Rains Settle Dust In Pitt

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

A slow, steady rain settled drought-dry Pitt County dust today, bringing smiles to farmers faces and prompting sighs of relief from forest officials.

The rain — pennies for farmers — was perfectly timed, Pitt agricultural officials said. "I don't think it could have come at a better time. A little earlier would have been nice, but this is fine," Mitch Smith, Pitt tobacco agent, said today. "The rain is not too late (for crops) at all."

Smith said many tobacco farmers were puzzling over the condition of tobacco plants in the fields, and that the rain should help decide the fate of the plants. "The end of last week some of the tobacco in the fields was looking bad because it was drought-stricken, Smith said. "Many growers are trying to make decisions about whether to reset plants in the fields or not. This rain will help them make that decision." If the drought-stressed tobacco can be saved, the rain will revive it, Smith added.

Today's "good soaking rain," was ideal for the farmers' needs, Smith said. "The ideal rainfall amount would be an inch for the time being. Then another inch this time next week would be nice."

Greenville Utilities Water Plant recorded .01 inch of rain between midnight and 8 a.m. today. Precipitation continued during the day, but no complete rainfall measurements were available by mid-morning. The precipitation is the first in the county since April 28, when .03 inch was recorded by GUC, and April 17, when .18 inch fell.

By early morning parts of the Piedmont reported over an inch of rain. Area forest officials say today's precipitation helped ease fears over woods fires in the county. The N.C. Division of Forest Resources lifted a burning ban in all 100 counties at noon today, saying the rainfall had removed the immediate threat to forested areas.

"The improving fire-weather conditions and the decreasing number of new forest fires in the state has enabled ... (officials) to lift the ban on outdoor burning statewide." John Shepherd of the Division of Forest Resources said in a statement.

Lifting of the ban allows the issuance of burning permits, which are required by law for burning done in or within 500 feet of a wooded area between midnight and 4 p.m. In 19 "high hazard counties" in eastern North Carolina, burning permits are required within 500 feet of a wooded area regardless of the time, Shepherd said.

Forecasters said a clearing trend was expected to move from west to east today, as a low pressure area moves northeast, trailing a cold front offshore.

Temperatures remained in the high 60s and low 70s, with cooler temperatures on tap for tonight. Lows are expected to reach the 50s on the coast.

Meanwhile, a dry mound of high pressure will move into North Carolina by Saturday, bringing sunny skies. Brisk northeast winds will keep northeastern North Carolina cool Saturday, while much of the state will recover to milder afternoon readings. The range will be from the 60s over the northeast to some low and mid 70s over the southwest portion of the state Saturday.

Summit Backs Arms Talks

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — President Reagan won his summit partners' backing today for arms control talks with the Soviet Union and a Reagan meeting with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to resolve "profound differences dividing East and West."

A political statement issued by leaders of the seven major industrial democracies urged the Soviet Union to "act positively and constructively in order to achieve significant agreements" at the U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva.

The importance of the summit leaders' support for the U.S. negotiating position at Geneva was underscored by Secretary of State George P. Shultz. "A show of strength and the actuality of strength by our allies has always been an important factor in these negotiations, and continues to be so," he said today.

Said White House spokesman Larry Speakes: "We are pleased and encouraged by the strength of support from our allies that is included in this statement."

Welcoming the resumption of the Geneva talks, the summit leaders from the United States, Britain, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan and Canada declared that "we are prepared to pursue a high-level dialogue to deal with the profound differences dividing East and West."

Shultz said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show from Bonn that a Reagan-Gorbachev meeting "is likely to take place one of these days," perhaps when the new Soviet leader travels to the United Nations in New York next fall.

Shultz said there is "a great deal of tension" between the two superpowers, and that both leaders have indicated they think "it's a good idea" to meet and "grapple with the issues that divide them and perhaps united them."

With the Geneva talks reopening May 30 after what U.S. negotiators called a "difficult" first round in March, the seven summit leaders endorsed efforts "to maintain and strengthen a stable military balance at the lowest possible levels of forces, neither seeking superiority for ourselves nor neglecting our defenses."

They pledged support for "meaningful reductions in existing levels of nuclear arms, limitations on conventional arms, the banning of chemical weapons and lessening the risks of conflict."

Noting that May 8 is the 40th anniversary of the end of World War II in Europe, the summit chiefs said they "remember in grief all those who lost their lives in that time, whether by acts of war or as victims of inhumanity, repression and tyranny," and promised to "uphold peace, freedom and justice in all our countries and in the world."

U.S. officials expressed no surprise that the summit leaders withheld an endorsement of Reagan's space-based "Star Wars" missile defense program, or that the president's trade embargo against Nicaragua drew so little attention.

Robert McFarlane, the White House national security affairs adviser, said there was no need for summit approval of Star Wars "because we're in the midst of negotiations on participation" in joint research on the program. "The president has explained what he has in mind, and it's just gone away," McFarlane said.

Shultz said the summit chiefs were too preoccupied with other issues to deal with Nicaragua. West German

Charged In Infant's Death

Grant Waives Extradition, Will Return To Greenville

Michael Edward Grant, 31, of Greenville waived extradition from California Thursday on murder charges in connection with the death of a 6-hour-old child in Pitt County Memorial Hospital's neonatal unit on July 24, 1983.

John Heckman of the Los Angeles County sheriff's fugitive detail, said North Carolina authorities have 10 days to take custody of the former PCMH employee. Grant was taken into custody on a fugitive warrant after a Pitt County grand jury indicted him and 36-year-old Robert Andrew Jonas of Greensboro Monday on murder charges in connection with the death.

District Attorney Tom Haigwood said at mid-morning today that he has had no official word from California about Grant. But he said either agents of the State Bureau of Investigation or Pitt County sheriff's deputies will be sent to California to bring Grant back to this state.

Grant and Jonas are charged with killing Darlene Clara Peszko after the child was born on July 23, 1983, suffering from anencephaly, a condition in which the upper part of the brain is not fully developed. Physicians have said the ailment is "incompatible with life."

Jonas turned himself over to State Bureau of Investigation agents at the Pitt County Superior Courtroom late Thursday morning. At a preliminary hearing which followed his surrender, Jonas was placed under $70,000 bond on the recommendation of Haigwood, "in light of the fact that he turned himself in" and "cooperated in this investigation."

At the time of the alleged murder, Jonas was a registered nurse working in the neonatal unit, while Grant, who has since become a registered nurse, was employed by the hospital as a delivery room technician.

Jonas has been employed at Moses Cone Hospital in Greensboro since leaving PCMH in December 1983. Grant was a PCMH employee until "terminated" on March 26, as a result of the investigation.

The death of the infant was, at first, considered a natural one because of the short life expectancy of children with such a defect. But hospital officials in late February, because of rumors, contacted the district attorney who in turn asked the SBI to investigate.

An amended death certificate filed after the infant's body was exhumed and an autopsy performed in March lists the cause of death as a bruised heart caused by "mechanical compression of the chest."

The child was the daughter of Steven and Wendy Peszko, former Greenville residents who now live in Alpharetta, Ga.

Jobless Rate Again Holds Firm

By PETE YOST
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Civilian joblessness stayed stuck at 7.3 percent in April, the government said today, with the pool of unemployed Americans holding at more than 8.4 million.

It was the first time in a year that the rate was unchanged for three months running.

A survey of businesses showed the economy created 215,000 new jobs last month, with significant increases in service jobs and construction. But a household survey, from which the unemployment rate is calculated, said civilian employment was little changed from March.

The business survey showed that manufacturing employment continued its dismal showing, falling by 44,000. Jobs in service industries rose by 182,000 while construction employment was up 70,000.

One analyst, Allen Sinai of Shearson Lehman Brothers Inc., said the manufacturing-jobs report "raises the question as to whether a recession ... is going to bring the whole economy down to a crawl."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes, on the other hand, maintained that "the nation's economy remains strong and, despite the fact that the unemployment rate has not fallen in three months, we still see total employment in this country running at all-time highs."

But Speakes was wrong. Total employment, including the military, fell 173,000 from the record set in March.

The high-technology sector was especially hard hit, with large job losses in electrical and electronic equipment manufacturing.

Employment in that sector has now fallen to the level of last summer, about 2.3 million.

In addition to manufacturing job losses, the average factory workweek also fell.

Despite the business survey finding that more than 200,000 jobs were created in April, civilian unemployment has been at 8.4 million since February.

Commenting on today's report, the commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, told a congressional committee that "not only was the overall unemployment rate steady in April, but there were no significant movements among the major worker groups."

An alternate unemployment rate, combining the 115.3 million-member civilian labor force with the roughly 1.7 million members of the armed forces stationed in the United States, also was unchanged, at 7.2 percent.

Total civilian employment fell 174,000, the household survey showed to 106.9 million.

Over the last 12 months, total civilian employment has risen just 2.5 million, almost half the previous 12-month gain of 4.8 million.

Civilian joblessness has been moving in a narrow range of 7.1 percent to 7.5 percent for the last year. Some analysts, troubled by the weakness of the economy in the year's first quarter, are beginning to revise their forecasts slightly. Earlier in the year, they were predicting that the jobless rate would drop to 7 percent or slightly lower this summer. Now, however, some are saying that the rate likely will remain stuck at slightly above 7 percent and then turn upward later in the year.

FARMVILLE RESCUERS PRAISED

Johnny Batts, who requested a Hotline tribute Friday for Tony Barber who gave his father, L.F. Batts, cardiopulmonary resuscitation after a heart attack Thursday afternoon, said he was remiss in not also crediting the members of the Farmville Rescue Squad for saving his father's life. "The rescue people did a wonderful job," he said, "and I don't know why I didn't praise them more along with Tony at the time."

He added that he was mistaken when he said that Barber administered CPR for nearly 20 minutes before the rescue squad arrived. "The squad actually was there in about eight minutes and that was with their main truck being on the way to Greenville and having to use the backup truck and get a backup crew," he said.

Dental Partnership

Drs. Richard H. Evans Jr. and William C. Lee Jr., Greenville dentists, have formed a partnership for the practice of family dentistry, with offices located at 110 Oakmont Professional Plaza.

Evans, a Greenville native, graduated from the University of North Carolina School of Dentistry and served two years in the Navy Dental Corps, stationed at New London, Conn., before returning to Greenville to begin private practice in 1968.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Evans, he is married to the former Alice Howell of Wilmington. They have three daughters and are members of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist Church.

Lee, also a native of Greenville, is a graduate of the dental school at UNC and is in his fifth year of private practice in Greenville. In 1983 Lee taught at the UNC School of Dentistry as a visiting clinical instructor.

He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. Curtis Lee and is married to the former Nancy Strickland of Tabor City. They are members of the Memorial Baptist Church.

Bicycle Week

The Greenville Citizens Bikeway Committee, in conjunction with the N.C. Department of Transportation's bicycle program, is sponsoring Bicycle Week Saturday through May 10.

During the week, committee members will assist Greenville police officers in presenting films and safety reminders to students in kindergarten through sixth grade. Wednesday has been designated as "Ride Your Bike to Work Day."

A bicycle rodeo will be held Saturday at 10 a.m. at Jaycee Park on Cedar Lane for students in kindergarten through sixth grade. The Greenville Optimist Club will assist committee members in administering eight bicycle tests and trophies will be awarded. All bicycles will be safety inspected and registered free.

For more details call Shirley Morrison, chairman, at 355-7653 or 756-6343.

Statewide Project

A campaign to remove abandoned and decaying buildings along highways in eastern North Carolina has been expanded into a statewide project.

Serving on the committee is Janice Faulkner, director of the East Carolina University Regional Development Institute.

The plan originated with the Eastern North Carolina Chamber of Commerce.

Williamston Officer Put On Probation

WILLIAMSTON — Verlon Godard pleaded no contest to misdemeanor assault with a deadly weapon in Martin County Superior Court this week and was given a suspended 90-day to 120-day sentence by Judge Thomas Watts.

Godard, suspended from the Williamston Police Department after being charged with felonious assault in connection with a Feb. 2 incident, was placed on unsupervised probation for five years and ordered to pay a $250 fine, court costs and restitution to Horace Griffin, 52, whom he allegedly assaulted with a nightstick.

Griffin and State Bureau of Investigation Agent Eugene Bryant testified that Griffin was beaten the day after Godard's wife received an intimidating phone call.

Godard's reaction to the call resulted in an error in judgment, Godard's attorney, Melvin Bowen, said.

"I don't know of any situation where I have put a man in jail for misdemeanor assault. And I don't see any point in changing my manner of business at this time," Watts said.

"The most disturbing thing about it," Watts said, is that Godard "was on duty conducting personal business."

Watts told Godard "I fully expect someday you will be restored to law enforcement work if that's what you want. It's just going to take a while."

Crane Says CBS Should Air Defense

RALEIGH (AP) — A conservative congressman who is a member of Fairness in Media says CBS should "come forth and defend" its record in a special edition of 60 Minutes to discuss alleged liberal bias in the network's news.

In a letter dated Thursday, Rep. Phil Crane, R-Illinois, asked CBS News anchor Dan Rather to arrange the broadcast. Crane said that as a spokesman for Raleigh-based FIM's campaign to gain control of the network, he has examined examples of liberal bias at CBS for several months.

FIM was organized after Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., proposed that conservatives buy enough CBS stock to take control of the network and end what he called "liberal bias" in its news operations. The organization has mailed out letters to conservatives urging them to buy stock and contribute funds so other conservatives could be contacted.

Crane proposed that he and Rather discuss on 60 Minutes "the evidence of liberal bias at CBS News which the Fairness in Media campaign has been pointing to."

"The liberal point of view deserves fair representation at CBS News, but it does not deserve to be the only point of view at CBS News," Crane wrote. "I hope that CBS will consent to allow us to discuss the facts on CBS."

Crane suggested that ABC news anchor Ted Koppel moderate the proposed forum and said if CBS won't provide the time, possibly Crane and Rather could appear on ABC's Nightline.

"If in fact CBS is confident of its record of 'fair reporting,' they should come forth and defend that record," the group said.

"CBS regards Mr. Crane's proposal as simply another extension of their four-month-long campaign to heighten the political profile of Sen. Helms and his associates, and to raise funds for their cause," Anne Luzzatto, director of corporate information for CBS, said today. "CBS believes this is an inappropriate activity at the expense of CBS."

She said Rather would have no comment on Crane's proposal.

CAN Program Through Rose High And Eastern Schools Selected As Exemplary

By ROSALIE TROTMAN
Reflector Lifestyle Editor

The Cooperative Adventures in Nutrition (CAN) at J.H. Rose High School, through Elaine Tschetter and Emalyn Colardo at Eastern Elementary School has been selected as exemplary in a special project in the United States.

The project is co-sponsored by the American Vocational Association and the National Dairy Board. The project is designed to identify and promote outstanding programs in the field. The CAN program is one of six selected from 51 programs submitted by schools and organizations across the country. An award of $4,000 will be presented to each selected program.

"Our CAN program is a teaching-learning experience between vocational food service students at Rose and the developmental kindergarten class at Eastern. Here the vocational students share their understanding of nutrition with an identified group of children," said Mrs. Tschetter.

"The vocational students learn that before they can impart knowledge to another group, they must fully understand the nutrition concepts to be taught. They gain added insight as to the cause of handicaps, how they might prevent future nutrition related handicaps from occurring with their own children and they gain experiences from planning and implementing activities for the youngsters involved," she said.

"The kindergarten children gain basic knowledge of food groups, good health habits and simple cooking skills," said Mrs. Colardo.

The idea for the Cooperative Adventures in Nutrition began six years ago when Mrs. Tschetter was working with a group of Future Homemakers of America (FHA) students who were part of a food service class. "The group wanted to put on a Halloween party from some children. I contacted the elementary school located near Rose and inquired about the kindergarten classes. I was put in contact with the developmental kindergarten teacher, who immediately responded with enthusiasm," said Mrs. Tschetter.

"Project CAN is an added bonus to both programs. Mrs. Colardo and I try to integrate the project on a monthly or bimonthly basis — working around all of the other scheduled school events plus our respective curriculum requirements," said Mrs. Tschetter.

The FHA students prepare in their classroom cookies relevant in shape for the respective holiday: for example, pumpkin cookies made from real pumpkin and decorated creatively with jack-o-lantern faces for Halloween.

"As a part of these parties FHA students would plan a relevant activity for the younger children to participate in using motor skills — Halloween puppets made of felt. The FHA group would cut out and partially sew them together. The kindergarten children would complete the puppets by gluing necessary pieces together. On Valentine's Day, the older students cut out heart shapes and then guided the elementary children on a one-to-one basis in completing their Valentine. At Easter, similar things were done, this time using sheep and other Easter signs," Mrs. Tschetter said.

"Funding for the special activities throughout the year for the two groups is generated through catering activities by the vocational students at the Blue Rose Cafe held at Rose High School," said Mrs. Tschetter.

Special plans involving both groups this month will include a barbecue including games and with prizes at a local park and a possible pizza bash.

Exemplary features of the award-winning programs will be covered in a series of workshops for educators planned as the second phase of the project. Mrs. Tschetter and Mrs. Colardo will be going to Sale Lake City, Utah, July 17 in conjunction with the FHA National Leadership Conference and Dec. 8 in Atlanta, Ga., in conjunction with the AVA convention. Their award will be presented in Washington May 22-23.

The Salad Scene Undergoing Revolution

By CONNOISSEUR
A Hearst Magazine

Toss those old formulas for salad out the window along with the iceberg lettuce and join the salad revolution.

Blow away the froth of fads and crazes, says an article in the May issue of Connoisseur, and you will find the choice and treatment of salad greens is changing.

Some adventuresome folks have given up lettuce entirely, but more common is the switch from iceberg to more exotic varieties.

There is a literature of salad, going back in English to 1699 and John Evelyn's "Acetaria, A Discourse of Sallets" (available from the University Press of Virginia), in which the author talks about the frugal French and Italians who gather ingredients so that "every Hedge" can yield a salad.

"See what the Italians and French do" and "look in the hedgerows" are also the mottos of today's salad experimenters.

Evelyn lists 73 salad ingredients, including new wave "discoveries" such as oak-leaf lettuce, purslane and rocket.

To find out what was new one the salad front, author Alan Davidson visited 14 cities, using as his standard of comparison a salad of purslane and flowers such as nasturtium, pot marigold and borage flowers created by Joy Larkcom, the English author of "The Salad Garden," who grows her own outside Cambridge.

Among the trend-setters was Donna Jean Zentner of Seattle's Cafe Optimum, who uses flowers such as pinks, violas, evening primrose and candytuft to set off 28 different kinds of greens.

A typical Zentner salad might include lacy and delicate sweet cicely; small, purple anise hyssop; sorrel; spicy arugula and curly sea kale. Other ingredients might include spinach, bibb lettuce or purslane, a flower such as candytuft and a sprinkling of chopped herbs such as variegated mint or lemon balm.

In Berkeley, Calif., Alice Waters of the Chez Panisse restaurant, and her grower, Andrea Crawford, favor a curly endive called frisee de Louviers, red salad-bowl lettuce, rocket and curled chevril. Small seeded mache, a salad corn, is intersown with bronze-leaved mignonette.

Their salads always include a bed of mesclun, a Provençal mixture that includes rocket, dandelion and baby lettuce, into which Crawford mixes rocket, red oak-leaf lettuce and at least four other ingredients. Mesclun has Italian counterparts such as the Roman misticezza, made from at least seven wild greens.

In an ideal world, greens should be picked just before being tossed into a salad, but most ingredients will keep if treated properly.

Handle greens as little and as gently as possible. Rinse them and briefly shake or spin nearly dry. Refrigerate them while still dewy in a well-packed bag. Keep storage time to a minimum, particularly for the delicate new colored lettuces.

For salad dressing, it is hard to improve on the classic vinaigrette: three parts olive oil to one part vinegar, with top quality extra virgin olive oil well worth the price.

To add a Greek touch, Connoisseur suggests substituting lemon juice for vinegar. Garlic lovers will want to rub the salad bowl with garlic.

