Police Probe Rubble For Victims Of Fire

By LEE LINDER
Associated Press Writer

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Police using a huge crane today dug through the charred ruins of a radical group's house, seeking more bodies after a daylong siege by police and a fire that also set the neighborhood ablaze.

All or parts of six charred bodies, two of them the remains of children, were removed Tuesday from the ruins of the house formerly occupied by the group MOVE.

Meanwhile, the mayor defended a decision to drop a bomb on the house as appropriate although it "did not turn out as intended," while critics said police overreacted and should have been aware of the danger of fire.

And the city's police commissioner said officials now believe the MOVE members who had been barricaded in the house had a hand in starting the fire, and said members apparently had spread flammable material around their compound.

Representatives of the health department, fire department, medical examiner's office and mayor's office joined police in the search for bodies.

"I imagine it's going to be an all-day thing," said police Detective Jerry Whartenby.

Fire Commissioner William Richmond described the unidentified remains found Tuesday "as two male adults, one female adult, parts of another adult, one female child, and multiple parts of at least one other child."

Some reports had said as many as 12 adults and 10 children had been holed up in the house before the police tried to clear them out. Other reports about the squalid fortress said that MOVE members had dug a labyrinth of tunnels from the basement, and police were looking for signs of escape routes.

The fire that damaged or destroyed dozens of homes in the middle-class neighborhood broke out after police dropped a bomb on the roof of MOVE headquarters.

Mayor W. Wilson Goode, who denounced MOVE as a group "dedicated to the destruction of our way of life," said he accepted responsibility for the fire, though he said it was not known who started it. He promised the estimated 225 neighborhood residents who were displaced by the fire that the city would pay to rebuild their houses. Damage is estimated at at least $5 million.

Police Commissioner Gregore Sambor, interviewed today on the "CBS Morning News," said, "We did not create any fire."

"The fire did start inside the house," said Sambor, who ordered the bomb dropped. He said police had tested the bomb on wood-and-tar paper structures without starting any fires.

"To the best of our knowledge, the MOVE members had spread flammable material in their compound and in neighboring areas," he said, in explaining why the fire burned so hot and spread so quickly.

MOVE members had said they were "prepared to die," he said. MOVE follows a philosophy espoused by its founder, Vincent Leaphart, who later took the name John Africa. Its members, who use the surname Africa, eschewed con-

Lawyer Says Board Failure Was 'Technicality'

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

School board attorney Phillip R. Dixon says he wants the public to understand that recent concern over failure to secure Justice Department preclearance in a 1977 change in the method of city school board selections "in no way invalidates the legality of actions taken by the city school boards since that time."

"I wish to emphasize," he added, "that the only concern of the Justice Department is that any change in the election structure of a school board does not result in a negative impact on minority representation."

Dixon further notes that the 1977 election change was in fact submitted to the Justice Department in the summer of 1977. The U.S. Justice Department in October, 1977 responded to an August, 1977 letter from Louis Singleton, then serving as the school board's attorney.

The reply letter to Singleton, referring to the change in method of selection of the Greenville City Board of Education, states: "The Attorney General does not interpose any objection to the change in question. However, we feel a responsibility to point out that Section 5 of the Voting Right Acts expressly provides that the failure of the Attorney General to object does not bar any subsequent judicial action to enjoin the enforcement of such change." This letter was signed by Drew S. Days, III, Assistant Attorney General, Civil Rights Division.

Until the question of preclearance was raised in April by the Concerned Citizens for Justice, a minority group that wants more representation on local boards, there has been no action, nor questioning of the legal status of school board members and their actions as members. "I believe that those raising questions recently, not understanding the situation, may have panicked a little," Dixon said. Essentially, "the failure of the Greenville City Board of Education to obtain such preclearance was a mere technicality," he added.

Had there been any serious doubts on the part of the Justice Department about the legality of the 1977 Greenville city schools election change, or any possible negative impact on minority representation, Dixon said he feels sure the Justice Department would have immediately posed objections to the plan and directed the board to revise the plan to meet the mandates of the Voting Rights Act.

In a Texas court case which was the subject of a suit before the U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Texas and bears similarity to the Greenville situation, the ruling by the reviewing court was that "no past actions (on the part of the board) are proscribed," Dixon said.

Asked about the method of elections and procedures proposed for a merged Greenville-Pitt County School Board, Dixon said "the proposed merger act, including the method of electing school board members, has been studied by North Carolina legal officials. Once the proposal is approved, action will be taken to submit the procedures to the U.S. Justice Department for their determination of its validity before any voting action takes place."

Utilities Commission Told Of Savings Realized By Load Management Strategy

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Utilities Commission were told Tuesday night that load management operations for the month of April saved around $122,824, approved the write-off of some $100,856 in bad debts from the 1983-84 fiscal year and presented Margaret Wirth with a plaque for her service as a commission member.

Malcolm Green, superintendent of GUC's electric system, reported that of the $125,202 gross savings realized through load management operations during April, $78,474 resulted from operation of load management switches on water heaters, while $44,588 came from voltage adjustments and $2,140 came from supplemental generation at the water treatment plant.

But Green said a $2,378 minimum billing ratchet resulting from a peak demand set last summer resulted in the $122,824 net billing reduction.

Although commissioners approved the write-off of $100,856 in bad debts from the fiscal year which ended June 30, 1984, GUC Director Charles Horne said "we continue to monitor these accounts and if a customer moves back onto our system, we require that full payment be made before a new service application is accepted."

Officials noted that the bad debts figure represented 19 percent of total billings during the 1983-84 fiscal year and is $7,000 less than the write-off for the 1982-1983 fiscal year.

possible ... hearing all sides ... not trying to dictate..."

The city council last month appointed Annie L. Graham to replace Mrs. Wirth, who was named to the commission in March 1980.

Wadie Lewis, superintendent of GUC's water and sewer departments, reported that the new waste water treatment plant is now "totally operational" and said the city's old plant will be "closed down in 10 days to 2 weeks."

There was no public comment on a proposed amendment to sanitary sewer use regulations at a public hearing and commission members scheduled action on the amendment in June.

The new regulation would require owners of improved property within 150 feet of a city sewer installed after July 1, 1985, to connect to the public sewer within 90 days after receiving official notice to do so.

Owners of improved property within 150 feet of a city sewer installed before July 1, 1985 would be required to connect to the public sewer on or before July 1, 1987, and pay half the fees and charges applicable at the time application is made for sewer service.

The proposed amendment to the regulations also provides for a $50 per day penalty for violations.

In other business, the commission approved an agreement with Southern Railway to locate a transmission line from the Eastside Substation to Simpson along the railroad right-of-way; approved a pole attachment agreement with Red's TV & Cable Company of Farmville ($5 per pole per year), for extending cable television service along N.C. 33 and in the Simpson area; approved a refund of $20 to Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Braswell, who complained that their electric service was cut off after they paid their bill, and rejected a request for relief from a high water-sewer bill for use in construction of the transmission line from the Eastside substation to the Simpson substation to Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $118,239.

Commissioners also awarded a bid for the purchase of 39 concrete poles

Should Stores Sell Bottled 'Fresh Air'

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for running the letter from "All Choked Up," complaining about people who practically bathe in cologne and perfume. I have a close friend who really needs to read that letter (I clipped it), but I don't know how to get that message to her without hurting her feelings. She may have read it, but most people never see themselves in your letters.

I've been trying for a long time to think of a diplomatic way to tell her that her cologne is killing me! When we're in a restaurant, I try to sit on the other side of the table. When we talk, I try not to get too close, but when I'm riding in a car with her, I'm trapped. If I open the car window, she says, "The air conditioner is on." Then she rolls the window up!

I wish perfume counters sold bottles of "Fresh Air."
SUFFOCATED BY SCENTS

DEAR SUFFOCATED: What's wrong with the direct approach? No friend worth having would intentionally offend. It would be a kindness to tell her.

DEAR ANONYMOUS: For openers, you shouldn't have asked Joe if he had ever been to bed with Joyce. (It's none of your business.) And Joe shouldn't have told you. You are childish and unfair to refuse to socialize with Joyce, thus breaking up the foursome.

The solution would be to take a more realistic and mature attitude about something that happened before you were even in the picture, then bury the hatchet. But not in Joyce's back.

At Wits End

By Erma Bombeck

All of my life I've been a social wimp.

I laugh at jokes that aren't funny. I rave about yellow food. I compromise my own views.

If I had seen the emperor naked, I would have said, "Love that color on you. You're a Spring, aren't you?"

I'm a wimp because basically I am insecure and need to be loved.

Recently, I read where Christopher Welles, a prominent hair stylist, named Tina Turner as having the best hair style in America today. He described it as "innovative and fresh."

Croissants are fresh. Fat

cheerleaders are innovative.

Tina's hair is what happens to a 45-year-old woman who has just been told by her obstetrician she is about to become a mother.

It's what happens when you clean the toaster without unplugging it.

It's what happens to Shirley MacLaine's hair in "Terms of Endearment" after a ride in a convertible with Jack Nicholson.

It's what happens when you crawl out of bed in the morning and want to die.

There's a lot of things to admire about Tina Turner. Her legs, for example. They're going to go on dancing for a good 20 years after she's gone. She sings a good song, seems like a nice lady and has endured. But somehow I don't see the women of America worshipping at the shrine of space shuttle hair.

What is really amazing to me is the double standard our kids use. Recently my son came for a visit. Something had happened to my hair. I had slept funny on it and already used enough foam on it to land a crippled 747.

"What's wrong with your hair?" he asked.

"What's it doing?"

"It's sticking up all over your head. Jeez, Mom, you ought to do something with it. It looks strange."

"I look strange," I said. "You talk to me about my hair when you can watch Cyndi Lauper without adjusting the color on the TV set?"

"You could watch the Grammys and not try to crawl into the set with a brush and comb? And as for Tina Turner's hair..."

"What's wrong with Tina Turner's hair?" he said defensively.

"It looks like she's just been on a trip with Toto and Dorothy."

"I always thought you were too insecure and had to be loved to say things like that."

I shrugged. "So maybe she has a cowlick. I'll give her that."

Conference

The ideology of hunger transcended political and social differences last week in Greenville.

Phosphorite, a mineral resource found in chemical fertilizer, prompted scientists from 42 nations to meet in Greenville. The substance spurred them to set aside political differences, roll up their sleeves and join hands in the fight against world hunger.

The mineral has international significance because of its ability to increase food production. Since it is an abundant eastern North Carolina resource, it also has local significance. Phosphorite, the source of phosphates, is mined in nearby Aurora.

The East Carolina University conference, sponsored by the International Geological Correlation Program, was designed to develop and share information on the mineral. Speakers and participants included representatives of underdeveloped nations in Africa and Central America as well as the United States and Soviet Union.

The "summit" meeting was the eighth in a series aimed at helping other nations discover and develop their supplies of phosphates. This research is vital, according to conference co-director Stanley Riggs of ECU, because fertilizer will be needed to feed the world's growing population.

"It is a solid science," Riggs said of phosphate research. "It is also a science on which the future well-being of mankind, the whole human race, may depend."

Preserving the earth's environment is also a science on which the future of humanity is hinged. We hope both the research and the conference put emphasis on how to remove and utilize the valuable resource of phosphate without damage to the environment. The condition of the environment directly affects the ability of the earth's inhabitants to feed themselves, phosphates or no phosphates. For this reason, utilizing phosphorite resources must go hand in hand with ecology. Both causes are ones the world's nations should set political difference aside to champion.

Barbs

The exchange of barbs and criticism between President Reagan and Mikhail Gorbachev produces attention-getting stories in the news media but accomplishes nothing and only makes any real communication between their two countries more difficult.

Surely Mr. Reagan is not so unthinking as to believe his repeated pointing to threats of Soviet aggression will modify the Kremlin's policy on shooting-to-kill a foreign national who walks too closely to "no trespass" zones; nor statements of regret over the deliberate slaying of an American Army officer.

Gorbachev's frequent viewing-with-alarm a "re-surgency" of Nazism in the United States does not help him accomplish any kind of detente or anything else he says he would like to see. Both leaders play to their own captive audiences.

Someday there very well could be an occasion when meaningful communication between the rivals would be most helpful; and the people who are supposed to do the speaking for both sides may have forgotten the words, by then, and an opportunity fades away.

Somehow we can't see a whole lot of such opportunities coming our way.

Confrontation For Reconciliation

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Just over a week ago, President Reagan delivered what may have been the most eloquent speech of his life at the site of the Bergen-Belsen concentration camp in Germany.

Here are some of the more striking excerpts:

"For year after year, until that man (Hitler) and his evil were destroyed, Hell yawned forth its awful contents. People were brought here for no other purpose but to suffer and die."

"Here death ruled. But we have learned something, as well. Because of what happened, we found that that death cannot rule forever."

"We are here today to confirm that the horror cannot outlast hope — and that from the worst of all things, the best may come forward."

"Everywhere here are memories — pulling us, touching us, making us understand that they can never be erased. Such memories take us where God intended his children to go — toward learning, toward healing and above all, toward redemption."

Presidents are known and judged by their public utterances and it is a pity that this speech, overshadowed by other events on May 5, may not be remembered.

What will be remembered of that day, at least during the rest of Reagan's public life, is that he laid a wreath in a German army cemetery that contained the graves of soldiers who were members of Hitler's elite SS Waffen.

No more need be said about the reasons Reagan went to Bitburg. What may be worth examination is why the episode may haunt the president for the next three and a half years.

Even before the trip to Germany, Jack Germond, the canny political columnist, summed up the president's situation with words to the effect that he who lives by media symbols dies by media symbols.

That doesn't mean the Reagan presidency will or should be judged to any great extent on the basis of this incident. Reagan has made profound changes in the national government and its relationship to its citizens. He stemmed, perhaps ended, the trend toward federal activism that began more than half a century ago with Franklin D. Roosevelt. That will be the record on which the Reagan presidency will be judged by history.

But in rallying support for his substantive programs, Reagan has manipulated symbols to help his cause like the Wizard of Oz used flashing lights and puffs of smoke to terrify his visitors.

Who was it that produced Lennie Skutnik, the hero of Washington's Air Florida crash, to sit next to the first lady at a State of the Union speech? And who came back to the same occasion this year with the young Vietnamese woman who is attending West Point? Who, at the drop of a speaking opportunity, repeatedly quotes Democrats FDR and John Kennedy in an effort to wrap himself in the humanitarian heritage of the New Deal and the questing spirit of the New Frontier?

In all of this, he really has been a great communicator, managing with his words and public actions, by the places and settings he chose for his appearances to touch chords that the country liked.

But in Germany he communicated something he didn't intend. He was trying to project reconciliation and got confrontation.

Certainly Reagan is far from being the first president to engage in symbol-mongering. But until Bitburg, he did it better and profited more than most who have tried, and it may be a kind of wry justice that has him suffering for it now.

Columnist's Views Are Sought

People are constantly asking me if the Reagan administration ever comes to me for personal advice. Up until last week the answer was "no." But, lo and behold, the other day I received a letter which was in the form of a poll. It said the president wanted to know where I stood on the controversial issues of the day. I was urged to answer the list of unbiased questions which were enclosed.

Some of them weren't easy, such as, "In the 1970s funds were cut off for development of the MX missile, causing our strategic defenses to become dangerously obsolete while the Soviets escalated their weapons buildup. Do you support continued U.S. efforts to modernize our strategic defenses by funding this weapons system?" I was instructed to check off one of three boxes: "yes," "no" or "undecided."

I had no problem with that one. But the next one was a mind-bender. "Should the U.S. continue research and development of a space-based missile defense system to give the United States protection we do not now have against a Soviet nuclear attack?" I took a gamble and said "yes." The question that followed also required tremendous concentration. "Do you agree with the Democrats who say the Soviet/Cuban efforts to topple pro-West governments in Central America pose no direct threat to U.S. security?"

I tried to figure out what answer the president would want to hear, and on a hunch said "no."

By this time I was perspiring. Ideological tests always get me nervous.

"Should the United States continue providing support to people in Central America who are fighting for their independence from Soviet-backed Marxists?"

I put a big black X in the "yes" box so the president wouldn't miss it. Then came the question which made me think the president might be considering me for the job as his secretary of the Navy. "The Soviets have amassed the largest naval force in the world and have increased the number of submarines patrolling the U.S. coast. Should the U.S. Navy receive more funding to replace our aging sea force and build more Trident nuclear submarines?"

I called up a friend who works at the Pentagon for advice on how to answer the question. "Oh," he said. "You got one of those Republican fund-raising letters too."

"What do you mean fund-raising? It says the president wants to personally know where I stand on the issues of the day. He probably wants to make me the new U.S. ambassador to Germany."

"If you read the letter closely you'll see it was sent out by the Republican Party and you're supposed to enclose your check with the answers."

"Are you trying to tell me the president isn't interested in my opinion?"

"He probably doesn't even know you were sent the letter. And he may never know unless you send the Republican a whopping check."

"I was hoping he was considering me for his new budget director," I admitted, "and the questions were just to see if I was a team player. Why did they write to me?"

"The Republicans probably bought your name for 5 cents from a credit card company."

"It's not fair to make someone answer a bunch of tough questions on national defense and then ask for money for the party."

He said, "It was either P.T. Barnum or Richard Viguerie who said, 'There's a sucker born every minute.'"

"Just in case you're wrong and the president wants me to be national security adviser after Pat Buchanan pushes Robert McFarlane out the window, what should I answer to the question on our need to replace aging subs with Trident nuclear submarines?"

He said, "The answer is 'yes' but that's still a secret. So for heaven's sake don't tell anyone you spoke to me."

