Turner Bids To Gain CBS Control

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Broadcast maverick Ted Turner told the Federal Communications Commission today he will try to take control of CBS Inc. and asked federal approval for the unfriendly takeover.

Papers filed by Turner's attorney said CBS stockholders would be offered stocks, notes and other securities in his Turner Broadcasting System worth $2.98 billion, or $175 for each share of CBS stock, which closed Wednesday on the New York Stock Exchange at $109.75.

No cash would be paid.

The FCC filing acknowledged that CBS opposes the takeover bid. On Wednesday, CBS Chairman Thomas Wyman told a stockholders' meeting in Chicago that any attempt to compromise the "independence and integrity" of CBS News would be fought.

An announcement read on Turner's Cable News Network and attributed to him said the offer was conditional on acquiring 67 percent of CBS stock, or about 21 million voting shares.

Industry analysts have been skeptical that Turner, who owns 80 percent of Turner Broadcasting, would succeed in an unfriendly bid to control CBS. He was scheduled to meet with a group of analysts later in the day.

One analysts, Fred Anschel of the investment firm Dean Witter Reynolds Inc., said about the offer:

"It's a complex package. Very complex packages sometimes run into problems, especially when there's no cash and the liquidity of the securities is not immediately clear."

Anne Luzzatto, a CBS spokeswoman, said in New York that "the unusual number and complexity of Turner's proposed securities make it difficult for CBS to comment at this time.

Board Says Cautious Approach Taken

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The members of the Consolidated Board of Education of the Pitt and Greenville school systems say they acted out of caution when they decided to cease operation earlier this week.

Allegations that the Greenville and Pitt school systems have been operating without authority since reputedly illegal changes to the boards were made in the 1960's and 1970's prompted members to close shop, according to Board Chairman Mark Owens. Owens said earlier this week that he and other members were concerned that the Consolidated Board, which was created by the two existing school boards' vote, would be acting illegally if it continued to function.

Consolidated Board Member James Black said the board wanted to "study how we can comply with the Voting Rights Act." Other members of the 12-person board had no comment or could not be reached for comment this morning.

The Concerned Citizens for Justice, a minority group seeking better representation for blacks on local governental boards, charged that five structure changes made by the two boards in the past two decades were done illegally and consequently the boards have been functioning without authority since the changes were made.

According to the Voting Rights Act of 1965, governmental bodies must pass a "preclearance review" (get approval) from the Department of Justice when adjustments are made in the number of members on a board or in the manner board members are elected to office. The lack of a preclearance review for these changes indicates, according to a verbal assessment from the Department of Justice, that both the Pitt and Greenville boards may have been operating illegally since the changes were made.

The allegations have prompted questions concerning the current legal status of the two school systems, and W.C. Brewer, attorney for the county schools, said today he could not comment on the situation. "Because of the ongoing discussion with the attorney for the Concerned Citizens for Justice relating to minority representation on the interim board, I do not feel it is a matter that should be discussed at this time," Brewer said.

According to Eddie West, superintendent of the Pitt and Greenville school systems, no lawsuit or court order requiring shutdown has been served to either the Consolidated Board or the Pitt or Greenville boards of education.

Despite interrupting work on consolidation, the allegations of illegal operation have neither halted operation of the Greenville and Pitt school systems, nor suspended activities of the two school boards. West said the schools "do not anticipate any activities ceasing" because of the allegations. The systems will "proceed in our regular fashion, as we have since the inception of the school systems," he commented earlier this week.

According to Owens, who has served on the Pitt County Board of Education since 1966, the changes on the county board in question were prompted by a need for a county-wide tax levy to construct four new county high schools. In 1965, Pitt County Schools was involved in a court battle over integration and needed construction funds for facilities to enable the system to comply with the court's orders, he said.

"To this point the (Pitt) board of education was composed of five members representative somewhat of the whole county," Owens said. "Those who were involved knew there were concerns about all areas being represented."

"There were construction needs relative to consolidation of the county high schools into four and the county did not have a tax levy available for this, as did the city," he added.

The county board "felt the need to increase its number from five to nine, including a member from the city," Owens said, "with the idea that if you could have more onput from each area, you could pursue the idea of a county wide tax levy."

Subsequently the county wide tax levy became a reality, funds were appropriated, and the "representative from the city was dropped from the board, sometime after a term ran out and a county wide tax levy was accomplished," Owens said. "There never was, and never has been any racial overtones."

As to why the required preclearance for the changes was not obtained from the Department of Justice, Owens said "we were under the jurisdiction of the court then — we were doing what the court demanded.

"Very few schools systems had preclearance for changes that were made then," he said.

Companies Feel Hazard Amendments Would 'Impose Economic Hardships'

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Representatives of area chemical handling companies Wednesday told state officials that passage of proposed amendments to the North Carolina Hazard Communication Standard could impose economic hardships on all companies and could make some smaller companies unwilling lawbreakers.

The amendments, authorizing employees to refuse to work with an unidentified chemical and requiring employers to provide information on hazardous chemicals, were the topic of an OHSA hearing held in Greenville yesterday. State Labor Commissioner John Brooks and other officials were at the hearing to hear testimony and provide information on the proposed amendments.

Saying it is a Burroughs Wellcome's policy to provide a work environment free of recognized hazards, plant safety director Ralph Dudley told officials passage of the amendments would call for the hiring of additional staff to fully meet standard requirements. "Most other companies will (also) discover the need to devote additional resources to implement all ... provisions of the OSHA Hazard Communications Standard," Dudley said.

If approved, the amendments would:

Reflector Adding To Press Capacity As Part Of Expansion, Upgrading

The Daily Reflector is in the process of expanding its press capacity by the intallation of two 8-page press units, a balloon former and an additional operating console.

David J. Whichard II, co-publisher of the newspaper, said the work in progress "is part of the planned expansion and upgrading of the production equipment of The Daily Reflector scheduled over the next 18 months. A new and larger computer system for the news, editorial and production departments will be installed in May.

"Plans are also being made for expansion of facilities and upgrading of equipment in the newspaper's distribution department," Whichard said.

"The addition of these press units, together with other equipment provide the capacity for additional pages and at the same time, will enable us to use more editorial color as well as color advertising," according to Whichard.

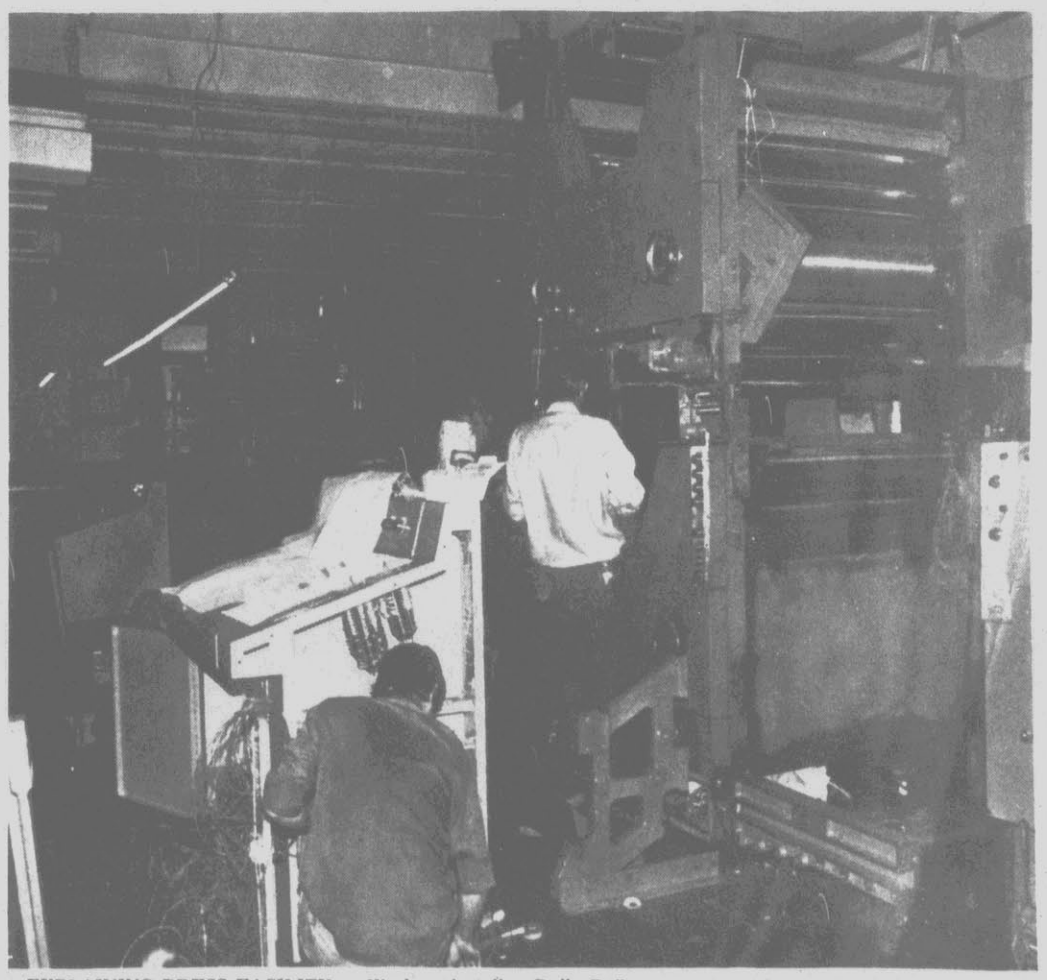

When installation of the press equipment is completed in the next few days, the newspaper will have the capability of printing 56 pages with one run of the press. The new equipment will also provide more versatility in the number and size of sections and allow the use of more color news and feature photos and color advertising.

Tim Jones, the newspaper's production manager, explained that in the past, only two sections were available with one press run. "Additional sections required additional press runs."

Full color photos will be easier to schedule because of the increased capacity, because two press units are required to print color pictures. And the additional console will "provide the back-up we didn't have before," because the press can now be operated from either console, Jones said.

The new computer, to be installed next month, will have the capacity to store 140 million characters on hard discs and the reaction time between the user and computer will be 10 times faster than the present system, installed in April 1980, which has a 48 million character storage capacity, according to Jones.

The new computer — which will take about half the space required for the present unit — will also allow expansion of the number of user stations from the present 22 to 48.

Cooking Is Fun

Salt-Free Steak Sauce

Cooks who are cutting out salt or cutting down on salt may be interested in a salt-free steak sauce that is fairly new on the market. It's great to give flavor to ground meat for hamburgers, and it's even good in chili con carne. Another excellent way to use it is in a stir-fry recipe such as the following one.

STIR-FRY BEEF
AND VEGETABLES

½ pound broccoli
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 large (6 ounces) onion, thinly sliced (1½ cups)
½ cup drained sliced bamboo shoots (from an 8-ounce can)
2 tablespoons finely chopped gingerroot
1 pound well-trimmed boneless tender beef, sliced ¼-inch thick
8 tablespoons salt-free steak sauce
¼ cup salt-free beef or chicken broth
Black pepper to taste
Hot cooked rice

Cut broccoli flowerets away from stems so flowerets are an even size — there should be about ¾ cup. Trim tough ends from stems; with a swivel-blade peeler, remove outer fibrous covering from stems. Thinly slice stems diagonally — there should be about ¾ cup.

In a saucepan, in a small amount of boiling water, cook broccoli flowerets and stems, uncovered, until tendercrisp — about 3 minutes; turn into a strainer and hold under cold running water to cool quickly; drain well and set aside.

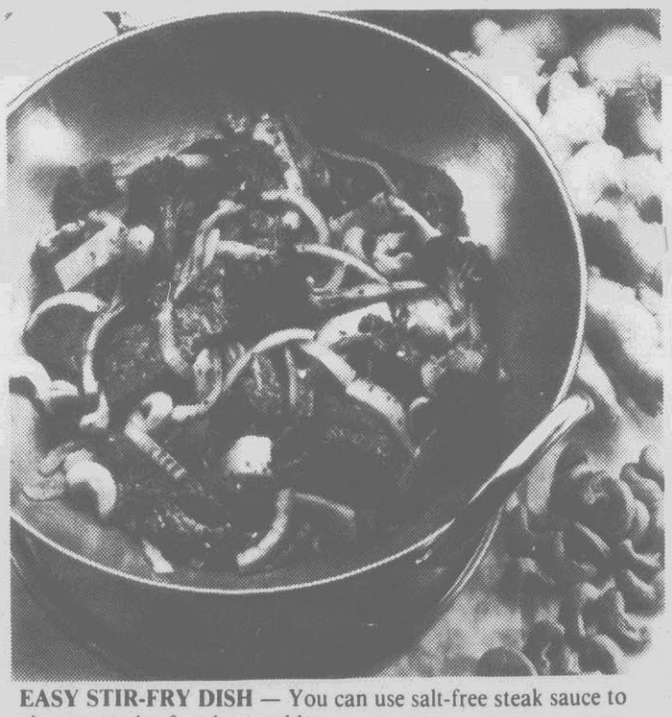

In a wok or large skillet, over high heat, heat 1 tablespoon of the oil. Add onion and cook, stirring often, until lightly browned — about 2 minutes. Remove with a slotted spoon and set aside.

Heat another tablespoon of the oil in the wok and in it stir-fry the broccoli, bamboo shoots and ginger for 1 minute. Remove with a slotted spoon and set aside.

Heat the remaining tablespoon of oil in the wok and in it brown beef on both sides — 2 to 3 minutes. Mix 6 tablespoons of the steak sauce with broth; pour over beef and cook for 1 minute. Add onion and the broccoli mixture and, stirring constantly, heat. Add pepper to taste. Serve with hot cooked rice.

Makes 4 servings.

Variation: If you like, you can cook ¾ cup unsalted cashew nuts with the onion.

EASY STIR-FRY DISH — You can use salt-free steak sauce to give zest to beef and vegetables.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Have Grandparents Failed Their Duty?

DEAR ABBY: My problem? I feel slighted because neither my parents nor my husband's have ever offered to watch our children so we could get away for an evening or a weekend. In the four years that "Gary" and I have been parents, my folks have taken our kids for a grand total of two hours! And Gary's parents have had them overnight five times.

Both sets of parents live an hour away, and all four grandparents are healthy, able to drive, semiretired and fairly well-to-do.

I realize our parents don't owe us anything, but when our friends tell us how often their parents ask to keep their grandkids (sometimes four and five days at a time!), I resent the fact that Gary and I get help from our parents once in a blue moon—and then only when we ask for it.

NO NAMES, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAMES: You're right; your parents owe you nothing. But since they respond when asked for their help, count your blessings, and don't push the issue.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My parents will be married 40 years next month. It has been a rough marriage for our mother because all through their marriage, Dad was a tyrant who ruled with an iron fist. The only reason Mom stayed with him was because of us kids. The last five years Dad's health has been failing, and Mom has practically been his nurse.

Now comes their anniversary, and we kids want to give them a party, but Mom says, "What's to celebrate? It would be hypocritical at least, and a farce at best."

Even an anniversary card that says "Many more happy years" would be a mockery when there have been very few happy moments in their marriage, let alone years.

I suppose there are other grown children with the same dilemma. What's the answer?

DAUGHTER WITH A DILEMMA

DEAR DAUGHTER: Have a small family dinner to honor your parents' union, which gave you life—even if the marriage wasn't harmonious. It will be a landmark for survival, if nothing else, and should not be ignored. Who knows, perhaps your father will mellow and grow more loving in the twilight of his life. I hope so.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: "Offended" says she goes to a high-class nightclub, talks to a stranger for five minutes, then he asks her to go to bed. And when she says no, she's told not to play "hard to get."

I believe I have a suggestion for such women, as there seems to be a lot of them with this problem.

After the nervy proposition, ask the guy this question: "What is really in it for me? I don't even know you, so I can't have any feelings for you, so why should I risk getting some kind of disease or becoming pregnant, or both, just to provide you with some temporary physical relief?"

Abby, let him think up an answer to that one. It's a lot more effective than just saying "No." Right?

A MALE READER

DEAR READER: Yes!

Keep Going

The Consolidated Board of Education's conclusion that it does not have a legal right to function as the result of the U.S. Justice Department's assessment of past actions by the two boards which created it came as a bombshell.

The Justice Department takes the position that actions by the Pitt County Board of Education and the Greenville Board of Education in the 1960s and the 1970s did not have "preclearance" by the Department of Justice as required under the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Presumably if the courts were to follow this reasoning virtually everything the boards have done for 25 years could be legally contested, including capital improvements, the payment of personnel and even the issuing of diplomas. Logically we cannot conceive of any court condoning such chaos. If the contention were extended further, thousands of actions by hundreds of governmental bodies could be voided because of legal oversights in decades past. Indeed the voting rights act of 1965 might have been ratified by an illegally constituted United States Congress.

The bottom line appears to be demands for additional minority representation on the consolidated board, and other questions. This is not an easy matter to resolve, but there are several avenues open and we believe the officials who have brought the merger plan this far have the skills to solve this problem.

Certainly every effort should be made to resolve these questions. In the meantime, however, the consolidated board is armed with a Legislative mandate which creates the merged district, and it is of utmost importance that the consolidated board should continue to function.

Environment

It is very frustrating to read arguments, pro and con, about environmental legislation needs for North Carolina. There is good reasoning made by advocates of special guidelines for the state as well as by advocates of reliance on federal regulations for the collective 50 states.

Example: An Orange County spokesman advocates laws custom-made for North Carolina, not the same as those for "older industrialized states ... the island of Hawaii or the cold reaches of Alaska. There is a diversity among the states and diversity in North Carolina." Good point.

On the other hand, North Carolina would be performing a disservice to its own people and industries by setting stricter standards to safeguard our air and water if neighboring states (and those adjoining them and others extending to all our borders) were not bound to the same safeguards and rules. For if our standards were set higher than those of others, their standards could undermine the quality of our air and quality of our water. Air and water know few boundaries.

Meanwhile, our industries (and employment) would be handicapped by costs imposed by higher Tar Heel standards.

Agriculture and tourism are strongly affected by air quality and water quality. Those fields of revenues and livelihood are important to all. Safe and effective environmental standards are basic to their wellbeing, too.

Philosophically and in terms of practicality we lean toward the president's urgings for states to assume greater responsibility in the environmental field. But that runs head-on into what appears to be a lack of confidence in state responsibility. We saw that a few years ago when state environmental guidelines and experts were applied to disposal of contaminated soil. Critics and objectors did their best to hamstring the project.

No doubt about it, environmental concern has been with us a long time,; and in the intervening years there has been a lot of arguing about what could and should be done.

We can't spend all our time in debate. The clock won't stop, and with passage of each year the costs of remedial and preventative measures are growing.

Facing The Music Not So Sweet

WASHINGTON — Senators Bob Dole and Pete Domenici made their budget proposals public on Good Friday. Then they both fled town — Dole to brave the hardships of Paris and Rome, Domenici to vacation in Florida with his family. On Monday they return to face the music.

All things considered, the music is not as filled with sour notes as the two Senate leaders might have expected. Perhaps some of the more vociferous special interests temporarily have played out. The American Association of Retired Persons went into a ritual frenzy over the proposal to limit cost-of-living adjustments in Social Security, but otherwise the reaction seemed almost muted.

