Reagan Starts European Trip Tonight

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan embarks tonight on the first overseas trip of his second term, still struggling to keep his visit to Nazi graves from overwhelming his hopes for a celebration of 40 years of Western European peace and reconciliation.

In a news conference prior to Reagan's departure, Secretary of State George P. Shultz today emphasized that the president's activities are aimed at reconciliation with the former enemy.

"And I think with respect to the cemetery visit, perhaps it can be said that the more difficult the act of reconciliation the deeper the meaning may be," Shultz said.

However, Shultz emphasized, "Reconciliation does not mean understanding of the things that took place. Personally, I find it impossible to understand how human beings could do the things that we know took place."

He added, "The importance of the notion of reconciliation is ironically brought forward in a way by the reaction. It shows how deep these wounds are and how difficult it is ... We have to confront that as well as confront the horrors that we all are reacting to."

The president is making an overnight flight to Bonn, West Germany, for the annual summit of the seven major industrialized democracies that begins Thursday.

Also on the itinerary before Reagan's return May 10 are state visits in West Germany, Spain, Portugal and a speech in Strasbourg, France, marking the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe and looking toward the future of East-West relations and European unity.

But the president's intentions for an upbeat journey have been submerged by an uproar over his planned visit next Sunday with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at the Kolmeschohe cemetery at Bitburg, near the Luxembourg border.

Among the nearly 2,000 graves are those of 49 soldiers from the SS, the elite Nazi combat corps which ran Adolf Hitler's concentration camps.

Jewish leaders, American veterans groups and members of Congress have condemned Reagan's appearance at the cemetery.

Shultz also said today that Reagan was correct in "standing up to the criticism" and proceeding with "that great act of reconciliation" at Bitburg.

"The political price would be heavy if he didn't," Shultz said in a televised interview with West European and Canadian journalists on a U.S. Information Agency broadcast.

Referring to the president's critics, Shultz said that "in the end, they may wind up admiring the person who stood by his decision."

Shultz said Reagan was unaware, when he accepted Kohl's invitation, that the cemetery contained SS graves. But Shultz said "it is not a question of mishandling" the president's travel plans but "a question of what is the objective," which he said is to "focus on peace and reconciliation."

In Bonn, Kohl said today that despite the controversy, he is confident the Bitburg visit will be remembered as a "great achievement of a great president."

"I am certain, however sorry I may feel that my friend Ronald Reagan has to face such great difficulties, that he is right with this wonderful, fine gesture," Kohl said in an interview on NBC's "Today."

Asked about the objections of Jewish groups and others because of the presence of SS troops at the cemetery, Kohl, speaking through an interpreter, replied: "We cannot make amends for the dead or the misery or the tears. We are committed to our history, but we want to look forward and that is why we will meet there."

Warrants Still Out In 1983 Death Of Hours-Old Child Born At PCMH

Pitt County authorities said today warrants were still outstanding for two former Pitt County Memorial Hospital employees indicted Monday in the 1983 death of an hours-old infant with a severe brain defect.

The Pitt County Grand Jury, in indictments issued Monday afternoon, accused Michael Edward Grant, 31, and Robert Andrew Jonas, 36, of compressing the chest of Darlene Clara Peszko, causing her death on July 24, 1983.

Hospital officials, who held a news conference Monday after the indictments were released, said an investigation of the child's death began several weeks ago after a PCMH employee reported hearing talk about the baby's death. Hospital President Jack W. Richardson said the hospital investigated the reports and referred the matter to the State Bureau of Investigation.

The Peszko child was first thought to have died of natural causes but her body was exhumed last month for an autopsy. An amended death certificate lists the cause of death as a bruised heart caused by "mechanical compression of the chest."

She died in the PCMH neonatal intensive care unit about six hours after her birth. Doctors said she suffered from anencephaly, a condition in which the upper part of the brain is not fully developed.

The child was the daughter of Steven and Wendy Peszko, former Greenville residents now living in Alpharetta, Ga.

Mrs. Peszko said she and her husband thought the baby died of natural causes until the case was reopened last month. She said they support prosecution of whoever was responsible for the child's death.

"It's not their right to do that, even if the child was going to die," Mrs. Peszko said.

Officials declined to speculate on a possible motive.

Jonas, a registered nurse, was placed on personal leave from Moses Cone Hospital in Greensboro on April 5 when officials "learned of a rumor that indictment proceedings may be pending," said Douglas W. Copeland Jr., director of public affairs for the hospital. Grant, a PCMH delivery room technician at the time of the incident who later became a registered nurse, was "terminated" from his job in March, Richardson said. Dr. Jon Tinglestad, chief of pediatrics at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, said that, in anencephalic patients, a part of the skull that covers the brain is absent and most of the brain itself is missing. He said 75-80 percent of all babies born with

April Ends On Dry Note

The month of April ended today the same way it began 30 days ago — sunny and rainless.

Sunshine continued to bake already-brittle fields today, prolonging the suffering of backyard gardens and keeping farmers out of fields. The spring drought, just a rumor at the beginning of the normally wet month of April, became a reality as the month ended.

Local agricultural officials say the drought situation is not yet critical, but that if dry conditions persist into May, the results could be serious for Pitt farmers and gardeners.

Only .54 inch of rain fell in Pitt County during April, compared to a normal 3.4 inch rainfall in April, 1984, according to measurements at Greenville Utilities' Water Plant.

During the month, the level of the Tar River averaged around three feet above sea level, down from an average of 10.5 feet above sea level in February, GUC said. In April, 1984, the river averaged 12.2 feet above sea level.

The drought has "held a lot of people out of the field," according to Sam Uzzell, extension agent for Pitt County. "The soil is currently so dry that stirring it up in any way dissipates whatever moisture is there. That keeps farmers from cultivating the way they would be normally this time of year."

Uzzell said if 1985 were a normal year, farmers "would be well on the way to completing (tobacco) transplanting." Currently, many farmers are still putting plants in the field, partially because of a shortage of transplants caused by the dry weather.

The dry weather has also delayed

Developer Urges 'Pleasing' Complex

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville will need more than zoning to protect its 1,790-acre medical district. What it needs is cooperation between land owners to ensure a workable, pleasing complex, according to James Clay.

"If you could get the bulk of people to form an association of land owners ... and (get that association) to come up with a development plan, all of you would be better off," the University Place representative told members of Greenville's Medical District Study Committee Monday.

Formerly director of the UNC-Charlotte Institute, Clay is now connected with the Carley Capital Group, a developing firm that has been involved in creation of a minicity known as University Place. The minicity and its surrounding area (known as University City) was targeted by the study committee as a possible model for future development of Greenville's medical district.

Located northeast of Charlotte's city limits, University Place serves as the town center for the area's university and research community. The University City community covers approximately 25 square miles including the 248-acre University Place minicity. Within the 25-square-mile area are located such industrial concerns as Collins and Aikman, Union Oil, IBM, Southern Bell, The Wall Street Journal, as well as condominiums, a water front commercial area reminiscent of a European village center, a 10-acre lake created in a natural drainage basin, the university, a 130-bed hospital and a 40-suite physicians' office building.

Although Clay noted the focus and size of University City is much different than that of Greenville's medical district, he said there were several aspects of University City planning that might benefit the medical district.

In planning and constructing University City, Clay said emphasis has been placed on community, on enhancing the economy and improving the outlook for the city by bringing in high quality jobs and a high quality of life. "You sell yourself short by going in with anything but quality," he said.

He said that Donnie Wayne Wilson, 26, and Kimberly Ann Curley, 19, both of 714 E. Gum Road, were each charged with simple possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia following their arrests Friday. Bond was set at $200 each.

Tyson said deputies charged Alex Junior Barrett, 34, of 1223 Davenport St. with felonious possession of marijuana with intent to manufacture, sale and deliver, and also with simple possession of marijuana. Tyson said Barrett was arrested Friday at the corner of West Fifth and Vance streets.

Bond was set at $5,000 for Barrett. Deputies confiscated a quantity of marijuana, said Tyson.

Special Sofas

HIGH POINT (AP) — An Arab sheikh bought a plane just to bring home a Boone furniture maker's product and other companies have tried to copy the designs, but Frank Peterselie says his beds are unique because they're patented.

Peterselie, chairman of Spherical Furniture, said he was trying to figure out a way to move some heavy, bulky sleep sofas into his condominiums in the North Carolina mountains 14 years ago when the idea came to him.

He started drawing on napkins in a restaurant and came up with an idea for a sofa built of lightweight polyurethane that slips down on a cloth hinge to become a round bed.

A patent attorney saw the design, and today Spherical has 14 design patents for its Hideaway bed line and has sold thousands of pieces around the world.

New Leaf Proposal Reportedly Prepared

WASHINGTON (AP) — A draft proposal for tobacco program reforms being circulated to farm leaders is based on a plan by R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., but is weighted more toward the interests of farmers, a Raleigh newspaper reported.

The draft would establish a new tobacco price support formula based on market prices and grower costs, the News & Observer of Raleigh reported in its Tuesday editions.

The proposal was prepared by staffers of tobacco-state senators, including Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and representatives of flue-cured and burley tobacco grower cooperatives.

According to a copy of the proposal obtained by the News & Observer and interviews with officials familiar with the proposal, the draft legislation would slash the price support for flue-cured leaf to $1.40 per pound in 1985 and presumably in 1986. After that, it would institute a new formula estimated to increase the support rate to between $1.45 and $1.48 by 1987, the newspaper said.

The draft would appear to initiate the new formula in 1986, but the News & Observer reported that sources said the intention of the drafters was to wait until 1987 to start the new formula.

Supporters of the tobacco program generally agree that the current support level of $1.70 must be reduced drastically as part of an agreement with cigarette manufacturers. The lower price support level would be part of a deal in which the manufacturers would buy tobacco surpluses that threaten the financial viability of the leaf program.

Congressional sources told the News & Observer that the draft could become the basis of legislation this year if farm groups agree. Senate staffers are expected to meet later this week with farm group leaders to privately discuss the proposal.

Although many have said congressional approval would be nearly impossible, the draft legislation includes a provision exempting the cigarette companies from antitrust suits that might result from their participation in the buy-out plan, the newspaper reported. Such an exemption has been demanded by Philip Morris Inc.

The major innovation in the new plan would be the price support formula, which historically has been based on production costs but has been frozen at the $1.70 per pound level since 1982.

Reynolds proposed a plan that would have tied the new support formula to a rolling average of market prices for preceding years. The formula would assure that the support price always remained 5 percent below the market average.

Under the latest plan, the support price formula would be based on the average of two formulas — one based on average market prices and the other on an index of production prices.

The City of Greenville has a radio program, "City Hall Notes", which is aired each Tuesday and Thursday at 10:25 A.M. on WOOW Radio. The public is invited to listen to this program each week and learn more about Greenville City Government.

Bike Shop Can Teach You To Be A Pedal-Pusher

DEAR ABBY: This is for "Ashamed," the male college student who never learned to ride a bicycle. I'm a 27-year-old male who's never learned how to ride a bicycle either. I can't believe there are two of us! I certainly can identify with his shame and embarrassment.

Ironically, I recently completed a motorcycle course and obtained my license.

MIKE IN WICHITA

DEAR MIKE: Don't give up. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the letter from a young college man who did not know how to ride a bike and was embarrassed to ask.

Bicycle USA has trained cycling instructors in virtually every state. Contacting a local bike shop, bicycling club or Bicycle USA (6707 Whitestone Road, Suite 209, Baltimore, Md. 21207) directly should be sufficient to put anyone interested in learning to ride a bike in touch with a certified instructor. No matter what the age of the rider, instructors have the skills and experience to be of assistance. Often instructors teach through local park and recreation offices, or through bike shops. Bicycling safely becomes more and more important as more people commute to work, ride on the weekends and make cycling a family activity. We stress safety!

I hope you can find room for this in your column, Abby.

SUSAN BAXTER, INSTRUCTOR, EUGENE, ORE.

DEAR SUSAN: Find room? I'll make room to promote safety in cycling. Especially since May is National Bicycle Month.

DEAR ABBY: I have a business partner whom I must telephone at home between five and 10 times daily. He has two small children, 4 and 7 years old, and the competition between these children to answer the telephone is a great source of irritation to me.

My partner allows his children to answer the telephone and also screen his calls, and every time I call I am subjected to these competitive kids who obviously are fighting over who should answer the phone.

This is so upsetting to me that I want to scream! Am I wrong to feel this way?

GOING OUT OF MY MIND

DEAR GOING: No. You can't help how you "feel," but in the interest of maintaining your sanity, you should tell your partner what's on your mind before you go out of it.

DEAR ABBY: I'm sure you've heard this question before because it's been around for a long time, but I've never known anyone who came up with the answer:

Which came first ... the chicken or the egg?

I.M. SERIOUS IN MOLINE, ILL.

DEAR SERIOUS: According to the Bible, the chicken came first: God said, "Let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life, and fowl that may fly above the earth in the open firmament of heaven." (Genesis 1:20)

Tuitions

Maybe it's true, as some University of North Carolina system students claim, that Gov. Jim Martin's proposed 10 per cent tuition boost would be the straw that breaks the camel's back for some who are struggling to stay in school. Spokesmen say the tuition increase, coupled with new federal guidelines for financial aid in higher education, could be a deadly combination.

That kind of talk is certain to get a sympathetic ear.

In itself, the tuition increase is not a significant amount; it may run in the neighborhood of $45 a year. That higher tuition would reduce the state's allocation to the UNC system for new or expanded programs by $17.5 million in the first year of the biennium and $22.2 million the second year. It's supposed to cover expenditures sought by the UNC Board of Governors.

Across the country, tuition costs have doubled over the past 10 years. Inflation can be blamed. On the other hand, if a decade of inflation has doubled tuition costs it may also be blamed for similarly sharp increases in other costs of acquiring a higher education.

There are many of those, as any student can tell you.

Proms

The magic moment has arrived for hundreds of graduates in Pitt and surrounding counties.

Graduation, after 12 years of school, is just ahead. But first there is the round of proms and other parties that are such an exciting part of completing high school. For a high school senior there has never been such a night as the one when the girls dress up in evening gowns and the boys don formal wear. They are off to the decorated school gym for an evening of pleasure. It will be one of the last times they will be together with the classmates they have known for 12 years. There can be no more important night than prom night and we wish much joy for all our high school seniors.

We have to add the traditional word of caution, however. Prom nights have been nights of tragedy. Don't drive if you have been drinking, and if you are with someone who has been drinking don't ride with him or her. The results can be a DWI arrest, or worse, it can be severe injuries and even death.

Every graduating senior is valuable to our community. We don't want a single one hurt or in court due to prom night revelry. Prom night is exciting. It is intoxicating enough without any booze. Enjoy it, but please don't get hurt in an automobile.

Trip Spelled Troubled

WASHINGTON — White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan noted weeks ago to a colleague that Michael K. Deaver's original plans for President Reagan's European trip spelled "trouble," but because of a personal commitment did not press for a change.

When Regan came to the White House two months ago, he pledged to treat long-time Reagan aide Deaver with the greatest deference until he left the president's staff in mid-May, and ordered his own aides to do the same. So he did not press Deaver for a change when he returned from his first advance trip to Europe with the scheduled visit to the German military cemetery at Bitburg that has proved a political debacle.