Strength For Today

Every time we test the air pressure of the spare tire we are impressed with the debilitating effect of idleness.

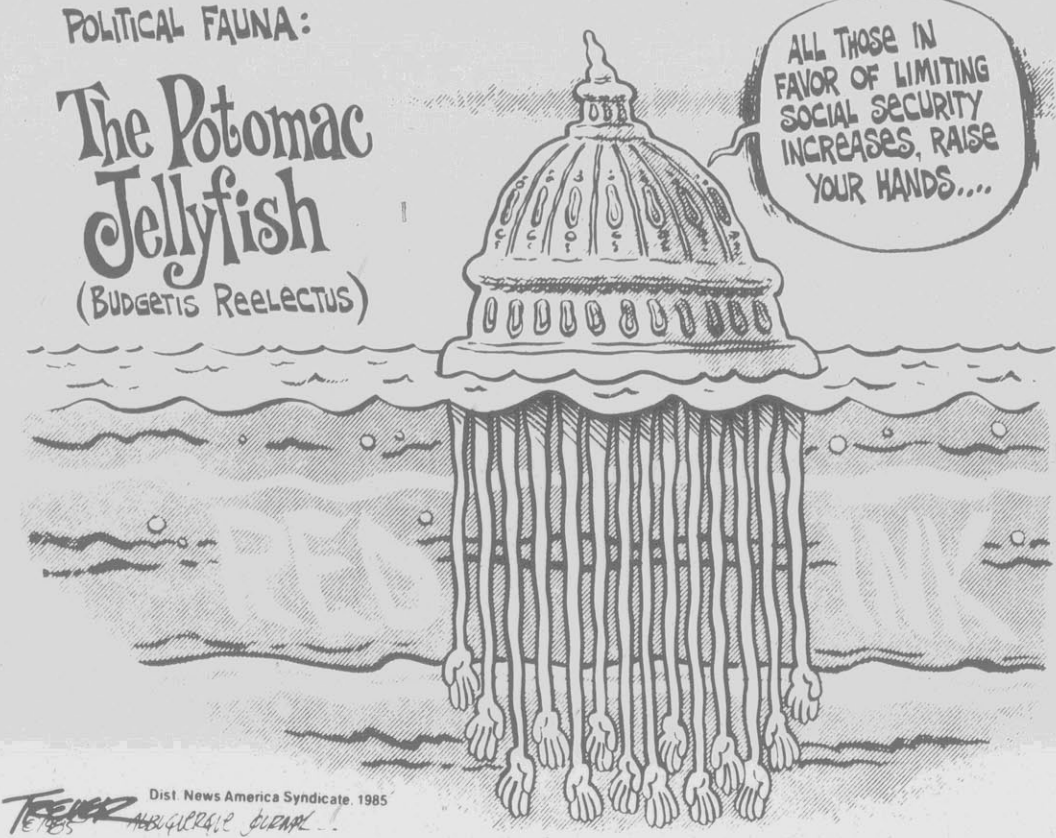

Four tires which are in constant use will maintain their air pressure for a long time, while the spare loses it very quickly. Take the spare out and submit it to the rough use of everyday driving, and it will maintain its pressure as well as the other tires. But put it again back on the rack, and again it becomes flabby.

Many people dream of the happiness which would be theirs if they could be relieved of all responsibility. What fun it would be if one did not have to work at all! Yet the number of tragedies among the people who have this "advantage" is greater than to scratch to make a living.

It's hard to keep happiness at high pressure if we ride through life as a spare. Don't long for the spare rack.

Chemical Weapons May Return

WASHINGTON — After 16 years of U.S. abstinence, a hesitant Congress is getting ready to move this country back into the chemical weapons business thanks to new evidence that the Kremlin has totally ignored the unilateral American freeze and is far ahead in this deadly field.

A high-powered presidential commission's report on the extent of Moscow's chemical war plans hit Congress recently, just as the Soviet Union is charged in a new book with using human guinea pigs to test deadly chemical weaponry. Coincidental timing of the two events may well persuade Congress to approve a new $1.3 billion chemical weapons program, the first since 1970.

The commission, headed by retired diplomat Walter Stoessel and including former Reagan Secretary of State Alexander Haig and former Carter national security adviser Zbigniew Brzezinski, issues a grim warning. Failure to modernize chemical weapons, it says, will confront the U.S. with either "quick defeat" or "early escalation to a nuclear exchange" as the only response to Soviet chemical-war tactics being perfected in Afghanistan.

The time for an American program is none too soon. The high place of chemical warfare in Soviet strategic planning is manifest in the brutal way new weapons are believed to be tested: against human beings, probably political prisoners under death sentence.

A book just off the presses, "Soviet Military Supremacy" by hard-line military experts David S. Sullivan and Quentin Crommelin Jr., makes the charge. Shortly after the invasion of Afghanistan, they write, "the Soviets conducted lethal chemical and biological tests against men and women tied to stakes in target areas at the gigantic Chikhany Chemical Test Range."

No Soviet specialist in this or past administrations that we asked dismissed the Sullivan-Crommelin contention as either implausible or untrue. What gives the charge special interest is Sullivan's former career as a top Soviet analyst for the Central Intelligence Agency (CIA), from which he resigned in 1978 after allegedly leaking a document to the late Sen. Henry M. Jackson. He is now national security aide to several conservative Republican senators; Crommelin is a former Senate aide.

One part of their book dealing with the dangers of Soviet chemical warfare was specifically verified for us by the intelligence community. They wrote that the Soviets have 14 chemical weapons production facilities "operating at full capacity"

(and eight biological warfare plants). The U.S. has none of either. "These horrifying weapons," says Sullivan and Crommelin, can be delivered globally by 150 special intercontinental ballistic missiles developed for that purpose.

Their book, a project of the Defense and Strategic Studies Program of the University of Southern California, could influence Congress on the chemical warfare issue. But likely to be more significant in moving the lawmakers is the Stoessel Commission report, which shows that the long freeze on U.S. chemical weaponry imposed by President Richard M. Nixon had no impact on the roaring Soviet program. The commission's stern warnings could prevent a recurrence of the last three years.

In both 1982 and 1983, it took a tie-breaking vote of Vice President George Bush to break a deadlock in the Republican Senate and end the long U.S. abstinence on chemical weaponry, but President Reagan's proposal to start catching up with the Russians fell in the Democratic House. In 1984, fearful that election-year politics would produce lopsided votes in both Houses against ending the freeze, the administration did not press the issue.

But 1985 looks different. Even before the Stoessel Commission report, the Senate Armed Services Committee approved the Reagan program by a record 15-to-3 vote. That suggests a much stronger Senate vote and at least a fighting chance to move the president's chemical weapons program through the House to replace useless stockpiles from World War II — and to develop new defenses against chemical war.

Whether the congressmen choose to ignore the human guinea pig charges, they cannot avoid clear evidence that Moscow has taken maximum advantage of the honorable American invitation to freeze chemical weapons. That has implications that reach beyond chemical warfare and go to the heart of the nuclear freeze movement and the belief that fear of the U.S. getting ahead is what drives Soviet weapons programs.

Public Forum

To the editor:

As a fervent admirer of our beautiful state's bountiful natural resources, I wish to call attention to the upcoming "Hikes in State Parks" to be held May 19 in North Carolina's state parks. This event, scheduled for 2 p.m. throughout the state, is in recognition of the value of our state parks, as well as to enlist support for much-needed preservation efforts to maintain provisions of the park system.

North Carolina's state parks have so much to offer, but are in constant danger of encroachment by developers as well as the loss of already-meager funding due to federal budget cuts.

Please show your support for our state parks this weekend. We unfortunately tend to take such assets for granted until we no longer have them.

Plans Noted For Project To Create New Center

By GILES HUDSON
Associated Press Writer
ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Rudy Perpich announced today the formation of a non-profit corporation to build the nation's first center to treat worldwide victims of torture, and said he will spearhead fundraising efforts.

A task force Perpich appointed in January recommended the center be established in Minnesota because "there is no such center in the United States nor is there likely to be one in the near future."

Amnesty International, the worldwide human rights organization, estimates that 96 countries practice some form of torture on political prisoners and other "prisoners of conscience."

"Our feeling is that the number of people needing this service is so enormous that other states will see the need," said Robert Stein, dean of the University of Minnesota Law School and a co-chairman of the task force.

The torture center should be located in the Minneapolis-St. Paul Twin Cities metropolitan area, the task force recommended in its report. Other torture centers are located in Toronto and Copenhagen, Denmark.

"I cannot help but feel that our immigrant roots, our fine medical and legal facilities, our strong religious communities, and our strong caring for others make this an ideal place...for such a center," Perpich said at a morning news conference.

"It's highly appropriate for Minnesota to join in the struggle (for human rights)."

Thomas McCarthy, chief of the liaison office of the United Nation's Human Rights Center, said the center could help meet many of the needs facing torture victims worldwide.

"An institution like yours is most welcome and can provide essential help," he said.

Task force members say they will seek between $10 million and $12 million for a private endowment to operate the facility, an independent, non-profit corporation affiliated with one or more medical and educational institutions.

Stein said the center will not seek funds from the U.S. government or the United Nations. "We think it's important to stay as non-political as possible," he said.

A task force committee said establishing the center in Minnesota will meet a need "that is not now being met anywhere else in the United States."

"Minnesota has a worldwide reputation for excellence in medical, legal and social services," the preliminary report said.

Dedication Planned For Maritime Museum

BEAUFORT — The dedication of the new North Carolina Maritime Museum building will be held at 10 a.m. Saturday with North Carolina Governor James Martin and N.C. Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham as the speakers.

The 18,000 square foot facility, located at 315 Front Street, Beaufort, was designed by Robert Winston Carr, Inc. Associated Architects, Durham. The style of the all-wood building reflects a blend of 19th century Beaufort architecture and that of the early U.S. Lifesaving Service buildings, forerunner of the U.S. Coast Guard.

Architectural features come directly from old photos of these North Carolina stations. The interior is like the hold of a large wooden ship. Laminated, exposed, heavy beam construction is used.

Wood used in construction is North Carolina yellow pine, treated with a fire retardant. The overall size of the museum has been increased from 4,000 square feet of the old building to 18,000 square feet in the new facility.

Funded by the N.C. Department of Agriculture, the North Carolina Maritime Museum, under the directorship of Charles R. McNeill, the facility is considered one of the best maritime museums in the country.

The dedication ceremony includes music by the U.S. Marine Corps 2nd Marine Aircraft Wing Band from Cherry Point. The official opening event, "Casting Off," is scheduled for noon. An open house will continue until 3 p.m.

Special opening exhibits include coastal scenes by Bob Dance in the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company auditorium, and a display of historic waterfowl decoys from the James F. Lewis, Jr. collection in the main exhibit hall.

Dotson Tells Webb Apology Is Accepted

By RAYNER PIKE
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Dotson, face-to-face with the woman whose rape accusations sent him to prison six years ago, told a national television audience today he had accepted her apology and they "shook hands."
"I more or less had to get some things out and meet the person," said Dotson during an interview on NBC's "Today" show with Cathleen Crowell Webb, who has recanted her assertions that Dotson raped her.
"She's a different person today than eight years ago, and I just had to meet her."
Both said they had talked Tuesday night in a meeting arranged by their lawyers prior to their television appearance.
"Well, it was a mutual meeting, mutual agreement," Mrs. Webb said. "I, of course, apologized for what I don't think I could apologize enough. It was a friendly meeting." Asked if he accepted her apology, Dotson replied, "Oh, yeah. We shook hands."

"She paid me back by coming forward," Dotson said, commenting on Mrs. Webb's earlier statement that she wished she had a million dollars to give him.
Mrs. Webb said despite Gov. James R. Thompson's refusal to clear Dotson's rape conviction, "I believe the people of America know Gary Dotson is innocent... He's not a rapist. He doesn't have the character of a rapist."
The meeting followed high-level jockeying by the NBC and ABC television networks for the first interview with the two side by side, with "Today" winning a battle over ABC's "Good Morning America." Interviews on both ABC and CBS followed.
Arrangements for the meeting were made after Thompson on Sunday commuted Dotson's 25- to 50-year sentence to the six years already served.

Mrs. Webb, now 23 and the mother of two children, has lobbied for Dotson's freedom in recent months — telling a judge, the governor and nationwide television audiences that she lied when she said he raped her in 1977.
She said she fabricated a rape story because she feared she was pregnant after having sex with a teen-age boy.
Dotson's lawyer, Warren Lupel, said Mrs. Webb and her husband, David, agreed to be available any time Dotson may need them in the future.
"I don't think my obligation to him is at an end," Mrs. Webb said.
Later, Dotson said he expected their friendship would continue.
"I'm sure I'll drop her a dime occasionally," he said, meaning he would telephone, "just to see how she and her husband are doing. I'm sure the whole thing's been pretty rough on them."

He said he and Mrs. Webb's husband got on well when they met late Tuesday. "He's a very nice person."
Mrs. Webb and Dotson came onto the NBC set with tight nervous smiles and sat stiffly beside each other on a sofa, awaiting their cue. With a few seconds to go, Mrs. Webb leaned over and whispered to Dotson, then sat back and relaxed.
Though Dotson is now a free man, he is seeking a new trial to clear his name. As a convicted felon he can neither vote nor hold public office, and a state law might prevent him from realizing profits from dozens of offers to sell his story.
On Tuesday, the government filed a motion to dismiss Dotson's petition for a new trial, saying he "has failed to raise a single issue of constitutional scope sufficient to justify granting a hearing in this case."
J. Scott Arthur, assistant Cook County state's attorney, also said the government needs more time to gather additional testimony to support its case.
Circuit Judge Richard Fitzgerald continued the case until June 4.

Unless he clears his name, Illinois law says Dotson would have to put any money he earns from movie, television or book rights into an escrow account and the alleged victim would have two years to sue to claim that money.
But Mark Rotert, an assistant Illinois attorney general, said Mrs. Webb "doesn't claim to be a crime victim, so I don't know about her standing. She'd be entitled to sue, but it (recantation) would be good grounds for a motion to dismiss."
Lupel said Dotson has received 41 offers from producers interested in turning Dotson's story into a television movie.

Jet Crash Kills Pilot

LOS ANGELES (AP) — One of only two prototypes of the F-20 Tigershark military jet crashed during a practice flight in Canada, killing the test pilot, according to a spokesman for Northrop Corp., which made the single-engine fighter.
The cause of the crash Tuesday in Goose Bay, Labrador, was unknown, said Tony Cantifo.
He said the pilot, 40-year-old David Barnes, of Palmdale, was practicing routines for the Paris Air Show when the plane went down. Barnes joined Northrop in 1982 as an engineer-test pilot, Cantifo said.
It was the second fatal crash of an F-20 in seven months. Pilot error was blamed for the first F-20 crash, which killed Northrop's chief test pilot, Darrell Cornell, during a demonstration near Seoul, South Korea, last October.
Northrop still has an F-20 undergoing flight tests at Edwards Air Force Base and another prototype in production at its Hawthorne aircraft plant.
The company, which spent five years and $800,000 developing the aircraft, has tried to sell the plane in the export market as an alternative to the Air Force's F-16 fighter. However, foreign governments have balked at buying a jet not used by the U.S. military.

Space Weapon Development Is Reported

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists developing an X-ray laser space weapon powered by a nuclear bomb have increased the brightness and power of the device by focusing its rays. The New York Times reported today.
The so-called "Super Excalibur" is being developed at the Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory in California, and was tested in an underground explosion in Nevada on March 23, the Times said. The test was generally positive, although it was ambiguous in certain areas, the Times said. The newspaper did not elaborate.

Shultz Plugs For East-West Cooperation

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz today stressed the importance of U.S.-Soviet cooperation, recalling the "victory for reason and peace" that resulted from the creation of a free and neutral Austria after World War II.

Shultz and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko attended ceremonies marking the 30th anniversary of postwar Austria a day after airing "a lot of differences" during a six-hour meeting.

In a speech prepared for delivery at ceremonies in Vienna, Shultz said the nine years of U.S.-Soviet negotiations over Austria may provide a lesson for current talks in Geneva on nuclear weapons and in Vienna on troop reductions.

Shultz said East and West, working in a spirit of cooperation and goodwill, "can find ways to work together for the benefit of all concerned." He called the agreement on Austria a victory for neither side, "but a victory for all — a victory for reason and peace."

Earlier today, Shultz met over breakfast with the foreign ministers of West Germany, France, Italy and Great Britain. Officials would not say what they discussed, but Shultz's session with Gromyko was a likely topic. Shultz had said he would discuss with the allies the possibility of another meeting with Gromyko in August.

The Shultz-Gromyko meeting Tuesday lasted twice as long as scheduled, and Shultz told reporters afterwards that: "We spent a heavy proportion of our time on the subject of arms control."

Soviet spokesman Vladimir Lomeiko said Gromyko told Shultz there could be no progress on arms control talks in Geneva unless there was "strict adherence" to an agreement between the two men that led to the start of the talks.

Shultz and Gromyko agreed to reopen arms control negotiations on the basis that both offensive weapons and space-based defenses would be discussed. The Soviets have accused the United States of refusing to bargain on the space weapons issue during the first round of talks, but U.S. officials have denied that.

The Soviets said in a statement that Gromyko had renewed Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Easter Sunday call for a moratorium on design, testing and deployment of space weapons. The Soviet news agency Tass said Gromyko expressed concern over "the nonconstructive stand" of U.S. negotiators in Geneva.

Spokesman for both sides refused to discuss the possibility of a summit meeting between President Reagan and Gorbachev.

However, they freely pointed out issues on which Shultz and Gromyko had clashed. There also was some evidence the two men wanted to improve relations.

