patents granted last year with Japan leading the way, the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office says.

Japanese inventors collected 11,648 U.S. patents in 1984, up from 9,212 a year earlier, according to the annual statistical report of the patent office released Wednesday. West Germans were the second largest group obtaining patents in this country, with 6,403 granted, up from 5,567 in 1983.

While foreigners averaged only about 17 percent of U.S. patents granted a quarter century ago, they have been increasing their share steadily as industrial and other research and development efforts increase overseas.

The share of U.S. patents granted to residents of other nations edged past 30 percent in the early 1970s and topped 40 percent last year.

Applications for patents are all treated the same, whether from U.S. residents or foreigners, according to patent office officials, and the growing number of patents for non-Americans simply results from increased applications from other nations, they observed.

The United States granted 72,651 patents in 1984 including some 30,488 to residents of other nations, according to the annual summary. That's up from 61,985 patents in 1983 including 25,424 to foreigners.

Gorbachev Calls For More Contact To Leave 'Ice Age'

MOSCOW (AP) — The official news agency Tass quoted Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev as telling a visiting U.S. congressional delegation that relations between the two countries must emerge from a dangerous "ice age."

Gorbachev talked for nearly four hours Wednesday with four congressmen led by Speaker of the House Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill.

Gorbachev, 54, who replaced Konstantin U. Chernenko on March 11, reaffirmed his interest in a summit, the congressmen said afterward. One of them predicted he would be a "very formidable adversary" in a meeting with President Reagan. Tass quoted Gorbachev as telling the delegation:

"The time is such now that people shaping the policy of the two countries should by all means converse with one another. The world situation is disquieting, even dangerous, and a kind of ice age is being observed in relations between the U.S.S.R. and the United States. At least this was so until the most recent time."

Reagan said Wednesday that he was ready to hold a get-acquainted meeting with the Soviet leader but not a summit.

The two leaders are expected to meet at the U.N. General Assembly this fall, but a summit would have to wait and be "the culmination of an extended dialogue which has produced tangible accomplishment," Robert C. McFarlane, the president's national security adviser, said in Santa Barbara, Calif., where the president is vacationing.

On Sunday, Gorbachev said the Soviet Union was freezing deployment of medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe until November. The White House called the proposal a public relations ploy.

One of the visiting congressmen, House Republican leader Robert Michel, said Gorbachev mentioned the cool White House response, and "his characterization was that we rejected his proposal out of hand."

Gorbachev received O'Neill, a Democrat from Massachusetts; Michel of Illinois; Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Silvio Conte, R-Mass.

They met in the Communist Party chief's private quarters on the third floor of the huge yellow office building just inside the Kremlin wall adjacent to Red Square.

The four are the senior members of a 13-member House delegation visiting the Soviet Union.

"In taking my measure of the man, I certainly have to agree with the speaker (O'Neill) that he could be a very formidable adversary," Michel told a news conference. "But by the same token, knowing my president as well as I do, the two could... have a spirited conversation and dialogue."

O'Neill said of Gorbachev: "About his ability, his talent, his frankness, his openness, I was tremendously impressed. He appeared to be the type of man who would be an excellent trial lawyer... in New York, had he lived there. He's a master of words and a master of the art of politics and diplomacy."

He said Gorbachev greeted him warmly, saying he had heard a lot about him and "I have a certain picture in my mind of the kind of person you are."

The House speaker said he told Gorbachev there is a "big difference" between Democratic and Republican views in the United States, and the Soviet leader responded: "On some questions, we do not see a difference." Michel said he was invited to return in the summer and see the countryside "so we could see the Russians don't live like cavemen as Gorbachev said our press portrays them."

Long-Time Albanian Leader Enver Hoxha Dies At Age 76

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Enver Hoxha, whose 42 years as Albania's Communist Party chief made him the world's longest-ruling communist leader, died today at age 76, the Albanian state-run ATA news agency reported.

Under Hoxha, Albania spurned both the Soviet Union and China, and became a virtual hermit nation, cut off from the rest of the world. The Maryland-sized country remained the last bastion of Stalinism in Europe, and Hoxha claimed only Albania had kept to the path shown by Marx, Lenin and Stalin.

A founder of the Albanian Communist Party, Hoxha was the last of a generation of Balkan revolutionaries to emerge from the battlefields of World War II to become his country's communist ruler.

His cause of death was officially reported as complications brought on by heart failure two days ago.

The Albanian leader had suffered from diabetes since 1948, ATA said in a communique monitored in Vienna, Austria. The disease caused extensive damage to blood vessels, heart kidneys and other organs, the report said.

He suffered a heart attack in 1973 and "in later years the grave heart insufficiency developed," the report said.

Hoxha had apparently been kept alive artificially for the past two days.

An official obituary reported by the Albanian agency said: "With deep sorrow and grief we inform you that today, on April 11, 1985, at 2:15 hours, the heart of the beloved and glorious leader of our party and people, Comrade Enver Hoxha, First Secretary of the Central Committee of the Party of Labor of Albania, Chairman of the General Council of the Democratic Front of Albania, General Commander of the People's Army, stopped beating."

ATA said a "funeral meeting" for Hoxha will be held Monday.

Both the official Soviet news agency Tass and the Chinese agency Xinhua reported Hoxha's death briefly and without comment, quoting the Albanian announcement.

ATA said Hoxha's body will be placed in the wall of the Presidium of the People's Assembly for "people to pay homage." Burial will take place at the Cemetery of the Martyrs of the Homeland.

No announcement on a successor has been made.

In recent years, Ramiz Alia has served as chairman of the Presidium of the People's Assembly, the nominal head of state. The government-controlled media's frequent references to Alia signaled his likely succession to supreme power, and Western analysts have speculated he would be next in line.

Under Hoxha, the Balkan country of 2.6 million people had the longest stretch of independence in its modern history.

The son of a Moslem landowner from the southern city of Gjirokaster, Hoxha stamped out religion in Albania. In later years, he claimed Albania was the world's only true atheist nation.

Born Oct. 16, 1908, he rose to power in the guerrilla struggles against Albania's Italian occupiers in the 1940s and dominated the postwar political scene by maneuvering and ruthlessness.

Israelis Withdraw From Seven Towns

NABATIYEH, Lebanon (AP) — Israel's army staged a pullback today from seven mostly Shiite Moslem towns in Lebanon and released 32 Lebanese prisoners held in Israel, the Israeli military command announced.

The command said Israeli troops withdrew from about 115 square miles around the Lebanese town of Nabatiyeh, scene of hundreds of guerrilla attacks on the Israeli army in recent months.

The withdrawal was completed within two hours, when the last Israeli military vehicle rolled out of the compound that served as headquarters of Israel's intelligence branch, reporters at the scene said.

From Nabatiyeh, an inland market town, the Israelis moved to a new front line in the foothills of Mount Hermon.

The Israelis maintained their positions on the crusader-built Beaufort Castle and the Ali Al-Taher mountain, thus keeping Nabatiyeh and dozens of vacated villages within the range of Israeli fire, reporters said.

The withdrawal apparently was a major part of the second phase of Israel's plan, announced in January, to pull out of Lebanon in three stages. The first stage was completed Feb. 16, when they withdrew from the port city of Sidon.

The next move in the second withdrawal stage will be in east Lebanon's Bekaa valley, where the Israelis face the Syrian army.

Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin repeated a warning on Israel radio that Israel would strike with "full power" against any attacks against Israel's border once the withdrawal from Lebanon was completed.

"After we withdraw to the international border and the security belt, any attempt to attack Israeli territory, if it is executed, will be answered with our full power," Rabin said.

As long convoys of trucks carrying troops and tank trailers bedecked with the star of David streamed out, Israeli helicopters showered the town with leaflets.

"We want to be friendly neighbors. Do not allow gunmen into your town," read one blue leaflet written in Arabic.

Crowds of jubilant Lebanese villagers poured out into the streets and chanted Islam's battle cry of "Allah akbar," or "God is great." They flew the Lebanese flag on buildings the Israelis had left.

Israeli newspapers said some Israeli troops will be redeployed along the Litani River west of Marjayoun.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a broad gain today, helped by renewed declines in interest rates.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 8.28 to 1,268.22 in the first half hour. Gainers took a 2-1 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Before the market opened, the government reported that retail sales took an unexpected 1.9 percent drop in March, for their largest decline in more than seven years.

Though the figure seemed to be anything but a bullish signal on the economy, it served to reinforce recent hopes for a relatively stimulative Federal Reserve credit policy and lower interest rates.

In the credit markets this morning, interest rates on short-term Treasury bills dropped about 10 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point. Prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, climbed more than $10 for every $1,000 in face value.

At the same time, the market took in stride International Business Machines' report of an 18 percent decline in first-quarter earnings.