(The best way to insure getting the salad greens you want is to grow your own. A mesclun collection of 10 unusual lettuce seeds complete with growing instructions is available for $17 — from Pamela Krausmann's Notebooks, 496 LaGuardia Place, Dept. 183, New York, NY 10012.)

POUR A WINE GLASS
GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Want to make a wine glass?

Just pour a chemical solution into a mold, add water and take the glass out of the mold.

That is the easy method reported by researchers at the University of Florida, who use a relatively inexpensive solution, tetramethoxysilane. It is poured into a mold and water is added as a catalyst. This avoids the high-temperature furnaces normally used to make glass.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

Give Boyfried A July 4 Deadline

DEAR ABBY: All the employees of the restaurant where I recently took a job as cashier went to a nightclub to celebrate the birthdays of those of us who were born in March.

First a young girl came out and did a singing telegram number that turned out to be a striptease, but that wasn't too bad. Then a man ran out on the stage wearing a false face mask with long gray hair attached to it. He danced around, removing first his mask, next his shirt, then his shoes and socks. Then he took off his trousers, revealing a pair of shorts on which was printed some vulgar messages. He continued his dancing, left the stage and came out into the audience making a lot of sexy movements, twisting his buttocks in everybody's face. Pretty soon he was down to a G-string, and when that came off he was bare naked except for a garter around his neck!

Abby, I've been married for 18 years, and the only man I've ever seen naked was my husband.

If I had been told what was coming and asked if I wanted to leave, I would have left, but I had to sit there for the whole show, which lasted 30 minutes. The entire audience was laughing and screaming. I wanted to crawl into a hole.

What are my constitutional rights? At least movies are rated so people know what to expect. Why not nightclub entertainment?

DISGUSTED IN ILLINOIS

DEAR DISGUSTED: Minors are protected under the law, but it is assumed that adults go to such clubs know what kind of entertainment to expect.

The moment you felt uncomfortable, you had a constitutional right to walk out.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I have been living together for the last year. Before we lived together, my parents offered to pay the entire cost of our wedding. We are being married soon and have started to make the final arrangements, but their offer has not been mentioned again.

What is the tradition regarding who pays for the wedding? And does living together change the rules?

CURIOUS BRIDE-TO-BE

DEAR CURIOUS: Traditionally, the bride's parents pay for the wedding, but there are not "rules" that obligate them to do so. (It's a gift.)

Traditionally, the couple wait until after they are married to live together, so possibly your parents broke with the tradition of paying for your wedding because you and your fiance broke with tradition by living together. I suggest you discuss this with your parents.

DEAR ABBY: I have been going with this guy for eight years. He lives with his mother and I have never met her. They live on the other side of town, and I have never even seen his house.

He gave me a ring four years ago, but I am beginning to wonder if that means anything. I am not getting any younger and neither is he. I want to get married, but I don't want to lose him by being too pushy.

Have you any advice for me?

NOT PUSHY

DEAR NOT: Unless you want to wait around for another eight years, my advice for you is to give this man a deadline. Tell him that if there are no definite plans for marriage by July 4th, he can have his ring, and you can both declare your independence. Then you might see some fireworks!

Bridal Policy

A black and white glossy five by seven photograph is requested for engagement announcements in The Daily Reflector. For publication in a Sunday edition, the information must be submitted by 12 noon on the preceding Wednesday. Engagement pictures must be released at least three weeks prior to the wedding date. After three weeks, only an announcement will be printed.

Wedding write-ups will be printed through the first week with a one column picture. During the second week, a one column picture will be used with a write-up giving less description and after the second week, just as an announcement.

Wedding forms and pictures should be returned to The Daily Reflector one week prior to the date of the wedding. All information should be typed or written neatly.

Cooking Is Fun

CHILI PLUS

3½-ounce package chili mix, see Note

4-ounce can chopped green chilies, undrained

10½-ounce can red kidney beans, undrained

17-ounce can whole kernel corn, drained

Shredded sharp cheddar cheese

Hot corn bread

Make up chili mix according to package directions. (You'll need to have on hand the 2 pounds beef and 8-ounce can tomato sauce called for.) Add green chilies, kidney beans and corn; stir well and reheat. Serve in wide soup bowls; pass cheese and corn bread. Makes 2 generous quarts.

Note: The chili mix we used contains ground chili pepper, masa flour, comino-oregano, salt, onion, garlic, red pepper and paprika.

PRESERVING FOOD

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — Thousands of years ago, man learned to preserve food through natural fermentation processes. The Egyptians discovered that certain yeasts could leaven bread dough.

Today, using modern biotechnology procedures, scientists have developed yeasts with a great capacity to produce protein. To help meet the demands of many countries unable to supply their own, Provesta Corp. has a proprietary yeast fermentation process that produces high-quality protein.

Called Provesteen, it is used as an animal feed ingredient and eventually may be suitable for the human market.

Tradition

The annual Jefferson-Jackson Day gathering of Democrats stirs juices even at a distance. The occasion has become a traditional one renewing old ties under the guise of assessing the past and charting the future.

Participants share some points in common: they are first and foremost bemused by the political world; all have known ambition; all have shared in campaigns against the common foe and for the common good.

By April's end the symptoms of combat fatigue have been replaced by new stirrings of the "have-at-'em" spirit and optimism has again reared its head.

They have fun and games, too.

Some points were made in Raleigh. For instance, ex-Gov. Dan Moore said Democratic leaders need to make their beliefs and accomplishments better known. It's true. Memories of goals and shortfalls over the past 16 years in the North Carolina Mansion are still there but the average Tar Heel is pretty much in the dark as to party traditions extending further into the past.

Traditions are an important factor in political life. Centers of attention at the J&J affair were loyalists with years in public service ... with new laurels won. We'd think recognition and encouragement were also due those who won their spurs in the recent elections. The rising stars are entitled to a special salute in light of those other setbacks the party suffered. Such things inspire loyalty.

It was neither the time nor place for possible candidates to air their plans. In some cases it was too early. This was a social affair; time enough for announcements in the months to come.

The Raleigh affair also had something of added value. An up-to-date authority on tax reform (Sen. Bill Bradley of N.J.) conducted a seminar on a subject close to his heart ... one more field in which office holders and aspirants must have more than passing knowledge.

Turnabout

If they were hungry, they might have been there. The folks from the city, that is, that didn't show for a recent conference on "Urban America's Stake in the National Farm Crisis."

The conference was billed as a chance for city and country to connect, an opportunity for rural and urban interests to recognize their common stake in solving America's farm crisis — but almost nobody from the city showed up.

The conference was organized by lawmakers in Washington and the Fund for New Priorities in America, a group that organizes discussion forums on public issues. It featured an agricultural brain trust that discussed the financial problems of farmers, possible solutions, and what the situation means at the supermarket. Organizers were disappointed, they said, at the poor turnout.

The real issue the nation is dealing with may not be the plight of America's farmers but rather the lack of concern by those who depend on America's farmers for sustenance. Their apathy over farm issues may contribute to their own demise — through higher prices, ignorance, and perhaps even hunger and bad nutrition.

When federal tax dollars pulled New York City from its financial quagmire a decade ago, those tax dollars came from both rural and urban areas. In 1975 the city had to convince Washington it would be a disaster for the entire nation, not just for New York, if the city went bankrupt. In 1985, the same message must get to urban residents concerning agriculture.

What it boils down to is that if their stomachs were growling, they'd care. Where were the folks from the city when the conference was going on? Maybe they were at the grocery store buying dinner.

Drug's Uses Are Two-Fold

RALEIGH — If you're a cancer patient, then the drug dilaudid can be a godsend. If you're a drug pusher, then dilaudid is as good as a personal diamond mine.

Dilaudid is a painkilling drug. Physicians prescribe it for patients in severe pain because, like morphine, it is both powerful and capable of interrupting pain. Many other painkillers must be administered before the onset of pain. Dilaudid can be administered after someone is already in extreme pain.

For drug pushers and junkies, dilaudid is also a wonderful replacement for heroin, witnesses told a recent meeting of the Senate's Judiciary II Committee. Junkies like it because it is safe. A junkie knows what's in a dilaudid tablet. He can't ever be sure of what he's getting when he buys heroin. Pushers like it because it's tremendously profitable and not very risky. If they're caught with less than a huge amount of 100 tablets of dilaudid, they're liable for no more than misdemeanor prosecution and a two-year prison term.

The laxity of that criminal sentence is what has the Legislature talking about dilaudid. Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, has introduced a bill that would make illegal possession of dilaudid a felony. The Judiciary Committee has been studying the bill to make sure that it would do nothing to hamper the use of the drug for legitimate medical purposes.

Dilaudid is not widely available in North Carolina. Lt. Bob Stacy of the Gaston County Police Department reported that the drug is a problem in geographic pockets: Gaston County, around Asheville and around Fayetteville. Law enforcement officers in some parts of North Carolina haven't even heard of the drug, Stacy told the committee.

But in Gaston County, folks know all about dilaudid. Stacy reported that addiction to the drug has created a major crime problem. He studied arrest reports and found that in 21 percent of the larceny casts, 57 percent of the robbery cases, 60 percent of the forgery cases and 45 percent of the stolen property casts, the arrested person was a known dilaudid addict.

Frank Edwards, a Gaston drug rehabilitation worker, said dilaudid is a $15 million business in the county. When junkies have to raise that kind of money to pay for their drug, they have to steal and shoplift goods with a much higher value.

But despite the terrible consequences of the drug, there is little police can do to the pushers, Stacy said. Rarely does a pusher have more than 15 pills in any one spot — so prosecution for a felony is impossible. It's also very hard to catch the pushers. Junkies usually buy the pills one or two at a time. The pushers usually require them to crush up the pills in water and inject the drug into their bodies before leaving. (The drug is also being used in conjunction with cocaine by some junkies.)

Dilaudid is quite profitable for the dealer. A drug store can buy a pill for 25 cents and sell it as part of a prescription for about 50 cents. Pushers will sell the same pill for about $50, Stacy said.

No one seems to know why this drug is so peculiar to Gaston County and, to a lesser extent, the other two North Carolina areas. But Stacy and Edwards expressed concern that the dilaudid problem may be spreading to other parts of the state soon. It is already showing up in cities around the country.

The Legislature is almost certain to pass Mrs. Marvin's bill. How could they not after hearing Edwards say, "If we don't do something, we'll wake up one year, three or five years from now, with a serious epidemic on our hands."

Shadows For The President

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bitburg and the budget are shadowing Ronald Reagan as he makes his way through Europe a little more than 100 days after his second inauguration. Add Nicaragua and the slumping American economy and there could be a prescription for a disappointing White House term.

In the past, when trouble lurked about him, Reagan showed a remarkable talent for overcoming it, sometimes by taking a position at variance with his past statements and philosophy.

That's what he may have to do this time in the face of congressional resistance to the White House budget package. A compromise might require cutting defense outlays, which runs against the Reagan grain, taking a smaller slice out of social programs and even raising income taxes, despite his unwavering campaign promise that a boost would be considered only as a last resort.

The American economy is showing signs of a slowdown. Reagan counted on growth to cut the awesome $210 billion federal deficit. But the rate for the first quarter was only 1.3 percent, far below last year's rate of 6.8 percent. That could mean only a tiny increase in federal tax revenues.

But on Bitburg and Nicaragua the current presidential strategy apparently is to tough it out. The president intends to visit the German military cemetery on Sunday where 49 soldiers of the Waffen SS, the combat arm of Adolf Hitler's elite guard, are among the 2,000 buried soldiers.

And on Nicaragua, he has rebounded from congressional rejection of aid for the Contra rebels with an economic battle plan to squeeze the Sandinista government. A total trade embargo and other measures, including a cancellation of landing rights for the Nicaraguan airline Aeronica, is Reagan's way of recovering from his setback on Capitol Hill.

In other words, on Bitburg and on Nicaragua the president is not retreating.

"In the end," said Secretary of State George Shultz the other day of critics of the cemetery visit, "they may wind up admiring the person who stood by his decision."

Henry A. Kissinger, who also supports the president on Bitburg, said "the president's record on the issue of the Holocaust victims is impeccable." With sympathy for the critics, the former secretary of state said cancellation "would do enormous damage to our foreign policy."

But the question arises: Has Reagan done damage to himself?

An overwhelming majority of both the House and Senate registered its opposition to his cemetery visit. Jewish and veterans' organizations urged him to call it off. So did some West Germans.

Reagan may be admired for standing fast.

— Art Buchwald —

Reviewing The President's Films

President Reagan has had a great deal of difficulty in the past few weeks with the history of World War II. His first gaffe was to believe that German and American soldiers were buried in the same cemeteries in Germany and could presumably be honored at the same time. His second one was to say that very few of today's Germans remember the war and certainly none of the adults now living participated in any way. And finally, he really flunked the course when he said the soldiers buried at Bitburg were just as much victims of the war as people who died in the Holocaust.

What is one to make of the president's blunders?

There may be clues in a book titled "The Films of Ronald Reagan" by Tony Thomas, published by Citadel Press (1980).

Despite being under contract to Warner Brothers, Mr. Reagan did not play in as many World War II movies as one might think. Yet his view of the war and the Nazis could easily have been formed by the ones he did appear in.

In 1941 Ronald Reagan went into action for the first time in a film titled "International Squadron." Mr. Reagan played a daredevil American stunt pilot who ferries a bomber to the RAF in England. Once there he witnesses a child killed in an air raid and joins the RAF to get even with the Nazis. But Reagan doesn't take his flying job seriously and while he's messing around with a French pilot's girlfriend he misses a mission. His best friend substitutes for him and is killed.

This sobers him up as far as World War II is concerned. He decides to atone for his tacky behavior by knocking out the French pilot and taking his mission. After shooting down several German fighter planes in a smashing dogfight, Reagan dies a fiery heroic death. The important thing to remember is, while there was lots of talk of German bad guys, Reagan never got to meet one personally in the film.

To my knowledge the only time Ronald Reagan ever came face-to-face with the Nazis was in "Desperate Journey," made in 1942. He co-stars with Errol Flynn as part of the crew of a RAF Flying Fortress. In the film Reagan plays a brash, amusing, irreverent but very brave Yank.

After the RAF plane drops its bombs on Germany it is shot down and the crew are rounded up by a German major (Raymond Massey). The German military in "Desperate Journey" are portrayed not so much as villains as they are bumbling and idiots. (The picture was the "Hogan's Heroes" of its time.) In Reagan's big scene he is being debriefed alone by the major, who thinks the Yank will tell him everything he wants to know about the mission. Instead Ronnie knocks out Massey, and then sits down and eats the major's breakfast.

After this hilarious scene Reagan and the crew find it a breeze to escape and make their way across all of Germany, blowing up half the country with violent acts of sabotage. In a slam-bang finish they manage to steal a German bomber and take off for England with Errol Flynn at the controls. Having wiped out Germany, Flynn turns to Reagan and says, "Now for Australia and a crack at the Japs."

That, as far as I know, was Ronald Reagan's only Hollywood action in the European theater during World War II. He did serve honorably in Burma in "The Hasty Heart," and in the Korean theater in an MGM film titled "Prisoner of War," which was so bad that it is said it hastened Mr. Reagan's decision to go into politics. The president's finest hour was "Hellcats of the Navy," in which Reagan was cast as a naval commander on a sub in the Pacific who wreaks havoc on the Japanese fleet. Not only did Mr. Reagan win the war, but he also won the girl, a nurse played by Nancy Davis, who is now our first lady of the land.

I detail the films that Mr. Reagan played in for only one reason. It

To the editor:

Your use of gender in your banner headlines on April 29 was uncalled for and did nothing but promote biased images in the minds of readers. It was a careless discredit to all the many fine men who serve our community as nurses.

Men in nursing have worked long and hard to promote our image and gain acceptance within the profession and with the public. Like other nurses in our community, we are appalled and saddened by the incident which has occurred. All of us within the health field are deeply affected by the incident.

However, your use of "Male Nurses" in the headlines places an unjust aura of suspect or shared guilt on all men in nursing. We are proud of our profession, our commitment to our patients, and our community. We deserve better from the paper that represents that community.

Art Schneider, RN

appears the President's Hollywood war record, while distinguished, certainly did not prepare him in any way or shape for the 40th anniversary of the end of hostilities with Nazi Germany. It also might explain why Mr. Reagan is so ignorant of World War II history. Even a bit part in "The Battle of the Bulge" would have made him realize that visiting a German military cemetery where SS soldiers are buried is just not the right thing for an American President to do.

Strength For Today

Two hundred and forty-eight years ago the great Stradivarius died. When he passed away, in 1737, he had reached the ripe old age of 93. He was the greatest maker of violins the world has seen. His output was said to have been over 1,100 instruments, of which 540 violins, 12 violas and 50 cellos are actually known today. He was believed to be very rich. Tall, gaunt, and of few words, he lived humbly and generally went about in a workman's apron. To this day no one has been able to discover what made his instruments the best that ever came from human hands. Stradivarius and his violins constitute a noble example of a job well done. Modern man, with all his skill, cannot make violins like he did. He put something of skill and care into his work which no one can copy.

He found his career not in playing violins but in making them.

Legislature Gets Bill Allowing State To Claim Ill-Gotten Gains

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Jewels, precious metals and real estate purchased with the profits of crime could be used to fund education, law enforcement and crime victims under a bill backed by Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

"If we're going to give any real meaning to the idea that crime doesn't pay, then you have to take strong steps to take the profit out of crime," Thornburg said Thursday at a news conference announcing the bill filed by Reps. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee and H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham. "If they get caught, they just take this as being the cost of doing business."

"They serve their time and they have that profit and that gain to enjoy," said Wicker. "They feel it is worth their time in prison to come out and enjoy the fruits of their crimes."

The Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, called RICO for short, would provide a civil path to recover property purchased with ill-gotten gains. Thornburg said that would be easier than criminal action because the burden of proof is lower in civil action.

If law enforcement agencies recover the property, 10 percent would go to the county board of education, 5 percent to the state Board of Education and the rest to a special law-enforcement fund, Wicker said.

Thornburg said state law already provides for forfeiture of property in some felonies and drug cases but "does not give us the means to get at the big pot."

"Racketeering activity" under the bill includes "any act or threat involving murder, kidnapping, gambling, arson, robbery, theft, receipt of stolen property, bribery, extortion, obstruction of justice, dealing in narcotic or dangerous drugs, including counterfeits thereof, or dealing in securities which is chargeable under the laws of the United States or any of the several states and which is punishable by imprisonment for more than one year."

Wicker said North Carolina would join 21 other states with the law, making the state eligible to share proceeds from interstate crime.

Thornburg said his office might need two additional people to implement the program but added, "We would expect the recoveries to far outdistance any expense we might incur."

In other legislative action:

Legislative budget leaders say they will look closely at overtime pay for state workers in light of a court mandate that it be awarded without undue delay.

State Budget Director C.C. Cameron said he and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg were among agency directors called together to brief lawmakers about the impact of the ruling that states must conform with federal laws on overtime.

The briefing was called by Appropriations Co-chairmen Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville and Sen. Aaron Plyler, D-Union.

"Billy Watkins and Plyler pointed out, with the governor and legislature both desiring to provide some tax relief and with the objective to continue on providing services ... that the Appropriations Committee was going to have to really tighten down on overtime," Cameron said.

While figures for the current year were not available, Cameron said in 1983-84 the state paid $7,418,482 in overtime. He estimated another $15.8 million was given as compensatory time off.

"We now have to tell all of our people on an 8 to 5 schedule ... that you go home every day at 5 o'clock unless you've got something critical you're working on," Cameron said. "We can't operate going forward like we have been. We all are going to have to tighten the belt."

Cameron said hospital workers, law enforcement officers, prison guards and firefighters would be among those who might have to sell the need for overtime to the Appropriations Committee.

The sponsor of a bill to let the state Department of Transportation authorize the use of double-trailers on state roads said he would amend the bill to limit DOT's authority.