A footnote: The origin of the president's own determination to pay tribute to German war dead was his highly emotional meeting in Washington last year with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl. As Reagan describes it to aides, Kohl ended up "in tears" as the two leaders discussed the need to bind up the wounds of 40 years ago.

Another sign that Rep. Jack Kemp is intent on a 1988 presidential campaign was an indirect pitch he made to a key figure in Vice President George Bush's plans for the Republican presidential nomination: ex-White House political aide Lee Atwater.

During an off-the-record dinner with prominent Washington correspondents, Kemp was asked what one political operative he would like for presidential campaign. Kemp without hesitation named Atwater, who was deputy manager of Reagan-Bush re-election campaign and since then has been one of the vice president's top political advisers.

Kemp's answer was quickly relayed to a surprised Atwater, who was described as "flattered." Two of Atwater's partners in a major Washington-based political consulting firm, Charles Black and Roger Stone, have been advising Kemp. They all claim the firm will end up unified behind one presidential candidate, probably either Bush or Kemp.

Secretary James A. Baker III and Deputy Secretary Richard Darman are growing more and more vexed about Treasury bureaucrats whose super-methodical work habits have been delayed completion of the administration's tax reform package.

Career employees in the Tax Policy Division have been dragging their feet in coming up with the estimated revenue impact of Baker-Darman changes in the Treasury's tax proposal. Since the new Treasury chiefs are compromising pet "loophole closers" authored by the Tax Policy bureaucrats, the delay could be intentional.

The politically-appointed Tax Policy chief, Assistant Secretary Ronald Pearlman, has been part of the problem. Pearlman, a former St. Louis tax lawyer, is an ex-Internal Revenue Service bureaucrat and has done nothing to speed the process.

A Case Of Docking The Legislators

RALEIGH — After it was reported that the Legislature is having an attendance problem on Fridays, A.C. Snow, the editor of The Raleigh Times, proposed a drastic idea. If legislators didn't come to work on Fridays, they ought to be docked a day's wages. It's how the rest of the world works, Snow wrote.

Editorials rarely get formal discussion in the Legislature, especially editorials from the Times and its big sister, the Raleigh News and Observer. But Snow had touched a raw nerve and photocopies of his editorial were distributed recently to the Legislative Ethics Committee.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said he agreed with the editorial to a point. Legislators can get an excused absence very easily. If they don't bother to make that small effort at accountability, Redman said, "then they should be docked."

But there weren't many others who agreed. Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, remembered back to the 1960s when he served previously. At that time, the Constitution required the Legislature to be in session on Saturdays. So, one member of the Wake County delegation would come to the chamber, call an empty house to order, and then adjourn. Everybody would get paid for a day's work, Johnson said.

It was Johnson's contention that attendance is much better now despite what he considers some increased pressures to be absent. "There seems to be less tolerance in the court system for being gone," Johnson, a lawyer, said. A lawyer-legislator has to keep his practice going but judges aren't being as accommodating to a legislator's need to be in Raleigh. A case can't be delayed as easily, he said, because of the Speedy Trials Act.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said, "I have not observed any abuse. People are here." Winner argued that legislators often spend time with constituents on weekends, at night, and when the Legislature is out of session. Their salary "is not hourly or daily, it's annual," he said.

If one day is missed, it is certainly made up elsewhere, he said.

"If somebody abuses the number of unexcused absences they take, the voters will take care of them," Winner added.

Several legislators, in debating this and another ethical question, noted that the Legislature is a part-time job. If North Carolina is to have a "citizen Legislature," then the people must understand that legislators will need to miss an occasional day to attend to their primary jobs.

But Rep. Maggie Keese-Forrester, R-Guilford, added that the empty seats on Friday created a bad public perception of the Legislature. That perception, whether it is justified or not, is that legislators are off at a basketball tournament, down at the beach or playing golf.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, said the Times editorial wasn't such a novel idea. Both houses of the General Assembly have rules governing unexcused absences and a 1987 law requires that legislators be docked $2 a day for missing a session. (As Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said, "That was a lot of money back then.")

The House rules say that no member can be absent without being excused unless he is sick or disabled. The Senate rules say a senator cannot accept pay for time he is absent. The 1987 law and the Senate's pay rule are apparently being ignored, according to news reports.

In the end, Miller suggested that the Ethics Committee distribute copies of the 1987 law and the rules to all legislators. Nothing more was done, except for the photocopies of Snow's editorial. Several were seen heading for the waste basket.

The Press Flunks A Test

WASHINGTON — Comedian Mark Russell made a joke of it. He said that with the invasion of Grenada, U.S. armed forces defeated a small but exceedingly hostile and stubborn enemy — the American press.

To some of us who have spent our lives in newspapering, the Pentagon's decision to bar press coverage of that invasion was no laughing matter. With few exceptions, professional journalists feel strongly that reporters must be permitted to cover military operations. Otherwise the people get only the government's self-serving communiques.

We raised such a howl about being excluded from Grenada that the Pentagon relented. In the future, Defense Secretary Weinberger announced last year, a small pool of correspondents would be created. Under pledges of strict secrecy, reporters would be advised when and where to report for transportation. I was among those who assured Weinberger, from the bottom of my heart, that "of course the press can be trusted to keep such a summons secret."

Well, let us eat crow. At about 6 o'clock on Sunday evening, April 20, Col. Robert O'Brien set in motion a test of the pool plan. O'Brien is deputy assistant secretary for public affairs. A duty officer telephoned a prearranged contact at three newspapers, Newsweek magazine, The Associated Press, Mutual Radio and Cable News TV Network. Counting two TV technicians and a wire service photographer, the pool was to consist of 10 designated persons. They were to report to Andrews Air Force base at 4 a.m. Sunday.

The correspondents were informed only that they would be going to a hot and rainy place. They arrived at Andrews on the dot. They received shots against tropical diseases; they ate a quick breakfast with the 101st Airborne; and off they went — not to an actual invasion, but to a military exercise in Honduras. Michael Burch, assistant to O'Brien, says the correspondents themselves were "just super." They never leaked a thing.

But the humiliating and embarrassing fact is that in this first test of the pool plan, the press flunked. Somebody leaked. Apparently the man in charge at Mutual Radio, thinking he was doing what was expected of him, blabbed to the bureau chiefs of eight other radio networks. By 1:20 a.m. Sunday, three hours before the troops were to take off from Andrews, the word was all over town. News directors at CBS and NBC got wind of a possible big story. Burch was up all night fielding indignant calls from news organizations wanting to know what was going on.

In the wake of this fiasco, according to The Washington Post, "media executives said that many pool details had not yet been worked out with the Pentagon; they saw the test as somewhat premature."

Horsefeathers! The basic arrangements for a press pool were worked out months ago. Every major news executive in the country was aware that the Pentagon would test the plan. The networks, the wire services and the major magazines and newspapers long ago designated their correspondents. This was a fire drill. It broke down.

U.S. Marines and Rangers invaded Grenada on the morning of Oct. 25, 1983. Under the command of Vice Adm. Joseph Metcalf, our forces were able to make the most of the element of surprise. Metcalf deliberately kept the American press in the dark. Suppose we had had the pool plan then? Would the vital element of confidence have been kept?

Last weekend's abortive test surely will give comfort to military officers; their natural hostility to civilian busybodies has now been fortified. It will be exceedingly difficult for responsible elements in the press to respond to the cry of "We said you couldn't be trusted."

We must try to respond. The principle of military coverage by a free press is too valuable to be lost in this lamentable experience. O'Brien and Burch are more forgiving than we have any right to expect them to be. "We want to try again," Burch tells me. "We're not going to give up."

Fine! But if we fail as badly the next time we are put to the test, in the real event the Pentagon understandably will tell us to go fly a kite. And the press will have it coming.

Strength For Today

A friend of mine planted roses on either side of a garden path. But the roses failed to flourish as he had hoped.

At first he wondered if there was not enough sunlight. So he consulted a specialist in roses to ask for his advice. "Your roses have enough sunlight," he said, "but do you see those trees over there? The roots of the trees reach into this rose-bed and are taking away the nourishment the roses need."

This is so often what happens in this world of ours. We have plenty of light from God. But many other things send their roots into our lives and use up all the nourishment which we need for spiritual strength.

If we are to develop into something better than a mere creature, let us beware lest secular interests overshadow Him who is the light of the world or prevent the nourishment of our souls from Him who is the bread of life.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It was a year ago, April 22, when eight people entered the Martin Marietta plant in Orlando, Fla. They attacked a heavy metal rocket launcher with simple carpenter's hammers to symbolize their desire to turn weapons of war into instruments of peace.

The sentencing judge took their action seriously. (He gave them three years plus five years probation plus restitution.) The Atlanta parole board took it seriously, rating Patrick O'Neill more dangerous than men who robbed banks at gunpoint. We should take it seriously, too.

In a war — and we are involved in more than one right now — atrocities on one side lead to atrocities on the other: terrorism by one side calls forth terrorism from the other. Freedom and democracy are claimed as goals of actions which undermine them.

In contrast, Plowshare actions insist only that we look at the facts: freedom and democracy don't come out of the bay of a bomber. Horrible suffering does. American ideals are defended by those who insist that we live them.

Edith Webber

To the editor:

Governor Martin's proposal to increase in-state UNC system tuition by 10 percent strikes harshly against North Carolina college students who are trying to figure out how they can afford to stay in school next fall.

The governor's priorities are upside-down. He is, in effect, proposing to levy an extra tax of 10 percent on North Carolina families who send children to college and he wants to use that money to help fund a tax cut for wealthy corporations — corporations who settle in North Carolina more for its excellent university system than for its tax breaks.

The sacrificing of educational opportunity, and with it the sacrificing of the future, to pay for tax cuts for the wealthy seriously hurts North Carolina's potential for future economic growth.

Governor Martin should withdraw his tuition hike proposal.

FBI Hints Of Break In Wells Fargo Theft

NEW YORK (AP) — A videotape and an abandoned armored car could yield valuable clues to a nearly $8 million robbery of a Wells Fargo depot in which four masked gunmen ambushed and disarmed four guards, authorities say.

Investigators "have some very encouraging leads," said Kenneth Walton, deputy director of the FBI's New York office. "I think we'll have a break in this relatively soon."

The four thieves, carrying handguns, surprised the armed guards at Wells Fargo's five-story garage near the Hudson River about 1:20 a.m. Monday, police said. The $7,896,000 haul may have been the largest U.S. cash robbery ever.

The men waited until the guards had opened a vault where about $20 million in cash was kept, then disarmed them, handcuffed them to a handtruck and loaded cash onto the van themselves, said Chief Robert Johnston, chief of operations.

The van was found empty several hours later on the other side of Manhattan.

It was being examined by police, as were "some implements" the robbers left at the scene of the crime, Chief of Detectives Richard T. Nicastro told a joint police-FBI news conference.

Also under scrutiny was a videotape made by automatic television cameras in the depot, he said.

Walton said authorities had no reason to believe it was an inside job, although Nicastro said it was possible a former employee was involved.

"I would say that you had to have some knowledge of the premises and the adjoining building," Nicastro said.

Police and the FBI agreed the job appeared to have been the work of professionals.

Three of the men wore ski masks and a fourth had a turtle-neck collar pulled over his face, police said. All were white.

Officials said the robbers left more money in the vault — $12 million — than they took with them. The money they took included bills "of all different denominations, not traceable," Walton said.

ABC News reported Wells Fargo has offered a $350,000 reward for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the robbers.

Police learned of the heist 10 minutes after it happened, when one of the handcuffed captives was able to get to a phone.

Johnston said there are normally no guards on duty Sunday night, the only night when the depot is unguarded. Following standard procedure, the guards searched the building upon arriving at work early Monday, then opened the vault. At that point, the four thieves jumped them, police said.

The robbers broke into an adjoining structure, a mailroom and storage center of Merrill Lynch Pierce Fenner & Smith, then punched through a cinderblock wall on the second floor.

Wells Fargo, a security service that transports cash for clients, was storing the money in the terminal's vaults over the weekend until the banks opened Monday, said police spokesman Sgt. Ed LeSchack.

About $11 million was discovered missing from Sentry Armored Car Courier Co. in the Bronx on Dec. 12, 1982, following an armed robbery. But police have only recovered about one-tenth of that sum and investigators say some of the missing money may have been previously embezzled.

Until Monday, the largest sum ever stolen from Wells Fargo was $7,017,150 stolen in 1983 from the company's depot in West Hartford, Conn.

Shultz Wants Economic Sanctions On Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Schultz is urging President Reagan to impose a trade embargo and other economic sanctions against leftist-ruled Nicaragua, congressional sources said today.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, was told that Shultz will suggest to Reagan that bilateral trade and airline service between the United States and Nicaragua be halted, Bentsen aide Jack DeVore said.

"It doesn't make any sense for us to buy their goods and finance with our dollars the export of their revolution," Bentsen said in a statement.

Bentsen said he did not know further details of the State Department proposal, which is to be presented to Reagan before he leaves tonight for the annual economic summit meeting in West Germany.

The Reagan administration proposal for an economic crackdown against Nicaragua comes less than a week after the House rejected Reagan's request for renewed aid to the rebel Contras fighting the Sandinista government in Managua. Reagan said Monday in a television interview with foreign journalists he has not abandoned the aid fight.

Bentsen introduced a bill last week calling for economic sanctions against Nicaragua. He said today he was "pleased by the speed with which they seem to be responding to my suggestion."

A trade embargo probably would include a ban on U.S. exports to Nicaragua and Nicaraguan imports.

While not confirming or denying that economic sanctions were being recommended, Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III told reporters Monday that trade measures against the Nicaraguan government would not conflict with the Reagan's opposition to trade barriers and protectionist measures.

"It may be that there can be some mix between trade and politics," Baker said.

He said one of the aims of sanctions could be to "see that trade that comes in here, comes in here from a truly democratic country like Costa Rica."

On Capitol Hill, the visit of Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega to Moscow, coming directly after the aid votes, drew sharp criticism Monday. A resolution to "condemn the actions of the Sandinista regime in Nicaragua" was unanimously approved by the Senate.

The harshly worded resolution blamed the leftist Sandinista government for continuing a "massive military build-up... far out of proportion to their legitimate self-defense needs, thereby nearly bankrupting the country."

The resolution singled out Ortega for going to Moscow "seeking a multi-million dollar bailout of the Sandinista regime."

Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole said the Ortega trip angered members of the House and Senate from both parties. He said they are

"outraged that after his victory in the House that he rushed to Moscow to pick up a couple hundred million dollars to expand the sphere of communist influence."

