Schools Operate Normally

By MARY C. SCHULKEN

Pitt and Greenville schools are continuing to operate normally, school officials said today, despite allegations by the United States Justice Department and a local citizens' group that the two systems have had no legal authority since supposedly improper changes in board membership were made in the 1960s and 1970s.

"We will proceed in our regular operational fashion, as we have since the inception of the school systems," according to Eddie West, superintendent of Pitt and Greenville schools. West said this morning the schools had not been currently served a lawsuit or court order requiring that operations cease.

He also said that no lawsuit or court order was served to the Consolidated Board of Education, which decided Monday it would cease operation because it has "no legal right to function since the boards that formed it have no authority," according to a statement by Chairman Mark Owens.

Allegations of board illegalities by the Concerned Citizens for Justice, a minority group that wants better representation on local governmental boards and reform of electoral processes, and by the U.S. Department of Justice, prompted the Consolidated Board to close shop, Owens said.

The Consolidated Board was formed in March after legislation requiring consolidation of the Pitt and Greenville school systems was ratified by the North Carolina General Assembly. The composition of the board, which includes eight members of the Pitt Board of Education and four members of the Greenville Board of Education, was stipulated in the legislation. At the local level, the terms of the legislation were compiled and approved by the two school boards.

West said the attorney for the General Assembly that prepared the consolidation legislation received verbal approval from the Justice Department of the electoral process and board structure proposed in the legislation. The Department of Justice, however, says it will not formally approve or disapprove legislation until it is acted on by a legislative body.

West said the two current school systems, which the allegations say have been operating with no legal authority, have no intention of shutting down. "We do not anticipate any activities ceasing," he said. "We are confident that diplomas (issued since the date the systems supposedly began operating illegally) are valid." He said school officials "do not anticipate funding being affected in any manner" by the allegations.

West said consultation between the (Please turn to page 9)

Speakers See Need For Another Friday

Thirteen individuals told a University of North Carolina committee Tuesday night that it should find someone who possesses the same qualities as UNC President William Friday when Friday retires in mid-1986.

The comments came at a public meeting of the UNC Board of Governors' search and advisory committees, who are seeking a replacement for Friday, who has headed the UNC system for more than 28 years.

The meeting on the East Carolina University campus was the fifth in a series of six hearings scheduled state-wide by the search committee and its advisory group — which includes chancellors, faculty members, student representatives and private citizens — to give citizens an opportunity to voice their opinions on the future of the university system and on the characteristics and qualifications needed in the next president.

Phillip G. Carson, chairman of the Board of Governors, who presided at the session, told the 30 people attending that the meeting was an opportunity to "hear your views on ... where the University of North Carolina ought to be going."

Stella Daugherty, vice chairman of the faculty senate at ECU, said "in order to interact effectively with the various institutions of the university system" the new UNC president should have "experience and a record of accomplishment in both the academic and administrative aspects of higher education," and "to avoid accusations of preferential treatment," should be a person with "no close ties" to any of the UNC member institutions.

She also suggested that Friday's

Zoning Change For Tar River Area Wins Board's Approval

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A request made by prospective developer Jonathan R. Day to rezone property on the fringe of the Tar River neighborhood from residential/agricultural to high density residential was endorsed Tuesday by the Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission.

The commission, in a vote of 5 to 3, approved Day's request to rezone approximately 17 acres located 100 feet east of Warren Street between the proposed extension of Third Street and the Tar River. Day's request will now be forwarded for consideration by the City Council with a planning and zoning recommendation for acceptance.

Day, acting as agent for property owners, said in discussion period he planned to purchase the property and construct patio, town and detached single-family homes, all of which he said will be owner occupied. He added he had also talked with area residents about his development plans as directed by the Planning and Zoning Commission in its March meeting when members elected to continue the request for 30 days to see if a compromise could be reached.

Day said he offered a compromise in the form of a 15-foot landscaped buffer with continuous rows of evergreens and red tips. Day said he also offered residents the right to use common ground by the Tar River and around the proposed development. Saying the property he hopes to purchase is only 438-feet wide, Day said it would not be economical to provide more than a 15-foot buffer.

TOWN COMMONS LIGHTS?

What ever happened to the lights on the Greenville Town Commons on First Street by the Tar River. I believe it is quite dangerous to walk down there at night. T.E.

"The reason we started about two years ago to not use the lights on the Commons except on special occasions was to conserve energy," Boyd Lee, city Recreation and Parks Department director, said. He said there originally were about 50 or 60 lights and, while the Commons was beautiful with them lit, complaints from citizens poured in about the energy waste. He said lots of money has been saved by not using the lights and yours is the first complaint that he's heard.

WILLIAMSTON — Hundreds of people, from homes, businesses and the Holiday Inn in Williamston, were evacuated for a couple of hours Tuesday afternoon following an ammonia leakage due to a burst hose in an ammonia transport truck.

"We received a call at 4:56 p.m. informing us that a hose had burst while ammonia was being loaded onto a transport truck," said Capt. Jim Hill of the Williamston Fire Department.

The mishap occurred at Harris and Lilley Royster Distributing Co. on the U.S. 64 bypass. The firm is located behind the New Dixie Tobacco Warehouse, about 500 yards from Holiday Inn.

Rain Refreshes But Fire Ban Continues

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The rain which has fallen on Pitt County since Monday has brought welcome refreshment to crops and hay fever sufferers, but farmers and firefighters are hoping for more precipitation.

Tuesday's thunderstorm brought only .18 inch of rain, according to records at the Greenville Water Plant. A total of .35 inch of rain has been recorded at the facility since Monday.

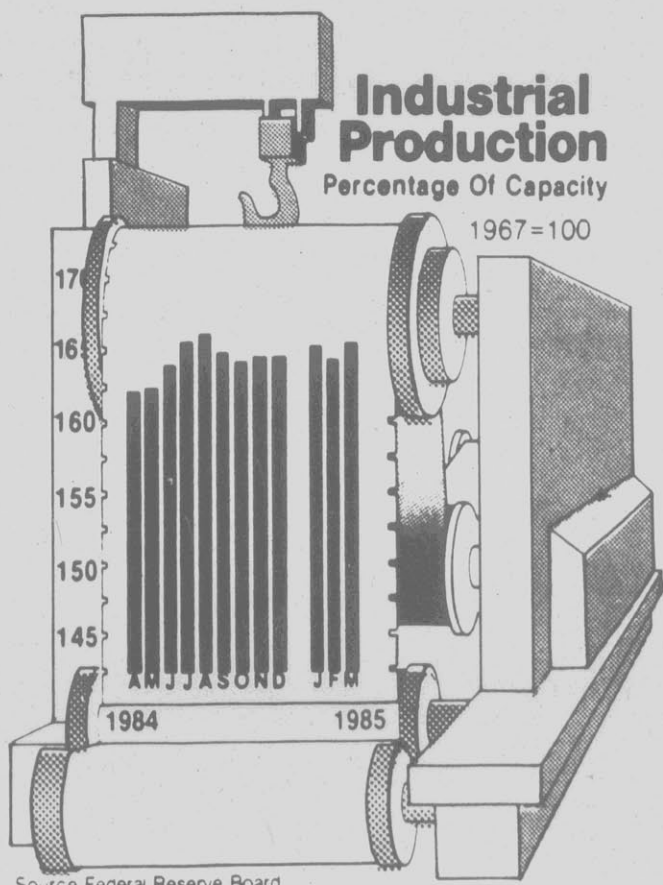

Although scattered showers have settled the dust in Pitt County, the burning ban still is in effect.

Pitt County Forest Ranger Mark Webb said, "With the high gusty winds and the low humidity, things will dry right out again and there will be a danger of fires. If the wind will stay down and the humidity will stay up, we would need one or two inches of rain over several days" in order to reduce the chance of fires.

"Even though it is not a lot, the rain we received will be a big help," said Leroy James, Pitt County extension chairman. "The wheat crops have been really hurting and the tobacco, corn and strawberries needed rain. Every little bit of rain we get helps."

But according to James, "Pitt County would be happy with an inch of good, slow rain."

Perfume History Is Prepared For Industry

Ruth B. Scott and Andrew F. Erickson were married March 13 in Cora's Grove Church in Burgaw. Jerome Lipka, son-in-law of the bridegroom of Wisconsin, officiated at the double ring ceremony.

The church was decorated with a pedestal basket of assorted white and pink flowers, double tapered candelabra, palms and plants.

Peggy Smith played "I Love You Truly," "The Wedding March" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride wore a blue georgette ballerina length gown with a headpiece of white and blue flowers with a short lace veil attached. She wore a single strand of pearls and carried orchids.

Attendants were Mae Sharpe, Helen Hanchey and Ruth Howard. Bernice Hanchey was usher. The bridegroom's daughter, Pamela Lipka, was a special guest.

Cora Lee Wells was hostess at the reception which was held after the ceremony. She also made the wedding cake.

The couple will live in Glen Meade Village in Wilmington after a wedding trip to Hilton Island, Beaufort and Charleston, S.C., and Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Erickson, a native of Wilmington, was a business teacher in Morehead City and retired from East Carolina University as a counselor and resident director. Mr. Erickson, a native of Chicago, is a retired C.P.A. and U.S. Treasury Department.

Paid Announcement

pored through 20,000 magazines dating back to 1880, according to the May issue of Connoisseur, in order to build a memory bank of perfume advertisements.

In her handsome office near the Champs-Elysees, Delbourg-Delphis has cross-referenced data on 6,000 perfumes, cataloguing styles in scent and bottles. For 4,000 fragrances, she can display photos of all the ads she could find.

She notes each perfume's family — floral, cypress, fern, amber or leather — and its subfamilies. She also has created categories and themes of her own. One of her 11 themes, love, has such subthemes as thrilling, naive, sinful, crazy, pure and platonic.

Delbourg-Delphis's work was proposed and financed by Saint Gobain Desjonqueres, the world's leading perfume bottle maker, and at first it seemed she might be able to map cyclic trends that would prove valuable to perfume marketers.

Perfume success turned out to be highly unpredictable. She told magazine writer G.Y. Dryansky that the strength of the French perfume industry from 1880 to the 1950s was its enthusiasm for "trying everything" and its "fear of nothing."

She applauded the sort of courage designer Elsa Schiaparelli showed in 1937 by launching her Shocking scent in a bottle shaped like the dressmaker's dummy she used to create a dress for Mae West.

Perfume ads in this century have tried to hitchhike on popular fads. Tango, in 1914, caught onto the dance craze, as the ill-fated Rock 'n' Roll tried to do in 1959. Vol de Nuit in 1933 evoked the excitement and luxury of early air travel.

Flirt in 1909 took its name from a newly popular word in play and book titles and marked a shift in a woman's role from totally passive to more active.

There also were general trends. "In the '20s, for example," she said, "more than 50 percent of the fragrances evoked dreams of movement and travel; more than 50 percent of them were aimed at providing a psychological lift."

"In the '30s, there was an emphasis on sport and on luxury. Bouquets and a strong presence of lavender were a '30s style of fragrance. The heavy bouquet of Joy spoke of luxury. Lighter florals expressed sportiveness."

Delbourg-Delphis concluded from her research that the true secret weapon of a successful perfume is the smell itself, and its resilience.

One example is Jicky, a scent created in 1889 by Aime Guerlain. It still sells well. Jean-Paul Guerlain, current creator at the house that bears his name, said his great uncle's simple criterion for Jicky was that "it smelled very good."

Delbourg-Delphis pointed to the differences between two of today's most popular fragrances — Opium and Anais Anais — as examples of the unpredictable perfume market.

"Anais Anais is not at all amber, as Opium is, but floral: lily and honeysuckle," she said. "Its attraction is not naughty, like Opium's, but is romantic, with a secondary attraction of nature."

The value of her computer memory bank is not to be an infallible guide to successful perfume marketing, she told Connoisseur, but to reveal a vast warehouse of forgotten but reusable ideas.

DEAR ABBY: I wish to respond to "Hurt in Albany, Ore.," who complained because her husband never remembered her on special occasions such as birthdays, anniversaries, Valentine's Day, etc.

I had a husband who never remembered me on special occasions either, so instead of sitting around feeling sorry for myself, I bought myself a present and told everyone it was from him.

On one occasion, I bought myself a beautiful diamond wristwatch. That was only the beginning.

Forget what he wants; get what you want. My husband has been dead for 15 years, and I still get beautiful gifts from "him" for every occasion.

BEEN THROUGH IT

DEAR BEEN: That's one way of handling a thoughtless spouse. Here's another:

DEAR ABBY: I want to tell "Hurt" that I share her disappointment. However, my husband went one step further. He always remembered his brother, sister-in-law and his friends on all gift-giving occasions, even though these people never gave him so much as the time of day!

Yet he continually forgot me and our 5-year-old daughter. After eight years of one-way gift giving, I presented my husband with a gift he will never forget: a divorce.

FED UP
IN MOUNT HOLLY, N.J.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 25-year-old woman who for the past year has been living with a 30-year-old man. We have similarly demanding jobs. When we moved in together, I expected to be treated like a girlfriend, roommate and friend. Instead I am being treated like a wife, cook and servant.

I am neat and meticulous. He is a lazy slob. We have been fighting daily for the last six months because I've found that I am expected to do all the grocery shopping, laundry, meal preparation and housekeeping. (This guy eats like a horse and snacks 24 hours a day, leaving the

MUSEUM GETS GIFT OF BOOKS

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — "Over 1,100 modern illustrated books, forming one of the finest and largest art collections ever received by the Toledo Museum of Art, were presented as a 1984 gift from Molly and Walter Bareiss," Roger Mandle, museum director, said recently.

Mandle said that with the gift "the museum will have one of the country's most important and comprehensive collections devoted to the art of the book."

A major strength of the collection is the more than 70 books illustrated by Pablo Picasso. Other artists represented in the collection include Leonard Baskin, Pierre Bonnard, Andre Derain and Henri Matisse.

TREASURY OF SAN MARCO

NEW YORK (AP) — "The Treasury of San Marco," an exhibition drawn from the greatest surviving repository of precious objects still in their original western Medieval setting, is on view at the Metropolitan Museum of Art through June 2.

The Basilica of San Marco in Venice was both the spiritual and temporal center of the Republic of Venice for nearly 1,000 years. The treasury, which houses the relics, icons and liturgical furniture of the basilica, was part of the fabric of San Marco from its construction. It symbolizes the wealth and influence of the city during the centuries when Venice was one of the most powerful states of Europe and the Mediterranean East.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I agree with Miss Manners. Social kissing is getting out of hand in this country.

What started out as an emotional embrace between families who had not seen one another in 20 years now has all the tenderness of a farsighted eagle feeding her young.

Everyone puckers and pecks these days. Starlets from the green room present their cheek to the talk show host whom they have just seen five minutes before. People at lunch hurriedly wipe crumbs from their mouths and bury their faces in your hair. Visitors to the sick in hospitals lean over long, white lifeless forms in short dresses and God knows WHAT they're embracing.

From sheer habit the other day, I nearly buzzed a man who came to change the thermostat in my oven.

The problem of kissing hello is twofold: First, we all do it or no one does it. Second, if we decide to do it, there have to be some rules.

There's a block of die-hard kissers who refuse to exchange lips with anyone but their mother and their dog. My husband is one of these. If someone wanted to give him mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, he would refuse until he had been formally introduced.

He regards kissing as a clear-inhouse for germs and wants no part of it. When he is confronted by a social kisser he stands with his arms hanging limply to his side and his body erect.

It is like making a pass at a food blender. There's a lot of people like my husband who must be converted if kissing is to continue.

I am shocked that kissing has continued so long without rules. This has created a lot of problems like stepping on feet, bumping noses, getting hair caught in braces, having glasses lock, lipstick in strange places and general confusion.

There is no need for this. If ships can pass in the night without radar, people can kiss without hurting one another. When you approach the kisses, give a quick appraisal of things that puncture: pens, credit cards with sharp edges, key rings, packages, etc., and mumble, "You look wonderful."

Then, stepping forward with your RIGHT foot to maintain balance, firmly grasp one another's hand and aim for the left side of the face. LEFT, that is important. Pucker the lips, close the eyes (to avoid foreign objects striking you blind) and

Teachers

The California school district teacher-recruiter who visited East Carolina University brought a message we've heard before in North Carolina: the teacher shortage is growing.

Melvin Belcher of Bakersfield (Calif.) says his school district could hire every one of ECU's 34 grads in intermediate education this year and put them immediately to work, but not even that would solve his district's need for teachers.

Some months ago Tar Heels were warned a large number of their teachers were at or near the retirement age and if they abruptly decided to lay down their textbooks for good, it would be difficult to fill the vacancies. Accompanying that warning was a reminder fewer young people were opting for teaching careers because opportunities for more income in other fields were too attractive.

Belcher confirmed a nationwide teacher shortage is worsening.

Other states know about it. During the past two years many governors and school reformers have been pressing for pay hikes to attract brighter recruits into the profession. Some gains have been made, but they fall short of needs.

The National Education Association says classroom teacher salaries have risen 7.3 percent in the past year ... a good signal that one need has been recognized and remedial steps sought. But there's more to it than that.

Other factors are involved in making a teaching career more attractive. Among them are better working conditions, higher student performance, increased classroom discipline and increased respect for teachers, they tell us.

It is worth noting a large share of the desired changes lies in pupil attitudes and parental attitudes toward individual teachers and their professional role.

In light of a growing nationwide shortage in what must be regarded as being one of our more crucial social needs, North Carolinians must be prepared to compete for the services of even our homegrown product, as well as looking beyond our borders for those whom outside recruiters are already enticing.

Time Change

While most Americans are looking forward to daylight saving time (it begins April 28), at least two are so impatient they would have the change moved up to the first Sunday in March.

Sens. Alan Cranston of California and Clayton Pell of Rhode Island are in favor of an earlier start on DST. The lawmakers represent opposite sides of the country, and we have read they claim an earlier time-change has wide public support.

Somehow, we missed that. The first we've read of a groundswell was over the past weekend.

There have been past efforts to advance the accustomed change-date, and they had the support of organizations such as the Amateur Softball Association and the National Retinitis Pigmentose Foundation. (This is no joke. Together they represent a lot of constituents.)

Senators Cranston and Pell argue the extra evening light would save energy ... the equivalent of 100,000 barrels of oil; so one cannot shrug off the possibility of a date-change for daylight saving.

The advocates obviously have an army of supporters between them.

We have not heard the last of this.

Two Views Of Russian History

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's inclination to believe that the Soviet Union is obsessed with fear of U.S. power because of invasions throughout history stems from a romanticized cultural history of czarist Russia that some administration officials wish he had never been given to read.

The president read "Land of the Firebird" last autumn and invited its author, Suzanne Massie, to brief him. The exposition of her Russian sentiments came at lunch in the White House just before his three-and-one-half-hour session with Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko last Sept. 28. Ms. Massie was one of many experts, including Henry Kissinger, who prepped the president for his Gromyko talk that ended three years of worsening U.S.-Soviet relations.

The senior aide who steered

Reagan to Ms. Massie's cultural history is no Soviet scholar and consequently failed to anticipate its effect. "The president is a romantic, and therefore highly emotional," a former aide familiar with both the man and the subject told us, explaining why the book was bound to have a "terrific impact" on him.

That impact seems partially responsible for Reagan's opinion, stated several times recently, that the Soviets "have suspicions they think are legitimate with regard to our intent." It also helps explain his unexpectedly quiet reaction to the slaying of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr., during a routine snooping mission at Soviet facilities in East Germany.

