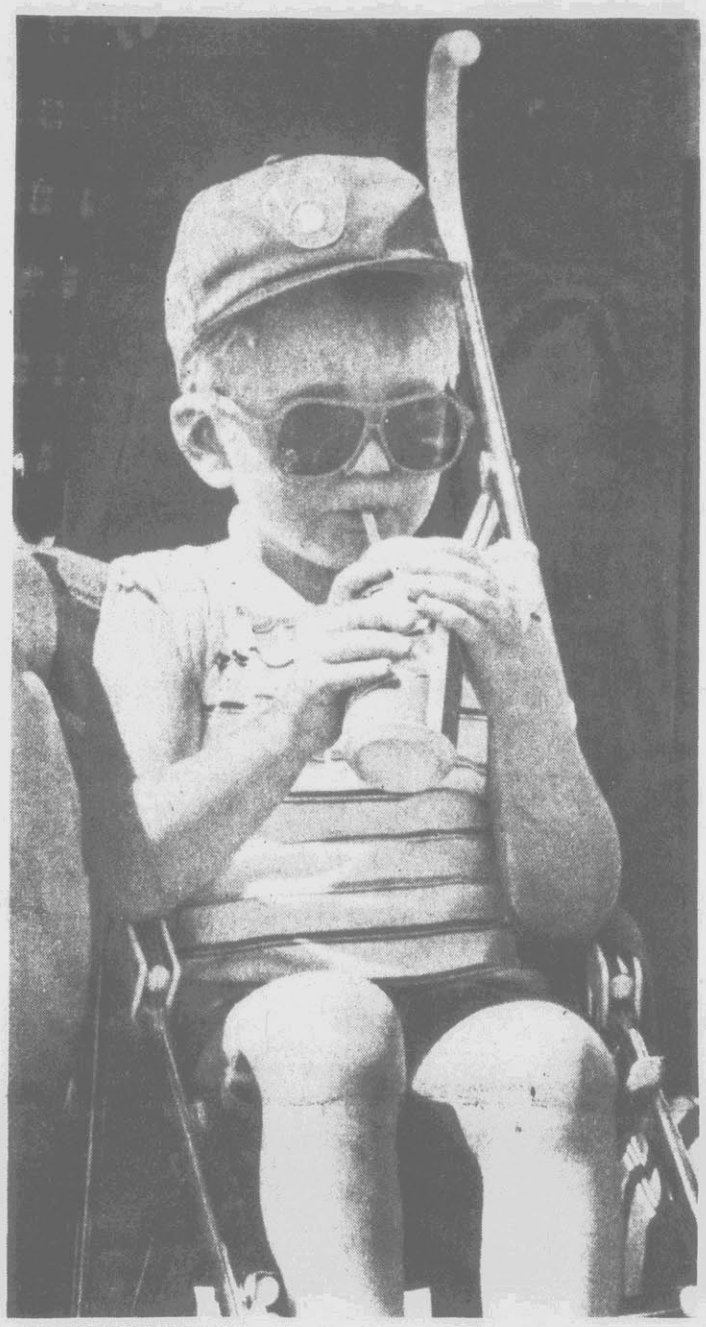
TRUTH IN PREFERENCE TO FICTION

104th YEAR NO. 95 GREENVILLE, N. C. SUNDAY MORNING, APRIL 21, 1985 72 PAGES PRICE 50 CENTS



NOTHING FISHY HERE — Matthew Ryan, 3, of Knoxville, Tenn., sips on some refreshment while he enjoys Saturday's Shad Festival parade in Grifton. Matthew and his mother, Debra Ryan, were visiting Mr. and Mrs. C.W. Leonard of Grifton and decided to take in the annual celebration of the shad, a fish that returns each spring to nearby Contentnea Creek. A feature page of photographs from weekend festival events will appear in Monday's Daily Reflector. (Reflector Photo By Mary C. Schulken)

On Consolidated School Board

Group Wants More Blacks

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Concerned Citizens for Justice, a minority group whose allegations of illegal school board activities prompted the Consolidated Board of Education of the Pitt and Greenville school systems to halt operations last week, says its aim is to obtain representation on the board, not disrupt school activities.

"We want open lines of communication with the Consolidated Board so we can address our concerns," according to Ernest Brown of Greenville, a spokesman for the group. "Our main concern is fair representation on the board. One (black) out of 12 (members) won't get it."

The group contends that five changes in the structure of the Pitt and Greenville school boards in the 1960s and 1970s were in violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965, which requires "preclearance" or approval from the U.S. Justice Department before adjustments are made in a board's composition.

A preliminary assessment by the Justice Department indicated the changes in question did not have the required preclearance, and that the two school boards may have been operating illegally since the adjustments were made.

That assessment, say members of the Consolidated Board, spurred concern that the board had no formal authority to function since it was created by a vote of two school boards whose legality has been questioned. At a meeting last week, members voted to take no further action on consolidation until the question of legality was resolved.

"We have no authority, so there is no need to go forward if legally we can't do anything," board Chairman Mark Owens told members.

School officials say no lawsuit or court order halted the Consolidated Board's progress and that the two school systems in the county will continue

Marchers Protest Buildup

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of protesters marched outside the White House on Saturday to start three days of demonstrations against President Reagan's military buildup and policies on South Africa and Central America.

Protesters massed on the Ellipse, the park outside the White House grounds, then swung up Pennsylvania Avenue toward the Capitol for a rally.

As they passed the White House, the Rev. Jesse Jackson dropped to the pavement and uttered a prayer that referred to Reagan's planned visit next month to a military cemetery in Bitburg, West Germany.

"Touch our president in some special way," the kneeling civil rights leader said. "Some place between Bitburg and Johannesburg, let him choose another way."

The demonstration, marking the 10th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam war, was echoed on the West Coast, where 4,000 protesters marched in downtown Los Angeles and others rallied in Seattle.

"What brings us here is the need to reverse the policies of the Reagan administration — the inhumane treatment of the U.S. public, espeically the poor, and of people in Third World countries such as El Salvador," said Joel Koplitz, 25, a protester in Los Angeles.

U.S. Park Police estimated the size of the crowd in Washington at 26,000. March organizers claimed 100,000.

Viewed from the Capitol, Pennsylvania Avenue was packed solid with demonstrators for more than 12 blocks. The steadily moving crowd took an hour to pass the White House, park police said.

District of Columbia police Lt. William White III said at late afternoon there were no arrests and termed it "a very peaceful demonstration."

SCLC Optimistic Over Its Future

By MELANIE PHILLIPS
Reflector Staff Writer

The state president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference says the organization's leaders are "optimistic" that it can continue the ideals set forth by the late Dr. Martin Luther King to strive for justice and freedom.

"We're optimistic. That's why we're here. In the past it has been dark and dull but the future always opens up the way for freedom and justice," the Rev. Belvin J. Jessup said during the SCLC's annual state convention in Greenville this weekend.

Using the theme "Striving to Survive in '85," the convention included a mass rally Friday night at Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church and a banquet Saturday night at the Moose Lodge.

SCLC President Joseph E. Lowery, announced in advance as speaker for the rally, did not appear. The Rev. C.T. Vivian, executive director of the Anti-Klan Network and a national SCLC board member, was scheduled to be featured at the dinner.

Pitt Council SCLC President Bennie Rountree welcomed the group to the rally Friday night, saying they represented a new opportunity for blacks.

RJR Proposes Tighter Controls For Tobacco Buyers, Growers

By The Associated Press

R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. has proposed legislation that calls for a more tightly controlled program than the federal program that now exists and would subject tobacco buyers to controls for the first time, a newspaper has reported.

The News & Observer of Raleigh said in Sunday editions that congressional officials say the legislation is only a draft and subject to compromises, but is the first detailed example of the specific demands cigarette manufacturers are making to salvage the financially threatened tobacco program. Company officials were not available for comment.

The proposed legislation follows the general points in a plan Reynolds offered last month for an industry buy-out of the tobacco surpluses that threaten the grower-financed program.

The newspaper reports that the major changes include:

— The establishment of a Tobacco Advisory Committee that would effectively set national marketing quotas. The committee would consist of two members representing growers and four members representing manufacturers and leaf dealers. The seventh member would be a U.S. Department of Agriculture official.

— A system of setting quotas in which the U.S. agriculture secretary would have only limited power to change the marketing quota proposed by the committee. The secretary could set the quota at a figure between 98 and 102 percent of the figure recommended by the committee.

— A program even more tightly controll than the existing federal program, with tobacco buyers subject to controls for the first time.

Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., confirmed the document's authenticity and generally praised the company for putting specific proposals on paper.

"It is a starting point," said Rose. "But it is only a piece of paper and Reynolds is putting down its best shot.

"Clearly, we're not going to give them everything they ask for," Rose said.

Rose said tobacco-state congressmen would not accept an advisory committee on which manufacturers and buyers outnumbered representatives of growers.

"We have to have a balance," Rose said.

Rose also questioned the feasibility of what he called the control of buyers.

"It's pretty severe," Rose said. "It sure ain't free market."

Under the Reynolds proposal, which is named the "Tobacco Program Improvement Act of 1985," the national marketing quota would be based ont he purchasing plans of the company and leaf dealers.

Before the quota is set each year, buyers would submit statements to the agriculture secretary outlining the "amount of any kind of tobacco they intend to purchase at auction."

Buyers would be licensed and obligated to buy "at least 90 percent to operate normally unless ordered by the court to shut down. The county's attorney, according to Eddie West, superintendent of Greenville and Pitt schools, is currently "researching the legal implications of the situation" with a representative of the North Carolina attorney general's office.

Although it admits pointing out the discrepancies to the Department of Justice, the Concerned Citizens for Justice group says it has "no immediate plans to do anything about this non-compliance," according to Brown. "Our immediate plans are to meet and work with the interim (Consolidated) Board toward our goals."

In March, the group asked the Consolidated Board to consider restructuring its composition to include more black representation. A list of the group's concerns included:

•Alleged inadequate representation on the Consolidated Board of Education. The board is composed of 12 members selected from the existing Pitt and Greenville school boards, including the only black member from either board. The composition of the board was recommended by a Research Triangle Institute Merger Feasibility Study and adopted by the Greenville and Pitt school boards and the Pitt County Commissioners.

•At-large election of the Consolidated Board of Education. Under current guidelines, all citizens in the county vote elect all school board members. The Concerned Citizens for Justice support a ward system of representation or a combination ward/at-large system.

•Six-year terms for board members. The group recommends four-year terms.

According to Brown, the group wants to meet with board members and be allowed input into planning "We are not a militant or a radical group," he said. "We have never been allowed to meet with the board itself, only with a representative. We just want open lines of communication."

Brown said increasing black representation on the Consolidated Board is the group's primary concern. "Getting fair representation on the board can address the other situations," he said. "Once we get fair representation, we can work on the system of electing board members and on six-year terms."

Paper Reports Ortgega Agreeable To Cease-Fire If U.S. Cuts Rebel Aid

BOSTON (AP) — Nicaraguan leader Daniel Ortega said in a message Saturday his country would agree to an immmediate cease-fire if the United States ends all support for Nicaraguan rebels, The Boston Sunday Globe reported.

The Nicaraguan president presented the message to Sens. John F. Kerry, D-Mass., and Thomas R. Harkin, D-Iowa, after they completed talks with him in the capital city of Managua, Kerry told the newspaper.

Ortega also said he would immediately restore civil liberties in Nicaragua and end press censorship if the United States agreed to resume bilateral negotiations and end its support for the Contras, the senators said.

He also reasserted his country's commitment to Central America as a zone free of nuclear weapons and foreign military bases, including those of the Soviet Union and Cuba.

President Reagan on Saturday accused the Nicaraguan government of allowing "Russian military personnel" in battle zones where the Sandinista government is fighting "democratic resistance."

In his weekly radio address, Reagan also said Nicaragua's leftist regime "may put forth an 11th-hour so-called peace proposal aimed at blocking aid to the democratic resistance."

Kerry and Harkin called the document Ortega's first offer of a cease-fire, and said the document read: "if the United States, as affirmed by the Reagan Administration and the Congress', would discontinue direct or indirect, covert or overt support for the Contras and immediately reconvene bilateral talks between Nicaragua and the United States at Manzanillo (Mexico) ... then Nicaragua will immediately enter into a mutual cease-fire."

Kerry said, however, that Ortega's offer of a cease-fire did not appear to come as a result of congressional rejection Tuesday of aid to the Contras, since that vote deals only with a one-time $14 million aid package for this fiscal year. Votes on the aid are scheduled in the House and the Senate this week.

"We have an opportunity today because people across the country have died for this opportunity. Eastern North Carolina has been left out sometimes, but we do have a part in decision-making. We have the opportunity to stand up and be counted," Rountree said.

In a greeting to fellow SCLC members, Greenville Mayor Pro-Tem Edward Carter said an issue facing blacks in Pitt County was that the merger of Pitt County and Greenville schools would result in a 50-50 ratio of black and white students but only one member of the Consolidated School Board was black. He said blacks were also "faced constantly with individuals such as the Jesse Helmses, Reagans and Jerry Falwells who are talking about the golden roads of heaven while we are out here standing in a mud hole."

Erma Carr, vice chairman of the Consolidated School Board and a retired educator, said education is important to blacks to make the young people "all that they can be. The key to real living is constant progress."

With Lowery absent, the Rev. T.G. Weatherford, a national SCLC staff member, and Jessup gave the keynote speeches at the rally.

"We need to see clearly now," Weatherford said, echoing the words of the 1970s song. "It might be dark outside now, but the darkest hour is just before the dawn."

Jessup said "We've got to stop talking about the past and think about us." He called on blacks to work together and help themselves to make a difference. "We've come a long way, but we've got a long ways to go."

He said blacks should be concerned that their children realize the battles and struggles for civil rights that their parents went through.

Mack, a black Republican, said there is "an insensitive man in the White House. He's not a racist, but he doesn't give a hoot about anybody unless you are elite and rich. The administration radiates an uncaring attitude."

Addressing other issues, Mack said he is not sure that Americans have the right to interfere with the Sandinista government in Nicaragua and that apartheid in South Africa is a serious problem, especially for American blacks because "they are our brethern and we may not be far removed from a kind of apartheid in the United States."

Mack also said young blacks should be encouraged to go to college, especially in math and science, "where the money and jobs are." He added that the Reagan administration's proposal to cut federal aid for college students was scaring many high school students away from considering college.

"These young people are anticipating what the president is going to do, but he hasn't done it yet. There is still help out there," Mack said.

Slaying Suspect Captured In Park

FORSYTH, Mo. (AP) — Authorities Saturday arrested a reputed member of a neo-Nazi group, ending an intense manhunt that began five days earlier with the slaying of a state trooper at a random traffic stop.

David Tate, 22, linked to the neo-Nazi group called The Order and charged with first-degree murder in the trooper's death, was arrested unarmed and without incident in a city park, said Capt. Lee Thompson of the Missouri Highway Patrol.

Hundreds of police using camoflauge, helicopters, dogs and road blocks had searched the rugged Ozark Mountains on both sides of the Arkansas-Missouri border since the trooper was killed and another wounded with a silencer-equipped automatic pistol.

"I'm glad it's over," Thompson said. "I'm ready to go home."

Tate had been spotted at the park by a local resident, said Thompson.

Investigators said Tate was wearing the same clothes authorities thought he was wearing at the time of the shooting. He also was wearing a blue jacket taken from an area clothesline.

His arrest was announced before nearly 100 residents and reporters at the Taney County courthouse. The residents clapped and cheered when the arrest was announced, and again when Taney County Circuit Judge James Justus said that if Tate was convicted, he faced the death penalty.

On Monday, Tate, of Athol, Idaho, was indicted by a federal grand jury in Seattle on racketeering and conspiracy charges along with 22 other associates of The Order. He was charged with dealing in stolen property and participating in the killing of a member of The Order who vanished in May.

"It's my understanding he was hiding under a bush," said highway patrol Sgt. Ernest McCutchen.

Forsyth is about 15 miles from Branson, where Trooper Jimmie Linegar was shot dead and Trooper Allen Hines wounded.

but no more than 110 percent of (the) amount submitted to determine the quota."

If a buyer fell below the 90 percent mark, he would pay a penalty of 75 percent of the cost of the shortfall, which would be bought by tobacco cooperatives. If the buyer exceeded the 100 percent limit, he would have to pay a 25 percent penalty on the excess.

As previously outlined, the federal price support for flue-cured tobacco would be cut $1.40 per pound for the 1985 and 1986 crops. The current price support level is $1.70, and under a plan being negotiated with the companies, the price support would be lowered administratively this year.

The plan also calls for keeping minimum tobacco reserves that buyers could fall back on in case of emergencies. The proposal pegs that minimum reserve at 100 million pounds or 15 percent of the quota, whichever is greater, and would make it the financial responsibility of the growers.

In The Area

Language Camp

A week-long day camp program to introduce children aged 9-13 years to the language and culture of the French- and Spanish-speaking lands will be held at East Carolina University June 24-28.

The camp is designed for children who have completed elementary grades four through seven and who have had little or no contact with a foreign language or culture.

Application deadline is May 1. Further information is available by telephoning the directors at 757-6031 or 757-6232.

Heritage Day

As part of America's 400th Celebration, A.G. Cox Grammar School in Winterville will celebrate Heritage Day Tuesday from 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Area craftsmen, including basket weavers, quilters, needleworkers and painters, will demonstrate and sell their crafts. There will be exhibits of candlemaking and soap making and displays of farm implements. Displays will be set up in the school gym and the town museum.

On Monday at 7:30 p.m., students will present a heritage program in the multipurpose room of the school. The program will include a skit on the history of Winterville and founder A.G. Cox, square dancing, folk lore recitations and folk songs. Open house in the school and museum will follow.

Revival Planned

The House of Worship Holiness Church will sponsor a holy ghost revival Monday through Friday at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker will be Pastor Ethel Graham and different choirs will render music each night.

Inducted

Anarita Weber of Greenville recently was inducted into the North Carolina State University chapter of Phi Kappa Phi, a national academic honor society. To qualify for membership, students must be among the top ranked in their class.

Funds Raised

The residents and staff of Greenville Villa Nursing Home raised $1,200 for the Arthritis Foundation during March. Assisting them were members of Omicron Pi Sorority, East Carolina University physicial therapy and recreation therapy students and the Pitt County Arthritis Support Group.

Media Day

North Carolina Media Day was held at Rose High School on April 17. The theme of the event was "A Nation of Readers."

Students prepared projects on the most popular fiction books read by teen-agers today. Highlight of the program was a recepiton sponsored by parent volunteers in appreciation and support of the library/media services.

Joins Staff

Ellen Rodman has joined the WITN-TV 7 sales staff as an account executive for the New Bern, Haelock and Morehead City areas. A Washington, N.C. native, she is a graduate of St. Mary's College in Raleigh and UNC-Chapel Hill.

Guests

Elder James Lewis and Antioch Holiness Church, Bell Arthur, will render services at Arthur Chapel Church Sunday at 6 p.m.

ESC Seminar

The Employment Security Commission of North Carolina will host an Employer Seminar on Tuesday, to be held at the Brody Medical Science Building from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

The seminar is designed to help North Carolna employers in the utilization of services for which they pay. In the two seminars already held, ESC experienced the largest employer turnout in its 50-year history.

Employers who wish to attend the seminar are asked to contact James Hannan, manager of the Greenville ESC office, at 756-2686.

WOW Meets

Unit 218, Woodmen of the World Insurance Society, received reports at a meeting last week on the organization's state convention held in Raleigh earlier this month.

An officer's workshop will be held in Kinston on May 4.

Name Change

The Migrant and Seasonal Farmworkers Association Inc. has changed its name to Telamon Corp. Established in 1965, the organization has operated human services programs primarily for migrant and other seasonal farm laborers.

Expansion of programs to other low-income groups was a factor in seeking a name change. The agency's office in Bethel, located at 507 Barnhill St., will continue to serve farmworkers through programs in job training, employment assistance, and supportive services.

Canoe Course

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer a course in basic canoeing for those wishing to learn basic canoeing skills and safety in the water.

The first class will meet on Tuesday from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Memorial Gym pool at East Carolina University and subsequent classes will meet on Tuesdays from 6-7:30 p.m. at River Park North on Mumford Road. The class will meet six times.

Canoes and other equipment will be available at a charge. The course is designed primarily for adults, but youngsters at least 13 years old may take the course.

Preregistration is required and class size is limited. For more information or registration, call Bill Twine at 752-4137, ext. 201.

ECU Alumni Awards Presented

The East Carolina University Alumni Association presented its 1985 Distinguished Service Awards Saturday to C. Ralph Kinsey Jr. of Charlotte, Virgil Clark of Greenville, and W. Riley Roberson III of Washington, N.C.

Presenting the awards was Alumni Association President Gerald Arnold. All three recipients are alumni who have served the university "by giving their time and talents in an exemplary manner to perpetuate the progress and welfare of our great university," Arnold said.

Kinsey has been chairman of the board of trustees since 1982. He also served on the board in 1972 and 1973 and was vice chairman from 1978 to 1982. He was not present to accept the award in person because he was representing the university at a meeting of the Association of Governors and Boards of Universities and Colleges in Miami.

Kinsey came to ECU on a football scholarship and graduated in 1964 with an A.B. in business administration. He received his law degree from UNC-Chapel Hill and is a partner in the firm of Underwood, Kinsey, Northey and Linn in Charlotte. He is a member of the 26th Judicial District, the North Carolina and American Bar Association, the North Carolina State Bar and the North Carolina Association of Defense Attorneys.

Roberson is a member of the Class of 1969 and also played football in 1965 and 1966. He currently is chairman of the development committee of the ECU Board of Trustees and president of the board of directors of the East Carolina University Foundation. Most recently he has worked to help initiate the new University Scholars Awards program.

Roberson has also been active in the Pirate Club, serving on the executive board from 1981 through 1984. He is vice president of sales at N.C. Dr. Pepper Bottling Co. and also vice president of WITN-Radio and vice president and secretary of Smallwood Inc., a real estate and development company.

Clark was born and reared in Greenville and is a 1950 graduate of ECU. As a member of the first ROTC class at what was then East Carolina Teachers College (ECTC), Clark went on to a military career in the United States Air Force. He retired in 1969 and is now director of marketing at Fresh Way Foods in Greenville.

Active in student activities, from drama to cheerleading, Clark renewed his involvement with ECU upon returning to Greenville. He is now president of the ECTC Club, a group of alumni. Under Clark's leadership, an ECTC Club scholarship program was initiated in 1982.

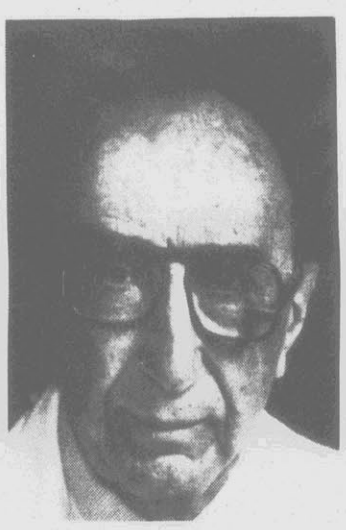
DeBakey To Speak Here In May

Heart surgeon Dr. Michael E. DeBakey will be the principal speaker at the May 3 convocation in honor of the Class of 1985 at the East Carolina University School of Medicine.

DeBakey's career at the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston has earned him an international reputation as a surgeon, innovator, teacher and medical statesman. He is chancellor of the school, chairman of its department of surgery and director of the National Cardiovascular Research and Training Center in Houston.

The convocation honors the school of medicine's fifth and largest graduating class, numbering 52 students. The ceremony will begin at 3 p.m. in the auditorium of the Brody Medical Sciences Building on the medical school campus.

Other convocation speakers will include C. Ralph Kinsey of Charlotte, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees and Dr. William E. Laupus, university vice chancellor and dean of the School of Medicine.



DR. MICHAEL E. DEBAKEY

DeBakey, while still a medical student, devised a pump which years later became an essential component of the heart-lung machine that made open-heart surgery possible. Since then he has developed more than 50 surgical instruments.

DeBakey is best known for his innovations in the treatment of cardiovascular diseases. In 1964 he and his associates performed the first successful coronary artery bypass using a vein from the leg, and in 1968 he led a team of surgeons in a historic multiple transplantation procedure in which the heart, kidneys and one lung of a donor were transplanted in four recipients.

A pioneer in the development of an artificial heart, DeBakey was the first person to use a heart pump successfully in a patient. He is also credited with having established the field of surgery for strokes.

Sunday Opinion

Council Ignored Residents' Wishes On Zoning Proposal

We will assume that the Greenville City Council had reasons it felt were adequate to rezone a tract on Hooker Road from low density residential to high density residential, which will allow for multifamily construction.

It cannot escape us, however, that the council in taking its action overrode its Planning and Zoning Commission and the city's long-range plan, ignoring the strong objections of an established neighborhood of substantial single-family homes. The people who have invested in those Fairlane Subdivision homes did so with the knowledge that the property in question was zoned for development similar to their own area. Thus, these homeowners have seen the rules changed in mid-game after they have sunk a considerable part of their savings and their lives into a neighborhood which is a credit to the community.

Council members say they agonized over this decision. After they agonized, however, three of five council members present that night came down on the side of the developer, as opposed to the interests of these homeowners who have already established their residences there.

We would think that concerned Greenville citizens in the future will want to watch council actions on zoning carefully. This was a radical use of council powers to change zoning in an established neighborhood. Changing of zoning against the Planning and Zoning Commission's recommendations should be a rare occurance and then only if there is an overriding question of protecting the public interest. Did the council apply that philosophy in this case? Perhaps its future actions will answer that.

Water Supplies Need Protection

Safeguarding North Carolina's groundwater supplies is one aspect of protecting the environment that calls for early attention. Movement in that direction is taking shape with introduction of legislation requiring permits and standards for new underground tanks holding 1,100 gallons or more.

Importance of the measure cannot be overstated. About 60 percent of the state's residential drinking water comes from underground. There may be as many as a million underground tanks in the state, with unknown numbers of them suspected to be leaking. The sites of many tanks are unknown or abandoned over the years.

The legislation includes the giving of regulatory powers to the Environmental Management Commission. Provisions for a system of permits and standards are important because they are a first step toward control and "watchdogging" a practice too long ignored.

The tanks are not only for gasoline and fuels, but many represent storage facilities for farm and industrial chemicals. For some, cleaning up surface spills of hazardous wastes is child's play compared to the difficulty of assuring the purity of our groundwater.

We're grateful to Rep. Frank Sizemore of Guilford for his efforts in this field. We're surprised that many other lawmakers who must be aware of the problem have not picked up the ball and run with it, long ago.

Sunday Morning Notes

The Do Nothing Jaycees are at it again. Lest they be confused with the regular Jaycees, young men between the ages of 21 and 36 who do a lot, let us point out that the do nothing version are aged out Jaycees.

When Jaycees reach the age of 36 they are known as "exhausted roosters" and they are aged out of the club. From that point on they simply disappear into the clouds of old age.

In Pitt County, however, there is a group of exhausted roosters or "otherwise over-the-hill Jaycees," as their literature says, who still want to eat a meal together now and then. And that is all they do. There is no president, no functions, definitely no projects. Somehow a mailing gets out and it says it comes from "The non-existant entertainment committee of the DO NOTHING JAYCEES — EXHAUSTED."

They are planning a spring barbecue chicken and seafood pig-out in Falkland on April 26. No one knows who does the planning, since the entire bunch is pretty burned out. Nevertheless, it comes off and everybody congratulates everyone else on not participating in any kind of civic project for another year. For these guys who cut their teeth on several Jaycee projects per year, that is quite an accomplishment.

There's plenty to do in the area this weekend. The Arts Festival offers various activities and the Shad Festival is under way at Grifton. On campus one could attend the Purple-Gold intrasquad football game Saturday or the famous Pirate Pig Skin Party which preceded it.

Or if you graduated from the school when it was ECTC there were activities for you. Of course you have to go back to 1950 to have graduated from East Carolina Teachers College. The name was changed in 1951 and those graduates were the first from the new institution, although their diplomas didn't say so. Perhaps they can claim either name.

At any rate that name held until the school grew to the point where the name East Carolina University was applied to it, and thus we know it today.

There was an earlier name, however. The school was established as East Carolina Teachers Training School to train teachers for the state. It is difficult to get the ECTTS group together for a reunion after all these years, but the ECTC group obviously still maintains strong ties with the school and its past. More power to them.

If all the planned activities don't attract you the weatherman is promising a summer-like day. What better time for a stroll in the Town Common or fishing off the river bank. If summer isn't officially here at least we can begin practicing for it.

Reagan Takes It On Chin

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan, who always seems to be able to make things go his way, has had a perfectly awful series of gaffes, miscues and slip-ups in the last week that rekindle memories of Jimmy Carter's bad luck and Jerry Ford's bad balance.

Outstripping all the others, of course, has been a chain reaction since the announcement that the president would lay a wreath at a German military cemetery next month.

Each of Reagan's repeated attempts at an explanation succeeded in digging him into deeper trouble with incredulous leaders of American Jewish groups and veterans' organizations that have strongly supported the president in the past.

After Reagan defended his plan to visit the Bitburg cemetery by saying the young soldiers buried there were victims of Nazism "just as surely as the victims in the concentration camps," an American rabbi called the president's suggestion "morally unconscionable and politically outrageous."

And Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel, on the eve of a scheduled visit to the White House to accept a Congressional Gold Medal from Reagan, pleaded with Secretary of State George P. Shultz to "tell those who need to know that our pain is genuine, our outrage is deep and our perplexity is infinite."

Michael K. Deaver, Reagan's event planner and image polisher who has taken much of the heat for the Bitburg fiasco, had barely recovered himself from the embarrassing disclosure that he had used his diplomatic status on an official itinerary-mapping trip to Europe to buy himself a luxury German car at an extraordinary discount.

But the president's smiling visage was being buffeted elsewhere as he struggled to keep up with an unusually heavy schedule that combined an all-out fight for aid to Nicaraguan rebels with a tough battle for budget cuts and a steady stream of visits from foreign leaders.

On Monday, as he kicked off his rhetorical drive to discredit Nicaragua's leftist government, Reagan was photographed kissing a lovely little girl presented to him as a refugee from Nicaraguan tyranny.

She turned out to be the U.S.-born 8-year-old daughter of a family that has lived in the United States for 15 years, long before the Sandinistas gained power in Managua. Both her parents are in international banking.

Drawing whatever support he could for his campaign, however, Reagan used a visit by Colombia's President Belisario Betancur to propose a cease-fire and negotiations between the Nicaraguan government and U.S.-backed rebels, coupled with a demand for $14 million in aid to the rebels. The money would be for non-lethal supplies if the talks went forward, weapons if they didn't.

Betancur spoke warmly of Reagan's peace plan, but days later, back in his own country, the South American leader publicly rejected any proposal for outside military aid to the rebels.

Undeterred, Reagan claimed on Wednesday to have received a verbal message from Pope John Paul II supporting "all of our activities in Central America."

Later, a statement by the Apostolic Nunciature, the Vatican's embassy in Washington, stressed that the pope gave no endorsement to "any concrete plan dealing, in particular, with military aspects," such as those proposed by Reagan.

The president picked the time for the showdown over the rebel aid plan by slipping a report to Congress that required House and Senate votes on the issue within 15 days. It was a tactic similar to the one he has used effectively to win votes on the MX missile program at the start of a new round of U.S.-Soviet arms talks in Geneva.

But this time, with the administration in a much weaker starting position, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., an ardent opponent of aid to the Contras, pressed for an almost simultaneous vote in the two chambers as quickly as possible. Reagan, calling that "immoral," abandoned his insistence upon giving the Contras military aid if peace talks failed and accepted a proposal that would effectively limit the assistance to non-lethal supplies.

Lines Of Argument

WASHINGTON — Two articles on racial discrimination come to hand. One is a passionate restatement of black grievances by Juan Williams, a staff writer for The Washington Post. The other is a brief essay by Sidney Hook of New York University, one of the nation's most respected philosophers. They could not be farther apart.

Yet they come oddly together on one conclusion: Both writers deplore the consequences of racism in the United States in 1985.

Williams disdains what other observers regard as gains. "While life is better than 20 years ago, you still are treated, seen and identified on the basis of your color." To assume that there have been significant gains is to be guilty of a naivete that "baffles and alienates blacks." Whites simply do not comprehend what blacks are complaining about. "Whites don't seem to care that blacks are saying America today is just as alienating and infuriating to them as it was 20 years ago."

Williams cites figures that have become depressingly familiar. The median income of black families is $8,000 less than the median for whites. White male unemployment is 6.6 percent; black male unemployment is 13.7 percent. He agrees that a black underclass drags down blacks as a group, but he argues that responsibility for this lies in the nation's ineradicable racism. Culturally poor parents and grandparents contribute to a sick environment that hampers success.

In Williams' view, "there is an advantage to being white, a disadvantage to being black." Professor Hook makes the point that in today's climate of compelled affirmative action, it often is the other way around. Writing in New perspective, a magazine of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, he addresses "the manifest injustices committed against white males who by no stretch of the imagination can be regarded as responsible for present or past practices of invidious discrimination."

Hook has run out of patience with the rationalization that today's racism against whites may be morally and legally justified by yesterday's racism against blacks. He examines the contention that despite all the remedial programs, the encouragement, the enlightened changes in law and policy in recent years, blacks continue to suffer directly or indirectly from the cumulative effects of previous discrimination against their forebears. The argument is that therefore present-day society should make amends "even if by so doing it does less than justice to some white males."

"This line of argument," Hook says' "seems to me very farfetched and invalid."

In years past, he notes, Jews, Irish, Mormons, Chinese and Japanese were subjected to invidious discrimination. None of these groups has asked for preferential treatment. In any event, if some amorphous "community" were responsible for past injustices, "why should the burden of compensating such injustices now fall upon young white males alone?"

"To allege that the white male who may himself be from a poor and underprivileged family has necessarily profited from the deprivations and psychic damage of present-day descendants of the enslaved is a claim that borders on fantasy. Wisdom suggests that instead of correcting the injustices of yesterday by creating the new injustices of today, it is better to recognize a statute of limitations on present-day accountability for man's inhumanity to man in the past."

My bystander's thought is that both the young reporter and the old philosopher should be listened to. Their common bond is resentment against racial injustice. In his frustration and anger, Williams has eyes only for the wrongs that are suffered by blacks. Hook's concern is that in attempting to undo long-past wrongs, we create new and possibly greater wrongs.

The situation drifts. Racial quotas and reverse discrimination are wrong for all the reasons Professor Hook sets forth. But the alienation that Williams laments is real. It must not be benignly neglected.

The infinite wisdom of the Greenville City Council never ceases to amaze me in their decisions governing this city. I make reference to their decision to disregard the recommendation as set forth by the Planning and Zoning Board in a recent Council meeting concerning the rezoning of 7.9 acres in what remains of the quiet Bradshaw Farm. I have often wondered if each member really thinks of the total ramifications his/her vote will have on the welfare of the city, its citizens and values before they cast their vote. The Planning and Zoning Board recommended to the Council that the property in question be retained as low density housing. This was due to the fact that Mrs. Bradshaw has repeatedly changed development plans for this area and has repeatedly asked for zoning changes. The board finally drew the line on changes and denied the request.

Stuart Shinn is a contractor so his vote does not surprise me ... and Judy Greene's voting record is very dependable — "Yes" for anything, but I am most surprised at Louis Clark because he is a real estate appraiser. He should be very much aware of the impact on residential sales when directly abutted to high density rental housing. Would you buy a house for your family that bordered or closely bordered a rental multifamily area? I doubt you would for many reasons and I feel sure Mr. Clark would not either.

I invite any of your readers to ride down St. Andrews Drive just past the Beef Barn and see first hand the effect of having R-6 abutting an R-15 established neighborhood. I feel sure you will understand the feelings of these families in fighting for their homes. And yet the "City Fathers" don't understand why families are abandoning the city for developments outside of town. I don't believe that they stop to think that in 10-15 years this very area and many just like it around town, will be one which the city will have to revitalize with another "project" as they're doing today.

Well, we tried to tell them, but they wouldn't listen to us. Good luck to the next neighborhood that tries.

The typical Girl Scout leader used to be thought of as a mother of small children and a full-time homemaker. But not in 1985! Today's Girl Scout leader can be a working mother or a senior citizen, a single career woman or an "empty nester" whose children are grown. She, or he, can hold a Ph.D. in economics, be a full-time student or work at any occupation.

What all these wmen and men must be, however, is energetic, intelligent and supportive of the diverse group of girls who make up today's typical Girl Scout troop, including kindergarten-aged Daisy Girl Scouts, members of Girl Scouting's newest age level.

To show their appreciation for all the love, generosity, skill and energy of local Girl Scouts of Pitt County will join with sister Girl Scouts in thousands of communities across the U.S.A. on April 22 to celebrate the fourth annual observance of Girl Scout Leaders' Day.

Greenville Area Girl Scouts are planning all kinds of happy events to honor their leaders on this special day. They hope the whole community will join them in this day-long salute.

We're happy to oblige and to wish Girl Scout leaders, here in Pitt County and across the nation, a wonderful time on their day! We urge all of you to observe this special day, too. Tomorrow extend a warm hello and hearty congratulations to the Girl Scout leaders you know.

They deserve it!

I feel that the people of North Carolina wuld be interested in this side light on your United States Senator John East.

Recently my granddaughter served as a U.S. Senate page. While she served in the Senate she stayed at our home and I drove her to and from work each day. It was fascinating hearing the views of a teen-ager on the actions of the Senate. Some of the more popular senators were dismissed as "Mr. Snap-His Fingers" or other less flattering nicknames.

On the last night before my granddaughter left for home (in Michigan) I asked her who the pages thought was the best senator. Without hesitation she replied, "Senator East." When I asked her why, she said that Senator East dealt with the pages as grown-ups; he would explain procedures and practices of the Senate so they could understand technical workings of our highest legislative body.

I think all of North Carolina can take pride in having a senator who would take the time and show the interest in these young people that Senator East has.

April 30, 1985, marks the 50th anniversary of the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) and its predecessor agencies. FmHA is the credit agency for agriculture and rural development in the United States Department of Agriculture. Its history of financial and technical assistance, as lender of last resort in rural America, goes back to the establishment of the Resettlement Administration by Act of Congress Apr. 30, 1935.

When it began, the agency's function was to make loans and grants to Depression-stricken families and help them regain self-sufficiency in making their livings on family farms.

Throughout its half-century of operation, FmHA has been concerned primarily with credit and counseling services that have supplemented resources of the private sector for building stronger family farms. In 1984, farm credit accounted for about one-half of all resources administered by FmHA.

In addition, during the last two decades, Congress has used FmHA's local offices to deliver other programs of benefit to families and communities throughout the rural population. Programs administered by the FmHA have helped to bring rural housing, water and sewer systems, and other essential community facilities up to standard for rural people and have generated more development of job and economy boosting business and industry in the state.

In Pitt County, I am acting county supervisor and our staff includes Clinton C. Griffin, Harry J. Jarvis, Jimmy F. Smith, James O. Cannon, Steve C. Riddick, Thomas N. Dotson, Corinne C. Whitehurst, Suzanne S. Morris, Nita D. Rasberry, M. Rebecca Thomson, Penny S. Skinner and Barbara L. Owens. The office is located at 115 Eastbrook Drive, Greenville.

The latest reports revealed that in Pitt County FmHA provided $7,087,000 in credit to rural residents and community during fiscal year 1984, and has an outstanding loan balance of $100,444,000.

FmHA program have touched the lives and improved living conditions of most residents of this county during the past 50 years. With expanded programs and servicing authorities available, the FmHA staff looks forward to continuing to provide service to Pitt County residents.

Partisan Politics At Play

Gov. Jim Martin has gotten a lot of mileage this year out of the "partisan" issue. He's portrayed himself as the bipartisan wonder mensch interested only in the good of the people and he's branded the Democratic Legislature as a mob of petty, partisan obstructionists.

Recently, the Democrats struck. Tired of local editorials which generally sided with Martin, the Democrats presented a rather convincing argument that the Partisan Politician of the Year is Jim Martin.

The Democrats argue that Martin does not want to win passage of his tax cuts or a constitutional amendment giving him the veto. Instead, he wants the issues voted down so he can use them in the 1986 campaign to elect more Republican legislators. To make this case, the Democrats point to Martin's remarks about building the Republican Party and his very weak record in lobbying the Legislature.

Of more than a dozen Democratic legislators interviewed for this column, only two said they'd been given a chance to discuss the issues with Martin since he became governor. Both were members of the House leadership which meets wth Martin every Wednesday morning.

Of the other 10 or so legislators, only one had even been called on by Martin's legislative lobbyists, Beverly Lake and Bernie Harrell.

"I consider myself a good friend of Bev's and yet he has not been by to see me once," said Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake. Rep. John Church, D-Vance, who also considers himself a friend of Lake's, said the same thing. Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, is chairman of the Senate Education Committee and a member of the Finance Committee through which the tax cuts will have to travel. Asked if he'd heard from Martin or Lake, he said, "No, not a thing."

Democratic legislators said they've heard from Martin only through the press and the two speeches he's given to the Legislature.

Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, expressed his skepticism about Martin's intentions in the form of a question. "If you were governor and you really wanted the veto power, would you take on (House Speaker) Liston Ramsey?" The obvious answer is no. Ramsey's help would be needed. But Martin aides have been talking lately about a 1986 campaign where Ramsey is used as a whipping boy. Staton continues: If Martin doesn't really want the veto, "then he wants something else ... he wants to elect more Republican members of the General Assembly."

Lake disputes the Democrats' contentions. He says he's talking to many of them. Martin denied that he is just posturing and repeated that he wants the tax package to pass. But in the same press conference, Martin proved some of what the Democrats are saying. He again threatened, albeit with a smile, to use the tax cut issue in 1986 and he conceded that legislative lobbying is not his top priority.

Asked about scheduling, Martin said time is sketched out first for public appearances around the state. Whatever time is left over is used to meet with legislators and others needing to see him.

How can Martin claim to be working with the Legislature when legislators can't get to see him and when his lobbyist doesn't call on them, Democrats ask.

Martin says it is sometimes necessary to build public support for an agenda as a way of goading the Legislature to act. But the Democrats appear to have hit a raw nerve with Martin when they argue that he's not really interested in trying to work with them. They say he simply started the 1986 campaign in the winter of 1985.

Deaver Bungles The Trip

WASHINGTON — Michael K. Deaver, much-praised master advance man of the White House, has bungled his sunset performance as choreographer for President Reagan's Bonn summit, antagonizing both France and West Germany just as the Western Alliance comes under a new Soviet propaganda attack.

It is a front-page sensation that Reagan angered American veterans and Jewish organizations by scheduling a visit to the German military cemetery in Bitburg, but cancellation would infuriate the Germans. Unknown till now is the reason for Francois Mitterrand's decision not to hear Reagan's speech to the European Parliament in Strasbourg: Deaver's advance plans for Reagan's post-summit visit in France were made behind the French president's back.

Bungling the delicate art of advancemanship was not expected on Deaver's last mission as a senior White House staffer. His staging of the president's travels helped gain him the international fame he is about to cash in on as a Washington public relations man. But far beyond Deaver's frayed reputation are the serious problems for Reagan created by questionable advance work.

In France, Mitterand is personally insulted. In Germany, says one prominent insider, the Bonn summit starts "under a bad star." A poisoned European atmosphere for Reagan could not come at a worse time. Shrewd Mikhail Gorbachev's "peace offensive" aims at dividing the Americans from their European allies.

The Elysee Palace suggested to the White House last fall that if Reagan could extend his European visit after Bonn, Mitterrand would do whatever he was asked to welcome him to Paris. Bordeaux was proposed as another possible place with suitable history and imagery for a presidential stop. There was no answer from Washington.

A year ago when Deaver overturned all French plans for the president's visit to the Normandy beaches without consulting the Elysee, Mitterrand issued orders to "give (Deaver) whatever he wants." Deaver proceeded to astound the French by selecting sites on the Normandy cliffs based less on World War II history than on camera angles, location of the sun and similar stagecraft. The French government gave full cooperation.

That cooperation will not be repeated this year, thanks to Deaver's methods. After hearing proposals from Mitterrand's aides for a Paris or Bordeaux visit, Deaver secretly dispatched a pre-advance team to Strasbourg in January to prepare for his own arrival in late February to put final touches on every phase of the president's trip. That trip included Strasbourg.

When he arrived there, Deaver nailed down plans for the president's speech to the European Parliament with Pierre Pflimlin, president of the Parliament. Deaver seemed unaware that Pflimlin, a center-right politician who is mayor of Strasbourg and a former French premier, is a longtime political foe of socialist Mitterrand.

Although Pflimlin agreed that Mitterrand should attend a luncheon for Reagan prior to the speech, he said the French president could not make a toast to Reagan. Deaver went along. All this was signed on the dotted line before the Elysee was even aware that the president's advance man was in Strasbourg.

Indeed, Mitterrand did not learn about the Strasbourg visit until French reporters told him about it. Publicly, he was coolly polite; inwardly, he seethed. Reversing last year's decision to "give Deaver whatever he wants," Mitterrand quietly informed the White House that he could not accept the invitation to the president's pre-luncheon speech.

Administration insiders put the best face on the bungled advance work at a time when the U.S. needs good relations with the French leader. They have told us what the White House is telling the French: "We are giving Mitterrand 45 minutes of private time (at Bonn)" with Reagan.

Considering French sensitivities to diplomatic affront, Deaver's secret planning sessions in Strasbourg with a political opponent of Mitterrand are inexplicable. More easily explained, through not more susceptible to cure, was the German blunder.

Strongly backed by Reagan, Deaver wanted a new charter to open for the Germans 40 years after World War II by sending the president to a cemetery for German dead of both world wars. Although news of the visit was secret until recently, Deaver had privately advanced the stop in Bitburg during his Feb. 19-to-27 trip (which included what became his notorious purchase of a discounted BMW).

Cancellation of the visit now would start anti-Reagan currents running through West Germany, threatening serious damage to U.S.-West German relations. That is an unlikely outcome for the final curtain call of consummate political producer Mike Deaver. It could cast a long shadow over U.S. interests in western Europe.

TV Turns To Yuppies

WASHINGTON — Hollywood thrives on cliche, and television producers will demonstrate how much next fall. They're planning to serve American tube freaks a feast of programs based on one of the most overpublicized role models of our time: the young urban professional.

According to Beth Ryan, a researcher at the consulting firm of Foote, Cone and Belding who has recently written a study on "Prime-Time Network Program Development," half of the networks' new scripts will, in some way, rotate around the trials and tribulations of the upscale tip of the baby boom generation.

No doubt there is a bittersweet story to be told about Yuppies and their struggles with success. But our guess is that an even bigger segment of younger America is growing sick and tired of this self-indulgent caste.

If the Depression shaped one generation's outlook on life, post-war prosperity shaped another. The latter group came of age in the '60s. As the Pepsi kids watched their dads hustle off to boring jobs, the idea that parents would sacrifice personal pleasure for money struck them as wacko. Sacrifice seems senseless.

Ultimately, a series of shocks — the war in Indochina, Watergate and a roller-coaster economy — altered this generation's perspective. Its identity changed, too. The icons of old — you can pick about anyone who played at Woodstock — gave way to new spiritual leaders. Take, for example, the established business school graduate on Wall Street or the Washington lawyer. Once derided, the establishment was held in high esteem; money and materialism were suddenly a healthy vice; except for certain mores, the '60s were out.

But most baby-boomers aren't Yuppies. They don't drive BMWs, nor do they belong to chic health clubs. They are not overly self-indulgent, greedy or cocky. Rather, they run scared.

Between 1970 and 1983, the 25-to-34-year-old age group increased in size from 12 to 17 percent of the population. Just as the boom generation had squeezed school services, it overwhelmed an economy that, for the most part, was doing a respectable job of creating employment. The result has been less — not more — affluence for most young adults. In 1960, for example, a worker 25 to 34 years old earned 12 percent less, on the average, than his middle-aged counterpart; by last year, the difference had doubled.

Not surprizingly, more young adults and couples are living with parents than at any time in recent memory. Part-time jobs are becoming more rule than exception.

Unfortunately, Hollywood and New York, which view the world through rose-colored glasses, would rather overlook these real-life struggles.

Given America's interest in upward mobility — an assumed birthright in this country — it's no shock that the networks, with advertisers prodding, are riveted to a group with plenty of disposable income.

Spring Brings Tourists To The Capitol

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It must be spring. I know because the buses are lined up, disgorging tourists at the Capitol.

But far too many arrive with little grounding in what they're seeing and with little apparent respect for the two centuries of representative democracy the domed building represents.

If so far this sounds like a complaint about some of Washington's tourists, to some extent it is.

One of my older and wiser colleagues — after I fuss about the occasional crush in the halls and suggest putting a replica of the town in the countryside for tourists and protesters — reminds me the Capitol belongs to the people.

He's right, of course.

Many visitors are reasonably dressed, knowledgable and polite. But I just can't help but wonder why some come so ignorant of the basics of government, and in costumes suited more for the stage than the street.

"Where's Congress," asked a couple after visiting both the House and Senate, the two chambers that collectively are the Congress of the United States.

And then there was the man who stood outside the Capitol and proudly informed his wife and children, "There's the White House."

Far too often visitors come to the building looking as if they were on a trip to an amusement park, headed perhaps for the water slide.

Washington's weather is not the best — hot and humid most of the summer — but some might say hair curlers, fluorescent jogging shorts and a tank-top T-shirt with a beer logo (I've seen various combinations) are not proper dress for watching from a gallery as the Senate or House debate legislation that shapes our lives.

Some also might say smacking gum and wearing black high-top sneakers, with gym shorts over long johns, a denim coat festooned with rock-band medals, a beret and a "Ghostbusters" T-shirt (honest, folks, I saw this combination) are a bit too much.

Now that I've vented my frustrations about the few, let me offer a few tips to make it easier for you, the well-dressed and well-mannered visitor, to get around in the Capitol:

— The House of Representatives — with 435 voting members — is on the left as you face the building from the East Front. The Senate — with 100 members, two from each state — is on your right. If you approach from the Mall side (West Front), it's the other way around. The Rotunda is on the second floor, at the top of the East Front stairs.

— The parking spaces are for members, staff and press. Use the subway or take a cab. It's far easier that way. Wear comfortable shoes. Your feet will thank you for it.

— The flag over the center of the building flys all the time. The ones over either chamber fly only when that chamber is in session.

— Those with ID cards on chains or clips work on Capitol Hill. The Capitol, after all, also is an office building. The tags denote whether the bearer is a staffer, lobbyist or reporter and let them move through areas not open to the public. Remember, when they try to get through a clump of visitors in a clogged hall, they're just trying to do their job.

— From the Senate side of the Capitol, in the basement, three separate trolly lines run, one each to the Russell, Dirkson and Hart buildings. Senators get first crack at the seats.

— From the southeast basement of the House wing, a tunnel goes to the Cannon and Longworth buildings. From the sub-basement on the southwest end, a subway runs to the Rayburn building. If you get lost in Rayburn, don't worry. Even congressmen get lost in Rayburn.

— Virtually everone comes with a camera and stands in the middle of a parking lot to get a picture of the Capitol. You can get the same pictures, only probably better than most amatuer photographers can take them, from the Capitol Historical Society stand inside under the East Front steps.

— Enjoy the Capitol and Washington's other attractions. They're yours. But please remember, they're ours, too.

ECU Alumni Re-Elect Arnold President

S. Gerald Arnold Jr. of Lillington, a judge on the North Carolina Court of Appeals and a 1963 graduate of East Carolina University, was elected president of the ECU Alumni Association for a second one-year term during Alumni Day activities Saturday.

Other officers also re-elected to one-year terms were James A. Hicks of Greensboro, vice president; Baxter Ridenhour of Durham, secretary, and Nathan R. Weavil of Salisbury, treasurer.

During the alumni weekend classes from 1911 through 1934 were honored as senior alumni. Special activities were held Friday evening in honor of the golden anniversary class and senior alumni. Chancellor and Mrs. John M. Howell hosted a reception at their home prior to a reunion dinner in Mendenhall Student Center. On Saturday a social hour, dinner and dance were held for the ECTC years alumni and the silver anniversary class (1960).

Activities for Alumni Day included an open house and coffee hour at the Taylor/Slaughter Alumni Center, bus tours of the campus, the annual alumni luncheon, professional society meetings, and Pirate Club activities in the afternoon. Howell was the featured speaker for the Alumni Day luncheon.

