FBI Charges Hunter With Jet Shooting

RALEIGH (AP) — A Raleigh hunter has been charged with shooting into a United Airlines jet last week as it was approaching Raleigh-Durham airport, wounding a passenger, FBI officials say.

Robert Raymond Proulx, 23, was charged Tuesday with destruction of an aircraft, a federal offense, and authorities may press charges against a second suspect, said U.S. Attorney Sam Currin.

"There was another person with Mr. Proulx at the time of the shooting that we have identified, but at this time, I have not brought any charges against the other person," Currin said. "We have the other person's role under investigation."

Paul Daly, special agent in charge of the FBI in North Carolina, said the federal charge carries a maximum penalty of 20 years in jail or a $100,000 fine, or both.

"We look at this as a very serious act," Daly said. "The results of shooting into an airplane can be disastrous."

The Boeing 737 jetliner was shot Dec. 31 as it was landing at Raleigh-Durham Airport on a flight from Wilmington. Investigators said the plane was one to two miles from the airport and 500 to 1,000 feet off the ground when it was struck.

Airline officials said the pilot was not aware of the shooting until after the plane had landed safely.

The bullet entered the passenger compartment and hit Barry Rollins of New York City, one of 16 passengers, in the thigh and jaw. Rollins, 30, was in satisfactory condition Tues-

Former Lebanon President Hurt As Car Explodes

By RODEINA KENAAN
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Former President Camille Chamoun narrowly escaped an assassination attempt today when a car bomb exploded as his motorcade drove by. Police said three bodyguards and a pedestrian were killed and 35 passers-by were wounded.

"God is protecting us," Chamoun, 86, said in a steady voice on Voice of Lebanon radio after being released from a hospital where he was treated for shrapnel wounds on the face and hands. "I believe in the Virgin Mary, whose icon I always wear on my chest. She protects me."

Police said it was the fourth assassination attempt against Chamoun, a Maronite Catholic, since 1968. He was president from 1952-58 and now is finance minister.

A blue Peugeot laden with 165 pounds of explosives was detonated by remote control at 9:30 a.m. as Chamoun's motorcade passed by in Christian east Beirut's Mattahen industrial district, police said.

The force of the blast hurled Chamoun's bulletproof gray Mercedes-Benz about 20 yards off the road, police said.

First Day Frustrating For New Legislators

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 100th Congress made its debut with high hopes and low comedy, boisterous parties, hours of droning rhetoric and — for rookie legislators — one long day of bewilderment.

The heat hadn't been turned on and the typewriters hadn't arrived in the makeshift office of Democrat Kent Conrad until a few hours before he took his oath Tuesday as the junior senator from North Dakota.

Freshman Rep. John Lewis, D-Ga., managed to find his way to a brunch in a Senate office building and then got lost. He had to ask his host, Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., to escort him to the House chamber for his swearing-in.

It took Rep. Claude Harris Jr., D-Ala., his administrative assistant and their families a total of 51 hours to drive up from Tuscaloosa in a caravan of three cars, a rental truck and a trailer. "We broke down in every state we came through except North Carolina," Harris said.

Newly elected Rep. Tim Johnson, D-S.D., lost his luggage on the flight to Washington. "I've got khaki pants and loafers and a blazer, and that's it," he said. Worse, when he visited his new office, all the telephones were dead.

Still, Johnson is undaunted. "Obviously, it would be posturing and political to suggest that one vote out of 435 is going to turn around Congress," he said. "It's exciting. It's a huge challenge. I can't wait to get going."

Congress couldn't wait to get going either. A clean water bill vetoed by President Reagan was reintroduced. The Senate voted to set up a select committee under Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, to probe the Iran-Contra scandal. The Senate Budget Committee scheduled hearings to start today on Reagan's proposed $1 trillion budget. And Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, who took over as speaker of the House from retired Rep. Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., telephoned Reagan to wish him a quick recovery from prostate surgery.

Year-End Gifts Increased At ECU

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Contributions to East Carolina University at the end of calendar-year 1986 increased sharply over 1985 figures in the general foundation, the Pirate Club and the Medical Foundation, according to university officials.

The 1986 contributions in the ECU Foundation, excluding athletics and medicine, exceeded the average contribution increase of about 20 percent a year as it more than doubled the figures of 1985, according to James L. Lanier, vice chancellor of Institutional Advancement.

Cash, securities and land contributions for 1986 were about $2.4 million while the figures for 1985 were about $1.1 million, he said.

The increase in contributions may be the result of three things, Lanier said.

"We're just finishing a small campaign for the School of Business" that may have increased the total figure, he said.

Also "several gifts were probably related to the tax changes," Lanier said. The university has received securities and land from donors seeking income tax deductions.

But the main reason for the increase is "we just have been working a lot harder. We're doing a lot better job in asking people to invest in the university," Lanier said.

Many contributions received are donor restricted, he said, which means they are earmarked for specific uses. "Most of the money is endowed in some form or other" to professorships, grants or individual university departments or schools.

"Most is determined by the donor," Lanier said. Unrestricted money totaling about $250,000 received from alumni is used for scholarships supported by alumni and research grants.

The Medical Foundation in 1986 received "three times as much" as it did in 1985, said Bob Adams, executive director of the foundation.

Adams said he did not have exact figures yet, but "we received gifts of appreciated property — land, homes and securities — as well as cash."

"Donors are allowed to designate what they want their money spent for," he said. About 60 percent of contributions received are restricted.

The 1986 contributions to the ECU Educational Foundation, the Pirate Club, represented an increase of $300,000 over 1985, said Dave Hart, executive director of the Pirate Club and associate athletic director.

"We're going to finish the year at about $1.1 million. It will represent a record for the Pirate Club," he said.

The increase is credited to the "supporters of the program and their response to pleas to build a program that we all want to have," Hart said.

The contributions are used to support athletic scholarships, he said.

Reagan Tests OK

By SUSANNE M. SCHAFER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ronald Reagan's doctor reported today that "things could not be better" with the president's recovery from prostate surgery. A third round of tests, meanwhile, revealed no recurrence of cancer.

"All of his physicians are delighted with his condition," Army Col. John Hutton, the presidential physician, said in a statement.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes, who relayed Hutton's comments, said a decision on Reagan's departure from the Bethesda Naval Hospital was to be made later in the day by the president's physicians.

Speakes said he was unaware of any additional tests the president was scheduled to undergo as part of his hospitalization.

The 75-year-old chief executive told reporters Tuesday that he hoped to get back to the White House on Thursday.

Results of a computerized, three-dimensional X-ray given to Reagan early Tuesday evening showed no recurrence of the colon cancer the president had 18 months ago.

"The president continues his excellent recovery," Hutton said. "His vital signs are normal and he is experiencing no pain. Things could not be better and all of his physicians are delighted with his condition."

The president was reported to have dined on filet of fresh fish, macaroni and cheese, spinach, tossed salad, apple crisp, decaffeinated coffee and skim milk following the X-ray exam. He also had a full breakfast that included bran cereal, fruit, and toast with honey, the physician reported.

After sleeping peacefully through the night, Reagan began his fourth day at the hospital today watching television news programs and reading the papers. He was expected to attend to some paperwork, including his written national security briefing and his weekly radio address to the nation, as well as the State of the Union message to Congress, the statement said.

Also, the president was to meet with his chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, and with national security adviser Frank Carlucci, the statement said.

Reagan's doctors have reported that the president has been making a steady and sure recovery since his prostate operation on Monday.

Speakes described the president as "chomping at the bit to leave the hospital."

Farmville Ready To Build New Town Hall

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Construction on a new town hall for Farmville may be under way by June, according to action taken Tuesday by the Farmville Board of Commissioners.

The facility is expected to cost around $900,000.

The commissioners hired The East Group of Kinston to provide architectural and engineering services for the new town hall at its monthly meeting.

The negotiated fee for the architects' services is $62,000. Commissioners recommended that $100,000 of the anticipated cost be placed in a contingency fund.

Richard Johnson of The East Group answered the commissioners' questions at the meeting. The Farmville citizens' building committee recommended The East Group after interviewing the firm and nine others. Joe Joyner, who serves on the building committee, explained the tentative plans for the building to the commissioners.

Citizen Pete Anderson said he was speaking for the senior citizens of Farmville in expressing appreciation to the board for getting on with building "a town hall we can all be proud of."

In executive session, the board agreed to remove the reverter clause from the deed to the Southside Recreation Center. The town allows Edwin Kids' Day Care Center to use the center. Barbara Campbell, a representative of the center, requested in December that the board remove the clause. Campbell said the day care center, a non-profit firm, needs full title to the building to receive a $30,300 loan from the Self-Help Ventures Fund of Durham.

The town agreed to relinquish control over the building only after $14,400 owed to the town by the center has been paid, the commissioners said.

Charles Long, principal of Farmville Central High School, asked the board to lend its support to petitioning the state to lower the speed limit in front of the high school and to install a traffic light that would flash yellow for traffic east and west on East Wilson Street Extension and red for drivers leaving the school grounds.

Long said several serious accidents have taken place at this intersection and he feels that the safety would best be served by these measures. He added that about 150 student-driven cars and 33 school buses enter and exit the school grounds at this point every school day.

Town Administrator Frank Bradham asked Long to write a letter to the State Department of Transportation citing the incidents he mentioned in his presentation. The commissioners indicated they are willing to ask the state to consider the measures he suggested.

Ed Barrow, the Kinston certified public accountant who conducted Farmville's 1986 audit, congratulated the commissioners on the town's sound fiscal position. He said the town gained $600,000 in its cash position during the year, increasing its fund equity from $15.8 million to $16.4 million without raising taxes.

Lawmakers Expected To Tackle School Reform, Tax Windfalls

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

Energy-producing states face budget deficits as legislatures reconvene this month, but the hottest statehouse topics elsewhere are likely to be school reform and state tax windfalls resulting from federal tax code changes.

More than 30 states expect to reap state tax windfalls because of the federal tax code changes that took effect Jan. 1. Nationwide, the windfalls could total more than $6 billion, according to a survey of state officials by The Associated Press.

Lawmakers in each state will debate in the coming months whether to return the money to taxpayers or, more likely, to use some or all of it to balance beleaguered budgets or boost spending for education or other social programs.

Illinois expects an additional $100 million in tax revenues because of the federal tax overhaul. But state budget director Robert Mandeville has said he doubts taxpayers will get a refund because the windfall may not cover lost revenues resulting from federal budget cuts.

In New York, where the federal tax changes mean a state tax windfall of about $2.4 billion, Democratic Gov. Mario M. Cuomo favors a tax cut of $1.7 billion. But the Republican-dominated state Senate is pushing for cuts of $4.5 billion.

Financially pressed energy states, including Louisiana, West Virginia, Colorado, Montana, Utah, Wyoming, Arizona, Alaska, New Mexico and Texas, face the bleaker prospect of budget shortfalls.

The top issue facing the Arizona Legislature when it convenes Friday is an estimated $137 million deficit for the fiscal year ending June 30.

"Whenever we have a budget deficit we don't have a lot of smiles around here," said Senate Minority Leader Alan Stephens, D-Phoenix.

Texas legislators face a $973 million deficit when they reconvene Jan. 13. Republican Gov.-elect Bill Clements has said he would like to solve the problem without new taxes, but some legislators are skeptical.

"If you ran on no new taxes when you got elected, I give you my condolences," said House Ways and Means Chairman Stan Schlueter.

The drive for state-level school reform continues strong in at least a dozen statehouses.

Washington Democratic Gov. Booth Gardner wants to increase state education aid by $500 million, and is asking for another $206 million to increase faculty salaries at state colleges and universities.

Indiana Gov. Robert D. Orr, a Republican, is asking his legislature to approve $372.5 million to lengthen the school year by five days and bolster various school programs.

Iowa Republican Gov. Terry Branstad wants to spend an additional $100 million to raise teacher pay and establish a "master teacher" program.

And Oregon legislators will consider ways to keep public schools open even when taxpayers defeat local property tax issues. Estacada's public schools closed Dec. 5 for lack of money, and legislators say such closures are an embarrassment to the state.

School funding increases will be considered in Maryland, Arkansas and New York.

But financially pressed New Mexico is likely to delay implementation of costly school reforms enacted in 1986.

Meanwhile, Ohio, Nevada, Texas, California and South Carolina will take up liability insurance reform.

Tort reform, aimed at making insurance more available and affordable by restricting lawsuits, lawyer fees and damage awards, will be considered in Connecticut, Tennessee, Texas and Georgia.

Oregon legislators will decide whether to add wine coolers to the state's 14-year-old throwaway bottle law. Supporters say wine coolers have become a significant new source of litter, but business groups say the deposit law is already a burden to grocers and retailers and shouldn't be expanded.

When it convenes Jan. 14, the Michigan Legislature will debate state-funded abortions for poor women.

New Hampshire lawmakers will focus on whether to let the dormant Seabrook nuclear plant operate.

Wyoming will consider whether to increase its minimum drinking age from 19 to 21. The state lost $4.5 million in federal highway funds last year for refusing to increase the age limit, and stands to lose another $9 million next fall. But some lawmakers are still resisting "buckling under to federal blackmail."

After a rash of violent crimes in Vermont, legislators in that pastoral state will consider several judicial reform bills, including a proposal to bring back the death penalty.

Agenda Ready For City Council

A request by Margaret P. McGeorge and Joe P. Maxwell to rezone 27 acres from MD-5 to MD-3 heads the list of items to be discussed by the Greenville City Council at its monthly meeting Thursday night.

MD-3 is an office and institutional use, while MD-5 is a high density residential zone. The property is located off the northern right-of-way of N.C. 43 and west of Moyewood subdivision.

Council members will also hear a request by Nell S. Moseley to rezone 22.59 acres located off the western right-of-way of U.S. 264 By-Pass, south of Speight subdivision and north of Golden Road.

The petitioner has requested that 4.63 acres be zoned single family medium density residential, 7.8 acres be zoned single family high density, and 10.16 acres be zoned shopping center.

All of the property is presently zoned single family low density.

The council will also consider an amendment to the refuse fee ordinance, a bid award for South Greenville Gym flooring, budget amendments to the 1986-87 City Budget appropriating funds for wage adjustments for the city of Greenville and Sheppard Memorial Library and for the purchase of the Elks Lodge Building and its operation as a teen center.

Council members will discuss a revised classification plan, ordinances amending personnel policies, a privilege license allowing the operation of a pawn shop, a privilege license to operate a massage therapy business, tax releases, and refunds.

The meeting is scheduled to begin at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall.

Man Charged In 7 Fire Deaths

By The Associated Press

A love triangle apparently provoked a man to set a fire that killed his wife, 2-year-old son and five other residents of a Chicago apartment, police said.

House fires also killed six people in New Jersey, five in Missouri, three each in Ohio and Kansas and one in Wisconsin, officials said.

Madison Hobley, 26, faced arraignment today on seven counts of murder in the early Tuesday fire, said Chicago police Lt. Philip Cline.

The others killed in that blaze ranged from ages 7 to 40. At least nine people were injured, including some who leaped from the four-story building, authorities said.

Cline said Hobley apparently set the fire to kill his 24-year-old wife, Anita, and their son, Phillip, so he would be free to pursue a relationship with another woman.

Authorities said survivors of the fire told them a smaller blaze was set in Hobley's third-floor apartment on New Year's Eve.

Hobley, who was charged late Tuesday, said he was innocent. "I did not do it!" he yelled as he was escorted to a police lockup. "They've got the wrong person!"

In Rockaway Township, N.J., a fire early Tuesday killed a 67-year-old man, his 59-year-old wife and their 16-year-old granddaughter, said Lt. John Dempsey of the Morris County prosecutor's office. The granddaughter's mother and her two teen-age sons were injured in the blaze, which began in an electrical outlet, Dempsey said.

A fire of unknown origin in a Jersey City, N.J., apartment Monday night claimed the lives of a 39-year-old woman, her 2-year-old granddaughter and 8-year-old grandson, said fire Capt. William Dooley.

In Amery, Wis., authorities investigated an apartment fire early Tuesday that killed a 30-year-old woman. Her two children, ages 11 and 5, were rescued by a neighbor who used a ladder to reach a second-floor window.

In Missouri, investigators suspected a wood-burning furnace as the cause of a house fire Monday night that killed five children of an assistant fire chief in Niangua, said Fire Chief Junior Rader.

Residents of the rural community on Tuesday began collecting donations for Bill and Eileen Shockley, whose 4-year-old daughter also escaped the blaze that killed her brothers and sisters ranging from age 1 to 9.

In Cleveland, a woman and two of her children were killed early today in a fire that gutted a two-story frame house, authorities said. The victims were identified as Kathleen Moore, 40, her son, Teddy, 4, and daughter, Rene, 10.

In Wichita, Kan., the bodies of three children were found in the basement of a two-story home swept by fire early today, Fire Chief Jim Sparr said.

Official Reports Engineer Passed Warning Signal

By JANE E. ALLEN
Associated Press Writer
CHASE, Md. (AP) — A siren in the cab that could have warned a Conrail engineer to slow down had been disabled before he passed working signal lights into the path of an Amtrak passenger train that derailed, killing 15 people, according to authorities and a published report.

The signal two miles from the crash site warned the engineer to slow to 30 mph and apparently was working at the time of Sunday's crash, investigator Joseph Nall of the National Transportation Safety Board said Tuesday.

Investigators have not said if they know how fast the Conrail train was traveling. More than 170 people were injured in the collision.

The Washington Post, quoting sources close to the investigation, reported in today's editions that a shrill whistle on the Conrail locomotive designed to alert train crews that they have passed slow-down signals had been disabled with "clean, fresh tape."

The whistle essentially duplicates the function of the cab signal lights, the newspaper said. Train crew members sometimes silence or muffle the whistle to avoid the annoyance, according to some engineers.

The Conrail engineer has told representatives of the United Transportation Union that he did not tape the whistle, union officials said.

The signal system of lights and whistle inside the cab is required by federal regulations on locomotives that routinely operate in the Northeast rail corridor as a backup in case an engineer misses a trackside signal or when it might be hard to see because of poor weather.

Meanwhile, Nall said no alcohol or drug tests were administered to Amtrak crewmen who survived the crash. The board earlier understood that the tests had been given, he said.

On Tuesday, a track monitor told investigators that the 30 mph signal was posted about two miles from the crash site, Nall said. The monitor, who controls signals and switches under the direction of the dispatcher in Philadelphia, was not identified. Neither was the dispatcher, who was responsible for controlling traffic on the stretch of track where the accident occurred.

A signal about 500 feet from the accident site called for a full stop, but the Conrail engineer was unable to brake his three-locomotive train before it entered Amtrak's high-speed tracks, Nall said.

The monitor, who was in a tower in Edgewood about 10 miles away, said he had no conversation with the crew of either train, Nall said.

Nall said preliminary NTSB tests Tuesday appeared to confirm Amtrak tests showing that the signals for the Amtrak and Conrail tracks were working when the crash occurred.

Investigators, meanwhile, planned to meet today with the Conrail engineer, R.L. Gates, and the brakeman, Edward Cromwell.

As investigators pursued their examination of signal conditions and completed interviews with three of four surviving Amtrak crewmen Tuesday, Amtrak resumed a reduced passenger schedule along its busy Northeast Corridor. Officials hoped to restore full service today.

Amtrak spokesman Clifford Black said trains between Washington and New York were being held to 30 mph through the crash area rather than the 100 mph at which The Colonial was believed traveling Sunday at the switching point near the Gunpowder River.

Drug and alcohol tests were performed on the Conrail crewmen and the monitor in the Edgewood tower, and tissue samples were taken from the body of the dead Amtrak engineer, Jerome Evans, Nall said. Results of the tests were unavailable. The tests are mandated by federal regulations.

The board had planned similar tests on the surviving Amtrak crew — a conductor, three assistant conductors and the dispatcher in Philadelphia — but Amtrak officials requested an exemption from the regulations, Nall said.

The Federal Railroad Administration denied the waiver request, Nall said.

First Day Woes

gress was devoted largely to ritual and rhetorical flourishes.

It was family day in the House chamber. Members' children and grandchildren, all wearing their Sunday best, sat fidgeting, crying or sleeping through the opening prayer, speeches, Wright's election as speaker and the swearing-in of House members.

Rep. Mickey Leland, D-Texas, held a chubby toddler who swatted another congressman with a pacifier before falling asleep in Leland's arms during the first lengthy roll call vote of the session.

Freshman Rep. Joseph P. Kennedy II, son of slain Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., who won O'Neill's seat in the November elections, was accompanied to the swearing-in by his twin sons. He paused in the aisle to introduce the boys to the oldest member of the House, 86-year-old Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla.

Kennedy also was accompanied by his uncle, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., as he took the seat once held by another uncle, John F. Ken-nedly. The young Kennedy told reporters later that he came to Washington to fight for "affordable housing, health care and aid to education."

On the other side of the Capitol, 34 senators waved to family members in the crowded galleries and took their oaths for new six-year terms. Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., one of the 17 freshmen and the first woman Democrat to be elected to the Senate in her own right, patted her polished wooden desk affectionately.