If this impression is correct, and if it reflects a growing understanding that sacrifices must be made, maybe Congress can begin to make some real headway toward reducing the federal deficits. Manifestly, few members will accept all the proposals agreed upon by the Republican leadership and the White House, but if a consensus can be formed on most of the recommendations, a reasonable budget can be achieved for fiscal '86.

Taken as a package, the recommendations make sense. The president may not be happy about a real increase (after inflation) of only 3 percent a year in defense spending, but he has said the national security will not be materially harmed by a slower pace. Over the next three years, the 3-3-3 proposal would reduce projected deficits by nearly $100 billion. Congress should go for it.

Congress ought also to accept the idea of limiting a COLA for persons receiving Social Security benefits to 2 percent a year for the same period. Of the 36.6 million retirees, about 15 percent depend solely upon their monthly checks; perhaps some exception should be worked out for them. Ten percent of the retirees have so much outside income they have to pay taxes on part of their Social Security income. The average monthly check is for $461.

What we are talking about is an average increase of $9 a month as opposed to a full COLA of $18 a month. Every person now on Social Security lived through the Great Depression of the '30s; they all know hardship and they all have survived it. They also know that because of the generous impulses of Congress over the years, they will receive in benefits far more than they ever have paid in. Claude Pepper and the AARP to the contrary, this is not too much to ask of the elderly.

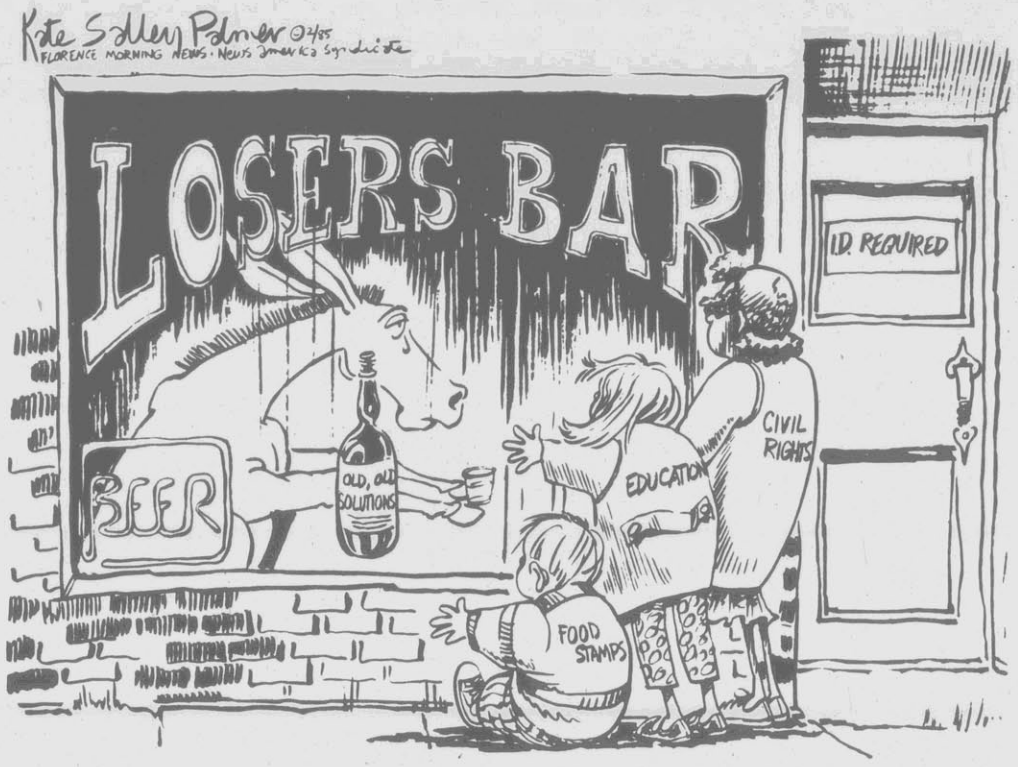

What of other recommendations? The leadership proposes to terminate rural housing subsidies at a saving of $8.7 billion over the three-year period. Rural electrification subsidies would be phased out for a saving of $900 million. Fourteen billion dollars would be saved by reforms in farm price supports and farm credit. Every one of these proposals makes sense.

The business community would take its knocks. The leadership proposes to abolish the Small Business Administration and to end direct loans from the Export-Import Bank. Both the civil service and the armed services would be affected by COLA limits and by retirement reforms. The leadership would ask something of middle-income families through changes in eligibility for student loans and subsidized school lunches. Termination of general revenue sharing with the states would save $8.5 billion over the three years.

If the leadership's package were to be adopted in toto, estimated deficits would fall to $175 billion in fiscal '86, to $145 billion in '87' and to a manageable $99 billion in '88. The package won't be adopted in toto, of course, but both the means and the end are plainly in the public interest.

Will the public respond? I don't know, but I know that nothing significant will happen if every affected interest persists in hollering "mine, mine, mine!" It is profoundly discouraging to look around at the selfishness, the avarice, the greed that everywhere is manifested by governors, mayors, farmers, admirals, generals, college presidents, Amtrak passengers, subway riders, old folks, young folks, small-business men, big-business men, lovers of opera, and by yachtsmen who object to paying the Coast Guard for services rendered. If Americans work together, we can get out of this mess. If we don't, we won't.

Vocational Ed Comes Under Review

RALEIGH — A federal spending cut for high school vocational education is forcing the General Assembly to consider a large new state appropriation to keep the program going. At the same time, some members of the assembly are using the debate over funding to raise basic questions about North Carolina's approach to vocational education.

It appears that almost $5.7 million in federal vocational education funds will be cut in fiscal year 1986, according to Rep. Paul Tyndall, D-Onslow. Tyndall, a former school superintendent, has sponsored a bill to replace that loss with state funds. Unless the state assumes this cost, he says, 308 teaching positions will be eliminated and the education plans of more than 20,000 vocational education students will be interrupted.

But Tyndall doesn't want the state to stop with the $5.7 million. He's also asking the state to begin assuming the "local match" for these programs. The federal government pays about three quarters of the program's costs. Local governments pay the rest. Tyndall wants the state to assume the local government share over a period of three years.

The price tag for assuming the local match would be $12.8 million the first year, more than $25 million the second and almost $40 million by fiscal 1988.

"There are plenty of small, poor counties in North Carolina where, sure, the federal government may be providing (the bulk of the program's costs.) But if (local government) can't raise the local match, they can't have a program."

Tyndall argues that in these small counties, where fewer children go on to college, vocational education is very important. "It we don't train these children with marketable skills, we'll spend millions more in the future putting them on the welfare rolls."

Not everyone agrees with Tyndall on the wisdom of vocational education. During the Senate's debate of the Basic Education Program, several senators criticized vocational education as a poor alternative to reading, writing and arthimetic.

"I'm not opposed to vocational education," says Sen. Chip Wright, R-New Hanover, the most vocal of these critics. "I am opposed to letting them take it in lieu of the three Rs."

Wright says that vocational education in North Carolina is an easy way out for students unwilling to challenge themselves with a more demanding curriculum. "If you get the students to be honest with you, they'll admit that it's a crib course they want to take to avoid taking something harder."

In Texas, businessman Ross Perot's schools study and "called vocational education a total waste of time," Wright said. "In North Carolina, we're saying that is is an alternative form of education, if we can't teach them to read and write and make change for a dollar. But let me tell you, you can't teach a kid to be a carpenter if he can't read and write."

Wright says that instead of gearing vocational education to students who can't perform the basics well, the state should reserve vocational education only to those who have "demonstrated a minimum competency. Before he could get into the program, he would have to show that he was a good student."

In other states, entrance to vocational education high schools is by competitive exam and Wright said he thinks the assembly should consider such an approach before pumping vast new sums of money into the program.

Tyndall argues that the schools need to identify children who have an interest in vocational education in the seventh and eighth grades and get them started early.

Strength For Today

Homer is almost a legendary figure, but if he was a blind bard it fills one with amazement that he could have produced such wonderful epics. William Shakespeare was the son of a plain women of no education and a father who held some slight position of honor in his home town. The parents of Leonardo da Vinci spent their lives marvelling over the fact that this wonderful son should have been born to them, because neither of them nor any of their ancestors had shown any conspicuous talent. The same was true of Michaelangelo and his forebears.

There are, of course, talented families. They have appeared all through history. Their talent has been passed on through generations. On the other hand, lots of talent is wasted in every generation. Some is killed. If you have any, or if your children have any, guard and cultivate it as a sacred gift.

The Shaping Of An Ambassador

WASHINGTON — Nashville construction company executive Joe Rodgers is taking French lessons for the first time in his life, not because his company is seeking new contracts overseas.

Rodgers is, rather, slated to replace Evan Galbraith as U.S. ambassador to France, and the affable, raspy-voiced builder figures that some preparation for the job is better than none.

Rodgers won the Paris assignment in return for his political fund-raising prowess. A multimillionaire by his 30th birthday, he was national finance chairman of the Reagan-Bush campaign in 1984 and before that served a smiliar role for the Republican National Committee. Over the years, Rodgers is said to have raised more than $150 million for Republican causes — no small accomplishment in this post-Watergate era of contribution limits.

Rodgers, now in his 50s, believed Reagan owed him one, and in fact first asked to be appointed to the embassy in Peking. Yet White House and State Department officials knew that would not go over well with Deng Xiao-ping and Co. (even though Rodgers walks and talks like a cowboy, and Chinese moviegoers love Westerns). So they offered the Paris of Francois Mitterrand instead.

Critics of the Rodgers nomination (and there are some within the White House itself) contend that he is the quintessential "Ugly American," one who through a lack of international experience and cultural sensitivity (though he's done big business with the Arabs) doesn't represent the best that his country has to offer.

But the major problem isn't that a U.S. ambassador might come across as a hayseed or even a J.R. Ewing-type figure; after all, New York banker Galbraith is probably less typically American than his intended successor.

Whether the choice is a Galbraith or a Rodgers, Americans lose when an administration gives ambassadorships to political friends and fund-raisers instead of experts who have made a career out of foreign diplomacy. Unfortunately, for every Arthur Burns, the former Federal Reserve chairman-turned-envoy who has decided to give up his post in West Germany, there are dozens of consensus misfits like John Louis, the Johnson's Wax heir who served for a time in London.

Several members of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, Republicans and Democrats, have asked the American Academy of Diplomacy, a group of distinguished former envoys, to evaluate ambassadorial appointees in the future. Even though the Senate won't be bound by its recommendations, such an effort may dissuade future presidents from measuring potential ambassadors simply by the level of their receipts.

Linda Chavez, President Reagan's choice to replace Faith Ryan Whittlesey as chief of the White House's public liaison office, will not enjoy the fiefdom held by her predecessor. Chief of staff Donald Regan has decided to scale down the public liaison office's operations and reduce its staff level. The office handles White House relations with constituency groups.

The Defense Department is the world's greatest oil buyer. It consumes 488,100 barrels daily; during a national emergency, the consumption rate could rise to 2 million barrels. Jeffrey Jones, deputy director of the Pentagon's energy programs, told a House energy subcommittee recently that he's worried that a cut-off of foreign oil supplies would mean a 10 to 20 percent shortfall for his department. The 30 million barrels now held by the Pentagon would last only two months during peacetime, Jones said.

Banking deregulation has been a disaster for low-income consumers, says Rep. Mary Rose Oakar (D-Ohio). In 1979, prior to enactment of a flood of deregulation measures, basic banking service cost the average consumer $90 annually. Today, the same services cost $180.

Nuclear power is hardly dead in the United States. Last year, the Nuclear Regulatory Commission gave start-up licenses for eight reactors; six reactors began commercial operations, raising the total number of working units to 83.

Supreme Court Urged To Act On Redistricting

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has sided with the state of North Carolina in asking the U.S. Supreme Court to overturn a state legislative redistricting plan designed to boost minority voting strength.

The action by the U.S. Justice Department drew sharp criticism from civil rights lawyers Wednesday as an assault on the 1965 Voting Rights Act. They argued that there were no major legal issues at stake to warrant a high court review.

But lawyers for the state praised the administration for urging the court to issue a major interpretation of when states or other local governments must redraw election boundaries to assure the representation of blacks.

In a brief filed last week, U.S. Solicitor General Rex Lee told the court that the administration agreed with two major arguments of the state.

Lee said a three-judge court in Raleigh, in requiring the redistricting, had misinterpreted the Voting Rights Act as requiring "guaranteed electoral success" to blacks "in proportion to the black percentage of the population." And Lee said the lower court had defined racial bloc voting so broadly that "virtually any electoral district in the country" could be considered discriminatory.

The pattern of significant racial block voting in North Carolina was a major part of the lower federal court ruling that forced the state to redraw some election lines to create predominantly black districts.

The Supreme Court is expected to decide whether to grant a review of the North Carolina case later this month. Four of the nine justices must favor a review before it is considered by the full court.

North Carolina Attorney General Lacy Thornburg issued a statement saying he was "very pleased" with the administration's action and "hopeful" the court would review the case.

Kathleen Heenan McGuan, a Washington lawyer representing the state, said the chances were "very good" the court would review the case.

"If they take it, I think it will be a threshold, landmark type decision," she said. "The question would be whether you are required to guarantee elective representation or whether the test is equal opportunity."

A lawyer for the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund Inc., which brought the suit that forced the redistricting, accused the Justice Department of trying to "gut" the Voting Rights Act with a "blatantly political" appeal to the Supreme Court.

The lawyer, Lani Guinier, charged Wednesday that the Reagan administration was trying to win in the court the political battle it lost in Congress when the Voting Rights Act was strengthened.

While a court review could spark a renewal of the controversy that has surrounded redistricting in North Carolina over the last four years, it is uncertain what practical impact it would have.

Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, who is black, said he wondered if the Justice Department's latest action was part of a trend by the Reagan administration to whittle away at civil rights gains.

The department's position in this case is "clearly" a change "from where they've been historically," Blue said.

The chairman of the House Redistricting Committee that redrew the new districts, Rep. Daniel T. Lilley, D-Lenoir, said the Justice Department appeared to be jumping to the other side of a philosophical fence by siding with the state.

"They have been on the other side," Lilley said. "Now it seems perhaps we were in fact doing what the law said.

"I don't know if there's been a change in personnel or a change in philosophy. Maybe they've decided to let the states determine their own destiny with regards to redistricting."

The General Assembly already has drawn the new legislative boundaries, and new members were elected from the new districts last year.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said he did not know what lawmakers would do if the Supreme Court should overturn the case.

"I'm sure there are some defeated candidates out there who would like to see use revert to the old system," Jordan said. "There are also some newly elected members who would want to keep the new system."

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said it was too soon to know what the Legislature would do.

The case arises from a 1981 suit brought by the Legal Defense Fund on behalf of North Carolina black citizens. The suit, coupled with rulings by the Justice Department in 1981 and 1982, resulted in legislative redistricting that is credited with increasing the number of blacks in the state legislatiure.

In 1981, the 170-member General Assembly had four black members; it now has 16.

In response to the suit, a three-judge court in the Eastern District of North Carolina found that several state House and Senate districts discriminated against minorities because they were large multi-seat districts that, the court said, diluted the voting strength of blacks.

Trapped Miner Is Not Hurt

PALISADE, Colo. (AP) — A miner trapped in a coal mine cave-in for 37 hours walked out unhurt today, after rescuers inching through sliding rubble rebuilt a tunnel to reach him.

Curtis Sanders, 32, the father of six children, had been hunched over and nearly waist-deep in water in the cab of a large mining machine since 4 p.m. Tuesday, when the roof collapsed at Powderhorn Coal Co.'s Roadside mine in DeBeque Canyon.

He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, where nurses in the emergency room said he was in good condition. It was not immediately determined whether Sanders would be admitted.

"We held hands with him about 3:30 this morning and he finally came out about 5 a.m," said Garry DeGarmo, who was the second man to reach Sanders.

Darrell Malone, the first rescuer to dig through the rubble to Sanders, said the trapped miner was wet and tired, but "real glad to see us."

"He said to get him ... out of there," Malone said.

DeGarmo said Sanders had only a small cut on the left side of his head.

The two men gave water and a candy bar to Sanders. It was the first time since he was trapped that Sanders had had anything to eat or drink.

The rescuers worked around the clock in crews of 12, pumping air to Sanders as they tunneled through rock and gravel near the cab of the continuous mining machine, which chews up the wall at one end of a tunnel and moves coal and rock back for transport.

Workers used another continous mining machine to bite through 20 feet of debris, but were frustrated when they switched to pick-and-shovel work for the last six feet of loose rock, said Dale Fenwick, assistant general manager of the mine.

"You know what happens when you shovel gravel? You take out a shovel full and more falls in," he said Wednesday.

Those last six feet took 18 hours of the rescue effort, DeGarmo said.

Malone said Sanders told him he "never slept a wink because there was rock falling all the time" and that the water was the "only thing he really worried about. He thought he might drown."

The rescue crew used a steel tube and a concrete culvert to drive through some of the final six feet. The tubes sheltered the rescuers from falling rock as they dug toward Sanders.The final few feet were reached by "cribbing" wooden timbers in a makeshift tunnel.

DeGarmo said Sanders is "a real good man, very cautious — and that saved his life."

Sanders was trapped in the machine's cab when the roof of the 20-foot-wide, 7-foot-high tunnel collapsed, said Fenwick. Air was pumped in through a hose attached to the mining machine which normally carries water and rescuers had communicated with Sanders by shouting since early Wednesday, he said.

Sanders complained about being wet, but Fenwick had said Wednesday that the water was probably not very deep because rescuers hadn't noticed major seepage on their side of the rockfall, which was two miles inside a mountain.

UC Agrees To Bhopal Aid

By LARRY ELKIN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Union Carbide today agreed to provide $5 million in emergency aid to victims of the Bhopal, India, poison-gas disaster without waiting for the courts to determine whether the company is legally liable.

The emergency aid was suggested two days ago by U.S. District Judge John F. Keenan, who is in charge of the more than 60 lawsuits filed against Union Carbide in the United States following the accident.

"Union Carbide Corp. shares the court's deep concern about the health and welfare of the surviving victims of the Bhopal gas leak tragedy and recognizes the importance of immediate interim relief," company Vice President and Treasurer Rolf H. Towe wrote in a letter to Keenan.

"If a further payment of $5 million by Union Carbide Corp. can be promptly and effectively made available to the victims of the disaster, we are prepared, as we have been all along, to make such a payment."

The Indian government, which went to court against Union Carbide last week, said it is aware of 1,700 deaths and as many as 200,000 injuries that resulted when a cloud of methyl isocyanate gas escaped from a Union Carbide pesticide plant and drifted through a crowded slum just after midnight on Dec. 3.

Other estimates have placed the death toll higher than 2,000, but Union Carbide has recently indicated that it might challenge the casualty figures as exaggerated.

The types of emergency aid that Carbide's funds would provide are not yet clear. Keenan is to appoint a three-lawyer "executive committee" next week to represent the accident victims in negotiations with the company. The committee and Carbide's lawyers are to work out an aid program by May 6 and present it to the judge on May 8.

