U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole told East Carolina University graduates Saturday to "build upon the painstaking efforts of your elders" when taking on future leadership roles.

Life after graduation requires "flexibility, adaptability and creativity," she told more than 2,500 graduates at ECU's 76th commencement and a crowd estimated at 10,000 in Ficklen Stadium.

"Graduates today have been prepared for a new and different world," she said. "As you leave this campus, don't forget why you came. So long as the books are open, minds can never be closed."

Mrs. Dole is a native of Salisbury, N.C., and the wife of Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., and has been a member of the Reagan cabinet since 1983. She is a graduate of Duke University and Oxford University, and holds a law degree from Harvard University. Prior to accepting the Cabinet post, she served as Assistant to the President for Public Liaison.

She is a former Federal Trade commissioner, a former deputy special assistant to the President and a former staff assistant to the assistant secretary of Health, Education and Welfare.

Mrs. Dole urged graduates to "become involved in the joy of public service. It's the best way to make a living. Be a part of history in the making." She added that "your day is just dawning — leave the world a better place for the next generation."

The third honorary degree in ECU's history, the color of letters, was awarded to the visiting official.

Mrs. Dole said the role of women in the work force, in the professions and government is increasing dramatically. She said she was impressed that Greenville's city manager and mayor are both women.

"Women will find themselves in ever-increasing demand. The double standard (for women) is about to go the way of hoop skirts and horseless carriages," she commented.

Trustees Receive Ex Officio Member

Brown, an environmental health major, was sworn in by Greenville Mayor Janice Buck.

Brown replaces past SGA President John Raney of Enfield, who graduated Saturday and was honored by a resolution adopted by the board citing his "outstanding contributions" as president of the SGA and as a member of the board of trustees.

In addition to approving the list of degree candidates for graduation, the trustees approved the expenditure of up to $232,000 to renovate the medical school's family practice clinic in Bethel, and $528,000 to air condition portions of Scott Dorm.

Trustees also adopted a resolution endorsing "the principles and objectives" contained in a statement on intercollegiate athletics made by the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division 1-A university chief executives following their meeting in Miami in March.

The resolution said "In general the statement supports strengthening the autonomy and governance of Division 1-A institutions within the Medical School Graduates 52 New Doctors

Friday was a day of endings and beginnings for students of East Carolina University's fifth graduating medical school class. The day signalled the end of each member's 1,360-day journey in medical education, but also signalled the beginning of new roles, moves to new places.

The class of 1985, the largest ever, was graduated in a 3 p.m. commencement ceremony at the Brody Medical Sciences Building. Dr. William R. Laupus in opening comments applauded the class of 42 men and 10 women as the most "unique and caring" to come out of eastern North Carolina.

Saying the ceremony brought an end to the students' respective 1,360 days or four years of medical education, Dr. Laupus told members of the capacity crowd that he as dean of the school of medicine was proud of the students' accomplishments, proud that 34 percent of the class would be going into the primary care field of family medicine. After recognizing attending dignitaries, Laupus introduced the principal graduation speaker, Dr. William R. DeBakey.

Dr. DeBakey, an acclaimed heart surgeon and Chancellor of the Baylor College of Medicine in Houston, Texas, is best known for his innovations in cardiac surgery. He was the first to successfully use a heart pump in a cardiac patient.

DeBakey told those attending that ethics and economics of high-techonolgy medicine were topics that young graduates would certainly face in their roles as medical doctors.

"The remarkable advances achieved by medical research in recent years have made it possible to extend the life of patients as well as the quality of that life. Americans, aware of these unprecedented developments, have come to expect, indeed to demand, high-technology health care," DeBakey said.

"But the new ultrasophisticated techniques that have extended so many lives," he explained, "have greatly magnified the cost of health care and have raised wrenching ethical and social questions that will confront you as young physicians."

Citing the number of advances in medicine over the last half of the 20th century, DeBakey said that while some of those innovations have been spectacular, "they have raised a rash of problems — economic, social, moral and ethical.

"Can we afford them?" he asked. "How do we control the escalating costs? How do we provide the new services for those who cannot afford to pay? How do we reconcile society's ever-increasing demands and expectations of medicine with its declining level of support? How do we accomodate government regulations and bureacratic intrusions in atempts to maintain cost-effectiveness? What role should medical and professional judgement play in ethical dilemmas? How do we define the difference between prolonging life and prolonging death?"

Those dilemmas are for the most part insoluble, he answered, urging students nonetheless to try to deal with those questions.

"As physicians you will face daily the conflict between the interests of an individual patients and those of society, a conflict that remains unresolved except on an individual basis. Despite the strongly held opinions for and against costly high-technology health care of the newborn, the gravely ill, the handicapped and the aged, neither ethicists nor economists and neither physicians nor politicians have devised satisfactory guidelines for providing every citizen with optimal, but economical, health care.

"A crucial need today is for our society to bring its expectations regarding health care in line with the realities of the economics and of present-day diagnosis and treatment."

In closing comments to the class, DeBakey pointed out the importance of prevention in controlling escalating medical costs.

"Finally," he said, "we shall probably not reduce the cost of health care any substantial degree until we educate each citizen to take personal responsibility for maintaining his health instead of seeking to repair it after he becomes ill. Such a shift from treatment to prevention would effect significant savings. The axiom that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure was never truer than in health economics today."

Jordan Says Democrats Need To Advertise Party

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Saturday that "the Democratic party doesn't need saving, it just needs advertising."

Jordan, speaking to about 150 persons who attended a party rally at the Pitt County Wildlife Club near Falkland, said "North Carolina is what it is because of places like Falkland," which he said is "one of the smallest incorporated towns" in the state.

"Thank all of you for making me lieutenant governor. But I'm not sure I want to thank you for making me head of the Democratic Party at the same time." Jordan referred to the fact that because Gov. Jim Martin is a Republican, the lieutenant governor holds the highest elective office of any Democrat in the state.

According to Jordan, Martin received a mandate from the people when elected governor. But Jordan said so did the majority of office-holders in the state, who are Democrats.

"We don't need to be going out there taking power away from the governor," Jordan suggested. "We need to work hard, but do it in the right way.

"We have a responsible Legislature," composed primarily of Democrats, which he said should "not do things for political reasons." Instead, Jordan said, Democrats should provide the leadership "to make things happen."

But Jordan suggested that "the executive branch does not have the leadership."

He said he met with Martin "Wednesday afternoon," and "told the governor we'd be glad to work with him." Thursday morning, Jordan said, the governor told members of the press that he would "sue the Legislature" over the Administrative Powers act.

"Jordan said "that's evidence to me he does not want a good relationship with the Legislature."

Saying "we're going to give serious consideration to tax cuts" in the General Assembly, Jordan contended that the tax program proposed by the Democratic-controlled Legislature is "more responsible than the tax-cut package" proposed by Martin.

"Look at the Democratic Party. We're going foward in a positive way," Jordan emphasized.

"We need to begin again. We need to reach out. People are still registered as Democrats. We've got to sell the Democratic Party.

"The Democratic Party will work in a way it's never worked before," Jordan said. "It's not a Bob Jordan party. It's not a Jim Hunt party. It's got to be the people's party.

"We need to tell the story," Jordan said. "We're offering things that are good for people. We just need to tell our story.

Pitt County Democratic Party Chairman J.B. Spilman, who presided at the rally, encouraged the group to "tell a lot of people what we are ... say something good about the Democratic Party. Enthusiasm is contagious.

"Start saying good things about the Democratic Party, and Operation Switch," the Republican Party's campaign to get Democrats to switch their party registration, "will not get off the ground in Pitt County," Spilman said.

ceremony, Chancellor and Mrs. John Howell held a reception-luncheon for Mrs. Dole at the chancellor's house. Among those in attendance were former Chancellor and Mrs. Leo Jenkins.

Other speakers at the ceremony included Sven Layne Van Baars, vice president of the senior class; Chancellor Howell, and Roy Carroll, vice president for planning of the the University of North Carolina.

"At the first commencement in 1909, 13 were graduated from the two-year program. Today, we award over 2,500 graduate and undergraduate degree and the university's third honorary doctorate. That is indeed an impressive advance," Howell said.

Howell said that "this is indeed a happy day to review the accomplishments of this university and these graduates. The past tells us that we can face the future with pride and confidence."

Sen. John East, who was scheduled to introduce Mrs. Dole, was unable to attend the commencement.

NCAA" and "makes specific recommendations which call for the creation of a board of presidents of Division 1-A member institutions." The resolution also said the statement "further addresses concerns intended to affirm the primacy of academic priorities, revise recruitment policies and regulations to lessen pressure on prospective student athletes, and strengthen rules and enforcement policies and procedures."

The statement on intercollegiate athletics itself emphasized that "the integrity of academic institutions rests fundamentally upon the missions of teaching and research," and among other things recommended that "freshmen be ineligible to participate in those varsity sports which create substantial threats to successful academic adjustment, such as football and basketball."

In his report to the board, Chancellor John Howell cited the success of the University Scholars Awards program fund drive, which he said had a goal of "at least 20 endowments" by May 4. "We now have 23 endowed," he said, including "10 by trustees or members of the (ECU) Foundation executive committee."

Howell noted that C.D. "Don" Langston of Winterville has established four University Scholars Awards endowments, which enabled the university to surpass the goal of 20.

The endowments of $40,000 each will provide $3,000 a year to the scholars award recepient.

Motorcade Accident

BARRINGTON HILLS, Ill. (AP) — Two vehicles in Vice President George Bush's motorcade collided Saturday, but no one was injured and the vice president was not even aware of the accident, a White House spokesman said.

Bush's motorcade had stopped in this Chicago suburb so that he could attend a private fund-raiser at a home when the accident occurred, said Ed Murnane, a White House spokesman.

"It involved an ambulance rear-ending one of the vans in which White House staff members and guests" had been riding, Murnane said. He said Bush's motorcade normally has 15 to 20 vehicles and that an ambulance is always included.

The two vehicles, occupied only by their drivers, were trying to park in a private driveway, Murnane said.

He said Bush "was not even aware" of the accident and "was out of his car at the time."

The vehicles were still serviceable and continued with the vice president's motorcade to Wheaton College in Wheaton, where Bush was to deliver the school's commencement address and to receive an honorary degree.

The ambulance belonged to the Barrington Rescue Squad, police said.

Murnane said the van belonged to a private citizen and was being driven by a volunteer.

Scholarship Winner

Angela Trueblood, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Trueblood of Bethel, has been awarded a $750 scholarship by Stanhome Inc., of Westfield, Mass.

The North Pitt senior qualified on the basis of her college test scores, grades, biographical information and secondary school reports. Miss Trueblood is on the principal's list and is currently an honor roll student. She plans to study business management.

Schools Participate

Students and teachers from H.B. Sugg and Farmville Middle schools will participate in "Imagination Celebration," a statewide arts festival for middle grade students, in Winston-Salem today through Friday.

Pitt County participants will attend a performance by Ta Fantastika, a Czech "black light" theater group. Students from Farmville Middle will also see a magician at Old Town Elementary in Winston-Salem.

The program has four levels, including performances by three nationally-known groups, small group performances by professional artists, peer group exhanges and hands-on art experiences.

Literary Festival

The North Pitt High School English Department has recently completed its fourth annual literary festival, which featured films and poster-making by students.

Students viewed "A Tale of Two Cities," "Moby Dick," and "Becket." Literary Club members made posters for the celebration and displayed them in hallways.

The festival is held each spring to add emphasis to the study of literature.

N.C. Math Week

Students at G.R. Whitfield School celebrated North Carolina Mathematics Week with math and poster contests.

A school wide contest was held to see which student had the "most valuable name." Money value was assigned to alphabet letters, and those values tallied by students. The winner was Glenn Russell Whitehurst, Jr., with a name value of $3.96.

Student Field Trip

Seventh grade students at G.R. Whitfield School took a field trip to the home of Mrs. Al Bertlet recently in conjunction with studies about Japan.

Mrs. Bartlet, who lived in Japan for several years, shared souvenirs with the students and spoke about Japanese life and how it differs from American life. Students tasted Japanese green tea and learned some basic Japanese expressions.

Brodin Is Speaker

Eric Brodin, newpaper columnist and professor of philosophy of business at Campbell University, will be the guest speaker at the annual Small Business Award Luncheon sponsored by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The award luncheon is scheduled for noon May 15 at Greenville Golf and Country Club.

Brodin is a native of Gothenburg, Sweden, and attended San Francisco University, the University of California at Berkeley and the University of Geneva. He began his writing career at the Daily Californian and has served as western director of the Intercollegiate

Graduates Have Training, Models To Be Successful

For 2,813 East Carolina University graduate and undergraduate students, this was graduation weekend. They were joined by 53 ECU medical school students whose convocation was held Friday afternoon.

The speaker for the graduation ceremonies was U.S. Transportation Secretary Elizabeth H. Dole. Dr. Michael DeBakey of Houston delivered the convocation address to the medical graduates.

Graduation can be awesome. After years of study the graduate is at last facing the world and a lifetime of labor that can be fulfilling or frustrating. This year's graduates can draw their inspiration from the speakers. Elizabeth Dole graduated from Duke University in 1958. Now she is one of the brightest political stars in the nation. She has been mentioned as a possible candidate for the U.S. Senate and her name is heard as a possible vice presidential candidate. That should demonstrate to a graduate that anything is possible with dedication and hard work.

Dr. DeBakey is a famed heart surgeon who has devoted his life to healing. He should be an example to the young physicians who have just received their doctor of medicine degrees.

Our young graduates face an exciting future. There are those who preach doomsday for the world, but certainly those who are graduating don't have to buy that. While we have the technology to destroy ourselves we also have the technology to build a far better world. Our society has changed at a breathtaking pace in this century. It will change equally as much in the decades ahead. East Carolina's graduates will be at the forefront because they have been trained to assume leadership roles in our future.

Reading Study Missed Its Mark

Anyone who has a $125,000 grant to spend on a study of a better way to teach reading, and winds up with mostly trite advice to use better-trained teachers, could be excused for losing their cool. For that kind of money, and with two years to produce, the seeker deserved more meat and potatoes as well as an imaginative approach.

Standardized test scores have shown advanced reading skills have slipped since the 1960s. Reading skills are essential to everyone. Factually, the better-trained-teachers advice carried with it one more year of college work, but other suggestions were also made. Involved parents were termed a factor, as was ready access to books. Pre-kindergarten starts were indicated, as were fewer workbooks and skill sheets for the pupils. None of it stirred adrenalin.

A lot of old ground was covered.

The teacher who uncovers a better way to teach reading will be involved in a lot of hands-on work with the little people ... and somewhere along the line where he approaches a throwing-up-of-hands-stage, the breakthrough.

For now the old-fashioned way must do.

Sunday Morning Notes

Alvin Taylor

Readers often express interest in old Greenville. That is, the Greenville which existed before urban sprawl changed its face forever.

Well, there was a time when Greenville was a tobacco center and a farm trading center. The only thing that set it apart from other towns was the presence of East Carolina Teachers College here. There were no suburban areas. Where the city limits fell, the rural areas started.

Who recalls Flemings Crossroads? It was a typical rural crossroads with several country stores. Businesses are still there, but Fleming's Crossroads has an airport nearby and the Greenville Utilities operations center close by. It is at the intersection of Mumford Road and Airport Road with North Greene Street. Certainly its character has decidedly changed.

A couple of miles down North Greene, which was then the main highway to Bethel (N.C. 11), stood House Station. It still carries that designation but the old station was moved to Charles Boulevard and is now a Realtor's office. Where was it? House Station was on the Coastline tracks at the industrial area north of Greenville. Industrial shipments are now designated for consignment there. In the old days farm supplies were the primary freight which was unloaded at House Station. After all, there were only farms in the area.

Rural locations continue to lose their rural flavor as growth continues in Pitt County. Years ago Bells Fork on N.C. 43 East was a reference point several miles out of Greenville as one drove to Atlantic Beach. Now there is a convenience store and other businesses there. Soon a shopping center will be built there. Bells Fork is on its way to becoming an urbanized area.

Of course, there are those who remember when Red Oak was mostly a church and a few houses on the Farmville highway (U.S. 264). The highway then was the extension of Dickinson Avenue. Greenville Boulevard, now 264, wasn't even there.

Greenville Boulevard developed, however, and the church, Red Oak Christian, moved to a new building facing on it. Later Greenville Boulevard was multilaned and the area referred to as Red Oak has gradually expanded to include subdivisions and shopping areas.

The new Red Oak Christian Church, by the way, was destroyed by a tornado which damaged much property in the area. Its resolute congregation promptly built it back.

Pitt County is full of crossroads which haven't been changed by the march of progress. There's Roundtree, Shelmerdine, Calico, Toddy, Cannons Crossroads, Haddocks Crossroads, Dupree Crossroads, Sharp Point and Hollywood Crossroads.

We are glad that they and many others are still there. Building and improving is exciting, but the colorful crossroads of Pitt County offer us stability.

Roots Run Shallow

Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — Just how deep lie the roots of the House Democratic victory on Nicaragua is suggested by an anti-contra lobbying group's private report quoting Majority Leader Jim Wright as blessing the Managua regime's staged elections.

An internal memorandum by the Coalition for a New Foreign and Military Policy quotes Wright as telling "peace" lobbyists in his Fort Worth district in February: "The Sandinistas might have come in by force, but they (have) been ratified by elections."

"That doesn't sound like anything I said," Wright told us, and then went on to contradict Nicaragua's claim of free elections. But the internally circulated document makes clear that, however unwittingly, he gave the impression he was endorsing communist-style democracy.

That is a peculiar posture for longtime anti-communist Jim Wright. But it stems naturally from the iron rule of the House Democratic Caucus that makes support for anti-Sandinista guerrillas unacceptable. Wright survived his earlier backing of aid for El Salvador against communist insurgents, but he could not dare back the contras and hope to become speaker following the 1986 election.

Thus, the House vote on Nicaragua shows no place in the party for faithful followers of Sen. Henry M. (Scoop) Jackson. They must, like Wright and House Majority Whip Thomas Foley (a Jackson protege), accommodate prevailing sentiment or forget party leadership. Indeed, the sight of Wright and Foley fighting the anti-communist resistance in Central America was a final reason why Jeane Kirkpatrick became a Republican.

The necessity among House Democrats to so conform arises partly from partisan passion to pay back Ronald Reagan. But desire for revenge has put party policy in the hand of left-wing idealogues and leads to Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill taking his opinions from radical Maryknoll nuns.

The tone of a recent House debate conformed to the mindset of some 15 Democratic House members who last summer signed an appeal for financial aid to Marxist guerrillas in El Salvador. One of them, now Sen. Tom Harkin of Iowa, went to Managua to serve as a conduit for successful Sandinista lobbying of Congress.

To reassure themselves about the danger inherent in this game, Democrats point to low American public support for the contras. But that only reflects years of hesitancy by the White House staff and State Department to commit the president's full prestige on Central America.

Communications Director Pat Buchanan is the first senior White House aide who sees no higher priority than such a commitment. But he was blocked in seeking an 11th-hour Reagan speech before the contra vote, falling to Republican preoccupation with the budget. The counterpoint to Democratic obsession with protecting Sandinistas is Republican apathy over saving contras.

Yet, word has filtered up to Capitol Hill of how a steely eyed Buchanan in White House meetings promises retribution for the Democrats if Central America is lost. That causes trepidation among those Democrats who attended a recent dinner of the Coalition for a Democratic Majority (CDM), the Scoop Jackson remnant.

At the dinner, Sen. Sam Nunn (seconded by House Foreign Affairs Committee Chairman Dante Fascell) proposed a reasonable compromise for contra aid. It was embraced a week later in a presidential letter after administration negotiations with Nunn and fellow Jacksonite Sens. David Boren and Bennett Johnston.

That enabled aid to pass the Senate, but with only 10 Democratic votes. Its impact in the House was non-existent. Wright and Foley neither turned up at the CDM dinner nor showed interest in Nunn's initiative.

Boren lectured a closed-door Senate Democratic Conference to practice the "moderation" that party leaders now preach. But when he says, "We'll have another Cuba (in Nicaragua), only you can't walk to the United States from Cuba," he turns off fellow Democrats — even Jim Wright, hurrying to the speakership.

Youthful Offenders

Paul T. O'Connor

RALEIGH — One public policy issue which the state seems incapable of making a final decision on is once again before the General Assembly. The question of incarcerating status offenders has made its annual trek to the Legislature.

In 1977, the assembly decided that status offenders could not be sent to training schools. Status offenders are children who break a law which is designed only for children. There is no comparable law for adults.

For example, a child can be determined to be a status offender if he skips school, runs away from home or proves to be generally unmanageable. Adults can't be thrown in jail for skipping work, running away or being obnoxious, so why should children face incarceration for the same kind of behavior?

But while such equality sounds good in theory, the state's juvenile court judges have been complaining about the 1977 law since 1977. They say the law takes away all of their leverage with an unruly child. If they can't threaten to send him to training school for skipping school, the child will continue to play hooky.

Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, has filed a bill that would re-establish a judge's authority to put a status offender in the slammer. Her bill would set up a process under which chronic status offenders could be sent to juvenile detention centers for 5, 10 or 15 days for repeated offenses. The bill prompted an outcry from children's advocates.

"This bill is the result of two years of study by the Juvenile Law Study Commission," Mrs. Barnes said, "so I don't want people to think it came out of nowhere.

"The problem has been brought to us repeatedly by the courts and a number of judges that they just don't have the tools they need to in some cases, the cases of the chronic status offenders," she said.

Most status offenders who come before the court are directed into programs, and are never a problem again, she said. "For others it doesn't work. They're back again and again."

Under the procedure proposed by Mrs. Barnes, a judge could ask a committee of school, social service and law enforcement officials to investigate the case of a chronic status offender. They would then report to the judge.

After a status offender had been adjudicated as undisciplined for the third time, the judge could order him detained in a juvenile detention center for up to five days. After a fourth adjudication, the child could spend 10 days there and after a fifth, 15 days.

Mrs. Barnes said that the threat of the time in detention "will establish a respect for the court and the law" among chronic status offenders.

Magic

Norman Sandler

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan flew to Europe last week to engage in some image-building public diplomacy, dogged by a single disturbing question: has the Great Communicator lost his magic?

After beginning his second term on the strength of a 49-state electoral mandate, Reagan — regarded by no less a critic than House Speaker Thomas O'Neill as the most popular politician he has ever seen — has encountered the most serious string of setbacks, defeats and missteps of his presidency.

The furor over his brief visit to the German military cemetery at Bitburg has, by all accounts, become Reagan's worst public relations crisis and has clouded the departure this month of chief image shaper Michael Deaver.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan offered some classic understatement when he told an interviewer, "There have been easier weeks; I will admit that."

Reagan himself may have been thinking about his recent spate of problems earlier last week when he told guests at a Rose Garden ceremony, "Some days are happier than others."

The mishandling of the Bitburg affair is only one of several episodes that threaten to weaken Reagan's political hand and scratch his Teflon coating — all the while raising new questions about the competence of his senior advisers.

Four years ago, Reagan was riding high. Backed by a popular mandate, he came into office with ambitious set of first-year goals and the political capital to persuade Congress to enact his tax and spending cuts and chart a new course for government from that of the New Deal and Great Society.

By the 1982 elections, Reagan saw his good fortune begin to subside. Although Congress became even more recalcitrant during the next two years, the outcome of the 1984 elections — a 49-state sweep — appeared to re-energize the Reagan White House.

Reagan won his first showdown with Congress by vetoing emergency farm aid to farmers and threatening to do the same with any other big spending bills that reach his desk.

But the defeat of his aid request for Nicaraguan rebels and the continued specter of an almost $230 billion deficit next year indicated the second honeymoon was short-lived.

Reagan and his lieutenants had hoped to move quickly to place his second-term agenda before the public and drum up the support needed to ram his legislative priorities through Congress. Instead, the month of April saw him become mired in a political quagmire.

Some observers were critical of the decision to push the Contra aid at the same time as the deficit-reduction plan hammered out between the White House and the Senate Republican leadership. Others contended Reagan has had no clear legislative strategy for the last several months, despite the return of experienced White House lobbyist Max Friedersdorf to oversee such matters.

His current concerns could become further entangled on his return from Europe by the long-awaited presentation of a far-reaching tax reform plan that will require careful — and prolonged — consideration on Capitol Hill.

The defeats and setbacks have done nothing to dampen presidential zeal reinforced by White House chief of staff Donald Regan and communications director Patrick Buchanan. But therein could lie part of the problem.

To the editor:

I have always heard that beauty is skin deep. There is another beauty that comes from the hearts of all. God gave us a beautiful world. It has all the things that make up beauty. I love the colors of flowers, grass and trees. There are different colors of water in the lakes and rivers. The beauty of that is the amount of water that can constantly be there. All of these are our natural beauty. God loves us and he wants us to live his world. It's in his plan for us to beautify it with praise, prayer and accepting. God provided us with churches for all to take heart and worship, giving thanks for all his blessings. Yet I find only a small portion of our nation's people ever go in a church door.

Let's tell it like it is, could all these bad happenings of today have come from us leaving God out of our plans. Lately I have read much in our Bible and it leads me to believe these problems come from our own neglect to listen to God. We all could change things around by our fevrent prayers and actions.

Dear people, wouldn't it be worth going to church most of the time to get all these bad things out of our way so all of us could have a good relationship, to keep down droughts, famines and sickness from our nation. It is my prayer that each of us can someday see the beauty of the "promised land." We can be sure that through it all, it will be worth it.

To the editor:

I, as a parent of a senior at D.H. Conley High School, was very disappointed to learn that after going to the expense of ordering a large number of graduation announcements, etc., that the seniors will only be allowed 10 tickets each to give to friends and relatives.

I think it was a tacky idea, especially putting it on their graduation cards. Who wants to send an announcement when the person will not be allowed to come. What is a few hours of inconvenience to 12 years of struggle to get them to one of the most important moments of their young lives?

To the friends and relatives who won't be able to attend D.H. Conley's graduation, class of 1985, please accept the senior class and their parents' apology.

Budget May Depend On Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The budget compromise President Reagan accepted earlier this spring now lies in tatters in the Senate, but Republican leaders insist their ambitious, three-year plan to reduce deficits by $300 billion is alive and well.

And they may be right — if they can finesse the delicate matter of higher taxes.

"What's more important than the votes is the huge consensus, bipartisan in nature, that seems to me to be very, very firm, that a package close to the size that we have is on everybody's mind," Sen. Pete V. Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of the Senate Budget Committee, said Friday after a week of highly publicized defeats for the GOP leadership.

There is no reason to doubt the Republican intention to cut spending. Fifty GOP senators swallowed their strong objections to individual components of the original GOP budget long enough to provide a symbolic show of support.

Nor can there be any serious doubt that Democrats want to reduce deficits as well. Three Democratic senators have proposed alternatives to the compromise package pushed by Majority Leader Robert Dole. Their plans would cut spending deeply, even if they also opt for the tax increases that Dole says are unacceptable.

And despite a 65-34 vote on Wednesday to provide full Social Security cost of living benefits, an overwhelming majority of the Senate seems willing to impose a one-year freeze on Social Security benefits.

Domenici calculates that about 45 Republicans are willing to go along with that move under the right set of circumstances, meaning a balanced package of cuts that also trims the administration's defense buildup and cuts domestic programs.

Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., estimates that more than 30 Democrats would support a Social Security freeze under what they view as the proper circumstances. For some, but not all, that means a tax increase.

The issue of defense spending is more complicated.

When Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa, moved to hold the Pentagon buildup to inflation, he was sustained, 51-48, on a procedural motion.

Dole apparently briefly considered trying to reverse the outcome, but put it off, seeming to serve notice on Reagan that his bid for a 3 percent inflation-adjusted hike in the defense budget was probably doomed.

"I think the president will understand we made our best effort and now we may have to try something different," the Kansas Republican said.

Domenici and Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., also say that whatever revised package of spending cuts Dole comes up with, defense will get less than Reagan wants.

So a one-year Social Security freeze and a defense budget tied to inflation in 1986 make a pretty good start for a revised deficit-reduction package. And the betting is that when Dole shows his hand, those will be two of the cards.

As for domestic programs, Dole's strategy has been to try and head off Republican attacks by agreeing in advance to partial restoration of some proposed spending cuts. Thus, when it came time to vote on Medicare and Medicaid last Friday, the Senate accepted a proposal to trim $17.5 billion over three years, not the $29.1 billion in the original package.

Senator Sam Had Knack For Humor

Some of Sam Ervin's best stories dealt with the poor quality of moonshine liquor such as that brewed in the coves of the South Mountains which partially encircle his hometown of Morganton.

"A constituent of mine bought some moonshine liquor and gave a portion to a friend," he would say. "Sometime thereafter my constituent asked his friend what he thought of the liquor. 'Well, it was just right,' said the friend.

"'I mean that if it had been any better, you wouldn't have given it to me,' the friend replied. 'And if it had been any worse, I couldn't have drunk it.'"

The American public generally got its first taste of Ervin's sense of humor — as well as his abiding reverence for the American Constitution — when the North Carolina senator chaired the Watergate hearings which led to the resignation of President Richard M. Nixon. The TV viewers got a smile when the Harvard educated solon folksily described himself as "just a country lawyer."

But back in North Carolina Ervin's sense of humor had been proverbial since 1925 when, as a fledgling member of the North Carolina General Assembly, he had helped laugh into oblivion an effort to ban the teaching of evolution in the public schools.

"Only one good thing can come of this," Ervin said of the proposal. "The monkeys in the jungle will be pleased to know that the North Carolina Legislature has absolved them of any responsibility for humanity in general and for the North Carolina Legislature in particular."

When Ervin was appointed to the U.S. Senate in 1954, his first major assignment was on the committee that censured Sen. Joseph McCarthy. In his maiden speech, Ervin urged the Senate to join in censuring the Wisconsin senator. He told the Senate the situation reminded him of the time Uncle Ephraim Swink, an elderly mountaineer, was asked at a revival meeting to testify what the Lord had done for him. Uncle Ephraim, old and crippled by arthritis, rose and told the congregation: "Brothers. He has nigh ruint me."

Again, Ervin reached into his seemingly inexhaustible supply of anectdotes after the Watergate hearings had made him a celebrity. When kids were sporting T-shirts bearing his picture and reporters were dogging his every step, one newsman asked how he felt about his sudden fame.

Ervin said it reminded him of a young man he had known in Morganton whose father had died and left him a sizeable fortune that brought him nothing but trouble from a host of relatives who complained loudly and then involved him in lawsuits.

When Ervin met the young man on the street and remarked about the doleful expression on his face, the young man sighed and replied: "It's almost bad enough that I wish the old man hadn't died."

"I found that an apt story is worth an hour of argument," Ervin replied when a reporter asked about his proclivity for humorous anecdotes. "A story that fits a point that you're trying to make sort of tends to arouse your audience, to get their attention if you're about to lose it. And a good story is a good way to relieve tension."

He gave the reporter a few examples. One of these dealt with the time when Ervin, then a Superior Court judge, was presiding over a murder trial in his native Burke County. They had brought a special venire from another county to ensure that the accused got a fair trial.

"I asked one of these jurors if he could be fair," Ervin related, "and he answered: 'I think he is guilty of murder in the first degree, and he ought to be sent to the gas chamber. But I can give him a fair trial.'"

Ervin also told about the young lawyer who showed up at a revival meeting and was asked to deliver a prayer. Being unprepared, he gave a prayer straight from his lawyer's heart: "Stir up much strife amongst the people, Lord," he prayed, "lest Thy servant perish."

Ervin salted his language liberally with words and phrases that he had found in his reading of the Bible and Shakespeare and other classics.

When Nixon's aides in the White House invoked the doctrine of executive privilege in refusing to appear before his committee and testify about their transgressions, Ervin scoffed that it was "Executive poppycock."

"What meat do they eat that makes them grow so great?" he asked, paraphrasing Shakespeare's Julius Ceaser.

Later, in deriding the falsities mouthed by the president's men, Ervin asserted that they were obeying Mark Twain's dictum in Pudd'nhead Wilson's New Calendar that "Truth is a precious commodity. Use it sparingly." In this instance, the senator's paraphrase was a big improvement on what Twain had said originally to the effect that "Truth is the most valuable thing we have. Let us economize it."

Ervin also could poke fun at politics and politicians as is demonstrated by his story about the young man who ran for the state legislature despite the admonitions of his father.

"Son, don't go into politics," the old man had enjoined. "Before it is over they'll accuse you of stealing a horse." After the young man lost the race and returned home, the father recalled his prediction about horse stealing.

"Pa, it was much worse than that," Ervin had the young man lamenting. "They dern near proved it on me."

Ervin could even laugh about the Senate and his fellow senators as is shown by his story about the time someone asked Senate Chaplain Edward Everett Hale: "Doctor, when you pray, do you look at the tragic condition of the country and then pray that the Almighty will give the senators the wisdom to find solutions?" To which the chaplain replied: "No, I do not. I look at the Senate and pray for the country."

George Gallup

Poll

PRINCETON, N.J. — In an early sounding for the 1988 presidential election, potential Democratic candidate Sen. Edward Kennedy is the public's narrow choice over Vice President George Bush, a front-runner for the Republican nomination.

In this recent experimental election, Kennedy receives 47 percent of the votes to Bush's 41 percent, with 12 percent undecided.

In a similar mock election in April 1982, before President Reagan had announced his re-election plans, Kennedy led Bush by a slightly larger 52 percent to 41 percent margin. That contest, unlike the current one, was conducted only among registered voters.

The closeness of the current Kennedy-Bush trial heat is accentuated by the fact that among whites the race is a statistical draw, with Bush receiving 45 percent of the white vote and Kennedy, 43 percent. The nearly monolithic black vote, 78 percent for Kennedy to 11 percent for Bush, suffices to give the Massachusetts senator his narrow overall margin.

Similarly, the votes of 18- to 29-year-olds and those 50 and older are very evenly divided. Kennedy's 50 percent-to-38 percent lead among 30- to 49-year-olds, therefore, contributes importantly to his overall edge over the vice president.

As might be expected, Bush makes his strongest showing among the college-educated and upper-income groups and in households headed by business and professional workers.

The race is a statistical tie among men, high school graduates, Protestants, members of non union households and middle-income families, and among Midwesterners and Southerners.

Consequently, Kennedy owes his modest national lead over Bush to his strength among constituents of the old-line Democratic coalition: blue-collar workers, Catholics, the less well-educated, members of labor union households, lower income groups and, as noted earlier, blacks. Kennedy also enjoys slightly greater appeal among women than among men, and somewhat more strength in the eastern and western regions.

Recalling An Era

WASHINGTON — From time to time we encounter students who ask what it was like to have attended college during the Vietnam War. They sometimes seem to regret having missed the great events in modern collegiate history.

But little do they know how unpleasant the era was at home. In reviewing the recent literature and news clips marking the 10th anniversary of Saigon's fall, one who lived through that period as an opponent of the war may find that the remembrances don't adequately articulate the experience and lingering resentment of the era's college generation.

For one, few students today realize the degree to which the war traumatized most of the 27 million American men who reached draft age between 1964 and 1973. Though only a third of this Vietnam-era generation served in the armed forces, and fewer than 10 percent went to Vietnam, each member received a share of the emotional, if not physical, scars.

Fear of the unknown and contempt of authority permeated the generation. One often woke up angry or panicked, faced with the prospect of being forced into uniform or watching some friend receive his induction notice. There was always anxiety underneath what some critics have termed the devil-may-care ways of those who didn't go to Southeast Asia.

Contrary to some revisionists' charges, college students at the time did not escape those pains. In 1965, good grades were enough to ensure a student a deferment for a year. But local draft boards did not apply a uniform standard in separating "good" from "bad." While a C minus average might have cost a student his deferment in one city, a B minus average might have done so in another. Accordingly, in many cases, students shied away from challenging courses; self-preservation became more important than scholarly pursuits.

Under the stewardship of Director Lewis B. Hershey, the Selective Service System began in 1966 to reduce the allotment of student deferments. He encouraged students with average grades to take a Selective Service qualification test. Three-quarters of a million college students actually took this exam in 1967 and 1968. Some students began wearing "score high or die" shirts. Many scored poorly and were drafted.

Pressed by public demands for a more equitable draft, the Selective Service System introduced a birthday lottery in 1969. Students who received lottery numbers of 100 or below were entitled to complete their current semester of work before being inducted.

Nowadays, some of us still ask where were you on the night of the first lottery? Or what number did you get? As the numbers and corresponding birthdays flashed on the television screen during the first nationally televised lottery, screams of joy and terror filled college dormitories throughout the country. Some students rushed, sickened, to bathrooms, while others headed for the closest bar to celebrate.

Perhaps the most telling scene of the era was the pervasive threat law enforcement authorities exerted on anti-war organizations. Paid informers and spies were commonplace. Demostrators' phones were tapped and their photographs snapped.

Polarization afflicted the so-called nuclear family, too. Dinner tables were often the center of heated arguments between children and parents. Old family friends rebuked their contemporaries' children. Even local pastors turned a deaf ear to the anti-war members of their congregations.

In retrospect, the turning point came on May 4, 1970. When four students were gunned down on the Kent State University campus by Ohio National Guardsmen, many college students believed that they had become enemies in the Nixon administration's eye. The war had truly come home.

New Name For Old Bill

WASHINGTON — Very soon now, the House of Representatives will take up the most dangerous bill of the year. If last year's precedent is any guide to this year's action, the House will whoop its approval. The bill is the marvelously named "Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985."

That title is truly marvelous, is it not? It was devised by the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, and we can imagine the knee-slapping and the cries of "Hoo, boy!" that arose with this delightful invention. The Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985! Who could vote against it?

Well, if the principle of federalism still has meaning, if separation is to be maintained between the public and private sectors of American life, if the heavy hand of federal regulation is not to be laid upon the whole of our society, members of Congress had better vote against this devious and deceptive little sleeper.

Let me explain. In 1972 Congress passed a law prohibiting sexual discrimination in "any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance." In 1984 the Supreme Court considered a case involving Grove City College in Pennsylvania. The college did not discriminate against anyone; it accepted no direct federal aid; but it did enroll students who had received federal grants.

The Grove City case presented two questions: (1) By accepting students who received federal aid, was the college itself a recipient of federal aid? (2) If so, would anti-discrimination provisions of the 1972 act apply throughout the entire institution?

The high court said yes to (1) and no to (2). It held that the grants received by many Grove City students did not trigger "institution-wide coverage." The grants affected only the college's program of financial aid. The court's opinion set off an uproar among civil rights activists who yearned for a broader reading, and it led to the introduction last year of a bill to overturn the court's decision not only as to the 1972 education act but as the opinion might affect three other civil rights acts as well. The bill roared through the House 375-32 but died in the Senate.

Now the bill is back. It is cosmetically disguised with fresh lipstick and an innocent wig. It wears this darling new title. It is being sold by its sponsors, chiefly Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., and Rep. Augustus Hawkins, D-Calif., as just a little harmless measure that no friend of civil rights could oppose. The many sponsors do not acknowledge — perhaps they do not even know — the drastic reach of the bill to which they have given their names.

The bill is a tricker. Its ostensible purpose is merely to define what is meant by "program or activity receiving federal financial assistance."

The bill is not a bill "to restore" anybody's civil rights; for no civil rights were taken away by the Grove City case. It is a bill to expand federal power into every aspect of our public and private life that conceivably could be reached under the guise of "federal financial assistance." Members ought not to be fooled by the few differences between the 1984 and 1985 bills. This "Civil Rights Restoration Act of 1985" is last year's model with a fresh coat of paint.

Busy Final Days Aboard Challenger

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Challenger's astronauts charged into the final shifts of their mission Saturday, working to add to science studies that already could fill a library and monitoring a menagerie of healthy rats and monkeys aboard Spacelab 3.

The seven-man crew worked quietly and intensely Saturday, operating 13 of 15 experiments aboard the Spacelab 3 module in the shuttle's cargo bay in a rush toward mission's end.

On Sunday, the astronauts will start packing up for Monday morning's return to Earth.

"Everybody had a good sleep, we're in good spirits and we're ready for a good day," mission commander Bob Overmyer said as his Gold team began its 12-hour shift.

Overmyer said the crew had been working vigorously and "we come off our shifts so tired that we're hurting."

"All of the animals I can see appear to be moving and in good health," said Bill Thornton, a physician and the chief zoo keeper for the 24 rats and two squirrel monkeys aboard Spacelab.

Mission science director Joe Cremin said the astronauts already have gathered enough data to fill a library — 2½ million video frames and 210 billion bits of electronic data. This is enough material, said Cremin, to fill 44,000 volumes of 200 pages each.

The crew concentrated on growing crystals and on experiments in fluid dynamics. These studies have high priority because of their potential for demonstrating the value of space manufacture of exotic metals and glasses, and for development in weightlessness of advanced electronic components.

The seven-day science mission is scheduled to end at 12:05 p.m. EDT Monday with a landing on the dry lakebed runway at Edwards Air Force Base, Calif.

Court Reprimands Officer For Conduct

By JULIE AMPARANO
Associated Press Writer

TREASURE ISLAND, Calif. (AP) — A court-martial board Saturday decided upon a reprimand as the punishment for a Navy commander convicted of living with a female subordinate officer and lying to his superior about their relationship.

Cmdr. James Wyatt III, a 19-year-veteran found guilty Friday of what a prosecutor called "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," had faced a maximum penalty of one year, four months imprisonment and dismissal from the service.

The reprimand calls for Wyatt to forfeit $250 a month for 10 months, but the board, which deliberated about two hours Saturday during the penalty phase of the trial, recommended that the monetary penalty be suspended.

Wyatt, 40, was found guilty Friday of one count of intentionally deceiving a superior officer and one count of residing in military housing with a female officer under his command who was not his wife. He was found innocent of two other charges of lying to his superior officer.

The convictions stemmed from his involvement with Lt. j.g. Etteinne Boatwright, 23, an intelligence officer in his squadron. The verdict and sentence are automatically reviewed.

"In making your decision, please have mercy on Wyatt. There has got to be a limit to his sentence," Bryan said, adding that the commander never gave his lover preferential treatment. "Let him finish his career. He's already suffered enough."

In a surprise announcement late Friday, the court martial board said it believed Ms. Boatwright had lied under oath and should face perjury charges. The panel did not specify which testimony it thought was false.

Ms. Boatwright was granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for her testimony, but Bryan said the agreement did not include immunity from perjury charges.

Military Judge Capt. Philip Roberts, clearly stunned by the panel's question, said he would advise them on the matter later in the penalty phase.

Wyatt, legally separated but still married to his wife at the time, met Ms. Boatwright when both were stationed at Moffett Field in Mountain View in 1983. Later, while stationed on the lonely Indian Ocean outpost of Diego Garcia in January 1984, they announced their engagement and began living together in Wyatt's trailer.

Ms. Boatwright told the board she no longer loves Wyatt and wants to get on with her job. Wyatt said that regardless of the outcome, his career is ruined.

After the verdict, Bryan said he believed the Navy was making an example of Wyatt, whose biggest mistake was to be "open and honest" about his affair. Bryan told reporters that other witnesses had been prepared to testify that the Navy tolerates illicit affairs and "whoring" by its officers as long as they "sneak around.

"When the Navy starts going after and destroying a fine officer like this one, it should clean out some of its other dirty linen," Bryan said.

"The Navy is not against love. We're for love," said Cmdr. Frederick Gorell, a Navy spokesman. "This is not a question of the Navy being interested in the private sexual affairs of its officers. It's a question of a commanding officer and a subordinate one."

U.S. Is Labeled 'Anti-Ethiopian'

By JOHN EDLIN
Associated Press Writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Ethiopia denied Saturday that soldiers had burned famine victims' huts, and accused the U.S. government of launching an "anti-Ethiopian campaign of denigration, disinformation and falsification."

It was the Marxist government's first formal reaction to reports from various foreign relief agency officials that authorities had evicted about 56,000 famine victims from a feeding center at Ibnet in northwestern Ethiopia starting April 28, Sunday.

A 600-word statement from the Foreign Affairs Ministry used particularly strong language to deny allegations that soldiers had burned down the famine victims' crude straw shelters after they left.

Relief agency workers had said Wednesday that about 3,000 victims too weak from hunger to join in the march had remained in the camp, and they said Saturday "several thousand more" had drifted back into the camp seeking food and medical care.

There were reports that as many as 10,000 of the men, women and children ordered out of the camp did not join in the exodus and were hiding in the surrounding hills.

"We don't know exactly how many are on the move or how many are in the hills, but 10,000 seems a likely figure," the Rev. Jack Finnucane, head of the Irish charity Concern, said in an interview when asked about the number believd to be hiding out.

Finnucane, a Roman Catholic priest who witnessed the evictions last week, said he was told Saturday that workers at Concern's emergency center at Ibnet were feeding more than 4,000 refugees. The Concern center was one of three that had been serving some 60,000 famine victims.