Ironically, a single sentence from Nicholson's master's thesis (published by the Baltimore Sun last week) may reveal Soviet motivations more accurately than Ms. Massie's voluminous recital of explanations for Russian fear. "The Soviet alternative (to mutual deterrence) is a concept of peace founded on (superior) strategic power," he wrote.

Ms. Massie's colorful history of czarist Russia stops before the October 1917 Bolshevik revolution. Her only mention of Lenin reveals that his grandfather was born a serf. What clearly moved Reagan are her vivid descriptions of foreign invasions.

"The Russian land was conquered and covered with blood, every Russian town ... burned and sacked" after the Mongol invasion in the 13th century, she writes. She quotes Napoleon 600 years later watching Moscow put to the torch in Russia's scorched-earth policy: "To burn one's own cities ... what savage determination! What a people! What a people!"

Contradicting Reagan, skeptics disavow the theory that supposed Russian fear explains historic Russian expansionism, which communism has now brought to its zenith. "That theory makes Russian history appear just the way the Russians want it perceived," Zbigniew Brzezinski, President Carter's national security aide and occasional adviser to Reagan and Secretary of State George Shultz, told us.

The notion is also contradicted by Professor Richard Pipes of Harvard, Reagan's former adviser on U.S.-Soviet relations. He has written that out of 38 Russian wars during the 18th and 19th centuries, 36 were offensive, only two defensive.

Little News For Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Congress girds for renewal of the budget debate, the question for Democrats is whether the issues of the 1984 presidential campaign can work better for them in 1985 than they did for Walter F. Mondale.

The latest look back at President Reagan's landslide re-election comes from a top Mondale aide who suggests the budget issue is a tough one for the Democrats to exploit.

Surely, Mondale and other Democrats received some satisfaction from watching David Stockman, the Reagan budget director, squirm on national television when he was pressed on the question of budget deficits.

In an appearance on NBC's "Meet The Press," Stockman was offering his customary lecture on how Americans could not continue living beyond their means.

"Well, whose fault is it that we're living beyond our means?" he was asked.

"Well, it's a lot, a lot of fault over a long period of time," responded the budget director, whose term in office has seen record deficits every year.

"The deficit has skyrocketed in the last four years, right?" pressed the questioner.

"Well, the deficit has been building, I think, for the last 20 years," said Stockman.

"Hasn't it really gone up dramatically in the last four years?" the questioning continued.

"Well, it has gone up in the last four years," said the budget director.

"Dramatically?"

"Dramatically," Stockman finally conceded.

The day of Stockman's deficit discomfort, Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., was on the CBS program "Face The Nation," trying to convince viewers that the proposal to trim the cost of living increase for Social Security recipients did not represent a broken campaign promise by Reagan.

"It sure isn't true that he's gone back on a promise," said Armstrong, "and, in fact, those who accuse Mr. Reagan of that are way off the mark."

The Colorado senator portrayed the president as a hero who intervened at the last moment to save retirees from a more stringent proposal to freeze the cost of living adjustment.

While those two television appearances offered some comfort to the Democrats, they got precious little the next day from a look back on the 1984 campaign by William Galston, who was issues director of the Mondale campaign.

In his analysis published by the Brookings Institution, Galston agreed with some of what Mondale said recently about his landslide defeat.

But Galston's analysis went much deeper than what his candidate offered.

Mondale blamed himself for offering too negative a vision to the voters. Galston agreed, but his analysis of why Mondale took that tack has a bearing on the current budget debate.

Reagan stuck to his long-term position that, whatever the question, the answer was less government.

According to Galston, "The budget deficit combined with popular sentiment made it difficult to articulate the traditional Democratic case for a more active government. ...

"So for lack of any other credible alternative, Mondale ran as a conservative. He argued that we should retain roughly the government we now have, reorder its priorities modestly, manage it more prudently — and pay for it. His case was sober and responsible. But it lacked inspiration and hope."

But if Mondale was unwilling to talk about shrinking government to cut the deficit, he had no hesitation about saying a tax increase would be needed to cut the red ink, a proposal Galston described as "an editorial success, but on balance a political liability."

Despite what the Mondale adviser called "the administration's distortions" of the Mondale proposal, Galston said that by Election Day polling showed that 55 percent of the voters agreed with the Democratic candidate that taxes would have to go up.

The bad news for Mondale and for his party in the current debate was that, at least in 1984, voters believe they would get a better break if Reagan were raising their taxes than if it were Mondale.

"Mondale and the Democratic Party lacked credibility as advocates of fiscal prudence" wrote Galston. "Americans were far more inclined to blame Congress or even Jimmy Carter for the deficit than Ronald Reagan."

The upcoming budget debate may offer some hints of whether that still is the case.

Strength For Today

Is there such a thing as equality among men? We of the free nations are committed to political equality. Everyone who has any faith at all believes that all human beings are equal before God. The naked savage and the Nobel Prize winner are one and the same before the Almighty. You may have within your household children of vastly different capacities. Do you love the untalented less than the talented? Of course not. So it is with God.

Spiritually and politically we are equal. But we have to accept the manifest inequalities which we all have with regard to capacities and gifts. We shall all be judged on the way we have used what we had, not on what we achieved. This means that the most untalented person sometimes becomes a person of vast significance in his or her generation. This is part of the meaning of the phrase so often repeated, "Equal in the sight of God."

Selecting A Judge

I knew Rotary wanted to be a federal judge, but I didn't know how badly until I found him at his desk perspiring as he filled out a questionnaire.

"What's that?"

"It's a series of questions I have to answer correctly to satisfy the ultra-right wing that I'm worthy of having a seat on the bench."

"Why are you trying to satisfy the ultra-right?" I asked him.

"Because Ronald Reagan listens to them when he decides who gets the federal judgeships. A judicial candidate has to swear he buys the whole conservative ideology or he can't get appointed deputy bail bondsman in a traffic court."

"What kind of questions are they asking you?"

"They want to know how I'll rule on abortion."

"You're going to have to rule for it if you want to be a federal judge. It's the law of the land."

"It may be the law of the land, but the ultras believe a federal judge has to ignore the law if a fetus is at stake."

"So what are you putting down?" I asked him.

"Here's what I wrote. 'As a federal judge I have no choice but to let my conscience take precedence over any Supreme Court decision — so help me God. Do you think it's strong enough?"

"The devil only knows what will satisfy them. What else are they asking you?"

"Would I have any hesitation frying a man in the electric chair?"

"That's a good right-to-life question. Would you?"

"Not if I could send him to the gas chamber first. You see, I don't want them to think I'm partial to just one kind of death penalty."

"So far it sounds like you're their kind of guy."

"Those are the easy ones. They also want to know how I feel about prayers in school."

"That shouldn't be hard. Say you're for them."

"Of course I said I'm for them. But the second part is multiple choice. Listen to this. 'If you answered yes, tell when: (A) in the morning, (B) at lunchtime, (C) all day long.'"

"I'd put down 'C,' just to play it safe," I told him.

"There's no legal precedent for 'C,'" he said.

"There's no legal precedent for asking you all those other questions, either."

Rotary looked at the sheet. "Do I believe everyone in America should own a gun?"

"I should hope so. How else would the good guys kill the bad guys in the subways?"

"Where do I stand on the Equal Rights Amendment?"

"Tell 'em 'right on top of Phyllis Schlafly.'"

"They want a list of all the political groups I've donated money to in the last 10 years, the name of anyone in the neighborhood who does not support covert aid to Nicaragua, a list of members of my family who still believe in Darwin's theory of evolution and any bus drivers I know who are actively involved in school busing."

"You know something?" I said. "After listening to all this garbage I've decided you demean yourself by answering a questionnaire from a bunch of right-wing kooks just to get a seat on the federal court."

"Oh yeah?" he said. "They may be kooks, but they also happen to be United States senators. As far as the White House is concerned, when it comes to selecting judges, the right-wing zealot's word is law."

H.B. Sugg Principal Submits Resignation

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

H.B. Sugg School Principal Frederick Graham has resigned his position effective June 30, 1985.

Members of the Pitt County Board of Education accepted Graham's resignation at the board's recent monthly meeting. Graham has headed the Farmville school, which houses kindergarten students and grades four and five, for 15 years. He served as principal at North Fountain High School from 1966-70, then came to H.B. Sugg, then a high school facility.

The board released no information on the reasons for Graham's resignation.

Board members also heard a report on Pitt County's proposed master plan for elementary and secondary guidance from guidance committee members Arlene Murphy Ferren, Sandra Houston and Betty Speir. The guidance plan explains the current status of the guidance program in the school system, identifies goals and objectives targeted for improvement and recommends future improvements.

Specific recommendations include better public relations for the guidance departments, more in-service work for both guidance counselors and teachers, according to North Pitt counselor Betty Speir. The plans also recommends, Mrs. Speir said, that every school have access to a counselor. Currently, eight schools in the county do not have counselors.

It also recommends, she added, that responsibility for the exceptional children's programs be removed from the guidance departments. "The exceptional children's program is one of the most time-consuming duties that counselors have," Mrs. Speir said. "It requires much administrative work — approximately one-third of a counselor's time is spent doing just this kind of work."

In other business:
•Vocational Education Director Carl Toot reported that the county is currently seeking a coordinator for the county's proposed health occupations program. A health occupations steering committee is currently working on employee needs and providing resource persons from the health community to assist in program needs. A health occupations program is designed, Toot said, to provide students with skills in the allied health careers.

Job Level Climbed During 1984

For the second year, North Carolina's employment rose and unemployment dropped, according to Donald M. Cruse, regional commissioner for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, U.S. Department of Labor, in Atlanta.

The unemployment rate declined to an average of 6.7 percent in 1984, compared to 8.9 percent in 1983. The national unemployment rate stood at an average of 7.5 percent for 1984, down from 9.6 percent in 1983.

Unemployment rates for men dropped substantially in 1984 — from 7.9 percent to 5.4 percent — reflecting a recovery in construction and manufacturing industries. The rate for women was 8.3 percent in 1984.

Teen-age unemployment continued to be above that of adults and stood at 20.2 percent of the teenage labor force.

13 Plead Guilty To Beer Charge

Thirteen of 24 persons arrested by state Alcohol Law Enforcement Division officers and Greenville police March 14 on charges of selling malt beverages — beer — to persons under 19 years of age pleaded guilty to the charges in District Court Tuesday and were given 90-day suspended sentences.

The remaining 11 defendants, charged following an undercover investigation during which a 17-year-old was sent into stores to attempt to purchase beer, are scheduled for trial on May 2.

The 90-day jail terms given those who pled guilty Tuesday were suspended on payment of a $50 fine and court costs.

Those pleading guilty, and the stores for which they worked included: Edna Gay, Ayden, Greene Street Texaco; William Louis Jones, Greenville, Sam & Dave's Snack Bar; Laura Lee Williams, Route 1, Chocowinity, the Fuel Dock; David Paul Britt Jr., Kash & Karry (405 E. 14th St.); Jeffrey Earl House, 812 Fleming St.; Shop-A-Lot Convenient Mart; Donald Dwayne McKinny, 103 Holiday Court, Fresh Way Food Store (1401 Dickinson Ave.).

Others included: Windy Dee West, Route 4, Greenville, Value Fair (1212 N. Greene St.); Marion Mobley, Winterville, Kash & Karry (Route 5, Greenville); David Paul O'Brien, 505 Ringgold Road, 14th and Charles Streets Texaco; Donna Jean Hales, Route 1, Winterville, Shop-Eze Foodland (1414 Charles St.); Angie LDoreen Harris, Route 1, Winterville, Shop-Eze Foodland (West End Shopping Center); Phyllis Marie Branch, Grifton, Earl's Convenient Mart (Route 1, Greenville); and Loyce Dawn Clark, Route 6, Greenville, Convenient World (Route 2, Greenville).

In all, the undercover operation checked 49 Greenville-area stores and two outlets near Farmville, and clerks in 24 of the stores sold beer to the under-age purchaser. In three of the cases, clerks sold beer to the minor even after the youth's identification was checked.

In all, 53 percent of the outlets checked during the investigation asked to check the youth's identification.

PCMH Board To Phase In Employee Benefit Program

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Trustees voted Tuesday night to phase in over the next two years an employees benefits program that would include a flexible compensation plan.

The plan, which would allow each person who has been employed by the hospital for at least a year to choose a variety of benefits, including various health insurance, life insurance and day care, that would be tax-sheltered since they would be benefits, not salary. The hospital is contracting with Hewitt Associates of Atlanta to administer the plan. It is expected to cost the hospital about $50,000 more than its present benefits program during the first 12 months.

Approval was given for the hospital administration to employ consultant Dick Sawyer to develop a long-range facilities plan in preparation for submitting a certificate of need in September for further additions to the hospital plant. Sawyer said the largest component of the new additions would be additions to the clinical laboratory space. Additional space, he said, appears to be needed in admitting, discharge pre-admission testing, Neonatal Intensive Care, psychiatric beds, and ambulatory and group care in rehabilitation. Asked how much the entire project might cost, he said he estimated "$15 to $16 million over time."

It was reported that, in the computer selection process now under way, the choice has been narrowed to four vendors. During the executive committee meeting prior to the board meeting, it was told that the hospital's request for project review approval of the computer system by the Health Systems Agency has been tabled. More information is needed, the administrators were told.

No results have been received from the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals survey conducted April 2-4, but those involved said they feel that it was "the best one ever," Fred Brown, hospital vice president, said he is betting on "full three-year accreditation."

It was reported that in the first eight days of operation, EastCare air ambulance service has transported 12 critically ill or injured patients. Seven were taken to PCMH, two to Duke University Medical Center and two to Wake Medical Center. Three requests have been turned down because of distance, weather or because it was deemed that the patient was not critical.

It was announced that task forces are being set up in various departments to study ways to overcome communication problems cited by employees in a recent employee opinion survey. May 1 is a target date to have these plans formulated, Brown said.

Approval was given for the purchase of a blood gas analyzer with interface and printer for pathology-chemistry at $19,000; a 72-well Lambda Dot reagent dispenser for pathology at $7,500; and an arrhythmia detection module for 3 North B at $86,234.

The accounting firm Farley, Prescott and Mizelle was approved for auditing the hospital's accounts for the 1985-86 fiscal year for a $25,400 fee.

Visitors from a Midwestern firm which manages small hospital services will be here the last week in April for visits to some hospitals in the region and discussion of possibly contracting with the East Carolina Health Services agency, a subsidiary of PCMH, for management of various services at some of the regional hospitals.

Dr. Thomas O'Brien, chief of staff, reported that a plan for operating the hospital when all beds are filled is being developed and that an ethics committee of the medical staff is being formed.

Dr. William Laupus, dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, reported that a director of the Radiation Therapy program has been chosen. Dr. Charles Scaramino, now a member of the faculty of Bowman Gray School of Medicine, will begin work officially July 1, but will begin before then setting up the program.

CAROLINA TELEPHONE GIFT — Dr. William E. Laupus, vice chancellor and dean of the East Carolina University School of Medicine, accepts an annual gift of $3,000 from Tom Morrow (right), division public affairs manager, and Dick Flye, district commercial manager. Carolina Telephone has been a long-time supporter of the medical school.

Accidents Cause $7,900 In Damage

An estimated $7,900 damage resulted from a series of seven traffic collisions investigated by Greenville police on Tuesday.

Officers said heaviest damage resulted when cars driven by Paul Williams Jr. of Rpute 6, Greenville, and Sandra Lassiter Jones of Route 3, Greenville, collided about 5:22 p.m. at the intersection of 10th Street and Cedar Lane.

Damage from the collision was set at $1,000 to the Williams car and $800 to the Jones vehicle.

Cars driven by Henry Vernon Weeks of 407 Sedgfield Drive and Thomas Earl Smith of Winterville collided about 7:08 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 200 feet north of the Trade Street intersection, causing $1,400 damage to the Weeks car and $100 damage to the Smith auto.

Police charged Weeks with failing to reduce his speed enough to avoid an accident in connection with the collision.

Robert Lee Little Jr. of 108 Fairwood Lane was charged with following too closely following investigation of a 6:25 p.m. collision on Memorial Drive, 400 feet north of the Chestnut Street intersection.

Investigators said the Little car collided with a truck driven by Lloyd Keith Willard of Edgewood Trailer Park, causing $1,000 damage to the Little car and $400 damage to the truck.

Cars driven by James Cameron McNeill of 1706 Forest Hills Circle and Terri Renae Searce of 324 Springhill Road collided about 5:47 p.m. on Greenville Boulevard, 500 feet east of the Arlington Boulevard intersection, causing $1,000 damage to the Searce car and $50 damage to the McNeill auto.

Police charged McNeill with failing to see his intended movement could be made in safety following investigation of the mishap.

Officers said Lorraine Pearson of 1507A N. Washington St. was charged with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety after her car collided with a vehicle driven by Lisa Hart Smith of Route 2, Ayden, about 5:07 p.m. at the intersection of 10th and Evans streets.

Damage from the collision was set at $400 to the Pearson car and $500 to the Smith auto.

Cars driven by Marcia Wentworth Hendrick of Tice Trailer Park and Carolyn Hester Alford of Winterville, collided about 7:26 p.m. on Memorial Drive, 50 feet north of the Greenville Boulevard intersection. Investigators, who charged Ms. Hendrick with failing to see her intended movement could be made in safety, set damage at $300 to the Hendrick car and $400 to the Alford vehicle.

Zoning ...

Mickey Herrin, a local attorney representing area residents opposing Day's request, said Day had talked with residents, but residents felt a 15-foot buffer wasn't enough. Herrin also said in later comments that residents would prefer the area be rezoned to encourage further single-family development.

Responding to questions asked by Herrin, city staff told the audience and commissioners that multifamily development occupies approximately 60 percent of the area surrounding Warren Street — a street Herrin said is historically single-family.

Warren Street is now surrounded on two sides (west and south) by property zoned R-6, which allows construction of single-family, duplex and multifamily dwellings. The Tar River serves as Warren Street's northern boundary. The property Day is interested in developing, now zoned residential/agricultural, serves as the eastern boundary to Warren Street. Day already owns property zoned for single-family, duplex and multifamily development on the south side of Warren Street. That property adjoins the acreage up for rezoning.

Commissioners opposing the request were Wallace Woole, Danny Jacobson and Burney Warren. Those voting in favor of the request were Charles Ziehr, Dennis Alexander, Les Turner, Jim Ward and Rufus Keel.

"We took immediate action to evacuate everyone at Holiday Inn, and those living in homes and in businesses behind the chemical company," Hill explained. The area evacuated extended down U.S. 17 toward downtown and north on the U.S. 17-64 bypass to a point at the turn-off to Plymouth at the Tin Lizzie Restaurant. The exact number evacuated is not known, but Hill said it ran into several hundred people altogether.

Within a short time 26 firemen, plus about 25 to 30 personnel from local police, sheriff and highway departments, arrived on the scene. "Fireman took care of getting into the plant to shut the valves off to the burst hose leading into the transport truck, while men from the other departments evacuated people to a safe distance from the scene," Hill explained.

At 7:19 p.m., the fumes had abated and the area declared safe for evacuees to return to their homes, businesses and to Holiday Inn.

"There were no injuries, no one was overcome by the fumes," Hill said.

No charges have been made against the Harris and Lilley firm.

replacement should have an earned doctorate, be "politically astute but not necessarily a politician," be committed to the advancement of education for all, and have "the tact and judgment to direct the system smoothly into a coherent unit."

Dr. Lawrence Hough, a delegate to the faculty assembly and a member of the ECU faculty advisory committee on presidential search, said "it would seem that this position requires at one and the same time a humane person, an intellectual and pragmatic person, a reasonable and reasoning person and a sympathetic, compassionate person."