The Danbury, Conn.-based company has contended that its Indian subsidiary, which operated the pesticide plant, was responsible for safety procedures and that the New Delhi government itself may bear some share of the blame.

Keenan said at a hearing Tuesday that as a matter of "fundamental human decency," Union Carbide should provide $5 million to $10 million in emergency aid, and that such a contribution would not be considered an admission by the company that it bears responsibility for the accident.

Company attorney Bud G. Holman took a noncommittal stand at the hearing, saying Carbide has already donated $1 million to the New Delhi government's emergency relief fund. In addition, the Indian subsidiary has pledged the equivalent of $840,000.

Despite today's decision to grant the additional aid and its repeated calls for an early settlement in the litigation, the company has indicated in recent days that it will put up a tough court fight if settlement talks fail.

Holman charged at Tuesday's hearing that the Indian government has not provided detailed information about the numbers and types of casualties and said the reported numbers of victims may have been greatly exaggerated. A partial review of the 71 cases filed so far in U.S. courts — seven of them in state courts and the rest before Keenan — indicates that as many as 35 percent of the identified victims were counted at least twice, Holman said.

In today's editions, The Washington Post quoted Holman as saying that the company accepts only 1,408 deaths that were recorded at Bhopal hospitals. Company spokesman Tom Failla said he was unable to immediately confirm that comment, and Holman's secretary said he was not available for comment.

In addition, Holman said that if settlement talks fail, Union Carbide will press to have the litigation transferred to India, where accident victims typically recover far less money than in the United States.

Official Kidnapped

BEIRUT, Lebanon (ap) — George Sayegh, a Lebanese who is the American University of Beirut's acting vice president for adminstration, was kidnapped from his home in mostly Moslem west Beirut overnight, the university said today.

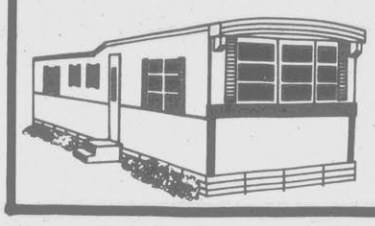

The university said in a statement that a group of gunmen broke into Sayegh's apartment in the seaside Chouran neighborhood shortly after midnight and took him away. It did not say how many gunmen were involved.

Several hours after the attack, university officials said they had not heard from the abductors, and had no idea about the motive.

Chouran is one of several Beirut neighborhoods in which rival Moslem militias have been battling for the past two days. On Wednesday the neighborhood was in the hands of the Shiite Moslem Amal militia and its Druse allies.

The university appealed to the kidnappers to release Sayegh, stressing that he has a history of heart trouble and "continuously needs to take his medication."

Board Supports Ordinance Change

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission has endorsed changes in a city ordinance altering the definition of retirement centers.

The major change specifies that retirement centers, living complexes for retired individuals located on a parcel of land under single ownership, can have multifaceted kinds of uses including cafeterias, recreation facilities and detached cluster homes, for example.

In the same action, the commission at its meeting this week approved a change allowing retirement homes on 75 or more acres to be considered as a permitted uses in high density residential (R-6) zoning areas. Retirement centers on 10 to 74 acres will still be considered special uses and thus all changes from initially approved development plans or additions to those plans will require separate special use permits. The changes were acted upon at the request of the City Council and for the benefit of Methodist Retirement Homes Inc., which plans to begin construction of a retirement facility in the near future on a portion of the Brown farm, located south of the Tar River and west of Hickory Street.

Prior to unanimous approval of the change, Commissioner Wooles made a motion that the matter be continuned for study. The motion, seconded by Commissioner Jacobson, failed. The proposed ordinance amendment will now go before the city council for final consideration.

Other items approved by the commission included the following:

•A revised preliminary plat of Summerfield Subdivision involving a change in street design. The subdivision is located west of Memorial Drive and south of the Greenville Country Club. Plans call for subidivision traffic to enter Memorial Drive by one road.

•A preliminary plat of Executive Park West. The plat involved nine lots on a 5.7 acre tract located across from Pitt County Memorial Hospital on the south side of Stantonsburg Road. The complex will have access to Stantonsburg Road at two points.

•A preliminary plat of North Pines, a commercial subdivision located on the east side of Memorial Drive. The plat involves seven lots.

•A preliminary plat of Canterbury, a residential subdivision located southwest of Red Oak Subdivision at the end of Allendale Drive and Pearl Drive. The plat involves 16 lots on a 5.3 acre tract.

•A preliminary plat of southwoods, a multifamily subidivision located on the west side of Evans Streeet extension (Tar Road), across from the WNCT-TV studios. The plat involved 16 multifamily units.

In final business, the commission endorsed a request by the city of Greenville (for the Greenville Utilties Commission) to annex a .932-acre tract on the north side of Mumford Road. The tract is contiguous to the present city limits and will be used for expansion of GUC's operations center.

Roadbed OK Just Before Derailment

GRANBY, Colo. (AP) — Track inspectors found no evidence of roadbed erosion just hours before seven cars of Amtrak's California Zephyr derailed in a remote mountain canyoun, injuring 26 people, a railroad official said.

"That section was inspected Tuesday at 3:30 p.m.," less than five hours before the wreck, said John Aberton, a spokesman for Denver and Rio Grande Western Railroad. "Nothing was noticed."

Under federal law, the tracks must be inspected every other day, he said.

National Transportation Safety Board investigators at the crash site said as of Wednesday afternoon, the cause of the derailment was still unknown. The railroad, Aberton said, has called in a geologist to determine whether underground springs could have contributed to the roadbed weakness.

"The cause looks like a subgrade failure due to underground spring water. We've never had this problem in that area, to my knowledge," Aberton said Wednesday.

Working around the clock, about 100 workers built a detour around the site and got the line reopened by Wednesday afternoon.

The east-west track, owned by the Denver-based Denver & Rio, crosses the Continental Divide through the Moffat Tunnel a few miles east of the Fraser River canyon, where the tracks gave way under the two Amtrak engines about 8 p.m. Tuesday.

The engines were virtually buried in the river embankment, a sleeper car toppled onto its side almost in the shallow river, and about 1,000 feet of track was demolished.

The area is accessible only by rail and passengers had to be evacuated in small motorized rail cars ordinarily used by maintenance workers.

Amtrak waiter Henry Billings, 37, one of the five victims still hospitalized, was in stable condition Wednesday with back and neck injuries. One passenger was listed in serious condition; the others were in stable condition.

Billings, a Chicago resident, also was injured in a derailment near Emerson, Iowa, in June 1982 in which one passenger was killed.

"I still have nightmares about the last accident," said Billings, who received back and neck injuries and had his left leg seared by a pot of coffee when the dining car derailed.

"It would be a big gamble to get back on a train and, right about now, I don't know if I'd shoot again," he said.

The Zephyr begins in Oakland, Calif., and is joined by trains from Los Angeles and Seattle-Portland, Ore., in Salt Lake City.

WOMAN CHARGED IN FIRE — A Pitt County woman was charged with arson early this morning following an investigation of a fire near Ballards Crossroads. Pitt County Sheriff Ralph Tyson said this morning, Doris May Crandall, 33, of Route 2, Greenville, was charged with arson after firemen were called to her brick residence on rural paved road 1725. Tyson said two children, identified as Crystal Nicole, 7, and Angie, 4 were in the house at the time the fire started. Tyson said the older child told investigators she awoke and saw her mother standing near the television with a dried flower arrangement burning. Tyson said Ms. Crandall told the child to leave and realizing there was another youngster asleep on the couch, the older of the children went back into the house and retrieved the four-year old. Neither child were injured. Firemen from Bell Arthur first arrived at the home and found the rear kitchen portion in flames. Tyson said Ms. Crandall was to be transferred to Dorothea Dix Hospital for observation this morning. Members of the Red Oak fire department also responded to the 12:02 a.m. call. Investigation is continuing. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

A Reflector Review

ECU's 'Hamlet' Open To Interpretations

The Alpers set is awesome. Looming majestically, it is larger than life, 10 pounds of potatoes in a 5 pound sack, ready to lure us into its shadowy tale. Elsinore is the story: multi-levelled, irreversible, open to interpretation.

The Winchell interpretatin, deftly manifested by Craig Dudley as Hamlet and Robert Ruffin as Horatio, focuses on "brotherly love." In a lesser production, such a bias could be disastrous. But Dudley and Ruffin portray the friends with consistent sensitivity and maturity; it works.

The parts of the ECU Playhouse production of Hamlet (nightly at 8:15 p.m. through Saturday) which don't work involve special effects, particularly the cardboard-voiced ghost of Papa Hamlet, who strolls amid balconcies like a trick-or-treater too old to get the Hershey bars but too young for mom to let him out after dark without dabbing his sheets with paint. Also, the heavier hints — tapestry spoofs, nose thumbing and jewelry — somehow don't match the delicacy of well-placed glances and carefully placed hands.

Jennifer Youngdahl is bewitching as Ophelia, who goes mad when her father Polonius is murdered. But she is not as mad as the audience, who adores Ayuden's master of misunderstanding, Joey Pollock as Polonius.

Janice Shreiber is a passionate Queen of Denmark, balanced by a strikingly handsome but aloof Greg Watkins as Claudius. Austin Garyantes as Laertes, Scott Rykmer as Rosencrantz, David Tillman as Guildenstern, and Billy Ray Tyson as the Gravedigger give memorable performanes, as do several other actors.

The classics are alive and well in Greenville, and are open to interpretation.

Film Controversy

ROME (AP) — Jean-Luc Godard's film depicting the Virgin Mary as the daughter of a gas station operator is caught in a controversy involving a film club and Roman Catholics offended by the work.

Protesters — including nuns and priests — and supporters marched outside a downtown theater where the film "Je Vous Salue, Marie" (Hail, Mary) made its delayed premiere Wednesday.

The film depicts Mary, played by Myriem Roussel, as a modern woman and shows her nude in some scenes. Joseph, her boyfriend, is a cab driver, and the archangel Gabriel takes a jet to give Mary the news that she will give birth.

While 150 people watched the screening, dozens of members of a local film club carrying signs reading: "Mary, we have come to save you from the censors."

The marchers exchanged heated words with the group of Roman Catholics, who were protesting the film for the second day.

Shuttle Rider Good Guinea Pig

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Sen. Jake Garn, who volunteered to help scientists study space motion sickness, said during an in-space news conference today that he was indeed ill during his first two days aboard the shuttle Discovery.

Garn also said the job of his crewmates in trying to salvage a dead satellite showed the "professionalism" of space agency planners and astronauts and demonstrated that "man is needed in space. You can't do the things we did up here with unmanned probes. You need brains, you need minds that can think and be innovative."

The crew members did not revive the satellite, through no fault of their own, and had to abandon it as an $85 million space derelict.

The news conference was held on Discovery's final full day in space. Landing at the Kennedy Space Center here is scheduled for 7:16 a.m. EST Friday.

"I'll be honest with you, I didn't feel good the first two days," Garn said in a response to a question from reporters at Mission Control.

The Utah Republican, who came aboard as a congressional observer, volunteered to do anything NASA wanted him to. Flight surgeons asked him if he'd be willing to conduct experiments to help determine why nearly half the shuttle astronauts have suffered periods of space motion sickness.

Garn said he'd deliberately try to get sick, prompting Garry Trudeau to depict him in his "Doonesbury" cartoon strip as "Barfin' Jake." His fellow astronauts have since called him "B.J."

"I certainly hope what the experiments I did will add to the knowledge we have about space motion sickness," the senator said.

Most questions during the 30-minute conference from Discovery were directed at Garn, who is chairman of an appropriations subcommittee which oversees NASA's spending.

Of the attempt to save the Syncom communications satellite, which was powerless after it was released from the shuttle, Garn said, "I watched a fantastic crew do a remarkable job under very difficult and unscheduled circumstances. This crew never gave up...The space walks, the rendezvous with the satellite was a masterful job.

"To see that satellite hanging a few feet above the cargo bay and to watch Rhea (Seddon) operate the arm...this crew did everything it could to save that satellite."

Syncom could not be fixed because the power switch which Mission Control thought was in the wrong position was noty at fault. And the astronauts had concentrated on moving that switch.

Ms. Seddon said she gave the switch two good raps with the handmade tools on the end of the 50-foot robot arnm, but that it didn't budge.

"It was a big disappointment after we had gone through that unplanned training and then not to have it come out the way you expect," said Discovery commander Karol Bobko.

The seven-member crew, having asked for an extra day in space, were enjoying a relaxing day, completing experiments, packing to come home and sightseeing.

The mission originally was scheduled for five days but was extended one day because of the saterllite repair effort and a second at the crews' request.

Mission Control and Hughes Communications Services, which owns Syncom, believed a power switch on the side of the satellite did not extend properly after Syncom rolled out of the cargo bay.

During a three-hour space walk, astronauts David Griggs and Jeffrey Hoffman attached two makeshift snaring tools to the end of the shuttle's 50-foot robot arm.

On Wednesday, Bobko and pilot Don Williams steered Discovery to within 30 feet of the eight-ton satellite and Ms. Seddon remotely guided the arm, twice tugging at the power switch without budging it.

Engineers watching on the ground concluded that the switch had indeed deployed properly and that something else had caused the power failure. The astronauts were told to abandon the satellite.

"We don't know what was at fault," said Steven Dorfman, president of Highes Communications.

Syncom will continue its quiet drift around Earth for years.

New Mood For Von Bulow

By CHRISTOPHER CALLAHAN
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — When Claus von Bulow arrived in Rhode Island 11 days ago for his attempted-murder retrial, he politely but steadfastly declined comment as reporters mobbed him at the courthouse, restaurants and his hotel.

Attorneys say they hope the jury selection process will end today — its ninth day — and opening arguments will begin next week. But now that the huge press corps had dwindled to about a dozen reporters, von Bulow seems more relaxed.

Unlike the first days, when he stayed in a courthouse waiting area off-limits to the public, the Danish-born socialite now often loiters in corridors during breaks and regularly chats with reporters covering his retrial on charges he tried to kill his heiress wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with insulin injections in 1980.

Since then, Mrs. von Bulow, 53, has been in a coma her doctors say is irreversible.

Von Bulow, a former top-level aide to oil baron J. Paul Getty, won't talk about his case.

"We're getting too close," von Bulow said, shutting himself off when talking about Truman Capote, the late author who filed an affidavit supporting the defense contention that Mrs. von Bulow abused alcohol and drugs.

But, leaning against the marble walls of the Providence County Courthouse smoking a cigarette, he does talk and joke about other things.

In his clipped Danish accent, he speaks often of his 18-year-old daughter, Cosima, and her acceptance to Brown University last week. "It was her first choice," he says.

He talks about his three golden retrievers and how he once served as "midwife" as one of them whelped a litter. "I'm the kind of guy who faints seeing childbirth on television."

Sounding more like a middle-class American than an aristocrat who lives in a 14-room luxury apartment on New York's Fifth Avenue, von Bulow notes the expense of taking a flight to Providence. He says the New York to Boston shuttle is a much better value, although he prefers to drive.

He remembers reporters who covered his first trial in Newport and calls them by their first names. His 1982 convictions were overturned by the state Supreme Court last year on state constitutional grounds.

In court, von Bulow watches intently as prosecution and defense attorneys question prospective jurors. But he laughs along with the rest of the court when Superior Court Judge Corinne P. Grande or someone else cracks a joke.

Von Bulow's casual air is matched by his attire. The socialite who wore double-breasted suits during his first trial now wears sports coat, slacks and loafers.

Von Bulow is staying at the Biltmore Plaza with his companion, Andrea Reynolds. On warmer mornings he chooses the five-minute walk to the courthouse over a cab ride.

While not in court, von Bulow dines at local restaurants and has been seen walking one of his dogs near the hotel in downtown Providence.

School, scout, and church groups are encouraged to visit River Park North. Special environmental programs and tours can be arranged. For more information, call 758-1230.

Woman Is Acquitted

DETROIT (AP) — A woman who stabbed her alleged rapist 47 times then claimed self-defense has been acquitted of murdering a man prosecutors said may have been asleep or unconscious at the time of the slaying.

A Detroit Recorder's Court jury deliberated seven days before finding Karen Norman, 20, innocent Wednesday of murdering Lamont Powell, 25.

"I'd like to thank the Lord most of all," a weeping Ms. Norman said afterward. "I wasn't expecting anything. I was just praying."

It was the second trial within four months for Ms. Norman. Her first trial ended Dec. 27 in a mistrial when a jury considering the second-degree murder charge deadlocked 11-1 in favor of conviction.The second trial lasted three weeks.

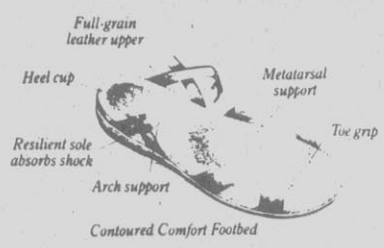

The case drew support from feminist groups for Ms. Norman, who claimed Powell raped her after a date and that she stabbed him out of fear for her life and those of her two children.

An autopsy revealed that Powell had been stabbed 47 times on May 5, 1984, in Ms. Norman's Detroit home.

Ms. Norman, a Wayne State University sophomore, was pregnant at the time of Powell's slaying, but the child died of birth defects before her second trial began.

NEW TACTIC IN MANHUNT — An Army National Guard Cobra helicopter lifts off from the School of the Ozarks Airport, Branson, Mo., Wednesday. Seated at front is a Missouri State Trooper who will be using a high-powered viewing system to scan the ground in search of suspect David C. Tate, wanted for the Monday shooting death of a Missouri trooper. Though being billed as a training mission, the helicopters were loaded with ammunition before taking off. (AP Laserphoto)

Alleged Neo-Nazi Sought In Death

By BILL MENEZES
Associated Press Writer

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) — A reputed member of a neo-Nazi group who is a trained survivalist probably hasn't left the rugged Ozark Mountains since he allegedly shot and killed one state trooper and wounded another, authorities said.

"We have no reason to believe he got out of there," Highway Patrol Lt. Ralph Biele said Wednesday of David Tate, who is being hunted by more than 200 people combing 150 square miles of rugged, forested country dotted by numerous caverns ideal for hiding.

Tate has not been seen since he fled near the Missouri-Arkansas border after the fatal shooting Monday of Trooper Jimmie Linegar, 31, and the wounding of Trooper Allen Hines, 35, with a silencer-equipped automatic pistol during a routine traffic check.

Participating in the search for Tate, 22, of Athol, Idaho, are 150 to 175 officers from the FBI, area sheriffs' departments, Missouri Highway Patrol and Branson police department.

At least 25 Arkansas officers also are involved because of speculation about connections between Tate and the Covenant, Sword and Arm of the Lord, a fundamentalist group that shares many of the same beliefs as The Order, a militant organization to which Tate has been linked by the FBI.

However, the leader of the CSA's 224-acre settlement south of the Missouri-Arkansas line near Pontiac, Mo., said in an interview Wednesday that Tate has never been to the camp. The settlement is about an hour's drive from Branson. Authorities said they had no plans to raid the settlement.