Shultz said he and Gromyko discussed issues "where some progress can be made and we discussed many matters of mutual interest in various regions of the world." He did not identify the issues.

Lomeiko, speaking for Gromyko, recalled that the United States and Soviet Union cooperated during World War II to defeat Nazi Germany despite their different political systems. "Both sides emphasized their intention to do all possible to strengthen the structure of bilateral relations," he said.

But reports on the meeting generally were negative.

"There were a lot of differences between the two sides on a variety of issues," said a U.S. official designated to brief reporters. He spoke on condition he not be identified.

He said Shultz condemned the shooting of Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson, an American reconnaissance officer, by a Soviet sentry in East Germany in March. The official said Shultz demanded an apology, compensation to the slain major's family, and assurances the incident would not recur.

Lomeiko blamed "certain circles" — an apparent allusion to the United States — for stirring up unrest and raising tensions in the Middle East, Central America and Africa.

He stiffly dismissed as an "internal" matter that the Soviets discussed with nobody, the condition of Soviet dissident Andrei Sakharov, and other dissidents.

Shultz had promised to take up anti-Semitism and emigration restrictions with Gromyko and brought a list of human rights cases with him.

He and other U.S. officials gave no indication the Reagan administration's determination to proceed with research on anti-missile defenses would ease when the arms negotiations resume May 30 in Geneva.

Shultz urged Gromyko to consider proposals to reduce mistrust between the two countries made by

Feminists Say Pill Data Needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two leading feminists marked the 25th anniversary of the birth control pill by telling doctors that patients need better information about such drugs and researchers need to look into male contraception.

The pill was "the technological underpinning of the modern feminist movement," author Betty Friedan told physicians attending the annual convention of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

But she added, "I'm not sure (the researchers) were right in not giving men any role at all in birth control. Was it really right to say, 'You don't have to worry anymore'?"

"Men have a responsibility for contraception as well," activist-writer Gloria Steinem told the overflow crowd at the Washington Convention Center on Tuesday. "This has been more realized by individual sensitive men than it has by medical research funds."

Ms. Steinem said patient information packets that accompany the pill should be safeguarded and contraceptive advertising should be allowed. She also urged doctors to be more specific in giving information to their patients.

"We need to know about the pluses and minuses (of new types of birth control pills). Yet the dialogue is as if it were all the same pill," she said.

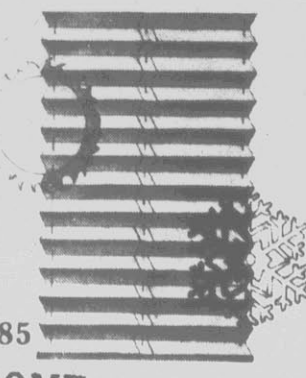

Ms. Steinem noted that the women's health movement started 20 years ago as a response to research that found problems with the pill.

Reagan last week in a speech in Strasbourg, France, U.S. officials said.

The steps include an exchange of observers at military exercises, regular contacts between American and Soviet military leaders, and a direct link between ranking U.S. and Soviet commanders.

Lawyer Paroled

PEKING (AP) — China said today it has paroled a Hong Kong-born, Harvard-trained lawyer jailed for spying two years ago in a celebrated case that focused attention on arbitrary arrests and secret detentions in the Chinese justice system.

The official news agency Xinhua said parole for Hanson Huang, 34, was based on his "prison behavior and willingness to serve Chinese modernization."

Huang, who once worked for a U.S. law firm, disappeared in 1981 during a visit to Peking. The government did not admit until last February that he had been arrested, tried as a spy and sentenced to 15 years at an undisclosed prison.

The Xinhua announcement said Huang was paroled by an unidentified judge of the Peking Intermediate People's Court. The announcement did not disclose Huang's present whereabouts or explain whether he is allowed to leave the country.

Store Clerk Murderer Executed In Texas

JESSE DE LA ROSA

By MICHAEL L. GRACZYK
Associated Press Writer
HUNTSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Jesse de la Rosa, professing love for his stepmother and asking forgiveness for his sins, was executed by injection early today for killing a convenience store clerk over six cans of beer in 1979.

De la Rosa, 24, was pronounced dead at 12:17 a.m., four minutes after a lethal dose of chemicals was injected into both arms. He was the 11th person executed in the nation this year and the 43rd put to death since the U.S. Supreme Court reinstated capital punishment in 1976.

De la Rosa was executed for the death of Masoud Ghazali, a former Iranian Air Force captain who was shot twice in the head during a robbery of a San Antonio 7-11 store that netted only a six-pack of beer.

He made his final statement staring at the ceiling, telling his stepmother, Carmen, who was in the death chamber with him, "I love you."

"God forgive my brothers and sisters for sins I have committed," de la Rosa said in Spanish.

De la Rosa's stepmother, who was accompanied by the condemned man's father, Luciano, replied in English, "You'll never die because you'll always be in my memories."

His father added in Spanish, "God forgive my son."

De la Rosa then added, "God, I give my life for my brothers and sisters."

When he gasped and his stomach buckled, his stepmother began sobbing. She was comforted by his father, who also was in tears. The couple left the prison without further comment.

De la Rosa's execution, the third carried out this year by the Texas Department of Corrections, came after two days of unsuccessful appeals by his attorneys.

Late Tuesday, the U.S. Supreme Court voted 7-2 to deny him new hearings. Then Gov. Mark White, as he has in previous death sentences, refused to grant a 30-day reprieve.

On Monday, de la Rosa was turned down by a federal appeals court and the Texas Board of Pardons and Paroles.

After a steak dinner for his final meal, he spoke by telephone for about 20 minutes to a longtime friend, Margie Garcia of San Antonio, and shortly after 8 p.m. he received communion from a prison priest, the Rev. Stephen Walsh.

It was the second death date for de la Rosa, who said in an interview a week ago that he was coerced into confessing to the slaying of Ghazali. He refused, however, to identify the triggerman.

A store clerk shot earlier the same night in a $40 robbery identified de la Rosa, who was 18 at the time. De la Rosa has said he had been drinking and smoking marijuana that night, but was at a friend's house when Ghazali was walked to the back of the store to a cooler and shot twice in the head.

Asked if the execution relieved her, Ghazali's wife Gloria replied: "It does," then hung up the telephone.

A second man involved with de la Rosa in the crime spree, Alejandro Alcorta Garcia, 28, is serving a life sentence for aggravated robbery.

Police Use High Powered Weapons To Fight Crime

By LAWRENCE KILMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — From powerful water cannons to a bomb that set 60 homes ablaze, Philadelphia police used a wide range of weapons in their attempt to roust members of the radical group MOVE from a fortified row house.

The old six-shooter is still standard issue for the cop on the beat. But departments confronted with more and more situations like that involving MOVE have resorted to new kinds of weapons, both lethal and non-lethal.

Drug dealers, terrorists and other criminals are armed to the teeth, and some police departments have responded with special forces that carry machine guns, assault rifles and automatic firearms.

Los Angeles police even have a tank, which they use as a battering ram against criminals' fortified hideouts.

"It shows that police have become more anti-riot oriented, anti-terrorist oriented," said Leslie Dees, president of the Police Marksman Association.

The search for more firepower has many police departments replacing their .38-caliber, six-shot revolver with semiautomatic weapons that fire more shots, reload quickly and are more powerful.

New weapons are not adopted simply because they are available or because officers are intrigued by high technology. There has to be a reason, and the reasons are many.

In New Jersey, the 1981 slaying of state trooper Philip Lamomaco in a gun battle led the department to replace 2,500 .357-caliber Smith & Wesson six-shooters with Heckler and Koch 9mm semiautomatic weapons. The new weapons carry nine bullets and reload three times as quickly as the old ones, said Capt. Joseph Kobus, a spokesman for the department.

In Chicago, the Hostage Barricade and Terrorist Incident Team was having a tough time maneuvering their 12-gauge shotguns and 30-06 rifles in narrow hallways, said John Gavin, an officer in the Uniform Equipment Standards section.

"We looked for an intermediate assault weapon for going up small stairways in crowded apartment houses," he said. They chose a .223-caliber rifle with a collapsible stock.

In New York, where police killed an emotionally disturbed woman in an eviction proceeding last year, the search is on for new non-lethal weapons. The Emergency Services squad has purchased several stun guns called tasers and is experimenting with a type that attaches to poles, said Inspector Raymond Abruzzi, commanding officer of the squad.

Tasers shoot electrically charged darts that cause a loss of muscle control. Stun guns are similar in effect, but the pocket-size weapons must be touched directly to the person.

Five police officers have been indicted in New York on charges of using stun guns to torture suspects, but stun guns were not issued to them from the department. They were not members of Abruzzi's squad.

In Bowie, Texas, a town of 6,000 between Forth Worth and Wichita Falls, Chief Jim Wade originally resisted younger officers' requests for semiautomatic weapons.

"I have 20 years in law enforcement. My training and background has been totally toward the six-shot revolver," he said. But a distributor sent a Beretta 9mm to the department for a trial, and 15 officers fired 1,000 rounds from it. "We found it to be totally acceptable," Wade said.

And in Philadelphia, where the 2,000-gallon-a-minute water cannons failed to breach a steel plated rooftop bunker, officials turned to a more powerful weapon — an explosive charge dropped from a helicopter.

The bomb, two pounds of blasting material called Tovex, which is similar to dynamite and used in mining, destroyed the bunker, but the resulting fire also claimed the neighborhood.

Arafat Seeks Endorsement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Palestine Liberation Organization leader Yasser Arafat, in a possible bid to improve chances for discussions between the PLO and the United States, says he would recognize Israel's right to exist if the Reagan administration endorsed Palestinian "self-determination," according to published reports.

Since 1975, the United States has refused to have official contacts with Palestinian leaders until they accept United Nations Security Council resolution 242, which affirms Israel's right to exist.

"We are not refusing 242 because it is a resolution," Arafat said in an interview Tuesday in Amman, Jordan, with reporters from The Washington Post and the Los Angeles Times. "We are refusing 242 because it does not treat us as people."

Asked if he would accept the resolution by name if the United States explicitly endorsed Palestinian "self-determination," Arafat answered, "Absolutely," the Post said in today's editions.

Would he accept Israel's right to exist?

"I would accept all the international legality. It is very clear what I am saying. Simple and clear. We are not against this resolution. It is simple and clear," he said.

State Department spokeswoman Kathleen Lang said early today the department had no immediate comment on Arafat's remarks.

Arab officials said Arafat's statements were not a direct contradiction of the most recent public declaration on the subject by the PLO's executive committee. On Feb. 19, the committee rejected Resolution 242, which besides recognizing Israel, also calls for the Israelis to return lands occupied in the 1967 Arab-Israeli war.

Companies like Beretta and Heckler and Koch are challenging Colt and Smith & Wesson, the fabled names of police lore.

In the nation's largest police departments, however, the six-shooter is still standard equipment. It is generally the smaller of the nation's 19,000 police and sheriffs departments that are on the cutting edge of new weaponry, said Dees.

"Your average police departments are 20- and 30-man departments. That's where change can happen," he said. Fewer weapons mean a switch is less costly, but there is another reason, too. "These are the ones where the Green Beret goes back and becomes the man in charge of the police department because he's the expert," said Dees.

"We see that: The guys who were in Vietnam are much more concerned about their weapons than older officers," said Robert Haas, a spokesman for Smith & Wesson.

Philadelphia Managing Director Leo A. Brooks, the man who coordinated the day-long siege against the MOVE stronghold, is a 52-year-old retired major general who saw two tours of duty in Vietnam.

reconciliation period, a family spokesman said.

Ms. Osmond, 25, asked $1 per year alimony, reasonable child support and custody of the couple's son, 2-year-old Stephen James Craig. The action filed Tuesday claimed she had been treated "cruelly, causing her great mental distress."

Ms. Osmond and Craig, 28, a former Brigham Young University basketball player, were married in June 26, 1982, in a highly publicized ceremony in the Salt Lake Temple of the Mormon Church.

The 1 1/2-page divorce complaint, filed in 4th District Court in Provo, also asked the court to decide how the couple's property should be divided if Ms. Osmond and Craig can't reach an agreement.

The document did not elaborate on the reason for the divorce. Osmond family spokesman Ron Clark said he had been asked by both Craig and Ms. Osmond not to discuss their problems. He said no statement from either party would be forthcoming.

"They won't talk," he said. "I talk about it more than they do. Everything I ask them is 'no comment,'" he said.

Marie Osmond Wants A Divorce From Hubby

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Claiming she had been treated cruelly, singer Marie Osmond has filed for divorce from Steve Craig six months after the couple separated and began a reconciliation period, a family spokesman said.

Ms. Osmond, 25, asked $1 per year alimony, reasonable child support and custody of the couple's son, 2-year-old Stephen James Craig. The action filed Tuesday claimed she had been treated "cruelly, causing her great mental distress."

"They won't talk," he said. "I talk about it more than they do. Everything I ask them is 'no comment,'" he said.

The couple made their home in Los Angeles after their wedding. Clark said Ms. Osmond has been living in the Provo area with her son since the separation.

At the time of her marriage, Ms. Osmond said, "It feels wonderful; I got the best."

Following the temple wedding rites, which Mormons believe bind couples together for eternity, the couple celebrated with a reception attended by 4,000 guests.

Four Arrested In Trooper's Death; Authorities Search For A Motive

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
Associated Press Writer
ENFIELD, N.C. (AP) — Authorities say they have no motive in the death of a 23-year veteran of the state Highway Patrol who was shot while still in his patrol car, but suspects were rounded up within hours of the shooting.

Timothy Lanier Allen, 30, of Washington, D.C. was charged Tuesday with the first-degree murder of Trooper Raymond E. Worley, 44, said Halifax County District Attorney David Beard.

Worley "was a very dedicated trooper and had been with us for many years," said Trooper Glenn Swanson, operations sergeant at Highway Patrol Troop A in Greenville. "He was at one time involved in a very serious accident. He fought back his disabilities and came back into uniform. A normal person would not have come back."

Allen's brother, Alex Allen, 34, along with Antonio Maurice Worrell, 28, and Mack Eugene Green, 27, all of Washington, were charged with accessory after the fact to murder.

A first court appearance is scheduled for today in Halifax County District Court, Beard said.

All four men also were charged with two counts each of possession of stolen property, felonious possession of stolen property and two counts of possession of property in connection with the breaking and entering at a Pender County grocery store.

Halifax County sheriff's detective E.C. Warren said the men were wanted for questioning in the Washington area in connection with other charges.

Worley was shot three times in the head and left hand Tuesday morning after he stopped two vans on Interstate 95, authorities said.

Maj. Robert A. Clark said the investigators thought Worley was shot from the back seat of his car. He said the trooper's service revolver was still in his holster when he was found.

"This trooper was on the Interstate 95 patrol which we run all night long and he stopped two vans headed in a northerly direction," Swanson said.

"Then there was no further contact and some license and theft personnel who manned the weigh station were sent out to check him to find out what was wrong. They found him seated in his patrol car...."

The suspects were in custody by 9 a.m., four hours after Worley had radioed that he was stopping two vans on the highway at milepost 163.

One suspect was captured on U.S. 301 by a state trooper who was backing up from his driveway to join the search. Three others were captured after a farmer checking his corn crop saw a van he hadn't seen before parked on his property.

A search of the two vans turned up beer and cigarettes believed to have been taken from a Pender County grocery store.

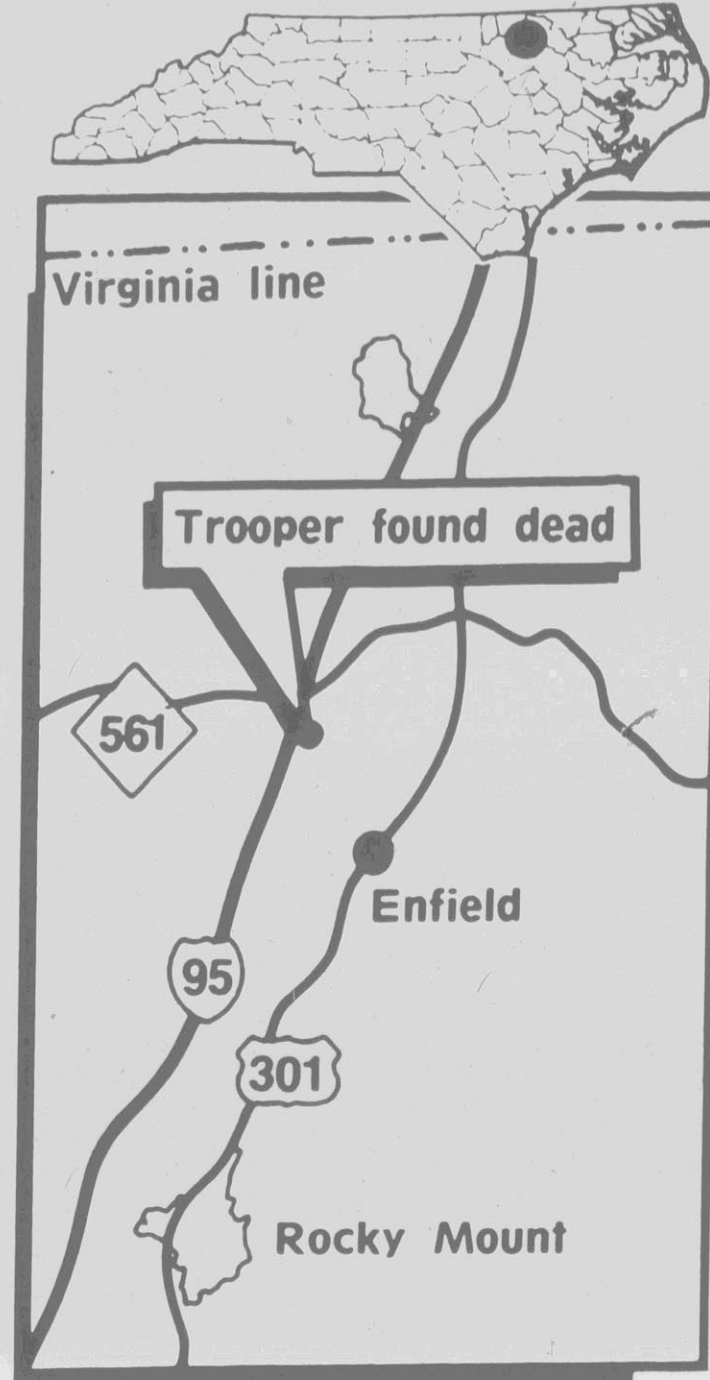

Clark said officers will search luggage found in one of the vans and hoped what was found would establish a motive for the shooting.

