FIRES BURN THROUGH FOREST — A North Carolina Forest Service spotter plane moves along the fire line, directing operations, as flames eat through the Croatan National Forest in Craven County Thursday. A log house and a pump house were destroyed in the fire, but no one was injured, Carteret County Fire Marshal

Firefighters Beef Up Force As Craven Fire Rekindles

CAPE CARTERET, N.C. (AP) — Residents evacuated from about 200 mobile homes were allowed to return to their homes early this morning before a fire that's burned about 6,000 acres in Carteret County broke out again, officials said.

The fire, which had been brought under control late Thursday night, broke out "about daylight," Dan Killingsworth of the N.C. Forest Service said. An additional air tanker and a small plane were added to the arsenal that had been used to fight the blaze, he said.

He said he had "no word" on any evacuations.

Killingsworth said the fire had now burned "somewhere in the neighborhood of 6,000 acres, but I can't give you a definite figure."

A log house and a pump house were destroyed in the fire, but no one was injured, Carteret County Fire Marshal J.E. Harrell said today. He said the fire was brought under control just before 2 a.m. today.

"This morning, we're going to make an assessment of the situation," Harrell said.

Meanwhile, dry conditions were expected to continue into the weekend as dry, gusty winds and temperatures in the 80s are forecast, the National Weather Service said.

Because of the dry conditions, the N.C. Division of Forest Resources has continued its ban on outdoor burning throughout the state.

Residents of the Pender Park Mobile Home Park were evacuated Thursday night after the fire jumped a road and moved toward the trailer park and adjoining campgrounds, said David Fields, another Carteret County sheriff's department dispatcher.

"It is licking at the doorstep," Fields said Thursday night before the blaze was controlled. "It is circling the park."

Earlier Thursday, the fire forced the evacuation of the Lake View Mobile Home Estates and the Eckerd Foundation's boys youth camp, known as Camp Sam Hatcher, east of Cape Carteret, Fields said. About 60 youths were evacuated from the youth camp, but he did not know how many people left the trailer park.

Reagan Seeks Review Of Nicaragua Options

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, his aid plans blocked by Congress, today ordered a review of political, economic and other steps that could be taken against the leftist government of Nicaragua and in support of the U.S.-backed guerrillas.

One option, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, could be to seek money from outside groups for the Contra rebels.

Speakes said Reagan had directed Secretary of State George Shultz and National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane "to begin a review of the full range of options with regard to U.S. policy toward Nicaragua. Over the next several days, the administration will be reviewing the full family of measures that can be taken to influence the situation in Nicaragua."

"We will not be specific on the options under consideration. They do include political, economic and other measures," he said.

Speakes said, however, that no plans were contemplated for U.S. military action. "I wouldn't raise that scare tactic," he told reporters at a briefing.

He added: "The goal of the policy review is to influence the behavior of the Nicaraguan government, influence the situation in Nicaragua, to achieve our policy goals there of a free society, ready to have free elections — the immediate goal being an opportunity for the Sandinistas to talk with the people who have problems with the way they run the government."

On the heels of a House vote that killed plans for $14 million in aid for the anti-government rebels, Speakes said Congress "has in a way compromised the U.S. position as far as Central America. It is now back on the shoulders of the administration to execute its policy there. Without congressional cooperation, as evidenced by the House ... it is back on our shoulders to take some initiative."

Asked whether the administration might encourage private groups to finance the anti-Sandinista rebels, the spokesman said, "That's always an option," adding, "We will explore the congressional route too."

As to whether there are other sources of federal aid Reagan could tap, Speakes said:

"I don't know. If they do exist, I think that would be an option."

Speakes said most of the options being considered probably would not require congressional approval.

Speakes said the review — which would include the CIA — will be done "on a short-term basis." But he declined to be pinned down on when a report would be delivered to the president.

During attempts to strike a compromise with Congress for funds for the Contras, Reagan had offered to hold U.S. talks with the leftist Sandinistas. With aid now blocked by Congress, Speakes appeared to withdraw Reagan's offer.

The spokesman said negotiations with the Sandinistas would not be appropriate now.

He suggested that some congressmen regretted their vote against funds for the Contras in the light of revelations that Nicaraguan chief Daniel Ortega will soon travel to Moscow.

Speakes accused the Sandinistas of "talking peace out of one side of their mouth and cozying up to the Soviets with the other side."

He was asked whether the options being considered might include economic sanctions, a blockade or breaking diplomatic relations.

"I wouldn't go into any of the options except to say the full family of measures, which includes political, economic and others," will be

ECU Graduation Planned May 4

East Carolina University will confer up to 2,813 graduate and undergraduate degrees and the university's third honorary doctorate at the 76th commencement on May 4.

Fifty two medical degrees, representing the largest graduating class in ECU medical school history, will be awarded and one doctorate in pharmacology conferred at the school of medicine convocation on May 3. Heart surgeon Dr. Michael DeBaKey of Houston will deliver the convocation address.

U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole, a native of Salisbury, will be the commencement speaker at outdoor exercises in Ficklen Stadium at 10 a.m. Saturday. She will be awarded the honorary doctor of letters degree.

ECU's only previous honorary degrees were awarded in 1983 to Dr. Leo Jenkins, chancellor-emeritus of ECU, and to former U.S. Sen. Robert B. Morgan, an ECU alumnus and former chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

The tentative list of degree candidates announced by the office of the registrar includes 753 graduate degrees and 2,060 bachelor's degrees.

In addition, for the first time at ECU, Army ROTC graduates will be commissioned. ECU's Army ROTC unit was established three years ago. The university's Air Force ROTC has functioned on campus since the 1940s.

A band concert is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m., with the traditional academic procession in caps and gowns to begin marching onto the field at 9:40 a.m.

Custody Hearing Set Today For Youth Accused In Slaying

A hearing was scheduled for today in juvenile court to determine if a temporary secure custody order should be continued for Jason Emanuel, who allegedly shot his father to death Tuesday night at the Emanuel's Pine View Trailer Park home.

The eighth-grader has been in temporary custody at the regional juvenile detention center off the Belvoir Road since Harvey Ray Emanuel, 34, died after being shot in the back with a shotgun.

A juvenile petition filed against young Emanuel alleges that he is a juvenile delinquent because, the petition states, he wilfully killed his father. Because he is less than 14 years old, his case will be handled in juvenile court.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood, who declined to discuss the particulars of the Emanuel case because state law protects juvenile proceedings, said a hearing must be held within five days after a juvenile is confined under a temporary custody order. He added that a judge can continue the custody order, but the order must be reviewed every five days, until a final disposition is entered in a juvenile proceeding.

In a juvenile court hearing, Haigwood said "the court determines whether there is probable cause a felony has been committed or the delinquent conduct constitutes felony conduct. If there is probable cause then there is a trial on the question of whether or not the child is delinquent."

Haigwood said if the child is determined delinquent, he could be placed on "juvenile probation. The other extreme ... the most the court could do ... is to confine him in a training school until his 18th birthday. After that, he would be released. There are all kinds of things in-between that the court can do."

The district attorney noted that by law, persons less than 14 years of age must be tried in juvenile court. "Between 14 and 16, the juvenile court can transfer the case to Superior Court for trial as an adult."

Haigwood said while juvenile "records are confidential ... it is discretionary with the court whether or not to exclude the public from the proceedings ... whether to have a closed or open trial."

He added that the earliest the case could be tried is "Tuesday ... we have juvenile court every Tuesday."

Sheriff Ralph Tyson said an investigation indicated that the shooting followed an argument over the youth's school grades and other things. He said there is some evidence that the youth had been threatened and abused in the past.

SAVED LIFE!

Johnny Batts has asked Hotline to pay tribute to Tony Barber, who he and hospital emergency and cardiac care staff say saved his father's life yesterday.

Batts said his father, L.F. "Smut" Batts, 68, was helping him at Johnny's Superette at Lang's Crossroads near Farmville when he walked outside and had a heart attack. Barber, a customer in the store at the time, administered cardio-pulmonary resuscitation for nearly 20 minutes until the Farmville Rescue Squad arrived. Batts' heart stopped during that time and hospital cardiac care staff say it is because of Barber's proficiency in CPR and his willingness to continue the exhausting work such a long time that Batts is alive.

Johnny Batts said his family is eternally grateful to Barber, an employee of Eastern Corrections Center at Maury, for the fact that his father is alive, stabilized and recuperating quite well at PCMH.

Education Author Protests State's Basic School Plan

RALEIGH (AP) — The Basic Education Program prepared by the North Carolina Department of Public Instruction is a "blueprint for disaster," an author of several books on education said today.

The program should include the teaching of intensive phonics rather than look-say reading, Samuel Blumenfeld said at a news conference in Raleigh.

North Carolina has the third-largest illiterate workforce in the nation, according to the U.S. Department of Labor, Blumenfeld said.

"It will become the largest illiterate state in the nation if the state department of education has its way," said Blumenfeld, who came to North Carolina to be a guest speaker this weekend at Mount Olivet Baptist Church in Raleigh.

Blumenfeld said the phonics system teaches children to read by sounding out a word. The look-say method teaches children to make each word a picture and remember it, he said. "They're taught to read English as if it were Chinese," he said.

Blumenfeld, of Boston, is the author of several books, including "How to Start Your Own Private School — And Why You Need One," "MEA: The Trojan Horse in American Education," and Alpha-Phonics: A Primer for Beginning Readers," which is a book for parents to use to teach their children how to read, he said.

There are no intensive-phonics textbooks included on North Carolina's list of approved textbooks for first-graders, he said.

He said he would recommend that parents who want their children to learn phonics "get their children out of the public schools," and put them in a private or church school, or teach them at home. Home teaching, he said, is "the superior way of educating," he said.

Sen. East Is 'Fine'

Sen. John East, R-N.C., is expected to be back at work soon, a spokesperson from the senator's Washington office said this morning.

"He's still in the hospital, is doing fine and is expected to be back at work soon. That's pretty general but that's all we know," the representative said.

Sen. East, a 54-year-old former East Carolina University faculty member, was admitted to Bethesda Naval Hospital in Washington Saturday for further observation and treatment connected to previous surgery. East underwent surgery in February to remove a benign blockage of his urinary tract.

Anti-Apartheid Protests Spread

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — An IRS supervisor who ordered tax documents from as many as 6,000 businesses in six states destroyed was under pressure because of an "obscene emphasis on quality and speed" at the service center here, a union attorney said.

Bob Branson, public affairs officer for the Internal Revenue Service center, said Thursday that an investigation of the destruction, which took place late last year, is under way.

"A first-line supervisory employee instructed another employee to destroy certain taxpayer-related correspondence," an IRS statement said. "Management confronted the supervisory employee with the charges, and the employee resigned."

Branson said he did not know how many documents were destroyed.

Employee union officials put the number between 5,000 and 6,000 separate case files — some with as many as 20 pages of attachments such as receipts.

"It's this obscene emphasis on quantity and speed," said union attorney Ann Ellzey. "They're actually generating extra work to get errors undone. (The supervisor) had too much to process so she threw the excess away. It may be she did it without authorization, but we wonder about that."

The incident came to light in the wake of reports earlier this month of the shredding of as many as 20,000 income tax returns and checks by overworked IRS employees in Philadelphia.

Roscoe Egger, commissioner of the IRS in Washington, angrily denounced the reports of the shredding at Philadelphia as "sheer, utter nonsense."

Thursday's statement identified neither the supervisor who ordered the destruction nor the employee who did it. Branson said he would have no further comment until an investigation is complete.

The Austin center is one of 10 regional IRS centers in the United States. It serves Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Louisiana and Kansas.

Darla Pittman, president of Local 72 of the National Treasury Employees Union, which represents a third of the center's 5,500 employees, said union officials were told there was no way to find out to whom the destroyed documents belonged.

She said that the supervisor had ordered the destruction during a late-1984 shift in computer hardware and that the computer tracking system was shut down.

"We think that's probably how she thought she could get away with it," Ms. Ellzey said of the supervisory employee who ordered the destruction.

Ms. Pittman said the supervisor apparently was trying to keep her unit of the center's Business Master File section first in efficiency by reducing an overwhelming backlog.

"We work under constant pressure out there," she said. "It's a terrible thing that she felt she had so much pressure on her to do something like that."

Ms. Pittman said management discovered the destruction only after an employee charged with destroying the documents became worried about it and reported what she had done.

U.S. Bars Canadian

NEW YORK (AP) — Canadian nature writer Farley Mowat's world is one in which snow geese whiten the sky.

There are killer whales and seabirds in his world and frozen tundra and outcrop rock.

However, a quagmire of controversy also fills the landscape for the author of "Never Cry Wolf," denied entry to the United States because immigration officials said he was in a "lookout book" of people considered undesirable.

In a telephone interview Thursday from his home in Port Hope, Ontario, Mowat said he wasn't given a reason for not being allowed to fly to Los Angeles on Tuesday for a promotional tour of his new book, "Sea of Slaughter."

"They haven't said anything to me," he said. "I want the whole thing brought out in the open. ... I have not heard of anything from any American authority."

Benedict Ferro, director of the Buffalo, N.Y., district of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service, said he could not disclose why Mowat was barred because such information is confidential.

Kathleen Lang, a press officer for the State Department, said Wednesday that Mowat belonged to a "proscribed organization," but refused to say what it was.

Union Says UPI Funds Exhausted

NEW YORK (AP) — United Press International has no available cash to cover payroll checks and is discussing the possibility of filing for protection from its creditors, the Wire Service Guild said early today.

UPI's four-member Board of Directors discussed the possibility of filing for Chapter 11 reorganization in a meeting in Los Angeles on Thursday night, the Guild said in a statement. The meeting was to continue later today.

The Guild's statement said, "It is the union's opinion that a Chapter 11 filing at this time is necessary to protect many employee rights and to protect company assets."

In a story transmitted early today by United Press International, the news agency reported the Guild statement and also quoted Luis G. Nogales, its chairman and chief executive officer, as saying, "At present, there are insufficient funds to cover the paychecks dated April 26, and we ask staff to hold on to their checks until the situation is resolved."

The story, which was made available to The Associated Press, said that a senior company official, whom it did not identify, confirmed that Chapter 11 is being considered as one possibility.

Calls to UPI's general news desk in Washington were referred to company spokesman Bill Adler, who was not in his office early today.

UPI reportedly is about $17 million in debt. On March 30, a committee of its creditors agreed to a 90-day debt moratorium to give management an opportunity to further trim operating expenses.

The UPI story also said that according to unidentified company sources, the news agency "apparently reached a critical financial crunch because the Foothill Capital Corp., UPI's chief provider of cash, was dissatisfied with the Guild's refusal to renegotiate a labor contract and make new wage concessions."

On March 13, the Guild rejected as "entirely unacceptable" a UPI proposal for an 18-month wage freeze and other employee concessions. At that time, employees were being paid 85 percent of normal wages under a pay cut negotiated in August 1984.

The Guild, in its statement, said, "At the current time, UPI payroll checks — covering work performed during the past two weeks — are expected to bounce if they have been, or are, deposited."

"UPI has told the union that checks that have not yet been distributed within UPI bureaus are expected to be retained by bureau managers until cash becomes available," the union said.

Attorney Says IRS Records Destroyed To Speed Work

By The Associated Press
Police entered the administration building at the University of California at Los Angeles early today and ended a 3-day-old sit-in, one day after at least 33 anti-apartheid protesters were arrested at colleges in three states.

Most of the 25 officers on the UCLA campus police force were involved in evicting and citing 20 students, the remainder of hundreds of people who took over Murphy Hall on Tuesday.

The students were given misdemeanor citations for trespassing and released after UCLA Police Chief Pat Connolly issued an order to vacate the building at midnight, said Sgt. Alan Christopher. About 40 students obeyed Connolly's order.