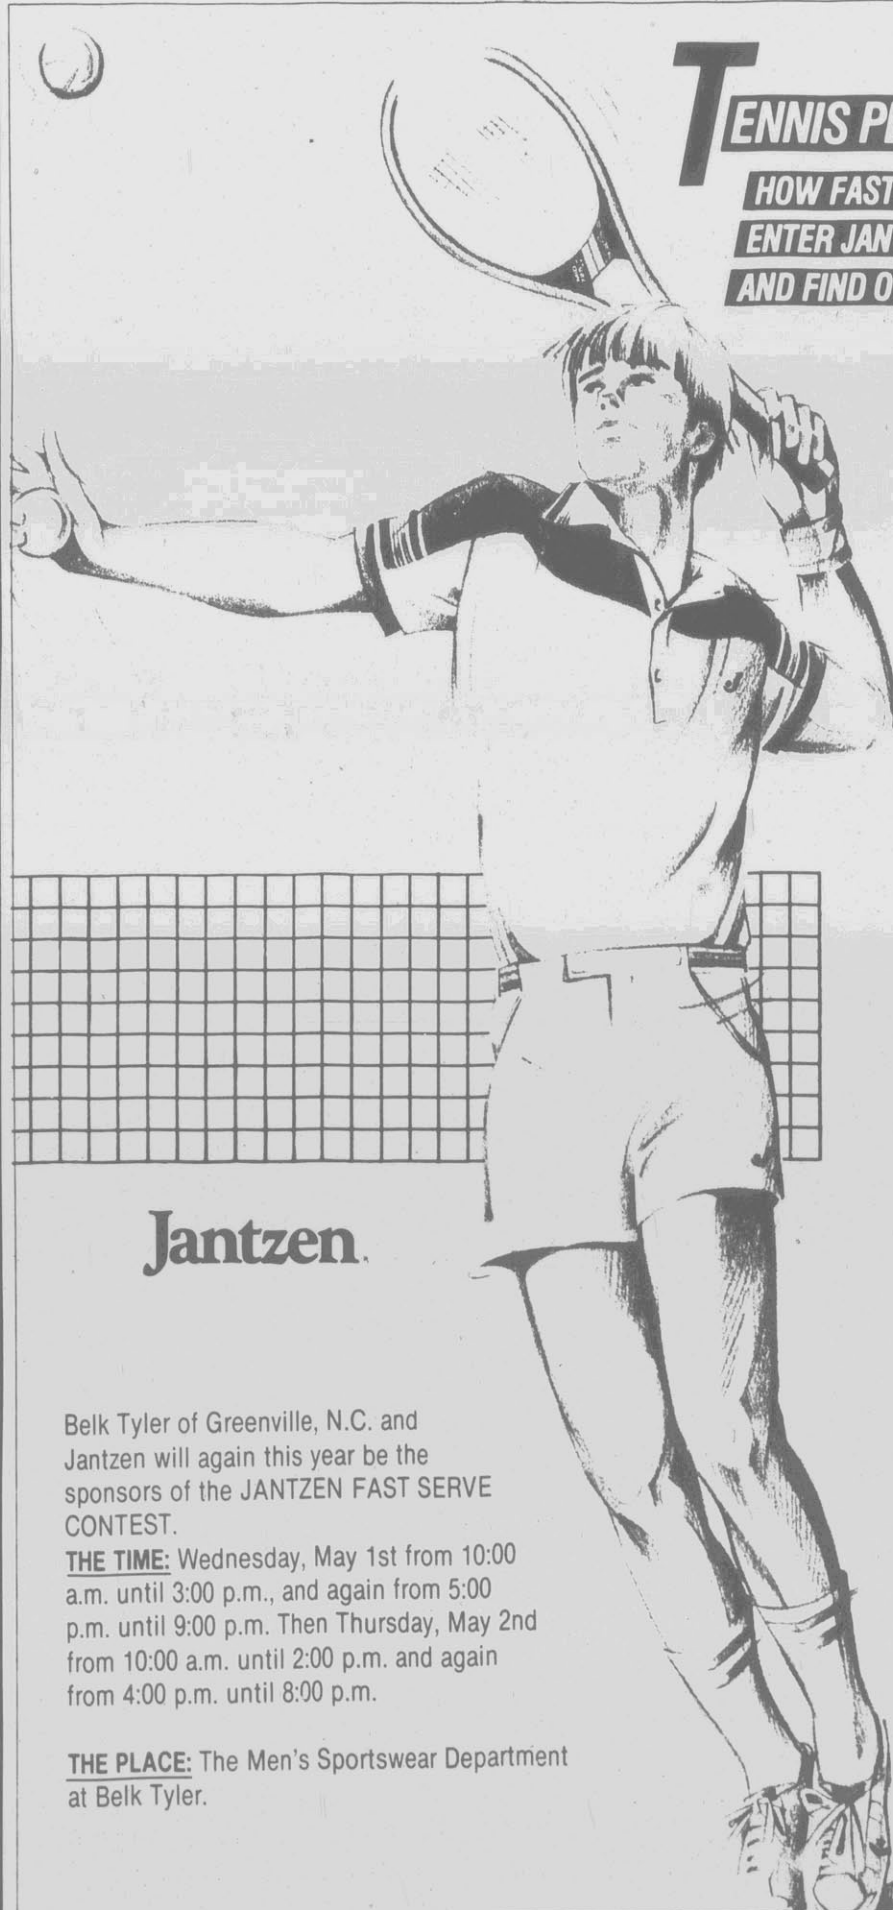

Department spokesman Edward Djerejian said Monday the Ortega visit appears to "reflect a strong and well-planned strategy of the Sandinista government to strengthen its ties with the Soviet bloc."

Auditors Say IRS Slower, Less Correct

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you think it's growing more difficult each year to get a tax answer from the Internal Revenue Service, it's not your imagination. And according to congressional auditors, President Reagan's budget will make it even tougher next year.

Taxpayers with telephoned questions about tax law could get through to the IRS on the first call only 31 percent of the time earlier this year, says the General Accounting Office. That compares with 62 percent of the time on the first call in 1982 and 78 percent of the time in 1978.

Furthermore, GAO told the House Ways and Means oversight subcommittee Monday, IRS accuracy is slipping.

Vietnam Marks Anniversary Of Victory

By DENIS D. GRAY
Associated Press Writer

HO CHI MINH CITY, Vietnam (AP) — Jet fighters thundered overhead and thousands of soldiers and civilians marched through Ho Chi Minh City today to celebrate the 10th anniversary of the communist victory over U.S.-backed South Vietnam.

Nguyen Van Linh, Communist Party boss of the city formerly known as Saigon, said in a speech opening the ceremonies that the victory was "a brilliant exploit of the 20th century."

He thanked the Soviet Union for its support, and said for the United States, the Vietnam War was "a tunnel with no light at the end."

High-stepping infantrymen of the world's fourth largest armed force and militia units carrying U.S.-made M-16 rifles, seized at the collapse of South Vietnam, moved past a stand filled with aging revolutionary leaders who had fought the Japanese, French and Americans.

Thousands of spectators watched the parade, officially said to include 50,000 participants.

It traveled to the former presidential palace where on April 30, 1975, South Vietnam surrendered to communist forces who had ringed the city the previous day.

Towed Soviet-built artillery pieces, tanks, and armored vehicles were part of the parade. Soviet-built MiG-21 jet fighters, helicopter gunships and transport aircraft flew overhead.

The parade route went past or near some of the places where the last acts of the South Vietnam drama were played out — and at almost the same time that those events occurred ten years ago.

The parade began at almost exactly the same time that on April 30, 1975, the last helicopter had lifted off the roof of the U.S. Embassy at 7:52 a.m. to end a mass evacuation of Americans and South Vietnamese.

Communist troops were then moving through the city's last defenses.

Just before 10:30 a.m. on that day in 1975, the last leader of South Vietnam, Gen. Duong Van Minh, announced on the radio that his nation had surrendered.

At 12:45 p.m., Nguyen Trung Kien, a tough 20-year-old woman guerrilla, raised the flag of the Viet Cong's provisional revolutionary government over the presidential palace after a tank smashed through the gates.

President Nguyen Van Thieu had fled days earlier.

Linh said in his speech that Saigon had suffered for 116 years as an imperialist city, "a place full of debauch, prolific in social evils, oppression and injustice."

He claimed major advances have been made over the past decade such as more vegetable growing and elimination of prostitution.

With Linh on the stand were eight of 13 members of the Politburo, the nation's key organ of rule. They included Communist Party Secretary General Le Duan, Premier Pham Van Dong and Defense Minister Gen. Van Tien Dung, the architect of the 55-day campaign which climaxed with the fall of Saigon.

Many of the gray-haired, frail-looking men started out as teenagers fighting the French decades ago and rose to power during the later struggle against the Americans.

Portraits of the revered late President Ho Chi Minh, the national hero who died in 1969 and is known as "Uncle Ho," were posted in the parade area and constant references were made to him.

Absent was Le Duc Tho, who negotiated the peace agreement between North Vietnam and the United States in 1973 and later refused to share the Nobel Peace Prize with U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger.

Tho was to hold a news conference Wednesday for more than 200 foreign journalists, most of them Americans, who were invited to attend the celebration and allowed to wander freely about the parade area.

The ceremonies contained little rhetoric attacking the United States and no sign of overt anti-American feeling. The Hanoi government has said it wants to establish friendly relations with the United States.

No official U.S. delegation or group of American veterans were present. The only prominent American seen was David Dellinger, a peace activist who made numerous trips to Indochina in the 1960s to express sympathy for the Vietnamese communists' cause.

The procession included civilian organizations with banners and dozens of girls in short skirts twirling tasseled hoops as martial music blaring through loudspeakers turned to a disco beat.

A Foreign Ministry official escorting reporters was asked whether such a demonstration would be allowed in the more strait-laced capital of Hanoi. "Definitely not," said the official, who asked not to be identified.

ANNIVERSARY PARADE — Tanks rumble down the April 30 Avenue today in Ho Chi Minh City in front of Unification Hall. The hall was known as the Presidential Palace when the city was named Saigon. ## U.S. Veterans Never Left Alone, Not Even At Night

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 58,022 dead and missing whose names are carved on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial are never alone, no matter what the hour or the weather.

Flowers bloom at midnight in this crannied wall, which all in all, from the death of Maj. Dale Buis of Pender, Nev., on July 8, 1959, to that of 2nd Lt. Richard Vande Geer of Columbus, Ohio, on May 15, 1975, chronicles America's longest war.

In the moon-clouded darkness, a flaring cigarette lighter moves down the pages of the glass-encased, phonebook-sized directory that lists the names in alphabetical order and locates them on the polished black granite panels where, as the monument dedication reads, names "are inscribed in the order they were taken from us."

Along the wall, softly lit by footlights, figures indistinct in the shadows suddenly leap to life when they strike matches to find a particular name, then run their fingers over it reverently like pilgrims touching a saint's statue in St. Peter's Basilica.

A decade after the fall of Vietnam, history here in a sunken memory garden between the Lincoln Memorial and the Washington monument is something you can reach out and touch, the way a blind veteran does tonight, following his seeing-eye dog down the long line of 150 panels to commune with old buddies by Braille at the indented lines where his wife indicates.

"Ole Capt. Hank," he laughs through tears. "How I hated his guts, but he saved my butt that night in Can Tho."

The night air is heavy with the perfume of a floral arrangement sent "by the students of the Middle School, Lordsburg, N. Mex.," to native son Marine Cpl. Magdaleno Tarango, who died young when the war was young. Further down the line, a black-bordered card pasted over his name marks Terry Lee Clark among the absent at the 20th reunion of his Clearville, Pa., high school graduating class. He died in Vietnam at age 21, two years after receiving his diploma.

On the last weekend before today's 10th anniversary of the fall of Saigon, someone has placed a wreath, "To Our Brother," alongside the names of William M. Parker, Darwin Judge, Charles McMahon, Michael J. Shea and William Nystul, near the bottom left panel where the low walls of the V-shaped monument come together. They wrote the final chapter.

Parker, an Air Force tech sergeant from Vacaville, Calif., died April 21, 1975, the day South

Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu resigned and flew off to Taiwan after telling his people "we will fight to the last bullet, the last grain of rice."

Judge, from Marshalltown, Iowa, and McMahon from Woburn, Mass., died in the barrage of 122 mm rockets that fell on Tan Son Nhut airport on that April 30, Wednesday morning when the victorious North Vietnamese Army rolled into Saigon in Russian-made T-54 tanks and Chinese-built camouflaged trucks. Marine Capt. Nystul of Coronado, Calif., and Lt. Shea, from El Paso, Texas, were killed in the final evacuation of the city when their helicopter crashed returning to the aircraft carrier USS Hancock.

Ex-Envoy Says Remember Positive Vietnam Aspects

By The Associated Press

A former ambassador who engineered the frantic U.S. evacuation from Saigon 10 years ago says the focus of today's anniversary observances should be on those who helped end U.S. involvement in Vietnam.

"The enormously successful, extremely efficient, well articulated and organized campaign by peace forces in this country to cut off aid to that country" should be recognized, Graham A. Martin said Monday.

Martin, 72, retired and living in Winston-Salem, was ambassador to Vietnam from 1973 until it was seized by communists on April 30, 1975. An opponent to military involvement in Southeast Asia during the early days of the conflict, he reluctantly accepted the post after being relieved as ambassador to Thailand in 1967.

Martin spent much of his two years as ambassador lobbying Congress for more money to aid the South Vietnamese.

But he said the end came quickly as American aid to the South Vietnamese dried up. And with it, pressure on him increased to get the last contingent of Americans out as the North Vietnamese advanced on a nearly weaponless army.

Martin said officials in Washington had recommended leaving the South Vietnamese there when the call to evacuate went out. He said he resisted pressure to bring in about 15,000 troops "quote, 'to protect the evacuation,' unquote."

"If I had been a Vietnamese and had seen all that military power, I would not have thought they were there to fight (the North Vietnamese), but to protect the American evacuees against me on the way out," Martin said. "I would have felt rather aggrieved."

Martin persisted in his efforts to get as many South Vietnamese out as possible — 14,000 — and in an orderly fashion.

"If we had brought in the troops, I felt there would have been thousands killed. We would have been fighting our allies on the way out," he said. "It would have been a gashtly way out of what had already been gashtly."

Budget Showdown Slated

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, claiming Senate support for President Reagan's budget package remains shaky at best, is seeking to head off a pre-emptive Democratic strike at the section of the plan scaling back Social Security cost-of-living increases.

The Kansas Republican said he doesn't know whether he can keep the president's package intact, but he noted that he was ready to try for a showdown vote today after four days of political maneuvering on the package of $52 billion in spending cuts.

"It will be a jigsaw puzzle for a while," Dole told reporters Monday, saying he still doesn't know how the pieces of the spending outline will come together.

The Senate completed its fourth day of debate on the budget Monday evening without taking a single vote, and Dole said he would seek today to get Senate approval for a procedural motion that would formally bring the president's plan before the Senate as a package.

He twice backed away from calling the roll on such a motion last week, claiming he lacked the votes to prevail.

With six Republican senators still wavering, Dole said the outcome remains too close to call. Republicans control the Senate by a narrow 53-47 margin and Democrats are united in their opposition to the president's package.

Meanwhile, Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., served notice that he would move at the first opportunity to strike from the president's plan its most politically sensitive element — a 2 percent ceiling on benefit increases in each of the next three years for the nation's 36 million Social Security recipients.

Dole vowed to use parliamentary maneuvering to keep the Social Security vote from preceding the vote on the entire budget package — a step that will require Dole to hold the floor until the time of the vote on the Reagan proposal to prevent Democrats from being recognized to offer amendments.

However, Dole made it clear he would give the Senate the opportunity to vote on the Social Security issue later in the debate.

Dole on Monday reportedly agreed to restore $200 million in aid to the handicapped to next year's budget as well as spare the Rural Electric Administration from elimination — concessions aimed at gaining additional support among the wavering Republicans for the president's package.

