Area Officials Look To 1987 As Growth Year

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Residents can expect continued growth in Pitt County in the upcoming year, according to local government officials, who say education and development projects should highlight 1987.

"I think 1987 will be a year of continuation for Pitt County," said Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt.

"I believe we will remain on the same steady course of improvement in agricultural growth and development of the university and medical school and continued strength in the service industry and home building."

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said he has high hopes for the new year.

"I anticipate a great year in 1987 for Pitt County. Our county is a county of rich heritage — with a constant influx of new people, which brings new ideas and approaches that have expanded our horizons," he said. "Also, I anticipate a challenging year for the upcoming legislative session."

Legislators in Raleigh will have a busy schedule during this year's general session, according to Warren.

"Some major issues will be the Basic Education Program, insurance, phosphate bill, salary schedule for public school employees, appointment or election of the state superintendent of public instruction, additional funding for the needs of our senior citizens, state employees and teachers, prisons, mental health transportation, fire and rescue," he said.

Warren said lawmakers will also be addressing issues directly related to Pitt County.

"For our area, capital improvement funds are needed for Pitt Community College and East Carolina University for a new sports medicine building, additional space for the library and completion of the new medical school building," he said. "Also, I will continue working in appropriations for additional planning funds for an Eastern Regional Center."

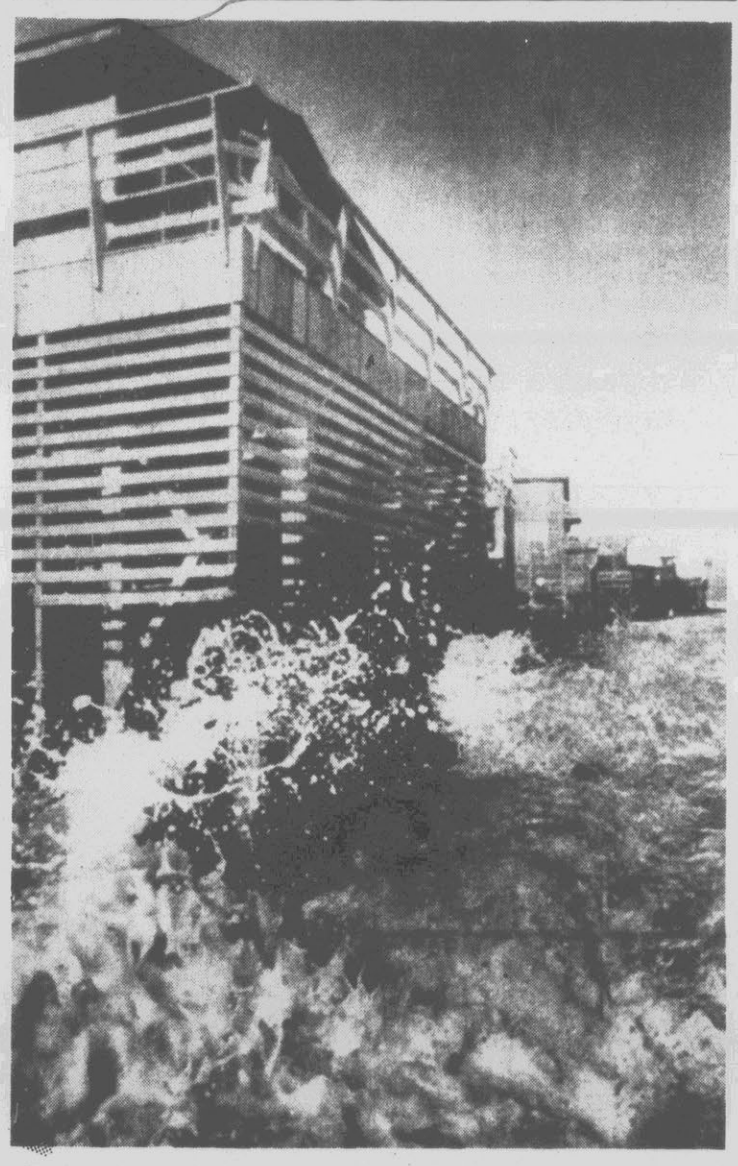

Legislators realize the Pitt County's importance to this part of the state, Warren said.

"Pitt County/Greenville is the 'hub' of eastern North Carolina, which is an intersection for education, agriculture and industry," Warren said. "I look forward to an excellent year."

Meanwhile, Warren's fellow lawmakers expressed optimism over the prospects of 1987.

"I think the new year shaping up is going to be real good for the people in Pitt County," Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, said. "We just have so much going for us. We will have some problems in the rural economy, but other than that I think we can expect a real good year in 1987."

Coast May Face More Serious Trouble, Warns Duke Biologist

A nationally known marine biologist at Duke University says North Carolina's time has come, and if any more storms strike the coast with the force of the one New Year's Day, it could spell a long winter for coastal residents.

"We're sitting there stark naked," said biologist Orrin Pilkey. "If we have more storms, we're going to be in trouble. I think we're at the start of a very long winter."

Towns along North Carolina's coast suffered damages in the millions of dollars from a winter storm and high tides Thursday, and officials said the destruction would have been worse if an earlier December storm had not washed away much of the vulnerable property.

Residents of Topsail Beach have been cleaning up debris for the second time in a month, bringing back memories of deadly Hurricane Hazel as well as a severe storm Dec. 1 that destroyed the town's dunes.

Although N.C. Division of Emergency Management officials are saying damage assessments are incomplete, Long Beach officials say they've tallied $6 million in damages, while Topsail Beach officials estimates its damages at $2 million to $3 million. Damage estimates won't be available until early next week, said division spokesman Tom Ditt.

"The beach has simply c[illegible] up with them (residents) ...," Pilkey said. "Our time has simply come."

Many residents along the coastline say they're tired of losing property and belongings to the ocean.

"I'll not stay in this house through another one," said Topsail resident Dot Brown. "You think it's over, and then the wind shifts and you hear those boards breaking and hitting the house. And I don't know if my house will take another one."

"They say if we live long enough, we'll be beachfront," retiree John Grieves said from his second-row house on Topsail Island.

Authorities Hope For Voluntary Compliance On Seatbelt Law

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Since the beginning of the new year Thursday, North Carolina drivers and their front seat passengers face a $25 fine if they don't wear their seatbelts.

The state's mandatory seatbelt law became effective Oct. 1, 1985. But until the beginning of the new year, drivers and their passengers faced only a warning.

More than 118,201 warning tickets were issued by the Highway Patrol in 1986 to motorists not wearing belts, and most of the warnings were given to drivers initially stopped for other traffic offenses.

Patrol commander Col. Jack Cardwell said if other states are any indication, about two-thirds of the state's motorists will be wearing their seat belts for a while. But he said belt usage is expected to drop off within six months.

State troopers will enforce the seat-belt law the same as any other traffic laws, Cardwell said.

"There won't be any special campaigns or crackdowns. The key is voluntary compliance," Cardwell suggested.

"I'm a big supporter of the use of seatbelts," Greenville Police Chief Ted Holmes said. "We have, for some time now, required officers to wear seatbelts when on duty.

"We just know from experience that many lives will be saved from people wearing belts," Holmes said.

The chief said Greenville police will "do pretty much the same as the state patrol" in enforcing the belt law.

Ivory Coast Jet Crash Kills 49

By JUDY AGUSTI
Associated Press Writer

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — A Brazilian Varig Boeing 707, one engine in flames soon after takeoff, crashed and disintegrated in a forest outside Abidjan early Saturday, killing 49 of the 51 people aboard.

Two gravely injured passengers survived, according to airline and Ivory Coast officials. The airline said one survivor was an Ivory Coast citizen and the other was from France. Other reports identified the second person as a Brazilian of Lebanese origin.

The dead included one American, a German couple and a Briton, according to the airline's office in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. The other victims were from Africa and South America. Varig identified the American only as L. Cleveland, without providing a hometown, and an airline official said he did not know whether the couple was from East Germany or West Germany.

U.S. Embassy personnel flew over the crash site, about 12 miles from the sprawling city limits of Abidjan, the largest city of this former French colony in West Africa. They described the scene as "devastating."

Willy Holmes, an embassy cultural affairs officer, told The Associated Press that officals reported "there were very little traces of the aircraft. The impact was such that the plane exploded. There was nothing there."

Television film from the area, which was later sealed off by soldiers, showed French military and Ivory Coast rescue workers searching through dense undergrowth and felled trees for bodies and debris from Flight 797. The crash touched off brush fires.

Holmes said Saturday evening that only six or seven bodies had been found.

Soldiers who sealed off the area said the four-engine jetliner crashed about 300 yards from the small La Me River, which rescuers had to cross in knee-deep mud, near the village of

Reagan Readies Seventh Budget

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is ready to submit to Congress the seventh budget of his presidency, but most of the deficit-reduction proposals in the $1.02 trillion document will be variations on themes already rejected by the lawmakers.

The budget, to be formally unveiled at 8 a.m. EST on Monday, is expected to look strikingly like the budget Reagan submitted the year before and the year before that.

The color of the cover will be maroon. It was blue last year.

And the contents will be abbreviated — to accomodate the fact that this year the budget is going to Capitol Hill a month early.

Like previous Reagan budgets, however, it will call for no new taxes but hefty defense increases and wide-ranging cuts in domestic programs — including sharp cutbacks in housing, education, mass transit and student loans.

It will also call for abolition of most of the same 40 programs targeted by last year's budget. Congress ignored that recommendation.

Congressional Democrats, who now control both chambers of Congress, have already served notice that the "dead on arrival" epithet applied to the past two Reagan budgets may be equally applicable this year.

Administration officials don't apologize for the similarity with previous budgets; they boast about it.

"It's the same Ronald Reagan," says Budget Director James C. Miller III.

In his weekly radio address, Reagan said Saturday that Congress must avoid "budget-busting legislation" and should not yield to the temptation to raise taxes instead of cutting spending to reduce deficits.

"This budget cuts spending and leaves your family's paycheck alone," Reagan said.

Administration officials say that the budget will propose about $42 billion in cuts and other savings that they claim would result in a federal deficit in fiscal 1988, which begins next Oct. 1, of just under the Gramm-Rudman target of $108 billion.

The Congressional Budget Office, in its own evaluation, suggested on Friday that $61 billion in deficit-reduction steps would be needed to meet this target.

While it will be the first trillion-dollar-plus budget submitted by any president, budget officials are fond of pointing out that it represents a whopping reduction in the projected deficit from the record $221 billion shortfall posted for the fiscal year that ended Sept. 30.

About half that reduction, however, would occur anyway even if Congress adopts none of the new cost-saving programs to be outlined in the new Reagan budget.

That is so because of several cost-reducing factors, including generally lower defense growth than had been originally projected and lower interest payments on the national debt, reflecting lower interest rates.

Area Officials Look For Growth In 1987

"The continued progress made with U.S. 264 is very important to our county," said Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt. "That road is important to all the people in this area as well as Pitt County."

The Pitt-Greenville Airport will also be a site of essential growth, according to Jones, who said he expects lawmakers to continue efforts to assist farmers.

"It is important that we continue to upgrade our airport and its services because it is a valuable part in the growth of the county and the area," he said. "It is very important that the county and state are working with farmers to lessen the negative changes that have taken place in some of our farm programs. There is also the continued need to grow and expand our industrial base which would help create job opportunities."

Meanwhile, Pitt County and Greenville officials said they expect 1987 to be an active year.

"It should be a very busy year," Gail Meeks, city manager said. "We will have our first election under the new district plan in November. The first six months of year, we'll be working on the budget, starting on Jan 12.

"We'll be addressing annexation of Brook Valley. We will hopefully complete medical district report and we'll be updating our zoning ordinance and our comprehensive plan. We'll be starting the new teen center, and, in July, we should open our new fire rescue substation on Charles Street."

Meanwhile, county commissioners plan on establishing a 911 emergency phone network in early 1987, according to Kramer Jackson, county manager.

"The county is going to be very active in getting a 911 number," Jackson said. "We have a committee set up."

Furthermore, Jackson said county officials have other projects on the slate for the upcoming year.

"We'll be looking at redistricting of the county into six districts, and, of course, we have a consultant working on it now. The purpose of it is to ensure minority representation on the board," he said.

"We'll be working on county mapping for land records management, and we'll be heavily involved in land use planning."

Pitt County's growth will lead to an additional growth in services, Jackson said.

"I think it (the county) will see continued growth and more and more demand for government services," he said. "The county will be looking at ways to dispose of solid wastes by something other than burying the waste at the landfill. We'll be doing a study of space needs for the courthouse, including rooms, and the jail. The county will be planning the future of it."

Local education officials also hold high hopes for the new year.

"We're looking forward to a very exciting and educationally fulfilling year," said Eddie West, supervisor of Pitt County Schools. "We anticipate board consideration of a long range plan of capital improvements, election lines, curriculum, thrust and continuation of a sound basic education program."

"First of all our enrollment looks as if it will continue to increase," said ECU Chancellor John Howell. "Applications are running about 10 percent over the same time last year. It should be a good year in terms of enrollment."

Howell said 1987 will also be a year of transition for the university.

"East Carolina University is going to have a new chancellor in 1987. It will be starting a new era so to speak," he said. "It looks like another good year for us. Our efforts in fund raising are going very nicely. The outlook in basketball is good, and I think we're going to win some football games this year."

Meanwhile, Pitt Community College President Charlie Russell said he hopes for enrollment and funding increases within the next year.

"I think the big thing is we'd like to see our enrollment increase a little bit. We would like to continue to serve the needs of the people," he said. "We'd like to see some more money come our way for building. We hope the legislature will appropriate money in July for salary increases for our people."

Area farmers are among those people who may view 1987 with a less than positive outlook, according to Pitt County Agricultural Extension Agent Phillip Rowan.

"Looking at it from all agriculture in Pitt County, grain cash crops don't look real profitable. Tobacco has a little profit potential," said Rowan, who specializes in livestock.

"Livestock looks better than it has in the past because grain prices are so depressed and it is cheaper to feed those animals, and they're getting good market prices," Rowan said. "We don't have a lot of cattle in Pitt County, but we should see a favorable year for cattle and poultry.

"For corn and soybeans, it doesn't look like a very good year for farmers in 1987. There's too much in supply. There is too much being stored and the price for corn is the lowest it's been in years."

said the $10,000 to $15,000 damage was "pretty minor compared to what I expected."

Beach erosion and tidal washover, which created a temporary lake that stretched from the ocean to the sound at Topsail Thursday morning, was worsened by an unusual alignment of the earth, sun and moon that causes extremely high tides.

"We've got to build some kind of protection back up," said Topsail Mayor M.R. "Kip" Oppegaard. "All the way down there (on the strand) there's nothing there. It's flat."

Oppegaard said he would probably seek state and federal assistance to build up the beach because the town, which has about 300 year-round residents, could not afford a major project. He said the town wanted to pump sand from the sound side of the community and place it on the ocean side, but that work would cost at least $6 million.

The Outer Banks escaped the storm Thursday because the passing of the storm system failed to coincide with high tides.

"It's like two trains coming into a station," said Wallace DeMaurice of the National Weather Service. "They both didn't get there at the same time."

check for belt use, Holmes said. "If citations are issued, they will be mostly in conjunction with other kinds of traffic stops or other traffic law violations."

Although drivers and their passengers face a $25 fine for not wearing belts, failure to comply with the law will be considered a noncriminal offense. Violations won't cost a driver insurance or driver's license points.

If a passenger 16 or younger isn't wearing a belt, the driver is responsible for the passenger's fine. But the law holds people over the age of 16 responsible for their own fine.

And there are some exceptions to the belt use law.

Rural mail carriers don't have to wear belts while performing their official duties; drivers or passengers of delivery vehicles making frequent stops and not traveling more than 20 miles per hour between stops are exempt, as are drivers of commercial vehicles traveling not more than 25 miles per hour.

Also exempt are people with a certified mental phobia against being restrained; people with a medical or physical condition that won't permit seatbelt use, and drivers and passengers in vehicles that are not required to have belts, which includes any pre-1967 model car.

The goal of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce is to develop, encourage, promote and protect the commercial, professional, financial, general business and residential interests of the Pitt County and Greenville area. Reagan Budget

In fact, the Office of Management and Budget has estimated that the "current services" deficit — which assumes that all existing programs are left intact at present funding levels — would fall on its own to $150 billion in fiscal 1988.

Thus the deficit reduction steps outlined in the president's budget are those that the administration deems desirable to take the deficit from $150 billion down to the $108 billion Gramm-Rudman target.

Miller claims that roughly half of these savings would come from spending cuts, while the other half would come from new revenues, including money from the sale of government loans, assets and from new so-called "user fees."

The new budget will rely more heavily on government asset sales than did its predecessor, part of a program that Budget Director Miller calls "privatization," a gradual turning of government programs over to private enteprise.

As in past years, most of the details of the new budget have leaked out in advance. This year, unlike in past years, the budget director himself has made a point of doing much of that "leaking" himself, through a busy schedule of interviews and television appearances.

This show of activity, administration sources suggested, was at least in part designed to suggest an aura of "business as usual" in the White House in hopes of diverting some attention from the Iran-arms controversy.

Grand Alepe. They said debris from the plane still was burning.

The flight for Rio took off about 1 a.m. from Abidjan's Port Bouet airport carrying 39 passengers and 12 crew members. The pilot immediately reported problems to the control tower, then said he had an engine fire.

The French news agency Agence France-Presse said the pilot's last message was that he was circling to dump excess fuel before coming back to land.

When contact was lost, the control tower called for help from French marines stationed near the airport under military aid agreements. Two units headed for the crash area on dirt roads and by foot.

A French helicopter pinpointed the site by the flames about an hour after the crash. Helicopters were unable to land in the jungle, but four French soldiers, including a doctor, were lowered to the wreckage and found the two survivors, Lt. Col. Jean-Claude Blache, the unit's second-in-command, told AFP.

The agency reported the survivors were in very serious condition in Abidjan's Cocody Hospital and that one was in a coma.

Varig's office in Rio said the jet, which was purchased in 1968, was sold recently to Brazil's air force.

Something To Think About

Donovan Phillips
DIRECTOR

CONSIDER THE SURVIVOR

Unfortunately, when the income producer in the family dies, often the survivor's mode of living has to be changed dramatically. The effect of this can be devastating if it has not been anticipated.

During their joint lifetimes, a couple should evaluate what the net estate will be and what income it can reasonably be expected to produce. They should then consider how the survivor can best arrange affairs so as to live on that income. For example, it might be clear that the family residence cannot be maintained and that it should be sold. In such a case, consideration should be given to what might be realized from the sale of the residence, what should be done with this capital, what other arrangements for the survivor's habitation should be made.

If this sort of evaluation is done carefully, the survivor will suffer a minimum of surprises and will make the transition with a minimum of difficulty.

Hearing Continued

A probable cause hearing for Fernando Jackson, 28, of 119 Terrace St., Winterville, who has been charged with murder in connection with the death of a 32-year-old woman, has been continued until Jan. 9, court officials said.

The hearing was rescheduled in Pitt County District Court Friday in order that all charges against Jackson could be heard at one time, officials said.

Jackson, charged with murder and solicitation to commit murder in the death of Lois Hales Tyson of Route 5, Greenville, is being held without bond in Pitt County Jail.

The body of Mrs. Tyson, who was reported missing Sept. 13, was found in a Martin County farm pond Dec. 23.

Chamber Sets Program Of Work

The 1987 program of work for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce includes 38 committees, 600 volunteers and a budget of $392,000, according to Bill Clark, chairman of the board.

Numerous task forces will be established according to need, the chairman said.

"The main issue of the chamber's program will be to analyze the future economic development goals and objectives for the Greenville-Pitt County area," Clark said. "The chamber will create a coalition with the county businesses and the governmental agencies to unify efforts toward these goals.

"A real push this year will be in the area of public and governmental affairs," the chairman said. "The chamber will take a pro-active position for business in the electoral processes within the city and county elections in 1987, particularly as it regards the new district system for the city and the proposed district system for the county.

"Another objective is to create and implement a plan for the convention and visitors bureau within Pitt County that will promote the hospitality industry, which is one of the fastest growing industries in the county," Clark said."

The chamber also plans this year to put in operation a small business division to work closely with small business. The division will sponsor seminars and be concerned with legislative action and small business information and recognition, Clark said.

The Pitt County Republican Party will hold its regular monthly meeting at Planter's Bank on Tuesday, January 6, 1987 at 8 P.M.

On the agenda will be plans for the up-coming Lincoln Day Dinner, precinct organization reports and discussions regarding the effects of the newly proposed ward systems. All interested persons are invited to attend.

S.C. Coast Suffers Tidal Damage

GARDEN CITY, S.C. (AP) — Standing in the rubble of a Garden City restaurant eroded by the ocean, Gov. Dick Riley said Saturday he is overwhelmed by the tidal damage but added that there is little the state can do to help.

"The ocean raised its natural head and caused some serious damage here," Riley said. "It overwhelmes me."

Gales whipped the surf 8 feet higher than normal on New Year's Day, damaging property and beaches along a 100-mile stretch from south of Charleston to north of Myrtle Beach.

In Horry County, nearly $7 million dollars in property was destroyed, and Georgetown County officials say the loss there will be more than $1 million.

Riley toured the oceanfront in Horry and Georgetown counties Saturday afternoon and said Garden City was the area hit hardest by the storm.

The outgoing governor told reporters he hoped property owners had and would use federal flood insurance and said there wasn't a lot the state could do.

Eddie Carraway, Georgetown County civil defense director, said he expects little aid other than loans.

Being declared a presidential disaster area is unlikely, but Riley could declare the Grand Strand a localized disaster area, making low-interest recovery loans available, Carraway said.

"We didn't have enough damage for federal funds in this county," he said. "What they'll probably get is small business loans. Those are low interest loans for property owners and businesses. They take the insurance coverage factor into consideration and the governor makes a declaration.

"The insurance is not going to cover everything," Carraway said. "These people don't insure for the full value. They can't afford to insure for the whole value."

Cleanup from the storm-driven high tides may be slowed somewhat since insurance and disaster relief may be hard to come by for rebuilding damaged areas, government officials said.

"I don't visualize any financial assistance. Aid would be most likely in the form of services," said Rep. Linwood Altman, D-Georgetown.

John Doyle, chief area civil defense coordinator, said county officials will need to request funds based on damage estimates.

"How much they can get depends on that," he said.

The beach Saturday was crowded as if it were summer as hundreds of people flocked to the eroded areas. Sightseers were joined by scavengers who combed the beaches, some aided by metal detectors.

Businesses hired hired security guards to keep people off of their property.

"We were hired because the people are coming out by the droves," said Mike McCaan, a maintenance supervisor at Atalaya Towers in Garden City. They were trying to keep people off the beaches because of "all the cement and twisted steel."

Caught by a pier in Pawleys Island, a six-foot by 30-foot mound of mostly wooden debris waited for firewood collectors. But the storm brought some people to the beach Friday and Saturday for other reasons.

1987 Requires Bold Pledges

The year 1987 lies blank as an empty book waiting to be penned.

For the leaders of Pitt County, the authorship of these unwritten chapters in the journal of the future should include some bold, well-thought-out New Year's resolutions.

The first of these should be a pledge to continued economic development. Pitt County has run smoothly and profitably on the momentum of the past. This impetus, although it appears in no danger of ebbing, must be reinforced to build a stronger base for the future.

The economy of Pitt County, still strongly agricultural, holds the potential to become increasingly urban in the coming year — a statement supported by the wane of tobacco and the advance of medical, technological and service-related industries. To maintain the pace of past growth, the county's leaders should plan carefully, then encourage these changes. In 1987, active recruitment of new industries by individual communities in the county could be timely and prudent.

The next vow Pitt's leaders should make is ensure the county's services can support — and encourage — continued growth and high quality of life. This resolution requires dedication to public education and human services.

With the county's schools, this means raising teachers' salaries in hopes of attracting top-notch educators to Pitt County. It also means continuing the ambitious capital improvements program so desperately needed to keep school buildings up to date. Upgrading both salaries and facilities is an ongoing process, not a project with an end, and leaders should look beyond 1987 when they set goals and priorities.

With human services, supporting growth means guaranteeing that the medical and social needs of the community are met. County leaders should pledge their support for Pitt County's fledgling medical industry by enlarging the new Medical District. City and county officials, by embracing a project of this scale, can provide both economic advantage and aesthetic progress for the county.

Finally, leaders should resolve to keep elected offices as responsive to the needs of the people as possible. City officials should see that Greenville's newly-approved method of election serves the best interest of the community. Furthermore, similar changes in election methods under consideration by the County Commissioners and Pitt County Board of Education represent further potential for more sensitive representation of the people.

In 1987, county leaders should resolve to keep Greenville and Pitt County on the track of progress. Specifically, they should incorporate a county-wide planning and zoning system. They should support education programs that will train Pitt Countians to make a living in a changing economy. They should seek to ensure the county's valuable resources — both natural and human — are utilized, not plundered.

The community's leaders should pledge to make the tough decisions necessary to fulfill these promises.

Reagan Fading

Where now for Ronald Reagan?

With only two years left in his second term, the Iran-Contra fiasco to plague him, and age rapidly catching up with him there appears to be little chance for further major initiatives.

That is not to say that this exceptionally popular president won't retain his popularity with the public nor does it necessarily portend ultimate failure of his administration.

What it does mean is that the Reagan record is virtually written. He will be known for his exceptional popularity which at least brought Americans from all walks of life behind a leader.

For the next two years President Reagan will be attempting to put his final stamp on United States government, but, as with all presidents in the final terms, there is little room for strong new initiatives.

Added to that will be the Iran arms sales, cash to the Contras controversy, Lt. Col. North and all that goes with it. Only the future will tell how continually troublesome that might be. It will depend on whether or not there are new revelations which might continue public interest.

The columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak see the Reagan presidency as "dead".

Although they note continued favorable poll standings they say the computer printouts are "unable to reflect the loss of faith in the president, both by Democrats who voted for him and by his ideologically motivated followers."

It may inaccurate to say that the administration of any president who is still active and in charge of things is "dead" as long as there is time left. New crises could arise which could put the president in a strong dealing position. Barring such unforseen events, however, it is reasonable to expect that the Reagan era will be fading in the two years ahead. It has been ever thus.

Sunday Morning Notes

Here we are in 1987. It's a new year and a time to turn over a new leaf, make resolutions which bind us to do better in the months to come. The resolutions vary according to age and social standing but just about everyone wants to improve during the new year.

If you listen in on your friends and acquaintances it is not difficult to see what concerns them the most.

A young mother attempting to get in last year's jeans resolved, "I won't eat as much over any future holidays."

And a young man who had just gotten his second speeding ticket commented, "I resolve to go light on the accelerator."

A boy who was reprimanded for making faces at his teacher: "I resolve to keep a straight face."

A harried housewife: "I resolve to keep my temper when somebody comments, 'What? You don't work? You just stay at home'."

A secretary: "I resolve to get that coffee for my boss, even though I know the job description doesn't call for it."

A school teacher: "I resolve not to be the first one out the door when school ends this spring."

A truck driver: "I resolve to be nice to those guys down in those cute little cars on the highway."

A policeman: "I'll do what they taught me ... be polite as I write those tickets."

A fireman: "I resolve not to lecture those folks who get me out on a cold night because they left a pot on the stove."

A sales clerk, "I resolve to remember, the customer is always right."

A car salesman: "I resolve not to get mad at all those stereotype jokes."

A minister: "I resolve to point upward when somebody asks, 'How are things upstairs.'."

A ferry boat operator, "I resolve not to give into temptation to take the boat out to sea on a calm day."

A nurse, "I resolve to give all shots easy — no matter how grumpy the patient might be."

A waitress: "I resolve to turn off all those come-ons as politely as I can."

A garbage collector, "I resolve to smile when somebody mentions sanitation control specialist."

A bill collector, "I resolve to listen sympathetically to those stories about why the bills can't be paid — but I still expect to get the money."

A tax collector, "I resolve not to tell folks that I don't keep any of the money."

Pilot, "I resolve not to threaten to fly upside down when someone questions my flying ability."

William Schneider

Year 1 Of The Post-Reagan-Era

WASHINGTON — At the beginning of 1986, Ronald Reagan was flying high — the first successful two-term president since Dwight D. Eisenhower. At the end of 1986, Ronald Reagan was a lame duck, his effectiveness depleted and his popularity squandered. Welcome to Year 1 of the Post-Reagan Era.

It wasn't just Iran and contras. Even before the controversy, Reagan was showing signs of losing clout. The first clear indication came in early October, when Congress voted to override the president's veto of a bill imposing stiff sanctions on South Africa. A year earlier, faced with similar congressional pressure, Reagan defused the issue by announcing his own program of limited executive sanctions. In 1986, he forced a showdown — and lost.

The midterm elections confirmed what people were beginning to suspect. Reagan barnstormed the country for Republican senatorial candidates, arguing that a Democratic recapture of the Senate would reverse the mandate of 1980 and endanger his agenda. He lost. One reason he lost is that he did not really have an agenda. In order to make a convincing case for a Republican Senate, the president had to explain what he wanted to do in the next two years. He couldn't. Even if the Iran fiasco had never happened, Reagan's agenda was exhausted.

Presidents who win landslide reelection have an unfortunate tendency to over-interpret their mandate. Reagan fell into the trap and we should have known something like this would happen. After all, Reagan is a man of deep ideological convictions. Ideologues are always tempted to believe that the end justifies the means, or to accept that reasoning in others — like, for instance, Lt. Col. Oliver L. North and White House Communications Director Patrick J. Buchanan.

We have also known about Reagan's detached management style. He concerns himself only with the big picture and leaves details to others. The combination of ideological fervor and aloof management turned out to be explosive. It meant that zealots were tolerated and even encouraged in the White House, but no one kept an eye on what they were doing.

Reagan could count several major achievements in 1986: tax reform, the No. 1 domestic priority for his second term; confirmation for William H. Rehnquist and Antonin Scalia as the new chief justice and associate justice on the Supreme Court, and a public relations triumph following the inconclusive Reykjavik summit. The problem is that each of these achievements is likely to sour over time. Public opinion was never very enthusiastic about tax reform. Having become increasingly Reaganized, the courts will probably issue more and more controversial rulings on civil rights and abortion — the kinds of divisive issues Reagan has steered clear of in his legislative agenda. And Reykjavik set the stage for an increasingly acrimonious debate over the administration's commitment to arms control. Even the Soviets seem to have given up on making a deal with Reagan.

As everyone acknowledges, arms control, the federal budget deficit and international trade are the most serious problems facing the country right now. But the administration doesn't seem to have a program for dealing with any of them. And even if it did, Reagan has lost the principal source of his political effectiveness — a special relationship with the American public. His approval ratings have dropped from far above to slightly below where a president usually stands after six years in office. Which means that neither politicians nor the press will treat Reagan with the kind of deference — or fear — that they exhibited in the past. Lame ducks don't scare anybody.

The arms scandal is, of course, at the top of the political agenda for 1987, diverting attention from the real problems of arms control, trade and the deficit. For one simple reason: Nobody knows what to do about arms control, trade and the deficit. Congress and the press are much more comfortable dealing with a scandal. They go into their Watergate mode. Congress becomes an investigative rather than a legislative body, with plenty of room for TV cameras. And the press narrows its focus. The president can talk about the budget or trade policy or throw-weights, but the press is only going to pay attention to The Big Story: What did the president know and when did he know it? A good many members of Congress are looking in their mirrors and saying, "You know, I could be the new Sam Ervin," or "the new Barbara Jordan" or "the new Pete Rodino." And a good many Washington reporters are saying to themselves, "I could be the new Bob Woodward" or "the new Carl Bernstein." Visions of Pulitzer Prizes and movie scripts dance in their heads.

Visions of presidential nominations are also dancing in many heads. Both party nominations are up for grabs and the Iran controversy has the effect of opening up both contests. An uncertain political atmosphere encourages unknowns and anti-Washington candidates who think they can be the next Jimmy Carter. And no one wants to bear the burden of being the front-runner for his party's nomination. Not after what happened to Walter F. Mondale in 1984.

A front-runner becomes a target, "the Establishment" candidate whom all the other candidates can gang up on. In order to maintain his credibility, a front-runner has to defend himself against everyone, everywhere. That's why Vice President Bush took advantage of the recent Iowa poll showing him falling behind Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas in Republican preferences, saying, "Now the expectations are down. I'm no longer a front-runner." You are so the front-runner, replied Rep. Jack F. Kemp of New York, who relishes the idea of becoming the anti-Establishment GOP candidate. Kemp is obviously jealous of Dole's new prominence as a spokesman calling for full disclosure on the arms deal. Said Kemp's press secretary, "Very few conservatives ... think making political hay out of this thing by trashing the president is a good thing."

Public Forum

To the editor:

All of the hullabaloo about THE phone company being ordered to cut its long distance rates smells of either collusion or a case of "please don't throw me in the briar patch" (says Bre'r Rabbit).

It is no secret that the small companies (comparatively small, that is) offering cut-rate long distance calls have been the proverbial "Thorn in the side" of Big Mamma (Bell).

Logically, if THE phone company is ordered to reduce its rates, then those other companies may be forced to reduce theirs to continue to compete. Perhaps this is one way of crushing the "Little Guy" without fear of an antitrust suit.

Complain away, Ma Bell (Methinks the lady doth protest too much.)

Probing The Politics Of The Baby Boomers

Ronald Brownstein

'In 1988, the baby boom generation could make up half of the electorate. No group will be more important in selecting the next president. No group is more up for grabs.'

WASHINGTON — Let's face it: No one understands the baby boomers. Their parents did not know how to reach them when they were growing up, and since they've reached voting age, politicians have had the same problem — a big problem.

In 1988, the baby boom generation could make up half of the electorate. No group will be more important in selecting the next president. No group is more up for grabs. And no group is more misunderstood. As they settle into middle age, baby boomers are displaying complexities to repudiate the stereotypes that emerged in the 1984 presidential campaign. Since then, we've learned that in many ways the baby boomers are more conservative than we thought but, paradoxically, less opposed to an activist government than their votes for Ronald Reagan suggested. Mostly, it's become apparent than neither party owns boomer loyalties because neither has figured out exactly what boomers want.

"I don't think we've really touched them yet," said Democratic pollster Stanley B. Greenberg, a baby boomer himself. "Which party or candidate does that will go a long way toward deciding the 1988 election." In the last election, the generational appeal first unfolded through a series of speeches by Sen. Joseph R. Biden, D-Del., and the presidential campaign of Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., both of which were shaped by pollster Patrick H. Caddell. Hart and Biden tried to stoke the dormant idealism of the "New generation" that marched its way through the 1960s. Their target was the tanned, toned yuppie who stopped hating capitalism somewhere around the time his income hit six figures, but who still harbored hopes of making the world a better place. Balancing their current tax brackets against their youthful ideals, 15 percent of their households had income exceeding $40,000 in 1983, while more than two-thirds got by on less than $30,000. Since 1973, the median income for families aged 25-44 has actually declined. Ralph W. Whitehead Jr., a University of Massachusetts professor who advises the Democrats on young voters, has coined a name for these down-scale, primarily service-sector citizens: new collars — neither white nor blue.

And there is no evidence that a majority of the '60s generation felt part of anything but adolescence at the time. In a 1986 national study conducted by Yankelovich, Clancy Shulman, only 25 percent said that they were at all active in the social protest movements; the rest said that they were wholly uninvolved. Many younger voters, worrying about making ends meet in their own families, even resent the appeal to idealism; it implies that they have the time to worry about someone else's family, said Greenberg.

At second look, the boomers' views on social issues are also more complex than they appeared in 1984. True, baby boomers retain strong libertarian impulses on such issues as abortion and are put off by the GOP's dalliance with the religious right. But the passage into parenthood is battering their tolerance in important ways. A majority of boomers now believe that the loosening in attitudes toward sexual conduct that occurred in the 1960 was for the worse, and a majority now support criminal penalties for possession of even small amounts of marijuana.

Thus does time work its will. It's one thing to extol the virtues of the drug culture when you're 16; it's another when your 16-year-old asks for the keys to the family car. "In a whole lot of political and general characteristics, you find the 30-40 year olds becoming a lot more like their elders," said Harold E. Quinley, a senior associate at the Yankelovich polling concern. "They are molding in, becoming middle-aged."

As the old libertarian, yuppie stereotype fades, a new one emerges: of baby boomers as the new proletariat. Many liberals are transfixed by the evidence of economic stress among baby boomers. Their interest is based on the old Democratic political axiom — that it always helps the party to find people who are hurting, because anyone who's hurting eventually will turn to the Democrats, the party of compassionate government.

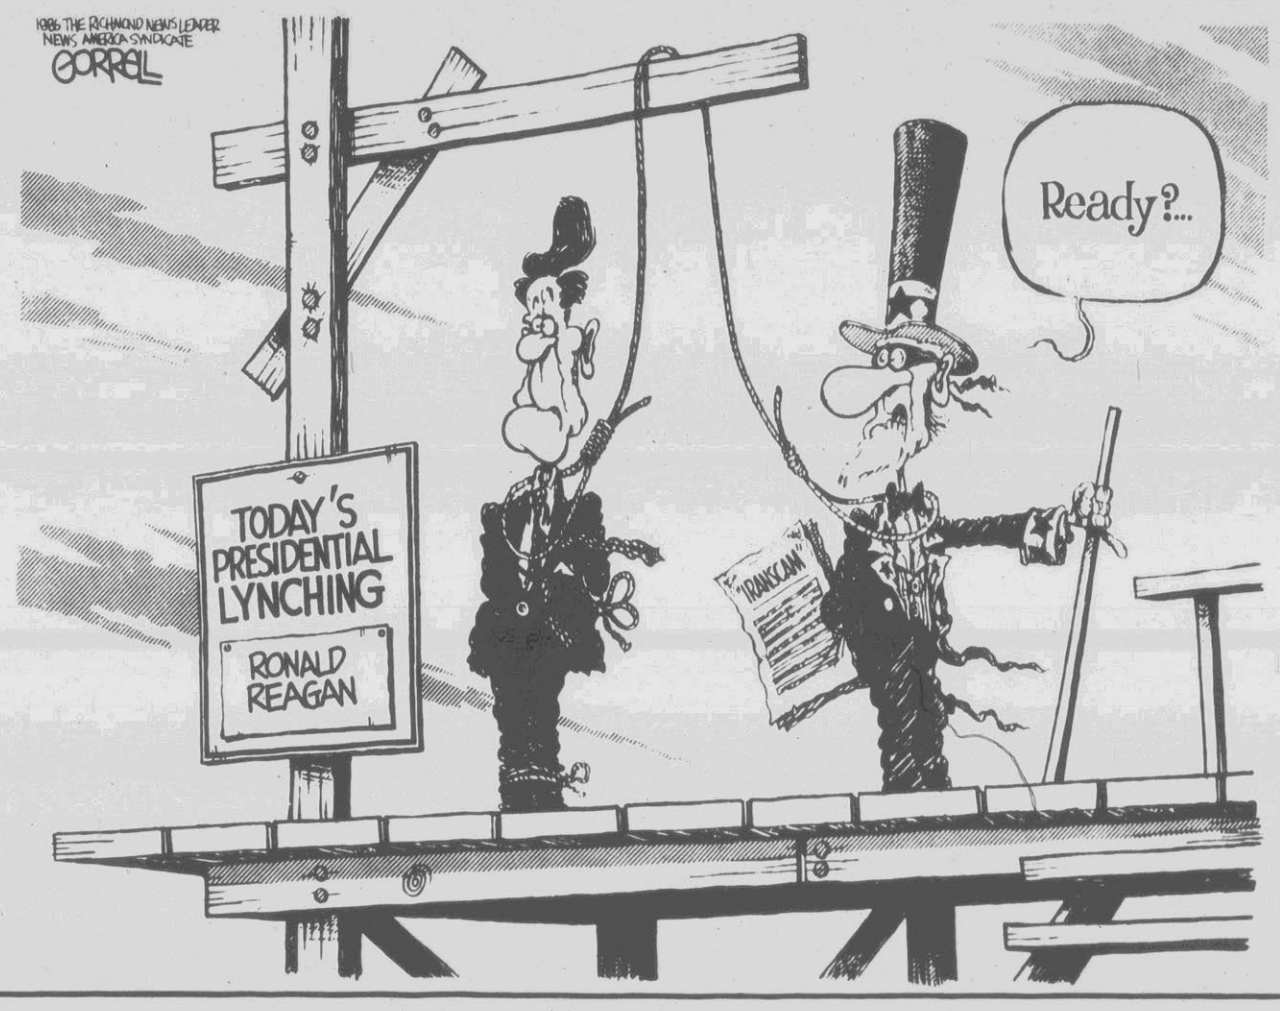

Sorry, wrong decade. This New Deal analysis of the baby boom doesn't seem to fit any better than Hart and Biden's approach. As Whitehead has warned, the new collars don't hold a particularly high opinion of the Democrats — or of government. Not so remarkable, that a group growing up through Vietnam and Watergate, doesn't trust government. And focus group studies conducted by Greenberg have found a strong sense among young middle-class voters that the Democrats care only about the poor.

Those bitter feelings make this group quite responsive to Republican anti-tax and anti-spending rhetoric, as Reagan proved two years ago. But that doesn't mean they've bought the full Republican economic agenda; there's no evidence that they are opposed to government activity in principle. What boomers want, contend analysts such as Greenberg and Whitehead, is for government to help them achieve economic security, the way it helped their parents a generation ago with the GI bill and veterans' loans.

This is another important sign of the baby boom blending into America. Just like voters older and younger, boomers are likely to vote in the next presidential election on the issue of economic opportunity — and not on social issues or nostalgia for the days of rage.

Clearly, Reagan dominated the economic issue in 1984, and Republicans such as Rep. Jack F. Kemp of New York have a strong claim on it in 1988. If Republicans can maintain that advantage with the boomers, they probably don't have much to fear from either the specter of Jerry Falwell or a Democratic summons to lapsed idealism.

Belonging

Martin E. Marty

'Not to belong — to God or parent or neighbor or nation — is to be nobody; to belong too much is to be smug; to be insecure about belonging is to be dangerous.'

CHICAGO — "You don't belong here!" Witnesses say that was the shout of a group of white teen-agers who pursued and clubbed three black men outside a pizza parlor in the Howard Beach section of New York City on Dec. 20. The men were evidently in the white neighborhood by chance, their car having broken down. They became victims of the year's most notorious racially-inspired violent act. One met his death while trying to escape the attackers.

"You don't belong here!" Each day the public hears a similar new taunt. On Dec. 23, in the Jamaica section of New York City, some black teen-agers in their turn attacked a white student. They shouted "Howard Beach, Howard Beach!" The season's chants seem to deal with places and people — with who belongs where, or what one expects where. New York Mayor Edward I. Koch would have located the Howard Beach incident elsewhere: "I'd expect this kind of thing to happen in the deep South." And a Deep South mayor, W. W. Godbold of Brookhaven, Miss., replied in kind. Referring to Koch, Godbold said, "I believe Jews like him ... don't know the hell what they are talking about. ... He has murders up there every minute."

There will be more shouts and chants, charges and countercharges. What they have in common is the notion that there are places where "we" belong and "you" don't, places where we "expect" your evil behavior as opposed to our good behavior. Most such cases involve race. It is almost always a key element in notions of who belongs to whom and where. This season a pattern was evident in additional racial incidents at campuses, whether at The Citadel down South or Amherst up North.

It's all about belonging. To belong — I looked it up — is a positive concept. It means "to be connected with in various relations, to form a part of ... for example a family, society or nation, ... to be a native or inhabitant of a place ...." The word may derive from Middle English ideas of "soothing" or "yearning."

Humans are necessarily social animals who must "belong" to others if they are to survive childhood, or simply to survive. They have to be "connected in various relations." They draw strength from — and are nurtured by — family, congregation, tribe and club. To be uprooted, to belong to no place, is the great tragedy of displaced persons, refugees, aliens. To belong is to know a group where people can trust and extend trust — to have a place whose earth one can cherish, whose airport Tarmac one can kiss, whose landscape an inhabitant can describe as "God's Country." Beautiful.

With beauty comes terror. Something in humans also leads them to fear for their places of belonging, to close off the circle of who belongs and who does not. The white youths in Howard Beach and the black youths in Jamaica, assuredly thought of themselves as strong. They gained a sense of strength by belonging, even if momentarily, to a crowd or a crowdlet of their kind and to a place, some turf. Words like Benjamin L. Hooks' term for the Howard Beach youths could apply to all: "would-be Rambos." Descriptive terms like "macho," "vigilante" and "soldier of fortune" well suit self-described defenders of place.

While they think they are strong, the rest of us don't need a professional psychologist to realize they are weak. Anthony Cipriano is a 16-year-old schoolmate of Jon L. Lester, one of the Howard Beach accused. Lester, he said, "was always trying to be bigger than he was. Maybe he was insecure."

Blacks are driven to insecurity about making phone calls from white places like Howard Beach. It's a community described as "neighborly" by those who say they belong there. Whites of Howard Beach say they have reason to be insecure about black criminals who, they charge, come in the night to steal their "belongings." New Yorkers are insecure about the Deep South, and Mississippians like Godbold are secure only in their own place of belonging, far from the crime-filled, Jew-filled New York of their perceptions.

If we could pull up the roots of insecurity or assure security, both in the inward life and in external circumstances, there might be fewer events like those at Howard Beach or The Citadel. Yes, these recent racial incidents have multiple causes. Many of them are subtle and all of them, when raised as possible explanations, are controversial. Some critics simply fault the Reagan administration for creating a climate in which racial attitudes are permitted to worsen. Others, no doubt wide of the mark in the Howard Beach incidents, fault economic problems such as layoffs for creating such a climate and encouraging the incidents. Taken together, such charges do not go deep enough.

Philosophers, theologians, psychologists and therapists have long busied themselves with the concept of belonging. Not to belong — to God or parent or neighbor or nation — is to be nobody; to belong too much is to be smug; to be insecure about belonging is to be dangerous. When race, or race plus religion, complicate the love and the fear for one's place, or when tribalism in the name of the gods leads the insecure to banish or attack the non-belongers, human nature appears in its most dark and ominous form.

Only Utopians envision a world of human security, where everyone could be secure enough to be truly open to others. Such a world would be made up of saints and saints always take risks. They look weak, but they stand between warring mobs, their lives in jeopardy. They set examples that shame attackers at pizza stands or taunters in the public square.

Saints, in the real world, are in short supply, as always. The rest of us, mere citizens, do not have to be passive and benumbed bystanders in the face of violence. Howard Beach, a community of nice people, good kids, has shown its other side: bad seed, bad eggs, bad guys. The sight jolts us into awareness, once again, of how thin the veneer of civilization is, how close to its surface is the jungle in all the places we claim to belong. That awareness can lead to constructive action. We have already seen some, among responsible citizens and church leaders — reconcilers with the courage to stare down violent anger on all sides.

There are too many insecure people and too many warring passions in the world for us to expect Utopia or the Kingdom of God come tomorrow. There may be enough secure people who can restrain passions as they begin working toward more livable communities today.

Martin E. Marty teaches history of modern Christianity at the University of Chicago.

Turn In The Tin Cup

Fred Flaxman

In "Fiddler on the Roof," Reb Nahum, the beggar, makes a very simple and direct request for public funding:

"Alms for the poor!" he pleads. "Alms for the poor!"

"One kopek?" the beggar responds incredulously. "Last week you gave me two kopeks!"

"I had a bad week," the funder replies.

"So if you had a bad week, why should I suffer?"

If Reb Nahum were alive today, he'd be a fund-raiser for public broadcasting.

When Exxon, after months of falling prices at the gas pumps, announced recently that it was phasing out its grants to "Great Performances," Reb Nahum might well have asked: "So if you had a bad year, why should public TV suffer?"

But that's the way public broadcasting is set up in this country. As any viewer who survived the incessant yammering of the recently ended "membership week" knows, it's a tin-cup system peopled by Reb Nahums from coast to coast begging companies, individuals, foundations, states, universities, government agencies and Congress for alms to produce programs and keep their stations on the air.

Is this the way it has to be? Should public broadcasting be operated as an electronic charity? If not, how should it be supported?

—It could be paid for by some special tax — on sales of new TVs, radios and videocassette recorders, for example. But no tax is popular, and some would argue this would tax the majority to support the viewing habits of a minority.

—Congress could appropriate much more money. But that's not likely in the current budget-cutting atmosphere.

—Advertising could be permitted between programs. But this medium was established to be an alternative to ratings-obsessed television. Does the U.S. really need another way for companies to advertise? It's also far from certain that advertising which doesn't interrupt programs could provide enough money to support a quality public broadcasting system.

—Public broadcasting signals could be scrambled and made available only to people who paid for them. But this would eliminate the possibility of poor people discovering ballet by television or their preschoolers learning their ABCs through "Sesame Street." Ultimately, it would widen the knowledge gap between races and classes.

I think the best way to fund public broadcasting would be to charge commercial TV and radio stations for their use of the airwaves that belong to the public.

This would be as fair as taxing truckers for their use of the public highways, commercial airlines for using municipal airports, or oil companies for exploiting offshore reserves.

Our nation's valuable and limited electronic spectrum is virtually given away. And these commercial licenses are then often sold for tremendous private gains. Having a license to operate a commercial TV station in this country is like receiving the government's permission to print money. Commercial TV stations have a history of higher profits than even the oil companies.

Commercial TV and radio stations had gross revenues of more than $27 billion in the United States last year.

Ten percent of this would give public broadcasting enough revenue to stop all the begging and still create a first-class American public-broadcasting system. The current federal appropriation is a mere $159.5 million, and total public broadcasting revenue from all sources is less than $1 billion per year.

For that matter, commercial television should pay for public television because it created the need for its existence.

In the early years of commercial television, there was an NBC Symphony Orchestra, conducted by Arturo Toscanini. There was "Playhouse 90," "Sunrise Semester," "Mr. Wizard" and "Omnibus" (hosted, incidentally, by Alistair Cooke).

These and other programs were gradually replaced by shows that gained larger audiences and thus higher profits for the networks and their stations. The fact that commercial broadcasting no longer provides the nation these cultural and education services is what creates the need for public broadcasting. Why shouldn't they pay for it?

What would happen to all this money should the spectrum-fee idea become a reality? Would it go to support a huge, centralized BBC-like bureaucracy in Washington manned by an East Coast Liberal Establishment? I would suggest not.

Half of the funds resulting from these license fees could be turned over to public radio and television stations by a formula that would allow so many dollars per year for each person in that station's coverage area. This money would be used for high-quality local programs and the costs of operating the stations.

Fred Flaxman is vice president for national program development of public TV station WTTW, Chicago. These views are his own.

Poll

George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — Americans today are considerably less optimistic about the immediate future than they were one year ago, yet continue to be among the most optimistic publics of the 33 nations or territories surveyed.

About half of Americans (53 percent) in the latest survey believe 1987 will be better for them than 1986. One year ago 65 percent said this about the year 1986. Republicans remain far more optimistic than Democrats but the change between surveys has come about equally among all major population groups.

Despite the decline among U.S. citizens in optimism, Americans, after the Italians, express the highest level of optimism of the people of the industrial nations surveyed. In Italy, 57 percent said they expect 1987 to be better than 1986. The Americans are next, followed by the Canadians (46 percent) and Swedes (also 46 percent).

Least optimistic among the publics of the industrial nations surveyed are the Belgians and Finns (only 16 percent see a better year ahead), and the Japanese and Austrians (each with 18 percents).

Among citizens of the developing nations surveyed, the most optimistic are the people of Hong Kong (a British Crown Colony), with 57 percent expecting a better year, followed by the Koreans (56 percent).

Least optimistic are the Ecuadorians (only 17 percent say 1987 will be a better year than 1986), and black South Africans (18 percent).

Here is the question asked in 32 nations (plus Hong Kong):

"So far as you are concerned, do you think 1987 will be better or worse than 1986?"

Among Americans, the high point in the 25-year trend was recorded at the start of 1984 when 70 percent predicted an improvement in the coming 12 months. The low point was recorded at the beginning of 1979 when only one-third of Americans (31 percent) said they anticipated a better year.

Some totals do not add to 100 percent due to rounding.

During the last weeks of 1986, Gallup-affiliated organizations in 32 nations, plus Hong Kong, interviewed representative samples of the public in each country. In the U.S. 1,002 adults 18 years and older were interviewed by telephone during the period Oct. 27-Nov. 24.

For results based on the U.S. sample, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 4 percentage points in either direction.

Roughly similar margins of error can be applied to the results from other nations in the survey.

In addition to sampling error, the reader should bear in mind that question wording and practical difficulties in conducting surveys can introduce error or bias into the findings of opinion polls.

Group Wants Indian's Death Investigated

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A coalition formed to protest the shooting death of a Lumbee Indian by a Robeson County deputy has called for the appointment of a special prosecutor by Gov. Jim Martin and an investigation by the U.S. Justice Department.

The Rev. Franklin C. Reaves, head of HELP, a South Carolina-based poor people's advocacy group, said the coalition also has called for the removal from office of Sheriff Hubert Stone, and his son, Kevin, the deputy who shot Jimmy Earl Cummings Nov. 1.

Martin could not be reached for comment Friday. But his legal counsel, Sam Wilson, who announced last week that he would examine a State Bureau of Investigation report on the death, said he had found no reason to reopen the case.

"I have not completed by examination of the SBI report, but at this time, based on my conversation with (Robeson County District Attorney) Joe Freeman Britt, I have not seen anything to indicate any further investigation is warranted," Wilson said.

"There may be some questions that arise when I finish the report, but at this time, I don't see any," said Wilson, who added that he expected to complete his examination of the report next week.

Sheriff Stone refused to comment Friday. "I don't want to say one thing," he told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

Cummings, 36, of Fairmont, was shot after Deputy Stone pulled him over on a rural road for a routine traffic stop.

Stone told investigators the shooting occurred after Cummings' companion opened the trunk at Stone's request. Stone told investigators Cummings grabbed a five-gallon plastic bucket from the trunk and ran.

Stone told investigators he chased Cummings and shot him when the man turned on him and began swinging the bucket in the deputy's direction. The bucket was later found to carry about four pounds of marijuana.

Stone did not testify at an inquest Nov. 13 examining Cummings' death, at which a jury ruled the death was "by accident andor in self-defense." But investigators from the sheriff's department and the SBI who testified at the hearing said the deputy gave two accounts of the shooting.

A Robeson County sheriff's deputy said Stone had told him moments after the shooting that his gun discharged accidentally as he fell backward into a ditch. But an SBI agent who interviewed Stone several hours after the shooting testified that the deputy said he had killed Cummings in self-defense because he feared for his life.

Stone, who has refused to answer questions about the shooting, was reinstated to his position after the inquest.

In a Friday news conference, Reaves said the Robeson County Citizens for Better Government Coalition sent a letter to Martin requesting the appointment of a special prosecutor to examine the death.

The coalition, which includes Reaves' organization and several black and Indian groups, also has asked Martin to order the special prosecutor to examine the investigation of the incident by Robeson County authorities.

"We know the sheriff's department has done an investigation along with the State Bureau of Investigation," Reaves said. "But we feel the investigation by the sheriff's department is almong like the fox investigation the chickens.

"We also feel that the relationship between people in Robeson County and the SBI agents probably would make a fair investigation by the SBI impossible, and that's why we feel a special prosecutor is needed."

Reaves said the group also was asking the U.S. Justice Department to investigate the possibility that civil rights were violated in the shooting.

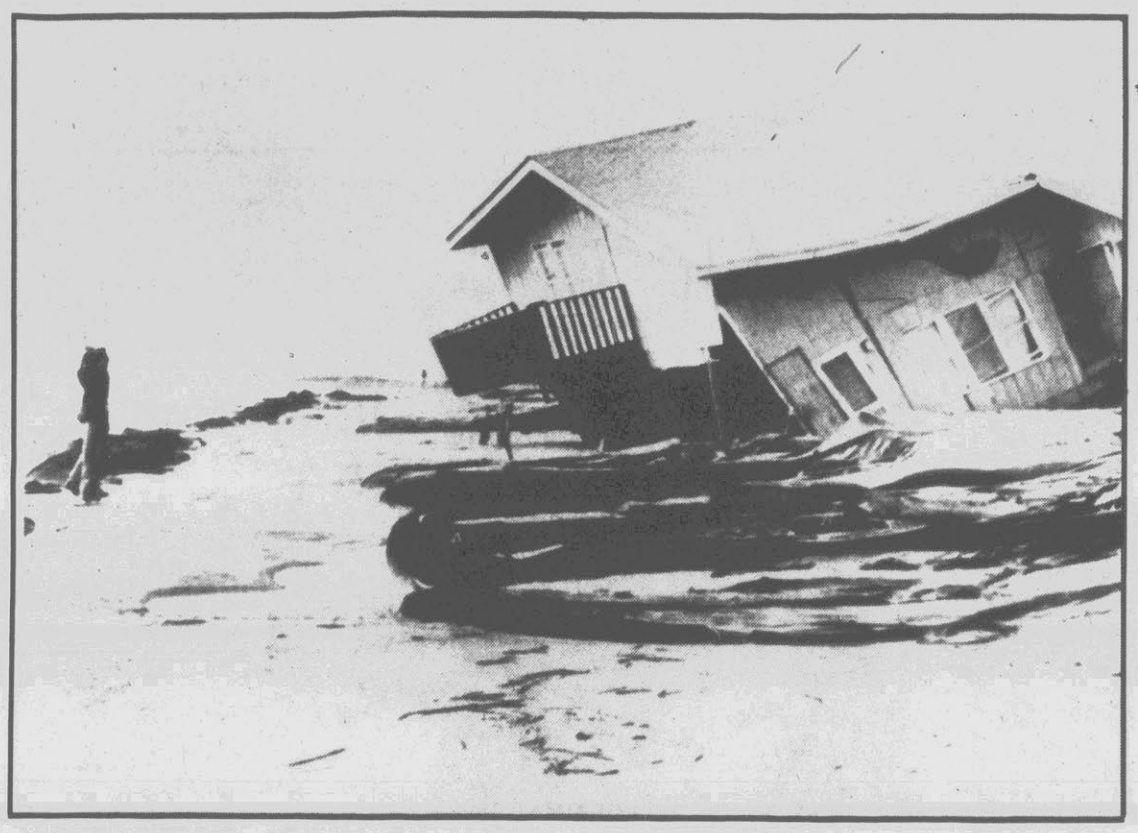

Officials with the SBI in Raleigh and Fayetteville could not be reached for comment Friday.

Cummings' family has asked for help from the North Carolina Civil Liberties Union. George Gardner, director of the Greensboro-based NCCLU, said his organiztion would decide next week whether to take the case.

An official with the national office of the American Civil Liberties Union in New York said he organization was also considering the case.

John Godwin, head of the Robeson County coalition, said after Friday's news conference that if state and federal officials to launch an investigation, his group would hold protest marches in Lumberton and consider marching from Robeson County to the state Capitol in Raleigh.

"I think we'll get some outside help, but we will pressure the governor and the state attorney general to appoint a special prosecutor," he said. "We will let President Reagan and U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese know our demands too. This can't be left in the hands of Robeson County authorities."

HOME DESTROYED — Onlookers survey the damage to a home on Long Beach after a late week storm surge hit the North Carolina coast. Beach officials said over three dozen homes suffered serious structural damage and about a dozen were still threatened by the pounding surf. (AP Laserphoto)

Flood Insurance Claims Expected To Run High

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Insurance company representatives are saying that in many of the state's coastal areas, damage caused by a New Year's Day storm far exceeds that of a December storm that hit the North Carolina coast.

And now, hundreds of people have nothing but a piece of paper between their homes and disaster.

The December storm that hit the coast caused an estimated $5 million to $10 million in damages, while estimates of the New Year's Day storm may soar over $15 million in both North Carolina and South Carolina, officials said.

"I wouldn't be surprised to see a couple hundred claims come out of the last two storms, but so far there are very few total losses," said Spencer Rogers, a coastal engineer with N.C. Sea Grant.

Rogers said he expected that most of the homes damaged this week were covered by flood insurance, because it's available to everyone and many banks require flood insurance for a mortgage. But, he said, some people don't realize that flood insurance is not included in a homeowners policy.

"Flood insurance is a strange bird," Rogers said. "And not many people have the time or inclination to follow it."

The federal government administered all flood insurance until a few years ago. Now, individual insurance agents handle policies that are processed by the National Flood Insurance Program. Premiums are set at the federal level, based on the cost of the structure, how close it is to water and whether it's up on pilings.

In 1986, more than 3,000 claims were opened in North Carolina and about $10.5 million was paid in settlement by the NFIP, said Lynd Morris, the program's public affairs specialist. About 34,000 policies are in force in the state, a large number in coastal areas, she said.

The catastrophic and unpredictable nature of storms, whether inland or coastal, and the large number of claims nationwide make precise flood insurance information hard to come by.

"If you'll forgive the pun, it's fairly fluid data," Ms. Morris said.

Rogers, however, has pulled together flood insurance statistics for North Carolina covering the years 1977-85.

He found that coastal communities made 46 percent of the claims in the eight-year period.

"If you look solely at the North Carolina flood insurance balance sheet, it is paying for itself and more in that time period," Rogers said. "There are two ways of looking at that nationwide. Either we are helping to subsidize flood insurance for the rest of the nation and they'll help us later, or we're putting more in the pot now, and when a big storm comes, we'll spend it."

Graham Paints Bleak Picture For Agriculture

RALEIGH (AP) — The agriculture outlook for North Carolina is "a little dim" as near record-breaking corn production nationwide in 1986 will continue to put downward pressure on producer prices this year, state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham said.

"Grain bins are bursting at the seems," Graham said. "Overproduction and depressed worldwide prices will conntinue to hold down prices for wheat and soybeans."

Graham said North Carolina farmers will also continue to face keen competition in the export market.

"Farm product exports could increase somewhat this year if the U.S. dollar remains weak against the currencies of importing countries and if the economic situation in these countries improves," Graham said.

Graham said the 1986 farm income was down in the state because of several factors.

Farm cash receipts for 1986 are expected to be down some $400 million because of lower producer prices and reduced yields due to the record-breaking drought. Farm cash receipts are projected to be about $3.7 billion in 1986, compared to receipts of $4.1 billion in 1985.

Graham said production costs for the state's farmers may also increase this year because of recent moves by OPEC to support oil prices. In addition, farmers may receive less income in the coming years if Congress reduces the target prices for some field crops.

However, Graham did predict some good news for farmers too.

Graham predicts that tobacco income will improve somewhat in 1987.

"With good weather conditions and grower's commitment to produce top-quality leaf, I believe tobacco income should improve in 1987," Graham said.

Poultry producers will benefit from lower grain prices and the continuing increase in consumption. Graham said that consumption of all meat products probably will rise somewhat if consumer income continues to increase.

PTL To Have New Church

FORT MILL, S.C. (AP) — Site preparation has started for a 30,000-seat church at Heritage USA that PTL President Jim Bakker hopes to see finished in three years.

Bakker, who broke ground on the $100 million Crystal Palace Friday, said he would pay for the structure with contributions to his church and to his nationwide television ministry.

He said no obstacle would stop him in his mission.

"I've fallen in love with this building. It's an obsession," Bakker said. "I'll build this building or die trying. I have a calling from God."

A cold wind whipped flags behind him and numbed about 400 people gathered on a muddy, 40-acre site at the 2,300-acre Christian retreat near Fort Mill. An 11-piece band and two dozen sing ers performed as Bakker taped the hour-long ceremony for his television show.

He joked about his gold-colored hard hat. "We melted down those bathroom fixtures," he said, referring to gold-plated fixtures in a Florida condominium PTL bought in 1983.

Bakker described a glass structure 916 feet by 420 feet, larger than six football fields laid side by side. The building, modeled after the Crystal Palace built in London for the 1851 World's Fair, would be 176 feet tall.

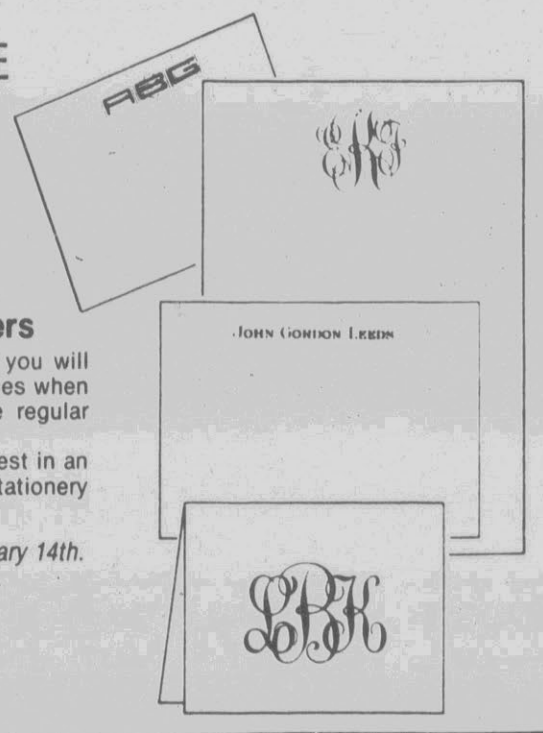

At 1.25 million square feet, it would be five times larger than PTL's biggest project to date — the Heritage Grand hotel and tower, a 1,000-room hotel and retail complex that PTL officials expect to finish this summer.

The palace would include a 5,000-seat TV studio for the "Jim and Tammy" show, a 12,000-seat sanctuary and an 18,000-seat exhibition hall that could be opened to the sanctuary.

Bakker first announced the project in 1985 with a 1988 completion date and a $75 million price tag. The two-year delay, shifting the completion date to 1990, and a seating increase to 30,000 from 24,000 raised that to $100 million.

Roe Messner, whose Kansas-based Messner Enterprises has built much of Heritage USA, said his company would begin site preparation now and start construction in July.

"My Letter to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers"
—Linda Carter

Dear Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers,
My doctor told me I had a very short time to live. Morbid obesity, high blood pressure and epileptic seizures made it impossible for me to do anything for myself. I had tried other diets, but I always gained weight. Thanks to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers, I'm alive today.
Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers is a wonderful place to lose weight. The diet is simple and easy to follow. The doctor and nurses gave me counseling and a lot of moral support. I just can't thank them enough for all their encouragement.
I've lost over 268 pounds and 138 inches. Now my future seems much brighter because I've got so much to live for. My blood pressure is normal without medication and my seizures are less frequent. I had been confined to a wheelchair for 5 years, now I walk with a cane. Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers gave me a second chance on life and it's great to be alive.
Thinserely,
Linda P. Carter

Pilot Is Lucky

APEX, N.C. (AP) — The pilot of a small amphibious plane apparently tried to land in a reservoir near Apex Friday after encountering engine problems, but slid into a wooded area and walked away from the scene unharmed, officials said.

The pilot of the plane, coming from Daytona Beach, Fla., and heading to Atlantic City, N.J., ran into trouble about noon before trying to land in the two-acre reservoir.

Officials at the scene said the pilot walked to an ambulance on old U.S. 1 near apex and was not injured.

First Core Reaction

RALEIGH (AP) — The Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant sustained Saturday its first core reaction since the loading of fuel several months ago, a spokesman for Carolina Power & Light Co. says.

The core reaction occurred at 2:32 p.m., according to CP&L spokesman Mac Harris.

"This is a major step in bringing the plant into service," said R.A. "Al" Watson, vice-president of the Shearon Harris Nuclear Project. "It marks the first time heat has been produced from nuclear fuel (inside the plant) and indicates that we are well on the way to producing heat for customers."

Harris said the initial reaction is one in a series of tests that must be completed at low power, including more test operations of the core itself and of its monitoring equipment.