The government statement, denying that soldiers had burned down the refugees' huts, said, "While the reported incident never took place, what has been surprising to note has been the audacity of high-ranking officials of the Reagan administration to go beserk once again on their usually familiar anti-Ethiopian campaign of denigration, disinformation and falsification.

"The allegation that the feeding station was razed ... was the most incredible aspect of the fabulous story. It is inconceivable that the Ethiopian government would spend considerable financial outlays to build stores, houses and other infrastructure to contain the effects of drought (and) could be a party to an act of destruction as has been closely ascribed to it."

"Leaving aside the utterly groundless insinuation, there has been no burning of dwellings, although what has taken place was the clearance of accumulated dirt for hygenic purposes," the statement said.

The statement also accused the Reagan administration of trying to "besmirch and if possible to sabotage the striving of the Ethiopian government to contain the effects of the debilitating drought."

This was an apparent reference to criticism of the evacuation of the Ibnet camp made by two Reagan administration officials, Chester Crocker and M. Peter McPherson. Crocker is assistant secretary of state for African affairs, and McPherson is administrator of the Agency for International Development, the U.S. government's foreign aid agency.

Last Wednesday, after the first reports of the camp evacuation appeared that day in the Washington Post, including the report of the hut-burnings, Crocker told a congressional hearing: "We're appalled at the brutal and hasty manner in which the evacuation was handled."

Local Banker Funds Endowments At ECU

Banker C.D. (Don) Langston of Winterville has established four University Scholars Awards endowments at East Carolina University to push the total number of the scholarships to 23 since the program was inaugurated last fall.

Dr. John M. Howell, ECU chancellor, announced at the 76th commencement Saturday morning that Langston's "magnificent" gift enabled the university to surpass the goal of establishing 20 University Scholars Awards by the end of this academic year.

Just last week, Howell said, Langston, a long time supporter of East Carolina, funded four of the $40,000 endowments.

Langston is a founder and long-time president of the banking institution first known as the Bank of Winterville, then First State Bank, which recently merged with First Citizens Bank and is now known as the First Citizens Bank of Greenville.

A former member of the executive committee of the ECU Foundation, Langston "in his quiet way, has given financial support to a great variety of university programs," Howell said. "But his devotion to the academic excellence of this university remains unmatched. He alone has provided the magnificent sum of money required to fund four of these full expense scholarships."

Of the 23 University Scholars Awards now endowed, 10 have been endowed by members of the board of trustees or other ECU boards, 18 by ECU alumni, parents of alumni or former staff members.

The privately-funded University Scholars Award program was established to attract prospective students with high potential for leadership and academic excellence. The first seven University Scholars Awards were presented last month after a nationwide search.

Trade Issue Blunts Summit

By TERENCE HUNT
Associated Press Press

BONN, West Germany (AP) — As protesters converged for his visit to a German military cemetery, President Reagan was dealt a setback at the conclusion of the economic summit Saturday when France prevented the leaders of seven industrial nations from setting a date for new trade talks.

Reagan was described by Treasury Secretary James A. Baker as disappointed with the outcome on the trade issue, but "genuinely pleased" overall with the allies' 11th annual summit.

"We all got what we wanted," Reagan said as he walked with other leaders to hear West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl read the final communique in the Bundestag, the federal parliament.

The statement said summit members believe trade talks "should begin as soon as possible. Most of us think that this should be in 1986."

Despite this disagreement, the seven nations pledged to work toward world economic recovery and to resist pressure to protect their own markets from outside competition.

Reagan's biggest victory was lining up all his partners — Britain, Canada, France, Italy, Japan and West Germany — behind his strategy for arms talks with the Soviet Union.

He had to swallow silence from the allies, though, on his "Star Wars" plan for research into space-based missile defenses. At the last minute, he was heartened by a personal endorsement of the program from Kohl at the closing ceremony.

Two miles from the final session, in a cobblestone square of this Rhine River capital city, protesters 10,000 strong assembled to attack the meetings. "Hunger, arms race, exploitation — that is the summit," read one of their banners.

About 250 youths clad in leather, chains and hoods broke from this group and scuffled with baton-wielding police. There about three dozen arrests and about a dozen injuries to police as the youths smashed windows and looted stores.

Near Hannover, 200 miles away, a quieter protest heralded the start of many demonstrations in this country and abroad over the plan for Reagan and Kohl to lay a wreath Sunday at a cemetery with the graves of 2,000 German soldiers, including 49 members of Adolf Hitler's dreaded Nazi Waffen SS combat units.

A group of 16 American Jews, led by Rabbis Avraham Weiss and Ronald Schwarzberg of the Hebrew Institute of Riverdale, New York, said they would defy police orders to end their sleep-in at the site of the Bergen-Belsen Nazi concentration camp, where 50,000 people were murdered by the Nazis.

"We must never again be silent," Weiss said. "If we do not remember what happened, no one will remember." Police would not say if the group would be evicted before Reagan and Kohl arrive for a Sunday morning ceremony.

Other protesters, including 15 New York state legislators and 500 students from 17 nations, gathered closer to the military cemetery in Bitburg, 220 miles south of Hannover.

Reagan and Kohl will not speak during the 10-minute ceremony, which has been denounced by heavy majorities in both houses of the U.S. Congress as well as by Jewish, veterans and other groups in many nations.

Reagan, who has described the Bitburg trip as a gesture of reconciliation, was asked Saturday how he feels about going there.

"I am looking forward to it," the president replied.

In an acknowledged effort to blunt criticism of the Bitburg ceremony, Reagan and Kohl will be accompanied by relatives of the anti-Nazi resistance. A senior German official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said Saturday there would be five or six such relatives and that "absolutely none of those who were invited refused the invitations."

The only one identified so far is a West German army officer who said he is going only because his military superiors asked him to. He is Col. Berthold von Stauffenberg, 50, a son of Lt. Col. Claus von Stauffenberg, who was executed in 1944 for leading an abortive plot to kill Hitler.

In the far southern Bavarian town of Nesselwang, at a reunion of former Waffen SS soldiers, there was praise for Reagan for visiting the graves and for resisting pressure to call off the ceremony.

Speakes said that in Reagan's address at Bergen-Belsen, "The president attempts, as best one can who has not experienced this, to put himself and his listeners into the situation that those who were victims of the Holocaust must have felt in those days and years when they were held there, not knowing what their fate would be, not knowing what the remainder of their life would be."

Probe Launched On Land Profiteering Allegations

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) An investigation is under way into allegations of land profiteering stemming from "inside information" of highway contracts in western North Carolina, a federal official says.

"We're looking into based on information we've received, the possibility of individuals acting on inside information to purchase land where highway contracts were to be let," U.S. Attorney Charles R. Brewer of Asheville said Friday.

"It's more than one allegation, and it's at least two counties," Brewer said. "I suspect that it went into a much larger area that we're now looking at because it's such a ripe area for corruption."

Asked if the investigation is focusing on state officials, Brewer said the probe would look at "anybody who through their connections is able to tell in advance where a road is going to go and can take advantage of the situation to the detriment of landowners."

The probe follows a state investigation that cleared a member of the state Board of Transportation, Zeno Ponder, of wrongdoing in his purchase in 1982 of 19 acres in Madison County, where the Transportation Department was preparing to let a road contract.

The State Bureau of Investigation determined last August Ponder had not acted wrongfully.

Ponder said he bought the land so he could give the state 2½ acres of right of way to avoid a delay that might have resulted from an unwilling landowner.

Brewer said he was denied a copy of the state investigative reports on Ponder, who was appointed to the board by Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt in July 1981. Ponder served on the board until this year, when Republican Gov. Jim Martin named his appointees to the board.

SBI Director Robert Morgan said Brewer had presented no compelling reasons why he should get the reports.

"I reviewed the record, and I concurred in the recommendations of the district attorney that there was no wrongdoing," Morgan said.

"Mr. Brewer said he had no information to add, other what he had read in newspaper reports. I therefore concluded that there was no reason to give him a copy," Morgan said.

Brwer said he's assigned an assistant U.S. attorney to the case but would not say whether the investigation pertained to either Ponder or to Madison County, or whether any other federal agencies are involved.

"I can't say — other than I did request the report," he said. "I'm going to ask the Deaprtment of Transportation to look at their records to determine if there is a pattern to support the allegations."

'Summer Ventures'

"Summer Ventures in Science and Mathematics" will be held for the first time this summer, allowing 100 North Carolina high school students to take courses in science and mathematics on five UNC campuses.

Offered by the University of North Carolina and administered by the North Carolina School of Science and Mathematics, Summer Ventures consists of five-week programs for students with talent and special interest in science and mathematics. The institutes will be held June 23 through July 26 at East Carolina University, as well as at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee and North Carolina Central University in Durham. Other institutes will take place July 7 through Aug. 9 at Appalachian State University in Boone, and July 7 through Aug. 10 at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. Tuition, room and board are provided without fee.

Students will divide their time between mathematics and science and will study areas seldom covered in high school courses. Computers will be included in the curriculum, and scientific research will be a focus of study. Courses include such topics as linear programming, number theory, archaeology, animal behavior, marine biology and electronics.

The program at ECU will be directed by Dr. Floyd Mattheis. The faculty of the institutes will be composed of university professors from the participating campuses and high school teachers from across the state.

Jewish Leaders Protest Reagan's Visit

By KENNETH JAUTZ
Associated Press Writer

BITBURG, West Germany (AP) — A world-wide contingent of Jewish leaders, protesting President Reagan's visit to a cemetery where SS soldiers are buried, massed at the military gravesite Saturday and staged a sit-in at the site of a Nazi concentration camp.

At the same time, about 250 masked, leather-clad youths battled riot police in Bonn and went on a window smashing and looting spree at the conclusion of the international economic summit in the West German capital.

Police spokesman Hans-Georg Classen said about three dozen people were arrested and about a dozen police officers were injured in the melee that exploded after more than 10,000 chanting demonstrators crowded into the cobblestoned Muensterplatz square to hear speakers denounce the summit and the arms buildup.

Another 7,000 persons demonstrated against the summit in nearby Cologne, about 20 miles north of Bonn. Local police said the rally ended without incident.

Reagan was scheduled to leave Bonn for Bergen-Belsen on Sunday to deliver what aides described as a highly emotional speech on the Holocaust.

The president added the stop to his itinerary in an attempt to quell the rising tide of protest over his visit to the Bitburg military cemetary, where 49 members of the Nazi SS are buried alongside some 2,000 German war dead. But the furor only increased.

Sixteen American Jews staging a sit-in at the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp site, where more than 50,000 perished, said they would defy police orders to clear the area in advance of Reagan's visit to the memorial Sunday.

"We must never again be silent," vowed Rabbi Avraham Weiss, one of the two U.S. rabbis protesting Reagan's visit to the Bitburg cemetery. "If we do not remember what happened, no one will remember."

The group planned to make a personal appeal to Reagan — and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl — to abandon their plans for a 10-minute visit to the Bitburg site later in the day.

At Bitburg, Mayor Theo Hallet met with protest organizers and approved two separate demonstrations coinciding with the Reagan visit to the Kolmeshohe Cemetery.

Peter Hartmann, a spokesman for the mayor, said up to 500 members of the World Union of Jewish Students, which includes youth from 17 nations, were given permission to demonstrate at the Bitburg city cemetery less than a mile from the military gravesite.

A permit also was given to 1,000 West Germans for a demonstration against Reagan's arms policies at a nearby town square.

"Neither will be near the security zone set up (for Reagan)," Hartmann said of the two protests.

"We came 3,000 miles for the president to see us and we're going to make sure he sees us," said Canadian Moshe Ronen, president of the North American Jewish Students Network. "They warned us not to do anything violent and said anyone with placards along the (president's) motorcade route would be taken away."

Meanwhile, 15 women from a local civic group spent most of the day placing flowers at the small, plain gravestones at the Kolmeshohe cemetery. "We are glad the president is coming," said Louise Frieck of Bitburg. "He's doing the right thing."

Mrs. Frieck said the women, members of the local American, German, French Friendship Club, were sprucing up the cemetery at the request of the Bitburg mayor.

In Paris, several hundred people, many of them World War II resistance fighters or deportees sent to work in German concentration camps, demonstrated near the U.S. Embassy against Reagan's visit.

As the seven-nation economic summit concluded in Bonn, about 250 youths clad in black leather and hoods that obscured all but their eyes hurled soft-drink cans, beer bottles, boards, smoke bombs, firecrackers and flares at the hundreds of riot police who lined the streets.

The helmeted police, carrying clear-plastic riot shields and truncheons, responded by standing their ground and making occasional forays to contain the group. Classen said no tear gas was used.

A group of youths smashed store windows on the edge of the square. Some were seen snatching goods from the windows before they melted into the milling crowd.

Just before the outbreak of violence, someone put a red and black flag, the symbol of anarchy, in the hand of the statue of Beethoven that dominates the square. The composer was born in the normally sleepy Rhineland town.

Squads of riot police called for people to leave the area, and the crowd gradually dispersed.

"This is just a minority who did this," said Rolf Gebel, an 18-year-old student who had joined the march. "I feel ashamed of what has happened. It's not even 5 percent (of demonstrators) who rioted," he said.

Pope Lauds First Lady's Drug Efforts

By EDITH M. LEDERER
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II praised first lady Nancy Reagan Saturday for her international campaign against the "grave social evil" of drug abuse at a half-hour meeting in the pope's library at the Vatican.

"Encouragement from the pope — you can't ask for more than that," Mrs. Reagan told reporters on her plane back to Bonn, West Germany. "It was beautiful — once in a lifetime experience."

The first lady said she was taking a message from the pope to President Reagan, attending a seven-nation economic summit in Bonn. She did not disclose the letter's contents.

After her meeting with the pontiff, Mrs. Reagan viewed the frescoes in the Sistine Chapel and then ended her three-day visit to Italy to rejoin Reagan. They attended a black-tie dinner and then boarded a helicopter and flew to the centuries-old castle where they are staying, about 18 miles from Bonn.

"God bless you, thank you very much for your visit," the pontiff told the president's wife in English as they walked hand in hand to the door of the papal library after their private meeting without interpreters.

In a statement handed to her in a white envelope, John Paul deplored the "tragic and debilitating" effects of drug abuse and called for international cooperation "with a view to arresting, and eventually eliminating this grave social evil."

Mrs. Reagan, wearing a black coat dress and a black hat with a turned-up brim edged in white, arrived at the Vatican under tight security with an official party of 15, including her hairdresser and maid.

Martin Pays Visit To Guardsmen During Mock Alert At Fort Bragg

FORT BRAGG, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin met Saturday with several units of the North Carolina National Guard who only weeks after helping to fight forest fires across the state were participating in what officials say is the largest peacetime drill of its kind in the nation.

"He's visited with some of the units involved with the firefighting duty recently," Sgt. 1st Class Keith Hobbs, a spokesman for the guard, said during a telephone interview Saturday.

Martin also visited some of the "processing areas on the main post and in the field" where the estimated 13,000 guardsmen taking part in this weekend's exercises are being checked to make sure they have the correct paperwork.

"Hickory Response '85," which began Friday and ends Sunday, is designed to examine the guard's ability to respond to a federal call-up and the Army's readiness to handle a massive influx of replacement troops at Fort Bragg.

Martin, as commander-in-chief of the state militia, arrived in Fort Bragg about 9 a.m. to review the troops, Hobbs said.

Martin visited a site where heavy equipment is maintained by the guard and also saw an M-1 tank which the guard recently received, Hobbs said.

"He will also observe some of the field training that the guard is now undergoing," Hobbs said.

Martin was scheduled to visit an open house at Pope Air Force Base later Saturday before returning to Raleigh, Hobbs said.

Guardsmen from Manteo to Murphy arrived in Fort Bragg Friday as thousands of camouflaged trucks rolled across the state's roads and highways. The state's 137 guard units, based in towns throughout the state, learned of the training exercise Wednesday.

A guard spokesman said authorities reported only one mishap, in which two vehicles of the 119th Infantry from northeastern North Carolina collided at U.S. 301 and U.S. 421 near Dunn. No one was injured, but the vehicles had to be towed to Fort Bragg for repairs.

"I've been amazed at how smooth the entire operation has gone," guard spokesman Col. Joseph M. Parker said.

Hobbs said guardsmen will be "going through a processing stage (Saturday) to make sure their records and various paperwork necessary for mobilization is correct."

"Everything from checking power of attorney to wills, to giving shots and issuing dog tags will be done," he said.

After they are processed, guardsmen will undergo training exercises, Hobbs said.

What kind of training "depends on the unit," he said. "They'll do what they normally do during training."

Army generals and officials from the Department of Defense were to watch the training while the exercise itself was to be monitored and critiqued by the Army Reserve's 80th Division Maneuver Training Command base in Richmond, Va., Hobbs said.

"A great deal of evaluation is already going on," he said. "There's been enough data collected now to make some evaluations and to make some judgments."

Fire Fighting Funds Sought By Division

WILMINGTON (AP) — North Carolina has spent close to $2 million since the beginning of the year fighting forest fires that have destroyed thousands of acres, prompting forestry officials to seek financial aid.

The North Carolina Division of Forest Resources has been strapped by the cost and is "going to have to seek additional funding somewhere," said the state's top forestry official, Harry Layman, who is the division's director.

The amount and source depend on how much has been spent, Layman said.

He said the division is "not about to run out of money for firefighting" because it can shift funds within its budget.

By mid-April, state agencies, local governments and volunteer fire departments had spent more than $1.7 million to fight forest fires, according to the state Division of Emergency Management. That does not include costs incurred by timber companies and federal agencies, such as the Marine Corps, that helped fight the fires.

State officials weren't sure how much money was spent in the second half of the month, but most of the biggest fires had been contained or extinguished by then.

Steve Tant, DEM engineer, said the $1.7 million estimate is based on preliminary reports and includes a very conservative estimate of costs to local volunteer fire departments.

Tant said a final tally of firefighting costs and damage won't be ready until the end of May. That deadline, he said, "might push forestry to get theirs in by then."

Dozens of fires erupted in April and the last part of March. As of April 18, the damage was estimated at $60.8 million, Tant said.

Preliminary figures show the forest division spent $1.4 million in the first half of the month, Tant said. The division spent $9.6 million on firefighting last year.

The North Carolina National Guard, which provided equipment and 644 firefighters to mountain counties, spent $100,000, Tant said.

Volunteer fire departments across the state estimated they spent $52,648, he said.

"This, in my opinion, is a conservative estimate," Tant said. "The real costs may never be known but it could run about $100,000."

The figures are being compiled for the Federal Emergency Management Administration and are needed for action on Gov. Jim Martin's request that 36 North Carolina counties be declared disaster areas. Such a designation can be made only by the president.

"FEMA has asked for detailed information on equipment and personnel by fire and by county — rates of pay, types of vehicles, miles-driven — you're talking about a massive undertaking," Tant said.

Last week FEMA denied North Carolina's request for money to pay for firefighting under a federal-state disaster relief program that does not require presidential action, said Jack Glover of FEMA's Atlanta office.

Glover said the latter request was denied because no fires are threatening life and property.

"FEMA requires fire suppression requests to specify the fire they need help on and the threats to life and property instead of saying, 'Hey, FEMA, the whole state's burning, come over and help us,'" Glover said.

Surgery Battle

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Forsyth Memorial Hospital won't give up its plan to begin open-heart surgery, despite the state's disapproval of the hospital's request for a certificate of need, an official says.

"It is our full intention to continue working to have open-heart surgery here," said Greg Beier, the hospital's senior vice president.

Hospital officials have not decided whether to appeal the decision by requesting a contested-case hearing or to seek a change in the state standards under which the certificate was denied, he said.

Hospital officials, doctors and lawyers are meeting to decide which route to take, he said Friday.

Beier said he hasn't received a report from the state certificate of need section spelling out its reasons for disapproving the application. But he said the decision was apparently based on guidelines that bar a hospital from starting the surgery until hospitals in the region are doing at least 350 operations in a year.

Bill Would Require Local Officials To Set Guidelines For Cable Service

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — If you've ever waited in vain for a cable TV company to restore service, there's a bill in the Legislature to address your concerns. But it's getting static from local politicans and the cable industry.

"This is an attempt ... to see that these people get what they pay for," Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, told Senate Judiciary III Committee members who recently considered his bill.

Under the bill, local government officials would be required to negotiate contracts with cable suppliers that provide for adequate service, prompt response to complaints and set limits on rates.

Thomas said most cable companies are reputable but that he has heard from consumers who "call in the complaint and it's not answered."

"In some of these places, whoever's closest answers the phone," he said. "It may be the technician, it may be the boss, it may be the Orkin man. Sometimes the maid answers the phone. They don't have pencils or they've got broken arms.

"We want them to get some people ... to come ... to get a time on it and get to it when they can," he said. "Some of them ought to have their franchises taken away. You can quit them if you want but then you can't get anything on your TV."

"In my district people call all day and nobody answers the phone or it's busy," added Sen. Tom Tatt, D-Pitt.

Sen. Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, questioned whether local officials would back the bill, saying it could put them on a political hotseat.

"Nobody's going to want to set a rate and then ask to be re-elected," he said. "You may be putting a political requirement on these that they don't want. If you get into this ratemaking with your county commissioners, you're going to have trouble."

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, said local officials already have the right to negotiate contracts that do what Thomas wants and that Raleigh's system is working well.

"This bill would make them do what they have not done," added Sen. Bob Somers, R-Rowan. "The Legislature is going to make them do what they've had the right to do all along."

"Raleigh is the Paris of the Western Hemisphere," responded Thomas, who said many local governments not as "sophisticated" as Raleigh are not using their authority because "they're so anxious to get the service."

"Isn't it sort of open-ended, so that a county could get any regulation it wants to?" asked Somers, who suggested federal laws might already answer some concerns.

"The cable TV industry nationwide, through extensive lobbying, got some kind of sweetheart legislation in Congress," said Thomas, who said he sees no constitutional problems with the bill.

Wade Hargrove, a Raleigh attorney representing the North Carolina CATV Association, agreed there are problems with the industry but said most franchise contracts contain regulatory language.

"It is just next to impossible to keep people happy about television," he said, and urged the committee to let competition spark better service.

"I think that Senator Thomas' bill has already scared the hell out of my clients," Hargrove said, but added, "There's no better inducement to service than the spur of the threat of competition. We could spend the rest of the session here and still not get the job done."

However, Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, committee chairman, said fear of the bill might have its advantages.

"I have already heard some remarkable cooperative efforts on behalf of the industry in response to this bill," he said.

ROOF COLLAPSES — Workers survey the remains of a roof section that collapsed Friday at the Comfort Inn under construction in Winston-Salem. Three workers were standing on the plywood panels when the roof supports collapsed. One of them held onto a part of the roof that didn't fall and the other two rode the plywood down like an elevator, said L.B. Turner of Richardson Builders of Madison. No one was injured in the mishap, which is under investigation. (AP Laserphoto)

Coast Guard Halts Search; Residents Maintain Watch

SURF CITY, N.C. (AP) — Police and residents of two beach communities are keeping a watchful eye on the ocean for any signs of three Marines and three children missing nearly a week after setting sail in their fishing boat.

The Coast Guard ended its search for the six Thursday, officially listing the missing party as "lost at sea." The search was halted one day after the group's boat and four life jackets — three of them child-size — were found. Coast Guard officials said the discovery dimmed the chances the boaters were alive.

But police and residents of Surf City and Topsail Beach are still combing the beaches and the Atlantic horizon for any sign of the missing people. And Topsail Beach residents have been calling the town hall to report any kind of unusual sighting, town clerk Marsha Dees said.

"It's basically the police and the citizen lookout," Mrs. Dees said. "They're just going to keep looking. People are aware of it and trying to keep their eyes open."

Surf City town clerk Janet Chamblee said police there also were continuing the search as part of their routine beach patrols.

By late Wednesday afternoon a few miles offshore, searchers had found the life jackets, an ice chest, two baseball caps and a white seat cushion.

The missing include the boat's owner, Jacksonville resident Sgt. Jerome Pennington, 30, of Headquarters & Service Company, 2nd Battalion, 6th Marines. Also missing are Sgt. Reed Rudolph Jr., 28, who also resides in Jacksonville, and his three children, David, 3, Reed, 6, and Tywanda, 8; and Lance Cpl. Daniel E. Fuchu Jr., 20, of New York.

Book News

From Sheppard Memorial Library

By SUSANNE LONG

Every now and then a book arrives that is spellbinding from start to finish. "One-Eyed Cat" by Paula Fox is one of those treasures. The book, like a good meal, is appetizing in its beautiful imagery and flavor of mystery in its plot, filling in its several themes and application to human experience.

The story begins when Ned Wallis receives a Daisy air rifle for his 11th birthday. The present becomes controversial as it is variously viewed by his minister father, a "totally good" man, his crippled, nature-loving mother, and his world-travelling, exciting uncle, bearer of the gift. Ned's super-sensitive nature is challenged by the lure of the gun, more so when it is forbidden him and placed in the attic only moments after it is received.

Ned fires the gun only once, aiming at a flickering shadow in the autumn moonlight. A face at the attic window, a sense of wrongdoing convince him that he did not aim at air. The following months prove a testing period for Ned as he wonders if the act was observed, if the one-eyed cat which appears and reappears, haunting him, is his victim, and above all, questions the extent of his own responsibility for a single, impulsive act. Ned's questions about the incident are framed by all of a young boy's uncertainties until "One-Eyed Cat" becomes the story of the struggle to mature. Ned observes his benevolent father and his spirited, suffering mother as they move through their lives. Mr. Scully, an elderly, impoverished friend, causes him to question most, while the robust, intrusive Mrs. Scallop teaches, in her own way, lessons about human nature. The characters are all thoroughly drawn, granting the experience of meeting and growing to know a number of new friends. As he passes through the seasons of the year, Ned's uncertainties are slowly dispelled, even as their mystery deepens.

"One-Eyed Cat" is rewarding, leaving the reader with a special gift at the book's end — the end coming all too soon.

Hospitality House Today

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Major Dennis Brooks, Public Affairs Officer at the Marine Corps Air Station, Cherry Point, will talk about Armed Forces Day, Saturday, May 18 on Kay Currie's Hospitality House, being aired today from noon to 12:30 p.m. over WITN-TV, Channel 7, Washington. Taped footage of the Blue Angels in Flight will be shown. The famed performing aerial group will be the main attraction on that date.

The final guest on today's program will be Gerda Nischan of Greenville, coordinator of the Foreign Student Exchange Program. She will show photos of foreign students who would like to study in the U.S. for a year.

The United States and the Soviet Union in 1977 pledged their utmost efforts toward bringing about a Mideast peace.

New Shows At EEii's

"Spring and Summertime" comes to EEii's little Korners of the world in Belhaven today with a new exhibition of acrylic paintings by artist Laura Ellen McDaniels Walker and black and white photography by Bob Coates. An open house will be held from two until five in the afternoon for the public to visit the gallery.

Laura Ellen Walker's paintings depict people in sometimes humorous and nostalgic situations at home and at play by the sea. A Kinston native, Mrs. Walker is now a resident of Long Beach, California. She has a degree in art from Meredith College, and has continued her studies in Los Angeles at the Chouinard Art Institute and the Parsons School of Design, as well as at the Laguna Beach School of Art. An award-winning artist, Mrs. Walker has been honored with an exhibition of her work at Meredith College.

Bob Coates' photographs carry out the vacation-time theme with a down-home and down-by-the-sea feeling prevalent. He is the morning personality on Belhaven's "Country K-92" Radio. After an early career in radio in Chicago as the director of the Midwestern Broadcasting School, he later had a five-year stint in the Virgin Islands in radio work.

Flanagan Art In Show At Jacksonville

Paintings by Farmville artist Clara Flanagan will be featured in the Onslow County Arts Council's main gallery today through May 30. The show involves three media: pencil, acrylic, and alkyd.

Ms. Flanagan's style is realistic, using landscapes, old buildings, natural still lifes, and people for subjects. Her technique involves much glaze work.

She received her degree in art from Duke University. Her work is represented in many collections around the state and is handled by several galleries. Herwork has been awarded several best in show awards and has been featured in solo shows in North Carolina, New York City, and Houston, Texas. She recently had work selected for major shows in Oklahoma City and Tulsa, Okla.

The Arts Council invites the public to attend a reception to open the exhibit and meet the artist today from 2-4 p.m., in the main gallery at 826 New Bridge St. in Jacksonville. Gallery hours are Monday-Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

William Gladstone, the British statesman, was born in 1809.

Isaac's "Fiddle Tunes No. 1."

Following an intermission, the string quartets will perform. The first quartet to play is comprised of Shelly Lucht and John Rose, violins, Craig Kirkland, viola, and Scott Thomas, cello. They will play Clarke's arrangements of Purcell's "Rondeau" and Mozart's "Menuet."

In conjunction with Tuesday's concert, the annual meeting of the governing board and all those interested in the orchestra and chamber music groups will be held one hour prior to concert time, at 7 p.m. in Room B101 in the A. J. Fletcher Music Center. The organziations are supported by grants from the A. J. Fletcher Foundation and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council.

Public support through donations is being sought. Anyone interested in more details is to call Charles Moore at 757-6851.

New Blackbeard Play To Open This Summer At Swansboro Site

SWANSBORO — A new Blackbeard play by Greenville's Stuart Aronson, "Blackbeard's Revenge," will be premiered this summer at a new entertainment complex for outdoor drama, The Crystal Coast Amphitheater, in a wooded area near Swansboro.

The amphitheater project, currently under construction, is being funded and carried out by L. E. "Eddie" McNeill, president of McNeill Realty and Construction. Emerald Isle McNeill admits to having had a long fascination for the pirates who operated off the coast of North Carolina, and a meeting with playwright ARonson led to his offer to construct a facility in which a new Blackbeard play could be presented.

Aronson's first play on the life of the 18th century pirate, "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag," plays three nights weekly in Bath during the summer outdoor drama season. He is also the author of other plays, including "Aparodisiacs Unlimited" and "Journey Into Eternity."

The plot of the new play, "Blackbeard's Revenge," deals with the beginning of the Blackbeard legend. It follows the course of young Ned Teach's life, his capture by the privateer Benjamin Hornigold, and how the young man is transformed from a common seaman serving aboard the ship Bristol Belle to his eventual status as the most feared pirate of his time.

The story also revolves around the ill-fated romance between young Ned and an Anglo-French beauty, Roxanne Bellamy — a romance thwarted by the girl's promise to her father, on his death bed, to spend a year with Antoine Malherbe, a Jamacian plantation owner and her cruel and dangerous cousin. At the end of the year, when Ned goes to Jamaica for Roxanne, he is provoked by Malhere into a duel. Inexperienced, Ned is wounded and humilitated, and swears revenge.

When Ned, now Blackbeard, eventually returns to Jamaica, he discovers Malherbe has fled the island due to a plague epidemic, and Roxanne, because of a severa beating by her guardian-cousin, is near death. Blackbeard and Roxanne have only a short time together before Roxanne dies. The focus of his life then becomes an obsession to avenge Roxanne's death.

The Crystal Coast Amphitheater, flanked by pine trees and fronting the water of White Oak River, is located off N.C. 58 near Cape Carteret. It will have a seating capacity of 2,000. The drama is scheduled to open June 15 and to run nightly, except Sundays, through August 31.

The reservation office for "Blackbeard's Revenge" opened May 1. Special rates are available for children and groups. For more information, inquiries are to be addresssed to: Blackbeard's Revenge, Star Route Box 11D, Swansboro, N. C., 28524, telephone 393-2530.

Bath 'Blackbeard' Manager Named For The 1985 Season

The Committee, for Outdoor at Bath has announced the appointment of E.T. Taylor as general manager for the 1985 production of "Blackbeard: Knight of the Black Flag."

Taylor is no stranger to the drama. For the last seven seasons, he had portrayed Governor Charles Eden in the drama.

A native of Martin County, he lives in the Farm Life Community near Williamston with his wife, Linda, and children, Todd and Mary Anne. His son, Todd, has also been involved with the drama for the last several years in a technical capacity. Associated with National Spinning, Co. in Washington for nineteen years, Taylor is a customer service representative.

Taylor is also active in community affairs. He is the director of the outdoor drama "The Message of Easter" presented by the Piney Grove Baptist Church each Easter season.

"I am looking forward to the 1985 production of "Blackbeard," Taylor commented. "As we have previously announced, we will have a new director this year. We will also be making other changes which will further enhance the drama. We have made no secret about the financial problems the drama has, but with community support, we feel these can be overcome. I hope everyone realizes how important this drama is to Beaufort County and surrounding counties as well as to all of Eastern North Carolina."

"A ship sailing from New York City to San Francisco via the Panama Canal would travel 6,000 miles, while the same trip around South America would take 15,000 miles, National Geographic calculates.

Spend A Buck Cashes In

Spend A Buck, Angel Cordero Jr. up, wins the Kentucky Derby.

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Angel Cordero, described as a jockey who is a master at knowing how fast he's going, went jet-fast on Spend A Buck Saturday at the Kentucky Derby.

It was no contest.

Spend A Buck and Cordero reached the end of the 1¼ miles in 2:00 1-5, the third-fastest time in the 111-year history of the Derby, and set record fractions in doing so.

"I wanted to be five or six lengths off the lead and that's where I was," said Don MacBeth, who rode 6-5 favorite Chief's Crown, the 1984 2-year-old champion who was unbeaten in three previous starts this year.

The closest Chief's Crown could get to Spend a Buck was 1½ lengths after the first quarter-mile. At the half-mile point, he was second, six lengths back and he never got any closer than five.

"The winner ran an awesome race," said MacBeth.

Spend A Buck flashed through the first quarter mile in :23 4-5, then reached the half in :45 4-5, tying him for the fourth-fastest half-mile in Derby history. He then broke the Derby record for three-quarters with a time of 1:09 4-5 and set a Derby record for the mile in 1:34 4-5.

The only two Derby winners to complete the Derby in faster times were Secretariat, who won in 1:59 2-5 in 1973 and Northern Dancer, who was clocked at 2:00 in 1964.

Eternal Prince, another speedster, was expected to vie for the lead with Spend A Buck, but he never did. His jockey, Richard Migliore, said "he just didn't break. He was kind of upset by the crowd all yelling and screaming."

So Cordero and Spend A Buck just ran off and set their own very fast pace.

"He's a great horse," Cordero said of Spend A Buck, who paid $10.20, $5.40 and $3.40 in winning his third race in four starts this year and his eighth race in 12 career starts.

"A good horse makes everybody look good. I didn't want to fight. He made an easy lead all the way. He could have run two miles this way. He's a great horse. It was a great race for all of us."

Cordero, who at 42 became the oldest jockey to win the Derby and who became only the sixth rider to win at least three Derbies, then showed some speed of his own. He left immediately after the race to fly to New Jersey, where he was to ride in the feature race at Garden State Park Saturday night.

Roger Laurin, the trainer of Chief's Crown, went into the race thinking victory. But while he was watching the running, he recalled that he was thinking, "Help."

But there was no help for any of the people connected with any of the other Derby starters on this sunny day at Churchill Downs.

Chief's Crown finished a half-length behind Stephan's Odyssey, who paid $10.20 and $5. Chief's Crown was $2.80 to show after finishing a neck in front of Fast Account.

"That horse on the lead was really rolling," said Eddie Delahoussaye, who rode Skywalker to a sixth-place finish. "I don't think there's a horse around who can run with him."

"I can't believe this," said Cam Gambolati, Spend A Buck's 35-year-old trainer, who was in his first Derby. "It's a miracle come true. I don't know what I'm doing. It's the whole underdog story."

The Spend A Buck saga is a movie script story. Dennis Diaz, of Tampa, Fla., paid $12,500 for the son of Buckaroo to a man who was having a cash flow problem.

Diaz retired from the insurance, real estate and construction businesses at age 38 and got into horse racing "because I wanted something to do."

"Oh, I tell you what, we're just so happy. The only advice that I can give to everybody right now is to retire at 38."

Diaz and Gambolati both had said before the Derby that Spend A Buck had earned a trip here with his 10½-length win in the Cherry Hill Mile and his 9½-length victory in a sensational 1:45 4-5 for 1⅛ miles in the Garden State Stakes.

But Diaz said after the Derby, "we never thought he would do this. He's just a hell of a nice colt. It was very encouraging to me that he could be a potential Triple Crown winner."

Steady, Consistant Kite Builds 3-Shot T of C Lead

And that, he said after establishing a three-shot lead Saturday in the third round of the $400,000 MONY-Tournament of Champions, is a lot of fun.

Fuzzy Zoeller also was playing in a manner to which he had, over the years, become unhappily accustomed.

"I hurt like hell. It was no fun at all," Zoeller said.

Kite, the leader all the way in this event that brings together the winners of PGA Tour titles from the last 12 months, bounced back from a fifth-hole double bogey with three consecutive birdies and finished with a 70. He completed three trips over the La Costa Country Club course in 206, 10 strokes under par.

"I backed up to the field with that double bogey, but from there on I played a fairly solid round and got a little bit of a cushion.

"I've really played consistent, and that's the way Tom Kite is supposed to play," he said.

Despite the back problems that very nearly knocked him out of the tournament, Zoeller, the current U.S. Open title-holder, managed a 70 and was four behind the leader at 210, six under par.

"I was impressed by the way I played, I'll tell you. Three minutes before I went to the tee, I wasn't going to play at all," said Zoeller, whose career was jeopardized by major back surgery last fall.

"I was in pain all day. It hurt like hell," Zoelier said.

Whether he will be a factor in Sunday's final round of the chase for a $72,000 first prize remains to be seen.

"I don't know if I'll be able to get out of bed tomorrow," Fuzzy said.

Zoeller, whose comeback from surgery was climaxed by his victory at Bay Hill, said the pain is not similar to the chronic problems that prompted the surgery.

"I don't know what it is, or what I did," he said. "I guess I must have just strained a tendon, or popped a tendon.

"It was no fun playing. But my obligation is to play. I'm not trying to protect my Vardon lead," he said.

Zoeller was tied at 210 with Lanny Wadkins, a two-time winner this season. Wadkins, one shot off the lead after two rounds, dropped back with a 73.

Larry Nelson, a former U.S. Open and PGA champ, and Mark McCumber were next at 211, five shots back. Nelson had a 72 and McCumber birdied the final hole for a 71.

Masters champion Bernhard Langer of West Germany matched par 72 despite a triple bogey and had a 214 total.

Tom Watson, a three-time winner here and the defending champion, had a 73 that left him at 221, five over par. Jack Nicklaus matched par 72 in the warm, sunny weather and was at 218. PGA champion Lee Trevino slipped from a contending position with a 74 and was at 215.

In the nine-man Seniors' division, a separate but concurrent tournament, Australian veteran Peter Thomson saved par from a bunker on the 18th hole to preserve a one-stroke lead over Arnold Palmer.

Thomson, winner of three of his last four starts on the Seniors Tour and a fivew-time British Open champion, had a 71 and a 211 total, five under par. Palmer, perhaps the most popular player the game has known, had a 70 and a 212 total.

The tournament is sponsored by Mutual of New York.

Kite, who made 18 consecutive pars in Friday's play, added three more before he finally broke the string with a 12-foot birdie putt on the fourth hole.

But he drove into a creek and made double bogey on the next hole.

He rallied with a string of three consecutive birdies, beginning with a 15-foot on the seventh. He chipped in from about 35 feet on the net hole and dropped a 10-12 footer on the next.

Rose Edmonds Selected As Top Female Athlete

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

When Rose Edmonds first went out for basketball at Farmville Central, Coach Hilda Worthington despaired of her ever being a player.

"I thought she'd never make it," the Lady Jaguar coach said. "But between her junior and senior year she improved so much in her defense and her getting up and down the court that I was really impressed."

As a result, Worthington took Edmonds, by then a starter on the Jaguar team, to a tryout camp for N.C. Weslayan College, a Division III NCAA school that does not give athletic scholarhips. "Laura (Ferrell, NCW women's coach) decieced to take a chance on her," Worthington recalls.

It was a chance that has paid off not only for Wesleyan and Ferrell, but for Edmonds as well.

As a result of her play over the past four years at Wesleyan, Edmonds has become one of the top female athletes in the brief athletic history of the school.

And, today, she becomes the first non-East Carolina University athlete to win the Daily Reflector's Female Collegiate Athlete of the Year award.

The award is given annually by the newspaper to the outstanding collegiate athletes who either are natives of Pitt County, or who attend East Carolina University.

The male collegiate award will be announced next Sunday, and the high school male and female awards will be announced at a later date.

Ironically, it was a teammate of Edmonds' who received the Female High School Athlete of the Year award when they were both seniors, Rose Lang.

But it is Edmonds who has gone on to create a place for herself in the athletic collegiate world.

"She has improved so much, it's awesome," Worthington said of Edmonds' change over the past four years.

This past year, Edmonds added a bouquet of awards to her list. She was named the Dixie Intercollegiate Athletic Conference Player of the Week once during the season and at the end of the basketball season was chosen to the league's first team All-Conference list. She was named to the second team all-conference list as a junior.

That was followed by her being named as Wesleyan's Outstanding Female Athlete, and her being named to the American Women's Sports Federation Division III All-American third team.

Over her four year career, she averaged 14.4 points a game and 8.6 rebounds a contest. This past year, she held down a 21.8 average in scoring and snatched away 9.3 rebounds. She hit on 48.3 percent of her field goal attempts and 68.0 percent of her free throws.

The 5-11 senior was second in the DIAC in scoring and eighth in the league in rebounding.

Her best game came against Meredith College when she scored 33 points and pulled away 12 rebounds.

"When I look back on her career, the thing that impresses me the most is her determination and desire to be the best she could possibly be," Wesleyan Coach Ferrell said.

"She had the ability to listen and learn and put it together on the floor. I never had to tell her something twice. She really had the ability to pick it up quickly. That's what made her what she had become. She set goals for herself and didn't give up on them. As a result, she was intense on the court and made herself one of the most feared players in the conference (for her abilities)."

Ferrell said that not only has Edmonds been an outstanding player, her attitude has made her an outstanding leader for the younger players. "They really look up to her," the coach said. "She sets a fine example for them to follow. She's really made her mark at our school."

Edmonds is the daughter of Ms. Carrie E. Pettaway of Fountain.

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — University of Oklahoma basketball star Wayman Tisdale said Saturday that he would bypass his senior year of eligibility and make himself available in next month's National Basketball Association draft.

Tisdale, the only player in college basketball history to be named first-team All-America his first three years, announced his decision at a packed news conference at the university.

The 6-foot-9 Tisdale was named The Associated Press' Big Eight Player of the Year three times.

Tisdale said after "long, careful, prayerful consideration, I'm making myself available in the NBA draft. However, I intend to complete my education at the University of Oklahoma."

There had been much speculation recently about the intentions of Tisdale, one of the most popular players in the Sooners' sports history.

During the last games of the season, fans chanted, "One More Year," and billboards proclaiming the same sentiment appeared in Oklahoma City and Norman.

During Tisdale's stay at Oklahoma, the Sooners made three consecutive appearances in postseason play. Oklahoma led the nation in scoring and won the Big Eight championship and postseason tournament this season before losing to Memphis State in the NCAA Midwest Region final.

Tisdale, a member of the 1984 gold medal-winning U.S. Olympic basketball team, holds the Big Eight career scoring record with 2,661 points. He averaged 25.6 points and 10.1 rebounds a game during his career.

A list of underclassmen who have declared their eligibility for the June 18 National Basketball Association draft with name, height, position, year and school:

Manute Bol, 7-foot-6, C, Fr., Bridgeport
Kenny Green, 6-7, F, Jr., Wake Forest
Karl Malone, 6-9, F, Jr., Louisiana Tech
Jerry Reynolds, 6-6, G-F, Jr., Louisiana State
Wayman Tisdale, 6-9, F-C, Jr., Oklahoma
Carl Wright, 6-4, G, Jr., Southern Methodist

Cordero's Brief Visit Pays Off

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Angel Cordero, Jr., thoroughbred racing's man in motion, stopped off briefly at Churchill Downs Saturday, spending two profitable minutes guiding Spend a Buck to an easy wire-to-wire victory in the 111th Kentucky Derby.

Cordero couldn't stick around for the traditional post-race Derby parties, though. He had to rush off to the airport for a fast flight back East. There was, after all, another horse to ride in another race at Garden State Saturday night.

Spend a Buck's victory was the third time Cordero has won the Derby, but his first since 1976 when he was aboard Bold Forbes. He also won in 1974 with Cannonade.

"There is no such thing as a super horse until they retire," Cordero said of Spend A Buck. "I think he is a good horse. I know he is good enough for me."

The track was hard and fast, similar to the ones Spend A Buck has run on at Garden State. But Cordero said: "I don't think the condition of the race made a difference. A good horse can run anywhere."

A year ago, Cordero was not in the Derby. But two weeks after this race, he piloted Gate Dancer to victory in the Preakness, the only race in last year's Triple Crown series that Swale failed to capture.