Hough continued by saying that Friday's replacement should have a strong educational background with teaching experience at both the undergraduate and graduate levels, "with ... awareness and sympathy for the different student types which our institution attracts..." as well as a person "able to understand the nuances of and communicate clearly with the various constituencies of the university ... the students, the faculties, the administrators and alumni groups ... the tax-paying public and their elected representatives..."

Ed Walker, president of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, said the ECU School of Medicine "is a good example of how higher education can extend service" to the citizens of the community. "I hope the next president" of the UNC system is as aware of the needs of this area as Friday has been, Walker said.

Jack Edwards, a local businessman and coordinator of the Pitt Community College's small business center, characterized Friday as "a people person" and said "what we need is a people person like we have now."

Citing the affiliation agreement under which Pitt County Memorial Hospital serves as the teaching hospital for the ECU medical school, Kelly Barnhill, chairman of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners, said the county has enjoyed "excellent relations" with the UNC system. "This could not have happened without the great leadership of President Friday," Barnhill suggested.

school systems, the citizens' group and the Justice Department are continuing. Representatives from the four agencies will continue "analysis of the situation and determination of the specific issues and sub-issues involved," West said.

The Voting Rights Act of 1965 requires governmental bodies get "preclearance," or approval, from the Department of Justice when adjustments are made in the number of members on a board or in the manner board members are elected to office.

When changes were made in Greenville and Pitt County under former administrations, "the boards did not get this preclearance," Owens said. The lack of a pre-clearance review indicates, according to a verbal assessment from the Department of Justice, that both the Pitt and Greenville boards may have been operating illegally since the changes were made.

The adjustments in question include:

•A 1977 change in the composition of the Greenville Board of Education that was not submitted for review.

•A 1965 revision of the Pitt County Board of Education that increased membership from five members to nine.

•A 1965 amendment to the above that revised the terms of office of Pitt County Board of Education members.

•A 1971 revision of the membership and terms of the Pitt Board.

•A 1979 amendment to the 1971 revision that reduced the number of board members from nine to eight, the current number.

Owens told Consolidated Board members Monday that the county board's attorney received a request from an attorney representing the Concerned Citizens for Justice to discuss "revisions in the (county) board that allegedly didn't have a preclearance review" by the Justice Department. The board's attorney, Owens and Pitt Superintendent Eddie West also met with lawyers representing the Department of Justice in Washington, and "came back with the feeling that the changes were made for the betterment of the school system" but that "the required preclearance had not taken place," Owens said.

Owens pointed out that present members (of both the Greenville and Pitt boards) had no part in these changes.

Officials from both systems say they are confident that when the changes were made, the schools' administrations thought they were acting legally. The changes, they say, were responses to current needs and requests and were aimed at improving board representation for minorities and for communities in outlying areas.

FBI Says It Blocked Terrorist Efforts

WASHINGTON (AP) — FBI Director William H. Webster said today his agents, using computer technology, prevented nine terrorist incidents in 1984 including a planned coup against the government of Honduras.

Webster said the FBI's ability to stop planned terrorist acts "has increased dramatically through evolving agent expertise and improved analytical capabilities."

"The terrorist research and analytical center at FBI headquarters, established in 1980, computerizes and analyzes data on known terrorists and terrorist groups in the U.S.," Webster said in testimony prepared for the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil rights.

He said the assessments of terrorist threats produced by the center "provide the flexibility to realign our resources to target the most volatile individuals or groups."

Last Nov. 1, the FBI in Miami arrested eight people in what it called a plot by exiled businessmen to assassinate Honduran President Roberto Suazo and take over that Central American nation's government in a coup financed by cocaine profits.

Webster said at the time the bureau learned of the alleged plot last July from a U.S. citizen and placed an undercover agent in the scheme as one of the triggermen.

In addition to the planned coup, Webster said the FBI foiled an attempt by two Libyan students to purchase automatic weapons with silencers, and a planned armored truck robbery and two prison escapes by individuals associated with the New Afrikan Freedom Fighters, a militant group.

Also thwarted, he said, were "potential violent acts by members of domestic terrorist groups — the United Freedom Front, the Sheriff's Posse Comitatus, and the Aryan Nations."

Webster said he was "not at liberty to discuss in detail our foreign counter-intelligence program," but commented, "the growing number of officials, tourists, commercial representatives, and students in the U.S. from the Soviet Union, Soviet bloc countries, Cuba and the People's Republic of China mandates that we intensify our efforts to identify foreign intelligence officers and neutralize their efforts."

He added that "recent published reports of successful espionage activities by hostile intelligence services in other countries demonstrate to us there is a real and continuing threat to the security of the U.S."

Hair Job Derailment Injures 26 People

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl who was banned from school because she dyed her hair purple recolored it so she could return to class today but said her new black mane has left her blue.

"The black took in the front where my hair was a light lavender," Gina Pola said Tuesday. "But not in the back. It's a gross color, horrible. I hate it. And it's still got a bit of purple in it."

Although her natural hair color is brown, Miss Pola said: "I'll never get brown back because I bleached it blonde to get it purple."

The freshman at St. Petersburg High School, was sent home Monday after Principal William R. Gray told her not to return until she changed her hair back to a normal color.

"I just don't think school is the place for multicolored heads," said Grey. He said her purple hair was "a disruption," and that she'd be suspended forever if she didn't change the color.

"I want to go to school," she said. "I don't want to miss it. I won't be able to make up the work."

GRANBY, Colo. (AP) — Amtrak's California Zephyr thundered off its tracks in a remote mountain canyon and passengers "just flew," injuring 26 people, three of them seriously, authorities and passengers said early today.

Seven of the 14 cars on the train en route to Denver left the tracks southeast of here about 8 p.m. Tuesday and Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black in Washington D.C., tentatively blamed it on a "dry washout."

"The roadbed underneath the tracks seems to have been undermined," Black said. "There has been no rain or flooding in the area, but there has been considerable snowmelt."

A National Transportation Safety Board investigator was to arrive at the scene by daylight, said NTSB spokesman Ira J. Furman in Washington.

There were 163 passengers, 14 service workers and five crew members aboard the train, which had originated in Oakland, Calif., said Art Lloyd, corporate communications chief for Amtrak in San Francisco.

"I saw the actual train derailment. I screamed," said Joanne O'Reilly, 32, of Stoughton, Mass., who was sitting with her sister at the window of a car just behind the derailed units.

"A lot of people weren't sure what was going on. They just flew," Ms. O'Reilly said. "We were so close to falling off into the river. I heard this jolt. And then another real scary jolt. There were six or seven good jolts."

The train derailed in Fraser Canyon between the tiny mountain communities of Granby and Tabernash and east of SilverCreek ski area on the western side of the Continental Divide, about 45 miles northwest of Denver.

The only access through the canyon is by train, said Grand County Deputy Sheriff Joe Recktenwald.

Princess Says Dad Exonerated

LONDON (AP) — Princess Michael of Kent, a member of the royal family by marriage, said in a TV interview today she was deeply ashamed to learn her father was a Nazi SS major, but she said he was exonerated of any war crimes.

"Here I am at 40 years old and I suddenly discover something that really is quite unpleasant. I shall just simply have to live with it," she said in the interview, which TV-AM, a breakfast show, said was recorded at Kensington Palace in London on Tuesday afternoon.

The 40-year-old princess, who is married to Queen Elizabeth II's cousin, Prince Michael of Kent, said evidence was on its way to her from Germany proving her father was exonerated by the Allies at the end of World War II.

"I was desperately ashamed at first and then when I spoke with my brother, he explained to me (about) the document which exonerated my father from any activity which I have been brought up to believe that the SS (was involved in), basically concentration camps for Jews and so on," she said.

The TV-AM program said the princess stated she had been told that in 1948 the Allies' Court of Appeal in Upper Bavaria cleared her father of war crimes and that she was waiting for a court document which showed his position was an honorary one and that he never wore the SS uniform.

"I have now discovered that he wasn't involved with anything like that at all, so I am relieved to have discovered that. But, yes, it is a deep shame for me."

She added: "I think that from what I have read that there's a great deal of false speculation about what his role was and I hope that as soon as I can get the documents (they will be seen) to prove that his role was in fact virtually negligible. But nonetheless it's a dreadful thing."

Sony Will Use Tubes From U.S.

TOKYO (AP) — Sony Corp. has responded to Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone's appeal to buy more foreign goods by importing a known quantity from America — Sony picture tubes.

Akio Morita, chairman of the multinational electronics maker, told foreign reporters today that the company will this year import 300,000 picture tube units from its plant in San Diego, Calif.

Morita said it was the "first case of a Japanese subsidiary in the United States shipping products back to Japan." He said the value of the imports would be about $20 million.

He said Sony was buying back the U.S.-made picture tubes because of high demand in the Japanese market and over-capacity at the San Diego plant. But he added that Nakasone's April 9 appeal to the nation to buy more foreign goods in the face of mounting surpluses with Japan's major trading partners was another factor.

"I thought we should do everything we can, and it's beneficial for us too," he said.

He said he thought Nakasone's "buy foreign" campaign "makes sense" and that he hopes Sony's decision "will be a good stimulation or encouragement to other companies."

Morita said that Japan's "export businesses never pay attention to good (foreign) products for the Japanese market," and that it is the responsibility of Japanese industry to form a new attitude toward imports.

The Sony group, led by the Sony Trading Corporation, bought $164 million worth of imports last year and expects to purchase $220 million this year, two-thirds from the United States, he said.

IRS Says Hammer Will Be Returned

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service has rejected a couple's attempt to pay their tax bill with a $738 "Pentagon hammer."

"We're sending it back," said Eric Roberts, an IRS spokesman.

Hubert Van Tol and his wife, Lois, took the hammer to IRS offices in Memphis saying it should more than cover their outstanding tax bill of $276.

Van Tol said he based the value of the hammer on reports that the U.S. Army spent hundreds of dollars for one pretty much like it. "They ought to give us credit to carry over next year," he said.

But Roberts said Tuesday that the IRS was not amused by Van Tol's offer.

"These people could be subject to a $500 fine for filing a frivolous return," he said.

Van Tol and his wife, accompanied by a small group of tax protesters, delivered the hammer Monday to Jerry Kaufman, IRS district director in Memphis.

Soviets Rule Out Weapons

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the wake of last month's fatal shooting of a U.S. Army major by a Soviet sentry, the Soviet Union has promised to ban the use of weapons against members of the U.S. military liaison mission in East Germany, the State Department says.

The Soviets are also weighing a U.S. request for an apology and compensation for the family of Army Maj. Arthur Nicholson, who was slain on March 24, the department said Tuesday.

The Soviet pledge not to "permit use of force or weapons" against members of the military liaison mission came during a meeting last Friday of high U.S. and Soviet military officials, the department said in a statement.

During the meeting, the Soviets said the issues of apology and compensation would be referred to a "higher authority," according to the statement.

Despite the Soviet promise not to resort to force in the future, it is too early to judge the results of the meeting, the State Department said.

The meeting between Gen. Glenn K. Otis, commander of the U.S. Army in Europe, and Gen. Mikhail Zaytsev, commander of Soviet forces in East Germany, was convened to discuss ways of preventing similar incidents in the future.

The Otis-Zaytsev meeting was agreed to late last month following consultations between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin. The first part of the 4½-hour meeting was held at a Soviet facility in Potsdam, East Germany, and the second part at the U.S. Military Liaison Mission House in that city.

More meetings will take place on a military level, the State Department said.

The department added that it has no confirmation of reports that the Soviet sentry who killed Nicholson has been arrested by the Soviets and faces disciplinary action.

According to the U.S. version of the March 24 incident, Nicholson was killed while monitoring a Soviet military installation in East Germany — an activity permitted under an agreement dating back to the late 1940s.

Emory Charges Economic Pressure

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Former East Carolina University football coach Ed Emory, in a letter answering a request by Chancellor John M. Howell to "mutually agree" to his firing or face loss of his salary, said the move is a retaliation for his legal suit against the university.

Emory filed a near $1.2 million suit against the university last month, charging actual damages, mental and emotional distress and punitive damages.

Emory was fired in December and said at the time he was given no reason for the action. University officials have refused to go into details of their side of the firing.

Following Emory's filing of the suit, Howell wrote to Emory, now said serving as a volunteer coach for the USFL's Memphis Showboats, asking that the former coach sign an agreement that his firing had been "mutually agreed" so that his salary could be continued.

A copy of the letter was made public yesterday by Emory's attorney, Marvin Blount. Howell said in the letter that after meeting with university attorneys it had been concluded that since Emory did not agree to the firing, the provisions of his contract were not being fulfilled for him to continue receiving monthly portions of his $50,000 annual salary, due to be paid through January 31, 1988. Emory was asked to sign an attached statement saying that he agreed to the termination of his services.

Such a move, however, could have had legal bearing on his right to bring the suit against the university.

Emory returned the form unsigned and wrote a letter to Howell, which was released today by Blount.

In the letter, Emory notes that "it was no coincidence that the decision to terminate my salary and benefits occurred on the very same day my Complaint was filed."

"Whether this is retaliation is a question for others to decide. Whatever it may be called, it is economic pressure that you much know causes me extreme personal and professional difficulty at the time."

Emory adds that he feels that the signing the form would put him in a position which would end his lawsuit.

"Neither I, nor the principles that his lawsuit seeks to establish, can be bought so cheaply," Emory continued.

The former coach said that his signing would also be a distortion of the truth.

"It is simply not fair. I did not breach the contract; you did. I was — and in fact am today — ready to perform my duties at ECU. It is not fair to tell me you will now comply with a part of our agreement if I will agree to make untrue statements and write a resignation that we both know is not sincere."

Emory said that because of the economic burdens placed on him by the move, he had been forced to move his wife to Memphis. "My home is now on the market in Greenville. I simply do not have any major source of funds. My successes in the past have not been economic, but have come from helping boys and young men be student athletes.

"If you insist on carrying out the threat...there is little that I can do. However, if that occurs, you will do it knowing that it puts me in deep financial trouble and causes severe distress to my wife and me. Quite apart of the legalities of the situation, I hope you will show enough integrity and humanity to continue the salary portion that we both know is owed to me," Emory concluded.

Yesterday, Special Deputy Attorney General Edwin Speas filed a motion in Pitt County Superior Court to dismiss the suit. That is expected to be ruled on in the next few weeks, possibly as early as April 26. If the court rules against the state, Speas will have 20 days to file an answer to the suit.

Howell stated in his letter to Emory that unless he signed the agreement by April 15, the university would begin action to stop his pay at that time. Dick Blake, assistant to the chancellor, said this morning that action has been initiated to do so.

Big 1st Frame Kayos Rampants

By WOODY PEELE

Rodney Shannon bats only ninth in the Wilson Fike order, but it might expect to move up after Tuesday's performance against Rose. He hit two doubles, a homer and drove in four runs as he paced the Golden Demons to a 12-4 baseball victory over the Rampants in Big East action.

Fike broke the game open in the first inning, turning six hits, one of them the first of Shannon's doubles, two walks, a hit batsman and three Rose errors into a big ten run explosion. After that, it was just a question of whether the game would get to be official.

With rain threatening by the fourth, Rose went into a slowdown move, trying to stretch things out and — hopefully — have the game rained out. High school rules would wash away all that had happened and the game would be started again when replayed.

Eric Jarman, then on the mound, stepped back on every pitch, putting on a fine performance as he motioned to fielders to re-station them, to confer about how to play a certain batter and the like.

Fike, for its part, tried to hurry things along. It sent four batters to the plate — one of them was hit by a pitch. The other three all struck out, swinging wildly away from the ball to get quick outs.

"We did try to slow it down in the fourth, but we decided after that, what the heck, we might as well play," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "They were trying to speed things up, just as we were trying to slow it down. But they started playing again too after that."

The finally was called in the top of the seventh after conditions grew too slick on the mound for the pitchers.

"That first inning took us out of the game," Vincent continued. "We couldn't get them out in that inning. We are just making too many fundamental mistakes. Fike hit the ball hard with men on base and we didn't."

Fike Netters Trim Rose, 5-1

Wilson Fike won all but one singles match to take a 5-1 victory over the Rose Rampants Tuesday in a Big East 4-A tennis match shortened by inclement weather.

In the fourth singles match, Ralph Harper of Rose was leading Tome Hemby 2-1 in the first set but was forced to retire when he suffered a cut over the eye.

The Rampants, now 3-6 in the Big East, travel to Wilson Hunt Thursday.

Lee Dunn (F) d. Clay Jackson 6-2, 6-0
Carlos Tyndal (F) d. Scott Wester 6-1, 6-1

That was shown by the fact that Rose had only one less hit than did Fike, 8-7. And Rose was only two runs back as far as earned runs were concerned, 6-4.

Milo Popowitch led off the game with a soft fly that fell into short center for a hit. He was sacrificed to third after stealing second. Rusty Dail singled, scoring Popowitch, and he, too, stole second, moving to third on a passed ball.

Mark Harris walked and Doug Flowers singled in Dail. Brooks Bissette reached on an error that allowed Harris to score all the way from second. Claude Mullen singled, loading the bases. Jimmy Page was then hit by a pitch, forcing in Flowers with the fourth run — and sending starting pitcher Steve Wall to the showers.

But Jarman gave up a double to center, driving in two runs and Popowitch walked, reloading the bases.

After a second out, a freak series of plays cleared the sacks. Dail hit a grounder up the middle that Doyle Kirkland got to, but couldn't make a play on in time. Page scored on the play. Kirkland, in attempting to force Popowitch at second, was off target with his throw, and as the ball rolled across the infield, Shannon took off for home. Catcher James Matthews took a too-late throw to get the runner, but when he noticed Popowitch too far off second, he fired down to try and get that out.

But his throw was high, sailing over the two basemen there and the backing-up centerfielder, going all the way to the fence. Popowitch and Dail easily came around with the ninth and tenth runs, emptying the bases.

The final out was then obtained but too much damage had been done.

Fike added single runs in the third and fifth. The third inning score came off the bat of Shannon as he homered with no one on base.

In the fifth, Shannon again accounted for the run, getting a double to drive in Page, who had reached on an error.

Rose tried to make a comeback, but was too far behind. Their first run scored in the bottom of the first. Kirkland doubled to right and moved up on an out. He scored on Van Alston's sacrifice fly.

Two crossed in the fourth. Tyrone Jones walked and Robbie Erhmann singled. A passed ball let Jones

Summerlin Powers Aycock Past Jags

FARMVILLE — Paul Summerlin blasted a three-run homer in the first inning and gave up just three hits before he was hit by a line drive as C.B. Aycock ripped Farmville Central 11-1 Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school baseball.

Tommy Dunn and John Herring had two hits each for the Falcons.

Summerlin left the mound in the fourth inning after he was hit by a line drive off the bat of Mark Wooten. John Thomas came on in relief to gain the decision, while Robert Evans suffered the loss for the Jaguars.

Dunn jumped on Evans for a double down the line in left field to open the game, and Jay Westbrook drew a base on balls before Summerlin tagged a long drive over the fence in left for a 3-0 lead.

Thomas followed with a double down the line in right field, and Herring ripped an RBI single to left. Herring went to second on a wild pitch, then scored when a throw by Evans got by first baseman Mark Wooten as the Falcons took a 5-0 lead.

Farmville responded with a run in the bottom of the frame, as Hugh Moore doubled, Randy Daniels singled and Greg May lofted a sacrifice fly that was dropped by Dunn in left field allowing Moore to cross the plate. Summerlin pitched out of trouble with a pair of strikeouts.

Aycock added four more runs in the second and two in the fourth for the final margin.

The game was delayed 45 minutes in the top of the second inning by high winds and rain, then stopped after five innings because of darkness.