Analysts noted that IBM had given notice several weeks ago that it would have a down quarter, but still expected a good showing for the full year.

IBM shares rose 7/8 to 126 1/4 in active trading.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 6.08 to 1,259.94.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE.

Martin Says Will Keep Up Effort To Trim State Taxes

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said today he wasn't giving up on any part of his tax-cut package, despite warnings that there's heavy opposition in the Legislature to repealing the sales tax on food and medicine.

"We are aware that there's a job to be done to persuade the majority of the General Assembly of the need for that legislation," said Martin in his weekly news conference.

One of the package's most powerful supporters — Senate Finance Committee chairman Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston — said Wednesday he could "find very little support in the General Assembly for (eliminating) the food and medicine tax."

Martin, however, vowed to continue lobbying for the entire package, which also includes repeal of the intangibles and inventory taxes, and repeated his call for grassroots support.

He said he and his liaisons would talk with as many legislators as they could.

"Yet when you do all of that, there are many elected officials ... who would not be likely to support the bill unless they find that there is support for it among their constituents," said Martin. "If their constituents don't care, then they might not feel strongly enough about it to break any party line discipline that might be attempted."

Crenshaw Hopes For Renewal

Watching The Master

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ben Crenshaw's golf game has gone sour since realizing a lifetime dream — winning a Masters Tournament.

He knows why. "I had placed so much emphasis in my own mind about winning a tournament like this that I got in a mental rut," he said Wednesday.

"There's not a day goes by that I don't think about this tournament (his 1984 title). I've had a mental hangup about it. It's like life was drawn out of me.

"I still can't tell people how much this tournament meant to me. Merely returning is a positive, very nice experience for me."

Crenshaw said he hoped a return to the scene of his greatest triumph would get him going again.

The popular Texan had an afternoon starting time in the field of 77 international golfers who began play in the 49th Masters today.

His record since claiming the title last April prevented him from entering this year's tournament as one of the favorites.

Since donning the green jacket a year ago, Crenshaw has appeared in 21 events — finishing in the top 10 only three times and missing the cut nine times.

"I've put a lot of pressure on myself," he said. "It just hasn't been fun.

"My play since the last (Masters) tournament has been disappointing. It's been an embarrassment. There has been frustration, anger, and I have no excuses whatever."

He said the elements that make up a good round of golf just haven't happened for him.

"I have not made putts this year and when you struggle with the putter, it can go into the rest of your game," he said.

"If I have suffered a while, that's fine. It's still up to me. I've got 14 clubs in my bag. It (the title) probably distracted me a little bit, but it was a nice distraction."

Crenshaw said it would only take sinking a couple of putts to get his game going, and in a field without a clearcut favorite, it might be the boost he needs to repeat.

With Jack Nicklaus, who owns a record five Masters titles, and Tom Watson, a two-time winner, having so-so seasons, the favorite's role has gone to some of the game's long hitters — two-time champion Seve Ballesteros of Spain, former winner Fuzzy Zoeller and Australian Greg Norman.

Bol, 7-6, Opts For Pro Career

BRIDGEPORT, Conn. (AP) — The need for money to locate and provide for his sister in turmoil-ridden Sudan has led college basketball's tallest player to give up school and seek a career in the pros.

Manute Bol, a 7-foot-6 freshman at the University of Bridgeport, has declared himself an early eligibility candidate for the National Basketball Association's June draft.

Bol informed Coach Bruce Webster of his decision prior to the school's spring recess and sent a letter to the NBA on Wednesday requesting to be included in its draft.

Bol said he needed to return to Sudan, whose government was overthrown last week, and assure the safety of his sister whom he hasn't heard from since May 1984, according to Webster.

Bol was not at the school Wednesday and unavailable for comment.

Webster was despondent about his star player's decision, but he said he understood the reasoning behind it.

"I personally feel terrible, but I can understand," Webster said. "The only surviving member of his family is 19 years old and Sudan is in turmoil right now. He just doesn't feel it's right for him to lead the kind of life he's leading without taking care of his sister."

Bol is a member of Sudan's Dinka tribe in Grogal about 600 miles from Khartoum. He was discovered in the summer of 1982 while playing for the Sudan national team and brought here by former Fairleigh Dickinson Coach Don Feeley.

In his first year of college basketball, Bol led Bridgeport, 26-6, to a first-place finish in the New England Collegiate Conference and the conference tournament championship.

Bol, who weighs just 190 pounds, averaged 22.5 points, 13.5 rebounds and seven blocked shots per game before the Purple Knights were eliminated from the NCAA Division II tournament in regional competition.

"He's been very, very concerned because of the uprisings in Sudan," Webster said. "As soon as the season was over, he expressed his desire to go back and get his sister ... and he can't do that without a lot of money."

"Just before the Easter holidays he said he had to apply for hardship so he could find out what he is worth.

It was pretty clean cut — the University of Bridgeport doesn't have the ability to take care of his sister."

Webster has previously said that Bol would need more college experience, but would eventually be an outstanding professional player. But because of his lack of weight — and strength — Webster had said Bol would probably even be "pushed around by Division I centers."

"He sent the letter this morning," Webster said. "We had been trying to convince him not to do that. I felt he would be worth four or five times what he's worth now if he stayed and played another year for us."

The final decision was made by Bol this weekend after "conferring with Boston attorney Frank Catapano," the school said.

Catapano said in a telephone interview from Boston that he is not, at this point, acting as Bol's agent. He said his relationship with Bol was that of a friend.

"I did not play much of a role in his decision at all, he made it himself," the lawyer said.

Catapano said Bol traveled to Boston to meet with him this past weekend, but had already made up his mind to try and help his sister. Catapano also noted that, at 22, Bol is older than most players at the college level and was losing earning capacity.

"If he could establish himself as a legitimate wage earner, he would be in better position to help his sister," Catapano explained, adding that Bol would eventually return to finish school.

In a prepared statement, Bridgeport said Bol has indicated he will "fulfill his academic responsibilities for the current school year in order to leave in good standing as well as to maintain proper status under his student visa."

Watson, winless this year, said Wednesday he thought his game was in good shape.

"Overall, I'm ready to win," Watson said. "I just need a good streak."

Nicklaus says he is "looser than I normally am" coming into the Masters.

"I usually come in and get worked up over my golf game and the tournament," said Nicklaus, who has a record 17 major professional championships, but none since winning the PGA in 1980.

Four two-time winners on this season's Tour also have to be considered as challengers on the demanding 6,905-yard, par 72 Augusta National layout.

Lanny Wadkins won two of the year's first three events, but hasn't done much since. Mark O'Meara put together successive victories at the Crosby and Hawaiian Open, but he, too, went into a slump the last two months.

Curtis Strange won his second title three weeks ago, but Calvin Peete is probably the hottest of the two-time winners.

Peete, who could become the first black champion in Masters history, scored an impressive victory in the Tournament Players Championship two weeks ago and won at Phoenix earlier this year.

Johnson Hired As New EC Aide

East Carolina head football coach Art Baker announced today the hiring of Ellis Johnson as assistant football coach.

Johnson fills one of two openings on Baker's staff after defensive coordinator Tom Throckmorton and recruiting coordinator-defensive ends coach Waverly Brooks resigned last month.

Johnson, who comes to ECU from Appalachian State of the Southern Conference, will have the responsibility of coaching linebackers while also holding the title of recruiting coordinator for the Pirates. Johnson, 34, held the title of defensive coordinator while also coaching the inside linebackers during his one-year stay at ASU.

"When we lost Throckmorton and Brooks, I felt like we could not lose any quality as far as experience and talent," Baker said. "We needed someone with coordinating experience and in Ellis Johnson, we have that and head coaching experience on the college level. He's an outstanding defensive football coach and recruiter. We have worked together in the past and I know what he can do."

Johnson, a 1975 graduate of The Citadel was a member of Baker's 1982 Citadel staff after coaching in the South Carolina high school ranks from 1976-81. From The Citadel, Johnson became head coach at Gardner-Webb College, where his 1983 team finished with a 5-6 record, but captured the NAIA District 26 championship. That season also saw Gardner-Webb's defense hold a place in the national rankings.

The 1984 season saw Appalachian State's defense under Johnson place third in the Southern Conference after a last-place showing in 1983.

Johnson's hiring leaves Baker with one remaining opening on his staff.

Coaches Vetoed 3-Pointer Once

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

Three years ago, North Carolina's high school basketball coaches chose not to adopt the 3-point field goal, but a recent decision by the national governing board for prep sports may give the coaches another chance to try it.

The National Federation of High School Athletic Association's basketball rules committee has voted to give each state the option of using the 3-point goal and North Carolina officials may get their chance to vote on the proposal as early as June.

The federation's decision, which came at a meeting two weeks ago, means that high schools in as many as 47 states could be using the rule next season if they choose. So far, North Dakota, Iowa and Idaho have tried the 3-pointer.

