Sparse Rain 'A Beginning'

By MARY C. SCHULKEN
Reflector Staff Writer

Although areas to the west and south of Pitt County received what state weather officials termed "abundant rainfall" this weekend, local precipitation was sparse and spotty and "just a beginning" for drought-stressed crops, say farm officials.

Greenville Utilities' Water Plant recorded .2 inch of precipitation from 8 a.m. Saturday through 8 a.m. today, much less than the half-inch amounts measured in Wilmington and Raleigh over the weekend.

Unofficial measurements in southern and western Pitt County indicated those areas received even less than that meager sprinkle.

Forecasters say the outlook for more precipitation is favorable, however, as a high pressure system area centered off the Mid-Atlantic Coast is expected to bring continued scattered showers and thunderstorms to North Carolina through Tuesday. A cold front now over the midwestern United States will likely bring more showers and thunderstorms to the state by the middle of the week according to the National Weather Service.

Farm officials said today the sparse weekend precipitation hasn't helped county crops suffering from the spring drought.

"I really don't think it has helped much," said Pitt Extension Agent Sam Uzzell. "For a lot of wheat, it (the rain) is too late, and for soybeans and peanuts to germinate we'll need a lot more rain than we've had."

Tobacco Agent Mitch Smith said the situation for tobacco in the county is "very bad." Farmers are "thankful for anything," he said, but the weekend drizzle is "just a beginning." Conditions are especially bad for tobacco transplanting in the county, Smith said, especially producers who broadcast fertilizer. Broadcasting fertilizer takes more moisture from the soil than other methods of application, he added.

Skies were variably cloudy today and will be again Tuesday, with some breaks in the clouds to allow for some sunshine. Scattered afternoon and evening thunderstorms may hamper outdoor activities.

Temperature readings in the 80s were common across most of the state today and are predicted to return Tuesday.

Draws $1 Million Fine

GE Pleads Guilty To Defrauding Government On Missile Contract

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — General Electric Co., the nation's fourth-largest defense contractor, pleaded guilty today to defrauding the government of $800,000 on a Minuteman missile contract and was fined the maximum of $1,040,000.

The plea came on what was to be the opening day of jury selection for trial on the charges.

U.S. Attorney Edward Dennis Jr. said GE's guilty plea means it could be barred for up to three years from bidding on any new defense contracts, but that he has received no indication of what the Pentagon will do.

U.S. District Court Judge Louis C. Bechtle said the maximum penalty was "fully and clearly appropriate here" because the nation is dependent on GE's defense "just like a newborn baby is dependent on its mother."

GE pleaded guilty to 108 counts of making false statements and making and presenting false claims for payment to the Air Force to recover cost overruns on a contract worth $47 million to refurbish the Minuteman Mark-12A intercontinental ballistic missile.

The work, according to a grand jury indictment returned against GE on March 26, involved research, development, engineering and other services for the Minuteman re-entry systems done at GE plants in Philadelphia and suburban King of Prussia between June 22, 1980, and April 19, 1983.

After the indictment was issued, Air Force Secretary Verne Orr suspended GE from bidding on any new defense contracts, but he later limited the suspension to the company's Re-entry Systems Division, which was involved in the alleged mischarges.

Acquisition Expected

North State Financial Corp. — parent firm of North State Savings and Loan Corp. — expects to announce later today that a substantial amount of the corporation's stock has been acquired by another North Carolina savings institution, a reliable source associated with North State said late this morning.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said the announcement could come by 2 p.m. He would not identify the other savings institution.

North State, which began operations in Greenville in August 1979 with one office, expanded rapidly through mergers and acquisitions — including First Colony of Southern Pines, New Bern, Wilson and Martin County savings and loan associations — to a regional firm with 19 offices.

But because of the mergers and acquisition, North State lost money and terminated a number of employees in an effort to cut expenses in 1984.

In December of last year, North State Financial's president, Lawrence Bowers, said "we have taken a hard look at where we are, where we are trying to go, and where we have been. We are beginning to explore all options that will make us a more viable financial institution."

Bowers' statement came as North State reported a pre-tax unaudited operating loss for the nine-month period ending Sep. 30, 1984, of about $2.9 million.

Philadelphia Police Lay Siege On Nature Recluses

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A police siege of the headquarters of the radical group MOVE erupted in gunfire today after officers attacked the fortified rowhouse with water cannons and gas canisters.

It was not immediately known whether police or occupants were hurt in the fusillade, which began about 6 a.m. after Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor read an eviction notice to members of the back-to-nature group whose lifestyle had prompted complaints from neighbors.

Police released two high-pressure water streams from deluge cannons against the building. Spectators were kept well back, and the gas shrouded the house in a heavy mist.

One officer was taken to a hospital for treatment of hyperventilation, officials said.

The eruption of gunfire sent about 200 people who were gathered at a corner a block and a half from the MOVE house scurrying for shelter, ducking behind parked cars and scrambling up onto porches to hide behind pillars. Police shouted at them to go inside.

Three explosions sent a shudder through area homes as helicopters circled overhead. The din included the popping of small arms fire and the repetitive thud of automatic weapons.

The gunfire ceased 90 minutes later and police stood by, considering their next move.

About 150 helmeted officers had surrounded the barricaded west Philadelphia building Sunday, taunted by occupants using a bullhorn to demand the release of nine comrades imprisoned in a bloody shootout with authorities

NEWSPAPER RECYCLING

What do I do with my old newspaper now that the little newspaper houses furnished by the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center are no longer available? I'd really like to see it put to use, not filling up the landfill. R.D.

The Eastern Carolina Vocational Center does still recycle newspaper and cardboard and has announced recently that it is cooperating with church and civic groups to conduct newspaper recycling drives as fund-raising projects. Bob Jones, recycling director, said he would like to set up a schedule and have a particular group collecting from homes and businesses every weekend. Anyone interested is asked to contact Bob Jones, 758-4188, Ext. 254.

Taft Opposes Name Change

State Sen. Thomas F. Taft says he is "strongly opposed" to legislation proposed by Rep. Howard B. Chapin, D-Beaufort, to change the name of a 1.8-mile section of the Tar River in Beaufort County to Pamlico.

"I believe in leaving natural boundaries and historic landmarks as they are unless there's a compelling reason for a change," Taft said. "And I see no compelling reason."

He said he believes his constituents agree with him. "Nobody except Mr. Chapin and the Washington Daily News editorialist have told me they're for the change," he said. "About two dozen of my constituents have told me they're against it."

The river now is named Tar from the U.S. 17 bridge westward and Pamlico from that bridge eastward. Chapin has proposed that the name change come at the Pitt-Beaufort county line.

The Downtown Washington Association has said it is in favor of keeping the names as they are.

The measure is now in the Senate Local Government and Regional Affairs Committee. Its chairman, Sen. James E. Ezzell Jr., D-Nash, said it "might be considered in a month or so."

Ezzell said he is not in favor of the name change.

ECU Will Share Doctoral Plan

ECU News Bureau
East Carolina University has entered into a cooperative program with North Carolina State University leading to the doctor of education degree in elementary and secondary school administration.

Under the approved agreement, the entire doctoral program may be completed on the ECU campus where a full complement of courses has been planned for the next two years, with the degree being awarded by NCSU School of Education.

The program will be inaugurated in the fall semester of this year and interested candidates must complete applications by June 14, officials said. For the first year only, a Miller's Analogy Test (MAT) score of 50 will be acceptable as one of the criteria for admission to the program. Thereafter, a Graduate Record Examination (GRE) score of 1,000 will be required.

Further information on admission requirements to the program may be obtained from the Graduate Administrator, Department of Educational Leadership and Program Evaluation, P.O. Box 7801, N.C. State University, Raleigh 27695-7801 (phone 737-3127).

Dr. Charles Coble, dean of the ECU School of Education, said the cooperative doctoral program "will allow those people who hold aspirations for advanced studies in professional education to fulfill those goals on the campus of East Carolina University."

The agreement, which has been approved by the UNC Board of Governors and the UNC General Administration, broadens the range of terminal degree programs at ECU. The doctoral program in elementary and secondary school administration is the first such terminal degree program offered on the ECU campus except for the doctor of medicine and the Ph.D in basic medical sciences, both of which are offered through the ECU School of Medicine.

Coble said the cooperative agreement "is an excellent beginning toward fulfilling some (terminal degree-granting) aspirations that this campus and our larger constituency have had for many years."

Coble added, "Our major purpose for working to bring this doctoral program to ECU was to help in the long-range improvement of public education throughout eastern North Carolina. The advanced knowledge and skills gained by school administrators in this program will eventually translate into improving local school systems and a better education for our young people. The link between a better education and economic development is well documented. Therefore, this event is seen as a significant step for all of eastern North Carolina."

According to ECU and N.C. State University administrators, the program is designed to enhance the leadership, management and decision-making capabilities of elementary and secondary school system administrators.

Admission requirements include completion of an approved master's degree and sixth year program in education administration, a graduate grade point average of 3.5 on a four-point scale, the current MAT score of 50 or GRE of 1,000 and prior employment as a school administrator. The entire doctoral program must be completed within six calendar years.

Three Die In Martin

WILLIAMSTON — Three persons died and seven were injured in three separate highway accidents in Martin County over a 24-hour period on Friday and Saturday.

Alfonzo Lee Taylor, 24, of Route 2, Jamesville, who reportedly was lying on U.S. 264 at a point 4.5 miles east of Jamesville, died after being struck by a car driven by Garcia Bratten Matchen of Plymouth. Trooper G.P. Raby said no charges were filed.

Mildred Fennell Anthony, 52, of Ahsokie died Friday afternoon in a one-car accident in which five other passengers in the vehicle were injured. Trooper W.R. Roberts reported that the vehicle was operated by Benjamin Frank Anthony, 52, also of Ahsokie. According to Roberts' report, the vehicle, traveling south on N.C. 11 a short distance outside Oak City, ran off the road, crossed a ditch, traveled across two yards and came to rest after crashing into the front porch of a house. Investigation of the accident is continuing.

The third accident was reported at 1:23 a.m. Saturday on N.C. 125, at a point 1.5 miles north of Williamston. Geneva Elizabeth Payne, 19, of Route 3, Williamston, was killed in the accident. Investigating officer B.R. Owens reported that the car, which he said was driven by George Roberson Gurkin, spun around in a curve. The rear end of the car collided with the front end of a vehicle driven by Fransine Lawrence of Route 3, Williamston, then continued some distance after the impact before stopping. Lawrence and Gurkin were both injured. Gurkin has been charged with driving under the influence, manslaughter and the possession of marijuana.

Views On Dental Health

Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A.

SAVING THE ROOTS

When dentures are needed, any supporting bone in the gums can help make them fit more comfortably. This includes whatever tooth roots can be saved. They act just like pilings do in supporting a building. Sometimes metal attachments are made for dentures and roots, so they connect together. Or a thimble-shaped metal cover is attached to the root, designed so that it fits into the denture for additional support. Saving the roots helps in other ways. Some people lose their "sense of feel" when their teeth are closed because they've lost all of their roots and surrounding nerve fibers. When some roots are retained, they keep this sense of touch when their teeth are in contact. There is another advantage: it helps prevent further loss of bone by reducing wear on the jawbone itself. Because of the stronger support, the dentures not only fit better, they tend to last longer before they have to be refitted or replaced. Just like whole teeth, however, the health of the roots must be maintained as long as possible. This makes regular checkups even more important for denture wearers whose roots have been saved.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of Kenneth T. Perkins, D.D.S.P.A., Evans St., Phone: 752-5126. Greenville 752-5126. Vanceboro 244-1179.

Couple Marries In Ceremony On Sunday

Leshia Ann Harkley and Ferdinand Rouse were united in marriage Sunday afternoon at three o'clock in a ceremony performed at the home of the bride, Route 1, Havelock. The double ring ceremony was conducted by Roosevelt Taylor.

Parents of the bride are Walter and Della Mae Harkley of Route 1, Havelock. She was given in marriage by her brother, Leroy Harkley. The bridegroom's mother is Blanche Rouse of La Grange. Aulander Rouse of Goldsboro, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man.

Robertta Clyburn of Charlotte, sister of the bride, was honor attendant and flower girls were Ailiah Watkins, Danelle Watkins of Brooklyn, N.Y., and Aisha Clyburn of Charlotte, nieces of the bride.

Anthony Harkley and Janet Harvey presented the wedding music.