In Philadelphia on Wednesday, William Anthony Nash, one of 23 reputed neo-Nazis indicted earlier this week by a federal grand jury in Seattle, was arrested by FBI agents, authorities said.

Nash, 47, who authorities say is a member of The Order, was arrested peacefully at a tavern, the FBI said.

Members of The Order are accused in the slaying of Denver radio talk show host Alan Berg, the killing of a fellow member of The Order and armored-car holdups that netted more than $4 million.

Also Wednesday, authorities revealed that a van driven by Tate carried a cache of 12 firearms — six machine guns, three handguns, a sniper rifle and two other assault rifles.

Passenger Safety Is Defended

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The safety of passengers on an American Airlines jetliner that lost an engine over New Mexico was not endangered by the pilot's decision to continue the flight to San Diego, an airline spokesman says.

"It is our belief that the pilot and the plane both performed admirably given the circumstances," American Airlines spokesman Joe Stroop said in Fort Worth, Texas.

Some passengers thought the pilot should have flown to the nearest airport after losing the engine, which was found Wednesday in New Mexico.

"In the pilot's best judgment, there was no risk to his passengers in continuing the flight," Stroop said Wednesday. "And you have to remember it was his own neck on the line out there, too. He's not going to take needless risks."

The 3,000-pound engine, mounted to the tail of a Boeing 727, fell off Tuesday while the plane was flying from Dallas-Fort Worth to San Diego, but the crew and passengers on Flight 199 didn't know it until after the aircraft had landed safely in San Diego.

None of the 90 people on board the plane was injured.

Once on the ground, several passengers criticized the pilot's decision to continue to San Diego rather than landing at a closer airport.

The pilot reported engine problems near Gila Bend, Ariz., Federal Aviation Administration officials said. The plane flew another 50 minutes on two engines to land at Lindberg Field here, where a ground crew noticed one of the three engines was missing.

Gross National Product Registers Sluggish Growth

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The economy grew at an anemic annual rate of 1.3 percent in the first three months of the year, the government said today. The expansion, even more sluggish than first thought, was the slowest in more than two years.

The Commerce Department's new estimate of growth so far this year compared to an initial projection of 2.1 percent made a month ago, before the first quarter had ended.

Not since the last three months of 1982, when the economy was beginning its climb out of the 1981-82 recession, has the gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, grown so slowly.

When the initial first quarter forecast was made, many economists said they believed the government was overstating the weakness in the economy and predicted the growth calculation would be revised upward, possibly to 4 percent.

Since that time, however, a string of other business barometers have confirmed that the economy performed very sluggishly in the first three months of the year.

The 1.3 percent growth pace compared to a 4.3 percent rate turned in during the final three months of 1984 and was the meekest since the 0.5 percent annual rate registered for the last quarter of 1982.

For all of last year, the GNP grew 6.8 percent, the best performance in more than three decades.

The Reagan administration is predicting growth this year will reach 3.9 percent. But given the weak start, many private economists feel the country will be lucky to achieve a growth rate of between 3 percent and 3.5 percent — about half last year's pace.

The consequence of the slower growth could well be rising unemployment and a so-called "growth recession," some economists are predicting. A growth recession occurs when the economy is expanding at such a sluggish pace that it is not creating enough new jobs to take care of a growing labor force.

For the Reagan administration, slower growth could also translate into bigger budget deficits than the record $213.3 billion already anticipated for the current fiscal year.

The Commerce Department report showed that inflation also picked up in the first three months of the year. A GNP price index which takes ito account the changes in the types of goods being purchased rose at an annual rate of 5.3 percent in the first quarter, almost double the 2.8 percent pace turned in during the final three months of 1984.

However, government analysts said this index overstated the inflation pace because it was skewed by a big shift to purchases of energy products in the first three months of the year.

Another GNP price index, which measures price changes in the same market basket of goods each month, rose at an annual rate of 4.4 percent in the first three months of 1985, only a slight deterioration from the 3.6 percent rate turned in during the final three months of the year.

Analysts blamed half the acceleration in prices in the "fixed-weighted" index to a pay raise federal employees received in January.

Most analysts agree that the GNP indexes are overstating the increase in inflation, pointing to the fact that two more commonly used inflation measures, the Consumer Price Index and the Producer Price Index, have shown only modest changes in the first three months of the year.

The GNP report showed that a flood of imports siphoned sales from domestic manufacturers and continued to be a big drag on the U.S. economy.

Imports increased at an annual rate of 26.1 percent in the first quarter while exports were falling at an annual rate of 8.2 percent as U.S. manufacturers were further battered by a high dollar, which makes their goods more expensive overseas.

Most forecasters expect the deterioration will continue with the country's merchandise trade deficit likely to reach a new record of $140 billion this year.

The report showed a slight pickup in consumer spending but a sharp decline in the growth of business investment during the first three months of the year.

Consumer spending was growing at an annual rate of 4.7 percent in the first quarter, compared to 3.6 percent in the fourth quarter. Business investment, however, was growing at a rate of 3.5 percent, down from an 8.5 percent pace in the final three months last year.

The various changes show the GNP after adjusting for inflation. Before this adjustment, the GNP grew at a rate of 6.7 percent in the first quarter, down from a 7.1 percent pace in the fourth quarter GNP.

This left the total GNP, before adjusting for inflation, at an annual figure of $3.82 trillion in the fourth quarter. After adjusting for inflation, the first quarter GNP totaled $1.67 trillion.

No Advice Wanted

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former President Jimmy Carter never asked the first lady for advice during their four years in the White House, Rosalynn Carter said.

"I had input and told Jimmy of the things I saw and encountered throughout America," said Mrs. Carter, answering a question after a speech Wednesday at Washington University.

"But as far as him saying, 'What should I do?' ... Well, that's just not Jimmy Carter."

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — A sharp drop in open-market interest rates helped drive stock prices higher on Wall Street today.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.85 to 1,277.16 in the first half hour.

Gainers opened up a 5-3 lead over losers among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The tone for the day was set when the government issued a preliminary report that the gross national product grew at a 1.3 percent annual rate, after adjustment for inflation, in the first quarter of the year.

That marked a downward revision from the "flash" estimate given late last month of 2.1 percent, and was taken as strong evidence that the economy had lost a good deal of its momentum.

Though the news hardly came as a favorable portent for corporate profits, it touched off a quick drop in interest rates.

Rates on short-term Treasury bills fell about 20 basis points, or hundredths of a percentage point. Prices of long-term gov- ernment bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, climbed about $10 for every $1,000 in face value.

Among individual stocks, the spotlight fell on CBS as Ted Turner, chief executive of Turner Broadcasting, made a complex bid to acquire control of the company through an exchange of stock and debt securities.

CBS shares rose 5¼ to 115 as analysts warily appraised the chances that Turner's effort might prove successful.

On Wednesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 2.76 to 1,272.31, bringing its gain over the past seven sessions to 19.33 points.

Advances outpaced declines by about 4 to 3 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 96.02 million shares, against 98.48 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .27 to 105.29. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .50 at 231.43.

CBS ...

"Once we have evaluated the material, CBS will inform its shareholders of the merits of Turner's proposal.

"Our shareholders and the public will have ample time to evaluate Turner's proposal ... (and) CBS will have opportunities to express its position regarding this matter."

Turner's lawyers said that they also were filing formal notices with the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Justice Department to comply with securities and antitrust laws.

Turner said he would seek a seat on the CBS board as soon as he can acquire the stock.

The papers constituted a formal application for FCC consent to transfer control of CBS to TBS, a necessary step because the commission has authority over broadcasters and networks. The commission will now open the matter to public comment for 50 days before responding to Turner's filing.

OSHA ...

•Extend application of the standard to all employers covered by the 1973 Occupational Safety and Health Act (OSHA) of North Carolina, a move state Labor Commissioner John Brooks said would include most any employer except for operators of mines and quarries. Mines and quarries are covered under a different act.

•Include nurses among health professionals already authorized for access to trade secret information in non-emergency situations. Currently, the standard authorizes access to trade secret information in non-emergency situations to four categories of medical professionals including physicians, industrial hygienists, toxicologists and epidemiologists.

•Require that employers include additional information in a required identification list of hazardous chemicals in the work place. Under the present standard, a workplace chemical list is required, but it need not include specific chemical identities. The amendment would require lists to include specific chemical identities (except for trade secret ingredients) and common names of any substances listed as well as the approximate amount of each substance normally present in the workplace.

•Authorize employees to refuse to work with an unidentified chemical if they are not provided with the identity of the substance as required by the standard. Under the amendment, if an employee is unable to obtain a chemical identity after five working days, he can refuse to work with the chemical. The amendment further provides that an employee who uses this option shall not be discharged or discriminated against, but can be required to return to work with the substance in question once its chemical identity has been provided.

Extending application of the standard to all employers covered by OSHA will, Dudley said, "certainly cause hardships for those companies with fewer safety staff resources.

"In essence, the government could make unwilling lawbreakers out of some of the small businesses which cannot fully understand or comply with a standard which may prove to be unwieldy for their operations."

Texasgulf representative Jack Pyburn concurred with Dudley, saying passage of the amendment could burden some small companies to the extent that they would be driven out of business. Texasgulf, a large mining and chemical complex, is located in Aurora.

The proposals were endorsed by speakers representing farm and workers for small manufacturing concerns.

David Cecelski of the non-profit Pamlico Sound Legal Services firm, said his company supports the amendments however "awkward and ungainly they are".

"We support anything that can be done to improve legal rights to a safe and healthy work place."

Also supporting the amendments was Joseph T. Hughes (Chip) Jr. of the East Coast Farmworkers Support Network. Hughes, who has been studying the use of toxic chemicals in agriculture for the past three years, said very few farm workers or the health professionals those workers contact know about the chemicals used in agriculture.

According to Hughes, approximately 1,000 pesiticide poisionings have been reported in North Carolina over the past 10 years with 40 percent of those identified as agriculturally related. One has to keep in mind, however, Hughes pointed out, that not all poisonings are reported.

Additional OSHA hearings will be held around the state through April 29. For more information or to send in written comments for the record, contact Mercer Doty, Division of Occupational Safety and Health, NC Department of Labor, 214 W. Jones St., Raleigh, NC, 27603, or telephone (919)733-4880.

Martin Favors Veto

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said today he would make a personal appeal to state legislators for support of a gubernatorial veto, calling it an "historic" issue.

Martin also said he was mistaken when, in an interview shortly after his election, he referred to North Carolina's governorship as a strong office.

"That's one of the rare times I was incorrect," Martin said with a grin during his weekly news conference this morning. He said further study had convinced him the office is weak in comparison to governorships in other states.

Martin said he would testify this afternoon at a public hearing before the House Constitutional Amendments Committee, which is considering a bill that would schedule a referendum on the veto question for the 1986 election.

"Even though ... it's not customary for governors to speak to legislative hearings, I think this of such historic importance, it is a responsibility I should take and will take to give my views directly before that committee," said Martin.

Martin didn't campaign on support of a veto, but requested it in his State of the State address Feb. 28. He sharply criticized the Democratic Senate leadership last month for killing a Republican veto bill in committee and refusing a floor vote.

Boone, Pirates Scalp Indians

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Back in the early days of this country, Dan'l Boone was a man who struck fear in the hearts of Indian tribes, so legend goes.

Last night, Dan'l did it again, with a Tribe that makes camp on the banks of the James River on a reservation called William & Mary.

Boone, East Carolina's sophomore hurler, had a no-hitter against the Indians for five and a third innings before Ed Stanko broke it up with a single up the middle. Tom Nevin followed with a second hit, but Boone got back on track and finished with a 5-0 shutout of the Indians, as the Pirates swept the twinbill.

Mike Christopher survived a shakey first inning in the opener to record a 3-2 victory, his eighth against no losses this year.

The combination boosted the Pirates to 9-3 in ECAC-South play, only a half-game behind UNC-Wilmington, now 9-2. The Pirates travel to George Mason, currently third at 8-5, for a three-game set Saturday and Sunday. Wilmington meanwhile, visits James Madison for a trio of games at the same time. ECU then concludes ECAC-South play with a single game against the Seahawks in Greenville on Wednesday. UNC-W must then travel to American for three to conclude its season the following weekend.

The winner of the conference race automatically advances to the ECAC's Southern Division tournament, to be held at ECU starting May 16. A second team could also earn an at-large berth in either the Southern or Northern Division tournament.

"I thought both of our pitchers threw very, very well," ECU Coach Gary Overton said. "Their left-hander (Barry Williams) threw well in the first game, keeping us off balance.

"The first game was just a typical low scoring game and we took advantage of the opportunities we got to score enough to win," Overton said. "IN the second game, we played more our type of game and made runs and kept the lead with solid defense and Daniel's outstanding pitching."

Boone, in his two-hitter, struck out eight, his second highest total of the year. He raised his record to 4-1 on the season — his first as a collegiate pitcher.

Christopher, who gave up two runs in the first inning, came back strong after that, mowing down the Indians although they did come up with a couple of threats after that.

• • •

William & Mary, threatened to take a hand in the league race, jumped on t;he Pirates for two runs in the first inning. Ed Hohman led off with a single but went down at second on Stan Yagiello's grounder. Stanko followed with a double just over the head of third baseman Mark Cockrell down the left field line. John O'Keeffe grounded out, scoring Yagiello with the first run. Ronney Barden followed with a walk and Tom Nevin doubled down the right field line with a drive that just eluded the diving Winfred Johnson at first base. That scored Stanko.

And for a while, it looked like the 2-0 margin might just be enough. The Indians, however, left men stranded at second in the third and sixth innings, and never again scratched on the day.

The Pirates, after leaving men on second and third in the first, produced their first run in the second. With two away, Cockrell doubled to left and Robert Langston followed with a soft double to short right, scoring Cockrell.

In the fifth, the Pirates let an outstanding threat go by the boards. Langston beat out a bunt single and when the ball was overthrown, he raced all the way to third base with none out. However, a foul pop, and a pair of infield grounders ended that threat.

The tying run came over in the sixth, however. Johnson, who was to collect five hits in seven trips on the day, banged out his second double of the day to open the inning. He was sacrificed to third and scored on Jay McGraw's single past the drawn-in infielders to left.

Then, in the seventh, the Pirates got the game-winner. In an almost duplication of the play in the fifth, Mark Shank reached on a slow roller down the third base line, dashing all the way to third when the ball was overthrown at first. After one out, both Chris Bradberry and Johnson were intentionally walked to set up a double play, but pinchhitter Mike Wells foiled the Indian strategy by getting a single to right, easily scoring Shank with the game-winner.

Johnson and Langston each had two hits for the Pirates, while Yagiello had a pair for the Indians.

• • •

In the second game, the Pirates didn't allow a threat until the fifth when the Indians used a walk and a hit batsman to put a man in scoring position for the first time. In the sixth, Stanko broke up the no-hitter and the Indians finished the frame with runners on second and third. And in the seventh, they used a pair of walks and a fielder's choice to move a man to third with one out before failing to score once more.

East Carolina, meanwhile, pushed over a run an inning in all but the fourth frame.

In the first, with two away, Bradberry doubled and Johnson beat out an infield hit. An error on the play let Bradberry score and moved Johnson to third. Two walks loaded the bases, but the Pirates failed to score again.

In the second, Cockrell opened with a double to right center and took third when Shank reached on an error. Greg Hardison's sacrifice fly scored Cockrell for a 2-0 lead.

A third run scored in the thirde. Johnson singled and Mont Carter walked. Both were sacrificed up and Jim Riley's sacrifice fly scored Johnson.

In the fifth, Johnson again opened with a single, advancing on a passed ball. Wih two away, Riley doubled, scoring Johnson.

The final run came over in the sixth. With one down, Shank walked and stole second, scoring on Greg Hardison's 13th double of the year.

Johnson had three hits to lead the Pirates, while no one had more than one for the Indians.

East Carolina climbs to 28-9 overall while William & Mary drops to 10-23 overall and 3-9 in ECAC-South play.

East Carolina returns to action on Saturday at George Mason when the two meet in a doubleheader. They play against Sunday in a single game. The Pirates are next at home on Wednesday when they host UNC-Wilmington in a key league game.

Brewers Finally Stop Tiger Prowl

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

The Detroit Tigers won't go 9-0 — like they did in 1984. And Manager Sparky Anderson insists they won't go 35-5 — like they did in 1984.

But that doesn't mean they won't repeat as world champions — in 1985.

Just when the American League East was starting to fret about another Detroit runaway, the Milwaukee Brewers slowed things down Wednesday by nipping the previously unbeaten Tigers 2-0 behind the two-hit pitching of Danny Darwin.

The 1984 Tigers didn't lose until their 10th game. The 1985 edition only went 6-0 before succumbing. So?

"This is a better club than 1984, I'll answer that for you right now," Anderson said. "I can't even compare the two; this team is just better. But in the American League East you'd better be better.

"We're going to lose one like we did today. Anybody can beat you once in a while. We're going to lose three, four in a row. But when you stretch this thing over 162 games, we're going to be all right because we've got a good product."

The Tigers' division lead was trimmed to one game over Milwaukee and Baltimore, which defeated Cleveland 6-3. Elsewhere, Toronto shaded Texas 3-1 in 10 innings, Kansas City trimmed Boston 6-1, Oakland whipped Seattle 8-4 and California edged Minnesota 4-3. Chicago and New York were not scheduled.

Darwin, who lasted just 4 2-3 innings in his first start, walked one and struck out two in besting Detroit ace Jack Morris, who scattered six hits. Jim Gantner singled home the first run in the fifth inning following two-out singles by Ben Oglivie and Bill Schroeder. Gantner tripled to lead off the eighth and scored on Paul Molitor's sacrifice fly.

"This is a big confidence builder," said Darwin, who came over from Texas in an off-season trade. "There's nothing like pitching a shutout against the world champions to make you feel good."

The Brewers, coming off a disastrous, injury-filled 1984 campaign, are as confident as they can be.

"We believe in ourselves," said Gantner. "If we can keep everybody healthy and in the lineup, that's like making a major trade. We'll be a good team. I think people forget that we had a lot of people hurt last year. In this division, you lose that many people and you're on the bottom in a hurry."

It surely will take more than one loss to destroy the Tigers' confidence.

"I sure would have liked to have gone 9-0 again because maybe those are some games we won't have to win down the road," said shortstop Alan Trammell. "But I think we're going good and I feel the same attitude around here I felt last year.

Baker Winds Down First Spring

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

There have been better beginnings — and their have been worse, East Carolina's new head football Coach Art Baker says about his first spring practice with the Pirates.

In many instances the Pirates have not come as far as Baker had hoped they would. And in a few others, they have surpassed his expectations.

"The most impressive thing has been the attitude of the players," Baker said on the eve of the 1985 Purple-Gold game, set for Saturday at 3:30 p.m.

"They've had to adjust to a lot, a new head coach, changes in the system. Then we lost two assistant coaches during the spring and replaced one of them. But the players have gotten better even with these distractions, and we've had good leadership from some of our seniors."

But, Baker added, the Pirates have not come as far along in establishing what he had hoped to accomplish during the spring. "Our quarterbacks have improved throwing the ball, but we're weaker at wide receiver than I thought we would be. We have no proven quality people there and that's scary.