Charlie Adams, executive director of the N.C. High School Athletic Association, said the idea first came up at a coaches clinic at Greensboro. It was just after the Atlantic Coast Conference had decided to experiment with the 3-point basket, an idea the league has long since abandoned.

"About three years ago, the attitude was completely adamant," Adams said. "There was very little sentiment to use it in high school basketball. When we got that kind of feedback, not much more was said about it."

Now, high school coaches could see a 19-foot semicircle around the basket, similar to the distance adopted by the ACC for one season.

Adams said if the rule is accepted by coaches within the state, it would be up to the individual conferences to contact the NCHSAA to indicate a desire to experiment with the rule. He said the first idea of sentiment should be revealed at a meeting of the state's prep athletic directors at Wrightsville Beach on April 17.

After that meeting, the executive board of the state association will meet in Chapel Hill on April 30 and May 1.

"At that time, I'm going to present to them that we have two choices. We can adopt it for the state of North Carolina and schools can write me for permission, or not adopt it for the state of North Carolina," Adams said.

Adams said he has spoken with high school officials in Iowa and Idaho and he says the reaction there has been good. He also said those officials have noticed a difference in the style of play because of the rule.

"The interesting thing from the two states I talked to was that it opened the game up inside," he said.

"The kids have gotten so much taller and quicker, everything is clogged up on the inside. The 3-point basket has moved everything away from the basket and made a much better ballgame."

Early indications are that some coaches still are not ready to try the experiment. An informal survey conducted by the Durham Morning Herald showed seven of the nine coaches interviewed did not like the idea. Adams said he will rely on those coaches for guidance when and if the issue comes up for a vote.

"Whatever we do as a state, we ought to be doing what our membership wants," Adams said. "If the basketball coaches want it, we ought to go ahead and experiment with it."

Blue Jays Find Way Out Of Trouble

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

The Toronto Blue Jays spent a lot of time recently finding ways to get into trouble. This season, they've finally found a way to get out of it.

Bill Caudill, the relief pitcher Toronto got in a trade and signed for $9 million over five years, pitched out of jams in the seventh, eighth and ninth innings for the victory and Gary Lavelle, acquired in another deal, worked a perfect 10th Wednesday night to preserve the Blue Jays' 1-0 triumph over the Kansas City Royals.

"Caudill gets the win and Lavelle gets the save. What a way for both of them to break in," Toronto Manager Bobby Cox said with a smile.

Last year, no team in the major leagues lost as many games in which they were tied or leading after seven innings as did Toronto. So the Blue Jays beefed up their beleaguered bullpen by getting Caudill from San Francisco and Lavelle from San Francisco.

"You can see the difference in their club in just two games,"

Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said. "Their relief pitching is going to make a big difference."

In other AL games, Detroit hammered Cleveland 8-1, Boston crunched New York 14-5, Baltimore trimmed Texas 7-1, Minnesota downed California 6-3 and Seattle beat Oakland 5-4.

Both Toronto starter Doyle Alexander and Kansas City starter Danny Jackson pitched well enough to win. Jackson went nine innings and gave up five hits without walking a batter.

Alexander allowed five hits before Caudill relieved in the seventh with runners on first and third and two outs. Caudill escaped trouble by getting Onix Concepcion on a fly ball.

In the eighth, the Royals put runners on first and second before Caudill struck out Steve Balboni.

And in the Kansas City ninth, Darryl Motley led off with a double and took third on a sacrifice. After Dane Iorg was intentionally walked, Caudill wiggled out of danger again by retiring Concepcion on a popup and Willie Wilson on a fly ball. Then, the Blue Jays found a way to win in the 10th, thanks to some daring baserunning by Willie Upshaw.

Upshaw led off with a single against Joe Beckwith and moved to third on a sacrifice. One out later, Tony Fernandez hit a sharp grounder to deep short that Concepcion fielded. Fernandez barely beat Concepcion's throw to first, and Upshaw kept running and dashed home just ahead of Balboni's throw to the plate. "For me on that play, it's a basic thing," Upshaw said. "Fortunately, Tony beat the throw. I didn't think it was going to be that close but it was. I got there about the same time the ball did and I think I jarred the ball loose."

Orioles 7, Rangers 1
Fred Lynn, the $6.8-million free agent signed by Baltimore, stroked his first two hits for the Orioles while Mike Boddicker, the AL's only 20-game winner last season, went six innings for the victory.

Lynn singled twice during a six-run outburst in the fourth inning. His second hit drove in two runs. Rick Dempsey also had a two-run single in the fourth, off Texas starter Mike Mason.

Boddicker, 20-11 in 1984, gave up six hits, including Larry Parrish's home run in the sixth. Sammy Stewart held the visiting Rangers hitless over the last three innings for a save.

The only bad news for Baltimore came when Cal Ripken Jr. sprained his left ankle during an attempted pickoff. The team said Ripken, who has played every inning of 44 straight games, may miss the Orioles' next game Friday night against Toronto.

Tigers 8, Indians 1
Lou Whitaker drove in Detroit's first four runs with a pair of homers and Kirk Gibson accounted for the final three runs with a monstrous home run.

Dan Petry, 18-8 last season, scattered four hits over six innings before Aurelio Lopez pitched three perfect innings for a save.

Whitaker unloaded a three-run blast in the third inning off Cleveland starter Vern Ruhle, and then poked a solo homer in the fifth.

Gibson's home run bounced off the facing at the top of the right field stands at Tiger Stadium. The blow came off Dave Van Ohlen and capped a four-run seventh inning.

Red Sox 14, Yankees 5
Tony Armas and Wade Boggs drove in three runs apiece and Bill Buckner belted a two-run homer as Boston again routed New York.

The Red Sox broke the game open with a seven-run second inning against Ed Whitson, the big-money free agent signed by the Yankees. Whitson lasted only 1-2-3 innings and gave up nine runs — just three of them earned — on six hits.

Errors by Whitson and catcher Butch Wynegar, both on bunts, fueled the big inning. Rich Gedman, who went 4-for-4, doubled and singled in the second inning, and Buckner capped the uprising with his blast to right field.

Bruce Hurst got the victory, going seven innings.

The game in Boston was the second of the season for both teams. On Monday, the Red Sox beat New York 9-2.

Twins 6, Angels 3
Gary Gaetti was the hero of the night for visiting Minnesota.

Trailing 2-1 in the eighth inning, Tom Brunansky hit a bases-loaded single to tie the score and Gaetti followed with another single off loser Donnie Moore to put the Twins ahead 3-2.

Then, in the ninth, Minnesota loaded the bases against Moore and Pat Clements before Gaetti belted a three-run double off Doug Corbett.

Starter Mike Smithson got the victory, going 7-1-3 innings. He gave up Reggie Jackson's two-run homer, the 504th of his career, in the first.

Ron Davis recorded the final two outs for his second save in two nights.

Tim Launder homered in the fifth off California starter Geoff Zahn.

Mariners 5, A's 4
Mark Langston, the AL's rookie pitcher of the year in 1984, made a successful 1985 debut with the help of Jim Presley's three-run homer.

Langston, who went 17-10 last year and led the league in strikeouts, pitched 7-1-3 innings and gave up six hits. He struck out just one, and left the game after Dave Kingman, who homered 35 times in 1984, belted a two-run shot.

Edwin Nunez got the final five outs for his second save in two nights in Seattle.

Presley's three-run blast off Steve McCatty in the sixth inning capped a four-run outburst. Singles by Phil Bradley, Alvin Davis and Dave Henderson off loser Bill Krueger produced the first run of the inning.

Near Miss At A 300

Jim Conde, bowling at Hillcrest Lanes last night, just missed a 300-game, recording 11 strikes in the third game of his league series last night.

Conde, who bowls with the Sidewinders of the Men's City League, recorded a 176 in the first game and came back with a 202 in the second.

In the third game, however, Conde put together eight straight strikes before getting a one-pin leave in the ninth frame. He spared and finished up with three more strikes in the tenth frame for a 279 score. That gave him a 657 series in the series.

Kirk Continues Memphis Plan

By The Associated Press

Memphis State Coach Dana Kirk knows that when you have a good idea, you should stick with it.

Kirk and the Tigers have been a Metro Conference powerhouse for several years while almost exclusively using Memphis area talent, and they returned to that formula Wednesday, the first time since November that high school players could officially sign a letter of intent with a college team.

Kirk signed 6-foot-6 Memphis Whitehaven forward Rodney Douglas to go with fall signee Marvin Alexander, also of Whitehaven.

Douglas averaged 10 points, 6.6 rebounds, four assists and two blocked shots during Whitehaven's 34-1 season that ended with a victory in the Class AAA state championship game.