The White House-backed package would allow defense spending to rise 3 percent above the rate of inflation in 1986.

Scientists Facing Repairs To Spacelab

By PAUL RECER
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — The scientists of space shuttle Challenger mixed research with trouble-shooting today as they settled into a round-the-clock work routine aboard the laboratory they share with a menagerie of monkeys and rats.

A broken airlock, fouled plumbing system, a "crashed" computer and communications gaffes that caused radio signals to echo as if in a cavern slowed efforts by the astronauts to activate the billion-dollar Spacelab.

Challenger, which was purring along in good shape, was launched from the Kennedy Space Center in Florida on Monday, but within a few hours the seven astronauts found themselves beset by pesky mechanical problems that quickly threw them behind schedule.

They overcame many of them, including the confused communications, with help from specialists on the ground. But others remained unresolved and threatened to wipe out one or two of the 15 experiments planned during a week in orbit.

Most of the problems showed up in the early hours of the mission. Two new ones cropped up early today. A computer used to send commands to some experiments simply quit — "crashed," as one crewman reported. Unable to revive it, the crew switched to a backup computer.

An optical device used to view the growth of an electronic crystal failed to produce an image until some trouble-shooting procedures were read up to Challenger.

Despite all the problems, Challenger remained a healthy ship, according to mission control, and the astronauts today began a series of crystal growth and fluid dynamics experiments that are testing ways of making new and purer exotic materials in weightless space.

Within hours after liftoff, the astronauts were able to send one small satellite spinning off into an independent orbit as planned but another craft, called GLOMR, failed to budge from its can-like nest in the cargo bay.

A medical experiment that was to vacuum up and measure the volume of urine produced in space worked in reverse. Fluid was spewed into the cabilet, the other four astronauts activated Spacelab in the cargo bay and immediately encountered a series of problems.

An airlock that was to be used as a platform for an astronomy camera jammed as the astronauts attempted to open the outer hatch to the vacuum of space.

Astronaut Don Lind beamed a television view of the cranky hatch mechanism to the ground and Mission Control promised, "We're working on it and will get back to you." Data from at least two orbits were lost.

Dr. Norman Thagard, following instructions from the ground, examined the airlock mechanism and reported the latch was bent by up to 10 degrees.

The astronauts were told to not use the airlock until hearing further from engineers on the ground.

Thagard, asked to check on one of the rats housed in the laboratory, reported his fellow space passenger was "a curious little fellow. He came to the front of the cage to look at me."

The rat, identified only as "9-Alpha", had eaten all the food within reach, said Thagard. An adjustment in the feeding system was required to give the rodent more food.

Challenger's crew — which includes two physicians and two scientists — are to spend a week gathering data with 15 experiments housed in a bus-sized module called Spacelab 3. The lab, 23 feet long and 13 feet in diameter, is entered through a tunnel from the shuttle's cabin.

Flying with the astronauts are two squirrel monkeys and 24 rats — 12 large ones and 12 small ones. They are on board to test special cages designed to feed, house and monitor laboratory animals in space.

The astronauts planned to keep the lab humming around the clock, dividing themselves into two teams, each working 12-hour shifts.

Overmyer, Thornton, Lind and physicist Taylor Wang are on the Gold Team. Pilot Fred Gregory, Thagard and Lodewijk van den Berg, a crystal-growth expert, are on the Silver Team.

Is is the second flight for the space laboratory, built by the European Space Agency.

The astronauts also worked for hours on communications problems.

Mission Control reported it could not receive signals from some of the microphones in the space laboratory. There also were echoes, screeches and the roar of static. Amid the problems, an intercom microphone started broadcasting. A muttered expletive was beamed to the ground and heard clearly in Mission Control.

The 17th space shuttle flight began with a launch into a clear Florida sky. The liftoff marked the shortest interval yet — just 17 days — between shuttle launches. Sister ship Discovery drilled into orbit on April 12 for a six-day mission.

Challenger is to land on a dry lake bed at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif., on May 6.

Borrowing Power.

Plan Would Bar Cutoffs

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government proposed rules today that bar Social Security disability cutoffs in most cases unless there is evidence that the recipient's medical condition has improved.

Health and Human Services Secretary Margaret M. Heckler called it "another giant corrective step" in reforming the program, which has been the subject of intense controversy since 1981, when disability examiners began trying to throw nearly 500,000 people off the rolls.

Congress ordered the new rules last September. Until then, it had been legal to terminate benefits even if a recipient's condition was no better than it had been when he or she first went on the rolls.

Now, in most cases, the government will have to show "substantial evidence" of medical improvement before stopping anyone's benefits.

The proposed regulations, which appeared in today's Federal Register, could become final following a 45-day period for public comment.

The government also can cut off someone's benefit with no evidence of improvement if it can show that the "prior determination was in error."

Borrowing power: sometimes it's there, and you don't even know it. But when you bank with us, you get all kinds of ways to put wallop in your wallet.

What's more, we know that people today handle credit better than ever, so we developed several services that feature one-time-only applications.

With Cash Reserve, you can get a line of credit up to $5,000 that's as easy to use as your checking account.

Then, when a special bargain, an emergency or maybe a chance to make an investment comes up, you can write yourself a loan like you write a check.

If you want more muscle, you can use your good name or your credit record to qualify for a line of credit up to $50,000 with LineOne.

Or you can use the equity in your home to qualify for up to $100,000 with LineOne Equity.

Either way, with LineOne or with LineOne Equity, you pay a lower rate than with other forms of credit because the rate's based on NCNB Prime.*

So come in and let's talk it over soon. All the borrowing power you will ever need is right here in your neighborhood. NCNB

House Republicans Threaten Walkout If Democrat Seated

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republicans, claiming the dispute over an Indiana seat overshadows any legislative agenda, are threatening a "mass exodus" if the Democratic candidate is seated.

But House Majority Leader James Wright, D-Texas, says Republicans should accept the will of the majority and get on with the business of the country.

The dispute over the 8th District seat, which has turned the House into an unusually partisan battleground, comes to a head today with a vote scheduled on a Republican motion to declare the seat vacant so a special election can be called.

A House Administration Committee task force with a 2-1 Democratic majority has recommended that incumbent Democrat Frank McCloskey be seated on the basis of a four-vote recount win over Republican Richard McIntyre.

Wright told reporters Monday he expects Democrats to reject the Republican attempt to have the seat declared vacant, and they will offer their own motion Wednesday to seat McCloskey. The seat has been vacant so far this session of Congress, while the House, with a 70-vote Democratic majority, has refused three times to seat McIntyre.

But some members of the Conservative Democratic Forum indicated they might vote with the Republicans today. The chairman of the forum, Rep. Charles W. Stenholm, D-Texas, probably will vote for a special election, said a spokesman, Chino Chapa.

GOP members have tried to slow down and disrupt House proceedings to demonstrate their outrage at what they call an incomplete recount that reversed earlier tallies in which McIntyre was declared the winner.

The Republicans tried unsuccessfully Monday to force adjournment before Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the task force, could submit its report recommending McCloskey be seated. The Republicans lost on a 168-124 vote.

"There are things more important than a specific legislative agenda even when it comes from the White House," Rep. Guy Vander Jagt of Michigan, chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, told reporters Monday after a meeting of the House GOP leadership.

Vander Jagt said "the moment he (McCloskey) is seated, I think you're going to see a mass exodus from the House."

He said Republicans "will do as much as we can within the laws and rules to raise the consciousness of the American people that this is a steal and a rape of the Constitution."

Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., said he has told the White House "we have a problem. This is not the best environment under which to legislate." Asked if the 8th District dispute is more important than the administration's legislative agenda, Michel said, "For the moment it is."

If McCloskey is seated, Wright said, "I trust they (Republicans) will do what the minority does in a democratic government, accept the verdict of the majority, however regretfully, and proceed with the next order of business in order that the business of the country may be attended to."

McIntyre was certified the winner of the Nov. 6 election by the Republican secretary of state by 34 votes. He won a state recount by 418 votes. But Democrats claimed inconsistent counting procedures left the outcome in doubt.

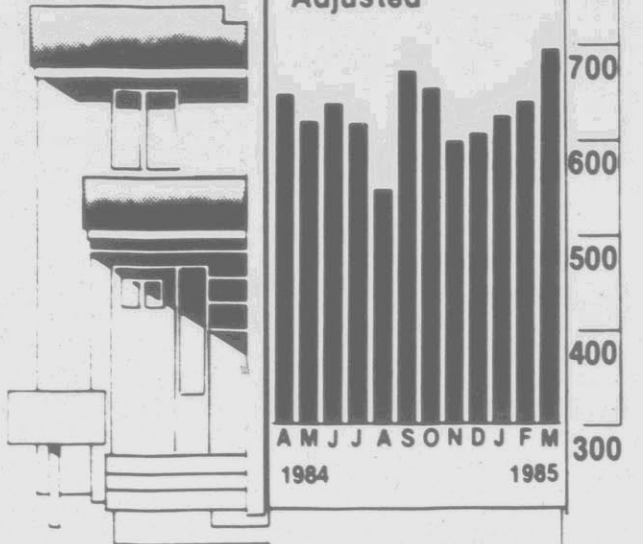

A recount supervised by the General Accounting Office gave McCloskey the four-vote margin and the administration committee recommended his seating.

Republicans on the committee said the Democratic majority "suspended the counting of the ballots with their candidate in the lead" and therefore any effort to seat McCloskey "is an arbitrary, capricious and unjustified abuse of this House's authority."

But Wright claimed the recount was "expeditious, objective, fair," adding: "I regret it was as close as it was but I couldn't do anything about that."

U.S. Seeks New Talks On Trade

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States is going to the annual seven-nation economic summit this week in Bonn, West Germany, seeking agreement for a new round of international trade talks and pressing other countries to do more to spark their economies.

At the same time, U.S. officials will be on the defensive over the strong dollar and a lack of progress in paring budget deficits.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Monday the United States will not exactly be preaching to the other summit nations — Japan, West Germany, Britain, France, Italy and Canada.

"I think reasoning would be a better way to phrase it," Baker said. "But we are going to be over there supporting our concept of what works economically."

That means prodding the Europeans to end a variety of government regulations that have kept their economies sluggish and pressing the Japanese to do more to shrink their trade surplus.

"The economic expansion in the United States shows every intention of moderating and it stands to reason ... that it was going to moderate," Baker said. "Now it's important in terms of world recovery that the other industrialized nations that are in a position to do so to pick up the slack. The major nations obviously are Japan and Germany."

However, a more immediate concern for U.S. officials is protectionist pressure from Congress and U.S. industry to combat the growing U.S. trade deficit, which was $123 billion last year and is expected to be higher this year.

President Reagan is seeking agreement to start a new round of international trade talks early next year.

"There is every good reason in the world why we ought to start a new trade round," Baker said.

"Protectionist sentiment is growing around the world," he added. "It's clearly growing here in the United States and I'm quite confident that the president will argue that if the summit could give him a date for a new round it would be very persuasive in his dealings with the Congress and with others in the United States to avoid a new round of protectionist legislation here."

Economic Forecasts Revised Downward

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main economic forecasting gauge decreased 0.2 percent in March, reversing a two-month gain and hinting of lagging business activity later in the year.

Moreover, the report issued today by the Commerce Department revised downward the gains posted by the index of leading indicators for the past two months — dropping the February increase from 0.7 percent to 0.5 percent and the January gain from 1.5 percent to 1.3 percent.

The index has not risen for three consecutive months since last May.

Most analysts had been expecting at least some gain in the March index as a signal that the economy was ready to pick up steam after a first quarter in which growth, as measured by the gross national product, was only 1.3 percent.

The Reagan administration has based its budget assumptions on projections of 4 percent growth for the year.

Although many private economists view that as a bit optimistic, the majority of them have been predicting an annual growth rate of well over 3 percent for the year.

In another report today, the Commerce Department said the United States suffered an $11 billion foreign trade deficit last month, only a slight improvement from the $11.4 billion deficit run up in February.

In March, imports rose 0.7 percent despite sharp drops in shipments of petroleum and cars to the United States. Exports were up 3.3 percent, reflecting a big increase in aircraft sales.

The trade deficit, which ran a record $123.3 billion last year, is being blamed in large part of lagging economic growth in the United States, particularly in the manufacturing sector.

Today's disappointing figures in the leading indicator index, a report designed to give insight into the likely shape of the economy six to nine months into the future, could cause further reassessment of those predictions.

On the other hand, the negative figure could revive hope among investors that the Federal Reserve Board might be inclined to loosen credit, lowering interest rates, to give the economy a shot in the arm.

The stock market, generally anticipating at least a modest gain in the economic indicator report, suffered its biggest decline of the year on Monday, partly because of concern that the Treasury's quarterly re-financing plan to be outlined later today will call for a big wave of new borrowing.

Heavy government borrowing, coupled with no action to loosen credit, would put upward pressure on interest rates and further stymie business activity.

Seven of the 10 indicators in today's report were down.

Only the average workweek, building permits and average initial claims for unemployment insurance increased.

The department said the most negative influence on the March index came, in order, from net business formation, contracts and orders for plant and equipment, manufacturers' new orders for consumer goods and materials, vendor performance, change in sensitive materials prices, stock prices and money supply.

The changes left the index at 167.1 percent of its 1967 base compared to 167.5 in February.

The report comes on the heels of generally mixed signals about economic outlook.

New and used home sales were up sharply in March and auto sales have taken off in April. Yet orders for non-defense durable goods were down significantly last month and retail sales plunged drastically.

March's inflation report, showing the sharpest monthly price gain in more than a year, contributed to a general uneasiness about the prospect of continued strong growth and low inflation.

However, analysts cautioned that the March consumer price index was heavily influenced by what is expected to be a one-time sharp jump in gasoline prices.

Clay Tablets Cite Comet

NEW YORK (AP) — Two fragments of Babylonian clay tablets that have been overlooked for 100 years in the archives of the British Museum contain a record of the earliest reliable sightings of Halley's comet, researchers say.

The tablets, which have been resting in drawers in the museum's archives, have allowed astronomers to calculate that Halley's comet rounded the sun between Nov. 9 and Nov. 26, 164 B.C.

C.B.F. Walker of the British Museum calls the discovery "the first significant addition to our knowledge of the past history of the comet" in more than a century.

"This is the earliest reliable sighting of Halley's comet from anywhere in the world," said F. Richard Stephenson, one of the researchers who made the discovery. "If we are ever going to study the long-term motion of Halley's comet so we can predict exactly where it will be, we need to know quite a bit about the orbit — and this is where these ancient observations can help."

Stephenson, an astronomer at the University of Durham in England, collaborated with one of his students, Kevin Yau, and with Hermann Hunger, a Babylonian scholar at the University of Vienna.

They reported their findings in the April 18 issue of Nature, a British scientific journal. Walker's assessment was included in an accompanying commentary.

Aside from two possible references in Chinese astronomical records to the appearances of the comet in 87 B.C. and 240 B.C., this is the earliest documented sighting, the researchers said.

Comets are made up of a nucleus thought to consist of dirt and ice and a long tail that increases in length and brightness as a comet nears the sun. Most of the comets that can be seen from Earth circle the sun in elongated orbits that take them far out into the solar system between successive passes near the sun.

Halley's comet passes near the Earth every 75 to 80 years. Its last appearance was in 1910, and it will become visible to the naked eye again at the end of this year.