On Thursday, 27 people were arrested at the University of Florida in Gainesville after protesters opposed to South Africa's policy of racial discrimination blocked the entrance to an administration building. There were six arrests in California.

Leaders of a blockade of a building at Columbia University in New York claimed victory as they ended their three-week crusade Thursday, but said they planned to continue protests against university investment in companies doing business with South Africa.

"I would say it's been a success in the sense that we have triggered many, many actions around the country," said David Kornacker, a spokesman for the Coalition for a Free South Africa, sponsors of the demonstration.

Richard Palmer of Buffalo, N.Y., who took part in an Albany, N.Y., anti-apartheid protest chose to go to jail Thursday rather than pay a fine.

He was one of 20 people who appeared in Albany Police Court, where the rest were fined $100 to $250 for occupying an office at State University of New York headquarters. Palmer's jail term was deferred until next month to allow him to finish classes.

Some of the University of Florida protesters were charged with trespassing, others with resisting arrest and one woman, whose name was not released, was charged with striking a police officer, university officials said.

Five University of California students and Berkeley City Council member Nancy Skinner were arrested Thursday for blocking entrances to University Hall on the UC Berkeley campus, where offices for the regents and president of the statewide system are located.

The protesters want to send a message "loud and clear" to regents that they want the divestment issue decided before students leave school for the summer, Ms. Skinner said.

Those arrested included student body presidents from Berkeley, Davis and Riverside.

UC regents have asked for a treasurer's report about their almost $1.8 billion investment in companies that do business in South Africa.

The regents also have asked that charges be dropped against those arrested for civil disobedience, but President David Gardner said at a public forum Wednesday that he wouldn't drop charges.

"Your decision to act lawfully or in civil disobedient ways is a decision for each of you to make," he said.

After his inaugural ceremony Thursday, University of Missouri President C. Peter Magrath met with a representative of students staging anti-apartheid protests. He later told a crowd outside his office that a meeting would be called to discuss divestiture.

The university Board of Curators has a policy of discouraging new investment in companies that do business in South Africa unless they have signed the Sullivan principles, a set of human rights guidelines. But it stops short of calling for divestiture.

At Haverford College in Pennsylvania, President Robert Stevens told about 200 people at a rally that their call for divestment had to be balanced against the need to finance scholarships and salaries.

"If you totally divest, you put your conscience at rest," he said.

Sun Burns Mental Memory During Bahamas Vacation

By NORM GOLDSTEIN
Associated Press Writer

NASSAU, Bahamas (AP) — When it comes to choosing when to vacation, winter is matched only by summer. Spring is a great time, too. And the fall is fine.

For a Northeastern city sicker, it's when nothing is really something to get away from, when local newspapers dust off the zero for front page headlines boasting that worse is yet to come.

That's when all pallid faces face south and television travel commercials promise sun and sand with a soupçon of sin. And when all sorts of package plans promote relief both instant and inexpensive.

It could be a tricky lure, but when it works, the sun burns a mental memory that lasts beyond the last vestiges of slush and below-freezing temperatures.

January seems to be a relatively "slow" period for hotels and airlines, after Christmas-New Year's holidays and expenses, and an unusually good time to take travel advantages south. (It's generally around 70 in the Bahamas then.)

The Bahamas is an archipelago of 700 coral islands extending for more than 500 miles southeast of Florida. (Contrary to popular belief, the Bahamas is in the Atlantic Ocean, not the Caribbean, even though the green-blue waters provide similar dreamy images.)

Andros is the largest island, but New Providence — with its capital, Nassau — is probably best known. Two gambling casinos, one on Paradise Island just a bridge toll away, provide alternate entertainment from what is otherwise sunning, snorkeling — and shopping, from the stalls at the straw market to the expensive perfume shops.

Conchs (pronounced "konks") are everywhere. The mussel innards are served in everything from salads to sandwiches and the shells are cleaned and sold as souvenirs.

The island has served as the setting for parts of the James Bond-007 films, "Never Say Never Again" and "Thunderball." The dockside "Never Say Never Again" bar behind the Sheraton British Colonial hotel, where 007 first encountered his nubile nemesis, makes much of the connection. But it takes a native to point out the beachfront cave setting for "Thunderball" on the beach near Lyford Cay, the elite section on the other, western, side of the island.

Caution: driving is on the "wrong" side of the street for the former British possession. But anarchy reigns on either side of the road with competition from automobiles, public buses, taxis, motor bikes and jitneys.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Recognized As Birth Defect

The family and friends of alcoholics suffer from the emotional turmoil surrounding the disease but are not plagued by the physical abuse of alcoholism. However, there is one unfortunate group that cannot willingly escape the physical damage inflicted by alcoholism: the unborn children of women who drink during pregnancy. The developing infants suffer from the effects of alcoholism that sometimes include irreversible birth defects. A mother-to-be who drinks during pregnancy also risks having a stillborn birth.

Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) has been recognized as one of the three major causes of birth defects and accompanying mental retardation in the United States, according to William Hutchinson of Project First Step at the Caswell Center in Kinston. Project First Step is a two-year-old project that receives funding to study Fetal Alcohol Syndrome in North Carolina. Part of the work involves increased screening for FAS and providing information and referral for the 32 eastern North Carolina counties.

"It has been estimated that up to 4 out of every 1,000 births in the United States is affected by alcohol," he said. "We think that North Carolina's rate is at least equal to that and maybe higher."

Alcohol consumption affects the fetus by slowing the growth of developing cells and robbing the body of protein and vitamins that it desperately needs, Hutchinson said. In the full blown fetal alcohol syndrome infants have three or more abnormalities, including facial distortions, growth deficiencies, unsightly birth marks, and heart and kidney defects. Drinking during pregnancy can also cause a child to be nervous and jumpy poorly coordinated, and of below normal height.

He said that the North Carolina Department of Human Resources' Council on Developmental Disabilities has made the reduction in the frequency of fetal alcohol syndrome the number one priority of its Prevention Task Force. The task force is made up of a wide range of health care professionals across North Carolina.

The Council on Developmental Disabilities currently is funding two projects in North Carolina to develop more public awareness about the dangers of FAS. One of these is Project First Step at Caswell Center Kinston. The other, the Comprehensive Fetal Alcohol Syndrome Project at Bowman Gray School of Medicine in Winston-Salem, has established a toll-free telephone hotline service. People may call from anywhere in the state at 1-800-532-6302.

"This problem has been around for a long time," he said. "However, only in the past 10 years has it come to the medical community's attention as a distinct syndrome and cause of birth defects."

Hutchinson stressed that it is important for women not to drink if they are even thinking about having a child. "There is really no safe amount of alcohol for a pregnant woman to drink," he said. "We recommend abstaining both before and during pregnancy because so much of the damage occurs in the first two months of pregnancy when many women don't realize that they are pregnant."

Englishman Finds Abby Column Entertaining

DEAR ABBY: I am an Englishman teaching psychiatry in the Alabama University School of Medicine, and I was prompted to write by the letter from "Bitter and Brokenhearted" (the widow of the smoker who was forced by relatives to go outside in sub-zero weather to smoke and subsequently caught pneumonia and died). I noticed that you published that letter without comment, judging, no doubt, that the tragic story was comment enough.

Apparently, in the opinion of the relatives with whom the smoker and his wife were staying, smoking is a moral issue and has the status of something close to a crime.

Interestingly, King James I, after whom a version of the English Bible was named, wrote a famous pamphlet titled, "Counter Blast to Tobacco." He would have liked to have made the use of tobacco both sinful and criminal, but in spite of his throne and his title of Defender of the Faith, even King James could not make smoking either a crime or a sin.

Many thanks for your constructive, entertaining and often puzzling column.

H.O., BIRMINGHAM, ALA.

DEAR ABBY: This is regarding your answer to "Deceived," the young wife who was upset when she found some girlie magazines her husband had hidden from her. She said that she was a good-looking woman and couldn't understand why her husband would want to look at pornographic filth like that.

I was surprised at your answer. You said, "Please get over the notion that only men with unattractive wives read girlie magazines. What you look like has nothing to do with your husband's desire to look at what you call 'filth.'"

Then you defended the husband's right to read whatever he wanted to, and told the wife she had a lot to learn about why men enjoy looking at stuff like that.

Abby, I don't understand why a happily married man would want to look at pictures of naked women, so I asked my husband, and he said it was normal and natural for men to enjoy pictures of beautiful naked women regardless of what they have at home.

Abby, I consider myself normal, and I have absolutely no desire to look at pictures of naked men, no matter how well-built they are. Why?

PUZZLED IN CHICAGO

DEAR PUZZLED: Because most women do not respond to the visual the same way men do. (Women respond more to the spoken or written word.) But let's get something straight: All pictures of partially or fully unclothed women are not pornographic—some are beautiful though erotic, and are considered museum-quality art.

Not having seen the "girlie" magazine in question, I'm unable to make an informed judgment, but let me go on record to say that pictures that portray women as objects to be used, abused, humiliated or degraded in any way are totally unacceptable to me.

DEAR ABBY: I was pleased to note your approval of using "Yes, sir" and "No, ma'am" when addressing people.

I have heard people say, "Don't 'sir' me—I haven't been knighted!" (I ignore it as though it hadn't been said.) Addressing people as sir and ma'am is a matter of simple courtesy and has nothing to do with one's age or station in life.

Thank you, ma'am.

Homeless

In past winters we have been moved by accounts of the many homeless huddled over steaming grates or warming themselves by small fires in streets and alleyways. It will be the same when cold weather returns to our land. There appears no remedy in sight.

Observers generally agree the number of homeless is increasing; but this is just guessing. Nobody knows. As a matter of fact, "estimates" of the number of homeless range from 300,000 to 3 million. There is no scorekeeping.

The General Accounting Office says the rates of increase nationwide vary from one estimate of 10 percent to another guess of 30 percent for 1983 alone.

In a society that has statistics for just about everything under the sun, there is almost nothing available on a nightmarish people-problem.

The Housing and Urban Development Office says the number of homeless using public shelters has increased with occupancy rates rising from about 70 percent in January 1984 to 92 percent in December.

Where do those people come from?

We have several choices: locally high unemployment rates, deinstitutionalization of the mentally ill, a decline in available low cost rental housing. There have always been some people who could not adapt to "social norms" and choose to live out their lives on the streets.

The National Institute of Mental Health estimates (again!) that up to 50 percent of the homeless may have mental disorders. That would explain a lot. The GAO tells us populations in state mental institutions declined 421,000 between 1955 and 1980 ... we're sure that decline is a factor in the problem.

Whatever the causes, large urban centers can count on a lot of private misery and hardship among the poorest of the poor when winter rolls around again. It could be avoided, or eased, with a little planning and preparation in the warm months. A touch of teamwork among related agencies at the local, state and federal levels would be an economical and efficient way to handle the need we know will re-occur.

Plants

With all the concern about tobacco surpluses, the local immediate concern is for a shortage of tobacco plants.

Farmers are experiencing a shortage of plants, which are grown in plant beds and subsequently transplanted in fields.

Pitt Extension Agent Mitch Smith said the situation is "uncomfortable" although a method of clipping has eased the shortage for the county. N.C. State tobacco specialists say there is an extreme shortage of plants in some areas of eastern North Carolina. It may be the most serious shortage in 20 years and it is due to the long period of dry weather and low humidity hampering plant growth.

Farmers who are experiencing shortages will do what they have done for years — turn to their neighbors who have a surplus for additional plants. Plants brought in from other areas don't do as well and a U.S. Department of Agriculture permit is required.

It will take some scrambling but hopefully enough plants will be found to plant the tobacco fields of this area.

Playing It Safe In A Cave

The last Japanese soldier from World War II was holed up in a cave on Okinawa. A team of Americans and Japanese with loudspeakers were trying to persuade him to come out.

"Corporal Nakajinko, it's all right to surrender. The war is over."

"How do I know if you are lying to me?" said a plaintive voice from the cave.

"I can assure you, Nakajinko," a Japanese official yelled over the speaker. "All hostilities have ceased."

There was about three minutes of silence and then the voice said, "Who won?"

The official yelled back, "The Americans. The Japanese laid down their arms 40 years ago."

"This could be a trick. Prove to me that the United States won."

"The Americans now have a trade deficit with Japan of $37 billion," the officer shouted.

"How can the Americans have a $37 billion trade deficit if Japan lost?"

"Because the Japanese rethought their strategy in 1945 and it made more sense to invade the United States with automobiles than with soldiers. The Americans are buying everything Japan produces but the Japanese are not buying much of what the U.S. makes. It's all here in Fortune magazine if you want to read about it."

"Leave it at the mouth of the cave," the voice said.

A half hour later the rescue team was getting impatient.

"Nakajinko, are you now persuaded that Japan lost the war?"

"I am puzzled," the voice from the cave said. "If we lost, how can we export 25 percent more cars to the U.S. than we did last year?"

"Because we had a voluntary quota, and once it was lifted we decided this was the best time to flood the U.S. market."

The voice from the cave said, "Didn't Premier Nakasone realize this would anger the Americans?"

"He's trying to make up for it now, by asking all the Japanese to buy American goods."

Nakajinko yelled, "I'm not coming out if I have to buy American goods. I still remember Pearl Harbor."

"As a Japanese veteran you will be exempt from buying American goods. We want you to come out of the cave so we can declare World War II officially over."

"American goods aren't made as well as Japanese products," he yelled. "Every time I stole something from the U.S. Army Quartermaster

WILKES-BARRE, Pa. — Jeane Kirkpatrick's first speech to a grass-roots Republican gathering since she formally became one herself was interrupted not once by either applause or laughter. That suggests forecasts of instant elevation to her new party's national ticket may be premature.

She did exhibit political star quality in attracting more than 900 paying guests to a recent dinner and keeping their hushed attention while pitching President Reagan's Central American policy. But a plea for help for Nicaraguan freedom fighters, delivered in professorial style, was not the message they came to hear.

While savvy Republican insiders believe Mrs. Kirkpatrick when she unequivocally denies any intent to run for office, they value her as necessary new blood who might end up as vice presidential nominee in 1988. But her Wilkes-Barre debut suggests this former backstage Democratic activist will experience adjustment problems as an out-front political performer, and — less obviously but more importantly — as member of a party whose spiritual concern is the budgetary bottom line.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick was here, two weeks after leaving the United Nations, at the behest of one of the Republican Party's remarkable young figures. Marc Holtzman has been engaged in big-time Republicans politics since his late teens and now, at 25, is running for Congress. With tickets priced up to $1,000 (for attending a predinner reception and being photographed with Jeane and Marc), the tyro candidate netted over $100,000.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick made it happen. Harry Lee, who runs a resort conglomerate in the nearby Poconos, believes Holtzman may be on an impossible mission against Democratic Rep. Paul Kanjorski in heavily Democratic, economically depressed northeastern Pennsylvania. But he brought six friends and business associates 60 miles from Stroudsburg to Wilkes-Barre to see the former ambassador that they consider the rising new Republican star.

Before she spoke, Lee expressed hopes that her speech would propose a significant new approach toward arms control or perhaps federal deficit reduction. What if, we asked, she talked about Nicaragua? That, Lee replied, would be "a little provincial."

After Mrs. Kirkpatrick delivered a closely reasoned argument why Marxist Nicaragua poses a threat to U.S. security, Lee confessed that "in a sense" he was disappointed but said he and his associates were impressed by her personality. One of his business partners, Harry Ahnert, called her speech "excellent, but not rousing."

Indeed, one political pro in the audience confided that she has renewed need for sometime Reagan speech coach Miles Martell, who shaped Mrs. Kirkpatrick's prose and delivery for her Republican National Convention triumph last summer that made her an overnight political sensation. Without him, she has reverted to the university lecturer's convoluted sentence structure and finds herself facing rapt but not demonstrative listeners.