There was an element of fate to Cordero's getting the mount on Spend A Buck.

Last summer, he was the regular rider on Saratoga Six, considered the star of the 2-year-old crop. But Saratoga Six, who if sound would have been his Derby horse, was injured last fall in a freak accident and retired.

Cordero, meanwhile, rode Spend a Buck for the first time last October and they seemed to click right away.

"He gets along with the horse so easy," trainer Cam Gambolati said admiringly. "It's like he says, 'I'm just along for the ride.' He got him to relax. They get along like a team. He knows how to keep him quiet."

In the paddock, Gambolati recalled the commotion caused by hundreds of fans gawking at the Derby horses. Proud Truth, directly in front of Spend a Buck, was agitated by the turmoil. Cordero, however, had his horse as calm as if he were back in the barn area, grazing on the grass.

Cordero had piloted Spend a Buck to a pair of victories at Garden State last month after a third-place finish in the Bay Shore at Aqueduct in March. He won the Derby by 5¼ lengths in 2:00.1, the third fastest time in history.

"He's a great horse," Cordero said. "A good horse makes everybody look good.

"He made an easy lead all the way. He could have run this miles this way."

Gambolati felt comfortable with Cordero in the saddle. "The only thing I told him was to make sure he got him to relax. I wasn't concerned with Cordero. Angel knows the horse.

"Two weeks ago, at Garden State (when Spend a Buck won his last race by 9½ lengths), it was like he was out for his morning gallop. I was confident with Angel. He's been here before. He know the race and he knows the horse."

Sportsworld.....6
Coca-Cola.....5

Sportsworld scored three runs each in the first two innings, then held off a Coca-Cola rally to gain a 6-5 North State Little League victory Saturday afternoon.

Sportsworld pushed into the lead with three runs in the first inning, then added the killing touch in the second.

Parham Stanley led off the second with a double and with one away, Jason Wing singled. Ledowick Johnson reached on an error, scoring Stanley. Jay Kuykendall reached on a fielder's choice, erasing Wing, but Shea Harper followed with a double, scoring Johnson and Kuykendall.

Coca came back with one run in the second on a homer by Micron Foreman, and added one each in the fourth and fifth before scoring two more in the sixth, falling a run short.

Foreman had two hits to lead Coke and was the lone hitter in the game with more than one.

Jaycees.....14
Kiwanis.....13

The Kiwanis, led by four hits by Ben Edwards, outslugged the Kiwanis, 14-13, in a North State Little League game Saturday afternoon.

The Kiwanis struck first, getting four runs in the top of the first, two of them on a homer by Eric Jones. Two more crossed for them in the second for a 6-0 lead.

The Jaycees got one run in the second, only to see the Kiwanis pick up five more in the third, running their lead to 11-1. After the Jaycees scored once in the third, the Kiwanis pushed over two more in the fourth for a 13-2 edge.

But the Jaycees took command after that. They scored five in the fourth, one in the fifth and five more in the sixth to pull into a 13-13 tie.

Then, in the seventh, the Jaycees pushed over the winning run. With one away, Ashley Branch walked and advanced on a wild pitch. Walks to Rodney Williams and Chris Warren loaded the bases and Edwards followed with a single, driving in Branch with the game-winning run.

Warren added two hits for the Jaycees. Jason Bizzaro led the Kiwanis with four hits, while Jones, Rocky Thurston and Jarrett McGalliard each collected two.

Wellcome.....16
Pepsi-Cola.....8

Chris Moore hit a two-run homer to highlight an eight-run inning as Wellcome rolled up a 16-8 Tar Heel Little League victory over Pepsi-Cola Saturday afternoon.

Pepsi scored first with a trio of runs in the first, but Wellcome came back with four in the bottom of the frame for a 4-3 lead. Pepsi tied it up with one more in the third, but Wellcome added three in the bottom of the inning for a 7-4 edge. Pepsi again rallied, scoring twice in the fourth to pull within one.

It was then that Wellcome shut the door with a bang, scoring eight times in the bottom of the inning. Josh Potter led off with a walk and Jason Adams singled. An error let Potter score and then Moore hit his homer. Derrick Harrington kept it going, getting hit by a pitch and Well Pleasants walked. Shawn Erwin also walked, loading the bases and a wild pitch scored Harrington. Joe Norris singled in Pleasants and Potter walked again. Adams singled in Erwin and Norris and Potter both came around on wild pitches.

Wellcome got one more in the fifth, while Pepsi got its final two in the fifth.

Norris, Adams and Moore each had two hits to lead Wellcome, while Will MacKenzie had three for Pepsi.

First Federal.....12
True Value.....6

Drew Johnson struck out 16 batters as he hurled First Federal to a 12-6 victory over True Value Hardware Saturday afternoon in the Tar Heel Little League.

Johnson gave up only three hits and walked six along the way.

True Value, however, struck first, getting two in the top of the first, but First Federal came back with three in the bottom of the inning.

First Federal then put it out of reach with five second inning runs. Kevin Corbett was hit by a pitch and with one away, Malcolm Joyner singled. After two outs, Keith Corbett singled, loading the bases. Johnson followed with a double, driving in two runs, and Eric Smith singled in two more, moving up on an error. He later scored on a wild pitch with the eighth run of the game.

First Federal got three more in the third and one in the fifth.

True Value added four more in the sixth, one on a lead-off homer by Gamal Hunter.

Corbett and Johnson each had two hits to lead First Federal while no one had more than one for True Value.

Prep League

Garris-Evans.....6

Garris-Evans' Chris Christopher picked up three hits but Shop-Eze Foodland nipped his team, 7-6, in the opening Prep-League game of the season Saturday afternoon.

The league will play non-counting games through Friday and begin the regular season next Saturday.

Garris-Evans scored a run in the first to take the initial lead, but Shop-Eze came back with two in the bottom of the frame. Garris-Evans went back up with three runs in the second, for a 4-2 edge, but Shop-Eze again rallied, scoring three in the third for a 5-4 margin. Garris-Evans tied it up in the top of the fifth with one run.

But in the bottom of the fifth, Shop-Eze scored twice to take the win. Jamie Brewington led off with a single and Maurice Hines also singled. An error on the play let both runners circle the bases.

Garris-Evans rallied for one in the seventh, but fell short.

Both Brewington and Hines collected two hits each for Shop-Eze. Graig Willoughby added a pair of hits to Christopher's three for Garris-Evans.

Hendrix & Dail.....4
First State Bank.....2

Walter Gatlin banged out a pair of hits and pitched his way to a 4-2 win as Hendrix & Dail downed First State Bank yesterday in opening Prep League action.

Hendrix & Dail scored its first run in the bottom of the first, but the Bankers tied it up with one in the second. H&D went back out with one in the third, 2-1.

What proved the difference, however, came over in the fifth. Lee Brown opened with a double and stole third. He scored on a passed ball. With one away, Alfonza Freeman walked and stole second. He scored on Heath Clark's single.

First State came up with one in the sixth, but failed to effectively rally.

Winner May Skip Preakness

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Will it be the Preakness and possible Triple Crown glory, or the Jersey Derby and a shot at a $2 million bonus for Kentucky winner Spend A Buck?

"That's kind of a rock and a hard place I like to be caught between," said Dennis Diaz, who purchased the colt for $12,500.

Diaz, 42, of Tampa, Fla., retired from the real estate, insurance and construction businesses at age 38 to get into the horse business.

Diaz said a decision will be made Sunday or Monday whether to send the front-running Spend A Buck in the May 18 Preakness at Pimlico, second leg of thoroughbred racing's Triple Crown, or the Jersey Derby at Garden State May 27.

Trainer Cam Gambolati agreed that the decision would be made by Diaz "because he owns the horse."

"By God, don't anybody think we may not do it," Diaz said of the $2 million lure. "Don't think we're automatically going to the Preakness."

The $2 million bonus, instituted this year by Garden State Park, is given to any horse which wins the Cherry Hill Handicap, the Garden State Stakes, the Kentucky Derby and the Jersey Derby.

Spend A Buck, ridden by Angel Cordero, has won the first three by big margins.

Diaz and Gambolati ruled out any possibility that the colt could run in both.

"You can't go to the well too many times," Gambolati said. "They run too hard. You can't abuse them."

Diaz said, "We have to see how he comes out of this race. He may need the extra nine days."

While the $2 million bonus is inticing, the stud value of the colt would be greatly enhanced by victories in the Preakness and the third leg of the Triple Crown, the Belmont Stakes.And Gambolati admitted that "$2 million in the breeding business is nothing."

"We don't know how good he is yet," said Diaz, who said he has discussed syndication of the colt with Kentucky owner-breeder William Farish.

Gambolati, the slender, 35-year-old trainer, said the victory was "the whole underdog thing, Cinderella, a dream come true."

Gambolati said favored Chief's Chief, who finished third, "had no excuse. He dropped in right behind and had to come catch us, and didn't."

The trainer said, "The whole race was up to Angel.

"I kept asking, 'When's Eternal Prince coming?' I knew he must have been in trouble."

Eternal Prince and Spend a Buck were expected to challenge for the early lead, but Eternal Prince could never get free of the pack.

"With a quarter-mile to go, I only worried whether he could get a mile and a quarter," said Gambolati. "By the eighth pole, I knew we were a winner."

Spend A Buck...

on May 18 at Pimlico.

But Spend A Buck could earn another $1 million bonus from Garden State Park by skipping the Preakness and running in the Jersey Derby on May 27. Spend A Buck picked up a $1 million bonus from Garden State Saturday. The track had offered that amount to any colt who could win the Cherry Hill, the Garden State and the Derby.

Spend A Buck earned $406,800 from a purse of $581,800 and, with the bonus, now has earned $2,398,509.

Others in the supporting cast of Spend A Buck's one-horse show were, in order of finish after Fast Account, Proud Truth, Skywalker, Tank's Prospect, Floating Reserve, Rhoman Rule, Encolure, Irish Fighter, Eternal Prince and I Am the Game.

And they performed before what was, for the Derby, a small crowd of 108,573. The record was 163,628 for the 100th Derby in 1974. Last year's attendance was 126,453, but all ticket prices for this year's race were doubled.

Besides Laurin, other human contestants in the 111th Derby for whom this Derby was a pipe dream were trainer Woody Stephens of Stephan's Odyssey and that colt's jockey, Laffit Pincay Jr.; Jacinto Vasquez, the jockey of Rhoman Rule, and Delahoussaye.

If Laurin could have won, he and his father, Lucien, would have become the third father-son team to saddle Derby winners. The elder Laurin won with Riva Ridge in 1972 and Secretariat in 1973.

No Excuses From Favorite's Jockey

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Jockey Don MacBeth made no excuses for finishing third aboard favored Chief's Crown in Saturday's 111th Kentucky Derby behind Spend A Buck and Stephan's Odyssey.

"I wanted to be five or six lengths off the lead and that's where I was," said MacBeth, whose colt was the 6-5 favorite of the 108,573 patrons at Churchill Downs. "The winner ran an awesome race."

Laffit Pincay Jr., who rode 13-1 longshot Stephan's Odyssey to a surprising second-place finish, said his horse got a little out of hand in the opening strides of the 1¼-mile Derby. But by the end, it made little difference.

"He broke right with the leaders and then he tried to savage the horse next to him (12th-place finisher Eternal Prince)," Pincay said. "I had to take hold of him and we got out of position."

Stephan's Odyssey was dead last in the 13-horse pack after a half-mile but had scrambled to fifth position by the time Spend A Buck had blazed to the fastest mile in Derby history, 1:34.4.

Heading into the stretch, Pincay guided Stephan's Odyssey through the last of the traffic and hooked up with Chief's Crown, whom he beat by a half-length at the wire, but was still 5¼ lengths behind the winner.

Ron McKenzie, assistant trainer of Stephan's Odyssey, said he was disappointed that no one challenged Spend A Buck earlier.

"We thought somebody would take him on and not let him get his own way so easily," McKenzie said.

"He (Spend A Buck) won with an outstanding race," Laurin said.

MacBeth chased Spend A Buck from second place for most of the race, which was run in 2:00.1, the third fastest Derby in history.

"Nobody went with him and it helped him a lot," said MacBeth. "I couldn't have placed him (Chief's Crown) any better. I was right where I wanted to be."

MacBeth is now 0-9 in Derby competition. "I don't believe in jinxes," MacBeth said. "There's no jinx to it. We just got beat today."

Boone To Sleep Easier After Hit

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — When a ballplayer in his prime hits .150, it's called a slump. When a 37-year-old player is hits .159, it's cause for concern.

Bob Boone, the veteran California catcher who carried that average into Saturday's game with Milwaukee, has wrestled with those doubts.

"It's been very frustrating so far. I think I'll sleep a little easier tonight," Boone said after hitting a two-run single in the third inning that held up as the difference in the Angels 4-3 victory over the Brewers.

"I'd been thinking of a lot of different things. This was an encouraging day for me," Boone said. "I consider myself a good hitter, but my mechanics were all screwed up. I've been struggling, but hopefully it will turn around."

Right-handed reliever Donnie Moore has definitely turned around the Angels' inability to win one-run games. California has won eight of nine such decisions this year, with Moore picking up his fifth save by getting the final three outs.

"He came in with fastballs and challenged them," said Boone. "The tougher the situation, the better the pitch he makes."

Rom Romanick, 3-1, scattered six hits over seven innings before leaving in favor of Pat Clements. Moore got the final three outs, giving up a run on Jim Gantner's ninth-inning sacrifice fly.

California took a 1-0 lead after Gary Pettis led off the first with a double, went to third on a infield out and scored on catcher Charlie Moore's throwing error.

Ruppert Jones' sacrifice fly made it 2-0 in the second, scoring Juan Beniquez, who singled, went to second on Dick Schofield's sacrifice bunt and stopped at third on a single by Boone.

The Angels loaded the bases in the third when Doug DeCinces walked. Brian Downing singled and Schofield was hit by a pitch. Boone then singled into center to score two runs and chase Milwaukee right-hander Pete Vuckovich, 1-1.

The Brewers got an unearned run in the fourth inning on Doug Loman's single, which scored Cecil Cooper. Cooper singled and went to second on a passed ball. Ben Oglivie lead off the sixth, went to third on an outfield fly and scored on Loman's sacrifice fly.

Cleveland.....3
Texas.....1

CLEVELAND (AP) — It took a bad season for Neal Heaton to realize his limitations and become a better major league pitcher.

"Last year I thought my fastball was good enough that I could just rear back and throw it past hitters anytime. But I found out that didn't cut it, that I have to change speeds and hit spots," Heaton said after four hitting the Texas Rangers over the first seven innings to give the Cleveland Indians a 3-1 victory Saturday.

The left-handed Heaton stuggled to a 12-15 record with an unenviable 5.21 ERA last season, following what had been an outstanding 1983 rookie campaign.

Indians Manager Pat Corrales had a meassage for Heaton at the start of this season.

"Pat just told me that I've got to get the ball down, and if I don't, it's going to be a long year for me like it was last year," said Heaton, who has responded with a 2-1 record and 1.95 ERA in 37 innings.

"I've found you don't need a 95 mile-per-hour fast ball or a great Bert Blyleven-type curve ball to win in the major leagues if you change speeds and keep the ball down," Heaton said.

Butler put the Indians ahead to stay in the fifth when he drilled a triple to deep center field after Tony Bernazard walked with two out. Cleveland added a run in the eighth and chased Rangers left-hander Frank Tanana, 0-4. Julio Franco led off with a double and scored on a single by Andre Thornton.

Texas took a 1-0 lead in the first inning. Toby Harrah walked leading off, marking the 12th consecutive game in which Harrah has drawn at least one walk. He took second on gary Ward's single, went to third as Buddy Bell grounded into a fielder's choice and scored when Larry Parrish also grounded into a fielder's choice.

Cleveland tied the score 1-1 in the second when Joe Carter grounded a one-out single and scored on Butch Benton's two-out bloop single after a walk to Carmen Castillo.

Parrish left for a pinch runner in the first after reinjuring a bruised right knee he sustained in batting practice.

New York.....5
Kansas City.....2

NEW YORK (AP) — Shortstop Greg Pryor, inserted into Kansas City's starting lineup to help create some runs, did just that. He threw a potential inning-ending fielder's choice grounder into right field, keying a three-run eighth inning Saturday that gave the New York Yankees a 5-2 victory over the Royals.

"He always hits well against the Yankees (.364 last season), and I wanted to try to get something going," Royals Manager Dick Howser said. "I won't fault Pryor on that play. It was just an error. But when you're not scoring runs, those things are magnified."

With the score tied 2-2, Charlie Leilbrandt, 3-1, retired the first two New York batters in the seventh before Don Mattingly blooped a single to left. Dave Winfield then hit a sharp grounder that Pryor fielded in the hole but fired past second baseman Frank White. The ball skidded into foul territory and Mattingly raced home ahead of right-fielder Lynn Jones' wide throw to the plate. Winfield reached third on the three-base error.

Don Baylor followed with a two-run homer for insurance.

"There's no excuse," Pryor said. "I had to make the play quickly, and unfortunately that's the throw I made."

Mattingly and third base coach Gene Michael knew what to do. "All I was trying to do was beat the throw to second base," Mattingly said. "I knew it would be close at the plate because I didn't see anybody in right. I knew Gene would wave me in."

Said Michael: "With two outs, I had to send him. I knew a good throw would get him, but I figured the ball would wind up in foul territory."

The loss was Kansas City's eighth straight at Yankee Stadium, including six last season.

Ron Guidry, 2-3, allowed just four hits, but two of them were solo home runs. Darryl Motley hit his third homer in the second and George Brett hit his third in the sixth to make the score 2-2. Guidry has allowed eight home runs in 40 2-3 innings this season.

The Yankees built runs in the first and fifth innings. Rickey Henderson led off the first by doubling, and Winfield drew a one-out walk. Henderson and Winfield executed a double steal, and Henderson scored on Baylor's sacrifice fly.

Bobby Meacham walked with one out in the fifth, stole second and stayed there on Henderson's infield single, his third hit of the game. The runners advanced on a fly out, and after Winfield was intentionally walked, Baylor got an infield hit to third to score a run.

Buckner Has Hot Day

OAKLAND (AP) — Boston right-hander Steve Crawford just finished pitching one of the best games by a Boston starter, but Crawford has no immediate visions of changing his role in the Red Sox pitching rotation.

"I look at myself as a long reliever because that's what I am," said Crawford, who allowed only four hits in 6 2-3 innings and the Red Sox held on for a 5-4 victory over the Oakland A's.

Crawford, 3-2, pressed into action as a fifth starter in the Boston rotation, made his first start since 1981 and picked up his first victory as a starter since 1980.

"I said to myself even though I'm starting this game I have to look at my role in long relief," said Crawford, who left the game in the seventh inning after experiencing discomfort in his pitching elbow.

"That was my last inning anyway, and it's been a long time since I pitched that many innings."

Crawford was helped by Bill Buckner's three hits, including a two-run homer that broke a 1-1 tie in the fourth inning. It was Buckner's second homer in as many games.

"I worked hard this year to increase my power at the plate," said Buckner, who has four homers so far this year. "I think we have six guys who can hit 20 home runs in this lineup and I'd like to be one of them. I'd also like to hit .300 and drive in a hundred runs."

"There's not one guy out there not giving 110 percent," said Oakland Manager Jackie Moore, whose A's have dropped nine of their last 10 games. "We've got singles hitters trying to hit home runs, and trying to make it all up in one swing. We're not doing anything we've practiced."

Crawford had retired 16 of 17 batters before leaving the game for Bob Stanley, who gave up a three-run homer to Dusty Baker with one out in the ninth inning. Bob Ojeda got the last two outs for his first save. Oakland left-hander Bill Krueger, 2-3, was the loser.

Oakland took to a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Carney Lansford's one-out single and Bruce Bochte's RBI double. Boston tied it in the second when Buckner singled with one out, went to second on Krueger's wild pitch and scored on Dave Stapleton's single.

Mike Easler doubled to lead off the Boston fourth, and Buckner followed with his second homer in two games. Wade Boggs' RBI single later in the inning gave the Red Sox a 4-1 lead.

Two-out singles by Jim Rice and Tony Armas set the stage for Boston's final run in the seventh. Easler singled to center and Rice scored when catcher Mickey Tettleton dropped the relay throw from Krueger in a collision with Rice at home.

Dantley, Wilkins Lead Jazz Win

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah forward Adrian Dantley scored 32 points and reserve forward Jeff Wilkins scored 18 second-half points as the Jazz beat the Denver Nuggets 131-123 Saturday in a National Basketball Association Western Conference semifinal playoff game.

Wilkins, who came off the bench, helped Utah battle a Denver rally in the fourth quarter when he scored two free throws and two field goals.

He scored two free throws eight seconds later and Darrell Griffith slammed home a dunk with 10 ticks of the clock to ice the contest.

Green and Griffith each finished with 24 points. Griffith, who suffered a serious scoring slump in the first two games, connected on three of four three-point shots.

Calvin Natt paced the Nuggets with 30 points, while Alex English had 26. Mike Evans had 19 points, including three three-pointers.

The win trimmed Denver's best-of-seven playoff advantage to 2-1. Utah will try to tie the series Sunday night at the Salt Palace.

Utah built a 10-point lead in the first quarter as Green and Dantley began hitting from the outside. During one three-minute stretch, Utah outscored the Nuggets 11-4. Green gave the Jazz their first lead of the game when he sank a pair of foul shots at 7:47 in the first period.

Griffith scored on a slam dunk 18 seconds later and the Jazz began building its advantage, which stood at 37-27 going into the second quarter.

Denver whittled away at the lead, shaving it to 67-61 at halftime. The Nuggets tied the game five times in the third period, which ended deadlocked at 99. Dan Issel gave the Nuggets a 101-100 lead with the first basket of the fourth quarter.

The fourth-quarter lead changed hands five times before the Jazz took control.

"We played very hard," said Utah Coach Frank Layden. "They just wouldn't let us pull away. They could've folded several times, but they just kept coming back. That's why they are a (divisional) championship team.

"We went to our bench and they came through. Jeff (Wilkins) was terrific," he said.

Wilkins came up with a key steal with 28 seconds left when Denver inbounded the ball with Utah up 127-123. Green then scored a pair of free throws on the other end.

"We're still the underdog," Layden said. "It's hard to come back from two down. It's done rarely. Personally, I think it's impossible."

Watching It Roll

Garbacz Gains Shot Lead

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Lori Garbacz weathered the gusty winds which sent scores soaring at the Moss Creek Women's Invitational Saturday and emerged with an even-par 72 and a one-stroke lead going into the final round of the $200,000 event.

Garbacz, of Boca Raton, Fla., sank a 7-foot putt for birdie on the final hole to post a three-round total of 2-under-par 214 — one stroke ahead of Amy Alcott.

Garbacz had one of only six par or sub-par rounds recorded Saturday at the 6,290-yard layout at Moss Creek Plantation. The best scores of the day were three 1-under-par 71s.

Three golfers were tied two strokes off the pace at even-par 216 for the tournament: Patty Sheehan, Sally Quinlan and Nancy Lopez.

The round was played under sun-splashed skies in a heavy breeze on the Devil's Elbow South course, which winds its way through coastal marshes.

Garbacz, who began the day at 2-under, started by sinking a 5-foot putt for a birdie on No. 1, but bogeyed the 360-yard, par-4 second hole. After a birdie on No. 6, she suffered a triple-bogey 7 on No. 9 when her drive sailed into a water trap.

But she bounced back to birdie the 11th hole on the windswept back nine and then sank the 7-foot putt for a birdie and the lead on No. 18.

But she ran into problems on the front nine — suffering a bogey on the 335-yard par-4 third hole when she missed a 20-foot putt for par by inches. Her troubles continued on the next hole when she lost her ball in the marsh and ended with a double-bogey 7.

She suffered two more bogeys on the back nine to finish with a 78 and fall back to even-par for the tournament.

Baker, playing in Sheehan's threesome, took the lead briefly, but plagued by putting problems, bogeyed three holes on the front nine. She finished with a 77 to give her a 217-total — three strokes off the pace.

Garbacz is the third leader in as many days at the Moss Creek event. She joined the LPGA tour six years ago but is still looking for her first tournament victory.

Rose Girls Are 2nd In Big East

KINSTON — Rose High School's girls' track team won three individual events and two relays, but couldn't quite pull out the Big East Conference championship Saturday in Kinston.

Wilson Fike took first place in the meet with a total of 164 points while Rose was second with 141.

Northeastern finished a distant third with 56, while Northern Nash took fourth with 50. Wilson Hunt was fifth with 38 followed by Wilson Beddingfield with 36. Rocky Mount scored two points and Kinston failed to score.

Fike took first place in five individual events and won one of the relays to help it outdistance the Rampettes. Beddingfield captured first in three events, while Hunt won the remaining two.

The Rampettes' firsts were picked up by Karen Dixon in the triple jump, Amy Moore in the 3,200-meter run and by Becky Thompson in the 800-meter run.

The team of Kim Dupree, Paula Parks, Jody Ross and Lisa Pagel won the 800-meter relay, while Parks, Thompson, Ross and Pagel teamed up for a win in the 1,600-meter relay.

Rose led the meet at the conclusion of the field events, but couldn't keep pace with Fike's depth in the running events.

Davey Allison Wins Permatex

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Davey Allison won the Automobile Racing Club of America Permatex 500-kilometer race after Ken Ragan crashed while leading the late model stock car event with nine laps remaining.

Ragan's 1985 Chevrolet Monte Carlo, which ran at or near the front throughout the 310-mile, 117-lap event, was leading Allison's new Buick Regal by just a few car lengths when the two leaders slid through some oil on the track surface.

Ragan's silver and black racer made an abrupt turn to the right and pounded the concrete wall hard coming off the second turn on lap 108, while Allison was able to gather his red and white car in after it started up toward the wall.

Ragan, who was conscious and talking, was taken to Northeast Alabama Regional Medical Center in nearby Anniston for X-rays for possible neck, rib and internal injuries. Track officials said the 34-year-old from Unadilla, Ga., was expected to be kept overnight for observation and was not expected to drive in Sunday's Winston 500 Grand National stock car event here.

Ragan qualified a new Monte Carlo SS in the 38th spot for that race at 195.828. Bosco Lowe, who also competed in the ARCA race, drove Ragan's car in the final Grand National practice session following the Permatex race. But Sunday's driver was not expected to be announced until just prior to the 2 p.m. EDT start.

When the debris was cleared and the green flag came out again with just four laps to go, the 24-year-old Allison, the defending race champion, held off a strong effort by Lee Raymond and Red Farmer and powered to his fourth ARCA victory on the 2.66-mile Alabama International Motor Speedway tri-oval.

In fact, it was the third straight time he has won this event.

Raymond wound up second — about 35 yards behind — followed by Farmer, pole-sitter Bill Venturini and Billie Harvey, all in new Monte Carlos.

Allison, the son of NASCAR Grand National star Bobby Allison and a resident of nearby Hueytown, Ala., averaged 145.505 mph in the race, which was slowed by six caution flags. The winner earned $8,825.

Allison led the race five times for a total of 30 laps, second only to Ragan's seven times for 50 laps. In all, there were an ARCA record 23 lead changes among nine drivers.

There were several other crashes during the race, but no other injuries were reported.

The ARCA event, which drew an estimated 35,000 people, was run as a preliminary to the $504,275 Winston 500.

More than 100,000 people are expected to watch the race Sunday, with the National Weather Service forecasting a sunny day with highs in the low 80s.

5. Billie Harvey, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 116
6. Bosco Lowe, Chevrolet Monte Carlo, 116
7. Kirk Bryant, Pontiac Grand Prix, 115

Knox Holds Shot Lead Over Player

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Kenny Knox fired a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead over tour veteran Gary Player after three rounds of the $200,000 Tallahassee Open.

Knox stood at 15-under 201 after his third solid round in the 72-hole Tournament Players Series event over the 7,027-yard, par-72 Killearn Golf and Country Club course.

Knox posted scored of 68 and 65 on the first two days, while Player turned in scored of 69 and 65. The South African veteran matched Knox's 68 Saturday to come in a 202 and set up a head-to-head matchup between the two leaders in Sunday's final round.

Second-round leader Jeff Sluman, who blitzed the course with back-to-back 65s in the first two rounds, blew up to a 74 Saturday to slip into a tie with Bob Tway for third place at 204.

Mike Malaska and Jim Gallagher are two strokes farther back at 206. Malaska shot a 71 Saturday while Gallagher made up ground with a 67.

Knox said he feels confident heading into the final round.

"I'm hitting the ball so solidly I feel like I can hit the ball anywhere I want," he said after his five-birdie, one-bogey round.

Player said his experience with final-round pressure will help him Sunday, but he thinks youth isn't necessarily detrimental at this stage of a tournament.

"Youth is always an always an advantage," he said. "These young guys are like Boy Scouts .. they're always prepared."

Dunston Helps Cubs Past Padres

CHICAGO (AP) — Rookie shortstop Shawon Dunston had his biggest day at the plate Saturday with his first major league homer, a double, two runs batted in and three runs scored.

"I was happy to get the big hit that put us ahead to stay," Dunston said after the Chicago Cubs defeated San Diego 12-8. "And there was a good feeling when I got to the dugout."

Dunston shrugged and said, "I don't know, honest, I don't know," when asked what kind of pitch he hit for a homer. And he didn't have the satisfaction of seeing it land into the bleachers.

"I thought it was a gapper and it would go for two or three bases, so I started running with my head down," said Dunston, "but when the fans cheered, I looked up and it was gone."

Six other balls went sailing for home runs with a with a 24-mph wind blowing out.

Graig Nettles hit a pair for the Padres and drove in three runs while Steve Garvey and Garry Templeton had solo shots.Ryne Sandberg had a two-run homer and Ron Cey hit a solo for the Cubs.

The Padres pulled within 9-8 after scoring single runs in the fifth, sixth, seven and eighth innings, but the Cubs scored three unearned runs in their half of the eighth after a two-out error by Templeton at shortstop.

Templeton could not handle a two-out grounder by Davey Lopes, who then stole second. After an intentional walk to Leon Durham, Keith Moreland drove in a run. Tim Stoddard walked Jody Davis, Cey and Dunston in succession to score two more runs.

Garvey hit his fourth homer in the first and Templeton his second of the season and second in two days in the second inning. Nettles made it 4-0 with a two-run shot in the third, and he hit his fourth of the season in the fifth.

The Cubs tied it with four in the bottom of the third and went ahead to stay with four more in the fourth.

Cey hit his third homer to open the third. Dunston doubled, went to third on a pinch single by Gary Woods and scored on Bob Dernier's sacrifice fly before Sandberg hit his third homer.

Dunston hit his first major league homer in the fourth, and three walks loaded the bases for the Cubs before Leon Durham singled home a pair and Moreland followed with a run-scoring single.

Chicago added a run in the fifth on a walk to Dunston and a triple by Dernier.

The Padres also scored single runs in the sixth, seventh and eighth innings. In the sixth, Templeton and Tony Gwynn hit doubles, Carmelo Martinez had a run-scoring single in the seventh, and Gwynn drove in another run with a single in the eighth.

CINCINNATI (AP) — The Cincinnati Reds picked a good game in which to score a lot of runs, says third baseman Nick Esasky.

The Reds scored 10 runs in the sixth inning Saturday to beat the New York Mets 14-2, sparked by Esasky's grand slam home run.

"When things aren't going well, something like this can really lift you up," said Esasky, who was scheduled for bench duty at the season's outset. "We got the runs and hits today. It was a good time to blow somebody out."

Esasky's homer, came on a 0-2 pitch off Doug Sisk who had just come in to relieve starter Roger McDowell.

Mets manager Dave Johnson called the loss "embarrassing. I've never made three pitching changes in an inning before. I didn't like it."

Pete Rose, the Reds player-manager, said Esasky would "someday realize how strong he is. A lot of guys hit their home runs when they are just trying to make contact and get a fly ball to score a run."

Dave Parker has been on an offensive roll with a 13-game hitting streak during which he is 21-for-54 for a .388 average.

"I'm swinging good, real good right now, and when things are going this way, it doesn't seem to matter who they pitch. Tommmorow it's (Dwight) Gooden, and we will see then. I've still got to hit," Parker said.

Reds right-hander Jay Tibbs pitched a four-hitter for his first career complete game.

Tibbs, 1-4, had pitched no-hit ball through five innings before the Mets tied the score 2-2 on Keith Hernandez single and Gary Carter's fourth homer of the season. The Reds had scored twice in the fifth on an RBI single by Ron Oester and a double-play grounder by Dave Van Gorder.

Rose had a first inning single to draw within 70 hits of Ty Cobb's all-time mark.

Eddie Milner started the Reds sixth with a single, and Rose walked. Parker doubled to right to score Milner and break the tie as Rose went to third. Cesar Cedeno was walked intentionally to load the bases, and Sisk relieved McDowell.

Esasky then hit his grand slam homer to center. Dave Concepcion followed with a triple, Oester doubled scoring Concepcion, and Oester went to third on a ground ball. Tibbs walked, and Joe Sambito relieved Sisk. Sambito walked Milner and Rose in succession to force in a run, and Parker singled as Tibbs and Milner scored. Cedeno's single scored Rose, and Calvin Schiraldi relieved Sambito. Schiraldi struck out Esasky and Concepcion to end the inning.

The 10 runs by the Reds were two short of their all-time record, last set against Atlanta on April 25, 1977.

Pittsburgh.....5

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fernando Valenzuela proved Saturday he's human — but he also proved why he's one of baseball's best pitchers.

Valenzuela was nearly unhittable in his first five starts, allowing only one earned run in his first 42 innings despite having only a 2-3 record. In the first five innings against the Pittsburgh Pirates, he surrendered five runs — four of them earned — and seven hits before "suddenly finding that groove," according to Dodgers Manager Tom Lasorda.

Valenzuela blanked the Pirates on three scratch hits the rest of the way as the Dodgers rallied for a 6-5 victory when Pedro Guerrero hit a tying homer in the seventh before driving in the winning run with a 10th-inning triple. The Dodgers bounced back from a 16-2 loss to the Pirates on Friday, their worst defeat since a 14-0 loss to Cincinnati in 1967.

Valenzuela, 3-3, struck out seven and walked three despite allowing 10 hits and helped himself with a pair of hits, including a double.

"There probably wouldn't have been any other pitcher in baseball still in the game in the 10th," said Bill Madlock, who hit a two-run homer off Valenzuela in the third. "A lot of other pitchers, they go seven innings and start looking to the bullpen. He's just like Bob Gibson and Tom Seaver were when I came up. If you don't get to them by the sixth inning, you're not going to get to them. He gets stronger and stronger. That's what impresses me about him."

Ken Landreaux singled to greet reliever John Candelaria, 1-3, in the 10th before Guerrero just missed his second homer of the game, lining a shot off the right-field wall a foot below the yellow home-run line. Guerrero failed to score when a Dodgers' suicide squeeze misfired on a pitch-out, and Guerrero was tagged out at home by catcher Tony Pena.

"We finally got enough runs for Fernando today," Guerrero said. "That was on all our minds today how many games last year we only got one run or no runs for him. We just had to get that out of our minds and pretend that was just another pitcher out there."

"I thought we had him when we were ahead 5-4. You get five off him, you consider it a pretty good day," said Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner.

The Dodgers gained a 5-5 tie in the seventh when Guerrero hit his third home run of the season. That was the first run given up by reliever Al Holland in 10 2-3 innings since being acquired by the Pirates in trade from Philadelphia.

The Dodgers, whose 16-2 loss to the Pirates Friday night was their worst since 1967, took a 2-0 lead in the first with the help of Pirates starter Mike Bielecki's wildness. Bielecki walked two, threw a wild pitch and was called for a balk before Mike Scioscia lined a two-out, two-run single.

The Pirates rallied for a 3-2 lead with a run in the second on first baseman Mike Marshall's error, and Madlock's two-run homer in the third after Johnny Ray's single.

Mike Marshall hit a long solo homer in the third, his fifth of the season, and Valenzuela doubled and scored in the fourth on Landreaux's single. The Pirates rallied to make it 5-4 on sacrifice flies by Jason Thompson in the fifth inning and Jim Morrison in the fourth.

Ongais Sees 212 MPH Pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Danny Ongais, consistently one of the fastest qualifiers for the Indianapolis 500, has led the race in four of the eight years he has competed and doesn't deny he's a charger.

"It's a description. How accurate it is, I don't know. I don't think I've changed any," Ongais said Saturday, the opening day of practice for the May 26 race.

"I would like to think the pole (position) will go somewhere over 212 (mph)," Ongais said. "I'd like to think we will be one of those very close to that. It's hard to envision at this time that 200 mph is going to make the race."

Ongais has finished in the top 10 at Indy three times. He was ninth last year after qualifying at nearly 204 mph and leading three laps. He also led the race for 71 laps in 1978, after tying for the second-fastest qualification speed, and he led again in 1981 and 1982 before crashes ended his chances for his first Indy 500 victory.

The 1981 crash, a 200 mph collision with the third-turn wall, sidelined Ongais for nearly a year while he recuperated.

"It was a long time until I was able to race again, but really nothing changed in my mind," he said of his attitude toward the sport. "The people who I work with helped me a lot. I'm not concerned (about the danger). When I'm in the car, I'm thinking about the job at hand."

Ongais, who will be 43 five days before the race, brought a new, untested March-Cosworth race car to the track.

"A lot of things change," Ongais said of the technology that has produced vastly superior racing equipment and an increase in speeds of more than 40 mph since he first tried to get into the 500 in 1968. "It's made it easier to go a good deal faster. But it's also raised the level of competition, which has made it difficult again to get an edge.

"Right now, all you can do is work as hard as you can and pray for a little luck," he said. "This is a period in racing not like ever before, because the same equipment is available to everyone. No one has an advantage over someone who has the same goals and is willing to work."

Ongais, a native of Hawaii who now lives in Santa Ana, Calif., started racing motorcycles in 1957 and sports cars and drag racers in the early 1960s. He was the AA Gas dragster national champion in 1963 and 1964 and the AA Fuel champion in 1965. He went to work for Goodyear in 1967 and was part of the Goodyear crew on the U.S. Auto Club championship circuit.

In 1968, he was listed as the driver on a car entered by Mickey Thompson in the Indianapolis 500, but he was told by USAC to come back when he had more experience.

"I've been fortunate to have been involved in other areas (besides Indy cars)," said Ongais, who returned to the road racing circuit before making his champ car debut in 1976. "The feeling has been the same. I can't say I like one better than the other. When you're the person doing the job, one is as complex as the other."

Ongais qualified for his first Indy 500 in 1977 and started seventh at 193.040 mph — then the fastest qualifying speed in history by a rookie — and wound up 20th when engine trouble knocked him out after 90 laps.

The next season, 1978, was his best. He won five races, earned nine pole positions, established five track records and led a record 870 laps over the season series.

What motivates Ongais?

"I enjoy it," he said. "We all have to choose something. I enjoy working with the people, I enjoy working with the equipment. This year, our approach isn't different; we're just approaching it with the intent of doing well the entire season."

Navratilova In Easy Victory

HOUSTON (AP) — Top-seeded Martina Navratilova dominated her third straight opponent and easily advanced to the final of the $150,000 Virginia Slims of Houston tennis tournament Saturday with a 6-3, 6-0 victory over Czechoslovakia's Helena Sukova.

Navratilova, who has lost only eight games to three opponents this week, will face unseeded Elise Burgin in Sunday's finals.

Burgin blew two match points in the eighth game of the second set but rallied in a tiebreaker to upset second-seeded Manuela Maleeva of Bulgaria 6-4, 7-6. Burgin upset fourth-seeded Zina Garrison in Friday's quarterfinals.

Navratilova made her victory look easy.

"I wasn't coasting," she corrected a reporter. "When someone has beaten me before, I don't coast. I try to beat them."

Navratilova lost to Sukova in the semifinals of the Australian Open last year, snapping Navratilova's record string of 74 consecutive match victories.

But Sukova never was in Saturday's match. She was broken in the second game of the opening set and then fell apart in the second set.

"I think she started going for shots in the second set to try to get back in it," Navratilova said.

Navratilova is one match away from her 105th tournament victory as a pro. She has a 35-2 match record this year and has a 59-6 record in sets in 1985.

Pirates Have Prince Of A Night

By BEN WALKER
AP Sports Writer

Two things hadn't been heard from for awhile at Three Rivers Stadium in Pittsburgh — the voice of Bob Prince and the Pirates' bats, a.k.a. the Slumber Company.

But they were both booming Friday night as Pittsburgh shelled the Los Angeles Dodgers 16-2.

"Wasn't that great?" beamed Pirates Manager Chuck Tanner. "That gave Bob something to talk about, didn't it?"

Tony Pena, Sixto Lezcano and Bill Almon cracked two-run singles during a nine-run explosion in the fourth inning that keyed the rout. The uprising began with two outs and nobody on base, and was sparked by Los Angeles shortstop Bill Russell's third error of the game.

On hand to announce the action on KDKA was the popular Prince, 68, who began his baseball broadcasting career in Pittsburgh in 1948 and was officially rejoining the Pirates' radio crew for the first time since his controversial firing in 1975. He was let go for ignoring a corporate directive to cut down on his storytelling and anecdotes — the things that had made him so popular.

"Bob is an institution in Pittsburgh and I'm really glad we could do that," Tanner said.

In other National League games, San Diego beat Chicago 6-5, Montreal ripped Atlanta 9-2, New York crunched Cincinnati 9-4, Philadelphia nipped Houston 3-2 and St. Louis defeated San Francisco 8-1.

Jason Thompson added a two-run homer, his third blast in as many games, and a two-run single to aid the Pirates' victory. The 16 runs were the most Pittsburgh had scored since they scored 16 against Chicago on June 2, 1981.

What had everyone buzzing the most happened in the fourth inning with Pittsburgh already leading 3-2. That's when, with two outs and no one on base, the Pirates erupted for their first nine-run inning since May 2, 1982, versus Cincinnati.

With runners on first and second, Russell threw away a grounder by George Hendrick, making the score 4-2 and prolonging the inning. Then the roof fell in on starter Rick Honeycutt, 1-2, and relievers Tom Brennan and Bobby Castillo.

McWilliams, 3-1, went the distance, allowing eight hits.

"There isn't anything wrong with my arm, but it might not have looked like it," Russell said. "I just had trouble throwing the ball. It was a bad night ... I've had a lot of two-error games but I don't know about a three-error game. But I've played this game long enough to know you come back tomorrow and play again."

Padres 6, Cubs 5

In the first meeting of the season between last year's division champions, Steve Garvey tripled home two runs and Graig Nettles and Garry Templeton socked eighth-inning home runs to carry San Diego over Chicago.

Winner Andy Hawkins raised his record to 5-0. Rich Gossage, who gave up a three-run homer to Leon Durham, hung on for his seventh save — four of them in games started by Hawkins.

The losing pitcher was Rick Sutcliffe, 3-3. Sutcliffe was the losing pitcher last October in Game 5 of the NL playoffs, when the Padres rallied to win the final three games after dropping the first two.

Mets 9, Reds 4

Danny Heep drove in five runs while veteran Keith Hernandez hit his first home run of the season and Len Dykstra, playing his first major-league game, also homered in Cincinnati.

New York drilled Reds starter Mario Soto, 4-2. Hernandez homered in the first inning, Dykstra hit a two-run shot in the third, his second major-league at-bat, and Heep's two-run single in the fifth made it 6-2. Dykstra was called up to the majors on Thursday to replace the injured Ron Gardenhire.

Cincinnati's Dave Parker went 4-for-4, including two solo home runs and an RBI single. Parker, who extended his hitting streak to 11 games, has seven hits in his last eight at-bats, including three homers and two doubles.

Expos 9, Braves 2

Mike Fitzgerald, Hubie Brooks and Herm Winningham — three of the players acquired by Montreal from the New York Mets for Gary Carter — ganged up to help the Expos win in Atlanta.

Fitzgerald went 3-for-3, including a two-run single during a game-breaking four-run fifth inning. Brooks drove in two runs with a home run and a single. Winningham contributed two key singles.

Montreal roughed up Braves starter Len Barker, 0-2, in the fifth. Tim Wallach led off with a single, stole second and took third on Winningham's single. After Winningham stole second, Fitzgerald singled home the runners. Tim Raines delivered an RBI single and Andre Dawson capped the outburst with a run-scoring double.

Phillies 3, Astros 2

Glenn Wilson blasted a two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning to lift the Phillies to victory in Philadelphia.

Wilson's third home run of the season, after a walk to pinch-hitter John Russell, came off Frank DiPino, 1-3.

Houston had rallied to take a 3-2 lead in the top of the eighth on an RBI single by Jose Cruz and a run-scoring double by Jerry Mumphrey.

Nolan Ryan, baseball's all-time strikeout leader, started for the Astros and was opposed by Steve Carlton, No. 2 on the career strikeout list. Ryan fanned 10 in six innings — the 156th time he has struck out 10 or more in a game — and raised his career total to 3,912.