The license to load fuel and perform low-power testing at the $3.6 billion plant was granted by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission in October and limits the heat output of the core to 5 percent of its capacity, Harris said.

"Once we have done testing at low power, the NCR will have to grant permission for full power operations," Harris added.

Harris said the NRC is meeting Jan. 8 and the Harris plant is on the agenda.

Overseas Gateway

By The Associated Press

RALEIGH (AP) — A senior executive of American Airlines has told the U.S. Department of Transportation that the best choice for new service to London is one that would link London to major hubs at Raleigh-Durham and Nashville, Tenn.

Wesley Kaldahl, American's senior vice president of airline planning, said the two-hub service pattern is far superior to any other service proposal in the DOT's route case.

American is seeking route authority to offer London service from Raleigh-Durham Airport and Nashville and wants to begin the service next summer, in time for the peak travel season, Kaldahl said.

American is investing more than $120 million to develop its Raleigh-Durham hub, which is scheduled to open June 15.

Piedmont at Charlotte-Douglas International Airport is also seeking a London gateway out of North Carolina.

Complaint Denied

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Federal Election Commission has cleared Stuart Epperson of allegations that he illegally used employees of his radio station as campaign workers during his bid last year for Congress.

In a letter to attorneys for Salem Media of North Carolina Inc., attorneys for the FEC say that the commission has closed its file on the use of employees at WTOB as part of Epperson's campaign for the 5th District congressional seat. Salem Media of North Carolina is the parent company of WTOB and is solely owned by Epperson.

P. Lynn Ellis of Winston-Salem had filed a complaint with the FEC last March, saying that employees at the radio station had been used to gather information for Epperson's personal political purposes, rather than just for the station's news coverage.

The letter from the FEC's lawyers, dated Dec. 19, said the information in Ms. Ellis' complaint gave no reason to believe that WTOB violated any federal law.

Epperson failed to unseat Rep. Steve Neal, D-N.C., in the general election in November.

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. (AP) — The corporate official pulls himself into an orange suit, with tie still knotted and dress shoes intact. He steps onto a platform 10 feet above a pool, stretches his arms above his head and jumps.

Ernie Kirstein splashes, smiles and climbs out of the water.

"OK, now we'll find out how well it worked," he says, and unzips the suit.

His clothes are dry, except for a few drops on his tie and around his neck.

It may look like fun and games, but it's all in a day's work at Underwriters Laboratory, where Kirstein is demonstrating some of the tests performed on a flotation suit approved for use by the U.S. Coast Guard.

The actual tests were more science than spectacle, as inspectors took note of 20 characteristics of the suit, measuring the angle at which the body hit the water and testing repeatedly with people of different builds to make sure the suit would perform under all foreseeable conditions. One tester lay face-down in the pool, waiting for the flotation device to roll him around so he could breathe freely, even if unconscious.

A tester at a Minnesota university later donned the suit and lay for eight hours in a tank of ice water. A body-core temperature change of more than 2 degrees would have meant rejecttion from UL. The suit got the official seal of approval.

"In our testing, we try to simulate the worst possible usage of a product in a normal situation," said Al Bernardi, vice president in charge of UL at Research Triangle Park, which the Coast Guard uses for all its marine testing.

The RTP laboratory also tests thousands of other products, including household appliances, insulation and roofing materials.

"We do visual inspections, and then we take the pieces of the product apart and test them," Bernardi said. "After that, we'll do what you might do. If it's a heater, we'll tip it over. We'll put it right next to the wall to see if it can make it catch on fire. We'll put drapes around it.

"Anything that can go wrong or will go wrong is considered," he said.

UL, an independent, not-for-profit corporation, now is the largest testing organization among 2,000 across the country. The business was founded in the 1890s, when insurance underwriters in Chicago asked experts to advise officials of the Columbian Exposition, which featured electricity as one of its main attractions. A blaze started about 20 years earlier by Mrs. O'Leary's cow had impressed a need for safety measures on city officials.

Almost 100 years later, the laboratories still do not test for quality, but for safety.

"We want you to know that if you do have a failure, it will fail in a safe manner," Bernardi said. "If it's a TV set, we don't care about the fine lines and the color. We're interested that the circuits won't produce a fire. With a coffee pot, as long as it boils water safely, we don't care if the coffee is good or not."

The RTP facilities opened in April, joining three other UL laboratories in California, Illinois and New York. About 260 engineers, chemists, mechanics, technicians and support staff work at the $15 million facility, testing more than 600 products a month and drafting guidelines into written standards.

Touring the laboratories is akin to stepping into a world of science fiction, where a dozen hair curlers twirl continuously on a stand for about 30 days to make sure the wiring won't snap, and where huge ovens, freezers, and machines that simulate the effects of the sun and salt water berate navigation hardware to determine if it will endure the sea.

"We can't wait 20 years to see if something will corrode," Bernardi said. "We've got maybe 20 weeks to make sure they retain their properties."

In another laboratory, a small child's fan shaped like a bear awaits inspection. Even without testing the electrical circuitry, Bernardi grimaces.

"This manufacturer is going to have to make some changes," he says, picking up a plug that would fit too easily into a child's mouth.

"The company may not realize that we're going to apply our toy standards to this unit, as well, because a child could think it's a toy," Bernardi said. "And we're going to check the paint pigments" for lead content.

Although many building codes, government regulations and retailer's standards require that appliances and equipment be approved by an independent testing lab, participation in UL's testing program is voluntary.

"Most of them see (the UL seal) as a marketing tool," Bernardi said. "It gives them that little edge."

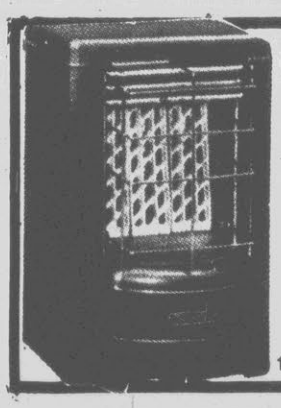

Manufacturers submit a prototype product for testing, which can take from about a month to more than a year. Only about half the products sent for testing pass the first time, Bernardi said. The others are returned to the manufacturer with recommendations for improvements. Most companies make the modifications, but sometimes they don't, he said.

But even once a product is approved, the testing isn't over yet. Inspectors make unannounced visits to the factory and recheck the product four times a year.

"We want it to be safe," Bernardi said. "That's why we're here."

Clients agree on a maximum testing fee, Bernardi said. If the product flunks somewhere in the inspection process, they pay only a portion of the fee that applies. Testing fees generally range from about $400 to $3,000, he said.

Survey Shows Very Few Legislators Want Lottery

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Some legislators say North Carolina is losing money from people who play lotteries in other states, but an Associated Press survey shows there's little enthusiasm among 1987 General Assembly members for establishing a game of chance.

Opponents say the state should not encourage gambling, and that lotteries encourage the poor to squander what little money they have in the face of virtually insurmountable odds against winning.

Gov. Jim Martin, a Republican, and Democratic Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan oppose a lottery, though both acknowledge that the state probably will not raise enough money in fiscal 1987-88 to keep the Basic Education Program on track while giving state workers and teachers the 10 percent pay raise they want.

Of the 170 legislators elected in November, 101 participated in the AP survey, conducted between Nov. 22 and Dec. 23.

Seventy-four said they opposed a lottery, including 54 House members (79.4 percent of those surveyed) and 20 senators (60.6 percent). Only 16 legislators favored it, including seven in the House (10.2 percent) and nine in the Senate (27.2 percent). Eleven were undecided.

Lottery bills were introduced in the 1983 session and again in 1985. All were defeated, although the Senate came within one vote of approving the 1985 version, sponsored by powerful Majority Leader Kenneth Royall, D-Durham.

Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, said those attempting to resurrect the issue in 1987 would be "wasting their breath. It won't pass."

"State government should not enter into any games of chance ...," Payne said. "It should tax primarily profit-making or commercial activity, not a game of chance."

A senator who requested anonymity said, "It's a really bad way to raise money. The more intelligent people know that a 3- to 4-million chance is no chance."

A lottery has drawn the endorsement of the North Carolina Association of Educators' political action committee, PACE. That group, and other lottery supporters, see it as a way to generate badly needed revenues for funding the Basic Education Program and increasing teacher salaries without resorting to politically unpopular tax increases.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, said a lottery was the only politically viable source for badly needed revenue. "I think North Carolina ought to avail itself of that opportunity," she said. "It works beautifully in other states."

Many North Carolinians participate in lotteries elsewhere, she added. "A lot of our money is going to Canada."

Most of the lawmakers who favored a lottery said the revenue it generates should go to education. Other uses mentioned were indigent health care, programs for the elderly, programs to re-train workers whose jobs are lost to foreign competition or technological advances, and state parks.

Nearly a dozen legislators, some of whom favor a lottery and some of whom oppose it, called for a statewide referendum on the question.

"It's too hot to handle in the General Assembly alone," said Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus. "We should put it in the hands of the people and let them put up or shut up."

State Records 12 Fatalities

By The Associated Press

Twelve people have died on North Carolina highways during the New Year's holiday period, including two people killed in a Sampson County crash, the state Highway Patrol said Saturday.

Paula Lenora Matthews, 16, of Roseboro and Angela Dawn Matthews, 14, of Autreyville, were killed when the car in which they were both riding crashed into another vehicle at an intersection of U.S. 13 west of Newton at 6:30 p.m. Friday, the patrol said. Officials said the girls were not related.

Gregory Theodore Transou, 23, of Welcome, died at 2:30 a.m. Saturday when the car he was driving hit several trees in Davidson County 9.9 miles northeast of Lexington, the patrol said.

Two other deaths were considered weather-related.

Melvin Earl Moore, 62, of Burlington, died Friday morning when his four-wheel-drive vehicle collided with a truck on an icy patch of N.C. 87 six miles northwest of Burlington, troopers said.

Carl Shook, 51, of Marshall, died at 7:15 a.m. Thursday when his car ran off a snow-covered road and overturned in a creek in Madison County.

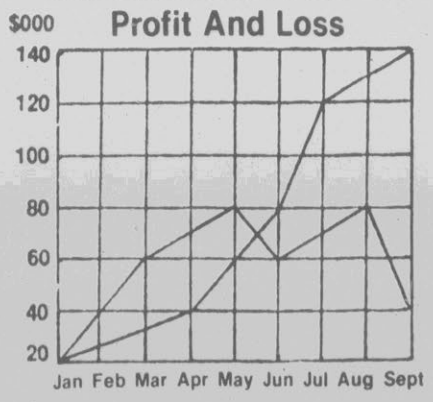

William Virgil Hudson, 65, Albemarle, died at 11:10 a.m. Friday in Stanly County when his car ran off N.C. 24, troopers said.

Donald Kay Lee, 34, Goldsboro, died at 7:10 p.m. Friday in Wayne County when his car overturned, troopers said.

Mavis Troy, 53, of Fayetteville, died when she was struck by a vehicle while attempting to cross N.C. 24, in Cumberland County at 8:45 p.m. Thursday.

On Thursday afternoon in Onslow County, Gregory Yancey, 20, Pansy Yancey, 48, and Jacqueline Jansen, 60, of Emerald Isle, died when the car driven by Yancey collided with Ms. Jansen's vehicle.

Democrat-Controlled Congress Eyes Fast Start

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 100th Congress convenes Tuesday with Democrats — controlling both houses for the first time in the Reagan era — seeking to seize the initiative by focusing on trade, arms control, domestic programs and the economy.

Familiar faces will be assuming new leadership roles as the Republicans' six-year hold on the Senate ends and a new speaker takes over in the House.

The loss of eight Republican Senate seats in Nov. 4 elections gave Democrats a 55-45 majority. The Democrats also slightly increased their margin in the House to 258-177.

Lingering controversy over the Iran-Contra affair also will be pushed to the fore as the House and Senate each establish special investigative committees. But leaders scoff at the notion that the case will sidetrack regular business.

With Reagan starting his final two years in the White House, both parties will be mindful that the record of this Congress will be a major issue in the 1988 presidential election.

Swift legislative action has been promised by Rep. Jim Wright, D-Texas, who succeeds retiring Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., as speaker of the House, and Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., becomes Senate majority leader.

"Normally, the Senate and House have sat around until after the president's State of the Union message, but this year we're not going to do that," said Byrd, who succeeds Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., as majority leader.

Byrd said he has been urging new committee chairmen "to get their committees operating early — organize early, conducting oversight early, holding hearings on legislation early and reporting legislation early."

Byrd, who has led Democrats in the Senate for a decade, will become the first senator to return as majority leader after a term as minority leader.

Wright, meanwhile, who has been House majority leader, will bring a different flavor to the speakership.

Wright and Byrd, both moderate-to-conservative within their party, are expected to have similar views on most issues. They are likely to avoid the friction that has at times marked relations between Byrd and the more liberal O'Neill.

"Jim Wright and I have a very good rapport and we're going to be seeing things pretty much eye to eye," Byrd said. He said he will take highlight issues that surfaced in Nov. 4 elections.

"The people indicated they wanted better checks and balances here, they're going to get them," Byrd said. "They're going to get a lot of it in this oversight, the fulfulling of the oversight function that is the responsibility of the Congress under the Constitution."

After both houses convene at noon on Tuesday, resolutions will be introduced in both chambers to establish two select committees to investigate the diversion of Iranian arms sales profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The Democratic chairmen of those two committees have said public hearings are unlikley before early February.

Byrd cautioned against expecting a quick conclusion.

"At the same time, they're not out there to delay," he said. "But that need not distract us from getting on with the rest" of the legislative agenda.

Also expected is renewed debate on U.S. aid to the Nicaraguan rebels, which could lead to legislation on covert operations, arms sales and the National Security Council.

The first confrontation with the administration is expected to come on legislation to clean up the nation's waterways, a measure Reagan vetoed last year despite unanimous passage in both houses.

Administration officials have offered a compromise to avoid a fight, indicating the president would accept $12 billion in long-term spending to help clean up dirty waterways.

The amount is twice what the administration had originally proposed but still short of the $18 billion contained in the Clean Water Act that Reagan vetoed last Nov. 6.

Also topping the agenda will be trade legislation.

A major trade bill passed the House last May but it was never acted up in the then-GOP-controlled Senate.

The House is expected to pass a similar bill quickly and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, the incoming chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, has said he will move to get a trade bill through his committee and onto the Senate floor, possibly by summer.

Administration officials have resisted previous congressional efforts to pass trade legislation saying they were no more than protectionist measures.

But faced with a Democratic-led Congress, there have been indications the administration may seek a compromise trade bill.

"The first imperative in the 100th Congress will be to come to grips with our American trade deficit and the steady decline in American competitiveness," Wright said.

"Last year, the administration would not work with us. It countered our legislative efforts with slogans. ... This year, I sincerely hope for a more cooperative atmosphere," Wright added.

Meanwhile, the administration's arms control record is likely to be aired as part of a move Byrd plans to bring up for ratification two treaties with the Soviet Union which have gone unsigned since the mid-1970s.

Both pacts would restrict underground nuclear testing.

On the budget front, the administration is releasing its $1 trillion fiscal 1988 spending plan on Monday. The House and Senate budget committees plan to begin hearings on the plan soon, with the Senate panel beginning work on Wednesday.

The administration — seeking to meet a mandated deficit target of $108 billion — is recommending a variety of domestic spending cuts that Congress has all but ignored in the past.

Other key legislative items for the 100th Congress:

—A rewrite of the legislation governing major programs for elementary and secondary education.

—A rewrite of a major highway bill that died in the 99th Congress.

—Changes in the massive 1985 bill containing the governemt's farm price support programs.

—Overhaul of campaign finance laws.

Tax Revisions, Spending Link Said Economy Key

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, which was a major disappointment in 1986, is starting the new year with a big question mark: How will the massive overhaul of the tax code affect the spending decisions of millions of Americans?

The answer to that question, many economists believe, could determine whether the country topples into a recession in 1987.

Few economists predict that the four-year-old economic recovery will end this year, but many are worried about the economic jolts that will come as American businesses and consumers adjust to a dramatically different tax environment.

Some analysts even predict that economic growth, as measured by the gross national product, will register a negative number in the current January-March quarter, for the first time since the last recession in 1982.

The reason for the pessimism is a belief that American consumers and businesses shifted purchases they would normally have made in 1987 into the closing months of 1986 to qualify for expiring tax breaks.

Consumers were bombarded by advertisements urging them to purchase new cars in December while they could still deduct state and local sales tax levies from their federal taxes, a privilege taken away in the tax law Congress passed in 1986. There is evidence many buyers responded to the pitch.

There were also signs that many businesses were escalating their purchases of computers, heavy machinery and other investments in the closing weeks of 1986 to qualify this equipment for more generous depreciation write-off allowances under the old tax law.

In addition, builders were stepping up construction activity in a rush to complete and occupy apartments and office buildings before Jan. 1 when real estate investments would be treated less favorably.

Economists are worried that GNP growth will sag badly in the new year now that the impetus to beat the tax changes is no longer there.

Michael Evans, head of a Washington forecasting firm, predicted that the GNP would fall at an annual rate of 1 percent in the January-March quarter. But Evans said he was not forecasting a recession, defined as two consecutive quarters of negative GNP growth, because he feels an improving trade deficit will lift economic prospects in the spring.

A big improvement in trade is the key factor analysts cite when contending that prospects of a new recession are unlikely.

Before last week, economists believed they were seeing signs of such an improvement in three consecutive months of lower trade deficits. But then, the government reported Wednesday that the November trade deficit had swelled to a record $19.2 billion, including the largest imbalance with Japan in history, $6.7 billion.

Much of the increase came from a big rise in imported cars. Analysts say the tax changes spurred part of this increase as importers rushed to get foreign cars into showrooms before the end of the year.

"The sales tax on a $40,000 imported luxury car is not an insignificant deduction on a person's federal income tax," said Douglas Cliggott, senior economist at Merrill Lynch.

Many analysts still believe that the long-range trend of the trade deficit is downward and this will help keep the economy out of a recession in 1987.

Merill Lynch is forecasting that the rise in business and consumer spending should translate into economic growth of 2.2 percent in the October-December quarter, but this growth will slump to just 1.3 percent in the January-March quarter. The government's first estimate of the fourth-quarter growth rate will not come until Jan. 22.

"The year is going to start off very slowly, but as the trade deficit improves we will begin to see a pick-up in growth," Cliggott said, predicting growth for the entire year of 2.3 percent.

About two-thirds of the 50 economists surveyed monthly by Blue Chip Economic Forecasts, an investment newsletter, also believe he first quarter will have the lowest growth of the entire year. Most expect growth for all of 1987 to be 2.5 percent, little changed from the sluggish 2.6 percent growth expected when all the data on 1986 is in.

One of the factors holding back growth is a belief that consumers, who will enjoy a tax cut with the new law, will use part of the savings to pay off old debt and build u badly depleted bank accounts rather than spend all the tax cut.

This prediction, coupled with expectations for little if any improvement in the unemployment rate, will mean that the country should have its third straight year of sub-par growth, analysts believe.

"Personal savings rates are at tremendously low levels and consumer debt is at an all time high," Cliggott said.

An Answer To Disappearing Tax Deductions.

Seeing those valuable deductions for consumer credit interest go away?

Wachovia Equity BankLine® helps you keep them.

You could watch the new tax law do away with most of the itemized deductions for the interest you pay on such things as your car loan, credit cards or charge accounts. Or, you could continue to take those deductions, within certain limitations, with Wachovia Equity BankLine. A line of credit secured by the equity in your home.

Hold the line on deductions.

You can consolidate your present credit balances with Equity BankLine or use it to borrow in the future. And if you itemize, the interest you pay for the money you borrow will, in most cases, still be deductible. (Certain limitations may apply.)

A price break on a tax break.

Because your rate is based on Wachovia's Prime Rate,* the interest you pay for the money you borrow on Equity BankLine may be substantially lower than on other types of credit you may have.

Your Credit Line	Your Interest Rate	Annual Percentage Rate for December, 1986

East Coast Storm Blamed For 19 Deaths; Rain Pounds Northwest

By ROGER PETTERSON
Associated Press Writer

A windy new storm brought heavy rain to the Northwest on Saturday with snow for mountain ski resorts that have had one of their worst seasons on record, and New England skiers rejoiced at up to 2 feet of snow from the storm that battered the East Coast.

At least 19 deaths were reported from the eastern storm, which blew heavy surf ashore at the same time as unusually high tides, and the snow caused numerous traffic accidents.

National Guard troops with bulldozers were called out Saturday to repair a 35-foot section of sea wall that washed away Friday at Marshfield, Mass.

Winter storm warnings were issued for the Shasta-Siskiyou mountain areas of northern California and the northern Sierra Nevada and Lake Tahoe region, where up to 18 inches of snow was possible. Locally heavy rain fell along the coast of northern California.

Highways were snowpacked in Oregon's mountains and in northern California's mountains, "the snow is really coming down, the radio's really going," said California Department of Transportation dispatcher Debbie Kunin, who was called in to work before dawn to handle radio traffic.

She said snow chains were required on Interstate 80 and U.S. 50, the major east-west highways across the Sierra Nevada and a wind gust to 75 mph was reported in western Nevada.

Before Saturday's storm, insufficient snow had kept most of the Sierra Nevada resorts closed for the holidays.

Colorado's mountains got up to a foot of snow Friday, the first major snow since Dec. 1. "We're just so excited we're jumping up and down," said Theo Padnos of the Frisco Nordic Center.

Up to 16 inches fell in Utah's mountains, giving the Alta and Snowbird resorts more snow in one day than they got in all of December.

In New England, from 1 to nearly 2 feet of snow fell from Friday's storm and while snow-covered highways slowed travel, skiers and ski resort operators welcomed the white blanket.

Waterville Valley in New Hampshire was sold out Saturday with a crowd of about 5,000, said marketing director Sara Widness. Mount Sunapee got 14 inches with snow still falling Saturday and also had to limit sales, said spokeswoman Joanne Andrews.

"It has been spectacular," Widness said. "New Year's Day, which traditionally is a slow day, went off the boards for us. It was the best day we ever had."

Elsewhere in New Hampshire, the National Weather Service said Londonderry got more than 23 inches. Atop Mount Washington, at 6,288 feet the highest peak in the Northeast and site of some of the planet's nastiest weather, wind blew at a sustained 85 mph Friday with gusts to 114 mph.

A foot or more of snow fell in Vermont and Killington spokesman Dick Courcelle said urgings from the state Highway Department to minimize travel until roads were cleaned up hadn't hindered business at the East's biggest ski resort.

"The last thing that inhibits a skier is snow," Courcelle said. "It may slow you down a little bit, but you're still going to get here."

New York state got up to 15 inches of snow in the Catskills, and roads were closed overnight in some areas. Rochester got only 6 inches but that was blamed for more than 750 accidents.

In Maine, more than 14 inches of snow was reported at Portland's airport and the weather service said that was the largest 24-hour snowfall there in the last decade.

But water had receded from streets and basements along Portland's waterfront, where the tide crested more than 2 feet above normal Friday, the third highest since 1912.

Elsewhere on the Atlantic, the storm caused an estimated $16 million damage along the coasts of the Carolinas and Virginia on New Year's Day, and an estimated 350 people were evacuated Friday in Massachusetts.

"I'll not stay in this house through another one," said Topsail Beach, N.C., resident Dot Brown. "You think it's over, and then the wind shifts and you hear those boards breaking and hitting the house."

Deaths from the East Coast storm included four in North Carolina; two in Virginia; four in Pennsylvania; two in New York; two in Vermont; one in New Jersey; one in Connecticut; and three in Massachusetts. In addition, one person was killed on an icy highway in Michigan.

N.Y. Racial Attack Victim Snubs State Prosecutors

By GARY LANGER
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A black man who survived a deadly racial attack by a white gang stuck to his refusal to cooperate with prosecutors Saturday, saying investigators weren't interested in hearing his side of the story.

"They only wanted to hear part of it and not all of it," Cedric Sandiford, 36, said during a two-hour news conference at a Harlem church. "So I decided to discontinue this masquerade."

Sandiford said he would cooperate only with a special prosecutor, and called on Gov. Mario Cuomo to appoint one.

Sandiford's stepson, Michael Griffith, 23, was struck by a car and killed fleeing the gang of whites that attacked as the black men left a pizza parlor in Howard Beach, Queens, on Dec. 20. Sandiford and Timothy Grimes, 19, escaped.

Three white youths were arrested in the attack, but Queens Criminal Court Judge Ernest Bianchi on Monday dropped murder charges against them for lack of evidence after Sandiford refused to testify.

The attack heightened racial tensions in the city, sparking attacks by black gangs that police called retaliation. Officials this weekend were evaluating security for the city's public schools which reopen Monday after winter vacation.

Sandiford's lawyer, Alton Maddox Jr., said his client believes that the driver of the car that hit Griffith was part of the mob and ran him down intentionally.

Maddox has demanded that charges be lodged against the man, Dominick Blum, 24, before Sandiford cooperates with prosecutors.

Police have said their investigation indicates that Blum, a court officer and the son of a police officer, had nothing to do with the mob and he has not been charged.

Sandiford on Saturday did not specify his allegations against Blum, and Maddox refused to let Sandiford answer questions.

Maddox and Grimes' lawyer, C. Vernon Mason, said Saturday they intend to use the incident to spur political and economic advancement for black people.

"This is a historic occasion," Maddox told the audience at the Abyssinian Baptist Church. "It is a day that long will be remembered in the lives of our people in their quest for liberation and freedom."

Maddox and Mason berated politicians, police, prosecutors and reporters, saying they perpetuated a racist system which denies justice to blacks.

Nuke Plant Shut Down

CRYSTAL RIVER, Fla. (AP) — Florida Power Corp. officials shut down the utility's nuclear power plant after increased pressure weakened a seal on a reactor coolant, a spokesman said.

The shutdown, expected to last at least two weeks while workers replace seals on all four coolant pumps, was the third in the past year at the plant 60 miles north of Tampa, said spokesman Mark Jacobs.

The plant, which was restarted Christmas Day, was operating at 40 percent capacity, producing 318 megawatts, when the reactor was shut down Friday, Jacobs said.

He said pressure on the first three seals of one pump started to rise Thursday. Company officials ordered the shutdown after the first seal weakened and put additional pressure on two back-up seals.

"At no time was public safety threatened. This is considered to be a non-reportable incident. The seal package did not lose its integrity and there was no spill," said Jacobs.

The reactor coolant system transfers heat from the radioactive reactor core to a steam generator, where water in a separate system is turned to steam to drive turbines that spin the electrical generators.

The 800-pound, 30-inch-high seals are inside pumps that cycle about 90,000 gallons of cooling water each hour. Each seal costs $100,000, said Jacobs.

The seals on all four reactor coolant pumps were replaced last spring during a nearly six-month shutdown for repairs after a shaft in one of the pumps snapped.

The plant operated from June 20 until Nov. 12 when it was shut down due to a short circuit in one of the 68 electrical motors that raise and lower control rods in the reactor core.

A restart was attempted Nov. 22 but was called off when cooling water leaked. The plant was restarted Dec. 25, but power was cut back Dec. 28 because of a faulty pump.

Officials Close In On Fire Cause

By ED GAULIN
Associated Press Writer

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP) — Investigators have found "important pieces of the jigsaw" but the cause of a New Year's Eve hotel fire that killed at least 95 people will not be known for days, Police Superintendent Carlos Lopez Feliciano said Saturday.

He said more than 150 survivors and witnesses to Wednesday's disaster have been interviewed and more than 200 agents have collected data they hope will show how and where the inferno erupted.

"We have a lot of important pieces of the jigsaw," he told reporters at the blackened Dupont Plaza Hotel following a 2½ hour meeting that included agents from the FBI, the federal Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms and local police. He declined to disclose details of the meeting.

At the end of Friday's search, which produced 40 bodies, Lopez Feliciano said he thought all victims had been found. Even so, a final search for any additional victims was mounted Saturday.

"At this moment, 95 is the final total, I hope," he said.

The fire, reportedly accompanied by explosions, swept through the hotel's ballroom, casino and lower four floors. More than 140 people were injured, and 21 remained hospitalized Saturday.

The investigation from the start has focused on the possibility of arson. Gov. Rafael Hernandez Colon repeatedly has cited a labor dispute at the hotel as a possible factor, though he has not blamed any person or group. He has not disclosed evidence to support suggestions the blaze was deliberately set.

The San Juan Star reported Saturday that three people have given signed statements to prosecutors saying a union official told them to leave the casino moments before the fire broke out because "things are going to happen any minute now."

Justice Secretary Hector Rivera Cruz declined comment when asked about the report. However, when asked if arson was a more likely cause of the fire than accident, he said, "I think so."

Lopez Feliciano said evidence was being analyzed in laboratories. He declined to answer reporters' questions about what evidence had been collected, including whether any bomb fragments or incendiary devices were recovered.

The Teamsters union, which represents most of the hotel's approximately 250 unionized employees, has vehemently rejected suggestions of connection between the labor dispute and the fire. The union has offered a $15,000 reward for information leading to the arrest of anyone responsible for the blaze.

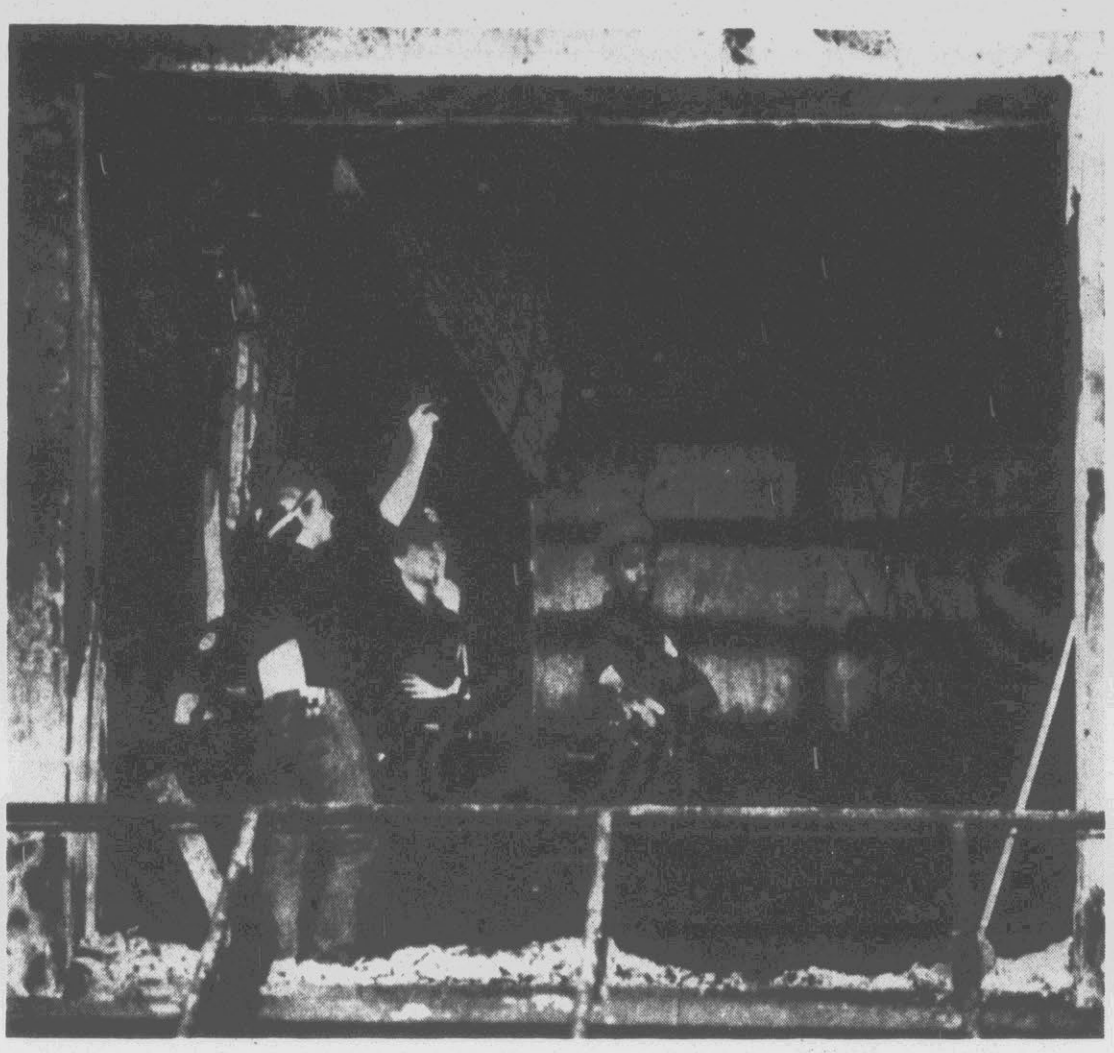

About 200 people, including survivors, gathered at a memorial service Saturday celebrated by Cardinal Luis Aponte Martinez.

Others returned to the State Medical Center to await word on the identification of friends or relatives whose bodies were burned beyond recognition.

Thirty-eight victims had been identified by Saturday.

The beachfront hotel is in the heart of San Juan's Condado tourist district. For the first time since the fire, police barricades along the strip were taken down and traffic was allowed to pass in front of the Dupont Plaza.

The fire apparently was the second-worst hotel fire in U.S. history. The Winecoff Hotel fire in Atlanta on Dec. 7, 1946 left 119 people dead.

Relatives Endure Painful Wait

By BETHANY KANDEL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Saturday should have been a happy day for Michelina Palemine. It was her son's 43rd birthday.

But instead of celebrating, she awaited further word about her son, Diego "Dickie" Palemine, one of many still missing in Puerto Rico after the New Year's Eve fire at te Dupont Plaza Hotel in San Juan that killed at least 95 people.

"It's so terrible, so terrible," said Mrs. Palemine, 69, as she broke into tears during a telephone interview Saturday from her Staten Island home.

Mrs. Palemine said that her son, a tavern owner, had gone to the hotel casino and was at the craps table when the fire broke out.

His wife, Catherine, was in her room getting her clothes ready for a New Year's Eve party, she said.

"She saw smoke and wanted to go downstairs to tell her husband, but she couldn't get down," Mrs. Palemine said as she choked back tears. "She got to the roof, where a helicopter picked her up. Then she was taken to the hospital with smoke inhalation."

Three of the Palemine's four children and a niece were at the hotel's pool and were unharmed, she said. Their eldest child, Cathy, 20, forfeited the family's annual trip to stay home and help run the tavern.

Although Palemine has not yet been declared dead, his mother expects the worst.

Her daughter-in-law has already checked all the hospitals. "Today she's going around looking at all the bodies," she said.

Early Saturday morning, the children — ages 8, 14, 18 and the 15-year-old neice — returned from Puerto Rico, still in their bathing suits.

"The little boy had no shoes," she said. "They had no clothes. Nobody helped them. It's a shame."

Eighteen-year-old Eleanor Palemine returned to Puerto Rico on a later flight to be with her mother for the continuing search, her grandmother said.

Relatives and friends of the other missing people also waited anxiously for news of their loved ones.

In Connecticut, friends and relatives of seven residents missing began gathering dental records on Saturday. The missing residents all were part of a group of 33 that was on its sixth yearly excursion to the Caribbean to usher in the new year.

"Seven of our friends are missing. It's a death watch," said contractor John Benevento, who escaped the fire by throwing a chair through a window and jumping to a concrete patio.

Casino Fraud Arrests

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — The FBI has arrested two members of a Florida-based ring that swindled casinos in Nevada and New Jersey of at least $2 million in a complex credit-fraud scheme, officials said.

The ring of six men used 14 aliases and references from New York and Florida banks to obtain cash and credit at Las Vegas, Reno and Atlantic City, N.J., casinos since January 1984, according to a federal complaint released Friday.

VOA Says China Broadcast Criticism 'Unjustified'

By HENRY GOTTLIEB
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government's Voice of America, which estimates it has 50 million listeners in China, said Saturday it has made careful efforts to keep its broadcasts free of material that might stimulate the current wave of anti-government protests there.

Criticism of the agency's broadcasts by the official Chinese media is therefore "unjustified," said VOA Director Richard Carlson.

"We have been extraordinarily careful; we don't want to incite the demonstrators," Carlson said in an interview with The Associated Press. "We're not engaged in polemics."

On Friday, Hsinhua, China's government-run news agency, criticized VOA for quoting liberal American commentator I.F. Stone's statements of support for students who have been demonstrating in Shanghai, Peking and other cities for democratic rights.

In other commentary that appeared to be directed against VOA, Hsinhua mentioned "inflammatory" reports by a foreign news agency.

Carlson said he viewed the complaints as "very mild, considering the fact that the government owns the printing presses." He said that from the start of the demonstrations two weeks ago, the VOA, which has a cooperative relationship with the Chinese government, has taken pains to report only the facts about the protests.

Unlike responses to other world events, the VOA has carried no commentaries, analyses or editorials about the demonstrations as a precaution against being accused of airing a point of view, he said.

He said all the VOA reporting on the Chinese protests has been based on eyewitness accounts by its China correspondents or on reports that are carried independently by at least two other Western news organizations.

"And in those cases, we always say what the source of the information is," Carlson said. Some reports on the protests that the VOA deemed "speculative" have not been aired, he said.

Noting that the VOA is a U.S.-government entity, Carlson said, "we're at the junction of diplomacy and journalism and when it gets down to serious things we opt for journalism."

The raising of the issue of VOA's coverage of the Chinese demonstrations underscored the special relationship between the U.S. broadcasting outlet and China.

Since 1979, with the warming of relations between Washington and Peking, Chinese jamming of VOA has stopped and joint projects have been instituted, notably the use of the U.S. outlet as a tool for teaching English in the country.

Carlson said the agency estimates it has an audience of 50 million Chinese people; Chinese officials have given even higher estimates, he said. In addition to round-the-clock English programs beamed to the country from transmitters in Greece and the Philippines, China gets 10 hours of Mandarin programming from the VOA each day.

As a result, most of the up-to-date news on the demonstrations in China has come from the VOA, rather than the official Chinese media, according to reports from the country.

A part-time VOA correspondent who happened to be in Shanghai when the protests began, was mobbed by appreciative demonstrators and had to be rescued by police "like a rock star in a crowd of fans," Carlson said.

The VOA has had full time reporters in Peking since 1981, Mark Hopkins, who reports in English and Sinclair Key, who reports in Mandarin.

Carlson said the report that drew criticism from the Chinese news agency was based on a news conference in Washington last week attended by Stone, a noted writer and lecturer who advocated closer relations between the United States and China long before such ties were formed.

Stone's comments in support of the demonstrators were not broadcast directly but were quoted in a dispatch read by an announcer. Carlson said that after an initial broadcast he ordered the script changed to include a line noting that Stone advocated close U.S.-Chinese ties.

Stone, a leading American leftist since the early 1950s and an outspoken critic of the Reagan administration, said in an interview on Saturday he was "delighted and surprised" that the U.S. government's own media outlet broadcast his views to China.

The Chinese reaction, he theorized, stemmed from his use of Marxist theory to justify the demonstrations, and a belief that his comments would carry more sting because he was a longtime friend of communist China.

"I was attacking from within," he said.

Israel Notes Proof It Had No Role In Sales Deal

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said Saturday Israel can prove to the United States that it did not know proceeds from U.S. arms sales to Iran were being diverted to Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

Shamir said on Israel radio's English-language broadcast that U.S. officials who made such allegations are wrong, "and we can very easily convince them they are wrong."

"When we will have an opportunity to explain to them about our part in all these matters, it will be very easy for us to prove that these allegations are baseless," Shamir said.

The premier indicated the Israeli explanations would be made to U.S. congressmen probing Israel's role in the Iranian arms deal. Shamir has promised Israeli cooperation once such a probe begins. He indicated earlier such cooperation should be on a government-to-government level, and that he would not allow questioning of the Israelis involved by U.S. officials.

According to a New York Times report, Attorney General Edwin Meese III told a congressional panel last week that U.S. Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North claimed the transfer of money to the Contras was proposed by David Kimche, former director general of the Israeli Foreign Ministry.

North reportedly testified last month that he fully briefed his Israeli counterpart, Shamir aide Amiram Nir, about funneling funds to the Contras.

North was fired from his post at the National Security Council after the Reagan administration said millions of dollars in proceeds from the arms deal were diverted to the U.S.-backed Contras in violation of a congressional ban.

Kimche said Saturday that anyone who claimed Israel knew of the diversion of funds was guilty of "slander against myself, and much more so against the state of Israel."

Kimche, speaking on the same broadcast as Shamir, added that Israel "had no interest whatsoever to bring in the subject of the Contras."

"We sold arms to Iran at the request of the Americans," he said.

Referring to reports that North claimed Kimche proposed sending money to the Contras, Kimche said: "If he said it, he's a liar."

Kimche said he only met North twice in 1985, with other people present, and that the subject of the Contras was not raised.

Shamir also denied reports that the United States has asked Israel to desist from future arms supplies to Iran.

"It's not Israel's policy to sell arms to Iran," Shamir said.

Israeli officials said earlier they got involved in the transaction as a favor to the United States.

Shamir also said on the broadcast he would welcome a visit by Jordan's King Hussein to Jerusalem and would be willing to travel to Amman for peace talks.

American Holds Off ECU, 69-67

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

WASHINGTON D.C. — East Carolina came back from a 19-point deficit but couldn't get the shot it needed in the final seconds as it lost to American, 69-67, in college basketball action Saturday night.

The Pirates had clawed back from the 19-point hole and had a chance to tie or go ahead in the final seconds but the Pirates were unable to capitalize on two scoring chances in the final 10 seconds.

First, Marchel Henry missed a shot in the lane with seven seconds remaing and then after retaining possession on a jump ball call, ECU couldn't get off a shot in the final five seconds.

"We were looking inside for Marchel," said ECU coach Charlie Harrison. "(On the final possession) we were looking for either John Williams sprinting left or Reid Lose left. We had a little screen set for Marchel inside but Howard didn't see him."

Still, the fact that the Pirates were even in a position to win was surprising in itself. A furious second half rally keyed by better defensive play got the Pirates back in to the game.

ECU led 67-64 with 1:33 remaining when Henry, who had 26 points, hit two free throws.

But American came back tie the game on a to three-point goal by Pat Witting, his fourth of the game. Henry then missed for ECU and the Eagles' Frank Ross came down and connected on a jumper that gave American the lead and the game.

But ECU still had a chance to tie or win on a three point goal but failed to get the basket it needed.

John Williams came off the bench for the Pirates and scored 10 second half points.

"John got the ball, got into a rythym," Harrison said. "If John just makes good decisions, he's a good ball player. I think our bench gave us a lift."

ECU forced 10 second-half turnovers to aid its cause. Keith Sledge's three-pointer at the 7:27 mark tied the game for the first time since the opening minutes of the game.

Henry's turnaround with 5:15 left gave ECU its first lead of the second half at 63-62. American's Mike Sampson countered with a basket to give American the lead, 64-63.

Williams then hit a running jumper to put ECU back out in front, 65-64. Henry's free throws put ECU up by three before Ross' final shot gave American all the points it would need.

"The key to the comeback was our press," Williams said. "A lot of their turnovers came from that. We should have put up the intensity from the first half. They hurt us on the three-point play."

The Pirates outscored the Eagles 29-12 over the final 13 minutes but, still, it wasn't enough.

"I told our guys, ECU has good athletes," said American coach Ed Tapscott. "They have comebacks several times and I expected it tonight."

Frank Ross was the game's high scorer with 30 points, two of which were the game winner.

Redskins, Browns Move On

Schroeder Leads Skins Over Bears

CHICAGO (AP) — In guaranteeing that the NFL will have a new champion for the seventh straight year, Jay Schroeder and the Washington Redskins demonstrated to the Chicago Bears that even the league's most touted defense isn't enough when the offense has a quarterback literally picked up off the street.

The Redskins, outscoring Chicago 20-0 in the second half, knocked the defending champion Bears from the Super Bowl derby 27-13 on Saturday as Schroeder threw two touchdown passes to Art Monk.

The Washington defense was just as effective against a Chicago offense run by Doug Flutie, the Heisman Trophy winner and USFL millionaire signed at midseason as insurance for the injured Jim McMahon. Flutie was then forced into service as a playoff quarterback by the ineffectiveness of Mike Tomczak and Steve Fuller.

The Redskins held Walter Payton to 38 yards in 14 carries and literally allowed nothing but a 50-yard TD pass from Flutie to Willie Gault and two long kickoff returns by Dennis Gentry. Late in the first half, it forced the Bears to settle for a field goal after Mike Richardson had returned an interception 43 yards to the Redskins 4.

"I thought if we scored 21 points we had a chance," Schroeder said of going against a defense that had set an NFL record for fewest points allowed during the regular season, 187. Instead, he went six better against a team that hadn't allowed so many points since the opener of the 16-game regular season.

Schroeder beat a blitz to complete a 28-yard scoring pass to Monk in the first period, then did it again for 23 yards — after Darrell Green's interception — in the third quarter to give the Bears the lead for good at 14-13.

"We came out in the second half and took it to them," Schroeder said. "We had to mix them up. We thought if we got our receivers in a one-on-one, they couldn't cover them."

The victory puts Washington in next Sunday's NFC title game against the winner of Sunday's game between the San Francisco 49ers and New York Giants. Only two wild-card teams — the 1980 Oakland Raiders and the 1985 New England Patriots — have managed to advance to the Super Bowl.

Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, who described himself as "thrilled," credited the goalline stand with turning the game around. A Chicago touchdown would have sent his team into halftime trailing 16-7, but when Chicago settled for the field goal, the deficit was 13-7.

"It would have been easy for the defense to have said, 'Hey, we couldn't hold them out,' " Gibbs said of that stand. "But we turned them back with only three points."

For Chicago, it was just the fourth loss in 36 games.

"I guess my dreams didn't come true this year," Coach Mike Ditka said. "Schroeder is a fine quarterback. He made the plays he had to make. It was disappointing, but I'm sure if I stay in this business long enough, there will be other losses more disappointing."

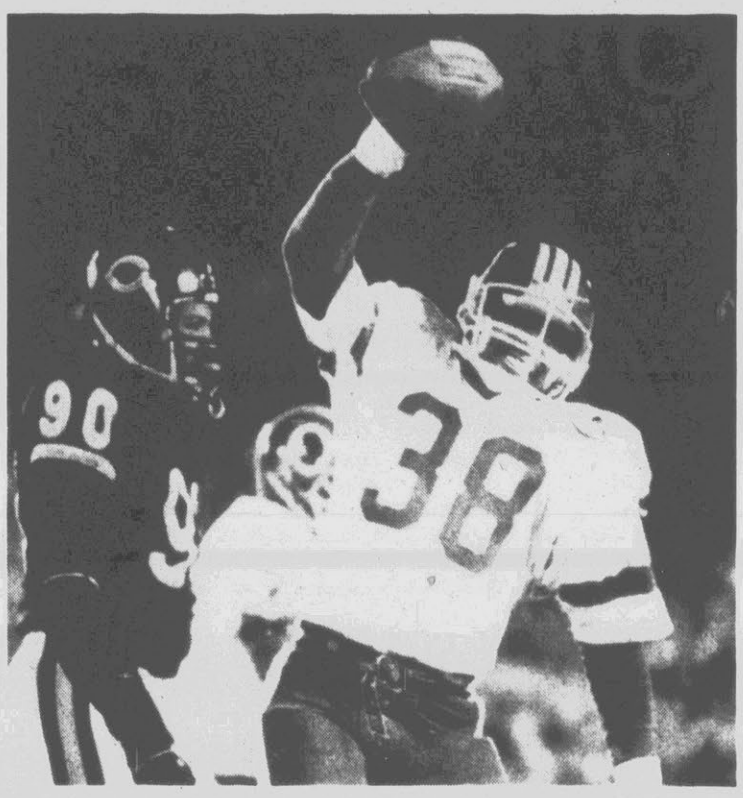

For Flutie, it was less a question of not seeing the plays than not making them. He was held to 11 completions in 31 attempts for 134 yards and threw two interceptions.

"I just didn't have my rhythm and the ball flew on me a bit," he said. "I've certainly had better days."

After going 18-1 in last year's Super Bowl season, the Bears were 14-2 this year although, without the injured McMahon, most were narrow wins against a soft schedule.

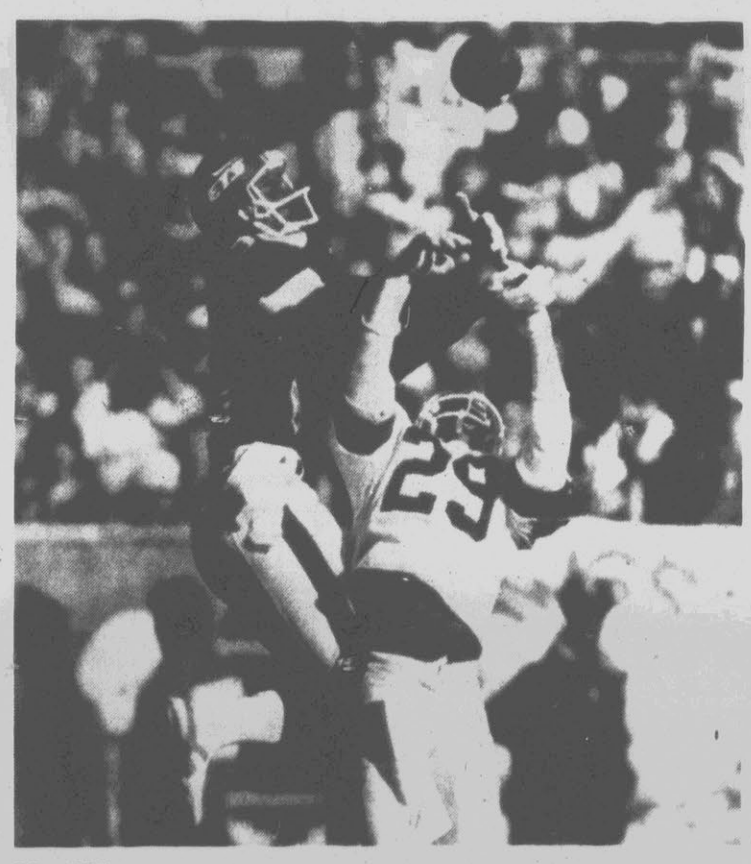

Schroeder, who finished with 15 completions in 32 attempts for 184 yards, hit Monk with a 28-yard TD

Moseley's FG Lifts Cleveland Past Jets

CLEVELAND (AP) — After missing what appeared to be an easy 23-yard field goal in overtime, Mark Moseley's career flashed before his eyes.

"When teams start losing games because of me, it's time to pack it in," Moseley said after he atoned for the miss with a 27-yard field goal 2:02 into the second overtime Saturday to give the Browns a 23-20 AFC playoff victory over the New York Jets.

The Browns, with quarterback Bernie Kosar passing for an NFL postseason-record 489 yards, won the third-longest game in pro football history after rallying for 10 points in the final 1:57 of the fourth quarter. Moseley sent the game into overtime with a 22-yard field goal with seven seconds remaining.

The 38-year-old Moseley, cut by the Washington Redskins in October, was signed by the Browns with four games left in the regular season to replace the injured Matt Bahr.

He kicked one overtime field goal for Cleveland to give the Browns a regular-season victory over the Houston Oilers, and his five career overtime field goals are an NFL record.

So Cleveland Coach Marty Schottenheimer had no reservations about sending Moseley onto the field on first down to attempt the first overtime kick with 8:53 remaining in the session. Moseley, who had missed from 44 and 46 yards in regulation, hit it poorly and it sailed to the right of the uprights.

"I wound up off-balance. I don't know how, but I barely hit the ball," he said.

"When I came off the field after the miss, the guys said, 'Hey, don't worry about it. we're going to get you another shot," Moseley said.

Cleveland's defense, however, did not let the Jets past midfield during three overtime possessions, so Moseley finally got another chance two minutes into the second extra period.

"This team believes in itself. But I'll tell you, that was like carrying 80,000 people on your shoulders, and they all have knives in your back."

Moseley's winning kick in the dusk at cold Cleveland Stadium sent 78,106 fans home chilly, but happy after the Browns' first playoff victory in six tries since 1969.

The only other pro football games to last longer were Miami's 27-24 AFC playoff victory over Kansas City after 22:40 of overtime on Dec. 25, 1971, and the Dallas Texans' triumph over the Houston Oilers in the American Football League championship game 17:54 into overtime in 1962.

The Browns, who led the AFC with a 12-4 record in the regular season, will now play host to the conference championship game next Sunday. Their opponent will be the winner of Sunday' New England at Denver game.

Jets Coach Joe Walton said he was left with "a very empty feeling."

"I think the Browns just got revved up and played very well," Walton said. "The big thing was our inability to move the ball."

Kosar also set a playoff record for attempts as he completed 33 of 64 passes. But felt bad about two fourth-quarter interceptions that nearly doomed the Browns.

"I felt terrible," the 23-year-old said. "When we were down by 10 in the fourth quarter, it sure looked bleak for us. I knew we would have to do something big in a hurry to get us back into it. We knew we just had to."

Cleveland had fallen behind 20-10 when Freeman McNeil ran 25 yards for a touchdown with 4:14 to play, one play after Kosar threw his second interception. Kosar had thrown only 10 interceptions all year.

But Kevin Mack ran for a 1-yard touchdown with 1:57 to play, capping a 68-yard drive that brought the Browns within 20-17.

Cleveland then forced the Jets to punt, and Kosar directed the Browns 62 yards in three plays, aided by a 31-yard pass interference call, setting up Moseley's tying kick.

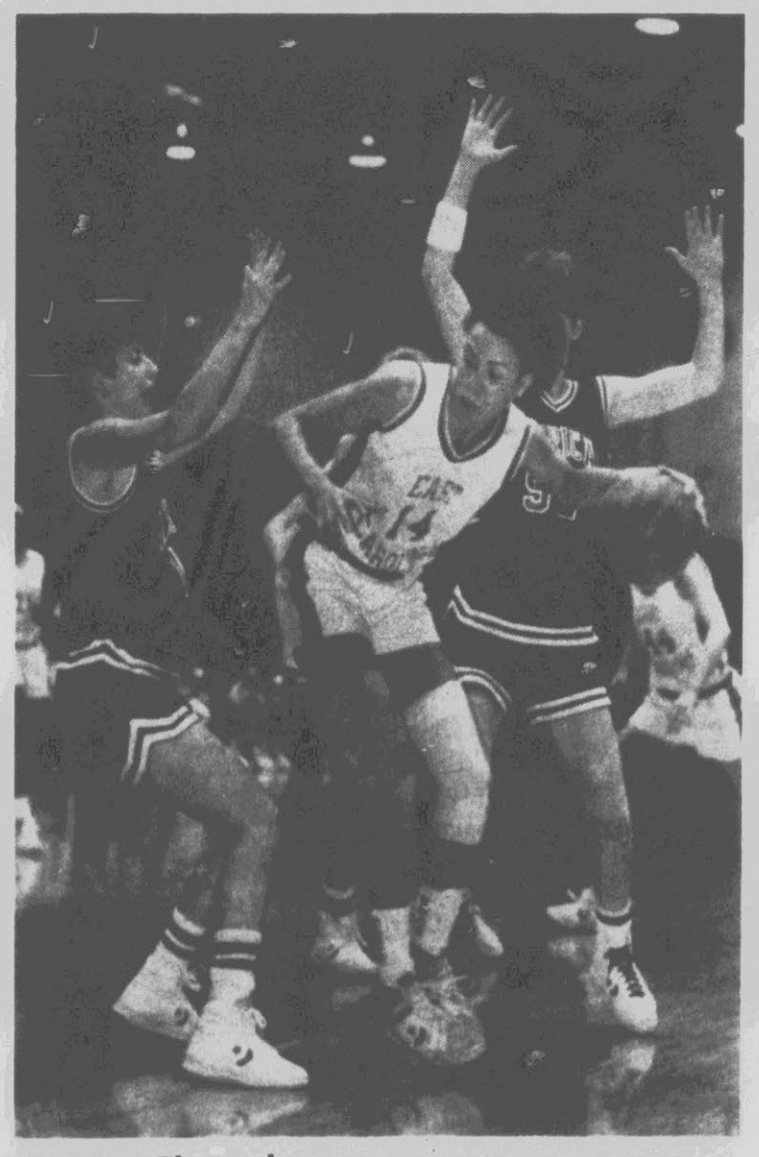

Cleveland started the winning 60-yard, 11-play drive at its own 31-yard line after a 55-yard punt by New York's Dave Jennings late in the first overtime period.

The Browns continued the drive in the second extra period, and Mack ripped off a 15-yard run to the New York 20 on the first play of the second overtime. Mack, who finished with 63 yards on 20 carries, followed that with runs of four and seven yards for a first down at the New York 9, and Coach Marty Schottenheimer chose to give Moseley another chance to win it on first down.

The Jets went 10-6 in the regular season, finishing with five straight losses. They reversed that slide by beating Kansas City 35-15 in last week's AFC wild-card game.

Moseley's field goal that made it 20-20 came two plays after Kosar threw a 37-yard pass to rookie Webster Slaughter that nearly cost Cleveland the game. The Browns, who were out of timeouts, began celebrating the reception at the New

Lady Pirates Hold Off American

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Lady Pirates ran out to an early big lead, then rode a roller-coaster lead the rest of the way in downing American University, 67-54, Saturday night in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates were successful in their opening Colonial Athletic Association game despite having periods of no scoring thanks to an aggressive defense and some outstanding shooting in the first half.

Midway through the first half, the Lady Pirates were up by 10, and increased that to as much as 15 before slipping back to an eight-point spread with 4:34 left. They pulled away again, however, and took a 15-point lead before having to settle for a 41-30 spread at halftime.

Both teams got off to a slow start in the second half. East Carolina scored two baskets in the first three and a half minutes of play while American went scoreless over the first 6:18 of play. Meanwhile, the drought spread to the Lady Pirate end of the court as they went 6:46 without scoring a point.

That helped to cut the lead back to as little as seven before it rose again to 14, dropped to six, and finally reached 13 at the end.

"I'm glad that we opened our conference play with the home court advantage," Coach Emily Manwaring said. "I think it made a lot of difference in the game. Both teams played in spurts. We would have been in a lot of trouble if they had made some of the easy baskets that they missed."

American shot 40.6 percent in the first half, and cooled to 31.3 percent in the second — and a number of those were up close. East Carolina shot a hot 61.3 percent in the first half, and Manwaring called that one of the keys to the win. ECU cooled to 42.1 percent in the second half, however.

"They were in the game because of the way we played in the second half," Manwaring said. "What we tried to do in the second half was not call a play, but just continue our transition offense. We felt that we moved the ball quicker that way.

"Our defense isn't where it should be right now," she added. "They got a lot of shots off the back door and cutting across the lane. If they had hit them, it would have been a different game."

Defense, however, was the key for the Lady Pirates in many ways. Their press forced a number of turnovers that led to easy baskets in the first half. American was charged with 25 turnovers in the game, and 16 of those came in the first half.

East Carolina, however, had 27 turnovers, almost equally divided between the two halves. "I wanted a 20 point lead at the half, and I talked about it at a time out," Manwaring said. "But we just couldn't hold onto the ball. We've got to cut those turnovers. Del (Mabry) isn't playing real well right now and giving us the leadership she should. I had to switch her to two-guard and put Irish (Hamilton) at the point late in the game."

The win snapped a two-game losing skid for the Lady Pirates, who bowed to LaSalle before Christmas and to Duke Friday night. American fell for only the third time this year, after having downed Maryland — which beat Duke by one at Maryland — in its previous game.

BULLETIN

Late reports Saturday night said that Georgia Tech football coach Bill Curry has been named as the new head coach at Alabama, while Duke coach Steve Sloan has accepted the post of athletic director.

Alabama has called a Sunday press conference, where the official announcements are expected.

Pack Trounces Terps, 69-47

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Vinny Del Negro and Bennie Bolton scored 12 points each to lead 19th-ranked North Carolina State to a 69-47 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over Maryland Saturday in the conference opener for both teams.

After trailing by two points at halftime, the much taller Wolfpack, now 9-2, pushed the ball inside to grab a 38-30 lead with 16:28 left.

The Wolfpack built the lead to 13 points with 11 minutes remaining on a Mike Giomi dunk and then used a pair of Del Negro jumpers to take a 57-42 cushion with 5:45 left.

While holding the Terrapins to only two points over an eight-minute stretch, Bolton's driving baseline slam dunk gave the Wolfpack their biggest lead at 65-42 with 2:44 remaining.

Maryland, now 2-2, surprised the Wolfpack by coming out in a slowdown offense in the first half.

The Terrapins held N.C. State scoreless for the first 5:40 while building a 4-0 lead on a pair of layups from Steve Hood and Derrick Lewis.

The Wolfpack finally scored on a three-point field goal by Kenny Drummond at the 14:10 mark. From that point, reserve guard Kelsey Weems scored eight points and made several key steals to give N.C. State a 22-17 lead with 4:55 left in the half.

But the Terrapins continued to play a zone defense and work on the offensive boards and Teyon McCoy's driving layup with 2:45 left gave Maryland the lead at 23-22 before a Hood three-pointer increased the margin to 28-26 at halftime.

Weems and Charles Shackleford added 10 points each for the Wolfpack, while Hood scored a game-high 17 points to lead Maryland. Lewis, not expected to play because of a sprained ankle, had 11 points for the Terrapins.

Maryland's season started almost a month behind other college teams after school administrators chose to delay the season in the aftermath of investigations into the death of Len Bias and the academic performance of the school's athletes.

American Tops ECU...

"We played good defense," Tapscott said. "Their shots were not falling and ours were (in the first half) and we got the lead. And then look what happened in the second half. We started missing our shots and they started hitting."

Still, with the loss, the Pirates fall to 6-4 on the year and begin the Colonial Athletic Association season with a loss. In addition, on Monday night they must face 9th ranked Navy at Annapolis.

"I think you have to take one game at a time," Harrison said. "That's two in a row that have happened in theis vein," Harrison said, referring to the loss to Penn State on Dec. 30. "This is the first road trip and I think all the road trips are going to be tough. We knew it was going to to be a dogfight coming in."

Harrison praised the play of the bench, as Williams and William Grady came in for fouled out starters Blue Edwards and Keith Sledge.

"I was ready," Williams said. "I was waiting for him to call me. We're going to have to come in and have our intensity up from the time we step on the floor (against Navy)."

In the first half, ECU jumped out to an early 8-4 lead but American came back and took control of the game.

The Eagles' Andy Bonsdale hit a free throw with 15:35 left to tie the game at 9-9. From there the Pirates went scoreles over the next four minutes while American went ahead 16-9.

Leon Bass broke the drought when he hit a basket and was fouled. But as was typical of the Pirates' first half, he missed the free throw.

From there, American slowly built up its lead, which went as high as 14 points and hovered around 10 through the majority of the half.

Witting came off the bench and hit three of four three-point shots to aid the Eagle cause. Ross also hit two three pointers for American as he ended up with 17 points in the first half.

Ross' layup with just over nine minutes remaining put the Eagles up 27-17.

The Pirates were the victims of nine first half turnovers and shot only 43 percent over the first period. American, on the other hand, shot 58 percent in the first half.

The Eagles took their biggest lead at 36-22 with 2:30 left when Ross connected on a jumper.

The closest ECU could pull within the Eagles was 39-30 on an alley-oop basket by Blue Edwards with just over three minutes remaining.

The half ended with American leading 44-33.

"I'm just really disappointed that we didn't play better defense in the first half," Harrison said.

American is now 4-3 and host UNC-Wilmington on Monday night. The Eagles have compiled a 149-83 record in Fort Myer Ceremonial Hall, where they play all their home games.

Last season, the Pirates swept both games from the Eagles. The first time, ECU won by a score of 70-62 at home. At Fort Meyer the Pirates squeaked past American, 65-63.

Duke Defeats Virginia, 70-63

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Kevin Strickland triggered an 11-0 run midway through the second half that gave Duke the lead for good and the 20th-ranked Blue Devils went on to defeat Virginia 70-63 Saturday night in the Atlantic Coast Conference opener for both teams.

Duke, improving to 9-1 with its eighth straight victory, placed four players in double figures with Strickland leading the way with 18 points. Danny Ferry added 13 points for the Blue Devils while Tommy Amaker contributed 12 and John Smith 11.

Sophomore guard Richard Morgan tallied a career high 24 points to lead Virginia, 6-3, while Tom Sheehey added 14 and Mel Kennedy 10. Sheehey, a 6-foot-9 senior forward, now has an even 1,000 points for his career.

Virginia, which has lost eight straight to Duke, led 48-43 when Morgan hit a pair of free throws with 11:11 to play.

But, following a timeout, Duke reeled off 11 unanswered points. Strickland started the run with a three-point field goal and tied the score at 48 with a drive with 9:54 remaining. Smith and Ferry each hit a pair of free throws and Amaker hit a jumper from the right side to put Duke up by six points, 54-48, with 8:10 to play.

Virginia could get no closer than three points during the final eight minutes, the last time at 64-61 when John Johnson scored on a drive with 1:33 remaining.

Single free throws by Strickland and Quin Snyder and a pair of foul shots each by Amaker and Ferry made it 70-61 with 26 seconds left.

Lebo's Second Half Leads Heels To Win

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Jeff Lebo scored 13 of his 14 points in the second half, including the go-ahead free throws with 1:26 remaining, to lift fourth-ranked North Carolina to a 79-72 victory over La Salle in college basketball Saturday night.

Kenny Smith's 22 points paced North Carolina, which won its ninth straight game to up its record to 11-1. Tim Legler led La Salle with 25 points, and Lionel Simmons had 22.

La Salle, now 6-5, took a 72-69 lead on a jumper by Legler with 2:05 left in the game.

But a field goal by North Carolina's Dave Popson cut the deficit to 72-71. The Tar Heels took possession again on an offensive foul against La Salle's Rich Tarr, setting up two free throws by Lebo giving North Carolina the lead with 1:26 to play.

Smith scored North Carolina's last six points of the game.

La Salle, which hit 12 of its first 19 shots, stormed to a 27-16 lead behind the long-range shooting of Legler, who had 14 points in the first half.

But North Carolina chipped away at the lead, finally closing to within 35-34 during a 6-0 run capped by a dunk by J.R. Reid with 1:31 left before halftime. Reid had 13 points had 14 rebounds in the game.

Lady Pirates ...

Both teams are 7-3 now.

East Carolina never trailed in the contest, scoring the first two baskets of the game before American rallied to tie it up only once, at 6-6 on a layup by Kia Cooper.

Pam Williams, Alma Bethea and Jody Rodriquez each hit, however, to push the Pirates back out by six, 12-6, before American could score again.

Led by Monique Pompili, who was to score 23 points in the game to lead all scorers, the Pirates steadily pulled away, building up a 14-point edge at 25-11 with 9:58 to go in the half. It reached its apex twice at 15 on Pompili shots before American rallied to cut it back to eight as Beth Shearer led the comeback with seven points, cutting it to 32-24 with 4:34 showing.

East Carolina pulled away again, however, going back out by 15 once more, 41-26 with 28 seconds to go, but American scored the final two baskets of the half to cut it back to 11, 41-30.

After ECU scored the first two baskets of the second half and went dry, American broke its own drought and rallied within seven, 45-38 with 10:23 to play.

But East Carolina finally got going again and pulled back into double figure leadership again until Kelly Lane led a surge that trimmed it to six, 60-54 with 1:03 to go.

Mabry made three of four at the stripe, while Rodriquez added two and Pompili hit off a fast break from there on to push it back out to the final 13.

Bethea added 14 points for East Carolina, while Lane led American with 19 and Shearer had 14.