South Dakota senior Sen. Larry Pressler escorted the state's new Democratic junior senator, Tom Daschle, to the front of the Senate for the swearing-in. About 500 people dined on lobster bisque, filet mignon and an angel food cake baked in the shape of the Capitol at a reception for Daschle.

The Capitol was the scene of several parties, receptions and luncheons, some sedate and some boisterous. But none could match the Texas-sized celebration held for Wright, whose overwhelming election as speaker tops off a 32-year career in the House.

Common Sense

Like it or not, it's time to buckle up — or pay the price.

For the lucky ones, not buckling seat belts in a car could merely mean a fine. For the unlucky ones, failing to fasten belts could extract the precious price of life.

The mandatory seat belt statute is now just that — it is a law that must be obeyed — unless a driver or passenger wants a citation and a financial penalty. In 1987, buckling up is no longer optional — it's a requirement. Those not wearing the life-saving belts will find themselves on the wrong side of the law.

It is a good law, despite the inconvenience and the shouting about violations of personal rights. This statement holds true for several reasons.

The first reason is obvious — common sense. If wearing a restraint during a car collision can save a life, that's reason enough to buckle up. No amount of personal rights can return the life that not wearing a belt could take away.

The second reason is also common sense. Buckling up is the law, and those who don't obey it now will have their pocketbooks pinched by the state.

The third reason is economic. Seat belts are a compromise between no protection and the added expense of air bags in vehicles. Seat belts are ineffectual unless they are used. Air bags operate without manipulation. But air bags are expensive — manufacturers estimate the safety devices could add as much as $800 to the price of a new car — and seat belts, relatively speaking, are not. Drivers pay for the seat belts when they purchase a car. To get their money's worth, they should use them.

It's stupid to ignore a law, economics and common sense. So in 1987, buckle up or prepare to pay the price.

One More Cloud

It's just what we needed: one more cloud on the horizon for the American economic future.

Launching of a New Year brings with it a recourse to seers with backgrounds betraying a willingness to look ahead. This time it was John Kenneth Galbraith who warned another major stock market crash is possible.

His economics memory-recall came at a time of heavily unequal distribution of wealth, at a time of declining industrial productivity and employment opportunities apparently concentrated in the lower-paying service field.

There is growing concern too over ever-growing indebtedness incurred by individuals and families. (Reports and hand-wringing about significance of that trend have been persisting for months.)

Then we have that on-going growth in the federal deficit with no end in sight. That has not slowed a buildup of new "needs" that will require evermore funding.

There appears a limitless number of potential woes on our economic horizon. Galbraith, in an article carried by The Atlantic and subsequently condensed and widely distributed by the news media, says stock market speculation has driven stock prices up so far they have no relation to underlying circumstances such as strength of the economy. He warned speculative episodes never come gently to an end. The wise, though for most the improbable course, he says, is to assume the worst.

He also cautions corporate takeovers are becoming a business which incurs massive amounts of debts requiring continued streams of profits to finance, and will eventually be regarded as no less insane than the utility and railroad pyramiding and investment trust explosion of the 1920s.

How many more "clouds" can 1987's horizon hold? Well, one more is building, and that is the looming trade war between the United States and the European Common Market. When old friends fall out, the carnage is often awesome.

Get Ready For The Next Energy Crisis

WASHINGTON — In a few years — the early 1990s, if corrective action isn't taken in the interim — we will have another energy crisis. The oil market will again tighten, with sudden sharp price increases and a return to OPEC control of the market.

The difference is that this time the United States will likely rely on imports for at least 40 percent and perhaps as much as 70 percent or 75 percent of its needs, as compared with the 33 percent level of dependence that triggered the first oil crisis in 1973. Even the added protection of the Strategic Petroleum Reserve will not prevent an economically debilitating adjustment — made all the more painful by the knowledge that it could have been so easily avoided.

Asking Washington to address a future crisis when there are plenty of immediate problems crying for answers is a Sisyphean task. This pending crisis is important enough to be worth the effort, nonetheless. It demands analysis and action now, while steps can be carefully thought through and painlessly executed. If nothing is done, the only later choice will be to muddle through, paying a large and unnecessary price for our collective lack of foresight.

Why will high oil prices return? The answer lies in the numbers. The most important fact is that the U.S. oil resource is in the declining years of its life cycle. My colleague Jim MacKenzie has analyzed cumulative U.S. oil production and found that 190 billion barrels is the likely total that will ever be produced in the lower 48 states. Of this, about three-quarters had been pumped by 1985, and 90 percent is likely to have been consumed by 2004. Projections of annual oil production show a steep downward curve continuing the trend that has prevailed since 1970, despite the tripling of oil prices and of oil well completions.

Moreover, today's price drop is likely to mean even lower future production than past trends suggest, because low prices lead producers to curtail exploration and to permanently close marginal stripper wells. Oil companies have already cut their exploration and production budgets by 20 percent to 70 percent. Depending on where they assume oil prices will settle, experts predict a U.S. production loss in the range of 25 percent to 40 percent by 1990!

Meanwhile, energy demand will rise. A year ago experts generally predicted about 3 percent annual growth in demand for oil in response to $15-a-barrel prices, and in fact overall U.S. oil use in the first nine months of 1986 climbed 3.2 percent over the corresponding period of 1985. With declining production, and demand rising in response to lower prices, it is inevitable that imports will rise. The trend is already sharply evident. A Chevron official predicted some months ago that imports could exceed 75 percent of demand by 2000. Most of his colleagues are not far behind in their estimates.

What do these numbers mean? If growth rises worldwide at 3 percent per year, today's large excess capacity of about 14 million barrels per day will be exhausted in less than seven years. This excess capacity is the slack that keeps market prices low. And although Mexico, the United Kingdom and Norway have entered the export market since 1973 and now produce almost 10 percent of the world supply, the bottom line remains that the OPEC nations hold two-thirds of the world's proved oil reserves, much of it (unlike U.S. reserves) capable of being produced at very low cost.

The United States need not passively accept this trend. We have the ability to shape our energy destiny through steps to control demand and to develop alternative energy sources. That such steps would have to be taken in the face of market signals strongly pointing in the opposite direction makes the policy choices that much more difficult, but no less in the national interest.

The United States and its oil-importing allies need to buy time to defer or perhaps even avert the date when OPEC will regain market control. This can be done through the introduction of economically competitive efficiency improvements to reduce energy demand. Consider that between 1973 and 1985, U.S. GNP rose by 30 percent in real terms, while energy use actually declined slightly. Yet experts believe that there are comparable or greater savings still to be exploited. If demand rises at only 1 percent a year instead of 3 percent, it will take two decades instead of seven years to exhaust the excess capacity.

Where the market doesn't work, sensible regulations will produce economic and social benefits. For example, we ought to have minimum energy performance standards for new buildings, just as we have standards for fire protection, electrical wiring and plumbing design. And we need national appliance efficiency standards — legislation that President Reagan shortsightedly vetoed at the close of the last session and which Congress should put back on his desk early in this session.

At the next level of difficulty, energy policy needs to reclaim its place on Congress's agenda for a debate on whether the analysis presented here is correct.

Republican Campaign Sickness Strikes

WASHINGTON — Five weeks before it became known that staffers of the Senate Republican Campaign Committee received fat bonuses in the wake of their 1986 election loss, veteran LaSalle County Chairman Ed Thornton of Ottawa, Ill., was hopping mad.

He had received a post-election computerized "Dear Edmond" fund-raising letter from Sen. John Heinz of Pennsylvania, the campaign committee chairman. To join the committee's Inner Circle, Thornton had contributed a minimum of $1,000. But Heinz wanted more — "a special contribution of $250, $500 or the most you can afford today" — to pay off a $2.1 million emergency loan taken out during the campaign.

In a response typifying grass-roots Republican loyalists nationwide, Thornton said no. Calling Heinz's operation "an unmitigated disaster," he asserted "somebody had better be taking a good, hard look" at a campaign that outspent Democrats but lost eight Senate seats "before you start asking for more money."

Thornton, an old-fashioned Midwestern conservative, had put his finger on the Republican campaign sickness: money supplanting ideas, expensive gimmickry replacing individual effort. Those substitutions resulted in Democratic triumphs in 1986 and can be counted to produce more of the same in the future.

Since Thornton's response contained not money but advice, it went unanswered. The next he heard about the Senate campaign committee was the news report that while burdened officially with $2.2 million in debt, it had quietly distributed $225,000 in bonuses to staffers, including $50,000 to executive director Tom Griscom. Thornton told us that was "most inappropriate at this time, when they didn't do a hell of a good job."

'Reports that several campaign committee staffers received record six-figure salaries coincide with the determination of Reagan Cabinet members to raise their own annual pay to $164,000. The Republican campaign sickness, extended into managing the government, suggests a party that may well be ready for a spell on the sidelines.'

The disastrous, themeless Republican Senate campaign of 1986 was based wholly on money. Heinz is no Reaganaut and, in fact, is best known in the Senate as a member of the bipartisan "Gang of Four" battling the president on arms control. He nosed out true-blue conservative Sen. Malcolm Wallop of Wyoming for campaign chairman following the 1984 Reagan re-election landslide not because of what he thinks but because of his past record of ferocious fund-raising.

Ferocious it was. The Ed Thorntons across America were dunned so often they were ready to rebel by the time they received the Nov. 20 computerized appeal.

Claiming they were "running behind in as many as 12 (Senate) races" (contradicting information given reporters by Griscom), Heinz disclosed he had borrowed $2.1 million. While no Republican had even dreamed of an eight-seat loss, he contended "the Democrats would have captured even more seats if we hadn't spent this extra money."

Thornton's unanswered letter of Nov. 24 encapsulated the feeling at the GOP grass roots: "There was no coordinated national campaign issue used to weld together our Republican Senate candidates. They went skittering off on their own, grasping at local and state issues and throwing a lot of money at their Democratic opponents in what must be considered to be one of the most inefficient and costly Republican campaigns in recent history."

White House political director Mitch Daniels, Griscom's predecessor at the campaign committee, is surprisingly blunt in echoing Thornton's accusation. "I think we have to question many of the ways in which money was spent" in the 1986 campaign. With "too great a substitution of technology" for "getting volunteers, getting citizens more involved," said Daniels, "many of our candidates became convinced that it was really possible to win re-election without casting issues before the public."

The quarter of a million in bonuses came as Ed Thornton was urging Heinz to "really clean house" and the chairman was trying to raise $2 million. Campaign committee staffers said Heinz insisted Griscom and others receive the bonuses. Whoever is responsible, Daniels told us he was "shocked" and that it "does not bear any resemblance to past practice there."

Reports that several campaign committee staffers received record six-figure salaries coincide with the determination of Reagan Cabinet members to raise their own annual pay to $164,000. The Republican campaign sickness, extended into managing the government, suggests a party that may well be ready for a spell on the sidelines.

Public Forum

To the editor:

On Jan. 5 at the public hearing concerning attendance areas before the Pitt County Board of Education, I was one of the overflow crowd. All the presenters did an outstanding job. The presentations were well organized, clearly presented, and were understandable for both the Board of Education and the audience. The source of the majority of data used was given. Several of the presenters gave a copy of their presentation to each member of the school board. The fact that the preparation for the presentation had to be done during the busy month of December made these presentations even more remarkable.

I would like to say well done to all the presenters and to their supporters. You all are a credit to Pitt County.

Strength For Today

Wise people live their lives as if they expected to die tomorrow.

The wise businessman tries to keep his affairs in such order that his family will be amply provided for and his business will survive if he should die. Young people with vision take out life insurance policies or enroll in pension plans.

Likewise, in spiritual matters, the wise live as if they expected to die at any moment. This does not constitute a morbid preoccupation. No one knows when the moment of his or her calling will come. But people who are prepared — as William Cullen Bryant says in "Thanatopsis" — can enter the mysterious realm of death with the unfaltering trust of one who wraps the draperies of his wife about him and then lies down to enjoy the on-coming of pleasant dreams.

Dual Role Becomes Focus Of Criticism

WASHINGTON — "On what date did you first learn of sales or transfers of arms to Iran? On what date did you first learn of the diversion of funds from the arms sales or transfers to the contras? From whom and under what circumstances did you learn of these matters?"

The legislator's questions were addressed not to Lt. Col. Oliver L. North or Rear Adm. John M. Poindexter, but to Attorney General Edwin Meese III, who conducted the first inquiry into the Iran-contra affair and has increasingly become the focus of questions about his handling of the case.

When the House and Senate select committees begin their investigations of the Iran-contra case this week, Meese's name is expected to be high on their witness lists. He is the highest-ranking law-enforcement official to have questioned former National Security Council officials North and Poindexter, both of whom have invoked the Fifth Amendment in refusing to testify before Congress.

Meese has fueled criticism by refusing to answer publicly most inquiries about the case, including those cited from House Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J. Meese aides said Rodino's staff did not have proper security clearance to see the Iran documents and that Rodino can get the information later because he has been named to the House select committee. Rodino said he was "astonished" at Meese's rejection.

Meese was widely praised after his dramatic Nov. 25 news conference in which he told the nation that he had discovered the diversion of funds to the Nicaraguan rebels from secret arms sales to Iran. But in ensuing weeks, critics say, it has become difficult to separate Meese's dual role as President Reagan's close adviser and the nation's chief law-enforcement officer.

For much of what White House officials have wanted to do — ship arms to Iran without telling Congress, delay a Federal Bureau of Investigation probe of arms shipments to the contras, seek immediate limited immunity for North and Poindexter — they have turned to Meese or cited his advice as legal justification.

The immunity issue is a case in point. When Reagan called for limited immunity to enable North and Poindexter to testify before Congress, he cited Meese's advice, although Meese had said earlier he could not grant immunity to witnesses while he was waiting to turn over the probe to an independent counsel.

In fact, Meese disagreed with the president's call for an immediate grant of immunity, a senior Justice Department official said. "His view was that nothing should be done by him or the Department of Justice to harm the work of the independent counsel," this official said, adding that Meese would have asked courts to delay any such immunity request until a counsel was named.

Lugar Support For Panel Post Put Aside By Helms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina says he will press his claim to become the ranking minority member on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, despite a 7-0 vote of confidence committee GOP members have given to Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana.

Helms called Tuesday's vote meaningless because it came two hours before the 100th Congress officially convened and before the committee had been formally constituted.

"The meeting that he (Lugar) had had no standing under the rules because the members of the committee have not been approved or certified by the Senate so the Foreign Relations Committee did not exist," Helms said. "And in any case ... and I have the highest respect for Dick Lugar ... he had no authority even to call the meeting."

"Senator Lugar has been putting on a political campaign for this job, which is fine, but I don't think the people ought to ignore what the real issue is and that is the survival of the seniority system in the United States Senate," Helms said.

He said he would ask the GOP caucus to seat him instead of Lugar when all Senate Republicans meet next week.

Lugar said he had been assured privately by a majority of the Senate's 45 Republicans that they would support his retaining the top GOP seat on the committee.

Lugar was the committee's chairman in 1985 and 1986 but was replaced by Sen. Claiborne Pell, D-R.I., after last November's elections gave the Democrats control of the Senate.

Helms has based his challenge on the Senate's seniority system, contending that the ranking member's post is his by right because he was elected to the Senate before Lugar.

Lugar says Senate rules were changed several years ago to permit members to disregard seniority in filling leadership positions. He said there is no precedent for refusing to seat as ranking member a committee member who has previously been chairman.

Speaking with reporters after the vote, Lugar said he did not consider it as a rejection of Helms or of his conservative philosophy.

"I hope that it would mean to the country that the Republican minority on the Foreign Relations Committee will be constructive and responsible," he said.

"A bipartisan foreign policy is clearly going to have to occur if we're going to have any at all," Lugar said. "The potential for deadlock clearly is there if we don't have consensus and cooperation."

"They like Dick Lugar and they like me. But that's not the issue," Helms said. "The issue is whether the seniority system of the senate shall continue to exist."

The Republican rule in effect since 1973 states that GOP members shall select a chairman or ranking minority member "who need not be the member with the longest consecutive service."

The North Carolina senator could have taken the committee chairmanship two years ago, but decided against it.

Instead, he promised constituents to remain chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, a promise he now says was a mistake because of his interest in making his mark on U.S. foreign policy.

A committee's ranking minority member attends White House meetings on foreign policy issues and controls selection of the minority staff.

CP&L Seeks Rate Boost

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. has asked for a 13.1 percent rate increase, the first of two rate increases the company wants to recoup its investment in the $3.8 billion Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant near Raleigh.

If the request filed Tuesday is approved, the typical residential customer who uses 1,000 kilowatt-hours of electricity a month will see his monthly bill rise $10.23 from $71.72 to $81.95. That would give CP&L customers the highest rates in the state. While rates for businesses and light industrial customers would increase 14.22 percent, the increase for large industrial customers would be 11.07 percent.

CP&L officials said the lower increase sought in industrial rates was an attempt to bring rates for different classes of customers in line with the actual cost of providing service to them.

Robert Gruber, executive director of the state Utility Commission's Public Staff, which represents ratepayers on utility matters, said CP&L's request for a 14 percent rate of return on equity was out of step with economic times. He said the request was "too high and cannot be supported."

The return on equity is the rate the company is allowed to earn on its stockholders' investment.

But CP&L president Sherwood Smith defended the request in written testimony. Even though inflation has declined, he said, the return on equity should be lowered gradually "in order to achieve customer and stockholder equity." He said the company had not achieved its allowed rate of return in 12 years.

State Attorney General Lacy Thornburg, whose office also represents consumers in rate cases, said he was concerned about the size of the request.

"You are talking about a substantial increase in rates and you are also talking about only the first part of a two-part process," he said.

The second rate case, expected to be filed in the fall, would request another 13 percent increase, CP&L officials said.

The cost of the Harris plant tripled since it was announced in 1970, even though it was scaled back from four reactors to one. Because of the cost increase, the state has hired independent auditors to review management decisions involved in construction of the plant.

The audit will not be completed in time for the first rate case, so any increase awarded for the plant will be placed under bond and returned to customers if the Utilities Commission rules that it was unjustified.

The plant is undergoing low-power testing and is scheduled to begin commercial operations early this year.

N.C. Savings Firms Post Record Figures

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Profits at North Carolina savings institutions in 1986 should be up nearly 50 percent over the record profits of 1985, economists say, putting the state ahead of others in the Southeast and above the national average.

"While several factors contributed to the high rate of profitability, the three most important factors were the decline in interest rates, high loan volume and prudent management practices," Harry Davis, a North Carolina savings institution economist at Appalachian State University said Tuesday.

"Due to a strong diversified economy in North Carolina, savings institutions closed over $5 billion in new loans during 1986," Davis said.

"That figure represents a 25 percent increase over the strong showing in 1985."

Davis said after-tax profit should total $185 million for 1986, compared with $123 million in 1985.

Davis and Robert Ott Jr., an economist with the Federal Home Loan Bank of Atlanta, appeared at an annual news conference on the economy sponsored by the North Carolina League of Savings Institutions. Both said mortgage interest rates would continue a slow decline that would fuel continued lending profits.

Davis said short-term treasury bills would decline to 4.75 percent or 4.5 percent while fixed-rate mortgages would be generally available at below 9 percent. He said variable-rate mortgages would drop to 7 percent or slightly below.

However, he said growth in the Gross National Product would average around 2 percent the first half of the year and could fall below 1 percent the second half.

"The economy may slip into a recession at year-end," Davis said.

"Housing starts, which have been very stable and robust for the last three years, should decline by 10 to 15 percent nationwide and in the state in spite of low interest rates."

The consumer "is up to his eyeballs in debt," partly because of year-end incentives to buy expensive items before new federal tax laws erased deductions for sales taxes and consumer interest, Davis said. However, home equity loans will become increasingly popular and will make it possible for consumers to borrow money at much lower interest rates than most credit cards carry, he said.

Refinancing of home mortgages should continue at the current rate of 30 percent, said Ott.

The value of the U.S. dollar will change very little and the foreign trade deficit will improve only slightly, said Davis.

"The other industrial economies of the world will not grow fast enough to provide much help to our export industries and thus to our economic growth," he said.

N.C. Malpractice Rates Jump

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Increases in North Carolina medical malpractice premiums since 1980 outpaced all but one of six states included in a federal study, according to a report released this week.

Rates paid by N.C. obstetricians jumped 547 percent, the highest percentage overall.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of Congress, determined that premiums paid by N.C. doctors practicing in 13 medical specialties increased a median of 276 percent from January 1980 to January 1986, or more than four times the rise in the medical component of the Consumer Price Index for the same period.

The GAO studied insurance rates in North Carolina and five other states to determine the effectiveness of state legislative measures "designed to assure the availability and to reduce the cost of malpractice insurance." The Charlotte Observer reported.

The study's authors concluded that insurance rates had far outpaced inflation in all states, despite the variety of malpractice laws passed in the six states. The N.C. General Assembly's reforms have not been as extensive as those of some of the other states, which have adopted caps on malpractice awards and enacted stricter time restrictions on filing lawsuits.

Rate increases in North Carolina ranged from 173 percent for radiologists to 547 percent for obstetricians, whose bills were about $16,900 for $1 million of coverage in 1986, the study said.