Arnold presided at the luncheon and the business meeting, at which the Alumni Association re-elected Gene T. Aman of Raleigh to the board and named E. Lee Barham Jr. of Raleigh and Virgil S. Clark of Greenville as new directors.

A record budget which would provide for over $211,000 in funds for university programs of excellence was adopted during the annual meeting of the board of directors. A special feature of the annual luncheon was the presentation of the Alumni Distinguished Service Awards for outstanding and dedicated service to the University and/or the Alumni Association.

Howell, speaking at the alumni luncheon, said the new, privately funded University Scholars Awards program "has exceeded our dreams." The program, which provides full tuition and expenses scholarships renewable for four years to young scholars with leadership potential, has become "a part of the proud history and heritage of ECU," Howell said.

The first seven University Scholars awards were presented at a scholarship weekend banquet recently.

Howell reported that total giving to the ECU Foundation, the Medical School Foundation and the Pirate Club rose from $2.7 million to $4.2 million last year. Of this, he said $1.7 million was for academics, $1.6 million to medicine and $1 million to athletics. He said 52 new members joined the Chancellor's Society with gifts of $10,000 or more.

Legal Defense Fund Fights Vote Allegations In South

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund charged in federal court last week that the Justice Department is using selective criminal prosecution to intimidate elderly blacks in the South from voting.

The assistant attorney general for civil rights, William Bradford Reynolds, played a key role in bringing about the charges, the NAACP brief filed in U.S. District Court alleged.

But a Justice Department spokesman said Reynolds had "absolutely nothing to do with" the prosecutions, which he said were routine.

Criminal charges have been filed against three blacks, one of them a former aide to Martin Luther King Jr., for fraudulently altering absentee ballots in a rural Alabama county. The charges arise out of actions by the three in working with elderly blacks to fill out absentee ballots.

Essentially, the charge is that the three took advantage of elderly black voters and altered ballots to promote their own candidates for public office in the county.

Albert Turner, who was the Alabama state director of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which King led, and his wife Evelyn Turner and Spencer Hogue Jr. were indicted by a federal grand jury in Mobile, Ala., Jan. 25 and charged with altering ballots, mail fraud and voting more than once.

Albert Turner and Hogue may face 115 years in prison and a $40,000 fine and Evelyn Turner 35 years in prison and a $30,000 fine if convicted.

Turner is president of the Perry County Civic League, which the brief said was "almost single-handedly responsible for the dramatic increase in the number of blacks who registered to vote in Perry County since 1965."

The brief asked the federal court in Mobile to dismiss charges against Hogue, who is being represented by the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund. Lawyers for the other defendants also have asked that charges be dropped before the start of the trial June 17.

When Perry County District Attorney Roy Johnson was unable to convince a black-majority Perry County grand jury to indict the three, he wrote Reynolds at the Justice Department for help, the brief said.

ECU Will Host Geologic Meeting On Phosphorites

Scientists from over 40 nations will meet at East Carolina University early next month for an international geologic field workshop and symposium on phosphorites, a mineral resource vital to the solution of world hunger.

A principal objective of the ongoing project, the International Geological Correlation Program (IGCP) Project 156-Phosphorites, is to focus research efforts of world scientists on major deposits of the mineral and their strategic distribution. Phosphorites are a key ingredient in chemical fertilizers necessary for crop production on a scale sufficient to feed the expanding populations of many countries, especially in Africa, parts of Asia and in Central and South America.

Dr. Stanley R. Riggs of East Carolina University and William Burnett of Florida State University are co-directors of the program. With the change of directors came a new emphasis shifting the prime geographic areas of research and education to the Caribbean Basin, Central and South America and Africa.

Last year, a Caribbean Basin and Central American Phosphate Short Course at ECU set the stage for the larger, more elaborate program which begins here May 5. A preliminary phosphate short course sponsored by the IGCP project, the U.S. Geological Survey and ECU, will begin April 29 and continue though May 4.

In addition to scientific seminars on the ECU campus, the participating scientists will make field trips to the coastal North Carolina phosphate fields near Aurora, and along Lee and South Creeks in Beaufort County. On May 8-9, the scientists will go in groups aboard the UNC-Duke University Consortium research vessel Cape Hatteras from Southport, to conduct a continental shelf exploration in Onslow Bay.

Wartime Memories Color Reagan Trip

By NORMAN D. SANDLER

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan heads to Europe next week to mark 40 years of postwar peace and allied solidarity, only to find his message tinged by the bitter wartime memories he had hoped to not rekindle.

Through bad political judgment, as some aides suggest, or poor advice from his chief image-shaper, as others contend, Reagan has inflamed passions, embarrassed his German hosts and enmeshed his trip in controversy.

During six days in West Germany, the president will meet with leaders of the seven major industrialized democracies, discuss trade, finance and East-West relations, address German students and worship with American troops.

But the most indelible images are likely to be those of Reagan paying tribute to German soldiers buried under gravestones bearing the symbol of Hitler's elite Waffen SS at a military cemetery at Bitburg and memorializing victims of the Nazi Holocaust at the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp.

Reagan's main objective in the trip starting April 30 — to hail the emergence of a strong Western alliance — has been undermined by an acknowledged public relations disaster committed by a White House known for its mastery of imagery.

Reagan's trip has become colored by censures from Jewish groups and American war veterans outraged over his visit to the military cemetery.

The White House could not seem to repair the damage. Even as the trip to the concentration camp was added to the president's itinerary to calm some of the protests, a new burst of controversy was stirred by the president's remarks Thursday that the young German soldiers buried at Bitburg "are victims of Nazism, just as surely as the victims in the concentration camps."

At the least, the trip has wrought embarrassment; at worst, a reopening of emotional wounds.

The controversy over the cemetery trip came in a week that brought another big setback — Reagan faced the prospect that his aid plan for the Nicaraguan rebels would be defeated by Congress — and embarassment over his honoring of a young "Nicaraguan refugee" who turned out to be the daughter of Nicaraguan Americans.

Reagan is known to be deeply troubled by the cemetery disaster. Some aides, however, knew from the outset they would trudge through political minefields in planning a trip coinciding with the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe.

Some recognized four weeks ago that the cemetery visit — approved by Reagan as a favor to West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl — would trigger a blizzard of negative public reaction.

Last year, on the 40th anniversary of D-Day, Reagan stood on the beach at Normandy with the leaders of France, the Netherlands, Norway, Belgium, Luxembourg and Canada to commemorate the Allied invasion.

Kohl was excluded from those ceremonies. As a result, the 1985 Bonn Summit — and the V-E Day anniversary days later — loomed as a logical time to demonstrate reconciliation in Europe.

Feel free to call the Finance Director of the City of Greenville if you have any questions about the City's 1984-85 Budget.

World Jewish Leaders Want Trip Canceled

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — World Jewish Congress leaders on Saturday assailed President Reagan's decision to visit a German military cemetery and said they would ask Chancellor Helmut Kohl to urge Reagan to cancel the visit.

"We hope to see Kohl on Sunday. We shall appeal to him to urge Reagan to drop the Bitburg visit," said Israel Singer, secretary-general of the World Jewish Congress.

A delegation of Congress leaders is traveling to Bergen-Belsen, the site of a Nazi death camp, on Sunday and expects to meet Kohl before the chancellor speaks at a memorial ceremony there for the victims.

Reagan, trying to appease criticism at home and abroad about the cemetery visit, said he also would visit a former concentration camp during his May 1-6 visit to West Germany. The U.S. and West German governments announced Friday that Kohl and Reagan will visit Bergen-Belsen together on May 5.

A week ago, Reagan said he would visit the Bitburg cemetery but not a former death camp.

At Bitburg, 47 bodies of SS troopers are buried along with nearly 2,000 German soldiers, most of whom were killed in the Battle of the Bulge in December 1944. Thousands of American soldiers also died in that battle.

Singer and other members of the delegation were passing through Frankfurt on their way to Bergen-Belsen and talked to The Associated Press.

"We hope to prevail on Kohl and to convince him that he and Reagan are making a mistake by visiting the Bitburg cemetery," Singer said.

"The problem has to be solved by Kohl. He could become the hero of the day," he said, and Reagan should "stay at home" until he's reassessed the subject.

"The president has shown great misunderstanding of the issue. He needs a lesson on what happened in Nazi Germany," Singer added.

He said his delegation would propose to Kohl that Reagan visit instead the grave of former West German chancellor Konrad Adenauer, a staunch anti-Nazi leader throughout World War II who served as chancellor from 1949 through 1962.

"We have the greatest respect for Adenauer and that would be real act of reconciliation," Singer said.

Kohl said earlier he understood Jewish concern over the cemetery visit.

House Panel Studying Defense Abuse Turns To Pratt-Whitney

WASHINGTON (AP) — Pratt & Whitney, a Pentagon contractor which has been asked to refund $38 million in billings, will be the subject of a House subcommittee hearing this week on alleged defense contract abuses, a company official said Saturday.

The official, who spoke on condition he not be named, said the Energy and Commerce subcomittee on oversight and investigations, headed by Rep. John Dingell, D-Mich., had notified officials at Pratt & Whitney's parent, United Technologies Corp., of the investigation.

However, the official said he did not believe Pratt & Whitney or United Technologies executives had been asked to testify at the hearing.

"I was just told there was going to be a hearing involving Pratt & Whitney," the official said.

Air Force Secretary Verne Orr announced in late March that Pratt & Whitney had been asked to refund $38 million in defense contract billings. Orr said the request was similar to one made of General Electric Corp., which had been asked to refund to the Pentagon $168 million in "unreasonable profits."

Tom Drohan, a spokesman for Hartford, Conn.-based United Technologies, said he did not know the specific allegations the committee would consider. However, he said UTC officials believed the probe probably would be a "rehash of unfounded allegations relating to overhead expenses charged to the government that were thoroughly investigated."

Drohan said that from the nature of the "press queries" the company had received Saturday, the hearing might focus on the same allegations that a federal grand jury investigated in Florida in 1982 and 1983.

The grand jury investigations centered on allegations that UTC's Pratt & Whitney-Florida division had charged overhead expenses to the government, but no charges have been brought against Pratt & Whitney-Florida.

"Pratt & Whitney-Florida has a good cost accounting system in place that is designed to assure the government is not charged for questionable items," Drohan said in a statement.

"We are not saying that human errors are not possible, particularly in a complex subject like cost accounting," he said. "But here they were few and far between, involved small amounts, and have long ago been corrected by Pratt & Whitney-Florida."

United Technologies was the nation's 8th largest military contractor in fiscal 1984, which ended last Sept. 30, with $3.5 billion in contracts.

Group Claims It 'Rescued' Of 260 Animals From Lab

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — The Animal Liberation Front claimed the "rescue" Saturday of 260 laboratory animals from a University of California research center, the latest in a series of raids by the anti-vivisection group in this country, Canada and Britain.

"Early this morning, (16 members of) the Animal Liberation Front rescued 260 animals" from the university's Riverside campus, Vicky Miller of People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals said in a call to the Washington bureau of The Associated Press.

Campus spokesman Jack Chappell said university police and scientists were counting the number of animals missing from 25 to 30 laboratories in the basement of the four-floor campus life sciences building, but the number claimed by the anti-vivisectionists "is approximately correct."

The raiders "pried open doors to laboratories and removed doors from their hinges," he said. "They spray-painted slogans. ... I understand computers were vandalized. In some of the labs, test tubes and other paraphernalia were swept off counters and smashed on the floor."

Ms. Miller alleged the university "has been using animals in experiments on sight deprivation and isolation for the past two years and has recently received a grant, paid for with our tax dollars, to continue torturing and killing animals."

Chappell replied: "The claims of animal mistreatment are absolutely false. There will be long-term damage to some of the research projects," including those aimed at developing devices and treatments for blind people.

"There is a great deal of shock among the research scientists," he added.

The raiders took 21 cats, 35 rabbits, 38 pigeons, more than 80 rats, more than 70 gerbils, nine oppossums "and an infant primate who had been the victim of sight deprivation experiments since birth," she said.

Also taken were "graphic videotapes," which she said revealed the baby primate, a stump-tailed macaque named Britches, had been "kept in isolation with virtually his entire skull and face covered with surgical tape and electronic devices."

"The ALF liberated cats whose eyes have been sewn shut, rabbits who have been starved and mice who are normally vegetarians who have been forced to eat meat or starve in nutritional studies that cannot be extrapolated to human beings," Ms. Miller said.

Campus police dispatcher Judy Feaster said not all of the animals were used for research.

Crosswinds May Have Pushed Shuttle Off Landing Course

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Astronaut Karol Bobko's battle with crosswinds that pushed the shuttle Discovery 50 feet off course during landing may have caused its brakes to lock and a tire to blow, space agency officials said Saturday.

Discovery, pushed by 10 mph crosswinds, touched down 20 feet left of the runway's center line, and Bobko, the mission commander, applied the right brakes as a corrective measure. At one point, officials said, the shuttle strayed 50 feet from the center of the 300-foot-wide runway.

Ken Colley, chief shuttle mechanic, said one set of brakes on the right landing gear locked about 130 feet from the point where the shuttle stopped, and about five feet before it stopped the second set of right-hand brakes seized. The resulting pressure caused one right tire to blow out and the other to fray badly.

All four main landing gear tires were badly damaged, Colley said.

Inspection also disclosed "impact hits" on 123 of the nearly 30,000 thermal tiles that protect the shuttle from re-entry heat and a large hole, as wide as a dinner plate, in a wing flap, Colley said.

Launch director Bob Sieck said the flap may have lost one thermal tile and parts of three others during launching and as a result some of the metal underneath was damaged by re-entry heat that reached 1,200 degrees. An inspection will be made to determine if there is structural damage.

The damage was the most suffered by a shuttle in 16 flights.

Engineers are assessing the damage to determine what impact it will have on the shuttle launch schedule.

The shuttle Challenger is on the launch pad, scheduled to lift off on April 29, with seven crewmen, four squirrel monkeys, 24 rats and several materials processing and life sciences experiments to be conducted in a European-built Spacelab mounted in the cargo bay.

Discovery's next flight is scheduled June 12. That could be affected if the damaged wing flap has to be replaced, Sieck said.

National Crime Rate Falls Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reported crime decreased 3 percent last year, including a 4 percent drop in murders, but rapes and aggravated assaults rose at the fastest pace since 1980, the FBI said Saturday.

The bureau's Uniform Crime Report, based on preliminary figures, said the overall decline in reported crime last year, compared to 1983, continued a downward trend that started in 1982.

But during the fourth quarter, from Oct. 1 to Dec. 31, reported crime rose 2 percent compared to the same three-month period in 1983, the FBI said. The quarterly increase was the first since 1981.

The figures are based on a compilation of crimes reported by nearly 13,000 state and local police agencies around the country.

Attorney General Edwin Meese III said "the drop in crime over the past three years is a significant achievement."

But Meese also said in a statement that "this is no time, however, to rest on our laurels. Neither the president nor I accept crime as an unavoidable fact of life."

FBI Director William H. Webster said: "The overall downward trend is encouraging, but the increase noted in the fourth quarter demonstrates that crime in our society must remain a concern of the general public and a high priority of the criminal justice community."

While there was a 4 percent decrease in murders and a 5 percent decline in the number of robberies reported last year, rapes jumped by 6 percent and aggravated assaults went up by 4 percent. Thus, the net overall rate of violent crime showed no change from 1983.

The 3 percent decrease in overall crime from 1983 to 1984 followed a 7 percent drop from 1982 to 1983 and a 3 percent decline from 1981 to 1982. But forcible rapes and aggravated assaults rose at the faster pace than at any other time since 1980.

Declines in the overall Uniform Crime Index, however, were recorded by each of the nation's four geographic regions, the bureau said.

The Northeastern states registered the sharpest decrease, at 6 percent, while the Midwest recorded a 5 percent drop and the Southern and Western regions each showed declines of 1 percent.

Cities with populations over 50,000 registered a 2 percent decline in overall crime last year, while those jurisdictions outside metropolitan areas reported a 5 percent decrease. The suburban and rural areas showed decreases of 3 and 5 percent respectively, the FBI said.

Some crime experts and Justice Department officials have questioned the reliability of the FBI's Uniform Crime Report in recent years, maintaining there are few controls to detect instances where local police might inflate or shrink crime figures for political or budgetary reasons.

But the overall decline in reported crimes last year did reflect the findings of a broader gauge of criminal activity — the Bureau of Justice Statistics' National Crime Survey — which includes the roughly two-thirds of the crimes that are never reported.

That study, regarded as the government's best measure of crime, showed that overall crime fell 4.5 percent last year.

But that survey released on April 7, like the FBI's just-released Uniform Crime Report, indicated there has been no improvement in the rate of such violent crimes as rape and aggravated assault.

Because the broader survey was based on interviews with victims of crimes, it did not include any statistics on murder. It said there had been 35.3 million "victimizations" in 1984, compared with 37 million the year before.

Among the findings contained in the FBI report:

—Murders plunged by 11 percent in cities with populations over a million, including a decreased incidence of homicide in New York, Detroit, Philadelphia, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Washington, D.C.

—Property crimes of burglary, larceny-theft and motor vehicle theft decreased 3 percent.

Prime Minister Shops For Imported Goods

TOKYO (AP) — Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone bought $284 worth of foreign goods during a 10-minute shopping spree at a Tokyo store Saturday, a store official said — but none of his purchases was stamped "Made in America."

Nakasone has been encouraging Japanese to buy more imported goods.

His shopping trip to Takashimaya, a major department store, left Japan's $37 billion trade surplus with the United States untouched, however, because all the items he bought were European.

Takashimaya spokesman Hirohumi Tsukue said the prime minister bought a $100 Givenchy short-sleeved shirt from France, a $100 Italian jacket made by Stefano Ricci, and a $60 Ricci tie.

He also spent about $24 on a British dart game for his grandson.

Tsukue said Nakasone sampled some California almonds, and said they were "very delicious," but did not buy them.

A local television anchorman, presenting film of Nakasone's shopping spree, remarked: "It's not easy for regular consumers to simply visit a department store and buy $280 worth of imported goods."

In an unprecedented televised address last week, Nakasone presented Japan's seventh trade package of market-opening measures and appealed to Japanese citizens to each buy $100 worth of imported goods a year. He said that would boost Japan's imports by $12 billion.

Alleged Nazi Officer Arrested

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (UPI) — An alleged Nazi war criminal accused of destroying a Latvian village and slaughtering its residents in 1942 has been arrested and ordered held for deportation proceedings.

Police and federal marshals arrested Konrads Kalejs, 72, a native of Latvia, in a Miami Beach hotel room Friday night. They said he was not armed and offered no resistance.

It was the second legal action taken within a week against suspected Nazi war criminals in the United States. Last Monday a federal judge in Cleveland ordered that a man accused of being "Ivan the Terrible" be extradited to Israel, where he faces trial for the murders of Jews in World War II.

John Demjanjuk, 64, a retired autoworker, allegedly ran the gas chamber at the Nazi death camp of Treblinka in Poland, where 900,000 Jews were killed during World War II. He is in federal prison at Springfield, Mo., pending appeal of the extradition order.

Bill Dempsey, a spokesman for the U.S. marshal's office in McClean, Va., said Kalejs' last known address was in St. Petersburg, Fla., but he did not know how he was traced to the Miami Beach hotel room or why he was there.

Karachi Violence Leaves 51 Dead After Six Days Of Ethnic Fighting

KARACHI, Pakistan (AP) — New violence hit Karachi on Saturday night, where riots, ethnic street brawls and battles with security forces have killed 51 people and seriously wounded 250 in six days.

Mobs of youths hurled rocks at police and then were driven off with tear gas and baton charges, police said. Two people were stabbed to death in clashes between ethnic groups, bringing the toll since Monday to 51, according to medical and civil government officials.

The violence in this city of 7 million, Pakistan's biggest city, began Monday with a bus accident that killed two young women.

Police said youths on Saturday defied a 24-hour curfew to battle security forces in several parts of the city's west side. Authorities called for reinforcements to prevent things in check.

New fighting between ethnic groups was reported in a poor, dingy area known as Orangi Town, when authorities relaxed the curfew for two hours so people could buy food. Besides the two stabbing deaths, at least six were injured, according to doctors at Abassi Hospital.

Doctors at city hospitals reported earlier in the day that five bodies from fighting on Friday had been brought in.

Military authorities immediately reimposed the curfew and armored trucks bearing heavily armed soldiers sped into trouble spots.

There were reports that the death toll could be much higher than thought because of people not reporting killings of family members to avoid a police investigation.

Orangi Town has been the scene of the worst rioting during the past six days. Members of rival ethnic groups fought in the streets with guns, knives and axes. Doctors at local hospitals said more than 20 people have been butchered with daggers.

"It's been very bad here," said a police officer, who identified himself as A. Balouch.

Orangi Town consists mainly of cramped hovels made of mud bricks. The poorest residents live in ragged tents made from old sacking draped on sticks. Mounds of rubbish litter the district.

The curfew and lack of public transport kept tens of thousands of workers from their jobs for a week, and continued to cripple many parts of the city on Saturday.

The riots began Monday after a speeding bus racing a vehicle from a rival company went out of control and hit a group of women college students. Students poured into the streets, demanding the driver be hanged. When police tried to disperse them, they fought, and others joined in.

The rioting spread Tuesday with students and residents battling police, who repeatedly fired rifles and shotguns. Hospitals reported treating scores of people injured by shotgun pellets.

The rioting took a new turn Wednesday, with fighting between rival ethnic groups. Many local people blamed Pathans, an indigenous ethnic group from the north of the country, for the bus incident, since they dominate the city's transport industry.

Pathans have demanded autonomy from Pakistan.

"People wanted the Pathans out of Karachi. They just don't want them here," said Balouch.

Buses, which are mostly privately owned, stayed off the streets Saturday. The few pickup trucks or cars cruising the streets were often packed with up to 20 people jammed inside or hanging onto the outside.

Karachi buses are usually a colorful and clanging fixture of the city streets. They are brightly decorated with garish red, green and purple paint and bells, charms and pictures of mythical scenes or movie stars.

On Saturday, most of them stood silent in groups guarded by armed police.

Diana Takes Peek At NATO's Wares

LA SPEZIA, Italy (UPI) — Britain's Princess Diana, displaying the strong will for which she is noted, shocked Italian officials Saturday by insisting to see top-secret NATO equipment aboard an Italian navy frigate.

The incident took place aboard the frigate Grecale, on which the 23-year-old Diana and her 36-year-old husband Prince Charles watched a display of skydiving off La Spezia, a major Italian naval base in northwestern Italy.

Diana and Charles, heir to the British throne, were on the second day of a Grand Tour of Italy that started Friday on the island of Sardinia and will end May 5 in Venice.

During the short offshore cruise aboard the Grecale, Commander Gianpaolo Di Pola invited Prince Charles to inspect a control room that contained top-secret NATO equipment to counter attacks by Exocet missiles. The equipment was developed after Argentina used the French-made Exocets against British navy ships during the 1982 Falkland Islands war.

Prince Charles — resplendent in the uniform of Royal Navy Commander, a rank he achieved while serving in the Navy between 1971 and 1976 — took up the offer to inspect the room while Diana was scheduled to tour the ship.

But suddenly, Diana insisted on joining her husband in inspecting the secret anti-missile equipment. Italian officials were shocked — but granted her request.

"We made an exception for her. We would not have done it for anyone else," said the Italian frigate commander.

Spadolini, a former prime minister and host to the royal couple during their visit to the naval base, expressed some astonishment over Diana's behavior.

He compared the strong will shown by Diana to that of England's first Queen Elizabeth, who reigned in the 16th century and under whom the ships of Sir Francis Drake smashed the Spanish Armada in 1588.

"There is a trace of your (England's) first Queen Elizabeth in her," he said.

While aboard the frigate, Charles and Diana watched a team of skydivers plunge into the sea after a descent from aircraft during which they trailed British Union Jacks and Italian tricolor flags.

Later, they lunched with Spadolini and other guests aboard the Italian navy's three-masted sailing ship Amerigo Vespucci, used for training naval cadets.

Sikh Temple Raided

AMRITSAR, India (AP) — Police raided the Golden Temple in this sacred Sikh city before dawn Saturday in an attempt to arrest Sikh militants who officials fear are once again using the complex as a hideout.

Local officials said three men were arrested and police confiscated a shotgun, a hand grenade and a homemade pistol at the 17th century complex, considered the holiest shrine of the Sikh sect. Police sources said many of the militants the police sought escaped.

Sikh leaders claimed six people were taken away.

Police and Sikh leaders said the troops searched the residential areas of the complex, and did not enter the holy places. Authorities did not identify the arrested men or say what they were accused of.

"The soldiers broke locks, stole office records and harassed pilgrims. It was nothing but pre-dawn banditry," Sikh religious council leader Prem Singh Lalpura said.

Jagdev Singh Talwandi, a leader of the Sikhs' Akali Dal party, called the raid a second "Operation Blue Star." That was the code-name for last June's army assault on the temple.

He told the United News of India the assumption that assassins or criminals were hiding inside the shrine was "baseless."

Obscenity Is Outlawed By Chinese

PEKING (AP) — China outlawed, under new regulations published Saturday, pornographic videos, aphrodisiacs and obscene materials that "poison people's minds."

The State Council ban, which appeared in all leading newspapers, follows official complaints that pornography is now readily available in Canton and other Chinese cities.

According to the Chinese press, smuggled and home-produced obscene videos and films are being shown to paying audiences and racy publications are multiplying.

"Salacious materials poisoning people's minds and causing crimes are extremely harmful," the ruling said.

"To protect the mental health of the people and especially youth, safeguard social harmony and ensure smooth progress in socialist modernization, various kinds of salacious material must be strictly banned."

Effective immediately, the manufacture, sale, import, duplication and distribution of obscene material is prohibited.

The ban covers videos, films, slides, books, magazines and pictures that "specifically portray sexual behavior or publicize pornographic and lascivious images."

Also outlawed were sex toys and aids and unspecified aphrodisiacs. Presumably the root of the ginseng plant — taken by many Chinese as a sexual rejuvenator — is exempt.

The government called for prudent implementation of the ban and said valuable art and literary works are permissible even when they contain some obscene material.

The 16th-century Chinese classic "The Golden Lotus," with many explicit sexual passages, has long been banned under communist rule and presumably will continue to be forbidden.

Exempt from the ban, however, are paintings and other works of art depicting the beauty of the human body. The Central Academy of Fine Arts in Peking began recruiting nude models last year.

The government said customs officers should tighten control of pornography smuggling, while local governments should coordinate the crackdown within the country.

Bomb Blast Damages Office Of NATO Agency In Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — A bomb with the force of about 220 pounds of TNT exploded Saturday at the headquarters of a NATO affiliate, slightly injuring three people, police said.

The bomb was placed on a window sill at the offices of the North Atlantic Assembly and detonated around daybreak. It ripped away part of a wall at the back of the 19th-century building, and touched off a fire in the archives room. The fire was quickly controlled, police said.

The blast also extensively damaged a nearby historical mansion, shattered windows and demolished a car. Three people living nearby were cut by glass but needed no medical attention.

The initials of the Revolutionary Front for Proletarian Action were sprayed in red paint near where the bomb exploded. Two hours after the explosion, a man claiming he represented that organization called Belgium's French-speaking RTBF news network. A network official quoted him as saying: "The 20th of April Unit has struck at the NATO Assembly this night."

Spokesman Richard Grant said: "The North Atlantic Assembly is an organization that brings together elected members of parliament of all 16 NATO nations. It is absurd to attack us."

The 30-year-old assembly is completely independent of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, but it provides a link between the alliance and the parliaments of the allies.

There was no damage estimate, but a police official said the 17th-century mansion at the back of the assembly "received a severe blow."

Soviets Hold Annual Work Day

MOSCOW (AP) — An army of office workers, students and housewives shouldering brooms and rakes marched into Moscow's streets and parks Saturday for the annual Subbotnik — a day of free labor and a rite of spring in the Soviet Union.

Factory workers and other laborers across the nation put in a day at their usual jobs — without pay — to mark the "holiday" of voluntary labor.

Partly sunny skies and temperatures near 50 degrees prevailed, marred only by a soft, early morning hail in some parts of the city.

Red flags and banners were hoisted during the week to mark the event. On Saturday, banner headlines in morning newspapers urged, "Everyone to the Communist Subbotnik."

Orchestras played at some factories before the start of work. There were speeches and rallies in the morning at stations where people gathered to receive their Subbotnik assignments.

The idea of volunteering a day's work was institutionalized 65 years ago when Vladimir I. Lenin, founder of the Communist Party and Soviet state, helped spruce up the Kremlin grounds during the first official Subbotnik. Afterward he wrote an article for the party newspaper Pravda extolling the merits of the "conscious and voluntary initiative of the worker."

Another version has it that the tradition began in 1919 when 15 workers gave up 10 hours of their free time to repair three locomotives.

"Subbotnik" comes from the Russian word for Saturday — Subbota. Every April, the Saturday nearest the April 22 anniversary of Lenin's birth in 1870 is the Subbotnik. Soviet officials estimated that more than 150 million of the country's 276 million people would participate this year.

House Panel To Study Two Plans For State Basic Education Program

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The House version of an eight-year, $640 basic education bill would have tighter reins over the program than the Senate version, but the chairman of a subcommittee that drafted it says the plans are similar.

"Under the Senate version (passed last week) the state Board of Education is going to adopt a plan and the General Assembly is going to pay for it," said Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, whose House Education subcommittee expects to send its plan to the full committee this week.

The House plan, he said, gives the board relatively free rein to set curriculum but requires legislative approval of materials, facilities, staffing and promotions "before the board adopts them."

"The General Assembly recognizes that the technical expertise to put together and monitor a basic curriculum is within the purview of the Board of Education," Mavretic said.

Some members of the House panel objected when they were told a subcommittee would consider the plan, which is designed to give every child in North Carolina an equal opportunity for education. Rep. Edd Nye, D-Bladen, charged that what would emerge would be "the Mavretic plan for basic education."

But Mavretic said his subcommittee took heed of what was said at public hearings and made several compromises.

"We stay out of curriculum, which speakers at the public hearaing generally suggested that we do," he said. "I think you'll see clearly some concrete subcommittee reaction to public hearing comments."

For example, in response to parents' claims the plan might be anti-family and anti-Christian, it now calls for "frequent opportunities" to say the Pledge of Allegiance and says the program should "support the privacy of the home and family and advocate those social or political theories which undergird the federal system of this republic."

Gov. Jim Martin and some Senate Republicans have questioned the board's definition of basic education, which includes access to foreign languages and the arts. Mavretic said his panel's version would give the Legislature a chance to review those "satellite" requirements that go beyond reading, writing and arithmetic.

"This puts the board on notice that we want to know what is specified at each grade level," he said.

Another change that may accommodate some Senate objections is a requirement that the board "report every year what they did and any deviation from the plan as well as any deviations they expect to make in the coming year," Mavretic said.

Sen. Chip Wright, D-New Hanover, had complained before the Senate passed its bill that lawmakers would have no yardstick to gauge progress of the plan.

"In the report we want substantive, qualitative data by school systems over the preceding year to show how they are progressing," Mavretic said. "That's qualitative, not quantitative."

Both bills are based on board proposals and commission reports. They call for competencies by grade level, lists of approved textbooks, standards for performance and promotion, remedial education, standard class sizes and upgraded equipment and facilities.

Mavretic said the House version would more closely scrutinize non-curriculum segments of the program "so the people know that the tax money being used in public schools is producing the results we desire."

The program is likely to be hammered out in a conference committee because the Senate is unlikely to completely agree with the House version, Mavretic said.

"But in the end, I think we'll have a better bill," he said. "I guess that's why we have two houses."

IN THE STATE

State To Parole 200 Monthly To Ease Crowding In Prisons

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — About 200 convicts will get out of jail early every month starting Monday to help ease overcrowding in state prisons, officials say.

State Department of Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson announced last week that the state's prison population has swelled to record levels in the past 18 months and must be reduced. He promised the early paroles will not release any dangerous criminals.

Early parole likely will free some 200 inmates a month, he said.

Starting Monday, some "carefully screened" prisoners who are 90 days or less from their parole dates will be allowed early parole. Johnson said certain prisoners would be paroled within 30 days under close review of the Parole Commission.

"I want the public to know that I am aware of the department's role in protecting it by maintaining custody of dangerous offenders," Johnson said. "No inmate will be paroled if his release would result in an apparent or unacceptable risk to the community."

Johnson said the early parole is not outright release but "under strict conditions imposed by the Parole Commission and enforced by probationparole officers."

Johnson said the early paroles are a quick solution for an ongoing problem.

"This situation of overcrowding has not occurred overnight but has been building for years. We are looking for permanent solutions to this complex problem," he said.

Early parole will not be offered to prisoners sentenced for murder, rape, drug dealing, kidnapping or sex offenses against children, he said. Nor will inmates who have committed recent violent prison infractions or who are serving consecutive sentences for escape.

Minimum custody inmates will be considered for early parole but medium custody prisoners will be eligible only if they successfully complete a pre-release training program, Johnson said.

Physically or mentally ill inmates will be considered only if treatment is available in the community, he said.

Block Says Leaf Views Unchanged

By The Associated Press

Agriculture Secretary John Block says he has not retreated from his plan to deregulate tobacco, but a North Carolina congressman says if Block does introduce a tobacco bill, it will not win much support.

"The administration approach will be basically what I have talked to you about before," Block told the News & Observer of Raleigh in an article in Saturday editions. "We do not have it (a tobacco bill) introduced yet, but we really haven't changed it either."

Block said his "fundamental views" on tobacco also had not changed.

"The Block farm program has been a bust," said Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C. "If he introduces a (tobacco) bill, it won't be worth the paper it is written on."

Block said earlier this year that he would include the tobacco program in the adminstration's "market-oriented" 1985 farm bill, which calls for a five-year phaseout of farm-support programs. But Block removed tobacco from the farm bill and she he would offer his tobacco plan in separate legislation.

As outlined two months ago, Block's proposal would reduce drastically the federal price support for tobacco and eliminate tobacco allotments. The plan calls for direct payments to allotment holders over a five-year period to ease the transition to a deregulated tobacco economy.

Behavioral Research Unit Opens At Duke

DURHAM (AP) — A research center for behavioral medicine — the first of its kind — that will study possible links between life styles and diseases has been established at Duke University Medical Center, officials said Saturday.

"Exciting new possibilities for improving the quality of life are emerging in the field of health care and prevention," said Dr. William G. Anlyan, Duke chancellor for health affairs. "With the opening of the Behavioral Medicine Research Center, we are delighted that Duke will be at the forefront of this important field."

In recent years, studies have suggested that behavior can have a profound influence on health and longevity, he said. Behavioral medicine deals with such things as the effects of exercise or relaxation training in the prevention, treatment and rehabilitation of a host of medical problems, including heart disease, cancer, hypertension and diabetes.

Behavioral medicine is also concerned with life-shortening behavior such as hostility and aggression, Anlyan said in a news release.

He said the medical center will allocate $200,000 annually from endowment funds to support the new center.

Dr. Redford B. Williams Jr., professor of psychiatry and the director of the new center, said the creation of the facility is a sign of the growing maturity in the field of behavioral medicine.

N.C. Tops Ham, Yam Taste-Off

SMITHFIELD, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina won three out of four taste-offs to win the first Ham and Yam Festival Saturday in a battle of Smithfield towns in Virginia and the Tar Heel state.

"The only reason Virginia won one of the taste-offs is that they used North Carolina hogs," N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham told the crowd of about 500.

J.P. Sanders of Four Oaks took first place in the cooked ham division, while the Grand Champion went to the Smithfield, Va., hams.

Barefoot Hams of Four Oaks took first place in the uncooked ham taste-off, and the Grand Champion went to Johnston County hams of Smithfield.

The event, sponsored by the Johnston County Agricultural Extension Service and the Smithfield-Selma Area Chamber of Commerce, helped promote two of North Carolina's most important agricultural products, Graham said.

Meredith Staff Eyes Conduct At Campbell

RALEIGH, N.C. (UPI) — Faculty members at Meredith College want to know if their counterparts at Campbell University have violated the academic freedom of a professor who wrote a novel about Baptists by delaying his contract and denying him a raise.

The faculty members at Meredith, which, along with Campbell, is affiliated with the Baptist State Convention of North Carolina, have sent a resolution to their colleagues suggesting it review its academic policies.

"We, the faculty of Meredith College, view with increasing alarm continued reports of the denial of academic freedom at Campbell University," the resolution said. It added that the reports culminated "most recently in the delay of a contrct and the denial of a raise in salary to Professor Clyde Edgerton for having written a novel which has been well received by his peers in the academic community and by the press."

Edgerton wrote a novel entitled "Raney: A Novel" is about the first two years of a young couple's married life.

The book tells how the wife, Raney, a Free Will Baptist, and her Episcopalian husband try to reconcile their differing ideas about race, religion and home life in the setting of a small North Carolina town. Edgerton has said Campbell officials have complained to him that the book could embarrass Campbell President Norman Wiggins and upset members of the Free Will denomination.

Edgerton said his request for an independent inquiry was denied, and that he plans to grieve the treatment he has received.

The Meredith resolution suggests Campbell professors "request an inquiry by the AAUP (American Association of University Professors) to determine the degree to which the denial of academic freedom exists at Campbell University."

"What happens to one of us happens to us all," said Bernard Cochran, a religion professor who wrote the Meredith resolution. "This issue has wider implications than just the denial of academic freedom to just one professor."

Cochran said Edgerton's case is the third denial of academic freedom since Wiggins has been president.

A religion professor was dismissed when he joined a Methodist church and a French professor was fired for ordering a French language work for the library that the school considered as being of questionable moral value, Cochran said.

Cochran said it was his idea to send the resolution.

Mortician Draws Fine

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (UPI) — A former University of North Carolina official accused of embezzling 36 cadavers has struck a deal with prosecutors that will keep him from going to prison, but still maintains his innocence.

"I think what I have done all along was up and above board," said Les Sandlin, a mortician and former anatomical remains curator for the UNC School of Medicine. "I feel the charges were ridiculous."

Sandlin faced 323 counts of fraud, embezzlement, self-dealing and obtaining money by false pretenses, but Orange County District Attorney Carl Fox agreed Friday to reduce the charges to 77 counts of self dealing.

Those charges were consolidated into seven offenses and Sandlin pleaded no contest. He was fined $500 for each offense, handed a 14-year suspended sentence and placed on probation for five years.

"I always thought there was actually more made about the case than the substance down beneath it," said Fox in explaining his decision not to press for an active sentence.

"It's unusual for somebody to be charged with embezzling bodies," Fox said.

Fox said Sandlin broke the law by channeling state business into his own firm, but said the services had to be performed and the price was reasonable.

"He didn't overcharge the state," Fox said. "He's just not supposed to do business with the state when he works with the state as an independent contractor."

Self-dealing involves using public office for private gain. Fox said that while working for the university, Sandlin used his private mortuary in Durham to embalm bodies donated to the medical school for research and to prepare some of the bodies for transport out of state.

The highly publicized case shocked people who learned the bodies of family members they thought would be used for university research had been shipped off to Virginia, Florida, Indiana and the Caribbean.

Paige, Gold 'Survive' Purple

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Terry Paige dashed 52 yards in the third period to score the only touchdown of the day for the Gold team, but they managed to "beat" the Purple team 35-28 in East Carolina's annual spring scrimmage game Saturday afternoon.

With over 5,000 sun-baked fans on hand as the Second Annual Great Pirate Purple/Gold Pigskin Pig-Out Party came to an end, the Purple team dominated play only to "lose" by the odds handed them by new head coach Art Baker.

Instead of the traditional draft of players by senior captains, Baker chose to put the first and fourth offensive and defensive units on the Purple squad, with the rest of the players on the Gold unit. To even things up, the Gold was awarded seven points per quarter, or 28 points on the afternoon.

That, and a goal line stand in the final quarter, did the trick for them in the end.

Anthony Simpson scored twice for the Purple on runs of eight and three yards, while quarterback Ron Jones went over from 11 yards out and tailback Tony Baker went over from five.

Jeff Heath, who kicked for both teams, added PAT's after each touchdown and had no opportunities to score on field goals.

Baker made the team appointments after a large number of injuries hit players on all units and said that the injuries were the most disappointing aspect of his first spring drills. "Not getting to see them work out was disappointing," he said.

Attitude was the "most positive thing of the spring," the coach added.

And as far as the game was concerned the lack of a passing game was a disappointment. Darrell Speed, for the Gold, hit on six of 14 attempts for 50 yards with one picked off. Jones, for the Purple made good on only three of ten for 38 yards while backup Scott Flynt hit on one of two for 13 yards.

Todd Abrams, whom Baker said might be the best passer among the group, played only one down, running for 21 yards on an option, but left the game with an injury sustained at the end of the run.

And while the pass defense looked good with three sacks of Speed, it was difficult to assess as Baker pointed out, since the Pirates were going against themselves.

"I hope to be a little more wide open with the passing game next year than we were today," Baker added. One receiver who caught the eye of Baker was the Purple's Tony Smith, who pulled in two passes for 30 yards. "He's just a great little competitor. He does a lot of things well and is very consistant."

Depth, however, would appear to be a problem. "Basically, we're a very young team. A lot of the people out there are freshmen and sophomores without a lot of experience. That's one of the things that we've got to improve on in the fall (depth). And we've got to work a lot on our passing game. I want us to be a threat to throw the ball every time out of the huddle," Baker said.

Pirates, Patriots Split Pair

FAIRFAX, Va. — Winfred Johnson drove in six runs and Jay McGraw added four RBI as the Pirates of East Carolina pounded George Mason 16-3 to split an ECAC-South doubleheader Saturday.

Mason pitcher Danny Atcheson struck out 10 and scattered five hits while Kevin Burke ripped his 12th homer of the season to lead the Patriots to a 7-2 victory in the opener.

In other ECAC-South action, James Madison and UNC-Wilmington split a twinbill in Harrisonburg, Va. as the Seahawks remain half a game ahead of East Carolina. James Madison took the first game 9-6, while UNC-W thrashed the Dukes 17-5 in the finale. Madison and UNC-W play a single game Sunday, while the Pirates and Mason close a three-game series.

The Pirates jumped on Mason in the first inning of the second game, as Mark Shank and Greg Hardison ripped singles before Chris Bradberry beat out a bunt to load the bases. Johnson lined the ball to left driving in Shank and Hardison, and a fielder's choice by McGraw after two out plated Bradberry for a 3-0 ECU lead.

East Carolina added two more runs in the second, but Mason trimmed the margin with a pair in the bottom of the third.

The Pirates posted one run in the fourth, then three in the fifth as Johnson blasted a three-run shot. After two outs, Hardison doubled and Bradberry walked to set up Johnson's 21st homer of the season — tops in the ECAC.

Langer Setting Pace At Heritage Classic

There's a reason for it.

Langer, the winner of the Masters last week, was fined for violating the PGA Tour's guidelines concerning slow play a month ago in the Tournament Players Championship.

With the wristwatch, he can check his own — and other players' — progress.

He put it to use on the first hole Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 Sea Pines Heritage Classic.

"It took a while for the official to get there. I knew that would happen. Then he dropped it two or three times. It took 15 minutes," Langer said.

So the West German star was armed with some facts when he was warned for slow play when his group went off the 10th tee.

"We were exactly 15 minutes slow — the time it took for the ruling — in making the turn. I don't think it's right that they should warn us," he said.

"We rushed every shot and caught up in three holes," he said.

The warning did not result in a penalty. And it didn't hamper his play. After playing the front in 38, Langer ripped the back nine — while officials timed his progress — in 31, including birdies on three of his last five holes — and established a one-shot lead going into Sunday's final round.

The burst enabled him to break a multiple-man scramble in which eight players led or shared the lead at one time or another during the day's play.

"One shot is nothing," said Langer, who had a rallying 69 and a 203 total, 10 under par, through the first 54 holes on the Harbour Town Golf Links.

Wadkins wasn't so sure.

"He's playing awfully well right now. It could be that he'll go out and shoot lights out and nobody else will have a chance," Wadkins said of Langer.

Danny Edwards, who combines his PGA Tour activity with a concurrent career as an auto race driver, had a 68 that moved him into second at 204.

Larry Mize, with a 67, and Wadkins were next at 205. Wadkins, who led or shared the lead through the first two rounds, had to battle back from a double-bogey to post a 72 in the sunny, breezy weather.

Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA champion, was another stroke back at 206 after a 70.

The big group at 207 — four off the pace but very much in the chase for the $72,000 first prize — included Hal Sutton, Tim Norris, Dan Pohl, Jim Thorpe and Paul Azinger. Norris shot a 66, Sutton 68, Pohl and Thorpe 72, and Azinger, who shared the second-round lead, slipped to 74.

That put 10 players locked within four shots of the top spot going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize.

But Hale Irwin is not among them.

Irwin, a two-time winner here and twice a U.S. Open champion, had been among the leaders through the first 36 holes and did not make a bogey over that stretch. The bogeys caught up with him on the back nine, the stretch leading down to the picturesque, red-and-white striped lighthouse behind the 18th green. He played that side in 38, finished with a 74 and was six off the pace at 209.

After making birdie on the first hole, Irwin had a share of the top spot when Wadkins hit into the water and made double-bogey on the third.

Azinger, Thorpe, Nelson, Mize, Wadkins, Edwards and, of course, Langer, all reached the lead at one time or another.

One by one they dropped away. Mize and Edwards were the last two challengers to the new Masters champion.

Mize got to 9-under and a share of the top spot with a 12-15 foot birdie putt on the 16th. But he fell back with a bogey after missing the green on the next hole.

Edwards rolled in a breaking, 15-foot birdie putt on the 15th. That put him at 9-under and he parred in.

Langer, 27, the first West German to win any of the world's recognized major events, was playing under the clock in the last group. He got a share of the lead with a 20-foot birdie putt on the 15th hole and then took sole control with a 7-iron shot that set up a two-foot putt for the go-ahead birdie on the 17th.

SIDELINES

TIGERS RALLY

Never give up till the final out? Lou Whitaker hit a one-out, bases-loaded single to cap a ninth-inning rally that lifted the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday. Page B-3

LADY BUCS WIN SIX

East Carolina's Lady Pirates won five of six softball games played over the last three days, including a no-hitter by Pam Young against Methodist College, but, Saturday afternoon's second game against Virginia brought an end to the string, as Virginia topped the Lady Pirates, 12-9. ECU had won the opening game, 7-2. Page B-3

STONE ROCKS

Jeff Stone drove in five runs with two homers and a single as the Philadelphia Phillies ended a five-game losing streak with a 7-6 victory over the New York Mets Saturday. Page B-4

BIRD FLYING

Larry Bird capped a 30-point performance with a layup with two minutes remaining to give Boston the lead for good and the Celtics pulled out a 108-106 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Saturday to take a 2-0 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series. Page B-5

OUTDOORS COLUMN

How much damage to the inhabitants have the recent forest fires inflicted? Angela Lingerfelt interviewed Larry Ditto, manager of the 12,000-acre Pungo National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County. "The fire burned almost all of the cover for deer, rabbits and other animals," according to Ditto. Page B-5

ROSE ROLLS

Van Alston ripped three hits and Gary Scott hurled a five-hitter to lead the Rose Rampants to an 11-3 victory over Wilson Hunt in Big East 4-A high school baseball Friday. Page B-6

MOTOWN POWER

Everyone in baseball knows that Tiger Stadium in Detroit is a good park for home run hitters. Unfortunately for the Tigers, it was the opposition that took advantage of the cozy dimensions Friday night. Page B-7

Whitaker Leads Ninth-Inning Rally

DETROIT (AP) — Lou Whitaker hit a one-out, bases-loaded single to cap a ninth-inning rally that lifted the Detroit Tigers to a 4-3 victory over the Kansas City Royals Saturday.

Trailing 3-2 going into the ninth, John Grubb started the rally with a single and Jim Weaver ran for him. Darrell Evans singled to center and Tom Brookens ran for him.

Royals reliever Dan Quisenberry, 0-2, got Larry Herndon to pop a bunt attempt to Steve Balboni for the first out. Then Chet Lemon singled Weaver home, and Quissenberry walked Chris Pittaro to load the bases for Whitaker. On a 1-1 count with both the infield and outfield drawn in, Whitaker laced a long line drive over Willie Wilson's head that landed near the warning track in center field to score Brookens with the winning run.

Willie Hernandez, 2-0, worked the ninth inning for the Tigers and picked up the victory.

Darryl Motley and Frank White doubled to spark a two-run second inning that put the Royals up 2-0.

Motley's second-inning double was a short pop fly behind second that fell between three players. Steve Balboni singled Motley home, went to third on White's double and scored on a bases-loaded grounder by Buddy Biancalana.

In the Kansas City fifth, Willie Wilson doubled off Walt Terrell, and George Brett was given an intentional walk with one out. Jorge Orta foiled the strategy with a single up the middle just out of the grasp of both Terrell and second-baseman Whitaker to score Wilson for a 3-0 Royals lead.

Darrell Evans hit a two-out solo homer, his first, off Gubicza in the seventh, and the the Tigers scored again in the eighth on consecutive singles by Pittaro, Alan Trammell and Gibson to make it 3-2.

Boston 12
Chicago 8

CHICAGO (AP) — Marty Barrett hit his first career grand slam, in the ninth inning, and Tony Armas drove in three runs as the Boston Red Sox pounded out four homers to beat the Chicago White Sox 12-8 Saturday.

The Red Sox snapped a 5-5 tie with Rich Gedman's solo homer on the first pitch in the sixth inning from reliever Gene Nelson, 0-1, who took over for starter Tom Seaver after a 44-minute rain delay. The homer put Boston ahead for good and made a winner of reliever Steve Crawford, 1-1.

Toronto 3
Baltimore 2

TORONTO (AP) — Willie Aikens' sacrifice fly off reliever Don Aase with one out in the eighth inning scored Willie Upshaw and capped a two-run rally that carried the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-2 victory over the Baltimore Orioles Saturday.

The Orioles had snapped a scoreless tie in the sixth on Ripken's two-run homer against Totonto starter Luis Leal.

New York 5
Cleveland 2

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike Pagliarulo's bases-clearing double capped a four-run first inning, and the New York Yankees held on to defeat the Cleveland Indians 5-2 Saturday.

Pagliarulo's double off Jose Roman, 0-2, made a winner of Phil Niekro, 2-1. Niekro pitched the first five innings and won the 286th game of his career, tying him with Robin Roberts for 18th on the all-time list. Bob Shirley relieved in the sixth, and Dave Righetti pitched the ninth for his fourth save.

Omar Moreno started the first with a single, stole second, moved to third on a ground out and scored on Roman's wild pitch. After Don Mattingly popped out, Dave Winfield beat out an infield hit and moved to third on Don Baylor's single, with Baylor taking second on the throw.

Pirates Rally By GMU...

score and Cockrell to take third. Robert Langston singled in Cockrell for a 12-3 ECU lead.

David White dropped a pop fly to right by Bradberry after two outs, and Johnson walked to fill the bases. A wild pitch by reliever Gray Brill allowed Langston to score, and Mont Carter singled in Bradberry and Johnson. McGraw followed with his second extra-base hit of the inning — a triple — to drive in Carter as the Pirates took a comforable margin.

But the victory only helped the Pirates hold onto second place in the conference, as the Patriots came out hot in the opener.

Atcheson, who has notched wins over Virginia, James Madison and Deleware, kept the Pirates off stride the entire first game. Hardison tagged Atcheson for a solo homer in the sixth and finished with two hits, while Riley added a pair.

Burke, this week's ECAC-South player of the week with four homers and a .644 batting average, tagged reliever Chubby Butler with a with a solo shot in the bottom of the sixth to cap the Patriots' 10-hit attack. Johnson, whose record slipped to 7-4 with the loss, gave up just three earned runs in five innings.

Barry Durham reached first on an error in the second, and Johnson's wild throw on a pickoff attempt allowed Durham to advance to second. Ralph Schmidt singled to left, and Scott Toelle rolled a fielder's choice to shortstop to drive in Durham. After two out, David White slapped a single down the first base line for two more runs, and he went to second when Hardison couldn't make the tag on te relay from the outfield. Derek Williams tripled to center to drive in White for a 4-0 Mason lead.

The Patriots expanded the margin with a pair of runs in the third, as Carlin Hart doubled to open the rally. Schmidt was hit by a pitch after one out, and Miller singled in Hart. Scott Runkle singled in Schmidt as Mason went ahead 6-0.