Rep. David Bumgardner, D-Gaston, told the House Transportation Committee he would prepare an amendment that would allow DOT to authorize the use of the double-trailers only on connector and access roads.

"If the federal government decides to remove some sections (currently approved for twin-trailers), then the state needs the authority to re-route those trucks on state-designated roads," Bumgardner said.

His bill ran into opposition last week when DOT officials said they had been contacted by industries who wanted a number of state roads designated for twin-trailers.

The federal government, which ordered twin-trailers to be allowed on interstate and federal primary roads in January 1983, is now reevaluating some of those roads for safety hazards.

Bumgardner said U.S. 74, which runs through downtown Charlotte, is designated as a twin-trailer route. If the section through Charlotte is removed, he said, the state needs to designate another route around the city to link Asheville and Wilmington.

A bill that would keep "ordinary pocket knives" from being considered concealed weapons was pulled off the Senate floor after an amendment was offered that would include weapon-like tools in the exemption.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said his amendment would keep linoleum installers, farmers and others who use large pocket knives in their work from being arrested for carrying a concealed weapon while at work, or on their way to or from work.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, asked if the amendment would apply to barbers carrying straight razors or to workmen who stopped "for a little drinking and dancing activity" on the way home from work.

Winner asked that the bill and the amendment be withdrawn until Monday so he could refine the amendment.

A bill that would change the Easter Monday holiday to the Friday before Easter was approved in the Senate and now moves to the House.

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, said North Carolina is the only state that observes Easter Monday, creating a hardship for businesses with offices in other states that observe Good Friday.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, urged the Senate to kill the bill, saying it would harm merchants who depend on Easter Monday sales.

"Easter Monday has become quite a tradition in North Carolina," Taft said. "The merchants tell me Easter Monday is their best sales day in April."

Senate OKs Change For School Official

RALEIGH (AP) — The Senate has approved a bill calling for a referendum to make the superintendent of public instruction an appointed official, while a committee considered a sales tax increase to finance school construction.

"This bill is not the result of something moving too fast," Sen. Bob Warren, D-Johnston, said Thursday before the Senate approved the superintendent referendum. "It has been discussed for several years, probably 10 or more. We have had and continue to have good education, but this bill just removes the opportunity for that not to be the case."

"We're seen as a model (for administering education) that's respected all over the country," said Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, one of four senators to vote against the referendum. "My feeling is this is an area that has worked well."

Under the bill, which moves to the House after winning final Senate approval 42-4, voters would be asked to approve a constitutional amendment in November 1986 that would change the composition of the state school board and allow the school board to appoint a superintendent.

Under the present system, the superintendent is elected statewide, with all but two members of the school board appointed by the governor. Supporters of the referendum say that system has the potential for chaos because the superintendent, who carries out education policy, is not answerable to the school board, which sets policy.

Under the bill, the governor would appoint eight members of the school board, with one coming from each of the state's education regions. Four members would be appointed by the Legislature and the lieutenant governor and state treasurer would round out the board.

Rotating four-year terms proposed in the bill would assure a governor control of the board during his first term.

Meanwhile, the Senate Education Committee considered a bill by Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, the committee chairman, that would raise the sales tax by one-half cent, with the funds earmarked for construction of school buildings.

Winner said the sales tax increase would raise about $175 million a year, which would be matched with about $50 million in county funds to build schools.

He said estimates of school needs in the state amount to $2.2 billion, far more than could be raised either by counties or by bond referendums.

"I think, realistically, in 15 years the schools we need could be built under this bill," Winner said. "To my knowledge, nobody has ever offered a plan that sees the end to this problem (of inadequate schools)."

He said he believed the sales tax increase could win public support, even with the mood for tax reductions.

Capitol Magazine Explores Senators' Traits, Habits

By The Associated Press
While Sen. Ted Kennedy likes to make animal noises while talking to children on the phone, the conservatism of North Carolina's senators is reflected in their personal likes and dislikes, a Washington magazine says.

Sen. Jesse Helms is a preppie whose hero is President Thomas Jefferson. Sen. John East is a square whose idea of fun is sipping a glass of orange juice and attending concerts.

That and more information on North Carolina's two Republican senators can be found in the Washington Dossier, a magazine of capital politics. The latest issue, which will soon hit the streets, explores the likes, dislikes and the eccentricities of the nation's 100 senators.

Helms and his aides said the three-term senator's favorite book is the "Gulag Archipelago," about life in the Soviet prison system. Ice cream is his favorite snack. His grandchildren are his favorite hobby.

Besides orange juice and concerts, East loves swimming. He said his worst habit is being "too tidy."
The article also provides an insider's look into the private personalities of other senators: Lawton Childs of Florida eats turnips for snacks. Bob Dole of Kansas drinks champagne on ice. Paul Sarbanes of Maryland is more conservative than East in beverage selection if not politics: His favorite beverage is ice water.

Bill Bradley of New Jersey, billed as a future Democratic presidential candidate, loves the TV show "Punky Brewster." His favorite diversion is rock star Bruce Springsteen. And John Glenn of Ohio has a pet chipmunk.

Kitty Chism, manager editor of Washington Dossier, said finding out the details of the senators' private likes and dislikes didn't come easily.
"We sent a reporter out who talked to press secretaries and the senators themselves in some cases," she said. "At other times, we would go to the senator's wife or closest friends. We were just trying to find out the human side: how they like their coffee, what they consider their bad habits."

Gov. Martin Opts To Keep Day Care As Is

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he has been pressed to take a stand on consolidating the state's day care operations, so he wants the operations to remain in separate agencies.

"I know there's been discussion over the past year about this, but that's not been my crusade," Martin said Thursday at his weekly news conference. When pressed to take a position on something he doesn't feel strongly about, "I generally will favor not making a change if there's no case that compels me to favor making a change," he said.

"Up until a week ago, I was perfectly content to let that question be resolved by people who feel more strongly about it," Martin said. But lawmakers who disagree about whether the Office of Day Care Licensing and the Office of Day Care Services should be in a single department "weren't happy with my allowing them to thrash that out and said 'no, you've got to take a position,'" said Martin.

"So, the position I have now taken is, leave it like it is, with the regulatory licensing function in the Department of Administration and the funding responsibilities ... in the Department of Human Resources, and let's see how well we can work out those problems over the next two years."

On Wednesday, Sen. Charles Higgs, D-Haywood, chairman of the Senate Children and Youth Committee, warned that failing to consolidate the two offices could jeopardize chances for improving day-care standards.

Failure to reorganize the program would endanger a bill before the Joint Appropriations Committee to upgrade day-care standards, which is dependent on reorganization to delay its $500,000 cost, Higgs said.

N.C. Winery Wins International Award

By The Associated Press
Tobacco farmers looking for relief may want to consider turning to wine — not drinking it, but growing grapes for the spirit, an award-winning North Carolina winemaker says.

"Before the War Between the States, we were the largest wine-producing state in the United States," said David Fussell of Duplin Wine Cellars in Rose Hill, which won a gold medal in an international competition in Spain for the overall quality of its wines.

"With the tobacco problems, our farmers need an alternative crop," Fussell said. "Hopefully, maybe we can develop the wine business so that grape growing can once again become an agribusiness within the state."

Although North Carolina wines may not have the snob appeal of other domestic and foreign varieties, they're just as good, Fussell said.
"We've had a serious problem in that in the past 50 years, the French have advertised that they make the only good wines," he said. "And in the past 20 years, California has been saying that they make good wines, too. The public looks upon our wines as inferior, but they're not. ... In blind testings, we usually come out pretty doggone good."

North Carolina's six wineries do not try to imitate wines from other states or countries, he said.

"There's a lot of snobbery associated with the wine industry," he said. "And this snobbery has been detrimental for small, young companies like us to break into the business."

The winery learned last week that Duplin Wine Cellars had received a gold medal in a competition sponsored by Oro Verdo, a European wine and spirits magazine. The award will be awarded June 12 in Madrid.

"The significance of this honor is enhanced by the distinguished nature of the competition," the letter of notification read. "Wines from 117 wineries located in 29 countries were judged for this event."
Fussell said he was surprised by the recognition.

"I don't see why we don't win more gold medals due to the fact that North Carolina can produce some of the finest grapes in the country," Fussell said.

Fussell chose the three wines to enter: a 1983 Magnolia, made from native North Carolina magnolia grapes; a 1983 Sparkling Scuppernon, which Fussell said is the oldest champagne made in the United States; and a bottle of Scuppernon brandy.

"I chose those three products because they were different from everybody else's," Fussell said in a recent telephone interview. "Nobody else makes these products. I thought that might gain their attention, and evidently, it did."

Duplin Wine Cellars had its first commercial grape crush in 1976 and now makes 17 different kinds of wines, Fussell said.

Three State Bikers Held Without Bail

RALEIGH (AP) — Three North Carolina Hells Angels are being held without bond today after FBI agents used a sledgehammer to knock down the door of a "fortress-like" clubhouse and seized drugs and "a roomful of guns," officials said.

The arrests Thursday followed a 2 1/2-year undercover investigation of the Hells Angels that led to charges against 125 people in several states on drug violations and other crimes.

Arrested in the "Roughrider" operation were Lawrence Dean Lenihan, 40, president of the Durham Hells Angels chapter, Phillip Scott Utley, 37, the chapter's vice president, Anthony L. Ganes, 26, a member of the Durham Hells Angels, and Rommie Dale Broadwell, 44, a prospective member of the Durham chapter, Pence said.

Following an appearance Thursday before U.S. Magistrate Russell Elison in U.S. District Court in Winston-Salem, Lenihan, Utley and Broadwell were ordered held without bond pending probable cause hearings scheduled for Tuesday. Ganes was released after posting bond.

Lenihan and Utley were arrested at their Durham homes at the same time federal agents arrested Ganes and Broadwell at the clubhouse.

The only resistance was at the Hells Angels clubhouse, where we had to use a sledgehammer to gain entrance," said FBI Special Agent Robert Pence, chief of the agency's North Carolina operations.

"The clubhouse has a chain link fence with a barbed wire top. It was protected by closed circuit cameras, steel-reinforced doors — somewhat like a fortress — and we had to batter the door down," Pence said. "At the other two locations, the arrests were made peacefully."

Sgt. E.D. Warren, Durham police intelligence officer, said club members could keep watch on those outside the clubhouse with a revolving video camera and with mirrors that were set in trees.

"You couldn't sneak into the place, that's for sure," Warren said.

Utley was charged with narcotics distribution and conspiracy and Lenihan was charged with aiding and abetting distribution of controlled substances, Pence said.

Broadwell was charged with narcotics distribution and conspiracy on warrants issued in Baltimore, Md., Pence said. Ganes was arrested by Durham authorities on charges of sale and possession of stolen property.

Cigarette Tax May Stay Intact

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole said Thursday he would fight efforts to inject the federal cigarette tax into the current budget battle, but predicted it would be hard for Congress to let the tax drop to 8 cents a pack in October as scheduled.

Meanwhile, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.C., said he probably would offer an amendment to cancel the scheduled decrease next week if the Republicans pursue cuts in the federal Medicare program.

Bradley's proposal would allow the cigarette tax to remain at 16 cents per pack. It is one of more than 60 pending amendments of a Senate resolution setting budget targets for cutting the federal deficit.

His proposal doesn't directly earmark the tax for Medicare, but it is considered a first step toward that goal.

"We'd be against that," Dole told reporters for North Carolina newspapers. "You don't start allocating different taxes for different things."

"We're not going to support it."
Dole's comments followed his appearance at a seminar sponsored by Rep. Jim Broyhill, R-N.C., for 140 of Broyhill's constituents.

Under the budget plan proposed by Dole and the Republican leadership, there would be no tax increases. The Republican deficit reduction plan assumes that the cigarette tax reduction would occur as scheduled Oct. 1.

Power Supplies Adequate

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Utilities Commission says electric utilities serving North Carolina will have adequate power supplies through the mid-1990s, but the commission's consumer section says companies must decide soon how to provide adequate supplies into the next century.

"In the near term, there will be sufficient energy to supply the needs of North Carolina," Dennis J. Nightingdale, director of the Public Staff's electric division, said Thursday. "For the long term, we're on the verge of having to determine the need for new generating plants."

The commission issued a forecast earlier this week that concluded that plans by the three major companies serving Tar Heel customers would result in adequate supplies through 1994.

Father Surrenders

RALEIGH (AP) — A man charged with violating a court-ordered custody agreement by taking his 4-year-old daughter to Canada just before Christmas has turned himself over to federal authorities.

Richard Granville Coleman, 49, was arrested this week after returning from Antigonish, Nova Scotia, where he had been living since December. He voluntarily turned himself over to FBI officials in Raleigh, Lt. Earl Floyd of the Wake County Sheriff's Department said.

The warrant states that Coleman took his daughter, Shannon Brooke Coleman, from Cary to Hughesville, Pa., on Dec. 22 with the intent to violate a court order issued last Dec. 17 by District Judge Russell G. Sherrill.

Treatment Recommended

CARY, N.C. (AP) — The board of Capital Health Systems Agency has voted to recommend that the state allow Duke University Medical Center to use a lithotripter to treat patients with kidney stones.

The machine, which would cost Duke $2.1 million, uses shock waves to crush kidney stones into sand-sized particles that are then passed out in the patient's urine.

Leap Second Necessary

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A leap second will be added to the clock this summer, says Dr. Lee Shapiro, director of the Morehead Planetarium at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

"According to the International Astronomical Union Circular, the leap second will be added at midnight between June 30 and July 1," he said. "It is necessary to occasionally add a leap second because the Earth's rate of spin is not a permanent constant and we now have clocks capable of measuring the difference."

Although the change is very small, official time keepers have to add leap seconds, Shapiro said.

"If they did not do this, after 10,000 to 20,000 years, we might have our clocks reading noon just as the sun was rising," he said.

Internist Elected

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Hendersonville internist Kenneth E. Cosgrove was elected president of the North Carolina Medical Society at the society's annual meeting Thursday.

Cosgrove has been in private practice in Hendersonville since 1953. Cosgrove has served as a councilor, commissioner and first vice president of the Medical Society, which represents two-thirds of the state's licensed physicians.

Assistant Secretary Named

RALEIGH (AP) — Elaine Stoops of Greensboro has been appointed assistant secretary of the North Carolina Division of Aging, Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk announced Thursday.

Mrs. Stoops, whose appointment takes effect May 20, replaces Ernest Messer, who has served in the position since Nov. 1, 1981, and will remain with the division until May 31.

Mrs. Stoops, 60, is the in-home services director of United Services of Older Adults, a private, non-profit organization in Greensboro.

A nursing educator, Mrs. Stoops spent several years as director of the Duke University employees' clinic and as a medical-surgical instructor at Duke's School of Nursing.

New Trial Ordered

WILLIAMSTON, N.C. (AP) — A Robersonville man serving an 18-year sentence for armed robbery won a new trial Thursday after two other men convicted in the theft testified that Thompson was not at the robbery.

Superior Court Judge Thomas S. Watts set aside the conviction of James Edward Thompson and set bond at $25,000 pending a new trial.

District Attorney Mitchell D. Norton of the 2nd Judicial District said he did not know when Thompson would be tried.

Thompson was expected to post bond and be freed today. "I'm glad the truth came out," he said after the hearing. "I'm just thrilled that they told the truth."

Thompson, 32, referred to the testimony of Roosevelt Howell and James Ivory Stanley, both of Bethel, who was convicted with him of the armed robbery Feb. 10, 1983, of an Oak City liquor store.

Howell, 36, and Stanley, 25, both testified Thursday that Thompson was not with them that day and that the third robber was Hilton Ray Reddick, 34, who is serving a prison sentence in Virginia on unrelated convictions.

At the time of the Oak City robbery, Reddick was wanted on a fugitive warrant from Connecticut. In early March 1983, Virginia court records show, Reddick robbed five Virginia Beach businesses with a sawed-off shotgun. He pleaded guilty to those crimes and is serving 18 years for armed robbery.

Writing Program Begins

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A major five-year training program designed to make teachers — and students — in the Charlotte-Mecklenburg County schools better writers begins today, officials say.

The program, a cooperative effort with the University of North Carolina at Charlotte's English department and College of Education, stems from the state's first writing test last year which showed public schools were doing a poor job teaching students to write.

Search Called Off

SURF CITY, N.C. (AP) — Three Marines and three youngsters are believed to be "missing at sea" after the search for them was called off, authorities said.

"We're calling off the search ... pending further developments," Coast Guard Lt. Allen Black said Thursday night in a telephone interview from the Coast Guard office in Portsmouth, Va.

The halt to the search came one day after a boat and four life jackets were found. Coast guard officials said the discovery of the jackets and the cauzed boat used by the boaters dimmed the chances they were still alive.

The 15-foot, blue-gray Glastron bass boat belonging to one of the missing Marines washed ashore near a Surf City fishing pier. A few miles offshore, searchers found the life jackets, an ice chest, two baseball caps and a white seat cushion, Coast Guard Petty Officer Paul Borden said.

The missing include the boat's owner, Sgt. Jerome Pennington of Headquarters & Supply Company, 2nd Battalion, 6th Marines. Also missing are Sgt. Reed Rudolph Jr. and his three children, David, 3, Reed, 6, and Tywanda, 8, and Lance Cpl. Daniel E. Fuchu Jr. Rudolph and Fuchu are with the 2nd Assault Amphibian Battalion, 2nd Marine Division.

Gunnery Sgt. John Simmons of Camp Lejeune's Joint Public Affairs Office said the group launched the boat at 10 a.m. Sunday from the Courthouse Bay Marina on base.

Brain-Damaged Boy Gets $3.5 Million

By The Associated Press
A North Carolina jury has awarded $3.5 million to an 11-year-old Baytown, Texas, boy who has been brain-damaged and must wear diapers because of a childhood immunization.

The jury in Wilmington found that the child, Bernard "Beau" Forehand Jr., was healthy before twice receiving a diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus vaccine as an infant.

The $3.5 million award was assessed earlier this week against Washington physicians David Tayloe and Thomas Stallings, the Houston Chronicle reported.

The DPT vaccine is given to prevent diphtheria, tetanus and pertussis, commonly called whooping cough. The anti-pertussis serum has been criticized for possibly causing brain damage and other complications in some instances.

The boy's parents, Janis and Bernard Forehand Sr., said that after their son received his first DPT vaccine in 1974, he had periodic "screaming fits" for two days. The infant also ran a 103-degree fever and made jerking movements while sleeping.

The couple's attorney, Anne Werum Lambright, of Charleston, W. Va., said the family pediatrician said the boy's symptoms were "probably colic."

At around age 4 months, Bernard Jr. was given another DPT shot and started suffering seizures shortly afterward. He has been brain damaged since then, must wear diapers and can only say, "Howdy," the attorney said.

The attorney said the doctor recorded the symptoms observed shortly after the second shot on medical record as a "probable DPT reaction." But when Mrs. Forehand asked the doctor whether the shot was the cause of her son's problems, the physician said the state of North Carolina would not require a doctor to administer an unsafe shot, Ms. Lambright said.

The Forehand case is the third DPT malpractice lawsuit to be tried in the country, Ms. Lambright said. One other lawsuit has been tried against the DPT manufacturer, though as many as 10 others may have been settled out of court, says Lambright, who has been specializing in DPT lawsuits since the first verdict was returned two years ago.

The American Medical Association maintains that a severe reaction occurs in only 1 in 100,000 children, about 43 reactions a year nationwide.

Before the vaccine was developed, as many as 7,000 infants a year died from whooping cough.

"It's rare, but I don't think anybody really knows how many children are affected," said Ms. Lambright. "Many parents don't know what caused their child to have problems, or they're told it was congenital."

Blood Donor Test Results Being Held

RALEIGH (AP) — Although the Red Cross in North Carolina has begun testing its inventory for the AIDS virus, the organization has not informed donors whose blood shows exposure to the disease, a spokeswoman said.

The Red Cross began testing its inventory the first week of April, but the organization will not begin notifying donors whose blood contains the virus until late this summer, said Martha Sellers, associate director of communications for the Carolinas Regional Blood Services of the Red Cross. The region includes 53 North Carolina counties and three in South Carolina.