A .38-caliber pistol and a .22-caliber pistol were recovered from the vans, which were believed to be stolen, Clark said. Warren said the weapons were reported missing in the Pender County break-in.

The slaying was the second of a state trooper in little over a month. Trooper Giles A. Harmon, 26, of Arden, was shot to death April 9 when he stopped a speeding car on a detour near a rockslide-blocked Interstate 40 in Haywood County. A Lexington, Ky., man was indicted on murder charges in connection with the slaying.

Funeral services for Worley have been scheduled for 11 a.m. Thursday at Zion United Methodist Church in Conway. Burial will follow at the family cemetery at the home.

Officers Seek Clues In Triple Slayings

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Detectives are working 24 hours a day on the slayings of the wife of an Air Force captain and their two children, but still have no motive or suspect in the case, authorities said.

"They're mad, shocked, disgusted and now they're determined," Cumberland County Sheriff's Department spokesman Harold Little said of the investigators Tuesday. "The fact that it's hard just makes them more determined."

Air Force Capt. Gary Eastburn returned to his house Tuesday to help detectives find out who raped and stabbed his wife, Kathryn, to death and killed their two daughters, Kara, 5, and Erin, 3.

"We took him to the house and let him walk around for a while to see if he could help us find out anything," said Major C.D. Smith, chief of detectives for the Cumberland County Sheriff's Department. Smith said Eastburn was at the house for two hours, but he declined to comment on what he said or his emotional condition. Eastburn was in seclusion at Pope Air Force Base and could not be reached for comment.

The bodies were found Sunday in the Eastburn's comfortable, one-story brick home after neighbors heard the cries of another daughter, 18-month-old Jana. She was unhurt. Authorities said the victims had been dead three days.

The Eastburns were "real nice people, pleasant to be around," Little said. "Why would anybody want to do this to (Mrs. Eastburn)? There were no bad spots in her background. ... It's not like some guys we get in drugs or who hang around with shady characters."

Four detectives are working around the clock on the case, Little said, adding that all the department's 33 detectives were helping by checking their own sources.

Also helping was a seven-member investigative team from the State Bureau of Investigation, including two lab chemists checking physical evidence.

Little said the Eastburns spent a lot of time with their children and kept pretty much to themselves.

"All these things make our job tougher," he said.

Smith said detectives used a chemical and light technique Tuesday to highlight blood around the house. Little said fingerprints were found but he declined to say what any of the evidence means so far.

"If he (the killer) left so much as a hair, we're going to find it," he said. "It's hard to do that much damage without leaving a part of yourself."

Little said Mrs. Eastburn's nude body was found with Erin's in the master bedroom, Kara's body was found in another bedroom and Jana was in a crib in a third room.

Autopsy reports showed the three died from multiple stab wounds and slit throats and that Mrs. Eastburn had been sexually assaulted. The living room showed signs of struggle but the furniture was not in disarray, he said.

"We assume it was a spontaneous-type thing," Little said. Eastburn, chief of air traffic control at Pope Air Force Base, next to Fort Bragg, was attending an eight-week training course in Alabama at the time of the slayings.

"He's definitely been ruled out as a suspect," Little said.

Fort Bragg was the scene in 1970 of the slayings of the wife and two daughters of former Green Beret physician Jeffrey MacDonald, who was convicted of murder despite his claims that a band of drug-crazed hippies killed his family and wounded him.

Little said detectives are taking "extra precautions" to preserve evidence in this case. Military investigators accidentally destroyed some evidence in the MacDonald case, leading to delays in his conviction.

"We're certainly not going to make that mistake again," Little said.

Privette Eyes Legislation Banning Ads For Alcohol

By DENNIS PATTERSON
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Advertising by the beer and wine industry is aimed at convincing young people to drink and should be banned, a state legislator says, but a spokesman for beer wholesalers says the ads are not seeking new customers.

Rep. Coy Privette, R-Cabarrus, said Tuesday his bill banning alcoholic beverage ads in all print and broadcast media is necessary "because of the irresponsible behavior of the alcohol industry in purposely pushing its product to alcoholics, young people and new users."

But Chris A. Valauri, executive vice president of the North Carolina Beer Wholesalers Association, denied that beer producers aim their advertising at the young.

"We are not trying to recruit a new generation of beer drinkers," he said. "Beer advertisements are designed to influence brand selection. They're not saying to the consumer, 'You should go out and have six or seven of these.'"

Privette said he would introduce legislation today that would prohibit all advertising of alcoholic beverages in newspapers, pamphlets, billboards, television, radio and other mass media.

George Diaz, president of the North Carolina Association of Broadcasters, said his organization opposes the bill.

"The people of North Carolina won't be fooled by this bill," Diaz said.

Reader Files Are Private, Say Officials

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Libraries should be able to keep confidential the records of borrowers or lists of readers for certain books because readers have a right to privacy, library officials say.

"Questions concerning the rights of library users go back to the McCarthy era, usually in the form of a request to view the records of a particular library borrower, or to see the names of all the persons who read a certain kind of book," Gene Lanier, an East Carolina University professor and chairman of the Intellectual Freedom Committee of the North Carolina Library Association told the House Judiciary I Committee.

"When the time comes in any society that people seek information as to what people are reading, it must be presumed that they expect to use these records as evidence of dangerous thinking," Lanier said Tuesday.

The panel discussed, but did not vote on, a bill sponsored by Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, that would keep records identifying library users private.

The bill would grant exceptions when open records are needed for "reasonable" library operations such as keeping circulation statistics; when the user agrees in writing; and when the records are subpoenaed for a law enforcement probe.

Critics pointed out that under the bill, a teacher no longer could check to see whether a student checked out a book for a report as assigned.

Lanier said police once sought the names of everyone who used a particular study area during an evening when a woman lost a purse there. "That's not due process," he said.

But Rep. George Robinson, R-Caldwell, said he saw nothing wrong with such an effort.

"I don't see why this bill is needed," said Robinson. "I have a little problem with trying to deter these folks (police) from apprehending someone who's broken the law."

Senate Ready For Last Vote On Day Care

RALEIGH (AP) — A disgruntled Senate committee chairman, weary of futile attempts to please everyone with a bill to reorganize child day care, successfully fought off concessions to religious groups and hopes to have similar success with Republicans.

"You haven't seen me like this very often," said Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, after the Senate voted 39-8 Tuesday to tentatively approve a bill to move all day-care operations to the Department of Human Resources.

"I've tried to get a consensus. I tried right up until this morning to address their concerns," he said. "Now we all have to share this responsibility."

Hipps helped shoot down an amendment backed by Gov. Jim Martin to let church-run day care be regulated in the governor's office while everything else went to the Division of Facility Services. And he vowed to fight attempts to give the governor a majority of appointees to a newly created, 15-member Day Care Commission.

Hipps said religious groups once satisfied with being exempted from new standards governing education and programming in day care resurfaced to back exclusion from reorganization.

"They agreed to be bound by ... health, safety and sanitation and that's what we're dealing with here," he said.

Hipps said he tried unsuccessfully to compromise by giving the governor nine members on the commission in exchange for religious support. Now the deal is off, he added.

The bill is designed to eliminate duplication with the Department of Administration at a savings of $4.7 million over the next two years.

Hipps said.

"I'm reassured that the Senate realizes the compelling urgency to consolidate these different departments," he added.

The only amendment backed by the Senate Tuesday was one to give the 1,600 for-profit day-care facilities a 4-3 advantage over the 500 nonprofit facilities on the commission.

USDA Snubs Stabilization Buy-Out Plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture, saying reduced sales of tobacco this year could simply replace the surplus eliminated by a proposed buy-out, has balked at a plan proposed by Stabilization and offered a plan of its own.

In the USDA's proposal, a support price rollback — a key company demand for a buy-out — would hinge on minimum purchases of tobacco this year by the companies.

"The policy people (in USDA) would like assurances that the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. would not be just taking it out of one pocket and putting it another pocket," said James Davis, director of the tobacco division of the Agriculture Stabilization and Conservation Service.

said. "It was left open for discussion."

The USDA rejected a plan proposed by Stabilization for a buy-out of tobacco surpluses by cigarette manufacturing companies, officials said Tuesday.

While negotiations are continuing to try to satisfy USDA concerns, the reluctance of the federal officials to approve Stabilization's plan has raised another problem for the proposed buy-out of some 800 million pounds of surplus leaf.

The department has demanded assurances that a buy-out at significant losses to taxpayers would not be canceled out by reduced purchases of tobacco in this year's tobacco markets.

Fred Bond, manager of the Raleigh-based cooperative, said he was working on another offer to USDA, but he was unsure what would satisfy the officials.

"It certainly is a problem that is going to have to be resolved if we proceed with an administrative program (for a buy-out this year)," Bond said.

The failure of an administrative plan could mean that growers this year would pay a 25-cent-per-pound fee to support the tobacco program without a cut in the price support level to prevent further buildup of tobacco stocks.

The projected price support is now set at $1.70 per pound, although that level is expected to be reduced to $1.65 per pound through discretionary powers of the USDA.

The proposed buy-out is not only intended to eliminate large portions of existing stocks held by stabilization, but also to reduce a buildup this year by further reducing the price support to $1.40 per pound.

The cooperative has asked USDA to approve converting the 25-cent assessment to support the program into a rebate to buyers as the effective way to cut the price support.

Tax Gets Tentative Approval

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Rejecting warnings of "cutthroat" competition, the Senate tentatively approved a proposed constitutional amendment that would let each county decide whether to keep the inventory tax.

"The inventory tax is a county tax, a city tax, a local tax," Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, sponsor of the proposed amendment, said Tuesday. "It's not a state tax."

But Sen. Melvin Watt, D-Mecklenburg, said that when counties "start to get cutthroat with each other in competing for business ... we are heading for trouble."

The measure was passed 31-15, with most of the opposition coming from Republicans who prefer Gov. Jim Martin's plan to repeal the tax statewide. A final vote was scheduled for Monday.

If approved by three-fifths House and Senate votes, a statewide referendum on the amendment would be scheduled for November 1986. A similar bill has been endorsed by the House Finance Committee and awaits floor action.

Thomas said his bill would benefit small, poor counties that get little inventory tax revenue because they have few industries. By doing away with the tax, they might lure new businesses and create jobs, Thomas said. But wealthier counties that collect substantial amounts of money from the tax could keep it. Sen. Bob Somers, R-Rowan, charged that no one seriously wanting to lift the inventory tax would support the amendment.

"In my opinion this bill is nothing but a ruse, introduced ... solely for the purpose of ensuring that (Martin's) inventory tax bill ... never sees the light of day," Somers said.

Sen. Cass Ballenger, R-Catawba, said, "I think that basically we're all being pretty chicken about this — not biting the bullet and dealing with this and passing it on down to the county commissioners instead."

But Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, responded, "This is not passing the buck. It is not a state tax." North Carolina counties already compete with each other for industry, he added.

Watt said he was afraid local officials wouldn't withstand pressure to lift the tax even if doing so would "jeopardize their own financial well-being."

Sen. Jim McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg, broke party ranks to support the amendment, saying it was "half a loaf" but would let local officials "determine their own destiny."

A subcommittee of the Senate Finance Committee is expected to vote this week on an omnibus tax-relief package. The co-chairmen, Thomas and Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, say they're compiling a "skeleton" proposal for the subcommittee.

Committee members predict the package will include a partial reduction of the inventory tax.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market opened mixed today as new signs emerged of sluggish economic growth.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 1.77 points to 1,275.07 in the first half hour of trading today. But more stocks fell in price than rose in the early going on the New York Stock Exchange.

Hopes for renewed economic strength have been dampened by a series of disappointing figures released by the government and private industry.

The Federal Reserve Board said today that industrial production fell 0.2 percent in April, the first decline in six months. On Tuesday, the nation's automakers said sales fell 8.6 percent in the first 10 days of May from a year earlier.

The slowing of economic growth, however, has touched off a rally in the bond market, with interest rates falling in anticipation that the Federal Reserve will accommodate lower rates to prevent a recession.

Analysts also said it is likely the Fed will encourage lower interest rates to ensure liquidity and calm in the banking system following an order by Maryland's governor to limit withdrawals at the state's privately insured savings and loan associations following a run by depositors at some of the institutions.

Analysts said the situation in Maryland appeared to be under control, but that the latest problems would be a factor dampening investor enthusiasm.

Some selling also was attributed to traders who were cashing in on the stock market's recent rally.

In early trading today, American Telephone & Telegraph was up 1/4 at 22 3/4; Perkin-Elmer was unchanged at 23 1/4. General Motors rose 3/4 to 67 1/2. Unocal was unchanged at 45 3/4, and Mobil was unchanged at 30 1/2.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 4.20 to 1,273.30.

Declines outpaced advances by about 8 to 7 on the NYSE.

Big Board volume rose to 97.36 million shares from 85.83 million Monday.

The NYSE's composite index lost 37 to 106.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was down .63 at 227.76.

tact with bureaucracy and kept scores of dogs and welcomed rats into their home as part of their back-to-nature outlook.

Some residents said the police overreacted and should not have used a helicopter to bomb the house, which authorities believed contained explosives.

Police surrounded the MOVE rowhouse in a neat, working-class neighborhood Sunday night and evacuated 200 homes. When they tried to evict MOVE members Monday on charges including possession of explosives and harassment of neighbors, MOVE refused and a gunbattle ensued.

Police in a helicopter dropped a bomb on the house Monday night to destroy a rooftop bunker and a fire started, eventually spreading to 61 houses.

Two MOVE members escaped their blazing fortress with minor burns — 9-year-old Birdie Africa and Ramona Africa, who had been sought by police on various charges and is being held in $3 million bail.

Goode said during Monday's fire that "at least three others were on the loose," but on Tuesday he told reporters "I don't know" if any MOVE members got away.

"The fire was accidental and unexpected," Goode said at a news conference, adding that the bomb plan "did not turn out as intended."

"But it was the right decision," said the mayor in accepting full responsibility for the operation that burned down more houses than any other fire in the history of America's fifth-largest city.

Burton Caine, president of the Philadelphia Chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union, called the bombing "totally unjustified."

"Trained public safety officials should have known that the dropping of a bomb onto a row home full of ammunition and other explosives, in a tightly compacted area, is like lighting a match in a room full of gas," Caine said.

Ruth Willis, whose home was damaged, said "we wanted them to get the problem settled, but not with a fire. For it to end up like this, it's just horrible."

Goode, visiting some of the homeless at a temporary church shelter on Tuesday, said, "we believe we owe it to you to make you whole again (and) we will rebuild those blocks with city funds."

Sambor said the rubble at the MOVE house was being excavated by a five-story crane. The house, he said, was "the most heavily fortified of any building I have ever seen in 35 years of police work."

"The inside of the home was fortified with trees," he said. "Tree trunks with the bark still on, and through which fireports were cut so they could shoot outside."

Industrial Production Sees April Decrease

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. industrial production fell 0.2 percent in April, the first decline in six months, as the industrial sector of the economy continued to suffer from America's weak trading performance, the government reported today.

The Federal Reserve Board said its index of total output at the nation's factories, mines and utilities fell for the first time since a 0.4 percent decline last October.

The latest setback left the index at 165.4 percent of its 1967 base. The highpoint reached during the current recovery was 166 percent back in August. Since that time, the set-backs have outweighed the gains as the country's industrial sector has struggled against a worsening trading performance.

The inability of U.S. industry to compete against foreign products was cited as the main reason overall economic growth slumped to an anemic 1.3 percent during the first three months of this year, the slowest pace since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

Reflecting this slow growth, the employment rate has been stuck at 7.3 percent of the civilian workforce for the past three months.

Analysts believe the weak trading performance will depress economic growth the entire year with many predicting the gross national product will advance by only 3.1 percent this year, down sharply from the 6.8 percent growth in 1984.

Worries have also begun rising about a recession, perhaps starting next year and some analysts have warned that the United States is already in a growth recession, a period when economic growth is so sluggish that the unemployment rate rises.

Today's report by the Fed showed that output at manufacturing companies was down 0.2 percent with the biggest drop occurring in industries making durable goods, items expected to last three or more years. These industries suffered a 0.4 percent while the nondurable goods segment dipped 0.1 percent.

Automobiles were assembled at an annual rate of 8.1 million units in April, down from the March rate of 8.3 million units.

Production of business equipment fell by 0.3 percent in April, the fourth consecutive decrease for this industry.

About the only industrial segment showing strength was the defense and space industry, which posted a 0.7 percent increase in April following an even larger 1.3 percent March gain.

Output at the nation's mines fell a sharp 1.5 percent in April following a 1 percent increase in March.

