Tobacco Plant Supply Short

BY MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt agricultural officials say the shortage of tobacco plants in the county is serious, but that the practice of clipping has eased the situation some in the area.

"We are in an uncomfortable position right now as far as tobacco plants go," according to Pitt Extension Agent Mitch Smith. Smith said area farmers are transplanting tobacco from the plant bed to the field and many are experiencing a scarcity of plants.

Tobacco specialists at North Carolina State University said there is an "extreme shortage" of tobacco plants on some eastern North Carolina farms, perhaps the most serious shortage in 20 years.

A lack of water under plastic bed covers, where the seedlings grow before they are transplanted to the field, is the main cause of the shortage, officials say. A prolonged dry spell and low humidity has hampered normal plant growth.

The situation in Pitt County has been eased on farms where the tobacco beds have been mowed or "clipped," Smith said. Clipping is done with a specially made or adapted lawn mower set to a height just above the buds of the largest plants in the bed. The process removes portions of the upper leaves of the largest plants and also promotes development of the smaller plants, he said. The smaller plants then tend to catch up with the larger ones and increase the percentage of plants suitable for setting in the field, he added.

"The response on the farms where beds have been clipped has been overwhelmingly positive," Smith said. "Clipping has a direct use in terms of what farmers can do now to improve the plant situation."

The farm agent recommended that farmers experiencing a scarcity of tobacco plants first contact a neighbor for plants. "Local plants are always better in quality and in terms of being able to stand up to stress," he said. If plants must be brought in from other areas, Smith said a permit is required from the United States Department of Agriculture. USDA permits, along with a list of certified plant growers in the area, are available at the Pitt County Extension Office, 1717 W. Fifth St., Smith said.

Smith said plant beds in the county that were seeded in January rather than February "have better plants that can stand higher temperatures and more stress."

"There is a direct trend with people who seeded in January rather than February," he said.

Growers in the Border and Middle tobacco belts in the state "are in better shape" in terms of transplant supplies than growers in the Eastern Belt, Smith said.

East Still In Hospital

Sen. John East, R-N.C., remains hospitalized today for observation and treatment, according to an East family member.

The senator was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital in Washington Saturday for what hospital officials called a routine follow-up to surgery earlier this year to remove a benign obstruction in his urinary tract. He was reported in "satisfactory" condition Wednesday.

The senator's press secretary, Jerry Woodruff, who could not be reached for comment either Wednesday or this morning, has not returned reporters' telephone calls. A receptionist at East's Washington headquarters this morning commented that only Woodruff could release information about the senator's condition and apologized for Woodruff's failure to return calls.

An official at East's Greenville headquarters said "all we know is what was released Monday and Tuesday. As soon as anything does come up, the Washington office will issue a statement."

While East has not publicly announced he will run for re-election next year, Washington political consultants say the senator has authorized the raising of money for a campaign.

County Agencies Request Slightly Higher Budgets For Coming Year

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Wednesday held the second in a series of workshop sessions to hear requests from various county departments and agencies for funds in the budget for the 1985-1986 fiscal year which begins July 1.

Pitt County Fire Marshall Bobby Joyner, in the emergency services budget, asked for $264,465 ($256,169 this year), including $129,994 for contributions to the operating expenses for the 22 fire departments in the county.

Joyner, who said the money for contributions to the various fire departments represents a 5 percent increase over the $124,795 allocated this year, does not include radio maintenance, workmen's compensation insurance for firemen or contributions for new fire trucks and other equipment which the county also provides.

For the rescue budget, Joyner asked for $124,800 in 1985-86 ($96,861 this year), including $75,189 for contributions to the operating expenses of the nine rescue squads in the county ($73,436 this year).

Tax Collector W.R. Smith requested a proposed budget totaling $114,665 for the coming year ($119,404 this year), while Register of Deeds Elvira Allred requested $155,674 for 1985-86 (162,788 this year), and County Ranger Mark Webb of the Division of Forest Resources asked for $41,767 ($34,725 this year) for the proposed forest service budget of $104,417 that is funded 40 percent by the county and 60 percent by the state.

Pitt-Greenville Airport Manager Jim Turcott asked commissioners for $42,500 in the coming fiscal year ($35,000 this year) to help fund a total proposed budget of $461,300 ($445,000 this year).

Turcott said income generated by airport operations is expected to account for 60 percent of the money needed to fund the proposed operating budget, with the county and city asked to supply the remaining money needed.

Saying 50 fixed-wing aircraft and one helicopter are based at Pitt-Greenville, Turcott said services available at the airport include aircraft sales and service, air taxi service, flight instruction, commuter airline service. He noted that Sunbird Airlines' designation as a "Piedmont Commuter" effective May 1, will result in "cheaper fares, bigger planes and more service" for travelers.

The airport manager, who said a master plan update is being planned for the coming year ($100,000 to be funded 90 percent by a federal grant, 5 percent by the state and 5 percent

Lee Says Recreation Has Place In Medical District

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Recreation has a place in development of the medical district, but exactly what that place will be needs to be determined, according to Boyd Lee.

Lee, executive director of Greenville Recreation and Parks, told members of the Medical District Study Committee Wednesday they needed to look closely at the recreational needs of the medical district and include recommendations concerning that issue in their final report to City Council.

Lee cited several areas of importance, including aesthetics, and employees' and visitors' recreational needs.

A pleasing view in the medical district is necessary, Lee said, so incoming patients and visitors see something more than a big, imposing building. Properly placed green areas, trees, flowers and screens could accomplish that, he said.

City Planning Director Bobby Roberson, in later comments, added that provisions for vegetation can be made in the zoning ordinance. For instance, under the existing ordinance, if a parking lot exceeds 15,000 square feet, at least 5 percent of that area has to be set aside for vegetation.

Placement of jogging and biking trails around the medical complex to provide relief for employees' is also an important consideration, Lee said. Those trails would need to be situated where "doctors, nurses, whomever, could go and relax and get away from work," he said. Other possible alternatives would be basketball and tennis courts or a commercial health club, he added.

Less active recreational facilities could be provided for visitors who Lee said often need a quiet, un-stressful place to sit and talk. Children's needs could be handled with playground facilities.

Under the current ordinance, municipal government is allowed to construct a recreation and parks facility in medical arts and health care zones. However, there are no specific provisions allowing a private commercial concern to open and run a recreation facility in those zones. Medical arts and health care zoning constitutes approximately 22 percent of the medical district. The

Grace Rohrer Tells Women Of Department's Concerns Last Night

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

Grace Rohrer, secretary, North Carolina Department of Administration, emphasized continued commitment to opportunities for women as the keynote speaker at the Women in Leadership 1985 reception and program held Wednesday night.

"...The department of administration serves as the business manager of state government including the motor pool, state buildings and grounds and its office of policy and planning. The advocacy function is to the handicapped, Indians, veterans, women, Human Relation Council, N.C. Carolina on the Status of Women, etc..." she said.

In telling of her plans for dealing with women's issues, Ms. Rohrer said, "It will be quiet and an effective styled rather than 'soapbox.'" She told of the governor's commitment to women.

"My goals are to see that women are employed in every phase of state government and to see that women bid on state contracts (women business owners) and to provide workshops for women in business on such subjects as licenses, laws, contracts, marketing and management skills," she continued.

"The department will continue to be concerned with women in economic development, workshops on financial management (individual), child concerns such as missing children and day care licensing. Child care is a people issue, not a political issue. More than 58 percent of mothers in North Carolina are in the labor force. It's the highest in the South and among the highest in the nation," she said.

"Real changes only come when businesses, communities and people become involved," she said.

Ms. Rohrer was the first woman appointed to the Governor's Cabinet in N.C. She was one of the first women named to serve on the N.C. Council on the Status of Women.

She received her B.A. from Western Maryland College and M.A. from Wake Forest University. She is a Ph.D. candidate at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Ms. Rohrer was introduced by Louise Downing, chairman of the Pitt County on the Status of Women, one of the sponsoring groups for the program. Betty Budd of Raleigh was also recognized. She was recently appointed by Gov. Jim Martin as executive director of the N.C. Council on the Status of Women.

Certificates of recognition were presented by Helen Simpson of Robersonville, regional coordinator, N.C. Council on the Status of Women, and Carrie Lin Gurganus, representing Women's Network, another sponsor.

Receiving certificates were Janice Buck, Gail Meeks, Judy Green, Susan Moody, Beverly Burnette, Letha Jefferson, Zeldia Galloway,

Dresses For Day And Night Dominate Fashion Shows

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Bright, comfortable and affordable dresses are the hallmark of Liz Claiborne's fall line of casual clothes while dazzling, extravagant evening wear remains Bob Mackie's staple.

As expected, Mackie showed dozens of beaded numbers, but it was coats that really looked new.

The knockout was a lavish midcalf gray sheared mink with matching fluffy fox hood that laid down into a voluminous collar extending beyond the shoulders.

Hoods that doubled for collars also were shown in double-faced wool coats in hot pink, tomato, nubby tobacco and muted orange. The wool linings matched the simple cowl neck sweaters, straight knit skirts and jersey dresses beneath.

Cuffs, collars, shoulders and hems were edged with fox, mink, sable and raccoon dressing up cloth coats with great panache.

Another nice detail in coats and jackets was sleeves that draped like bunting at the shoulder and tapered to the wrist. Together with the hood-collars, the silhouette was strongly triangular.

But not all the shoulder treatments worked. Several dressy double-faced wool coats in lovely color combinations looked silly with gold, velvet and beads, usually seen on evening gowns, tacked on at the shoulder.

For a new twist on sweater dressing, Mackie showed simple floor-length angoras with wide boat necks in solid colors. They were dressed up with splashes of golden embroidery and beadwork. Carried to the extreme, some had women's faces beaded on the backs and worn with huge clanking brass bangles.

More successful were the gowns. No single style or fabric dominated.

An especially nice series mixed brown, green and blue moire skirts with black velvet lace-front bodices. Others paired bugle beads and fringe, turbans and feathers. He even showed a golden snood with one dramatic gown.

Two of Mackie's many showbiz fans, Carol Burnett and Bernadette Peters, were on hand for the standing room only show at the Parsons Fashion Center.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I hope you don't think this is going to be another one of those columns a lonely mother writes to her offspring begging for grandchildren. I'm certainly savvy enough to know that couples need time to know one another and build a foundation that will stand the stress of a child.

Never mind that their mother will never have a shot at immortality. What are we here for but to suffer?

I know parents who have kids in their 30s who actually leave messages on their children's answering service telling them time is running out on their reproductive cycle.

Not me. I think a preschooler connecting liver spots on mommy's hands is charming, not to mention taking daddy's pacemaker for show and tell.

Parents have lived their lives. They have no right to tell their children how to live theirs. If young people put more importance on a lousy microwave oven and a Honda, hey, who are we to inflict our priorities on them?

It would never occur to me to remind my son that I postponed my surgery to correct his overbite. It was my unselfish decision and I made it. That's it. It's history.

Experts say what parents are feeling is frustration.

What have we got to be frustrated about? Just because our friends show slides of their grandchildren when we go to lunch with them, call them Nana Wonderful and give them sticky kisses and make them feel 15 again, why should we feel frustrated?

After all, I have pictures of my kids at Club Med and can baby-sit their newly spayed cat who just sits on the television set with a look that says, "Nod off, old lady, and I'll suck the air out of you."

Young people are right. They don't need that kind of pressure. It's tough enough for them in this world to survive the rigors of work and play. It's really not fair to point out that an older brother or sister has contributed something to the genetic pot first and is mentioned prominently in the will.

Mature adults have to face a few facts. The old timetable of marriage/children/midlife career is being challenged. And maybe it should be.

For all I know it could be fun teaching a child to drive during the same week you are going through menopause. Just because we have never tried it doesn't mean it isn't a good thing.

As my son said the other day, "Why did you leave a message on my answering machine saying, 'Anyone look promising? Why are you killing all the love I ever had for you?' Does this have anything to do with your not being a grandmother?"

I ask you, would I spread that kind of guilt?

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Father Handled Awkward Situation

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Worried Sick," the bride whose parents are divorced, and whose mother threatens to stay away from the wedding if the father gives the bride away.

I faced the same situation. I felt that if I couldn't give my daughter away and escort her down the aisle, I would be publicly renouncing my parentage. But I didn't want to force my daughter to choose between her mother and me, so the problem was resolved this way: I asked the minister if it would be possible for the bride to meet her future husband at the back of the church so that he could escort her down the aisle. I reasoned that since they would be spending the rest of their lives together (hopefully), why not let them begin by walking down the aisle together?

The minister thought it was an excellent solution.

FATHER OF THE BRIDE

DEAR FATHER: Congratulations for handling an awkward situation with sensitivity, generosity and originality.

DEAR ABBY: Here's how I cured my husband of forgetting special occasions such as my birthday, our anniversary, etc. We had been married only three years when I had a feeling "George" was going to forget again, so I phoned the florist and had him send me a dozen roses with a card that read: "From someone who loves you very much."

When George came home, I met him at the door with a big kiss and thanked him for the flowers. He didn't say anything, but he looked surprised. About half an hour later he picked up the card and read it, then he admitted that he had not sent the roses—but he demanded to know who did. (Yes, he was really jealous.) I burst out laughing and told him I had sent them to myself. He looked relieved. That was the last time George forgot my birthday.

SNEAKY IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SNEAKY: Lovely. Read on for another "sneaky" gift-getting gimmick.

DEAR ABBY: We'd been married two years when my husband forgot both my birthday and our anniversary, which are only a week apart. I was hurt, and also angry, so the next day I went to the most exclusive ladies' store in town and bought myself an outfit that cost about three times as much as I usually paid.

That night, I modeled my new outfit for my husband and he said he liked it very much. I told him I was glad because since he'd forgotten my birthday and our anniversary, I would consider it his gift to me—then I gave him a big hug and dropped the bill in his lap!

Twelve years have passed, and my darling has never again forgotten.

HAPPY IN WISCONSIN

DEAR ABBY: I'm 83 years old and have two lovely daughters who love me dearly and would do anything for me. I have never had a problem concerning them, but I have one now.

My days are numbered, I'm sure, and before I go, I'd like you to tell me what to do.

You see, I have a ring that I'm sure both girls would like to have to remember me by. I don't want any hard feelings between them, so I am torn. The oldest lives out of town, so she isn't able to spend as much time with me as her sister, who lives close by. The younger one takes me shopping, to my doctor's and does my errands. I'm sure her sister would do the same if she could. She calls and writes and sends me gifts.

I ask you, Abby, who should have the ring?

NO NAME, PLEASE

DEAR NO NAME: Tell your daughters that you want both of them to have the ring, so each may keep it for six months, then give it to the other for six months. And if that's not agreeable, they can draw straws.

(Getting married? Send for Abby's new, updated, expanded booklet, "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

Beloved

Beloved is a word not easily used in reference to politicians but for Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., beloved is the description that fits best.

Senator Sam died Tuesday at the age of 88. The tributes are pouring out for the man who culminated his career in the United States Senate by conducting the difficult Watergate hearings.

It was in that position that Sen. Ervin attained his national fame. He described himself as a "country lawyer," which perhaps he was. But that image belied the fact that his law degree came from Harvard University.

Sen. Ervin had a love and dedication for the Constitution which should be a guide for us all. Though he came under criticism for his interpretation of states rights provisions of the Constitution during the civil rights debate, he was as knowledgeable an authority on the Constitution and the freedoms it guarantees us as anyone in the nation.

But it was Watergate that established Sen. Ervin's national reputation and made him a senator who will be remembered as long as our history is recorded. He was almost certainly appalled by the scheming and coverup that went on in the White House during that seamy era. He was determined to conduct the Senate hearings on the highest level. That he did and in some measure restored America's faith in its governmental processes.

Following the hearings Sen. Ervin retired from the Senate but he remained active as a lawyer, a personality and as one of the nation's elder statesmen.

There is not much to criticize as this outstanding North Carolinian is laid to rest. He served us well. He set an example for integrity that everyone in government should emulate. And he fiercely supported the principles of the Constitution which provide us the freedoms we have. Those freedoms are endangered at times but, if our future leaders exhibit the same devotion to the Constitution as did Sen. Ervin, we will never lose them.

'Good News'

Last weekend provided us with a story to the effect the United States saw a 3 per cent decline in major crimes last year. It struck us as appearing an unlikely development in light of all the crime-related news stories that are regular fare in the daily news.

There was another weekend report to that North Carolina's Department of Corrections was going to begin releasing 200 prisoners each month to ease crowding in prisons. That seemed to reflect more accurately the state of things ... that the crime rate remains inordinately high. (Bad news usually gets more attention.)

The Corrections Department spokesman commented the situation of crowding had not occurred overnight but has been building for years. He assured early parole would not be offered those who have been sentenced for murder, rape, drug-dealing, kidnapping or sex offenses against children. Nor would there be early release for those serving consecutive sentences for attempting escape or recent violent prison infractions ... and physically or mentally ill will be considered only if treatment is available in the community.

The selection process is weighted in favor of society. That could be construed as "good news."

—Rowland Evans and Robert Novak—

Outlook: Few Cuts, But More Taxes

WASHINGTON — Having maneuvered presidential approval of Social Security cutbacks that campaigner Ronald Reagan vowed he never would permit, budget director David Stockman recently dropped the other shoe: "whopping" and "staggering" tax increases when Congress rejects his austerity program.

That is surely neither President Reagan's nor chief of staff Donald T. Regan's policy. But they now confront the tax alternative after acquiescing in Stockman's budget. Indeed, there is reason to suspect this has been the OMB chief's secret agenda all along.

Thus, agreeing to the White House-Senate Republican "compromise" budget is Don Regan's first blooper in his virtuoso White House performance. While praised by official spokesmen, it is privately described as a "disaster" by some of Regan's subordinates.

Once again, Republicans have managed the worst of several worlds. The "compromise" budget, while likely to fail in the Senate, is a goner in the House. But the president has put the mark of Cain on his party by squeezing the elderly just as Walter F. Mondale predicted. Regan also gave the tax-increasers of both parties new life.