Indiana's Bob Knight, seeking a return to the NCAA playoffs, signed junior college transfers Lennell Moore, Andre Harris and Todd Jadlo. Moore, a 6-7 forward from Indianapolis Manual and Allen County, Kan., Junior College, averaged 13 points and eight rebounds a game. Andre Harris, a 6-7 forward from Grand Rapids, Mich., and Jadlo, a 6-10 center, both played at Barton County, Kan., Community College.

In other Big Ten transactions, Minnesota signed Mark Anderson, a junior college All-American from Sheridan, Wyo.; Iowa collected Illinois' prep Mr. Basketball, 26-point-a-game guard Ed Horton; Purdue inked 6-7 Kip Jones, an Indiana all-stater who averaged 30 points per game, and 6-8 Mel McCants, who led Chicago Mount Carmel to the Illinois Class AA state title.

Big Ten champ Michigan, which returns most of its top players, signed guard Billy Butts of Muncie, Ind.; Northside; 6-9 Loy Vaught of East Kenwood, Mich., and 6-10 J.P. Oosterban from Kalamazoo, Mich.

Ohio State got 6-5 swingman Jerry

Francis from Columbus, Ohio.

Northwestern, the Big Ten doormat, signed Jeff Grose, a 6-2 guard from Warsaw who is considered to have the inside track on Indiana's coveted Mr. Basketball award, and Illinois got 6-7 Lowell Hamilton of Illinois Class A champion Providence St. Mel of Chicago, and 6-1 guard Curtis Taylor of Syracuse, N.Y., Fowler.

In the Southeastern Conference, Vanderbilt signed Nashville Father Ryan High School guard Sydney Grider, son of former Harlem Globetrotter Josh Grider. The 6-3 Grider averaged 23.7 points a game. And Tennessee added 6-5 forward Elvin Brown of Elizabethton, Tenn. The native of the Virgin Islands averaged 16.8 points and 10.2 rebounds.

Two California players — forward Shaughn Ryan of Orange Coast Community College and guard Tyrone Mitchell of Reseda — signed national letters of intent with Arizona State.

In Tucson, meanwhile, Arizona Coach Lute Olson signed 5-11 guard Kenny Lofton of East Chicago, Ind.

Also in the Pac 10, the all-time scoring champion in the Spokane area, David Sanders, signed with Washington State. Sanders averaged 23 points per game in his senior season. Stanford signed 6-8 Howard Wright of San Diego and 6-1 guard Terry Taylor of Aurora, Colo. Wright, the son of six-time All-Pro lineman Ernie Wright of the San Diego Chargers and Cincinnati Bengals, averaged 20 points and 13 rebounds in his senior year.

UCLA signed 6-8 forward Carl Pitts of Los Angeles Trade Tech, a junior college; Oregon State got a commitment from 6-4 swingman Van Anderson of Long Beach, Calif., and Oregon inked 6-3 guard Steve Ranniger of Spokane.

Southwest Conference champion Texas Tech landed three players, including its first 7-footer ever, Rodney Henderson of Dallas Bryan Adams. The Red Raiders also landed 6-7 forward Dwayne Chism of Odessa College and 6-10 center Wesley Lowe of West Mesquite.

Elsewhere in the SWC, Houston signed 6-1 guard Gerry McGee of Houston Madison; Texas A&M got Steve Vandiver, a 6-5 guard from Pittsburgh's Allegheny Community College, and John Tresvant, a 6-7 forward from City of San Francisco Community College; Baylor signed 6-9 Jack Smith of Denver, and Texas signed 6-5 Patrick Fairs of Odessa College.

Nevada Class A player-of-the-year Jeff Penix, a 6-0 guard, signed a national letter with Colorado, while Colorado State got Terry Talley, a 6-0 guard from Duncanville, Texas, and Pat Durham, a 6-7 forward from Dallas.

Jerry Johnson of Omaha, Neb., a 6-7 forward who averaged 24.6 points and 11 rebounds last season, and Archie Marshall of Seminole Junior

Howe Admits He Was Nervous

By The Associated Press
Steve Howe simply "said a little prayer and went to war."
"I'd be lying if I said I wasn't nervous," Howe said after getting a save in his first appearance in the major leagues in more than a year Wednesday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers held off the Houston Astros 5-4.
Howe, who was suspended for the 1984 season by then-Commissioner Bowie Kuhn because of cocaine use, had not pitched in the majors since September 1983. In addition to the suspension, he had undergone elbow surgery last winter.
Dodgers Manager Tommy Lasorda summoned Howe in the bottom of the ninth inning after Houston had scored once and had a runner on first with two outs.
On Howe's first pitch, Jose Cruz lined out to center field to end the game.
"It's good to be back and get the first one under my belt," Howe said. "It's like I've never been gone."

There were only two other National League games Wednesday, with Montreal beating Cincinnati 4-1 and San Diego halting San Francisco 3-0.
Howe admitted it would be awhile before he felt completely comfortable.
"I'm not where I want to be," he said. "I've got good velocity but I'm not sharp. It'll take time."
Still, Lasorda and Los Angeles catcher Mike Scioscia liked what they saw.
"There was nothing wrong with his stuff," Lasorda. "It's encouraging to see him come in and pitch like that."
Said Scioscia: "I feel good for Steve Howe. God only knows what he's been through."
"He's battled his way back. I'm happy for him and I'm happy for the team because he's a big part of our bullpen and I think we have the best bullpen in the league."

Earlier in the game, it looked like the Dodgers would not need Howe.
Jerry Reuss, who owns a 20-10 record against Houston, had helped himself with a two-run single in the sixth inning and took a five-hitter and a 5-0 lead into the eighth.
"He (Reuss) probably has pitched as well against us as any pitcher in the history of the franchise," Houston Manager Bob Lillis said.
But Reuss left after giving up two more hits in the eighth and Ken Howell took over. Howell uncorked a wild pitch, allowing one run to score, and Alan Ashby's two-run single made it 5-3.
In the ninth, Kevin Bass drew a leadoff walk from Howell and later came around to score on a sacrifice fly by Phil Garner. That's when Howe came in and retired Cruz, Houston's cleanup hitter.

The Dodgers reached loser Joe Nickro for a run in the first inning on a sacrifice fly by Pedro Guerrero and added two more in the sixth on Reuss' single.
Julio Solano relieved Nickro in the seventh and promptly served up solo home runs to Ken Landreaux and Guerrero.
"Tonight, we had a dimension they didn't have — the long ball," Reuss said.

April decisions since 1983 before scattering four hits in Cincinnati.
Hubie Brooks, acquired by Montreal from the New York Mets in the big trade for Gary Carter, drove in three runs with a pair of singles and a sacrifice fly.
Tim Raines contributed two singles and a triple and stole two bases for the Expos in pinning the loss on Jay Tibbs.
Reds player-manager Pete Rose singled and had a run-scoring groundout in four at-bats. Rose's hit raised his career total to 4,100, now 91 behind Ty Cobb's all-time mark.

Padres 3, Giants 0
Eric Show tossed a four-hitter and struck out a career-high 11 as defending NL West-champion San Diego won its first game of the season.
Show, a 15-game winner the past two years, retired 13 straight batters between the first and fifth innings. He did not allow a San Francisco runner past second base during the game.
Dave LaPoint, making his first appearance for the Giants since being acquired from St. Louis, went eight innings and gave up only one unearned run, on Kevin McReynolds' RBI single in the first.
The visiting Padres, who lost to San Francisco in a season opener Tuesday, scored twice in the ninth on Jerry Royster's two-run double.

Lady Pirates Take Win From Seahawks

East Carolina's Lady Pirate tennis team had little trouble in gaining an 8-1 victory over UNC-Wilmington yesterday.

The lone loss for the Lady Pirates came in the number three doubles, while UNC-W managed only two other set victories the rest of the day.

East Carolina is now 4-6 on the spring and plays host to UNC-Charlotte on Monday.

Nets Show Philadelphia Just What It Felt Like

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

The New Jersey Nets would like to meet Detroit rather than Philadelphia in the first round of the National Basketball Association playoffs, but first they had a score to settle with the 76ers.

"In the back of my mind was the last game when they pushed us the whole game and seemed to try to embarrass us," Micheal Ray Richardson said after the Nets defeated Philadelphia 76ers 125-100 Wednesday night. "We wanted to show them what it felt like."

Richardson, who had 27 points, 14 assists, seven steals and eight rebounds against the 76ers, was referring to a 127-107 rout Philadelphia pinned on the Nets on March 16.

Despite the decisive victory over the 76ers, New Jersey is hoping to avoid them in the first round of the playoffs.

If the Nets finish fifth in the Eastern Conference, they will face Detroit, whom they have beaten in five of six meetings this season. If New Jersey is sixth, the 76ers will be the first-round opponent.

