Western Leaders Expecting Full Agenda

By DAVID MASON
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Leaders of the main industrialized democracies, opening their 11th annual summit here today, were primed to discuss world economic woes, East-West tensions and President Reagan's hopes for a space-based defense against nuclear missiles.

A key issue to be dealt with during the current meeting, as at those in the recent past, is trade protectionism. The United States and Western European countries particularly want Japan, which had a $44 billion trade surplus last year, to open its markets to more foreign goods. Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone has launched a campaign to convince his countrymen to import more from abroad.

The summiters also were expected to deal with the desire of Japan, the United States and Canada for a new round of trade liberalization talks beginning early next year.

But the Europeans, particularly French President Francois Mitterrand, want any such talks linked with a commitment for a monetary conference, largely in an effort to halt recent ups and downs in the exchange value of the U.S. dollar.

The leaders were also expected to discuss with Reagan the prospects for a meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and the course of the Geneva nuclear arms reduction talks, which are in recess following a first round that produced no obvious results.

Soviet officials have indicated that Gorbachev will go to the United Nations in New York this fall and Reagan has voiced hopes of arranging a meeting with him.

Reagan's summit partners also will be seeking more information about his Strategic Defense Initiative, or "Star Wars" plan, which he hopes will make nuclear missiles impotent and obsolete early in the next century.

The Pentagon has invited American's closest allies and friends to take part in the research program, but so far only British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher has given assent.

Shortly after Reagan arrived Wednesday morning and went to Gynnich Castle outside of Bonn to rest, police defused a homemade bomb in Bonn's diplomatic quarter, on the terrace of a building housing the Federal Association of German Air and Space Travel. The explosive was packed into a fire extinguisher and was discovered by an alert passerby, police said.

It had been planted despite what officials said was the largest security force — 11,000 police officers — ever organized in the West German capital.

Charged With Murder

Jonas Surrenders

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Robert Andrew Jonas, 36, of Greensboro was arrested on murder charges late this morning after he surrendered to officials at the Pitt County Courthouse. Superior Court Judge John B. Lewis Jr. set bond for Jonas at $70,000.

Jonas was expected to be released later this afternoon or on Friday after the bond was posted.

Jonas and Michael Edward Grant, 31, of Greenville — now in custody in California — were indicted by the Pitt County Grand Jury Monday on murder charges in connection with the death of a 6-hour old child in Pitt County Memorial Hospital's neonatal unit on July 24, 1983.

Darlene Clara Peszko had been born at the hospital at 10:56 p.m. on July 23, suffering from a severe brain defect. The grand jury indictments accused Grant and Jonas of compressing the child's chest, thus causing her death.

At the time of the alleged murder Jonas was a registered nurse working in the neonatal unit while Grant, now a registered nurse, was a delivery room technician at PCMH.

Jonas left PCMH and moved to Greensboro in December 1983, where he has been working at Moses Cone Hospital. Grant was "terminated" from his job at PCMH in March because of the investigation.

Grant was taken into custody Tuesday by the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Departments. Jonas' attorney notified District Attorney Tom Haigwood earlier this week that Jonas would surrender to authorities in Superior Court here this morning.

Officials said the Peszko child the two are accused of killing was born with anencephaly, a condition "incompatible with life," in which the upper part of the brain fails to form properly during the first three months of pregnancy.

Because of the short life expectancy, the death was originally considered a natural one, and the parents asked that no autopsy be performed.

After hospital officials, in February, asked that the death be investigated, the body was exhumed in March for an autopsy. An amended death certificate lists the cause of death as a bruised heart caused by "mechanical compression of the chest."

The parents of the child, Steven H. Peszko and Wendy G. Peszko, lived in Greenville at the time of the death, but now live in Alpharetta, Ga.

A news article published in Wednesday's edition of The Daily Reflector incorrectly identified Grant as a nurse at the time of the incident and Jonas as a delivery room technician.

Grant received his BS degree in nursing from East Carolina University on Dec. 14, 1984, while Jonas received his associate degree in nursing from Pitt Technical Institute

Bikers Held In National Drug, Racketeering Raids

Earlier story on page 12.

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Three people were arrested today as part of a nationwide roundup of motorcycle gang members on narcotics and racketeering charges, authorities said.

"Three arrests were made by the FBI in Durham today," said U.S. Attorney Kenneth McAllister in Greensboro. He said the suspects were being taken to Winston-Salem for court appearances this morning.

The special agent in charge of the North Carolina FBI office, Robert Pence, was unavailable for comment, but his office said he was planning to issue a statement shortly after noon.

In Washington, Attorney General Edwin Meese III today announced the arrests of more than 125 people, the bulk of them members and associates of the Hells Angel Motorcycle Club, on drug trafficking and other charges.

Neither the Justice Department nor the FBI identified any of the individuals arrested.

Meese and FBI Director William H. Webster said in a joint statement that "the arrests and searches began at dawn at more than 50 locations around the nation and were carried out by FBI agents supported by other federal, state and local police officers."

Webster said that during the course of the investigation, an FBI agent went undercover, and that the agent's role "required extensive travel in several states and transactions with numerous Hells Angels officers." He said the operation reached 11 Hells Angels chapters in seven states.

He said the arrests and searches carried out today were in territories covered by FBI field offices in Albany, N.Y.; Boston; Charlotte, N.C.; Cleveland; New Haven, Conn.; New Orleans; New York; Newark, N.J.; Omaha, Neb.; Phoenix, Ariz.; Richmond, Va.; Sacramento, Calif.; San Diego, and San Francisco.

Meese said the arrests also represented "the beginning of the overt stage of a complex investigation begun in early 1982 by the Baltimore office of the FBI and code-named 'Roughrider.'"

Webster said the FBI credits the three-year-old undercover operation with "averting five potential murders."

The statement said the Hells Angels members and associates were charged with violating the Controlled Substances Act and the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act. The announcement said more than 30 people were arrested on a variety of state and local offenses.

Drugs obtained during the undercover "Roughrider" operation had a street value of $2 million and included methamphetamine, cocaine, marijuana, hashish, PCP and LSD, Webster said.

Martin Threatens To Sue Legislature

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin today threatened to take the Legislature to court if it approves legislation to expand its jurisdiction over executive-branch rulemakers.

"If this is enacted in its present form, since I don't have the veto and the only thing I can do to resort to the courts for relief from it, we would certainly be forced to do that," said Martin in his weekly news conference.

The proposed rewrite of the Administrative Procedures Act, sponsored by powerful Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, was scheduled for a House floor vote this afternoon.

The bill would greatly expand the Legislature's authority to oversee executive-branch agencies, which write rules to carry out state laws. The measure would require that all rules be approved by a board appointed by the Legislature, and would establish a system of administrative judges to settle disputes over the rules.

Martin said the bill, by stripping the governor and judiciary of responsibility, would violate the constitutional principle of separation of powers.

Another serious problem with, even if those features were to be rectified, is that the way it is designed would create in effect a regulatory nightmare, taking away from regulatory agencies the responsibilities for determining the meaning of their regulations," said Martin.

He said it would force people who run afoul of the regulations or disagree with them to hire attorneys and go through a legal proceeding.

Supporters of the bill say executive agencies are doing the Legislature's job by writing regulations, and that the same agencies making the rules should not settle arguments over them.

On other issues, Martin said he would push for repeal of the inventory and intangibles taxes and the sales tax on food and medicine in future sessions if the Legislature agrees only to partial repeal.

He insisted that "school's not out" on consideration of his tax package, but said he would take credit for prodding the Legislature to enact whatever tax relief is approved.

Martin endorsed bills sponsored by Rep. Theresa Esposito, R-Forsyth, and Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, to make pregnancy an aggravating factor in the murder or assault of a woman.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Freeloading Father Is Burden To Working Son

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 23-year-old man with a problem: my father. Three months ago he quit his job and moved in with me. He didn't even let me know he was coming; he just showed up at my door—bag and baggage.

He's been here for three months now, and still no job. I doubt if he's even looking. I asked him to take any kind of job for now, but he said he was too old to start at the bottom. (He's 47.)

To top it off, his girlfriend is always here. They have sex in my bed, shower in my bathroom and have practically taken over my apartment. Dad got upset when I told him I didn't want her over here so much. She's married with two small children and is 10 years younger than my father.

Abby, I liked living alone. I work two jobs so I wouldn't need a roommate to share expenses.

What can I do? Dad keeps telling me, "You owe me your life; if it weren't for me, you wouldn't be here." Should I feel guilty because I want him out of here. What should I do?

FED UP

DEAR FED UP: Reverse roles, and do what a loving parent should do with an able-bodied adult son who freeloads off his parents. Give him a deadline. He'll take as long as you're willing to give.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 48-year-old white male, and a child molester of pre-adolescent children, ages 5 to 12. I have a long history of non-violent sexual offenses. I am once again in jail awaiting sentence for a sexual offense.

Abby, please continue to tell your readers that all children, boys and girls, should be supervised when going to the bathroom at movies or any other public place. No one knows better than I how easy it is for a child to be accosted by a molester in a public restroom. Flea markets, county fairs and carnivals are a molester's delight. I am amazed to see so many small children wandering around alone at these places.

Prevention of child molestation can come about only through educating parents as well as children.

Parents need to warn their children about molesters, and further protect them by never allowing them to roam around in public places unsupervised.

INMATE IN COLORADO

DEAR INMATE: Thank you for reaffirming some facts that many parents are already well aware of. But it never hurts to remind them.

DEAR ABBY: I am 21 years old and planning my wedding. I picked out a beautiful satin and lace wedding gown, but here's the problem: My mother wants me to wear the wedding gown she wore when she got married.

I hate to hurt her feelings, Abby, but I tried it on, and I don't care for it at all. Maybe it just doesn't look good on me, but I really hate to think of wearing it on my wedding day. It looked good on my mother in her day, but there is no way I could feel beautiful in that wedding gown.

Please, please help me get out of wearing it, Abby. Or should I wear it and keep my mouth shut? My fiancé saw the gown I want to buy (we picked it out together), and he says I should ask you. I would be paying for it with my own money.

SEPTEMBER BRIDE

DEAR BRIDE: Be honest with your mother. It's your day, and I know she wants you to feel beautiful. Tell her that you have found the wedding dress of your dreams, and go for it!

CROP GENETICS

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Advanced crop genetics offer the best hope of delivering higher-performing food crops needed to solve world shortages, says Rod N. Stacey, president of United AgriSeeds Inc.

Stacey's firm is conducting laboratory and field research to develop improved varieties of corn, soybeans and wheat. He says the "new genetics" will make it easier to develop crops that can be grown in both the United States and in Third World countries.

Varieties are needed with greater drought and pest resistance, salt tolerance, and nutritional value.

BANKING WORLD

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — The world of banking is changing, according to George J. Benston, a professor in the University of Rochester's Graduate School of Management.

"Nationwide, regionwide, or even statewide, the opening of new bank branches has been restricted by law in the United States for some time," says Benston.

"These restrictions," he says, "are based partly on the belief that large banks located in large cities would dominate smaller and local banks if branching was unrestricted."

"However, there is no evidence to support this belief. In fact, changes in technology and empirical studies show that well-managed small banks can be very successful in marketing financial services."

Lauren Accents With Lace And Pearl Chokers For Winter, 1985

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Picture velvet blazers, tapestry vests, cashmere sweaters and leather trenchcoats accented with lace ruffs, pearl chokers and bowler hats and you have the very proper Ralph Lauren for fall 1985.

Picture roomy sweaters, ribbed or cabled, and pull-on skirts in rainbow brights and wild patterns, with leggings and close-fitting cloche hats and you have the thoroughly modern Adrienne Vittadini for fall 1985.

The difference is dramatic and so is the clientele of these two popular designers who showed their new collections Wednesday.

Lauren outfits start at about $800, and run quickly into the thousands, while Ms. Vittadini's begin at under $200.

Lauren, who has built an empire on tradition, naturally used classical fall colors: navy, burgundy, forest, charcoal, brown and black. Solids predominated, whether in suede, leather, velvet, or wool.

The few tweeds and plaids were muted. And tapestry and paisley, the season's trendiest fabrics, were used to success in moderation as in a tapestry vest that peeked from under a neutral linen trenchcoat over brown suede pants with white shirt.

Lauren's shapes also are traditional.

The Chesterfield, a long, single-breasted, topcoat with fly front and velvet collar (after the fashion of the 19th century Earl of Chesterfield), makes a comeback, as it did in the collection of Calvin Klein, another American classicist.

Another stylistic detail shared with rival Calvin: wide alligator belts and shoes.

Lauren gloried in the equestrian theme. Fitted wool hunting jackets in red with black velvet collars were teamed with velvet capes, jodhpurs, flat riding boots, canes and bowlers. Red and black, the colors of the hunt, were prominent. Only the fox was missing.

Pant legs were either close to the ankle with a small cuff and a stirrup-like strap under the shoe or stovepipe. Skirts were mid-calf and flared or gathered. Shoulders were wide, but not exaggerated like many designers are showing this season.

As always, a few breastpockets were marred by fake crests, golden or embossed. If your family doesn't have a coat of arms, you can borrow Ralph's.

Long-necked women will love his blouses, wrapped and bowed, choked with pearls and accented with an antique brooch or lace ruff below the chin.

One nice blouse that spotlighted the neck was a black velvet back-button number with shirred turtleneck.

Black velvet looked rich and new when paired with black leather as in a leather shirt with tails over a flared velvet skirt, belted in warm brown alligator or as a big loose shirt with slim velvet pants.

Brown leather and velvet looked just as nice. Leather was used extensively throughout Lauren's collection. Satin was reserved for three great trenchcoats in gold, red and black.

For evening, Lauren showed several genteel gold metallic sweaters, cable knit cardigans, crews and turtlenecks, with black bottoms, lacy collared blouses and lots of pearls. The effect was understated and luxurious.

Another nice piece was a black pullover sweater with a rose floral pattern knitted into it. It was worn over an ecru blouse with lace ruff and cuffs and a black velvet skirt.

Ms. Vittadini also had a lovely rose motif sweater in her varied collection. It was worn over a print skirt in complementary colors.