Lebanese Moslems, Christians Locked In Close-Quarter Fight

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Moslem militias backed by heavy artillery fire stormed the Christian mountain redoubt of Kfar Falous in southern Lebanon today and were locked in close-quarter combat with the defenders, the state radio reported.

The radio reported at least two Moslem militiamen were killed and five wounded in the assault. There was no word on Christian casualties.

The assault in the south, the latest push in a six-day Moslem offensive, came after heavy fighting between Christian and Moslem militias in Beirut overnight and today in which a freighter was set on fire.

Lloyd's of London said the 22,217-ton Miss Marietta, a Greek freighter, was set on fire briefly when a shell hit its boat deck. None of the crew was reported hurt. Police said another ship was also hit by shellfire, but it was not identified.

A cease-fire was declared at mid-morning, but snipers duelled past the deadline. Police said at least five fire fighters were wounded. They said today that 73 people had been killed and 200 wounded in the fighting since Sunday as Christian and Moslem militiamen battled with tank cannon, rockets and machine guns across the "green line" that divides the capital.

The state radio reported that a combined force of the Popular Liberation Army, an alliance of Moslem and leftist militias, and the Shiite Moslem Amal militia overran the Kfar Falous defenses amid heavy artillery barrages.

It was the first time that Amal was reported to have joined its Moslem allies in the southern fighting, in which the outnumbered Christians have been driven from the coastal plain into their mountain stronghold around Jezzine following the withdrawal of Israeli troops.

The Christian Lebanese Forces and the Israeli-armed South Lebanon Army were reported holed up in an abandoned Lebanese army barracks building in Kfar Falous after their headquarters were overrun.

The fall of Kfar Falous would open up the road to Jezzine, the main town in the shrinking Christian enclave in south Lebanon, where an estimated 50,000 refugees from overrun coastal villages were trapped.

Kfar Falous is six miles west of Jezzine in the southern Chouf mountains.

Timur Goksel, spokesman for the U.N. force in Lebanon, reported that 4,000 Christian refugees sought safety Monday in the Israeli-controlled buffer zone north of Israel's border.

Newspapers also said about 10,000 Christian refugees have left Jezzine for the South Lebanese Army enclave around Marjayoun near Israel's northern border.

An estimated 100,000-120,000 Christians are squeezed in a highland enclave running south from Jezzine to the Israeli occupation zone. The enclave is encircled by hostile Moslems and cut off from the Christian heartland north of Beirut. It is reported running short of food.

Prince Charles Is Blocked From Visiting Papal Mass

LONDON (AP) — The London Times reported today that Prince Charles was highly indignant that he and Princess Diana were stopped from attending a Mass by Pope John Paul II in the pontiff's private Vatican chapel.

The newspaper said Vatican sources stated that the Protestant heir to the throne's desire to attend the Mass was overruled on the wishes of his mother, Queen Elizabeth II, temporal head of the Church of England.

But Victor Chapman, the prince's press secretary, was quoted in Rome by the British news agency Press Association as denying that the queen vetoed the attendance of her son and his wife at the Mass today.

"It was found the prince and princess simply would not have the time. It was a logistical rather than an ecumenical decision," Chapman said.

The queen's press secretary Michael Shea said the prince asked advice from several sources, and decided not to attend the Mass after receiving advice from the queen.

The Times said: "It emerged from Vatican sources yesterday that the prince's personal desire to exceed the customary formalities and to add a religious dimension to the current royal tour of Italy had been dropped on the express wishes of the queen."

The Times reported that Charles was said to be highly indignant and to have blamed "an old-fashioned mentality" for the decision.

Charles, 36, and Diana, 23, had an audience with the Pope on Monday. But a Vatican source, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said a request by the couple to attend a papal Mass was overruled by Buckingham Palace.

The source did not mention the queen. He said Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, spiritual head of the Church of England, had written to the Vatican saying the couple would like to attend a papal Mass.

The source said the Vatican replied that that would be arranged but that later Buckingham Palace contacted the Vatican saying an audience would be sufficient.

Poles Arrest 3 Walesa Aides

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The Polish government detained three aides to former Solidarity leader Lech Walesa today, to prevent planned anti-government May Day protests, dissidents said.

"May Day has begun with arrests," Walesa said in a telephone interview from his home in Gdansk.

On Monday night, three of his aides — Bogdan Olszewski, Piotr Konopka and Konrad Maruszczyk — were detained by police as a "preventative measure before May 1," Olszewski's wife Miroslawa said.

Underground organizations affiliated with the outlawed Solidarity free trade union have called for counter-demonstrations to official

May Day parades to protest increases in the cost of food and energy. In the Soviet bloc, May Day is celebrated as a national holiday for workers.

Walesa has not publicly endorsed the calls for demonstrations. But in a statement issued over the weekend he accused Communist authorities of increasing repression and said workers have a right to demonstrate for "justice, bread and freedom."

Walesa did announce he would try to join the official May Day parade in Gdansk, as he did a year ago. The move by Walesa last year took police and Communist Party officials by surprise.

At a Warsaw news conference, government spokesman Jerzy Urban said that Walesa, "because of the role he played in the past, cannot reconcile himself to his status today and tries in a feverish way to draw the attention of Western journalists to himself."

Walesa was the elected chairman of Solidarity, which was legalized after worker strikes in 1980, but was suspended under martial law the next year and outlawed in 1982.

Urban confirmed that there are 112 political prisoners in Poland, a significant increase since last July's general amnesty.

Nissan Recalls Trucks

DETROIT (AP) — Nissan Motor Co. Ltd. says it is recalling 7,400 of its 1985 compact pickup trucks, which may emit too much pollution at high altitudes.

A diode that controls a device called an altitude switch was installed backward at the factory, said Pat Boyle, a spokesman for the marketing subsidiary, Nissan Motor Corp. USA.

Repairs will be free of charge, Boyle said Monday. Dealers will replace the altitude switch and solenoid.

The recall applies only to compact trucks bearing special high-altitude pollution-control equipment and which have a label under the hood stating that its emissions system is suitable "for all elevations."

Most of the trucks were sold in Western states.

Glamorless Draft Gets Under Way

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Football League began a generally glamorless 50th draft today as the league's 28 teams began choosing players from a crop heavy in offensive and defensive linemen but light in players from the glamor positions — running back and quarterback.

Even the one glamor player who might have been drafted wasn't — University of Miami quarterback Bernie Kosar, who chose to make himself eligible instead for a supplemental draft in which the Boardman, Ohio, native is expected to be chosen by his favorite team, the Cleveland Browns.

There was no suspense about the identity of the first pick — 283-pound defensive lineman Bruce Smith of Virginia Tech, the Outland Trophy winner. He was signed by the Buffalo Bills last February.

Before the draft began, Buffalo picked up another first-round choice, No. 7 overall. The Bills got it because linebacker Chip Banks, whom they acquired from Cleveland in the deal for Kosar's rights, declined to play in Buffalo. Under terms of the deal, the Bills got the Browns' first-round pick instead.

After Buffalo went through the formality of naming Smith, the 283-pound defensive lineman posed at the podium with NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle and members of his family.

During his career, Smith made 71 career tackles behind the line for 504 yards in losses, including 46 sacks, 16 of them last season.

The actual first selection of the day belonged to Minnesota, obtained from Houston in the controversial Kosar deal. The Vikings had hoped to get Kosar, but lose him when Rozelle ruled that under NFL regulations, Kosar had the right to opt for the supplemental draft because he has not completed his college eligibility or obtained his degree as yet.

Minnesota, which held the second pick, temporarily passed after the 15-minute time limit expired. But within minutes, the Vikings traded their pick to Atlanta in return for the Falcons' first pick, No. 4 over-all, as well as the third-round selection. The Falcons then took Bill Fralic, Pitt's mammoth offensive tackle.

Houston picking fourth, immediately took Texas A&M defensive lineman Ray Childress. The Oilers had stipulated in the Kosar deal that Minnesota not pick Childress.

Each team was allotted 15 minutes to pick in the first two rounds and five minutes in each succeeding round.

The 285-pound Fralic is considered one of the most dominating blockers in college football history. As a freshman, he was the first Pitt player to start his first collegiate game since Tony Dorsett in 1973.

Childress is a 280-pounder who gained a starting berth midway through his freshman season. His career totals were 360 tackles, including 26 sacks.

Minnesota, which reportedly had been looking for a wide receiver, pulled something of a surprise by using almost all of their 15 minutes before taking another Pitt player, defensive end-outside linebacker Chris Doleman.

The 6-foot-6, 245-pound Doleman, who was hampered last season by a turf toe injury, was very impressive in working out for the scouts, demonstrating 4.65 speed and outstanding agility. He missed two games last fall but made 65 tackles, 11 behind the line.

The Indianapolis Colts, picking fifth, took linebacker Duane Bickett from Southern California. Bickett came on strong in 1984 and won Pacific-10 Conference Defensive Player of the Year honors. A fine blitzer, he made 139 tackles last fall and led USC with 15 stops behind the line.

The Detroit Lions selected 285-pound offensive tackle Lomas Brown of Florida, noted as a good drive blocker who is seldom beaten at the point of attack. A three-year starter for the Gators, he holds the vertical jump record of 34 inches for Florida's offensive linemen.

The Green Bay Packers pulled a deal with Buffalo to acquire the Bills' second first-round pick, No. 7 over-all which had been acquired from Cleveland, as well as the Bills' fourth-round pick next year. The Packers gave up their first-round pick — No. 14 over-all — as well as their second-round choice this year.

The Packers used the pick to grab Southern Cal offensive tackle Ken Ruettggers, a 265-pounder who came back from a serious 1983 knee injury. The injury-prone Ruettggers has undergone two knee operations and has suffered a broken thumb, broken hand and broken ankle.

After the wheeling and dealing, the Tampa Bay Buccaneers quickly grabbed defensive end Ron Holmes of Washington. Holmes got off to a slow start last season until a blood sugar problem was discovered but he looked great in the Orange Bowl.

Holmes was runner-up to Bickett for Pac-10 Defensive Player of the Year honors but won the Morris Trophy as the league's top defensive lineman. He made 117 tackles in 1984, including five sacks. He also forced four fumbles and broke up eight passes.

The Philadelphia Eagles used 14:45 before selecting offensive tackle Kevin Allen of 0-11 Indiana, a great physical specimen who bench presses more than 400 pounds.

As soon as the Eagles' selection was announced, some of the estimated 250 fans in the mezzanine began shouting for the New York Jets to take a wide receiver. They did, picking Wisconsin's 6-4, 201-pound Al Toon, an outstanding athlete who has gone over 24 feet in the long jump, 53-7 in the triple jump and has run a 13.92 in the 110-meter high hurdles.

Toon was Wisconsin's top receiver with 50 catches for 702 yards and five touchdowns in 1984 and is the school's all-time leading receiver with 127 for 2,055 yards and 19 TDs.

The crowd promptly began singing, "Goodbye, Wesley," referring to Jets wideout Wesley Walker, the team's principal wide receiver.

Nine rounds was the longest the NFL has gone since 1968 without selecting a quarterback, running back or wide receiver.

Houston then picked another Wisconsin player, cornerback Richard Johnson, who has the speed (he runs a 4.38 forty) to stay with anyone. He also blocked a school record six enemy kicks in 1984 while leading the Badgers with seven passes broken up and had three interceptions.

The Oilers had acquired the selection from New Orleans for running back Earl Campbell. The 274-pound Lachey made tremendous improvement as a senior and was one of the fastest interior linemen in the country with 4.89 speed. He was a member of his high school mile relay team.

While the Cincinnati Bengals were pondering their pick, the Super Bowl champion San Francisco 49ers traded their choices in the first three rounds to New England for the Patriots' picks in the first round — No. 16 overall — and third round. The Bengals, seeking speed at wide receiver, then took Eddie Brown of Miami (Fla.), a sure-handed receiver who can outrun a lot of secondaries with his 4.48 speed. Brown was the most prolific receiver in Miami history with 1,754 yards on 89 catches, including 14 touchdowns, despite playing only two seasons on offense. He was a defensive back in 1982.

After more than two hours, the Bills reached the halfway point of the opening round by using the choice acquired earlier in the day from Green Bay to take defensive back Derrick Burroughs of Memphis State. Burroughs came back in 1984 after missing almost two years with a serious facial injury to intercept two passes and break up 10 others.

The Kansas City Chiefs, picking 15th over-all, took North Carolina running back Ethan Horton, a 6-4, 218-pounder who led the Atlantic Coast Conference in rushing in 1983 and 1984. He gained 1,247 yards last year — eighth nationally — and 3,074 for his career. Horton, a former quarterback, was named the top offensive player in the Japan Bowl.

The 49ers, using the pick acquired earlier from New England, selected wide receiver Jerry Rice of Mississippi Valley State, a Division I-AA school. Playing in a four-wide offense that passed on almost every down, the 6-2 Rice set 15 NCAA Division I-AA career records, including 310 receptions for 4,693 yards and 50 touchdowns. Last year, he caught 103 passes for 1,682 yards and 27 TDs, all Division I-AA records.

The Dallas Cowboys, using hardly any time at all, picked 245-pound defensive lineman Kevin Brooks of Michigan, whose speed enables him to make plays from sideline to sideline. He led the Wolverines in 1984 with 13 tackles behind the line. Brooks was moved to defensive tackle in 1982 after playing outside linebacker as a freshman.

The St. Louis Cardinals picked defensive end-outside linebacker Freddie Joe Nunn of Mississippi, a 233-pounder who runs a speedy 4.5 forty and showed pass-rushing ability in all-star action. He won the Mississippi 220-yard title as a high school junior and rushed for 1,246 yards as a senior.

With the crowd murmuring in anticipation, the New York Giants chose Kentucky running back George Adams to a few soft cheers.

Tekulve: Not In Top Form

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Kent Tekulve has pitched in four games for the Philadelphia Phillies since being acquired from Pittsburgh on April 20. He has yet to allow a run, but he still doesn't feel as though he's in top form.

The string-bean right-hander hurled 2-3 scoreless innings against the Montreal Expos Monday night, and allowed only one hit as the Phillies nipped the Expos 3-2 in 10 innings.

It was the third straight victory for the Phillies, while Montreal had its six-game winning streak snapped.

The game was the only one in the National League on Monday.

"I'm pretty close to where I want to be," said Tekulve after the game. "I just need to have a little more time to get my fastball where I want it."

Tekulve, 1-0, a sinkerball pitcher, entered the game in the top of the eighth with runners on second and third and one out. After an intentional walk to Hubie Brooks, he got Tim Wallach to ground into a force play at home, then retired Herm Winningham on a grounder to first.

Tekulve was only fairly pleased with his location.

"I kept the ball down in the eighth and 10th innings, but not too good in the ninth," he said. The result was a pair of fly-ball outs in the ninth.

The Phillies scored the winning run off reliever Bert Roberge, 0-1. Pinch-hitter Darren Daulton opened the 10th with a walk, was sacrificed to second by Luis Aguayo and moved to third after Tim Corcoran's long fly to right.

Juan Samuel then hit a hard grounder to deep short. Brooks knocked it down but could not make a play, and Daulton crossed with the game winner.

Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers took the loss philosophically.

"That's a base hit no matter where the shortstop is playing," he said. "He hit the ball in the right spot."