However, her problem on the Republican stump goes beyond style to substance. She is a heroine of the conservative movement but not one of its foot soldiers fully embracing its agenda. Bona fide intellectual Mrs. Kirkpatrick is not ready to swallow whole Reaganite positions on issues she has not yet thoroughly studied — including tax reform and abortion.

Moreover, while she could no longer remain even nominally associated with a Democratic Party whose leaders cannot survive if they oppose communist expansionism in Central America, she will have trouble fully relating to a Republican Party with the soul of a bookkeeper.

While Mrs. Kirkpatrick in Wilkes-Barre did not deliver the deficit-reduction pitch many in the audience wanted, Republican congressional leaders in Washington were pressing President Reagan to give the budget priority over Nicaragua. She cannot bring herself to believe that dismantling Amtrak is more important than saving the contras.

At both a predinner press conference and in introducing her as the speaker, Holtzman predicted she would be the "first woman president of the United States." Before that long-range forecast is fulfilled, she will have to come to grips with the shortcomings of her newly adopted party.

Strength For Today

Donald Hankey, who gave up his life in the first World War, reminded his generation that true religion is betting one's life on God.

This means something more than pious acceptance of creeds. We all at times become involved in situations which appear overwhelming. Doubt assails us. Temptation bears down upon us as does an approaching locomotive upon a car stalled across the tracks at a railroad crossing. We are frequently conscious that our souls are afflicted with a spiritual disease.

True religion consists in clutching to our hearts with a desperation that is final the conviction that if we trust God all will eventually be well. We do not know how this will come about. We only know it will come about. We bet our lives on God — the Creator and Sustainer of the universe — and in the end all turns out well.

Prosperity And Blessings

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and his top aides are coyly pointing to lower interest rates as the public's reward if it can successfully force Congress to accept a Republican plan for slashing government spending.

The allure of reduced interest was invoked as Reagan, with a single nationally broadcast speech Wednesday night, quickly raised the ante on this year's budget debate to nothing less than "our prosperity and all the blessings it has given us."

With rhetoric reminiscent of wartime speeches from the past, the president said, "We stand at a crossroads. The hour is late, the task is large and the stakes are momentous."

The enemy is "government" that has taken over America and followed an "immoral, dead-end course of deficit spending."

"Tonight I'm asking all of you," Reagan told his broadcast audience, "Democrats, Republicans and independents, to give me your help to put our financial house in order so that our tax, spending and monetary policies will not hinder growth, but encourage it; not send inflation and interest rates shooting back up, but keep them heading down; and not drown us under a tidal wave of debt, but protect us in the safe harbor of financial stability, with a sound and powerful economy."

Reagan made only a passing reference to interest rates in his speech and administration officials refuse to say there is a direct link. But at the same time, that's just the impression they have been giving.

A document prepared by the White House Office of Management and Budget detailing the compromise deficit-reduction plan Reagan and Senate GOP leaders have agreed to declare that economic gains of the past several years are being jeopardized by huge budget deficits, estimated by the administration to be $213.3 billion.

"This year Treasury borrowing (to finance the budget deficit) will absorb 78 percent of net private savings — putting upward pressure on interest rates, attracting massive net inflows of foreign capital and contributing to growing problems with exchange rates and the hemorrhaging trade deficit," the document said.

"The compromise deficit reduction plan will dramatically alleviate these pressures and strains in financial markets, manufacturing and agriculture," it added.

During Reagan's first term, most administration officials rejected the notion that there was any direct link between the size of the budget deficits and the level of interest rates.

But with growing concern over the persistent deficits and signs of sluggishness in the economy — notably a 1.3 percent rise in the gross national product in the first quarter of the year — officials are speaking more about deficits and interest rates.

An administration official who briefed reporters Wednesday on the president's address on condition that he not be quoted by name said, "The amount of borrowing if the Treasury is taking an awful lot of the combined national and international pool of savings, and business is paying more for its money than it otherwise would be," the official said.

If deficits continue at their current level, he added, "that kind of a deficit would make monetary controls very difficult to administer."

That is administration shorthand for saying that the Federal Reserve might be forced to tighten the money supply, thus driving up interest rates.

"By exercising fiscal discipline (reducing government spending and paring deficits) we can allow the monetary authorities (the Federal Reserve) to have a freer hand than they otherwise would," he said.

To the extent that farmers, automobile sales, exports, any number of things are dependent upon rates of interest ... reduced rates of interest certainly will help our economy," he said. "So it's for that reason that we think that we must get this (government spending and deficits) controlled."

Administration officials still refuse to flatly link deficits and interest rates, but they let Federal Reserve Chairman Paul A. Volcker do their talking for them as they point to repeated statements by Volcker that significant action to cut deficits likely would result in lower interest rates.

Four Killed In California Sandstorms

DOS PALOS, Calif. (AP) — A blinding storm of dust and sand blowing across San Joaquin Valley roads dropped visibility to zero, causing a 20-vehicle pileup in which four people were killed in Merced County, the highway patrol reported.

Cars and trucks started smashing together about noon Thursday along a state highway near Dos Palos, about 50 miles northwest of Fresno.

The highway was closed in southwestern Merced County because "you can't even see opposing traffic across the highway," Patrolman Jerry Abbott said. It was reopened when wind velocity decreased at dusk, six hours after the chain of accidents.

Rescue workers said they had trouble seeing other workers a few feet from them.

And the highway patrol had trouble figuring out exactly how many trucks and cars were involved because the dust was so thick "we can't see them all," Abbott said.

The four people killed all were from the same family and riding in a car that was struck broadside and had its top torn off by a big rig.

In addition, 14 people were hurt, four seriously, Patrolman Tom Sawyer said. The injured were taken by ambulance to four area hospitals which were placed on alert to receive emergency patients.

Poor visibility was reported throughout the San Joaquin Valley, particularly on the west side. The billowing dust and sand were worse than they normally would be because fields had been plowed recently to plant spring crops, mainly cotton, said Patrolman Jim Taylor.

Wind speeds reached 35 miles an hour at the National Weather Service office in Fresno, but gusts were reported as high as 60 mph on the valley's west side, said meteorologist Glenn Strawn.

Slang Can Make Sense

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — Having trouble understanding teen-agers' slang?

University of Iowa Professor Dennis Corrigan, who studies the subject, says the slang of today's "totally" generation — or of any generation — is a linguistic response to new realities or environments. If you keep that in mind, some of today's slang may actually make sense.

One whole group of slang arises from video game or computer sounds. This group includes "jik" (liquor), and "dweeb," "geek" and "zod," all of which mean nerdy or out of it.

Other words arise out of fears of nuclear annihilation, he says. Included in these "verbs of destruction" are "naked," "wasted" and "blown away."

A third and very new group arises out of the wholeness of the Los Angeles Olympics, according to Corrigan. Words in this group include "decent," "choice," "fresh," "way sweet" and "mondo-choice."

Other important words in today's lingo, according to the professor, are "grody," "grody to the max," "sleazy," "beasty" and "shanky," all of which mean disgusting or undesirable. Also, "really tubular," "way rad," "gnarly," "totally bitchen," "way cranking," and "chismo," all of which mean great, wonderful or fantastic.

Here are some other words, and what they mean:

- "Cincy." Easy
- "Nerkey." Combination of nerd and turkey.
- "Crispy." Burned-out person
- "Gook." Out-of-style.
- "Joannie." Passe.

Viet Attacks

PEKING (AP) — China claims Vietnamese troops have fired more than 18,000 shells across the border into province this month, killing or wounding 29 civilians and destroying 1,730 acres of crops.

The official Xinhua news agency quoted military sources as accusing Vietnam of sending spies across the border to lay mines, kidnap Chinese and conduct sabotage.

It said Chinese frontier guards repulsed all Vietnamese incursions.

Last Saturday, Vietnam claimed that Chinese artillery units fired 6,000 rounds into the Vietnamese border province of Ha Tuyen between April 13 and 19.

Both sides have repeatedly accused each other of border provocations since 1979, when the Chinese, angered by Vietnam's incursion into Cambodia and ouster of the Peking-backed Khmer Rouge regime, staged a brief invasion.

Viet Refugee May Die Before Brother Can Come To U.S.

By JAMES LITKE
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — A Vietnamese refugee whose battle for survival prompted unprecedented cooperation between the United States and Vietnam might die before he gets a bone-marrow transplant from a brother traveling halfway around the world, doctors said.

Vo Tien Duc was in critical condition today in sterile isolation in the intensive care unit of the University of Illinois Hospital, said hospital spokeswoman Gloria Raleigh.

Duc suffers from aplastic anemia, a disease in which the bone marrow stops making essential white blood cells. He was being kept alive by transfusions totaling more than two pints each day.

Duc's brother, Vo Hoang Van, 18, who lives in a Mekong Delta village, left Ho Chi Minh City and was scheduled to arrive tonight in Chicago, culminating an effort that overcame political, bureaucratic, geographic and logistic hurdles.

Doctors at the University of Illinois facility will conduct a second blood compatibility test to determine if Van is a suitable donor, a process expected to take five days, said Dr. Melody Cobligh, the oncologist treating Duc.

"We're just thrilled everything has worked out so far ... we just hope he makes it long enough now to have a successful transplant," Ms. Cobligh said at a news conference.

Duc's wife, Lang Phung, said through a family friend who translated her remarks, "I'm happy to see everybody doing something to treat and help him come back to his family."

The couple's four children, ranging in age from 5 months to 4 years, sat nearby.

Hoa Truong, a family friend who borrowed money to raise the $5,000 needed to finance Van's trip to Chicago, said he did so "for the children. You can look at them and see they want their father back."

Truong, whose wife was a childhood friend of Duc and his family in Vietnam, said Duc came to Chicago in 1979 after settling in Michigan and has been unable to find steady work since. He said the family has been living on public aid.

"It makes me feel a little bit happy the government let him (Van) out," said Truong. "I appreciate and offer thanks for that."

Duc entered a community hospital a month ago complaining of a sore throat and was transferred to the university facility after it became apparent the infection and fever were symptoms of a more serious disorder.

Doctors determined the only way to save him was marrow transplants from a sibling with a compatible blood type.

After some searching, Ms. Cobligh was put in touch with an old classmate, Dr. Judith Landinsky, the new chairman of the U.S. Committee for Scientific Cooperation with Vietnam, which sponsors scientific exchanges.

After receiving guarantees of cooperation from the State Department, Ms. Landinsky borrowed $5,000 and flew to Ho Chi Minh City on April 18. She arranged for blood tests from members of Duc's family and doctors determined Monday that Van, one of 10 siblings, would be a suitable donor.

Although the United States and Vietnam have no formal diplomatic relations, both governments helped doctors locate Van in Vietnam, test his blood and hasten his departure for Chicago. The transplant will be performed at Loyola University Medical Center in Maywood, a Chicago suburb.

A State Department official who called the cooperation "unprecedented" also stressed that both governments were working through third parties.

'Secret' Press Pool Ends Trip To Honduran Games

WASHINGTON (AP) — Journalists who took part in a Pentagon-sponsored attempt to report on a U.S. military exercise under secret conditions say the test was not totally successful and more planning is necessary.

Howell Raines, a New York Times correspondent who was part of the five-day trip to cover a Marine amphibious landing in Honduras, said it was a good experience, but, "As an exercise in press coverage it was a significant failure due to the problems the Defense Department created in planning it."

The 10-man "pool" of journalists, television crewmen and a photographer returned to Washington on Thursday aboard a camouflaged C-141 military aircraft.

The Pentagon organized the mission in secret to see how the news media would respond to a call to observe a clandestine military operation.

The test was set up after journalists protested the exclusion of the media from observing the incursion on Grenada two years ago.

The pool left Washington in the early morning hours on Sunday, but word of the trip leaked out within hours.

"They erred in trying to graft onto a publically announced event — these maneuvers — a secret movement of journalists," Raines said of the Pentagon organizers. "It was a conflict that doomed the secrecy element to an early collapse."

The journalists on the pool said they decided to go ahead with the maneuver to test their ability to function under supposed wartime conditions. The results were not always successful, they reported.

Raines and several others complained the military did not always make adequate provisions for them to get their stories, videotape and photos back to their home offices.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch, who greeted the journalists at nearby Andrews Air Force Base, said Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger wanted to keep practicing with such pools, despite the breach of secrecy.

"There were leaks, but the only way to fix them is to work more closely with the media," Burch said. "We just need to keep trying."

Despite the secrecy problems, several reporters termed the exercise a profitable one.

Matthew C. Quinn, a reporter for United Press International, said he thought the Pentagon and the press should work out a way to retain the secrecy of the trip and improve reporters' abilities to send their stories back to the United States. Reporters experienced particular difficulties in attempting to use a radio telephone aboard the U.S.S. Nassau, Quinn said.

"I think with some more care and guidelines in preparing people for when this system is activated, absolutely, I think it is possible this will work," Quinn said.

Even though the pool trip did not remain a secret, several journalists said they believed the trip was a valuable one because it gave them a chance to experience the logistics involved in sending information out of a battle zone.

"It was difficult to move around, we needed two helicopters every time we moved," said Gene Randall of Cable News Network. "I have some sympathy for the argument that there is a real logistics problem in moving large numbers of journalists around the active battlefields."

Both Quinn and Randall said it was difficult for both the print journalists and photographers to file their stories at times because telephone lines were not made available to them. The television crew was not always able to get videotape to a transmittal point, Randall said.

"It was frustrating, but the problems are totally surmountable," Quinn said. "I think the Pentagon people are dedicated, they say, to fixing them, and it certainly can be done."

Barry Thumma, a photographer for The Associated Press, said none of the pool members were subject to censorship at any time and that the greatest frustration was with the breakdown in secrecy and the inability to get their material out quickly.

"When we found that the secrecy was broken, there was some concern," Thumma said. "But we all decided to go on and go through with it and see what we could learn."

Thumma said both the journalists and the military members of the trip were disappointed that the veil of secrecy had been broken, but that did not dim their enthusiasm for making such a test again.

"I think it can work," Thumma said.

Middle Income Taxpayers Itemize The Most

A News Analysis

By JIM LUTHER
AP Tax Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — As Pogo might have put it, "We have met the special interests and they are us." The people who make the most use of itemized deductions are the middle-income Americans who pay most of the federal tax.

Couples and individuals with incomes between $20,000 and $75,000, who file 46 percent of the taxable returns, are expected to pay 61 percent of the taxes next year, according to new estimates by the staff of the congressional Joint Committee on Taxation. Almost two-thirds of those taxpayers (23 million) will itemize their deductions.

They will claim 67 percent of the total tax deduction for unreimbursed medical expenses; for real estate taxes, 73 percent; home mortgage interest, 77 percent; automobile loans and other consumer credit, 69 percent; charitable contributions, 53 percent; state and local income taxes, 60 percent; sales taxes, 76 percent; the credit for child-care expenses, 67 percent, and the $100-per-person dividend exclusion, 68 percent.

These are among taxpayers who, in the tax-overhaul plans advocated by the Treasury Department and lawmakers of both parties, are targeted as "special interests" that benefit from today's tax system at the expense of others.

They are considered special interests because only 37 percent of the people who file taxable returns itemize deductions. But they pay over three-quarters of the tax.

The overhaul proposals would eliminate or reduce many deductions while raising personal exemptions and lowering tax rates. As a result, sponsors say, most of these people would pay less tax than they do now.

But that would depend on the extent to which a taxpayer now uses itemized deductions. For example, a $25,000-a-year family of four that takes only minimal deductions under current law could easily end up paying higher taxes by losing some deductions and being taxed on some job-related fringe benefits.

President Reagan is expected to send his own tax proposal to Capitol Hill next month with a plea for final action on it this year. But passage of this year seems unlikely, especially since the House Ways and Means Committee probably won't start writing its version of the bill before September.

