EastCare Copter Crash In Jones County Kills 4

POLLOCKSVILLE — Searchers early today recovered the bodies of four people — two registered nurses, the pilot and a 3-month-old child — from the wreckage of Pitt County Memorial Hospital's EastCare helicopter that crashed in the Hoffman Forest near Pollocksville about 9:30 p.m. Thursday.

Hospital officials identified the crew as pilot Perry L. Reynolds, 39, of University Condominiums and flight nurses Mike McGinnis, 32, of University Medical Park Apartments and Pam Demaree, 28, of Chesterfield Court.

The baby, Xenia Lewis, was the daughter of Marine Cpl. and Mrs. David Lewis.

The Bell Long Ranger helicopter had left the U.S. Naval Hospital at Camp Lejeune at 8:59 p.m. to return the infant, who had been suffering from uncontrollable epileptic seizures, to the pediatric intensive care unit at PCMH.

But about 9:30 p.m., Miss Demaree broadcast an emergency message on a medical frequency, saying the aircraft was on fire.

Highway Patrol Sgt. J.C. Surlis of Trenton, who was in charge of the crash scene during the night, said those monitoring the helicopter's radio transmissions heard "Mayday, mayday ... we have a fire on board and are going down."

At the crash scene, it appeared that the pilot attempted a landing from the northeast, along what he may have thought was a road or cleared area among young pine trees reaching 20 feet or more into the air.

But the aircraft crashed — creating a five-foot deep crater — and burned on a windrow or "pushup" about five feet high, created from logging debris.

"Evidently they mistook it (the windrow) for a road," Anthony Berg, an N.C. Forest Service ranger stationed in Jones County, said.

"It's a bad looking site," Surlis said. "It's very evident that the pilot did everything he could to bring the helicopter down safely."

Sgt. N.H. North, a spokesman for the New River Marine Corps Air Station at Jacksonville, said the airfield's tower notified the base crash crew about 9:30 p.m. that the Cherry Point MCRS tower had reported an aircraft had disappeared from radar screens there, and a six-man crash crew from Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 461, Marine Aircraft Group 26, took off in a CH-53D "Sea Stallion."

"About 9:35 p.m. Cherry Point tower said the aircraft had crashed," North said, and about 9:40 p.m. the search and rescue team "spotted debris ... the wreckage (which) was burning," about 20 miles north of Jacksonville.

The Marine helicopter "landed on a dirt road about 50 yards from the site, (and the crew) forded a ditch" to reach the EastCare wreckage, North said. The crash crew removed the oxygen bottles from the site to prevent an explosion, put out the fire and searched the area for survivors, North said.

In addition to the rescue helicopter, a P-19 crash fire and rescue truck and a control truck were sent from New River.

North said civilian rescue workers began arriving at the site — about five miles west of the intersection of N.C. 58 and Secondary Road 1121 — about 30 minutes after the New River rescue helicopter. After civilian rescue workers and a search and rescue helicopter from Cherry Point arrived, the New River crash crew — by then numbering about 13 Marines — left the scene, he said.

Although the crash site was only about 35 yards from a forest service access road, forest rangers were forced to set a portable bridge to span a 10-foot-wide ditch before the bodies of the victims could be brought out.

The last body was taken from the wreckage about 2 a.m. and all were taken to Jacksonville.

Eakin Named To ECU Post

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors today elected Dr. Richard R. Eakin, now vice president for planning and budgeting for Bowling Green State University, as the new chancellor of East Carolina University.

UNC System President C.D. Spangler recommended Eakin, 48, to fill the post now held by ECU Chancellor John Howell who, in August 1985, announced his intention to retire no later than June 30, 1987.

"I'm honored to join the higher education community of North Carolina," Eakin said after the UNC

Board of Governors unanimously accepted his recommendation by Spangler.

Eakin said in a brief news conference that he had no "immediate agenda" for ECU, saying he wanted to take several months to become acquainted with faculty, staff and students before launching any major initiatives.

He added, however, one of his top priorities would be holding down the cost of an education at East Carolina so as many students as possible could afford to attend. Eakin also said he was a strong supporter of college athletics, but that ECU should "be vigilant to guard against excesses" in striving to build a winning program.

The election of Eakin makes him the ninth chief administrator at ECU in 80 years. East Carolina is the third largest university in the state, with an enrollment of more than 14,000.

The addition of Eakin, who will assume his new duties on March 1, is welcomed by the East Carolina community. C. Ralph Kinsey Jr., chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees, said.

"I am gratified by the action of President Spangler and the board of governors in selecting Dr. Eakin as chancellor," Kinsey said, "and I'm excited for him and his family and for the future of East Carolina under his leadership."

Eakin was one of two finalists recommended to Spangler by the ECU Board of Trustees, according to Kinsey, who also led the search committee for a new chancellor. The other finalist was Gregory M. St. L. O'Brien, provost of the University of South Florida.

Eakin's salary will be $90,000 per year, Spangler said.

Council Funds 3 Percent Cost Of Living Pay Raise

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council has approved a budget amendment to the 1986-87 budget appropriating monies to fund a 3 percent cost of living increase for city employees.

The amendment, which establishes a minimum increase of $500 annually for the employees, was unanimously approved by council members at their monthly meeting Thursday night.

"This amendment affects the general, parking and transit funds of the city, as well as our involvement with Sheppard Library and the airport since we both subsidize their operations and act as their payroll agent," Ron Kimble, finance director, said.

The council also approved a budget ordinance representing the setup of a new department within the General Fund to account for expenses associated with the purchase of the Elks Club Building for a teen center. The city has appropriated $53,869 for the project.

Kimble said the major source of funding for the budget amendments is the newly enacted half-cent local option sales tax passed by the state Legislature in the short session and by the Pitt County board effective Oct. 1, 1986.

Council members also approved a revised classification plan which incorporates the 3 percent wage adjustment into the pay scale.

In other business, the council approved a revised request by Nell S. Moseley to rezone 22.59 acres located off the western right-of-way of U.S. 264 By-Pass, south of Speight subdivision and north of Golden Road.

Approximately 12.43 acres were rezoned to medium density single-family residential and 10.16 acres were rezoned to shopping center.

The petitioner, who had originally requested that 4.63 acres be zoned single-family medium density residential, 7.8 acres be zoned single-family high density, and 10.16 acres be zoned shopping center, altered the request listening to objections from local residents at a public hearing during the meeting. All of the property was zoned for single-family low density.

A request by Margaret P. McGeorge and Joe P. Maxwell to rezone 27 acres from MD-5 to MD-3 was also approved by the council. MD-3 is an office and institutional use, while MD-5 is a high density residential zone. The Medical District property is located off the northern

EastCare Stops Service

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital has suspended its EastCare helicopter service indefinitely as its staff and the community mourn the deaths Thursday night of three EastCare team members and a patient they were transporting in a fiery crash near Pollocksville.

Dr. Kathleen Cline, assistant medical director of EastCare, declined on behalf of the hospital to speculate on the cause of the crash until Federal Aviation Administration and National Transportation Safety Board investigators make their reports.

She said that, before Thursday night, the EastCare program had had a perfect safety record. The program had been in operation 21 months and had flown 856 missions without incident.

Perry Reynolds, 39, a pilot with EastCare since its inception, had flown 261 missions for EastCare. He was the lead pilot of the three-man

Officials Say Keep EastCare Going

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County and Greenville city officials expressed sadness and shock by the EastCare helicopter crash that killed four people Thursday night, but they said the helicopter program must move forward.

"It's a horrible tragedy," said Reid Hooper, chairman of the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board of Trustees. "The helicopter pilot and flight attendant and nurses were on a flight of mercy" as they were returning to PCMH after picking up an infant at a U.S. Navy hospital at Camp Lejeune.

"The board of trustees is very saddened," he said. EastCare, the emergency rescue helicopter program at PCMH, has an excellent record of safety, Hooper said. "The helicopter at the hospital was regularly serviced and the pilots were excellent pilots. No short cuts were ever taken," he said.

Pitt County Commissioner Bruce Strickland said "it's a sad day for us, but I hope people will look with favor for keeping the service. It has a good record in Pitt County."

"It's saved a lot of lives and that's the good thing about it," he said. "If we can save lives I would like to see it go forward. We have such a big area that we take care of" in Pitt County that makes the service very useful.

Greenville Mayor Leslie Garner said he was "shocked" to hear of the crash. "My prayers go out to the relatives of the victims. I don't know how to put it in words," Garner said.

But, "I think, as far as the hospital is concerned, we should go forward with the (helicopter) program," he said. "This happens and it's going to happen again. Let's just hope it doesn't happen here again."

James Ray Tyson of Farmville says he had his faith in people bolstered by a New Year's Eve caller who went out of his way to do him, a stranger, a good deed.

Tyson, 26, lost his wallet the night before Thanksgiving on Interstate 95 in Virginia. He said he pulled off the highway about 85 miles south of Washington to exchange the driver's seat of his car with his father. His wallet — containing $92 in cash — fell out of his pocket. He realized it was missing well over an hour later when his party stopped in Maryland to eat. He had last seen his wallet when he paid for gasoline in Farmville just before the trip north.

"At first I halfway hoped someone honest might find it and send it back to me," he said. "But when I didn't hear from it after a week or so, I gave up. I figured whoever found it needed it worse than I did."

On Dec. 31, about 2 a.m., he received a phone call from a man who asked if he had lost his wallet. The man told him he was at the guard house by the gate of the Sterling Radiator Co., where Tyson works. The man had gone there because he found a paycheck stub in the wallet and a security guard had told him how to call Tyson.

The finder of the wallet was Jerome Douglas of Zolfo Springs, Fla., a long-distance truck driver. He told Tyson that on a trip northward along Interstate 95, he had stopped to help a woman having car trouble and had found the wallet during his walk back to his truck.

Tyson said Douglas drove miles off his route to deliver his wallet and returned it to him with every dollar intact.

"When I met him at the guard house, I thanked him and told him he could keep the money in it," Tyson said. "He said no, that he didn't want it, that all he wanted was for me to pray for him."

"It sure makes you feel good to know there are people like him in this world."

Craven Board OKs New Boundary Line With Pitt

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt County has a net gain of 60 acres of land — mostly swampland — thanks to action taken by the Craven County Board of Commissioners early this week.

Pitt County Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee said Craven commissioners, at a meeting Monday night, gave final approval to the location of a disputed boundary between the two counties — east of Grifton, from south of Gardnersville to Grindle Creek near its juncture with the Neuse River.

The boundary question arose last year after L.E. Williams deeded a portion of his property to his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C.R. Tyson.

At that time Craven County claimed portions of the Williams property which had been listed for taxes in Pitt County since 1927 — including William's home and business. Pitt and Craven officials were unsure in which county the property deeded to the Tysons was located. And there were no accurate maps giving the location of the county line in the area.

But Hardee told a meeting of Pitt and Craven officials in December that Pitt tax department employees, using a description of the line contained in a book published by the N.C. Department of Archives and History, plotted the 4½-mile line on new maps in an effort to resolve the question.

The description used to plot the line says the line should run from "Isaac Gardner's Ford ... a direct line to the lower landing on Grindle Creek, which is in about half a mile of the said creek, thence down the said Grindle Creek to the river Neuse ..."

Hardee said Gardner's Ford was located about 400 feet down Swift Creek from the bridge on Secondary Road 1923, but he said officials were unable to locate the landing on Grindle Creek. So Hardee said the lower end of the line was located by measuring a half-mile up the creek from the center of the river.

That puts the Williams home and business — the only home or business affected by the location of the line — in Craven County. The Tysons' home is in Pitt County.

In all, about 21.78 acres (from 15 different tracts) previously taxed in Pitt County will now be taxed — and are in — Craven County. But the "new" line places 81.83 acres from four tracts in Pitt County, for a net 60.05 acre gain.

Ron Antry, tax assessor for Craven County, told his board that a survey of the line, complete with markers, would cost about $3,000 and the commissioners appropriated $1,500 to pay for half the project.

Taiwan Flu Now Found In 38 States

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health researchers believe shortages of Taiwan flu vaccine may have been caused by some patients' incorrect belief that the new flu shot was strongly recommended for them.

The national Centers for Disease Control reported Thursday that some physicians, clinics and health departments have run out of Taiwan flu vaccine, which was rushed to doctors in November after federal researchers warned that the standard three-component vaccine for this winter's flu season would not protect against the new strain.

Helicopter Crashes

News reporters, allowed to visit the crash site for the first time about 3 a. m., found smoke still coming from the relatively small amount of wreckage still somewhat intact.

Five empty fire extinguishers used by rescue workers and oxygen bottles from the helicopter littered one side of the 20-foot-wide crater — surrounded by vines and briars — that contained most of the wreckage.

The helicopter's tail section and a section containing the transmission that once fed power from the engine to the now-stubby rotor blades, lay against the opposite side of the crater. And the skids on which the helicopter normally landed lay twisted and disconnected.

A long, narrow, deep trench, reaching from the ground at the edge of the windrow to one of the sheared-off rotor blades, suggested that the rotary wings of the helicopter had been turning when it hit the ground.

Part of a broken stretcher lay scorched near where the nose of EastCare should have been, and a fire-blackened instrument panel lay nearby.

But most of the cabin portion of the air ambulance, where the flight crew and patient were riding, had been eaten away by the fire and was no more.

Surles, who said the bodies had been burned, said he had no idea what may have started the fire or caused the crash.