"We've made progress as far as installing our offense and defense, but again, not as much as I had expected us to make," Baker continued. "We've put in some new things, but we're going with some old things too."

Baker said that instead of using new terminology, the coaching staff had learned the old terms for the benefit of the team.

"One problem area that I thought we were going to have was in the defensive line and we made much more progress than I thought we would, and I think Wally Chambers deserves the praise for that." Baker said that David Plum, Leon Hall, Medrick Rainbow and Walter Bryant give the Pirates four good defenseive linemen. "We're not going to be imposing, but we won't be embarrassed either, and they will get better.

"We thought our linebackers could be good and they have been," the coach said. Ron Gilliard and Vinson Smith have both had good springs on the outside, while John Williamson had shown he can help with depth prior to an injury.

One of the big surprises of the spring has been the play of Bubba Waters at inside linebacker, while Robert Washington has also played well. Steve Jacobs and Bruce Simpson have also had good springs, Baker said.

"We had a lot of injuries on the offensive line last year and they were inconsistant," Baker said. "This spring, they've made steady progress, with Tim Dumas and Greg Thomas the most consistant and improved along with David Kramer. I'm more concerned with the center play going into the fall. Thomas is a possibility there if some other people who (weren't eligible for the spring, return in the fall)."

Anthony Simpson and Tim James have looked good at fullback, a spot Baker was worried about. "Both have had good springs and have gotten off some good runs. We need a big fullback who can break some big ones and who can catch the ball, and both of them can do it. Right now Tony Baker is along at tailback and should have a good year if he stays well. Bobby Clair can be a factor when he's healthy. My biggest disappointment is in the progress of our young tailbacks, but injuries have hampered them."

Baker said that the secondary has been a pleasant surprise, and says that's a tribute to the coaching of Don Powers. "Kevin Walker has been our number one leader and performer on the field. Keith Ford had a good spring until he was injured. There's been a good battle at free safety between Vernard Wynn and Ellis Dillahunt, and there was a good battle between Gary London and Essray Taliafero at strong safety until London was hurt."

The kicking game has good news and bad news. The good is that Jeff Heath is back for his senior year. "He's the most consistant player we have," Baker said. "He's as good as anyone in the country at kicking the ball."

Punting, however, is a problem. The Pirates have no one consistantly kicking the ball and may have to rely on an incoming freshman. Charlie Harriman is the only punter in camp right now.

"We're going to have to have a strong kicking game, both in placements and punting, if we are going to have any success this fall," Baker said.

Scott Lewis, Mike Gainey and Jeff Patton have all had good springs at right end. "Two of them were originally walk-ons, but have gotten better and better," Baker said.

For Saturday's game, there will be about 25 players who will not dress because of injuries. Baker had originally planned to have a split squad with each team captain alternating choices as to who he would have on his team.

However, the injury situation has caused Baker to change his mind about that. Instead, the first offense and defense will make up the Purple unit, with the rest of the team on the Gold.

"To make it fair, the Purple will spot the Gold seven points each quarter, so they'll have to catch up 28 points to be even in the game," the coach said. "The Gold will still have some pretty good players, but I think that it would have been a better game had everyone been healthy."

Activities for the weekend get underway tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Sheraton with a party for those playing in the Purple-Gold golf tournament to be held at Brook Valley Friday.

Santana's Annual Homer Sparks Mets

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

The New York Mets got some power from an unexpected source . . . and put the lights out on the Pittsburgh Pirates.

"I hit a home run a year, but when I hit it, I hit it good," said shortstop Rafael Santana after his homer helped the Mets defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates 10-6 Wednesday night.

The homer was Santana's first of the season and only the second of his 88-game major-league career. He also had a double and scored three runs, duplicating Darryl Strawberry's performance as the Mets won their seventh game in eight starts.

As for Strawberry, who unlike Santana is expected to hit homers for the Mets, Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner said: "I've seen none come up with better ability since I've been managing than Strawberry. Sure, he's going to strike out, but Mickey Mantle struck out for seven years and he's in the Hall of Fame."

In other NL action, Chicago edged Philadelphia 5-4; Cincinnati trimmed Atlanta 6-1; Montreal tripped St. Louis 2-1 and Los Angeles edged Houston 1-0 in 11 innings.

Strawberry doubled to lead off a three-run third inning, then hit a solo homer to start a three-run fourth against loser Larry McWilliams, 0-1. Mets' starter Bruce Berenyi drilled a run-scoring double in the third, but couldn't survive seven walks and 113 pitches over 4 2-3 innings and was lifted for Doug Sisk during a three-run Pittsburgh fifth.

"I've never lifted a starter before after 4 2-3 innings, but he (Berenyi) had a seven-run lead and needed to get three outs," said Mets Manager Dave Johnson. "He pushed me to the limit and then some. It wasn't pretty and it wasn't easy."

Sisk, 1-0, worked 3 1-3 innings for the victory despite giving up a pair of Pittsburgh runs in the sixth. Mets' reliever Jesse Orosco struck out the side in the ninth to run his streak to six straight strikeouts in two games.

Cubs 5, Phillies 4

Keith Moreland atoned for three errors with a three-run, seventh-inning double that led Chicago over Philadelphia.

Ozzie Virgil's two-run homer off Chicago reliever George Frazier, the first of the season for the Phillies, had given Philadelphia a 3-1 lead in the top of the seventh before the Cubs rallied for their seventh victory in eight games.

"I let in two runs, but I knocked in four runs, and we won the ballgame," said Moreland, who was charged with two errors at first base and another in right field.

"I went to the plate trying to tie it up," said Moreland of his bases-clearing double in the seventh. "I was just trying to put the bat on the ball, but I got the bat head on it and it went into the gap (in right)."

Reds 6, Braves 1

Nick Esasky smashed three hits and drove in two runs and Tom Browning scattered six hits to lead Cincinnati over Atlanta.

Esasky singled home a run in a two-run fourth, then singled home another as the Reds broke the game open with three runs in the sixth. Cincinnati added a run in the ninth on Eric Davis' home run.

Browning, 1-0, struck out three and didn't walk a batter in going the distance for the Reds in his second major-league start. Losing pitcher Steve Bedrosian, 0-1, allowed five of the Reds' runs on eight hits.

The Braves scored their run in the fourth when Dale Murphy, who has hit safely in the Braves' first eight games, doubled, took third on Bob Horner's flyout and scored on Rick Cerone's infield hit.

Pete Rose singled in Cincinnati's fourth-inning rally and moved within 86 hits of breaking Ty Cobb's all-time record.

Expos 2, Cardinals 1

Jim Wohlford singled home Andre Dawson from third base with two out in the sixth inning, leading Montreal over St. Louis behind a combined four-hitter by Joe Hesketh and Jeff Reardon.

Hesketh, a rookie left-hander, struck out five and walked three in his first start of the year before getting relief help in the eighth from Reardon, who gained his first save. At one point, Hesketh set down 17 straight batters.

Cardinals' left-hander John Tudor, 0-1, nearly matched Hesketh's performance. After allowing a run-scoring single to Hubie Brooks in the first inning, Tudor managed to escape a two-on, none-out jam in the fifth before the Expos broke through to snap the 1-1 tie.

Jack Clark drove in the lone St. Louis run with a single in the bottom of the first.

Dodgers 1, Astros 0

Mike Marshall singled to score Mariano Duncan from second base with two out in the 11th inning, boosting Los Angeles over Houston.

White Oak Trips Conley; Jamesville Nips Creswell

HOLLYWOOD — White Oak High School grabbed an early lead and held off D.H. Conley to capture a 6-2 Coastal Conference baseball victory yesterday.

The White Oak variety of Vikings came up with a pair of runs in the first inning to take the lead for good. David Hatchell reached on an error and scored when Steve McAllister's fly ball to the outfield was mid-judged and fell in for a double. Ed Norman then reached on an error, allowing McAllister to score.

In the third, White Oak put it away with three more runs. Hatchell walked and McAllister singled. With two away, Keith Soos reached on an error, scoring Hatchell and Bobby Wray singled in McAllister. Ricky Humphrey singled in Soos with the fifth Viking run.

White Oak added one more in the seventh.

Conley got one in the fourth and another in the sixth, the latter coming on a solo homer by Lee Hardee.

McAllister led the White Oak hitting with three, while no one had more than one for Conley.

The Conley Vikings are now 12-3 overall and 0-2 in Coastal Conference play. They travel to North Lenoir on Friday.

Creswell 5

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School had to battle for nine innings, but finally pulled out a 6-5 baseball victory over Creswell in the Tobacco Belt Conference yesterday.

Creswell jumped ahead with three runs in the first inning. Stennie Rogers walked and David Gatlin singled. Rogers scored when Mike Davenport singled and Doug Christian doubled in the other two.

Jamesville came back with one in the bottom of the first. Creswell added a fourth run in the top of the fourth, while Jamesville scored two in the bottom of the inning. Creswell got a fifth run in the sixth, but Jamesville rallied for two in the bottom of the frame to tie it at 5-5.

Chris Jones led off the Bullet sixth with a single and Whit Brown was safe on an error. Kevin Perry singled and Ricky Ange walked, forcing in Jones. Terry Perry then singled in Brown with the tying run.

In the ninth, Jamesville finally broke the deadlock, scoring the game-winning run. Pee Wee Groover walked and advanced on a passed ball. He was sacrificed to third and scored on Eric Spruill's single.

Jones led the Jamesville hitting with two, while Davenport and Christian each had two for Creswell.

The win boosts Jamesville to 8-2 overall, 6-0 in league play. They travel to Chocowinity today.

Lady Tribe Tops Aurora

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity committed 11 errors but it still wasn't enough to allow Aurora to pull out a win as the Lady Indians pushed to a 7-5 Tobacco Belt Conference softball win Wednesday.

Aurora took the lead with three in the first, but Chocowinity countered that with three of its own in the bottom of the frame. Aurora went back out with two in the second for a 5-3 lead.

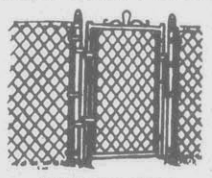

Chocowinity took the lead with three in the third, however, paced by a solo homer by Christie Bradley to open the inning. They added the insurance run in the fifth.

Bradley led Chocowinity with three hits while Twanda Gerald, Zena Warren and Tracy Dixon each had two. Lewis had three, while Lisa Franklin and T. Barrett had two each for Aurora.

Aurora drops to 6-2 while Chocowinity is now 3-5. The Tribe plays host to Jamesville today.

NCAA Recommends 'Death Penalty'

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — In what one official describes as "the athletic equivalent of the death penalty," the NCAA Council has approved a plan to close down for up to two years any athletic program that repeatedly violates major rules.

"In some cases ... it is the difference between sending someone to jail or sending him to the gas chamber," said one observer who asked not to be identified.

The policy-making Council concluded three days of meetings Wednesday by giving unanimous endorsement to a series of measures drawn up by the newly created NCAA Presidential Commission. The measures would identify "major" and "secondary" violations and give the NCAA enforcement staff far-reaching new powers. They will be voted on at a special convention of NCAA schools that the commission has scheduled for June 20-21 in New Orleans.

If approved, violations which in the past resulted in private reprimands could cause schools to lose scholarships, and players to lose eligibility. Violations that have traditionally drawn strong penalties could result in schools not being able to recruit or give scholarships or even schedule games for as long as two years.

"I believe the membership is going to approve the entire package," Jack Davis, president of the NCAA, told The Associated Press in an interview Wednesday. The commission, hoping to increase pressure on schools to go along with the stepped-up war on recruiting scandals, has specified that every school's vote will be made public.

"We sense a feeling of urgency among college presidents that something needs to be done immediately to address the issue of integrity in college athletics," said Davis.

The proposals are the result of several months of research and meetings and were not prompted by the recent basketball scandals at Tulane.

"We have determined that there are individuals out there who have been willing to accept the traditional probation penalties of no bowls or no television as the price you have to pay for a winning program," said Bill Hunt, the assistant executive director in charge of enforcement.

"But if you're not going to have any kind of program for two years, I think those people are going to conclude that it's not worth it. We want to make them feel that it's just not worth it any more.

Hunt said major violations are those that show a repeated pattern of willful wrongdoing and give a school a clear competitive advantage. Secondary violations will be defined as things that are isolated or technical in nature and provide a limited advantage.

The minimum penalty for major violations would include:

—Elimination of all expense-paid recruiting visits to the school for one year.

—Requiring all coaching staff members in the affected sport to forego off-campus recruiting for one year.

—Requiring that all staff members who knowingly engage in or condone major violations be subject either to termination or suspension without pay for at least one year, or to be re-assigned within the university to a position that does not bring him into contact with student-athletes for at least one year.

—One year of sanctions against post-season competition and television appearances.

The so-called "gas chamber" penalties will come into play when any major violation is found within a five-year period following the starting date of a major penalty.

Minimum sanctions for repeat major violators would be:

—Prohibiting some or all "outside" competition in the sport involved in the latest major violation for one or two seasons and the prohibition of all coaching staff members in that sport from any coaching activity for two years. An NCAA staff member said "outside" competition would include all competition above the intramural level.

—Prohibiting the school from giving any scholarships and prohibiting the coaching staff from any recruiting activity for two years.

—Requiring that the school's staff members resign any position on any NCAA committee, including the Council or the Presidential Commission.

—Forcing the school to relinquish its voting privileges in the NCAA for four years.

The "secondary violations" could result in the permanent ineligibility of athletes; forfeiture of games; prohibition of the head coach or other staff members from off-campus recruiting for one year; a 20 percent reduction in scholarships; and fines ranging from $500 to $5,000.

All penalties for secondary violations would be at the discretion of the assistant executive director for enforcement, which since 1978 has been Hunt.

Reaction from coaches was unanimously in favor of the stricter regulations.

"I've said there have to be stricter measures taken for those who willfully violate the rules," said Don DeVoe, basketball coach at Tennessee. "I think this is what the issue seems to be with the Council. I'm sure that a lot of the coaches around the country would have liked to see this happen several years ago."

Rick Bay, athletic director at Ohio State, said his "initial reaction is extremely favorable."

"I think we have needed this kind of legislation for a long time. I certainly would vote for it," Bay said. "My only reservation at all is proof of accountability. For instance, if an alumnus out there with whom we already had dissociated ourselves from caused a major penalty, I would be against that."

Georgia football coach Vince Dooley, president of the College Football Association, said he hoped the new rules would sidetrack over-zealous alumni.

"If this doesn't do it, it can't be done, because what those individuals would be risking is no football ... and that would make an impression on everybody."

Bill Yeoman, second vice president of the AFCA and for 23 years the football coach at Houston, cheered the involvement of the university presidents.

"It's the first real movement of presidents into the arena, and they certainly should have an understanding of what goes on," Yeoman said. "This is a step in the right direction."

Baylor Coach Grant Teaff, chairman of the Ethics Committee of the AFCA, was confident the new rules would deter cheating.

"Penalties are supposed to serve as deterrents ... I can't imagine any school gambling with this," he said.

Orioles 6, Indians 3

Fred Lynn had three hits and scored twice and Cleveland committed two eighth-inning errors to help Baltimore score three runs.With the score tied 3-3, Lenn Sakata singled to open the eighth. Reliever Jose Roman threw wildly to second on Rick Dempsey's bunt and Dan Ford then bunted safely to fill the bases.

Sakata scored when Cleveland third baseman Brook Jacoby, who had homered to tie the game in the sixth, booted Wayne Gross' grounder and Dempsey scored on Cal Ripken's grounder. Dave Von Ohlen walked Lynn to reload the bases and Gary Roenicke's infield hit drove in the final run.

Blue Jays 3, Rangers 1

Jesse Barfield smashed a three-run homer off reliever Dave Stewart in the bottom of the 10th inning after Texas had broken open a scoreless game in the top of the inning on Toby Harrah's bases-loaded sacrifice fly off Bill Caudill.

Buck Martinez and Len Matuszek started the Blue Jays' 10th with singles and Barfield followed with his second home run of the season.Texas knuckleballer Charlie Hough allowed three hits in 8 1-3 innings while Toronto's Jimmy Key yielded four in 6 2-3.

"I'd rather hit against Stewart than Hough any day," said Barfield. "I was looking for a fastball and he gave me one up and away. I knew I'd hit it out as soon as it left the bat. We didn't hang our heads after they scored their run. We came into the dugout and said, 'Hey, if they can score one, we can score two.' "

Royals 6, Red Sox 1

Charlie Leibrandt pitched a four-hitter and light-hitting Buddy Biancalana drilled a three-run homer to lead Kansas City.Leibrandt lost his bid for his first major-league shutout since 1981 with one out in the ninth when Jim Rice singled and scored on Mike Easler's double.

With one out in the Royals' second, Steve Balboni was safe on a throwing error by shortstop Jackie Gutierrez. Pat Sheridan walked and, after Jim Sundberg popped out, Biancalana tagged Al Nipper for his third major-league homer.Jorge Orta doubled two more unearned runs across in the fifth and Wilson singled a run home in the eighth.

Athletics 8, Mariners 4

Mike Davis belted his fourth homer and scored three runs as Oakland completed a sweep of a three-game series against Seattle, which had won its first six games.Oakland also got three hits from Alfredo Griffin to overcome the continued torrid hitting of Seattle's Jim Presley, who drove in four runs with his sixth homer and a double.

Presley's two-run homer in the fourth was the 14th by Seattle in six games against Oakland this year and gave the Mariners a 4-3 lead. But the A's went ahead 5-4 in the bottom of the inning on an RBI double by Donnie Hill and Dave Collins' sacrifice fly.They made it 7-4 in the fifth on a walk, singles by Davis and Griffin and an error by center fielder Dave Henderson.Davis' solo shot in the seventh made it 8-4. He leads the league with 14 RBIs, 12 runs scored and 27 total bases.

Angels 4, Twins 3

Gary Pettis, who struck out four times in California's previous game, stroked a two-out, two-run single to cap a three-run second inning as the Angels handed the Twins their sixth consecutive setback.Doug DeCinces drove in the decisive run in the fifth inning with a sacrifice fly that scored Rod Carew, who tripled. Winner Jim Slaton went six innings for the Angels and Donnie Moore pitched one-hit relief over the final three innings for California's first save of the season. Roy Smalley homered for Minnesota.

Wake's Hansen Upsets Virginia; Heels Advance

ATLANTA (AP) — In a day where records were set for hitting, Wake Forest's Erik Hansen had an awesome pitching performance.

Hansen had a 1-5 record and a 5.37 earned run average entering Wednesday's game with top-seeded Virginia in the first round of the Atlantic Coast Conference baseball tournament. He had lost twice to the Cavaliers.

But the Deacons' sophomore struck out 18 batters, breaking the previous tournament record of 14 held by Clemson's Ron Musselman and North Carolina's Scott Bankhead, to power Wake Forest to a 9-4 upset victory over Virginia. He pitched 8 1-3 innings, allowed two earned runs on five hits and walked seven.