One of the reasons for the delay is that the Red Cross is waiting for the state to begin an AIDS virus testing program for people who may not want to give blood but want to have the test, Ms. Sellers said.

"We don't want people to come in and donate blood who just want to get test results," she said.

The Sexually Transmitted Diseases Branch in the N.C. Division of Health Services hopes to have the testing available at county health departments by early May, said Frankie Barnes, education specialist with STD.

The test will be free and anonymous, Barnes said.

Those who have the test done will be assigned a number, he said. To get the results, they must bring the number to the health department, he said. No results will be given out over the phone.

The program will be funded by the Centers for Disease Control, Barnes said.

Ms. Sellers said she did not know how much of the Carolinas Red Cross inventory had been tested for AIDS, but said she expected the entire inventory to be tested within three months.

The group also is awaiting the development of a confirmatory test for the AIDS virus, before releasing results to donors, she said.

The blood enzyme test given now "is not a diagnostic tool," she said. "It's very accurate to screen of blood for the presence of the antibody, which may indicate prior exposure to AIDS. It does not mean that the person carries AIDS, has AIDS, or will develop AIDS."

A confirmatory test called the Western Blot test, which is not commercially available yet, "would be more specific if you have a positive reading," Ms. Sellers said.

Challenger Enters Second Half Of Flight

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger's astronauts sailed into the second half of their space science mission today, with a spinning ball of cellophane symbolizing their success in fixing and operating experiments that are yielding a wealth of research knowledge.

The one-inch ball, twirled by sound waves echoing through a chamber, calibrated a fluids experiment which two hours before had been considered dead. It had been revived by 2½ days of intense troubleshooting on the ground and some handyman electrical work by astronaut Taylor Wang.

"It's working, it's working!" the Chinese-born Wang exclaimed late Thursday after power surged to an instrument called the Drop Dynamics Module.

"When it came on, you've never seen such joy on anyone's face," said astronaut Don Lind, a shuttle crewmate.

A television picture of the rotating sphere was being relayed as Challenger passed the halfway point of the seven-day mission early today. It marked a smooth start to the downhill leg.

Twelve of 15 experiments were operating, many of them rescued from the brink of failure by crew repairs. Two of the three failed instruments produced valuable data before they gave out.

Research today concentrated on materials and fluids processing, medicine and observation of the two monkeys and 24 rats on board. Commander Bob Overmyer said the seven-man crew was geared for maximum output in the final days of the journey, which ends Monday at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

"Everyone is really super," Overmyer said.

Wang, a physicist, had worked nine years to develop his instrument and get it approved for space flight. He labored into his sleep hours each night early in the flight to try to isolate an electrical problem, finally tracing it to a power supply panel. He fixed the faulty circuit by rerouting some wires.

Wang inserted the hollow cellophane sphere in the acoustical chamber, suspended it in weightlessness and demonstrated how well he could control its motion by manipulating sound waves of variable frequency and amplitude.

"Fabulous," he said.

Later today, Wang was to begin inserting droplets of liquid into the chamber to test theories of containerless processing that could lead to purer metals and chemicals for industrial purposes.

"We're in great shape for the remainder of the flight," George Fichtl, ground mission scientist for the Spacelab module in Challenger's cargo bay, said at a news conference Thursday. "We're having a very successful science mission."

Scientists were particularly pleased with three crystal-growing experiments that are taking advantage of weightlessness to produce electronic crystals of a purity and uniformity that is impossible to achieve in the gravity of Earth.

Other experiments include gathering medical, upper atmosphere and astronomical data.

An instrument designed to collect tracings of cosmic rays failed Thursday when a turning mechanism jammed. Because it is located outside the laboratory, the astronauts were not able to get to it for a repair effort.

But Norm Thagard, a physician, and Lodewijk van den Berg, a chemical engineer, were able Thursday to sharply reduce the amount of food particle and feces drops flowing from monkey and rat cages into the laboratory. During the change of food trays, which had triggered the release of wastes earlier, they used plastic bags and a vacuum cleaner to collect most of the debris.

They reported that a monkey which had been ailing appeared to have regained its health.

E.F. Hutton Pleads Guilty To Mail Fraud Accusations

NEW YORK (AP) — E.F. Hutton & Co. Inc.'s chairman says the company unknowingly broke the law when it overdraw its checking accounts, but a Justice Department official says the brokerage firm bullied banks to perpetuate a multimillion-dollar "check kiting" scheme.

Hutton, the brokerage unit of E.F. Hutton Group Inc., said Thursday it had pleaded guilty to 2,000 counts of mail and wire fraud and agreed to pay a $2 million fine. It also agreed to pay $750,000 to cover the cost of the government's investigation.

Between July 1, 1980, and Feb. 28, 1982, Hutton, the nation's fifth-largest brokerage house, wrote checks for $4.3 billion more than it had in bank checking accounts, Justice Department officials said.

The Justice Department said Hutton's daily overdrafts at some times exceeded $250 million.

By shuffling funds from one bank to another the company was able to overdraw its accounts and enjoy what amounted to interest-free loans.

At a news conference in Washington, Attorney General Edwin Meese III said Hutton's guilty plea sends "a message to the business world that so-called white-collar crime ... will not be tolerated." He also said Hutton's scheme amounted to a sophisticated form of "check kiting."

Check kiting refers to the practice of writing a check drawn on an account that does not have sufficient funds to cover it, then depositing a check from another account with insufficient funds to cover the first check, and so on.

But Hutton's chairman, Robert Fomon, denied Meese's charge.

"Check kiting is when a person writes a check and does not have the means and the intention of covering that check; it has to do with intent and ability to cover," Fomon said at a news conference in New York. The Justice Department "went out of their way to make an affirmative statement that E.F. Hutton covered every check it ever wrote," he said.

Albert Murray, the assistant U.S. Attorney in Scranton, Pa., where the charges were filed, said Hutton bullied banks that questioned its practices. The situation first came to the attention of authorities in Pennsylvania.

"It was sort of like, 'When E.F. Hutton talks, the banks listen,'" said Murray, who spent 18 months on the case. "E.F. Hutton, based upon its corporate integrity, was able to conduct this scheme. And when anyone questioned the activity, Hutton would go on the offensive questioning the bank's procedure."

Fomon said the practice was stopped when it came to the attention of senior management in early 1982.

"We do not believe anyone realized he was violating the law or violating company policy," Fomon said.

Ex-POWs Meet In Denver Reunion

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — They've lost hair and gained weight since they were American POWs in Hitler's Germany, but friendships have endured for hundreds of former "Kriegies" who have gathered to commemorate the end of World War II and their own liberation.

All were members of the U.S. Army Air Corps, based mostly in England and flying B-17 and B-24 bombers into the heart of the Third Reich.

About 6,000 Air Corps officers from among the 90,000 U.S. fliers who were confined to German prisoner of war camps wound up in Stalag Luft III, the camp made famous by the tunnel breakout dramatized in the book and film "The Great Escape."

The American POWs began their reunion Thursday. One of their honored guests is Herman Glennitz, 86, a former German soldier whose duty was to stop the prisoners — known in German as "kriegies" — from escaping, but who occasionally failed.

Former U.S. Army colonel and OSS officer Jerry Sage said Glennitz "threw me in the cooler three times for trying to escape, but we each had our jobs to do. I've never hugged him, but I've shaken his hand."

Sage said he believed President Reagan's planned visit to a West German military cemetery at Bitburg, site of the graves of 49 SS troops, "is a fine idea."

"I say it's time to heal wounds, not keep them open," Sage said.

At Thursday night's gathering, there was plenty of food and drink, the air was hazy with cigarette smoke, and the facilities were plush.

It was a far cry from the stark surroundings of Stalag Luft III, where starvation was always around the corner and insanity was an unspoken threat that lurked in the darkened corners with rats and Germans who spied in the night.

"The foremost thing in all our minds most of the time was food," recalled Gordon A. "Bud" Summers, 65, of Topeka, Kan. "We used to sit around making up menus of all the food we'd eat after the war."

"I was obsessed with chocolate. I once wrote a check for $25 to a guy for his Red Cross chocolate bar. After the war he cashed the check, written on a scrap of paper, and the bank honored it."

Maurice "Rosey" Rosener, 66, of Harlingen, Texas, and his brother Neil, 62, of Estes Park, Colo., were both B-17 pilots shot down over Germany. Maurice on his first mission and Neil on his last.

They were reunited at Stalag Luft III and became roommates. They remember their determination to live.

"Ninety-five percent of the men accepted the attitude they were going to get out one day, and they made the best of it," recalled Maurice, "but a few individuals just gave up. One guy went to sleep and slept for a year and a half. When he left camp he was a vegetable."

Rod Rawlinson, 67, of Denver was blown out of his B-17 after a direct hit from an enemy fighter. The other crewmembers died. His memories include the good care of a German doctor and an enemy interrogator who shocked him by knowing details about Rawlinson's wife back in Texas, and showing him a picture taken of him before he was shipped overseas.

One old warrior, his face grave, stood alone in front of a poster of that deadly metal widowmaker, the B-17 bomber.

Brothers, 11 and 9, Ready To Start Career At College

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer
CHICAGO (AP) — To call them prodigies might be underrating brothers Morgan and Alkes Price, ages 11 and 9.

In September, Morgan will start as a freshman at the University of Chicago, and Alkes is planning to follow a year later, the boys' parents, David and Theodora Price, said Thursday.

Both boys are students at Naperville Central High School in the western Chicago suburb of Naperville, where the family lives.

Julian C. Stanley, a psychology professor who directs Johns Hopkins University's International Talent Search, said Alkes is "one of the two or three most precocious — mathematically precocious (children) — I've run across."

Morgan, whose strengths are both mathematical and verbal, was proficient before the age of 1 in both English and modern Greek, Mrs. Price's native language, she said.

"He could talk before he could run, in two languages. His father spoke only English to him. And I spoke only Greek. And he never mixed one with the other," she said.

By the time Morgan was 3, he was attending Japanese kindergarten while his father, David, a British physicist and senior scientist at Argonne National Laboratory in suburban Lemont, was doing research in Japan.

Morgan, whose name in Welsh means "strong man," came home and taught Alkes Japanese, Mrs. Price said.

"Every mother thinks their children are exceptionally brilliant," said Mrs. Price, who has a doctorate in archeology from Oxford University and has taught in Greece, England, Australia and the United States. "But I knew both of them were exceptionally alert from a very early age."

She tutored the boys at home and, when Morgan was 9, had him take a Talent Search test. He scored in the top 1 percent of the nation's high school students in algebra and the top 2 percent in trigonometry.

Alkes, whose name in Greek means "man of the sea," meanwhile, broke a national record at the age of 8 by being the youngest child ever to score 760 in mathematics on the Scholastic Aptitude Test, or SAT, his mother said.

"They're very astounding youngsters," said Stanley in a telephone interview from Baltimore. "The two together are about as astounding as I've seen."

Morgan's scores are higher than 700 in math and over 630 in verbal aptitude, according to Stanley. The average SAT math score for a college-bound male in 12th grade is 495, and the average SAT verbal score is 433, Stanley said.

The boys are also precocious in music, with Morgan having won awards for his performance on violin and Alkes having captured honors on the piano. Both say they spurn rock 'n' roll for classical music, but they like many other activities that other youngsters like.

"I'm not athletic, but I like ping-pong and I like bike-riding," said Morgan, who says his favorite leisure activity is reading, especially mysteries and detective novels.

"One thing people don't realize is just because I'm gifted, doesn't mean I can do anything without effort," Morgan said. "Like in high school, people think I spend all my time having fun. But basically, I spend the whole evening doing homework or violin, with half an hour out for dinner."

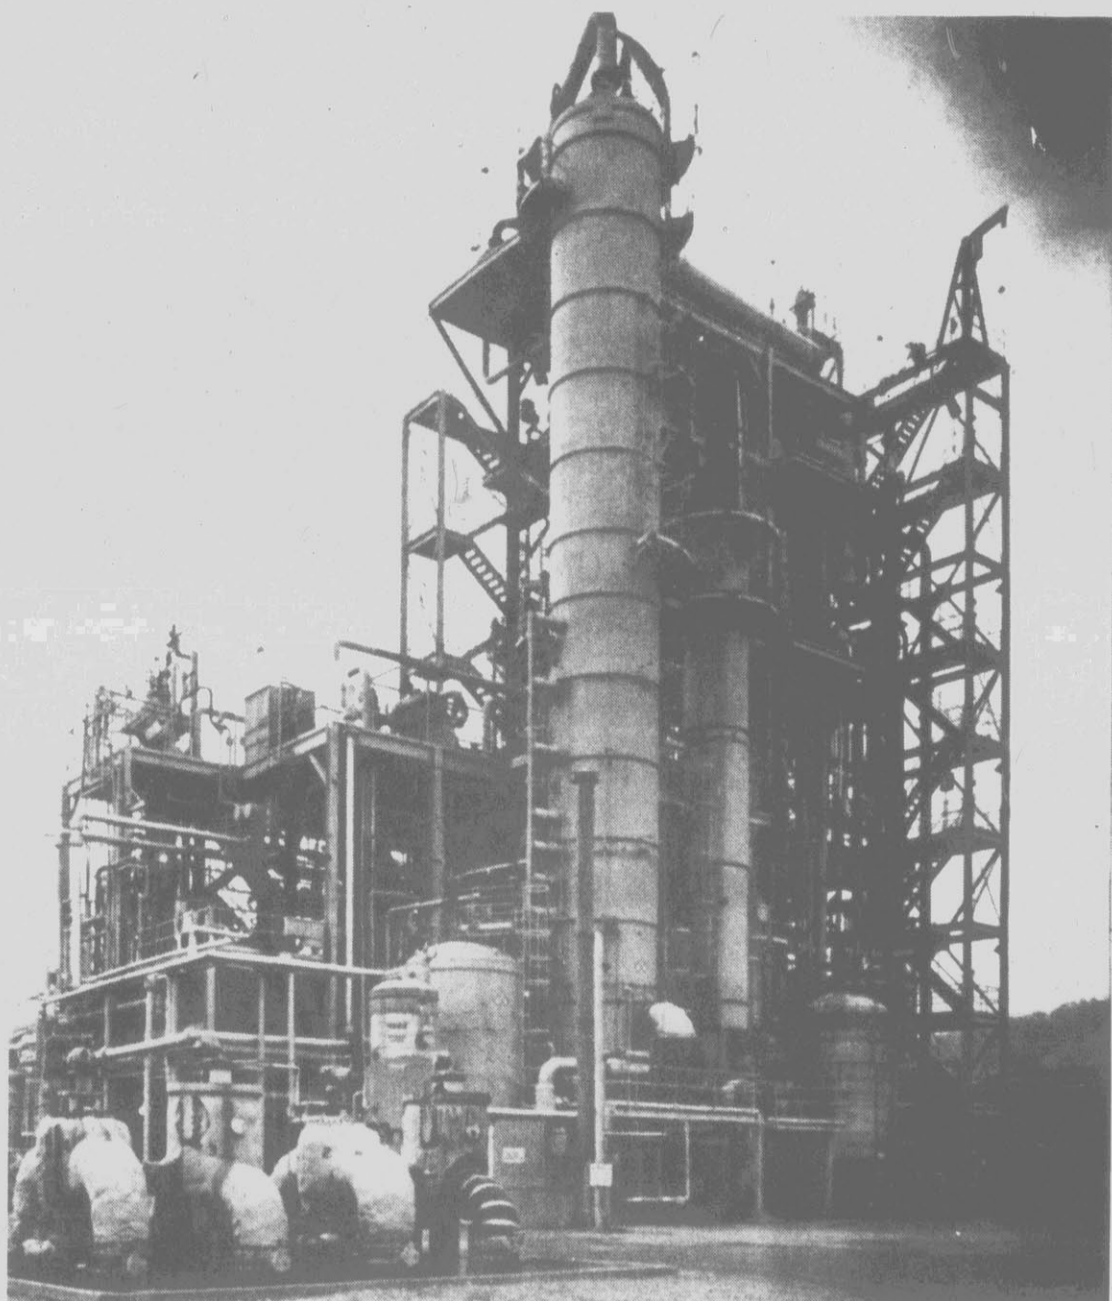

Alkes, also a mystery buff, said he and his brother are each other's chief companions, and "We like to do mostly the same things for fun."

"They demand stimulation," said Mrs. Price. "Sometimes they wear me out."

Name Problem

BOSTON (AP) — Prince, the pasta and spaghetti sauce company, says advertisements featuring its product "in concert" were intended to be amusing, but the rock star by the same name is not laughing.

Attorneys for the 26-year-old star of the movie "Purple Rain" have penned an angry letter to the Lowell, Mass., company, demanding that it stop using his name to sell spaghetti, said Howard Bloom, the singer's publicist.

MIC UNIT — Union Carbide's methyl isocyanate unit at Institute, W.Va., is resuming production today for the first time since the chemical was blamed for the deaths of more than 2,000 people in Bhopal, India, last December. The chemical is used in pesticides. (AP Laserphoto)

Union Carbide Resuming MIC Production In U.S.

INSTITUTE, W.Va. (AP) — Five months to the day that a leak of methyl isocyanate killed more than 2,000 people in India, Union Carbide is resuming production of the chemical at its facility here.

MIC was scheduled to begin moving into underground holding tanks between 7 a.m. and 3 p.m. today, said Carbide spokesman Thad Epps. He said he could not specify a time because operators were still testing the unit's lines.

Crews on Thursday ran nitrogen through gas transmission lines to make sure the unit was sealed. Today, operators planned to use the lines to combine phosgene, chloroform and monomethylamine gases — beginning the reaction that will make MIC.

Once the gases are combined, it will take six to 10 hours for the MIC to form. It will take 24 to 48 hours for the system to begin operating at top speed, Epps said.

The company has a backlog of pesticide orders to fill, he said.

Institute's MIC unit was shut down shortly after the Dec. 3 disaster in Bhopal, India. Since then, Carbide has installed $5 million worth of safety equipment to contain the poison gas in case of a leak, Epps said Thursday.

One new system will sample the air around the MIC unit every 90 seconds, Epps said. Others would either clean or burn the gas if it escapes.

Epps said Carbide spent the money "to make a safe unit safer."

But some residents remained skeptical.

Warne Ferguson, an administrator at neighboring West Virginia State College, said Carbide was endangering Institute residents.

"Why don't they take the $5 million to come up with something else — find a replacement for MIC?" he asked after leading a 12-car protest caravan past Union Carbide's front gate.

About 25 people in Ferguson's group, "People Concerned About MIC," cruised back and forth in front of Union Carbide's gate Thursday afternoon to protest the restart.

The protesters had taped signs to their cars, reading, "MIC is a killer" and "Remember Bhopal."

Finding a replacement would not be easy because of the world's dependence on MIC-based pesticides, said spokesman Tom Failla from Carbide's Danbury, Conn., headquarters.

About a quarter of all pesticides are made from MIC, he said, adding that the chemical was heralded a decade ago as an "environmentally safe" alternative to DDT.

"These are the best pesticides for many uses," Failla said. "That's why we felt it was important to start the unit."

Carbide primarily uses MIC to produce Sevin, a pesticide that company officials said they had hoped to have back on the market by the spring planting season.

The company wanted to resume MIC production last month to cut into a backlog of Sevin orders.

"We have some catching up to do," Epps said. "We anticipate the unit will be kept running straight through 1985."

Carbide planned to notify major media sources in West Virginia when MIC production resumed, Epps said.

As fast as the MIC is produced, Epps said, Carbide will try to convert it into pesticides and intermediate products for transport elsewhere. He said Carbide will cut in half the average stockpiles of the flammable chemical, partly by converting large amounts of MIC into aldicarb, known as Temik under the Carbide trademark, for shipment to other Carbide plants.

The resumption of MIC production has drawn the support of most civic leaders along the chemical plant-lined Kanawha River Valley, who cite the industry's importance to the community.