Just that scenario was predicted last summer by Republican congressmen who lunched with Stockman. Promising one last try to cut expenditures, he predicted failure followed by a "grand coalition" to raise taxes. When we told Stockman of this scenario, he called it "a fairy tale."

Indeed, with the arrival of Don

Regan and Pat Buchanan at the White House, chances for a tax increase seemed evermore remote. Even Stockman, breakfasting with reporters Feb. 13, declared tax hikes out of the question. But by the time he addressed the National Press Club March 29, he was calling for eventual tax increases — "sooner or later" — in the absence of deep spending cuts.

Stockman then weighed in with Regan to press for the Senate budget, breaking the president's campaign promise. White House aides deny that the chief of staff made the decision that was the president's. But Regan was given the Stockman-framed alternatives of either a budget bust-up or Social Security crackdown. He also was told, incorrectly, that limiting COLAs (cost of living allowances) did not break his word.

The president's hurried support of a politically-unviable proposal appalled Republican politicians, including White House aides who had not been consulted. "I think Republicans should undergo a frontal lobotomy to avoid mentioning the words 'Social Security,'" a White House insider told us.

Democrats were overjoyed. Mondale and Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York trumpeted Regan's breach of faith on Social Security and predicted it would be followed by the breaking of the tax increase pledge, thereby vindicating Mondale in full.

When Stockman appeared on NBC's "Meet the Press" earlier this month, the "sooner or later" of two weeks earlier had become "sooner."

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court is completing its calendar of oral argument, having listened to the presentation of 169 cases since the term began in October. The term thus far has erected no landmarks and produced few surprises. Only a handful of decisions will have much impact on the law. But the term has reminded us anew that one of the most venerable of American truisms is at bottom quite false.

This is the truism: "Ours is a government of laws, not of men." John Adams borrowed the thought from James Harrington, the English utopian theorist, and liked it so much that he wrote it into the constitution of Massachusetts. It is there to this day, in the section commending separation of the executive, legislative and judicial branches of government "to the end that it may be a government of laws not of men."

Well, hi-ho, it is not so, not in Massachusetts or anywhere else. History is biography, as Carlyle reminds us. You see this on the high court. There you find three consistent conservatives: Burger, Rehnquist and O'Connor. You find three consistent liberals: Brennan, Marshall and Blackmun. You find one justice who is mostly conservative (White) and one who is mostly liberal (Stevens). And there in the middle is that courtly Virginian, Lewis Powell.

Through April 15, the court had handed down 67 opinions. Powell was on the losing side only twice. In nine instances the court split 5-4. Powell cast the winning vote in eight of the nine. The Virginian lost in Garcia v. San Antonio, in which he dissented powerfully in favor of the principle of federalism, and U.S. v. Locke, in which he dissented on a minor point of statutory construction.

Powell's remarkable role as this term's swing man will be marked by an asterisk in the record book. He missed oral argument in 56 cases owing to prostate surgery. Three of the missed cases already have been set for reargument, and five others have had to be disposed of by 4-4 votes to affirm without opinion. On a court as closely divided as this one, the opinion of one man on what the law should be is decisive. Powell is the man, and the country may well be glad of it.

Other personalities emerge. The honeymoon may be ending between Justice O'Connor and her old friend and classmate, Justice Rehnquist. Through the 67 opinions of April 15 they had disagreed 10 times; during the whole of the 1984 term, with 151 opinions, they disagreed only 15 times. Justices Brennan and Marshall remain the court's great dissenters; they have been on the losing side in 16 of the 35 cases this term in which the court has divided. Brennan's dissents grow more apoplectic as the years roll by. He will be 79 on April 25, and he is still full of ginger.

Half a dozen recent decisions in criminal law reflect the deep divisions within the court. The conservative bloc prevailed in one case involving the Miranda rule, which requires that persons in custody be warned of their rights; but in another Miranda case the liberal justices prevailed. Conservatives won 6-3 on the authority of public school officials to search a student's purse; they lost 6-3 on the right of police officers to use deadly force.

In the final round of oral argument next week, the court will look at a broad spectrum of cases. May Baltimore fix a mandatory age of 55 for the retirement of firefighters? May a labor union deny its members a right to resign during a strike? May customs officials detain a woman suspected of swallowing smuggled drugs? Under what circumstances may a community prohibit group homes for the mentally retarded?

These are typical of the issues that absorb this sharply divided and often cantankerous court. Five of the justices are over 75 years of age. Two of them, Powell and Marshall, have been through serious illnesses. Ronald Reagan still has 45 months of his 48-month presidency to go; and because a president nominates human beings, and not abstract figures, Reagan may yet name the men who will most decisively make the law into the next century.

—Elisha Douglas— Strength For Today

There is a disposition on the part of some people today to scoff at patriotism. People who take such an attitude remind us that we are part of the unity of "one world," in which there is no place for division of any kind.

The idea of unity is inspiring. But the reality of patriotism is sound also. Because a man is loyal to one woman does not mean either that he is a fool or an enemy of womanhood in general. The fact that we put our own families first in our affection and planning does not mean that we have no regard for other families. Within the unity of God's universe are many subdivisions. A person can be a citizen of the world in the finest sense of the term yet a complete patriot of the country to which he owes political allegiance.

Love of country has as true a place in the life of good men and women as love of spouse, love of children, love of God.

— Paul T. O'Connor —

In Search Of Pride

RALEIGH — The sheer ugliness of the 1984 campaigns has generated a host of legislative initiatives which aim to make North Carolina a slightly more pleasant place to live the next time the politicians seek office.

The outrageous charges and counter-charges of the 1984 campaigns for governor and U.S. senator prompted Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, to propose probably the most widely discussed elections law change of the 1985 assembly. Jones wants a constitutional amendment that would allow for the removal from office of any politician who can be proved to have libeled or slandered his opponent during the campaign.

Jones has been applauded for good intentions, but his bill appears to have little chance of becoming law. It has been characterized as an unconstitutional infringement on free speech. Others question how such a removal process could be carried out and whether it would create a long and ugly process during which the office would be crippled.

A House Elections Laws subcommittee has addressed a number of other questions which arose during the 1984 campaign and its chairman, Rep. Robert McAlister, D-Rockingham, has sponsored nine bills.

The most controversial bill springs from a letter mailed to North Carolina members of the National Rifle Association during the 1984 Democratic gubernatorial primary campaign. The NRA was not a state-registered political action committee and there were questions as to whether the group had broken state law. McAlister is proposing that corporations, business entities, labor unions, professional associations and insurance companies be prohibited from communicating support or opposition to state or local candidates.

This proposal ran into an immediate storm of disapproval from those who say it would infringe on their rights of free speech.

Early in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, there were questions about contribution limits. Could one person donate the maximum allowable gift of $4,000 to a candidate in 1983 and then give another $4,000 in 1984 before the primary, another $4,000 for the run-off and another $4,000 for the general election? The ruling was yes.

Under McAlister's bill, a citizen could not contribute more than $4,000 each calendar year to a particular candidate, regardless of the number of elections that candidate was involved in during that year.

Political action committees are often affiliated with parent organizations — corporations, labor unions, etc. — which aren't allowed to make political contributions. Parent organizations can get around the law, however, by paying certain costs which the PAC should be assuming and which should be charged against the PAC's contribution limit to a candidate.

Another of McAlister's bills would make it illegal for the parent organization to pay travel or subsistence expenses or salaries for employees doing political work for the affiliated PAC.

Another bill states that one is no longer a candidate after he has won or lost an election. But, it says that as long as that former candidate is raising money to pay off a campaign debt, he must file finance reports.

After Jones proposed his bill, a Pitt County educator wrote a supportive letter which said, "For the first time in my 47 years, the events in the recent state election (including U.S. Senate seat) made me ashamed to be a North Carolinian for the duration."

If contributions are reined in, maybe the volume of mud-slinging can be reduced and North Carolinians can again take pride in their political process.

IT'D MAKE GOOD SENSE!

Greenville Man Faces Charges

RALEIGH — Dalton Woodrow Worthington, 69, of Route 1, Greenville, is one of nine people arrested on federal charges in connection with the operation of a cocaine ring that was selling as much as $500,000 worth of drugs each week in eastern North Carolina.

Worthington was charged with one count of conspiracy to distribute cocaine, three counts of interstate travel to aid in racketeering and three counts of using a communication system in the furtherance of a felony.

He is serving a four-year sentence at Central Prison in Raleigh for his part in a September 1984 drug deal in Greenville, where State Bureau of Investigation agents, Greenville police, and Pitt County sheriff's deputies confiscated almost two pounds of cocaine — worth at least $182,000 — and $33,000 in cash from his home after purchasing 2½ ounces of cocaine from two other persons at a Greenville motel.

The City of Greenville has a radio program, "City Hall Notes", which is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 10:25 A.M. on WOOW Radio. The public is invited to listen to this program each week and learn more about Greenville City Government.

In The Area

Rash Of Thefts

Greenville police are continuing their investigation of eight thefts reported to the department on Wednesday.

Officer M.A. Jordan said three cases of sausage biscuits, a case of hot dogs and a half case of spiced luncheon meat, valued at $234, were taken from the Stewart Sandwiches' warehouse in a break-in reported at 5 a.m., while Officer F.G. Pruitt said two speakers and 30 cassette tapes were taken from 402 Jarvis St. in an incident reported at 12:09 p.m.

Officer H.D. Hines said a radio-cassette player was taken from a vehicle parked at 803 E. Fifth St. in an incident reported at 12:18 p.m., and $100 in cash was taken from Rose High School in an incident reported at 2:26 p.m. Officer D.R. Best said a television set was taken from 112 Ridgeway St. in an incident reported at 2 p.m.

Officer D.C. Johnson said a red motorized bicycle was taken from 2409 E. Fourth St. in an incident reported at 6:53 p.m., while Officer W.C. Widener said a bicycle was taken from 2301 E. Third St. in an incident reported at 7:03 p.m.

According to Officer K.A. Bedell, a bicycle was taken from an apartment at 204 Elm St. in an incident reported at 9:58 p.m.

Charges Preferred

William Hubert Bodine, 29, of Ayden was arrested on multiple charges by Greenville police following a 9 p.m. incident Wednesday at the K-Mart store at Greenville Square shopping center.

Officer S.D. Furr said Bodine was charged with larceny in connection with the alleged theft of a bicycle from the store.

Furr said Bodine was charged with possession of stolen goods after officers found a lawn mower and radio-cassette player from Nichols Discount City in his vehicle.

Bodine was also charged with driving while impaired, said Furr.

Shooting Probed

The Pitt County Sheriff's Department is investigating a Wednesday night incident involving a man and his ex-wife that was reported as an accidental shooting, according to Sheriff Ralph Tyson.

Tyson said the incident allegedly occurred following a discussion between Troy Anderson of Lot 6-D, Branch's Estates, and his former wife, Peggy, at her Evans Trailer Park residence. Mrs. Anderson said she met her ex-husband as she was driving home on State Road 1725 and he turned around and followed her home.

The sheriff said Anderson told deputies that his .32 caliber handgun discharged, striking him in the left leg, as he was placing the weapon in the glove compartment of his vehicle.

Tyson said that Anderson was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment.

Church Congregation Faces Suit For Malpractice After Suicide

GLENDALE, Calif. (AP) — A church was negligent in its attempt to treat a depressed young man who eventually committed suicide, an attorney for the man's family said during opening arguments in the nation's first clergy malpractice trial.

Attorney Edward Barker said the Grace Community Church, one of California's largest fundamentalist congregations with about 10,000 worshippers, negligently attempted to cure Kenneth Mark Nally, 24, with biblical lectures. Barker said they never referred him to the psychiatrists who might have saved his life.

Barker said none of the church counselors was properly trained. Through biblical admonitions regarding guilt and sin, the pastors intensified Nally's depression and indirectly caused his suicide, he argued.

But church lawyer Samuel Ericsson said pastors repeatedly advised against suicide and said Nally himself avoided psychiatrists because he felt they had failed to help him in the past.

Ericsson said counselors then sent him to physicians, one of whom, a church deacon, urged his family to commit him to a mental institution. Ericsson said, however, that the family would deny that.

Walter and Maria Nally seek $1 million in damages, accusing the church of malpractice, wrongful death and negligence. The trial of their suit opened Wednesday in state Superior Court.

Church counselors nationwide say a verdict favoring the Nallys could have a chilling effect on all clergy who attempt to help the emotionally disturbed.

"The church undertook to treat a very seriously disturbed and depressed young man, and they did a very inadequate job of it," Barker argued Wednesday.

Mrs. Nally wept as Barker told how her son took a shotgun, locked himself in a closet and killed himself April 2, 1979.

After opening arguments, testimony began with three of Nally's friends, including Mark Stanners, a classmate who described Nally as "very intelligent, a very personable kid."

Faulkner Heads Farm Bureau

RALEIGH (AP) — D. Gray Faulkner, a Vance County farmer, has become acting president of the 234,000-member North Carolina Farm Bureau Federation, succeeding John Sledge who died Tuesday.

Sledge held the post for nearly 11 years.

Faulkner, 58, has been a member of the Farm Bureau's board of directors for 22 years and has been vice president of the North Carolina Farm Bureau Mutual Insurance Co. for six years.

He grows tobacco, soybeans and small grains on his farm near Henderson.

Shultz Draws Parallel Between Vietnam, Nicaragua

By MAUREEN SANTINI
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz, drawing the administration's tightest parallel yet between Vietnam and Nicaragua, today warned that U.S. failure to continue fighting communism in Central America could lead to the same results as the U.S. pullout from Vietnam.

The secretary, pleading for a renewed congressional commitment to the administration's support for guerrillas battling the leftist regime in Managua, said of the Sandinistas:

"Like the Vietnamese Communists, they have become a threat to their neighbors."

In a speech noting the 10th anniversary of the fall of South Vietnam on April 30, 1975, Shultz read this litany:

"Broken promises. Communist dictatorship. Refugees. Widened Soviet influence. This time near our very borders."

"Here is your parallel between Vietnam and Central America."

The secretary asserted that the Sandinista government in Nicaragua bears great resemblance to the government of then-North Vietnam.

"We left Indochina in 1975, but the cost of failure was high," he said.

"Vietnam — and Watergate — left a legacy of congressional restrictions on presidential flexibility, now embedded in our legislation. ... These weakened the ability of the president to act and to conduct foreign policy and they weakened our country," he said.

Shultz said the Contra rebels for whom President Reagan has been unsuccessfully seeking $14 million in aid from Congress "deserve our support."

"They are struggling to prevent the consolidation and expansion of Communist power on our doorstep, and to save the people of Nicaragua from the fate of the people of Cuba, of South Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos."

"Those who assure us that these dire consequences are not in prospect are some of those who assured us of the same in Indochina before 1975," he said.

Shultz, decrying a U.S. pullback from global leadership after Vietnam, asserted:

"Our retreat created a vacuum that was exploited by our adversaries. The Soviets ... took advantage of our inhibitions and projected their power to unprecedented lengths," he said.

"American weakness turned out to be the most destabilizing factor on the global scene. The folly of isolationism was again revealed. Once against it was demonstrated — the hard way — that American engagement, American strength and American leadership are indispensable to peace," said Shultz.

The secretary declared that the United States "acted under many illusions during the Vietnam period, which events since 1975 should have dispelled. We have no excuse for falling prey to the same illusions again."

And he warned:

"The litany of apology for Communists and condemnation for America and our friends is beginning again. Can we afford to be naive again about the consequences when we pull back, about the special ruthlessness of Communist rule?"

Shultz said that Americans "are tired of setbacks, especially those that result from restraints we impose on ourselves."

And he told his audience:

"The larger lesson of the past decade is that when America lost faith in herself, world stability suffered and freedom lost ground.

"The president has called our effort (in Vietnam) a noble cause, and he was right. Whatever mistakes in how the war was fought, whatever one's view of the strategic rationale for our intervention, the morality of our effort must now be clear."

"Those Americans who served, or who grieve for their loved ones lost or missing, can hold their heads high. Our sacrifice was in the service of noble ideals — to save innocent peoples from brutal tyranny."

Experts Say Sea Pirates Still Active

Sa WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — Pirates still roam the seas and, in the past decade, have taken hundreds of lives and millions of dollars of booty on merchant ships, refugee boats and even luxury yachts, say experts at a conference here.

"Piracy occurs all over the world," said Dean E. Cycon, a research fellow at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, which sponsored the two-day conference that concludes today.

Cycon said the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development has determined that piracy and related maritime fraud now cost shippers and ship owners more than $1 billion a year.

A recent United Nations report said 1,376 people had been killed, 2,283 raped and 593 abducted by pirates along the coast of Thailand alone since 1980, he said.

Eric Ellen, director of the International Maritime Bureau of Essex, England, said Wednesday that most of those slain or raped by pirates were "boat people," or refugees from Vietnam.

THE ART OF FACE ART — Young Amy Shive holds perfectly still as a face-painting artist begins to apply a design to her face. A number of activities to involve children took place at The Plaza on the Super Sunday opening day of the 1985 Eastern Carolina Arts Festival. (Photo by Marianne Baines)

He said piracy had virtually disappeared by the 1960s but began to spring up again in the early 1970s along the coast of Nigeria when that African nation's new-found oil wealth brought a boom in shipping that clogged its ports. Vessels moored off the coast soon became targets of plunderers, he said.

Among reasons for an increase in piracy in the past decade are poverty in Third World nations that leads people to crime and the burgeoning worldwide drug trade, Cycon said.

Ellen said modern pirates range from handfuls of loosely organized attackers off Singapore to groups of up to 100 who sneak aboard stationary vessels at night along the coast of western Africa.

In recent years, he said, ships off the coast of Brazil also have increasingly come under pirate attack, along with yachts in the Caribbean.

The Singapore pirates, who attack along the narrow Phillips Channel between Singapore and Indonesia, arm themselves with knives and board slow-moving ships. They seek booty in the crew's cabins and generally leave cargo untouched, he said.