Whenever the action comes, the debate will boil down to whether the tax system should be used for something other than raising revenue to run the government. The Treasury Department wants a relatively "pure" tax law. Many members of Congress — and, if the polls are accurate, many taxpayers — think it is proper to grant a tax benefit to promote one goal or another, whether owning a home or drilling for oil.

Those goals are paid for by the more than 100 deductions, credits and exemptions that will reduce federal tax collections an average of $500 billion a year over the next five years. Backers call them tax preferences or incentives; opponents call them "loopholes."

Ten of those 100-plus provisions account for 68 percent of the revenue lost from all tax preferences. Six of the 10 are solely for the benefit of individual taxpayers; the value of the other four is split between individuals and businesses.

Here are those 10 and the estimated five-year cost:

—Exclusion for employer contributions to employee pension plans and for interest on those plans, $350 billion.

—Investment tax credit, under which the government pays up to 10 percent of the cost of business equipment, $243 billion.

—Deduction for non-business state and local taxes paid, $225 billion.

—Deduction for home mortgage interest, $171 billion. This is the only benefit that Reagan has pledged specifically to preserve.

—Lower tax rates for capital gains, which are profits from the sale of assets owned more than six months, $159 billion.

—Deduction for accelerated depreciation, which allows businesses to recover through the tax system money they spend for plant and machinery, $152 billion.

—Exclusion for employer-paid premiums for health insurance, $147 billion.

—Exemption for most people's Social Security benefits, $100 billion.

—Tax-exempt interest on bonds used by state and local governments to build schools, roads and other public projects, $92 billion.

—Deferral of taxes on employee contributions to Individual Retirement Accounts and similar arrangements for the self-employed, $79 billion.

By comparison, some of the perennial targets of "tax reformers" cost considerably less. The oil depletion allowance, for example, will cost about $7 billion over five years; the tax exclusion for foreign sales divisions of U.S. firms, about $6 billion, and preferential treatment of timber income, about $4 billion.

Mexicans Holding Kidnap Witnesses

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Three people who reportedly saw two U.S. citizens abducted in Guadalajara in January are being held by Mexican authorities, U.S. Ambassador John Gavin said.

U.S. officials said they have little hope the missing Americans are still alive.

The names of the witnesses have not been released, but the embassy said their depositions indicate the Americans may have been victims of Mexican drug traffickers who mistook them for U.S. drug investigators.

The two U.S. citizens are John Walker of Minneapolis and Alberto Radelat of Fort Worth, Texas, who were last seen on Jan. 30 in Guadalajara.

Gavin told reporters Thursday that according to Mexican officials, the witnesses said they saw the Americans enter a restaurant, and later saw their bloodied bodies taken away.

Gavin did not clarify whether the witnesses said the abducted men were still alive when taken from the eatery.

The Mexican officials said the witnesses were picked up recently in the course of a different investigation, Gavin said. He did not say what the investigation was about but added that the restaurant the Americans reportedly entered was owned by reputed drug trafficker Rafael Caro Quintero.

Associates of Caro Quintero — who is now in custody, charged with kidnapping and murdering a U.S. drug enforcement agent and a Mexican pilot — were holding a party at the restaurant, according to the witnesses.

There was no official confirmation of Gavin's report from Mexican officials and embassy officials said they had no additional information.

In addition to Caro Quintero, three policemen from Guadalajara are charged with kidnapping and killing Enrique Camarena Salazar, the drug enforcement agent, and Alfredo Zavala Avelar, the Mexican pilot. The two men were kidnapped separately on Feb. 7 and their bodies were found March 5.

Other police officers face lesser charges connected with the case. The most prominent one is the former head of the federal judicial police in Guadalajara, Armando Pavon Reyes, who is charged with accepting a $260,000 bribe to allow a prime suspect in the Camarena case to escape.

President Miguel de la Madrid on Wednesday called for changes in the country's police forces, including a revision of police salaries. Low wages have been blamed for widespread corruption.

The proposed changes — which must be approved by Congress — are aimed at trimming bureaucracy and controlling corruption.

Other measures include banning the use of firearms by customs agents and Federal Vehicles Registry personnel; increasing the number of police academies; and closely supervising the Federal Highway Police, notorious for demanding bribes from truckdrivers.

Police Official Says Cover-Up May Exist

NEW YORK (AP) — Top officials of a precinct where officers are accused of torturing three men to obtain confessions about drug dealing may have covered up the alleged beatings and use of an electric stun gun, the police commissioner says.

Meanwhile, allegations surfaced Thursday that two Korean-American men were beaten at the 110th Precinct in the borough of Queens. Four officers in the 106th Precinct have been arrested and another suspended in connection with beatings Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward said "had racial overtones."

Ward, who transferred the top 18 officers of the precinct, called his command officers to headquarters today to remind them they are accountable for the actions of their subordinates.

"What is unusual this time is that we are running into, for the first time in my history ... supervising officers" who may have known about wrongdoing and did not say anything, he said Wednesday.

Queens District Attorney John Santucci asked Thursday whether Ward had dealt harshly enough with the supervisors.

"I wonder if (Ward) came down heavily enough," Santucci said at a news conference. "Maybe ... some of these people should get hearings. Maybe some of these people should be advised of their retirement rights."

Meanwhile, a Korean-American community group gave the Queens district attorney a petition signed by 1,200 people protesting beatings of two Korean-Americans by officers of another Queens precinct, a group leader said.

"These incidents of police brutality were due to racism," said attorney Sook Nam Choo, leader of the Ad Hoc Korean-American Committee Against Police Brutality. "Because we are recent immigrants from Korea with limited knowledge of the English language, they thought they could get away with it."

Ms. Choo, speaking at a rally protesting the alleged torture of prisoners at the 106th precinct with an electric stun gun, said the two Korean-Americans were brutalized while in custody at the 110th Precinct.

Charles Pyo, a Korean-American cab driver, said he was severely beaten while in custody at the 110th Precinct in Queens. He said he was arrested March 25 and charged with assault and driving while intoxicated and was beaten with his hands cuffed behind him and not allowed a telephone call for two days.

Cha Eui Tai, a Korean-American boutique owner, said he was beaten in a patrol car after police came to settle a dispute between him and a customer in his Queens shop. He was charged with disorderly conduct.

Both men said they filed complaints with the Civilian Complaint Review Board.

Santucci said his office had not received all the cooperation it hoped for from 106th Precinct officers interviewed Wednesday.

"There is some degree of a blue wall of silence, the so-called code of silence," Santucci said.

Officers Loren MacCary, 33, of Commack, and Michael Aranda, 36, of Freeport, were charged with assault for allegedly standing by as a suspect was beaten. Both were suspended without pay. MacCary also was charged with second-degree assault and third-degree assault and weapons possession for allegedly beating a suspect April 8.

As they were being arraigned in Queens, minority group leaders gathered in Brooklyn to call for a special state prosecutor or commission to investigate the entire department.

The Rev. Herbert Daughtry said Mayor Edward I. Koch's request for a federal investigation was "too little, too late."

Daughtry also called for a hearing to allow victims of police brutality to tell their stories, saying, "We know there are countless victims out there who for various reasons have not come forward."

Caffeine Has No Effect On Hypertensives Death Rates

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — People with high blood pressure who regularly consume caffeine are no more likely to die than those who avoid coffee and tea, according to a researcher who studied more than 10,000 Americans.

Doctors often advise hypertensive people to reduce their coffee intake, but "the level of caffeine intake did not have an effect on mortality," Jeanne Martin, director of nutrition dietetics at the University of Texas Health Science Center, said Thursday at the annual meeting of the Federation of American Societies for Experimental Biology.

Ms. Martin said her findings corroborate other studies which dealt with general populations rather than people with hypertension.

Another study presented Thursday found pregnant rats who were fed caffeine equivalent to 10 cups of coffee daily produced more stillborn pups if they were deprived of adequate protein than if they received a balanced diet.

"Let me emphasize I'm looking at an animal model, and animals and humans are different," said physiologist Tetsuo Nakamoto, who conducted the study at Louisiana State University Medical Center.

So Nakamoto said that as a matter of caution, he simply would advise pregnant women to eat a proper diet and moderate their use of caffeine.

A recent Stanford University study of sedentary middle-age men found those who drank more than two cups of coffee daily had high levels of cholesterol and a protein associated with heart disease. It contradicted several studies showing no link between coffee drinking and cardiovascular disease.

"There have been several attempts over the years to associate coffee drinking or caffeine ingestion with cardiovascular morbidity (illness) or mortality" in general populations, with no such link established, said Dr. David Goldstein, a senior investigator at the National Heart, Blood and Lung Institute, which funded Ms. Martin's study.

Ms. Martin studied data collected from 10,064 hypertensive American adults from 1973 through 1979 as part of a larger federal study of treatment for high blood pressure. The people were classified into four groups: those who didn't use caffeine from coffee, tea or medications and those who used equivalents of up to two cups, two to four cups and more than four cups daily.

The caffeine users and non-users experienced no statistically significant difference in the death rates from all causes. There also were no differences in death rates from strokes, other cardiovascular diseases and cancer, Ms. Martin said.

Goldstein agreed with the Texas nutritionist that there is no evidence to suggest people with high blood pressure shouldn't consume caffeine.

Asked if such patients can drink as much coffee as they want, Ms. Martin said, "I wouldn't go that far. Some people drink nine cups a day and it may be too much."

JENKINS SELECTED — Peggy Jenkins, left, has been selected by Union Carbide Corp. Battery Products Division in Greenville to attend a week-long congressional seminar for students in Washington this summer. Miss Jenkins is a junior at North Pitt High School and competed with six candidates from the area for the award. The congressional seminar program is organized by the Washington Workshops Foundation.

Students spend the week meeting with senators, representatives and other government leaders. They attend legislative sessions and committee meetings. In addition, informal classroom sessions provide students with basic instruction in the governmental process. Students were selected on their scholastic record and interest in civic and student activities.

Chinese Woman's Body Will Be Buried Three Years Later

CHICAGO (AP) — Nearly three years after Shui Mak was abducted and found slain, she finally will be buried.

But her parents still feel anger and confusion toward an American justice system that led to their 30-year-old daughter's decomposed body being held in storage since 1982 for evidence.

The men accused of being her attackers have since been convicted of other slayings and sentenced, and the woman will be laid to rest Saturday.

"We're glad everything's over," said Ling Zuehsow, one of the family's other daughters. "But my parents, they just can't accept this at all."

The parents, who speak little English, came to the United States from China in 1976 and opened a restaurant in north suburban Streamwood.

Shui Mak disappeared May 29, 1982, as she rode home with her brother from the restaurant. During an argument, he stopped his car and let her out so she could join her parents and sister driving behind them.

But they did not see her get out of the car and didn't realize she was missing until they reached their home in west suburban Lombard.

Five months later, her body was found in a field.

In December 1982, Edward Spreitzer, 24, and Andrew Kokoraleis, 21, were charged with murder in her death as evidence began to unfold in a string of mutilation killings.

Spreitzer, Robin Gecht, 30, Kokoraleis, and his brother, Thomas, 25, are serving prison sentences in at least one of the slayings.

But with those charges came word from prosecutors that Shui Mak's family could bury their daughter, but the remains might be disinterred if needed as evidence.

The family's Buddhist beliefs require that a body not be disturbed once it is buried.

"My parents, they live in an older culture," Ling Zuehsow said. "I talked to them and finally they accepted it. But they thought it might be about a year. They can't understand why it has been three years."

Joel Goldstein, assistant Cook County state's attorney, said circumstances of the case were unusual. The woman's body was badly decomposed so the only indications of how she was killed were nicks on bones that appeared to be knife marks.

"I knew it was tough for them," Goldstein said. "You could feel their anguish over the murder, and then not being able to bring her physical remains to a final resting place."

But he added, "What would the family's reaction be if, because we didn't have the remains, someone was found not guilty?"

No trial has been held in the slaying, although Spreitzer pleaded guilty to killing four people, including Shui Mak.

Andrew Kokoraleis was convicted of another murder and evidence at his sentencing hearing that he also killed her helped prosecutors get a life term, Goldstein said.

Teen Is Acquitted In Ritual Slaying

RIVERHEAD, N.Y. (AP) — A 19-year-old man was found innocent of second-degree murder charges today in the fatal stabbing of another youth in a drug-induced ritual.

The Suffolk County jury acquitted James Troiano after about 12 hours of deliberation.

Troiano had been charged with holding down Gary Lauwers, 17, while another teen-ager, Richard Kasso, stabbed him more than 30 times and forced him to say "I love Satan" in woods in the Village of Northport last June.

Kasso, 17, committed suicide in jail in July, two days after his arrest.

In closing arguments Monday, defense lawyer Eric Naiburg said Troiano had confessed taking part in the killing only because he was confused from taking hallucinogenic drugs and wanted to help the police.

"There is, ladies and gentlemen, a devil in this case, and the devil is LSD," Naiburg said.

Speaking of Troiano and Albert

Quinones, the only other witness to the killing, Naiburg said, "The devil has taken from them, and therefore from us, the ability to determine what is real and what is fantasy."

Both sides had agreed that Kasso did the stabbing.

The prosecution asserted that Troiano had handed Kasso the murder weapon and held Lauwers while Kasso stabbed him.

Reagan, Korean Leader Meeting On Good Terms

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan was meeting with South Korean President Chun Doo-hwan today at a time when, except for trade issues, U.S. relations with the Seoul government are at a high point.

Reagan, in a White House conversation with the South Korean leader, was to praise the steady progress made by Koreans in promoting individual liberty and a more open political system, U.S. officials said.

Relations between the two countries have reached a high point as a result of the relatively open National Assembly elections two months ago in South Korea and the government's release of most political prisoners.

These advances have transcended continuing problems over trade. The Reagan administration claims the $3.6 billion surplus that South Korea has in its trade with the United States is partly the result of Korean import restrictions.

For their part, the Koreans are angry over the sale of 87 U.S.-made helicopters to communist North Korea through a third party. The United States has deplored the transaction "in the strongest terms" and is investigating to determine whether there was any illegal involvement by U.S. citizens.

Following his late morning meeting with Reagan and a White House luncheon, Chun was to meet with Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger and Vice President George Bush.

Previously, Reagan and Chun met in Washington in February 1981 and in Seoul in November 1983. The two leaders are said to have developed a warm personal relationship.

Earlier this week, the State Department expressed concern over the continuing deployment of North Korean forces close to the Demilitarized Zone and the existence of the North's 100,000-member commando unit.

"The implications of this, the increasing mechanization of North Korean forces and other developments will certainly be on the agenda for the visit," State Department spokesman Edward Djerejian said.

In a gesture that pleased the administration, South Korea gave opposition leader Kim Dae-jung his freedom seven weeks ago and lifted a political ban on other government critics.

South Korea's treatment of Kim had long been a sore point in U.S.-Korean relations. When Reagan was elected in 1980, Kim had been under death sentence on charges of sedition.

Although he now is free to speak out on political issues, Kim, who returned to Seoul earlier this year from U.S. exile, is still denied his civil rights.

Political liberalization in South Korea has led to signs of anti-Americanism, including a recent demonstration at the American Cultural Center in Pusan.

In Washington on Thursday, about 35 Korean Americans, both for and against Chun, demonstrated outside the State Department, U.S. Park Police said. No arrests were reported.

U.S.-based anti-Chun groups planned other protests during his 40-hour visit here. A coalition of groups and individuals critical of Chun published an open letter to Reagan that appeared as a paid advertisement in Thursday's editions of the New York Times.

It read: "Erosion of goodwill toward the United States is attributable to the perception that Washington supported Mr. Chun in each step of his bloody seizure of power and continues to endorse his dictatorial rule."

