Business Leaders See Slow Growth

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

HOT SPRINGS, Va. (AP) — The U.S. economy, battered by foreign competition and high federal budget deficits, is entering a period of sluggish growth, the country's top business leaders said today.

While the business executives did not forecast a new recession this year or next, they expressed misgivings about the longevity of the current recovery.

The forecast was made at the spring meeting of the Business Council, made up of 200 executives from the country's largest corporations.

The forecast by the business leaders was markedly more pessimistic than the expectations of the Reagan administration.

The executives blamed the country's weakening economy on what they termed the interrelated problems of huge government budget deficits and soaring trade deficits with other countries.

"At no other time has a subject so dominated the concerns of the business community as the related questions of the budget deficit, the trade deficit and the strength of the dollar," said Edmund T. Pratt Jr., chairman of Pfizer Inc., the giant pharmaceutical firm.

Economic growth during the first three months of this year slumped to an anemic 1.3 percent annual rate, the slowest pace since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

The slowdown was blamed primarily on the beating the U.S. industrial sector took from foreign competition both in increased imports and in slumping export sales.

The trade problem has led to growing calls for protectionist measures in Congress, but the business executives said such an approach would be short-sighted, leading to retaliatory actions by other countries.

"The preferred solution to the trade deficit and trade debt problems of the United States is a significant tightening of the federal budget," the Business Council said in a report.

The executives said large federal budget deficits drive up U.S. interest rates, attracting foreign capital to this country and thus driving up the exchange rate of the dollar. A strong dollar worsens the trade deficit by making imports cheaper and U.S. products more expensive on overseas markets.

While the Reagan administration has in the past denied a link between budget deficits and a strong dollar, the business report said, "the root cause of the strong dollar and trade imbalance is high federal budget deficits."

The report said even with congressional approval of further spending cuts, deficits would hover around $200 billion over the next two years.

The business forecast predicted that the economy this year would grow 3.1 percent, far below the 6.8 percent pace turned in during 1984. For 1986, the executives predicted an even more slower growth rate of 2.2 percent.

By contrast, the Reagan administration is predicting growth this year of 3.9 percent and 4 percent for 1986.

While some forecasters have begun to warn that a recession is likely next year, the business group said they believed a downturn in the next 18 months was unlikely.

Shultz Affirms Israeli Support

JERUSALEM (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz affirmed the United States' commitment to Israel's security during a speech today at a memorial to the 6 million Jewish victims of the Holocaust.

"After the Holocaust, the American people and decent men and women around the world made a solemn pledge: never again. ... Today we honor that pledge by standing beside the state of Israel," Shultz said.

"We honor that pledge when we, with the people of Israel, reach out to help save Ethiopian Jewry," he said. "We honor that pledge when we work tirelessly to help Soviet Jewry and other minorities."

He then began talks on reviving the Middle East peace process.

Shultz, who arrived here after an overnight flight from Portugal, had a working lunch with Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir to discuss the possibility of assembling a Jordanian-Palestinian delegation to negotiate with Israel.

Israeli officials said Shamir would reiterate Israel's refusal to talk with the Palestine Liberation Organization or anyone associated with it, including non-PLO members of the Palestine National Council.

State To Study Justice System

RALEIGH (AP) — The level of safety the public demands and the cost of that safety will be the focus of a study of the state's criminal justice system, state officials said today.

"Our criminal justice system has some serious problems," Secretary of Crime Control and Public Safety Joe Dean said at a news conference. "Public confidence is not what it should be."

The study will be conducted by Dean's office and the Department of Correction, in cooperation with the Governor's Crime Commission. It will emphasize sentencing practices, prison overcrowding and alternatives to incarceration.

It costs $30 a day to incarcerate each of North Carolina's more than 17,300 inmates in 88 prisons, Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson said. In addition, the state has 63,000 people on probation and parole.

"We really have to get a handle on the cost" to prevent the prison system from becoming the single largest item in the state budget, Johnson said at the news conference.

"I came into this job with a strong commitment to rehabilitation," Johnson said. "Rehabilitation is one way we can work to make (an individual's) first crime the last crime."

Dean said the main reason for the prison system is to protect the safety of the public, followed by punishment and rehabilitation.

'Mission Accomplished'

Reagan Ends Europe Trek

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

LISBON, Portugal (AP) — President Reagan ended his symbol-laden, four-nation trek through Europe today by declaring "mission accomplished," and said the United States must consider whether to continue observing a nuclear arms agreement with the Soviet Union.

Reagan, questioned about continued compliance with the unratified SALT agreement with the Soviet Union, said: "There's considerable evidence now that that has been rather one-sided. If it has been, then there's no need for us to continue."

"We have tried on what seemed to be a verbal agreement between ourselves and the Soviet Union for some time that even though we have not ratified that treaty ... that we would both seek to abide by the terms," Reagan said.

Speaking to reporters before departing, Reagan said the United States will make a decision "down the road" on whether to continue observing the strategic arms limitation agreement.

When a decision is made, he said, "we'll do it openly and ... with full knowledge of the Soviet Union."

Reagan held a departure news conference in front of Queluz Palace. He stood outside on a bright, cloudless day with the palace's manicured gardens behind him.

The president viewed some of the palace's horses before boarding Air Force One for the trip back to Washington.

"We're leaving today with our Atlantic ties strengthened and we're returning home mission accomplished," he said.

"It's been a long, historic and thoroughly worthwhile trip," Reagan said.

Answering questions, Reagan noted his invitation to meet with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev and said Gorbachev's recent tough talk hasn't changed his mind about a meeting.

"I think there'd be a lot to talk about and I just happen to believe it's time we started talking to each other and not about each other," he said. As for Gorbachev's harsh talk, he said, "What's new about that?"

Reagan said "we have no confirmation yet Mr. Gorbachev is coming" to the United Nations later this year but added, "The word probable is about the best way to describe it."

He said his invitation for a meeting "still goes, so the ball is in his court."

Meanwhile, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan said in an interview with The New York Times that despite the tough talk there "probably" would be a summit meeting between the two.

Council OKs Street Closing

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

A four-member City Council Thursday approved a request by North Carolina Equipment Co. to close Allen Avenue. The street is located on the west side of Memorial Drive on North Carolina Equipment Co. property, just north of West End Circle.

Saying the street resembled an unpaved driveway, Council members present at the meeting voted unanimously to remove Allen Avenue from dedication. Councilman Louis Clark pointed out that the street did not meet current city standards and could not be paved.

According to City Engineer Tom Tysinger, Allen Avenue cannot be paved because it is located over a natural gas easement. Easement owner North Carolina Natural Gas does not permit paved streets on top of gas lines for safety reasons. For instance, Tysinger explained, if a leak were to develop under a paved surface, the gas could not escape.

No opposition to the request was voiced in public hearing session before the Council made its decision. However, at a previous Planning and Zoning Commission meeting where the request for closing was recommended for approval, heirs of the Hemby property which adjoins Allen Avenue objected to the request, saying closing would deny them access to Memorial Drive. The Planning and Zoning Commission determined that the Hemby property had adequate access on Dickinson Avenue.

Council members present at the meeting included Clark, Mayor Pro

Tem Ed Carter, Dr. M.W. Aldridge and the Rev. William Hadden. Members not attending included Stuart Shinn, Judy Greene and Mayor James Buck. Mrs. Buck did not attend, because she felt it would be best to stay home and rest. City Manager Gail Meeks said, Mrs. Buck was admitted to Pitt County Memorial Hospital Monday for observation following a council workshop session. She was released Wednesday and is doing fine, Mrs. Meeks added.

Agencies Submit Budget Bids

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners continued their series of budget workshop sessions by hearing requests from a dozen county-funded departments and agencies at a meeting Thursday.

The county's data processing manager, Gene Windham, told commissioners that the department's request for $759,457 in the coming fiscal year is higher than the $658,568 appropriated this year in part because of an increase in the rental of equipment ($330,586 proposed for 1985-86 as compared to $283,025 this year) and the request for one new position. Inspections Department head John Payne told the board his department's $88,597 request for 1985-86 is down from the $88,902 budgeted this year. He said he has received no complaints about proposed changes in the electrical inspections ordinance which would raise inspection fees and require the fees to be paid before inspections are made.

Frankie Hardee, president of the county electrical contractors association, told commissioners "I think we can live with it (the proposed ordinance); pretty good. I feel sure we can live with that." The board is expected to adopt the new inspections ordinance at its May 20 meeting.

The $102,514 requested by the Industrial Development Commission for the coming year is the same as the present budget while the Board of Elections requested $161,202 (including salary increases) as compared with the present budget of $131,469.

The requested $248,668 for housekeeping services is up $2,000 over the present budget of $246,668, housekeeping supervisor John Black said, because of the increased cost and demand for paper products, while the $46,327 "governing body" request $44,985 is up because of increases in travel and telephone allocations.

Other departments and their requests heard by commissioners Thursday include: Administration $676,904 ($725,111 this year); County

Manager and County Finance Office $226,787 ($213,798 this year) including a new charge of $72,249 for computer services provided by the county's data processing center; Print Shop $25,618 ($23,361 this year); County Garage $309,450 ($267,840 this year); and the Pitt-Greenville Arts Council $5,000 ($3,000 this year).

Commissioners took a brief look at, but then told Sheriff Ralph Tyson they would schedule another session to review the budgets for the sheriff's department, jail and communications center.

Initial requests from the sheriff's department amount to $1.06 million for the coming year ($1,000,111 this year). (Please turn to page 14)

Be Knowledgeable About RELPs

By CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

One of the hottest-selling financial products in recent years has been real estate limited partnerships (RELPs). Investors have poured billions into various kinds of RELPs for profit from property sales, income from rents, or big tax write-offs — the main attraction for upper-bracket taxpayers.

Syndicators are heavily promoting income-oriented partnerships structured for IRAs and Keogh plans.

Should you be interested in RELPs, and how can you make a good choice?

In a limited partnership, a general partner packages and manages the venture, whether building or buying commercial property or other assets, such as land or short-term mortgages. The limited partner's liability for losses is limited to the amount invested.

The minimum investment ranges from about $2,000 to $5,000 for public offerings and $20,000 to $150,000 or more for some of the private deals.

The partners can claim tax deductions for depreciation, property taxes, interest on loans and various other partnership expenses.

After about five to 12 years, the tax benefits diminish. The syndicator sells or refinances the property, and distributes the profits or periodic income to the limited partners.

Changing Times magazine believes that today's market should compel potential investors to approach RELPs with caution.

The economic outlook for real estate is uncertain at best. While a new burst of inflation could make well-selected real estate a good hedge, few forecasters expect that. Overbuilding, high vacancy rates or a recession, regarded by some economists as possible in '85, could hurt.

The 1984 tax law changes eroded some of the benefits, and the Treasury's reform proposals could, in time, curtail or strip away most of them.

Overall, RELPs haven't performed better than, or as well as, safer investments, such as money-market funds or insured savings certificates.

Charles C. Wetterer, editor of "Real Estate Syndications Reporter," examined 34 public partnerships formed and completed by five major syndicators between 1971 and 1983. After factoring in appreciation, fees and expenses, inflation, tax savings and cash distribution over an average holding period of 5.7 years, Wetterer found that investors netted only 11-12 percent.

Consider that insured bank certificates currently have been yielding about 9 percent to more than 11 percent. U.S. Treasury bonds and various government agency securities have recently been returning 10 percent or more.

John E. Sestina, a Columbus, Ohio, financial consultant who heads the National Association of Personal Financial Advisers (its members sell advice only), told Changing Times that of the last 1,000 RELPs his firm investigated, only seven were considered worthy of recommendation to clients.

Many RELPs fail to pass muster with independent analysts for the following reasons: inexperience of the general partner, shaky finances, heavy borrowings, excessive fees, payment of unrealistic prices, unimpressive acquisitions, overvaluing of assets and uncertain appreciation prospects.

If RELPs still appeal to you, Changing Times suggests the following:

- Personally check out private offerings — generally more expensive and profitable than public offerings — offered by reputable people in your community.

- Consider solid economic potential first and tax benefits second.

- Ask for and examine performance histories. The bottom line usually shows distributions and tax benefits per $1,000 invested.

- Read the footnotes and beware of unclear information. For example, the net proceeds from an average rate of return of 21 percent a year for 10 years are exactly the same as the net from 12 percent with annual compounding.

- Consult an accountant, financial adviser, tax lawyer or real estate specialist. The fee is peanuts if a lot of money is at stake.

- Insist the general partner provide realistic demographic data from an independent source supporting rental income projections. Look for independent verifications of statements made by a broker or real estate dealer.

- Be especially skeptical of high earnings forecasts. The Securities and Exchange Commission prohibits any projections for blind pools, where properties aren't acquired until after investors buy in.

- Ask for projections for sale of the property given several scenarios, including foreclosure, and assuming several different rates of appreciation. Calculate the adjusted after-tax rate of return using an 8 percent sale rate and a 15 percent reinvestment rate, advises H. Lynn Hopewell, a Falls Church, Va., financial consultant.

- Don't invest if the syndicator has bought the property at a markup from a party with which he or she may have a business relationship.

Peepholes, Child-Raising Fears, Nose Blowers Concern Readers

DEAR ABBY: When I was a 16-year-old girl, I discovered a semi-concealed peephole in the wall of a ladies rest room at a gasoline station. The hole had been strategically drilled at a level that would afford the "viewer" on the other side of the wall a pretty good peep show.

Since then I have examined the walls of hundreds of gas station rest rooms and have found a surprising number of peepholes!

I think gas station owners who are aware of this disgusting invasion of privacy should be held accountable by law. What agency should I contact to put a stop to this? And if I can't do anything to stop it, perhaps a letter in your column will alert women to the fact that they may be inadvertently the "star" of some creep's peep show.

DISGUSTED IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DISGUSTED: Write to the consumer relations department of the oil company that owns (or leases) the gas station.

And until some action is taken to ensure privacy, men as well as women should be on the lookout for such peepholes. (A view is possible from either side of the wall.) P.S. An instant remedy: Stuff the hole with a wad of toilet tissue. Here's looking at you, lechers!

DEAR ABBY: You often advise people to talk to counselors, but let me ask you something: Can counselors help people decide whether to have children or not?

I've seen two counselors about this problem, and they were no help at all. They've seen so many kids with problems that their stock answer is: "When in doubt—don't."

I could be happy with or without kids, but my husband loves kids and he would make a wonderful father. I like kids, too, but they walk all over me; I've never been able to exercise authority over anyone. Even 2-year-olds push me around.

I told this to one counselor, and he said, "If you had a kid, by the time he was 10, he'd be kicking your rear end."

What do you think, Abby? Should I take a chance and leave all the disciplining to my husband?

WEAK IN WATERLOO, IOWA

DEAR WEAK: No. Kids who have a "wait 'til your father comes home" kind of mother usually grow up hating their fathers and walking all over their mothers.

Don't take on parenthood until you've had a course in parenting and feel equal to the task. It's an 18-year commitment (minimum).

DEAR ABBY: I have had this friend for many years. We go out together—her husband and mine—and we even take trips together. I guess you could call us "young senior citizens."

"Molly" is a lady of good breeding and good manners, but she does something that is rude, crude and downright uncalled for. No matter if we're dining at someone's home or at a dinner at a restaurant, after she has finished her meal, Molly takes a tissue out of her purse and blows her nose at the table. And I mean she has a real blow-out! She does this every time without fail.

I asked her, after one of these "blowouts," if she had sinus trouble. She just said "No." (I guess she didn't get the hint because she still does it.)

I truly like Molly. She's kind-hearted and a wonderful friend, but this one habit drives me (and my husband) up a wall.

If you print this, you will have me for a friend for life.

ABSOLUTELY ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Hello, friend.

'Taters?