Protesters Occupy State Capitol

By The Associated Press
Protesters opposed to South Africa's racial policies occupied the Wisconsin state capitol today after hundreds of students were arrested nationwide in at least 28 college demonstrations calling for an end to investments in the country.

Rallies in California, New York, New Jersey, Massachusetts, Wisconsin and Florida attracted thousands of people Wednesday in what was billed as a "National Day of Solidarity" to galvanize opposition to South Africa's policy of racial separation known as apartheid.

More than 400 demonstrators were arrested, police and school officials said.

of Wisconsin-Madison spilled over into the community on Wednesday as 1,000 people marched six blocks from the campus to the state capitol. A scuffle broke out when about 80 demonstrators surged into a conference room outside the office of Gov. Anthony Earl, forcing postponement of a meeting he was scheduled to chair.

About 350 people were arrested Wednesday at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., when they refused to leave the school's main administration building in the fifth and most intense day of protests, said Cornell spokesman Martin Stiles. He said that 25 of those arrested were faculty and other employees of the university. Before Wednesday, 650 people had been arrested at Cornell.

In Wisconsin, about 200 people spread blankets and sleeping bags in the capitol lobby, many of whom spent the night under the watchful eye of security guards, chatting, singing and listening to guitar music.

Earl aide Ronald McCrea said the governor was "not hostile" to the demonstration. "They're petitioning the whole government, and the executive branch is certainly part of it. The governor was inconvenienced, but that comes with the territory."

Four Convicted In Clinic Bombing

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — Abortion was on trial, not four young people who were convicted for the Christmas Day bombings of a clinic and two doctors' offices, a prosecutor said.

"It was evident to anyone who sat in the trial that abortion was the real issue in the case," U.S. Attorney W. Thomas Dillard said after Wednesday's verdict. "It goes without saying we are pleased."

The verdict on abortion was that its opponents can continue to picket and write letters to political leaders, but cannot take the law into their own hands, Dillard said.

The verdict on Matthew Goldsby and James Simmons, both 21, was guilty on all counts. Each was convicted on one count of conspiracy, three counts of making pipe bombs and three of bombing the three buildings where abortions were performed.

The convictions came as little surprise. Both men had already confessed, and their insanity defense had been undermined by government experts. Even the defense lawyers admitted that they did not believe their clients were insane.

Goldsby's fiancée, Kaye Wiggins,

18, and Simmons' wife, Kathren, 19, also were found guilty of conspiracy but innocent on the other counts.

T. Patrick Monaghan of Bardstown, Ky., Goldsby's lawyer, had a different view of the trial than did Dillard.

"This was not a trial about religion, politics or morals," Monaghan said. "This was a trial about God."

The defendants had claimed that God told them to bomb the abortion facilities and Monaghan said God also was speaking to America.

"I don't want martyrs; I don't want causes," Monaghan said. "I want innocence recognized."

Paul Shimek, a Pensacola lawyer for Ms. Wiggins who had represented all four defendants before other lawyers joined the case, acknowledged the trial's focus on abortion.

"I didn't see how you could separate the two, frankly," Shimek said.

His plan was to focus on the abortion issue, but he said Monaghan brought the insanity defense with him when he joined the case.

And that strategy, Shimek said, helped get more abortion evidence before the jury than otherwise would have been possible.

A new law, passed after John W. Hinckley Jr. was found innocent by reason of insanity in the shooting of President Reagan, makes getting an insanity verdict more difficult and shifts the burden of proof from the government to the defense.

As a result, U.S. District Judge Roger Vinson permitted jurors to view an anti-abortion film and blow-ups of pictures depicting fetal life. They also were permitted to hear testimony about biblical condemnation of abortion and an anti-abortion letter written by President Reagan.

Defense lawyers have been non-committal about the possibility of appeals. Shimek said they may wait until after the May 30 sentencing before making a decision. The men face maximum terms of 65 years and the women five years.

Vinson permitted the two men to go free on their own recognizance pending sentencing.

Before the trial he had held them in jail without bond, saying he was afraid Goldsby and Simmons, who had said God told them to attack the buildings, might bomb again if given the chance.

But when he ordered them free, the judge said he no longer considers them a threat to society.

Farm Aid Available, USDA Says

3 WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers, contrary to dire predictions of two months ago, have largely been able to get the loans they need for spring planting, the Reagan administration's top agricultural credit official says.

Frank Naylor, the Agriculture Department undersecretary in charge of lending programs, said Wednesday that about 5 percent of farmers will be unable to plant because of failure to get credit — far less than the 14 percent forecast by some farm economists when the cry for credit help was at its peak in February.

The 5 percent figure would be only slightly above the historic turnover rate of 3 percent to 3.5 percent, he said.

"There is adequate credit available," said Naylor, testifying before the Senate Agriculture Committee. Later, he told reporters, "The truth is, the lenders in the end went ahead and stayed with many of their farmers. They're optimists."

Spring planting is now in full swing around much of the nation, and the lending season for purchasing fuel, seed and fertilizer is down to its final three weeks, Naylor noted. The department's surveys show farmers' intentions to plant are "at high levels everywhere in the country," he said.

Despite Naylor's optimistic outlook, one panel member, Sen. Edward Zorinsky, D-Neb., was skeptical. "If banks keep going broke out there, there must be some reason," Zorinsky said.

White House Aide Wanted Man To Tone Down Reagan Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elie Wiesel, the concentration camp survivor who received a congressional gold medal last week from President Reagan, says he "resented" an effort by a White House aide to persuade him to tone down his criticism of the president's planned visit to a German war cemetery.

Marshall Breger, the White House liaison officer for the nation's Jewish community, acknowledged Wednesday that he asked a friend of Wiesel, Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., to persuade the noted Holocaust writer-philosopher to temper his comments.

Breger telephoned Lautenberg last Friday morning, just 30 minutes before Wiesel, after receiving his medal at a White House ceremony, publicly implored the president to cancel his visit next month to the cemetery in Bitburg, West Germany. The cemetery contains the graves of 47 members of the notorious Waffen SS, the elite Nazi agency that ran World War II concentration camps.

During the ceremony, Wiesel told Reagan: "I implore you to find another way. ... That place, Mr. President, is not your place. Your place is with the victims of the SS."

Breger said he told Lautenberg that Wiesel might have a better chance of persuading Reagan to avoid the cemetery by mentioning it only in private.

Wiesel and Reagan met privately before the nationally televised ceremony, and Breger said he spoke with Wiesel just prior to that meeting.

"I did say I hope you'll use your discretion," Breger said of his brief talk with Wiesel.

"Now, if you want to read that as me censoring him, I think that's an unfair reading," Breger said Wednesday, adding that Wiesel rejected the suggestion.

Breger said the call to Lautenberg was the only one he had made on the matter. But Wiesel, reached Wednesday in New York, said, "I heard that similar calls went to other people who are also my friends. I got telephone calls from other people as well, relating the same message."

Wiesel, who also is chairman of the United States Holocaust Memorial Council, said he "resented" Breger's call to Lautenberg.

"He used people to get to me," Wiesel said of Breger. "I don't like this kind of technique, naturally. But I understand why he did it. He's a White House official, and he wanted to protect the White House."

"My feeling is, of course, he was wrong because after all, the whole purpose was to speak and try to say certain things," Wiesel said. "He did it and some people resented it. I resented it. I don't like pressure."

Lautenberg said Wednesday that, as he had done the night before at a private meal with Wiesel, he suggested the writer remove a phrase that might be considered offensive. Lautenberg declined to describe the words.

"I said he'd have a lot of press there," the senator said of his talk with Wiesel. "I said, 'You're there as a guest of the president. You have every right to make your point, but there is a delicate balance between an insult to the president and your conscience.'"

Asked if his purpose in calling Lautenberg was to protect Reagan from potential embarrassment, Breger said, "I really believe that the motives carried together. I wanted all parties to the Jewish Heritage Week ceremony to feel they were satisfied."

Advocates Of Daylight Time Renew Battle For Earlier Start

WASHINGTON (AP) — Once again, Congress is being asked to return Americans to the oil-shortage days of 1974 — not for the gas lines but for the extra hour of daylight that was created to conserve energy.

As regular as clockwork, those who want to start daylight-saving time earlier in the year and end later have resumed their Capitol Hill mission, preaching conservation, safety and more rounds of golf.

Whether they succeed or not, daylight-saving time for 1985 begins this Sunday, when most of the nation turns its clocks ahead at 2 a.m. local time.

"Let there be light," Rep. Silvio Conte, R-Mass., said Wednesday as he led a troop of proponents ranging from the Reagan administration to the nation's 40,000 convenience stores before the House energy conservation subcommittee.

Their goal is to enact a bill, introduced by subcommittee Chairman Edward Markey, D-Mass., that would begin daylight-saving time on the third Sunday in March and end it on the first Sunday in November.

Daylight time — except in Arizona, Hawaii and parts of Indiana where it doesn't exist — now starts on the final Sunday in April and ends when the clocks are set back an hour the last Sunday in October.

Although a longer period of daylight-saving time enjoys broad support, it hasn't succeeded in Congress because of an inescapable fact of solar physics: if you shift the clock to cause the sun to set later, the sun also rises later.

Rural lawmakers say they don't want their farmers stumbling to the cow barn in the dark any more than necessary. And even some urban members say they get complaints from mothers who don't want their children heading off to school on an unnaturally dark morning in March.

The 1974 petroleum crunch brought the United States two years of extended daylight-saving time — 10 months in 1974, eight in 1975. But once the oil was flowing again, Congress called off the experiment.

Richard F. Walsh, director of the economics office of the Transportation Department, endorsed the Markey bill, telling the subcommittee that the additional longer days a decade ago had positive effects on energy use, traffic fatalities and crime rates.

He testified that for each additional day added to the daylight time season, the nation would save 100,000 barrels of oil. Daylight-saving time delays the need for lights in the evening.

While the administration is projecting savings, businessmen are anxious for the bigger revenues they believe will come their way.

The Barbecue Industry Association believes that it would sell $900 million more a year in grills and supplies if Americans were given more daylight for backyard cookouts.

Jacques Hetrick of the Sporting

Goods Manufacturers Association said it would give golfers the potential of 19 million more rounds a year and prompt the sale of $46 million more in balls and clubs.

Kathleen Clark of the National Association of Convenience Stores said while her members would prefer a 25-hour day for shopping, "adding an extra hour of daylight during the average American's busiest time of day is the next best thing."

House Democrats Kill Last Bill For Nicaraguan Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrat-led House, after two days of bitter debate and dramatic votes, has left President Reagan's policy of aiding Nicaraguan rebels in a shambles, killing all active proposals for resuming U.S. assistance this fiscal year.

Despite presidential lobbying, the House on Wednesday defeated a Republican alternative for $14 million in non-lethal aid by two votes, 215-213. Republicans then joined with liberal Democrats to kill a moderate Democratic alternative, 303-123.

House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas, said he hoped the bill's defeat would give both the leftist Nicaraguan government and the Reagan administration a "good little breathing spell that might give both sides (the United States and Nicaragua) a cooling-off period."

But Reagan declared that he had no intention to give up and planned to "return to the Congress again and again to seek a policy that supports peace and democracy in Nicaragua. ... Our friends in Central America look to us for help against totalitarianism."

The president added that the House vote "damages national security and foreign policy goals."

House Republicans said they might try to revive aid to the rebels before the current fiscal year ends Sept. 30 and would definitely seek approval of Reagan's request for $28 million in military support for the rebels in fiscal 1986, which starts Oct. 1.

House Minority Whip Trent Lott, R-Miss., said the Republicans voted against the Democratic alternative, even though it contained $10 million for Nicaraguan refugees, because it would have extended a flat ban on U.S. support for military actions in Nicaragua into the future.

"You might as well send (the rebels) a love letter and tell them they're on their own," said Lott in dismissing the Democratic plan that had cleared the House in a preliminary vote, 219-206.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., who led Democratic efforts to defeat the president's plan, predicted that the Republicans would try to attach aid to the Contras to other legislation this year.

O'Neill said that before the vote, he received a call from Reagan, who wanted the speaker to release members who had pledged him their votes. O'Neill said he told Reagan that House members are always free to vote as they wish and added: "I sincerely believe you're not going to be happy until you get into Nicaragua."

Democrats, who have suffered a string of defeats at Reagan's hands, were jubilant as they dealt the president the biggest foreign policy setback of his second term.

"We broke the law of averages — we won one," said Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., a House Foreign Affairs Committee member.

Republicans Still Short Of Votes For GOP Budget

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders say a Republican package of spending cuts faces an uphill struggle in Congress, despite President Reagan's nationally broadcast appeal to Americans for "making your voices heard" in support of the plan.

The 1986 budget proposal, which includes limits on Social Security cost-of-living increases and the elimination of many popular federal programs, was to undergo its first test in the GOP-run chamber today.

Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said Reagan's speech on the eve of the start of Senate debate on the plan "raises the odds" for victory.

"It was a good, tough speech, just what we wanted," Dole said. However, he said that, as of now, he still lacks enough commitments for its approval — a vote he said was not likely to be taken for at least 10 days.

Speaking from the Oval Office, Reagan said: "Please tell your senators and representatives, by phone, wire or mail, that our future hangs in the balance, that this is no time for partisanship."

The White House said that in the first 40 minutes after Reagan's address, the White House logged 546 telephone calls expressing support for the president's stand and 228 calls voicing opposition, according to deputy press secretary Rusty Brashear.

Reagan said the plan, which would cut $300 billion in federal spending over the next three years, "not only deserves your support, it must have your support to pass."

Many senators of both parties have voiced reservations over some of the more sensitive elements of the package — including the limits on Social Security and proposed elimination of programs like Amtrak rail passenger service, the Jobs Corps and loans for small businesses.

"We stand at a crossroads. The hour is late, the task is large, and the stakes are momentous," Reagan declared. "I ask you to join us in making your voices heard in the Senate this week and later in the House."

Today's Senate vote would permit the plan negotiated by the White House and key Senate Republicans to be formally debated as a package — a vote that Senate and administration officials said was important both symbolically and procedurally.

"It's critical that we win that vote," Budget Director David Stockman told reporters Wednesday night after Reagan's address. "We're throwing everything into it. It isn't the end of the road but it gets us over a major hump in terms of bringing the package through...."

Although the budget plan was put together by Republicans, Reagan made a pointed effort to court bipartisan support for it.

"Tonight I am asking all of you — Democrats, Republicans and independents — to give me your help to put our financial house in order," Reagan said.

However, Senate Minority Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia, delivering the Democratic response to Reagan's address, indicated Democratic support for the package was not forthcoming.

"I listened carefully. I was disappointed," Byrd said. He said the president's plan "shortchanges the future" with its deep spending cuts and is "unfair to most American families."

And, Byrd said, in proposing a 2 percent cap on Social Security cost-of-living increases in each of the next three years for rates of inflation of up to 4 percent, the president had broken his own promises to the nation's elderly not to tamper with Social Security benefits.

"In the absence of strong presidential leadership... we will propose our own plans for the future," Byrd said.

However, Senate Democrats remained divided on many budget issues and as of late Wednesday had made little progress toward offering an alternative plan.

Senate Republican leaders postponed the opening of debate on the budget from Wednesday until today to give the president a clear shot at presenting his case for the budget.

The postponement came after the budget debate was clouded by an effort by Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, to attach to the spending bill a denunciation of Reagan's plans to visit the a military cemetery in Germany where a number of Nazi soldiers are buried.

Before Reagan's speech, Dole told the Senate: "We don't have the votes yet" for the Republican package. However, he urged support for the procedural vote to formally put the president's package before the Senate.

"If we can secure 50 votes for this procedural move, then it will show the American people we are serious about a $300 billion deficit reduction package," Dole said.

After the speech, Dole said he couldn't predict the outcome of the procedural vote — but he told a reporter that it would have to be carried by Republican votes alone. "It won't get any Democratic votes this early," he said. Republicans hold a 53-47 majority in the Senate.

Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, called Reagan's address "powerful and to the point," although he said the plan "faces a very tough battle."

He said the Democratic response "asking for leadership has missed the point. (Reagan) laid his cards on the table and he asked that we follow. He didn't ask that we follow blindly."

Groups who had opposed parts of the president's plan were critical of his broadcast address, while organizations favoring the package were supportive.

White House Says Reagan Will Keep Trip Schedule

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, rebuffed by West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl when he pleaded for a change in plans, will go through with his visit to a German military cemetery, White House officials say.

A senior White House official, speaking privately, said Wednesday night that Reagan had appealed directly in a telephone conversation with Kohl to cancel the cemetery visit but that Kohl was adamant they should go.

While the cemetery visit is definitely on, the White House says, plans for a wreath-laying ceremony at Bitburg are still being discussed with the West German government.

Chief of Staff Donald Regan, acknowledging that the administration has been "roughed up" by the controversy over the visit, said Wednesday that conversations with the Bonn government continued after Reagan and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl reaffirmed plans for the event.

Regan declined to say whether the president tried to persuade Kohl to cancel the visit.

MEET AGAIN — World War II veterans from the Soviet Union and the United States clasp hands as they gather for ceremonies today marking the 40th anniversary of the linkup between their two armies at the Elbe

U.S. And Soviet Veterans Hold Reunion In Germany

TORGAU, East Germany (AP) — U.S. and Soviet war veterans gathered today at this drab factory town to recall the day 40 years ago when they joined forces in their final drive against the crumbling Nazi Third Reich.

About 20,000 people gathered for ceremonies during which Horst Sindermann, an official of East Germany's Communist Party, laid a wreath at a war monument and bands played the U.S., Soviet and East German national anthems.

U.S. officials boycotted the reunion because of the death last month of U.S. Army Maj. Arthur Nicholson, shot by a Soviet guard in East Germany. But 100 American veterans, determined to remember a better time, came anyway.

"As old as we are, you just have to try to get the hate out of your hearts. As long as you can communicate a bit and have friendly conversations back and forth, that can only help," said veteran E.R. Sams, 61, a retired tobacco farmer from Pinnacle, N.C.