Carlton, who has been bothered by left shoulder stiffness, did not strike out anyone before leaving after five innings because of minor tightness in his shoulder. Carlton has 3,883 career strikeouts.

Cardinals 8, Giants 1

Darrell Porter and Jack Clark clubbed three-run homers to back John Tudor's five-hit pitching in St. Louis.

Porter's first home run of the season came in the sixth off San Francisco starter Mike Krukow, 2-1. Clark's fourth blast of the year came in the seventh off reliever Frank Williams. Clark also had an RBI single in the first inning.

Tudor, 1-3, won his first game for St. Louis since being acquired last December from Pittsburgh in exchange for outfielder George Hendrick. Tudor retired 15 straight batters between the first and sixth innings. He had his shutout bid ruined in the ninth on a two-out, run-scoring single by Chili Davis.

Former Ump Kunkel Dies

MIDDLETOWN, N.J. (AP) — Bill Kunkel, an American League umpire and former major league pitcher, died Saturday following a four-year battle with cancer. He was 48.

Frank Self, former mayor of Middletown and a friend of the Kunkel family, said Kunkel died about 9 a.m. at Riverview Hospital in Red Bank.

"He has been a fighter all his life," said Kunkel's wife, Maxine, from their home here.

From 1962-1964, Kunkel pitched in the AL, compiling a 6-6 record with the Kansas City Athletics and the New York Yankees.

He became an umpire in 1968 and served for a time as a referee in the National Basketball Association.

Mrs. Kunkel said her husband's colon cancer was diagnosed in 1981. Twice he took leaves from his umpiring job to undergo surgery and twice he returned. After his first return in 1982, he went on to work his fourth AL Championship Series.

During his recuperation he stayed in shape by walking and jogging the four-mile round-trip between the Port Authority bus terminal in New York and New York University, where he received radiation treatments five days a week.

Games Are Postponed

The light baseball and softball schedule for Friday was washed out by rain, with three high school games delayed until Monday and East Carolina's baseball game with Campbell set back a week.

The Pirates and Camels have tentatively rescheduled their game for Saturday at Harrington Field with a 7 p.m. starting time.

Rose High School's baseball game with Wilson Beddingfield has been reset for Monday night at 7:30 p.m. at Guy Smith Stadium.

D.H. Conley's baseball and softball games at White Oak have also been reset for Monday. The softball game will be played at 4 p.m. and the baseball game at 8 p.m.

Davidson Drops Southern; To Join Colonial League

DAVIDSON (AP) — A member of the Southern Conference since 1936, Davidson's football team is leaving the league to become affiliated with the newly formed Colonial League, school officials have announced.

"It enhances our efforts to continue to play Division I-AA football well into the future and offers us the chance to be associated with a group of very attractive Colonial and Ivy (league) opponents," Athletic Director Christopher "Kit" Morris said.

Effective September 1987, the Wildcats will join Bucknell, Colgate, Holy Cross, Lafayette and Lehigh in the new NCAA Division I-AA football conference.

"We have played a number of these schools on a regular basis during the past 15 years and now welcome the opportunity to formalize this relationship," Morris said.

Officials at the college said Davidson was approached by the Colonial League in January about the possibility of becoming the new league's sixth member.

The new league offers only need-based aid to athletes, a practice Davidson has applied to its football program since 1974.

League membership also will enable the Wildcats to schedule at least three Ivy League opponents per year by 1990.

The trustees also voted to reaffirm Davidson's commitment to NCAA Division I participation in basketball and all other mens' varsity sports. Conference affiliation for these teams is now being pursued, officials said.

Playing in the Southern Conference last season, Davidson compiled a 2-8 overall record, while going 0-5 in the league.

Ripken Helps Halt Twin Streak

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Playing in a club record-tying 463rd straight game, Ripken walloped a tie-breaking, two-run homer in the eighth inning to lift the Baltimore Orioles to an 8-7 victory Friday night that broke the Twins' 10-game winning streak.

"It had to end some time, you know," Minnesota Manager Billy Gardner said. "It was a heck of a game."

Ripken, who also singled twice, tied the team consecutive game mark of Hall of Famer Brooks Robinson. But Minnesota reliever Curt Wardle wasn't thinking about that when he served up the game-breaking gopher ball.

"I figured he'd be looking for a fastball. So I came with a curve, but he crushed it," Wardle said.

In the other American League games, it was Cleveland 4, Texas 0; Chicago 7, Detroit 1; New York 7, Kansas City 1; Milwaukee 7, California 0; Boston 10, Oakland 0, and Toronto 5, Seattle 4.

Ripken's two-out homer came on a 1-0 pitch off Wardle, 0-1, after a walk to Fritz Connally to give the Orioles an 8-6 lead.

"It was a situation where the count was 1-0 and I took a chance it would be a breaking ball — and I just got hold of it," said Ripken. "You can call it a guess if you want to."

Roy Smalley's bases-loaded walk off Tippy Martinez, the third of four Baltimore pitchers, had tied the game 6-6 in the Minnesota seventh.

Baltimore reliever Don Aase, 3-0, surrendered a Minnesota run in the eighth on Mickey Hatcher's RBI single, but the Orioles held on for their fourth straight victory.

Jim Dwyer and Fred Lynn each hit two-run homers to stake the Orioles to a 6-2 lead, while Gary Gaetti blasted a solo homer for the Twins.

Indians 4, Rangers 0

Bert Blyleven, who had been struggling since Opening Day, tossed a four-hitter for his first victory of the season and Tony Bernazard doubled and hit a sacrifice fly to pace Cleveland over Texas.

Blyelven, 1-2, struck out nine and walked three in pitching his second complete game of the season and 47th career shutout, moving him into 25th place on the major leagues' all-time shutout list.

Mike Mason, 2-3, yielded all four Cleveland runs on seven hits over the first 4 2-3 innings to take the loss.

"When you're into May and you're 0-2 with an E.R.A. over 5.00, you're a little concerned," said Blyleven, who came into Friday night's game with a 5.64 earned run average. "But I knew that if kept going out there, something would happen — hopefully good."

White Sox 7, Tigers 1

Tom Seaver hurled a seven-hitter for his 291st career victory and Carlton Fisk belted a two-run homer as Chicago beat Detroit.

After two were out in the Chicago fourth, Dan Petry, 4-2, walked Greg Walker before yielding his first hit — the homer by Fisk, his fifth, on a 2-2 count. The blast wiped out a 1-0 Tiger lead fashioned in the second on rookie Nelson Simmons' sacrifice fly.

The White Sox added two runs in the eighth on Oscar Gamble's bases-loaded single, chasing Petry, and three more in the ninth on a sacrifice fly by Luis Salazar and a two-run single by Harold Baines.

Yankees 7, Royals 1

Dennis Rasmussen pitched a five-hitter for his second complete game in 29 major-league starts and the Yankees made Billy Martin's first home game in his fourth term as manager a success by defeating Kansas City.

In scoring more than six runs for the first time this season, the Yankees collected five of them off Danny Jackson, 1-1, who had allowed only five in 29 1-3 previous innings this season. Don Mattingly went 3-for-3 and knocked in two runs in support of Rasmussen, 1-1.

Under Martin, who replaced Yogi Berra last Sunday, the Yankees had dropped two of three games in Texas. The crowd of 20,603 at Yankee Stadium cheered him when he took the lineup card out before the game — there were only a few scattered boos — but it was nothing like the standing ovations he received on his previous returns.

Brewers 7, Angels 0

Ted Higuera, making only his fourth major-league start, pitched a four-hitter for his first major-league victory and Cecil Cooper drove in three runs with three hits to lead Milwaukee over California.

Higuera, whom the Brewers purchased from Juarez of the Mexican League in September of 1983, was hooked up in a pitching duel with California veteran Tommy John, 1-2, for six innings before the Brewers broke the game open with a six-run seventh inning keyed by two-run hits by Doug Loman and Cooper.

The Brewers sent 11 men to the plate in their big inning and collected nine hits, one shy of a club record for an inning.

Red Sox 10, A's 0

Dennis Boyd pitched an eight-hitter for Boston's first shutout of the season, striking out 12 batters, and the Red Sox clubbed four homers — two by Mike Easler — to trounce Oakland.

Jim Rice and Easler homered in a seven-run, fifth-inning outburst. Both were two-run shots off Athletics' starter Mike Warren, and Easler hit another two-run homer in the the sixth off Tom Tellman.

The strikeouts by Boyd, 3-1, gave him a total of 24 strikeouts in two starts this week. He fanned 12 in a 5-1 loss to Kansas City last Sunday.

Union Carbide.....6
Optimists.....3

Jonathan Powers cracked a grand-slam home run to lead Union Carbide to a 6-3 victory over the Optimists in the North State Little League Friday.

The Optimists took the lead with a run in the first inning, but lost it for good in the third.

Mark Mikklesen led off the third with a walk and Andre Williams reached on an fielder's choice. Josh Howard was safe on an error loading the bases. After a pop-up to the infield, Powers pushed the ball out of the park for an instant 4-1 lead.

UC added two more runs in the fourth while the Optimists scored single runs in the third and fifth.

The homer was one of only two hits allowed the winners by Jeff Wilkins and Kevin Hardee. Rod Whitley collected two hits to pace the Optimists.

Moose.....10
Exchange.....4

Jonathan Foley, Terrell Phillips and Carlester Taylor each had two hits in leading the Moose to a 10-4 Tar Heel Little League victory over the Exchange Friday.

The Exchange gained the lead in the top of the first on a solo homer by Grant Harman, but the Moose came back to score four times in their half of the frame for a 4-1 lead.

Then, in the bottom of the third, the Moose got what proved to be the winning run. Taylor led off with a single and stole second, moving on to third on an error on the play and coming on home on still a second misplay. That made it 5-1.

The Moose added three more in the fourth and two in the fifth. The Exchange came back to score three more in the sixth.

Parsons Amazed At Rising Speeds At Talladega Oval

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — When Benny Parsons turned a lap of 200.176 mph at Alabama International Motor Speedway in May 1982, it marked the first time that any driver had ever been over 200 mph in a stock car.

Parsons, who says that wild ride was far more "thrilling" than he likes to think about, is frankly amazed by what has happened in the three years since that historic ride around Talladega's 2.66-mile trioval.

The former Winston Cup champion qualified at 200.326 mph for Sunday's $504,275 Winston 500, a speed that was only 18th fastest in the 40-car lineup headed by pole-sitter Bill Elliott's all-time stock car mark of 209.398 mph.

"Everybody's talking about what Bill has done, but just about everybody is going faster and the big difference is aerodynamics," Parsons said Friday. "When we were first going over 200, the cars were really a handful. Now, they're set up a lot better and it's nowhere near as bad."

Looking ahead to Sunday's race, scheduled to start at 2 p.m. EDT, Parsons said he doesn't expect a lot of real racing in the early going.

"When you get a car out front of the lead pack running around at 205, all you can do is follow. If you pull out of line, you'll just go backwards.

"Actually, though, that's the safest thing that can happen. If someone tries to pass at 200 miles an hour, it becomes a real jumble all the way back through the pack. Everybody shuffles position."

Elliott, whose Ford Thunderbird broke the all-time qualifying record of 285.114 mph that he set in February at Daytona, has been criticized by some of his competitors for showing his strength rather than finessing the rest of the field.

But Parsons, who has taken a special interest in Elliott's career, takes exception to that attitude.

"He and the other guys on the team have worked so hard to get where they are, he has the right to put our nose in it and rub it," Parsons said.

"We went through this same thing in the mid-70s with the Wood Brothers (with driver David Pearson). They were that dominant, but they never showed it.

"We never knew where we stood. At least with Bill, we do know where we stand. He has a tremendous advantage right now and we'll just have to see what's going to happen."

Darrell Waltrip, who qualified fifth in the field at 202.675 mph in a Chevrolet, echoed Parsons' sentiments.

"You used to look in your rearview mirror with about nine or 10 laps to go and see David leaning over to light a cigarette," Waltrip said. "You just knew at that point that he was going to move to the front whenever he wanted to.

"Now, with Bill, you know that if he's anywhere around the lead pack, he can move to the front anytime he wants to. If he decides to run off and hide, well, maybe nobody will be able to stop him. It's not a very pleasant thing to think about."

The 40-car lineup was completed in time trials Friday, with current Rookie of the Year leader Ken Schrader and Morgan Shepherd leading the last 20 qualifiers with laps over 200.

Schrader, in another of the powerful Fords, was clocked at 200.704, while Shepherd, in a Chevy, was caught at 200.385.

"Not even thinking about him (Elliott), we're going out there and practicing at 200 by yourself," said Waltrip. "In the drafts, we're going to be running 204 or 205.

"Even if he goes off and leaves the rest of us, there's going to be some great racing going on. We'll just forget about him. You have to. They still pay for second."

1. Bill Elliott, Ford Thunderbird, 209.398 breaks track qualifying mark of 202.692 set in May 1984 by Cale Yarborough and all time stock car qualifying mark of 205.114 set by Elliott in February at Daytona Beach, Fla.

The 'Doctor's' Care Saves 76ers

The Philadelphia 76ers, losing to Milwaukee 104-102 with 1:20 to play Friday night, came downcourt and the ball went to Erving.

The 24-second shot clock was down to one when Erving launched a jump shot from just inside the three-point line.

The Bucks got the ball to Terry Cummings, but it was stolen by guard Maurice Cheeks, who flipped it to Erving. The player known as the "Doctor" grabbed it at halfcourt, dribbled in and scored the game-winning basket with 38 seconds remaining.

The 76ers, who had blown a third-period 18-point lead, prevailed 109-104 and now lead the Bucks 3-0 in their best-of-seven second-round National basketball Association playoff series.

In Friday night's only other game, the Los Angeles Lakers also took a 3-0 lead in their second-round series against Portland with a 130-126 victory.

Denver, leading 2-0, was at Utah in today's action. On Sunday, Los Angeles is at Portland, Denver at Utah, Milwaukee at Philadelphia and Boston (leading 2-1) at Detroit.

Erving said of his game-tying jump shot: "I didn't have much of a choice. I had to let it go because there was only a few seconds left on the shot clock.

"I knew it was good when I saw it going down. It was a big one because it put a lot of pressure on them. We were able to come right back and force a turnover at their end which led to the (winning) breakaway basket and a lead they couldn't overcome."

The 76ers led the Bucks 74-56 with 6:38 to play in the third period, but Milwaukee slashed its deficit to 85-77 at the end of the quarter. Then the Bucks scored the first eight points of the final quarter, tying the score, and with 2:48 left they went ahead 100-99.

The score was tied twice more, at 102 and 104, and then Erving took over.

"Definitely, when you're 18 points up you feel good, but you still have to finish the game and beat them," said Erving. "Now, we can't dwell on the fact they came back, but we must enjoy a hard-fought victory."

"I was just trying to help out," Cheeks said of his steal from Cummings that set up Erving's game-winner. "We knew they probably go to Cummings and when he went toward the lane I was able to get a piece of the ball. I tried to get it ahead to Doc and he got the layup to put us ahead for good."

Milwaukee coach Don Nelson said of the play by Cheeks ... "Terry has just got to know that he can't turn his back and spin like that against a great player like Mo Cheeks. With a great player like Cheeks guarding you, you can't turn around like that and try to spin with your back to the basket because he's going to be there anticipating it."

The Bucks still had a chance to tie or win the game in the final seconds but a two-point shot by Alton Lister misfired, and then Ricky Pierce missed with a three-point attempt.

Cummings, who led Milwaukee with 21 points, 17 in the first half, said of the Bucks' comeback, "We just hustled and fought back to get back in the game. They missed some shots and we started hitting. They were shooting real well when they needed it. They got all the bounces early, we got them late in the fourth quarter."

Andrew Toney led the Sixers with 20 points, while Erving and Barkley each had 19. Moses Malone collected 13 rebounds. In addition to Cummings, Paul Pressey scored 20 and Sidney Moncrief 17 for the Bucks.

Lakers 130, Trail Blazers 126

Los Angeles won for the sixth straight time in the playoffs although Portland gave the Lakers their toughest test yet.

The Lakers, winning by an average of 20 points in their first five games, hadn't won previously by fewer than 16.

James Worthy scored 28 points and Kareem Abdul-Jabbar added 11 of his 26 points in a crucial fourth-quarter stretch, while Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 23 assists, one short of his NBA playoff record.

Los Angeles opened an 18-point lead late in the second quarter, and the Trail Blazers never caught up although they narrowed the deficit to four on four occasions in the fourth quarter.

The Blazers were led by Kiki Vandeweghe with 27 points, while Clyde Drexler added 18 points, 14 assists and 11 rebounds.

Boating Safety

Boaters need to be aware of two potential threats in the spring: cold water, and high water levels, according to the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission.

"The warm air temperatures of spring lull many boaters into a false sense of security," said Major Leon Lineberry of the commission's Division of Enforcement. "Although the air may be very warm, the water is still very cold. If a fisherman falls overboard or capsizes, he may suffer from hypothermia — exposure to cold water. This can be fatal."

He said high water levels in rivers also pose a threat to fishermen and other boaters.

"Every year, someone attempts to run a river at flood stage, flips, and if they are lucky wind up stranded on an inland or in a tree. Often, they have to be rescued by helicopter. The unlucky ones drown," he commented.

Lineberry said a few simple precautions will result in safe boating, canoeing or kayaking.

"Fishermen should be careful not to overload their boats, and should always wear a personal flotation device. This prevents the expenditure of precious energy if they wind up in the water," he said.

Fishermen, he added, should not stand up in a boat to cast, one of the most common causes of falling overboard.

Lineberry said it's also a good idea to wear wool clothing and have dry clothes available in a waterproof container so if a mishap occurs, the victim can quickly change into dry clothing.

Cold water also poses a threat to canoeists and kayakers, and personal flotation devices are also "a must for river runners. It's also a good idea to wear a wet suit."

He said if a river seems too high — for example, the water level is near the top of its banks or water has spread over the banks into the surrounding areas — then it should not be run. When the water is high, low, overhanging branches can quickly capsize a canoe or kayak. If you're swept under one of these "deathtraps," there's virtually no escape.

Lineberry said local paddling shops usually have up-to-date information on water levels, and paddlers should check this before running a river. The Greenville Utilities Commission water plant also has this information on the Tar River.

Even Without His Name It Would Still Be Crosby

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — In the days of the Great Depression, Bing Crosby decided it would be great fun to bring together some of his friends — movie types and pro golfers — and have a little golf tournament.

It was fun.

Very low key. Relaxed. Lots of parties. Play a little golf. Swap some stories. The pros made a little money. The show-business types got some tips.

It came to be known as Bing's Clambake. More formally, the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am.

For almost a half-century it grew into one of the country's premier sports events — and more. It was a happening, a gathering. It retained the Crosby name even after the death of the founder in 1977.

Now, it is possible that the name will be missing.

The tournament will go on: Same format, same courses. But the Crosby name could disappear from the formal title.

One of golf's leading performers said it doesn't matter. Not, at least, to the current generation of players.

"It'll still be the Crosby, no matter what they call it," Tom Watson said. "That's the way it will be known. You're not going to hear guys saying, 'Are you going to be playing in the AT&T?' They're still going to say, 'Are you playing in the Crosby?'

"It would be a shame to change the name. But it'll still be the same tournament, and everybody will call it the same thing."

The future of the Crosby became clouded and confused when Catherine Crosby, widow of the founder, announced last month that she was cancelling the event. She lacked the authority to cancel the tournament. But it caused a stir.

The situation is this:

The tournament will continue.

It will continue on the same three Monterey Peninsula courses, Pebble Beach, Cypress Point, Spyglass Hill.

Mrs. Crosby can remove the Crosby name from the tournament. Whether she will do so is not yet known.

For many years, the tournament has been sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Golf Foundation. That group's Board of Directors is the governing body.

The board has been under pressure to increase the pro purse for the tournament, to keep the purse on a level with or above purses for other PGA Tour events. To do so, outside sources of revenue were needed.

AT&T stepped in with the a high six-figure offer, with the provision that "AT&T" be included in the title. Negotiations were conducted, and, according to one member of the tour's Policy Board, tentative agreement was reached by all parties, including Mrs. Crosby and son Nathaniel, now the tournament host.

Later, however, Catherine Crosby called a news conference, denounced the move as "a corporate sideshow," charged improprieties on the part of at least one member of the Monterey Golf Foundation Board of Directors and said she was cancelling the tournament.

But the foundation board said it would go ahead with the tournament. And the foundation board, PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman said, is the group with which it has a contract.

"Our position is that the tournament is on. The tournament will go on at Pebble Beach and will retain its format and traditions," Beman said.

The foundation board, he said, "has to decide how it will be conducted and who is involved."

"We have an agreement with the Monterey Golf Foundation to be the corporate sponsor of the tournament. We have been talking with the foundation on this basis for about a year. ... We remain very much interested in becoming the tournment sponsor and we look forward to getting the final details worked out."

One of those details is the name.

"Why not just make it the Bing Crosby Memorial?" asked Jack Nicklaus. "Make it a tournament in his memory. How could anyone object to that? That should satisfy everyone."

Kuester Looking Forward To GW Basketball Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former North Carolina star John Kuester says the chance to coach in the "basketball hotbed" of the nation's capital drew him away from Boston University to take over a troubled George Washington program.

"The big thing was coming down to the Washington area," Kuester said at a press conference Friday to formally announce his new post. "They've got a wealth of talent, some of the best talent in the country, around here. Also, being from Richmond (Va.), I have a chance to have my family come up and see me coach."

George Washington, pickedto win the Atlantic 10 Conference last season, finished at 14-14 and was ousted in the first-round of the conference playoffs. The year was marked by several players openly criticizing coach Gerry Gimelstob, a stern disciplinarian who served as an assistant under Indiana's Bobby Knight before coming to George Washington.

Gimelstob, 58-55 in four years at George Washington, resigned April 2, six months after he had signed a new four-year contract.

"We'll try to get the most we can out of the players we have," said Kuester, who played for Dean Smith at the University of North Carolina. "But we've got our hands full, for sure."

Kuester, moving quickly to build morale, announced Friday that Mike Cohen, the Colonial assistant who was instrumental in recruiting most of the current team, would remain on the staff. The announcement drew sustained applause from the players in attendence from the players at a press conference.

He also said Rodney Johnson, his assistant at Boston, would come to George Washington if he does not succeed Kuester at BU.

Kuester said he is walking away from a program he thinks can win 18 to 20 games next year. "I wanted to make sure I left a solid program," he said. "I didn't leave the well dry."

"He has some work to do," admitted athletic director Steve Bilsky, who headed the search.

Kuester's first priority is to build towards a good recruiting class next year, relying on the strong high school basketball played in the area.

"I feel there's a nucleus of people here that will make us competitive in the Atlantic 10. We have a good guard situation and we're going to play an up-tempo game to take advantage of our quickness," he said.

The school has recruited one player, Brian Royal of New York City, and Kuester said he plans to talk with him in the next couple of days to make sure he sticks with George Washington.

Colonial players say they already feel a "different atmosphere."

"Everybody is just looking forward to a fresh start next year," said freshman guard Joe Dooley, who ran off the court during a game last season and had talked of transferring. "We had a lot of problems last year, but not all of them were caused by coach Gimelstob."

Max Blank, the Soviet emigre who signed with George Washington out of Philadelphia, said he'll stay in D.C. because of Kuester and Cohen. "I still haven't talked with (Kuester), but from what I've heard, he's the man who's going to make this program a success."

Boston Has A Potent Outfield

By JOHN NELSON
AP Sports Writer

Among the three of them, Boston Red Sox outfielders Tony Armas, Dwight Evans and Jim Rice hit 103 home runs last season, seven more than the Milwaukee Brewers hit as a team.

Armas, Evans and Rice drove in 349 runs, had 541 hits in 1,926 at-bats for a collective batting average of .281, and made a total of only 15 errors in 1,014 chances for an aggregate fielding percentage of .985.

"I'd have to do some heavy thinking to find an outfield in baseball comparable to ours, both offensively and defensively," Red Sox Manager John McNamara said.

There may not be an outfield that does all things as well as the outfield of Rice in left, Armas in center and Evans in right. Their only rivals in the American League might be the Detroit Tigers' trio of Kirk Gibson, Chet Lemon and Larry Herndon, or the New York Yankees' outfield of Dave Winfield, Rickey Henderson and Ken Griffey.

Henderson steals more bases; Lemon may be the best defensive center fielder in the league; Gibson hits the longest home runs, and Winfield is occasionally called the best all-around player in the game. Yet no other outfield combines the attributes of power, speed and defense in a comparable manner. Even Winfield said, "Boston possibly is the best defensive team in baseball," giving a large measure of credit to the outfield.

"I'd be crazy to say we're not good," said Evans, senior member of the group. "We know we're good, but whether we're the best doesn't really make much difference. We're not the best unless we win."

Evans joined the Red Sox in 1972, became a regular in 1973 and has been there ever since. Rice was called up in 1974, but was used extensively as a designated hitter until Carl Yastrzemski moved from the outfield to first base in 1978. Armas was traded to Boston from Oakland for third baseman Carney Lansford in December 1982.

Armas committed the most errors in 1984, nine in 342 chances, while playing the toughest position, center field. Rice, who has improved a great deal in the field, had four, and Evans committed two. All throw well, particularly Evans.

Last year, Armas led the league in both RBI, with 123, and homers, with 43. Rice had 28 homers and 122 RBI, while Evans hit 32 homers, had 104 RBI and led the league by scoring 121 runs. Rice, the league's Most Valuable Player in 1978, led the AL in homers with 39 and tied for the best in RBI with 126 in 1983.

This excellence has bred a sort of commraderie among the three, although it falls far short of Three Musketeers-type stuff. "Our outfielders all help each other out," Rice said, and Evans adds, "We're close. We're out to help each other win, and we do what we have to."

On the club's last trip to Yankee Stadium, Rice was in the batting cage before the game, coming off an 0-for-6 night and struggling at the plate all week. Armas stood nearby.

"The hands, the hands, the hands," Armas reminded Rice.

"He was just telling me to use my hands," Rice said. "I haven't been picking up the ball very well, not seeing it. If you move on the ball, you don't see it well. You have to keep your hands back."

Evans said the three depend heavily on coach Walt Hriniak, who took over as hitting instructor this season after eight years as Red Sox bullpen coach and batting practice instructor.

Over the years, Hriniak has worked with many Red Sox hitters while pitching batting practice. Five years ago, he taught Evans the hitting method of the late Charley Lau, a longtime major league batting coach who listed George Brett among his proteges. The technique has worked for the 33-year-old Evans, who was better known as a defensive player earlier in his career. He has a lifetime .269 average but has batted .290 or better in three of the past four seasons.

Armas, 31, has the lowest career average, .248, but has hit no fewer than 28 homers in each of his last four full seasons while topping the 100-RBI plateau three times. Rice, 32, has a lifetime average of .303 and three seasons with 200 or more hits. Rice and Johnny Pesky are the only Red Sox players to have three 200-hit seasons.

The three remain part of a larger whole. "We've never separated ourselves from the rest of the team," Evans said. "We're part of a unit, not a unit within a unit."

Until he was traded to California in 1981, Fred Lynn had been the Red Sox's center fielder. The Red Sox used Rick Miller and Reid Nichols in center until the unit jelled with the acquisition of Armas.

"We were thrilled to have Tony," Evans said. "Of course, we traded away Carney Lansford. We hated to lose him, but you have to give up something to get something. We knew Tony could get 45 home runs in our ballpark, he's so strong.

"I remember when he came to Boston, somebody ripped me for saying he could hit 45 home runs. What did he hit last year, 43? He can hit a ball out of any ballpark in baseball, and so can Jimmy."

The Red Sox's outfield will play a very large role in any success the club has in the tough American League East this season. But all three know that contributions also must be made by their teammates.

"We're not out to prove anything," Evans said. "We know what we're capable of doing. Now, all we've got to do is do it."

Paul Runyan was the leading money-winner on the PGA Tour in the Depression year of 1934 with $6,767.

Showboats Corral Stallions

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Pepper Rodgers called it the most impressive win in the two-season history of the Memphis Showboats as he savored a 38-24 victory over arch-rival Birmingham.

"We made things happen on both sides of the ball," the Showboats coach said Friday night. "When you can get somebody like Reggie White to recover a fumble and run it in for a touchdown ... then you know that you're playing heads-up defense."

White, a 6-foot-6, 284-pound nose tackle, is known more for his punishing tackles than his touchdowns, but his name was right there on the scoring summary along with quarterback Mike Kelley and running back Harry Sydney.

It was the sixth victory against five defeats for the Showboats this year while the Stallions fell to 7-4 before 29,025 fans at Liberty Bowl Memorial Stadium. But most important to Rodgers and the rest of the Showboats, the win was the first in four regular-season meetings with the Stallions.

Kelley, who replaced Walter Lewis at quarterback last week, completed 21 of 28 passes for 211 yards and two touchdowns. He threw a 5-yard strike to tight end Mark Raugh on the 'Boats' first possession, then hit Derrick Crawford for 9 yards and another TD early in the second period.

Sydney contributed back-to-back touchdowns on runs of 1 and 18 yards. Kicker Alan Duncan added a 20-yard field goal. The Showboats' defense, meanwhile, allowed the Stallions just 88 yards rushing, including 69 by running back Joe Cribbs.

White & Co. sacked Birmingham quarterback Cliff Stoudt twice with White in the right place when a swarm of Showboats forced Stoudt to give up the ball 10-minutes into the final period.

White scooped up the bouncing ball and lumbered into the end zone, shaking off a pair of would-be Birmingham tacklers in the process.

Birmingham scored on Danny Miller's 31-yard field goal, and two Stoudt passes to wide receiver Jim Smith — for 31 and 15 yards — to tie 17-17 at the half.

But Memphis' three second half-touchdowns put the game out of reach even though Stoudt added an 18-year scoring pass to wide receiver Ken Toler late in the final quarter.

"We beat what I consider to be one of the finest, if not the finest, team in the USFL," Rodgers said. "Kelley did a tremendous job of reading the coverages and it was a case of our intensity level never dropping off in four quarters."

The loss dropped Birmingham out of a first-place tie with New Jersey and Tampa Bay in the Eastern Conference, both are 7-3.

There are six other USFL games this weekend.

Sunday's games are Arizona at Baltimore, Denver at San Antonio, New Jersey at Jacksonville and Oakland at Orlando. Houston, first in the Western Conference is at Portland Monday night.

The Arizona-Baltimore game features the two teams that competed for the USFL title last year — both under different names. Baltimore, who won that game, was Philadelphia then and Arizona, called the Wranglers then, is now laden with the name and numerous players from the Oklahoma Outlaws.

But the Outlaws' starting quarterback may the most obscure at all — Rick Johnson, who hasn't taken a snap this season but will start in place of Doug Williams, out with an injured knee.

"I feel great about it," said Johnson, who started the last three games of last season for Oklahoma and was the quarterback on Southern Illinois' Division II champions two years ago. "I've been waiting for this a long time. I want to show people what I can do."

"The way I look at it, it's the Ricky Johnson show," Williams said Thursday. "Win, lose or draw, he deserves to start."

Children Returned To Father By Judge

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Two children found living secretly with their mother after a national telecast about missing youngsters were returned to their father Saturday by a state judge.

After a lengthy hearing, District Judge Larry Sullivant said he felt he had no other alternative but to return their children to their father, Dr. Edwin A. McDonald of Fresno, Calif.

Sullivant said he would honor a California court order that gave McDonald custody over his ex-wife, who had them when they were found earlier in the week in Denton and who has been charged in California with child abduction.

Teresa McDonald, 9, and her brother Edwin, 7, were located in Denton, 35 miles northwest of Dallas, on Tuesday, the day after Teresa's picture was shown on national television following a telecast of "Adam," the story of a missing child later found murdered.

The children, who had disappeared nearly two years ago, had been staying with their mother, Terry Lanotte-McDonald, who authorities said was living in Denton under an assumed name. Police said she had been in Denton for 18 months.

"The children have been made fugitives, and they can no longer have the benefit of a normal family relationship," Sullivant said in announcing his decision about 1:45 a.m., ending a hearing that began at 5:30 p.m. Friday.

"I pray to God the children can recover from this traumatic experience," he said.

Ms. Lanotte-McDonald, 34, was arrested on a California warrant alleging child abduction, but was released on $8,000 bond. The children had been in the temporary care of the state, pending the hearing.

Ms. Lanotte-McDonald cried when the ruling came and began screaming after she was helped from the courtroom and into a hallway. McDonald dropped his head when he heard the news, and his present wife reached over to hug him. The children were not present.

After the hearing, Ms. Lanotte-McDonald's lawyer, George Carter of Fresno, said she would not fight extradition to California.

Although the woman had custody of the children when they were reported missing in August 1983 while visiting their father, a California court awarded custody to the father in June 1984.

Sullivant, in honoring the California ruling, said he didn't feel it was in the best interests of the children for their mother to have fled with them.

After the hearing, McDonald and his wife left with the children to catch a flight back to California.

Recruiting Is Studied

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force has released a study designed to convince Congress it doesn't need higher recruitment goals for women, saying women are "less available than men to perform their primary jobs" because of pregnancy and child care.

The study, distributed to Congress last week, concludes there are some additional Air Force jobs for enlisted personnel that should be opened to women. Air Force Secretary Verne Orr has agreed, and more than 300 additional jobs are being opened to women, the service said.

The Air Force also used the study to say there is no reason to fear for the future of the all-volunteer force.

But the study also asserts that overall readiness could be hurt by an emphasis on meeting higher female recruiting goals. It complains the Air Force cannot change the qualifications and interests of young men and women nor the biological reality that it is women who get pregnant.

"Increasing the number of women in the Air Force could increase the total enlisted manpower requirement and manpower costs, because women are less available than men to perform their primary jobs," the study states, citing the demands of pregnancy and child-rearing.

It said, "Women in general reported they are less able to respond quickly to deployment requirements than their male counterparts."

"Moreover," the study added, "the number of military couples would grow substantially with increased female" enlistment.

"This is because military women are more likely to have a military spouse than military men. The increased number of military couples would make it extremely difficult to maintain the current high rate of military couples assigned together, and a lowering of the 'togetherness' rate could seriously affect retention," it said.

For all the services, the study concludes there is no reason to fear the on-going decline in the number of available young men caused by the aging of the post-World War II "baby boom" generation.

To project an inevitable decline in recruiting success because of a shrinking manpower pool is much too simplistic, the study states, because there are other factors at work. For example, increasing numbers of women are going to work in the civilian world and are winning higher-paying jobs.

"This means that as women continue to enter the labor market, youth wages and unemployment will be adversely affected, both of which benefit military recruiting."

Full Houses Watch Von Bulow Trial

By DAVID PYLE
Associated Press Writer

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The line begins forming as soon as the courthouse doors open at 8:30 a.m. — an hour and a half before Claus von Bulow's attempted murder retrial gets under way.

There's the phrenologist, who believes von Bulow is incapable of trying to kill his wife because of the size and shape of his head.

There are housewives, unemployed people and retirees — all patiently queued up for a chance to watch the Danish-born financial consultant fight again to disprove charges he tried to kill his heiress wife, Martha "Sunny" von Bulow, with insulin injections at their Newport mansion in 1979 and 1980.

"I wanted to observe the jurors and the people on the stand regarding my face reading," said Sandra Copperfield, 39. "I'm a phrenologist — a facial analyst."

She said she watches for facial extremes to determine whether a witness is telling the truth, how an attorney or the judge feels or whether a juror is capable of making a reasonable decision based on evidence presented.

Others in line one day last week weren't so sure about guilt and innocence, lies and truth.

Norma DiFanti, 49, of Cranston, said the notoriety of the case drew her. She thought from what she saw at her five or six trips to the Newport trial in 1982 that von Bulow was guilty.

"I feel it could go any which way" this time, she said.

That prompted a discussion among the six or seven people at the head of the line.

"During the first trial I was very definite in my opinion that he was guilty," said Gloria DeCharme, 52, of North Providence. "Now I'm not so sure."

She criticized the media. "Why do they have to chase after him every day like vultures?" she asked.

Dick Seitz, a 22-year-old Brown student from Canton, Ohio, said "the real education's here." The "hype, the news coverage and just a general interest" brought him to court.

"It's a significant trial," said Dean Moles, 30, a student adviser at Brown. "I've never been to anything of this sort. I saw it on TV and thought it would be interesting to see how the American legal system works.

"I mean, you see Perry Mason on TV but here this is real," Moles said.

The courthouse in Newport where von Bulow was convicted on two attempted murder charges in March 1982 had 42 seats for the public. This time, about 30 seats are available on a first-come, first-served basis.

Thomas P. McGann, public contact officer for the Superior Courthouse here, said the seating capacity of Courtroom No. 8, where the retrial started nearly a month ago, is 130 to 140.

Most seats are grabbed by about 50 news people and friends and relatives of court officials, the attorney general's office and the public defender's office.

Judge Says Permission Needed For Amputation

MADISONVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The gangrenous foot of a 74-year-old widow may not be amputated without her permission, a judge has told a hospital that advised the operation.

Circuit Judge Thomas B. Spain ruled that Bethlean Hancock is competent to make her own decisions after a hearing in her hospital room Thursday in which he heard the testimony of two doctors and two psychiatrists.

He said he made the decision even though he knew of no precedent in Kentucky law for a person to refuse medical treatment on non-religious grounds.

"She is just ... ready to go when God calls her home," Spain said.

Court papers indicate the hospital, Madisonville Regional Medical Center, sought a court order authorizing the amputation over Mrs. Hancock's objections.

Doctors said Mrs. Hancock's foot is gangrenous and must come off or the infection might spread to the rest of her body.

They said she also had a heart attack recently and suffers from an irregular heartbeat, kidney failure and a susceptibility to bleeding.

Spain said Friday that Mrs. Hancock, who is listed in serious condition in the hospital's coronary care unit, had agreed to each treatment the doctors had requested for her except the amputation.

The woman, who lives alone in a rural house without electricity or a telephone, was taken to the hospital April 16 after a tip to the state's Department for Social Services, said department spokeswoman Marcia Lane.

Leif Ratliff, the hospital's attorney, said in a statement released Thursday: "Since this may well be a life-threatening condition, the hospital must safeguard that it is fulfilling its obligation to the patient and that the patient is competent to refuse treatment."

The Odd Couple

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Bette Midler and Walt Disney. Can the twain ever meet?

Evidently they can. The "Divine Miss M," who wrote the book on flamboyantly suggestive rock 'n' roll, has signed a film deal with Walt Disney Pictures, the bastion of family entertainment.

The announcement came Thursday at the wholesome studio that put its foot in the water of racier material with last year's hit film "Splash," about a lovestruck mermaid.

The studio said Miss Midler would be involved in film development with the studio and may appear in a film for Disney.

Leo The Hero

KERRVILLE, Texas (AP) — Leo the hero poodle has been named top dog in America.

He jumped between two children and a rattlesnake poised to strike them and fended it off until it could be killed by their father.

The 4-year-old dog was bitten six times and spent six days in a veterinary hospital.

He saved Sean Callahan, then 11, and his sister Erin, 9, last August near their home in Hunt, about 20 miles west of Kerrville.

Index Rose

The level of business activity in North Carolina continued a moderate growth in March, according to the Wachovia Business Index, up 0.4 percent to 129.2 from February.

Wachovia said the rise in the Index resulted from an increase in nonagricultural employment and a decline in new claims for unemployment insurance. Residential building permits decreased slightly and the manufacturing workweek was unchange.

The number of people employed in manufacturing jobs was down marginally, while non-manufacturing employment rose in March due to gains in construction and services.

The Carpet Bargain Center, a new discount floorcovering and wallcovering outlet, will open Monday in a 9,000-square-foot facility at 1009 Dickinson Ave. that formerly housed Harris Cash & Carry supermarket.

The manager said the firm will have over 500 carpet and vinyl remnants on display with 75 rolls available for exact sizes.

Creuzot Surprised With His Success After Beginning With Lesser Goals

By SHARON HERBAUGH
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Percy "Frenchy" Creuzot set out to become the king of Creole food in Houston, but the New Orleans native instead has become a rich man known as "the black Colonel Sanders."

Chicken, cooked with a secret recipe he got from a family friend in Louisiana, now constitutes three-fourths of the business at Frenchy's Creole-Fried Chicken and the success has been a surprise even to Creuzot.

"I never in my wildest dreams expected to do what I've done in the food business," Creuzot, 60, says of his career.

Frenchy's restaurants, now with more than $12 million in sales, are not named for Creuzot. He is named after his restaurants.

"Just about everybody calls me Frenchy, even those who called me Percy before I started this business. People just assume that because there's a name on your business, that's your name," Creuzot said. "If I'd known that, I might have named it something else."

He wanted to name his first restaurant Etienne, a shorter version of his daughter's middle name. But a friend scoffed at the idea.

Recalls Creuzot: "He said, 'Don't be a fool. People won't know how to pronounce it, they won't know how to spell it and they won't be able to find it in the phone book. Name it something like Frenchy's Po-Boys.'"

He went with Frenchy's and it has become famous in Houston.

Creuzot, a bespectacled man with thinning, wiry, silver hair and an easy laugh, said he left his native New Orleans nearly 23 years ago after going broke trying to sell insurance.

He came to Houston with dreams of making and selling hot Louisiana-style sausage. But regulations governing state and federal inspections were stiffened, making such a venture more expensive than he expected.

Instead, Creuzot got a job as a salesman for an Indiana-based manufacturer of high school graduation supplies. He was assigned the black high schools in Houston as his territory.

Desegregation cost him the job. When racial barriers fell, the company let Creuzot go instead of reassigning him.

He took a job as an interviewer for the Texas Employment Commission, but the pay was too low to "buy the grits and grease," he said. "I wanted to live a little better."

Creuzot decided to take a chance.

He borrowed $2,000, leased a store in a predominantly black neighborhood on the city's south side near the campuses of Texas Southern University and the University of Houston and started organizing a restaurant to sell the spicy foods of his native Louisiana — oyster loaf, red beans and rice, hot sausage.

It was Jesse Hearns, an auto dealer on the adjacent lot, who suggested the addition of fried chicken to the menu.

Creuzot says he resisted at first, but Hearns persisted.

"He said, 'Don't be a fool. You gotta pay the rent while you're teaching everyone to eat oyster loaf.'" Creuzot said. "Jesse even came and cooked the chicken for me. If he hadn't, I probably wouldn't."

A family friend in New Orleans provided the ingredients for spicy Creole-fried chicken. Creuzot adapted the recipe to include "some of this and some of that and a lot of the other," and Frenchy's Creole-Fried Chicken was born.

The first Frenchy's restaurant opened July 3, 1969, and took in $14 that day, Creuzot said. Business gradually picked up during the summer, but he had to keep receipts in a shoebox under the counter until he could afford to buy a cash register.

After a summer of struggle, business took off when the college students returned to school that fall. "That was the beginning of the real success of Frenchy's," he said.

Creuzot was content with his single restaurant for almost 10 years. Then a competitor moved into the neighborhood and he decided it was time to expand.

"I stayed too long. I should have expanded three or four years earlier. But I was satisfied. I was making a lot of money and I was the only one on the block," said Creuzot. "When the other guy started going up, I felt like something sacred — my territorial right — had been violated. So I decided to do the same to them."

Within six months, he had opened four restaurants, Creuzot said.

Now there are 12 Frenchy's restaurants in the Houston area.

A Little Late

GRASS VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — William Brooks and Bill Lambert think Uncle Sam should be paying more attention to birthdays.

If the government had known theirs they would never have been sent reminders to register with the Selective Service.

Brooks is 98. Lambert, of nearby Nevada City, is 73, and says he has already done his duty in World War II and Korea.

Another notice was sent to Adam Dindinger. He died last week, just short of his 100th birthday.

Joan Lamb, assistant director of the Selective Service in Washington, said she thinks a computer glitch may have mixed up names on voter registration rolls.

The Grass Valley Union newspaper in this Sierra Nevada foothills town said the notices listed all recipients' birthdates as September 1966. Notices are normally sent to young men when they turn 18.

Cattle Futures Down On Chicago Exchange

By KEITH E. LEIGHTY
AP Business Writer

Cattle futures led a broad selloff in livestock and meat prices Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange as heavy animals continued to burden an already oversupplied market.

Tom Morgan, a livestock analyst in Chicago with Heinold Commodities, said meat packers are cutting the price they pay for the heaviest of the cattle being marketed, a development that reflects a backlog of animals. He added that many meat packers aren't set up to handle overweight animals.

"We're having a fire sale right now on those," he said.

"We are getting the problem cleaned up. The question is: 'How low do we have to go?'"

Prices of live cattle and feeder cattle fell to life-of-contract lows across the board, as live cattle contracts for delivery in June, August and October fell 1.5 cents a pound, the maximum allowed by the exchange in a single day's trading.