"We're trying to approach every game with a playoff atmosphere," said Nets Coach Stan Albeck. "If we can come out and play with the same intensity in our last two games, everything else will fall into place."

In other NBA games, Detroit edged Indiana 116-114, Atlanta trimmed New York 98-94, Milwaukee defeated Washington 106-97 and the Los Angeles Clippers trimmed Denver 129-127.

Julius Erving, who missed seven of 10 shots and scored only nine points, said the loss to New Jersey would best be forgotten as soon as possible.

"Tonight's one to throw out," Erving said. "We didn't learn or accomplish anything. Now the pressure is on us to win the last two so we can control our own destiny."

The 76ers are tied with Milwaukee at 57-23 in the Eastern Conference standings. If they should meet in the second round, the team with the best record would have the homecourt advantage.

The Nets hit 53 of 93 shots from the field, a 57 percent shooting percentage, in defeating Philadelphia for only the second time in six games this season.

The Nets opened a 33-17 lead after one quarter by outscoring the 76ers 24-7 in the final seven minutes of the period.

Philadelphia, which defeated Boston at home on Tuesday, drew to within eight points on three occasions, but never got closer. New Jersey's biggest lead was 107-76 midway through the final period.

"We just couldn't get anything going," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "They played real well. We were looking for any kind of spark to get us going, but we just could not find it."

Leon Wood led the 76ers with 16 points, while George Johnson and rookie Charles Barkley added 14 apiece. But the 76ers' usually reliable veterans had an off night.

In addition to Erving's nine points, Moses Malone was 4-for-14 from the field and scored 12 points and guard Maurice Cheeks had only 10 points.

"The great ones like Doc, Cheeks and Moses can't play great, 82 games a year," said King. "We caught them on one of those nights."

Bucks 106, Bullets 97

Milwaukee knocked Washington out of a fifth-place tie with New Jersey as Sidney Moncrief scored 27 points and Terry Cummings 23.

The Bucks, who won their 15th straight game at home, led 90-75 with 10 minutes left, but a 22-9 streak by the Bullets, who got 26 points from Greg Ballard, cut the deficit to two with 1:18 left.

Milwaukee scored the game's last seven points, however.

Clippers 129, Nuggets 127

Los Angeles got 29 points from Norm Nixon and survived a 27-2 Denver streak to beat the Nuggets.

The Clippers, who also got 26 points from Marques Johnson and 25 from Derek Smith, led 75-68 midway through the third quarter before the Nuggets' big run gave them a 95-77 advantage. An 8-0 run closed the gap to eight points at the end of the period and Los Angeles finally caught up with seven minutes left. But the Clippers did not take the lead for good until a three-point play by Johnson made it 125-124 with 43 seconds to go.

Alex English scored 38 points to lead the Nuggets.

Pistons 116, Pacers 111

Bill Laimbeer's last-second jumper gave Detroit its victory over Indiana and a sweep of the six-game season series.

Kelly Tripucka led the Pistons with 23 points, while Clark Kellogg had 31 points and 18 rebounds for the Pacers. Isiah Thomas had 16 assists for Detroit and needs only 11 in his last two games to break the single-season NBA record of 1,099.

Hawks 98, Knicks 94

Dominique Wilkins scored 27 points and helped Atlanta rally in the fourth period to hand New York its 10th straight loss.

The Knicks led 83-79 in the fourth period, but two free throws by Wilkins gave the Hawks the lead for good at 83-87.

Louis Orr paced the Knicks with 22 points.

New Look For Darlington Track

DARLINGTON, S.C. (AP) — Darlington International Raceway, known as the granddaddy of all NASCAR tracks, will be sporting a different look at this Sunday's TransSouth 500. But veterans like David Pearson think it'll be the same, difficult oval that has deterred drivers for years.

"This is a race track where you don't really race other people," Pearson, who has won more races here than any other driver, said Wednesday at a news conference. "You race the race track."

Darrell Waltrip, who has claimed four victories to Pearson's 10, agreed that winning on the 36-year-old track is something special.

"When you win at Darlington, it is really gratifying," said Waltrip, who took the checkered flag at last year's TransSouth 500. "You know your car doesn't have to be the fastest one."

"You know it must be the best driver out here on that day. As a driver, you know if you win here, you've got a driving ability at most tracks."

Most drivers, Pearson and Waltrip included, will be curious during today's qualifying to see how the new asphalt on turns one and two, and the pit area changes will affect the driving and the strategy.

Pearson, 60, said new asphalt on turns one and two ought to be beneficial because it should make the track more consistent all the way around.

"The new asphalt is enough to get you to think you ought to be able to win here," he said. "I've won here 10 times, but I've never won here."

Friday, April 12, 6:00 P.M. EST, the 500-mile race will be held on the 1.36-mile track.

29th running, said he had not seen the track yet but would inspect it before qualifying was to begin this afternoon.

Harry Gant, who drove to victory in the Southern 500 here last September, said after seeing the track Wednesday he felt it was probably "a little better" than it was when he won.

"I looked at it this morning," Gant said. "Last time, I found just the right groove. Now it'll probably be lower in turn one."

"This has always been one of our (team's) better tracks," he added. "We've always run well here. Last year, we ran well all day and didn't bump any other cars."

Darlington Raceway was built in an egg shape because its first owner wanted to protect a little pond at one end. The result was that the west end was smaller than the east, making the first two turns tighter than the others.

In recent years, drivers also have had to cope with a bump near the start of the first turn.

midway through the final period.

Kentucky Man Says Friend Shot Trooper

HARMON DEN, N.C. (AP) — Officials held one man in detention today in connection with the slaying of a Highway Patrol trooper, but no charges had been filed in the death, authorities said.

About 150 law officers from North Carolina and Tennessee used bloodhounds and lights Wednesday night to surround part of the Pisgah National Forest, searching for another man who may have been connected to the Tuesday slaying of Trooper Giles A. Harmon.

"A subject is with us who has been shot," said Highway Patrol Sgt. George Dowdle, stationed at a command post near Harmon Den. The man had been treated and released from Haywood County Hospital in Waynesville, Dowdle said.

"He is still being detained and he is a possible suspect," Dowdle said.

Steven Burns of the U.S. Forest Service said he was driving along a forest service road in the Harmon Den area Wednesday afternoon when a car approached him. The driver said he had been kidnapped in Lexington, Ky., shot and forced to travel to North Carolina, Burns said.

The man, who identified himself as Charles G. Barker, told Burns and a reporter for the Asheville Citizen that his companion "shot the patrolman without any reason."

Barker said he had been abducted Tuesday, forced to withdraw some money from a bank and then was robbed and shot. He said he was brought into North Carolina, where he witnessed the shooting.

After the shooting, Barker said he was driven up the gravel road and his companion drove the car off onto a side road.

Barker said the man cut down some small trees and covered the car with old blankets and the trees so "it was camouflaged."

Barker said the man told him not to leave the area until 5 p.m., and that if he did, he would be killed. Barker said he left the area anyway, and later came across Burns.

Barker said the man was a friend. He did not say why his companion kidnapped him.

Harmon was shot once in the chest after he stopped a car near a detour of rockslide-blocked Interstate 40.

Dowdle said it was unclear why the trooper stopped the car.

"We still don't know," he said. "We're assuming it was just a routine stop ... just to check the driver. Or the driver could have been driving bad."

Dowdle said law enforcement officers, including Highway Patrol troopers from North Carolina and Tennessee, sheriff's deputies, State Bureau of Investigation Agents, the FBI, wildlife officials, and North Carolina correction officers, were hoping to flush the suspect out of the woods.

"That's what we're hoping or at least keep him contained in that area," he said.

Officials evacuated campers, turkey hunters and fishermen from the Harmon Den area. Officers at the command post said they believed whoever killed the trooper would not hesitate to kill again.

SBI agents at the command post dusted a brown Oldsmobile for fingerprints. The car is believed to have been driven by the person who killed Harmon.

Earlier Wednesday, three men arrested in Arkansas and questioned in the slaying were released and no charges were filed, Arkansas officials said.

Arkansas State Police spokesman Larry Patterson said a Memphis police officer saw a car matching the description of one reported near the shooting crossing the Mississippi River bridge at West Memphis Wednesday morning. Roadblocks were set up and the car stopped on U.S. 70 about a mile east of Forrest

City, Ark., he said.

Patterson identified the three men as Johnnie Wayne Eagan, 39, of Cincinnati, Ohio; Chester Dooley, 39, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Jerry Bonta, 51, of Sulphur, Ky.

The three men were released about 5 p.m. Wednesday, and no charges were filed, said Arkansas State Police dispatcher Mike Middleton.