Leaders in South Boston, Va., decided they'd rather play golf for vegetables than whoop and holler over tobacco.

A move to revive the National Tobacco Festival in its birthplace was nipped in the bud recently when attendance at meetings exploring the project was as sparse as hairs on a bald man's head. City officials said near-total community participation would be necessary to stage the event.

At one time, the festival drew crowds of 150,000 people. Then, because festival officials said South Boston was too small for the event, the festival moved to Richmond, where its board of directors estimated it contributed $3.6 million to the city's economy. In January, festival officials announced it was ending the event because of the lack of a major sponsor and "an inability to attract first-rate college football teams to the Tobacco Festival Game." So much for the $3.6 million per year.

So some South Boston civic leaders put their heads together and came up with the idea to move the festival back to its old home. The problem? Relatively nobody showed up at meetings held to gauge interest. Leaders decided that if nobody showed at the meetings, nobody would show up to man the hot dog, candy apple and T-shirt booths or direct the beauty pageant and band concerts.

South Boston officials said citizens expressed more interest in some type of harvest festival, such as a golf tournament tied to the area's fledging commercial vegetable crops. Tobacco has long been a part of the area's economic climate, but hesitance to celebrate the golden leaf's place may be an indication of its decline.

If the town's harvest festival gets off the ground we suggest the slogan "Tee Off For 'Taters! in South Boston, Va."

Welcome

This past week was marked by a New York City homecoming for veterans of the Southeast Asia War. (The conflict spread outside Vietnam, and the broader label always seemed more appropriate.)

An estimated 20,000 veterans marched and shared in the long-awaited experience.

It seems only yesterday the nation's capital opened its arms to the returnees. A magnificent and imaginative war memorial and statue were dedicated to honor those servicemen who came home and those who did not. But that was not enough.

It became quite clear the veterans would not be satisfied until their return was officially recognized by New York City, and the Big Apple came through one more time.

Another etched glass wall bearing words of some among them who served in Vietnam was erected; there were fireworks and, finally, the tickertape parade traditionally reserved for heroes.

The returnees from Vietnam underlined what is becoming a great truth: no welcome home to heroes is complete until New York City says it's so.

Downplaying A News Event

BITBURG, West Germany (AP) — It seemed odd when President Reagan did not shake hands with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl at their ceremony of reconciliation between two nations once at war.

The two leaders stood far apart and merely watched as two other wartime adversaries, Gen. Matthew B. Ridgway, an American commander at the Battle of the Bulge, and Gen. Johannes Steinhoff, a Luftwaffe ace, came together and clasped hands warmly in front of nearly 2,000 graves at the flower-filled Bitburg military cemetery.

If Reagan and Kohl had done the same, it would have offered a striking picture to photographers. And, that may be exactly why the two leaders did not duplicate the gesture of the two generals.

In fact, the highly touted White House publicity engines seemed to be running in reverse at Bitburg, purposely playing down an event that brought Reagan the biggest controversy of his presidency and, as aides openly acknowledged, caused him deep anguish.

Bitburg contains the graves of 49 members of Adolf Hitler's notorious SS troops, which operated Nazi concentration camps during World War II. The revelation of that fact brought cries of protest from Jews, veterans, Congress and others, and demands that Reagan cancel his visit.

Instead, the president went ahead, keeping his promise to Kohl.

White House aides insisted Reagan would not stay long at the cemetery, perhaps no more than 15 minutes. The final schedule showed he would be there 10 minutes.

In fact, he stayed eight minutes. Reagan was out of his limousine and already walking down the cemetery path by the time reporters and photographers in the president's motorcade ran to the scene from their buses.

The president did not turn his eyes toward the graves. Instead, he kept his head turned in conversation with Ridgway.

At the front of the cemetery, Reagan stood facing a slate memorial. His back was to the graves. Not a good picture, photographers said.

White House aides privately expressed delight that both Newsweek and Time didn't put Bitburg on their covers. Instead, the magazines used pictures of Reagan at the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp, paying an emotion-filled tribute to Nazi victims — not Nazi soldiers.

"I have no problem with that," one senior staff aide said.

With that as a demonstration of how the White House can play down a story, Reagan's aides quickly switched gears the next day for the president's final appearance in a five-day stay in West Germany.

Reagan delivered an upbeat speech to wildly applauding students at a medieval castle, the picture-perfect fortress on a hill.

When Reagan finished the address, reporters and photographers were led to a hillside to watch as the president answered questions from the students. It was a good picture for cameramen, but the press entourage was too far away to hear the exchange.

By the time Reagan arrived in Madrid, the publicity engines were in full forward, revving up the promotion for Reagan's speech three days later at Strasbourg, France.

The Strasbourg appearance, on the 40th anniversary of the end of the war, was the event that the White House wanted to be the highlight of Reagan's 10-day stay in Europe.

White House National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane, a man who usually stays in the background, stepped forward to disclose that Reagan would discuss four American "confidence-building" proposals to reduce military tensions between the United States and Soviet Union.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes added more details about the proposals at a briefing later that same day.

Hadn't these proposals been made before and ignored by the Soviets? Well, yes, Speakes acknowledged. Even so, they still got a lot of attention.

McFarlane was back in the briefing room the next day, putting yet another spin on the Strasbourg speech.

In a rare departure from tradition, McFarlane's briefing was on the record, available for coverage by radio and television.

Even more strange, he offered reporters big chunks of quotations from the speech the president would deliver the next day. The comments were for immediate release, as if Reagan were making them a day earlier than scheduled.

McFarlane revealed Reagan would accuse the Soviet Union of developing mobile, multiwarhead missiles with a first-strike capability, missiles which could evade detection required for arms control verification. That would be intolerable, he said.

The usually low-key McFarlane spiked his performance with an imitation of Henry Kissinger's German accent. Remember, this was an on-camera appearance.

At the end of McFarlane's briefing, White House deputy press secretary Robert Sims got on stage and reminded reporters once again they had heard an on-the-record briefing.

The two-day publicity effort successfully diverted press reports away from differences with Spain over demands to cut back American troops stationed in the country and differences over Nicaragua.

Martin Finds A Ghost

RALEIGH — As if Gov. Jim Martin didn't have enough on his mind already, now he's got to deal with a ghost in the Executive Mansion.

In a luncheon address to the N.C. Editorial Writers Conference in Chapel Hill, Martin said he, his wife Dorothy and their son Ben were enjoying life at the mansion, except for the ghost.

What ghost? Well, Martin didn't know about it either until he moved in. The place kind of creaks and there are unexplained noises that sometimes sound like the rattling of chains. But security tried to assure him that it was nothing more than the building's 16-foot wooden beams and the century-old water pipes.

Martin got the truth when he went up to the third floor and found a wonderful old bed.

"It was magnificent," Martin said. He asked a member of the domestic staff about the bed and learned that it belonged to Gov. Daniel Fowle, chief executive in January 1891, when the mansion was completed. Fowle is the only governor to have died in the mansion. He did so on April 7, 1891.

"The staff says that every time we get a new governor, they bring the Fowle bed downstairs and then they end up bringing it back upstairs two weeks later," Martin said. "It's plenty big enough for two, but when Governor Fowle gets in..."

Martin said he's adjusting well to life in Raleigh. He says he's been delighted by "how well the state provides for the governor" both in terms of staff to do the job and in perks like the mansion.

Martin had been concerned that the executive job would leave him with less time for his family than he'd had as a congressman. Just the opposite has happened.

"I have more control over my schedule," he says, "so I have more time to spend with my family. My office is near my home so Dottie and I can have lunch together, for example."

The governor also revealed that Mrs. Martin is part of his scheduling staff. This means she understands the pressures on him and that she has a bit of authority to veto an event that might cut into important family time.

One Democratic senator has found the silver lining in having a Republican governor. He can pass off on requests for jobs.

Sen. Charlie Hippy, D-Haywood, has begun referring requests for jobs to Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, the Senate minority leader.

A woman from Raleigh recently wrote Hippy looking for help getting a job. He passed the letter to Redman and wrote the woman saying, "Unfortunately, I am not in the Executive Branch of government which is in charge of hiring personnel. Neither am I a member of the political party which is in charge of the Executive Branch this session."

Redman said he's going to start sending the letters back to Hippy. "I'm not in the personnel business," he said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan spoke to the editorial writers at an 8 a.m. breakfast the day after Martin appeared. His press secretary, Brenda Summers, was exhausted. Daylight savings time had cost her an hour's sleep, and the day before she'd been "smiling all day" and night at the never-ending Jefferson-Jackson Day ceremonies in Raleigh.

"I'm going to go home, put the cat out and grunt all day," the usually chatty Ms. Summers said.

Strength For Today

Industry today is almost universally committed to the "cooling-off" provision in labor negotiations. No strikes until a cooling-off period has elapsed.

It would be good for us all to put this in our personal code. No stinging rejoinder until a cooling-off period. No divorces until the contemplating parties have had a few months to think what their actions will mean to themselves and their families. No lawsuits until the litigants have a chance to ponder the expense, mental and moral as well as financial, of going to law.

Most things over which people quarrel are ridiculously petty and insignificant. Yet feuds lasting for generations have often started over matters forgotten in a few weeks; nevertheless the feuds go on.

So cool off, brother, cool off; and in doing so try to make plain to yourself just what the excitement is about, anyway.

— Art Buchwald —

Spreading The Peace

Since this is a period of reconciliation and the president is in a forgiving mood, I called one of his close associates and asked him, "Now that President Reagan has forgiven the Germans for what they did in World War II, do you think he might forgive the American air traffic controllers who went out on strike?"

"The president would never go that far. You have to remember what the air controllers did. When they walked out on their jobs they committed an atrocity against every man, woman and child in the United States."

"I know it was a despicable thing to do," I said. "But I thought after Bitburg, it would be the perfect time for the president to heal the wounds here at home."

"The president is the first person to let bygones be bygones, but to my knowledge he has never forgiven anyone who has gone out on an unauthorized strike."

"Ok. Forget the air controllers. Do you think in his present mood of reconciliation Mr. Reagan might forgive the mother in Chicago who chiseled on her welfare?"

"How could he forgive her?"

"Maybe the president could fly to Chicago and lay a wreath in front of the liquor store where he claims she bought a bottle of vodka with her food stamps."

"Too many people in this country have suffered because of that welfare mother in Chicago. It's one thing to forgive people you fought against during a war — it's another to turn the other cheek to those who cheat on their food stamps."

"I guess there is no way for the president to reconcile with the American farmers who went bankrupt due to bad management."

"By reconciling with the farmers at this time the president would be sending the wrong signal to the agricultural community. The Germans may have made some mistakes in World War II, but you could never accuse them of looking for a bailout from Washington when they couldn't sell their crops."

"I don't imagine that the president would be willing to make a gesture of reconciliation toward the congressman who voted down aid for the contras fighting in Nicaragua."

"How can you compare what the people buried in the Bitburg cemetery did to left-wing spiteful legislators who exterminated Mr. Reagan's foreign policy in Central America?"

"My mistake. Since this is National Reconciliation Week I thought the president might want to forgive those who voted against him in Nicaragua, just so he could get his budget package through."

"Nicaragua is a moral issue, and Mr. Reagan will never compromise on a moral issue for political gain. That was the message of Bitburg."

"Is there any possibility the president would want to make peace with the big spenders in the Senate who for the past 40 years have driven this country into debt with their wild socialist schemes?"

"It's much too early to offer an olive branch to them. Although everyone who fought on the German side in World War II is no longer alive, there are many big spenders walking around scot-free who have never answered for their economic crimes. Someday they will have to face a higher judge than the president of the United States."

I asked, "Do you think it's too soon for the Reagan administration to bury the hatchet with those people in the media who have blown the Nazi thing way out of proportion to what it really is?"

"If you're asking the president to pardon them for what they have written about Bitburg, the answer is no. There stories are too fesh in this administration's mind. Mr. Reagan still believes in 'collective guilt' where the journalists of this country are concerned."

Bethel Extends Deadline On Rehabilitation Project

BETHEL — The Bethel Town Board this week extended a community development project deadline for Talbert Cox and Associates to Sept. 30. The company is rehabilitating Bethel homes with state monies.

In related business, the board approved a rental house owned by state Sen. Robert Martin, D-Pitt, for inclusion in the community development project after hearing the state had ruled the project would not represent a conflict of interest. The $13,000 contract for rehabilitation of the senator's house was awarded to Sara's Builders.

Other action taken at the meeting included the following:

- Denial of a request made by Ray Bell of Greenville Cable TV to place arts and entertainment on the channel recently vacated by Nickelodeon. Bell said the cable company had received several calls from Bethel residents asking that the change be made. Board members responded that not enough people had requested the change to allow the 15-cent a month increase entering the arts and entertainment channel would entail.

- Tabling of action on a request by Robert B. Nelson to endorse construction of a new four-lane highway (U.S. 64) from Rocky Mount to Williamston.

- Approval of a sample ballot for the special bond referendum for sanitary sewer bonds to be held June 4.

- Approval of a public hearing to be held on recommendations from the Bethel Planning and Zoning Board concerning clearance between main buildings, accessory buildings and rear property lines.

- Approval of 210 days of sick leave for retirement purposes for police officer Jesse Clarence Gardner.

- Reappointment of Joe Rawls, Ray Wilkins and Ronnie Cullipher to three year terms on the town's recreation committee.

- Approval of plans for Woodbridge Apartments on the condition that the Planning and Zoning Board approve the plans at its monthly meeting.

- Approval of a resolution to survey the town's lot on Flat Swamp Road and install iron corner stones at an approximate cost of $300.

- Approval of a budget amendment transferring $15,000 from the capital reserve fund to the waster water improvement fund.

- Approval of a resolution proclaiming May 12-18 as Municipal Clerks' Week in Bethel.

The Bethel Town Board meets the first Tuesday of every month at 7:30 p.m. at the Bethel Town Office.

New Base Planned For Park Cannon

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

The cannon in the park alongside First Street is to be renovated, according to a report made by Boyd Lee, executive director of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department.

Lee told commissioners at the May meeting that action is being taken to make and install a heavy metal wood-covered base for the cannon on Town Common. The original all-wood base has deteriorated and is causing the cannon to tilt, Lee explained.

The metal wood-covered base will provide a permanent base that will eliminate the problem.

Lee told the board members that the department's staff in recent weeks have put forth exceptional efforts in conjunction with unusually heavy recreation activities, including Spring Fest '85, Special Olympics, and the Senior Citizens Games. Together, the three activities involved attendance totaling more than 4,000 participants and spectators.

Henry Hostetler, director of the River Birch Tennis Park, was congratulated for a recent achievement. Of 85 participants in a tennis teacher certification seminar, Hostetler ranked No. 1 in the group from several states for certification as a professional tennis teacher. "We are proud of Henry, both for coming out at top place and for the fine work he's doing in tennis here in Greenville," Lee commented.

Biology Students Receive Awards

Sixteen students in the East Carolina University Department of Biology, including graduating seniors, were honored at the department's recent annual spring awards luncheon. The honorees were recognized for superior achievement in scholarship, scientific research and service during the 1984-85 academic year.

James A. Ebert Jr. of Pembroke was given the $750 Mary Caughey Helms Award, presented annually to a graduating senior who has demonstrated excellence in research and academic work. The Helms award was established in 1967 in recognition of the late Dr. Helms, an East Carolina faculty member.

Outstanding Senior Awards with cash gifts of $100 each were presented to Kerry J. Rodabaugh of Raleigh and Samuel Johnson of Smithfield. Ms. Rodabaugh and Johnson were also the department's nominees for the campus-wide Phi Sigma Pi senior award, and Johnson was among six finalists for the University Alumni Award.

Samuel Wynne of Greenville was given the Kalmus Scholarship Award, established by the ECU Biology Club. The award carries a cash prize of $200.