The Lady Pirates enjoyed a slim 35-33 rebound advantage led by Pompili with nine and Bethea with eight. Cooper had 10 to pace American.

The Lady Pirates return to action on Thursday, hosting North Carolina A&T in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges. They then take to the road for games at Richmond and William & Mary over the weekend in CAA action.

Penn State Wins Championship

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Joe Paterno, who failed to win a national championship in his first 16 seasons as Penn State's head coach despite three perfect seasons, has now won two in five years.

Although it was a mere formality since second-ranked Penn State defeated No. 1 Miami 14-10 in the Fiesta Bowl showdown on Friday night, the Nittany Lions were runaway winners Saturday in The Associated Press national championship poll.

They received 54 of 57 first-place votes and 1,137 of a possible 1,140 points from a nationwide panel of sports writers and sportscasters.

Miami finished second with 1,064 points while Oklahoma remained No. 3. The Sooners, who trounced Arkansas 42-8 in the Orange Bowl, received the other three first-place ballots and 1,045 points. Oklahoma was picked No. 1 in the preseason poll.

"I don't know if this game is a significant step toward a college football playoff, but for Penn State it's significant," Paterno said Saturday. "I had three other teams (1968, 1969, 1973) I felt deserved a chance to prove they were national champions, and they didn't get a chance. I'm sure we'd have been voted No. 2 and Miami No. 1 if this confrontation hadn't taken place."

Paterno's 11-0 squad of 1968 finished ranked second to Ohio State, and in '69, runner-up to Texas despite another 11-0 season.

In 1973, Penn State went 12-0 and was fifth to Notre Dame, Ohio State, Oklahoma and Alabama.

With a 12-0 record, Penn State was the nation's only unbeaten-untied team. Miami and Oklahoma finished 11-1 and 10-1-1, respectively; Arizona State, a 22-15 winner over Michigan in the Rose Bowl, received 938 points in climbing from seventh place at the end of the regular season to fourth. Michigan slipped from fourth to eighth.

Nebraska moved up from sixth to fifth with 937 points by downing LSU 30-15 in the Sugar Bowl and dropping the Tigers from fifth to 10th.

Auburn's 16-7 victory over Southern California in the Citrus Bowl lifted the Tigers from 10th to sixth with 791 points.

Ohio State helped ease its disappointment over missing out on the Rose Bowl by beating Texas A&M 28-12 in the Cotton Bowl and jumping from 11th place to seventh with 762 points. The Aggies slumped from eighth to 13th.

Michigan received 758 points, good for eighth place, and Alabama, a 28-6 winner over Washington in the Sun Bowl, vaulted from 13th to ninth with 680 points.

Arkansas, which had been ninth, fell to 15th and LSU rounded out the Top Ten with 526 points.

The Second Ten consists of Arizona, Baylor, Texas A&M, UCLA, Arkansas, Iowa, Clemson, Washington, Boston College and Virginia Tech.

The final regular-season Second Ten listed Ohio State, Washington, Alabama, Baylor, UCLA, Arizona, Georgia, North Carolina State, Iowa and Stanford.

However, Georgia lost to Boston College 27-24 in the Hall of Fame Bowl, North Carolina State bowed to Virginia Tech 25-24 in the Peach Bowl and Stanford was beaten 27-21 by Clemson in the Gator Bowl.

Boston College and Virginia Tech made the Top Twenty for the first time all season while Clemson moved back in after a two-week absence.

Asked to compare the feeling between winning the 1982 national championship and the latest one, Paterno said, "I need a little time to think about those type of things. The first obviously is the first one and it's got a sense to it.

"I can't tell you what this squad means to me. They just made so many sacrifices. I wanted it more for them (the players and coaches) than for me. They played with tremendous pressure all year because people expected so much of them. It means a lot to me only because it means so much to them."

The Nittany Lions were voted No. 6 in the preseason poll and were either fifth, sixth or seventh until they beat Alabama 23-3 in Tuscaloosa on Oct. 25 and replaced the Crimson Tide in the No. 2 position.

They slipped to third after a 17-15 squeaker over Maryland on Nov. 8 but moved back up to second when No. 2 Michigan lost to Minnesota on Nov. 15.

Miami, meanwhile, was ranked No. 1 in the last 10 regular-season polls since beating Oklahoma on Sept. 27.

Lions Take Top Spot In Reflector Rankings

Penn State University's Nittany Lions have earned the top spot on the Daily Reflector Computer Rankings for the 1986 football season.

The Lions, who held off Miami of Florida, 14-10, in the Fiesta Bowl Friday night, finished the year with a perfect 12-0 record, the only team in Division I-A ranks to go unbeaten. But more important on the computer poll, Penn State finished with 4,470 points, a full 700 points ahead of Miami, which, as it did on the Associated Press poll, finished second on the computer rankings.

Miami, 11-1, ended up the year with 3,770 points, just nosing out Louisian State.

The Bayou Bengals, despite a 9-3 record, amassed 3,764 points on the year — making good with a strong scheduled as compared to other teams in the listing.

Oklahoma, which took third place on the AP poll, was fourth in the computer rankings. The Sooners, 11-1, ended up with 3,694 points, only 70 behind LSU.

Fifth place went to Arizona State, 10-1-1, and a winner in the Rose Bowl, which finished with 3,688 points, just six behind the Sooners.

The second five on the computer consisted of Michigan, Alabama, Stanford, UCLA and Ohio State, in that order.

LSU finished the regular season at the top place team, followed by Penn State and Miami in that order. Michigan, which was fourth, dropped to sixth after losing in the Rose Bowl, while Oklahoma and Arizona State each advanced one notch.

UCLA and Ohio State were both ranked in the second ten at the end of the regular season but advanced into the top ten.

Washington, a loser in the Hall of Fame Bowl to Alabama, dropped from 8th to 11th, while Southern Cal, which fell to Auburn in the Citrus Bowl, slipped from 10th to 14th.

Nebraska made the biggest improvement among the newcomers, moving from outside the top 20 to 13th place. The other newcomers in the second ten were San Jose State, Boston College and Mississippi, finishing 18th through 20th, respectively.

Following are a listing of the final top 20 teams, along with other ACC and area teams, East Carolina and its opponents.

1. Penn State (12-0)	4,470
2. Miami, Fla. (11-1)	3,370

Paterno Favors Playoff System

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Penn State Coach Joe Paterno wants to play the role of elder statesman in college football before he finishes his career in four or five years. He also wants an NCAA sponsored playoff system.

Paterno appeared with linebacker Shane Conlan at a news conference Saturday, the morning after Penn State's 14-10 victory over Miami, Fla. in the Fiesta Bowl.

Second-ranked Penn State edged All-American quarterback Vinny Testaverde and the No. 1-ranked Hurricanes to win the 1986 national title.

"I think this game highlights how much the public wants it (a playoff system)," Paterno said.

"I can't believe that this game wasn't a great scene, great showcase for college football. Hey, 75 or 85 million, or whatever, saw that game last night (Friday)."

Paterno said that all he's ever said for years is: "Let's look at it. Let's act intelligent about it. Let's see if we're not being dinosaurs. Let's see if we can't devise a system compatible with the bowls and good for college football."

Paterno said he was interested in kids like Conlan and his Nittany Lion teammates having a chance to win a national title.

"That game was the essence of competition, which is why I've always been for playoffs. You have no idea of the committment.

York 5-yard line until Kosar got them together and threw an incomplete pass — nearly intercepted in the end zone — to stop the clock with 11 seconds left.

New York used two quarterbacks to forge the 20-10 lead. Veteran backup quarterback Pat Ryan threw a 42-yard flea-flicker pass to Wesley Walker in the first quarter for the Jets' first score.

Ken O'Brien, whom Ryan had replaced for last week's victory over Kansas City, then directed the Jets to two Pat Leahy field goals and McNeil's fourth-quarter touchdown after Ryan aggravated a groin injury in the second quarter.

O'Brien was unspectacular after taking over for Ryan, but managed to put the Jets in position for Leahy field goals of 46 and 37 yards. The second one snapped a 10-10 tie four minutes into the third quarter.

Cleveland's first touchdown came on Kosar's 37-yard pass to Herman Fontenot in the first quarter. Moseley made a 38-yarder in the first half.

Cleveland and New York each scored on long, fancy pass plays in the first half, which ended in a 10-10 tie.

pass in the first quarter to give Washington a 7-0 lead, then went just three for nine in the second quarter when the Bears got all 13 of their points.

But the Washington defense shut down Chicago to start the third and finally made the big play when Green, beaten badly by Gault on the touchdown, picked off a Flutie pass over the middle and returned it 17 yards to the 26 to set up the go-ahead TD pass, 23 yards to a wide-open Monk.

Then, after Gentry's 48-yard kickoff return put Chicago back in scoring position, Darryl Grant jarred the ball loose from Payton and Alvin Walton recovered at the 17.

That set up an 83-yard drive for the clinching TD, George Rogers' 1-yard plunge, the first rushing touchdown against the Bears in nine games. That capped a period when Washington, which won its 14th game in 18th starts, ran off 24 plays to just 10 for Chicago.

Jess Atkinson added a 35-yard field goal midway through the fourth quarter and a 25-yarder with 2:25 left to clinch it.

Healthy Niners Set For Giants

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The San Francisco 49ers limped into Giants Stadium a year ago for a wild-card playoff game with the New York Giants and crawled out.

The 49ers are coming East again to play the Giants in an NFC semifinal playoff game on Sunday, and this time they're not hobbling.

In fact, Bill Walsh's 49ers may be playing as well as anybody in the NFL. And that includes the NFC East champion Giants, who come into the game with a 14-2 record, a nine-game winning streak and the role as early favorites to go to the Super Bowl.

"The last (playoff) game was very difficult to play because we had people who could not practice the entire week and tried to play," Walsh said.

Roger Craig headed the 49ers' list of walking wounded and dropped almost everything thrown his way in the Giants' 17-3 victory. It was later revealed that the running back had a serious leg injury and that several other players were not 100 percent.

Walsh says this year is different.

"We are playing the best we have played this year," he said. "Whether that is good enough to overcome a team with the momentum and greatness of the Giants we will have to see."

The Giants seem to have some advantages in this second-season game. They have won their last two meetings against the 49ers, the last one coming on Dec. 1 when New York rallied from a 17-0 halftime deficit to win 21-17.

New York also won all eight of its home games this season, the only team in the NFL to do that.

Giants Coach Bill Parcells disdains talk of history and his players aren't anxious to hear it either.

"Right now, it's a one-shot deal," said Giants linebacker Lawrence Taylor, who led the NFL in sacks this season with 20½. "All you have to have is one good day. Anybody can do it and (the 49ers) definitely can do it. They have a great team. We're just going to have to contain them and hope we can win the game."

The Giants' biggest obstacle on defense will be stopping 49ers quarterback Joe Montana and his explosive offense, which averaged 380.1 yards per game, third best in the NFL.

Montana, who missed part of the season with a back injury, finished as the NFC's second-rated passer. His favorite targets have been wide receivers Jerry Rice and Dwight Clark, and Craig.

Clark caught an NFC-high 86 passes this season for 1,570 yards and 15 touchdowns. Craig had 81 catches, Clark 61.

The Giants have been somewhat vunerable through the air, yielding 217.1 yards per game, but they are still ranked second overall on defense, surrendering 297.3 yards per game. New York is the best against the run.

Phil Simms, the fourth-ranked passer in the NFC, leads the offense that features running back Joe Morris, who gained a club-record 1,516 yards, including a team record eight 100-yard games.

Morris gained 141 against San Francisco in the wild-card game last year but was shut down in the game this year.

Denver, Reeves Seek Respect

DENVER (AP) — A victory in Sunday's AFC semifinal playoff battle with the New England Patriots would go a long way toward gaining Denver Broncos Coach Dan Reeves and his team some respect.

Over the past three seasons, only one NFL coach has won more regular-season games than Reeves. Chicago's Mike Ditka has 39 victories during that period, with Reeves and Bill Walsh of San Francisco at 35.

Respect from the coaching fraternity, however, is reserved for those who win playoff games, and by that criterion Reeves come up short.

He has taken the Broncos to the playoffs two times in his previous five seasons as head coach, losing both games. The Broncos, in fact, have lost four straight playoff games since their 1977 Super Bowl season.

They look to snap that string on Sunday when they entertain the defending AFC champion Patriots.

"I think people recognize us as a contending football team, but you don't really gain respect until you win in the playoffs," said Reeves. "People look at you more seriously when you win in the postseason."

Reeves need only point to this week's opponent. The Patriots are 3-1 in the playoffs under Coach Raymond Berry, with all of those victories coming last season on the way to the Super Bowl game against the champion Chicago Bears.

"New England's playoff experience last year will be an advantage for them," said Reeves. "But we hope our home-field advantage will offset that."

Playing on the road has agreed with the Patriots. All three of last year's playoff wins were on the road, and this season the Pats are 7-1 away from home. Their lone road loss was in Denver, 27-20 on Sept. 28.

Berry brought the Patriots to Colorado a week early to get them acclimated to the region and to the thin air. They've been working out at the Air Force Academy, where the 7,000-foot elevation is even higher than Denver's mile-high altitude.

Pats quarterback Tony Eason, who suffered a shoulder injury in the regular-season finale at Miami, will start on Sunday. The Broncos will counter with John Elway, who is headed for the Pro Bowl.

Eason tends to throw high-percentage passes and avoids interceptions, while Elway is both more erratic and more dangerous, especially when he scrambles out of the pocket.

Neither team's running attack has been dazzling, although New England's Craig James and Tony Collins and Denver's Sammy Winder all have had 1,000-yard rushing seasons. Both defenses are solid and feature fearsome blitzers in the Patriots' Andre Tippett and the Broncos' Karl Mecklenburg.

"After six months of football, I think both teams will be doing things better than earlier in the year," said Berry. "Defensive recognition is so much better now, and that usually means you get into some defensive battles."

Growth of wholesale/retail, government and service employment in Pitt County exceeded 70 percent in the past decade.

Jackets Dump Deacons in OT

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Georgia Tech Coach Bobby Cremins said it had the makings of a bad day, but in the end, things worked out just fine for his 18th-ranked Yellow Jackets as they scored a 65-59 overtime victory over Wake Forest.

Cremins was without star guard Bruce Dalrymple, who was still trying to shake off a bruised shoulder. The Demon Deacons were without sophomore guard Rod Watson, the team's second leading scorer. But guard Craig Neal came to the rescue with 18 points to lift Georgia Tech to a victory in its Atlantic Coast Conference basketball season opener.

It was the third overtime game for Georgia Tech in 10 outings this season.

"It's funny, when you lose a great player like Dalrymple and a player like Watson and the game's on TV you have a tendency to say this is going to be a lousy ACC game," Cremins said. "This was a great, great basketball game."

It wasn't as great for the Demon Deacons, who dropped their 18th straight conference game dating back to 1985. Wake Forest might have won the game in regulation, but the officials took a 3-point basket away from Tyrone Bogues in the first half, reducing its halftime lead from 26-24 to 25-24 and setting the stage for the overtime.

"We discussed the play in the dressing room at halftime," referee Paul Housman said in a release. "Both Stan (Rote) and I agreed that (Bogues') foot was definitely on the line when he took the shot. We therefore made the decision to change the ruling to a two-point field goal."

Coach Bob Staak acknowledged the decision of the officials, but he noted that his team had its share of chances to win.

"It seems there were a couple of possessions where we couldn't come up with the loose ball, they got a three-point play, things like that kind of cracked us," said Staak, the second-year Wake Forest coach. "We had our opportunities, and I'm certainly encouraged by the play of our entire team."

Neal hit all four of his three-point field goal attempts to lead the Yellow Jackets, 7-3. Wake Forest dropped to 5-3.

Wake Forest led at halftime, 25-24, and built a 41-33 lead with 11:43 left in the game. But the Yellow Jackets rallied to take a 56-53 lead on a three-point field goal by Neal.

Bogues hit a three-pointer to tie the game at 56-56 with 58 seconds left in regulation. He then stole the ball and Wake Forest held the ball for the final shot. Mark Cline missed a jumper with three seconds left in regulation to send the contest into overtime.

Duane Ferrell of Georgia Tech scored five points in overtime and teammate Tom Hammonds scored on a dunk with 36 seconds left to give the Yellow Jackets a 63-59 lead. Wake Forest missed its final four shots from the field in overtime.

Hammonds added 16 points for the Yellow Jackets while Ferrell had 15. Bogues led Wake Forest with 18 points.

No. 16 Illinois Downs Michigan

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Senior forward Ken Norman scored 29 points Saturday to lead 16th-ranked Illinois to a 95-84 victory over Michigan in the Big Ten opener for both teams.

Junior guard Glynn Blackwell added 28 points to the Illinois effort. Michigan was led by senior guard Antoine Joubert with 24 points.

The triumph lifted Illinois to 9-2 overall and 1-0 in the conference. Michigan fell to 8-5 and 0-1.

Michigan took a 4-0 lead on baskets by Joubert and Glen Rice, who finished with 15 points, but the Illini responded with 14 straight points. The Wolverines battled back within 25-19 before another Illinois rally put them safely ahead. Illinois led 47-35 st the half.

Although the Illini were never seriously threatened, Michigan continued its aggressive play and pulled within 73-65 with eight minutes to go.

But a 12-6 scoring spurt led by Norman put the Illini up 85-72 with four minutes left. Illinois iced the victory by hitting free throws in the final minutes.

Navy Sinks UNC-Wilmington In Colonial Opener, 72-58

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — Navy lost the field-goal battle against North Carolina-Wilmington Saturday, but the Midshipmen won the game 72-58.

North Carolina-Wilmington made four more field goals, but ninth-ranked Navy overcame the deficit by hitting 28 of 45 free throws. The Seahawks shot only eight free throws and made half of them.

"I thought we had a couple of good stretches when we ran the ball decently and played good defense in the first half," Navy Coach Pete Hermann said. "We were not bad overall defensively until the final few minutes."

Guard Cliff Rees scored a career-high 26 points to lead Navy. Center David Robinson, who entered the game with a 30-point average, finished with 12 points and 14 rebounds. Guard Doug Wojcik had 13 points and six assists for Navy.

Center Brian Rowsom led North Carolina-Wilmington with 18 points and 19 rebounds.

Navy trailed early in the game, but a three-point field goal and two free throws by Rees gave the Midshipmen a 12-10 lead that they never relinquished. The Midshipmen led by as many as 20 points in the second half of the Colonial Athletic Association opener.

Navy raised its record to 6-3 while North Carolina-Wilmington fell to 4-5.

Seton Hall Upends Georgetown, 74-53

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Seton Hall established itself as a contender in the Big East Conference Saturday by beating eighth-ranked and previously unbeaten Georgetown, 74-53.

"I think we're as good as any team in the Big East," said junior Mark Bryant, who led the Pirates with 24 points.

Seton Hall Coach P.J. Carlesimo said he thinks the victory may convince Big East opponents that his 9-1 team is for real.

"This was the biggest win for Seton Hall ever — no question," he said. "This win will go a long way toward making them believe they are good players."

The Pirates held Georgetown star Reggie Williams to seven points. Williams entered the game with a 25.2 average.

"I came out slow today, and it was a disease everyone else on the team caught," Williams said.

Seton Hall led by as many as 17 points in the first half and built a 26-point lead in the second half.

Perry McDonald scored 18 points for Georgetown, 9-1.

Tide Search Continues

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Georgia Tech Coach Bill Curry declined to say Saturday whether he had agreed to become head football coach at Alabama, but he sent word to reporters not to miss a news conference Sunday at the Tuscaloosa campus.

Meanwhile, Duke Coach Steve Sloan, a former Alabama quarterback who had interviewed for the athletic director's job at his alma mater, called a staff meeting late Saturday afternoon.

Before the meeting, one of his assistants, Tommy Bowden, said Sloan was "leaning toward taking it."

Bowden is the son of Florida State Coach Bobby Bowden, who was the first person interviewed for the Alababma coaching vacancy. But the elder Bowden took himself out of contention Friday night.

The scramble for a new coach and athletic director at Alabama began Wednesday when Ray Perkins announced he was stepping down from both positions at the Southeastern Conference school to become head coach and vice president of operations for Tampa Bay of the National Football League.

Perkins led Alabama to a 10-3 record and a ninth-place ranking in The Associated Press college football poll in his final season.

University President Joab Thomas said the jobs of athletic director and head football coach, which had been held by Perkins and his predecessor, the late Bear Bryant, would be divided because they were too much for one person.

Curry, 44, returned to Atlanta Friday night after meeting with the Alabama search committee in Birmingham. At the time, he told reporters that he was "very happy here at Georgia Tech. But everybody I know in the business said I would be a fool not to listen to Alabama."

On Saturday, Curry issued a statement saying, "I simply can't comment" on the Alabama coaching job, but he did send reporters word about the news conference.

Wayne Atcheson, sports information director at Alabama, confirmed Saturday that Thomas would have a news conference at 2 p.m. Sunday. "He's expected to name both positions," Atcheson said.

Thomas could not be reached for comment Saturday. Richard Thigpen, the university's faculty chairman of athletics and a member of the search committee, declined comment on whether Curry and Sloan would be joining the Alabama athletic program.

In seven years at Tech, his alma mater, Curry has compiled a record of 31-43-4, including 5-5-1 in 1986.

Curry has not been tainted by an NCAA investigation, which is one of the criteria outlined by Thomas, who heads the search committee.

In addition to interviewing Curry on Friday, the search committee also met with Alabama's interim head coach, Jim Fuller, but Fuller said he was not made an offer.

Sloan also met with the panel on Friday. The 42-year-old Alabama graduate, who has been a head coach since he was 28, had said earlier that he was not interested in returning to his alma mater as head coach, but he had declined comment on the athletic director's job.

Bobby Bowden, 57, interviewed for the Alabama job Thursday — one day after his Seminoles beat Indiana in the All American Bowl in his hometown of Birmingham.

Bowden issued a statement Friday night saying he was withdrawing his name from consideration, and he met with FSU President Bernard Sliger on Saturday to confirm it.

Bowden said he did not seek the Alabama job, but his name came up because he was in Birmingham when Perkins resigned. "I can't walk down the street without seeing a (selection) committee member," he told reporters after meeting with Sliger.

Bowden earns about $200,000 in salary and guarantees funded through the athletic department's budget, but to get him out of his five-year rollover contract, any school hiring him would have to pay about $425,000 to FSU..

AU Starts Coach Hunt

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — University of Arizona Athletic Director Cedric Dempsey said Saturday that he personally will conduct a search for a successor to Wildcats football Coach Larry Smith, who resigned Friday to accept the same job at Southern Cal.

Dempsey said he wants a replacement with a proven record as a head coach.

"We believe we can find a coach with current or previous (NCAA) Division I-A head coaching experience," Dempsey said.

Several names already have surfaced as possible candidates, including Iowa Coach Hayden Fry, Florida's Galen Hall, South Carolina's Joe Morrison, Air Force's Fisher DeBerry, Indiana's Bill Mallory, Boston College's Jackie Bicknell and Bill McCartney of Colorado.

However, former Arizona assistant coach Moe Ankney is said to be gaining support in the Tucson area for the vacant job.

Penn State Weathers Hurricanes

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — While Miami's Heisman Trophy winner Vinny Testaverde blamed himself for letting "the big one" slip away, Penn State's linebackers again proved why Coach Joe Paterno's Nittany Lions are a constant power in college football.

With the linebackers getting four of them, second-ranked Penn State intercepted quarterback Testaverde five times — including the game-clincher to thwart a dramatic last-minute drive — and beat the top-ranked Hurricanes 14-10 in a showdown for the national title Friday night in the Fiesta Bowl.

Linebackers Shane Conlan and Pete Giftopolous had two interceptions apiece while D.J. Dozier rushed for 99 yards on 20 carries and scored the game-winning touchdown on a 6-yard run with 8:13 remaining.

The victory capped a 12-0 season for Penn State, which won its only previous national title in 1982. And it showcased the latest linebackers from the school that has sent the likes of Jack Ham, Lance Mehl, Matt Millen, Rich Milot and Greg Buttle to the NFL.

Miami, which captured the crown in 1983, finished the season with an 11-1 record.

"I'd like to meet them again at the same place and same time next year," Hurricanes Coach Jimmy Johnson said. "Penn State deserves to be the champion this year. The played a fantastic ballgame. We just made too many mistakes. When you turn the ball over that many times, you'll lose every time."

Miami, which also lost two fumbles, still had a chance to pull out the victory in the waning minutes — driving from its own 23-yard line with 3:07 left to the Penn State 3 with 25 seconds showing.

But on second-down-and-goal, Giftopoulos made a diving interception with nine seconds to go and Penn State ran out the clock.

"I had a gut feeling somebody was going to come up with a big play on that last drive and Pete did," said Conlan, who played most of the game on a gimpy left knee to win the defensive MVP award. "I played my heart out and this is a big honor, but the biggest honor is the national title."

Dozier, chosen as the offensive MVP, said his trophy also "doesn't mean as much to me as winning the national championship. The team is first. We've always been that way."

"As unselfish as these guys are, they're one of the greatest groups of people I've ever been around," Paterno said. "I think our defense played about as well as a college football team can play.

"Conlan had a tremendous game. He's as good a linebacker as we've ever had. Dozier played great. Everybody contributed. The kids believed in themselves and knew they could win."

Mark Seelig's 38-yard field goal with 11:49 remaining had given Miami a 10-7 lead before Conlan picked off a Testeverde pass and returned it 38 yards to the Hurricane 5 with 8:35 left.

Dozier scored two plays later.

"The turnovers killed us," said Testaverde, who completed 26 of 50 passes for 285 yards despite being sacked four times. "I have to give Penn State all the credit in the world. They played tough and won it on the field. They prepared well and we didn't adjust when we had to."

Paterno said his club "changed a lot of zones and I think Vinny had trouble reading them. They didn't have chances to run secondary routes. Our kids kept the pressure on Vinny and he had to get out of the pocket."

Nittany Lion quarterback John Shaffer hit on just five of 16 passes for 53 yards with one interception. But his 4-yard touchdown run with 1:14 remaining in the second quarter forged a 7-7 halftime tie.

Miami scored first in the nationally televised game, which was watched by a standing-room-only crowd of 73,098 at Sun Devil Stadium — the largest ever to watch a sporting event in the state.

Melvin Bratton's 1-yard dive 6:38 before halftime came four plays after Hurricane defensive end Bill Hawkins recovered a Shaffer fumble at the Penn State 23.

Both teams squandered several other scoring opportunites. Seelig was wide left on a 28-yard field goal attempt with 2:08 left in the third quarter and Nittany Lion placekicker Massimo Manca was well short on a 50-yard try 59 seconds into the fourth quarter.

"We got nothing to be ashamed of," said Miami fullback Alonzo Highsmith, who rushed for 119 yards on 18 carries. "We did everything we had to do to win, but we just didn't execute when we needed it. It was a great season. We just came up short."

It was the first-ever meeting of the two schools in post-season play.

Penn State now is 15-7-2 in bowl games overall including a 12-5-1 mark under Paterno with four Fiesta Bowl victories in as many tries.

Miami, which lost 39-37 to UCLA in its only other Fiesta appearance in 1985, saw its bowl record drop to 5-8 overall and 0-3 under Johnson.

It was the first time in 13 years that the nation's only unbeaten-untied teams had squared off in a bowl game and Paterno felt it was fitting.

"It's a national championship won on the field," he said. "It was a great game and a very exciting thing for college football."

Paterno Didn't Offer Prayer On Final Pass

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — What was Penn State Coach Joe Paterno thinking when Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde arched a pass toward the end zone with nine seconds to play and State leading 14-10?

"I'm not the kind of guy to ask the Lord for help in a football game. He has more important things to do." Paterno said Friday night after his Nittany Lions won the Fiesta Bowl and probably the national championship. "I was tempted, though, to pray."

Paterno said he was just looking to see what happened.

What he saw was linebacker Pete Giftopoulos intercepting the ball at the his own 1-yard line. Soon, time ran out, and Penn State won 14-10.

"I caught the ball and said to myself, 'We're number one.' I didn't want to fumble that's why I sat on the ball," said Giftopoulos, who had two interceptions.

The victory for second-ranked Penn State over No. 1 Miami left it only for the voters in the AP poll to confirm the Nittany Lions as the national college football champions.

The name of the game was defense.

"Our defense played as well as I've ever seen a college football team play defense," said Paterno.

The Lions' defense, disguising its various zone coverages, intercepted five of Heisman Trophy winner Testaverde's passes. It also recovered two fumbles and sacked the All-American quarterback four times.

Miami totaled 445 yards. Testaverde completed 26 of 50 passes for 285 yards. The Hurricanes' offense wasn't exactly dormant, but it couldn't get the job done inside the 30-yard line.

Shane Conlan, State's All-American linebacker, intercepted two passes and had one sack. His second interception and 43-yard return set up the game-winning 6-yard touchdown in the fourth period.

Rose Edges Northern Nash

RED OAK — Rose High School got 30 points from Terry Warren and Earrol Wooten Friday night and overcame Northern Nash, 55-50, in the first Big East Conference basketball action for the Rampants.

Rose's girls had an easy time with it in their game, romping to a 57-25 victory.

Both Northern Nash and Rose came into the boys' game fresh off championships in their own holiday tournaments. The Rampants used their quickness to offset Nash's height advantage throughout the game.

Nash scored first on a basket by Earl McNeil from the baseline, and after a Rose miss, McNeil hit again for a 4-0 lead.

But that was to be the final points of the quarter for the Knights.

Wooten scored on a layup on a breakaway and Keith Langley hit after a turnover with 6:50 left to tie it at 4-4.

After a Nash miss, Rose took the lead for good at 6:22 as Warren connected for a 6-4 lead. They were never caught again as the Rampants moved out to a 10-4 lead in the time remaining in the quarter.

Rose forced six turnovers in the second period and moved out to a 16-8 lead before the Knights finally got themselves together. David Lee and Melvin Jenkins each had two steals as Rose pulled out to a 23-16 advantage at intermission.

McNeil scored two quick baskets to open the third quarter for Northern Nash, trimming it to 23-20, and the two teams exchanged baskets on the next three trips down the court. Rose maintained the lead and took a 35-30 lead into the final quarter.

Rose again forced a number of turnovers in the final quarter, taking the ball away seven times. With 5:48 remaining, Rose pushed out to its biggest lead, 51-40, taking advantage of the free throw line.

McNeil paced one more rally by the Knights to close with three at 52-49 with 2:598 left. McNeil scored 12 points during the quarter.

Rose then spread it out and used the foul line to preserve its lead the rest of the way.

Warren finished the game with 17 points while Wooten added 13 to lead Rose's scoring.

Northern was led by McNeil with 26 points while Keith Thomas pitched in 17 to account for all but seven points for the Knights, who only had three players to score in the game.

□ □ □

Rose's girls had little trouble in handling Northern in their outing. The Rampettes eased into a 14-13 lead in the opening quarter, then blew the game open after that.

"We were playing a man-to-man in the first period and we switched to a zone and overloaded it and they just didn't seem to handle it well," Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "Northern has a good club but they didn't play well in this game."

Rose outhit the Lady Knights, 21-4, in the second period for a 35-17 halftime lead. They stretched that to 48-17 in the third period, holding Nash scoreless. The Rampettes finished the Knights off, 9-8, in the final quarter.

Bertie Takes Two From Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Bertie High School swept a pair of non-conference basketball games from Williamston High School Friday night as the Tigers returned to action after the Christmas holidays.

Bertie took a 64-59 win in the boys' game and recorded a 59-38 win in the girls' contest.

Bertie slipped into a 15-13 lead after one quarter of play in the boys' game, but the Tigers rallied in the second quarter. Williamston outhit the Falcons, 20-16, to ease into a 33-31 lead at halftime.

But the Tigers were unable to hold to it. Bertie came back with a 14-12 advantage in the third quarter, tying it at 45-45, as the final period began. In that, Bertie outhit Williamston, 19-14, to pull out the win.

Bond led Williamston with 17 points while Everett added 12. Fred Huff and Felix Purvis each had 10 points to pace Williamston.

Bertie jumped out early in the girls' game, taking an 18-7 advantage in the first eight minutes. After that, it was just a question of the final score. Bertie upped its lead to 32-15 by halftime, but eased off to hold a 41-27 lead going into the last period. In that, Bertie outhit Williamston, 18-11, to win going away.

Erica Ruffin led Bertie with 25 points while Georgia Cofield added 15. Dana Hardison led Williamston with 13 points.

CAA Baseball At 'Diamond'

RICHMOND, Va. — The Colonial Athletic Association will hold its annual baseball championship tournament at The Diamond in Richmond this spring.

The dates for the tournament are May 14-17.

"We've had our eye on The Diamond as our tournament site ever since the Colonial was founded (in June, 1985)," Commissioner Tom Yeager said. "We're excited to be able to hold oru championship in a first-class stadium centrally located for our teams. We look forward to showcasing some of the best college baseball around."

Six of the Colonial's eight members will compete for the championship: East Carolina, George Mason, James Madison, Richmond, William & Mary and UNC-Wilmington. American does not play intercollegiate baseball anymore and Navy competes in the Eastern Intercollegiate Baseball League.

The Diamond is the home field of the Richmond Braves, an affiliate of the Atlanta Braves. The 12,138-seat stadium was opened in April, 1985, and has set Braves' attendance records in each of its two seasons. "It is, without a doubt, the finest facility we could ever hope to play in," Yeager said.

The tournament will be a double-elimination event with three games on Thursday, Friday and Saturday and at least one game on Sunday. Seeding will be determined by the final regular-season standings.

The league's tournament champion will receive an automatic bid into the NCAA regionals.

Richmond won last year's title, beating regular season winner East Carolina, in the tournament finals, held at East Carolina.

Duke Rallies Past Lady Pirates

DURHAM — Duke University pulled away from East Carolina's Lady Pirates in the final four minutes of the basketball game and claimed an 84-70 victory in action Friday night in Cameron Indoor Stadium.

The Lady Pirates, who led at 68-66 with 4:07 to play, saw themselves outscored 18-2 the remainder of the game as the Lady Blue Devils blew past them from there on out to take the victory.

"They just beat us at our own game," East Carolina coach Emily Manwaring said. "They made us turn the ball over too much in the last four minutes."

The Lady Blue Devils held the lead much of the first half, but East Carolina came back to tie it up on a basket by Chris O'Connor just before the buzzer, 41-41.

The Pirates pulled away in the early going of the second half, building up a 54-47 lead with five minutes elapsed in the period on a jumper by Pam Williams.

But over the next few minutes, the Lady Pirates went dry for the first time and Duke rallied to tie it at 56-56 with 11:29 left. That came on a basket by Carolyn Sonzogni which brough the Blue Devils within one. Then, seconds later, a technical foul was called against ECU's Monique Pompili, and Sonzogni hit the free throw to tie it up.

Duke moved ahead after that and held the lead until the Pirates regained it at the 4:07 mark.

But after that, it was all Duke's game.

Chris Moreland led the Lady Devils with 25 points, hitting seven of 13 from the floor and 11 of 13 at the line. She also led the Blue Devil rebounding with 13 although the Lady Pirates held a 43-42 edge in that department overall.

Sue Harnett added 11 for Duke while both Sarah Sullivan and Sonzogni each added 10.

East Carolina was led in scoring by Alma Bethea with 22 points while Williams added 16 and both Pompili and O'Connor had 10. Pompili led the rebounding with nine while Bethea pulled away eight.

The loss was the second straight for the Lady Pirates, who were playing for the first time since Dec. 21. They are now 6-3 on the season.

Following a Saturday night home game against American University, ECU's first Colonial Athletic Association play of the year, the Lady Pirates are to entertain N.C. A&T on Thursday in Minges Coliseum.

Havelock Tops Vikes

HAVELOCK — Havelock High School used the forfeit route to sprint past D.H. Conley in a Coastal Conference wrestling match Friday night.

The Rams wound up with a 54-19 victory as Conley forfeited in seven of the 13 weight classes. Of the six weights that Conley participated in, the Vikings won four, including one by forfeit and one by a pin.

"We started out with a number of kids," Coach Milt Sherman said. "But right now, we don't have very many."

The loss was the first in nine matches for the Vikings, who are 1-1 in the Coastal. They travel to Washington on Tuesday.

Summary:

Rams Race Past Hawks

SNOW HILL — Greene Central High School placed four men in double figures as the Rams gained a 65-51 victory over North Lenoir in a non-conference basketball game Friday night.

North Lenoir's girls swept past the Lady Rams, however, 63-43.

The Rams took a 15-10 lead in the opening quarter of the boys' game and were never headed. They increased their lead to 29-22 by the end of the first half.

In the third quarter, Greene Central repeated its first period scoring and upped its lead to 44-32. It finished off the romp with a 21-19 margin in the final quarter.

Woodrow Wallace and Anthony Jones each scored 17 points to lead Greene Central while Melvin Croom hit 16 and O.J. Sheppard added 11. Donald Mitchell paced North Lenoir with 13 while Dave Hinson had 12 and Darryl McNeil added 10.

The two girls' teams battled on even terms throughout the first period of play in their game, each scoring 123 points. In the second, it remained close, with the Lady Rams holding a 23-22 edge at intermission.

But in the third period, North Lenoir came back to outhit the Rams, 25-10, and storm into a 47-32 lead. They finished off the Lady Rams, 16-10, in the last period.

Lisa West poured in 30 points to lead North Lenoir while Melissa Coley added 16. Chanel Hooker led Greene Central with 19 while Joy Albritton added 12.

The win leaves the Rams with a 3-7 record while the girls drop to 1-9.

Greene Central returns to action on Tuesday, entertaining South Lenoir in an Eastern Plains Conference contest.

Vinny: 'They Played Better'

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Nothing Penn State's defense did in the Fiesta Bowl surprised the top-ranked Miami Hurricanes. What surprised them was that it worked so well for the Nittany Lions.

"They didn't do any tricks," Miami's Heisman Trophy winning quarterback Vinny Testaverde said after a 14-10 loss Friday night. "They just played better football than us."

The second-ranked Nittany Lions picked off five Testaverde passes and recovered two Miami fumbles in handing the Hurricanes their only loss in 12 games. They held a team averaging 38.2 points to 10 points, in the process ending Miami's prospects of a second national championship in four years.

"I never thought that would happen," said Miami running back Alonzo Highsmith, who ran 18 times for 119 yards. "Vinny wasn't rattled, he wasn't confused. It was just one of those days."

Offensive coordinator Gary Stevens found himself trying to explain the problems of an offense which gained 445 yards, including 285 yards passing for Testaverde on 26 completions in 50 attempts.

"They varied their coverage a little bit, but they only used a couple little things that we hadn't seen before and those didn't make any difference," Stevens said. "It was just a combination of one of those nights where nothing goes right and Penn State playing great defense."

The Miami defense held Penn State to 162 yards in total offense, but gave up a 74-yard scoring drive in the second period. Then Penn State linebacker Shane Conlan intercepted a pass and returned it 38 yards to the Miami 5-yard line in the fourth period, and D.J. Dozier scored two plays later.

"The guys don't have any reason to hold their heads down," said All-American defensive tackle Jerome Brown, who had four tackles and half-sack. "We gave it all we had and came up short."

It was the second straight time Miami has come up short in a bowl game with a chance at a national title. Last year, the Hurricanes would have been 11-1 and the favorite for the title if they had beaten Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl.

The Hurricanes lost that one 35-7 as Testaverde was intercepted three times and Miami lost three fumbles.

"We have had problems in the past coming off a long layoff like this," said Coach Jimmy Johnson. "Last year, we turned the ball over five times against Florida in the first game and six times against Tennessee.

"But this year, we cut our turnovers down until this game."

Despite the mistakes, the Hurricanes were in position to win it after driving from their 23 to the Penn State 6 in the closing minutes.

Belhaven Pops Bullets

BELHAVEN — Belhaven High School rolled up a pair of Tobacco Belt Conference basketball victories over Jamesville Friday night as the two resumed play following the holiday break.

Belhaven won the boys' game, 74-46 and took a 34-25 win in the girls' game.

Jamesville's boys got off to a slow start in their contest, scoring only six points in the opening quarter while giving up 19. They managed to match Belhaven in the second period, but trailed by 39-26 at intermission.

In the third period, the Bulldogs pulled further away, outscoring Jamesville, 13-7, to post a 52-33 lead. They finished off the Bullets, 22-13, in the final period to win going away.

Melvin Satchell led Belhaven with 20 points while Wayne Moore had 13 and Miller Ebron had 10. Charles Parker led Jamesville with 16 while Clay Dickinson had 12.

Jamesville and Belhaven were both slow out of the gate in the girls' game, each scoring four points in the first quarter. But in the second period, Belhaven warmed earlier, outhitting Jamesville, 13-7, for a 17-11 halftime lead.

Jamesville came back with an 8-2 margin in the third quarter, tying it at 19-19 at the end of the period. But in the final stanza, Belhaven outhit Jamesville, 15-6, to take the win.

Angela Riddick led Belhaven with 14 points while Amber O'Neal added 11. Chanin Perry had 11 to pace Jamesville.

The Jamesville boys are now 4-4 overall and 4-2 in TBC play while the girls fall to 2-6 overall and 2-4 in league play.

Jamesville travels to North Edgecombe on Tuesday.

Angela Lingerfelt

Pitt County's 'Sly' Game Warden

J.O. "Joe" Teel.

Almost every hunter in Pitt County has heard this name at one time or another — whether they know the man personally or have heard the tales about him.

Teel was the game warden in Pitt County for 30 years and he had a reputation of being pretty tough. Not many game violators could pull the wool over his eyes.

"Yeah, I was tough," he said recently in an interview at his home on Belvoir Highway. "I was frank. I treated everybody alike."

Teel admits, though, that he did catch "a few with ragged guns taped together that couldn't afford a license. If I found out they were in financial trouble and felt sorry for them, I would let them go. But that didn't happen very often." He believed in letting a judge decide a case, rather than himself.

J.O. TEEL

Teel, now 82 years old, has arthritis but feels "as good as I ever did. I feel like I could get up and run right now, but I know my legs won't let me."

He lives in the white wooden house he grew up in near Belvoir with his wife, Florence, who he has been married to for more than 40 years.

"I couldn't have picked a better wife," he said. "She never grumbled about the hours I kept and we've been very happy." They have two children and a granddaughter.

Teel retired in 1966 and said he "missed being a game warden to start with. I enjoyed being on the go a lot and meeting new people and making friends. But now it seems good to stay home, especially on Sundays, and not be called out at night."

He began his career as a game warden in 1936 after working in a store and at a tobacco company for a number of years.

"I always liked the outdoors and hunting and fishing," he commented. His favorite kind of hunting is rabbit hunting, but he has tried them all.

To become a game warden at that time, he was required to pass an examination given by "the federal man, then the oldest man (game warden) they had worked with us for a month."

After that, Teel began his 30-year tenure as Pitt County game warden and acquired a reputation of being able to outwit even the slyest game violator.

One of the most memorable incidents of his career, he said, happened one afternoon after he received a report that a man had killed more than his limit of game.

He and another young game warden visited the man's house with a search warrant. The young game warden went in to search the house, while Teel stayed outside and hid behind an oak tree in the yard, where the man's children were playing.

While Teel was hiding, he heard the children's mother come outside and tell them to 'get in bed and pretend like you have pneumonia. Don't get up even if Joe Teel comes and tells you to or I'll kill you.'

Teel said he knew from what the mother had said that she was going to conceal the hides under the mattress where the children were pretending to be sick. So he went in the house, where the younger game warden said he found a lot of blood but couldn't find anything else.

Teel said he told the man, "I'm just like an old blood hound and I know I smell hides in this house." After searching the house more, Teel finally went upstairs to the childrens' bedroom and told the man he smelled the hides coming from that room.

This caused the mother, Teel said, to become frantic and she started threatening to sue him if he made her poor children with pneumonia get out of bed.

When Teel told the children to get up, they were so scared they jumped right up and fled the room. Of course, Teel and the other game warden lifted the mattress and found 25 or 30 hides hidden there.

"I told you I was just like an old bloodhound," Teel told the man, who had earlier been bragging that Teel would never catch him violating the law.

Another incident he remembers happened while he was checking fishermen along Contentnea Creek. He said he heard a child crying and found three children tied to a tree near a creek bank.

"I asked those kids who left them there and they said their mother did. So I walked down the creek a ways and sure enough, I found their mother sitting on the creek bank fishing.

"She said, 'You're the fishing sheriff, aren't you?' And I said yes, then asked her why she had tied her children to a tree. She replied, 'I came down here to fish for fish, not younguns.'"

Teel recalled that several politicans he caught violating the law tried to bribe him, but he wouldn't take their money.

"I caught some politcians quail hunting out of season in October one time. I had heard them shooting and crawled up and hid behind their car. About the time they came back to their car, I jumped up and surprised them. One of the men ran, but the other ones told him to come back because there wasn't any use to run from Joe Teel.

"They told me who they were and said they couldn't let this get out. They stuck three one hundred dollar bills in my pocket and told me to forget it. I said I get my money from Raleigh and you haven't got enough money to change me. I'm going to treat you like everybody else."

Teel said that during his career his life was threatened three times and he found himself in several fights, including one with a man who had bitten off one officer's ear and another one's nose.

But, all in all, he remembers his life as a game warden as being very satisfying and rewarding. And he loves to reminisce about the old times.

Clemson Slips By Fordham

HONOLULU (AP) — Elden Campbell hit four free throws with less than a minute to play to enable unbeaten Clemson to escape with a 90-86 victory over Fordham in Friday night's opening game of the Hawaii Pacific Invitational basketball tournament.

Hawaii Pacific College set a school scoring record in defeating Alaska-Fairbanks, 126-100, in the night's second game. Clemson met HPC Saturday night for the championship after Fordham plays Alaska-Fairbanks for third place.

Campbell, a 6-foot-10 freshman center, hit his first pair of free throws to make it 87-84 Clemson with 37 seconds to play. They came after Fordham had pulled within one on a three-point goal by Joe Franco with 40 seconds to go.

The Rams then missed a pair of desperation three-point goal attempts, and Clemson guard Grayson Marshall hit the front end of a 1-and-1 to give the Tigers an 88-84 lead with 10 seconds left on the clock.

Franco then drove the length of court for a layup to cut deficit to 88-86 with four seconds to play before Campbell iced the game with a pair of free throws with two seconds left.

Jerry Pryor led Celmson, now 10-0, with 19 points, followed by Michael Brown and Campbell with 14 each, while Michael Tait had 11.

Greg Pedro led Fordham, 5-5, with 22 points. Joe Paterno had 20, James Robinson 16, Franco 14 and Frank Williams 10.

Hawaii Pacific guard Fred Jones set a school record by scoring 41 to lead the Sea Warriors past Alaska-Anchorage.

HPC used its fast break to take a 65-52 halftime lead, and kept adding to its lead the rest of the way.

Woody Jones had 25 points for Hawaii Pacific, while Richard Tillman added 23.

Rocco Myers led Alaska-Fairbanks with 27 points, followed by Mark Runge's 21.

Tourney Set In Washington

WASHINGTON — The Washington Invitational Basketball Tournament for men will be held Jan. 10-11 at the 7th Street Recreation Center in Washington.

An $80 entry fee is charged and high school rules will be used, with the exception that no dunking will be allowed.

Trophies will be presented to the first and second place teams and 10 players for each team.

The entry deadline for the double elimination event is Wednesday.

For further information, or to enter, contact Bobby Andrews, Rt. 3, Box 884, Washington, N.C., 27889, or call him at 946-1033, ext. 236 (day) or 946-4215 (evening).

Seeking Teams For Tourney

Pitt Community College will host an invitational basketball tournament on Friday through Sunday.

The tournament is open to any chuck, city or recreation basketball team. Trophies will be awarded to the top three teams and to a most valuable player.

The double elimination field will have 10 teams, which will include Pitt Community College and Roanoke-Chowan Technical College. The remaining field is limited to the first eight which apply.

For more information or to enter, contract Charles Coburn at Pitt C.C. by Wednesday, the deadline for entries.

Business Notes

New VP Is Named

The Plaza Exxon Service on Greenville Boulevard has announced the promotion of Jackie E. James to vice president.

The company said that James will be in charge of sales and service.

James previously operated the University Exxon on Fifth Street from 1978 until December 1986.

James and his wife, Terry, are Greenville natives and have two sons, Austin and Ashton.

JACKIE E. JAMES

Merger Agreement

L. Vincent Lowe Jr., chairman and chief executive officer of Branch Corp. of Wilson, and W.H. Parks, president and chief executive officer of Community Bancorporation Inc. of Greenville, S.C., jointly announced the approval of an agreement and plan of reorganization to merge the two companies.

They said that under terms of the agreement, Branch Corp. will issue 1.30 shares of its common stock for each of the 1,082,452 outstanding shares of Community's common stock. Community has granted to Branch an option to purchase common shares of Community under certain conditions.

The spokesmen said that based on the closing price of Branch common stock on Dec. 29, the transaction has an indicated value of approximately $56 million or 2.89 times the estimated fully diluted book value of Community on Dec. 31.

The transaction is expected to be effective in the third quarter of 1987.

Planters On List

The Planters Corp., parent holding company of Planters Bank, was recently listed in a survey of companies that have raised dividends for 10 consecutive years, Planters said.

The Rocky Mount-based corporation said it was one of two North Carolina banks to have increased its dividends for at least 10 years or longer. The survey was prepared by Moody's Investors Service Inc. and published in Dun's Business Month magazine.

With a 10-year dividend growth rate of 12.8 percent, Planters ranked 204th in the list of achievers compiled by Moody's from the 4,200 companies in its data base.

Record Revenues

Western Steer-Mom 'n' Pop's Inc. of Claremont has announced record revenues of $15,934,000 for the quarter ended Nov. 7, up 27 percent from revenues of $12,577,000 reported a year earlier.

The company said net earnings were $529,000 and $508,000 for the quarters ending in 1986 and 1985, respectively.

For the first nine months ended Nov. 7, Western Steer reported revenues of $41,765,000, up 17 percent from $35,766,000 reported the previous year.

Net income of $1,318,000 for the first months of 1986 compared with $1,196,000 a year earlier, up 10 percent.

Western Steer of Greenville is located on East 10th Street.

Sales Associate

Clark-Branch Realtors of Greenville has announced the association of Vic Corey as a new sales associate.

A lifelong resident of the Greenville-Pitt County area, Corey is a graduate of D.H. Conley High School and attended East Carolina University where he played baseball and made the dean's list.

Corey, who served as plant manager for Parker Grain Co. of Ayden for the past two years, has been affiliated with farming interests for the past 12 years. He was recognized in 1983 as one of the top 12 tobacco producers in the state.

Corey and his wife, the former Loretta Adams of Greenville, reside in Winterville. They are members of Four Square Christian Church.

Marketing Officer

Mary Charles Jenkins has joined Branch Banking & Trust in Morehead City as marketing officer, according to Rip Howard, vice president and area manager.

Ms. Jenkins joined BB&T in 1984 as a relocation specialist and has worked as marketing officer in the Greenville office.

A Greenville native, she is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in interior design. A member of St. James United Methodist Church in Greenville, she is married to Jack Warren Jenkins of Greenville.

Fitness Program

Jazzercise Inc., an international fitness program, is offering classes in the Greenville area, according to Sena Bolton, a certified Jazzercise instructor who has relocated her franchised business to Greenville from Nashville, Tenn.

Ms. Bolton said the goal of Jazzercise, developed by Judi Sheppard Missett in 1969, is to promote total fitness through dance. She said the program stresses cardiovascular fitness and adds balance, posture, coordination, flexibility, stamina, and muscle toning and strengthening exercises to work the body in a range of movements.

She said the program concentrates on mental fitness, relieving stress.

Ms. Bolton is holding classes at the Elm Street Recreation Center on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday from 9:30 a.m. to 10:30 a.m., and at the Elmhurst Elementary School auditorium on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Business Level Fell

The level of business activity in the state dipped slightly in November, dropping 0.1 percent to 136.7 from the October level, according to the First Wachovia Business Index.

Wachovia said the decline in the index was caused by a 3.5 percent decrease in residential building permits and a slight increase in new claims for unemployment insurance, up 0.5 percent.

Non-agricultural employment in North Carolina rose 0.2 percent in November, while non-agricultural employment was also up 0.2 percent nationwide. Over the past 12 months, non-agricultural employment in the state has risen 3 percent while national growth has averaged 2.3 percent, according to the index.

The average manufacturing workweek in North Carolina was unchanged in November from October's 40.7 hours.

Manufacturing employment in the state increased 0.2 percent in November.

Promotion Noted

Scott P. Evans has been promoted to banking officer by Branch Banking & Trust Co. in Wilson, according to Ashley F. Houser, vice president and city executive in Lexington.

Evans, a business services officer in Lexington, joined the bank in 1985 as a management development participant and has worked as branch manager in Lexington.

A Matthews native, Evans is a graduate of East Carolina University with a degree in finance.

New Bank Post

First Union National Bank of North Carolina has announced the promotion of John W. Osborne, a consumer loan compliance officer in the bank's consumer credit division, to vice president in Charlotte.

A Bethel Park, Pa., native, Osborne received a bachelor's degree from East Carolina University and joined First Union in 1969.

Osborne is a member of the ECU Commerce Club and the ECU Educational Foundation.

Offer Completed

Wickes Companies has announced that on Dec. 9 it completed its $1.16 billion tender offer for Collins & Aikman Corp., a producer of textile products and wallcoverings.

As a result of the tender, Wickes now owns approximately 92 percent of C&A's outstanding shares of common stock.

C&A, which has a plant in Farmville, reported net income of $66.4 million on sales of $1.1 billion for its fiscal year ended Feb. 28, 1986. For its third quarter ended Nov. 30, sales were $324 million, up 10 percent from the previous year's third quarter sales of $295.2 million. Net income for the quarter was $19.2 million, up from $18.3 million a year ago.

During the third quarter, Wickes had net income of $38.8 million on sales of $1.3 billion. Net income a year ago was $40.1 million on sales of $1 billion.

For the nine-month period, net income was $86.3 million on sales of $3.4 billion, compared with net income a year earlier of $47.6 million on sales of $1.9 billion.

Wickes has a facility on Greenville Boulevard.

Figures Improved

Shoney's Inc. reported record revenues and net income for the fiscal year ended Oct. 26.

The Nashville, Tenn., based company said revenues increased 15 percent for fiscal 1986 from $546,577,907 to $629,445,156, while income before taxes increased 18 percent to $77,100,236.

Revenues increased 18 percent for the fourth quarter from $132,792,227 to $156,774,507, while net income was $8,628,754.

Shoney's has a restaurant on Memorial Drive.

Operations Officer

C.L. Wilson III, senior vice president of the bank operations department of Branch Banking & Trust Co. in Wilson, has announced the promotion of Carolyn N. Lane to operations officer.

Ms. Lane, a research department manager in Wilson, joined the bank in 1971 as a consumer loan clerk and has worked as proof transit clerk, exception clerk, and items processing support supervisor.

A Wilson native, she is a graduate of Ralph L. Fike High School. She and her husband, Edward, have two children.

Boards OK Merger Agreement

The boards of directors of McDowell Enterprises Inc. and Rebs Inc. have approved a letter of intent to combine the two Nashville, Tenn., based companies, according to McDowell President P.S. Prasad of Greenville.

Prasad and Richard W. James, president of Rebs, said the combined companies will concentrate on expanding the broadcast media business of Rebs, and said a definitive agreement will be executed as soon as possible with a closing planned prior to March 31.

Under the terms of the letter of intent, Prasad will remain the chairman and chief executive officer of McDowell and James will become president and chief operating officer.

As part of the transaction, Prasad said, McDowell will acquire all of the outstanding common stock of Rebs in exchange for shares of newly issued common stock of McDopwell. The combined companies will have about $45 million in total assets.

McDowell, once one of the largest real estate and construction companies in the southeast, is nearing the completion of a planned divestiture and restructuring program aimed at converting the vast majority of its assets into cash. In doing so, Prasad said, McDowell has been able to virtually eliminate its loans and lines of credit from financial institutions.

As part of the plan, the company has been seeking acquisitions in areas other than its traditional lines of business.

At Sept. 30, McDowell had total assets of about $22.7 million and shareholders' equity of about $11.5 million, according to Prasad, who said McDowell is listed on the American Stock Exchange, trading under the symbol "ME."

Rebs was formed in January 1986 to acquire, own and operate AM and FM radio stations and other media and communications related businesses.

The company presently owns or leases virtually all of the operating assets and holds the broadcast licenses of WVOK(AM) and WLBT(FM) in Birmingham, Ala., WNKZ(AM) and WLRQ(FM) in Nashville and WNOX(AM) and WTNZ(FM) in Knoxville.

Rebs also owns the majority of the common stock of James & Hunter Communications Group Inc. which owns and operates WIBX(AM) and WNYZ(FM) in Utica, N.Y. and WJTO(AM) and WIGY(FM) in Bath, Maine.

James and Steve Hunter, secretary and treasurer of Rebs, are also principals in James & Hunter. The broadcast licenses of the James & Hunter stations are presently held by Rebs.

McDowell's acquisition of Rebs is subject to Federal Communications Commission approval.

IRA Rules In Effect Until April 15

By JOHN C. GIVEN
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The new year is here. And for better or for worse, so is the new tax law.

If you spent the last few months rearranging your finances to reap benefits from the new rules — or ease the pain — good for you.

But if you ignored all the warnings of things you should have done — and regret that you didn't — individual retirement accounts may still offer one small consolation.

Rules covering IRAs changed along with most everything else under the new legislation, which went into effect at midnight Dec. 31.

But grandfathered into the law was a provision leaving the old rules on IRAs intact through April 15. After that, they're dead, whether or not you get a filing extension.

This means that if you are covered by a retirement plan at work, and do not have an IRA, you still have until then to establish an account that can be used in your 1986 return.

If you work and your spouse doesn't, you may contribute up to $2,000 of salary, or $2,250 if another is set up for your spouse, and deduct the lot, whether the accounts are new or old.

And if you and your spouse both work, each may take the $2,000 maximum contribution, for a total $4,000 deduction, on your 1986 return.

Under the new law, all maximum contributions remain, along with stiff penalties for early withdrawal.

But the amount of IRA contributions that can be deducted changes, ranging from zero to the full amount, depending on your adjusted gross income.

Does this mean IRAs are no longer worthwhile investments?

Not at all.

Earnings in IRA accounts will still grow free of taxes until withdrawn, just as before.

So unless you expect your taxable income to rise after you retire — which does not usually happen — those deferred IRA earnings will be taxed at lower rates, most probably, when you need them most.

Two crucial elements of the new law are whether you are covered by a company retirement plan and your income.

If you are not covered by a pension or retirement savings plan, your contributions remain fully deductable.

If you are covered by such a plan, they remain fully deductable if:

—You are married and filing jointly and have a combined adjusted gross income of less than $40,000.

—You are single with an adjusted gross income of less than $25,000.

If you are covered, they remain partially deductable if:

—You are married and filing jointly and have a combined adjusted gross income between $40,000 and $50,000.

—You are single and have an adjusted gross income between $25,000 and $35,000.

The rate of phaseout of the deduction depends on income. For example, a single person earning $30,000 would be able to deduct one-half of his contribution.

For married couples filing separate returns, the phaseout range stretches from zero income to $10,000 on each return.

For the $2,250 spousal IRA deduction, the phaseout range is $40,000 to $50,000.

Mutual funds, stocks, bonds, zero-coupon treasury issues and FDIC-insured money market accounts are just a few of possible IRA plans offered by financial institutions.

Some charge start-up fees, with or without annual maintenance fees as well.

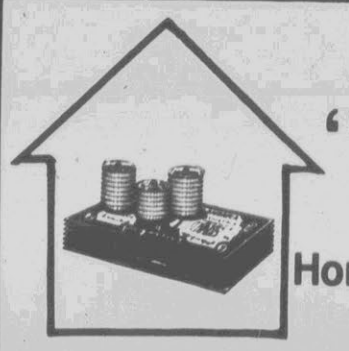

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

Rate Drops May Boost Home Sales, Analysts Say

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — In the wake of a months-long decline in new home sales, some analysts say the continued fall in interest rates could spark a mini-rebound in both new home sales and mortgage refinancings early in 1987.

Mortgage interest rates that hovered above the 11 percent level a year ago now are around 9.5 percent, backlogs from the refinancing boom of last spring long have disappeared and housing demand has softened in some markets, helping rein in price increases.

"We think that new home sales will not decline further and, in fact, may increase a bit," said Warren Lasko, executive vice president of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America.

Sales of existing homes remain healthy. Existing single-family home sales rose by 2.9 percent in November to an annual rate of 3.92 million units, the National Association of Realtors reported this past week.

It was the fifth consecutive monthly increase in existing home sales, and put the annual sales pace 13.6 percent ahead of a year earlier, the trade group said.

But at the same time the rate of new home sales has fallen from the peaks of the spring. The Commerce Department said new home sales fell by 2.2 percent in November from the previous month to an annual pace of 661,000 units.

That compared with a pace of 924,000 units in March and marked the seventh decline in eight months for new home sales, pushing the sales pace down 8.4 percent from a year ago.

Some analysts blamed the slump in new home sales on typical year-end slowness and a surge in new home prices that has widened the gap between new and existing home prices.

A number of factors — chiefly interest rates — could help bring more buyers into the market, analysts say.

The latest weekly survey by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. said long-term fixed rate mortgages averaged about 9.3 percent nationally, the lowest rate since 1978. A number of lenders are offering even lower rates, with some around 8.5 percent for 15-year or 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages.

"That may well spark a mini-refinance boom," said Paul Havemann, vice president of HSH Associates, which publishes a national mortgage rate survey. "It's certainly not going to hurt with regular buyers."

Lasko said the mortgage bankers group expected rates to hover around 9 percent or lower, at least for the early part of 1987.

At the same time, price increases were expected to slow. Lasko estimated new home prices in 1986 rose by about 15 percent over last year, "and that probably has throttled demand."

That inflation should slow to about 5 percent to 7 percent in 1987, reflecting lower costs of financing and a slackening of demand for land and labor that heightened in the housing boom of last spring, he said.

Another benefit should be the higher loan limits offered by the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corp. and the Federal National Mortgage Corp., two of the nation's biggest buyers of home mortgage loans.

The lowest rate conventional mortgages generally are offered only for buyers that qualify under the underwriting standards set by the two companies, and then only up to a certain amount. That amount was raised, as of Jan. 1, to $153,100 from $133,250, giving more buyers access to the lower rates.

Havemann said some buyers wanting to borrow more than the $133,250 limit likely had waited until after Jan. 1 to apply for loans at the higher amounts, while qualifying for the lower rates.

The mortgage bankers group expects new home sales to reach an annual range of 675,000 to 700,000 units next year, Lasko said.

Factors expected to help increase new home sales will be offset partly by continued price inflation and tighter mortgage underwriting standards, which will make it tougher for some people to raise a down payment, Lasko added.

In addition, while the housing boom of last spring benefited partly from pent-up demand left over from the days of 18 percent mortgages in the early 1980s, that demand largely has been satisfied, Lasko said.

Some homeowners who would benefit from refinancing — generally those whose mortgage rate would drop by more than two percentage points if they did — for various reasons still have not done so.

Some may have been put off by reports of lengthy delays due to the backlog of refinancings during the spring, while others may have been unable to raise the money required for closing costs, Havemann said.

"There's an awful lot of refinancing, but apparently not everybody did (refinance) who could have," he said.

That could change now, as application processings are back to normal and many lenders have kept on the additional staff hired during the crush of last spring.

Further declines in interest rates would provide more incentive to finally refinance, Havemann added.

In other business and economic news this past week:

—The Commerce Department said the government's main economic barometer rose by 1.2 percent in November, the sharpest increase in two years. However, a number of analysts cautioned that the rise may have resulted more from unique factors stemming from the impending tax law changes than from economic strength.

—Orders to U.S. factories for manufactured goods soared 4.1 percent in November, the biggest increase in two years, according to the Commerce Department. Most of the increase came from a surge in defense spending.

—Construction spending fell 0.7 percent in November to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $377.0 billion, following a 0.8 percent drop in October.

—Prices farmers got for raw products in December averaged 2.4 percent less than last December, and ended 1986 down 5.5 percent from the previous year, the Agriculture Department said.

—The Commerce Department predicted further improvements for U.S. industry in 1987, but said growth for most segments of the economy will not be spectacular. The predictions were made in the government's annual forecast of American business prospects.

—The U.S. trade deficit hit a record $19.2 billion in November, halting a three-month improvement trend and guaranteeing the 1986 trade deficit would surpass the previous high set last year, the Commerce Department said.

—The United States said it would impose 200 percent duties late this month on imports of a number of European farm products in retaliation for tariffs imposed following the entry of Spain and Portugal into the Common Market last year. The European Community threatened counter-retaliation if the tariffs were imposed.

—Canada agreed to impose a 15 percent surcharge on construction lumber exported to the United States, ending a bitter trade dispute between the two nations.

—American Telephone & Telegraph Co. was ordered to cut its long-distance rates by 11 percent effective Jan. 1 by the Federal Communications Commission, largely because of declines in the charges paid by AT&T to local phone companies.

—ITT Corp. and France's state-owned Cie. Generale d'Electricite signed a formal agreement for a joint venture that created the world's second largest telecommunications venture after AT&T.

—Allied Stores Corp. shareholders approved the $3.5 billion acquisition of the big New York-based retailer by Campeau Corp. of Toronto.

—Allied Supermarkets Inc. and Vons Companies Inc. agreed to merge and then sell Allied's Michigan holdings in a deal valued at more than $700 million. The transaction essentially will make Vons a publicly held company and will take Allied private.

—People Express Inc. shareholders narrowly approved the company's $112 million merger with Texas Air Corp., making Texas Air the nation's biggest airline.

—Pullman-Peabody Co. dropped its bid to acquire Joy Manufacturing Co., which has agreed instead to be purchased by a New York-based investor group for $620 million.

—USX Corp. said it would take an after-tax charge of $300 million against 1986 earnings because of the cost of redeeming the last of the last of the original debt incurred in its $6.2 billion acquisition of Marathon Oil Corp.

—Exxon Corp. became the latest U.S. company to announce it was pulling out of South Africa. The world's biggest oil company said it would sell its small holdings to an independent trust.

—Time Inc. sold its 45 percent interest in the partnership that owns the Time & Life Building in Manhattan to Rockefeller Group Inc., which owns the other 55 percent of the partnership, for $118 million.

Trading Heavy As Peking's First Money Market Opens

PEKING (AP) — Peking's first money market opened Saturday, with about 550 million yuan, or $149 million, changing hands in the first two hours of trading.

The official Xinhua News Agency said the market, run by the Industrial and Commercial Bank of China, offers services in interbank borrowing and lending, exchange of stocks and negotiable securities and financial consultation.

Fourteen financial institutions took part in first-day transactions, the report said. It said crowds of people, including onlookers, filled the office near the Temple of Heaven in southern Peking.

Xinhua said the Tianqiao Department Store Co. offered $82,000 worth of stock for sale, and that most buyers were individuals.

It said one young woman bought $8,100 worth of stock for her husband, who runs a factory in a Peking suburb. The average wage of a Chinese worker is about 1,000 yuan — equivalent to $270 — a year.

The department store is offering interest and dividend rates 100 percent higher than those offered by banks, it said.

The report did not say if any other companies sold stocks.

China's first stock market opened in Shanghai last fall, with two companies selling shares. Almost all shares were purchased on the first day, and there have been almost no transactions since then.

The market there, also run by the Industrial and Commercial Bank, imposed a 15 percent maximum that can be earned on shares from interest and dividends. That too is about 100 percent ordinary bank interest rates.