There was no "black box," like those on commercial airliners, on the helicopter to record data that might help investigators determine the cause of the crash.

According to Surles, representatives from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board were scheduled to visit the site after daybreak this morning to begin their investigation into the cause of the crash.

Deputies from the Onslow and Jones county sheriff's departments, the Richlands, Pollocksville, Trenton and Mayesville fire departments and rescue squads and forest service rangers from Jones and Onslow counties, were among those assisting in the rescue effort, according to Surles.

Service Suspended

pilot team employed by OmniFlight Airways, the service from which the EastCare helicopters are leased. A Tennessee native, he had been a helicopter pilot for most of the 20 years since he was trained by the U.S. military and served in Vietnam.

Mike McGinnis, 32, was the program's chief flight nurse. He had been employed by the hospital since shortly after planning for EastCare began. He had flown 133 missions for EastCare. According to Dr. Jack Allison, hospital emergency department director, he had been an emergency care nurse in Chapel Hill and Durham before coming to Greenville.

Pam Demaree, 28, the assistant chief flight nurse, had been employed at Pitt Memorial since the early 1980s. She had been with the EastCare program since its beginning and had flown 172 missions.

Dave McRae, hospital senior vice president, speaking for the hospital, said, "The many of us who personally knew these three EastCare team members recognized that they were uncommonly dedicated people. They sought excellence in every phase of their work ... Both as individuals and as part of the team they represented, they were a credit to themselves, their families and their professions, and examples for those of us who now mourn their loss."

Dr. Allison said, "I personally am really upset. We're very close to these people and it hurts." He said he had communicated with Pam and Mike yesterday as the two flew a mission to a wreck near Jamesville.

McRae said many things will have to be looked at before the hospital board decides whether the program will be continued and how. The program, if it is continued, will have to be restructured. Key people were killed last night.

It was reported that the parents of Xenia Lewis, the pediatric patient being transported to Pitt Memorial, were on the way to Greenville by car when the crash occurred. Hospital chaplains were called in to assist the baby's family, other crash victims' families and friends, and other EastCare crew members during their initial knowledge of the loss.

Site Selection

RALEIGH (AP) — A commission on hazardous waste has narrowed potential sites for a treatment facility to 148 in 41 counties, the chairman of the commission said.

Deborah Parker, chairman of the Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission, said the sites will be announced within a month after a meeting with county managers, senators and representatives of 41 counties.

The wastes will be "mid-level chemical toxic wastes," such as dry cleaning solvents, and by-products from metal plating, she said.

The commission was formed by the General Assembly in 1984 to find a site, she said.

New Test

RALEIGH (AP) — Many North Carolina 11th-graders may have yet another standardized test on their calendars this spring — this one in math and U.S. history.

The test, sponsored by the Southern Regional Education Board and the National Assessment of Educational Progress, is part of a program to compare students' achievement from state to state.

About 2,000 students in 90 randomly selected high schools will take the tests in April, unless objections are raised by the State Board of Education, said William J. Brown, assistant state superintendent for research.

Urgent Need

For $87,500 apiece, the Pitt County Commissioners and Greenville's City Council can make an investment that will net them a healthy return of service, growth and profitability.

That amount is the boards' share of the cost of an instrument landing system for Pitt-Greenville Airport. Although they've taken no official action, Commissioners agreed to pay that money when the airport purchases the much-needed equipment. The City Council pledged its share in its 1986-87 budget.

That money will be well spent. Pitt-Greenville is the only commercial airport in the state that doesn't have an instrument landing system. Combine that with the fact the facility doubled its flights and tripled its boardings in the past two years, and an urgent need for instrument landing equipment is evident.

The airport saw near-record boardings in November and December. The only thing that kept the facility from setting new records was the fact that 18 flights each month were canceled or diverted to other airports due to bad weather.

Nothing is more inconvenient for a traveler than landing at an airport 30 miles from a destination — unless it's having a flight canceled altogether. For the airline, that situation is worse than inconvenient — it diminishes profit and hurts public confidence. In short, not having an instrument landing system handicaps both the community and the airline.

Economic growth, although it provides strong incentive to add the equipment, is secondary to safety — a primary consideration. Instrument landing, in marginal weather, would provide air passengers with a margin of protection they must now fly without.

The need for an instrument landing system will intensify when American Eagle commuter airline begins service to Pitt-Greenville July 15. As Greenville's second airline, American Eagle could add six flights each day to the airport's already sizeable 10-flight-per-day schedule.

Clearly, the potential for air traffic growth exists at Pitt-Greenville Airport. The airport has reached the point where growth cannot proceed without additional equipment — specifically an instrument landing system. The County Commissioners have expressed a desire for the Pitt-Greenville Airport to become self-supporting. If expansion continues at the current rate, the facility can take positive steps to finance itself. But for now, the airport needs the assistance of community coffers to reach that point.

Airport officials should proceed with installation of an instrument landing system as quickly as possible. The city and county governments, when presented with the bill, should pay it with the knowledge they are getting a bargain — and the citizens are getting an invaluable service.

Syzygy

What is a rare alignment of Earth, Sun and Moon which contributed to a storm which battered the East Coast for two days recently.

According to the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration it is an astronomical factor at work called syzygy. That involves alignment of the moon directly between the Earth and the sun, or it can be the moon directly opposite the sun with the Earth in the middle.

Actually syzygy is not so rare. It happens twice a month at times of a full moon and a new moon. The tides run higher due to the combined gravitational pull.

In this case, though, the Earth was also approaching its closest to the sun and the sun was furthest south of the equator on Dec. 22. Another factor was an alignment of orbital planes of the Earth and moon with the sun which happens once in 18.6 years, according to NOAA.

All those factors caused a high tide of 11.7 feet above mean sea level, according to the Boston National Weather Office.

Combine that with a storm which moved up the Carolinas coast on New Year's day and then hit the New England coast on Friday and we had the unusual weather circumstances which caused coastal damage.

There was a time when such storms moved up the Atlantic and struck without warning. Now we are told what to expect due to modern weather analysis methods.

We hope it will be at least 18.6 years before another such storm occurs. Syzygy will occur far more frequently, but we hope we don't have to spell it again anytime soon.

Today's Thought

Public housing did not suffer altogether in the Reagan administration's fiscal 1988 budget proposals — the budget calls for $2.2 million to refurbish the White House exterior. Not bad for a one-family dwelling.

Non-Deliverable Nomination

WASHINGTON — The fragility of George Bush's game plan for the presidential nomination is exposed by a grass-roots revolt against the Republican leader he has counted on to corral Alabama's delegation.

The vice president's aides deny reports from Alabama that they quietly intervened in behalf of Montgomery Mayor Emory Folmar's re-election as Republican state chairman. Whether they did or not, Folmar is George Bush's man in the state and the drive to oust him by a vote of the state committee in Birmingham Saturday has an unmistakable anti-Bush coloration.

Survival or non-survival of Folmar is less significant than implications for Bush presidential strategy of the struggle for state chairman. Bush's effort to duplicate Richard M. Nixon's glide to the presidential nomination on the backs of the party establishment has failed. Instead of guaranteeing the vice president control of the Alabama delegation, Folmar has had to step back from Bush to stop from falling himself.

Nixon's 1960 nomination, when an inevitable vice president's nomination following a popular eight-year Republican incumbency averted primary fights, has been the model for Bush in 1988. Even though it has become clear that Bush could not scare out primary foes, his managers count on established party leaders — the Emory Folmars — to deliver him the nomination.

Folmar denies it, but politicians in Alabama and Washington believe he had intended to split the state's 1988 convention delegation — electing half in the primary, but letting the GOP state committee pick the balance. The appointed delegates would surely back Bush, assuring Alabama for the vice president.

However, a campaign against Folmar was launched by Paul Haughton, a Tuscaloosa advertising executive and veteran conservative stalwart. Haughton is uncommitted for president, but his supporters are interested in Rep. Jack Kemp, ex-senator Paul Laxalt, Pat Robertson and, most recently, Patrick J. Buchanan. That sounds like Anybody But Bush — the flavor of the campaign against Folmar.

Folmar's foes claim that he tried to sabotage last year's unexpectedly victorious campaign by Gov.-elect Guy Hunt, attempting to keep him off the platform when Bush visited Alabama last year. Behind such accusations is the cultural gap between country club and Elks Club Republicans, which Ronald Reagan could bridge but George Bush cannot.

In the campaign against Folmar, the country club label is pasted on both him and Bush. It is bruted about Alabama that Folmar would be secretary of housing and urban development or secretary of the Army in a Bush administration. There are also claims of extraordinary interest in the state chairman's race by the vice president's office.

As Haughton was announcing his candidacy against Folmar Nov. 24, sources close to him say he received separate telephone calls from "the vice president's office" and Bush's national political operative, Lee Atwater. According to the sources, neither call was returned, to prevent attempts to talk Haughton out of running.

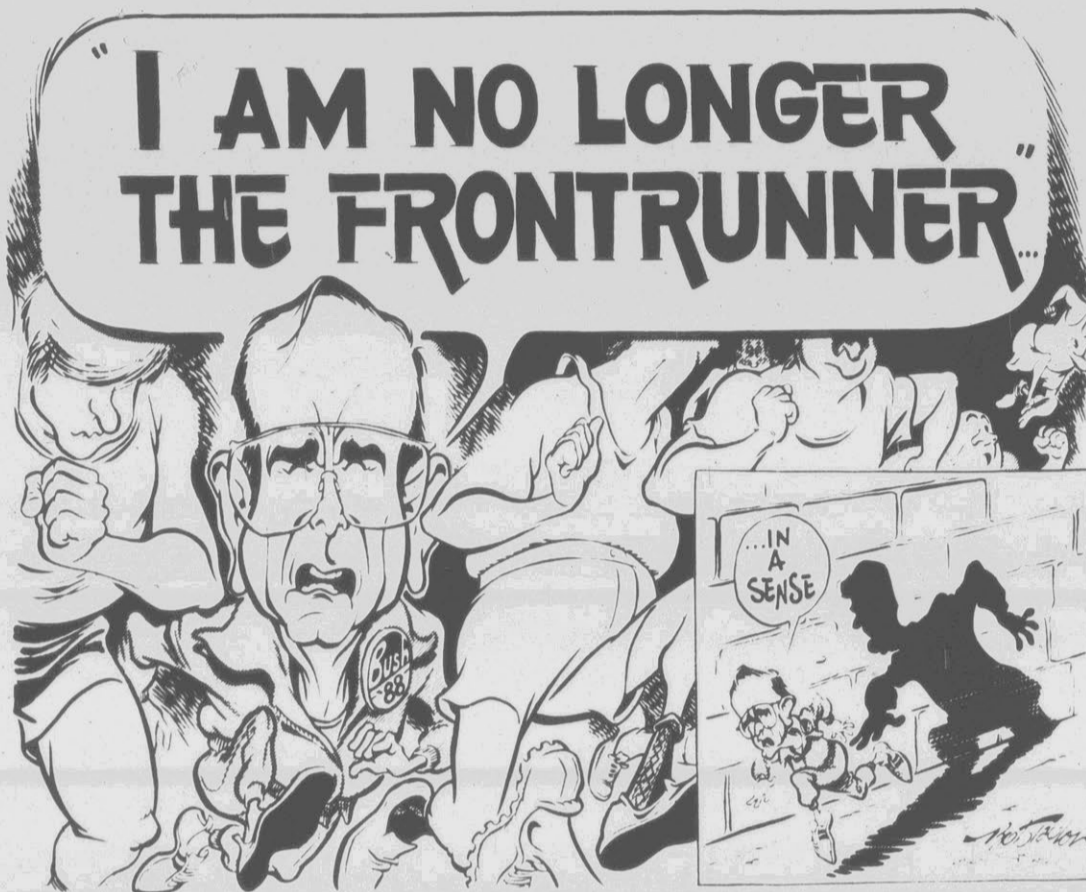

Shortly thereafter, White House political aide Ed Rogers, an ardent Bush backer, called Brice Marsh, a Birmingham businessman and district GOP chairman in Alabama. According to Marsh, Rogers wanted to know about "this character Haughton running against Emory." Marsh, a Haughton supporter, asked if the vice president was backing Folmar. Rogers said no.

In fact, the Bush camp denies everything. The vice president's office has no record of a call to Haughton, and Atwater told us he placed no call. Rogers denies that he instituted the call to Marsh. For his part, Folmar told us "I'm not committed" for president even though "the vice president is a close friend of mine" and added that he is interested in no federal office "other than the one held by Ronald Reagan."

Atwater's assertion that he did not even know when the Alabama chairmanship election was being held evoked howls from operatives for Kemp and Sen. Robert Dole, who not only admit avid interest but are able to cite state headcounts. One count shows a narrow lead for Haughton.

But even if Folmar wins, he cannot turn over the Alabama delegation to his close friend the vice president. His presumed plan to appoint half of the delegation, Folmar told us, is "absolutely false." This is not 1960. What is happening in Alabama demonstrates the devalued ability of the Republican establishment to deliver the nomination to George Bush.

Cardinal Made His Trip Work

It was New Year's Day mass in the Holy City of Jerusalem. New York's Cardinal John O'Connor was preaching at St. Saviour's Church in the Old City. Suddenly he decided to speak from the heart. He had brought controversy with him to Israel, and he wanted to apologize to the people of Israel and to the Israeli leaders who were his hosts.