The show started with mixed separates in hot pink and orange solids and stripes; crop tops, long vests, tunics, sweater dresses, skirts and ribbed pants. As always, Ms. Vittadini's knitwear looks and is comfortable.

A more subdued grouping in a black and gray pattern followed. These mixed big florals with smaller repeating patterns. Pants were cropped and tops were long, well below the knee. And some were cinched with striped hip wraps.

Red, royal and purple prints, red and green paisleys, russet and grey diamond patterns and bright solids all were shown. Some were a little busy, others worked well as in a group of crazy quilt hand-knit sweaters with challis wool paisley print skirts.

Also nice was a nubby sienna tweed grouping. A V-neck cardigan with patch pockets worn over a white shirt and a long straight tweed skirt very was subtle and reserved.

The dressiest grouping featured a winter white angora pullover with pearl and rhinestone bead with a long, full, white moire skirt. Moire, which catches the light and resembles rippling water, is a new fabric for Ms. Vittadini, who specializes in knitwear.

TOO GOOD TO BE TRUE?

ATLANTA (AP) — If it sounds too good to be true, it probably is, says the Arthritis Foundation.

About 90 percent of the people with arthritis in this country will fall victim to peddlers of unproven remedies or "miracle cures" for arthritis at some time in their lives. For every dollar that is spent on legitimate arthritis research, many more dollars are spent on these unproven remedies.

Anyone who claims to be able to "cure" arthritis is not telling the truth, says the foundation. There is no known cure for most forms of arthritis, it says, but proper medical treatment, started soon enough, can help prevent or delay crippling in most people.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

I feel obliged to warn expectant mothers that there is a plan being launched by hospital insurance companies to cut down on the cost of birth by paying you to leave the hospital early.

It offers new mothers cash incentives of $50 to $200 to leave the hospital 24 hours after delivery.

Are they serious? Honey, take it from a woman who clutched her bedsprings after the birth for 30 days and then had to be physically evicted, hold you ground. It's a trick. We used to have an old saying, "Once you turn in your paper slippers, they put in a pair of track shoes and a T-shirt with a red S on it, and you hit the road running."

Giving birth is the last stronghold women have for getting any consideration. For 30 days, you are a living shrine who speaks prophet fluently. You have given the ultimate gift to your husband who takes everything else back and credits it to the account. You have fulfilled your mother's dreams of revenge. You have given your father a picture for his billfold to replace Debbie Reynolds. You have enough stretch marks to spread quilt for two fur coats, a quartz watch and a trip to St. Croix in January.

It's the quintessential headache. And they want to buy us off.

For many women, giving birth represents the first time they've been off their feet in years, especially if it's a second or third child. Never again will they have such a time when they can lap up whole milk, push a button and have their feet elevated, watch soaps until they go blind, have ice cubes in their water, order food they don't have to cook, and go to the bathroom without someone sliding a note under the door asking, "Can I split a Pepsi?"

I'd like to see them bargain away sick time for men. Take my husband's black toenail, the one that fell off three months after he had run a 10-K. He wouldn't have taken a million dollars for it. And the time he had his teeth cleaned and took to his bed for three days? He would have spit on your check.

There's a real contradiction here that I think should be put in perspective. Men think nothing of pitting a car in the shop for three days until they can get parts. They will stand in a ticket line, wrapped in a blanket for World Series seats for 48 hours if they have to. They understand that a bank needs two days to clear a check. Hey, that's business. But these are the times of instant birth. Just add heavy breathing and simmer for 24 hours.

I say we stand firm. As I told my husband when I came after the birth of the third, "I am going to bed and wait for the sedative to wear off."

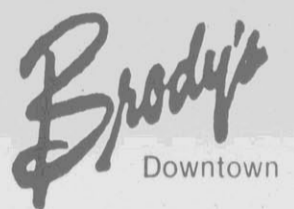

"How long will that take?" he asked.

"Two, three years, tops."

Trade Fair

Expo '85. Pitt County's first trade fair is being held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at the New Greenville Warehouse on the Pactolus Highway. The trade fair, sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, features exhibits highlighting the businesses, industries and medical facilities of our county.

It is exciting. There are over 130 booths in the warehouse and observers say that visitors will be amazed at the variety of commercial activities which are on display for Expo '85.

Chamber President Ed Walker said the trade fair is designed to show that "you can get what you need in Pitt County without having to go anywhere else."

Participating business people say the fair gives them the opportunity to show the public what they offer. For industries it is an opportunity to show local people the amazingly wide variety of goods which are manufactured here and shipped throughout the nation. There is hardly a shopping area where products can't be found which were manufactured in Pitt County.

The medical community exhibits bring into focus the sophisticated medical care that is available in Pitt County.

Visit Expo '85. It will make you proud of your county.

Dry April

April is noted for its refreshing showers which bring out the flowers, trees and grass and, most importantly, help along the newly planted crops in the fields.

Not this April ... not here. There was plenty of sunshine but little rainfall over Pitt County. In fact in a month when 3.4 inches of precipitation usually falls, there was only .54 inches this year.

There is concern but no panic about the farm situation so far. Agricultural officials say that the situation is not yet critical. A continued drought, however, could mean serious trouble for crops in the fields and for gardens.

Sam Uzzell, extension agent for the county, said the dry conditions have caused the farmers to fall behind in their work. "The soil is currently so dry that stirring it up in any way dissipates whatever moisture is there. That keeps farmers from cultivating the way they would be normally this time of year."

Uzzell offers hope, however, "We've always had rain and we will again," he said. "Once we do get a good shower and some moisture back in the ground, gardeners can jump right back in and get going."

April showers were non-existent this year, but it is a new month with planting of crops under way. Farmers and gardeners will be scanning the skies for that dark cloud which will mean the rain so essential for their crops.

Administration Weak On Consumerism

WASHINGTON — National Consumers Week was held recently. Most Americans probably didn't mark it down on their calendars. Then again, we wouldn't be surprised if President Reagan forgot about it, too.

That isn't only because the president faces more pressing business on Capitol Hill. Rather, it's difficult to believe that an administration with such a miserable record on so many consumer issues would want to give its critics an occasion to bring that record into the spotlight.

In his proclamation, issued last March 4, Reagan listed "the basic rights of consumers," including the right to: Choice among products and services; information enabling them to make sound purchases; healthful and safe products; be heard when products do not meet standards.

"Government at all levels," Reagan also declared, "will continue its responsible stewardship of consumer safety as well as its vigorous prosecution of illegal and deceptive practices."

Yet if any governmental agencies have behaved responsibly or vigorously in furthering consumer interests, they would most likely be of the state or local variety. With a few exceptions the Reagan administration has disregarded its own consumer-oriented rhetoric.

In the last four years, it has successfully scuttled the U.S. Office of Consumer Education and tried to eliminate the Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC) and Federal Trade Commission's Bureau of Competition. Under the president's proposed budget for 1986, the CPSC would be authorized $33.7 million — about 53 percent less in real terms than when the agency was created in 1972. The FTC's operating subsidies have also been reduced by more than 30 percent, but perhaps a more serious problem for the commission is its overall direction under James Miller, who called on Congress last week for guidance in redefining the 71-year-old agency's mission.

Breaking a modern tradition of open government, the administration has significantly reduced the amount of information designed to make consumers' choices easier and businesses more honest. The Car Book, which once reached 1.5 million Americans, is among the most celebrated victims of retrenchment in consumer-oriented publications.

According to Joan Claybrook, president of the Washington-based Public Citizen, the Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has exempted four classes of drugs from labeling requirements. And Miller himself advised "caveat emptor" (let the buyer beware) when confronting such matters as shoddy merchandise, monopolistic practices and deceptive advertising.

Despite the president's spoken dedication to "vigorous prosecution of illegal and deceptive practices," his administration has accumulated a poor record of regulatory enforcement. During his first four years, the reduction in actions, precipitated in part by the loss of attorneys and other key personnel, was 49 percent at the FDA. While giving Miller credit for appointing more women to senior positions, the FTC's activist former chairman, Michael Pertschuk, observed in a report to Congress last year that the agency had not undertaken a single new action against a product defect in the previous three years.

This sort of record underscores how much the politics of consumerism have changed since the six-year period in which Congress passed so many important pieces of legislation: the National Traffic and Motor Vehicle Safety Act (1966), all the allurements of Washington open to him, he packed his bags and went home. He wanted to live out his days as a country lawyer.

The nation remembers him chiefly as the portly, folksy chairman of the Senate's six-man Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities. This was the Watergate Committee. It was a tribute to the respect and affection in which Ervin was held that the Senate's unanimous choice to lead the investigation. His book, "The Whole Truth: The Watergate Conspiracy," remains the best work on that bitter chapter in American history.

No obituary tribute to Senator Sam could tell more of the man than he himself revealed in his final statement on Watergate. These are excerpts:

"Unlike the men who are responsible for Teapot Dome, the presidential aides who perpetrated Watergate were not seduced by the love of money, which is sometimes thought to be the root of all evil. On the contrary, they were instigated by a lust for political power, which is at least as corruptive as political power itself....

"They believed the president's reelection to be a most worthy objective, and succumbed to an age-old temptation. They resorted to evil means to promote what they conceived to be a good end. Their lust for political power blinded them to ethical considerations and legal requirements, to Aristotle's aphorism that the good of man must be the end of politics....

"They had forgotten, if they ever knew, that the Constitution is designed to be a law for rulers and people alike at all times and under all circumstances; and that no doctrine involving more pernicious consequences to the commonweal has ever been invented by the wit of man than the notion that any of its provisions can be suspended by the president for any reason whatsoever....

"I reject this doctrine of the constitutional omnipotence of the president. As long as I have a mind to think, a tongue to speak, and a heart to love my country, I shall deny that the Constitution confers any autocratic power on the president, or authorizes him to convert George Washington's America into Gaius Caesar's Rome."

It's hard to imagine any present member of the Senate quoting the Bible, Aristotle, Cicero and Kipling in the course of a valedictory statement, but Senator Sam quoted them all. Early on he had memorized the whole of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. He was a fervent strict constructionist, and by his own lights a staunch defender of civil rights: He believed in the same civil rights for everybody.

I last heard from Senator Sam last summer, when he was finishing his autobiography. Later he sent me a copy of the work, and I thumbed through it reflecting on the fullness of his life. Ervin served with distinction in World War I (Purple Heart, Silver Star, Distinguished Service Cross). He served off and on in the North Carolina General Assembly. He was a trial judge and for six years a member of the North Carolina Supreme Court. He became a national figure as a senator. Yet he never lost sight of his small-town roots.

Sam had two great loves in his life. He loved the law; and he loved his childhood sweetheart, Margaret Bruce Bell, whom he married in 1924. He stayed wedded to both of them to the end.

GOP Looks Nervously To Future

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republicans are nervously looking beyond Bitburg and trying to assess the political price GOP candidates may pay for President Reagan's visit to a German military cemetery.

For while the president is the focus of the current protests, his party may suffer politically in 1986.

As the president departed for Europe, Republican politicians were taking polls and contacting Jewish and veterans groups in an effort to minimize what many view as the inevitable domestic political fallout from the controversy over the brief cemetery stop that has dominated the pre-trip publicity.

"We've been bailing water on this one as fast as we could," said Levi Rabinowitz, a New York political consultant who is being bombarded with requests from Republican politicians anxious about the reaction within the Jewish community.

"Everybody's trying to get some feel how deep the current is run-ing," said Rabinowitz, who was a consultant to Reagan's re-election campaign.

Rabinowitz will do opinion polling before and after Reagan's visit to the cemetery on Sunday and the Republican National Committee is anxiously watching its continuing surveys.

In addition, the GOP is reaching out to veterans as well as Jewish groups, said party political director William Greener III because "we want to make clear that what they're saying is being heard."

Before he left Washington, Reagan said in an interview with foreign reporters: "I think it is morally right to do what I'm doing, and I'm not going to change my mind about that."

A lot of Republican politicians wished he would change his mind. Among those concerned about the political fallout were Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato of New York and Sen. Paula Hawkins of Florida. Both will be running for re-election in 1986 in states with large concentrations of Jewish voters.

If Democratic Gov. Robert Graham goes ahead as expected with a challenge to Mrs. Hawkins, she could enter her re-election race as an underdog.

"Paula Hawkins is a good example of a Republican candidate who is up in '86 with a large Jewish constituency who could, in fact, be wounded" by the controversy, Rabinowitz said.

D'Amato has used every opportunity to urge Reagan to cancel the visit, and Rabinowitz said he thought the New York senator "might be scratched but not wounded."

More than 80 senators — Republicans and Democrats — joined to sponsor a resolution that urged Reagan to cancel his visit to the cemetery, which includes graves of 49 members of the Nazi SS, the units that operated Adolf Hitler's concentration camps and were implicated in countless atrocities.

Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., said the resolution was "an expression of the Senate that we should pay homage to the memories of the millions of civilians and the American and Allied soldiers who suffered and died at the hands of the Nazis."

Ironically, until the uproar over his plan to visit the German military cemetery, Reagan was the GOP's biggest asset as it tried to win over Jewish voters from their traditional alliance with the Democrats.

When author and Holocaust survivor Elie Wiesel appealed to Reagan during a White House ceremony to cancel his visit to the cemetery, he described the president in terms widely held within the Jewish Community.

"We are so grateful to you for being a friend of the Jewish people," said Wiesel "for trying to help the oppressed Jews in the Soviet Union. ... And, of course, we thank you for your support of the Jewish state of Israel."

At the start of the controversy, said Rabinowitz, people in the Jewish community blamed Reagan's advisers more than the president. But, he added, "once it came out in public, it became Reagan's decision."

Public Forum

To the editor:

We are saddened by the news article in the newspaper in regard to the Neonatal Unit at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Two weeks ago our grandchild was released from the Neonatal Unit at PCMH after spending approximately 16 weeks there. If it hadn't been for the dedication, kind and caring ways, and hard work of all — doctors, residents, nurse clinicians, nurses, respiratory therapists, etc. — we would not be able to enjoy our precious grandchild.

It would be hard for us to state the number of hours we spent in the unit — the professionalism of the staff was always of the highest degree.

We will never be able to thank or praise the Neonatal staff enough for what they have done. They always went the second mile!