Financial centers, now being encouraged by the government to raise badly needed capital for development, have also opened in Shenyang, Wuhan, Chungking and other cities.

Business Anniversary Sees Prices From 1927

LONDON (AP) — John Bragg celebrated 60 years in business Saturday by offering 120 items of menswear at 1927 prices — and two bargain-hunting Scots drove 410 miles to buy matching sweaters.

Dozens of people started lining up outside J.W. Bragg and Son in north London's Finchley district at 2 a.m. and the bargains were all snapped up in 30 minutes.

First in line was a man who wouldn't give his name because he was supposed to be at work. Then came Kofi Danso, 15, of north London who bought a woolen sports jacket reduced from $89 to $2.65, to match the 1927 price in shillings and pence.

Jim Patterson and his friend Michael Murray arrived from Glasgow and both bought pink sweaters reduced from $37 to 81 cents.

"We had always wanted to come to London to be at one of the big sales," said Patterson, a 23-year-old toolmaker.

Murray, 22, also a toolmaker, said: "It is worth it for us to know what it feels like to queue and get a bargain. We also think they are very nice."

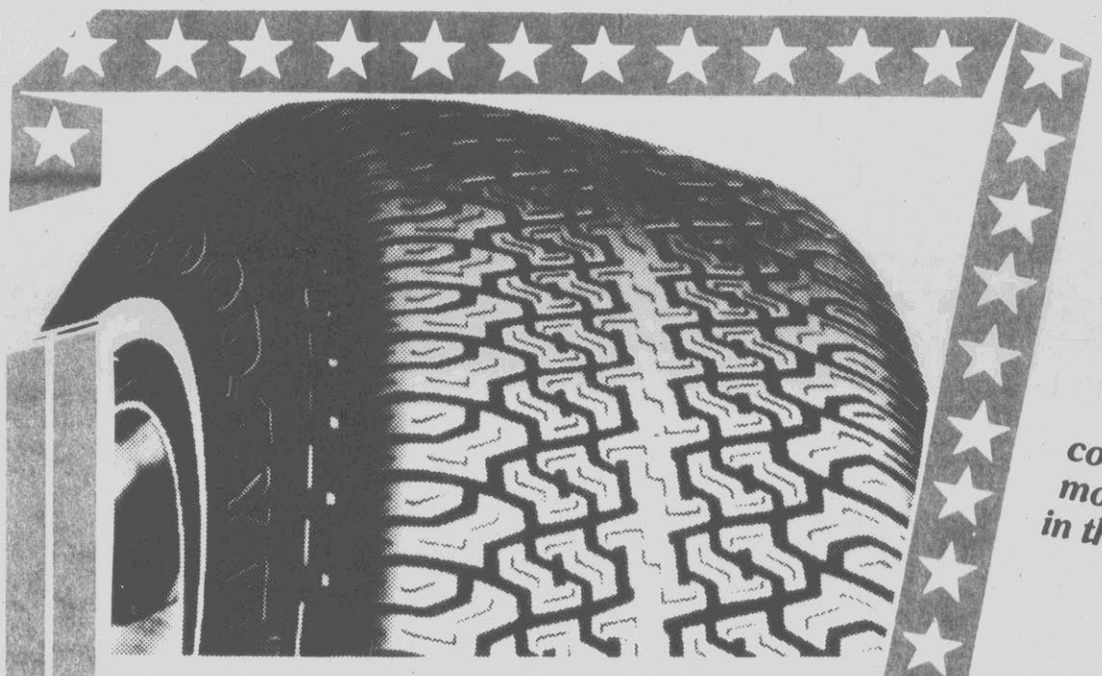

Bragg, 73, started working at the store when he was 14 years old and bought it in 1968. "It gives me pleasure to give something back," he said.

Despite the prices, Bragg said he made "a few pennies" profit because all the items in the sale were supplied free by the manufacturers.

Forgery Charges

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A University of Texas engineering student and his father have been charged with forgery after being arrested when an alert supermarket clerk refused to accept a bogus $100 bill.

The men were arrested New Year's Eve when a supermarket clerk saw irregularities in a $100 bill given her. The store manager called police.

Donors Give A Gift With Many Uses

Text by Cherie Evans

People who donate their healthy blood platelets through apheresis help others in what may be called an old-fashioned way. The process is not quick or mobile, say blood officials, but a high quality of giving is there.

"I usually stay on the machine right at two hours," said Wanda Hathaway as she reclined in a chair at the apheresis donor center in the Brody Building. Her left arm was extended, connected to the machine that was separating platelets from her blood.

Chris Giles watches television as his father, Gregory, donates platelets to the apheresis program of Greenville Blood Services. Donors also read to pass the time.

The apheresis program of Greenville Blood Services has existed about five years, said Dr. David Miller, medical director of the Blood Services. Healthy platelets extracted from donors are used to aid patients with leukemia, blood marrow abnormalities and other diseases.

The whole process takes about three hours, Ms. Hathaway said, so she watches television or looks at magazines. "They (the nurses) won't let you go to sleep."

"Apheresis literally means to take away," said Dr. David Miller, medical director of Greenville Blood Services. Apheresis is used therapeutically and preparatorily, he said.

Preparatorily, "we harvest normal platelets from normal people" through apheresis, he said.

"People with leukemia need lots of platelet transfusions. The apheresis machines harvest six to eight units of platelets from one person," Miller said.

Apheresis also provides granulocytes — cells containing cytoplasm — that are "given exclusively to newborn babies who can't produce their own granulocytes," he said.

Antibiotics given to children "only work when used with normal defense mechanisms," Miller said, and granulocytes are part of the normal defense. By giving additional granulocytes to children who need them, "we give those kids an extra boost," he said.

Patients and apheresis donors have to be matched, Miller said. "You need to try to find donors that are compatible" to the patients, he said, which is not easy.

"That is an area of active research in bloodbanking," he said. "You can't do matching for platelets as easy as matching for red blood cells."

Traditional test-tube matching techniques are used to match donors, but "there are no real good methods," Miller said.

Once a donor is matched with a patient, donors are called as the patient needs the platelets.

"They call me about twice a month," Ms. Hathaway said, explaining that her employer gives her time off from work to donate.

The platelets help people with leukemia and cancer, she said. "If you can help them in that way, it's worth the time and effort."

Gary Giles, also a donor, said he prefers apheresis donating to blood donating.

"I feel the difference when I give blood. This way I don't feel any difference at all," he said.

"They call me about every two to three months," Giles said, explaining that his employer also gives him time off from work to donate.

In addition to the preparatory uses of apheresis, there are therapeutic uses which include removing abnormal plasma and abnormal kinds of cells from the body such as red blood cells, white blood cells or platelets, Miller said.

Healthy red blood cells replace abnormal cells as they are removed, he said. "You need to put red cells back so those are essentially exchanges."

A common exchange of red blood cells occurs in pregnant patients with sickle cell disease where red blood cells have an abnormal shape, Miller said. "The morbidity and mortality associated with pregnancy and sickle cell disease is quite high for the mother and child."

Apheresis also is therapeutically used to reduce the high white cell counts of leukemia patients, Miller said. "It is not a cure. It's a temporary kind of effect that makes the patient feel better. It does not affect the basic underlying disease."

In bone marrow abnormalities where too many platelets create an "uncommon kind of stroke," apheresis removes some of the excess circulating platelets, he said. "This kind of patient we see at most once a year."

Plasma exchanges have been tried therapeutically for diseases such as myasthenia gravis — a faulty nerve disorder characterized by weakness and quick fatigue of muscles — and hyperviscosity syndrome — a collection of diseases characterized by the production of abnormally large amounts of protein where normally only small amounts exist, Miller said.

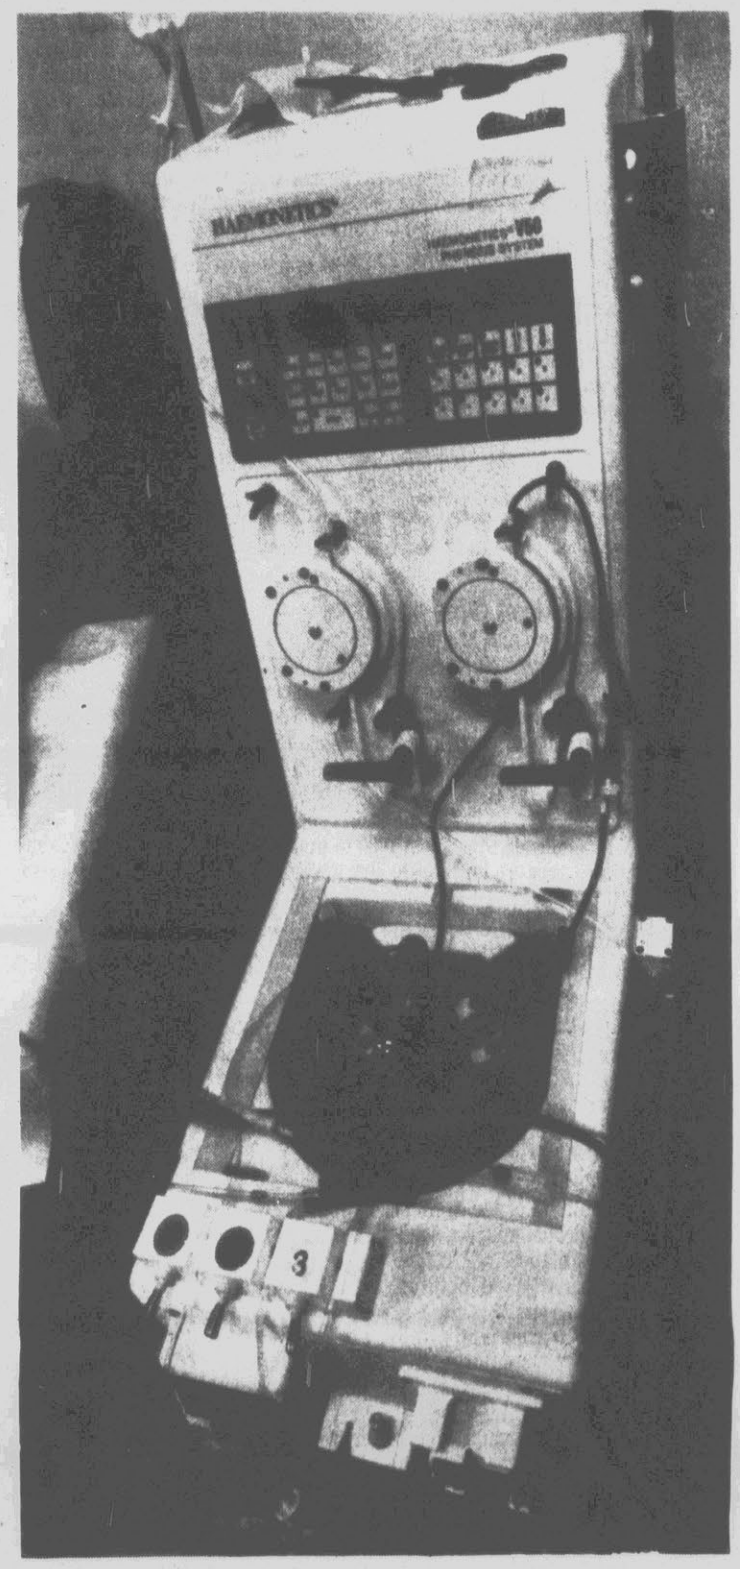

Apheresis also aids those who produce too many red blood cells, making their blood too thick, he said. "We remove excess blood cells and replace it with fluid" to help their blood circulate better.

The apheresis donor center in the Brody Building also is a stationary blood donation center — an effort to get more people to donate blood, especially during the holiday season shortage, Miller said. "We needed to provide a facility in this region where donors can donate (blood) by appointment.

"It is designed to greatly improve the convenience of the donor," he said. Having an appointment "really minimizes the waiting time."

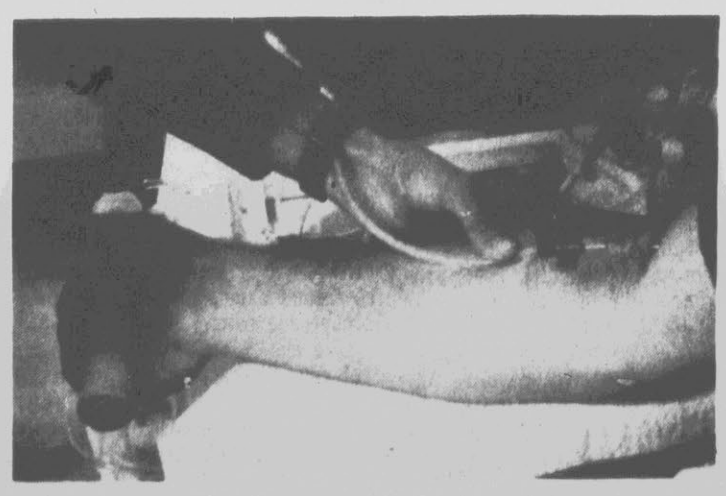

There are no ways to combat the fear many people have of giving blood, Miller said. "It's less painful than getting your ears pierced I've been told by many women," and most people have "gotten past the misconception that you can get AIDS from donating."

The fear of giving blood appears to be a "standard, hard-to-define fear that we always face. Nobody really knows what motivates donors except people's good will," he said.

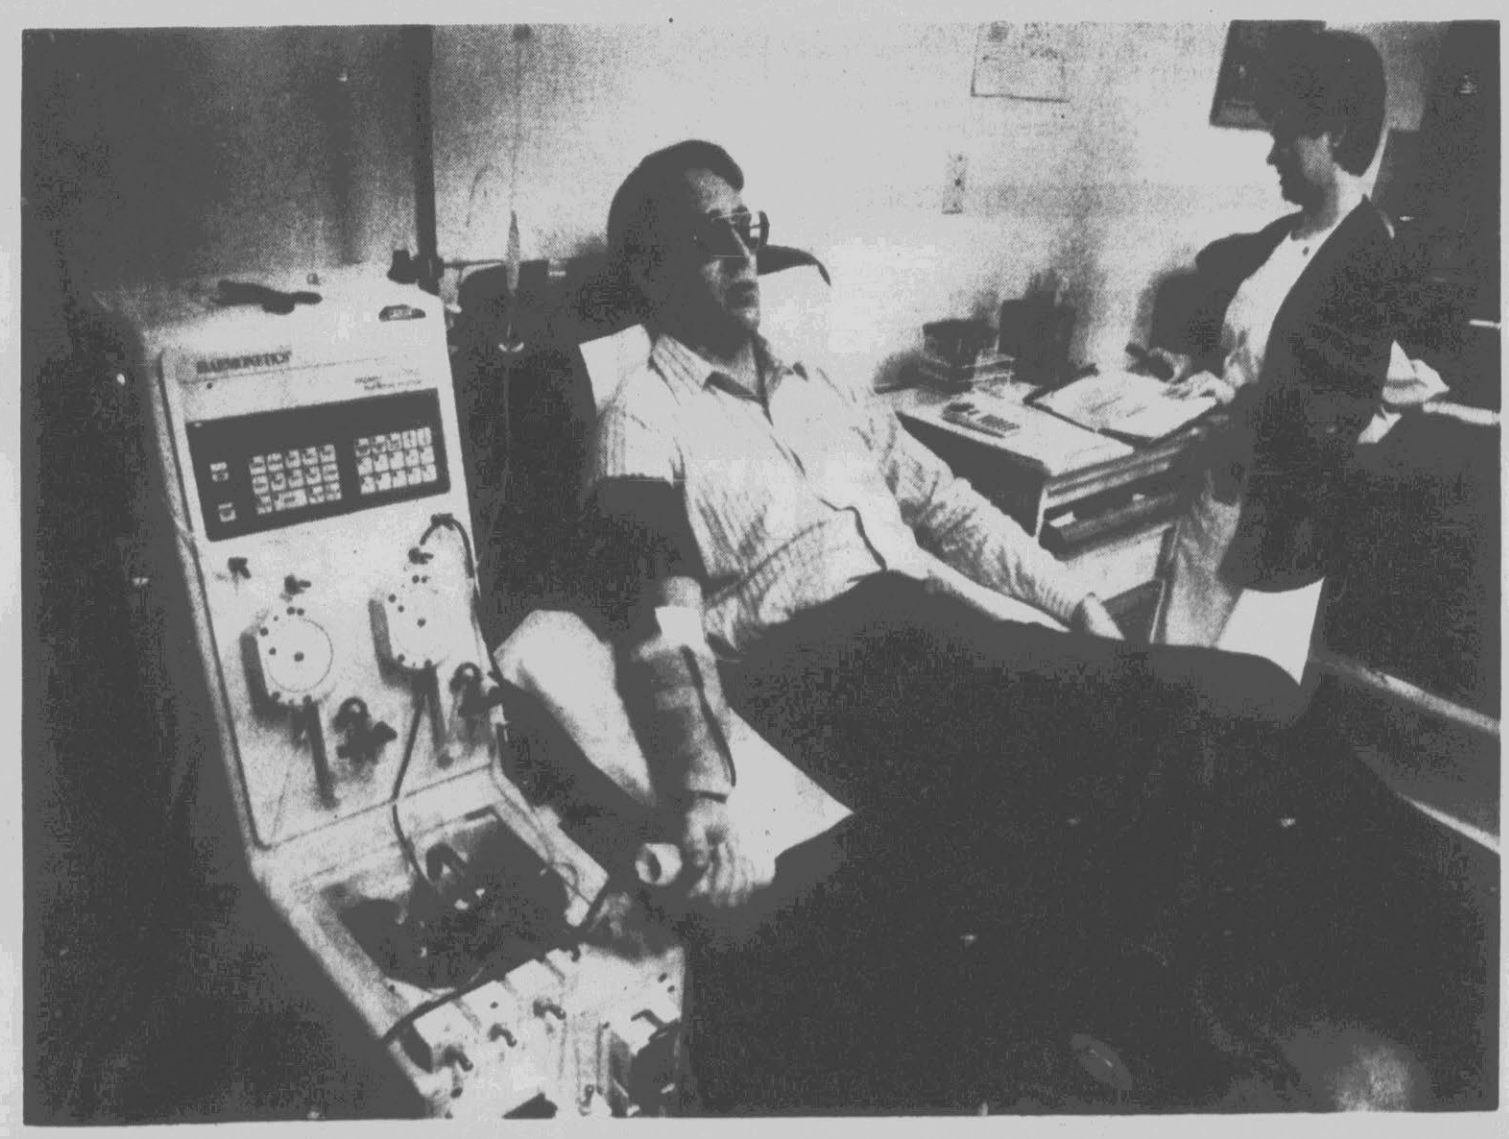

The modern Haemonetics machine uses one arm of the apheresis donor to separate platelets from the blood. Older machines used both arms of the participants to speed the procedures averaging about three hours. "Men usually run a little bit faster than women," said Lela Parker, a nurse at the center.

An arm of the apheresis donor is connected to the Haemonetics machine that separates platelets from the blood. Donors regularly squeeze their hands to aid circulation.

Nurse Donna Moore, right, reviews medical records as Gregory Giles of Greenville begins the apheresis process that separates platelets from his blood. Giles has been donating platelets for about a year, he said. The entire process takes about three hours.

Wanda Hathaway, left, has been an apheresis donor about three years, she said. A letter in the mail prompted her to become a donor. "They were short of apheresis donors and they wanted to know if I'd be willing to do it," she said.

Foreman-Edwards Vows Solemnized

LENOIR — Roslyn Lucinda Edwards of Lenoir became the bride of Benjamin Alexander Foreman of Greenville Saturday at 3 p.m. The Rev. Fred D. Barnes conducted the double ring ceremony in the First Baptist Church.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edmond O'Brien Edwards Sr. of Lenoir and the granddaughter of Mrs. John D. Sutton of Greenville. She is a graduate of East Carolina University and was presented at the 55th annual North Carolina Debutante Ball sponsored by the Terpsichorean Club of Raleigh.

The bridegroom, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Columbus Foreman Jr. of Wilmington, is a graduate of ECU. He is employed by Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.

The bride, escorted by her father, wore a family wedding gown of satin peau de soie fashioned with a Princess Anne neckline etched with re-embroidered pearls. The gown featured a natural waistline and petal skirt which ended in a chapel train. She wore a cresent-shaped headpiece of candlelight imported silk illusion with pencil ending in a walking length entirely appliqued in pearls. She carried a bouquet of white roses, rubrum lilies and baby's breath.

Barbara Lynn Edwards of Lenoir was her sister's honor attendant. She wore a long dusty rose taffeta dress.

Bridesmaids, who were dressed like the maid of honor, were Louann Stokes of Wilmington; Joanna Lynn Sutton of Wallace, cousin of the bride; Rosemary Edwards of Little Rock, Ark., sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and Susan Foreman of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers were Wilbert James Peterson of Raleigh; Henry Christopher Foreman of Wilmington, brother of the bridegroom; Edmond O'Brien Edwards Jr. of Little Rock, Ark., brother of the bride, and Richard Rumley of Greenville, brother-in-law of the bridegroom.

Nuptial music was performed by organist Lana Smith and pianist John Coffey.

A reception was held at the home of the bride's parents following the ceremony.

The couple will reside in Greenville after a trip to Vail, Colo.

Wedding Vows Said In Saturday Ceremony

On Saturday in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Tricia Gaylord Tripp and Robert Wayne Eimers exchanged wedding vows in a double ring ceremony. The Rev. Lawrence P. Houston Jr. officiated.

A program of wedding music was presented by Sharon Irwin, organist, and Mrs. William E. Tripp Jr., vocalist, both of Greenville.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Ray Tripp Sr. of Greenville. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Richard William Eimers of Manorville, N.Y.

Escorted by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal white gown of sheerganza and chantilly lace. The gown was fashioned with a high neckline and sheer yoke outlined with chantilly lace etched with pearls. The lace appliqued bishop sleeves over fitted inner sleeves closed with cuffs coming to a point over the hands. The flowing lace appliqued, pearl-accented skirt was bordered in lace and extended into an attached cathedral train. Her braided lace and pearl halo was attached to a silk illusion fingertip veil. She carried a formal cascading bouquet of burgundy and white roses accented with baby's breath and stephanotis with tips of greenery tied with white satin.

Mrs. Bruce Ray Tripp Jr. of Greenville, sister-in-law of the bride, was honor attendant and wore a formal gown of burgundy taffeta designed with an off-shouler sabrina neckline and ruffled sleeves. She carried a bouquet of three long-stemmed red roses enhanced with baby's breath and greenery.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. Charles Lucas Tripp, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Jacob Cox, cousin of the bride, both of Greenville, Mrs. Brian Heim of Manorville, N.Y., sister of the bridegroom, and Kimberly Hall of Blounts Creek. Each wore a gown identical to that of the honor attendant and carried a long-stemmed red rose.

Richard Warren Eimers of Destin, Fla., was best man for his brother. Ushers were Peter Williamson of Derry, N.H., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Brian Heim of Manorville, N.Y., brother-in-law of the bridegroom, Charles Lucas Tripp, brother of the bride, and Bruce Ray Tripp Jr. of Greenville, brother of the bride.

The bride's parents entertained at a brunch at Riverside Steak Bar after the ceremony. Guests were greeted by Katrina Gray and Kenneth Briley, both of Greenville. Goodbyes were said by Mr. and Mrs. Randal Hall of Blounts Creek.

After a wedding trip to Williamsburg, Va., the couple will live in Chapel Hill.

The bride is a graduate of North Pitt High School and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is employed by Pepsi-Cola Co. in Durham. The bridegroom is employed by the Village Companies in Chapel Hill and graduted from State University of New York.

MRS. EIMERS

The parents of the bridegroom entertained at a rehearsal dinner Friday at Riverside Steak Bar.

The couple was honored at several showers, a pig picking and a tea.

Be Prepared For Situations

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

When a spouse or other close relative dies, the shock can be overpowering. Yet tough financial and other decisions demand immediate attention. This young woman's story, from Better Homes and Gardens magazine, may help you prepare for the important issues before it's too late.

Becky Barker returned to her home in Corpus Christi, Texas, one balmy October Sunday in 1980 to find friends and family milling about in her house. Her husband, Billy, had been killed by a drunken driver.

Becky was a widow at 30, with two little girls to care for — both in the hospital, one in critical condition. They had been in the family car with Billy when the drunken driver struck.

Weeks of anguish and frustration followed that tragic afternoon. "Questions were coming at me from all sides," says Becky. "Funeral directors, hospital business offices, insurance agents, bankers, accountants, doctors, even the district attorney's office all needed information and decisions.

"My life became a litany of 'I don't knows.' There were so many details. But in order to find the two handfuls of information and documents we needed, we had to look through mountains of files.

"If I could just have talked to Billy. He was the only one who knew all the answers."

With the help of friends and family, she managed to sort through all the papers during that bleak autumn. By Christmas, the worst was over, and she wanted to find a way to thank all who had aided her.

Her inspiration: She would give them workbooks to help them organize and record all the information their survifors would need.

Becky talked with numerous planners, but found nothing as complete, yet uncomplicated, as she wanted. "What I was looking for was a practical survival kit for family and friends who have to deal with the details." Finally she developed her own fill-in-the-blanks, sturdy three-ring-binder workbook called "answers."

She put together 20 of these notebooks and gave them to friends for Christmas. The dedication was to her husband.

Word spread. Friends of friends began to ask for copies. Now Becky and her sister ahd parter Suzi Hart publish "answers" in bulk and travel the speaking circuit, encouraging people to create their own complete written record of the important details.

"It's just a commonsense project," says Becky, "but it's one of the most thoughtful things you can do to help your survivors."

As a fill-in workbook, "answers" is divided into five sections: Family, Finances, Properties, Insurance, and Business. "Information will vary in complexity according to your lifestyle," says Becky, "but, except for business, the categories pertain to everybody."

Within the sections, there is space for filling in everything from social security and military service data to advisers' phone numbers and addresses, location of important documents, living will and burial instructions, and information about insurance and financial and other assets.

While much of "answers" is devoted to essential financial data plus instructions in case of death, the Family section is useful for additional, ongoing purposes. There is a page for emergency numbers, for example; another for special household instructions (yard and pet care data and the like); and legal forms permtting emergency medical treatment for your children.

Especially handy are the sturdy divider sheets with pockets for important documents such as copies of your will and trust papers, birth and marriage certificates, real estate papers, and home improvement receipts. "Don't keep originals here, though," Becky advises. "Those should go in a fireproof box. Just note where that's located."

Whether you use "answers" or some other organizing tool, Becky suggests keeping the format flexible. For example, write in pencil so you can correct and update the data.

You should tell family members and someone outside the immediate family where you keep this record — preferably in a fireproof box also.

"And make sure the record stays there," says Becky. "Take it out only to update it — at least once a year, or when facts change, like the purchase of new property or the birth of a child."

Drugs Cause Universal Pain

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

There is a time to laugh ... a time to cry ... and a time to act. This column has done a little of each over the past 21 years. There is probably not a family in this country today who has not been touched by the drug culture.

We've heard the viewpoints of the users, the dealers, the social workers, the law enforcement community, the government, the growers and the medical profession. We've talked to death the causes, the effects, the catalyst and the prognosis. We rarely hear from those who must watch.

Since nothing has penetrated the arrogance of users who vow they are "different," maybe it's time to bring out the hard stuff that is painful to read. This is not the first letter I have received from parents who lost children to an overdose of drugs. But it represents the universal pain that is in all of them.

"Our son is dead! I know that everyone who has ever lost a child feels the sadness and the waste. It is a feeling you know will never leave you, but those of us who have lost a child to drugs have another feeling. Was it our fault? Did we know he was into drugs? Yes and no. All the kids do social drugs ... a little smoke here and there, drinking and maybe a snort or two, now and then. Hey ... everyone does it. Just go to any party, look in any magazine, watch any TV, go to any movie. It's cool. We can handle it. No, not everyone can handle it. Some, when they start, cannot stop.

"Instead of a son to hold, I now have a box of ashes I don't know what to do with. He could have been anything in the world he wanted to. He was always so full of life. He loved to read, listen to music, be with people. He was far from an angel, but at 21, who is?

"I have a favorite picture of him but when I look at it, the physical shock that always goes through my body is indescribable. The more time that passes it seems the worse it gets. You begin to know he will never come home again. Never hug you, never say, "Mom, I love you' or "What's for dinner?'

"Society accepts the loss of a child to an accident, disease -- anything but to drugs. We not only have to live with our son's death but the looks you receive from people who learn your child has died from an overdose. Kind of unclean.

"Our son is dead! All he wanted was to be like the others. Sometime ... somewhere ... someone will need to finally take a stand and say, "No, this is not right!' " -- (NAME WITHHELD)

He was a boy who tried it ... just like you.

He was a boy who could handle it ... just like you.

He was a boy who couldn't stop ... just like you.

He was a boy who one day didn't wake up ....

A CHANGE IN OUTLOOK

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The college graduating class of 1990 is more money-conscious than the students of some 20 years earlier, according to a survey made by UCLA's Higher Education Research Institute and the American Council on Education.

Of 280,000 college freshmen from 550 campuses surveyed, 71 percent said "being very well off financially" was their primary goal as opposed to 83 percent of the freshmen of 1967 who named "developing a meaningful philosophy of life." One in four wants a business career and fewer than 1 percent will be English majors (down 80 percent in 20 years).

Politically, college freshmen have moved towards the center. Middle-of-the-roaders grew to 56.7 percent, up from 45.4 percent. Liberals shrank from 36.6 percent to 22.4 percent, while freshmen on the right stayed at 15 to 20 percent of the total.

Animals Can Have Skin Ailments

By COUNTRY LIVING
A Hearst Magazine

Skin ailments are a common problem for dogs and cats, and the cure may be anything from a flea bath to a diet of chicken and rice.

Skin mirrors health in pets even more than in people, according to an article in the January issue of Country Living, but skin ailments can be hard to diagnose in pets because similar problems may have very different causes.

In winter, indoor heating systems tend to dry the air, and can turn a minor pet skin irritation into a major one.

Linda Medleau, a specialist in animal dermatology at the University of Georgia, warns that the cat or dog who spends a lot of time lying in front of a fireplace or heating vent may suffer a flare-up of a chronic skin condition.

When a pet can't stop scratching, fleas are the top suspect — even in winter, she said. These pests can go months without a meal, buried in a sofa or carpet. They thrive in the heat of summer, but survive easily at ordinary room temperatures.

A flea collar may not be enough. Veterinarian Robert W. Kirk, author of "First Aid for Pets," said that to eliminate fleas you must cleanse both pet and environment. Winter is a good time for this, since your pet is unlikely to bring in outside reinforcements.

Fleas in some parts of the country are becoming insecticide-resistant, so consult a veterinarian about the best product to use.

Lice and mites also plague dogs and cats. Lice are more common in winter. Besides itching, they can cause dry, flaking skin, loss of appetite and a dull, disheveled coat. Treatment is a weekly antiparasitic shampoo. Be careful — some shampoos designed for dogs can be toxic for cats.

Mites usually are confined to the ears and should be treated with both an insecticide and a solution to dissolve the earwax where they breed.

Ringworm, a fungus not a worm, causes hair loss rather than itching. "Tincture of time" is prescribed for mild cases; more severe attacks that involve swelling and inflammation require antifungal lotions and rinses.

Allopecia or hair loss also can reflect psychological problems when pets respond to life-changing crises by overgrooming, nervously licking or chewing sore spots. Time, support and extra affection usually are the cure.

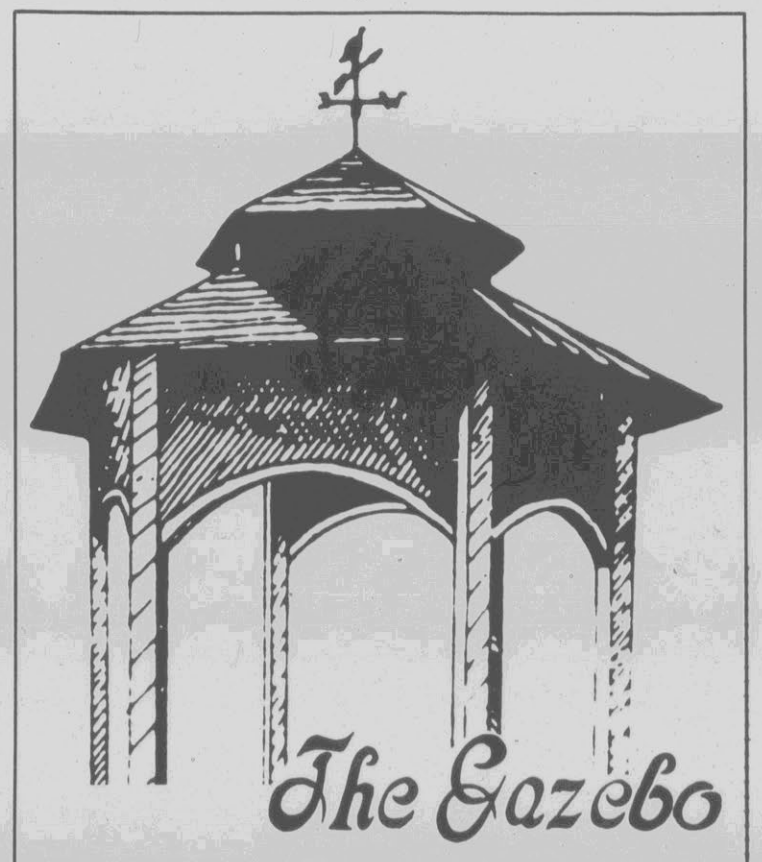

The toughest skin ailments to identify and treat are allergies, but veterinarians now are better able to identify them. The most common pet allergies are to food. An allergic skin irritation may follow a change in diet, but more often a pet will eat the same food for a year before showing a reaction.

Switching to another brand of pet food rarely helps.

Couple Marries On Saturday

The wedding of Lisa Marie Leggett and Kurt Harrison Ihly was held Saturday at 4:30 p.m. in the First Christian Church. Glen Evans conducted the double ring ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham Leggett of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Lawrence Ihly of Raleigh.

Ruth Cotton West, cousin of the bride, was organist for the ceremony, and harpist was Mrs. Joe Lewis of Washington, N.C. Terry Leggett, sister of the bride, sang "O Perfect Love" and "The Lord's Prayer."

The bride was escorted by her father and was given in marriage by her parents. The bridegroom's father was best man.

Honor attendants were Camille L. Rollins of Greenville and Terry E. Leggett of Chesapeake, Va., both sisters of the bride. Bridesmaids were Susan Corbett of Raleigh, Linda Winstead, Susan Winstead and Daphne Warrington, all of Greenville. Blair Taylor, cousin of the bride from Farmville, was flower girl. Honorary bridesmaids were Marsha Tart and Gena Autry, both of Greenville.

Ushers were Johnny Core, Brian Coffey and Mike Lesesne, all of Raleigh, and John Gresham and Bob Najjar, both of Greenville.

The bride wore a formal gown of ivory satin, English net and re-embroidered alencon lace over peau de soie. The gown was fashioned with a fitted satin bodice with an overlay of English net and re-embroidered alencon lace accented with designs of pearls. The Victorian neckline featured a sheer yoke and long sleeves of net, lace and pearls. The sleeves and bodice back closed with traditional bridal buttons. The satin A-line skirt flowed to a full chapel train. Re-embroidered alencon lace trimmed with pearls adorned the skirt and completely bordered the gown. She wore a fingertip mantilla of imported silk illusion edged with scalloped re-embroidered alencon lace and pearls which fell from a lace and pearl Camelot cap. She carried a tapered cascade bouquet of white roses, freesia and ivy.

The attendants each wore a formal dress of red tissue taffeta accented by a sweetheart neckline and long fitted sleeves outlined in ruffles. The fitted bodice of the gowns extended into a flounced peplum and full skirt and the deep V-back was lined with ruffles. The attendants carried tapered cascade bouquets of red and white miniature carnations, seasonal greenery and ivy.

The flower girl wore a formal dress of red velvet with long puffed sleeves accented with a white lace pinafore and petticoat. She carried a basket of red and white carnations.

A reception was held in the American Legion Building following the ceremony. Music was provided by The Jimmy Aycock Trio.

A rehearsal dinner given by the parents of the bridegroom was held at the Colonial Inn, Farmville. A bridesmaids luncheon at The Three Steers Restaurant was hosted by Charlotte Ramey, Frances Laughinghouse, June Harris, Edith Warren and Merle Richardson.

After a wedding trip to Hilton Head, S.C., the couple will live in Greenville.

MRS. IHLY

The bride is a graduate of St. Mary's College and the bridegroom attended N.C. State University and East Carolina University, where he graduated with honors. He is employed by the Operations Research Group of Burroughs Wellcome Co. and she is a dental assistant for Dr. D. Harper Taylor.

Wedding Vows Solemnized

Sondra Dee Padgett and Joseph Lewis Padley III were united in marriage at 3 p.m. Saturday in the Black Jack Free Will Baptist Church. The Rev. Daniel Rivers performed the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by Peggy Hardee. Harry A. Jones Jr. sang "More," "Whither Thou Goest" and "The Wedding Prayer."

Parents of the bridal couple are Mr. and Mrs. Charlie A. Padgett of Greenville and Mr. and Mrs. Joseph L. Padley Jr. of Ayden.

The bride was given in marriage by her parents and was escorted by her father. She wore a formal length gown of white organza designed with a high neckline encircled with Brussels lace. The gown featured a sheer yoke of illusion outlined in embroidered Brussels lace. The fitted bodice was enhanced with silk Venise lace beaded with seed pearls. Matching lace encircled the modified waistline. The Renaissance sleeves were fashioned of organza and imported illusion accented with silk Venise and Brussels lace. The full circular skirt and attached chapel length train were accentuated by a scalloped hemline of Brussels lace. She wore a halo of silk flowers with a chapel length veil of illusion and pencil edging.

Sherry Carawan, sister of the bride, served as matron of honor. Candice Padley, daughter of the bridegroom, and Brandi Edwards, niece of the bride, were flower girls. Each attendant carried a silk nosegay of lavender and pink flowers.

The bridegroom's father served as best man. Thomas E. Carawan Jr., brother-in-law of the bride, was the usher.

Judy Heath, cousin of the bride, attended the guest register. Betsy Elks, aunt of the bride, directed the ceremony.

A reception given by the bride's parents followed the ceremony.

The bride is employed by the East Carolina University School of Medicine and the bridegroom is employed by ECU.

The couple will reside in Winterville.

Cut Personal Health Risks

By NYU MEDICAL CENTER

According to a recent U.S. Public Health Service analysis, some 11.7 million years of life were lost by Americans who died untimely deaths in 1984; more than 1.5 million of those years were lost to heart disease. Specialists at New York University Medical Center suggest you resolve to assess your own risk factors, then take steps to control or modify them.

Dr. Arthur C. Fox, a cardiologist and professor of medicine at the medical center, suggests you start by assigning yourself to one of three categories: Those with a personal history of high blood pressure, diabetes, or any heart or circulatory problem; those who have close relatives with such conditions but have none of the ills themselves; and those with no personal or family history of these conditions.

If you are a member of the last category, he advises practicing general preventive measures and avoiding the known risk factors that encourage diseases of the heart and coronary arteries. If you smoke, stop. If you are overweight, reduce. Eat a balanced diet and limit your intake of saturated fats. "A regular program of moderate exercise is beneficial, especially for those in sedentary occupations," said Fox, who added that "you don't have to take up marathon running. There is no proof that such strenuous aerobic exercise is protective, and an exercise, such as weight-lifting, may be harmful."

Eileen Shea-DiFrisco, a nurse-educator at the medical center, seconds that prescription: "Moderation is definitely the key. Eat moderately, so your weight stays in optimum range — you don't have to forgo that apple pie, just make it a fairly small slice — and see that your diet is a balanced one." She, too, suggests incorporating moderate exercise into your daily routine: "Remember, the heart is a muscle and, like other muscles, needs aerobic exercise. Walking is a very good kind of exercise for the cardiovascular system."

A family history of heart trouble, especially heart disease early in life, means further steps are wise, according to Fox, including periodic checkups with particular attention to such factors as cholesterol levels. "If they are abnormally high," he said, "you should pay special attention to diet and make a definite effort to cut down on dairy products and animal fats, as well as following any other measures the physician recommends. There is increasing evidence that a diet high in fish may be especially beneficial."

If there is a personal history of specific risk factors, the NYU specialists advise taking all the foregoing steps, plus following medical advice for keeping diabetes or high blood pressure under control; getting medical approval for any exercise program; having regular checkups; and consulting your physician promptly if symptoms such as chest pain related to physical effort occur.

Compile Key Financial Data Into Single Summary

CHANGING TIMES
The Kiplinger Magazine

Having your finances in order means more than just having enough money in the right accounts, plenty of insurance, sound investments and a good credit record. You also need a sense of how it all fits together — a clear picture of how your money is spread among various accounts, investments, insurance policies and loan agreements.

Whether you or your spouse handles most of the finances, both of you should be well aware of what you have, where you're keeping it, and where you've put the records. Compiling key data in a single summary lets you see where you stand and helps you decide what your goals will be for the future. You can think of this summary as a financial blueprint — a way to visualize how your bank accounts, stocks and bonds, and insurance policies interact as parts of your total portfolio.

Seeing your blueprint can help alert you that you need more life insurance, that too much of your savings is going into one plan, or that it's time to rid your portfolio of a sluggish stock.

And, a summary can be especially useful in an emergency. If you or your spouse dies suddenly or becomes disabled, or is away from home for an extended period, the other can depend on the financial summary to locate important records and keep the household running.

By updating your blueprint at least once a year, you can discover patterns that emerge over time. Changing Times suggests you should also update it any time your circumstances change substantially.

First, assemble all your financial records and documents: checkbooks and statements, savings certificates, mutual fund statements, loan agreements, deeds, titles, wills, insurance policies, tax records and employee pension and profit-sharing plans.

The more records you already have in well-organized files, the easier it will be to summarize them. If you keep important papers scattered around the house in various drawers, envelopes and boxes, now is the time to start a filing system. If any family member has records stored in a separate drawer, room or office, your financial blueprint should describe where they are kept.

Work with your spouse or partner to create your summary. You may even want to involve your older children to some degree, especially if they have a job, bank account, investments or other assets of their own.

You don't need a home computer to do the job well, but using one could make it easier. After making a computer printout, you can save the information on your disk for next year. Then you can update dollar amounts and make other changes without retyping.

Software designed specifically to help you manage your finances does much more than create a financial summary. Intended for regular use throughout the year, it helps you keep track of income and expenses by budget category, reconcile bank statements, store tax records and perform various sorts of calculations.

However you compile your blueprint, the more detailed you make it, the more valuable a tool it will be, not only for your use now but also later as a guide for your survivors.

Completing the summary will alert you to things that need to be taken care of: updating your will, changing insurance beneficiaries, increasing liability coverage or whatever. Before you file your blueprint away, write those things on a separate piece of paper and put it where it will prod you into action.

Dublin Is Past Journey

By MARCUS ELIASON
Associated Press Writer

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Before leaving Washington for her new job as U.S. ambassador to Ireland, Margaret Heckler remembered her late mother once asking her, "What have you done for Ireland today, Peggy?"

"I've finally got a reply to my mother," she said then, "and I'm calling to her across the grave: 'Mother, I'm going home to Ireland and I'm bringing America with me.'"

Margaret Heckler, the daughter of Irish parents, rose to Cabinet rank in the Reagan administration, but her 11 months as ambassador in Dublin have been a journey into the past.

She is discovering cousins and letting nuances of Irish speech creep into her American accent.

She was reluctant at first to take the job, offered in an aura of controversy. She felt she was being moved out as President Reagan's secretary for health and human services because of her liberal Republican views.

But after talking to Reagan, Mrs. Heckler said, she happily accepted.

To the Irish, it was the classic story of the poor Irish emigrants whose child made good in America and came back in style. Swarms of relatives showed up at Shannon Airport, transforming a formal diplomatic event into a warm, emotional homecoming.

Ireland, she said in an interview, does odd things to her identity.

In the United States she always felt profoundly Irish. Here she feels much more American. At home, she pronounced her maiden name "O'SHAH-nessy." Now she gives it the proper Irish treatment — "O'SHOCK-nessy."

"For the first month, as I drove through the streets of Dublin, I was continuously aware of my parents, that this is their country," she said. "I so wished they could have been with me, especially my father, because he would have been a very good adviser on this new situation. And he would have enjoyed it so much, and my mother as well. They're very much in my mind."

Her parents emigrated from the Limerick area to Flushing in the New York City borough of Queens. Margaret Marie O'Shaughnessy was born there in 1931.

When she was 9 the family returned to Ireland and she spent a year in the western Irish countryside of County Leitrim. Then the family went back to the United States.

She became a lawyer, married John Heckler, had three children, and in 1966 was elected to the House of Representatives from Massachusetts, holding her seat for 16 years. The Hecklers divorced in 1985 and their three children are grown. Mrs. Heckler lives alone in Dublin.

Aside from her ambassadorial duties, she has found time to discover her Irish relatives. They telephone her office or write, and usually receive a dinner invitation.

One night she was expecting Michael Noonan, an Irish Cabinet minister, for dinner. But the Noonan who turned up was not that Noonan. He was an opposition politician — and a cousin.

"We're a long-tailed clan," she said. "The O'Shaughnessys, the Sheehys, the McKeowns — they're large."

One of her contributions to Dublin's social whirl has been the Ballygowan spritzer — wine with sparkling Irish mineral water. "It serves my calorie-cutting needs as well as my alcohol-reduction needs."

Although an anti-Reagan streak runs through the Dublin press and intelligentsia, especially after the Libyan bombing raid, she finds the average Irishman instinctively sympathetic to things American.

"People here want to share Ireland with me, each in their own special way," Mrs. Heckler said. "There's always that special dimension of caring."

Not so the exclusive Portmarnock Golf Club. She is the first U.S. ambassador not to be invited to join the all-male preserve. Local feminists are urging her to protest, but she says they'll have to fight their own battles.

STEAM LEAKAGE

BARTLESVILLE, Okla. (AP) — For every gallon of gasoline burned in an automobile, about a gallon of water forms as steam.

Most of that steam goes out of the tailpipe. But some of it leaks into the crankcase, where it becomes an acidic condensate, says Phillips 66. Rust inhibitors in motor oil neutralize this acid and prevent corrosion throughout the engine.

Bandbox Had Many Uses

COUNTRY HOME
A Meredith Magazine

The early 1800's ushered in an age of magical journeys for the common American, says Country Home magazine.

Instead of traveling by carriage, people sped across the land on steam-powered trains. Craftsmen took their goods to market on canals, and tourists conquered the currents of mighty rivers from the decks of steamships. Americans were traveling a new road, and with them went the bandbox.

These best-selling cardboard coffers, sized to harbor trinkets, top hats, bonnets, or an entire change of clothes, were produced in huge numbers between 1820 and 1850. Similar storage boxes had been in use for centuries in Europe, but in the United States the restless populace carried the simple bandbox to new heights.

Cheaply and quickly made, and selling from 12 to 50 cents each, bulky, paper-covered bandboxes readily filled the emerging middle-class need for luggage to transport the niceties of life — flowers, jewelry, store-bought clothing and hats — that before had been the prerogative of the wealthy.

Perhaps the largest class of bandbox buyers were the young women who first toiled in New England's textile mills. These women were touched by the Industrial Revolution early on and earned the highest wage paid to women in the country. For the first time, they had their own money and the freedom to spend it as they wished.

The riverside mill towns overflowed with vendors who gave this new consumer group exactly what they wanted, from Paris fashions to wares as simple as bandboxes. One such enterprising seller was Hannah Davis of Jaffrey, N.H.

In 1818, when Hannah, then 34, found herself single and on her own, she decided to go into business making bandboxes. Her success was due as much to her marketing techniques as to the quality of her boxes. She drove her wares directly to her most promising customers, the mill women, and peddled boxes virtually on the factory doorsteps.

Many bandbox makers combined the enterprise with wallpaper sales. Wallpaper may have been the first bandbox covering.

While construction was important, it was probably the bandbox's bright and cheerful paper skin that seduced most buyers. Flowers and simple swags were the most common designs. Neoclassical motifs were common after the discovery of Pompeii in 1748, an event which kindled interest in ancient Italy and Greece, and influenced American art and architecture until the middle 19th century.

Popular, too, were depictions of the explosive growth in the new travel industry during the early 1800s. The 1820s and 1830s were years full of firsts as far as travel was concerned. The first passenger railroad was pulled by horses on wooden rails from Baltimore to Ohio. The first steam railway was fired up. The first modern hotel, the Trenton, opened in Boston. The Erie Canal was completed. And, the first steamship schedule was established between New York and Liverpool. All these happenings showed up on the bandbox.

Given the fragile elements of their construction, it is surprising any bandboxes at all have survived. Although it is certain that thousands of these containers succumbed to the ravages of the road, hundreds more were stacked in attics, kept dry and left undisturbed for more than a century.

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP) — For years, moviegoers have watched film credits roll by and wondered what many of the people really do on the set of a Hollywood film.

Among the more notable but confusing job titles are gaffer, grip and best boy.

A gaffer is the chief electrician on the film unit and is responsible for the lighting of the set. Grips act as stagehands, the term used on Broadway.

Woman Seeks Armistice

Dear Abby
By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I'll bet this is the weirdest letter you've ever received. My sister's daughter is to be married next month, and because my sister's husband had a falling out with a couple of our relatives, no one from our side of the family is invited to the wedding! Consequently, in retaliation, my sister said no one from his side of the family is to be invited either!

So there will be just the groom's family and my sister and her husband at the wedding, with the rest of the guests who will be from the groom's side. I am sure his family must think we are a bunch of loonies.

Our son is getting married in the spring, and my husband said that my sister and her spouse will be invited over his dead body. I don't want to be as small and ridiculous as they have been, so I insist that we send them an invitation to our son's wedding.

Some advice, please. — HAD IT IN HADLEY

DEAR HAD IT: I prefer your attitude to your husband's and your sister's. Punishing an entire group for the actions of a few is unfair and childish.

I would urge families to put aside their grievances at a time when families should gather to celebrate a joyous occasion. Your husband should save his "dead body" pronouncement for funerals.

DEAR ABBY: I recently became friendly with a very dear and wonderful lady I'll call Betty. Betty told me that she had given her twin boys — who were 3 years old at the time — to a minister and his wife who put them up for adoption. Betty now wants more than anything in the world to see her twin boys just once in her lifetime. (The boys are now 29.)

The minister has been dead for a number of years, and his wife, who lives in the Philadelphia area, is still in touch with Betty, but she refuses to give her any information about the twins' whereabouts.

I seem to recall that you wrote about an agency that puts adopted children and their natural parents in touch with each other. If there is any cost involved, please advise and I will forward the fee immediately. — A FRIEND IN PHILADELPHIA

DEAR FRIEND: Because I am opposed to natural parents intruding on the lives of children they have placed for adoption, as well as adopted children "finding" their natural parents, unless all parties are agreeable to a reunion, I recommend the International Soundex Reunion Registry (ISRR), P.O. Box 2312, Carson City, Nev. 89702. Please enclose a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope when writing.

Persons who have been adopted and want to find their natural parents may register with the above agency. And a birth parent who has placed a child for adoption and wishes to locate that child may also register. If a match is made, a reunion takes place. There is no registration fee, but because this is a not-for-profit agency, contributions are welcome. I have dealt with ISRR for many years and have found the people there to be efficient, honest and in total agreement with my feeling that neither the natural parents nor the child shall be "found" unless they want to be.

DEAR ABBY: I, too, had never heard of the word "chthonic" until I read it in your column. I'm sure many others, like myself, immediately began thinking of ways they might use the word. In fact, its appearance in your column probably created a chthonic boom. — PHIL FAGERHOLM, SEATTLE

Clowning Nuns Are Goodwill Ambassadors

EDITOR'S NOTE — "Bubbles" and "Mumsie" aren't traditional names for nuns, but then, the Benedictine Sisters of Erie, Pa., aren't your typical nuns. They're goodwill ambassadors in clown suits, true believers who celebrate the gospel through gentle humor and mercifully tender tricks.

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — At Mount St. Benedict, an unobtrusive priory where nuns pray and preach for peace and justice, the expression of faith often takes a colorful, circus-like twist.

The Benedictine Sisters of Erie are "fools" for Christ, goodwill ambassadors in clown outfits who spread and celebrate the gospel through gentle humor and mercifully tender tricks.

"The traditional Christian message seems to get boxed in. What we attempt to do is to break down some of those barriers," says Sister Peggy Pilewski, 39, otherwise known as "Bubbles."

"There is an underside and you can laugh in the context of prayer," she says, showing off her yellow clown outfit and antennae. "It's OK. It's part of the human experience as well as being very stern and very solemn-faced."

"It's important not to take life too seriously," agrees Beth Adams, 29, a postulant whose trademark is garish suspenders and a yellow back scratcher.

For a religious order whose protests for peace, justice and women's rights have stretched from the steps of Erie's courthouse to the White House, donning clown costumes and painting faces for special services, retreats and benevolent outings is a particularly welcome change of pace.

"It's real easy ...to go from one vigil to the next," says Sister Anne McCarthy, 30. "You can easily get stck in a position where you're saying 'no' all the time. 'No, we shouldn't bomb Libya. No, we shouldn't fund the contras. No, we shouldn't be involved in Central America. No, we shouldn't be building this weapon system.'

"To see the same group have clowning as part of prayer and part of worship integrates it. It all ties together, but I don't think people always put those together and I think it's good for them to see."

In fact, their liberal views and frequent demonstrations have made their venture into clowning that much easier, at least as far as public acceptance is concerned.

Only a handful of Mount St. Benedict's 150 nuns wear habits. The rest wear everyday clothes to their jobs on and off the 60-acre priory, located seven miles from Erie along Lake Erie's shore.

"Our community in general receives a lot of criticism for various things that we do. This (clowning) is the least of them," says Sister Carolyn Gorny-Kopkowski, 46, or "Mumsie." Her comment prompts a burst of laughter from her clowning cohorts.

"I've had different people say, 'Boy, you're the happiest bunch of nuns I've ever seen,'" a grinning Sister Paula Burke, 50, adds, generating still more laughter.

Mount St. Benedict's efforts are part of "a new resurgence" in clowning, mime, storytelling and other art forms in all religions, says Jorja Davis, executive director of Phoenix Power and Light Inc., a non-profit group which holds annual clown ministry conferences.

Church clowns are not just clowning around. The contemporary clown ministry movement dates back to the 1960s, although the concept has been around since the time of Christ, regarded by practitioners as the ultimate "fool" for sacrificing his life for others.

In 1985, the National Conference of Catholic Bishops' Committee on the Liturgy denounced clown ministry as inappropriate in liturgical worship.

The panel's statement appears to have had little effect on those who consider clowning a legitimate alternative to presenting religion more traditionally.

"The fad of it may have reached a peak, but the depth of it has not," says Margie Brown, who teaches clown ministry at the Pacific School of Religion in Berkeley, Calif.

Mount St. Benedict's nuns were hoping to enrich their spiritual lives when they formed their clown troupe nearly four years ago after attending a national clown ministry conference.

Their decision to add clowning to their endeavors didn't come easily, even though they were no strangers to the stage and had long since shrugged off obscurity.

Members of the priory appeared in full habit on Ed Sullivan's television show in 1966 as Sisters '66, a singing group. They shared the program with the Rolling Stones.

The nuns were back in the national spotlight in 1980 when, faced with soaring fuel costs, they struck natural gas in their back yard.

Despite their unconventional past, some of the more conservative nuns in the 130-year-old Erie Benedictine order had "severe reservations" about their colleagues performing as clowns, according to Sister Pilewski.

"Even as a (smaller) group, we questioned whether or not clowns belonged in chapel, whether clowns belonged in the setting of a liturgical worship," she says. "We worked through those questions as a group. 'When should we clown? When should we mime? Is there a difference?'"

After considerable debate, the priory agreed to give clowning a try. About eight nuns immediately volunteered, adopting the name "Fools on the Hill," borrowed from a song by John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

The clowns made their debut at a birthday party for Sister Joan Chittister, Mount St. Benedict's prioress, on April 26, 1983. Over the next year, they gathered regularly to practice miming as well as dramatizing parables based on Bible stories.

Before long, the clowns were participating more and more at daily prayer services as well as at weekend retreats, enacting rather than reading the Scripture. Their performances soon were expected, even anticipated.

Now, for example, the nuns "all run to chapel to get a good seat" when they learn the clowns will be performing, according to Sister Burke.

The clowns occasionally escort the other nuns into the chapel in brightly colored costumes, skipping down the aisle to circus music, blowing bubbles through wands and handing out balloons and flowers. But the mood turns calm and meditative once prayer begins.

Because of the nuns' expanding repertoire, requests have begun streaming in from the outside. So far, the clowns, who now number 19, have held public workshops and have traveled throughout western Pennsylvania to homes for the elderly, state environmental conferences and relief centers for tornado victims. They charge no admission, but accept donations.

One of their latest efforts, a vesper service in mid-October at a home for senior citizens 60 miles south in Hermitage, brought smiles and occasional tears to a sea of tired faces.

In addition to handing out cards entitling the bearers to free hugs, and twisting balloons into animals and apples, the nuns presented their own, lighthearted interpretation of the Creation.

In the skit, God gives Adam first a cow and then a duck to keep him company, but the animals can't play catch with him. So God creates Eve, a union which the charading nuns conclude is "very good."

For Noreen Benedict, 34, a postulant, it was a first attempt at clowning — serious clowning, that is.

"I used to clown to get myself out of trouble," she says, giggling and twirling her yellow visor following the service. "Now, it comes from a different angle. It's totally from the heart. It's putting on a mask but taking off another mask."

"Deep down inside, there's a clown in everybody," says Sister Carolyn Lange, 37, who calls herself "Ling-Lang." "You're touching something deep down inside of them that may somehow want to come out and a person doesn't know how to get that out. You're giving that person permission to go along with you and what you're doing."

Almost always, it is a group effort.

"We see ourselves as working together," Sister Pilewski says.

Even the personal satisfactions are shared.

"It's a very affirming experience no matter what we do or where we go," Sister Jennifer Ritter, 23, says. "It seems like we give it our best and people are appreciative."

The group probably would be less successful with a more traditional ministering approach, according to Sister Chittister.

"These sisters of ours are not doing slapstick. They're doing genuine human exploration of feelings," she says. "It's designed to strip away all pretense and past explanations. You can't achieve this kind of simplicity any other way."

Despite the growing demand for their services, the clowns have had to turn down invitations because of their already full schedules teaching at Erie's St. Benedict Academy, running a food bank and soup kitchen, and working at the priory.

They've also taken care not to let their appearances interfere with their struggle for peace and justice, even though they view the two efforts as being closely intertwined.

"I see it (clowning) as a sign of hope in a sometimes hopeless world," Sister Pilewski says. "Somehow we turn around and laugh and say, 'Hey, life is worth living. Our life is worth living, and so is yours, and I want to share this bit of happiness and hope with you.' That's the Christian message I feel."

Fashions For The Resort Season

LAVISH LOOKS — Cocktail and party dresses carry the festive fashions of the holiday season into resort wear highlighted by eye-catching, feminine details and trims. At left, silver beaded and spangled epaulets sparkle in mock military splendor on the shoulders of this frosted-blue pleated cocktail dress. At right, the sheer white illusion sleeves of this ice-blue fibranne dress are embroidered with ice-blue cutwork bows. (Both dresses designed by Morton Myles.)

VOTER TURNOUT

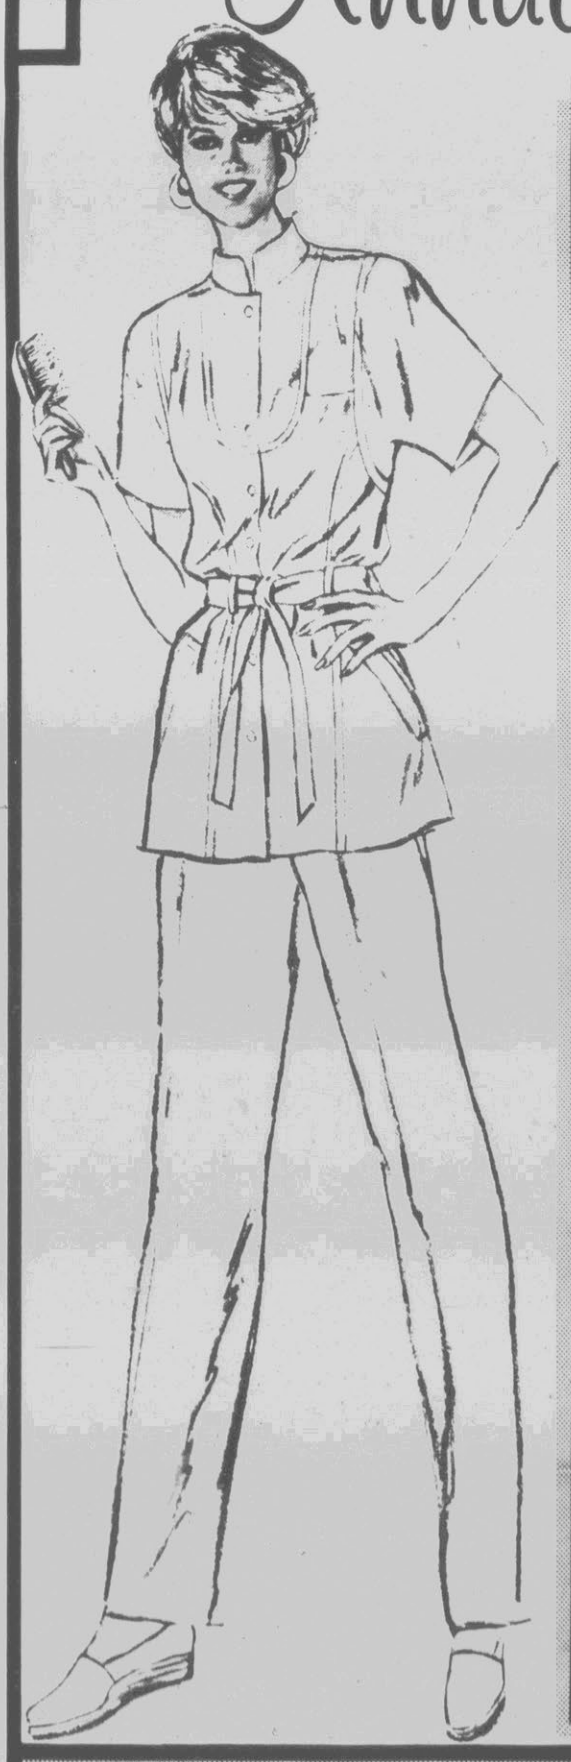

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Why don't more Americans vote?

Because this country's voter registration laws are needlessly cumbersome, according to Bingham Powell, a professor of political science at the University of Rochester.

Americans are more politically aware and active than their European counterparts, Powell says, but the U.S. voter registration system thwarts that interest. Other countries make more effort to register voters and in some countries registration is automatic, he says.

Acorns Reclaim Mississippi Land

By KATHY EYRE
Associated Press Writer

JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Farmers have whittled away at the hardwood forests of the Mississippi Delta for decades, but a new program is using some tiny acorns to fill in gashes and create new hunting areas.

The Malmaison Wildlife Management Area, located about 10 miles northeast of Greenwood, was purchased by the state in 1970. The 10,000 acres were pockmarked with about 1,000 acres of fields where trees were cleared long ago and row crops were planted, said Larry Castle, a biologist for the state Wildlife Conservation Department.

"We're in the business of providing public hunting for the residents of the state and we can provide more public hunting in a wooded environment than we can in an agricultural field," Castle said in an interview.

About 700 acres have been replanted so far, and Castle said the remaining 300 acres should be seeded with acorns within two years.

He said it will be about 20 years before the acorns grow into mature mast-producing trees that provide food for deer, squirrels, racoons, water fowl, turkeys and a host of songbirds.

"But there are benefits from the first because we're turning agricultural land into wildlife land," Castle said. "We don't have a barren field anymore and even though we have maybe only low-growing shrubs and grass, there are deer and birds that can live there."

The first year of the program, Forest Service youth volunteers planted seedlings on about 200 acres. Since then, Castle said officials have modified an old peanut planter to sow acorns that wildlife employees have gathered by hand statewide. He said Malmaison is probably the only place in the country where acorns are planted mechanically.

"The reason we're not planting seedlings anymore is because when you plant seedlings you have to come back and disc between them twice a year," he said. "This is very time consuming and costly as well as very hard to do.

"There's a tremendous shock when you uproot a seedling from a nursery and replant it out in the woods. For about a year, it doesn't grow at all; it's just trying to survive. But with an acorn, you just put it in the ground and it sprouts already acclimated to that environment, and it grows fast."

He said about 20 acres can be sown in an eight-hour day with the use of the modified peanut planter, and about 1,000 to 2,500 acorns are sown on each acre.

Several varieties of oak — water, willow, cherry bark, nuttall and swamp chestnut — as well as pecan trees are being planted on the land, Castle said.

Castle said the pace of planting on the 1,000 acres is dependent on acorn production each year, which varies with the weather.

He said the department spent about 1,100 man hours this year picking up acorns because there were so many on the ground across the state. He said the average employee makes about $10 per hour including the cost of fringe benefits, so the state paid about $11,000 to have them gather the acorns this year.

There have been no other costs associated with the acorn-planting program other than the $4,000 to purchase the old peanut planter, Castle said.

Malmaison, which includes several natural lakes, is open year-round to the public for bird watching, camping, picnicking and hiking. Hunters aren't the only ones who will benefit from the reforestation project, Castle said.

"All wildlife will benefit, those that are hunted and those species that are not hunted," he said.

He said about 200 to 250 deer per year are harvested from the 10,000-acre area. The number should increase to about 275 when the trees are grown, he said.

"You're increasing the amount of wildlife land by 10 percent, so the number of wildlife should increase about 10 percent" barring other factors like drought or disease, he said.

Chickadee, Friendliest Of Birds

By TOM FEGELY
The Allentown Morning Call

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Without a doubt, the black-capped chickadee is the friendliest and least apprehensive of songbirds.

Nuthatches, woodpeckers and certain other species also allow close approach, but it's the little chickadee that will feed from your hand or even flutter at your face to take a sunflower seed held in your clenched teeth.

Of course, it takes a bit of patience to teach the birds that you're a human bird-feeding station and there may be a couple of false runs for the chickadees during the first hand-feeding experiences.

But as many birders know, backyard chickadees can be easily trained to take food from a cupped hand — or even sit on a shoulder or hat if that's where the seeds are placed.

Many people believe that the black-capped chickadee is purely a winter bird, that is, it comes down from the north along with grosbeaks and purple finches to spend the winter here. That's partially true, as many of the black-derbied creatures are migrants from north of the border.

Others are full-time residents, however. They may wander a bit when the snow falls but some of the same chickadees that show up at your feeder every day are the individuals that may have been hatched and raised only an owl-hoot away.

Cavities in trees are vital to the success of local chickadee flocks. Not only do they nest in these wooden "caves," they also roost there during frigid winter nights.

Woodcutters would be wise to allow "wolf trees" and other trees with obvious cavities to remain standing. There's plenty of firewood to be had and the insatiable fellow with the chainsaw should keep wildlife in mind when taking dead wood from the forest and woodlot.

Naturally, because of the secluded environs they call home, many chickadees never set foot in a feeder. These birds rely heavily on insects and their eggs. Most of the insects are sought in their hiding places beneath bark, especially at this time of the year. Here, too, they'll also find eggs and varied overwintering larvae that provide them with protein.