Graduate students Sandra Lee Stanaitis of Glenolden, Pa., and Gregg Howe of Raleigh were recognized as recipients of James S. McDaniel Scholarships, annual awards begun in 1981 to honor a deceased department chairperson. Each award covers the cost of a year's tuition and fees. Howe also received a biotechnology grant from Burroughs Wellcome.

Graduate student Wade L. Bryant of Greenville was given an engraved plaque by the widow of the late Dr. Donald B. Jeffreys in recognition of his selection as a Jeffreys Scholarship recipient. The Jeffreys scholarship, with a cash award of $500, was begun in 1983 by the Jeffreys family to mark the occasion of the former faculty member's retirement.

Several students were recognized as recipients of Special Helms Awards, which provided varied amounts of funding for travel and research. They were Gregg Howe of Raleigh; Douglas Lee of Goldsboro; Deborah Nolteimer of Washington, John Poulos of Wilmington, Judy Heath of Grifton; Brenda Smith of Ayden, and Maureen Donnellan, James McLane, Steven Harlan and Steven VanCleave, all of Greenville.

Scholarships Given

Several drama, dance and broadcasting students in the East Carolina University Department of Theater Arts have been awarded annual scholarships.

Kevin Dill of Elon College, a junior communications major, was given the $500 David Briggs Martin Memorial Scholarship. The award was established by the family of a deceased former student.

Sherry Talley of Morehead City, a junior theater arts/speech major with a concentration in broadcasting, was given the Kelvin Parks Memorial Award which covers the cost of a semester's tuition and fees. She has a perfect 4.0 academic grade point average in her major courses.

John D. Messick Scholarships of $500 each were given to Ernest Miller of Lexington and Kendra Boster of Raleigh. Both awards are given from a fund established in honor of a former East Carolina president.

The Amanda Meiggs Loessin Acting Award of $500 was given to drama student Robert Ruffin of Mobjack, Va. Awards from the department's endowment fund were given to Manual Cordero of Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico ($500), and to Jennifer Paulson of Raleigh, and Sandra Bullock of Greenville ($250 each).

Two students received special recognition: Jamie Ross Wilkerson of Winston-Salem, honored for outstanding achievement in dance, and Connie Yoder of Taylorsville, who received the Rosalind Roulston Award for Excellence (established in honor of a former faculty member) and the department's Outstanding Senior Award.

The scholarship recipients and honorees were recognized at the annual Department of Theater Arts spring dinner.

Wholesale Price Index Climbs In April

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sharply higher gasoline and heating oil prices sent prices at the wholesale level up 3 percent in April, the largest monthly increase since last November, the government said today.

The gain actually says more about March prices, however, because the energy price calculations in the Labor Department's produce price index lag a month. Energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent report.

Prices at the wholesale level have now risen 1.7 percent for the first four months of 1985, but are only 7 percent higher than April 1984 because there have been several months in which prices declined. The April increase of 0.3 percent would translate to an annual rate of 3.8 percent if extended for 12 consecutive months.

The volatile increase is the first time in 12 months when the index has shown back-to-back gains.

The department had reported back-to-back increases in November and December but revised the December figure today to show wholesale prices really were flat that month.

Gasoline prices rose 9.5 percent in the April report and heating oil rose 10.2 percent. Natural gas prices, on the other hand, declined .2 percent. Those energy prices, which translated to a seasonally adjusted 5.8 percent in the energy index as a whole, offset declines in other major areas.

Food prices dropped 1 percent, the fourth consecutive decline. Prices for consumer goods other than food and energy edged down 0.2 percent, after a 0.6 percent increase in March.

Despite the sharp jump in energy prices, which had been a major element in prices at the retail level rising 5 percent in March, analysts say they don't foresee a continuation of that trend and are still predicting another year of relatively modest inflation.

The optimism is based largely on the fact that worldwide oil demand is still well below the production capacity of oil-producing nations and is likely to remain so for some time.

The U.S. dollar also remains high on world markets, tending to hold prices down in the United States.

The Labor Department offered these further specifics on April wholesale price activity:

—New car prices were down .2 percent, the first decline this year, and light truck prices fell .9 percent.

—Capital equipment costs were unchanged after two consecutive months of substantial gains.

—Women and girls apparel costs were both higher, but there was no change for men and boys clothing prices. Shoe prices were down for everybody.

—Tire prices fell 1.2 percent, but rubber footwear costs shot up 5.3 percent. Plastic prices increased .9 percent.

Prices turned down sharply for pork and fresh vegetables, after rising a month earlier, and also fell for beef, veal and fresh fruits. By contrast, egg, fish and candy prices all rose.

There were also downturns for over-the-counter drugs, home electronic equipment and household glassware.

In all, the producer price index for finished goods stood at 293.1 in April, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.31 last month.

Price changes that show up in the producer price measure are a good barometer of how food, energy and other commodity prices will move at the retail level. However, the consumer price index checks the broader range of items — such as housing and medical care — and therefore does not always track the wholesale index.

Prices at the wholesale level rose 1.8 percent in 1984 and were up 4 percent at the retail level. Analysts continued to project 1985 performances in that range, although probably slightly higher.

AFTER THE VOTE — Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., faces reporters on Capitol Hill this morning after he was summoned from Bethesda Naval Hospital to help Republicans gain a 50-49 victory in passing a Reagan-backed 1986 budget package. Senate Approves GOP-Backed Deficit Reduction Package By Only One Vote

By TOM RAUM
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate early today approved, 50-49, a Republican package of $295 billion in spending cuts that would cancel next year's Social Security benefit increases and pare President Reagan's defense buildup — with an ailing GOP member rushed to the Capitol by ambulance to provide the winning margin.

The three-year deficit reduction package next goes to the Democratic House of Representatives, where its fate was uncertain. House Democratic leaders have generally voiced opposition to any provision limiting Social Security benefits.

Reagan, speaking in Portugal before ending his European trip, praised the package as giving him "more than 90 percent of what we have asked for in the budget." He also said he received assurance from the Senate that he can come back for more it appears the reduction in his defense spending request is harmful.

"I have the agreement of the Senate that if this represents ... a cut in (defense) spending beyond where we should go, I will be returning for a supplemental appropriation," he said.

On Social Security, Reagan said, "I was faced with a mandate" from 79 senators who "demanded that we have some curbing" of the cost-of-living increases.

Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., who underwent surgery for a ruptured appendix the day before, was brought to the Capitol from nearby Bethesda Naval Hospital to vote for the package on the suspenseful, post-midnight roll call.

Wilson, wearing a bathrobe, was wheeled into the center aisle of the Senate.

"What is the question?" he asked, then voted "aye" to a standing ovation by members of both parties.

Wilson's vote brought the roll call to 49-49 in the Republican-controlled Senate. Vice President George Bush then voted to break the tie.

After the vote, Reagan congratulated Majority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., by telephone on successfully steering the compromise 1986 budget through the Senate.

"I think a $300 billion package is worth staying up all night for," said Dole, who invited reporters into his office to hear his end of the call. The final vote came after a nonstop 18-hour Senate session.

"We know you're a little disappointed on the defense (spending levels), but I think there could be some adjustments later on if there's a need," Dole said.

A House-Senate conference committee will eventually have to reconcile differences between versions of the budget passed by the two chambers.

The budget document is only a spending outline, a set of targets for congressional committees to meet. It does not go to the president for his signature or veto. Separate legislation must be passed later to make the targets binding and to release funds for federal programs.

After the vote endorsing the Republican package, Democrats made final efforts to amend the plan to block the Social Security restrictions, to restore full Medicare funding and to establish a 15 percent minimum corporate income tax. They failed on 51-47, 54-44 and 61-37 roll calls, respectively.

Then, the Senate took a final voice vote on the overall package, sending it to the House.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said the House Budget Committee would begin working on its version of the budget next week.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., predicted major difficulties for the plan in the House — especially the Social Security limits.

"I think if they (Republicans) are doing any crowing right now, it will be short-lived," Byrd said.

Dole said right up to the time of the Senate vote that he wasn't sure he had enough support to pass the package — which was modified repeatedly through Thursday's marathon session to pick up additional support — and that he needed all the help he could get.

The plan, which calls for $949 billion in federal spending in 1986, would cancel next January's cost-of-living increases for 35 million Social Security recipients while scaling back the administration's military buildup.

And, while not cutting domestic spending as deeply as the president had originally sought, the plan freezes, trims and in some cases eliminates programs throughout the entire federal government.

Dole said the plan would chop nearly $56 billion from the nation's $200 billion-plus deficit in 1986, and would meet the goal he and other GOP leaders set four months ago when they vowed to develop a plan to cut the federal deficit to less than $100 billion by 1988 — without raising taxes.

But the victory was hard-fought, and despite last-minute attempts to get Democrats aboard — including a call by President Reagan to at least one Democrat, Sen. John Stennis of Mississippi — the victory was won largely with Republican support.

"This plan is flawed," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., claiming the package expected sacrifices of senior citizens it didn't demand of "fat cats," a reference to those large corporations and wealthy individuals who Chiles claim don't pay their fair share of taxes.

O'Neill Questions Tax Reform Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The drive to overhaul the federal income tax has a fresh pledge of support from the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, but House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill is raising questions about the fairness of the Reagan administration plan.

Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the tax-writing panel, told reporters Thursday, "I am enthusiastic about a bill and will move it as fast as I can." His goal, he said, is final action by the end of the year.

But O'Neill indicated a statement earlier in the week by Reagan is causing him to reconsider his promise to support the plan the president sends to Congress, probably next week.

During his European trip, Reagan volunteered that his plan will be "less progressive" than the current system. O'Neill interpreted that to mean the plan would reverse the 70-year-old principle that the wealthy should pay a greater proportion of their income in taxes than do other Americans.

"The president seems to have reverted to old ideological Ronald Reagan," O'Neill said in a statement. "I have said that I would support the president if he presents a fair tax bill. I am still hoping that the voices of pragmatism within the White House will prevail over the voices of right-wing ideology."

Neither Reagan nor the White House explained the "less progressive" statement. However, the phrasing may just have been the president's shorthand way of pointing out that his plan would reduce most income tax rates, including cutting the 50 percent maximum individual tax rate, which applies only to upper-income people, to 35 percent or less.

The aim of the rate cuts is the same as under the across-the-board tax reduction enacted in 1981: to increase incentives for work and investment by taxing away less of each additional dollar earned. And reducing the number of personal tax rates from as many as 16 down to just three would mean most people would not be pushed into a higher tax bracket when they get a pay raise.

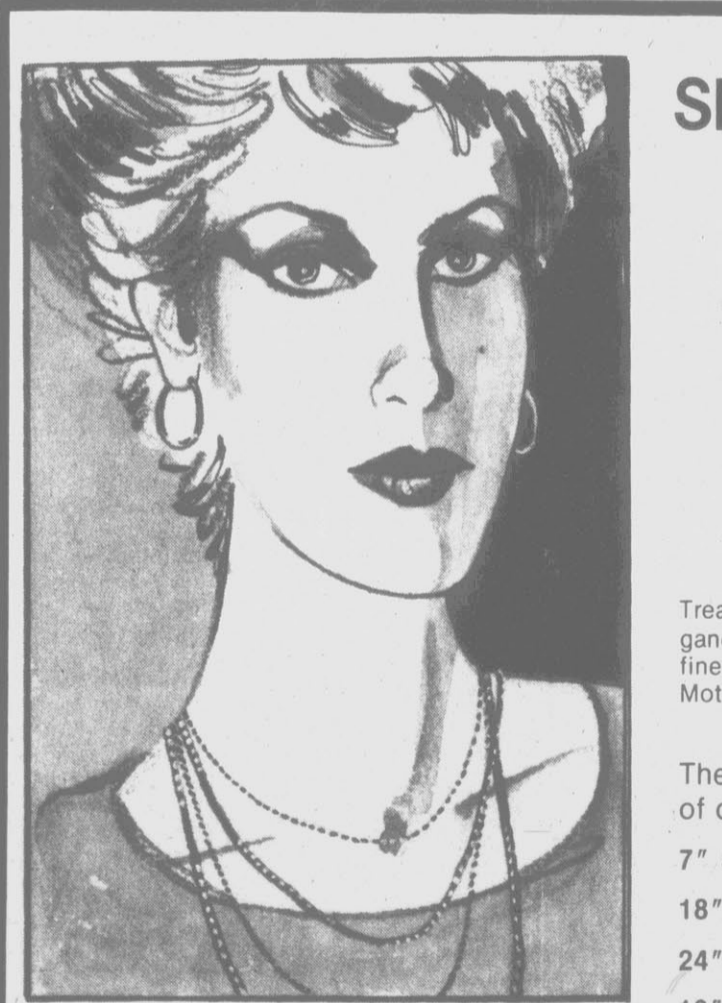

Lower rates for individuals and corporations are certain to be a part of the president's bill, which also calls for raising the 1985 $1,040 personal exemption to $1,800 or $2,000, boosting the standard deductions and limiting or repealing many deductions used by millions of taxpayers.

The big uncertainty is over which deductions will be trimmed. Sources in Congress and the Treasury Department say the president still has not given his final approval to those details.

FINGERPRINTED — A Broward County, Fla., sheriff's deputy fingerprints Roswell Gilbert, 75, after he was found guilty of first-degree murder in the shooting of his wife, Gilbert, who said he shot Emily Gilbert, 73, because of her suffering from illness, was sentenced to life in prison. (AP Laserphoto)

'Mercy' Killer Given Life Term

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — A 75-year-old man convicted of murder in the "mercy killing" of his wife of 51 years to end her suffering from Alzheimer's disease says his mandatory 25-year prison term amounts to a death penalty for him.

"It's the end of my life," said Roswell Gilbert after the jury on Thursday convicted him of first-degree murder. "What is left? You think I'm gonna live over 100?"

Circuit Judge Thomas Coker Jr. immediately sentenced Gilbert to life in prison, with a 25-year mandatory term. The state had waived the death penalty, making the life sentence the only possible punishment for first-degree murder.

Gilbert sat stoically, but his only child, Martha Moran, burst into tears when the verdict was read after five hours of deliberation.

"They killed my father," Mrs. Moran said, weeping as her husband led her from the packed courtroom.

As marshals led him out of the Broward County Courthouse, Gilbert said the term amounted to a death sentence for him.

"Is this justice?" he asked.

"He's numb right now," said defense lawyer Harry Gulkin, adding he would appeal the conviction.

Gilbert had testified that he shot his wife Emily, 73, twice in the head out of compassion. He called police and surrendered after the shooting.

Mrs. Gilbert, killed March 4 in the couple's condominium apartment, was senile from brain degeneration caused by Alzheimer's disease and suffered from osteoporosis, a painful bone disintegration.

Witnesses testified that she longed for and begged for death.

Prosecutor Kelly Hancock had urged jurors to ignore pleas for compassion, saying the shooting was premeditated, cold-blooded murder.

"Sympathy cannot play a role," Hancock said in closing arguments Thursday. "It was an act of convenience. He didn't solve her problems, he solved his. (The marriage vow) doesn't say until one of you gets sick and you shoot."

Defense lawyer Joe Varon begged jurors in his closing arguments earlier Thursday to ignore laws and set legal precedent with an acquittal.

"There is no law to fit this situation," Varon told jurors. "She was sick. There was no hope. She was wracked in pain."

Gilbert testified Wednesday his wife's senility and pain were increasing. Often confused, she sometimes referred to him as "the bastard" and was terrified that he would desert her.

On March 4, crying and in pain, she begged for death, he and two other witnesses testified.

"I thought to myself, I've got to do it," said the gaunt, silver-haired defendant. "The only solution was to terminate her suffering. I know it's murder but so what? Some things are more important than law."