TRAFFIC STOPPERS — North Carolina Highway Patrol troopers stop vehicles in the east-bound lane of Interstate 40 near Morganton on Wednesday as the search broadened for a man who shot and killed a trooper near the Tennessee line. Although the

Morganton roadblock was almost 100 miles from the shooting scene, officers were checking all trucks and vehicles fitting the description of those seen in the area where the trooper was killed. (AP Laserphoto)

Trial Attorneys Objecting To Testimony Rule Change

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The Year of the Child could produce a new state law to keep young victims of sexual abuse from testifying in courtrooms, but some lawyers fear that such protection may come at the expense of defendants' constitutional rights.

"The constitution is not very popular in 1985," said Alan Briggs, executive vice president of the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers.

Briggs said the academy will oppose the legislation, filed March 25 in the General Assembly by Sens. Charlie Hips, D-Buncombe, and Bill Redman, R-Iredell. Hips said the bill came from one drafted by the Governor's Crime Commission.

The bill, which Hips called "emotional and controversial," would allow a judge, upon a motion by either attorney, to order that the testimony of a child under the age of 13 be given outside the courtroom in sexual abuse cases.

Both attorneys and the defendant would be present in the other room while the child testified, Hips said. A screen, such as a one-way mirror, would allow the defendant to see the child while the child could not view the defendant, he said.

The testimony could be shown in the courtroom to the judge and jury via closed-circuit television or the child's sworn testimony could be videotaped and shown in the courtroom, he said. In either case, the child would not have to appear in court, he said.

The debate about the bill centers on the balance between allowing children to testify in sexual abuse cases without fear of intimidation and guaranteeing the defendants' constitutional right to direct confrontation of an accuser.

"The bill was drafted because of problems we've had with young kids getting on the witness stand and just freezing up," said William H. Andrews, president of the N.C. District Attorneys' Association and the district attorney in the district that includes Onslow County.

Because a child's live testimony is usually more effective, Andrews called the bill "an option you might choose to use."

Buncombe County District Attorney Ronald Brown, a past president of the district attorney association, said it was difficult to put children in a courtroom setting, where there's "a man in a black robe that looks like God" and ask them to talk about something adults would have a hard time discussing.

"We need to be able to prosecute these cases," he said.

Brown said sexual abuse cases had always been a problem but there had been an explosion of them in the past three to four years.

"The right of confrontation is completely protected," under the bill, he said.

"The right of confrontation is no more than being able to cross-examine," he said. "... I can't imagine any legislator being opposed to this bill. I can't imagine this bill not passing."

Some defense attorneys disagreed. Briggs said provisions in North Carolina's constitution and case law are "so substantive as to the right of the defendant" that eyeball-to-eyeball confrontation may be the only possibility.

Briggs raised several other objections to the bill, including that it does not consider those who defend themselves and that it "raises serious questions about the presumption of innocence."

But Briggs acknowledged that "popular sentiment is in favor of these kinds of changes," particularly in light of Gov. Jim Martin's call for similar legislation in his State of the State address.

"I'm strongly supporting the legislation," Martin said Wednesday.

Two recent North Carolina cases have brought attention to the issue of children testifying in court.

In a Buncombe County case, charges were dropped against a man accused of assaulting a 4-year-old girl when the judge called her to the stand and she provided no useful information.

Asheville attorney Joel Stevenson, who defended the Buncombe County man, said he did not think the bill "protects the right of confrontation because confrontation is a two-way street. It starts off assuming that anyone accused of a crime is guilty of it."

Stevenson said the basic question is whether the courts and society "want to make it as easy as possible for these charges to be brought and taken to court. That would be a good thing if we were sure no one would even be accused when they when they were not in fact guilty of doing it."

In the other case a Wake County man was convicted first-degree rape and taking indecent liberties after a judge ruled the 3-year-old child was too young to provide intelligent information or understand the importance of swearing an oath on the Bible.

Panel Can't Define No-No's In New Version Of Legislative Ethics Code

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislative Ethics Committee drafted guidelines on lawmakers' use of telephones and mailing privileges, but couldn't agree on standards for accepting lobbyists' favors.

The joint panel compiled Wednesday a list of conduct suggestions to be circulated among the 170 representatives and senators.

The committee said lawmakers should not use their office phones for personal or non-legislative business. The same principle would apply to legislative stationery and mailing privileges.

But while agreeing that it's proper to meet with people who have an interest in pending legislation but wrong to accept lavish entertainment or junkets, the panel was stumped on what that means.

Lavish entertainment "could encompass certain specific chairmen getting special seats at ball games," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. "I've never been chairman of such a committee."

"If a committee needs to go visit a hospital, that's one thing," said Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston. "But if the committee goes to visit a hospital in Puerto Rico, that's something else."

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, said the legislative dinners hosted by trade associations and other lobbying groups are exciting for freshmen lawmakers, but soon become monotonous for veterans.

"I actually think very little is accomplished in the way of swaying people on issues," Johnson said. "I think most of us are mature about that."

In other legislative action: Public school "good Samaritans" who render first aid to sick or injured people would be immune from damages in most civil suits under a bill filed in the Senate.

"Naturally, anyone would like to help someone that's choking or having an attack or otherwise in danger," said Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union. "This will give them more freedom to go ahead and help those who are in distress."

People found to have intentionally worsened the victim's condition would lose their immunity, Plyler said. But those who make a good-faith effort to help could not be sued if the victim died or got sicker.

North Carolina already has a "good Samaritan" law that exempts from civil liability people who, for example, help automobile accident victims, Plyler said. But he said the law doesn't cover teachers, students, other employees and volunteers who might respond to emergencies on school grounds.

A public hearing will be held next Thursday on a bill that would let the state's voters grant the governor veto power.

"We're just going to give it a fair hearing," said Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham, chairman of the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore, and backed by Gov. Jim Martin, would schedule a referendum for November 1986. If enacted, the amendment would let the governor reject any bill or item in the state budget.

A three-fifths vote in the House and Senate would be required to override a veto.

A proposed constitutional amendment designed to boost development at the state's airports and seaports won approval of a House committee.

The measure, endorsed by the House Constitutional Amendments Committee and sent to the floor, would permit long-term leases of airport and seaport property.

Airlines and shipping companies would be able to issue tax-free revenue bonds to finance construction of such projects as coal-processing facilities long sought by the Wilmington and Morehead City ports, said Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir.

The House Highway Safety Committee voted to allow 100 percent disabled veterans who already receive a free license plate to park in handicapped spaces. The bill would keep those veterans from having to buy a special plaque.

The committee also approved a bill that would give free license plates to Congressional Medal of Honor winners living in the state. Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said five Medal of Honor winners live in North Carolina.

The House voted 114-0 for a bill to make clear that the Advisory Budget Commission provides consultation rather than taking binding action on issues involving other branches of government.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, said the bill, which goes to the Senate, clarifies a separation of powers doctrine adopted last session when courts ruled the divisions in government had become blurred.

Rep. Barney Woodard, D-Johnston, filed a bill to appropriate $1.24 million in 1985-87 to complete a 10-year dental plan by the Department of Human Resources.

His bill said the plan approved in 1973 was only partially funded since then despite studies showing that people in counties with the plan in effect had 40 percent fewer cavities.

The plan involves dental screening and referral for children, rural school water fluoridation and preventive programs.

Rep. Harold Brubaker, R-Randolph, filed a bill to appropriate $60,000 for the biennium for special olympics.

North Carolina is under a federal mandate to cut commercial and recreational striped bass catches next year by 55 percent, the House Marine Fisheries Committee was told.

Bob Mahood, director of the Marine Fisheries Commission, said the state for years had been in violation of a federal striped bass plan for the Atlantic coast, but is being forced to comply with the plan or face not being allowed to harvest any striped bass.

Mahood said the proposed new rules would cut commercial harvesting of striped bass to 125,000 pounds and drop recreation catches from eight fish to three fish per day. He said other restrictions would require mullet fishermen using nets to tend those nets regularly and release any striped bass caught.

The draft rules would also outlaw any sales of striped bass when the commercial fishing season is closed, even by recreational fishermen.

The committee also approved a bill by Rep. Howard Chapin, D-Beaufort, that would authorize a $30,000 survey for developing artificial reefs along the coast. The survey would analyze locations and the kinds of materials to be used, as well as where those materials would come from.

A bill that would allow counties and cities to make loans to businesses as part of their industrial recruiting efforts was withdrawn from the Senate floor after some members questioned its effect.

Sen. Richard Conder, D-Richmond, said the bill would help counties be more competitive by allowing them to purchase or lease business property to use in attracting industry.

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, offered an amendment that would require local governments to publicize from whom they were acquiring or leasing the property, but he later withdrew the amendment.

Other senators questioned a section that would allow governments to take an equity interest in the business as security on their loans.

Senate OKs Drinking Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would raise the drinking age for beer and wine to 21 and save an estimated $30 million in federal highway funds for the state has won tentative, but unenthusiastic, Senate approval.