Sams was a member of the 69th Infantry Division of the American 5th Army that joined up with the westward-pushing Soviet Red Army 58th Guards Division at Torgau on the Elbe River on April 25, 1945.

Their link represented an allied line across Germany. Five days later, Adolf Hitler committed suicide and two weeks after that, the Third Reich surrendered.

Germany was divided into pro-Soviet and pro-Western halves. Torgau, today spruced up with red flags and peace slogans, became part of pro-Soviet East Germany.

The link-up of April 25, 1945, in Torgau, went down in history as a clear symbol of the victory of the anti-Hitler coalition over German facism. "Erich Honecker, the leader of the East German Communist Party, said in a statement read at the ceremony.

Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev also sent greetings. Gorbachev said in a message carried by the Soviet news agency

Tass: "The Soviet people are convinced that constructive cooperation between the former allies, among all states in the activity aimed at safeguarding peace, can and should become a powerful factor in the improvement of the international climate."

"Those who today again join their hands over the Elbe River give a good example of that," he said.

Gorbachev made no mention of Nicholson's death in his message. The Soviet Union has charged that he was spying and in a restricted military area, but U.S. officials have denied that.

"... The handshake of the Soviet and American soldiers who met in the spring of 1945 on the Elbe River has been forever recorded in history as the symbol of hope and friendship," Gorbachev said.

In Moscow, Vladimir Lomeiko, the spokesman for the Foreign Ministry, was asked about the absence of an official U.S. delegation. He replied, "It is not a meeting of the army, but of the participants of the meeting 40 years ago."

Sams, a machine gunner private at the time, remembers the joyousness of the Soviet-American meeting.

"There was lots of hugging and dancing and singing," he said Wednesday. "A lot of them (Russians) had accordions and they played, and they fed us some kind of stew and potatoes. It might have been horse (meat). But we were just so happy thinking the war was over."

A "meeting for peace" between veterans of both sides and Torgau citizens was arranged near the rebuilt "Bridge of Friendship" over which American soldiers had crawled, ducking the bullets of nervous Soviet soldiers who had never seen a GI uniform.

The former soldiers planned to visit the grave of Joseph Polowsky, a Chicago cab driver who had been one of the bridge-crossers and continued efforts to commemorate the event throughout the Cold War.

That moment in time when American and Soviet soldiers met as friends, fighting together against a common enemy, occurred in several spots along the Elbe, when GIs in separate positions on the western bank began crossing — some crawling over the blown-up bridge, others in a tiny boat paddling with their rifles.

U.S. Maj. Gen. Emil F. Reinhardt, the U.S. 69th Division commander, crossed in a racing shell found in the nearby Torgau Rowing Club. Soviet soldiers stripped to their shorts and swam out to greet the Americans.

"Wherever we've gone, the people have said they don't want any more war," said Bob Haag, 59, a trucking contractor from Indianapolis, Ind.

Haag, a private who drove a jeep at Torgau 40 years ago, said the shooting of Nicholson "threw a bit of a shadow over this anniversary." But he said the veterans' trip had been "planned long in advance."

Agents Find Bombs, Gold In Survivalists' Camp

FORT SMITH, Ark. (AP) — Federal agents found bombs behind trap doors and false walls while searching a camp of white supremacists linked to the murder of an Oklahoma woman and the kidnapping of children, authorities say.

A search of the Covenant, the Sword and the Arm of the Lord compound by federal agents had not been completed Wednesday but already had turned up 125 guns, including 20 machine guns, anti-tank and anti-aircraft rockets, hand grenades, two stolen trucks and an armored truck under construction.

Buried in the compound were more than 155 ounces of gold and Krugerrands worth from $45,000 to $50,000, said Agent James Blasingame, head of the FBI in Arkansas. Searchers also found 30 gallons cyanide.

Some of the materials, including a cut-out figure of a state trooper wearing a Star of David badge, were displayed by agent Jack Killorin of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms at a warehouse near Gainesville, Mo.

David True, an ATF explosives expert, said bombs were found under trap doors, behind false walls and underground. "They obviously knew what they were doing," he said.

Meanwhile, James D. Ellison, 48, leader of the group, remained in jail Wednesday night on $150,000 bond two days after surrendering with four other members of the group following a three-day siege of the 224-acre camp by law-enforcement officers.

An affidavit used to obtain a search warrant of the camp and made public Wednesday linked the murder of a woman to a member of the organization, and alleged the organization kept kidnapped children at the compound.

The body of Jean Carrigan was found March 19 along an Oklahoma highway with a slashed throat. The affidavit said a former member of the group told authorities that kidnapped children had been held at the compound but gave few details.

In the affidavit, Randall Rader, a former elder of the group charged in a racketeering indictment in Washington state as a member of the neo-Nazi group The Order, said Ellison kept 30 to 40 pounds of plastic explosive under his house.

The 14-page affidavit quoted seven sources, including former CSA members.

Searchers also found a 20-foot-square spill of transformer oil believed to contain PCBs, or polychlorinated biphenyls, a suspected carcinogen, when they entered the compound. Tests of soil samples were expected to be completed next week.

Newsday, Philadelphia Paper Wins 2 Pulitzers

NEW YORK (AP) — A fiddle band played in the newsroom and the publisher announced $250 bonuses after the Fort Worth (Texas) Star-Telegram captured the Pulitzer Prize for public service for revealing a design flaw in helicopters that led to the deaths of nearly 250 U.S. servicemen.

The Philadelphia Inquirer and Newsday of Melville, N.Y., each won two Pulitzers for journalism Wednesday. The prize for drama went to the Broadway hit "Sunday in the Park with George," whose music and lyrics were written by Stephen Sondheim with a book by James Lapine.

The Star-Telegram's reporting by Mark J. Thompson ultimately led the Army to ground almost 600 Huey helicopters pending their modification, the Pulitzer board said. The helicopter, a mainstay of the Army's fleet, was plagued by a design problem called "mast bumping," which occurs when the rotor tilts too far and strikes the mast that attaches the blade to the craft.

At the Star-Telegram on Wednesday, champagne flowed, a country music band played in the newsroom, and President and Publisher Phil Meek announced $250 bonuses for everyone on the editorial and circulation staffs.

Newsday won the award for international reporting for a series on hunger in Africa and the commentary award for columns by Murray Kempton, 67.

The Inquirer was cited for investigative reporting by William K. Marimow about attacks by police dogs on more than 350 people. More than a dozen officers were removed from the K-9 unit, the Pulitzer board said.

In 1978, Marimow was part of a team that won the public service Pulitzer for an Inquirer series on police brutality.

The newspaper's Larry Price won a Pulitzer for feature photography for his series of pictures from war-torn Angola and El Salvador.

The award for fiction went to "Foreign Affairs" by Alison Lurie. "The Good War: An Oral History of World War II" by Studs Terkel won the prize for general non-fiction, while the biography prize went to "The Life and Times of Cotton Mather," by Kenneth Silverman.

Ms. Lurie said she was so sure she wouldn't win that she took the phone off the hook in her London flat Wednesday and watched television.

The history award was won by "Prophecy of Regulation" by Thomas K. McCraw, and the poetry prize by Carolyn Kizer's "Yin."

Two music awards were announced. One went to "Symphony, RiverRun," by Stephen Albert. A special citation was awarded to William Schuman, winner of the first Pulitzer Prize for music in 1943.

Albert's reaction was guardedly optimistic because, he said, "the Pulitzer allows you to be more selective in the commissions that come your way" but "a lot of people haven't done too much after winning a Pulitzer."

Each prize, with the exception of the gold medal for public service and Schuman's citation, carries a $1,000 award.

The Pulitzer for general news reporting went to the Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star of Norfolk, Va., for articles by Thomas Turcol exposing an allegedly corrupt economic development official who later resigned.

The St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times also won a Pulitzer for investigative reporting by Lucy Morgan and Jack Reed on alleged corruption in the office of Pasco County Sheriff John Short, who was turned out of office by voters.

Short was indicted by a grand jury and is awaiting trial.

The Pulitzer for editorial writing went to Richard Aregood of the Philadelphia Daily News for editorials on a variety of subjects.

The Pulitzer for the new category of explanatory journalism was won by Jon Franklin of the Baltimore Evening Sun for his series about the science of molecular psychiatry.

In another new category — reporting on specialized subjects — the Pulitzer went to Randall Savage and Jackie Crosby of the Macon (Ga.) Telegraph and News for their examination of academics and athletics at two Georgia universities.

The Des Moines Register's Thomas Knudson won the award for national affairs for a series on the occupational hazards of farming.

Alice Steinbach of the Baltimore Sun won the prize for feature writing for "A Boy of Unusual Vision," an account of a blind boy's world.

Howard Rosenberg of the Los Angeles Times won a Pulitzer for his television criticism, and Jeff MacNelly of the Chicago Tribune won for his cartoons.

MacNelly won Pulitzers twice before, in 1972 and 1978, for his editorial cartoons for the Richmond (Va.) News-Leader.

The Pulitzer for spot news photography went to the staff of the Orange County Register in Santa Ana, Calif., for what the Pulitzer board termed "exceptional photographic coverage of the Olympic Games."

Stan Grossfeld of the Boston Globe also won in feature photography for his pictures of the Ethiopian famine and illegal aliens on the U.S.-Mexican border.

Both the feature photography winners had won previous Pulitzers. Grossfeld won last year in the spot news category, and Price won in the spot category in 1981 for the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Reporters Josh Friedman and

Dennis Bell and photographer Ozier Muhammad worked on Newsday's prize-winning international report.

The Los Angeles Times' Pulitzer was its 15th, the Philadelphia Inquirer's its seventh and eighth, and the Boston Globe's its 12th.

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened lower today as interest rates rose.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials fell 2.43 points to 1,276.06 in the first half hour of trading.

Slightly more stocks fell in price than rose in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

One discouraging sign this week has been a rebound in open-market interest rates.

This morning, the federal funds rate, the interest on overnight interbank loans and a peg for many other short-term interest rates, climbed to 8 1/4 percent from 8 percent late Wednesday.

Higher interest rates would reduce prospects for sharp economic growth and would make investments in bonds more attractive than returns available on stocks.

In early trading today, Unocal continued to be active, falling 3/8 to 47, as some doubts surfaced about the prospects for success of a takeover bid led by T. Boone Pickens Jr., the chairman of Mesa Petroleum Co.

While Pickens insisted today that he intends to continue to try to gain control of Unocal, he also announced he will attempt to sell back his group's holdings to Unocal, unless he can win a court order blocking the company's offer of securities valued at $72 a share for 50 million shares.

Pickens said that if Unocal's plan to repurchase 27.8 percent of its stock succeeds, his group would revise its bid of $54 a share for the company's stock.

On Wednesday, the Dow Jones industrial average slipped 0.22 to 1,278.49.

Advances edged ahead of declines on the NYSE.

Big Board volume slowed to 99.60 million shares from 108.92 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose 17 to 105.60. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index fell 0.12 to 229.19.

McGraw's Grand Slam Wins Title

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

In five previous trips to the plate, rightfielder Jay McGraw hadn't made much noise for the East Carolina Pirates.

And at first glance, his sixth appearance wasn't much either. He lofted what looked like a simple fly ball to right field with the bases loaded and two men out. It looked like more extra innings for the Pirates and UNC-Wilmington.

But the ball kept going, going — and finally settled in the bushes just beyond the fence for a grand-slam home run, sending the Pirates into a delirium and the Seahawks into the depths of woe.

It was a fitting climax for a game that was perhaps the best college baseball game ever played at Harrington Field and it gave the Pirates an 8-4 victory and clinched the ECAC-South championship for them for the second straight year.

"When I first hit the ball, I thought it was just a routine fly," McGraw admitted. "But when he turned to go after it, I thought it might have a chance."

Coach Gary Overton, who climaxed his first year as head coach for the Pirates with their third ECAC-South crown in four seasons, agreed. "At first I thought he had it, but when he turned his back and I saw his numbers, I didn't think he would get to it. But I never dreamed that it would be out of here."

All-in-all, it was an outstanding ball game. It had everything, good offense, good defense, outstanding pitching, and the suspense that one would expect in a game that means the championship for either team.

"If they (the fans) didn't get their money's worth tonight, I don't think there's anything we can do for them," Overton said. "This was a classic championship game. Both teams played hard; both played aggressive."

"Both teams made a few mistakes, but I don't think it's necessarily true that the base running took things away from either team as much as the defense took it away."

Overton said he felt that all three of the Pirate pitchers did well. Daniel Boone started and left after three innings. Jim Peterson held the Seahawks in check until the ninth when he put the first two batters on and left in favor of Mike Christopher.

Christopher came on to gain the win — his tenth straight against no losses. The ten straight wins is a new school record and the ten also ties the mark for most wins in a season.

"(Kenny) King (UNCW pitcher) was outstanding," Overton acknowledged. King went 12 innings before finally giving way to reliever Scott Altman, who took the eventual loss. "It's remarkable that he could go 12 innings after just three days rest and perform like he did.

All of the scoring came early — except for McGraw's slammer. By the middle of the fourth it was 4-4 and it stayed that way for the next nine innings.

East Carolina scored first, getting a run in the bottom of the first. Mark Shank led off with a walk and was sacrificed up. He took third on an infield out and scored on a wild pitch.

The Seahawks rallied to take a 3-1 lead in the top of the third. Mitch Wells singled up the middle and Reggie Redd walked. Bobby Reynolds grounded into a double play, leaving Wells at third. He scored on a single by Chuck Jones, and Gary Hall followed with his ninth homer of the season. The round tripper, his 19th career shot, gave him the career record for the Seahawks.

But the Pirates quickly stormed back to take a 4-3 lead in the bottom of the inning. Mark Cockrell and Robert Langston both singled and Shank walked, loading the bases. Hardison grounded to short, getting Shank at second, but Cockrell scored. With two away, Winfred Johnson hit a sharp liner down the first base line for a double, scoring both Langston and Hardison.

But the lead was short-lived as the Seahawks tied it in the top of the fourth with an unearned run. Tim Langmeyer singled and Eric Hall walked. Wells hit a grounder to short, erasing the runner at second, but the relay to first was overthrown, allowing Langmeyer to score on the misplay and tie it up.

From then on, it was a defensive struggle.

And there were some fine defensive plays. Witness: Mark Shank making a leaping catch at the fence in left on a ball to rob Eric Hall of a homer in the sixth; Hardison going behind second base and making an off-balance throw to first to nail Redd in the 12th; Chris Bradberry going back and making a diving catch to take away an extra-base, run-scoring hit from Bobby Bryant for the final out in the 13th.

And the Seahawks pulled off a few defensive gems of their own, including four double plays. The Pirates left a man on third in the fourth inning, and a double play

Vuckovich, Vukovich Both Turn In Winning Contests

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON

Their names are spelled almost the same so it's not surprising that Vuckovich and Vukovich are often misspelled. Just so there's no mistake, it was Pete Vuckovich who tamed the Chicago White Sox and George Vukovich who did in the Detroit Tigers.

Pete, a 32-year-old right-hander who missed most of the last two years with shoulder problems, recorded his first pitching victory since his Cy Young Award season of 1982 Wednesday night by scattering six hits in seven innings as the Milwaukee Brewers defeated the White Sox 3-2.

"I never doubted that I'd come back from my arm problems. I just didn't know how long it would take. Right now, my arm feels great," said Vuckovich.

George, a 28-year-old outfielder, drove in three runs with three singles, including the game-winner in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the Cleveland Indians a 7-6 victory over the Tigers.

"You don't become world champions by pitching around people. You go right at them," said Vukovich, who came into the game with a .209 average and delivered his winning hit after the Tigers pitched to him with first base open.

In other American League games, Oakland downed California 6-4, Boston edged New York 7-6, Toronto shelled Kansas City 10-2, Baltimore nipped Texas 2-1 and Minnesota pounded Seattle 10-0.

The Brewers and White Sox were tied on a two-run homer by Chicago's Harold Baines and a two-run double by Milwaukee's Charlie Moore. The Brewers won it in strange fashion in the sixth inning.

Mark Brouhard led off with a double against Chicago's Britt Burns and scored on Moore's apparent double to center field. However, the White Sox claimed that Moore failed to touch first base and the appeal was upheld by umpire Tim Welke, who called Moore out, nullifying his hit. Had it been the third out of the inning, the run would not have counted.

"Things are basically the same. I'm pretty much the same as I was then," said Vuckovich, whose last victory was a 4-3 triumph over Boston on Sept. 20, 1982. He then appeared in just three games in 1983 and missed all of last season after rotator cuff surgery. "There's no real difference other than I might be throwing a little harder now."

Indians 7, Tigers 6

With the score tied, Joe Carter walked with one out in the ninth and moved to second on a wild pitch by Aurelio Lopez. The Tigers elected to pitch to Vukovich and he ripped a hard line drive to right, scoring Carter.

"There were two balls and two strikes on him and Vukovich is hitting .220 or so," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "I don't think he's Mickey Mantle or anybody."

Cleveland took a 5-1 lead against Walt Terrell in the fourth inning, including an RBI single by Vukovich. He rapped another RBI single in the seventh to make it 6-2, but the Tigers tied it with four runs in the eighth, including Larry Herndon's two-run homer.

The Tigers, who roared to a 35-5 start last year, have lost five of their last seven games and are 8-5 overall. The Indians, who have won six of

Herrin Named To ECU Staff

Les Herrin, a four-year veteran of the Clemson University football staff, has become the newest member of the East Carolina University coaching crew, head coach Art Baker announced this morning.

Herrin, a 1971 graduate of Western Carolina, will coach the outside linebackers at East Carolina. His naming completes the Baker staff for the 1985 season.

Herrin went to Clemson in 1981, moving from Appalachian State, where he had served as defensive coordinator. At Clemson, he was also in charge of linebackers.

Herrin began his coaching career as an assistant at Rutherford-Spindale High School in Rutherfordton in 1972, moving on to become an assistant coach at Lexington High School in 1975. From 1977-79, he served as athletic director and head football coach at Central Davidson High School, posting a 29-6 record and winning three conference championships. From there he entered the college ranks at Appalachian.