Republicans Stage Walkout In House

WASHINGTON (AP) — The GOP staged the first mass walkout from the House in this century on Wednesday following a 236-190 vote that gave the 8th District seat to Democrat Frank McCloskey, who won a controversial recount by four votes over Republican Rick McIntyre.

House Minority Leader Robert Michel, R-Ill., said the Republican walkout was a culmination of long-simmering GOP resentment and frustration over "being run roughshod over" by the Democrats, who, with McCloskey's seating, now hold a 71-vote majority.

"This is just the spark that ignites all that feeling we've had over an extended period of time on the kind of autocratic and tyrannical rule" of the Democratic majority, Michel said. A deterring-in of McCloskey.

"I'm happy to see my friends back," said O'Neill, as Democrats gave them a standing ovation.

McCloskey young man and there were hard feelings on both sides."

McCloskey later said the Republicans were not personally vindictive, and that Michel had offered to have coffee with him next week.

But Republican National Committee Chairman Frank Fahrenkopf immeding else."

"Many of us here feel like weeping for our country," said Rep. Guy Vander Jagt, R-Mich., chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee. "Because the Constitution has been trampled, two centuries of precedent thrown out the window and Indiana law has been trashed."

While more militant Republicans have threatened to bring the House to a halt, Michel, during the brief Repubwalkout in the House occurred in 1890, when Democrats left the chamber prior to a vote to seat a black Republican congressman, according to published precedents of the House.

The Republicans said the Nov. 6 election was stolen from McIntyre, who was certified thetict seat was left vacant on Jan. 3, and under the supervision of a Democratic-controlled task force, auditors from the General Accou absentee ballots that were counted.

"Our proud tradition of representative government ... based on decisions by the people has been replaced in this House by decisions of Washington politicians who are willing to lie, cheat and steal in order to give the loser the 8th district seat," Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., said Wednesday, drawing rebukes from several Democrats.

Profit Dispute

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actor Paul Newman and director George Roy Hill say in a $2.6 million federal lawsuit that Universal Studios has shortchanged them on profits from videocassette sales of "The Sting" and "Slap Shot."

The lawsuit, filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court, contends that Universal and its parent firm, MCA Inc., have accounted for revenues from home videocassettes "in a manner so as to minimize or eliminate compensation ... to profit participants."

Tar Heels Walk

WASHINGTON (AP) — Four of North Carolina's five Republican House members joined a walkout Wednesday to protest the awarding of a contested Indiana congressional seat to Democrat Frank McCloskey.

Meanwhile, Rep. James Broyhill, R-N.C., was at the speaker's podium trying to get Democratic House Speaker Thomas "Tip" O'Neill, to do him a favor — reschedule an appearance at a seminar Broyhill was holding for 140 of his constituents.

"I was the only Republican in the room, and I was up talking to the speaker," Broyhill said later.

All six of North Carolina's Democratic House members voted to seat McCloskey.

Senate Keeps Social Security Hikes Intact, Threatening GOP's Budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leaders, powerless to stem a vote to protect Social Security benefit increases, are struggling to keep a defense spending hike and other key elements of a GOP 1986 budget compromise from unraveling.

The GOP-run chamber defied its own leadership on Wednesday and voted 65-34 to strike a proposed 2 percent cap on Social Security cost of living increases from the 1986 budget package negotiated by the White House and top Republican officials.

"I don't believe we gain any ground by everyone abandoning ship on the first amendment," complained Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, who helped draft the compromise proposal designed to cut federal spending by $52 billion in fiscal 1986.

The vote stripped the GOP package of its single largest domestic savings — $3 billion in 1986 and $22.7 billion over three years by curtailing annual Social Security cost of living increases.

Dole vowed to return to the Social Security issue at a later time to try to "put it together again, like Humpty Dumpty."

Meanwhile, the Kansas Republican and other administration allies shifted their attention to fending off an assault on a White House-endorsed provision to permit a 3 percent rise in military spending.

The Senate headed toward a vote today on an amendment by Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, that would scratch the 3 percent hike and allow defense spending to grow only with inflation in 1986.

Grassley said his Pentagon spending-freeze proposal, expected to draw considerable Democratic support, was aimed at "a new generation of welfare queens — the defense industry."

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger lobbied wavering senators in person and President Reagan by phone from Bonn, West Germany, in an effort to line up opposition to the Grassley amendment.

Republican leaders said they weren't sure how the vote would turn out. "I see us in the driver's seat — or we would have had the vote tonight," Grassley said on Wednesday as the Senate recessed in the early evening.

Reagan had originally sought a 6 percent increase in defense spending after inflation, agreeing to the lower figure in the compromise with Republican leaders that produced the package of cuts that would reduce spending by $295 billion over three years.

Sponsors of the White House-endorsed budget, which the Senate tentatively approved by a single vote on Tuesday, said the vote striking the Social Security limits would undermine the entire package.

"It will blow the whole package out of the water," said Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo.

But Democrats and Republicans vied with one another to see who could get the credit for first offering the Social Security amendment. That evoked the following from Dole: "If we don't solve the deficit, we're all going to get a lot of credit — credit for doing nothing."

The amendment striking the Social Security limits was offered by Republican Sens. Alfonse D'Amato of New York and Paula Hawkins of Florida.

Republican leaders indicated they may try again by proposing a one-year freeze in Social Security benefits hikes, rather than the three-year 2 percent cap in the GOP compromise.

A number of Democrats have previously endorsed a one-year freeze concept, GOP leaders suggested. However, Democrats who have supported such an approach have also advocated a minimum corporate income tax to help make up lost revenues, a course majority-party Republicans do not seem eager to take.

Joining 46 Democrats in voting to protect Social Security cost of living benefits were 19 Republicans — 11 of them up for re-election in 1986.

That brought a pointed barb from Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., who has announced he will not seek re-election in 1986: "They'd rather be re-elected than see this country saved. ... They'll let it go down the tubes."

Peter Grace Funds Budget-Cut Drive

WASHINGTON (AP) — Business magnate J. Peter Grace is spending $2 million in advertising this year to lobby Congress into passing $424 billion in federal budget cuts proposed by a presidential commission he headed in 1983.

Most of the money is being spent on half-page newspaper advertisements urging people to demand that their senators and representatives reduce the federal deficit, Grace spokesman Tony Navarro said Wednesday.

The ads, which started running earlier this week in The New York Times, The Washington Post, USA Today, and The Wall Street Journal, list all senators and representatives from the 50 states under the message:

"If the deficit goes down, here's who to thank. If it goes up, here's who to replace."

At the bottom of the ad is a clip-out coupon designed to be mailed to members of Congress and bearing the warning: "Please bring down the deficit now. If you don't, I'll vote for someone who will."

Navarro, a vice president for the New York-based W.R. Grace & Co., said the ads will run through the summer while Congress debates the 1986 federal budget.

"Our interest is both altruistic and selfish," Navarro said. "If the country's economy veers out of control, we are all going with it. This campaign is an investment in the country's future."

Last year, Grace spent $2.6 million on a television and print ad campaign featuring a crying baby to rally support for federal spending cuts. The ad, which some members of Congress said generated a moderate amount of mail, showed a newborn American infant bawling as she is told she is entering the world owing a $50,000 share of the federal debt.

Grace, 71, turned to advertising after Congress criticized the presidential commission's 1983 report as too simplistic.

German 'SS' Was Symbol Of Nazi Power And Terror In World War II

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Chiseled on some gravestones at Bitburg cemetery are the letters "SS," symbol of the dread and bloody instrument of Nazi power in World War II.

It is those letters — a double runic S that looks like twin bolts of lightning — and what they stand for that have caused condemnation of President Reagan's plan to visit a military cemetery that contains the graves of 49 members of the Nazi elite guard's combat arm.

Under leader Heinrich Himmler, it was the black-uniformed SS that carried out Hitler's "final solution," that ran the Nazi concentration and extermination camps and that terrorized Germany and the countries occupied by Nazi troops.

The SS controlled the state police and the security service of the Nazi Party. Adolf Eichmann was an SS colonel in charge of rounding up Europe's Jews and shipping them to places like Auschwitz, Maidanek, Sobibor and Treblinka where SS Death's Head battalions annihilated 6 million of them.

The Waffen, or armed, SS was begun in 1939 when two Waffen SS divisions were formed within the regular army. During the course of the war Waffen SS divisions contained as many as 1 million men in 35 to 38 elite divisions that fought on all fronts.

Although Waffen SS formations often were used as front line army troops, Waffen SS units were involved in massacres such as that in the Czech village of Lidice, the slaying of more than 70 unarmed American prisoners at Malmedy, Belgium and the slaughter of 642 French villagers at Oradour-sur-Glane.

The 49 Waffen SS graves at Bitburg are among those of nearly 2,000 other German soldiers who died in World War I and World War II.

When Himmler took over the SS in 1925, historians say it numbered between 200 and 300 men who guarded Hitler and Nazi leaders. Himmler gave the organization, the Schutzstaffel in German, "protective ranks" in English, its own black uniform and the distinctive symbols of skull and cross bones and the SS letters used as part of its insignia.

By 1934, the SS was powerful enough to carry out the bloody purge of the rival SA, the brown-shirted stormtroopers, and become the dominant instrument of Nazi power. Himmler controlled all regular and political police in Germany, the security police, the party security service, the administration of concentration and extermination camps, the machinery for rounding up and shipping Jews and others to their deaths and, finally, the Waffen SS armed divisions.

Most historians put the strength of the regular SS at about 240,000 men throughout the war, and entry to the elite corps was voluntary. About 10 percent were assigned to concentration camp duty.

The Waffen SS had a strength of about 900,000, but contained thousands of conscripts, especially during the final year of the war. Bruno Meyer of the government's military archive in Freiburg said an exact figure for the number drafted was not available, but that by the war's end "between 250,000 and 330,000 had been drafted."

Meyer said the Waffen SS included "thousands of people from captured areas, Danish, Dutch, Slavs and Croatians and others who either joined or were drafted to fill manpower needs." Some historians put the number of foreigners in the Waffen SS at 200,000.

Relatives Will Join Wreath Ceremony

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Reagan and Chancellor Helmut Kohl agreed today to go ahead with their politically sensitive plan to visit a German military cemetery Sunday, but will include relatives of anti-Nazi war resisters at the wreath-laying ceremony.

Word of their decision was relayed to reporters by Peter Boenisch, chief spokesman for the Bonn government, after Reagan and Kohl conferred for 50 minutes on the eve of the seven-nation economic summit.

Boenisch said observers at the Bitburg ceremony will be relatives of resisters of the Nazi regime, including the son of Lt. Col. Klaus von Stauffenberg, who was executed in 1944 for masterminding a plot to kill Adolf Hitler by placing a bomb under his chair in a war conference room.

Hitler suffered only minor injuries from the bomb blast. Five thousand people, including relatives and friends of military officers involved in the assassination plot, were executed.

Boenisch did not identify the son, who is a colonel in the West German army.

The spokesman also said Reagan and Kohl discussed U.S. space weapons research and agreed on the necessity of liberalizing world trade and opening export markets, a concern likely to focus on Japan's massive trade surplus among major industrial nations.

The two leaders were reported to have set a target of early 1986 for the start of a new round of world trade negotiations, described by U.S. officials as a top American priority at the summit.

Later, after a meeting with Japanese Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, Reagan told reporters he doubted the Bitburg visit would cost him any political support if the story is "honestly reported" by the press.

"There aren't any problems or controversies," Reagan said, adding that he "never had any intention of doing anything other" than visiting the cemetery for German war dead.

Reagan joked when reporters asked about the owner of the castle where the president is staying, who said that Hitler was his godfather. Replied the president: "All I know is I found out after one night there are no ghosts."

Reagan began his first full day in Bonn with an official welcome from West German President Richard von Weizsaecker at his official residence at Villa Hammerschmidt, a former German millionaire's 19th century home in a park on the left bank of the Rhine River. Reagan reviewed a German honor guard in windy, chilly weather.

During a photo session, Reagan dismissed a reporter's question whether he and Kohl would discuss the controversy surrounding their plan to visit the Bitburg military cemetery. "Why should we talk about Bitburg?" Reagan asked.

The president also said it would make no difference if Nicaragua took to the World Court a challenge of the U.S. trade embargo that Reagan ordered Wednesday against the leftist Central American country. "Whatever they do, we're going to have those sanctions," Reagan said.

ANTHEMS — President Reagan holds his hand over his heart as the national anthems of the United States and West Germany are played at an arrival ceremony in Bonn Thursday. West German President Richard von Weizsaecker is at right, an officer is at the left. (AP Laserphoto)

The SS was declared a "criminal organization" by the Nuremberg War Crimes Tribunal. There has been no indication that the Waffen SS soldiers buried at Bitburg were involved in SS atrocities.

Shuttle Receives Housecleaning

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP)

Using a vacuum cleaner and plastic bags, Challenger's astronauts reduced but did not completely stop the flow of animal food and waste into their orbiting laboratory today, and they reported an ailing monkey appeared to be on the mend.

"I can't think of any better way to do it," said astronaut Norm Thagard. "Unfortunately, we cannot completely eliminate the explosion of all particles of food and feces into the cabin."

On primate No. 1, who had been a bit sluggish, moping in a corner, Thagard said, "He's moving around a bit. He came to the front of the cage and looked out."

The space crew also shut down a second failed experiment today, and shuttle managers decided not to extend the mission beyond its planned Monday landing. They had considered an extra day to gain additional science data, but determined there was not enough spacecraft fuel for an extension.

Overnight, specialists on the ground worked out the new procedure for changing the food trays for the cages that house 24 rats and two squirrel monkeys. On earlier tray changes, large amounts of food particles and rodent pellets escaped and floated throughout the spaceship.

Astronauts Thagard and Lodewijk van den Berg were assigned to try out the new procedures. They first switched off power to the cages, cutting off an air flow that aided the escape of the waste matter.

With Thagard, a physician, slipping plastic bags over the end of each old tray before extracting it, and van den Berg, a chemical engineer, operating a hand-held vacuum to sweep up any particle that escaped, they needed more than 90 minutes to complete the change. Both wore surgical gowns and masks as a precaution.