Three Die In Violence Among Street Gangs

LOS ANGELES (AP) — An outbreak of gang violence has left three people dead and two wounded in what appeared to be a series of retaliatory attacks, police said today.

The killings occurred late Thursday night along a more than 30-block stretch of Avalon Boulevard in an area of the city infested with youth street gangs, said Detective Ray Paik.

"You have gangs, one rolling along after another, all the way down Avalon Boulevard," Paik said as he searched a street for evidence near a young man whose blood-spattered body slumped from an automobile.

"We have an idea who what gangs it was, but we are not going to say," said Paik, a homicide investigator with the anti-gang unit.

The violence apparently started when two young men were shot to death around 9 p.m., Paik said.

Paik speculated that the shootings were related to the killing of a youth who died in an automobile that crashed into a fence about 30 blocks south at Fremont High School about an hour later.

"We do not yet know if there is a relationship, but there may be," he said.

A high-speed chase between two vehicles occurred on a side street by the school. The victim was shot by attackers in another vehicle while they careened around the corner, Paik said.

Police officials at the scene did not immediately know the identities of the dead.

Two youths, Dorsey Barnes, 16, and Phillip Johnson, 17, were shot and wounded in the neighborhood near the high school. Barnes was in critical condition and Johnson was in fair condition at Martin Luther King Jr. Hospital early today, said Eloise Rodgers, a nursing supervisor.

Police Lt. Lindsay Harmon said the attacks near the high school occurred within a 10-minute period shortly after 10 p.m. on or near Avalon Boulevard.

Sgt. Tom Jones of the special anti-gang unit said there appeared to be a pattern to the outbreak of violence that moved steadily south within a short time.

Pentagon Says Military Bases May Close Next Year If Congress Agrees

By TIM AIERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration will propose shutting down some military bases next year if Congress gives the Pentagon a freer hand in eliminating unnecessary facilities, the Pentagon says.

But there's no use making such proposals now because Congress has made it extremely difficult to close a base. Lawrence Korb, assistant secretary of defense for installations, said Thursday before the Senate Armed Service military construction subcommittee.

Closing bases is always politically unpopular in Congress because the legislators don't want to eliminate jobs in their home districts or states. For that reason, "we have not proposed any major closures" because the last attempt seven years ago ran into so much trouble, Korb said.

Korb voiced the Pentagon's support for a bill by Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., which he said "would remove the politics and congressional impediments from base closures."

If the law does pass, Congress will propose a list of base closings next year, Korb said. He did not say how many or which facilities.

Earlier this year, Goldwater released a list of 22 installations he said could be closed to save money.

The first problem in closing a base is the environmental impact statement, Korb said, and that can delay any action by more than a year. After that, he said, detailed justifications are required explaining the fiscal, local economic, strategic, operational and budgetary impacts of a proposed closing.

And if that doesn't keep a base open, Congress can simply order the closure delayed or require more study.

Korb noted that about 500 facilities were closed in the 1970s, leaving the country with "a reasonably efficient and responsible base structure."

The Pentagon won't propose any closures unless the Goldwater bill is passed, Korb said, because "proposing base closures we cannot accomplish alarms our employees and galvanizes local opposition."

"Any base closure is viewed by people who live and work at or near the affected installation as unjust and unjustifiable," he said. "Enormous pressures are brought to bear on you and us to keep the base open."

Without Goldwater's bill, "base closures would make less sense and be less attractive for three reasons," Korb said. "They could easily be blocked by parochial interests, they would take too long to accomplish and pay back their costs, and they would be easy targets for budget cuts that would keep the department from getting the modern facilities it needs."

At the Pentagon, spokesman Michael Burch estimated that closing a base costs $50 million because facilities and employees must be moved. But the government saves money after that "one time" charge, he said.

MILTON EISENHOWER

Eisenhower Brother Is Dead At 85

BALTIMORE (AP) — Milton S. Eisenhower, brother and confidant of President Dwight D. Eisenhower, troubleshooter for seven other presidents and head of three universities, has died at 85 after enjoying a long, busy retirement.

Eisenhower was in and out of Johns Hopkins Hospital for several months recently and, after five days' hospitalization, he died Thursday. University spokeswoman Sue Hart said death was caused by numerous ailments.

Eisenhower spent his final years keeping up with baseball's Baltimore Orioles and working at his office at Johns Hopkins University, where he had rebuilt campus facilities and solidified the university's finances during an 11-year tenure as president.

Eisenhower's health had been a problem since a bout with scarlet fever at age 4, and his eyesight grew so bad that in recent years he confined his recreational reading to large-type books mailed from the Library of Congress.

Milton Stover Eisenhower was born Sept. 15, 1899, in Abilene, Kan., the youngest son of David and Ida Stover Eisenhower. His six brothers were all good athletes, but he thought himself butter-fingered and decided to make himself a scholar and public servant. His brothers called him "the smart one."

Dwight Eisenhower often bounced his personal thoughts on important decisions off his brother, and assigned him to a fact-finding tour of Latin America.

The brother's admiration was mutual: Dwight Eisenhower thought his brother qualified to be president, while Milton wrote, "I always thought he (Dwight) had the most logical mind I ever encountered."

German Security Blocks Cameras From President

BONN, West Germany (AP) — "Where were you?" President Reagan joked to American reporters and photographers as he posed for pictures — a second, unscheduled time — with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

Network television cameramen from the United States missed the first photo session Thursday because of intense security precautions imposed by West German police.

The press was stalled outside the federal chancellery where the two leaders met while police insisted on inspecting passports of each member of the entourage.

It was impossible to comply with the demand because all members of the American press had been required to surrender their passports to White House officials for safekeeping before leaving the United States on a chartered aircraft.

Secret Service agents accompanying the press tried to persuade the West German authorities to admit the Americans but the police refused for some time. Finally, reporters and cameramen were allowed inside the gate. Then, they had to go one-by-one through metal detectors and wait while police inspected each bag and camera.

West German government spokesman Peter Boenisch apologized for the delays. "The security forces are a little bit more nervous now after they found that bomb," he said.

A bomb was discovered and defused Wednesday on the terrace of a building in a Bonn suburb.

Another problem was the American press' practice of questioning the president at photo sessions.

While the White House frowns on shouted questions, the West Germans were undone when it happened during the first Reagan-Kohl photo session, attended by a handful of Americans who had been first in line through the security checks.

The question, which has followed the president for three weeks, was about Reagan's planned stop at the Bitburg military cemetery where 49 Nazi SS troops are buried. Reagan deflected the question with a brief comment, but as he walked from the room, he smiled, winked, and made a one-word joke: "Pittsburgh."

U.S. reporters have joked among themselves that Reagan might claim he couldn't understand the furor since he had intended all along to go to Pittsburgh.

But West German officials didn't think any of it was funny.

They hurriedly arranged a second picture-taking session for the American press, but insisted that writers and network correspondents would not be permitted to attend.

Standing up for the press, White House assistant press secretary Mark Weinberg said the demand was unacceptable, that reporters must be allowed to accompany the cameramen.

No deal, said Winfred Bonse, an official of the federal Press and Information Office. "I'm just following orders," he insisted.

"Fine," said Weinberg. "We won't have it."

Bonse hurried off to consult with his superiors. Arriving back, he offered a compromise.

Reporters could attend but only if they promised, each one individually, not to ask questions, he said.

Reporters huddled among themselves, agreed that they had asked Reagan the question they wanted to pose and reluctantly accepted the condition.

Bonse also demanded that a correspondent of National Public Radio leave his microphone outside the room.

A West German newspaper reporter who also attended the photo session told his American counterparts that reporters never shout questions during Kohl's meetings with other leaders because the chancellor always ends the sessions by appearing with the visiting official to make a statement to the press.

Not so with Reagan. He left the building without talking.

Sergeant's Vehicle Bombed In Berlin

BERLIN (AP) — A U.S. Army sergeant's car exploded as he turned the ignition key before dawn today, officials said.

About the same time, a bomb went off at a French computer firm in Cologne, and police suspected left-wing terrorists protesting the seven-nation economic summit attended by President Reagan in Bonn.

Sgt. Raoul Rodriguez was hospitalized with light injuries in the Berlin explosion, said Erika Weise, a spokeswoman for the U.S. diplomatic mission in Berlin.

The explosion occurred at 4:30 a.m. in an American housing area of West Berlin. The sergeant's car was very badly damaged, and other cars nearby were lightly damaged, Ms. Weise said.

The explosion was under investigation by U.S. and German authorities, she said.

A spokesman for the U.S. command in West Berlin said the car had apparently been rigged to explode when started.

"Right now, there is nothing to indicate that this was a terrorist attack, or that it wasn't," said the spokesman, who asked that his name not be used.

The U.S. forces radio network AFN warned all American troops to check their cars before starting them.

In Cologne, the bomb went off at a French firm that repairs computers for the West German army, causing considerable damage but injuring no one, police said.

The bomb went off at 4:06 a.m. at the "Telekommunikation Radio, Elektroniques and Telefoniques" office on the south side of Cologne, police said.

The explosion caused an estimated $10,000 in damage, Cologne police spokesman Alfons Selt said. He said the bomb had been placed on a windowsill on the rear side of the firms' building.

Refugees Arrested

HONG KONG (AP) — A group of 75 Vietnamese refugees were arrested when their boat arrived in Hong Kong via China, police reported.

The group, which included 18 women and children, told police they left Vietnam on March 20 but took shelter in China because their boat was damaged. However, some local newspapers said several of the "boat people" were suspected to be illegal immigrants from China.

The papers said the Chinese authorities after confiscating arms and ammunition and gold on board the boat gave the refugees another vessel.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

LOT, ABRAHAM'S NEPHEW

LOT WAS THE SON OF HARAN, ABRAHAM'S BROTHER. WHEN ABRAHAM MOVED FROM MESOPOTAMIA TO CANAAN, LOT ACCOMPANIED HIM (GEN. 11:31;12) AND TO EGYPT (GEN. 13:1). IT SEEMS OBVIOUS THAT LOT WAS A FAVORITE NEPHEW OF ABRAHAM'S AND, WHEN ABRAHAM ACQUIRED MANY CATTLE, SO DID LOT! GENESIS TELLS US THAT "...ABRAM WAS VERY RICH IN CATTLE..." AND "LOT ALSO...HAD FLOCKS, AND HERDS..." THAT PRESENTED A SERIOUS PROBLEM TO THE TWO MEN, FINALLY, BECAUSE THEIR HERDS HAD BECOME TOO GREAT FOR THE LAND TO SUPPORT! AS IT WAS, THE HERDSMEN OF LOT AND ABRAHAM HAD ALREADY BEGUN TO QUARREL ABOUT WHICH CATTLE COULD GRAZE ON THE BEST PORTIONS OF THE LAND! SEEING THIS, ABRAHAM SUGGESTED THAT HE AND LOT SEPARATE — AND VERY GENEROUSLY TOLD LOT TO CHOOSE FIRST! (GEN. 13:9) LOT, SEEING THAT THE JORDAN VALLEY WAS MUCH MORE FERTILE THAN THE HILL COUNTRY, CHOSE THE FORMER AND BECAME A RESIDENT IN SODOM, NOT REALIZING THAT HE WAS SETTLING IN A LAND WITH LAWLESS PEOPLE WHO WOULD, IN THE FUTURE, GREATLY AFFLICT HIM AND HIS FAMILY— AND ABRAHAM DEPARTED TO THE LAND OF CANAAN WHICH THE LORD GAVE TO HIM!

FOCUS

OOM-pa-pah, OOM-pa-pah!

May 3rd is International Tuba Day. The tuba is also known as the bass horn. It is the largest brass instrument with a cupped mouthpiece. When used in a band or orchestra, tubas play the lowest harmonic part, or sometimes supply rhythm. The sousaphone, invented by John Philip Sousa, is a kind of tuba which rests on the player's shoulders. Some experts believe the ancient Romans may have devised the first tubas. They are known to have built straight and J-shaped trumpets.

DO YOU KNOW — What march did John Philip Sousa write, inspired by the motto of the Marine Corps?

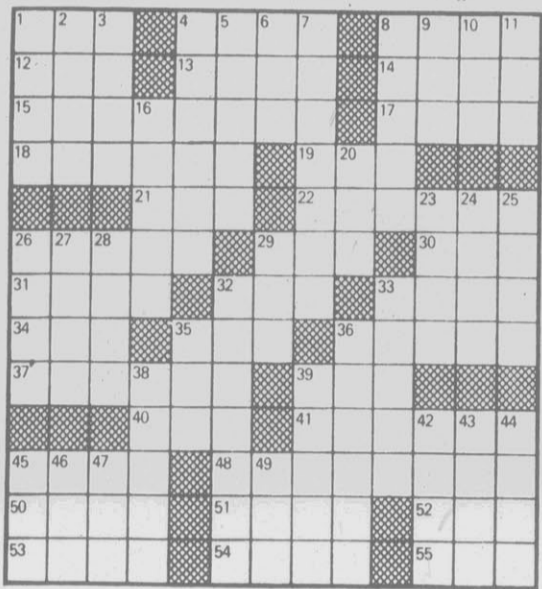

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Early bicycles were often called "velocipedes."

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE ADEPT BUTCHER'S SUCCINCT PROVERB: "LIVER AND LOIN."
 Today's Cryptoquip clue: G equals M

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Government Has More 'Secrets'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The number of government documents classified as secret for national security reasons rose to a record 19.6 million in the 1984 fiscal year, a government report says.

That's a 9 percent increase from the previous year, but the Information Security Oversight Office attributed most of the rise to the stamping of documents that paraphrase or restate information already considered secret.

The number of originally classified documents increased by 2 percent to 881,943, the office said Thursday in its annual report to President Reagan.

Of the 19,607,736 protected documents, 2 percent were stamped "Top Secret," 30 percent were designated "Secret" and the rest were classified as "Confidential," the report said.

The Defense Department stamped 84.7 percent of the documents, while the CIA classified 13 percent. The rest were stamped by a variety of government agencies such as the State Department, NASA and the Treasury Department.

During the 1983 fiscal year, 18,005,151 documents were classified by government officials, and in the 1982 fiscal year the figure was 17,504,611. In 1981, government officials stamped 17,374,102 documents.

In 1984, there was a 9 percent increase in derivative classifications, which are documents that paraphrase information already classified secret, the report said.

Prototype Herpes Vaccine Succeeds

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government researchers say they are encouraged by animal tests of an experimental vaccine that not only wards off herpes infections but also prevents future repeated attacks of the disease.

The vaccine even appears to offer simultaneous protection against different types of herpes viruses that cause human disease, according to scientists at the National Institutes of Health.

The prototype vaccine, still years away from human testing, is described in a report to be published today in the journal Science.

The vaccine is one of several being developed by researchers worldwide who are taking different approaches to finding a preventive for herpes. But the NIH scientists say their vaccine is the first to indicate prevention of latent infections that can spur later attacks, one of the biggest problems associated with herpes infections.

The NIH vaccine combines parts of a herpes virus with one used in the smallpox vaccine.

The new vaccine developed from herpes simplex virus type 1, which causes cold sores, and also offered protection against type 2, the most frequent cause of sexually-transmitted genital herpes, the researchers said.

"We are encouraged by the cross-reactivity of the vaccine, in which the immune response against one virus seems to offer some protection against others," said Abner Notkins, a researcher at the National Institute of Dental Research.

"But the most encouraging finding," Notkins said in an interview, "is preventing the latent infection — keeping the virus from getting into nerve cells. Once the virus gets into nerve endings, it moves into the nerve cells, where the antibody can't get to it."

Other types of vaccines also may block the viruses' entry to nerves, but none has yet been tested, said Notkins, who was joined in the research by doctors Bernard Moss and Kenneth Cremer.

Notkins added that a preventive vaccine probably would not help people who already have herpes infections because the virus already would be incorporated into nerve tissue, where it is protected.

In the study, the NIH scientists used genetic engineering techniques to insert a gene from the herpes virus into another one, called vaccinia or cowpox virus. Vaccinia is the basis of the smallpox vaccine that eliminated that disease.

Several research groups, including ones at NIH under Moss and at the New York State Health Department under Enzo Paoletti, are using the well-known vaccinia virus as a vehicle for developing new vaccines for a number of viral diseases, including hepatitis, rabies and chicken pox.

The NIH group injected the combined virus into scores of mice and found that it produced high levels of a neutralizing antibody within three to four weeks.

Arson Suspected In Fire In Maine

DENNVILLE, Maine (AP) — The possibility of rain offered some encouragement today as firefighters from around the state resumed their three-day-old battle against Maine's largest forest fire in eight years.

Officials said arson touched off the fire, which was "pretty well cooled down around the edges" but still not under control late Thursday, according to Ranger Kendall Allen of the Maine Forest Service.

More than 100 volunteer firefighters from throughout Maine, plus about 50 inmates from state prisons who had been previously trained to fight forest fires, were bused into the area Wednesday night, said state Conservation Department spokesman Marshall Wiebe.

About 300 firefighters in all were available for duty, Wiebe said.

A top priority was completing a six-mile-long fire line around the 979 acres area already burned. Bulldozers worked to clear a 20-foot-wide path around the blaze.

The job had been "pretty well" completed by late Thursday, Allen said from the forest service office in Old Town. But Wiebe warned that burning embers carried by wind could spark new fires outside the fire line.

Forest Ranger Kenny Wing said the fire was the result of arson.

Senate Rejects Cuts, Votes For Tax Hike

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — With the Reagan-endorsed 1986 budget package in pieces, Republican leaders are vowing to "try something different" to reduce federal deficits by at least $50 billion next year.

"I hope the president will understand," Senate Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., said as the GOP-controlled chamber Thursday night temporarily turned from spending cuts and voted 79-17 to recommend a minimum income tax on both corporations and individuals.

In the past, President Reagan has opposed all efforts to raise taxes, challenging Congress to "make my day" by sending him a tax-increase bill he could veto.

However, the measure approved by the Senate was a non-binding resolution that would do nothing to reduce the $200 billion federal deficit.

The vote on the "sense of the Senate" tax resolution came as the Senate continued to dismantle the administration-backed budget.

On a 51-48 roll call, the Senate voted to slice the administration's military buildup by $17.7 billion over the next three years, holding the 1986 rise in Pentagon spending at the rate of inflation. Reagan originally requested a 6 percent increase over the rate of inflation for next year and later compromised with Senate GOP leaders on a 3 percent after-inflation increase.

The vote came a day after the chamber rejected another major part of the plan negotiated by the White House and Senate leaders, scuttling proposed limits on Social Security cost-of-living increases.

"We have made our best effort,"

Dole said following the defense vote. "Now we may have to try something different."

The tax measure, brought up unexpectedly by GOP leaders, would leave the size of the minimum tax up to congressional tax-writing committees. Revenues from the tax would be used to reduce individual tax rates or exempt more low-wage individuals from taxes altogether, the resolution stated.

"This is not a tax increase," stressed Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee and principal author of the resolution. "It is designed to levy a tax on individuals and corporations with large incomes who now pay no taxes."

Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., an advocate of tax reform, called the measure "round one-half in a 15-round battle" toward a fairer tax code. However, he said it was "irrelevant" to the deficit-reduction effort now under way.

Sources who spoke only on condition they not be identified said Republican leaders brought up the resolution primarily to blunt Democrat-backed efforts to mandate a minimum corporate tax and use the revenues to help lower the deficit.

It was not yet clear what course Senate leaders planned to follow today in the chamber's eighth day of debate on the spending outline, with intensive off-the-floor negotiations expected to continue between key players.

A Senate vote was expected today on a plan by Packwood to trim federal Medicaid spending cuts to $1.2 billion over three years. The Republican package calls for a $2 billion cut. Packwood also wants to scale back a proposed increase in Medicare premiums.

Yet to be voted on in the budget package are proposed cuts or eliminations in a number of popular programs — including termination of Amtrak subsidies and abolition of the Jobs Corps.

The vote to limit the defense spending increase came on an amendment by Republican Sens. Charles Grassley of Iowa and Mark Hatfield of Oregon. It drew heavy Democratic support.