A graduate of Waycross High School in Waycross, Ga., Herrin holds both undergraduate and graduate degrees from Western Carolina where he lettered four years in football. As a high school athlete, he lettered three years in football and baseball and two years in basketball.

Herrin, 37, is married to the former Shirley Andrews of Hillsborough and they have a son, Deke, 9.

"This is the most extensive search of any of the positions I've filled," Baker said of Herrin's hiring. "I feel he is one of the finest assistant coaches in the ACC and is no doubt one of the best recruiters in this part of the country. I recruited against him and he rarely loses a kid.

"He will add leadership and class to our program. I could not ask for someone better to join our staff."

Herrin's hiring brings to six the number of new coaches Baker had brought in for his staff. The others include Mike O'Cain, assistant head coach/quarterbacks; Don Powers, defensive coordinator; Wally Chambers, defensive line; Jeff Farrington, defensive secondary, and Ellis Johnson, linebackers/recruiting coordinator.

Andujar Bests Mets, Gooden

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

In a matchup of aces, the St. Louis Cardinals dealt the better hand.

"Andujar pitched just a little better," acknowledged New York Mets' Manager Dave Johnson after watching Joaquin Andujar best his own Dwight Gooden in a 5-1 Cardinal victory Wednesday.

Andujar pitched a five-hitter for his third victory of the season without a loss, while Gooden, last year's Rookie of the Year, had a 23-inning scoreless streak broken en route to his first loss in three decisions.

"He threw well," said Mets' first baseman Keith Hernandez of Andujar, a former teammate. "Joaquin's always an aggressive pitcher; he challenges the hitters, he's a power pitcher."

In the other National League games, Montreal defeated Philadelphia 7-6; Cincinnati trimmed Houston 8-3; Los Angeles whipped San Francisco 4-2; Chicago beat Pittsburgh 5-2; and San Diego edged Atlanta 3-1.

Until the Cardinals broke through against Gooden for two runs in the seventh inning, the Mets' ace right-hander had surrendered only three hits. But after Andy Van Slyke's RBI single snapped a scoreless tie and Mike Lavalliere's sacrifice fly, Gooden left for a pinch-hitter. St. Louis was able to score three insurance runs in the eighth before Danny Heep's RBI double ruined Andujar's shutout in the ninth.

In addition to his strong pitching, Andujar helped himself by bouncing off the mound to make three outstanding defensive plays.

"He's always been a fielder," St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog said. "I told him he's got the greatest shortstop (Ozzie Smith) that's ever played. Let him go after the ball."

But Andujar was diving all around. He said, "I don't trust him."

Expos 7, Phillies 6

Tim Raines scored twice and drove in two more with a pair of extra-base hits to lead Montreal over Philadelphia.

Raines lashed a run-scoring triple off Phillies starter John Denny, 1-2, to highlight a three-run fifth-inning rally. He drove in another run with a double in the sixth.

"I'm getting aggressive at the plate and I'm starting to find the holes," Raines said. "It's about time I got some ribbies because I've had the opportunities, but I just haven't capitalized on them."

Ozzie Virgil belted two solo home runs for Philadelphia, which also got solo ninth-inning homers from Garry Maddox and Mike Schmidt, his first of the year and 426th of his career, tying Billy Williams on the all-time list.

Reds 8, Astros 3

Dave Concepcion and Duane Walker belted home runs and Eric

Davis used his speed to break a 3-3 ninth-inning tie as Cincinnati overcame Nolan Ryan's bid for his sixth career no-hitter to beat Houston.

Ryan, who has a record five no-hitters, had another with one out in the seventh when Dave Parker singled. Then Walker hit his first homer and Esasky later scored on an error to give the first-place Reds a 3-1 lead.

After the Astros tied it in the eighth on Jose Cruz' two-run single, the Reds won it with a five-run ninth. Davis drew a one-out walk off Frank DiPino, 0-2, stole second and was balked to third before scoring the tie-breaking run on Nick Esasky's fly ball.

Concepcion homered for one insurance run. Eddie Milner knocked in two more with a single and Manager Pete Rose drove in another with a single, his 4,110th hit, leaving him 81 behind Ty Cobb.

Dodgers 4, Giants 2

Dave Anderson and Al Oliver drove in runs in the second inning after San Francisco pitcher Bill Laskey made a wild throw, the most damaging of five errors in the game, and Los Angeles went on to beat the Giants.

Relievers Tom Brennan and Ken Howell of the Dodgers combined for five shutout innings. Brennan, 1-0, got the victory over Laskey, 0-2, and Howell struck out eight and allowed two hits in 3 2-3 innings while earning his third save.

The eight strikeouts were a career high for the 24-year-old Howell, who arrived in the major leagues midway through last season. He allowed two hits and walked only one batter.

"I knew the Giants would be aggressive at the plate, trying to get out of their slump," said Howell.

"The wind can hurt you here (at Candlestick Park) and it can help. Today it was blowing in and making the ball move more than it usually does."

Cubs 5, Pirates 2

Leon Durham hit a two-run homer and Dave Lopes had three hits and drove in two runs as Chicago defeated Pittsburgh and handed the Pirates their seventh loss in eight games.

Steve Trout, 3-1, earned the victory despite allowing both Pirates' runs and seven hits before leaving after five innings with a sore right elbow. Lee Smith bailed reliever Warren Brusstar out of a two-out, none-out jam in the seventh and worked the final three innings for his fourth save.

Sixto Lezcano's solo homer in the fourth was only the second of the season for the Pirates and their first since their home opener April 12. The Pirates went 97 innings without a homer.

Padres 3, Braves 1

LaMarr Hoyt and Goose Gossage combined on a five-hitter and Carmelo Martinez belted a two-run homer to lead San Diego past Atlanta.

Hoyt, 2-1, worked seven innings and gave up one run, struck out four and didn't walk a batter. The Padres' right-hander has not walked a batter in 27 innings this year. Gossage worked the final two innings to record his third save.

Woody Peele

The East Carolina University Faculty Senate joined the crowd earlier this week in asking that freshmen be declared ineligible for future varsity competition.

The move is being made in a supposed effort to give freshmen a chance to adjust to college academics before being handed the pressures of college athletics.

We suppose, because we're not sure that the intent will actually be met.

There was a time, some ten or so years ago, when college freshmen were not eligible for football and basketball. They were eligible for all other sports. (Unless there is some proposal upcoming which we do not know about this is how it will be under the current propositions.)

Back in those days, however, freshmen continued to practice and play games as either junior varsity or freshmen teams. They did not play as many games, but they still played. Perhaps the pressure of varsity competition was not there, too, but certain pressures did remain.

Let's take a look at how this rule would affect a school like East Carolina. Right now, few freshmen play on the varsity football level. Only a couple of them have reached the stage where they can play and be helpful. At the same time, however, they do practice with the team — a valuable asset to them in their future career.

In basketball, East Carolina has been unusual in using freshmen. Two years ago, without the freshmen present, there would have been no varsity basketball team. Only three players were non-freshmen.

While Coach Charlie Harrison has done all he can to reverse this trend, a program is still in the building process at East Carolina. Some freshmen are going to have to be used — if available — to continue the program.

Basketball players have a couple of months to get into the swing of things in college, and that is helpful. Under a freshman program, little would change with the exception of some travel time.

We would assume, too, that — all things being equal — this rule would also apply to women's basketball teams.

One thought which perhaps has not entered into these proposals is the cost factor. Currently football programs in the Division IA level are limited to 95 scholarships, while basketball teams are allowed 15. With freshmen ineligible, additional grants would probably be sought by athletic programs to maintain a pool of players at the present level. Add that to the cost of outfitting up to three freshman teams (football, men's and women's basketball), hiring additional coaches, traveling, and you have a major cost factor involved. Universities such as East Carolina already have a hard time — some of their programs, like ours in baseball, are already underfunded for the level of competition.

So perhaps the honest thing to do is to admit that what we have is not perfect. There are problems. We agree that stiffer admission policies are needed and we believe that East Carolina is currently striving to improve those. Coach Harrison's basketball players are all making progress toward a degree, and football coach Art Baker has said that he doesn't intend to recruit anyone who doesn't have a chance to graduate.

Certainly that is the duty of the institution.

But the NCAA needs to face reality and go ahead and award scholarships for at least a five-year period instead of the current four unless there is a red-shirt year. Most athletes today are going to take five years to graduate anyway even if they use their eligibility over a four-year period.

There have been arguments that students in other areas of the university have outside commitments that slow them down, but few spend the hours outside of their studies in practice, playing and traveling that athletes do.

And certainly athletes provide a service for the university through the publicity generated. It has been shown that successful athletic programs have an effect on enrollment.

So instead of forbidding freshmen to play with the varsity teams, we would, instead suggest, that the following be done:

- That the tough admission policy currently being aimed for by NCAA be maintained and not watered down.
- That an orientation program for incoming athletes be formulated, presenting to them the problems they will be facing. Such a program would be tough and hard-hitting. Athletes should be kept on a strict academic program under supervision, with minimum levels of performance demanded to continue participation, even on a practice basis.
- That the NCAA provide that scholarships could be continued for students showing progress toward their degrees following the expiration of their athletic eligibility and that these scholarships not be counted in the limitations for eligible athletes.
- That every effort be made to recruit athletes who have a legitimate opportunity to complete a college program and graduate.

Such a program would, we believe, solve many of the problems now faced by the student-athlete.

stranded a man at third in the eighth. In the 11th, Hardison singled and Johnson was intentionally walked with one away when Mont Carter struck out. Johnson was caught off base and in the ensuing rundown, Hardison tried to score from second, only to be cut down as he slid in home. In the 12th, the Pirates tried a suicide squeeze, but bunter Langston popped the ball up instead, resulting in another double play.

But the 13th proved to be the unlucky number for the Seahawks and the lucky one for the Pirates.

With one away, Hardison singled and Bradberry got a hit. Johnson was intentionally walked, loading the bases. Carter grounded to first, getting Hardison at the plate for the second out.

That brought up McGraw, who hit what looked like an ordinary fly to right for the final out. But the breeze pushed it just enough to carry it over the fence and start the Pirate celebration.

East Carolina's record goes to 31-10 overall and 12-4 in league play. It was the final ECAC-South game of the year for the Pirates. UNC-W falls to 28-19-1 overall and 10-5 in the conference. They have a three-game set left with American and are tied

Rose Thinclads Slip By Eagles

Rose High School captured the final relay event of the day and nipped Northeastern of Elizabeth City, 74-66.

Rose held only a three-point lead going into the final race of the day after the Eagles had dominated competition in the field events.

Marvin Felton and R. Evans were double winners for the Eagles. Felton took the long and high jumps while Evans won both of the hurdle events.

Overall, Rose won just five individual events to Northeastern's nine, but the Rampants captured all three relays, including a four-hundredths of a second win in the 400-meter relay.

Both teams are now 7-2 on the season. Rose travels to the Colonial Classic in New Bern on Saturday.

Thomas Leads Piston Victory

By WILLIAM R. BARNARD
AP Sports Writer

Isiah Thomas knows just how the New Jersey Nets feel.

"Last year ended so fast that it was the worst feeling I've ever had in basketball," Thomas said Wednesday night after knocking the Nets out of the National Basketball Association playoffs by hitting a 15-foot jumper with two seconds left to give the Detroit Pistons a 116-115 victory.

"We were up so high and then went down so low," the 6-foot-1 point guard added, referring to one-point and overtime losses to New York that knocked Detroit out of the 1984 postseason. "I don't ever want that to happen again. I feel for the guys on New Jersey. It's a tough way to lose. I know, because I've missed shots like that at the end."

The victory gave the Pistons a 3-0 sweep in the best-of-five, first-round series and advanced them into the Eastern Conference semifinals against the Boston-Cleveland winner.

In other playoff games Wednesday, Utah tripped Houston 112-104, Chicago edged Milwaukee 109-107 and Washington routed Philadelphia 118-100.

In tonight's games, Boston is at Cleveland and Dallas is at Portland in series the Celtics and Trail Blazers lead 2-1.

On Friday night, Milwaukee is at Chicago, Philadelphia at Washington, Denver at San Antonio and Houston at Utah. The Bucks, 76ers, Denver and Utah each lead 2-1.

Thomas made his game-winning shot from behind the basket and with the outstretched arm of 6-8 Buck Williams in his face.

"Isiah's last shot was only something a super talent like him can make," Nets Coach Stan Albeck said. "It's the type of shot we wanted him to take."

"I was there right on top of him, and Isiah made a great shot," said Williams, who scored 28 points to share game-high honors with teammate Albert King. "We played as hard as we could, but Detroit played better."

Detroit trailed 115-110 with 1:39 to play after Williams hit two free throws. But four free throws cut the deficit to one with 26 seconds left.

The Nets in-bounded the ball to Micheal Ray Richardson, who was trapped by Thomas and Long near the New Jersey bench.

"He was trying to call timeout, but he lost his balance and fell out of bounds," said Thomas, recounting how the Pistons got the ball back with 19 seconds on the clock.

After a timeout, Thomas circled the Nets defense, took advantage of a Terry Tyler screen on Richardson and fired in the fallaway jumper.

"I just shot the ball," Thomas said. "I think every kid dreams of dribbling down the final seconds and then scoring."

The Nets led 33-22 at the end of the first quarter, 63-58 at the half and 91-84 after three quarters.

Detroit led on eight occasions in the game, five times in the first three minutes and three times in the final seven minutes. None of its leads was more than two points.

Bullets 118, 76ers 100
 Washington outscored Philadelphia 30-13 in the third quarter to turn a close game into a rout.

Cliff Robinson, who saw no playoff action in his first five NBA seasons, scored 14 of his 21 points in the third quarter, giving him one more than the entire Philadelphia team for those 12 minutes.

"In the third quarter, we played incredible defense," Washington Coach Gene Shue said. "We did everything right, and got all the breaks we needed to keep it going."

"Everything they did was right, and everything we did was wrong," 76ers Coach Billy Cunningham said. "I can't think of a phase of the game that they didn't outplay us ... or outcoach us."

Gus Williams, held to 27 points in the first two games, led the Bullets with 28, while Jeff Ruland added 25.

Moses Malone led Philadelphia with 17 points, but Andrew Toney, who scored 31 in Game 2, managed only eight on 3-for-16 shooting.

Bulls 109, Bucks 107
 Chicago got 35 points from Michael Jordan, including seven points in the final three minutes and the game-winning baseline jumper with 17 seconds left, to stay alive in its series with Milwaukee.

Orlando Woolridge added 28 points for the Bulls, who won their first playoff game since 1981.

Jordan broke a 104-104 deadlock with 1:48 left. But Sidney Moncrief's three-point play gave Milwaukee a 107-106 advantage.

Moments later, the Bucks lost the ball on a 24-second violation, and Jordan hit his game-winning jumper after a Woolridge shot was blocked.

David Greenwood hit one of two free throws to give Chicago a 109-107 lead, then stole Milwaukee's inbound pass with seven seconds left to clinch it.

Terry Cummings hit for 37 points and Moncrief added 28 to lead Milwaukee.

Jazz 112, Rockets 104
 Adrian Dantley scored 29 points and Thurl Bailey added 22 to lead underdog Utah over Houston.

Dantley had nine points in the fourth quarter and Bailey 11 as the Jazz easily overcame an 82-80 deficit by outscoring the Rockets 32-22 in the period.

The Jazz also outscored Houston 39-16 at the foul line for the game and the Rockets' Twin Towers — Ralph Sampson and Akeem Olatunji — both got into foul trouble. Sampson fouled out after playing 34 minutes and scoring 20 points, and Olatunji finished with 26 points.

The Jazz are seeded sixth in the Western Conference, while Houston is third.

Heart Fund Golf Is Set

The Third Annual Pitt County Heart Association Golf Tournament will be played at Brook Valley Country Club on May 14, it has been announced.

The tournament is open to amateur women and men in teams of four. The winning foursome will advance to the Pro-Am Golf Championship where they will compete for a $10,000 purse.

That championship will be held at Midines Resort, Pinehurst, on August 10-11. Each foursome will be teamed with a pro on Friday, August 9.

The tax deductible entry fee for the Brook Valley tournament is $120 per four-person team, and includes greens fees. An auction and dinner following the tournament are also included.

Proceeds from the tournament will help fund the American Heart Association's research into the causes, treatment and prevention of American's number one killer, cardiovascular disease.

For more information or to enter the tournament, contact Dave Martin at Brook Valley, 756-5500.

AWAY WE GO

NEW YORK (AP) — Move over Nellie Bly, they have plans to top your legendary round-the-world journey.

A group headed by David Gershon, the director of the 1980 Winter Olympic Torch Relay which went from Greece to Lake Placid, N.Y., is organizing the first Earth Run.

It is scheduled to begin in May, 1986, at the United Nations in New York and end there four months later.

"We are taking the Olympic Torch Relay concept one step farther, taking it around the world and creating it as an event," Gershon said.

Engineer Loses Fight On Artificial Heart

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jack C. Burcham, a retired train engineer who pinned hopes for an extended life on an experimental artificial heart, died 10 days after his implant when a large amount of blood in his chest cavity inhibited his heart's pumping, his doctors said today.

Dr. Allan M. Lansing, medical spokesman for the Humana Hospital Audubon implant team, said Burcham's condition had deteriorated rapidly beginning late Wednesday afternoon. He died at 9:48 p.m. after his left lung filled with blood, Lansing said.

Doctors initially did not know the specific cause of death, he said, but an autopsy identified a large "jelly-like" clot around the artificial heart.

The upper chambers of his heart were remnants of his own natural organ. The lower chambers were made up by the plastic and metal device.

"The cause for the sudden deterioration was compression of the upper left chamber of the heart by the blood clot within a confined space," Lansing said, adding that the condition is known as cardiac tamponade.

The condition normally would show up much earlier than it did in Burcham's case but the rigidity of the plastic-and-metal heart masked the problem for a while, Lansing said.

The source of the bleeding is still not known, Lansing said.