Rodgers also had words of praise for Tekulve.

"He gave them a helluva 2-2-3 innings," Rodgers said.

The Phillies took a 1-0 lead in the first inning when Samuel walked, stole second, went to third on Jeff Stone's grounder and scored on a single to left by Von Hayes.

Montreal came back with two in the second off starter John Denny. Brooks and Wallach singled, and Winningham's single scored Brooks and sent Wallach to third. Winningham was out trying to stretch his hit into a double.

After Mike Fitzgerald was walked intentionally, Wallach and Fitzgerald engineered a double steal. Phillies' catcher Ozzie Virgil tried to throw out Fitzgerald, and Wallach beat the return throw home to put the Expos ahead 2-1.

The Phillies tied the score in the seventh off Bryn Smith when Mike Schmidt hit his second home run of the season. It was Schmidt's 427th career homer, moving him past Billy Williams for 18th place on the all-time list. Carl Yastrzemski is in 17th place with 452.

Denny left the game after slightly spraining his left ankle while sliding into second in the bottom of the sixth. He is not expected to miss his next pitching turn on Saturday.

Wiggins Made Calls To Dealer

SAN DIEGO (AP) — San Diego Padres second baseman Alan Wiggins made six telephone calls to a known drug trafficker in Los Angeles during two recent road trips with the team, according to The San Diego Union.

In a report published today, the Union said the last two calls were placed from Wiggins' room in the Los Angeles Biltmore Hotel last Thursday, just before he disappeared.

Four of the calls were placed from Wiggins' room at the Atlanta Hilton between April 22 and April 24, according to the report, which said all calls were to the same number in Los Angeles.

The phone number was found on a pad next to Wiggins' bed by Padres officials as they began searching for the player Thursday at the Biltmore. According to the Union, investigations revealed the calls on the hotel's computer printouts of telephone calls.

Wiggins, 27, requested drug treatment Friday night via his agent, Tony Attanasio. He has not talked to team officials since Thursday, and Padres President Ballard Smith said he'll wait for Wiggins to contact them before making a decision on his future with the team.

The whereabouts of Wiggins between Thursday afternoon and Friday night remain a mystery. Smith said Wiggins arrived late Friday at the home of his mother-in-law, Anna Wood, who lives in Altadena, east of Los Angeles.

Wiggins was to play second base Thursday against the Los Angeles Dodgers but never showed up for the game. He was last seen driving away from the hotel Thursday afternoon.

Smith said Wiggins began drug treatments at an undisclosed location over the weekend. It's the second time in less than three years that Wiggins has been treated for drugs.

He spent a month in the Orange County Drug Center after his arrest for cocaine possession in July 1982. Following his treatment, Wiggins was suspended for 30 days by former baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

At that time, Smith warned Wiggins that further evidence of drug abuse would lead to his being fired from the Padres.

Wiggins, who signed a four-year, $2 million contract during the off-season, is hitting only .054 with two hits in 37 at-bats this year. Last season he hit .258 for the Padres.

Parrish Homer Spoils Martin's Return

By The Associated Press
Larry Parrish of the Texas Rangers gave Billy Martin an easy way to remember his fourth managerial debut with the New York Yankees. So did Bobby Meacham.

And Martin would probably prefer to forget both occurrences.

"You can go to batting practice and not hit three out. It was just one of those freak things," Parrish said after blasting three consecutive home runs and driving in six runs Monday night to lead the Rangers past the Yankees 7-5.

Parrish's third home run was a two-run shot in the eighth inning off John Montefusco, who had been taken off the disabled list earlier in the day. Martin made his first managerial move when he took out starter Ron Guidry in the eighth and summoned Montefusco to pitch for the first time this year. The first batter Montefusco faced was Parrish.

Parrish became just the fifth player in major league history to hit three home runs in a game in both leagues. Parrish, who homered three times in a game three times for Montreal, joined Babe Ruth, Johnny Mize, Claudell Washington and Dave Kingman in that category.

"That's something you seldom see," Martin said of Parrish's barrage.

Just as rare was what New York's Meacham did in the fourth inning.

After Butch Wynegar and Willie Randolph had singled, Meacham hit a ball that just cleared the wall for an apparent home run. ut as Meacham was rounding first base, admiring his hit, he passed Randolph, who had been waiting to see if the ball would be caught.

Meacham was declared out and credited with a two-run single.

"I'm not going to blame anyone for that one," Martin said. "Things like that happen."

There was just one National League game, with Philadelphia beating Montreal 3-2 in 10 innings.

Much of the pre-game attention at Arlington Stadium centered on the return of Martin, who took over the job after Yogi Berra was fired Sunday.

Parrish, however, was the one who stole the show.

He blasted a three-run blow off Guidry in the fourth inning, and then hit a solo shot in the sixth after Gary Ward had also homered.

Parrish has hit four home runs in the past two seasons off Guidry, which prompted Martin to call on Montefusco in the eighth.

"I didn't want to leave Ron in there because Parrish has always hit him real good," said Martin. "I decided to bring in John and he just hung a curveball. That's the human part of pitching. I told him to throw curveballs into the dirt."

"Guidry was real tired and that's why I yanked him."

Montefusco said he expected Martin to stay with Guidry, who fell to 1-3.

"I was surprised that he (Martin) brought me in. I shouldn't have been as nervous as I was," Montefusco said.

Dave Schmidt, 1-1, got the victory, which ended a five-game losing streak for Texas.

Mariners 9, Brewers 7
Donnie Scott, a switch-hitting catcher who had not hit a home run all season and had just three in his major-league career, provided a stunning ending in Seattle.

Scott led off the ninth inning with a home run hit left-handed off Milwaukee reliever Rollie Fingers that tied the score 7-7. Then, in the 10th, he blasted a two-run homer batting right-handed off Ray Searage.

The two home runs helped the Mariners end an eight-game losing streak. Ed Nunez, 1-0, got the victory and Searage, 0-2, took the loss.

The Brewers took a 6-2 lead in the third inning, aided by RBI singles from Cecil Cooper, Ben Oglivie and Bill Schroeder, who later added a solo homer.

Al Cowens drove in three runs, two with a home run, and Phil Bradley also hit a two-run blast for the Mariners.

Blue Jays 2, A's 1
Bill Caudill, who earned 36 saves for Oakland last season, shut the door on the A's to gain his fifth save for Toronto.

Caudill entered the game in the eighth inning with runners on first and third and none out. But Carney Lansford popped out, Dave Collins was caught trying to steal second and Bruce Bochte flied out to end the threat.

Luis Leal, 2-1, allowed only five hits before Mike Davis homered with two outs in the seventh. It was the ninth homer and 23rd RBI for Davis, both tops in the AL. Davis totaled nine homers in 1984.

The visiting Blue Jays had only four hits, three off starter Bill Krueger, 2-2. He gave up a run-scoring single to Jesse Barfield and left after loading the bases in the sixth. Reliever Keith Atherton yielded a sacrifice fly to Len Matuszek that made it 2-0.

USFL Reaffirms Fall Move; Bandits To Start New Loop

TEANECK, N.J. (AP) — The United States Football League, struggling through a season of declining attendance and television ratings, has reaffirmed its decision to switch from a spring to a fall schedule next season.
 But when it does, it may have to compete for players and fans not only with the National Football League but with a new international spring league that John Bassett, one of the USFL founders, proposes to begin next year.
 "I'm not going to sit back and take orders from a lot of guys who don't know how to run a business. I think the chances of the USFL succeeding in the fall are very slim," Bassett said Monday after announcing he is withdrawing his Tampa Bay Bandits from the league at the end of this season and forming his own multi-sport (golf, tennis, indoor soccer and football) league.
 Still, Bassett and Doug Spedding of the Denver Gold were the only dissenters as the USFL reaffirmed its decision of last August to switch to the fall in 1986 despite the lack of a network television contract. Spedding, however, said he is still pondering whether to join Bassett in his new venture or remain in the USFL.
 The USFL owners also voted to continue its support of the Los Angeles Express, which has been without an owner all season and is being supported by the other 13 teams in the league.
 But they temporarily absolved the Birmingham Stallions from their $415,000 support payment for the Express because the Stallions themselves are just barely afloat, subsisting week-to-week on a $1 million loan from the city of Birmingham. The Stallions' share comes due Feb. 1, 1986.
 USFL Commissioner Harry Usher acknowledged that the prospect of a network contract for the switch to fall is highly unlikely, although the current $20 million a year ESPN cable contract will be transferred to the fall. But Usher said the league would be on non-cable television in 1986 in a contract that would result in "a very substantial revenue" for the league.
 Neither Usher nor any of the owners would be specific about the nature of the contract. But Usher has said that it would be "syndication in the broadest sense," and several sources said at least one facet might be the selling to local outlets of their teams' away games.

 The owners also reiterated that the USFL would have teams in Los Angeles and Chicago next season. The Los Angeles Express, with a roster full of high-priced talent, is currently drawing just over 10,000 fans a game to the 92,000-seat Coliseum, and the Chicago franchise is dormant this season after being purchased for fall play last year by Eddie Einhorn, owner of baseball's White Sox.
 Bassett was about as unspecific about his new venture as Usher was about the television contract, although he said he had had "10 or 11" teams signed up for his new league. Spedding, in fact, provided more details, saying that Bassett envisioned a league of 20 to 25 teams in most of the nation's major markets "and probably Mexico City."
 Ironically, Tampa Bay has been one of the USFL's most successful franchises, both on the field and off. It has even held its own this year as the league attendance dropped by 6 percent over the first nine weeks and television ratings dropped below last year's mark of 5.5 with the warm weather — traditionally the time of lowest ratings — still to come.
 Tampa Bay's 32-14 record over 2 1/2 seasons is the second best in the history of the USFL, and it has consistently been one of the best draws. This weekend, for example, the Bandits attracted 41,226 fans for its game with the Baltimore Stars, while games in Los Angeles, Denver, San Antonio and Oakland were drawing 7,188, 8,207, 9,723 and 12,972, respectively.
 Usher said in announcing the split that the league had title to everything concerning the Bandits — its name, its players, "even its logo." But Bassett, asked if he would take his players into his new league, replied: "The last time I looked, I signed their paychecks."
 Bassett also has sent a letter to NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle saying that he retains rights to 14 players who were expected to be taken high in today's draft. They could presumably be signed for his new league, rather than for the Bandits.

Tubbs Captures Decision Over WBA Title

BUFFALO, N.Y. (AP) — "TNT" is Tony Tubbs' nickname, but after refusing to hype his challenge to Greg Page's World Boxing Association heavyweight title with the traditional vigor, some wondered whether Tubbs was more ladyfinger than cherry bomb.
 There was no Monday night explosion, but Tubbs, the self-proclaimed "boxer-thinker," won a 15-round unanimous decision over Page with a well-conceived, if unexciting strategy.
 The belt that signifies a champion was stolen from Page's hotel room Sunday night, but Tubbs took it in the ring as he out-thought and then out-fought Page.
 The Cincinnati native, unbeaten now in 22 professional fights, did benefit from a lackadaisical effort by Page, who lost in his first title defense, and for the third time in his last four fights.

 Tubbs' strategy seemed to fly in the face of the boxing axiom that says a challenger must take the fight to the champion. He was content to let Page come at him. When Page did, which was all too infrequently, Tubbs countered, consistently landing the crisper punches.
 "Also, the champ has got to fight," said Tubbs, responding to criticism of the waiting game he played. "He was dancing, throwing shots, but not landing no blows. And every time he came in, I landed the cleaner shots."
 The strategy might have had its origins when Tubbs came to town and checked out Page, who entered

Producer Says 'AFI Salutes' Have Gone Smoothly On TV

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES AP — George Stevens Jr. stood behind the editing console and watched as pictures of Gene Kelly popped onto the monitor screens.

Stevens was working with director Don Mischer and editor Mark West on the American Film Institute's presentation of its Life Achievement Award to actor-dancer-director Gene Kelly. CBS will telecast "The American Film Institute Salute to Gene Kelly" on Tuesday, May 7.

Their eyes were on the six black-and-white monitors, showing the different camera angles, and the color monitor for the finished master copy that will go on the air. Occasionally, Stevens or Mischer would make a suggestion and West would tap out a command on the computer. A new picture would flash onto the color monitor.

"You always end up with these things a little long," said Stevens, who has been producing the AFI broadcasts since 1973. The Kelly salute, taped March 7 at the Beverly Hilton Hotel, ran 26 minutes over the allotted 90 minutes.

Shirley MacLaine is the hostess, and among those paying tribute are James Stewart, Steve Martin, Debbie Reynolds, Donald O'Connor and Cyd Charisse.

"I've done 13 of these shows," said Stevens. "The amazing thing is the evolution of the video equipment. It's all computerized now. You have so many more options."

The three watched comedian Martin's anecdotes about Kelly. They kept running it over and over again, discussing whether to go to Kelly for a reaction shot. Then they tried a shot of Stewart laughing at Martin's story.

Stevens said he conceived the idea of the salutes when he was director of the AFI. "There weren't that many salutes and tributes then," he said. "Now it seems like every third day somebody's getting an award. But it was unique when we started in 1973, and we wanted to make the recognition for a lifetime of work."

The first recipient was director John Ford. President Nixon came to the salute and it was the first time a president attended a Hollywood event.

There was no television deal when the Life Achievement Award was established, but there was within two weeks.

selection is made by the 50 members of the board of trustees.

The shortcoming is that we can only honor one person a year," he said. "and that person must still be living. Some good people have left us before we could get to them."

Among the latter was Stevens' own father, George Stevens, who died in 1975. He directed such film classics as "Gunga Din," "Woman of the Year," "I Remember Mama," "A Place in the Sun," "Shane," "Giant" and "The Diary of Anne Frank."

He chose another method to honor his father. He produced a documentary called "George Stevens: A Filmmaker's Journey."

Town Plans TV Blackout

BILLERICA, Mass. (AP) — The prospect of giving up television could turn out to be a week so upset one elementary school student that the younger broke into tears, but for others it will be a challenge for a good cause, sponsors say.

The idea is for the students to try other activities — sports, reading and outings with friends — next week while raising money for the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

At first they seemed mortified at the idea of not watching television, but after we explained to them the good work their sacrifice can do, they seemed excited," said Arthur Levine, association fundraiser.

Goodbye, Saigon

On April 30, 1975, the last American officials in Saigon were evacuated from South Vietnam. China ruled Vietnam from about 100 B.C. until the 10th century A.D., when the Vietnamese formed an independent state. France governed Vietnam from the late 1800s until 1940. The Vietnamese language developed over thousands of years and includes many Chinese and French words. French missionaries developed modern written Vietnamese in the 1600s.

DO YOU KNOW — Under whose leadership did North Vietnam drive out the French in 1954?

MONDAYS ANSWER — Frogs are classified as amphibians because they can breathe both on land and in water.

Farmers Advised To Save Soil Moisture

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer

As an extended forecast calls for continued dry weather into May, officials are advising North Carolina farmers to conserve all available moisture by taking such steps as avoiding cultivation and keeping tillage to a minimum. "It will take between 5 and 10 inches of rain to end this potential drought," said Al Gustafson of the National Weather Service in Raleigh.

But as the Raleigh area suffers the driest March and April conditions since record-keeping began in 1893, forecasts indicate no significant rain on the immediate horizon.