While waiting for the verdict Thursday, Gilbert and Mrs. Moran, 50, reminisced about Mrs. Gilbert.

"She would feel as I do," Gilbert said. "We had an understanding. Neither of us were afraid of death, just of dying. Death is inevitable."

House Report Says Elderly Abuse Rising

WASHINGTON (AP) — Abuse of the elderly, a problem that remains largely hidden, is increasing nationally and may affect about 4 percent of the aged population, according to a House subcommittee.

"It represents a shocking and still largely hidden problem affecting over a million of our nation's most helpless and vulnerable citizens," Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging's subcommittee on health and long-term care, said today in releasing a panel study.

"Physical violence, including negligence, and financial abuse appear to remain the most common forms of abuse, followed by the abrogation of basic constitutional rights and psychological abuse," the subcommittee's report said.

"The average citizen would find it hard to imagine just how widespread and frequent this problem is — how it cuts across all classes of society, how it occurs in large cities and in small towns," Pepper said in prepared remarks accompanying the study.

"Out of fear of or dependence on their abuser, older victims are reluctant to admit their loved ones, their own children, abuse them," he noted.

The subcommittee sent questionnaires to all state human service departments, reviewed case histories over the past four years, conducted interviews with experts and researchers, and surveyed news accounts, he said.

It concluded that about 4 percent, or 1.1 million of the nation's elderly, may be victims of abuse each year. This would be an increase of 100,000 abuse cases annually since 1981, Pepper said.

"The subcommittee learned that elder abuse is far less likely to be reported than child abuse," he said.

"While one out of three child abuse cases is reported, only one out of five cases of elder abuse comes to the attention of appropriate authorities."

While some 40 percent of all reported abuse cases involve adults and the elderly, only 4.7 percent of state budgets for protective services is committed to elderly abuse victims, he said.

"The subcommittee found that while it is a shame that on the average, states spend only about $22 per child state resident for protective services, it is a crime that they spend only $2.90 on average for each elder abuse victim," Pepper said.

The subcommittee said it found that 82 percent of all adult abuse cases reported annually involve elderly victims. The victims are likely to be age 75 or older, with women more likely to be abused than men, partly because they have longer life expectancy.

The abuser usually is experiencing great stress, with alcoholism, drug addiction, marital problems and long-term financial difficulties likely to play a role in incidents of elder abuse.

"The son of the victim is the most likely abuser, followed by the daughter of the victim," the report said. "It is interesting to note that the abuser, in many cases, was abused by the parents as a child."

Computer Model Shows Planets Formed By Violent Crashes

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The birth of the inner solar system likely was a violent period of giant objects crashing and fusing into one another to form molten planets and the Earth's moon, according to new computer models re-creating the creation.

The mathematical models, which simulate conditions during the first few million years in the solar system's 4½-billion year history, support theories that giant impacting bodies played an important role in the formation of the planets, a Carnegie Institution of Washington scientist says.

Dr. George Wetherill, director of Carnegie's department of terrestrial magnetism, said Thursday that the elaborate models suggest much of the Earth's present size is due to mass accumulated from these "impactors."

"This work shows that if you start with a plausible model, the solar system naturally develops these large impactors and that they come together to form the terrestrial (inner) planets," Wetherill said in an interview.

In a study published today in the journal Science, Wetherill said his computer simulations are the first to model the early solar system in three dimensions with as many as 500 beginning objects. Most previous studies used fewer than 100 bodies calculated in two dimensions, he said.

Wetherill constructed and ran 10 similar models with slight changes in some variables to see if the computer simulations would result in an inner solar system similar to the one that exists today, with the hard-surfaced terrestrial planets Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars circling the sun.

"I get this thing (the computer) going and then stand back to watch what happens," he said. "It assumes it's the solar system and evolves all by itself."

The models excluded the gaseous outer planets, which Wetherill said probably formed earlier through a different process.

His models pick up the evolution of the solar system when it is about 2 million years old, when early clouds of dust and gases had accumulated into 500 objects called planetesimals, each about one-third the mass of the Earth's moon.

This swarm of objects resulted in numerous collisions as the masses swirled into one another when their orbits brought them into contact, a process that formed larger bodies.

According to the studies, after nine million years, about 66 percent of the mass of the planetesimals had accumulated into what would be the final planets and a few other massive bodies.

After 252 million years, nearly all the bodies had come together as planets with masses and orbits resembling the present inner solar system.

Wetherill said most of the big impacts occurred when the system was about 10 million years old, but some still were happening at 50 million to 100 million years.

During this time, the Earth was hit by accumulated bodies three times the size of Mars, which today is about one-tenth as massive as the Earth.

These impacts, Wetherill said, could have thrown up enough material that would later condense to form the moon, supporting a theory advanced a decade ago by another scientist, A.G.W. Cameron.

"Cameron proposed that the moon resulted from a giant impact on the Earth, but he didn't explain where the impactors came from," Wetherill said. "My work shows that impactors are what you would expect from the way the solar system formed."

CBS Says Ad Was Mistake

NEW YORK (AP) — Next season's expected prime-time slugging match between CBS and NBC is starting very early, and the first round — fought in competing newspaper ads — belongs to NBC.

The two networks this week each ran self-congratulatory advertisements about prime-time ratings results, but CBS had to back off, admitting Thursday that its claim that "more Americans" watched CBS in prime time was wrong.

The A.C. Nielsen Co., the ratings service that measures audiences, had approved CBS' promotional message, which erroneously claimed that more individuals tuned in to the network during prime time when it should have cited households.

"We made a mistake in OK'ing the copy," said Rusty Taragan, Nielsen's eastern zone manager. "We shouldn't have OK'd it."

CBS said it would change the ad where it still could to correct the mistake.

"They're right. Our ad should have said 'households,' that more households watched CBS," said Michael Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement who approved the ad.

61-Second Minute Is Coming

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Take heed: the 61-second minute is coming.

On the last minute of the last hour of the last day in June, one second will be inserted into the two atomic clocks at the U.S. Naval Observatory in Washington and at the National Bureau of Standards in Boulder, Colo.

The effect will be to lengthen that minute, that day, that week and this year — all to match perfectly kept human time to the imperfection of nature.

Spend the time wisely. The extra second is a rare gift.

As everyone knows, the standard for clock time is the resonant frequency of the cesium atom. And solar time is based on the Earth's rate of rotation.

Alas, the two aren't always the same.

Pay attention, now. This is where it gets difficult.

The official time represents the average of many cesium beam atomic clocks. The system, says the naval observatory, is accurate to within a billionth of a second per day — "a time measurement precision equivalent to measuring the distance to the sun to within less than one-tenth of an inch."

But man, whose timekeeping predates atomic whizzbangs, likes to watch the sun and the stars to set his clock. When a given heavenly body is at the same place tomorrow as it was today, that's one revolution — one day.

The uncooperative Earth, however, can't be counted on. Sometimes it speeds up; mostly it slows down. The rotation is uniform only to within one-thousandth of a second a day and, in the observatory's analogy, that is equivalent to measuring the sun's distance only to within about a mile.

That might be all right for most of us, but it isn't for the finicky.

To get the two time standards — atomic and solar — together, the leap second is slipped in every so often. That was done twice in 1972 and once every year since except for 1980 and 1984.

The extra second slipped in between the end of June 30 and the start of July 1 will be the 13th in the series.

Enjoy.

Woman Who Cried Rape Tells Governor She Lied

CHICAGO (AP) — Cathleen Crowell Webb withstood sharp questioning and asked Gov. James R. Thompson to try to see through the web of lies she spun eight years ago and grant clemency to Gary Dotson, the man she once accused of raping her.

In nearly four hours of testimony at a clemency hearing Thursday, Mrs. Webb maintained that the rape story was a "big lie" and that now she wanted "simply to tell the truth about a deception that sent an innocent man to jail for six years."

But Thompson, who had called the emergency session of the Illinois Prisoner Review Board, persistently challenged Mrs. Webb about her new account and her motive for saying she fabricated the story that Dotson had raped her.

More than 16 other witnesses were scheduled to testify as the hearing resumed today, including Mrs. Webb's foster parents, Dotson's attorney, Cook County prosecutors and a polygraph examiner who tested both Mrs. Webb and Dotson.

Thompson can pardon Dotson or commute his sentence.

The 23-year-old Mrs. Webb said repeatedly Thursday that she could not recall details surrounding the events of July 9, 1977, the day the alleged rape occurred.

"In the police car didn't you tell the officer who picked you up the details (of the rape)?" Thompson asked. "Didn't you tell (another) officer? ... Didn't you tell (your foster mother)?"

To each question Mrs. Webb replied, "I don't remember if I did or didn't."

Dotson, imprisoned since his 1979 conviction but free on bond during legal efforts to gain his release, earlier made an emotional appeal to Thompson to free him.

"This nightmare doesn't seem to end," said Dotson, 28.

Some People Tell Us We Are Highbrow!

If that means it takes a certain refinement to listen to WTEB-FM 89.5, then they are right! But since when did good taste have to mean boring?

If you'd have been listening to Morning Edition last month you would have heard writer Helen Gilchrist talk about a primitive African tribe where the men never cuss or hit their children... had you caught Nostalgia Radio you could have heard William Bendix as Chester A. Riley convince his wife he meant no harm in selling their house to find uranium.

You might have heard the original Sons of The Pioneers sing cowboy songs on A Prairie Home Companion or been moved by the soulful blues of Big Mama Thornton.

Possibly you could have been interested to hear we may have a possible astronaut in the Craven County School System or that in one year the most spectacular show in the sky will be coming our way.

If all this is "Highbrow" to some perhaps we should feel honored, but if it's meant to indicate our style of programming our critics have just not been listening... pity.

Women Have Best Survival Chance After Cancer

By ROBERT BYRD
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A new eight-year survey by federal researchers shows that whites and females have better odds of beating cancer than do blacks and males.

Survival rates for white Anglo women exceeded those for their male counterparts for each major type of cancer except for bladder cancer, the National Cancer Institute said in a study reported Thursday by the Centers for Disease Control.

Similarly, black women, for the most part, survived cancer more often than did black men, the study said.

Survival was defined as living five years after diagnosis.

The survey analyzed more than 400,000 cancer cases diagnosed between 1973 and 1979 and followed through 1981, in cities and states adding up to 10 percent of the nation's population.

Lynn Reis of the Maryland-based NCI said researchers don't know exactly why women survive cancer more than men do.

"I don't think anyone has the answer to that," she said. "Some studies may implicate that women come in sooner for diagnosis and treatment."

Among men, survival rates were higher for whites than blacks in cancers of the rectum, prostate, bladder and thyroid. White women outlived their black counterparts in cancers of the bladder, breast and uterus.

Japanese people placed very highly in the survey. Japanese men survived cancer of the stomach, colon, rectum, lung, bladder, thyroid and prostate more often than did white or black men.

Japanese women survived cancer of the stomach, colon, rectum, lung, thyroid and breast more often than did white or black women.

Among all groups, survival rates were highest for cancer of the thyroid, which 91 percent of all patients survive. The prognosis was worst, regardless of race or sex, for cancers of the esophagus, liver and pancreas — each of which had a survival rate of less than 9 percent.

"The effect of socioeconomic status on cancer patient survival may partially explain these racial differences," said the CDC report. The report noted previous cancer studies showing that survival rates are lower in poorer people.

"These differences ... may be related to differences in treatment," the report said.

Some specific findings from the NCI study:

— Black women had a lower survival rate than white Anglo women for cancer of the stomach (14 percent to 16 percent), colon (45 to 50), rectum (41 to 48), lung (13 to 15), bladder (38 to 71) and breast (61 to 73).

— Black men had a worse survival rate than their white Anglo counterparts for colon cancer (43 percent to 48 percent), rectum cancer (32 to 46), lung and bronchial cancer (5 to 11), bladder cancer (52 to 73) and thyroid cancer (76 to 90).

— Black men had a slightly higher survival rate for stomach cancer than did white Anglo men — 14 percent to 12 percent. Hispanic males survived stomach cancer 19 percent of the time; Japanese men survived 25 percent of the time.

The report cautioned that some survival rates were drawn from too small a patient group to allow scientists to reach firm conclusions.

New Wave of Fighting Erupts In Beirut

BY ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer
BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — New gunbattles broke out in central Beirut today despite the ouster of the pro-Israeli leader of Lebanon's largest Christian militia, a change some had expected would help curb the fighting.

The roar of shell explosions and rocket-propelled grenades echoed through the city at midday as Moslem and Christian militiamen battled anew across the Green Line separating Christian east Beirut from the predominantly Moslem west side.

Intense sniper fire crackled on the 13th straight day of sectarian hostilities that have left 77 people killed and 400 injured by police count. Police had no casualty reports from today's fighting.

An overnight peace followed the election of Elie Hobeika as head of the Lebanese Forces, the coalition of Christian militias that fought the Moslems in Lebanon's 10-year civil war. Police said there was a noticeable de-escalation of gunfire after Hobeika was chosen, but the lull did not last.

Hobeika is the man Israel says led the massacre at the Beirut Palestinian refugee camps in 1982.

His election came after more than a month of Moslem-Christian fighting in which Syrian-backed Moslem militias had gotten the best of Christian militias in southern Lebanon and Beirut. More than 250 people have died since March 29.

After his election, Hobeika sounded a pro-Syrian theme: "Lebanon is Arab and we say this out of conviction and not fear. From this conviction we say that the Syrian role in Lebanon is essential ..."

Syria has a 30,000-man Arab League-mandated peacekeeping force in eastern and northern Lebanon. The Syrian troops have been in the country since 1976.

But neither the Syrian government nor Moslem or Druse leaders involved in Lebanon's civil war publicly reacted to the election.

"We shall wait and see what the change will mean on the ground," said a source at the National Democratic Front that groups Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party militia and pro-Syrian factions.

The man Hobeika replaced, Samir Geagea, led the Christian Lebanese Forces militia in a revolt March 12 against Syrian influence in President Amin Gemayel's government, seizing control in most of Christian Lebanon.

Syria blames Geagea for the current uprising in Christian-Moslem fighting.

Official sources said Gemayel, a Christian, had been under mounting pressure from Syria to move against Geagea and other hardline militia leaders as a means of ending the sectarian fighting.

The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said President Hafez Assad of Syria told Gemayel that he would support a push by Moslem militias into Christian east Beirut unless the Lebanese president moved against Geagea.

The Lebanese Forces announced that Hobeika, who has served as intelligence chief, was elected head of the decision-making executive committee. That means he outranks Geagea, 32, who retains his post as chief of staff.

Gemayel was not directly involved in Hobeika's election.

An Israeli government commission accused Hobeika, 35, of leading the massacre of hundreds of Palestinian refugees Sept. 16-18, 1982, at the Sabra and Chatila camps in Beirut, which the Israelis then controlled after their June invasion.

In an apparent reference to widely criticized ties the Christian militias have had with Israel during the civil war, Hobeika said: "The reasons were merely for self-defense at a time the Christians' existence was threatened ... Today we realize the necessity of returning to our Arab environment."

Syria became the main power broker in Lebanon after a U.S. peacemaking effort foundered in February 1984, and seeks to restore stability in its western neighbor with reforms that give Moslems more power.

Christians traditionally have wielded power in Lebanon, but more than half the country's 4 million people are Moslem.

Local radio stations and newspapers speculated that the reshuffle of the Christian militia command would revive Syria's mediation toward a new formula for Moslem-Christian coexistence in Lebanon.

They said a summit conference would probably be held in the Syrian capital of Damascus next week in which Assad and Gemayel would lay down the groundwork for political reforms.

Nigeria Rules Out Force To Back Alien Deadline

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The military government will not extend today's deadline for 700,000 illegal aliens to leave the country, but will not use force against those unable to leave in time, the interior minister said.