Farmville, now 4-10 overall and 3-2 in the ECC, travels to Southern Nash Friday.

LITTLEFIELD — Roanoke High School scored six runs in the third inning and romped to an 11-3 non-conference baseball victory over Ayden-Grifton Tuesday.

The game was halted after five innings because of rain.

The Redskins took the lead in the first inning, scoring twice. Ricky Taylor walked and was sacrificed up. Stacey Wallace singled in Taylor, then stole both second and third. He scored on Craft's sacrifice fly.

In the second, the 'Skins picked up another pair for a 4-0 lead. Morning walked, stole up and G. Taylor walked. Both then stole up another base and Ricky Taylor reached on an error, scoring both runners.

The six in the next inning wrapped it up, with one more crossing in the fifth. Both of Ayden-Grifton's runs scored in the fourth.

Wallace led Roanoke with three hits while Mickey Knox had two. Shannon Peede and Curt Tucker each had two for Ayden-Grifton.

The loss drops the Chargers to 6-8 on the year. They return to action on

ECU's Anderson Named A-A

East Carolina senior Anita Anderson has been named to the Fast Break All-America Team for her performance as a center on the Lady Pirate basketball team.

Anderson was voted to the honorable mention category by the American Women's Sports Federation, who sponsors the award.

Anderson led the Lady Pirates with 13.3 points per game and was second in rebounding at 7.2. She was given the coach's award at the recent banquet, as she was second in minutes played.

Anderson transferred to ECU from Chowan junior college but moved into fourth place on the career blocked shots list with 50 and 10th in rebounding.

Junior guard Sylvia Bragg was named to the Fast Break honor roll for her efforts this season, and head Coach Emily Manwaring was named as an All-America coach.

The Lady Pirates compiled a 20-9 record in route to their second consecutive ECAC-South championship. Gwen Austin of UNC-Wilmington was the only other honoree from the conference.

The suspended game had finished in a 14-14 tie after seven innings earlier in the season and was picked up at that point yesterday. After a scoreless eighth inning, Goldsboro pushed over two runs in the top of the ninth.

Tim Foss singled and David Boyette walked. Don Wise singled in Foss and Steve Price got a hit to score Boyette.

Greenville tried to rally, but fell short. Tim Bland led off the bottom of the frame with a single and stole

Vikings Await Letter On Kosar's Intentions

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. (AP) — Two weeks before the National Football League draft, the Minnesota Vikings are holding their ground in the Bernie Kosar Sweepstakes.

And Vikings General Manager Mike Lynn says it took a bit of scrambling.

Under the trade agreement that gave the Vikings the Houston Oilers' second overall choice in the April 30 draft, Houston could have canceled the trade because Kosar did not ask by April 15 to be eligible for the April 30 draft.

"At approximately 11 p.m. (Monday), we reached an agreement to void that particular section (of the understanding)," Lynn said Tuesday. "Consequently, we still have his rights, the trade is intact. We're not giving up ... and we're going to continue to pursue the Kosars and their representative to get Bernie to send in that letter."

The letter to which Lynn referred is one the University of Miami quarterback would have to send to the league stating his intention to be available for the draft.

However, Kosar has not sent the letter, which under NFL regulations would have left him out of the regular selection process and meant that he could have been available only through a special supplemental draft. That would have given the Cleveland Browns the inside track, since they traded with the Buffalo Bills for the top choice in any supplemental draft.

But Commissioner Pete Rozelle, who met for three hours with representatives of the four involved teams in New York Tuesday, last weekend suspended the letter of intent deadline in Kosar's case.

He also said he would rule on the complex case by April 23.

"When we were informed by (Kosar's agent John) Geletka that he was not going to send the letter," Lynn said, "we immediately made arrangements to meet with Houston last night in New York. We were very concerned that we could not get Houston to agree to void the condition."

The squabble began last month when Kosar — who has two years of eligibility remaining — announced that he would graduate early and that he planned to make himself available for the draft.

The Bills have the No. 1 pick and have already signed Virginia Tech defensive lineman Bruce Smith. The Oilers last week swapped first-round picks with the Vikings, giving Minnesota their selection in exchange for the Vikes' third overall pick and Minnesota's second round choice.

But the Browns then clouded the picture by trading for Buffalo's possible supplemental draft pick.

Kosar, a native of Boardman, Ohio, has said he wants to play for the Browns.

Don Weiss, the NFL's executive director, said after Rozelle's hearing that Kosar still may be able to choose his team.

"The way the rules are written," Weiss said, "he's within his rights to do it."

Unless, of course, Rozelle rules otherwise.

Darling Has Nothing To Show

By The Associated Press
Ron Darling pitched a great game for the New York Mets. Jose DeLeon threw superbly for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Yet all that either of them had after the Mets' 2-1 victory Tuesday night was an empty feeling.

"We won the game and that's the big thing, but I'd be lying if I didn't say I was frustrated," said Darling, who allowed just one hit — a single by Johnny Ray to lead off the first inning — but left after walking two batters to start the eighth. "I've pitched well for two games and have nothing to show for it except the thanks of my teammates."

DeLeon gave up just four hits over eight innings and struck out 14.

"I just don't want to talk to anybody right now," said DeLeon, who struggled to a 7-13 record last season — with the Pirates either being shut out or held to one run in all but two of those losses.

As it turned out, the game was decided in the ninth inning. New York's Mookie Wilson led off the top half of the inning with a triple against John Candelaria, 1-1, and scored on a sacrifice fly by Keith Hernandez.

Jesse Orosco, 1-0, who allowed

Pittsburgh's tying run to score in the eighth on a groundout, struck out the side in the bottom of the ninth to complete the combined one-hitter.

"That's as good a pitched game as I've seen on both sides," said Mets Manager Dave Johnson.

Said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner: "Those two guys went at it all night and both walked out with nothing. It was one of those games where neither pitcher deserves to lose."

Neither of them did.

In other NL games on a low-scoring day, Chicago nipped

Philadelphia 1-0 in 10 innings, Cincinnati edged Atlanta 2-1, San Diego tipped San Francisco 2-1 and Houston rallied past Los Angeles 7-3.

While pitchers dominated the game in Pittsburgh, Mets third baseman Howard Johnson contributed two key plays.

In the second inning, George Foster doubled and Johnson lined a single that made it 1-0. DeLeon then retired the next 18 batters.

Darling, who set down 21 of 23 batters during one stretch, walked Sixto Lezcano and pinch-hitter Joe Orsulak to start the eighth. Orosco walked pinch-hitter Lee Mazzilli, loading the bases, but retired Ray on a fly ball.

Bill Madlock followed with a hard grounder down the third-base line that Johnson managed to knock down and then scrambled to get a forceout at third. Pinch runner Bill Almon scored on the play.

"The ball was down the line and I knew I had to knock it down or it was two runs," said Johnson, who was acquired in an off-season trade with the Detroit Tigers. "We're not scoring very many runs, but to me, that was the same as driving in a run."

"That was a gold glove play," said Dave Johnson.

George Hendrick flied out to end the inning, sending the game tied into the ninth.

The victory boosted New York's record to 6-1 with five of the triumphs coming in one-run games. The one-hitter was the 14th in Mets' history, although it was the first such combined effort.

Cubs 1, Phillies 0

There were no 1-0 games at Wrigley Field last season, but fine efforts by Chicago's Dennis Eckersley and Philadelphia's Jerry Koosman — along with a 24 mph wind blowing in from center field — produced one this time.

Eckersley, 1-1, went the entire 10 innings, giving up five hits while striking out 11. It was his first shutout in three years.

Koosman went eight innings and also gave up five hits.

The Cubs won it when Larry Bowa, making his first start of the year, singled for his third hit of the game to start the 10th against Al Holland. Chris Speier, batting for Eckersley, sacrificed Bowa to second.

Bob Dernier then stroked a single down the left-field line to drive in Bowa.

Astros 7, Dodgers 3

Bill Doran's suicide-squeeze bunt, coupled with an error by reliever Ken Howell on the play, allowed two runs to score as Houston rallied for six runs in the top of the ninth inning against three Los Angeles pitchers.

Houston trailed 3-1 going into the ninth, but Kevin Bass led off with a double against Tom Niedenfuer. Steve Howe, the eventual losing pitcher, relieved and gave up an RBI single to pinch hitter Jim Pankofsky and a one-out infield hit to Jerry Mumphrey.

Howell then took over, but promptly yielded a single to pinch hitter Enos Cabell that made it 3-3. After Mark Bailey walked on four pitches to load the bases, the Astros put on the squeeze and Doran bunted back to the mound. Howell's throw to the plate was late and wild, allowing two runs to score. Doran was credited with a sacrifice.

Another run scored when second baseman Mariano Duncan mishandled catcher Steve Yeager's throw on a stolen base and pinch hitter Craig Reynolds singled home the final run of the uprising.

Mike Marshall hit a solo home run and Sid Bream belted a two-run shot in the Los Angeles third.

Reds 2, Braves 1

Mario Soto pitched a seven-hitter and Eric Davis broke a 1-1 tie in the sixth inning to give Cincinnati its victory in Atlanta.

The only blemish on Soto's performance was a home run by Dale Murphy in the second inning. It was the fifth homer of the year for Murphy, who also singled and is now 13-for-27 this season with 14 RBIs.

Soto, 2-1, struck out eight and walked two.

Davis belted his home run to lead off the sixth inning. He was the first batter to face reliever Rick Camp, 0-2.

Brave's starter Len Barker, making his first appearance since last July after undergoing elbow surgery, went five innings and allowed three hits, including Ron Oester's RBI double in the second. Barker struck out six and walked none.

Padres 2, Giants 1

Kevin McReynolds hit a sacrifice fly in the first inning, Garry Templeton singled home a run in the second and San Diego starter Andy Hawkins and two relievers made it stand up.

Hawkins, 2-0, worked 6 2-3 innings and gave up seven hits, including a home run by Bob Brenly with one out in the seventh inning. Craig Lefferts got the final out of the seventh, and Rich Gossage pitched the final two innings for his first save of the season.

The host Padres turned four double plays, all started by Templeton at shortstop, to stay out of trouble. Dave LaPoint, 0-2, took the loss.

Trammell's Bat Keeps Tigers Roaring Along

By The Associated Press
The Detroit Tigers are doing everything they can to duplicate last year's marvelous start. And they have shortstop Alan Trammell to thank for it so far.

Sporting a .417 batting average, Trammell is one of the main reasons the Tigers have a 6-0 record these days, the only unbeaten mark in the major leagues. Trammell's home run and sacrifice fly Tuesday night keyed the Tigers' 2-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

"They found out a little bit about Trammell last year, and he missed 42 straight games with an injury," Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson said. "If he'd been healthy all year, there'd have been an awful fight for most valuable player."

The fight would have been strictly intramural, however, since the MVP Award went to Tiger relief ace Willie Hernandez, who was a key element in the Tigers' 9-0 getaway last year en route to the world title.

In other American League games, Kansas City beat Boston 2-0; Cleveland tripped Baltimore 6-3; Texas stopped Toronto 9-4; New York edged Chicago 5-4, and Oakland outscored Seattle 9-7.

Trammell gave the Tigers a 1-0 lead with a sacrifice fly in the first inning. Then, after the Brewers tied it in the fourth, Trammell delivered the winning run with a homer in the fifth.

Walt Terrell, with help from Aurelio Lopez, won his first American League game for the Tigers. Terrell, who was obtained in the off-season trade that sent Howard Johnson to the New York Mets, worked the first 6 2-3 innings, scattering three hits and allowing just one unearned run. He matched his career high with seven strikeouts while walking five.

"I've made myself into a pretty good hitter," Trammell said. "What surprised me, I guess, is that I can hit for as much power as I do."

"I'm still just a skinny guy. That's why I choke up on the bat. I have a lot of confidence, though. I know the pitchers now and I guess if I just make contact all the time, I'm probably going to hit double figures in home runs. I don't know if I can hit 20, but I can probably hit 14 or 15."

Royals 2, Red Sox 0

Danny Jackson pitched a three-hitter and Steve Balboni slammed a two-run homer in the second inning as Kansas City beat Boston to end a four-game losing streak.

Jackson held Boston hitless for 5 2-3 innings before Dwight Evans singled to center. The other Boston hits were singles by Bill Buckner in the seventh and Mike Easler in the ninth.

Jackson, 1-0, struck out two and walked four as he handed the Red Sox their first shutout since July 30, 1984, when they were blanked 7-0 by the Chicago White Sox. Jackson has pitched 18 scoreless innings in two games this season.

Indians 6, Orioles 3

Vern Ruhle pitched 6 1-3 shutout innings and Julio Franco drove in three runs to lead Cleveland over Baltimore for the Indians' first victory of the season after five losses.

Ruhle, 1-1, yielded just five hits while striking out seven and walking one over the first 6 1-3 innings. Tom Waddell relieved him and yielded Baltimore's runs on a two-run, eighth-inning homer by Cal Ripken and a ninth-inning leadoff shot by Larry Sheets.

Dennis Martinez, 0-1, took the loss, allowing three runs on seven hits over the first five innings.

Rangers 9, Blue Jays 4

Run-scoring triples by Don Slaught and Pete O'Brien highlighted a four-run fifth inning that triggered Texas over Toronto.

All nine Texas starters drove in a run, and eight of them scored in the Rangers' balanced attack, as they won for the first time in six games this season and spoiled the Blue Jays' home opener.

"We haven't been swinging the bat bad, it's just that we've been down by some large scores early," Texas Manager Doug Rader said. "Some of the guys are swinging the bat a lot better than the stats would indicate."

Yankees 5, White Sox 4

Don Baylor slammed a home run off the left field foul pole screen in the bottom of the ninth, boosting New York over Chicago and making the Yankees' home opener a success.

Baylor's first homer of the year came with one out off Dan Spillner, 0-1, the fourth Chicago pitcher, who had retired the previous five batters he faced. It followed a leaping catch by Yankees left fielder Ken Griffey that took a home run away from Ron Kittle in the top of the ninth.

Dave Righetti, 1-0, was the winner with two innings of one-hit relief.

"I've hit a lot of balls down there that hooked hard left and hit the foul pole," Baylor said. "This time, the ball stayed on a straight line. After it got out there about three-quarters of the way, I knew it was out."

A's 9, Mariners 7

Bruce Bochte drove in three runs with a pair of doubles for the Oakland A's, who survived four Seattle home runs to edge the Mariners.

Seattle suffered its second straight loss after opening the season with six consecutive victories. While beating Seattle, the A's continued to give up home runs by the bunch to the Mariners, who have tagged 13 in five games against Oakland.

LEGISLATIVE MIRTH — State Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Hickory, shows all is not dull when it comes to sitting in on sessions of North Carolina's General Assembly. Ballenger's period of laughter came during a discussion of proposals to make the use of seat belts mandatory for motorists. (AP Laserphoto)

IN THE STATE

Seat Belts Get Early Approval

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate tentatively approved mandatory use of seat belts Tuesday while weaving through amendments to hold a public referendum on the issue and exempt funeral processions.

"You have to take what part of the loaf you can get," said Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, after his compromise bill was approved 27-20 Tuesday to set up a final Senate vote today. "Politics depends primarily on an ability to compromise."

Warren said his bill would save 400 lives a year and "should stand on the safety issue alone." But he acknowledged that the bill was changed to accommodate federal mandates pitting seat belts against the threat of expensive air bags in new cars.

The Senate previously returned the bill to the Senate Judiciary I Committee when opponents said it might not comply with federal guidelines in the air-bag controversy. Warren amended the bill to nullify it if the U.S. Department of Transportation rules against it.

Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, voiced the strongest objections to the bill, saying the Senate has lost sight of the real issues.

"I, for one, would like to see air bags in," he said. "I'd be willing to pay for them. They'd be willing to work if I was too stupid to buckle up."

"Detroit (and the auto industry) is making it right attractive to vote for it," Harrington said. "We're worrying about our pocketbooks. (But) it's going against the grain of the people."

Most of the debate centered on efforts to set up a referendum on the issue, bring back-seat passengers under the bill and exempt funeral processions.

The move for a public referendum failed 34-14 despite Sen. Wendell Sawyer's suggestion that "maybe it's time we heard from the people of North Carolina."

"It's our responsibility to meet some of these burdens. That's the reason some of these people sent us down here," countered Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, who circulated a drawing of a smiling grim reaper captioned, "I, too, support the seat belt bill for I believe in freedom of choice."

Sawyer also failed in a bid to void the law if the DOT decides to change any of its criteria for acceptable air-bag requirements or the percentage of the population that must be covered.

Sen. Chip Wright, R-New Hanover, asked that back-seat passengers be included, saying, "If you're concerned about safety, you have to be concerned about the safety of the children sitting in the back seat."

But Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, said that could cause accidents because of parents "turning around every 10 minutes to make sure the children are buckled up."

"To add the back-seat passengers would do harm to the passage of this bill," added Warren.

Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, failed by a 26-23 margin to exempt funeral processions after Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said it would be "a very dangerous amendment."

"They go through red lights, go through stop signs, whatever," Rand said. "We certainly strap the body in, I'm sure, and I think everybody in the procession deserves the same kind of protection."

As it stands, the bill would require drivers and front-seat passengers to wear seat belts in cars so equipped. It exempts people with medical problems as well as deliverymen, drivers of farm vehicles, trucks and some deliverymen. Violators would be given warnings from Oct. 1 to Jan. 1, 1987 and up to a $25 fine thereafter. The bill asks that the Governor's Highway Safety Commission report on its effectiveness by Oct. 1, 1988.

Harris objected to a final reading Tuesday so he can submit an amendment today to make violations of the law infractions that carry no criminal record.

"I'd hate to see anybody have a permanent record on a misdemeanor," he said. "My wife would be one of the first. She ain't gonna buckle up and I don't think Ollie Harris is gonna buckle up."

Eaglet Discovered

FAIRFIELD, N.C. (AP) — A rare third eaglet has been spotted in a Hyde County nest while a state wildlife official was observing two other eaglets first discovered April 1.

"Two of the young got up and stretched their little wings, and I thought, 'Boy, wouldn't it be nice if that lump on the left side of the nest stretched its wings,' and sure enough it did," Melinda Welton, endangered species project leader for the North Carolina Wildlife Resources Commission, said Tuesday.

A third eaglet is found in a bald eagle nest "less than 10 percent of the time," Ms. Welton said. "Usually there are two."

Two other young eagles were hatched in the same nest last year in the first successful bald eagle nesting attempt in North Carolina in 14 years.

Panels OK Tobacco Tax Credit Bills

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Both House and Senate agriculture committees approved bills Tuesday to let tobacco growers take tax deductions for assessments they pay to keep the federal tobacco program running.

"For North Carolina farmers to have a tax liability on tobacco assessments either at the state or federal level is wrong," Joey Holland of Wilson County told the Senate panel after it unanimously approved the measure.

Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, committee chairman, said assessments have risen from 7 cents a pound to 25 cents proposed under current negotiations concerning the tobacco program.

"This is a very large expense item in the production of tobacco," he said. "We don't know what the assessment is going to be, but the Appropriations Committee will have that information before they act on the appropriations bill."

Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir, originally sought to give growers a tax credit that would have cost the state $134 million. But his bill was amended to a tax deduction when lawmakers agreed the $8 million price tag would be more palatable in a General Assembly facing strong lobbying for tax cuts from all sides.

Lawmakers estimate the deduction will cut a typical farmer's assessment by about six percent or 15 dollars per thousand pounds of leaf.

Speed said he expects little opposition in the Appropriations Committee.

An identical proposal in the House Agriculture Committee was sent to the House while the chairman, Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said he will introduce wider ranging farm legislation after he returns from a meeting on tobacco in Lexington, Ky., this weekend.