Tar Heel crops can survive the next week or so without rain, but an extended period without extensive moisture could spell trouble for the state's agricultural economy, extension agents said.

Tobacco apparently has suffered the most. Farmers have been forced to replant because their first efforts wilted under the double whammy of heat and dryness.

"Transplanting is probably three-fourths or more complete. Some of that looks good and some doesn't," said Robert Shaw, agriculture extension agent for Columbus County. "That's because of a lack of moisture and high temperatures. As a result, some farmers are having to plow and replant."

Shaw said corn was also suffering, but not only because of the dry conditions.

"We got our corn in earlier than in the past two years. The main concern was that we didn't get enough rain in time to activate our chemical herbicides," Shaw said.

Lenoir County extension agent Johnnie Jones said the weather affected his county's wheat crop.

"It's really reduced the crop to the tune of 34 percent," he said. "Some of the fields have been disked up."

Jones said animals have also been affected by the dry weather. "The farmers have had to resort to other foodstuffs for the animals because the grasslands have dried up," he said. "They're relying on hay."

Andy Boyd, chairman of the Guilford County Agricultural Extension Service, said the weather has taken its toll on the smaller crops.

"It's pretty serious for the small grain crops — oats and wheat," Boyd said. "More of it is going to be damaged in the next week or two without any rain."

In western counties, a combination of the winter cold and spring heat has hurt ornamental shrubbery and slowed growth of Christmas trees.

"We have had a tremendous loss of ornamental shrubs because of frost and the lack of rain isn't helping them to recover," said Gene McCall, agriculture extension agent in Haywood County.

McCall said his county and immediate areas can last two more weeks before the situation can be considered severe.

"We do need moisture for good germination," McCall said. "We can go a little bit longer yet, but we wouldn't want to go a lot longer."

The extended dry weather also has left backyard gardens thirsting for water, officials said. Even subsoil moisture, which often serves as a secondary water source, has disappeared.

"We don't have that reserve down there any more," said William Thomson, a York County, S.C., agriculture extension agent. As for his own garden, he said, "I'm watering the fool out of it."

Martin Seeks Formation Of Child Safety Task Force

By The Associated Press
Gov. Jim Martin met Monday with President Reagan in a White House ceremony honoring private individuals who have contributed to child safety programs.

At the Rose Garden signing ceremony, Reagan proclaimed May as National Child Safety Awareness Month. Other officials attending the ceremony included Health and Human Resources Secretary Margaret Heckler and Attorney General Edwin Meese.

Martin, who declared 1985 the Year of the Child in North Carolina during his Feb. 28 State of the State address, announced Monday the formation of a special child safety task force.

"We feel that a task force backed by public and private participants will have a greater impact because citizens, government and industry will be a part of the effort," said Martin.

The task force, which will work with the Governor's Crime Commission, should be set up by early June, said Communication Director Karen Hayes. The task force will serve as a clearinghouse to coordinate activities on child safety, drug and child abuse, kidnapping and missing children.

"It's very, very important that things become uniform," said Ms. Hayes.

Funding for the task force is still being explored, but there is a possibility of getting money from the U.S. Justice Department and the General Assembly, as well as from public-private partnerships, she said.

Senate OKs Bill Setting Equal Penalty For Real Guns, Toys

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate has voted to punish robbers equally whether or not their weapons are authentic, despite warnings that the change would remove an incentive for criminals to use toy guns instead of the real thing.

"Ah, virtue, what sins are committed in thy name," said Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe. If the legal distinction between actual and feigned weapons is eliminated, the criminal "might as well use the real gun and ... threaten people," he said.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said his bill — approved 34-14 and sent to the House — is needed because crime victims can't be expected to tell the difference between a real gun and a toy.

"As that great American philosopher Pretty Boy Floyd put it, 'you can get more with a submachine gun and a smile than with just a smile,'" said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood. "As far as a victim is concerned, that is a submachine gun and you're going to give him (the criminal) everything you've got."

Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, offered an amendment to make robbery with a fake weapon punishable by 4½ to 15 years in prison — less serious than armed robbery, but more serious than common-law robbery, the only existing alternative. It was rejected.

"I look at the intent and culpability factor," said Sawyer. A robber who use fake weapons deserves punishment, "but he doesn't have that evil intention" of someone wielding a dangerous weapon, he said.

In other legislative action:

A hearing to set a new execution date no longer would be required after a stay is lifted under a bill filed by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland.

Currently, when a stay is lifted, a Superior Court hearing must be held in the county where the criminal was sentenced to death. The execution must be rescheduled for 60 to 90 days after the hearing.

Critics say that arrangement encourages defense attorneys to keep seeking stays of execution long after their cause is lost.

"They know they're whipped after it goes to the (U.S.) Supreme Court, but they keep going just to slow things down," said Harris.

Under his bill, the execution date in effect at the time the stay is imposed would remain after the stay is lifted.

Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, filed a bill to establish a mechanism for compensating crime victims and limit such assistance to $5,000 per case.

The Legislature voted in 1983 to set up a compensation program, but didn't fund it. "An empty promise," Hipps said.

He said he hoped his bill would go to the same Judiciary IV subcommittee considering Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to create a victims' compensation fund by adding $2 per case to criminal court costs.

Other money might come from court-ordered restitution payments, he said, although the Legislature might have to appropriate start-up funds.

A bill was filed containing Gov. Jim Martin's proposal that the State Personnel Commission study the State Personnel Act and recommend changes to protect workers from unfair dismissal or punishment.

State Sees Record Tourism

RALEIGH (AP) — A record-setting $4.2 billion was spent across North Carolina in tourism last year, Gov. Jim Martin said Monday at the 1985 Governor's Conference on Travel and Tourism.

Travel receipts were up 22 percent over the 1983 figure of $3.4 billion. Martin added that the state's tourism industry also provides 186,000 jobs.

"These expenditures are also important because of the very substantial tax revenue that is generated — over $200 million," Martin said. "It is worth noting that two-thirds of these travel expenditures were made by out-of-state visitors."

"I believe that the partnership which exists between government and the private sector in the North Carolina travel industry is a major reason for our success and is a good manner in which to continue."

Mecklenburg County topped the list of travel expenditures across the state, raking in more than $600 million. Dare County had the biggest increase over 1983, with receipts up 62 percent.

The following are the five counties with the highest tourism receipts in 1984 and the percentage of increase over 1983: Mecklenburg, $611,083,000, 27 percent; Wake, $427,551,000, 15 percent; Guilford, $340,883,000, 27 percent; Dare, $267,534,000, 62 percent; Buncombe, $252,672,000, 28 percent.

State Will Release Coastal Firefighters

CAPE CARTERET, N.C. (AP) — As a nearly 6,000-acre fire in eastern North Carolina remained under control despite gusty winds, the U.S. Forest Service was prepared to send most firefighters home today, authorities said.

"It's under control," Laura Lipe of the U.S. Forest Service said early today. "If all goes as planned, it'll all be turned over to a skeleton crew at daybreak. We'll demobilize most of the people."

Officials said Monday the main obstacles confronting firefighters trying to make sure the blazes did not break out again were the winds and ground fires.

"The winds were at 10 to 12 mph with gusts up to 20 mph," said Charlie Crail of the U.S. Forest Service. "It means we may have a little bit more difficult time if there are any more hot spots out there."

Crail said the fire is burning below the ground surface.

"If it wasn't for this ground fire, we would have had this thing under control," Crail said. "We're still shooting water into it. It's two feet down in there in places."

The fire, which has plagued parts of the 149,000-acre Croatan National Forest since Thursday, has consumed 5,700 acres. The forest stretches across Carteret, Craven and Jones counties.

To the north, visibility returned to near normal Monday after smoldering fires filled the skies with smoke along U.S. 64 in Tyrrell and Dare counties. The smoke was the result of forest fires that in early April burned 95,000 acres of swamps and underbrush.

"The winds picked up quite a bit. It looks like it dispersed the smoke quite well," said National Weather Service forecaster Rod Gonski. "There doesn't appear to be any problem like they had yesterday."

Salisbury, Morganton Teachers Get Chance To Compete For Space Trip

N.C. Monkeys in Space

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Two squirrel monkeys raised at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine to study hardening of the arteries are being used on the space shuttle because they don't carry herpes common to the species, an official at the Winston-Salem school says.

"All free-ranging, free-living squirrel monkeys have their own herpes virus," said Dr. Tom Clarkson, director of the Department of Comparative Medicine.

While it not known if the herpes saimiri virus can be transmitted to humans or what effect it might have, Clarkson said. "The people at NASA just wanted to be sure that they had squirrel monkeys for the spaceship that didn't have any herpes viruses. They're supercautious people."

Researchers at Bowman Gray raise monkeys without the virus by weaning them early, while they still have a natural resistance to herpes, Clarkson said.

The shuttle monkeys, known only by the numbers "3165" and "384-80," will be used to study the effect of weightlessness on animals, Clarkson said.

The monkeys and 24 rats aboard Challenger also will test cages for their ability to deliver food and water, NASA officials said.

Patient Undergoes Dialysis

DURHAM (AP) — Deteriorating kidney function has forced doctors to place heart transplant patient Thomas Hairr on a dialysis machine, but his heart continued to function well, a spokeswoman at Duke University Medical Center said.

Doctors removed surgical tubes from Hairr's body on Sunday, but spokeswoman Kay Miller said Hairr had been placed on a respirator and the dialysis machine Monday.

Meanwhile, Thomas Harrison, 55, of Durham, the first person to undergo heart transplant surgery in the state, was in excellent condition Monday, Ms. Miller said.

Harrison, a plumber, underwent surgery Monday night, while Hairr, 41, of Clinton, received his new heart Friday.

Hairr was a maintenance supervisor for the N.C. Department of Correction until becoming disabled by heart disease in December 1984.

Guilty Plea Entered

RALEIGH (AP) — A man arrested last month as part of the FBI's Federal Crop Insurance Fraud investigation in Columbus County pleaded guilty Monday to two counts of criminal information, said special agent Robert Pence.

John M. Gore, who was arrested by FBI agents March 28, entered the two guilty pleas in U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

The first count charged that Gore submitted a false statement by forging signatures on a Federal Crop Insurance Claim form for the purpose of submitting and influencing the action of the FCIC, Pence said.

The second count said Gore offered a bribe to a government witness for the purpose of the witness' cooperation in the coverup.

Pence said Gore was employed as a contractual employee of the crop program in Columbus County. Pence said Gore is scheduled to be sentenced on July 22 in U.S. District Court in Wilmington and faces a total of 12 years in prison and fines of $500,000.

Son Accused Of Beheading Father

DURHAM (AP) — A 34-year-old Durham man has been charged with murder in the death of his father whose head was severed with a butcher knife, police say.

Wallace S. Parker Jr. is being held under no bond in the Durham County jail. At a first court appearance Monday, court officials said Parker would probably be sent to Dorothea Dix Hospital in Raleigh for a psychiatric evaluation. A probable cause hearing was scheduled for May 13.

Parker's father, Wallace Parker, 64, of Durham, was asleep on a couch about 5 a.m. Sunday when he was allegedly attacked with a butcher knife, police said.

Parker is on supervised probation for other crimes, police say.

In 1980 he was acquitted of murder in the shooting death of his wife, Carol Amiga Parker, at the couple's home in Durham. Parker said the shooting followed an argument and was accidental.

Court documents show Parker was charged last week with trespassing in the Durham County magistrate's office, pleaded guilty and was released for time served in the county jail — one day. Parker faces charges of common law robbery, forgery and uttering a false check, but the cases have not come to trial.

Drinking Age Bill Passes

RALEIGH (AP) — The House gave final approval Monday to a bill raising the minimum age for drinking beer and wine from 19 to 21 next year, apparently avoiding a cutoff in federal highway funding.

Without debate, the House voted 106-2 to concur in technical Senate amendments to the bill, under which the increase will take effect Sept. 1, 1986. The minimum age for drinking liquor and fortified wines already is 21.

Voting against the bill were Reps. Larry Etheridge, R-Wilson, and Milton Fitch, D-Wilson.

After the change takes effect, 19- and 20-year-olds caught drinking will be charged with a non-criminal "infraction" punishable by a $25 fine. They will pay no court costs and have no criminal record.

The Legislature approved the bill reluctantly, as many of the representatives and senators who voted for it complained that the federal threat of a highway fund cutoff left no choice. North Carolina would have lost $30 million over two years had it defied the order.

Jailed Jurors Released

BURLINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Two jurors who heard a second-degree murder case last week in Alamance County Superior Court were released from jail Monday after spending the weekend behind bars for contempt of court.

James F. Wheeler of Graham and Mary Isenhour of Snow Camp, were sentenced Friday by Judge Anthony Brannon after they broke a rule of jury duty: They consulted law books before rendering a verdict.

Typically, jurors are instructed by the judge not to read or talk about a case with anyone outside the court. They are generally told to rely on the judge — not on law books — for their interpretation of the laws that apply in the case.

"The general admonition of what not to do is precisely what I wound up doing," Wheeler said Monday, shortly after being released from the Alamance County Jail. "It was poor judgment on my part."

Wheeler said he was unaware at the time that the jury could have approached Brannon for a clarification of legal definitions that he and Ms. Isenhour sought in the law books.

He said he and Ms. Isenhour viewed the law books in the courthouse library during a lunch recess in the second-degree murder trial of Donnie Lee Freeman.

After a bailiff reported the two to Brannon, the judge removed them from the jury and declared a mistrial.

Limited Amnesty

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union has decreed a limited amnesty for veterans and others to mark the 40th anniversary of World War II victory in Europe. It excluded political prisoners and people imprisoned for violent crimes and corruption.

A decree published by the government newspaper Izvestia did not say how many people might be covered by the amnesty. Similar amnesties have been issued in the past, but the Soviets never said how many people were freed.

It provided for release from prison or reduced sentences for some World War II combat veterans and people honored for "selfless work during the years of the war." The amnesty also applies to invalids, men over 60, minors, pregnant women, war widows, and the wives and widows of war invalids.

RALEIGH (AP) — Two teachers who thought they were long shots in a contest to become the first American teacher on a shuttle flight could end up being shot into space.

"When my name was announced, my eyes teared and I was just really excited," said Cynthia Zeger, a math teacher at Rowan High School in Salisbury.

Ms. Zeger and Morganton physical science teacher Ernest Morgan were chosen Monday to represent North Carolina in the national competition in Washington, said Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction.

"I was speechless," said Morgan, 40, a teacher for 17 years. "When I originally applied, I thought it was a tremendous long shot, but I felt I was as qualified as anybody else. So, I decided to go for it."

Morgan, who has a license to fly gliders, developed an interest in aviation during his grade school years when he lived on air force bases in Germany and Morocco. He is an advanced instructor and examiner for the U.S. Hang Gliding Association.

Ms. Zeger, 34, who holds two graduate degrees, has been a teacher for 11 years.

"I've always been interested in space," Ms. Zeger said in a telephone interview. "I was born in the 50s and have kind of grown up with space exploration. I never dreamed I would have the opportunity to travel in space, but I would love the adventure of it."

The two finalists, interviewed by a team of North Carolina educators, were picked from 154 North Carolina applicants.

Renee Coward, a math and science teacher at Blue Ridge School in Jackson County, was named the state's alternate.