News reports Thursday estimated only a quarter of the aliens, leaving by plane, ship and truck convoy, would meet the deadline.

Maj. Gen. Mohammed Magoro, the interior minister, said in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp. that about 50,000 aliens had left Nigeria through neighboring Benin and "quite a number have gone by both air and sea." However, he gave no total figure.

"They have no cause to fear," he said of the aliens, who were attracted to Nigeria during its oil boom of the late 1970s. Now that the boom is over, the government says the aliens take jobs from Nigerians and are responsible for a high crime rate.

Asked whether those remaining would be forced out, Magoro said: "I wouldn't call it forceable expulsion. We're giving them the option of getting their papers in order. The element of fear as far as this exercise is concerned is not there."

"We'll make sure we get them out of the country and it's going to be done very, very orderly without any hitches," he said.

The government of Gen. Muhammadu Buhari, which came to power in a military coup Dec. 31, 1983, has avoided repeating the chaos and violence that resulted when a civilian government expelled 2 million aliens in January 1983.

The exodus has been slowed by careful border checks of departing aliens, to prevent them from taking out essential commodities or more than $22 worth of Nigerian currency.

Ghanaian state radio claimed in a broadcast monitored in London, that Nigerian border police confiscated money and belongings from deportees and some were forced to leave their jobs without the pay they had earned.

Nigeria's state-run radio said aliens who could prove ownership of their cars, and that taxes had been paid, could take them out of the country — a major relaxation of the rule that the aliens could take no essential commodities with them.

Lagos newspapers and the Nigerian news agency said many illegal immigrants, veterans of the previous roundup, had taken cover until the expulsion is over.

Others said they were leaving only temporarily. "We are returning to our country today, but we will back tomorrow," Adamou Youssoufou of Niger was quoted as saying.

About 100,000 of the immigrants said to be from Niger, one of the Sahel countries suffering from serious drought.

Ghana's contingent, estimated at 300,000, is the largest, as it was in the 1983 expulsion.

A private Nigerian air charter company began shuttle flights to the Ghanaian capital of Accra on Thursday and several ships were taking other Ghanaians home.

About 6,000 Ghanaians were stranded at the Benin-Nigeria border and Ghana sent 10 buses there Thursday to pick up some of them, Ghanaian officials said. Neighboring countries such as Benin have contributed to the delay by opening border crossings only during daylight hours.

State-owned Lagos radio said extra immigration officers were sent to Seme, on the frontier with Benin, because of a three-mile backup.

Immigrants waiting for the Benin border checks had to spend one or more nights in makeshift quarters and heavy seasonal rains created miserable conditions, a Nigerian reporter said.

Soviets Promise To Respect Limits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has told the United States it will respect SALT II missile limits when it deploys new SS-25 missiles, a move a senior U.S. official says could boost prospects of continuing the unratified treaty.

The official, who favors continuing SALT II beyond the scheduled expiration at the end of this year, said the administration is "in the throes of a major ... debate on the whole thing." He spoke to a reporter Thursday on condition he not be identified.

President Reagan is due to report to Congress by June 1 on the consequences of continuing U.S. adherence to the SALT II limits, although he could request an extension. The State Department official said he expects a decision in six to eight weeks.

Reagan said today in Portugal that "there's considerable evidence" that compliance with the treaty "has been rather one-sided."

"If it has been, then there's no need for us to continue," Reagan said. At a Lisbon news conference before departing for Washington, the president said a decision on continued compliance will be made "down the road."

"Actually we have not come to a point in which we in any way in our own buildup are violating or going beyond the terms of that treaty," Reagan said. "It is possible in regard to one system of weapons that we might come to such a point. And we'll make that decision then and if we do we'll do it openly and we will do it with full knowledge of the Soviet Union."

The State Department official said the administration's decision could "go either way." He said the review also includes whether to continue adhering to the SALT II treaty, which was expired.

Although the United States didn't ratify SALT II, which was negotiated by the Carter administration in 1979, both Moscow and Washington have said they would abide by its terms.

Reagan said in February he would decide in the next several months whether to join Moscow "in violating" the treaty limits on the number of missiles each nation may deploy. Moscow has denied violations, although the United States contends it has tested more new missiles than the treaty allows.

Honduras Sends Troops To Protect Border Area

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The armed forces chief says troops have been dispatched to the western part of the frontier with Nicaragua to protect towns and farms, apparently in response to reported Nicaraguan incursions.

Gen. Walter Lopez Reyes would not say what prompted the move, but military spokesmen said it was a response to reports of two border crossings by Nicaraguan soldiers in pursuit of Honduran-based rebels.

The officers, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said about 200 Nicaraguans penetrated up to 25 miles inside Honduras to attack 300 insurgents of the National Democratic Force, or FDN, the largest rebel group fighting the leftist Sandinista government. The attacks occurred Saturday and Sunday, they said.

Diplomatic sources said at least 50 rebels and 40 Nicaraguan soldiers were killed in the combat. They also spoke on condition their names not be used.

The military spokesmen said the Nicaraguan troops briefly occupied 10 villages in El Paraiso and Choluteca provinces and damaged farms.

Manuel Aguirre Vasquez, a coffee grower in the area, said many residents fled "in search of more secure places."

National Council Of Churches Seeks Broadened Unity

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

The sometimes buffeted National Council of Churches is acting to steady and expand its efforts for uniting Christian work in America and to put it on more firmly spiritual grounds.

Under the new leadership of an evangelical-minded Reformed Church in America clergyman, the Rev. Arie Brouwer, the council holds a major meeting next week on a revamped "ecumenical agenda."

It calls for greater emphasis on worship and evangelism as spiritual moorings of the movement and for fresh attempts to include the Roman Catholic Church and conservative, evangelical denominations.

Conversations with them have "picked up with new enthusiasm," says Brouwer, who this year became the council's general secretary, or chief administrator.

He says the changes would mean a "re-emphasis on the centrality of Christian unity" and put concern for it "squarely in the center of the program and vision" of the council.

The new directions were scheduled for action by the council's 260-member governing board May 15-17 in Chicago, with results to be sent both to member denominations and all others considered eligible, including Catholics.

Brouwer unveiled plans for refocusing the council's efforts on Christian unity and spiritual roots and broadening participation in it at a meeting in late April of United Methodist bishops in Seattle.

They applauded the new course and also called for a national gathering of Protestant, Catholic and Jewish representatives to consider pressing current issues such as nuclear disarmament, human rights and social justice.

This is a "larger agenda" than "the council can handle by itself," said Bishop Joseph H. Yeakel of Washington, D.C. The bishops asked Brouwer to put the proposal before next week's Chicago meeting.

Yeakel said interfaith cooperation on major issues facing society could parallel the broadly interreligious alliance that fueled the civil rights movement and opposed the Vietnam War.

There are about 139 million active church members in the country, of whom about 40 million belong to the 31 Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations that now make up the council.

It carries on a wide variety of joint Christian activities, ranging from producing educational curricula, doctrinal studies and Bible publishing to worldwide operations by its relief arm, Church World Service.

However, it has come under sharp criticism by an independent organization, the Institute for Religion and Democracy, and also in the Reader's Digest and on a 1983 CBS-TV program, "60 Minutes."

A lawsuit now is being pressed in federal courts by several member denominations, disputing the charges.

Nevertheless, they caused several denominational conventions to order inquiries into the council's work. Resulting reports have found the charges unfounded but called for closer council oversight by member denominations.

This was the gist of inquiry findings to the United Methodist bishops to whom Brouwer detailed plans both for fuller guidance by denominational representatives and widened efforts for unity.

He said the council's governing board, made up of representatives of denominations, would implement a revised structure for it to maintain their "spiritual leadership and grass-roots representation" in decisions.

This will enable the denominationally chosen board to "exercise the authority that belongs to it" and still allow various program units to participate fully and "carry out their spiritual mission," he said.

"We want very much to root the ecumenical movement deeply within the lives of the people within our member communions and we want to be responsive to people."

He said that they increasingly have voiced their desire for the council to witness to Christ's message "with great strength and clarity." Linked to that objective, plans call for establishing a new commission on worship and evangelism.

Book Explores 'Protected People'

NEW YORK (AP) — The "dhimmi" — the Christians and Jews living under Islamic law — are regarded as having only "conditional rights" that can be revoked, says an Egyptian-born woman Jewish scholar.

In a book newly exploring that field, "The Dhimmi — Jews and Christians Under Islam," published by Farleigh Dickenson University Press, Bat Ye'or says they are classified in Islamic law as "protected people."

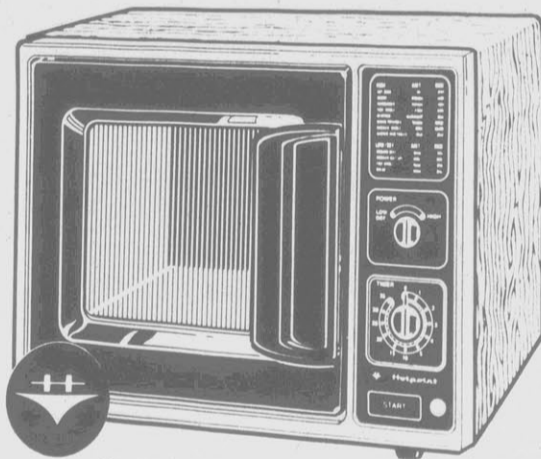

But that status often becomes "the formal expression of legalized persecution" since their rights are considered a conditional grant that can be abolished when regarded as "in the interest of Islam." Consequently, the "dhimmi" have borne the role of "victim ... despised and persecuted over the centuries," she told a consultation sponsored by the American Jewish Committee and the Associated University Presses.

French Protestant scholar Jacques Ellul says that because of the condition of non-Muslims under Islamic law, the Middle East conflict can't be solved by creating a federation of Israel with Moslem states. He writes in a foreword that such a state is a "fantasy and an illusion" since Islamic law demands putting non-Muslims in a subordinate status.

Facts About The BIBBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE ANCIENT SCRIBES!

SCRIBES WERE WRITERS WHO WERE EMPLOYED, PUBLICLY, TO WRITE UNDER DICTATION AND TO DRAW UP LEGAL DOCUMENTS (JER 36:32) (JER 32:2). A DESCRIPTION OF AN ANCIENT SCRIBE IS GIVEN IN EZEKIEL 9:2 BUT MUCH OF OUR KNOWLEDGE OF SCRIBES IS OBTAINED FROM STATUES AND CARVED BAS-RELIEFS LEFT BY THE ANCIENTS! FROM THE EGYPTIAN DYNASTY IV HAVE BEEN PRESERVED PICTURES OF SEATED SCRIBES WITH THEIR SHARP-EDGED RUSH PENS AND PALETTES. AN ANCIENT EGYPTIAN CARVING SHOWS SCRIBES LISTING THE LOOT AND THE CAPTIVES FROM A TOWN CAPTURED BY SENNACHERIB! IT WAS ONLY THROUGH THE WORK OF SCRIBES THAT THE SCRIPTURES WERE TRANSMITTED FOR CENTURIES---IT WAS ARDUOUS AND FATIGUING WORK AND IN A.D. 301 EMPEROR THEODOSIUS SET THE WAGES OF SCRIBES AT 25 DENARII PER 100 LINES FOR WRITING OF THE FIRST QUALITY AND AT 20 DENARII FOR THAT OF SECOND QUALITY! AMONG THE ISRAELITES, LEVITES WERE EMPLOYED AS SCRIBES FOR THE BUSINESS OF REPAIRING THE TEMPLE (II CHRON. 34:13)

Survey Turns Up Dissent

CHICAGO (AP) - Pope John Paul II, beginning a trip to the Netherlands this Saturday, faces some stiff disagreement within his flock there about church teachings. The Chicago Catholic, the archdiocesan weekly, reports that a survey of Dutch Catholics finds that a majority disagree with church teachings barring abortion, birth control, divorce and ordination of women. Sixty-nine percent also disagreed with the church requirement of celibacy for priests, while 57 percent favor ordination of women. National Catholic News Service says the survey was based on interviews with 1,066 Dutch Catholics. Archbishop Adrianus J. Simonis of Utrecht, the Netherlands, was quoted as saying Dutch Catholics have become polarized into "conservatives" who follow traditional church teachings and "progressives" who oppose many teachings and question centralized papal authority. In the survey, 60 percent complained that recent appointments of bishops have gone to churchmen who are too conservative and who do not dialogue with the laity. The pope has said he hopes the trip will help "overcome the differences... I come to you as a brother, as a friend."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market ran up a broad gain today, extending Thursday's rally with the help of falling interest rates and hopes for progress in shrinking the federal budget deficit.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials was up 9.50 at 1,269.77 in the first half hour.

Gainers took a 3-1 lead over losers in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Overnight, the Senate narrowly approved a three-year package of $295 billion in spending cuts.

The measure still must be acted upon in the House of Representatives, where it is expected to face some stiff opposition. But Wall Street analysts said it nevertheless raised hopes among investors that the budget deficit problem could be dealt with.

In the credit markets, prices of long-term government bonds, which move in the opposite direction from interest rates, jumped about $10 for every $1,000 in face value this morning.

Brokers said stock and bond prices also were helped by relief that the Treasury's record $20.5 billion sale of bonds and notes this week had been completed with a reasonably good response.

Another apparent plus was the government's report that the producer price index of finished goods rose 0.3 percent in April. Although the increase was a bit larger than the index has been showing in recent months, it came in at the low end of advance expectations on Wall Street.

Council ...

In other business, Council members agreed to continue two rezoning requests. The requests, brought by Tommy Edwards and Jonathan R. Day, involved redesignation of land behind Carolina Dairies and acreage east of Warren Street, respectively.

Area residents opposing the Edwards request for continuance until August asked that their opposition be noted in the record. Day's request to rezone 17.19 acres behind and east of Warren Street from residential/agricultural to high density residential will be addressed in June Council session.

Other items receiving Council approval included the following:

•An amendment to the Zoning Ordinance regarding the definition of retirement homes and permitted uses for retirement homes under the high density (R-6) residential zoning classification. Under the amendment, a retirement home will be allowed as a permitted use in an R-6 zone if the minimum lot size of the development is 75 acres or more. The amendment also subjects retirement homes in R-6 areas to density and maximum height requirements of the zone and limits placement of retirement home structures to no closer than 20 feet of any property line. Front-yard setbacks for retirement homes will be the same as those governing single-family dwellings.

•A request by the city of Greenville to annex 1.67 acres in Westhaven Subdivision for recreation purposes. The land is located at the eastern end of Cedarhurst Road, approximately 147 feet east of Kempton Drive and contiguous to the present city limits.

•A resolution calling for a public hearing on the annexation of a .932-acre tract on the north side of Mumford Road, west of and adjacent to the Greenville Utilities Operations Center. The property is owned by the city and is contiguous to the present city limits.

•A resolution authorizing placement of a new stop sign at the corner of Haven Drive and Landmark Street.

•An application for state aid in mosquito control and designation of an agent to execute documents necessary for obtaining aid.

•A contract with the East Carolina Student Government Association for maintenance and repair of SGA transit vehicles.

Cardinals Win The Way They Lost On Wednesday

By The Associated Press

The St. Louis Cardinals won ugly, thanks to two 10th-inning errors by Los Angeles first baseman Greg Brock. But after losing on three unearned runs the previous night and blowing a two-run lead in the ninth, the taste of victory was hardly sour.

"Last night, we made the errors," said Willie McGee who scored the winning run in the Cardinals' 5-4 victory Thursday night. "They made the errors tonight. That's baseball."

McGee led off the 10th with a single and went to third when Brock lost a pickoff throw by from loser Ken Howell, 2-2. One out and an intentional walk later, pinch-hitter Steve Braun hit a double-play grounder to short, but Brock dropped the throw to first, enabling McGee to score.