Speed said legislators, congressmen, agriculture commissioners and representatives of farm organizations in all tobacco-producing states will converge on Lexington for the conference.

Growers have argued that assessments are legitimate nontaxable business expenses because they must be paid to offset the expense of storing tobacco that does not meet federal price support levels at auction.

In other action, the Senate committee approved a bill to remove the inventory tax on farm machinery for dealers.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, told the committee the bill will help farmers as well as farm machinery dealers. He added that another bill will be filed soon to repeal the personal property tax on farm machinery.

Ann Jillian Has Double Mastectomy

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Ann Jillian, who won an Emmy nomination for the 1982 television movie "The Mae West Story," is recovering from a double mastectomy, a spokeswoman said.

Miss Jillian, 35, who also starred in the 1983 television series "Jennifer Slept Here," had her operation for breast cancer Friday at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, Suzanne Ryan of the William Morris Agency said Tuesday.

"Her family is with her and she is in good physical condition," hospital spokesman Ron Wise said.

The actress should be able to resume work in a couple of weeks, Ms. Ryan said.

Miss Jillian was born Ann Jura Nauseda in Massachusetts to parents who fled the Soviet occupation of Lithuania. When she was 10, her parents moved to Los Angeles. She made her movie debut in Walt Disney's "Babes in Toyland."

On stage, Mickey Rooney selected her for a leading role in "Sugar Babies."

Miss Jillian played the role of a scheming gold digger in the recent TV mini-series "Ellis Island."

She appeared on several Bob Hope television specials, and in 1983 traveled with Hope to Lebanon to entertain U.S. servicemen.

Martin Calls Hasty Session After House Panel Rushes Approval Of Tax Package

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Republican leaders are considering delaying tactics to get full consideration for Gov. Jim Martin's tax-cut proposals after a House committee adopted a more limited bill.

"They haven't considered the governor's bill in the normal mode — letting the sponsor explain it, having open hearings," said I. Beverly Lake, Martin's legislative lobbyist. "I think this is the fastest that any tax reform has come out of any finance committee in the history of the Legislature."

Lake said Martin would try to persuade House Speaker Liston Ramsey to delay a floor vote — now expected for Thursday — so the governor's package could get additional consideration. Failing that, Republicans will offer floor amendments to try to restore Martin's deeper cuts, he said.

Martin, apparently caught off guard when the House Finance Committee voted 37-11 for the tax-cut bill Tuesday, summoned Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Ramsey for their second joint meeting this month.

Martin emerged with Ramsey after 25 minutes, brushed past reporters and leaped into a waiting car, saying he was late for another meeting.

Press secretary Tim Pittman said Martin wasn't angry, just preoccupied. "I've seen him mad, and he wasn't hot... I think he was just rushed."

Ramsey refused to divulge what was said and Jordan would say only that he told the governor "any tax package would be a good one."

"I assured him if the House bill comes over (to the Senate), it will get a fair hearing," said Jordan. "I still have some problems thinking we will be able to do all the governor wants."

Democrats denied the bill is being railroaded.

"There's nothing rushy about it," said Rep. Allen Barbee, D-Nash. "We're just at that stage of the game where we've got to take action."

Lake said the package approved by the committee is a "step in the right direction" but criticized the panel for "acting precipitously" and speculated that Democrats are trying to seize the political benefit from tax relief.

Unlike Martin's bill, which would repeal the intangibles tax, offset the inventory tax with an income tax credit, and eliminate the sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines, the Democratic package would lift the intangibles tax on bank accounts and insurance deposits, but not on stocks, bonds and other assets. It would exempt from sales taxes only food bought with food stamps, and it would cut the inventory tax by 25 percent — but only for manufacturers, not retailers or wholesalers.

Other provisions in the House bill not sought by Martin include repealing the inheritance and gift taxes; reducing from 3 percent to 2 percent the income tax assessed on the lowest bracket; lifting the sales tax on funerals; and increasing the income tax credit for day-care expenses from $2,000 to $2,400 for one child and $4,000 to $4,800 for two or more children.

"We have accepted the governor's premise that there should be tax relief," said Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, chairman of a 10-member subcommittee that hammered out the package in an unannounced meeting Monday night. "We did not feel that we could reduce taxes to the extent that he recommended."

If enacted, the House bill would save taxpayers $41.5 million in 1985-86, $138.2 million in 1986-87, and $195.5 million in 1987-88. Martin predicts his package would save $70.3 million the first year, $258.1 million the second year and $362.3 million the third.

Some Republicans argued that any tax relief is good.

"To me, this is like dying and going to heaven," said Rep. Austin Allran, R-Catawba, one of the Republicans voting for the package. He said Martin would get political credit for inspiring legislative Democrats to support lower taxes.

"In four terms this is the first time I've seen any major tax relief that has come forth," said Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman. "The governor has gotten us thinking along tax-relief lines."

Redman, however, said the Democratic bill does not take the intangibles tax repeal far enough, calling it a "banking bill more than a peoples' bill" and said the food-tax repela "is terrible because we continue to hurt the people we always hurt and that's the working poor and senior citizens."

He predicted the matter will end up in a House-Senate conference committee after a Senate Finance subcommittee "has its input."

House Defeats Effort To Make Environmental Laws Tougher

RALEIGH (AP) — Rural representatives concerned that pesticides and other farm chemicals could face tighter restrictions helped spark House defeat of a bill to let North Carolina adopt tougher environmental regulations than the federal government.

"I don't think farmers are any less interested in clean water and air than anyone else," said Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee. But "this bill is absolutely not needed."

"It absolutely does not affect pesticides," Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said Tuesday that his bill's 62-51 defeat and a 62-48 vote not to reconsider the measure probably killed it.

"I really don't see how we can bring it back," he said, although he acknowledged that repeal of the handcuff amendment was considered late in the 1983 session even though it had died in the Senate.

The floor vote was a sharp turnaround from the endorsement given repeal of the "Hardison amendments" by the House Water and Air Resources Committee last week.

The hour-long debate shifted between environmental and economic concerns.

"There's not a person in this building who is more pro-farmer than I am... but I am also concerned about our environment," said Rep. Bruce Ethridge, D-Onslow.

"Is industrial recruitment more important than our future generations?" asked Rep. Mickey Michaux, D-Durham.

Hackney said the measure should be approved "not for us today, but for our children and our grandchildren and their children."

Federal environmental standards often are "the lowest common denominator" and fall far short of what is needed for North Carolina, the only state that "handcuffs" itself to Washington's rules, he added.

Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, warned against putting "people across the Potomac" in charge of North Carolina's water and air quality, saying Washington bureaucrats "are the people who brought us $800 (military) toilet seats."

Afterwards, Payne said he was shocked at the vote, adding, "Maybe I was a bit too flip, but I thought we had the votes."

The bill adopted by the committee, in a concession to business and industry, stipulated that the EMC must be "clearly justified" in exceeding federal standards for water and air quality and must consider economic factors.

While opponents said that wasn't enough but the House tabled 69-41 an amendment offered by Rep. Frank "Trip" Sizemore, R-Guilford, to require balance between the two when the Environmental Management Commission considers new regulations.

"I think we need to listen to the business people, we need to listen to the farmers," said Rep. George Robinson, R-Caldwell, saying industry might avoid locating in North Carolina because of the threat of tougher regulations.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said that in his district farmers have seen crops and fish damaged by polluted water from the Tar River. But Rep. John Brown, R-Wilkes, said the improved health of the Yadkin River proves that greater care is being taken to protect the environment.

Senate Postpones Drinking Age Vote

RALEIGH (AP) — A Senate committee will take a second look at a bill that would raise the drinking age for beer and wine to 21 after the legislative staff analyzes the bill's financial impact.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, Tuesday asked that the bill be sent back to committee, delaying a final vote on the measure for the third time since it won tentative approval last week.

The bill, which has already cleared the House, would raise the drinking age to 21 on Sept. 1, 1986, one month before a federal deadline.

Congress has ordered states to raise their drinking ages or face the loss of federal highway funds. Those funds amount to about $30 million every two years for North Carolina.

The bill, which Swain called "the sorriest bill we could come up with" in debate last week, would keep the drinking age at 19 if the federal mandate is ruled unconstitutional. It would also make 19- and 20-year-olds caught drinking or possessing the beverages guilty of an infraction, not a crime, with a maximum fine of $25 and no court costs.

The measure won tentative Senate approval Wednesday by a vote of 43-4, but a final vote was delayed when Sen. John Jordan, D-Alamance, objected.

A final vote was scheduled for Thursday, but delayed again when Sen. R.P. Thomas, D-Henderson, said he wanted time to talk to his constituents about the measure.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, one of the four senators voting against tentative approval, urged his colleagues Thursday not to "cave in" to the federal mandate to raise the drinking age.

Fairness In Media To Skip Proxy Fight

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Members of Fairness in Media say they will attend CBS' annual stockholders' meeting today in Chicago, but although they say they won't mount a proxy battle, they would not detail their plans.

Hoover Adams, a newspaper publisher who has assisted FIM in its bid to take over the network, said supporters of the group would offer motions at the meeting. But he would not say what those motions would be.

"I'd rather not say in advance," said Adams, publisher of the Dunn Daily Record. "I don't want to alert them. I don't want to tip them off in advance."

Carter Wrenn, head of FIM and executive director of the National Congressional Club, said Tuesday the first group had decided not to solicit proxies at the meeting.

"... But what other people are going to do, I've got no idea," Wrenn said.

Wrenn said he would attend the 3 p.m. EDT meeting in Chicago along with Adams, FIM spokesman Jim Cain and National Congressional Club Chairman Tom Ellis.

But Wrenn would not say what the FIM supporters planned to do at the meeting.

"I don't think it would be appropriate to comment," he said. "We don't know what the agenda is. We'll just have to see."

FIM began its takeover attempt in January, after Helms wrote more than 1 million conservatives asking them to buy stock in CBS so they could end the network's "liberal bias" in its news reporting and "become Dan Rather's boss."

Since then, the two sides have traded lawsuits, with CBS turning over a copy of its stockholders list March 26 to Adams, who owns 11 shares of the network's stock.

Adams said he thought CBS officials were concerned about FIM's threatened takeover.

"I think we've got them worried," he said. "They're wondering what we're going to do and we're going to let them wonder until we get there."

FIM is trying to take over CBS because the group thinks the company is mismanaged, he said.

"We think Mr. Wyman (CBS President Thomas Wyman) and the directors are dedicated solely to the idea of staying in office and reaping benefits personally without any regard for the stockholders' interest," he said.

"If the Fairness in Media group doesn't succeed (in its takeover attempt), some other company will take them over in the next year," Adams said.

Board May OK School Plan Today

RALEIGH (AP) — School boards would retain considerable freedom under a mandatory curriculum plan for North Carolina public schools that the State Board of Education is expected to approve today, officials said.

"For some systems, (the new curriculum) will mean major adjustments," said Joseph B. Webb, assistant state superintendent for instruction. "For others, it will mean very little."

Instead of funding new teachers for specific subjects, under the new plan the state would provide additional funds for teachers based on enrollment. School boards could deploy them as they saw fit, as long as schools met the curriculum requirements.

By funding teachers that now are often paid out of local tax dollars, the plan gives school systems more flexibility, Webb said.

The state board and the General Assembly still must determine how new state standards will be enforced.

The mandatory curriculum plan has drawn opposition from legislators and others, including fundamentalists.

Critics have said the Basic Education Plan takes authority from local school boards and neglects the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic in favor of the arts and foreign languages.

"I'm entirely for making sure the students have a fair and equal education," said state Sen. J.A. Wright, R-Wilmington.

"But this curriculum doesn't attack the root problem that we have," Wright said. "We're trying to teach all sorts of music, art, language, speech-making and vocational ed. At some point I have to ask: What happened to the basics in the package?"

"The problem isn't that Johnny can't speak French or can't make a gun cabinet. It's that he can't make change for a dollar or write a complete sentence," Wright said.

By 1993, if the state board has its way, every North Carolina first-grader will attend regular classes in foreign language, physical education, theater, music, dance and visual arts.

A few of the state's wealthiest school systems offer those classes, funded with local money. But the courses — along with the requirements for all grades — would become mandatory for all school systems under the proposed state curriculum.

Second Phase Of Wright Auditorium Renovation To Begin Next Month

By TONY M. RUMPLE
ECU News Bureau
GREENVILLE - Historic Wright Auditorium at East Carolina University and a caterpillar in a cocoon have one thing in common — a spectacular transformation is taking place inside.

"We've needed a first-class concert hall and we're going to get it," said S. Rudolph Alexander, director of University Unions and associate dean for student activities at ECU.

"It's going to be functional and beautiful," said Alexander, chairman of a university advisory committee for Wright Auditorium renovations.

The 61-year-old auditorium, a landmark on the East Carolina campus, has been undergoing renovations, expansion and additions for the past 10 years or more.

The first phase of the current two-phase renovation of the auditorium was a $1.3 million project begun in 1980 and completed in 1982. The $1.6 million second phase will begin next month, requiring that the building be closed for more than a year.

Most of the Phase I work involved the exterior of the classically-designed structure which faces Wright Circle near the Fifth Street entrance to the ECU campus.

"Very little needs to be done now to the exterior," Alexander explained. "The steps will be re-worked. Hand railings will be replaced and the floor smoothed out. Other than that, it will look much as it does now," he said.

During the first phase, the auditorium's interior underwent drastic changes. After the original U-shaped balcony was torn out, pile drivers hammered beams deep into firm footings to support a new balcony. The level floor — used many years for sports events, dances and other activities — was sloped from rear to front to provide a better view from seats to stage.

But much remains to be done.

Permanent cushion seats — 1,545 of them — are to replace 2,000 wooden, folding chairs which have been used as temporary seating. Seats and rows will be numbered, making reserved seating possible.

As Phase I was completed, a larger stage was in place, an elevator had been installed, heating and air-conditioning units had been re-worked and curtains hung around the stage area. The entire project was topped off with a new roof.

Now workmen will move into the building itself to provide acoustics "as near-perfect as possible," and add such appointments as carpeting and chandeliers, dressing rooms and a refreshment area, all in keeping with, as Alexander describes it, "a first-rate concert hall." Even squeaky doors are to be eliminated, he said.

Stairs leading to the balcony will be carpeted and better lighting and handrails installed. The lobby will be completely re-done with carpeting and chandeliers. An area in the rear of the balcony will have facilities for serving refreshments.

The main seating area will have carpeted aisles. Walls of the auditorium will be paneled and windows fitted with new draperies.

Several large dressing rooms and warm-up rooms will be added. "These are rooms that will meet the standards of the performers' union," Alexander said.

A chief concern has been the elimination of acoustical problems. To that end, acoustical engineers have listened to the university orchestra and measuring sounds from every possible angle. Measurements also were taken from the reverberations of bursting balloons. Weeks and months of calculations have gone into plans for the hall's acoustics.

Each item that goes into the auditorium area has been chosen for its acoustical properties, then for its aesthetic ones, Alexander said.

Because the auditorium will also be used for theater productions, some curtains will be used that normally would not be in a concert hall.

"It is difficult," Alexander concedes, "to make it meet the needs of all the different types of events that will take place, but the number one priority is to make it a concert hall."

Soviet Orphanages Crowded With Single-Parent Children

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — Many of the half a million children born out of wedlock in the Soviet Union every year are turned over to orphanages by their mothers, either out of shame or an unwillingness to accept single parenthood.

Child care officials say more than 300,000 children are being reared in state orphanages and most were placed there by single mothers.

Many appear destined to remain in institutions until adulthood, not for lack of couples willing to adopt them, but because their natural mothers retain parental rights.

Single women who keep their children are eligible for income supplements. If they don't want custody, women may put their children in a state home, but they retain visiting rights and remain the child's legal parent.

"Real orphans are the minority," said Kira Agafonova, deputy chief of schools in the Ministry of Education. "More are children whose mothers refuse to rear them."

The broad range of options afforded women who bear children out of wedlock is intended to ensure that no child goes without food, clothing and other necessities.

But complicated adoption regulations, the liberal visitation policy at orphan homes and official encouragement for mothers to retain parental rights often prevents a child from being adopted into a stable family.

"Those who wish to adopt are more numerous than the children available," said Izolda Peterson, director of Moscow Children's Home No. 5, during a recent tour of her institution.

There are 160 children between the ages of 3 and 7 at the home, where they were transferred after spending their first three years in infant homes run by the Health Ministry.

"Sixty percent or more still have regular contact with parents, so they are not available for adoption," Mrs. Peterson explained.

She chastized those mothers who retain their rights but visit only once or twice a year. She said the state can take action to deprive neglectful parents of their children if they stay away for a year or more.

"Parents don't have an automatic, absolute right to visit, in order not to interfere with our work to provide them (children) with a good environment," she said. "But some contact with a parent is better than none, so we try to accommodate them."

A recent article in the weekly Literaturnaya Gazeta (Literary Gazette), which has carried several commentaries on adoption and orphanhood over the past two years, contended that more single mothers abandon their children every year.

The report said fewer than 1 percent of the children in public homes don't have living relatives.

Most are hidden in the institutions, the newspaper said, because of the social view that "to be a single mother is more shameful than to renounce motherhood entirely."

"It is difficult to live," it added. "There is no apartment. Relatives damn her for giving birth to a child of an unfaithful person. There are always circumstances. But young mothers don't wish to rise above that."

Mrs. Agafonova disputed Literaturnaya Gazeta's contention that the number of abandoned children is increasing. She said the numbers have remained "stable" over the past 10 years. The high population at the homes is also the result of courts taking children away from unsuitable parents, she said.

Comedian Uses Different Material To Open Shows

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

One crowd's comedy is another audience's tranquilizer, and comedian Jay Leno said his material as an opening act for James Brown Sunday in Greenville will differ from that he used during his tour with Perry Como.

JAY LENO

"The people who go to see Perry Como are adults who are not as 'hip' as the audience that will go to see James Brown," Leno said in a recent telephone interview. "When I opened for Perry Como, I toned down the routine and omitted jokes the audience wouldn't get."

Leno said he is "excited to open for James Brown" in Minges Coliseum on the East Carolina University campus. "For the last few years I have been doing shows by myself, so I am looking forward to opening for a band again."

Leno's comedy routine has been the opening act for singers Como, Tom Jones and John Denver in the past, and his routine will be different in his Greenville appearance.

But Leno said his act isn't vulgar. "I don't really do a lot of it (obscene humor)," he said.

He said there is not a trend toward vulgarity in current humor, just more public awareness of all types of comedy. "There have always you would want to leave out certain material."

The comedian said he doesn't worry about the audience's reaction to his material any longer. "I have been doing this a long time, and it is my job," he related.

"I just get ready to go to work. Once you become a professional, you learn how to work a room and you always get laughs," Leno said. "You might have nights that are better than other nights, but you don't have a horrible night."

Leno said he has played strip joints and other such places where "the audience is not there to hear jokes. Every terrible job there has been, I have done it."

But he said his act is "not hard work anymore. It is relaxing to do the show."

Leno has been featured on "The Tonight Show" with Johnny Carson and "The David Letterman Show," both late-night talk shows, and on "The Merv Griffin Show," "The Mike Douglas Show," "The John Davidson Show" and "Laverne and Shirley." He also starred in the movie "Silver Bears" with actor Michael Caine.

Leno said he has no regrets about becoming a professional comedian. "I like working for myself," he said. "I'm not trying to sell anything that will give someone cancer."

Former ECU Student Now 'Blue Angel'

EL CENTRO, Calif. — Whether they're captivating audiences with a spine-tingling display of aerial artistry or signing autographs at air shows, the U.S. Navy's Blue Angels are a select group.