Ground observers watching television pictures of the operations could not detect escaping particles, but Thagard reported some had eluded their effort. He said all escaping particles were from the rat cages.

Meanwhile, an instrument that had been studying the chemistry of the upper atmosphere was shut down because of a loss of pressurization in a laser pointing system.

Mission Control said the experiment had made 25 successful data-collection passes that should provide considerable information about the effect of manmade pollutants on the atmosphere.

Still, scientists said they were very pleased with the round-the-clock research being conducted in two shifts in the billion-dollar, 23-foot-long Spacelab mounted in the shuttle's cargo bay.

"We're having a very successful science mission," reported Joseph Cremin, who heads the team of Spacelab managers at Mission Control Center.

The failure of the atmospheric instrument left 12 of 15 experiments operating at 100 percent and two abandoned, with experts on the ground trying to find a way to repair another that has an electrical short.

The ailing experiment is designed to study the effects of weightlessness on fluid drops. Astronaut Taylor Wang, a physicist who is operator of the experiment, took the machine apart Wednesday in search of a short circuit.

Ground specialists said they hoped to have a solution later today. Wang commented, "I refuse to come home until I get this thing fixed."

An experiment in which interstellar clouds would be photographed was knocked out when a jammed airlock door prevented extension of a special camera.

The seven-man astronaut began complaining two days ago about the animal waste floating around the laboratory and the shuttle cabin.

"How many years did we tell them that these cages wouldn't work," commander Bob Overmyer was overheard telling his crewmates. "It's really discouraging to get monkey feces in the cockpit."

Then he joked, "Just don't pick up anything out of the air and eat it."

"You wouldn't believe the amount of little black pellets that are floating around this module," said astronaut Don Lind.

Dotson Skeptical Will Stay Free

COUNTRY CLUB HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Gary Dotson is home from prison for the second time in two months, but the man convicted of raping a woman who now says she made up her accusation is skeptical about his chances of remaining free.

Dotson, 28, who has spent six years behind bars for the rape of Cathleen Crowell Webb, was released Wednesday from the Dixon Correctional Center after his mother posted $10,000 cash required to cover $100,000 bond.

His family planned a quiet homecoming, but he was greeted by more than 100 well-wishers who had decorated trees along the streets of his hometown with yellow ribbons and posted red-and-white signs reading "Free Gary Dotson."

"I just want to get back on with my life," Dotson told reporters.

He said he hadn't made any plans and that he doesn't know if his fight for freedom will succeed.

"I'm skeptical," Dotson said of his chances of remaining free. "I believe I should have been let loose the first time (in April).

"I'm going to keep a very low profile. My lawyer told me to and I think it's for the best."

Dotson's attorney, Warren Lupel, said at a news conference outside the prison: "He's just out on bond. His freedom is not guaranteed by a long shot."

After Mrs. Webb said in March that she had lied when accusing Dotson of rape in 1977, he was released on bond April 4. A week later, Circuit Judge Richard Samuels ruled that Mrs. Webb's recantation wasn't convincing and ordered Dotson returned to prison.

The Illinois Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that Dotson could be freed on bond while the appeal process continues. His mother, Barbara, 48, secured his release.

A meeting with Mrs. Webb has been discussed, Dotson said, but added that he would not speak with her until legal matters are resolved.

"I very much want to talk with her. I want to know why she waited (to come forward) and I want to see where her head is at today," he said.

Mrs. Webb was asked Wednesday morning what she would like to say to Dotson after his release.

"I'm really glad you're out of prison, and I hope you have an enjoyable time with your family," she said.

The Dotson family planned a quiet gathering to celebrate Dotson's return Wednesday night to the one-story green house that was festooned with ribbons, balloons, flowers and signs.

The crowd in front of the house got so large that Country Club Hills police were called and they ordered people to move across the street.

Dotson was sentenced to 25 to 50 years in prison by Samuels in 1979, and has served six years on the rape and aggravated kidnapping convictions.

In March, Mrs. Webb, now married and the mother of two children living in New Hampshire, came forward to say she made up the rape story because she feared she was pregnant after having sex with a boyfriend.

Gov. James R. Thompson has scheduled a hearing before the Illinois Prisoner Review Board on May 9 to consider Dotson's petition for executive clemency. Thompson said Wednesday he would decide within a day or two of that hearing.

An appellate court last week denied Dotson bond while it considered his appeal. Lupel then asked the state Supreme Court to free Dotson on bond and consider the appeal itself, bypassing the intermediate court.

The Supreme Court has not yet ruled on whether it will bypass the lower court.

There also is a petition in Circuit Court asking for a new trial for Dotson. A hearing on that motion is set for May 7.

N.Y. Officers Face Indictments

NEW YORK (AP) — Four police officers have been indicted on assault and other charges for allegedly torturing drug suspects with an electric stun gun, according to a published report.

Lawyers for Sgt. Richard A. Pike and Officers Michael Aranda, Loren MacCary and Jeffrey W. Gilbert said their clients had been told to surrender today to the district attorney in Queens, where the so-called "Torture Precinct" is located, the New York Daily News reported today.

A grand jury on Tuesday handed up eight indictments against the four officers from the 106th Precinct, including assault in the first and second degree, possession of a dangerous weapon and official misconduct, the News said.

All four officers, who have denied the charges, were suspended and arrested last week.

The charges became public last week when Mark Davidson, a high school senior, said two police officers beat him and shocked him with a "stun gun" on April 17 until he falsely confessed to selling $10 worth of marijuana.

"I was screaming as loud as I can and pleading with them," Davidson said at a court appearance April 23. "I felt the electric shock to my body and after he finished doing it, there was a burning sensation."

Tom McCarthy, a spokesman for Queens District Attorney John Santucci, declined Wednesday night to confirm the officers had been asked to surrender or to say if any indictments would be handed up. The grand jury began hearing testimony in the case on Tuesday.

The torture charges prompted a sweeping police shakeup by Police Commissioner Benjamin Ward this week. It included the retirements of the department's third-ranking officer, Chief of Patrol Hamilton Robinson; the two top patrol commanders in Queens; and the two commanders of the six-precinct patrol zone that includes the 106th Precinct.

Congress Is Ready To Erase New IRS Rule On Records

By JIM LUTHER

Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A compromise plan to kill tough new record-keeping requirements for tax-deductible cars and home computers is speeding toward final congressional approval with not a hurdle in sight.

House and Senate negotiators on Wednesday agreed to repeal the contemporaneous records requirement — a 1984 rule that prompted more congressional mail than any other issue this year — as if it had never existed.

The final version of the plan probably will be ready for President Reagan to sign when he returns from Europe at the end of next week.

There was no dissent when the compromise was reached. However, Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo., one of the negotiators, said "what we are doing is increasing the tax burden on the honest guy in order to reduce the burden" on people who don't want to bother with records to prove their tax deductions.

Rep. J.J. Pickle, D-Texas, said his constituents will have trouble even with the old substantiation requirements that will go back into effect once repeal is enacted.

"Half my people have got a pickup with a .30-30 rifle, a six-pack and a dog," Pickle said. "He ain't going to keep records, and I'm not going to tell him he has to."

The old rules require that a person have adequate records — written or otherwise — or other evidence to substantiate any business deduction. Starting with tax year 1986, tax returns will include a series of questions that must be answered by people claiming such deductions.

Congress imposed the controversial new requirement for up-to-the-minute records as part of the effort last year to cut the federal deficit. The aim was to deter those who cheat the tax collector by using cars and other equipment for personal purposes but claiming a tax deduction as if all the use were for business.

But once those requirements took effect last Jan. 1, the mail starting pouring in. Farmers, business people and moonlighters complained that having to keep a detailed log of where they drove and when — and how they use their home computers for non-business purposes — would leave them little time for making a living.

The House and Senate quickly passed separate bills repealing the requirements; Wednesday's action by negotiators produced a compromise version.

Elements of the compromise: — The demand for contemporaneous records will die, retroactive to Jan. 1.

— Most people who claim a business use for vehicles and home computers will have to prove their deductions if they are audited by the IRS. They will have to answer a half-dozen new questions on their tax returns about such use.

— Certain vehicles not easily used for pleasure — such as farm tractors, refrigerated trucks and marked police cars — will not be subject to any substantiation requirement. Unmarked police vehicles will also be exempt, except those used by undercover IRS agents.

— To pay for taxes lost by dropping the record-keeping rules, business cars costing more than $13,000 will have to be depreciated for business purposes over a longer time. The investment tax credit for these "luxury cars" would be limited to $675 and the depreciation to $3,200 in the first year and $4,800 in other years.

— Employers may choose not to withhold income taxes from the value of such non-cash worker fringe benefits as personal use of a company car. But the value must be included as income, just like wages, on the worker's W-2 form. And Social Security taxes must be withheld on the value of the benefit. This is retroactive to Jan. 1.

— A Senate provision allowing some employees tax-free use of up to 25 percent of the use of a company car was dropped. It would have cost $6.5 billion over six years.

— The Treasury Department agreed to reduce the value for tax purposes of corporate executives' pleasure trips on company planes. Those executives must pay tax on that value. Under present law, for example, if an executive flies a company's medium-size plane on a pleasure trip, he is taxed at a charter rate. Under the change, the value would be reduced to 1 1/2 times first-class fare.

Fake Licenses

RALEIGH (AP) — State Alcohol Law Enforcement agents say they have uncovered a large-scale counterfeit driver's license operation on North Carolina State University's campus.

N.C. State student Thomas Darrin Spivey was being held in the Wake County Jail Wednesday on charges of making and selling fictitious driver's licenses, agents say.

ALE Agent Billy Nichols says hundreds of fake licenses and machines to produce them were confiscated Wednesday night in Spivey's room in Tucker Dormitory.

Authorities say more arrests are forthcoming.

Some Analysts See Signs Inflation Will Roar Back After 3-Year Lull

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans have enjoyed a period of relative calm on the inflation front since 1982. But that three-year lull could be coming to an end, some analysts are warning.

These economists see worrisome signs that the factors that converged to provide relief from double-digit inflation rates may now be turning against the United States.

If that occurs, the country could have more to worry about than rapidly rising prices. A return of inflation is often the harbinger of the beginning of a recession.

The concerns about rising inflation are not universally held, but a growing minority of economists are beginning to raise alarms.

"I think the inflation rate will double in the next year, hitting 8 percent by the end of 1986. This will doom the recovery and open up the likelihood of a recession some time in 1986," said Lawrence A. Kudlow, formerly chief economist of the Reagan administration's Office of Management and Budget.

The congressional Joint Economic Committee issued a similar warning last week, saying "we face the possibility of significant upward pressure on prices at some point in 1986 or possibly even before."

Much of the concern stems from the fact that the progress against inflation has been built on temporary factors that are not expected to last.

The Joint Economic Committee estimates that last year's 4 percent rise in consumer prices would have been a steeper 5.5 percent if it had not been for the strong value of the dollar.

From 1980 to the beginning of this year, the dollar rose 53 percent in value against other world currencies. This surge lowered the price of some imported goods by as much as 35 percent. At the same time, domestic manufacturers have faced pressure to hold the line on their own price increases or risk losing even more market share to imports.

But the dollar has already dropped substantially from the peaks it reached in February and further declines, especially if they are rapid, could boost the U.S. inflation rate substantially.

Oil prices have also been falling, giving consumers the benefit of lower prices on gasoline and home heating oil plus a host of products made with petroleum. But gasoline prices rose a sharp 3.6 percent last month, enough to propel overall consumer prices to their latest monthly gain in more than a year.

While many analysts believe the spurt in gasoline prices is temporary, others are predicting that oil prices will begin rising again as world demand picks up in coming months.

In further bad news, the government reported last week that the productivity of American workers fell 1.2 percent in the first three months of this year while unit labor costs, which reflect changes in productivity and wages, shot up by 7.3 percent, the biggest increase in almost three years.

Productivity gains, which lower the cost of producing an item, are needed to keep inflation from heating up.

"These types of numbers are simply not enough to keep the wolves of inflation away from the door," said Michael Evans, head of his own forecasting firm, who predicted that inflation would rise to a rate of 6 percent next year. "That will be enough to bring on a recession," he said.

The Reagan administration, which counts the taming of inflation as one of its biggest achievements, is not expressing alarm at the latest signals, pointing to other numbers which show that the underlying inflation rate remains low.

But some critics say the government's complacency about a threatened return of inflation is one of the problems.

"No one in Washington is worried about fighting inflation anymore," said Kudlow, who is now head of a private economic consulting firm. "Economic policy priorities are all geared to fighting unemployment, not inflation."

Critics point out that last year's 4 percent inflation rate is more than double the rate that prevailed through most of the 1950s and 1960s. With all the positive forces, some wonder why inflation has not fallen more.

Herbert Stein, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers under President Nixon, blamed high inflation during the 1970s as a key impediment to reducing inflation now.

"With the inflationary expectations that were built into the wage process, it is surprising that we have been able to reduce inflation this fast," he said. "But a 4 percent inflation rate is still not a victory. It is a rate that should bother people."

Not all economists believe inflation will become a problem this year.

Donald Ratajczak, director of the economic forecasting project at Georgia State University, said he was still forecasting an inflation rate of 4 percent this year, but he saw inflation accelerating to a 5.2 percent pace next year.

"The dollar, productivity and wages are all moving in directions that are not beneficial, but fortunately they are moving relatively slowly," he said.

Motorcycle Gang Members Rounded Up In Drug Raids

The Associated Press
Law enforcement officers today began a national roundup of motorcycle gang members on narcotics and racketeering charges, culminating a three-year undercover operation, officials said.

In one of the raids, a state trooper was shot twice at the Hell's Angels headquarters in Stratford, Conn., police said. An FBI agent was attacked with a sledgehammer.

Nationally, 125 suspects were being rounded up in 14 cities as a result of the undercover operation, begun in 1982 under the code name "Rough Rider," said Kenneth P. Walton, deputy assistant director in charge of the FBI's New York City office.

He said that because of the operation, "we were able to stop five murders from occurring nationally since 1982."

Ten of 13 suspects in the New York metropolitan area were taken into custody shortly after the roundup began at 7 a.m., Walton said. He said three of the arrests were made at a clubhouse of the Hell's Angels motorcycle group.