"It's not out of enthusiasm that we do it," said Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, who spoke for the bill. "This is about the littlest bill we could put through here and comply with the federal mandate."

Swain said Wednesday the bill was needed because of a federal threat to cut off highway funds to any state that does not raise its drinking age to 21 by October 1986. North Carolina could lose about $30 million over two years without the change.

"It is rank hypocrisy to tell 19- and 20-year-olds they can't drink when their driving rates are better than those age groups above them," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, one of four senators voting against the bill. "If we are supposedly doing this to save lives, then we ought to raise the drinking age to 45. Their rates are worse than 19- and 20-year-olds."

The 43-4 vote came after two amendments by Rep. James McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg, were tabled. Sen. John Jordan, D-Alamance, objected to a final vote on the bill, which has already passed the House.

The bill would raise the minimum age from 19 to 21 Sept. 1, 1986. The change would be canceled if the federal mandate is ruled unconstitutional.

Anti-Poverty Agency Faces Sunset Under Deficit, Changing Attitudes

By SCOTT SHEPARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cornerstone of the Johnson administration's War On Poverty, the Appalachian Regional Commission, is cracking under the weight of the federal deficit and changing attitudes about government's responsibility for economic development.

President Johnson signed the commission into existence 20 years ago, saying the creation of the anti-poverty agency marked "the end of an era of partisan cynicism towards human want and misery."

He praised liberals and conservatives, Democrats and Republicans alike for joining hands to "take up the human challenge of modern Appalachia" — a region of economic despair stretching from Alabama to Canada.

During the two decades since its creation, the Appalachian Regional Commission has funneled $4.9 billion to the poverty-ridden Appalachian regions of 13 states. And its supporters point with pride to the results:

— A 50 percent reduction in the number of Appalachians living in poverty.

— A 50 percent decline in the region's infant mortality rate.

— An increase from 33 percent to 57 percent in the number of Appalachians who have completed high school.

— The construction of nearly 400 health clinics and almost 2,000 miles of highway.

The commission serves a region of more than 20 million people that includes all of West Virginia and parts of Ohio, Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Tennessee and Virginia.

But in 1981 at the request of Congress, the governors of the Appalachian states submitted a report acknowledging the "political realities" of the Reagan administration's fiscal policies. They proposed a five-year program to phase out the commission's health, housing and education programs and an eight-year program to wind up highway construction.

But even though the phase-out program is now in its third year, the commission is "proceeding as if we are very much alive," Executive Director Francis E. Moravitz said in an interview Wednesday. As for the possibility of a congressional reprieve, "no one knows," he added.

The outlook isn't promising, however. The growing federal deficit and the administration's proposed cuts in domestic spending diminish the chances of the commission continuing much longer.

"But the big thing is attitude," Moravitz said. "The president's position is that economic development is a state and local function. That's the political reality."

As a result, the commission is shifting as many resources as possible to complete health, water and vocational training programs in 73 of the 397 counties in the Appalachian region.

"These are the counties that have been left behind," Moravitz said. "These are the most destitute in our region."

The governors of the 13 Appalachian states have reported to Congress that the work of the commission in overcoming the "special problems" of Appalachia is "not complete" and that it is "one program that works."

Moravitz said there is "concern among the governors that, with the program gone, the region will slip back."

Gov. Joe Frank Harris of Georgia voiced those concerns at a recent congressional hearing. He said the commission has had a "very dramatic" impact on Appalachia and that its abrupt termination "would leave a lot of us hanging dry."

At the same hearing, the commission's co-chairman, Winifred Pizzano, an administration appointee, defended the president's repetition of proposals to phase out the agency. "They are part of the administration's wide-ranging efforts to reduce a federal deficit that could otherwise undercut our vigorous national economic growth," she said. "Continuation of that growth can do more to strengthen the economy of Appalachia than any level of federal funds proposed for the commission."

Duke Plan Protested

DURHAM (AP) — The chairman of the Department of Community and Family Medicine at Duke University Medical Center has resigned in protest of the school's plan to phase out the department's family practice program.

"Duke is taking a huge step backward" by making the change, Dr. Harvey Estes said.

The program is scheduled to be phased out over the next four years. It will be replaced by a primary care clinic in the departments of medicine, pediatrics and obstetrics-gynecology that would serve only Duke students, faculty, staff and their families.

The department now provides care for about 23,000 people a year at the Pickens Health Center and the Family Medicine Center. In addition, it also provides medical training and research.

Estes said about 8,000 people who are now treated at the Pickens Health Center would be ineligible for care under the new program. He also said the fate of an occupational health program at the center is uncertain.

In announcing the change last week, Dr. William Anlyan, chancellor of health affairs at Duke, said the new clinic "will be more compatible with the role of a specialty medical center, enabling us to provide comprehensive care at the primary level, with our specialists directly involved as the need arises."

Wicker Decries Reagan Support

GREENSBORO (AP) — New York Times columnist Tom Wicker says he's disturbed that Americans still support President Reagan despite his stands on social programs, defense, arms negotiations and the war in Nicaragua.

"Are we, the American people, going to stand by and support these policies?" Wicker said during a speech Tuesday to the Friends of the Library's annual dinner at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. "It is too early to conclude that the country is so far right that Reagan's visions are the inevitable turn of the wheel, but we're very close to it."

Wicker, a native of Hamlet and a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, said he is disturbed that the American public continues to support Reagan despite his stands on these issues, any one of which could have been the downfall of a less popular president by now.

"Why are we standing still for this kind of government? Is it that we've moved to the right or that President Reagan has us under a spell or that we really think we can use all those missiles he's building more than we can use social programs?"

"There's some very strange thinking going on in this country."

Wicker said Americans are so caught up in chasing wealth they are not thinking about issues that make them uncomfortable.

Lorimar Enters Race For Multimedia

By ROGER GILLOTT
AP Business Writer
CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Lorimar Corp., the creator of television's "Dallas," "Falcon Crest" and "Knots Landing," hopes to acquire Multimedia Inc., a broadcasting and newspaper publishing company, for $1.02 billion.

The cash purchase proposal Wednesday came one day after Multimedia's board approved an offer from its own management to buy the company for cash and notes worth about $53.25 per share, or $890 million.

Lorimar proposed payment of $61 for each share of the Greenville, S.C.-based Multimedia.

Last week, Multimedia management and members of its four founding families rejected an unsolicited $60-per-share proposal by Wesray Inc., a New Jersey investment firm headed by former U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon.

Multimedia officials said Simon's proposal was turned down because it was conditioned upon selling the company's 13 daily and 30 non-daily newspapers. The officials indicated they don't want the company dismantled.

Lorimar officials haven't discussed liquidation of Multimedia's assets, said Lorimar spokeswoman Carol Henry.

Multimedia also owns and operates five television and 12 radio stations, operates more than 100 cable television franchises in four states and produces and syndicates television programs, including the "Phil Donahue Show."

Lorimar, which was founded 16 years ago and has enjoyed a long series of hit TV shows including "Dallas," "Knots Landing" and "Falcon Crest," has been hunting for acquisitions outside its primary field for more than a year.

It made its first venture outside entertainment in August 1983 by purchasing the national advertising firm of Kenyon & Eckhardt, the 16th largest in the country. Last October, it acquired Karl Video Corp., a privately held producer and marketer of home video programs, including the popular "Jane Fonda Workout" series.

In its announcement Wednesday, Lorimar said "the strategic objectives of both companies will be well served by the proposed merger."

Lorimar said it would provide part of the financing for the merger from its own resources, with the rest arranged by its New York investment banker Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

The Lorimar bid is the latest in a series of actual or rumored mergers in the broadcast industry. Last month, Capital Cities Communications agreed to acquire American Broadcast Cos., and takeover talk has involved CBS. For its fiscal year ended July 28, Lorimar reported earnings up 33 percent to $117 million while revenues were up by 43 percent to $263 million. In the first six months of fiscal 1985, it earned $23.4 million, up 175 percent. Revenues were up by 32 percent to $197 million. Last year, Multimedia earned $33.7 million on revenues of $304.4 million, a decrease of 4.3 percent from 1983, when it earned $35.2 million on sales of $269.7 million.

Jaime Farr Wins Star

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Actor Jamie Farr, the cigar-chomping, dress-wearing Cpl. Klinger on the television show "M-A-S-H," has been given the 1,802nd star on Hollywood's Walk of Fame.

About 200 fans attended the ceremony on Wednesday, including "M-A-S-H" co-star Mike Farrell and members of the more than 20 charities that Farr supports, said Monique Moss, spokeswoman for the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

Farr, 38, was originally hired for one day's work as a phony transvestite bucking for a Section 8 discharge, granted by the military to those considered mentally unstable.

But something about the way Farr chomped a cigar under lacey veils and exposed his hairy legs below a skirt clicked with the producers, who eventually signed him on as a regular.