Drought Emergency Set

NEW YORK (AP) — Mayor Edward I. Koch said today he would declare a drought emergency, triggering mandatory water conservation measures for New York City residents and businesses.

The mayor scheduled a news conference to announce the declaration, and to call on city residents to curb water use voluntarily.

Under a drought emergency, cars, sidewalks and building exteriors cannot be washed with city water. Professional car-washers have to use recycled water, and restaurants can serve water only if requested by customers.

Rainfall has been much less than expected during the first months of this year, and reservoirs have dropped to less than one-half of capacity, according to the city's Department of Environmental Protection.

portedly were freed Wednesday.

They said their action at Florennes air base on Monday was a protest against the arrest of 12 pacifists who broke into the missile base on April 12. The 12 have since been released.

According to Belgian law, members of Parliament are deprived of their parliamentary immunity when arrested.

Picture Described As 'Not Bright' For Future Of Artificial Hearts

By PAUL RAEUBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — All of the four patients in the United States who have received permanent artificial hearts have developed infections, weakened immune systems and anemia.

All have had subsequent bleeding problems and kidney malfunctions, and three have had difficulty breathing.

Two have died, the most recent of them on Wednesday night after only 10 days of life with the mechanical heart.

The picture is not bright, as Dr. William C. DeVries, the surgeon who implanted the artificial hearts, agrees.

On Wednesday, hours before the death of 62-year-old artificial heart recipient Jack Burcham, DeVries gave participants at a scientific conference on heart replacement a dim view of the artificial heart experiment so far.

He recited the list of complications in the four patients. The average hospital stay for the patients is 90 days, with 30 to 60 of those days spent in intensive care, he said.

Nevertheless, DeVries is optimistic. This is an experiment, he said, and experiments frequently fail. But the experiment will continue.

"As soon as we find another patient that's adequate, and everything's OK, we'll go ahead and do another one," he said after Burcham's death.

DeVries has permission from the Food and Drug Administration to do another three implants of the Jarvik-7 heart before he must report his findings to the FDA and seek approval for additional implants.

Despite the rather dismal results of the experiment so far, the FDA has no plans now to intervene to stop it, said John Villforth, director of the FDA's Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

"As far as I know, there's no data coming into the agency that would sound the alarm," Villforth said Thursday.

The agency could step in to stop the project immediately if it determined that continued investigation would have no benefit, Villforth said. "It's unusual but not unheard of to do that," he said.

Many of the questions surrounding the artificial heart experiment at Humana Hospital Audubon in Louisville, Ky., arise from the blurring of the line between conducting scientific research and employing compassionate, emergency measures to save lives.

The research that DeVries is doing is intended to determine the safety and effectiveness of the Jarvik-7 artificial heart, one of a variety of artificial hearts now under development around the world.

It is not primarily intended to save people's lives, as the family of William Schroeder, the second heart recipient, has found out.

"Bill thought he'd either die or be better," his wife, Margaret, told Life magazine.

After a series of debilitating strokes left Schroeder able to speak only with difficulty and unable to remember things from one day to the next, Margaret said, "I see it as more of a research experiment..."

"If he had anticipated the hardship that this has been on the family, he might not have done it," she said.

Schroeder, who received his mechanical heart on Nov. 24, is the only artificial heart recipient to have left the hospital. He and his wife are now living in a hospital-owned apartment across the street from Humana Hospital Audubon. Schroeder is receiving 24-hour nursing care.

DeVries is one of two American surgeons engaged in long-term research and development of artificial hearts. The other is Dr. William S. Pierce of the Hershey Medical Center in Hershey, Pa.

Pierce recently received approval to begin testing an artificial heart of his own design called the Pennsylvania State University heart. He has been working on the development of the heart for 15 years.

DeVries likes to point out that heart transplants, which are now considered by many health officials to be routine, were not immediately successful.

Taiwan Jet Hijacked

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — A China Airlines Boeing 737 with 107 people aboard was hijacked today by an army sergeant who claimed to have a container of acid, the government said. The pilot landed the plane in Taipei, where the man surrendered peacefully.

Liu Teh-ming, director general of the Civil Aeronautics Administration, said the man, 26-year-old Lei Yao-hwa, told a stewardess shortly after take-off that he wanted to divert the domestic Taiwanese flight to the British territory of Hong Kong.

The plane was heading from Taipei to Kaohsiung, 169 miles to the south.

The stewardess informed the pilot, who ignored the hijacker's demand and returned the plane to Taipei, where it immediately was surrounded by police and Lei surrendered peacefully, Liu said.

Lei's container held only water — not acid, police said.

The plane later resumed its flight to Kaohsiung with the rest of the passengers.

Police said Lei has a Hong Kong passport. Ethnic Chinese from other countries who live in Taiwan can be recruited into military service.

Taiwan is the seat of the Nationalist Chinese government which was defeated on the Chinese mainland by the Communists in 1949.

Cigarettes Taken From PCMH Carts

Cigarettes have been removed from the Greenville Service League carts which sell to patients and their visitors on the halls of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Selling of cigarettes was stopped April 17 after the hospital administration, in adherence with a recommendation of the executive committee of the medical staff, requested that the removal be made.

"It was done for patient safety," Fred Brown, a hospital vice president said, "It's our policy to ask patients not to smoke in bed and to smoke in the rooms only when there is an attendant present. It's not entirely possible to enforce this policy, but it's made much harder when patients can buy their own cigarettes off the carts. We really have to be concerned about fire in the hospital, especially with all the oxygen equipment present, and we just have to do everything we can to curtail smoking in the rooms."

Brown said the Service League will still be selling cigarettes in its coffee shop in the lobby of the hospital.

Jo Smith, president of the Service League, said to the best of her knowledge Service League members were not upset about taking cigarettes off the carts. "We're volunteers here to serve the hospital and its patients," she said. "So we want to do whatever is best for the patients. If the administration and the medical staff feels that this is best, it's fine with us."

She said the cigarettes the League had stocked for the carts are simply being transferred to the coffee shop.

Pedestrian Hurt

Two persons were injured, one of them a 6-year-old boy, in two traffic accidents investigated by Greenville police Thursday.

Officers said Herbert Jermaine Paige of 1204 Myrtle Ave. was taken to Pitt County Memorial Hospital for treatment after he walked into the path of a car driven by Elizabeth Taylor Nichols of 104 Rodney Road about 5:28 p.m. at the intersection of 14th Street and Myrtle Avenue.

No charges were made in connection with the incident and no damage was reported to the car.

Police said vehicles driven by Floyd Preston Harris, 71, of 1205 Greenville Blvd., Jimmy Ray Arnold of Route 5, Greenville, and Gina Gwen Brown of Route 4, Greenville, were involved in a 5:42 p.m. collision on the Greene Street bridge, 1,040 feet north of the First Street intersection.

Investigators, who charged Harris with operating left of center, said the Harris truck crossed the center line and collided with the other two vehicles. Harris was injured in the accident, which caused damages estimated at $4,000 to the Harris truck, $4,000 to the Brown car and $1,000 to the Arnold car.

Center Discussed

State Sen. Tom Taft of Greenville and Danel le Roux, director of Eastern Vocational Center Inc., met recently in Raleigh to discuss how to better serve the physically and mentally handicapped persons in Pitt, Beaufort, Martin and other eastern North Carolina counties.

State Reps. Ed Warren and Walter Jones Jr. also attended the meeting.

The center provides vocational evaluation and work adjustment training for over 400 adults in the area each year. Services are funded through contracts with local industries as well as the N.C. Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse and Vocational Rehabilitation. The Pitt and Martin county boards of commissioners also financially support the center, which is located on Staton Road in Greenville's Industrial Park.

Alumni Scholarship

Stephanie Elizabeth Creech of Winterville has been awarded an alumni scholarship to attend the University of North Carolina at Greensboro this fall.

Valued at $1,500 a year, the scholarships are awarded annually on the basis of academic standing, leadership ability and character. The scholarships are renewable for up to three additional years of undergraduate study.

Miss Creech, a senior at D.H. Conley High School, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Kirkman Creech of Route 1, Winterville. She is a member of the National Honor Society, a graduation marshal and secretary of the Latin Club. She has performed in various school theater productions.

She also is district secretary of the Methodist Youth Fellowship and secretary and treasurer of Troop 550, Explorer Scouts. She is a member of the Greenville Choral Society and the Jarvis Singers and was a member of the 1984 North Carolina Honors Chorus.

Multiple Charges

Carl Bush Jr., 36, of 1315 W. Fourth St. was arrested on multiple traffic charges Thursday night following a chase which resulted in a collision between Bush's car and a Greenville Police Department vehicle.

Police said the incident occurred about 11:49 p.m. on Hudson Street near the Fourth Street intersection.

Officer J.K. McCarthy charged Bush with driving while impaired, driving while his license was permanently revoked, and resisting arrest, while Officer L.E. White, who was driving the police vehicle which collided with Bush's car, charged Bush with careless and reckless driving, failing to stop for a blue light and siren, and failing to stop for a stop sign.

Highway Patrol Trooper Bobby Backus, who investigated the collision, estimated damage at $300 to each of the two cars.

World population now grows by about 79 million people a year, the report said, and will increase by 89 million a year by the end of the century. It projected a global population in the year 2000 of 6.1 billion people — 80 percent of them in developing countries.

Facts About The

BIBLE

BY

THE LAND OF REPHIDIM!

REPHIDIM WAS A CAMPING GROUND OF THE ISRAELITES IN THE WILDERNESS. (EX.17:1) IT WAS LOCATED BETWEEN THE WILDERNESS OF SIN AND MOUNT SINAI. THERE WAS NO WATER OBTAINABLE UNTIL MOSES SMOTE A ROCK, FROM WHICH WATER FLOWED, BY DIVINE COMMAND! THE WATER TRAVELED DOWN THE BED OF A WADI TO THE CAMP OF THE ISRAELITES, SUPPLYING THEM ALL DURING THEIR STAY AT MOUNT SINAI. REPHIDIM ALSO WAS THE SCENE OF THE BATTLE WITH THE AMALEKITES AND THE FIRST TIME JOSHUA WAS PICKED BY MOSES TO LEAD THE ISRAELITES IN COMBAT! THE SITE OF THE BATTLE CANNOT BE EXACTLY DETERMINED, BUT PROBABLY IS LOCATED ON WADI REFAID, WHICH IS NORTHWEST OF JEBEL MUSA AND TO THIS DAY, STILL HAS A STREAM OF COLD WATER WHICH RUNS DOWN TO JOIN WADI REFAID AND SUPPLIES AN OASIS AT THE FOOT OF JEBEL REFAID.

...AND SLOWLY THE FLOW OF BATTLE, SWINGS WITH THE ISRAELITES! STEP BY STEP, THE AMALEKITES ARE DRIVEN BACK BY THE SLASHING SWORD WORK OF JOSHUA AND HIS MEN, BACK AND BACK, UNTIL, NOW, THEY ARE FORCED UP THE HILLSIDE FROM WHENCE THEY HAD SO FIERCELY RUSHED!

JIM McMANUS

SATURDAY, APRIL 27

Memorial Drive

8:00 a.m. — Gathering
8:15 a.m. — Breakfast

Jim McManus was born in Mt. Holly and raised in the Charlotte area of North Carolina. He attended East Carolina and Western Carolina Universities receiving degrees in Science and Mathematics. Following graduation Jim taught Math for a number of years before entering into the radio and television field in which he has spent 25 years. For the past 12 years, Jim has been involved in Christian media, developing several Christian TV stations from inception. Jim has served as a lay leader and teacher in the Methodist Church, and was baptized in the Holy Spirit in 1972. It was at this time that God performed a miracle in transforming Jim's life from a self oriented to a Christ oriented one. At present, Jim is President and General Manager of WBZQ Radio, and founder and General Manager of the Christian Mission. Jim and his helpmate, Jan, have two daughters Lynn and Leisa, who like their parents are lovely Christians.

National Prayer Day Set Thursday

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — The National Day of Prayer Task Force urges Americans to "take five at 12" next Thursday — five minutes at noon — to give thanks to God and to pray for his "continued blessing on the nation."

The non-denominational task force, through a network of state coordinators, also is encouraging special prayer services.

President Reagan, in a proclamation setting the May 2 date for the annual national observances, said, "We are all God's handiwork, and it is appropriate for us as individuals and as a nation to call to him in prayer..."

"We can give thanks to God for the ever increasing abundance he has bestowed on us, and we can remember all those in our society who are in need of help, whether it be in material assistance or in the form of charity or simply a friendly word of encouragement."

Pitt County has lost a very compassionate and dedicated volunteer. Josephine Reeves will be missed. A portion of Grace Easley's poem entitled "Always A Way" reflects a philosophy Josephine must have believed.

*There's always a way, but we have to try,
Though life is a gift to you and I,
We can't expect to merely sit,
With never an effort to merit it.
There's always a way, though the going's rough
And only our best is good enough,
We haven't the time to count each loss,
If the bridge is out, we swim across.*

Josephine swam across many times for you and me in order to make Pitt County a better place in which to live. We who served with her and knew her are better for having known such a fine lady.

NASA Beginning Countdown For Next Shuttle, Now Set For Launch On Monday

By HOWARD BENEDICT

AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA is hoping to cut in half its shortest time between shuttle missions by launching Challenger just 17 days after Discovery's liftoff.

The launch team was to assemble in the control center to start the countdown clock at noon today, with liftoff set for noon Monday. The shuttle will carry a crew of seven men, two squirrel monkeys, 24 rats and a European-built space laboratory mounted in the cargo bay.

Challenger's sister ship, Discovery, blasted away from the same launch pad on April 12 and returned to Earth a week ago today. The previous shortest period between launches was 34 days.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration had set a goal of launching an average of one shuttle a month during 1985. Problems earlier this year scrambled that schedule but if the agency can dispatch the eight flights it has remaining on the schedule this year, it can come close, with a total of 10 missions.

Fifteen flights are scheduled next year and 17 in 1987.

During a week in space, Challenger's crew, including two physicians and three scientists, will conduct 15 different types of experiments in the 12-ton Spacelab, which is 23 feet long and 13 feet in diameter. The investigations will be in five research disciplines — materials processing, fluid mechanics, life sciences, atmospheric physics and astronomy.

Drs. Norman Thagard and William Thornton will perform medical experiments on themselves and other crewmen and observe the monkeys and rats to see how they adapt to weightless space. Their main task with the animals will be to determine whether a new space cage is safe and adequate.

Discovery had brake problems and blew a tire when it landed here last week.

Canadian Seal Hunters Try To Revive Controversial Hunt

TORONTO (AP) — Canadian sealers are working to revive their annual hunt — smothered in recent years under the weight of worldwide protests — by finding new markets, especially in the Far East.

"We can't go any lower than we've gone," said Mark Small, president of the Canadian Sealers Association. There is no market at all for seal pelts this year, he said, and local sales of seal meat and blubber do not bring in enough money to support a large-scale hunt.

But Small said he and his fellow seal hunters are optimistic about the near future.

"Within two or three years we could have a pretty good sealing industry here in Canada," Small said in a telephone interview from his home in Wild Cove, Newfoundland, where the season will last a few more weeks.

"We have markets for all the meat we can produce. We have markets for the seal oil," he said. "We have tested the leather market and it looks like by next year we could be selling into that market."

The next step, Small said, is to have seal pelts tanned and made into clothing to be sold in Hong Kong and elsewhere in Asia.

Canadian seal imports are banned by the United States and the 10-nation European Common Market, where photographs of the gory slaughter, accompanied by images of the doe-eyed and helpless harp seal pups, have aroused intense opposition to the hunt.

Even defenders of sealing acknowledge that the sight is not pretty, but they argue that the seal hunt is no more cruel than the killing of lambs or cattle in a slaughterhouse.