The bride wore a formal gown of white silk organza and chantilly lace over net and peau de soie. The skirt extended into a cathedral train with a triple flounce hemline edged with scalloped chantilly lace. Her veil of imported silk illusion had a rolled edge and was accented with chantilly lace. She carried a bouquet of silk carnations, purple lilies and lily of the valley.

A reception followed the ceremony.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Orlando, Fla.

The bride graduated from Atlantic Christian College and is employed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital as a registered nurse. The bridegroom graduated from Lenoir Community

MRS. ROUSE

College and is employed by Caswell Center in Kinston.

Ham-Tyson Wedding Vows Performed May 5

Mona Kay Tyson and Robert Michael Ham were married May 5 in an afternoon ceremony conducted by the Rev. Walter Reynolds in Friendship Free Will Baptist Church near Farmville.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Tyson Jr. of Route 1, Farmville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Ham of Snow Hill.

The bride wore a floor length gown with a chapel train of bridal taffeta with Venise lace. The fitted bodice featured a Victorian neckline, an illusion yoke outlined with Venise lace, a basque waistline and Lady Diana puffed sleeves. The skirt was appliqued with Venise lace medallions and schiffli embroidered cameos. Her cathedral length veil was scattered with pearls and attached to a Juliet cap covered with sequins, rhinestones and pearls.

The matron of honor was LeAnne Aycock of Raleigh. Bridesmaids were Pam Tyndall of Walstonburg, and cousins of the bride, Sandy Stallings and Angela McLamb of Farmville, and Carol Braswell of Macesfield.

The flower girl was Tiffany Wainwright of Greenville and the ring bearer was Brandon Ham, son of the bridegroom. Ushers were Mike Aycock of Raleigh, Edward Tyson, brother of the bride of Farmville, Kim Welch of Snow Hill and Pete Sanchez of Kinston. The father of the bridegroom served as best man.

Susan Beaman was organist and kids walk to school because they caused a disturbance on the school bus. As a school bus driver, I wish there were more parents like them.

Parents don't realize how much danger is involved when kids misbehave on a school bus. I have my back turned to at least 50 children, and it's not easy to keep track of who's doing what. One junior high school student threw his metal lunch bucket at another boy, missed him and hit me in the head. I was dazed and went off the road, but fortunately I was able to recover in time to keep from going off a bridge! What a terrible tragedy that could have been!

I love children, but this new crop we have coming up is a different breed.

I wish more parents would back up the bus drivers and teachers.

The pledge ritual was held for Linda Patterson and Patsy Garzik. The Founder's Day celebration was held recently with Xi Gamma Xi Chapter.

Libby Kinley was named woman of the year for the chapter and Ms. Harsany was named pledge of the year.

The group is selling doughnuts in front of K-Mart and Nichols as a fund raising project with profits going to the Ronald McDonald House.

Donna Lynn Bland Marries R.G. Gladson

The wedding of Donna Lynn Bland and Roy Gregory Gladson was held the evening of May 3 in the Epworth United Methodist Church conducted by Carson Tyson.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. G.S. Bland of Route 1, Grifton, and Mr. and Mrs. W.A. Gladson of Route 3, Greenville.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white matte taffeta designed with a Victorian neckline encircled with re-embroidered alencon lace. The fitted bodice featured a sheer yoke of imported English net embroidered in a floral motif beaded with pearls. Beaded alencon lace enhanced the bodice and accentuated the basque waistline. The Renaissance sleeves featured French puffs in taffeta with fitted undersleeves of English net applied in Brussels lace interspersed with beaded alencon lace. The full skirt featured a cathedral length train bordered at the hemline in a deep ruffled flounced edge in alencon lace with an overskirt creating a draped effect accented with appliques of alencon lace. She wore a fingertip veil of imported illusion with a pencil edging held in place by a tiara headpiece featuring appliques of alencon lace flowers beaded with pearls. She carried a cascading bouquet of yellow sweet-heart roses.

The honor attendant was Jill Bland, cousin of the bride, of Route 1, Grifton. Bridesmaids were Elaine Humphrey of Lumberton, Carolyn Whitford of New Bern and Debbie Williford of Plymouth.

The flower girl was Melissa Belles, niece of the bride, of New Bern and the miniature bride was Ashly Lassiter of Ayden, niece of the bride.

Ushers were Dwayne Baker of Williamston, Gary Stock, cousin of the bridegroom, of Greenville and Shade Bland, brother of the bride, of Vanceboro. The best man was the father of the bridegroom.

The organist and soloist was Randy Buck, cousin of the bridegroom.

A reception was given by Shade and Sharon Bland and Jackie and Sue Bland in the Casey Fellowship Hall. Assisting were Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Lassiter Jr., Mrs. Dwayne Baker and Mrs. Harold Edwards.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Simpson.

The bridegroom is assistant vice president of Farm Credit Service in Greenville. The bride is an English teacher at Halifax Academy in Roanoke Rapids. Both are graduates of East Carolina University.

Dear Abby

By Abigail Van Buren

1983 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Three cheers for the parents who made their sons walk to school and back (a total of 14 miles) for five days when the boys were suspended from the school bus for bad behavior.

A man wrote in accusing those parents of "child abuse." Baloney! Thanks, Abby, for saying you thought the parents should be cloned, not criticized.

Our 13-year-old son was kicked off the school bus for three days for roughhousing. The streets and roads where we live are impossible to walk on and there are no sidewalks, so I drove him. However, he had to pay me the going rate for taxi service. He hated to part with his own money, but he had no choice.

You had better believe that kid never roughhoused on the school bus again.

MISSOURI MOM

DEAR MOM: Stay tuned for a few words from two bus drivers:

DEAR ABBY: I applaud those parents. I drive high school, junior high and elementary school children. I have 72 lives in my hands, and when I have to keep looking in my rearview mirror to see which kids are ripping up the seats, fighting and throwing things, I can't drive and watch the road the way I should.

In our system, a child has to be "written up" three times for bad conduct before he is suspended. Most kids don't care if they're suspended because either their parents will drive them, or they'll just stay home from school.

I'd love to see parents ride the school bus with their kids just once. They'd never want my job.

My husband rode with me once and said, "Never again—it's suicidal!"

Don't use my name. I need this job.

Trade

There is nationwide concern for the flood of imports which are coming into this country and creating a balance of trade deficit. They way to deal with it, of course, is to increase our own exports.

It has been emphasized time after time that North Carolina could be in an enviable position to develop foreign markets. What comes to mind first is Japan, which exports so much to the United States. There are other foreign markets, however, and Gordon McRoberts, director of the export marketing program for the state Department of Commerce, says that North Carolina businessmen should look to them.

Japan has the buying power but it also sets up strict standards and testing requirements which could make it difficult to get products on its market. Such requirements are known as non-tariff barriers. It is an overkill situation.

"If someone were wanting to try exporting, I'd suggest Canada first, or maybe West Germany," McRoberts said. "These markets are much easier to penetrate than Japan."

Certainly Canada would be a logical market for North Carolina-made items or farm products. Indeed we should explore all world markets. We are in a trading revolution in which the entire world is the market place. North Carolina producers cannot ignore these rapid changes in marketing. We have unique products and we must sell them anywhere we can.

Colleges

Both Republican Gov. Jim Martin and Bob Scott, the Democratic president of the community college system, seem to be in agreement — that the state should take over responsibility for operation of the community college system.

Gov. Martin said so in a speech to the N.C. Association of Community College trustees. He noted that 11 special requests for project appropriations have been filed this legislative session, with more expected. Such requests subvert the purpose of the statewide community college system, he said; that is, providing planning and efficiency in budget requests.

Martin said picking up the counties' appropriation for the 53 community colleges would cost about $29 million per year.

Scott said Martin's position boosted his efforts to develop a statewide system of community colleges, rather than a collection of independent, local institutions.

It is obvious that better coordination of community college programs and services will be a growing matter of concern. It is time now to consider how this can best be done.

'Toasted Marshmallow'

If people don't think Attorney General Ed Meese is a heart, they ought to take another look at the recent settlement of the Justice Department's case against the brokerage firm of E.F. Hutton.

The company pleaded guilty to 2,000 felony counts of mail and wire fraud which involved kiting checks worth more than a billion dollars to 400 American banks.

E.F. Hutton made a deal with the government and was sentenced to pay a fine of $2 million (which boils down to $1,000 for each count) and $8 million to the banks it defrauded.

When somebody asked the attorney general why no individuals were prosecuted, Mrs. Meese replied, "In this case it was more important to get recompense to victims, real banks, than to prosecute the individuals." Meese called the settling of the case a "comprehensive and open-ended restitution plan." He said the plea bargaining agreement showed the Justice Department's concern for victims and "its desire to make whole those banks and other institutions who suffered any loss."

The attorney general's decision to let E.F. Hutton buy its way out of trouble for a few million bucks made us reassess our opinion of Meese as a tough law and order man. When it comes to crooked brokers, Ed Meese is a toasted marshmallow.

I called my man at Justice and asked why the big turnaround on crime by the Reagan administration.

"E.F. Hutton has suffered enough," he said. "Will justice be served if we send anyone to jail over a little billion dollar check-writing scam?"

"You've sent people up the river for stealing a lot less," I pointed out. "I know a lady who embezzled $10,000 from her credit union and she's doing seven years in a federal penitentiary."

"That was a serious white-collar crime, and if we had let her plea-

WASHINGTON — Imagine you are in an airplane that has just made a frighteningly shaky landing in rough weather. Imagine further that the pilot has just announced that one of the galley crew had taken the aircraft in. You'd probably never fly that airline again.

Sometimes it's easy to develop a similarly low degree of confidence in the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

This was the case last month, when Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole, whose department includes the FAA, acknowledged that her 46,000-employee FAA was underreporting the number of near-midair collisions (NMAC) in the nation's airspace.

In an unpublicized letter to Christopher Witkowski, executive director of the Ralph Nader-inspired Aviation Consumer Action Project (ACAP), Mrs. Dole said she "appreciated the time and effort expended by your organization (ACAP) — concerning our near-midair collision incident statistics and our current reporting and investigative procedures involving these types of incidents."

Last January, Witkowski disclosed that the FAA had been improperly recording the number of near collisions for the past two years. In 1983 and 1984, 102 near collisions went unreported to the public, he said.

When this report was released, FAA official Ed Pinto admitted that several of the agency's regional offices had failed to forward their near-miss reports to headquarters, but that there was no reason for alarm.

And to some degree Pinto was right. On the average, 5,000 airplanes take off and land without incident in this country every day. Moreover, the last midair collision involving a major airline occurred almost seven years ago, when 144 people perished in San Diego in the crash of a private plane and a Pacific Southwest airliner.

Yet, during the first quarter of 1985, the FAA received 146 NMAC reports, compared to 98 incidents during a similar period in 1984. A few weeks ago a Republic airliner nearly collided with a private aircraft over Lake Michigan. And several weeks before that, two widebody Northwest Orient airliners almost collided on a runway in Minneapolis.

With an expected 10 percent increase in airline traffic this summer, air safety experts like Christopher Witkowski are alarmed. The basis for their concern is deregulation. Since 1978, deregulation has led to increased competition among airlines. Accordingly, the airlines have cut corners to ensure their market share. Meanwhile, the FAA has relaxed jetliner safety standards at their request.

Of course, the FAA has tightened some regulations too. For example, the agency recently proposed to tighten flammability standards for materials used in airline passenger compartments. In response to a petition, the FAA also approved a requirement to provide modern medical equipment on airlines; currently, it only requires that airlines carry oxygen and first aid kits that include a few bandages and splints.

But consider how the FAA has responded to airline concerns about delays in takeoffs. The delays are due in large measure to the airlines' unrealistic scheduling practices and a 40 percent reduction in the number of controllers since 1981. For their part, the airlines have asked the FAA to reduce minimum separations in high altitude sectors and reintroduce stacking of planes.

Such a posture, according to ACAP director Witkowski, would result in a serious reduction in the safety of an air traffic control system that is already under severe strain.

Unfortunately the preliminary changes the FAA is implementing in the name of air safety — resectoring quadrants in the sky and improved early-warning air traffic computers — seem more directed at preventing airliner delays than ensuring safety.

Safety experts like Witkowski aren't asking too much. They only want the FAA to take an active role in finding a solution to a series of safety problems such as why pilot reports of near-midair collisions aren't being confirmed by the agency.