The rapid increase in North Carolina was surpassed by New York, where insurers raised premiums by a median of 307 percent. Arkansas was on the low end of the scale, with premiums rising 80 percent. The medical component of the CPI rose 65 percent during the same period.

Although N.C. medical specialists' rates increased far faster than four of the other states, their actual bills were in some cases far lower than their peers in other states. N.C. neurosurgeons saw their premiums rise 438 percent to $18,600. But California neurosurgeons paid $38,000 for the same coverage and Florida neurosurgeons paid $75,367.

In addition, the report found that between 1981 and 1984 both the number of malpractice suits filed against N.C. physicians and the size of awards increased.

Suits filed against all N.C. physicians, including specialists, increased 19 percent, to an average of 8.9 cases per 100 physicians in 1984 compared with 7.5 in 1981. While Arkansas residents were slightly less litigious with 8.6 suits, residents of California, Florida, Indiana and New York filed more, with 26, 26.1, 10.2 and 35.7 cases, respectively, per 100 physicians.

The number of suits that actually resulted in awards was not available.

More suits, however, were filed against specialists.

Hawkins Surgery

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Former Sen. Paula Hawkins of Florida is doing well following surgery on her lower back at Duke University Medical Center, her husband said.

"She's doing pretty well considering she had surgery this morning," Gene Hawkins said Tuesday.

Doctors removed fragments of a disc that were touching nerves and causing pain, Hawkins said. They also took bone from the hip and fused two sets of vertebrae in her back, he said.

"She has had back pain for quite a long while, but it intensified in the last few days," Hawkins said.

Mrs. Hawkins, who had complained of chronic back pain since she was injured at an Orlando, Fla., television station when a backdrop fell on her in 1982, spent 32 days at the medical center last spring.

At that time, doctors removed bone spurs in her upper spine and neck. Surgeons also used chips taken from her hip to fuse two sets of vertebrae in the April surgery. Two weeks later, surgeons removed part of a disc in her lower back.

Students Surveyed

GREENSBORO (AP) — As many as 12,000 students in grades seven through 12 will be asked whether they use alcohol or drugs in a survey designed to help educators combat the problem, officials said.

The state Department of Public Instruction's Alcohol and Drug Defense Program will conduct the survey in late February or early March, said James Palmer, the program's assistant director. He said participants will be asked what drugs they use, if any, how often they use them and why.

Palmer said national surveys have shown that the drug abuse problem has stabilized except for growing use of cocaine.

Although it will not show whether the problem is getting worse, the statewide information can be used as a basis for comparisons in future years and for helping local school officials and government and civic organizations establish prevention programs, officials said.

Palmer said people tend concede that drug abuse is a problem, but they too often refuse to admit that it's a problem in their children's schools. He said the survey will help show whether drug abuse is a problem.

The survey will cover 66 classrooms in each of the state's eight educational districts. The students in the survey will remain anonymous.

Palmer said he hopes the results will be ready during the summer.

Heart Disease

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Duke University Medical Center researchers are trying to discover if exercise can help reduce the risk of heart disease among women by stimulating production of protective hormones.

Dr. James Blumenthal, associate professor of psychiatry at Duke, said traditional risk factors for heart disease such as high blood pressure, a high cholesterol diet and cigarette smoking appear to be at least as important for women as they are for men.

But he added, "Other factors also are likely, and we're focusing on possible behavioral influences that may be relevant for the development of coronary heart disease."

Researchers plan to use healthy women between the ages of 45 and 55 for a three-month study that is being supported by a grant from the MacArthur Foundation of Chicago.

Volunteers, who have not been exercising regularly, will do aerobic exercise three days a week and will be compared with a control group that participates in non-aerobic yoga classes.

Serious Trouble

GREENSBORO (AP) — A Greensboro man apparently angered by a $5 parking ticket is now facing a $5,000 bond after being charged with trying to run over the officer who wrote the ticket.

Greensboro police officer R.T. Booth said he was writing out the ticket New Year's Eve in downtown Greensboro when the driver of the car rattled off a few obscenities, jumped into the vehicle and started the engine.

When the driver ignored Booth's order to wait, the officer stepped in front of the car, held up his hand and ordered the motorist to stop. But the man gunned the engine, put the car in gear and headed out into traffic, Booth said.

"I was just like a ping-pong ball," Booth said. "He knocked me up into the air, and I landed on the hood."

Because traffic was heavy, the car was unable to pull more than a few feet away from the curb. Booth said that gave him a chance to roll off the hood and go around to the driver's door, which was locked.

He reached into the car through the open driver's window and tried to take the keys out of the ignition. But the driver rolled up the window on the officer's arm.

Booth said the man began hitting his arm and hand with a blunt object, possibly a flashlight. "That hurt more than getting run over," he said.

Booth said he pulled his gun from his holster and was going to break the car window. But the driver jumped out the other door and began running away.

Booth gave chase, hobbling behind the fleeing driver. He said the man turned around once, saw him limping and laughed.

Patrol officers answering Booth's call for help chased the man into a dead-end alley. Police arrested 21-year-old Michael Lesane.

In addition to being fined $5 for parking illegally in a commercial loading zone, police charged Lesane with felony assault on a police officer with a deadly weapon, misdemeanor assault and resisting arrest, delaying and obstructing a police officer. He was still in jail under $5,000 bond Tuesday night.

Lawyer Questioning

ASHEVILLE (AP) — An attorney representing convicted drug dealer George Smith says he will question a lawyer who represented former State Bureau of Investigation chemist Charles McDonald.

Assistant public defender David Belser said Tuesday that McDonald had lied under oath about a telephone conversation he had with attorney Reid Brown on Dec. 18, and that he would call Brown to the stand today to prove it.

Superior Court Judge Chase Saunders removed Brown as McDonald's attorney Tuesday to avoid a conflict of interest.

"Your honor, I have received information McDonald has perpetrated a fraud upon this court," Belser told Saunders. "I intend to ... impeach this witness' testimony and prove that McDonald has perpetrated a fraud."

Belser, who is trying to win a new trial for Smith, said he had an affidavit about the telephone call McDonald made to Brown Dec. 18 in which he asked Brown to inform the court he may have made a mistake in testifying that he did not tamper with drug evidence in Smith's trial.

According to the affidavit, McDonald, 43, said he was "pretty sure" he had tampered with the evidence used to convict Smith in January 1985 of trafficking in heroin and distribution of cocaine.

Smith-Back Pay

RALEIGH (AP) — A longtime companion to Kate Smith is seeking $36,000 from the late singer's estate for wages and benefits she said are due her.

Pat Castledine of Raleigh said Monday that Miss Smith's family failed to fulfill a verbal agreement after they offered her a job as live-in companion in 1979.

Ms. Castledine, who was working in the offices of a large grocery store chain in New York, said the family agreed to match her salary, and pay her hospital insurance and half her car insurance if she would move to North Carolina. They also promised a cost-of-living increase in her salary every year, she said.

Miss Smith, noted for her rendition of "God Bless America", moved to Raleigh in 1979 as her health was deteriorating. A diabetic, she lapsed into a coma in 1976 which left her confined to a wheelchair. She died on June 17.

Light And Depression Is Focus Of Research

By DIANE M. BALK
Associated Press Writer
INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Scientists hoping to shed light on winter depression are working to see if light can help alleviate it. Other researchers are working with light in other depression cases, not necessarily studying whether that depression is seasonal.

"It's a very common phenomenon, so common that people accept it as a normal part of life, that in the winter we're going to slow down, not have as much exuberance," says Norman E. Rosenthal, chief of outpatient services in the clinical psychology branch of the National Institute of Mental Health at Bethesda, Md.

"In some people the feelings assume enough of a proportion to become a clinical syndrome. People want to withdraw, and become quite disabled in many cases," he said.

The clinical condition is called seasonal affective disorder. Symptoms can include lethargy, oversleeping, overeating, weight gain, carbohydrate craving, sadness, despair and tearfulness, said Rosenthal, a psychiatrist who has conducted research on seasonal affective disorder and light therapy.

"Interventions with light seem to help some of the symptoms a lot," he said. "Light doesn't work for everybody; other forms of treatment need to be considered."

A group with milder depression is also being studied to see if light helps them as well, Rosenthal said.

John Nurnberger Jr., director of the Institute of Psychiatric Research at the Indiana University Medical Center in Indianapolis, says a study has begun involving different aspects of melatonin, a light sensitive hormone, and its effects on depression — not just seasonal depression.

Other research on general depression includes work at the IU Medical School, where Stephen Dunlop, a psychiatrist who is an assistant professor of psychiatry there, says a study of a new drug to treat depression is under way through the department and LaRue Carter Hospital.

"We do see more patients or clients during the winter months than we do during the summer months," said James T. O'Donnell, executive director of the Adult and Child Mental Health Center in Indianapolis.

"When there's a change of seasons, referrals to facilities such as ours increase," he said, adding that there is some question as to whether it's folklore, personal opinion, or medically based.

How much winter affects the functioning level or quality of life may depend on a person's ability to adapt, O'Donnell said. "Some people who may be marginally adjusting to life circumstances may find it more difficult some years than others."

For some people, holidays are an unhappy time, he pointed out. If there's been a death or divorce in the family, holidays may be painful reminders of happier times or of an unhappy event, he said.

"Holidays are events that mark time. People think back to the previous year. Sometimes the memory of that is painful," he said.

Dunlop said that holiday depression is difficult to document. Admissions to psychiatric hospitals and suicides don't peak in the holiday season — they tend to peak in late winter and early spring, he said. It's possible that the holidays may trigger a disorder such as depression, but it may have gone on a while before the person seeks treatment, he said.

"People may get blue and blah but there is a difference between that and being clinically depressed. It doesn't matter what time of year for clinical depression," he said, noting that its symptoms include a disturbance in mood, although people may not identify it as depression.

"They may not feel well. The disturbance in mood lasts for a period of time," at least two weeks on a nearly daily basis. "When it goes on persistently, you can begin to consider depression as a clinical diagnosis." In addition to a mood disturbance, a person may sleep more or less than usual; be unable to think as quickly or find it hard to concentrate; feel guilty about things that ordinarily wouldn't bother him; have headaches, backaches, malaise, fatigue, lack of appetite, and not enjoy things that normally are meaningful, Dunlop said.

"I think anybody who's depressed needs to see a psychiatrist or a physician, because depression can be due to many different things. It could be dangerous to self diagnose," Rosenthal said.

Mae Won't Be Changed

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: On Saturday afternoon I drive three women from my apartment building to the market for groceries. A few months ago another neighbor, Mae (fake name), asked if she could join us. We all agreed.

Mae has become a terrible pain in the neck. She has turned our weekly trips into thoroughly disagreeable experiences. She talks, talks and talks until we are ready to scream. She has a loud, harsh voice, and interrupts constantly to turn the conversation back to some unclear personal anecdote. On top of that, she's one of the dullest people I've ever known.

I've heard that she has complained to other tenants that we rush her too much and don't take her to the markets she (and only she) prefers to patronize. She's a born complainer, although she tries to be a good neighbor and is basically a nice person.

We've tried all sorts of subtle suggestions to let her know that we don't enjoy her dominating the conversation, but they've gone over her head. Is there any gentle way to solve this dilemma without hurting her feelings? — A MAN IN HOLLYWOOD

DEAR MAN: You are not going to change Mae, so either accept her as she is, or tell her she may no longer come along grocery shopping, and tell her why. It's just that simple.

DEAR ABBY: My mother and father were divorced 15 years ago. My father has remarried, my mother has not. I lived with my mother after the divorce, but visited my father, and we remained close.

I have been married for four years. My mother thinks that when I invite her to a party at my home, I should let her know if my father was also invited as she does not want to attend if he will be there. She attended my wedding with no complaints, knowing that my father was going to be there.

It's my house, and my party, and I don't feel I'm obligated to tell my mother who else is coming. Don't you agree? — THEIR SON

DEAR SON: You are not "obligated" to tell your mother who's coming, but since she asks if her ex-husband (whom she clearly does not want to see) will be there, as a kind and considerate host, you should tell her.

DEAR READERS: How safe is your child in his or her crib? Well, listen to this:

A 58-year-old California woman was taking her usual early morning walk when she spotted a tiny toddler in his pajamas, crawling, walking and toddling merrily on his way down the sidewalk! She immediately called the police who came at once and took the bright-eyed, happy little adventurer into custody.

It seems that Sean, a 20-month-old youngster, had simply crawled over the side of his crib and escaped to the outside through the doggie door, wandering a half-mile from home.

When his parents awakened at 7:30 a.m. to discover that their child was not in his crib, they searched the house, panicked, then notified the police. Eight patrol cars equipped with bullhorns conducted a street-by-street search in the area of his home, but were unable to locate him.

The parents never dreamed this could happen to them, but it did. Could it happen in your home?

By the way, they have not owned a pet in some time, and you can be sure that the doggie door has been nailed shut!

Now that nature has built more acrobatic and resourceful children, perhaps the manufacturers of baby furniture will build a better crib from which Houdini himself could not escape.

THE RETURN OF SECRET PANELS

ATLANTA (AP) — Secret panels leading to hidden passageways in old houses were a staple of Hollywood mystery movies in the '30s and '40s. Today, secret panels are back — but with an entirely different function.

The new panels look like wallpaper and allow the do-it-yourselfer to "paper" a room with the ease of putting on paneling.

Today's wallpaper-like panels are still "coverups," says Georgia-Pacific, a maker of building products. "They hide irregular surfaces, damaged walls and wallpaper that won't come off."

OPTIMISTIC ATTITUDES

NEW YORK (AP) — Many Americans rate their personal lives and relationships with a surprising degree of optimism, according to a survey by Guideposts magazine of 1,200 of its readers.

It says some 50 percent of those surveyed rated as excellent their ability to maintain long-lasting relationships and the quality of their marriages. About 70 percent believe they communicate effectively with spouses and children, and 75 percent rated as excellent or very good the quality of life they are providing for their children.

Sweater: From Casual To Classy

Start the new year off with a bang by knitting one of the best-looking sweaters you'll ever own — boutique styling at a very nominal cost. Among the features that lend an air of pizzazz are the easy-to-knit bias bands trimming the neck and shoulder lines and a yoke of twisted ribbing.

This is an original design that can be made plain or fancy. If you like your knitting simple, work the body in stockinette. But, if that stitch bores you, our designer found a pebbly alternative called the rose stitch, which is pictured.

The Rumba sweater rivals the beloved "little black dress" for versatility. Wear it casually over a turtleneck with an Indian belt for flair or a challis scarf wrapped around the shoulders. Worn over a black velvet skirt, the Rumba sweater is dressy enough to take you out Saturday night.

The instruction leaflet gives directions for knitting the main body in either stockinette or rose stitch with very clear directions. The recommended washable yarn has the look of cotton and works to a gauge of four stitches per inch on large needles, making the work fly.

Directions are given for petite/small, medium/large and extra-large sizes with finished bust measurements of 36, 40 and 44 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Rumba sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-010487 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-010487 by sending a check or money order for $13.95 for petite/small, $15.95 for medium/large, or $17.95 for extra-large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and yarn in your choice of dusty rose, ecru or jade.

Many garments take on a special air when finished with bias trims, which can be made either single or double.

For a single bias piece, cast on any number of stitches determined by the desired width. To practice, cast on about 10 stitches. Purl the first row and knit the next row, increasing one stitch at the beginning of the row and decreasing one stitch at the end of the row. Repeat these two rows for the desired length.

You will usually make this bias piece just a tad shorter than the edge to be trimmed as it will stretch nicely for a smooth fit. And, as with fabric cut on the bias, it has the further advantage of fitting neatly around a curved edge. A narrow bias strip folded over gives the look of piping — a great designer touch for your special knits.

You can even do some shaping on the bias strip if you want, for instance, making it narrower at each end and wider in between. This is done by increasing one in the center of every knit row until the desired width is reached; at the same time, you are doing the bias shaping by increasing at one end and decreasing at the other.

If you are using this in one of your own designs and have no directions to follow, measure the length of the strip when you final central increase is made. For example, let's say that your piece measures 2 inches at that point. You would then continue knitting without the central increase until you are 2 inches short of your desired final length. At that time, start making a decrease in the center of every knit row until you have the same number of stitches as were cast on in the beginning.

Once while experimenting with paired decreases, I developed a "double" bias strip that has a natural fold line in the center. It's a bit trickier than the single bias, but it's a technique worth filing away for sometime when it might be just the trim you want.

To make the double decrease that is used in this trim, slip two stitches by inserting the right needle into the first two stitches as if you were going to knit them together but do not knit them together. Instead, pass them from the left to the right needle. Next, knit one stitch and pass the two slipped stitches over the knitted stitch.

This can be worked on any uneven number of stitches, but to practice the double bias strip, cast on 11 stitches. Purl all stitches on the first row. On the second row, increase one in the first stitch and knit the next three stitches. On the next three stitches, work the double decrease described above. Knit to the end of the row, increasing one in the last stitch.

Repeat these two rows for desired length and bind off. You will see that there is a well-defined fold at the center of the strip, and that the two ends can easily be mitered for a neat joining.

If you are casting on a different number of stitches, just remember that the double decrease is made on the three center stitches.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed today, pausing after the sharp gains recorded in the first three sessions of 1987.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials slipped .28 to 1,974.55 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 4 to 3 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 597 up, 444 down and 475 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.79 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said some traders were moving to cash in their gains after the 78.88-point runup in the Dow Jones industrial average from last Friday through Tuesday's close.

Diamond Shamrock rose 7/8 to 14 1/4 in active trading. A group led by financier T. Boone Pickens Jr. offered to buy as many as 20 million Diamond Shamrock shares for $15 apiece.

Among actively traded blue chips, American Telephone & Telegraph gained 1/4 to 25 3/4; Sears Roebuck dropped 3/8 to 43 1/4, and Mobil was down 1/4 at 40 1/2.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks edged up .10 to 144.91. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .28 at 273.76.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average rose 3.51 to 1,974.83.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by 7 to 5 on the NYSE. Big Board volume totaled 189.30 million shares, against 181.85 million in the previous session.

Former Leader Hurt

"But it miraculously landed on its wheels and he survived along with his driver," said one police official, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

The bodyguards' car took the brunt of the blast, which carved a crater six feet deep and 14 feet wide in the road, the official said. Twenty-six other cars were destroyed, and glass shards littered the road for a 300-yard radius, witnesses said.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the bombing. Chamoun was rushed to Hotel Dieu Hospital and was released two hours later.

President Amin Gemayel, also a Christian, drove down from his suburban hilltop government palace in Baabda to the hospital to make certain Chamoun was not in danger. He and Chamoun emerged together from the hospital's main gate.

Police said Chamoun was en route to a meeting of the Lebanese Front. The Front is a coalition of rightist Christian groups fighting Moslems in Lebanon's 11-year-old civil war.

Chamoun, founder of the right-wing National Liberal Party, invited the first U.S. military intervention in Lebanon to quell a Moslem uprising shortly before the end of his presidential term. President Dwight D. Eisenhower sent 5,000 U.S. Marines and Army troops to the country in July 1958.

The U.S. troops landed on the beaches south of Beirut, restored calm and departed six months later.

U.S. Marines returned as part of a multinational peacekeeping force in Lebanon in September 1982. They left in February 1984, when the 17-month peacekeeping venture collapsed.

Police said the first assassination attempt against Chamoun was May 5, 1968, when a Moslem youth shot him in the jaw with a pistol on the doorstep of his party headquarters.

The would-be assassin, Nabil Akkari, a Sunni Moslem from the northern port city of Tripoli, was sentenced to life imprisonment. But Chamoun arranged a pardon for him in 1974 and he was freed.

The other two attempts, in March 1980 and November 1985, involved remote-controlled car bombs.

FBI Charges Hunter

day at Rex Hospital, said Marion Best, hospital spokeswoman.

Proulx had been hunting, Daly said in an interview from his Charlotte office. "But the allegation is that he shot the plane. As to circumstances, that will be determined later," the agent said.

Daly said the plane was shot with a 30-30 Winchester rifle. Proulx did not turn himself in but was arrested after an investigation, he said.

Curran said Proulx was being held at the Wake County Jail and would be brought before a U.S. magistrate in federal court in Raleigh today.

Curran said he would ask the magistrate to hold Proulx without bond "because of the nature of the crime."

A federal grand jury is meeting in Raleigh and Curran said he might ask for an indictment in the case today.

Curran said Proulx had been apprehended on a tip the FBI received Sunday, but he refused to identify the source.

Farmville Ready

the Collice Moore and Associates of Greenville and Jim Lancaster of Farmville were accepted to conduct appraisals of the 1985 Community Development Block Grant property. It is required that two appraisers be retained to conduct appraisals on CDBG property. About 12 properties are involved.

A contract of $149,522 with Barrus Construction Company was approved. This contract calls for the improvement under Community Development Block Grant funds of Blalock, Baldree and Zeno streets and the resurfacing of Cameron Street. Local money projects include resurfacing of two block of Wallace Street, two block of West Horne Avenue, Grimmsburg Street and the alley on the east side of Main Street between Wilson and Church streets. $114,162 of the total is CDBG money and $35,360 is local money.