"That's our game, running, that's how we win," McGee said. "You throw so many times over to first, it's hard not to make a mistake. I definitely planned to steal on that pitch."

"I didn't see the error but I had my mind made up to go to third."

The Dodgers had tied the game with two outs in the ninth inning on a single by Pedro Guerrero off winner Neil Allen, 1-2, the third Cardinal pitcher. Ken Dayley pitched the 10th to earn his first save.

They trailed 4-2 entering the ninth against Kurt Kepshire, who had limited them to three singles. After getting the first out, Kepshire gave up a pinch homer to Terry Whitfield and left after walking Steve Sax.

Sax, who stole three bases, stole second off reliever Ricky Horton and advanced to third when pinch-hitter Bill Russell singled to left. Pinch-hitter Candy Maldonado struck out, but Guerrero lined Allen's 2-2 pitch to center to tie the game. Allen got Mike Marshall on a grounder to send it into extra innings.

Vince Coleman lined a run-scoring double to break a 2-2 tie in the seventh off Fernando Valenzuela. Coleman, after driving in Ozzie Smith with the go-ahead run, stole third base for the ninth time this season — he leads the major leagues with 21 steals — and scored on a single by Tom Herr, who leads the National League in hitting.

The Cardinals took a 2-0 lead in the second inning on a two-run single by Terry Pendleton.

The Dodgers got a run in bottom of the second on a sacrifice fly by R.J. Reynolds. They tied the game an inning later when Sax and Mariano Duncan pulled a double steal, with Sax scoring when catcher Darrell Porter's throw to third went into left field for an error.

Valenzuela worked eight innings, giving up eight hits and four walks and striking out eight.

Kepshire gave up four hits in 8 1/3 innings but walked eight. He also struck out five.

Both National League afternoon games ended 1-0, with San Diego blanking Pittsburgh and San Francisco edging Chicago in 12 innings.

There were no games in the American League.

Padres 1, Pirates 0

Tim Flannery got up a little early, thanks to his 11-day-old son Daniel, and capped a long day with a seventh-inning single to drive in the game's only run for NL West pace-setting Padres.

"We got up at six o'clock and had a talk, and I told him I was going to hit one for him," Flannery said.

That he did, stroking a two-out hit off the glove of Pittsburgh second baseman Johnny Ray to score Carmelo Martinez from second base. Martinez walked to start the inning off loser Mike Bielecki and advanced when winning pitcher Mark Thurmond sacrificed for the second out.

Thurmond, 1-2, tossed a three-hitter for his second career shutout, striking out three and walking none.

"It's good to get the first win under your belt and you feel a lot better when you know you're contributing," Thurmond said.

The victory was San Diego's third straight. Pittsburgh has lost four in a row.

Giants 1, Cubs 0

San Francisco's Manny Trillo didn't like what he saw, but after being ejected the previous night for protesting a called third strike, knew when to keep his mouth shut. And it paid off later when his two-out hit lifted the Giants over Chicago.

"I was going to swing if the pitch was anywhere close," said Trillo, whose single on an 0-2 pitch from loser Warren Brusstar gave the Giants their fourth victory in five games and dropped the Cubs to second place in the NL East. They trail the New York Mets by a half-game.

"I thought the last pitch was a ball, but I didn't say anything to the umpire (Doug Harvey)," Trillo said of his eighth-inning strikeout.

He had been ejected from Wednesday night's 1-0 loss to the Cubs after arguing with Eric Gregg.

Rob Deer, batting for winning pitcher Scott Garrelts, lined a two-out single to center in the 12th and went to second when Brusstar hit Dan Gladden. Trillo followed with his single to left, giving the Giants their first run in 24 innings. The Cubs have been blanked over their last 20 innings.

Atlee Hammaker, who worked the eight innings, and Garrelts, 1-1, combined on a four-hit shutout. Scott Sanderson scattered eight hits and fanned nine batters in working the first nine innings for the Cubs.

ECU Hosts Campbell

East Carolina's baseball Pirates close out the regular season Saturday at 2 p.m., hosting Campbell University.

The game is a rematch between the two teams who played last week at Bues Creek with the Camels pulling out a 5-4 victory.

The Pirates, who won the ECAC-South baseball championship for the second straight year in regular season, will defend their Southern Regional ECAC championship next week starting Thursday.

Senior members of the Pirate squad will be honored in Saturday afternoon's contest prior to its getting under way.

Rahal Finds Backup Car Has More Speed Than First

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — After establishing an unofficial speed record for the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, Bobby Rahal decided it was time to make a switch.

Rahal went 214.183 mph on Thursday in what had been his back-up car. That was 2 mph quicker than he had gone in the team's No. 1 car, so Rahal decided a change of plans was in order. "I would say right now we're going to run the T (backup) car," Rahal said of plans to qualify one of the Truesport Team's Budweiser-sponsored Marches for the May 26 Indianapolis 500. "I'm glad it worked out as well as it did. We're obviously ready to go."

He planned to go after some more speed in today's final full day of practice before qualifying begins Saturday.

"I'm certain 215 is within reach. I don't think it's going to be easy, but we can make it," he said. "It felt really good. We're real close to it. We're not at the end of the rope but we're near there."

Rahal, who finished seventh in last year's Indy 500, had a lap of 212.114 mph earlier in the day and then decided to call it a day after his quick lap.

"There's no reason to go out again today," he said while enjoying a sandwich and a drink.

"It was fun out there. The car is handling so well. It's a lot scarier having a car going 190 and not handling well than being in a good car and going 210," he said.

The record performance boosted Rahal's confidence for qualifying and the race.

"We're in real good shape. The sponsorship of Budweiser shows how far we've come since arriving here in 1982. We were babes in the woods then. It makes us proud when I think who we are and where we've come."

Prior to Thursday, the sixth day of practice, Rahal's best practice speed was the 212.414 mph lap recorded in his No. 1 car. That duplicated the previous unofficial track record set last year by Mario Andretti.

"There's not much difference between the two cars, just a little difference in suspensions and aerodynamics," Rahal said. "I could be comfortable in either car, but I'm a little happier with the one I used today."

Andretti's 1984 speed has been bettered by six drivers since practice began last Saturday. Defending champion Rick Mears completed a lap of the 2.5-mile oval at 213.371 on Wednesday. Roberto Guerrero of Colombia, last year's race runner-up, went 212.816 on Tuesday, and veteran Pancho Carter had a 212.464 lap Wednesday.

Danny Sullivan joined the group Thursday with the day's second-best speed, 212.615, while Scott Brayton checked in at 212.464.

Official records can only be set during qualifying or in the race. Tom Sneva set the one-lap record of 210.689 last year — a speed that was topped by 12 drivers since practice began last Saturday.

Rahal was one of 13 drivers on Thursday to establish a personal best speed for the month. Rookie Arie Luyendyk of Holland had his March-Cosworth working at 207.996 and fellow first-year Indy driver Michael Roe of Ireland posted a 202.110 in a Lola-Cosworth and then got up to 206.281.

Kevin Cogan became the 31st driver to go quicker than 200 this month with a 201.793 mph reading in another March-Cosworth. Seven drivers reached 210 and 17 others exceeded 205 during an incident-free practice conducted under sunny skies.

many observers had expected to glean the berth. Mason finished the year with a 35-21 record. Wilmington was knocked out by one of the criteria, which calls for evaluation of a team's performance in the second half of the season. UNCW was only 10-16-1 in the latter part of the season.

New York Tech and Iona will kick off the tournament Thursday at 2 p.m., while East Carolina and George Mason collide at 7 p.m. in the second game.

Friday, the 2 p.m. game will eliminate the first team from the double-elimination field, as the two Thursday losers meet. The 7 p.m. game features Thursday's winners.

Saturday at 2 p.m. will be the losers' bracket finals with the championship game at 7 p.m. Saturday. Should a second game be needed to decide the title, that will be played at 2 p.m. Sunday.

The winner will receive an automatic berth into the NCAA Regionals.

Mark Eaton Is Named Top NBA Defensive Player

SALT LAKE CITY AP — Not much was expected of Mark Eaton, who scored just 53 points in his 30-game college career at UCLA, when the Utah Jazz picked him in the fourth round of the National Basketball Association draft three years ago.

But Utah took a chance that the 7-foot-4 Eaton might develop into a worthwhile backup center. As it turned out, he developed into much more than that.

After setting a record with 456 blocked shots and grabbing a league-leading 720 defensive rebounds this season, Eaton was named NBA defensive player of the year on Thursday. He received 32 votes from the 78-member panel of sportswriters and sportscasters.

"Unlike scoring, defense is somewhat of a constant, something you can do every night," Eaton said. "I really felt when I came into the league that I could affect the game... but I told people I just wanted to be a good backup center."

"He was starting to break through a year ago," Utah Coach Frank

Layden said. "You could tell he was going to be a very good player."

"I have to be the first to admit, though, I didn't think Mark would become as good a player as he has. I think Mark's three or four times the player he was last year," Layden said.

Announcement of the award came two days after the Denver Nuggets eliminated the Jazz from the NBA playoffs.

Eaton injured his knee in the last game of Utah's five-game series with the Houston Rockets and he missed the best-of-seven series against the Nuggets, who eliminated Utah in five games.

"There's no doubt we would have had a better chance of beating them with a healthy Eaton, Layden said Thursday.

In leading the NBA in blocked shots for the second straight year, Eaton broke Elmore Smith's 11-year-old record of 393 and also ranked fifth in the NBA in rebounding with an average of 11.3 a game.

With Eaton in the middle, opponent field goal percentages have steadily dropped over the past three years. Opponents hit 50.9 percent from the floor before Eaton joined the club, but accuracy has subsequently dropped to 47.8, 47.6 and 46.9 in the last three seasons.

"He's never going to be a player that's pretty. He's just going to win games for you," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham.

"He changes us defensively more than any other player in the league," said Dallas Coach Dick Motta.

Bullets Clinch Playoff Berth; Panthers Fall, 9-3

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville High School moved another step towards another Tobacco Belt Conference title with a 13-3 baseball victory over Chocowinity yesterday.

The victory boosted the Bullets to 14-3 overall and 13-0 in league play with three games left to play, including a game tonight at Bath.

While Jamesville has not yet iced the title for the year, they have insured a berth in the State 1-A Playoffs.

Jamesville jumped into the lead in the first inning, scoring two runs. Kevin Perry, Richie Ange and Terry Perry all three walked, loading the bases. Chris Jones hit a sacrifice fly to score Kevin Perry. Pee Wee Groover then followed with a hit, driving in Ange.

The Bullets added a third run in the second and scored seven times in the third on two hits, two walk and five Indian errors.

The Bullets added one in the fourth and two in the fifth. Chocowinity got single runs in the third, fourth and sixth.

Kevin Perry, David Bembridge and Terry Perry each had two hits, one of Bembridge's, a double. Kevin Perry drove in three runs and Bembridge, two. Lewis Albritton led the Indians with two.

Chocowinity returns to action on Tuesday, hosting Bear Grass.

Nichols and Morrison led SouthWest with three hits each, while Gulley, Walker, Randolph and Hall each had two. Billy Warren had two hits to lead North Pitt.

AYDEN — Ayden-Grifton High School bested D.H. Conley as the two met at Ayden Golf and Country Club in a golf match yesterday.

The Chargers finished the day with a team score of 320 while Conley had a 343.

Brian Heath led the Chargers with the medalist score of 78. Marc Davis and Jeremy Shadle each added 79's and Mike Carde had an 84.

Camacho Withdraws From Scheaues Fight

NEW YORK (AP) — While Hector "Macho" Camacho was supposedly building up a title doubleheader set for June 6 at Las Vegas, Nev., promoter Don King suddenly suffered a setback.

Camacho won't fight.

Camacho, the 27-0 former World Boxing Council super featherweight champion, was talking about his scheduled challenge of WBC lightweight champion Jose Luis Ramirez at a news conference Thursday when he suddenly said: "I don't think I can fight," the former World Boxing Council super featherweight champion said while talking about his scheduled 12-round challenge to Jose Luis Ramirez of Mexico for the WBC lightweight title June 6 at Las Vegas.

"He said he didn't want to fight unless he's 120 percent," King said. "He's much too important to me. I don't want him to fight unless he's 150 percent. I'm the doctor."

"The show is going on," King said, adding the Ramirez-Camacho fight would probably be replaced by a WBC cruiserweight title defense by Carlos DeLeon against Alfonso Ratiff.

King also mentioned a rematch between Ramirez and former lightweight champion Edwin Rosario as a possibility.

King said he didn't want to fight unless he's 120 percent. He's much too important to me. I don't want him to fight unless he's 150 percent. I'm the doctor.

Pam Pack Duo Falls

WILSON — Dave McCreary and Zane Buckman of Washington, the last area players still alive in the Wilson Tennis Sectionals, were beaten out yesterday in the quarterfinals of the doubles event.

Roney Harris and Tom Shannon of Rocky Mount downed the Pam Pack duo, 6-2, 6-3, to eliminate them from the championship.

No area players thus qualified for the Regionals, to be held next weekend. Only those who advanced to the semifinals in singles and doubles made the regional field.

O'Grady Takes 'Silent' Nelson Lead

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Mac O'Grady invoked the name of Steve Carlton and refused to speak with the press after shooting an 8-under-par 63 that staked him to a one-shot lead in the first round of the $500,000 Byron Nelson Classic.

"He pointed out that (Philadelphia Phillies pitcher) Carlton doesn't talk to the press and nobody thinks anything about it," PGA Tour official Tom Place said Thursday after he made a vain effort to induce O'Grady to speak with reporters.

"He said he doesn't have to talk with the press and he doesn't want to," said Place, the information director for the Tour.

Place said O'Grady "apparently was upset" over a magazine article about him last year.

"He said he had been embarrassed by the press and had absolutely nothing to say to them," Place said.

O'Grady's action, while unusual in pro golf, is not without precedent.

J.C. Snead declined an invitation to a mass interview last year, but did talk with reporters on an individual basis.

Deane Beman, a former player and now commissioner of the PGA Tour, failed to appear at a press conference at the St. Louis Open in the early 1970s. He said later he was not invited.

Again in the early 1970's, Lee Trevino left the course immediately after winning a playoff for the title in the National Airlines Open in a order to catch a plane.

O'Grady made no excuse. He simply refused to be interviewed after matching the tournament scoring record and fulfilling a Tom Watson prediction.

"The course is virtually defenseless with no wind," said Watson, a four-time winner of this title who had an early 67 despite some erratic putting.

"I don't think I've ever seen the course play easier. I wouldn't be surprised to see someone shoot lights out, a 63," he said.

About six hours later, O'Grady came in with that number on the Las Colinas Sports Center course.

Rookie Andy Magee, who one-putted 11 times, also had it eight under par until he bogeyed the 17th hole. He finished with a 64, one shot back and one of 62 players in the field of 156 to break par on what Watson said was "a perfect day for scoring."

Mike Holland, who missed the cut in seven of eight previous starts this season, had a career-best 65.

The group at 66, five under par, included Peter Oosterhuis, Jodie Mudd, Mike Nicolette, John Cook and Bob Wrenn.

Watson and defending title-holder Craig Stadler were in a large group at 67. Trevino, the current PGA title-holder, shot 70 in the warm, sunny weather. Ben Crenshaw, a former Nelson winner trying to fight his way out of a slump, had a 68. Tom Kite, a winner last week in the Tournament of Champions, had a 69.

O'Grady, 34, made 17 tries at the Tour's qualifying school before gaining his playing rights. He's now in his third season and recently matched his career-best finish with a third in the Las Vegas Invitational. He's won $84,062 for the season but has failed to finish his last four starts, missing the cut on two occasions and withdrawing from two others.