The price of cattle in the Texas Panhandle, a major marketing area, has fallen 15 percent since it peaked in December at 69 cents a pound.

Hog and pork belly prices were pressured in sympathy with cattle prices, said Morgan, as cash prices for live animals and pork cuts on wholesale markets were steady, which was considered a supportive development.

Pork bellies also were under pressure, however, from concern about the heavy number of deliveries being made against futures contracts, analysts said.

Live cattle settled 1.20 cents to 1.50 cents lower with the contract for delivery in June at 60.22 cents a pound; feeder cattle were 1.18 cents to 1.45 cents lower with May at 62.55 cents a pound; live hogs were .05 cent to 1.43 cents lower with June at 44.92 cents a pound; and frozen pork bellies were .80 cent to 2 cents lower with May at 61.37 cents a pound.

Grain futures prices were mixed and soybeans were lower on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices of grains recovered from the weakness that developed Thursday after a report that the Agriculture Department was considering a reduction in the loan rate it gives farmers who put their crops into a reserve program.

The report was denied by government officials, however, and prices recovered Friday.

Soybean prices fell despite supportive developments in markets for soybean products.

The Soviet Union was reported to be buying 60,000 tons of soybean meal from Brazil, and an unnamed company withdrew a substantial amount of soybean oil that had been registered for delivery against futures contracts on Thursday.

Oil prices had fallen sharply on Thursday when the soybean oil was registered for delivery.

Wheat for delivery this month was sharply lower.

Wheat settled 6½ cents lower to 1 cent higher with the contract for delivery in May at $3.36 a bushel; corn was 1¼ cents lower to ¼ cent higher with May at $2.81½ a bushel; oats were ¼ cent to 1¼ cents higher with May at $1.62 a bushel; and soybeans were 3¾ cents to 5 cents lower with May at $5.77½ a bushel.

Precious metals prices were lower on the Commodity Exchange in New York with pressure said to be coming from the continued strength of the U.S. dollar, analysts said.

Gold settled $2.90 to $3.20 lower with the contract for delivery in May at $311.60 a troy ounce; silver settled 8.3 cents to 11.9 cents lower with May at $6.165 a troy ounce.

Heating oil prices were under pressure as the heating season comes to an end and merchants were unloading excess supplies, said Andrew Lebow, a petroleum analyst in New York with Shearson Lehman Bros.

Crude oil settled 7 cents lower to 5 cents higher with the contract for delivery in June at $27.29 a barrel; heating oil settled .49 cent to .81 cent lower with June at 70.78 cents a pound.

May Jinx Continues On Wall Street

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The way it started out, May seems determined to live up to its reputation as a tough month for the stock market.

On Wednesday, the first trading day of the month, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrials took its sharpest drop of the year, falling 16.01 points to its lowest level since mid-January.

Investment adviser Yale Hirsch has long published statistical studies of what he calls "the May-June disaster area."

Over the last 20 years, he says, the Dow Jones industrial average has fallen 16 times and risen just four, for an average decline of 2.1 percent. The last 20 Junes have produced an average loss of 0.4 percent.

Newton Zinder at E.F. Hutton & Co. customarily begins his May 1 market commentary with the salutation, "Welcome to May, the month when flowers begin to bloom and stock prices often fade."

There is no ironclad rule, of course, that stock prices must follow a given pattern at any specific time of year. If there were, traders would immediately bend it out of shape by acting to try to take advantage of it.

Indeed, says Zinder, "this poor record of the market in May has become so well known that it may have been partially responsible (emphasize partially) for the sag in stock prices at the end of April."

Along with their other worries, he suggests, "some traders may have tried to beat an expected rush of selling in the new month."

If everybody expects stock prices to decline in May, market-watchers of the "contrarian" school argue, then the market is very likely to do just the opposite.

"We regard the current somber mood of investors as quite bullish," declares John Mendelson, technical analyst at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

There was quite a bit to be somber about in the past week, as the Dow Jones industrial average posted a net loss of 27.94 to 1,247.24.

The New York Stock Exchange composite index was down 1.34 at 104.18, and the American Stock Exchange market value index dropped 4.21 to 225.60.

As they looked ahead uneasily to May, investors said goodbye to an April that was a bit of a downer in its own right.

Most of the leading market indexes finished with only modest declines for the month. But among the 89 stock groups tracked by Standard & Poor's Corp., 58 recorded losses while the other 31 advanced.

S&P analysts pointed out that money seemed to shift during the month from stocks of companies in the manufacturing and agricultural sectors of the economy, which have been struggling for some time, toward service industries like banks and insurance companies.

Business Taxes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Corporations benefiting from the 1981 tax cuts pushed by President Reagan paid the lowest tax rates in more than 50 years on their profits in 1984, a Congressional Budget Office study said Saturday.

But the CBO report — which called the nation's corporate tax system "seriously deficient" in raising revenue simply, fairly and efficiently — said the benefits of the 1981 reductions are washing away.

The study concluded that by the decade's end, tax increases approved by Congress and President Reagan in 1982 and 1984 will have wiped out the effects of the three-year business tax cuts enacted in 1981.

The 200-page report was released by Rep. Jim Jones, D-Okla., amid growing discussion of overhauling both corporate and personal income taxes.

GM Mum On Location Of Saturn Plant

By TIM BOVEE
AP Business Writer

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. will put its 6,000-employee Saturn plant in Elkhart, Ind.? Or Lima, Ohio? Or Lexington, Ky., maybe?

All of those places — and more — have been named in published reports as the sites for the advanced technology plant that has had governors and economic development officials courting GM for months.

Other reports say the field is narrowing to towns in Ohio, Texas, Wisconsin, Illinois, Iowa, Arizona, and Michigan.

No decision has been made and there won't be one for several weeks, he said.

Hall is the automaker's designated spokesman on Saturn Corp., GM's new subsidiary that sometime before the end of the decade is expected to produce its first car from a plant somewhere south of Canada and north of Mexico.

The search for a Saturn site in the past few months has prompted a flurry of news reports citing unnamed sources, industry experts and politicians speculating on what GM's decision will be.

The latest report came Saturday, when Michigan Commerce Director Doug Ross was quoted as saying southwestern Michigan near Kalamazoo was "the likelihest location" if the state managed to land the Saturn plant.

Hall said GM is worried about such sporadic reports that seem to give the edge to one community or another.

"We don't even like to deny them," he said. "But there have been a number which have gotten widespread enough notoriety that they've required us to deny them."

One widely publicized recent case, Hall said, was a report by a Detroit-based periodical, AutoWeek, that GM had narrowed its list of Saturn sites to eight finalist cities: four in Indiana, two in Ohio, one in Kentucky and one in Michigan.

Hall said the information was false. "I have no idea where they got it," he said. "All I know is that it is wrong."

The magazine did not name its sources, but Managing Editor Bill Lovell said in an interview that the information came from "a source who has proven to be reliable, who works for GM, ... who said the list was in one of the GM computers in a file labeled 'Saturn 1990.'"

The source called AutoWeek in mid-April, Lovell said. "I am very confident that what he said was true as of that time. What has happened since then, God knows," he said.

Lovell said GM's denial came as no surprise.

"I expected that absolutely," he said. "What they're doing with the great Saturn search is so different from what anybody in the industry has done before, with so much playing off of one prospective site against the other.... They're still doing a lot of political things."

Governors of more than half the states have either visited GM headquarters in Detroit, Saturn Corp.'s temporary headquarters at the GM Technical Center in nearby Warren or spoken with GM Chairman Roger Smith out of town in an effort to get the Saturn plant, which means an economic boom in spinoffs of jobs and taxes generated.

The fuss over the Saturn site has called to GM's notice places that otherwise would have escaped attention, Hall said.

Former POWs Recall Purple Heart Corner At Annual Reunion

By TAD BARTIMUS
Associated Press Writer

DENVER (AP) — They called it Purple Heart Corner, that dreaded spot in a B-17 formation most vulnerable to prowling German fighters looking for a kill.

On June 13, 1943, Lt. Bud Summers was assigned to Purple Heart Corner — the lower lefthand slot in a four-bomber formation. That day he became a prisoner of war.

"Five fighters came at us as we neared the target, the submarine pens at Keil. They hit us hard. Number one engine was knocked out, number four was on fire.

"We had hurt boys on board so we rode it down. One German kept firing at us till we lowered our gear to indicate it was over. We were so busy trying to figure out how to survive I don't even remember being scared. That came later, after we'd plowed up a field in Germany."

Huddled with a group of old buddies in a corner of a hotel ballroom, Summers, 65, a Topeka, Kan., optometrist and retired Air Force colonel, talked about the sunny summer afternoon he almost died. The occasion was the 40th reunion, ending Sunday, of former POWs who were held during World War II at Stalag Luft III in Sagan, Germany, now part of Poland. Most were U.S. Army Air Force airmen captured by Germans during huge Allied bombing raids.

About 6,000 of the 90,000 American fliers detained by the Germans during the war were kept at Stalag Luft III, the camp made famous by the tunnel mass breakout of British POWs later dramatized in the book and film "The Great Escape."

Summers and Rod Rawlinson, now a Denver stockbroker, were friends in the 94th Bomb Group based at Earlscolne, England. The Luftwaffe officer that got Summers hit Rawlinson, too. Rawlinson's B-17 blew up and he was blown out of the co-pilot's seat.

"I kicked some hot sheet metal away before pulling the ripcord. I passed out, then came to several thousand feet lower. When I hit the field the Germans were waiting for me," said Rawlinson, 67.

He was hurt, bad, but he was alive. All nine other crewmen were dead.

Waiting for Summers and Rawlinson at Stalag Luft III was Maurice "Rosey" Rosener, another member of the 94th Bomb Group who'd been shot down a month before over the English Channel.

"We were almost home, buzzing some sailboats, when the Focke Wulf 190s dived on us. Five crewmen were dead before we went into the drink. We only had one dinghy. One boy drowned before he could get in it."

Rosener's plane went down within sight of the French coast but the tide was going out. The dazed and injured survivors drifted without food, water or medicine for 23 hours.

No British rescue planes came but a Germany observation pilot did.

"He dropped us another dinghy and then a French fishing boat picked us up," said Rosener. "When we got to the dock a Luftwaffe officer was waiting for us. He took me back to his quarters for two days and wined me and dined me.

"He was the same pilot who'd shot me down, the same one who'd come looking for me, the same one who'd dropped the dinghy.

"He'd fought on every front the Germans had. He was a fighter pilot, he knew his days were numbered. He was a gentleman and I was a gentleman, and it was still a gentleman's war. I never saw him again. I went off to prison camp and he went back into the skies. I'm sure he died there."

For some, this would be a last reunion. To many, there will never be such a squadron of eagles again.

"Maybe we were sort of special, like the writers and the movie makers have tried to make us," reflected Summers, mellowed by the companionship of being with men he said he holds dearest. "It's corny, but we were a special breed. I don't think you'll see the like again."

Rally Speaker

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Mother Teresa, whose work with orphans in Calcutta earned her the 1979 Nobel Peace Prize, has accepted an invitation to speak at an anti-abortion rally here on June 30.

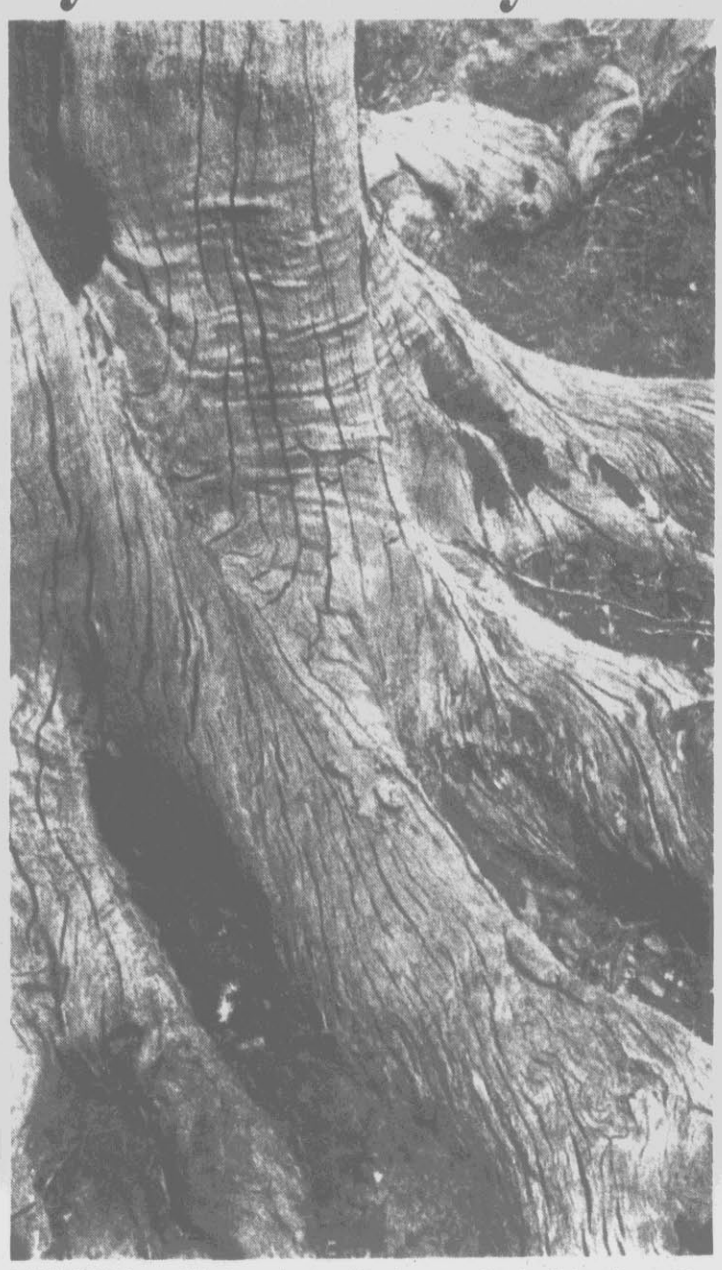
Scenes in Bethel Seldom Seen By Passersby

A SINGLE BRICK WALL . . . buttressed by projections and further supported by timbers wedged against the wall are the primary remains of a brick structure that once housed a Bethel manufacturing firm. Eventually the standing wall will be declared a safety hazard or else it will be pulled down to make way for a new building on the site. In the meantime, it is an interesting architectural relic from decades past.



LONG DEAD . . . This bone-dry tree has long ago lost its living tissue. For years, however, it and a companion tree have withstood the attack of time and the elements to become firmly anchored natural sculptures that grace a yard on West Church Street. Each of the time-bleached trunks, shorn of limbs, stands about 12 feet tall.

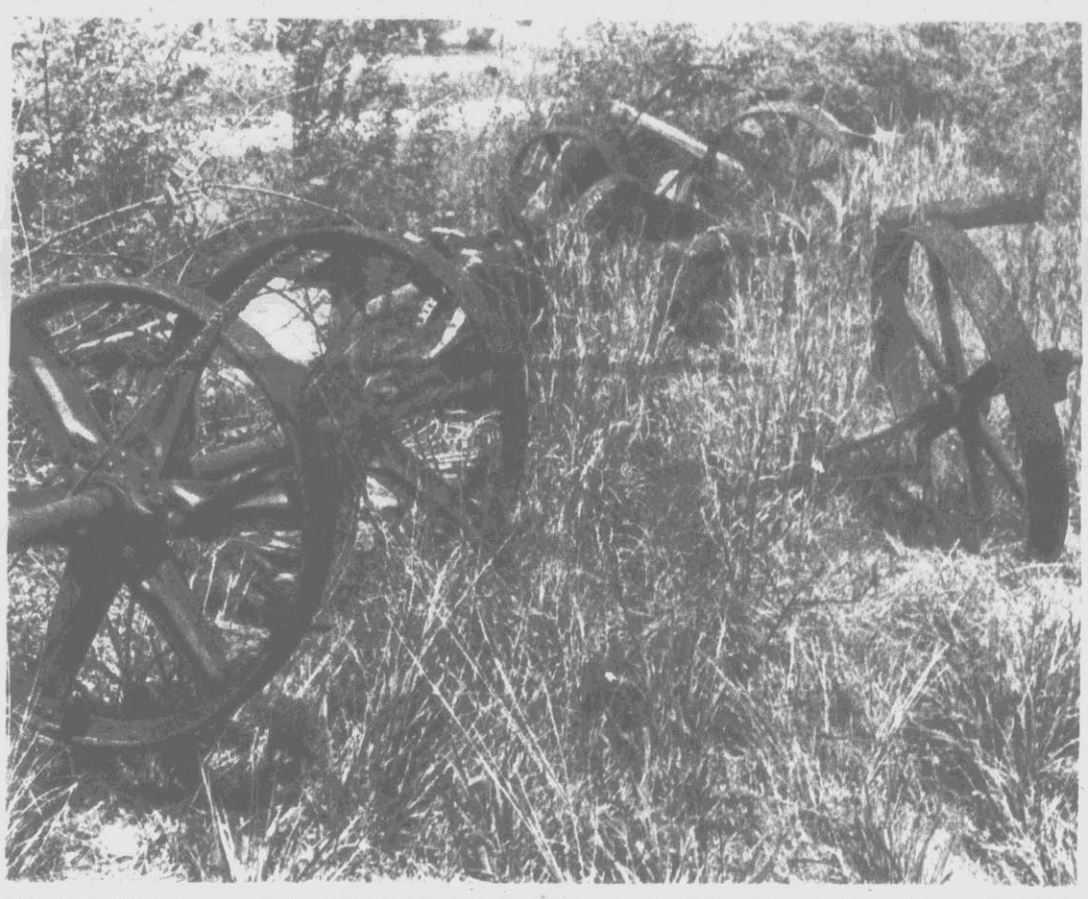
Text And Photos By Jerry Raynor

In any American town that existed prior to the turn of the 20th century, there are areas, usually places once devoted to manufacture, that have ceased to operate, and over the years, have been relegated to bypassed sections seldom seen from a town's main thoroughfares.

In ancient settlements in Europe, Asia and South America, we term such places as historic ruins — and people pay considerable sums and travel long distances to view them. With the few exceptions of the earliest American settlements, such sentiments for our non-used places of the past do not yet exist, although there are glimmers of such attitudes coming to the forefront as the 20th century nears its last decade.

The prevailing attitude, however, remains that such abandoned places and areas fall more into the class of eyesores — places that town fathers press to have razed, or at least, tidied up.

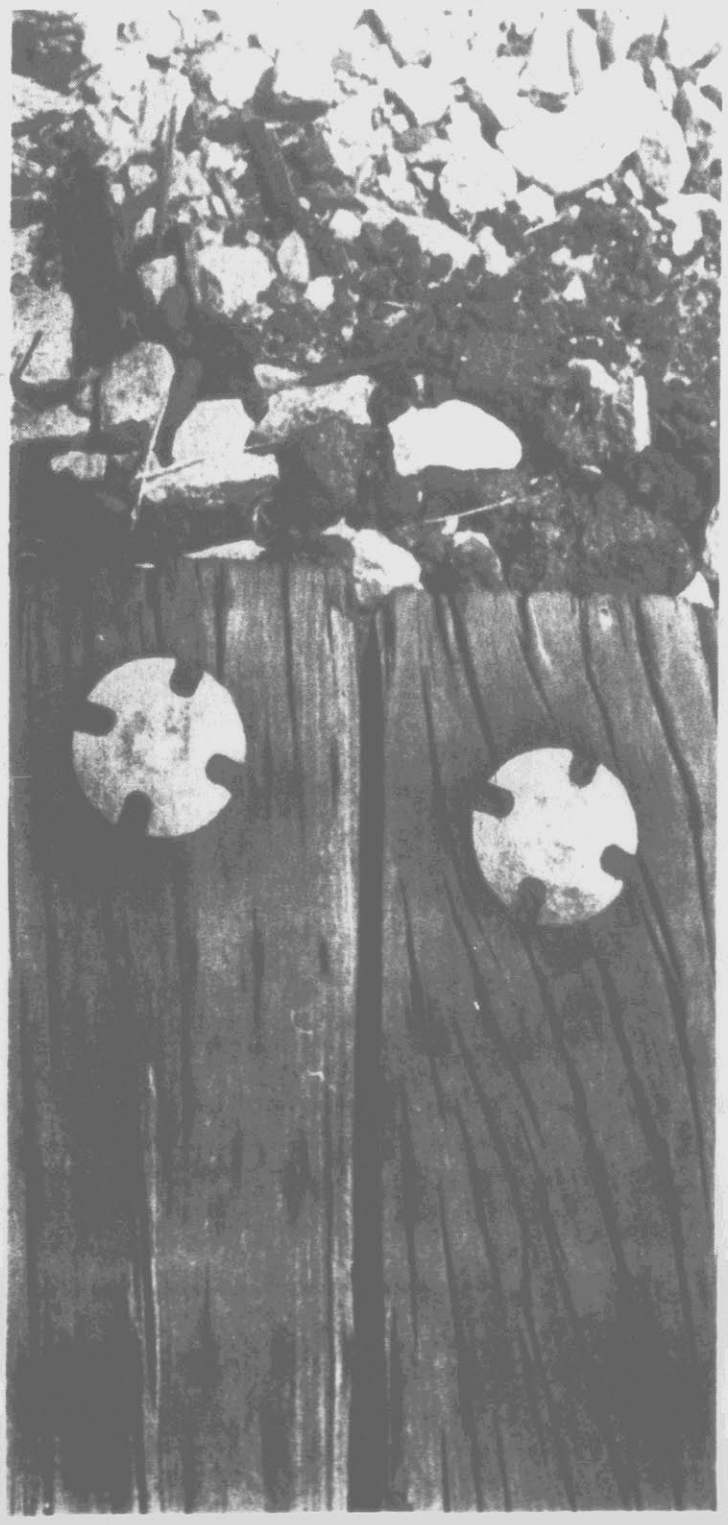
Whatever one's attitude might be, there's no denying, as these photographs taken within the limits of the northern Pitt County town of Bethel show, there is a definite charm to these relics. Seeing them in their slow deterioration stirs the same feeling that is instilled in viewing old photographs, or coming across a faded bouquet of flowers in an attic. In the quietness of these places, insects and man alike find a haven from traffic and hot asphalt. Visiting these areas brings a sense of curiosity about the history of these places and the people who toiled for a daily living when these now vacant places were alive with the sounds of men and machines in daily work.



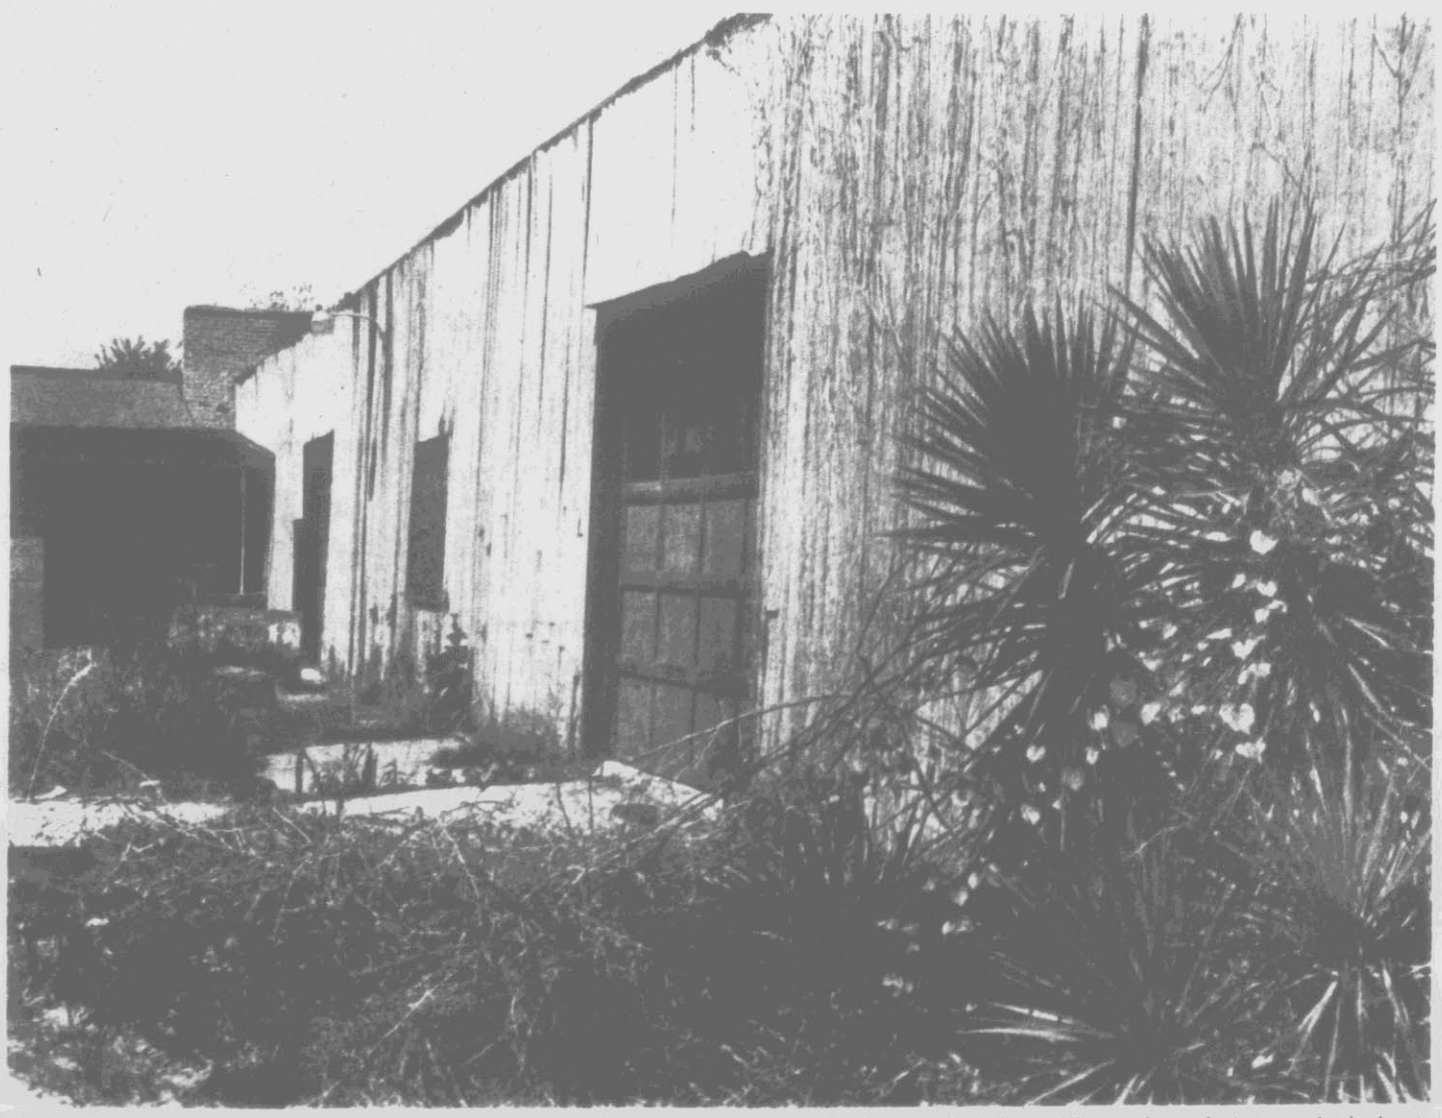
STURDY WHEELS . . . and other pieces of metal equipment, abandoned in a grassy plot, are left-overs from equipment formerly used in a local business. The heavy wheels seem to be doing well in resisting the decay of time and neglect.

Brick, metal, wood slowly deteriorates with the passage of time, neglect and exposure

One is filled with curiosity about the times when these sites once hummed with human voices and productivity . . .



STUDY IN TEXTURES AND COLORS . . . At a little used dirt road crossing of the railroad in Bethel, railroad ties, blackish-brown, are decorated with heavy silver-colored rivets. Fill along the tracks consists of a mixture of pink-flecked chips of granite and black cinders.



A SHORT DISTANCE . . . from Bethel's main traffic artery but concealed by a growth of trees and vines is this colorful tin-sheated building, obviously of later construction than the nearby brick wall. The cream painted tin is accented by doors and windows of burgandy, and vines are beginning to climb up the walls. A large corner stand of yucca is festooned with wild grapevines that in time will smother the leathery yucca.

Rice-Jones Wedding Vows Are Solemnized

Deirdre Willette Jones and Michael Albert Rice were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at three o'clock, in the Mount Calvary Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Anton T. Wesley Sr. assisted by Elder T.L. Davis performed the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mary Monk Jones and the late Rev. William E. Jones and Madeline C. Rice of Windsor and the late Grady Rice Jr.

A program of music was presented by Reginald Jeffries, organist of Raleigh. Leondras Ross, Douglas Hampton, Rod Kornegay and Rick Holmes, all of Raleigh, sang "Falling In Love," "When We Get Married," "The Lord's Prayer" and "You and I."

The bride was given in marriage by her mother and escorted by her uncle, Leander Monk Jr. of Philadelphia. The bride wore a formal gown of white taffeta designed by Phyllis for Bianchi. It was fashioned with an open portrait neckline outlined in clipped embroidered alencon lace beaded with pearls. Matching beaded lace was featured on the fitted bodice. A border of schiffli embroidered lace edged the hemline and attached chapel length train. She wore a tiered veil of imported illusion held in place by a Juliet headpiece covered in satin and embellished in a pearl motif. She carried a cascade of white carnarions, daisies, baby's breath, statice and sonya streamers.

Ingrid Jones Wesley, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Tina L. Wood of Greenwood, Va., was maid of honor. They wore frost rose taffeta formal gowms styled with a fitted bodice enhanced with triple rosettes and a gathered ruffle featuring an off-shoulder effect. The skirts were gathered. Their matching headpieces were of frost rose with a pouf of illusion on top and a back veil. Each carried rose carnations with a wine bow streamer.

Emma McIntyre and Minister M.A. Streeter directed the wedding.

The mother of the bride chose a formal frost rose dress with an over bodice. She wore a rose tipped white carnation. The mother of the bridegroom chose an off-white formal dress with a rose tipped carnation. They were also given long-stemmed roses.

On The Young Side

BY CLAY DEANHARDT

Among the many programs offered by Rose High, there is one which is unique in all of America. That is the cooperative Adventures in Nutrition (CAN) program sponsored by Elaine Tschetter's food services class.

The food service students work with the developmental kindergarten program at Eastern Elementary to share their understanding of nutrition with the an identified group of students. In the program, coordinated at Eastern by Emalynn Colardo, the developmental kingergarten teacher there, the food service students teach the children the values of nutrition both at Eastern and at meals given in the food srvice lab at Rose.

The program was recently awarded a $4,000 grant by the American Vocational Association and the National Dairy Board. The grant, one of only six nationwide, will be used to fund the program. In making the award, the AVA cited the program as being unique.

The 1985-86 marshals have been been announced. These are the top students from the junior class and most of them will serve as ushers at the awards day ceremony, graduation and baccalaureate. The students are Regina Barrett, Andrea Bath, Jeff Bray, William Brewer, Shonda Brown, Robin Calfee, Terry Daniels, Christine Eckerman, Tracey Heath, Mickey Herrin, Kelly Jones, Ingrid Lalik, Amy Moore, Destardi Moye, Tammy Newton, Jackie O'Koth, Sheila Pearson, Valerie Person, Charlotte Proctor, Sharnelle Spaulding, Karen Teele, Jill Whitehurst, Carl Wille, Leslie Victoria House and Nancy Johnson.

Last week was N.C. Math Education Week and at Rose, the week was highlighted by the math fair. The winners, by category, were: Carol Johnson, algebra II; Tonta Allen, geometry; Charles Moore, advanced math; Scott Carawan, algebra I; Sonya Austin, general math; and Stuart Coulter, computers.

Speakers were also featured as Hal Smith of Pitt Community College came Tuesdeay to talk about math's influence on vocational careers and Sotello Long and Robert Bereman came from N.C. State Thursday to talk about math education and computer science.

Clay Deanhardt, Cate Shappley, Carl Wille and Rocky Ziehr represented the school Thursday at the finals of the state math contest in Raleigh. The math fair was coordinated by Judy Coulter and Christine Gantt, who organized the week's activities.

Homemaker's Haven

By Evelyn Spangler
Pitt Home Agent

One working mother had trouble getting her teenage children to take more responsibility for housekeeping. She had taken on the role of "super mom" and tried to maintain high job and home standards. When this didn't work, she found herself reduced to nagging and complaining.

This met with additional resistance and arguing among the young people and feelings of guilt for the mother. The teenagers also complained. Their major gripe was that nothing they did satisfied her. They never cleaned "it" well enough or properly. The "you don't appreciate me" cry was on the other side now.

Something had to be done. Rather than reverting to the old way of doing everything herself, this woman thought things over carefully. She even allowed herself to admit that in some ways her children had valid points. There is a generation gap. And the teenager with a messy room today may well be tomorrow's meticulous housekeeper. Priorities are different and priorities change. The problem lies in having everyone reasonably happy now. And the solution is compromise.

This mother/working woman picked a time when her family was relaxed and communicative. Because all had active schedules during the week, their leisurely Sunday breakfasts seemed the best time to introduce the subject of housecleaning, calmly and with a minimum of accusations. She opened the topic gently by saying she understood they were as unhappy as she was. She kept the discussion low-keyed. Everyone agreed that bathrooms should be clean, the kitchen needed constant attention, laundry must be done, other rooms should be tidy. Grudgingly, each admitted they could do better in some areas of picking up after themselves. And it would make things better for all.

From this beginning, the mother moved them forward to a cleaning plan that would operate on a revolving week basis. Each week, one person would be responsible for the bathrooms, another the kitchen, another the laundry and another the rest of the rooms. Everyone was responsible for his or her bedroom. Messy or clean, it was their choice.

Together they wrote down in some detail what each assignment entailed. Daily tidying had to be done by the one responsible for that area. Full cleaning assignments had to be done over the weekend. If someone was going to be away for the weekend, he or she could shift the chores to Friday or Sunday evening. Nothing was to be said about the work until Sunday breakfast. Then each had a turn to assess the weekly area of responsibility and ways that would make upkeep easier.

At first, arguments broke out on Sunday mornings over the shortcomings of the "others," mostly in the area of picking up after themselves. As moderator, the mother insisted there be no accusations. Only facts and suggestions could be stated — and in the third person plural pronoun. For example, "The sink wouldn't be so messy if we all remembered to rinse out the basin and to wipe it and the faucets with a sponge after each use."

In a few weeks, as each family member took a turn at each job area, it became apparent that working together would make work easier for all. Slowly, but surely, cooperation appeared. Towels were hung on towel racks. Soiled clothing went into the hamper. Glasses and plates taken to the family room were returned to the kitchen. They got to the point where they could make direct statements without starting an argument. For example, "It bugs me that you never put the cap on the toothpaste." They even came up with time-saving tips.

A key element in this mother's plan was to show appreciation for work well done and to avoid pointing out minor things not done to her satisfaction or things that needed only occasional attention. Since she herself participates in the plan, in one area every fourth week she "cleans the corners," as she calls it. While she confesses that things don't always work perfectly, she has found her children becoming more responsive, understanding and responsible.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

It's a gripe session on what we put up with and how only wonderful people like us could possibly survive.

Anyway, at a gathering the other night, Carol was saying her son Mark always cleaned his room BUT he was never on time for anything in his entire life.

Ruth said she'd trade him in a minute for her son Ken, who was always on time BUT who was so lazy the only test he'd passed all year was his eye examination.

Barb didn't think that was so awful. She preferred him to her Dorothy who was an honor student BUT was so cheap she gave her her own sweater back for Mother's Day. She gave her boyfriend a $34-runner's watch for Mother's Day.

It kept going that way all evening. The mother who was sick of chauffeuring a jock around all the time was envied by the mother whose son devoted his life to taking her car apart. The mother who worried about her daughter's dating the entire wrestling team in one night coveted the daughter who sat at home dateless, living vicariously through mini-series.

That's when the idea hits us. Trade-a-kid. It was an idea whose time had come.

We would fill out a card for each of the rotten things about our children that bothered us: Drinking milk out of the carton. Hanging on the phone during dinner. Leaving dirty clothes in the middle of the floor. Oversleeping and missing the school bus. Soaking all the pans every time it was his turn to do dishes.

Then we would fill out a card for some of the nice things they did: Closing the front door occasionally during winter. Offering to drop you off at the dentist in your car. Emptying the mouse trap five years ago. Not cashing the tooth fairy's check until after the 15th of the month.

All the cards would be put into a deck and five of them dealt to each mother. We would then begin vigorous trading, much like a game call PIT.

Frankly, I have not seen so much excitement and frenzy in all my days of mothering. My friends who were usually calm were screaming, "I'll trade surliness for long showers." Another shouted, "Give me a kid who doesn't say, 'You know.' I'll throw in one who hangs up we towels."

The trading was vigorous for the better part of three hours. At the end of it, we all put our cards down to tally up who we had.

Dear Abby

Neighbor's Telescope Focuses On Visiting Girlfriends At Pool

DEAR ABBY: I don't know if I'm old-fashioned or not, so please help me understand something. I live in an apartment complex that has a huge pool. Last year I had a few female friends come over and use the pool every once in a while. The problem is this: There is a window on the second story where some guy has a "high-powered" telescope that he uses to get very close-up shots of the ladies using the pool. Lady friends of mine were uncomfortable with this when they visited last year.

Question: Is there anything I can do legally to prevent this intrusion of privacy this year? (The telescope is set up and ready to go.) Am I and my friends old-fashioned or what?

To tell you the truth, you're the only one I had the guts to ask.

BUMMED
IN PANORAMA CITY

DEAR BUMMED: If it were a private pool, the guy with a high-powered telescope would be invading your friends' privacy, but since the pool is public, "Where's the beef?"—if the ladies will excuse the expression.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 44 years has Alzheimer's disease, and I have finally placed her in a nursing home where I know she is getting better care than I can give her now.

My problem is loneliness. I have many friends who say, "Come over—anytime; you're always welcome." Then they tell me how much they admire me for caring for my wife the way I did these last few years.

I don't need admiration—I need companionship. Why can't people be more specific, and say, "Come over next Sunday" or Wednesday or whatever?

Maybe it would help if you put in a plug for those who are widowed, or in a situation like mine. After all, some of your readers may find themselves alone someday. Sign me ...

LONELY

DEAR LONELY: Friends who say "Come anytime" usually mean it, but if you're lonely, don't wait for friends to call you—call and invite them for a pot-luck supper, an evening of cards, coffee and dessert. (It's easy to entertain at home with so many carry-out establishments.)

I'm not talking about casual acquaintances; I mean good friends.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: This is a letter from two friends with the same problem: Our boyfriends want too much too soon. The thing is, we really like them and don't want to lose them.

If we don't do what they want us to do, they will find someone else who will.

You will probably tell us to find someone who won't want too much, but that is impossible.

Do you have any suggestions? Please print this because I'm sure other girls have the same problem.

TOO MUCH TOO SOON

DEAR TOO MUCH: The worst mistake a girl can make is to give a guy too much because she's afraid if she doesn't, somebody else will. If he wants "too much," then let the foolish girl who gives it to him have the pleasure (and the pain) of winning this dubious prize.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Please do a good deed for the elderly. Around holiday times, I am frequently asked, "Where are you going for the holidays?"

I am not going anywhere. I have rotten children who do not invite me although I have been extremely good to them. It is embarrassing to have to stutter and lie. They have no reason to be ashamed of me. My appearance and manners are above reproach.

Please write about this in your column. It might keep people from asking that embarrassing question. It is almost as bad as saying, "If you have no place else to go, why don't you come to my house?"

SOFT SANDS . . . and steady breezes have made Jockey's Ridge a popular place for hang gliding and for spectators of the sport since the time of the Wright Brothers in the early 1900's. (Photo courtesy N.C. Department of Tourism)

Nags Head Hang-Gliding May 10-12

NAGS HEAD — Tradition flies high in Nags Head as preparations continue for the 13th Annual Hang Gliding Spectacular, the oldest continuously-held gliding competition in the country.

The 1985 event is being held this year on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 10-12.

The Annual Hang Gliding Spectacular has been held on Jockey's Ridge in Nags Head since 1973. Jockey's Ridge was chosen because it contains the tallest sand dunes on the east coast. It is also within view of the Wright Brothers' Memorial, the site of their first flight.

Jockey's Ridge is known nationwide as the best place for learning to hang glide. The Wright Brothers chose the area for the gentle sand dunes and great wind that today still make it a perfect site for flying. Over 50,000 people have learned the skills of hang gliding on these dunes.

Spectators, novices, and advanced pilots all have a place for participation in this weekend of fun and events. The competition includes two classes of participants based on skill level ratings set by the United States Hang Gliding Association — novice for Hang I and II pilots, and experienced for Hang III and IV pilots.

Competitions during the three days will be scheduled according to each day's wind and weather conditions. Planned events include a duration contest in which pilots will try to stay up as long as possible by working with air currents above the dunes. Staying up over three minutes gives the maximum points; however, the record is over five hours for a single flight.

Additional competitions include a target landing where the pilots attempt to land on a frisbee and a slalom event where the gliders maneuver around pylons.

Points are accumulated throughout the weekend, with the winner being the person with the most points. The first and second place winners from last year were only two points apart, out of 220 accumulated points.

Last year Cindy Black, from Washington D.C., became the first woman to win an award, coming in second in the novice category. Lawrence Battaile, now Assistant Manager of Kitty Hawk Kites Flight School, will compete for the third year in a row. He returns as defending champion to compete against Glen Hockett, of Richmond, Va., a three-time past champion.

Other events during the weekend include a street dance on Saturday night featuring the Neurocktics, an auction benefitting the United States Hang Gliding Association, a hang gliding towing demonstration, a stunt kite demonstration, and the award ceremony on Sunday, presided over by the father of hang gliding, Francis Rogallo. In 1948 Rogallo invented the wing that has evolved into what is today the hang glider.

The Hang Gliding Spectacular is sponsored by the Dare County Jaycees, the North Carolina State Park Service, and Kitty Hawk Kites. For further information contact Kathyrn Boeckman or Steve Wendt at P.O. Box 340, Nags Head, N.C., 27959, or call 441-4124.

Switches From Hogs To T-Shirts

By ERICA JOHNSTON
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After 40 years of raising hogs, tobacco and soybeans, Floyd "Junior" Gray was tired of depending on the whims of nature for his livelihood. So he invested about $4,000 in the dream of a manufacturer with an idea but no money.

The move appears to have paid off.

Gray isn't spending his time slopping hogs any more. The Kinston farmer has been crisscrossing the country, taking orders for what he calls "the next Cabbage Patch kids" — "Color Me" T-shirts with outlined designs that come with colored pens whose ink can be washed out of the fabric again and again.

Gray and Carroll Midgette, working out of a mobile home surrounded by tobacco barns, have taken orders for 100,000 dozen of the T-shirts since Midgette took a few samples to the National Merchandise Convention in New York in September.

"When I went up there, I said it would be OK if I sold 50 to 100 dozen," Midgette said. "I wound up doing 5,000 dozen.

"We've got 'Color Me Santa Claus,' 'Color Me Animal World,' 'Color Me Army,' 'Color Me God Is Love,' and other designs," he said. "We've got companies that want their own designs. We've got a company that's going to bring the shirts to Saudi Arabia."

And Gray and Midgette are not stopping there.

"Right now, we're ushering in the color-me kids," Midgette said. "We're working on cartoons, and we're dealing with companies to make tennis shoes and jogging suits."

Midgette said he'd got the idea for the T-shirts about 15 years ago.

"My kids liked to color, and they liked to wear T-shirts. I thought you could sell a T-shirt that kids could color on, wear and then wash out and color again," he said.

"I thought it would work, but I didn't think it would get this big," said Midgette, now president of the enterprise, G&M Manufacturing. "I didn't know it was going to explode like this."

Gray, now board chairman, said he'd been skeptical at first of Midgette's proposition.

"A lot of people have approached me with things like this, so when Carroll came by ... I didn't pay him much mind," he said. "But my wife thought he had a good product. He came back again, and we were riding in my truck. We were looking at the crops, and they didn't look too good. And he said, 'Trust me.'"

Midgette said the business had not rounded the financial corner yet, but he expects it to in about three months.

Gray said no matter what happened, he wouldn't give up his hogs.

"I've been a farmer all my life. It just feels so good that maybe I won't have to depend on the weather and the prices ... and always worry about making payments," he said.

"I enjoy hogs, I really do," he said. "I love messing with them, even though I've lost money with them. I love them. If things go like they look like they will, I'll probably just build me a huge hog pen."

Summer Programs Offered

WILMINGTON — The fascinating and mysterious world of marine animal and plant life will be a part of a camp being offered this summer by the Office of Special Programs at the University of North Carolina at Wilmington to students, ages 11-15, who have been identified as academically gifted. Entitled "Coast Trek," the resident/commuter camp is scheduled for July 14-20 on the UNCW campus.