"For once, grass roots America has won out over the military industrial complex," Grassley said following the vote.

Hatfield called the vote "historic" but said he did not view the results as final.

"What we see today is certainly not going to be the package we finally vote on. There may be other deals made," Hatfield noted.

Twelve Republican senators joined 39 Democrats in voting in support of the amendment scaling back the defense increase.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger lobbied senators personally prior to the defense vote, and President Reagan called wavering senators from Bonn, West Germany, where he is attending an economic summit.

Grassley alleged that Weinberger issued "implicit threats" of military base closings in the states of senators who didn't support the administration's position. "Very definitely, that's political blackmail," he said.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Michael Burch said Weinberger "has not threatened anybody with closure of bases."

Opening lead: Ten of ♠.

Because tens are the lowest of the honors, they often receive scant attention for tyro and expert alike. Yet the "forgotten honor" can play a vital role in the outcome of a hand.

Despite the unfavorable vulnerability, East was well within himself for his preemptive jump to three spades. However, he failed in his attempt to disrupt the enemy auction. Both North and South were simply too strong to be swayed from their destiny, and they reached an excellent club slam.

Obviously, if hearts are 3-2 there is no problem to the hand—declarer simply loses a heart trick and claims the rest. But what if hearts are 4-1?

The only place that declarer can get rid of one of his hearts is on the board's diamonds. If dummy's diamonds were ace-queen and two low spot cards, declarer would have no choice but to finesse the queen. When that fails, the opponents would chalk up 50 points. However, since North has the ten of diamonds as well, the contract is almost assured.

Declarer should win the ace of spades and draw the outstanding trumps in one or two rounds, depending on the distribution. Next, he must cash the king-ace of hearts to see how that suit breaks. When East discards on the second heart, declarer is still in command.

All he need do is lead his singleton diamond to the ten! As the cards lie, East takes the king, so declarer can win any return and sluff his losing hearts on dummy's high diamonds. But even if the ten loses to the jack, the contract is still safe. East either has to return a spade, giving declarer a ruff-sluff, or a diamond into dummy's ace-queen tenace. In both cases, South's only loser would be a diamond.

Mystery Child Baffling Police

MIAMI (AP) — Immigration officials are baffled by the case of a mystery child who is too young to tell them who he is and where he came from.

The boy, aged about 2, arrived at Miami International Airport from Jamaica with a 20-year-old man who told authorities he was supposed to deliver him to his mother.

Dwayne Peterson, deputy director of the Immigration and Naturalization Service here, said Thursday the man gave conflicting stories and none of the three addresses he gave was valid.

Peterson said the man was detained briefly. The boy's case is the second similar one within a week. Earlier this week, authorities finally identified a 6-year-old Panamanian boy who had stuck to a false name for a week after arriving at the airport. He was reunited with his mother who she did not come forward earlier because she was in the United States illegally.

The toddler was poorly taken care of when he arrived last Saturday, Peterson said.

"He had a dirty diaper. He smelled terrible," said the official. "The officers pooled their money and bought him new diapers and clothes."

The boy has been taken to the Salvation Army shelter that the INS uses for mothers and children with immigration problems.

His companion told officers that a woman named Laverne Rose had paid his round-trip ticket from Jamaica to deliver the boy.

Peterson said a woman telephoned after the boy's flight arrived to ask about him. She said she was calling from Chicago and was the child's mother.

But "she hung up and has not called back," he said. Peterson said child-smuggling, which has been a constant problem for the INS, seems to be getting crueler.

Reagan ...

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher told reporters the United States had not consulted its allies about the trade embargo, did not ask them to join the embargo and did not solicit statements of support.

One U.S. official, who spoke only on condition he not be identified, said today's summit declaration amounted to endorsement of U.S. rejection of a Soviet attempt to link talks on curbing strategic and medium-range missiles to "concessions by the United States in the space and defense area."

DeBakey Arrives For ECU Speech

Acclaimed heart surgeon Dr. Michael E. DeBakey was to address graduates of the East Carolina University School of Medicine today during commencement exercises at the Brody Medical Sciences Building.

DeBakey's message to the school's 1985 graduates includes comments on the ethics and economics of medicine.

In a news conference this morning, DeBakey discussed economics and ethics of heart surgery and transplants.

Responding to a question on whether too many heart operations were done in the United States, he said "cardiovascular disease is probably one of the most common afflictions today, with perhaps 25 million people in this country suffering from this disease."

One of the world's more widely known surgeons, DeBakey demonstrated an ability for medical innovation early in his career. While still a medical student, he devised a pump which years later became an essential component of the heart-lung machine that made open heart surgery possible.

Other speakers addressing graduates at today's convocation included C. Ralph Kinsey, chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees, and ECU Medical School Dean Dr. William E. Laupus.

Jaguars Rally Past North Pitt 10-3

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central spotted North Pitt an early lead, then came back to gain a 10-3 baseball victory over the Panthers yesterday in Eastern Carolina Conference action.

North Pitt took the lead in the game in the second inning, scoring twice. Tommy Wright and Lee Eakes both reached on error and Billy Warren singled, loading the bases. Walks to Greg Briley and Chuck Doake both walked, forcing in two runs.

The Panthers added one in the third for a 3-0 lead before the Jaguars rallied for two in the bottom of the third.

Then, in the fourth, Farmville came up with five runs to take the lead for good. Brian Windham and Dennis Tripp both walked. Daniel Dilda doubled, driving in Windham. Hugh Moore walked to load them up, and Tripp scored on Brian Huber's sacrifice fly. Randy Daniels drove in Dilda and Moore with a single and Greg May reached on an error, scoring Daniels.

Farmville added three more in the sixth to close out its scoring.

Moore, Daniels and Mark Wooten each had two hits for Farmville while Scott Rawls had a pair for North Pitt.

The Jaguars are now 5-12-1 overall and 4-4-1 in league play.

Farmville travels to Ayden-Grifton on Tuesday, while North Pitt visits Plymouth in a non-conference game.

SNOW HILL — Ayden-Grifton pushed over a pair of runs in the top of the eighth inning then held off a Greene Central rally for a 5-4 baseball victory last night.

The Chargers pushed ahead in the second inning, scoring a single run then adding another in the third. Greene Central, however, rallied for two to tie it up in the bottom of the fourth.

Ayden-Grifton went back out with one in the sixth, but the Rams tied it in the bottom of the seventh.

Eddie Honrine led off, reaching on an error and Roger Sutton walked. Gary Ginn also walked, loading the bases and a walk to Ken Wade brought in Honrine to knot it at 3-3.

In the top of the eighth, Jackie Conway led off for the Chargers and was hit by a pitch. Wesley Hardee doubled and when Ty Little laid down a sacrifice bunt the ball was thrown into right field, allowing both runners to score.

The Rams came back with one in the bottom of the inning, but failed to complete the comeback.

Hardee led the Charger hitting with three while Jerome Flowers had two for the Rams.

Ayden-Grifton is now 10-9 overall and 7-3 in league play. They play host to Farmville Central on Tuesday. Greene Central visits C.B. Aycock on Tuesday.

ROBERSONVILLE — Tommy Bunch and Anthony Ryan ripped two hits each as Bertie cruised past the Roanoke Redskins 10-6 Thursday in Northeastern 3-A baseball.

Tommy Bunch singled in the first to open a two-run rally that put Bertie ahead to stay. Ryan reached first on a fielder's choice, and an error allowed Bunch to score. Michael Bunch later drove in Ryan with a sacrifice fly.

Bertie added one run in the third, and three in the fourth and fifth to put the game out of reach. Roanoke trimmed the margin with five runs in the bottom of the fifth.

Stacy Wallace paced the Redskins with two hits.

Hite, Lynch Sign At ECU

East Carolina softball coach Sue Manahan has announced the signing of Jodi Hite and Terri Lynch to Lady Pirate softball grants.

Both girls were four-year starters in softball for Bryan County High in Pembroke, Ga. They led Bryan County to the IA state softball championship in 1983 and the South Georgia championship three times.

Hite, a 5-6 pitcher, threw 83 innings without issuing a walk during her senior year. She is a good hitter with excellent speed and base running ability according to Bryan County Coach Albert Lodge.

Lynch is a 5-7 shortstop who had the ability to play anywhere on the field. She was named the Savannah Sports Council Player of the Month twice in 1983. She also was awarded the Army Medal of Excellence for Academics and Athletics for the same year. Lynch won the IA state championship in the two-mile run during the 1983 season.

Both girls were three year starters for the Bryan County girls' basketball team and both are honor roll students.

Rampant Golfers Down New Bern

Rose High School closed out its regular season golf schedule yesterday with a 301-329 victory over New Bern.

Simon Moye carded a three-under par 69 to lead the Rampants, while David Lee and Mike Herrin each had a 77 and Lee Allen and Polly Baker each carded 78.

New Bern was led by Ron Pontiss with an 80, while Jonathan Anders had an 82. Robbie Barnes, an 83, and Frankie Coley, an 84.

The result leaves Rose with a 16-1 record on the year.

They return to action on Monday, traveling to Elizabeth City for the Big East Tournament.

AYDEN — Mark Davis of Ayden-Grifton fired a 71 as the overall medalist, but Parrott Academy defeated the Chargers 304-310 Thursday in high school golf action.

Ben Moore led Parrott with a 72, followed by D.J. Patrick at 74. Jim Blount 77 and Chris Harper 81.

Brian Heath of Ayden-Grifton fired a 73. Jeremy Shadle 81 and Chris Brick 85.

Ayden-Grifton, now 11-8-1, closes its season hosting D.H. Conley Thursday.

Farmville Takes ECC Tennis Tournament

FARMVILLE — Farmville Central won three singles championships and added a key doubles title as the Jaguars won the Eastern Carolina Conference tennis tournament yesterday.

Joe Smith, Howard Keel and Eric Shine all captured individual titles in their respective flights, while Phillip Wainwright and Shine teamed to win the number three doubles title.

Farmville finished the day with a team score of 31, while C.B. Aycock took second with 27, and Greene Central was third with 23. Southern Nash, the fourth team in the meet, failed to score.

"The key to our winning was taking the number three and four singles and the number three doubles," Farmville Coach Seth Jones said.

"At number four, Greene Central's Allen Rogers was unbeaten on the year and Eric beat him. If we had lost that, it would have ended up in a three-way tie for first. Then, if we had lost the number three doubles, it would have given Aycock the title."

Greene Central won two individual titles, as Steve Harrison won at number one and Brian Minshew took the fifth seeded slot.

Aycock took one individual and two doubles titles. Nick Stewart took the number six singles while Tony Read and Tim Barnes won at number one doubles and Jeff Smith and Brian Teachey took the number two title.

All teams return to action next Wednesday in the sectionals to be held at Wilson Fike.

Consolation finals for all but the number four singles and the doubles were held Wednesday after the first round of the tournament.

Rampettes Survive Beddingfield, 9-8

It took 13 innings but Rose High School finally gained a 9-8 softball victory over Wilson Beddingfield yesterday after dodging a bullet in the seventh inning.

Rose trailed, 7-2, going into the bottom of the seventh, but came back to score five times and tie it up. Both teams scored once in the ninth, before Rose finally got the winning run in the 13th.

Beddingfield gained the initial lead with three runs in the first and added three more in the second for a 6-0 lead. Rose came back with one each in the second and third to cut it to 6-2.

Beddingfield got another in the sixth for a 7-2 lead before Rose rallied for five in the seventh.

Amanda Smith opened the seventh with a single and Melissa Stanley also got a hit. With one down, Vicki Parrott drove in both of them with a triple. Then, after a second out, Lisa Harkley reached on an error, scoring Parrott. Renee Murray doubled and Suzanne Tadlock singled in both Harkley and Murray with the tying runs.

Both scored a run in the ninth, Rose's coming on a solo homer by Harkley.

Finally, in the 13th, Rose got the winning run. Melissa Pruden singled and with two outs, Beddingfield issued walks to Harkley, Murray and Tadlock, forcing in the game-winning run.

Parrott, Harkley, Tadlock, Jane Whitley, Stanley and Pruden each had three hits for Rose while Murray and Kim Bridges each had two.

Beddingfield was led by Boykin with four, while Tracy Hooker and Sharon Page each had two.

Rose is now 10-4 overall and 7-3 in league play. The Rampettes play host to Kingston on Tuesday.

FARMVILLE - North Pitt took the lead early and rolled to a 12-3 softball victory over hosting Farmville Central yesterday.

The Pant-HERS scored four times in the first inning and added another four in the fourth and four more in the sixth for their 12 run total. Farmville got two runs in the fourth and one in the sixth.

Myra Moore led North Pitt with four hits while B. Purvis had three and W. Hines had two. Joy Peaden led Farmville Central with three hits.

The loss drops Farmville to 1-8 on the year. They return to action on Tuesday, traveling to Ayden-Grifton. North Pitt is idle until next Thursday when it travels to SouthWest Edgecombe.

SNOW HILL - Greene Central took another step toward the Eastern Carolina Conference softball championship with a 17-0 victory over Ayden-Grifton yesterday.

The Lady Rams are now 9-0 in league play and play host to C.B. Aycock on Tuesday. A win in that contest would clinch one of the two league playoff berths and could - depending on the outcome of today's matchup between Aycock and Southern Nash - clinch the title.

Greene Central put the game on ice in the second inning of the contest, scoring 11 times in that frame. They added one in the third, four in the fifth and one in the sixth.

Dalen Herring held Ayden-Grifton to just two hits in the contest.

Trenette Daniels, who homered, and Antonette Wilkes each had three hits for Greene Central, while Denise Warren, Jenny Hardison, Cynthia Jones, Sharon Dawson and Herring each had two hits. Christy Warren also added a homer.

BEAR GRASS - Bath High School came back from a 1-0 deficit to take a 6-2 softball victory over Bear Grass yesterday in the Tobacco Belt Conference.

Bear Grass took the lead in the second inning with a run but Bath came back in the third to score five times. The Lady Pirates added one in the sixth while Bear Grass got its other run in the fifth.

S. Sullivan and C. Waters each had two hits for Bath while Lisa Taylor had a pair for Bear Grass.

Bear Grass is now 4-7 in league play and plays host to Mattamuskeet on Tuesday.

Pistons Down Celtics

DETROIT (AP) - The Detroit Pistons, who had been all but given up for dead, find themselves with new hope after getting the kiss of life from Terry Tyler.

Tyler, who specializes in fourth-quarter heroics, came through again Thursday night, scoring 16 of his 18 points in the final period to lift Detroit to a 125-117 National Basketball Association victory over the turnover-prone Boston Celtics.

The victory left the Celtics with a 2-1 edge in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinal series with Game 4 scheduled for Sunday in Joe Louis Arena. In the only other game, Denver beat Utah 131-123 in overtime to take a 2-0 edge in their Western Conference series.

"It's one game, but it's one that we had to get," Detroit Coach Chuck Daly said. "I thought that the guys played hard. We just keep working to get the game at hand."

Detroit won the game with a strong second half. The game was tied 62-62 at intermission and the Celtics held a commanding 31-19 rebounding edge. It was another story in the final two quarters, however, as the Pistons took control of the boards, 27-19.

The Celtics also hurt themselves with an uncharacteristic 23 turnovers which resulted in 20 Detroit points.

"We dug our own grave," Boston Coach K.C. Jones moaned. "It was turnover, turnover, turnover. You can underline that 12 times. Nobody seemed to want to be left out."

"We threw the ball away and missed easy layups. We just have to come out and take care of the ball better."

The Pistons led 98-96 as the fourth quarter opened and never relinquished the lead.

Bill Lamber, who led the Pistons with 27 points, canned an 18-foot jumper and Vinnie Johnson followed with the tip-in of an alley-oop pass from Isiah Thomas to give the Pistons a six-point margin.

The Celtics narrowed the Detroit lead to three points on two occasions, but each time Tyler led another surge.

"I always think when the fourth quarter comes, 'Do you want the challenge?'" Tyler said. "I try to be ready. I kind of like the pressure."

Indeed, the last eight minutes of the final period were all Tyler as he hit the Pistons' final eight field goals, accounting for all of Detroit's points except for two Lamber free throws.

"They have a heck of a front court," Boston's Robert Parish said. "I don't know what Terry had, but he was on fire. I've never seen him like that."

Lamber and Parish got into a shoving match with 7:32 remaining in the third quarter.

"It started during the regular season," Parish said. "There's no reason for that. If the officials don't do something about it, I will. This is only a game, it's not war. He (Lamber) is not a fighter. He's been knocked out too many times for that."

Dennis Johnson was high for Boston with 27 points and Larry Bird added 25. Kevin McHale finished with 24 points and Danny Ainge, who had four personal fouls by halftime, finished with 15 for Boston. Parish added 13.

Thomas scored 26 for Detroit, John Long had 20 and Kelly

Wellcome Rips Whitfield Girls

Keisha and Gwen Pilgreen ripped three hits each as Wellcome pounded G.R. Whitfield 16-6 Thursday in junior high softball action.

Donna Leggett went the distance on the mound for Wellcome.

Wellcome, now 3-1 on the season, hosts Chicod Monday.

Wellcome Tops G.R. Whitfield

Craig Willoughby hurled the Wellcome Wildcat - past G.R. Whitfield 8-4 Thursday in junior high baseball action.

Keith Pearson led Wellcome with three hits, while Tommy Payne added a pair.

Tripucka scored 13.
Nuggets 131, Jazz 123

Guard Lafayette Lever scored six of his 22 points in overtime and center Wayne Cooper hit a pair of long range jump shots early in the extra session to lead Denver.

Utah, which will host Games 3 and 4 Saturday and Sunday, had tied the game at 119-119 on a pair of free throws by Thurl Bailey after leading by as many as seven points twice in the fourth period. But the Jazz, who went cold in the final seven minutes, fell behind in overtime and never got back in the game.

Afterward, Utah Coach Frank Layden gave his team a dressing down in the locker room.

"In this age of the very high-paid athlete, people are sometimes afraid to point things out to them that they failed at," Layden said.

"I'm not afraid to talk to my players about areas in which they failed. I think they all have to earn their money. I believe in the fact that each individual has personal responsibilities.

"We're down 2-0 and now we have to go back to Utah and shrink this series to a three-game series tied at 2-2."

After Adrian Dantley's three-point play gave the Jazz a 110-103 lead with 7:21 remaining, Utah went nearly three minutes without another point while the Nuggets were scoring 10 straight for a 113-110 advantage.

The Nuggets held a 117-114 lead when Rickey Green's three-point play gave Utah a tie with 3:27 left. Denver's Calvin Natt and Bailey exchanged free throws to force the overtime.

"I didn't think we played with much intensity until we got down 110-103," said Denver Coach Doug Moe.

"From that point on, I thought we played great - a lot like we've been playing all year. We got really aggressive and made some big defensive plays."

Dissent Over The Fate Of A Rare Animal

ENDANGERED ANIMAL . . . A greater one-horned rhinoceros, seen here munching and on guard, is found mainly in Nepal and the adjacent state of Assam, India, where this two-ton bull was photographed. The thick-skinned giants are being wiped out by poachers, who sell their horns, and farmers, whose fields they ravage. (Photo by Quentin Keynes, National Geographic Society)

KATHMANDU, Nepal — Shambhu Lal Shrestha, a 21-year-old farmer in the Chitawan Valley of south central Nepal, has a problem with a rare predator that few of the world's farmers ever have to worry about: the greater one-horned rhinoceros.

To guard against the massive intruder, Shrestha spends many nights in the middle of his wheat and vegetable fields at the base of the Himalayan foothills, bedded down in a thatched hut perched on 10-foot bamboo stilts.

If one of the noisy marauders approaches, Shrestha leaps from his bed and sets fire to a bundle of straw stored just outside. He beats on a gong to frighten the dangerous beast. Hearing the alarm, his neighbors join in lighting fires and making racket. The rhino, fearful of fire, flees.