Burcham, 62, of Le Roy, Ill., was the fifth and oldest recipient of a permanent artificial heart. He had suffered kidney problems since before the April 14 implant and was put on dialysis twice this week to cleanse his blood, Lansing said.

Burcham also had had difficulty when doctors discovered that the Jarvik-7 was too large for his chest during the implant surgery, and he suffered severe bleeding the day after the operation.

He was the second artificial heart recipient to die, but his time with the device was the briefest. Three men with Jarvik-7 hearts — William J. Schroeder and Murray Haydon in Louisville and an unidentified man in Sweden remain tethered to machinery that drives the device with puffs of air.

Lansing said Burcham's kidney problem "was aggravated by the stress of the operation and the need for transfusions" after the excessive bleeding.

The kidney function was stable early Wednesday "but not satisfactory" Lansing said. He was placed on dialysis in the afternoon but doctors noticed substantially decreased breathing sounds from the left chest late in the afternoon and dialysis was stopped, he said.

X-rays showed "a good deal of fluid had accumulated on the left side," Lansing said.

Burcham's blood pressure began falling about 8:30 p.m., and doctors detected blood in the lungs and saw that Burcham was having more difficulty in breathing.

There was rapid deterioration of his condition in the 30 minutes before his death.

Implant surgeon William C. DeVries, who was attending a heart conference in downtown Louisville Wednesday evening, was called to the hospital about 9 p.m. and said he was in Burcham's room of the coronary care unit about 15 or 20 minutes before doctors turned off the key that controlled the life-support machinery.

At the time of his death Burcham was hooked not only to the heart's drive system but also to a respirator that controlled his breathing.

DeVries said everyone in the room was "really saddened when we found there was nothing more we could do."

Asked how he felt at the time, DeVries recalled a comment made by Burcham just before the implant operation. "I remember him saying, 'You put the heart in and I'll take care of it,'" DeVries said.

Family members at the hospital called Burcham's eldest son, Jack B. Burcham, Wednesday night to tell him of his father's death.

"I don't think it had anything to do with the (artificial heart) operation," the younger Burcham said in a telephone interview from his Le Roy, Ill., home. "I really feel that dad was probably too weak" to have survived.

DeVries had said four days before the implant that he considered Burcham to be the strongest of his four artificial-heart candidates. On Friday, Humana Inc. spokesman Bob Irvine had described Burcham as being "right on the normal track now. His kidney function is returning to normal."

But the younger Burcham said he believed his father's condition was not as strong going into the transplant as doctors had indicated.

He said that he did not think the implant was a waste and that he believed the program should continue. "I think everyone should have a chance to have a heart," he said.

Burcham suffered a near-fatal heart attack Oct. 9 while working on the roof of his house. Until then, relatives and doctors said he had had no unusual medical problems.

His condition began to deteriorate after that, and on March 28 he was readmitted to St. Joseph Hospital in Bloomington, Ill., with congestive heart failure. The implant was considered after he failed to respond to aggressive therapy and medication.

New Baboon Transplant Prepared

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The surgeon who put a baboon heart in the infant known as Baby Fae said he is preparing for another such transplant but will not be ready for at least a month.

Dr. Leonard Bailey said Wednesday that he is still collecting and analyzing data on the experiment with Baby Fae, who received the animal heart Oct. 26 and lived for 20 days before dying from problems associated with her kidneys and with rejection of the transplanted heart.

"There is no data coming out of our laboratory that suggests we are not on the right track," Bailey said.

He spoke at a conference on heart replacement held in Louisville under the sponsorship of Humana Heart Institute International, where three artificial hearts have been implanted since November.

One of the three recipients, Jack C. Burcham, died Wednesday night of unspecified causes after 10 days on the Jarvik-7 heart.

In other presentations, two of the conference's participants predicted that as many as 90 hospitals will be doing heart transplants a year from now, despite a government estimate that only 400 donor hearts will become available each year.

And Dr. William S. Pierce of the Hershey Medical Center in Hershey, Pa., said he had come very close on several occasions to implanting the Pennsylvania State University heart in a patient for the first time.

Bailey said he was revising procedures for the next baboon heart transplant in accordance with suggestions made by the National Institutes of Health.

Among the changes will be a requirement that Bailey seek a human donor heart before transplanting a baboon heart into an infant.

Bailey was criticized at the time of the Baby Fae operation for assuming that no human infant donor heart was available and consequently not requesting such a heart from organ procurement agencies.

Dr. Magdi Yacoub of the Harefield

Hospital in Middlesex, England, who has transplanted a human heart into a 7-day-old infant, said he was lucky to find an infant heart. "It is quite difficult, though not impossible," he said.

The surgeons who predicted a continuing shortage of human donor hearts said the problem would become worse in the next five years.

Five hundred hospitals have expressed interest in beginning to do heart transplants sometime during that period, the surgeons said.

Dr. Bartley Griffith, a heart transplant surgeon at the University of Pittsburgh, said that 30 centers were now doing heart transplants in the United States.

Casual Contact Doesn't Spread Disease AIDS

WASHINGTON (AP) — While deadly, the disease AIDS does not spread easily and seldom strays outside of the high-risk groups most affected by it now, Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler says.

"The more we learn about AIDS, the clearer it becomes that AIDS is not easily transmitted to those outside the high-risk groups," Mrs. Heckler said Wednesday in a speech to the District of Columbia Medical Society.

She said the best evidence of that view is the absence of the disease among medical people who treat victims of AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome.

"Think about it for a moment," she said. "It's amazing. Thousands of medical personnel in the United States dealing each and every day with thousands of AIDS patients — and not one doctor or nurse or other medical personnel to our knowledge has contracted the illness."

"That is good news for the medical profession — but it is also good news for the family, friends, neighbors and employees of AIDS patients," she said. "AIDS positively is not transmitted by and through casual contact."

Mrs. Heckler spoke on the current status of AIDS research after attending a scientific conference in Atlanta last week involving some 2,400 researchers from the United States and 50 other countries.

The news there was not good, she said. The number of cases continues to rise, and the long incubation period — an average of about 27 months — means thousands of cases may lie dormant now, but will appear soon.

The Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta had recorded 9,760 cases of AIDS in this country as of Monday, with 73 percent occurring in homosexual or bisexual men. CDC said it has recorded 4,760 deaths; no one has recovered from it.

While research is proceeding at an urgent pace, Mrs. Heckler said, the government will miss her April 1984 prediction that a vaccine would be ready for testing by spring of 1986.

She said the scientists upon whom she relied in making that prediction "were perhaps more optimistic than recent developments would warrant."

But the news is not all bad, she said. Not only is the disease relatively hard to transmit, but the definition of groups considered at high risk of getting the disease is getting narrower, she noted.

Hemophiliacs have been high-risk because of their need for frequent transfusions of a blood factor that encourages blood clotting. But new heat treatment for that blood factor kills the AIDS virus, she said, cutting the risk for such blood recipients.

Others receiving blood transfusions have been at some undefined risk. But new screening tests for donated blood, approved by FDA over the last two months, reduce that risk, she said.

The principal high-risk group is homosexual men, who catch the disease through the exchange of body fluids. Mrs. Heckler said many of those men have cut their risk by reducing their exposure to sex partners.

The disease appears in heterosexuals, Mrs. Heckler said, but "it plays a very minor role." She said less than 1 percent of the cases involve heterosexual contact, primarily among people whose sexual partners are in a high-risk group or who frequent prostitutes.

More Training Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Modern efforts to achieve the eternal dream of painless dentistry generally are safe and effective, but some dentists are inadequately trained in sedation and anesthesia techniques, experts say.

A group convened by the National Institutes of Health said Wednesday that dental schools and post-graduate education programs need to strengthen training in anesthesia to make sure all dentists are qualified in this important aspect of care.

The panel, after considering dental anesthesia methods during two days of presentations, said in a statement that pain-killing techniques used in dental offices are associated with relatively low rates of death or injury to patients.

However, it said even this record can be improved by more research on pain control and dental anxiety.

Tar Heel Charged In N.Y. Cocaine Ring

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — A North Carolina man is accused of involvement in what federal employees say was the largest cocaine laboratory ever discovered in North America.

Thomas Warren Hall, 54, was arraigned before a federal magistrate Wednesday just after being released from Veterans Administration Medical Center here. The hospital would not say why Hall had been hospitalized.

Hall is charged with conspiracy to manufacture and traffic cocaine. Linda Blumenstock, public relations officer at the veterans hospital, said Hall was discharged from the hospital about 11 a.m. Wednesday and was arrested by officers of the federal Drug Enforcement Agency.

Hospital officials allowed the arrest to take place in a private room at the hospital after Hall was discharged, she said.

Walking slowly and attached to a portable oxygen tank that allows him to breathe, Hall was jailed to await a bail hearing Friday.

Hall had earlier been questioned by federal authorities about a huge cocaine-manufacturing laboratory discovered last week on a farm he bought late last year in Minden, Montgomery County.

"We're suggesting in the affidavit... that there is probable cause to believe that he (Hall) knew what was going on — that he agreed to participate in it (the drug operation)," said Assistant U.S. Attorney John Miller.

In Greensboro, N.C., Monday, federal authorities presented evidence linking Hall with the remains of a cocaine-producing facility in North Carolina.

U.S. Attorney Ken McAllister said none of the charges brought against Hall Wednesday stemmed from the North Carolina investigation.

The arrest took place after nearly two weeks of investigations by federal, state and local authorities in both New York and North Carolina.

The investigations began when a modular mobile home located on Hall's New York farm exploded and burned the night of April 11. Federal authorities later said the trailer contained the largest cocaine laboratory ever found in North America.

Hall was in the hospital at the time of the fire. Three Colombian men were arrested near the farm the following day.

Chemicals found in a warehouse near the burned lab could have been used to process $700 million worth of cocaine per year, DEA officials said.

Last week, North Carolina DEA agents, along with state and local law enforcement officers, searched four residences in Guilford County, N.C., and found the remnants of another large cocaine-manufacturing facility.

A Gibsonville garage belonging to Hall's sister, Irene Hall Ditto, 60, and her husband, Alfred Crockett Ditto, 48, apparently housed the remains of the largest cocaine-processing plant ever found in North Carolina, DEA officials said. The Gibsonville lab had the capacity to process nearly $500 million worth of cocaine, they said.

An affidavit used to secure the search warrant to the Ditto property indicated Hall used the address to receive mail and that phone calls between the New York farm, Hall's Asheboro address and the Gibsonville farm had been placed.

ARRESTED — Thomas Warren Hall, 54, of the Greensboro area, is led from his arraignment Wednesday in Albany, N.Y., by U.S. marshalls. Hall, who owns property in New York state which housed the largest cocaine laboratory yet found in North America, was arraigned on charges of conspiracy to manufacture and traffic cocaine. Officers Break $500,000-A-Week Ring

By The Associated Press

Federal and state officials said Wednesday they have broken up a cocaine ring that was selling at least $500,000 worth of the drug each week in Eastern North Carolina.

Nine people have been arrested on federal charges, including four men from Harnett County.

Doug McCullough, assistant U.S. attorney, said agents and deputies have seized $206,677 in property and cash and 4 kilograms of cocaine — two in Miami, where two of the defendants were arrested, and two in Harnett County.

"This is a very large and sophisticated cocaine ring," McCullough said. "We believe they're all interconnected."

He estimated the ring was selling 2 kilograms to 6 kilograms of cocaine a week. A kilo weighs 2.2 pounds and is worth about $40,000 wholesale, McCullough said, or $250,000 to $500,000 retail.

Ervin Hometown Mourns Loss Of Its Famous Son

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Flags flew at half-staff in Morganton as residents mourned the death of "Senator Sam" Ervin, a constitutional champion who acquaintances say was "just plain folks" despite the accolades he earned.

"He walked uptown to the post office six days a week, just to stop and speak to people and take and give advice," said Andrew Kistler, mayor of the town of 14,000. "He was just plain folks. There was no pretense about Sam."

Ervin, 88, died Tuesday in Winston-Salem of respiratory failure. He will be buried Friday in Forest Hills Cemetery after a 2 p.m. funeral at the First Presbyterian Church in Morganton.

The body of Ervin, who headed the committee whose Watergate hearings led to the downfall of President Richard Nixon, was taken home Wednesday to the Blue Ridge foothills he loved.

After two decades in Washington, Ervin retired from the Senate at the height of his popularity in 1974 and went home "to watch those glorious Burke County sunsets."

Kistler said Ervin loved the town because "he was just one of the people. He could come home to Morganton and was nobody special."

The town so far has planned no special ceremonies to honor its famous son, but Kistler said there were plans to set aside Ervin's law office at the renovated Burke County Courthouse.

"Sam was the epitome of what I think man on this planet should strive for," Kistler said. "He was honest, humorous, a common man — and he cared."

After returning to Morganton, Ervin amazed colleagues half his age with energetic legal research, witty books and articles, lengthy interviews and letters to politicians — all inspired by the Constitution.

Textile Products Made In U.S. Aren't Always 'All-American'

GREENVILLE, S.C. (AP) — Officials at three textile companies involved in the "Crafted with Pride in USA" campaign say some of their mills have used imported yarn and fabric recently.

Spokesmen for Riegel Textile Corp., Burlington Industries and Springs Industries said this week the practice does not contradict the patriotic promotion. They said foreign materials have been used in small amounts, and sometimes American companies do not make necessary products.

The practice of using imported products is not illegal, but U.S. Rep. Carroll Campbell said it disturbs him.

"We would hope that if we were fighting against imports, that everybody running all of our textile plants would use American products," the South Carolina Republican said.

Campbell was in Ware Shoals for a Congressional hearing two weeks ago when a former Riegel worker stood up to say he had witnessed truckloads of yarn and fabric from the Far East, South America and Central America come into the plant during the last three years.

In an interview, 45-year-old Larry Ridgeway said the imported goods bothered him, too.

"I worked around the loading docks a lot and the cloth was coming in from Taiwan, the Republic of China, South Korea, Thailand and Brazil. Some days they would unload four or five trucks of cloth," said the former frame tender and security guard.

"How should we know if we're buying a pair of blue jeans or something that said it was made in the United States except the cloth was made overseas?" he asked.

Ridgeway was one of about 900 workers who were laid off by Riegel when the plant shut down this spring.

Ned Cochrane, Riegel corporate secretary, said his company has experimented with weaving and finishing foreign-made products in an effort to save jobs. But he said, "It's not something we did on a regular basis."

He said several other U.S. textile companies do the same thing and predicted the practice will increase as more imported goods flood the retail outlets here.

"In order to compete with the goods coming in, textile companies have to give apparel manufacturers — who are their customers — decent prices," he said. "In order to make those prices and keep textile mills open and keep the rest of the jobs, you may see more of this."

Two other large textile companies in the Carolinas said they sometimes run foreign-made fabrics in their finishing plants or buy imported yarn.

"The overriding reason we would go outside for yarn or anything else would be that it cannot be had in this country," said Dick Bird, spokesman for Burlington Industries.

Burlington, the nation's largest textile company, has seven plants in South Carolina.

"There might be rare instances where it would also be a better price break," Bird added.

However, "Any use of imported goods would be infinitesimal as far as our total production goes," he said.

Bob Slough, a spokesman for Springs Industries said his companies buys some international goods for its operations, but he said that volume is small.

22 Freight Cars Derail In Town

JAMESTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Twenty-two cars of a northbound freight train derailed near the center of town Wednesday, after apparently striking a tractor-trailer rig that had rolled onto the tracks.

The accident posed no danger to the public and no one was injured, the North Carolina Highway Patrol said.

Officials said the rig had rolled across a parking lot, a gravel road and weeded lot before stopping on the railroad track.

Truck driver Doug Hefner of Hickory told authorities he spotted the runaway rig after delivering groceries at an ice cream and sandwich shop. He said he tried to move the truck but jumped clear when he spotted the train.

Senate Rejects Demos' Presidential Primary

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The 44-Senate passage of a bill to end the Democratic presidential primary met only token resistance from Democrats and none from Republicans quietly pleased to see their primary squashed.

"It's the greatest thing that's happened to us," said Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, prior to Wednesday's action.

Democrats had postponed Senate action on the bill, which originally would have ended both primaries, saying an amendment to exempt the GOP might result in a public relations coup for Republicans. Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said Democrats dropped their objections because they didn't want to be accused of trying to "burn" Republicans.

"It is felt the process is entirely too long," Rand told the Senate. "It becomes, in the opinion of many, a beauty contest on television..."

"We don't want to debate it," Ballenger said of the change of heart. "Other senators can do that, but we're walking on eggshells."

While Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, questioned the constitutionality of the move, Sen. John Jordan, D-Alamance, was the most vocal opponent on the floor.

"I don't think we should ever take away the right of the people to vote," he said. "I think we should do everything we can in our power to encourage people to go to the polls to vote." Rand told Jordan the statewide primary costs the state $700,000, but Jordan countered that people will go to the polls anyway. "I don't think it costs the state one penny," he added.

Joining Jordan in voting against the bill, which now goes to the House, were Sens. Bill Martin, D-Guilford, Russell Walker, D-Randolph, and Ralph Hunt, D-Durham.

In other legislative action: The chancellor at the University of North Carolina at Asheville needs an assistant, even if the appointment of a former Gov. Jim Hunt aide created a controversy over the job, an Asheville legislator says.

"We have a new chancellor," Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said when the issue of funding the job came up at the Base Budget Appropriations Committee on Education. "He's a real go-getter who needs somebody to help him. Whether or not he got the right person to help him is another matter."

The special assistant post was created through a budget transfer in the waning days of the Hunt administration and filled by Hunt aide Wayne McDevitt, who ran the western governor's office in Asheville. The university did not follow normal procedures of advertising or interviewing for the post, sparking charges the job was a political post created specifically for McDevitt.

Nesbitt said all new positions created in the university system by budget transfers should be considered by the committee, not just the $78,000 post at UNC-Asheville or a similar position at UNC-Wilmington.

The UNC-Asheville position is contained in the continuing budget now being considered by the committee, while the UNC-Wilmington job is covered in the expansion budget that will be considered later.