Too often political creatures like Secretary Dole forget that the FAA is entrusted with the public safety in aviation. So when her agency is confronted with its inadequacies, it should deal with them promptly and openly. After all, air travelers need to know that shoestring public interest groups aren't the only ones looking out for their interests.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It is good to be reminded of mental health by having May designated as Mental Health Month in proclamation and observation. But it is even more important to remember the enormity of the problem — and the unmet need posed by mental illness — as the greatest of all in the medical field here in America today.

Once the fact is recognized and accepted by the public, then medical research, those in professional practice of psychiatry and psychology, and volunteer advocates can get on with an adequate job of meeting the need and curing some of those suffering from any of the various symptoms of mental problems.

But simple recognition, even acceptance of the fact that such an enormous problem exists, will not get the job done. Next must come a drastic change of attitude on the part of uncounted numbers in the public body.

We must overcome the stigma so many attach to mental illness — overtly or covertly, directly or indirectly, consciously or subconsciously. That is a requirement before we can move successfully to an effective remedy.

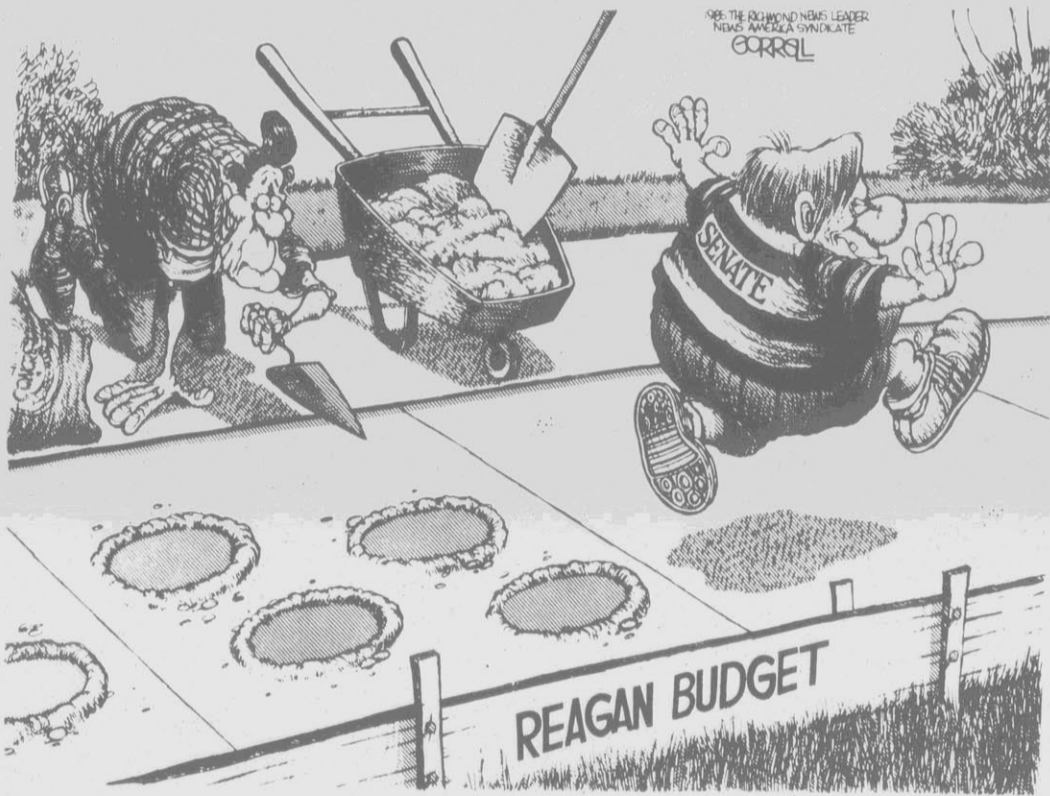

And we may as well remember that some estimates hold that one in five of us will need some help at some time in our lives, or one in every three households have a member now who needs or is getting help restoring or maintaining mental health.

Prevention can assure that mental health can mean just that and not merely the antithesis, the counterbalance to mental illness. Finally, we must always remember that mental illness is not something that happens somewhere else far away. It happens right next door, perhaps next door to your next door neighbor. It can be you or a member of your family. If not, you're fortunate. And, if not, we all should remember that there are others who are suffering and we must care about them and for them.

A Question Of Safety

Good Intentions

RALEIGH — Sometimes the most dangerous laws stem from the best of intentions. Witness the current, but long overdue, legislative concern for protecting our children from those who would prey on them.

Rep. Marie Colton, D-Buncombe, has her heart in the right place with a bill designed to keep convicted child abusers and moral degenerates away from our kids. The problem with her bill, however, is that it might also keep a lot of nice people away from them, too.

Mrs. Colton filed a bill early this year that would have local police fingerprint all day care workers and job applicants. The county clerk would check for a local criminal record and both the SBI and the FBI would use the fingerprints to search for an out-of-town record. Anyone found with either a felony or misdemeanor conviction for a crime of "child abuse, child neglect or moral turpitude" could not work in that day care facility.

A subcommittee broadened the bill substantially to cover social service, youth service, mental health, mental retardation and substance abuse workers at all levels who work with children. Public and private hospital workers at all levels are also covered. Mrs. Colton has been asked to also include employees at residential homes for children. She considered putting public school employees and volunteers — such as Boy Scout leaders — in the bill.

If you've ever been convicted of a crime of child abuse, child neglect or moral turpitude, you would be banned for life from those professions.

And right you ought to be, you say. We don't need pornographers, molesters and child beaters working around children.

If the bill stopped there, it is doubtful that anyone would quibble. But the bill is written so broadly and so vaguely as to threaten the civil liberties of a great many citizens.

The vagueness of the bill is evident from the question: What is a crime of moral turpitude? It can be just about anything. Certainly, it involves murder and rape. But a lawyer who sat through the first hearing on the bill says it might also include skinny-dipping at a public beach at midnight. It would also include drunken driving, larceny, burglary, smoking dope.

Consider how broad the bill is. The provision about hospital workers would include practically everyone in the medical profession. Almost everyone in social work would also be covered.

The bill's breadth should also be measured in time. Nothing in the bill addresses a person's right to turn his life around. This bill says once you've made a mistake, you're to be punished for life.

So let's put it all together. A college kid gets drunk at a party, gets caught drunken driving and pays his fine. He grows up, goes to medical school, becomes a pediatrician, and after this bill passes, he's faced with a big court fight to keep his rights to work at the local hospital.

Or, a street tough kid breaks into a house, steals money and a radio and gets caught. Probation works. He gets on the right track, studies to be a social worker and now 15 or 20 years later he's barred from working with teens.

Maybe it is premature to jump all over a bill that is just beginning its long journey through the Legislature, especially when Mrs. Colton expresses an honest interest in hearing from critics. But when the House Children and Youth Committee first discussed the bill, no one raised any questions about civil liberties.

That's how good intentions sometimes make bad laws.

—Elisha Douglas—

Strength For Today

The early Christians suffered dire persecution, and they could have avoided it all if they had been willing to do a very small and apparently insignificant thing. The Roman overlords required them at certain times to approach a statue of the emperor, take a pinch of incense and cast it into the fire, and then walk away.

But this pinch of incense cast into the fire would have involved compromise, for it would have been the acknowledgment that the emperor was a god.

There are evil people of critical mind who plan to rob and destroy their fellows. But also the people who cause much trouble in life are folks like ourselves who compromise. We give in a little here and a little there. We declare that this little action doesn't count.

We shrug our shoulders. We take a pinch of incense, cast it and let it go at that.

Farm Scene

By SAM UZZELL
 Agricultural Extension Agent

Moles and questions about moles crop up each spring. As the soil warms and the moles search for food, often long, meandering "runs" appear. The homeowner becomes concerned about the ruination of the lawn as he steps through the mole hill that has been pushed up just under the soil surface.

Generally, moles are first noticed in spring when the homeowner finds the soil in the backyard to be spongy and give way underfoot. Then it is easy to see tunnels or mole hills wandering under the lawn.

Once the mole problem is discovered, then the homeowner must decide whether to fight them or forget them. It is helpful to know a little about the habits of the enemy in order to combat him. The mole is a small animal that is largely insectivorous, or feeds primarily on soil insects, earthworms and grub worms. Moles can literally swim through soil and their body shape and characteristics enable them to move underground an amazing distance per day.

Moles produce shallow tunnels as they swim through soil in search of food. They also construct deeper chambers in the soil to rear young and carry on other aspects of their life cycle. Moles breed only once a year and have only three or four offspring at each birth. They do not have the ability to reproduce at high levels. Mice, in contrast, can breed repeatedly throughout the year and have four to seven young per litter.

So even if the homeowner sees a lot of tunnelling in his yard, usually it is the work of one or two moles and not several individuals.

Control of moles is unsure, requires patience but can be done in a logical manner. One method is to kill the moles' food source by applying insecticides to the lawn. Diazinon, trichlorofon and isophenphos are all chemicals recommended for grub worm control in the soil. Removing the food source for the mole may mean he has to travel further to find food and he may even stay in a neighbor's yard.

A more direct method would be using a mole trap. To set the trap properly, check the yard for runways. Press down all the runways at intervals of several feet. Put a bottle cap or other marker at those exact spots. Check the following day and if the runway is not pushed back up, take up the marker. If the runway is pushed down, put down a second marker. After several days, you will know which runways are most frequently used. Then you can set the mole trap over the most-traveled runway and flatten it. Set the trap, spring it and leave it set again. If the trap has been sprung, dig into the sod to see if you've successfully trapped the mole. If not, try another spot. Repeat the process until mole hills do not reoccur.

Caution Is Needed To Avoid Fertilizer

Pitt tobacco growers faced with the decision of resetting poor tobacco stands have raised questions concerning further application of fertilizer, according to Agricultural Extension Agent Mitch Smith.

"Fields which have received an initial application of fertilizer and then disked should be treated as if the fertilizer were broadcast across the entire area," Smith said today. "In this situation, the only extra fertilizer to be applied is that which is to be applied in the sidedress application."

Smith said an alternative to the complete destruction of the row integrity is to reset the new transplants to the old row. "This may prevent the added stress that would be caused from more moisture being taken up from the broadcast effect," he added.

Growers considering this method should be careful not to reset the new seedlings directly into the fertilizer bands, Smith said.

Proposed Agency Would Oversee Food Programs

By DON KENDALL
 AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans are being drawn up for a new National Food and Agriculture Foundation to act as an independent overseer of programs to help set a futuristic course for the massive U.S. food machine.

Among the first tasks of the council would be to enhance agriculture's image and sharpen public awareness of the role of America's farmers.

The preliminary blueprint has been discussed at some length in recent months by selected representatives of the private sector and the Agriculture Department, which is pushing the idea.

One effect could be the eventual transfer of some educational functions such as programs to promote agriculture in schools, and USDA's food-and-fitness campaign, entirely to private sponsors.

The role model for this type of effort is the highly visible and successful national 4-H program, which for many years has had hearty support from private interests.

A recent working paper made available to The Associated Press said the proposed council would be "an innovative public-private partnership to address contemporary issues of importance to both the public and private sectors in the U.S. agriculture system."

Other goals would be to "encourage cooperative planning at the national level" and to "facilitate joint funding arrangements." No money goals were stated, but a source close to the plan — who spoke only on condition of anonymity — said it probably would take $300,000 to $400,000 annually just to get started.

"It is hoped that agriculturally related private industry donors will provide seed money to create the National Food and Agriculture Foundation," the report said.

"Such a foundation with a board of directors of 10-12 forward-thinking, action-oriented leaders representing government and business could stimulate a coordinated approach to many contemporary issues facing U.S. agriculture," the report said.

"The National Food and Agriculture Foundation would be a non-partisan effort, spanning the cyclical political changes in government. It would not be a USDA agency, nor would it be a policy-making body. It would, however, work in cooperation with various government agencies to achieve jointly decided objectives of concern to both public and private partners in agriculture."

Compromise Sought On Tax Proposals

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — They've bickered from the day the 1985 General Assembly convened, but Republican Gov. Jim Martin and key Democratic legislators are trying to agree on tax cuts for which both sides can claim credit.

"We've all come to the point at which compromise is the word," Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman, R-Iredell, sponsor of Martin's program, said last week.

Intense, behind-the-scenes negotiations are under way between the administration and leaders of the Senate, which has yet to vote on a tax package. Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan have met at least twice in recent weeks to seek common ground.