With no one buying, a hunt that once took hundreds of thousands of seals each year has dwindled to a much smaller enterprise, with most of the catch used locally for the seal meat.

This year, about 2,000 seals were killed around the Magdalen Islands in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, while another 10,000 have been taken off the northeastern coast of Newfoundland, where the season will last a few more weeks.

"Based on the hunt take in 1985, we have a victory," said Alan Reichman, an official of Greenpeace, one of the environmental groups that have campaigned against the seal hunt.

"But we have to be on guard. There certainly is a possibility that the Canadian

Rampants Outslug Knights, 13-9

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Scott Davis and James Matthews each drove in four runs and Eric Jarman added a two-run homer as Rose High School outslug Northern Nash, 13-9, last night in Big East Conference baseball action.

The victory gained revenge for an earlier loss to the Knights by Rose in the league's opening game of the year. It also upped the hopes of the Rampants for a shot at the playoffs, despite having lost four of seven first round games.

"We played well tonight," Coach Ronald Vincent said. "If we can just keep it going, we might be a factor in the conference race."

"This was a very good win for us. We played hard offensively and defensively. Scott Davis (shortstop) played well and Gary Scott pitched well at times. He had some trouble with some bad pitches, and (Steve) Wall did just what we wanted him to do when we brought him in."

Wall came in in the seventh after Scott gave up an inning-opening homer to strike out the next two batters and get the next one on a pop-up back to the mound.

Davis, playing only his second varsity game, banged out three hits in four trips including a two-run homer to drive in four runs, while Matthews, with two hits in three trips, also brought four runs around.

Jarman had three hits in four at-bats and drove in two runs. Doyle Kirkland and Tyrone Jones also added two hits each for Rose.

Early on, however, it looked like the Knights might be taking up where they left off. Jack Medlin opened the game with a walk and stole second. Charlie Long reached on a single off Scott's glove at the mound and Sam Vines grounded to short, getting Long, but scoring Medlin. An error on the play moved Vines to second and he took third on an infield out. Tim Wilson then walked and Maurice Cooper beat out an infield hit, scoring Vines for a 2-0 lead.

The Knights added two more in the second. Gary Wallace doubled to center and Dexter Arrington walked. Ground outs by Medlin and Long brought in the two runners for a 4-0 lead.

But Rose sent 10 men to the plate in the bottom of the inning scoring four times to pull back even. Wall opened with a single and Jones followed with another. Davis doubled to center, scoring Wall and Matthews' single brought in Jones and Davis. After Battle Emory singled, a sacrifice fly by Scott scored courtesy runner Lenny Langley with the tying run.

Rose took the lead for good in the third with one run. Jones opened with an infield hit and advanced a base on an error on the play. He moved to third on an out and scored on Matthews' ground out.

The fourth saw the Rampants push over five more runs for a 10-4 lead. Kirkland got things going with a walk and Jarman homered to center. Alston followed with a double to left and with two away, Jones walked. Davis singled in Alston and when the ball got through center, he raced to third as Jones scored. Matthews followed with another hit scoring Davis with the tenth run.

Northern rallied for three in the top of the fifth. Wilson was safe on a fielder's choice and advanced on a passed ball and an out. Jesse Hunter singled him in, taking second on another passed ball. Wallace walked, as did Arrington, loading the bases. Medlin then singled to score two.

The Knights cut the lead to 10-8 with a run in the sixth. That came off the bat of Wilson, who knocked it out of the park in left.

Rose came back to score three insurance runs in the bottom of the sixth. Jones walked and Davis cracked his first varsity homer to center. Matthews followed with a walk and Langley, running for him, stole second. He scored on a single by Kirkland.

Scott gave up a homer to Hunter to open the seventh and that brought on Wall, who fanned the next two batters and got the last on a pop-up.

Adams and Hunter led the Northern hitting with two each.

The win boosted the Rose record to 10-6 overall and 4-4 in Big East play. Northern Nash falls to 12-5 overall, 5-3 in the conference.

Rose returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to league-leading Rocky Mount for a 7:30 p.m. contest.

Wright, Whitworth Surprise The Men In Legends' Golf

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Mickey Wright and Kathy Whitworth proved they weren't just a publicity gimmick for the $500,000 Liberty Mutual Legends of Golf Tournament.

There were some red faces in the men's clubhouse Thursday after the Wright-Whitworth team posted a 5-under par 65 playing from the back tees.

It was the first appearance for women in a PGA-sanctioned event against men in head-to-head competition.

Defending champions Billy Casper and Gay Brewer were among five teams to beat the women in the opening round of the 72-hole, better-ball event. They shot an 8-under par 62 for the first round lead.

"I'm elated," said the 45-year-old Whitworth, winner of 87 professional events, the most in golf history.

"I'm delighted," said Wright, 50, a winner of 82 tournaments who came out of a five-year retirement to play here.

The guys in the locker room were almost speechless. "Were they playing from the same tees?" asked Bob Goalby. "I didn't think they could do that to be quite honest."

The teams of Ken Still and Roberto DeVicenzo and Charlie Sifford and Jim Ferree were locked in second place with a 7-under par 63.

Art Wall and Doug Sanders and Orville Moody and Billy Maxwell were at 6-under 64.

Tied for fifth place with Wright and Whitworth were Peter Thomson-Kel Nagle, Fred Haas-Dick Mayer, Miller Barber-Goalby, and Don January-Gene Litter.

The women were paired with January and Littler today.

Whitworth birdied four of the first six holes and chipped in a 30-footer from off the green on the 18th hole. Wright saved par on two holes Whitworth had bogied.

However, Brewer, who had six birdies himself, predicted the women weren't going to win.

"I don't feel they are capable of winning the tournament but they are going to beat some teams out here," said Brewer. "Their score is fantastic."

Wright said she was a "nervous Nellie" on the first tee.

"On the first tee, I felt like a teen-ager who never had a club in her hand," Wright said. "I was frightened to death. I was praying I wouldn't hook it."

Whitworth said, "I was really nervous but I can imagine how nervous Mickey had to be."

An admiring Still said he thought their round "was just terrific. Why not women in this tournament? Where would we be in the world without them?"

Wright said they were just playing the 6,584-yard Par 70 course, not against the men.

"We don't feel we are playing against the men," she said. "We're just trying to have a good time."

Whitworth added, "We're not on a mission here. We couldn't play the men head-to-head all the time. All I know is that I'm delighted. It was like old times out there."

One of the teams Whitworth-Wright beat included Arnold Palmer and Don Finsterwald, who could manage only a 70.

Denny McLain Sentenced To 23 Years In Prison

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — After telling a judge he's suffered "shame, disgrace and humiliation," one-time major league pitching star Denny McLain was led from the courthouse in manacles to begin a 23-year sentence for racketeering, extortion and drug dealing.

"I'm guilty of greed, avarice ... bad judgment. I've been selfish but also a loving husband," McLain said during a sentencing hearing Thursday.

"I don't know how you get to where I am from where I was 17 years ago," he said, adding: "I'll pay for my conviction the rest of my life."

For baseball's last 30-game winner, it's been a long slide from the glory days of 1968 when he pitched the Detroit Tigers to a world championship.

In a packed courtroom, U.S. District Judge Elizabeth Kovachevich admonished McLain for "failure to admit to yourself your own guilt," and warned him "with regard to drugs, I'll tell you right now, I'm going to deal harshly with you."

She then sentenced him to eight years each for racketeering, conspiracy and extortion, to run concurrently.

And she gave the 41-year-old two-time Cy Young Award winner the maximum 15 years for trying to deal three kilos of cocaine in 1982, stressing that the term was "consecutive — that's in addition to." She also fined him $8,900.

Marshals led McLain from the courtroom to a holding cell where he was permitted time with his wife, Sharon, their two daughters, who sobbed when sentence was imposed.

"He was destroyed by the length of the sentence," Defense attorney Arnold Levine said after a brief meeting with McLain.

"I think that much time was uncalled for. I didn't have any quarrel with the eight years," Levine added. "But I thought the consecutive was too harsh."

Outside the courtroom, Assistant

U.S. Attorney Ernst Mueller, who prosecuted the case, said: "I think justice was done. I think the court on the matter of drugs — cocaine in this case — was sending a message."

Mueller said McLain probably will have to serve one-third of the sentence — eight years — before being considered eligible for parole.

Levine said he will ask bond for McLain while he appeals. "He expects we'll be successful on appeal and he'll be out in about 10 months," Levine said.

McLain was convicted March 16 following a 14-week trial. Last week, co-defendants Seymour Sher and Frank Cocchiaro received maximum 20-year prison terms for racketeering, conspiracy and extortion.

The government claimed McLain charged loan-shark victims interest rates up to 150 percent; booked illegal bets on sports events and threatened violence to collect debts.

From the stand, McLain admitted being a longtime gambler and a bookie, but insisted he was innocent of the charges.

Levine, seeking a second delay, complained that McLain was suffering from the flu and laryngitis. The judge allowed him to sit while the hour-long proceedings took place.

McLain spoke from a prepared statement during the hearing, portraying himself as a family man who has often been a victim of bad judgment. "At times I've tried to make a fast buck."

"I've brought enormous shame on my entire family," he said, pausing, apparently incapable of speaking for a few seconds.

No sentence, he said, could match the "humiliation of wearing handcuffs before the TV cameras, the degradation."

Levine described McLain as man sheltered by major league baseball organizations fresh out of high school in Chicago.

"He was put up on a pedestal. He was somewhat naive.... He was not a scholar. He happened to have a sensational arm. That's all it was," the defense attorney said.

McLain posted a 31-6 record in 1968 to become the first pitcher in 34 years to win 30 games in a season.

His career nosedived in 1970, though, when a pair of suspensions — one of them for involvement with gamblers — sidelined him for most of the year.

He retired from baseball in 1972 at the age of 28, leaving with a 131-91 lifetime record.

Mickey Lolich, a pitcher at the same time as McLain, wasn't surprised about his former teammate's troubles.

Dodgers Not Doing Much Right — Except Winning

By The Associated Press

According to their manager, the Los Angeles Dodgers aren't doing many things right these days. As a matter of fact, winning is about all they can do.

"Things have been going very good for us despite the problems," said Tom Lasorda said after Thursday night's 6-3 victory over the San Diego Padres put the Dodgers into first place in the National League West over the defending league champions.

For the first time this season, the Dodgers scored as many as six runs. And for a change, they didn't make as many errors as they usually do. Along with the offensive and defensive deficiencies, the Dodgers have also been hit with a rash of injuries.

"The guys have been playing hard," Lasorda said. "Everybody is chipping in. We're getting the clutch hits and the pitching has been exceptional."

Rick Honeycutt earned his first victory of the season, scattering four hits in eight innings, and Mike Marshall and Mike Scioscia drove in two runs apiece to key the Dodger win.

With the score tied 1-1, the Dodgers broke it open with a three-run sixth, the first on a run-scoring single by Al Oliver and the other two on Scioscia's two-out, bases-loaded single.

The Dodgers got their final two runs in the seventh off reliever Luis DeLeon on run-scoring single by Pedro Guerrero and Marshall's fielder's-choice grounder. Reliever Tom Niedenfuer gave up a run-scoring single to Terry Kennedy and a sacrifice fly to Carmelo Martinez before shutting the door on the Padres in the ninth.

Honeycutt, who had surgery during the off-season, said he's still not 100 percent.

"Overall, it was good," he said of his performance. "I need to keep getting a little stronger. As the game went on I was able to get better control of the sinker."

"I'm pleased with the way I'm throwing. It'll come with time. I'm

Brewers' Rally Puts Tigers In Second

By The Associated Press
The American League East couldn't say this at any time during 1984 but they're sure to like the sound — the ... second ... place ... Detroit ... Tigers.

It wasn't easy, but the Tigers, who owned at least a share of first place every day en route to the 1984 world championship and so far this year, as well, managed to blow a 7-1 lead in the last two innings Thursday night and lose to the Milwaukee Brewers 11-7.

That dropped Detroit into a second-place tie with Milwaukee, one-half game behind the Baltimore Orioles, who trounced the Cleveland Indians 7-1.

"We were due one," said Detroit Manager Sparky Anderson. "It's the first time we've been beaten in the ninth inning in a long time. I won't forget this one right away. I imagine I'll think about it for awhile. Scoring 10 runs in two innings I'm sure is going to give the Brewers a boost."

Milwaukee hammered starter Milt Wilcox and relief ace Willie Hernandez for five runs in the eighth inning and jumped on Bill Scherrer with two out in the ninth on Paul Molitor's game-tying solo homer and Ted Simmons' first AL grand slam.

In other AL games, New York downed Boston 5-1, Minnesota nipped Oakland 5-4 and California blanked Seattle 3-0. Chicago, Kansas City, Texas and Toronto were not scheduled.

The Tigers opened a 7-1 lead over Milwaukee behind Wilcox's strong pitching while Alan Trammell had two triples and a homer and drove in Detroit's first four runs.

But singles by pinch-hitter Paul Householder and Rick Manning plus Molitor's two-run double chased Wilcox in the eighth. Hernandez walked Robin Yount and struck out Mark Brouhard, but Ben Oglivie's double made it 7-4. Simmons singled another run across and the fifth run of the inning came home on Bill Schroeder's sacrifice fly.

Scherrer retired the first two batters in the ninth before Molitor's first home run of the season tied the score. Yount and Brian Giles singled and Oglivie was hit by a pitch before Simmons hit Scherrer's first pitch over the left-field fence for his eighth career grand slam.

"Scherrer threw a curveball on the first pitch to every batter he faced," said Simmons. "When I got up there, he quickly shook off the first sign and I knew he would be coming with a fastball. I was ready for it, and when I hit it I knew it was a home run."

The setback was Detroit's sixth in the last eight games after a 6-0 start. Last year, the Tigers didn't lose for the sixth time until their 41st game.

"I think it's good for us to lose a couple of games," said Wilcox. "I think we realize we're human, that we're going to lose games like that once in a while. After jumping off to a 35-5 start last year, we started expecting we were going to win every time out there. Our bullpen just didn't come through. They saved games for me all last year. Tonight they didn't."

Orioles 7, Indians 1
Rookie Ken Dixon pitched a three-hitter for his first major-league victory. The 24-year-old right-hander allowed one hit over the first eight innings and lost his shutout bid in the ninth. The Orioles scored an unearned run without a hit in the fourth inning and erupted for six runs against Jose Roman and Mike Jeffcoat in the sixth as Eddie Murray, Fred Lynn and Rick Dempsey all homered. Murray and Dempsey hit two-run shots.

"The first one is always nice to break the ice, but now I'm just looking to improve on it and hope that it will be a good sign of the things to come," said Dixon.

"He pitched a good ballgame," said Manager Joe Altobelli. "He pitched well all though spring training. You couldn't ask for more. He pitched his way onto the ballclub, and he is continuing it. We like what we've seen."

Yankees 5, Red Sox 1
Phil Niekro, New York's 46-year-old knuckleballer, scattered five singles and struck out nine in 7 2-3 innings as the Yankees defeated Boston for the first time in six meetings this season.

The Yankees scored twice to take a 3-1 lead in the bottom of the third on three consecutive doubles against Bruce Hurst. With two out, Dave Winfield's pop fly fell in short right field for a double. Don Baylor followed with a double high off the wall in left-center that scored Winfield and Baylor scored on a double by Ken Griffey. The Yankees added two runs in the seventh when Boston left fielder Jim Rice dropped Griffey's long fly ball with two runners aboard for a three-base error.

Twins 5, Athletics 4
Kirby Puckett greeted newly acquired Oakland reliever Tom Tellmann with a game-winning single with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning. Greg Gagne drew a leadoff walk from Keith Atherton and was forced at second on Tim Teufel's attempted sacrifice. Randy Bush batted for Tim Laudner and Tim Conroy relieved Atherton, bringing on Dave Engle to bat for Bush.