"It was awesome," Virginia Coach Dennis Womack said of Hansen's performance. "The thing that concerned us was we knew Erik was capable of doing something like that. We got some people on base and we got some hits, but he just overpowered us."

In other first-round games Clemson beat Maryland 17-12, Georgia Tech routed North Carolina State 23-11 and North Carolina pounded Duke 15-2. In today's games Tech meets Wake Forest, North Carolina State faces Virginia, Clemson meets North Carolina and Maryland plays Duke.

Hansen needed relief help from Keith Ksansnak in the ninth. Wes Ragland drove in four runs for Wake Forest with singles in the first and third and a double in the eighth. John Morabito had a two-run homer for the winners.

Second-seeded Clemson pounded a tournament record six home runs in overcoming Maryland's eight-run first inning. John Jay, Steve Baucom, Scott Dillon, Ray Williams, Tommy Thompson and Bert Heffernan all homered for the Tigers. Dillon's and Heffernan's were three-run blasts, Jay's came with one man on and the others were solo shots.

Thompson's sixth-inning homer gave Clemson the lead for the first time at 10-9, but Maryland went ahead 12-10 in the seventh with three runs, two coming on Bryan Davenport's triple. However, the Tigers retook the lead in the eighth at 13-12, keyed by Williams' two-run double, and iced it in the eighth as Heffernan's homer highlighted a four-run rally.

Georgia Tech's 23 runs and 29 hits were tournament records as were the 22 hits by the Wolfpack. Scott Jordan hit two solo homers and Pete Geist also homered for the Yellow Jackets, while Mickey Billmeyer, Andrew Fava and Turtle Zaun hit home runs for North Carolina State.

Third-seeded North Carolina's six doubles and two triples tied tournament records. B.J. Surhoff hit two run-scoring doubles and Scott Johnson added a two-run homer for the Tar Heels, while Duke's scores came in the ninth when Rich Beviglia hit a two-run homer. North Carolina starter Greg Karpuk, 6-2, went seven strong innings to take the victory, allowing three hits and three walks, striking out five.

Friday Likes New Policy

By The Associated Press

The president of the University of North Carolina system says he is encouraged by "get-tough" enforcement measures proposed by the NCAA, but he says beefing up enforcement is only one of several steps needed to clean up college athletics.

Under proposals approved Wednesday by the NCAA Council, schools could be forced to give up football or basketball for up to two years for repeated violations. Major violators also could be prohibited from giving scholarships or recruiting off campus for two-year periods.

"The sanctions proposed were very much needed ... very urgent," UNC President Bill Friday said in a telephone interview. "But these sanctions do not, and will not solve all the problems, nor will they end the discussion.

"A schedule of sanctions does not solve the issue of television, or problems facing like institutions within Division I schools as opposed to other divisions, or the question of freshmen eligibility," Friday said.

The proposals will be put to a roll-call vote of all NCAA schools at a special convention June 20-21 in New Orleans.

Although he applauded the NCAA's move, Friday questioned the timing of the action.

"It's time for the NCAA to move," he said, "especially when it's an organization fighting hard to maintain control. Tougher enforcement measures by the NCAA is a worthy step and a much-needed step, but one must also remember that it has been the NCAA's laxness in this area that created the problem.

"It's time something substantial be done — to stand up and be counted," he said. "There's been talk about what needed to be done for three years. Everyone knows what the problems are and everyone knows the correction action needed, but little has been done."

Friday said he would attend the New Orleans convention, noting the "credibility of college administrators has clearly been drawn and there (would) be very serious criticism if something isn't done."

UNC athletic director John Swofford said he was pleased with the proposed measures and said he thought they would be passed in New Orleans.

Cubs' Zimmer, West Tangle During Game

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago Cubs third base coach Don Zimmer says he was treated "like a Sumo wrestler" when umpire Joe West grabbed him by the back of the collar and pulled him to the ground to get into position to make a call at third.

The incident took place during the Cub's 5-4 win over the Philadelphia Phillies on Wednesday as West tried to get a better look at Keith Moreland's unsuccesful attempt to stretch a double into a triple.

West, a North Carolina native and former Greenville resident, is a graduate of Elon College.

"I never had this happen before. This guy grabbed me by the back of the neck and fired me to the ground. What does he think I am? A Sumo wrestler?" Zimmer fumed in the locker room after the game.

Zimmer argued with a second base umpire and then with crew chief Doug Harvey who threw Zimmer out of the game.

"Harvey said he would have done the same thing if he had been umpiring at third," Zimmer said. "So I said, 'That makes you terrible, too'"

Zimmer said he will report the incident to the league office.

'I got nothing to say," West said. "I didn't do anything. Apparently he just got mad.

Measure Limiting Speaker's Terms Sees 12-3 Defeat

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic members of a House committee who killed a Republican bill limiting the number of terms for the Speaker of the House say there is no valid comparison between that bill and gubernatorial succession.

"I think you're talking about apples and oranges," said Rep Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, who sponsored a successful bill for a referendum to allow governors and lieutenant governors to serve only one four-year term.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Robert Brawley, R-Iredell, was defeated 12-3 along party lines by the House State Government Committee Wednesday. It would have prohibited anyone from serving longer than four years as speaker after 1989.

Wicker said the House could decline to re-elect any speaker who abuses his power. He disputed Brawley's claim that public support of his bill was "unbelievably favorable," saying there was no "hue and cry" to limit the speaker's terms. The same arguments were made by opponents of gubernatorial succession.

"Our people vote for us to come up here and make a decision on who will be speaker," said Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke.

"I had confidence that the committee would do the right thing, and I think they did," said the incumbent speaker, Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, who is serving his third two-year term.

Rep. Charles Beall, D-Haywood, who represents the same district as Ramsey, said the bill was "uncalled for" and moved to defeat it after Brawley made his opening statement.

Brawley told the committee he did not consult with Republican Gov. Jim Martin before introducing his bill. Martin and the GOP legislative leadership distanced themselves from it.

Brawley said the vote didn't surprise him and that Ramsey had warned him his bill probably wouldn't get out of committee. But he said it had been worth the effort to raise the issue.

"I think some people's votes were influenced more by how they felt about (Ramsey) than the issue at hand," he said.

The bill called for a statewide referendum on the issue during the November 1986 election — when voters will decide whether to abolish the 1977 amendment letting the governor and lieutenant governor seek two consecutive four-year terms.

Committee chairman Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, said he denied Brawley's request for a public hearing on his bill because no one else had expressed interest. Brawley was the only person outside the committee who spoke on the measure during about half an hour of debate.

Brawley warned that, since the governor has no veto power, allowing the speaker to serve indefinitely would "upset the balance of government and open the door to powerbrokers who want to stay in office at all costs."

There would be "temptation to promise chairmanships for support," said Brawley. "Temptation to threaten appropriations if you do not support. Temptations to seek revenge to maintain power."

Governor Urges 'Basics' Program

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin cautioned the state Board of Education today to make sure a curriculum proposed for the Basic Education Program focuses on what the public believes is basic education.

"I think when the public talks about basics, they're talking about reading, writing and arithmetic — and maybe respect," Martin said. "I have a question about how much over that should be included as 'basics.'"

Martin said he believed there had been some controversy about the currriculum because people have had difficulty finding out what's in it.

Dr. Craig Phillips, Superintendent of Public Instruction, told Martin after the speech the curriculum plan would make a distinction between basic opportunities for education and requirements for graduation.

"These courses are required to be available, but they are not required for a diploma," Phillips said. He said parents, teachers and others had been involved in developing the curriculum for over 18 months and wanted the extra elective courses as a basis for a full educational opportunity.

"Just remember they can't build that life without English and math," Martin said.

Martin also told the board he hoped to reverse a trend of spending less and less of the education budget for classroom teachers, saying he wanted to strengthen to profession of teaching.

"We have not in recent decades held teachers as the highest priority, even in school funding," Martin said. "You can have all the aides in the world, all the superintendents and all the administrative help we can muster, but if you lose those who ought to be in the classroom,, you're losing ground."

Day-Care Plan In Squabble

RALEIGH (AP) — An attempt to get more direction from state government on how to consolidate day-care services ended up prompting objections to the plan from church groups and private operators.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, chairman of the Children and Youth Committee, said Wednesday a version of the bill was circulated as a "trial balloon" to focus the reorganization efforts.

"We're waiting for them (state officials) to tell us how they want to run their program," he said. "We want to design a program the executive branch is comfortable in administering."

Administration Secretary Grace Rohrer and Human Resources spokeswoman Nancy Team each said day-care services would be better off in her own department. And both told the committee the operations of the program should not be specified by the Legislature.

Meanwhile, other speakers at the impromptu public hearing objected to the consolidation and to a 15-member commission's proposed membership.

"Unlicensed church day care will continually have problems," under the plan, said Dr. Ed Ulrich, executive director of the North Carolina Association of Christian Schools, who said regulation of church-run day care should be switched to the governor's office.

"We face a conflict with the state or a damaged conscience in the Christian community," said the Rev. Charles Anderson of Greensboro.

Hipps, however, said he opposes exempting church-run day care.

"The purpose of this bill is to consolidate, not to divide," he said. "Their argument seems to be that they would find a better philosophical climate in the governor's office. What if the governor changes. Then do they want to run to another place for protection?"

Roslyn Savitt of the State Council for Social Legislation and John Niblock of the North Carolina Child Advocacy Institute said the Child Day Care Commission should have a majority of private citizens on it.

Beach solitude on a misty morning

Quiet early hours at Topsail Beach

Text and photos by Jerry Raynor

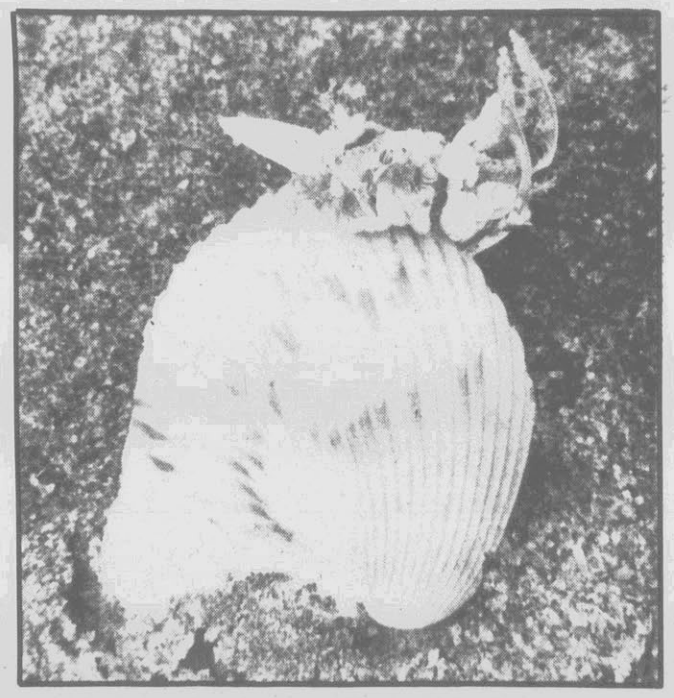

The right combination is required to create a rare day of beach magic — soft air touched with a daybreak sliver of chill; mist, just short of rain, swirling around one's face; ragged gray and silver clouds passing slowly overhead; low-tide waves lace-curling onto the beach, depositing a new treasure of shells, seaweed and water-polished pebbles; and a handful of unhurried people scattered along a mile or two of beach.

When these things all coalesce, the simple experience of being part of the scene becomes a memorable time to be savored at the moment; one to be remembered with pleasure as time goes by.

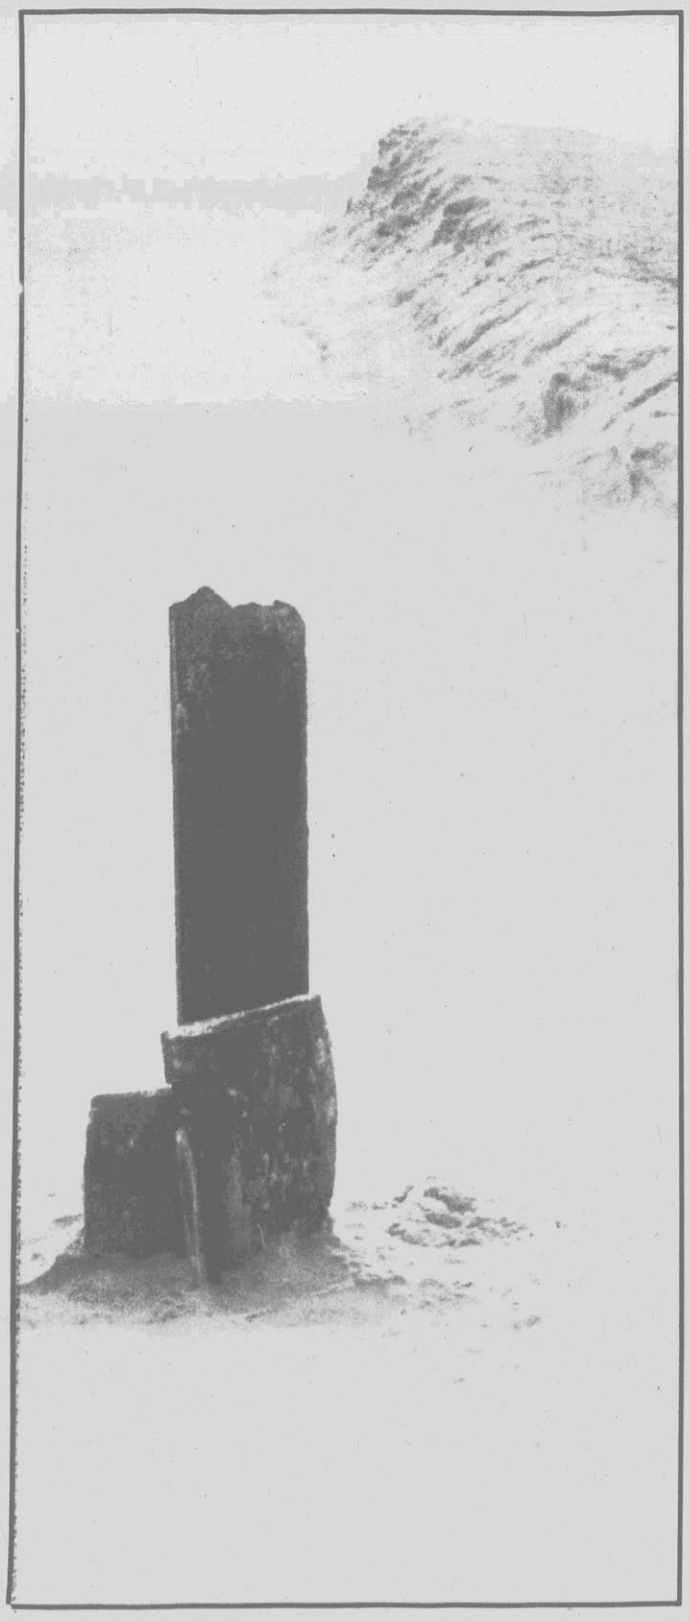

The scenes pictured here were photographed in early morning hours at Topsail Beach, a resort area on one of the string of small sandy islands off the North Carolina coast. Topsail Beach is 35 miles south of Jacksonville on N.C. 50, reached from U.S. 17 at Holly Ridge.

Like most North Carolina beaches, Topsail is generally a place of considerable activity during most sunny days in warm weather.

But in the early hours of a misty, cloudy day, even during the beach season, an early riser can capture an hour or two of refreshing solitude at Topsail Beach or at many places where the Atlantic meets the shore sands of coastal North Carolina.

Seat Belt Bill Gets Senate Approval; House Is Next

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would require drivers to buckle up is headed to the House after winning final approval 30-20 in the Senate.

Before passing the bill Wednesday, the Senate narrowly defeated an amendment to keep violators from having criminal records. Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, the bill's sponsor, said the 26-24 vote on the amendment was crucial.

"It could have been a delaying tactic," Warren said. "We had a fiscal note on the bill as it was. If that had passed, then our fiscal note would have been invalidated."

Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, who offered the amendment, said violators should be found guilty of a non-criminal infraction, the same penalty included in a bill to raise the drinking age for beer and wine to 21. An infraction would keep violators from having a criminal record.

"We should not treat these people as criminals simply for not buckling up," Kincaid said.

"I don't know what an infraction is," responded Warren. "I think we've got a bill we all can live with."

Sen. Chip Wright, R-New Hanover, suggested the bill might fill up the courts without the amendment and "cost the state of North Carolina a lot of money."

But Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, whose Judiciary I Committee worked on the bill, said the courts are set up to handle incidental expenses from new laws.

Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, an active opponent from the start, called on the Senate to "stop caving in to Washington" on legislation. One reason for the bill is the U.S. Department of Transportation's threat to require expensive air bags on new cars in 1989 if two-thirds of the nation's population is not covered by acceptable seat belt laws by then.

"They have the auto industry putting $12 million to $15 million into lobbying efforts in targeted states and we're one of them," he said.

Sawyer said a recent poll showed North Carolinians were 2-to-1 in opposition to mandatory seat belts as an "encroachment on personal freedom."

The bill, which would apply to drivers and front-seat passengers in cars that are required to have seat belts under federal law, nearly stalled in the Senate on another occasion because of concerns that it would not comply with DOT guidelines.

Barnes said the department still refuses to rule on any state's law before 1989. However, the bill was amended in committee to be nullified if the DOT ruling is unfavorable.

En route to passage, the bill has been amended to exempt those with medical problems with seat belt use, deliverymen and farm vehicles. It would take effect Oct. 1 with 15 months of warnings before violators would face up to a $25 fine and court costs.

Martin Tax Package Debated; House Considers Alternative

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — While supporters and critics of Gov. Jim Martin's tax-cut plan squared off before a Senate committee, the House prepared to vote on a package Democratic leaders say is more balanced and less costly.

The eight-point Democratic alternative, which surfaced suddenly this week and was rushed through the House Finance Committee, was scheduled for a floor vote today.

Republicans, upset that the measure was approved less than a day after Martin's program was introduced in the House, vowed to offer amendments that would restore the deeper cuts Martin seeks.

"We want to give everyone an opportunity to vote on the governor's package," said his lobbyist, I. Beverly Lake.

Meanwhile, a 10-member Senate Finance subcommittee planned to launch a study of Martin's package today after business and industry leaders showered it with praise during a public hearing Wednesday.

"I think it's a good investment in the future of this state," said C.C. Cameron, Martin's budget director and the retired chairman of First Union Corp. "It is a complete, simple and comprehensive package. It's fair, and it can be done."

Critics responded that the cuts Martin seeks would cause other taxes to rise and stifle essential government services while doing too much for business and too little for lower- and middle-income taxpayers.

"The Martin package is misdirected and too expensive, and as a result simply shifts the burden of taxes from one set of shoulders to another," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood.

Martin wants to repeal the property tax on intangible assets and reimburse local government for lost revenue, eliminate the sales tax on food and non-prescription drugs, and grant a state income tax credit to offset the property tax on business inventories.

His estimates that his plan's cost to the state would be $70.3 million in fiscal 1985-86 and increase yearly, hitting $489 million when fully implemented in 1988-89.