Chickadees are so small that larger predators may bypass them when hunting for a meal. Of course, a sharp-shinned hawk or a kestrel raiding a feeder or swooping down on a flock of birds along a wood's edge won't be concerned with identifying their prey before striking. Some chickadees are, naturally, food for carnivores but they certainly don't form the bulk of any animal's diet.

The diminutive size of the chickadee may be a blessing when it comes to being unnoticed or undesirable as a meal. But it also means that there's not much room for storage of fat and the birds must feed as much as possible during the daylight hours to maintain their systems during the night. Their metabolic rates are quite high and they seldom live more than two or three years.

In the South, the Carolina chickadee replaces the black-cap and this species is also seen in the Lehigh Valley region sporadically. They're never here in great numbers and unless you're an accomplished birder, chances are you'll pass one off as "just another chickadee" should you cross paths with one.

The Carolina version of the clan is noticeably smaller than the black-cap and shows less white in the edgings of the wing feathers. Side by side with a black-cap, you might notice a sharper separation between the black bib and white breast in the Carolina version.

Whether it comes to raid the sunflower seeds, then carts them off to hack away the outer shell to get to the germ, or simply swings and eats from the suspended suet bag, the chickadee is considered by many to be the most welcome of backyard birds.

And the Lehigh Valley and Poconos is blessed with thousands of them.

The Republic of Maldives, an archipelago in the Indian Ocean southwest of India, is composed of 19 atolls ad more than 1,000 islands. Because of its geographical location, one of its major industries is fishing. To publicize its marine life, the Maldives has issued eight new stamps of multi-colored design featuring a variety of species found in these island waters.

The Pleasure Of Language

TAKE MY WORD FOR IT. By William Safire. Times Books. 357 Pages. $22.50.

One word leads to another with William Safire, whose weekly newspaper column leads every few years to another delightful anthology on the use and misuses of the English language.

"Take My Word for It" is the fourth such collection of his witty and scholarly essays on such matters as pronunciation, punctuation and proper usage. But his readers don't always take his word for it.

More than half the book is devoted to reader reaction, pro and con, and therein lies Safire's appeal.

The letter writers include college professors, scientists, the Marine Corps commandant, a movie star and a former president of the United States.

Like all good lexicographers, he keeps an eye on buzzwords and short-lived vogue words, the ones that "appear like comets in the evening sky of language." Today's vogue words are tomorrow's cliches.

The time of their streakage helps historians define an era or locate a moment, says Safire, noting for example:

"Anyone who uses 'compatible' or 'disharmonious,' or tosses about 'zero-based,' betrays himself as a product of the Carter years."

More recent samples of trendy lingo cited in this book include "infrastructure," "bottom line," and "collegiality."

Safire isn't the first to write about language, and he won't be the last. But he's certainly one of the best.

CAPTURE'S CLEANING SECRETS

The Milliken Place Capture* carpet cleaning system is superior to wet cleaning methods and considered the industry's standard.

Capture* is a technologically advanced dry powder cleaning product. Consisting of soft, porous, absorbent particles, it has an enormous surface-to-volume ratio -- much like that of a sponge.

These Capture* particles are impregnated with a waterbased cleaning fluid, and although they feel moist, they do not wet the surface they're cleaning.

As the Capture* powder is applied, its particles carry the cleaning agent right to the soiled carpet fibers. The Capture* particle draws the soil away from the fibers, leaving them clean. Capture* is designed to get in between the carpet fibers, right into the tight yarn bundles.

Once the soil is trapped in the pores of Capture,* it is easily removed by vacuuming. To ensure that the particles are completely removed from the carpet, Capture* has been engineered for easy pick-up with a normal vacuum cleaner.

Throughout its cleaning process, Capture* works with Milliguard* to protect your Milliken Carpet leaving no masking residues like the wet cleaning processes. Cleaning with Capture* leaves your carpet bright, odor free and fresh.

Twilight Time For The Tuaregs, Blue Men Of The Desert

EDITOR'S NOTE — Bands of nomadic Tuaregs, the fabled "Blue Men of the Desert," for centuries ruled the arid expanse just below the Sahara, roaming free on camels and tending their herds. Now they are settling down in the cities or tilling the soil, many begging to survive.

By MORT ROSENBLUM
AP Special Correspondent

NIAMEY, Niger (AP) — The last of Africa's fiercely independent nomadic herdsmen, the Tuaregs who once thrived among sub-Saharan dunes and moonscape, are losing their freedom to drought.

Tens of thousands of Tuaregs still float over trackless sand, perched on camels with their household goods rolled up behind them. Caravans tread north to exchange salt for gold and matted dates.

But the long drought and new government policies have taken their toll. Many of the nomads' cattle and goats died of thirst or starved. Officials are not anxious to restock their fragile rangeland.

Even when rains are good, many Tuaregs now remain rooted to rag-and-cardboard tents in the cities. Poverty, despondency and discrimination have broken their nomadic spirit.

In Mali and Niger, Tuaregs cling to bits of exhausted farmland, given them by authorities who prefer that they stay in one place.

"We used to say the only time a Tuareg bends down is to pick up his shoes," remarked a Malian journalist, from a tribe once enslaved by Tuaregs. With undisguised glee, he adds, "Now they are bending over to cultivate."

"Their old ways of life are finished," says John Newby, an Englishman who manages a reserve for wildlife — and Tuaregs — in the northern Air Mountains. "They have completely lost their identity."

Tuaregs interviewed in the cities and deserts generally agree, but many say they will return to their nomadic life if the rains are favorable.

"Maybe it's premature to say they are losing the cultural experience and knowledge and won't go back to what they were doing," Newby acknowledges. "But there is certainly change in that direction."

Youssouf Ag Mohammed, for one, is not going back. Until 1973, he owned 20 camels, 15 cows and 20 goats, the equivalent of a fat bank account. His home was hundreds of square miles of Malian desert.

In 1974, his animals dead and his family dying, Youssouf and a ragged band of survivors straggled into Niamey. Now, with 11 children in a shelter made from U.S. food aid cartons, he is still jobless.

His oldest son, Mohammed, 18, finished school three years ago, but that has been of no practical use. Some days he puts on his only shirt and looks for a job.

"There is no work, nothing," Mohammed says with a shrug. "Sometimes friends give us millet. Sometimes someone gives money. Every month and a half, Catholic Relief gives a little millet, a half-tin of biscuits, some sugar. Some days we eat, and some days we don't."

Asked if the family would ever go back to the desert, Mohammed shrugged again. "Maybe if we can buy some animals. But how?"

In Niger and Mali, authorities favor policies to "sedentarize" the Tuaregs, encouraging them to settle down.

Ibrahim Sylla, chief aide to the governor of Mali's Mopti Region, says, "We tend toward sedentarization. It has a lot of advantages. You know where people are and what they are doing."

In Niger, there is the specific worry that Libyan leader Col. Moammar Gadhafi might be inciting Tuaregs in southern Libya to stir up trouble in Niger's remote northern region, just over the border.

By some estimates, more than half of all Tuaregs now live in cities, mainly Niamey and Bamako, the capital of Mali. Some are in Paris, studying philosophy or driving taxis.

No one knows how many Tuaregs there are, and the nomads prefer it that way.

In the desert, Tuaregs shield themselves behind elaborate dignity. Men hide their faces behind a flap of turban. Women, when not working, stay in the tent.

Brewing and serving tea, always three cups in a row, can take an afternoon. Men can spend whole evenings by the fire discussing the finer points of hobbling a camel.

Since the Middle Ages, Tuareg bands ruled the hinterlands beyond Timbuktu and Agadez, appearing sometimes to plunder treasure and slaves, but mostly seen only as just mysterious shapes in the distance.

They were known as the "Blue Men of the Desert" because their skin was often stained by the indigo dye they favor for turbans and robes.

In 1893, Tuareg warriors swept over the dunes near Timbuktu and massacred 20 Frenchmen from a naval boat that had steamed up the Niger to take the city. Then the Tuaregs wiped out a relief column.

Soon afterward, France secured what is now Mali and Niger. French troops cut deeply into the Tuaregs' marauding, but let the nomads move their herds freely across the vast Sahel.

Tuaregs fought a brief war of secession after Mali gained independence from France, fearing curbs on their way of life.

New governments passed laws to control nomads but could not enforce them. Tuaregs floated at will over unmarked borders. During hard times, they moved farther south or north.

But drought made the distances too far to travel. Thousands of Tuaregs who settled in southern Algeria were expelled, trucked south without even their meager packs of teapots, mats and camel tack.

Even when it seemed certain herds would die, few herders sold off cattle, their mark of status and wealth.

A first wave left the desert with Youssouf Ag Mohammed in 1974. Some went back and tried again during the following years of intermittent drought. But the great drought of 1984 was the coup de grace.

Some African specialists regard the change as healthy for Africa's environment. Fewer cattle and goats on the land will help vegetation regenerate.

Many argue the contrary. Nomads are attuned to the land and, if left alone, do not allow over-grazing.

Djibril Diallo, a senior United Nations information officer and the Senegalese son of a Fulani nomad, sees the change among Tuaregs as part of a shift affecting all tribes that roamed freely.

"The whole nomadic way of life is under threat," he says. "A lot of governments are putting nomads together, trying to make them sedentary. I see it when I go home. It is really sad."

Many Africans, and more outsiders, worry that one of the world's last self-sufficient, hard-suffering societies is disappearing. Others are less concerned.

"Sure it is a loss, the romantic notion of the nomad is going," says a U.S. official in Bamako, an Africa veteran. "But what are you going to do, weep for the boys?"

The Tuaregs themselves have mixed feelings, but their dominant mood is clear.

Near Segou, in Mali, a ragged clan has built adobe hovels among their goatskin tents. They are learning how to grow beans. Master herdsmen lug cans of water from the Bani River for their tomatoes.

A woman named Fatima, who was 40 but looked 65, sat listlessly on a grass mat. "In the old days, we were much happier, but..." she says, her voice trailing off.

Farther north at Tin Telloutt, near Timbuktu, Tuaregs have settled down to farm. A 24-year-old schoolteacher named Mohammed Ag Adby, hard-boned and muscular, boasted of his cauliflowers.

"We did not move around for the sheer pleasure of moving," he says. "Now that is impossible, and our animals are dead. So we are planting."

But Abby Ag Hamani, the village chief, says the Tuaregs of Tin Telloutt have come to terms with reality.

"The old life is a memory," he says. "I would like to live it still: the peace, the solitude. But that is gone."

Shanghai Hopes To Restore Its Top China City Status

By JIM ABRAMS
Associated Press Writer

SHANGHAI, China (AP) — Workmen have scrubbed the great granite buildings along Shanghai's famed waterfront Bund, and the city is serving notice that just as decades of grime washed into the Huangpu River, it is determined to restore its old glory.

The teeming city of 12 million people, China's largest, was a major industrial and commercial center of Asia before World War II but fell to neglect after the Communist takeover of China in 1949.

Now it envisions itself as rivaling Singapore and Hong Kong as a magnet for foreign trade and investment by the turn of the century.

"We want to regain our status as the economic center of the Far East and the Pacific," said Wang Zukang, deputy director of the city Planning Commission. "We've got to move quickly."

Shanghai now has awesome problems, including a woeful lack of adequate housing. Its ports are backed up, its public transportation system is near collapse, its telephones don't work and it has serious pollution.

Wang said the city is shifting from its dependence on textiles to developing heavy industry — iron and steel, petrochemical, machinery, electronics, aircraft and automobiles.

The Baoshan steel plant in the suburbs aims to produce 15 million tons annually by the year 2000.

Volkswagen plans to increase production from 30,000 to 300,000 vehicles at its joint-venture auto plant here.

The U.S. McDonnell Douglas aircraft company is making passenger planes with a Shanghai partner.

This past fall, Shanghai opened a tiny stock market, Communist China's first.

The new year will see the reopening of the Bank of Communications, a pre-revolution bastion of finance that will be China's first bank not wholly owned by the state and offering a multiple range of services.

Another Shanghai innovation is the plan to issue bonds worth $139 million to build a giant ethylene plant, the first time a key national project has been so financed.

Wang said, however, that "Shanghai can't match the status of an international city" until it solves its staggering infrastructure problems.

Only about 300 of Shanghai's 1,500 roads can handle motorized vehicles, and the rush-hour battle between the city's 5,500 buses and 4 million bicyles is usually fought to a standstill.

Chen Zhengxing, deputy director of the Construction Commission, said Shanghai has only 20 square feet of road for every citizen, and 10 percent of those roads are in disarray because of projects to install gas and water pipes.

Shanghai is a museum piece of architecture from its days as a foreign concession city filled with European, Japanese and American traders, but many of the old Tudor-style buildings are dilapidated and packed with three or four families. The wait for new housing can be as long as 10 years.

The city is rushing to solve some of the problems by rebuilding the airport and the central train station, limiting truck traffic in the city, and digging a 9.2-mile subway it hopes to complete by 1992.

A tunnel will soon connect the riverfront Bund with the east bank of the Huangpu and a second bridge is planned. The city's Suzhou Creek, described as one of the world's most polluted bodies of water, is being cleaned up and a water purification system installed.

A Bell telephone system will be in place within two years and hotel space is to triple to 15,000 rooms by 1990. Three industrial parks for high-tech and foreign-invested plants are being developed and a nuclear power plant is being considered to ease a serious power shortage.

Shanghai also plans to relocate up to 1 million people in new satellite towns by the turn of the century, requiring major investment in housing and services. By 1990 one-third of the city's economy will be devoted to service and other tertiary industries.

Wang estimated it will cost the equivalent of $2.7 billion for the main transport and water projects alone.

Chen Zehao, senior researcher for the People's Bank of China, said the city in the past seven years has borrowed $1 billion overseas, and is looking for more.

The water purification system, for example, is being financed with $140 million from the World Bank, and the city this year floated a $156 million bond issue in Tokyo.

Most important, the central government in Peking, after years of milking its industrial moneymaker, is now paying Shanghai back.

With with one-hundredth of the nation's population, Shanghai now accounts for one-tenth of its industrial output, one-sixth of its exports, one-seventh of its revenues and one-third of its cargo.

But before 1984, all but 13 percent of revenues and 12 percent of export earnings were taken by Peking. There was also strong pressure to keep up production rates, leaving no time or money to modernize a 100-year-old industrial base with machinery often pre-dating the 1949 Communist takeover.

Since 1949 the city has paid more than 400 billion yuan ($108 billion) to the state in profits and taxes.

Shanghai also had been saddled by its capitalist past, its role as headquarters to the leftist "Gang of Four" during the Cultural Revolution of 1966-76 and by a civic pride that has long caused friction with Peking.

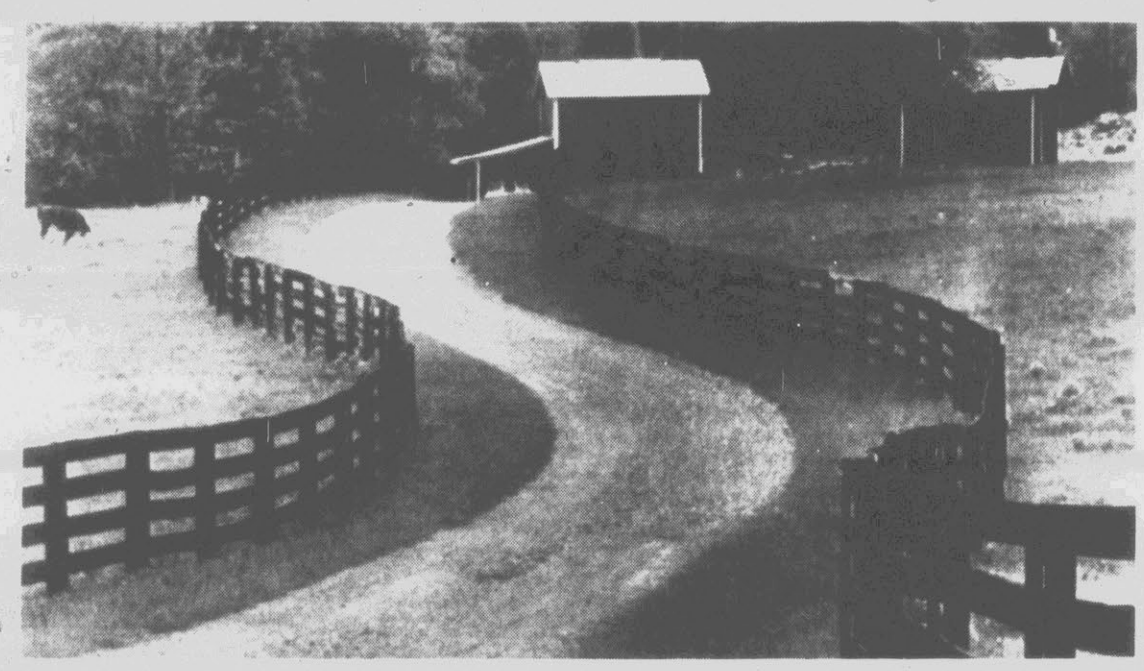

By the 1980s, exports were falling and Shanghai's outmoded state-run factories were being outproduced by new collective and private enterprises in neighboring provinces like Jiangsu and Zhejiang.

"The central government finally realized that it can't do anything without the economic development of Shanghai," Wang said.

In 1984 the central government ruled that Shanghai could keep 23.5 percent of revenues and one-fourth of export earnings, which it splits with the exporter. With exports worth $3.6 billion this year, that means $450 million for the city to reinvest.

Hu Yaobang, the Chinese Communist Party chief recently toured Shanghai and urged its people to "be bold" in using these incentives.

"The party and the people have great expectations for Shanghai," he said.

AMERICA'S BARRIER REEF

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Not many Americans have a chance to see the wildlife of Australia's Great Barrier Reef in person.

However, a new attraction at the San Antonio Zoo now makes it easier to do so.

Visitors to the zoo can board a boat and travel a canal which features a replica of the barrier reef. In the five aquariums of the canal, which contains more than 85,000 gallons of artificial sea water, passengers will come across five-foot-long lemon sharks, sea anemones, angelfish, triggerfish and moray eels.

Such exotic animals as wallabies, ibises and galahs live in the simulated Australian habitat along the canal.

ODILON REDON

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The Minneapolis Institute of Arts is showing a selection of works by French artist Odilon Redon through Feb. 15.

The museum says, "The diverse selection of Redon pastels, oil paintings, watercolors, charcoal drawings, lithographs and woodcuts ... reveal the immense range and talent of this important 19th century Symbolist artist."

The works were drawn from the collection of New York architect and real estate developer, Ian Woodner, a native of Minneapolis.

Affluent Peasants Struggle To Return To Old Ways Of Life

EDITOR'S NOTE — In the war against drug abuse, small battles are being fought in distant corners of the world. Here is a report on one.

By TOM WELLS
Associated Press Writer

EL MORRO, Colombia (AP) — Two years ago, peasants here were earning so much money that they drank French champagne and drove new cars. The galloping beat of guitar music echoed from all-night parties. Traditional crops of bananas and coffee were left to rot in the fields.

Coca was king on the farmland around El Morro. The leaf and the cocaine base it makes were producing a steady flow of cash — up to $50,000 a year for some peasants.

But times have changed. The government has cracked down on coca growing in this area of southern Colombia, and U.N. workers are trying to win peasants back to customary crops. They have less money, but some farmers seem satisfied to return to older, poorer ways.

"This was a peaceful place until the coca came," said one, Francisco Ruano, who swore off the coca business when he found his two young sons with cocaine-base cigarettes.

The coca shrub has grown for thousands of years in these misty Andes Mountain valleys, where the Indians chew the leaves as a stimulant to lighten the load in their difficult lives.

In the late 1970s and early 1980s, increasing U.S. demand for cocaine reached into southern Colombia, where farmers realized that coca plants, which take only eight months to mature and can be picked three or four times a year, promised richer harvests than bananas.

Colombia is the primary source of cocaine smuggled into the United States. Although most of the base is brought into this country from the coca-growing areas of Peru and Bolivia, at least 37,000 acres were in coca cultivation in Colombia by 1984, the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration estimates.

The first step in the cocaine-conversion process takes place in the growing area, where the picked leaves are mixed with gasoline and other chemicals, in a relatively simple process, to produce base. The base is then shipped to Colombian cities, where it is refined to cocaine.

The coca bonanza was a boost to this impoverished area 225 miles southwest of Bogota, the Colombian capital.

The average annual family income here is $365, and in some villages as many as 10 percent of the babies die in their first year, Hans Hugo, a field adviser with the United Nations' anti-coca program, told a reporter.

But two years ago, as U.S. pressure mounted on the Colombian government to eliminate the cocaine business, anti-narcotics police swept through the El Morro area and cut down coca plants by the thousands. The police told the peasants that if they went back to growing coca they would go to jail.

Some peasants kept at it, the police returned and six farmers from the El Morro region are serving time in prison.

Some like Ruano abandoned the easy life because they decided it was a rotten life.

Ruano's wife, Ana, recalled, "A lot of men got drunk all the time and moved into town with another woman. Wives and children were left to get along on their own. The men, they just went crazy with greed and all that money."

People also became addicted to smoking cigare tes filled with cocaine base, called "basuco," Mrs. Ruano said. Even their two boys, aged 3 and 4, learned about basuco cigarettes.

"One day I found them out in back of the house. They were sitting there as calm as can be making a couple of basuco cigarettes," Ruano said.

"I told my wife that I didn't care if we had to eat panela (brown sugar blocks) and drink water from then on and have nothing else, but we weren't going to grow any more coca."

Ruano said he squandered his coca money. He and his family still live in their cramped little house. And the peasant who once owned three automobiles now walks 40 minutes to El Morro village and his job in the U.N. rehabilitation program.

The U.N. officials have not estimated how many farmers relied on coca income in the 1,200-square-mile region covered by their year-old program. But the number must have run into the many hundreds.

Coca leaves are still available in small quantities in the main plaza in Bolivar, a farming town of 5,000 people a half-hour's drive on a dirt road from El Morro. But those leaves are sold for chewing, a technically illegal but tolerated business in Colombia. The big-money cocaine business appears to be drying up.

The U.N. Fund for Drug Abuse Control and the Colombian government have teamed up in the effort to persuade the El Morro peasants not to go back to growing coca, by making farming more profitable and life healthier.

In 15 projects, water pipes are being laid for irrigation and drinking water, roads are being built to facilitate shipment to market, and farmers are being taught to grow such garden vegetables as carrots, cabbage and green beans, said Hugo, a West German.

At the area school, children who once were taught little more than reading, writing and arithmetic are being taught to care for pigs and chickens and to raise vegetable gardens.

The U.N. agency has thus far spent $1.3 million on the four-year program and an additional $1.5 million has been approved, Hugo said.

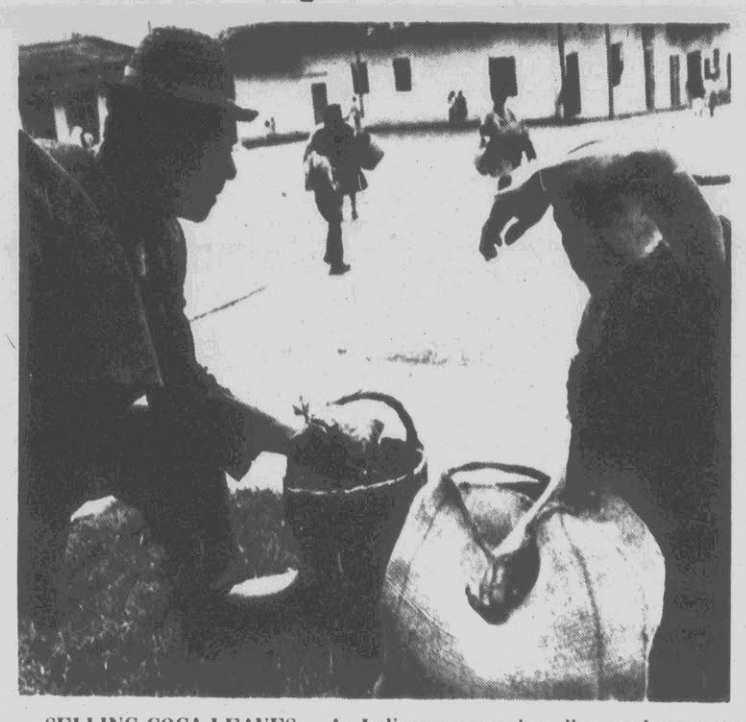

Colombian government agencies are helping peasants get titles to lands they live on, so that they can obtain bank loans, the U.N. field adviser said.

The government also is opening health clinics and sending doctors to visit remote areas. Most children here suffer from malnutrition because their families cannot afford the luxuries of milk and meat, said Sofonias Yaeup and Gabriel Zambrano, two physicians in the rural clinic program.

Hugo said it would be difficult to assess the success of the crop-substitution program, which is similar to programs under way in Peru and Bolivia.

But there are some measures: About 110 peasant representatives crowded into a recent meeting with the U.N. team at the El Morro school, and only a few coca plants can now be seen growing around El Morro, in contrast with areas farther north, where coca is seen on every plot of land.

Some El Morro residents were never lured into the cocaine trade.

N.C. Nature Conservancy Reaches $2 Million Goal

CHAPEL HILL — The North Carolina Nature Conservancy, a private, non-profit land conservation organization, has achieved its $2 million fund raising goal for Conserve Carolina: The Campaign for North Carolina's Natural Heritage.

Announcement of reaching the goal was made by Charles B. Huestis, retired senior vice president of Duke University and chariman of the Conserve Carolina Steering Committee.

"Conserve Carolina is by far the most ambitious private conservation program in North Carolina history," Huestis said. "Its success marks a significant milestone for our state.

With the funds, the N.C. Nature Conservancy can accomplish three specific objectives: to acquire key additions to the 24,000 acre North Carolina Nature Conservancy's Nature Reserve System; to create a revolving land protection fund to finance future acquisition of significant natural areas throughout North Carolina, and, to develop the means to open the Reserve System fully to appropriate scientific, educational and recreational uses.

Conserve Carolina began in 1984 under North Carolina Nature Conservancy's former executive director William DeBuys, and the conservancy's board of trustees.

The Knapp Foundation in St. Michaels, Maryland, opened the campaign with a gift of $250,000. Other lead gifts soon followed: $200,000 from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation; $100,000 from RJR Nabisco, Inc; $100,000 from the Cannon Foundation, and $100,000 from the James G. Hanes Memorial Fund. Gifts amounting to $270,000 were also received as lead gifts from four sources.

Individual donors collectively pledged over $170,000 with more than 750 separate gifts amounting to $471,720. Sixteen foundation grants totaled $950,000 and 22 North Carooina businesses responded with $450,000.

A number of protection efforts have been made possible through Conserve Carolina. These include additional lands at Nags Head Woods Reserve; at Bluff Mountain; at Lanier Quarry Savannah, and at Carolina Bays Reserve.

Additionally, the agency received one-fourth of an undivided interest in Bat Cave; assured the protection of more than 5,360 acres of hardwood forest in th Roanoke River floodplain, and received an addition to the Green Swamp Reserve through a gift of Big Island Savannah from Federal Paper Board Company.

Peoples Bank Hits A New Low
7%
APR
On Home Equity Loans
Through April 15, 1987.

Introducing Peoples Equity Line that features a limited-time 7% interest rate that's well below prime. And, there's no origination fee. Lately you've been bombarded by bank advertising telling you all you ever wanted to know about home equity loans and how you can take advantage of the last of the big tax loopholes. And it's all true.

But, why pay more for a home equity loan than you have to? The next time you need cash for a car, tuition, home improvement or other major expenditure, write yourself a loan with your Peoples Equity Line. And, if you draw against your Peoples Equity Line now, you'll pay only 7% interest rate on the outstanding balance through April 15, 1987. After that time, your interest rate will continue at a low rate of Peoples Bank's Prime Rate + ½% for balances over $15,000 and Prime + 1% for balances below $15,000. You only have to pay 1.5% of the balance (or $100, whichever is greater) each month, and your line of credit is open for 15 years.

Build up your tax deductions with Peoples Equity Line. By obtaining a home equity loan from Peoples Bank, you could possibly start adding up your tax deductions for the future. The staff of Peoples Bank will be happy to assist you in setting up your Peoples Equity Line. Call or visit any of our 62 offices today.

*This interest rate applies to Peoples Bank deposit customers. If the rate were not discounted at this time, it would be either 8% or 8% depending on the outstanding balance. (Please refer to the rate formula stated above.) The rate may vary monthly after April 15, 1987 depending on Peoples Bank's Prime Rate. For non-deposit customers of Peoples, should be added to all interest rates quoted. For complete information on interest deductions for tax purposes, consult your tax advisor. The Prime Rate is that rate from time to time announced as Peoples Bank's Prime Rate.

Huge Brazilian Prairie May Become Future Breadbasket

EDITOR'S NOTE — Brazil's cerrado region is 748,000 square miles of mostly empty prairie, but agricultural officials say it could produce enough food for all of that country's 138 million people, plus all the people of Europe. So with some help from the government, farmers have begun breaking ground and the harvests have been bountiful indeed.

By PETER MUELLO
Associated Press Writer

ITAI DE MINAS, Brazil (AP) — This South American country is opening up one of the world's last great agricultural frontiers on its vast central plains, prairie land once thought to be unfit for cultivation. Today the region, nearly five times the size of California, is hailed as this country's next breadbasket.

Food production from a small part of the area recently tilled and planted has been so promising it has drawn farmers from around the country and attracted foreign investors.

Government officials predict that full development of the region, known as the cerrado, will feed millions of people and bring in billions of dollars in much-needed revenue. It also will relieve the pressure to develop — and spoil — the Amazon rain forest.

"The cerrado, rationally developed, can feed Brazil, Europe and a lot more," says Osmar Niccolini, an agronomist at the government's Cerrado Agricultural Research Center near the new inland capital of Brasilia. "It's the last frontier for mechanized farming."

Agriculture Minister Iris Rezende said, "The cerrado is Brazil's chance to become a major grain producer. There's no question about its viability. The cerrado is a reality."

The cerrado, the Portuguese word for savanna, sprawls across 748,000 square miles of Brazil's heartland between the Amazon jungle to the north and the developed south.

Most of it is still empty prairie. Although more than half the region is suitable for farming, only about 20 percent of that area is under cultivation.

But in that fraction of land, the cerrado already produces half of Brazil's rice, one-third of its coffee, 20 percent of its corn and about 15 percent of its soybeans, black beans and cotton.

Proof of the cerrado's potential is this busy farming community of 6,000 on a red plain, 500 miles northwest of Rio de Janeiro and 250 miles southeast of Brasilia.

Six years ago, Itai de Minas was a dirt-poor backwater of 3,000 inhabitants, subsisting on ranching and a little coal mining. It had no running water, telephones, paved streets, high school or medical station.

Today the town has all of those things and a thriving farm economy. There is no unemployment and the growth rate is the highest in the state of Minas Gerais.

"This is the best coffee land in Brazil," says Erico Lohmann, 56, who came here in 1980 with a government settlement project.

Lohmann and his son Egon grow coffee, soybeans and wheat on 1,190 acres. Their only complaint about the cerrado is that land prices have shot up so fast it's difficult to buy more.

The Lohmanns' neighbor, Ivalino Furlanetto, 36, had been a truck driver and farmhand in southern Brazil when the cerrado settlement project arose six years ago. He called the project "one of the best things Brazil has ever done."

"It's a dream come true for me," the lanky blond farmer said, climbing down from a truck loaded with yellow-green peas, just harvested. "I don't even think of going back."

Yet, for decades the cerrado was ignored for large-scale agriculture. The soil was considered too acid and the region too far away from the big coastal cities.

That changed in 1960 when the government moved the nation's capital to Brasilia, a built-from-scratch city right in the cerrado plains.

Agricultural visionaries founded the agricultural research center that in turn discovered how to make the local soil fertile with applications of lime and phosphorous, minerals found in abundance in the region.

"This soil, properly prepared, can grow almost anything. We can get three, sometimes even four harvests a year," said Marco Aurelio de Faria, a rural technician at the center, standing in an experimental field of knee-high black bean plants. "Now that's exciting."

Today the center has made the cerrado even more productive than the traditional Brazilian farm zones with new technology and new strains of seeds. It has a cooperation agreement with Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., and works with research institutes from Japan, Spain and France.

The new attention being given the cerrado comes at a time when food production is falling short of demand in this continent-sized country of 138 million.

Grain harvests have stayed at about 50 million tons a year for the past six years, while the population adds 3 million new mouths a year.

As a result, Brazil must import staples such as wheat, rice, corn and black beans. That puts an added burden on the government as it struggles to pay a $103 billion foreign debt, the largest in the Third World.

In 1978, Japan proposed a joint farming venture in the cerrado, in the interest of increasing the world's food supply..

The two countries created the Cerrado Development Project, a $50 million enterprise of private and state companies to install four farming settlements in the region.

This year, Brazil and Japan agreed to expand the project, investing $300 million for the creation of 11 more settlements.

The goal, minister Rezende says, is to cultivate 125 million acres of the cerrado and produce 100 million tons of grain by the year 2000. He estimates the increased output would earn Brazil some $5 billion a year.

Itai de Minas was chosen as a site for a settlement. Prospective farmers were selected from a southern rural cooperative and anyone was eligible who had farming experience, about $31,000 dollars in capital, and didn't already own land.

The project offered 26 volunteers everything they needed to start a farm: a plot of about 865 acres, equipment, fertilizer, pesticides and building materials, all with long-term financing. It also supplied technical help for three years to correct the soil and adapt to the cerrado.

"When they came here for the first time they got a big scare," recalls Fernando Nogueira de Oliveira, a rural technology expert who helped start the settlement. "There was nothing but scrub as far as you could see. Half of them got right back on the bus and went home."

Those who stayed prospered. After a season of correcting the soil, the settlers began to collect good harvests. More farmers were attracted to the area and today no one talks of leaving.

Sebastiao Costa Lima, 37, is typical of the successful new farmers. In 1981 he applied for a plot of 832 acres in the Coromandel settlement and planted coffee, soybeans, corn and rice. With bank credit against his second harvest, he bought 694 more acres.

He wants to buy more, but no one is selling.

"This is the way agrarian reform should be done," he said, pausing in his Volkswagen Beetle on a ridge overlooking his land. Below, tractors in clouds of dust were preparing the soil for planting.

In other parts of Brazil, where land often is less productive, big ranchers and poor squatter farmers have clashed violently over possession of land. The government has promised to expropriate unproductive land and distribute it to 1.4 million peasant families by 1988.

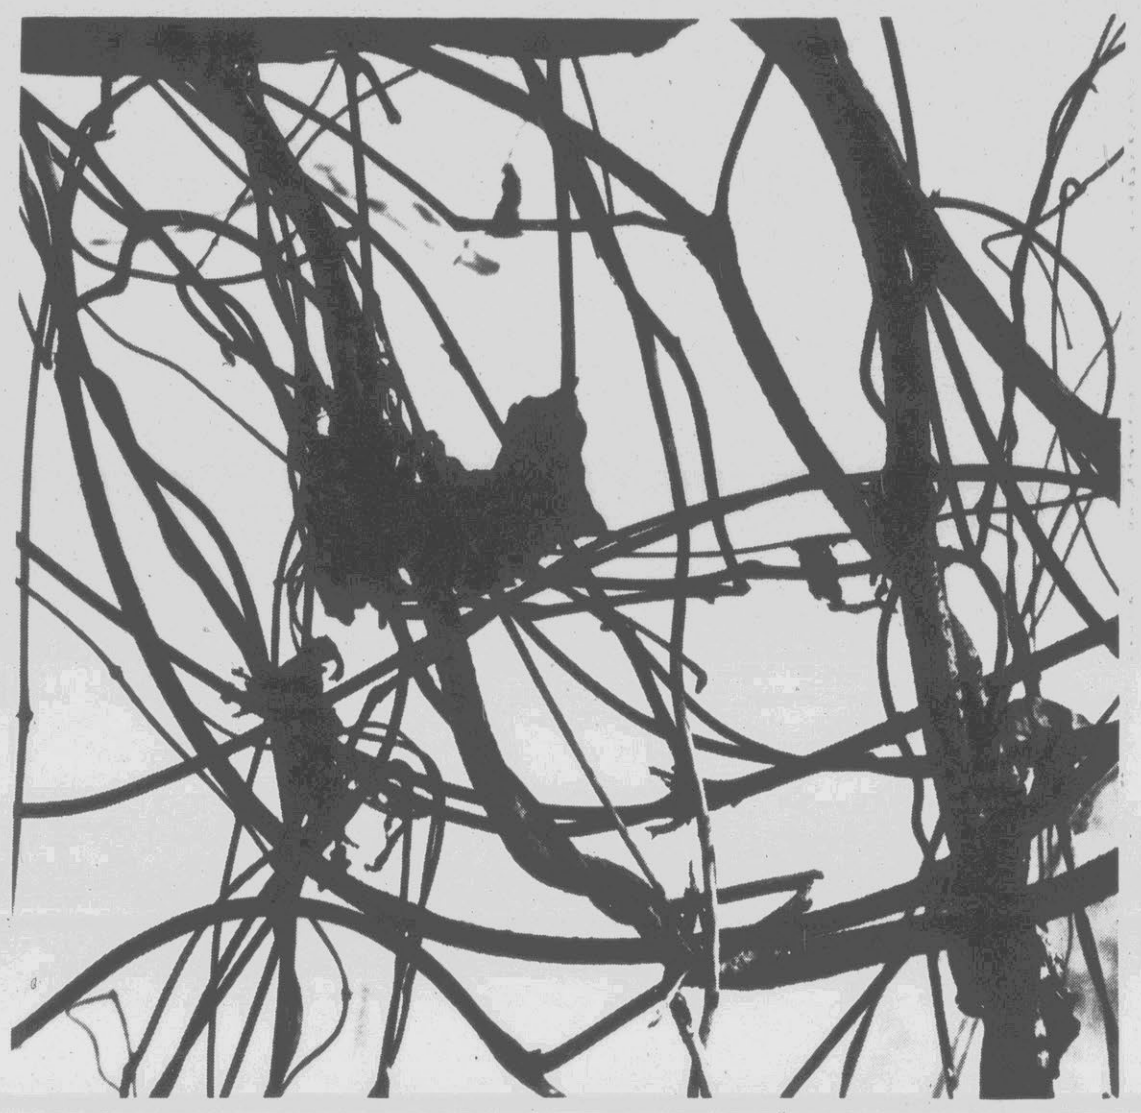

"It's not enough just to put a man on the land," Lima says. "Look at me. If I hadn't received credit and technical assistance, I probably wouldn't have survived."

The government hopes the cerrado will help save Brazil's other great untapped reserve, the Amazon rain forest.

'Interest in occupying the Amazon fell off because of the cerrado," explains minister Rezende. "Unquestionably, the Amazon is a potential to be considered. Our concern is how to develop it without devastation or damage to nature."

In the early 1970s, the government undertook an ambitious project to build a trans-Amazon highway and settle millions of peasant farmers along the route. The project was a failure: the road is largely impassable and most of the settlers ended up abandoning the inhospitable jungle. However, the untrained peasants' uncontrolled chopping down of Amazon trees to clear farmland worried many environmentalists here and abroad.

Edson Lobato, a senior agronomist at the Cerrado Research Center, warned that "the risk of breaking the ecological balance in the Amazon is very great. In the cerrado, the risk is lower. The Amazon can wait."

Cuphea Plants Possible Alternative To Tobacco

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

TIFTON, Ga. (AP) - Butterflies and bumblebees fly among the pink, red and purple flowers blooming in a field of small plants that someday could yield a valuable oil used in food processing, medicines and soaps.

Researchers looking for alternatives to tobacco and row crops are growing the 300 cuphea plants, including two types native to Georgia, on a two-acre plot at the University of Georgia's Coastal Plain Experiment Station.

They are raising quite different varieties of the plants. Some have long green leaves; others have stubby leaves. Some send out runners along the ground while others have strong stems that stand erect. Some will not grow higher than an inch, while others reach 8 feet.

During the summer, technician Bruce Tucker monitored their growth and took notes on the characteristics of the 45 varieties.

"We planted this for observation and we'll see what comes back next year," Tucker explained during a tour of the field.

Many of the plants have lost their leaves and turned brown with the arrival of cooler temperatures, but the few that continue to bloom attract orange butterflies and fierce-looking black-and-white bumblebees.

Cuphea, a weed that grows from the southern United States to Brazil, has seeds that contain oils known as middle-chain fatty acids. Use of such oils could reduce serum cholesterol, a substance linked to heart disease in humans.

"If you don't want foods that put cholesterol in your body, the middle chains would be ideal," said Casimir Jaworski, a U.S. Department of Agriculture scientist who is supervising the cuphea research in Tifton. "It is high in energy, quick energy. That's why it would be good in baby foods."

Each year, U.S. manufacturers import nearly $500 million worth of coconut and palm oil that contains lauric acid, one of the four middle-chain fatty acids. Some of the oils also are manufactured synthetically from petroleum products.

Jaworski said soap and detergent manufacturers are interested in finding domestic sources of lauric acid.

Agriculture Department and university scientists at the experiment station launched the joint project last spring to develop a cuphea plant that farmers might be able to grow as an alternative to tobacco, soybeans and other row crops. Farmers have been forced to consider other crops because of a nationwide agricultural slump that has depressed the price of many commodities.

Jaworski is being assisted by entomologist Dick Chalfant, who will identify insects that attack cuphea and survey the damages. Plant pathologist Don Sumner will monitor disease problems. Agricultural engineer Suhas Ghate will study the physical properties of the plant to develop methods of seeding and harvesting cuphea.

Cuphea research also is being conducted in Ames, Iowa; Phoenix, Ariz.; and Corvallis, Ore.

"It's an investment for the future," said Jaworski, emphasizing that it may take many years of plant selection and breeding to produce a type of cuphea that could be grown commercially. Then scientists would have to determine the best methods of growing and harvesting the crop.

"These types of projects are long-term, high-risk research," he stressed. "Maybe one project out of four or five, after 10 or 15 years, would reach the stage where we can go to pilot production."

Because cuphea has had to survive in the wild, it has many undesirable characteristics. Some species have sticky flowers that could gum up harvesting equipment. Others have seeds that are too small, or scatter and fail to germinate reliably.

Thailand Resurrects Royal Capital

EDITOR'S NOTE — One of Asia's premier Buddhist monuments, a 700-year-old royal capital where free enterprise thrived and the arts flourished, is being resurrected in Thailand after a decade of archaeological effort. The $4.75 million project, a complex of shrines, moats and city walls, opens in 1987.

A CURTAIN OF VINES — A tangled growth of Virginia Creeper vines screens the entryway to an old mule stable near Bridgeton. SUKHOTHAI, Thailand (AP) — After a decade of archaeological effort, Thailand has resurrected its Camelot — a 700-year-old royal capital where free enterprise thrived, the arts flourished and commoners seeking justice had only to strike a palace bell before entering to see the king.

Abandoned 400 years ago, the erosion of Sukhothai's artistic glories through tropical humidity, clawing vegetation and thieves persisted until 1953 when the government launched a program to save the ancient city.

Now, work on an internationally supported, 10-year master plan is all but complete and 1987 will see the official opening of the Sukhothai Historical Park, a complex of Buddhist shrines, ornamental ponds, kiln sites, defensive moats and city walls spread out over 27 square miles of the central Thai plains.

Sukhothai is regarded as one of Asia's premier Buddhist monuments, along with Burma's Pagan, Cambodia's Angkor and Borobudur in Indonesia. The $4.75 million project is also one of 19 international campaigns by the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization to preserve important historical sites. Of these, six are in Asia.

The core of the restoration is a fenced, 792-acre reserve which once formed the heart of the capital, a city of some 80,000 inhabitants which at its zenith controlled an empire stretching into modern-day Laos, Burma and Malaysia.

If funds and expertise are available, excavation will continue in outlying areas and attempts will be made to stop pilferage of the remoter sites, according to Maneerat Thaumcharoen, an archaeologist and assistant chief of the park.

Theft at Sukhothai has been of two kinds. Villagers have taken the hard laterite bricks from crumbling, ancient structures for their own construction while hundreds of Buddhist images have been decapitated and the heads sold to Thai and foreign collectors.

Ceramics and other artifacts have also disappeared.

The government's Fine Arts Department — the chief caretaker — also is planning to attract large numbers of tourists to Sukhothai, located 279 miles north of Bangkok. An airport is being blueprinted and private developers have been asked to submit proposals for hotels and such attractions as boating, fishing and horse-cart rides.

In 1985, 165,000 Thais and foreigners visited here and Miss Maneerat says an annual increase of 50,000 tourists is anticipated over the next few years.

She says a zoning plan was being designed to prevent over-commercialization of the park and guidelines would be laid down on the sizes and styles for future hotels.

Thai officials say that beyond tourist revenue, the revival of Sukhothai will give concrete shape to the country's "Golden Age" from which spring many aspects of contemporary Thailand, including the Buddhist religion, the Thai script, notions of kingship and relatively egalitarian social relations.

Sukhothai's finest years came at the turn of the 13th century during the reign of King Ramkamhaeng, a skillful administrator, soldier and scholar as well as a benevolent father figure accessible to his subjects. One of the most famous inscriptions in Thai history notes:

"In the lifetime of King Ramkamhaeng, this Sukhothai is good. In the water there are fish, in the fields there is rice. The ruler does not levy a tax on the people who travel along the road together...Whoever wants to trade in horses, so trades. Whoever wants to trade in silver or gold, so trades."

But internal strife eventually weakened Sukhothai, power shifted to the kingdom of Ayuthaya in 1378 and the capital itself was evacuated in the 16th century. Thailand's Camelot had lasted a brief but shining 125 years. Today's Sukhothai includes the relics of the past and a quiet farming village.

"Despite the rise and fall of states, the quest for peace of mind and equality which epitomizes the Buddhist culture of Sukhothai has stayed fresh and belongs to the Thai people and all men," says one government booklet, reflecting a typical Thai viewpoint on the fallen kingdom.

Sukhothai gained a higher international profile in 1979, when UNESCO added it to its campaign roster. Contributions from the financially pressed agency have totaled only $118,000, and according to its regional office in Bangkok, UNESCO currently has in hand less than 5 percent of funds needed for its 19 campaigns.

But in addition to some worldwide publicity, UNESCO — which will continue its involvement beyond the master plan period — has been able to provide valuable expertise in various aspects of restoration and preservation.

The overall restoration concept, however, was worked out by the Thais, and involved the use of non-original materials to flesh out temples and even add missing parts to Sukhothai's giant statues of the Lord Buddha.

Although a more "purist" approach is normally favored in the West, the Thais argue that as complete a restoration as possible must be attempted. They contend that Sukhothai is not merely of interest to specialists but also to the general tourist who wants to see more than just disjointed relics and to the Buddhist faithful who don't favor paying homage to headless images.

A Review

Fine Random Memories

AND DID YOU ONCE SEE SIDNEY PLAIN? By Max Wilk. Norton. 83 Pages. $8.95.

Max Wilk has subtitled his engaging little memoir "A Random Memoir of S.J. Perelman." And that it is.

Those who have reveled in Perelman's work over the years know what a very funny man he was as a writer. And, as Wilk notes, that's probably because he saved his best material for his writing. He didn't squander it in talk, "never gave it away for temporary laughs; he consigned his jewels, thank heaven, to the permanence of linotype."

Wilk, a writer of humor himself, came to Perelman early in life. Contemplating the life of a radical in his youth, after having been captured by the rhetoric of a play called "Waiting for Lefty," Wilk came upon a satiric piece called "Waiting for Santy" which skewered the play. The satire was, of course, by Perelman and Wilk was seduced away from politics to humor.

Wilk and Perelman, however, were not to become friends until some years later when they met "on a dark and stormy London afternoon, in November 1969." And it's what happened after that meeting with which this book largely concerns itself as Wilk retells many engaging anecdotes about Perelman. One such concerns a band of crooks who robbed a bank following the scenario of a movie Perelman had written some 30 years earlier. "When the press called on Perelman for his reaction, he remarked, 'Maybe I ought to charge them royalties'."

Also great fun is Wilk's running account of the screen Perelman once bought in Bombay. Having no room in his London flat to hang the screen, Perelman, to avoid storage charges, kept it floating about among friends and acquaintances for some 10 years before it vanished from sight. Gone but certainly not forgotten.

Log Cabin Is Monument To Enos Mills

AN OLD NOZZLE — The heavy metal nozzle section of an old gasoline pump at an abandoned country store in Pitt County is still in good shape. The pump is located under a sturdy shelter and has thus escaped the harsher erosion of exposure. (Reflector Photo by Jerry Raynor)

EDITOR'S NOTE — A log cabin in the Rocky Mountains stands as a monument to nature guide Enos Mills, who wrote 15 books and a profusion of articles about wildlife and the outdoors before he died in 1922. Today visitors are invited to drop by and hear the stories of the man known as the "father of the Rocky Mountain National Park."

By S.J. GUFFEY
Associated Press Writer

ESTES PARK, Colo. (AP) — A sign on the driveway across the highway from Longs Peak invites travelers to pull in and let Enda Mills Kiley serve up a slice of history.

Near the house where Enda and her husband Bob live, the sign says honk. And all year long pilgrims come to hear their stories.

Down a path, standing next to a 700-year-old ponderosa pine and overlooking a lush beaver meadow, sits the log cabin Mrs. Kiley's father started building 101 years ago.

Still straight and sturdy, the cabin stands as a monument to Enos Mills, nature guide and prolific writer, the man known as "the father of Rocky Mountain National Park."

For Enda and Bob Kiley, the cabin is a labor of love.

Enda — she was named for author Edna Ferber, but the birth certificate spelled it wrong and the new name stuck — was 3 when her famous father died in 1922 at the age of 52.

Esther Mills, Enda's mother, lived another 42 years, but Enda admits she asked her "practically nothing" about the man who built the cabin.

Bob Kiley says it wasn't until 1965, as the Kileys sorted Esther Mills' belongings, that he and his wife realized how important this swatch of land, the cabin and the man responsible for it all had been.

Enos Mills was a transplanted Kansas farm boy who ran away from home at 14, drawn by the wilderness lure of Colorado. Still a boy when he arrived in Estes Park, Mills staked a claim at the base of 14,255-foot Longs Peak, the highest of the jagged Rockies along Colorado's Front Range.

Over the years, Mills worked briefly in Butte, Mont., and traveled widely, but he always returned here. For 24 years, this cabin was Mills' home.

Mills opened a lodge called the Longs Peak Inn and gained a reputation for introducing city slickers to his Spartan version of the outdoor life, but he still kept the cabin.

Years later, friend Edna Ferber used the quiet cabin for writing, away from the vigorous up-and-at-'em regime Mills pressed on the guests at his inn.

Mills produced 15 books and a profusion of articles about this part of the world. But foremost, he was a nature guide. He described the job as a combination of "packhorse, photographer, doctor and sometimes psychiatrist."

Longs Peak's summit rises a mile high above the cabin. Mills sometimes made two trips a day to the top, guiding guests on an arduous 14-mile trek up and over the slopes and boulders.

Esther Mills and her sister Bess were the first women licensed as nature guides under Mills' tutelage.

In 1918, Enos and Esther were married. Enda arrived the next year.

After Mills died, the Longs Peak Inn continued under Esther's guidance until 1946.

Today, the guest buildings that Mills made famous are mostly gone. The once-pristine view of Longs Peak is marred by a modern resort across Colorado 7. But inside the log fence, the cabin and its caretakers continue Enos Mills' work "as best we can," Mrs. Kiley says.

On this sunlit morning, Mrs. Kiley sits on a step stool inside the cabin's door.

"He loved to travel," she says. "He once said he had a campfire in every state."

One of six bookcases Mills kept at the lodge is inside the tiny cabin now, filled plank-floor to log ceiling with volumes on mammals, birds, plants and fish. One shelf holds a batch of Interior Department reports from the early 1900s.

Tucked here and there are other favorites of the self-made man of letters: Aesop's "Fables," Robert Louis Stevenson and Robert Burns.

A well-thumbed dictionary sits on a table.

Photos are everywhere. If Mills hadn't had been a writer, he could have been famous just for his photos.

He would spend days tramping the mountains, often setting out with just pockets full of raisins to sustain him, but never without his camera.

Mills especially liked images that captured the ruggedness of the world around him — afternoon storm clouds rolling in over the peaks, for example, or the tortured, twisted trees at the edge of the timberline.

A copy of a Mills photo showing his beloved horse, Cricket, next to a gnarled limber pine — both bowed by the force of the wind — is a treasured possession of the Colorado chapter of the Sierra Club, passed with reverence from one president to the next.

Boxes and jars of dried plant specimens crowd shelves around the books and photos.

One photo shows the reed-slim Mills, dapper in his high, laced boots and customary tweed suit, bending to take his tiny daughter's hand. Another series captures 2-year-old Enda playing nature guide for her teddy bear.

Photos by others mark decades of the Kiley family's progress up Longs Peak. Enda, then 8, on her first trip up with her Aunt Bess. Enda and her two daughters at the summit 20 years ago. The Kiley's two sons at the top a few years later.

On one wall is the canvas backpack Enos and Esther Mills contrived to carry their young daughter as they hiked. Another wall has the divided skirt Esther wore as a guide in the 1920s.

Still more photos and drawings show the furniture Mills designed for the inn, using peeled branches from the nearby forests. (A still life of tangled tree roots adorned the lobby.)

In the early 1900s, the proliic Mills wrote with a gusto and enthusiasm that awakened many to the wonders of the wilderness.

He spent six years fighting to get Rocky Mountain National Park established, with the U.S. Forest Service his major opponent. The park finally was born in 1915, but Mills' opinion of the new U.S. Park Service soured when he learned private concessioners would be granted monopolies within the nation's parks.

Some critics are put off by Mills' tendency to attribute human qualities and thought to the wildlife he wrote about so often, but his books on the grizzly bear and the beaver — both studies based on years of careful observation — remain classics in their genre.

During the school year, many of Mrs. Kiley's days are spent telling the story over and over to batches of 50 or so sixth-graders on field trips from schools in the Denver area, stories about a man whose face she remembers only from photos.

On this day, a crowd of visitors tapers off about noon, just as Bob arrives from the main house to accompany his wife home to lunch. A man and his two young children show up, so Bob waits beside the cabin while Enda goes back to tell the story again.

Soon, the man — in his 30s, with wire-rimmed glasses and the intense look of someone out to show his children everything — takes off again up the path, the children double-timing it to catch up.

At last, the Kileys head home for lunch.

"Dear," Enda says after a bit, "that young man knew there are 225 kinds of flowers in the park."

"He did, did he?"

They walk a little farther up the path before Bob adds, "Did you tell him your father said it was better to know one thing very well than just a little about a lot of things?"

Flanagan Show At PCMH

The Pitt County Memorial Hospital Show for the month of January will be an exhibition of photography by a local photographer, Muriel Flanagan.

Her subjects in the show include children, animals and nature, with emphasis on the relationships that exist between people and animals, and people and nature.

MURIEL FLANAGAN

Two photographs by Flanagan were accepted in a national competition, National Aperture '85. Flanagan also had a solo show titled "Windows on the Intimate" which was shown at the Community Council for the Arts in Kinston.

Beginning on Jan. 20 Flanagan will have some of her work exhibited in a group photography show at Arlington Hall in Greenville.

The Flanagan photographs at PCMH are installed along the corridors of the ground floor in a main hallway behind the central elevators. Viewing can take place at any time.

GRANTS MADE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Theater Program of the National Endowment for the Arts recently awarded 178 grants totaling $7,080,000, to theater companies for support of their performance season.

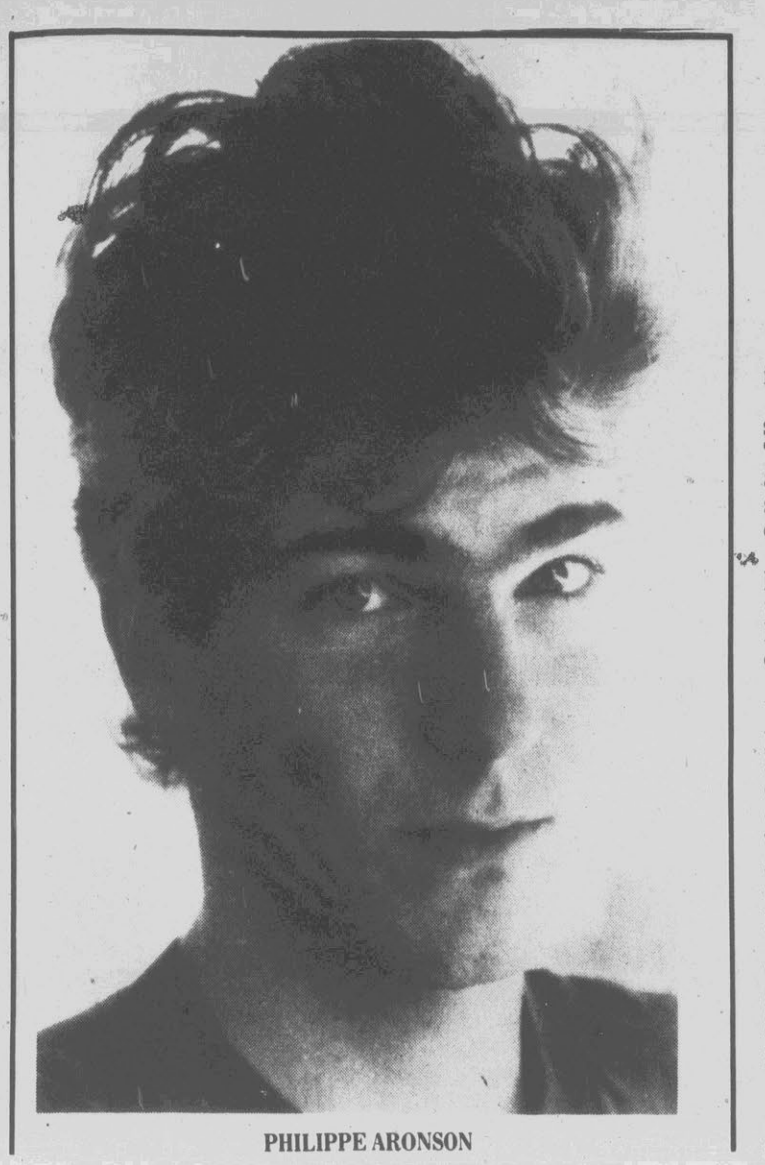

The grants ranged in amount from $7,500 to $315,000 and were awarded to non-profit groups in 33 states and the District of Columbia.

In 1985, the assessed valuation of real property in Pitt County totaled $1,744,612,157; personal property was valued at $750,322,923.

PHILIPPE ARONSON

Philippe Aronson In Guest Piano Recital

Philippe Aronson, pianist, will present a guest recital at 8:15 p.m. Friday in the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on the East Carolina University Campus. The recital is sponsored by the keyboard faculty of the ECU School of Music.

The recital is free and open to the public on a first-come, first-seated basis.

For his program, Aronson has chosen two Beethoven compositions, "Sonata in D Major, Opus 28," (the Pastorale) and "32 Variations in C Minor"; Robert Schumann's "Papillons, Opus 2," and Maruice Ravel's "Sonatine."

A graduate of Rose High School, he is the son of Stuart and Nicole Aronson.

In the spring of 1986 Aronson won the Commonwealth Young Artists Piano Competition held at Clark University in Worcester, Massachusetts. The first prize carries a cash award and an engagement in the Clark University Guest Artist series. Aronson's performance in the Clark Guest Artist University series will take place Jan. 31.

A student of piano since the age of seven, Aronson has won numerous piano competitions. These have included the Shenandoah Music Conservatory Piano Competition, 1982; The UNC/Wilmington Young Artists Competition, 1983, and a performance with the Wilmington Symphony Orchestra; and the Gardner-Webb College Concerto Competition, 1984 and a performance with the college's symphony orchestra.

In 1985 Aronson won three piano competitions — the North Carolina Federation of Music Clubs; the Mason-Hamlin competition, and the N.C. Music Teachers Association Piano competition, in which he played Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue" with the Raleigh Symphony.

Arsonson first studied with Carlene Ragan and in 1984 began studying with Paul Tardif of the ECU School of Music. He has attended the International Academy of Music in Nice, France wehre he studied with Pierre Sancan, Pascale Roget and Yuri Egorov.

Currently, Aronson is a student in the New England Music Conservatory and studies with Victor Rosenbaum.

TV Contest For Teenagers

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — American teenagers are being offered a chance to help produce a TV program and win a trip to Sweden. Currently, a nationwide essay contest is being conducted to find four American teenages to produce "This is My Country," a video documentary to be seen by Swedish teens about life in the U.S.

The essay topic is "My Life in the U.S." Contestants are asked to answer the following question in 200 words or less: "If you were to produce a TV show about your life in the U.S., what would you include and why?"

The four essay winners will help write and produce the program under the supervision of a professional TV producer. In addition, the documentary will highlight a day in the life of each winner.

Upon completion of the project, the four winners will travel to Sweden to present the program to Swedish school children. The documentary, designed to foster understanding between the two countries, has a similar sister project being conducted in Sweden.

Children ages 13-16 are eligible to enter. Entries are to be sent to: International Children's Television Committee, P.O. Box 35354, Minneapolis, Minn., 55435.

Entries must be postmarked no later than Feb. 15.

ATW Auditions Today, Monday

AYDEN — The Ayden Theater Workshop will hold auditions today at 3 p.m. and again on Monday at 7:30 p.m. for its forthcoming production of "A Night Of Three One-Acts."

The auditions on both dates will be held at the Ayden-Grifton High School auditorium. Both men and women are needed for roles ranging in age from 20 to 60.

Mahler Fantasy Is Coming True

By BRUCE HANDLER
Associated Press Writer

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Imagine:

You adjust your white tie and tails, stride onto stage and take a bow. Then you thrust your baton skyward and a great symphony orchestra responds with a crashing "da-da-da-dum!"

Financial publisher Gilbert Kaplan has turned fantasy into reality: He travels around the world conducting Mahler's Second Symphony. It's his entire repertoire.

However, the 45-year-old New Yorker, who pays all his own expenses, has learned the difficult Mahler work so well, he now receives critical acclaim from classical music experts. Major orchestras are waiting in line for him to conduct, and concertgoers willingly pay extra money for hard-to-get tickets to his performances.

"It's difficult to believe I'm doing this," he said in an interview during a brief stop to play at the Sao Paulo State Symphony Orchestra's Mahler Festival. "But it wasn't easy. It involved the most intense study."

Kaplan astounded the professional music world by memorizing every single note and orchestral notation in the score of the five-movement, 85-minute work. Not counting simple piano sheet music, he cannot actually read a musical score.

Mahler enthusiasts are forming a sort of "Kaplan cult." Kaplan's concerts invariably are sellouts. Tickets for his performance at Sao Paulo's Sergio Cardoso Theater were gone two hours after the box office opened, and the only way you could get a seat after that was by overpaying a scalper.

The audience gave Kaplan a 10-minute, uninterrupted ovation, marked by foot stomping, rhythmic clapping and shouts of "Bravo!" Afterward, fans swarmed into his dressing room for autographs.

Kaplan, who is the founder, editor and publisher of Institutional Investor, first heard Mahler's Second Symphony in 1965.

"It finished me off. I couldn't shake it out of my head. It became my favorite piece. I read about it. I bought records. I listened to it over and over and started waving my arms and 'conducting' it," he said.

"Finally I got to the point where I felt that if I actually could conduct it, I could get inside the music and somehow change it."

It was only later that he discovered he had fallen in love with one of the most difficult and complex pieces in all concert music. Mahler's Second Symphony, also known as the "Resurrection Symphony," requires an orchestra of over 100 pieces, including instruments off stage, plus a choir of up to 200 voices.

"I spoke to professional musicians in New York about my conducting the work, but they were discouraging. They didn't take me seriously," Kaplan said.

So in 1981, he decided to devote one entire year to learning the Mahler piece. He hired a conservatory graduate to teach him the elements of conducting. He traveled around the world — Tokyo, Melbourne, Amsterdam, Vienna —to attend rehearsals and performances of the piece. He rented rehearsal halls and hired New York's American Symphony Orchestra to practice.

Finally, on Sept. 9, 1982, he reserved Avery Fisher Hall in New York for a private performance of the work, before friends and selected clients of his magazine, with himself in front of the American Symphony Orchestra and the Westminster choir.

"When it was over, I said, 'Thank God, that's finished,'" Kaplan recalled. "I had achieved my dream — an expensive dream — and that was it."

Although Kaplan specifically barred critics from his private concert, word got out and Newsweek and The Village Voice gave him sensational reviews. Then members of the American Symphony Orchestra told him he was so good, they wanted him to conduct them again playing Mahler's Second Symphony, but this time in public, in Carnegie Hall, to celebrate the orchestra's 20th anniversary.

The April 1983 Carnegie Hall concert was a sellout and a tremendous success. The New York Daily News called it one of the best performances ever heard of Mahler's Second Symphony and later picked it as one of the 10 best concerts of the year.

More invitations to conduct followed. In 1984 Kaplan led Tokyo's New Japan Philharmonic Orchestra and the London Symphony Orchestra in presentations of the "Resurrection Symphony."

In 1985, he conducted the Brazilian Symphony Orchestra in Rio de Janeiro, opened the Budapest Spring Festival and returned to Britain to lead the London Symphony in a sellout performance at Royal Albert Hall.

This year it was Sao Paulo, and Kaplan has pending invitations from the Stockholm Symphony Orchestra and for an encore in Hungary.

Kaplan admits an almost total ignorance of conducting when he began his project. Showing his red leather-covered Mahler score, filled with notes in red and blue pencil and glued-on little squares of annotated yellow paper, Kaplan turned to Page 1. There he had written, "Start left."

"The symphony starts in the violins, and the violins sit to the conductor's left," he said. "At first, I didn't even know how the instruments of the orchestra were arranged."

Conducting in Sao Paulo, Kaplan turned directly to the various sections of the orchestra when each had dominant parts in the symphony. During soft passages he attempted literally to draw the music out with wide sweeps of his arms. And at the most energetic and dramatic moments of the work, he nearly leaped into the air.

Asked if he is considering memorizing and conducting some other work, Kaplan said, "No, that would make me a professional conductor, which i have no intention of becoming."

Opryland Sets N.C. Auditions

NASHVILLE, TENN. — Representatives from Opryland, the Nashville theme park with live musical productions, will make their only North Carolina audition stop in Winston-Salem on Jan. 7 during a 28-city tour.

The Winston-Salem auditions will be from noon to 3 p.m. in the Dorminy Studios at 1281 West Fourth St. No appointments are necessary for the open-call auditions.

Opryland will hire about 400 singers, dancers, dance captains, conductor/pianists, musicians, stage managers and technicians for shows staged at the park, for industrial shows and conventions, and for performances on the General Jackson, a multimillion-dollar showboat.

For more details, call the Opryland Entertainment Department at 615/871-6656.

PRENDERGAST EXHIBITION

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Maurice Prendergast is noted not only for his appealing paintings but also is considered America's master of the monotype — a printmaking process that allows the artist to produce an image that is soft, diffuse and impressionistic.

An exhibition of these prints is on view at the Minneapolis Institute of Arts through Feb. 15.

"Monotypes by Maurice Prendergast From the Terra Museum of American Art" features 55 prints.

Bitter Exit For Hamburg Playhouse Director Peter Zadek

By MARK HEINRICH
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — As far as director Peter Zadek is concerned, the Hamburg City Playhouse, which he led for 18 months, might as well "be turned into a brothel."