Conroy threw a wild pitch, sending Teufel to second, and then walked Engle intentionally. Tellmann, just recalled from the minors, came on and Puckett drilled his first pitch up the alley in left-center to give the Twins their fifth straight victory after a nine-game losing streak. Minnesota's John Butcher pitched his third complete game, yielding seven hits, including a home run by Dwayne Murphy. Tom Brunansky homered for Minnesota.

Angels 3, Mariners 0
Mike Witt, who pitched a perfect game on the final day of the 1984 season, pitched a three-hitter for his first 1985 victory and Bobby Grich homered as California handed Seattle its fifth consecutive setback and ninth in the last 10 games after a 6-0 start. Witt allowed just five baserunners, walking two and striking out five.

Grich homered on an 0-1 changeup from Mark Langston with two out in the sixth inning. The Angels added a run in the eighth on an error by Seattle third baseman Jim Presley, a walk and Brian Downing's single. They scored a run in the ninth off Edwin Nunez on Rod Carew's bases-loaded sacrifice fly.

Waltrip Set Record In Sovran Qualifying

MARTINSVILLE, Va. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip turned in a track record qualifying speed of 90.279 mph Thursday to capture the pole position for this weekend's running of the Sovran Bank 500 NASCAR race.

Waltrip, the two-time national champion, edged out defending champion Geoff Bodine by only .219 mph over the .526-mile track and earned $3,000 for his efforts.

Sunday's Winston Cup Grand National race at the Martinsville Speedway carries a $279,410 purse.

Only 1.084 mph separated Waltrip from the tenth qualifier, Lake Speed, who turned in an 89.195 mph speed.

Waltrip said his chances for a win and the Grand National title are good.

"Everyone is looking at the little picture and overlooking the big picture. The big picture is 20 races from now," said Waltrip.

"I think I'm in good shape. We've got a couple of new cars that aren't even finished yet."

Drivers who failed to make the Top 10 may stand on Thursday's results or try for a better showing in Friday's qualifying for the remaining 20 starting positions.

The top ten qualifiers, model car and their speeds in Thursday's trials for the $279,000 Sovran 500 NASCAR race to be run Sunday at the Martinsville Speedway:

1. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet, 90.279
2. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 90.060

5. Neil Bonnett, Chevrolet, 89.719
6. Kyle Petty, Ford, 89.714
7. Ricky Rudd, Ford, 89.706

Bird's 34 Leads Celts Into NBA Semifinals

By The Associated Press
What do Boston's Larry Bird and Portland's Audie Norris have in common?

Well, at least for one night they shared the spotlight, leading their teams to the National Basketball Association conference semifinals.

Playing despite a painful right elbow, Bird returned to the Celtics lineup to score 34 points Thursday, including two free throws with 23 seconds to play to snap a 115-115 tie, and led Boston to a 117-115 victory over the Cleveland Cavaliers in Game Four.

Norris, a seldom-used forward, was an unlikely hero as Portland eliminated the Dallas Mavericks, 115-113, in four games.

"I wasn't really hampered by the elbow at all," said Bird, who didn't play in the Celtics' loss to the Cavaliers on Tuesday because of persistent bursitis and bone chips in the elbow. "Once I got in the game, I think the excitement drove me over the limit."

Bird also paced the Celtics with 14 rebounds and seven assists as Boston captured the best-of-five-games.

General Dynamics May Fire Executives

WASHINGTON (AP) — General Dynamics, under fire recently for allegedly trying to cheat the Pentagon, now faces the possibility it may have to dismiss its top two executives and lose some of its lucrative market for jet fighters.

Those two possibilities surfaced Thursday during the latest round of federal investigations of the giant defense contractor, which does 96 percent of its business with the Pentagon, including submarines for the Navy, F-16 fighters for the Air Force, and M-1 tanks for the Army.

Pentagon spokesman Michael Burch told reporters that Joseph Sherick, the Defense Department inspector general, will recommend that Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger formally "debar" General Dynamics Chairman David S. Lewis and Chief Financial Officer Gordon E. MacDonald from doing business with the government.

According to government regulations, Burch said, that means the pair would either have to be fired or General Dynamics could be banned from doing business with the Defense Department. Sherick first suggested the possibility of barring the two executives Wednesday before a House subcommittee investigating a number of leading Pentagon contractors.

General Dynamics is under investigation by the Pentagon, Congress and other federal agencies for a wide range of activities, including billing the government for items such as cookbooks and dog kennel stays.

The company, which received $6 billion in Pentagon contracts in fiscal 1984, recently agreed to repay $244 million in bills improperly charged for travel, entertainment and personal expenses.

Burch said Sherick would make a "formal recommendation" soon to Weinberger that Lewis and MacDonald be debarred.

General Dynamics' spokesman Alvin A. Spivak said the company saw "no grounds whatever for debarment of either the company or its senior executives."

"We would hope that when all the facts are considered, Secretary Weinberger will disagree with that recommendation," Spivak said.

Burch admitted he has talked to investigators and portrayed himself as an "innocent victim" because he said the company submitted an expense claim "without my knowledge" for a dinner he attended.

"That's completely improper and illegal," Burch said.

Meanwhile, the key Senate Republicans warned the Air Force that Congress will likely force the service to buy some Northrop F-20 fighters instead of purchasing as many of General Dynamics' F-16s as the Air Force wants.

Northrop built the plane for an overseas market, but has been unable to sell it to any foreign countries. But Northrop has also been trying to convince the Air Force to buy it, arguing that the F-20 is cheaper than the F-16 and just as capable.

Sen. Ted Stevens, D-Alaska, told top Air Force officials: "You're going to get some F-20s whether you like it or not. We like the idea of competing planes."

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., agreed, saying, "we ought not to reward them (General Dynamics) when you have viable alternatives. I don't think you reward misconduct."

The comments came at a hearing of the Senate Appropriations defense subcommittee, chaired by Stevens.

Ann Jillian
Recuperating

CULVER CITY, Calif. (AP) — Actress Ann Jillian, who returned to work less than two weeks after surgery for breast cancer, says she's getting better every day.

"I received so many letters from other people who've had cancer telling me not to worry. I was going to be the same girl afterward," Miss Jillian, 35, said Thursday during rehearsals for "Alice in Wonderland."

The actress, discharged from a hospital Friday after undergoing a double mastectomy April 12, said she was a "little sore," but "it gets better every day. My movements are limited, but that's only temporary."

She said she had worked only a few days on Irwin Allen's four-hour production of the Lewis Carroll fantasy for CBS TV when doctors detected the cancer. She said they felt it should be operated on immediately.

Wedding Set Early
To Assure Privacy

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Actress Dyan Cannon married real estate broker Stanley Fimberg one week earlier than planned to assure the ceremony's privacy, her publicist said.

Miss Cannon, 48, married Fimberg, 50, at his Beverly Hills home Saturday. It was the second marriage for the actress and the third for Fimberg, said publicist George Kirvay.

"I knew the second we met that I wanted to spend the rest of my life with him," Miss Cannon was reported as saying. "I even called my parents and told them so — that's how sure I was."

The actress was divorced from actor Cary Grant 15 years ago, and their daughter, Jennifer Grant, was at her mother's wedding.

The ceremony had been scheduled for April 26, "but they wanted it to be private and went ahead" last week, Kirvay said. A reception is planned before the couple leaves next week for a one-month European honeymoon, he said.

Miss Cannon appears in the TV movie, "Jenny's War," slated for release next fall.

CBS Portrayal Of 'Arthur'
Focuses On Classic Plot

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Malcolm McDowell says his portrayal of "Arthur the King" in the CBS movie shows the monarch of Camelot in a classic dilemma — torn between love and duty and unable to get any more magical help.

"It's a romance and chivalry which is so alien to our times today," he said. "But that's what legends are all about."

The three-hour version of the Arthurian fantasy, one of the most enduring legends of all times, will be broadcast tonight on CBS. It was first scheduled for last year. But one top CBS programmer was quoted recently as saying that the movie was disappointing and confusing to follow.

"Arthur the King" also stars Candice Bergen as the wicked sorceress Morgan Le Fay; Edward Woodward as Merlin the Magician; Lucy Gutteridge as Merlin's love, and Dyan Cannon as an American tourist whose guided tour of England takes an unexpected turn.

"This is a down-to-earth view of Camelot," said McDowell. "We have straw on the floor and there are no elaborate costumes. We used the grays and browns that were actually used then."

"Luckily, I never saw any of the other productions of Arthur. So I tried to get into it by seeing him as a civil servant. He has to make the kingdom run. So he is distracted from his marriage. That's his dilemma. He is torn between his kingdom and his marriage. That's why Guinevere goes off with Lancelot."

McDowell admits he did impishly hum the theme from "Camelot" occasionally on the set.

The Stonehenge segment was filmed in England, but all the rest was made in Yugoslavia. The fortified walls of Dubrovnik stood in for Camelot.

McDowell may be unfamiliar to TV audiences. He is best known for the theatrical films "A Clockwork Orange," "Time After Time," "Caligula," "Cat People" and "Blue Thunder."

"I guess the director, Clive Donner, knew my work and wanted me to do it," he said. "He sent me a script and I said yes. It was that easy. Arthur was a great change of pace for me. Before this I was playing a rock superstar in 'Get Crazy,' a movie that came and went."

McDowell is married to Mary Steenburgen, his co-star from "Time After Time." They have two young children.

He and his wife appeared in "Little Red Riding Hood and the Big Bad Wolf" for Shelley Duvall's "Faerie Tale Theater" on Showtime, the pay-cable network. "We did it for the kids as much as anything else," he said. "I was the Big Bad Wolf. Mary was pregnant when we did it but you can hardly tell. She kept that basket in front of her."

McDowell said his roles as Alex, the antagonist in "A Clockwork

Orange," and Arthur were "quite different. But in the terms of technique they are nearer than you think. Arthur was the catalyst for the story, as was Alex. Alex was more fun because he's both the aggressor and the victim."

"Arthur wasn't that broad. To play a king requires a kind of inner peace. It has to do with confidence, although the king is indecisive. The king was born to it rather than having to win it through sweat and toil. His changes were more internal. He thinks Merlin can help him with a potion or two. I played him as though he were slightly over the hill."

Bill Could Put Schools Under Governor

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A bill approved by a Senate committee would make the governor responsible for the state's education program and eliminate statewide voting for the superintendent of public instruction.

"I mean no disrespect to (current Superintendent of Public Instruction) Craig Phillips, but I'll bet you couldn't find 10 people on the street who know what his educational priorities are," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, chairman of the Senate Education Committee.

"But anyone who keeps up with state government knows what a governor's priorities are," he said. "I think this system puts the responsibility for education squarely on the governor."

Under the bill, voters in the 1986 general election would be asked to approve a constitutional amendment ending statewide election of the superintendent of public instruction. Instead, an appointed state school board would appoint the superintendent.

The governor would appoint eight members of the 14-member board — with one member coming from each of the state's regional education areas. Two members each would be appointed by the House and Senate, with the lieutenant governor and the state treasurer rounding out the board.

"I hate to be the one to speak against more power for the governor, but I have a problem with accountability when you have an appointed school board and an appointed superintendent," said Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, the only member of the committee to vote against the bill.

"You could have a governor who is elected without any real education program," Sawyer said. "He could have been elected on a few slogans or some tax issue or whatever."

"Sounds like real life," Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, said in a stage whisper.

In other legislative action:

A bill that would allow the state Department of Transportation to expand the use of double-trailer trucks on state roads ran into opposition in the House Transportation Committee.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Dave Bumgardner, D-Gaston, would allow the state DOT to designate more roads for double-trailers than those approved by the federal DOT.

The federal government in 1982 ordered states to allow double-trailer rigs to be used on all interstate highways, federal primary routes and connector roads. Federal officials are now reviewing several of those routes for safety factors.

Highway Administrator Billy Rose said some industries have already contacted the state about allowing double-trailers on roads not included in the federal designation. He showed committee members a map of proposed additions to the double-trailer routes across the state.

"That map looks like the trucking industry's dream," said Clinton Anderson, president of the Carolina Motor Club. "We're not satisfied that some highway designations we have now are safe. Double-trailers are already operating in some areas where they have no business being."

He said the trucking industry has a "dismal safety record" with single trailers, and charged that the record for double-trailers is two to three times worse.

"There is no higher priority in the trucking industry than the safety of their vehicles," said Lindsey Warren, a lobbyist for the N.C. Motor Carriers Association. "We would be happy to share information with the committee that clearly and unequivocally establishes the safety of twin trailers."

The appropriations committee on education voted to leave $78,000 in the budget for a controversial assistant to the chancellor at the University of North Carolina at Asheville.

But the committee voted to ask the full appropriations committee to address the use of surplus funds by state agencies for items not included in the budget.

A transfer of those surplus funds in the waning days of former Gov. Jim Hunt's administration created the UNC-A post, which was filled by Hunt aide Wayne McDevitt. The post, which created a controversy because it was not filled through the normal advertising and interviewing procedures, is contained in the budget for continuing items now being considered by the committee.

Rep. Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe, said the position is needed.

"Every year this is done, in all departments," Nesbitt said. "I just think that, due to the timing, it caught people's attention."

House Turns Down Vote On Veto Bill

RALEIGH (AP) — The state House has refused to let North Carolinians decide whether the governor should have veto power, and Republicans say the voters will remember it during next year's legislative election.

"The people in my district care about this very much, and I will campaign on it," said Rep. Frank "Trip" Sizemore, R-Guilford.

But Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, said it wouldn't be an issue because most people see no problem with state government.

"The real issue is whether or not the Legislature is responsible, and I think the record is clear that we are," he said.

Voting mostly along party lines, the mostly Democratic House defeated 77-37 Thursday an attempt to force a floor vote on a bill that would have put the veto question to a statewide referendum next year.

It was the second major defeat in a week for Gov. Jim Martin, who last Friday saw the House snub his tax-cut proposals in favor of a slimmed-down Democratic package.

"That issue is not going to die," said Martin in a news conference, vowing to raise it again during the 1987 Legislature. "I have determined that personally I will continue to ... encourage the people to speak up for this timely and historic issue."

Thornburg Plans Lobby Over Pay

RALEIGH (AP) — A recent U.S. Supreme Court ruling on overtime pay will have "tremendous" impact on North Carolina, touching "every county and municipality ... in addition to state government," state Attorney General Lacy Thornburg says.

Thornburg said he would lobby the state's congressional delegation for legislation that would stay the effect of the February ruling pending study by Congress. He added he hoped Congress would provide monetary relief for state and local governments that face overtime bills because of the ruling.

"Thus state and local governments need to review their employment practices to determine their compliance with the requirements" of federal law, said a legal analysis of the ruling completed by Thornburg's staff last week.

The Supreme Court ruled that federal minimum-wage and hour standards covered employees of publicly owned mass-transit systems. By extension, it placed other state and local government employees under federal standards.

Before the ruling, state agencies reimbursed employees for overtime pay in varying ways, including time-and-a-half pay and time off.

Sam Ervin Recalled As Man Who Made Family Think

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
MORGANTON, N.C. (AP) — Former Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., whose wit and legal expertise in the Senate compelled the nation to confront the Watergate scandal, also forced his children to think for themselves, his son recalls.

"At the dinner table he'd bring up a question and try to get me and my two sisters to stake ourselves out on the other side," said Sam J. Ervin III, 59, now a judge on the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. "He'd force us to defend our position ... to try to teach us to think."

"Senator Sam" Ervin, whose Senate Watergate hearings into high-level corruption led to President Nixon's resignation in 1974, died Tuesday of respiratory failure at the age of 88. He was to be buried today in Forest Hills Cemetery after a 2 p.m. funeral at the First Presbyterian Church in Morganton.