Utility output was up 0.3 percent, reversing a 0.3 percent March decline.

The strong dollar is blamed for much of the country's trading woes. A strong dollar makes imports cheaper and thus more attractive to U.S. consumers while making American products more expensive and thus harder to sell overseas.

While the dollar has declined somewhat from the highs it reached in mid-February it has still risen in value by more than 50 percent against other foreign currencies since late 1980.

Pickle Packers Pick President

CHICAGO (AP) — Pickle Packers International has named President Reagan Pickle Person of the Year because he "has gotten into a lot of pickles this year, but he has gotten out of them, too."

Bill Moore, executive vice president of Pickle Packers International, said Tuesday the president's pickles included "a number of hotly contested appointments," as well as the furor over a joking comment Reagan made about bombing the Soviet Union before a radio broadcast last year.

As a symbol of the honor, Moore said the president would receive a three-foot inflatable plastic pickle May 23, which is the first day of International Pickle Week.

Moore said the pickle awards have gone to other presidents, including Richard Nixon, who won one during the Watergate period.

ECAC Tourney Opens Thursday

The 1985 ECAC-Southern Division Baseball Tournament, making its first appearance in Greenville, will get underway Thursday at 2 p.m. at Harrington Field.

Second seeded New York Tech, winners of the New York/New Jersey Conference, will take on Iona, the champion of the Atlantic Metro Conference, seeded third in the tournament field in the opening game of the double elimination tournament.

Thursday at 7 p.m., hosting East Carolina, the ECAC-South champ and the top seed in the tournament, takes on George Mason, also of the ECAC-South, the fourth seeded and at-large pick in the field.

New York Tech brings a 32-13-1 record into the tournament, and it is the first appearance in the Southern Division tournament for the Bears. Tech's 32 victories set a new school record, one better than the old mark of 31. They have broken eight other school records during the year and are on the verge of setting three more.

Tech comes into the tournament hitting .350 as a team, and is led by junior third baseman Fred Leone, hitting .461 through 45 games. He stands eighth among all ECAC hitters. Leone has also set school record for homers in a second and is second in runs batted in. Senior first baseman Mike Frustaci set that latter mark with 65 through 45 games, standing fourth in the ECAC. He is hitting at a .437 clip.

Frustaci is also tied for seventh in the ECAC in doubles with 17, and tied for tenth in homers with 12. Ray Karczewski is tied for third in ECAC triples with six, while Leone is seventh in runs batted in with 61.

The Bears have averaged better than seven runs a game in the year, hitting more than 50 homers, 90 doubles and 20 triples, all school records.

Al Silverstein is 14th in strikeouts in the ECAC with 63 while Mike Conklin is second in saves with five.

The Iona Gaels come in with a 23-12-1 mark, the most wins in the school's history and their first 20-game victory season.

It is the first time that the Gaels have ever made post-season play also.

Catcher Glen McElroy, who set a school record for hits with 62, leads the way for the Gaels with a .492 average in a year that saw six of the ten Metro Atlantic top hitters come from Iona. The Gaels hit .380 as a team for the season.

McElroy stands fifth in the ECAC in hitting, while Joe Staraci is 16th at .439 and Mark Casey is 26th at .419. McElroy is fifth in the league in doubles with 19, and tied for ninth in triples with five.

Chris Hansen is the leader on the mound for Iona, which won the league championship for the second straight year. Hansen is 3-3 with a 5.06 ERA, but was impressive in his last two outings, beating nationally-ranked Seton Hall and LaSalle for the conference championship.

George Mason posted a 35-21 record this year and was third in the final ECAC-South standings with an 11-7 mark. They will be making their first post-season appearance since moving up to Division I in 1976.

Senior first baseman Kevin Burke, who hit .434 during the season, and who is 21st among ECAC hitters, leads the Patriots. He hit 17 homers and 72 runs batted in, both second in the ECAC to East Carolina's Winfred Johnson.

Danny Atcheson, 7-3, is the pitching leader. He beat the Pirates 7-2 on April 20 in Fairfax, Va. Steve Kann is the leading reliever with five saves, tied for second in the ECAC.

Burke also leads the ECAC in doubles, triple and hits with 89 in 56 games.

Following Thursday's first round games, two games are planned for Friday and Saturday, also at 2 and 7 p.m. The Friday afternoon game will send the losers of the Thursday games against each other, with the loser eliminated from the field. The two winners collide in the Friday night game.

Saturday afternoon, the losers' bracket finals will reduce the field to two, and the championship game will be played Saturday night. Should it take two games to decide the title, a final game will be played on Sunday at 2 p.m.

The winner of the tournament advances to the NCAA regionals next week, the site still to be determined.

Rose Rallies To Top Hunt, 6-3

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Steve Wall recovered from a shaky start in the first inning when he allowed three runs to pitch Rose High School to a 6-3 Big East baseball victory over Wilson Hunt last night.

Tagged for three runs and five hits in the opening frame, Wall rebounded to hold the Warriors scoreless the rest of the way on just four more hits. He walked two and struck out nine along the way.

"Steve threw a very good game tonight after he got past the first inning," Coach Ronald Vincent said.

It wasn't the most perfect game played as five of the six runs scored by the Rampants were unearned through five Hunt errors. Rose got only six hits, but used them to good advantage. "We got some good two-out hits," Vincent said. "Overall, I think we played pretty well tonight."

Vincent was also pleased with the play of two of his defenders. "Doyle Kirkland continues to be a very steady performer. He plays a solid second base. And Mike Wooten made a heck of a catch to end the game for us."

Wooten, inserted for the last inning for defensive purposes, came up with a diving, rolling catch of a ball hit off the bat of Jay Lassiter in the seven with two out and two on. The 3-2 shot would have scored two runs had it fallen in.

Hunt took the initial lead, scoring all three of its runs in the top of the first. Robbie Bass led off with a double down the left field line. He moved to third on a wild pitch and scored off a passed ball. With two away, Jerry Smith singled to center and Jay Lassiter reached on an infield hit. William Chatman singled to center, scoring Smith and Lassiter came home on a hit to right by Mark Parker.

That was to be it for Hunt, thanks to some fine pitching by Wall and some fine defense behind him.

Hunt's biggest threat came in the fifth. Bass again opened with a double and James Boykin singled, then stole second. With one out, Smith lifted a fly to short center that Kirkland went back to catch. He then fired home to double up Bass, tagging up after the catch.

In the sixth, Hunt used a hit batsman and a walk to put runners on, and advanced them on a passed ball before a popup ended the inning.

Rose got back in the game with a pair of runs in the bottom of the first. Kirkland opened with a single to right, moving up on an error on the play. Eric Jarman reached on an error, scoring Kirkland all the way from second. Jarman advanced on a wild pitch and scored on a two-out single by Robbie Ehrmann.

The tying run came over in the second. With one away, Battle Emory was hit by a pitch and Joey Hallow singled. Both advanced on a wild pitch and Emory scored when Jarman was again safe on an error.

Rose took the lead in the third with another run. Ehrmann reached on a fielder's choice and stole second. James Matthews then singled him in for a 4-3 lead.

The first of two insurance runs came over in the fourth. Hallow went all the way to second when his grounder was errored. A passed ball put him on third. After Kirkland walked, Jarman lofted a fly ball to right. After the catch, Hallow tagged and scored, but Kirkland, who had broken on the pitch, was thrown out trying to get back to first.

In the fifth, Matthews reached on a fielder's choice and courtesy runner Travis King stole second, scoring on a double to left by Emory. Bass, Smith and Chatman each had two hits for Hunt, while no one had more than one hit for Rose.

The Rampants climb to 13-8 on the season, 7-6 in league play. Hunt falls to 5-15, 2-11.

Rose will wind up its season on Thursday, traveling to Elizabeth City Northeastern.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — University of Virginia Athletic Director Dick Shultz has branded as "sour grapes" North Carolina football Coach Dick Crum's claim that Virginia is accepting student-athletes with lower academic credentials.

Crum, meanwhile, said he was quoted "totally out of context" and that his remarks were meant as praise for Virginia's recruiting success during the reign of Coach George Welsh.

"It's really a good case of the old foot-in-the-mouth disease," Shultz said Tuesday, reacting to a report of Crum's remarks at a meeting of North Carolina alumni in Richmond. "The fact is that George Welsh and his staff have practically shut off North Carolina recruiting in the Richmond area...that's what Crum is saying we've been able to do."

"And Crum saying that is probably a good sign because you know you're really getting to them when they resort to saying things like this," Shultz said.

Crum contended in the article that recently relaxed academic entrance requirements at Virginia make it more attractive and easier for student-athletes with marginal academic records to attend school in Virginia rather than be wooed southward.

Chargers Rip Panthers; Gain 3-A Playoff Berth

By JIMMY DuPREE
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — Shannon Peede fired a one-hitter and blasted a solo homer to lead the Chargers of Ayden-Grifton to a 6-0 shutout over North Pitt Tuesday in Eastern Carolina 3-A baseball.

But the biggest news for the Chargers was Farmville Central's 6-3 upset victory over Southern Nash which insured Ayden-Grifton of the other ECC playoff berth. C.B. Aycock had already wrapped up the conference title.

Peede recorded eight strikeouts as the Chargers raised their record to 9-3 in the ECC and 12-9 overall. Ayden-Grifton maintained a share of second place in the league with the victory.

"Shannon Peede did a real good job for us," Ayden-Grifton Coach Chris Ross said. "He hadn't started in a while, and he got a little tired in the seventh inning. And he was three-for-four at the plate."

Frank Mills went to third on a three-base error after one out in the third, and Jackie Conway singled him in with the game-winning RBI.

After one out in the fourth, Peede ripped a shot over the fence in left field for a 2-0 Charger lead.

The Chargers plated three more runs in the sixth to put the game out of reach. Gene Johnson reached first on an error, went to second on a single by Peede and scored on hit by Curt Tucker. Tony McLawhorn lofted sacrifice fly to drive in courtesy runner Jesse Hooker, and Tucker scored on an RBI single by Ty Little.

Ayden-Grifton plated its final run in the seventh, as Wesley Hardee walked, stole second and scored on a fielder's choice by Eddie Brown.

"Their pitcher (Alfred Braxton) did a good job of keeping our boys off stride," Ross said. "We had the one big inning that put us over the hump."

North Pitt, meanwhile, left runners in scoring position in both the first and second innings. Jarvis Massenburg was hit by Peede with the first pitch of the game. Lee Eakes drew a base on balls, and both runners advanced when McLawhorn attempted to pick Massenburg off second. After one out, Scott Rawls lofted a fly ball to center, but Massenburg left third before the catch to give the Chargers an inning-ending double play.

After two out in the second, Alfred Braxton struck out but reached first on a passed ball. Chuck Doak singled, and both runners took an extra base when Hardee bobbled the ball in center. But Peede settled down to strike out Billy Warren to end the rally.

In the seventh, Peede recorded two strikeouts but then walked Doak and Warren. Johnson went to the mound and got Massenburg to ground out to end the game.

"Braxton did a good job pitching," North Pitt Coach Doug Warren said. "We just didn't do the job at the plate. We had men on second and third and didn't get them in."

The Panthers slipped to 1-10 in the conference and 4-14 overall.

Patrick's Three-Hitter Powers Conley

HAVELOCK — Freshman Bronswell Patrick struck out 10 and hurled a three-hitter as the Vikings of D.H. Conley claimed a playoff berth with a 4-2 victory over Havelock Tuesday in Coastal 3-A baseball action.

D.H. Conley improved its record to 6-4 in the Coastal Conference and 18-5 overall. North Lenoir, meanwhile, defeated West Carteret to give the Vikings sole possession of second place.

Paul Hill ripped his fourth homer of the season, a two-run shot in the fifth, to claim the game-winning RBI.

Havelock jumped out to a 2-0 lead in the first, but Patrick settled down to claim his eighth victory in nine decisions.

Conley trimmed the margin in the fourth when Todd Cochran singled, took second and third on passed balls and scored on a wild pitch.

In the fifth, Jody Vines walked before Hill blasted the ball over the fence in left field for a 3-2 Conley lead.

Patrick pitched out of trouble twice in the late stages of the game. In the fourth, errors by Shane Adams and Vines put runners on first and second with no outs. Eric Panknin grounded into a double play, and Patrick recorded the third out on a pop fly.

Then in the fifth, Jamie Franks reached first on another error by Vines, and Arnold Rivenbark bunted a single past the infield to move Franks to third. Rivenbark stole second, and the Rams sent the top of their lineup to the plate. Patrick struck out leadoff hitter Jeff Peay on three pitches, then retired Pete Johnson on four tosses. David Currie popped out to end the threat.

The Vikings added an insurance run in the seventh when Ken Hadnott singled after one out, pinch runner Amzie Hoffner went to third on a pickoff attempt and Steve Mills ripped an RBI single.

Royals Break Slump

By The Associated Press
Sooner or later, the Kansas City Royals were bound to break out of it. They finally did.

Frank White, George Brett and Jim Sundberg hit home runs in the fourth inning Tuesday night to carry the Royals over the Baltimore Orioles 5-3. Kansas City scored all five of its runs in the fourth, the team's biggest inning of the season.

"We're starting to hit, starting to get the long ball and also getting good pitching," Kansas City Manager Dick Howser said. "We're a better hitting club than we've shown. We finally got some production from our home run guys, and I hope we can keep it up."

The Royals had been mired in a season-long slump until they met the Orioles. The victim of the long-ball assault was Baltimore starter Scott McGregor, who slipped to 1-4.

"My biggest concern right now is the starting pitching," Orioles Manager Joe Altobelli said after the visiting Royals swept the two-game series. "Our bullpen seems to be doing a pretty good job, but we need a lift from our starters."

In other American League games, Seattle blanked Boston 5-0, Toronto tripped California 6-3, Detroit beat Texas 4-1, New York popped Minnesota 10-7, Chicago nipped Cleveland 2-1 and Oakland downed Milwaukee 6-3.

White hit his sixth home run of the season to lead off the fourth. Brett then followed with his fourth homer. Steve Balboni and Darryl Motley rapped one-out singles before Sundberg drilled his second home run.

Mark Gubicza, 1-2, went six innings before leaving when his left leg stiffened up. He was hit in the left thigh by Rich Dauer's line drive in the second inning.

Dan Quisenberry got the final three outs for his fifth save.

The Orioles scored in the first inning on a sacrifice fly by Cal Ripken and closed the gap to 5-3 in the fifth on a two-run double by Eddie Murray.

Mariners 5, Red Sox 0
Mike Moore scattered seven hits for his fourth career shutout, and first since August 1983.

Visiting Seattle staked Moore, 4-3, to a 4-0 lead after two innings. Alvin

Davis and Steve Henderson had RBI singles in the first, and Phil Bradley had a run-scoring single and Al Cowens delivered an RBI double in the second.

The Mariners chased Boston starter Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, 4-2, in the third inning. Bradley and Spike Owen each had three singles as the Mariners finished with 14 hits.

Bowa's Hits Save Job, Lead Cubs' Win

By The Associated Press
And the new starting shortstop for the Chicago Cubs is...the old starting shortstop, Larry Bowa.

The 39-year-old veteran has won, for now, his fight with 22-year-old Shawon Dunston for the regular role. Bowa had two hits and drove in two runs as the Cubs defeated the Los Angeles Dodgers 8-3 Tuesday night.

After the game, the Cubs announced that Dunston, struggling with a .194 average and nine errors in the field, had been demoted to their AAA farm club in Des Moines.

"I was just happy to play and contribute," said Bowa, who raised his average to .286 (6-for-21). "I got an opportunity tonight and came through."

"Shawon has had a lot of instruction while he has been here. Unfortunately, we might have jammed too much at him," said Cubs president and general manager Dallas Green. "We just felt it was time for him to go down and play and have fun and get his offense together."

"Anytime you make a decision like that, you hope it works out and lasts forever. But we're baseball people, and we recognize a 21-year-old can't recognize game situations that a seasoned veteran can."

In other National League games, San Diego stopped St. Louis 6-2, New York edged Atlanta 3-1, San Francisco topped Pittsburgh 3-1, Philadelphia beat Cincinnati 7-1, and Houston romped over Montreal 10-0.

Trailing 2-1, Chicago sent 10 men to the plate in the second inning against Fernando Valenzuela, 3-4, Valenzuela, who had wild-pitched Gary Matthews home from third in the first inning, issued bases-loaded walks to Ryne Sandberg and Keith Moreland after Chicago starter Rick Sutcliffe's RBI single.

An error by Dodger shortstop Mariano Duncan brought the fourth run home.

Moreland, who also had two hits, felt the Cubs' offense was overdue. "We've been winning games with pitching. The guys are just starting to have fun again offensively," he said.

Sutcliffe, 5-3, gave up six hits and four walks, striking out five, in his fourth complete-game victory of the season.

"I'm happier with the way I swung the bat than I am with my pitching," Sutcliffe said.

Padres 6, Cardinals 2
"I'm not as good as that 7-0 record," said Andy Hawkins after pitching five innings to gain the victory. "I'm not making many good pitches. I'm very hittable but I've got guys back there who can make the plays."

Hawkins gave up five hits, including homers to Andy Van Slyke and Darrell Porter, before departing in the sixth. Mark Thurmond earned his first save with four innings of two-hit relief.

Hawkins benefited from a three-run homer by Kevin McReynolds. After getting off to a slow start this year, McReynolds has hit in nine consecutive games, driving in 10 runs over that stretch.

Mets 3, Braves 1
Roger McDowell was perfect in relief, pitching 4 2-3 innings and combining with Calvin Schiraldi on a three-hitter as New York won for the seventh time in eight games.