It was his parting shot at the renowned public theater and typified the provocative candor of this giant in postwar German drama who stunned West Germany's theater world by resigning last month.

After 25 years earning acclaim, prizes and sensation for avant-garde interpretations of classical works by Shakespeare, Schiller and others, Zadek ran aground as director.

Only his first two productions for the Hamburg were critical and commercial hits. One was Israeli playwright Joshua Sobol's "Ghetto." Zadek's latest production, "Pravda," a press satire that was a hit in London, has been playing to 25 percent capacity audiences in the 1,400-seat theater.

Fed up with critics' barbs and indifferent attendance, Zadek resigned almost three years ahead of his contract expiration.

He derided Hamburg's "culture smart set" who had avoided his earthy productions. He said he was fed up with being a "museum caretaker, polishing the statues in the playhouse."

He also accused the Hamburg "press mafia" of discouraging attendance by shooting down his work before the public could make a judgment.

Some members of the Hamburg theater troupe were not amused, with star actor Will Quadflieg accusing Zadek of a "snotty" and "irresponsible" attitude toward his audience.

Ironically, Zadek, 60, has made his mark with ultra-modern interpretations of classical works in an effort to broaden theater's appeal beyond the circle of a cultured elite. He introduced blue jeans, miniskirts and other icons of pop culture into centuries-old plots to capture the imagination of the young. Often, his stagings bordered on the bizarre.

The Berlin-born Zadek grew up in England after emigrating from Germany with his family in 1933 after the Nazi seizure of power. He studied at Oxford and London's Old Vic Theater School and became deeply influenced by British vaudeville.

Zadek worked as a film cutter and television director before breaking into theater by staging the premiere of Jean Genet's "Le Balcon" in London in 1957.

The French playwright was so outraged by Zadek's adaption that he tried to publicly protest at the London theater, but officials barred his entry and the play became a resounding success.

The mixture of acclaim and controversy was to characterize Zadek's career as it soared after his return to West Germany in 1958.

"I don't want intellectual, subtle theater, I want sharp contrast, shocks," Zadek once said about his work.

He led a revisionist generation of German theater producers who offered what he called "anti-elitist, anti-boring" adaptations of the classics, including Shakespeare, Schiller, Chekhov and Moliere.

Directing the Bremen State Playhouse from 1963-67, Zadek created a stir with an avant-garde staging of Shakespeare's "Henry V," which he titled "Henry the Hero."

In 1967, he presented a bizarre reading of Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" with a company of blue-jeaned and miniskirted actors, some of whom practiced headstands on chairs.

In 1976, Zadek's production of "Othello" portrayed the protagonist as a maniacal savage and Desdemona as a whore who had a lesbian scene with her maid and dressed up in costumes ranging from an evening gown to a bikini.

Zadek trumpeted his radical chic sympathies in staging "Rock Revue '79" by Udo Lindenberg, a West German leftist activist pop star.

Jumping between playhouses in major West German cities into the early 1980s, Zadek rarely lost his touch for sensation. Some of his works were produced for West German television, and he even won prizes for films he has directed.

"He's got an infallible scent for the trivial aspects of classical stage plays," was one apt newspaper commentary in 1983.

But the so-called "culture smart set" in Hamburg apparently would not put up with Zadek's eccentricities, critics remarked after his resignation.

Decoys Lecture At St. John's

WILMINGTON — "Decoys: An American Folk Art Tradition," will be the title of a lecture to be given at St. John's Museum of Art at 8 p.m. Thursday. The lecturer is D.C. North, a noted decoy expert and folk art collector.

This lecture is in conjunction with the museum's current exhibition "The Art of Decoys from the Collection of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce B. Cameron."

Individuals may bring their decoys for identification by North following the lecture.

St. John's Museum is located at 114 Orange Street, Wilmington. For more information on these and other events, call 763-0281.

LIMITED EDITIONS

NEW YORK (AP) — "Painters teach me how to see, to read, to compose, hence to write, to lay out signs on a page," according to French novelist, poet and critic Michel Butor.

Dozens of examples of his collaborations with artists — they've been called "dialogues between text and graphics" — are on view at Columbia University through Feb. 26 in an exhibition of rarely seen limited edition books.

Among the works in the display marking Butor's 60th birthday are collaborations with Alexander Calder, Jacques Herold, Andre Villers and George Duchene.

The awards are given to outstanding non-fiction books published in the United States in the fields of literature, science and mathematics and the social sciences. The awards carry prizes of $2,500.

'Stand By Me' Song Reintroduces An Old Songwriting Team

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Stand By Me," recorded in 1961 by Ben E. King and now a hit again, has re-introduced to the Top 10 two men who helped guide the formative years of rock'n'roll — songwriters Jerry Leiber and Mike Stoller.

"It's wonderful, this thing," said Stoller. "It's great, 25 years after it came out, it's like a whole new career for Ben."

"Stand By Me" is just one standout in the Leiber and Stoller songbook that includes such popular works as "On Broadway," "Jailhouse Rock," "Yakety Yak," "Love Potion No. 9," "Charlie Brown," "Save the Last Dance for Me," "Kansas City" and "There Goes My Baby."

They wrote for the hottest groups and singers of the day, including Elvis Presley, the Coasters, the Drifters and Peggy Lee. Versions of their songs have been recorded by the Beatles, Joni Mitchell, the Rolling Stones, Barbra Streisand and Aretha Franklin.

Even when Leiber and Stoller decided to change their style, they still wrote a hit. Peggy Lee's cabaret-style "Is That All There Is?" flew in the face of everything popular in 1969, but still went to No. 11.

Frank Sinatra recently recorded a Leiber and Stoller song written for him, "The Girls I Never Kissed."

Leiber and Stoller first met as teen-agers in Los Angeles in 1950 when they were knocking out regional hits for black artists on small labels.

Their first big national break came in 1956 when Presley did a frantic version of "Hound Dog." Leiber and Stoller originally wrote and produced the song in 1952 as a grinding, "told-you-so" blues number for Willie Mae "Big Mama" Thornton. But it was Presley who rocketed it to No. 1.

"I thought it was just a lot of noise," Leiber said of the Presley version. "And then it became No. 1 and sold 7 million copies, and I couldn't believe it. But I never thought it was great."

The pair travel between Los Angeles and New York as they pursue their latest projects, a Broadway play about a Harlem tap dancer called "Time Step," and a movie deal with 20th Century-Fox about their formative years.

"Stand By Me," from the movie of the same name, is an early 1960s tune that is enjoying a revival along with "You've Lost That Loving Feeling" from "Top Gun" and "Twist and Shout" from "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" and "Back to School."

All three songs were written by composers experimenting with what is known today as "crossover," combining different types of music, usually defined by ethnicity. The music came from such teams as Leiber and Stoller, or Carole King and Gerry Goffin or "Loving Feeling" composers Cynthia Weill and Barry Mann. The result was an appealing rush of music, with Leiber and Stoller combining rhythm and blues, Latin beats and strings for some of their most memorable work. The process spread rock around the world.

Leiber and Stoller, both 53, were both East Coast transplants to Los Angeles who separately developed an intense interest in what was then called race music — blues, jazz and boogie-woogie.

"I went to an interracial summer camp," recalled Stoller, a native of New York City. "When I was around 7, I first heard the older black kids playing an old upright piano in the barn that was the recreation hall. I loved what I heard. When they would leave, I would jup up on the piano stool and try to imitate what I heard. That's where I started."

Leiber grew up in Baltimore, near a black neighborhood. His mother ran a grocery store and he delivered kerosene and soft coal to black families.

"From very early on, when I was 6 to when I was 12 years old, I got to be part of everyday black life, and the language and the music and the food and the culture and the humor and everything else became second nature," Leiber recalled. "It was an adopted culture."

Their success with Presley, the Drifters, the Coasters and King with first Atlantic Records and then United Artists in the late '50s and '60s led to formation of their own Red Bird label in 1964. There they wrote or produced hits for such as "Leader of the Pack" and "Chapel of Love" for various girl groups.

The hits just kept coming, but Leiber and Stoller both arrived at the same conclusion by 1966. They weren't having fun anymore.

"It was growing up, getting older and not being able to write exclusively for a young audience," said Leiber. "And wanting to write what was really on our minds."

Out of that came "Is That All There Is," a Bertolt Brecht-Kurt Weill inspired tune with an enchanting string sequence arranged by Randy Newman.

As lyricist, Leiber also gets credit for some of rock's most famous funny lines, many of them culled from the Coaster's hits:

—From "Love Potion No. 9":

"I couldn't tell if it was day or night

"I started kissing everthing in sight

"But when I kissed a cop down on 34th and Vine

"He broke my little bottle of love potion Number Nine."

New Recognition To Rock Music In The Soviet Union

By ALISON SMALE
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Two years ago, when songwriter Boris Grebenshikov was still an underground rock star, he could play in Moscow only if he quietly slipped into town and performed for a few dozen fans using the pseudonym, "Radio Africa."

Since then, he and his group, Aquarium, have cut their first record with the state recording company, Melodiya. They are one of the Soviet Union's leading rock groups and recently played eight nights at a Leningrad sports hall seating 6,500. Two weeks later, they turned up in Moscow for two short sets at a cultural evening in the Manege, the nation's premier art gallery.

Grebenshikov's emergence from an underground existence barely tolerated by Leningrad officialdom to acceptance and even praise illustrates a new interest by the Soviet government in co-opting rock music, as it did jazz before it, into the structure of officially sanctioned culture.

Rock music has new status in the Soviet Union, as Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Kremlin strives to show off the modern aspects of Soviet society, probe the tastes of its youth and loosen some of the ossified structures governing the arts.

Last May, for instance, authorities promoted a rock benefit for victims of the Chernobyl nuclear disaster. With fans seated 70 yards from the stage, the occasion had little of the spontaneous wildness of a Live Aid. But foreign media were allowed right next to the performers, and came away with pictures that made Soviet rock look much like its Western counterpart.

Official promotion of rock may turn off fans who say resistance added a touch of romance to underground tunes, but it also startles those who remember when rock first reached Soviet teen-agers on endlessly retaped Beatles records.

"I remember how they dumped on the Beatles, calling them corrupters of youth," a Moscow musician recalled. "When you think of that, what is happening today is unbelievable."

In the 1970s, tame pop music with inoffensive and limp lyrics gained a measure of official acceptance.

Still, rock was largely considered taboo by the Komsomol, the communist youth organization. Melodiya issued no Western rock and ignored homespun bands that copied Western models and gradually added their own lyrics.

But groups without official sanction used state recording studios after hours to cut tapes that found their way across the Soviet Union.

Joanna Stingray, a Los Angeles rock singer, took tapes of Aquarium and three other Leningrad bands — Kino, Alisa and Strange Games — to the United States to cut the LP, "Red Wave."

In a recent interview, the 26-year-old singer said Soviet officials were initially angry that she took tapes out of the country without their permission. Now, she said, things are changing.

"They're realizing that these bands are not threatening," said Stingray, who has visited regularly since meeting Grebenshikov on a tourist trip in 1984. "It amazed me for the last three years that the authorities could feel threatened by these bands, who are not against the state."

She said authorities now seem to want a Soviet rock band to be a success in the West. A state-sanctioned group such as Autograph, which took part by satellite in last year's Live Aid concert of 1985 and was considered one of the low points of the event, won't make it with Western rock fans.

"I don't know anybody in America who's going to buy an Autograph record," said Stingray. "I do know people in America who are prepared to buy an Aquarium record."

Official Soviet promotion of rock is very different from the multi-billion dollar rock industry in the United States. Grebenshikov, whose music ranges from fusion to folksy tunes recalling early Bob Dylan or Simon and Garfunkel, is presented as a poet rather than a rock singer and guitarist.

Soviet poet Andrei Voznesensky, who is promoting Grebenshikov, recently described the spread of rock as "the birth of a new folklore."

"The whole country, the young in the country are turning to these electric guitars," Voznesensky said.

Young people can still find themselves at odds with the Komsomol, and though grateful for officials' interest in rock, they are critical of their approach.

At a recent debate at Moscow's "rock laboratory," a club set up last January for amateur bands, rock critic Artem Troitsky drew applause when noting that state-run television has never shown the British band, Pink Floyd, or other well-known Western groups who enjoy immense popularity here.

Instead, he said, it promotes fluffy pop from obscure Western bands known only to Soviet television audiences.

Officials also dislike dancing at rock concerts and frown upon fans who dress punk or in the leather of heavy metal.

"The wearing of crosses is not forbidden by any law," the Moscow youth newspaper recently said. "But we are atheists. And we consider a cross in the ear of a young nonbeliever to be a kind of challenge to social opinion."

Establishes Super Cinema

By ROBERT J. WIELAARD
Associated Press Writer

GHENT, Belgium (AP) — Albert Bert wants to make moviegoing fun again in Belgium, so he developed one of the world's largest, most comfortable and technically most advanced cinemas.

At a time of falling movie attendance in many countries, Bert's "Decascoop" shows how cinemas can survive growing competition in the entertainment business through innovation.

The Decascoop seats 3,600 people in 12 theaters whose capacity ranges from 70 to 580. They show anything from "Bambi" to "Rambo" to "Debbie Does Dallas."

In the squeaky clean lobby, running the length of a football field, there is a long stand-up bar serving coffee, soft drinks, beer, wine and cocktails. There are also sunken lounges with easy chairs and cozy lighting.

Overhead, banks of silent video screens show the movies playing in each of the 12 cinemas and tell customers at intermission how much time they have left to return to their seats. In a corner, customers can play video games. In another, a 1954 projector shows trailers — short films made up of scenes from coming attractions — on a wall.

As they exit, customers go through a still uncompleted basement mall in the Decascoop featuring shops and pubs.

"We start showing movies at 3 p.m.," Bert said. "But on weekends, the hall is already filled with people an hour before the shows begin. They like to meet here and have a drink before seeing a movie."

His Decascoop opened in 1981 in this western Belgian city of 200,000. There were 10 cinemas then. Now there are three, in addition to the Decascoop.

Bert has also invested nearly $12 million in another large cinema house consisting of 15 theaters with 5,000 seats in Brussels, due to open in May 1988. It may be expanded to 20 theaters, he said.

The yet unnamed project will copy the formula that works so well for him in Ghent. This year, he expects almost 1.4 million customers, up from 1.1 million in 1985 and almost double the 1981 attendance figure.

The Decascoop theaters are built side-by-side on a very sharp incline offering an unobstructed view. "Usually, operators don't want to build such steep theaters for if they go bust, the space is hard to sell," said Bert.

He offers unusual comforts to lure viewers from their television sets: free parking, wide seats with double arm rests and generous leg room, a state-of-the-art sound system, German-designed projectors and wide screens.

The Decascoop's projection room is about 110 yards long. The 12 projectors are run by a computer requiring only two projector operators.

Bert's prices are the same as elsewhere, about $4. He must sell up to 15,000 tickets a week to break even. In 1985, he averaged 21,000 a week and last Easter, he set a one-day record of 12,000 customers.

His rising attendance figures contrast with those in several European nations, according to industry figures. In West Germany, attendance fell to 104 million in 1985, from 141 million in 1980. In Spain it went from 176 million to 100 million in those years. French movie attendance in 1985 was 172 million, just below the 1980 level.

Bert said cinemas can compete with home videos if they offer attractive alternatives. "People can dance at home, yet they still go out. Television simply kills time."

He likes to add some Hollywood flair to his cinema business.

When "Rambo" opened at the Decascoop, a body builder, in battle garb and wielding a bazooka, took tickets. Mounted cowboys dueled in the lobby on the opening night of the Western, "Silverado."

And on the opening night of "Stop Making Sense," the concert movie of the rock group Talking Heads, viewers were invited to boogie on a special dance stage.

In the Decascoop's basement mall, Bert plans to open a pub called Rick's Cafe, modeled after the one in Humphrey Bogart's "Casablanca."

Australian Films At NCMA

RALEIGH — Eight films from "Down Under," representing some of the work to come from Australian filmmakers in the 1970s and 1980s, will be screened on Fridays, Jan. 9 through Feb. 27 at the North Carolina Museum of Art. Showings will be at 7 and at 9:15 p.m.

Series tickets for the eight films are priced at $19 with single tickets priced at $3 each at the door.

Films, and the dates they will be shown, are:

• Jan. 9 — "My Brilliant Career" (1980) directed by Gillian Armstrong, stars Judy Davis as a young woman who overcomes poverty and pressure to fulfill her dream of becoming a writer.

• Jan. 16 — "The Man from Snowy River" (1982) is Australia's all-time highest grossing film. Based on the epic poem of a young bushman's passage into manhood, it stars Kirk Douglas in the dual roles of a crusty old occentric and a cattle rancher, with outstanding performances by young Australian actors.

• Jan. 23 — A 1979 film, "Breaker Morant," was a winner at the Cannes Film Festival. The film is based on the true story of three volunteer soldiers who are court-martialed for murdering prisoners, under orders, during the Boer War.

• Jan 30, Feb. 6 and Feb. 13 — Three of the films in the series are ones by Peter Weir. The first of the three, "Picnic at Hanging Rock," of 1979, was the turning point in the development of Australia's new cinema. It centers around the mysterious disappearance of a group of schoolgirls during a picnic and explores the strange reverberations of the incident. The other two Weir films to be shown are "The Year of Living Dangerously" on Feb. 6 and "The Last Wave" on Feb. 13.

• Feb. 20 — Nicholas Roeg's 1971 film, "Walkabout" is the earliest of the eight films being shown.

• Feb. 27 — Concluding the series is Paul Cox's "Man of Flowers." Cox's eccentric satire, which is not considered appropriate for children, was nominated for five Australian Film Institute Awards in 1983.

Actor Puzzled By Film's Reviews

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The reviews for "The Mosquito Coast" are in, and the star of the movie, Harrison Ford, is shaking his head in wonderment.

"I don't think I've ever seen critical reaction to a serious film like this," he said. "So many of the critics have rejected the character out of hand.

"It's a move that surprised me very much. I would have thought that this character would have been more admired because of his unusual characteristics and the fact that he is not a normal film hero. It seems to have created more confusion than admiration.

"I must say, however, that I find audiences have a different relationship to the film than many of the critics. ... The emotional reaction to the film is very strong."

The character Ford was talking about is Allie Fox, a brilliant tinkerer who leads his family away from the pollution of the American environment and values into a jungle adventure that is at first joyful. Then it turns tragic as Fox reacts to adversity with increasingly erratic and destructive behavior.

Ford suspects that some of the adverse response to "The Mosquito Coast" comes from those who, like young River Phoenix in the film, have had similarly destructive fathers.

Allie Fox is 180 degrees removed from the swashbuckling Han Solo and the devil-may-care Indiana Jones, which he played in five films that rank among the eight biggest grossers of all time. He also broke away from last year's adventure image as the police detective in "Witness," which won his first Academy Award nomination.

"I have always tried to do different things," he said. "From the very beginning when 'Star Wars' was a success, I did try to play different characters in different kinds of films with different (filmmakers). It seems to me the logical ambition of an actor.

"What sense is it to be an actor if you play the same thing over and over again? You need to challenge and broaden yourself."

Ford was doing his duty as star of a difficult-to-sell movie, submitting to interviews in a Century Plaza Hotel suite. He does not enjoy the publicity whirl, preferring the life he and wife, Melissa Matheson, spend at their spread in Wyoming. They are expecting their first child; Ford has sons who are 18 and 20 from his first marriage.

"I spend about half the year in Wyoming," the 44-year-old actor said. "It's not so much a matter of guaranteeing sanity. I could maintain sanity here, or something like it.

"It's something more than that. It's a life I prefer to live. I don't like cities; I prefer the country. I prefer the simplicity of the life I live up there. At the same time, I realize I need the jazz and the excitement of working in the city every once in a while as well."

Harrison Ford was born to an Irish-Catholic father and Russian-Jewish mother in Chicago and grew up in suburban Park Ridge and Morton Grove. He majored in philosophy for four years at Ripon College in Wisconsin without earning a degree, finding that roles in campus plays helped relieve his basic shyness.

A Columbia Pictures scout spotted him in a Laguna Beach, Calif., playhouse, and he was signed to a $150-per-week contract in the waning days of the studio system. After Columbia dropped him, Ford drifted into television, working as a carpenter during slack periods. George Lucas cast him as the out-of-town hot rodder in "American Graffiti," then gave Ford the role of the intrepid pilot, Han Solo, in "Star Wars."

He agreed to doing "The Mosquito Coast" after reading Paul Schrader's script. He recognized the challenge of playing Allie Fox, and he had the added inducement of working with Australian Peter Weir, his director in "Witness."

How much of Harrison Ford is reflected in Allie Fox?

"There's Harrison Ford in every character I play. I have nothing to work with but the experience of Harrison Ford, the psychology of Harrison Ford. You have to translate it into another character. You have to make that character predominate. There's a lot of me (in Allie Fox), yeah."

He admitted that the character was more complicated than any he attempted before but added: "The job of acting is no more difficult in a more complicated or a less complicated part, not for me, at least."

The problem with Fox, he said, "is that he's proving himself in a world where he doesn't have to prove himself. He has the love of his family, but he is continually abusing that love, brokering that love, trying to manage that love. He's a complicated, difficult character, but no more unusual than some people (meaning critics) believe."

Ford was asked if he still pounds nails.

"Yes, once in a while — on my own projects," he said with a smile.

COMMENTS ON REACTION — Harrison Ford stars as Allie Fox, a man possessed with the dream of escaping from the corrupting influences of the modern world to a jungle utopia in "The Mosquito Coast." "I don't think I've ever seen critical reaction to a serious film like this," he said. "So many critics have rejected the character out of hand." (AP Laserphoto)

Films By Women At Duke

DURHAM — The Duke University Institute of the Arts continues its 1986-87 Festival of Women in the Arts with an eight-week film series featuring international films by women directors.

"Women in Motion: The International Picture," will include films from France, Czechoslovakia, Hungary, Germany, Brazil, Angola, China and the United States.

All screenings will be at 5:30 p.m. on Sunday afternoons, beginning Jan. 11 in the Film Theater of the Bryan Center, Duke University West Campus.

The series, which are free and open to the public, is being cordinated by Dr. Fabienne Worth, who has taught film studies for several years at Duke University and at UNC-Chapel Hill. The presentation of the series is made possible in part by a grant from the North Carolina Humanities Committee.

The schedule of films by women directors for the next eight weeks are:

• Jan. 11 — "Aurelia Steiner," director, Marguerite Duras, 1979, France; and "Daisies," director Vera Chytilova, 1966, Czechoslovakia.

• Jan. 18 — "Diaries for my Children," director, Marta Meszaros, 1984, Hungary.

• Jan. 25 — "Why Not?", director Colline Serreau, 1977, France.

• Feb. 1 — "Germany Pale Mother," director Helma Sanders-Brahms, 1980, Germany.

• Feb. 8 — "Sea of Roses," director Ana Carolina, Brazil (co-sponsored with the Duke Center for International Studies).

• Feb. 15 — "Sambizanga," director Sarah Maldoror, 1979, Angola.

• Feb. 22 — "A Good Woman," director Liang Jin Fu Nu, 1985, China.

• March 1 — "The Man Who Envied Women," director Yvonne Rainer, 1985, USA.

For more details, interested persons are to call the Duke Institute of the Arts at 684-6654.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: THE SCULPTOR PROUDLY HAD FEATS OF CLAY.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: T equals G

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Horoscope — From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Jan. 4

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You may feel a little depression today. It is necessary to rise above this to find new ideas. Tonight it would be wise to avoid any sudden changes.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): You may feel tied down, but this helps you work out some private plan. See some friends tonight.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): A friend may be disappointing, but later other friends can bring much pleasure.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Contact a prominent person who can extend a favor to you. Use tact and diplomacy for best results.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): You may feel frustrated today, but you can go out and garner the information you need.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Organizing your ideas may be difficult, but don't give up and soon you will get good results.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You may find it difficult to contact one who is important, but later you can see this person quite easily.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Wait until the afternoon before planning your activities for the new week. Take any health treatments you need.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Handle the duties around the house that you're responsible for. Make sure you drive carefully.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Avoid any arguments at home. Take time to enjoy some outside amusement that is worthwhile.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be very serious in your studies and get excellent results. Get into hobbies you like and enjoy them.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Come out of that slump and do something to improve your situation. Make reparis to your property.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Your wishes may seem hard to obtain, but later you can get them. Take no risks concerning your reputation.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she may appear not to be able to acquire knowledge, but actually is learning lessons more thoroughly than others and will retain whatever is learned. Upon reaching maturity, your progeny can become very successful at whatever profession is chosen.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Jan. 5

GENERAL TENDENCIES: You have some good thoughts on how to obtain your long-desired aims. Today is not the day to ask for favors from those in positions of power.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Look to an older person for good ideas on how to gain your aims. Don't rely on any bigwigs.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Study your outstanding bills and plan how best to pay them. Don't argue with your mate.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): An outside ally can give you the information you need for some new enterprise. Keep out of trouble.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): An associate will be irked if you try to handle business affairs in a different manner. Be cooperative.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Get into pleasures that are enjoyable and forget drab, dull duties today. Revive your lagging spirits thusly.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): You find it less difficult to handle affairs at home, so forget outside recreation for the time being.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Get busy and handle correspondence you have been permitting to pile up. Avoid arguments at home.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Avoid a talkative friend who could keep you from handling important matters. Study how to improve your holdings.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Get into personal affairs. Be sure to avoid an argument between a higher-up and a co-worker.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can make better plans for the future. Keep your personal ambitions to yourself. Enjoy company later.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Avoid friends who could cause you to spend too much money. Study your personal wishes for the future.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Get into the outside activities that can help you to gain your fine ambitions. Show off your abilities.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be productive, but may be interested in too may things and not complete any of them. A good education, however, should be provided since much success will be possible when finally getting down to business. A lover of music and arts here.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

If you do something wrong at the table, you don't mind being punished for it. But when you do no more than take a normal action and find that it boomerangs, you have a right to complain. Not that it helps . . .

East's overcall of one no trump certainly can't be faulted by this department. Looking at six sure tricks in his own hand, South expressed grave doubts about East's ability to make that contract. West ran to his cheapest four-card suit and South ended the auction by bidding the heart game.

West attacked with a diamond and declarer, looking at three losers in the black suits, also had to contend with possibly finding a haven for his fourth diamond, for the opening lead certainly looked like a doubleton.

Declarer won the first trick in hand and drew trumps in three rounds. Had there been no opposition bidding, declarer almost surely would have led a spade either to the jack or the king. But East had to have the ace-queen for his overcall, so declarer continued with a spade to the nine. When that fetched the queen from East, the rest was a pianola.

Declarer won the diamond return in dummy and led the king of spades, ruffing out the ace when East covered. There was still another high diamond on the table to serve as an entry to the jack of spades, on which declarer parked his diamond loser.

It is true that, on this particular hand, East met a cruel and unjust fate for doing the right thing. That does not mean, however, that you should spurn your natural action just because you might get burned once in a while.

New 3-Area Gallery Opening At NCMA On January 10

NEW GALLERY ITEM — A terracotta dog of the Classic Period from Colima, West Mexico, c. 500-1000 A.D., is one of the items to be on display in the new African, Oceanic and New World Gallery of the North Carolina Museum of Art. The allery will open to the public on Jan. 10. The item is a gift of Mr. and Mrs. Mace Neufeld. (Photo courtesy of NCMA)

By SHARON BROOM
N.C. Museum of Art

RALEIGH - The North Carolina Museum of Art will open its gallery on African, Oceanic and New World art on Saturday.

The initial installation will comprise about 55 African works, 35 pre-Columbian objects from Central and South America, and ten works from South Pacific cultures, all from the museum's collections.

The 4,500-square-foot area is located on the museum's main level adjacent to the Classical Galery. Although objects from the collections were occasionally on view at the museum's former downtown location, the new gallery will mark their first permanent installation.

It will be the last remaining permanent collection gallery to be completed in the museum's new building, which opened in April, 1983.

The African collection includes examples of West African art such as masks, headdresses and figures. Of particular interest are a "Pair of Twin Figures, (Ibeji)" from the Yoruba of Nigeria; a "Pair of Antelope Headpieces (Tji Wara)" from the Bamana of Mali, and a "Sawfish Headpiece" from the Ibo of Nigeria.

Sculpture and ceramics of pre-Columbian cultures are featured in the initial New World installation. The collection is especially strong in the art of Mexico and Guatemala; a focal point of the gallery will be the "Monumental Figure of a Priestess," a clay sculpture from Vera Cruz, Mexico.

Objects from New Ireland, New Guinea and the New Hebrides, including masks and other ceremonial objects, will be on view in the Oceanic area. Of special interest will be a "Malanggan Totem Pole" from New Ireland and a "Slit Gong" from the New Hebrides which stands nearly ten feet high.

The opening of the new gallery is made possible by contributions from the James G. Hanes Memorial Fund/Foundation and the John Wesley and Anna Hodgin Hanes Foundation.

Many of the objects have been given to the museum by Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hanes of Winston-Salem, the Hanes Corporation and the James G. Hanes Memorial Fund. Gordon Hanes is chairman of the museum board of trustees.

Related lectures, performances and films will be scheduled during the winter and spring by the museum's education department.

For more information, call 833-1935.

Pitt County is located approximately 30 miles inland from the coastal sounds, 80 miles from the Atlantic Ocean and roughly 150 miles from the Appalachian Mountains.

NCMA Arts Programs

RALEIGH — A series of free Sunday afternoon programs has been planned at the North Carolina Museum of Art in conjunction with the opening of the African, Oceanic and New World Gallery on Jan. 10.

The programs will all begin at 3 pm. Programs planned are:

• Jan. 11 — Dr. Alen Wardwell, who assisted in selecting the objects for the new gallery, will speak on "An Introduction to the African Collection at the North Carolina Museum of Art." Wardwell is director of the Noguchi Museum in New York City.

• Jan. 18 — Chuck Davis and the African-American Dance Ensemble will present a performance. Artists-in-residence at the American Dance Festival, Durham, they appear courtesy of its year-round Community Services Progam with support from the National Endowment for the Arts.

• Jan. 25 — Professor Christoper Roy of the University of Iowa will speak on "The Dance of the Spirits: Art and Life in West Africa."

• Feb. 22 — Two films on African art will be shown: "Black African Heritage: The Congo, Parts I and II" and "Black Genesis: The Art of Tribal Africa."

A number of related workshops for children are also scheduled.

Additionally, the museum and the N.C. Zoological Park in Asheboro are planning two weekends of programs, "African Animals/African Art," in March, with details to be announced later.

For more information, call 833-1935.

ENDOWMENT GRANTS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Endowment for the Arts recently announced 33 new grants totaling $488,000 from its Inter-Arts Program.

The funds are to assist arts service organizations with projects which provide professional artists and arts organizations throughout the country with information

Illumination Show Is Next For Gray Gallery

From Jan. 16 to Feb. 14, East Carolina University's Gray Art Gallery will host "Structures of Illumination: Lamplight," an exhibition curated by gallery director Perry Nesbitt.

Featuring 40 works by 16 nationally-known and emerging artists, the exhibition focuses on artistic beauty inherent in functional sources of light — primarily lamplight.

Participating artists include Isamu Noguchi, whose work has been exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and represented the United States in this year's Venice Biennale, and British artist Alistair Noble, whose pieces include the use of light reflected from a television screen.

North Carolina artists Marvin Jensen and J. Harris Nathan will also display artwork in the exhibition, which is partially funded by the North Carolina Arts Council.

On Jan. 20 at 7:30 p.m., Denise Domergue, author of Artist's Design Furniture, will present a slide lecture on "The Artist's Approach to Furniture." The lecture will be held in Jenkins Auditorium, followed by a reception at the Gray Gallery.

The gallery is located in Jenkins Fine Arts Center, with hours from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Saturday and from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Wednesday.

For additional information about the exhibition contact Susanne Neilson at 757-6336.

'New Forms In Glass'

WINSTON-SALEM — "Liquid Light — New Forms in Glass," is an exhibition of studio glass sculptures and vessels currently being featured in the Gallery of Piedmont Craftsmen through Feb. 8.

Exhibitors at the show who are members of the Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. with work being exhibited are: Gary Beecham, Paul Bendzunas, William Bernstein, Jak Brewer, George Bucquet, Gilbert Johnson, John Kuhn, Robert Levin, John Nygren, Mark Russell, Jr. and the team of John Littleton and Kate Vogel.

Artists with work on view in the invited guests category are: Mark Boutte, Ken Carder, Stephen Dee Edwards, Richard Jolley, Walter Lieberman, Harvey Littleton, Tommie Rush, Jack Schmidt, David Wilson and the team of George and Joan Goodyear.

The studio glass movement in America is little more than two decades old, and is characterized by experimentation, innovation and a high regard without slavish imitation of the older European glass traditions.

Several artists are making their debut showing in this exhibition.

Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. is a non-profit organization which represents 315 craftsmen from throughout the Southeast.

Gallery and crafts shop hours are: Mondays-Friday, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturdays 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., and Sundays, 1 to 5 p.m.

The PCI Gallery is located at 411 North Cherry Street, downtown Winston-Salem, adjacent to the Winston Plaza Stouffers Hotel.

N.C. Arts Council Seeking Employees

By MEG GUNKEL
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Arts Council is seeking artists for positions with the Visiting Artist Program and Artists-in-School Program. The application deadline is Feb. 1 for jobs beginning next fall.

Positions available include full-time and semester-long placements in communities throughout the state.

The Visiting Artist Program, which the Arts Council co-sponsors with the Department of Community Colleges, places artists at technical and community colleges to serve 12-month, county-wide residencies. Salaries range from $13,500 to $22,000. Lecture-demonstrations, workshops, exhibitions, readings, concerts and productions are activities conducted by the artists for various community groups.

Elementary and secondary school residencies are offered through the Artists-in-Schools Program. Artists serve as educational and artistic resources to the students and faculty in a school or system. Salaries average $100 a day to $8,000 per 18-week semester.

Applications are encouraged in all art forms. Professionals in the appropriate discipline screen the applications and auditons may be required. Selection is made by the participating schools and colleges. A masters degree or equivalent training and experience in the applicant's art form is required.

"The artist in residency program allows artists in different stages of their careers to explore new approaches to the creative process while enriching the lives of citizens throughout the stte," said Adrienne Witherspoon, director of the Artist-in-Residence program at the N.C. Arts Council.

For more information and application forms for these programs, contact Ms. Witherspoon at the N.C. Arts Council, Department of Cultural Resources, Raleigh, N.C., 27611 or call 733-7897. Assistance in completing application forms is available.

Art Trip By Museum

RALEIGH — The North Carolina Art Society will sponsor a tour to Washington, D.C. Feb. 7-10. Highlights of the trip will be the exhibition "Matisse: The Early Years in Nice 1916-1930" at the National Gallery of Art. Lodgings will be in the recently restored Willard Hotel, a Washington landmark.

Among the stops on the tour will be a new exhibition at the Corcoran Gallery, "Views and Vision: American Landscape Pictures Before 1830;" tours of the National Portrait Gallery and the National Museum of American Art, and a visit to Dumbarton Oaks, a Georgetown mansion which houses Byzantine and pre-Columbian collections.

Deadline for reservations is Jan. 23. Cost of the trip is $400 ($615 for single occupancy). The tour is limited to museum members of the N.C. Museum of Art, however, anyone may join and be eligible to take the trip. Membership is $25 for individual/couple membership, $45 for families and $15 for students or senior citizens.

For more information, call the membership office at 833-1935.

David Parker Show Set For Tarboro

TARBORO — David Parker, professor of art at Chowan College, Murfreesboro, will be the featured artist exhibiting in the Hobson Pitman Memorial Gallery of the Blount-Bridgers House in Tarboro during the months of January and February.

A reception, free and open to the public, will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday.

A native of Washington, D.C., Parker moved to North Carolina at the age of 12. His early art training was at Campbell College and he graduated from East Carolina University, where he majored in commercial art.

After graduation, he joined the Army and while in service won first place honors in three Texas-Oklahoma art shows and was represented in an All-Army national show. On completion of Army service, he worked as a commercial artist in Raleigh, then moved to Australia, where he taught art and studied at the National Gallery Art School in Melbourne.

Following two years in Australia, he returned home and re-entered ECU where he earned the M.F.A. degree in 1972. Parker has also studied art with Greenville artists Francis and Sarah Blakeslee.

For one year, Parker taught art in the Greenville City Schools and in 1973 accepted the position of commercial art and print-making teacher at Chowan College.

He has shown his work in numerous one-man and group shows in North Carolina and at one show in New York. He is also the recipient of several first place awards. His work is in several collections in eastern North Carolina and in private collections.

Since 1979 Parker has been head of the Division of Art at Chowan College.

His show in Tarboro includes landscapes and still lifes in an impressionistic style. It will remain on view through Feb. 22.

Hours at the Hobson Pittman Memorial Gallery are from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, and from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sundays. For more information, call 823-4159.

Arts Council Workshops

RALEIGH — "Building an Effective Arts Organization" is the subject to be covered in annual one-day workshop sessions to be held during January and February in six North Carolina towns and cities. Time of each workshop is from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dates and sites of the workshops are:

- Jan. 9, Asheville.
- Jan. 10, Sylva.
- Jan. 16 or 17, Charlotte.
- Jan. 23 or 24, Wilmington.
- Jan. 30 or 31, Raleigh.
- Feb. 6 or 7, Ahoskie.

The workshop being held nearest to Greenville, on Feb. 6 or 7 is in Ahoskie and will be at The Gallery Theater, 117 West Main Street in Ahoskie.

Workshop leader will be Danielle Withrow, director of the Community Development Section for the North Carolina Arts Council.

Fee for a one-day workshop, which includes coffee, lunch and workshop materials, is $15 for member of the N.C. Association of Arts Council or $20 to non-members.

Checks are to be made payable to the N.C. Association of Arts Council and sent to: The N.C. Association of Arts Councils, P.O. Box 1366, Raleigh, N.C., 27602.

For more details, call 834-1411.

PARKER PAINTING — An impessionistic-style oil painting of trees, people and a parking lot is the work of artist David Parker, head of art at Chowan College. An exhibition of his work is going on view Tuesday at the Hobson Pittman Memorial Gallery of the Blount-Bridgers House in Tarboro, with a free, open to the public reception from 5 to 7 p.m.

Stamp Sought For First Black Grad From West Point

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

THOMASVILLE, Ga. (AP) — A gray marble obelisk in the Old Magnolia Cemetery marks the grave of Henry Ossian Flipper, a former slave who was drummed out of the Army under questionable circumstances after becoming the U.S. Military Academy's first black graduate.

Flipper's body was returned to his birthplace in 1978 from an unmarked grave in Atlanta. He died there in 1940, following a 58-year struggle to clear his name and a distinguished career as a surveyor, mining engineer and land claims expert.

Through the efforts of Ray MacColl, a school administator in nearby Pelham, and other supporters, an Army board agreed to review Flipper's court-martial on charges that he embezzled $3,791 from a frontier outpost in 1882.

Flipper, who maintained his innocence throughout his life, finally was vindicated when the Army awarded him an honorable discharge posthumously in 1976.

MacColl said he became obsessed with exonerating Flipper after learning about his life during a history course at Valdosta (Ga.) State College in 1972. While preparing arguments to appeal Flipper's dishonorable discharge, MacColl quit his teaching job for a year and took occasional odd jobs to finance his research.

Later, he assisted Flipper's relatives in moving the body to Thomasville, where it was buried with full military honors.

Last year, MacColl asked the Postmaster General to issue a commemorative stamp, recognizing Flipper's achievements in Mexico and the Southwest, following his court-martial.

"As an educator, I believe boys and girls need heroes to study," said MacColl, 41. "The commemorative stamp would serve as a reminder of Flipper's importance to American history and as a lofty example to young people."

Ralph Stewart, a Post Office spokesman in Washington, said a citizens stamp advisory committee meets every other month to review the hundreds of commemorative stamp requests received each year. The panel makes recommendations to the postmaster general, who has authority to issue postage stamps.

In his request, MacColl included more than 100 letters of recommendation from prominent educators, state and federal lawmakers in all 50 states, two former presidents and civic leaders.

"I feel we're going to get the stamp because the application has such widespread support," said MacColl, 41, a native of Chester, Pa. "While he is sort of one of the unsung heroes of our country, I think his contributions are finally coming to light."

Born in Thomasville on March 21, 1856, Flipper was taken to Atlanta with his parents shortly before the Civil War. After the war, his shoemaker father became prosperous enough to hire the wife of a former Confederate officer to teach Flipper to read and write.

In 1872, he became the fifth black candidate accepted at West Point, where blacks were harassed by their white classmates and barred from all social events, MacColl said.

The other four cadets dropped out, leaving Flipper to become the academy's first black graduate on June 14, 1877.

As a newly commissioned second lieutenant, Flipper was sent to Fort Sill, Okla., where he designed and supervised a drainage project known as "Flipper's Ditch," which was dedicated as a historic landmark in 1977. It drained several ponds that had become a breeding ground for mosquitos linked to annual malaria outbreaks at the frontier post.

Assigned to Fort Davis, Texas, in 1880, he was named acting assistant quartermaster, a job that gave him the responsibility for supplies such as water, food and clothing. Two years later, when Flipper failed to report immediately the disappearance of the $3,791 in Army funds from his trunk, a harsh commanding officer accused him of trying to replace the money with donations from friends in town.

At his court-martial, Flipper was cleared on the embezzlement charges, but convicted of conduct unbecoming an officer and dishonorably discharged, despite a recommendation for a lesser sentence from the Army's judge advocate general and the secretary of war.

"I believe there was a prejudicial climate," MacColl said. "I think Flipper was an example of blacks trying to assume positions of leadership and ... prejudice prevailed."

By 1886, Flipper was the chief engineer for a land company with vast holdings in Mexico, and the following year he opened an engineering office in Nogales, Ariz.

He was the government's only witness in a land grant case that saved the property of hundreds of landowners, and later served as a mining engineer for several gold, silver and oil companies in the United States, Mexico and Venezuela.

His fluency in Spanish and French enabled him to translate land claims in the Southwest and at the Spanish Archives in Madrid, and Secretary of the Interior Albert Fall referred to Flipper as "my right hand man and advisor."

Flipper wrote two biographical books, edited a set of books on the mining laws of Mexico, wrote historical articles and edited an all-white newspaper in Nogales, MacColl said.

Throughout his career, he insisted on being addressed as "lieutenant" and was unrelenting in his efforts to have his dishonorable discharge reversed, MacColl said.

Author Lampoons Religious Show

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Steve Lail, author of two satirical booklets on television evangelists Jim and Tammy Bakker, watches the PTL show religiously and irreligiously.

Religiously, because he feels compelled to watch the show every day from the Hickory bed where he is confined with paralysis. He even tapes it to watch at night when he can't sleep.

Irreligiously, because his satires are so fierce that some stores have pulled them off the shelves.

"I'm hooked on it — I wish I could get away from it," said Lail, 42. "It's a hobby I'd like to give up. But then, if they went off the air, we'd both be out of a job."

Last year, Lail wrote and published "Six Flags Over PTL — Fun with Jim & Tammy." He just came out with a sequel entitled "Six More Flags Over PTL." The cover features the Bakkers and Mickey and Minnie Mouse.

He's sold a total of about 8,000 booklets for a profit of about $5,000. He figures he's earned about 50 cents an hour for dictating the books into a tape recorder, editing the typed copy and conferring with illustrator Dell Siler of Radford, Va. Siler, who also can't use his hands, drew the cartoons with a pen held between his teeth.

"The Almighty called me to write this book — the almighty dollar," Lail said.

Lail grew up in Hickory and worked all through high school for the Hickory Daily Record. The newspaper sent him to the University of North Carolina on a journalism scholarship. After graduating in 1967, he taught English in Virginia Beach, worked for a radio station and published four volumes of poetry.

In 1978, someone pushed him down a flight of stairs. The incident, one he still doesn't want to talk about, left him paralyzed from the neck down. He does have 50 percent use of his right hand, enabling him to push the buttons necessary to watch TV and use a tape recorder. While most movement is gone, sensation remains, and the feeling is mostly pain.

In 1980, after spending two years in hospitals, Lail returned to Hickory.

"I was looking for answers and I was questioning everything I believed in," he said. "Jim and Tammy seemed to have all the answers, and I bought it lock, stock and barrel. Over the years, I came back to reality and decided I'd be this way 'til a cure was found, rather than depending on some magic coming over the TV."

Lail said he was angered by the Bakkers' repeated requests for money and their opulent lifestyle, but mostly by their insistence that their way is the only way to God.

"It's the propaganda," he said. "They peddle ignorance. ... If you can figure out why professional wrestlers are successful, you can figure out PTL."

The books grew out of a humor column Lail wrote for the Hickory paper in an Ann Landers format with written questions and satirical answers.

The Bakkers aren't upset by the satire, said Neil Eskelin, spokesman for the Heritage Village Church, headquartered in Fort Mill, S.C. The organization oversees the PTL Television Network and the TV show, which used to be called the "PTL Club" but now is called "Jim and Tammy."

"When people are public figures, anyone can write anything they want to about them," Eskelin said. "When it comes to Jim and Tammy, they have no problem with what he's writing. ... But as we analyze the work, it's just very poor writing. It's just not quality work. We have seen a lot of good humor in editorials around the country."

The show reaches 88 percent of all TV households in all 50 states. Some 6 million people visit the Heritage USA recreation and retreat complex every year, Eskelin said.

The books have provoked a negative response from PTL supporters. The Harris-Teeter supermarket chain pulled them from the shelves about two weeks ago in response to complaints, said president Bob Goodale.

"It was offensive to them," he said. "If there was an equal demand for the book ... we'd reconsider. We just wouldn't want our actions to imply that we're endorsing one side or the other. The sales were not that impressive anyway, and the demand didn't seem very high."

Some clergymen have called Lail to complain. Others seemed to share his disdain for TV evangelism but were reluctant to criticize it publicly or draw attention to it.

Some people have written angry letters, and Lail gets phone calls about the books every day, some from people who say he is offending God.

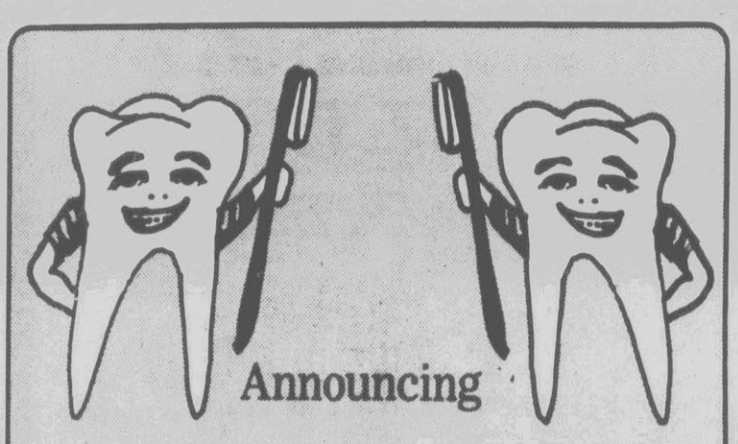

Lectures On Germany Set

RALEIGH — "Germany: Great Destinations" is the title of a lecture series each Wednesday in January and February at 8 p.m. at the North Carolina Museum of Art. The lectures will be given by Dr. Rebecca Martin, senior program coordinator at the museum, who will illustrate the lectures with slides from her travels to the major German centers of art and culture.

The schedule is:

- Jan. 7 — Berlin, divided city that is home to many of the world's great masterpieces of art.
- Jan. 14 — "Ports of Call: Hamburg and Lubeck."
- Jan. 21 — "Roman Trier and Cologne on the Rhine."
- Jan. 28 — "Freiburg: A Black Forest Discovery."
- Feb. 4 — "Oberammergau and the Fabulous Alpine Country of 'Mad Ludwig.'"
- Feb. 11 — "Incomparable Munich, the Heart of Bavaria."
- Feb. 18 — "From Riemenschneider to Rococo in Wurzburg."
- Feb. 25 — "Nurenburg of the Mastersingers."

Tickets are $25 for the eight lectures. Single tickets at the door will be $4. For more details call 833-1935.

Albemarle Region Target For Grants

GREENSBORO — The Albemarle region of North Carolina has been targeted as a priority of the North Carolina Humanities Committee in awarding grant funds during 1987.

The NCHC is the state program of the National Endowment for the Humanities and award grants to non-profit organizations to sponsor educational programs for adult audiences.

Janice Faulkner, chairperson of the NCHC and director of the Regional Development Institute at East Caroloina Univrsity, explained that the NCHC targeted the Albemarle region for several reasons.

"As the oldest area of North Carolina, the Albemarle region is ideal for public humanities programs that will explore the history, heritage, values, culture and issues of the region," she said.

"The number of proposals being submitted from the Albemarle region, however, has been low over the last few years, so the committee initiated the Albemarle Project to identify and encourge groups to take advantage of NCHC funding."

Programs can address a vareity of topics. "The primary goal of the NCHC is to fund programs that allow adults to use history, literature, philosophy and other branches of the humanities to make sense of their world," Faulkner said.

"Topics can range from our colonial heritage to Southern writers and their works to economic development and land use."

Any non-profit educational, civic or service organization in the Albemarle region is eligible to apply for grant funds.

The average grant is $3,000 to $5,000, and funds are used to pay for direct program expenses. The next deadline for grants requesting over $1,000 is Feb. 1, 1987.

For more information about the Albemarle Project and the North Carolina Humanities Committee, contact Mary Hix, 215 Brandon Ave., Tarboro, N.C., 27866, tel. 823-3237 or the NCHC office, 112 Foust Bldg., UNCG, Greensboro, N.C., 27412, tel 334-5325.

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By Meredith Foltz

For your New Year reading, these new Sheppard Memorial Library books offer a look back on the world before 1800.

"The Age of Agony" is Guy Williams's examination of the art of healing, c. 1700-1800, principally in England. Would-be healers started off at a disadvantage because people, especially city dwellers, lived in such unsanitary conditions. Surgeons' tools were primitive and their understanding of health and disease had changed little from medieval times.

From cradle to grave, life in the 18th century was characterized by pain and unpleasantness. Childbirth was an unpredictable agony. Infants, already prey to a variety of discomforts and deficiences, were subjected to practices such as swaddling, which in turn triggered fits. Treatment of illness by blood-letting, amputation, and other means hardly improved the patient.

Williams uses contemporary accounts from doctors and patients to portray hospitals, surgery, the handling of mental illness, military medicine, and aging and death in the 1700s. The many ailments of people were golden opportunities for entrepreneurs, and quack offerings included London's Grand Temple of Health and Hymen which feature the pregnancy-inducing Celestial Bed.

Research into the true nature of disease and injury was difficult, and conclusions which advanced accurate knowledge were often scorned. The barbarous practices and ill health described in "The Age of Agony" make the reader appreciative of the overall good health of today's populace and the astounding development of medical care in only the last 200 years.

• Pulitzer Prize winner William Goetzmann is the author of "New Lands, New Men: America and the Second Great Age of Discovery." Goetzmann's topic is exploration during the 1600s and 1700s, especially in relation to America.

Spurred by the Enlightenment's ideals of science and progress, Europeans explored the Pacific and the Northwest and Americans investigated their own continent and beyond. "New Lands, New Men" not only details the remarkable adventures of those trailblazers but also shows how their experiences have shaped the national attitudes of Americans to the present day.

HEAVY METAL

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — University of Rochester musician David Caldwell always performs in exactly the same spot. That's because his instrument on the university campus weighs about 3½ tons.

It's a carillon — a set of bells suspended in a tower and played mechanically from a keyboard. One of only six in New York State and 180 on the entire continent, its 50 bronze bells were cast in the Netherlands.

What attracted Caldwell to this heavy instrument? Says he, "It's something about playing music outdoors. You're free of the constraints of the concert hall and you get to play for the whole world."

Jan. 16 Deadline For Internships

MANTEO — January 16 is the deadline for students to submit an application for two state government internships to be available at the North Carolina Aquarium on Roanoke Island for the summer of 1987.

The internships are to run for ten weeks — May 29 to August 7 — and are funded through the N.C. State Government Internship Program for college students.

At the aquarium, one student will be selected to work with public marine education programs.

Responsibilities will include beach and marsh field trips, live animal presentations and educational programs for children and adults.

The second internship will be for a student interested in exhibit design and construction.

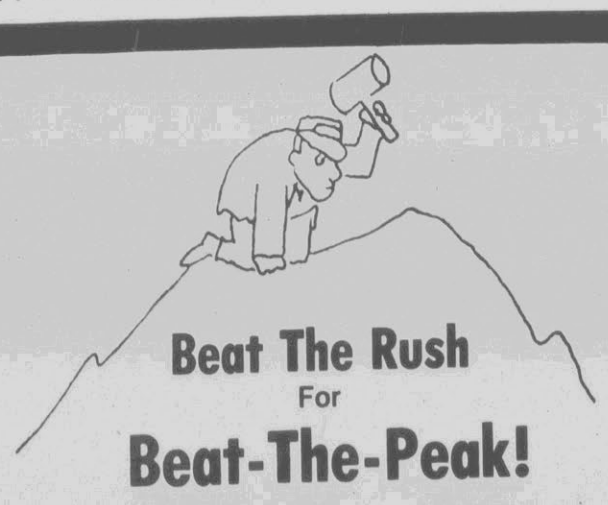

Students with backgrounds in art, graphics or industrial art may wish to apply for this opportunity.

To be eligible, a student must be a North Carolina resident attending a North Carolna college, university, community college or technical institute or an equivalent out-of-state institution. College and university student must have completed their sophomore year, while students in a two-year technical program must have completed one year of study.

Students must submit applications only on the N.C. State Government Internship Application form. Other forms will not be accepted. Application forms and guidelines are available at college campus career placement offices and also at local Employment Security Commission Job Service offices.

For more details on the program, call Raleigh, 733-9296.

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

New Book On Dvorak

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — In Czech emigre author Josef Skvorecky's new novel, composer Antonin Dvorak befriends blacks, barhops in New York and Chicago and gets thrown out of Penn Station for over-zealous train spotting.

Portraying Dvorak as Bohemia's George Gershwin infatuated by syncopated rhythms and low-life, "Dvorak in Love" also reconstructs what Skvorecky sees as the composer's lifelong, but unfulfilled, passion for his sister-in-law, the Countess Josephine.

The author, who reached the West in 1968 after the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia, calls his genial blend of historical fact and fiction "a lighthearted dream" focused on the great composer's three-year visit to America.

In bringing his compatriot to life, Skvorecky paints an 1890s landscape brimming with colorful characters, and he illuminates why Dvorak's "New World Symphony" sounds so American.

"My rule was to respect known facts. But within the limits of possibility, I felt quite free to create," Skvorecky, 62, said in an interview.

The biographical fantasy contrasts with the author's darker, earlier work about life in Nazi-occupied and communist-run Czechoslovakia, novels such as "The Swell Season" and "The Engineer of Human Souls," and with his role as the leading publisher of underground works by contemporary Czech writers.

He and his wife, actress and novelist Zdena Salivarova, left Prague immediately after the 1968 Soviet invasion but before bureaucrats were told to crack down on exit visas.

"It is, after all, the country of the Good Soldier Schweik," the author laughed, referring to the satirical Czech character.

Appointed professor of English literature at the University of Toronto, Skvorecky and his wife founded the Czech-language company, 68 Publishers, in 1972 and have since printed 163 books, including the plays of Vaclav Havel and novels of Milan Kundera. The company takes its name from the invasion date.

Skvorecky's "The Tank Corps," banned by Czech authorities in 1969, is their all-time best seller at 9,000 copies.

For five years, paperbacks turned out in Toronto were smuggled into Czechoslovakia in a hidden compartment in a car driven across the German border, Skvorecky said.

"But the government planted an agent who posed as a political emigre and joined many organizations — he was an Austrian. He tipped off Czech authorities. They arrested about 50 people and kept 10 of them for a year," he said.

Books are still getting in, sometimes carried by tourists.

"Dvorak in Love," published in Toronto by Lester & Orpen Dennys with a U.S. edition due from Alfred A. Knopf in March, was inspired by the author's wife, who loves Dvorak's music, and by a visit they paid to Spillville, Iowa, an emigre settlement where Dvorak spent his summers and people still speak Czech.

"We were both charmed by it," said Skvorecky, who writes his books longhand in Czech. "Dvorak in Love" was translated by Paul Wilson.

At first envisioned as a film script, the novel employs alternate voices and time frames surrounding Dvorak's decision to accept a three-year tenure as director of the National Conservatory of Music in New York.

The story abounds in anecdotes, true and fictional, about the village butcher's son who retained his simplicity and suffused his works with enduring melody: Americans dub him "Borax" because they can't pronounce his name, he encounters ragtime pianist Scott Joplin in a Chicago dive and visits Madison Square Garden to see Buffalo Bill's wild west show starring Sitting Bull.

Embellishing facts, the author suggests that Dvorak's love for Josephine inspired his greatest romantic work, the Cello Concerto, and that he was maneuvered into marriage by Josephine's practical, sharp-tongued sister, Anna.

Once a tenor sax player and still an avid Coleman Hawkins fan, Skvorecky has written about music before in the highly acclaimed "The Bass Saxophone," which The Village Voice called the finest fiction ever written about jazz.

"I once dreamed of a career as a nightclub saxophonist," said the author. "I fell in love with jazz at 14 when I bought a record called 'I've Got a Guy' by Ella Fitzgerald and the Chick Webb band. I thought I was listening to music of the spheres."

Hammond In Top Fettle

HIGH STAND. By Hammond Innes. Atheneum. 336 Pages. $17.95.

For nearly 50 years Hammond Innes has been one of our most delightful tale-tellers.

Happily, he's still going strong.

Where some writers go for heavy doses of wildly improbable events to grab the reader, Innes works in low-key ways to convey adventure and excitement involving everyday people in believable situations.

He'll keep the reader beguiled while doing it, too.

Innes, an Englishman, now has shifted his sights to the frozen Yukon of Canada. It would take a bit of doing, as the English say, to summarize all the mystery, intrigue, suspense and danger woven into "High Stand," his latest novel. The yarn will surely hold your attention, though.

Here is Hammond Innes, one of the finest craftsmen we have, in top fettle.

Lift a toast to him sometime while he's still around.

Floor Plan, Room Changes Reflect Housing Tastes

By HERMAN H. YORK
For The Associated Press

Although there are several areas of house design which will see changes in years ahead, the floor plan layout and room designation are those which will probably be the most noticeable.

American home buyers have the ability to recognize a workable floor plan, knowing very quickly whether it will suit their family's changing lifestyle. It is in room use and their relationship to one another, therefore, that architects and home builders must focus design attention.

Startling advances in computer science are producing differences in individual activity when at home, especially among young members of the family. Floor plan room arrangements and their designations are being affected and will continue to be during the 1990s, because of the expected sales boom of individual home computers.

It is conceivable that the word "bedroom" will disappear, be renamed "individual activity room" and made larger and more attractive for multi-use functions. Each such room will become a self-contained individual living unit, used for most everything with the exception of formal dining and food preparation.

Each member of the family will have his own personal computer, with software appropriate to his needs, with the capacity of worldwide communication, computer programming, and entertainment by television, radio and stereo laser, all designed into a studio alcove within the privacy of his own room.

Furniture for sleeping may be a decoratively concealed area, used at night, but playing a secondary role to that of the computer and other equipment needed for a variety of entertainment and hobby possibilities.

Because more space will be needed in rooms so designated, it will become necessary to reduce or eliminate other spaces, assuming that the overall size of the house must be held to its present area. In any case, the family room will remain, but the formal living room and formal dining room may disappear.

Kitchens and bathrooms will continue to be important in the selling of a house, for it is the homemaker who must be "sold."

The bathrooms of the 1990s will receive the most attention from designers. They will contain more luxurious bathtubs and lavatories, with voice-activated exotic lighting, skylights for passive solar benefits, sculptured walls and picture windows overlooking privately fenced-in flower gardens.

Kitchens will probably continue to remain large, with open planning designed as an extension of the family room. The combined kitchen and family room will remain as the center for informal entertaining of groups and for other family activity, but the use will be reduced somewhat because members of the family will enjoy individual pursuits in their own rooms.

The family room will remain as a family lounging area, with television becoming less a factor, also because of a greater use of the individual activity room.

Since the cost of energy will probably remain a factor, passive solar design will be incorporated in all houses because of its ability to reduce with minimum original construction cost the expense of heating and air cooling.

Despite higher energy expense, elegance and "glamour" in the form of high ceilings and large glass areas will become even more potent sales tools. The home builder is well aware of this, and the consumer should also keep it in mind as an asset when the time arrives to resell the house.

The status symbol of a "cathedral ceiling" outweighs the problem of added fuel cost, especially in larger, custom-built houses designed for the affluent home owner.

Although from time to time many innovative contemporary forms of exterior design have been introduced, they appear to have had no significant long-term impact upon the overall volume of housing production.

Such design is frequently used in large homes on generous plots of land, but on a national scale a vast majority of consumers apparently prefer homes that reflect the style and character of more traditional domestic architecture.

Another area of change which may affect house design of the future is the rapidly-growing "senior citizen" market.

Architects and home builders have been criticized for their indifference in house design and construction to the needs of the elderly and the physically handicapped as well. Although the number of elderly people is increasing, that fact probably will not influence single family house design to a noticeable degree.

For the aging, an apartment or some form of multi-unit arrangement is more desirable than the single family house because of the obvious need to deal with maintenance and security problems.

There is a moderate demand for one-story, two-bedroom houses of modest size in desirable communities, but because it is not a significant portion of the volume of housing sold the demand may never be met.

However, when such houses are produced, the changes will avoid the appearance of being living units for the physically disabled. Included, however, will be doors wide enough to enter the bathroom in a wheelchair, light switches at convenient heights, grab rails in bathtubs.

There have been predictions in recent years that the single family house in time will no longer be built for a variety of reasons, an important one being the cost of land.

But owning a house, separated from others, even if only by a few feet, on an individual private bit of landscaped land, is still the American preference in home ownership, and probably will remain so well past the 1990s.

Americans apparently still regard their homes as symbols of status, and whether the unit is large or small, they want areas of elegance. The "no frills" house has been as unacceptable as the "no frills" motor car.

By 1990, lifestyles may have changed, family size may change, single parenting may become the norm, more women may be away from the home in the workplace and men may take over more of the homemaking duties.

Basic relationships between individuals living under the same roof, however, will still require the essentials of livability resembling those we demand today.

Patching concrete driveways, patios, pavements, garage floors and similar surfaces can be undertaken by almost anyone and is an excellent way to get used to handling a substance that many otherwise competent do-it-yourselfers carefully avoid.

Before any discussion of the fundamentals of concrete repairs, it would be wise to review the definition of concrete. Too often it is used interchangeably with cement. It is not cement, which is the product that holds together the ingredients that go to make up concrete. Portland cement, a type of cement and not a brand name, is mixed with sand, aggregate and water to form concrete. When somebody mentions a cement driveway, he could mean any of several products, including concrete, so if the exact meaning is important, be sure to inquire whether he means concrete, macadam or something else. No driveway is made of cement alone.

When a small or medium-sized patch must be made in concrete, premixed packaged concrete mix is probably your best bet. Since it has already been mixed and has everything in it except the necessary water, you don't have to worry about having the precise measurements. However, since the makeup of the ingredients may have shifted during transportation and handling, you should pour out the contents and mix them thoroughly before adding the recommended amount of water. This is also important when you are using only a portion of a bag. Without thorough mixing, the part you use may have too much of one material in it, producing concrete with too little or too much of one ingredient.

Use the exact amount of water necessary. Too little and you will have an unworkable mix. Too much and it will be too mushy and not strong enough. One advantage of the premixed type is that the sand, presuming the bag has not been dampened, will be the right consistency. When you make your own mixture, sand that isn't just right will affect the quality of the finished product. If you do decide to make your own mixture, pick up a handful of the sand you are about to purchase or already have bought. Squeeze it then drop it. If your hand remains wet, the sand has too much water in it, in which case use a little less water than the directions specify. If the sand falls apart as you squeeze it, the chances are it doesn't have enough water in it, in which case use a bit more water than recommended.

In any repair of concrete, clean out all debris before starting. You can use an old screwdriver, a cold chisel and hammer, a brush or whatever is necessary, then wet the opening thoroughly. If you neglect this step, the area will pull too much moisture out of the patching material too quickly. You can mix the concrete in a wheelbarrow, on a piece of plywood or whatever is handy, making a pile of the mixture, punching a hole in the center of it and pouring the mixture into the holes as you work it all together.

Smooth out the patch with a trowel, being extra careful at the point where the patching material runs into the old surfacing. It's a good practice when working with concrete to allow a little time, perhaps about half a hour, to elapse. Then go back and renew the smoothing process. The repair then should be cured for a few days; that is, wet down occasionally or kept covered with a piece of burlap or some straw. While there is a school of thought that doesn't think curing does any good, I do not belong to it. I have found over they years that curing prevents flaking and other ills of concrete patching.

It is always difficult to remove stains from concrete. No one thing works all the time. The principle is to use something that absorbs the stain. This can be trisodium phosphate or a product containing it, sand or even dry Portland cement. Whatever you use, leave it on the stain a couple of days, sweep it off and repeat the treatment as often as necessary. Each time you use the absorbent, the stain will become lighter. Some companies make driveway cleaners for the purpose of absorbing stains.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $1.50 to Box 5, Teaneck, N.J., 07666.)

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. A relative of mine recently offered to sand the wooden floor in our diningroom and then finish it with varnish. It not only didn't come out the way we wanted it; it produced a somewhat rough finish. We haven't complained to him about it; but now we would like to take a crack at it ourselves. It didn't look too difficult if you have the correct equipment. He rented his. Do you think we can handle it and will we be able to get a smoother finish?

A. There is no way to tell your capability. Sanding a floor preparatory to putting varnish on it can be done by anyone with reasonable patience and a knowledge of the fundamentals of sanding. When you rent the sander — and an edger — ask the dealer to show you exactly how it works. Perhaps the most important part of the job is never to let the motor run while the sander drum is resting on the floor. When the machine is in operation, it must be moving. Sanding a floor produces a mess, as you must have seen if you watched your relative at work. Take all the precautions necessary to keep the grit from getting on everything in the room and outside it.

Q. I have an old piece of furniture that was originally finished with shellac, probably about 20 years ago. Now, I would like to refinish it with varnish without taking off the shellac, which is still in fairly good condition. I seem to remember reading somewhere that this cannot be done. Is my recollection correct?

A. Not exactly. Years ago, varnish often was used over shellac. It was only with the introduction of synthetics that certain care had to be exercised. Some synthetic manufacturers say their product should not be used over shellac. Usually, the label on the container will give you this information. If not, ask the dealer.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, bleach remover, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, N.Y. 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Know-How Needed To Do Wallpapering

By STAN WARSHAW
For The Associated Press

You can do your own wallpapering or you can hire a professional.

If you do it yourself, be sure you know exactly what it's all about before you begin. If you hire a professional, start searching for one while you are selecting the wallpaper.

To get a good professional, ask for recommendations from your decorating products dealer, from friends who have had good installation experiences with installers or from advertisers affiliated with a professional organization.

Once you have a list, choose the most qualified by following a few important guidelines:

— References: A professional installer will gladly supply you with a list of satisfied clients. Contact several whose installations are similar to your intended installation. Speak candidly to them.

— Price: Here, as with most professionals, you get what you pay for. Most important to remember is that you should decide on wallcovering before any installer will be able to estimate accurately the job either for the quantity you require, wall preparation or price.

— Skill Training: The pride of a professional trained at an accredited trade school will show, both when you ask about their school training and on-the-job experience. Many installers gain their skills working with another installer and gradually working their way "up the ladder." Don't be another rung on what could be an expensive ladder of learning.