The House plan includes partial repeal of the three taxes Martin targets, plus elimination of the inheritance and gift taxes. It's projected to cost $375 over three years.

During the two-hour hearing, industry officials portrayed the intangibles and inventory taxes as impediments to growth, and several said flatly that the Legislature's actions would determine whether they expand in North Carolina or neighboring states.

"Help us reduce our costs, and we will do our best to keep jobs in North Carolina," said George Hofman, vice president of Thomasville Furniture Co. in High Point.

The Rev. Andre Willis, a leader of Wake County Opportunities, said abolishing the food tax would help poor people.

"There are Ethiopia situations not just over there in Africa," said Willis. "There are Ethiopias right out your back door."

Local government officials pleaded with lawmakers not to cut the intangibles or inventory taxes without replacing money they would lose.

"We recognize and respect the fact that cities and towns are creatures of the state, but do not want to become wards of the state or simply its red-headed stepchildren," said Ed Walters, mayor pro tem of Raleigh and spokesman for the 469-member N.C. League of Municipalities.

Jan Ramquist of the N.C. League of Women Voters said North Carolina's business climate is favorable enough, and dismissed as a "myth" the claim that repealing the inventory tax would attract industry.

Cutting taxes excessively would deprive government of revenue "for keeping up the infrastructure — the water and sewer systems and good schools, the very things that attract and keep industry now," Hipps added.

Innocent Plea For Brisceno

WILMINGTON (AP) — A former official of Belize, whom authorities said was arrested in Florida when he entered the country to accept a phony bribe, pleaded innocent today to charges of conspiring to smuggle marijuana into the United States.

"This may be one of the most significant cases in the country," said U.S. Attorney Sam Currin. "He is a former high official in a foreign country, and he remains a prominent political figure in his party even though it is out of power.'

U.S. Magistrate Franklin Block set a Friday bond hearing for Elijio Eloy Brisceno, 47, after he pleaded innocent to one count of conspiring to import marijuana, one count of possessing marijuana with intent to distribute and seven counts of using the telephone in furtherance of a felony.

Brisceno was minister of energy and communications of Belize until he was defeated at the polls in December.

Brisceno — a portly, gray-haired man who wore glasses — spoke through a Spanish interpreter in the federal courthouse hearing in Wilmington, where the indictment against him was returned earlier this month. The indictment charged that Brisceno conspired to ship large amounts of the drug into the United States through the coastal Wilmington area.

TV Hall Of Fame Dream Now A Reality For Mitchell

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — John H. Mitchell, a tall, rangy, nearly bald television executive and nonstop talker, doesn't look like a dreamer.

But he is. "I had a dream," he said. "I began to believe it could take shape and form and come alive."

His dream was the Television Academy Hall of Fame, which is now in its second year and will induct seven more legendary figures in a two-hour telecast Sunday on NBC.

Those being honored this year are Carol Burnett; Sid Caesar; Walter Cronkite; Joyce Hall, chief booster of the "Hallmark Hall of Fame"; Rod Serling; Ed Sullivan, and Sylvester L. "Pat" Weaver, father of the "Today" show, "The Tonight Show" and the TV special.

The first inductees were Lucille Ball, Milton Berle, Paddy Chayefsky, Norman Lear, Edward R. Murrow, CBS founder William S. Paley and David Sarnoff, the founder of NBC.

"I thought it was time we honored our own," said Mitchell. "The Emmys are for individual achievement in a given year, but I felt we needed a means to recognize lifetime achievements. I know the Motion Picture Academy doesn't have a Hall of Fame, but television is made up of so many different parts there are many ways that people can contribute to the fabric that makes up television.

"I knew it would take somebody to drive this through. I made up my mind I wanted to accomplish this and I set about doing it. One thing that helped was the support of NBC and its chairman, Grant Tinker. He said it was a good idea and he would put it on the air."

Mitchell is the chairman of the Hall of Fame. The idea came to him when he was president of the Television Academy of Arts & Sciences. He is also a former president of Columbia Pictures Television who now runs a consulting company.

This year's Hall of Fame presentations were made during ceremonies at the Santa Monica Civic Auditorium March 24. They were taped for later telecast. Among the guest stars were Woody Allen, Mel Brooks, Mike Wallace, Elizabeth Taylor, Julie Harris, Alan King, Garry Moore and Neil Simon.

Mitchell set up a committee to lay down the rules for the Hall of Fame and the selection of its honorees. "I wanted something that was prestigious and tamper proof," he said.

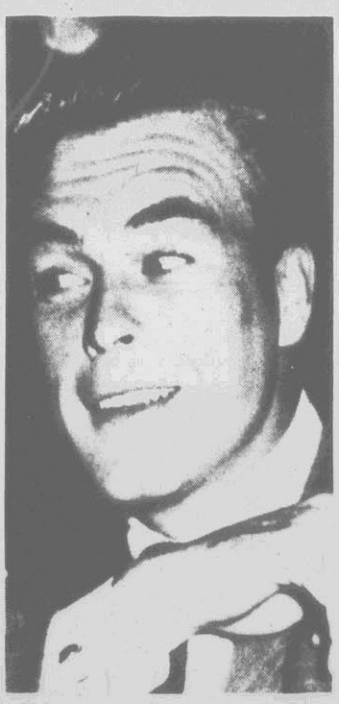

The number of inductees each year was arbitrarily set at seven. That allows 14 minutes for the presentation of each honoree in a two-hour program.

"The mechanism of the selection is that each of the 46 members of the board of governors of the academy has the opportunity to nominate 10 people," he said. "That would be 460 people but because of duplicate nominations it comes out to about 150 candidates for nomination.

"The honorees are picked by a selection committee of 12 persons. They represent a cross section of the industry. These are people who have no axes to grind, who've been around a long time and are well qualified to judge their peers. They discuss the candidates and vote and then discuss some more and vote again and keep doing it until they've whittled it down to seven. The nominees are then announced on the Emmy show in September."

Mitchell sits in on the discussions but does not cast a vote, which is by secret ballot. Representatives of NBC's standards and practices division also monitor the discussions to see that everything is strictly by the rules.

"The selection committee takes this very seriously," Mitchell said. "I thought they'd have a lot of fun, that there'd be some byplay. But they are very, very serious."

Play Role Created Tension

By JAMES F. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — After a recent performance of August Strindberg's "Miss Julie," a white Afrikaner couple approached black actor John Kani in the foyer of the theater to discuss the play.

They didn't realize that Kani — who wore dark glasses and a New York Yankees baseball cap — was the actor who had just played a black servant having an affair with a white woman. The play had been transformed for its Johannesburg run from Swedish themes of feminism and class conflict in the 1880s to a black-white relationship in contemporary South Africa.

"The man said, 'I think I've been through something; I think I've learned something,'" Kani recalled in an interview. "He dared to talk to me. That's contact. One. I count one every night."

For Kani, 41, "Miss Julie" was one of the most trying runs of his 20-year acting career. Whites occasionally walked out during performances, and at one show half the audience left in an orchestrated right-wing protest against the staging of interracial passion.

On Monday, the South African government announced that it would abolish laws prohibiting marriage and sexual relations between blacks and whites.

Earlier this month, white co-star Sandra Prinsloo received threatening and obscene letters for being in the play.

The protests, Kani said in a voice chilled with bitterness, were an attempt to "save the dignity and respect of the white nation. It was because she was on stage with something they do not consider a human being."

Kani was the 1976 co-winner of the Tony Award for the Broadway production of South African playwright Athol Fugard's "Sizwe Banzi Is Dead."

In the past nine months of racial violence in South Africa, 300 blacks have been killed. One was Kani's brother, Xolile, 26, who was shot by police near the family's Port Elizabeth township home in early April. Kani said his brother was a bystander during a riot. Police say Xolile had joined a crowd attacking a pro-government black's house.

Another brother, eldest of 11 children, was sentenced in 1962 to five years in prison for furthering the aims of the outlawed African National Congress. Kani, then 18, had to go to work rather than attend college to become a lawyer.

He sought a clerical job for 18 months in Port Elizabeth without success. He finally went to Ford Motor Co., where "they told me people with my kind of qualifications would be needed in this American plant in the near future.

"I walked in that Monday morning. I was handed blue overalls and a bucket, and the guy showed me the nearest toilet," Kani said. "I worked as a janitor for three months until I got onto the assembly line. I spent six years at Ford."

In 1965, his interest in theater drew him to the Serpent Players, a black troupe that performed primarily in church halls at night and on weekends, to avoid censorship of plays staged in government-run community halls.

It was about that time that he met Fugard, the only non-black member of the Serpent Players.

Kani built his international reputation as an actor of disciplined power in several Fugard productions, including "Master Harold and the Boys," the story of a white boy's relationship with two black waiters in his mother's cafe. He also has co-authored several plays.

Kani's enthusiasm for productions that get blacks and whites talking overcomes a pervasive bitterness. He wonders about the possibilities of a black-white "Romeo and Juliet," a black Cinderella, a black "Alice in Wonderland."

Grant Upset With Films

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Veteran actor Cary Grant says today's films are all "blood and heavy breathing."

The 81-year-old star's remarks at Princeton University Wednesday night came in an evening billed as "A Conversation With Cary Grant."

Grant declined to name his favorite female co-star. But he called Grace Kelly the "best actress."

"She was never aware that the camera was on her," he said.

Grant also praised director Alfred Hitchcock. The two worked together in several films including "North By Northwest" and "Notorious."

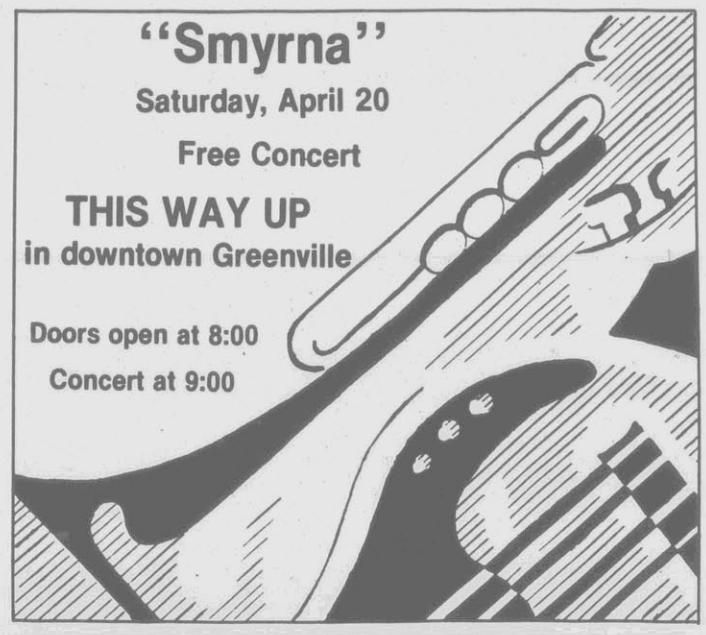

"It was never difficult to work with Alfred Hitchcock," Grant recalled. "I whistled going to work."

Asked about the films of today, he said: "In those days, we were not permitted to make sexually explicit films ... and I don't know if I would have if I could. The whole business today is blood and heavy breathing."

Explorer Claims He Knows Site Where Ark Is Located

By ZEYNEP ALEMDAR
Associated Press Writer

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — As the season approaches for climbing Mount Ararat, Noah's Ark fever is running high despite one explorer's claim that he has already found the legendary boat.

This year 73 foreigners, 68 of them Americans, have sought permission from the Turkish government to search for the ark which, according to the Bible, came to rest on Mount Ararat after the great flood inundated the earth.

Ron Wyatt, an anesthesist from Madison, Tenn., said he's sure the boat lies three miles on the southwest side of the mountain at a height of 6,300 feet.

On a trip last summer, Wyatt took samples from the mountain.

"I brought a high-power metal detector which showed metal all around the boat shape and there were ribs of timber every nine feet all over the boat," he said.

Wyatt, who came here for preparations for an expedition he plans to start in May, said, "It is only a matter of digging it up."

"This is not a guess, it is a fact that this boat formation and everything about it is exactly as it should be for Noah's Ark," Wyatt said in an interview.

Although Turkish scholars doubt his claims and one geologist says the boat-shape is caused by erosion, Wyatt claims the dimensions of the boat shape correspond to the measures given in the biblical book of Genesis. The length is 471 feet and the width 141 feet, he said.

According to Genesis, the ark was 300 cubits long, 50 cubits wide and 30 cubits high. A cubit, an ancient form of measurement, is believed equal to between 18 and 22 inches. That would make the ark at least 450 feet long.

Wyatt said analysis of his samples at the University of Georgia and by Galbraith Laboratories in Knoxville, Tenn., showed that they were decayed wood. A nuclear physicist friend, he said, estimated the samples to be between 5,500 and 5,900 years old.

Wyatt plans to return to the site with eight experts, including David Fasold, a marine archeologist from Florida, to X-ray the formation before starting to excavate. The excavation on the volcano that last erupted in 1840 will take about five years, he said.

Turkish scholars are skeptical about claims of the ark's discovery.

Many believe the explorers are searching at the wrong place.

Prominent Turkish archeologist Ekrem Akurgal said that "evidence presented by Mr. Wyatt gives the impression that the formation could be an ancient boat."

"But it is hard to explain how flood waters could elavate to a height of 6,300 feet and the boat come to rest there," he added. Akurgal said humans were not advanced enough 5,000 years ago to build the kind of boat described by Wyatt.

A Turkish geologist, Yilmaz Guner, said in an interview that the boat-shaped formation could be the result of thousands of years of erosion.

Another Turkish geologist, Suleyman Turkunal, said he thinks Noah's Ark, if it exists at all, must lie somewhere in northern Mesopotamia near Mount Judi, 200 miles southwest of Ararat.

Ancient Sumerian writings dating back to the second millenium B.C. mention a great Mesopotamian flood.

Archeologists have discovered that ancient Sumerian towns on the plains between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers were buried in up to 10 feet of clay, a strong indication of an earlier flood, said Turkish archeologist Sevim Buluc.

The Koran, the Moslem holy book, also recounts the story of Noah and the flood. But it said the boat came to rest on "Judi."

Islamic scholars are uncertain whether "Judi" refers to a particular mountain or is used as a noun to mean a high place, which could be any mountain, theology professor Talat Kocyigit said.

There have been many claims in the past, notably by French explorer Fernand Navarra, that evidence pointing to the ark was discovered on Ararat.

Exploration came to a halt in the late 1960s when the Turkish government refused to give permission for climbs up the mountain following complaints by the Soviet Union about possible spying.

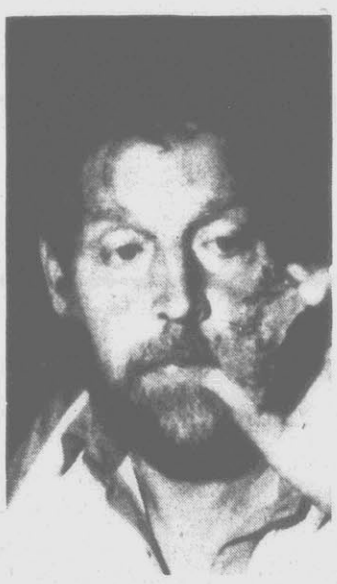

The 16,000-foot-high Mount Ararat is in a militarily sensitive area in northeast Turkey near the border with the Soviet Union.

Turkish officials lifted the ban in 1982.

Since then, mountain climbers and explorers eager to tackle the mountain and fundamentalist Christians seeking to prove the word of the Bible have rushed to the area.

Among them was former U.S. astranout James Irwin, who has attempted four climbs already and is expected back this year.

The climbing season is limited, since the mountain is covered with ice and snow almost nine months of the year. Climbers generally prefer July and August.

Vet Protests Reagan Visit

SPRINGDALE, Ark. (AP) — World War II veteran Jim Hively has mailed his Silver Star, Bronze Star and other decorations to President Reagan to protest the president's planned visit to a German military cemetery where Nazis are buried.

"It's taken some thinking to do this, but it's the only way I know to protest. This is a big thing for me," said Hively, 62, a graphic arts teacher at Springdale High School.

Hively received the decorations, which included three campaign stars and six other service medals, in the European theater. He displayed them in his home until he put them in a box and mailed it to Reagan on Wednesday.

The president announced plans last week to visit the cemetery at Bitburg, where many Germans who died in the Battle of the Bulge are buried, as a gesture of solidarity with the West German government. It has triggered protests from veterans, Jewish groups and members of congress.

Hively fought in the Battle of the Bulge and said he can't forget atrocities committed by German troops. He said he removed paratroopers from trees where they had been hung and used for bayonet practice by Nazis.

Referring to Reagan, a World War II veteran who spent his service time acting in training films, Hively said, "If he'd been out there in the mud, kill or be killed, maybe he wouldn't do it so easily."

Hively, who said his son was decorated in Vietnam, said his son "would do the same thing if they were decorating graves along the Ho Chi Minh Trail."

He said he has nothing against the German people, but holds the Nazis responsible for the deaths of many of his friends in the war.

Arthur Cross, the adjutant for the American Legion in Arkansas, supports Hively's decision and said he admires him for doing it. "I hope he sends them straight to the president," Cross said. "Personally, I think Reagan could have avoided this part of his tour. It is going to hurt a lot of people."

The adjutant quartermaster of the Veterans of Foreign Wars state chapter, Dewayne Fletcher, said his organization had no problems with Reagan's proposed visit.

He said the two countries should continue to resolve war wounds.

Today, bagpipes will peal loud and clear in Dunedin, Florida for the start of the annual North American Highland Games, which resemble a track and field meet. Families or "clans" compete in foot races, dancing and in playing bagpipes. The best-known competition is the caber-toss. A caber is a long wood pole weighing 180 pounds. Golf is one popular game invented by the Scots, in the 1100s.

DO YOU KNOW — In what Scottish game do players push heavy stones across ice toward a target?

TAKE THE LONG WAY HOME

Get behind the wheel of a new Nissan 4x4 ST and you'll find it tough to go straight home. This tough, high spirited truck is designed to appeal to your sense of adventure. Its gutsy 2.4 litre NAPS-Z overhead-cam hemi engine will carry you over the rough stuff. And there are lots of other goodies to make the going great: optional sun riof, special upholstery, special tires, sporty chrome spoker wheels and more.

Try the new Nissan 4x4 ST. It may take you a little longer to get home. But it'll be worth every extra mile.

OYCCROHYQB: YXQ TJWEYDTSWOF?

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: "20,000 LEAGUES UNDER THE SEA" IS VERNE'S PROFESSIONAL NOVEL OF GREAT DEPTH.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: O equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

AMA Study Says Doctors Image Falling

CHICAGO (AP) — Most Americans think doctors are less compassionate these days, their dedication to patients being displaced by their desire for dollars, according to a study sponsored by the nation's largest physicians' group.

V. Lance Tarrance and Associates, an independent Houston research company, did the telephone survey of 1,000 adults last November on behalf of the Chicago-based American Medical Association to determine public perceptions of physicians.

Fifty-four percent of respondents agreed that "doctors don't care as much about people as they used to," the company said.

The largest group of respondents — 44 percent — believes that people become doctors today for "the money and prestige." Only 28 percent believe the motivation is to "help people."