The flurry of activity indicates eagerness to avoid a repeat of the bitter fight that ended with House approval of a tax package bearing only superficial resemblance to Martin's.

Martin, who during his weekly news conferences has blasted legislative Democrats on issues ranging from veto power to the date of his State of the State address, used the same forum to signal his flexibility on taxes.

After insisting for weeks that fair treatment of his package must include an up-or-down floor vote in both chambers, Martin said last Thursday he hoped the Senate would take "some middle position" between his and the House's bills. He spoke of "optimism" and "a good-faith bipartisan effort."

An AP News Analysis

Jordan told reporters the same day that there had been "a definite change on the part of the executive branch." But he added cautiously, "I'm not sure the governor can ever be completely satisfied."

Martin has called for repeal of the property tax on intangible assets such as stocks and bank deposits, a phased-in state income tax credit to offset the property tax on business inventories, and repeal of the state sales tax on food and non-prescription medicines.

He estimates that his plan would cost about $489 million a year when fully implemented in fiscal 1988-89. For the three-year period beginning with fiscal 1985-86, the plan would cost about $690 million.

The House package, which would cost about $390 million over the next three years, includes partial rollbacks of the inventory and intangibles taxes. It would exempt food bought with food stamps and funeral expenses from the sales tax, repeal the inheritance and gift taxes, grant a $20 income tax cut, increase the income tax credit for use of day care services.

Martin was surprised and angered by the way the House package was conceived and approved. A handful of Democratic leaders put it together in private meetings, and a subcommittee approved it on a Monday night shortly before Martin's bill was introduced on the House floor.

Within four days, the bill was rushed through the Finance Committee and two floor votes. The governor and his Republican supporters could do little but watch helplessly as efforts to restore his proposals by amendment were rejected and he drew blistering criticism from Democrats who said he hadn't worked hard enough for his program.

The Senate has taken a far more deliberate approach. A subcommittee conducted a public hearing and spent nearly about three weeks discussing the Martin and House bills and other tax cuts proposed by Senate Democrats.

Sens. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, and R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, chair the subcommittee as well as the Finance Committee. They plan to offer a "skeleton" package to the subcommittee next week.

Both are tight-lipped about its contents, but other subcommittee members say they're likely to include deeper intangibles and inventory tax cuts than the House approved. The subcommittee probably will back the House's inheritance tax plan but is likely to propose income tax relief only for low- and middle-income taxpayers instead of the House's across-the-board cut.

Of course, unless the Senate endorses the House approach, a conference committee probably will be appointed to hammer out a final bill, which would have to get majority support in both chambers to become law.

So the journey toward a final product is far from over. But at least there's hope that the last leg will be an exercise in peaceful coexistence, not war.

UNC, Other State Schools Present Student Degrees

By The Associated Press

As television newsman and former University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill student Charles Kuralt gave the commencement speech at his alma mater, he also was attending his first commencement at the school.

"I am a Tar Heel born and a Tar Heel bred, and when I die I'm a Tar Heel dead — but this is my first Chapel Hill commencement," Kuralt told 5,300 graduates Sunday. "I did not quite qualify for attendance at the graduation of my own class. My mother was disappointed. But this was worth waiting for: a good seat and a chance to make a speech."

Kuralt also told graduates to bear responsibilities.

"Every graduating class faces challenges beyond the personal ones, and bears the responsibility to do, in the phrase of Norman Corwin, 'to do a little civil thinking every day,'" Kuralt said.

"The misplaced priorities of our nation, and the greed in public life, and the perversion of our religion are among the challenges faced by the class of 1985...." he said.

UNC-Chapel Hill awarded honorary degrees to five people, including U.S. Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole, a native of Salisbury, and Emma Neal McQueen Morrison, producer emerita of "The Lost Colony."

In other graduations: — Shaw Divinity School awarded an honorary degree to the Rev. Sun Myung Moon, the controversial leader of the Unification Church currently in prison for tax evasion.

Moon's wife, Hak Ja Han, accepted the degree for her husband.

"My husband has ... devoted himself to the cause of understanding and unity between races," Mrs. Moon said. She also said his husband "loves his enemies."

Joseph Paige, vice president of the school, said the reaction to Moon's being awarded a honorary degree has been "positive."

"Mostly, people have been amazed that we're not amazed at the fact that they're amazed," he said in a telephone interview Saturday.

Paige also denied that a $30,000 contribution by the Unification Church had anything to do with Moon's receiving the degree.

"Absolutely not," he said. "I think the board has more integrity than that. I think they did what they thought was proper and just."

— In Greensboro, UNC-Greensboro awarded degrees to nearly 2,000 graduates, who were told by Cornell University President Frank Rhodes that knowledge is important but that knowledge alone is not enough.

"It is knowledge that is the engine of our dreams and it is knowledge that is the enabler of our hopes," Rhodes told the graduates. "Commitment without knowledge can drift into simple sentimentality. And knowledge without commitment can drift into simple cleverness."

— In Durham, more than 700 undergraduates and graduates received degrees in commencement exercises at North Carolina Central University.

"This is the day for those who came early and stayed late for academic excellence. And we feel nothing but pride and joy," Patricia A. Russell, an attorney and president of Patricia A. Russell Consultants in San Antonio, Texas, told the graduates.

"You have the responsibility not only to learn to play the game but to learn the games people play," she said. "You have the singular opportunity to let your voice be more than an echo. You must be those who have a mind that holds more," Ms. Russell said.

— In Elizabeth City, U.S. Secretary of Housing and Urban Development Samuel R. Pierce Jr. was awarded an honorary Doctor of Humane Letters degree by Elizabeth City State University during commencement activities.

"Today, more than any time in the past, the future belongs to all Americans, regardless of race, creed or color," Pierce told 257 graduates.

— In Salisbury, Catawba College presented honorary degrees to four people at its commencement ceremonies, including North Carolina head basketball coach Dean Smith.

— In Raleigh, Samuel R. Pierce Jr., U.S. secretary of housing and urban development, urged 213 graduates of St. Augustine's College to work hard and be self-reliant.

"Hard work doesn't follow luck; luck follows hard work," Pierce said in a commencement address. "You, yourself, have to create opportunities where none seem to exist."

"Perseverance knows no color, no religion, no sex, no creed," Pierce said. "It is the great equalizer. It is also the great uplifter."

SIMPSON RECEIVES CHECK — L.K. Williamson, right, immediate past governor of District 31-H of Lions International, presents a check for $7,000 to Simpson Fire Chief Hyman Boyd, left. The contribution will be used toward rebuilding costs for the new Simpson Fire Department building, in the background. The original building was destroyed by the March 28, 1984, tornado.

Lions District 13-H received a $16,000 grant from the Lions International Foundation to aid the 14 counties stricken in eastern North Carolina. The grant was matched by an additional $15,000 in funds raised throughout the district. The full amount, $31,000, has been used to assist families and volunteer organizations affected by the storm throughout the district.

Mom, Two Children Found Dead

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The cries of an 18-month-old child and the phone calls of a worried husband led to the discovery Sunday of the bodies of the child's mother and two sisters inside their Fayetteville home, authorities said.

Harold Little, a spokesman for the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department, said the victims were identified as Catherine Eastburn, 32, the wife of a Pope Air Force Base captain, and daughters, Kara, 5, and Erin, 3. The youngest daughter, Jana, was unharmed, authorities said.

The bodies were found Sunday afternoon after a neighbor "had been hearing this cry off and on for the last three days," Little said. He added that investigators thought the three victims had been dead since Thursday.

Mrs. Eastburn's husband, U.S. Air Force Capt. Gary Eastburn, returned to Fayetteville from Alabama Sunday night after receiving word of the deaths, officials said. Neighbors familiar with the family said he had been attending a training course for four or five weeks.

Little said reports showed Eastburn had called the sheriff's department Friday after being unable to reach his family over the telephone from Alabama. A deputy went to the house and "nobody came to the door," Little said.

A note the deputy left asking Mrs. Eastburn to get in touch with her husband was still pinned to the door when authorities found the bodies.

Duke Research Will Focus On Effect Of Family Stress

DURHAM (AP) — A person's health may be influenced more by his family than doctors realize, but just how important "family stress" is will be examined in a study by researchers at Duke University Medical Center.

"We suspect that family stress is an important factor in a wide range of medical problems, but it has been difficult to define its effect," said Dr. George R. Parkerson Jr., associate professor at Duke and acting chairman of community and family medicine.

"People can probably cope with illness better and will tend to be more compliant with medical management if they are at ease in their family or social environment," Parkerson said in a news release Saturday. "In our study, we hope to quantify the effect of stress, to assign numerical values to certain facets of family life and see how they add up in relation to health."

Parkerson and his colleagues received a $149,000 grant from the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation for the 2½-year study, which will involve 240 adult patients.

"We hope to be able to identify factors that will predict problems and patients who are most likely to benefit from intervention to reduce family stress," he said.

Jones Plans Democratic Strategy Party On May 27

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
U.S. Rep. Walter B. Jones has invited North Carolina Democrats to a barbecue and get-together May 27 at Jones' home in Farmville, where some strategy for the 1986 elections may be discussed.

"The purpose is just to show the public that Democrats are still alive, still have some vitality," Jones said. "We'll be discussing some strategy, maybe trying to get some plans for 1986."

Dubbed "Spearhead '86," the get-together will feature U.S. House Majority Leader Jim Wright, D-Texas. Jones says he's also invited Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, along with other Democratic officeholders and party members.

"There are many loyal Democrats in the state of North Carolina, and I thought it would be worthwhile to get the people together," Jones said. "Some of my political friends say that as dean (senior Democrat) of the North Carolina (congressional) delegation, I ought to take some form of leadership."

Jones said he hoped 75 Democratic leaders would attend the affair, which will include lunch followed by a talk by Wright, who in 1987 is expected to succeed Thomas P.

"Tip" O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., as House speaker.

Jones' plans for a strategy session come as Republicans broaden efforts to continue their election successes of last year and lure Democrats to the GOP.

Republicans announced last week that they would run phone banks, send out mass mailings and knock on doors in the next 100 days in an attempt to persuade 15,000 Democrats statewide to switch parties.

The state campaign will be part of a Republican project in four states to convince about 100,000 people who often vote for Republicans to change their party registration.

Dutch Greet Pope's Tour With Violence

By PAUL ROBERT
Associated Press Writer
THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP) — Pope John Paul II was told by the prime minister today that opposition to the papacy is widespread in the Netherlands, and that the mere mention of Rome is enough to make some of the Dutch "uneasy."

Prime Minister Ruud Lubbers, a Roman Catholic, welcomed the pontiff to The Hague, seat of the Dutch government, on the third day of his troubled Dutch tour.

On Sunday, hundreds of riot-throwing youths clashed with rock police as the pope visited Utrecht, seat of the country's Catholic church. In meetings, some Dutch Catholics told the pope they disagreed with what they called the church's overly conservative doctrine.

In The Hague, about 1,000 people joined in a rally by the liberal Catholic group Pax Christi in front of the Peace Palace, home of the World Court, where the pope was invited to speak today.

They carried signs reading "John Paul II Stand Aside, We Can't See Jesus" and opposing the stationing of U.S. cruise missiles in Holland, a member of NATO.

Crowds in The Hague were small and scattered as John Paul, 64, celebrated Mass for the sick and handicapped, then went in his bullet-proof "popemobile" to the Catshuis, the official residence of the prime minister.

Later, the pope was to see Queen Beatrix and the diplomatic corps.

Pope said they detained two youths along a papal motorcade route who were carrying a quantity of smoke bombs. Between 3,000 and 4,000 people lined the mile-long route to wave yellow-and-white flags and cheer the pontiff.

Security was tight, with more than 900 police deployed in the city on the fourth anniversary of the attempt to kill the Polish-born pontiff in St. Peter's Square.

Catholics make up 40 percent of the country's 14 million population, while most other people are Protestants.

John Paul's five-day trip — to be followed by a tour of Belgium and Luxembourg — has caused deep dissent in the fiercely independent Dutch church.

The trip has pitted the conservative hierarchy against a strong liberal wing. The progressives are angered over John Paul's appointment of conservative bishops.

"Sometimes Rome seems a very long way away from here," Lubbers, a member of the conservative Christian Democratic party, told the pontiff.