Hardison's fourth homer of the season trimmed the margin to 6-1, but Burke's blast maintained the Patriots' advantage to six runs. The Pirates cut the gap with a run in the seventh before Atcheson closed the door for his fifth victory in eight decisions.

East Carolina is now 10-4 in the ECAC-South and 29-10 overall, while Mason stands at 9-6 in the league and 27-17 overall.

Lady Pirates Win Six

East Carolina's Lady Pirates won five of six softball games played over the last three days, including a no-hitter by Pam Young against Methodist College.

Saturday afternoon's second game against Virginia brought an end to the string, as Virginia topped the Lady Pirates, 12-9. ECU had won the opening game, 7-2.

Thursday, ECU swept Methodist, 2-1 and 3-0, then took Liberty Baptist, 3-2 and 2-0, Friday.

In the opening game Saturday against Virginia, the Lady Cavs scored a run in the second, only to see ECU pick up two in the third. The Lady Pirates then pushed over five in the fifth to wrap it up, despite getting only one hit in the inning. Virginia had five errors in that frame.

Sandy Kee had a homer and two runs batted in to lead the Lady Pirates, while Lisa Zmuda had a triple with two rbi's and Sue Pierce added a double.

In the second game, Virginia struck for seven runs in the second inning to take a 8-3 lead after two frames as they went on to snap the Lady Pirate win streak.

Robin Graves had three hits, including a double and a triple, to lead ECU, driving in two runs. Stacey Boyette had two hits and drove in two runs, while Tamara Franks had a single and a triple and Jeannie Murray had three singles.

Robin Graves led the second game win over Liberty Baptist, driving in the two Pirate runs in the sixth inning with one of her two hits.

Sandy Kee, Graves and Lynda Barrett each drove in a run in the first game against Liberty Baptist.

ECU is now 24-15-1 and travels to Francis Marion on Monday.

ECU Women Ousted From League Tourney

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — East Carolina University's women's tennis team was knocked out of any championship competition Saturday as its last two players were knocked out of their flight in the ECAC-South Women's Tennis Championships.

Anne Manderfield and Ty Myers, first round winners, were defeated in the semifinals, and will compete today for third place in their respective flights.

William & Mary ranks second with 30 points while James Madison is third with 24. UNC-Wilmington is fourth with ten, while the Lady Pirates and George Mason are tied with four each. American has failed to score.

In Friday's first round, East Carolina lost out in all but two matches, those won by Manderfielder and Myers. Manderfield defeated George Mason's Marni Harker, 6-3, 6-3 while Myers defeated Natalie Brown of UNCW, 6-3, 6-3.

In other action, Richmond's Charlotte Haberstroh defeated Janet Russell, 6-2, 6-4; Alison Shoulars of UNCW downed Susan Montjoy, 6-4, 6-1; debbie MacColl of William & Mary downed Shiela Feeley, 6-3, 6-1; and Marcy Judd of Richmond beat Sheila Farley, 6-0, 6-1.

In doubles competition, Russell and Manderfield fell to Ellen Fusco and Jo Hutchinson, 6-1, 7-6 (7-3); Myers and Feeley fell to Stevie Figland and Judd of Richmond, 6-0, 6-1, and Montjoy and Karla Hoyle lost to Haberstroh and Tara Shannon of Richmond, 6-1, 6-1.

In Saturday's semifinal action, Ingrid Hutz of James Madison beat Manderfield, 6-2, 6-0 and Hutchinson downed Myers, 6-1, 6-1.

Stone Rocks Mets With 5 RBI

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jeff Stone drove in five runs with two homers and a single as the Philadelphia Phillies ended a five-game losing streak with a 7-6 victory over the New York Mets Saturday.

Right-hander John Denny, 1-1, allowed eight hits, struck out three and got one inning of relief help from Larry Andersen, who short circuited a Mets ninth-inning rally during which they scored three runs.

Denny allowed a leadoff homer to Darryl Strawberry in the ninth, then gave up a single to Danny Heep and walked Howard Johnson, bringing on Andersen. Rafael Santana then grounded between the legs of Phillies shortstop Juan Samuel, who was charged with an error as Heep scored and Johnson went to third.

George Foster then grounded into an RBI fielder's choice, but Andersen fanned Wally Backman and Mookie Wilson to end the threat.

The Phillies scored four runs in the fourth to snap a 3-3 tie, aided by a close call by first base umpire Terry Tata. After Glenn Wilson and Steve Jeltz singled, Denny struck out. Samuel then grounded into what looked like an inning-ending double play, but Tata ruled Samuel safe at first.

Stone followed with a three-run homer off Ed Lynch, 0-1, and the Phillies added another run when Von Hayes singled and scored on Mike Schmidt's pop fly that fell between right fielder Strawberry and second baseman Backman.

Montreal 4
Chicago 0

MONTREAL (AP) — Bill Gullickson limited Chicago to two hits over seven innings, and Andre Dawson hit a solo homer as the Montreal Expos defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-0 Saturday for their fourth straight victory.

Until Ron Cey's leadoff single in the eighth, the only hit off Gullickson, 2-1, was a third-inning single by Steve Lake. Jeff Reardon got the final six outs without allowing a hit for his third save.

Steve Trout, 2-1, retired the first 11 Expos, finally allowing a single to Dawson in the fourth.

Tim Wallach opened the fifth with a double into center field and advanced to third on Jim Wohlford's fly ball. After the drawn in infield retired Razor Shines on a grounder, with Wallach remaining at third, Trout elected to pitch to Mike Fitzgerald, the No. 8 hitter.

Hubie Brooks' two-run single made it 4-0 in the eighth.

Cincinnati 2
San Francisco 1

CINCINNATI (AP) — Eddie Milner led off the Cincinnati ninth with a double and raced home with the winning run on pitcher Frank Williams' throwing error to give the Reds a 2-1 victory Saturday over the San Francisco Giants.

Mario Soto, 3-1, fanned 11 in his second complete game, leading the Reds to their sixth consecutive victory.

Soto laid down a sacrifice bunt with none out in the bottom of the ninth to try to advance Milner. Williams, 0-1, fielded the ball and threw wildly to third base as Milner scored.

Soto allowed four hits and walked three.

Soto blazed his way through the first five innings, fanning nine while allowing just two hits and a walk. Chili Davis drew the walk in the second inning, stole second, took third on a fly-out and scored on Scot Thomson's ground out.

The Reds tied it in the third against Jim Gott, who left the game in the fifth with a blister. The Reds loaded the bases on walks to Eric Davis and Pete Rose and Dave Parker's infield single, setting up Cesar Cedeno's sacrifice fly.

Rose had a single in two official at bats, leaving him 83 away from breaking Ty Cobb's all time hit mark of 4,191.

Scrimmage Pleases Baker...

The running game looked sharp, at least as far as Jones, Baker and Simpson were concerned. Baker led all rushers with 137 yards on 22 carries, while Jones had 122 on 14 rushes. Simpson added 60 yards on 10 carries.

The Purple, in effect down 28-0 when it walked on the field, quickly drove in for the opening score on the first series.

It took only nine plays for the Pirates to advance the ball 79 yards to the end zone, with Simpson going up the middle for the final eight yards. Jones ripped off 19 yards around the right side on the first play of the series, later adding a 22 yard rip to the right again. Two pass plays fell incompete in the drive, with no other play covering less than five yards.

Two series later, the Gold got off its first drive, moving from the 26 to the Purple 45 before running out of steam and kicking it away.

That set up the Purple to drive on the opening series of the second quarter to again "tie" it up, 14-14. From the 20, Jones kept the ball on second down for 16 yards. Simpson added two 10-yard bursts on the series and Jones galloped 14 yards on the eighth play of the quarter. Two plays later, he went around the left side for the final 11 and the score with 7:48 left.

The Gold drove from its own 31 to the Purple 46 before a holding penalty killed the series and the Purple took over on its own 39 after a short punt.

Facing fourth and one at the 48, Baker took a quick pitch around the left end for ten yards and a first down. Jones then hit Smith for 18 more yards to the 24. Six plays later, Baker went around the left side for the score from five yards away and the Purple led for the first time, 21-14.

That advantage not only disappeared as the third period opened, the Gold drove for the go-ahead score.

After deciding to run out the kickoff and getting stopped at the 11, the Gold was pushed back to the five with a clip on the return and had to start from there. But five and six yard burst moved the ball along the 35 from there Speed hit Wayne Morgan for a 13-yard gain to the 48.

On the next play, Paige took a quick pitch to the right, cut back inside and found a seam to the end zone, 52 yards away. That made it 28-21 with 7:24 left in the period.

The Purple struck back in a hurry, driving 80 yards in nine plays. Jones hit Smith for 12 yards on second down, and after reaching the Gold 41 in three more plays, got 16 yards for a roughing the passer penalty. From the 25, Scott Lewis picked up 17 on an end around, and Baker added five more to the three. Simpson cracked over from there to tie it up, 28-28 with 2:31 remaining.

Early in the fourth quarter, after the Gold had gotten its free seven for a 35-28 lead, the Purple launched a final drive to try and pull it out.

Jones scampered from his own 32 to the 43 on first down, and Baker later overcame a third and six with a 17-yard dash.

The drive continued to grind out short yardage until it finally reached the two with a fourth and goal situation. Jones faked a handoff to the tailback, spun to his right and dashed for the corner. Just before reaching the end zone, however, he cut to his right again and was pinned by Lewis Wilson at the one — a yard short. Had he cut left, he might have made it.

The Purple did get the ball back, but three "Hail-Mary's" by Jones were each incomplete in the final seconds of play.

Despite the problems, Baker is optimistic about the future. "We have a number of players who were injured who will be back and a number who were not eligible that we hope will be back. They are experienced players and will help us in the fall if they are back."

Questioned as to whether the Pirates would be putting more emphasis on helping the athletes out academically through tutorial programs, Baker said he didn't think that was the answer.

"The way to stop that (academic problems) is to recruit better student-athletes. We're not going to recruit anyone we don't think will have the opportunity to graduate. I think the NCAA rules are going to help along those lines, too.

"Of the 20 we've recruited, only four have scored under 700 on the boards. That's the key to it. You can find these people, but it's tough. Now it might be easier to look at the schedule and see teams like Penn State coming up and take the easier route but we're not going to do it."

The Pirates will return to work in August, and will open the 1985 season in Raleigh on September 7 against N.C. State. Their first home game is the following week against Southwest Texas State.

Bird's 30 Leads Boston Victory

By The Associated Press

Larry Bird capped a 30-point performance with a layup with two minutes remaining to give Boston the lead for good and the Celtics pulled out a 108-106 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers Saturday to take a 2-0 lead in their National Basketball Association playoff series.

In other playoff games Saturday afternoon, all during first-round best-of-five series, the Los Angeles Lakers took a 2-0 lead over Phoenix with a 147-130 romp over the Suns, and Portland evened its series with Dallas at one game each with a 124-121 overtime decision over the Mavericks.

In night action, San Antonio visited Denver for the second game of that series, with Denver leading 1-0.

Boston's victory was its second straight hard-fought decision over Cleveland. Boston can wrap up the series Tuesday night in Cleveland. In the first game Thursday night, the Celtics trailed 123-122 with 1:28 remaining before rallying for a 126-123 victory.

"I don't think being down 2-0 is a problem," said Cleveland Coach George Karl. "The problem is confidence. Where is the confidence to get over the hump? ... The thing that bothered me is we came up with two big efforts and still came up short."

Cleveland, which trailed by 11 points late in the third quarter, took a 102-101 lead over Boston on two free throws by World B. Free with 2:21 remaining.

Bird then got the ball underneath Boston's basket and, while being tightly guarded by several Cavaliers, made the go-ahead basket. Robert Parish, who had 18 points, then hit a short jumper with 1:22 to go to make the score 105-102.

Cleveland twice got within a point, but a basket and a free throw by Danny Ainge kept the Celtics on top. Cleveland had a final chance to tie but Free, who led the Cavs with 25 points, missed a 22-footer at the buzzer.

"My concern always goes to the next game, to try to win that," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "We won two games. That's all I'm concerned about."

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 24 points, 20 in the first half, as the Lakers, 28-point winners in the first game, again romped over Phoenix. Los Angeles could end the best-of-five series with a victory in Phoenix on Tuesday night.

Bob McAdoo added 22 points for Los Angeles, Byron Scott had 21 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 19 points and 12 assists.

Alvan Adams led the Suns with 23 points and Jay Humphries had 21.

Kiki Vandeweghe scored 27 points, including eight in overtime, to spark Portland. The third game of the series will be in Portland on Tuesday night.

Vandeweghe hit his last five shots and nailed two free throws with seven seconds to play to ice the game.

Dallas' Rolando Blackman, the hero of Thursday night's 139-131 double overtime victory with 43 points, scored 41 points on Saturday.

Cunningham will go with Julius Erving and Bobby Jones at forward, Moses Malone at center and Maurice Cheeks and Andrew Toney in the backcourt. That combination led the Sixers to a 104-97 victory in Game 1 of the series Wednesday.

Shue has to decide whether 6-foot-11 center Jeff Ruland, who has a strained right shoulder, is ready to start. Guard Jeff Malone, an average 18.9 scorer, is nursing a wrenched back.

If Malone doesn't play, Dudley Bradley, who had 10 points in game one, will be his likely replacement. Ruland, who missed 43 of the Bullets' last 44 games, played 31 minutes off the bench Wednesday and scored 20 points and collected 10 rebounds.

To take advantage of the 76ers' lack of height, Shue is toying with the idea of using a front line of 6-9 Cliff Robinson, 6-9 Charley Jones, and Ruland. They helped the Bullets to a 43-40 edge in rebounding.

In Detroit, Pistons forward Dan Roundfield wants a quick finish to the series with the New Jersey Nets. The Pistons easily beat the Nets Thursday night, 125-105.

"You want to win as quickly as you can," said Roundfield. "To win like this, playing so well, and not come back and win on Sunday would be a crime."

"Roundfield was the one guy I was concerned about," Nets Coach Stan Albeck said. "He's always tough in the playoffs."

The Jazz aren't expecting any more second-quarter gifts from the Rockets when the teams meet in game two.

Refuge Fire

The fire that recently burned 6,000 acres of the 12,000-acre Pungo National Wildlife Refuge in Hyde County will have a "relatively short-term effect on wildlife," according to Larry Ditto, refuge manager.

"The fire burned almost all of the cover for deer, rabbits and other animals. All of the food in some areas of the fire was eliminated. There will be stress on the burned area for some weeks, but there are already some green plants coming up," he said.

The fire, which started April 6, burned more than 95,000 acres in Hyde and other eastern North Carolina counties. It is contained now, but not officially out.

Rumors have been circulating that the fire began on Pungo Refuge, but Ditto said it definitely did not start there.

"I can't say precisely where the fire started. The Forest Service is handling the investigation and will decide the proper time to make the information public. I can say that an eyewitness said it began a half mile southeast of the refuge, but it did not begin on the refuge," he commented.

Judging from the number of animal carcasses found after the fire, Ditto said there was a "minimal" effect on wildlife living on the refuge.

"In all, we found 15 deer carcasses, one snake and two rabbits in a search done from a helicopter. As fast as the fire moved, the animals were pretty good at getting away," he said.

Many animals, he added, did not flee the refuge and those that did are moving back into the area.

"We had about 150 or 200 deer right after the fire standing in patches that didn't get burned. So the deer stayed in spite of the fire," he said.

Ditto also said the fire will probably be beneficial in the long run to most wildlife, especially the waterfowl that winter in the area.

"We are going to have more water control structures for a better job of keeping the refuge wet. This will create wetlands that are beneficial to waterfowl," he said.

Deer will suffer most from the fire because their food and cover were burned. Although many plants are already coming up, Ditto said it will be a "full year before things begin to look normal again."

"The fire burned off dead grasses and brush and set plant succession back. The land will start over with shrubs and other foods that are good for animals. No replanting will be done. Anytime there's a wildfire like that, seeds are laying around by the millions and the roots haven't been killed by the fire. Everything is ready to come up again," he commented.

Ditto said the cost of the fire for the refuge is hard to determine.

"No commercial resources were damaged. We will have to look at the cost to us for firefighting and the work the Forest Service did. We lost a few boundary signs and some roads were damaged," he said.

Ditto added "we will be mopping up the rest of the summer until real heavy rains come and stop the peat fires that are still burning. We are going to build a large fire break around the southeastern and northern boundaries of the refuge, where most of the fire problems are."

The last large wildfire on the refuge was in 1981. Ditto said there are still large areas (about 100 acres) that have not vegetated well since that one.

Mattamuskeet Fishing

He said fishing is slow because of dry weather and "the lake is lower than it's been in about four years."

Ditto said the low water has made boat travel difficult on the lake, as well as in some of the canals.

"Largemouth bass fishing is poor, but people are catching white perch and striped bass along Highway 94 (Causeway). Herring dipping is pretty slow. We had a one-week period about three weeks ago and people caught a few fish, but it's slowed down again," he commented.

Lopes Bests Marathon Mark

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — Olympic gold medalist Carlos Lopes of Portugal ran the world's fastest marathon Saturday in Rotterdam, shaving 54 seconds off the previous best time for the distance.

Lopes' clocking of 2 hours, 7 minutes, 11 seconds surpassed the 2:08:05 run by Steve Jones of Britain in the America's Marathon-Chicago on Oct. 21, 1984.

After winning the fifth running of the Rotterdam event, Lopes insisted he could have done better.

"If I'd had some companions in the second half of the race, I would have run two minutes faster," said Lopes, who won the gold medal at the Los Angeles Games in 2:09:21.

Helped by two Belgian runners, Vincent Rousseau and Luc Waegeman who protected him from strong wind gusts during the first half, Lopes found his rhythm early over the 26-mile, 385-yard course. There is no official record for the marathon since each course is different.

At the steady rate of 15 minutes for every three miles, Lopes relentlessly kept up the tempo, leaving the competition far behind.

Jos Hermens, an ex-marathon runner from the Netherlands who was the Belgians' coach, said the race was going "so incredibly fast, I was afraid they would collapse halfway through."

Alston, Scott Pace Rampants

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

WILSON — Van Alston ripped three hits and Gary Scott hurled a five-hitter to lead the Rose Rampants to an 11-3 victory over Wilson Hunt in Big East 4-A high school baseball Friday.

Doyle Kirkland added two hits including a three-run triple in the top of the seventh, and he scored when the relay throw from the shortstop went into the Hunt dugout.

Scott struck out seven and hit one batter en route to improving his record to 2-1 on the season.

"Gary Scott pitched another real good game for us, and Van Alston continues to hit well," Rose Coach Ronald Vincent said. "I thought (catcher) Mo Matthews did a really good job behind the plate. Doyle Kirdland played well offensively and defensively."

Kirkland jumped on Hunt starter Royce Goff for a leadoff single in the first. After Alston singled with one out, Steve Wall drove in Kirkland with a fielder's choice. Alston gave the Rampants a 2-0 lead when Ty Jones reached first on an error.

The Rampants rallied for three runs on four singles and three Hunt errors after two out in the third. A hard grounder by Alston drew Hunt shortstop John Caldwell wide to his right, but Caldwell misplayed the ball allowing Alston to take second. Wall followed with an RBI single and went to second on an error in left field.

Jones singled in Wall, who plowed through the catcher to prevent the final out and allowed Jones to take second. Robbie Ehrmann singled in Jones to put the Rampants in control 5-0.

Hunt's Jay Lassiter walked to open the bottom of the third, then went to second on a passed ball. Jeff Barnes singled in Lassiter, and Billy Farmer ripped an RBI single after two out to trim the margin to 5-2. Scott struck out Michael Little for the final out.

Jones went to second on a throwing error in the seventh, and Ehrmann followed with a base on balls. Pinch hitter Battle Emory singled in Jones, and Mike Maxon walked to load the bases after two out. Kirkland drove the ball deep to the gap in spacious Fleming Stadium and easily trotted to third, but the relay throw by Caldwell went to the dugout allowing the final Rampant run.

Barnes reached first on a fielder's choice in the bottom of the seventh, and Farmer singled him in after two outs to set the final margin.

Kirkland and Ehrmann finished with two hits each for the Rampants, while Barnes and Farmer had a pair for Hunt.

Rose, now 2-4 in the Big East and 8-6 overall, hosts Northeastern Tuesday in another league matchup.

Johnson Paces Chargers By North Pitt; Vikes Bow

LITTLEFIELD — Gene Johnson went 3-3 at the plate with a solo homer and struck out 11 on the mound as he hurled a five hitter to lead the Chargers past North Pitt 14-0 in Eastern Carolina 3-A high school baseball Friday.

Shannon Peede went 3-4 with a two-run homer, while Frank Mills and Curt Tucker each went 2-3.

"We hit the ball much the same as we did against Farmville (earlier in the season)," Ayden-Grifton Coach Chris Ross said. "We were able to put the pitching and hitting together again for one of the few times this year.

"Our pitching was much better; Gene did a good job of staying ahead. It was a big victory for us because it keeps us in second place in the conference.

The Chargers took control with seven runs in the bottom of the second. Johnson walked, and courtesy runner Jesse Hooker stole second. Tucker doubled in Hooker, and Tony McLawhorn ripped a two-run homer for a 3-0 lead. Ty Little and Mills singled, and Peede singled in both. Eddie Brown cracked a two-run homer as the Chargers had a 7-0 lead.

Ayden-Grifton plated five runs in the third, then added single runs in the fourth and fifth.

Ayden-Grifton, now 7-8 overall and 4-2 in the ECC, hosts SouthWest Edgecombe Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. North Pitt slipped to 1-4 in the conference.

KINSTON — North Lenoir ripped four homers in the third inning to pave the way for a 7-2 victory over the Vikings of D.H. Conley in Coastal 3-A baseball action Friday.

Randy Mills got Conley on the board first with a homer in the top of the second, but North Lenoir evened the score in the bottom of the frame.

Bobby Simmons opened the third with a homer for the Hawks, and Johnson followed with another slam. Robinson walked, and John Copeland launched a two-run homer for a 5-1 edge. Pitcher Steve Quinn closed the barrage with a solo blast.

Conley plated a run in the top of the fourth, but North Lenoir added another run to maintain the five-run spread.

Conley, now 12-4 overall and 0-3 in the Coastal Conference, hosts West Craven Tuesday.

PINETOPS — Greene Central High School spotted SouthWest Edgecombe a run, then came back with a 3-1 Eastern Carolina Conference baseball victory Friday.

Both of the hits came in the second inning when SouthWest got its only run. Ricky Walker tripled and scored on Graver Hall's single.

In the third, Greene Central came up with a pair of runs. Mike Griffin singled and Ervin Collins got a hit. Both were sacrificed up and scored on Ken Wade's hit.

The other Ram run came in the seventh. Jerome Flowers singled and scored on Collins' triple.

The Rams were led by Collins with two hits, the only player in the game with more than one.

Pinner Team Wins Golf

The team of Ron Pinner, Ellis Johnson, Mike Kraczon, Dell Godwin and Ken Smith captured first place in the Great Pirate Purple/Gold Pigskin Pig-Out Golf Tournament, held Friday at Brook Valley Country Club.

The team finished the Superball format tournament with a net of 59, 13 under par.

Several teams finished in a tie for third place at 10 under, with awards going to two of them, as determined by scorecard comparision. Taking third was Joey Noble, Roy Thompson, Darrell Harrison and Bob Curry. The fourth place team was Boog Powell, Edwin Clark, Bill Reynolds, Tildon Brittle and David Lee Williams.

The award for the highest score went to Joe Dilday, Elwood Jones, Al Pridgen and Barbour Strickland.

Closest to the pin on the fifth hole was Harrison, while Danny Murphy won the award for the closest on the 12th hole. The longest drive, on 17, went to David Kinsey, while the shortest drive on the fourth hole, went to Ken Matous.

A total of 21 teams competed in the tournament, which is planned as an annual event as part of the Great Pirate Purple/Gold Pigskin Pig-Out Party which surrounds the annual Purple-Gold spring football game at East Carolina University.

Conley Girls In First Loop Loss

WHEAT SWAMP — North Lenoir played defense when it had to and handed D.H. Conley's girls their first Coastal Conference softball loss Friday, 7-2.

The Valkyries left the bases loaded three times during the game before finally scoring single runs in the sixth and seventh innings.

But the damage had already been done. The Lady Hawks scored twice in the first inning and added two more in the third. They scored once in the fifth and twice in the sixth to close out the scoring.

Kim Jones and Lisa Tripp each had three hits for North Lenoir while Pam Harnson, Becky Cobb and Lisa Jones each added two.

Karla McLawhorn and Anita Lloyd each collected three hits for the Conley girls. Darby and Miriam Fulford each had two, as did Trellaney Boyd and Lisa Mills.

Conley, now 2-1 in league play and 9-6 overall, plays host to West Craven on Tuesday.

SNOW HILL — Greene Central's girls' softball team completed its first swing through the Eastern Carolina Conference Friday with an 8-3 win over SouthWest Edgecombe.

Dalen Herring tossed a two-hitter at SouthWest and held them scoreless until the final inning of play.

Greene Central scored twice in the second inning and added a third in the third. Two more crossed in the fourth and three in the fifth. Denise Warren hit a two-run homer in the fifth.

Trenette Daniels led the Greene Central hitting with three, while Antionette Wilkes and Renee Sullivan each had two. No one had more than one for SouthWest.

The Lady Rams return to action on Tuesday, traveling to Farmville Central.

Witherspoon reached first on an error, and Myra Moore and Sabrina Baker singled to load the bases in the top of the third. Harrington grounded into a fielder's choice to plate Witherspoon, and Bobbie Purvis lofted a sacrifice fly to drive in Moore.

Ayden-Grifton responded with a run in the bottom of the frame, but North Pitt added two more in the fifth to put the game out of reach.

Royals Enjoy Visit To Tiger Stadium

By The Associated Press

Everyone in baseball knows that Tiger Stadium in Detroit is a good park for home run hitters.

Unfortunately for the Tigers, it was the opposition that took advantage of the cozy dimensions Friday night.

"You know, anytime you hit a ball to right field in this ballpark (where the fence is only 325 feet down the line), you expect something to happen," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said after watching his Royals slug five home runs — including two by George Brett -- in a 9-2 victory over the Tigers.

"I know on the second ball George hit, everybody on our bench stood up," Howser added. "They expected it to go in and they wanted to see it."

Coming into the game, the Royals had hit only three homers all season and their five tied a club record set on two other occasions.It was the second successive defeat for the Tigers, who won their first six games.

In other American League games, Chicago beat Boston 8-1; Texas turned back Milwaukee 4-1; Toronto stopped Baltimore 6-5; Cleveland nipped New York 2-1; Oakland tripped Minnesota 4-2 and California crushed Seattle 9-1.

"I'm very comfortable here, this is a good hitter's ballpark," Brett said. "I really wish Kansas City would redecorate their ballpark and make it like Tiger Stadium. It has a ot of character. There's a lot of nostalgia and I like to play here."

In the two innings he worked, Dan Petry — who had beaten the Royals just last Sunday — was tagged for six hits. He gave up five runs, walking one and striking out three.

"I had good stuff," Petry said. "They hit my pitch in the first inning. In the second inning, I made a couple of mistakes. After that, I think (Manager) Sparky (Anderson) had seen enough."

Bret Saberhagen, who was 3-1 against the Tigers last year, improved his record to 1-1 for the season — all against Detroit. He pitched 6 1-3 innings — the shortest stint by a Kansas City pitcher this year — and didn't allow a walk while striking out two.

White Sox 8, Red Sox 1

Carlton Fisk and Luis Salazar cracked two-run homers and Rudy Law and Harold Baines hit solo shots to lead Chicago to a home-opening victory over Boston behind Britt Burns' six-hitter.

Burns, 2-0, walked one and struck out seven in his first complete game since last May. Mike Trujillo, 0-1, was the loser.

Back in 1981, his first season with the White Sox, Fisk hit a dramatic three-run homer in the eighth inning of the season opener to defeat Boston.He has since hit 15 homers against the Red Sox, including his two-run shot in the first inning to stake Burns to a 3-0 lead following Law's homer.

Rangers 4, Brewers 1

Toby Harrah singled three times and drove in the winning run to back the combined five-hit pitching of Dave Rozema and Dave Stewart in leading Texas over Milwaukee.

The Rangers snapped a 1-1 tie in the eighth inning against reliever and loser Ray Searage, 0-1, as Harrah's base hit knocked in the go-ahead run. Gary Ward followed with an RBI single to score Wilkerson, and Harrah came home on an infield single by Buddy Bell.

Rozema recorded his first win against two losses by scattering four hits over seven innings. Stewart earned his first save, holding the Brewers to one hit over the last two innings.

Blue Jays 6, Orioles 5

Jesse Barfield's three-run homer capped a four-run sixth inning and powered Toronto to a come-from-behind victory over Baltimore.

The four-run rally wiped out a 4-1 Baltimore lead, then Ernie Whitt's RBI single in the eighth provided the Blue Jays with their eventual winning run. That offset a pinch home run by Baltimore's Larry Sheets in the ninth, his second.

Rookie Fritz Connally's grand slam homer in the fifth inning had provided the Orioles with a 4-0 lead before the Blue Jays started their comeback.

"With two out, I was just looking for something to drive and I got a pitch that was up," said Barfield of his homer off reliever Sammy Stewart. It was Barfield's third homer of the season.

Indians 2, Yankees 1

Julio Franco hit a two-run homer in the first inning, and Neal Heaton and Tom Waddell made it stand up in Cleveland's victory over New York, ending the Yankees' four-game winning streak.

Heaton, 1-0, scattered eight hi's in 7 1-3 innings, walked one and struck out one for the Indians, who have won three of their last four games after losing both games of a two-game weekend series to the Yankees. Waddell gave up a two-out double to Butch Wynegar in the Yankee ninth, but got rookie Scott Bradley to line out to first to end the game.

"Franco is a great hitter," Heaton said, "and right now, he's hot. He usually starts slow, so if he finishes the way he usually does, he'll hit .350, .360 easy."

A's 4, Twins 2

Dwayne Murphy and Mike Heath hit home runs in the fourth inning to erase a Minnesota lead, and Oakland went on to beat the Twins behind the combined four-hit pitching of Chris Codiroli and Jay Howell.

The A's won their fifth straight game, matching their best streak of last season. The Twins suffered an eighth consecutive defeat, with pitcher Frank Viola taking the loss on his 25th birthday despite pitching a complete-game six-hitter.

Murphy Remains Hot Against Astros

By The Associated Press

Presumably, Dale Murphy won't continue his current pace and finish the season with a .486 average, 108 homers and 324 runs batted in, but Houston Manager Bob Lillis might be hard to convince.

"He likes to see us come to town," Lillis said after Murphy hit his sixth homer and knocked in four runs, giving him 18 in nine games, as the Braves beat the Astros 9-5 Friday night. "He's a nice guy, but he's not very nice to us."

Murphy, who had 10 homers and 24 RBI against the Astros in 1984, has 17 hits in 35 at-bats for the season.

"He's in a class by himself," said Rick Mahler, who benefited from Atlanta's 15-hit attack to register his third victory without a loss. "His statistics in nine games are like in Little League or high school. You just don't see guys doing that in the major leagues."

Murphy said he has no idea why he's hitting the ball so well.

"I just don't know," he said. "You sometimes don't have an explanation when you don't hit, either. Sometimes it's just a minor thing, but if you knew why you hit or didn't hit, you'd be able to hit all the time."

In other NL games, Montreal tripped Chicago 5-3, St. Louis edged Pittsburgh 5-4, Cincinnati defeated San Francisco 4-2, New York blanked Philadelphia 1-0 and San Diego routed Los Angeles 11-2.

Murphy hit a run-scoring double in the fifth inning and a three-run homer in the sixth. He said he didn't hit the home run ball well, although it went over the center field fence at the 402-foot mark.

"That ball was not a home run in other parks," he said. "It just carried good here. I didn't think it was out when I hit it."

Mahler, who allowed four runs and eight hits in eight innings, also was helped by Rick Cerone's two-run homer and a solo shot by Rafael Ramirez. Cerone now has 11 hits in his last 15 at-bats.

The Braves took control of the game early, with Cerone hitting his second homer of the year in the second and Ramirez starting a three-run rally with his solo shot in the fifth. Atlanta added the other two runs on RBI doubles by Murphy and Bob Horner.

Houston starter Nolan Ryan, who won his first two decisions, was bombed for 10 hits before leaving in the fifth trailing 6-1.

"Nolan just didn't have his good stuff tonight," Lillis said. "You've got to give them credit, though. They swung the bat pretty good."

Another bright spot for the Braves was the hitting of oft-injured Bob Horner, who had two doubles and a single.

"It was satisfying to come out and swing the bat like we did," Horner said. "We were just on tonight, and Nolan wasn't as sharp as he usually is."

Mets 1, Phillies 0

New York's Dwight Gooden extended his scoreless-innings streak to 17 with eight innings of three-hit pitching, and Keith Hernandez broke a 0-0 tie with Philadelphia with a two-out bloop single in the ninth inning.

Pinch-hitter Wally Backman opened the ninth with a single off reliever Charlie Hudson, 0-1, and took second on a sacrifice by Mookie Wilson. One out later, Hernandez lifted a single into short right field to bring home the only run of the game.

Gooden, 2-0, who shut out Cincinnati on four hits in his previous outing, struck out seven and walked one. Left-hander Steve Carlton started for the Phillies and gave up only two hits in seven innings. Rusty Staub pinch hit in the ninth inning for New York, marking his 2,900 major-league game.

Expos 5, Cubs 3

Pinch-hitter Jim Wohlford's three-run homer in the sixth inning helped Montreal hand Chicago right-hander Rick Sutcliffe his first regular-season loss since last June 29.

Sutcliffe, who had won 16 straight decisions, led 3-1 after Ron Cey's two-run homer in the top of the sixth.

But singles by Vance Law and Mike Fitzgerald and a run-scoring double by Tim Raines chased Sutcliffe, who was relieved by Ray Fontenot. Wohlford hit the second pitch over the left field fence and the Expos went on to end the Cubs' five-game winning streak.

Reds 4, Giants 2

Eric Davis tripled to trigger a two-run Cincinnati first inning and singled home the go-ahead run in the fourth as the Reds beat San Francisco for their fifth consecutive victory.

The Reds, who have won 14 of their last 16 home games against San Francisco, fell behind 1-0 in the first on Jeff Leonard's RBI double. But Davis' triple and a groundout by Pete Rose tied the score and consecutive doubles by Cesar Cedeno and Nick Esasky put Cincinnati ahead 2-1 later in the inning.

Manny Trillo's single tied the game in the third for the Giants, but Cincinnati regained the lead in the fourth as Ron Oester singled, took second on a sacrifice and scored on Davis' single.

Cardinals 5, Pirates 4

Vince Coleman, playing in only his second major-league game, had four hits and knocked in two runs, including a two-out triple in the eighth inning that snapped a 4-4 tie.

Waltrip Takes Role Of Northwestern Favorite

NORTH WILKESBORO (AP) — Eight-time North Wilkesboro winner Darrell Waltrip has established himself as the favorite for Sunday's Northwestern Bank 400 NASCAR race, grabbing the pole during first-day qualifying.

"We were getting desperate in practice," Waltrip said. "The hotter it got, the more we changed things on the car and the slower we got. This is the car we raced at Bristol, and the set-up was changed for this track. We decided to go back to the Bristol set-up, and it was perfect."

Driving a Chevrolet on the 5/8-mile banked asphalt track, Waltrip turned in a best lap of 111.707 mph on Friday to edge Kyle Petty's 111.419. Petty finished with the highest first-day qualifying speed of his career.

In a qualifying system unique to the Winston Cup series, the first eight starting berths in the 30-car field are decided by the two-day trial averages. But the fastest eight times Friday are guaranteed the first eight starting positions in the 400-lap race regardless of how they run in qualifying today. Today's times will determine which of the eight positions the drivers will hold.

Waltrip, of Franklin, Tenn., established himself as the favorite is an eight-time North Wilkesboro winner and has won six of the past seven Grand National events at the North Wilkesboro Speedway.

Bill Elliott, winner of three of the first six races this season, finished with a speed of 110.359 mph Friday and did not make the top eight.

The following are Friday's first-day qualifying speeds for the Northwestern Bank 400 NASCAR race at the North Wilkesboro Speedway. The top eight qualifiers Friday are guaranteed the top eight postions for Sunday's race. However, the order of the eight may be changed after Saturday's qualifying. All times in mph.

Business Notes

Roundtable Honor

Johnny W. Spencer Jr., area agent for Fidelity Union Life Insurance Co., recently qualified for his 16th consecutive year of "Million Dollar Roundtable" participation.

Roundtable qualification makes Spencer a member of the table's honor roll, which requires that members meet production guidelines for 15 years or more.

"Million Dollar Roundtable" members represent about 44 nations and territories, over 400 life insurance companies, and about 3 percent of the world's life insurance sales force.

Sales Council

R. Sidney Harris of Winterville was recently named a member of Northrup King Company's 1984 "Honorary Sales Council," which involves company salesmen who achieve significant sales increases, Northrup King said.

Harris and his wife, Frances, were cited by company executives at recent HSC recognition ceremonies in Kauai, Hawaii, where 50 territory sales managers and their spouses toured the company's Hawaiian Research Center.

Harris has been appointed to two previous sales councils from his territory in southeastern North Carolina.

PNB Board Member

Don J. Edwards has been elected to Planters Bank's Greenville board of managers, according to James B. Powers, chairman and chief executive officer, and Ray J. Boleman Jr., senior vice president and regional executive.

Edwards is managing officer and vice president/secretary for the University Book Exchange Inc. in Greenville.

A Greenville native, Edwards is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill with a bachelor's degree in business administration. He and his wife, Judy, have two children and are members of St. James United Methodist Church.

Planters Bank, a wholly-owned subsidiary of the Planters Corp., has 51 offices in 19 North Carolina cities.

DON J. EDWARDS

Training Session

Cathy Jessen of Greenville, an independent color consultant for Beauty For All Seasons, recently attended a color analysis training session held in Raleigh by her parent company.

The session involved updates on skin care and make-up, new draping techniques for men and women, and wardrobe planning.

Ms. Jessen received her bachelor's degree in art education from East Carolina University and has had 12 years experience in managing paint and wallcovering stores. She has taught pottery at Pitt Community College for 11 years.

Branch Manager

Edwin J. Brett has joined Planters Bank as branch manager of the Greenville Boulevard office and assistant vice president, according to J. Richard Futrell Jr., president, and Ray J. Boleman Jr., senior vice president and area executive.

A Murfreesboro native, Brett received a bachelor's degree in social work in 1976 from East Carolina University. He attended the North Carolina School of Banking at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, completing the mid management program in 1980, and the advanced management segment in 1983.

Brett and his wife, the former Sherryl Pinkston of Greenville, have two sons.

Earnings Increase

Robert R. Mauldin, president and chief executive officer of Peoples Bancorporation, has announced that first quarter 1985 earnings of $1.641 million were up 21.2 percent over $1.354 million recorded a year earlier.

Mauldin said total deposits were $576.250 million on March 31, up 15.2 percent from $500.174 million in 1984. At the end of the first quarter, assets totaled $647.273 million, up 7.5 percent from $600.126 million the previous year.

Loans on March 31 were $439.080 million, up 9.7 percent from $400.106 million recorded a year earlier.

Marketing Manager

Preston L. Fields Jr., sales supervisor with Carolina Telephone in Tarboro, has been promoted to marketing manager with responsibility for planning, developing and managing business products and services for the company.

A Greenville native, Fields received his bachelor's degree in business education in 1960 from East Carolina University and joined Carolina Telephone that year as directory salesman in Greenville. He has held posts in Henderson, Dunn and Kinston, in addition to his duties in Tarboro.

Fields is married to the former Ruth Jordan of Greenville and they have two children. The family resides in Greenville.

Purchase Agreement

Rocky Mount Undergarment Co. Inc. announced that it has concluded an agreement to purchase and assume a lease for a 60,000-square-foot manufacturing facility in Robersonville formerly occupied by Melville Corp.

The company said the Robersonville facility, together with another 20,000-square-foot plant in Rocky Mount, will boost total production capacity by about 25 percent.

The company, which manufactures and markets basic and fashion underwear for men, women and children, currently operates six manufacturing plants in North Carolina employing about 1,000 people.

Gains Reported

First Citizens Corp. has reported net earnings of $6,066,414 for the quarter ended March 31, up 17.8 percent from $5,148,002 earned a year earlier.

Lewis R. Holding, chairman, said the rise in quarterly earnings was due to increases in net interest income due to higher loan levels and an improved interest margin.

First Citizens Bank, the subsidiary of First Citizens Corp., has 276 offices in 130 North Carolina towns.

Net Income Up

NCNB Corp. has reported net income of $32.7 million for the first quarter of 1985, up 16 percent over $28.3 million earned in the first quarter of 1984.

Results for the 1984 period included a $4.8 million after-tax gain on the sale of equity securities held by NCNB as investments. Excluding the nonrrecurring gain, NCNB's net income for the quarter rose 40 percent over the 1984 period.

Average shares outstanding in the first quarter increased 16 percent from the comparable 1984 period. High McColl, chairman, said the increase was due to the issuance of four million shares as part of the acquisition of Ellis Banking Corp. last March.

NBS Seminar

The purpose of the seminar was to provide information about dinnerware and flatware, creativity in table settings and trends in wedding protocol.

National Bridal Services offers management services and training of bridal consultants to over 850 retail firms throughout the United States.

Session Scheduled

Jim Brown from the continuing education division at Pitt Community College has announced that Jim Bengala of IDS/American Express will conduct a "Business Financial Planning" seminar Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the White Building, PCC.

W-D Sales Rose

Winn-Dixie Stores Inc. has reported that sales for the 12 weeks ended April 3 totaled $1,847,617,000, up $120,245,000 or 7 percent over the 1984 period. For the 40 weeks ended April 3, sales totaled $5,928,323,000, up 6.2 percent from $348,682,000.

Net earnings for the 12 weeks were $28,258,000 compared with $29,577,000 last year. For the 40 weeks net earnings were $77,822,000 as compared with $83,990,000 a year earlier.

Winn-Dixie had 1,264 stores in operation on April 3, up from 1,225 last year.

Record Earnings

First Union Corp. reported that it earned $23.6 million in first quarter net income, the highest quarterly earnings in the corporation's history. The figure represented a 30 percent increase from the $18.1 million earned a year earlier.

Edward E. Crutchfield Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said growth in loans and deposits, combined with a larger, higher-yielding investment portfolio, accounted for most of the earnings increase.

The corporation had $7.9 billion in assets on March 31.

Cash Dividend

The board of directors of the Planters Corp. declared a quarterly cash dividend of 24 cents per share payable June 15 to shareholders of record May 31.

The dividend represents a 14.3 percent increase over the 21 cents per share dividend paid in the second quarter of 1984.

Report Cites Fatal Accidents By Trucks

WASHINGTON (AP) — Interstate trucks are involved in twice as many fatal accidents per mile traveled as automobiles and often operate with defective brakes or other equipment, the Knight-Ridder Newspapers reported in Sunday's editions.

The report culminated a four-month investigation based on numerous interviews with government and industry experts as well as detailed computer analyses of tens of thousands of government truck safety reports.

Government officials were quoted in the report as saying the federal Bureau of Motor Carrier Safety is unable to enforce federal safety regulations on an industry that has a million trucks and 210,000 companies.

The bureau, with a budget of $14 million, has 130 field inspectors.

Cattle, Pork Prices Rise

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Cattle and frozen pork belly prices were mostly higher and live hogs were mostly lower in quiet trading Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Cattle prices were supported by a slightly better tone on wholesale markets in Texas, said Robert Saathoff, vice president for commodity research in New York with Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Some of the buying came from traders who had sold contracts earlier in the week and were closing out positions prior to the weekend and prior to the release Monday of a government report on the number of cattle in feed lots, Saathoff said.

Hog prices were under pressure despite strength on wholesale cash markets. Saathoff said traders were anticipating lower wholesale prices on Monday.

Live cattle settled .05 cent lower to .60 cent higher with the contract for delivery in April at 60.57 cents a pound; feeder cattle were .15 cent lower to .50 cent higher with April at 65.25 cents a pound; live hogs were .83 cent lower to .15 cent higher with April at 42.62 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .05 cent to .27 cent higher with May at 65.27 cents a pound.

Grain futures prices were mostly higher and soybeans were mixed on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Corn prices were supported by reports that large amounts of corn were being shipped by exporters, tightening the amount of deliverable supplies. Further, concern that dry conditions in the Midwest might cause delays in planting supported corn contracts for delivery in the fall, said Bob Lekberg, a grain analyst in Chicago with Shearson Lehman Bros.

An unconfirmed rumor that the Soviet Union will buy additional corn also encouraged buyers, sources said.

Soybeans for delivery in the next few months were supported by a report that Brazil lifted a control on the price of its soybeans, Lekberg said.

Wheat settled ¼ cent lower to 3¾ cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $3.56 a bushel; corn was ½ cent to 2¼ cents higher with May at $2.85¾ a bushel; oats were unchanged to ¾ cent higher with May at $1.68¼ a bushel; and soybeans were 1¼ cents lower to 1¾ cents higher with May at $5.97½ a bushel.

Gold settled 50 cents to $2.60 higher with the contract for delivery in April at $328.50 a troy ounce; silver settled 2.5 cents to 4.1 cents higher with April at $6.463 a troy ounce.

Petroleum futures were higher on the New York Mercantile Exchange, primarily on concern that supplies of heating oil and crude oil available for delivery in the next few weeks are tight.

Crude oil settled unchanged to 29 cents higher with the contract for delivery in May at $29.31 a barrel; heating oil settled .50 cent to 1.11 cents higher with May at 75.74 cents a pound.

International 'Seed War' Is A Nasty Squabble

By BORIS WEINTRAUB
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — Because none of the major food crops is native to the United States, American plant scientists are forced to import seeds from the parts of the world where those crops originated.

The result is a nasty international squabble that some have called "Seed Wars." The developed world stands accused of "stealing the native heritage" of developing nations, which in turn are accused of not helping to breed new crop varieties.

Most crops originated in the Third World, where farmers grew them for centuries on a subsistence basis. But in recent years, breeders have taken the germplasm — the genes that determine a plant's characteristics — and developed new varieties that have vastly increased productivity. This was the basis for the "Green Revolution" of the 1960s.

One effect of this development was that for the first time, Third-World farmers had a surplus to sell for profit. This became important as populations in such nations continued to grow and to become more urbanized.

Most experts now agree that the new practice had not only benefits, but also unexpectedly undesirable results. In many places, the use of new hybrids meant that the genetic diverstiy provided by traditonal varieties was lost — a serious problem if an older variety had a resistance to a disease or pest that the modern variety lacked.

In addition, burgeoning, increasingly urban populations led local officials to build housing and new cities in what had been rural areas or rain forests. Once more, this led to the inadvertent loss of wild varieties of crop plants, with their invaluable genetic diverstiy.

The more vehement critics of these developments are led by a Canadian author, Pat Roy Mooney, and representatives of several Third-World nations. They charge that seed companies in developed countries are taking native germplasm out of developing nations, breeding new varieties, and selling them at a profit to farmers of underdeveloped countries while destroying their heritage of traditional varieties.

At the very least, critics say, the International Board for Plant Genetic Resources, operated by the United Nations Food and Agricultural organization, should make all seed available to Third-World farmers at no cost.

Both seed-company leaders and officials of the U.S. National Germplasm System scoff at the criticism and advice. They say that no seed company would undertake the long, costly effort of developing new varieties if it couldn't make a profit.

In some cases, Third-World countries have refused to give foreigners seed that could have helped them recover from crop disasters caused by pests of diseases.

"Our philosophy and our policy is that plant germplasm is a heritage of all mankind and should be freely exchanged and used," says Quentin N. Jones, the U.S. Agriculture Department's national coordinator for germplasm.

"Seed collectors collect only a very small sample, and we always have local botanists or breeders with our people in the field," says Jones, a collector himself. "The collecton is always split right down the middle with the local people."

Jones finds it ironic that Ethiopia refused to let collectors have seeds for a native variety of coffee tree to help fight a tree blight in Central America last year.

"I've had Ethiopian government people right here in my office asking for germplasm from Ethiopia that no longer is available there," he recalls. "We said, 'Sure,' and we gave it to them. So it's been repatriated, in a sense. If we hadn't collected it, it wouldn't be available at all."

TESTS SEED SAMPLES . . . Technologist Michael Diderickson plants test samples of new seed arrivals in the germination room of the National Seed Storage Laboratory, as Mary Ramirez (center) and Laura Brewer examine seedlings. Once all of a plant's genetic characteristics are known and recorded, its seeds are placed in long-term storage, for use only in emergencies. But samples are planted every few years to assure that they are capable of germination. (National Geographic Society Photograph by Paul Chesley)

More Cities Discovering Riches In Recycled Castaways

By LAURA BOHOR
National Geographic News Service

WASHINGTON — When a mandatory recycling law took effect in Groton, Conn., "there was a lot of controversy, a lot of opposition at first, basically because citizens were scared of the cost to themselves," says Walter Blanker, the city's public works director.

Since March 1982, Groton householders have been required to separate their glass, cans, newspapers, and magazines from the rest of their garbage. Failure to comply can mean a ticket and a fine.

The new law has won widespread acceptance, partly because of the "apple-pie aspects" of recycling, Blanker says. "Most people realize that it's not difficult, it can't hurt, it's a good thing to do."

Mandatory recycling is just one approach taken by communities wrestling with solid-waste management at a time when environmental concerns and shrinking open space have created a demand for disposal alternatives.

In the past few years, recycling has entered the economic mainstream. Hundreds of American towns and cities now have recycling programs of some kind.

"There's no question that recycling is increasing," says Jim McMann of Fibers International, a Seattle company that sells recycled materials to manufacturers. "Ten years ago I felt like we were fighting a never-ending battle, and now it's a legitimate business. Recycling is here to stay, and it's definitely growing."

Of 18.6 million tons of waste paper collected in 1983, 3.4 million tons were newsprint, and a million tons went back into newsprint. At least five major newspapers now use such recycled paper.

Recycled materials are finding their way into increasing numbers of products, from tissues and paperboard to housing insulation, roofing materials, roadbeds, and car upholstery. Forty to 50 pounds of recycled paper are used in every new car manufactured, according to the American Paper Institute.

But recycling laws aren't written overnight. In Groton, for example, it took 10 years for a high-school recycling project to evolve first into a voluntary city program and finally into the present mandatory ordinance.

Economic necessity, not good intentions alone, prompted the city ordinance. Without it, officials learned, Groton's sanitary landfill would have overflowed within 15 years. Recyclable materials make up 10 percent of the waste going to the landfill, they estimated.

"The bottom line is that instead of a voluntary 2 percent reduction, we now have about a 16 percent reduction in the waste stream, and a cost avoidance of about $2 million in 1983," Blanker says.

Recycling around the country has had its ups and downs. The biggest problem has been inconsistency in recycling habits and in the market for recycled materials.

Voluntary programs, in particular, depend on good memories as well as good will to maintain a steady supply of materials to be sold. When delivery schedules lapse, manufacturers may take their contracts to more dependable sources in other communities.

From the communities' standpoint, however, when prices for recyclable waste sink — as paper prices did in the mid-1970s — recycling programs sometimes are no longer affordable. And once broken, the recycling habit can be hard to restore.

Although only one in four of the nation's recycling programs is mandatory, each is defined by a community's specific needs and markets. Whether the programs are run by local governments, contractors, or charities, their popularity, and their successes or failures, have paved the way for state involvement in recycling.

The Oregon Legislature, a trendsetter in passing recycling bills, recently enacted the Opportunity to Recycle Act, scheduled to take effect in 1986. The law requires that every Oregon community of 4,000 or more provide its citizens who have garbage service the opportunity to recycle through curbside collections. For those who haul their own refuse, landfills must offer recycling facilities.

"Recycling was initially motivated by environmental reasons," says Elaine Glendening of the Oregon Department of Environmental Quality, "but legislative support has come primarily from the growing awareness of the difficulty in finding landfill space and secondarily from the creation of jobs through the recycling industry."