Commissioner Moses Moye said that bids came in much lower than was expected, a fact he attributed to low prices on asphalt. He said, in light of this, that the public works committee is working up a new schedule of streets that need to be resurfaced, so the town can go ahead and get more resurfacing work done while asphalt prices are low. Recommendations will be made in the February board meeting, it was indicated.

The board authorized the sale of a 1976 Dodge ambulance to the Fountain Rescue Squad for $4,000. The lower-than-usual price was selected because of "the ongoing support and backup furnished to Farmville by the Fountain Rescue Squad," commissioners said.

Although the number of affirmative votes last month on amendment of the town's Animal Control Ordinance was not sufficient for it to pass on first reading, a second vote Tuesday passed the ordinance. The amendment basically defines the difference between a vicious and a nuisance dog. Tuesday, with all five board members present, four voted for the change and one — John Turner Walston — cast a negative vote.

The board, therefore, voted not to change C&A's rates based on its metering and said it will take a look at the rate system and possibly make changes at the beginning of the next fiscal year. A surcharge for discharge of pollutants may also be looked at, they indicated.

Bids solicited for the provision of chlorine for the town's water treatment all came in virtually the same. Three companies offered the same or very nearly the same prices as the others. The town decided to reenter contract with Suffolk Chemical, which it said has provided good service in the past.

The following appointments by Mayor Edna Earle Baker were approved by the board: Joyce Lewis and Jim Hockaday to the Library Board with terms to expire Jan. 1, 1990; David Moore to another term on the Board of Adjustment with expiration Jan. 1, 1990; Danny Griffith to another term on the Planning Board with expiration Jan. 1, 1990; Larry Lewis to a term on the Planning Board with expiration Jan. 1, 1990; Mitchell Stepe to a term on the Planning Board with expiration Jan. 1, 1989, and Dan Thomas to another term on the Firemen's Relief Board of Trustees with expiration Jan. 1, 1988.

Nebraskans Take A Shine To Their Role In Controversial TV Drama

'Amerika'

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The Soviets hated it and activists have sniped from right and left, but the people of Tecumseh have taken a shine to "Amerika."

They were especially charmed by their own performances in ABC's controversial 14½-hour drama.

"I thought it was great," said Marion Beethe, one of about 500 Tecumseh residents who made the one-hour drive north to the state capital for a pair of four-hour "world premiere" showings this week. "I'm really looking forward to seeing the ending. I think I might be in it."

"I could have sat there the rest of the night," said Jody Forke, who worked 11 hours as an extra when "Amerika" invaded Tecumseh last April.

She was delighted to see her 18-year-old sons James and Jaye playing soldiers, just as her neighbors happily nudged each other as they caught glimpses of themselves marching, standing in food lines or hovering in backdrops.

About half the series was filmed in Tecumseh, a county seat of about 2,000 residents. A lordly Victorian courthouse comprises a one-building skyline in the business district.

Whether the rest of the country will embrace "Amerika" so warmly is a question of considerable interest to ABC, which sank more than $35 million into the series, and to the network's detractors.

The Soviet government denounced the series even before filming began, and threatened to restrict ABC's news operation in Moscow. The United Nations objected to the fictional occupation forces' use of the U.N. flag.

The Committee for National Security, a Washington-based organization which lobbies for arms control, last month called the series "boring, politically insulting and an obstacle to public understanding of real-world complexities."

Todd Gitlin, a sociology professor at the University of California at Berkeley and author of "Inside Prime Time," wrote in the liberal Jewish quarterly Tikkun that the show was "the most coherent, explicit and extended right-wing vision of the world to be seen in American TV."

However, Reed Irvine of conservative Accuracy in Media also pronounced "Amerika" a bore after seeing a sneak preview in Washington. Newsweek, in a November article, said the show has enough sex to satisfy "connoisseurs of the prime-time soaps (not to mention Nazi-bondage porn)."

On the day of the show's premiere in Lincoln, The New York Times published a critical letter by George F. Kennan, the distinguished foreign policy expert who fathered the post-war U.S. policy of containment. He called it "a serious disservice to the clarity of public understanding on issues of vital importance."

All this for a drama which is still being edited, according to Donald Wrye, the writer, director and executive producer.

"I don't think bad publicity is good for the film," Wrye told reporters. "I think we are at a disadvantage now because the film has a very hard time speaking for itself."

Although no one has seen the finished product, and only Nebraskans have seen as much as four hours, bootlegged copies of the script have been circulating, as well as videotapes of 90 minutes or less.

Wrye insisted that "Amerika" is not about the likelihood of a Soviet conquest, but is a fictional exploration of life in a totalitarian system.

"There is so much use of the film to push individual agendas," he complained.

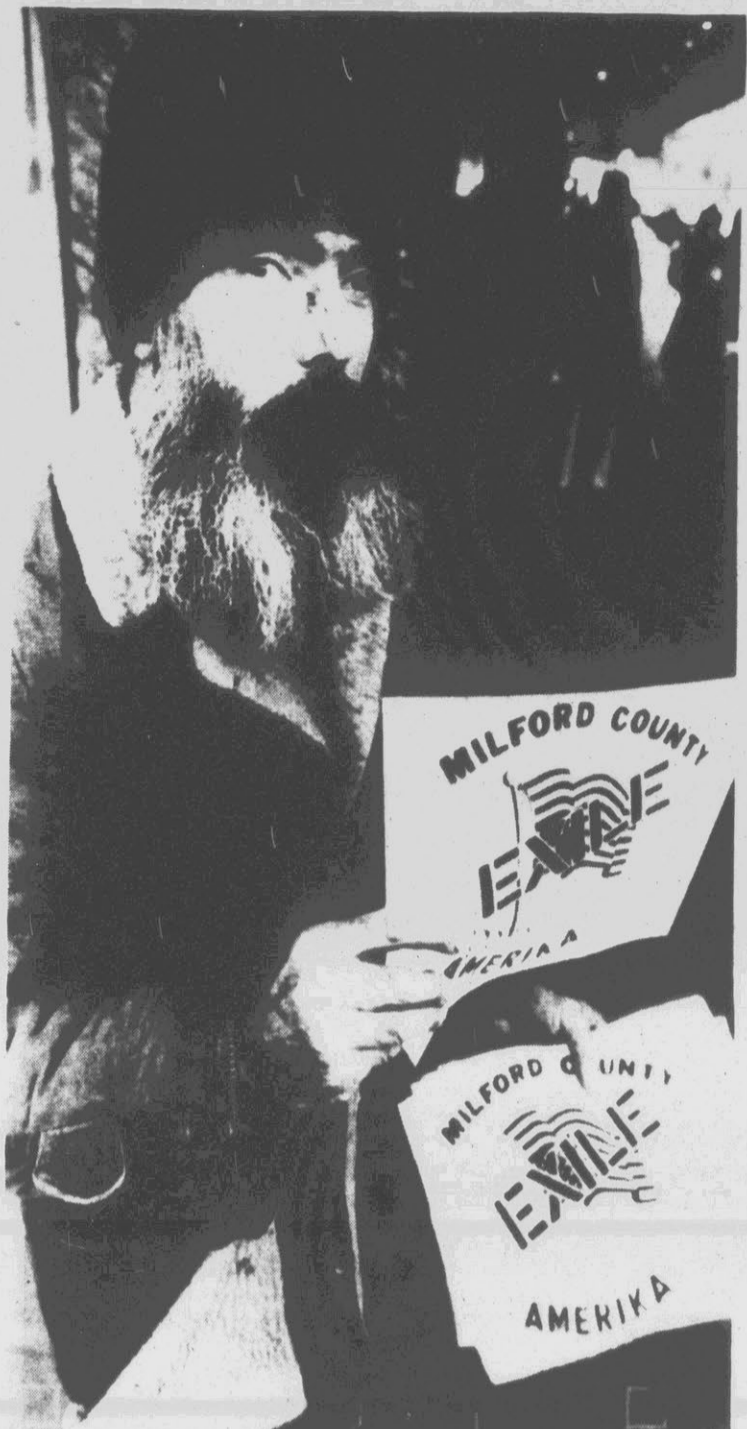

Brandon Stoddard, president of ABC Entertainment, likewise dismissed the value of negative publicity.

"I'm real glad we're getting around to the audience," he said. "I feel they've got a real good sense about these kinds of shows. We're getting near some friends."

The audience, however, has not been markedly friendly this season as ABC has lagged in third place. Stoddard, who conceived and commissioned "Amerika," declined to predict how it would fare.

"If it doesn't work, life will go on," he said in an interview. "I will go on and continue at ABC. I don't think this is make or break time."

Carol Honblez, who wore a crimson "I was in Amerika" T-shirt and played an exiled dissident, said she found the film true to life.

EXTRA — Robert Hansen, who played an exile as an extra in the ABC-TV dramatic series "Amerika," passes out handbills supporting the show during a premiere in Nebraska this week. Hansen, like most of the Nebraskans who had roles, said he liked the show — which has been panned by the Soviet Union. (AP Laserphoto)

Once Booming Uranium Mill Nears Shutdown

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

BLANDING, Utah — The 130 workers at the White Mesa Uranium Mill here in Southeastern Utah, near Four Corners, know they will lose their jobs in May.

"We're the lucky ones. We're still working," said Dan Hunt, 40. He wears a respirator as he weighs uranium oxide concentrate, commonly called "yellow-cake," the mill's final product.

Hunt has been working in uranium mines and mills since he was 18. Like all who work at White Mesa, he does not consider this a life-threatening or dangerous occupation.

"You respect the risks involved working with radioactive material but don't worry about it as long as proper safety precautions are taken at all times," he insisted.

Hunt and his fellow employees are happy to be working because the uranium industry is in a terrible slump.

During the uranium boom of the late 1970s, more than 22,000 Americans were employed in the exploration, mining and milling of uranium. Today the industry is in a terrible slump.

During the uranium book of the late 1970s, more than 22,000 Americans were employed in the exploration, mining and milling of uranium.

tion, mining and milling of uranium. Today, the industry has jobs for fewer than 1,000.

In the industry's peak years, 25 mills operated in the United States and uranium production reached 44 million pounds. By 1985, it had skidded to 11 million pounds, with total world production at 90 million pounds.

White Mesa this year will mill more than 5 million pounds of uranium, or about half the nation's domestic output. It is one of only three such mills now in full operation. Two others run at limited capacity.

"This plant was built at a cost of $40 million. It went into operation in May 1980, and shut down two years later because of the depressed market," explained plant superintendent Don Sparling, 56.

"White Mesa fired up again in October 1985. The reason we are running again is because we have a source of high grade ore not too far away and a lot of automation at the plant, enabling us to make a profit."

When the White Mesa mill went back on line, it was supplied with enough Arizona uranium ore — 175,000 tons — to keep operating for at least 18 months. But when the stockpile runs out in May, the plant again will be shuttered until the raw material supply is built up again.

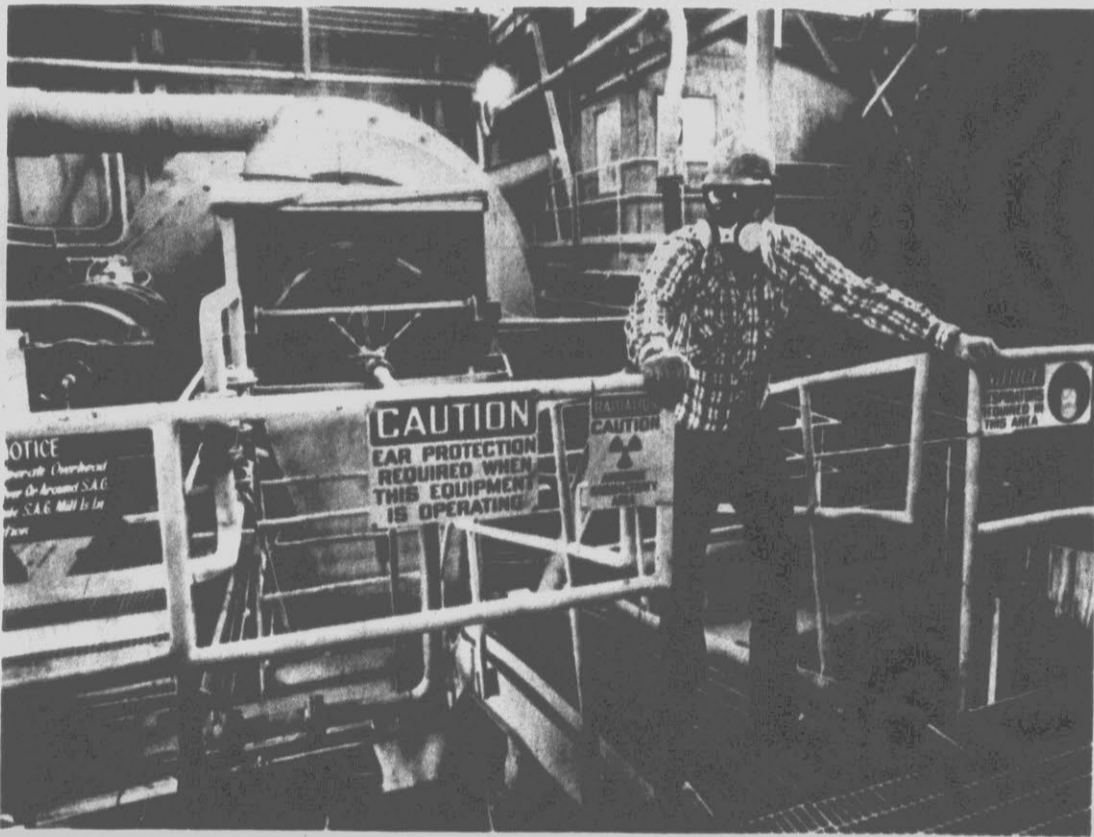

"The Arizona mines ship the high-grade ore to White Mesa, but milling is much faster than mine production," explained Sparling.

He tersely told the uranium industry's recent tale of woes: "Large increases in electrical consumption were predicted. Nuclear power was a rising star in the energy field" in the late 1960s and early 1970s, "Utilities planned and constructed more and more nuclear power plants, creating an impetus for heavy domestic production of uranium."

By the late 1970s, 100 uranium mines were in operation in several Western states. Twenty-five mills were erected. And the price of uranium shot up as high as $40 a pound.

Then, beginning in 1981, came the fall, said Sparling. "The increased financial burden of building the plants surfaced. Cancellations of nuclear plant construction started after the Three Mile Island incident. Problems were occurring in other plants."

Mississippi's Blacks Prove Barnett Wrong

By DAN EVEN
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — In the summer of 1963, Gov. Ross Barnett vowed that integration would never come to Mississippi because mingling of the races had "absolutely ruined every civilization."
The Magnolia State, which had a 43 percent black population, became a symbol of Southern resistance to integration and a bloody battleground of the civil rights era.
History proved Barnett wrong. Mississippi has more elected black officeholders than any other state — from local supervisors and sheriffs to a judge of the state Supreme Court and, taking office this month, a member of the U.S. House.
"There is no comparison between then and now," says state Rep. Robert Clark, who in 1967 became the first black elected to the Legislature in this century. "Anybody that says different is a fool. And I'm not going back — only over my dead body."

Blacks, now roughly 36 percent of the state's population, have made great strides, but officials say they still lag far behind white Mississippians in income and employment.
Still, experts see the emergence of a fragile black middle class in the state.
Minority-owned businesses won 12 percent of contracts awarded by this city in the past fiscal year, meeting a goal set by Jackson's minority business program. That amounted to about $3 million worth of business.
"That shows you what can be accomplished if public policy is set," said Leslie G. Range, a board member of the program and president of a consulting firm.

"Most of our problems in Mississippi are economic, with the problems particularly acute in the black community," says Reuben Anderson, the state's first black Supreme Court justice. "We don't have any more problems than any other state when it comes to racial problems."
That was not always the case. After James Meredith in 1962 became the first black to enroll at the University of Mississippi, riots killed two. The following year, NAACP official Medgar Evers was assassinated, and a year later three civil rights workers were slain in Philadelphia, Miss.
Today, the fight for full equality between blacks and whites still takes the form of sit-ins, like those of the '60s, but activists are also taking their battle to courtrooms, the polls and the marketplace.
"We can't keep on marching and praying to make change occur," says Medgar Evers' brother Charles, who became the first black mayor of a biracial town when elected in Fayette in 1969. "People can march until they drop, but holding back the dollars and votes is something that will make an impact."
The nation has 6,424 black elected officials, with 521 of them in Mississippi, according to figures from the Joint Center for Political Studies in Washington. Louisiana follows with 488. Illinois has 426, Georgia 417 and Alabama 403.
Black advances in Mississippi have come with increased minority voter registration. In 1954, when the "Most of our problems in Mississippi are economic, with the problems particularly acute in the black community," says Reuben Anderson, Mississippi's first black Supreme Court justice. "We don't have any more problems than any other state when it comes to racial problems."

Supreme Court ordered public school desegregation, the state had about 22,000 blacks registered, and an estimated 8,000 voted.

This year, the center estimates, 85.6 percent of voting-age blacks are registered, more than 400,000.

Increased black registration and participation have been cited as major reasons for the election of black lawyer Mike Espy in Mississippi's 2nd congressional district in November.

The first major election breakthroughs came in 1967 when Clark won a state house seat, and in 1969, when Charles Evers was elected.

The killing of Medgar Evers and the passage of the 1965 Voting Rights Act heralded a revolution which began transforming rigidly segregated Mississippi into a different society.

"There wasn't a single black elected official in the state when Medgar was killed," Charles Evers reflected.

Economically, the gap hasn't been bridged.

Figures from the 1980 U.S. Census show that whites earned 2.3 times the amount blacks did in the state. In 1979, white per capita income averaged $6,484, as compared to $2,833 for blacks. Overall, Mississippi's per capita income ranks last in the nation.

Unemployment among the state's blacks remains high, estimated at 30 percent in most parts of Mississippi. Unemployment for Mississippi overall was 11.5 percent in November.

A lack of jobs for young blacks breeds a new despair, says Dr. Alferdteen Harrison, a professor of history at Jackson State University.

"It's a tragic circle. We preach and preach more education, but when blacks leave schools in Mississippi, they can't find a job," she says. "The expectations are there, but no jobs."

Black leaders say recent school boycotts, sit-ins and lawsuits are evidence of a renewed activism by blacks who realize attitude changes cannot be court-ordered and believe economic and political equality are yet to come.

"I think it's a new civil rights movement stemming from the shortcomings of the 1960s," said Cleve McDowell, executive field director of the Mississippi NAACP. "Blacks are trying to complete the movement that began in that era — trying to nail down particular rights that weren't won then."

McDowell said the 1980s movement is aimed at greater employment opportunities, better education and more representation in government.

"The problems now are different from those of the 1960s, yet at the same time they all point toward basic civil rights," McDowell said. "It's time to go back and rekindle the flame that was already there. Blacks aren't going to be second-class citizens anymore."

The most visible examples of this renewed activism in the last year include a 37-day boycott of white-owned businesses in Indianola and filibuster-like tactics by black legislators angry that a bill to make Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday a holiday died in committee.

Indianola, whose school district is 93 percent black, now has its first black superintendent and first majority-black school board.

Last spring, blacks picketed downtown stores, causing a drastic drop in sales, and staged two school boycotts until a newly hired white superintendent resigned and their candidate, a black principal who had worked in the district for 20 years, was appointed.

"It was a lesson for both blacks and whites," said Walter Gregory, who was elected the district's first black board president after the boycott. He had been on a board 11 years.

"They realized that lines of communication had been closed. But since the boycott, there has been more communication and the joint efforts look very good."

It's not only Mississippians who have noticed a marked change.

"Who in my generation would have thought there would be a Medgar Evers highway, a road named for the head of the NAACP here in Jackson?" said anthropologist St. Clair Drake of Stanford University, who did a pioneering work on race relations in the South in the mid-1930s.

"This is the calm after the storm."

Black Colleges Try To Retain Identity While Struggling

By KATHY EYRE
Associated Press Writer
JACKSON, Miss. (AP) — Mississippi's historically black universities are trying to retain their race identity despite strained finances and drops in enrollments.

Mississippi has three historically black four-year public schools — Jackson State, Mississippi Valley State and Alcorn State — along with one public junior college. There are also two private four-year schools and three junior colleges.

Officials at the historically black schools say they're not touting segregation, but believe their institutions fill a need.

"All of these schools have been for all of the people all of the time, but the others just didn't care to come," says Hillard L. Lackey, director of alumni affairs at Jackson State and national coordinator of the (Black) Council of National Alumni Associations' joint fund-raising program. Jackson State's student body is 5 percent white.

Although they welcome white students, the black colleges provide crucial support systems that black students don't find at predominantly white schools, Lackey and other officials said.

Lackey quotes a 14-year study by Jacqueline Fleming, an adjunct professor of psychology at Barnard College in New York, published in 1985 and titled "Blacks in College," to support the contention that integrated higher education hasn't helped most blacks.

"She discovered that for every 100 black students entering a white college, only 14 would graduate. That's 86 dropouts," he said. "In black schools, 57 graduate in four to five years. That's 43 dropouts."