— Recommendations From the Trade: Your local decorating products retailer will have a discriminating opinion about the quality of an installer's work, especially if it was bad.

At this point you should have enough information to decide which professional installer to call for an estimate on your proposed job. Most professionals prefer to price a job in person. The following observations should be made during the estimate:

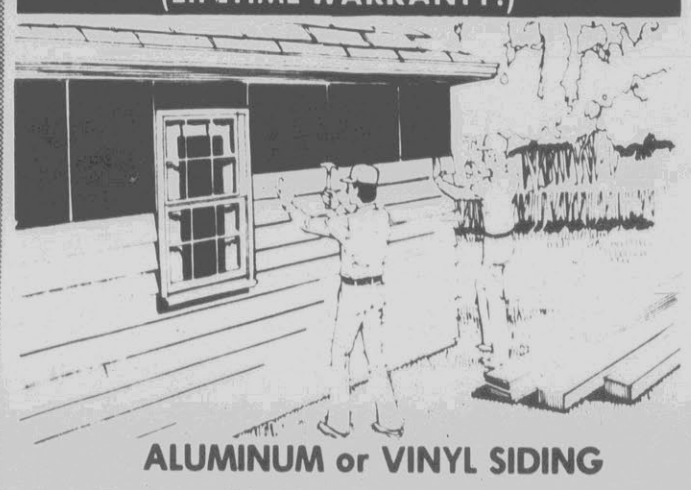

— The installer should be neat, clean and reasonably attired. Cleanliness in appearance counts highly, as it usually reflects the same quality of the installation.

— Your installer should be well prepared with possibly a calculator, certainly a tape measure, writing pad, pencil or pen, job proposal forms, and business cards.

— If the installer promises to get back to you within a specified time and that time comes and goes, get someone else. Unreliability is something you need not endure.

New Stamps In The News

By SYD KRONISH
AP NEWSFEATURES

Five stamp shows will be the sites of first day ceremonies for new U.S. stamps to be issued from January to May, 1987. There wil be 17 issuances encompassing 24 designs.

The U.S. Postal Service program includes three previously unannounced coil stamps in the popular Transportation Series — the 8.5-cent Tow Truck (Jan. 24 at the ARIPEX '87 stamp show in Tucson, Ariz.); the 7.1-cent Tractor (Feb. 6 at the SARAPEX '87 show in Sarasota, Fla.); and the 10-cent Canal Boat (April 11 at ALPEX '87 in Buffalo, N.Y.).

The MILCOPEX '87 show in Milwaukee will be the site for the March 6 release of the 14-cent U.S. Flag postal card. The ROMPEX '87 show in Denver will be the location for the May 9 issuance of the 22-cent Flag-Fireworks regular sheet stamp.

Other January releases include the 22-cent Michigan Statehood commemorative on Jan. 26, the 22-cent Pan American Games issue on Jan. 29, and the 22-cent annual Love stamp, Jan. 30 in San Francisco.

In February there will be the 14-cent Julia Ward Howe stamp in the Great American Series (Feb. 12); the 22-cent Jean Baptiste Point DuSable commemorative in the Black Heritage Series (Feb. 20); and the 22-cent Enrico Caruso stamp in the Performing Arts Series on Feb. 27.

Add to the March schedule a 22-cent Girl Scouts commemorative stamp to be issued March 12 in Washington, D.C.

April issuances will feature the eight-design Special Occasions stamps booklet with 10 stamps to the pane on April 20 and the 22-cent United Way commemorative on April 28.

In addition to the 22-cent Flag-Fireworks regular sheet stamp on May 9 there will be a 14-cent Constitutional Convention postal card on May 25 in Philadelphia.

Additional details on these stamps as well as the remainder of the 1987 program will be reported as soon as the information becomes available.

We have received advance news on the 22-cent United Way commemorative scheduled for April 28. The stamp will honor the centennial of United Way's dedication to human service.

The design will feature the profiles of six people of various ages and races, representating the diversity of individuals contributing to and benefitting from volunteer services. At the top of the stamp are six horizontal bands of color which approximate the shades of a rainbow and the motif of the United Way logo. In the upper left corner is the wording "United Way" and "1887-1987" in two lines of type. Across the base of the design is the inscription "Uniting Communities USA 22."

Although United Way began as a fund-raising organization 100 years ago, it has assumed an increasingly greater role in community problem solving. Among current issues of concern are substance abuse, illiteracy, unemployment, access to health care, housing and shelter for the homeless.

First day cancellation information will be provided in ample time for collectors.

President Ronald Reagan is Honorary Chairman of the United Way centennial and Mrs. Reagan is Honorary Chairwoman.

Maritime Museum Events

BEAUFORT — Four events are on tab for the coming week as the New Year gets under way at the North Carolina Maritime Museum in Beaufort.

Two events are slated for Wednesday. One is the opening of an art exhibit in the Heroes of the Surf series in a collection of oil paintings titled "Black Lifesavers of Pea Island." The paintings memorialize the courageous men serving at Pea Island Lifesaving Station on the Outer Banks from 1880 to 1949. The show will remain on view through February.

At noon Wednesday a video program, also on the Heroes of the Surf series, will be shown at the musuem at noon. The program, titled "Cape Hatteras U.S. Lifesaving Service and Beach Apparatus Drill" is produced by the National Park Service.

At noon on Thursday, a lunchtime slide lecture, "Winter Birds in Coastal Carolina" will be presented by JoAnne Powell of the museum staff. The lecture is a review of birds to be seen on the Winter Waterfowl Watching excursion.

The final scheduled event of the week is the Trip to the Top program at noon. For this event, advance reservations are required. Reservations can be made by calling 728-7317.

Admission to the museum is free. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on weekdays; from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays, and from 2 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. The museum is open year round.

New Hanover Lecture

WILMINGTON — A lecture on archaeological evidence found at Bald Head Island during 1986 will be given by Dr. Tom Loftfield at 2:30 p.m. Jan. 11 at the New Hanover County Museum of the Lower Cape Fear in Wilmington.

The program is free and open to the public.

The museum is located at 814 Market Street in Wilmington.

The evidence was uncovered during a field school of the University of North Carolina, Wilmington, held in June, 1986.

The month-long project, sponsored by Bald Head Island Ltd., was concentrated around the "Old Baldy" lighthouse and the keeper's cottages that were part of the lighthouse complex.

Dr. Loftfield will use slides to explain the archaeological dig and talk about the significance of the artifacts found at the site. He will conduct a question-answer session following his lecture.

Dr. Loftfield is an associate professor of anthropology at UNC/Wilmington. He has conducted archaeological investigations in southeastern North Carolina for 16 years including sites at Sneads Ferry and Permuda Island.

Surf Deer

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Lifeguards and beachfront residents chased two deer back into the hills after one took a swim in the Pacific Ocean.

"They're not real good swimmers, but they can keep going for quite a while sometimes," lifeguard George Merritt said.

Pitt County, Greenville

Reflections Of 1986 Events

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

1986 was a formative year in Greenville and Pitt County's history — a year when many projects came to fruition and many others progressed. This area had its share of tragedy, but these incidents were more individual than collective — there were no major natural or manmade disasters like those in recent years such as the tornado in 1984 and the Village Green apartments explosion in 1983.

An event which brought worldwide attention to our area was the death on June 29 of Senator John East, an apparent suicide in the garage of his home in Greenville. His funeral held July 2 at Jarvis United Methodist Church in Greenville was attended by leaders from throughout the nation. Among them were Mrs. George Bush, wife of the vice president; Sen. Robert Dole, Elizabeth Dole, Gov. and Mrs. Jim Martin, Jerry Falwell, and Sen. Jesse Helms.

Historic Transplant

History was made at Pitt Memorial July 18 when a team from the East Carolina University School of Medicine performed the state's first kidney-pancreas transplant. The recipient of the two organs was a 36-year-old Martin County farmer.

ORGAN TRANSPLANT FEAT — Dr. Walter J. Pories explains with the assistance of drawings the kidney-pancreas transplant done at Pitt County Memorial Hospital July 18. The simultaneous transplant of the two organs by an ECU Medical School surgery team was the first ever done in North Caroliha. (Reflector Photo By Carol Tyer)

TRAIN, SCHOOL BUS COLLIDE — The collision of a Greenville school bus with a Southern Railway freight train May 21, 1986, was but one of several incidents in past years which prompted the state school board to review its policy on student bus drivers. After deliberation, the board decided to allot more money to allow additional hiring of adult drivers. The 12 children aboard the bus during the collision were not seriously injured. Train-Bus Collision

A train-school bus collision in May frightened Pitt Countians and made them count their blessings. None of the 12 students on the bus were seriously injured, though the rear of the bus was demolished.

Murders Charged

The body of Lois Hales Tyson, a Route 5, Greenville, woman was discovered Dec. 23 in a Martin County farm pond after law enforcement officers were led to the pond by Fernando Jackson of Winterville. Jackson, who had been arrested Nov. 21 on a charge of solicitation to commit murder in connection with Mrs. Tyson's disappearance Sept. 13, was charged Dec. 24 with the woman's murder.

Norman Smith of Washington, D.C., was charged with murder in the July 5 death of Paulette Tyson Edwards, also of Washington, D.C. Ms. Edwards was shot with a handgun at a residence on Greenfield Boulevard. Smith maintained that the shooting was an accident.

Pitt County residents Archie Gray May Jr. and Edward Earl Lloyd were convicted in December of the second-degree murder of Rupert Lineberry at his home on N.C. 43 south of Greenville July 12. Both are appealing.

Fire Fatalities

There were two fire fatalities in Pitt County this year. James Henry Brackett, died July 2 in a mobile home near Black Jack. The structure burned without anyone's knowledge and was never reported to a fire department until afterwards.

Mildred Hudson Wright, 70, of Greenville, widow of the late Dr. Dan Wright, a Greenville dentist, died of smoke inhalation in a fire at her home Oct. 26.

Critically Beaten

Melvin Donnell Tyson, 27, of Farmville sustained head injuries during an attack with a cinder block in Farmville Jan. 15. He is recuperating at his parents' home in Farmville. No one has yet been charged in the crime.

Armed Robbery

Janet Diane Moore was sentenced to two 20-year terms in prison March for the armed robbery and beating with a flat iron of Evelyn G. Andrews at her home in Farmville in December, 1985. Mrs. Andrews survived the attack, but sustained serious head and other injuries.

Rapes, Burglaries

Twenty-six rapes were reported in Greenville during the year. Two arrests were made, but most of the alleged crimes remain unsolved. There were 535 burglaries, both residential and commercial, reported in Greenville prior to Dec. 21. Prior to the same date, some 1,736 thefts, 104 of these motor vehicle larcenies, were reported in Greenville.

School Damaged

An estimated $35,000 worth of damage was done to North Pitt High School in June when someone drove a van down a hall and set fire to the vehicle. Sheriff's deputies later went to South Carolina to arrest two young men from Maryland for doing the damage and stealing a school van.

Drug Offense

Greenville lawyer Cherry Stokes was sentenced in December to 90 days in jail, fined $2,000 and ordered to perform 300 hours of community service. He had pled guilty to attempting to sell cocaine and to the sale and delivery of cocaine. He was ordered to get drug and alcohol treatment. He surrendered his law license shortly after his arrest.

Fire Damage

A fire in the library of Wellcome Middle School did $30,000 damage in July.

The Shell auto service station, long a Bethel landmark, was destroyed by fire Sept. 8.

The Wiz Nightclub, north of Greenville on the Eastern Bypass, burned.

Farr Carr Auto Parts on Evans Street burned. An office building has been built in its place.

The Ayden Sports Shop burned in May.

Langley's Hardware Store in Bethel burned in August.

Highway Fatalities

Pitt County had 17 people killed in wrecks during the year. John Ewart Mitchell, 28, of Farmville died March 25 when his vehicle was struck by a train on rural paved road 1206 seven miles west of Greenville. Robert Johnson Erwin, 31, died Oct. 18 when his vehicle struck a tree on rural paved road 1138 6.5 miles west of Greenville.

Durwood Belmont Stokes of Route 2, Grimesland died near Grimesland when his vehicle ran off N.C. 33 and struck a ditchbank.

Marjorie Hobgood Hardy of Goldsboro died a few miles west of Greenville on U.S. 13 when her car was involved in a head-on collision. Malcolm Greenwood Hardy died later as a result of the same accident.

Sylvester Daniels died on U.S. 258 near Fountain when he was struck by a car.

Jesse Ray Patrick of Winterville died Aug. 4 when his car ran off N.C. 11 and struck a fence.

Arthur Daniel Butts, a passenger in a car wrecked Aug. 10, died when he was thrown from the vehicle which wrecked at rural paved road 1523 and rural paved road 1537.

Roscoe Carroll of Route 1, Bethel, a bicyclist, died Aug. 30, when he was struck by a car on U.S. 13 5.9 miles north of Greenville.

Kenneth Andy Roberson of Stokes and Christopher Clayton Harris of Baltimore were killed July 4 when they were struck by a car on N.C. 11 while pushing a car.

Lawrence Charles Hunt, 19, and Donna Ann Tripp, 20, were killed Sept. 19 in a wreck on N.C. 33 3.1 miles east of Greenville.

Willie Lee Smith, 33, of Greenville was a pedestrian killed on U.S. 13 a half mile north of Greenville Sept. 20.

Jermi Jamaal Banks, 6, was killed when he was struck by a car on N.C. 33 1.5 miles west of Greenville Sept. 22.

Francis B. Roberson, 63, of Route 2, Ayden, was killed Oct. 28 when her vehicle was was involved in a head-on collision with a tractor trailer on rural paved road 1753.

Lloyd Michael McNeil, 28, of Route 1, Winterville, died Nov. 29 when his vehicle was struck by a truck on rural paved road 1125 two miles west of Winterville.

Pitt County

Work began on redistricting of the county for use in a new method of electing commissioners which will ensure black citizens representation on the board. A public hearing will be held in January.

Re-evaluation of land in Pitt County for tax purposes was started in 1986, to be effective Jan. 1, 1988. The re-evaluation was moved up a year. It had been set to go into effect in 1989.

The development of a Pitt County land use plan was approved by Pitt County commissioners, who also approved a program to map all property in the county.

Kramer Jackson, former Johnston County manager, was named county manager Dec. 1. Reginald Gray, longtime county manager, retired Dec. 31, serving as a consultant his last month of work.

A committee to implement a 911 emergency telephone call system for Pitt County was named. It is scheduled to meet early in 1987.

Sales tax in Pitt County went to five cents on the dollar in October. Sixty percent of the increased half-cent will be used for school construction. The remainder will go into general county operations.

The idea of having all county roads named and identified with signs was approved in the fall. The county planning board has been asked to devise a process to select names. The process will be completed in two to three years when state money becomes available.

Former Pitt County Commissioner Alton Gardner died in June.

Greenville

The Greenville City Council in June approved a plan for a new method of election providing for five council members elected from districts, one council member elected at large and the mayor elected at large. The U.S. Justice Department OK'd the plan in December.

Greenville's blue law which restricted selling on Sundays was rescinded June 10. Stores may now open Sundays after 1 p.m.

Greenville started construction of a new fire-rescue substation at Charles and Red Banks Road. Planning also began for a new fire-rescue headquarters station, with completion slated for 1990.

The Greenville City Council approved the Medical District Plan, a long-range plan for the planned and orderly development of land near Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

A new park in the Westhaven subdivision of Greenville was opened.

The Greenville City Council adopted a new sign ordinance which sets forth stricter standards for business signs in the city.

The Greenville City Council authorized the construction of an amphitheater on the town commons. Construction is expected to start soon. It's being built with private and grant funds.

It was announced that construction of a Science and Nature Center, including a planetarium, will begin soon at River Park North.

Study of the annexation of Brook Valley subdivision by the city of Greenville began.

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission recommended City approval of a planned unit development ordinance, which addresses the use of properties that would be hard to develop because of location. It also discussed buffer requirements between properties being developed.

An airport land use plan was authorized by the City Council.

In early February the East Carolina Vocational Center announced that it would not be able to afford to keep the ECVC pool open much longer. It was closed a short time later and stayed closed several months. The city of Greenville mounted a campaign during the summer to enroll citizens in memberships and said, if sufficient members would commit, that the pool and other fitness facilities at the vocational center site could be furnished by the city through its Recreation and Parks Department. The campaign was successful and the pool reopened on a limited basis Dec. 1, with plans to enlarge the program in 1987.

Greenville fire-rescue workers were certified as EMT-AI (Emergency Medical Technicians-Advanced Intermediate), the first group in the state to be so approved. Defibrillators were added to equipment on rescue vehicles.

Community Ambassador

Ann Marie Ambert was Greenville's Community Ambassador to Spain.

Farmville

The Walter B. Jones Town Commons in Farmville was dedicated May 3 with Congressman Walter B. Jones, for whom it was named, and his wife, Elizabeth, present.

Plans for a town hall for Farmville were begun, with an architect expected to be picked early this year.

The Farmville Council of Garden Clubs was judged a state and then a southeast regional winner in a contest sponsored by Family Circle Magazine. The coalition of garden clubs was honored for its development of a flower garden on a portion of the Walter B. Jones Town Commons.

Members of the committee to turn the residence of Miss Tabitha DeVisconti into a museum and the grounds around it into a park for a short time entertained the idea of tearing down the house and building a structure "more suitable for a museum." This idea has been tabled now, though, and plans continue to make the house itself a museum.

Michael Forster, a Farmville resident, gained national attention when a portion of his post card collection was used in a collage displayed at the Statue of Liberty during Liberty Weekend July 4 when the newly refurbished Statue of Liberty was unveiled.

Former Farmville Mayor Will Joyner died in January, as did Leroy Redden, who was a Farmville commissioner at the time of his death. Alfred Williams Jr. was appointed to finish Redden's term.

Fountain

Fountain completed an agreement with Farmville to have water supplied by Farmville, effective in early 1987.

Bethel

Bethel expects to have built this year a new Post Office, a new wastewater treatment plant, and a new fire-rescue squad buillding.

Grifton

Grifton built a new building its Fire Department and completed work through a Community Development grant on 52 houses.

Plans were made for the renovation of the town's historic depot. The Chamber of Commerce of Grifton plans to make it its headquarters.

Festivals

Winterville held its first Watermelon Festival. Grifton had its Shad Festival and Ayden its Collard Festival. Bethel held its Harvest Festival. Winterville also held its annual backgammon tournament in March.

EAS Approved

Efforts to connect Grifton with the rest of the county by toll-free telephone continued. Toward the end of the year, it was announced that Grifton would have one-way toll-free service to Greenville and two-way toll-free to and from Ayden. This long-held wish of Grifton area people will become reality during 1987, Carolina Telephone says.

Lifesaver

A Greenville man, Jack Cox Jr., was cited for saving a Hillsborough man from drowning in August. The man had driven onto a bridge under construction at Morehead City during a storm and been blown off into the water below. Cox, an ECU student working as a commercial fisherman at the time, pulled him safely from the water.

Supreme Court Justice

Greenville attorney Robert Browning was sworn in Sept. 4 as a new North Carolina Supreme Court Justice. He lost the seat to Democrat Willis Whichard in November.

Civilian Aide

Greenville attorney Malcolm J. (Mack) Howard of Greenville was installed Sept. 5 as North Carolina's civilian aide to the Secretary of the Army.

Reversed Ruling

The State Supreme Court reversed a lower court ruling in September on remuneration for Frank Dereberry, a Pitt County man made a parapalegic in an accident in 1983 while he was a volunteer fireman on his way to a fire. The court said he should be provided a place to live and financial compensation that would reflect the level of his total earnings before the accident.

MADD Chapter Started

As public outcry against drunk driving continued, a chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving was started in Pitt County. This organization will supplement the work already being done by the Students Against Driving Drunk chapters already active here.

102nd Birthday

Greenville resident, Dr. E.L. Henderson celebrated his 102nd birthday in December.

Centenarians Died

Two Pitt County women who lived beyond 100 years old died during the year — Georgia Foreman on her 101st birthday Sept. 2 and Jennie Brock of Winterville during her 103rd year Dec. 29.

On State Board

Marilyn Rhodes, vice president for nursing services at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was elected to the N.C. Board of Nursing for a 3-year term.

Pitt County Memorial Hospital

Unlike many hospitals nationwide, Pitt County Memorial Hospital continued to expand its services to this community and to the entire eastern region of North Carolina.

Fred Brown, hospital executive vice president, resigned effective Aug. 15, and the hospital revamped its administrative organization to eliminate his position and reassign duties.

The Greenville Service League gave $125,000 for use in the rehabilitation unit of the hospital. Much of this money was raised through operation of the hospital coffee shop.

The departments of Pitt County Memorial Hospital which serve infants and children were designated the Children's Hospital of Eastern North Carolina. Local participation in a national Children's Miracle Network telethon to raise funds for children's hospitals nationwide netted pledges of $67,115 for the Children's Hospital. A total of $57,790.60 has been donated.

EastCare Air Ambulance Service has been carefully scrutinized this year and in November, the hospital board voted to increase rate fourfold so as to make the service pay for itself. Safety was closely watched, as several hospitals in the nation experienced disastrous helicopter crashes.

Work began on additional space in the hospital laboratories and on the addition of a new admitting area. Conversion to a new and expanded computer system got under way and will continue into the new year.

The hospital's cardiology service was expanded, with new cardiologists added to the staff and a new cardiac catheterization lab added.

Plans were made for a birthing center that should be completed in 1987.

The ECU Medical School announced plans for a Magnetic Resonance Imaging building to be completed next year.

Attention was given to how people are treated — both patients and staff — and a guest relations program was added. Hiring of a vice president to run this program is expected to be accomplished this year.

A substance abuse program, including drug testing for employees, was started.

A cancer therapy program was expanded, as was the staff and function of the regional rehabilitation center of the hospital.

As elderly patient numbers and acuity levels in patients grow, placement of people in institutions other than home continued to be a challenge for hospital social workers and others responsible for helping patients exit the hospital.

McDonald House Started

Construction on the Ronald McDonald House began May 28 and is expected to be completed June 1 of this year. Some $875,000 has been raised toward a goal of $1.2 million.

Health Director

Dr. Timothy Monroe assumed duties this fall as new Pitt County health director, responsible for the medical supervision of the Pitt County Health Department.

Eagles Died

Conner Eagles, the driving force behind the Village of Yesteryear at the Pitt County Fairgrounds, died. The village is named in his honor.

Blount Died

Marvin K. Blount Sr., Greenville lawyer, businessman and public servant in several capacities, died.

East Carolina University

The search for a new chancellor for East Carolina University began in February, after Chancellor John Howard announced his plans to retire.

The history of East Carolina University was published. Dr. Mary Jo Bratton is the author.

Construction on 3-story general classroom building at East Carolina University began in January.

It was announced in January that two people from Greenville, Dr. Janice Shipley, a family medicine intern, and Lee Williams, a research assistant in the ECU Medical School's Department of Microbiology and Immunology, were candidates for the crew of a U.S. Space Shuttle Challenger flight. Both were disqualified shortly before the world was saddened by the Challenger explosion.

ECU theater arts professor Edgar Loessin was recognized by the Board of Governors of the greater UNC system for his contribution to UNC students through his teaching. He received the board's O. Max Gardner Award.

The School of Social Work of ECU was formed, with Dr. Maria O'Neal as its dean.

ECU announced that its fall enrollment set a record — 14,464 students — and that its average SAT score for entrants was about 15 points higher than that of the previous year.

Pitt Community College

Pitt Community College announced that its fall enrollment was a record — 3,056 students when the number the previous fall was 2,947.

PCC announced that all its nursing graduates who had taken the state nursing last year had passed.

PCC's learning resources center, which will house the school's library, is under construction.

Pitt Co. Mental Health Center

The Mental Health Center opened a new annex to house children's service, community services, and outpatient-day treatment for the chronically mentally ill and substance abuse clients.

A 10-bed detoxification center to serve mainly Pitt County substance abusers was approved. Construction adjacent to the Pitt County Mental Health Center is expected to begin early in 1987.

A treatment alternatives to street crime program of the Pitt County Mental Health Center got under way to serve substance abusers.

RAINED OUT — Catcher Axel Smith shelters in the dugout during a summer rain that put an end to Pitt County's American Legion baseball contest at Harrington Field. Rain was an unusual sight in the county during June, July and August although Pitt fared better than other counties. North Carolina's Piedmont reported record drought conditions in 1986. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

The Winterville-Ayden-Grifton Child Development Center was moved to Greenville and became the Pitt County Child Development Center.

The Adult Development Activity Program began a vocational program which could provide clients opportunity to work for money.

Pitt-Greenville Airport

The airport greatly expanded its service and had an increase to more than 60,000 commercial passengers from about 23,000 the previous year.

With the addition of crash-fire fighting equipment kept on the premises, the Federal Aviation Agency gave approval for planes for more than 30 passengers to come in. Piedmont quickly added 10 flights of 36-passenger planes into Greenville.

The general aviation terminal building was expanded. Runway lights were rehabilitated, and security fencing and lighting were added. A 20-year plan for airport improvement was developed.

American Airlines announced that the American Eagle will commence service to Greenville June 15, 1987. This year over 60,000 commercial passengers have utilized the airport.

Airport officials projected that more than 84,000 commercial passengers will be served in 1987.

The Arts

The Greenville Museum of Art was accredited in October by the American Society of Museums. Only 640 out of 6,000 museums of art in the United States are so accredited. A renovations program for the museum was started. It's estimated that $150,000 will be spent in the project.

September 11 was the 90th birthday of Greenville's Francis Speight, dean of North Carolina artists. The occasion was marked with a retrospective show of his paintings in Washington, D.C.

Greenville native, Kipper Hair, created a new Christmas ballet titled "The Greatest Gift" which was presented in several performances in New Bern in December.

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra performed "The Nutcracker Suite" with the North Carolina Dance Arts Theater in the newly renovated Wright Auditorium on the East Carolina University campus during December.

Highways

On Feb. 14, the N.C Board of Transportation awarded a $4.8 million contract to Propst Construction Company for grading and paving seven miles of the new four-laned U.S. 264 between Greenville and Washington.

On March 13 and 14, the N.C. Board of Transportation conducted its regularly monthly meeting in Greenville for the first time in nine years.

On June 13, the Transportation Board awarded a $3.5 million contract for paving 7.4 miles of the new relocated U.S. 264 from state road 1526 in Wilson County to the presently located U.S. 264 west of Farmville.

On Oct. 10, the Transportation Board approved a $1.5 million special appropriation for rehabilitation and resurfacing of the existing two lanes of the new four-laned U.S. 264 between Greenville and Washington.

The Transportation Board on Nov. 14, named the new relocated U.S. 264 from Farmville to Greenville the "John P. East Freeway" in honor of the late Sen. John P. East of Greenville.

Randy D. Doub, Greenville lawyer, was reappointed by Gov. Jim Martin to a two-year term on the N.C. Board of Transportation, representing Division II composed of seven eastern N.C. counties.

Schools

The long-planned-for merger of the Pitt County and Greenville city schools became effective in July. Dr. Eddie West was hired for a four-year term as superintendent of the consolidated school system.

The Rose High Athletic complex was dedicated. The ground is being prepared and funds are being raised. It will eventually house a football and track stadium, a baseball field, a softball field, a soccer field, a practice field and a field house, all of which are expected to cost almost $2 million.

Parents and friends of fifth graders at South Greenville School were dismayed to learn in February that a grant that was to send them on a trip to Williamsburg did not exist. It was learned that the previous fifth grade of the school had gone at the personal expense of an official in the state department of education who was hiding the fact that she had promised grant money that did not materialize. Local sympathizers raised the money for the trip and the fifth graders went anyway last spring.

Periodic drug searches of the schools by law enforcement officials were started. No drugs were found during a September search.

Bethel Elementary School Principal Janie E. Manning was named North Carolina Principal of the Year.

Business

Barclays American bought North State Savings and Loan and turned it into a bank.

Union Carbide sold its consumer products division, which includes the Greenville plant, to Ralston Purina in April.

Cooper Industries sold its Edison Battery Products Company to SAB Nife of Swen, including its plant in the Greenville Industrial Park.

Carolina Medical Products was opened near Farmville and Cavalier Confections was opened in Greenville.

Two new motor freight carrier terminals were established in Pitt County: Standard Trucking Company in Farmville and Carolina Freight Carriers in Winterville.

The Ramada Inn's sale to the Capitol Hotel Group of Greenville was announced Sept. 14. It has been renamed the Comfort Inn.

Companies which expanded operations in 1986 included Package Craft of Bethel, Grady White, Edison Battery and Burroughs Wellcome of Greenville.

Many new businesses were established in the county during the year. Several new shopping complexes were added or announced, including one on Evans Street and another in the 3100 block of East 10th Street. Neither is under way.

Industrial Development

The Pitt County Development Commission announced that more than 125,000 square feet of existing industrial space in the county was sold or leased during 1986, resulting in the creation of nearly 200 jobs.

PCDC executive director, John D. Chaffee, said more than 250 acres of industrial land were sold during the year which, when developed, will result in approximately $50 million invested in new plants and equipment and the creation of more than 250 more jobs.

The Development Commission completed a Pitt County Data File on computer disks, including a computerized listing of available industrial sites and buildings larger than 10,000 square feet and office building 5,000 square feet or larger. Copies of these are available at the commission office.

Ayden-Grifton Cooperation

The South Pitt Development Corporation was incorporated and sold $50,000 worth of stock to build a shell building located in the south end of the county to be used for industrial development. The towns of Ayden and Grifton and the Grifton and Ayden chambers of commerce cooperated in this venture.

Evergreen

Downtown Greenville development is being carried out by the Evergreen organization. It officially ended a contract with Owen Kugel, a Pennsylvania developer who had promised to be its director and create new projects, in February and collected $50,000 already paid Kugel.

Jack Steelman was named executive director in August and a full-time office was opened within the Pitt County Development Commission.

Evergreen loan program projects completed included the Hendrix Building on Evans Mall, the Progress Center on West Fifth Street and the Flowers Complex, Phase II, at Evans and 14th streets.

Vet Center

A Vietnam Veterans' Outreach Center was opened in February at 150 Arlington Blvd., Greenville.

Election results

1986 was an election year. Pitt County voters gave majorities to Democratic Party candidates in the November election.

Terry Sanford, now U.S. senator from North Carolina, got 13,396 votes to incumbent Senator Jim Broyhill's 9,076. Congressman Walter B. Jones got 15,735 votes to challenger Howard Moye's 6,628.

Sen. Tom Taft was re-elected with 10,419 votes over Ed Griffith's 7,299; in nine Pitt County townships. Rep. Bob Martin, unopposed, got 4,234 votes in six Pitt County townships. Gene Rogers got 845 votes over Valerie Myers' 281 in two townships.

Walter B. Jones Jr. and Ed Warren were re-elected to the N.C. House of Representatives with 16,401 votes for Jones and 15,459 for Warren over Harold Zallen's 4,798 and Thomas Herndon's 4,443.

Sheriff Ralph Tyson was re-elected with 15,180 votes over Lee Pascasio's 7,244.

For county commissioner, Tom Johnson got 14,915 votes over Mary Lou Sugg's 7,122. Kenneth Dews got 15,687 over Andy Andrews' 5,233. Re-elected, with no opposition, was Charles McLawhorn as county commissioner.

Tom Haigwood was re-elected as district attorney; Sandra Gaskins as clerk of court. Jim Exum defeated Rhoda Billings for Supreme Court Chief Justice by a vote of 14,066 to 7,979. Willis Whichard got 12,278 votes over Robert Browning's 9,424 for a seat on the State Supreme Court.

Sports

East Carolina University's baseball team captured the regular season championship last spring, then lost to Richmond in the Colonial Athletic Association's first championship tournament.

Earlier in the spring, the ECU women's basketball team, after sharing the CAA basketball regular season title, was defeated by co-champion James Madison in the finals of the league tournament. The Lady Pirates were considered for participation in the Women's National Invitational Tournament in Texas, but said they were refused permission to go by the university's administration.

The Pirate football team had a 2-9 record — for the third straight year. The record was nearly 3-8. The final play of the Southern Mississippi game saw the Eagles complete a long pass downfield, followed by an illegal pass forward to a team member who scored. The penalty, from the spot of the foul, allowed Southern Miss to kick a time-expired field goal to win the game. Films of the game later showed that the receiver was down prior to the illegal pass he threw and the game should have ended at that point. The score was not changed, however.

The ECU men's basketball team went into the holiday season with a 6-2 record, their best in more than 20 years. ECU's women basketball players are also off to a good start as they quest for another 20-win season.

On the high school level, Ayden-Grifton High School capped the winter basketball season by advancing to the state finals, before losing. The Chargers, who won the Eastern Plains 2-A Conference, are among the favorites in the league again this year.

In football this fall, North Pitt won its first-ever Eastern Plains Conference championship and advanced for the second straight year into the playoffs. Ayden-Grifton and Greene Central also moved into the playoffs by placing second and third in the league. (A-G actually tied for first, but was second seeded.)

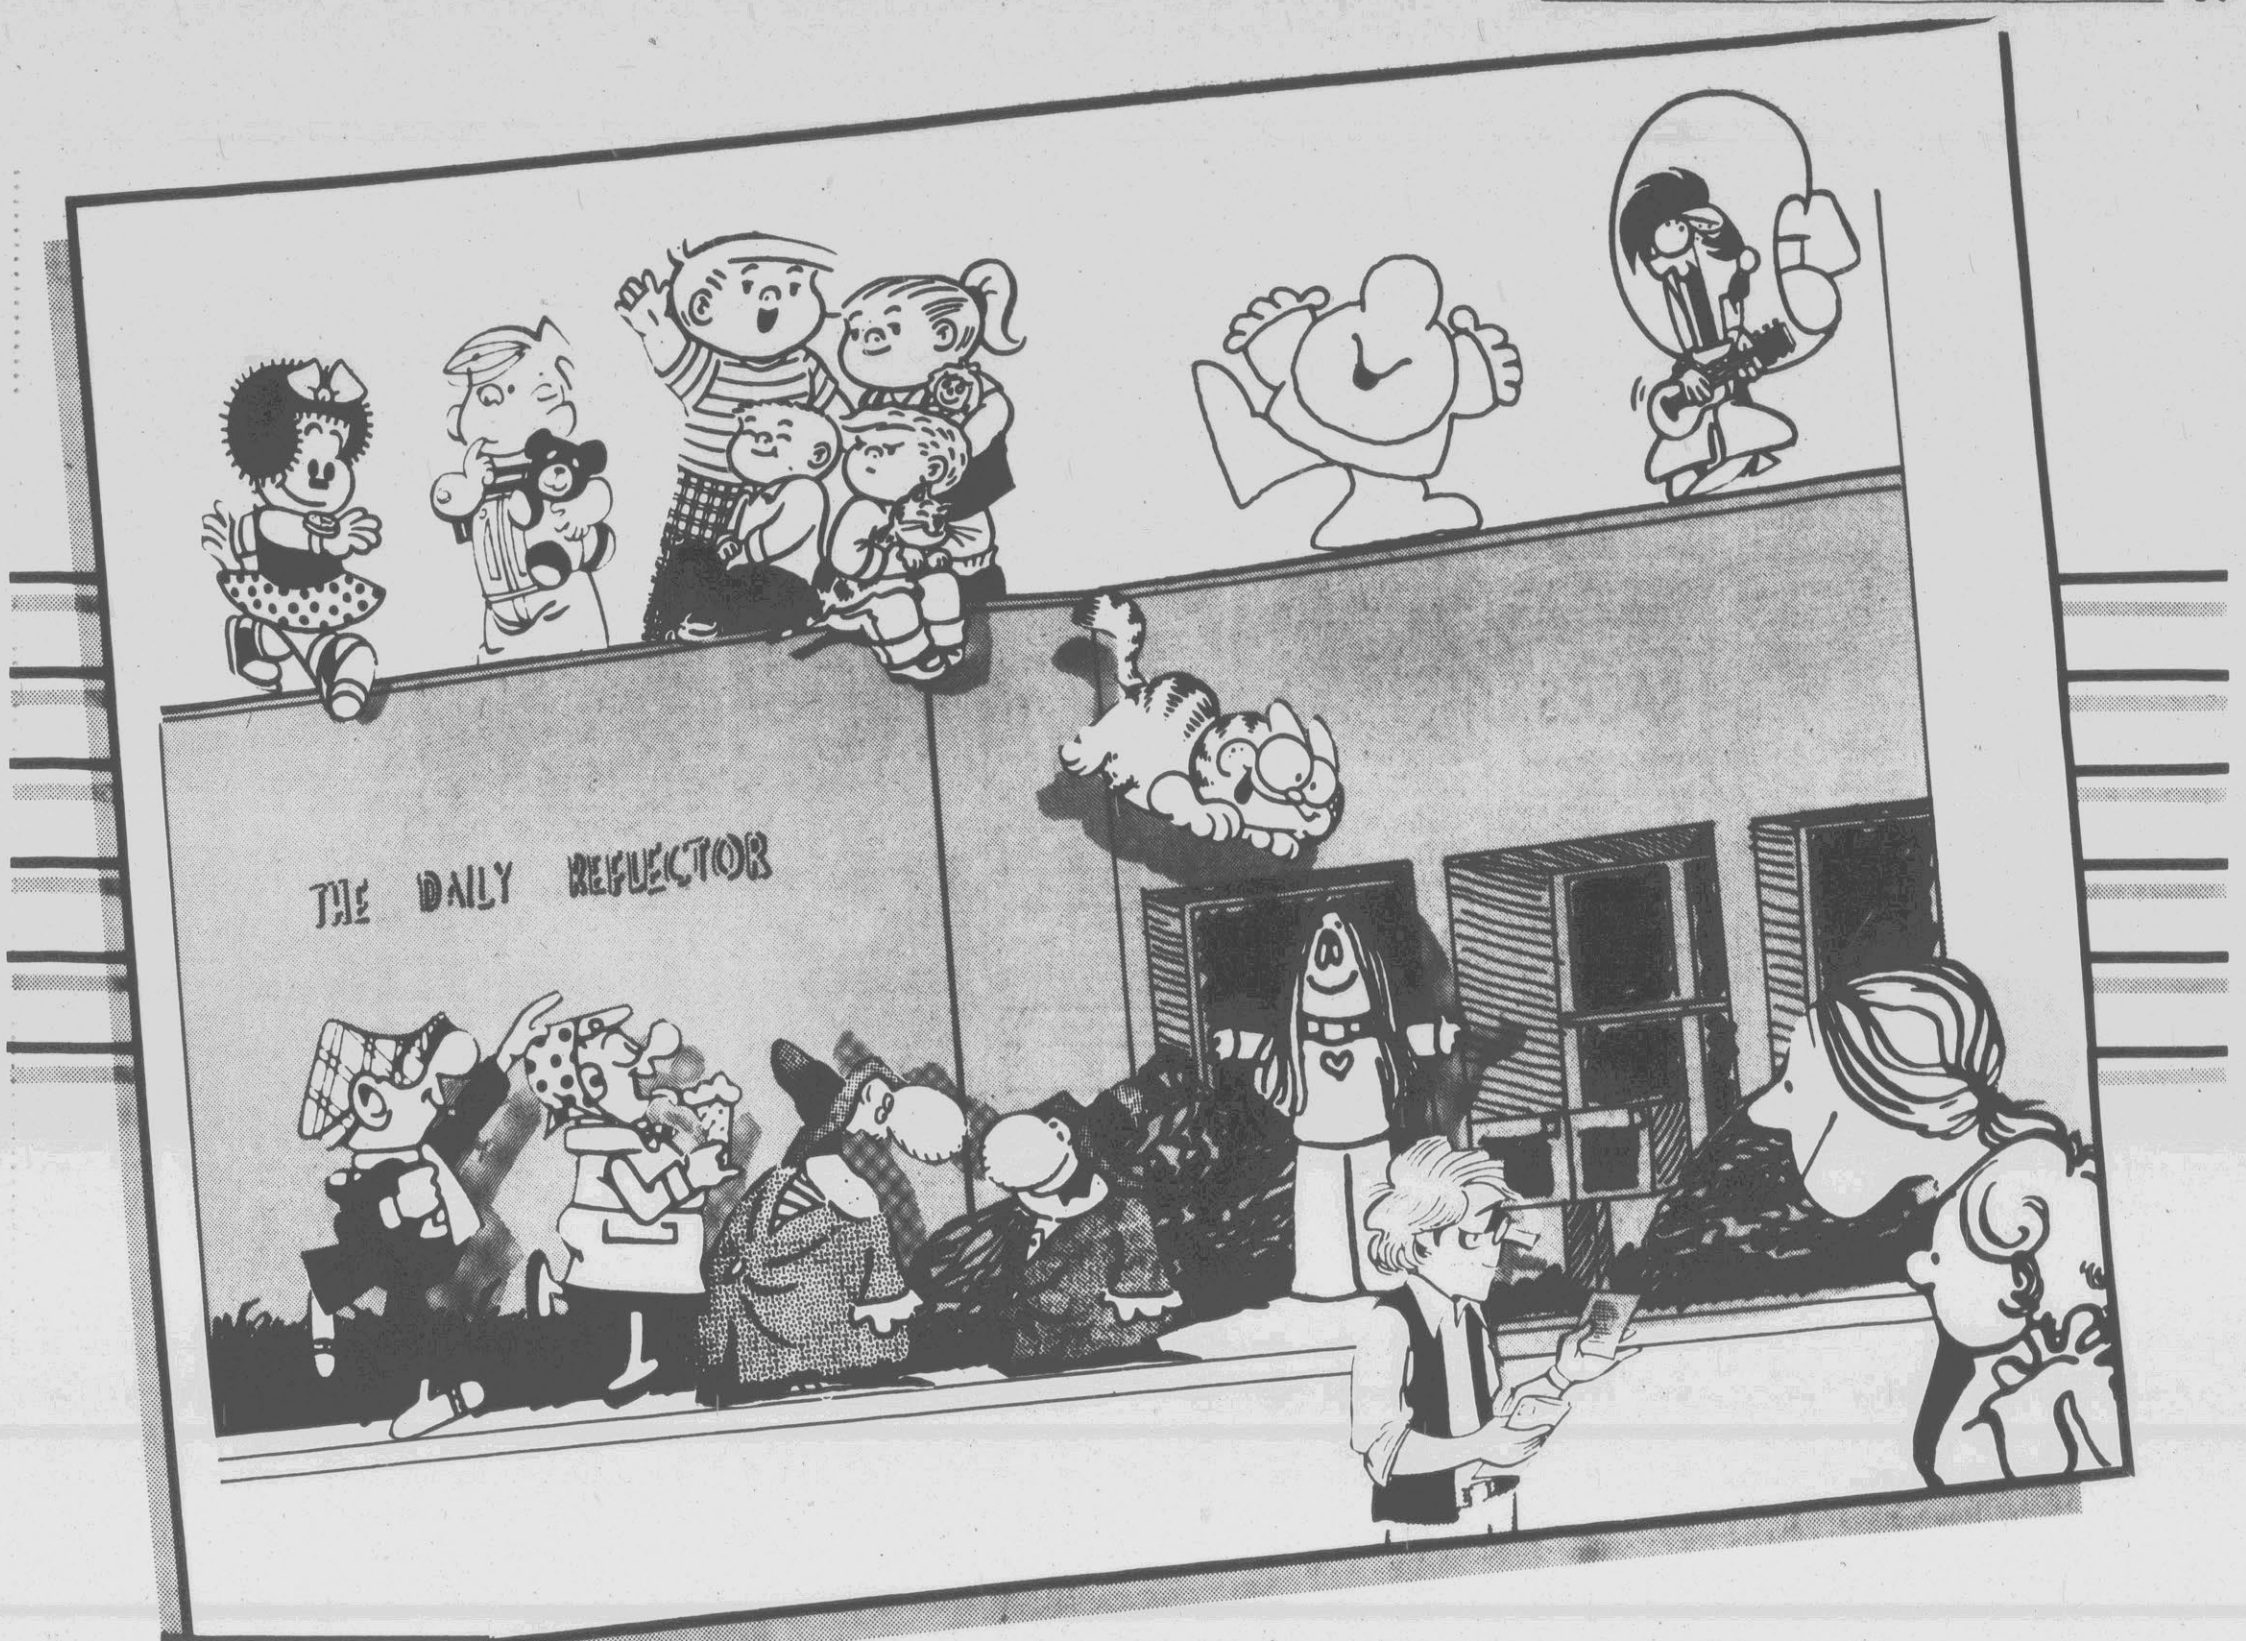

On Nov. 8, the D.H. Conley girls volleyball team won the state championship. The D.H. Conley wrestling team placed fifth in the state championships last February.

1987 Nissan Maxima Burgundy, automatic, loaded, 9,000 miles	$15,450	$14,995

OR LEASE FOR $279 PER MONTH

Now that we are all becoming familiar with the new tax laws and understand how we can make them work for us, the decision to lease your new car or truck has been made a lot simpler. With no more I.T.C., and only partial interest deduction to the individual, vehicle leasing has never been more advantageous. And since maximum allowable depreciation for businesses or business use has now been stretched over five years, leasing becomes an even more attractive alternative to buying your new car or truck. Leasing allows you to deduct your true cost of depreciation annually (for business use).

So you see, leasing is really in your best interest. And at LeasePro, we like to think we're looking out for your best interest. Call the Leasing Professionals today and start putting the new tax laws to work for you in any type or model vehicle you need.

THE BMW 325es. A CAR DESIGNED TO FIRE UP THE DRIVER'S INTERNAL COMBUSTION ENGINE.

To the embarrassment of some two-seater, so-called sports whirlwinds, we present the BMW 325es.

"A beautifully refined hot rod from Bavaria." (Motor Trend)

Its 6-cylinder E-tape pulse provides a torque rich driving force. A BMW sports suspension endows the car with race-bred cornering prowess.

Delivering you from speed to safe stand still is BMW's anti-lock braking system (ABS) — as standard.

And further performance hallmarks include spoilers, front and rear, low profile tires, sports seats, and an M-technic steering wheel.

Contact us for a test drive.

Your new two or three bedroom townhome is designed to make living an incomparable pleasure. Inside each townhome you will discover an inviting great room with vaulted ceiling, a fireplace and generous kitchen and dining areas. Enjoy the spaciousness of walk-in closets and large bedrooms. Relax in a heated whirlpool bath if you wish. Outside, you'll find a private patio that is exclusively yours. And a short walk thru the quiet wooded setting leads you to the swimming and tennis center where you can catch the sun or play a set of tennis with a neighbor.

The attractive neighborhood landscaping and exterior of your home is maintained by a homeowner's association. Painting, pushing a lawnmower, or pulling weeds are things of the past. Your time is your own at The Gates.

THE DAILY REFLECTOR

GREENVILLE, N.C.

PARADE

We have beaten the bushes and combed the countryside to come up with the upbeats, the downbeats and especially the offbeats of 1986—not to mention the outtakes and the retakes, the quips and the quirks, the queries and the quibbles that made the year, if not better, at least different.

TV's Keshia Knight Pulliam, star of The Cosby Show

...AND WHAT A YEAR IT WAS!

By Cleveland Amory

WALTER SCOTT'S

Personality Parade

Want the facts? Opinion? Truth? Write Walter Scott, 140 N. Hamilton Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90210, or phone (213) 651-3375. Full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Q Was Lucille Ball ever accused during the McCarthy era of having joined the Communist Party? Is that why she stays miles away from politics? My mom says she remembers hearing Walter Winchell on the radio making the announcement about Lucy and communism. Can you comment?—G.F., Chatsworth, Calif.

UPI/Bettmann

Lucy in her 20s: Hair wasn't red yet—but Grandpa was

A In 1936, when she was 24 and politically ignorant, Lucille Ball—to satisfy her grandfather, Fred Hunt, an eccentric old radical—registered her intention in Los Angeles to vote Communist in that year's primary election. Seventeen years later, when an investigator for the House Un-American Activities Committee asked about the incident, the comedienne explained that she had done so merely to pacify her grandfather. In September 1953, the late Walter Winchell announced on a Sunday-night broadcast that "the most popular of all television stars has been confronted with her membership in the Communist Party." A few days later—after a rousing patriotic speech to a TV studio audience by her then husband, Desi Arnaz—Lucy was cleared of any Communist affiliation.

Matsumoto/Sygma

Imee Marcos today

Q When Imee Marcos, daughter of Imelda and Ferdinand Marcos, attended Princeton University—she was in the Class of '79—she lived in a large house on a large estate near Princeton, N.J. The property reportedly was owned by the Marcos family. Do they still own it?—Ken. T., Lawrenceville, N.J.

A They do not. Title to the Marcos estate to which you refer was awarded some months ago to the Philippine government under President Corazon Aquino. The estate consists of a six-bedroom house on 13 acres of land.

Q How fares the tempestuous romance between Linda Ronstadt, 40, and George Lucas, 42? One hears that he is planning to produce a film starring his beloved. Does one hear correctly? —Carla Gross, Galveston, Tex.

A The Ronstadt-Lucas romance seems to be progressing nicely at this writing, with a minimum of publicity. Lucas at this point has no plans to star Ronstadt in any of his film productions.

Q How old is the wonderful British actress Deborah Kerr? Did she ever have a thing in a taxicab with the British actor Stewart Granger? And did she ever win an Academy Award? I say she did for her acting in "From Here to Eternity." My know-it-all husband insists she has never won an Oscar. Thanks for the answers.—Philippa H., San Francisco, Calif.

A Deborah Kerr was born in Scotland on Sept. 30, 1921, which makes her 65. In his memoir, "Sparks Fly Upward," published in 1981, Stewart Granger confesses to a weakness of the flesh with Kerr, which reportedly occurred in a chauffeured limousine. Kerr has been nominated six times for an Oscar: "Edward, My Son" (1949), "From Here to Eternity" (1953), "The King and I" (1956), "Heaven Knows, Mr. Allison" (1957), "Separate Tables" (1958) and "The Sundowners" (1960). She has yet, however, to win one.

Phototeque

Kerr and Granger in 1950 film "King Solomon's Mines"

Q In your opinion, who are the two best living American playwrights?—Mattie Morris, Little Rock, Ark.

A Arthur Miller (born 1915), author of "All My Sons," "Death of a Salesman," "The Crucible," "A View From the Bridge" and other outstanding dramas; and Marvin Neil Simon (born 1927), prolific writer of such memorable plays as "Barefoot in the Park," "The Sunshine Boys," "The Odd Couple" and "Brighton Beach Memoirs."

Friedman/Black Star

Harris/Black Star

Popular playwrights Arthur Miller (l) and Neil Simon

Q Is it true that Secretary of State George Shultz used to play Sergeant Shultz on TV's "Hogan's Heroes"? And is his brother Charles Schulz, creator of the "Peanuts" cartoon strip? And now that Pierre Trudeau is no longer Canada's prime minister, has he gone back to drawing "Doonesbury"?—David Barch, Berkeley, Calif.

A As you undoubtedly know, George Shultz never appeared on "Hogan's Heroes." Charles Schulz, creator of "Peanuts," is not the Secretary of State's brother. And it is Garry Trudeau—not Pierre Elliott Trudeau, former prime minister of Canada—who draws "Doonesbury."

Q Can you explain why the following screen stars of yesterday have been through five, six, seven divorces and wound up with no husband: Ginger Rogers, Rita Hayworth, Liz Taylor and Lana Turner?—Marion Farrell, Seattle, Wash.

A Mostly, it is because these actresses are or have been self-supporting and see no reason for another marriage. Rita Hayworth, of course, is ill with Alzheimer's disease.

The Best And Worst Of Everything

BY CLEVELAND AMORY

America's best and brightest were on display as we celebrated Lady Liberty's centennial in a gaudy, glorious, excessive and inspiring four-day tribute to our nation's classic symbol of freedom.

COVER PHOTOGRAPH BY DEBORAH FEINGOLD

Wesley Woodin Camp

Democracy triumphed. Corazon Aquino was sworn in as the Philippines' new president.

Garcia/Gamma-Liaison

The homeless were noticed. Americans raised hands and money for our own tired and poor in a human chain that spanned the continent.

Rhai/Gamma-Liaison

Regan/Camera 5

Politics and show-biz met again. Carmel-by-the-Sea's new mayor, Clint Eastwood.

Deborah Feingold

We all took other liberties last year besides our trip to the statue. Herewith some souvenirs.

Best Political Note

Rep. Newt Gingrich (R., Ga.) in "Helping Lead America Through an Era of Change—A Message to Republican Candidates About the 1986 Campaign":

In order for us [Republicans] to become an ascendant majority, we have to train ourselves in new majoritarian behavior almost like running a franchise. We are like McDonald's; we have a wonderful product—our Egg McMuffin is called Ronald Reagan. It is a wonderful product—people love Ronald Reagan. We have not learned how to franchise enough local candidates . . .

It's no time to get discouraged—Clint Eastwood won big.

Atlas/Sygma

President Reagan.

Worst Political Note

From the Associated Press:

The nomination of women to run for governor in Nebraska is a sign of "God's curse," says the Rev. Everett Sileven. Republican Kay Orr and Democrat Helen Boosalis won their parties' nominations in the May 13 primaries. Sileven, a Baptist minister, finished fourth in the GOP primary, with just 2.1% of the vote. "Jeremiah plainly tells us that when the people of a nation are willing to accept the leadership of a woman, it is a sure sign of God's curse," Sileven said.

Talk about a sore loser.

Best News For The Under-60 Set

A lot of people think their brains begin to shrink as soon as they reach physical maturity—but a West German researcher says it just isn't so. Dr. Herbert Huag, of Lubeck Medical College, says the brain sustains itself nicely until about the age of 60, when it really does begin to wither away.

Wait till he gets to be a senior citizen. He probably won't remember he said it.

Best News For The Over-45 Set

From the Knight-Ridder News Service:

If what sociologist Lynette Milner sees in her crystal ball holds true, shopping malls in the year 2000 won't be jammed with yuppies or teenagers but with an aging brand of savvy consumers she dubs Senior Independent Pioneers, or Sippies.

Sippies are today's baby boomers in granny shoes. This generation will mature into a group of aged, active consumers who will bring their own kind of clout to the marketplace. At the turn of the century, 30.6 million Americans will be over age 56. Sippies will be 55- to 80-year-olds, mostly women, because females outlive males in our society. They will have more time and money to burn than today's seniors.

Sounds like heaven, doesn't it? No more yuppies. Just pioneers—and with money to burn!

Worst News From Japan

From The New York Times:

A single Japanese securities firm—Nomura—is responsible for financing nearly a third of the entire United States national debt.

Worst Diet Advice

Dr. Don Powell, director of the American Institute for Preventive Medicine in Southfield, Mich., recommends that you lose weight by using your imagination to turn your irresistible snack into a disgusting, unappetizing mess. "Picture your favorite chocolate cake with cigarette butts in it, or spiders crawling over it," Dr. Powell advises. "Do this while you're eating the cake, taking small bites and chewing well."

We can understand the small bites, but we've got a problem with that "chewing well."

Worst Fitness Advice

A tie between Dolly Parton and George C. Scott.

Parton: "I bought all those videos—Richard Simmons, Jane Fonda. I love to sit and eat cookies and watch them."

Scott: "For exercise, I walk by the barbells and wave."

Worst Survival Strategy For Teenagers

From "How to Get Respect From Your Parents" in How to Tell If You're a Grownup Yet, by Cornelia Ravenal:

Teach them by example. You don't want your mother to treat you like a child? Treat her like a child. That's right. This goes for your father too. Smile indulgently when they say something cute. Repeat it in the third person when they're in the room. ("Did you hear what they just said? Isn't that the cutest thing?") Instead of hugs and handshakes, try ruffling Dad's hair and saying, "Howya doin', Sport?" Instead of making faces when Mom asks you about your love-life, raise your eyebrows and tell her you hope she didn't pick that up on the streets. Finally, do not refer to them as parents. Call them "the kids."

Elwood H. Smith

Best Survival Strategy For Teenagers

From The New York Times:

Some parents, fathers in particular, still are not too familiar with the concept of boys' earrings. "My father said he was going to rip it out," Keith Gail said. "I said, 'No way.'" Keith slept on the earring side of his head for a week, just in case.

Best Time For Being Burgled

From the Associated Press:

A 31-year-old Daytona Beach, Fla., man has confessed to a string of burglaries committed while people sat in their living rooms engrossed in TV. Police report Thursday was the big night because of the superhit The Cosby Show, Family Ties and Cheers. In fact, some dog-owners, intent on the action, would tell their barking animals to hush, giving the prime-time burglar an easy target.

Best Burglary

From the New York Daily News:

Bethesda, Md.—Nathan Peabody, an ice cream parlor manager, received a call Sunday night from a man claiming to be a police officer. The caller said police had received a tip that his store was going to be robbed later that night. The caller told Peabody not to be a hero and just to give the robber the money—police would wait outside the store to arrest the suspect when he came out.

Sure enough, at 10:25 p.m., a man with a scruffy beard entered, brandished a knife and demanded money. Peabody complied and watched the suspect flee.

Peabody waited for the police. He's still waiting.

Best Nixon News

From Us magazine:

Note left by former President Nixon in a Burger King on the New Jersey shore:

Best wishes to Burger King, home of the Whopper.

Love,
Richard Nixon

Worst Nixon News

From The New York Times:

Sam Snead, the golfing great, thinks Richard M. Nixon was a good President. But he objects to Mr. Nixon's golfing ethics.

In Slamming Sam, Mr. Snead—referring to Watergate—writes that Mr. Nixon "got caught at something petty that he shouldn't have done." He adds: "To tell the truth, I caught Nixon once myself."

While they were playing golf together, Nixon landed in a rough so bad "no one could shoot out of unless you had a bazooka," Snead recalls. When Nixon disappeared into the thicket, Snead assumed he was going to drop another ball, take the penalty and play on.

"But hell no—out comes his ball, flyin' high onto the fairway," Snead writes. "Then Nixon comes out of the woods looking real pleased with himself. I knew he threw it out, but I didn't say anything. What could I say? He was the President."

Best Explanation For Past Behavior

"Doonesbury" cartoonist Garry Trudeau: "This is the only country in the world where failing to promote yourself is widely regarded as being arrogant."

Worst Explanation For Past Behavior

Best Encounter

Rex/RDR Productions

Prince Charles met Tina Turner at a charity concert and paid her a royal compliment.

From the Star:

The man Tina Turner says has always been special to her is Britain's own Prince Charles. Eyes shining with excitement, the pop diva describes the moment she finally met him at a charity concert.

"I've followed his whole life, and Prince Charles has always been my hero, my secret love," Tina exclaims. "I specially dressed down to meet him and even put aside my orange lipstick for a more demure pink, because I wanted to be discreet.

"He said, 'I say, you have the most marvelous legs I've ever seen,' and we both burst out laughing. At that moment, I was so full of joy, I can't describe it."

Best Cooking News—For Southern Cooks

From Cooking: A Cook's Dictionary, by Henry Beard and Roy McKie:

Southern Cooking—American regional cuisine featuring dishes like hush puppies, hoppin' john, hominy grits, okra gumbo, chitlins, po' boys, potlikker and pone. Cooks without roots in the Deep South rarely serve these unique foods, and that is a serious culinary omission, since the occasional presentation of an authentic Southern meal gives the home chef the option at a later date of announcing an accidentally burned heap of black, greasy, crusted goo as the traditional Gulf Coast treat Fuddah, Crudlins, Po' Nuff, and Mumble Grunny, with Spacklins and Shmuh.

Worst Cooking News—For New England Chefs

Same source:

Turkey is intimately linked in American minds with Thanksgiving, a holiday that celebrates the feast held in 1621 at Plymouth Colony between the Pilgrims and Chief Massasoit of the Wampanoags. Massasoit, who favored peace with the European settlers, brought turkey, goose, venison, and various fruits and berries. His canny brother, Succotash, who hated and feared the colonists and hoped to encourage them to go back home by convincing them that New World food was unspeakable, brought the corn-and-lima-bean dish that bears his name to this day, as well as chipped buffalo on cornbread, squash slaw, a beer brewed from thistles, codfish mush, beet stew, boiled turnips, chokecherry pie, deer liver and leeks, and eel wine. Flabbergasted when the hungry Puritans greedily devoured his most loathsome concoctions, Succotash went mad and spent the rest of his days going from settlement to settlement in odd getups, howling, chanting and mumbling. He is thus regarded as the spiritual father both of New England cooking and of summer-stock theater.

A 20th-Anniversary Tribute to STAR TREK

- 24K gold-on-gold border design
- Shown smaller than actual size of 8½"
- A strictly limited edition porcelain plate

THE TROUBLE WITH TRIBBLES

On September 8, 1966, Star Trek® premiered on television and won an immediate following among scientists, science fiction fans, and adventure enthusiasts.

Since that day, over the past two decades, episodes of this powerful science fiction drama have been aired time and again, around the world. Now as a special 20th-anniversary tribute to Star Trek, one of the show's most beloved scenes has been honored on a fine porcelain, limited-edition collector plate.

"The Trouble With Tribbles"™ depicts the dashing Captain Kirk, chest-high in furry little creatures called Tribbles. When Kirk opens a storage bin, the Tribbles have multiplied and spill out everywhere—producing a look of utter exasperation on this noble leader's face.

Celebrity artist Susie Morton has captured Kirk's expression to perfection for "The Trouble With Tribbles," premiere in a series of eight plates entitled Star Trek: The Commemorative Collection. Each plate will be strictly limited to a worldwide edition of 90 firing days, and accompanied by a numbered Certificate of Authenticity.

As the owner of "The Trouble With Tribbles," you are guaranteed the right—but never the obligation—to acquire the seven subsequent issues in the collection. Furthermore, you may order at no risk, since our 100% Buy-Back Guarantee assures that you may return any plate for a full refund, within 30 days of receipt.

The immense popularity of the Star Trek theme and the significance of the show's 20th anniversary will likely generate immediate demand for "The Trouble With Tribbles." Thus, you should place your reservation promptly. To avoid any chance of disappointment, order today!

Worst News For Men

Diane Desimone in Mademoiselle:

During the past two decades, scientists have been studying how the brain behaves in males and females. And through a variety of carefully designed lab tests, researchers have found a whole slew of ways in which the behavior and skills of men and women differ.

Women, for example, seem to be much more sensitive to sound than men are. We're more attuned to all manner of tastes, smells and touches. We're better at reading the emotional content of faces. And we have the upper hand in a number of important verbal skills: reading, grammar and verbal reasoning. We're also better at putting information and events into context than men are, and we pay more attention to small details.

Men, on the other hand, are . . . better than women, by and large, at dealing with maps, mazes and math.

It's that "by and large" that gets us. But we have noticed that women are getting better at mazes.

Worst News About Marriage For Men

A Chicago Sun-Times survey found that 77% of the men asked said they would marry their current wives if they had it to do all over again. But, in a survey of 3009 Woman's Day readers, only 50% of the women in their first marriage said they would marry the same man.

As Frank Crowninshield, first editor of "Vanity Fair," used to say, "Married men make very poor husbands."

Best Defense Of California

From PSA magazine:

A sweet young San Diegan with a deep tan—yes, that's redundant—was listening to a sour old Grape from New York. "The trouble with Southern California," the Grape was saying, "is there just aren't any seasons." The San Diegan smiled benignly at the foreigner across the beach bar. "We have our four seasons," she replied. "We have early summer, summer, late summer and next summer."

Worst News For The Bewitched

From Newsweek:

St. Philip's Episcopal Church in Charleston, S.C., has for more than 300 years been a sanctuary for traditional Anglicanism. Pews are passed in families from one generation to another. When he arrived 2½ years ago, the Rev. Henry (Renny) Scott, a boyish, Ivy League-educated priest, seemed the perfect guardian for these traditions. That's not the way it turned out.

In May, Scott abruptly resigned from the pulpit, saying that for 14 years he had been under the spell of a witch. The curse, as Scott told it, was cast upon him by a Vassar College coed he dated while a senior at Yale. It had remained with him, he said, through graduate study at Harvard and the Episcopal Theological Seminary and only ended in 1981. "Nothing I did could set me free," he said, referring to a "pattern of bondage." There was little elaboration, and the rector left town with his wife and three young children. His whereabouts were unknown.

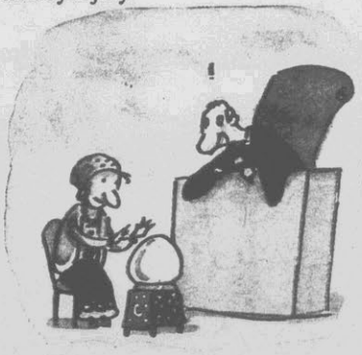

Charleston was awash in rumors, and the local newspaper, The News and Courier, editorialized that the details should be disclosed to "protect the proud reputation" of St. Philip's. But protective parishioners sent a ream of letters, telling the newspaper to mind its own business.

As for the witch business, a spokesperson at Vassar has denied having told a reporter: "It is not the policy of Vassar College to confirm or deny the existence of witchcraft."

"Ultra Limousine Corp. has just finished building what is believed to be the world's largest limousine," The New York Times reported. "It's a whopping 92 feet. It carries a price tag of $3 million, though you can rent it for just $10,000 a day. To park it in Manhattan, you'd have to pump quarters into four consecutive parking meters. It's great for someone with a big family; it seats 35 people and boasts some nifty extras: a small swimming pool, a Jacuzzi, a big-screen TV, a microwave oven and a 60-gallon fish tank. For the golfer who never has enough time to practice, there's a 20-foot putting green."

What? No think tank?

From a Sports Illustrated article quoting the star quarterback of the University of Miami Hurricanes, Vinny Testaverde:

"I was always one of those kids trying to find the easy way out. Here, as a Phys. Ed. major, I figured I'd take the easiest classes first. But then people jumped all over me, and I came out looking bad." (One semester, Testaverde's course load was published as Introduction to Sports, Nutrition, Introduction to Recreation, and Sports Injury.)

"Now that I'm taking marketing, biology, public affairs—things like that—nobody wants to know."

The winning nomination for the "1986 Golfaholic of the Year" (awarded by Golfaholics Anonymous), submitted by Mrs. Barbara W. Owen of Jeffersonville, Ind.:

Hugh and I first dated in high school. To see him with any regularity, I was forced to meet him at the golf course, where I would walk around with him. On many of our dates, it was necessary for me to drive because his hands hurt too much from hitting shag balls. His sore hands would even at times prevent us from engaging in our "normal activities." In college, he played 54 holes in one day on three different courses 60 miles apart. He has played 18 holes in an hour and a half, in 90-degree heat.

Gwendolen Cates

Golf nut Hugh Owen and valiant wife, Barbara.

Although I thought I knew what I was getting into, nothing prepared me for our honeymoon at the Doral Country Club in Miami. On the first night, after riding all day in a golf cart with Hugh, upon preparing for what was to be a very special evening, when I came out of the powder room I was shocked and more than a little upset to find him sound asleep. Rather than kill him, which I was surely tempted to do, I carefully placed his golf clubs in bed with him, putting his arms around them, at which time he sighed in pleasure.

Things have not improved. Our first home was on a golf course . . . Our vacation movies and slides are 90% golf, 10% family. While he can tell anyone what hole, on what course, and what he scored on each picture, he can barely remember the names of his relatives in the pictures. He has a golf net in the garage and a putting cup in his office. All three of our children (10, 12, 14) are taking golf lessons . . .

I could go on describing times he has played during tornado warnings, hurricanes in Myrtle Beach and Miami and snowstorms—clearing a path in the snow to putt. When he dies, I'm sure he will want his clubs in the coffin so he can tee off as soon as the first tee is clear, regardless of the course location!