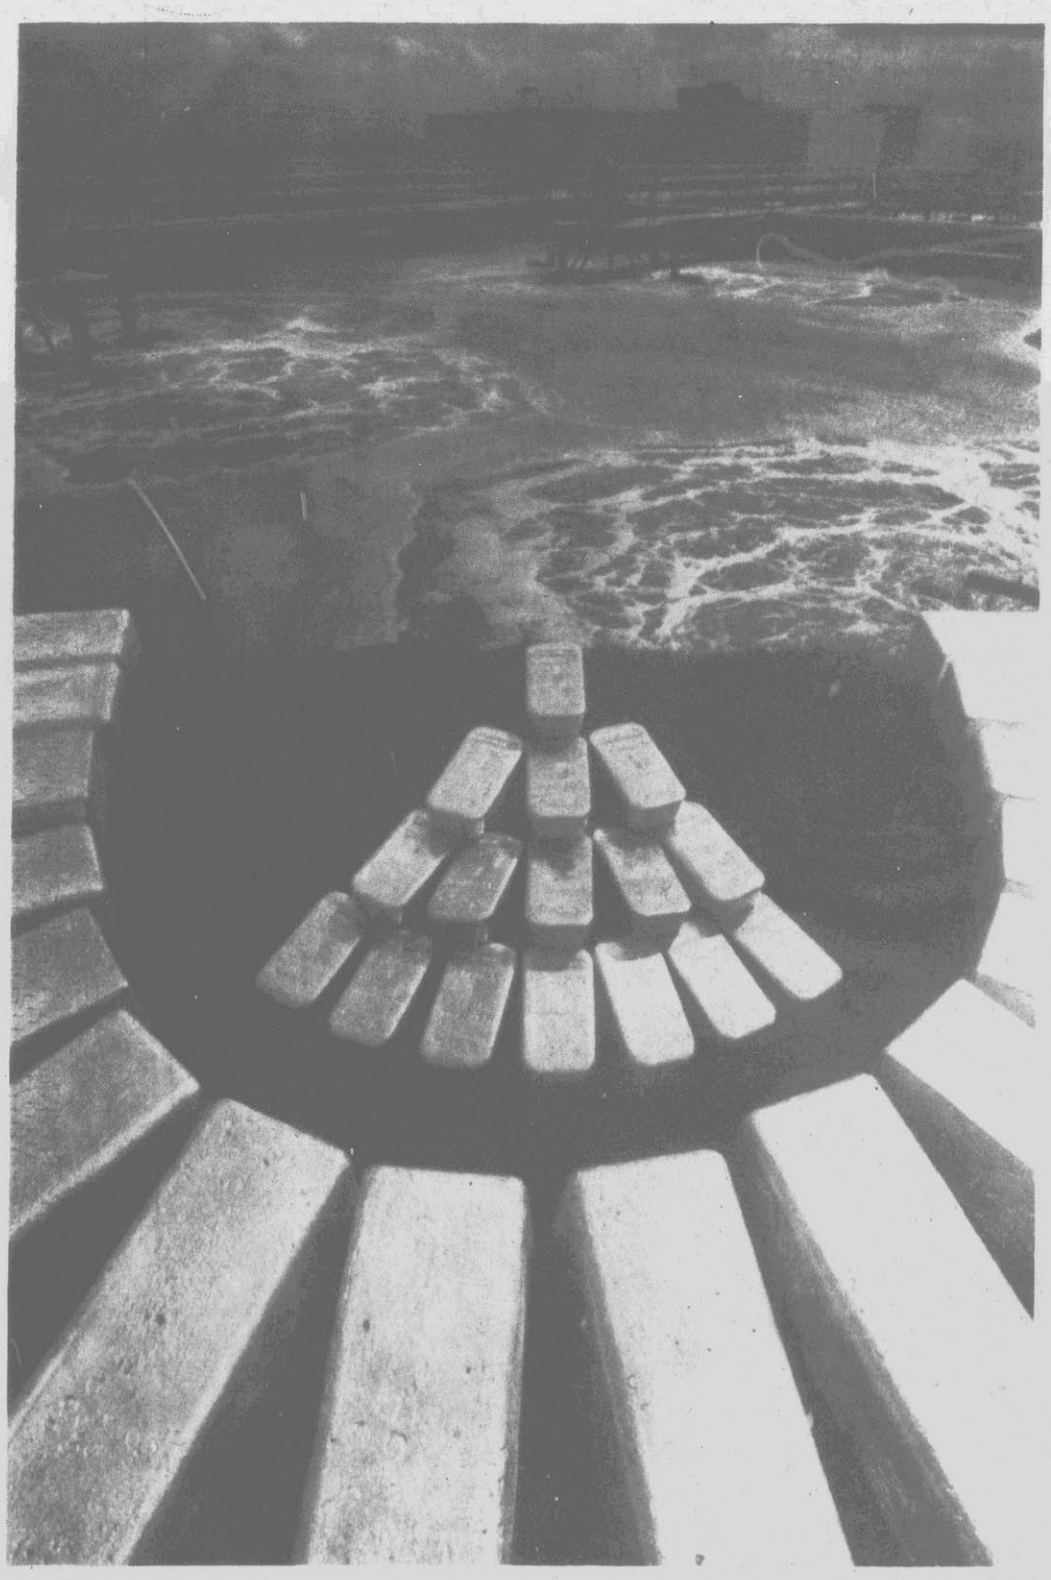
In New Jersey, a 1982 law levies a surcharge on every ton of landfilled waste and redistributes the proceeds to communities that have recycling programs. Almost half the annual fund — $3.4 million in 1983 — is granted to communities on the basis of the amount of recyclables they collect. The other half goes for planning, research, and equipment grants.

"Our basic philosophy is to reduce dependency on limited landfill space and to divert material for economically productive uses," says Roger Gutentag of the New Jersey Office of Recycling. "Landfill should be the option of last resort."

New Jersey's economic incentives have nourished both recycling rates and local industries. The number of community recycling programs in the state has doubled in the past four years, and mandatory programs have tripled.

The Institute of Local Self Reliance, a nonprofit organization in Washington, D.C., is working to set up multi-material recycling programs in about a dozen cities, including New York, Philadelphia, and Newark. Avoiding disposal costs, sometimes as high as $100 a ton, has provided inspiration.

"No city recycles to make profits, they recycle to reduce costs," says the institute's Neil Seldman. "Cities are being forced to take steps."



RECYCLING RICHES . . . In an example of recycling at its richest, a Palo Alto, Calif. electronics plant yielded $1 million worth of precious-metals waste — a nine-year residue — here represented by its equivalent in gold and silver bars. Less lucrative recyling of house[illegible]sh has become a common practice throughout [illegible]ca. (National Geographic Photograph by Louie Psilhoyos)

Another Instance Of Faking A Unicorn

By ROGERS WHITENER
English Department
ASU, Boone

Old Phineas Taylor Barnum must be chortling in his grave these days: Suckers, indeed, continue to be born every minute.

Barnum's worthy successor at Ringling Brothers has apparently convinced a lot of people — suckers or not — that the circus has come up with a contemporary unicorn, not exactly in the original pattern but at least sporting a single horn in the middle of its forehead.

Oh, there are detractors, of course, but even the Doubting Thomases have plunked down their coin to see what appears to be little more than a white goat with a single horn instead of the conventional pair.

Even grade school children know that the mythical unicorn was supposed to have the body of a horse (white), the hind legs of an antelope, the tail of a lion, a red head, and blue eyes, to say nothing of a single forehead spike from 27 to 36 inches long.

The horn itself, according to classical description, had a white base, a black center, and a red tip, though some authorities say the red tip is sported only by the female.

True believers claim the unicorn may be related to the rhinoceros. Mythical or real, the animal has been associated with many parts of the world, including France, China, Africa, and India.

According to authorities, the medieval church ascribed many characteristics to the unicorn. It was considered a symbol of chastity and fierceness, but because it would inherit the earth it was very meek.

Gentle at mating time, it thus symbolized virginity and the power of love. Medieval ecclesiastical art, including tapestries, often associated the unicorn with the innocence of the lamb and the dove. In heraldry, the animal is associated with James I and the British Crown.

Of the various stories circulating about the unicorn, one accounts for its absence from the world of living animals by the fact that it was thrown from the ark and was drowned.

Another tale has the elusive animal captured by a trickster, who causes the unicorn to charge into a tree, sticking his horn so deep into the trunk that he can not extricate it. Undoubtedly this led to its being tamed by a virgin.

Interesting enough is the early belief that the tip of the unicorn's horn could be used to detect poison in foods. Thus medieval kings, pontiffs, and popes supposedly kept one at hand to thwart their enemies through early detection of the presence of all poisons.

Fake unicorns have apparently appeared from time to time throughout history. Dr. Franklin Dove, a biologist at the University of Main, noted in 1936 that transplantation was known as far back as the time of Pliny, indicating that the substitution of a single horn for a pair would have been possible.

He also reported a successful operation himself of the horn buds of a one-day-old Ayrshire calf, producing a single spike of considerable prying strength.

Wedding Vows Performed On Saturday Afternoon

The wedding ceremony of Lisa Ann Wright and Robert Martin Burns was solemnized Saturday afternoon at two o'clock in Immanuel Baptist Church. The double ring ceremony was conducted by the Rev. Weyland S. Burns.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wright of Greenville and the Rev. and Mrs. Burns of Kannapolis.

For the double ring ceremony, the bride was given in marriage by her parents and escorted by her father. Pattie Williams of Greenville was the honor attendant. Cindy Keil, Ilana Mallenbaum and Kim Shinn, all of Greenville, and Dawn Moore of Alexandria, Va., were bridesmaids. Bethany Hunter of Beulaville was flower girl and the ring bearer was Michael Haynes of Raleigh.

The best man was the brother of the bridegroom, Dale Burns of Greenville. Ushers included Danny Holland and Dan Jones of Greenville, Howard Narron of Kenly and Carl Snare of Charlotte.

Katharine M. White of Greenville was organist and Carl Snare of Charlotte played a song on the piano which he composed for the bridal couple. He is lead singer of Maxx Warrior.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of sata peau with re-embroidered alencon lace over taffeta. The fitted alencon lace bodice featured a portrait neckline, fluted tea cup sleeves and natural waist. The bodice was adorned with seed pearls. A double flounce edged with garlands of scalloped lace bordered the gown hemline. She wore a two tiered waltz length veil of illusion with a hand rolled edge attached to a wreath of silk flowers tipped with seed pearls. The bride carried a formal bouquet of phalaenopsis and cmybidium orchids with a touch of iris blue in the bow and streamers.

The mother of the bride wore a formal gown of lavendar with self-ruffles accenting the bodice. The mother of the bridegroom wore a rose formal gown with an organza bodice.

The maid of honor wore a tea length gown of violet taffeta designed with an open V-neckline outlined in self-fabric cording that continued over the shoulders forming a cross in back. The fitted bodice was enhanced with a gathered ruffle featuring an off-shoulder effect. A self-fabric rose accented the center front. The gown had a basque waistline and gathered skirt. The attendants were dressed identical and each carried a classic bouquet of blue dutch iris and asters tied with matching bows.

The flower girl wore a white dress with a violet sash and carried a white wicker basket filled with flowers matching the other attendants'. The ring bearer carried a white satin pillow with a spray of iris, asters and pixie carnations.

A reception was held at the Brook Valley Country Club after the ceremony and guests were greeted by Mrs. C. Emerson Baker. Cake was served by Mrs. Douglas M. Morgan of Greenville and punch was poured by Margaret Lee Hall of Richmond, Va., cousin of the bride. Others assisting were Leanna Clark, Dina Dare, Debbie Moore and Kim Kelly, all of Greenville.

The couple will live in Winston-Salem after a wedding trip to the coast.

The bride is a graduate of Rose High School, Pitt Community College and Mitchell's Hairstyling Academy. She was formerly employed by Friendly Hair Designers of Greenville. The bridegroom is employed by Thrifti Mart of Winston-Salem.

Gorham-Best Vows Solemnized Last Week

The wedding ceremony of Bessie K. Best and Orlando Gorham, both of Greenville, took place April 13 at 6 p.m. The Rev. Randy Royal of Raleigh conducted the private, double ring ceremony.

The bride is the daughter of Elonia King and the late Walter King. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gorham.

The bride wore a mauve tea length dress of silk and crocheted lace. The dress was designed with a scalloped lace hemline and the fitted bodice featured a scalloped lace neckline and a natural waistline. She wore a wreath of wild flowers as a headpiece and carried a bouquet of matching silk flowers.

A reception was held after the ceremony at the bride's home. The refreshment table was centered with an arrangement of pink snapdragons, ivory poms, tulips and greenery. Punch was poured by Kathryn Nobles, sister of the bride. The wedding cake was served by Bessie Britt of Snow Hill. Bonitta Best of Towson, Md., daughter of the bride, presided at the register.

A breakfast for the out-of-town guests was given by Debra Hazelton, daughter of the bride. A brunch for out-of-town guests was given by Pearl Wilkins of Raleigh, daughter of the bride.

Couple Honored On Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. C.G. Paramore of Route 2, Greenville, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Saturday.

Children of the couple are Frances Hughes of Charleston, S.C., Curtis Paramore of Bath, Larry Paramore of Wilmington, Shirley McLawnorn of Winterville, Myrl Paramore, Donnie Paramore and C.G. Paramore Jr., all of Greenville. The honorees also have 14 grandchildren.

Mrs. Paramore was remembered with a corsage.

Dear Abby — By Abigail Van Buren

Quiet Person Has Loud, Clear Message

DEAR ABBY: I have never seen this problem in your column, but I know I'm not the only person who has it. I have always been a very quiet person, and rarely talk unless I have something to say. However, my problem is not that I am quiet, it's people who introduce me and add, "She's very quiet" or "Maybe you can get her to talk." Then there are those who in the presence of others loudly ask, "Why are you so quiet?"

I would never ask a person who talks a lot, "Why are you so loud?" Yet, quiet people are constantly asked, "Why are you so quiet?" Abby, people who are quiet are usually shy and lacking in confidence, which is difficult enough to deal with without having it pointed out in public.

I am working on overcoming my shyness and am making progress, but nothing sets me back more than being asked loudly in a crowd, "Why are you so quiet?"

Please print this. We in the quiet minority will thank you.

THE QUIET ONE

DEAR QUIET ONE: Thanks for an important message that came through loud and clear.

DEAR ABBY: For 47 years I have been married to a beautiful, kind, affectionate, caring, concerned, bright and loyal woman.

On the other hand, for 47 years she has been reading all my personal mail, and never have I received a phone call that she has not listened to on the extension phone.

We have discussed this violation of my privacy many times in a calm and fairly amiable open discussion, but to no avail.

Please understand, her policing of my communications has nothing to do with jealousy or suspicion—it seems to be an extension of "what's new"—her keen interest in everything that's going on. No guile or meanness is involved.

What could I have done to improve the situation? I'm writing this at 4:10 a.m.

W. IN BOYNTON BEACH, FLA.

DEAR W.: If you had demanded your privacy, instead of discussing her violation of it in a calm and fairly amiable open discussion, perhaps you wouldn't be writing to Dear Abby at 4:10 a.m. 47 years too late.

How a kind, caring, concerned and bright woman can be so insensitive to the rights of her husband baffles me.

DEAR ABBY: Please warn people never to send cash to a charitable organization—even if it's only a dollar! (Small amounts are more easily pocketed.)

I worked for a highly respected charitable organization, and when I had been there a short time, I discovered that one of the employees who had been there for a very long time was taking money. Even though the giver received a receipt for the donation, a copy of that receipt to show that the organization had received the money was not kept.

There are many fine charities that are 100 percent honest, so I am not discouraging people from sending money; I want only to advise them never to send a dollar or two in cash—give checks or money orders.

I truly believe that if this letter is published, it will save a lot of money from going to places unintended by the giver.

EYEWITNESS

DEAR WITNESS: Most people send checks or money orders because they want a record of their contributions (for tax purposes), but it doesn't hurt to remind those who think it is more "convenient" to just stick a dollar or two in an envelope.

If this applies to you, Dear Reader, please don't stop giving—just stop giving cash.

Sarah Duncan Is ABWA Scholarship Recipient

The Greenville Pirate Charter Chapter of the American Business Women's Association held its meeting Tuesday evening. Sarah Smith Duncan will receive the group's scholarship for 1985.

Ms. Duncan is a sophomore at East Carolina University in the School of Business. The award will be presented at the May meeting. Her name was submitted by Pat Hardee, chapter education chairman.

A candlelight service of welcome was held for new members including Judith Jenkins, Marilyn Lancet, Mildred Porter, Helen Thurston, Margaret Wirth and Jane Welborn.

Deborah Daniel presednted the program on flower arranging for the home and office. Linda Shore gave the work related talk.

Nina Redditt, bulletin chairman, urged members to attend Women In Leadership 1985 to be held at the Willis Building April 24. The reception will start at 6:30 p.m. followed by a program at 7:15. The chapter is one of the sponsoring groups.

Louise Downing, coordinator of adult education at Pitt Community College, will give the program for the May meeting.

Chicken Pie & Salad
Fruit Cup & Beverage

ALL-CHICKEN PIE
Cheese Pastry, recipe follows
3¾ to 4-pound chicken
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons all-purpose flour
2 cups milk
1 chicken bouillon cube
Salt and pepper to taste

Make up Cheese Pastry. Steam chicken until tender; skin, bone and cube (1 inch) — there should be about 1 quart. In a medium saucepan make a white sauce of butter, flour and milk, dissolving bouillon cube in it. Stir chicken into sauce; add salt and pepper; keep hot. On a pastry cloth with a stockinet-covered rolling pin, roll out pastry to an 11-by 7-inch rectangle. Turn hot chicken mixture into a 10 by 6 by 1¾-inch baking dish. Top with pastry, sealing its edges to dish. Cut 12 one-inch vents in pastry and slightly open each. Bake in a preheated 425-degree oven until pastry is golden — 25 to 30 minutes. Makes 6 servings.

Cheese Pastry: Into 1 cup all-purpose flour cut a ¼-pound stick of butter until size of small peas. Stir in 2 ounces shredded (medium fine) extra-sharp cheddar cheese. Gradually sprinkle with water (about 2 tablespoons) and press into a ball. Wrap in saran and chill thoroughly before using.

'Toy Missionaries' Form Company To Address Violence In Toy Market

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Staff Writer

Sue Fust of Sarasota, Fla., has shoulder length curly blonde hair. Her company's dolls also have shoulder length very curly hair. "The dolls' hair came first," said Mrs. Fust.

Mrs. Fust is referring to Praise Dolls which are manufactured by Praise Unlimited, a company which is owned by her and her husband, Charles.

The company was founded in Blowing Rock in 1980. "My husband and I wanted to become missionaries which didn't work out. Instead we were called to be toy missionaries. Having four daughters ages eight to 15, my husband and I were becoming alarmed at what we were seeing in the toy market — a shift from traditional toys to toys that promoted violence and sensuality. We spent two years in toy market research in preparation to share what we perceived as problems parents should be aware of. It took two years to design the Praise Dolls. We had no experience in design, manufacturing or distribution. However, we did have a lot of sales experience," she said.

"A lot of planning, a lot of work and some disappointments were experienced before we could produce the doll we felt would have an impact on children. Our dolls feature very thick, curly hair, large eyes, specially designed clothing and interchangable disks that teach scripture and songs," she said.

"Each doll has a heart with a scripture explaining her name — such as Praise, Love, Joy and Faith. We wanted them to be soft and huggable and designed to last for years," she said.

"We have addressed the problem of violence in boys' toys offering our alternative in Judah, the Christian soldier," added Mrs. Fust.

"Our toys are product safety tested through the U.S. Testing Lab. We have overcome major obstacles since forming. The major one was a fire last June in which our office and warehouse were destroyed. Our employees were not hurt in any way. We did save five dolls which were later given to a home for abused and battered children," she said.

"This year, we have 25 products ranging from infants to teen-agers being manufactured. We also have 15 new products scheduled to be presented at our national convention in Dallas," she stated.

"A very vital part of what we consider the heartbeat of the company is our Friendship Program. When a product is purchased, the purchaser is provided a certificate which they may complete with their name and address and forward to the home office. This certificate is then placed in a Friendship box and sent to the home office. This certificate is then placed in a Friendship box and sent to an underprivileged child free of charge," she said.

While in Greenville Mrs. Fust appeared on "Carolina Today" and was interviewed on WBQA Radio. Company reprentatives, Julia Holloman of Greenville, and Ruth West of Rocky Mount, appeared with Mrs. Fust.

MALVINA KINARD'S BROILED BANANAS

Juice and grated rind of 1 lime or 2 lemons
½ cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons butter
¼ cup light rum

Peel and slice bananas lengthwise. Place in a shallow baking dish. Sprinkle with lime juice and finely grated rind. Sprinkle with sugar. Dot generously with butter. Broil quickly until sugar and butter start to melt. Do not overcook, or bananas will get soggy. Serve at once. Pour rum over hot bananas and ignite, basting with the flaming syrup. Serves 6.

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I've always had a dream.

It was to see several letter carriers fighting over who gets to deliver my mail.

At the moment, I have four different carriers who drop off mail at our house. One of them dutifully drops his mail off in the mailbox at the end of the driveway, or if there's a big package, he brings it to the door.

The other three zip up to the front door, ask me what kind of a day I'm having, elevate the letter like a chalice and place it in my hands.

There is a reason for the latter. They're getting $24 to deliver a three-ounce letter.

No, I want to see some good old-fashioned competition like the airlines and the telephone company when deregulation hit 'em.

I want to see free drinks if they don't get my letter to me on time. I want to see a stamp war where I can fly my package from Phoenix to L.A. for less than $29. And why not an Advantage program for those of us who are frequent mailers? If we accumulate over 50,000 miles, we can upgrade a piece of junk mail to first class without paying extra.

The problem is the post office takes my mail for granted. They're never said to me, "I want to be your letter company." Or, "Don't trust your Christmas newsletter to anyone but us. We care!"

I don't expect them to give mouth-to-mouth resuscitatin in the dead letter office, but when was the last time you bought stamps and had them say to you, "Thanks for buying from the U.S. Post Office"?

There could be an econo-class mail where you have to have it stamped a month ahead of time and have it lay over in Kansas City for a week or more before it's delivered or you would pay the full tab.

There could be a business-class mail where there would be little extras like for $20 more you could fly with your letter to New York with a snack and free drink.

Familiarity breeds apathy. I've seen it happen in other industries. My postman no longer tingles with excitement when he hands me a letter from Ed McMahon saying, "YOU'VE WON!" Sometimes I get the feeling he has never forgiven me for getting into a "catalogue" computer and averaging 34 pounds weekly.

If you had the chance of sending a 22-cent letter for half the price to all of your friends all over the world, and it gets there within hours after it leaves your desk, and the carrier loves your hostile dog and doesn't get upset if it takes you five minutes to answer the door, and he tells you to keep those post cards and letters coming as he loves the work, wouldn't you be willing to consider a change?

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

Reflector bowls are not just for decoration! They are essential parts of the electric range designed to provide even cooking and to help conserve energy by reflecting heat into the cooking vessel. They also catch any spillovers so that cleaning is easier. It is important, therefore, to use and care for reflector bowls properly.

When reflector bowls are stained, they decrease in usefulnes. Basically, two types of stains can occur — brown spots caused by food spills and improper cleaning methods, and blue/gold spots caused by overheating.

Reflector bowls should be washed frequently to remove brown stains. Food stains left on the bowls or the range top become cooked on with heat and are more difficult to remove. In some instances, stains may be impossible to take off. That is why washing the bowls should be as routine as cleaning up after meals.

Porcelain reflector bowls can be cleaned in several ways. For a daily routine, wipe off excess spills and then wash with other cooking utensils either in warm sudsy water or in an automatic dishwasher. Periodic cleaning can be accompanied by putting the bowls upside down on oven racks in the oven during the self-cleaning cycle.

Chrome bowls should only be washed in warm sudsy water. The chrome trim rings also call for the same care. Unlike porcelain bowls, chrome reflector bowls should never be cleaned in an automatic dishwasher or in a self-cleaning oven. Steel wool soap pads will remove stubborn stains. When stains are particularly difficult to remove, apply a commercial oven cleaner.

Food stains can be kept to a minimum by using some precautions. Any spills should be wiped up as soon as possible so that the food does not begin to cook onto the reflector bowls. The pan used for cooking should be large enough for the amount of food being cooked without boiling over. Lower heat settings to cook foods help prevent boil-overs and splatters.

Blue/gold heat stains cannot be removed, but they can be avoided if certain rules are followed. For example, pans sould be used that fit the surface unit. When a pan is larger than the surface unit, air flow is blocked and heat is trapped under the pan. This causes the reflector bowl to overheat and start to change color.

Reflector bowls also tend to overheat with pans that are not perfectly flat on the bottom. Warped or ridged pans cause the heat to be transferred to the bowl rather than to the bottom of the pan.

Special cooking utensils such as woks, steamers and canners are generally larger than the surface units. They can cause damage to the range and turn reflector bowls blue or gold.

Heat stains can be prevented by not setting the heat control on high for extended periods of time. For best results, use the high setting only when starting to cook a food. Lower the setting to finish cooking so that excess heat does not go to the reflector bowl.

Reflector bowls should last a long time with proper care. The secret is frequent cleaning and correct cooking methods.

The use of a rinse agent in an automatic dishwasher is to help eliminate spotting of dishes caused by hard water or when heat is eliminated in the dry cycle to conserve energy. The rinse agent lowers the surface tension of water so that it sheets off dishes rather than drying as droplets.

There are two types of rinse agents available — liquid and solid. The liquid form is used in a dishwasher equipped with an automatic rinse dispenser. The rinse agent is added to the rinse agent reservoir and during the final rinse of the diswasher cycle, a small amount is released. A rinse agent in solid form is designed for use in a dishwasher without the dispenser. The agent is hung on the dishwasher rack where it slowly dissolves and contributes to each water change in the cycle.

Washable wallcovering can be cleaned with a damp cloth. Wash one whole wall at a time, working from the bottom up and changing the wash and rinse waters often to prevent streaking.

First Fashions Show Period Influence

They're silk and shantung, brocaded and beaded. They're long and short and in between. They're 'First Ladies Fashions' now on view at the N.C. Museum of History in downtown Raleigh.

A large color photograph of Mrs. Jim Martin's red inaugural ball gown, which she wore Jan. 5 at the 1985 inaugural ball is being added to the 23 gowns on view. These dresses depict North Carolina fashion history for more than 200 years according to Betty Tyson, museum registrar.

The exhibit is on display every four years following the inauguration of a new governor, Ms. Tyson said and will be on view through June. She explained that display time must be extremely limited to preserve the fragile fabrics.

Throughout the year preceding each gubernatorial election, Ms. Tyson and museum docents prepare the dresses for the exhibit, hand making each form to fit exact measurements of the gowns.

The first ladies fashions all follow fashion trends of the periods, she explained. The earliest gown of display is an empire gown of gold silk brocade with plaid trim, reportedly worn by Sarah Herritage Caswell, wife of Richard Caswell, governor, 1776-1780; and 1784-1787.

Nineteenth-century gowns are reflected in the antebellum style, two-piece embroidered pink net and ecru lace gown lined with cream satin worn by Henrietta Settle Reid, wife of David Settle Reid, who was governor 1851-54. During the Civil War years Mrs. William Wood Holden wore a three-piece bustle gown of grey faille and navy blue velvet, while the Victorian period is represented by a dress belonging to Kate Lewis Scales, daughter of Alfred Moore Scales, who was governor 1885-89. Ms. Scales wore a shell pink satin and brocade gown with matching ribbon trim. Mrs. Elias Carr's inaugural gown was a two-piece taupe ribbed silk and brown velvet with leg-o-mutton sleeves and lace bertha collar with pearl and crystal bead trim. Gov. Carr served 1893-97.

Turn-of-the-century and World War I era fashions are depicted by the gowns worn by Mrs. Glenn, Mrs. Kitchin, Mrs. Craig and Mrs. Bickett.

For the 1913 inauguration of her husband, Mrs. Locke Craig wore a white chiffon with chenille embroidery and white crystal beading. Mrs. Thomas W. Bickett wore a two-piece purple velvet with metallic lace sleeves, beaded fringe and fur bandings. Fannie Yarborough Bickett was the first of the first ladies to enjoy a profession and helped to fashion the welfare role in N.C.

Other gowns representing the 30s, the 40s and the 50s include Mary White Scott's inaugural gown of white chiffon velvet with Venetian lace collar. Her husband, Kerr Scott, served from 1949-53. The inaugural gown of Merle Davis Umstead, first lady in 1953-54, was a French blue silk chiffon with pearl and rhinestone trimmed lace bodice. Martha Blakeney Hodges, wife of Luther H. Hodges, wore a sheath ball gown of celery re-embroidered alencon lace with silk chiffon panel. He served from 1954-61.

Carolyn Leonard Hunt has the distinction of having two gowns in the collection. In 1977, she wore a pale gold-dust silk peau de soie gathered skirt and bloused silk organza bodice with dolman sleeves. In 1981, she wore a French re-embroidered coral lace with tiered skirt, tapered sleeves and surplice neckline.

Several of the first ladies chose North Carolina designers for their outfits. Mrs. Dan K. Moore's coat, Mrs. Robert Scott's ensemble and Mrs. Hunt's second gown were by Alda Crowe of Lincolnton. Mrs. Hunt's first inaugural gown was designed by Jim Stronach of Raleigh. Mrs. Jim Martin's gown was designed by Dennis Toney of Doncaster of Rutherfordton and Mrs. Holshouser's ensemble was also by Doncaster.

The Museum of History is located at 109 E. Jones St. in Raleigh. The museum is open Tuesday through Saturday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and 1-6 p.m. Sunday.

GAPA To Have Monday Meeting

The Greenville Area Preservation Association will have a meeting Monday starting at 7:30 p.m. at the Willis Building.

As a preface to National Preservation Week in May, GAPA has chosen a topic in keeping with the national trust for the historic preservation theme "The Action's Back on Main Street." Mindy Machanic, of the East Carolina University School of Art, will illustrate examples of what could be done to change the image of buildings located between Reade Steet and Evans Street.

Members of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, city council, Evergreen and the Downtown Merchant's Association will also be present.

The week of May 12 will be the national observance of Preservation Week.

EVENING REFRESHER
Pound Cake & Coffee

RICH POUND CAKE

1½ cups all-purpose flour (scoop and level)
¾ teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
Two ¼-pound sticks unsalted butter, softened
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon grated orange rind
1 teaspoon vanilla
3 large eggs

Stir together flour, baking powder and salt. In large bowl of electric mixer, at medium speed, beat together butter, sugar, orange rind, lemon rind and vanilla until fluffy — 2 or 3 minutes. Beat in eggs, one at a time, until blended after each addition. Add flour mixture; at low speed, scraping bowl often, beat until blended — 1 to 2 minutes. Turn into a greased and floured 9 by 5 by 3-inch loaf pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 1 hour. Loosen edges and turn out on a wire rack; cool completely.

Teen-Agers Run News Service That Speaks Their Language

By NATHAN SALANT
The Daily Review

HAYWARD, Calif. (AP) — The most lively conversation of all was about mud ducks and freaks, back street and funk town.

But while the 12 teen-agers already knew most of the slang words, the newspaper articles they write about young people are more than just vernacular.

The stories are serious business for the teen-agers, who work for the Youth News Service, an organization that sells the articles to papers across the country.

Some of the subjects proposed for stories include suicide, relationships, politics and family conflict.

The ideas are aired during Monday brainstorming sessions in the offices of Pacific News Service, a San Francisco-based news organization that's the main sponsor of the youth project.

With the guidance of two adult editors paid by PNS, the reporters develop ideas for articles at the meetings.

The reporters work for experience, not money. Volunteer positions are available for anyone 15 to 19 years old who can write.

"My feeling is that our pieces have to stand up against any piece in the newspaper," said Louis Freedberg, 35, the Pacific News Service editor who heads the project. "We don't want readers to think, 'That's a good piece for a 16-year-old.'"

The colorful slang, including terms like "spitting," "book that," "funky fresh" and "tenda," are the subject of Yalonda Lofton's next story, about teen slang.

For the uninitiated, "mud ducks" are ugly people, "freaks" are promiscuous girls, "back street" means thugs, and "funk town" is a West Oakland gang, or could be used to mean Oakland itself. "Spitting" is flirting, "book that" means forget it, "funky fresh" is well-dressed, and "tenda," or "tender," means attractive.

Ms. Lofton, 17, whose story about neon clothing appeared in the San Francisco Examiner recently, is one of three Hayward teen-agers writing for Youth News Service. All three — Ms. Lofton, Clair Whitmer and Jesi Gill — are seniors at Hawyard High School.

"My first story (about a young disc jockey in Hayward) took like two months because I didn't know how to approach it," Ms. Lofton said. "But I worked with Louis, and he told me what he wanted."

So far, their stories have been published in the Examiner, The Fresno Bee and the Chicago Tribune.

"We don't have any trouble recruiting kids," Freedberg said, "but getting really talented kids is a challenge."

Freedberg said he started the news service in 1983 to "create a voice for kids" while he was with Youth News, a youth-oriented radio service he founded in Oakland in 1979. The writing service came with him when he joined Pacific News Service in late 1983.

Of course, there were doubts. "We were hesitant," he said, "figuring it would be an enormous amount of work, and it is, to get kids ready to write for a daily newspaper."

Freedberg says he works at least 20 hours a week meeting with the young reporters and editing their stories. Another Pacific News Service staff member, Shannon Fagan, works with them part time, too.

"Pacific News Service likes the idea of having children involved," Freedberg said. "Our hope is that we can get this in papers all over the country."

More Couples Seen As Working Hard To Succeed At Marriage

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More engaged couples are seeking premarital counseling — not for problems, but to make sure they have covered all the bases in their desire to succeed at marriage, says Dr. Joyce Brothers.

Her travels around the country have convinced her that many people are determined to succeed at marriage, despite the fact that their parents' marriages may have ended in divorce.

They also seek advice from a counselor because parents and family may be far away. For these engaged couples, a counselor serves as a kind of "rent-a-friend," she adds.

The author of "What Every Woman Should Know About Love and Marriage," she advises couples to discuss important issues before they marry, either together with a counselor or by themselves. Subjects she thinks are important to air include attitudes toward having and caring for children, financial goals and aspirations, relations with in-laws and, if appropriate, with former spouses and children.

The psychologist finds the current seriousness about marriage a good thing and advises couples to use their engagement as a time to discuss the future and come to agreement.

"There is a tremendous amount of good will at this time, which helps to resolve problems," she points out. "If a problem is not solvable at this time, then it will never be resolved. Couples should realize that you're not going to redecorate your spouse, so it's better not to try."

One bar to open communication is fear of saying something your future spouse will regard as unforgivable, counselors agree. However, learning to communicate in a non-threatening way can minimize this fear.

Non-threatening communication techniques can be learned, according to Sherod Miller, a Minneapolis psychologist. Miller has developed a book, "Talking Together," and a series of cassette tapes and other materials which are being used by counselors and couples all over the country to help build communications skills.

"They introduce ideas about communications in general; they teach practical principles of listening and speaking to others; and they provide an opportunity for couples to pick an issue and discuss it in the group setting, getting group feedback on their use of communications skills," says Miller.

Another program, known as "Prepare," is also available for couples. "The program is designed to get couples to look in a systematic way at important issues in a marriage," says Dr. David Olson, a clinical psychologist who developed the program at the University of Minnesota, where he is a professor in the Family and Social Science Department.

The 125-item questionnaire identifies strengths and problem areas for couples who fill it out and return it to a counselor (often a clergyman) who has been trained by Olson and his colleagues in administering the test. The counselor returns the questionnaire to Minneapolis for scoring and receives the results. (There is a $15 fee for the test.) The counselor then reviews the results with the couple.

According to Olson, the questionnaire was developed over 10 years as a research tool. He says that while taking the test alone does not improve a couple's chances for a happy marriage, it can identify those who are at risk. If the couple were to work on the issues that divide them, presumably they would have a better chance for a satisfying marriage.

Using the questionnaire, Olson says, researchers have been able to predict with 80 percent accuracy which couples would be happy and which would be either troubled or divorced after several years.

Those who proved to be happy in their marriages shared a number of characteristics, Olson notes. Their level of realism about what to expect from marriage was good. They were happy about the ways in which they resolved conflict and about how they communicated generally. They liked their partner's personality and they agreed on religious orientation and values.

"They didn't have to be religious, they just had to agree," explains Olson.

"We find that taking the test helps couples to identify problems and gets them talking," he says. In one out of 10 instances, couples decided not to marry on the basis of the test, added the social psychologist. "Many couples were more honest on the questionnaire than they had been with each other."

Finals Food Packages Do Double Duty

FOREST GROVE, Ore. (AP) — Pacific University has found a delectable and profitable way for parents to give their son or daughter a boost to get them through their finals, while at the same time helping the Parents Club Scholarship Fund.

Helen E. Lewis, Pacific's director of university relations, sends an invitation to all parents of current students a few weeks before examination time suggesting they send $10 for a "care package" to be given out during finals week.

Mrs. Lewis usually receives quick responses from many parents and sometimes grandparents. Messages are then sent to the students telling them when and where to go on campus to receive "a special package that has been delivered in your name."

The package bears a note saying "The attached Care Package was purchased for you by (name) from the Pacific Parents Club, so that relief for your exam time and study hunger pangs will be close by."

Mrs. Lewis and her crew assemble the packages containing home-baked cookies, as well as snack crackers, oranges, apples, caramel apples, peanuts, pepperoni, cheese, candy bars and fruit drinks.

The contents are purchased locally by Mrs. Lewis, who also buys attractive shopping bag-type containers for all the goodies.

The home-baked cookies come from the crew of volunteers, mothers of Pacific students living close to the campus, with Mrs. Lewis usually one of the bakers. In addition to her university relations work with the Parents Club, she is the mother of a Pacific junior, Jonathan Nissley.

"I'm pleased with the program," Mrs. Lewis says. "Students are served, and leftover funds from the project, usually about $150 each time, are placed in the Parents Club Scholarship Fund. Most students are surprised, and all have been happy with their care packages and support from home."

Overweight can take the fun out of being a kid. And it can set a pattern for a frustrated, unhappy adulthood.
That's why we created Nutri/Youth.
It was conceived by the same professionals who designed the highly-regarded Nutri/System program. With all the elements that have made Nutri/System the choice of hundreds of thousands of weight-conscious Americans: quick losses of up to a pound a day. Delicious food. No calorie counting. Professional supervision and constant motivation.
Plus extras just for kids. Like a computerized fitness program that lets your child earn points for doing healthful, enjoyable exercise.
Eating plans that allow for school lunches. Behavior Education classes that teach self-control, good eating habits and basic nutrition, all geared to your child's age group. And continuing support from trained, understanding counselors.
There are special provisions for parents to become involved in your child's progress. And a long-term maintenance program to prevent future weight problems.
With Nutri/Youth, losing weight has finally become child's play. Call today for all the pleasant details.

Hank Snow Mourns The Loss Of Old-Style Country Music

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Hank Snow has sold an estimated 70 million country music records, made more than 100 albums and performed on the Grand Ole Opry for 35 years.

And he's troubled that the traditional style of country music he popularized for half of a century is being swept aside by a slick "Fifth Avenue" charade.

SEES CHANGE IN COUNTRY MUSIC . . . Country music veteran Hank Snow says that traditional country music has been swept aside by a slick "Fifth Avenue" style. The 70-year-old Snow has sold an estimaed 70 million records and has appeared on the Grand Ole Opry for 35 years. (AP Laserphoto by Mark Humphrey)

"I don't believe real country music will ever come back," the 70-year-old Snow said somberly."It'll stay around, but not like it was in the '50s and '60s. We've got a new generation. This young generation is not familiar with Roy Acuff (81), Hank Williams Sr. (who died in 1953) and Cowboy Copas (who died in 1963).

"Willie Nelson has stuck pretty country," Snow continued. "Kenny Rogers kept pretty close, and Ricky Skaggs is very country. But then a lot of 'em have gone Fifth Avenue."

Snow still sings his hits, including "I'm Movin' On" and "I've Been Everywhere," just about every weekend on the Grand Ole Opry, the 59-year-old live country music show. However, the 1985 audiences are merely polite after hearing his 25-year-old hits.

"On the Opry 10 years ago, when I would sing 'Fool Such as I" or one of my other hits, the people would tear the house down. Now you get a little applause. Now a lot of people come as curiosity seekers," said the country music star who still shines in rhinestone-studded suits.

Snow, a singer-songwriter-guitaris t elected to the Country Music Hall of Fame in 1979, recorded for 45 years for RCA, a testament to his devotion and talents in a business where label-hopping and label-dropping are as common as the key of C.

Still, the last few years have not been easy. "It was such a job," he said. "You've got to get new material and worry about arrangements and instrumentation. And country music had changed so much, I didn't know what to record.

"The last two or three albums, we used more 'uptown' background and they didn't do (sell) anything."

He returned to the studio late last year and recorded a duet album with Willie Nelson. It will be released soon, but don't expect to see Snow in a video.

"From what I've seen, I don't care for 'em. They distract the audience from the music," he said. "One guy jumps from an airplane and then his house burns down. I'm glad my time is done with recording. I got out at the right time."

Snow left his Nova Scotia home at age 12 and went to sea to escape an abusive stepfather. As a teen-ager, he used $30 in earnings from a two-week stint unloading salt from a ship to buy his first guitar.

He moved to the United States in the mid-1940s and began singing on the Grand Ole Opry in 1950. In the mid-1950s he was a mentor to a flamboyant young singer named Elvis Presley.

Snow's "I'm Movin' On" was No. 1 on the country music chart for almost a year in 1950.Emmylou Harris recently recorded her version of the famous country song.

In the past seven years, Snow has cut back on his personal appearances around the United States and has devoted much of his time to efforts against child abuse, of which he was a victim himself.Snow still has a scar on his finger and one on his back to remind him of eight years of abuse during his childhood.

He has formed a foundation, gives annual fundraising concerts at the Grand Ole Opry House and has raised an estimated $250,000 for the cause. In March, he announced that he is joining forces with the National Exchange Club which has embraced the fight against child abuse as a service project.

Snow said his proudest moments as an entertainer were performing for U.S. troops in Korea in 1953 and in Vietnam the '60s.

In Korea he asked for addresses of soldiers' relatives, expecting maybe half a dozen."They put 'em on beer cans, toilet paper, anything they could find. I came back with 6,000 names." He used a form letter and hired a secretary to type the addresses.

"I still have people write to me who say they saw me there or say their family got my letter," Snow said.

Other details of Snow's life will be revealed in an upcoming biography by writers Jack Ownsby and Bob Burris. The book will have "a lot of sadness and a lot of fun stuff and everyday life," said Snow. "There are hardships and lessons for young kids. Plus it winds up as a success story, I guess."

Dennis Hopper No Longer A Rebel

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dennis Hopper, once one of Hollywood's most rebellious young actors and filmmakers, has mellowed in middle age.

In the 1950s he appeared with James Dean in two pictures, "Rebel Without a Cause" and "Giant." In the '60s, he wrote and directed the most successful of all anti-establishment pictures, "Easy Rider." Fiften years ago, he abruptly left Hollywood in a blow-up over editing of "The Last Movie."

"James Dean and I were method actors and we had a lot of problems because we wanted to block out our scenes," recalled Hopper, who has a starring role in CBS' movie "Stark" Wednesday night.

"We didn't want to be told how to act. Now it isn't a problem, but in the 1950s we were considered unmanageable. If you were a star, it was OK, but if you were a young actor you were supposed to do as you were told. If you look back, we were better than the other actors because they gave a stiff reading.

"And as a director I got into trouble because I wanted the final cut. My social behavior wasn't amenable, either. I was sort of an amoral animal. I was into drugs and alcohol." He smiled. "April 2 marks two years that I haven't touched drugs or alcohol."

"He's a guy who goes by the book," Hopper said of Bliss. "It's a very unglamorous role. I've never been a by-the-book person."

The movie, which was not available for previewing, also stars Marilu Henner, Pat Corley, Seth Jaffe and Arthur Rosenberg. Rod Holcomb directed on location in Las Vegas from a script by Bill Stratton and the late Ernest Tidyman, who won an Oscar as screenwriter for "The French Connection."

Hopper now lives in Venice, the Bohemian beach section of Los Angeles, where he divides his time between screen appearances and turning out abstract paintings and doing photography for magazines such as Vanity Fair.

He lost more than 300 canvases in the 1961 Bel Air fire. "I couldn't get back to painting a long time after that," he said. "I started writing screenplays and that's when I wrote 'Easy Rider.'"

After that he went to Peru to direct "The Last Movie" and spent nearly a year editing it. It won the Venice Film Festival in 1971, but the distributor, Universal Studios, didn't like it and pulled it after a few weeks.

"They wouldn't even show it in Europe, where it had won a prize," he said. "That ended my career as a director. I had final cut and I was very stubborn. I couldn't see winning the prize and then having to re-edit my film. I own the film now and I may find someone who wants to distribute it. It was released in England two years ago and was very popular. It holds up, like a time capsule. I play the lead and it also stars Rod Cameron, Sam Fuller, Peter Fonda and John Philip Law."

Hopper played the photojournalist in "Apocalypse Now," the drunken father of Matt Dillon in "Rumble Fish" and was in Sam Peckinpah's "The Osterman Weekend."

"I can't remember the last time I did television," he said. "But I must have done 140 shows, things like 'Studio One' and 'Medic.' My manager said it would be good for me to play this role in 'Stark.' When I heard the money I said that would be good, too.

"I've never played a cop before. It was an interesting challenge. I usually play the bad guy or the neurotic or the drug addict."

ABC's "Hail to the Chief" makes its debut tonight with Patty Duke starring as the first woman president. Its creator is Susan Harris, who also did "Soap," which means that anyone and everyone is a target for its outrageous humor.

Satirical Plays Show New Tolerance To Dissent In Tanzania

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AP) — The audience laughed and hooted when an actor playing a government bureaucrat ordered windmills for windless regions. They roared when the stage politicians trotted out the same old excuses for the Tanzania's steep economic decline.

The acting was superb and the attack on government policy-making — if not top leaders themselves — was clearly understood by those who saw the two performances of "Lina Ubani," Swahili for "A Perfume for Rot."

A play with such a politically critical theme is rare in black Africa, where open dissent is generally not tolerated.

But playwright Penina Muhando, 37, has taken advantage of the recent willingness of the Tanzanian leadership, including President Julius Nyerere, to acknowledge serious policy mistakes that have contributed to widespread shortages and economic disarray.

Mrs. Muhando herself was stumped when asked which countries on the continent would permit such a hard-hitting play.

"To begin with, people were not sure how much artistic freedom there was in Tanzania," she said in an interview. "But we put on some plays that were very critical and nothing happened. Maybe five years ago they would not have been tolerated."

It was one thing for the plays to be performed in the liberal environment of the campus at the University of Dar es Salaam, where Mrs. Muhando is an associate professor of theater.

But she later staged the works in downtown Dar es Salaam, and one of the most biting ones was attended by the governing party's secretary-general, Rashidi Kawawa.

"He said he enjoyed it," Mrs. Muhando recalled.

Mrs. Muhando, the wife of a Finance Ministry official currently studying at the University of Southern California and a mother of two, is explicit about the message of her plays.

"Basically, what I am trying to say is that we are finding flimsy excuses for socio-economic problems, finding scapegoats but not going to the core," she said.

Her latest work heavily satirizes the seemingly endless use by Tanzanian leaders of the costly war that brought down President Idi Amin's government in neighboring Uganda in 1979 as an excuse for the country's current plight, including shortages of basic foodstuffs.

During one campus performance, a spectator shouted, "CCM," the initals of the ruling Chama Cha Mapinduzi (Revolutionary Party), when an actor playing a politician expounded fatuously. The spectator was led from the theater by a policeman, but was not arrested.

When an actress couldn't perform, Mrs. Muhando took the starring role as a deranged old woman, Bibi, who has lost a son in the war. She goes mad bearing the brunt of the conflict's harsh aftermath.

Her surviving son, an idealistic young civil servant, struggles to make headway in a bungling bureaucracy.

Some of the strongest complaints expressed on stage were not the invention of the woman playwright — but taken directly from everyday incidents in Tanzanian life, she said.

A character laments that farmers were told by officials not to grow food crops but to plant cotton. But when it came time to market the cotton, the state-run marketing body didn't have the trucks or the fuel to transport it. The farmers are left without food because they had followed the government's advice.

One member of the audience said he knew of such actual cases.

Tanzania's agricultural output is lower now than what it was 10 years ago. Numerous industrial plants and trucks are idle due to shortages of spare parts and fuel. And basic consumer items like light bulbs, sugar and printed "kanga" cloth, which many women wear as skirts, also are in short supply.

"A lot of art in Tanzania has had a tradition of pushing the party line," Mrs. Muhando said. "Things said in the streets can be quite critical, and to use art to convey the opinion of the people is a rare occasion."

MINISERIES FILMING CONTINUES — A Warner Brothers crew prepares to shoot a scene for the $25 million miniseries "North and South" using the historic First Baptist Church, temporarily converted to the Charleston Post Office. Sand also covers the downtown asphalt street. Filming on the series will continue through April. (AP Laserphoto)

WASHINGTON (AP) — When comedian Danny Thomas made this appearance at the White House, it was for a serious occasion.

President Reagan on Tuesday presented the Congressional Gold Medal to entertainer Thomas, 71, in recognition of his fund-raising activities to benefit St. Jude Children's Research Hospital in Memphis, Tenn.

"Pol Pot split us up," she said. "I never saw my husband again."

Her children, an 8-year-old son and a 9-month-old daughter, died in 1976 of cholera and diarrhea.

"There was no medicine," she said. "My son died first, then my daughter. I buried them in Battambang. A month after my daughter died, I was told my husband was killed. I was alone. I was sent to a mobile unit for single people to carry soil.

Today the woman manages a state-owned textile factory that employs more than 600 workers.

"I don't want to remarry," she said, "because I think of my husband and two children very much."

Survival Ordeal

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — "If I tell you a hundred thousand times, it could not compare to the real situation," said Vorng-Naren, a widow at 33, whose husband, two children and 29 other relatives died at the hands of the Khmer Rouge.

"I cannot find the words to express it," she said through a government interpreter. "I could not live as a human being. I ate like an animal."

She said she was ordered executed by the Khmer Rouge for giving a tin of rice to an old lady, but the Soviet-made AK-47 rifle misfired.

"The soldiers took the AK-47 and beat me on my head until I was unconscious," she recalled. "They thought I was dead. At midnight I woke up amidst the bodies of five women friends who were shot."

On the day the Khmer Rouge marched into Phnom Penh 10 years ago, she said, they forced her family into hard labor in Battambang Province in northwestern Cambodia.

After 25 Years, 'Take Me Along' Returns To Broadway

By MICHAEL KUCHWARA
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 25 years after it first appeared in New York, "Take Me Along" has found its way back to Broadway.

"It's a show that refuses to die," laughs composer Bob Merrill, referring to the latest incarnation, a version of the musical that began last September at the Goodspeed Opera House in East Haddam, Conn., with no ambitions of venturing beyond the Connecticut River Valley.

But the Goodspeed production was so popular during its 10-week run that the show went on tour, first to the Shubert Theater in New Haven and then on to Washington, where Kennedy Center chairman Roger L. Stevens decided to bring the musical into New York. It's now playing at Broadway's Martin Beck Theater.

For Merrill, who wrote the show's music and lyrics, the return of "Take Me Along" has been especially sweet. It is based on "Ah, Wilderness!," Eugene O'Neill's only comedy, and chronicles the coming of age of a young, aspiring writer growing up in a small Connecticut town at the turn of the century.

When producer David Merrick opened the show on Broadway in October 1959, he cast Robert Morse as the young man, Richard; Walter Pidgeon as his father, newspaper publisher Nat Miller; and Jackie Gleason as the boy's ne'er-do-well Uncle Sid.

"Gleason was an enormous star at the time. He was very good, but his presence very nearly threw the show out of balance," recalled Merrill in an interview. However, it was Gleason who had the box-office appeal, and when he was replaced by William Bendix a year later, "Take Me Along" folded. It had played 448 performances.

"Now the show is more of an ensemble piece," Merrill said. "It's been cast with veteran musical comedy performers, although they are not well-known outside of the theater."

Gone is a dream ballet in the second act — a dark and gloomy dance number that just didn't work, according to Merrill. Three new songs have been added for the current production. They were written for a cable television version of the show that never materialized, and went into the musical when Goodspeed decided to revive it last year.

"There's more of O'Neill in this version, too" said Merrill, discussing the book which was co-authored by Joseph Stein and Robert Russell. "Some of his dialogue has been put back in."

Merrill is something of an expert on setting Eugene O'Neill to music. His first Broadway show was "New Girl in Town," a 1957 song-and-dance version of O'Neill's "Anna Christie," which starred Gwen Verdon and Thelma Ritter. He originally wrote it as a movie musical while under contract to MGM. It was to have starred Doris Day and Ezio Pinza.