"Indeed, to be quite frank, simply the word Rome makes some people uneasy if not downright suspicious. However, I imagine that from Rome, the Netherlands seems no less distant and provokes an equal amount of concern," he said.

Protestant feelings about Rome have their roots in the Eighty Years War of the 16th and 17th centuries, in which the Dutch fought for independence from Catholic Spain.

Lubbers urged the pontiff to "build bridges and restore confidence" and wished him the wisdom to guide local churches everywhere "each according to its nature and qualities."

The pope, in reply, praised the Netherlands' Christian heritage and cited Dutch "readiness to promote the cause of human rights and the dignity of every human being."

In his address to the handicapped, many arranged in beds and wheelchairs in the Houtrust exhibition hall, the pontiff praised Dutch medical facilities and "devoted workers (who) carry out their duties without losing sight of the fact that the patient is a human being."

He urged the suffering to remember that "no human life is worthless."

Police in Utrecht, 40 miles from The Hague, said they had arrested 14 demonstrators on Sunday, fired two warning shots and shot at another demonstrator without knowing whether he had been hit. Between 1,000 and 1,500 young people were involved in the violent protests against the pope's visit, according to police Chief Jan

Wiarda.

The pitched battles followed a peaceful march by about 10,000 Dutch radicals, feminists and homosexuals opposing John Paul's visit.

Fire Toll Climbs To 53

BRADFORD, England (AP) — Police today said fireworks and smoke bombs were thrown inside a soccer stadium before a fire swept through the wooden grandstand, causing the deaths of at least 53 people.

But John Domaille, West Yorkshire assistant police chief, refused to say whether investigators believe one or more of the smoke-making devices caused the Saturday inferno at Bradford's Valley Parade Ground.

The death toll rose to 53 today when 75-year-old Roy Mason died at Pinderfields Hospital in nearby Wakefield, officials said.

Cheating

PEKING (AP) — Half of China's state and collectively-run enterprises and up to 80 percent of its private businesses cheat on taxes, the People's Daily reported.

The Communist Party newspaper did not disclose how much money is lost because of tax cheats, but said that last year in Hebei province alone the figure amounted to $35 million.

China has been instituting taxes to replace the old method of profit delivery to the state. Under the tax system, moneymaking enterprises keep a greater share of their profits.

TOWN OF BETHEL ADVERTISEMENT OF TAX LIENS ON REAL PROPERTY

Under and by virtue of the authority vested in me by Section 105-369 of the North Carolina General Statutes and pursuant to an order of the Board of Commissioners of the Town of Bethel, dated April 2, 1985, I am advertising tax liens for the year 1984 upon the real estate described below. The amount advertised will be increased by interest and costs, and the omission of interest and cost from the amount advertised will not constitute a waiver of the taxing unit's claim for those items. The name of the person to whom the property is listed for taxes, and the principal amount of the taxes are set out below. If the taxes remain unpaid, the lien will be foreclosed by the taxing unit and the property sold to satisfy the taxing unit's claim for taxes.

Stock And Market Reports

By The Associated Press

HOGS: Trend is 25 cents higher at N.C. buying stations. Kinston, Spivey's Corner, Murfreesboro, Siler City and Robersonville 42.50; Clinton, Fayetteville, Dunn, Pink Hill, Pine Level, Chadbourn, Ayden, Laurinburg and Benson 42.25; Wilson 42.25; Rowland 42.50. Sows: (500 pounds up) Wilson 38.00; Fayetteville 36.00; Whiteville 38.00; Wallace 39.00; Spivey's Corner 39.00, Rowland 40.00.

BROILERS: The North Carolina f.o.b. dock quoted price on broilers for this week's trading was 48.00 cents, based on full truck load lots of ice pack USDA Grade A sized 2 1/2 to 3 pound birds. 85 percent of the loads offered have been confirmed with a final weighted average of 47.61 cents f.o.b dock or equivalent. The market is steady and the live supply is adequate for a moderate to good demand. Average weights desirable. Estimated slaughter of broilers and fryers in North Carolina Monday was 1,724,000, compared to 1,701,000 last Monday.

GRAIN: No. 2 yellow shelled corn 1 cent higher at mostly 2.96-3.05 in East and mostly 3.15-3.21 in the Piedmont; No. 1 yellow soybeans mostly 4 cents higher at mostly 5.89-6.10 in the East and mostly 5.85-6.00 in the Piedmont; wheat mostly 2.99-3.09; (new crop wheat 2.84; new crop soybeans 5.59-5.84; new crop corn 2.51-2.61).

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pushed ahead today, picking up where it left off in last week's rally.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.33 points to 1,275.51 in the first half hour on Wall Street.

Gainers opened up a 3-2 lead over losers in the early count of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

Analysts said investors were still hopeful for progress toward shrinking the federal budget deficit.

Late last week the Senate passed a Republican-sponsored budget plan containing many spending reductions.

Wall Streeters will be watching closely this week as the House of Representatives, where Democrats have some very different ideas, goes to work on its version of a budget proposal.

If some significant action is taken on that front, analysts reason, the Federal Reserve will be more inclined to relax its credit policy, encouraging interest rates to decline. One move in that direction might be a cut in the Fed's discount rate, the charge it sets on loans to private financial institutions.

But some cautious observers warn that the market might be vulnerable to selling by disappointed traders should events not follow that script.

Among today's early volume leaders, Eastman Kodak rose 1/4 to 64 1/2; Merrill Lynch gained 1/8 to 32 1/4; Hewlett-Packard added 1/8 to 34 1/8, and American Telephone & Telegraph was down 1/8 at 22 1/8.

On Friday the Dow Jones industrial average climbed 13.91 to 1,274.18, stretching its gain for the week to 26.94 points.

Advances outpaced declines by more than 3 to 1 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume totaled 140.26 million shares, against 110.99 million in the previous session.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks jumped 1.33 to a record 106.64. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.53 at 228.17.

seven years ago. "All you cops — you oughta come down and get this started," taunted a member of the group MOVE early today, using a public address system attached to the house, which has a rooftop bunker complete with peepholes and gun slits.

"You're going to see something you've never seen before," the speaker blared into the night. The last showdown between police and MOVE ended in a shootout that killed one policeman and wounded several others in 1978 at the group's former headquarters about two miles away.

Police evacuated 200 to 300 families overnight from a four-block area around the house.

Tensions in the neighborhood have increased in the past month, fueled by neighbor complaints of noise, stench and filth emanating from the house, where police believe 10 children and five adults reside.

MOVE follows a philosophy espoused by its founder, Vincent Leaphart, who later took the name John Africa. All group members use the surname Africa.

Bertie Hospital Closes In June

WINDSOR — Bertie County Commissioners have decided to close Bertie County Memorial Hospital effective June 30. In-patient and emergency services will terminate May 20 with long-term care service to end June 30.

News of the unexpected decision to close came as a shock to officials in neighboring Martin County. Hospital board members and county commissions of both Bertie and Martin County have been working in efforts to merge services with the hope of being able to keep both hospitals open despite increasing monetary and staffing problems that have plagued operations for several years.

"This is really like a bomb dropping," commented Danny Griffin, who serves as chairman of the Martin General Hospital trustees' finance committee.

Joe Spruill, chairman of the Bertie hospital board, said "we took action we felt necessary to close the hospital. The relationship between the hospital trustees and the commissioners has always been good."

Bertie commissioners have appropriated $55,000 monthly for the hospital to meet pressing needs since the first of the year.

Knicks Beat Odds In NBA Lottery

NEW YORK (AP) — With the odds 7-1, none of the seven teams in the Patrick Ewing Lottery had any right to expect to win.

Somebody had to, however, and even some of the losers Sunday had to admit it could be better for the National Basketball Association that it was the New York Knicks who beat the odds.

"This is a great boost for New York," said owner Barry Ackerley of the Seattle SuperSonics, who won the No. 4 pick in the June 18 draft. "We may not have the No. 1 pick, but that (New York) is a terrific media market. That's not going to hurt the league."

"I think it's great for the league and great for New York," added General Manager Carl Scheer of the Los Angeles Clippers, who will pick third behind the Knicks and Indiana Pacers. The fifth through seventh picks in the first round will belong to Atlanta, Sacramento and Golden State, respectively.

Commissioner David Stern said the mere addition of Ewing and other players to the NBA would help the league.

"We've just completed our most successful year and with Patrick Ewing and other players coming into the league, we'll continue to grow," Stern said. "But with Ewing in New York, it may make it easier to hit the major markets. People around the nation get their impressions from the New York media, so it will help the league prosper."

"I think Pat would've had a significant impact on any of the seven teams," said Ewing's agent, David Falk. "But in New York, I think he's going to have a particularly high impact. And also with the league being centered in New York, he's going to have an entertainment impact on the entire league."

Dave DeBusschere, director of basketball operations for the Knicks, said he would rather take the pressure of a game than go through another lottery.

"I was thinking I'd be happy with fourth," he said. "But once we got to third, I said, 'Oh my God, we've got a chance.'"

"I'd rather take a last-second shot any day. You have control over that; this you don't. I never want to go through this again."

In his Georgetown career, Ewing averaged 15.3 points, 9.2 rebounds, was the leading shot-blocker in school history and was named All-America three times. Those statistics aren't mind-boggling, but his selection as Big East Conference Defensive Player of the Year in all four of his college seasons begins to tell the story of why the Knicks will take him No. 1.

"Patrick doesn't just beat you, he tears you up," said St. John's Coach Lou Carnesecca.

But perhaps Ewing's the most telling statistic was the success of his team during his four-year career. The Hoyas reached the NCAA finals three times and won the title in 1984.

Winning the rights to Ewing represents a remarkable turnaround in luck for the Knicks, said DeBusschere.

"We've had our share of bad breaks the past year and hopefully this is the start of a new regime," he said. "The bad breaks should be behind us. This was one of the most frustrating years of my life."

The Knicks won only 24 games after a terrible run of injuries to key players. Forward Bernard King, the NBA scoring champion, played only 55 games and centers Bill Cartwright and Marvin Webster missed the entire season.

Carl Martin, assistant director of media relations for the Knicks, said more than 1,000 calls were made to the Madison Square Garden ticket office in less than two hours.

The Pacers, second in Sunday's lottery, also got the second choice two years ago in a coin flip with Houston. The Rockets got center Ralph Sampson, who became the Rookie of the Year, while the Pacers had to settle for Steve Stipanovich.

In the next two seasons, the Pacers have had the worst record in the Eastern Conference and tied with Golden State for the worst mark in the NBA, 22-60, in 1984-85.

"I'm sure we'll take Wayman Tisdale (of Oklahoma) or Benoit Benjamin (of Creighton) with the second pick," Indiana Coach George Irvine said. "We were fortunate to finish second. We're going to get a valuable asset for our team. We have a lot of homework to do."

Reardon Closes Out Victory For Expos

By The Associated Press

Buck Rodgers decided to go to his bullpen. Jeff Reardon was getting mighty bored out there.

David Palmer of Montreal had just pitched eight shutout innings of five-hit ball against Atlanta. "Palmer was pitching very well," Rodgers, the Expos' manager, conceded. "Reardon just needed the work. I wanted to keep him sharp."

So Reardon pitched the ninth, giving up one hit and no runs in Montreal's 4-0 victory.

It was the fourth shutout in a row fashioned by Montreal pitching.

It also was the fourth shutout in a row absorbed by Atlanta batting.

"A lot of things like this happen," Atlanta Manager Eddie Haas said. "We ran into a hot ballclub with hot pitching. It's a game of streaks and we hit a bad one."

Elsewhere Sunday in the National League, New York ran its winning streak to six in a row by defeating Philadelphia 3-2. San Diego edged Chicago 4-3. San Francisco beat St. Louis 5-4 in 10 innings. Houston buried Cincinnati 10-5 and Los Angeles shut out Pittsburgh 2-0.

The performance by Palmer and Reardon stretched the Montreal pitchers' shutout-inning streak to 39. They'll have to fire blanks at Houston tonight and Tuesday night to break the major-league record of 56 in a row by the 1903 Pittsburgh Pirates.

"This is the best run I've ever seen," Rodgers said. "I've never seen a club come up with such good, consistent pitching over a stretch of time like this." It began when Joe Hesketh and Reardon teamed on a four-hit shutout of Houston last Wednesday night, then Bryn Smith pitched a six-hitter and Bill Gullickson a five-hitter against Atlanta.