"We were looking for something different to offer gifted students," Dr. James C. Edmundson, director of Special Programs, explained. "Our coastal environment offers so many opportunities not available inland. As an added bonus, students will study in a select curriculum of liberal arts."

Recreation and social events for the week-long camp include guest speakers, use of the university's athletic facilities including tennis courts and an Olympic-size swimming pool, access to the computer lab and a surprise outing.

The camp begins Sunday, July 14 and ends Saturday afternoon, July 20, with a special review session for parents. The fee for residential and commuters includes all activities, room and board, supplies and activity transportation. Students will be housed in modern dormitories within walking distance of all campus activities.

Registration deadline is June 28. A deposit must be received by the Office of Special Programs by June 7 to reserve a space.

To request a brochure and registration form, or for further information, contact the Office of Special Programs, UNC Wilmington, 601 S. College Road, Wilmington, N.C., 28403 or call 395-3798.

3) Slimmer lapels features higher notches to fit the scale of the garment.

Tired Of Non-Fiction, Doing Well In Fiction

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shirley Conran, a newspaper writer and editor in London, had written five successful nonfiction books but she wasn't satisfied. She wanted to try her hand at fiction.

"I went to my publisher and said I was fed up," she recalled. "I wanted to write a novel. A very sensational novel. The publishers were very proper and Catholic. They said: 'What's your idea of a sensational novel?' I said, 'Jane Eyre.' Their faces fell. They thought it wouldn't sell."

Miss Conran did indeed write her novel and it sold. And it sold. And it sold. Her first venture, "Lace," was an international best seller. It was also a hit miniseries for ABC.

Now Miss Conran is back with a sequel, "Lace II," and the miniseries version will be telecast by ABC today and Monday, May 5-6.

The "Lace II" miniseries stars Brooke Adams, Phoebe Cates, Arielle Dombasle and Anthony Higgins, who reprise their original roles. Deborah Raffin stars in the role created by Beth Armstrong.

In "Lace," international sex symbol Lili discovers that her mother was the American, Judy, played by Miss Armstrong. The second book is about her search for her father.

"When I was 38 I was ill and couldn't do newspaper work. So I wrote five nonfiction best sellers. One was on housework. So, why did I write 'Lace' — I wanted a bit of fun," Miss Conran said in an interview.

"With the nonfiction books I found the prestige I was getting was alarming. People would write me: 'You stopped me from committing suicide. What do I do next?' I longed for a little frivolity. I worked out the plot. I didn't know if I could write fiction. But I knew if I could write fiction that I would be in that rare, rare group of best sellers."

Miss Conran spent many years working on newspapers in England. She worked on the Daily Mail and the London Observer.

"When I went into books I found it very difficult," she said. "I'd had a flirtation with magazines, but I liked the excitement of newspapers. I also liked the size of the audience. I didn't feel comfortable until 'Lace II.'"

Ms. Conran was formerly married to Sir Terence Conran, a highly successful design tycoon. She was in design herself and established Conran Fabrics Ltd.

Her marriage ended after she had two sons and she began newspaper work as a design consultant to the Daily Mail. She then became home editor of the newspaper. She was also women's page editor of the Observer Colour Magazine and later was an interviewer and commentator for Granada Television.

Her first book, in 1975, was "Superwoman," a witty guide to household management. She wrote "The Superwoman Yearbook," "Superwoman in Action," "Futures: How to Survive Life" and "The Magic Garden," a book for beginning gardners.

She found time to write those books by avoiding all the parties she was invited to. "I got as many invitations as Princess Margaret," she said.

"I didn't want to write about everyday things," she continued. "Writing a book about a woman facing washing dishes and having an affair with the man at the gas station would bore me to death. I wouldn't want to read that.

"The other thing I'm good at, and I didn't have to work at it, is characterization. I could create people who are three dimensional."

Miss Conran, who went to the best girls' schools in England and Switzerland, said: "About 85 percent of 'Lace' is true. But not 'Lace II' — which may be why 'Lace II' is more exciting."

Carlos Santana Trying Out New Sounds

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Though he has 22 albums behind him, Carlos Santana is still experimenting with music.

The 37-year-old guitarist, who added a Latin beat to rock music, has incorporated Caribbean and African rhythms on "Beyond Appearances," the latest LP from the band that calls itself by his name. His 23rd album, a solo effort, will include free-form jazz and Jamaican reggae.

The jazz drummer Tony Williams will appear on the next album, as will members of the new wave group Missing Persons. Santana also hopes to get reggae great Jimmy Cliff to join him in the recording studio.

Santana has collaborated in the past with the giants of jazz and rock, and is comfortable on stage with such artists as Bob Dylan, Miles Davis, Journey and the Rolling Stones.

The musical styles change, but one thing remains constant: the soaring guitar and the multi-layered rhythm that are the Santana trademark. While many of his contemporaries have fallen to the pop music wayside, Santana still records albums, still attracts crowds.

What makes Santana different?

"I think it is mainly the live performances," he said in a recent interview in a midtown hotel room, where he was staying for an appearance on NBC's "Saturday Night Live."

"This band, when we play live, we're always going for that unknown feeling — where your hair stands on end."

He no longer keeps the grueling schedule that saw him perform 300 times a year in the 1970s. Instead, he tours for a few months at a time, then returns home to San Francisco to rest for two or three weeks. He began an extended U.S. tour in the Northeast in late April and should continue performing throughout the summer.

The performances still last 2½ hours. "We play it all, we give them everything," he said.

He's been giving his all ever since he burst onto the national scene at the age of 22 in 1969 when he turned in an electrifying performance at Woodstock. He's also be incorporating Third World rhythms into his music since that time. Santana has gone through many incarnations. After three best-selling rock albums, he released Caravanserai in 1972, an album influenced by jazz saxophone great John Coltrane and master trumpeter Miles Davis. He briefly embraced the religious teaching of Sri Chinmoy in the mid-1970s, and recorded albums with John McLaughlin, Chick Corea and other practioners of "jazz fusion" music.

In the late '70s, Santana returned to his Latin-tinged rock music roots and scored commercial hits with "Dance, Sister, Dance," "Winning," and "She's Not There."

Today, there are two musical Santanas: one who works with a band, churning out danceable pop albums that often go "gold," selling 500,000 copies; and one who releases solo albums of experimental music that are less commercial.

Even though his jazz-flavored albums enjoys a smaller audience, they are closer to Santana's heart. "It's experimental music, but the melodies are still there, the dynamism of the percussion is out front," he said. "We're stretching it out."

He has come to appreciate the tradeoff he has worked out with Columbia, his record label. He makes a commerically-successful album for Columbia — "something the younger audience can relate to" — and they allow him make a jazz album of his own.

"You can tell by the radio we are in a time when people put more interest on kiddie pop, so the real musicians are backed into a corner," he said.

It is also a time of rock videos, a new medium he does not welcome.

"I'm a musician, I'm not an actor," he said. "I never had the aspiration or the training. I just want to play. I just want to be a musician."

Professor Proclaims The Virtues Of Country Music Lyrics

ONE WAY TO SMOKE — It's not everybody's favorite position to smoke, but this young woman, member of the Chinese Magic Revue of Taiwan, shows that it can be done, even when the toes are encased in a sock. (AP Laserphoto)

By JOE EDWARDS
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An education professor says country music's "cry in your beer" lyrics can help students learn about love, life and even geography.

"You don't need a Ph.D. in analytical poetry to understand country music. It's short, simple and to the point," says Dr. James Akenson, associate professor of education at Tennessee Tech in Cookeville.

A country wailer like "Kaw-Liga," for example, can help first-graders think more clearly because its tale of a storefront wooden Indian who fell in love with a maiden at another store is easy to follow, Akenson says.

Akenson, an admitted country music fan, teaches a graduate-level course on how country music can be a valuable instructional tool.

He cites country music lyrics as a way high school and elementary school instructors can supplement their teaching of sociology, geography and other subjects.

Akenson says a "cry in your beer" honky-tonk song like the late Ernest Tubb's "I'm Walkin' the Floor Over You" can teach students about human relationships.

"Those songs reflect that many times relationships are fragile," the 41-year-old professor said in an interview. "If they are not well thought out, you can end up 'sleeping single in a double bed.' These songs help high school students be more analytical in studying their own relationships."

He said "Sleeping Single in a Double Bed," a hit country song by Barbara Mandrell, "reinforces traditional values. She realizes she's sorry for mistakes."

Akenson, who has his doctorate in curriculum and instruction from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, said "Kaw-Liga," recorded by both Hank Williams and Hank Williams Jr., can be studied by first-graders to develop listening skills and other functions.

"In 'Kaw-Liga,' you have a very nice story. It has time lines, and then you can plot and put words on it and so forth. Here are events in a story, in sequence and then you can draw conclusions."

He says Hank Williams Jr.'s "Dixie on My Mind" can be used as a geography lesson for young students because the song mentions Alabama, the Mason-Dixon line, Houston, Spartanburg, S.C., and Jack Daniels whiskey in Tennessee.

"The map work you can do with that is interesting," said Akenson, a native of Minneapolis.

He says Loretta Lynn's signature song, "Coal Miner's Daughter," is a vivid description of a strong family relationship, and John Anderson's amusing "Swingin' " typifies traditional values with its references to fried chicken and daddy in the back yard.

Similarly, Akenson says teachers can play John Conlee's "Back Side of 30" in the classroom to portray a conventional relationship that's been broken.

"It's a beautiful song about a man who has been married, it's broken up and there's remorse. This person is not a teenybopper. He's an ordinary human being, over 35, who has seen an important relationship crumble. Now he's dealing with that. It's about traditional relationships, which are valued in country music."

"Mammas Don't Let Your Babies Grow Up to Be Cowboys," by Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson, focuses on tension in a culture, he says.

"Cowboys are their own persons ... not locked into a regimented lifestyle. But in terms of security, maybe it's best to let them have a professional career."

Akenson says his research of country music shows "historical ideas about American culture, economic ideas about goods and services and wants and needs and creation of jobs and spending of money and capital investment, and a lot of related history, geography, sociology and anthropology.

"Whether you're interested in country music or not ... a large percentage of people have some linkage into the cultural heritage from which country music has evolved."

He says the underlying point of his course "is to show teachers how to actively involve children and young adults with various kinds of materials.

"We don't just memorize; we go for a higher order of thinking skills, not just reading and reciting," he said. "We are active with data sources to make children have skills and have concepts and do higher-order thinking."

He said rock 'n' roll could be used just as country music is in teaching young people.

Stamps In The News

Every school boy and girl knows that the Statue of Liberty is now being restored in readiness for its centennial celebration on July 4, 1986.

Many countries throughout the world will be honoring the festive occasion during the next two years with special postage stamps. One of the first to join the philatelic tribute is Antigua & Barbuda, islands in the Leeward chain of the West Indies. Antigua & Barbuda has issued six stamps and a souvenir sheet to hail the "Lady With The Lamp."

The 25-cent stamp depicts the torch of the Statue of Liberty as it appeared when on display in Madison Square Park in 1885. The 30-cent illustrates a scene from the current restoration and renewal work. The 50-cent shows the Statue's sculptor, Frederick Auguste Bartholdi, supervising the construction of his masterpiece in 1876. The 90-cent features the top section of Miss Liberty with the words "A Beacon of Freedom to Millions." The $1 pictures a scene near the famous statue during "Operation Sail 1976," which marked the bicentennial of America's independence. The $3 shows the original ceremonies at the dedication of the Statue of Liberty in 1886.

The souvenir sheet is a $5 denomination which features, in the stamp portion, a modern ship cruising into New York Harbor near the statue with the skyscrapers of the city in the background. In the border section is the Statue of Liberty and a detailed view of the structure's top. Also appearing are the famous words (imprinted on its base) by poet Emma Lazarus: "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free ..."

The "Love" stamps issued by the U.S. Postal Service in recent years have proved so popular that the Stamp Advisory Comittee has approved another one (a 22-cent) to be issued soon. The first one was an 8-cent red and blue stamp issued Jan. 1973. The second, spelling out the world "Love" in a multi-colored floral design, was issued Feb. 1982. The denomination was 20 cents.

Actress Melina Mercouri Working To Revive Greek Culture

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Melina Mercouri, star of the 1960s movie "Never on Sunday," has brought to her job as culture minister the same exuberant energy that marked her film career.

In the past 3½ years she has campaigned on four continents to bring the priceless Elgin Marbles home to Greece from Britain, launched an ambitious scheme to make Athens the first cultural capital of the European Common Market and drafted a law banning censorship.

"Cultural life in Greece was like a house without foundations and without a roof when we came in," she told a group of reporters recently. "There was so much work to be done."

A parliamentary deputy for Premier Andreas Papandreou's Panhellenic Socialist Movement (Pasok), Ms. Mercouri is the first woman to hold an influential Cabinet post in Greece.

Since 1977, she has represented a seedy district in Athens' port of Piraeus, the setting for her role as a soft-hearted prostitute in "Never on Sunday."

Ms. Mercouri has brought actors, poets and screenwriters into the Culture Ministry. Avant-garde paintings decorate the cluttered offices where ministry advisers in jeans pore over programs for cultural centers on remote Aegean islands.

While Ms. Mercouri has her critics, most Greek writers and film-makers seem to agree that the artistic climate has shown a marked improvement since she took over.

"Melina is one of us," said writer Kay Cicellis. "She's receptive to creative ideas and she puts everything into the job, even if some projects haven't worked out."

Friends say the 62-year-old actress, who comes from an old Athenian political family, has learned to delegate some her tasks and to take advice — often from her husband, French-American film director Jules Dassin.

Her crusade to bring back the Elgin Marbles, unique statuary removed from the Acropolis temples in the early 19th century by a British diplomat, has attracted support from around the world.

Britain has rejected a formal request from Ms. Mercouri to give back the sculptures, now in the British Museum in London. The British government claims they were legally acquired by Lord Elgin, a British ambassador to Ottoman Turkey, which then ruled Greece.

"We have to be patient," she said. "I feel sure we'll get them back eventually. The issue is a small thorn which doesn't disturb our other cultural relations with Britain."

Top musical and theater groups from Britain, Italy, West Germany and the United States will take part in this summer's festival opening Athens' six months as the first cultural capital of the 10-nation Common Market.

"We're managing to bring culture into the frontline ... both internationally and at home. It's a matter of people's mentality changing," she said.

She recently also announced a $700,000 plan for a permanent exhibit in Piraeus that she said "will make Piraeus rate with the richest cultural centers in Europe."

More than 1,600 objects illustrating Greece's seafaring tradition from the Stone Age to the 19th century will go on display in June at the port's passenger terminal.

Ms. Mercouri has introduced a draft law that will guarantee state aid for Greece's struggling movie industry.

The law, expected to pass by summer, bans censorship and ensures that box-office taxes at Greek movie theaters will be used for the production of new films. It will also set up a company to promote Greek films abroad.

Ms. Mercouri has set up more than 5,000 cultural centers, libraries and cinema clubs throughout mainland Greece and the islands. Small theater groups now get government assistance to put on shows in isolated regions.

"We have to make cultural activity available to people outside Athens and bring it alive for them, as part of improving the quality of life. Greece isn't just a vast museum of ancient artifacts," said Michael Koutouzis, a senior adviser to Ms. Mercouri.

But archaeologists in the government antiquity service complain that their role has been eroded since Ms. Mercouri permitted some of their responsibilities to be transferred to the Environment Ministry last year. They maintain that some ancient treasures may never be scientifically or completely excavated before new construction begins on a site.

"Their authoritarian attitude undermines individual imagination, dreams and visions, and creativity," Theodorakis charged. "The Socialists are making Greece a cultural desert.

Hopeful About New Role

By BRUCE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Actress Terri Garber once traded quips with a "talking" orangutan. Now she's a lying, conniving, spoiled Southern belle, who plots the death of a suitor who spurns her, lusts after power and commits sexual indiscretions too numerous to mention in a family newspaper.

The 24-year-old actress portrays Ashton Main in the TV miniseries adaptation of the John Jakes best seller, "North and South." The ABC movie was being filmed in Charleston during April.

Ashton, perhaps one of the juiciest parts in the 10-hour antebellum epic, is a role for which Miss Garber has waited. Some on the set feel it's also the role that could launch the young actress to stardom.

"The funniest thing is that 'Gone With the Wind' is one of of my favorite books," Miss Garber said in an interview. "This is an absolute fantasy for me to play a part like this that is similar to Scarlett O'Hara. I know it sounds stupid but, honest to God, Ashton is the character I've always dreamt of doing."

Ashton Main, she said, is a wonderful character. "I'm in love with her. She has an energy and a quick wit. She's charming. But she has a few downfalls. She's a bitch.

"But to play the part right you just can't be a bitch," Miss Garber said. "There has to be something behind it. The audience must be able to say, 'I think I understand why she did it.' If they don't understand, if they think she's just mean, they're not going to have an affection for her."

Miss Garber, born and raised in Miami, has a solid grounding in theater. She worked at the Coconut Grove Playhouse while attending high school and later studied at Boston University and the American Academy of Dramatic Arts in New York.

She has done television, including roles as Allison Linden in the soap opera, "Texas," and as the research assistant who worked with a talking orangutan on the comedy show, "Mr. Smith."

However, she tired of what situation comedies and soap operas offered and left California for New York. "I didn't feel that I worked and trained so hard to work opposite a monkey," she said.

SIMPLE, BUT EFFECTIVE . . . This small thatched farmhouse, in the countryside near Gia Dinh outside Saigon, is typical of Vietnamese ingenuity in using whatever material is available in construction. The roof, of woven banana fronds, withstands even the heaviest downpour of tropical rain without leaking. Shrubs, plants and small trees encircling the house are mostly producers of fruits and vegetables.

MINIATURE FERRY . . . On the outskirts of Saigon, a woman, in traditional conical straw hat, made her living ferrying passengers across a stream on a small boat. The one-way fare in 1965 was the equivalent of four American cents. She said she averaged transporting about 100 fares daily.

Memories From A Wartime Tour In Vietnam

Text and Photographs By Jerry Raynor

There are some older veterans, like myself, whose tour of duty in Vietnam was spent in the relative safety of Saigon, in a situation considerably different than that of the mostly younger servicemen whose 13-month duty time was spent in combat situations out in the villages, forests and network of waterways in the Meking Delta.

Today, with public focus on the end of American participation in the Vietnam War now at its 10-year mark, the rememberance of individual events, of sights seen, of friendships experienced in that conflict-ravaged country naturally surface again — not that such memories ever completely fade away. They lie dormant, the good and the bad, and resurface from time to time. Sometimes it seems that it all happened centuries in the past; at other times, only yesterday.

These memories never return in precise, chronological order. Along with the recall of little things are the pervasive, lasting impressions — the gypsy-like crowds of people that constantly thronged the bustling streets of Saigon; the seemingly endless roar of traffic as diesel fuel-burning military trucks added acrid smoke to the scene of small racing blue and yellow taxicabs forever on the go, and an incredible stream of motorized bikes, with muscle-powered pedicabs mingled in the chaos.

Divided Loyalties

It was in the summer of 1964 that I received orders for assignment in Saigon, with a reporting date a year later, in July 1965. This gave me time to brush up on the history of the country, to be somewhat prepared for the cultural shock we were told to expect. That was helpful, but nothing could prepare a person for the tangled web of divided loyalties and confusion that existed among the Vietnamese — which English or French-speaking Vietnamese of all ages and status were only too willing to talk about to their incoming American allies.

One thing was clear, many thoughtful Vietnamese at that time felt confident that the dramatic increase in the numbers of U.S. servicemen, and the riches of war equipment arriving in their land in the summer of 1965, would soon prove to be the magic cure to their problems — somehow, the big American warriors would be able to provide the stability to help heal the divisions between Catholics and Buddhists, bring order to a series of shaky governments that had culminated in June 1965 in the military takeover of government by Air Vice Marshal Nguyen Cao Ky — a take-over given tacit U.S. approval following the debacle of the Diem government that ended in November 1963 with his assassination and the series of coup d'etats that had followed.

Hopes Not Realized

None of these high hopes, as we well know, came about. By 1968, American troops in Vietnam numbered well over half a million. A fascinated and often angry world watched in disbelief as the greatest military power on earth little by little lost ground to the antiquated tactics of tenacious guerrilla fighters. And the awesome climax came on April 30, 1975, when the final contingent of remaining Americans carried out their escape from downtown Saigon rooftops.

This is the bigger picture, a brief outline that engenders nagging questions of why and how it happened that we did not succeed, how our staggering commitment of billions of dollars and the sacrifice of nearly 60,000 Americans failed to achieve the brave hope of success nourished 10 years earlier.

Clear Images Remain

But the bigger picture is not what lingers most clearly in memory. It is rather a kaleidoscope of isolated images that retain lasting clarity.

Contrast In Women

•The sharp contrast of infamy and greed as opposed to selfless, dedicated caring was perhaps nowhere more clearly evident than in the lives of some of the women involved in Vietnam — the rabble-rousing Madame Nhu, exile-secure in wealth, and the unknown sisters of charity from Canada, the U.S.and Australia who labored in camps and orphanages in the countryside around Saigon to bring relief to the homeless, the pitifully wounded, helpless victims of the continuing war. The deep respect military men had for Dickey Chapelle, the National Geographic reporter who gave the world excellent factual accounts of the war and who made the supreme sacrifice while covering a story in combat, compared to the headline-grabbing antics of the likes of Jane Fonda who visited Hanoi and vented anti-American outbursts to the disgust of young men facing death daily in the mud and dust of battle.

Happy Memories

•Among my happiest memories of Saigon are those of visits to a small orphange not far from my quarters. Several of the younger soldiers in my office gave unstintingly of precious spare time and money to visit these children as frequently as possible. We became family and something like Santa Claus with our gifts of soap, toothbrushes and, of course, candy and chewing gum. They relished personal attentions — getting their fingernails cut, their hair shampooed and vying for a chance to ride us piggy-back. Soon after our first visits, our early evening and sometimes Sunday processions were noticed by South Korean and Australian soldiers quartered in the area. Several of them regularly joined us in our visits.

Cultural Encounters

•And there were encounters with a culture far different from ours — an interpreter in Gen. Westmoreland's office, a Buddhist monk, Thic Duong, who took me to out-of-the-way temples, invited me to attend his ritual-filled, exotic services. He in turn attended Protestant services with me. There was the time I was asked to be a representative to a day of celebration by Montagnards, the mountain tribes of Vietnam, at a gathering a few miles outside Saigon. As an honored guest, I was served barbecued monkey along with potent rice wine — not my idea of delicacies.

On Christmas Eve, 1965, Vietnamese, Americans, British and Chinese got together at the Vietnamese-American Cultural Center to sing Christmas songs in the center's courtyard. A tropical downpour did nothing to dampen the festive Christmas observation, but a zapper attack on a South Vietnamase military post near the center and a resultant blackout abruptly ended the affair. Those attending departed singing "Silent Night" in several languages while mortar and machine gun fire crackled in the air, and red tracer flares lighted the stormy sky.

Sad Memories

•There are the sad memories, too. A friend, a talented young Vietnamese captain who spoke fluent English and French and who dreamed of being a novelist after the war, once treated me to an evening of Chinese opera in Cholon. Instead of taking a taxi, we decided to walk back to our neighboring quarters. Unfortunately, one of those periodic night shootouts between South Vietnamese troopers and infiltrators broke out in a square just ahead of us, and there was gunfire to our rear. A Chinese tea merchant opened his shop door, pulled us inside. We had to spend an uncomfortable night hidden in the merchant's steamy loft. The old man and his wife insisted we could not safely get out into the streets until daybreak.

A week later the young captain, Nguyen Van Cho, was dead of a single sliver of shrapnel that entered his temple in an unguarded moment when he had his helmet off while on a jeep trip to Bien Hoa. That same week my roommate, Ralph Dolan, a quiet soldier with a fear of walking the streets of Saigon, ironically was seriously wounded in an attack while riding a Navy bus that ran from our quarters to downtown.

The Dead, Dying, Wounded

One clear morning in the dry season I was headed at an early hour to pick up an officer at his quarters in the Victoria Hotel. Fate had it I ran a little late. Three minutes before I reached the hotel, a suicide driver on a three-wheeled Lambretta crashed through a hail of Marine guard fire into the hotel's lobby. The explosion of the load of plastic took its toll of Americans and Vietnamese living in the 12-story building. The person I'd gone to pick up was trapped in his bathroom, clinging to the commode on the sixth floor, the floor gone from beneath him. He suffered painful cuts on his legs and buttocks. The real trauma was the grueling hot hours spent in pulling dead, dying, and wounded Vietnamese, including many children, from beneath the rubble of demolished small houses adjacent to the hotel.

Mistaken Attack

•The quarters in which 20 of us lived on Hai Ba Trung Street had on one side the Flamingo Bar, on the other, the home of a Vietnamese editor who published "The Observer," an English-language magazine. We had become accustomed to receiving threats that the bar, the editor's house and our quarters were marked for destruction. Almost comically, the attack that did eventually materialize, on New Year's Day 1966, was from a totally unexpected source. Some prankster set off firecrackers just as a convoy of Korean troops was passing along the street, headed for Tan San Nhut airport and the flight back home. The Koreans lost no time in thoroughly spraying the area with rifle fire. Fortunately, the only victim of that episode was a neighborhood pest, a yapping dog forever running up and down the streets barking at everything.

Beautiful Country

•Physically, Vietnam is a beautiful country. Outside Saigon, the countryside is a verdant land of green rice fields tended by patient farmers and plodding water buffalo; a market land of vegetable and flower plots; of banana plantations; all interspersed with villages in which stucco homes in pastel colors and simple, but pleasing huts of thatch nestle together. Saigon, too, had its measure of visual appeal — wide, tree-lined boulevards with elegant French-style houses set in spacious lawns behind massive walls (protected by barb wire or imbedded shards of broken glass along the top of the walls); small wayside shrines and large brilliantly colored temples; parks that were well maintained with greenery and flowers despite the war.

Saigon was then a city of startling contrasts. Not far from the showplaces of French origin were several small streams crowded shore to shore with makeshift huts of tin and old boats converted into living quarters. Here, refugees from the countryside lived in appalling conditions, eking out a living as best they could anywhere work could be found, returning at nightfall to share in the close family circle ties so important to the Vietnamese.

Saigon's sprawling Central Market in the mid-1960's was a showplace of bounty, a cross-section of the country's produce and arts — counters laden with native fruits and vegetables, big baskets of rice, tubs of fresh and dried fish, showcases of jewelry, jade and ivory carvings, lacquer and carved wood. Old medicine men surrounded by strange-looking concoctions in big jars, trays of needles and heating devices, squatted on squares of cloth, administering to patients who also squatted while being treated.

Connections Sustained

•My connections with Vietnam have been sustained by the fact that when I returned to the United States in the late summer of 1966, I brought back with me a young Vietnamese lad, Lu Van Trung, whom my wife and I adopted. After he finished high school at Rose High, Trung taught in the Army Language School at Fort Bliss, Texas, teaching Vietnamese to American servicemen and civilians going to Vietnam. There, he met and married a Vietnamese girl, Thai Thi Huyn Hoa, and they are the parents of three daughters and one son. After getting American citizenship, he served in the U.S. Army for 10 years before getting out last year and going into an occupation so dear to many Vietnamese, that of commercial fishing. Through my son and his wife I have occasional contact with a few old friends in Vietnam, usually in a circuitous route through contacts in Paris. But all too often attempts to contact friends who did not flee the country have been in vain.

Mental Scars

Ten years after the final days of American involvement in Vietnam, thousands of former American servicemen still bear the mental scars of the nightmarish situations they encountered plus the added bewilderment they suffered over the cold, sometimes hostile reception they received on their return to the United States. Public attitudes have changed somewhat since then, yet no measure of reversal in attitudes can completely erase the hurt of being looked upon as a person who somehow committed a terrible wrong by serving our country in that most traumatic of any American military involvement to date.

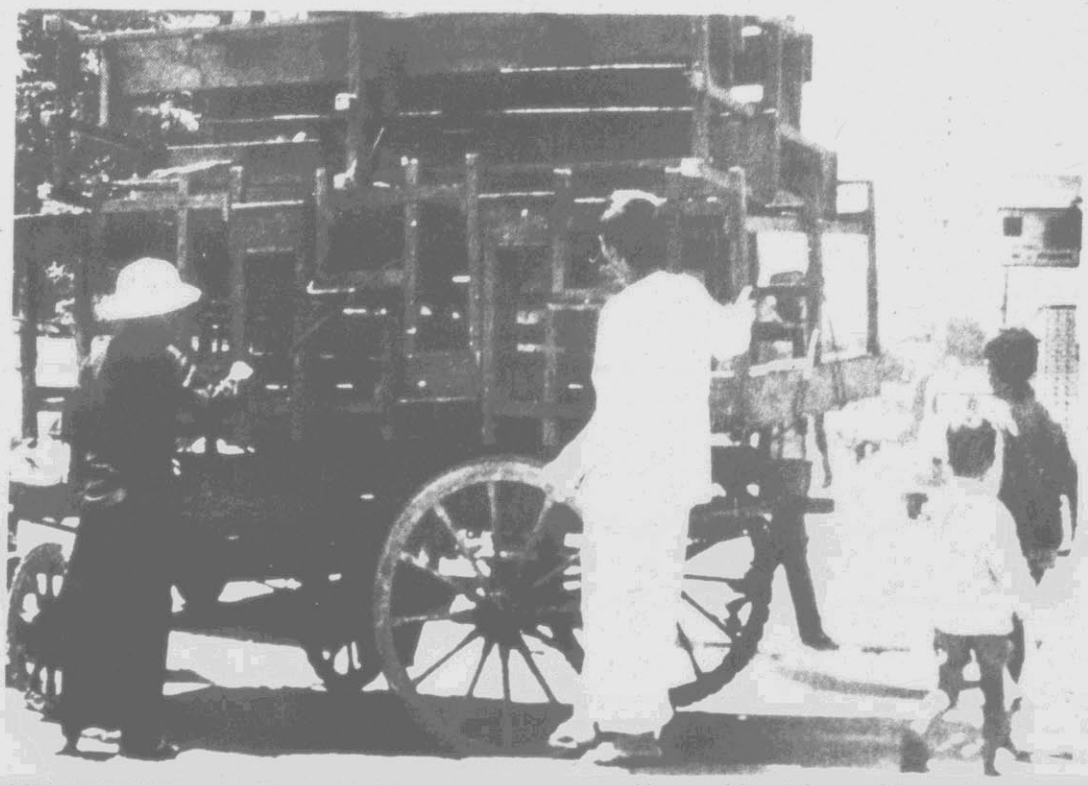
Suffering Continues

In Vietnam today, the anguish and suffering continues after more than 40 years of intermittent warfare — the Japanese invasion in World War II, the French war in the 1950s, followed by the costly, agonizing internal North-South conflict that still smoulders behind the facade of unification.

The economy is in shambles. Fear and distrust rules the action of many of the country's citizens. A substantial number of families have long been uprooted from traditional ancestral homes. Most live with the aching memory of loved ones lost, of others scattered over the face of the globe with little chance ever of reunion.

Hopefully, when the time comes to mark the 15th, 20th or 25th anniversary of the end of American involvement in Vietnam, some of the old wounds, both for Americans and Vietnamese, will have been healed, and for some there will be happier endings than what seems possible at this time.

CINDER BLOCKS . . . were used in construction of a small wayside temple in Cholon, the sister city of Saigon populated mainly by persons of Chinese descent. Whether big or small, Vietnamese and Chinese places of worship are customarily adorned with pots of greenery.



NEW ARRIVALS . . . An old man, left, his son, in white and two of several grandchildren were photographed unloading tables and chairs to place in a restaurant they were getting ready to open. For years, people from the countryside moved into Saigon seeking greater protection and hopefully better fortunes than was possible in the ravaged areas of the country.

Here's the Answer

By ANDY LANG

Q. — I have been fixing things for more than 40 years, but have always struggled to stretch new screening properly when putting it on an old wooden frame. Most of the time I do it fairly well, but I have found it a cinch since an art supply dealer gave me a tip recently. He suggested I buy what is called a canvas stretcher and merely use it for stretching mesh. He said he saw the device in a fix-it magazine while on a visit to New England, but even though he had stocked the canvas stretchers for many years in his store, he did not know it could be used for screens. I thought your readers might be interested in knowing about it.

A. — I'm sure they are. And so am I.

Q — My brother is buying his first house, and I helped him look for it. One of the things that surprised me was how many times a real estate broker said a house had three bathrooms only to find that one of the so-called bathrooms was just a toilet and a sink. Shouldn't a room have a bathtub or shower in it before it can be called a bathroom?

A. — Generally, yes, but people aren't that precise about their language these days. Some say "two rooms and a bath." Some say "two rooms and a bathroom." A few say "three rooms." Actually, lavatory is often used to mean "toilet," but a lavatory refers only to a room with facilities for washing, but now has come to mean such a room plus a toilet.

Q. — The tank ball in our old-fashioned tank fits the opening properly, but there is still a slight water leak into the bowl. What is causing this?

A. — Sounds like the valve seat needs steel wooling. Scour the rim of the seat with loose steel wool or one of the steely soap pads. If it has no effect and the old tank ball feels soft and without body, the chances are you need a new tank ball.

(Leaky faucets, balky toilet tanks, leaky pipes, tank condensation and noisy plumbing are among the subjects discussed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Simple Plumbing Repairs," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Future Relocations Are Made Easier By Purchasing Flexible Furniture

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Flexible furniture that fits into the space you have available right now and can be changed around in future homes: that's the contemporary ideal.

In seating, a variety of options offer this flexibility. Instead of a traditional sofa, you could opt for sectional or modular pieces — two terms for the same basic commodity.

Both are a series of single seats that can be put together to form sofas of almost any length and shape. By dividing the seating into its component parts, it becomes easier to rearrange the units or to move them to a different place, say decorating authorities. They are also lighter and less bulky, which makes for easier movement.

Those who expect to be relocating to different quarters from time to time and those who frequently must rearrange their furniture to accommodate different size gatherings are among the people who can benefit by choosing this more flexible form of seating over a traditional sofa or two loveseats.

But, although they fit well into contemporary lives, sectionals are actually a long-lived product. They have been available at least since the 1930s, according to Edward Wormley, a furniture designer who created his first sectional group in 1932. He says they immediately found favor with doctors who ordered them for their waiting rooms. But their versatility in smaller rooms made them welcome in the smaller homes that began to be built in the 1930s.

The first sectionals usually consisted of three pieces, says Wormley. There was a left-arm unit, a right-arm unit and a center armless section. The pieces were priced separately and the armless unit was less expensive.

The term modular came into play in the 1970s, recalls Leslie Flippo, an upholstered furniture industry executive. The industry borrowed it from the makers of wood furniture, who had begun selling modular wood cabinets and chests.

The idea was to make each piece the same depth and height and to employ the same detailing and finish so that consumers could buy as many as they wanted, stacking the wood pieces for even more storage capacity.

Whether the store calls them modular or sectional (the terms appear to be used interchangeably), seating that can be moved around easily and rearranged is extremely useful in most types of rooms, according to decorating authorities.

When selecting a particular modular group, opt for one that offers the most flexibility, suggests Flippo. One firm, for example (and it is fairly typical) has 20 differenct pieces in one of its modular groupings. Besides the armless, left and right sections in single, double and triple widths, there are ottomans without arms or back, curved and wedge-shaped pieces.

Together these variables enable a buyer to create a circular arrangement or to angle the seating in a variety of interesting configurations. Another useful option is that a sleep sofa can be included in one of the double or triple sections.

Modular and sectional seating costs more than a traditional sofa or two loveseats as a rule, since the greater number of individual pieces take longer to make up and use more materials. However, over the long run, the initial extra cost may lead to future savings because of the furniture's versatility.

For those seeking not only flexibility but who are also dealing with an unusual size room, another useful option is to seek seating sold by the inch. Several manufacturers allow a consumer to specify how long a sofa or sectional should be.

The possibility for this has always existed in custom seating, but now a number of mass-production upholstered furniture makers offer the option.

According to Flippo, whose firm Kay Lyn offers such a program, the pieces start at 27 inches and go up inch by inch.

No. 1006 — The Edgarton
Traditional With Covered Patio

By Jerry Bishop

Graceful columns define the front porch and blend with shuttered small-paned windows to create a picturesque facade for the Edgarton, a three bedroom home.

Covering only 1300 square feet of living area, the plan nonetheless manages to fuse a traditionally appealing exterior with no-waste floor plan styled for family living. Besides three bedrooms and two full baths, the design shows an open family kitchen, substantial living room, and covered patio.

Entry is prefaced by the front porch, added to evoke a sense of the past but totally useful for enjoying the evening breezes. Meeting current standards of convenience, the floor plan includes a tiled, closeted foyer which allows ready access to the large living room.

Beyond the living room is the family activity center, an open area that merges kitchen, dining area, and family room. Since the area is edged by a wood-burning fireplace, the room exhibits endless possibilities for decorating in an Early American vein to produce a warm, cozy family-kitchen. A pantry is included, and a convenient laudnry room borders the area.

Annexed by a set of sliding glass doors is the covered patio, a logical extension of the family room and a perfect spot for barbecues. The adjoining carport features an outdoor storage area with 60 square feet of space for hiding tools, toys and patio furniture.

ON THE HOUSE

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

As we get older, we find more and more circumstances beyond comprehension. Incidents, proceedings, actions, deeds, performances, even mere facts, seem outside reality.

We know something is so, but we don't understand it. How can a man get $2 million a year for playing a game? What do you mean that all those complicated figures are inside that little plastic chip? How can somebody walk on a surface 238,857 miles away?

For example, I have just read something that simply cannot be so. A few days after seeing a newspaper advertisement for a house costing $4 million, I heard about a house that was built and sold for $3,200. The price includes labor. It includes plumbing. It includes cooking equipment. It includes everything!

That was not a papier mache house, but a real, live, honest-to-goodness, two-story house with a parlor, a dining room, a kitchen, a spacious hall, a veranda and four bedrooms and a large bathroom upstairs. The words, "parlor and veranda," tip you off. This was a long time ago — more than 92 years ago, in fact. But it also had "a butler's pantry," so you know it wasn't made for just anybody.

It wasn't just any old house either. It had plaster walls throughout, a front door made of ash and glazed with plate glass, a finished room in the attic and space for two more, a full cellar and 9-foot ceilings.

All these details and considerably more about similarly priced houses were found in a book called "Suburban and Country Homes," a republication of a book originally published in 1893 by the William T. Comstock Co. of New York. It is one of many in Antiquity Reprints' series of 19th century American building studies. (Antiquity Reprints, P. O. Box 370, Rockville Centre, NY 11571. For information, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Included with the various designs of the late 1800s is a charming chapter called "Suggestions on House Building," by architect A. W. Cobb, charming not only because of the exquisite wording used by the gentleman but because of his forthright opinions and incisive comments, most of which have withstood the passage of time. Cobb pointed out:

"The most desirable lot for an all-the-year house in our 'temperate' clime is evidently one on a slope somewhere between southeast and southwest, with a shelter of trees or sharp rise of ground to the north or west: the whole contour giving such trend of surface water so as to insure a dry cellar. Our early colonial settlers, who had plenty of land to choose from, usually selected sites of this character for their dwellings. But in these present days when a rapidly-increasing population is gathering around great centres and when land values are higehr than they were in the colonial days, the lot-hunter of moderate means who wishes to locate within reach of his business must take the best of land that offers for the money, even though it may not slope to the sun, and even if it requires a rubble drain, with a proper free outlet, to insure a dry cellar."

But then, lest his advice be ill-taken, Cobb adds:

"Actual swampy land should be tabooed for residence purposes, unless it can be filled in to a proper grade."

Those who do not believe in unplanned residential buildings will find Cobb held their views a long time ago. He said:

"To harmonize the house with its surroundings, it is necessary to consider the aggregate of houses as a settlement, and their relations to each other. I wish to urge strongly here the necessity of taking this general view, because this matter is often lost sight of. An unjudicious building up of a once picturesque, sylvan neighborhood may in a few years transform it into a mere compact, systemless aggregate of heterogenous buildings. The very people who had been attracted to a place by its rural beauties may, by their heedless placing of houses, shops and stables, rob it of its charms. Ill-advised cutting of trees, blasting of moss-grown rocks, neglect in adopting uniform frontage lines and failure to reserve a choice tree procedure here and there for public parks, and other like methods of procedure, may effectively blight what could have been developed into a beautiful settlement."

Medical Supplies Need Safe Place

By REDBOOK
A Hearst Magazine

The bathroom medicine cabinet can be a cluttered and dangerous place and should be traded in for a new system of storing medical supplies.

The bathroom is fine for toothpaste, shampoo and beauty supplies, according to an article in the April issue of Redbook, but it is too damp and crowded for medicine.

Bathroom cabinets tend to be cluttered and confusing, mixing prescription and over-the-counter drugs, often housing unlabeled or outdated medication, sometimes in uncovered containers and non-sterile conditions.

The first step toward safe and sane medical supply storage is to create two medicine chests, according to pharmacy experts at the Food and Drug Administration Office of Public Affairs.

One box should contain only prescription drugs; the other devoted to nonprescription drugs and first aid supplies. Each box should contain clearly labeled compartments — fishing tackle boxes are easy to convert to this use.

In the prescription drug box, compartments should be labeled with the name of both the drug and the person for whom it was prescribed. Tape a list of contents to the lid of each box.

The best place to store medicine chests is a clothes or linen closet that is cool and dry — but make sure it does not contain moth crystals or insect repellent whose vapors might damage drugs.

Richard Penna, director of professional affairs for the American Pharmaceutical Association, offered a general guideline for what the well-stocked medicine chests should hold.

Drugs to have on hand include aspirin and-or acetaminophen, antacid, anti-bacterial topical medication, anti-diarrhea medication, antihistamines for allergy symptoms, antiseptic solutions such as iodine and hydrogen peroxide no stronger than 3 percent.

Also: burn ointment, calamine lotion, cough syrup, decongestant, an emetic such as syrup of ipecac to induce vomiting in case of accidental poisoning by a non-caustic substance, hydrocortisone cream, laxative, and petroleum jelly.

The medicine chest also should contain a list of emergency telephone numbers — the nearest hospital, an ambulance service, your doctor, pharmacy and local poison control center.

Return Visit

MARYSVILLE, Calif. (UPI) — Former Municipal Court Judge Donald Wahlberg will return to his old courtroom May 15 — as a defendant.

Yuba County sheriff's deputies arrested Wahlberg Wednesday on charges of knowingly receiving stolen property and aiding a fugitive, Sheriff Robert Day said.

Wahlberg, 50, was freed pending his arraignment May 15. He has been practicing law in the Yuba City-Marysville area since his defeat for re-election last November.

Q. What are some thornless blackberries suggested for North Carolina? (P.M., Catawba County)

A. "Dirksen" and "Hull" are recommended.

Q. Plants in my house don't thrive because the light level is so low. Besides installing special lighting, what can I do to increase the amount of light my plants receive? (J.H., Charlotte)

A. Re-position your plants so they can take maximum advantage of the natural and artificial light in your home. For example, you may have a place in your home that receives an adequate amount of sunlight for plants, but it is not convenient to have plants there. You may place plants there temporarily, perhaps while you are away during the day. At night, move the plants to an area of your home where they can be enjoyed. Some other things you can do include painting your rooms with white flat paint. While flat paint will reflect 75 percent or more of the light that strikes it. Mirrors or mirrorized walls will direct and distribute light in a dark room. Mirror tiles are readily available. In addition to spreading light more evenly throughout the room, mirrors will visually expand your garden. Open curtains or shades all the way. Keep your windows clean — dirty glass lets in less light. Keep your plants clean — washing the leaves of plants with lukewarm water removes dust and allows more light to reach the surface of the leaves. Selectively prune any large shrubs blocking windows to allow more light to penetrate.

GOREN BRIDGE

By CHARLES GOREN AND OMAR SHARIF

1983 Tribune Company Syndicate, Inc.

DEAR MR. GOREN

Q.—We had a major catastrophe on the following hand:

♡AQ7643 ◇Q ♣AKQJ52

We use weak two-bids, so I opened with an artificial forcing bid of two clubs. My left-hand opponent overcalled two spades, partner passed and right-hand opponent raised to four spades. I tried five hearts, and we played it there for down one. The tragedy is that we were cold for seven clubs. Where did we go wrong?—S.W., West Palm Beach, Fla.

A.—I sympathize with you—you fell victim to the one weakness of all systems that use a strong one club or two club opening bid. They are ill-equipped to handle powerful two-suited hands, especially where the opponents interfere.

Had you been playing old-fashioned strong two-bids, there would be no harm in opening two hearts. Now when the bidding reached four spades by your turn, you could safely venture five clubs. After your artificial two club bid, however, you were at the five-level and you had not yet shown one suit!