"But then Pinza died, and movie musicals fell out of favor," Merrill said, so the project languished until a young producer named Harold Prince picked it up for Broadway.

It was with "Take Me Along" that Merrill began his association with Merrick. The relationship produced such hits as "Carnival!" in 1961 and "Sugar," which Merrill wrote with Jule Styne in 1972. Styne also provided the music for Merrill's biggest Broadway success, "Funny Girl," with Barbra Streisand in 1964.

Broadway hasn't been his only venture into show business. Now the 65-year-old Merrill lives in Los Angeles, where he's a full professor at Loyola University. His subject? Screenwriting.

He's been in the entertainment business since the late 1930s, starting as a nightclub singer in Philadelphia and after World War II, working as a dialogue director at Columbia Pictures for scores of B movies. He also was a production consultant for an advertising agency and in between, wrote songs.

In fact, Merrill probably always will be immortalized as the author of such early 1950 artifacts as "How Much Is That Doggie in the Window?," "If I Knew You Were Coming, I'd Have Baked a Cake" and "Sparrow in the Tree Top."

Debunking A Hero Creates Protests

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — A TV movie that portrays one of Britain's national heroes, explorer Robert Scott, as an arrogant bumbler, has raised a blizzard of protests from his family and fans.

The Royal Navy officer, known to generations of British schoolboys as Scott of the Antarctic, has for more than 70 years been honored as the embodiment of the Victorian "bulldog breed" of gentleman adventurers.

Scott and four companions, beaten in a race to be the first to reach the South Pole by Norway's Roald Amundsen, died on their trek back to their base camp in 1912. Dispirited, hungry and weak, they froze to death only 11 miles from a food cache.

Scott's image as a symbol of all that made Victorian Britain great — determination, moral rectitude and a stiff upper lip in the face of overwhelming odds — has remained largely untarnished since his death at age 44.

Now "The Last Place on Earth," a $8.25 million TV epic from Central Television, makes him out to be an overbearing fool who ignored advice, leading his expedition to glorious disaster.

The only thing the seven-segment miniseries does not question is Scott's courage. The movie is based on a 1979 book by Roland Huntford which first publicly questioned Scott's character and abilities.

"We live in an age which wishes to belittle and sneer at achievement. But nothing can take away the courage with which those men faced disaster. Even the nasty debunkers can't do that," saidScott's eldest son, naturalist and wildlife artist Sir Peter Scott, who was 2 years old when his father died.

He was bitter over suggestions that his mother had an affair with another Norwegian explorer, Fridtjof Nansen, while she waited for her husband to return.Central Television, in the face of family protests, cut a scene showing her standing naked in a German hotel room while Nansen tells her Amundsen has beaten Scott to the Pole.

Sir Peter noted: "My mother and Nansen were very friendly, but I don't believe they had an affair. She wasn't that kind of woman."

Lord Kennet, son of Scott's widow by her second husband, noted in an angry letter to The Times of London: "I have no objection to skeletons being found in family cupboards, but I do object to them being planted there."

The debunking of Scott also drew protests from the Royal Geographic Society, which helped fund the ill-fated 1912 expedition.

Central Television said the movie "is a fictional account based on fact. It's not a definitive historical documentary. It's inevitable there will be differences of opinion about interpretation."

Martin Shaw, who portrayed a macho undercover agent in the TV action series "The Professionals," plays Scott with convincing moodiness.Scott's wife, Kathleen, is played by Susan Wooldridge, who starred in the highly acclaimed "Jewel in the Crown."

After 26 weeks of filming, much of it around Canada's Frobisher Bay near the Arctic Circle in sub-zero temperatures, Shaw said Scott remains an enigma to him.

"I don't think anybody, even those closest to him, knew who he really was," he said. "I feel enormous admiration for his achievement, but I was quite baffled by his sudden changes of character. We tried to humanize the myth."

Trevor Griffiths, one of Britain's top playwrights who wrote the series, said: "The case against Scott is devastating. I've no interest in knocking him as a person. One should see him as a victim of the values and structures of that age.

"Amundsen operated with a form of collective leadership with authority based on skill and experience, rather than on the empty rhetoric of Scott's class-based, hierarchic set-up."

Director Ferdinand Fairfax said the movie "examines not only the man, but the attitudes of a whole country. He was ill-equipped and ill-advised. The level of his failure was catastrophic and speaks volumes about Britain at the time."

First Visit

ALGECIRAS, Spain (AP) — The prime minister of Gibraltar has visited Spain for the first time in 21 years, two months after the Spanish government opened the gate separating the rock island from the mainland.

Joshua Hassan vowed in 1964 not to visit Spain until relations with Gibraltar were normalized.

Spanish authorities lifted all restrictions on entering Gibraltar on Feb. 5. The gates had been opened to pedestrians only in December 1982 — 13 years after the late Gen. Francisco Franco ordered them shut in an attempt to force Britain into negotiations over sovereignty.

Spain claims the 2.2 square-mile rock on the southern tip of Spain as an integral part of its territory. Gibraltar was ceded to Great Britain through the Treaty of Utrecht in 1813.

Dreams Of A Vertical Desert City Remain Unfulfilled

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

CORDES JUNCTION, Ariz. (AP) — Out here in the high desert two hours north of Phoenix, amid the mesquite and the dry grass, a dream languishes. Three percent of a dream, anyway.

It is the concrete core of a someday city, the dream of Italian architect Paolo Soleri, a thin, almost frail man with a voice so soft one must bend to his words.

The dream was Ozymandian in a sense. Soleri was and is proud of it. A city that would face the sun from which all blessings flowed, a layered metropolis, one with nature, self-contained and yet offering access to an unmuted, uncontaminated landscape. He called it Arcosanti, and said grandly:

"The urbanization process is actually a process of reaching grace and actualizing love."

In the 1970s Soleri was flooded with students of new wave architecture, looking for answers to the sprawling urban dilemma, the rotting inner cities, the ghetto mentality. To many, Paolo Soleri and his vision of a vertical city were the answer.

It was to house 5,000, would draw its energy from the sun and its food from vast greenhouses. It would rise 25 stories over the desert. There would be no automobiles and no need for them. Everything would be reachable on foot. Basic industry would be clustered, as would cultural and community resources. At a distance it would appear as one building, but it would be a vertical cluster of many buildings.

Today, at age 65, Paolo Soleri tries to keep his dream alive with meager funds, a budget of something less than a half million dollars a year. He notes ruefully that he is now entitled to a senior citizen's discount at the movies, but always seems to go at the wrong times.

Once his workshops drew 300 students apiece — as many as 1,700 a year — each paying some $500 to contribute their work and learn from Soleri. He once said, "We could not do what we are doing without the affluent young person. The youth in this country might be spoiled but they are less cynical than in many other countries."

Now staff and students number only about 50 over the year, and many are at work fashioning the ceramic and brass windbells and other artistic objects which provide most of the revenue for the Cosanti Foundation, Soleri's umbrella organization.

He visits Arcosanti three or four times a week to oversee the work at the site and plan the future. But contrasted to a decade ago, there is little work to oversee, and the future appears dimmer and shorter.

Was he too ambitious? Were the eyes of youth too bright with expectations? Does he feel regret?

"Maybe I could have been a very successful architect if I had stayed in the profession," he says. "But the trouble with that is, if I had, I would not have developed the ideas that I think are very, very important."

Perhaps his plans were too ambitious, he allows, "since everything is not coming about. But I have many questions. I still don't know why. I still don't know why society didn't respond."

Was he ahead of his time?

There is no laughter in his voice as he says, "I've been told that many times and I kept laughing.

"But maybe they're right. I don't know."

Soleri lives and works at the Cosanti Foundation in Paradise Valley, an affluent suburb of Scottsdale, Ariz., which is a mostly affluent suburb of Phoenix. There is a garden-like gallery, hung with his windbells, where his architectural ideas are on display. One, perhaps the most famous, is the design of a city which looks like an enormous mountain standing over its own reflection in a lake.

He leads a simple, if not ascetic life, in a painter's studio without air-conditioning in a state which lives on air-conditioning.

The loss of his wife, Colly, two years ago, was both a personal and professional tragedy. She was a partner, an integral part of his work.

Will Arcosanti ever be completed?

"The completion of it went out the window many years ago. But what I have been trying to do in the last five or six years is to focus on the critical mass, which is about 10 percent of the system, which would be about 500 people active on the site. I think at that point it would be self-sustaining and also quite interesting."

But how to do it, how to raise the money for the concrete and the interest in the workers?

"The new thing is the 'cause bells.'"

He would dedicate the bells he makes to various causes. There would be children's bells, hunger bells, bells to protest atomic warfare, pollution.

"If they start going, they could be good revenue and would also connect the project with those causes. We'd give a percentage of the income to the causes and, if any cause wants to endorse the idea, they can sell them and make more money. Then they get more than a percentage of our sales."

Architecture professor Jeffrey Cook of Arizona State University points out that Soleri was once considered a worthy successor to the great triumvirate of American architecture, H.H. Richardson who practiced in Boston in the late 1800s, Louis Sullivan who practiced in Chicago in the early 1900s and Frank Lloyd Wright, his student, who dominated American architecture until his death in the 1950s.

Soleri, a student of Wright's, says that while Wright drew on the horizontal use of space, he uses space vertically.

Cook says it is hard to characterize Soleri because he has built so little, although he has published ideas and images prolifically.

He tells a story to define Soleri:

"An architect says, 'He's a fine man with good ideas, but he's really an artist.' An artist says, 'He's a fine man with good images, but really a theologian.' A theologian says, 'He's a fine man with interesting positions, but he's really an architect.'"

Cook says that Soleri himself has said that he has contributed innovative ideas and images and hopes that someone, someday, can put them into three-dimensional form.

What the world has in three-dimensional form is Arcosanti which, in its present state of hesitant construction, looks something like several beehives sundered. But wandering through its incomplete rooms, one gets a concept of space from its circular windows and its concrete arches that is most interesting. Yet, the overwhelming sense is raw concrete.

In the visitors' center, with its cafe and gift shop, its high ceilings and highly polished hardwood floors, there are hints to what Soleri is getting at. But in the other wing of the complex, used for Soleri's own quarters and for architectural planning, there is the feeling of cathedral and monastery.

Soleri has always worked long hours and eaten sparsely, led a reclusive life. Age and the loss of his wife, his friends say, has accentuated those tendencies.

His long-standing interest in theology continues to occupy much of his attention. He writes prolifically on the subject. He would, he says, turn Christianity upside down.

"I call it flip-over Christianity. Basically all the work that religion has been involved with has been wishful thinking...I'm not a believer in a God that generates or supervises..."

He once said, "We are not the children of divinity. We are the father of divinity. So it is our task to turn the physical universe into a divine universe."

As the buildings in the desert testify, that is no simple task.

Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

The Stanley Steamer was one of the hottest items on the early American auto scene. It utilized a very efficient high-pressure steam boiler that was light in weight and combined with a reversing two-cylinder steam engine.

In tribute to that car which captured the imagination of many people at the turn of the century, the U.S. Postal Service has issued a 12-cent coil stamp featuring a 1909 Stanley Steamer as part of the Transportation Series, which depicts early modes of transportation.

Across the top of the stamp in three lines is "Stanley Steamer 1909," "USA" and "12."

First day cancellations are available for collectors. If you prefer to purchase the stamp at your local post office and affix to your own envelope, you must add 10 cents more in postage to meet the minimum first class rate. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Postmaster, Kingfield, ME, 0497-9991. It must be postmarked no later than May 2.

For the USPS to affix the stamp, enclose a money order for 22 cents. They will place the 12-cent Stanley Steamer stamp on the envelope plus a 10-cent "Petition For Redress" coil stamp. Send to: Stanley Steamer Stamp, Postmaster, Kingfield, ME 04947-9992 prior to May 2.

The U.S. Postal Service previously announced that a "Combat Hunger" commemorative stamp would be issued this year. It is still on the agenda but the wording will read "Help End Hunger." The theory behind the change is that the word "combat" is too strong for the war on hunger and starvation.

A 14-cent postal card has been issued featuring Declaration of Independence signer Charles Carroll of Maryland. Carroll is the 11th person to be honored in the Patriots Series of postal cards. When he signed the famed Declaration he wrote Charles Carroll of Carrollton. He helped draft the Maryland Constitution of 1776 and served as a member of the U.S. Senate from 1789 to 1792. He died in 1832, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.

A new Souvenir Card honors "Olymphilex '85", the international philatelic exhibition held in Lausanne, Switzerland.

The card, printed in French, reads: "Lausanne receives the attention of the entire world community as the home of the International Olympic Committee. For the Olympic year 1984 just past, the United States issued illustrative stamps, including this 40-cent stamp depicting a gymnast, one of 24 stamps commemorating the Games. Switzerland, meanwhile, paid tribute to Lausanne's Olympic importance with an 80 centime stamp."

The "Olymphilex 85" card can be ordered directly through the Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265-9997. Canceled cards are $2.00 each and the uncanceled versions are $2.40. Mail orders to the Sales Division are subject to a $5.00 minimum and 50-cent handling fee per order.

Novel Blends Factors In Cowboy And Indian Story

By DOLORES BARCLAY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Chief Sun Horse and Lisa Putnam were friends in a remote trading post called Putnam's Park. The chief's group of Sioux had lived outside the settlement for years on friendly terms with the whites.

With one swift and deft touch of his pen, author John Byrne Cooke changes that amiable atmosphere in his saga "Snowblind Moon" (Simon and Schuster, $18.95), a novel that blends fact with fiction to produce an ambitious cowboy and Indian yarn of Wyoming in the late 19th century.

It is the 44-year-old Cooke's first book and it took him four years to write. "The kind of writing I like makes me feel that I'm there in the book," he said. "I was trying to imagine it fully. . .. First I'm trying to tell a story and also tell a story that will make the West interesting to people."

Cooke's passion for the West and westerns developed when he was a child. He is the son of journalist and TV commentator Alistair Cooke. His parents divorced when he was 4 years old and he was raised by his mother.

There was no television set in his home in New York — "My family looked down their noses at televsion" — so Cooke did not encounter a good old-fashioned shoot 'em up until he was 17 years old. He was visiting an uncle in Boston and got to watch reruns of old TV hit westerns.

"I always loved the West and tales of the West which I first encountered in mythic form," he said in an interview. "I didn't start reading about the real West until I got out of college. The true history of the West was really neglected in the teaching of U.S. history."

He saw his father on Saturdays for movies and shared his newfound fondness for cowboy and Indian yarns. "He introduced me to (James) Cagney and (Humphrey) Bogart and comedians and I introduced him to westerns," Cooke said. "I think he fell in love with the land while driving across the country during the war (World War II). He told me the land makes history come alive."

The land is essential to Cooke's story because of its importance to the characters and to the historical events that unfold upon it — Gen. George Armstrong Custer's attack on Black Kettle's village, the Sand Creek atrocity.

Cooke lives in the West — just outside of Jackson Hole, Wyo. He plays in a bar band called the Stage Coach Band. The music is traditional country and some bluegrass.

Years ago, while a student at Harvard College, Cooke played in a bluegrass band called the Charles River Valley Boys. When he graduated, the '60s were simmering and he didn't give too much thought to serious writing. Also, rock 'n' roll came along and made it difficult to make money playing folk music.

So Cooke explored other areas. He found himself on a film crew shooting the Monterey Pop music festival in Monterey, Calif., in 1967, saw Big Brother and the Holding Company with Janis Joplin and became the group's road manager. He stayed with Miss Joplin until she died in October 1970 after an accidental overdose of heroin.

"I stayed at it for three years because I liked and respected the people as performing musicians and they were able to go out there and do their thing," Cooke said. "It was challenging and interesting, but I also was aware at the time that I wanted to do my work."

Within a year after Miss Joplin's death, Cooke had started to write film scripts.

He has two ideas for his next book. One is set in the Gold Rush period, but Cooke really hasn't found a story yet to illuminate it. The other he described as a "contemporary story that's kind of a black comedy."

He doesn't know which idea he'll tackle, but judging from the popularity of "Snowblind Moon," he suspects his publisher will probably prefer the historical novel.

A Real Foster Mom

HOUSTON (AP) — Pauline Waldrop once had so many children that she bought fabric by the bolt to make all their diapers. Since 1933 she has been "Mom" to 726 foster children.

Mrs. Waldrop's 'babies" all have grown and now bring their own children to visit the 78-year-old Houston woman. On Wednesday, she was honored by the Houston Sertoma Club with the agency's Service to Mankind Award.

Most of the children — ranging in age from 3 days to the teens — stayed until they were put up for adoption. But two who that came as babies remained with her until they were 17 and joined the armed services.

"I used to buy cloth by the bolt, and we'd cut it in different sizes and make diapers," Mrs. Waldrop said.

Sir William Mulock, pioneer of the British Empire-wide penny postage, died in 1944 at the age of 100.

Roadblocks

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — Police and soldiers have cleared roadblocks in Kingston and two rural areas that demonstrators had erected to protest high prices and reductions in the size of local governing bodies.

Police said members of rival political parties hurled stones at each other at one of the roadblocks in the capital before police got there. No injuries were reported.

Foreign Writers Today Finding A Creative Refuge In Paris

By GREG MacARTHUR
Associated Press Writer

PARIS (AP) — The Lost Generation of American literary expatriates, whose brief self-exile in Paris was part adventure and part cultural salvation, has been replaced by another group of important foreign writers for whom exile is a matter of survival.

Today's exiles come from the Soviet Union, Eastern Europe, Africa, Latin America and Iran. They are older, mostly in their 50s, and they live and write in Paris because for political reasons they cannot do so at home.

Most did not choose exile but were forced into it by repressive governments. What they share with their exuberant Jazz Age American predecessors is that they chose France.

"We Romanians have a special relationship with France," novelist and human rights activist Paul Goma, 50, said in an interview. "We share a Latin language and we are francophile by tradition. ... There is something in the air about France for a writer."

"Like most South Americans, I didn't want to settle in Spain," said Uruguayan poet and journalist Ricardo Paseyro, 56. "We have an anti-colonial prejudice about Spain, which was, of course, fascist until recently. So where do you go? You go to France, to Paris."

Persian Poet Nader Naderpour, 55, was a student in Paris in the 1950s. "I was here for the last days of the last French giants — Andre Gide, Albert Camus, (Jean-Paul) Sartre. France, for me, has always been my second country," he said.

However, life in exile "has something of a false flavor" for Naderpour. "It isn't real. It doesn't give you that extraordinary sensation of life, of pleasure, of joy, even of sadness," he said.

Though French culture continues to seduce artists around the world, life in the City of Light, as some of today's exiles made clear, can be something less than what Ernest Hemingway once described as a "moveable feast."

"For the Americans who came in the 1920s, Paris was a vacation, a lark," Soviet novelist Vladimir Maximov said in an interview. "For the Russian writers here now it's no vacation; it's a trial, and most of us have to fight to survive."

Maximov, 54, arrived in Paris on March 1, 1974 after being stripped of his citizenship. His published novels in the West include the semi-autobiographical "Farewell From Nowhere" and the critically acclaimed "Seven Days of Creation."

Like South Africa's Breyton Breytenbach, Goma, Cameroon author and publisher Mongo Beti and others, Maximov served prison terms at home before being forced into exile.

Some of the exiles, including Kundera and Breytenbach, have achieved international acclaim since leaving their native countries. Kundera's latest novel, "The Incredible Lightness of Being," was an international literary event. Breytenbach gained critical acclaim this year for "The True Confessions of an Albino Terrorist."

But some writers, although translated in small anthologies into English, French and Italian, remain largely unknown outside their own countries.

In exile, Naderpour is cut off from his readers and his original source of inspiration. Most of his recent poems have been unusually nostalgic, he said, and he is not sure they will ever be published in Iran.

"A writer in exile can live on his memories only so long, cut off from his readers and his own language," Maximov said through an interpreter.

"From the point of view of creativity, I lost everything. Immigration was only a matter of saving myself physically," he said. "You feel like a fish, thrown up on the beach by the waves. You just open your mouth and lie there until you die."

Goma, who arrived in Paris in 1977, has had six novels published before and after his exile. Still, there are frustrations. "I write in Romanian knowing that I will never be published in that language," he said.

And a smaller loss: "My wife and I miss the rhythm of the seasons in Romania, where the winter is really winter, spring is an explosion — the dramatic changes."

Naderpour, on a cold, gray day in Paris, talked of "the blue skies and sunshine of Iran, and most of all the smell of the trees and the rain. ...

"When I was at home in Tehran and I closed all the windows, I could still hear, with my inner ear, the slightest vibration from the street. In exile, if I open the windows wide, I remain deaf.

"I hear the noise, but the noise does not concern me.

We proudly introduce "Fragrance in the American Spirit" by Perry Ellis for women and men, influenced by the fresh, youthful character of Perry Ellis designs and his preference for natural elements. Perry Ellis for Women, an exciting, clean fragrance born of American flowers, is touched with fruits and precious woods. The fragrance, inspired by the spirit of America, is captured in a contemporary glass flask, reminiscent of the early American glass creations. Ellis chose his favorite gemstones in colors that symbolize the great natural beauty of the American landscape to crown the perfume bottles. Each perfume is adorned with its own distinct cabochon: Malachite-1 oz. perfume; Lavender Amethyst-½ oz. perfume; Red Jasper-¼ oz. perfume; Hematine-⅓ oz. Gemstone Wand perfume natural spray.

Perry Ellis for Men, a crisp, long lasting masculine scent, is a blend of fine American spices with touches of herbs and the warmth of wood and leathers. The cologne and the after shave collection, "Refreshing" and "Soothing", satisfies every man's shaving needs. The bottle reflects the early American "pinch" design of the women's bottle with a masterful contoured cap characteristic of early American whale ivory carving.

Perry Ellis for Women, Eau de Toilette Natural Spray. 2.5 oz. 30.00 Also: Perry Ellis Perfume. ¼ fl. oz. 50.00 Gemstone Wand Perfume Natural Spray Refill. .33 fl. oz. 45.00 Perry Ellis for Men: Cologne for Men. 1.7 fl. oz. 20.00 Also: Refreshing After Shave. 1.7 fl. oz. 15.00 Soothing After Shave. 1.7 fl. oz. 15.00

Artist Draws Attention To Old Stone Town

By BARRY SHLACHTER
Associated Press Writer

ZANZIBAR, Tanzania (AP) — In a high-ceilinged studio in a century-old building, John Baptist de Silva is using paint brush and canvas in hopes of drawing world attention to the plight of Zanzibar's old Stone Town.

The artist is working on a series of oil paintings and water colors depicting both the beauty and sad decline of the community, an "Arabian Nights" maze of narrow, winding streets lined with buildings in an advanced state of decay.

De Silva, 48, hopes to arrange exhibitions abroad depicting the unusual architecture, a blend of Middle Eastern, European and Indian design, a legacy of this former slave-trading center's mixed heritage.

A 1983 United Nations study called the town an important part of the world's "patrimony" that is now seriously threatened. Few of the stone and lime structures have been maintained since a leftist revolution toppled the old Arab sultanate in 1964.

One of the buildings de Silva painted has since joined a number of others that have collapsed in the past five years, their falling masonry fatally injuring four people.

Twice a year, monsoon downpours drench Stone Town, rotting mangrove poles that support roofs and weakening the clay, stone and lime walls of the buildings, some of them dating from the early 1700s.

"After heavy rains, we can lose 10 houses or more," Sulaiman V. Said, 36, chief architect at the Ministry of Water, Construction and Energy, said in an interview. "If you can stop the seepage, the Stone Town will last forever."

Said and other officials, along with de Silva, hope that much of the Stone Town can be saved now that overseas support for renovation has begun to be expressed.

In January, Norway agreed to fund two-thirds of a $750,000 pilot project to rehabilitate a crumbling three-story building of workshops and dwellings on Gizenga Street, behind a castellated Arab fort.

Craftsmen who make the island's distinctive leather sandals and carve its famous iron-studded wooden doors are to be moved into No. 177 Gizenga St. on completion as part of a plan to encourage traditional cottage industries in the old town.

Zanzibar's government, with little funds of its own, has appealed to potential foreign donor governments to contribute $42.9 million toward nine renovation projects it identified with the help of the U.N. Center for Human Settlements (Habitat).

"Many of the buildings have fallen down and many are about to," said de Silva, driving around the narrow streets. "But there is a move to repair the buildings."

Ulrich Malisius, a West German architect and town planner working at the Ministry of Water, Construction and Energy, said in an interview that hundreds of the some 2,500 houses in the old Stone Town "are in poor condition and the renovation of a single house does not help very much."

He said only concerted action of all residents and public and private houseowners, in cooperation with foreign donors, can stop further dilapidation of the town. But not all houseowners seemed in tune with plans to preserve the town's traditional aspect.

Upsetting to de Silva are changes initiated by individual householders altering traditionally designed windows, facia boards and loggia galleries that contribute to the Stone Town's unique appearance.

"Some people are spraying walls with cement, changing their original flat texture and using bright yellows and greens instead of the original light cream or blue-gray hues," he complained.

De Silva, a member of the island's tiny Goan community which traces its roots to the former Portuguese colony on India's west coast, is also compiling a book of photographs and sketches of the Stone Town. He designed and provided photographs for Zanzibar's official tourist pamphlet, and got involved in the renovation campaign by restoring the Roman Catholic cathedral.

De Silva also has accepted a commission to redecorate traditional Zanzibari motifs in an inn recently converted from a multistory Arab mansion.

A friend, former Attorney General Wolfango Dourado, says that the artist's only motivation is his personal attachment to the historic town.

"He once came to me practically in tears when the castellated walls of a school were flattened and covered with corrugated metal sheets. We have to stop this vandalism.

"I see him as a person with aesthetic values who is shattered by the willful destruction around him," Dourado said.

Book Reviews

Over the past 40 odd years, Malcolm Cowley has written more than 500 incisive articles of comment on the literary scene.

It's unfortunate that they couldn't all be gathered together in this superb collection but the more than 50 that are here give a fine critical summation of the state of American writing from 1941 to the near present.

As editor Donald W. Faulkner points out in his introduction: "Few other writers of his time have made such a searching and continuous contribution to American letters. Few other writers have had the imagination and the energy to engage in such an effort."

Readers of Cowley's work also must have imagination and energy. While his sentences are incisive, they are not simplistic. The statements he makes about writers and writing in general are not overwhelming, but they do require the reader's attention first and then meditation on what has been said.

Do these things, and the rewards are great.

The book is divided into three parts: "The War Years and After," "The Usable Past," and "Assessments and Retrospections." In the first, Cowley discusses literature in general. He scores a good point, and one that is valid even now, in an essay discussing the books of World War II when he notes: "He (the critic) sees book after book manufactured on the assembly line — the 1943 models, reconditioned and stripped of chromium, but with the old dependable motors inside."

In the second part, he discusses the ways in which contemporary literature is influenced by that of the past. One of the essays included here, "Part of a Century," beautifully sums up American literature from 1900 to 1960, and does so in not quite seven pages.

The final section deals with writers, their work, and Cowley's evaluation of them. There are fine insights here and succinct summations, such as the one about John O'Hara who turned out a prodigious amount of work but: "In the end his output of words outran his considerable power of invention."

One of Ireland's most important contributions to literature is its theater, and one of the persons most responsible for paving the way for Ireland's literary renaissance was Augusta Lady Gregory.

The 12th of 16 children of a wealthy Irish Protestant landowner, plain, and largely ignored by her parents, Augusta Persse as a child sought refuge in literature and later taught herself Gaelic so she could translate native Irish folktales into English. At age 28, she married Sir William Gregory, 35 years her senior and owner of neighboring Coole Park, an estate where Augusta found the inspiration that led to the rebirth of Irish literature and theater.

Widowed at age 40 (she would wear widow's weeds for the rest of her life), and left with a young son to raise, Augusta channeled her energies into new acquaintances and new ideas. At 50, she began to write the first of 40 plays, many of which premiered at Dublin's Abbey Theatre.

Along with W.B. Yeats and J.M. Synge, Lady Gregory was one of the founders of this famous theatrical institution. Under her patronage and direction, the Abbey would evolve as a focal point for the young Irish playwrights.

The emergence of the Abbey and the growing authority of its writers parallels Ireland's emergence as a nation independent of Britain.

"Lady Gregory" is not just a portrait of a remarkable, intelligent woman; it is also a portrait of other personalities — Synge, Yeats, Shaw — who helped to bring about a new age of Irish literature.

Ten Years Ago, The Children Said Goodbye

By GEORGE ESPER
AP Special Correspondent

PHNOM PENH, Cambodia (AP) — "OK, bye-bye," waving Cambodian children called out 10 years ago to the last Americans leaving the country as the communist Khmer Rouge closed in on this capital city.

It was April 12, 1975, when U.S. Marine helicopters lifted out the last 82 Americans including Ambassador John Gunther Dean, who was clutching the embassy's flag.

On April 17, 1975, the Khmer Rouge rolled into Phnom Penh and began a campaign of terror that lasted three years, eight months and 20 days until they were ousted by invading Vietnamese who felt threatened by Pol Pot's forces.

The United States provided $1.18 billion in military aid and $503 million in economic assistance to the pro-Western government of Lon Nol from 1970 until its fall five days after the evacuation of the U.S. Embassy.

Only a few Americans are in Cambodia today, working with private aid organizations. The United States does not recognize any government in Cambodia.

The old U.S. Embassy, where the Americans helped plan air strikes and direct war efforts in support of Lon Nol, is now used by the department of fisheries.

It is hard to find a Cambodian today who hasn't lost at least one family member, who hasn't at one time or another been homeless since 1970.

From 1970 until 1975, Cambodia lost between 600,000 and 800,000 dead in the war between the Khmer Rouge and the U.S.-supported Lon Nol government.

Under the Pol Pot regime, according to the current Vietnamese-backed government, 3,314,768 Cambodians were massacred or disappeared. Other estimates of the dead range from 1.5 million to 3 million out of a 1975 population estimated at 7.3 million.

Sneads Ferry — A Coastal Place Often Overlooked By Travelers

To say it's at land's end, or an exceptionally remote place, is not exactly true — but except for the big annual Shrimp Festival in August that lures big crowds of seafood lovers, the fishing village and community of Sneads Ferry is a lovely coastal place often overlooked by both local and out-of-state visitors.

For one thing, it lies a few miles off the main travel artery of U.S. 17 that takes travelers south to Wilmington or north to New Bern, two historic towns frequently the destination of tourists — and it's not within convenient reach of the well known beach attractions in the Beaufort-Morehead area, about 50 miles northeast by cutting through N.C. 172 that bisects the large Camp Lejeune Marine military installation.

The first, and continued impression after several visits to this lovely, rustic place is that the inhabitants are not too concerned about their village becoming a favorite watering place — after all, settlements in the community date back well over a century and a half, and they have gotten by so far.

Changes have indeed taken place from time to time, as older life-long residents attest. "We're still a community where fishing, especially shrimping and farming are the main occupations," said Rufus Yopp. "Things have changed a lot since I was young. The ferry shut down 40 years ago or more when the first bridge (over New River) was built. Then in the 1940's, I believe it was, the new bridge was built.

"Many of our people now have work at the military base, (Camp Lejeune, which borders the northern shore of New River), and we have quite a few young marines who live in and around Sneads Ferry."

Yopp's family line in the community goes way back. "My great-great grandfather gave the land for the old cemetery, and that was back in the late 1700s or early 1800s."

Another old timer, fisherman Ben Mullis, Sr., confirms that "fishing is still our main thing here. I've been in the fishing business a long time." Asked about the days when the ferry was in operation, he said "I don't recall the date, but it's been a long time."

Sneads Ferry's younger people, many with roots outside the community, speak with respect and fondness of the older, long-established members of the community. A young marine who didn't want to be identified, remarked that all the people he has encountered are friendly and seem glad to have us here.

Travelers who enjoy spending a few hours in a place that has to offer an ambience of naturalness, an atmosphere void of excessive 1980s plastic and neon trappings, will find the village of Sneads Ferry and the surrounding community has its own special rewards.

How To Get There

From Greenville, two basic routes are available. One is to Kinston, then taking U.S. 258 to Jacksonville, turning south on U.S. 17 to Dixon for the turn-off on N.C. 210 to Sneads Ferry.

Another way is to travel to New Bern, then take U.S. 17 south to Jacksonville, afterwards following the same route listed above.

Travelers wanting to traverse the Camp Lejeune Marine Base (neat woods and training areas) can take N.C. 24 east from Jacksonville, turning south at Hubert on N.C. 172 which takes the traveler through the base and across the New River bridge into Sneads Ferry.

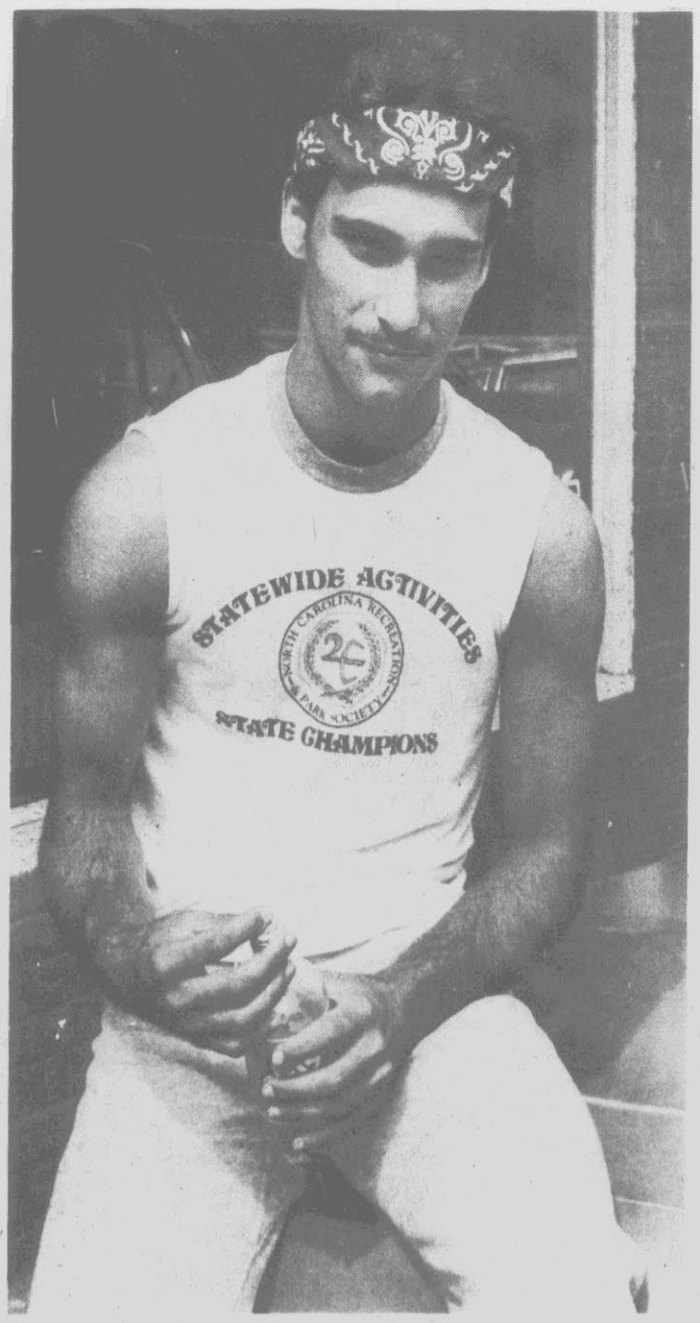
INTRIGUING TREES . . . Trees whose sculpted shapes have been determined by the force and direction of wind form an interesting part of the landscape in the Sneads Ferry community, especially in the area of Gator Bay and on a nearby island.

Old and young respect each other's lifestyles



YOUNG CHAMPION . . . Glenn Sylvain is one of the community's young that others are proud of. He is a member of an area Recreation and Parks baseball team that took state honors.

A GATHERING PLACE . . . The Chat 'n' Chew in the old downtown part of Sneads ferry is a gathering place for hungry customers, particularly the town's younger people looking for burgers, pizzas and other quick foods. A couple of seafood restaurants are located at points in the countryside not far distant from the downtown area.

NOTICE OF SALE

This property will be sold as one property.

Property located on State Road #1725 approximately 9 miles southeast of Greenville, North Carolina in the Swift Creek Township of Pitt County. Consists of 42.35 acres of land, more or less, and more particularly described in the Deed filed on the 13th day of April, 1984 with the Pitt County Registry, Greenville, North Carolina.

Sealed bids will be received by the Farmers Home Administration, 115 Eastbrook Drive, Greenville, North Carolina 27834, until Friday, May 3, 1985, at 5:00 o'clock p.m. and will be publicly opened at the Farmers Home Administration, Room 570, 310 New Bern Avenue, Raleigh, North Carolina 27601, on Thursday, May 9, 1984, at 3:00 o'clock p.m. Five percent (5%) bid deposit in the form of cash, cashier's check or certified check payable to the Treasurer of the United States will be required. The Government reserves the right to reject any and all bids.

TERMS Cash or ten percent (10%) down and the balance payable in fifteen (15) equal annual installments of principal plus interest on the unpaid balance at a rate of ten and three-quarters percent (10-¾%) per annum or the prevailing rate at the time of bid acceptance by the Government.

For inspection of the property, information, and bid forms, contact Mr. Bert M. Hall, Acting County Supervisor, Farmers Home Administration, 115 Eastbrook Drive, Greenville, North Carolina 27834. Telephone: (919) 752-2035.

PLEASE NOTE THAT:

1. Bids will be accepted only in writing on Form FmHA 465-10, "Invitation, Bid and Acceptance." Any conditions of the bid proposed by the bidder which are not specified on Form FmHA 465-10 must be attached to Form FmHA 465-10,

2. If the bids received are for the same amount, preference will be given to the bid offering cash over the bid requesting financing by FmHA.

3. Bidders whose bids contain the condition that FmHA finance the sale on terms will submit, along with Form FmHA 465-10, a current financial statement and a pro forma statement indicating their repayment ability.

The Peugeot 505S is very much a car for comfort of mind... Rolling in luxury
In this case, what produces comfort of mind with a Peugeot also produces comfort of body.
The array of standard equipment on the 505S is quite staggering in its length. There is room here for only a partial list:
• Air conditioning
• Power-assisted steering
• Power-assisted 4-wheel disc brakes
• 4-wheel independent suspension
• Alloy wheels
• Electric sunroof
• Electric windows
• Cruise control
• Central locking for all four doors and fuel tank
• Digital stereo radio/cassette system with scan tuning and four speakers
• Side mirrors that de-ice themselves
• Heated front seats.

NOBODY DOES IT BETTER

How Jeannette Cox has become Greenville's Most Successful Relocation Specialist.

When corporations need help in the transfer and relocation of their employees in the Greenville area, more of them call Jeannette Cox than any other Realtor. Because no one equals her experience in managing residential properties. Or her success in selling them.

Jeannette heads the Relocation Division of Jeannette Cox Agency, Inc., one of Greenville's most dynamic real estate firms. Working with sales Associates, she coordinates the relocation services required by her corporate clients. Market analysis, sales, mortgage financing and the care and upkeep of vacant homes. It's all handled efficiently and at the lowest possible cost by the Relocation Division at Jeannette Cox Agency, Inc.

In addition to working directly with major corporations, Jeannette also represents relocation firms such as Equitable Relocation Management Company, Merrill Lynch Relocation management, Bank of St. Lewis, Proctor and Gamble Company and Homequity. Here, too, her property management and sales skills find a ready market.

If your company is involved in employee transfer and relocation in Greenville or the surrounding counties, call Jeannette Cox at (919) 756-1322.

THE REAL ESTATE CORNER

SIX reasons to call Rownetree Woods home.

1 AFFORDABILITY. Experts in the sale of affordable townhomes, Collice C. Moore and Associates offers Rownetree Woods with affordable prices and affordable financing. We will have available to you the best financing that can be found with VA, FHA, conventional loans and N.C. Housing money.

We also offer 95% financing with 5% down, no closing costs, and low monthly payments through our Joint Ownership Financing Plan.

2 LOCATION. Tucked neatly in a country setting, yet very close to the hospital and medical school area. It's conveniently accessible to restaurants, shopping and schools. A community atmosphere all its own in a leading growth area.

3 ENERGY EFFICIENCY. Rownetree Woods has been rated E-300 by Greenville Utilities Commission. A home built by E-300 standards will use up to 40% less energy than a minimum standards home, and energy savings mean dollar savings to you. An E-300 home is also a cleaner, quieter, and more comfortable place to live.

4 ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN & DEVELOPMENT PLAN. Rownetree Woods is a collection of high design standards offering more utilized space per square foot. A spacious floor plan with either two or three bedrooms, ample storage, and fireplaces available in some units. From the site plan you will see the planned development of the units along with a pool and lighted tennis courts for recreation.

5 QUALITY CONSTRUCTION. Westminster Company, a division of Weyerhaeuser, offers a ten year HOW warranty on all units at Rownetree Woods. You will be secure in the knowledge that you have quality construction and a well-built townhome.

6 CAREFREE LIVING. Owning a townhome offers carefree living. No grass to cut and no exterior maintenance are only two of the reasons you'll love living at Rownetree Woods. You may enjoy the Homeowner's Association meetings or getting to know your neighbors at the swimming pool and tennis courts. Do you prefer a quiet walk in the country setting or relaxing in the privacy of your own patio or deck? Whatever your life style, you'll find it all at Rownetree Woods.

CDC Says Mobile Homes Dangerous In Tornadoes

ATLANTA (AP) — Researchers of last spring's deadly tornadoes in the Carolinas say the destruction and death prove that in a fierce storm, mobile homes are not safe places to be.

A report published by the national Centers for Disease Control said that as many as half the people hurt or killed in the tornadoes that ripped through northeastern South Carolina and eastern North Carolina on the night of March 28, 1984, were in mobile homes at the time.

Fifty-nine people died in the storms, and at least 951 were injured.

Of the casualties for whom location was recorded, 19 (46 percent) of the 41 North Carolinians who died and 176 (51 percent) of the 348 in both states who were injured were in mobile homes, the CDC reported.

"Trailers are a real hazard," said Dr. John Parsons of the North Carolina health department, who prepared the report. "In trailer parks, there should be some place where there's a hard shelter where those people are put following a tornado warning."

The CDC recommends such shelters be constructed at all mobile-home parks in tornado-prone states. But such shelters are uncommon, possibly because the law currently does not require them, Parsons said.

"Even properly anchored" mobile homes are unsafe when wind speeds exceed 50 miles an hour, the CDC said. Tornadoes can pack winds of more than 300 miles an hour.

The threat of tornadoes hitting mobile homes may be greater these days, with the high price of conventional housing, Parsons said. In the Carolina counties where tornado damage occurred, an estimated 11 percent of the population lived in mobile homes.

The CDC report said the approximately 30 hospitals that treated victims of the storm handled casualties smoothly and were able to adhere to their disaster plans "with relatively few problems."

The hospitals did a commendable job of having their staffs in place, Parsons said. said. "All of them had called in the staff required to receive mass casualties."

But they were plagued by problems "on the non-medical side of the disaster," including poor radio communication with non-hospital crews at the disaster sites, failure to record vital signs and other information on each patient, a backlog of paperwork and a logjam of "hangers-on," Parsons said.

"The hospitals were short on clerical staff," he said. "The record-keeping was not ideal, and you can expect that when there's not enough clerical staff. A physician expects a clerk to do that."

Each hospital reported some radio communication problems, and some didn't have enough food service or counseling for the flood of concerned people who accompanied the injured to the hospitals, Parsons added.

"But those were all relatively minor problems," he said. "There was no mortality or morbidity stemming from that."

Gray Whales Offer Source Of Knowledge

By CHRIS ANGELO
Associated Press Writer

LAGUNA OJO DE LIEBRE, Mexico (AP) — In the pale early morning light, spouts of vapor come and go against the far shore, the first sign that below the rippled surface the sea is alive with gray whales come home to their breeding ground.

Because they mostly hug the coast during their annual trek to Baja California from feeding grounds off Alaska — one of the longest migrations among mammals — and gather in lagoons, the grays have been among the best-known whales to scientists, the curious and whalers.

But there are still as many scientific questions as answers.

For example, do they travel as elephants do, in family groups?

Twice hunted close to extinction, the gray whales — Eschrichtius robustus — have come back to an estimated 18,000 to 20,000 under international protection begun in 1946. They are no longer hunted, except for 180 a year for Soviet and American Eskimos, but another question now is how well they can survive man's modern threats — pollution and coastal development.

From January through March this boot-shaped Pacific Ocean lagoon and others along the Baja California peninsula become mammoth nurseries and laboratories for scientists studying the mysteries of the whales' 5,580- to 8,680-mile migration to give birth and then mate.

Luis Fleischer, chief of Mexico's National Marine Mammal Program at the National Fishing Institute's center in La Paz, and about a dozen students, working out of a desert camp at the lagoon's edge, count whales from boats and record their locations, using a system he has developed over several years.

"We have to know how many we are protecting, the numbers that are using the refuges, the types — whether they are females, newborns, males, how many births there are," Fleischer said.

"One thing I would like to prove is that they travel like elephants in family groups. They're related to elephants in the evolutionary spectrum."

Gray whales are most often seen in groups of one to three, sometimes up to 16. Fleischer also wants to learn if calves continue to travel with their mothers after they stop nursing.

Mothers have one calf. Sometimes it rides on her tail or under a fin, using currents along her body. While they usually appear gentle, whalers nicknamed gray whales "devilfish" for their aggressive defense of calves.

Under Mexican law, Ojo de Liebre, adjacent Guerrero Negro and San Ignacio to the south are gray whale refuges and access is restricted. Larger Magdalena Bay remains under study to determine what areas the whales use.

At this season's peak, Ojo de Liebre, the most populous lagoon, had 900 adults and about 585 calves. It is not known how much they move between lagoons and the open sea or among lagoons. Some apparently remain in open water.

"If in the future humanity needs the gray whale as a resource they are going to need an exploitation plan and will have the years of research in Mexico on reproduction for future management," Fletcher said.

Grant R. Bartlett, director of a biological research laboratory in San Diego, Calif., obtained blood samples from a stranded calf at the lagoon for studies on how whales hold their breath without developing hypoxia, an abnormal condition that results from a decrease in oxygen in the body.

The whales spend from about May to November feeding off Alaska, moving northward with the melting ice. When the ice builds up as winter approaches, they head south.

New Study Reports Improved Housing

WASHINGTON (AP) — Residents of the Western states are leading the "comfort sweepstakes," with more than a third of all homes having two or more bathrooms, new government figures show.

Nationally, the 1983 Annual Housing Survey found two or more bathrooms in 25 percent of all homes, ranging from 36 percent in the West down to only 15 percent in the Northeast.

Midwesterners had extra bathrooms in 18 percent of their residences, while the figure was 30 percent for the South, said the study by the Census Bureau and the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The study also disclosed that, nationwide, more homes have complete kitchens than in 1970, central air conditioning is increasingly common and a larger proportion of homes are connected to public sewer and water systems.

Of the 84.6 million occupied units at the time of the survey, 64.7 percent were occupied by the owner of the unit and the balance by renters, the bureau reported.

The study said that of the 91.7 million homes surveyed, 23 million, or 25 percent, had two or more bathrooms. That's up from only 15.8 percent with extra bathrooms in 1970.

The largest share of homes across the country, 58.5 percent, had one bathroom and 13.5 percent boasted one and one-half baths. In addition, 2 percent reported no bathroom in their home, a decline from 8 percent in 1970. And a few thousand homes reported having a bathroom, but sharing it with another residence.

Even more common than bathrooms were complete kitchen facilities. The Census survey found that 98.4 percent of all homes had full kitchens, up from 96 percent in 1970. A complete kitchen was defined as one containing a sink with piped water, cookstove and a refrigerator.

Complete kitchens were reported in 99.5 percent of all owner-occupied homes, and 98 percent of rental units.

For year-round homes, the median size for was 5.1 rooms, the study said. It was 5.8 rooms for homes occupied by their owners, 4.0 rooms for rental units.

Some 38 percent of all homes had three bedrooms, the report continued, 33 percent had two bedrooms and 14 percent had only one bedroom. Two or three bedrooms were more common in owned homes, one or two bedrooms in rental units.

Warm-air heat is now the main source in over half of all homes, with warm-air furnaces and heat pumps covering some 54.2 percent in 1983. That's up from 42.5 percent in 1970.

American Samoa, A Tiny Kingdom With Real Life Dimensions

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer

PAGO PAGO, American Samoa (AP) — Like the rare manumea bird cooing contentedly atop Rainmaker Mountain, the people of American Samoa are a breed apart — a far-off, forgotten colony happy with their place in the U.S. sun.

The Samoans' ruggedly lush land is a South Pacific hybrid, an American territory whose people are not U.S. citizens, a "democratic" outpost ruled by an autocracy of local chiefs.

And while other U.S. colonies clamor for a better deal from Washington, the Samoans —"the happiest, easiest, smilingest people I ever saw," said 19th-century author Henry Adams — love things just the way they are.

That Samoan way, or "fa'a Samoa," of sharing and caring — and sometimes of daring to dip a bit too deeply into the bounty — can overwhelm the American way of efficiency and accountability.

"People here think, 'Well, bananas and papayas are lying around to feed me. Money's also lying around, so I'll take that, too,' " John Kneubuhl says with a laugh.

The part-Samoan Kneubuhl, retired director of the Samoan studies program at the local community college, is a one-time Hollywood scriptwriter. But in this case he may be overdramatizing only slightly.

Islanders readily acknowledge that years of easy federal money — 70 percent of the local budget comes from Washington — have made them dependent, and made petty corruption and fiscal irresponsibility facts of life here.

After taking a look in 1983, astounded U.S. Interior Department inspectors reported back to Washington that American Samoa's fiscal management was "in a state of chaos."

Since then:

— The incoming governor reported his predecessor spent $100,000 on travel in his final three months in office as a lame duck, $60,000 more than budgeted for the entire year.

— The president and legal counsel of the American Samoa Development Bank were sentenced to five years in prison for fraud and larceny involving tens of thousands of dollars in bogus checks.

— The head of a government agency was fired because, he says, he resisted pressure to pay someone's relative for a "no-show" job.

The problem, say concerned residents, is that Samoa's age-old "matai" system of minor chiefs — 1,635 traditional heads of family with unquestioned claim to a hefty share of clan earnings — has simply been grafted to an American-style local administration. As a result, government agencies become the private fiefdoms of incompetent and greedy matais, the critics say.

"It's part of the system, appointing people without competence," says Lutali, a 62-year-old high chief. "But that was part of growing up. Now the tendency is to appoint people with both title and competence."

But not entirely, he acknowledges.

When 51 "pulenuus" — village mayors — were sworn in for new terms recently, the governor had to chastise them for not working hard enough for their $4,000 a year.

"All these ignorant chiefs care about is themselves, their family and their village," he says.

For one thing, Tuiteleleapaga suggests making the Samoan Senate a popularly elected body, like the legislature's lower house. The 18 senators now are chosen by a murky process of chiefly consensus, a Samoan version of the smoke-filled room.

"You take away the matai system from Samoa, and Samoa won't be Samoa anymore," he says.

After 85 years as a U.S. territory, Samoans wave the American flag as high as anyone. They claim to have the highest per-capita military enlistment rate of any U.S. jurisdiction. And probably 100,000 American Samoans — three times the population of the territory — reside in California, Hawaii and elsewhere in the United States, many living on welfare payments they share with the folks back home.

But if they are proud of their American connection, Samoans are even prouder of Samoa, a place Robert Louis Stevenson called "a simple and sunny heaven."

A century after Stevenson died in neighboring Western Samoa, now an independent nation, these islands still evoke a fabled Polynesian paradise.

A dozen shades of green pour over mountainous Tutuila, American Samoa's 40-square-mile main island. In the great fjord-like harbor of Pago Pago (pronounced PAHN-go PAHN-go), tropical downpours give way to vivid pastel sunsets. A rainbow of birdlife, more than a dozen unique species, flashes through the thick jungle. Even the Samoans' clotheslines hang with the brash colors of a Rousseau palette.

Youngsters toss a football around a harborside park, but they wear brightly hued "lavalava" sarongs. Samoans buy fast-food at Pago Pago's "Chicken Shack," but they also still rise at 4 a.m. to prepare traditional Sunday meals of breadfruit and taro. New wood-frame houses rise on Pago Pago's outskirts, but the families retain their old "fales," round, open-sided homes, as well.