Earlier this year, Mississippi's College Board, which oversees state higher education, asked the Legislature to close Mississippi Valley State, where enrollment has fallen by about one-third in a decade. The proposal was rejected by lawmakers.

"We feel it's been put behind us. The Legislature has given us the message: They want to keep these institutions open," said George Carter, associate executive director of the state College Board.

Nonetheless, legislators cut the budgets of Valley and other black schools, along with those of white schools.

Mississippi Valley lost $1.8 million or 27 percent of its state appropriation for fiscal 1986-87, said school president Joe L. Boyer. "We're hoping we've gone through the worst year" in the college's history, he said.

Despite a $400 tuition increase, to $1,500 annually this year, enrollment is 2,050 full- and part-time students, only a slight decline. That testifies to students' as well as faculty members' confidence that the worst has passed, Boyer said.

"We budgeted for a 5 percent drop (in enrollment) for this school year, but it was only 3.5 percent — meaning that the attractiveness of the school remains," he said.

Alcorn State also raised its tuition $400 to $1,500 and has seen its student head count slide about 7 percent this year to 2,400, vice president R.E. Waters said.

Marsha Mason Will Direct CBS 'School' Special

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marsha Mason, a four-time Oscar nominee as best actress, makes her film directing debut with a CBS "Schoolbreak" special about teen-age bulimia.

The one-hour film, "Little Miss Perfect," will be broadcast the afternoon of Jan. 13. Mary Tanner (Mary Margaret of "The Cavanaugh's") stars as Debbie Welker, and Diane Baker stars as her mother, Helen Welker-Summers.

Mason, who had directed in the theater, said she was asked to direct "Little Miss Perfect" by Alan L. Gansberg, who wrote and produced the special with Judy Strangis.

Mason described the show as "the story of a 15-year-old girl who suffers from bulimia," an eating disorder generally characterized as "binge and purge" because the victims overeat and then vomit.

"It's so scary to read the research and interview all the young actors and actresses," she said. "I asked them if they knew anyone with bulimia and without exception they all did or had bulimia themselves."

"Young kids believe they can stop it any time they want. They don't relate to adults with bulimia, as in the movie 'Kate's Secret,' even though it's the same problem. They develop the habit of eating five sugar donuts because they know they can purge. It's hard to spot because they're usually never overweight."

"The androgynous look is in. It's not like when I was a child. Kids who have no reason to do it do it. What they don't realize is they are setting up a biological dependency. The body makes a negative adjustment."

Mason calls her film a cross between a docudrama and an educational film. "You have to explain a lot of things," she said. "You have to show the pressures on the girl. I think there are a lot of things in it that young people can relate to."

She filmed the show in eight days, which she called "a killer schedule" because of the enormous amount of location work.

"I had interesting problems you don't usually think about," she said. "How can I show someone throwing up and get it past Standards and Practices? They have strong rules about what you can show and sounds you can use. When I scouted locations I also had to look for bathrooms that were large enough to film in. Bathrooms are usually so tiny."

"Being new to directing I could deal with it. I didn't know it was impossible. It turned out to be the hardest thing I've ever done. It certainly equaled the time I was in four shows at the same time at ACT in San Francisco. It was a real baptism of fire."

Mason received another script while she was directing. She laughed. "I'd told myself that somebody was going to send me a horror script. And this script came in and it was a horror script. I haven't found the concept of the script yet. With 'Little Miss Perfect' I had a concept. I was at my best when I had a clear idea of what I had to do. The secret really is in pre-production planning."

Mason also co-stars in one of the hottest current films, "Heartbreak Ridge." She plays Clint Eastwood's ex-wife.

Her production company is also developing television reporter Linda Ellerbee's book, "And So It Goes," and "The Curious Predicament of Rita Jensen," an investigative reporter whose roommate turned out to be Kathy Boudin, a fugitive member of the Weather Underground.

She is also looking into the possibility of doing a television series.

"I haven't found anything right for me yet," she said. "I had been against doing a series but I am beginning to change my mind. I would want to do something terribly offbeat."

'Blue Velvet' Voted Tops By Film Critics

L.A. Times-Washington Post

NEW YORK — David Lynch's "Blue Velvet" won four of the nine 1986 film awards, including those for best picture and best director, by the National Society of Film Critics.

"Blue Velvet," a dark and occasionally comic look at the underbelly of a seemingly calm American lumber town, also won awards for cinematographer Frederick Elmes and Dennis Hopper, whose turn as a gas-sniffing sexual psychopath led the critics' balloting for best supporting actor.

Bob Hoskins was named best actor for his role as a pugnacious ex-con who falls in love with the call girl he is hired to watch in "Mona Lisa," and newcomer Chloe Webb, who played Sid Vicious' ill-fated American girlfriend in "Sid and Nancy," was named best actress.

Dianne Wiest, the ditziest sibling in Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters," was named best supporting actress, an award she had previously won from the National Board of Review and the critics societies in both New York and Los Angeles.

Maximilian Schell's "Marlene," a bittersweet look at the life and career of Marlene Dietrich, was named best documentary while the best screenplay award was voted to Hanis

Kureishi for "My Beautiful Laundrette."

Director — Lynch ("Blue Velvet"), Andrei Tarkovsky ("Sacrifice").

Actor — Hoskins ("Mona Lisa"), Jeff Goldblum ("The Fly").

Actress — Webb ("Sid and Nancy"), (tie for second) Sandrine Bonnaire ("Vagabond") and Kathleen Turner ("Peggy Sue Got Married").

Best supporting actor — Hopper ("Blue Velvet"), Daniel Day Lewis (for both "My Beautiful Laundrette" and "A Room With a View").

Cinematography — Elmes ("Blue Velvet"), Robby Mueller ("Down By Law").

NBC News Takes New Look At Its Horizons, And Decides To Expand

By MORGAN GENDEL
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

LOS ANGELES — NBC News, on a roll despite the cancellation of the prime-time "1986" series, may be seen nearly round the clock and through much of the world in 1987.

A pre-"Sunrise" business report, a lighthearted late-night newscast, a midday network report and a seven-day-a-week "Today" show are in various stages of development, NBC News President Lawrence K. Grossman told reporters Monday.

In addition, NBC is a partner in a new venture called Anglovision, a "pan-European" effort to circulate English-language news throughout the world, Grossman said.

Following the success of NBC's prime-time entertainment slate, Grossman's news division saw its "Today" show overtake ABC's "Good Morning America" in the morning ratings and its "NBC Nightly News" frequently move to No. 1 in its time slot during 1986. And even though the "1986" news-magazine series failed, Grossman reiterated earlier statements that NBC News will continue to have a prime-time presence: 15 one-hour documentaries are planned this year and at least 15 more for 1988.

Tuesday night's report on the Iran scandal, "The Arms, the Men, the Money," and next Tuesday's special on AIDS were examples noted by Grossman.

Grossman, speaking at the Century Plaza hotel here, kicked off the second full day of what is to be nearly two weeks of presentations to the nation's TV critics. Following NBC's stint on the so-called "press tour" will be screenings and celebrity interviews offered by ABC, CBS, the Public Broadcasting Service and various cable channels.

Sunday's session found "Today" producer Steve Friedman — flanked by his show's stars, Bryant Gumbel, Jane Pauley and Willard Scott — predicting a short run for CBS' new "Morning Show," an entertainment-and-information package that debuts Monday in the old "CBS Morning News" slot.

"I think their emphasis is misplaced," Friedman said. "I think you'll see an attempt by (CBS News chief) Howard Stringer to reclaim that time" for a program produced by his division.

Plans reported by Grossman Monday also focused in part on "Today," which he said will begin a regular Sunday broadcast by mid-year. A Saturday segment will follow before the end of the year.

Grossman also announced a March 2 start date for "Before Hours," a 15-minute business report anchored by Bob Jamieson. The show will air daily before "NBC News at Sunrise."

NBC, meanwhile, is a 30 percent partner in Anglovision, which had its first board meeting Friday with Grossman as chairman. Other partners include Shearson-Lehman American Express and International Newspapers, an Irish media company.

NBC has licensed rights to its various news shows to Anglovision for international distribution via cable companies and in hotel rooms in Europe.

Hawaii: It Has No Snakes, And Doesn't Want Any

By STEWART TAGGART
Associated Press Writer
HONOLULU (AP) — Hawaiians want to keep snakes out of their mid-Pacific Eden, but officials warn that hitchhikers may yet find their way here aboard ships and planes or enter as smuggled pets.

Snakes are not native to Hawaii, and officials believe the reptiles could eat their way through dozens of unique animal species if allowed to establish themselves here.

Earlier this year, lone snakes were found at a container yard, an Air Force base and under a car here.

The finds were trumpeted in local newspaper stories and led wildlife officials to ask again for the public's vigilance in keeping unwanted reptiles out of the Aloha State.

In Hawaii, unauthorized possession of a snake is a misdemeanor carrying a fine of $1,000, one year in prison or both.

"The bottom line is: we don't want snakes," said Stanley Higa, spokesman for the state Department of Agriculture's plant quarantine branch, which handles snake cases.

Hawaii, one of the world's most isolated land masses, has a number of unique bird species that have proliferated over centuries.

"The problem with islands like Hawaii is that because of a lack of native snakes or reptiles, birds and other animals may be extremely vulnerable," said Tom Fritz, a herpetologist, or reptile specialist, with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

To illustrate, Fritz and others point to the experience of Guam, a U.S.

territory in the western Pacific. Sometime after World War II, the brown tree snake established itself on the island, most likely after hitching a ride aboard surplus military cargo shipped to the island from Papua-New Guinea or the Solomon Islands.

The snakes are now all over the island, and have eaten much of its small wildlife, particularly the birds.

"That is one of the most interesting things you notice when you go to Guam, the real silence in the forest," said Ernie Kosaka, of the Fish and Wildlife Service office in Honolulu.

Seven of Guam's 10 native bird species are now on the federal endangered species list, according to Harry Kami, chief of the island's wildlife agency.

In addition, snakes are blamed for three of four major islandwide power outages on Guam this year.

"We are so frustrated," said Anette Donner, spokeswoman for the Guam Power Authority.

She said the snakes are believed to cause outages by climbing utility poles and wires, causing local short-circuits that start a domino effect of failures resulting in blackouts throughout the island.

Neither the power authority nor the government has tried to calculate the economic loss from power outages to the island of 123,700, Donner said.

Kami said there have been reports the snakes, which can grow as long as eight feet, have attacked infants.

Officials in Hawaii are worried a brown tree snake from Guam may make it to Hawaii aboard one of the numerous ocean and air cargo ships between the two points.

Fritz, who is based in Albuquerque, N.M., has visited Guam and Hawaii to study the problem and make recommendations. He has urged increased inspection of cargo leaving Guam.

Other, longer-term solutions might be fumigating cargo or introducing a predator or virus on Guam that would zero in on the snake but not adversely affect the rest of the ecosystem, Fritz said.

"We're losing the battle unless we do something," Fritz said.

A dead brown tree snake found at Hickam Air Force Base in October was believed to have fallen from the wheelwells of a military cargo plane as it prepared to land after flying from Guam.

When a snake was found near Matson Navigation Co.'s cargo container yard in Honolulu, also in October, Fritz identified it as a species from India, illustrating that Hawaii needs to be on guard against snakes from all cargo, not just that from Guam.

A 40-inch Royal python found coiled beneath a car in a business area of Honolulu the same month was believed to have been smuggled into Hawaii and released. It was captured and turned over to the Honolulu Zoo.

Higa says he tries to educate the public about the danger snakes can pose to Hawaii's ecology. His office gets about six calls a year from residents who want to surrender pet snakes.

Rebuilt Machines Favorites Even For High Tech Firms

MESA, Ariz. (AP) — What do you do when you need a new sputtering machine and don't have the $40,000 it takes to buy one?

Buy a used, rebuilt one, of course. It's only $210,000.

A sputtering machine is one of those high-tech doohickeys with strange sounding names, this one used in the manufacture of silicon wafers.

Jim Gibson at OmniSpectra in Tempe bought the rebuilt sputtering machine, just another transaction in the burgeoning used high-tech equipment market.

"Buying used equipment is a kind of an art," says Gibson, who has been doing it for about 12 years. "You really have to know what you're buying. It's sort of like buying a used car: You find some good deals ... but you're talking about some very sophisticated equipment."

The largest broker of used high-tech equipment is The Source, a 15-year-old Santa Clara, Calif., company. Its catalog lists about a quarter of all equipment available through the company, which vice president Bruce Leister says is worth about $300 million.

The largest equipment refurbishing firm is Telemark of Livermore, Calif. Although the company has been around for a decade, only in the last three to four years has its business exploded.

"I think we're going to be up to our eyes in rebuilt hardware," says vice president Mike LaFrance. "It's an idea whose time has come."

He and Leister agree that the main reason the market is growing so fast is that small- to medium-size firms, manufacturing products ranging from semiconductors to telecommunications equipment, don't have the money for new gear during a depressed market.

"Each time this (Silicon) Valley goes through a downturn, we find more and more folks needing to increase their capabilities but not having the capital to do it," Leister says.

The same is true in Arizona's high-tech community.

Jesse Lehman, purchasing manager at White Technology, manufacturer of specialized microcircuits for the military, is another buyer who has turned to the resale market.

"There's no doubt about it — if we had the capital, we'd be buying new equipment," Lehman says. "It's less burdensome as far as repair costs and maintenance. But we do the best with what we've got, and from what I've seen, we're buying more and more used equipment."

Large Arizona companies, most notably Motorola and Intel, sell equipment into the used market because they have capital available to buy the brand new, state-of-the-art manufacturing equipment they require.

In 1985, the assessed valuation of real property in Pitt County totaled $1,744,612,157; personal property was valued at $750,322,923.

Uranium

Stringent regulations were adopted.

He added, "The demand for electrical consumption did not meet projections. Coal became a major energy source. The industry took a nose dive."

By last fall, the price of uranium — today at $17.25 a pound — had plummeted to $14.25. And, Sparling said, "Other mining economics went into play. Canadians found richer grade uranium deposits while U.S. producers in the main were dealing with low-grade ore production."

Tangled Webs
 Spider webs may be among nature's most delicate creations. But the silk in these webs is stronger than a steel thread would be if it were drawn out to the same 1/1,000th of an inch thickness as spider web silk. Spider's silk is also versatile. Spiders use a coarse, dry silk for the frames of their webs. They use a sticky silk to trap other insects. And they can construct dry pathways to walk on. On average, spiders take about four and a half hours to spin a web.

There is a sound principle of card play that is often observed more in the breach. It is: Whenever possible, make at least one of the opponents commit himself before you have to play a key card. Here's how it works.

South's bid of five no trump did more than ask for kings. It confirmed that his side possessed all the aces, and it gave North the option of bidding a grand slam if he felt he had extra values. When North merely showed no kings, South contented himself with a small slam.

West led the nine of spades and declarer's problem was simple—he had to hold his losers in the minor suits to one. If the diamonds were to split 3-3, life would be easy, but the odds favored a 4-2 break.

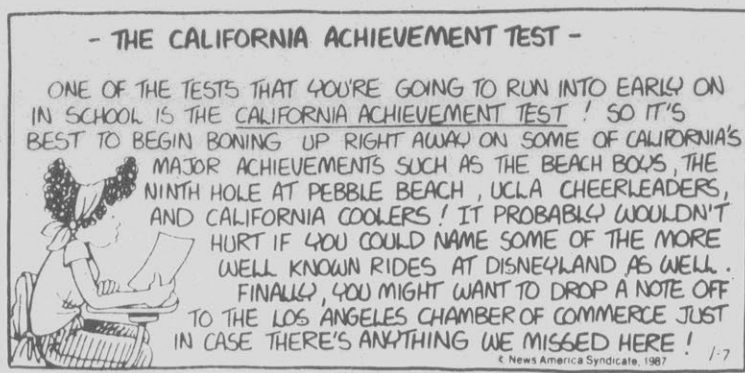

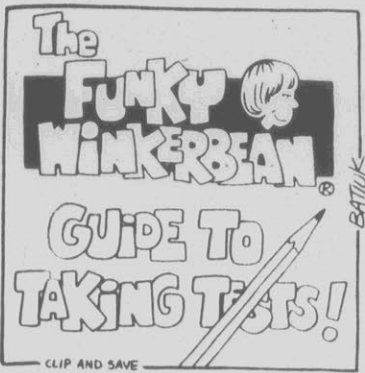

Declarer's technique was faultless. He won the opening lead in hand and drew a second round of trumps. Next, he cashed the king of diamonds, crossed to the ace, then led a diamond toward his hand. East had no recourse. If he used his trump to ruff, declarer would follow with his low diamond and later discard dummy's club loser on the queen of diamonds. If he did not ruff, the queen of diamonds would win and declarer would ruff his remaining diamond with the jack of trumps. Either way, the defenders would score just one trick and the slam would be home.

Remember this situation. It crops up in a number of disguises. The common theme is that if a defender ruffs, he wastes his trump "on air."

The Firebird

By Daniel Cheng

The night is dark, only broken by the brilliance of the stars; All is still, not a sound. Then, a thundrous roar from afar--brilliance all around Escaping the confines of the earth-- A bird in fiery brilliance, lighting the night sky. Brighter than the coals of the hearth, A sharp, bright gleam in its eye.

Spreading its mighty wings, It rises higher; soaring above. Mightier than all things-- Yet with the gentleness of a dove.

With gleaming beak in the moonlight, Noble head turning side to side, Yellow-orange and red wings folded tight, Beginning its task to save its hide.

Building its huge nest; Sharp, gleaming talons assemble the object Working diligently, it does not rest. The firebird enters the nest; it does not fret.

Eyes filled with a sad song, Life now ending. It has lived for so long-- Now it dies, crest now bending And the hour of death comes, with the sound of a gong.

Engulfed in fiery brilliance; Its nest bursts into bright flame. One last look of defiance-- And now, nothing is the same.

Arising from the ashes-- A head--larger, with eyes of fiery wrath. The nest breaks-- a talon slashes; Up it soars, from its steamy bath.

The Phoenix reborn! Soaring into the sky with a thunderous roar, a bird not to be treated with scorn; Into the sky it shall soar.

Escaping the confines of the earth, Spreading its mighty wings, With gleaming beak in the moonlight, Building its huge nest, Eyes filled with a sad song, Engulfed in fiery brilliance, Arising from the ashes, The Phoenix reborn!

A Sunset At The Beach

By Teresa Lambe

The sky glowed yellow, with just a few pinkish touches as though a giant hand had swept rouge across the expanse. The heat waves made all objects shimmer, suddenly looking far away, then closer. The sand was packed hard, marred only by the footprints of the funny, nervous, little birds.

Sunset at the beach. I walked along, sniffing the pale, wet, salty air, and watching the dolphins a hundred yards out. Today, as I vowed earlier, was the day I was going to find the perfect sand dollar.

It would be round, no broken or uneven edges-- whole. The surface would feel like worn sandpaper, and the star in the center would be deeply engraved.

I set about finding the shell. Head down, gaze intent, my whole mind was filled with that tiny creature. I didn't take time to look at the sky of fire or at the waves playing tag. I HAD to find my sand dollar.

I walked along for a time like this, until I ran into an old fisherwoman casting her line into the surf.

She had the kindest face I've ever seen. Her blue eyes sparkled merrily and gave me a sense that she wasn't just another crabby old lady. Looking up at me with her tanned but wrinkled face, she seemed to peer right through me. When she spoke, it was with lilting, subdued tones that flowed like the waves she fished in.

"Hello, young miss," she said as calmly as if she had known me all my life.

"Hi-H-H-Hello!" I managed to stammer out. Miss Fisherwoman ignored my uneasiness and said, "It's a very beautiful sunset, don't you think?"

"Yes--I guess so." Pause. "Um, ma'am, do you know the best place for sand dollars around here? I want to have a perfect one at home...kinda' like taking the beach home."

That made her laugh. "Take the beach home with you? You can't take it home. This is its home."

My confusion must have shown, because she continued, "This beach...nature...can't be taken home. It's alive, but you're wanting to take home a corpse. You cannot capture something as alive and changing as you or me in a skeleton."

I said thank you, and walked away, thinking over what the woman had said.

The sand dollar wasn't so important anymore. I walked head up, watching the sun set and the waves play thier games.