McDowell, 3-1, replaced Schiraldi after Claudell Washington's homer. Schiraldi left with pain in his right foot, which was struck by Washington's infield single in the first inning. The Mets, winners of 11 of their last 15 games, learned after the game that Schiraldi's toe had been broken by the smash.

The Braves lost their sixth game in seven while Rick Mahler lost his second straight game after a 7-0 start. And Dale Murphy lost his hitting streak of 15 games. He went 0-for-4, and struck out twice.

Washington's second homer of the year — both against the Mets — provided the Braves with only their second run in 53 innings.

Giants 3, Pirates 1
Mike Krukow tossed a five-hitter, clubbed two doubles and drove in two runs to lead the Giants. Krukow, 3-2, lowered his earned run average to 1.45 in pitching his third complete game of the season.

Their pitchers have four RBIs in the Giants' last two games. Jim Gott hit two homers Sunday.

Pittsburgh Manager Chuck Tanner expressed concern over Larry McWilliams, 3-3, who hit two batters in a three-run second inning. "His arm felt a little stiff. He thought it would go away, but it didn't. We're going to have him checked out when we get home," Tanner said.

The Pirates had been shut out in three of their last four games but scored Tuesday on Lee Mazzilli's first homer of the year.

Phillies 7, Reds 1
Charles Hudson gave up just one hit over eight innings, but left for a pinch hitter in the top of the ninth with Philadelphia ahead 4-0. "Anytime you've got a shutout going — not only me, but any pitcher would be upset," Hudson said. "But I'm not going to cause any bad vibes. I'll just leave it at that."

It was Hudson's first start of the season after 12 relief appearances. Don Carman finished, allowing two hits and a run.

Juan Samuel, who drove in five runs, and Mike Schmidt belted home runs, helping Philadelphia end a seven-game losing streak. Samuel's was a three-run homer in the fifth; Schmidt led off the sixth with his second homer in two games.

Astros 10, Expos 0
Seventeen hits — four by Craig Reynolds and three each by Jerry Mumphrey and Bill Doran — eight walks, and three Montreal errors buried the Expos. Mumphrey drove in three runs, while Reynolds knocked in two.

Rookie Ron Mathis combined with Mark Ross, who had been called up from the Pacific Coast League earlier in the day, to seven-hit the Expos and help the Astros to their fourth straight victory. The Astros are second in the NL West, 1 1/2 games behind the Padres.

Presbyterian Tops Putt

Farmville Presbyterian defeated previously unbeaten Immanuel Baptist and Jarvis Memorial edged First Wesleyan in Church League Putt-Putt action Tuesday.

Farmville, 2-1, was led by Thomas Lewis with a 65 and Gary Joyner with a 66. Medalist Sandy Williams, who shot an 11-under 61, was the top for Immanuel.

Jarvis, 1-2, beat First Wesleyan by five strokes. Mark Eakes, Robbie Moye, Jerry Jolley and Jon Jolley all shot two-under 70s for Jarvis. David Crane at 65 and Phil Martin at 67 were the leaders for Wesleyan.

Kansas City Wins...

more like a cleanup hitter. Garcia, who went 8-for-13 with seven runs batted in during a weekend sweep of Seattle, cracked a two-run single with two outs in the sixth to break a 3-3 tie.

Jesse Barfield hit his sixth home run for the Blue Jays, while Lloyd Moseby snapped an 0-for-19 slump with a two-run triple.

Doyle Alexander, 5-1, pitched 6 2-3 innings for the victory. Bill Caudill worked the ninth for his seventh save.

Rod Carew and Bobby Grich homered for visiting California. It was Carew's first homer since May 22 of last season.

Tigers 4, Rangers 1
Lou Whitaker raised his AL-leading average to .366 by going 3-for-4, including his second home run in two games.

Whitaker singled in the first inning, went to second on a balk by Charlie Hough, 3-2, and scored on a single by Lance Parrish. Whitaker drilled a two-run homer in the second.

Milt Wilcox, 1-1, went five innings for the victory. Willie Hernandez pitched the ninth for his ninth save in nine opportunities this season.

Texas stranded 12 runners at Tiger Stadium.

Yankees 10, Twins 7
Ken Griffey's grand-slam home run capped a six-run rally in the seventh inning that again led New York over visiting Minnesota.

The Yankees trailed 7-3 going into the seventh, but relievers Pete Filson, Rick Lysander and Curt Wardle walked four straight batters in losing the lead and the game.

A one-out single by Willie Randolph and walks to Don Mattingly and Dave Winfield loaded the bases against Filson, and Lysander walked Don Baylor to force home a run. Wardle, 0-2, walked Butch Wynegar to force in another and Griffey then hit the first pitch into the right-field seats for his third homer of the season.

Reliever Brian Fisher worked 3 2-3 innings to win his first major-league decision.

On Monday night, Mattingly had hit a three-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the ninth to give New York a 9-8 triumph over the Twins, who had led 8-0.

White Sox 2, Indians 1
Greg Walker's two-out single in the eighth inning drove home Ozzie Guillen from second base to lead host Chicago to victory.

The two were chosen to represent North Carolina in conjunction with Operation Raleigh, a four-year around-the-world expedition and youth leadership development project involving around 5,000 youth in scientific and community service projects.

'Cosby Show' Leads Nielsen Ratings; 'Dallas' Is Second

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — CBS found some reassurance for its move creating a "Saturday Night Movie" slot next season in the success of a rival network's rare Saturday film and the failure of its own Wednesday feature.

ABC's Saturday movie, "Letting Go," starring John Ritter, performed respectably in the A.C. Nielsen Co. ratings released Tuesday, finishing 26th and prompting Michael Eisenberg, CBS' director of audience measurement, to say: "this portends well for the future."

However, the recent past belonged to NBC, which won the ratings race last week with its "Cosby Show," once again topping the Nielsen charts. CBS was second and ABC third.

Next season, CBS moves its low-rated Wednesday night movie to Saturday night. This past season, network viewing on Saturday fell off more than any other night, a decline network officials attribute to the popularity of movie rentals for videocassette recorders.

Last week, another sports-oriented film failed on Wednesday. CBS' "Going for the Gold: The Bill Johnson Story," about America's Olympic gold-medal skier, ranked 61st. The week before, boxer Boom Boom Mancini's "Heart of a Champion" finished 52nd.

"Sports movies are not usually successful," said Eisenberg. But the genre may work better on Saturday night next season. CBS has said it will try to capture male viewers with more action-oriented films, most of which will be TV movies.

CBS announced recently that it would burn off its inventory of theatrical films and not purchase any new titles because previous cable exposure has limited their effectiveness on network TV.

"Why spend money on a product that millions of viewers have seen already?" said Eisenberg.

On a selective basis, however, theatrical films can be successful, as the networks found out with NBC's "First Blood," starring Sylvester Stallone. CBS researchers had forecast "First Blood" to come in third in its timeslot, but, instead, it beat CBS' "Malice in Wonderland," with Elizabeth Taylor, and the first part of "Death in California," starring Cheryl Ladd, Sunday night.

"First Blood," making its network debut after an extensive cable run, ranked fifth for the week of May 6-12 and served as successful counter-programming.

"The (female) audience was split, and, consequently, the odd man out was the male-appeal movie that won," said Eisenberg.

With the unexpected boost from Stallone and the predictable No. 1 showing of "The Cosby Show," NBC won its third consecutive week since the end of the regular season, closing the gap with CBS for the 52-week September-through-September season.

NBC finished the week with a 14.6 rating to CBS' 13.8 and ABC's 13.0. When the 30-week prime-time season ended April 21, CBS had averaged a 16.9 rating to NBC's 16.2 and ABC's 15.4. Three weeks later, CBS leads with a 16.6 to NBC's 16.1 and ABC's 15.2.

A rating measures the percentage, on average, of the nation's 84.9 million TV homes tuned to a given minute of programming.

NBC is leading the May sweeps, the period when ratings for local stations are measured and used to set advertising rates for the next few months.

The rest of the Top 10 was predictable, led by NBC's comedies and the popular prime-time series on CBS and ABC.

"The Cosby Show," with its final original episode this season, had a 24.1 rating, followed by 22.6 for CBS' "Dallas," a 21.9 for ABC's "Dynasty" and 20.9 for NBC's "Family Ties."

"First Blood" was fifth, NBC's "Remington Steele," sixth, CBS' "Knots Landing, seventh, CBS' "Falcon Crest," eighth, ABC's "Hotel," ninth, and "Malice in Wonderland," 10th.

The two lowest-rated shows were NBC's Sunday night kids entry, which is returning next season, "Silver Spoons," 69th, and "Punky Brewster," 68th. The warm weather affects most adversely the earliest hour of prime time. Even CBS' popular "60 Minutes," dropped to 22nd on Sunday, Mother's Day.

The rest of the bottom five included canceled series, NBC's "Best Times," ABC's "Street Hawk" and ABC's "Me and Mom" — all tied for 65th.

Charleston Author Wins Annual Award For Novel

NEW YORK (AP) — Josephine Humphreys has received an award from the writers' group PEN for her "Dreams of Sleep," chosen as the best first novel published in 1984.

The author from Charleston, S.C., was given the $7,500 Ernest Hemingway Foundation Award at a reception Monday night.

The judges also awarded special citations to Kent Haruf of Yuma, Colo., for "The Tie that Binds," and Douglas Unger of Syracuse for "Leaving the Land."

The awards, presented by the American branch of PEN, the world organization of writers, are for excellence in fiction and translation.

Other winners were:

Poetry translation — Seamus Heaney, for "Sweeney Astray."

Renato Poggioli award for translation from Italian — Ann Snodgrass of Salt Lake City, for "Fifteen Poems of Vittorio Sereni."

Armstrong Refuses To Grant Interview For 'Spaceflight'

By FRED ROTHENBERG
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Spaceflight" had about as much success interviewing the man in the moon as it did interviewing the man on the moon.

Neil Armstrong, he of "one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind" fame, declined to be interviewed for public television's four-part "Spaceflight" that continues with the second installment tonight.

"The irony is that the first human to walk on another celestial body was such a recluse," said Blaine Baggett, producer-writer for this magnificent series. "He's the reincarnation of Charles Lindbergh. He always was."

In trying to land Armstrong, Baggett spoke to him and they exchanged letters — but to no avail. "He says he doesn't like the interview process," Baggett said. "He didn't want to be another interview."

Baggett said money was never an issue with Armstrong, just privacy. In fact, nobody was paid for on-camera appearances, the producer said.

The other space-program participant who turned camera-shy was James Webb, NASA's former chief administrator who helped engineer the public relations campaign that turned the original Mercury astronauts into larger-than-life heroes. "He's happy with his place in history," said Baggett. "His attitude was, 'Why should I upset the applecart?'"

Of all the astronauts who were interviewed — and that group included John Glenn, Alan Shepard and Sally Ride — Baggett was most impressed with Pete Conrad.

"He'd be the one I'd most want to go into space with," he said. "You really get a sense of his competence." Conrad repaired Skylab and helped pilot an ailing Apollo 12 — it was struck by lightning — to the moon and back.

Conrad also comes across as one of the most engaging personalities. In the first episode, he used the term "head shrinkers" to describe the psychological probers who helped select the original seven astronauts.

"I don't think these guys knew a stick from a rudder or space from a submarine," Conrad said. "And I began to play games with them. So that end result was that I was not one of the chosen seven."

Since the 1960s, Americans have had a hot-and-cold love affair with space. Many turned off to the NASA program after the moon landings, and the dramatic re-creations, "The Right Stuff" movie and the "Space" miniseries, fizzled, even with massive promotional campaigns.

Despite that poor track record, "Spaceflight," which began production three years ago, actually fills a void. "The Right Stuff" ended with the Mercury astronauts; James Michener's "Space" was fiction.

"Is the glass half empty or half full?" Baggett asked about being the third stage of the space projects. "They'll either have whet the appetites, or people will say they've had enough."

As public TV's former creative director, Baggett put together the show "A Dream Called Public Television," which renewed his desire to return to TV production full time. For his first venture, he wanted "something that was popular, memorable, important — and could be done cheaply."

He remembered loving Tom Wolfe's book, "The Right Stuff," and thought the subject was ripe for a thorough TV investigation. He discovered that NASA's footage was plentiful and spectacular, "and when I realized it was available for the cost of duplication, I said 'Eureka!'"

As always, financing was harder to find.

WYES, the public TV station in New Orleans, provided a $5,000 grant and PBS matched it. The money was supposed to go for a 30-page proposal, but Baggett used it instead to shoot some interviews.

"I thought a sample reel would gain momentum and wouldn't just collect dust," he said. Eventually,

Du Pont financed the project. Baggett estimates the production cost $600,000. (CBS' 13-part "Space" cost $32 million.)

Baggett obtained the footage from various sources. Film of Robert Goddard's 1926 rocket launch was in the National Archives in Washington. World War II color footage of the Germans' V-2 rocket launches was growing musty with other German military film at the Norton Air Force Base in San Bernardino, Calif.

Baggett also badgered NASA officials into declassifying some NASA footage just for the program. Soviet film, never seen on American TV, came from a Russian contact at the Soviet Embassy in Washington.

As narrator, Martin Sheen helps pull everything together with a authoritative, yet understated reading. Baggett remembered him for his voice-over on "Apocalypse Now."

"Sheen worked out real well," said Baggett. "He's a little mystical himself. He has a real cosmic view of life."

Census Notes Smaller Family Sizes In U.S.

By RANDOLPHE SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average American household contained fewer people than ever last year, while families with children increasingly were headed by a single parent, the Census Bureau says.

The decline in the size of the household, from an average 2.73 persons in 1983 to 2.71 in 1984, resumes a trend which had been strongly under way since the 1960s.

Also reflecting a dramatic post-1960s phenomenon, more than one in four families with children last year were headed by one parent, the Census Bureau said Tuesday.

The maturing of the post-World War II Baby Boom generation helped spur the decline in overall family size, with many young people setting up households on their own and young couples postponing children to pursue education and careers.

At the same time, more and more elderly people continue to maintain households on their own rather than moving in with their children, a trend that also helps lower the average size of households.

Nonetheless, after falling from 2.76 in 1980 to 2.73 in 1981, the per-household average held steady until last year's drop.

Some sociologists speculated that family size had evened out because weak economic conditions discouraged the formation of new households. Thus improvements in the economy and increased public confidence may have led to the resumed decline found in the new study.

While household size has declined most steadily since the 1960s, the trend has been a way of life throughout the nation's history.

The first census in 1790 found an average of 5.79 persons per household. That slipped below five persons by 1890 and below four in 1940, after which it leveled off, fluctuating only slightly until the average reached 3.34 in 1961 and then began falling steadily.

But as household size has fallen, the number of one-parent situations has shot upward. Single-parent family groups constitute 25.7 percent of all family situations, up from 21 percent in 1980 and only 12.9 percent in 1970, the bureau reported.

Prime reasons for this change were cited as premarital birth separation and divorce.

While the increase occurred among both black and white families, blacks reported a considerably higher ratio of one-parent situations totaling nearly three out of five families in 1984, Census officials said.

The new study found 59.2 percent

Reagan Moves On With Tax Package

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is continuing to work on a tax overhaul plan to be presented to Congress next week, despite a suggestion by Senate Majority Leader Robert J. Dole that he wait until the House has approved a budget plan for 1986.

Reagan huddled with Secretary of the Treasury James A. Baker III and their aides Tuesday, but Albert R. Brashear, a deputy White House press secretary, said no decisions were made. Brashear said the meetings would continue today.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said that after an overhaul plan is agreed upon, it will take three or four days for the Treasury Department to prepare the papers for use in presenting the plan to Congress and the public.

Speakes has said the president is aiming for an announcement next week.

"A number of options and opportunities are under consideration," he said. "A speech is certainly an option, either on television or to a group."

But Dole, speaking to reporters on Capitol Hill, urged a delay in the presentation, saying, "Once the tax thing is out, all the focus is going to shift" and "it will take the pressure off" reducing spending as a means to cut the deficit. The House is working on a 1986 federal budget blueprint this week and leaders were hoping for a full floor debate by next week.

Dole also said, however, "I think if the president makes an all-out campaign, it will have a chance (of passage this year) if we stay in through December," Dole said. "This would put it in the possible category... not impossible."

Reagan's plan is expected to be patterned on the recommendations made by the Treasury Department last November, when the agency was headed by Donald T. Regan, now the White House chief of staff.

That plan would reduce tax rates and boost the personal exemption while taking away or limiting many deductions. For business, the November plan would mean lower rates but loss of two major investment incentives: generous depreciation allowances and the investment tax credit.

The president has approved a plan that would double the personal income tax exemption to $2,000, lower individual tax rates and eliminate many popular deductions and tax breaks, The Washington Post reported in today's editions. The Reagan-backed proposal includes a three-tiered individual income tax rate structure and a minimum tax for corporations, it said.

Reagan will launch his tax plan with a nationally televised address on Monday, the newspaper said.

Regan has said the main changes from the November plan to Reagan's proposal would be in the areas of capital gains, charitable contributions and business depreciation. The November plan would repeal the preferential tax rate for capital gains, allow itemizers to deduct only the portion of contributions that exceed 2 percent of income and end the special charitable deduction for people who do not itemize deductions.

Congressional sources have said the new administration plan also would back away from the proposal to repeal special tax breaks for the oil industry. Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., whose Ways and Means Committee must originate tax legislation in Congress, told reporters "if what I read in the papers is true, he (Reagan) is going to lose some votes" by allowing those and similar tax breaks to remain in the law.