American Samoa — Tutuila and a half-dozen smaller islands — was ceded to the U.S. Navy by local chiefs in 1900. Today described as an "unincorporated" possession, it is the only one of the four U.S. overseas territories — the others are Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam — whose people are not citizens but "U.S. nationals."

"We do our own thing," Lutali explains.

One choice they have made: to bar non-Samoans from owning property in the territory.

"Otherwise, the same thing that happened to Hawaii will happen here, We will be taken over by outsiders," the governor says.

Every 10 years or so, most recently in 1979, American Samoans set up a commission to review their status. While other colonies agitate for either greater autonomy or greater integration into the United States, the Samoans opt for the status quo every time.

"They have the best of both worlds," one mainland American in the local administration comments privately. "They keep their traditional system and get their money from Washington."

In these times of huge budget deficits in Washington, the dollars are not flooding in. But the American Samoans, luckier than many Pacific islanders, have an economy based on more than government jobs and tourism. Two tuna canneries employ one-quarter of the work force.

The unemployment rate still hovers over 16 percent, however, and one-third of the local youths end up in uniform or in the United States after graduation.

Lutali hopes to diversify the economy by making Pago Pago a major crossroads harbor for trans-Pacific commerce and a processing center for the cocoa, vanilla and other products of South Pacific islands.

The governor's most immediate worry, however, is a multi-million-dollar budget deficit he inherited, a shortfall whose precise dimensions seem lost in the South Seas mist. It may be $17 million, or $10 million, or even less.

"The computer doesn't come out with the answer," laments Lutali. "It may take another month or two."

By SYD KRONISH

The Stanley Steamer was one of the hottest items on the early American auto scene. It utilized a very efficient high-pressure steam boiler that was light in weight and combined with a reversing two-cylinder steam engine.

In tribute to that car which captured the imagination of many people at the turn of the century, the U.S. Postal Service has issued a 12-cent coil stamp featuring a 1909 Stanley Steamer as part of the Transportation Series, which depicts early modes of transportation.

First day cancellations are available for collectors. If you prefer to purchase the stamp at your local post office and affix to your own envelope, you must add 10 cents more in postage to meet the minimum first class rate. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Postmaster, Kingfield, ME, 0497-9991. It must be postmarked no later than May 2.

For the USPS to affix the stamp, enclose a money order for 22 cents. They will place the 12-cent Stanley Steamer stamp on the envelope plus a 10-cent "Petition For Redress" coil stamp. Send to: Stanley Steamer Stamp, Postmaster, Kingfield, ME 04947-9992 prior to May 2.

The U.S. Postal Service previously announced that a "Combat Hunger" commemorative stamp would be issued this year. It is still on the agenda but the wording will read "Help End Hunger." The theory behind the change is that the word "combat" is too strong for the war on hunger and starvation.

A 14-cent postal card has been issued featuring Declaration of Independence signer Charles Carroll of Maryland. Carroll is the 11th person to be honored in the Patriots Series of postal cards. When he signed the famed Declaration he wrote Charles Carroll of Carrollton. He helped draft the Maryland Constitution of 1776 and served as a member of the U.S. Senate from 1789 to 1792. He died in 1832, the last surviving signer of the Declaration of Independence.

A new Souvenir Card honors "Olymphilex '85", the international philatelic exhibition held in Lausanne, Switzerland.

The card, printed in French, reads: "Lausanne receives the attention of the entire world community as the home of the International Olympic Committee. For the Olympic year 1984 just past, the United States issued illustrative stamps, including this 40-cent stamp depicting a gymnast, one of 24 stamps commemorating the Games. Switzerland, meanwhile, paid tribute to Lausanne's Olympic importance with an 80 centime stamp."

The "Olymphilex 85" card can be ordered directly through the Philatelic Sales Division, Washington, D.C. 20265-9997. Canceled cards are $2.00 each and the uncanceled versions are $2.40. Mail orders to the Sales Division are subject to a $5.00 minimum and 50-cent handling fee per order.

HORSE OF A DIFFERENT STRIPE — This little Grevy zebra colt displays brownish markings which will later darken to the familiar black and white which distinguishes his species. Three Grevy zebra colts were born during January at the Busch Gardents, The Dark Continent in Tampa, Florida.

Did The Colonists Vanish?

BEAUFORT — Did Sir Walter Raleigh's "lost colonists" disappear in a savage wilderness when they failed to receive supplies from England in 1587-88?

Sufficient evidence has been uncovered to establish that they did not. What happened is revealed in the drama "On These Shores" to be staged May 2 through 5 near Beaufort.

Merging talents for the production are members of the Carteret Community Theatre and East Carteret High School Drama Club. The play will be performed in East Carteret High School auditorium, five miles east of Beaufort on Highway 70.

The historical drama is one of the major 1985 events in Carteret commemorating America's 400th anniversary. Observance of English beginnings in the New World began in 1984 and will end in August 1987 on the 400th anniversary of Virginia Dare's birth. Virginia was, according to English record, the first English white child born in this country.

"On These Shores" was written by Ruth P. Barbour of Morehead City, author of "Cruise of the Snap Dragon," an historical novel published by John F. Blair, Winston Salem.

"On These Shores" will open Thursday night, May 2, at 8 p.m. Performances Friday and Saturday, May 3 and 4, will begin at 8. The final performance Sunday, May 5, will begin at 2:30 p.m.

Mrs. Judie Spitsbergen, education curator at the N.C. Maritime Museum on Beaufort's waterfront, will supervise an exhibit in the theatre lobby dealing with English beginnings on North Carolina shores.

Tickets for the drama are available 15 at Beaufort Restoration Headquarters, 132 Turner St., 728-5225, and at other locations throughout the county, including Atlantic Beach.

Video Show At NMCA

By SHARON BROOM
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH — Two 30-minute video works by Nam June Paik, the Korean-born artist who invented the use of television as an art form, is now on view (through June 30) at the North Carolina Museum of Art.

The exhibition, "Nam June Paik: Single-Channel Video," will be the first devoted to video art in the museum's 30-year history.

Comprised of "Global Groove" (1973) and "Allan 'n' Alle's Complaint," (1982), the program will be shown continuously from 10:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 1:30 until 4:30 p.m. on Sundays.

Born in Seoul, Korea, in 1931, Paik became associated with the German avant-garde in the mid-1950s, composing and performing non-traditional music and experimenting with multi-media presentations. His first solo exhibition, in 1963, combined three pianos with 13 television sets. This melding of music and television became the basis of his mature work.

With Shuya Aben, an electronics engineer, Paik developed the Paik/Abe synthesizer, a device that mixes images recorded by the camera with programmed electronic signals. This technology enabled the artist to transform the TV screen into a collage of realistic and abstract images.

"Global Groove" combines segments specially taped by Paik with existing footage of images which range from then-President Nixon to Pepsi commercials to African tribal dancing. Almost all the imnages are seen in two ways: undistorted, and altered by the Paik/Abe synthesizer.

"Allan 'n' Allen's Complaint," a videotape made in collaboration with artist Shigeko Kubota, offers a personal look at four men — poet Allen Ginsberg, artist Allan Kaprow and their fathers. In showing the important relationships of two Jewish intellectuals to their fathers, Paik also presents a tribute to the intergenerational bonds that link a rebellious avant-garde with its more conservative elders.

For more information on this exhibition, call 833-1935.

Rainy Day Escape Thrills

By KARIN LAUB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — Mary Higgins Clark gets nice, ordinary people into trouble and then puts them into her best-selling suspense novels to let readers escape when "the roof is leaking and one of the kids hasn't made the basketball team."

When she wrote her first mystery "Where Are the Children?" 11 years ago, she, too, was just another suburban parent. She arose at 5 a.m. to write, putting down her pen by 7 a.m. to fix breakfast for her five children. Then she had to catch a ride at 8:20 a.m. to go to her job as a radio show writer in New York.

"It got to the point where I could write anywhere — at the washing machine, in the kitchen and between swinging the children in the park," she recalled in an interview.

Ms. Clark has once again retreated to her unassuming two-story home in this northern New Jersey township in order to work on her next mystery, a thriller set in a health spa, after winding up a promotion tour for "Stillwatch" (Simon & Schuster, $14.95) — the story about a TV reporter who discovers that a high Washington official killed her mother.

"If I could write from 6 to 12 (noon) every day, I would be very satisfied," said Ms. Clark, who does not like to reveal her age but says she's in her early 50s. "I'm happiest in front of a typewriter. It's what I'm good at."

It took more than four decades for Mary Higgins Clark to realize she could be a best-selling author.

She was born and raised in New York, the daughter of a restaurant owner and a department store buyer. She attended a Catholic high school from which she received a writing award. After graduating, Ms. Clark worked briefly as a flight attendant, then quit to marry Warren Clark, an airline executive with whom she had three daughters and two sons.

"I always wanted to be married and have a large family," she said. "I always said I wanted six (children) so they could sit even on the bus."

She began writing short stories, and suffered through six years of rejection letters before selling a suspense story about a stewardess to "Extension Magazine," a Catholic monthly, in 1958.

"There was never a victory like that victory," she said, adding that the framed letter of acceptance still adorns a wall in her Manhattan apartment.

Fiction didn't pay the bills, so Ms. Clark began writing scripts for radio shows. She also turned to producing and created her own radio production company in 1970.

However, after all those years as a broadcast writer she began to miss the written word. Her short stories were going nowhere so she wrote a book on George Washington called "Aspire to the Heavens."

"It sold about 17 copies," she recalled. "And then I said I'd love to write one that would sell."

For the next three years, she worked on "Where Are the Children?" The thriller about a woman acquitted of killing her two children became the first of her five best sellers in 1974. She repeated the theme of children in jeopardy in her subsequent works.

Fame brought Ms. Clark an apartment in New York and a summer house on Cape Cod. However, she considers home to be this quiet Bergen County suburb where her family moved 28 years ago.

Success also allowed her to return to school, attending night classes at Fordham University and graduating in 1979 with a bachelor's degree in philosophy.

Now that her children are out on their own, she starts work a little later —at 6 a.m. And instead of a typewriter, she uses a word processor.

Still, there have been many hours spent just staring at the screen. "Sometimes, I reread my diary and remind myself that on the last one (book) or the one before I wrote, 'This one is going absolutely nowhere,'" she said.

Besides listening to her own literary criticism, she reads her reviews and takes some to heart. She also pays attention to comments from readers in the 50 or so letters she receives each week.

"I got a really gushy letter from a teen-ager who said how much she loved my book," Ms. Clark said. "Then she ended by saying that on a scale of one to 10, she'd give me an eight."

Hobson Pittman Show On View

TARBORO — An exhibition of "Flowers," paintings by Hobson Pittman opened April 12 at the Blount-Bridgers House in Tarboro. The musuem was established in 1977 by Alyce Weeks Gordon Patrick, niece of Pittman.

The current exhibition includes works from the late 1940's through 1971, with paintings drawn from the Tarboro Arts Commission's Pittman collection, and those on loan from the North Carolina Museum of art, the Thomas Braswell Memorial Library in Rocky Mount, WITN-TV, Washington, and other collections.

The earlier works are in the romantic, mysterious style that brought Pittman a great deal of attention nationally. The paintings from the 1960's and 1970's, with one exception, mark his radical change to the use of delicate pastels and daring compositon — works which earned him a lasting place as one of North Carolina's greatest artists.

In conjunction with this show, a series of reprints are being made from original linoleum cuts that Pittman made in the late 1920's. The blocks, owneed by Mrs. Patrick, will be destroyed after 50 prints are made of each, and will be given to the North Carolina Museum of Art archives. The prints will be sold to benefit the Pittman Gallery.

The Pittman "Flowers" exhibition will be on view through May 31. It is free and open to the public. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. weekdays and 2 to 4 p.m. on weekends. For more information, call 823-4159.

A Review

Edifying, Innovative Language

YOU ALL SPOKEN HERE. By Roy Wilder, Jr. Viking Penguin, Inc., New York, New York. 1984. Hardback. 215 pp. $16.95.

A marvelously delightful book that elicits from readers smiles, chuckles, and/or howls of glee.

Roy Wilder, a native of Gourd Hollow, N.C., newspaper reporter, and political consultant, has created a veritable treasure trove of Southern colloquialisms, most of them familiar to natives of these parts.

The author describes the book as "a guide to carryin' on and makin' out in Southern States." The more than 3,000 specimens of Southern folk speech give the lie to the allegation that all our national speech is becoming "homogenized and bland." "Southern speech today is alive and well, thanky — colorful, concise, irreverent, extravagant, bright-eyed and bushy-tailed."

The book is divided — loosely — into 22 chapters, the titles of which are, themselves, intriguing: "Domestic and Other Blisses Too Numerous to Mention;" "Meaness, Mayhem and Other Virtues;" "Rasslin' the Devil;" and others equally as fascinating.

"You All Spoken Here" is pure entertainment, whimsical and hilarious. One of the things that make the book so funny is the author's habit of using colloquialisms to define colloquialisms:

- Call for the calf rope: Holler uncle
- Hell bent for election: Balling the jack
- In hollering distance: Less than two hoots and a holler
- Preached his funeral: Gave him down the country

Then, in an about-face, the author defines picturesque words and phrases in a more or less scholarly manner, which is startling and equally funny:

- Tow sack: A burlap bag used first to contain fertilizer and subsquently used for cotton pickin', leaf hauling, sack races, and chicken stealin'.
- No bigger than the little end of nothing whittled down to a fine point: Insignificant; of no consequence.
- Doodly squat: Term of indifference, as in "I don't give a doodly squat long as the creek don't rise."

"You All Spoken Here" is a "must" book. Written, sort or, in dictionary style and liberally sprinkled with priceless anecdotes, explanations, and illustrations, it will delight Southerners — especially Tar Heels — titillate language-lovers, and prove edifying and instructive to those who have the misfortune to come from somewhere else.

A Priceless Civil War Diary Is Published

WCU News Bureau

CULLOWHEE, N.C. — On a sidewalk in Massachusetts, in front of an old building being renovated, was a vast quantity of junk ready to be carried to the dump. A passerby picked up, on impulse, three bound composition books lying on top and walked off with them.

From that casual act came the discovery of hitherto-unknown Civil War diaries by an extraordinary woman doctor. Dr. Gerald Schwartz, who edited the diaries, worked on them for several months before gathering a clue to the writer's identity. After eight years of work by this associate professor in the history department of Western Carolina University, "A Woman Doctor's Civil War: Esther Hill Hawks' Diary" is out in a hardbound edition from the University of South Carolina Press.

The passerby who picked up the books was Eldon Porter, who later moved to Cullowhee with his wife, Alva, before moving again to Long Beach. Mrs. Porter worked in the WCU Infirmary and asked another nurse to suggest someone who might look at the diaries. Professor Schwartz's name was mentioned, and he was delighted with the find.

"It's a saga," he said. "This Hawks thing is an incredible saga. Because here is a heroine who probably deserves to be as well known in her own right as Clara Barton or the feminists Susan B. Anthony and Elizabeth Cady Stanton. She deserves wider recognition for her heroism and achievements. Her life was jeopardized many times by disease, enemy shelling, and so on. She had many super close calls."

Yet she had no children to perpetuate her name, Schwartz said, so her diaries gathered dust in the anonymity of a Massachusetts attic.

"For the first several months I didn't have the foggiest notion who had written them," he said, "not until I came across a passage about how a wounded black soldier got excited and exclaimed, 'Oh, Miz Hawks, I'se so glad to see you!'"

From that reference, Schwartz was able to track her down. She and her husband, John Milton Hawks, the surgeon of the 21st U.S. Colored Troops during the Civil War, were not well known but not entirely obscure, either. "Willie Lee Rose, in her seminal work on the Union occupation of the South Carolina sea islands, called Milton 'perhaps the most fanatical of the missionaries at Port Royal,'" Schwartz said. The Hawkses were there to help blacks who had been freed in 1861 by Union occupation.

Dr. Hawks was an early graduate of the New England Female Medical College. An ardent abolitionist, she tried to get an appointment to the military hospital in Washington, D.C. But Dorothea Dix turned her down "because she was too young, too pretty, and hence too potentially disruptive," Schwartz said.

Her husband, meanwhile, had gone south as "superintendent of freedmen" and later accepted a commission as surgeon. Esther signed up with the National Freedmen's Aid Association.

She went south as a teacher, in spite of her medical background, but eventually she performed many medical services, assisting in surgery and later, in her husband's absence, taking charge of a hospital for black troops. She says in the diary, "I suppose I could not have done this . . . if the patients had been white men."

At times, Schwartz said, she went days without sleep while treating the wounded. "She did a tremendous amount of work caring for the wounded black soldiers of the 54th Massachusetts Infantry after the ill-fated federal assault on Fort Wagner in Charleston Harbor. The troops were decimated. She worked with them in a field hospital near Beaufort."

She did the same after the Battle of Olustee, or Ocean Pond, the only major engagement of the war fought in Florida. After the war, Esther practiced medicine in Lynn, Massachusetts, where her name is still known for her philanthropy, Schwartz said.

"Esther Hawks was an incredibly energetic and dynamic woman," Schwartz said. "Among her other and innumerable accomplishments, she ran the first integrated free school in the State of Florida, probably anywhere in the South, during the federal occupation of Jacksonville."

After the fall of Charleston late in the war, she spent most of her time there, doctoring at an orphange for black children. She also was an administrator for the Freedman's Bureau.

"Her achievements were many," he said. "Aside from that, her observations about white Southerners and freed blacks were interesting. She loathed 'rebels.' After the war she would occasionally meet a former rebel who was personable, and she would mellow, but she was rabid during the war."

Out of context, some of her comments on blacks would now seem racist, Schwartz said. He has been fascinated by the way her abolitionist concern grew into appreciation of blacks as individuals. She admired the "noble and heroic" qualities of black troops she treated in hospitals, he said.

Working with her diaries has been a learning experience for Schwartz, whose new book has been described as a "monumental piece of scholarship" by a prominent Southern historian.

The first step was transcription, he explained. The handwriting was often obscure, expecially when Mrs. Hawks was writing from a hospital tent near the battle lines. "Eventually it became as familiar to me as my own handwriting," he said.

"I didn't have any previous editing experience," Schwartz admitted. In 1979, the USC Press sent him to an editing seminar at the University of Wisconsin. Sponsored by the National Historical Publications and Records Commission, it taught him a great deal, he said.

Among the editorial challenges were dealing with redundancy, different versions of the same events, and identifying people mentioned in the diaries. Even more difficult was the context: "I had to do a tremendous amount of research to put this thing in its context," he said. "That was totally original research."

It involved work with the Hawks papers at the Library of Congress and other repositories, particularly the public library in Edgewater, Fla., which was founded by the Hawkses as Hawks Park after the war.

Besides correspondence, the papers include military passes and documents. "Her physical description came from her military pass to get behind the lines," Schwartz said.

"I have high hopes," he said, "that the publications of 'A Woman Doctor's Civil War' will result in belated but much deserved recognition for this remarkable woman. She deserves wider recognition."

Writing Project

CULLOWHEE — The Mountain Area Writing Project, an intensive institute for North Carolina public school teachers, has openings for July 8-Aug. 2 at Western Carolina University.

The institute is designed to offer 25 teachers of all subjects in grades kindergarten through 12 the chance to share successful ways of teaching writing, to develop their own writing, and to read about recent research.

Participants receive tuition, fees and money for expenses. Graduate credit may be obtained. Application deadline is May 1.

For more information or an application, contact James R. Nicholl in the English department, Western Carolina University, Cullowhee, N.C. 28723, telephone (704) 227-7264.

Book's Characters Based On Bethel People

RANEY. By Clyde Edgerton. Algonquin Books, P.O. Box 2225, Chapel Hill, N.C. 27515. 1985. 227 pp. $12.95.

Raney Bell Shepherd is from Bethel, North Carolina. So are most of the other characters in Clyde Edgerton's novel "Raney." This Bethel is not necessarily the actual one (it is in a fictional Hansen County instead of Pitt), but it might be. These people are recognizably our neighbors and — as Part One is entitled — blood kin. They are provincial and self-righteous and narrow-minded; they are rednecks, gossiping widows, people who "will go the funeral home for a night out." These are familiar Southern grotesques: stubbornly eccentric, skewed, warped ("it's family backgrounds and ways of looking at things . . ."), tied by loyalty to family, place and history, to a past they are unable and unwilling to remove from consciousness. (Faulkner liked to say: "The past is never dead; it's not even past.")

Edgerton is a skillful handler of this tradition. His characters may be broad types, by they are individuals first. He uses very economical and precise details to reveal them to us; we recognize them by what they say and do. We get most of the story from Raney whose narrative covers the first two years of her marriage to Charles Shepherd, who is from Atlanta, Georgia. She is a delightful narrator, innocent and opinionated and funny. Their marriage represents a clash of cultures which is revealed in their attempts to reconcile their differences on such things as religion (she is a Free Will Baptist; he is an Episcopalian), race relations, social behavior, and family.

I am puzzled by news reports that some Baptists might by embarrassed or offended by this novel; I don't remember any dancing in it. Seriously, I think Edgerton, through Raney, has just the right touch. "Raney" pokes fun at Episcopalians as well as Baptists, and at anti-nuke protestors as well as Sons of the Confederacy, and the fun is only offensive if we are unable to laugh at ourselves. "Raney" never preaches, never condemns; it affirms. It gives permission to relax, to laugh at yourself, as Aunt Flossie does when she tells about the time at the beach when one of Naomi's dinners fell out. It's okay sometimes to say excuse me, Lord, because you can feel Him doing that: excusing you. It's okay sometimes to feel the good and the bad all mixed together inside you until you can't tell them apart. It's okay — and just the right touch — to have a wonderfully erotic climax to a novel that is comic and tasteful because "there's nothing in the Bible about what married people can't do together," even when one of them has just had her hair done.

I said we get most of the story from Raney. Her narrative is sandwiched between two brief newspaper announcements, the first concerning her wedding, and the last . . . don't read this page until you get to it. A curious thing happens before you get there: because you go through several family crises and many Sunday dinners with these people; because you have seen them be funny and even endearing. You learn, with them, and particularly with Raney and Charles, tolerance.

This is what the book is about. And the last page is just right. I think it is religious in the best sense, the best that we can be and do in this world. I was reminded of the ending of "Places in the Heart," of being left feeling good and reverent not because a happy ending is tacked on but because I have been shown what is possible. Faith is wanting to believe; faith sees the possible as true.

This is a good book. It is a very nice little volume, too. I am impressed with the publisher, Algonquin Books of Chapel Hill. It's attractive and it feels good in your hand.

By HANSY JONES

Readers who enjoyed Noel Barber's "Tanamera" and "A Farewell to France" will welcome his third novel, "Sakkara" — another powerful and compelling romance. Set amid the turbulence of Egypt from 1919 through World War II, the drama of "Sakkara" focuses on Mark Holt, son of a British diplomat in Egypt, and Serena Sirry, daughter of a court adviser to the monarchy. The story follows the lives of the two lovers as they are swept into a dangerous current of espionage, royal intrique, and murder.

Mark and Serena's love affair is played out against the background of a troubled Egypt, one moving from monarchy to democracy. King Farouk is sinking deep into decadence, Rommel's desert legions are sweeping through the middle east, and Nasser and Sadat are plotting revolution. Sakkara is a grand and passionate novel from a master storyteller.

Another recent addition to the fiction collection tells a more contemporary love story. The "Snow Ball" by A.R. Gurney, Jr. is a moving story of youth lost, an age that has psseed, and an attempt to bring it all back. In an earlier, more orderly era, Jack, a young go-getter working his way toward success, and Kitty, a lovely girl whose future seems assured by her family's fortune, find themselves, and each other, when they dance together. Their romance reaches its peak at the glorius Snow Ball, where beneath the ballrooms's sparkling lights, the two can easily believe they will be together forever in an unchanging world. But with the coming of age, they are thrust apart — Jack into a career in politics, and Kitty to a strange, varied life which ends in a secure haven for the rich in the Florida keys.

Meanwhile, all their old friends settle into middle age, and remember those past times with increasing fondness. Hoping to recapture the exhilaration and romance, they decide to revive the Snow Ball, and bring Kitty and Jack back to dance again as the crowning glory. In so doing, everyone discovers that the world has changed irrevocably.

Book Moves Smoothly

A. R. Gurney Jr. is best known as a playwright, having some 16 to his credit.

But he also has great skill as a novelist and in "The Snow Ball," his third, he shows it to marvelous effect.

Set in the near present as well as in the not too distant past — circa World War II — and moving smoothly back and forth in time, the novel tells of a middle-aged man's desire to recapture his lost youth. He doesn't succeed, but for him and for others the effort was more than worth it.

The man is Cooper Jones, a prominent Buffalo, N.Y., man who is vice president of a noted real estate firm. On his 50th birthday, Cooper has some old friends over and at the shank end of the evening the "people put their feet up and talked about Jack and Kitty ... and the Snow Ball."

The names take Cooper back into his past. He recalls the days when he and his friends were young and went to dancing school. All were adequate dancers, but there were two that shone — Jack Daley and Kitty Price. When Jack and Kitty danced together they "made it all make sense. They redeemed it all. The agonies of dancing school, the frantic, extravagant parties, and all the other silly rituals by which men and women tried to reach each other in that strange lost age..."

The highlight of the season in the old days was the annual Snow Ball, and the dancing stars were Jack and Kitty. They had been linked romantically then but had gone their separate ways. Now, Cooper wants to revive the long defunct Snow Ball and to bring Jack and Kitty back to dance together one last time.

They do come back, they do dance together, but it's not the way it was. Yet Cooper and the others are made happy, and Gurney has told a charming story.

New Scholarship At School of Arts

WINSTON-SALEM — The North Carolina School of the Arts has announced a new scholarship for incoming double bass students, established in honor of H. Stevens Brewster, a former member of the school of music.

The scholarship will be available for the fall term of 1985 for students selected by audition on the basis of merit.

Stevens taught at NCSA for six years, and was principal bass of the North Carolina Symphony form 1964-84. He was killed a year ago in an automobile accident near his home in Alexandria, Va.

For more details on the scholarship, write to: N. C. School of the Arts, 200 Waughtown Street, Winston-Salem, N.C., 27117.

Eight From City Schools Chosen For All-State Band

Three band members in the Greenville City schools have been selected to first chair positions with the All-State Honors Band which will be performing during the last weekend of April at North Carolina State University in Raleigh. In addition, five others have been selected to play in the All-State Honors Band.

One of the three first chairs is a senior at Rose High, one is an eighth grader and the other a ninth grader at E. B. Aycock Junior High School. The students auditioned against all the top chairs from the other five music districts in the state. In addition to performance in Raleigh, they will be taking part in a three day clinic at NCSU.

Evan Hause, the Rose senior, was chosen first chair timpanist for the honors band. Earlier, Evan received the Sanford Scholarship to attend the North Carolina School of the Arts next year.

The five junior high students, all ninth graders, chosen as honors band members are: John Turner, bass clarinet; Marty Tschetter and Ed Norris, both French horn; James Lawler, trumpet; and John Chambliss, trombone.

Two of the five, saxophonist Barnes and trumpeter Metzger, were judged to be the best players of their instruments in North Carolina.

Chuck Allen, Aycok and Rose band director, notes "Aycock had more students to make All-State Honors Bands than any other school in the state."

ECU Trombone Concert

The East Carolina University Trombone Ensemble will present a concert, "Eine Kleine Trombonemusik II" at 4 p.m. today. The concert will be in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus, and is free and open to the public.

George L. Broussard directs the ensemble.

The first half of the program will feature three compositions — M. Lamb's "Linguistics for Trombone and Tape," with Broussard as soloist; T. R. George's "Aria and Dance," featuring Broussard, Scott Whitley, Alan Atkinson, John Pruitt and John Wright; and E. Bozza's "Trois Pieces pour Quatuor de Trombones," with Whitley, Atkinson, Pruitt and Wright.

After an intermission, the trombone ensemble will play nine pieces. These are: J. S. Bach's "Arioso," arranged by McCarty; the Wagner arrangement of Monteverdi's "Sinfonia and Chorus of Spirits;" the Didrickson arrangement of Morales' "O Magnum Mysterium;" arrangements by King of two Bruckner compositions, "Inveni David" and "Vexilla Regis;" Nelhybel's "Pieces for Four Trombones;" ECU student Scott Ruedger's arrangement of Simon and Garfunkel's "Sounds of Silence; "Scarborough Fair;" and "Dynamatic for Trombone Ensemble," a composition by ECU student Robert Wright.

Concert Band Concert Set

The 55-member East Carolina University Concert Band, with Dale Hair conducting, will present a concert at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the A. J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the ECU campus.

The concert is free and open to the public.

Steve Morgan will be the featured soloist for one selection, Sammy Nestico's "The Man With the Horn."

Other compositions to be played in the concert are: "His Honor March" by Henry Fillmore; the Paynter arrangement of Malcom Arnold's "Prelude, Siciliano, and Rondo;" Ralph Vaughan Williams' English setting of "Sea Songs;" Percy Grainger's "Irish Tune from County Derry" and Ron Nelson's "Mayflower Overture."

Menudo Big Hit In Brazil

By GLORIA HELENA REY
Associated Press Writer

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — Menudo, the popular adolescent Puerto Rican rock group, has become a big hit with teen-agers in Portuguese speaking Brazil, long considered a zero market for Spanish language entertainers.

"In less than eight months Menudo sold around 3 million records here. That's way more than top Brazilian stars, such as Gal Costa and Chico Buarque, who are lucky if sales top 400,000 a year," Marina Ghiaroni, a spokeswoman for the local subsidiary of RCA Records, said in an interview.

"Before last August, nobody in Brazil ever heard of Menudo," she said. "Now they're on their way to replacing Michael Jackson as the No. 1 favorite of teen-agers here."

Menudo's visit, in February and March, covered 17 cities and drew 1.5 million fans. The crowds in many places went out of control.

Two women were trampled to death during the group's performance in Rio, when, according to the police, 130,000 fans showed up at a soccer field that had a capacity of 60,000.

In Sao Paulo, the nation's largest city, a major league soccer game had to be postponed because 240,000 Menudo fans destroyed the grass of the main stadium there.

Maria Antonia Magalhaes, a teacher in Rio, complained that repetitive lyrics such as, "dance, dance," turned teen-agers in the audience into "trained animals." Psychologist Fernando Lage said in an interview: "This is mass hysteria invented for purely commercial purposes."

But Edgardo Diaz, Menudo's founder and chief organizer, defended the group and said in an interview: "We give young people the music they want. Adults don't have the mentality for making judgments about a child's way of thinking."

Diaz attributed the group's popularity to its "simplicity and friendliness, among other things.

"Our next big challenge, the next big market we want to conquer, is Japan. Brazil's already in the bag," Diaz added.

Menudo achieved its success with only three LPs: "Reaching Out," which was recorded in English; "Evolución," recorded in Spanish; and, in an unprecedented attempt to get through to young people in this nation of 134 million, "Menudomania" in Portuguese. Then they followed up with an exhausting concert tour.

"I don't speak Portuguese," said 14-year-old Menudo member Robby in an interview in Spanish. "But I have learned what the lyrics of our Portuguese songs mean."

Brazilian fans generally don't understand Menudo in English or Spanish, so the Portuguese helps. But it seems the group would have a big following here in any language.

"Menudo is something else," sighed Denise Dos Santos, who traveled 170 miles by bus from the interior town of Sao Lourenco to see Menudo in Rio.

"Listen," she added in an interview outside the hotel where the young singers were staying, "some of my friends couldn't wait for the Rio concert, so they went to the first one, in Belem." Belem is more than 1,400 miles away.

Lucht Recital At St. James

Jennifer Lucht, a ninth-grader at E. B. Aycock Junior High School, will present a cello recital on Thursday, April 25 at 8 p.m. in the chapel at St. James United Methodist Church. The recital is free and open to the public.

For her program, Jennifer has chosen Tartini's "Variation on a Theme by Corelli;" Boellmann's "Symphonic Variations;" Goltemann's "Etude-Caprice;" "Tarantella" by D. Popper, and Faure's "Elegy."

She will be accompanied on piano by her father, Dr. Richard Lucht.

City Schools Ocrhestra To Give Concert

The Greenville City Schools will be presenting their Fifth Annual All-City Orchestra concert at 8 p.m. Wednesday. The concert will take place in Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus.

The spring concert, a highlight event for all 200 young string students in the city schools, will comprise a wide variety of music suitable for performance by student musicians of different age levels.

The concert will be under the direction of JoAnn Moore and Paul Emerson. Mrs. Moore teachers students in grades 4-6; Emerson teaches string students at Middle, Aycock and Rose Schools.

There is no admission charged and the public is invited to attend.

'Brigadoon Next' For Ayden Group

AYDEN — The musical "Brigadoon" is the next production for the Ayden Theatre Workshop. Three performances will be given — at 8 p.m. on Thursday, April 25, at 8 p.m. on Saturday, April 27, and at 3 p.m. on Sunday, April 28.

Performances will be held in the auditorium of Ayden-Grifton High School, with tickets available at the door.

Superior Rating

Ingrid Lalik received a superior rating in the senior division of the statewide contest of the North Carolina Music Teachers' Association held April 13 at the University of North Carolina, Greensboro.

Ingrid is a junior at Rose High School and is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lalik. Her teacher is Annemarie Lalik.

Pieces she played were Kodaly's "Klavierstuck," the "Nocturne in C sharp minor," and the first movement of "Sonata in C minor."

Music Program In Tarboro Today

TARBORO — At 3 p.m. today, violinist Anita Cahoon Franklin and pianist Gene Featherstone will present a program of music by Bach, Beethoven and Mozeat in the Pittman Gallery of the Blound-Bridgers House in Tarboro.

A member of the Atlanta Symphony for 10 years. Mrs. Franklin is married to Greenville architect Bryon W. Franklin.

Featherstone, a music teacher in Rocky Mount, has performed throughout the Carolinas and in New York and Pennsylvania.

The program is free and open to the public.

ANNUAL WRIGHT FLY IN

KILL DEVIL HILLS — The Wright Brothers National Memorial and the First Flight Airstrip will be the site of the 3rd Annual Wilbur Wright Fly In to be held three days, April 26, 27, and 28.

A number of activities are planned, including flying events, judging of aircraft in several categories, and a banquet with a guest speaker.

Mike Cross Concert

TARBORO — The Tarboro Arts Commission is sponsoring "An Evening with Mike Cross" on Friday, April 26. The performance will take place at 8 m. at the C. B. Martin Middle School auditorium on East Johnston Street in Tarboro.

Tickets for the performance are on sale in advance in locations in Tarboro, Wilson, and Rocky Mount, and will also be available at the door at a higher than advanced sale price. Special tickets are on sale for a reserved section, to include attendance at a party following the performance to be held at the Blount-Bridgers House to honor the artist. This event is to help raise funds for the programs and operations at the Blount-Bridgers House — a renovated house that contains the Hobson Pittman Gallery.

Mike Cross is well known in schools and colleges throughout the South and the Midwest. His is music that appeals to rock music fans, liked by people who enjoy country and western music, and by those who have a fondness for folk music.

There was a time when only a handful of early Cross devotees showed up when Cross played local clubs in Chapel Hill — that has now changed, with the musician drawing full attendance at all his concerts.

For more information about tickets, call 823-4159.

'Greater Tuna' Next

NEW BERN — The comedy "Greater Tuna" will open May 10 at the Harvey Mansion in New Bern for an eight-night dinner run. Dinner is at 7 p.m. with showtime to at 8:15 p.m.

Performance dates are May 10, 11, 17, 18 and 31, and June 1, 7 and 8.

Tiny Tim To Perform

TARBORO — Singer Tiny Tim of "Tiptoe Through the Tulips" fame will be making an appearance in Tarboro on Tuesday, April 23 in two performance — at 6 p.m. and again at 8 p.m.

The singer, who now specializes in singing medleys of American popular music, is currently with Allen C. Hill's Great American Circus. The circus, sponsored by the Lions Club of Tarboro, will be in the fairgrounds on Anaconda Road, Tarboro.

The Great American Circus, founded in 1941 as Hoxie Bros. circus, has a 45-member company which presents a variety of favorite circus acts. Ringmaster is Billy Martin, who entertains as a juggler and with a gorilla parody called the "Mongo Bongo." Martin's wife, Cheryl, a "Ballerina in the Air," performs a swinging ladder act.

Additinally, there is an elephant troupe of four — one male, three females; the Steeple Family who presents an act with bears and chimps, the clowns, Omar Gosh and Cheeko, and the knife throwing duo, Bobby and Sonya Fairchild.

The highlight of the circus is the Suarez Loyal Repensky riding act, consisting of Timi and Denyse Loyal, Enrique and Rosie Suarez and their daughter Maggie, who perform with five horses.

THE TALE OF THE FIVE OF HEARTS

DEAR READERS: We have had many requests over the years for those hands we consider to be our favorites. That makes quite a list. For the time being, therefore, we are devoting the Sunday column to a series of famous hands. At the end of the series we will go back to our weekly question and answer column.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ♡.

The Five of Hearts was strutting around as if he were top o' the heap. No one begrudged him that, for the incident in which he was involved was, to say the least, highly unusual. After all, how often can a singleton five of trumps win the first trump lead, especially when he is the fourth player to the trick!

"First, let me set the scene," related the Five of Hearts. "It was in a late round of the Vanderbilt Team Championship. I was held by a psychic bidder of renown, and our opponents were one of the world's great pairs.

"When North and East both passed, my owner decided that the hand belonged to the opponents so, naturally, he felt it was incumbent on him to open the bidding. His choice was three hearts!

"All this time West had been contemplating his collection of goodies and deciding how he planned to bid the hand. Suddenly he found that not only did he have to act at the three-level, but his seven-card suit had been stolen by the preemptor! Since he had no idea what to bid, he elected to pass after much thought. Even had East wanted to bid, his partner's hesitation barred him, and three hearts became the final contract.

"West chose to lead the two of trumps. Declarer played low from dummy and East, who did not have an inkling about what was going on, also played low—he wanted to preserve his queen of trumps to overruff dummy should declarer try to ruff a club. So I won the first trick!

"East did score his overruff, but our side made three tricks—in addition to me, declarer made the ace of trumps and a diamond for 300. In the other room, our side reached five hearts on the East-West cards, were doubled and made an overtrick for a gain of 13 International Match Points. Incidentally, that contract could have been defeated had North led the ace of hearts and another, but would you have found that defense?"

WARHOL IN 'LOVE BOAT'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — There was no mistaking the guest star on ABC's "Love Boat." Dressed head to toe in black with a pallid face and thatch of silver hair, it could be no one else but pop artist Andy Warhol.

Warhol is playing himself on the 200th show of the series and is the 999th star on the show. Lana Turner, the 1,000th guest star, appears in another episode.

At a party celebrating the show's 1,000th star, Warhol said he enjoyed filming the segment. "But I'm very nervous," he added. "All those stars, and they're all so glamorous."

Which one made him the most nervous? "James Brolin," he said.

NEW BOARD GAME

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If everything is up-to-date in Kansas City, maybe they'll soon be playing native daughter Stacia Alden's new board game about Beverly Hills.

Miss Alden came to Beverly Hills last year from Kansas City armed only with a street map and an idea. She got such establishments as Gucci, Van Cleef and Arpel and others to agree to the use of their names. There was some skepticism and disbelief.

"I had never been to Beverly Hills before and kept asking where I could find Rodeo Drive," she said. "I pronounced it like the cowboy event and the reaction was always the same — a great rolling of eyes as if to say, 'Where is this girl from?'"

The game sells for $35 but there's a deluxe leather, gold and enamel version that sells for $1,500.

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY, APRIL 21, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: A day and evening to concentrate upon your property and financial considerations which require some fresh new approach if you are to get the best practical results.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Good day to study every angle of any financial situation before you reach a definite decision. Read newspapers thoroughly.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Think carefully about your personal aims and don't rush pell-mell into anything as yet.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Plan a new course through which to gain your best goals and more quickly. Have a talk with your loved one.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A day to think how you can gain more prestige and enhance your good name in public. Make good use of your charm.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Delve deeper into philosophical studies and gain more from them and become more tranquil.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Plan how best to deal with others in business in the future. Have a discussion with your loved one about the future.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Study carefully any ideas given you by partners since these can be very important in your future relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Get those duties handled for which you have little time during the busy work week. Aid those who need you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) One who has influence over your affairs may invite you out for recreation, so accept the invitation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Give more thought to home affairs and have more concord there with kin in the future. Improve your wardrobe.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) Study the highest precepts that can be helpful to you in the days ahead. If you go visiting, bring a little gift.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she might get so wrapped up with practical affairs that nothing else will matter, so be certain to early teach to have worthy cause in mind on which to expend the energies and then the life becomes worthwhile.

FORECAST FOR MONDAY, APRIL 22, 1985

from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: During the daytime there can be a real battle over financial holdings or where some possessions are concerned, or where antagonism exists between two or more persons.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Avoid a confrontation today over money matters, and then tonight you can get a clear picture of the whole situation.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) You and your partner are both stubborn over some issue today, so say that you will sleep on it before coming to a definite decision.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) You find it very difficult to get a co-worker to cooperate today, so handle your job accurately and forget about others.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Don't argue with a good friend, and you will save time and energy and save the friendship.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) A bigwig and a family tie could argue during the daytime but keep out of it, and it will soon blow over.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Don't take advice from outsiders where routine work is concerned, but try to improve them sensibly by yourself.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Get busy and pay your pressing bills, and don't find fault where there is none. Improve your credit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Some responsibility of long standing has you so concerned that you could fail to handle some emergency, so cheer up.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Don't try to do more work than you can handle just to get out of a temporary bind or you could ruin your health.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Don't enter into an argument between a family tie and a good friend, or you could lose them both.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Be certain to handle obligations at home before you get out into the business world. Try to please a family tie.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) There are important meetings to attend even though you may have to leave your work for a while.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have definite ideas and views from earliest years, and it would be wise for those who are in charge of this youngster to teach early to listen to what others have to say and to avoid being stubborn and unyielding. One who will need to be with flexible individuals in order to get along well with them.

WE'VE CHANGED OUR MIDDLE NAME, NOT OUR COMMITMENT TO YOU.

The sign says First Citizens Bank. But inside, you'll find the same people who served this community for First State Bank.

You see, before the merger of First Citizens and First State, both banks were committed to giving customers personal attention, honest advice, and efficient service they could always count on. Because of our similar banking philosophies, we were able to merge without any shakeups or major changes.

And if you bank at First State Bank, in either Greenville or Winterville, you're now a customer of First Citizens Bank statewide. That puts more than 270 banking offices across North Carolina at your service.

Need to cash a check in Asheville or make a deposit in Wilmington? No problem. Just look for a First Citizens Bank.

For most First State Bank customers, banking will continue unchanged. But for customers who may need specialized services, First Citizens can, we believe, provide any banking service that a person or company may need. That's a benefit of banking with First Citizens, one of the soundest two billion-dollar banks in the United States.

So drop by your nearest First Citizens Bank and talk with the friendly people. They'll be the same people you knew before the sign changed.

It Does Take Time

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — When Academy Award-winning actor F. Murray Abraham spoke of his years of struggle to reach acceptance as an actor, he found a sympathetic listener in Jeff Daniels.

"It took Abraham 25 years, and I can't imagine how he stood it," said Daniels, who stars in Woody Allen's "The Purple Rose of Cairo."

"I spent eight years trying to get recognition, and it seemed forever."

In "The Purple Rose of Cairo," he gives superior performances in two difficult roles: as the 1930s film star who steps off the screen for a romance with small-town movie fan Mia Farrow; and as the Hollywood actor who comes to the town to exorcise his errant image.

Sound confusing? Perhaps. However, it all works wonderfully well in the movie. Daniel's performance is crucial. He must convincingly step out of the celluloid and portray the hero in a pith helmet who knows nothing beyond what has been written for him in movie scripts. Then he must play the actor himself, brimming with charm and vanity.

"It was risky," Daniels said in an interview. "Playing those two roles could have been a big break or a career-ender. There was a lot at stake. First of all, how to play a 1930s Errol Flynn type of actor? If he was too sure of himself he would just seem cocky. Then what happens after he steps off the screen? Would this be just a one-joke movie?"

"I don't think that we talked about more than two things that didn't pertain to the movie during the 2½ to three months of filming," said Daniels. "There wasn't any kind of wall between us, nothing like that. It's just that you don't exchange small talk with Woody.

"I haven't talked to him since we finished the final reshoots last June. I'm sure that I could reach him on the phone any time I wanted. But I wouldn't know what to say to him."

Jeff Daniels was a late addition to "The Purple Rose of Cairo." Michael Keaton ("Mr. Mom") played the movie star for two weeks before leaving the project. Among those who tested as replacement were Kevin Kline, Eric Roberts, Randy Quaid and Daniels.

"My first meeting with Woody lasted about two minutes," Daniels recalled. "I was very nervous and more or less faded into the wallpaper. That was on Tuesday. On Wednesday I tested for the role, and on Thursday Woody tried to convince the studio (Orion) to hire me. I started the movie on Monday."

Daniels, 30, naturally comes by his all-American look. Born in Georgia, he grew up in the small town of Chelsea, Mich., and attended Eastern Michigan University. Majoring in English, he intended to become a teacher, but a minor in theater prevailed. At 21 he was touring the casting offices in New York.

"What kept me going all those years were commercials," said Daniels. "I could do two a year and make enough money to get by on. I did off-Broadway plays and lived cheaply. How cheaply? I remember once when my rent was raised from $250 to $275 a month. I moved out to Staten Island because I couldn't afford the increase. It was an hour-and-a-half commute, but I had to do it."

He currently lives in New York with his wife Kathleen and their 4-month-old son Ben. He was in Los Angeles to appear on "The Tonight Show."

'Fiddler On The Roof' Playing In Warsaw

By MATTHEW C. VITA
Associated Press Writer

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The musical, "Fiddler on the Roof," has been staged in Warsaw for the first time.

The Tony Award-winning play about a Jewish milkman from the Ukrainian village of Anatevka was based on stories by Sholom Aleichem.

The event was heralded by Polish cultural figures as symbolic of a change in official attitudes toward Jewish culture in Poland, the heart of European Jewry before it was eradicated by the Nazis during World War II. Most remaining Jews left Poland during a campaign of politically inspired anti-Semitism in 1968.

An estimated 3.5 million Jews lived in Poland in 1939. About 6,000 remain today.

"It is a much more important event than simply a theatrical play," said Antoni Marianowicz, who translated the musical into Polish and led the drive to bring it to Poland, fatherland of the Jewish culture that served as the play's inspiration.

"One could never have imagined this as short a time as 10 years ago," said Waclaw Sadkowski, editor of the monthly literary review, "Literatura na Swiecie" ("Literature in the World"), which in December published a collection of Yiddish literature — the first such publication since the war.

"You would never see 'Fiddler on the Roof' in Warsaw or a collection of Jewish literature published in Poland," he said.

"Fiddler on the Roof" first played in Poland in Lodz in 1983, 20 years after it opened on Broadway. Theaters in Poznan and Gdynia began staging it last year, and the production by the Gdynia Musical Theater — a "national sensation" according to one reviewer — was brought to Warsaw's Dramatical Theater earlier this month.

Tickets sold out within hours and the opening performance was warmly received by a standing-room-only audience that included both government officials and leading cultural figures. The cast was greeted by four curtain calls.

"For many years it was impossible to show anything Jewish in Poland," said Marianowicz, 60, whose Jewish father died in the Warsaw ghetto during the war. His mother survived.

"The period now — and I stress now, because it could change — is not a good period for anti-Semitic groups. The government seems to be rather interested in developing good relations with international Jewry. If it was not, even the thought of bringing 'Fiddler on the Roof' here would be impossible."

Under an agreement with the play's authors, Jerry Bock, Joseph Stein and Sheldon Harnick, all royalties from the estimated 120 performances staged in Poland to date have been paid to a special committee to preserve Jewish monuments in Poland.

Most of the money has gone toward the restoration of Jewish cemeteries desecrated during the war and left abandoned in some 400 Polish cities and towns.

The production earned about $5,000 in 1984, just a fraction of the amount Marianowicz estimates is needed yearly to pay for the restoration of cemeteries. The Polish government donated $30,000 this year. The project also receives some money from Jewish groups in the United States.

Ring Misplaced

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II briefly lost a gold ring when it flew off his finger as he waved to a crowd while riding through St. Peter's Square during his weekly general audience.

As the pope looked on, plainclothes security agents scrambled over the cobblestone square Wednesday and found the ring near a wooden barrier used for crowd control.

It was first thought to be the Fisherman's Ring, which is an official papal seal. Vatican spokesman Joaquin Navarro said later, however, that John Paul does not wear the seal, but a gold ring with a cross on it given him by the church when he became a cardinal.

The Last Day Of An Old Man

When next you watch a fire's embers light a husk of a log before fading into darkness, think of Julius Lester's book, "Do Lord Remember Me."

It's the story of one old man's last day. The man, the Rev. Joshua Smith, is black. So is the author. But the book is an excellent piece of writing that recalls and defines a life in terms so universal that race and bigotry become incidental to larger questions.

Which, it should be mentioned, will surprise a casual reader who notes that the author's other credits include "Look Out, Whitey! Black Power's Gon' Get Your Mama."

But these are pleasant surprises. Consider living with a woman so long that you know her every thought — or think you do — and discovering only after 50 years and your stroke that she's three years older than you are and thinks it funny that you never knew. Then see again the bride and a young wife and discover that the people haven't changed, only the wrappings have wrinkled.

Consider making peace with the notion that your sons will chart their own lives, even — perhaps necessarily — at odds with the course of your own. And then remember and miss your father, decades dead, discovering that no matter how weak the father, how old and distinguished the son, that bond of first absolute security never completely breaks.

All this is told with great skill so that the reader feels it as much as reads it. It brings the experiences you have had into tighter focus and gives you a foretaste of those that await. Not bad for such a slim volume, and better still if the author takes his gifts and uses them to bring us more.

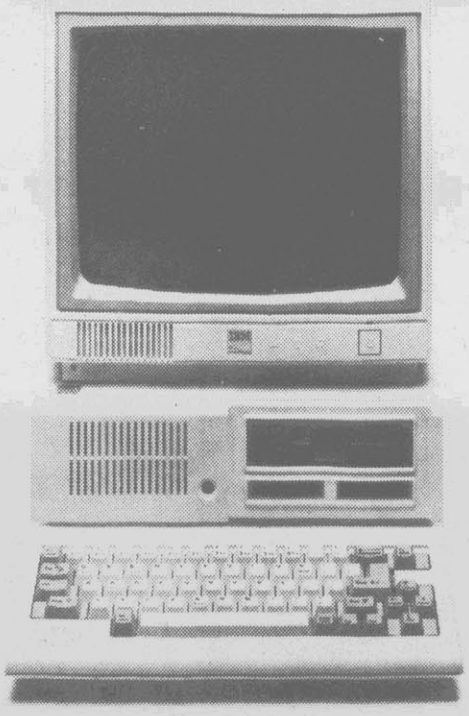
You Don't Need An IBM Computer To Add Up All The Advantages Of Banking With Us.



But You Might Win One For Visiting Any Planters Office In The Greenville/Ayden Area During Grand Opening Week.

And we're also completing the expansion of our 509 East Greenville Boulevard office.

Naturally, both of these events make us very happy.

To celebrate, we're declaring April 22nd-26th as Grand Opening Week at every Planters branch in the area.

Visit any Greenville or Ayden office during this time and you can register to win the Grand Prize of Grand Opening Week.

And because we'd like to see you become a regular Planters Bank customer, that's not all we're giving away.

For instance, you can get a free order of checks for opening a checking account. Or a small safe deposit box rent-free for a year for opening an investment account.

You can even get a ¼% break on the interest rate of an installment loan. And there's no first year service fee when you get a credit card.

Of course, you can get many other benefits when banking with us. To discover all of them, visit any Greenville or Ayden office.

And do it between April 22nd and 26th.

Because with all the added advantages of our Grand Opening Week, you might need an IBM computer after all.

Restoring Old Hall

By BARBARA WALTON
Associated Press Writer

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands (AP) — While the world's greatest musicians play their hearts out at the Concertgebouw, the renowned Dutch concert hall is slowly sinking into the mud under Amsterdam.

To keep the 97-year-old hall from closing, reconstruction will start July 6 at the end of a fundraising campaign which so far has raised $6.7 million toward a goal of $9 million.

Despite the anticipated upheaval with heavy equipment and hordes of workmen, the hall's concert schedule will continue, said Martin Sanders, the Concertgebouw's general manager. About 500 concerts are annually held.