Life

By Jennifer Powell

Life is like going through one big maze

Always in a hurry, always in a daze

Making decisions, changing your mind

Whether in the lead or left behind

Both relaxing and working hard

Having to play the exact card

Having new friends, losing the old

You can't ever be weak, just big and bold

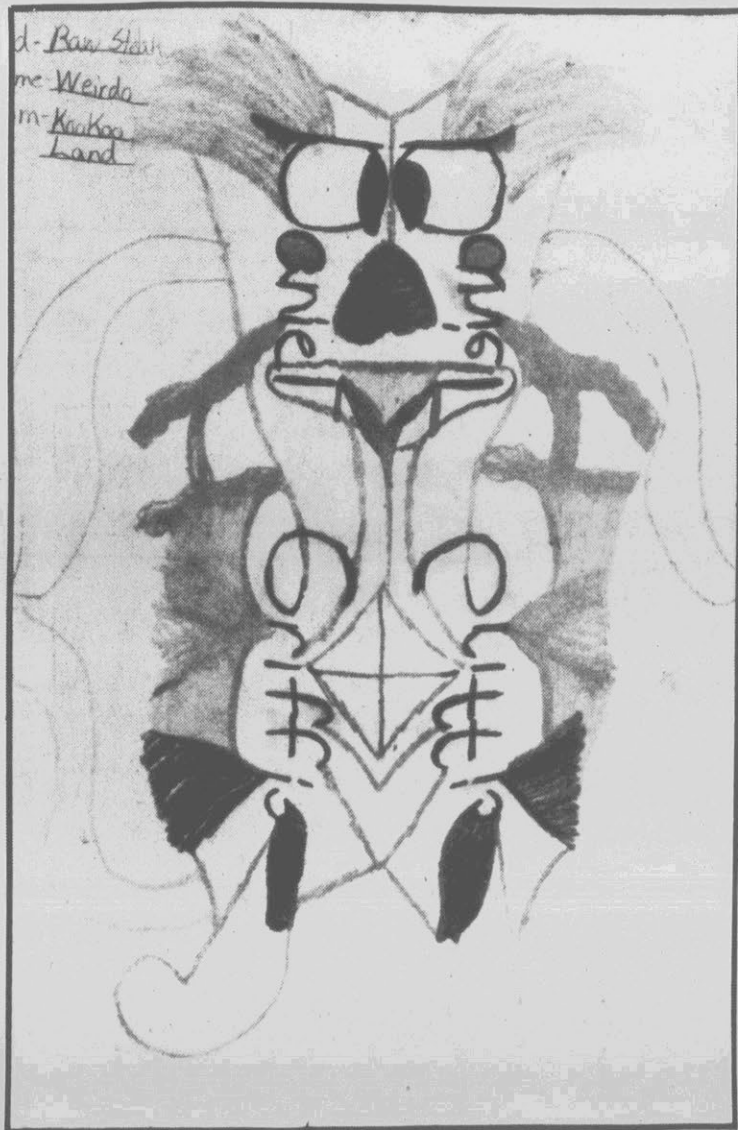

It's kind of like running one big race

Where other people set your pace

Sometimes it's too fast, sometimes too slow

But we need to stop and think, not always be on the go.

Project For A Rainy Day

Baker's Clay Candleholders

- Materials:
 Flour
 Salt Water Mixing Bowls
 Rolling Pin
 Cardboard Tubes (Pringle's Cans)
 Aluminum foil
 Oven

Stir four cups of flour, 1 cup of salt, and 1 1/2 cups of water together in a large bowl. This is enough dough for one or two castles. Knead the mixture for approximately 10 minutes on a lightly floured surface. The dough should be smooth and pliable. Roll the dough to the desired thickness (1/4 inch or less). Cover an assortment of cardboard tubes with foil and wrap the dough around them, smoothing out the seam. Put a base on the turret. Decorate the candleholder by punching interesting designs into the dough. Holes must be provided at the bottom and top for circulation. Tops for the turrets should be made to fit separately. Bake for several hours at 350*.

Over Rocky Mount

Langley Sparks Rose, 69-59

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
Keyford Langley sparked Rose High School from a 13-point second quarter deficit to a 69-59 Big East basketball victory over Rocky Mount Tuesday night.

Rose's girls staggered some but still came away with a 42-37 win in their game as both Rampant teams upped their records to 2-0 in the Big East. Both Rocky Mount teams fell to 0-2.

Langley, who scored 20 points to lead all scorers, canned three straight jumpers to get a streak going for the Rampants in the second period as they rallied from a 29-16 deficit to close within five by the end of the quarter.

Then, early in the third period, Rose took the lead for good, moving out by as much as eight in that quarter.

The Gryphons, however, put on one last rally. In the final period, they cut the Rose lead to just one before the Rampants scored 12 unanswered points for a 13-point lead of its own that put the game away.

"This was the best game we've played," Rose Coach Jim Brewington said. "And by far it was the best fourth quarter. Rocky Mount always comes here loaded for bear; I never saw them when they weren't ready to play us."

Brewington praised Langley's leadership on the court. "He took control and I was glad to see it. He was able to keep us in the game until the big boys started doing something too."

Brewington said he thought that Rocky Mount showed surprising speed early in the game. "They were able to get the transition basket against us, and we finally realized it and started to get back ourselves and cut them off. I really can't see why they haven't won more games than they have."

Rocky Mount is only 3-6 overall while Rose is now 8-2.

After holding the early lead, Rocky Mount broke a 4-4 tie with a basket by Earl Nickerson with 5:43 left in the first period and moved out from there, taking as much as a nine-point lead on a basket by Matt Cary following a steal with 3:45 left. That made it 17-8.

The lead was later stretched to 11, 23-12, before Terry Warren hit with four seconds left to cut the Gryphon lead to 23-14 at the horn.

Although Rose scored first in the second quarter, Rocky Mount hit the next six points to move out to a 29-16 lead with 4:58 showing.

It was then that Langley took charge, leading Rose to eight straight points, six of them on jumpers by Langley himself. That trimmed it to 29-24 and Rose closed within four before settling for a 34-29 deficit at the half.

Langley hit two more jumpers to open the second half and after two free throws by Shaun Ricks for Rocky Mount, Warren closed it to one with a basket.

Melvin Jenkins then completed a three-point play with 5:33 showing to push Rose into the lead for the first time, 38-36. Jenkins again scored to open up a four-point edge before the Gryphons hustled back into a 40-40 tie.

Warren made the second of two free throws to open a Rampant lead again and Langley hit from the field. Warren again made the second of two free throw tries and Earrol Wooten scored from underneath with 3:12 left to make it 46-40.

After an exchange of free throws, David Lee added a pair at the strip to make it 50-42 before Rocky Mount scored the final four points of the quarter to close to 50-46 at the horn.

Rocky Mount stuck close early, finally trimming the lead to one, 53-52, on a free throw by Nickerson with 5:03 left.

But Rose then scored 12 in a row, four each by Warren and Kevin Cobb, to run the lead out to 65-52 with 3:15 left and Rose held the Gryphons off the rest of the way.

Jenkins added 18 points for Rose while Warren hit 12. Ricks led Rocky Mount with 12 while Cary and David Jones each had 11.

"I was pleased with our shooting in the second half," Brewington said of Rose's 14 for 20 effort for the period. Rose shot 51 percent for the game. Rocky Mount, after a hot nine of 13 in the first period, ended up with only 42.3 percent.

"It's good to be 2-0, but we've got a dogfight ahead of us Friday at Beddingfield," Brewington said.

Rocky Mount scored the first four points of the girls' game, but Rose came back to take the lead at 6-4 and led the rest of the half. Kim Dupree put the Rampettes ahead with 4:53 left in the first period and Rose eased out to an 11-6 lead in the quarter.

The Rampettes could not shake the Lady Gryphons, however, and led by only 18-14 at intermission.

In the third period, Rocky Mount rallied and took a 22-20 lead on two free throws by Brenda Howell with 3:55 left. But the Rampettes scored the next 10 in a row, four each by Dupree and Kim Bridges, for a 30-22 lead and held a 32-24 edge at the end of the frame.

In the final quarter, Rose opened up a nine-point lead, 36-27, with 5:10 left, but Rocky Mount rallied within five on four occasions before it finally ended.

"I'm going to have to look at the stats," Coach Bill Kuykendall said, "but it didn't look to me like we played very well. But at least we won and that's something."

"Dwyanda Atkinson came off the bench and helped us a lot tonight (eight points and several rebounds). But other than that we just didn't play well. If we play like this against Beddingfield, we'll get run out of the gym."

Dupree finished with 14 points while Bridges had 11 for Rose. Howell scored 17 to pace Rocky Mount.

The Rose girls are now 6-2 on the year while Rocky Mount is 2-6.

Pompili Honored As Top Player

RICHMOND, Va. — Monique Pompili of East Carolina has been named as the Colonial Athletic Association's Women's Basketball Player of the Week.

Cliff Rees, who scored 44 points as Navy opened its CAA schedule with wins over North Carolina-Wilmington and East Carolina, was named Tuesday as the league's men's player of the week.

Rees, a 6-foot-4 junior from Ellicott City, Md., scored a career-high 26 points in Navy's 72-58 win over North Carolina-Wilmington and 18 in the Middies' 91-66 romp over East Carolina.

For the two games, Rees shot 54 percent from the field and 80 percent from the free-throw line. He also had three rebounds, four assists and eight steals for the week as Navy improved its overall record to 7-2.

Pompili, a 6-0 junior forward from Fayetteville, scored 33 points and pulled in 18 rebounds in a loss to Duke and a win over American last week. She also had two blocked shots and four steals in the two games.

Pompili shot 54 percent from the field (14-26) and 71 percent from the line (5-7) and scored a season high of 23 points against American. She added nine rebounds to compliment her offensive performance against American and had 10 points and nine rebounds against Duke.

Pompili is the second Pirate to be given the honor. Earlier, Marchell Henry was named from the men's team.

Vikes Hold Off Pam Pack

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — Conley jumped ahead of Washington early, building a 24-point lead midway through the third quarter, but then had to hold off a furious rally by the Pam Pack to win its Coastal Conference opener, 61-56, in high school basketball action Tuesday.

"The thing I was trying to warn them (at halftime) was that all the scouting reports said they (Washington) were a scrappy team and they wouldn't quit," said Conley coach Walter Claybrook. "We tried to warn them that they would come at us and we just didn't do the job."

In the girls game, the Lady Pack took a 32-25 win over the Valkyries.

The boys' game looked like a laugher midway through the third period. The Vikings came out and quickly added on to their 35-19 halftime advantage. Ricky Farrow hit a layup, followed by a Troy Ebron drive and a jumper by Jonathan Bonner that pushed the lead to 41-19.

Farrow followed with a layup off of the fast break to give the Vikings their biggest lead of the game at 43-19. At that point, it looked like smooth sailing for Conley.

By the end of the quarter, the Pam Pack had narrowed the gap to 49-35. With five minutes remaining, they had pulled within 10 at 54-44 on a jumper by Joe Daniels.

With 3:28 left, Conley center Phil Medlin fouled out. Guy Hodges then hit two free throws for the Pam Pack to pull them within eight at 57-49. From here the lead fluctuated between eight to ten points over the minute and a half.

With just under two minutes, Ebron connected on the front end of a one and one to make it 60-49. Hodges then followed a miss by Dixon to bring the score to 60-51.

Farrow was then called for a walk to turn the ball over to Washington and Dixon hit on a follow shot and was fouled. He hit the free throw and the score was now 60-54 with 1:33 left.

Ebron then missed on the front end of a one and one with just over a minute left and Dixon hit again to pull the Pam Pack within four at 60-56. Conley's Bonner was then fouled and missed on the front end of a one and one to turn the ball back to Washington, but Bonner then came up with a loose ball and was fouled on a drive to the basket. He hit one of two free throws to provide the final margin.

With 18 seconds left, Washington's Frankie Warren walked to turn the ball over to Conley and end the threat.

"We played with a little more intensity and we rebounded a little better," said Washington coach Dave Smith of the fourth-quarter rally.

With the win, the Vikings are now 5-5 and 1-0 in the Coastal Conference. Washington falls to 1-7 and 0-1.

Claybrook said some of his players didn't respond well to the pressure.

"We had some people who really didn't handle the pressure at the end. We had the clock (and) plenty of time. That worries me, but the most important thing we talked about was getting a win."

Farrow scored 21 points to lead the Vikings, but was scoreless in the final period. Bonner chipped in 15 and Medlin 11.

"We put a little more pressure on him in the second half," Smith said of Farrow. "In the zone, he was getting the ball a little too easy."

Warren supported Dixon with 11 for the Pam Pack.

"I made some substitutions in the third quarter and I wasn't real pleased with the team that ended up on the floor. Then it got to the point that the guys were just trying to hang on," Claybrook said. "If we'd have made our free throws down the stretch, it still wouldn't have been that close. But you've got to give Washington credit."

Conley jumped out in front early behind Farrow's 14 first-half points, most coming on long jumpers over the Washington zone. Dixon had 11 points in the first half but got little support from his teammates as Conley led 35-19 at intermission.

Despite the loss, Smith said he could see positives. "With only three guys coming back and only one starter, I think the guys played well, especially in the second half," he said.

In the girls game, Washington was in control most of the game before holding off a late rally by Conley.

Washington led 18-12 at the half and held a 26-16 advantage early in the fourth quarter.

"I think we were just flat in the first half," said Conley coach Joy Riddick. "We weren't moving the ball like we were last week. At the start of the fourth quarter, it looked like they were going to hold the ball. I think we did a good job with the press. We were still in the game with 35 seconds remaining."

Conley began their rally with 3:42 left in the final period. Beth McGhee came up with two steals that led to baskets by Trellany Boyd and Rhonda Jackson as the Valkyries pulled within 26-20. McGhee then forced Chris Connor into a five-second violation but Boyd couldn't connect and Washington took possession.

Boyd then came up with a steal and was fouled as she drove to the basket. She hit both free throws and the score was 26-22 with 1:34 left.

Tonya Holley and Katherine Occhipinti then countered for Washington to put the margin back to 30-22. Boyd countered with three free throws but it wasn't enough as Holley hit at the buzzer to provide the final margin, 32-25.

"We were trying to hold it down to five minutes until we could get our center (Holley) back in to the game," said Washington coach Donald Gibbs. "I think we showed a lot of poise and a lot of growth. I think we played good defense, maybe the best of this year. We thought going into this game that we had to set the tone because they were coming off four wins."

Washington is now 5-2 and 1-0 in the Coastal Conference, while Conley drops to 4-7 and 0-1.

ROCKY MOUNT — Rose High School rallied from an 18-0 deficit after three matches to take a 38-32 wrestling victory over defending Big East Conference champ Rocky Mount Tuesday night.

The match remained close throughout after Rose rallied to finally tie it up after six of the 13 weights. It was still tied after the 12th class, 32-32, but Rocky Mount had to forfeit the heavyweight division, giving Rose the win.

"We won even with that," Coach Walt McCauley said. "They forfeited only one to us, and we forfeited two to them, so we took six of the ten weights wrestled."

The win boosted Rose to 3-7 on the year and 1-0 in the Big East. The Rampants will play host to Wilson Beddingfield on Friday.

Big Agenda Awaits NCAA Convention

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The NCAA Presidents Commission was expected to announce today that member schools will meet June 29-30 in Dallas for consideration of far-reaching efforts to reduce costs.

Exactly what the reform-minded commission plans to put on the ballot may not be known until April. But speculation about the special convention dominated conversation in many meetings as delegates to the 81st annual regular NCAA convention got set to deal with a hefty agenda of 151 proposals.

"Everything that happens at this convention might pale beside the things we'll be talking about in Dallas," one official said. "The presidents have known nothing but success in getting Proposition 48 passed and in getting the new penalty structure approved. But it may not be so easy the next time."

Recruiting measures will take center stage Thursday when delegates to the six-day meeting begin voting.

The Presidents Commission is expected to sponsor severe cost-containment measures at the June meeting, possibly including reducing limits on scholarships and coaching staffs. The 44-member commission has refused comment on the special convention until a news conference scheduled today.

"There is a difference between the Presidents Commission and the total body of college presidents," an official of one major football school said. "The Presidents Commission knows it's going to have opposition on some of these things. It depends on how far they want to go."

One of the main actions at last year's convention — the approval of a controversial drug-testing program, was declared a great success Wednesday by NCAA Executive Director Walter Byers.

"We believe we have the most comprehensive and effective testing program of any sports organization in the United States today," Byers said. "Its objectives are very clear — to ensure clean championship competition and protect the health and welfare of the student-athlete."

Appearing with Byers at a news conference were John Toner of the University of Connecticut, who heads the NCAA drug-testing committee, and Dr. Don Catlin, head of the UCLA laboratory. Catlin was one of two experts who conducted the tests that led to controversy when 21 football players were ruled ineligible to compete in bowl games.

Catlin passed out several highly technical charts and graphs detailing the testing procedure and even made a slide presentation of how the tests are conducted.

Urine tests have been done on 1,050 athletes since the program was launched in November at the cross-country championships and only about 3 percent have tested positive. Toner said. To ensure the integrity of the tests, Toner said, every athlete was observed while the sample was collected.

Most of the 21 disqualified football players tested positive for anabolic steroids, a bulk-building substance which has been linked to cancer, sterility and anti-social behavior. Several, including Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth and Louisiana State defensive end Roland Barbay, said they had been given the steroids by physicians for medicinal purposes. NCAA officials said they doubted very much that a physician would so prescribe anabolic steroids.

Indeed, Barbay's contention that a doctor prescribed steroids in his case was refuted during a federal court hearing into the player's bid for a restraining order allowing him to play in the Sugar Bowl. An NCAA lawyer produced evidence showing Barbay acquired steroids from a body-builder.

A report in today's New York Times said, however, that the NCAA changed its mind and did not test players for drug use after bowl games. According to the Times, the NCAA said the decision was made because of the problems getting urine samples tested quickly during the holidays and because there was no realistic penalty for those who tested positive.

"We tossed it around quite a bit before deciding we just wouldn't do the testing," said Ursula Walsh, the NCAA's director of research and sports sciences. "We really didn't know what the purpose would be."

Byers called upon the National Football League to join the NCAA in fighting steroid use.

"We think that drug usage and efforts to combat drug usage in sports is one of the most significant issues of the day," Byers said. "We think it's not only important to the welfare of student-athlete, but it's extremely important for the welfare of the country and young people to persuade those who have been swept up in the drug culture that that is wrong way to go."

The disqualification of some players, Byers said, "is a sad aspect of the program."

"But the overall impact, I think, has been very constructive. It is clearly interrupting the use of anabolic steroids. My own personal hope is that the NFL will step in and begin testing for anabolic steroids."

In fact, the NFL had announced earlier that it would begin testing for steroids next season, saying it had delayed implementation until an inexpensive and effective testing procedure was developed.

Hawks Sign Williams

ATLANTA (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks announced Tuesday the acquisition of veteran NBA guard Gus Williams from the Washington Bullets in exchange for a second round draft choice in 1990.

As part of the trade, the Bullets, under league rules, waived their right of first refusal and the 15-day waiting period that goes into effect upon the signing of an offer sheet by a free agent.

The 33-year-old Williams, who played two seasons with the Bullets, averaging 13.5 points last season, was a free agent and had not played this season with Washington.

Because of the NBA's cap on total salaries, the Hawks could offer him no more than $150,000 for a one-year contract. Williams earlier had rejected that offer. Terms of the contract he accepted were not disclosed.

Williams, a 10-year NBA veteran, began his pro career with Golden State. He also has played with Seattle and Washington, averaging 17.6 points during his career.

Warriors Roll Past Jamesville

LEGGETT — North Edgecombe placed four players in double figures as it rolled over Jamesville, 63-43, Tuesday night in Tobacco Belt Conference basketball action.

North Edgecombe's girls made it a sweep with a 42-25 win in their outing.

The Warriors pushed out into a 17-13 lead in the opening quarter of their game. The action slowed a little in the second period, but North Edgecombe still outthrew the Bullets, 12-10, to take a 29-23 lead into intermission.

Both teams swapped points in the third period as the score climbed to 43-37. Then, in the final frame, North Edgecombe outscored Jamesville, 20-6, to win going away.

Charlie Grant led the Warriors with 16 points while Jeff Whitaker had 12 and Anthony Davis and David Garrett each hit 10. Jamesville was paced by Charles Parker with 10.

Jamesville's boys are now 4-5 overall and 4-3 in league play.

The going was close through the first three quarters of the girls' game. North Edgecombe held a slim 8-6 lead after one period and was unable to increase it in the second frame, leading 16-14 at intermission. It was upped, however, to 24-20, in the third.

Set Study For Playoff Plan

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The public acclaim in last week's Fiesta Bowl, which matched top-ranked Miami, Fla., against No. 2 Penn State, prompted the Postseason Football Committee to assign the subcommittee to study the playoff question.

Penn State beat Miami 14-10 in the Fiesta Bowl and was voted the national champion by voters in The Associated Press poll. Major-college football is the only NCAA sport which doesn't use a playoff system to determine a champion.

"In our discussions with the full committee this (Tuesday) morning, all of us felt just because of the interest in the Fiesta Bowl this year, the tremendous ratings and tremendous numbers of people watching ... our committee felt it was our responsibility at least to look into it," Dodds said.

Joining Dodds on the subcommittee will be John Swofford, athletic director at North Carolina; Glen Tuckett, athletic director at Brigham Young; and Carl James, commissioner of the Big Eight Conference.

The subcommittee will present its findings when the full committee meet April 8-10.

Any plan coming out of that committee would, in turn, have to be approved by two-thirds of the full NCAA membership. The earliest such a vote could be taken would be January 1988 during the next NCAA convention. Therefore, the earliest any playoff system could be in place would be January 1989.

"The postseason committee does not have jurisdiction of making decisions. That's left to the Council," said George S. King, Purdue's athletic director and chairman of the Postseason Football Committee.

Fueled by the popularity of the Fiesta Bowl, the idea of a collegiate football playoff has gained support.