FBI spokesman Jack Cloherty in Boston said three men were arrested in Lynn as part of the roundup, and further arrests were expected.

In Stratford, Trooper Angel Gonzales, 31, was wounded in the hip area during a raid, said state police spokesman Adam Berluti. He was reported in stable condition.

A suspect was in custody, Berluti said.

Agents who approached a home in Stratford were fired on through the door, said another spokesman, Sgt. Edward Dailey. No gunfire was returned, he said.

In addition, an FBI agent was treated for minor injuries after being attacked with a sledgehammer investigating the illegal manufacture and distribution of methamphetamines, was the largest combined effort ever against an outlaw motorcycle group, FBI Director William Webster said at the time.

Federal Copyright Chief Faces Queries On Authorship Of Book

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An obscure, self-published book of essays has put the new head of the Copyright Royalty Tribunal on the defensive and led angry House members to demand she be fired because of her association with what one of them called "racist garbage."

Rep. Norman Mineta, D-Calif., charged Wednesday on the House floor that tribunal chairwoman Marianne Mele Hall, who says she edited the controversial book, "Foundations In Sand," "took part in a vile, senseless and racist piece of literature" that contains "various racist garbage."

"Her defense shows the twisted ethics of one who has no sense of the larger moral picture," Mineta said. "She had no obligation to ghostwrite this book. But the president is obligated to ask her to resign."

Ms. Hall, a lawyer, won Senate confirmation April 2 to her $70,000-a-year job. In response to a Senate questionnaire, she had listed herself as co-author of "Foundations In Sand."

But on Wednesday before a skeptical House subcommittee, she downplayed her connection with the book.

"I was merely the editor ... simply verbs, nouns, pronouns, dangling participles, sentence structure," said Ms. Hall, visibly nervous and accompanied by her husband, an Army physician in uniform.

"I considered myself a ghost author. I never did any research or any writing or offered opinions or drew conclusions or indicated that those views are mine. They are not mine," she said.

Ms. Hall attributed the views entirely to Lawrence Hafstad, a Maryland physicist, although the title page of the 71-page book names Marianne Mele and John Morse as co-authors.

"The Minority Problem," one of the book's eight essays, maintains most American blacks "insist on preserving their jungle freedoms, their women, their avoidance of personal responsibility and their abhorrence of the work ethic."

The authors recommend a "separate but superior" school system for blacks with "retired star athletes" as principals. The teaching staffs should be all male because blacks resent female teachers, the book says, adding that black students who adopt the work ethic be rewarded with "taxi rides and similar honors."

The book was published in 1982 by IMM Inc., a corporation formed by the three authors. Corsica Book Shop of Centreville, Md., said the volume was self-published and that they distribute it.

By late Wednesday, 56 House members had signed a letter written by Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., calling on President Reagan to remove Ms. Hall from her job "without delay." The letter said the book "reeks with the stench of racism" and smears the "honor, aspirations and integrity of every black American."

Ms. Hall underwent nearly two hours of grilling by Democratic members of the House subcommittee on courts, civil liberties and the administration of justice. The hearing was originally called to examine the workings of the tribunal, which sets royalty rates for cable television operators and the public broadcasting, recording and jukebox industries.

Pressed by Rep. Frederick Boucher, D-Va., Ms. Hall said she advised Hafstad that publishing the essay would be "ill-advised." Asked finally if she found the views repugnant, she agreed.

"I was well into the project before many of these ideas surfaced," Ms. Hall said, noting she received $1,000 for her work.

"Were you that hungry?" asked Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo. "I hope this country has more opportunities for a young woman than this. Just saying 'I did it because it was my job' — this is a free country. You can choose jobs. And this is a job I think some of us wish had not been done."

At the hearing Ms. Hall said she also had co-authored or consulted on three other books: "The Marxist-Leninist Lexicon," a dictionary; a manual on legal assistance for minority businesses and "High Frontier," a work that became the prototype for the "Star Wars" defense system now under development.

She also has been employed by a Washington bank as an equal employment opportunity officer, she said.

Presser Tops Union Pay Lists

WASHINGTON (AP) — Teamsters President Jackie Presser was the highest-paid union official in the country last year, receiving $530,000 in salary, according to records filed in the past month with the Labor Department.

The second-highest-paid official in the American labor movement also was a Teamster, Harold Friedman, one of Presser's close associates, who received more than half-a-million dollars in salaries and expenses in 1984.

Presser's salaries, plus $45,000 in expenses, were drawn from four posts he holds in the Teamsters and were about $200,000 more than he collected in 1983, when he was elected to succeed Roy Williams, who resigned after being convicted of conspiring to bribe a U.S. senator.

Presser had legal problems in 1984. According to the annual financial reports the Teamsters filed with the Labor Department as required by law, the union paid $180,200 in legal fees on Presser's behalf.

The report said only that the fees were for a legal matter that has been closed. Teamsters spokesman Duke Zeller said Wednesday he did not know what the legal matter was.

In 1984, Presser was paid a $224,000 salary by Local 507, $59,500 as president of Teamsters Joint Council 41 and $18,100 as president of the Ohio Conference of Teamsters.

Goose Slips Slider By Hendrick

By DICK BRINSTER
AP Sports Writer

The Goose very nearly laid an egg made of something other than gold.

But San Diego's Rich Gossage, missing some of the heat he has used to cook the opposition over the last 14 years as one of baseball's premier relief pitchers, proved he can use his head as well as his arm.

With the game on the line in the ninth inning Wednesday night, a struggling Gossage outsmarted Pittsburgh's George Hendrick with the bases loaded to preserve the Padres' 6-4 victory and keep the defending National League champions percentage points ahead of the Los Angeles Dodgers in the tight NL West race.

"Hendrick's a good hitter, a darn good hitter and I dropped a slider on him," Gossage said after inducing a pop fly that earned him his sixth save of the season. "That's a good pitch for me because the hitter in that situation is sitting on the fastball."

"When I'm at my best, I'll challenge the hitters, throw them the fastball, but I wasn't at my best tonight."

Elsewhere, it was Atlanta 17, Cincinnati 9; Chicago 4, San Francisco 3; Los Angeles 2, St. Louis 1 in 12 innings; Houston 10, New York 3; and Montreal 3, Philadelphia 2.

The 33-year-old right-hander, who has 237 career saves, put down an eighth-inning uprising in the conventional fashion, fanning pinch-hitter Doug Frobel with a fastball to strand two baserunners.

"That's why he's the best in the business," Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner said of Gossage, a former Pirate whom Tanner also managed with the Chicago White Sox. "He comes in there and challenges you."

San Diego catcher Terry Kennedy said Gossage "can't throw it 100 miles an hour every night like he could five years ago, but he can still do it once in a while."

Tim Flannery's two-run double keyed a decisive three-run fourth inning that put the Padres ahead 4-0.

Eric Show, 3-1, withstood a three-run Pirate fourth, highlighted by Jason Thompson's third homer, to earn the victory. He got help from Tim Stoddard, who retired Tony Pena on a popup with two on to end the sixth.

Braves 17, Reds 9
The basehits fell — 38 of them to be exact — nearly as fast as the rain in Cincinnati, where Dale Murphy continued to wear NL pitching to pieces with three hits, including his 10th homer, and three RBIs.

Murphy who leads the major leagues in hitting at .395, in homers, and in RBIs with 32, paced a 25-hit Atlanta attack against loser John Stuper and five other Cincinnati pitchers. The Braves scored six runs in each of the first two innings, putting together eight consecutive hits in the first and six in the second.

"It was good to see us all hit like this," said first baseman Chris Chambliss, who went 4-for-6 as every Atlanta starter drove in and scored at least one run. Murphy scored four times to up his league-leading total to 21.

Claudell Washington and Ken Oberkfell drove in three runs apiece in support of Rick Mahler, who improved his record to 6-0.

Cincinnati player-manager Pete Rose, commenting on the rain which delayed the game for 2 hours, 41 minutes in the fifth inning, said he "wanted them (the umpires) to call the game in the seventh inning. I was afraid someone would get hurt."

San Francisco literally threw away its chance to win in Chicago when the Cubs' Shawon Dunston stole third base in the bottom of the ninth inning and scored the winning run when Giant catcher Bob Brenly's throw sailed into left field.

Dates, Prices Set For ECAC

Dates, games times and ticket prices for the ECAC-Southern Division baseball tournament, to be played at East Carolina University starting May 16, have been announced.

East Carolina, as the ECAC-South Conference champion, will be the host team, while the other two league champions will represent the New York-New Jersey area, and the Metro Atlantic. New York Tech is currently leading the NY-NJ, while LaSalle is atop the Metro Atlantic.

One at-large team will be selected, and that is expected to be UNC-Wilmington, the ECAC-South runner-up.

Seedings and pairings will be announced on May 11 and the teams will arrive in Greenville on May 15.

Two games will be played daily, starting Thursday, May 16. The first each day will be at 2 p.m., with the second at 7 p.m. Friday's first game will pit the losers of the two Thursday games, while the winners meet at 7 p.m. Saturday's opener will be the losers' bracket finals, with the championship game set for 7 p.m. Saturday night.

Should a second game be needed to decide the title of the double-elimination tournament, it would be played Sunday at 2 p.m.

Ticket prices are $10 for an entire tournament book or $4 for a single game two games.

East Carolina is the defending champion of the tournament, having won it twice in the past three seasons. The winner automatically advances to the NCAA regionals, that site to be determined.

"One thing after another causes us to get beat," San Francisco Manager Jim Davenport said.

Dennis Eckersley, 4-1, became the first Cubs pitcher since Fergie Jenkins in 1972 to hurl four consecutive complete games. He pitched a five-hitter, struck out 10, walked one and retired 14 batters in a row during one stretch.

Dodgers 2, Cardinals 1
Los Angeles, looking for all the help it can get in a scoring drought which has produced just five runs in eight games, got a gift when St. Louis reliever Neil Allen balked in the winning run in the top of the 12th inning.

The Cardinals disputed the call by third base umpire John McSherry, which scored Ken Landreaux, who had doubled to start the inning.

"We'll take them anyway we can get them; it doesn't make any difference, just so you can win," said Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda. "What's the difference whether you win by 2-1 or 18-1?"

"He told me that when I went to spit, the ball left my glove," Allen

Pope Signs Pact With Cowboys

Tight end Damon Pope has become the latest Pirate to sign a contract with the National Football League.

Pope signed with the Dallas Cowboys yesterday as a free agent. At least two other Pirates, Jimmy Walden and Reggie Branch, both running backs, are currently talking with other NFL teams about free agent pacts.

Pope joins Stefon Adams and Ricky Nichols, picked Tuesday in the regular draft of the NFL. Adams was chosen by the Los Angeles Raiders in the third round while Nichols was picked in the eighth round by the Indianapolis Colts.

Adams, a High Point native, was a wide receiver until the middle of last year when he was switched to defensive back. At the time he made the switch, he was the team's leading receiver, and finished the year with 13 catches for 193 yards. As a defensive back, he was credited with 29 tackles, including eight assists. He recorded 12 unassisted tackles against Pittsburgh, his first game in the backfield. He finished his receiving career with 47 catches for 676 yards, tying him for tenth on the reception list.

Nichols, meanwhile, completed the year as the team's leading receiver with 28 catches for 513 yards and four touchdowns. The Chesapeake, Va., native caught 63 passes for 1,203 yards during his career, placing him four on the reception list and third in yardage.

Pope, a native of Athens, Ga., caught 13 passes of 133 yards this past year. His career totals are 25 receptions for 273 yards.

Ump Plays Unwitting Hand In Win

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

Umpire Tim Welke probably cost the Chicago White Sox a ballgame — and they couldn't even argue about it.

The White Sox trailed the Baltimore Orioles 2-0 in the sixth inning Wednesday night when they loaded the bases with one out. Carlton Fisk ripped a shot past third that would have at least tied the game when the ball struck Welke, who was in foul territory.

Since the ball had gone past an infielder, it was in play, Rudy Law, who opened the inning with a double, scored to pull Chicago within 2-1. But Greg Walker, running from first base, apparently thought the ball had gone into the left-field corner and was trapped after rounding second.

"I saw the ball go by the bag and I put my head down," said Walker. "The next thing I know I was running into (second baseman Rich) Dauer (in a rundown). I didn't know what was going on. I thought maybe the ball had gone foul."

In the ensuing rundown, Scott Fletcher broke from third and was thrown out trying to score. Oscar Gamble struck out to end the inning and the White Sox went on to lose 3-1.

Elsewhere in the American League, Minnesota beat Detroit 7-3 for its 10th victory in a row. New York downed Texas 5-1 for Billy Martin's first victory in three games since returning as manager of the Yankees. Toronto defeated California 6-3 as Jimmy Key became the first Blue Jays left-handed starter to post a victory in more than four years. Seattle blanked Boston 7-0. Cleveland nipped Kansas City 6-5 and Milwaukee turned back Oakland 7-4.

Twins 7, Tigers 3

Kent Hrbek and Roy Smalley homered in a six-run fifth inning to back the pitching of Frank Viola and Rick Lysander. Tim Teufel tripled and scored on a single by Mark Salas to start Minnesota's big inning. Salas came around on singles by Kirby Puckett and Mickey Hatcher, and Hrbek's homer put the Twins ahead 5-1 and chased loser Jack Morris. Aurelio Lopez gave up Smalley's solo homer.

"We're just having all the fun in the world," said Smalley. "We've won 10 straight games. That's a pretty good feeling. The feeling we have now is the feeling a lot of good teams have."

Yankees 5, Rangers 1

Ron Hassey went 4-for-4 against knuckleballer Charlie Hough and drove in his first four runs of the season, which also was a career-high for one game, as the Yankees gave Billy Martin his first victory in three games since returning as manager. Hassey, who replaced Don Baylor as the designated hitter against Hough, had a double and three singles. Over the last two seasons he is batting .750 — 12-for-16 — with seven RBIs against the Rangers.

Yankee starter Ed Whitson, who surrendered a third-inning homer to Buddy Bell, recorded his first victory since signing with the Yankees as a free agent. Dave Righetti took over after Whitson walked the first two batters in the sixth and pitched four innings of one-hit relief for his sixth save.