Rep. Joe Hege, R-Guilford, asked the Base Budget Appropriations Committee on Education to cut a proposed increase in community college library funds from 8 percent to 4 percent as recommended by Gov. Jim Martin.

Hege said the proposal is justified by lower inflation rates.

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, the committee chairman, said a subcommittee was studying the effects of inflation on libraries and other budget items. Rep. C.R. Edwards, D-Cumberland, the chairman of the subcommittee, said a compromise between the proposed increase and Martin's increase might be worked out by his panel.

Warren said final approval for the community colleges budget and other budget sections would not be given until the subcommittee completes its study.

The House Insurance Committee approved a bill that would prevent insurance companies from assessing insurance points against drivers convicted of exceeding safe speed.

Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, said the Legislature last session blocked the companies from assessing points against those convicted of driving 10 mph or less over the speed limit. He said the bill did not include exceeding safe speed, which is considered a lesser charge. He said insurance companies were assessing points for people convicted of exceeding safe speed, while not charging extra points for those convicted of the more serious charge.

The committee rejected an amendment that would have made the bill effective Oct. 1, 1985, rather than Jan. 1, 1986. Insurance company officials said the extra time is needed to notify insurance companies and include the bill in rate considerations.

The House State Government Committee delayed action on a bill that would eliminate a Marine Resources Center advisory board, but add the chairmen of three local advisory boards to the state Marine Science Council.

Rep. Charles Evans, D-Dare, said the advisory board was one of many boards and commissions the Public Policy Research Center recommended be dissolved.

The chairman of each local advisory board for the three Marine Resources Centers would be included on a reconstituted 16-member Marine Science Council under the Department of Administration to keep local contacts with the state.

Rep. Frank Ballance, D-Warren, asked that the bill be delayed a week so he could study how the appointments would be made. The governor will appoint members to staggered terms, and no legislators may be appointed to the council.

"What I'm worried about is if any Democrats will be left on this council," Ballance said.

The Senate voted 43-6 to approve a bill that would speed divorces in uncontested cases.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said the bill, which must go to the House for concurrence in a Senate amendment, would let a judge find facts and make determinations where both parties agree they have been separated for the requisite one year.

Swain said the bill would prevent deliberate delays by embittered spouses but would not otherwise make it easier to get a divorce.

The Senate voted 40-9 against an amendment that Sen. Bob Somers, R-Rowan, offered to prevent using the bill unless at least one party lived in the county where the legal action occurred. Somers said it would prevent collusion, but Swain said it would do nothing to strengthen the bill.

The House and Senate, meeting jointly, overwhelmingly approved Gov. Jim Martin's appointments of Mebane M. Pritchett, Cary Caperton Owen and Mary Morgan to the state Board of Education. Pritchett, a Lenoir attorney, and Ms. Morgan, of Onslow County, are Democrats while Owen, an Asheville businessman, is a Republican.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, filed a bill to increase the penalties for cheating on state income taxes from a two-year misdemeanor to a five-year felony. He said the bill, which he expects will be supported by revenue officials, will help cut the money lost to tax fraud.

A bill clarifying that the Advisory Budget Commission has consultative rather than rulemaking authority over government agencies was enacted 41-6 by the Senate.

Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, was the only member to speak against the bill on the floor, saying, "It does not go far enough. The Advisory Budget Commission can (still) say, 'You'd better go along with this or else.'"

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said he will appoint a delegation to attend former Sen. Sam Ervin's funeral and the state Senate adjourned in his honor Wednesday.

Sen. Dan Simpson, R-Burke, said Ervin never satisfied his thirst for knowledge.

"He never sought fame, he never sought fortune and he never sought the limelight," Simpson said, but he added that Ervin found all three because of his wisdom and honesty.

Controversy Stirs Over State's New Guide For Schools

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Somewhere deep within the 5,000-page teacher's guide now being considered by the State Board of Education is a suggested exercise for fifth-graders — design a postage stamp for the world.

The Department of Public Instruction staff members who drafted the plan say the project is a simple lesson in social studies.

Others say it's dangerous. The Competency-Based Curriculum, developed to support a new mandatory Standard Course of Study adopted by the state board this month, has come under scrutiny from a group of conservative critics who claim it is anti-family, anti-free enterprise, anti-American and anti-Christian.

Ann Frazier of Roanoke Rapids, a spokeswoman for North Carolina Conservatives United, the parents' group opposing the document, said the curriculum has an "interwoven theme throughout for the one-world government."

Words such as "collectively" and "compromise for the good of the group" are used throughout the curriculum, she said. Their use is "more indication that we are to become one in all thought processes," Mrs. Frazier said.

The guide's backers, however, dismiss the objections as nonsense. "I think if you look at the career record of people like (Superintendent of Public Instruction) Craig Phillips ... the notion that is being propagated that this is an insidious document to undermine the American family" is unfair, said Barry Hager, director of People for the American Way.

Hager's organization, with its state headquarters in Winston-Salem, says that while the Competency-Based Curriculum could be improved, its purpose is not to undermine the family, religion or a free enterprise system.

Mrs. Frazier estimates that her organization has "thousands upon thousands" of members. She bases the figure on the number of people who come to hear its representatives speak and the number of people who invite them to speak.

She testified against the guide last week before the State Board of Education. At the meeting, board members asked Phillips to explain the teacher's guide in more detail at the May board meeting.

State officials say the teacher's guide represents the consensus of some 8,000 teachers who took part in preparing the $1 million curriculum.

"It's their next-door neighbors and fellow church-goers who have written it and they don't seem to understand that," said Joe Webb, assistant superintendent for instruction in the Department of Public Instruction, referring to N.C. Conservatives United.

He said the group's concern about the postage stamp exercise is "typical of pulling out one specific line from 5,000 pages."

Mrs. Frazier pointed out other exercises that upset her, including a ninth-grade assignment to write a constitution for a perfect society and one for sixth-graders to draw national symbols for an imaginary nation.

Webb said Mrs. Frazier's organization is worried that the schools are "teaching that this is an interdependent world, that families are interdependent." But he said "we live in an interdependent society and it's important that students understand that."

The problem is, Webb said, that the group then makes a "quantum leap from interdependence to one-world government."

"That's not the intent at all," he said.

Mrs. Frazier said another exercise, one asking students to describe the method that Socrates used to teach people to act correctly, teaches students "to look to philosophers for the answer to problems and not to your faith."

Although Webb said he did not recall that specific assignment, he said he thought "philosophy has done a great deal toward solving the world's problems and that doesn't take a thing away from faith."

Senate Panel Kills Pay Study

RALEIGH (AP) — A Senate committee has approved killing an outside consultant's study of state jobs after stripping a House provision to replace the independent survey with a legislative commission.

"I do not believe that under this bill, a thorough investigation of wage discrimination is possible with the climate we now have," Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, told the Senate Appropriations Committee. "It is their (supporters') wish and mine that we repeal the study."

Ms. Woodard, a supporter of the independent study approved last year, said she voted to kill the legislative study because supporters "don't need a fake kind of study that raises false expectations."

"We would rather have nothing than be hurt by it (an in-house study)," Ms. Woodard said after the meeting. "What we needed was what we approved last year."

The bill, which has already cleared the House, repeals a study of pay for dissimilar state jobs by Psychological Services Inc. That study slipped through the Legislature last year as part of the appropriations bill late in the session.

Martin Vows To Keep Pushing For Gubernatorial Veto

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin vowed to seek a gubernatorial veto again in 1987 after a House committee rejected by two votes a bill that would have put the issue on next year's election ballot.

"A lot of issues don't win the first time around — North Carolina's governor hasn't had veto power for 208 years," Martin said after Wednesday's vote. "This just means we've got a long haul ahead. ... Our state reptile is the turtle, and you never get anywhere unless you stick your neck out."

Meanwhile, outnumbered Republicans mapped strategy to force a House vote they say would put everyone present on record as favoring or opposing the veto.

"One way or another, we are going to give every House member an opportunity" to take a stand, said

Rep. Ray Warren, R-Mecklenburg. The Constitutional Amendments Committee rejected 7-5 a bill calling for a 1986 statewide referendum on the proposed constitutional amendment. Rep. Ray Sparrow, D-Wake, joined the panel's four Republicans in voting against defeating the bill.

GOP lawmakers said they would offer a minority report today that would enable the House by majority vote to reject the committee's recommendation and take up the bill.

But Speaker Liston Ramsey indicated he would rule the minority report out of order on a parliamentary technicality. In that case, Republicans said they would try another method that would require a two-thirds vote to revive the bill.

Either way, passage of the veto amendment would require support of three-fifths of the House, or 72 members — a long shot for a chamber where Democrats outnumber Republicans 82-38.

Martin's best opportunity for success was in the committee, but he acknowledged he didn't expect to win. "We had a pretty good nose count."

He had mounted a major public relations offensive to pressure committee members, including a campaign-style swing through their constituencies Monday.

"I hope the members of the Legislature start listening to the people of their districts instead of the Democratic leadership, because the people are ultimately going to decide," said Martin. "It is almost un-American" that the Legislature continues resisting the veto, he said.

Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore, sponsor of the amendment to let governors reject entire bills and items in the state budget, told the committee that polls indicate over 60 percent of North Carolinians favor the veto.

"Veto power is recognized ... as a key element in the traditional power balance, Craven said. "North Carolina is missing one of the checks ... in the system of checks and balances."

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, quoted the Federalist Papers — essays written in the late 1780s to generate support for adopting the U.S. Constitution — as saying the presidential veto is designed to protect the chief executive's constitutional rights and thwart legislation hastily enacted and contrary to the public interest.

"In (Martin's) five-stop media blitz of this state, what example was cited of an instance of either of these reasons? Not a single one," said Mavretic. "Because when the issue is calmly and sensibly debated ... it is without substance."

Sparrow offered a substitute bill to let the Legislature override a gubernatorial veto by a simple majority instead of the three-fifths vote in Craven's bill. It also would require legislative confirmation of most gubernatorial appointments.

Warren hotly protested that Sparrow's proposal was "ridiculous" and "not a veto at all."

The committee voted 8-4 to replace Craven's bill with Sparrow's, then unanimously rejected Sparrow's bill before voting down Craven's measure.

Opponents Say Repeal Of State's Food Tax Would Be Costly To Stores

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's plan to eliminate the state sales tax on food but continue local food taxes would cause longer checkout lines and force stores to buy new cash registers, critics say.

"You would have to go to a lot of expense," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir. "You've got problems as far as I'm concerned."

Martin's tax-cut package would repeal the 3 percent state food tax but not the 1½-cent local-option tax. Bill Rustin, lobbyist for the North Carolina Merchants Association, said most cash registers now in use cannot be programmed to count only part of the tax.

The only choice for many businesses would be to buy new registers, each costing $25,000 to $30,000, Rustin said. Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, said the chief officer of one 14-store chain had told him the replacement would cost his business nearly $500,000.

"This would be a terrible problem

..." said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland.

Rustin also complained that store workers would have to undergo extensive instruction on which items would be exempt from taxation as food and which wouldn't.

Stores would have to segregate and ring up separately a customer's purchases, creating longer lines, he said.

But Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman, R-Iredell, sponsor of Martin's package, said he was "finding it extremely difficult to be very sympathetic." Stores managed to cope before the food tax was imposed in the early 1960s under former Gov. Terry Sanford, Redman said.

"I'm not sure it poses the monumental problems that we've heard," said Redman.

The debate arose Wednesday as a Senate finance subcommittee continued a line-by-line review of Martin's program to repeal the intangibles and inventory taxes and the sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines.

The subcommittee is expected to hammer out a tax-relief bill incorporating parts of the Martin plan and a House package approved last week that features repeal of the inheritance and gift taxes, partial repeal of the intangibles and inven-

Anti-Phosphate Bill Is Approved

RALEIGH (AP) — A House committee approved a bill to limit phosphates in household laundry detergent despite objections that housewives would be carrying water for industry and local government.

Rep. Joe Hudson, D-Union, told the Water and Air Resources Committee that a ban on phosphorus only puts off the inevitable decision to tackle the problem at municipal wastewater treatment plants.

"I don't think it's right to say to the little old housewife out here, 'You're the only one in the state that's contributing to this problem,'" he said Wednesday before the bill was approved 17-8. "If we're going to do this thing, let's do it right and go right to the water treatment plant."

However, Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, sponsor of the bill and committee chairman, said controlling laundry detergents would reduce the eventual cost of cleaning the water at treatment plants.

"It could mean the difference between biological treatment and more expensive precipitation," he said. "I believe that a substantial dent can be made in the amount of phosphorus flowing into our lakes with the legislation before us."

Environmentalists say phosphorus contributes to fresh-water algae growth, which absorbs oxygen from the water and kills fish.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, agreed with Hudson that the bill would just "freeze time" for two or three years before the increasing population "overtakes the effect of this bill." But he added, "It buys the time the state needs to resolve the issue of capital outlay" for wastewater treatment equipment."

Public Radio Fund Appeal Passes $2 Million Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nationally coordinated on-the-air tamborine thumping to raise money for public radio stations has brought pledges of more than $2 million in the first three days of a week-long effort.

Some 44,000 donors, including a priest in Louisville, Ky., whose pledge was matched by nuns in a nearby convent, have called the 207 radio stations participating in "Public Radio Campaign '85" to pledge support, National Public Radio reported Wednesday.

The donors have ranged from a North Carolina man who said he likes to use classical music from his public station to soothe the ewes in his lambing barns to Sharon Percy Rockefeller, a board member of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting who pledged $675 to WETA-FM in Washington and challenged listeners to match it. They did.

"It was really great, because it was absolutely spontaneous," said Kim Hodgson, WETA general manager. "It gave us a great lift."

The National Public Radio network is coordinating the campaign for the first time as a way of helping stations pay off $5.4 million in loans they took on to keep the financially troubled NPR solvent. The fund-raising revenues will revert to the local stations.

The NPR effort features some inventive twists on the standard money-raising tactics of the non-commercial stations. KPLU in Tacoma, Wash., and KJZZ in Phoenix are competing to be the first to meet a $70,000 goal. In the interim, they're giving their listeners a running account of the race.

In Reno, Nev., Wednesday's local portion of NPR's "Morning Edition" program was broadcast from a hot-air balloon floating over the city. The listener support was described as "enthusiastic."

Before the effort is over, the likes of former President Gerald R. Ford and singer Pearl Bailey are expected to be among more than 100 personalities making a proposal to match it.

Even program hosts such as Susan Stamberg of the popular NPR news broadcast "All Things Considered" are making pitches on the network.

For Ms. Stamberg and other NPR staff members, public fund-raising is a new experience. In the past, bringing in money from listeners was the sole responsibility of the stations.

CLINT EASTWOOD

Eastwood Seeks Pentagon's Help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Actor Clint Eastwood arrived for a Pentagon meeting surrounded by fans but left with his current film project, about the exploits of an Army sergeant in recent wars, wrapped in secrecy.

Eastwood, in a 20-minute meeting Wednesday with Michael I. Burch, assistant secretary of defense for public affairs, discussed the possibility of getting official backing for the film, but Burch said no decisions were made.

Eastwood is exploring different script ideas "and he asked me not to discuss it," said Burch, whose duties include conducting reviews of movie and TV scripts to determine if the Defense Department will lend assistance.

The Pentagon is reimbursed by producers when it does help. A refusal can mean extra expenses for a movie-maker, who must find military props elsewhere.

Eastwood got Pentagon help for the 1982 production of "Firefox," in which he played a retired Air Force pilot who stole a new Soviet fighter.

Oscar's Midas Touch Strikes

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — One month after the 57th Academy Awards, Oscar's legendary Midas touch is being felt at the box office for the year's big winner, "Amadeus."

There has been a golden caress, too, for the documentary winner, "The Times of Harvey Milk," whose producers are amazed at the worldwide interest in the film in the aftermath of the March 25 ceremonies.

Yet F. Murray Abraham, named best actor for his role as the demonic Salieri in "Amadeus," and Dame Peggy Ashcroft, best supporting actress in "A Passage to India," have yet to realize immediate reward.

"We figure the Academy Award has added $5 million in gross for 'Amadeus,' and will continue to add more in the coming months," said Charles Glenn, vice president of advertising, publicity and promotion for Orion Pictures.

So far, "Amadeus" — which garnered eight Oscars, including best picture — has sold $43 million worth of tickets in the United States and Canada, and it remains among the year's top 10 box-office winners.

"It has performed consistently since it opened on Sept. 17," Glenn said from his New York office. "In fact, it has done extremely well for a picture that is three hours long and thus can't provide the turnover of a 90-minute picture."

"The eight awards definitely helped. The Oscars became a direct catalyst with people who had held off going to 'Amadeus.' They say, 'This picture is a winner; I want to see what the Academy considers the best of the year.'"

Meanwhile, "Places in the Heart" gained little from Sally Field's Oscar as best actress. The Tri-Star film had already been in release for six months and now is reaching the end of its run with a respectable gross of $35 million.

What has the Oscar brought for the acting winners? In the case of Miss Field, her career needed no help. She has an active production company and is currently filming "Murphy's Romance" in Arizona.

Haing S. Ngor, best supporting actor for "The Killing Fields," however, continues working as counselor to refugees at the Chinatown Service Center in Los Angeles, making frequent appearances for refugee charities. Recently returned from the opening of "The Killing Fields" in Taiwan, Ngor has acquired an agent, Marion Rosenberg of the Lantz Office, who said another film for the Cambodian is being negotiated.

Richard Schiechen, producer of "The Times of Harvey Milk," said the film had attracted new bookings because of the Oscar.

"The Oscar has made a big difference," he said from his office in New York. "Before the awards, we had 35 cities lined up to play the picture. Now we have 60. We're all amazed. Usually documentaries don't get released much in theaters."

As yet the foreign-language winner, the Swiss-made "Dangerous Moves," lacks an American distributor. Said a foreign film publicist who spoke on condition of anonymity, "There may be slightly more interest because of the Oscar, but the picture is strictly for the art-house audience."