The Braves, whose shutout streak began in New York last Wednesday night when Ed Lynch beat them 4-0, will try to end the streak against him tonight in Atlanta. Their 36 consecutive goose-eggs is 12 shy of the big-league record shared by the 1908 Philadelphia Athletics and the 1968 Chicago Cubs.

Montreal got a first-inning run off Craig McMurtry on Vance Law's sacrifice fly. The Expos made it 3-0 in the second as Tim Wallach singled, Herm Winningham walked, Sal Butera hit an RBI-single and, after Butera was picked off, Raines tripled. Dan Driessen homered off Jeff Dedmon in the fourth.

The closest the Braves got to a run was in the seventh inning when, with Gerald Perry on third, Rafael Ramirez on second and one out, Chris Chambliss hit a fly ball to Winningham in center field. Bobby Wine, the Braves' third-base coach, held Perry after the catch. Perry might have scored, since Winningham's throw home was off line.

"I didn't think one run would've helped us at the time," Wine said.

Mets 3, Phillies 2

Danny Heep, who was replaced as the Mets' regular right fielder early in 1983 by a rookie named Darryl Strawberry, returned to the starting lineup as Strawberry took his place on the disabled list with a torn-up right thumb.

"I don't want to take advantage of another player's misfortune," Heep said, "but I hit .300 when I played here regularly before. I've got a lot of belief in what I can do."

Heep also took advantage of Juan Samuel's misfortune. He was on first base with a sixth-inning single when the Philadelphia second baseman dropped Rafael Santana's pop fly in short right field. Heep sprinted home with what turned out to be the decisive run.

"The fundamentals we needed today we didn't get," Phillies Manager John Felske said. "When things

Lendl Crushes McEnroe

NEW YORK (AP) — Ivan Lendl, the defending French Open champion, has served notice that to win the men's singles at the Grand Slam clay court tournament this year, the competition will have to get by him.

"Certainly he's more consistent on clay at this point and you'd have to give him the nod on it," John McEnroe said after he fell to Lendl 6-3, 6-3, Sunday in the title match of the Shearson Lehman Brothers Tournament of Champions.

Lendl's victory was done with authority, the bludgeoning stamp of power.

"It wasn't a case of my playing that badly," McEnroe was quick to admit after the drubbing he took from Lendl. "He played a good match."

The victory gave Lendl his second T of C crown at the famed West Side Tennis Club in Forest Hills. He also won the title in 1982, defeating Eddie Dibbs in the final. And it was his first Nabisco Grand Prix victory over McEnroe since the French Open last year when he came from two sets down to outlast McEnroe.

"Last year I lost here badly and won the French Open," Lendl said, remembering his loss to McEnroe on the clay courts here. "I hope that doesn't happen again."

It was Lendl's 10th career victory over McEnroe, compared to 12 losses, and his first since the French Open last June.

"McEnroe was putting distance between himself and everyone else last year," said Lendl, who pocketed $80,000 for Sunday's victory. "I said then that he wasn't coming back to my level and I had to work harder to get to his level."

"It's (the improvement) come early for me. I didn't expect the improvement for another six to nine months."

With Lendl's power game working almost to perfection, the big Czechoslovakian right-hander had few problems with McEnroe.

"I started off on the wrong foot," said McEnroe, who found himself down two service breaks before he held in the fifth game of the opening set. "I tried to put pressure on right off the bat. Then my service got broken in the very first game."

Lendl ran out to a 4-0 advantage as he easily captured the opening set, trading service breaks with McEnroe in the eighth and ninth games.

McEnroe, who won this unique champions-only event in 1983 and 1984, and who pocketed $40,000 for his runner-up finish, dropped his serve at 15 in the fourth game of the second set. And when Lendl held his own serve at 30, he had a 4-1 lead.

"I was happy I was able to put it together today," Lendl said. "I was able to put a lot of pressure on him with my first serve. And I was able to read him a lot better than normally."

Kansas City Rallies Past Yankees, 6-5

By The Associated Press
It's been a tough May for the Kansas City Royals, and an even tougher two years for them against the New York Yankees.

Sunday, they managed to get over the hump in both cases with a 6-5 victory over their longtime "jinx" team. "You don't want to make too big a deal out of it, but there's a negative psychological outlook that can be created when one team goes on a long winning streak against you...it can work on your mind." Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said after the Royals broke a 10-game losing streak against the Yankees and won for only the second time in nine games this month.

The Royals finally broke the Yankee spell, which dated back to Aug. 18, 1983, on Jim Sundberg's ninth-inning single with the bases loaded.

"As professional as major league baseball players are, they are psychologically susceptible to things like this," Sundberg said of the Yankees' streak against the Royals. "There are just some teams that seem to have an advantage over other teams and it can work on your mind."

In other American League games, it was Toronto 9, Seattle 5; Oakland 5, Boston 3; Minnesota 7, Baltimore 3; Milwaukee 7, California 4; Cleveland 6, Texas 0; and Chicago 4, Detroit 0.

Sundberg's game-winning single snapped a 5-5 tie and came off Yankee relief ace Dave Righetti, who failed to hold a 5-4 lead when he came on in the seventh.

Sundberg's hit, which bounced over the right-field fence at Royals Stadium, was called a two-run, ground-rule double by the official scorer, good for a 7-5 victory. But in New York, Bob Fishel, executive vice president of the AL, citing official baseball rules, said it was only single, thus allowing only one run to score.

"It wasn't our day," said Yankee Manager Billy Martin. "But we'll also have our days in the future."

Blue Jays 9, Mariners 5

Rance Mulliniks drove in two runs and Damaso Garcia had three hits to pace Toronto over Seattle for a three-game sweep of their weekend series.

Mulliniks singled in a run in the second inning and doubled home a run in the sixth. After Dave Henderson's fourth homer of the season gave Seattle a 1-0 lead in the second inning, Toronto came back in the bottom of the inning with four runs off Jim Beattie, 1-4.

Winner Dave Stieb, 3-3, survived a pair of two-run homers in the sixth — by Gorman Thomas, his eighth, and Jim Presley, his ninth.

"Beattie wasn't sharp today," said Mulliniks. "He's had arm problems and I've seen him a lot sharper. On my single, he fell behind 3-and-1 and had to come into me. On the double, I was trying to pull the ball and advance Damo (Damaso Garcia) to third. I hit the ball hard and it went right down the line."

A's 5, Red Sox 3

Oakland scored two runs in the eighth inning and Don Sutton withstood three Boston home runs, two by Tony Armas, to earn his 283rd major-league victory.

Sutton, 3-3, withstood Armas' 199th and 200th career homers and a solo shot by Rich Gedman in collecting his first road triumph of the season with relief help from Jay Howell, who notched his ninth save.

The A's eighth-inning rally, featuring an RBI double by pinch-hitter Dusty Baker, wiped out a 3-2 Boston lead. Roger Clemens, 3-4, who gave up 11 hits while striking out nine in seven innings, was the loser.

With the late rally, the 40-year-old Sutton moved into a tie with Jim Kaat for 21st place among baseball's all-time top winners.

Twins 7, Orioles 3

Randy Bush rapped a grand-slam home run and two doubles and Frank Viola hurled a four-hitter to lead Minnesota over Baltimore.

Bush's second career grand slam came in the first inning off Ken Dixon, 3-1, who entered the game with an earned run average of 1.52 that led the American League, and left in the third with a 2.53 ERA.

Viola, 6-2 after winning his fifth in a row, had a shutout until two outs in the ninth, when Fred Lynn hit a three-run homer. Viola struck out six and walked three.

The Orioles, who had won 22 of 28 previous home games against the Twins, lost for only the fourth time in 16 games.

Brewers 7, Angels 4

Cecil Cooper's first home run of the season, a three-run shot in the fifth inning, sparked Milwaukee over California.

California right-hander Kirk McCaskill was coasting along with a one-hitter and a 3-0 lead until the Brewers pushed across five runs in the fifth inning.

Parish, McHale Pace Celtics

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics got the inside track in their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference final with Philadelphia by getting the ball inside, and that left the 76ers with just an outside shot at victory.

Philadelphia had no duo to deal with the offensive power of twin towers Robert Parish and Kevin McHale. On defense, Boston sagged on the big men and invited the 76ers to connect from the perimeter.

The result was a 108-93 victory for the Celtics in Sunday's opener of the best-of-seven series that resumes here Tuesday night.

"One of the things that we've always tried to do is get the ball down low," said McHale.

"The Celtics played aggressively outside, but that didn't hurt us as much as the inside game," said Philadelphia forward Julius Erving.

For much of the game, the 76ers used 6-foot-10 Moses Malone, 6-9 Bobby Jones and 6-6 Charles Barkley to guard the 7-foot Parish and the 6-10 McHale.

In the first half, when he was guarded primarily by Barkley and Jones, McHale scored 22 of his career playoff high 28 points. In the second half, when he was guarded primarily by Barkley, Parish had 16 of his 26.

"We made the halftime adjustment only to get our own game going," said Barkley, who was plagued by foul trouble. "I doubt you'll see that again in the series."

Boston's frontcourt, which got 23 points from Larry Bird, finished with 87 points while holding the 76ers' centers and forwards to 44 points.

The inside strategy had its drawbacks as 76er guard Maurice Cheeks had many open shots in the first half, when he hit six of eight field-goal attempts and scored 19 of his team-high 27 points. Malone, who averaged 26.5 points per game against Boston during the regular season, was held to seven field goals and 19 points.

The 76ers, the NBA's 1983 champions, had been off for six days. The Celtics, the defending champions, didn't wrap up their conference semifinal with Detroit until Friday night.

Despite the busy schedule, Boston was strong down the stretch.

The benefit of rest "is pretty overrated," said Celtics' guard Danny Ainge. "I'd rather play every other day of the year. The longer you wait, the longer you have to think about it. Just go out and play."

"The only way it hurt us was on instinct plays," said 76er guard Clint Richardson. "They were quicker on the loose balls and things like that."

Cheeks got the last six points of the first half to draw the 76ers to within 57-52 at intermission, and Philadelphia took its first lead since midway through the opening quarter on a jumper by Malone that made the score 77-76 with 11:14 left in the game.

McHale came back with two free throws to give Boston the lead for good. With the score 88-85, Boston outscored Philadelphia 20-8 in the last 6:21. Bird and Parish had eight points each in that decisive stretch.

Parish, who had 13 rebounds, four blocked shots and eight turnovers "has been very aggressive," said Boston guard Dennis Johnson. "It's just a matter of getting him the ball where he wants it."

"Once Robert gets a few, he'll run up and down the court looking for more," he added. "No center can keep up with him."

"We did a good job of moving the ball around," said McHale. "We did a good job of moving ourselves on offense and defense and that's the key. You've got to stay active."

"The Celtics were very patient on offense," said Jones. "We didn't have any patience on offense... When they got a rebound or loose ball, they got it up the court real fast and created a lot of opportunities."

Until Sunday, Philadelphia had breezed through the playoffs, winning series against Washington 3-1 and Milwaukee 4-0. Boston had struggled in beating Cleveland 3-1 and Detroit 4-2.

But that had little influence when the Atlantic Division rivals clashed in the playoffs for the first time in three years.

"I've been around this league a long time and I've seen nothing to compare to the rivalry between these two teams," said Boston Coach K.C. Jones. "When these two teams meet, sparks fly."

And he knows that on Tuesday, recent history again may not be an indicator of the outcome.

"Today's game is history," he said. "You can revel in it right now but as soon as Monday comes, you can start worrying."

go bad, they go bad. We're helping them go bad, though."

Padres 5, Cubs 3

In the second reunion of last year's NL division champs, San Diego won Sunday's rubber game of a three-game set when Chicago first baseman Keith Moreland's two-run throwing error triggered a three-run sixth inning.

The three games attracted 144,259 fans, a San Diego record.

In the sixth, Tony Gwynn singled, Steve Garvey doubled and both runners scored when Moreland threw Graig Nettles' grounder wildly past pitcher Dick Ruthven at first base. A third run scored later on Kennedy's double-play grounder, the cushion needed to survive Davey Lopes' three-run homer for the Cubs off Dave Dravecky in the eighth.

Giants 5, Cardinals 4

Jim Gott of San Francisco became the first pitcher in two years to hit two home runs in one game — but he wasn't around when David Green's 10th-inning single gave the Giants their victory over the Cardinals.