Blue Jays 6, Angels 3

Key checked California on two hits over 7 2/3 innings — including Reggie Jackson's fourth homer — and became Toronto's first left-handed starter to win a game since Paul Mirabella beat Boston on the final day of the 1980 season. However, Key's start was only the 19th by a Blue Jay left-hander since then.

"It's a relief they won't be able to kid me about it any more," said Key. "Ever since I made the team as a starting pitcher this spring, that's all I heard about. It's a relief to get the guys off my back."

California's Kirk McCaskill, making his major-league debut, had a two-hitter until Toronto snapped a 1-1 tie with five runs in the seventh on run-scoring singles by Louis Thornton and Rance Mulliniks, and a three-run homer by Tony Fernandez.

Both teams brought six-game winning streaks into the game.

Mariners 7, Red Sox 0

Jim Beattie, who came into the game with a 13.06 earned run average, held Boston to four hits for his first victory of the season and Jim Presley slammed his seventh home run. Beattie, who had allowed 18 hits and 15 earned runs in 10 1/3 previous innings, walked three and struck out six in sending Boston to its fifth consecutive setback.

The Mariners, who have won three in a row after an eight-game losing streak, took a 1-0 lead off Roger Clemens in the second inning when Donnie Scott singled following walks to Al Cowens and Presley. They broke it open with four runs in the third. Alvin Davis doubled with one out, Cowens walked, Dave Henderson's double scored both runners and Presley capped the inning with his home run. Presley had an RBI double in the eighth.

Indians 6, Royals 5

Brett Butler drove in two runs in a mistake-filled game that saw Cleveland snap the Royals' four-game winning streak. The Indians took a 3-1 lead with two runs in the second inning after the Royals, in effect, gave them five outs when secondstopper Buddy Biancalana and shortstop Frank White were charged with errors on potential double-play grounders.

The Royals scored three in the seventh with the help of two of Cleveland's four errors but saw the rally killed by a baserunning blunder. Pinch-runner Onix Concepcion forgot there was only one out and was caught between second and third after Lynn Jones' fly ball.

Brewers 7, A's 4

Charlie Moore singled home two runs in the eighth inning and Robin Yount hit a two-run homer in the ninth as Milwaukee broke open a tight game and snapped a five-game losing streak.

Propose Expand Grid Playoffs

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — A proposal to expand the Division I high school football playoffs to 32 teams in each classification could take effect next season if NCHSAA members approve the move, officials said.

The proposal was presented to the North Carolina High School Athletic Association's full board on Wednesday.

"In a few weeks we will put it out to the membership schools for a vote," said Charlie Adams, the group's executive director. "I'd venture to say it will pass."

Adams said the membership schools will have an option to vote on whether to keep Division II, keep Division II and play it to a championship, or do away with Division II and set up a 32-team draw with two teams minimum per conference.

The proposal would guarantee every conference two Division I playoff berths. Remaining berths would be awarded either on a rotating basis or to third-place teams in the larger conferences of each of the four classifications.

The proposal would also eliminate the Division II playoffs, which feature teams that finished second in their conference and failed to receive a Division I berth.

"When it came up, the question was, do we put it on the ballot a year from now, or next year," said sports committee chairman Richard Murphy, principal of Raleigh Sanderson. "With realignment coming up, we decided to do it now and we'll let the membership decide."

"It's in the best interest of all sports if everyone can shoot for a state championship," Adams said.

said. "The ball was never out of my glove."

"He thought that's what I called, but it wasn't," McSherry said. "He brought his hands up (to his waist) and then brought them back down... that's the start of his motion."

Expos 3, Phillies 2
The momentum that had carried Philadelphia through a four-game winning streak ended in one movement of the bat by Montreal's Hubie Brooks, whose first home run of the year gave the Expos a 3-2 victory. Brooks' two-out solo shot came in the top of the seventh inning and evened David Palmer's record at 22.

Palmer allowed five hits in six innings, struck out four and walked only one. Jeff Reardon pitched the final 21-3 innings for his sixth save.

Tim Wallach had four hits for the Expos to extend his streak to 12 games.

Von Hayes doubled to drive in Philadelphia's runs, giving him 13 RBIs in his last 11 games.

Phillies' Manager John Felske was concerned about an unearned run the Expos scored in the third inning as a result of shortstop Steve Jeltz's throwing error.

"It seems like every time we make an error, the other team takes advantage of it."

Elliott Uncomfortable In Role

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Bill Elliott is a bit uncomfortable in his new role as the man to beat.

The usually easy-going, red-haired native of Dawsonville, Ga., was visibly tense Wednesday as he and his crew worked on the qualifying setup for his sleek Ford Thunderbird.

However, despite his outward appearance, the talented 29-year-old remained king of the hill, easily turning the fastest unofficial lap in the opening round of practice for the Winston 500 Grand National stock car race.

Elliott, who has won three of eight starts this season, including the Daytona 500, was clocked at 206.357 mph on the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway oval.

The slim driver, who set the all-time stock car qualifying record of 205.114 mph in February at Daytona Beach, Fla., is the favorite to break that mark today on the way to winning the pole position for Sunday's race.

On the basis of Wednesday's practice session and previous testing here, it appeared the only entry with any kind of shot at knocking Elliott off the pole was Cale Yarborough.

The Talladega record-holder, who won the pole here a year ago at 202.692 mph, which was then the fastest stock car qualifying lap, has more official laps over 200 (six) than any other stocker.

The three-time Winston Cup champion, also in a Thunderbird, was clocked unofficially at 203.520 mph.

"We're not as fast as we need to be," Yarborough said. "Bill is running about 206 and we're right at 203."

"We're not gaining like we'd like. We gain a tenth of a second and Bill counters with a tenth. We gain two-tenths and he goes back out and gets two-tenths. We're about a half-second behind and that doesn't sound like much, but at these speeds, that's 500 yards."

Also clocked over 200 were Terry Labonte at 202.5, and Dale Earnhardt and Neil Bonnett, both over 201, and Bobby Hill Jr. at 200.4, all in Chevrolets. Joe Rutnam, Richard Petty, Darrell Waltrip, Ricky Rudd and Kyle Petty all were caught by stopwatches at over 199.

Other than Elliott's impressive speed, the other major topic of conversation at the track was a new NASCAR rule that equalizes the allowable height of Ford and General Motors cars.

All of the cars must now be no less than 50 1/2 inches off the ground. That adds on one-half inch to the low-slung Fords, which have dominated on the superspeedways this year, and allows the Chevrolets, Buicks and Pontiacs to be a half-inch lower than before.

"No guts, no glory," replied Bill Tobin, the team's director of player personnel.

Did the Giants get a steal in Tracy Henderson, their fifth-round choice, whom general manager George Young had rated as the fourth-best receiver available and a potential first-rounder. Henderson became available only a week before the draft when he was thrown off the Iowa State team for undisclosed reasons.

NFL Aftermath: All Are Smiling

NEW YORK (AP) — Counting the winners and the losers on the day after the National Football League draft is never easy. For one thing, every team says it's a winner. And, for another, it probably takes three years to really tell who's done well and who's done poorly.

To listen to coaches and general managers after Tuesday's NFL draft, every team got exactly the player it wanted in the first round. Even those who acknowledged they preferred someone else put an optimistic shine on things.

"In the long run, what happened is probably for the best," said Dallas' Tom Landry after the Cowboys failed to complete a trade that might have put them in position to get a receiver and settled instead for defensive end Kevin Brooks.

"We would have loved to have an impact wide receiver, but we got some solid players for the future."

In fact, the opinion around the league Wednesday was that the Cowboys were among the teams that had a good draft.

But it wasn't so much the choices of Brooks and linebacker Jesse Penn that had people talking. It was the fifth-round pick of Herschel Walker, the 1982 Heisman Trophy winner who now plays for the United States Football League's New Jersey Generals. With the USFL in shaky financial shape, Walker looked to many people around the league as the potential successor to Tony Dorsett in the Dallas backfield.

Another winner seemed to be the San Francisco 49ers, who outmaneuvered the Cowboys and obtained the one ingredient missing from their offense in speedy wide receiver Jerry Rice. And two others were last year's NFL's have-nots, the Buffalo Bills and Houston Oilers.

The Bills had seven of the top 85 picks in the draft, in part because of the deal that gave the Cleveland Browns the rights to Miami University quarterback Bernie Kosar in a supplemental draft. They probably got two instant defensive starters in defensive end Bruce Smith and cornerback Derrick Burroughs, a decent quarterback prospect in Frank Reich, a versatile offensive lineman in Mark Traylor and some outside speed with wide receivers Chris Burkett and Andre Reed.

The Oilers, next-to-last in the league in defense in a 3-13 season, picked up immediate defensive help in the first round with defensive end Ray Childress and cornerback Richard Johnson. They also got a potential starter in defensive end Richard

Celtics Would Feel More At Ease In The Silverdome

By The Associated Press
DETROIT (AP) — Boston guard M.L. Carr thinks it's too bad the wind blew the roof off the Pontiac Silverdome.
Carr and his Celtic teammates take on the Detroit Pistons tonight in Game 3 of their National Basketball Association semi-final series.
Because the Pistons' regular home in the Silverdome is unusable, the game will be played in downtown Detroit in Joe Louis Arena.
"Joe Louis helps them," Carr said. "I talked to Isaiah (Thomas) about it, and he agrees. It'll be wild down there in the inner city."
Detroit Coach Chuck Daly says it won't matter where they play if the Pistons don't find a way to shut down the Celtics' powerful offense.

"We have to go to the basket a little bit more, if possible," Daly said. "We have been playing up and down at home, so we will have to have our act together come Thursday night."
The Celtics bombed Detroit 133-99 in the first game and came away with a 121-114 triumph in Game 2 behind a brilliant fourth-quarter performance by Larry Bird.
Tonight's game is scheduled for an 8 p.m. tipoff. Game 4 on Sunday is set for 1 p.m. If the Pistons win either game in Detroit, the series will return to Boston for the remainder of the series.
DENVER (AP) — Without 7-foot-4 center Mark Eaton the Utah Jazz were supposed to be quicker, and indeed they were. But quicker doesn't necessarily mean better, and when the Jazz geared up their fast break, they may have unintentionally played into the hands of their opponent.

"I didn't mind them trying to run like they did," said Denver Coach Doug Moe, "because we'd rather play at that pace anyway."
"They ran very well and they didn't take bad shots. Their tempo is so much quicker than Houston's (Utah's first-round playoff opponent). Houston has the big shot blockers, they don't run anywhere near this pace," said Utah forward Adrian Dantley, who scored 28 points but didn't devour the Nuggets the way he usually does.

Legislators Debate Auto Safety Plans

RALEIGH (AP) — House and Senate committees have renewed debate on bills to require seat belts and child restraints in automobiles, with lawmakers agreeing to raise the toll for child-safety violators.

"Leaving a child unbuckled is certainly more serious than throwing a beer can on the side of the road," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, as the Senate Transportation Committee considered raising the fine from $10 to $25 for failing to heed a bill by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham. "Our children are more important than the roadsides."

"On today's market, a $10 fine is basically saying nothing," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, who introduced a bill similar to Miller's but with a tougher fine.

Miller said fines in other states with child restraint laws range from $10 to $300. Despite a caution by Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, that "we shouldn't be too punitive," the panel agreed to make $25 the maximum penalty and leave the exact fine up to a judge.

Bill Hall of the North Carolina Highway Safety Research Center in Chapel Hill, said he and his son, Alex, emerged unscathed from a crash that totalled his car thanks to seat belts and child restraints.

Miller told the Senate panel that Hall's story is "one we could repeat again and again," and said the law could double the lives saved by the law enacted last session.

Miller's bill would extend current law requiring restraints for those under age 2 to include all children under age 6. Anyone charged with not having a restraint seat could avoid the penalty by proving they bought one between the time of arrest and trial. Children over age 3 could comply by using conventional seat belts.

The House Highway Safety Committee, which approved Miller's bill early in the session, heard Wednesday from several supporters of a bill by Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, to mandate seat belts.

"People don't want to think about death and injuries," said Beverly Orr of the Highway Safety Research Center. "They will think about obeying the law."

She said mandatory seat belts are a justifiable infringement on freedom because they would save lives and protect society from soaring insurance and hospital rates.

Nils Lofgren of a Washington, D.C.-based group called Traffic Safety Now, said air bags that may be mandated for cars in 1989 if two-thirds of the U.S. population is not covered by seat belt laws are not a cure-all.

"They would not be deployed in side impacts or rollovers," he said. "They are activated at a combined head-on speed of 24 miles an hour."

He said it would take 12 years for air bags to protect all front-seat passengers because of the time needed for older cars to be phased out and replaced by those with the restraint system.

"The belts are in the cars now, ready for use, ready to protect," Lofgren said.

Chick Holliday of Greensboro recalled a 1980 crash in which his wife was severely injured because she unfastened her belt "for just a few minutes."

"Her head hit the rear-view mirror and completely pushed it back to her throat," he said. "Since this she hasn't worked a day, all for forgetting to wear her seat belt."

Ms. Orr encouraged parents to think of their children in buckling up.

Textile Industry Wants More Curbs On Imports

By The Associated Press
American and Canadian textile, yarn and synthetic fiber manufacturers are urging their governments to press for new textile and apparel import curbs when 41 nations begin talks in July to consider renewal of the Multi-Fiber Arrangement.

The MFA, which regulates world textile trade, expires July 31, 1986, and industry officials are lobbying hard for changes they believe are important to prevent U.S. import surges, such as the doubling in textile-apparel imports since 1980.

"The U.S. government must negotiate a tougher MFA if the U.S. industry is to survive," Ellison McKissick, president of the American Textile Manufacturers Institute, said at a news conference in Montreal, where Canadian and American industry officials outlined their positions.

The conference was intended to focus attention on the industry's push for a more restrictive MFA. Textile exporting countries as well as U.S. importers and retailers who buy clothing overseas are likely to oppose more restrictions.

"All of these other countries are very greedy," said McKissick, president of Alice Manufacturing Co., which is based in Easley, S.C. "They want a bigger share of the market. But it's important to have a strong American textile business."