O'Connor took the blame for canceling meetings with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir and President Chaim Herzog. The Vatican — which objects to Israel's annexation of Jerusalem — had forbidden official meetings with top Israeli leaders. "It is fitting and it behooves me to say," said O'Connor, "that I deeply regret and certainly apologize for any offenses...."

It was a humbling occasion for a prince of the church, but O'Connor would soon rescue his Middle East initiative. He arranged to meet Herzog and Foreign Minister Shimon Peres unofficially, in their homes, and he returns to New York Saturday with the chance to play an important role in efforts to ease tensions in the Middle East and improve Catholic-Jewish relations. In the end, he'll come back to New York not a humbled diplomatic neophyte but rather an envoy with a number of successes.

Not the least of O'Connor's accomplishments during the nine-day trip is the skill with which he seemed to address the concerns of all his constituencies. New York's Jewish leaders, who are important to world Jewish opinion, appreciated O'Connor's efforts to meet with Israeli leaders despite Vatican concerns, and were moved by O'Connor's reverential visit to Israel's Holocaust museum. The cardinal advanced the church's position on Jerusalem and he continued his efforts on behalf of Palestinian refugees. And, in his meetings with Jordan's King Hussein and Israel's Peres and Herzog, he opened the possibility of Vatican-sponsored peace talks.

The church's strong interest in the Middle East is tied to the centuries-old Christian communities in the region and the holy sites in Jerusalem, Bethlehem and other communities. There are more than a million Catholics in Lebanon, Jordan, Syria and Israel and hundreds of thousands of other Christians. The church has access to Christian leaders in Arab communities — a Catholic bishop sat for several years on the board of the Palestine Liberation Organization — but also has contacts in Israel.

"There are millions of Catholic Arabs, some are in leadership positions, and first of all the church is concerned about them," says Rashid Khalidi, a professor at Columbia University's Middle East Institute. The Vatican has mounted peace initiatives in the past, Khalidi says, "and they have the most professional diplomats you would want to meet." O'Connor's mission, he says, may be the first step in another effort.

The New York cardinal is a perfect choice for such a mission, says Khalidi, because he serves the church in the largest Jewish city in the world. He has strong support among New York's Jewish leaders, who know he is a friend of Israel. "He's obviously not an anti-Semite, but he's saying things on behalf of the Palestinians," says Khalidi. "That gets people thinking."

O'Connor's interest in the region can be traced to his role as president of the Catholic Near-East Welfare

Association, the largest source of church funding for projects in the Middle East. The agency has funneled hundreds of millions of dollars in aid to the region and is the key point of contact between Arab Christians and the West.

O'Connor voiced his concern for the region's Christians in Rome just hours after he became a cardinal in 1985. At that time he pledged to do what he could to bring about peace in the Middle East. His concerns are shared by the National Conference of Catholic Bishops, which has formally called for a Palestinian homeland.

Each step of the way, O'Connor punctuated his efforts with visits to dramatic and symbolic sites. There was the refugee camp in Jordan, the Yad Vashem Holocaust Museum, the Wailing Wall and the chapel at a refugee center in the Israeli-occupied Gaza strip.

"I think it's imperative to see these refugee camps," O'Connor said in Jordan. "We just can't blind ourselves to it. It's here. It's reality. ... I know the Holy Father is in anguish over the refugee camps."

In Israel, at Yad Vashem, O'Connor saw pictures of the monumental tragedy of the Holocaust. In the museum's memorial hall he prayed before an eternal flame. He also said he shared the responsibility for ensuring that the Holocaust could not be repeated.

O'Connor's trip was made against the backdrop of two decades of progress in Catholic-Jewish relations. Beginning with a major document in 1965, in which the Vatican rejected the notion that Jews killed Christ, both religions have moved toward mutual acceptance and understanding. Jewish and Catholic seminaries now exchange scholars, Catholic textbooks have been revised to remove anti-Jewish teachings and officials are developing materials for Catholic schools on the Holocaust.

Americans — who live with the demands of religious pluralism — have played crucial roles in changing Catholic attitudes on Judaism. In the 1970s, the American bishops issued two formal documents on the Middle East. Both emphasized Israel's sovereign rights and the close religious bonds of Christians and Jews. New York's former archbishop, Cardinal Terence Cooke, was a key leader in efforts to remove anti-Semitism from church teachings and Cardinal O'Connor has been an active advocate on behalf of Israel and the cause of Soviet Jewry.

"As the cardinal archbishop of New York, which has so many Jewish citizens, he has to be keenly interested in Jewish affairs," adds Rabbi Seymour Siegel of the Jewish Theological Seminary in New York. "I think he knows Jews are bothered by the Vatican's position on Israel and he wants to help. The whole episode of his trip will begin a healthy process of examination."

On an international level, Jewish leaders believe O'Connor's trip fits into a general church effort to improve relations with Jews and prospects for peace in the Middle East. "The pope, who figures in all this, made a fundamental step when he visited the Grand Synagogue in Rome last year," says Morris Abram, an internationally known leader in the Jewish community. "And O'Connor has a reservoir of goodwill with the Jewish community."

The cardinal will return to New York to high expectations. He has supported the Palestinians and may be expected to continue his advocacy for their homeland. He has announced his proposal for church-supported peace talks.

Strength For Today

Someone has made the acute observation that we can no longer recognize the truth if we give up telling it.

The liar breaks down in his own thinking the solid wall which divides truth from falsehood. The result is such a churning together of things true and untrue that the purveyor of falsehood cannot tell one from the other.

It is not possible to have satisfactory relationships without veracity. If husband and wife deceive each other, the warning of disaster sounds with foreboding. Parents who twist the truth and equivocate set an example to their children which will handicap them in later life more than the loss of an arm or a leg.

In fact, what they do is to teach their children to become blind in the sense that they can no longer distinguish truth from falsehood.

Lovesick Moose Is On Loose

By JOHN DONNELLY
Associated Press Writer

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The lovesick moose that spent 76 days wooing a brown and white cow has apparently walked away from the relationship.

"He looks like he's hit the road," said Donald Gallus, a Vermont game warden who closely watched the hillside love affair. "It appears he is leaving, going home."

The 700-pound moose showed up at Larry Carrara's farm last year during mating season and took a shine to Jessica the Hereford.

It was last seen at the farm Wednesday night. On Thursday morning, the moose was on the loose about a mile from the farm. It has not been spotted since.

The moose's departure, say wildlife biologists, was apparently triggered by the loss of his antlers Wednesday. Gallus said once a moose loses his antlers, he loses his defenses — and sexual urges.

The moose's devotion to Jessica beguiled the nation. More than 75,000 people went to Carrara's remote farm to get a glimpse of the odd couple, and those who couldn't visit could hear a song called "Lovesick Moose" written about the pair.

Biologists said it is impossible for a moose and a cow to produce an offspring, but the moose nevertheless closely shadowed Jessica, often nuzzling her and making certain she got her share of food.

Jessica has 10 cows for company in her field but today appeared a little lost without her moose, Lila Carrara said.

"I think she was out there looking this morning, looking for him. She acted like she was a little lonesome, looking away," she said.

The Carraras also are taking the moose's departure hard.

"We had a pretty sad night last night. It was 76 days we had him with us," she said. "We got very attached to him, we really did."

Carrara, who returned to work last week after a two-month leave of absence from his job as a maintenance worker at a General Electric plant, speculated that the moose may have left because Carrara was no longer around during the day.

Gallus and Charles Willey, Vermont's moose expert, disagreed.

Willey had said once the moose lost his antlers, he probably would leave.

"He's really lost his ability to defend himself," Willey said.

Bull moose lose their antlers every winter and grow them again in the spring and summer.

"All his sexual urges or virility is gone once the antlers go," Gallus said. "While he was there and still had his antlers, he was, let's say, frisky. He thought he was a herd bull with all those cows."

At first, wildlife experts predicted the moose would stay a day or two. Then, they thought it would last a week or up to a month. In November, experts stopped predicting.

Asked if he thought the moose was now gone for good, Gallus joked, "You're not going to burn me, baby, with any predictions. It sure looks like he's gone, but who knows with this moose."

Speaker

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Baseball Commissioner Peter Victor Ueberroth will be the keynote speaker at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill commencement ceremonies May 10, Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham III announced Thursday.

"Mr. Ueberroth was the choice of the senior class, and we are delighted to have the person who brought such great leadership to the 1984 Olympics in Los Angeles as our commencement speaker," Fordham said.

Commencement speakers usually either have UNC ties or are N.C. governors. Gov. Jim Martin spoke last year and CBS News Correspondent Charles Kuralt, a UNC alumnus spoke to the class of 1985.

Ueberroth is the former president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee.

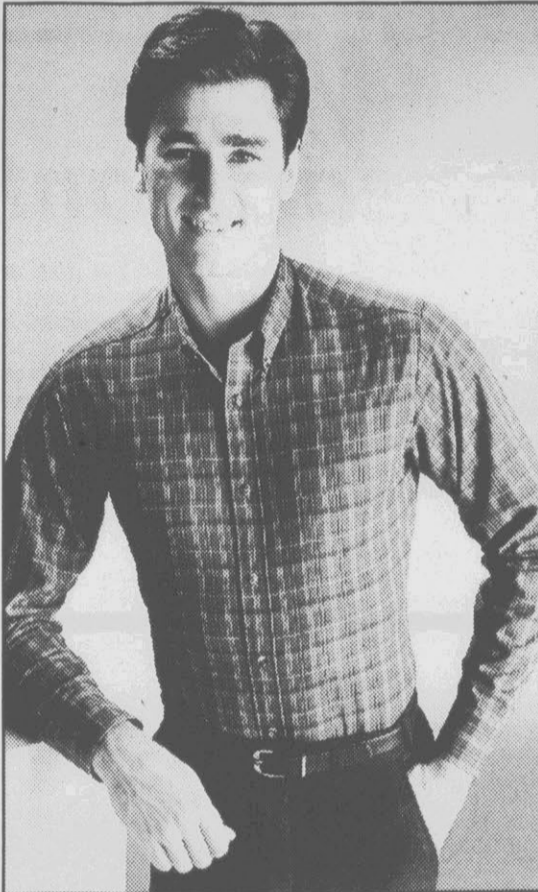

Growth of wholesale/retail, government and service employment in Pitt County exceeded 70 percent in the past decade.

Grand Jury Indicts Five Klansmen In Alleged Effort To Get Weapons

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE (AP) — The indictment of five North Carolina men on weapons charges has put the White Patriot Party on its last legs, but some of the white supremacist group's followers are still loose and dangerous, a U.S. Attorney says.

"For all practical purposes, the White Patriot Party no longer exists in North Carolina," U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said Thursday. "What we have are dangerous individuals who are fanatics who might do anything, especially now. They hate the federal government. They feel oppressed and intimidated by what we are doing and there is a tendency to strike back."

"There still are some very dangerous people running around loose," he said. "We still have our wagons circled."

The five, identified as members of the Ku Klux Klan and its successor group the White Patriot Party, were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury in Raleigh on charges of conspiring to obtain weapons and explosives stolen from a National Guard Armory.

Four of those indicted were arrested Wednesday night and the fifth is being sought as a fugitive, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms said.

"We are charging them in a conspiracy to engage in illegal activities, getting weapons from military bases, and also attempting to blow up the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., and to murder Morris Dees," executive director of the center, Currin said.

Dees assisted last summer in the prosecution of White Patriot Party founder Glenn Miller and chaplain Stephen Miller, who was named in the current indictment. Glenn Miller was convicted of disobeying a judge's order banning participation in paramilitary organizations and has since moved to Virginia while he awaits the end of his legal appeals.

Also charged in the case are Robert E. Jackson, Anthony T. Wydra, Wendell L. Lane and Simeon Davis. Jackson and Wydra are members of both the Klan and the White Patriot Party, the Justice Department said. It said Lane is a White Patriot Party leader while Davis is an intelligence officer of the White Patriot Party.

The 12-page indictment said the five planned to get military weapons and explosives to equip and train a paramilitary armed forces group that would "further the goals of the White Supremacist movement."

The indictment alleged that in one instance, three of the defendants received ammunition magazines for M-16 automatic rifles and gas masks that had been stolen from the national guard armory at Wadesboro, N.C.

Currin said the indictments grew out of a plot uncovered last September.

"Among those charged in this indictment are the individuals who were arrested in connection with attempted robbery of a Pizza Hut in Fayetteville," Currin said.

Proceeds from the robbery allegedly were to be used to buy equipment with which to blow up the offices of the Southern Poverty Law Center.

Dees, executive director of the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., said he was relieved that five Ku Klux Klansmen and White Patriot Party members accused of conspiring to kill him had been arrested.

"I do hope this lessens some of the tension we've been living under because of the threats we've been getting," Dees said.

Currin said the indictments don't signal an end to his probe of white supremacist groups in North Carolina.

"We are probably going to pursue some additional grand jury work against the Klan here in North Carolina," he said. "But we feel like this indictment is going to be a real lethal blow to what remains of the White Patriot Party in North Carolina."

The White Patriot Party was formally disbanded after Miller was convicted.

NRC OKs Permit For N.C. Nuclear Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant could be generating electricity to some of Carolina Power & Light Co.'s customers by this weekend following a vote by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to authorize a full-power license for the plant.

The NRC voted 5-0 Thursday to authorize the license for the plant at New Hill, N.C., near Raleigh. The 900-megawatt plant of Carolina Power & Light Co. has been running tests under a low-power license since last Saturday.