Pat Riley Expects Shootout

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Lakers have raced through two rounds of the National Basketball Association playoffs, and Coach Pat Riley expects little change in the Western Conference final series against Denver.

"It's going to be a shootout, a high-scoring series," said Riley, whose club plays host to the Nuggets in the opening game of the best-of-seven series Saturday afternoon.

The winner of the Western Conference affair will move to the NBA's Championship Series against the Eastern Conference winner.

The Philadelphia 76ers earned a berth in the Eastern finals by sweeping the Milwaukee Bucks in four games. The defending NBA champion Boston Celtics, within a game of joining the 76ers, take a 3-2 edge into tonight's game against the Detroit Pistons at Detroit.

Los Angeles averaged over 130 points a game in sweeping the Phoenix Suns in three games and beating the Portland Trail Blazers in five to gain the Western Conference finals. But Denver, the regular-season scoring leader, showed some zip of its own by averaging almost 123 points in besting the San Antonio Spurs and Utah Jazz.

"Sure, we'll be the underdogs against LA," said Denver guard Mike Evans. "But we'll try to weather their storm. As far as tempo is concerned, that series is going to be as fast as a series can be."

"With Denver, you always know that (Calvin) Natt and (Alex) English will get their 20 points. What happens is that their other guys can sneak up on you and hurt you," said Laker guard Earvin "Magic" Johnson, who scored 34 points and collected 19 assists in a 139-120 victory on Tuesday that eliminated the Portland Trail Blazers from the playoffs.

"I think Denver has a great bunch of athletes who are able to run with any team," Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar said. "They match up real well with us. They've got good athletes and like to run, the same game we play."

Added Los Angeles reserve guard Michael Cooper: "Denver will not be as physical as Portland, but it will be a real track meet. My main concern is not to run out of gas."

Riley, however, isn't worried about his team coming up short.

"Maybe the fifth game (against Portland) was a blessing in disguise because we didn't have a week off" before meeting Denver, said Riley. "You can benefit from rest, but you can have too much of it, too."

The second game of the series will be played Tuesday night at the Forum, with the next two games May 17 and May 19 at Denver.

Perkins Paces Rose Jayvees

Curtis Perkins ripped a three-run homer in the first and Tim Clark fired a three-hitter to lead the Rose junior varsity to a 10-2 victory over Wilson Fike Thursday in high school baseball.

Clark added a 2-4 performance at the plate, while Perkins finished 2-2.

Rose, now 11-1 overall, travels to Wilson Hunt Monday at 5 p.m.

Nelson Tops Putt Playoff

Eric Nelson aced the first three holes of sudden death to beat Junior Knox and Jake Loftin to take first place in the pro division at the local Putt-Putt Golf Course last night.

Knox finished second after the three had tied for first with nine-under-par 63's for the two-round event.

Rookie Timmy Stancill won the amateur division beating Jon Jolley in sudden death. Both players shot four-under 68's in regulation play. Bob Williams beat Thomas Hardison for third place in an odd sudden death. After shooting 69's, both aced the first hole, they took triple bogey's on the second hole before Williams aced the third hole to win it.

Sandy Williams took the women's division with a 73, three shots ahead of second place Kim Williams.

E.B. Aycock Pounds Fike

WILSON — Tammy Smith ripped five hits and Becky Stoneham added a pair of homers as E.B. Aycock pounded Wilson Fike 25-3 Thursday in junior high girl's softball.

Cathy Park recorded the victory for Aycock.

Gina Parrott had four hits and Kristen Shea added three for Aycock.

E.B. Aycock, now 3-5 on the season, hosts Wilson Hunt Tuesday.

NBA Teams Anxious Over Draft Lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — Horseshoes, good luck charms, psychics, luck o' the Irish...

Some of the seven National Basketball Association clubs who failed to make the playoffs are looking for all the help they can get for Sunday's lottery for the top seven picks from the college basketball ranks.

The top prize, of course, is Georgetown's 7-foot All-America Patrick Ewing, an intimidating shot-blocker.

"We're hoping to have the luck of the Irish," said Rick Moxley, spokesman for the Seattle SuperSonics, whose front office personnel plans a Sunday brunch at an Irish pub to watch the festivities, which will be televised live by CBS starting at 2 p.m. EDT. "Everyone's supposed to wear green."

"We hope to have a 'St. Patrick Ewing Day' after the draft," said John Cirillo, spokesman for the New York Knicks, who have been presented with a horseshoe worn by the top pacer, On The Road Again, in setting the Yonkers Raceway track record last Saturday.

"We're a 7-1 shot and have only a 14 percent chance of getting Ewing," Cirillo, "but 7-1 is better than 20-1."

The Indiana Pacers will send seven people to the lottery site in New York, but the rest of the front office will gather at owner Mel Simon's home — and all are expected to bring a good luck charm.

Kings' officials aren't all that unhappy because a resident Sacramento psychic, Sherry Bolling, foresees the team landing the No. 2 pick.

"If we aren't the top choice," said Kings General Manager Joe Axelson, realizing that Ewing's presence will boost attendance, "we sure want our Bay area buddies, Golden State, to get the first pick. If that doesn't happen, we sure wish the No. 1 pick to wind up in California."

KFBK, a Sacramento radio station, is offering a free round-trip for two to the Kings' first playoff game next year — or thereafter — to the person who guesses the right order of teams picking in the lottery.

There are 5,040 different possibilities for the first seven picks. In the past, a coin flip between the two worst teams in each conference decided the No. 1 pick. The Houston Rockets wound up with 7-foot-4 Ralph Sampson and 7-0 Akeem Oluajun in the past two drafts.

But the NBA instituted a lottery this year in which the seven teams which failed to qualify for the playoffs are eligible. In addition to the Sonics, Knicks, Pacers and Sacramento (formerly Kansas City) Kings, they are the Golden State Warriors, Los Angeles Clippers and

Wayne Man In Bowling Marathon

KINSTON (AP) — Bowling is right up Roderick "Rookie" Wright's alley, but it's unclear if the Wayne County man will be able to stick to the pins another 1,000 games to break a world record for marathon bowling.

"Most people think I'm crazy," said Wright, who had bowled 273 games by Thursday since beginning Monday to try to break the record of 1,312 games set by a Canadian man earlier this year in 12½ days. "Most don't think I have a chance."

Wright said four days of bowling at Sportlanes Bowling Center in Kinston had left him sore.

Actor Edmond O'Brien Is Dead

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A funeral Mass is scheduled Saturday for Edmond O'Brien, the Oscar-winning actor whom colleagues dubbed "Tiger" in tribute to his no-nonsense devotion to acting. O'Brien, whose career ranged from stage to radio to film and spanned more than 40 years, was 69 when he succumbed Wednesday night to complications resulting from Alzheimer's disease. "Edmond O'Brien was a fine actor who contributed greatly to every picture in which he appeared," actor Jimmy Stewart said through his publicist Thursday. "He will be sorely missed." O'Brien co-starred with Stewart in "The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance" — one of 60 films and television shows in his career. In 1962 alone he worked in four movies: "Liberty Valance," "Moon Pilot," "Birdman of Alcatraz" and "The Longest Day." "I don't mind work," he said shortly after receiving an Academy Award for best supporting actor in 1954. "It keeps me out of trouble."

The Oscar was for his portrayal of a sweaty, fast-talking press agent in "The Barefoot Contessa." In 1964 he was nominated for an Oscar for playing the alcoholic Southern senator imprisoned by the military in "Seven Days in May," a feature about a nearly successful military coup in America. Inspired by his Harlem neighbor, magician Harry Houdini, O'Brien put on his first performance, a magic show, in a basement at age 10. He studied drama at Columbia University, began his career at the Neighborhood Playhouse and performed on stage and on radio before making his first movie in 1939, "The Hunchback of Notre Dame." During his radio period he worked with Orson Welles' Mercury Theater included a role in the famous 1930 broadcast based on H.G. Wells' "War of the Worlds" that panicked many Americans who thought the Martian invasion was real. By the late 1940s he was known for roles in "film noir" productions such as "White Heat," "D.O.A." and "The Killers," which delved into the darker corners of everyday life.

Film On Parsons-Hopper Battle Fails To Match Life

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Hollywood finally has wreaked revenge on the late gossip hounds Louella Parsons and Hedda Hopper by making them the subjects of a tepid stinker of a movie about their careers and their celebrated feud.

Really, dearie, there's more fizz in day-old soda than in "Malice in Wonderland" Sunday night on CBS. It's a lethargic, lifeless and lightweight movie that was never intended to inspire, but at least could have been fun.

The two titanic tattletales supposedly ruled Hollywood from the 1930s into the 1960s with their scoops, tirades and moral huffing and puffing. It's been said that words of praise or condemnation in their columns could make or break careers, and studio heads and on-screen idols quaked at their dispatches.

In a delicious irony, Elizabeth Taylor, numero uno with the kiss-and-tell crowd for three decades, plays the sniveling Louella. Miss Taylor, finally svelte for a role that, for realism, required full-bodied treatment, plays a parody of herself, imperiously campy and oozing Hollywood insincerity.

At one point in her career, Miss Taylor actually was close to Hedda Hopper, but the relationship soured when the columnist turned on her over her liaison with Eddie Fisher. There was a stricter moral climate then, and news of an illicit romance was more likely to damage careers than it would be today.

Jane Alexander, a class act in "Testament," "Kramer vs. Kramer" and "All the President's Men," manages to maintain her dignity as Hedda — no minor achievement. Now we know that Miss Alexander can play the broad stuff, but proving it with this awful script seems a steep price.

Nonetheless, Miss Alexander may be the only redeeming feature. She tries hard to give Hedda a head underneath her outrageous hats, as well as a hint of humanity.

Based on the book, "Hedda and Louella" by George Eells, "Malice in Wonderland" traces the rivalry between the two Hollywood jungle lionesses who prowled the same movie-star beat with vindictiveness and small-mindedness.

How they worked and developed their juicy tidbits gets glossed over here, and even their celebrated cattiness doesn't rise much above some tame name-calling. With the only interesting scene opening the movie, the rest is fizzle, not sizzle.

All Hollywood is abuzz because the two infamous snoops are getting together for lunch. Hedda drives herself; Louella, decked out in a loud fur, arrives in a limousine. The rapprochement was initiated by Louella because her actress daughter won some praise in Hedda's column.

"I figured with a mother like hers, she'd need all the help she can get," says Hedda, a former actress who, in her struggling days, actually moonlighted as a snitch for Louella.

"Listen, sweetie, at least my child and I are still close," replies Louella.

The attempts to inject some family perspective into "Malice in Wonderland" are laughably superficial. Louella tried to baby her daughter (Leslie Ackerman), and Hedda eventually loses her son because of her professional maliciousness.

"This is the house that fear built," says William Hopper, referring to their new large home. William is played by Thomas Byrd, a bland actor who once had a short-lived series, "Boone," on NBC.

Louella marries a urologist named Ducky, played by Jon Cypher from "Hill Street Blues." Between dictating hot copy on Clark Gable, Gary Cooper and other biggies, she has time to coo "Ducky Wocky" in her trademark whiny whisper.

There is absolutely nothing in their personal lives that makes us care a whit about these characters.

If you're looking for Hollywood insights, you're better off reading the supermarket tabloids. The idea of clever direction here is to show time marching on by focusing on a clock, or to beg for laughs with wide-eyed reaction shots.

Another cheap, inside joke is when Louella dictates an item about Christina Crawford (remember "Mommie Dearest"?) and how she was such a "lucky girl to have such a mommy" as Joan Crawford.

And then there's the obligatory polo scene for the powwow of movie moguls perplexed over not being able to control their own gossip. The attitude of these bosses is that people who write about the entertainment industry should consider themselves in the employ of Hollywood.

Martin Urges Legislature To Find 'Middle Ground' On Tax Proposals

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin is calling on the Legislature to seek a "middle position" between his tax cut plan and one backed by Democratic leaders, but he says he won't turn his back on sales tax reductions.

Martin said at a Thursday news conference that lawmakers apparently had gotten little pressure from home to back the food tax repeal. But he said he wouldn't abandon efforts to drum up support for the tax relief, even in exchange for more favorable treatment of his intangibles and inventory tax proposals.

"I hope we will end up with a good package... (with) at least enough (support) from both sides for it to be clearly perceived as a bipartisan tax package," Martin said. "It's my hope that we will come out with some middle position..."

The governor's statements echoed comments by lawmakers that Martin might be softening his earlier stand that the only changes he'd accept in his plan would involve technical matters such as how to distribute state funds to local governments so they would not lose money.

"There is a definite change on the part of the executive branch," said Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan in an interview. "We had not seen that until last week."

Martin's plan includes abolishing the property taxes on intangible assets and business inventories and the state sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines. The plan's estimated cost is $690 million over three years.

The House bill, expected to cost about $390 million over the same period, includes partial rollbacks of the inventory and intangibles taxes plus a $20 income tax cut, repeal of the inheritance and gift taxes, a higher income tax credit for day care usage, and a sales tax exemption for food bought with food stamps and funerals.

Martin said his administration is negotiating with members of a Senate subcommittee that's developing a package to present to the Finance Committee.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the committee, said he hoped the subcommittee would finish its work next week. Jordan, however, hinted that a floor vote might be weeks away.

"There won't be any quick resolution on this," he said, citing the Base

Budget Committee's failure to complete on time its review of Martin's proposals for spending on current operations. A tax vote can't take place without some certainty on the budget, Jordan said.

Rauch, who consistently has voiced support for Martin's plan, said he and Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, would propose a "skeleton of a tax package" to the subcommittee. He said he had a "pretty good idea" of what it would contain but refused to elaborate.

Rauch wouldn't predict whether the Senate would approve deeper cuts than the House, but said the probably would be "hangups" on such questions as whether inventory tax payments should be reduced or whether businesses should continue to pay the full amount and get an offsetting income tax credit.

School Boards Want Sales Tax

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that would raise the state sales tax to finance school construction offers the first plan in the state's history to provide financing for new schools, a Senate committee has been told.

"The best feature of this bill is that it provides an on-going program to finance school construction," Dr. Gene Causby of the state Association of School Boards told the Senate Education Committee Thursday. "Believe it or not, we have never had a plan for school construction in this state."

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Dennis Winner, Dancombe, the committee chairman, would raise the state sales tax a half-cent, with the estimated $175 million raised each year earmarked for school construction.

Counties would match the state funds, using the money they are required to spend on schools from a half-cent local sales tax increase approved last year. The state would match every $1 raised by counties with $3.50 from the school construction fund.

Foreign Firms

PEKING (AP) — More than 2,100 foreign-backed businesses have been formed in China since 1981, the state administration of industry and commerce reported.

The official Xinhua news agency quoted an administration official as saying the businesses employ over 160,000 workers, including 11,000 foreigners. Most are financed by investors in Hong Kong and Macau, Japan, the United States and Britain, the official said.

They include joint ventures, cooperative enterprises and firms wholly owned by foreign interests.

Domestically, China gained more than 2.2 million new businesses in the years 1981-1984 as Deng Xiaoping's economic reforms took hold, the report said.

Ethics Committee To Meet On May 20

RALEIGH (AP) — The Legislative Ethics Committee will conduct a hearing May 20 on an allegation against a state senator, the panel's chairman said Thursday.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, said the committee would meet Friday at 8 a.m. to work out the hearing procedure. Friday's meeting and the hearing will be closed to the public, Rauch said.

The committee this week began a probe of a senator whom Rauch refused to identify. However, Sen. John Jordan, D-Alamance, issued a statement saying he was confident that the investigation would absolve him of any wrongdoing.

Sources say the complaint was filed by William Lee, of Saxapahaw, who has been at odds with Jordan over operation of a hydroelectric plant on the Haw River.