Changes in the MFA being sought include expanding restrictions to include silk, linen, ramie and other fibers not now restricted; reducing imports from major suppliers; and penalizing countries that ship goods in excess of those permitted by import quotas or that try to evade quota restrictions.

3 ♥	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♦	Pass	4 ♣	Pass
5 ♣	Pass	6 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

Every picture tells a story. In bridge, it is the cards that reveal all.

We endorse South's choice of opening bid. There is little chance that one spade will get passed out when his hand is so distributional, and to open with a demand bid might get the auction too high before South can find out all he needs to know about the potential of the hand. His bid over game asked about the quality of North's trumps, and with two honors North was certainly right to accept.

West's choice of opening lead dictated declarer's line of play. With the ten of hearts in plain sight in dummy, the jack obviously had to be a short-suit lead, so the danger of a heart ruff was imminent should East gain the lead.

After a neutral lead, declarer could have afforded to play ace and another diamond, setting up a diamond on the table, together with the ace of clubs, as parking spots for his two losing hearts. That was a luxury he could no longer afford. Nor could he cross to dummy with a trump to take a diamond finesse—if that lost, West could return a trump and sever declarer's communications with the board.

Declarer's solution was simple but elegant. He won the king of hearts, cashed the ace of diamonds, then crossed to dummy with a trump. On the ace of clubs he discarded his losing diamond. Now he led the queen of diamonds for a ruffing finesse. Had East covered, declarer would have ruffed, re-entered dummy with a trump and sluffed one of his hearts on the jack of diamonds, thus losing only one heart trick.

When East followed with a low diamond, declarer let go of a losing heart. West won the king, but the contract was impregnable. Declarer could win any return, get back to the board with a trump and get rid of his remaining low heart on the jack of diamonds.

IN THE STATE

Health Grant

DURHAM (AP) — The North Carolina Sickle Cell Disease Consortium has received a $718,222 grant from the Department of Health and Human Services' Office of Maternal and Child Health, authorities said.

The project will examine the impact of community resources on the lifestyle and medical care of children and adolescents with sickle cell disease.

The consortium consists of six academic and medical institutions, four community groups and the state-sponsored North Carolina Sickle Cell Syndrome Program.

The three-year project will seek the cooperation of resources in the community including schools, employment services, recreation programs, mental health centers and volunteer agencies.

Plant Test

RALEIGH (AP) — Screaming sirens and emergency broadcasts will signal a simulated emergency at Carolina Power & Light Co.'s Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant later this month.

The drill May 17-18 is designed to test the ability of CP&L, state and local officials and citizens to carry out emergency plans for the plant. It's part of the company's effort to obtain a license for the plant from the federal Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Company employees, public officials and citizen volunteers will be asked to perform as if an emergency had occurred at the $3 billion, 900-megawatt plant, which is set to begin commercial operation in September 1986.

Dole Award

DURHAM (AP) — U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Hanford Dole will receive the Duke University Distinguished Alumni Award, the highest honor given by the school's General Alumni Association, Sunday.

Duke President Terry Sanford will present the award during graduation ceremonies.

Mrs. Dole, a native of Salisbury, graduated from Duke in 1958 and serves on the Duke Board of Trustees. President Reagan named her to the transportation post in 1983 after unanimous Senate approval of her nomination.

Before taking the cabinet post, Mrs. Dole served as Reagan's special assistant for public liaison, as deputy director of the Office of Consumer Affairs during the Nixon administration, and as executive director of President Lyndon Johnson's Commission for Consumer Affairs.

She majored in political science at Duke, receiving a BA degree. She earned her master's degree in education and a law degree from Harvard. She then studied at Oxford University in England and practiced law for a year.

Electrocuted

CATAWBA, N.C. (AP) — A 32-year-old Conover man was electrocuted in an accident Tuesday when the crane he was operating at a building supply company made contact with overhead power lines, an autopsy shows.

Fishermen Drown

OXFORD, N.C. (AP) — Two elderly men fishing at a farm pond drowned Tuesday after one of them fell in and the other tried to save him, a Granville County sheriff's spokesman said.

David Williams, 70, of Durham, who was a diabetic, apparently became ill, fell into the deep end of the pond two miles south of Berea and drowned, said Deputy M. William Averette.

Lewis Jones, 63, of Oxford jumped in to help Williams and also drowned, Averette said.

The men's wives, who are cousins, were at the pond but not near the men when the incident occurred at 1:15 p.m.

Death Studied

CARTHAGE, N.C. (AP) — The Department of Correction is investigating the February death of an inmate in the Moore County Prison Unit after reports that the prisoner didn't receive proper medical attention, officials said Wednesday.

Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson acknowledged there is a probe into the death of inmate Robert L. Kennedy. He said the probe was requested by state Rep. James Craven, R-Moore, but he declined to release details.

Craven said Wednesday that he asked Johnson to investigate after talking to guards and prison inmates who said Kennedy didn't get proper medical attention before his death.

Kennedy, 32, of Southern Pines died at Moore Memorial Hospital in Pinehurst on Feb. 8, two days after he was taken there by ambulance from the prison.

An autopsy report showed Kennedy died of diabetes that had not been previously diagnosed.

May, with its warming weather, is the perfect time for American Bike Month. The first bicycle is credited to Kirkpatrick Macmillan, a Scottish blacksmith who completed his first vehicle in 1839. Bicycles of the 1860s designed by Pierre and Ernest Michaux were often called "boneshakers." Their wood frames and metal-rimmed tires transmitted every bump and jolt from the road. Some American cities, such as Davis, California, have more bicycles registered than automobiles.

NBC Calls On The Oldies

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC, which trumpets itself "the leading contemporary network," has a new prime-time schedule that turns the calendar back to when television didn't have helicopters but had Hitchcock and NBC was challenging CBS for prime-time supremacy.

The return of the "Alfred Hitchcock" series, with the late director's original introductions tacked onto remakes of his 20- and 30-year-old suspense classics, symbolizes NBC's softer, more cerebral programming approach under Chairman Grant Tinker and NBC Entertainment President Brandon Tartikoff.

None of the six new programs that NBC announced Wednesday for 1985-86 is from the traditional macho, crime-fighting, action-adventure mold that made up 30 percent of the network's prime-time lineup this past season. That genre lost more than a full rating point (1 million households) from 1983-84.

"Viewers were looking for more shows with characters who feel like everyday people," said Tartikoff. "People were satiated by glitz and glamour and were looking for shows that were identifiable and had strong emotional connections."

NBC Lineup

The following is NBC's 1985-86 lineup:
 Monday — "TV's Bloopers and Practical Jokes," "Monday Night Movie."
 Tuesday — "The A-Team," "Riptide," "Remington Steele."
 Wednesday — "Highway to Heaven," "Hell Town," "St. Elsewhere."
 Thursday — "The Cosby Show," "Family Ties," "Cheers," "Night Court," "Hill Street Blues."
 Friday — "Knight Rider," "Misfits of Science," "Miami Vice."
 Saturday — "Gimme a Break," "Facts of Life," "The Golden Girls," "227," "Hunter."
 Sunday — "Punky Brewster," "Silver Spoons," "Amazing Stories," "Alfred Hitchcock," "Sunday Night Movie."
 ABC announces its prime-time schedule Monday and CBS is expected to reveal its new lineup May 10.

NBC's new series are: "Hell Town," starring Robert Blake as a barrio priest; "Amazing Stories," executive producer Steven Spielberg's tales of fantasy, adventure and irony; "Alfred Hitchcock," "The Golden Girls," a comedy starring Bea Arthur, Betty White, Rue McClanahan and Estelle Getty as elderly women living it up in Miami Beach; "227," a sitcom starring Marla Gibbs as a nosy neighbor in a Chicago tenement; and "Misfits of Science," starring Dean Cain as a scientist who turns freaks into an offbeat superhero team.

The programs, filling four hours, represent NBC's fittest replacements since the 1970-71 season, the only time NBC has been No. 1 in the ratings.

NBC finished second in 1984-85, its first escape from the cellar in 10 years, principally because of its family-oriented, non-violent new series, "The Cosby Show" and Michael Landon's "Highway to Heaven."

Tartikoff believes NBC needs a few more strong programs to overtake top-rated CBS.

'NEW HONEYMOONER' SEGMENTS — Jackie Gleason and Audrey Meadows pose during rehearsals for a TV show reintroducing 67 segments of "The Honeymooners" which have not been seen on television in more than 20 years. Films of the live performances were found in a New York museum. (AP Laserphoto)

Gleason's 'How Sweet It Is' Lives Again

NORTH MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — How sweet it is for Jackie Gleason, who is taping a nostalgic look back at his still-popular 1950s television show "The Honeymooners" featuring the chubby, bombastic bus driver Ralph Kramden.

The resurrection coincides with the promotion of 67 rediscovered Honeymooners episodes, all of which were filmed live as part of "The Jackie Gleason Show" in the 1950s. The filmed shows have been refurbished by technicians at Viacom Enterprises and are now ready for redistribution on cable television and eventual network syndication, said producer Toby Martin.

Asked this week how he feels about the continued interest in the show, Gleason deadpanned: "I don't think anyone anticipates anything happening that's very, very good. But when it does happen ... How sweet it is!"

With the release, thousands of loyal television viewers who have kept Honeymooners segments in reruns for nearly 30 years will be treated to a healthy dose of the Kramdens and their upstairs neighbors, the Nortons.

"There are kids watching the show, middle-aged people, older people," said Gleason. "It just never has gone away. It amazes me."

In the original, filmed live at the Park Sheraton Hotel Theater in New York, Art Carney played sewer worker Ed Norton and Joyce Randolph played his wife Trixie.

"The only place these shows have been seen since original airing is in the Museum of Broadcasting in New York, and only six of them were available there," Martin said of the new shows.

Viacom lifted the new segments from the originals, enhanced the film and edited it for broadcast on cable television and eventual sale to a network for syndication, Martin said.

The show being taped in North Miami Beach this week is designed to reintroduce the segments, he said. "Response has been terrific. We had a news conference to announce the release and suddenly you had an enormous interest. Jackie was really surprised."

Gleason, wearing fire-red pants and a black monogrammed shirt, said it was gratifying to see all of the interest being generated over a show three decades old.

Charlotte TV Network Organized

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A new television network is on its way to Charlotte, but only people staying in the city's hotels, motels and inns will get to tune it in.

The Charlotte Television Network will combine local points of interest with paid advertising in a 20-minute videotape presentation hosted by Bob Lacey and Moira Quinn, cohosts of "PM Magazine" on WVTB in Charlotte.

Organizers hope to have the system, which is aimed at visitors to the city, operational by July 1.

Ken Koontz, former reporter and anchorman for WBTV, and Cam Keyset, a former WBT radio reporter, are heading the new network.

Koontz said CTN has 16 hotels signed up for the services and hopes to add 15 within a few days. He estimated the start-up cost at $5,000 to $10,000 and said the company hopes to turn a profit within a year.

State Holding $28 Million For Owners

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina is trying to give away $28 million it has collected in the last 14 years, but it can't find any takers — or at least the right ones.

"We've been collecting about $4 million a year for the last several years," said James Moore of the state treasurer's office, which holds in trust the money others have left behind. "It's a little slower this year, so we might not get that much."

The money comes from bank accounts, safe deposit boxes, utility deposits, insurance policies and estates left uncollected for more than five years.

"The major source is abandoned bank accounts and safe deposit boxes," Moore said, "but we also get a great deal from insurance companies and utility companies."

"People will put down deposits for lights and the phone, and then they'll leave town and not claim them," Moore said. "If they do not claim them after five years, the utility companies turn them over to us and we make an effort to find the owners."

Moore said bank accounts turned over to the state sometimes involve a secret account kept by a husband or a wife that the spouse doesn't know about.

"We had that situation in Durham where a man had died and had an account his wife didn't know about," Moore said. "She read his name in the paper (on a list of abandoned property owners) and called us. We gave her back several hundred dollars she didn't even know about."

"Most of the accounts we get are between $25 and $500," Moore said, "but I'd guess it averages about $200. You have to take into account we occasionally get a half-million dollar account turned over to us."

The state holds jewelry, houses or other property for about two years before selling it and adding the cash to the trust fund.

"We're required to hold a public auction on that kind of property every two years," Moore said, "but we've had so much of it that we've held an auction every year for the last three years."

Moore said there have been a few claims where people were unable to prove they were heirs or owned the property, but none that could be considered outright fraud.

"We don't have enough larger accounts that justify that kind of effort."

Moore said. "We're very careful to make sure proof of ownership exists. Occasionally, we get some big accounts and some owners we have never been able to find, despite extensive efforts."

The House Wednesday approved a bill that would allow the treasurer's office to keep new lists of abandoned property secret for six months while the state tries to locate the owners.

The bill, Moore said, would keep private finders from picking out the big accounts, running down the owners and charging a fee for reuniting them with their property. The state performs the service for free.

The $28 million nest egg last year produced $2.5 million of interest, Moore said, which was turned over to the education assistance fund. That fund makes loans to needy North Carolina students attending state-supported schools.

"Last year, the (abandoned property) fund provided about 1,000 education loans to state residents," Moore said.

Abandoned funds turned over to the state prior to 1971, when the trust fund was set up in the treasurer's office, went to the general administration of the University of North Carolina, Moore said. Interest from that money, which amounted to $5 million in 1971, is used for scholarships.

Superintendent Would Be Appointed

Senate Backs School Bill

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill approved by the Senate would eliminate the statewide election of the superintendent of public instruction and make the governor responsible for setting educational policy.

"Public education is the number one purpose of government," Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, said Wednesday, "and the governor is the man the voters elect to carry out the policies of the state. This bill speaks directly to putting the responsibility where it should be — in the hands of the chief executive officer of the state."

Under the bill, which was approved 41-3 before being sent to the House, voters would be asked to approve a constitutional amendment in November 1986 that would change the composition of the state school board and allow the school board to appoint a superintendent.

"Our current structure is a disaster waiting to happen," said Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, the chairman of the Senate Education Committee that hammered out the bill. "The disaster hasn't happened yet because of the good will of a lot of people."

He said the current structure makes the superintendent answerable to the voters, but not the school board, which sets the policy he is supposed to carry out.