CP&L spokesman Mac Harris said the plant would start providing some electricity to CP&L customers as soon as it exceeds the 5 percent operational level.

All that remains now is for Harold R. Denton, director of the NRC's Office of Nuclear Reactor Regulation, officially to issue the license as soon as his staff determines that all federal safety requirements have been met.

It will be the 100th full-power license granted by the commission. Five others have low-power licenses and two plants have been permitted to load fuel, but not operate.

"This is another major milestone toward the completion of the Harris facility, which will ultimately lead to the plant beginning commercial operation later this year, and begin providing power to our customers," CP&L spokesman Wayne Ennis said in Raleigh, N.C.

Low-power testing will continue for most of January, Ennis said. Thursday's decision means that when low-power testing is finished, technicians can then begin to slowly increase the power.

The Shearon Harris plant is coming into service nearly 11 years late and costing $3.8 billion, which opponents have said is a 1,700 percent cost overrun.

One contention by opponents of the Shearon Harris plant was that the license was being rushed, but the staff said at least three others of the dozen in service using the same Westinghouse Corp. design had completed low-power tests in seven days and a fourth had done it in eight.

More than 100 opponents crowded the commission's hearing room for more than three hours of presentations, applauding witnesses of whose testimony they approved.

Their witnesses argued that the commission's own regulations forbade granting a license without a full test of emergency evacuation plans within the previous year, and the last such test at Shearon Harris was 19 months ago.

Also, they argued, allegations of unsafe practices made by an anonymous informant remain unresolved. To authorize a license "five days and one hour after the applicant began low-power testing ... while serious concerns are unresolved ... would be totally unjust," said Robert Epting, counsel for the Coalition for Alternatives to Shearon Harris.

The pace, he said, "suggests that the commission desires to diminish the options for appellate review," a suggestion to which the company, staff and commissioners did not respond.

Ennis said didn't expect Thursday's decision to silence opposition to the nuclear power plant.

"It would not be surprising if CASH has further allegations and raises further concerns about that facility," Ennis said. "That certainly has been the case over the last year, and I don't believe one would expect that they will simply cease raising objections to the facility."

The company has scheduled another test of evacuation plans for February, and commission staff member Dave Matthews said the staff recommended an exception to its one-year rule because "we feel the underlying purpose of the rule has been met," especially since the company had conducted a more recent drill at its Brunswick plant last month.

Wounded Passenger Leaves Hospital

RALEIGH (AP) — A New York man wounded in the shooting of a United Airlines jet New Year's Eve says he knew almost immediately he had been hit by a bullet.

Barry Rollins, 30, said Thursday he had been gazing out the window and had leaned back in his seat when he felt the bullet "slapping me in the leg." He said he leaned forward and felt the bullet slam into his face, and "blood spurted out ... It was a burning sensation."

Rollins was discharged from Rex Hospital Thursday afternoon, and planned to take a United flight to his New York home. Dr. Craig Price, who operated on Rollins after the shooting, said he was in good condition and should recover completely from wounds in his right leg and face.

"I am not angry ..." Rollins said. "I'm just trying to figure out what led him (the gunman) to do this. Certainly, I may never find out."

Rollins, employed by a Manhattan advertising firm, declined comment on whether he would take legal action against Robert Raymond Proulx, who was indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury on charges of intentionally firing at the plane and using a firearm in commission of a felony.

Insurance Surcharge Increase Approved

RALEIGH (AP) — The board of governors of the North Carolina Reinsurance Facility has approved new annual recoupment surcharges of 4.7 percent in order to recover $80.2 million in operating losses of the facility.

Existing surcharges from the state-mandated facility, which reinsures high-risk drivers, total 38.9 percent, the facility said in a news release Thursday.

The new recoupment surcharges will affect policies that become effective during the year beginning April 1, 1987.

By law, the recoupment surcharges will affect all private passenger automobile liability insurance policies with Safe Driver Insurance Plan points, whether or not the policies are reinsured by the facility.

The points are assigned for a conviction on a moving traffic violation or for involvement in an "at-fault" accident.

When the recoupment surcharges become effective, a single SDIP point could cost a driver about 54 percent more for auto liability insurance, said Art Ivey, chairman of the board of governors of the facility.

Explosion

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — Two oil company employees escaped serious injury when an oil tanker truck exploded after one of the men lit a cigarette lighter to check the fuel level, authorities said.

"One of them flipped on a cigarette lighter to see the level of the fuel, and when he flipped the cigarette lighter, the vapors ignited and blew the end of the tanker out," Wilmington Battalion Fire Chief M.H. Hilburn said Thursday.

The tanker, which held 6,500 gallons but was almost empty, contained a mixture of asphalt and naphtha, a high-gasoline extract, Hilburn said.

One of the injured men was on top of the tanker, and the other was in the cab when the explosion occurred about 7 p.m. Thursday, he said. Both were treated and released from New Hanover Memorial Hospital.

The Coast Guard, which was concerned about pollution in the nearby Cape Fear River, put a crew in the water and at the site, but found out that all of the chemical had been drained in to a catch-basin dug for emergencies.

The fire department responded with five companies and 18 men and had the fire under control within 20 minutes, Hilburn said.

Drug Trial

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Former State Bureau of Investigation chemist Charles McDonald said he probably tampered with the evidence used to convict an Asheville man on cocaine and heroin charges in 1985, McDonald's former attorney says.

Waynesville attorney Reid Brown testified Thursday that McDonald at times snorted at least a portion of all high-quality cocaine that passed through an SBI laboratory in Swannanoa.

"Any coke that was in that lab in August and September (of 1984), he used it," Brown said in a special hearing in Buncombe County Superior Court.

Attorneys for George Smith of Asheville are seeking a new trial, claiming that McDonald's drug use while he worked for the SBI invalidates his assessment of the evidence in Smith's case.

The SBI fired McDonald in May 1985 after he confessed to ingesting drugs submitted to him for analysis over a six-year period. He has never been prosecuted.

Fallen Bridge

WILMINGTON (AP) — It's in the wrong place, but the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers just might be persuaded to let a fallen bridge lie.

The old Holden Beach bridge, on its way to water off Lockwood Folly Inlet where it was to be sunk as an artificial reef, fell off the barge that was carrying it and sank about 11 miles short of its destination. The 222-foot-long steel structure is in 40 to 50 feet of water about eight miles south-southwest of the mouth of the Cape Fear River.

At the shallowest point, there is 18 feet of clearance between the surface and the bridge, which is sitting upright and has broken into two or three pieces, said Buddy Rowe, president of Wilmington Towing Co., which was hired to take the bridge to the prescribed location.

The N.C. Division of Marine Fisheries, which has a general reef permit from the Corps of Engineers, plans to ask the corps for permission to leave the bridge where it is.

Redman

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said his contributions from political action committees formed by utilities will not sway his votes on the N.C. Utilities Commission.

"Nobody's going to buy my integrity," Redman, Gov. Jim Martin's choice to fill a vacancy on the commission, said Thursday. "I shave every morning and I'm never going to put myself in a position to not like the person looking back (from the mirror). It's not worth it."

Political action committees, or PACs, formed by five companies regulated by the commission gave Redman a total of $1,700 during his successful campaign last year for a fifth term in the General Assembly.

The companies and amounts the PACs gave were: Southern Bell — $750; Duke Power Co. — $300; Carolina Power & Light Co. — $300; Virginia Electric Power — $250; and American Telephone & Telegraph — $100.

New Judge

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin has appointed Shelby lawyer John Keaton Fonvielle to fill a vacant District Court judgeship for Cleveland and Lincoln counties.

Fonvielle, 39, will become one of three district judges in the 27B judicial district. Fonvielle takes the judgeship left vacant by John Gardner of Shelby, who was elected the district's Superior Court judge in November.

Fonvielle, who will earn $49,428 a year as a district judge, was one of three lawyers nominated by the Cleveland-Lincoln county bar association in November.

Fatal Fire

NEW BERN, N.C. (AP) — Four people jumped from a second-floor window to safety Thursday morning in a New Bern house fire that claimed the life of a 3-year-old boy.

Walter Joseph Arrington Jr. died in the home of his grandmother, Doris Marie Reddick, 33, according to a report from New Bern Police officer M.E. Haddock.

Walter's mother, Celes Arrington, 17, was not injured. Three other children in the house escaped the fire with minor burns, authorities said. A Craven County Hospital spokeswoman said they were treated and released.

Polk Move

RALEIGH (AP) — The state should appraise the land around Polk Youth Center and consider selling the property and relocating the prison, a state legislator said Thursday.

Rep. Anne C. Barnes, D-Orange, said she and Sen. David R. Parnell, D-Robeson, would recommend that a legislative panel they both head call for an appraisal of the 48 acres of Polk property. The prison is next to the N.C. Museum of Art in west Raleigh.

The property is likely to be worth millions of dollars, she said.

Conviction

WILMINGTON (AP) — White Patriot Party member Gregory Thomas Short was convicted on a charge of lying to a federal grand jury investigating the shooting of a black woman's car, U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said Thursday.

Short, of Sanford, was indicted on Oct. 28, 1986, and arrested by FBI agents in Carthage on Oct. 30.

The indictment charged Short with testifying falsely to a grand jury on Sept. 16, 1986, when he said he had not seen or heard any shots fired from a car he was driving near Erwin on Aug. 24, 1985.

The grand jury was investigating the complaint of Prenetta Savoy that someone shot at her car and shattered a window as she passed another car on the highway that night.

The maximum penalty upon conviction of making a false declaration before a federal grand jury is 5 years in prison and a $10,000 fine. Currin said. Short's sentencing hearing is scheduled for March 16 in Raleigh.

Task Force Expanded To Study Joint School-College Resources

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's public schools and community colleges still have a number of problems to iron out in a program that allows high school students to take community college courses for college credit, school officials say.

The State Board of Education and the Board of Community Colleges Thursday agreed in a joint meeting to increase the membership of a task force which is studying ways of better coordinating the programs and resources of both groups.

Joseph P. Webb, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, said the task force, which has been working for about a year, had identified a number of ways in which the two systems could improve "cooperative programming," which the Legislature authorized in 1983.

The task force has discovered some technical problems in the program that need to be addressed, Webb said. For example, high school students who take community college courses can have scheduling problems because community colleges operate on a quarterly basis.

Another problem is a regulation that limits participation in cooperative programming by stating that the number of high school students taking community college courses may not exceed 5 percent of the student body, Webb said.

In a rural area, he said, that rule makes it all but impossible to have cooperative programming because of low enrollment.

Other issues to be studied are cooperative programming students' tuition and fees and transportation, as well as whether high schools and community colleges should share faculty, he said.

In the 1985-86 academic year, there were 164 courses offered under cooperative programming, and some 3,500 students participated, according to Webb.

"The Basic Education Program demonstrates a need and a potential for far greater cooperation between the two systems," Webb said.

The Basic Education Program is an eight-year, $800 million program designed to upgrade public schools in North Carolina and give all the state's pupils equal access to a basic level of instruction.

Montagnard Refugees Quickly Adapt To Ways Of Americans

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Barely a month after ending an 11-year trek through the jungles of Southeast Asia, Montagnard refugee Djang Niekdam was maneuvering deftly through a jungle of houses on Boardwalk and Park Place — and finding it much more to his liking.

"Two houses — $390!" he laughed as cousin Bhim Mlo tapped a tiny metal dog along the Monopoly board, landed on Niekdam's North Carolina Avenue and paid up. Then Niekdam counted the money to see if he could afford more houses to make more money to buy more houses.

Monopoly may be the quintessential American game, but its purpose here is not to teach American values to the 201 Montagnards who fought alongside U.S. troops in Vietnam and resettled Nov. 25 in North Carolina.

Rather, the game is used to help them practice their English, arithmetic and money skills, said Keith Austin, administrative assistant for Catholic Social Services Refugee Office.

"I've worked with refugees from all over the world, but these guys just grab me because they learn so quickly," he said during the game with Niekdam, 26, Mlo, 21, and Mlo's brothers, Luan, 22, and Mut, 25.

Most of the refugees, now settling into homes in Charlotte, Greensboro and Raleigh, are adjusting just as quickly to American life, say sponsors and Montagnards themselves.

"Here, my people enjoy; we stay here with our new friends, the American people," said Thur Eban, recently elected president of the 51 Montagnards in Charlotte.

Eban, 45, said most of the Montagnards have jobs or shortly will

Prison Projects Behind Schedule

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Department of Correction has lagged behind in much needed prison construction approved by the Legislature and North Carolina has come very close to being found in contempt of a federal court order requiring improvements in 14 southern Piedmont prisons, officials say.

"This has the potential to embarrass us as a state," Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said this week. "We have to move forward expediently."

The revelations were made public last month at the General Assembly's Governmental Operations Commission meeting and have sparked criticism of Republican Gov. Jim Martin's administration, which last March unveiled a 10-year master plan for solving the state's prison overcrowding crisis.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat who may run against Martin for governor in 1988, said he has met twice with Martin and House Speaker Liston Ramsey to relay concern expressed by legislators at the December meeting.

"We have to get cracking on this," said Jordan, who met Wednesday with Martin to discuss ideas for speeding up construction schedules and prison improvements. "The money is there to deal with the south Piedmont problem."

Aides to the governor said Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson referred to the Dec. 18 commission meeting as a "crucifixion" of DOC officials.

The state is under a court order to spend $12.5 million to improve conditions — which includes giving prisoners more space and programs — as a result of a lawsuit filed by inmates in the southern Piedmont.