Shrestha wouldn't mourn the disappearance of the armor-plated animal — second in size only to the elephant — an endangered species and a national symbol. "If the government kills all the rhinos, that's fine," he says.

If the government hadn't intervened, in fact, the species might already be extinct. By 1970, poachers and settlers in the fertile valley had reduced the estimated number of rhinos to 100.

The late King Mahendra, Bir Bikram Shah Dev created the 335-square-mile Royal Chitawan National Park in 1973 and, putting an end to the profligate hunting practices of preceding decades, banned the hunting of rhinos and tigers in the park.

As a result, today there are an estimated 350 to 400 rhinos in the valley, according to wildlife officials. The rhinos are multiplying at a rate of 2.6 percent a year, says Dr. Hemanta R. Mishra of the Department of National Parks and Wildlife Conservation in Kathmandu.

"Farmers are complaining all the time," says Mishra.

The basic problem is that rhinos don't know a boundary marker from a rutabaga. Shrestha and other farmers on the outskirts of the park fervently desire the government to confine the monstrous creatures to the protected preserve.

Residents of some villages have dug elaborate trenches, camouflaged with branches and thickets, to discourage wandering rhinos. Discouragement doesn't come easily to a hungry animal that may stand six feet tall and weigh two tons.

Coexistence often looks like a losing battle to Shrestha and his neighbors. Periodically, a one-horned rhino extends his grazing beyond the grasses of the park to Shrestha's fields, wreaking untold economic havoc in a nation whose per-capita gross national product is estimated at only $170.

A study found that straying wildlife in some cases destroyed more than 60 percent of the crops in fields adjacent to the park.

The rhinos threaten life as well as property. Each year, the huge but quick animals kill one or two residents of Chitawan Valley, usually in surprise jungle encounters that leave the victim no escape route.

Some 500 government troops patrol Chitawan Park, keeping poaching to a minimum. Outside the park, it's another story. The estimated 1,000 remaining one-horned rhinos nearby in northern India are being decimated by hunters. Indian forest guards lack the resources and political support to protect them.

One-horned rhinos once ranged over much of the Indian subcontinent, from Pakistan to Burma. In the 19th and early 20th centuries, the bountiful animals attracted hunting expeditions led by Napoleonic rulers, who often invited foreign royalty to join them in lavish safaris, accompanied by scores of elephants and legions of servants.

By the 1950s, malaria-eradication programs brought settlers, who joined with poachers to lower further the number of rhinos. The Chitawan Valley is exceptionally accessible in mountainous, inaccessible Nepal, and between 1954 and 1970 the human population along the Rapti River — now the northern boundary of the national park — increased tenfold.

The park is a major tourist attraction. Visitors explore the park's trails on elephants that give them safe, close-up views of the rampant wildlife.

"More visitors mean more elephants, and the elephants are already hammering the forest," says ecologist Mishra.

Most rhinos lucky enough to live in the park are assured of a safe haven. However, about once a year, park wardens report a rhino that has been spared by farmers who regard it as a dangerous nuisance, not an example of wildlife management.

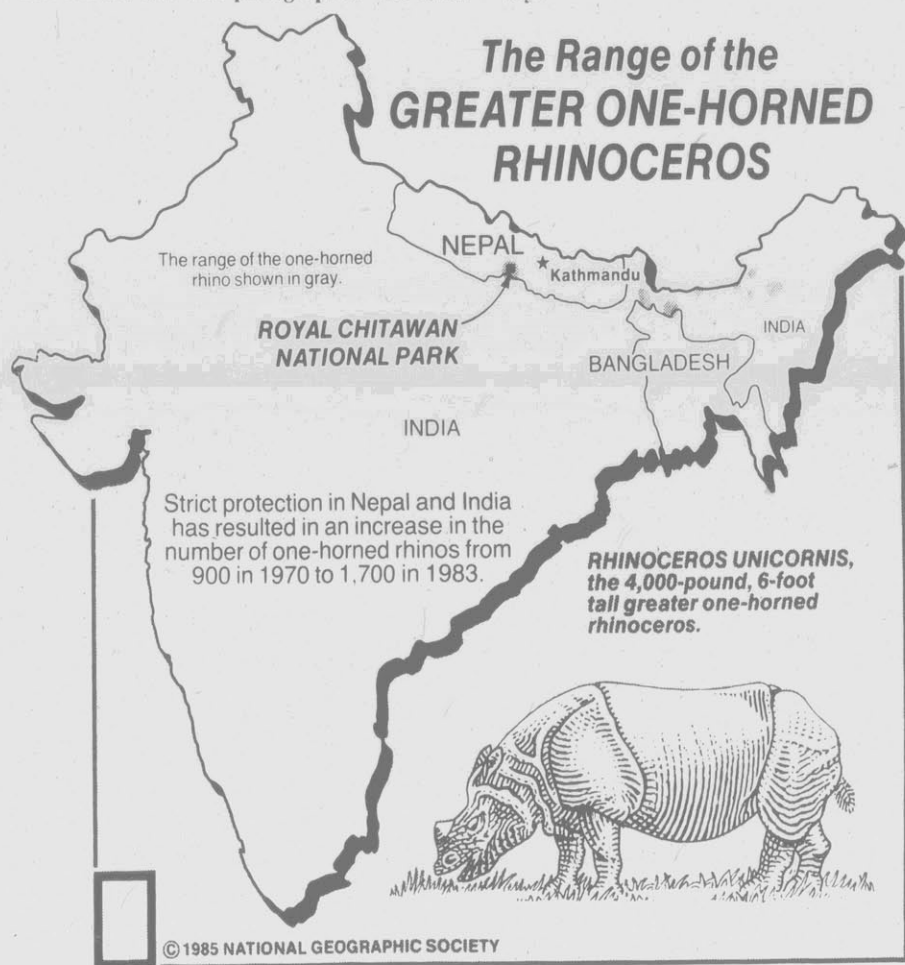

Unlike its two-horned African cousin, the larger one-horned species has a single spike — actually a hard mass of matted hair — growing from its nose.

The horn, persistently believed by some people to be a powerful aphrodisiac despite lack of medical evidence, sells for $600 an ounce in Southeast Asia, according to the World Wildlife Fund, which has joined in efforts to save the rhinos.

That's plenty of incentive to keep the poachers active. As a result, rhinos of all species, in both Asia and Africa, are on the endangered list.

Shrestha may not care about the future of the one-horned rhinoceros, but the world's conservationists do.

Unless strong measures are taken, and soon, they fear the rhino will share the status of another single-horned animal, the unicorn: nonexistent.

Changes Noted In Afghanistan Since Marxists Gained Power

WASHINGTON — At night, the deserted streets of Kabul, the capital of Afghanistan, frequently vibrate to the sounds of war, the skies aglow with light from rockets, flares, and searchlights.

By day, the city seems to follow its ageless course, its bazaars filled with rich sights and smells, its labyrinthine streets still traveled by human beasts of burden carrying crates on their backs.

But much has changed in Kabul since Marxists seized power in Afghanistan in 1978. A year later, Soviet troops bolstered the regime, and now number more than 100,000. Bitter fighting continues between troops and resistance fighters, or mujahidin.

Mike Edwards, National Geographic staff writer, is one of the few Western journalists who have been granted visas to see Communist Kabul. In the April issue, he reports that his first visit had been in 1966 when he arrived there as deputy director of the Peace Corps program in Afghanistan.

"I grew to love this antique city, its panoramic mountainscape and sparkling light, the creation of dust sifted in the bright sun of 6,000 feet," he writes.

Today, Edwards observes, young men get drunk in the terraced garden where Babur, the first Mogul emperor, who lived in Kabul from 1504 to 1526, is buried. In pre-Marxist days, public drunkenness was rare in the conservative Muslim capital.

Coca-Cola trucks, red the world around, are now painted Islamic green in Kabul. After the coup, says a Coca-Cola plant manager, "people rose against anything red."

Schooling for the young has been reduced from 12 years to 10, and conscription begins at age 16. But older Afghan men, deprived of formal education when they were young, attend literacy classes. "I think the revolutionary government for teachers and books," one of them says dutifully.

An archaeologist boasts of Afghan self-sufficiency in exploring the county's intriguing past, work once done chiefly by foreigners. But the work is limited, because most of Afghanistan is not controlled by the Kabul government.

The Soviets supply the country with fuel, sugar, and wheat, and the cost of staples is high for the average Afghan.

Chicken Street, a former poultry market that later became the hub of a bustling tourist bazaar, once gleamed with samovars and jewelry. Merchants hawked fine carpets and furs.

Now, however, "Chicken Street's gleam has become a glimmer, and many shops are closed," says Edwards. As he explains, "Russians have little money for luxuries."

One of the most obvious changes Edwards noticed during his latest 10-day stay in Kabul was the city's growth, possibly tripled to 2 million by villagers fleeing the heavy fighting that has destroyed their homes, crops, and livestock. Perhaps another 4 million Afghan refugees have fled to Pakistan and Iran.

Russian troops are a common sight in Kabul, although Afghan troops perform most guard duty downtown. "Soviet soldiers afoot were a tip-off to the presence of Soviet civilians, who dare not venture out without an armed escort," Edwards writes.

While he was in the city, guerrillas left a suitcase full of explosives in a crowded airport terminal, killing between 13 and 30 people and injuring 200 to 300.

Anti-American posters are conspicuous in Kabul. "Government officials I met were shrill in their denunciation of the United States," Edwards writes, "but on the street Afghans were as cordial as I remembered them."

An Author's Fantastic Life

By INK MENDELSON
Smithsonian News Service

"I have a little cabinet letter file on my desk in front of me. I was thinking and wondering about a title for my story, and I had settled on 'Wizard' as part of it. My gaze was caught by the gilt letters on the three drawers of the cabinet. The first was A-G; the next drawer was labeled H-N; and on the last were the letters O-Z. And Oz it at once became."

In 1903, L. Frank Baum, author of "The Wonderful Wizard of Oz," gave Publisher's Weekly this account of the birth of the word "Oz." Although some students of Baum's life and work have pointed to apparent inconsistencies in Baum's story, Michael Hearn disagrees: "It's just nitpicking," Hearn, author of "The Annotated Wizard of Oz" (Clarkson N. Potter, Inc., 1973) and forthcoming Baum biography, says. "This is the story Baum himself told, and I have no reason to doubt it. Of course," Hearn adds, "the man was a great storyteller, and the name could have come from anywhere — even a tube of tooth paste."

Baum, who wrote 13 Oz sequels and about three dozen other books for children, adolescents and adults, was indeed a superb storyteller. Yet no story Baum ever told was more fascinating than the tale of his own life.

Lyman Frank Baum was born on May 15, 1856 in Chittenango, N.Y., but spent most of a sheltered childhood at Rose Lawn, the Baum country estate outside Syracuse. A shy boy who had been diagnosed as having a defective heart, the youngster spent much of his time with imaginary playmates and books. At 15, he and a younger brother published The Rose Lawn Home Journal. Baum, son of indulgent parents, spent his 20s experimenting with life. He was an actor, salesman, newspaper reporter and theater manager.

"The Maid of Arran," an Irish melodrama, with book, lyrics and music all written by the handsome young lead who was calling himself Louis F. Baum, was a big hit in 1882 and ran for two years. That same year, Baum also embarked upon a truly successful lifelong engagement when he married Maud Gage, daughter of the influential suffragist Matilda Joslyn Gage. Over the years, no-nonsense Maud provided the stability and the awareness of economic realities that the family of a creative dreamer required. Baum was an easygoing and entertaining father to their four sons, who were the first lucky children to share the fantastic imagination of the creator of Oz. Mrs. Gage considered her son-in-law impractical and once in a letter called him "a perfect baby." Nevertheless, she encouraged Baum to write down the stories he had been telling his sons for years.

Following his early success as a playwright, he worked as an axle-grease salesman and authored a treatise on raising chickens in New York; he became the proprietor of a variety store called "Baum's Bazaar" and publisher-editor-humor columnist for The Aberdeen Saturday Pioneer in the Dakota Territory; and he took turns as a reporter, department store crockery buyer, traveling salesman and founder of The Show Window, a periodical for window trimmers in Chicago. But in 1896, the very special life of L. Frank Baum was about to begin at 40. In that year, he completed the manuscripts of his first two childrens books, one of which would be published successfully in 1897 as "Mother Goose in Prose."

"The Wonderful Wizard of Oz" was published in 1900, and the world's love affair with a fantastic place called Oz began. "The children won't let me stop telling the tales of the Land of Oz. I know lots of other stories, and I hope to tell them sometime or another, but just now my loving tyrants won't let me," Baum mock-complained. He had never intended to write a sequel to "The Wizard," let alone a long series, but economic necessity and public demand proved an irresistible combination. Over the years, he received hundreds and hundreds of letters like this one: "I am going to write you a letter. You wrote a nice book. It's called 'The Wizard of Oz.' I couldn't write a book like that. I think I love you."

A new Oz book for Christmas virtually became a tradition for American families. In his sixth Oz book, "The Emerald City of Oz," Baum tried in 1910 to escape from Oz so he could write other kinds of fantasy tales. He informed his young readers that Oz had been cloaked in a barrier of invisibility, sealing it off forever from the rest of the world, and so there could be no more stories about Oz. One newspaperman didn't think Baum was going to get away with it: "The only graceful way Baum can quit telling tales of Oz is to die." He was right. Poor sales of two non-Oz books and a general outcry from his readers forced Baum in "The Patchwork Girl of Oz" to reestablish contact with Oz by wireless telegraph.

At rainbow's end, he found Hollywood. There in 1910 he built his home "Ozcot." Baum brought fantasy to fantasyland before it had any of its own. Once he had made his peace with Oz, he sat in his garden among his prize dahlias, listening to the songbirds in his aviary, answering the call of the children with six more Oz books before his death in 1919.

PBS Series Will Cram Six Novels Into Seven Hours

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Strangers and Brothers," the newest "Masterpiece Theatre" miniseries on public television, raises an interesting artistic question: How much of a good book can you cram into an hour of television time?
Or in this instance, how much of six novels into less than seven hours, allowing host Alistair Cooke five minutes of each episode for his introduction, which in yet another example often seems more interesting than the drama about to unfold.
The quick answer is, not much. Consider this scene in the first hour Sunday night:
Sheila — "What do you believe in?"
Lewis — "I believe in people, I suppose."
Sheila — "Yeah? I believe in joy."
That may have been what the author, C.P. Snow, intended his characters to say, but with insufficient preparation and a quick fade, the brief exchange of sentiment comes across as hollow and trite.

Or what does Lewis see in Sheila, who insists that she does not love him, cannot love him, and never will?
"Other people's passion makes me cruel and uneasy," Sheila (played by Sheila Ruskin) tells her father. Yet Lewis (Shaughan Seymour) persists, and ultimately marries the young woman he recognizes as unstable. Their marriage is doomed from the start.
Again, the viewer must assume Snow spent the better part of a novel developing the relationship. A few lines of script will not support the complex pairing.
Literature can provide the foundation for quality television. Britain's Granada TV proved that with "The Jewel in the Crown," but took 13 hours to dramatize the four novels of Paul Scott's acclaimed "Raj Quartet."

Scott also cooperated with a generous amount of action, while Snow for the most part restricted the dramatics in the "Strangers and Brothers" series of books to the indoors.
Julian Bond, who wrote the script for the British Broadcasting Corp., selected scenes from six of the 11 novels written by Snow from 1940 to 1970 for the "Strangers and Brothers" sequence, and ordered them chronologically (which the author had not done).
The television series (the BBC produced 13 installments, though only seven are part of this set) does constitute a coherent narrative on the life of Lewis Eliot as he journeys through what the author called "the corridors of power" — academic, political, governmental, social.
And the cast is above average, particularly Cheri Lunghi as Margaret Davidson, Elliot's second wife, and Carmen du Sautoy as Ann Simon, wife of Elliot's friend, Charles March (Martyn Jacobs).
Miss Lunghi and Miss du Sautoy co-starred this season in "Praying Mantis" on public TV's "Mystery!"
The six novels that form the basis for the "Masterpiece Theatre" production are "George Passant," "Conscience of the Rich," "The Light and the Dark," "The Masters," "Homecomings" and "The New Man."
Those books, along with the five others grouped as "Strangers and Brothers," made up what Cooke calls the "masterwork" of C.P. Snow, who was born into a lower middle-class family in 1905 and did not begin to write seriously until the age of 35.

Fantasy Holds Forth In Summer Films

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The Western will return, along with James Bond, Mad Max, Big Bird, E.T. and the Ghostbusters, and teen-agers will be cavorting in a variety of fantasies — sexual and otherwise.

That's the outlook for the movie summer of 1985, which the film trade hopes will top last year's record-breaking season.

As usual, it promises to be Steven Spielberg's summer. Last year it was his "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" and "Gremlins." On July 12, Universal is re-releasing "E.T. — The Extra-Terrestrial," the most successful movie of all time with $210 million in rentals.
Spielberg's Amblin Entertainment also will present "Goonies," directed by Richard Donner ("Superman") and featuring teen-agers on "a thrilling, comical and ultimately magical adventure."
Another Spielberg production is "Back to the Future," a comedy adventure directed by Robert Zemeckis about a high school senior played by Michael J. Fox who by an accident is thrust back in time to 1955. There he meets a pair of teen-agers who are to be his parents.
"All the talk I've heard is that we're headed for a very good summer," said Dan Chernow, spokesman for the 148-screen Pacific Theaters. "The best part is that there will be a fair amount of product. I'm not sure it will be a record summer; that depends on whether we can get one or two blockbusters. You never know. Nobody predicted 'Beverly Hills Cop' would do as well as it did."

Clint Eastwood will be back in the saddle again after a nine-year absence. In "Pale Rider," he plays a "nameless stranger whose justice is both swift and terrible" in a California gold rush town.
Columbia is releasing another major Western, "Silverado," directed by Lawrence Kasdan ("The Big Chill") and starring Kevin Kline, Scott Glenn and Linda Hunt.
Paramount is offering a gentle spoof of the singing Western, "Rustler's Rhapsody," with Tom Berenger, Andy Griffith and Patrick Wayne doing the spoofing.
What would summer be without James Bond? Roger Moore returns with a new nemesis, rock singer Grace Jones, in "A View to a Kill."
Mel Gibson joins Grammy award-winning singer Tina Turner in "Mad Max Beyond Thunderdome," third in the Australian-made doomsday adventures.

Another return is Sylvester Stallone in "Rambo: First Blood, Part II."

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY, MAY 4, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today's full moon activates relations with other persons, especially where financial and emotional conditions are concerned. Resentments may easily arise in the evening.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Getting into business affairs early that are hard to handle during the busy week is wise.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) The morning is fine for coming to a meeting of minds with a partner, but do nothing that can make him or her distrust you later.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get busy at the work ahead of you in the morning, and later avoid whatever could bring you trouble of some kind.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) Early make plans for fun, but try not to be extravagant later. Your mate can be very agreeable during the daytime.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You can handle anything that arises at home in the morning wisely, but later do nothing that could cause friction there.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) You may get mail that is important but wait a day or two before answering it so that you do not make any mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) Handle practical affairs in the morning, and later try to be more economical. Take time to make small repairs around the house.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) You can do much in the morning to gain your finest aims, but be careful not to rush into anything like a bull in a china shop.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) Be sure to take care of whatever is bothering you in the morning, and later do not act overly independent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) You can go after some personal aim in the morning, and gain it, but later do not be forceful with others.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Handle home duties in the morning, since after lunch things could get rather hectic at home.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You have fine ideas and should quickly put them in operation and then persevere with whatever is of a proven nature.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have a penetrating mind and be an astute student at whatever is of real interest to your progeny, so give as many advantages as you can. Teach early not to bring problems on the self just for the fun of trying to solve them.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

Beirut Beseiged By Hit-And-Run Militias

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Snipers duelled from skyscrapers and rival militias traded hit-and-run grenade forays across Beirut's green line today, and the shaky national unity government failed to convene to curb the escalating fighting.