The game-winning hit off Neil Allen made Scott Garrelts a winner. Gott, whose bases-empty homers went over the left-center field fence in the third inning and the right-center field fence in the fifth, received a standing ovation when he was relieved by Mark Davis in the eighth. Davis allowed Ozzie Smith's game-tying homer in the ninth.

Gott, who spent his first three big-league seasons with Toronto, had never batted in the majors before joining the Giants this year. "Was he a designated hitter in the American League?" St. Louis catcher Darrell Porter mused.

Indy Pole Gives Carter Career Boost, Not Edge

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — What does it mean to Pancho Carter to win the pole position for the Indianapolis 500? For his chances in the race, little. As a boost for his career, a lot.

Carter, who began racing midget cars in the 1960s, reached the pinnacle of his 12-year Indy-car career when he won the pole position for the May 26 race at a record 212.583 mph. But in an event that takes three hours to run and in which no lead is ever really safe, the starting position has little practical importance.

In fact, only 12 times in the 68 runnings of the 500 has the pole starter won the race.

So, while he remains the central figure in the sport's richest and most important event, what matters now to the 34-year-old Carter are the two weeks leading up to the race.

"You hope that you have some kind of rewards," Carter said of the biggest break in a career that has been overshadowed by two generations of big-name drivers.

"I don't know if it's perseverance or what. I've just always tried to do the best I can and it worked out that the best I did (in qualifications) was the best anybody could do."

Carter has won only once in 115 Indy-car starts, with an Indy 500 best of third in 1982. Winning the pole for this year's race will give him more publicity in the next two weeks than he has had his entire career.

In addition to instant credibility as a driver, he'll get a lot of money — $77,500 so far, with a possibility for another $5,000 if no one tops his speed in next weekend's final rounds of qualifiers. And his potential earnings through endorsements are even greater.

"That's all part of it," said Carter. "I've done something now everybody can talk about. It's something we can be proud of. I don't think it's sunk in completely. I said this year I'd be low key and not talk to anybody (in the media). It's going to be tough now."

Carter can't hide the satisfaction of outrunning such former Indy winners as Mario Andretti, Tom Sneva, Rick Mears, Al Unser, Johnny Rutherford and A.J. Foyt.

"It's always satisfying to beat these guys — not just for the pole, but anytime. There were a lot of guys who had the potential to win the pole. I knew all along I had a shot at it, but I didn't know if we could do it," said Carter, a second-generation driver whose father, Duane Carter Sr., competed in 10 Indy races from 1948-63.

Carter, given the nickname

Pancho by his father, claims he was born while his parents were on the way to Milwaukee for a race. He said he's either watched or driven in every Indianapolis 500 since he was born.

"I don't know if you ever know what you want to do when you're a kid," he said, but racing soon became the major goal in his life.

His mother previously was married to driver Johnnie Parsons, the 1950 Indy winner, and his half-brother is Johnny Parsons, a veteran of nine Indy 500s and still an active driver.

Carter started racing midget cars in 1967 and won the U.S. Auto Club midget car championship in 1972. He moved into sprint cars the next year and made his first Indy-car start in the 1974 Indianapolis 500, finishing seventh to win rookie of the year honors.

His next two 500s resulted in finishes of fourth and fifth. In 1977, driving for Dan Gurney, he started eighth but wound up 15th.

American Engine Returns To Indy Pole

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — The stock-block Buick V6 engine led the way with record-setting performances in qualifying and company officials are primed to take on the English-made Cosworth again in the prestigious Indianapolis 500 on May 26.

"We're the new kid on the block and we're going to have to earn our stripes," Ron Kociba of the Detroit automaker's special products engineering division said at a news conference Sunday.

For the first time since 1976, an American-made engine will be on the pole as the quickest qualifier. Pancho Carter captured the right to lead the 33-car field past the starting line by completing his 10-mile trip around the historic 2.5-mile oval at an average speed of 212.583 mph.

Starting next to him as the second-fastest qualifier on opening day will be Scott Brayton. He was the first qualifier on Saturday, topping the existing one-lap and four-lap qualifying records set last May by Tom Sneva, the 1983 Indy winner.

Brayton's fastest lap — his third — was 214.199, and it withstood the challenge of drivers like 1969 Indy champion Mario Andretti, Bobby Rahal, Roberto Guerrero of Colombia and Don Whittington, all of whom had gone quicker in practice this month.

"We silenced those disbelievers in qualifying," Kociba said. "We think it (the engine) has the capability to finish the race. We finished at Long Beach (the first race this year) and we'll run less rpm (revs per minute) here."

Most of the field, which will be completed when time trials conclude next weekend, will be using the turbocharged Cosworth engine that has dominated the Indy-car series for nearly a decade. And for them, the jury is still out on the durability of the non-turbocharged, stock-block developed by Buick.

"I wish all we had was Buicks to contend with in the race," said Andretti, whose Lola-Cosworth took the inside spot on the fourth row at 211.576 after running faster than 214 last week.

Roger Penske, whose team put Danny Sullivan, three-time Indy winner Al Unser (210.523) and defending champion Rick Mears (209.796) into the race in the top 10 positions — all in March-Cosworths — added, "I think now, with two teams, they (the Buicks) might surprise you. But, if I had a choice today, I'd still run a Cosworth."

"Its potential is enormous," said Wiley McCoy of McLaren Engines, which aided in the development of the new engine. "It's been proven in IMSA (the International Motor Sports Association)."

Jim Wright, Brayton's chief mechanic, agreed that current U.S. Auto Club restrictions on engine manifold pressure give the Buick-powered machines an advantage here.

"At Michigan and Pocono at this time we will not be competitive," Wright said, adding that he hoped Championship Auto Racing Teams, which sanctions the rest of the Indy-car series, would modify its rules to make the engine more competitive on all tracks. USAC allows non-turbocharged stock-block engines an extra 10 inches of manifold pressure, while CART treats all engines equally.

Most of the field was determined Saturday when 27 drivers made it into the race, including nine who surpassed Sneva's four-lap qualifying mark of 210.029.

Steve Chassey earned $15,000 in joining the field Sunday at 204.224 in a March powered by a stock-block Chevrolet V8, the only other non-Cosworth power plant in the field. The only other Sunday qualifier was Chet Filipp, driving a Cosworth-powered Lola, at 203.661.

Both Chassey and Filipp had waved off qualifying attempts on Saturday after deciding they were not going fast enough.

"That leaves four more spots to be filled next Saturday and Sunday, the last two days of trials. Once the field is full, the bumping process will start, with the slowest cars being eliminated by anyone turning in a faster effort. The 33 fastest cars start the race."

The field average for 29 cars is 207.872. Last year's 33-car starting field averaged an Indianapolis-record 203.686. The 24-car starting field last September in the Detroit News Grand Prix at Michigan International Speedway set the all-time racing record of 204.669.

"I think what we showed was that the V6 Buick could perform," said Brayton. "On race day, I think that we'll do even better than our qualifying run. In traffic, I think we'll have an advantage because drafting definitely aids our engine."

Others bettering Sneva's four-lap mark were two-time Formula One world champion Emerson Fittipaldi of Brazil, 211.322; Whittington, a former world endurance champion, 210.991; and Australian Geoff Brabham, 210.074. Each drove March-Cosworths.

First-weekend qualifiers also included two other former Indy winners.

Four-time champion A.J. Foyt, who earned his 28th consecutive start here, put a March-Cosworth on the outside of the seventh row at 205.782, while three-time winner Johnny Rutherford averaged 204.495 to put his March-Cosworth on the inside of the ninth row.

Interception Return Lifts Denver, 42-28

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — The Denver Gold have lived and died with their famed "run 'n shoot" offense, but Coach Darrell "Mouse" Davis says the defense saved them this time.

Linebacker Mike McKibben returned a fourth-quarter interception 45 yards for a touchdown to break a 28-28 tie and give the Gold a 42-28 United States Football League victory over the Arizona Outlaws here Sunday night.

"The defense made the big plays and that was the key," Davis said. "I was pleased with the way the kids hung in there. This was an amazing game."

McKibben's score with 8:40 left in the game came just 4:18 after Arizona linebacker Vic Koenig's club-record 77-yard interception return tied the score at 28-28.

Bill Johnson, who finished with 148 yards on 20 carries, closed out Denver's scoring with a 1-yard run with 4:50 remaining as the Gold improved its record to 8-4.

Arizona lost its sixth straight game and fell to 4-8 before a crowd of only 5,731 at 70,021-seat Sun Devil Stadium — the lowest home attendance in the franchise's three-year history although 13,890 tickets were sold.

The Outlaws committed six turnovers and were penalized 10 times for 91 yards "and there's no excuse for that," said Coach Frank Kush.

Eastwood Wins Playoff For Byron Nelson Title

IRVING, Texas (AP) — It was a relaxed, easy-going, almost cheerful Payne Stewart who discussed the double bogey-double bogey collapse that cost him the title in the Byron Nelson Classic.

"Hey," he said, "I just made $54,000. I might have a drink tonight."

He paused just a moment, and the smile faded.

"But it's not winning," he said Sunday.

That attitude, he admitted, was not easy to come by.

"I had to be by myself for a while. And I had the time. I walked in from the 16th green" after suffering a playoff loss to Bob Eastwood.

"Walked in from 16. Walked in the weeds. I just needed to be alone for a few minutes."

Then his face brightened again.

"If that was the last golf tournament I was ever going to play, I'd really be disappointed. But it's not."

"I may just have to win Colonial (this week in Fort Worth). I'm sure going to try," he said.

Stewart, who had rushed past the leading Mac O'Grady with a string of three consecutive birdies beginning on the second hole, appeared to have the Nelson title and the $90,000 winner's check in his grasp when he stood on the 18th tee at the Las Colinas Country Club course.

At that moment, he had a three-shot lead with one hole to play.

In front of him, however, gritty Bob Eastwood nursed home a 45-foot birdie putt which lifted him to within two shots of Stewart, and was congratulating himself on finishing second with a closing 67 and a 272 total, 12 under par.

"He had the tournament wrapped up," at that point, Eastwood said. "But it's a funny game. You never know what will happen."

Stewart drove into a fairway bunker, hit his second into a greenside bunker, skulled the sand shot across the green into another bunker and then failed to get it up and down. It was a fast double-bogey-6 that completed a round of 68, dropping him from 14 under to 12 under and into a tie with Eastwood after the regulation 72 holes.

That sent them to the par-4 16th for a sudden death playoff.

SELMA DIAMOND

'Night Court' Actress Dies

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress and comedy writer Selma Diamond, who portrayed the chain-smoking, gravel-voiced court matron Selma Hacker on NBC's "Night Court," died early today while being treated for lung cancer, a hospital spokesman said.

Miss Diamond, 64, died at 3:24 a.m., spokesman Ron Wise said. She was admitted to Cedars-Sinai Medical Center on May 1.

The "Night Court" situation comedy role was tailored for Miss Diamond, a heavy smoker who usually had a cigarette dangling from her mouth in the show, said Bill Kiley, director of publicity for NBC.

He said the comedian completed filming of the last script of the season about four to six weeks ago and discovered the severity of her lung cancer two weeks later.

The series is scheduled to enter its third season this fall.

Before she took on the role of Selma Hacker, Miss Diamond made appearances on many talk and game shows and acted in several comedy movies, including "All of Me" starring Steve Martin, "It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World," "My Favorite Year" and "Lovesick."

She began her entertainment career as a writer for the NBC radio program "The Big Show," then moved into writing for television. Among her writing credits are "The Milton Berle Show," "The Perry Como Show" and "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet."

Born in London, Ontario, Canada, Miss Diamond grew up in Brooklyn, N.Y.

FORECAST FOR TUESDAY, MAY 14, 1985

YOUR DAILY Horoscope
from the Carroll Righter Institute

GENERAL TENDENCIES: The morning is good for getting your ideas in order so you will be able to make them work for you in a well-rounded fashion. Later you can put into motion some of the actual details.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Make plans for far into the future early and then plan now to get out of difficulties that may be confusing you.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 to May 20) Fine friends can be helpful with new plans you have in the morning, but later don't rely on others for assistance.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21) Get early start on work ahead of you and accomplish a great deal in the morning, but later don't push anything.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to Jul. 21) A good morning to get that new interest started and then sit back and watch how it works out.