Under the bill, the governor would appoint eight members of the school board, with one coming from each of the state's education regions. Four members would be appointed by the Legislature and the lieutenant governor and state treasurer would round out the board.

Rotating four-year terms proposed in the bill would assure a governor control of the board during his first term.

Before approving the bill, the Senate killed a 10-page amendment offered by Sen. Wendell Sawyer, R-Guilford, that called for the statewide election of the school board, with one member coming from each congressional district.

"My problem with the bill is that there is no direct line of accountability to the voters," Sawyer said. "We could get into a situation in the future of electing a governor without an education platform."

"The governor can be elected on any number of issues," Sawyer said after the vote. "I think we should either elect the school board or elect the superintendent. We need someone who runs just on education issues."

Consideration of the bill was delayed after Sawyer handed out copies of his amendment, but Sawyer did not get a chance to explain it.

When the bill was brought up again, Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, was recognized and immediately moved that the amendment be tabled. Warren said much of Sawyer's proposal had been rejected by the Education Committee and a subcommittee that handled the bill.

Warren's motion to kill the amendment carried 28-17.

Runway Goose

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A mother goose guarding her unborn young tucked into a clump of grass has picked an unusual nesting spot — along the runway at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport.

The tan and black Canada goose has been there about one week, poking between two blue lights that mark the intersection of a busy runway and taxiway and sitting stone-still as hundreds of jets whiz by daily.

"She's one dedicated mother," yelled North Carolina Air National Guard Master Sgt. Jim Young over the roar of the jets.

"Hell of a place to build a nest," shouted Staff Sgt. Don Miskelly.

Not necessarily so, says Dr. Richard Brown, executive director of the Carolina Raptor Center at Latta Plantation Park.

"Birds have bird brains," Brown said. "To the bird, the clump of grass may seem to be an island in the middle of a pond."

It should be three or four more weeks before the eggs hatch, Brown said. Within hours, the goslings will be eager for a swim in the pond across the taxi way.

"Let's hope they make it," Brown said.

National Guard Put On Mock Alert

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's 135 National Guard units went on a mock alert status Wednesday in preparation for a convoy exercise this weekend that will send nearly all of the state's 13,000 guardsmen to Fort Bragg.

Guardsmen from 100 communities across the state will move in convoys up to three miles long throughout the day Friday and return home Sunday. They will use most of the state's major highways, guard officials say.

Described as the first statewide call-up in North Carolina and the largest peacetime drill of its kind nationwide, the effort will test the guard's ability to respond quickly in the event of a federal call-up while also testing the Army's ability to process the influx of troops at Fort Bragg.

"We got the alert here in Raleigh about 1 p.m. and began alerting units across the state," said Chief Warrant Officer 4 J.L. McGee, spokesman for the guard headquarters.

During the exercise, called Hickory Response '85, some of the guard's 5,000 vehicles will begin moving as early as 5:30 a.m. Friday, and the last are expected to arrive at the military reservation by 4 p.m. Their departure times are staggered to coordinate arrivals at the base.

Gov. Jim Martin, as commander-in-chief of the state militia, will fly to Fort Bragg Saturday to review the exercise. Army generals and officials from the Department of Defense are expected to observe, while the exercise itself will be monitored and critiqued by the Army Reserve's 80th Division Maneuver Training Command base in Richmond, Va.

Sex-Disease Treatment Units Urged

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A statewide coalition to combat sexually transmitted diseases has asked the N.C. Medical Society to organize a network of doctors to treat patients with the diseases, authorities said.

The Coalition on Sexually Transmitted Diseases, based in Charlotte, says patients need an alternative to public health clinics, the traditional centers for treatment of sexually transmitted diseases.

"The coalition believes that there is a large pool of physicians in North Carolina capable of treating sexually transmitted diseases, but there is no readily identifiable mechanism whereby private patients can be referred to fee-for-service physicians," said a recent article in the N.C. Medical Journal.

A spokesman for the Medical Society said Wednesday the society may take up the request during its annual meeting this week in Pinehurst.

Calling sexually transmitted diseases common in North Carolina, Marguerite K. Tracy, coalition chairman, said in a Medical Journal report the group wants to increase the public's understanding of the diseases and their social and economic impacts, as well as people's knowledge about prevention and treatment.

The coalition's first objective, she said, "is to insure that every student in North Carolina receives accurate, timely education about sexually transmitted diseases as part of a comprehensive health education curriculum."

The incidence of gonorrhea and syphilis has begun to decline in North Carolina, said Jim Fowler, director of the Sexually Transmitted Disease Control branch of the state Division of Health Services.

But North Carolina still has the seventh highest rate of gonorrhea and the 10th highest rate of syphilis in the country, Fowler said in an interview.

House Tentatively Passes Weakened Phosphate Ban

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A proposed statewide limit on phosphates in household laundry detergents, scaled down to cover only nutrient-sensitive watersheds, won tentative House approval.

Supporters admitted the 63-51 margin might be uncertain for final House consideration set for later today, but they hoped to defuse opposition by limiting the bill's impact.

"I think the pressure will be intense to switch (votes)," said Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, who said he amended the bill in order to achieve a 10-vote shift.

The amended bill would require that the Environmental Management Commission institute a phosphate ban in the watershed areas surrounding Jordan Lake, Falls Lake and the Chowan River. But Hackney said the EMC has "a lot of discretion" in how the ban will be instituted.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said the bill would give lawmakers "a real laboratory experiment ... to see who really told you the truth in the past year and a half about the phosphate ban."

"We are putting more phosphates in than nature can handle taking out," he said, adding that the state will have to eventually pay up to $200 billion to change city wastewater treatment plants so they can remove phosphorus.

During debate, Hackney criticized soap and detergent industry lobbyists, saying they had waged an expensive campaign against his bill while ignoring evidence that a ban would help clean up algae-choked streams and rivers. Environmentalists say the algae consumes oxygen and can kill fish.

"I don't think there's any opposition to this bill ... that is not generated by this lobbying blitz," he said. "We can't stay with them on the money. There's no question about that."

Some legislators questioned whether the Environmental Management Commission would properly exercise its authority to impose the ban on affected counties and asked how the limited ban could be enforced.

Rep. Vernon James, D-Pasquotank, said he opposed "regulation by a group of people that haven't been elected by anyone and you can't get rid of them."

"We're giving away our power to the Environmental Management Commission to decide who is going to have to abide by this bill," said Rep. Ivan Mothershead, R-Mecklenburg.

"Isn't it a fact that the EMC could, at any time, decide the entire state should come under it?" he asked.

Hackney said the commission would do so only "with the proper scientific evidence" and after following established procedures including hearings and the right of appeal.

Senate Panel Votes To Make Inventory Tax An Option For Local Governments

RALEIGH (AP) — Letting each county decide for itself whether to keep or repeal the inventory tax might spark fierce competition between counties, but that might be just what they need, a Senate leader says.

"The problem with government is there is no competition," said Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. "Competition is what brings the best product for the citizens at the lowest price."

If counties must consider cutting taxes to keep up with their neighbors, "they're going to start thinking how best to save money instead of how to spend it," Rauch said Wednesday.

The finance committee approved a proposed constitutional amendment to make the tax on business inventories local-option. A similar measure was removed from the House floor and returned to the Constitutional Amendments Committee so revisions could be considered.

Rauch acknowledged that the Legislature is "running on a double track" by considering local-option repeal while a Senate subcommittee is considering statewide reduction or elimination as part of an omnibus tax-relief package.

"I believe that elimination of the inventory tax will come in time," said Rauch. "And when it comes, it will be a vital stimulus to business in North Carolina, which will directly bring in more high wage-paying industries."

Abolition of the inventory tax is one of three provisions in Gov. Jim Martin's tax-cut package, which also would repeal the property tax on intangible assets and the state sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines.

Study Says Highly Motivated Teachers Likely To See Burnout

GREENSBORO (AP) — A precise definition is hard to come by and a cure is even harder to prescribe, but teacher "burnout" is common and is most likely to affect those who are highly motivated and dedicated, a study shows.

"People in education know that it's affecting teachers, but it's very difficult to prescribe a cure" for burnout, said Patricia Schreiber, who conducted the study for her doctoral dissertation at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

"That's the tragedy of burnout — many people don't know it's happening in their careers until it's too late," she said.

Ms. Schreiber said highly dedicated teachers are more likely to suffer burnout than others.

"I found that some of the very best teachers, the ones with the highest motivation to helping students, are the ones who are most likely candidates for burnout," she said.

"These are the people who start out with a lot of dedication, a lot of energy, and the job itself can take a toll on that dedication."

The study shows that failure to find continued meaning in the classroom may be a chief factor contributing to teacher burnout.

She said teachers should "seek to be more professional and seek to detect meaning in their professions" and that administrators should "treat teachers as professional adults and support them in hopes of retaining excellent teachers."

"Development planners should provide in-service education conditions which is enriching and meaningful to teachers," said Ms. Schreiber, a teacher for 10 years before leaving the classroom.

Ms. Schreiber also said she found in her study that teachers are required to perform too many non-teaching duties including patrol, clerical and extracurricular duties, housekeeping and discipline.

School boards and other decision-makers are removed from classroom reality and mandate policies that are difficult to implement, the study adds.

Ms. Schreiber, an assistant to the director for funding and development of the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County Schools, had no specific recommendations on how to alleviate burnout.

Wall Street Ponders 24-Hour Trading

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — If businesses like supermarkets and gas stations can remain open 24 hours a day, why not the stock market?

That's the question now under study at the New York Stock Exchange and the subject of a lively debate among publicly traded companies, Wall Street brokers, investors and practically everybody else who has an interest in the securities markets.

The NYSE, the world's largest market for stocks, has operated for the past decade from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Eastern time each business day. It last changed its hours in 1974, when the close of trading was extended from 3:30 p.m.

Since then, however, the investment world has been greatly transformed. Money flows in much greater amounts in and out of U.S. stocks from remote time zones in Europe and the Far East.

Buying and selling of NYSE-listed stocks on smaller, regional exchanges is now reported, along with Big Board transactions, on a single consolidated ticker tape. One of those regionals, the Pacific Stock Exchange in San Francisco, remains open a half-hour after the close in New York.

The NYSE also faces competition from the National Association of Securities Dealers' over-the-counter market, where stocks are traded by competing dealers rather than a designated "specialist" broker on an exchange floor.

With deregulation of the securities markets, independent firms like Los Angeles-based Jefferies & Co. can bid for, and sometimes get, big transactions that would otherwise be handled at the NYSE.

There is considerable pressure on the 193-year-old institution to adjust to the changing investment world. "We have the choice of being the leader or a follower on this, and we want to be the leader," said Richard Torrenzano, the exchange's vice president for communications.

However, the mere mention of 24-hour trading raises cries of alarm from brokerage firms, whose managers envision enormous additional costs connected with around-the-clock operations without a corresponding increase in revenues.

Leaders in the industry, which employs some 250,000 people, are extremely cost-conscious because of Wall Street's less-than-bountiful year in 1984.

Who, they ask, is going to trade stocks at 2 a.m.?

Meanwhile, the New York exchange has begun talks about a possible merger with the Pacific Stock Exchange, and has discussed some sort of linkup with the Stock Exchange in London.

The idea of a New York-Pacific merger faces at least one major obstacle, however. Traders at each institution worry they might lose some of their business to their counterparts at the other.

In addition, the New York and London exchanges operate under different governments with different regulatory rules.

John J. Phelan Jr., chairman of the Big Board, has spoken of an around-the-world, around-the-clock stock trading system as "inevitable." Torrenzano added, "it's not a matter of if, it's a matter of when."

But handicappers on Wall Street are betting that "when," assuming it does come, is a long time off — several years, at least.

At the American Stock Exchange, a smaller neighbor and rival of the NYSE that likely would follow whatever moves the Big Board makes, an official who demanded anonymity said, "While we are not opposed to 24-hour trading, we don't think it is very likely."

In the near future, many Wall Streeters agree, the most probable development is the adoption of an earlier opening time — either 9 a.m. or 9:30 a.m.

"At most brokerage houses, the staff is already there at eight o'clock, or earlier," said Elaine Derso, an analyst who follows the securities industry for Value Line Investment Survey, the nation's largest independent investment advisory service.

Many Wall Streeters like the idea of opening earlier because European investors, whose business day runs several hours ahead of New York's, have shown heightened interest in the U.S. markets in recent years.

Torrenzano said a decision on a possible earlier opening may be made as early as this summer, pending regulatory approval.

Edward I. O'Brien, president of the Securities Industry Association, a trade group of brokerage firms, said: "There is a desire to experiment with a little bit longer trading hours. If that works, and I do believe it will, then we might see a gradual expansion."

Many participants in the debate note there is already a near-24-hour-a-day market in some commodities, like gold, and in currencies. As each day passes, the action shifts from financial centers in the Pacific Basin to Europe, and then to the United States.

These markets, however, are dominated by professional investors and financial institutions. Investors in stocks, by contrast, are used to dealing in fixed trading hours and to monitoring closing prices and stock indexes in newspapers.

Mutual funds, with their millions of individual shareholders, publish their net asset values daily based on the close of business in the stock market.

So any kind of non-stop market in stocks would, in the words of Ms. Derso at Value Line, "require an enormous shift in mentality. It's the sort of thing that's going to come slowly and experimentally."

General Motors Closing Out X-Cars

DETROIT (AP) — The last General Motors Corp. X-car rolls off the assembly line today, leaving behind six years of recalls and lawsuits that marked GM's running battle to defend the cars' reputation for quality.

The Willow Run assembly plant in Ypsilanti, the last of three plants to build the compact cars, scheduled the final assembly for tonight's second shift.

The front-wheel drive, fuel-efficient 1980 Chevrolet Citation,

Pontiac Phoenix, Buick Skylark and Oldsmobile Omega were introduced with great expectations and much fanfare during the days of gasoline lines in spring 1979.

But no celebrations were scheduled at Willow Run, plant spokesman Harold Locke said.

"It was a car for its time, scaled down with much better fuel economy," said John Hammond, a senior economist who analyzes the automotive industry for Data Resources Inc. in Lexington, Mass.