The solution is to open the hand one heart! I know that seems like a drastic underbid, but you can be sure that the auction won't end there. You can jump shift in clubs at your next turn to complete the description of your hand.

♠Q73 ♡J952 ◇K10653 ♣8

You suggested that the correct response to a one club opening bid was one diamond. I had always been taught that it is correct to respond in the major, rather than the minor. Why the difference in approach?—J.L., Detroit, Mich.

A.—The modern tendency is to respond up-the-line, i.e., you bid your cheapest suit first. That is especially true when the lower-ranking suit is five cards long and the higher only four cards.

By responding that way, you should not miss a fit in any suit. If you respond one diamond and partner has a four-card heart suit, he will bid it next. When you hold a weak hand, that has the additional advantage of making the stronger hand the declarer at the major-suit contract, with the weaker hand exposed in the dummy.

Naturally, the above recommendation does not apply when responder has two five-card suits. Then it is always correct to respond in the higher-ranking of the two, so you can rebid in the lower-ranking suit.

New Caribou Herd Started

LAKE LOUISE, Alaska (AP) — After a high-technology roundup and fly-in, biologists have transplanted caribou to Alaska's Kenai Peninsula, where the native herd was destroyed 80 years ago by market hunters.

Twenty eight caribou from south-central Alaska were transplanted to the peninsula this spring. Biologists believe the habitat on the peninsula southeast of Anchorage could support a population of 2,500 animals.

The caribou roundup near Lake Louise was a display of high-technology management in a relatively untouched wilderness setting.

Two helicopters and two spotter planes roamed the nearby black spruce forests looking for likely transplant candidates.

Once an animal went down from the tranquilizer, the helicopter returned, dropping off a two-man team to hobble the dazed but still conscious caribou, blindfold them and place them in a bag designed to hold the animals' heads erect.

The animals then were picked up by a helicopter and flown to the corral.

The animals' antlers were sawed off to prevent the caribou from injuring each other or their handlers. Unlike most members of the deer family, female caribou have antlers, although they generally are smaller than the males.

While the high-technology enabled the roundup to go perfectly, the inherent bureaucracy of the modern world took its toll.

The original plan was to handle the animals as little as possible. After their capture, they were to be mildly sedated and loaded into a pod slung beneath a giant military helicopter, designed to haul troops.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You want to make all kinds of changes, even in your philosophy of life, but it is best to stand firm now.

Colony Evidence Found

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — University of Florida archaeologists may have found the remains of the first successful European settlement in North America - the site colonized more than 400 years ago by Spanish sea captain Pedro Menendez.

"We knew that the fortifications Menendez and his men built were somewhere around here, but we didn't think we'd be lucky enough to put our first square right on top of the well that might have been in one of his forts," said Kathleen Deagan, the site's principal investigator and a curator of anthropology at Florida State Museum.

"The artifacts all date from 1500-1570. There's nothing we've found so far that eliminates the possibility that this is where Menendez first landed, but there are actually three possibilities," she said.

The first is that Ms. Deagan and the 10 students digging with her have unearthed an Indian village where the natives adopted a lot of Spanish customs and used Spanish items. "But we've found a lot of lead shot, and we know the Spanish never gave the Indians weapons," she said.

The second possibility is that it may be the site of a 1565 Spanish Catholic mission. "This would make it the oldest mission in North America where the first attempt was made to Christianize Indians.

"The other possibility is this is where Menendez landed in 1566. We know he stopped in an area near Hospital Creek, and there's Hospital Creek right over there," said Ms. Deagan, pointing to a nearby clump of woods.

So far excavators have found trade beads, rosary beads, brass buttons that appear to be from military uniforms, European and Indian pottery, Spanish glass, .65-caliber musket shot, nails and the bones of animals that were eaten. Everything found so far dates the site to the 1560s and 1570s.

Metairie Final Resting Place For 'Royalty'

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — It was one of the nation's top horse race tracks before the Civil War. Then two rich men, angry at being rejected for membership in the Jockey Club, bought the place and turned it into a cemetery.

At least, that how the story goes.

The history of Metairie Cemetery is full of tales like that. It also is full of "royalty," successful politicians, unsuccessful generals, classy granite work and lush landscaping.

Somewhere in the big sleep lies a Storyville madam, Josie Arlington, who was bound and determined to spend her death in the midst of the socially prominent who looked down their nose at her in life.

She had a splendid granite tomb raised. The highlight was a female figure appearing to knock at a door topped by two flames. It cost $8,000 — big money in those days. She was so pleased with it she threw a champagne dinner for everybody that had worked on it.

Alas, after she died three years later, her heirs sold the tomb.

"She was evicted, in other words," said Henry Gandolfo, 88, the man who knows so much about this place his words bring a city of the dead to life.

Josie did manage to wind up among the swells in Metairie Cemetery, though in less sumptuous facilities, and so did some of her "girls," Gandolfo said. But only three people know where they lie, he added, and they're not talking.

Gandolfo wrote "Metairie Cemetery, An Historical Memoir" a few years ago to put all this in print.

"We have the whole hierarchy of business, industry and society from the past 100 years right here," he says.

"Do you know there is more royalty in Metairie Cemetery than in Westminister Abbey? That's right. There aren't any kings in Westminister Abbey, anyway; most are second-rate poets. But last time I counted there were 51 kings of Carnival here, and there are about six more living who own plots."

A "king" of Carnival is the man who dons fancy silks and satins to ride at the head of the Rex parade, sipping champagne and waving a scepter over thunderous crowds in the climax of Mardi Gras and the Carnival season. The king of Carnival here is the top of the social pecking order.

Also in eternal sleep lie seven mayors of New Orleans, four chief justices of the state Supreme Court, a pride of Confederate generals and nine Louisiana governors.

The only black governor in the history of the state is among the nine: P.B.S. Pinchback, of the Reconstruction days, who bought his plot in 1884, before racial segregation was reimposed.

Gandolfo says Pinchback was buried "very quietly" in 1924 when cemetery policy was Caucasians only.

The president of the Confederacy, Jefferson Davis, who died in New Orleans in 1889, was a temporary resident. In 1893, his body was moved to Richmond, Va.

One of the most prominent tombs is a 60-foot-high monument for Mary Moriarty, whose Irish immigrant husband was determined she would have the biggest most impressive marker in Metairie.

"The granite arrived by rail, and there was no way to get it here, so he got the railroad to built a spur track out here alng the Basin Street Canal," said Gandolfo.

Four figures adorn the monument. The otten repeated story is that a taxicab driver, pointing out the monument to a tourist, said they were "Faith, Hope and Charity and Mrs. Moriarty." Gandolfo says the fourth figure actually represents Memory.

More recent tombs are less interesting, rather box-like structures laid out on a street plan. Gandolfo says standardization took place around the 1940s, when the cost of fancy dying increased considerably.

Even simple burial costs a packet at Metairie Cemetery. An enclosed plot is a minimum of $5,000. The least expensive, above-ground tombs run about $14,000 more.

Tombs must be of granite and only fresh flowers and greenery are allowed. Plastic flowers are verboten.

"I hope they will bury me free when I croak," Gandolfo jokes. Actually, his tomb is in the old section, and already chiseled with everything but the date.

The inscription is in French and Gandolfo has written out a list of the days of the week and the months in French for the guidance of the stoneworker so the final words won't be mis-chiseled.

"I'm not morbid, just careful," he said. "I accept death as a fact of life."

Refugee Finds A New Life In S. Carolina

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — It's a hot day and Nguyen Dinh Lan's wife brings in two bowls of ice-cold "che," a Vietnamese dish consisting of the juicy fruit of the longan tree and the crunchy seed of the lotus.

For years after he came to the United States in 1975, Lan put off getting U.S. citizenship. "I read in a book that you must forget all about your former country" before you can become an American citizen, he says.

But last year, the refugee living in Columbia cut his formal ties with his old country and started anew as an American. And Lan has helped other refugees in the state assimilate to their new environment.

Lan had a distinguished Army career before Saigon fell in April, 1975. He had been an artillery officer, a special forces officer, chief of staff of the National Police and a member of Premier Nguyen Cao Ky's special staff.

When his family fled Saigon, he was an army colonel. One son was in the navy, one in the air force and one in army intelligence.

Other family members escaped with their military kin. "We left Saigon by boat, went out into the ocean and met the U.S. fleet there," Lan recalled.

He and his family were taken to Guam, where he published a newsletter for new refugees. He was chosen for that job because he had edited the official military review in Vietnam.

By June 1975, one of his sons was at the University of South Carolina. The son urged his family to come join him, and they did. Lan arrived in the state with $100 in his pocket.

"At the time, there were very few Vietnamese in South Carolina," Lan said. "But we had no difficulty with the way of living here. When I come here, I have full freedom."

Family members worked in a restaurant. Lan saved money and, within three months, bought a new car. "In two more months, I bought a second new car. Before the end of the year, I bought a house." To get farther faster, the Lan family pooled their financial resources.

After about a month at the restaurant, Lan was put in charge of the state's new Indochinese refugee resettlement program, acting as a liaison between state agencies and refugees. He did that for more than two years, then worked briefly at the S.C. Employment Commission, helping refugees find work.

Lan spent two more years counseling refugees in the Indochinese Mental Health Project, an innovative state program to help refugees cope with the stress of a new culture.

"When the Vietnamese came here," Lan said, "They didn't have a mental problem, they had a sentimental problem."

"Very few families were as fortunate as mine. Most of them had to leave somebody behind. Almost every family was missing some of its members."

Many families were reunited, but there was guilt and longing for those left behind in Vietnam. Adjusting to a new culture and new jobs also was a formidable obstacle.

"Most of the Vietnamese refugees, when they came here, did not expect to get a job appropriate to what they had in Vietnam. They worked at the bottom level.

"The Vietnamese didn't know the language and customs well, and whatever work they could take, they would grab it," Lan said.

They also encountered problems in communicating with Americans. "The laws, regulations, customs — everything here is different," Lan said. "For that reason, the Vietnamese are constantly in a state of stress."

Lan said South Carolinians are "nicer" than Americans he met elsewhere, but he added that, in South Carolina, "it is hard for the Vietnamese to find jobs. Many are working as dishwashers in Chinese restaurants."

"The people who cannot live with the financial difficulty in this state, they move to another state. But many people consider the environment and acceptance here, and stay. Three or four Vietnamese doctors have come to this state, and the social acceptance is the reason why."

Death A Suicide

SANTA CLARA, Calif. (AP) — The death of Leonard M. Ross, a one-time television whiz kid who later served as an economic adviser under President Jimmy Carter, was an apparent suicide, police said Friday.

"At this point, it looks like it's an apparent suicide," said Santa Clara Police Capt. Robert Adair on Friday. Coroner's reports were pending.

Ross' family said he had been despondent recently, he added.

"He was unquestionably a genious," said Jesse Choper, dean of Boalt Hall law school at the University of California at Berkeley, where Ross taught for several years.

When Ross was 7, he gained national attention by passing a federal exam for a novice ham radio operator's license. At the age of 11, he won $164,000 on TV quiz shows with his answers to questions about the stock market.

He graduated from high school when he was 14 and earned a degree in economics from the University of California in Los Angeles.

He also received a law degree from Yale University and was the editor-in-chief of the Yale Law Review.

He was a teaching fellow at Harvard Law School in the early 1970s, a professor of law at Columbia Law School, and resigned about a year ago from a teaching post at Boalt Hall.

Gov. Jerry Brown appointed Ross to the state Public Utilities Commission in 1975, making him one of the youngest members of the commission created in 1911.

Ross had been living in Santa Clara, a couple of miles from the Capri Motel where he was found, Adair said. The motel manager said Ross was not a registered guest there.

IF YOU'D LIKE A NEW HOME IN THE CAROLINAS DESIGNED TO GIVE YOU DRAMATICALLY LOWER FUEL BILLS...

In most places, heating and air-conditioning costs are substantially lower than for comparable houses built to regular HUD minimum property standards.

What is a Thermal Crafted Home?

It's a home of any style—ranch, colonial, contemporary, you name it. But the builder has planned and constructed it with the aid of a sophisticated Owens-Corning computer-analysis system to reach a high degree of energy-efficiency.

Everything from levels of insulation and air infiltration, to size and location of windows, to home shape, size and even site orientation, is considered.

Ask your builder for a consumer information sheet with more details. Only the heating and cooling portion of utility bills are affected, and actual savings will vary. But you may find your monthly savings big enough to let you carry a larger mortgage—and buy more house—than you thought you could afford right now!

Today's Cryptoquip clue: F equals P

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Be Careful In Choosing A Lawyer

By TOWN & COUNTRY
A Hearst Magazine

Shop carefully for a lawyer because picking an attorney can be one of the most important decisions you will ever make.

The traditional method of finding a lawyer, according to an article in the May issue of Town & Country, is through recommendations from friends, relatives and business acquaintances.

Barry M. Gallagher, an Oakland, Calif., attorney and author, no longer recommends such services.

"I honestly don't think bar association recommendations are the best way to go," he said. "It sounds good in theory, but you can't tell if you've ended up with a lawyer who fought to be on the list simply because he didn't have enough business elsewhere."

The family lawyer is another possible source, but find out if you will have to pay a referral fee. He also may try to dissuade you from hiring a legal specialist. "He may not be inclined to send you elsewhere because he doesn't want to lose your business," Gallagher said.

The decision to hire a specialist may be tricky. A legal clinic or any good attorney can handle a simple will, for instance, but someone with numerous tax considerations might need a specialist in estate planning, probate or tax law.

"By devoting most of his practice to a limited area of the law, a specialist will often be more efficient," said Gallagher, author of "How to Hire a Lawyer: The Consumer's Guide to Good Counsel."

"Although his fees will be higher, often twice as much as a generalist's, a specialist can save you money because he will waste less time on your case."

Some states offer board certification in specialties such as criminal law, family law, workmen's compensation and taxation.

Once you have a list of recommendations, call several lawyers to ask about hourly fees and the cost of an initial consulation. Then arrange interviews to discuss your case.

Meet with several lawyers, then draw up a chart rating them according to your estimation of their competency, ability to work hard, honesty, fees. Do you feel comfortable with each lawyer? Can you communicate?

The Martindale-Hubbell Law Directory lists most U.S. lawyers by state, offering general information including law school, age and date of graduation.

Once you have chosen an attorney, make sure you understand his fee arrangement. Will he expect a retainer? Are fees hourly, flat or contingent? You should receive a monthly itemized bill.

The best defense against disappointment, concludes Town & Country, is a clear, up-front understanding between client and lawyer. For those who feel their attorney has been remiss in handling their case or has misused client funds, complain to the local bar association.

Two Big Winners

LANSING, Mich. (UPI) — It may be hard to convince the 1,800 residents of the town of Yale that lightning doesn't strike twice, especially after the community in northeast Michigan claimed its second Lotto jackpot winner of the year.

The latest is John E. Harrison, 46, produce manager at Yale's A&P store. He and his wife, Donna, picked up the first $125,036 installment on the $2,488,636 jackpot at Lottery offices late Wednesday.

"This proves that Lotto luck is like lightning," Lottery Commissioner Michael J. Carr said. "It can strike anytime and even in the same place."

Harrison, who has worked the same job nearly 30 years, said he would continue to work until all three of his children are in college.

Hitchcock Haunts Again In NBC Movie

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Twenty-five years ago, TV suspense anthologies had introductions that were as spooky as the episodes on the shows themselves. There was Rod Serling's terse "There is another dimension..." opening the "Twilight Zone"; "There is nothing wrong with your TV set. We are controlling transmission" intoned the announcer on "The Outer Limits." And then there was the chilliest of all: Alfred Hitchcock's "Gooood evening...," accompanied by spine-tingling music based on Gounod's "Funeral March of a Marionette."

From 1955 to 1965, viewers of "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" would be greeted by the rotund movie director, whose droll, clipped delivery turned this innocent salutation into one as desirable as an invitation to a beheading.

Although Hitchcock has been dead for four years, he'll be back — in living color — when NBC airs "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" on Sunday, May 5. The two-hour movie will use the original Hitchcock intros for the shows. Originally shot in black and white, the intros will be revitalized by the use of computer coloring.

The special, which may become a series next season, updates four classic dramas originally presented on Hitchcock's TV show. Included in the episodes are two women who starred in Hitchcock films: Kim Novak ("Vertigo") and Tippi Hedren ("The Birds," "Marnie").

The four episodes include "A Man from the South" in which a shadowy woman (Miss Novak), a mysterious man (John Huston), a waitress (Miss Hedren), a drifting gambler (Steven Bauer) and a down-on-her-luck woman (Melanie Griffith, Miss Hedren's daughter) meet up. The original 1960 episode starred Steve McQueen and Peter Lorre.

Ned Beatty stars in "Incident in a Small Jail." He plays a businessman who makes the mistake of picking up the wrong hitchhiker and breaking a traffic law in a small town which leads a vigilante mob to suspect him of murder.

Ned Beatty and Tippi Hedren are just two of the talents that star in "Alfred Hitchcock Presents" airing Sunday, May 5 on NBC. The special features four different episodes, two of which are remakes from Hitchcock's original TV series.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: How many children did Farrah Fawcett have when she was married to Lee Majors? — KATHERINE BUTLER, FAYETTEVILLE, N.C.

None! Lee and his angel Farrah were childless when their nine-year union ended in divorce in 1982. Majors does, however, have a 22-year-old son, Lee Jr., from an early marriage to his childhood sweetheart, on whom little information is available. Farrah, by the way, is now the proud mother of Redmond James O'Neal, who was born on Jan. 30, 1985. Redmond's father, Ryan O'Neal, now has a brood of four. His other children include 21-year-old Tatum and 20-year-old Griffin, born during Ryan's first marriage to actress Joanna Moore, and 17-year-old Patrick, from Ryan's second marriage to actress Leigh Taylor-Young. Although O'Neal has not yet tied the knot with Miss Fawcett, he did cut young Redmond's umbilical cord when he attended his birth.

Dear Michele: What ever happened to the three stars of the 'Mod Squad"? — MARION ELDRIGE, MIDDLETOWN, CONN.

All three cast members of this series, which ran on ABC from 1968-1973, are based on the West Coast. Michael Cole, who played Pete Cochran, has been seen recently as a guest star on occasional network fare. He also starred in the 1984 feature film "Nickel Mountain." Peggy Lipton, who played Julie Barnes, has been married to album producer Quincy Jones for the last 12 years, and is the mother of two daughters. Miss Lipton has remained in the shadow of her famous husband, and appears to relish the shade. She does write songs, however, and was co-writer on Frank Sinatra's hit "L.A. Is My Lady." Clarence Williams III, who played Linc Hayes, has remained the most active actor of the trio. Williams was featured in the Prince film "Purple Rain," and has appeared in several episodes of "T.J. Hooker" and "Hill Street Blues."

Dear Michele: Did Alec Baldwin, who plays Joshua on "Knots Landing," also once play the character Chip on the series? — WANDA SHULER, BOWMAN, S.C.

By Andrew J. Edelstein

You've heard the song — Lord knows you've heard it. You could not have missed it last month when thousands of radio stations across America aired it simultaneously on Good Friday. You've no doubt seen the video. You may have bought the LP, the book and heard the syndicated radio special. What else is there left for the mega-exposure of "We Are the World," the tune that serves to aid the African famine relief effort by USA for Africa, a gathering of 45 American pop and rock stars?

There is more. This month HBO airs a special, "USA for Africa: The Story of 'We Are the World.'" Without losing sight of the noble intentions behind the USA for Africa campaign, one has to wonder whether enough is enough.

"I don't think there's any danger of overexposure," says Betty Bitterman, HBO's vice president for music and variety programming. " It's hard to overexpose something with this kind of cause. People are not tired of watching the video and they're still buying the records. People want to know more about what went on."

HBO paid what Miss Bitterman describes as a "well-publicized" $2 million for the rights to air the special. The pay-cable network's licensing fee was donated to the USA for Africa campaign. "I never thought we were in a bidding war, but I believe we offered more than our competitors," she says.

Miss Bitterman explains that the special is not a documentary in the strictest sense. "We want to give the person watching it a sense of what it was like to have been there, since so few people were allowed into the recording session."

TV Chatter

After scoring high ratings during her search for her mother in "Lace," is it any wonder Phoebe Cates, who starred as Lili, is back this week (on ABC) searching for her daddy in "Lace II"? If this effort is as successful as the original "Lace," don't be surprised if there is a "Lace III" and a "Lace IV." There must be a few other family members Lili yearns to find.

Country-music fans will have to make a tough decision on Monday evening. Will it be part two of ABC's "Lace II" or NBC's live broadcast of "The 20th Annual Academy of Country Music Awards?" That show, hosted by Loretta Lynn, Glen Campbell and Janie Fricke, will feature more than 40 country stars and Hollywood personalities.

Tuesday night should pose no problem for single women. Tony Danza and Susan Lucci host an hourlong ABC special on "99 Ways to Attract the Right Man." Viewers will be given tips on where to go to meet Mr. Right and how to get him to fall in love with you.

If you weren't around 20 years ago to meet "Gidget" (played by Sandra Dee in the movies and Sally Field on TV), don't worry. Gidget and her husband, Jeff (a.k.a. Moon Doggie), return in a two-hour tele-film, "Gidget Now." Caryn Richman, who played on the daytime drama "Another World," has been cast as Gidget and Dean Butler, formerly of "Little House on the Prairie," will play Jeff.

"Dynasty's" Joan Collins, who is filming "Sins" in Paris, will not be the only TV star filming a movie while on hiatus from her regular series. Stephanie Zimbalist, Laura on "Remington Steele," has been signed to play the late songstress Karen Carpenter in a TV movie. Victoria Principal, Pam on "Dallas," has co-authored a script for a TV movie that she plans to produce titled "Scandal Kills," and "Knots Landing" star Kevin Dobson is co-producing and starring in a CBS-TV movie, "Waterfront '85."

"Newhart's" Peter Scolari will spend part of his hiatus in Italy. He is the first of many celebrities who will be filming their 'special acts' for the annual "Circus of the Stars" event currently taping in Rome. Peter's specialty? He will perform on a high wire while riding a unicycle and juggling.

Deborah Raffin Takes High Road To China

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — "Keep 'em guessing" is the name of actress Deborah Raffin's game. As "Lace II" airs on ABC this week, featuring Miss Raffin as the kidnapped mother of a teenage daughter (a brave role to tackle at the tender age of 31) she's starting work playing a public defender in the movie sequel, "Death Wish III."

After that, she zips off to New Zealand for personal appearances, returns briefly to her Beverly Hills home and then heads for China for a fourth encore as Hollywood's youngest representative to theworld's most populous nation.

Miss Raffin and her husband, Michael Viner, were first invited to Peking when her 1977 TV movie, "Nightmare in Badham County," became the most successful foreign film ever to play in Chinese theaters. It drew an estimated audience of 120 million paying an average of 5 cents each to see it.

China's nickel-a-ticket cinemas are the main reason few American movies are distributed there: If Americans paid the same prices, "Beverly Hills Cop," which just passed a gross of $200 million, would barely have recovered one-tenth of its production costs.

Miss Raffin's role as a cultural go-between has strengthened her resolve to persuade the big studios that they should let their films be seen behind the Bamboo Curtain. Each year she and Viner trek back to Peking with a new set of show-biz bigwigs in tow. This year they'll be accompanied by, among others, actor-producer Michael Douglas. Previous companions included former studio boss Sherry Lansing, best-selling author Sidney Sheldon and actress Lee Remick.

"There are dozens of American films which the Chinese would love to see, but they simply can't afford them," says Miss Raffin. "As an actress, I have never let financial considerations prevent me from accepting a role I really wanted to play. I think it's a shame that money has to be the issue in what could be a valuable exchange for both sides.

"Mainland China can't compete with Western markets, but if we would only let them see more of our films, it might enable our two countries to get to know each other better," she says.

Miss Raffin has twice been offered roles in Chinese films. She expects to be presented with more scripts when she arrives in Peking this summer. "I've always declined so far, and I promise you it has nothing whatever to do with money," she says. "I'm flattered that they want me, but until I at least learn to speak Chinese, I can't see myself pulling it off!"

Retton to host

This fall, Olympic gymnastics gold medalist Mary Lou Retton will host a series of four-minute programs Saturday mornings on ABC. They are designed to promote physical fitness for children.

Faulkner movie set

Jason Robards, Cybill Shepherd and Don Johnson will star in "Long Hot Summer," a four-hour NBC miniseries now in production for the 1985-86 season.

Based on William Faulkner's novel "The Hamlet" and two of his short stories, "Barn Burning" and "The Spotted Horses," the story focuses on a peaceful Southern hamlet run by a wealthy tyrant and his rebellious family.

Two Nelsons return

Ed Nelson, an original cast member of "Peyton Place," returned to reprise his role as Mike Rossi on the recently filmed NBC movie "Peyton Place: The Next Generation." True to the title, the movie will also feature Nelson's real-life son Chris as young intern James Rossi.

'Capitol' gain

Daytime actor Todd Curtis, who stars as Jordy Clegg in "Capitol," is also an enterprising young businessman. He recently sold his profitable limousine business and will reveal plans for an exciting new venture soon.

Rasslin' Grabs A Hold On Saturday Night

By Lorenzo Carcaterra

The matches used to be held in small arenas, in front of an odd assortment of town folk, hidden under the guise of sport. The names were Cowboy Bill Watts, Killer Kowalski, Bruno Sammartino and Gorilla Monsoon. The evening always ended with a lot of yelling, shouting and screaming. And a good time was had by all. It was, at its very best, blue-collar theater.

Now pro wrestling is a glitter event performed in front of millions, including rock, movie and TV stars. It has become the Rolling Stones on tour in tights. Muscles rippling, sweat pouring, bodies swaggering, fists landing on flesh, all caught with the camera's eye. It's big business and getting bigger. So far, it's still as much fun as it used to be.

This Saturday night, May 11, the "Saturday Night Live" crew takes a break and leaves the stage for Hulk Hogan, Rowdy Roddy Piper, the Iron Sheik and Nikolai Volkoff. For wrestling will enter an entirely new arena with "Saturday Night's Main Event," a 90-minute special on NBC starting at 11:30 p.m. (ET).

Vince McMahon, the guru of professional wrestling, will cohost the program. Mean Gene Okerlund will call the shots from ringside while Dick Ebersol, executive producer of "Saturday Night Live," will fill that same capacity with this mat match. The show will also offer viewers a wider glimpse of the carnival — interviews with the wrestlers; celebrities telling everyone why they love wrestling; clips of other matches; rock stars in the ring.

According to McMahon, "the equation of NBC's 'Saturday Night Live' and the World Wrestling Federation equals a body slam of intergalactic proportions." He's Mr. Subtle. Yes, wrestling has gone beyond sport now. It is the subject of philosophical reports, newsweekly articles and segments on the evening newscasts. It's a long way from Sunnyside Gardens and 3,000 people watching Bobo Brazil club Johnny Roz into submission without any sense of emotion or the dramatic. How long will it last? Hard to say. For as long as it does, until that loss of innocence happens and pro wrestling begins to take itself seriously, let's enjoy.

Andrea Evans Finds It's Good To Be Bad

By Connie Passalacqua

"They made me an offer I couldn't refuse," laughed Andrea Evans matter-of-factly. She was explaining why she moved back to New York from Hollywood to reassume the role of super-tart Tina Clayton on "One Life to Live." She had originated the role five years ago. "People would come up to me on the street and tell me they didn't like what was happening on the show since another actress had taken over the role. And I had tons of fun playing her, so why not?"

Miss Evans left the show to spend more time in Nashville with her then-husband Wayne Massey, a country-western singer and actor, whom she had met when he played troubadour Johnny Drummond on the soap. (The couple was divorced last year and he subsequently married country-western star Charly McClain.) Miss Evans then moved to California to assume the role of Patty Williams Abbott on "The Young and Restless." "Yes, Patty was very good and perfect and everyone dumped on her," she giggled. A few months after Patty was written off the show, Miss Evans said yes to a one-year contract on "OLTL." "It's a lot more fun being bad," she says.

Miss Evans returned to the show as Tina was becoming involved in a key story line. Tina was just about to discover that she was the illegitimate daughter of the late tycoon Victor Lord. This discovery brought out the latent schizophrenia of Lord's legitimate, aristocratic daughter Viki Buchanan (Erika Slezak), Tina's foster mother. Known only to the audience, Viki's alter-ego, sleazy Niki Smith, is now haunting the docks of Llanview. "In this situation there's no villain," says Miss Evans. "Tina only wants to claim what's hers. She doesn't know what's happening to Viki. She doesn't hate her. Tina's only out for herself."

Miss Evans feels that the selfish Tina has changed over the years. "She's matured. Even she admits she doesn't do the things she used to because she was younger then. I started playing her when I was very young, too. As I've grown up so has she. You can sympathize a lot with her, but on the other hand she's devious. I wouldn't want her as my best friend."

Miss Evans was raised in Downer's Grove, Ill., near Chicago. She got her start in acting with a small role in the film "The Fury," which was filmed near her home. Just before she returned to "OLTL," she had a cameo as a starlet in the CBS movie "Malice in Wonderland."

First award

Sandy Grossman has been named the recipient of the Directors Guild of America Award for Outstanding Sports Direction for his work on CBS Sports' broadcast of Super Bowl XVIII. It's the first time in the history of the prestigious awards that a sports broadcast and its director have been so honored.

KROGER PHARMACY

Some Customers Say...

They grocery shop at least once a week... Why not pick up your pharmacy needs at the same time. If you need a prescription filled, why not do your week's grocery shopping at the same time? It's a real convenience, and you're there every week.

It's the friendly professional service... A pharmacist who really cares about their needs... and they explain the drugs you're getting in everyday language.

It's the complete inventory of pharmacy and over the counter drugs they stock... They are so large they have it all.

It's the every day low prices... Why they can save hundreds of dollars a year over what they were paying at other neighborhood pharmacies.

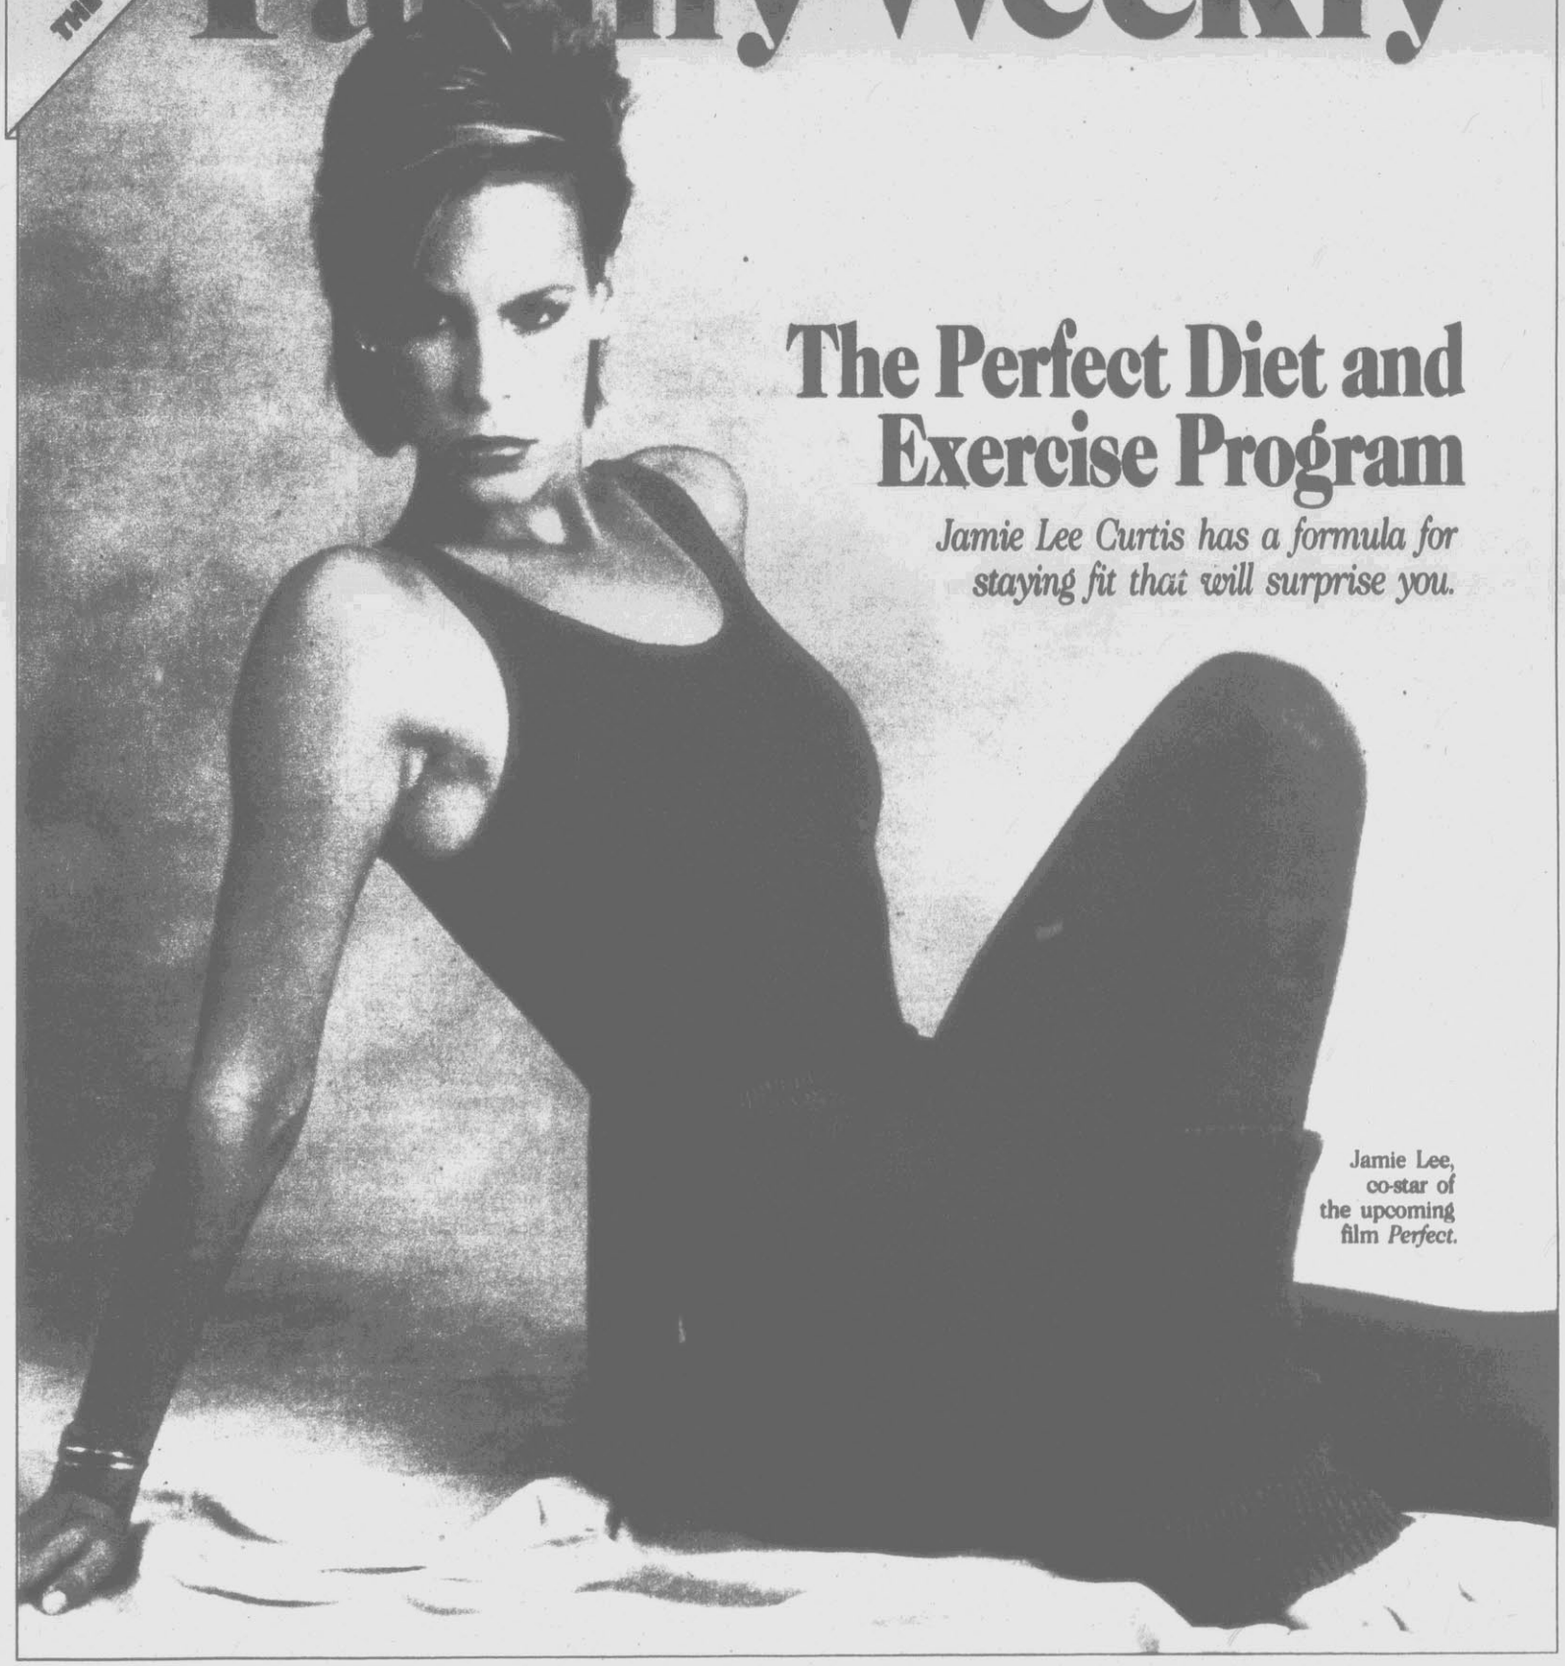
The Perfect Diet and Exercise Program

Jamie Lee Curtis has a formula for staying fit that will surprise you.



Jamie Lee, co-star of the upcoming film Perfect.

HEADLINERS

BEATTY AND KEATON: SAY CHEESE.

Based on the evidence of their recent Sunday brunch at the New York restaurant Serendipity 3, Warren Beatty and Diane Keaton are neither on the outs nor on diets. In just over an hour, the off-again-on-again pair — she in the usual baggy ensemble, he in the usual leather — put away a pimento cheese sandwich (share and share alike), a side dish of watercress, two orders of Irish soda bread, french toast, apricot juice, and decaffeinated coffee. In case there was any doubt about their identity, Mr. Beatty, who was wearing dark glasses, signed the bill "Warren and Diane."

□

Robert MacNeil, who (with his NewsHour cohort Jim Lehrer) will co-host a 12-week PBS series on the People's Republic of China titled The Heart of the Dragon starting this week, was surprised at the warm welcome given Westerners in China these days. There is, he says, "a hospitable attitude toward outside influences. I think the Americans will find the Chinese less exclusive in their ideology than they might have guessed."

□

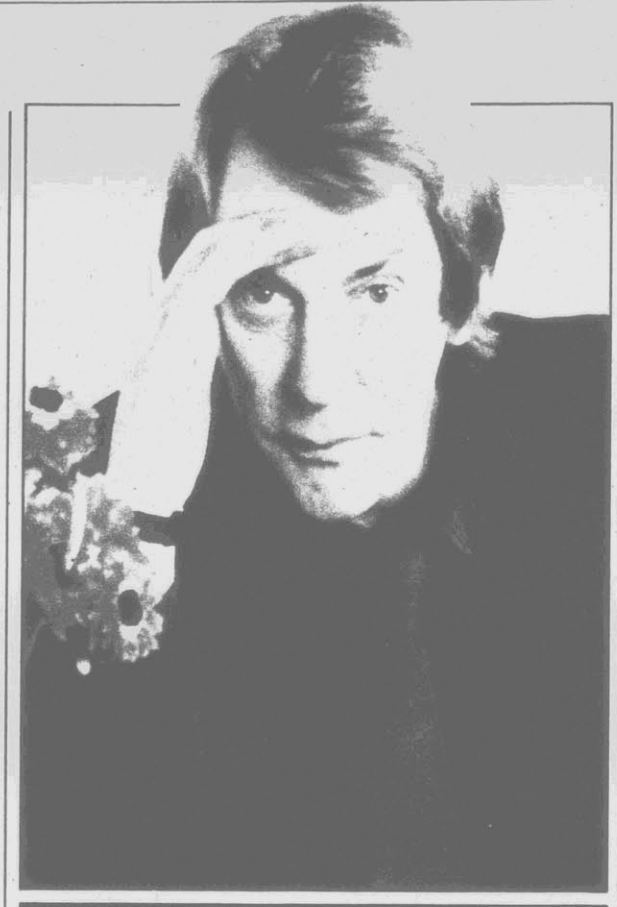
He's a liberal senator from Connecticut, and as the protagonist of the new spy potboiler The Double Man, Thomas Chandler is hot on the heels of Russian assassins. Sound like just the sort of high-profile assignment calculated to give a guy a shot at the presidency? You bet, though Chandler isn't running for the White House — he's running for the best-seller list. But at least one of his literary creators covets the job. The authors of The Double Man, senators Gary Hart (D-Colo.) and William S. Cohen (R-Me.), hatched the plot one day in the Senate dining room and, according to Capitol Hill sources, received a $100,000 advance from the William Morrow Co. Neither senator is new to the publishing world; Hart once wrote a well-received book called Right from the Start, about his experiences as George McGovern's 1972 presidential campaign manager, and A New Democracy, a blueprint of his political views. Cohen is the author of a volume of poetry titled Of Sons and Seasons. Senator Hart, by the way, keeps getting younger. The William Morrow catalog listing the book gives his birth year as 1937, which doesn't square with court records indicating that Gary Hartpence was born in 1936. How old will he be in 1988?

HART: TOMORROW

THE REDGRAVES: MODERATE PARENTS

□

"How are you raising your children?" W.J. of Niagara Falls, N.Y., writes to ask Lynn Redgrave. "Not permissively and not strictly," hedges the actress. "Somewhere in the middle. Child-rearing has changed a lot since my own childhood. When I was a kid, meals took place at the same time each day. Things are much less planned with my husband John and me, and we take each day as it comes. When my children were younger, bad behavior was punished with early bedtimes, which they hated. Now the punishment is that they aren't allowed to do something they badly want to do."



SUTHERLAND: WHO, ME SEXY?

He's been married twice, was involved with Jane Fonda, has lived with French Canadian actress Francine Racette for 12 years, has twins by his second wife and three children by Racette, but Donald Sutherland doesn't exactly consider himself catnip to women. "Me sexy? Attractive to women? Ha," he scoffs. "All I can say is, 'Where were they when I needed them?' I've never been a womanizer," he adds. "I may have been around in the '60s, but I sure wasn't part of all the promiscuity. When I've had a girlfriend I've stuck to her. I may be unattractive, but I try as hard as I can to be honest in relationships." Every one of them.

□

Some composers need just the right climate, just the right atmosphere, just the right level of silence before a song can be born. Not Lacy J. Dalton. "I was having a fight with my boyfriend on the way to the airport," explains the country star, "and as we fought, a melody and lyrics began flowing in my mind." The song that was born out of a tempest? Whispering.

DALTON: FIGHT SONG.

Reasonably Perfect

Keeping exercise in perspective • By Jamie Lee Curtis as told to Bill Moseley

When I met with actress Jamie Lee Curtis in the lower Manhattan co-op she shares with her husband (then fiance), Christopher Guest, of Saturday Night Live fame, she was dressed casually in blue jeans and a white dress shirt. She seemed to have the world on a string. And why not? The daughter of Janet Leigh and Tony Curtis had long since shed her "scream queen" image — acquired as she outran a host of psycho killers in Halloween, Terror Train, Prom Night and The Fog — and had moved up to meatier roles in Trading Places; Grandview, U.S.A.; and Love Letters. The day of our interview was exactly 13 days before Jamie and Christopher would tie the knot earlier this year in Los Angeles, but Curtis was remarkably unruffled. Perhaps because she had just finished shooting the movie Perfect, with John Travolta, several weeks earlier. While Jamie talked about the positive changes that had taken place in her life since she played the part of Jesse Wilson, an aerobics instructor in a mythical Los Angeles fitness club, she insisted that she is not — repeat, not — Jane Fonda, but merely an actress who takes good care of herself. Her so-called "transformation," she declared, was of a more internal nature, unlike that of Robert DeNiro, who gained 30 pounds for his part in Raging Bull, or even that of Travolta, her co-star, who underwent an intensive body-building program for Stayin' Alive. At the end of our interview, Jamie couldn't decide whether to go to a tanning salon to prepare for her wedding or just take a bath. As I left, I could hear the water running in the tub. It was in keeping with what Jamie had to say.