Crowned by a classical frieze and a golden lyre, the Concertgebouw — meaning concert building — has long been a fixture of Amsterdam's cultural life.

"The Concertgebouw is indispensable to Dutch music life," Sanders said, because it is the only place in the Netherlands "where classical music is played on an international level."

The major structural problem with the Concertgebouw is that it's just too heavy for a city built on a former tidal flood plain.

The walls holding up the roof over the 2,025-seat concert hall are twice as heavy as they should be, and because of their weight, have sunk seven inches into the ground since 1888.

The sinking process has been accelerated by the dry rot attacking the 2,186 wooden piles holding up the brick and masonry structure. The radical reconstruction surgery will replace the wooden foundation piles with steel.

The Concertgebouw is home to the Concertgebouw Orchestra, the Amsterdam Philharmonic Orchestra and The Netherlands Chamber Orchestra.

It has gained its fame, however, not because of who plays there, but because of how they sound.

Sanders said in an interview there are only three other 19th-century concert halls in the world that equal the Concertgebouw's acoustics, including the Musikverein in Vienna, Boston's Symphony Hall and Carnegie Hall in New York.

"Acoustic science is like alchemy," he said. "No one knows the secret. "The sound echo in the Concertgebouw measures 2.1 seconds, which is exactly what you want. You don't want the echo to die down too quickly or resound like in a church."

The hall's acoustics are so good that it has attracted not only classical performances, but such pop artists as Frank Zappa and Frank Sinatra.

Internationally known architect I.M. Pei is even incorporating elements of the hall's acoustic design into his plans for the $15-million Dallas Concert Hall, according to Sanders.

"HERE'S WHY I SELL DUAL®"

There are other grass herbicides on the market, but none of them measure up to Dual. In field after field, year after year, I've watched them all perform. And once a grower sees Dual work in his own corn, soybeans, or sorghum, he's more than likely to stay with Dual.

Why I recommend DUAL:

- Excellent control of the problems like nutsedge, fall panicum, and foxtails. And it controls black nightshade in beans.
- Lasts longer to keep late grasses from spoiling harvest.
- Yield. Dual delivers excellent grass control which has been proven to be a key factor in yield studies.
- Low per acre cost. Because Dual rates are measured in pints, not quarts.

Finally, I support Dual because Dual's the only one helping to get the farmers' message to the public on network television. That helps all of us.

A Shaky Anniversary

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Thursday was the 79th anniversary of the great San Francisco earthquake of 1906, and some people marked the occasion by surviving another one.

It wasn't the real thing this time, but a simulated temblor provided by a "shaking van" touring the Bay area, on loan from Yokohama, Japan. It's part of the state's Earthquake Preparedness Week.

It looks like a small kitchen, complete with stove and table for two. But when the operator flicks a switch, the "kitchen" starts jerking and jolting until it reaches the equal of 8.3 on the Richter scale, which is slightly more intense than the 1906 quake that killed at least 700 people and left 300,000 homeless.

Some riders laugh, some sit rigidly in the chair and others crawl under the table. A few even shout "that's enough."

No. 10252 — The Caravelle

Patio, Deck Enhance Living

By Jerry Bishop

Spacious and totally livable, the Caravelle, a three bedroom plan, makes liberal use of outdoor living areas and carefully integrates them with the indoors.

Ground level patio and upper level deck unite two living areas and expand them, while the indoor areas themselves opt for generously proportioned rooms and free-flowing traffic pattern.

The exterior is neat and crisply stated, with a shake shingle roof and intricately paneled front door adding interest. Inside, family needs are recognized and met with such features as an elegant master bedroom, first floor laundry and half bath, and expansive living-dining area.

Entry is into a foyer, with coat closet at hand and convenient access to the garage and upper level. The powder room at left is separated from the laundry by a folding door for an efficient use of space.

For food preparation and family dining, the L-shaped kitchen sets aside a breakfast area. Next to the kitchen, living and dining areas intermingle for an airy room that is equally successful with party groups or small gatherings. The ground level patio is linked to the living area by sliding glass doors, and to the upper deck by a set of stairs.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Does this happen to you? A contractor or repairman has been called in to give you an estimate or fix something you can't handle yourself. He looks over the situation and tells you what the cost will be.

Before he does, however, he tells you how the previous contractor did a poor installation job or the previous handyman wasn't too handy. His opinion is given whether the former worker was an experienced professional or a neighbor's son or you.

This is not an unusual occurrence. It happens about 60 or 70 percent of the time you hire somebody. As far as can be determined, the purpose of this criticism is to let you know that some previous worker made such a mess of things that he will have to spend more time than necessary straightening things out. It is not certain whether this remark is intended to bolster his own ego or give him an excuse for charging you more than you thought the price would be.

Of course, it could be that the quality of workmanship these days is so inferior that it can be spotted immediately by a skilled plumber or carpenter or electrician or whatever. But it is hard to believe this is so. If it is, one reason could be the tendency of a contractor who knows his business inside and out to negotiate with you for a job and then to send an inexperienced apprentice to your house to handle it. Also, it is questionable whether you are going to feel any better for knowing that the last time the job was done, it wasn't done right. The fact you didn't hire the person a second time may indicate you already suspected he hadn't performed properly. And you know how little chance you have of getting satisfaction when a competitor of the first workman puts the onus on him.

The following actually happened to a neighbor recently. He called a plumbing company to report the elbow under the sink it had installed a few months ago was leaking slightly, just as the old one had. A plumber came over to the house. Although from the same company, he was a different plumber and apparently had not been told that a worker from is own firm had installed a new elbow recently. He looked at the pipe and quickly said somebody had not tightened it sufficiently, perhaps thinking the home owner had done it himself. When the home owner told him his own company had done the installation, the plumber quickly backtracked and said the threads on the pipe may have been defective because the job seemed to be OK.

The home owner called up the boss after the man had completed the installation of a new elbow, which would not have been necessary if the nut under the sink only needed tightening. He said he did not think he should have to pay for either the part of the labor if the other plumber hand installed a defective piece of pipe. The employer said he would have to talk first to his worker, who had not returned yet. But he expressed some doubt the pipe could have been defective.

A couple of hours later, the boss called the home owner and said the pipe had been defective — "those things happen, you know, and we have no control over it."

The story had a happy ending for the home owner, who was not charged for the part or the labor, but the incident pointed up the practice one one workman criticizing the efforts of another. It would be interesting to hear from some home owners who have noticed this occurring on occasion. Do they know why it happens? It would be just as interesting to hear from some plumbers on the subject.

(Around-the-house do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — The gutter on our house overflows every time there is a heavy rain. I have inspected it several times and cannot find the cause. Nothing seems to be blocked. When I run water into the gutter with a hose, it flows freely through the gutter and into the downspout. It goes out the bottom of the downspout without any trouble. In fact, there is no problem when we have an ordinary rain. But every time we have a heavy rain, water overflows the sides of the gutter. It's a real puzzle. Our house is about 25 years old.

A. — In view of the circumstances you described and assuming your inspections included the supports that hold the gutter up, it is quite possible you simply need a larger-sized gutter. You will need a professional to make that determination.

Q. — I just read your answer to a question about peeling paint on a reader's large woodshed. I agree with you, but would like you to know about my solution to peeling paint with my wooden garage door. Even though the door had a thinly applied prime coat on both sides when it arrived from the factory, it was not until I applied a good coat of exterior paint to the INSIDE of the door that three years of blistering paint on the outside were ended. I imagine one of the new vapor barrier paints would be even better for this, but I didn't think of it at the time. It's too bad there isn't some way to get paint to the back of wooden clapboard siding on many old houses, as I feel sure it would cure a lot of blistering problems, even where excess moisture is controlled. I hope this idea is one you will agree with and will want to pass along.

A. — I do agree and so have passed it along. Putting a vapor barrier paint on inside walls often stops outside blistering and peeling.

Q. — My son's nose bled recently and some of the blood got on our varnished coffee table. I did not notice it immediately and when I tried to wash off the blood, only part of it came off. I have resisted using any chemical on the remainder of the stain for fear of spoiling the finish. Is there anything I can use that will take out the stain without ruining the furniture?

A. — Yes. Ordinary household hydrogen peroxide. You may have to give the stain two or three treatments. Rub the mar with a clean cloth saturated in peroxide. While the peroxide will not damage the furniture, it might take a little of the gloss off in that spot, but it can be restored by touching it up with a little diluted varnish.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach, remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q. What is the name of the willow that has bizarre flattened stems?

A. The fantail willow, Salix sachalinensis 'Sekka' is probably what you have in mind. At random a few branches develop a flattened stem which curves and twists. These bizarre stems are used in Japanese flower arrangements and they can be dried for dried flower arrangments. To enourage the appearance of these flattened stems, severely prune the plant each year to stimulate rapid growth. The more vigorous the growth, the more flattened stems induced. The fantail willow should be pruned in the spring after the catkin display and before shoot growth begins. Fantail willow can be pruned to the ground, but it is probably best not to prune it so severely each year. A better solution is to prune one-third of the branches to the ground each year. If never pruned, the fantail willow can grow to 15 feet.

Q. When is the last time I can fertilize my fescue lawn before summer?

A. Do not put any fertilizer on fescue after May 1. Fescue will stop growing (go semi-dormant) when the temperatures get too hot in the summer. This is normal, and the plants should not be forced to grow by applying extra fertilizer of water. Fescue is more susceptible to disease when it is forced to grow.

Q. Will my Easter lily survive if I plant it outside?

A. Yes. Plant your Easter lily is a sunny spot with good drainage. A spot receiving four to five hours of sunlight per day is sufficient. Don't cut the stem off, but allow it to die naturally. Your Easter lily will bloom again next summer.

Q. What is a tangelo?

A. A tangelo is a cross between a tangerine and a grapefruit. It can be grown as a tub plant in North Caolina if it is brought indoors or into a greenhouse in the winter.

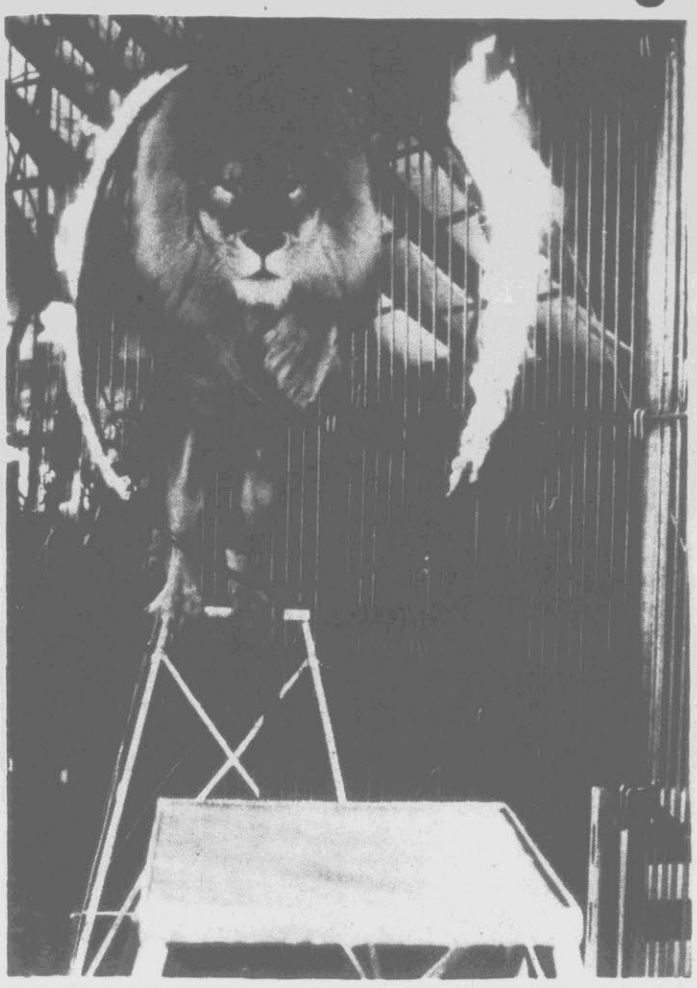
The Circus Is Coming To Town Next Week



A MANE ATTRACTION . . . Lions, as well as tigers and bears, are trained to entertain audiences attending the Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus, which will be in Greenville two days, Thursday and Friday at Carolina East Mall.

The Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros. Circus, the world's largest circus under the big top, will be in Greenville two days, Thursday and Friday, April 25 and 26.

Two shows will be presented on each of the two days, at 4:30 p.m. and again at 8 p.m. Ticket prices vary for children 12 and under, for senior citizens over 65 and students, and for adults. An extra fee is charged for reserved seats. Advanced tickets are available at Sears Customer Service at the mall.

Proceeds realized will be used by the Civitans for the Ronald McDonald House.

Clyde Beatty-Cole Bros., an early American circus, has been entertaining generations of circus fans for more than a century — this year marking the beginning of its second century of performances in America.

The 1985 edition of the two-hour family entertainment consists of more than 40 performing animals and over 60 circus stars drawn from top talent the U.S. and from 17 foreign countries.

Among individual acts and troupes to be seen in this year's circus are Mexican acrobats, Arabian tumblers, French and Canadian jugglers, aerialists, as well as tigers, lions, elephants, precision horse performers — with all the acts underscored by a full eight-piece brass band. And of course, there are clowns carrying out their colorful antics.

Maritime Trips Set

BEAUFORT — Two field trips, both requiring reservations and a fee, have been scheduled for dates during the coming week by the North Carolina Maritime Musuem, Beaufort. (For reservations and for fee and other information, call the museum at 728-7317.

The two field trips scheduled are:

• Tuesday, April 23 — Bird Shoal trip for birding and shelling on Rachel Carson National Estuarine Sanctuary, 1 to 4 p.m. Be prepared to wade and walk the island.

• Friday, April 26 — Canoe trip on Great Lake in the Croatan National Forest. Meet at the lake at 10:30 a.m. Disembark by 3 p.m. Bring a canoe, lunch and beverage. Great Lake is shallow and bordered by swamp vegetation. Birds and perhaps secretive alligators may be seen along the shores. (The Croatan National Forest lies between N.C. 58 off the New Bern-Swansboro highway and U.S. 70 between New Bern and Morehead City.

RETURNING TO STAGE

LONDON (AP) — John Hurt is returning to the London stage after an 11-year absence to play Trigorin in Chekhov's "The Seagull."

The last time the 45-year-old star of the movies "The Elephant Man" and "1984" appeared on the stage was in 1974 in Tom Stoppard's "Travesties."

"When you're making a film, people say, 'When are you going to go back on the stage?' as though that is the natural habitat of the actor," Hurt said in an interview. "I suppose it used to be, but it isn't necessarily anymore.

Dr. Parrish To Lecture At Sheppard

Dr. Margaret Parrish, assistant professor in the English department at the University of North Carolina, Wilmington, will be the first lecturer in the book discussion series "Not for Children Only" presented by Sheppard Memorial Library.

The session will begin at 7 p.m. Thursday, April 25. Participants will read books and meet to discuss them over five sessions. Different scholars will be available at each series to provide introductory lectures on the books under discussion. Books for the series will be provided free of charge at Sheppard Library.

"Not for Children Only" is part of a national program called "Let's Talk About It" which is being sponsored by the American Library Association and funded by the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Dr. Parrish was a children's librarian at the Boston Public Library for five years. She received her Ph.D. from Michigan State University in children's literature. At UNC-Wilmington she teaches children's literature and women literature. She is author of a children's book, "David McCheever's Twenty-Nine Dogs."

The program is free and open to the public. Anyone interested in taking part is to call the library at 752-4177.

The Lucie Arnaz Show Airs Tuesday

Lucie Arnaz, 33, daughter of TV's most famous redhead, has had quite a burden to bear: She has chosen her mother's profession — acting — in which to make her mark. Miss Arnaz, currently starring in "The Lucie Arnaz Show" (which airs Tuesdays on CBS), maintains that even though her show is a bit more serious than her mother's old shows, it does feature comedy that works — because it mirrors real-life situations.

"Comedy works when it takes a real situation with which people can identify, and makes people laugh with it," Miss Arnaz says. "That's the way it was with 'The Honeymooners' and with my mother's shows. But the last couple of years, a lot of shows have forgotten that. All they do is tell jokes. It's just like fast food."

Initially, Miss Arnaz didn't want to do another TV series. "I thought it was a vile rat race," she says. But she took on the role of radio psychologist Dr. Jane Lucas because, as she notes, "I liked the character and I could really get involved with all her different sides."

"The Lucie Arnaz Show" is modeled after the British-TV hit "Agony," in which the lead character is married. "But we decided to leave her single, so she could play out all the options, says Miss Arnaz. Not surprisingly, the lighter side of Dr. Lucas is shown through the foibles of her single status. Since the show is situated (and taped) in New York City, there's more than a passing similarity to Marlo Thomas's series "That Girl."

The serious side enters most often through the phone calls Dr. Lucas takes on her radio show. One episode was devoted entirely to wife-beating. "CBS has not been promoting this as a 'serious show' because they want to keep a comedy image, but I feel that we're giving a lot more," the actress says. "On the other hand," she continues, "Tony Roberts plays my boss, Jim Gordon, and originally he was supposed to be this heavy, a real male chauvinist. But we felt it was a waste to make Tony so boring. So now, instead of being sane, we let him be the one with a few screws loose. In New York, it seems everyone's like that. Sometimes I think I'm the only sane one here."

Batter up! New York Yankee greats Mickey Mantle (far r.) and Whitey Ford (far l.) offer Pierce Brosnan and Stephanie Zimbalist some baseball pointers in "Second Base Steele," the episode of "Remington Steele" airing Tuesday, April 23 on NBC.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: My husband and I are big fans of "Miami Vice." We love all of the music on the show, especially the opening theme song performed by Jan Hammer. Is any type of sound track available? — LUANN & BILL PARMELEE, RALEIGH, N.C.

NBC's "Miami Vice" is hot — so hot, in fact, that the show's producers are reportedly planning to release a sound track album later this year. The disc will feature music by synthesizer wizard Hammer. There is also talk of a video clip to be produced for MTV.

Dear Michele: Who played the part of Blake Carrington in the premiere episode of "Dynasty"? I say it was Géorge Peppard. My husband says it was John Forsythe. — CLAUDIA RICHMOND, BRISTOL, CONN.

George Peppard said no when producer Aaron Spelling originally offered him the role of Blake Carrington in a series to be titled "Oil." "Oil" soon became "Dynasty," John Forsythe accepted Spelling's offer — and the rest is Nielsen history!

Dear Michele: Does Katharine Hepburn have a niece who is an actress? Didn't this niece co-star with Miss Hepburn in "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner"? Is it Katherine Ross? — ELEANOR MITCHELL, QUINTON, VA.

Katharine Houghton co-starred with her famous aunt in "Guess Who's Coming to Dinner" (1967), a film for which Miss Hepburn copped a Best Actress Oscar. Katherine Ross has starred in films such as "The Graduate" (1967), "Tell Them Willie Boy Is Here" (1969), "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid" (1969) and "The Stepford Wives" (1975).

Dear Michele: I say Gregory Peck is still alive. My friends say he is dead. Who is right? — C.J. WEEKS, EVERETT, WASH.

How do these rumors get started? Gregory Peck is alive and well and still active at age 69. The former president of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences (1967-70), and recipient of the Academy's Jean Hersholt Humanitarian Award, Peck recently co-produced the "57th Annual Academy Awards." And who can forget his brilliant performances in "Spellbound" (1945), "The Yearling" (1947), "Twelve O'Clock High" (1949), "Moby Dick" (1956) and "To Kill a Mockingbird," for which he won a long-overdue Oscar as Best Actor in 1962.

Rollins Takes A Walk On The 'Wildside'

By Jay Carman

Even though this week marks the last scheduled episode of ABC's "Wildside," its star, Howard E. Rollins Jr., says he's confident that it will be back in the fall.

"Even if I'm wrong about our show," he says, "I'd be willing to bet good money that there will definitely be some type of Western series on the air. After all, it's been a decade since a genuine Western was on the schedule.

"There's a whole generation of kids out there now who know nothing about cowboys and are becoming interested in that period of our history," says Rollins. "The twist with 'Wildside' is that we added a lovely comic air, as opposed to the standard grit-and-gravel cowboy show of the past."

"Wildside" also contains such winning ingredients as intelligence, imagination and appealing characters. Rollins' sidekicks — William Smith and Eddie Peck, as father-and-son ranchers and the fastest and second-fastest guns in the West; John DiAquino as a gunsmith who prefers knives to firearms; and ex-wrestler Terry Funk, as a veterinarian who wields a mean lariat — are fine supporting actors.

TV Chatter

Man Watchers Inc., headed by Suzy Mallery, recently released its annual list of the top 10 "Most Watchable Men of the Year." The winners were described by balloters as handsome, strong, caring, warm and intelligent. Among those notable men recognized for these outstanding traits and "watchability," were: President Ronald Reagan, Chuck Woolery, Mel Gibson, David Hasselhoff, Jackie Jackson (brother of Michael), Kirk Douglas, Michael Douglas, Dean Martin, Joe Montana and Ed McMahon.

This week, in the wake of all the hoopla about "Amadeus" sweeping the Academy Awards, PBS is presenting a two-hour special commemorating the 300th birthday of Johann Sebastian Bach. The special, hosted by Peter Ustinov, a Bach expert in his own right, examines the intriguing details of Bach's life in 18th - century Germany, as well as his famous compositions. You won't want to miss it!

Robert Wagner is absolutely delighted with his new ABC series "55 Lime Street," scheduled to premiere in the fall. Wagner portrays a wealthy undercover international insurance investigator and has been filming among the elite in England, Bermuda, New York, Los Angeles and Washington, D.C. Recent additions to the cast include Lew Ayers (as his father), Samantha Smith and Maia Brewton (as his daughters), and Hurd Hatfield, Patrick Macnee and John Standing.

In case you have been wondering about Burt Reynolds, he is alive and well (except for a dental problem), and is busily working on his next project — a movie. The movie, a sequel to "Semi-Tough," is based on Dan Jenkin's best-seller, "Life Its Ownself."

Jennifer Bassey, who stars on "All My Children," is scheduled to appear on "Hour Magazine" Monday, April 22, to discuss her bout with alcoholism and recovery through Alcoholics Anonymous. Why would Miss Bassey openly discuss such a personal subject? She is hoping others afflicted with alcoholism will be inspired to seek the help they need.

Loretta Young, missing from the television screen for 22 years, returns in Aaron Spelling's new series "Dark Mansions." Spelling, noted for his gentle persuasion, merely offered her $175,000 for the pilot and $50,000 per episode — plus bonuses if it's a hit.

A Disturbing Portrayal Of The Fall Of Saigon

By Andrew J. Edelstein

"The Last Day," a docudrama about the final days of the American presence in Vietnam in April 1975, is a disturbing piece of British agitprop. The 1982 BBC production debuts on The Arts & Entertainment Network on Tuesday, April 23.

"The Last Day" inter-cuts news footage of the advancing Vietcong troops into dramatic scenes of the creeping panic at the American Embassy. The Vietcong have captured the whole of South Vietnam except Saigon. But the American ambassador (Dan O'Herlihy) believes he can still negotiate a settlement with the North Vietnamese and he refuses to initiate a full-scale evacuation.

The ambassador, a silver-haired Brahmin who doesn't let the reality of the U.S. loss sink in, is portrayed as a case study in xenophobic rigidity. Richard Nixon is his hero — he still has a photo of him on his desk, even though Gerald Ford had been president for eight months. "It was B-52s that brought Hanoi to the peace table," he thunders, urging the Americans to use B-52s again in support of the beleaguered South Vietnamese troops.

His foil is his cynical, realistic aide Howard, played by David Suchet, the squat, balding actor who portrayed the Russian Ambassador to Mexico in the film "The Falcon and the Snowman." "The greatest nation on Earth has been beaten by a bunch of lice-infested Orientals. That's fact. F-A-C-T," Howard tells the ambassador, who by now resembles the haunted, paranoid Nixon described in Woodwardand Bernstein's book "The Final Days."

Even after the order to evacuate has come directly from President Ford and as the last American troops are exiting the embassy, the ambassador is convinced he could bribe the VC with $1 million to form a coalition government. Replies Howard: "Maybe the Commies will accept American Express."

While the byplay between O'Herlihy and Suchet is fascinating, one is disturbed by the film's distinct anti-American bias. Near the end of the drama, as the futility of the American position becomes clearer, the screen is filled with a two-minute, black-and-white montage of American war atrocities. Films like these used to be shown at anti-war rallies in the '60s to stir up anti-American passions. In the context of the "The Last Day," it is gratuitous, an excuse for director Richard Stroud to vent his anti-Americanism.

The film ends with the statement on screen: "There was no blood bath... After 30 years, Saigon passed almost peacefully into other hands." That's disingenuous at best. Less than a year after the North Vietnamese "liberated" Saigon and cut off communications from the outside world, word leaked out that a blood bath, indeed, had occurred.

Over the past 10 years, Americans have come close to healing the wounds of Vietnam.

It's Only Yuppie Love For 'Loving' Star

By Connie Passalacqua

It seems all kinds of unusual types of people have recently been represented on daytime, including dwarves, Interpol agents, long-lost identical twins, deaf-mutes, even a black man masquerading as a white man. Linc Beecham of "Loving," played by Phil MacGregor, is daytime's first representative of that '80s archetype: the yuppie.

"Most soap viewers are used to seeing young guys as college boys or blue-collar workers," says MacGregor. "But Linc, who helped take over Alden Enterprises, is only about 25, and most people assume that anyone that young can't be powerful. But look at a man like Donald Trump — he's only in his 30s. It's hard to imagine someone so young throwing their power around, but it definitely happens."

McGregor should know. He made his TV debut two years ago as the ultimate daytime good guy, all-American college student Rick Bauer on "Guiding Light."

2 Women And 54 Men Battle On Fairways

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

It's a first: Two women, Kathy Whitworth and Mickey Wright, will compete against men in the $500,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament at the Onion Creek Club in Austin, Texas. NBC airs the event Saturday, April 27 and Sunday, April 28.

This is the eighth Legends of Golf tournament, but the first time in the history of the Professional Golfers Association that women are allowed. The two women may surprise a lot of people and take home a lot of money. Both have been elected to the Ladies PGA Hall of Fame. Both are in the World Golf Hall of Fame. Between 1959 and 1969, Miss Wright averaged 7.9 victories per year. In 1963, she won 13 tournaments. In 1962, in a tournament in Midland, Texas, she fired a 62, still a record.

Kathy Whitworth has 85 tournament wins. No one — neither man nor woman — has won more than that. Eight times she took home more money at the end of the year than any other player on the LPGA tour. Seven times she was named player of the year. She was the first LPGA member to win $1 million.

Among the male golfers who will be competing are: Arnold Palmer, Gene Sarazen, Miller Barber, Julius Boros, Don January and last year's winners — Billy Casper and Gay Brewer. It won't be an easy two days for the ladies. The rules should help them. They will be competing against 27 two-member teams on a better-ball basis: the better of the two scores is the one that counts. In order to qualify for the Liberty Mutual, a golfer must be at least 50 years old and have either won a major tournament, been the top money winner in a given year or a member of the Ryder Cup team. The ladies qualify.

Of the two, Miss Wright is the one to keep your viewing eye on. This Stanford University graduate is a late-round fighter, a Joe Frazier of the golf course, with a solid swing, a vicious putt and a fierce will not just to survive, but to win. She is planning to win this tournament. She is not here just to smile at the cameras. She's ready to cash a winner's check. Miss Whitworth is no slouch. She loves pressure and playing when everything is on the line. That's when she does what no one expects her to do — win.

Women have been making attempts to be treated as equals in the golfing world for some time. For the most part, they have failed. This tournament, held under an often unkind Texas sun, will help their cause a great deal.

Asner Presses His Luck On 'Off The Rack'

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — In his new TV persona as a rumpled rag trader, Ed Asner may not much resemble a hero of the Old West... but he jokes that these days, he can empathize with Custer's Last Stand — along with the Alamo, Pearl Harbor, and other one-sided historical battles.

Asner and co-star Eileen Brennan have, for the past couple of months, been bravely going head-to-head with "Dallas," hoping to establish respectable ratings for their new sitcom, "Off the Rack."

The ABC programming jury will be out until early May, but at press time, there was optimism that the show's test run would be extended long enough to pit it against reruns on CBS.

It makes sense: The Ewings are building up to their annual cliffhanger, and with Patrick Duffy quitting as Bobby, even "Dallas" fans whose attention was wandering a little will probably be lured back for the grand finale.

After watching Asner and Miss Brennan go through their paces in rehearsals for "Off the Rack," one had to agree with him that the show has a lot more going for it than many now-established sitcoms.

"I'm pleased that at least we were given a chance to prove ourselves with more than just a pilot," says Asner. "I am also surprised — when we started the project early last year, we thought we stood a chance at a fall premiere, and now, 12 months later, we're back to first base."

"On-and-Off the Rack" might have been a more accurate title, but Asner says he doesn't regret a second of the time he has spent trying to return to comedy.

"When Lou Grant moved from 'The Mary Tyler Moore Show' to his own dramatic series, there were people who said the audience would never be able to take me seriously," he says. "Now the same people are saying I will never be accepted as a funny guy.

"I think what that proves is that the audience is a whole lot smarter than many of the so-called experts in this business."

Suzuki Concert To Be Given At Rose High

ECU NEWS BUREAU

A concert of music for the violin will be presented at the 19th annual Suzuki Festival here Friday, April 26 at 7:30 p.m. The concert, free and open to the public, will be held at Rose High School.

The Suzuki Festival is part of the annual spring arts festival sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council. This year for the first time, Suzuki violinists from throughout the state have been invited to participate, according to Joanne Bath, Suzuki Festival director.

Performers will include young violinists from Ayden, Farmville, Greenville, Tarboro, Kinston, Wilson, New Bern, Goldsboro, Beaufort, Morehead City, Winston-Salem, Burlington, Raleigh, Wilmington, Washington, Chapel Hill and Durham.

The students performing represent various age groups — preschool through high school — and a wide range of achievement levels in the Suzuki repertoire.

Among the works to be performed will be a selection of folk tunes; dances from the classical and baroque eras; concerti by Bach, Vivaldi, Handel and Seitz; sonatas by Handel and the romantic "Vocalise" by Rachmaninoff. Dr. Charles Bath will be piano accompanist.

The annual Suzuki Festival is a project of the Suzuki violinists of Eastern North Carolina, an organization which includes Mrs. Bath's students as well as students of area teachers Kathyrn Jenkins, Jon Ward Shaw, Candace Dixon, Nancy Kosteck, Stephen Bath, Vicki Petrie, Danielle Nieman, Amy Moore, Andrea Bath, Sheila Pearson, Kathyrn Ellen, Margaret Ann Creech and John Livesay.

In addition to extensive performances throughout the eastern half of the state, the Suzuki group has completed two concert tours of England. Individual members of the group have been the recipients of numerous honors, including audition prizes at national, regional and state levels; college and universtiy music scholarships; grants for participation in such camp programs as the American Federation of Musicians' Congress of Strings and concertmasters chairs in the All-State Honors Orchestra.

Chapter Of The NCCEGA Located In Greenville

The North Carolina chapter of The Embroiderers' Guild of America, Inc. is based in Greenville, and is interested in providing information to those who may wish to become members of the chapter.

The guild is an educational, non-profit organization founded in 1958 and for 15 years has been affiliated with the Embroiders' Guild of London, England. Its purpose is to set and maintain high standards of design, color, and workmanship in all types of embroidery and needle arts.

Embroiderers of all ages, both male and female, are members of the guild. Membership includes persons at all levels of proficiency.

A series of seminars, workshops, and exhibits are held periodically to promote creativity and to stimulate the exchange of ideas and techniques among all interested persons. The primary criteria for membership is an interest in learning about the art of embroidery.

Anyone who would like more information on the guild and its work is to call Pam Burkart at 756-7399 or Rhonda Whitehurst at 752-0367, or write to: NCCEGA, P.O. Box 4245, Greenville, N.C., 27836.

MARINE PROGRAMS

The North Carolina Marine Resources Centers, in three locations in coastal North Carolina, provides the public with a wide variety of free programs during weekdays and weekends. The two nearest to Greenville are on Roanoke Island and on Bogue Banks.

Springfest Festival Downtown Saturday

Downtown Greenville will be transformed into an outdoor festival of music, art, crafts, dance and drama during Springfest '85 to be held in the downtown area from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday, April 27.

Springfest will showcase local and regional talent. Festival-goers will be able to enjoy exhibits and entertainment while strolling down Fifth Street, Evans Street, and in the Downtown Mall. The streets will be closed to vehicular traffic during the Springfest hours.

Food will be available at booths sponsored by downtown restaurants and by non-profit organizations. Festival participants will have an opportunity to sit and eat at the The Grandstand while they watch performers such as Billy and Sandra Stinson, "The Amateurs" group, Mark (Lightning) Wells, Steve Myott and the Center Theatre, Donna Whitley's Middle Eastern Dance Arts, and SBEBSQUA, a barbershop chorus.

A contest will be held to determine who has the best entry in the "Roxy Mini-Float" contest and to see who can "go the lowest" in the limbo contest.d

Springfest '85 is sponsored by the downtown Greenville Association, East Carolina University Student Union, Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Artists and craftsmen wishing to exhibit their work at Springfest '85 and organizations wishing to sponsor a food booth, are to contact 757-1785.

Shakespearit For Students

HIGH POINT — This spring the North Carolina Shakespeare Festival will be filling junior high schools throughout North Carolina with Shakespearit!, a specially prepared program of scenes, songs and soliloquies from some of the bard's most popular plays.

Shakespearit! is intended to introduce Junior High school students to the world of Shakespeare through live performances.

The festival will be touring Shakespearit! to over 40 junior high schools in North Carolina. The production will feature two actors and a musician and will be 30 minutes in length to accommodate classroom schedules.

The program is being presented with the support of the Edwin Gill Theater Program of the N. C. Department of Public Instruction and the Martha and Spencer Love Foundation.

Playwright Fund To Present A Play Wednesday

. . . A quintet of Madrigal Players in performance

A STAGE TWO PROGRAM . . . Members of the East Carolina University Collegium and Dancers will be entertaining Super Sunday guests today at The Plaza. The group will present a program in the Stage Two segment of events from 2:30 to 3 p.m. today.

On Wednesday, April 24, the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina, Inc. will take part in the 5th Annual East Carolina Arts Festival with a reading production of a play by Christine Rusch, "Waltz of the Iron Man."

The production will take place at 8:15 p.m. in the auditorium of the Administrative Building at Jaycee Park, 2000 Cedar Lane. It is free and open to the public.

Tim Davidson will direct the reading production. Cast members are Dwight Eastwood in the role the husband, Luther; Hazel Stapleton as his wife, Mabel; and Robert Ruffin as the accidental visitor, Sterling.

The theme of the play focuses on an interplay of willpower between two men of entirely different characters, the boastful, all-masculine type, Luther, and the sensitive, more intelligent chance visitor, Sterling. The wife, Mabel, is instrumental in furthering the burgeoning conflict that ends short of physical violence. Flashes of comedy ligthen the darker aspects of Mrs. Rusch's play, set in the lobby of a motel owned by the couple which at the time of the play is little used due to a newly built bypass shutting the place off from the mainstream of passing traffic.

The play in first draft was read and critiqued during several stages of its development during meetings of the Greenville Writers Club. Mrs. Rusch, artistic director of The Playwright's Fund, is also active in the Writers Club.

The poster of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council Festival incorrectly listed "Pull," a new play by Terry Cawley, as the festival play to be presented on April 24. Festival organizers apologize to Cowley and to Mrs. Rusch. Cowley's play, "Pull," The Playwrights Fund of North Carolina competition winner, was presented on April 10 in two readings in Greenville.

The Playwrights Fund of North Carolina, Inc., headquartered in Greenville, is now in its fourth year. The fund sponsors monthly reading productions of new plays by beginning and more established playwrights, both in and out of the local area, in noon Best Lunch Theater Ever productions at the Greenville Museum of Art and in evening productions in the Downtown, Downstairs basement room at the Humber House. Occasionally, the fund sponsors readings and performances in addition to the regularly scheduled events.

The Playwrights Fund of North Carolina, Inc., is funded by the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council, the North Carolina Arts Council, the North Carolina Humanities Committee, Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Company, and corporate and individual memberships.

Middle Eastern Dance Event Set For Today

In the Stage 2 section of opening day activities of the 5th Annual East Carolina Arts Festival, Donna Whitley will present a Middle Eastern Dance program from 2 to 2:30 p.m. on Sunday, April 21 at The Plaza.

Ms. Whitley was trained in California under Bert Balladine, who received a Governor's Award for his contribution to dance and who has been featured in the Wall Street Journal as a founder of the "belly dance" movement in the U.S.

Ms. Whitley also studied with Karima in Casablanca, Morocco and lived for a year in a Moroccan village where she learned the dance as a folk art. This experience sparked her interest in folk dancing and led her to further study in the related field of African dance at the University of Ghana.

Among places where she has performed outside the Greenville area have been in nightclubs in San Francisco and in Casablanca. She teaches Middle Eastern dancing and lectures on the history of this form of dance, which is sometimes referred to as "belly dancing," but which Ms. Whitley says is more correctly known by the general name of Middle Eastern dance.

Raleigh-Roanoke Exhibition Being Shown In Raleigh

RALEIGH — A comprehensive exhibition honoring the first attempts to establish English settlements in the New World, titled "Raleigh & Roanoke: The First English Colony in America, 1584-1590," is currently on view in the North Carolina Museum of History, 109 East Jones Street, Raleigh.

The exhibition premiered at the British Library in London in April, 1984, and is part of an ongoing celebration of the 400th anniversary of England's first attempt to settle America.

In 1584, over 20 years before the successful establishment of the Jamestown colony father north in what is now Virginia, English seamen dispatched by Walter Raleigh explored the Outer Banks of present-day North Carolina. Within a year, English colonists began their struggle to settle the small island of Roanoke.

Through the use of period maps, books, correspondence, and portraits, the "Raleigh & Roanoke" exhibition also examines the political intrigue and favoritism of the court of Elizabeht, the evolution of England's claims on America and the resulting confrontations with Spain, as well as the collision of New- and Old-World cultures.

Admission is free. Hours of the exhibition are 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. Mondays, Tuesdays, and Thursdays; 9 a.m. to 5 p.. on Wednesdays, Fridays, and Saturdays, and 1 to 6 p.m. on Sundays. The exhibition will be in Raleigh until June 6.

Chuck Davis Dance Company A Big Festival Event

One of the big events this year's East Carolina Arts Festival will be two days of residency in schools and an evening performance by Chuck Davis and The African-American Dance Ensemble. Davis and his ensemble will be in the area on Thursday and Friday, April 25 and 26, and in concert on the East Carolina Univrsity campus on Saturday, April 27.

On Thursday the dancers will be in residency in schools in Pitt County, and on Friday they will again be in residency in Greenville City Schools.

The Chuck Davis ensemble is now headquartered at the American Dance Festival (ADF) in Durham. Davis, a North Carolina native, is currently director of the Community Outreach program of the ADF. An exceptionally large dancer — standing well over six feet, Davis served in the U.S. Navy from 1955-57, worked at the Rehabilitation Center of the George Washington University Hospital in Washington, D.C., and attended Howard University where he majored in theater and dance.

To capture the true essence of African dance styles, Davis has studied with dancers in Senegal, The Gambia, Nigeria, Guinea, Ivory Coast, The Congo Republic, and Ghana. He has also studied with American instructors in the fields of jazz, modern dance styles, and Afro-Caribbean dances.

Many of his works have been produced with Davis as guest choreographer, including productions in Denver, Honolulu, Boston, Chicago, Austin, Tex., New York City, Winston-Salem, Raleigh, and Goldsboro.

Davis has danced with several dance companies, and has taught in a number of locations, primarily in New York, North Carolina, New Jersey and Washington, D.C.

In 1984 he received the Dance Africa Award and in 1980 was the recipient of the Distinguished North Carolinian Award. The list of other awards and citations he holds are numerous — from groups and organizations in North Carolina, Puerto Rico, Louisiana, and New York.

The dance concert by Davis and the African-American Dance Ensemble will be presented at McGinnis Theatre at 8:15 p.m. Saturday, April 27. Tickets can be reserved in advance from the McGinnis box office or purchased at the door.

Dancers in the ensemble in addition to Davis are: Venita Ashford, Ivy Burch, Toni Hall, Gloria Muldrow, Sherone Price, Leah Wise; also, Lou Carter, Thaddeus Bennett, Jimmy Green III, Gail Martin, Brenda Hayes, Jimi Williams, and Ava McFarlane. Beth Thurmond is technical director, and Khalid Saleem is musical director.

Greenville Choral Society Will Be In Concert Thursday

IN CONCERT THURSDAY — The Greenville Choral Society will be in concert at 8 p.m. Thursday in Memorial Baptist Church. Guests artists are Joanne Bath, violin, Mark Gansor, organ, and Jim Reese, narrator. An admission is charged.

A varied program of music will be presented in the final concerto of the 1984-1985 season of the Greenville Choral Society accompanied by an ensemble of the Greenville Chamber Orchestra on Thursday, April 25, at 8 p.m. at Memorial Baptist Church.

Joanne Bath and Mark Gansor will perform the Sonata #4 in D Major by Handel. Ms. Bath, a native of Portland, Oregon, with degrees in music performance from both Denison University and the University of Michigan, has studied under Mischa Mischakoft, Gustave Rossello, and Boris Sirpo, and at the Conservatoire Fountainbleau, France. She is also well-known in North Carolina as a teacher of violin.

Mark Gansor, a native of Pittsburgh, Pa., and a senior student in the music performance program of East Carolina University School of Music, has been the accompanyist of the Greenville Choral Society for two seasons. In commemoration of the 300th anniversary of the birth of Johann Sebastian Bach, Gansor will perform the "Prelude and Fugue on the name of Bach" by Franz Liszt.

The principle offerings of the Choral Society are R. Vaughn Williams' "Serenade to Music" and the "Creation" by Tom Scott. The "Serenade" was composed for and dedicated to Sir Henry J. Wood who founded the famous Promenade concerts in London. The composition was written for sixteen solo voices and the music set to the words of William Shakespeare from the "Merchant of Venice." Members of the Choral Society will sing the solo parts and Ms. Bath will be featured as violin soloist. The work is a dreamy, melodious offering appropriate to spring.

The "Creation" is based upon words written by James Weldon Johnson, a noted American Black poet, in his work, "God's Trombones," published in 1927. It reflects a simple, childlike faith in the power of God. Mr. James L. Rees, a member of the East Carolina University Theatre Arts faculty, is the narrator for this number.

An old American ballad, "Long Time Ago," adapted for chorus by Aaron Copland, and a choral scherzo on the well-known tune "Oh, Dear, What Can the Matter Be?" arranged by Gail Kubik will conclude the program.

The Choral Society will perform under the direction of Carolyn Greene Ipock who has served as visiting conductor for the current season. Candace Dixon will conduct the chamber ensemble.

Partial funding for the concert has been provided by the North Carolina Council on the Arts and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council. Tickets may be purchased at the door.

Super Grit Cowboy Band Has A Southern Sound

The Super Grit Cowboy Band was formed in 1975 by Clyde "Loose Lester" Mattocks (pedal steel, banjo, guitar, dobro) and Danny "Stonewall" Vinson (drums and percussion). It began as a dream — a dream of playing their own brand of music the way they felt it, constantly refusing to be pigeonholed.

The following year, they were joined by musician extraordinaire Michael Kinzie whose musical background includes a BME degree with a double major in tuba and violin from East Carolina University and two years postgraduate study toward a Master's in Ethnomusicology, also from ECU. Kinzie, known to many as "13," has played in numerous bluegrass and country rock bands, symphony orchestras and wind ensembles including three years in the pit orchestra of the ECU Summer Theatre and several years as the principle tuba player for the ECU Wind Ensemble and the Marching Pirates. A multi-instrumentalist, he plays violin, viola, saxophone, guitar, bass, harmonica, flute, trombone, and tuba.

Alan Hicks, a veteran of the David Allen Coe Band, joined the group in 1981, playing bass and guitar. A seasoned musician with over ten years on the road, Alan is also one of the group's three writers.

Mark Golladay, a native of Roanoke, Va., joined the group after having played the last several years in Dallas, Texas, and Nashville, Tenn. His early influences range from Hank Williams to the Allman Brothers, making his lead guitar playing and singing style quite varied.

A two year search for a keyboard player culminated in the addition of Don Cox to the band in September of 1984. Don's musical experience began early. He played hoe-downs with his father at age ten and continued to play in rock and roll bands throughout high school.

All six members of Super Grit Cowboy Band sing and play several instruments. "We want to be fresh and unique, and our way to do that is with a new voice change on every song," says drummer Danny Vinson.

"Our music is easily explained since it draws upon our bluegrass, jazz, classical, country and swamp rock backgrounds to create a sound as progressive as it is southern," says Clyde Mattocks, the group's leader and producer of all three Super Grit albums.

The Super Grit albums are "Super Grit Cowboy Band," "If You Can't Hang. . ." and "Showin' Our Class." To date, the band has charted five singles on "Billboard's" Hot 100 Country Singles. Their latest single, "Legend of the Lost Colony," was sanctioned as the official theme song of North Carolina's Quadracentennial Celebration.

They have opened shows for an wide range of performers from country artists David Allen Coe, George Jones and Waylon Jennings, to bluegrassers Bill Monroe and Earl Scruggs, to rockers Molly Hatchett, Charlie Daniels Band and 38 Special, to symphony orchestras including the North Carolina Symphony and the Alabama Symphony in the "Hoodswamp Symphony Ball" programs. Scored by Michael Kinzie, this unusual event is a musical collaboration between symphony and Super Grit which has proved to be a success. Television productions of the "Hoodswamp Symphony Ball" have been shown on PBS and commercial television.

The Super Grit Cowboy Band has made a career out of being contrary. They didn't sign with a major recording label, they formed their own. They didn't take a month off to record their albums straight through, they squeezed in sessions whenever possible. And they set up their own publishing company and distribution system.

It is this type of belief in their music and themselves that sets the band apart from the rest. "We've got to stick to what we believe in and we believe in ourselves," says Mattocks. In an industry where compromise and change are normal procedure, the Super Grit Cowboy Band is bound and determined not to compromise their music nor themselves. "I'd rather for us to be known as a band that lasted ten years with a loyal following than to be this year's hot shot band that sold out to get there," says Mattocks. "I've got to live with myself."

And by the looks of things — both from the past and into the future — Super Grit will be sticking to their guns.

TIL MIDNIGHT COWBOYS . . . Greenville's Super Grit Cowboy Band is part of the country music segment of the Fifth Annual Arts Festival this year. The band will be in performance from 8 p.m. to midnight Thursday at Sheraton Greenville. Admission will be charged, with tickets less if purchased in advance than at the door.

Awards Dinner Is Scheduled

Mrs. Betty Spier, Awards Dinner Chairwoman, has announced that a date has been selected for the Arts Council Annual Awards Dinner. It will be Wednesday, May 1 at 7:30 p.m. at the Greenville Country Club.

The purpose of the evening is to recognize the efforts that volunteers have made during the year to the Arts Council and its affiliate member organizations. Last year 11 individuals received awards for their work. Nominations for volunteer recognition should be sent in writing to the Arts Council office, 117 West Fifth Street, Greenville, N.C., 27834. The letter should detail the contribution made by the person to the organization, which will be read at the dinner.

Attendance is open to all interested in supporting the arts. For more information, including price of tickets and reservations, call the Arts Council office at 757-1785 Monday to Friday form 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Eat Your Art Out

The popular culinary arts events will again be a part of the East Carolina Arts Festival, with activities under the direction of committee chariwaman Janie Ferguson.

As in the past, various culinary delights will be for sale at The Plaza throughout Sunday. In addition, this year there will be a pasta demonstration and samplings of unusual items.

Mamie Dixon Is '85 Chairperson For Arts Festival

This year's Eastern Carolina Arts Festival has taken a new direction, thanks to the creative leadership of Festival Committee Chairwoman Mrs. Phillip R. (Mamie) Dixon. She has worked tirelessly since September to see this project through.

As a string music teacher in the Greenville City Schools, Mamie had three years experience as a participant in the festival. It was there she got her ideas for reorganizing the event – deciding the festival needed to become more focused, with an emphasis on the affiliated member organizations of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council. This emphasis, she felt, would help answer the question, "Who is the Arts Council?"

Super Sunday was created just for this reason – as the kick-off day showcase for many of the member organizations of the Arts Council. Here the groups have a chance to show off their talents, and let the community know the wealth of art activities available.

The Arts Council was organized to be an umbrella office for all art forms, to encourage art activities and develop new programs. As Mamie says, "The Greenville Museum of Art does a tremendous job reaching out to the community with the visual arts; it is easy for people to understand their purpose. Super Sunday will help them understand ours."

Another goal was to make each day of the week a little festival within a festival. The calendar of events certainly shows that this goal has been achieved. Super Sunday is several small festivals. One area is especially for children of all ages; another for our American heritage; and another for the performing arts. Each night of the week also reflects this goal. Monday is dance, Tuesday is old music, Wednesday is drama and choral music, Thursday is country and western music, Friday is string music.

Saturday is Springfest, another day of festival. It ranges from arts and crafts to childrens' creative dramatics, to the Chuck Davis Dance Company. There is something for everyone at least once during the festival.

The success of this new direction is not that surprising to those who know Mamie Dixon. Her life has been full of variety and achievement. She came to Greenville on a music scholarship to East Carolina University, and there earned her bachelors and masters in music.

Since graduation, she has been a founder and director of the Greenville Chamber Orchestra; founding member of the Pitt County String Program, ECU School of Music Professional Association, and past director of the Greenville All-City Orcehstra.

In addition, she has served on the Greenville City Schools Arts Advisory committee, and Friends of the ECU School of Music.

Mrs. Dixon is currently a member of the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council Board of Directors and director of the Greenville Suzuki Studio. The is also a wife and mother of two.

Mamie Dixon says when she came to Greenville, she thought she was just "passing through." But then, she met her husband, Phil, another active, enthusiastic supporter of the arts. Now, she's here to stay, and the Arts Council is glad to hear that.

Center Theatre Is Designed To Train Young People

Center Theatre moved to Greenville permanently about a year ago. Funded in Vermont in 1977 by director Steve Myott, Center Theatre specializes in helping young people become involved in the process of making theatre come alive. It tours Eastern North Carolina, as well as carrying on work here in Pitt County for performances, workshops, and residencies in schools.

Centre Theater was recently acclaimed by Theatre Work magazine as "one of the popular theatres in America." The methods have remained the same over the years: get acquainted with the students, learn about their interests and personalities, then build and rehearse theatre pieces around their interests and imaginations.

"It is the goal of Centre Theatre to stimulate self-expression, to develop communication, and to instill self-confidence in young people," Myott commented. "It is also hoped that audiences will better understand and appreciate their children, as well as the importance of creative dramatics," he added.

- Today, 2 to 4 p.m. in the Children's Mini-Festival "Kids in Wonderland" segment of Super Sunday.
- Saturday, at 3 p.m. during the Springfest activities on the Downtown Evans Street Mall. The group will present an original play, "Traveling Circus," with life-sized puppets and masks.

Arts Council Located In The Humber House

The Pitt-Greenville Arts Council is now operating in its second year in the Robert Lee Humber house at 117 West Fifth Street in Greenville, across the street from the city hall.

Donated to Pitt County and Greenville by heirs of the late Dr. Robert Lee Humber, Jr., the Humber House has been renovated for use as offices for several cultural-related organizations — the Eastern Office of the North Carolina Department of Archives and History, the Greenville Area Preservation Association, the office of the Playwrights' Fund of North Carolina, Inc., and the most recent addition, the office of the Pitt County Historial Society.

Currently, the Pitt County Historical Society is featuring in the Humber House a display of artifacts from the collection of Dr. Robert Wright, the first Chancellor of East Carolina University. At the time of Dr. Wright's chancellorship, ECU was called the East Carolina Teachers Training School. The exhibit includes old photographs, books, instruments and clothing.

The original section of the Humber House was built in 1895 by the father of Dr. Humber, the late Robert Lee Humber, Sr. Additions to the home during a 75-year period reflect the influences and needs of two generations of the Humber family. The senior Humber was a machinist who had his workshop housed in a brick building, now demolished, adjacent to the grounds of the house.