A bill has been introduced in the House to require that at least one-fourth of the river flow be allowed to pass over certain Haw River dams.

In his statement Wednesday, Jordan said the bill was needed because the plant was diverting water and drying up land downstream, some of which he owns.

Haven May Cut Domestic Violence

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
Where domestic violence occurs, it appears to increase with family income but may be reduced if a battered woman has an escape hatch available, a study at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill indicates.

"The women who report that they have some place to stay, it's very, very clear ... that those women are experiencing less violence," said Helen Tauchen, an associate professor of economics, in a telephone interview.

She said a study of 200 Santa Barbara, Calif., families in which domestic violence had occurred did not show why a haven from violence was important.

"It could be that some women were more willing to ask family or friends for a place to stay," Ms. Tauchen said. "It could be that some women had recently moved to an area and didn't have family and friends to turn to."

Whatever the reason, the threat of abandonment seemed to make an abusive spouse think twice, she said.

"He knows she's the kind of person who, if he does threaten or does inflict violence, that she will leave him at least for a while," Ms. Tauchen said.

The study showed race, education and age had little impact on domestic violence, while income was surprisingly connected with more abuse, Ms. Tauchen said. "As far as income, for men ... as income increased we actually observed more violence," she said. "Only at very high income levels (in excess of $75 a week) did we see less violence."

The study, appearing in the spring issue of the Social Science Newsletter prepared by the Institute for Research in Social Science at UNC, asked women who had experienced domestic violence to tell how many times their spouse or boyfriend had been "physically violent" towards them in the preceding six months. The average was 10 to 11 incidents, ranging from one to "essentially daily beatings," Ms. Tauchen said.

Some studies have suggested unemployment may lead to more abuse by increasing the time couples spend together and therefore the opportunities for domestic violence. But Ms. Tauchen said her study conflicted with that.

"We did find that men who work a larger fraction of the year generally inflict less violence," she said. "But the effects for the females were not exactly parallel. That would lend some evidence that it is not entirely a time-at-risk factor."

Researchers also found no evidence that successive marriages led to increasing domestic violence.

"The frequency of violence, with everything else constant, was the same for couples that had been married versus those couples that had never been married," Ms. Tauchen said.

Bill Set To Lessen Threat Of Lawsuits

RALEIGH (AP) — As some doctors refuse to administer a vaccine that has sparked numerous lawsuits, Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk says a bill to lessen the threat of litigation from the vaccine will be introduced next week.

"It is clear there will have to be some legislation," Kirk said Thursday after meeting with doctors and lawmakers. "A number of pediatricians are so concerned about their malpractice (insurance) coverage that some are considering refusing to give the shots."

Among those who met with Kirk was the son of one of two doctors who have been ordered to pay $3.5 million to a Texas boy. The damages were awarded last week by a federal judge in Wilmington after lawyers said the boy suffered brain damage 10 years ago from side effects of the combined DPT vaccination against diphtheria, whooping cough and tetanus. Lawyers say the boy, who is 11, has the mental capacity of a 7-month-old.

"He doesn't have $3.5 million," Dr. David Tayloe Jr. of Goldsboro said of his father, Dr. David T. Tayloe Sr. of Washington, N.C. "He has no idea how he is going to pay."

Kirk said the legislation should place a reasonable limit on damages and put such lawsuits under a statute of limitations. He said another possibility is creating a hearing panel to provide an alternative to a court suit.

Wilmington pediatrician Gordon P. Coleman, who also attended the closed-door session, said some doctors in North Carolina were refusing to administer DPT vaccinations because of the fear of lawsuits. "They are sending people to the health departments," he said.

North Carolina's 85 local health departments probably could not handle the state's vaccination requirements if private physicians refused to give the shots, Kirk said. State law requires immunization against diphtheria before children are enrolled in school.

"The health departments couldn't afford it," he said. "Moreover, there is a possibility that the departments could be sued."

At a meeting of the North Carolina Medical Society's House of Delegates last Saturday in Pinehurst, Kirk drew applause when he called the damages awarded in the Wilmington case "shocking" and said the state's malpractice laws should be reformed.

The case has sparked the concern of a medical community already jittery from a wave of national litigation stemming from occasional side effects of the vaccine.

Neurological damage from DPT inoculations have occurred at a rate of one dose in every 310,000, according to the American Academy of Pediatrics. The main concern is over the component in the vaccine that prevents pertussis, or whooping cough — the P in DPT.

State officials and academy spokesmen say the advantages of the vaccine far outweigh the risks, especially for infants younger than 1 year old. In 1980 there were 30 pertussis cases in North Carolina, 80 percent of them among the younger-than-1 group.

Study Scheduled Of Colleges' Status

RALEIGH (AP) — A study by the State Board of Community Colleges will look at the effect more community colleges would have on the state's college attendance rate and on the system's responsibility to provide technical and job training, officials say.

At a meeting Thursday, the board decided that no North Carolina technical institutes will be allowed to become community colleges until the study is completed.

The applications of James Sprunt Technical Institute in Duplin County and of Durham Technical Institute will be the last two forwarded to the General Assembly for consideration, the board members agreed.

"When these two schools have done all this work, it would be unfair to tell them they can't proceed," board member Melvin Swann said.

Community college status allows students who take general education courses such as science and math at two-year public institutions to transfer those credits to four-year colleges and universities.

Board members said the transfer program is the only chance many rural and disadvantaged students ever get to attend college, but they said the political atmosphere is against the upgraded status.

"There's a lot of pressure from people back home who misunderstand and really feel that community college schools have moved away from their original mission," Swann said.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who sits on the board, said board members are justified in being nervous of the legislature's reaction to requests for more community colleges.

"The legislature is sensitive to the private colleges and their declining enrollments and their requests for help," Jordan said. "What they keep hearing is that their real competition is the community college system, particularly with college transfer."

Abortion Bills Filed In Legislature

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Minors seeking abortions would need parental consent under a Democrat-sponsored bill and poor women would have little access to state funds under a Republican-backed proposal in the General Assembly.

A bill filed Thursday by Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, would allow abortions for unemancipated minors without a parent's consent only if a judge finds "that the minor is mature and well-informed enough to make the abortion decision on her own" or that the abortion would be in her best interest.

Rep. Steve Wood, R-Guilford, effectively would eliminate state-funded abortions with his bill.

"I feel it is in the compelling interest of the state of North Carolina to protect life of a person before as well as after birth," he said.

Under Wood's bill, state funding of an abortion would be permissible if two doctors certify that bearing a child would endanger the mother's life or if the expenditure is required for the state to receive federal funds.

Gov. Jim Martin has proposed that a $1.3 million state fund for poor women's abortions be reduced to $20,000 to handle cases of life-threatening pregnancies or those caused by rape or incest.

Wood said he would accept an amendment to his bill to bring it in line with Martin's proposals.

The measure also would deny state money to any individual or group that promotes abortion. The ban would not apply to family planning organizations that advise pregnant women that abortion is among their options but don't advocate it, Wood said.

The bill would deny state funding of any legal challenge of laws or regulations that restrict abortion. And it would outlaw workplace discrimination against abortion foes.

A bill that would make it a crime to sell or give a martial arts throwing star to a minor cleared the Senate Judiciary III Committee and is headed for the Senate floor.

Rep. Charles Woodard, D-Wayne, told the committee the weapons are becoming more popular on school playgrounds and offer a clear danger to children.

The House has already given the bill unanimous approval.

A defendant involved in a series of crimes across several counties could be indicted in any of those counties for all of the crimes under a bill approved by the Senate Judiciary III Committee.

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said his bill would keep district attorneys in each county from calling a grand jury to seek indictments for the crimes committed there.

Taft revised the bill to keep prosecutors from seeking indictments for crimes outside their jurisdiction, unless their counties were involved in serial crimes.

Anyone writing a worthless check over $1,000 would face a felony charge with a maximum three-year prison sentence under a bill approved by the Senate Judiciary III Committee.

Sen. R.P. Thomas, D-Henderson, said the bill would not affect the vast majority of worthless check writers who do so by accident. But he said North Carolina law now makes all worthless checks a misdemeanor, regardless of their amount.

He said creating the felony would encourage the extradition of out-of-state bad check writers and shift the expense of that extradition to the state.

A bill that would keep "ordinary pocket knives" from being considered concealed weapons is heading to a conference committee after the House rejected a Senate amendment.

The amendment would keep workers who use large knives as tools from being charged with carrying a concealed weapon while on their way to or from work.

The bill, which cleared the House after considerable wrangling over the definition of an "ordinary pocket knife," will now be negotiated by three members from the House and three from the Senate.

"You always need a fun bill," said Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, who introduced the measure. "You never know what a bill's going to do."

IN THE STATE

Fever Likely

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Although cases of Rocky Mountain spotted fever have dropped in North Carolina since 1980, the disease could be on the upswing this year because many new neighborhoods have been built on land that ticks frequent, an expert says.

"I have a feeling that it's going to go back up this year," said Dr. Janet J. Fischer, professor of medicine at the University of North Carolina School of Medicine.

Last year, 178 North Carolina residents contracted the disease. Five of them died.

"It is peculiarly a problem for North Carolinians," Ms. Fischer said, adding the state ranks with South Carolina, Tennessee, West Virginia and Georgia as one of the most common locales of the disease.

Symptoms appear three days to two weeks after a person has been bitten by a tick. They can include fever, sleepiness, head or muscle aches and a skin rash.

Three historic plantations have been purchased for the 5,300-acre site, which will be about the size of the city of Chapel Hill.

Sanford, retiring in July as Duke's president, is one of the principals in the project.

Shrimp Shortage

RALEIGH (AP) — Pink shrimp usually landed this time of year on the North Carolina coast have been virtually wiped out by cold water temperatures that lasted for more than a week in January, a state fisheries official said Thursday.

Robert K. Mahood, director of the state Division of Marine Fisheries, said about 9,500 pounds of pink shrimp have been landed through April, the beginning of the harvest season. Mahood said that represents almost an 80 percent drop from the 40,500 pounds landed last April.

"Because of the cold and the icy conditions, we said earlier that we would lose a lot of them, and we were correct," Mahood said. "It's been very hard on the fishermen."

Pink shrimp make up about 25 percent of the state's shrimp crop.

Clerk Killed

GASTONIA (AP) — A 21-year-old convenience store clerk died Thursday after being shot in the back with a shotgun in what police suspect was an attempted robbery, authorities said.

James Lewis "Jimmy" Black was shot late Wednesday night and died shortly after midnight at Gaston Memorial Hospital, Detective Freddie Crawford of the Gastonia Police Department said.

Crawford said officers found no money missing from the store, but still suspect robbery was a motive.

Employee Talked

RALEIGH (AP) — A correction employee in charge of issuing work release money to paroled inmates turned himself in a couple of weeks before the state Justice Department said he allegedly took money earned by inmates, Wake District Attorney J. Randolph Riley said Thursday.

"To the best of my knowledge, he blew the whistle on himself," Riley said. "It's unusual that anybody, under the circumstances, would be as forthright as he."

The Justice Department on Thursday identified Woody Stephenson as the employee who is under investigation for allegedly taking money earned by inmates on work release.

Riley said that Stephenson came to his office with his lawyer on April 22, made a confession and asked Riley to prosecute him. He then resigned from his job in the department on April 23, a correction official said.

He said Stephenson instructed his attorney, Rodney Cook of Raleigh, to tell Riley at their April 22 meeting the facts of the case.

Riley said Cook told him Stephenson "simply floated himself a loan out of the monies that were due inmates."

In 1985, North America will be represented by two teams in the Bermuda Bowl, the team championship of world bridge. The U.S. is automatically qualified, and its team will be selected at trials to be held in Memphis later this month.

The other team will be Canada. It earned the right by defeating Mexico and Bermuda in a playoff for the second berth. Here's a hand from Canada's match against Bermuda.

West's bid is not a misprint. It is a "transfer preempt" showing the next higher suit. In this case it might have helped the opponents, for North was able to double to show clubs, making it easy for South to contract for slam. Had West been able to preempt naturally with five diamonds, the outcome of the auction would have been less clear.

Six clubs is an excellent contract, and but for an unfortunate break and a moment of carelessness by declarer, it would have sailed home. West decided that his best bet to beat the hand rested on a heart ruff. Since he was unlikely to find a high-card entry in his partner's hand, he led the four of diamonds.

Declarer reflexly played low from dummy, and an astonished East found that he had won the first trick with the five of diamonds. When he recovered from the shock he had no difficulty finding the heart shift which his partner ruffed—down one.

West's preempt and lead of a low diamond should have been a warning signal to declarer. Had he played dummy's ten on the opening lead, he would have ended up with an overtrick.

In the other room the Canadians bid and made the slam for a huge gain.

Boone Tradition

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — If you've ever seen a drawing of Daniel Boone, he's probably wearing a coonskin cap.

But the truth, says Howell Boone, is that Daniel Boone, generally regarded as the foremost frontiersman of colonial years, did not care at all for coonskin caps and rarely wore them.

Instead, said Boone, he usually wore a traditional hat with a brim, something he despised, that kept water from running down his neck when he was out in the woods.

One of Daniel Boone's few concessions to frontier life was that he did wear moccasins, Boone said. He found them easy to make, comfortable to wear and when they were worn out, he could discard them and get a new pair.

Factory Discharges

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina Environmental Management Commission on Thursday supported the concept of the state's requiring factories to restrict their production in order to lessen the impact of their sewage discharges.

The EMC didn't order such an action, but "we have sent a message saying that the people of North Carolina are serious about protecting their environment," said Thomas W. Bradshaw Jr., a commission member from Raleigh.

But Virgil L. McBride, a commission member from Winston-Salem, said he was bothered by the EMC's action.

Senate Rejects Cigarette Tax

WASHINGTON (AP) — Tobacco-state senators protected a scheduled decrease in the federal excise tax on cigarettes by defeating a budget amendment by two votes.

The Senate rejected, in a 49-47 vote on Thursday, a proposed budget trade-off by Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., to make permanent the current 16-cents-per-pack federal cigarette tax in exchange for eliminating proposed cuts in the federal Medicare program.

But the same senators who helped defeat Bradley's proposal predicted the cigarette tax would be before the Senate again before Oct. 1, when the tax is scheduled to revert to the pre-1982 level of 8 cents per pack.

"The cigarette tax will be before this body again long before the cigarette tax expires on Oct. 1," Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, told the Senate.

Packwood was joined by Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas, Senate majority leader, in urging defeat of the Bradley proposal.

"Maybe somewhere down the line it may be extended, but this isn't the appropriate time," Dole said.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., promised a major fight for the "real test" on the cigarette tax issue later this year, including a filibuster, if necessary, by tobacco state senators.

Opponents of Bradley's bill argued that it amounted to earmarking the excise tax for a federal medical program. The cigarette manufacturing industry has strongly opposed such earmarking.

But Bradley said that "it is absurd to reduce taxes on a product that has caused major increases in recent years in health care costs while at the same time significantly increasing the premiums paid the elderly for health care."

Helms argued that passing the Bradley proposal would be a breach of faith made by Congress in 1982 when it doubled the cigarette tax. At that time, Congress adopted an amendment by Helms to "sunset" the additional 8 cents this year.

Helms said the excise tax should be the prerogative of the states.

The Bradley amendment was proposed for a budget resolution, which the Senate was working into the night complete. The resolution sets spending targets for the 1986 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1.

Let's Hear It For Mom!

The second Sunday of May has been Mother's Day in the United States since 1915. Miss Alma Jarvis of Philadelphia proposed the idea of a celebration honoring mothers in 1907. The next year, Philadelphia followed her suggestion. Many people follow the custom of wearing a carnation on Mother's Day. A colored carnation means the person's mother is living; a white one, that she has died. The British have celebrated "Mothering Sunday" during Lent for many years.