"I feel there's a great deal of interest in a playoff from the public's standpoint and, from what I read, the media has an interest in it, too," Dodds said. "Up until this time, the institutions have not. I think it's the responsibility of my committee to come up with a plan just in case the institutions do want it."

One of the biggest proponents of a playoff system is Penn State Coach Joe Paterno.

"I'd prefer to have four teams coming out of the bowls, playing two semifinals, then playing a final," Paterno said earlier this week. "I'd just like to take my kids and play in that system. If you get licked, you get licked."

However, the membership of the NCAA doesn't seem to take to the idea as enthusiastically as Paterno.

"The mood of the convention this year is such that it might not pass," Dodds said. "There seems to be a mood to pull back at this convention."

Tuesday's decision to press ahead with a study came with no underlying sentiments either way towards a playoff game.

"This committee has been assigned by the Postseason Football Committee to study the possibility of a one-game national championship," King said. "Really, all it is a study to be brought back to the full committee at the April meeting."

There is also a committee of Division I-A athletic directors and another put together by the College Football Association which are looking into the playoff question.

The success of the Fiesta Bowl in maneuvering itself into hosting a national championship game helped prompt the NCAA to look further.

"The committee just felt the bowls do have some flexibility. The Fiesta Bowl showed this year that it can maneuver to get a national championship game," Dodds said. "Maybe it's time the NCAA study it to see if the membership, if it gets that far, would want to control that game."

One thing the NCAA definitely doesn't want to do is alienate the bowl games already in existence.

"The bowls put about $41 million a year into institutions around the country and I think the institutions feel good about that," Dodds said. "The bowls have been good for college football."

There are 18 bowl games accredited by the NCAA, six of which are played on New Year's Day — Citrus, Cotton, Sugar, Rose, Orange and Fiesta. This year's Fiesta Bowl was moved to Jan. 2.

Said Paterno: "I'd like to see us work out a system that doesn't harm the bowls — in fact, enhances the bowls — and still lets the kids decide it on the field."

If a plan were to reach the NCAA membership for a vote, one bowl representative was willing to predict the outcome.

"I think the membership would do the sensible thing and vote it down," Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl, said.

Brawl Participants Await Announcement

NEW YORK (AP) — Atlantic 10 Conference Commissioner Ron Bertovich says he expects to have an announcement "by the end of the week" about whether any official action will be taken against eighth-ranked Temple and Rhode Island in the wake of a bench-clearing brawl during a basketball game Saturday night.

A conference spokesman said Tuesday the Atlantic 10 has secured videotapes of the melee and said the matter is under investigation by the league office.

Bertovich, who is attending the NCAA Convention in San Diego has the tape and is heading the investigation, according to Atlantic 10 assistant commissioner John Wooding.

"I don't want to sit on this," said Bertovich by phone from San Diego. "But, right now, I still have to speak with some of the players involved. I'll do my best to cover all bases. I've spoken to both athletic directors, both coaches, and our supervisor of officials, Lou Bonder, who has a report from the three game officials."

Bertovich said any forthcoming decision would be his alone, but added that before he made any decision he would seek the advice of the conference athletic directors' executive committee, which was scheduled to meet today in San Diego.

The fight at Kingston, R.I., erupted with 3:31 left in the game and Temple leading 74-63. Temple's Ramon Rivas and Rhode Island's Ronzi Colson, who began the fight, were ejected when order was restored following a five-minute free-for-all.

Temple eventually won the game 81-68.

The game referees were Art McDonald, John Fontana and Dave Pollock, according to Bertovich.

Bertovich said both coaches made statements following the game that were also under investigation.

Rhode Island's Tom Penders, who called the affair "survival of the fittest," and Temple's John Chaney, who said his players were "mugged," both blasted the officiating.

Bertovich said any action taken in regard to the coaches would be an internal matter "between the conference and the universities involved."

Fogler's Shockers Top Kansas

WICHITA, Kan. (AP) — Two decades ago, Eddie Fogler was a guard on Larry Brown's freshman basketball team at North Carolina. On Tuesday night, Fogler got the biggest victory in his first year as head coach at Wichita State as the Shockers slowed the tempo and defeated Brown's 19th-ranked Kansas Jayhawks 54-49.

Fogler was an assistant to North Carolina Coach Dean Smith for 13 years before coming to Wichita State. His Shockers employed a patient, deliberate attack and threw a tight zone that smothered Danny Manning, Kansas' outstanding forward, for their fourth straight victory. Wichita State, 9-4, has defeated both Kansas State and Kansas this season, and has a rematch with the Wildcats Monday. Tuesday's victory, before 10,666 screaming fans at Henry Levitt Arena, was the Shockers' second in nine meetings with the Jayhawks. The Jayhawks slumped to 7-4 with their third loss in four games and equaled their loss total for all of last season. "I didn't worry about the point total, that didn't bother me at all," Brown said. "What bothered me is we didn't pick up the loose balls and put them back in." To beat Kansas, Wichita State had "to control the tempo of the game," Fogler said. "Obviously, by the final score, we were able to keep the game from being an up-and-down, running-type ball game which I thought would favor Kansas."

Big East teams followed impressive victories last weekend differently. Villanova followed its victory over previously unbeaten St. John's with another, while Seton Hall floundered after handing Georgetown its first loss of the season. Harold Jensen, who finished with 17 points, scored eight in a 14-1 spurt late in the second half to lift Villanova, 10-3, over Boston College 66-58.

Some teams wanted to stay on the court a little longer. Southwest Missouri State needed an extra five minutes to beat Brigham Young 62-61. Winston Garland, who had tied the game at the buzzer with a 3-point field goal, banked in a 12-foot shot with three seconds left in overtime to give the Bears the victory. Garland finished with 25 points as Southwest Missouri State improved to 10-4 and ended Brigham Young's eight-game winning streak. The Cougars are 10-5. Two games went 15 minutes longer than planned.

Manning entered the game with a 22.5-point average, but was limited to a season-low 12 points as Gus Santos, Sasha Radunovich and Henry Carr took turns defending him. Manning seldom touched the ball in the second half and was held scoreless over the final 11:50. "We played much more zone than we have played all year," Fogler said. "They have been struggling against zones, that's no secret. We were able to pack in the zone and keep the ball out of Danny Manning's hands around the foul line area and in the keyhole."

The Shockers outrebounded the Jayhawks 17-10 in the first half and led 20-15 at halftime. The rebound total included seven offensive boards that allowed Wichita State to retain possession and run more time off the clock. Kansas did make a run in the second half, increasing the tempo briefly and taking a 25-24 lead with 15:28 to play on a basket by Manning underneath. But guard Joe Griffin, who made just 1-of-6 field goals, connected on a three-pointer to give the Shockers the lead for good at 27-25. "Every time they made a run at us, somebody made a big play," said Fogler, whose team won the first meeting in Wichita between the two schools since 1955.

Later in the game, Dwight Praylow made most of the big plays. Praylow — who beat Kansas State with a last-second layup earlier this season — scored seven points in the final 2:02. He finished with a game-high 13 points, tying a career high. Praylow's most important bucket came after a Keith Harris steal and layup cut the Shockers' lead to 44-41 with 2:34 to play. Praylow hit a short jumper to increase the lead to 46-41 lead with 2:02 to play.

Another basket by Harris and a turnover by Griffin gave Kansas a final chance to tie the game. But Kevin Pritchard's three-point shot bounced out. The Shockers, who outscored Kansas 18-2 from the free-throw line, then converted 6-of-8 free throws — three each by Praylow and Carr — for a 52-43 lead with 22 seconds left. Meanwhile, Brown was left to contemplate his team's poor play. "I don't think any team would be easy for us. I don't know what the answer is," Brown said.

"We decided we weren't going to let their best people beat us," Connecticut Coach Jim Calhoun said of Major, who was shooting 54 percent from the field before the game. "We double-teamed Major every time he touched the ball." Seton Hall, which beat Georgetown 74-53 on the road Saturday, fell to 9-2 overall and 1-2 in the conference. In a Sun Belt meeting, Ronnie Murphy scored 25 points, including 5-of-7 from 3-point range, to lead Jacksonville to an 88-81 victory over South Alabama. Danny Pearson added 21 for the Dolphins, who improved to 6-5 after their conference opener. South Alabama, which was led by Jeff Hodge with 25 points, including 6-of-8 from 3-point range, fell to 6-7 and 0-2.

House Ready To Form Investigative Panel

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, following the Senate's lead, is ready to charter an Iran-Contra probe amid partisan bickering over the release of a secret Senate report said to show President Reagan knew nothing of the diversion of arms sale profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

The Senate voted 88-4 on Tuesday to set up an 11-member investigating committee, giving it a seven-month mandate to complete its work. Public hearings are expected to open in mid-February into allegations that profits from secret sales of U.S. arms to Iran were used to aid the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The House is set to create its own 15-member panel.

It was clear Republicans were concerned about the potential impact of the investigations on the 1988 presidential elections. And Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., won a compromise agreement requiring the new committee to wrap up its work no later than Aug. 1, three months earlier than originally proposed.

"It does not serve the national interest to belabor a point," said Sen. John C. Danforth, R-Mo. "It does not serve the national interest to keep an issue alive month after month after month after month."

Dole and his GOP colleagues pressed for public release of the 133-page report by the Senate Intelligence Committee which, according to Sen. David Durenberger, R-Minn., the panel's former chairman, makes clear Reagan did not know of the diversion of the Iran arms sale profits.

The panel voted 7-6 on Monday not to release the report after Democrats said the document was flawed by important gaps in testimony.

Dole said that since the report has been officially unclassified, he would have no objection if someone took a copy to the Senate floor and read it into the Congressional Record. But no one did that.

Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, D-W.Va., said releasing it now, before all the facts and testimony are in, would be highly mischievous and misleading.

"I personally have no evidence the president violated the law," Byrd said. "But that doesn't mean that I now know everything that is knowable."

Beyond that, Byrd said he had discovered "at least one glaring example" in which administration officials who had scrutinized the report to remove intelligence and national security secrets had removed "material that was not classified."

"Why all the hurry? Everything is going to be revealed. ... Let's not get in too big a rush here," Byrd said.

Durenberger told reporters the deleted material, about four pages, was not particularly embarrassing to the White House, but was removed because it came from staff investigators rather than direct testimony.

He predicted that public pressure will compel the Senate's majority Democrats to make the report public by the end of the month.

And he said that when it is ready for public review it will portray "a scam that took advantage of a well-intentioned president."

While the report likely will embarrass Reagan by showing "that all of these things were going on right under his nose," it will not by itself implicate him in wrongdoing, Durenberger said.

"It will tell the president that he was guilty of some bad judgments, guilty of dealing with the wrong kinds of characters and that he should have kept a tighter watch," he said.

And he said the report leaves key questions unanswered.

"Unless Ollie North testifies, they'll never get the answer to 'Did Ronald Reagan know?'" said Durenberger, referring to Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, who was fired from his National Security Council position following disclosure of his links to the diversion of the arms profits.

Durenberger also said the Intelligence Committee concluded that $8.5 million in proceeds from the Iranian arms sale was deposited in a Swiss bank account for the use of the Contra rebels.

But he said that what happened to the money then is a mystery because of delays in gaining access to the secret Swiss bank records.

Also unanswered by the report is the question of what became of $10 million that U.S. officials sought from the Sultan of Brunei to aid the rebels, Durenberger said.

Voting against establishing the investigating committee were Sens. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C.; Jesse Helms, R-N.C.; Chic Hecht, R-Nev.; and Gordon Humphrey, R-N.H.

Controllers Want Union Status

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Air traffic controllers, who have been without a union since President Reagan fired 11,400 of them in 1981 for striking illegally, are petitioning the government to recognize a new union as their collective bargaining agent.

Officials with the Federal Labor Relations Authority (FLRA) said Tuesday a representation election could be held within three or four months, depending on how hard the the Federal Aviation Administration challenges the effort to re-establish a union for its current 12,500 controllers.

The National Traffic Controllers Association, which was formed in September with the support of several AFL-CIO unions, filed a petition for an election and 5,800 union authorization cards late Monday with the labor authority.

"We certainly are going to remain neutral and allow the normal process of deciding such issues to take place," FAA spokesman Stephen Hayes said Tuesday. "We're just going to have to wait to hear from the FLRA. Once they give us their findings, we'll go from there."

Including assistants, a new position created since the strike, the FAA now has a total air traffic control force of about 14,800, Hayes said, and plans to have 15,000 by October. Before the 1981 strike, there were 16,000 controllers, including more than 4,000 who did not participate in the walkout.

The new union is affiliated with both the 22,000-member Marine Engineers Beneficial Association and the AFL-CIO. Its organizing chief, John Thorton, said Tuesday an additional 150 FAA controllers had signed union cards that were still being processed.

Under federal labor law, 30 percent of the controllers would have to sign those union cards for the Labor Relations Authority to order an election.

"I would hope within the next three weeks or so to determine if there is a sufficient support of interest" to order an election that could be held within three or four months, said Bruce Rosenstein, acting regional director for the FLRA.

Thorton, one of the striking controllers fired in 1981, said the effort to organize new controllers has been going on for about three years with help from several AFL-CIO unions, including the Air Line Pilots Association and the American Federation of Government Employees.

At its founding meeting in Chicago last September, about 60 controllers who chartered the new union included a no-strike clause in its constitution.

Reagan fired and has refused to rehire 11,400 controllers who, as members of the now-defunct Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, walked off their jobs in August 1981 over wages and working conditions despite prohibitions against strikes by federal workers.

1 Dead, 100 Flee After Plant Blast

BATH, Pa. (AP) — Explosions ripped through a chemical plant early today, killing one person, seriously injuring another and releasing deadly cyanide gas that forced the evacuation of about 100 people, authorities said.

The explosions at the Savage Industries Inc. plant occurred just before 1 a.m. when five or six employees were inside, authorities said. The explosions started a fire that was controlled within one hour, authorities said.

One man was killed and another was in intensive care at St. Luke's Hospital in Fountain Hill with burns on his face and hands.

At least 20 other people, most of them firefighters, were treated at hospitals for minor injuries and smoke inhalation, hospital officials said.

The plant uses vinyl cyanide, or acrylonitrile, to manufacture polymers used in paint, and the chemical can give off cyanide gas, said Paul Ciotta, spokesman for the state Department of Environmental Resources.

About 100 people, most of them residents of a mobile home park downwind from the plant, were evacuated to an elementary school. The plant is in an industrial park in East Allen Township in eastern Pennsylvania.

"There is definitely cyanide in the area," said Township Fire Chief Ron Check. "How much and to what extent we don't know."

Dr. John Patterson, who treated three workers and eight firefighters at St. Luke's, said he saw "absolutely no sign of cyanide poisoning."

Ciotta said it was not known what effect the release of gas had on the area, but added the evacuation was a necessary precaution because "there is a very real environmental threat."

The state environmental department sent a crew at the scene, Ciotta said, and the federal Environmental Protection Agency dispatched investigators. Du Pont, which makes the vinyl cyanide, was flying in experts from Texas to offer assistance, he said.

The plant's manufacturing process also uses sulfuric acid and isopropyl alcohol, Ciotta said, but the biggest threat is from the vinyl cyanide.

Reactor Gets Safety Work

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — The only U.S. nuclear reactor with a design like the Soviet plant in Chernobyl is being shut down for extensive safety improvements, and critics said they doubted it would be reopened in six months as planned.

Technicians at the Hanford nuclear reservation were to insert control rods into N Reactor's core this morning, and cooling was expected to be completed eight hours later, said Steve Irish, a spokesman for UNC Nuclear Industries, which operates the plant for the U.S. Department of Energy.

Oponents of the 23-year-old reactor, which produces plutonium for nuclear weapons and steam for generating electricity, say the modifications do not go far enough to address the most crucial safety issues.

Like Chernobyl, which was devastated by fire in April, the N Reactor does not have a concrete and steel containment dome to keep radioactive steam from spreading into the atmosphere during an accident.

COLORFUL AND DELICIOUS — Brighten up the dinner hour for family members and guests with Clemi Game Hens and Artichoke Salad, a duo that suits any special occasion.

Special Dishes Can Add Visual Flavor To Meals

Almost by definition, splendid foods can excite the eye and elevate the spirit as easily as they can revive the appetite.

A table set with Spanish Game Hens and the elegant Clemi Artichoke Sunflower presents a charming and exquisite duo that suits any special occasion. Both dishes owe their finesse to the delicate flavor of the Spanish Clemi Clementine. Unlike most other little easy-peel varieties, the Clementine is completely free of seeds — a culinary must for clever cooks!

Filled with a tantalizing melange of color and texture and glazed to a coppery sheen, the hens light up the table when paired with the Clemi Artichoke Sunflower a true star in its own right.

The Clementine adds its special flavor to a vegetable salad that positively glows with color. As a definite plus for the busy cook, Vegetables Vinaigrette tastes even better when it's made hours ahead.

Dazzle family and guests with your own Clementine Pate. Served with a glass of sherry and warm crusty French bread, it's a delightful prelude to any festive get-together.

With its rich, sweet juice and delicate segments, the Clemi Clementine is one of those unique ingredients that can create very special sensory delights.

Winter A Good Time To Try 'Other' Vegetables

By MARIE BIANCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

No need to give up vegetables during the frosty days of winter.

True, there are no vine-ripened tomatoes or local corn around, but vegetable stands abound with creamy white cauliflower, fragrant fennel, sweet parsnips and crisp brussels sprouts to use in these recipes.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS WITH PECANS, GOLDEN RAISINS AND APRICOTS

- 1 (10-ounce) box fresh brussels sprouts
- 2 tablespoons butter, cut in small pieces
- 1/4 cup chopped pecans
- 1/4 cup golden raisins
- 1/4 cup chopped dried apricots
- 1/2 teaspoon fresh grated orange rind
- pinch of salt

1. Trim stem ends of brussels sprouts and cut each with a shallow X. Steam over 1 inch of boiling water until tender, about 15 minutes.

2. Place brussels sprouts and butter in a bowl and toss gently. Add pecans, raisins, apricots, orange rind and salt, and toss again. Makes 4 to 6 servings.

SPINACH PASTA WITH CAULIFLOWER, SHRIMP AND RED PEPPER

- 6 Chinese black mushrooms
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons fresh minced ginger
- 8 ounces shrimp, peeled, deveined
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 2 cups cauliflower flowerets
- 1 red pepper, cut in 1/2-inch dice
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 12 ounces spinach fettuccine
- 2 tablespoons sesame oil
- 1 cup chopped scallions

1. Soak mushrooms in warm water for 30 minutes. Drain. Remove stems and discard. Slice each cap into strips.

2. Heat 2 tablespoons olive oil and saute garlic and ginger 2 to 3 minutes. Add shrimp and cook until opaque. Remove shrimp and set aside.

3. Heat 2 tablespoons olive oil and stir-fry cauliflower 3 minutes, stirring constantly. Add red pepper and black mushrooms and stir-fry until cauliflower is crisp-tender, about 2 additional minutes. Stir in cooked shrimp; heat through. Combine the chicken broth and cornstarch and add to skillet, stirring constantly until thickened.

4. Meanwhile cook pasta in lightly salted boiling water until it is al dente. Drain and toss with sesame oil. Spoon sauce in center of pasta on serving dish. Top with scallions. Makes 4 servings.

PUREED PARSNIPS

- 1 pound parsnips, peeled, sliced
- 1 carrot, peeled, sliced
- 1 Granny Smith apple, peeled, core, chopped
- 1 large russet potato, peeled, diced
- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1/2 teaspoon allspice
- 2 tablespoons butter, in small pieces
- salt and pepper

1. Place parsnips, carrot, apple and potato in a saucepan, add chicken broth, cover and steam, stirring once or twice until tender, about 15 minutes. Drain.

2. Puree vegetables in a food mill, electric mixer or food processor. Add allspice, butter, salt and pepper and beat until smooth. Makes 6 servings.

PORTUGUESE KALE SOUP WITH CHICK-PEAS

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, chopped

- 4 medium potatoes, peeled, diced
- 6 cups chicken broth
- 1 pound kale, trimmed
- 1 pound chorizo sausage or pepperoni, sliced

1 cup cooked chick-peas salt and pepper to taste Tabasco sauce to taste

mately half the potatoes and a cup of liquid and puree in a food processor or food mill. Return pureed potatoes to stockpot.

2. Wash kale and remove stems and thick leaf veins. Layer several kale leaves, roll them up tightly and slice thin. Add to stockpot and cook 10 minutes. Add sausage and chick-peas, salt and pepper. Cook until kale is tender. Ladle soup into bowls, add Tabasco. Makes 6 servings.

Processor Kneads Bread Easy Way

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens
Food Editor

Here's a butter-rich rendition of food processor bread. Mix the dough with on-off turns: Turn the processor on, then immediately turn it off. You'll have evenly mixed dough without overmixing. A brief processing after the dough has risen puts in the pockets of butter that make each slice taste extra rich. Serve thick slices of the bread with a sweet spread for breakfast or with hot soup or a salad lunch.