"I'm not sure yet we know what we got into," Harvey said of the consent decree.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE LAST OF THE JUDGES OF ISRAEL!

SAMUEL WAS THE LAST OF THE PROPHETS TO JUDGE ISRAEL. HE WAS ALSO THE EARLIEST OF THE GREAT HEBREW PROPHETS AFTER MOSES. HIS FATHER, ELKANAH, WAS A LEVITE, FAMILY OF KOHATH, WHO DWELLED IN THE HILL COUNTRY OF EPHRAIM BECAUSE THE FAMILY OF KOHATH HAD BEEN ASSIGNED RESIDENCE IN THAT TRIBE BY JOSHUA (JOSH. 21:5). ELKANAH LIVED IN RAMAH AND HAD TWO WIVES, BUT THE WIFE THAT HE LOVED, HANNAH, HAD NO SON AND SO SHE PRAYED EARNESTLY TO GOD THAT SHE MIGHT BEAR A SON, VOWING THAT IF THIS SHOULD HAPPEN, THE INFANT'S LIFE WOULD BE DEDICATED TO THE SERVICE OF GOD! TRUE TO HER VOW, WHEN THE INFANT SAMUEL WAS WEANED, HANNAH BROUGHT HIM TO THE TABERNACLE AT SHILO AND LEFT HIM IN THE CHARGE OF THE HIGH PRIEST ELI, THAT HE MIGHT BE TRAINED FOR HIS SACRED DUTIES. FROM THAT TIME ON, SAMUEL LIVED AT THE TABERNACLE, ASSISTING THE HIGH PRIEST IN HIS DUTIES --BY THE TIME SAMUEL WAS TWELVE, HE WAS ACCOMPLISHED IN ALL HIS DUTIES AND IT WAS AT ABOUT THAT AGE HE BEGAN HEARING THE VOICE OF GOD AT NIGHT SO THAT HE COULD TELL ALL THINGS TO ELI THAT GOD SPOKE UNTO SAMUEL (I SAM. 1-3)

AND SAMUEL TELLS ELI ALL THAT THE LORD HAS SPOKEN IN THE NIGHT!

... AND BECAUSE THOU HAST NOT RESTRAINED THY SONS FROM THEIR EVIL WAYS, THE LORD WILL END THE DAYS OF THY HOUSE WITH UTTER DESTRUCTION!

Spiritual World 'Is Real'

NEW YORK (AP) - Most modern thought assumes the world is a closed, natural system in which such things as heavenly appearances and voices simply don't happen. But private human experiences, rarely discussed, defy that blanket naturalistic view, researchers find. Both a new scientific national sampling and a concentrated study in an ordinary Midwestern town found that a big proportion of people report they've had strange experiences that don't square with assumed reality. The Rev. Ben Johnson, a St. Cloud, Minn., Lutheran minister with a Harvard doctorate, says his findings indicate the spiritual "world is real and inhabited by personalities." He told fellow academics at a recent meeting that such a thesis sounds "heretical" in an intellectual climate that almost universally assumes the "world view of the Bible is hopelessly outmoded." But he said an intensive survey in St. Cloud, with 2,000 responses, suggested "there indeed may exist a spiritual world, normally invisible to us, which may interpenetrate our space and manifest itself on occasion."

Since the church began June 1, 1980, there has been a wonderful spirit of worship and praise and a commitment to evangelize our city, county, state, nation and the world. We are endeavoring through our anointed church band, our ever growing children's ministry, our ECU campus ministry, our ministry to the elderly and the many other facets of outreach that our church has to minister to all areas of man. Come and see what God is doing at Faith and Victory Church where He is training and preparing believers to walk in Christian maturity to win the world for the Kingdom of God.

What Faith and Victory Church is...FAITH AND VICTORY CHURCH is...a Family Church, a Full-Gospel teaching center and a World-Outreach Center with a vision to reach our city, our community, our country and the world with the Gospel, "good news" of the Lord Jesus Christ.

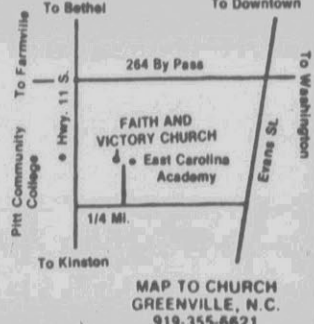

A family church...ministering the Word of God to couples, singles and providing specialized ministry for the children in the Nursery, Toddlers, Children's Church and Youth Services.

A Full-Gospel Teaching Center...teaches and believes in the gifts of the Spirit listed in 1 Cor. 12, and in the baptism in the Holy Ghost with the evidence of speaking in other tongues.

A World Outreach Center...preparing many for effective ministry, sending them forth through support and prayers, a launching pad for those who will evangelize the world.

KGB Fires Senior Official

L.A. Times-Washington Post

MOSCOW — In an extraordinary step, the KGB disclosed Thursday that one of its senior officers in the Ukraine had been fired for plotting to cover up the misdeeds of local party and government officials.

The admission of misconduct, written by KGB Chairman Viktor M. Chebrikov, was displayed on the front page of the newspaper Pravda, the main organ of the Communist Party Central Committee.

Publication of Chebrikov's words signaled that not even the once-sacrosanct Committee on State Security — the secret police, or KGB, its initials in Russian — is immune from criticism under the anti-corruption campaign of Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

It also fits in with Gorbachev's campaign of glasnost, or openness, which has resulted in the open discussion of problems that in the past were swept under the rug.

The KGB chairman's account involved the unjustified arrest and two-week detention of a Soviet journalist who had been exposing official wrongdoing in the Voroshilovgrad area of the Ukraine.

Chebrikov's disclosure that a local KGB man had been responsible for the journalist's treatment contrasted with past accounts of how it was often necessary to call in the KGB to deal with corruption when the local police failed to do the job.

Western diplomats said that officials of the feared KGB had not come under public criticism since the 1950s, when Lavrenti P. Beria was denounced, and later executed, for his terror tactics. The diplomats said that the self-criticism in Chebrikov's article was without precedent.

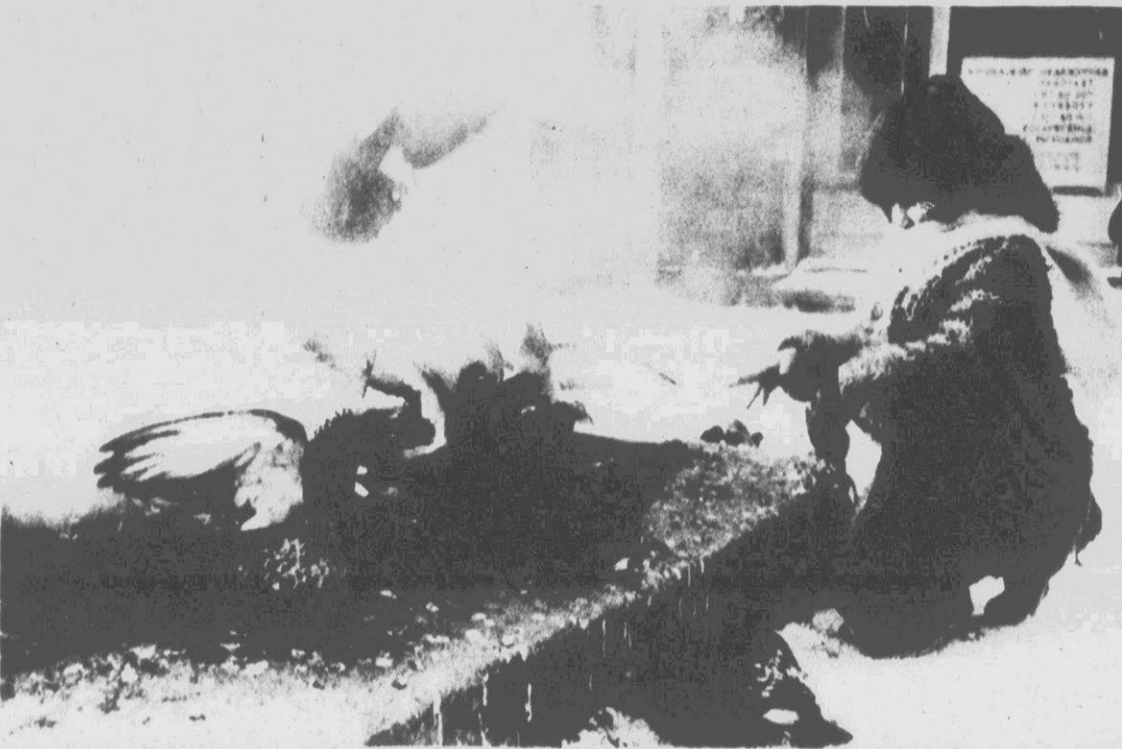

The KGB chief said in Pravda that officials of the Ukrainian division of the KGB committed "violations of socialist legality" by persecuting a journalist.

Chebrikov said that a KGB official, identified only as A. Dichenko, wrongfully directed the Voroshilovgrad police to arrest Viktor B. Berkhin, 56, the Donetsk bureau chief of the magazine Soviet Miner.

In an earlier story, Pravda had reported that Berkhin was seized by the police in Donetsk, subjected to a five-hour search of his apartment, taken to Voroshilovgrad at midnight and questioned until dawn on allegations of hooliganism — a standard Soviet legal charge that covers a multitude of anti-social acts.

The "laughable" charge against him, Pravda said, was that he appeared in a hotel corridor wearing only his undershirt. Pravda said that Berkhin had not been alone in exposing official corruption and that he was arrested and interrogated in an effort to elicit incriminating information about another writer, who worked for Pravda.

"It is evident," the paper said, "that too much dirt has accumulated under the carpet in Voroshilovgrad, and its guardians have become too energetic about keeping it there."

Papers Say Reagan Intended To Swap Arms For Hostages

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's assertions he did not swap arms for hostages, the administration dispatched weapons to Iran last year with the understanding that kidnapped Americans would be freed, according to published reports.

The arms shipments were approved by Reagan last January with the understanding that either all the hostages held by Shiite Moslem militants in Lebanon would be released or the U.S. arms shipments would be halted, NBC News said Thursday.

The reasoning on the arms shipments was contained in a background paper prepared for the president at the time he authorized the sales, The Washington Post and Los Angeles Times reported in today's editions. It appears Reagan was never given the paper, but was briefed on it orally, administration sources told the newspapers.

Citing an unpublished Senate Intelligence Committee staff report, NBC said CIA Director William Casey warned at one point that revelations of the Iranian arms sales could be very damaging and that if the sales were disclosed publicly they should be portrayed as a political attempt to reach out to moderates in Iran. As it turned out, that was the tact adopted by the administration.

The committee uncovered no evidence that Reagan knew about the alleged diversion of millions of dollars in profits from the Iranian arms sales to Nicaragua's Contra rebels, according to NBC.

The staff report only said Reagan appeared surprised when told money had been diverted to the Contras, NBC said.

But Casey, now suffering from the aftereffects of surgery to remove a cancerous brain tumor, did know about the diversion plan as early as Oct. 7, 1986, several days earlier than he has acknowledged, NBC said.

The report, based only on interviews conducted so far, included many elements of the controversy that previously had been revealed by individual legislators or in news reports. It contained no startling new revelations.

The network said the committee never learned how much — if any — money was actually diverted from the arms sales to the Contras or whether Lt. Col. Oliver North, the White House aide who was fired for his alleged involvement in the diversion, was acting alone or with orders from higher authority.

But the report portrayed North and former National Security Adviser Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter as ig-norning or misleading their White House superiors.

The intelligence panel could neither prove nor disprove whether Poindexter or North ever told the president the Contras were being supported with profits from Iran arms sales, according to NBC's account.

It said at a time when other officials were becoming skeptical of the sales, North argued to save the operation, contending that "if the program is terminated, then the hostages will die."

The report says Iranian arms broker Manucher Ghorbanifar suggested to his CIA contact in March 1986 that money from the arms sales be diverted to the Contras.

Soviet Says More Dialogue Wanted

LONDON (AP) — Moscow wants to continue the Soviet-American dialogue, provided it isn't "fruitless and inert," a leading Kremlin spokesman said today.

Leonid M. Zamyatin, Soviet ambassador to Britain and a member of the Communist Party Central Committee, commented at a news conference at which he also repeated arms control proposals presented at the Reykjavik superpower summit in October.

The summit collapsed when President Reagan refused to accept Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's demands for restrictions on Washington's proposed "Star Wars" space-based defense system.

Asked if the Soviet Union favored a new summit, Zamyatin said: "The Soviet Union is in favor of the continuation of the Soviet-American political dialogue. ... Our contacts, however, should not be fruitless and inert. We believe they should acquire real dynamism... become real talks on reducing nuclear arms and prevention of an arms race in outer space."

Colleges Offer International View

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lonnie Saunders of Buena Vista College in Storm Lake, Iowa, spent five months working in the Republic of China in the president's office of the National Institute of Technology.

Daria Zelenko, a double major in international business and Eastern European history at Rosary College in River Forest, Ill., did research in England on the Ukrainian community in London since World War II.

Scott Henry, a student at Hanover College in Hanover, Ind., wanted to discover first-hand the impact of the Roman Wall on Britain. He traveled to England, walked the length of the wall, and visited museums containing artifacts from the historic structure.

Across the country small independent colleges such as these are offering their students more and more opportunities to experience life and culture in other countries, learn foreign languages, and become informed world citizens.