His first film role was that of the mentally retarded student, Santini, in "The Blackboard Jungle." Television credits included appearances on the "The Red Skelton Show," "The Danny Kaye Show" and in "The Dick Van Dyke Show" before joining "M-A-S-H."

Aykroyd Project Upsets Town Hall

ST. CLOUD, Minn. (AP) — City officials weren't laughing over comedian Dan Aykroyd's latest film project. In fact, they said they didn't want any part of it.

"The scenes are terrible," said Mayor Sam Huston said after reading three pages of the script and deciding not to grant permission for the city water tower and police station to be used as sets.

"I don't think it would do a heck of a lot for the city of St. Cloud. They can do anything they want. They can film here. I can't stop them, but I don't have to facilitate them."

"Datenight," produced by Aykroyd, 32, depicts teen-agers spending a Saturday night in a typical town. Scenes planned include a police officer shining a flashlight on a man's bare bottom in a car and a character vomiting, the mayor said.

"Go Spartans" would be painted on the water tower, said Dan O'Connell, director of the Chamber of Commerce in this city of 42,000.

Sue Wilson, a production coordinator, said filming of the Columbia Pictures movie begins next week in Chicago and no decision has been made on whether to use St. Cloud as a location without cooperation by the officials.

Immunity

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Authorities assured an actor that his statements about slayings of two male prostitutes would not be used against him because they did not suspect that he had been involved, a prosecutor said.

Detectives have little independent evidence against Philip Dowell, who has had bit parts in the "General Hospital" television show and the film "Body Rock," said Deputy District Attorney Rita Stapleton, and the men charged have not linked him to the crimes.

FOCUS

Major Breakthrough

On April 11, 1947, the Brooklyn Dodgers took a big chance by introducing a player named Jackie Robinson — the first black player in the major leagues. Before then, blacks had played in the two "Negro Leagues." Those teams often played in the ball parks of major league teams that were out of town. Among the outstanding players in the Negro Leagues were outfielder Cool Papa Bell, catcher Josh Gibson, shortstop John Henry Lloyd and pitcher Satchel Paige.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass 2 ♠ Pass
 2 ♥ Pass 4 ♠ Pass
 Pass Pass
 Opening lead: King of ♠.

Here's a chance to test your technique. How would you plan to play four hearts by South after the lead of the king of diamonds?

North-South were using one of the more useful modern conventions, the Jacoby Transfer Bid. North's bid of two diamonds showed five cards or more in the next higher-ranking suit. South duly "corrected" to hearts, and North bid game.

Against four hearts, West made his natural lead of the king of diamonds. One line is to win, draw trumps and take two finesses in spades. That succeeds whenever East has one of the spade honors, which will occur about 76 percent of the time.

A better line is to hope to strip the minor suits and try for an end play. Suppose you win the ace of diamonds and ruff a diamond. Draw two rounds of trumps, ending in hand, and ruff the remaining diamond. East can foil this plan by winning the first club you concede and shifting to a spade. No matter what you do, you will have to surrender two spades and two clubs because East can win the second club and return another spade.

Winning technique is to combine the end play with a duck at trick one. Allow West to win the king of diamonds. Since he cannot continue diamonds without presenting declarer with a second trick in the suit, West must shift. Let's assume he leads a club. Win the ace, draw one round of trumps, then play the ace and jack of diamonds, discarding two clubs from the table.

On lead with the queen of diamonds, West's best defense is to return a trump. Win with the ten of trumps and ruff a club. Return to hand with a trump and ruff another club. Now run the jack of spades. West wins, but he must either give you a ruff-sluff or lead a spade into your combined tenace. Either way, you lose only two diamonds and a spade.

O Henry Pardon Request Denied

GREENSBORO (AP) — The U.S. Justice Department has denied a request that William Sydney Porter receive a presidential pardon for an 1898 embezzling conviction because the author — better known as O. Henry — is dead, officials said.

A policy of not authorizing presidential pardons of dead people is based "in large part (on) the legal principle that a pardon, like a deed, must be accepted by the person to whom it is directed," said David Stephenson, the department's acting pardon attorney, in a letter to U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C.

"Acceptance, of course, is impossible when the recipient is deceased," Stephenson said.

Helms contacted the Attorney General's office and the White House about a pardon at the request of Greensboro businessman Seth Macon, a member of the committee conducting this week's O. Henry Festival in Greensboro.

Macon contended that Porter, who served three years in prison for the conviction, had paid his debt and subsequently made a huge contribution to the world with his short stories.

In the letter to Helms, Stephenson said, "While I sympathize with the desire of the members of the festival committee to obtain a posthumous pardon for O. Henry, I hope they will understand the limitations upon the president in matters of this kind."

Macon said he was disappointed at the decision, but "I feel a good effort was made. I'm glad we made the effort. I think he got every consideration."

Macon's was not the first attempt to pardon O. Henry. Truman O'Quinn, a retired judge and O. Henry admirer in Austin, Texas, tried some years ago but was turned down for the same reason.

Mather Slaughter Charged in Theft

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Mather Hugh Slaughter, a former state employee whose memos about sheriffs' political loyalties sparked controversy in 1980, has been charged with shoplifting, authorities said.

Slaughter, who was fired earlier this year from his $25,000-a-year job as security adviser for the State Ports Authority in Morehead City, was arrested Tuesday by Jacksonville police officers.

Slaughter, 56, of Newport, is accused of shoplifting a bottle of cologne valued at $7.50 from a Jacksonville grocery and variety store, police said. He was released under a $100 bond.

Slaughter was fired in January from the Morehead City job as part of the sweeping changes of Gov. Jim Martin's administration. In 1984 some of his co-workers at the port complained that Slaughter had a high-paying job with nothing to do.

Port Manager Don McMahan said Wednesday the responsibilities of the job held by Slaughter have been reassigned to two other port employees.

Tiny Baby, Rejected By Hospital, Battling For Life

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — A tiny baby girl who was born 13 weeks early made progress in her battle for life as doctors continued to debate a hospital's refusal to accept her because of her low chance for survival.

Dr. Ken Henderson, director of the neonatal unit at the Medical Center of Central Georgia in Macon, refused to admit the infant Tuesday. But he said Wednesday he would have accepted her if he had been given the child's accurate weight.

But Dr. Michael Weinstein, the staff pediatrician at the Peach County Hospital in Fort Valley where the baby was born, said, "The point is, they (Macon hospital officials) were more interested in the weight and we were more interested in keeping the baby alive."

Jana Kyle Cleveland eventually was taken from the Fort Valley hospital to the Medical College of Georgia Hospital at Augusta, where she was in critical but stable condition early today.

"She's weaning off the ventilator," said her doctor, Gary Billingsley. "She's doing fine."

The child's mother, whose name has been withheld by hospital officials, told The Atlanta Constitution, "They're taking good care of my baby. Jana was strong. She had time. She was lucky... Another child might not be that lucky."

Augusta hospital officials said infants with Jana's birth weight have survival rates of about 30 percent to 50 percent.

Henderson said he refused to admit the infant because doctors in Peach County had estimated her weight at about one pound. When she was weighed after arriving in Augusta, doctors found her weight to be 760 grams, or 12.3 pounds.

"If that's its weight, we would have taken it," Henderson said Wednesday. But he said he would not change his policy against accepting infants from other hospitals weighing less than 500 grams, which he termed "living abortions."

"I don't think it's good policy to run around the state in helicopters with babies when there's no real chance of survival," Henderson said. "There's a limit to what we can do medically, and if it takes a redneck from south Georgia to say that, fine."

Doctors at Peach County said the infant was born about 1:30 p.m. Tuesday after her mother, who had group health insurance, went into natural, premature labor.

Weinstein said doctors could only estimate the child's weight because they didn't want to remove the baby's blanket and life-support systems to take a more accurate reading.

The Peach County Hospital sought help from the Medical Center, a large public hospital in nearby Macon, because it did not have the facilities necessary to keep the child.

Weinstein said, "Most of these babies don't live. But some of them do. This is not an abortion. This is a living baby."

Henderson said he had treated 3,800 infants in 10 years at the Macon hospital and none who weighed less than 600 grams survived. He added that he believed it was wrong to accept a such a small baby and thus suggest to parents and the public that the child could live.

The money devoted to infants with little chance of survival could be better spent on programs to prevent premature birth or equipment for overcrowded intensive care nurseries, Henderson said.

"We just have to set some limits," he said. "Wait until you see what it cost to get the baby over there (to the Medical College)."

Accounting department officials at Augusta's University Hospital, which owns the helicopter used to transport the child, said Wednesday the cost of the trip had not been determined.

Be aware of what's going on in your City's government! Attend the City Council meeting! Regular Council meetings are held on the second Thursday of each month, at 7:30 p.m., in the City Council Chamber.