Still, the survey found that public doesn't begrudge doctors their high incomes, which now average more than $100,000 per year.

Sixty-two percent of the respondents thought doctors' incomes "are fair because of the importance of what they do and the many years of training they have to undergo." But patients wish doctors would spend more than a few minutes with them during an office visit.

Sixty-one percent of respondents said doctors don't devote enough time to their patients.

Minister Named

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has appointed Britain's first Minister for Waste, with the task of making money from reclaiming and recycling the country's annual pile of 56 million tons of garbage and industrial waste.

She named David Trippier to the post. He is a 39-year-old civil servant at the Departmen of Trade and Industry and a former stockbroker.

Up to 60 percent of the country's waste consists of reclaimable materials like paper, glass, aluminum, copper and rubber worth more than $900 million a year, and other waste could be converted into electricity, fuel and steam, according to the government.

Border Residents Upset By Reduced Hours For U.S.-Mexican Crossings

By ARTHUR H. ROTSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

NACO, Ariz. (AP) — To Ernest Rogers, Irma Franco and Lionel Valenzuela, U.S. Customs' limited hours at the Mexico border crossing down the street are squeezing their pocketbooks.

But Customs officials say the killings of an American drug agent in Mexico in February and a Customs officer last year in Texas warrant the recent reduction in the hours the border gates at remote U.S. crossing sites are open.

In Naco, a dusty town about 100 miles southeast of Tucson, heightened security has taken the form of Customs agents in fatigues toting semiautomatic rifles and patrolling around the port of entry.

It was the hours, though, that most upset local residents.

"It's a helluva big inconvenience, and it's affected business, too," said Rogers, who owns a car repair shop in the unincorporated town of 5,000. Two of his employees who live in Mexico have been forced to sneak through a hole in the border fence to return home after work.

During a recent four-week period when the gate was open only eight hours a day, Rogers estimated that business fell off about 30 percent.

Irma Franco, a lifelong Naco resident, and her husband operate one of Naco's only two groceries, both within a block of the border.

"I think the security of the officers comes first ... (but) it's made it pretty hard to survive," she said.

If things didn't improve, she said, Franco's Popular Store could be forced to close. She added, "Business is off that much."

Valenzuela, owner of the town's second market, said he had been losing about one-fourth of the $800 or so he used to take in daily when the gate was open from 6 a.m. until 10 at night.

They and others said the slash in hours had forced many Mexicans living across the border in Naco, Sonora, to make much longer commutes to and from jobs in Arizona.

"It's a blow to everybody because it's just like one family" between the Naco border communities, Mrs. Franco said. Mexico's Naco has a population of about 5,000, too.

Customs officials closed crossings at nine remote sites, including Naco, along the 1,760-mile border on March 2, in response to what authorities said were threats made against federal agents by organized drug traffickers in Mexico.

By mid-March the gate at Naco, for example, was open only from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. It wasn't until last Friday that Customs officials decided to extend the crossing hours at Naco from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Congressional pressure and complaints from local residents led to the longer hours. In addition, Customs spokesman Ed Kittredge said officials in Washington had "more confidence they can ensure the safety of the officers."

"We can't afford to take these threats lightly," said Donald Kelly, Customs Southwest regional commissioner in Houston, citing the kidnapping and fatal shooting last year of Customs agent Richard Latham near Eagle Pass, Texas. "Our experience with that one murder got our attention."

The threats also came shortly after the February kidnapping of U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration agent Enrique Camarena Salazar and a Mexican pilot in Guadalajara, Mexico, who were both found slain.

The Camarena abduction resulted in a severe crackdown for 10 days in mid-February at all border crossings. Intensified inspections delayed traffic at some larger border crossings, such as San Diego, for as long as 9 hours.

"We think we have a very real threat," said spokesman Charles Conroy in Houston. "... To us in Texas it is very real."

Kelly said that, aside from Naco, most of the remote crossings "are ridiculously expensive to keep an officer in place and should be closed for the benefit of the taxpayer." He estimated the effective cost at some points for each crossing processed at perhaps $150.

Local Customs officers won't talk for the record. Agents, however, man the Naco station during the off-hours to keep the facility secure.

Kelly said there has been "a whole rash of incidents along the border," including three cases in which shots were fired at but missed off-duty Customs agents in Yuma, Douglas and Nogales on March 27 and 28.

In one case, a woman inspector was shot at when she got out of her car in a residential section of Nogales, Conroy said. In the others, officials said, an officer driving away from a firing range was shot at from a pickup truck, while another who was jogging was believed fired at by a sniper.

Meanwhile, intensified inspections of commercial shipments from Mexico in search of drug shipments will continue indefinitely, Kelly and Conroy said. The inspections have resulted in some apparently minor seizures.

"Generally speaking, this is marijuana season ... down there," Kelly said. "We know there's a problem with cocaine" and brown heroin is on the upswing, he said, adding that Customs tries to add extra resources at the high points of the season.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Put some new plan in operation during the day and in the evening, go after personal matters that are pressing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Pursue intimate aims in the morning, but tonight, concentrate on your most secret wish. Be thoughtful of friends.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) You can get much done in the business world during the day, but later concentrate on personal wishes.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Use your inventive ability, your ingenuity in handling new projects and get ahead faster. Plan how to gain greater prestige.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Handle your business affairs brilliantly during the day, but later gain data you need from an outsider.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Discuss some new plan with your partners and then get into the minutiae of such. Show that you are ethical and reliable.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Early make appointments of a social nature for the future and later get into that workload and clear it up.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Concentrate upon home affairs in the morning, but reserve the evening for simple and wholesome pleasures.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Get busy early at correspondence and other communications and later enjoy your family at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Plan how best to add to your present abundance during the day and confer with experts in the evening.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will easily go along with modern trends, so be sure to accord a fine education, since upon reaching adulthood, your progeny will want to make a great deal of money. Teach accepted principles and tenets early in life.

Judge Sets Order Aside

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal judge has stopped the deportations of 13 Cuban refugees who came to the United States in the 1980 "freedom flotilla" boatlift, ruling that the government did not prove they were dangerous criminals.

The 13 were among 33 scheduled to leave this week on the third of a series of flights to Havana. U.S. District Judge Charles A. Moye Jr.'s ruling does not prevent the planned expulsion of other Cubans who are not fighting deportation.

But in another ruling, the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals overturned an earlier decision by Moye that had kept 14 other Cubans from being deported.

Government officials declined to say if those 14 will now be deported on this week's flight, but defense attorney Myron Kramer said he believes that is the government's intention. Kramer added that he does not expect defense attorneys to file further appeals on behalf of the 14.

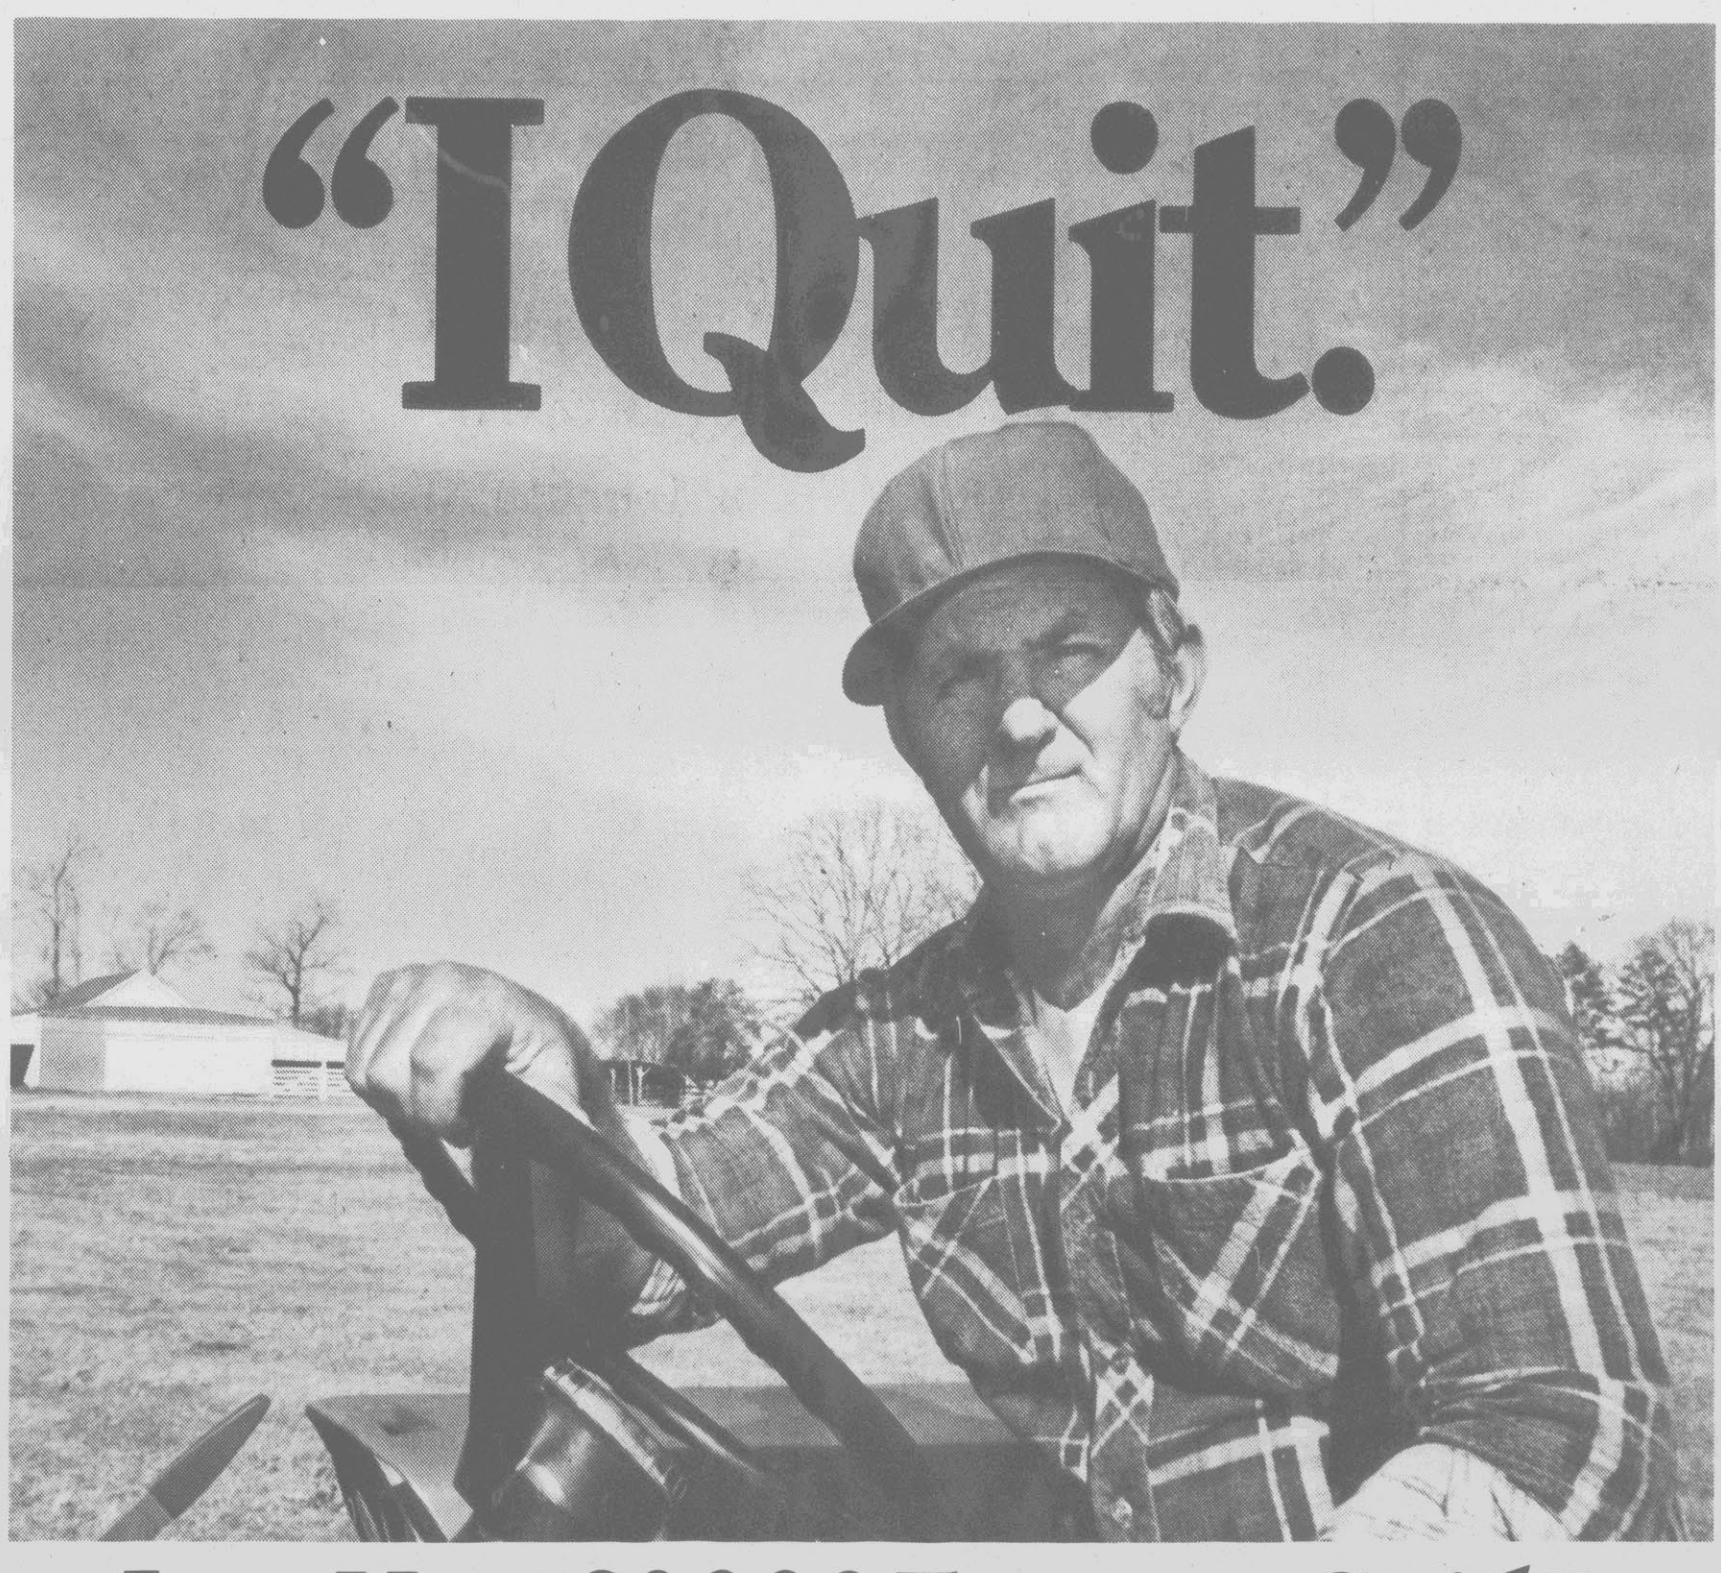

This fights are part of an agreement reached in December between the United States and Cuba for the deportation of a total of 2,700 Cubans the government says are mentally ill or criminals.

On the first two flights, in February and March, the government sent 51 Cubans to Havana. Suits filed by Cubans battling deportation have forced the government to schedule the flights at a slower pace than originally planned.

Immigration spokesman Duke Austin said last month that government officials have not tried to monitor the treatment of refugees once they were returned to Cuba, but "the State Department had assurances that they would be treated fairly in accordance with Cuban law."

Last Year 60,000 Farmers Said It. Here's Why.

Weather, machinery costs, market prices and governmental interference are the worries that have forced thousands of farmers to quit. But, when you diversify tobacco and row crop operations by raising chickens for Perdue, most of these worries are reduced or eliminated.

Perdue chickens have an ever increasing consumer demand that must be supplied in greater quantity than ever before. That demand plus Perdue's liberal producer contract arrangements make a Perdue poultry house the ideal choice for the farm family that wants to remain on the farm.

Talk to a Perdue representative about a greater percentage return than other crops, a substantial positive cash flow, investment tax credit and all the other Perdue incentives that make growing for Perdue so good.

Keep on farming, but add a sure-fire cash crop—growing chickens for Perdue. Return the coupon, or call us collect at (919) 795-4151, and let's talk chicken.

Give Yourself a Raise—Raisin' with Perdue.

Opening lead: Queen of ♡.

Top-level partnerships in the U.S. are not noted for their longevity. An outstanding exception is that of Edgar Kaplan of New York and Norman Kay of Philadelphia, who have been playing together, and winning together, for more than a quarter of a century. Note their defense on this deal from the trials to select the U.S. team more years ago than we would care to mention.

When North doubled his overcall of one no trump, Kaplan prudently retreated to two diamonds—a contract that would have been made as the cards lie. North-South reached four spades in quick time and Kaplan got off to the good lead of the queen of hearts.

The defense was superlative. Declarer played low from dummy, and Kay overtook with the king of hearts to shift to a club. Declarer won the king and his problem was to avoid a loser in each suit—obviously, West was marked with the king of spades and queen of clubs for his overcall. Declarer's plan was to strip the red suits from his hand and dummy, then throw West on lead with the king of trumps to force a ruff-sluff or a club lead into declarer's tenace.

Declarer led a low diamond, and Kaplan made a fine play when he inserted his jack. Dummy's king won and Kay signaled with the ten. The ace of hearts was cashed, a heart was ruffed and declarer then exited with a low diamond. Had West been forced to win this trick, the end play would have succeeded. But because of his earlier ducking play he was now able to follow low on the diamond and allow his partner to win. Another club from East set up the queen of clubs as the fourth trick for the defense.

Government Benefits Go To Half Homes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government benefits in one form or another touch nearly half of all the households in the country, according to a new Census Bureau study.

Of the 83.6 million non-farm households in the nation, 39 million received at least one type of benefit from state or federal governments in the first quarter of 1984, according to the new Survey of Income and Program Participation, released Tuesday.

Social Security retirement benefits were the largest program, by far, aiding at least one person in 28 percent of all households.

But so-called means-tested benefits, which are based on income levels, also affected 19.2 percent of households — nearly one in five, the bureau said.

Overall, households taking part in one or more programs totaled 46.7 percent of all households across the nation.

Besides Social Security and unemployment insurance, the income-based benefits include such things as aid to families with dependent children, 4.6 percent; supplemental security income, 3.4 percent; food stamps, 7.7 percent; free or low-priced school lunches, 7.0 percent; Medicaid, 9.1 percent, and public housing, 4.3 percent of households.

The study is part of a quarterly series of reports on Americans' income and benefits received from government programs, both state and federal. However, the series is relatively new and not enough data have been accumulated to compare figures from quarter to quarter.

Census officials did not attempt to estimate the value of the non-cash benefits received by various families. In the past, reports suggesting values for such things as housing assistance and food stamps have generated controversy among groups who contended that they were an attempt to make the nation's poverty rate appear lower by counting such benefits as income.