"The trend among colleges to bring an understanding of the global village onto their campus and into their curricula is one of the most vital in this decade," says Allen P. Splete, president of the Council of Independent Colleges.

"Small liberal arts colleges are particularly responsive to the need to improve international understanding and prepare people to cope in this shrinking world and global economy."

Earlham College in Richmond,

Ind., is a prototype internationalized campus, established in 1854 by the Quakers. Two-thirds of the Earlham faculty have led the school's study-abroad programs in 20 countries, from Japan to Mexico to Israel to Kenya.

For more than 20 years, Central College in Pella, Iowa, has offered organized living and study overseas to its own students, as well as those from other independent colleges. Recently, students from colleges in 35 states were involved in Central's international study program.

Central offers four English language programs, in London, Wales, Mexico and the Netherlands. There is also a special program in Soviet Studies, with opportunity for guided exploration of cultural institutions in the Soviet Union. Other programs are offered at the Sorbonne in Paris, the University of Vienna and two cities in Spain.

Rockford College in Rockford, Ill., has established a British-American center in London. Sophomores, juniors and seniors from any U.S. college may live and study for a semester or a year at Rockford's Regent's College. The program will be extended to freshmen in the fall of 1987.

Beaver College in Glenside, Pa., has programs in Bristol, Guilford, London, Lancaster and Cheltenham, with a variety of fields to choose from. Marymount College in Tarrytown, N.Y., offers internships and studies at Brighton, Canterbury, Colchester, Lancaster, London and York.

While England is the most popular country for study abroad, the Far East is the fastest growing. Goshen College in Goshen, Ind., has an undergraduate exchange program with the People's Republic of China. Since the program's inception in 1980, more than 100 Goshen students have gone to China and nine Chinese teachers of English have studied at Goshen.

The China program is part of Goshen's international education requirement whereby students must either take international classes on campus or spend 14 weeks abroad in a developing or significantly different country. The study abroad includes seven weeks of language, history and culture classes in the host country, as well as seven weeks of unpaid work in community development.

At Nebraska Wesleyan University in Lincoln, Neb., a new major in global studies was established in 1985. Franklin & Marshall College in Lancaster, Pa., has a Center for Asian, African and Latin American Studies.

Taking a slightly different approach, Concordia College in Moorhead, Minn., operates highly successful Languages Villages, to immerse students in the study of foreign languages.

The Brethren Colleges Abroad, with headquarters at Manchester College in North Manchester, Ind., recently expanded beyond four European study abroad locations into mainland China.

"Courses on American and British history and culture are taught by Chinese instructors in English, thereby offering a different perspective of the two countries' histories," says Dr. Allen Deeter, BCA coordinator and Manchester College professor.

The BCA, a consortium of six colleges, includes Bridgewater College in Bridgewater, Va., Juniata College in Huntingdon, Pa., Elizabethtown College in Elizabethtown, Pa., McPherson College in McPherson, Kan., and the University of LaVerne in LaVerne, Calif.

"Study abroad is only one facet of an internationalized campus," says Sheila Johnston, director of international programs at Eckerd College in St. Petersburg, Fla. Eckerd, which has been committed since its opening in 1960 to innovative programs in international education, offers students study abroad opportunities in London, Florence, France, Spain, Germany and Japan.

Says Charles Walker, president of Linfield College in McMinnville, Ore., "One of the primary missions of the college is to develop among its undergraduates an international perspective based on competency in foreign languages, encounters with other cultures and knowledge of world issues."

Linfield offers a comprehensive program that integrates several study abroad programs with courses on the home campus.

Programs Help Drug Culture

By HANK LOWENKRON
Associated Press Writer

"Skills for Adolescence" is one name, "Project Impact" is another and "Chemical People" is a third. All three, along with others having various names, share the common goal of helping Indiana families face what has been called the national epidemic of drug and alcohol abuse.

The Lions Quest Skills for Adolescence drug awareness program has been developed by the Chicago-based Lions Clubs International organization. Lions clubs throughout the United States and Canada are sponsoring and funding it.

"We've got well over 125 school districts participating in all areas of Indiana," said Lions' spokesman Pat Cannon.

The program was implemented in 1985 and developed by educators, school administrators and drug abuse experts.

"One of the reasons the program has been so successful is that it deals with the causes leading to experimentation with drugs and alcohol," said John Stewart, manager of international activities and program development division of the Lions.

The Fort Wayne Community Schools have made the 12-week Skills for Adolescence class mandatory for all sixth- and seventh-graders.

"This program teaches them to make wise choices, how to avoid peer pressure that would lead them to try drugs and how to avoid those areas that might hinder their education," said Dr. Hans Sheridan, an assistant to the director of secondary education in Fort Wayne.

Students Against Drunk Driving organizations are also operating in Indiana.

"We have SADD chapters that are very active in our schools," Sheridan said. "This has created some controversy in that they don't have an anti-drinking policy, just one that you don't drink if you drive. The program, however, can save lives and we feel it is therefore beneficial even if it keeps just one person from being hurt by a drunken driver."

Highland superintendent Philip Cartwright said his school system had created the Project Impact program.

"In Project Impact, personnel from Our Lady of Mercy Hospital train school faculty and administrators and tell parents what signs of drug use to look for and the treatment available," Cartwright said. "We're trying to build an ongoing core of parents whom other parents can talk to and get advice."

Chemical People operates in Vanderburgh County, but also serves its neighboring communities.

"We are a prevention group," says Nancy Bizal, who coordinates the effort that began in 1983 by serving Evansville high schools and is now expanding into the middle schools.

"We're trying to reach kids who are not involved in drugs, or at least are at the novice level of use," she says.

"We bring speakers to the schools to educate the children, we try to point out the dangers of chemical use and direct those involved to resources where they can find help," Mrs. Bizal said. "We are also promoting parent networks to improve parenting skills that can be used to combat the problems."

"We want our parents to realize that they aren't in isolation, that they share common situations and that they can help their children by working together," she adds.

The Chemical People, which operates with an annual budget of $30,000 thanks to hundreds of volunteer hours, conducts activities throughout the year.

"One of our goals is to provide happy alternatives year-round for area students. We receive wonderful corporate and individual help, both financially and manpower-wise," Mrs. Bizal said.

One reason the program is successful, she believes, is that it includes a large steering committee of students.

A major year-end activity is "Project Graduation."

"There is no 'quick-fix' for school-aged drug and alcohol abuse. Together we can make a difference," says an information sheet on the project, which marks the end of a school year where students have been provided with an alternative to "entertainment based on the consumption of drugs."

Government, wholesale/retail and manufacturing each account for 25 percent of total employment in Pitt County.

Majolica Pottery Remains Popular

COUNTRY HOME
A Meredith Magazine

Shiny begonia leaves the size of dinner plates, a lettuce leaf cupped for tea, cauliflower heads full of cream soup. Are these figments of a Lewis Carroll fantasy?

Exotic majolica pottery would have been the perfect crockery for the Mad Hatter's tea party. But, according to Country Home magazine, during the late 1800s, this earthenware was more apt to be found on the tables of ordinary Americans and the English than down the depths of a rabbit hole.

From flowering sugar bowls and seaweed-draped oyster plates to fern-wrapped dessert plates and shell-topped terrines, majolica's imitative designs inspired by nature struck the fancy of folks on both sides of the Atlantic. Plates and bowls unfurled glossy petals, while pitchers bulged like ripe ears of corn. Fish swam across platters, teapots masqueraded as just-picked pineapples, and birds perched on vases as gnarled as tree trunks.

Majolica came by its name somewhat circuitously. It was a christening that proved to be a masterful piece of 1800s salesmanship.

At London's Crystal Palace Exhibition of 1851, Minton & Company, a Staffordshire pottery renowned for its porcelain and parian pieces, introduced a new line of earthenware. They called the colorful pieces majolica-like wares, after the famous majolica pottery Italy had produced for centuries. Though Minton's first pieces may have resembled the antique Italian wares, English majolica diverged from the Italian pottery in both form and coloring.

Renaissance majolica was completely covered with an opaque white glaze, says Country Home, but the lead glazes on 19th-century majolica were usually brightly colored and almost transparent. The Italian majolica pieces were molded into classic shapes, and pictorial motifs were drawn on their smooth white surfaces. Victorian pieces were highly molded, naturalistic forms. Their glazes were splashed on like watercolors in bright patches. The earlier glazes stayed inside fine lines, exactly where they were put, but 19th-century majolica's glazes ran together, bathing pieces in color.

The earthenware that took Victorian England by storm bore little physical resemblance to its namesake. Yet, because of its name association with Renaissance-era majolica, an aura of antiquity and romance clung to the new pottery.

In actuality, Victorian majolica owed more to men like Frenchman

Bernard Palissy than to early Italian craftsmen. Palissy, who lived during the 1500s, was known for his naturalistic ceramic articles. He supposedly made casts of objects such as shells, plants, and reptiles to add realism to his work. Palissy also developed a transparent lead glaze similar to that used later on majolica. So poor was the man that it's reported he once kept his kiln hot by burning household items.

English potter Josiah Wedgwood experimented with glazes during the 1700s. He perfected a transparent green glaze used, along with other glaze colors, on majolica made in the 1800s. Wedgwood, as well as his competitors at the Whieldon pottery, made pieces modeled after natural objects, such as pineapples and cauliflowers. These early porcelains were harbingers of the exotic things to come.

Adjust To Rude Office Situation

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am an executive secretary for a department head of an oil company. Two years ago, when I started working for "Mr. Jones," I asked him how he preferred to be addressed because I have had bosses who preferred to be addressed by their first names. He said his preference was "Mr. Jones." I had no problem with that as I am from the generation of secretaries who are accustomed to more formality in the office than is now generally the custom.

My problem is with the boss's wife — who until two weeks ago I had never met personally. (We still have not been formally introduced.) When calling the office, she would always say, "Mary, this is Mrs. Jones. Is Mr. Jones there?"

Two weeks ago my boss returned from lunch. His wife was with him. They both passed my desk on their way to his office. She said, "Hello," but he didn't introduce us. I was immediately called in for dictation. They both sat there. (Still no inroduction.) When she left his office, she acknowledged me with a nod.

When she phones the office, she continues to call me "Mary," while referring to herself as "Mrs. Jones." How can I deal with this on a daily basis? I've checked out volumes of etiquette books from the library and none addresses this issue. — STEAMING IN TEXAS

DEAR STEAMING: Your boss is insensitive and rude, and so is his wife. Common sense and sensitivity are not to be found in any etiquette book. If you like your job, and the benefits outweigh the drawbacks, adjust to the situation. Don't complain to your boss. It would only cause problems for yourself.

DEAR ABBY: Here's a good one to add to your comments about smoking: Quitting the smoking habit is the easiest thing in the world. I should know; I've done it 100 times. — OLD SMOKEY

DEAR OLD SMOKEY: The only way to quit smoking is to simply quit smoking — no ifs, ands or butts. (EDITH ZITTLER)

Eakin Appointed

Kinsey told the Board of Governors the search for a chancellor "may very well be the longest search in the history of the university." He said the process began in the fall of 1985 when university officials began soliciting suggestions for criteria for the post.

After the hunt for a new chancellor began earlier in 1986, the search committee received 186 applications and nominations for the job and reviewed 129 resumes.

The committee interviewed 20 candidates before Eakin and O'Brien were invited to visit the ECU campus in November.

Then in early December, according to sources — during an executive session to discuss personnel matters — the ECU board nominated Eakin and O'Brien as the two top candidates for the post.

As with the selection of chancellors for all the 16 campuses of the UNC system, search committees recommend candidates to the schools' board of trustees. The board then submits two or more names to the president of the UNC system. The UNC president makes his selection and submits the candidate to the Board of Governors for election.

Eakin, is a native of New Castle, Pa. He received a bachelor's degree in math and physics from Geneva College in 1960, a master's from Washington State University in 1962 and earned his doctorate in math from WSU in 1964.

He began his career at Bowling Green as an assistant professor in 1964, became an associate professor in 1968, was named assistant dean of the graduate school and director of graduate admissions in 1969, and became associate dean in July 1972.

In August of that year Eakin was named vice provost for student affairs and in 1979 became vice provost for institutional planning and student affairs at Bowling Green. He was named executive vice provost for planning and budgeting in 1980 and became vice president for planning and budgeting in June 1983.

Eakin, and his wife, Jo Ann, have a son, Matthew, 18, and a daughter, Maridy, 16.

Bowling Green, located in Bowling Green, Ohio, is a state-supported school with an enrollment of more than 17,000 students.

Meanwhile, the council approved an amendment to the refuse fee ordinance to change the method of billing for apartment dwellers and condominium owners.

"Multifamily developments, apartment units, townhouses, condominiums groups of duplex units with single ownership will be billed by the container rather than on a per unit basis," City Manager Gail Meeks said.

Unoccupied residential dwellings, and businesses that haul their own trash, contract their trash out or generate no trash will be exempt from the refuse fee, according to Ms. Meeks, who said the burden of proof that a structure should be exempt is on the owner.

The revisions will take effect on Feb. 1, Ms. Meeks said.

1987," Ms. Meeks said in a memo to the City Council. "This will allow sufficient time for businesses and multifamily dwelling residents to apply for exemptions."

The council amended personnel policies to rescind the section of the ordinance dealing with mandatory retirement and to include an improved life insurance policy approved by the council in November.