Dr. Humber lived for a number of years in Paris, France and married Lucie Berthier. He was instrumental in action leading to the founding and establishment of the North Carolina Musuem of Art in Raleigh.

The two sons of Dr. and Mrs. Humber are Marcel and John Humber, both now living away from Greenville. Dr. Humber's brother, Dr. John Humber, is a surgeon living in California.

Prior to renovation for office use by Pitt County and Greenville agencies, the house was painted white and had a black roof. It is now painted in a distinctive shade of dark cream with a pale green roof.

Operating hours of the Humber House are from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. The public is invited to visit the house during those hours and to view changing exhibits of cultural and historical interest which are displayed from time to time. Groups interested in touring the Humber House are to call Diane Hankins, secretary for the Eastern Office of the N. C. Department of Archives and History, at 752-7778.

CRONKITE IN VIETNAM: NOW

Trust it to The Most Trusted Man in America to follow up on one of the most important events in recent U.S. history. In his hour-long special TV report Honor, Duty and a War Called Vietnam, to be aired Thursday, Walter Cronkite revisits the battlefields and prison camps and conducts interviews on America's only undeclared war. Congressman John McCain (R-Ariz.) went along with Cronkite to revisit the infamous North Vietnamese prison camp Plantation, from which the first prisoners were released in 1983. McCain had been a POW when serving as a captain in the Navy in Vietnam. "When he stood in his cell [in the camp, which is now used as a motion picture center for the military], McCain was clearly uptight — he wanted to get out into the sunlight pretty quickly," recalls Cronkite. "Then the commandant took us to his reception area, which turned out to be the same room in which McCain had been tortured under interrogation. It was a little tough for him to sit there and be polite." Cronkite was also able to talk with some of the North Vietnamese generals. Were they hostile? "Not hostile, really — not in the sense of obvious hostility," Cronkite says. "But hostility came through, I thought, in a little arrogance and pride (they'd call it pride, I'd call it arrogance) over having defeated us, having driven the great American army out of their country. One general presented me with a small bud vase made out of the aluminum of what he claimed was the 100th American plane shot down. I thought that was in supreme bad taste." About the formerly war-torn South Vietnamese capital, Saigon, Cronkite observes: "In a way it's rather pleasant in its physical aspect. It's a bicycle economy; nearly everybody's on bicycles. The absence of the military has lowered the noise and pollution levels; Saigon has rather clear, quiet air." Uncle Walter also commented on another change he wasn't so pleased with: "What is missing is the beauty of the girls — their lovely, long-haired beauty is gone. I don't know why, but they've all cut their hair and they no longer wear those dresses. The women are all on motorbikes wearing jeans and work shirts." Well, Mr. Cronkite, you must admit, jeans are more practical for bicycle riding.

AND THEN

REEVE: ANTI-HERO

Christopher Reeve may indeed have risen to fame playing a heroic figure, but when he was growing up, his own particular supermen were "obscure repertory actors. I never was one to worship the big names of stage, screen or sports," he says. "As a matter of fact, I didn't really think about films at all. My dream was recognition in the theater. It's lucky I received praise early on. Had I been told I was dreadful, I might not have hung in there."

"Do you think I'm sexy?" Rod Stewart croons to his fans. "How does it feel to turn 40?" is the question they ask him. "Not the slightest bit different to turning 35," says the hot rocker and father of two, Kimberly, 5, and Sean, 4. "I plan to keep singing and annoying everybody, especially my critics, for another 40 years." Still, Rod is trying to reel in his wild style. "I think I'm calming down a bit. Or if I haven't done so yet, I will." It's quite possible that Rod will also get married again. (He's divorced from Alana, his first wife.) "I come from a big family, and I'd like to have a big family of my own," he says. "One of the things I'm looking forward to at 80 is to be surrounded by lots of children and grandchildren." Well, that's one way to make sure you never run out of fans. How does Rod think he'll be remembered? "Very misunderstood, and very lucky," he says.

CROSBY: WHAT'S A DAUGHTER TO DO?

□

"Does the fact that you're Bing Crosby's daughter affect your choice of roles?" L.M. of Pomona, Calif., writes in to ask Mary Crosby. "Definitely," says the actress, who was last seen as a none-too-good girl in Hollywood Wives. "It's hard for an actress who's spent her brief career playing the All-American Girl to switch to being a bad girl, which is what I was on Dallas. On my last appearance on the show, a sheriff comes to arrest me for prostitution. The actor playing the part was a sweet old man who had known my father. He had trouble getting the words out, and in this embarrassed voice finally said, 'I can't say these things to Bing Crosby's daughter!' "

PEER POWER

By Janet Weiner

Fifteen-year-old Ronald, an amiable high school student, was arrested by police and charged with theft of bicycle equipment totaling $8. When his mother saw him at the Odessa, Texas, police station, handcuffed, with tears in his eyes, she too began to cry.

He was released in his mother's custody. "I was so scared," said the boy. "I thought she was going to kill me. But when we got in the car she said, 'Ronald, I had such hopes for you. I trusted you.' I guess I let her down."

Shoplifting is not unusual among adolescents, according to juvenile crime experts. For Ronald, it was his first offense. The motivation was obviously deprivation and need; he never thought of the consequences.

His parents, always mobile, were now divorced, and he was often shuttled between them. Being new to his neighborhood, he had difficulty making friends, got in with the wrong crowd, and drifted into trouble. "I would have done anything to become part of the group," said Ronald.

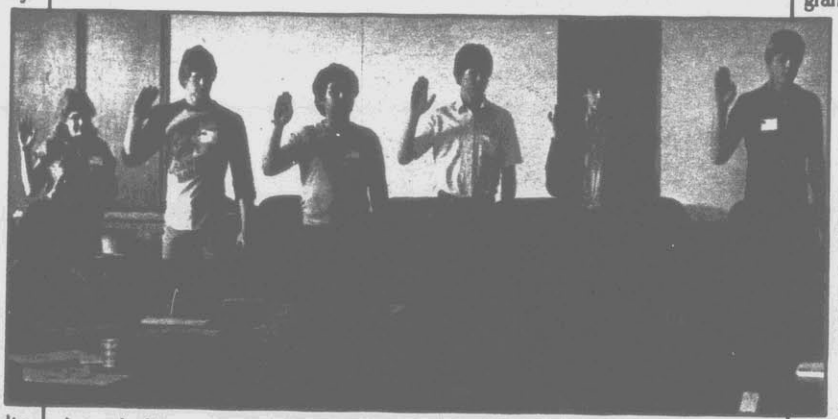
When it was time for Ronald to face the court, he was apprehensive. He told the state's attorney, "I needed the [bike] parts, and I didn't have the money to pay for them." The jury, led by the bailiff, filed out to decide his sentence.

A familiar scene? Yes . . . and no. The lawyers, judge and jury Ronald had to face were teenagers, and most of the participants — now jurors, attorneys, bailiffs, clerks — had themselves once been defendants. The Odessa teen court program is designed to help young first-time offenders such as Ronald, who might be developing a pattern of criminal behavior that can be stopped early by promoting a healthy attitude about oneself as well as the law. And teen courts are springing up all over the country. They exist in such places as Denver; Seattle; Portland, Ore.; Scranton and Erie, Penn.; Richardson and Grand Prairie, Texas; Oswego, Oneida, Tarrytown, Ithaca and Newburgh, N.Y. A television movie on the subject will air this Tuesday.

The jury is still out as to whether teen courts are a fad or an important judicial innovation. As Hunter Hurst, executive director of the National Center for Juvenile Justice in Pittsburgh, pointed out, "I don't think their performance has been well measured." But, he added, "without question," their efficiency lies in the fact that they enable young people to have better understanding of, and more respect for, the law.

"We ought to be encouraging innovation [such as youth court programs], but as we encourage it, we need to have enough healthy skepticism to document it," added Hurst. "Implement them and measure them, and make me wrong, because the answers to juvenile delinquency are so few that I certainly wouldn't want to rule this one out before the fact."

Janet Weiner, who lives in Houston, Texas, is a frequent contributor to FAMILY WEEKLY.



Max Faulkner

A panel of jurors is sworn in at the Odessa, Texas, teen court. More than 1,000 cases have been heard in the Odessa program, and second offenses have been rare.

The Odessa teen court has been in existence for a little over a year, and more than 1,000 cases have been heard. Thus far, no teenager found guilty of a misdemeanor and fewer than 15 percent of traffic offenders have been in further trouble. This speaks well for the project when the national average of second-time youthful offenders is now over 50 percent.

Judge Ken G. Spencer, 73, is a veteran jurist and one of two adults involved in the Odessa teen court. He believes the program is invaluable because "the kids learn something about their own rights, and they respect the legal system." Natalie Rothstein is the teen court coordinator. She runs the show, counsels teenagers in trouble, and attempts to channel their negative energy into something constructive. "Before teen court, many kids fell through the cracks in the legal system," she said. "The court dockets were loaded, and less serious offenses were put on a back burner. The youngster got a slap on the wrist and was sent home to sin no more." But in the teen court program, each youngster is quickly tried by his peers and is expected to complete obligations to society.

Teen court deals only with first offenders and handles a wide range of cases, including traffic violations, shoplifting, runaways, criminal trespass, theft, driving while intoxicated, and possession of drugs and alcohol. Youngsters between ages 10 and 16 must plead guilty (not-guilty pleas and felonies are dealt with at municipal court), and they are accompanied to court by their parents. Teenagers tried on drug- and alcohol-related charges are assigned to a chemical abuse education and prevention class. Parents attend a workshop on behavior modification techniques.

Sentences entail jury duty and community service. Offenders work for institutions such as the Red Cross, hospitals, nursing homes, and libraries, or for the victim to pay damages. Jury members assign the number of hours of service. Upon fulfillment of the sentence, charges are dismissed, and the offender's record is clean. Every defendant must later function as a juror. "This forces them on the justice side of the criminal justice system," Rothstein pointed out. "They're not going to be involved in law-breaking behavior, because they're getting positive reinforcement for positive kinds of behavior."

The maximum hours a defendant may serve is 30. When Ronald was sentenced to 18 hours, he chose to work at the animal shelter. He said he feels good about the program and about himself. "Now I have friends that I work with and friends through the program. And they like me for me. This all made me realize something about myself," he mused. "I'm OK."

The youths who find themselves before the court come from all sorts of families. "They're just ordinary mainline kids," says Rothstein. "They experience a feeling of not belonging. But when they get involved in teen court, they start to shine."

Andy Reeves once felt isolated from her peers. "They were snobs. Maybe they thought I was snobby, too, but they didn't really know me. I was never asked to go to a party, or a movie, or anyplace," she said. "Maybe they felt that if they could make me feel not as important as them, it would make them feel more important."

But that was a year ago, before she became involved in the teen court program. Andy volunteered for the program and went through training to be a juror. She has alternated between being bailiff and juror, and is now an integral part of the system. Emblazoned on her blouse in bold letters are the words: ANDY. TEEN COURT BAILIFF. Everything has changed for her. "Now I have a place to be. I'm somebody now. I have a bunch of friends, and we go out and have a real good time. I'm more confident about everything, and I'm more positive about myself."

Andy said the teen court works "because kids their own age [as attorneys and jurors] understand their problems better than adults do. Sometimes the kids on the jury can be tough. I think adults [jurors] would kind of ease off of them [defendants] just because they are kids. At teen court they get the sentences they deserve."

Enthusiasm among teens for the program runs high. Debra Bingham, the "attorney" who defended Ronald, believes that "people are taking their sentences more seriously, since it comes from people their own age who know where they're coming from." Said one volunteer juror who considers the court a learning experience: "I see the mistakes other kids make. I won't make those same mistakes."

Parents seem grateful for the program. One enthusiastic parent whose daughter, 15, was arrested while joyriding with three other friends and charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol explained: "It's excellent the way they [the attorneys] asked her if she realized the bad effects alcohol had on her body and questioned her about the kind of reprimand she got at home. Oh, I grounded her. But I know she still drinks. Maybe these people can set my daughter's thinking right. I can't."

Does a teen court offer hope to other cities' struggles with juvenile delinquency? In fact, Odessa has been bombarded with inquiries from cities across the country and around the world. "With the right people, the right philosophy, almost any city can replicate this program," Rothstein said. "But if you don't have the kids to implement the program, you don't have a program."

Added Judge Spencer: "Usually, kids are talked to, talked at, talked about, but never talked with, and they're not part of the system. The biggest lesson I've learned is that you don't crush someone that you're trying to preserve and improve." FW

COUNTERFEIT

TEST TUBE DIAMONDS

by Jim Gilbert

Science has created in a test tube what it has taken nature millions of years and mile deep underground pressure to create—the perfect counterfeit diamond.

ONE CARAT COUNTERFEIT TEST TUBE DIAMOND JEWELRY $9.95!

Pendant.

Solitaire Ring.

Men's Ring.

When set in pure 14 karat layered gold, 1 carat Cubic Zirconia makes spectacular jewelry. This jewelry is now available through Shreiber & More for as low as $9.95 each (see coupon below.)

COMPARISON CUBIC ZIRCONIA
VS. MINED DIAMONDS

	Cubic Zirconia	Mined
Dispersion (Fire)	0.60	0.44
Refractive (Brilliance)	2.20	2.40
Hardness	8.75	10.00

THESE MEASUREMENTS PROVE CUBIC ZIRCONIA DIAMONDS HAVE MORE FIRE, ALMOST THE EXACT HARDNESS AND REFRACTED LIGHT AS MINED DIAMONDS.

For years, man has been trying to re-create nature's diamond masterpieces, but to no avail. The breakthrough came with the development of a space age furnace able to heat special diamond-like chemicals to 5,000°F. The results are manmade counterfeit diamonds so much like the real thing jewelers couldn't tell them apart. They are called "cubic zirconia" in the trade.

In a test conducted for a television news, New York Diamond Market experts using jeweler's magnifying glasses could not tell the Cubic Zirconia diamond from nature's! That's how sparkling, brilliant, and full of fire they are! They even cut glass.

One of the best things about test tube Cubic Zirconia is the price. Real diamonds can cost $5,000 and more per carat. Test tube counterfeit diamonds originally sold in Europe for $100 per carat.

So much like natural diamonds even jewelers couldn't tell them apart

But now, Shreiber & More, the famous New York jewelry firm is conducting a special marketing campaign to introduce the American public to Cubic Zirconia. They are offering them for only $5.00 a carat for this special marketing campaign. There is a limit of 3 items per address, unless the order is postmarked before October 31, 1985. Orders postmarked before then may request a maximum of 7 items.

If you choose, you can have your Cubic Zirconia in beautiful 14 karat layered gold jewelry (see pictures and coupon).

MORAL PERSPECTIVE

LEST WE FORGET: THE HORROR OF AUSCHWITZ

By Robert E. Dallos and Ronald L. Soble

OŚWIECIM, Poland — "I am coming back to this place because it is the beginning of the end. My children have asked me so often, 'What happened?' I don't have the answers."

Diminutive Eva Mozes Kor, 50, of Terre Haute, Ind., bundled up in a bright blue greatcoat, stood alongside her identically dressed twin sister, Miriam Mozes Czaigher of Israel. Blotches on a snow-swept plain near this southern Polish village, they had finally returned on a raw, overcast winter day to the site of some of man's most evil acts.

Robert Dallos

A shivering group of Nazi death camp survivors silently listened to Eva Kor's plaintive question. They didn't have the answer either. It was Sunday, January 27, 1985 — the 40th anniversary of the liberation of Hitler's most notorious extermination camp: Oswiecim, or Auschwitz, as it is known to the Western world. It was a day for tears, trauma and, yes, nightmares.

Now Eva Kor and Marc Berkowitz of New City in Rockland County, N.Y., another twin who survived this death camp, have formed C.A.N.D.L.E.S. (Children of Auschwitz Nazi's Deadly Lab Experiments Survivors) to rekindle world opinion on the total evil that was Auschwitz-Birkenau.

Specifically, they are attempting once and for all to flush out the infamous Dr. Josef Mengele, a camp doctor here who was their chief tormentor. For it was Mengele, now 73, the world's most wanted Nazi criminal, who used some 2,000 Jewish twins as guinea pigs in a mad genetic experiment designed to build a new Master Race.

Between June 14, 1940, when the Nazis sent the first transport of Poles to "Konzentrationslager Auschwitz," and the day of liberation, 4 million people perished here, according to Auschwitz historians.

Organized by C.A.N.D.L.E.S., the recent daylong ceremonies — attended by many of "Mengele's twins" — evoked grim memories of systematic extermination. For Auschwitz was indeed the linchpin for the final "Jewish solution."

But for many of the twins, death would have been a more merciful alternative. Many of them, now scattered throughout the world, are suffering from internal sicknesses that they believe were caused by Mengele's experiments, including injections of unknown substances and endless blood transfusions.

Berkowitz, a tall, heavyset native of Czechoslovakia, said he had fought coming back for the liberation ceremonies. But, he reflected, after being away for so long, he finally had to revisit the spot where, after accompanying her as far as the gas chamber, "I kissed my mother goodbye."

Eva Kor said she is committed to keeping alive the issue of capturing Mengele. Finding him is important, she said, so that "we [the twins] can discover what he did to us."

To underwrite her relentless effort to keep the world's attention riveted on uncovering Mengele, Eva Kor's C.A.N.D.L.E.S. group, which is a nonprofit organization, needs private contributions. Its address is 24 Lawrin Blvd., Terre Haute, Ind. 47803.

If Mengele is ever apprehended, said Eva Kor in a quiet but firm voice, "I do not want to see him executed. He should be put in isolation to listen to the screams of his victims for the rest of his life." FW

A 5-piece Morgan Silver Dollar set that had sold for $250, is now only $125... and they're going fast!

The Numismatic Guild is offering the beautiful Solid Silver Morgan Dollar in Collector's Sets of five for the unheard of low price of just $125.00 per set. Only a few years ago we were selling our five Morgan Dollar sets for $250.00 per set. Makes an ideal gift for any occasion.

Considered by experts to be the peak of the engraver's art, these solid silver dollars of 412.5 grains of ninety percent fine silver, .77344 oz. pure silver, are the most sought after coins ever minted in the United States.

Dated from 1878 to 1904, these coins have become so popular that collectors and investors have been hoarding them for years. As a result, along with the fact that millions of these coins have been melted down for their silver content, there are no longer any Morgan Silver Dollars in circulation. Now, due to a special purchase of these historic coins at an Estate Sale, we are able to make them available to you in this unprecedented money saving offer. However, due to market fluctuations, we can guarantee this offer for the next 15 days only.

Silver Dollar coins in general have increased in value over ten times in the last ten years. Some Morgan Silver Dollars sell for as much as $20,000 and a prime mint condition Morgan Dollar recently sold for $42,500.

Each Collector's Set assembled by The Numismatic Guild in this special offer is mounted in a protective presentation case accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity.

If you are not satisfied for any reason, you may return your coins within 15 days for a full refund.

WRITE YOU ARE

By J.J. Leonard

A. Dear Mr. Rider:
Thank you very much for your letter. The most readable of Faulkner is Sanctuary and Pylon. I think he is a no good.

B. With all best wishes

C. a change from the last time - Don't think the Constitution will ever really recover -

Handwriting samples courtesy of Hamilton Galleries, Inc.

The handwriting samples on the right were written by personalities whose names are as familiar to you as your own. Take a close look at each. Notice anything revealing? Though you may not be a handwriting analyst, common-sense will tell you that these famous people are as different as can be. The colorful script in sample B and the bold rounded print in sample C point to two diverse people ... it doesn't take an expert to see that.

Now examine the samples more closely. Can you find anything that could clue you in to the authors' identities?

Don't be surprised if you can't begin to figure out who these mystery writers might be. But, if you've studied their script carefully, you'll know more about the writers than you think you do.

Let's start with sample A. The pleasing script with its small flourishes and rounded loops seems to point to a person who is concerned with aesthetics as well as the content of the words.

How about sample B with its large capital letters that sweep across the page? This author's no shrinking violet, that's for sure. With every stroke, the writer conveys a sense of confidence and originality.

Finally, consider sample C. The script is stylish yet clear and authoritative, and points to a person who's strong and distinguished.

Needless to say, the above analyses are elementary at best. But, the writings of Ernest Hemingway (sample A), Walt Disney (sample B) and Princess Grace of Monaco (sample C) do provide insights into the kind of people they are—even to an amateur who's never been trained in graphology (the study and interpretation of handwriting). How can personality and handwriting be so intertwined?

"Writing is simply a set of repressed gestures that reveals what goes on inside of us," explains psychologist/graphologist Dr. Carlos Pedregal, founder of the Experimental Center of Applied Psychology in France and Spain. "The sensations that we receive—sadness, fear, pleasure or joy—provoke reactions that translate into muscular movement. You see this every day, when a baby smiles or a friend frowns, and even in the way a person walks when depressed or talks when excited. These emotions show up in our handwriting as well. The shape of the letters, the slant of the lines, the pressure of the pen, all point to very specific moods." (Though your handwriting may look different depending on whether you're happy, sad, harried or composed, the essential characteristics remain the same.)

Handwriting, however, shows more than just state of mind ... it reveals personality as well. How you've individualized your script and strayed from the model of penmanship you were taught in school tells the trained eye a lot about who you are. After looking at a sample of your handwriting, an expert can identify character traits that it would take a spouse or friend years to discover. In fact, a graphologist can tell you things about yourself that you aren't aware of. For although most of us consider writing to be a simple skill that we take for granted, it's actually such an involved physiological and psychological process that many experts refer to it as "brainwriting". Because the forces that affect your handwriting are so numerous and varied, the odds of someone else writing exactly the same way you do are one chance in sixty-eight trillion according to one statistician.

Actually, the correlation between a person's character and his handwriting is nothing new. Theories about graphology date to when philosophers in ancient Greece noted the relationship between the two. Conclusive research followed centuries later. In the late 1930's, clinical experiments proved the link that had been suspected for so long.

Graphology may have gotten off to a slow start, but it's making up for lost time. More than 1,500 U.S. companies use handwriting analysis to screen job applicants or solve employee problems. In addition, it's used by police departments to uncover criminal tendencies, by banks to determine risk factors, by lawyers to help with jury selections, and by marriage counselors to gain insights into a couple's compatibility.

"In 1974," recalls Dr. Pedregal, "a large manufacturer of office equipment commissioned my services. They needed a new assistant director of marketing, someone who would be able to work with customers, keep track of ongoing promotional campaigns, write the company newsletter and handle the art layouts for their advertisements. They wanted to promote from within the company, but knew that the position would be difficult to fill."

"When I arrived, the head of the personnel department showed me handwriting samples from the six supervisors being considered for the job. After examining the samples, I had to conclude that none of the authors had the combination of qualities required to succeed in the position. Then, I spotted a handwritten note lying on the table in front of me. 'Is this one of the candidates?' I asked, picking it up. 'Absolutely not,' I was told with a laugh. 'The person who wrote this is just a messenger.' I studied the note more carefully. Finally I looked up and said, 'That's too bad, because this is the person who could do that job well.'"

"Everyone laughed and thought I was crazy. Everyone, that is but the head of personnel who'd called me in, and whom I'd worked with before. He had to fight, but he finally convinced management to give the messenger a try. Today, ten years after the fact, that same messenger heads the company's entire marketing division."

Dr. Pedregal has also applied his expertise to solve problems of a different nature. "At one point, a large multi-national corporation began to receive anonymous letters which slandered the company's executives. For a time these letters were ignored. But, eventually, they began to take their toll. The letter writer had been clever enough to couch his lies amongst facts about the company which only an insider would know. This mix of fact and fiction made the lies seem more believable than they might have otherwise. The letters kept coming and soon the executives began to suspect one another. The tension was tremendous. The problem obviously had to be dealt with without further delay, but contacting the police would have created a lot of bad publicity which the company was anxious to avoid. So, they requested my assistance instead."

"I didn't have much to work with—the anonymous letters had all been printed in large block capital letters. In spite of that impediment however, I was able to describe certain aspects of the writer's personality and anticipate various actions and reactions that would typify him. I was even able to deduce certain physical characteristics about him."

"Based on my evaluation, the president of the company asked three workers who fit the profile to submit print and longhand writing samples. Those were then analyzed by a handwriting expert who'd been trained to detect forgeries. The culprit, it turned out, was indeed one of the suspects my analysis had pointed to."

Surprised at the accuracy of Dr. Pedregal's predictions? He's not. After thirty years analyzing over one million writing samples for individuals and industry, he and his staff are used to being right.

How Does Graphology Work?

When a graphologoist looks over your longhand, he's actually assessing over three hundred personality traits reflected in your writing. You can imagine that's not a speedy procedure. In fact, a thorough handwriting analysis can take up to ten hours!

A graphologist begins by establishing an overall perspective when analyzing your writing sample. He considers the size of your margins, whether your lines curve up or down, or run straight across, the pen you decided to use and even where you chose to write on the page. He also evaluates the neatness of your writing. But, if you've always been concerned about your sloppy script, relax. To a graphologist, illegibility is often a sign of independence and assurance.

Next he looks for telltale traits in the letters themselves: How you cross your 't's, the shape of your 'e's, the height of your capital letters, for example, are examined.

Finally, he considers your signature—perhaps most revealing of all, "Handwriting can fluctuate with a person's mood. Signatures however, stay the same. Only a period of major stress or emotional upheaval changes them" explains Dr. Pedregal. "Moreover, since we 'create' our own signatures, they are particularly indicative of how we feel about ourselves and how we want to be perceived."

What Does Your Writing Say About You?

This is your chance to find out what your handwriting reveals about you. Though most experts charge $100 or more, Dr. Pedregal has agreed to a special arrangement for Family Weekly readers. For only $12, your handwriting sample will be analyzed by this internationally renowned psychologist/graphologist and his staff. You will learn which characteristics surface in your handwriting and you will receive a comprehensive printed explanation of their conclusions. To take advantage of this offer, simply follow the instructions on this page.

GET THE WRITE IDEA

To find out what your writing reveals about your personality, just follow these easy directions.

- Copy the letter on the right, designed to provide Dr. Pedregal with the sample he needs for the analysis. Use an ink or ballpoint pen and write in the blank space at the bottom of the page. (You can also use a sheet of unlined writing paper . . . just make sure to attach all the necessary information that's been requested.) And remember, don't try to write neatly. Just relax and write the way you usually do, and then sign your name.
- Be sure to complete the order form below. If you are sending more than one sample, include payment and an order form for each.
- Send the entire page or clip along dotted line and send order form and sample with a check or money order for $12 to: GRAPHOLOGY OFFER, P.O. Box 17011 , 230 Adams Ave., Hauppauge, NY 11788. Orders must be post-marked by June 28, 1985.

Dear Dr. Pedregal:

I'd like to know what my regular handwriting reveals about my personality. Mostly, I'd like to find out about my strengths and my struggles. My handwriting sample is enclosed, and I did not try to write especially neatly. Many thanks for giving me this tremendous opportunity.

If you read one book this year make it "ONE DAY AT A TIME" perhaps the greatest success and love story ever told. She came from the wrong side of the tracks, a family of 12. Two strikes against her—poverty and shyness. At 14 her dreams were shattered. She vowed she would never sing again. She almost lost her life twice, once in Vietnam entertaining the GI's in 1969. Her strength and faith were tested again in 1982 when her husband was sent to prison for 3 years. The top new country artist of the year 1979 . . . a date that will haunt her forever. FLATTEN your STOMACH

NEW LOW PRICE

FOR MEN ONLY

Come on guys! Get ready to flatten your stomach with the new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY program from the Editors of Consumer Guide®.

Yes, even if you watch what you eat. Even if you engage in some kind of sport or exercise, your stomach may still bulge and sag because your abdominal muscles are not properly toned.

That's why you need a program of exercises that work together so that all — and not just some — of the four major abdominal muscles get toned up. Some of these muscles run up and down. Others run side to side. And some crisscross the abdomen at an angle. If you only exercise one of these muscles (like most men do when they do sit-ups) your stomach may be hard. But it won't be flat.

The new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY program, however, has been designed to produce balanced muscle development and shaping, while avoiding soreness and injury. It gives you seven different routines, one for each day of the week. Each routine becomes more vigorous as you move through the program. You may do the entire series in one week. Or get in shape gradually by staying on one routine for several days before you move on to the next. But either way, you'll end up with a stomach that's both hard and flat.

So take action now. Try these simple, easy-to-follow exercises and see if you don't feel more fit, energetic and self-confident in just a few short weeks. Order the new FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH: FOR MEN ONLY today.

Easy To Use

This book has simple exercises with easy-to-follow directions illustrated in full-color on 64, large 8½" x 11" pages which are spiral bound to lie flat and stay open. So now what's your excuse?

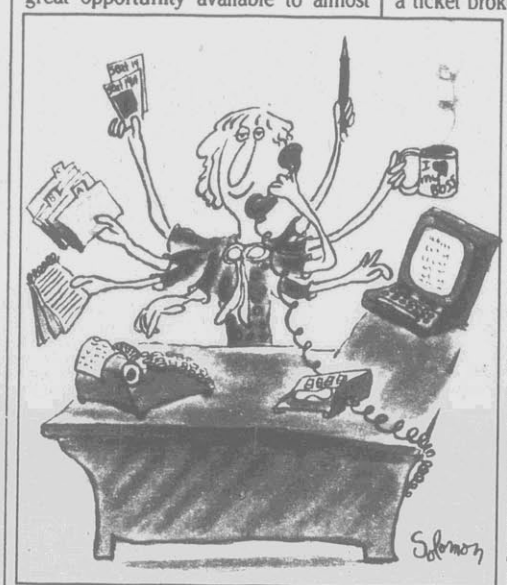
FOR NATIONAL SECRETARY'S WEEK

GETTING UNTRACKED — AND ONTO A FASTER TRACK

By Mary Bridget Carroll

What pops into your mind when someone says the word "secretary"? A job that could lead to ulcers? Or to a promotion? I see a great opportunity available to almost anyone, no matter what their level of education.



Debra Solomon

Even though 20 million American women are secretaries, many will never admit it. They hide behind titles like "administrative assistant" and "executive aide." Well, it's time for secretaries to realize that being a secretary is important and can lead to higher-paying jobs.

I know, because for 12 years I was a secretary. I worked my way up the corporate ladder. Now I'm a stockbroker.

It wasn't easy. For years I've been waging a personal battle against the way bosses view their secretaries. But bosses aren't the only ones to blame. The media hasn't helped. These days, secretaries are generally portrayed as having less intelligence than their memory typewriters. I'd like to see that change.

Being a secretary gives you a chance to learn the company's business and make yourself indispensable. You can use the job as an apprenticeship for a better position or use it to move up in the secretarial hierarchy. (Some secretaries make over $30,000!) It is only a dead-end job if you let it be.

If you want to get ahead, you've got to have a game plan and the courage to follow it through. Your game plan involves creating a system that maximizes your chances for success while minimizing the time you waste trying to achieve your goal. If you follow the plan, you'll also develop the key to success in business: self-confidence.

How to be a great secretary. Being a great secretary has little to do with how many words you can type a minute, but if you have contacts with a ticket broker who can come up with two tickets to a sold-out concert or hit musical, or if you've stored a bottle of good champagne in your desk that your boss can bring home as a last-minute anniversary gift, you'll be considered a Super Secretary.

How to get a better job. I think that some women fail to succeed in their careers because they are unwilling or unable to take risks. If you want to get ahead, the first thing you have to do is tell your boss you want raises, not roses. If you can't get a raise, try to get a more prestigious title. This can help you at your present company and when you initiate a job search.

In the meantime, polish your writing skills. The best way to do that is to find the well-written reports and letters from your own office files and copy that style. Take advantage of opportunities to learn new skills (like word processing).

Recognizing an opportunity to move up. Increasingly companies are making a concerted effort to hire women for entry-level executive positions, so now is a great time for women to ascend the corporate ladder. In order to get started, don't be afraid to change jobs. If you have an opportunity to interview, go for it. Interviewing is like typing: You'll always hate it, but the more you do it, the better you'll get.

I have poked fun at many of the frustrations of being a secretary, but some things are too important to make jokes about. For example, there is a very high correlation between executives with stress-related diseases and secretaries who experience similar stress. And even after all the gains women have made, they are still paid only 60 cents for each dollar paid to men.

Being a secretary can be both enjoyable and fulfilling, but remember, the maxim for going from being a low-paid secretary to having one of your own is simple: Work, work, work! FW

DR. LEWIS BERMAN'S MONTHLY COLUMN

WHEN FIDO DOES NEED A SPECIAL DIET, YOU HAVE TO KNOW HOW TO PROVIDE IT

Seven-year-old Buzzy, a usually uncomplaining brown and white Springer Spaniel, companion to Walter Cronkite, developed kidney disease. Despite this, Buzzy lived happily until the age of 15 with the aid of a special diet prescribed for him.

For an average, healthy adult pet, a prescription diet is unnecessary, as I pointed out in last month's column, but for an animal with a serious medical problem, such a diet can be lifesaving. Prescription diets can be provided in two forms: (1) specialized foods sold at your veterinarian's office or through a distributor he recommends, and (2) home-cooked recipes prepared strictly according to your vet's instructions.

Of course, dieting isn't easy on either of you, so don't be too hard on your pet. Gradually wean the animal from one diet to another, mixing small amounts of the old food with the new until it has adjusted to the change.

You can make things easier for yourself, too, by understanding the principles behind your pet's diet. Cronkite's Buzzy, for example, could be given only low-protein foods (no eggs, milk or meat), since protein puts stress on the kidney tubules. Buzzy was allowed a canned prescription food (labeled K/D, for Kidney Disease) or high-carbohydrate "people foods" such as candy, doughnuts and cornflakes. An obese animal, on the other hand, should never indulge in these foods. Obesity puts tremendous stress on an animal's bone structure (ligaments, tendons, the muscle support system), which may break down under too much weight. An animal that is slightly overweight can be slimmed down by reduced food intake, but a truly obese one must be put on a low-calorie, low-fat, high-fiber prescription diet (the two brands are O/D, for Obese Diet, or R/D, for Reducing Diet). Equally healthful are home-cooked recipes that mix together foods such as uncreamed cottage cheese, lean ground beef, and canned vegetable solids with a vitamin crushed in. Be sure to ask your vet to prescribe an appropriate recipe.

Too little or too much salt in the diet can also create problems. For pets as for people, heart disease necessitates a diet that is low in salt in order to decrease fluid retention in the chest, abdomen and lungs. On the other hand, a high-salt diet is required for an animal with bladder stones. The salt included in your pet's daily food intake will force the animal to drink tremendous amounts of water, thereby putting the stones into solution and allowing them to pass in the pet's urine.

Five to 15 percent of our pet population has serious trouble digesting its food. The reason can be either an insufficient supply of enzymes needed for food absorption, or an improperly functioning stomach and intestinal lining. Bland home-cooked foods such as cereal, cottage cheese and eggs, or an intestinal prescription diet (I/D) will be sufficiently soothing and nutritious for the pet with a delicate stomach.

If your cat or dog has itchy skin and is pulling its hair or biting its feet, it may have developed a food-related allergy. The animal should be put on a canned prescription diet (D/D) consisting of lamb and mutton. Since most pet foods don't contain lamb, the D/D-dieted pet will stop itching (if in fact pet food ingredients are the source of the problem). Then the old foods can be reintroduced to the diet one at a time to determine which particular one was causing problems.

Of course, dieting isn't easy on either of you, so don't be too hard on your pet.

A proper diet will surely enhance your pet's health — if you follow it closely. Lauren Bacall took excellent care of her close companion Blenheim, a Cavalier King Charles Spaniel, who lived until the age of 12. Sometimes, though, she treated him to bits of "people food," despite the fact that he suffered from heart disease. When I scolded her, Miss Bacall would say in her inimitable style, "Come on, Doctor, the dog has to have a little fun too!" Certainly, but a healthy, properly-fed pet will have more of it. FW

Answer these 4 questions and see if you're a colorectal cancer risk

There is growing evidence that age, diet and genetic factors play a part in determining the incidence of colorectal cancer, the No. 2 cancer killer of men and women. It is also a medical fact that if this disease could be detected and treated in its earliest stages, it would be virtually wiped out as a cause of death.

The hidden early symptom

An early symptom of colorectal cancer is hidden—you can't see it or feel it. Yet in this early stage, it is most curable. The American Cancer Society estimates that 75% of the people who will die this year of colorectal cancer could have been saved through early detection and prompt treatment.

Detects what you can't see

Early Detector® is a simple in-home test for hidden blood in the stool—an early symptom of colorectal cancer as well as other disorders such as colitis, diverticulosis, polyps, ulcers and hemorrhoids. It's easy to do, private, and you read the results immediately. And unlike other home tests, Early Detector is as easy to use as bathroom tissue.

1. Age

Are you over 40? YES ☐ NO ☐

2. Diet

Is your diet high in fats?

Fried Foods YES ☐ NO ☐
Whole milk/cheese YES ☐ NO ☐
Fatty meats, beef, pork, lamb YES ☐ NO ☐

3. Family History

Have you or any close relatives (mother, father, siblings, grandparents) had:

Colorectal cancer YES ☐ NO ☐
Gardner's Syndrome YES ☐ NO ☐
Ulcerative colitis YES ☐ NO ☐
Polyps YES ☐ NO ☐
Crohn's Disease YES ☐ NO ☐

4. Medical Check-ups

Has it been more than one year since you have had one of these tests? YES ☐ NO ☐

Digital Rectal Examination
Guaiac Test for Hidden Blood
Proctosigmoidoscopy
Fiberoptic Colonoscopy
Barium Enema with Air Contrast Examination

SCORE: If you have answered yes to two or more of these questions, you may be at potential risk of colorectal cancer. If you are at risk, Early Detector could help save your life.

No sticks, no mess

Other tests for hidden blood in the stool require sticks and slides for sample collection. With Early Detector, you simply use specially prepared tissue as you would toilet tissue to obtain the sample. You then spray the Developer solution on the stool sample on the tissue. You read the results within one minute and flush the tissue away. If the results show a color change on the tissue, indicating a potential disorder, you should consult your doctor.

Reliable test results

You can have confidence in Early Detector test results. They have been clinically proven to be as reliable as the leading test doctors and hospitals use. Doctors recommend this kind of test be taken annually if you're over forty, and more frequently if you are at a higher than average risk of developing colorectal cancer. If you have any questions about Early Detector or want additional information, consult your doctor or pharmacist, or call the convenient 800 number 1-800-E.D.-HELPS (1-800-334-3577). In New Jersey call collect 1-201-540-2458.

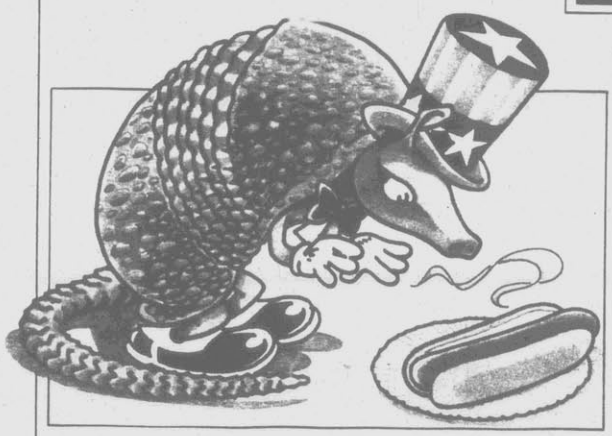
WHAT IN THE WORLD



FROM TEXAS

HOT DOGS, APPLE PIE . . . AND ARMADILLOS?

Ben Franklin wanted the turkey, but the Continental Congress opted for the bald eagle. Now, in the Lone Star State, Texans are hankering to make the armadillo the symbol of America.

These Texans may have a point. Dr. Angus Gillespie, associate professor of American studies at Rutgers University in New Jersey (and obviously a Texan in disguise), says that historically, the armadillo has always been important in Americana: "The armadillo figured prominently in the myths of native Americans, was used by the Spanish conquistadores as a symbol of America, and, more recently, was adopted by the hippies because of its peaceful behavior — if captured, the 'dillo will not fight."

Also part of the armadillo's allure, believes Gillespie, is its unique anatomy: "It has both mammalian and reptilian features. Your initial reaction to seeing one is 'What is it?'" American naturalist John James Audubon's answer was "a singular production of nature, resembling a small pig saddled with the shell of a turtle."

Better than any turkey, for sure. But better than the eagle? Perhaps we could create a new position for the little guy. How about "national mascot"?

FROM LOS ANGELES

ANIMAL HOUSE?

As many sorority sisters have long suspected, monkeys have a lot in common with fraternity brothers. Dr. Michael Raleigh, of the University of California Medical School, has been studying the differences between leaders and followers in a community of vervet monkeys. He found that the leaders had twice as much of the chemical serotonin in their systems as did the followers.

Raleigh wanted to check the serotonin factor against a human sample, so he tested a UCLA fraternity. Sure enough, the frat officers had higher levels of serotonin than non-officer members of the group.

FROM BOSTON

FIRST THE BAD NEWS

If Cotton Mather, the 17th century clergyman, had gotten press releases from Boston University, he might have modified his fire-and-brimstone harangues a bit.

B.U. researchers studied the best way to deliver bad news. Mather, of course, was the champion bad news bearer of the Colonial people.

The B.U. study showed that people do prefer to get the bad news first, provided it's followed by a good dose of some happy news as a kind of reward.

Would this information have helped Mather's discomfited congregation? Probably not. He was so into terrorizing them with visions of damnation — very bad stuff — that he rarely had time for any good news at all.

READ AMERICA!

What are Americans reading before they retire for the night? Or whenever they have the time? We asked two book lovers, and here's what they said:

Abigail Van Buren, syndicated columnist, "Dear Abby," Beverly Hills, Ca.

My book is The Woman He Loved by Ralph G. Martin. This is a wonderful biography of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, from the beginning of their courtship through their marriage, which was probably one of the most publicized unions of the century. The book presents their relationship with all the glamour and romance it embodied at the onset, and it ends with all the warts and human weaknesses, there for all the world to see.

I just completed The Beast of Valhalla by George C. Chesbro. This is the latest in a series of exploits involving a detective named Dr. Mongo Fredrickson. Mongo is a black-belt in karate, an ex-circus performer, and a dwarf. He's just great. To me, Mongo is the most intriguing detective in all of fiction: He's more exciting than Sherlock Holmes, very clever, very energetic, and he uses his skills and handicaps to equal advantage. It's not comedy; this is serious detective stuff, but by virtue of the fact that this is a dwarf, ex-circus performer, you can imagine the myriad possibilities. I think Chesbro is a genius: Every book of his I've ever read I've finished in a sitting, and you're talking to someone who normally doesn't read fiction.

This other book is next to my bed, and I read it every single day. It's called American Usage and Style — The Consensus by Roy H. Copperud. When I first started writing my advice column, I thought I needed to buy 100 grammar books and 60 thesauruses in order to write a halfway decent sentence. Then I discovered this little gem. If you've got this book and a good dictionary and the ability to read, you don't need anything else.

Annual "End of Season" Sale Dresses Up Troublesome Bare Spots Where Nothing Else Will Grow... We Guarantee 72-HOUR SERVICE!

Last Call... BIG SAVINGS, FAST SERVICE ON BLOOMING GROUND COVERS!

Priced Low To Sell Every Plant Before May 31

No garden or landscape is complete without the carefree beauty and lasting color that only flowering ground covers provide. And only ground covers so easily dress up pesky trouble areas . . . under shady trees, steep slopes or banks, rock gardens, borders, edging along walkways or driveways, any "eyesore" area where nothing else will grow. Every ground cover offered in this "end of season" sale is hardy, requires little or no maintenance, helps stop erosion and conserve moisture in the soil, grows and spreads year after year without replanting. On this special offer, we guarantee to ship your order within 72 hours after we receive it.

Every Selection Covered By "No Fault" Guarantee

Every item on this page is guaranteed to be exactly as advertised . . . vigorous and healthy, tagged for easy identification, well packed for arrival in good condition. If not satisfied with any item upon receipt — or any item that doesn't flourish and thrive after planting — return shipping label with unsatisfactory items circled and we will refund your money (1 year limit). You may keep the plants. Clip coupon and mail order today!

DRAGON'S BLOOD
(Creeping Sedum)

8 for $2.98

Rugged and carefree, spreads rapidly in sun or shade. The lush, semi-evergreen foliage erupts in massive clusters of star-shaped, fiery red blooms mid-summer to September. Easy growing, sensational in rock gardens, "trouble spots," slopes, borders, shady areas where grass won't grow. Hardy, Michigan nursery grown, plant 6-12" apart. Send today.

All-In-One Super Ground Cover Flowers All Summer Long, Chokes Out Even The Most Persistent Weeds . . . Even in Poor Soil!

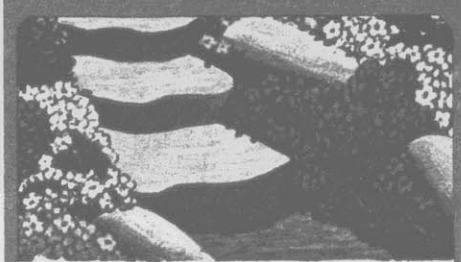
FLOWERING QUILT
(Coronilla Medium Size Crowns)

12 Plants for $3.98
(Crownvetch)

Sensational Flowering Quilt ground cover quickly transforms steep slopes, banks, troublesome weedy areas into a thick mat of lacy green foliage smothered with hundreds of delicate pink and white blooms. Hardy, maintenance free, disease and drought resistant. Blooms and spreads year after year without replanting. Plant 3 ft. apart. Blooms June until frost, clustered with masses of colorful flowers, supported by dark green fern-like foliage. Chokes out even the most persistent weeds, helps stop erosion and washouts. Prospers in problem area where nothing else has a chance!

LADY DIANA - 40 for $3.98
(Creeping Myrtle)

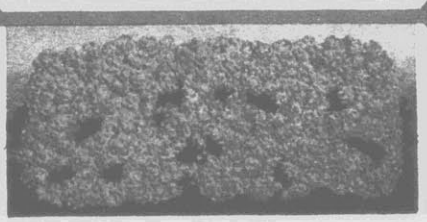
You've often admired the pretty blue periwinkle flowers that seem to float on a dense carpet of shiny evergreen foliage! Rugged and carefree, Lady Diana Creeping Myrtle (Vinca minor—Periwinkle), thrives even in dense shade where grass or flowers won't grow. Blooms each spring with masses of cheery blue blossoms. Weeds don't have a chance to come up through the thick creeping foliage. You get matured plant divisions, 40 plants cover 80 square feet. Or order 80 plants to carpet 160 sq. feet bare ugly ground, only $7.75. Blooms and spreads year after year without replanting. Excellent for exasperating scrubby spots, banks, edgings, etc. Send today.



Ground Hugging Foliage, Mixed Colors!

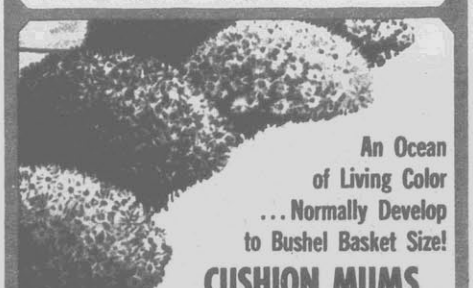
CREEPING PHLOX-12 for $2.98

Michigan nursery grown perennial (Phlox subulata) features dense evergreen foliage drenched with masses of gay, sparkling blooms in mixed colors. Flowers freely every spring. Transforms drab, troublesome areas or rock gardens into a rolling sea of color that enhances your entire landscape. Hardy 1 year plants, each plant spreads to 12 inches at maturity. Chokes out and suffocates pesky weeds. Transforms "eyesore" area into "eye appeal" area! 12 for $2.98, 24 for only $5.75. Clip coupon and mail today!



BASKET OF GOLD — 10 for $3.98

Perhaps the most attractive of all spreading ground covers, and probably the easiest to maintain. Particularly striking when used as a border plant along sidewalks, driveway, or patio. Bursts into bloom in late April with clusters of bright golden flowers so large they all but hide the foliage. Plant 18" apart. Will quickly spread to fill in bare spots. You receive rooted, healthy Michigan nursery grown plant divisions. Order Basket of Gold (Alyssum saxatile) now!



An Ocean of Living Color ... Normally Develop to Bushel Basket Size!

CUSHION MUMS 20 for $5.98

Giant balls of flaming color to set your landscape ablaze! These hardy Michigan nursery grown root division perennial plants come to you in an assortment of vivid, gorgeous colors . . . reds, yellows, pinks, purples, bronze, etc., as available. • OPEN LINES! Pieced together, fragments of a book cover found in an attic formed the combination of lines shown at right. These characters were without meaning until someone discovered it was a simple process to complete the letters by adding some lines.

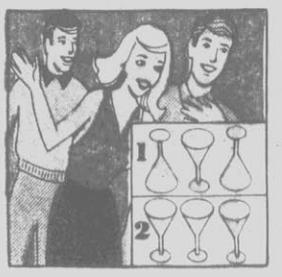
Restored, the mysterious letters spelled two words. What words?

The letters spelled FAMILY ALBUM.

• BATTER UP! When was Batman involved in baseball? When he was a Batboy. Who invented twin killings in baseball? Abner Doubleplay. Where do umpires gain the most weight? Behind the plate.



MAGIC DONE TO A TURN

Arrange three glasses as in figure 1, above. Pick up any two (one in each hand) and turn them over. Do this again, twice. Object: After three turns to have all three glasses standing mouths up, fig. 2.

Secret: On first turn, invert mouth up glass with either of the others. Do this again, and, on third turn invert two mouths downs.

When someone else tries, place mouth down. To turn three mouths up in three turns is then impossible.

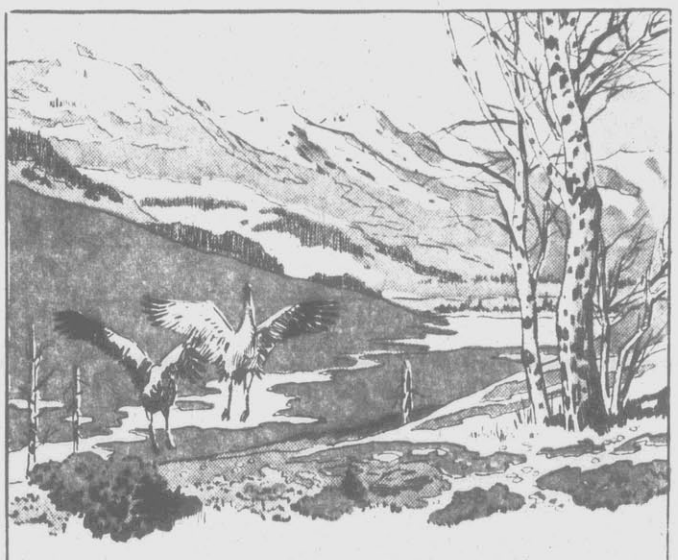
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story:
HELPED BY THEIR FRIENDS FROM THE SOUTH, HETTA AND THE LAPPS REPULSE ATTACK AFTER ATTACK BY THE TWIN CLAIMANTS TO OLD ASLAK'S THRONE. BUT THE STRATEGY OF NILS AND NIILAS IS ONE OF ATTRITION AND WITH EACH PASSING DAY THE NUMBER OF DEFENDERS DIMINISHES.

SOON EVEN THE WOMEN ARE PRESSED INTO SERVICE. STALWART HETTA, OF COURSE, HAS BEEN ON THE FRONT LINES ALL ALONG.



NO ONE NOTICES THAT MOTHER NATURE HAS QUIETLY ENTERED THE BATTLE. IN SPRINGTIME THE DISTANT SUN GAZES BRIEFLY AT THIS NORTHERN LAND. THE TUNDRA, BASKING IN THE ATTENTION, IS SUDDENLY ABLAZE WITH FLOWERS.

THE AIR IS PLEASINGLY WARM. PRINCE VALIANT, LEANING DURING A LULL ON ONE OF THE DEFENSIVE PICKETS, SUDDENLY FINDS HIMSELF EATING MUD. FOR THE FROZEN GROUND THAT HOLDS THE PICKETS IN PLACE IS BEGINNING TO MELT.

WITH THE PICKETS GONE, THE LAPPS--AND THEIR ALLIES-- WILL STAND NO CHANCE. HETTA RESTS AN EYE ON HER NEPHEW, MIKKEL. HER GLANCE CONVEYS INSTRUCTIONS. BUT PRINCE VALIANT DOES NOT NOTICE, HAVING OTHER FISH TO FRY. VAL CALLS TOGETHER HIS CAPTAINS. A CHANGE OF PLANS IS CALLED FOR.