Respectfully submitted—Hugh's usually loving, part-time wife,

Postscript For The Future

A Florida company offering burials in space was charged with operating an unlicensed company, reported the New York Daily News.

Celestis advertises that, beginning in 1988, its private rocket will launch into space the cremated remains of a loved one packed into a gold-plated lipstick-sized capsule. For $3900, the spacecraft will be placed in orbit around the Earth. For $4600, it will be sent into deep space.

However, State Controller Gerald Lewis said that, under state law, before the company can obtain a permit, it must own at least 15 contiguous acres of land with a paved access road.

We can understand the need for access—but paved?

Best End Of An Era

As chronicled in The New York Times:

Playboy is closing its last three company-owned clubs. On July 1, Bunnies in New York, Los Angeles and Chicago will hang up their cottontails . . . Henceforth, the Bunnies will be a nostalgia act, frozen in time like [Playboy founder] Hugh Hefner's pipe, slippers and black pajamas.

"My first thought was to call the waitresses Playmates, after the magazine's nude centerfold subjects," Hefner recalled, "and have them in short, nightie-type outfits. The notion of using the Bunny costume was first suggested by the girlfriend of one of my executives. Her mother sewed up the first sample."

That costume, based on the magazine's rabbit mascot, caused trouble in New York. As Hefner recalled, "The license administrator, who was Catholic and had studied for the priesthood, felt the costume was bawdy and wouldn't give us an entertainment license." The license was eventually granted, but only after the administrator was replaced. And in Boston, Hefner continued, "we showed the costume in front of the liquor commission, and one of the commissioners literally swiveled around in his chair and wouldn't look at the Bunnies."

Ahead of his time, that boy.

Second Best End Of An Era

From Scripps-Howard News Service:

OK, yupsters, you've survived condo living, working parenthood, pinstriped suits, office politics, jogging, sushi, Trivial Pursuit and snide remarks from every quarter.

Are you ready for the Next Big Thing?

It's Mid-Life Crisis, a not-so-serious board game about that angst-ridden time between ages 30 and 55. It might be just the antidote for that special friend who is climbing the walls seriously depressed, completely blitzed because he's turning "Four Oh" or "Four Uh Oh" . . .

During play, one encounters such real-life sticky wickets as a spouse who does est; incurable male pattern baldness; unrepairable sports cars . . . Draw a card, and you're most likely to read something like: "Your daughter is getting married to an itinerant poet. You see that he is a man whose future is securely behind him. Subtract $1000 for the wedding and add 100 stress points."

No year can be all bad that phases out both Bunnies and yuppies.

"Sudafed 12 Hour capsules give me more than long-lasting relief. They help give me peace of mind."

Sudafed® has always given you fast, effective relief from your stuffy nose and sinus congestion, without making you drowsy.

But now, along with all that relief comes more peace of mind: a remarkable new safety-seal system for Sudafed 12 Hour capsules.

1. Safety sealed packages—A unique, technologically advanced tape sealing system not only bonds the ends of each carton, but also the side seam where the panels of the carton are glued. This tape is specially designed to shred or tear the carton's surface, if removed.

2. Safety sealed pockets—Long recognized as an effective method of protection, the safety-sealed pocket protects each capsule inside the carton with a tough, clear plastic bubble and a sealed foil backing.

3. Safety sealed capsules—Each gelatin capsule is also sealed. A contrasting color band, made of the same material as the capsule, seals the capsule halves together.

Your health and safety are very important to us. So remember, as with any product, carefully examine each package before using.

When you want capsules for relief of your cold symptoms, just look for our new package with a description of each safety-seal feature on the top panel.

Sudafed 12 Hour has always given you fast, effective relief. And now our unique safety-seal system also helps give you peace of mind.

Future First Ladies Jackie and Lady Bird in 1960—years before their millions rolled in

Some weeks ago, Lady Bird Johnson sold two radio stations in Austin, Tex.—KLBJ-AM and KLBJ-FM—for a reported $27.5 million. In 1946, she paid just $40,000 for the stations.

This highly profitable transaction set us to wondering which of the five living former First Ladies—Rosalynn Carter, Betty Ford, Pat Nixon, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis and Lady Bird Johnson—is the wealthiest. It used to be a tossup between Jackie Onassis, the recipient of a $26 million settlement from the Onassis estate, and Mrs. Johnson, who, by judicious investment of an inheritance managed by the late Lyndon Johnson, acquired a multimillion-dollar communications empire.

Since the KLBJ deal last November, however, the tossup between Lady Bird and Jackie has become a "no contest." Mrs. Johnson, it strikes us—with her land and communications holdings—is worth a good deal more than Mrs. Onassis. Not, mind you, that Jackie is hurting financially.

Bad Luck for Marilyn

It seems that almost everyone friendly with Boy George, London's heroin-addicted singing transvestite, is meeting with bad luck.

First, Mike Rudetsky, an American guitarist-composer who had worked with Boy George's Culture Club band last summer, died at 27 from a heroin overdose in the singer's London house. Then pouting pop star Marilyn (real name: Peter Robinson), another singing transvestite and possibly George's closest friend, got into a fight with a London cabbie. Marilyn accused him of taking a longer route than necessary in order to pad the fare. The cabbie, his integrity sullied, sailed into Marilyn with fists flying, leaving him/her battered and bloodied.

When made up, Marilyn is said to be more attractive than Boy George was at the peak of his fame. At 23, Marilyn is two years younger than the singer (real name: George O'Dowd).

She Deserves Better

Unarguably, Martina Navratilova, 30, formerly of Czechoslovakia but now of Fort Worth, Tex., is the best woman tennis player in the world. She has won every title worth winning, including seven Wimbledon singles and three U.S. Open championships. She is an intelligent, generous woman who probably has donated more of her prize earnings to charities than any other current tennis pro. Her conduct on the court is exemplary. She always gives the fans a match for their money. She has raised women's tennis to a new level. She occupies a class of her own.

UPI/Bettmann

Maligned Martina

Why, then, is she not as popular a crowd-pleaser in this country as, say, Chris Evert Lloyd? Can it be because Martina is foreign-born or so superior in her play that her triumphs are now taken for granted? Can it be because she is a victory-obsessed competitor who neither asks nor gives any quarter? Or is it because she has honestly and bravely revealed her bisexuality, rather than suffer the trauma that comes from living in the closet? In any case, she is a woman worthy of our admiration and respect.

Top TV Money-Maker

Merv Griffin, the TV talk-show host who used to own the program, says Wheel of Fortune is not only the most popular quiz show on the air but also the most profitable. According to Griffin—who sold the TV show, along with a few others, to Coca-Cola for an estimated $250 million—Wheel of Fortune costs about $7 million a year to produce and grosses about $120 million before taxes.

IN STEP WITH: Mariette Hartley

BY JAMES BRADY

Esparza/CBS

She won't be wearing a bathrobe on her new morning show, but that doesn't mean Mariette won't be having fun.

BRADY'S BITS

Mariette is cheerfully willing to make fun of her own wholesome, all-American image. While we were getting ready to do a TV interview, with the cameramen setting up, I mentioned it. She promptly pulled down the V-neck of her yellow pullover sweater to show just the hint of black lace underneath. The camera guys goggled as Mariette Hartley erupted in wholesome, all-American laughter.

Next week, if all goes well, CBS unveils its brand-new morning television lineup. It stars Mariette Hartley, who no longer has to assure us she isn't really married to James Garner.

SIX OR SEVEN YEARS AGO, NBC OFFERED Mariette Hartley a big, fat, five-year contract to join the Today show. She had two small kids and a husband working in Los Angeles, and she turned down the offer, agreeing only to fill in briefly for the vacationing Jane Pauley. Last year, I asked Mariette if she ever regretted it.

"Absolutely not," she said. 'I would have hated the job and the hours."

Next week, barring last-minute scheduling changes, Miss Hartley takes over as co-host with Rolland Smith of the CBS dawn patrol. And if anyone can help get this drastically reshaped morning show out of the ratings doldrums, it may be Mariette.

She is a big, handsome, rawboned woman who decided at the age of 10, after seeing a little theater production of Jack and the Beanstalk, that she was going to be an actress. At 14, she auditioned for the legendary Eva Le Gallienne and, at 17, dropped out of college to work in the theater full-time. Before she was 20, she was a success—but she was not happy. Onstage, it was fine; offstage, she suffered back spasms. "Applause lasts two minutes," she told the writer Sheila Weller. "After that, you're in trouble."

She married hastily, and disastrously. Her father, an advertising executive who suffered business reverses, fell into depression and shot himself. Under contract to MGM, Mariette went for a year without a role. Her life, she confesses, "seemed to disintegrate." It was on the hit TV series Peyton Place, she admits cheerfully, that she first was cast as "plain and passive," always losing the guy to a "prettier" sister.

At one point, Mariette gave up acting entirely and worked as a retail salesclerk. But the theater maintained its pull. She did plays and television and began doing commercials. On *M*A*S*H*, Alan Alda himself wrote a part for her. She played opposite Bill Bixby and Dick Van Dyke and Charlton Heston. And when an ad agency put her into a Polaroid commercial with James Garner, the sassy, appealing pairing was so successful that she donned a T-shirt that read, "I am not Mrs. James Garner."

What she really was was Mrs. Patrick Boyriven. Her second husband is a French director who fathered their two children and who seems to have awakened in her a rollicking sense of humor and a new confidence. Their son's name is Sean, and I asked if that wasn't an odd name for a French father and an American mother of Dutch/English extraction. "Hey, my husband's name is Patrick," she answered. "Why not Sean?"

They're calling the new CBS show The Morning Program. Chances are most of us will simply be talking about "Mariette Hartley's Show." Folks at CBS are saying it will rise and fall on her appeal and nationwide audience acceptance.

BORN: June 21, 1941, in New York City.
PERSONAL: Married to John Seventa, 1959-61. Married Patrick Boyriven in 1976; two children: Sean, 11, and Justine, 8.

Dept. 630, P.O. Box 1111, Terre Haute, IN 47811

Yes, please enroll me in the CBS Video Club under the terms outlined in this advertisement. As a member, I need buy just five more movies at regular Club prices within the next two years.

Check one: ☐ VHS ☐ BETA

Send me these 3 movies for $3.30 each (that's $9.90).

#	#
#	#

Please check how paying:

☐ My check is enclosed.

☐ Charge my introductory movies and future Club purchases to:

☐ MasterCard ☐ Diners Club ☐ American Express ☐ VISA

X19/X21
X20/X22

Account #_____ Expiration Date_____

Signature_____

Name_____ Phone ( )_____

Address_____

City_____ State_____ Zip_____

Note: CBS Video Club reserves the right to reject any application or cancel any membership. Offer limited to continental U.S. (excluding Alaska) and Canada. Canadian residents will be serviced from Toronto (offer may vary). Applicable sales tax added to all orders.

Advance Selection.

SAVE UP TO $60 MORE— HAVE LESS TO BUY LATER!

Order a fourth movie now for only $19.95 and your membership obligation is immediately reduced (you then need buy only 4 more, instead of 5).

☐ Also send my first selection #_____ for only $19.95, plus $3.00 shipping/handling, which I am adding to my $9.90 payment. I then need buy only 4 more (instead of 5) in the next 2 years.

Now you can own any three movies here for just $3.30 each with membership in the CBS Video Club! That's for less than the price of movie tickets, less than the price of most rentals, and they're yours for keeps!

Choose from the best, too. Return of the Jedi, Sound of Music, Casablanca and more. There's no membership fee, and you don't have to buy a lot of movies.

Just buy five more within the next two years. The movies you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently range from $29.95 to $79.95, plus shipping and handling. (Extra-long films and specials may cost a bit more.)

BONUS PLAN—SAVE 50%

After buying five movies at regular Club prices in the next two years, you can cancel. Or stay with us and save even more under our current Bonus Plan. With each movie you buy, the plan currently allows you to help yourself to another movie of equal value or less at 50% off. (And you can save as much as $60 more right now—see the Advance Selection box at left.)

About every four weeks (up to 13 times a year) we'll send you our CBS Video Club Magazine, reviewing our Director's Selection plus many alternate movies. You may also receive up to four times a year Special Selection offers usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 17 buying opportunities.

CHOOSE FROM HUNDREDS OF HIT MOVIES

As a member, you'll always have a wide range of choices. If you want the Director's Selection, don't do a thing. It will arrive automatically. If you prefer an alternate title, or none at all, just return the card provided by the date specified.

You'll always have two full weeks to decide. (If you ever receive a movie without having had a full two weeks to decide, send it back at our expense.) There's a toll-free number to call if you have any questions or service requests.

Join today and we'll send your three movies for just $3.30 each along with more details on how the Club works. If you're not satisfied, return everything within 10 days for a full, prompt refund with no further obligation.

For faster service, use your credit card and our toll-free number to order. Just call 1-800-CBS-4804 (in Indiana 1-800-742-1200). Or mail the coupon.

'At Mother's Request' Is A Stretch For Powers

By Robert DiMattea

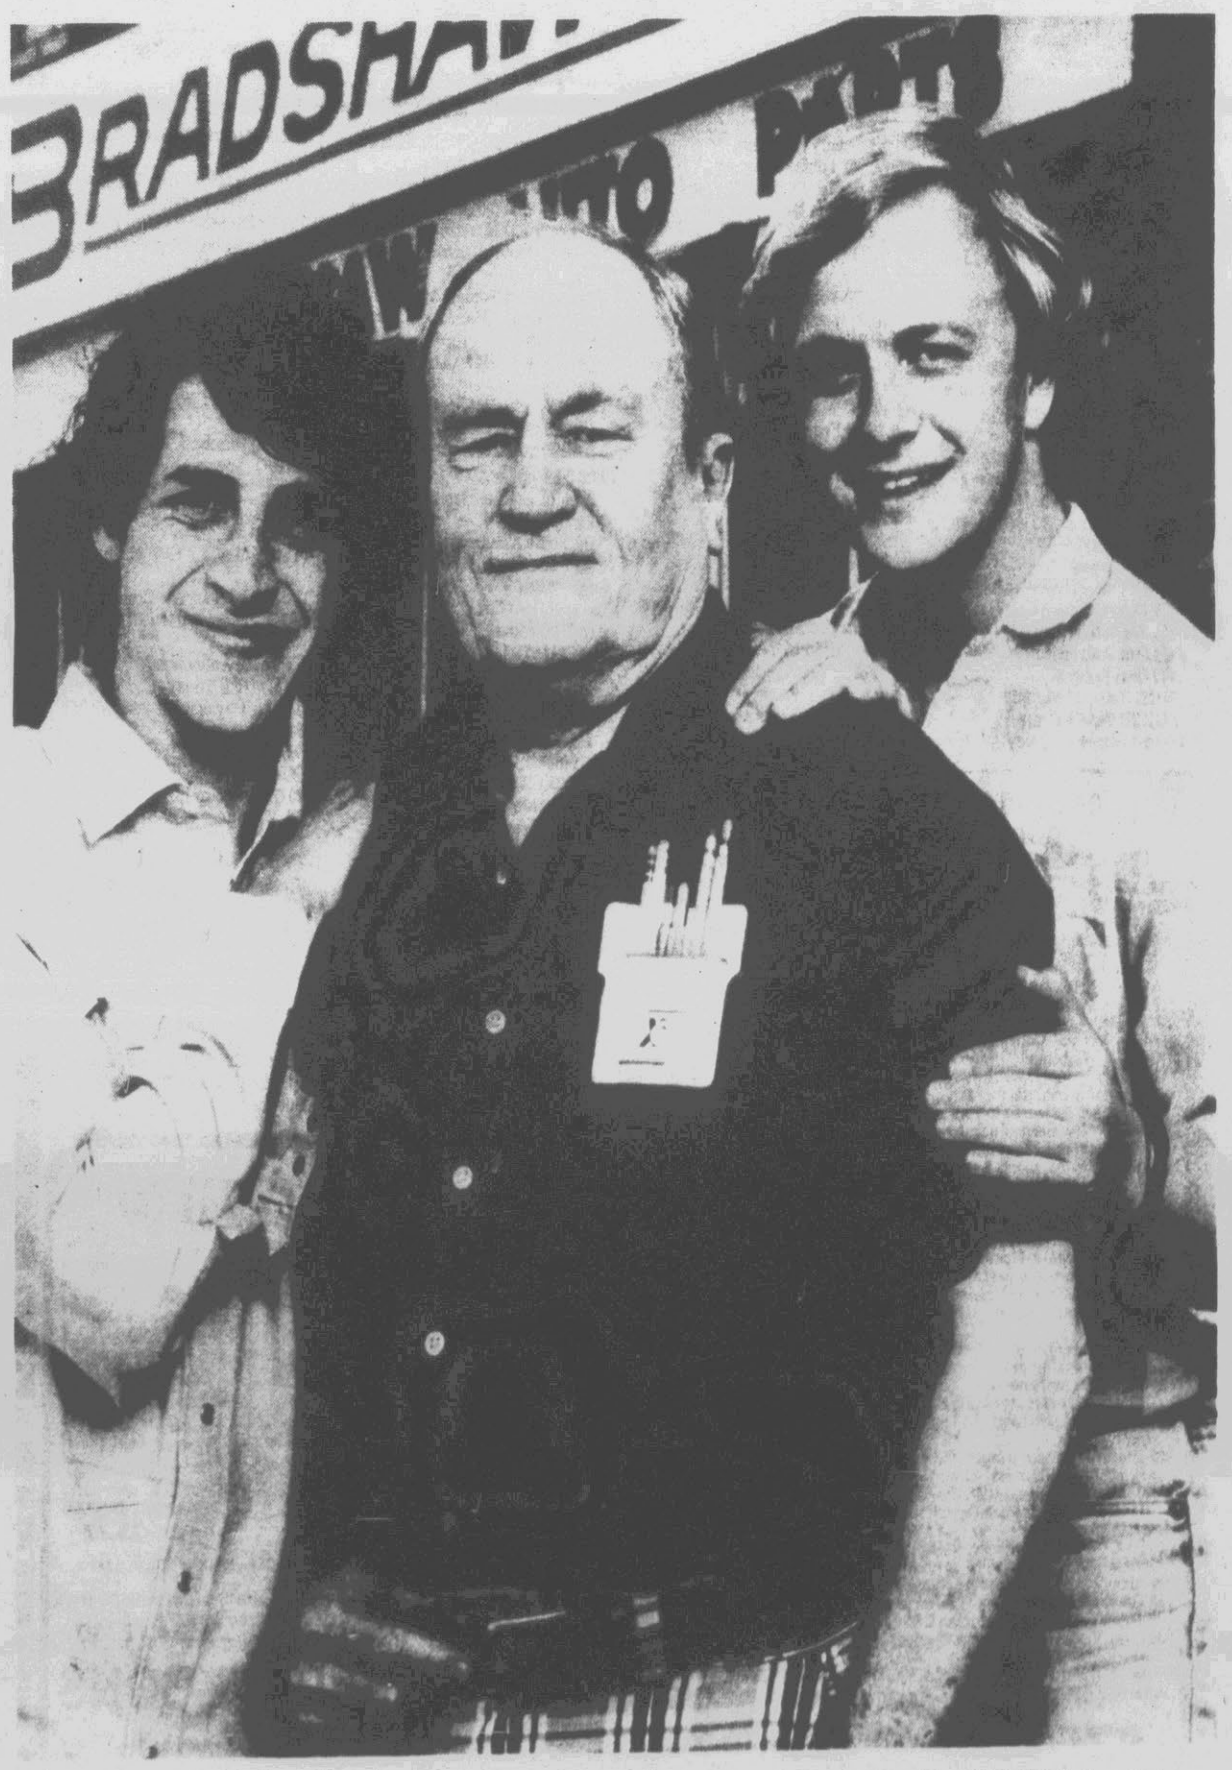

What could be juicier than the true-life story of socialite Frances Schreuder, who seems to have ripped off anyone who would let her, and who coerced her own son into murdering her wealthy father? Both CBS and NBC agree; both networks have scheduled different dramatic versions of the Schreuder case. This week, CBS presents its miniseries, At Mother's Request (Jan. 4 and 6), adapted from Jonathan Coleman's book. In March, NBC will air its version, "Nutcracker," which takes off from Shana Alexander's book about the case. May the best miniseries win.

"At Mother's Request" is not the best miniseries. It stars Stefanie Powers as Frances, an amoral, self-centered creature if ever there was one. The role is an acting stretch for Powers, a break with her amiable roles in "Hart to Hart" and "Mistral's Daughter." The actress comes through OK, but NBC's choice for Frances, Lee Remick, sounds like richer and more sensible casting.

Yet viewers may be willing to look past the various weaknesses of "At Mother's Requaest," since the story is the kind of non-fiction that makes your jaw drop in disbelief. Frances, her frighteningly loyal kids and her pitifully naive parents, are like a parody of a family: Their love and devotion take the most perverse forms. Appearing with Powers are Frances Sternhagen and E.G. Marshall as her parents, John Wood as her creepy confidant, and Doug McKeon ("On Golden Pond") as her all-too-obliging murderous son.

The absence of "Remington Steele" from the 1986-87 TV schedule has been a source of disappointment to many viewers. Happily, the elegant privateeye duo of Steele (Pierce Brosnan) and Laura Holt (Stephanie Zimbalist) is back in a two-hour made-for-TV movie, The Seele That Wouldn't Die (NBC, Jan. 5). To prevent Steele's deportation, the couple embarks on a honeymoon in Mexico — a scheme designed for the benefit of U.S. Immigration. Alas, the well-laid plans backfire, and soon the team is beset by guerrillas and jungle intrigue.

On Fire (ABC, Jan. 5) is a change-of-pace vehicle for John Forsythe. Out to show that Blake Carrington is only one aspect of his personality, Forsythe stars in this made-for' as a firefighter forced to retire at the mandatory age of 60. The drama, which studies the man's loss of self-esteem, was produced and directed by Robert Greenwald, who guided Farrah Fawcett's acting departure in "The Burning Bed."

Doug McKeon (r.) and Corey Parker (l.) star as the grandsons of multi-millionaire Franklin Bradshaw (E.G. Marshall, center), whose bizarre murder is the subject of the four-hour miniseries "At Mother's Request." It airs Sunday, Jan. 4 and Tuesday, Jan. 6 on CBS.

Peppard Is Not Sorry About 'The A-Team'

By Ian Harmer

HOLLYWOOD — Actors whose prime-time series are axed by network programmers usually have mixed feelings. But not George Peppard of "The A-Team." His reaction to the demise of a show that suffered a rapid ratings decline from "A" to "Z" was succinct: "Praise the Lord!"

Peppard says his unbridled delight can be explained in part by the fact that for most of the show's final, abbreviated season, he was working in agony, suffering from a foot ailment that requiredsurgery.

The day after production wrapped as a result of NBC's decision to cut the show from the schedule, Peppard himself went under the knife. He's currently recuperating and enjoying a prescription he describes as "purposeful vegetation combined with aggressive relaxation.

"We had some problems with the show, one of them being that scripts were never ready on time. I'd get my lines at 9 p.m. the night before we were due to shoot," he says.

"Suddenly, I'm a free man, and it's a glorious feeling," he continues. "I say I'm relaxing aggressively because I'm like a bear in hibernation. If anyone tries to disturb me — I get mad!"

Peppard confirms that one of the strains on "The A-Team" was his well-publicized clashes with Mr. T.

"All I'll say is that as far as I am concerned, Lawrence Tero is now history, and I don't like to talk about the past," he says.

He adds: " 'The A-Team' was never Shakespeare, but when it started out, it was wonderful entertainment in the tradition of 'Monty Python's Flying Circus.' Our exploits were supposed to be unbelievable, and they were.

Comic Relief

Showtime is lining up live comedy for '87. February 21 brings comedian David Steinberg at the grand opening of the new Caroline's in New York City. In March, look for a 90-minute star-studded telecast celebrating Caesar's Palace 20th-anniversary with Joan Rivers and George Burns. And last month, the pay-TV network videotaped Louis Johnson, winner of Showtime's Third Annual Search for the Funniest Person in America, at New York City's The Comic Stip.

PAIN
Maybe You Don't Have To Live With It...
If you want to get rid of a painful problem and not have it come back, you need to correct what's causing the pain.
If a vertebra in your neck or back is slightly out of place and pressing on a nerve, it can cause headaches, sinus trouble, back pain or pain and numbness in your arms and legs. Chiropractic treatment gently and painlessly moves the vertebra back into place to correct the cause of your pain and give you lasting relief without drugs or surgery.

What Viewers Can Expect This Winter

By Andrew J. Edelstein

As snow and chilly weather blanket most of the country, many of us will be logging even more hours in front of the tube. What to watch? Here's a rundown of some of the TV fare you can look forward to in winter, 1987 — and beyond.

* New series: Two new series have already been scheduled: "Shell Game," starring Margot Kidder and James Read as a pair of former con artists once wed to each other, debuts Jan. 8 on CBS; "Ohara," starring Pat Morita ("The Karate Kid") as a wily police detective, debuts Jan. 17 on ABC. Later in the season, look for Ed Asner as a high-school principal in "The Bronx Zoo" (NBC), George Hamilton as a fading secret agent in "Spies" (CBS) and Alan Arkin as a conniving hospital administrator in "Harry" (ABC).

* Miniseries — Among the blockbusters to watch:

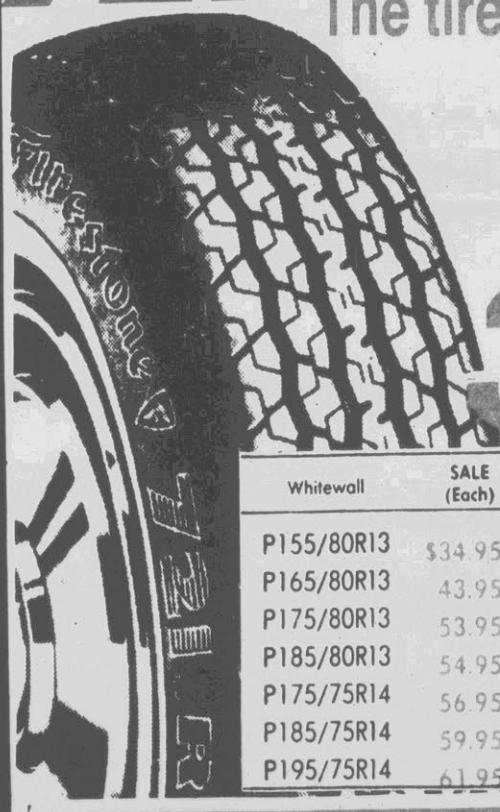

"Out on a Limb" (ABC, Jan. 18 and 19) is a dramatization of Shirley MacLaine's autobiographical best seller starring the author as herself.

"Amerika" (ABC, Feb. 15-20, 22) — Undoubtedly, the most-anticipated TV event of the year, this controversial miniseries looks at life in the United States 10 years after a Soviet takeover. Robert Urich and Kris Kristofferson star.

"The Two Mrs. Grenvilles" (NBC, Feb. 22 and 23) stars Claudette Colbert, Ann-Margret and Stephen Collins in an adaptation of Dominick Dunne's best seller about a showgirl who marries a wealthyman, but has to contend with the disapproval of her patrician mother-in-law.

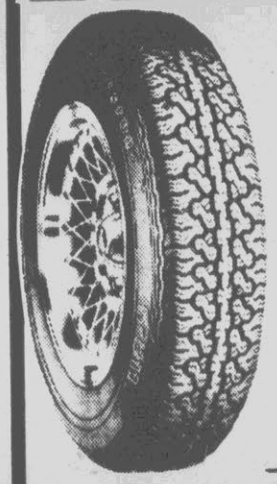

"I'll Take Manhattan" (CBS, March 1-4) stars Valerie Bertinelli and Barry Bostwick in the adaptation of Judith Krantz's latest novel set in the world of a glamorous magazine.

CINDY SAYS

'Graduate' to sing: Search on for leads

By Cindy Adams

That Anne Bancroft-Dustin Hoffman winner "The Graduate" — which won nine Academy Awards — is coming to Broadway. "The Graduate" was an Embassy picture. Embassy was bought by Dino De Laurentiis, who optioned the right to the Nederlanders. The Nederlanders mean Robert N. and Gladys Rackmil. The format is a musical. The music and lyrics will be by Bob Merrill. The Dustin Hoffman role will go to an unknown. For Mrs. Robinson, they're shopping for a known. A big known. Like a Cher or Bette Midler kind of known. The time frame is September 1987. And that's all I know.

Dustin Hoffman

Saundra Santiago of "Miami Vice" will cut a record. ...Something recently around New York that resembles Marlon Brando is Marlon Brando. To quote him, he's "hiding out" here. Why, I don't know. ...The oddest couple: Ruth Westheimer and Marvin Mitchelson might co-host a TV show.

For Paul Newman's recent do, he schlepped in his own baby grand. Also his own piano player, Vince Morton. Both travel with Paul when he gives a party. Some people just bring place cards. ...Jean Stapleton, who buries people in "Arsenic and Old Lace" on Broadway, got herself hung — her caricature, that is — in Sardi's. ...Now that Marjoe Gortner's doing "Falcon Crest" with Jane Wyman, the TV queen of the wine business, the real grande dame of the grape, Baroness de Rothschild, has shipped Marjoe a supply of her Mouton Cadet Red as a way of welcoming him to the industry.

For Mary Martin's recent birthday, Carol Channing bought her the Al Hirschfeld drawing of Mary side by side with Ethel Merman. ...Peter O'Toole's kid Kate is in John Huston's new film "The Dead." ...Evangelist Jerry Falwell's new Liberty organization, a resurrected Moral Majority, has quit the political arena. The Rev. uses the idle time cheering his Liberty Baptist College football team.

Jet Power

CBS has teamed with the Children's Television Workshop and the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism in the "Be Smart! Don't Start!" campaign. Targeted at 8- to 12-year-olds and scheduled to begin in April 1987, the campaign plans to reach young people through music videos. Family recording group the Jets ("Crush on You") contributed a four-and-a-half minute video featuring animated brain cells.

TV Chatter

As Bob Newhart celebrated the 100th episode of his hit series at a Beverly Hills restaurant last month, he was reminded that he quit his previous series, "The Bob Newhart Show," after six years. His current show, CBS's "Newhart," is now in its fifth season. Does that mean viewers may see only one more year of "Vermont Today" and Larry, Daryl and Larry's other brother Daryl? "I'll stay as long as it's fun to go to work," Newhart says. "Or as long as they'll stand for it." In retrospect, the comedian confesses that he made a mistake leaving the first Newhart sitcom. "In the fourth year of the show, we did about five episodes in a row that I really didn't think were up to the standards we had established. I tried to leave the next year but the networks said no. When they finally let me leave, I had changed my mind, the show had improved, but I was locked into a situation where I said I was going to leave." There's another reason Newhart isn't ready to jettison "Newhart." "I've used up all my names," he says. "If I decided to do another series in a few years, we'd have to call it 'The.' "

Michelle Phillips makes her debut on "Knots Landing" this week as the mysterious Anne Winston, a wealthy Easterner who was the first love of Mack MacKenzie (Kevin Dobson). Way back then, Anne rejected Mack who was working part time as a railroad ticket-taker to put himself through law school. Now Anne shows up in Southern California to rekindle their romance and face the recriminations of her abandoned daughter Paige (Nicollette Sheridan), her child by Mack. "It wasn't Anne's fault," Phillips says. "Her parents were very much in control of her life and they made her give up Mack and the baby. Yes, she's rich, but she's not a bitch, even though on the soaps people always seem to confuse the two."

Phillips comes to acting after a successful career as a vocalist in the '60s rock group The Mamas and the Papas. When she decided to give up rock 'n' roll and try acting, her actor friends urged her to join acting workshops and pay her dues. "Others said don't take acting classes because that will only ruin any natural talent you have," Phillips says. "Of course, those were rock 'n' rollers telling me that, like my ex-husband John Phillips." There is a difference between being a rock star and a TV star. "When I was in the band, I went to bed at 5 a.m. Now that's the time I get up."

Carl Weintraub was supposed to play a roofer who hates his job on the ABC series "Dads." But Weintraub didn't want to play a negative character, so he got the writers to make him a stonemason instead. Weintraub knows a lot about his on-screen craft because that's how he supported himself before landing "Dads." Weintraub explains. "I'm trying to get a positive feeling going here, so I told them to make me a mason because masons are proud of what they do. We're artists. I mean, plumbing is beautiful, but it's hidden in the basement and nobody sees it. But every time somebody makes a fire in the barbecue, somewhere inside they're saying thank you to the mason who built it." Just before the series premiered, Weintraub picked up a construction worker who was hitchhiking. The man asked Weintraub what he did for a living, and the actor told him he was a stonemason. "Oh, yeah?" the man said. "We need a mason on my job right now. You interested?" Weintraub told the unbelieving construction worker, "I can't right now. I'm already working as a stonemason — on television."

BEHIND THE SCENES

Ritchie's Law: The star system pays

By Frank Lovece

One might expect that on the set of an Eddie Murphy movie, everything boils down to Murphy's Law. One might be right. And as Michael Ritchie, director of Murphy's current film, "The Golden Child," knows, that dictum translates into Chase's Law, Hawn's Law and the universal Theory of Superstars.

Eddie Murphy

"What happens," explains Ritchie, "is that stars treat the script as a suit which they tailor to their own personae. That's part of an actor's job. With comedy — where nobody really knows what makes a person laugh — that job becomes much tougher.

"My job as a director is to get the reality of a scene, then to start throwing out what I call 'the unfunny fer-instance.' From there, the scene belongs to the comedian.

"With 'Golden Child' the script was a different animal before Paramount optioned it," the director recalls. "It was going to be an adventure picture for someone like Mel Gibson. And it was going to be directed by the author (Dennis Feldman).

"When Paramount got the script they sent it to Eddie, as they do with almost every script they get — he's under contract with them and he's their hottest property. Eddie said he wanted to do it but didn't feel secure with a first-time director on a picture this complicated.

As it turns out, Feldman will make his directing debut on the film "Real Men," which he also wrote.

"So Dennis got these two scripts produced as well as his directing shot, and I got lucky that Eddie approved me."

For all his success, however, Ritchie bemoans the fact that he's been typecast as a "satiric comedy director." He started out in TV, directing shows such as "Dr. Kildare," and entered movies with such dramas as "The Candidate." Yet his biggest successes have been comedies, such as "The Bad News Bears."

Ritchie is also typecast as a director of star-vehicles. "Audiences read into characters attributes from stars' earlier roles. Eddie will always be part Axel Foley ("Beverly Hills Cop"). People say, isn't it a shame American stars can't be chameleons like British stars. But from a storytelling point of view, a star lets you skip a lot of character exposition.

"The star system," Ritchie says, "is America's great gift to motion pictures."

Take the Clara Johnson Test.

In Alamance County, North Carolina, Honda lawn mowers are assembled from the wheels up. Then each mower must pass rigid quality control standards before we ship it.

The final test is a critical performance check to ensure easy starting. We call it the Clara Johnson Test. At the end of the assembly line, each mower is started or it doesn't ship.

Come in and give the whole line of Honda mowers the Clara Johnson Test yourself. Each one will start easily, or it wouldn't be a Honda.

'120 Minutes' Is Time Well Spent

By Andrew J. Edelstein

After five-and-a-half years, the thrill, admittedly, is gone from MTV. No doubt about it, the novelty of music videos has worn off. Besides, the quality of many of today's videos correspond to the quality of the music: It's merely workmanlike product.

But there's one program on MTV that is arguably the channel's strongest suit: "120 Minutes," which airs for two hours, beginning at midnight (ET) Sundays. "120 Minutes" fulfills one of MTV's original promises, which was to provide a forum for talent that radio would not play.

Back in 1981, bands like Duran Duran and Spandau Ballet were not played on a majority of radio stations because of their excessively restrictive playlists. But many of these groups, who were then considered avant-garde, had made videos. Hungry for material, the infant MTV eagerly played them and helped spread the bands' popularity. Thus, in addition to marveling at the novelty of music video,back then MTV functioned as a kind of de facto radio station.

In 1987, radio playlists have become even tighter — with most FM rockers playing a diet consisting of either classic "dinosaur rock" or material by already-known groups who can be be seen and heard on MTV. Most of the music is not threatening or challenging — the way good rock 'n' roll has always been.

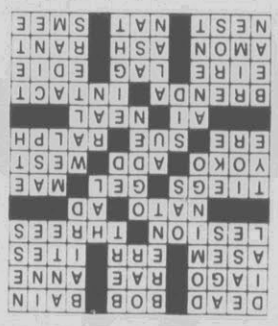

One wouldn't think that there is plenty of fresh, exciting edgy rock 'n' roll still being made. Unless you live in a market with a decent college radio station or an extremely progressive FM rocker, chances are you haven't heard of groups like the Rainmakers, New Model Army and the Housemartins.

But "120 Minutes" makes these groups accessible and their music, lyrics and videos are among the most exciting in rock music today — a far cry from the over-produced, synthesized-slick stuff that dominates the airwaves.

Tuning in one recent Sunday, we saw the following videos and we highly recommend them:

* New Model Army — "Fifty-first State of America" — It's a song with a message: England has become a mere appendage of the U.S., a point underscored by shots of American military installations in the UK. The music has the urgency and bite of vintage Clash; the lead singer looks like a refugee from Haight-Ashbury.

* Housemartins — "Happy Hour" — A bright jaunty, tune featuring the band members — four zippy dorks — cavorting in a pub filled with claymation characters. With their crew-cuts and awkward dance movements, they look like Freddie and the Dreamers on Death Row.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: Where was Rex Smith born? How old is he? What is he doing now that "Street Hawk" has been cancelled? — OLIVIA WRIGHT, WELLINGTON, OHIO

Rex Smith was born Sept. 19, 1955, in Jacksonville, Fla. He began his career as a singer and musician. He has hosted "Solid Gold," appeared on Broadway in "The Pirates of Penzance" and "The Human Comedy" and starred in last season's ABC series "Street Hawk." He is currently back on the stage, appearing at New York's Roundabout Theater in "Brownstone," a song-and-smooch tale focusing on the lives of five diverse inhabitants of a New York brownstone.

Dear Michele: What is singer Teddy Pendergrass up to these days? — D.K. GREEN, WELDON, N.C.

Pendergrass, 36, who was left a paraplegic after a 1982 auto crash, was critically injured last July 3 when his specially equipped van hit a utility pole. He underwent emergency surgery to repair a four-inch gash in his liver and cuts to his legs and feet. The operation lasted 10 hours. Pendergrass's nurse was also injured in the crash. She suffered a broken thumb and facial abrasions.The singer does appear to have had a miraculous recovery, and is currently at work on a new album.

Dear Michele: Judy Garland's mother was reported to be a real stage mother, but little is ever mentioned of her father. Who was he? And where was Judy Garland born? — BUD BOWMAN, JONESBORO, TENN.

Born Frances Ethel Gumm on June 10, 1922, in Grand Rapids, Minn., Garland was the daughter of vaudeville parents Frank Avent Gumm and pianist Ethel Marion Milne. Her father, a singer, managed the theater where Garland made her stage debut at age 3 singing "Jingle Bells." Garland was 13 years old when her father died. Garland eventually came to resent her mother, and in later years described her as "the real-life Wicked Witch of the West." Garland died due to an accidental overdose of sleeping pills in London in 1969, $1 million in debt.

Robin Has Wright Stuff For Films

By Connie Passalacqua

Soap stars are usually in for a long, uphill battle when they decide to try and conquer nighttime TV and film. But Robin Wright, who plays Kelly Capwell on "Santa Barbara," has scored not only a triumph, but a soap first by getting the lead role in a major motion picture while still working as a soap actress.

Next Christmas, she'll make her film debut in the title role of "The Princess Bride," a film directed by Rob Reiner ("Stand by Me").

"It was too long to be away from home, but I wouldn't have traded it for the world," says Wright, who recently returned from 16 weeks of filming in England. She says the best part was the opportunity to work with Reiner. "Rob, I love," she says. "He's such a good-hearted man. It's very seldom that you find that in this business. He's the warmest, the most sensitive, most understanding person."

Her role in the movie (based on William Goldman's book of the same name), was different than Wright's "SB" character, a problem-plagued California girl. "The movie is a period piece," she says. "I had to work on a lot of stuff — like the way they walked back in the Middle Ages. I'm a tomboy and the way you had to poise yourself is very, very different. And I had to speak with a British accent. That took hard work."

And Wright says there is a definite difference in the way actors are handled by directors in movies as opposed to soap operas. "In film they work for the actors," she says. "They are there for you because you are the finished product, and because they want it to be excellent. On television they do what they have to do to get the show out every night by 7 p.m. In a movie you can work 12 hours a day to do one scene to get it perfect, not like on a soap where all you have time to do is learn your lines and then tape."

To do the film role, Wright took a four-month leave of absence from "SB." Because of story-line continuity, soap actors are normally barred by producers from taking a leave longer than eight weeks.

Don Johnson Stars In HBO Special

By E.A. Vare

That much anticipated Don Johnson long-form music video, which used to be known simply as a "special," will air on HBO starting Jan. 17. Due to the show's adult content, the cable network says every rebroadcast will air no earlier than 10 p.m. Seems Mr. Stubble has some steamy scenes with his on-screen wife, played by Lori Singer of "Fame."

The one-hour program will tie together nine tunes from Johnson's "Heartbeat" LP (plus one new song, "Streetwise") in a mini-drama. The "Miami Vice" star portrays a documentary film maker who gets bonked on the head during a border skirmish in Latin America, and in his delirium dreams a sequence of trendy music videos.

Guest stars for the cleverly titled "Don Johnson's Music Video Feature 'Heartbeat' " include Paul Shaffer, Sandahl Bergman, David Carradine and Willie Nelson.

Julianne Phillips is enjoying a resurgence of her acting career lately, most likely as a result of her married name: Julianne Springsteen. Mr. & Mrs. Boss were in Paris recently, where Julianne was on location for her first starring role in a major motion picture. While there, Bruce took a moment to jump on stage with Huey Lewis and the News, who are in the midst of a world tour. They joined in for a rendition of "Barefootin'," Robert Parker's 1966 song. Also jamming along was Bob Geldof, OBE.

Actor Ed Guinn, best known for his performance as the truck driver in "Texas Chainsaw Massacre" and its sequel, has a cameo role as a limo driver in the new videoclip by Timbuk 3, "Life Is Hard." The video was shot on a street corner in Vernon, Calif., in a single night: There were no retakes, no edits and no stunt double for the vulture. (Vulture?)

Soulful Freda Payne sings backup on Belinda Carlisle's cover version of Payne's 1970 chart-topper "Band of Gold," but it took some doing to talk her into the idea. At first, said Payne, "I thought I'd had enough of it." After the recording session, though, Payne decided that "it was like remarrying the same husband — love is sweeter the second time around."

It's a Date

CBS has scheduled the dates of its miniseries "I'll Take Manhattan." The miniseries will air March 1, 2, 3 and 4. Set in the glamorous world of New York magazine publishing, the miniseries stars Valerie Bertinelli as Maxi, a young woman who must save her father's magazine empire from treachery. Also starring in this pulp edition of Judith Krantz's novel of the same name are Barry Bostwick, Perry King, Francesca Annis and Jane Kaczmarek.

INSIDE CANADA

Savage edge missing in hockey drama

By Bob Remington

Undeterred by the total embarrassment of "He Shoots, He Scores," CBC introduces yet another production using hockey as its central theme. "The Last Season," airing Sunday, Jan. 4, is mercifully better than the phony hockey soap opera that recently sputtered to a welcome end, but still isn't of the calibre of "Slap Shot," the Paul Newman movie that captured life in the brutal minor leagues.

Booth Savage

"The Last Season" stars Booth Savage as rough-and-tumble hockey player Felix Batterinski, an ex-pro adept at the Broad Street bullystyle of the 1970s Philadelphia Flyers. Felix prefers fists over finesse, and likes to quote former Flyers coach Fred Shero: "You want pretty skating? Go to the Ice Capades."

Felix's enforcer style, however, turns out to be his tragic flaw. His violent outbursts destroy his career, and he winds up as a player-coach in Finland, where he takes a team of no-names farther than anyone expects by introducing North American hockey violence into the European style of play. He even offers his players bonuses for body checks.

Flashbacks help shed light on the reasons for Felix's violent personality. His mother died in childbirth, his uncle is mentally retarded, his father harbors Old World beliefs. The boy expresses his pent-up anger on the ice.

"The Last Season" was adapted from a novel by Roy MacGregor, sportswriter for the now-defunct The Canadian magazine. The TV movie almost works, but Savage never quite captures the violent nature of the main character. This actor's last name should describe the role, but Booth is not quite savage enough.

"CBC THIS WEEK" is also unveiling a short series with Yup-appeal. "Street Legal" will run six consecutive Tuesdays beginning Jan. 6. It stars Eric Peterson, Sonja Smits and C. David Johnson as three trial lawyers in Toronto.

The inevitable comparisons to "L.A. Law" are sure to be the undoing of the series, but "Street Legal" is not the dullard production of past Canadian legal efforts like "Judge," a long-cancelled cure for insomnia that treated jurisprudence with far too much reverence. "Street Legal" may not have the writing of "L.A. Law," but there's enough comedic flair and wacky characterization to keep it from being guilty of that heinous television offence, boredom.

Video Take-Out

Lorimar-Telepictures recently entered into a cultural-exchange program with China. Lorimar has submitted 7,500 hours of TV programs for review by the Shanghai Cultural Bureau. Our first entertainment export last month was the Jan & Dean Friendship Tour. The 1960s singing team is very popular in the Far East. Lorimar, in conjunction with China Amusement and Leisure, hopes to produce a wide range of Chinese cultural events in America.

ROCK VIEW

Political rock in media maelstrom

By Marianne Meyer

Rock and politics make strange bedfellows, and some interesting news these days. On the video front, Jackson Browne financed a clip for "Lives in the Balance" with his own money then requested that Elektra Records release it as a single. He's hoping it will address young audiences regarding United States involvement in Central American affairs.

Jackson Browne

In an unusual letter written directly to DJs, VJs and station programmers, Browne explained that he was circulating the single and clip "with the hope that your listeners, especially those of high school and college age, are encouraged to think about what is happening in Central America and examine closely what they are being told by the government and the news media."

Browne goes on to speak of the CIA, death squads, and a startling statistic that claims women and children as 40 percent of the Nicaraguan death toll.

Like the letter, the video clip pulls no punches, combining Vietnam-era footage with newsreels from Nicaragua to create a hard-hitting indictment of current foreign policy. Browne himself appears in the clip in unflinching close-ups as he sings the accusatory lyrics. It's not for musical escapists, but Browne is appealing to the media middlemen to help it get airplay.

"It's an unlikely single, I know," he wrote. "Lives in the Balance' asks some questions that should be thought about and answered by each of us. I hope you will play it."

PBS PASSES: The all-star long-form video "The Making of Sun City," which aired on MTV, was rejected for broadcast on the PBS network on grounds that it was self-serving. According to a letter written to project organizer Steve Van Zandt by PBS executives, the network did not feel "required to endorse your effort to persuade other performers to avoid Sun City, congratulate you for your morals on apartheid, or help stimulate sales of the 'Sun City' video or album."

At least that's a more polite rejection than the one given by the executive quoted in Daily Variety who called Van Zandt and company "spoiled brats" and the project a "one-line joke." The "Sun City" team has received an apology for those last comments, but no reprieve at press time on PBS's decision to nix the show.

Pro Bowlers Tour Keeps Rolling Along

By Adam Beckerman

Bowling has its own Triple Crown — one for every finger-hole. There's the $500,000 Seagram's Cooler U.S. Open to be rolled this Saturday, Jan. 10, in Tacoma, Wash.; the $260,000 Toledo Trust PBA National Championship on March 28; and the $250,000 Firestone Tournament of Champions, which closes out the winter tour in Akron, Ohio, on April 25.

Did you know that the Pro Bowlers Tour is ABC's second-longest running sports series (next to "Wide World of Sports")? For that matter, it's network television's second-longest running live sports series (next to college football). It was eight months after "Wide World" had presented the first-ever live telecast of a PBA event — the finals of the PBA World Championship Bowling Tournament from Paramus, N.J. — that the PBA Tour premiered on ABC one blustery January afternoon in 1962. Chris Schenkel, the velvet fog of broadcasting, called the strikes and spares then as he does now, 26 years later.

And millions of just plain folks still tune in. Last year the PBT averaged a 5.6 rating for 16 telecasts from January through April; compare that to a 4.6 and 4.5 average for college basketball on NBC and CBS. Both sports bring us a beginning, middle and end; however, only one features pale, polyester white guys.

In fact, George Branham II made history this past Nov. 22 when he defeated Mark Roth at the Brunswick Memorial World Open and became the first black man to win a PBT event. NBC broadcast that first on its coverage of the fall tour.

There is one other aspect about bowling that makes sense for TV: You can achieve absolute perfection. But it has happened only three times on a PBT telecast. Jack Biondolillo rolled a 300 at Firestone in '67; Johnny Guenther did it at the San Jose Open in '69; and Jim Stefanich was perfect at the Midas Open in '74. Art Trask came within a pin of the $100,000 True Value bonus when his last ball knocked down only nine to leave him with a 299 at the Fair Lanes Open in 1982. Tough luck, Art.

Continuing the "not quite" theme: Last year's Duke Blue Devils won more college basketball games (37) than any other school in NCAA history. However, their last game ended in defeat in the NCCA finals. This year, Duke is rebuilding. Only point guard Tommy Amaker remains from the starting five. On Jan. 10, he, Danny Ferry and Duke fans will attempt to unravel North Carolina in Durham. CBS airs the action.

Meanwhile, AFC and NFC playoffs continue on Sunday, Jan. 4 on NBC and CBS.

Sports Scoop

ESPN has expanded its exclusive live coverage of the America's Cup to include each race in the best-of-seven Challengers Round final beginning Monday, Jan. 12. Dating back to June, which began a series of documentaries and syndicate profiles, ESPN's America Cup coverage will total more than 80 hours. The cable network also will televise both live games between the National Hockey League All-Star Team and the Soviet National Team in Quebec City, Quebec, on Feb. 11 and 13.

From your Eckerd Pharmacist

We'll help you get the health care you need.

That's why your Eckerd Pharmacist offers over 400 Eckerd Brand Equivalent prescription drugs. They've passed our 18 step selection process and they save you money. Here are some important facts about generic drugs:

- All Eckerd Brand Equivalents are supplied by manufacturers who are required by the FDA to meet stringent requirements before marketing these products.
- Average savings on a generic prescription in 1984 was 25%. (FTC study)

Ask about the Eckerd Brand Equivalent for your next prescription.

To an Eckerd Pharmacist, nothing's more important than your health.

Second to none, you're #1

We know you're too busy to wait in line especially when you're on your way out of the store. That's why an associate, like Jerrie Babb at Forest Park, GA will call for another register to be opened whenever she sees more than three people in line. We'll make sure you save time at Eckerd.

Now You Can Decide How You Want Your Holiday Pictures To Come Out.

Few pictures are as important to you as the ones you take during the holidays. So after you take them, take them to Revco. At Revco you not only get top quality film developing, you get to choose how you want your pictures to come back. Thanks to an exciting program called PhotoOption.

Photo Option A. Do you want a single set of quality, glossy prints? And do you want them the day after you bring them in? That's what you get with PhotoOption A, and at a price that's more than reasonable.

Photo Option B. If you want a set of glossy prints for yourself, and a set to share with a friend, you want our 2 'n 2 program. You get two glossy prints from each negative in two days. And the color is identical on both sets.

Photo Option C. We call this our Gold Seal 35 Option. And it's for 35mm film only. You get a state of the art, computer controlled set of larger than normal pictures that have quality printed all over them. And to make sure they're as good as we say they are, we double inspect them and safeguard them in special Gold Seal packaging.

Give It Your Best Shot! Because your holiday pictures are so special to you, why not take them with 35mm film? Then bring them in for PhotoOption C processing. Years from now, you'll be glad you did.

Now, get the music that's got America's temperature rising—the hottest hits of this season at a cool price. It's all part of a great new offer from the Columbia Record & Tape Club. To get any 12 of these records or tapes right away, simply fill in and mail the application together with your check or money order for $1.86 as payment (that's 1¢ for your first 12 selections, plus $1.85 to cover shipping and handling). In exchange, you simply agree to buy 8 more tapes or records (at regular Club prices) in the next three years—and you may cancel membership anytime after doing so.

How the Club operates: every four weeks (13 times a year) you'll receive the Club's music magazine, which describes the Selection of the Month for each musical interest...plus hundreds of alternates from every field of music. In addition, up to six times a year you may receive offers of Special Selections, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 19 buying opportunities.

If you wish to receive the Selection of the Month or the Special Selection, you need do nothing—it will be shipped automatically. If you prefer an alternate selection, or none at all, simply fill in the response card always provided and mail it by the date specified. You will always have at least 10 days to make your decision. If you ever receive any Selection without having had at least 10 days to decide, you may return it at our expense.

The tapes and records you order during your membership will be billed at regular Club prices, which currently are $7.98 to $9.98—plus shipping and handling. (Multi-unit sets, special and classical recordings may be somewhat higher.) And if you continue as a member after completing your enrollment agreement, you'll be eligible for our "buy one—get one free" bonus plan.

CDs also available to members. Each issue of the music magazine contains a wide selection of the latest hits and old favorites on Compact Discs—which you may order as a member. Of course, purchase of a CD will count toward fulfillment of your membership obligation.

10-Day Free Trial: we'll send details of the Club's operation with your introductory shipment. If you are not satisfied for any reason whatsoever, just return everything within 10 days for a full refund and you will have no further obligation. So act now!

Order your first selection now at a discount—have less to buy later—and also get 2 extra albums, FREE! If you wish, you may also choose your first selection right now and we'll give it to you for as much as 60% off regular Club prices—only $3.98. Enclose payment now and you'll receive it with your 12 introductory albums. This discount purchase immediately reduces your obligation—you then need buy just 7 more selections (instead of 8) in the next three years. What's more, this discount purchase also entitles you to still 2 more albums as a bonus, FREE! Just check the box in the application and fill in the numbers of your first selection and the 2 free bonus albums you want now.

A Health Source You Can Trust

Our record is proof of our credibility.

For nearly 40 years, PREVENTION has been a giant step ahead of government agencies in warning our readers about hazards to their health.

In 1952 we warned our readers about the dangers of DDT in our food. Twenty years later the government finally banned its use.

In 1953 we sounded the alarm on cyclamates. Not until 1969 did the government have it removed from supermarket shelves.

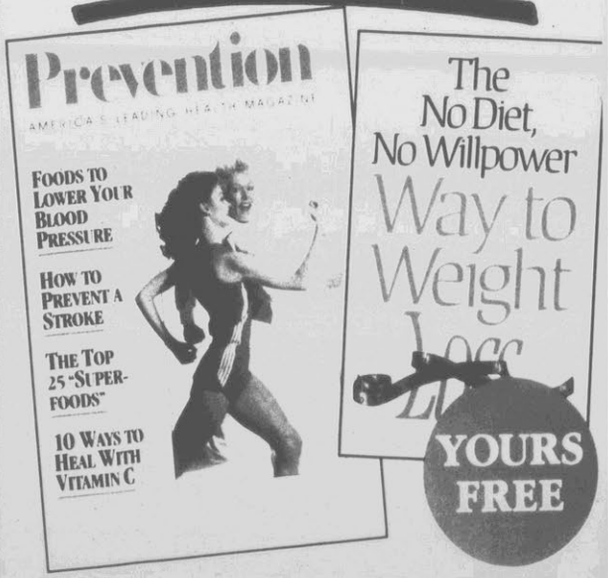

In 1951 we alerted the public to the health threat posed by DES, a hormone used to artificially stimulate growth in beef cattle. Twenty-one years later the FDA banned its use because they found it was a deadly carcinogen.

And the list continues. Long before the popular media reported it, PREVENTION was advising readers of the many advantages of low-salt, low-sugar and low-cholesterol diets. Plus the benefits of polyunsaturates, regular exercise and dietary fiber.

So safeguard your health yourself. Tune in to PREVENTION magazine each month for the best ideas in better health.

Here's how to lose weight and keep it off without dieting.

Maybe you've dieted strenuously only two or three times, maybe 30 or 40 times. If you're like most dieters, during those assaults on your waistline you probably came close to reaching your short-term goal or ideal weight. And then, chances are you gained part, or all of it back.

If you're discouraged with diets that don't work . . . diets that are too much work . . . fad diets that can harm your health —why not find out more about natural weight loss methods? The answers can be found in a 40-page book called "The No Diet, No Willpower Way to Weight Loss." It really is a no-nonsense, very practical way to lose weight that can work for you!

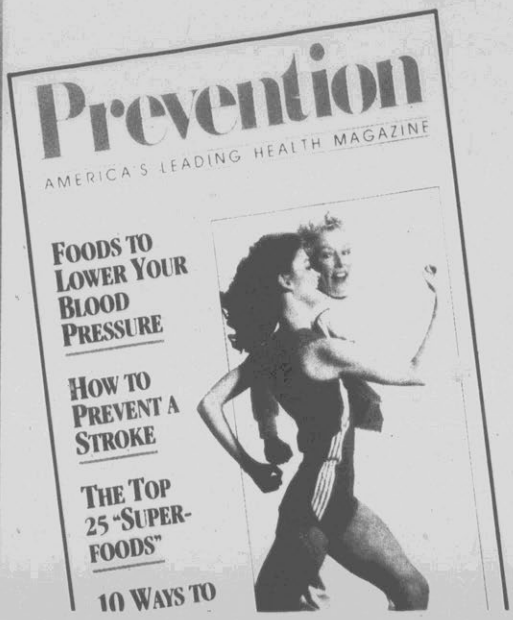

This expertly prepared book from the editors of PREVENTION describes: How to naturally curb your appetite • How to have more energy while you lose weight • The truth about high-protein, low-carbohydrate diets • How to make each calorie really count • Surprisingly naturally thinning foods that keep your stomach full and flush fat and calories out of your system • Nutritionally sound menus that are easy-to-prepare and appetizing • Healthful alternatives to diet foods • And much more.

To receive your copy of this truly important special report, free, along with a 12-month trial subscription to PREVENTION, just mail the card today.

HOCUS-FOCUS

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Body is slimmer. 2. Shovel is missing. 3. Window is different. 4. Hair is different. 5. Picture is missing. 6. Headset is missing

• SUM CAPER! Numbers of a simple addition problem are replaced by letters, at right. You are asked to restore the original figures. To get you started: D is a sub for 8; S for 4; E for 0; and H for 1. You are asked to puzzle out the others.

Remember, it is a problem in simple addition.

SLED
DOGS
HUSKY

Ans.: 4508 plus 8964 equals 13472 (4908 plus 8564 is also correct).

• WELL VERSED! A thousand and one, and a sixth part of twenty; some may have none, but others have plenty. Of what? Think about it.

How quickly can you answer? The answer is money.

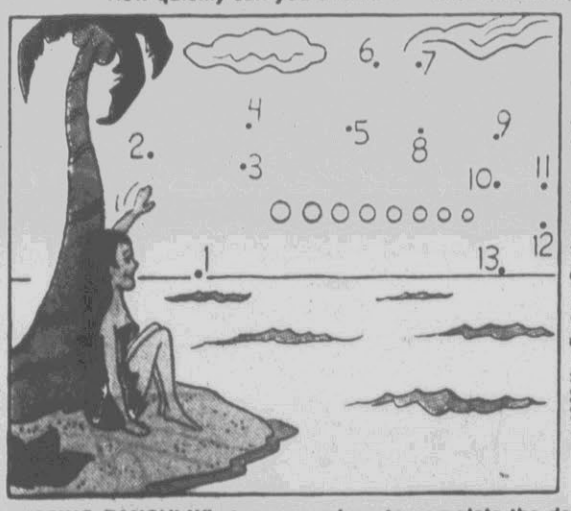

MATH-MAGICAL PARTY TRICK

Have a friend think of a number under 10. Ask him or her, mentally, to multiply it by 3. Then add 1; multiply again by 3; and finally, add the original number.

Ask for the result, and you will immediately learn the number originally selected. It will always be the left-hand digit in the resulting total.

Example: Start with 7; times 3 is 21; plus 1 is 22; times 3 again gives 66; plus 7 is 73. Seven, the starter number, is the left-hand digit of the resulting total — 73.

PASSING FANCY! What can you draw to complete the dot picture above? To find out, add lines 1, 2, 3, etc.

Fun Spot Color by Numbers

CLUE'S WHO! Apply crayons or colored pencils neatly to numbered segments above. Code: 1—Red. 2—Lt. purple. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh. 6—Dk. blue. 7—Dk. brown.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

DRAINAGE

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

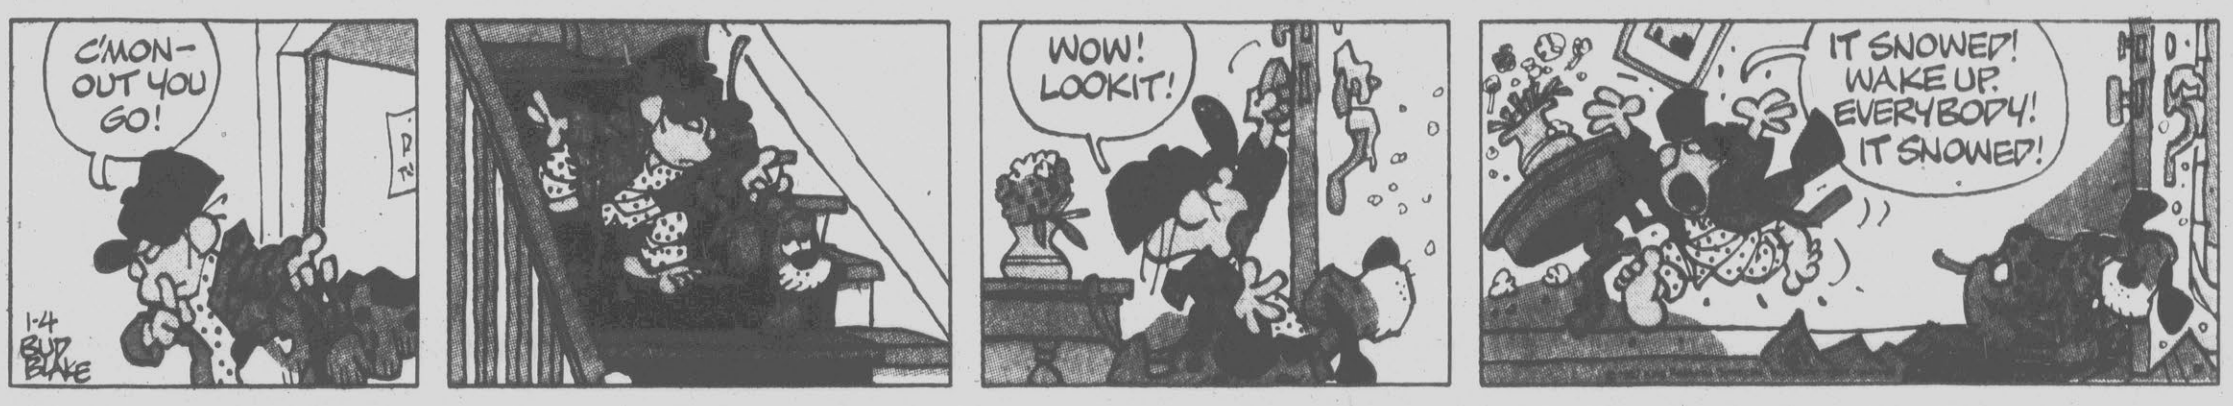

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible anagram: Dane, gain.

IN THE DAYS OF KING ARTHUR

BY JOHN CULLEN MURPHY

Our Story:

YOUNG GALAN CAN HARDLY STAND STILL. BEFORE HIM STANDS THE GREAT CABINET OF MERLIN AMBROSIUS. NO ONE HAS TOUCHED IT IN YEARS. GALAN HAS HIS TOOLS. HE SETS TO WORK. WHAT SECRETS DOES THE CABINET CONCEAL?

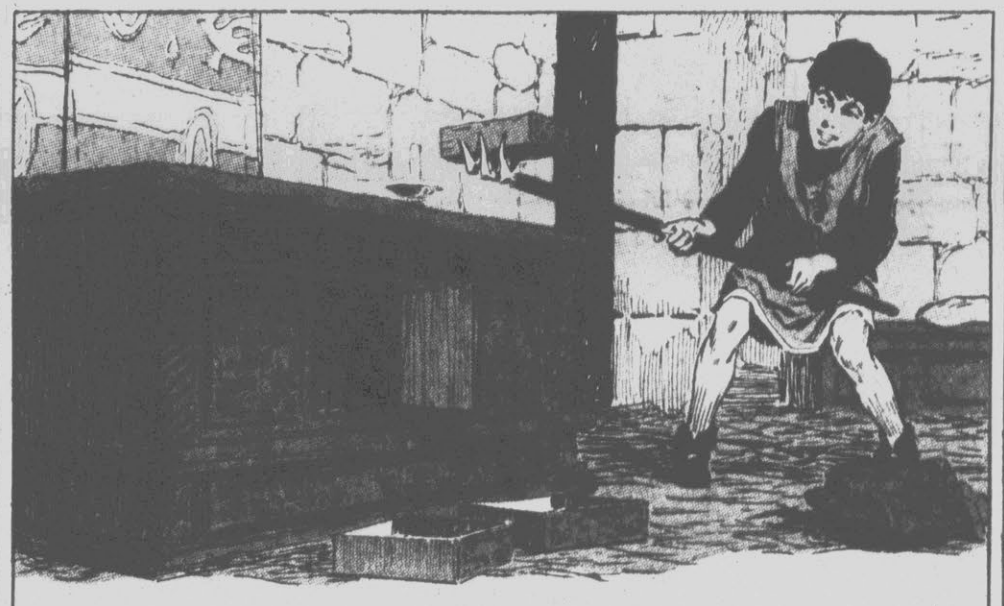

IT IS LIKE A CLEVER BUILDING, WITH DARK PASSAGES AND HIDDEN DOORS. ONCE GALAN POKES INSIDE WITH HIS HAND.

FEELING THE SUDDEN RELEASE OF A SPRING, HE WITHDRAWS IT QUICKLY-- AND NOT A MOMENT TOO SOON. A METAL GATE SLAMS DOWN IN THE CUBBYHOLE AND BLOCKS THE PASSAGEWAY. GALAN IS LUCKY TO LOSE ONLY A FINGERNAIL.

THE FOOLHARDY BOY PRESSES ON (BUT MORE CAREFULLY NOW), DRIVEN BY CURIOSITY. HE USES A MIRROR AND A LONG POLE TO PROBE THE HIDDEN CAVITIES HE FINDS--SO AS NOT TO BECOME A TARGET. IT IS A WISE DECISION. A FLYING DART BARELY MISSES HIM.

AND THEN, AT LAST, HE FINDS WHAT HE HAS SOUGHT. IN THE DEEP RECESSES OF THE CABINET HE MAKES OUT THE SHAPE OF A DRAWER THAT HAS LURKED BEHIND ANOTHER DRAWER. WITH THE CLAW OF HIS POLE HE PULLS IT FORWARD. SEVERAL DARTS LET FLY AND STICK IN THE OPPOSITE WALL. BUT GALAN HAS WHAT HE WANTS.

© 1987 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved.

1-4

THE DRAWER FAIRLY BRIMS WITH PRECIOUS GEMS. BUT ON TOP, DISTINGUISHED BY ITS ELEGANT PLAINNESS, IS MAEVE'S RING.