GOVERNOR MARTIN TO TALK WITH VIEWERS OVER LOCAL CABLE TELEVISION SYSTEM

Friday, April 26, 8-10 p.m.
Cable Channel 9

Viewers of Greenville Cable Television will have an opportunity to go straight to the top for answers to their questions about state government issues.

Governor James G. Martin, who has adopted the town meeting concept as a way of communicating directly with the people of North Carolina, will answer viewer telephone calls during a live appearance on OPEN/net. Appearing with Governor Martin will be Secretary Howard H. Haworth of the Department of Commerce and Secretary Aaron J. Johnson of the Department of Correction.

OPEN/net, the Open Public Events Network, is a cable television network which brings to the people coverage of state government meetings and an opportunity to talk directly to state government leaders in a live telephone call-in session.

During the first hour of the telecast, viewers will watch a videotape of Governor Martin's Newton town meeting. In the second hour, the governor will be taking viewer telephone calls on-the-air in the OPEN/net studio in Raleigh.

Guglielmo Marconi was born on this day in 1874. Marconi sent the first radio message across the English Channel, in March of 1899. In 1901, he sent the letter "s" in Morse code across the Atlantic to a wired kite 2,000 miles away. In 1912, an oceanliner called the Californian was close enough to the Titanic to receive radio messages from it and to help rescue it. But its radio operator was taking a nap and didn't get the message.

The bidding:
 South West North East
 1 NT Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: Five of ♠.

Don't let the looks of a hand beguile you. Relatively simple looking contracts at a low level can require very tricky play. Consider this example.

South's opening bid of one no trump gets passed all round. West makes his normal lead of his fourth-best heart. Plan the play.

South has six fast tricks and a 4-4 club fit. Obviously, that is the suit which is most likely to yield a seventh trick. However, before you go about your business you must be careful about your play to the first trick. If you hold up one round routinely, the defenders can continue a heart and remove an entry to the dummy that you might need later on. So play low from the board and win the ace in your hand.

If clubs break 3-2, you have no problem. So you have to think about 4-1 distributions. If West has four clubs to the ace, there is no way you are going to make a second trick. If East has four clubs to the ace, you can guarantee two tricks in the suit by leading twice from the table toward your hand.

However, that will not work if East has four clubs the West has the singleton ace. Can you protect against that distribution as well? Yes. How? By leading a low club from your hand at trick two!

As the cards lie, that fetches the ace. But let's assume that only low clubs appear. West wins the trick and continues with a heart to dummy's king. Now you lead another club toward your hand and put in the king when East plays low. If West wins the ace, you win two club tricks by playing the queen next. If the king wins and West shows out, re-enter dummy with a diamond and lead another club. It's just a matter of technique.

Fertilizer Plant Burns

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A $4 million fire that sent glowing smoke hundreds of feet into the air Wednesday destroyed the Royster Co. fertilizer plant in west Charlotte, authorities said.

The plant contained major quantities of at least three toxic chemicals — anhydrous ammonia, sulfuric acid and a toxic nitrate solution called 4-50 — in addition to processed fertilizer.

But authorities said the chemicals, while toxic, were not highly explosive and that fumes posed no threat to neighborhood residents.

Ruptured ammonia lines leaked fumes into the air at dawn, but officials said only a few nearby families were evacuated for a few hours.

There were no known injuries to employees, firefighters or nearby residents. But some homeowners used garden hoses to protect their homes as fiery embers rained from the sky.

At its peak, the fire was visible at least five miles from the four-acre compound of wood and metal buildings about three miles northwest of downtown.

More than 60 firefighters, plus crews from six volunteer units throughout Mecklenburg County and dozens of police officers, responded to the fire that began at 11:38 p.m. Tuesday.

Downed power lines left a four block area around the fire in darkness. Even after the fire was brought under control at 3 a.m., firefighters were plagued by leaking ammonia from lines leading into the plant.

Assistant Fire Chief Robert Ellison said the cause of the fire had not been determined. Witnesses said the fire flashed out of control within minutes after it began.

Patient In Good Condition

DURHAM (AP) — Thanks to a new drug that suppresses natural responses that could lead to the rejection of his new heart, North Carolina's first heart transplant patient may be able to eventually return to his job as a plumber, doctors say.

Thomas Harrison, 55, of Durham, was reported in good condition Wednesday at Duke University Medical Center after being taken off a respirator on Tuesday, one day after the surgery.

"The heart is functioning very well," said a statement from the team of doctors that performed the operation. "He has been removed from the respirator and he is breathing well on his own. He remains alert and awake and is in good condition."

Harrison "was totally disabled," by his heart condition, said Dr. Andrew S. Wechsler. Harrison was suffering from a heart ailment known as giant cell cardiomyopathy, a heart inflammation that stiffens heart muscle.

Wechsler said Harrison is isolated in intensive care and that the next few days are considered the critical period when "hyper acute rejection" may pose a problem.

Bush Cancels Visit

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Vice President George Bush on Wednesday canceled his scheduled appearance at the Walter Royal Davis Library dedication ceremony at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Bush, who presides over the U.S. Senate, was forced to cancel his plans to attend Friday's ceremony because of a possible vote on the federal budget in Washington, according to a statement issued from his press office.

"The vice president is required to be here in Washington on Friday for the potential vote on the budget process," the statement said. "He regrets very much having to cancel his trip to Chapel Hill."

Gov. Jim Martin will replace Bush as the featured speaker. The dedication has also been rescheduled for Saturday because former Sen. Sam Ervin's funeral will be held Friday in Morgantown.

Spill Brings Evacuation

ELIZABETHTOWN, N.C. (AP) — Homes and businesses along a two-mile stretch of U.S. 701 about two miles north of Elizabethtown were evacuated Wednesday after a transfer truck spilled a corrosive ammonia onto the roadway, officials said.

The road remained closed for about four hours as firefighters contained the spill and righted the truck's overturned canisters. A small amount of the chemical leaked onto the roadway from the truck, which was filled with other chemicals, but officials said it posed no threat to the environment.

Authorities said Tim Hobgood, a driver for Worth Chemical Co. of Durham, was hauling the chemicals to Wilmington when two of the truck's tires blew out on N.C. 87 east of Elizabethtown, causing the vented canisters inside the truck to overturn.

After the flat tires were fixed, Hobgood continued about four miles to Cape Fear Tire Co. on U.S. 701 where he called the Bladen County sheriff's office. Bladen deputies said they closed the road and evacuated nearby buildings because they were concerned the ammonia would reach the hydrogen peroxide in the truck.

State Directors Fired

RALEIGH (AP) — Directors of state facilities in Black Mountain and Swannanoa were fired Wednesday, state Department of Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk said.

Don L. Pagett, director of Black Mountain Regional Mental Retardation Center, and Bettie Ruth Albright, director of Juvenile Evaluation Center in Swannanoa, received termination letters from Kirk that will take effect Friday.

"I am aware of these dismissals and have approved them," Kirk said Wednesday night. "I am in the process of reviewing the some 330 exempt positions in the department, and in that process, these two individuals have been replaced."

He said a decision on the fate of the director of Alcoholic Rehabilitation Center in Black Mountain — an exempt position currently held by M.F. "Buddy" Hall — will be made within the next three weeks.

Smokeless Cigarette To Be Tested

NEW YORK (AP) — You crave a cigarette after a good meal, but you can't light up because the diners at the next table will attack you with their forks. Does this sound familiar?

A company in San Antonio hopes it does. On May 1, Advanced Tobacco Products will begin consumer testing on a smokeless cigarette for use "in areas where it's illegal to smoke or socially unacceptable to smoke."

The patented product, called Favor, looks like a cigarette but is made of plastic and contains a nicotine solution instead of tobacco. Inhaling it releases a vapor that the company says feels the same as smoke and provides the same satisfaction for smokers.

"We're not making any ... claims that it will help you quit, nor do we make claims that it's any better for you," said Jim Simonsen, the company's executive vice president.

Six Favors have the nicotine equivalent of 20 cigarettes, he said, and would cost about the same. A consumer could save the unused part of a Favor for later.

Testing will begin on the East Coast in preparation for the product's commercial introduction next September in Austin, Texas, followed by Dallas-Fort Worth and then Houston, Simonsen said.

"From a financial standpoint, we don't have the ability to roll out (the product) on a national basis," he said.

Favor will be available in regular, light and menthol versions. A package of six would cost the same as a pack of 20 cigarettes.

Although Favor is a tobacco product, Simonsen said his company was hoping that its smokeless nature would allow it to advertise on television.

Rose Objects To Customs Merger Plan

Although federal officials say consolidating the Wilmington U.S. Customs district into a Virginia district would have only "minimal" effects, U.S. Rep. Charlie Rose says the plan "defies logic."

Rose learned Wednesday of the plan to consolidate customs districts in Wilmington, Norfolk, Va., and Washington, D.C., into a district in Norfolk from a letter from the U.S. Treasury Department, said Ivan Swift, Rose's administrative assistant.

"The impact on North Carolina ports would be minimal, since the ports should continue to provide the same level of service," Bruce E. Thompson of the U.S. Treasury Department wrote in a letter to Rose.

In a return letter, Rose said, "I totally disagree with your conclusions claiming that reducing the personnel in Wilmington won't hurt that port. I believe that the administration is in violation of the appropriations legislation which prohibits such proposed reductions."

Swift said he has been told the cuts will mean the loss of 10 Customs positions in the state.

"Every scintilla of evidence shows that the port of Wilmington more than pays its way," Rose said in his letter to Thompson. "How removing import specialists from Wilmington doesn't hurt Wilmington defies logic. How transferring them to Norfolk doesn't help Virginia defies logic."

The treasury department said the "general thrust of our fiscal year 1986 budget is to achieve savings through the consolidation of certain customs functions, and, when possible, to reduce unnecessary levels of administration."

But if the consolidation occurs, many shippers would use ports with import specialists because if there's a problem "somebody will be on the spot to make a decision," Swift said.

According to a study by economists from several North Carolina universities, the Customs cuts would cost the state more than 70,000 jobs, $1.1 billion in wages and benefits and $153 million in tax revenue by 1989.

The study, commissioned by the N.C. World Trade Association, says Customs' cost-cutting plans would cost the state $600 for each dollar saved.

Copies of the study have been sent to members of the North Carolina congressional delegation.

"I am sure some members of the congressional delegation and the governor are going to view this as a political slap in the face," Rose wrote to Thompson. "To my way of thinking, however, it is fiscal ineptness and just a bad example of being penny wise, but pound foolish."

Furniture Mart Buyers Show Tight Money

HIGH POINT (AP) — Manufacturers say the Southern Furniture Market, which finishes its nine-day run Friday, met but did not exceed their expectations.

"Retailing truly has been quite difficult for the last six to eight weeks and as a result, dealers came to market not as anxious to spend money as we would like," said Art Prillman, president of Stanley Furniture, maker of wood bedroom and dining room furniture. "But we're quite pleased with the placements we've made at this market."

Lee Eisen, executive vice president of Universal Furniture, said his company considered the market excellent, based on the number commitments from buyers.

But he said there was a "considerable amount of comparison shopping going on, probably more so than usual. (Buyers) were looking for unusual values in a very competitive atmosphere. I think there was more of that at this market than normal."

J. Phillips L. Johnston III said Erwin Lambeth, which makes both wood and upholstered furniture, had a "good but not great market" at the semiannual display of products for the nation's furniture retailers.

But he said, Norman Perry, a lamp-making subsidiary, had a banner time.

"This was the most sensational lamp market in the history of Norman Perry," he said.

Eric Bauer of Bauer Lamp called the market "fantastic. We're looking at the largest increase we've ever had," Richard Fenton at Nora Fenton said his showroom had been "inundated. We wrote more business than ever at this market. It's mind-boggling."

Little actual ordering or buying of furniture is done at the market. The furniture retailers usually make commitments to stock certain categories and styles. In the coming six weeks, manufacturers' sales representatives will visit the retailers to try and convert the commitments into orders.

The reports from sales representatives will determine just how good the market was, said Bernard Wampler, president of Pulaski Furniture, which makes wood specialty pieces and some bedroom and dining room furniture.

"Our commitments have been good and if they hold firm for the next 30 days until we can get them on paper, I can tell you we had a good market," he said.

The market results are particularly important in North Carolina, where the furniture manufacturing industry employs more than 80,000 people and produces more than one-third of the nation's furniture.

Confidence Vote

CHARLOTTE (AP) — NCNB Corp. shareholders gave their management a strong vote of confidence on its South African policies as protestors demonstrated against the banks business loans to the country.

Of the 26 million shares represented at the bank holding company's annual meeting Wednesday, 4.8 percent were voted in favor of a church group's resolution attacking NCNB's South African loans. But holders of another 7.1 percent abstained on the issue, and a Baptist minister representing the group said that was enough to claim some victory.

NOTICE OF SPECIAL BOND REFERENDUM IN THE TOWN OF BETHEL, NORTH CAROLINA
A special bond referendum will be held throughout the Town of Bethel between 6:30 A.M. and 7:30 P.M., on Tuesday, May 14, 1985. The referendum will be submitted to the qualified voters of said Town the following question:
Shall the order adopted on April 2, 1985, authorizing not exceeding $500,000 Sanitary Sewer Bonds of the Town of Bethel, North Carolina, for the purpose of providing funds, with any other available funds, for enlarging, extending and best referendum in the manner provided in said question, be approved?

The order hereinabove set forth contains a statement of the purpose for which the bonds are authorized by the order referred to in said question. If said bonds are issued there is an amount sufficient to pay the principal and interest thereon which will be levied against taxable property in the Town of Bethel.

For said referendum the regular registration books for all 1979-1982 model cars for elections in the Town of Bethel will be used and the records will be maintained at the Public Library located at 520 Evans Street, Greenville, North Carolina, telephone (919) 752-4177.

In addition, registration applications will be accepted by and qualified persons may register by appointment with the office of the Town Clerk located in the Town Hall, Bethel, North Carolina, telephone (919) 752-4177.

Further, certain persons in the armed forces and their spouses, certain veterans, certain citizens working with the armed forces, and members of the Peace Corps may register by mail at any time prior to said referendum in the manner provided in Article 21 of Chapter 163 of the General Statutes of North Carolina and in paragraph 1 of the order provided in said referendum.

Those residents of the Town who have not voted in either of the two most recent successive presidential elections or in any other election conducted in the period between the two most recent elections considered to be registered under Pitt County's permanent registration system.

The last day for registration of those not now registered under Pitt County's permanent registration system is Monday, May 13, 1985.

Any qualified voter of the Town who is qualified to vote by absentee ballot in said special election, may also vote in the Pitt County Board of Elections for an absentee ballot. Any qualified voter who is qualified to vote by absentee ballot pursuant to the absentee ballot provision of Section 163-24 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, may also apply for an absentee ballot as provided by Section 163-24 of the General Statutes of North Carolina.

Persons who are not certain whether they are registered to vote or qualified to vote by absentee ballot or who desire further information concerning the registration process or said referendum should contact the Pitt County Board of Elections at the office of said Board mentioned above.

The registration books for elections in the Town of Bethel will be open to inspection by any registered voter of the Town during the normal business hours of the Pitt County Board of Elections for 5 days when the office of said Board is open, and such days are challenge days.

The Registrar, judges and other officers of elections appointed by the Pitt County Board of Elections will serve as the election officers for said referendum.

The Pitt County Board of Elections will conduct said referendum.

The voting place for said referendum, subject to change as provided by law, is the Town Hall in Bethel, North Carolina.

Answer to yesterday's puzzle.

CRYPTOQUIP

 JYEDI MFJVYUEN EVY LVMUP
 FERY JP NIERP DIEVEDLYVN.
Yesterday's Cryptoquip: CRUCIAL DAY OF REST FOR MOST RAINCOAT SALESMEN: SUNDAY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: D equals C

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY, APRIL 26, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
 from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You can make considerable progress towards gaining your long-range hopes and wishes, especially where family affairs and property conditions are concerned.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) A family discussion can bring fine ideas for your own advancement in the days ahead. Be at your charming best.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Know what it is that your partners expect of you, so listen carefully to their ideas and try to please them.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) New financial arrangements with those with whom you work can lead to greater production and benefits accruing.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Go after the entertainment that most pleases you and be happy. Remember what it is that would please your mate.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) Have a quiet talk with a family tie about real estate and other holdings and you get the right slant on how best to handle them.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Contact that friend for whom you have much affection and you get the favor you need at this time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Show your admiration for a bigwig and you get fine suggestions for your advancement. Be sure of yourself and be happy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You get new ideas that can help you to analyze your true position in life and how to better it. Take command of your own life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) You may think your obligations are too much for you to handle, but if you consult with an expert, they become easy.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You are more appreciated now by both associates and friends and they give good ideas how best to advance in life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Help kin to get the house in fine order and add art pieces to make home more attractive and charming.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You are inspired to gain your aims and can do so with relative ease, especially if you use your charm.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she should not be rushed into anything or making decisions since your progeny is a stickler for making accurate plans and then carrying through with them meticulously even though you may think your progeny is slow. Provide with as fine an education as you can.

IRS Speeds Up Processing Of Tax Returns

WASHINGTON, April 24 — The Internal Revenue Service, working to avoid paying $1 billion in overdue tax refunds, is chipping away at a backlog of unprocessed individual returns that totals 36.6 million.

The agency is 9.3 percent behind the processing pace at this time last year. But just two weeks ago, the number of processed returns was down 20 percent.

"We are pleased with our progress," IRS spokesman Steve Pyrek said Wednesday in reporting that more than 6.4 million returns were processed last week alone, up 29 percent from a year earlier. Through last Friday — four days after the filing deadline for most Americans — the IRS had received 86.7 million returns and processed 50 million of them.

During the same 16-week period last year, the same number was filed but the IRS had processed 55.2 million.

The 10 regional service centers that process returns have been as much as 60 percent behind the 1984 pace, and the IRS blames the snafu on a new computer system that was installed last November to replace 20-year-old equipment. Delivery of the computers was several months behind schedule, and officials now say they did not allow enough time to program and test the system before putting it to work.