Phony Report Cards Done On Home Computer

GONZALES, La. (AP) — Two 11th-graders who used a home computer to produce fake report cards probably were planning to go into business selling the phony documents, their high school principal said.

"They copied the exact form and then changed the grades," East Ascension High School principal Joel Meredith said Tuesday. "On their computer, they could do that," he said.

Aside from the elevated grades and a slight difference in the color of the ink on the home printer, the forgeries were identical, he said.

"In my opinion, they were not selling them. But I think they were getting ready to start," Meredith said. "If they did sell them, they only sold two or three."

Demonstration

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Police arrested 29 people, including four members of the European Parliament, for demonstrating in front of the South African Embassy, authorities said.

Police said the demonstrators were taken into custody Monday after they refused to disperse, and were released after identification checks.

The demonstrators tried unsuccessfully to deliver a petition to the South African ambassador expressing support for 16 leaders of the United Democratic Front who are facing trial in South Africa, police said. The front is a multi-racial coalition opposed to the apartheid policies of South Africa's white-minority government.

Copeland Praised

LONDON (AP) — Violinist Isaac Stern, performing at Britain's first American Festival of the arts, praised the music of Brooklyn-born Aaron Copeland, whom he called "the most American of American composers."

"There was a time a few years ago in a festival of contemporary music when you couldn't tell if the work came from Germany, Japan, the United States, France, or Lower Slavonia," Stern, 64, said during a rehearsal break.

But the Russian-born musician said, "You can smell the earth of America" in music by Copeland, whose violin sonata he performed Monday night.

More American Babies Are 'Wanted'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An increasing share of babies born in this country are the result of "wanted" pregnancies, although parents continue to have problems scheduling the new arrivals, a new government report indicates.

The proportion of births to married women "that resulted from unwanted pregnancies declined significantly and, of course, the proportion of births that were wanted rose correspondingly" between 1973 and 1982, the National Center for Health Statistics reported Monday.

The center said unwanted pregnancies led to 10 percent of births to married or formerly married women in 1982, down from 14 percent in the earlier study.

Wanted births rose correspondingly from 86 percent to 90 percent, the study said. However, during the same period the share of wanted but mistimed births climbed slightly, from 26 percent to 28 percent, the agency said.

The agency, a part of the Department of Health and Human Services, defined a "wanted" birth as one in which the mother intended to have a child at some point, although not necessarily at the time the conception occurred.

"It is important to emphasize that an 'unwanted birth' is not necessarily an 'unwanted child,' many children whose conceptions were not wanted nonetheless become cherished members of their families," noted the study by William F. Pratt and Marjorie C. Horn.

The 1982 study showed that the proportion of unwanted births increased as women aged. For example, in the 20-to-34 age groups unwanted children made up 6 percent to 8 percent of all pregnancies.

However, they constituted 10 percent of births to women aged 35-to-39 and 13 percent in the 40-to-44 age group.

"The notably higher proportions of unwanted and mistimed births to formerly married women suggest the possibility that unplanned childbearing is a factor in the instability of some marriages," the study suggested.

While the study did not seek to ascribe reasons for the increasing share of "wanted" births, the change has occurred at a time when sterilization has moved into first place as a method of birth control.

Since sterilization is virtually 100 percent effective, it removes the possibility of unwanted births for couples who want no more children.

However, those merely postponing families cannot choose sterilization because it is irreversible, and must make do with other methods.

Fears about side effects of the birth control pill and intrauterine devices have led to a decline in the use of those more effective methods by many people in recent years.

Thus, the study by Pratt and Ms. Horn commented, the increase in mistimed births "may be due in large measure to the trend toward greater use of barrier methods of contraception which are generally less effective than the pill or IUD."

Soviet Republic Gets Cold Snap

MOSCOW (AP) — A cold snap in Kazakhstan that sent temperatures plunging as much as 70 degrees over a few hours has blanketed the southern republic with snow and damaged cattle, grain and vegetable crops, Soviet media reported.

The official news agency Tass on Monday issued a brief account of the sudden change in weather on its Russian language service, and the evening news program Time showed fields of tomato plants poking through the snow cover.

Tass said as much as 4 inches of snow fell in places and that nearly the entire republic was hit by the mass of cold air that dropped temperatures from 81 degrees to 10 degrees in just a few hours.

Masses of cold air swept south from the Kara Sea were responsible for the cold snap, Tass said.

That's Stretching It

On this day in 1940, the first nylon stockings were put on sale. The first nylon fibers were made of chemicals distilled from coal, air and water. Nylon was considered a revolutionary material because it was strong, tough and elastic. During World War II, the United States Army replaced its silk parachutes with ones made of nylon. Today nylon is found in products ranging from dresses, underwear, carpets and upholstery to brushes, surgical thread, machine parts, and fishing line.

DO YOU KNOW — What major chemical company was the first to produce nylon commercially?

TUESDAY'S ANSWER — Sacajawea served as Lewis and Clark's interpreter and guide.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes May 2-8.

House

THE RECORD — The House voted, 245 for and 184 against, in favor of the softer of two proposed investigations of the accuracy of the Congressional Record, the publication that is supposed to chronicle all that happens on the House and Senate floors.

Democrats prevailed as the vote referred the matter to the Administration Committee, rather than to the Rule Committee as House Republicans has requested.

If a member does not deliver a speech but inserts written comments into the Record, his remarks are supposed to be typographically distinguished from words actually uttered.

Partly at issue on this vote was the fact that written material recently inserted by two Democratic members was incorrectly identified as speeches actually delivered.

Republicans wanted the Rules Committee to look into that discrepancy as well as into the overall integrity of the Congressional Record.

Thomas Foley, D-Wash., who favored sending the matter to the Administration Committee for a less-exhaustive probe, attributed the misidentification of the Democrats' written comments to clerical error.

Charles Pashayan, R-Calif., said the Record must be made a more accurate chronicle of floor proceedings because judges and historians rely on it to determine legislative intent.

Members voting no favored the tougher of two proposed investigations of the Congressional Record.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Charles Whitley, D-3; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7, and W.G. Hefner, D-8.

Those voting no were William Cobey, R-4; Howard Coble, R-6; Alex McMillan, R-9; James Broyhill, R-10, and Bill Hendon, R-11.

Senate

PAY CUT — By a tie vote of 49-49, the Senate rejected an amendment to slash the salaries of senators and House members by ten percent. The proposed $7,510 cut would have lowered lawmakers' pay to $67,590.

Members of Congress in January received a 3.5 percent pay hike, following a 1984 increase of four percent.

This amendment was offered to the congressional budget blueprint (S Con Res 32) for fiscal years 1986-88. The measure, which remained under debate, sets spending priorities and limitations but stops short of releasing federal outlays.

Congress later in the year will implement the blueprint when it

Siege Ends

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — About 30 young anarchists have ended a five-day takeover of Athens University's chemistry school after 16 of their supporters were released from custody.

An Athens district attorney ordered the release of 16 people detained on charges of causing injuries and damaging property in clashes with police last week.

Anarchists occupied the chemistry building Thursday after police banned a planned anti-government march. They barricaded the street in front of the building with filing cabinets and desks, threatened to blow up the five-story building, and hurled fire bombs and stones at police riot officers.

Police said more than 40 officers were injured during the occupation.

takes up authorization and appropriation bills.

Jesse Helms, R-N.C., who sponsored the pay cut, said "I hear constantly in this chamber and across the country that the burden of reducing the federal deficit must be shared by all."

Opponent Carl Levin, D-Mich., said: "The goal of shared sacrifice is to be fair, not punitive, and should not be exploited for political or partisan gain."

Senators voting no were opposed to cutting congressional salaries by ten percent.

North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms voted yes. Sen. John East did not vote.

DEFENSE — By a vote of 48 for and 51 against, the Senate refused to kill an amendment in behalf of lower defense spending than President Reagan wants in fiscal 1986-88. This occurred during debate on the congressional budget blueprint (above).

The vote sustained a proposal that defense outlays be allowed to rise only to keep pace with inflation. By contrast, Reagan has recommended a 1986 defense hike equivalent to the inflation rate plus three percent, down from the six percent "real growth" hike he originally requested.

The vote would permit 1986 defense outlays of $273.1 billion.

Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., who voted to kill the amendment, said senators should "have the courage and have the wisdom not to cut the defense budget below a three percent growth. We need that growth to keep this country free."

Disagreeing, Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., said "any nation that is a debtor nation, carrying a $200 billion budget deficit and a $140 billion trade deficit, is not a secure nation in any sense of the word."

Senators voting no favored the lesser of two proposed hikes in defense spending.

North Carolina Sen. Jesse Helms voted yes. Sen. John East did not vote.

HIKES — The Senate voted, 80 for and 18 against, to permit full cost-of-living adjustments (COLAs) in fiscal 1986-88 for retired civil service and congressional employees, military retirees, recipients of black lung and veterans compensation benefits, and all other federal pensioners.

The vote is expected to increase deficit spending by $11 billion over three years. It occurred during debate on the congressional budget blueprint (above).

President Reagan had requested lower COLAs — of about two percent — for Social Security recipients and all other federal pensioners. In a previous vote, the Senate restored full Social Security COLAs, at a projected cost of $22 billion over three years.

Senators voting yes favored full cost-of-living adjustments for federal pensioners.

North Carolina Sen. Helms voted no. Sen. East did not vote.

LABELING — The Senate rejected, 27 for and 68 against, an amendment requiring that artificially sweetened soft drinks be labeled to tell consumers how much aspartame, or NutraSweet, they might contain.

The vote occurred during debate on S 484, which was later passed and sent to the House.

Sponsor Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, said: "I am just saying tell the people how much (aspartame) is in the can. What is so terrible about that and why so much lobbying is taking place against it is beyond my comprehension."

Opponent Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said it is up to the Food and Drug Administration, not the Congress, to set labeling requirements for products containing aspartame.

Senators voting yes favored labeling to show the quantity of aspartame contained in soft drinks.

North Carolina Sen. Helms voted no. Sen. East did not vote.

Coal Industry Pollutants Kill Forests

By LARRY GERBER
Associated Press Writer
MOST, Czechoslovakia (AP) — The view from the hill is one of a whole town razed for an open-pit mine, a huge factory belching smoke as it converts coal to chemicals, and on the horizon a dead forest — an environmentalist's nightmare.

Movie makers come to Most from around the world when they need scenes of devastation.

Coal, which has been Czechoslovakia's prime energy source for centuries, has killed the woods and polluted the air of northern Bohemia.

The hilltop view takes in a dilemma that confronts not only this region, but the rest of Europe and North America, where coal-fired power plants and other industries are believed to cause acid rain, dirty air and foul water.

The destruction and subsequent protests have prompted Czechoslovakia's communist authorities to rethink their energy policy, and to plan on replacing coal by nuclear and other power sources. But much of the damage will not be repaired.

This town of 60,000, about 45 miles northwest of Prague, was torn down so strip miners could get at the veins of soft coal beneath the picturesque buildings. A dozen of them still stand, used by miners or deserted.

Over the past 20 years, its people have been moved into gray apartment blocks across the highway. Ten years ago the 16th-century Gothic church, a 12,000-ton architectural treasure, was rolled nearly a half-mile away. It now sits on the edge of the coal pit, still on its moving frame, unused.

Down the road, the Chemopetrol factory turns the coal into chemicals, rubber and other products. Germany started construction of the plant during its occupation of the region in World War II, and for years the plant's stacks have spewed smoke into the sky.

Just a 20-minute drive away, where the Krusne Hory (Ore Mountains) rise to the East German border, fir trees are skeletons on the slopes.

A people who prize their woods and mountain cottages are alarmed.

The Charter 77 dissident group in 1983 warned of "an ecological catastrophe" and cited an unpublished report by the Academy of Sciences predicting that 45 percent to 60 percent of the forests in this thickly wooded country would be dead or damaged by the end of the century.

But officially sanctioned groups also have been calling for action, and hardly a day passes without an environmental horror tale in the state-run press.

A group called Brontosaurus is probably the nation's most influential environmentalist movement.

It is affiliated with the 1.5 million-member Socialist Youth Union and its influence is steadily increasing.

The name comes from the group's motto: "Brontosaurus wouldn't have survived it," a warning that people may go the way of the dinosaurs if they don't clean up the environment.

Dr. Zdenek Badura wrote in the newspaper Ostrava Vecernik that the deteriorating environment could be affecting people's health.

"New viral illnesses are emerging," he said. "The activity of viruses has grown, and they are assuming new forms unknown to us."

Researchers Say Genes Borrow Some Functions

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The genes that govern the structure and function of all cells may be able to make evolutionary shortcuts in developing new functions by borrowing parts of other genes, according to reports published today.
Researchers say they have found evidence supporting a theory that nature allows genes to adopt entire segments from other genes and assemble the fragments in different order so the combination performs new functions.
The work by Texas scientists, reported in the journal Science, appears to support a proposal by Nobel Laureate Walter Gilbert that gene segments triggering specific functions shuttle about when needed for new tasks.

part, such as a human being.
A decade ago, scientists discovered that functional segments of DNA code within genes were separated by long chains of genetic material that had no apparent function, so-called "nonsense DNA."
Gilbert proposed that when genes break, either naturally or accidentally, they snap in the nonsense part, leaving the functional segments intact. These segments, then, are ready to be scooped up and spliced into other genes when needed.
But proof that genes could acquire such segments in that way instead of having them custom-made over time has been lacking until now.
Researchers at the University of Texas Health Science Center in Dallas said in two reports that they had such evidence in the form of a gene that makes a protein receptor that resides on the surface of some cells.

This surface protein is the binding point for another one called low-density lipoprotein (LDL), a substance that carries cholesterol in the blood in a form that makes it a major factor in heart disease.
Thomas C. Sudhof, Joseph L. Goldstein, Michael S. Brown and David W. Russell found that the LDL receptor gene was a mosaic of code segments originally found in other functionally unrelated genes. These other genes include one responsible for making a blood-clotting factor and another that makes a basic component of a cell growth promoter.

Borrowing these segments to make new genes would significantly shorten the time needed for new sets of genes to evolve when compared with the traditional belief that this evolution results from many tiny mutations accumulating over many years.
Genes are segments of deoxyribonucleic acid, or DNA, the basic material of heredity, strung in a chain. The "links" in these chains, known as bases, are arranged in a code that determines the production of the protein molecules that govern the nature of living things.
Residing in the nuclei of cells, these genes trigger the production of thousands of different proteins that serve many functions in the cell and the larger organism of which it is a

New Research Says Eating Fish Is Good For The Heart

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Mothers tell children that fish is brain food, but new research suggests that it's actually heart food, a part of the diet that may help protect people from the nation's No. 1 killer.

A Dutch study found that the more fish people eat, the less likely they are to die from coronary heart disease.

"It seems justifiable to include a recommendation for one or two fish dishes a week in dietary guidelines for the prevention of coronary heart disease," the researchers wrote in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

In the United States, coronary heart disease is responsible for more than 550,000 deaths each year, more than all forms of cancer combined. The disease is due to atherosclerosis, a buildup of fatty deposits in the arteries that feed the heart.

The disease is less common in some cultures, and this has bolstered the suspicion that fish may play a role in warding off heart trouble. For instance, heart disease is rare among the Eskimos of Greenland, who eat about 14 ounces of fish a day, and in Japan, where people average about 3½ ounces of fish daily.

The latest study was conducted in the town of Zutphen by Dr. Daan Kromhout and colleagues from the University of Leiden.

They followed the health of 852 middle-aged men. About 20 percent of them ate no fish at all when the study began in 1960, and the average consumption was just over half an ounce a day.

After 20 years, 78 men had died of heart disease. Their risk seemed to be related to how much fish they ate. Those who averaged at least an ounce of fish daily were less than half as likely to die of heart disease than were those who never consumed fish.

Obesity, cigarette smoking, high blood pressure, high cholesterol levels and physical inactivity are among conditions and habits that are associated with heart trouble. However, the researchers found that none of these could explain the link they found between fish and health.

In an editorial in the journal, Dr. John A. Glomset of the University of Washington cautioned: "The study remains to be completed, however, because an important question that has yet to be answered is whether the consumption of fish also correlated, perhaps unfavorably, with mortality from cancer and other diseases."

No one knows exactly how fish could help the heart. But experts speculate that the key ingredient is fish oil, which may make blood clot more slowly and reduce fat levels in the blood.

Both fish oil and vegetable oil are polyunsaturated fatty acids, but they are not identical. A second study in the journal showed that supplements of fish oil were far more effective than vegetable oil in reducing the abnormally high blood fat levels of people with a condition known as hypertriglyceridemia.

This study was conducted at the Oregon Health Sciences University, where doctors have also shown that fish oil can reduce cholesterol levels in normal people.

The doctors said fish oil supplements must still be considered experimental, although people should try to substitute fish for meat in their diets.

"The problem of coronary heart disease is a very complex one, and the role of diet needs to be considered in its entirety, not just from the point of view of one food," said Dr. William E. Connor, one of the Oregon researchers. "One of the best diets for prevention of heart disease is low in cholesterol and saturated fat, and now I think the evidence is that such a diet can contain reasonable quantities of fish."

Cystic Fibrosis Links Traced By UNC Study

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Abnormalities responsible for cell damage in people with cystic fibrosis lie within the cells themselves and are not the result of bacterial infections or other outside influences, as some scientists had thought, a physician says.

"This may resolve a long debate over where the abnormality lies and at the same time enable our group and others to focus more closely on the real biochemical problem," said Dr. James R. Yankaskas, research assistant professor of medicine at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Yankaskas published a report on his work in the April 27 issue of The Lancet, a major British medical journal, and UNC released the study findings Thursday.