Some 10,690 teachers across the nation have applied to be the first teacher in space on a flight scheduled for early 1986. That field is being narrowed to 118 nominees representing the 50 states, the District of Columbia and several territories.

Aging Nazis Still Casting Shadow Over Europe

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Forty years after the defeat of Adolf Hitler, aged Nazi war criminals still cast a shadow over Europe, keeping bitter memories alive and sometimes embarrassing governments.

In one way or another, France, Britain, Ireland, Austria, Italy, Holland and Belgium all have been wracked by the Nazi past in recent months.

The biggest case pending involves Klaus Barbie, who is expected to go on trial, possibly this year, in Lyon, France, where he was Gestapo chief during World War II. He has been imprisoned in Lyon since February 1983, when he was expelled from Bolivia.

Barbie, 71, is accused of deporting thousands of French Jews and others to concentration camps, and of torturing French resistance fighters. But the trial of "the Butcher of Lyon" could be traumatic for France.

Barbie's flamboyant and aggressive attorney, Jacques Verges, has already served notice that he will defend his client by attacking the overall conduct of the French resistance and the collaborationist Vichy regime in World War II. He hopes to prove that Barbie's crimes were no worse than those of many others, including Frenchmen.

In Austria, meanwhile, the socialist-led coalition had to fight a parliamentary no-confidence motion only last February because the defense minister, Friedhelm Frischenschlager, officially welcomed a Nazi war criminal to his country.

Walter Reder, a major in Hitler's SS guard, had served 33 years in an Italian prison for ordering a reprisal massacre of 1,830 Italian civilians.

He was paroled by the Italians on grounds of ill health and flown to Austria, where Frischenschlager welcomed him and escorted him to a military barracks. Facing protests and demands for his dismissal, the defense minister apologized for "a grave political mistake" and stayed in office. Reder, 69, is believed to be living in Vienna.

For Holland, the Nazi connection came in the shape of Pieter Menten, a Dutchman jailed for his involvement in the massacre of 20 to 30 Polish Jews by SS men in Poland in 1941.

Upon his release from prison in March after serving two-thirds of a 10-year sentence handed down by a Dutch court, 85-year-old Menten planned to retire to a house in Ireland. But outcry from Irish Jews prompted Dublin to refuse him entry. Menten is still living in Holland.

Britain, like Ireland, was not occupied by the Germans in World War II and has not had to wrestle with such issues, but it too is sensitive to Nazi connections. In April Britain was rocked by newspaper revelations that Princess Michael, a member of the royal family by marriage, was the daughter of an SS major.

The princess, 40, has released a 1948 Bavarian court judgment issued under the Allies' de-nazification law ruling that her father, now deceased, was an SS member only in name, and that his relations with the unit grew so bad that it expelled him in 1944.

Belgium's top war criminal still at large is Leon Degrelle, 78, who led SS troops on the Soviet front and now lives in Spain.

Degrelle was cleared of mass murder, but a postwar Belgian court sentenced him to death in absentia.

He has said he wants to be tried in Belgium so that he can explain his wartime conduct. But in 1974 Degrelle was banned from Belgium as an undesirable.

Degrelle is one of several war criminals who took refuge in Spain under the rule of the late Generalissimo Franco. And in August 1984, Portugal granted admission to Romanian Archbishop Valerian Trifa when he was deported from the United States for war crimes. It has since ordered him expelled and his case is before the courts.

The United States and Canada have also been plunged into the war crimes question.

A Cleveland court has ordered the extradition to Israel of John Demjanjuk, 65, on charges that he operated the gas chamber at the Treblinka concentration camp in Poland where thousands of Jews died.

Yugoslavia is seeking the extradition from Los Angeles of Andrija Artukovic, 85, whom it blames for the wartime massacre of thousands of Serbs, Jews and Gypsies while he was interior minister in the Nazis' puppet regime of Croatia. Artukovic's case is before the U.S. courts.

Canada, meanwhile, has set up a commission headed by a former judge to ferret out war criminals possibly living there. This follows disclosures that Josef Mengele, the most infamous criminal still unaccounted for, may have lived in Canada in 1962.

Following indications that Mengele may have been arrested by American forces in Austria in 1947 and then released, the U.S. army is studying more than 300,000 documents on Mengele to try and establish his whereabouts.

Mengele, the "Angel of Death" who conducted inhuman experiments on inmates at Auschwitz concentration camp, would be 74 if he is alive. He is claimed to be living in Paraguay or just outside its border, although Paraguay denies knowledge of his whereabouts.

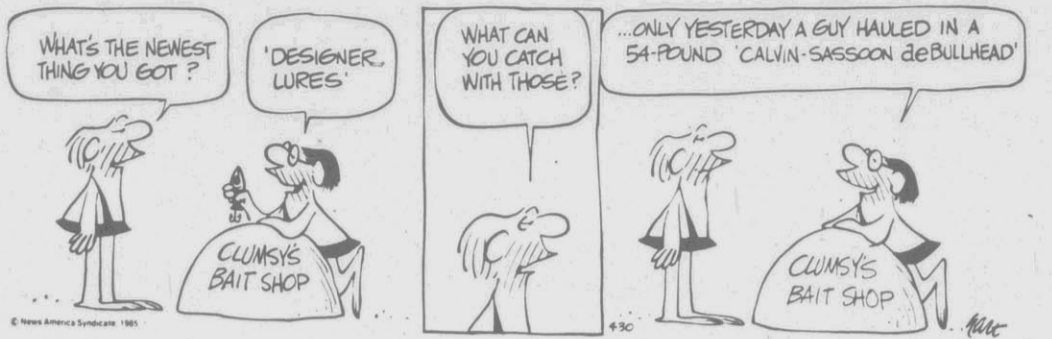

In West Germany itself, the Center for State Justice Administration continues the mission it undertook more than 20 years ago to bring war criminals to trial. But its director, Adalbert Rueckerl, admits that of the 70,000-100,000 war criminals estimated to have escaped, few will ever be brought to justice.

"So many witnesses have died, so many people are getting too old to remember," Rueckerl told The Associated Press in an interview last year.

U.S. Nazi-Hunting Office Continuing To Operate

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — While a special Justice Department unit continues to investigate the whereabouts of Auschwitz prison camp doctor Josef Mengele, two more alleged Nazi war criminals have left the United States.

The permanent departures of Juozas Kisielaitis and Paul Bluemel brings to eight the number of alleged Nazi war criminals permanently ousted by the Office of Special Investigations.

That's the Nazi-hunting office, founded in 1978, which in February launched an effort to locate Mengele, the "Angel of Death" Auschwitz prison camp doctor. Mengele, who would be 74 if still alive, is accused of performing grotesque experiments on humans at the World War II camp.

Neal M. Sher, head of the OSI, has said recently he is optimistic the government will be able to track down Mengele, the most notorious Nazi war criminal still at large.

In the meantime, Sher's office continues to move against other alleged Nazis living in the United States under false pretenses.

The government currently has more than 300 individuals under investigation as potential Nazi war criminals. The department already has filed court cases to deport or strip U.S. citizenships from 32 other alleged Nazis. In 500 additional cases since the OSI was established, the government investigated and then decided not to move against an individual.

On Monday, Sher announced that Kisielaitis, 64, of Shrewsbury, Mass., who holds Canadian citizenship, went to Canada last December rather than face charges brought in a deportation proceeding filed earlier.

The government charged that Kisielaitis assisted the Nazis in persecuting Jews while he served in the Schutzmannschaft, a military battalion in his native Lithuania.

Sher also said that Bluemel, 83, of Ocala, Fla., left Thursday for West Germany after admitting to OSI officials that he was deportable under federal law barring entry by anyone who has persecuted civilians.

It was not immediately known if the Canadian and West German governments also would move against Kisielaitis and Bluemel. West Germany has allowed its statute of limitations to run out on Nazi war crimes, except in cases of "heinous murder." And this is believed to be the first time the Canadians have been confronted with a possible Nazi war criminal.

The other alleged war criminals ousted by Sher's office are Feodor Fedorenko, a Treblinka death camp guard; Hans Lipschik, an Auschwitz death camp guard; Anatoly Hrusitzky, a member of the Nazi-organized Ukrainian police; Valerian Trifa, leader of the Romanian Iron Guard; John Avdzej, a Nazi mayor in occupied Belorussia, and Arthur Rudolph, a production director of forced labor at the Mittelwerk V-2 missile factory and later chief designer of the U.S. moon rocket.

Bluemel joined the Nazi party about 1930 and the Nazi SS, or Schutzstaffel, that year or the following year, Sher said. He also was active in the SA, the Sturmabteilung or brown-shirted storm troopers, and the SD, the Sicherheitsdienst, or security service of the SS.

After the Nazis invaded the Soviet Union, Bluemel was named a district commissar in the Ukraine, which placed him over the German police and Ukrainian auxiliary police.

Sher said from July 1941 to 1943 while Bluemel was district commissar at Tschudnow, several thousand Jews were murdered by the German and Ukrainian police.

In a sworn statement to the Justice Department on March 28 this year, Bluemel acknowledged receiving the order from his superiors that all the Jews in his district were to be killed, Sher said. Bluemel admitted he did nothing to stop the murder of Jewish men, women, children and babies, Sher said.

Bluemel entered the United States on Nov. 7, 1984, and had applied for permanent residence.

Kisielaitis, who entered this country in 1963, allegedly concealed his service in the Schutzmannschaft at that time, because members of the unit were ineligible to obtain visas.

Sher said evidence of Kisielaitis' membership in the unit was found in Lithuanian language war documents captured by the Soviet military near the end of the war. Moreover, he said, in 1982, Kisielaitis admitted his membership during his sworn testimony in a denaturalization case against Jurgis Juodis.

Juodis was an officer of the Lithuanian Schutzmannschaft Battalion and is one of five former members of that unit against whom either deportation or denaturalization cases are pending.

'Star Wars' Major Topic For Germans

BONN, West Germany (AP) — The U.S. "Star Wars" space research program is expected to be the main topic of discussion between Chancellor Helmut Kohl and President Reagan during Reagan's state visit, Bonn officials said today.

Meanwhile, authorities warned of possible terrorist attacks in connection with this week's economic summit in Bonn and Reagan's visit.

A Bonn government spokesman said Kohl wants to explain to Reagan West Germany's position on the U.S. research into a space-based defense against nuclear missiles.

Kohl will tell Reagan that West Germany is interested in participating in the research, known as the Strategic Defense Initiative, but only if the Americans are willing to guarantee that technology developed is shared equally on both sides of the Atlantic, said the spokesman, who spoke only on condition he remain anonymous.

Kohl has also called for a common European position on the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Reagan arrives in West German Wednesday morning, but he will not meet with Kohl until after his official welcome by President Richard von Weizsaecker on Thursday.

The warning of possible terrorist attacks by left-wing groups came Monday, two days before the leaders of the seven major industrialized nations are to arrive in Bonn this week for the annual meeting, which opens Thursday.

Heinrich Boge, president of the Federal Criminal Office, said in a statement: "Terrorists and their sympathizers are planning spectacular attacks to demonstrate their opposition to the political and economic system of the Western world."

Reagan will visit the site of the Bergen-Belsen Nazi concentration camp and the Bitburg cemetery after the three-day summit ends.

Boge's comments followed three coordinated bomb attacks in Cologne and Dusseldorf early Monday. No one was injured in the blasts, which caused extensive damage to businesses to the Hoechst chemical concern and a building belonging to an employers' association.

The left-wing Revolutionary Cells, which the Bonn Interior Ministry lists as one of the country's most dangerous terrorist gangs, claimed responsibility.

Boge said recent bombings in West Germany, France and Luxembourg have prompted authorities to be on the alert for further attacks during the summit.

Also on Monday, a Bitburg city official said critics of Reagan's plans to lay a wreath at a military cemetery are interested only in emphasizing the past.

Auditors Say IRS Cuts May Backfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration's proposal to reduce the federal deficit by cutting the Internal Revenue Service staff could backfire and reduce tax collections, government auditors said Monday.
 "Congress should be mindful of IRS' unique revenue-collection role," Johnny C. Finch of the General Accounting Office, told a House Ways and Means subcommittee. "Government-wide reductions applied to IRS could result in reducing the revenues available to fund other government programs," he said.

 IRS Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. defended the cut as "in keeping with the desire of the administration to achieve a freeze in spending across the board." He said the agency, which collects more than 90 percent of federal revenue, will make up for the loss of money by improved efficiency in data processing, collection and other areas.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes during the legislative week that ended April 19.

House
STANDARDS — By a vote of 196 for and 201 against, the House rejected an amendment to cut the National Bureau of Standards fiscal 1986 budget to the $122 million level requested by the administration.
 The House later approved "freezing" the bureau's budget at the 1985 level of about $127 million, and sent the bill (HR 1617) to the Senate. Included in the new budget is $9.7 million for the Center for Fire Research and Center for Building Technology, two agencies the administration had sought to kill.
 Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., who sponsored the amendment, said "we ought to give to the administration that amount of money which they say they need" to administer the National Bureau of Standards.
 Opponent Sherwood Boehlert, R-N.Y., said: "We have been parsimonious. We have been tight-fisted. But we recognize the importance of the National Bureau of Standards."
 Members voting no were opposed to cutting the bureau's budget as deeply as recommended by the administration.
 North Carolina representatives voting yes were William Cobey, R-4; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-6; James Broyhill, R-10, and Bill Hendon, R-11.
 Those voting no were Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3;

Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8.
 Walter Jones, D-1, did not vote.

Senate
NOMINEE — The Senate confirmed, 73 for and 18 against, the nomination of John E. Krings to head a new Pentagon agency charged with insuring that American weapons function during combat.
 Congress created the Office of Operational Test and Evaluation to inject greater scrutiny over Pentagon weapons procurement.
 Lawmakers want the office to be sufficiently independent to blow the whistle, when necessary, on weapons that break down when tested during simulated combat.
 Krings, a test pilot and engineer, has worked for the past 29 years for McDonnell Douglas Corp., a leading defense contractor.
 Supporter Sam Nunn, D-Ga., said Krings is well qualified and "has agreed to keep in close touch with Congress ... and to maintain the highest standards of objectivity and integrity."
 Criticizing Krings for being too close to the arms industry and for lacking experience in combat-type testing, foe David Pryor, D-Ark., said he opposed the nomination "on behalf of those who will have to risk their lives in combat ..."
 Senators voting yes favored the nomination.
 North Carolina Sens. John East, R, and Jesse Helms, both voted yes.

Three Seek New Trials In Martin

WILLIAMSTON — New trials are being sought this week in Martin County Superior Criminal Court by three men convicted in earlier proceedings.

Judge Thomas S. Watts of Elizabeth City will hear the petitions submitted by James Edward Thompson of Robersonville, James Earl Edmonds of Williamston and Eugene Tetterton of Williamston.

Thompson is serving an 18-year sentence after being convicted of armed robbery of the Oak City ABC Store in February 1983. He pleaded innocent at the time of his trial. Thompson's attorney says two other men convicted in the robbery now say they will testify that another man, not Thompson, was involved in the robbery.

Edmonds is serving a life sentence plus 10 years for the death of Ralph Augustus Keel and assault on his estranged wife.

Tetterton was sentenced in January 1977 to 10 years following a charge in October 1976 for assault with a deadly weapon with intent to inflict serious bodily injury.