Gov. Jim Martin, Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, the Rev. Billy Graham and former Attorney General Rufus Edmisten were expected at the funeral. Former Govs. Bob Scott and Terry Sanford were also trying to make arrangements to attend.

Ervin, speaking after about 200 people paid their respects to the family Thursday night, said his father was so good at arguing that "he made us realize our positions were pretty threadbare."

"Before he went to Washington (in 1954), we debated the pros and cons of McCarthyism — and he was acting as McCarthy's advocate," he said.

Ervin later spoke out in the Senate to censure Sen. Joseph McCarthy, whom he said had "mighty high ruin" the Senate.

Underlying Ervin's country humor and probing questions during the Watergate hearings in 1973 and 1974 was a "very, very keen sense of family," said his grandson, Bob Ervin. "He used to talk about how your personality traits, your values derive from your family ... about the importance of doing the right thing whether it was politically expedient or not," said Ervin, 24, a third-year student at Harvard Law School and a son of Sam Ervin III.

Bob Ervin said his earliest clear memories of his grandfather were from the Watergate hearings when, as a 13-year-old boy, he went with his family to Washington to sit in on a few sessions of the Senate Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities.

"It was an interesting mixture, seeing him up there — you knew him personally, his relationship with our grandmother, his affection for her, as anyone knows their grandfather," he said. "And you also knew him as a public figure — his beliefs on public issues and his understanding of the Constitution."

IN THE STATE

School Fund Cuts Estimated

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina public schools would forfeit $4 million a year in federal money under a budget proposed by the Republican leadership of the U.S. Senate, shows an analysis by the state Department of Public Instruction.

The proposal cuts $132 million from federal impact aid, a program that subsidizes local school systems for educating children of military and other federal employees.

About 50 North Carolina school systems would be affected, and many would be forced to cut back programs, said Theodore Drain, associate superintendent for support services.

The cuts would be felt most heavily by school systems in Onslow and Cumberland counties, and the cities of Jacksonville and Fayetteville, all located in areas with military bases.

The budget proposal, which has President Reagan's endorsement, would continue funding for children of parents who live and work on federal land, including military bases. Such people do not pay local property taxes. But the proposal eliminates funding for children of federal workers who live off-base and pay some property taxes.

Marine Killed In Crash

CHERRY POINT, N.C. (AP) — A Marine officer was killed when his AV-8A harrier jet crashed during a routine training mission 35 miles southeast of Naval Air Station Fallon in Nevada, a Marine spokesman said.

Maj. Dennis Brooks, of the Marine Corps Air Station at Cherry Point, said the accident occurred at about 2 p.m. EST Thursday.

The pilot, whose name was withheld pending notification of relatives, had been assigned to Marine Attack Squadron 231 of the 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing at Cherry Point, Brooks said. The squadron is temporarily deployed at the air station in Fallon, Nev., for training.

Military officials were investigating the cause of the crash.

Trooper Sues Father Of Victim

BEAUFORT, N.C. (AP) — A state Highway Patrol trooper injured in a March 16 auto accident in which a girl was killed, is suing the father of the teen-ager.

The $300,000 suit filed Thursday in Carteret County Superior Court by Trooper Teddy Tollard said Margaret Smith, 16, caused the accident in which Tollard suffered broken bones and lacerations.

Tollard's suit names Miss Smith's father, former Havelock Mayor Eugene Smith, who is administrator of his daughter's estate.

Authorities have said Miss Smith apparently drove into the path of Tollard's car as she was leaving a convenience store.

The suit says the accident has caused Tollard "a great deal of physical pain and mental suffering" and that he will need more medical treatment in the future.

Senate Kills Pay Study

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would kill an outside consultant's study of comparable worth in state jobs and eliminate a legislative study of pay classifications proposed by the House has sailed through the Senate without opposition.

"The study was gone before it reached the Senate," Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Thursday after a bill repealing the study was unanimously approved.

"The primary proponents of the issue felt once the House acted, the end result was obvious. My actions were dictated by their sentiments."

The bill now returns to the House, which must agree to a Senate change eliminating the in-house study. Supporters of the repeal say they expect the House to agree to the change, even though the bill met strident opposition in its first passage through the House.

"The study is dead," Sen. Wilma Woodard, D-Wake, a supporter of the independent survey, said after the vote. "I am sad, but not as sad as I would have been seeing a token, shallow study done that might raise false hopes."

Murder Charge Dismissed

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A woman who shot her violent and drunken boyfriend acted in self-defense, says a judge who dismissed the first-degree murder charge against her.

"I hope other women will look at their lives and get out of a bad situation

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Q equals W

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Assistance Fund Grows

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co.'s energy-assistance fund — which helps the elderly, low-income and handicapped pay heating bills — has exceeded $1 million, the company said Thursday.

The fund — called Project Share — received more than $393,000 during this past winter, said Russell

H. Lee, CP&L senior vice president.

"Because of the contributions and support of our customers and employees, the Project Share campaign has completed its most successful year yet," Lee said in a news release. "Their participation made this winter warmer for many needy families in" North Carolina and South Carolina.

Trump Coup Tommy was beginning to enjoy going to the club. After a disastrous beginning when all suits split evenly and, as a result, Tommy was down a small fortune, trumps were starting to break the way Tommy liked. As our readers know well, Tommy is a duffer who becomes transformed into a genius whenever trumps are stacked against him — we are still trying to find the cause of this phenomenon.

Tommy and his partner bid well to reach four spades. By now, club members knew better than to double Tommy on the strength of their trump holding.

West led the ten of diamonds to the queen and declarer's ace. What seemed like a routine hand began to present problems when Tommy led a trump and West showed out. Declarer rose with the ace, then cashed his three high clubs. Naturally, East did not ruff, stuffing a diamond instead, and Tommy got rid of a heart. East parted with another diamond on the fourth club and Tommy ruffed.

He cashed the ace of hearts and exited with a heart. West won and led a diamond for his partner to ruff. This artistic ending had now been reached:

No matter what East chose to do, he could not get more than one trump trick in this position. He elected to lead the queen of hearts. Declarer ruffed in hand, discarding the board's club, then led the ace of diamonds. East was forced to ruff and then he had to lead away from the queen of trumps into Tommy's combined K-J tenace.

Cigarette Tax Planned

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., has told senators he will offer an amendment in the current budget battle to extend the federal excise tax on cigarettes at its current level rather than allow the tax to be cut in half.

The tax, doubled to 16 cents a pack by Congress in 1982, would automatically revert back to 8 cents a pack on Oct. 1.

In a letter to Senate colleagues mailed Wednesday, Bradley said he would earmark the tax savings to help fund the Medicare program and eliminate the need for a premium increase for certain Medicare recipients.

Cigarette manufacturers have been lobbying to head off such a move.

"It is absurd to reduce taxes on a product that has caused major increases in recent years in health care costs while at the same time significantly increase the premiums paid by the elderly for their health care costs," Bradley said.

The amendment would likely prompt a confrontation between Bradley and Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who authored the 1982 tax provision that calls for the reduction in the tax.

George Dunlop, top agriculture aide to Helms, said he had not seen Bradley's letter and declined to comment on what strategy Helms might follow.

Bradley is scheduled to be the featured speaker Saturday night at the North Carolina Democratic Party's Jefferson-Jackson Day Dinner in Raleigh.

Nancy Reagan Pushes Fight Against Drugs

ATLANTA (AP) — A tearful Nancy Reagan ended a first ladies summit on drug abuse by urging students to be "clear-eyed and clear-minded" and telling parents that they are the most effective weapon in the fight against drugs.

Mrs. Reagan, addressing 1,500 students and the wives of 15 foreign leaders, was moved to tears Thursday when a Kansas teen-ager put his arm around her and sang her a song to thank her for her interest in fighting illegal drugs.

Mrs. Reagan's appearance at the Parents Resource Institute for Drug Education conference marked the final day of her "first ladies summit" on drug abuse, which began Wednesday in Washington.

She invited the first ladies to the United States to discuss common problems and solutions regarding drugs in the different nations. Fifteen of the first ladies traveled to Atlanta on Thursday; 17 attended the first day of the conference in Washington.

"The whole idea was to make the effort a global one, an international effort, which it truly is," Mrs. Reagan said in an interview shown today on ABC's "Good Morning America."

"We had 17 first ladies and a lot of them had just become conscious of the problem in their countries, and not knowing really how to approach it and very curious about what we were doing in our country," she said.

Mrs. Reagan said she intends to continue her campaign against drug abuse when she accompanies her husband to Europe next month. She said she plans to meet with Pope John Paul II and visit a drug center he has started.

During the Atlanta meeting, Steve Courtney, 17, of Overland Park, Kan., provided the highlight of a 30-minute student song and dance performance when he put his arm around Mrs. Reagan as he sang the line,

"We can move mountains together, you and I."

Mrs. Reagan and Courtney embraced at the end of the song, and he escorted her from the stage after she regained her composure and spoke briefly to the crowd.

"You are our future," Mrs. Reagan told the students.

"We need you and we need you clear-eyed and clear-minded and I know that's how you'll be."

Clutching a single rose which she and the other first ladies were given at the conclusion of the conference, Mrs. Reagan said, "I can't thank you enough."

Speaking at the Georgia World Congress Center, Mrs. Reagan said she "wanted the first ladies with me today to see what I saw on my first trip here, because conferences like this are possible in their homelands, too."

She said she first became acquainted with PRIDE, a private, non-profit anti-drug group, three years ago. She said her first visit to a PRIDE conference then helped her understand that parents were the strongest weapon in the fight against drug abuse among children.

Mrs. Reagan and the other first ladies returned to Washington after the conference. Later, she bade them farewell and said the summit achieved something important — inspiration to continue the fight against illegal drugs.

"We've heard about the effects of drugs on our young people, their health, their future, their families — we heard stories of pain and confusion," she said.

"Yet, I don't think any of the first ladies will be leaving discouraged; I think we all will head home with hope."

Attending the conference were the first ladies of Argentina, Bolivia, Canada, Colombia, Ecuador, Ireland, Italy, Jamaica, Japan, Malaysia, Mauritius, Mexico, Norway, Pakistan, Panama, Portugal and West Germany.

City Folks Avoid Farm-City Session On Rural Woes

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was billed as a chance for town and country to come together, a chance for rural and urban interests to realize their common stake in solving America's farm crisis — but almost nobody from the city showed up.

Fourteen senators and 26 House members joined with the Fund for New Priorities in America, a New York group that organizes discussion forums on public issues, to stage a conference Thursday on "Urban America's Stake in the National Farm Crisis."

Sponsoring lawmakers were from states like Maryland and Massachusetts as well as from Iowa and Kansas, and they assembled a powerful agricultural brain trust to talk about the financial problems of farmers, possible solutions and what it all means to the person who buys the groceries.

But the fact that few city folk came to participate in or hear the conference points to a perennial problem faced by a shrinking contingent of rural lawmakers: how to win urban votes for bills designed to ensure stability for farmers. The problem is especially acute this year, when Congress is debating a new long-term farm law to replace the one that expires Sept. 30.

"We have a very serious problem on our hands in communicating to the urban population agriculture's role in the nation," said Norman Borlaug, a Nobel laureate known as father of the Green Revolution, the effort to increase food production in the Third World.

"Policy-makers never want to face up to the problem of food production. They always say food should be cheap," penalizing rural residents who grow it, Borlaug said.

During most of the day, the 20-member panel spoke to a nearly-empty auditorium, and organizers admitted disappointment.

"It doesn't have the glamour, that's really the key to it," said Park Rinard, an aide to Rep. Neal Smith, D-Iowa, who handled arrangements for the conference. But he added: "If something's not done to awaken interest and educate non-farm members of Congress, then we're not going to get decent legislation enacted this year."

Maurice Paprin, a New York City real estate man and president of the sponsoring group, recalled that it had been difficult, when the city was going bankrupt in 1975, to get Washington's attention.

"We had to convince them that it would be a disaster for the country, and not just for New York," said Paprin. "That has to happen again, in a different fashion," for farming, he said.

Despite the difficulty, it is important for the message to get to urban residents that agriculture is more than a remote influence on their lives, participants said repeatedly.

"Farm problems are damaging to Wilmington, Del., and to New York City," said Sen. Joseph Biden, D-Del., one of the few urbanites to appear at the day-long meeting. "We will suffer."

"It's like a whirlpool. It sucks in the weakest first, then takes those who were not weak before," said John Chrystal, president of the Bankers Trust Co. in Des Moines, Iowa. "The sickness which now infects the Midwest will infect the rest of the nation, because agriculture is a huge purchaser of steel and petrochemicals."

States Protesting Welfare Decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal decision to hit more than two dozen states with $81.7 million in penalties for welfare error rates is drawing protest from state welfare officials, while a Democratic congressman says Congress may enter the fray.

Officials in California — assessed a $35 million penalty for high errors in its Aid to Families with Dependent Children program — said Thursday they were weighing options ranging from agency appeals to court battles.

Washington state, facing $6.8 million in penalties for AFDC and Medicaid errors, promises an appeal and says some of the blame for its errors lies with federal mishandling of the programs.

New Mexico Human Service Secretary Juan Vigil said he questions whether the U.S. Health and Human Services Department, which issued the penalties Thursday, has the legal authority to assess his state. Vigil said such authority was included in 1981 legislation that Congress did not pass.

Rep. Robert Matsui, D-Calif., sponsor of a bill that would make technical changes in the government's quality control program, says his legislation may be amended to address the new penalties. Matsui charged the penalties were imposed for budgetary reasons and that they breached promises that states would be given credit for recent quality improvements.

He noted that the penalties, if allowed to stand, will mean substantial cuts in aid for the nation's poor.

"States are not going to make up that money," Matsui said. "They're not going to increase their budgets. That basically means that benefits are going to be cut."

Thursday's announcement by Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler said 25 states and Puerto Rico would be penalized $81.7 million for failing to lower their error rates to acceptable levels.

The penalties, under consideration at HHS for two years, are based on 1981 welfare payments made by the states. Erroneous payments included overpayments and payments to ineligible people.

Senate Republicans Seek Votes For Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leaders, unable to give the budget package endorsed by President Reagan the early send-off they had promised, are scouring their party's ranks for the votes needed to keep the plan alive.

"I'm not sure I have them yet," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., conceded late Thursday after he abruptly recessed the GOP-controlled Senate rather than risk a crucial showdown vote he had spent most of the day arranging.

The inability of Dole to move the package over its first procedural hurdle, coming just 24 hours after the president's nationally broadcast appeal for the $52 billion package of spending cuts, dealt the plan a potent, possibly disabling, blow.

While Democrats rejoiced in their initial victory, Dole vowed to toil to find the needed additional support overnight.

"We're going to try to turn it around (on Friday) and if it takes a month to turn it around, we'll take a month," Dole told reporters. "The point around here is winning. We may lose eventually, but we're going to first do a lot of work."

The proposed spending outline, painstakingly negotiated by GOP leaders and the White House, contains a raft of politically sensitive spending cuts, ranging from limits on Social Security benefit increases to termination of Amtrak rail passenger subsidies.

Dole's hasty retreat from Thursday's scheduled showdown — a vote needed to bring the administration's plan formally before the Senate as a package — came even as switchboards all over the Capitol were lighting up in response to Reagan's plea for a show of public support.

Patricia Daniels, assistant chief telephone operator, reported that more than 23,000 calls came into the Capitol on Thursday — more than three times the usual 7,000. The calls were running heavily in favor of the president's package, congressional offices reported.

Republicans maintain a narrow 53-47 majority in the chamber.

One of the wavering Republicans, Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa, said Reagan called to lobby him personally for the plan to trim federal spending by $295 billion over three years.