J.R. Reid Sparks Tar Heels To 98-65 Win Over Terps

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer
CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina freshman J.R. Reid projected two images after the third-ranked Tar Heels took a 98-65 victory over Maryland.

The first image was that viewed by Terrapin coach Bob Wade, a crowd of 20,800 in the Smith Center and a television audience. The 6-foot-10 Reid muscled in 19 points, grabbed six rebounds and had two steals as the Tar Heels climbed to 12-1 in their Atlantic Coast Conference opener.

"Reid has great hands and runs the floor well and he also has a nice assortment of shots," Wade said.

That perception was different from the image seen by North Carolina coach Dean Smith, who has commented often this season on Reid's struggle to improve his defensive skills. Maryland's Derrick Lewis scored 16 points, and he did much of his early scoring against Reid.

"I was happy with (Dave) Popson's defense on Lewis when he had him," Smith said of the senior forward. "Lewis hurt Reid early in our man-to-man, but Popson did a great job on him."

Smith did not leave Reid's offensive performance unrecognized, however.

"... J.R. did some good things offensively."

The entire Tar Heel offense was slow to get started, scoring nine points in the first nine minutes because of Maryland's aggressive man-to-man defense. From a 7-2 deficit, the Terrapins tied the score at 9-9 on Dave Dickerson's tap-in at 13:26.

That tip-in was part of an eight-point run which led Maryland to a 13-9 edge at the 11:49 mark.

Reid, a sophomore starting in the place of injured senior center Joe Wolf, then led a Tar Heel comeback in which he scored on a dunk and added a three-point play at the 8:58 mark to give North Carolina a 14-13 lead.

Lewis' layup at 8:27 gave Maryland a brief lead but Reid scored on a layup. Jeff Lebo added a three-point basket and a layup and Ranzino Smith scored on a breakaway to give North Carolina a 23-15 edge.

Wade said the North Carolina comeback was hinged on the loss of Dickerson, a forward who picked up his third personal foul before the Lewis basket.

"The turning point in the game is when he was sent to the bench," Wade said. "Again, I'm still trying to find that foul."

North Carolina pushed ahead, forcing 13 first-half turnovers en route to a 44-25 halftime lead. Late in the second half, the edge grew to 98-61 after a basket by reserve Michael Norwood with 1:35 left.

Kenny Smith added 18 points, including four of seven three-point baskets. Lebo added 14 and Curtis Hunter scored 10 as the Tar Heels won their 10th straight game.

Steve Hood scored 15 and John Johnson added 13 as the Terrapins fell to 3-3 and 0-2 in the ACC.

Lady Pirates Have Little Trouble In 84-41 Victory

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor
When it was finally over, the scoreboard read: East Carolina 84, North Carolina A&T 41.

But the score was deceiving — it wasn't really that close!

East Carolina's Lady Pirates ran their record to 8-3 with the romp over the Aggies Thursday night in a game that was a laugher from the opening tipoff.

A&T, unable to keep pace with the Lady Pirates, saw ECU take the lead on a Delphine Mabry free throw 10 seconds into the contest. Pam Williams followed with a jumper a minute later and Alma Bethea scored a layup at the 17:26 mark. Mabry added a short jumper at 16:56 before Diedra Cheeks finally got on the scoreboard for the Aggies.

Her free throw, which came with 16:39 left, made it 7-1. At that point, A&T had gotten off only one shot from the field.

East Carolina went on to score the next 14 points, four each by Monique Pompili and Betha, making it 21-1 with 12:33 to go.

Finally, after only five missed tries, A&T connected from the field as Shelia Rivers hit on an 11-footer with exactly 12:00 showing.

A&T then hit its next two shots to cut the lead to 21-5 before East Carolina pulled away again, scoring another 10 in a row.

And from there on out, it was only a question of what the margin would be.

The 31-5 edge — a 26-point spread — was the largest of the half, and the Lady Pirates led by 38-19 at intermission.

A&T cut it back to as little as 13 in the early minutes of the second half before the Lady Pirates went on another tear and scored 17 unanswered points over a three-minute period. With the score 38-25 with 18:34 to go, the string started on a Pompili layup. The string ended at 15:01 on a three-point play by Mabry that made it 55-25, a 30-point bulge for the Pirates. Mabry had another three-pointer in that stretch, while Williams also added one.

With 5:35 left, Bethea hit a short jumper to put ECU into a 74-33 lead and it reached as much as 45 points before it finally ended.

Coach Emily Manwaring made frequent use of her bench throughout the game. Only two starters played over 20 minutes — one going just 21 minutes.

Mabry led the ECU scoring with 15 points while Bethea had 13 and Pompili had 12. Sarah Gray came off the bench to add 11 points and also pull a game-high 11 rebounds.

Sharon Pratt and Yvette Estep each scored 14 points to pace A&T.

Overall, ECU outrebounded the Aggies, 54-34, forced 31 turnovers while committing 21. ECU was credited with 15 steals among the turnovers, led by five by Mabry and four by Rose Miller.

"I was impressed with the game played by Sarah Gray," Manwaring said. "She was playing a little on the outside, but she took the ball inside well. She is still having problems with her thumbs in catching the ball (broken thumb early in the season). I would still like to light a fire under her."

Manwaring said she had expected more from A&T. "I thought they would come in and run the ball up and down the court, press and be generally more aggressive than they were. But then, after it got started, I began to wonder if we might not set a record for a low score."

The Lady Pirates were playing without three of their reserves. Tammie Laney is apparently out for the season with a stress fracture while Jody Rodriguez missed the game with an illness.

Irish Hamilton was dressed but did not play due to a knee injury. "She probably could have played had we needed her, but it gave us a chance to rest her for the road trip. I just hope she'll be ready for that."

Manwaring also praised the play of Sharon Bond in reserve. "She came off the bench and gave us a spark. Even though she gets a little out of control, we needed her tonight with only three guards available."

Manwaring said that despite the fact that the game was a pushover, it was good for the team morale. "We got everyone in for quite a bit of playing time, and that makes everyone happy. It was fun for everyone to get to play just before a hard road trip."

That road trip will begin Saturday when the Pirates travel to Virginia to take on the University of Richmond. Then, on Monday, they move on to Williamsburg to meet William & Mary. Both games are Colonial Athletic Association contests.

North Carolina A&T falls to 2-7 with the loss.

Pirates Hosting Giant-Killer Spiders; Indians Here Monday

East Carolina University's Pirates, after snapping a three-game losing streak Wednesday over Longwood, will try to win their first Colonial Athletic Association basketball game of the season Saturday night when they entertain the University of Richmond.

The game is the first of three straight CAA home games for the Pirates, who host William & Mary on Monday and UNC-Wilmington on Jan. 17.

All three games are scheduled for a 7:30 p.m. tipoff in Minges Coliseum.

Meanwhile, ECU's Lady Pirates will be on the road seeking to hold on to at least a share of first place in the conference standings. Following their 84-41 non-conference win over North Carolina A&T Thursday night, the Lady Pirates take to the road for games at Richmond Saturday and at William & Mary on Sunday.

The ECU men come into the Richmond game with a 7-5 record overall while they are 0-2 in conference standings. The Spiders, following a 64-62 upset over the Naval Academy in Annapolis Thursday, are 6-5, 2-0 in the CAA, atop the league standings.

William & Mary is now 3-7 overall and 0-1 in the conference with a Saturday night game at UNC-Wilmington prior to facing the Pirates.

Richmond defeated the Pirates in both of their meetings last season, taking a 60-52 win in Richmond and downing the Bucs, 71-52, in Minges. The Spiders have won the last six games between the two teams.

In contrast, ECU downed William & Mary in both games last season, winning 42-52 in Williamsburg on a tip-in by Curt Vanderhorst at the buzzer, and by 52-47 in Minges.

Ironically, both Richmond and William & Mary hold a 28-20 lead in the series between the two teams.

The Spiders are led by 6-5 junior forward Peter Woolfolk and 6-3 junior guard Rodney Rice, each scoring 13.8 points a game while 6-8 junior center Steve Kratzer has an 11.7 mark. Rounding out the starters are 6-2 sophomore forward Eric English at 3.2 ppg and 6-0 freshman guard Ken Atkinson, 5.0 ppg.

Atkinson hit a three-pointer at the end of regulation play on Tuesday night to force what became a three-overtime game against Fairfield, won by Richmond, 91-87.

Woolfolk is the leading rebounder with a 7.9 average, while Kratzer is pulling 6.0 per game.

Mart Batzel, a 6-7 junior forward, leads the Indians in both scoring and rebounding with 13.6 and 6.6 averages, respectively. His usual front court mate, Tim Trout, a 6-7 junior, is currently sidelined with an ankle injury, and Tom Bock, a 6-7 junior, averaging 9.2 points per game, is expected to start for him. Mark Boddy, a 6-10 sophomore, averaging 5.2 ppg, will start at center, while the guards will be Scott Trimble, a 6-2 senior, 11.0 ppg, and Curtis Price, a 6-0 freshman, hitting 4.3 ppg.

The Lady Pirates, in facing Richmond, will be seeking to continue an unbeaten string against the Lady Spiders. ECU has won all six games between the two schools including 67-33 and 67-59 decisions last year.

The Lady Spiders are led by 6-2 junior center Laurie Governor, who averaged 17.2 points per game and 8.4 rebounds. Other starters include 5-6 freshman guard Pam Bryant, 9.4 ppg; 5-4 senior guard Peggy Fitzsimons, 9.7 ppg; 5-10 sophomore Beth Babbit, 7.2 ppg; and 5-11 freshman forward Beth Spence, 7.6 ppg.

The Lady Spiders are currently 5-6 on the year, 0-1 in the league, having lost to William & Mary, 58-56.

William & Mary's women, who host UNC-Wilmington on Saturday, are 3-7 overall and 1-0 in the league. They are led by 5-11 senior forward Karen Jordan, averaging 14.2 points and 8.3 rebounds. Junior center Beth Hairfield, 6-1, also is in double figures in scoring with an 11.4 average. She also pulls 7.9 rebounds a game. Rounding out the forefront is 5-11 junior forward Debbie Wade, scoring 8.3 ppg and pulling 6.5 ppg.

The guards will be 5-8 junior Fonda Gray, 7.2 ppg, and 5-4 senior Lisa Koehl, 2.2 ppg.

Athletic Grants Cut By NCAA

SAN DIEGO (AP) — One day after calling a special convention to examine cost-cutting measures, the Presidents Commission got a message that other interested parties wanted a voice in the future of college athletics.

A number of cut-back measures which the Presidents Commission wanted withdrawn were instead acted upon during Thursday's opening business session of the NCAA Convention.

But the very thing the presidents say they want done in the June meeting — cutbacks — were delivered by convention delegates, who moved to place reductions on college football and basketball.

"I think it sends a message that there is a great deal of strength in what the Presidents Commission plans to do in June ... that we are ready to make appropriate cuts in costs," NCAA President Jack Davis said.

Delegates banned boosters from any participation in recruiting and cut football scholarship limits from 30 per year to 25. Later, Division I schools voted to reduce from 15 to 13 the maximum number of scholarships in men's and women's basketball.

In a further reduction in basketball, Division I schools voted to limit to two the number of volunteer and/or graduate assistant coaches.

"I think this sends a message to the presidents," Georgia Tech Athletic Director Homer Rice said. "They need to listen to us, the athletic directors, before they set up the agenda for the special convention."

Davis was most pleased with the convention's vote to eliminate boosters from recruiting.

"It's an attempt by the major conferences to avoid some of the abuses that have occurred in recruiting," he said. "It sends a message out to most institutions or booster clubs or alumni associations that they should stay out of recruiting and leave it up to the professionals."

The measure to ban boosters entirely from the recruiting process was passed virtually without opposition. The legislation bans supporters of college athletic teams from even telephoning or writing to a high school prospect beginning Aug. 1, 1987.

"It will enable us to tell our recruiting interests they can do absolutely nothing," Georgia football Coach Vince Dooley said of the new rule.

Actions by over-zealous boosters in bestowing gifts and cash as a way of luring top prospects have resulted in several schools being placed on probation by the NCAA.

The NCAA delegates dealt with a full agenda Thursday and were hoping to conclude all their business late this afternoon.

In another major action, Division II schools voted 93-70 to adopt the same freshman academic requirements under Proposition 48 that Division I schools put into effect last August. After much debate, an amendment was defeated to remove the rule's most controversial component, standardized test scores.

In order to be eligible to practice or play Division II sports, freshmen will have to have a core curriculum of college preparatory courses, a 2.00 high school grade point and minimum scores on the ACT and SAT college entrance exams.

Black educators have charged the tests are racially biased.

The new rules take effect Aug. 1, 1988.

Thursday's move to gain inclusion into deciding what the Presidents Commission plans to act upon in June coincides with a plan that would allow for just such outside input that began in October.

Davis said a process has been in the works that would give "the Coaches Associations and the Athletic Directors Association will have direct input into the process of developing legislation."

But the athletic directors, led by Rice, challenged the move to withdraw on the first item, the football scholarship cuts. Significantly, it was the first time the powerful Presidents Commission has failed to have its way on policy or convention items since being created in 1984.

By a vote of 51-40, delegates from the major football powers decided not to withdraw. They then proceeded to approve the measure, which goes into effect Aug. 1, 1988. The full squad limit of 95 scholarships remains.

"We had heard that they wanted to cut total scholarships back to 80, and we're talking about 80 scholarships and making freshmen ineligible," said Texas' DeLoss Dodds, another leader of the athletic directors. "Then what would you have? That would hurt college football."