COBBLESTONE BREAD

- 1 package active dry yeast
- 1 cup warm water (110 degrees to 115 degrees)
- 3 to 3 1/4 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 tablespoons sugar
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons cooking oil
- 1/2 cup butter or margarine, softened
- 1 slightly beaten egg

New Chicken Barbecue Champ A Veteran Of 4-H Competitions

Kara Allen of Southaven, Miss., a 15-year-old who has been barbecuing chicken since she was nine, is the new National 4-H Chicken Barbecue Champion.

She won the title over other state winners at the Chicken Barbecue Contest sponsored by the National Broiler Council during the annual 4-H Poultry and Egg Conference held recently in Louisville, Ky.

Persistence paid off for the Southaven High School sophomore, who entered her local 4-H chicken barbecue contest for the past six years before becoming state and then national champion. She has won over $700 in prizes barbecuing chicken.

Runner-up in the National Chicken Barbecue Contest was Ozzie Davis of Sumter, S.C.; Michele Nixon of Powhatan, Va., placed third, followed by Laurie Robbins of Garfield, Ark., Mike Wilmoth of Thurmond, N.C., and Jeff Duff of Columbia, La.

KARA'S CHICKEN BARBECUE

- 6 broiler-fryer chicken halves

- 3 teaspoons salt
- 1 cup cider vinegar
- 1 stick butter or margarine
- 1/2 cup corn oil
- 2 tablespoons bottled hot pepper sauce
- 1 1/2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder

Sprinkle salt evenly over chicken halves. In small saucepan, place vinegar, butter, corn oil, hot pepper sauce, Worcestershire sauce and garlic powder. Heat, stirring to mix well. Keep sauce warm and well stirred but DO NOT BOIL. Place chicken on prepared grill, skin side up. Turn and baste with sauce every five minutes during cooking, being careful not to break the skin so the juices are kept in. To test for doneness, grasp drumstick and twist gently. Bone will disjoin between thigh and drumstick when meat is done (about 2 hours). It should be golden brown color.

Barbecuing tips from the champ include:

- The fire should not be too hot.
- Take your time; slow, even cooking is most important. (It takes about two hours for the chicken to cook but it is well worth the time and effort.)
- Baste and turn often.
- A string barbecue mop is good for applying sauce.
- When chicken is bone side up, apply sauce liberally. Bone side will hold the sauce and it will penetrate the chicken better.
- Be careful not to burn or blister the chicken.
- The halves freeze wonderfully for a later meal.

Stir-Fry Cooking Success Boils Down To 'The Order'

By KAREN GILLINGHAM
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

What I do not like about stir-fry cooking is the order. The mixing of sauces, mincing of aromatics, precise slicing of main ingredients (should I line them up in alphabetical order?): It is hard to get from one step to the next without wishing something would start taking shape.

What I do like about stir-fry dishes is the way they taste, of course. They look good too; cleanly cut pieces of food, somehow in a jumble of artistic balance. And the way the whole dish does suddenly take shape when all the components are readied wok-side.

I have not figured out a way to disorganize stir-frying without ruining it. So the chicken dish here with orange and Chinese pea pods does require orderly preparation. But it is worth it.

The chicken can be cut up and placed in the egg-white mixture a day ahead. And the noodles for the nests can be tossed in oil ahead of time and saved until time to crisp them in the oven (easier than pan-frying but no less orderly).

Fewer Meals Only Good News In Airline Food

By MARGARET ENGEL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Airline food has been called one of America's true oxymora — a contradiction in terms.

If you're among those who detest airborne mystery-meat specials, you can rejoice. The news is that air travelers can expect fewer meals and less food in coming months as fare wars continue to shrink airline food budgets.

But if you count on airlines to satisfy your meal-time hunger pangs, you're going to be out of luck.

Of some small comfort is the news that those requesting special meals — those low-calorie fruit plates, kosher dinners and low-sodium meals — needn't worry. These meals are so popular and such an essential service that airlines are expanding their availability.

But in general, the vanishing food tray is the new reality of airline travel, as industry analysts conclude once again that ticket prices and schedules, not food, drive sales.

The days of restaurant-style dining in the sky are as dead as the days when passengers wore corsages and their Sunday best to travel, according to Airline Executive, a magazine catering to airline managers.

... the golden age of fine airline dining, like the fabulous meals once served to patrons on the great long-distance passenger trains, is not likely to return," the magazine found.

As a result, galleys and ovens are being removed from many planes to make way for profit-making seats, and to lower airplane weights. Hot meals are vanishing entirely as flight caterers switch to cold meals, which can be served by fewer cabin attendants and can sit through long delays caused by air-traffic congestion.

U.S. airline food-service managers also are studying a practice on some European flights where passengers serve themselves by grabbing a plastic lunch-sack from the kitchen as they enter the plane. (The FAA forbids passengers from having food at their seats before takeoff and during landings, so U.S. airlines can only distribute sack lunches in flight.)

What were once meals are now snacks, and many hungry travelers are finding to their dismay that mealtimes are strictly enforced — with no between-meal snacks.

United, for example, which used to serve a meal on every flight more than an hour long, now offers meals only on 90-minute and longer flights. Shorter flights mean beverages only.

United, whose 1985 food budget of $171 million was exceeded among the major carriers only by American's $210-million grocery bill, says the pressure of economy airlines is causing the airline to drop meals from many flights.

Some airlines, notably the now-discount Braniff, openly brag about their cheaper, less substantial meals.

Braniff began turning its no-frills snacks into a selling point with a radio ad campaign that began this fall. The ads feature folksy character actor Wilford Brimley. He notes that some airlines charge $200 more to fly to the same destinations as Braniff, with the only real difference being the meal service.

"Stop and remember the last airplane meal you had," challenges Brimley. "You ever tasted one worth $200?"

But true to airline competitiveness, they now are fighting over who serves the best cold meals, or as TransStar — an airline that serves the Southwest — describes them, "the fresh approach to dining."

Jeffrey Snodgrass, manager of catering and distribution for Braniff, said the airline tries to distinguish itself from the competition by offering a cold snack on every flight regardless of time of day.

The push to cold meals dovetails nicely with longtime passenger complaints about the standard hot entrees covered with gloopy cream sauces and their requests for lighter, fresher meals. Airlines now can promote health while saving money at the same time.

In recent months, Braniff has been eliminating some starchy and snack-food items, like pretzels, and replacing them with fruits, whole-grain breads and salads.

A current favorite of passengers is a pita sandwich filled with turkey breast, hard salami, Swiss cheese, alfalfa sprouts and a mustard-butter spread. It is served with cheese and crackers, pasta salad and cookies.

In the next three weeks, passengers flying Eastern Airlines from major cities will begin getting recipes for their meals slipped under their plates in an effort to inform them about the healthy food they're eating, according to in-flight services director Wolfgang Diehl.

"They'll see these are not plastic foods," Diehl said. "It's fresh food, even though it may be fresh frozen." With recipes for the eight Eastern soups and stews that will be featured initially, "people can take the recipe card home and make them at home," he said.

Passenger interest in the quality of food has prompted Eastern to add Hindu and low-carbohydrate meals to its family of special meals, Diehl added.

Other airlines have scrapped the customary ham-and-cheese omelet or French toast for breakfast in favor of bagels with cream cheese or croissant and orange juice.

Many breakfasts unfortunately are a step down from this menu and consist of the traditional iced sweet roll, which is usually dry and tasteless, with coffee or juice.

As a rule, lunches no longer include hot entrees, but usually are sandwiches, often ones with bleached-flour rolls and high-sodium, processed meat and cheese slices. A few airlines, such as America West Airlines, based in Phoenix, offer cold fried chicken instead of sandwiches.

Dinner often duplicates lunch, with the addition of a few extras, such as packaged cheese and crackers, a brownie or fresh fruit.

In this new era of forced lean cuisine, special meals may be the best way to eat decently in the air. And passengers are catching on to their existence. From a random survey only a few years ago, special meals now constitute 2 to 5 percent of the 150 million meals served to airline passengers each year.

For example: Eastern now offers 36 special meals that passengers can order a day in advance of their flight, from vegetarian to diabetic to infants' meals. The most frequent request is for kosher meals.

Passengers on American can request its American Traveler meals, special entrees that are offered as bonuses to members of its frequent-flyer program but are available to anyone who asks.

Although a few airlines have begun charging extra for special meals, most honor the requests for free. In many instances, alternate meals contain food that's fresher and more varied than the usual fare.

Check with your carrier at least two days before your flight if possible about arranging a special meal. Although some meal requests can be accommodated as late as six hours before boarding time, most airlines require more notice.

But for the flights that offer no food at all, the burden is on the traveler to pay for an airport meal before the flight or carry on comestibles.

Whatever you prefer, it's now an essential question to ask when booking an airline seat: What kind of food, if any, will be served on the flight?

CANCELLATION PENALTIES: Changing your mind can cost you money.

Most passengers know that on low, promotional air fares, most major airline carriers now impose 25 to 50 percent penalties for changes or cancellations.

What is not often known, however, is that a different penalty may apply to each leg of your flight. In the event that changes become unavoidable, it is useful to know which part of your trip will be most expensive to switch.

For example: On a recently booked flight from Washington National to Des Moines and returning to Washington from Kansas City, the departure carried a 50 percent penalty, but the return flight only a 25 percent penalty.

In addition to financial penalties for ticket changes, most airlines will not refund the purchase price if the tickets were not used.

Soften yeast in warm water; set aside. Place steel blade in work bowl of food processor; add 2 cups of the flour, the sugar and salt. Add half the yeast mixture; process with 4 on-off turns. Add remaining yeast mixture and the oil; process with 4 on-off turns. Add 1 cup of the remaining flour; process with 4 on-off turns. Turn machine on again and process about 15 second or until ball of dough forms. Do not process more than 60 seconds. (If dough seems sticky to the touch, add a little of the remaining flour; process with 1 or 2 on-off turns.)

Place ball of dough in lightly greased bowl; turn once to grease surface. Cover; let rise until double (45 to 60 minutes). Punch down. Place dough in food processor bowl again. Add softened butter and egg. Process with 3 or 4 on-off turns. Mixture will not be completely blended and will look lumpy. Do not overmix. Turn into a greased 9 by 5 by 3-inch baking pan. Cover and let rise until nearly double (about 30 minutes). Bake in a 400-degree oven for 30 to 35 minutes or until done. Remove from pan; cool on wire rack. Makes 1 loaf, 16 slices.

Budget Stew Goes Fancy

Sure, stew is a hearty, low-cost main dish for family meals. But there's another side to this humble meat and vegetable dish. When company comes, upgrade your stew with a combination of veal, fresh mushrooms and pearl onions. The rich flavor comes from the bouquet garni, a fragrant herb mixture wrapped in cheesecloth. The bouquet is easy to remove after cooking so there are no flecks of herbs darkening the elegant cream sauce.

Tie parsley, bay leaf and thyme in cheesecloth bag; add to mixture. Cover and simmer about 30 minutes or until meat is tender, stirring occasionally.

Remove and discard cheesecloth bag, carrot and celery. Stir in lemon juice. Stir together whipping cream and egg yolks. Stir about 1 cup of the hot mixture into egg yolk mixture; return to hot mixture in Dutch oven, stirring constantly. Heat and stir until slightly thickened and bubbly. Serve over hot pasta with parsley. Makes 6 servings.

Fewer New Items Unveiled At Housewares Show

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

CHICAGO — And so it was in the Windy City last fall, that the love triangle with the vendor, the product and the buyer pulsed on. During the event about 10,000 housewares buyers and 2,000 exhibitors established old and new relationships with major vendors during the 85th International Housewares Exposition.

Strategically located in three buildings at the huge McCormick Place exhibition complex, the 794,000 square feet of product displays resulted in sore feet for buyers, retailers, manufacturers and media representatives.

The show promised buyers a convenient change from past shows, that of color coding five household product categories. However, except for furniture buyers and those with well-defined categories, many found the new color categorization of products of little help because enforcements were not as tight. Table-top goods and small electric tools, for instance, were seen side by side, and mixed displays were often spread throughout the three buildings.

Many buyers agreed that the show did not roll out as many new products as the Chicago spring show. Prominent in kitchen housewares were old stars like stainless steel cookware, which gleamed in almost every aisle with highly polished surfaces. In hiding were the aluminum castings popular in yesteryears, which were embedded in bottoms of stainless steel cookware for efficient quick heating qualities.

Currently crowding the world of small electric tools were coffee makers, compact boiling water kettles and espresso makers. Fighting for the top were toasters, compact and miniature food processors and ice cream makers. Many were simply improved versions of hot sellers, and, as expected, there was an increased number of Johnny-come-latelys. New deep-fryers and portable smokeless electric indoor barbecues were also observed.

In non-electrics, there was a range of new ice cream makers following the successful steps of the toylike Donvier ice cream maker. In line with this, ice cream cone makers were also reintroduced. Microwave and storage dishes still abound, and their booths continued to be busy. There was also a lot of interest in "kidstuffs," which included dinnerware sets, lunch boxes, placemats and play accessories.

Eye-catching were plastic innovations in a rainbow of bright and bold colors. According to designer Edgar Hawkins, who designed many of Towle's serving accessories: "Brights are more successful across the broader cut of population. The trouble with pastels is that they were washed out; hard goods need to have a little more edge to be seen."

In contrast to muted pastels, Hawkins' approach was pastels with a punch, as evidenced in bright but soft pink, yellow and lavender hues in the company's ice buckets, plastic glasses and trays.

The rising stars at the show, which indicated a market for health fitness products, were pressure cookers with new safety features, steamers and steam ovens for fat-free cooking as well as electronic bath and dietary kitchen scales for the weight conscious.

Needless to say, small kitchen gadgets, cutlery and tools abounded, but housewares buyers felt there was very little new, and if new, they were not exciting enough to rave about.

From the consumer end, some of these show introductions and new products may prove to be real show-offs or functional pieces in one's home.

Here is a partial listing of new products:

Emulating the Seb, one of the first miniature food processors, were entries from Cuisinart, Hamilton Beach and Moulinex, which are highly efficient in many little ways. Cuisinart's MiniMate Chopper-Grinder operates at high or low speed. It has a color-coded reversible blade with a blunt side and a sharp side. The high speed and the blunt side may be used for chopping hard foods, whereas low speed and the sharp side are for soft foods or foods with high water content.

Hamilton Beach calls its entry Chop Chop Micro Mini Food Processor. Similar in design to the Moulinex (a subsidiary of Hamilton Beach) Mini Food Processor, the Chop Chop includes a plastic disc for mixing dips, mayonnaise and sauces in seconds. Finger pressure on the top lever triggers the operation.

One attention-getter at the show was an impressive demonstration of the Silver Solution from Sheffield Plate Polish Co. in Evanston, Ill. Said to be the first and only product of its kind, the Silver Solution adds pure silver to silver plate as well as other base metals like copper, brass, bronze and nickel. A wipe-on liquid, it also plates and replates solder marks on sterling silver holloware. Non-toxic, the solution will not chip, flake or peel and is dishwasher-proof. It is great for restoring collectibles, jewelry, heirlooms or serving dishes, creating a new look with tarnished brass or bronze objects as well as retarding rust in mail boxes, door handles, wind chimes, etc.

In trying to gain back consumer confidence on safety, new pressure cookers have exhibited safety valves, lower noise levels and quick steam-pressure releases before opening the lid. Cuisinart, Hawkins Futura from India, Tefal, Kuhn Rikon's Duramatic and Germany's WMF and Fissler pressure cookers all score points for these features.

Nordic Ware opted for a microwave pressure cooker with its new Tender Cooker. The microwave pressure cooker, which has a 2 1/2-quart capacity, reduces microwave cooking times by 25 percent to 35 percent. Another big advantage is the moist cooking results.

Little Oskar from Sunbeam will not be beaten by his followers (Shortcut, Emmie, Mini Max, Herbie, Toastmaster, West Bend and a few others) in the compact food processor category. Big Oskar was introduced with its slightly larger bowl capacity and a variable speed control for slicing and powerful grinding.

The appliance was introduced in mid-1985. Nikkal Industries sold its one millionth non-electric Donvier ice cream maker in August. The company has come forth with newer ice cream makers in different sizes and exterior designs, including an upscale compact electric ice cream machine called Viva. At the show a number of "me-too's" with similar freezable refrigerant capsules have joined Donvier's growing market field.

Only recently available in the United States but backed by a 100-year-long reputation for quality appliances in Germany, Rowenta introduced several interesting new products at the show. Arriving in spring, the modernistic-looking Rowenta Espresso Maker resembled the R2D2 robot of "Star Wars" fame. Milk foaming for cappuccino was pretty impressive for such a small unit, which has a one- to two-cup capacity. Other Rowenta introductions were the non-stick waffle maker and a new egg cooker for cooking one to seven eggs or three poached eggs.

Children's items have gotten even more popular this year. There was an influx of colorful table service sets, aprons, lunch kits and glassware in fun animal and kiddy designs from Anacapa, Himark and Classy Collections. To spark interest in children's parties, Robeson Industries from Mineola, N.Y., came up with a professional-style cotton candy maker called Party Time.

Tefal has successfully infiltrated American homes with its line of non-stick cooking utensils manufactured in France. Debuting at the show were Tefal super deep-fryer featuring a hermetically sealed lid, a charcoal filter for odor absorption, a timer, a viewing window and a frying basket that can be lowered or raised from the outside without opening the cover.

Other offerings from Tefal included: a cordless kettle, an electronic bathroom scale that talks, an electronic kitchen scale, a Cook 'N' Stir electric sauce maker and Flavourfast oven, which cooks almost as fast as the microwave oven but also steams, bakes, roasts and broils.

Stir-Fry

1 egg white
 3 (4 to a pound) boneless, skinless chicken breast, cut in 3/4-inch cubes
 Juice and minced peel of 1 small orange
 1/2 cup chicken broth
 2 tablespoons soy sauce 1 cup oil
 3 cloves garlic, peeled and minced
 1 jalapeno chili, seeded and minced
 1 teaspoon minced ginger
 1/4 cup chopped water chestnuts
 16 Chinese pea pods, cut in halves diagonally

Oven-Fried Noodle Nests, or hot cooked rice

In bowl, beat 1 tablespoon Sherry, 1 tablespoon cornstarch and egg white until light and frothy. Add chicken and mix to coat pieces thoroughly. Set aside.

In measuring cup or small bowl, combine remaining Sherry and cornstarch. Stir in orange juice, chicken broth and soy sauce. Set aside.

Heat wok over medium heat. Add oil and heat 30 seconds. Add half of chicken and cook, stirring to break apart pieces. Cook, stirring frequently just until chicken turns opaque, about 2 minutes. Remove from pan with slotted spoon and set aside. Repeat with remaining chicken.

Discard all but 2 tablespoons oil. Add garlic, jalapeno, ginger and orange peel to pan. Cook about 10 seconds. Return chicken to wok along with water chestnuts and peas and stir-fry 1 minute. Stir orange juice mixture and add to pan. Bring to boil and cook, stirring until sauce thickens and turns clear. Serve immediately over Oven-Fried Noodle Nests or rice. Makes 4 servings.

Oven-Fried Noodle Nests
 8 ounces Chinese egg noodles, cooked and drained
 1 tablespoon oil
 1/4 teaspoon salt

Allow noodles to drain thoroughly or pat with paper towels to absorb excess moisture. Toss with oil and salt. Coil noodles into 4 nest shapes on baking sheet. Bake at 375 degrees 15 minutes. Turn and bake 10 to 15 minutes longer or until lightly browned and crisp on outside but still soft on inside. Makes 4 servings.

Special

 Jelly For Top:
 Juice of 3 Clementines
 2 tablespoons water
 2 teaspoons gelatine Decoration:
 1 Clementine
 Mint sprigs

Mix the minced pork with remaining ingredients. Spoon into an earthenware tureen. Cover with a piece of greaseproof paper and a lid. Stand in a roasting tin with sufficient water halfway up the sides of the tureen. Cook at 325 degrees for 1 1/2 hours. Remove pate from oven and allow to cool with cover on.

Mix the Clementine juice and water together and dissolve the gelatine. When clear, spoon over the top of the cool pate. Refrigerate until well chilled. Coarsely grate the rind of one Clementine and use as decoration around the edges. Peel the Clementine, remove all pith and slice for decoration. Place mint sprigs over the Clementine slices. Serve with crusty French bread. Yield: 10 servings.

Winter

CREAMED FENNEL
 4 bulbs fennel
 2 tablespoons butter
 1/2 cup chicken broth
 1 1/2 tablespoons butter
 2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
 1 cup half and half salt and freshly ground pepper pinch of nutmeg
 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

1. Trim fennel stalks; cut into quarters, wash and dry. Heat 2 tablespoons butter in a skillet and briefly saute fennel on each side. Add broth, cover tightly and steam for 5 minutes. Remove fennel, reserving liquid.

2. In a medium saucepan melt the butter. Remove from heat and stir in the flour. Cook over low heat for 1 minute. Whisk in half and half, salt, pepper and nutmeg; cook until thick and smooth, stirring constantly. Stir in reserved fennel cooking liquid.

3. Spread 1/4 cup sauce in a shallow baking dish. Arrange fennel on top and cover with remaining sauce. Sprinkle with Parmesan cheese and bake in a 350-degree oven for 20 minutes. Makes 6 servings.