Newport's Bill "Soupy" Campbell is one of the 90 hand-picked members of this famous flight demonstration squadron. Campbell, a Marine major, is the Blue Angels' events coordinator.

"Performing one 55-minute show requires nearly six months of planning," says Campbell, 34, the son of William and Gerry Campbell of Newport.

Men like Campbell also play an important role in public activities of the squadron. While working approximately 45 air shows annually, they often visit hospitals, high schools, orphanages and community relations events to talk with the public about the Navy.

This schedule continues for more than nine months each year. The Blue Angels team moves to El Centro for two months during the winter to train and prepare for next year's air show season.

"Toward the end of last year, I had to evaluate the appearance requests we received for 1985," says Campbell. "There were nearly 350."

"Before selecting a town as a possible show site, we consider what the weather will be like during that particular time of year, and also our recruiting interests for that area," he says.

A 1968 graduate of William Gaston Catholic High School in New Bern, N.C., Campbell earned a bachelor of science degree from East Carolina University in 1972, and joined the U.S. Marine Corps that June.

"At the time, my dad (a retired Marine Corps chief warrant officer) was serving in Vietnam," says Campbell. "He was surprised by my decision, but he was also very pleased."

"I developed a strong interest for aviation from growing up around military air bases," he says.

Campbell received his officer's commission upon graduation from platoon leaders' class at the Marine Corps Air Station in Cherry Point, N.C.

While stationed with a fighter squadron near Los Angeles, Campbell deployed overseas aboard the aircraft carrier USS Coral Sea in 1980. As a radio intercept officer, he flew in F-4 Phantoms.

"Landing aboard the carrier at night was an eye-opening experience," he says. "It gave me a deep respect for naval aviators."

Following duty as a flight instructor with an F/A-18 Hornet maintenance detachment, Campbell reported to the Blue Angels last October.

But he derives the most pleasure from commissioned works, such as the one writers Jane and Michael Stern commissioned for Robert Gottlieb, president and editor-in-chief of Alfred A. Knopf in New York.

"It's quite wonderful and I've never seen anything like it," says Knopf editor Martha Kaplan.

The diorama replicates the offices of Gottlieb, Ms. Kaplan and Mary McGuire, who works with them.

"It's got everything in here," says Ms. Kaplan. "I tend not to be too neat, and he's got my wastepaper basket overflowing."

A 13-year veteran, Campbell is looking forward to his first full season with the squadron, which includes an air show at the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, on May 18.

"This squadron has a long tradition of excellence, and our driving force is to be the best," he says. "I've wanted to be a Blue Angel since I first saw them perform in 1957."

Artist Turns Roaches Into Culture

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Cockroaches aren't inherently funny, but what Ricky Boscarino does with them is.

The 24-year-old artist fashions miniature wood and glass scenes and populates them with dead roaches. In one of the dioramas, a bunch of roaches yuk it up in a bowling alley; in another a pair admire statuary in the Galleria Borghese in Rome, where Boscarino studied art.

If Boscarino had his way, he'd put cockroaches in the White House.

"Whoever president in the future will want to buy them can have them," says Boscarino, a New Haven artist whose creations both attract and repel, but usually manage to elicit a chuckle.

Among his creations is a finely detailed, tiny diner — the Eat Periplaneta — where roaches will soon be reading the menu hoping, presumably, that there are no people in their salad. Boscarino has spent about 100 hours creating the diner, which uses a .22-caliber bullet for a cappuccino machine and aspirin tablets for counter stools.

"These are childhood memories of places I grew up near," says Boscarino, who is from Piscataway, N.J., where, he jokes, "there are no cockroaches."

He once aspired to become an entomologist but became bored with a 1980 summer job mounting insects for a Princeton University laboratory.

"I was thinking how can I make it creative, so I started mounting them in different poses," he said.

His first object of roach art shows two roaches seated at a table eating a meal. He is unabashed about lauding the minimalism of this work: "It says it all. It's the classic roach art."

Most of his raw materials are easily found: a clove painted green becomes a bunch of broccoli in the grocery store; an aspirin tablet "makes a perfect bar stool."

But cockroaches, the most important ingredient, are a little too cagey to come by easily: "They are very intelligent. They can sense any predator long before it arrives."

One source of cockroaches is Boscarino's sister, a cartoonist whose cat catches the insects in her Washington, D.C., apartment. Others are rounded up "in the basements of Yale," while more have to be bought for $7.50 a dozen from scientific supply houses.

The return on investment is terrific, however. Boscarino's works start at $200 for dioramas with "two or three roaches. The more roaches, there's more elaborate scenes," which can boost the asking price to $3,000.

Boscarino's patrons include dentists, lawyers, short-order cooks and an executive from the makers of

Critics Say Federal Anti- Bureaucrat Boss Has Demoralized Government

By JAMES ROWLEY
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's point man in the war against bureaucrats is beset these days by critics who say he has politicized the civil service and demoralized government workers with attempts to cut their pay.
Donald J. Devine, a combative conservative Republican who used to teach political science, has become a target because he needs Senate confirmation if he is to serve a second four-year term as director of the Office of Personnel Management.
Some senators aren't pleased about things he's been saying about them.
Sen. Paul Sarbanes, D-Md., for example, expressed irritation with a Devine comment he'd heard about: "Congressmen are like snowflakes, one or two don't make the difference, but a lot of bad ones are a problem."
However, Devine's supporters such as Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., say he has tried to streamline the federal bureaucracy with proposals to restructure government pensions and tie pay hikes to job performance.
"Dr. Devine has succeeded in turning the perennially dull issue of government efficiency into one of the liveliest issues in Washington," Helms said last week at Devine's confirmation hearings before the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee.

Opposition comes chiefly from Democratic senators, smarting from Devine's campaign rhetoric last fall, and federal employees unions, angered by administration proposals to cut federal pay 5 percent and reduce government pensions.
James Pierce, president of the National Federation of Federal Employees, told the Senate committee Devine "has set about a smear campaign designed to represent federal pay and benefits and retirement as an unwarranted burden on American taxpayers."
The federal unions also oppose Devine's plan to tie civil service raises to job performance instead of seniority. Under the current system only career employees who receive unsatisfactory evaluations are denied step raises.
Democratic lawmakers object to Devine's politicking for Helms and 12 Republican House candidates last fall, saying the head of the non-partisan civil service shouldn't participate in politics.
Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton, D-Mo., said the OPM director "has degraded the civil service system" and "brought the system into disrepute with his crass political activity."
Devine admits he has made partisan statements, but says his campaign appearances were part of his job as a political appointee.
"Our job is to be the policy representative of the president on personnel matters. We're not supposed to be non-partisan. This office was particularly created to do that," he said in an interview.

Devine said he has eliminated what he calls the longstanding hypocrisy of civil service that allowed previous administrations to hide political appointees in career posts.
Democrats, however, are quick to point out that at OPM, Devine has doubled the number of political appointees from 17 to 35.
Sarbanes, who testified at the confirmation hearings, said George Nesterchuk, OPM's associate director, left the agency for three months in 1982 to manage the campaign of Sarbanes' Republican opponent.
Several days after the election, Nesterchuk returned to his job at OPM.
Said Sarbanes: "I want you to stop and think what it means if OPM is to be the stable for political hit men running all around the country engaged in these partisan campaigns."
Although he acknowledged in testimony his political association with Nesterchuk dates back to Reagan's 1980 campaign, Devine said he did not arrange to keep Nesterchuk's job vacant while he campaigned against Sarbanes.
"I didn't get around to filling it," he said. "There are a lot of jobs that remain vacant for a long period of time in the government."
Critics contend Devine is overly combative in his relations with Capitol Hill. During the confirmation hearings, Devine was repeatedly confronted with his statements about lawmakers, including the remark that, "Congress is our biggest management problem and we have to make some changes if we want it to work."
Devine responded that he was merely referring to outdated management practices on Capitol Hill.
"I have very good relations with the Hill. There is a public and a private side to relations and my private relations with most people we deal with in Congress are very good," he said during last week's interview.

"None of the senators who have been critical of me have been involved in civil service matters," Devine said. "They aren't the ones you normally deal with."
"I believe when you have a bargain, each side starts from their initial position and you work it out. And what some complain about is that they don't like such a hard bargainer. But I think that's what my job is."
Expecting a close committee vote on Devine's confirmation, Chairman William V. Roth Jr., R-Del., has postponed action because two of the panel's seven GOP senators, Charles Mathias of Maryland and Dave Durenberger of Minnesota, were absent.
Neither senator has indicated which way they will vote on the nomination, which is expected to be opposed by the panel's six Democrats.

Devine, who expressed confidence that he will win confirmation, said that during his days teaching at the University of Maryland he learned "it's important to be able to separate your political beliefs from doing your job."
"And I think that's why I've been so successful here."

San Francisco Is Beset By Lawsuits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — So many people file lawsuits in San Francisco — more than in any American city its size — that "if you throw a rock, you have a good chance of hitting an attorney," according to a published report.
"The city would be bankrupt 100 times over if we had to pay these prayers," said city claims adjuster Bernard Shew. "It's scary to face those numbers."

Francisco Examiner reported Monday.
And people sue over just about anything.
One man sued for the price of cleaning his pants after they were sullied by seagulls at the zoo. Another zoo visitor wanted money for the trauma of being smacked in the nose with a pine cone by a gorilla.
"Reputation-wise, attorneys try to get (cases) in San Francisco," said Conni Barker, a lawyer with the League of California Cities. "The juries are known to be more generous."
That assessment was reinforced by a Rand Corp. study of civil cases from 1960 to 1979. It concluded that San Francisco plaintiffs won 59 percent of the time, compared with 52 percent in Chicago. San Francisco verdicts averaged $84,000, vs. $61,000 in Chicago.
Los Angeles recorded about the same number of legal claims, although it is four times as populous. Indianapolis and Memphis, which are nearly identical in size to San Francisco, pay about $500,000 annually to dispose of legal claims and lawsuits — about a nickel for every dollar San Francisco spends.
San Francisco has more lawyers per capita than any place outside of Washington, D.C. — one for every 70 people, the newspaper reported. It also has more potential for drawing claims because it also is a county and has its own port, international airport and transit agency.
"If you throw a rock, you have a good chance of hitting an attorney," said city attorney George Agnost.

Refugees Killed

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — Unknown gunmen killed two Palestine refugees in Beirut, Lebanon, and the headless bodies of six more refugees were found in southern Lebanon on the weekend, says a U.N. agency.
The U.N. Relief and Works agency said in a communique that six Palestinian boys have been missing from mostly Moslem west Beirut since the weekend. Another refugee was wounded by gunshots in the Lebanese capital, it said.
The current bout of factional fighting in the Sidon area, which began more than two weeks ago, killed 34 refugees and wounded 176 by Monday, said the communique, indicating that most had been shelling victims.
A total of 78 people have died in the fighting.

Anti-Erosion Plans Could Cut Losses

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 10-year "conservation reserve" program for taking 20 million acres from crop production would sharply reduce soil erosion in the United States, according to two studies by Agriculture Department experts.

Both reports, recently sent to Congress, said the program, even at a cost of more than $1 billion a year, would be an economical way to save precious topsoil and reduce surplus crop production.

Pressure is building on Capitol Hill and among conservation groups for a new long-term soil bank that would shift at least 20 million acres of highly erosion-prone cropland into trees and grass to protect it from wind and water damage.

The administration has been cool to the idea, citing its impact on budget spending and the deficit.

Democratic Gov. John Evans of Idaho, representing the National Governors' Association, told the Senate Agriculture Committee on Monday that a new conservation reserve should "set aside land for at least 10 years" and that it could help reduce federal spending on crop price support operations.

Some other groups, including the National Audubon Society and the Wildlife Management Institute, urged the committee to consider removing up to 30 million acres from crop production and putting it in a long-term conservation reserve for 20 years or longer.

One of the Agriculture Department reports — by Roy M. Gray of the department's Soil Conservation Service — said a 10-year conservation reserve program aimed at idling 20 million acres would cost about $9.6 billion over the entire decade, an average of slightly less than $1 billion a year.

"Over half the acres participating in the program would come from land presently planted to wheat," the report said. "The next highest participation would be soybeans, followed by corn and cotton."

The agency says there are about 421 million acres in the United States used for crops and hay. Water erosion causes a loss of about 1.8 billion tons of topsoil each year, with wind erosion adding another 1.2 billion tons.

According to a 1982 survey, about 923 million tons are lost on 41.2 million acres, which are eroding at the rate of more than 10 tons per year.

About one-half of the loss to water erosion occurs on only 10 percent of the land, with the Corn Belt having the greatest concentration of losses. The soil lost to wind is mostly in the southern and northern Plains and the mountain states.

If 20 million acres were taken from crops under the program, the average reduction in erosion would be about 19.5 tons per acre — more than 390 million tons of soil saved annually from both water and wind erosion, the report said.

Further, it said, if Congress does not include a "paid diversion" provision in the 1985 farm bill for paying farmers to take unneeded cropland from production, a 10-year conservation reserve would boost the farm price of wheat about 20 cents a bushel; corn, 10 cents a bushel; and cotton, 5 cents per pound.

Process May Help Spuds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says a new process to join single cells of plants could enable scientists to cross wild potatoes with domestic varieties and one day come up with a disease-resistant superspud.

John P. Helgeson, a plant physiologist with the department's Agricultural Research Service at the University of Wisconsin, Madison, is using cell fusion to bypass many of the obstacles that thwart efforts to cross many potato plants, the agency said Monday in a report.

The obstacles include "cross incompatibility" between certain potato varieties, differing sets of chromosomes, and infertility.

"Cross incompatibility means some potato flowers reject the pollen of other varieties," the report said. "This is prevalent among potatoes native to Mexico, Central America and some wild species from South America which have desirable traits."

Moreover, many of the wild species have 24 chromosomes — the heredity bearing parts within a living cell. Most domestic varieties grown in the $1.7 billion U.S. potato industry have 48 chromosomes.

Helgeson said that cell fusion is "a new approach to solving some specific breeding problems" because it allows breeders to use plants that are difficult to cross conventionally.

For example, he said, by directly fusing cells from wild South American potatoes with cultivated U.S. potatoes, genes for disease resistance may be transferred to the domestic potatoes.

Helgeson "achieved one of the world's first cell fusions of domestic potatoes" in 1984, the report said.

Japanese Fear Wave Of Bigotry

WASHINGTON (AP) — "They are sucking the world dry," complained the Republican senator from Missouri, John Danforth.

"In category after category they are slicing us neatly and thinly off like a piece of sashimi, which they so elegantly do," said Sen. John Heinz, R-Pa.

"This is only the first shot," said Rep. Beryl Anthony Jr., D-Ark., "After this passes, I think we are going to have to load the gun and put some real bullets in it."

In the halls of Congress and commerce, the debate over trade with Japan has recently taken a harsh rhetorical turn, and some Japanese-Americans think they are hearing undertones of bigotry in the discussion.

Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., who as a child was one of 110,000 people of Japanese descent interned in relocation camps during World War II, notes that in times of economic pressure many groups have been made scapegoats. It has happened to Jews, Roman Catholics, Irish immigrants, blacks, Hispanics.

"Any criticism against Japan cannot dip into racial stereotypes or epithets," says Mineta. "I think I have noticed some of that."

Sen. Spark Matsunaga, D-Hawaii, one of four Americans of Japanese descent serving in Congress, says there is "so much emotionalism" in the trade debate that the rhetoric sometimes reminds him of the pre-Pearl Harbor atmosphere in the United States.

Other Japanese-Americans disagree and the San Francisco-based Japanese Americans Citizens League said it has not received any information about overt racist acts stemming from trade frictions.

Almost everyone acknowledges that there's been tough talk in recent days by American legislators and government and business leaders frustrated by the $37 billion trade gap between the United States and Japan and by Japan's reluctance to open its markets.

But Floyd Shimomura, a law professor at the University of California at Davis, said some politicians tap into latent anti-Japanese fears when they draw analogies between a trade war and World War II.

Congress, he said, may be selling protectionist legislation to the American public by "touching that kind of prejudice that is dormant."

"Now you have members of Congress talking like steelworkers," he said.

The issue broke into the open last month when Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., criticized Chrysler Corp. Chairman Lee A. Iacocca for a speech Iacocca gave to a conference of Democratic members of Congress. Matsui, who is of Japanese descent, said the speech contained a "great tinge of racism."

Iacocca, among other things, used the word "sayonara" — Japanese for "goodbye" — in a way the Japanese find offensive, Matsui said.

The Chrysler chief also said, "I'm no communist, folks, but it's not Russia that's laying waste to my business and to most of the rest of business in this country. It's Japan, our friend. While we stack the missiles up in the front yard, all aimed at our enemy, our friend is taking over the backyard."

Iacocca later wrote Matsui, saying he was sorry the speech had been misunderstood.

There are other examples that ring alarms to those sensitive to any suggestion of ethnic slur.

— Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., during a Senate committee hearing March 20 said of the Japanese that they "love all those bowings — they have been doing that for 25 years and getting away with it."

— Heinz at a March 8 hearing referred to Japanese eating habits in making his point. When the "Japanese get their little fork into us — or chopsticks ... they really do stick it to us," he said.

— Rep. Richard T. Schulze, R-Pa., entered into the Congressional Record a letter he had received from a correspondent in London, England. The letter talked of the Japanese negotiating technique: "The Japs even have a word for it called 'harage' ... which basically means saying one thing when you really mean the opposite."

Without exception, Japanese-Americans said they are sensitive to any assumptions they would automatically side with Japan in a dispute.

That assumption — that Americans of Japanese ancestry were somehow not completely loyal — was the basis for President Franklin D. Roosevelt's internment camps.

"Americans of Japanese ancestry are not responsible for, and nor are they involved in the policies of Japan," stresses Mineta. "They are American citizens."

Indeed, Matsui and Mineta in the House, and Matsunaga and Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, in the Senate, are among those in Congress who want something done to open Japan's markets to U.S. exports.

Therapist Says Menopausal Problems Avoidable

By MALCOLM RITTER
AP Science Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Women who realize there is useful life after menopause can avoid the psychological symptoms of irritability, anxiety and depression that often accompany the change in their lives, a psychotherapist says.

Research suggests that those symptoms are not biological inevitabilities of menopause, Ruth Formanek said Wednesday at a meeting of the psychoanalysis division of The American Psychological Association.

In a summary of menopause studies, Ms. Formanek said women following enjoyable careers have been shown to suffer far fewer psychological symptoms at menopause than other women. The same trend is seen among women with higher family income, higher education and higher social class, she said.

Studies in different cultures show that if a society expects menopausal women to be irritable and feel life is over, women tend to comply, Ms. Formanek said. Research also found that women who complained of dissatisfaction with their marriages had more psychological menopause symptoms, she said in an interview.

Overall, results suggest that anxiety, depression and irritability are not biological signs of menopause, but rather psychological reactions to menopause, which some women see as "a symbol of advancing age, when one gets the impression that options have been lost," she said.

The reactions may be especially strong for women in lower social classes who believe in older stereotypes about menopause being the end of life, she said. In contrast to working women, such a women may see herself as valuable only for producing children.

"The only way she can be somebody in society is to be a housewife, mother and to produce children. With menopause, that option is no longer viable," Ms. Formanek said.

Middle-class women are more likely to have read popular literature that says life continues to be valuable after menopause and so have a better attitude toward it, she said.

Therapy can help a woman overcome the psychological reactions, and simply realizing that they stem from social and cultural factors should help many women, she said. Women can help themselves by reading about menopause.