LEO (Jul. 22 to Aug. 21) You can get some business affair handled very easily and quickly in the morning, but later other affairs require more thought.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 22) Come to a fine understanding with an associate in the morning, but later don't make changes or trouble can start.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22) The morning begins very constructively, but later problematical affairs come up that require much attention.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21) Early make appointments of a social nature and then get busy on something creative and practical. Come to an understanding with your mate.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21) If promises have been made to kin, be sure to keep them this morning. Avoid extravagant entertainment later in the day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20) Early handle correspondence and communicate well with others so you get much done, efficiently. Clear up any misunderstandings at home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) Morning is best time to handle monetary affairs well, since later some odd situation may arise to cause you trouble.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) You get fine ideas how best to advance in your career in the morning, so carry through with them right away, and later relax.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be able to nicely blend the idealistic with the practical and get amazing results, so encourage this early. Give as comprehensive an education as you can since your progeny may have many a stumbling block to hurdle during the lifetime and will need much knowledge in order to do so intelligently.

Public Opposes Subsidies

NEW YORK (AP) — Seven in 10 Americans rarely visit art museums. Nearly six in 10 dislike abstract art. And half oppose government subsidies to artists, a Media General Associates poll says.

Only 33 percent of the 1,532 respondents in the nationwide telephone poll said they favored government subsidies to artists. Fifty percent opposed subsidies and 15 percent were unsure. The survey was taken shortly after the Reagan administration proposed cutting the budget of the National Endowment for the Arts.

Four in 10 said the use of public funds for artists should be a lower priority of government, three in 10 said it should remain the same and one in 10 said it should be a higher priority.

President Reagan has proposed slashing the 1986 spending authority of the endowment by 11.7 percent, from $163.7 million to $144.5 million. The endowment awarded about 5,000 grants totaling $19 million to artists and arts organizations last year.

Although half of the respondents in the Media General AP poll were opposed to direct subsidies to artists, six in 10 said they favored the purchase of art for use in public buildings.

FOCUS

Saving Our Past
This week is National Historic Preservation Week. Many cities will have special activities focused on ways that even average citizens can restore or recycle older buildings. Recently, the Fairmont Hotel, a landmark in San Antonio, Texas, was saved from the wrecking ball. At a cost of almost $1 million, the hotel was hoisted from the spot where it was built in 1906 and moved about one mile. It was the heaviest building ever to be moved on wheels over city streets.

GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR TRAINEES

If you're smart, you'll start your career in sales with a first class company that will help you move ahead fast!

Cleveland Cotton Products has built its success on finding individuals who want rapid professional and financial growth and who thrive on being successful!

If you are energetic, drive a late model car and are willing to develop yourself to achieving top income potential, you should talk to us about the opportunity that now exists.

You'll be trained to successfully represent CCP, the company that for over 60 years has led the nation in the development of industrial wiring materials and related products used by thousands of manufacturers, fleet operators, automotive shops and other commercial accounts across the country.

Following initial training, you will be relocated to your territory. There you will be given additional supervision to enhance your success.

We are prepared to hire a new trainee this week! If you're ready to get started now, arrange an immediate interview. Call:

Jim Fisher 355-2666 Monday, 1p.m. 9p.m. Tuesday, 9a.m. 9p.m. Wednesday, 9a.m. 2p.m. If unable to call, please send your resume to Mr. Chuck Peters.

Governor Says Dotson Guilty, But Frees Him

COUNTRY CLUB HILLS, Ill. (AP) — An exuberant Gary Dotson, freed from prison by a governor who still believes him guilty "beyond a reasonable doubt," says he will fight to clear his name of the rape that his alleged victim now says never occurred.

Gov. James R. Thompson commuted Dotson's 25-to-50-year prison term Sunday but refused to declare him innocent, saying, "After consideration of all the evidence, I believe that the verdict of the jury ... that Cathy Crowell Webb was raped was correct."

Mrs. Webb, a 23-year-old mother of two children living in Jaffrey, N.H., said she made up the story of the rape to cover up what she feared was a possible pregnancy after a sexual liaison when she was 16. Dotson, 28, has been free on bond since May 1 while appealing his 1979 conviction through the courts. He has served six years in prison and would have been eligible for parole in 1988.

Barefoot, dressed in a brown plaid shirt and blue jeans and wearing a button that read, "Free at Last," Dotson sat with a happy crowd of family and friends at his parents' home Sunday as Thompson explained his decision on television.

Thompson's options were to commute Dotson's sentence, grant him a pardon on grounds of innocence or return him to prison. He said he had decided to commute Dotson's sentence because of "the larger quality of mercy — of compassion for one's fellow man ..."

"It's going to be a happy Mother's Day. I'm just grateful he's home," said Barbara Dotson, 48, as she hugged her son.

"We're all going to sit around and get loaded," Dotson said.

He commented throughout Thompson's news conference.

"Let them say what they will," he muttered when Thompson said he had no doubt that Mrs. Webb was raped.

"I didn't have a chance," he said when Thompson said that Dotson was justifiably convicted by a jury.

"It was eight years ago," he said when Thompson said he thought there was overwhelming evidence against Dotson.

Mrs. Webb was "very pleased" that Dotson was freed, but disappointed he was not completely exonerated, said her attorney, John J. McLario, of Menomonee Falls, Wis.

"She told me that she did everything she could to prove her truthfulness," said McLario. Dotson was freed from prison shortly after Mrs. Webb first came forward in March and recanted. But he was returned to prison amid a storm of controversy after the original trial judge, Richard Samuels, said he didn't believe Mrs. Webb's new story.

Thompson said he was satisfied that Gary Dotson was proved guilty beyond a reasonable doubt..." at his trial, but Dotson said he was glad the nightmare of a possible return to prison was over.

"I'm happy because I know I'm not going back," he said. "The anxiety is starting to go away."

Dotson said his next goal is to clear his name.

"I still have a felony on my record. I have to clear it."

He already has filed a motion for a new trial and has appealed his conviction to an appellate court.

Even if Dotson were retried and found guilty, he could not be sentenced a second time under the terms of the commutation, said David Fields, a spokesman for Thompson.

Thompson said David Beirne, identified by Mrs. Webb as a teenage sex partner, had "no motive — eight years later — to lie" when he contradicted Mrs. Webb's contention that the two ever completed the sex act, making it impossible for her to become pregnant.

He also said the "alibi evidence (on Dotson's behalf), which has constantly shifted since 1977, did not overcome the evidence of guilt."

DOTSON FREED — With his mother, Barbara, Gary Dotson reacts with joy Sunday after Illinois Gov. James Thompson commuted his prison sentence. Thompson, declaring he still believes Dotson was guilty of the rape he and his alleged victim now say did not take place, said it would serve no good purpose for Dotson to return to prison. The badge on Dotson's shirt reads "Free At Last." (AP Laserphoto)

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J106 ♥KQJ72 ♦85 ♣KJ6

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♥	2 ♦
2 ♠	Pass	?	?

What do you bid now?

A. — Since partner could have a fair hand with no convenient bid, you must find the bid most likely to encourage him. That rules out two hearts, which is merely competitive. We suggest you bid three clubs. Partner should realize that you must have a good hand to raise his minor suit that has not been rebid to the three-level.

Q.2 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠J53 ♥8742 ♦Q9852 ♣3

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ♥	Pass	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?	?

What action do you take?

A. — You do not have much of a hand, but partner has bid to the three-level, all on his own, despite the fact that he is vulnerable. Your three trumps and singleton club might be all that he needs to make game. With that attractive rubber bonus dangling in front of our eyes, we would venture four spades.

Q.3 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠107 ♥6 ♦KQ9 ♣AQJ9842

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	1 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A. — In light of partner's vulnerable overcall, you must be close to game. A bid of two clubs would not be forcing, and you certainly would like to have partner bid again. However, because of the possible misfit, you are not worth a cue-bid of two hearts. As a compromise, jump to three clubs. This also isn't forcing, but it is highly encouraging. If partner does find another bid, you will know where to place the contract.

Q.4 — Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠107 ♥6 ♦KQ9 ♣AQJ9842

The bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 ♥	1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠
Pass	3 NT	Pass	?

What action do you take?

A. — When you jumped to three clubs, you hoped to elicit another bid from partner. Success! Partner has now told you that he thinks your side can make three no trump. Since that is what you wanted to hear, why cast any doubts on his veracity by looking for some other game contract?

Q.5 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠743 ♥A1062 ♦QJ2 ♣932

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 NT	Pass
2 ♥	Pass	?	?

What action do you take?

A. — We hate to pass partner's rebid when we have good four-card support for his second major suit. However, with only one ace, doubtful values in the minor suits and flat distribution, we have no other choice here.

Q.6 — Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q ♥AKQJ1052 ♦Q76 ♣K4

The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
Pass	Pass	?

What is your opening bid?

A. — According to all the textbooks, including our own, you have the values for a one heart opening bid. However, opposite a partner who has passed your defensive prospects are bleak and you can't even be sure that it is your hand. We would choose four hearts in an attempt to keep the enemy out of the auction.

Gasoline Prices Will Go Higher

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Traditional summertime trends coupled with impending federal regulations on leaded gasoline are boosting pump prices beyond the 9-cent-a-gallon increase of the past three months, an analyst says.

Petroleum industry observer Dan Lundberg, who publishes the Lundberg Letter, said part of the pump increase stems from an Environmental Protection Agency law that goes into effect July 1 requiring lead in gas to be reduced to 0.5 grams from the current 1.1 grams.

As a result, the industry expects a "troublesome period in manufacturing and distribution," Lundberg said Sunday in a telephone interview.

Companies are trying to build up stocks of unleaded gas, expecting that demand will increase after the EPA law goes into effect, he said. Motorists using leaded gas because of the higher octane rating may switch to unleaded after July because they will be getting "less bang for the buck," he said.

Retail prices also are expected to rise as they catch up with wholesale prices that have been increasing faster, he said. Higher crude oil spot prices also have been pushing retail prices up, Lundberg said.

"Growing chickens for Perdue has paid off doubly for us"

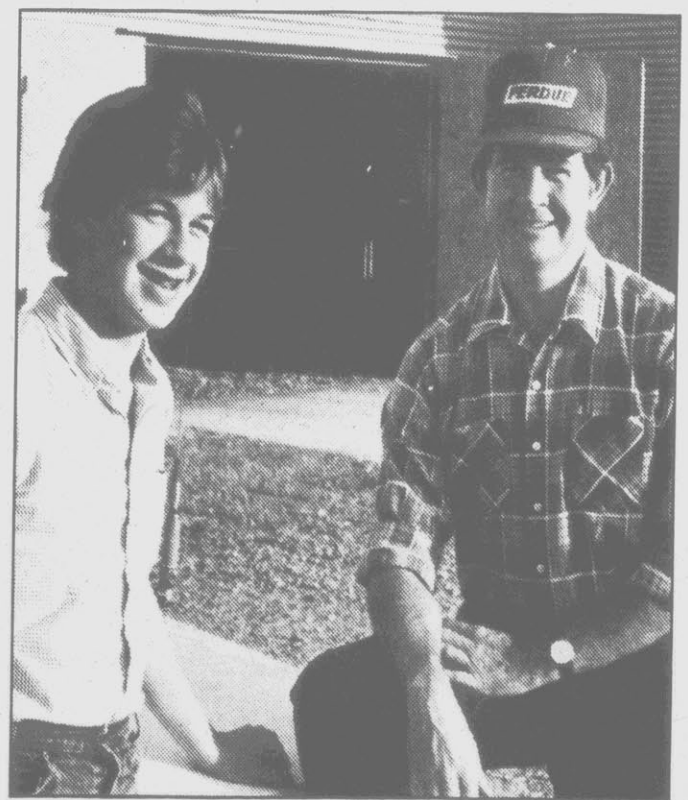

"We built two Perdue broiler houses about two years ago after deciding that growing tobacco was a losing venture. I feel that today a young farmer has to have one or two Perdue chicken houses to keep a good income coming in and keep his family on the farm.

"Our decision to grow for Perdue has been the best one we've made. Everything Perdue has told us about raising chickens was proven to be true and more so. In fact, growing chickens for Perdue has paid off doubly.

"We make a good living from the chickens themselves. And, the chicken litter that's left over after our flock is gone is spread on our fields to fertilize our corn and soybean crops. I've saved a fortune on nitrogen by using what comes naturally from my chickens."

In today's agricultural environment, building one or more Perdue chicken houses on your farm makes good sense. It's an investment that pays off in many ways including good income, cash flow and investment tax credits.