Yankaskas said his cultured cystic fibrosis cells exhibit the same irregular characteristics they would have in a patient with the disorder.

"That's important because you obviously can't test drugs in humans that might turn out to be toxic, and you don't have access in humans to the back side of cells lining the airways," he said. "If the cell didn't behave the same as they do in patients, they wouldn't be of much use to us."

In 1981, UNC scientists Michael R. Knowles, John Gatzky and Richard Boucher discovered that the respiratory tracts of patients with cystic fibrosis have a natural electrical activity that is more than twice as high as in healthy people and respond abnormally to certain drugs.

Yankaskas now has shown that isolated cystic fibrosis cells continue to display this unusual activity weeks after they have been removed from patients.

"Because the abnormalities have been preserved, we believe they are contained within the cells and are not caused by infection, inflammation or unknown factors circulating in the blood," he said.

About one in every 20 white Americans are carriers of cystic fibrosis, Yankaskas said. Until the early 1950s, infants born with cystic fibrosis had a median life expectancy of two years.

Life expectancy increased to about 24 years with the discovery that digestive enzymes from cow pancreases could be used to replace the digestive enzymes the children were unable to produce on their own.

Victims of the condition continue to die, however, from infections caused by another symptom of the disorder — overly thick and sticky mucus that clogs the lungs, trapping bacteria and viruses.

Micronesia Is Haven For Ex-Volunteers

By CHARLES J. HANLEY
Associated Press Writer
POHNPEI, Micronesia (AP) — As a straw-haired schoolgirl back home in Teutopolis, Ill., Marialice Burford had a dream.
"I was going to be a Chicago Cubs sportswriter someday," she recalled.
Then she found her South Sea island. "And my dreams all went away." There was a heaven beyond Wrigley Field after all.
For a generation now, the ageless allure of the Pacific — the jewel-like waters, the lush little islands, the languid, laughing people — has been luring Peace Corps volunteers like Marialice Burford into sinking new roots in remote old societies.

Dozens of volunteers have stayed behind after their tours of duty ended, becoming part of island life, operating businesses and practicing law, keeping taverns and advising governments, studying anthropology and writing novels.
Some liken themselves to old beachcombers, those 19th-century adventurers who counseled island chiefs on the ways of the outside world.
Today, 394 Peace Corps volunteers are assigned to the Pacific islands, 94 of them in Pohnpei, the Marshall Islands and other places in Micronesia, a U.S.-administered territory 5,000 miles from the American mainland. They work on agricultural projects, as teachers, as advisers to businesses.

ried a Bikinian, settled down on impoverished Kili, fished, harvested coconut and began long-distance lobbying of the U.S. government to get radioactive Bikini decontaminated so that its people could return home.
"Before coming out here, I wasn't aware of how my government had taken advantage of these people," said the burly Waltz.
His fight continues. He and his shy, slim wife, Heity, live in Majuro with two of their children. Two older children are at a U.S. high school.

The transplanted Americans say they miss the excitement of big cities, good bookstores and hardware stores.
"I miss McDonald's hamburgers and french fries," Marialice Eperiam, nee Burford, said with a grin.
A 29-year-old University of Missouri journalism graduate, the onetime aspirant to the baseball press box now works for the Pohnpei Congress, and she and her Pohnpeian husband have opened a liquor business.

She laughed at how she has adapted in the eight years since she arrived as a volunteer.
"I remember being amazed at all these naked kids waving at us in the bus," she said. "Now it's my two kids who are running around naked."
Whatever yearnings they have for old roots, these ex-volunteers are hooked on islands and island people.
"Out here," said Waltz, "it's people that are important. And I liked the people immediately. They're honest, sensitive to each other's feelings."

The 42-year-old Waltz does plan to move on someday — but farther out over the horizon, to distant Bikini, if it is made habitable again. He made a brief visit there once, and the vision won't leave this island-lover's mind.
"A lagoon full of lobster. Fantastic fishing," he said. "The most beautiful island I've ever seen."

Boat People Still Mow

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — People who live on their boats have a word for those who don't.
They are "townies," defined as "anybody who lives in square boxes that don't move," according to Braz Webb, whose idea of housecleaning is swabbing the deck of his 37-foot sailboat.
Webb is a "non-townie," one who lives on a boat full time. He hasn't escaped lawn mowing entirely, though. He mows the grass around the marina picnic table near his dock.
"Most of the people who live on their boats are very individualistic," said Webb, 43, who lives with his wife, Barbara, at a marina on Dog River, south of Mobile.

On a warm spring weekend, Webb and his neighbors find consolation in a strong wind that takes their home to an island or anyplace the weather permits.
During the week, however, the neighbors relax from work and party as though they lived on a city block.

"Maybe we party a little too hard, but we pay our taxes," said Webb, who moved onto the sailboat in January after his house burned.

Brad Eklund, a neighbor, has been living on sailboats for 11 years.

"Day in, day out," said Eklund, 37, who teaches metal shop and drafting at Williamson High School. "When it gets cold, we just plug in an extra heater. Nobody sleeps as well as I do."

One thing that disturbs the tranquility of boat living, however, is the "townies" who sometimes hotrod around the dock with their powerboats.

"You wouldn't believe the wake created when a 37-foot powerboat comes by at 28-30 knots," said Eklund, lamenting the lack of marine police protection.

But they said that was one of the few drawbacks to permanent boat living.

No one knows just how many of their predecessors have settled in the islands. But on Majuro atoll, a slender ring of palm-fringed islets that is the capital of the Marshall group, "ex-vols" turn up everywhere.

One runs the coconut-oil factory. Another manages the big store. A third owns a handful of small businesses. But none has plunged more deeply into atoll life than Jerry Knight.

A Chicagoan who arrived as a volunteer in 1967, Knight later decided to stay on and "get inside the culture."

First, he worked as a Majuro fisherman for two years, perfecting his knowledge of the musical Marshallese language. Then he cast off into the unknown — sailing 400 miles up to isolated Rongelap atoll, where he lived for four years among the 150 Rongelapese, an ocean away from Western civilization.

In his lagoon retreat, the self-taught anthropologist took down the oral histories told by a traditional island narrator. He later published a book of the stories.

"I was planning to stay there till I died," said the wiry, mustached Knight, 37. But he finally was recalled to Majuro for overstaying his visa in the Marshalls. Later he re-established himself in Majuro, and as curator of the local museum continues recording Marshallese tales and music.

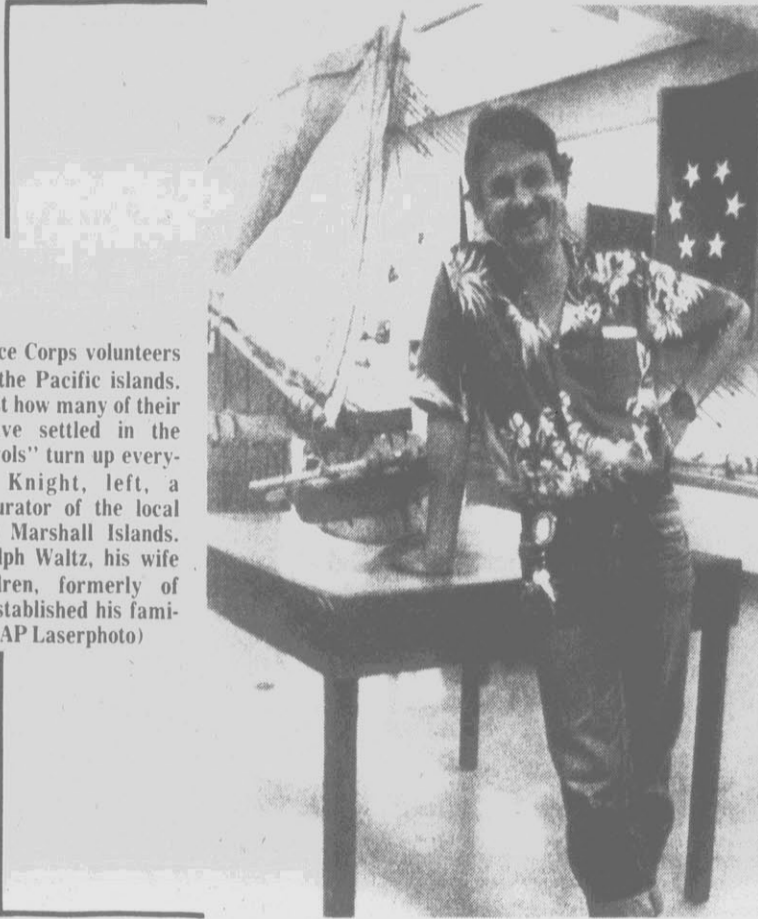

Down the Majuro road, ex-volunteer Ralph Waltz has plunged into community action, on behalf of a historically special community — the people of Bikini atoll.

The former college linebacker from Menomonee Falls, Wis., arrived in the Marshalls 18 years ago to work as a Peace Corps teacher on Kili island, exile home for people evacuated from Bikini in 1946 for U.S. atomic weapons tests. The assignment changed his life.

After his two-year tour, he mar-

Americans Take To Roads Again

WASHINGTON (AP) — Summertime, while no longer synonymous with vacationtime, will see Americans take 126 million pleasure trips from June through August and spend $85 billion doing so, a travel industry study forecasts.

That would mark a 5 percent jump from the 120 million vacations taken a year ago, when pleasure travelers spent just under $80 billion, the U.S. Travel Data Center said in its annual outlook Thursday.

The center, a research arm of the nation's travel and tourism industry, based its projections on monthly telephone surveys of 1,500 adults. No percentage-of-error figure was given.

While two decades ago, more than half of all vacations were taken during the summer months, only 40 percent are done so now, the center's director, Douglas C. Frechtling, told a news conference.

This has occurred "particularly as winter vacation destinations have grown up — not only the Caribbean for sun, but also the ski resorts that have been developed for winter recreation," he said.

Changes in the population, including increasing numbers of single adults and childless couples whose vacation schedules bound from the modest increases of 2 percent last year and 1 percent in 1983 and an 11 percent plunge in 1982, when Americans were struggling out of an economic recession.

Frechtling, an economist, said the recovery for the leisure industry was slower than expected because Americans spent their extra money on cars and household goods, especially entertainment products such as video cassette recorders.

"This (buying) explosion drained away $100 billion more in discretionary spending power that could have financed a vacation travel boom but instead went to buy these items," he said.

"We believe that this pent-up demand is completely satisfied and that now consumers are free to spend their extra money on vacation travel in the coming summer months," he said.

As to where travelers are going, an ocean beach is the top intended destination. It was chosen by 37 percent of the respondents, up from 29 percent in last year's survey.

The bidding:

1-NT Pass 3-♥ Pass
3-NT Pass Pass Pass
Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

"Your hands are all well and good," we often hear from our readers, "but they never turn up in real life." Wrong! That's precisely where we get most of our material. This example is from the recent Spring North American Championships held in Montreal.

North showed touching faith in his partner's judgment when he elected to pass three no trump. Obviously, he was hoping his side could make as many tricks in no trump as they could in spades, in which case he would receive an excellent score.

Naturally, South received a club lead against three no trump. East correctly overtook the queen with the king and returned the suit as declarer held off winning the ace until the second round. What now?

At duplicate, you can see that declarer has a chance to make 12 tricks with favorable breaks in the major suits. Therefore, your best chance for a reasonable result is to try to run spades and hope that your rivals can't outscore you at a spade contract. However, the spades turn out to be 4-1 and, to make it worse, West has the long spade, so you can no longer set up the suit by conceding a trick to the safe hand—when West wins the spade he can take more than enough club tricks to defeat you. There is no way for you to make your contract.

At rubber bridge, you should surely play the hand in four spades, especially since you get the honor bonus. However, if you did land in no trump, you should adopt a totally different line to safeguard your contract. First, duck two rounds of clubs. Then cash a spade honor, cross back to your hand with a high heart, and lead a spade to the ten. Even if the finesse loses you have ten tricks, and you protect against the distribution that exists. East can do you no harm if he wins the jack of spades.

Former Guide Turns Priest

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla. (AP) — The Rev. Ernesto Rios uses himself as an example that God works in mysterious ways.

Staunchly religious since his childhood days in the Bronx, N.Y., Rios took the path to priesthood after spending 14 years guiding pilots and their passengers safely through the skies.

The former air traffic controller also says he is the only Puerto Rican priest in the Orthodox Church in America which has an estimated 1 million members. The Orthodox Church, however, consists of a federation of Christian churches found primarily in Greece, Russia, Eastern Europe and Western Asia.

"That's how God works," says the jovial priest.

When Rios arrived here in 1980 several months after he was ordained, he helped finish construction of the St. James Orthodox Church across from the city hall of this growing retirement city. He is not discouraged that his basic congregation consists of only 21 parishioners.

"The land and church are already paid for," he boasts as he explains where he plans to build a church hall and a dozen condominium units for retired members of the Orthodox Church.

"This will be the nucleus of a living orthodox community — a magnet that will draw people to church," he says enthusiastically.

The only sadness Rios shows is when he talks about his father, who died two years ago.

"Papa prayed every day of his life. He took people into his house, fed them and clothed them," he adds.

Rios also remembers his father's mixed emotions when he converted from a Roman Catholic to the Orthodox Church. His conversion began in the early 1970s when he encountered the Byzantine Rites while still a Roman Catholic. The attraction, he admits, was the liturgy, which has remained almost unchanged since the early centuries of Christianity.

"Trust" The Kroger Pharmacy

We Recognize National
High Blood Pressure Month

High Blood Pressure is called the "silent killer" because it usually has no symptoms. Early detection by regular testing is the only way to know.

BLOOD PRESSURE IS THE FORCE PLACED ON BLOOD VESSEL WALLS AS THE HEART PUMPS BLOOD THROUGH THEM. HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE SHOULD BE KEPT IN CHECK BECAUSE IT CAN CONTRIBUTE TO HEART DISEASE, STROKES AND KIDNEY DISEASE.

Save On Summer Cooling With Insulation From Lowe's

You can easily insulate your home yourself. Insulating in your floors and attic is most common, but there are other areas of your home where you can benefit from using insulation. Exterior walls, interior walls (during new construction), basement walls and even foundation walls with crawl spaces can be insulated. And don't forget to cover between your foundation and sill. The more complete the insulation barrier is around your home, the more energy efficient and comfortable it will be. Ask a salesman for more tips.

The benefits of proper insulation are apparent in your utility bills. The better insulated your home is, the more energy efficient it will be, year-round. Insulation comes in a variety of thicknesses and with a variety of R-values. The R-value measures the insulation's resistance to heat flowing out in winter and flowing in during summer. So, the higher the R-value, the greater the insulating power. Ask Lowe's for a factsheet on R-values. Lowe's will help you select the right type of insulation for your home.

This Summer Take The Bite Out Of Annoying Flying Insects And Enjoy The Great Outdoors With This 10-Watt Electronic Bug Killer

Flying insects can really put a damper on any outside activity during the warm days of summer. Now there's a safe effective way to fight back without using messy pest strips or dangerous sprays. Introducing the worst friend any bug with wings ever had... the Evergo 10-watt Electronic Bug Killer.

Just plug it into any standard 120-volt outlet and it's ready to go. Two electrically charged inner grids surround a special insect luring black light. Once bugs touch these grids they're zapped and fall to the ground.

And because it's smokeless and odorless it can also be used indoors too. U.L. listed for operating safety. Completely harmless to people and pets.

Rid Your House Of Insects And Mice Safely And Effectively With The High-Tech Ultrasonic Pest Control Device

The secret is ultrasonic sound waves that repel mice and insects from your home. These sound waves irritate the super-sensitive auditory and nervous systems of insects and rodents forcing them from their sound protected areas. And there are no clean-ups of dead insects or rodents to worry about. Pests are repelled by sound waves, not killed by messy chemicals or sprays.

Ultrasonic Pest Control Device emits sounds for above the hearing range of humans and most pets, making it completely safe to use. Push-to-test button. Also mounts on wall.

Strip Paint Quickly And Effectively With The Black & Decker Heat 'N Strip Electric Paint Remover And Heat Gun

Who said paint removal had to be hard? Heat 'n Strip provides an effective alternative to caustic chemicals and wire brushes in all of your paint removal jobs.

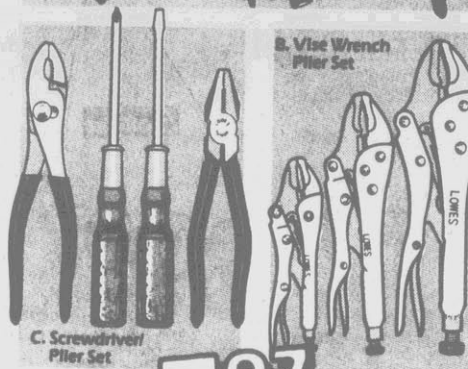

The secret is concentrated super hot air (480°F-570°F) that heats and softens paint allowing it to be removed using only an ordinary scraper or putty knife quickly, effectively, and economically.

Heat 'n Strip not only removes paint from such things as furniture, molding and shutters but does so without singeing wood or raising surface grain.

Perfect for hobby projects. Also dries, shrinks and thaws. Lock-on button for continuous use.

Hardee's Bacon Cheeseburger gives you more of what you buy a bacon cheeseburger for. Bacon. Hardee's uses three whole strips of crisp, sizzling bacon. It's a perfect complement to the quarter pound beef patty, American cheese, real mayonnaise, crispy shredded lettuce, and two tomato slices on a toasted sesame seed bun. Try Hardee's Bacon Cheeseburger and you'll know why Hardee's says, "It's the baconest!"