Ms. Formanek, a psychologist at Jewish Community Services in Rego Park and associate clinical professor in a child and adolescent psychotherapy program at Adelphi University in Garden City, also said that a woman's attitude toward menopause can be shaped by her views on having additional children.

If the woman had postponed motherhood and realized menopause had cut off her dream of children, "you'd expect some kind of depressive reaction to the first few hot flushes," she said. But a woman who had given birth to more children than she wanted "might greet the menopause as a very safe form of birth control."

She also said recent studies have found no evidence that women become more forgetful or confused at menopause. "That's all in the 19th century literature," she said.

Expert Advises AIDS Poses Threat To Hemophiliacs

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — New techniques could prevent the transmission of AIDS in the blood-clotting concentrates needed by hemophiliacs within a couple years, an expert said in urging the high-risk group to defer having children.

"On one hand, we think the risk is very small" of hemophiliacs passing on the AIDS virus to their children, said Peter H. Levine, medical director of the National Hemophilia Foundation. "On the other hand, even though the risk is small, it's a risk of a very devastating disease."

"We are saying hemophiliacs should postpone children for a year or two. In that period of time, we would know a whole lot more. Our knowledge of AIDS has leaped dramatically in the last few years and it will leap dramatically in the next few years," Levine said Thursday in a telephone interview.

There has been only one reported case of AIDS in a hemophiliac's child.

Researchers at the national Centers for Disease Control and the Institute Pasteur in Paris recently discovered that the AIDS virus can be killed by heating the blood-clotting concentrates needed by hemophiliacs, who lack naturally produced clotting factors, Levine said.

The foundation is working to convert all of the clotting concentrate in the United States to that kind of product, he said. The new method should help end AIDS among hemophiliacs within the next three or four years, he said.

"After an incubation period is over, no one with hemophilia will any longer be at risk," said Levine, chief of medicine at Worcester Memorial Hospital and professor of medicine at the University of Massachusetts.

About 95 percent of the clotting factor given to the nation's 20,000 hemophiliacs, usually in the form of freeze-dried powder which is injected by patients at home, already has been treated with heat, he said.

The scientists plan to present their findings Tuesday at an international conference on AIDS held by the CDC in Atlanta.

A total of 9,405 cases of AIDS have been reported in the United States since 1981, according to the CDC. The vast majority — 9,297 — involve adults, many of whom are homosexuals. The remaining 108 are pediatric cases.

Doctors have yet to find a cure for AIDS, which destroys a victim's ability to fight disease, but believe it is transmitted through sexual contact and the exchange of body fluids, particularly blood transfusions.

Of the nation's 20,000 hemophiliacs, nearly all of whom are men, 69 without any other risk factor have contracted AIDS, according to Alan Brownstein, executive director of the hemophilia foundation.

The foundation has distributed bulletins to its chapters around the country, recommending for the first time that "there should at least be strong consideration given to deferring pregnancy on the part of wives of hemophiliacs until we know more about the potential transmission of virus from mother to child," Levine said.

That's also the unofficial position of the Centers for Disease Control, said Dr. Janine Jason, a CDC epidemiologist. "For the moment, people should plan not to have kids in the next year. It's certainly not something you'd want to wish on any child."

Studies by 10 health centers worldwide have revealed only three cases in which members of hemophiliacs' families have shown AIDS symptoms, Levine said. All three are in the United States; only one involves a child of a hemophiliac — 1-year-old Dwight Burk of Cresson, Pa., 85 miles east of Pittsburgh, he said.

Doctors believe that Dwight's father, Patrick, 27, a hemophiliac, developed AIDS-Related Complex, a pre-AIDS illness which doesn't necessarily lead to AIDS, from his regular doses of blood clotting concentrates.

Doctors say Burk then apparently passed the virus on to his wife, Lauren, who in turn became pregnant with Dwight. The father learned in December that he now has AIDS; the mother has AIDS-Related Complex.

"It most likely occurred in utero. He (Dwight) was probably exposed in utero to the virus," said Dr. Margaret V. Ragni, co-director of the Hemophilia Center of Western Pennsylvania and the father's physician.

The foundation hopes to establish a strong support network for hemophiliacs and their families "so we don't see every hemophiliac couple divorced in the next year," Brownstein said.

Study Indicates Infertility Doubles With Use Of IUDs

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Women who use contraception and have never had children should avoid plastic intrauterine devices if they someday want to become pregnant, according to a researcher who published a study suggesting that IUDs cause infertility.

IUDs — coils or loops of plastic or metal inserted in the uterus to prevent conception — seem to double the risk of infertility in women who have never had children, a companion study found.

"This does not mean that infertility will be caused in all women who use IUDs," said Dr. Daniel W. Cramer, one of the researchers. "It certainly does not mean that all tubal infertility is caused by the IUD."

The study by Cramer, a researcher at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, and another study led by Dr. Janet R. Daling of the University of Washington in Seattle were published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

In an accompanying editorial, Dr. Daniel R. Mishell Jr. of the University of Southern California noted that the IUD is still worthwhile for women who've already borne children but don't want to have more.

The devices, which are used by about 2.2 million American women, are the fourth most common form of contraception after voluntary sterilization, the pill and condoms. The study suggested that IUDs may have caused 80,000 women to become infertile.

The increase in risk appears to depend on the kind of IUD used. Plastic IUDs were more frequently linked with infertility than were copper-covered IUDs, which are more commonly used and seem to be relatively safe.

"If a woman has to select an IUD who's never had a prior pregnancy, I would certainly opt for the copper IUD," said Ms. Daling, "and possibly I would look for some other method of contraception if I was interested in having children at a later period in time."

Both studies compared the prior IUD use of women who had tried and failed to have children with that of new mothers.

The Boston study found that the risk of infertility was about 60 percent higher than usual among women who used copper IUDs. The Seattle study found a smaller, not statistically meaningful, increase among these women.

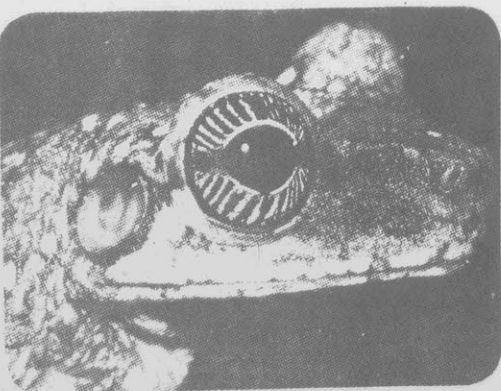

The Boston study found that the risk of infertility rises rapidly during the first few months of IUD use but increases gradually after that.

The two studies found that two brands of plastic IUDs — the Lippes Loop and the Saf-T-Coil — appear to approximately triple the risk of infertility. The Lippes Loop is still sold but Saf-T-Coil was discontinued about two years ago.

The risk is even higher for the Dalkon Shield, another plastic IUD that has not been sold for a decade.

"Regarding women who had an IUD inserted and have passed through the first few critical months without complications," Cramer said, "I don't think they should automatically have the device removed except for those who still have the Dalkon Shield in place."

Strange Brew

This frog with striped irises is one of many strange animals and plants discovered in recent years atop Neblina, the "Mountain of Mists." This 250-square-mile "tepui" is an isolated mesa rising 6,000 feet above Venezuela's tropical rain forest. Scientists believe that 98 percent of Neblina's plants and animals are found nowhere else on Earth. Other unusual life forms there include a pointy-nosed frog, pink caterpillars and a bat with a horned nose like a rhinoceros.

DO YOU KNOW — What three South American countries share a border with Venezuela?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Appaloosa horses have reddish coats with black or brown "leopard" spots.

Football Player Uses Game To Teach Students Career Rules

HONOLULU (AP) — It was the regularly scheduled program on career education offered to the students of Kaiser High School. The kids have listened to accountants and veterinarians, engineers and travel agents — all professions that they might practically consider.

None of these speakers has drawn more than 150 people. But on a recent afternoon, when San Francisco '49ers tight end Russ Francis came to talk, twice that number showed up. Maybe none of those teen-agers will ever play pro football, but they came to hear a celebrity, a Super Bowl winner who had gone to a local high school, tell them about life in the fast lane.

Francis was introduced by his former homeroom teacher at Kailua High School, Leanne Luke Chuck, now career and college counselor at Kaiser.

"He was bright and articulate, and maybe mischievous," she said of Francis' years at the school. "He was quarterback on our team, but he transferred to Oregon in his senior year."

"When I left Kailua, I went to Oregon — I used to work there summers when I lived here, hauling hay," Francis told his audience. "I do better in the country than I do in the city. I played for the Patriots for six years, and then three years ago I moved to San Francisco. I have a home and a ski shop in Vermont, but I spend a lot of time in Honolulu."

His message, though, was about football. "When I got into professional sports, I did it without planning to. It never made sense to me that people would want to run at each other at high speed. One or both will fall down. I didn't see a future in football. It's painful."

"I went to college for a degree in animal science, intending to be a vet. In my sophomore year, I broke my ankle and I'm convinced that I did it because I didn't want to play football. But I did play in my junior year.

"The NFL was something new to me and the first professional football game I ever went to, I played in. I was playing for the College All-Stars against the Pittsburgh Steelers. They don't play that game anymore."

Francis then got into the subject of options and the idea that a college education expands options, gives one more chances in life.

"In high school I got interested in planes and thought about being a pilot. In college, I considered being a vet. Get a degree; it puts you more in control of your life," he said.

"If you can do something well, you will enjoy it. Do what is important to you. If you find yourself where you aren't comfortable, change direction. That's why you need options. I'm not going to tell you to do everything your parents and your teachers try to tell you, because they aren't always right, either."

It concerns Francis that fans don't give professional football players credit for much intellect.

"So many people think that pro football players have an IQ five points below a geranium," he said. "It takes brains, and it's hard work. We work six days a week. The game is Sunday. Monday we have a light workout and report injuries. Tuesday is our day off, but you spend it soaked in ice or in the whirlpool. The rest of the week we have field practice, we watch films and study charts."

His final piece of advice was to listen. "You have to work on listening, but you learn a lot. My mother was a geriatrics nurse, and I used to go to the nursing home with her sometimes. Old people told me two things: 'I can't believe I got here so quickly — just yesterday the kids were young,' and 'There's so much I wish I had done.'"

"There's not much you can do about the first," Francis said, "but never have to say the second. Do what you want to when you can. It's discipline, and you have to find a way to do it. You have to tell yourself sometimes when you hurt, 'Get up and get back in the huddle.' It's the way life works."

Before playing to the first trick, plan your campaign. By the second trick it could be too late to adopt a different line.

Note South's jump to two spades on hand with only 13 points in high cards. Since he knew (or thought he knew) where he wanted to play the hand, his tremendous playing strength warranted a jump shift. As the cards lie, six diamonds is a better contract than six spades, but we can't blame South for his reluctance to put down a dummy that included a seven-card spade suit with 100 honors.

West led the queen of clubs and declarer took care to see that he won that trick in hand—the king of clubs was needed in dummy as an entry. Then came three rounds of trumps, and again declarer made a farsighted play by not discarding those three seemingly useless hearts on the table—they were his only line of communication to hand. Declarer chose to let go of one diamond and two hearts.

Next declarer started on diamonds. He led a diamond to the king and, had he continued with the ace, he would have been defeated—West would ruff and the board would be an entry short to set up and run the diamonds. Declarer cleared that hurdle by returning to hand with a heart ruff to lead his remaining diamond. If West ruffed, he would be squandering his high trump on a losing diamond. But sluffing was no better.

Declarer won the ace of diamonds and ruffed a diamond to establish the suit. West did not overruff, but to no avail. Declarer simply presented him with his trump trick and then claimed the rest of the tricks, for there were more than enough high diamonds in dummy to take care of his club losers.

The 38th Annual Wilmington Azalea Festival

EVERYWHERE, SPECTATORS . . . Along the more than three-mile parade route, spectators lined the streets along the route of the 167 unit parade that began at 9:30 a.m. Saturday and lasted until well past 11 o'clock. In some places along Market Street, spectators sat on tall steps or climbed trees for better vantage points.

Text And Photographs By Jerry Raynor

SOLITUDE . . . away from the festival crowds, was the preference of some visitors to Wilmington, such as this couple and their dog strolling along the beach at Wrightsville Beach.

Unseasonal frosts and freezes earlier this year dimmed the brilliance of azaleas in Wilmington at Azalea Festival time.

But neither the crisped appearance of the city's famed azaleas, nor the cloudy weather of this year's festival dates of April 11-14 did much to dampen the enthusiasm visitors showed for one of North Carolina's favorite spring festive events.

Activities, as in past years, offered attractions for just about any tastes in outdoor and indoor entertainments. The circus was in town.

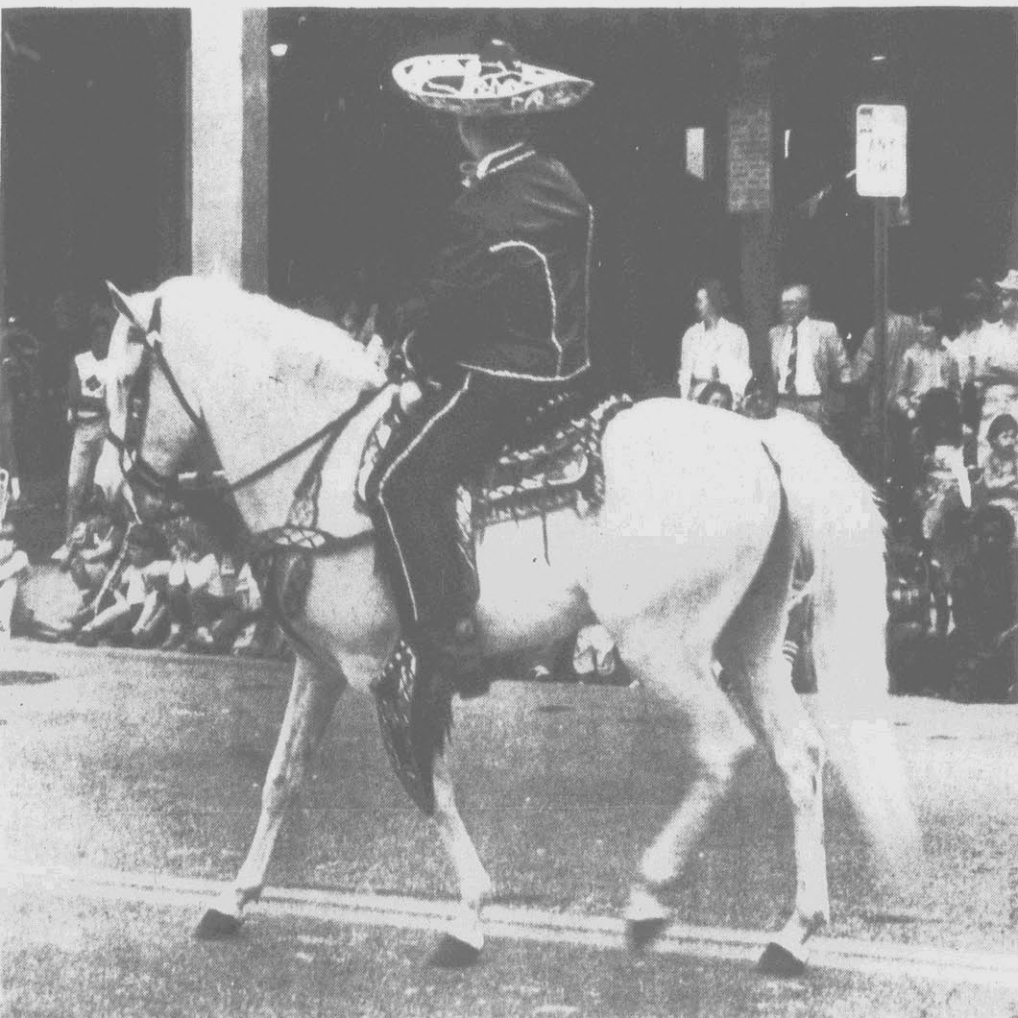

There was a big horse show, art shows, a dance performance, all in addition to the presence of the Azalea Queen, stars of country-western music in concert, and performers from television shows.

Sport lovers had softball games to attend, and the opportunity to watch a rugged tug-of-war at Wrightsville Beach, along with a volleyball tournament.

The U.S. Coast Guard Cutter Ingham was docked downtown across the Cape Fear River from the site of the U.S.S. North Carolina Battleship memorial. Both had a steady flow of visitors.

And above all, it was again the Saturday parade that drew most attention. An estimated 35,000 spectators lined the downtown parade route to see 167 units in a three-mile parade go by. High school bands, horses, beauty queens, clowns, boys clubs and YMCA groups, along with agency and commercial floats, received rounds of applause for colorful costumes, sprightly music, or breathtaking athletic prowess.

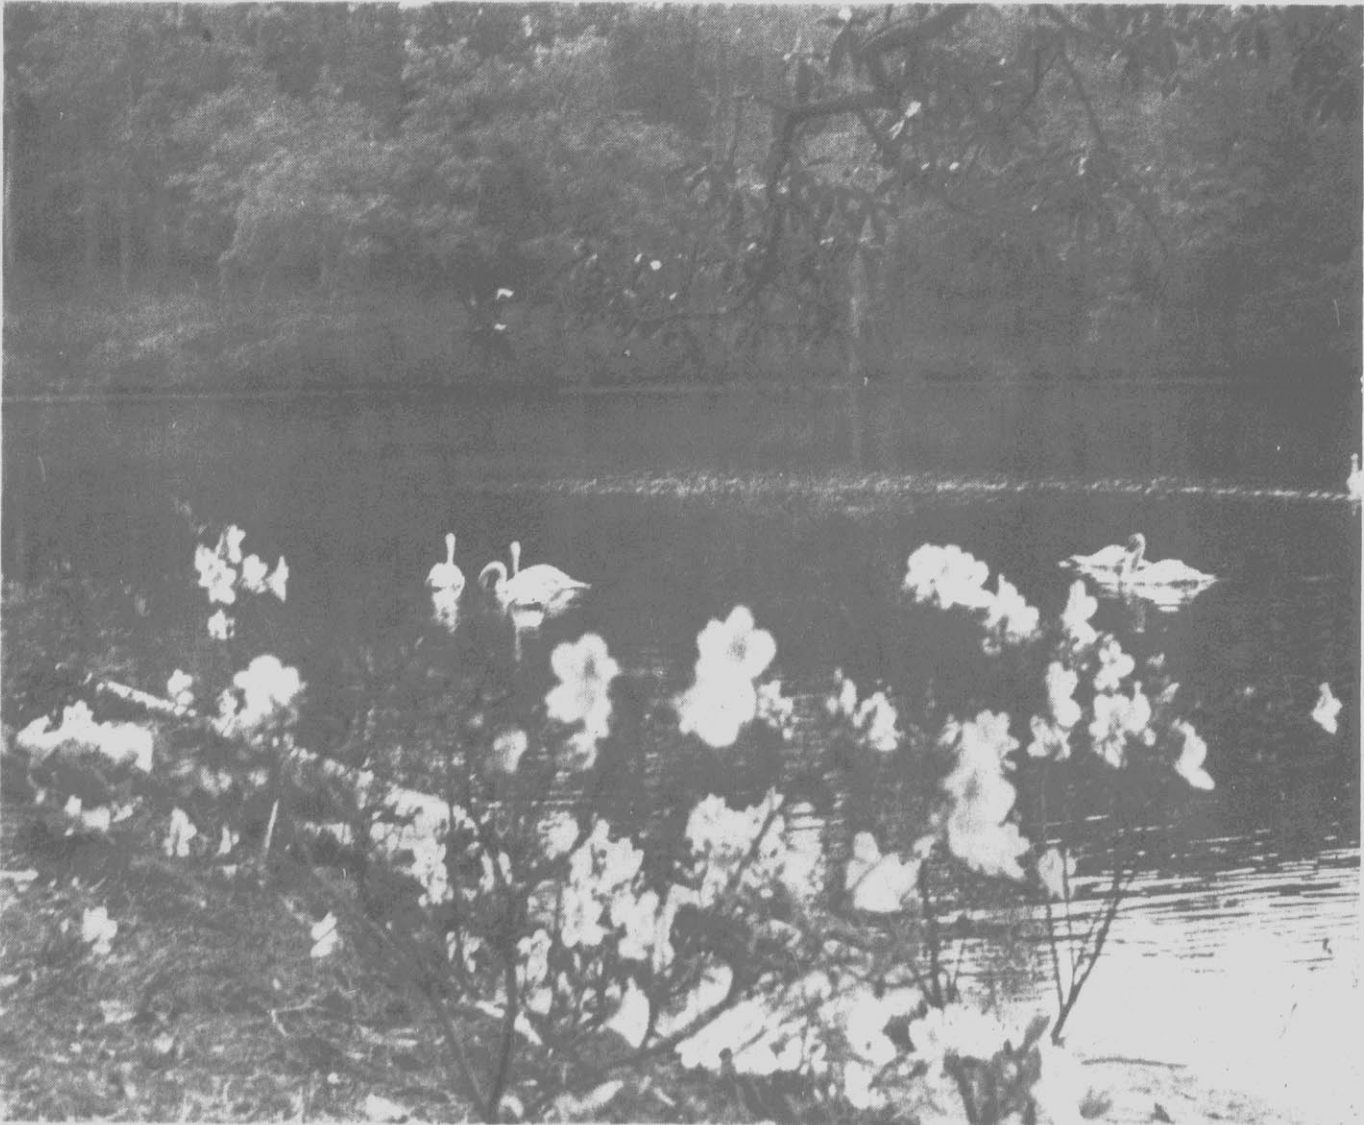

The 38th Annual Azalea Festival was once more a popular success.