By Jamie Lee Curtis

To get the part of Jessica Taylor Wilson in the movie Perfect, I went in and sold myself as being part of the aerobics movement. I had done aerobics, but I'd always gotten by with the minimum. I was never a fanatic, working out five times a day. I hadn't modified my diet in five or six years; I still smoked, still drank liquor — not a lot, but enough so that I viewed exercise as something I had to do to stay in reasonably good shape. Then I got the movie.

"Jesse Wilson" is not a dancer who became an aerobics teacher; she was an athlete, an Olympic swimmer. She was on the Olympic team in 1980, the year of the boycott. So I had to look like an athlete in addition to learning how to teach aerobics. I was walking a fine line because I wanted to look a certain way, but I didn't want publicity about my "transformation." I don't look that different now. I do feel different. I'm stronger, leaner. But I didn't want to look like a swimmer. Swimmers are massive.

Athletes have what is called "thin skin." Their fat content is very low because of the amount of exercise [they do], their circulation, and the kind of diet they're on. I wanted to look like that, so I cut out all animal fats. I went on a modified version of the Pritikin Diet. That's what I'm told; I never read the book. I have been approached by someone wanting to do a book about my health and exercise tips, but I said no. I have very specific ideas about the

Exercise Plan

Monday — Saturday

- 6:30 a.m. — Wake up.
- 7:00 a.m. — A light, non-aerobic workout with weights, alternating upper and lower body, 20-30 minutes. I always start with 160 sit-ups (4 sets of 40) with my back flat on the floor, legs over a bench. With the leg workout I do extensions, curls and squats, and I lean against a wall (like sitting in a chair) for 1-3 minutes. The upper body work consists of bench presses, pull-downs for back and shoulders, and free-weight exercises for biceps, triceps and pectorals. All exercises are at low weights in three sets of 12-15 repetitions.
- Sleepy Time around 9 or 10 a.m.
- I walk whenever I can. I have a lot of energy and use it all day. Some people would consider me hyper or nervous. I am just happy and energetic. Put it this way: I sleep very well after a normal day.
- I do take exercise classes three days a week for an hour and 15 minutes. It is a very strenuous class designed to burn fat and tone muscle. It isolates specific body parts and is very tough. □

Diet

The key word is moderation

Breakfast

Fresh orange juice, shredded wheat or granola with skim milk and a banana, ½ grapefruit or cantaloupe, coffee with cream (yes, I like cream in my coffee) and sugar.

Lunch

Salads or soup

Dinner

Caesar salad
Soup
Broiled chicken or fish
Pasta (don't use much oil or butter)

Avoid

GETTING PERSONAL WITH

JOHN D. MACDONALD

UNRAVELING THE MYSTERIES OF AUTHORSHIP

John D. MacDonald, the suspense writer whose trademark is the Travis McGee series, attributes the popularity of his books to the nature of his stories: "I'm not interested in who but why. It's psychological depth that I'm working toward." In MacDonald's latest novel, The Lonely Silver Rain (Knopf), Travis McGee takes on a job for an old friend, a seemingly simple assignment for a pro like McGee, but the job turns into a nightmare in the treacherous world of south Florida's drug wars. For once, McGee becomes the quarry. MacDonald has published 71 novels, 5 nonfiction works, and more than 500 magazine stories. His books have sold 75 million copies worldwide. MacDonald and his wife live in Sarasota, Fla., where he was interviewed for FAMILY WEEKLY by Mark W. MacNamara.

MacNamara: Why do we love suspense novels?
MacDonald: The reader always wants to know what happens next, whether he's reading The Brothers Karamazov, David Copperfield or Hemingway. If what happens next is purely physical, then you've got Mickey Spillane's Mike Hammer shooting his initials in somebody's midsection. If what happens is spiritual, maybe you're reading biblical chapters to find out what happened with Moses and the Red Sea. If it's intellectual, you're reading to find out maybe whether they are going to discover a cure for herpes. What happens next is the thing that keeps people reading, and the more important the next [thing is], then the more important the work is.

Q: Are yours great books?
MacDonald: The people that I know who write who are terribly concerned with their posthumous reputation are the people least likely to have any. I concentrate on trying to entertain the people reading the books, and if I entertain them, if I can take them out of the life they are in and move them into my environment in the novel for a couple or three hours, mission accomplished, good, that's what I want to do. I don't want to patronize them; I don't want to give them some simplistic junk. I want to have them concerned about the people they're reading about and about the world those people live in.

Q: Are you trying to change them in any way?
MacDonald: I have, let's say, certain moral values and standards that cannot help but appear in my books. I am, in a sense, Calvinistic. I think that the worst that any of us can do is hurt someone else unnecessarily, maybe just to prove that we've got the muscle to hurt them, to hurt them emotionally, to hurt their image of themselves. That to me is sin No. 1, and if that shows through in the books, if I seem to be trying to promote that as a way of life, and if a few people could be moved by it, OK.

Q: What books do you read?
MacDonald: I would say that probably over half my reading is in non-fiction, but of the fiction I read, there are only a few who are tilling the same soil I am.

Q: Such as?
MacDonald: Elmore Leonard. And Robert Parker and Ross Thomas. Those three I think are the outstanding contemporary suspense novel people.

Q: How about people like Robert Ludlum?
MacDonald: No. Robert Ludlum, I think he's got a tin ear. He doesn't write good prose. John LeCarre writes good prose. Robert Ludlum plods along in the same kind of dreary style as Leon Uris. You can cover half a page and read the top half and tell exactly what the words are going to be on the bottom. There's no surprise, there's no poetry, there's no magic. He's got a great sense of story, and you can keep a work and a career going with a great sense of story, but it doesn't keep you from being guilty of having a tin ear. A tin ear usually results from a person not having read enough during his or her youth.

Q: If you had to commit a white collar crime . . .
MacDonald: In other words, all my morals fell in tatters around me. . .

Q: Exactly . . .
MacDonald: I think I would sell imaginary tax shelters to doctors. . . . I'd go up to maybe western Pennsylvania. I'd have to start with a tiny bit of capital, enough to take an option on a defunct kind of coal mine, one of those little one- or two-man operations, then I'd get some beautiful literature printed, and then I'd come down and I'd go to Orlando, Fla., and to Miami, and Ft. Pierce and Sarasota, and I would sell my private tax shelter of a great coal mine in western Pennsylvania to a bunch of urologists. It would be the easiest, safest way to run a con that I know of. Doctors are notoriously vulnerable, and doctors also hate to pay taxes on the money they make, so if you take those two things together, it would be like walking into a pasture and shooting sheep.

Dorothy Prentiss MacDonald

Q: How do you get your plots?
MacDonald: I get them everywhere. Analogy? You've got a big cauldron in the back of your head, like a big bubbling stew, and everything that's ever happened to you is in there, everything you've read, seen, touched or believed — everything is in that cauldron. When two things can be related, then they sort of, let's say, agglutinate and float up to the top of the stew where you can skim them off, and wow, there's an idea.

Q: How did you get the name Travis McGee?
MacDonald: He originally started as Dallas McGee in 1963, but then Kennedy was assassinated in Dallas, so by the time the first book came out in 1964 he was Travis. I had a hell of a time finding something that seemed to me to work as well as Dallas McGee. I thought that was a nice name. Then [author] McKinley Cantor, now dead, he suggested I peruse a list of Air Force bases. He said they had some very nice names. So I found Travis base in California. So Travis McGee he became.

Q: How has your work changed over the years?
MacDonald: I think I'm simplifying. I'm trying to keep myself further out of it. And trying to get further away from the trite, the cliché. The more amateur a writer is, the more he constantly intrudes his presence on the reader's awareness. I'm trying to do clean, tight prose that isn't self-conscious.

Q: Your greatest work is still to come?
MacDonald: I think that everything I've done is sort of like one long novel and I'm just adding pieces on it. I don't think in terms of greatest, or best, or lasting or whatnot. I think in terms of what I'm about to do next and trying to make it as good as I can.

YOUR HEALTH

WARDING OFF ILLNESS: IT HELPS TO HAVE HOPE

By Ellen Kunes

In 1964, longtime Saturday Review editor Norman Cousins overcame the rare and sometimes fatal degenerative disease ankylosing spondylitis by combining high doses of vitamin C with plenty of hope, laughter, and a great will to live. More recently, he survived a massive heart attack, in part, he believes, because he was able to "block" what he felt were the damaging physical effects of panic and depression with hope, faith and confidence in his ability to stay alive.

Can such positive emotions really help us to overcome illness and stay healthy? According to new research, having the ability to hope may indeed contribute to our physical — as well as our mental — well-being.

With a series of studies, Dr. Shlomo Breznitz, Ph.D., director of the Center for the Study of Psychological Stress at the University of Haifa in Israel and also a visiting scientist at the National Institute of Mental Health, is working to prove that having a "realistic" hope can lead to physiological changes that improve the body's resistance to illness.

Breznitz sent four groups of Israeli soldiers on the same long, fast-paced march. Each group was given different information about how long the march would be.

During the march, all the soldiers were tested for the amounts of prolactin and cortisol — hormones released in response to stress and anxiety — in their blood. Not surprisingly, Breznitz found that the group of soldiers who finished the hike with the lowest levels of these stress hormones in their blood were the ones who were told exactly how long their march would be and, at regular intervals, how much farther they had to go. Apparently, knowing that the end was in sight made the men feel hopeful and lowered their stress levels. As a result, all were able to finish the hike.

The group of soldiers who fared the worst — and whose stress hormone levels were the highest — had been told to prepare for a long march but were given no idea of how far they would have to go. With no end in sight (and therefore not much hope), many of the men became discouraged and dropped out.

Says Breznitz, "Telling a person that he's getting closer and closer to finishing a task — in other words, giving him hope — can produce a positive physical effect on the body, such as lowering stress levels."

Breznitz is also trying to determine whether having hope can promote the release of endorphins, the body's own painkilling chemical. In one study where subjects had to put their hands into a vat of freezing-cold water, those who knew exactly how long they had to keep their hands submerged had a much easier time bearing the pain of the cold water than did those who didn't know how long the test would last. Once again, those who had something positive to hope for suffered less physical stress and perhaps less pain.

This doesn't mean that wishful thinking can cure a seriously ill person. Breznitz admits that you've got to "dream the possible dream."

He offers the example of a man who has been told he only has a few months to live. "Let's say he has a daughter who is three months pregnant, and he decides he's going to be around to see his new grandchild. That's a realistic goal — one that his hopeful thoughts just might help him to reach."

Cousins, 69, now a professor of medical humanities at UCLA and feeling healthy enough to play 18 holes of golf and four sets of tennis on a recent Sunday, sums it up this way: "Hope represents an antidote to the negative emotions, such as panic and depression, which can be so damaging. What you have to remember is that you're not totally helpless in any encounter with illness. Don't deny the diagnosis, but don't accept the verdict that goes with it . . . refuse to accept the death sentence. Of course, you need to have confidence in your doctor's abilities, but you must have confidence in yourself and in your ability to survive, as well." FW

GIVING MARRIAGE A FIGHTING CHANCE

A number of our couples talked about one particular method they use to avoid a buildup of bad feelings — they don't go to bed while they're still mad. A husband of 26 years said: "Early on, we decided to never go to bed with unresolved conflicts. We lost a lot of sleep! Seriously, we talk out instead of walk out." On an even more positive note, a spouse of 34 years said that not

Happily married couples do not practice total openness with each other. They do not share their every feeling, because they know that some of those feelings are only transitory. They do not share every thought, because they know that some of those thoughts come to them in moments of hurt and anger. They communicate without ceasing, but not without selectivity.

Be flexible and willing to compromise. Our happily married couples combine accommodation and compromise as styles of conflict. They give in when they promise, a willingness to forego the 50-50 ideal in order to meet the needs of the other.

Use conflict to attack problems, not your spouse. This is fundamental, and our respondents suggest two things to keep the conflict focused on problems. One is to define the conflict as a disagreement over some issue rather than as a personal attack. Even if your mate attacks something you do or say, you must recognize the difference between an attack on some habit and an attack on you as a person. When you do this, you can more easily do the second thing that happily married people suggest: resist the temptation to hurt wife uses this method: "It is important to continue to let your mate know that you still love him even though you differ with him in some area. When we are involved in some kind of a difference, I try to focus on all my husband's good points, rather than his negative ones. I find this immensely helpful in resolving differences."

When conflict occurs, then, you should not regard it as a sign that your marriage is deteriorating or that you have made a mistake. On the contrary, view conflict like those in happy, enduring marriages — as a challenge that can actually enhance and solidify your relationship if you engage in "good fight

THE SEXES

GIVING MARRIAGE A FIGHTING CHANCE

By Jeanette C. Lauer, Ph.D., and Robert H. Lauer, Ph.D.

When it comes to the subject of couples and quarreling, the most important question is not whether happy couples fight. They do. Nor is the most important question why happy couples fight. They fight for some of the same reasons unhappy couples do. They are individuals who cannot possibly agree on everything, whether it's money or children or recreation preferences.

The most important question is how they fight, for that is a clue to why they are happy. These are some of the conclusions to emerge from our recent survey of 300 couples who have been happily married for anywhere from 15 to 50 years.

How, in the midst of all the marriages that are falling apart, did they manage to stay happily united for so many years? Long-term, happily married couples make conflict a creative force in their marriages. But they stress over and over again that it is important to fight a "good fight," to fight according to rules that make both partners eventual winners.

What are the rules of good fighting? One important principle is: maintain your perspective. Everything is just not worth fighting about. The happy couples in our sample distinguish between those issues that are trivial and those that must be resolved through conflict. They save their fighting energy for issues that are really important. Be careful with this guideline. If something really bothers you, you should thrash it out with your spouse. On the other hand, you need not and should not fight about every difference. In the course of getting acquainted with a couple who had been married for more than 20 years, we explored various topics. When we happened to mention a controversial social issue, however, the man said: "Phyllis and I don't talk about that. We disagree on it, so we just don't discuss it." The couple had decided that the issue was not as important as their relationship, even though both had strong feelings about it.

Another guideline is to avoid festering resentment. A number of our couples talked about one particular method they use to avoid a buildup of bad feelings — they don't go to bed while they're still mad. A husband of 26 years said: "Early on, we decided to never go to bed with unresolved conflicts. We lost a lot of sleep! Seriously, we talk out instead of walk out." On an even more positive note, a spouse of 34 years said that not only should you not go to bed angry, but you should close each day with an expression of affection: "Regardless of what garbage you've been through, take and hold each other close and give thanks that 'here's someone who wants me.'"

Some people, in fact, have great difficulty in sharing their feelings and may even require professional help. This is a sad truth for some couples. But often a husband or wife can help his or her spouse overcome the reluctance to share feelings. If your mate has difficulty, try saying such things as "You seem angry today. Is anything bothering you?" or "It is important to me to know how you feel about this matter."

Communication must involve both an active giving and an active listening. We tend to put most of our energies into making sure the other person hears and understands us. To actively listen requires giving the other person full opportunity to express himself or herself and also to strive to understand what the other is saying. One wife told us she uses the technique of rephrasing what her husband says during an argument and asking if that is what he means, to check if she really understands his point.

Effective communication also requires a certain calmness. Some therapists recommend that partners freely vent their anger with each other. Others, however, point out that while expressing hostility in a therapist's office may be helpful to an individual, it does not necessarily follow that a scene of rage will benefit a family. Our couples side firmly with the latter view. Nearly all of them feel that the more intense your emotions, the more likely it is that the conflict will be destructive. One spouse suggests: "Discuss your problems in a normal voice. The first person who raises his or her voice should stop. Return after a short period of time. Start again."

Happily married couples do not practice total openness with each other. They do not share their every feeling, because they know that some of those feelings are only transitory. They do not share every thought, because they know that some of those thoughts come to them in moments of hurt and anger. They communicate without ceasing, but not without selectivity.

Be flexible and willing to compromise. Our happily married couples combine accommodation and compromise as styles of conflict. They give in when they do not regard the issue as important and willingly compromise when the issue is one that matters more to them. They do not view compromise as surrender, but rather as the only realistic way to handle differences.

Compromise implies an equal amount of "give" by both parties. It was something of a surprise, therefore, to hear our couples emphasize the point that you must sometimes give more than 50 percent. There are times when one of the partners may be under particular stress or have a special need. The appropriate course then may be for one mate to give more than he or she receives. This is the "second mile" compromise, a willingness to forego the 50-50 ideal in order to meet the needs of the other.

Use conflict to attack problems, not your spouse. This is fundamental, and our respondents suggest two things to keep the conflict focused on problems. One is to define the conflict as a disagreement over some issue rather than as a personal attack. Even if your mate attacks something you do or say, you must recognize the difference between an attack on some habit and an attack on you as a person. When you do this, you can more easily do the second thing that happily married people suggest: resist the temptation to hurt your mate. Our couples are particularly emphatic about the need to avoid an "insult session," as one called it. They are sensitive about the need to avoid saying or doing things they will later regret. No matter how angry you are, no matter how intense the conflict, warned a husband of 27 years, you must "always add to her self-esteem. Never tear her down." When conflict degenerates from an attack on an issue to an attack on a person, it leaves scars that are difficult to heal.

The final guideline for constructive conflict is keep loving while you are fighting. Our couples agree that you can love and fight at the same time. One wife uses this method: "It is important to continue to let your mate know that you still love him even though you differ with him in some area. When we are involved in some kind of a difference, I try to focus on all my husband's good points, rather than his negative ones. I find this immensely helpful in resolving differences."

When conflict occurs, then, you should not regard it as a sign that your marriage is deteriorating or that you have made a mistake. On the contrary, view conflict like those in happy, enduring marriages — as a challenge that can actually enhance and solidify your relationship if you engage in "good fighting." If you feel that you and your mate are having too many arguments or that they have not enhanced your relationship, recall as many of them as you can and analyze them in terms of the guidelines listed above.

Good fighting always involves a bit of hard work. But it's worth the effort. As one of the women in our sample said: "Do we fight? Of course we fight. That's because our marriage is worth fighting for." FW

On a physical level, I wanted to get as strong as possible to do the movie and look like an athlete. But there was a whole emotional life to the character. It's hard for me because I'm going to be asked a lot of questions about this culture. I am in very good shape: I don't smoke; I don't drink; I don't do any drugs. I'm very happy, very healthy, and yes, I've modified my diet completely, and I plan to stay on it, but these are personal choices. I certainly did it for the movie, but I can sense that I'm going to be fighting the battle against having it detract from the emotional life of the character.

The movie, based on a magazine article by writer Aaron Latham, is soft, sad, and very emotional. It's not like, "Hi, my name is Bobbi. I'm your aerobics teacher." I think they'll sell the movie as a love story. It's not at all about John and Jamie jumping around the aerobics room. John Travolta plays a serious journalist who wears suits and never works out. The title of the movie refers to the First Amendment: life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness — everyone's right to be perfect.

What's great about this new wave of exercise consciousness sweeping the country is that people are becoming more aware of their bodies, what they put into them. But on the other hand, people are striving for a perfection that is unattainable and dangerous. Where do you stop? Where do you draw the line between what is healthy and what is manic?

There's a very nice group of people that diet and exercise have made feel better about themselves, which has made their relationships better, their work better. I'm one of them. The fact that I am feeling better about myself has improved my relationships with my husband and my friends. But there are masses of people who have taken it, like anything popular, too far. Everybody's got to take a deep breath, have an ice-cream cone, and think about it! Instead of having a drink, have an ice-cream cone. Once in a while it's OK.

I work out most every morning. Chris and I work out in the gym on top of our building in New York. Four times a week, nothing heavy, just three sets of twelve with light weights. I get a little sweaty in the morning, take a shower, and I feel good. Four times a week I get my exercise out of the way in the morning, then I can go on [with] my day.

I like working out at home because there you're really doing it for you, for the way you feel. The big gyms are fine, too, for people who can't afford the equipment.

It's very important that people examine why they're working out. Are they doing it to get more dates with a better-looking body? Nine times out of ten that won't necessarily happen. Are they doing it to try to look better than someone else? That kind of competitiveness isn't healthy. Where does it get you? If you're doing it to feel better, walk faster, feel prettier or more handsome when you make love, strong so that when you make love you can be more open physically, great! But if you're only working out and nothing else, it can get dangerous. If you're not eating, because you're afraid of getting fat, forget it. We all say we're fat. I'm guilty of that, too. That's cute to a point, then it becomes manic.

What people should do is re-examine their priorities and make a list of the reasons why they started exercising. If it's to get ready for the ski season, for instance, that's great. Chris and I sit up against the wall to tighten our thighs because we're going skiing in Sun Valley [Idaho] for our honeymoon. I want my legs to be strong; that's my priority. Vanity is down there. I'm not saying that I don't want my legs to look pretty, but it's not my driving force to lift leg weights. I can walk on the streets to get my legs to look nice. So if your priorities are out of line, just put them back. Remember that if you're going to be truly loved in this life, it's not going to be for the way your body looks; it's going to be for your soul and for your heart. PW

If you read one book this year make it "ONE DAY AT A TIME" perhaps the greatest success and love story ever told. She came from the wrong side of the tracks, a family of 12. Two strikes against her—poverty and shyness. At 14 her dreams were shattered. She vowed she would never sing again. She almost lost her life twice, once in Vietnam entertaining the GI's in 1969. Her strength and faith were tested again in 1982 when her husband was sent to prison for 3 years. Cristy has the #1 country song . . . #1 Gospel album in the world . . . The only artist ever to sell 1 million gospel albums. The top new country artist of the year 1979 . . . a date that will haunt her forever. Her biography is guaranteed to bring a lump to your throat, a tear to your eye or it will not cost you a penny.

FIESTA FOOD

RECIPE ROUNDUP FROM THE RIO GRANDE

By Marilyn Hansen

The beguiling, fun-to-eat foods of the American Southwest are gaining enthusiastic fans all over the country. From tortillas to chili, from salsas to chocolate, the foods born of Mexican heritage have blossomed and been reinterpreted in the kitchens of Santa Fe, San Antonio and San Diego. Here is a sampling of some of the newer Southwest dishes.

BREAKFAST BURRITO

Red or green chili salsa
Egg and Cheese Filling*
Sausage and Egg Filling

1. Preheat oven to 300 F. Wrap tortillas in foil and warm in oven 10-15 minutes.
2. Prepare Egg and Cheese Filling and Sausage and Egg Filling (recipes follow).
3. Lay one tortilla at a time flat on a plate and place about ¼ cup filling roughly across the middle, extending below the center of the circle rather than above so you will have room for folding. Fold the burrito in the classic fashion: Turn in the right and left sides to overlap the filling slightly, bring up bottom, then roll up, making a cylinder closed at both ends. (This is the point at which old tortillas crack and spill out the filling, but that is not a disaster — burritos are eaten catch-as-catch-can anyway, nibbled like a hot dog. The expert burrito eater curls his little finger under the bottom to hold it closed and with the other hand lightly spoons salsa into the other end after each bite.) Makes 4 servings

Note: These burritos are a true specialty of Arizona and of Sonora in northern Mexico. Consumed fresh with large, paper-thin flour tortillas as the wrapping, they are too delicious to equate with the stodgy, unpalatable convenience foods all too often sold as burritos.

*EGG AND CHEESE FILLING

6 eggs
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons chopped green chilies
Salt and pepper to taste
½ cup shredded Monterey Jack cheese

1. Scramble eggs with butter in small skillet. Just as they are about to set, stir in chilies.
2. When thoroughly set but still tender, remove from heat, add salt and pepper to taste, and stir in cheese. Serve at once; this filling cannot be reheated. Makes 4 servings

SAUSAGE AND EGG FILLING

4 eggs
2 tablespoons red or green chili salsa
½ ripe avocado (optional)

1. Remove casings from sausage; chop sausage coarsely. In medium skillet, fry, stirring, until cooked. Remove from bowl.
2. Beat eggs lightly and cook, stirring, until set. Mix with sausage in bowl. Add salsa to mixture.
3. If desired, dice avocado and add to mixture. Makes 4 servings

SAUSAGE TO TASTE LIKE CHORIZO

Chorizo sausage is handy for adding to enchilada sauce or an omelet, or to lend its particular flavor to soups or posole. Its availability, however, is sporadic, and many of the versions you do see marketed are inferior in one way or another. In my experience, the meat in chorizo should taste as good as the best kielbasa, or Polish sausage, which almost every supermarket carries. So this recipe does a quick change on Polish sausage by flavoring it like chorizo and gives you instant access to good-quality sausage. Rather than grinding the sausage up as in most recipes, be careful to stop processing when the meat is still in small, rough chunks. This coarser texture keeps the chorizo from disappearing when added to a sauce. The preliminary step of skinning and frying chorizo is not necessary with this substitute.

2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons powdered red chilies, medium-hot at most (e.g., chiles de rista or ground chile primero)
1 clove garlic, finely chopped
½ teaspoon oregano leaves
½ teaspoon cumin seeds
1 pound kielbasa with the ends trimmed

1. Heat the oil gently in a small skillet, stir in all the remaining ingredients except the kielbasa, and heat through.
2. Cut the sausage into ½-inch lengths and place them in food processor* along with the chili-and-oil mixture. Process until the meat is reduced to small bits, but stop short of actually grinding it. This will require only 10 or 15 pulses of the motor.
3. Pack the meat into a bowl, cover closely, and store in the refrigerator. The "chorizo" will keep for a week or so. Use in any recipe that calls for regular link chorizo. Makes 1 pound

*If you do not have a food processor, use hand-operated meat grinder or chef's knife on board in small batches at a time, then mix in chili-oil mixture.

The Crisp, Juicy, Flavorful Apple That's so Easy to Grow!

Move over Red Delicious, Golden Delicious and McIntosh, here's an apple that may beat them all—for eating fresh, for cooking, for storing, for sheer good looks—the incomparable Granny Smith.

Yes, the flavor is absolutely mouth-watering. It's crisp, white juicy flesh has just the right amount of tartness to give it that superior "apple" flavor. What's more it stores well, keeps its fresh-from-the-tree flavor for MONTHS. Almost makes every other kind of apple seem bland in comparison.

The Granny Smith was an incredible accident of nature—a one in a billion chance. In 1869 Mrs. Thomas "Granny" Smith, living in New South Wales, Australia, discarded a bunch of rotten apples she brought home from a trip to the remote island of Tasmania. A tree grew from the seeds of the discarded fruit and bore apples like no other apple in existence. They were shiny green—crisp, juicy and simply scrumptious. They became known among neighbors and friends as "Granny Smith apples."

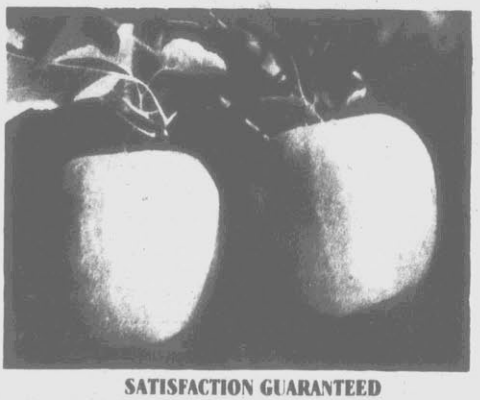
Eventually, an enterprising apple grower heard about these unique fruit, took cuttings from the productive tree, and started an orchard. Soon, Australian apple growers were exporting the fruit to New Zealand and then to England—a journey of some 10,000 miles. Importing apples to England is like selling refrigerators to Eskimos. England is the home of some of the world's finest-flavored apples—the famous Pippin and the Russett, for example—yet Granny Smith's completely won the English over, so that today in England the Granny Smith may be #1 in popularity. It is rapidly becoming that way in America.



Self-Pollinating, No-Ladder Trees

The Granny Smith apple trees supplied by Silver Creek Nurseries are top quality "semi-dwarf" trees, meaning that the fruits grow full size, but the trees are compact. You won't need a step-ladder to reach the fruit. What's more Granny Smith's are self-pollinating, meaning that they don't need another apple tree to set fruit like most other apples do.

Also, Granny Smith's will grow in many areas of the south where other apples don't do well, even in Texas and California (check with your local county agent if you're unsure). In northern states Granny Smith's ripen late, when most other apples have finished bearing.

With every order of Granny Smith's, Silver Creek Nurseries includes a complete set of planting instructions and other useful tips (they need no more care than regular apple trees). But HURRY. Once the limited supply is sold out there will be no more trees until next year. Order today!

HARRIET VAN HORNE'S MONTHLY COLUMN ON LIVING TODAY

THE ART OF GIVING AND GETTING GIFTS

Oh, what is so rare as a day in spring that is not some dear one's graduation, wedding, bridal shower, piano recital, Bar Mitzvah, bon voyage party, or 20th anniversary as dean of women?

Wisely, we plan our nicest rituals for the fragrant days of late spring. Not so wisely, we often mark the milestone with gifts that are either unsuitable, beyond our means, or too tacky to do full honor to the occasion.

The perfect present requires an open hand, a warm empathy, and a great deal of thought. Instinctive good taste helps, but occasionally we must put aside our own taste and choose a gift that will please the sometimes raffish taste of the recipient.

Tim Grajek

If you are shopping for a new in-law — say the all but mute bride your grandson brought home from Europe — and you are uncertain of her tastes, be practical. Buy her something for the kitchen. But if you are seeking a present for a business acquaintance, follow your own taste. Buy something you wish you could afford to give yourself.

It's a tedious, delicate business, this giving and getting of presents. In theory, the closer you are to the celebrant, the simpler the task of choosing a gift. Even so, a certain tact is in order.

A sensible aunt will not give her sports-mad 16-year-old nephew a limp leather volume of Tennyson. Having Lord Alfred's poems at hand will not inspire him to turn off the ball game and settle down with "Come Into the Garden, Maud." A wise aunt will give the lad a tennis racket, an electric razor, or — if she loves him enough to stand in a long, shuffling line — two tickets to a big sports evening.

For friends and relatives, a certain tenderness should go with the gift. Your 50-ish cousin whose bunions hurt can only wince when she opens the gift box containing black lace pantyhose with rhinestones across the instep. Nor is a serious scholar likely to be pleased with the latest novel by Danielle Steel. His taste runs to finer things. He might, however, be delighted with new kidskin patches for his old tweed jacket.

"One must be poor to know the luxury of giving," wrote George Eliot. There is no more luxuriant feeling than handing a child a gift that fills him with delight. But gift transactions with children can be risky. A toy that cost you a pretty penny can be greeted with, "I got one just like it for Christmas." Or, worse, "What's this thing for?" If you aren't on intimate terms with a child, buy him a book or new mittens. At least his mother will appreciate the present.

Parents who understand that their first task is civilizing their children will see to it that all gifts are received with enthusiasm and thanks. "Just what I wanted," the child should say, even if it isn't.

If the gift is sent to a child, his thank-you note should be in the mail within 10 days. If he is not yet literate, then Mommy must send it. A child should learn the importance of expressing thanks to friends.

It is always nicer to give a small gift of quality than a large one that shrieks "bargain." For a teenage girl, a jumbo bar of elegant bath soap costing $10 is a more meaningful gift than a large bottle of "cheap" $10 perfume.

If the donor is likely to come to call, you must keep it on display for a time. If the donor is not a regular visitor, it's perfectly OK to exchange the gift or send it to a charity thrift shop. Just make sure that your friend isn't the sort who browses thrift shops.

Do you know what — and who — sets off family feuds nowadays? It's the bride who fails to write the conventional notes of thanks for the wedding gifts she receives. The bride who doesn't say "thank you" is the bride who doesn't get asked to Thanksgiving dinner.

It should be noted that second or third marriages are not occasions requiring gifts. The theory is that the bride is furnishing her new home with items retained from her last abode. If the couple happens to be less than flush, you can always send a handsome house plant or a modest case of wine.

Whatever the occasion, whether the gift is lovely or ludicrous, a warm note of thanks is in order. Queen Elizabeth, who receives thousands of gifts each year, insists that each one be acknowledged. Since recent gifts have included a box of poisoned spears and loin cloths from a friendly African chief, a crocodile and a fly-swatter made from a yak tail, you can see that enthusiasm doesn't always bubble into the palace thank-you notes. You, by contrast, should have no trouble expressing your thanks for the hand-knit sweater the sleeves of which would just fit a chimpanzee. As we all murmur on Christmas morning, "It's the thought that counts." FW

If you've ever had a lawn mower break down, you know that repairs can be costly. Next time, you may be able to avoid those bills—and do the repairs yourself. The HANDBOOK OF LAWN MOWER REPAIR shows you how to fix reel, rider, and rotary mowers—in language you'll be able to understand.

This helpful book uses diagrams to show you how your mower works, then gives you step-to-step instructions for troubleshooting—so that you know where to look for possible breakdowns and how to spot them. Of course, once you know which part is broken, it is frequently a simple matter to fix it.

With the HANDBOOK OF LAWN MOWER REPAIR to help you, it is reasonable to expect that you'll save money each summer season. And you won't have to "watch the weeds grow" while you wait for your mower to come back from the repair shop.

The HANDBOOK OF LAWN MOWER REPAIR can help you in other ways, too. It tells you how to shop for a reliable lawn mower . . . describes which type of mower is safest to use . . . and gives you maintenance tips and a preventive maintenance schedule you can follow to keep your lawn mower running at its most efficient.

The Book For Homeowners Who Need A Reliable Mower—Not A Headache.

If you're tired of spending money to have your lawn mower repaired, the HANDBOOK OF LAWN MOWER REPAIR may be just the book you need. BULLISH ON RODEO

"Twelve million people attend rodeos each year, but how many pro rodeo cowboys can you name?" asks Ken Stemler, president of Professional Rodeo Cowboys' Association Properties. This lack of recognition makes Stemler madder than a bull in a chute, so he's devised the ProTour Rodeo.

The tour, sponsored by various corporations and investors, will feature 24 teams of cowboys and cowgirls competing against each other.

But will ProTour rope in any respect? Stemler, a long-legged, wiry man, drawls: "It's such an intense sport. A fan can see a lifetime's worth of cowboy skills in eight seconds."

Stemler hopes to attract mainstream sports fans and increase the visibility of rodeo's stars. If Stemler has his way, bull rider Cody Snyder's Brahman-hugging legs may one day be featured in pantyhose ads — just like Joe Namath's.

FROM FLORIDA

FLAPPIE FASHION

The latest craze in the world of high-toned tacky is artificial flamingos — pink ones, to be precise. It seems these nearly forgotten lawn ornaments are soaring to new heights of popularity. Amy Loughery, owner of FLA.mingos boutique in Madeira Beach, Fla., reports that those pink shockers are a passion with baby-boomers: "Maybe not the Yuppies, exactly, but those who appreciate what the Old Florida was all about — Flappies, maybe," she says with a grin.

Loughery is at a loss to explain the phenomenon: "I like them because they're pink. And in Florida they go so well with the turquoise and pink architecture. But in other places, I don't know."

People from those other places can still order from a wide array of pink-of-perfection accessories by sending 50¢ (for a catalog) to FLA.mingos, 174 Johns Pass Boardwalk, Madeira Beach, Fla., 33708.

NO MORE MR. BAD GUY?

Are you plowing through those "How to Succeed in Business" manuals that espouse the philosophy that the only good throat is a cutthroat? Henry Rogers, chairman of Rogers and Cowan, one of the nation's most successful public relations firms, says "nuts" to that thinking.

Rogers recently put his pen where his mouth is and wrote Rogers Rules for Success (St. Martins/Marek). "I feel like a preacher, teaching old-fashioned values," he says. "But I have found that being nice is enormously helpful. All this 'winning through intimidation' stuff is in complete contrast to what I've observed in all my years of business."

Rogers must be doing something right. His firm represents Paul Newman, Ford Motor Co., and Paul McCartney, among others. It's comforting to know that nice guys don't always finish last.

CELEBRATING AMERICA

Each town, each county, each state in this nation is special. What is it that draws people to a particular part of the country? Here are two answers from Arizona.

Dr. John Hoopingarner, Scottsdale, Ariz.

I was trained as a psychologist, and one day, as part of a project with handicapped children, I took them hiking in the Grand Canyon. I began to see that few people had much knowledge of the desert. So I began a business in which I take people out on 4-wheel-drive trips and help them properly understand the desert and the Indian peoples.

The Arizona landscape is so unique. There are plants and animals here that it's rare to see anywhere else: deer, wild pigs, Gila monsters, horned toads.

I try not only to share the beauty and uniqueness of the desert, but also to stress its fragility. A lot of it is gone already, destroyed. I try to emphasize the importance of preserving the desert and what it has to offer.

Hugh Downs, Host, ABC's 20-20, Phoenix.

Our house in Arizona is situated in a place — well, I do not know of a superior view in the world with the possible exception of Everest from the Katmandu Valley. From our 2,600-foot elevation, we look down about 60 miles to the south, where we see the rim of mountains on the edge of Phoenix. And when the sun sets, it has all the colors that I once thought were bad photography in Arizona Highways magazine. I used to think: red rocks? And you get out there, and they are that color. Scenically, the place is fracturing.

Next month I'll be going up into the designated wilderness just to get away. A few Octobers ago I came down from over the rim country — it took nine days to ride down, through country that's the same as it was a thousand years ago. That became a way of life: just sleeping on the ground, and bathing in rivers, and moving down from that high country into the desert. Being out in that country is an addiction, I guess, and every now and then I have to do it.

Sweepstakes Certificate from Du Pont

NO PURCHASE NECESSARY

Take this certificate to a participating dealer for carpet of Du Pont ANTRON® and place it behind the special decoder on the "Urge to Splurge" Sweepstakes display card to determine if you are an instant prizewinner.

(SEE REVERSE SIDE FOR COMPLETE DETAILS.)

How to Claim Your Prize:

1. To see if you are an instant winner, place your Sweepstakes Certificate behind the special decoder on the Du Pont "Urge to Splurge" Sweepstakes display at a participating carpet dealer. If the number revealed on your certificate exactly matches the Grand, First, Second or Third Prize number on the display, you are an instant winner. 1,106 prizes will be awarded as follows: 1 Grand Prize—MasterCard or VISA credit card worth $100,000. 5 First Prizes—MasterCard or VISA credit card worth $10,000. 100 Second Prizes—MasterCard or VISA credit card worth $500. 1,000 Third Prizes—MasterCard or VISA credit card worth $100. All prizewinners will receive new credit cards issued by Citibank, credited with the prize value indicated above. Credit cards will be valid until the prize value has been spent or through 12/31/85, whichever comes first.

2. To claim instant winner prize, print your and your carpet dealer's name, address and zip code on the Sweepstakes Certificate and mail to: Du Pont "Urge to Splurge" Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 7120, Westbury, NY 11592. Valid prize claims must be sent via Registered or Certified Mail, Return Receipt Requested and must be received by 6/14/85.

3. If you would like a Du Pont "Urge to Splurge" Sweepstakes Certificate, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Du Pont Sweepstakes Certificate, P.O. Box 4570, Westbury, NY 11592. Residents of the State of Washington ONLY should not affix stamp. Requests must be received by 5/21/85. Limit one request per envelope.

4. If you cannot visit a participating carpet dealer and want to determine if you are a winner, you may send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Du Pont "Urge to Splurge" Sweepstakes Decoder Request, P.O. Box 4230, Westbury, NY 11592 (residents of the State of Washington ONLY should not affix stamp), and we will send you a decoder, display facsimile and official sweepstakes rules. Requests must be received by 5/31/85. Limit one request per envelope.

5. All instant winner claims subject to verification by BBDO Promotion, the judging organization. Any certificate that is mutilated, defaced, reproduced, altered or is irregular in any way will be void. No responsibility is assumed for late, lost or misdirected mail. Odds of winning any of the prizes instantly are: Grand Prize—1 in 54,000,000; First Prize—1 in 10,800,000; Second Prize—1 in 540,000; Third Prize—1 in 54,000 (based on a total distribution of an estimated 54,000,000 certificates).

6. A Second Chance Drawing will be held for any unclaimed prizes. To enter, obtain a Second Chance Entry Form at participating dealers or handprint your and your carpet dealer's name, address and zip code on a 3" x 5" piece of paper and mail to: Du Pont Second Chance Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 9480, Westbury, NY 11592. Each entry must be mailed separately via first class mail and received by 7/1/85.

7. Sweepstakes open to U.S. residents 18 years or older, except employees and their immediate families of E.I. Du Pont de Nemours & Co. (Inc.), its affiliates, advertising and promotion agencies, and suppliers, manufacturers and distributors of sweepstakes materials. Void wherever prohibited by law. All federal, state and local regulations apply.

8. Second Chance winners will be determined in a random drawing conducted by BBDO Promotion, whose decisions on all aspects of this sweepstakes are final. Odds of winning depend on number of unclaimed prizes and number of eligible entries received.

9. All instant prize and second chance winners will be notified by mail by 8/15/85 and may be required to execute affidavit of eligibility and advertising release. Limit one sweepstakes prize per household. No substitution or transfer of prizes permitted. Taxes on prizes are sole responsibility of winners.

10. For a list of prizewinners, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: Du Pont "Urge to Splurge" Sweepstakes Winners' List, P.O. Box 9740, Westbury, NY 11592. (Residents of the State of Washington ONLY should not affix stamp.) Requests must be received by 7/1/85.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1 Window is missing. 2 Arrow is different. 3 Elbow is concealed. 4 Hair is different. 5 Paper is shorter. 6 Blouse is different.

• ABOUT FACE! Here is a curious way to make the fleet of spaceships at right turn around and face the opposite way. Fill a glass with water. Hold the drawing behind the glass and peer through the water. Adjust distances, and alakazam, the water will alter the image so that the spaceship fleet will appear to have changed its direction.

A SHARP TOUCH

• RIDDLE-ME-THIS! Why do Eskimos haggle over sleds? They like toboggan. What dog uses the telephone? The dialmation. What are the Three R's of arm-wrestling? 'Reading, 'Riting and 'Rist-metic.

Prince Valiant

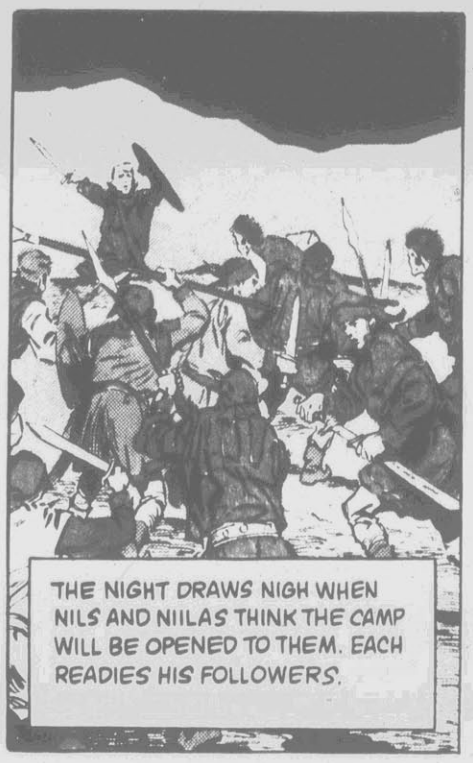
CREATED BY HAL FOSTER

Our Story: THE REINDEER BONE GIVES MIKKEL ENTRY TO THE PALACE OF HAP ATLA. BUT IT IS NOT THE KING THE LAD SEEKS---IT IS SVEN. "I BRING THIS FROM PRINCE ARN," MIKKEL SAYS. "YOU PROMISED HELP. HE NEEDS IT NOW." SVEN IS AS GOOD AS HIS WORD. ROUNDING UP HIS MEN, HE FLIES TO AID HIS BOYHOOD FRIEND.



THE NIGHT DRAWS NIGH WHEN NILS AND NIILAS THINK THE CAMP WILL BE OPENED TO THEM. EACH READIES HIS FOLLOWERS.

WILL PRINCE VALIANT BE THERE TO WELCOME THEM? IN THE DARKNESS HETTA'S BELEAGUERED LAPPS GATHER UP THEIR POSSESSIONS. AS NILS AND NIILAS COME DOWN THEIR SEPARATE WAYS FROM THE HILLS, VAL AND HIS COMPANIONS BREAK CAMP AND HEAD INLAND.

EACH OF THE RIVAL TWINS BELIEVES HE HAS STRUCK A DEAL WITH PRINCE VALIANT. AND EACH ARRIVES AT THE CAMP WITH HIS WARRIORS---ONLY TO FIND THAT THE OTHER TWIN IS ALSO THERE. "YOU SOLD ME OUT!" NILS SCREAMS AT NIILAS AND NIILAS AT NILS.

PRINCE VALIANT, THE DECEIVER, IS NOWHERE IN SIGHT. ON WHOM CAN NILS AND NIILAS VENT THEIR ANGER BUT ONE ANOTHER? THEIR MEN COME TO BLOWS, AND FROM THE DISTANCE VAL AND THE LAPPS HEAR THE DEADLY DIN OF PITCHED BATTLE. THEY HAVE SAVED THEIR SKINS. BUT THE THRONE? INTO WHOSE HANDS WILL IT FALL?