Police said six people were killed in dusk-to-dawn hostilities across the green line that slices Beirut into Moslem and Christian sectors. The sporadic barrages of mortar and tank fire, backing grenade-throwing assaults, wounded 41 people, according to reports from police and a patient at a hospital that was shelled. The new casualty figures raised the death toll to 14 killed and 81 injured since the latest Beirut fighting began last Sunday.

The Barbir Hospital on the Moslem edge of the green line in west Beirut was hit by seven artillery shells from the Christian side before dawn, wounding one employee and causing damage to three floors of the seven-story hospital. None of the patients was injured, the Moslem-controlled Voice of the Nation radio station reported.

Reporters saw workers removing debris from the hospital's third, fourth and fifth floors after the shelling that destroyed the kitchen, conference room and library.

Patients on the third floor were evacuated from rooms and wards facing Christian east Beirut to corridors and rooms overlooking the west side of the city as shells began hitting the building, attendants said.

"As we were being removed, one shell exploded," said Monifeh Muzher, a patient. "One medical attendant carrying a patient on a stretcher dove for cover and another was hit by shrapnel in the left eye. He fell down bleeding. It was real scary."

The crackle of gunfire and rocket-propelled grenade explosions echoed through residential neighborhoods close to the line from sundown Thursday to daybreak today. The fighting tapered off at mid-morning into occasional sniping from the Moslem-held 40-story Murr Tower and the Christian-controlled 25-floor Rizk building.

A huge earth mound on the Christian side blocked the last crossing between the two sectors that had remained open during the previous five days of sectarian violence, witnesses said. However, a narrow passage large enough to allow single-lane car traffic was later carved by Christian militiamen.

The Beirut fighting followed a Druse and Moslem offensive that evicted Christians from all coastal areas in south Lebanon, forcing thousands of refugees to flee to the mountain stronghold of Jezzine.

Israeli military sources said about 700 Christian refugees embarked on Lebanese ships today from the port of Haifa to be taken to east Beirut and other Christian-held areas of Lebanon.

The sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said the refugees were brought to the port by bus from the south Lebanese town of Marjayoun.

Refugees began arriving in Israeli-occupied south Lebanon last weekend, mainly from Christian villages around the port of Sidon, overrun by Druse and Moslem forces.

In south Lebanon, witnesses said Israeli-backed militiamen accompanied by Israeli plainclothesmen sealed off roads leading to the strip still occupied by the Israelis.

Only two crossing points to the north were established, on the coastal road at Ras el-Biyada and inland near the village of Beit Yahoun, the witnesses said. Only residents were being allowed to travel in and out.

The witnesses, who declined to be identified, said the construction of a port by an Israeli company was also under way three miles up the Mediterranean coast from the Israeli border. Bulldozers were seen from a distance at work while cranes were placing concrete blocks.

The spiraling sectarian battles shook Prime Minister Rashid Karami's Cabinet, made up of the nation's principal rival Moslem and Christian leaders. The government was formed with Syrian backing a year ago to try to end the 10-year civil war.

The nine-member Cabinet failed to hold a scheduled emergency session at Christian President Amin Gemayel's government palace Thursday to curb the escalating sectarian violence.

Moslem ministers said newly erected Christian militia fortifications on major crossings between the Moslem and Christian sectors made it risky for them to travel to the presidential palace in the Christian suburb of Baabda, five miles east of Beirut.

Christian ministers said they would boycott the session because the Moslem prime minister had failed to publicly denounce the "barbaric killings and looting" in Christian villages that followed the Moslem offensive in south Lebanon.

Police have said the final casualty toll of the offensive was 78 killed and 220 injured. The offensive has displaced an estimated 50,000 Christians. Most have sought refuge in the mountain stronghold of Jezzine, 23 miles southeast of Beirut.

Cubans Go Back Home

HAVANA (AP) — A hundred Cuban military advisers, sent home from leftist Nicaragua as a peace gesture, have arrived in Havana after promising the Nicaraguans they would return if needed to fight enemy aggression.

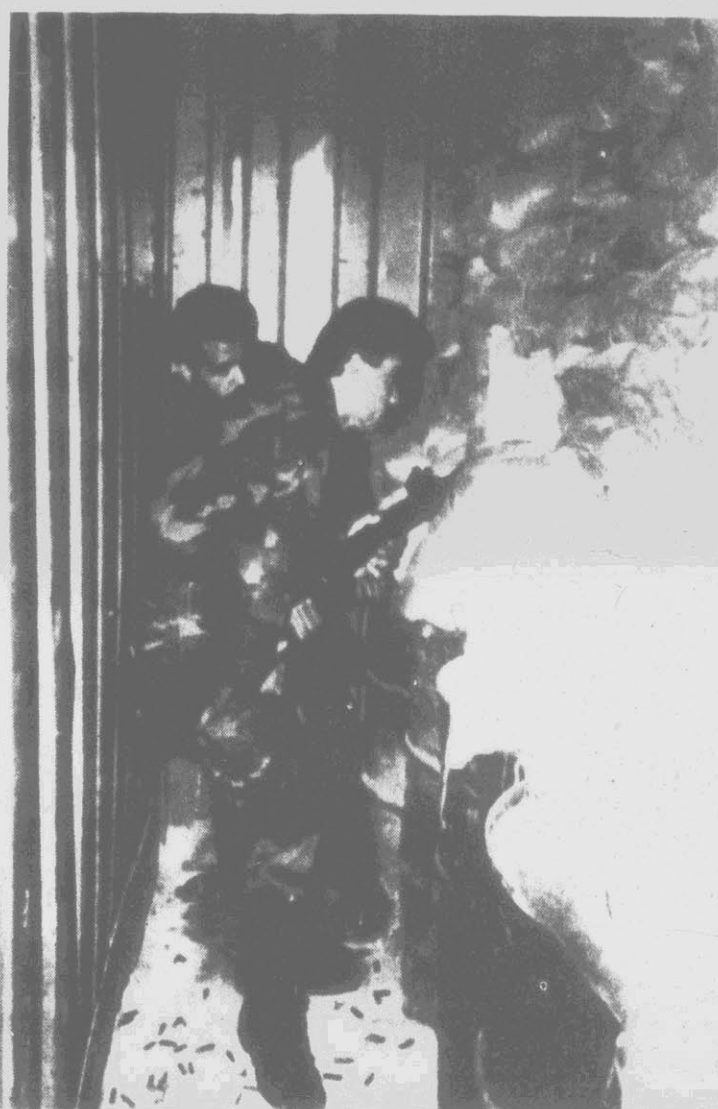

At a farewell ceremony in the Nicaraguan capital Managua, Defense Minister Humberto Ortega of Nicaragua said that despite the withdrawal: "We are not stepping back even one millimeter in our relations with Cuba."

"With this step we are not trembling before the threats of American imperialism, since if it is necessary for them to return, ... then they will return," he said.

Lt. Col. Angel Gonzalez, a Cuban army spokesman, said the 100 men served as military instructors from four months to 14 months and were part of a group sent back by Nicaragua to ease Central American tensions.

President Reagan announced an economic embargo of Nicaragua the day before the Cubans were to depart Nicaragua, and Reagan administration officials characterized their withdrawal as inconsequential.

The Nicaraguans have said there now are 700 Cuban military advisers in their country.

U.S., Poles Trade Barbs

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — A senior Polish official charged today that two U.S. diplomats accused of taking part in an illegal May Day parade were part of an orchestrated U.S. effort to bolster domestic opponents of the government.

The U.S. Embassy denied the allegation and lodged a protest with Poland charging that Krakow police pushed, struck and kicked one of the diplomats and detained both of them for 20 minutes although they identified themselves as U.S. officials.

On Thursday, two leading Solidarity activists — Jacek Kuron and Seweryn Jaworski — were ordered to prison for three months for participating in an illegal but peaceful May Day march last Wednesday in Warsaw.

Kuron is Poland's leading dissident intellectual, and Jaworski is a local leader of the outlawed union.

Shortly before their sentencing, Lech Walesa, leader of the outlawed Solidarity labor union movement, warned of more violence if the Communist government continues to "govern only with clubs" and ignore workers' rights.

Deputy Premier Mieczyslaw F. Rakowski, in a commentary published in all leading state-run newspapers, said, "Two American diplomats heading a miniparade that conspirators managed to organize" exemplified U.S. policy toward Poland's Communist government.

Radio Free Europe and the Voice of America are U.S.-supported radio stations that beam Polish-language broadcasts into Poland.

Pope Criticizes French Movie

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, incensed by a French film that portrays the Virgin Mary as a cabbie's girlfriend and shows her nude, is taking his campaign against it to the international airwaves.

Last week, the pontiff sharply criticized "Je Vous Salue, Marie" (Hail Mary) directed by Jean-Luc Godard, saying it "distorts and insults the spiritual significance" of Christian beliefs.

Italian newspapers said it was the first time in his nearly seven-year pontificate that John Paul, a frequent critic of what he considers media excesses, attacked a work of art by name.

But now he is going even further.

An announcement carried Thursday by Vatican Radio and the Vatican daily, L'Osservatore

Romano, said that the pope will recite the rosary in front of the Apostolic Palace on Saturday evening "to repair the offense inflicted" on the mother of Jesus by the film.

Thatcher's Conservatives Suffer In British Elections

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's ruling Conservatives suffered major losses in local government elections, according to results released today.

The voting for 47 county councils in England and Wales on Thursday was called the biggest test of the British leader's party since she won a second term in June 1983.

The main opposition Labor Party also suffered sharp reverses, but the centrist Liberal-Social Democratic Party alliance gained seats at the expense of both major parties. The biggest change in the elections was the drop in county councils controlled by a single party.

With 45 of the 47 results declared, the number of councils controlled by Conservatives dipped from 18 to nine, the number in which Labor won a majority dropped from 14 to nine, and the councils controlled by independents fell from four to two.

The alliance won the majority of seats in one council, as it had in 1981. The number of county councils without majorities rose from 10 to 24, and as the alliance swept individual seats in these councils, it became the "swing vote" between the two bigger parties.

"The alliance has exceeded all expectations. The political map of Britain has changed. We are now a major contender for government," said Liberal Party leader David Steel.

Conservative Party chairman John Gummer insisted the results were "creditable" for his party but devastating for Labor.

But Labor's environment spokesman John Cunningham said: "Labor entered the elections in control of 14 counties. We have retained control of the majority of them... but it has been a devastating night of defeat for the Tories (Conservatives)."

Thursday's polling took place as the government issued figures showing another rise in British unemployment to 3.27 million or 13.5 percent, one of the highest figures in the industrialized West.

The figures had been expected to fall as the onset of spring encouraged building and other outdoor work.

The Labor result in Thursday's polling belied the party's consistent lead of several points over the Conservatives in all opinion polls in the last three months.

The ballot marked the first county council elections fought by the alliance, a more formidable contender than the Liberals alone. The alliance, formed six months after the 1981 poll, won 25 percent of the vote — though only 23 out of 650 parliamentary districts — in the 1983 general election.

South African Police Use Birdshot, Rubber Bullets To Disperse Blacks

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police said today they used rubber bullets and birdshot against blacks who threw stones and set houses afire in overnight violence in 10 black townships.

Police said there were no new casualties today in the agitation against South Africa's apartheid system, under which 5 million whites dominate more than 22 million blacks and impose legalized racial segregation.

On Thursday, a mob of blacks pelted police with rocks and the officers opened up with shotguns and pistols, killing two of the attackers, authorities said. Three policemen were reported injured. Another black died in a mass assault on the home of a black official who fired into the crowd, a police statement said.

The unrest overnight flared in 10 scattered black townships around Johannesburg and in the eastern Cape Province near the auto-manufacturing city of Port Elizabeth, the scene of the worst of the rioting over the past five weeks.

Police said they arrested a 12-year-old black boy after he had set a house ablaze in a black area outside Fort Beaufort, in the eastern Cape Province, about 530 miles south of Johannesburg.

Most of the unrest around Johannesburg involved gangs of blacks roaming through townships setting fire to homes and stoning police vehicles, police said.

A spokesman, who spoke on condition of anonymity under police policy, said: "At no stage did the size of the groups exceed 23 persons. It would appear that some of these groups were responsible for more than one incident."

Police reported clashes or incidents of arson in seven communities in eastern Cape Province.

They said officers with shotguns loaded with bird shot battled stone-throwing blacks at Langa, where, on March 21, police shot and killed 21 blacks who were marching to a funeral. Two policemen were wounded, police said. Bird shot is a lightly packed shotgun shell.

Police said they arrested 14 blacks in a house outside Port Elizabeth, where the group was assembling gasoline bombs. The bombs consist of bottles of gasoline stuffed with an oil-soaked rag that can be lit and thrown.

"Seven of those arrested were under 18 years of age," the police spokesman said.

The Thursday battle in which police opened fire took place in Kwanobuhle, a riot-torn black township nine miles inland from Port Elizabeth, according to a police statement.

It said police on a truck shot into a mob of stone-throwing blacks, killing one man, and a shotgun blast killed another when the blacks regrouped and attacked again.

The third black was killed when a black township councillor fired on a crowd attacking his home near the Orange Free State town of Welkom, police reported.

Black mobs have made frequent attacks on other blacks they see as collaborating with the government.

Since unrest began in late August, police say more than 200 people have been killed. Opposition groups put the number at more than 300.

Ethiopian Refugees Face Cold In Long Trek

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Relief officials say 33,000 famine victims evicted by the Marxist government from a relief camp may die in the next two weeks as they trek through cold mountain weather to their homes.

But Maj. Dawit Wolde Giorgis, the government relief director, insisted that the people who left the Ibnet camp last Sunday were healthy and were acting voluntarily.

Giorgis said they were heading home to plant crops now that rain had begun to fall on the parched country.

He said the government would supply them with food, seed, fertilizer, tools and oxen.

The Rev. Jack Finnucane, who helped run the camp, said he saw famine victims forced out in "a very harsh" manner. Flying over the camp in a light plane, he saw starving children and elderly people trudging along mountain paths below, he said.

Dawit took U.N. official Kurt Jansson on a helicopter tour Thursday over Ibnet, which is 250 miles northwest of Addis Ababa. Jansson, an assistant U.N. secretary-general, is coordinating aid operations in Ethiopia.

A U.N. official who spoke on condition he was not identified said: "They will want to determine whether some people are, in fact, marching to their death and also whether they will get the seed and tools and things when they reach home."

For many of the people from Ibnet, in Ethiopia's northwestern Gondar region, the march home will take two weeks.

"Some simply won't make it," said Finnucane, head of the Irish charity Concern. He said he witnessed the three-day eviction, which began Sunday at the camp — the largest of 225 feeding centers this East African nation.

Makeshift shelters for all but 3,000 of the sickest people were burned after authorities closed most of the camp. Finnucane told The Associated Press. The facility was run by 500 relief workers from Concern, the U.S.-based group World Vision International and the Ethiopian Orthodox Church.

Ethiopian officials told Concern on Saturday that the people were ordered out of Ibnet because its population of 61,000 was too large and there was danger of epidemic, said Finnucane, a Roman Catholic priest.

But he said the camp was large enough. "We were actually trying to improve the infrastructure," he said. "We were drilling for water and had dug five wells."

A relief spokesman at U.N. headquarters in New York said Jansson had reported that an Ethiopian official was fired because shelters were burned.

The spokesman, Djibril Diallo, also said Jansson reported that the decision to expel the famine victims "taken at the local level." No force was used, and the straw huts were burned only after the last inhabitants left, he said.

Virginia Tech Developing Computer To Handle Grain Marketing System

BLACKSBURG, Va. (AP) — With the touch of a button, grain traders one day may be able to sell a truckload of corn to a Michigan factory or buy several train cars full of Kansas wheat.

The capability would come from a computerized grain marketing system being developed at Virginia Tech. Merchandisers now depend on the telephone to find buyers and sellers of corn, soybeans, wheat and other grains.

James B. Bell and Wayne D. Purcell, professors of agriculture economics at Tech, already have devised a computerized system for livestock marketing that is being used commercially to sell 500,000 hogs, 200,000 market lambs, 100,000 slaughter cattle and 25,000 feeder cattle a year.

"One of the major savings would be in the time traders wouldn't have to spend searching for bids and offers," Bell said of using a computer to market grain. "And there would be savings in transportation, hopefully."

Steve Turner, a Tech research associate working with Bell, is nearly finished developing what he describes as a "rough first draft" of the grain marketing program.

As it is set up now, the system would allow traders to post what they want to buy or what they would like to sell, along with any stipulations. A company could say, for example, that it only wanted Kansas wheat shipped by rail. It could also say what it would be willing to pay for it.

Firms on the system would be able to call up the trade proposals on the screen of a computer terminal. They would be able to make counter offers, just like they now do by telephone. When someone agreed to a trader's terms, the computer would beep to let the trader know he had made a deal.

Turner envisions the day when contracts could be printed by computer and signed by electronic signatures.

The Merchants Exchange of St. Louis, an association with 150 members that trades barge-loads of grain delivered to New Orleans, is considering trying the system being developed at Virginia Tech, said Morris Larson, executive vice president.

"Certainly the technology is there now, but whether it's cost effective, we're not really sure," he said. "I personally think it would be an opportunity for us. It would open up more markets and give us more exposure to different markets."

Some people in the grain business believe the computer could decrease the need for brokers, who connect buyers with sellers. Others think such a system only would work in specialized markets like the Merchants Exchange.

"My own personal bias would tell me that the grain markets are awfully efficient the way they are now," said Keith Kendall, secretary-treasurer of the National Grain and Feed Association in Washington.

COMPUTERIZED GRAIN — Steve Turner, a research associate in agriculture, at Virginia Tech, works on a computer program designed to market grain. The system, when it becomes operational, would replace several separate steps now done manually. (AP Laserphoto)

House Panel Calls For New Pensions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A House Armed Services subcommittee voted in closed session to cut spending on military pensions by $4 billion as a way of forcing reforms in the system, sources said today.

The military personnel subcommittee also directed Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger late Thursday to develop a new pension plan for future military personnel that conforms to the reduced fund, said the sources, speaking on condition they not be named.

The tentative decision supports a proposal by Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin, D-Wis., who wants to reduce from $18.2 billion to $14.2 billion the amount the government would spend on pensions next year.

Under the Pentagon's current system, individuals may retire at 50 percent of base pay for life after 20 years of service.

The vote came as the panel made preliminary decisions on a bill authorizing Pentagon spending for fiscal 1986.

The full committee will vote on the bill next week and then it will be sent to the floor of the Democrat-controlled House. The version approved by the House will eventually be reconciled with the Pentagon bill passed by the Republican-controlled Senate.

The subcommittee also voted Thursday to retain current pension rates for 2.1 million men and women now on active duty and 1.1 million people who are retired, the sources said.

The panel also halved the Pentagon's request for 25,000 more personnel and followed the lead of the Senate Armed Services Committee in voting to delay until Jan. 1 a proposed 3 percent pay increase the administration wants to implement in July, said the sources.

Couple Indicted

GREENSBORO (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted a Winston-Salem couple on a charge of kidnapping a deputy U.S. marshal and an investigator with the Department of Health and Human Services.

The six-count indictment issued Monday names David Harding Roberts, 36, and his wife, Mary Kathleen Milburn Roberts, 32, of Winston-Salem. Another indictment charged the couple with falsifying their Social Security account number.

The Roberts had used the false identification to lease their apartment, the indictment said.

On March 21, U.S. Marshal Arthur Philip Templeton and HHS investigator Edward Norris LeFavre Jr. arrived at the couple's apartment to arrest them on the Social Security charge.

The indictment said Roberts held two men at gunpoint before he and his wife fled.

Makes you glad you've got a vinyl pool.

Baquacil attacks bacteria and algae without attacking the vinyl liner... or you.

Baquacil is a different kind of pool sanitizer because it is recommended for vinyl pools and it has no chlorine. It won't sting your eyes like chlorine. And it has no odor. Baquacil keeps your pool as bacteria free as chlorine ever did, and does not bleach your vinyl liner. Stop in soon and ask for Baquacil. Look for the display on Baquacil.