HORSES ON PARADE . . . were favorites with spectators. They came in all sizes, shapes and colors, with riders young and old, male and female. Some were bedecked in elegant trappings; others only had saddles. The rider of this pure white horse was attired in the Spanish mode.

TEMPORARILY DESERTED . . . The "Art Ark" vessel of art work from Virginia, at times the site of clusters of art lovers, was deserted during the hours the big parade was passing nearby.

THE BEST IN AZALEAS . . . in Wilmington this year were those in Arlie Gardens that somehow managed to escape the browning blight of earlier frosts and freezes. Here, white swans cruise the waters of a pond in the gardens that also contain beckoning walking trails, bridges, arbors, huge vines and ancient, gnarled live oaks.

FDR: Honored In Death By Ally And Enemy

By STEPHEN W. BELL
Associated Press Writer
HYDE PARK, N.Y. (AP) — When President Franklin D. Roosevelt died 40 years ago, Lloyd's of London tolled its Lutine Bell and Radio Tokyo broadcast condolences to the U.S. fleet under attack by Japan's kamikaze pilots off Okinawa.

FDR, who had been president longer than any of his 31 predecessors, was honored in death by an ally with a signal reserved for the sinking of a great ship and treated with unusual respect by an enemy.

"We indeed grieve to learn of the death of President Roosevelt," Radio Tokyo broadcast in English. "We didn't expect that he could pass away when the whole world is in such a state of chaos."

Winston S. Churchill, Adolf Hitler and Josef Stalin were his peers, the Great Depression, Pearl Harbor, D-Day his challenges. Eisenhower, Marshall, Patton and MacArthur were his generals. Herbert C. Hoover, Alfred M. Landon, Wendell Willkie, Thomas E. Dewey were his vanquished Republican foes.

Roosevelt died of a cerebral hemorrhage at the Little White House in Warm Springs, Ga., at 4:35 p.m. Eastern War Time on Thursday April 12, 1945.

American radio began 80 hours of commercial-free news broadcasts. In Manhattan, a woman said she did not need a radio; she could read the news on the faces of passersby. Newspaper editors nationwide added FDR, as commander in chief, to lists of Americans killed in action.

House Speaker Sam Rayburn, a man described as having only two emotions, "solicitude and anger," wept; Pope Pius XII was awakened; Andrei Gromyko, Soviet ambassador to the United States, called FDR "one of the greatest statesmen the world has ever known."

"His ability to project American idealism and to project American democratic feeling led to the deep outpouring around the world at his death," said William R. Emerson, director of the Roosevelt library and museum in Hyde Park.

"I was serving in Okinawa at the time he died, but I think there was a feeling mainly of being stunned because most of the forces ... had never known a president other than Roosevelt, so there was a feeling of there being a great void," said Roosevelt biographer James McGregor Burns.

Emerson, director of the Roosevelt library and museum in Hyde Park, was a fighter pilot in Italy when the news came.

"My squad was the worst collection of retrogrades, all black-hearted Southerners like myself who to a man disliked Roosevelt," Emerson said. "I'll never forget how all that nonsense stopped (when he died)."

"While they reviled him, they counted on him. It was the most striking reversal of form I've ever seen. All that stuff about 'that man in the White House,' stopped because they had come to rely upon him."

FDR was born at his family's Hyde Park home, overlooking the Hudson River, Jan. 30, 1882, and was buried in its rose garden on Sunday April 15, 1945. After serving as governor of New York, he survived an assassination attempt as president-elect on Feb. 15, 1933, in Miami, in which the mayor of Chicago was killed.

Roosevelt was inaugurated 32nd president on March 4, 1933 in the desperate days of the Great Depression. His first 100 days of legislative action formed a yardstick against which succeeding presidents have been measured.

He was the only president elected to four terms; a constitutional amendment ratified by Congress in 1951 now limits presidents to two.

Roosevelt has ranked among the top three presidents in many surveys of American historians taken in the last 25 years.

OUT FOR A RIDE — Franklin D. Roosevelt, his cigarette holder clinched in a grin, sits at the wheel of his automobile on April 4, 1939, at Warm Springs, Ga. FDR was president longer than anyone and may have been the most revered, and despised, man in the role. He died on April 12, 1945. (AP Laserphoto)

FORTY YEARS LATER — Most visitors to Franklin D. Roosevelt's ancestral home in Hyde park, N.Y., never speak but stand quietly as they view the burial plot of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt. FDR is buried in a simple grave with an American flag at his head. A marble slab which bears his name stands near by. (AP Laserphoto)

Public Supports Medical Proposal

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government proposal requiring medical treatment for severely handicapped infants who otherwise might be allowed to die drew "an overwhelming outpouring" of more than 116,000 letters, most in support of the rules, the government says.

The Department of Health and Human Services, in announcing its final version of the so-called "Baby Doe" draft federal regulations, said the letter-writers "strongly endorsed the compelling objective of assuring the provision of medically indicated treatment to disabled infants with life-threatening conditions.

"This was an overwhelming outpouring of letters from concerned citizens from all walks of life ...," the department said, and the regulations reflected the majority view.

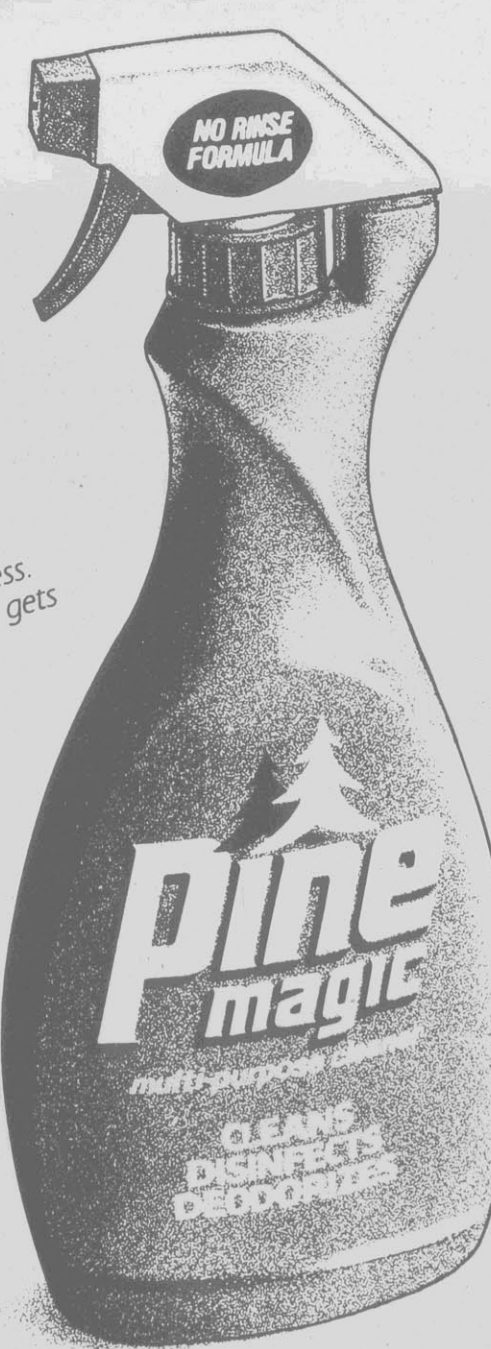

The regulations, which take effect in 30 days, specify only three cases in which doctors are justified in withholding medical treatment: when an infant is in an irreversible coma; when treatment merely prolongs an inevitable death, or when treatment is so extreme and so likely to be futile that it becomes inhumane to administer it.

The Baby Doe rules are named after a highly publicized 1982 case in Bloomington, Ind., in which treatment was withheld from a newborn infant suffering severe handicaps.

The administration at that time attempted to enact a regulation requiring such treatment, but was stopped by the courts.

German Jews Restoring Life In Communities

By DAVID MINTHORN
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — Jewish communities are springing back to life across West Germany, despite lingering anti-Semitism that requires police to guard them.

In the years since the Holocaust, about 60 Jewish communities with a total of 28,000 members have formed in cities and towns.

But the number of Jews in West Germany today is but a fraction of the 525,000 in 1933 when the Nazis came to power vowing to rid the country — and later Europe — of its Jews.

Some 300,000 Jews — many prominent in science, law, music and the theater — fled Germany by 1941 to escape Nazi terror. Virtually all the others were deported to the Auschwitz concentration camp in Poland and other "death camps," where they became part of the 6 million victims of Hitler's "Final Solution."

Most of the victims of the Holocaust were non-German Jews — among them an estimated 3.2 million Polish Jews, 90 percent of that nation's Jewish population. The others were rounded up during Nazi occupations of the Soviet Union, the Balkans and Central and Western Europe.

German Jewish leaders, looking back on the struggle to rebuild communities from the ashes, view the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II with a mixture of optimism and caution.

Heinz Galinski, chairman of the West Berlin Jewish community, the country's largest with 6,300 members, says several factors will determine whether Jews have a future in West Germany.

"First, we must have sufficient, qualified Jewish young people to continue the work that we've built up and started," he said in an interview.

"Second, it will depend on the actions of those around us. How they treat us, especially the young generation, will determine how far Jewish life in Germany will be possible."

The problem of aging membership, compounded by an increasing number of young adults who marry outside the Jewish religion, is a major concern.

Werner Nachmann, chairman of the Central Council of German Jews, said communities are threatened because only one in four young Jews in West Germany marries within the religion.

"It is important to rebuild religious communities in Germany. Otherwise, the wishes of the (Nazi) tyrants will be fulfilled: to make the country free of Jews," Nachmann told a conference of young Jews last November in Mannheim.

Alexander Ginsburg, the general secretary of the central council in Duesseldorf, points to the increasing number of Jewish professional people in West Germany — the offspring of people who survived the Holocaust.

"There are constructive things today in German Jewish life," he told The Associated Press. "The younger generation is coming up — 1,500 studying in the universities. We opened a Jewish college in Heidelberg for 200 students."

Still, there are constant frictions. Neo-Nazi fringe groups agitate for expulsion of Jews and other foreigners from West Germany and brand factual accounts of Nazi killings of Jews the "Auschwitz lie."

According to Polish government figures, about 2.5 million Jews were among the 4 million people who died at Auschwitz in 1940-45.

Threats of terrorism force West German police to keep synagogues, community centers, nursery schools and other Jewish property under close guard.

Galinski calls the constant alert a "precautionary measure to protect Jewish property from right-wing radicals, the incorrigibles, and also from the hate directed at Israel."

The 72-year-old Galinski, a survivor of Auschwitz and Germany's Bergen-Belsen concentration camp liberated by Allied troops April 21, 1945, is protected by bodyguards. He narrowly escaped an attack by the anarchist Red Army Faction in 1975, West German officials reported.

For Jews like Galinski who managed to survive the Nazi years, or those who came back to Germany after fleeing the Holocaust, the nightmare can never be forgotten. Yet most of them have learned to cope with the past.

"I lost my mother and two aunts. My husband lost his mother and a brother. But I always say that it is a gift of God that we had the luck to be saved," an elderly West Berlin woman said in a recent German television interview. She declined to have her name used for security reasons.

In Frankfurt and other cities, there are gravestones of Jews who chose suicide rather than submit to deportation, and plaques mark the sites of synagogues razed in the Nazi "Crystal Night" rampage of November 1938.

Frankfurt's Jewish community has 5,000 members, Munich's 4,000, and there are smaller communities in Cologne, Duesseldorf, Hamburg and elsewhere.

The West Berlin community has four synagogues, with two rabbis to serve Orthodox and Reform congregations, and a modern community center with a kosher restaurant and a 40,000-volume library.

The community also subsidizes a hospital, a home for elderly people with 138 apartments, a youth center and a day-care facility for 180

Jewish and non-Jewish children.

The West Berlin community attempts to maintain contacts with the Jewish community in East Germany "within the framework of possibilities," Galinski said.

"We can telephone. We send our cantor over there so they can carry out certain religious functions. In East Berlin and East Germany together there are perhaps 350 Jewish people."

The pre-war Jewish population of Berlin, then the capital of Germany, was 170,000.

In many communities, there are also signs of strain between the Jewish generation that survived the war and their offspring.

Coconuts Hold Future Of Islands

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
MAJURO, Marshall Islands (AP) — The coconut, so much a part of South Pacific islanders' past, now may be the key to their future.

The bunch of coconuts that washed ashore here unknown eons ago has spread and grown into the single indispensable staple of islander life, supplying food and fiber, firewood and firewater, toys, tools, trinkets and tonics.

And in the future, the experts say, the common coconut could give poor emerging island nations a firmer foothold in the world economy.

"The potential for significant and sustained economic growth... is real" if the Marshall Islanders develop their coconut industry, a U.S. government study has concluded.

The Marshall Islands, 5,000 miles southwest of California, are one of three components of the U.S.-controlled Trust Territory of the Pacific Islands expected to become semi-independent states as early as this year. The others are the Federated States of Micronesia and the Palau Islands.

Majuro atoll, the Marshalls' capital, already has a factory for squeezing the oil out of copra, dried coconut meat. And now the Marshallese, who call coconut "ni," want to expand into refining the oil and making non-dairy creamers, soaps and other coconut products.

In the Federated States, meanwhile, where the versatile fruit is called "mwangas," technicians are experimenting with running engines on coconut oil. And in Palau, they hope to reopen a closed copra plant to process their "lius."

"Coconut is all-important. It always has been," said Andon Amaraich, the Federated States foreign secretary.

The gray-haired Amaraich smiled as he recalled his village childhood, when he would climb a coconut tree twice a day, once to fetch a green coconut whose nutritious liquid would be given to family infants, and the second time to tap the flower-stalk sap that would be fermented into an alcoholic toddy for older relatives.

"Nothing is wasted," Amaraich told a visiting reporter. "Houses are made from the wood of the coconut palm, brooms from the fronds, ashtrays from the shells."

For the familiar fruit of the "cocos nucifera," the tall palm everywhere leaning slenderly into the tropical sun, the uses seem infinite.

The musical Marshallese language includes 200 words for the tree, the fruit and their uses, many of them culinary.

The Marshallese make smoked fish with coconut husk, the fibrous outer shell. They cook octopus in grated coconut meat. The hard inner shell, cut in half, makes a cup, or even a child's toy boat. The leaves, woven, make baskets. The husk fiber makes rope and mats.

The shell is used to carry fire. The fronds, spread over lagoon waters, act like a net to trap fish. Some islanders even chew coconut husk to prevent seasickness.

But the coconut's greatest economic potential has always been its oil — used today as a base for soaps and shampoos, cosmetics, detergents, margarine, vegetable shortenings.

"Look at any package of cookies or crackers and you'll see coconut oil among the ingredients," noted John A. Smith, the American manager of Majuro's Tobolar copra plant.

German colonists of the 19th century were the first coconut traders in the central Pacific. By World War II the Marshalls, then under Japanese rule, had 28,400 acres of coconut groves.

Only in recent years has production climbed back toward pre-war levels. But Smith, a former Peace Corps volunteer here, said production could double overnight in the Marshalls' outlying atolls.

"A lot of the copra is just not being picked up," he said.

An unreliable island shipping system and the migration of out-islanders, potential copra harvesters, to central atolls have combined to hold down production.

The U.S. government study, conducted two years ago by the Defense Department, recommended improving transportation and rehabilitating old coconut groves.

Financing remains uncertain, but the Marshall Islands government plans a five-year program of replanting 25,000 of the 34,000 acres of coconut palms, many of which are unproductive trees dating to Japanese or even German times.

In the neighboring Federated States, the Ponape Agricultural and Trade School has begun to turn a profit on its small coconut-products plant, which makes "Oil of Ponape" toiletries.

The school has also demonstrated that diesel engines can run efficiently on coconut oil — a potential boon for energy-short outer islands.

"What we're doing is an example of what can be done with coconuts," said the Rev. James Stehr, director of the Jesuit-operated school.

WHAT IS A GENERIC DRUG?

A generic drug is a pharmaceutical product, manufactured and sold under its "common" or chemical name, instead of a trademarked brand or proprietary name.

Is There a Difference Between Generic and Brand-Name Drugs? The same active ingredients that go in a brand-name drug, go into the generic drugs. Both are carefully tested and government controlled.

Why Do Generic Drugs Cost Less? Once the 17-year patent expires on a trademarked drug, then it can be manufactured and sold under its common chemical or "generic" name. When many companies make it, competition lowers the cost.

How Much Will You Save With a Generic Prescription? Your savings can be as much as 50% and even more, depending upon the drug involved. In most cases, when the brand-name drug is replaced by a generic, the savings are substantial.

Can All Prescriptions Be Filled With Generics? Many, but not all, prescriptions could be filled with generic drugs. Your Kroger Pharmacist will be glad to tell you if a generic equivalent is available for your particular medication.

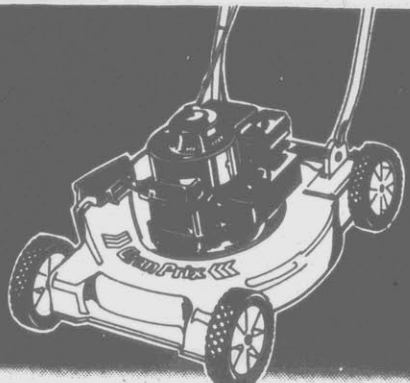

How Can You Be Assured the Quality of a Generic Drug? By the dependability and integrity of the professional pharmacist and the store where you shop. We, at Kroger, are dedicated to serving you with dependable products at the lowest possible prices consistent with the highest quality drugs.

How Can You Benefit From Generic Drug Savings? Talk it over with your doctor. Ask him about using generic drugs in your prescription. With a generically written prescription you could start saving today!