A measure dealing with football coaching staff limits was withdrawn.

Rice said it was "not necessarily" correct to assume that every athletic director who challenged the presidents had the support of his own chief executive officer. Presidents have the final word on how their schools will vote. But not all presidents attend the conventions.

'Skins, Giants Do It Again

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The first time the New York Giants played the Washington Redskins this season, they allowed Jay Schroeder to throw for 420 yards. But Joe Morris ran for 181 yards and the Giants won, 27-20.

The second time, in Washington, the Redskins held Morris to 62 yards. But the Giants intercepted Schroeder six times, Phil Simms threw three touchdown passes and New York won again, 24-14.

Whatever the Giants do or don't do, they seem to be able to beat the Redskins. Particularly at Giants Stadium, where New York has won three straight.

"It's a double-edged sword. They can kill you with either the run or the pass," acknowledges Washington Coach Joe Gibbs, whose team is a one-touchdown underdog when it meets New York Sunday for the NFC championship at Giants Stadium.

"You stop them one place and they kill you somewhere else. The reason they're so good is because they're balanced."

The first Giants-Redskins game this season was played in a surreal atmosphere — on Monday night, Oct. 27, while the Game 7 of the World Series was being played 15 miles due east at Shea Stadium in Queens.

There were only 900 no-shows among 76,800 Giants season-ticket holders, but it was the lowest-rated game in "Monday Night Football" history and the attention of the fans was equally divided between the field and the thousands of portable television sets and radios in the stands.

"I never saw so many antennas in my life," Simms said afterwards.

For a while, it looked like an easy victory for New York. The Giants took a 10-0 lead and Washington lost its only chance for a touchdown when Don Warren jumped offside at the 1-yard line when the snap count was obscured by the crowd cheering a base hit by the Mets.

By midway through the third quarter, the Giants had a 20-3 lead. But suddenly New York defensive backs began missing assignments. "We blew more plays in that game than we had all season," defensive backfield coach Len Fontes said.

A 76-yard completion from Schroeder to Ricky Sanders set up one touchdown. Schroeder threw to an uncovered Gary Clark for another and finally went deep to Art Monk to set up Max Zendejas' game-tying 29-yard field goal with 4:06 left.

But the Giants began giving the ball to Morris again. Zip, 10 yards left; zap, another eight yards to the right. With 1:49 left, it was third-and-1 at the Washington 13, when the 5-foot-7 running back scooted right, cut back inside blocks by fullback Maurice Carthon and guard Chris Godfrey and tiptoed along the sideline into the end zone.

Giants 27, Redskins 20.

The second game was as easy for the Giants as the first appeared to be.

The Redskins geared for Morris, so the Giants took the opening kickoff and threw to Mark Bavaro for 41 yards on the first play and to Bavaro for 15 more on the second. That drive ended in an interception by speedy Darrell Green but Simms' passing had set the tone.

Simms threw nine yards to Bavaro for a touchdown early in the second period and the Redskins countered on Kelvin Bryant's 4-yard run with 1:53 left in the half, a score set up by a 53-yard pass from Schroeder to Clark that represented Washington's only long completion of the game.

But the Giants then drove 80 yards in a perfect two-minute drill, highlighted by a 34-yard third-down completion from Simms to Bobby Johnson and capped by a 7-yard Simms-Johnson touchdown pass.

Raul Allegre's 21-yard field goal made it 17-7 in the third quarter and two plays later, Harry Carson intercepted a Schroeder pass to set up Simms' 16-yard touchdown connection to Phil McConkey.

So what can the Redskins do this time? They profess to be in a quandary.

"Their balanced offense is the thing that got them over the top," linebacker Rich Milot said. "Their offense doesn't get enough credit because the defense plays so well."

"I'm not sure what we can do," says Gibbs, pointing to the Giants' 49-3 demolition of San Francisco last Sunday. "I'm not blowing any smoke. I'm telling the truth. You see a team like the 49ers whom I have tremendous respect for and they just take them apart."

All of which brings a smile to the face of New York Coach Bill Parcells.

"Hey, this is a great team we're playing. I thought they'd be here all along," he says. "Whatever happened before has no bearing on this. It's just one game and we start even."

Driesell Keeps Low Profile In New Maryland Position

COLLEGE PARK, Md. (AP) — Lefty Driesell is not out of sight, just out of character.

The once colorful basketball coach, whose flair and spontaneity once demanded attention, has assumed a low profile in his new job as an assistant athletic director at the University of Maryland.

Driesell still has an office in Cole Field House, where he coached the Terps for 17 years before resigning under fire in late October. But he comes and goes quietly, and studiously avoids public comment about his former team.

"I have not seen them play or practice," Driesell said Thursday. "I might go to a game before the season is over, but right now I don't want to interfere. It's not my team. It might be best that I stay away for awhile."

Driesell originally was provided tickets in the main seating area of the field house, and he certainly would have caused an uproar had he sat near students who, in the main, opposed his ouster.

His seat location has since been changed to a box high above the court, but Driesell still thinks it best that he stay away from games, at least for the time being.

Although he has always been free with his opinions, Driesell flatly refuses to discuss Maryland's 3-3 start under his replacement, Bob Wade.

"I'd rather not get into that," he said. "Whatever I say might be misconstrued."

Driesell's forced resignation came in the wake of the campus turmoil which followed the cocaine-induced death of Maryland basketball All-American Len Bias on June 19.

He stepped aside rather than submit to an evaluation period suggested by the university after in-house investigators and a county grand jury were critical of drug problems and academic shortcomings in the basketball program.

The appointment of Wade, a successful high school coach in Baltimore, was criticized by some Maryland supporters. But not by Driesell, who made the jump from high school to Davidson while launching his own collegiate career.

"I don't think that should be a problem for him," Driesell said Thursday, "although I'm pretty sure no one has ever come right into the Atlantic Coast Conference from high school."

In answer to a question, Driesell said Wade's biggest adjustments would be "recruiting and competing against better athletes and coaches. It's a step up, and more competitive."

Driesell said Wade did not contact him to discuss the players he recruited, but noted assistant coaches Ron Bradley and Oliver Purnell had been retained and could supply any information needed.

The Terps lost seven players from last year through completed eligibility or suspensions, and opened the season with seven freshmen — two of them walk-ons.

They are led by Derrick Lewis, a 6-foot-7 forward playing out of position at center for the third year, and the lone returning junior.

"Derrick might be one of the two best centers in the ACC," Driesell said. "He is certainly the best shot-blocking center in the league."

Driesell had high praise for sophomore John Johnson and freshman Teyon McCoy, both guards, and forecast that freshman forward Steve Hood could develop into an All-ACC choice.

"The players still drop by to see me, or give me a call," Driesell said. "We shoot the breeze, and I ask them how practice is going and about their grades. I wish them well, of course. Do they miss me? You'll have to ask them."

Besides being involved in fund raising for the university, Driesell has been promoting a summer basketball camp which the university has allowed him to continue at its on-campus site.

Driesell is also a budding television basketball analyst, due to make his "live" debut Saturday night in a game between American University and George Mason.

None of the live telecasts involve the Terps, but that's the producer's choice. Driesell, who has vowed never to criticize any coaching decisions on the air, said he wouldn't object to doing color on Maryland games.

"I thought I was OK," Driesell said of his first test, "but I've got a lot of work to do. I'm anxious to hear what the television people think."

Jr. High Basketball

Greenville Christian Academy took a pair of junior high school basketball games from Cornerstone Christian Thursday.

GCA won the girls' game, 29-10. Stephanie Parker led Greenville with eight points while Annette Fuller had seven to pace Cornerstone.

In the boys' game, GCA took a 40-20 win. Jimmy Lee led GCA with 12 while Howard Collier had five for Cornerstone.

GCA's next outing will be Jan. 19 against Chocowinity.

Ayden-Woodington
KINSTON — Ayden Middle School swept a pair of basketball games from Woodington Middle School Thursday.

Ayden's boys rolled up a 47-36 win. Robert Dixon led Ayden with 18 points while Danny Gardner added 10. Patrick Howell paced Woodington with 14 while Jenkins hit 11.

In the girls' game, Ayden romped to a 43-8 victory. Denise Allen and Tammy Hunter paced Ayden with 10 each.

Play will continue in the double elimination tournament on Saturday and Sunday.

Yanks Ink John

NEW YORK (AP) — Tommy John, a left-handed pitcher who had become a free agent, has returned to the New York Yankees, signing a one-year guaranteed contract Thursday.

Should John, who will be 44 when the season starts, not make the Yankee staff, he would remain with the American League club in a front office administrative capacity with additional duties as a roving instructor working with minor pitchers and pitching coaches, according to Woody Woodward, Yankee vice president and general manager.

"I'm looking forward to spring training and the chance to earn a position on the Yankee staff," said John, who posted a 5-3 record with a 2.93 earned run average with New York in 1986.

John's record in a 24-year major league career with Cleveland, the Chicago White Sox, Los Angeles Dodgers, California, Oakland and the Yankees is 264-210, with a 3.23 ERA.

"His performance with the team last year certainly has earned him another opportunity this season to pitch for the club, and if he is unable to do so, he certainly has the background and the expertise to contribute to the organization in a front office role," Woodward said.

Trinity Opens With Two Wins

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Trinity Christian School of Greenville, N.C., won its first two games in the Nashville Christian College Invitational Basketball Tournament Thursday as it opened defense of the 1986 championship.

Trinity won the title of the tournament, which draws top-ranked teams from Free Will Baptist-sponsored schools throughout the east.

In Thursday's first round, Trinity bombed Victory Christian of Jasper, Ala., 77-51, then took a 74-48 win over Farmington Christian of Columbia, Mo., in the second round of the double elimination tournament.

Today, Trinity was to face Woodbine of Nashville, the tournament favorite. A victory in that game will send the Tigers into the championship game Saturday while a loss would force them into the losers' bracket and a game Friday night.

In the opening game, Trinity raced out to a 22-6 lead in the opening period. They followed that up with a 19-12 advantage in the second quarter, opening up a 41-18 halftime lead.

Trinity continued to pull away in the third period with a 24-15 advantage, making the score 65-33 going into the final frame. In that, Victory managed an 18-12 scoring edge.

Joey Braxton led Trinity with 20 points while Kreston Welch added 17, Kirk Welch had 14 and Tyler Welch had 10. Brian Simms led Victory with 17 while Don Morrison added 14 and Don Woodard had 10.

Braxton led Trinity's rebounding with 16.

"Our press really confused them," Tiger coach Don Southerland said. "And our kids really hustled. It was all over a half-time."

In the second game, Trinity also went out early, building up a 25-15 lead in the first quarter. That was extended with a 18-10 margin in the second frame as the Tigers built up a 43-25 halftime edge.

Trinity kept it up in the third period, running its lead out to 56-34. They polished off Farmington, 18-14, in the final quarter.

Kreston Welch led the way with 21 points while Tyler Welch added 10 and Braxton had 10. However, Braxton and Kirk Welch both went down with sprained ankles during the game and their status for the remainder of the tournament is questionable.

Kyler Welch and John Griffin each had seven rebounds to lead that department, while Welch added four steals.

Ian Beardsley led Farmington with 14 points while Scott Ames added 10.

Spiders Surprise Navy

By The Associated Press

The Richmond Spiders seem to have David Robinson's number — and it's a single digit.

After scoring in double figures for 76 consecutive games, Navy's 7-foot-1 David Robinson got caught in the Spiders' web again Thursday night and was held to eight points as the 15th-ranked Midshipmen blew an 11-point lead in the final seven minutes and were upset by Richmond 64-62.

The last time Robinson failed to hit double figures was an eight-point effort against Richmond on March 9, 1984.

The loss was Navy's first in 17 Colonial Athletic Association games dating back to a 67-61 loss to Richmond last January and it also was the Mids' first home setback in almost two years.

Richmond Coach Dick Tarrant said the most important factor was his team's ability to hold Robinson in check.

"The key thing is to get the big aircraft carrier out of the game," Tarrant said of Robinson. "We just kept taking it to him. There's a lot of fight in those kids. We kept digging and digging and digging, and I'm extremely proud of them. In my mind, the team that deserved to win this game did."

That wasn't exactly the case as 12th-ranked Illinois nipped Wisconsin 68-66 on Ken Norman's 18-foot jumper at the buzzer.

"You've got to get lucky once in a while," Coach Lou Henson philosophized. "We're not going to win many games with a last-second shot. It took a real athletic play to catch the ball and then get the shot off and make it. I certainly wouldn't want to play them again in Madison."

In other games involving the Associated Press Top Twenty, No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas beat San Jose State 89-77, third-ranked North Carolina whipped Maryland 98-65, No. 4 Indiana erased a 12-point first-half deficit and defeated Michigan State 79-60, sixth-ranked Purdue trounced Northwestern 85-67 and No. 19 Kansas held off eighth-ranked Temple 67-64.

Top Ten

No. 1 UNLV 89, San Jose State 77
At Las Vegas, Freddie Banks and Armon Gilliam each scored 28 points as Nevada-Las Vegas ran its record to 13-0. The Rebels broke the game open in the last five minutes after San Jose State, led by Ricky Berry's 28 points, gave them all they could handle for most of the game and trailed by only one point with 7:11 remaining.

UNLV led 73-71 with 5:05 left but a basket by Banks followed by a four-point play by Gerald Paddio and a dunk by Eldridge Hudson gave the Rebels a 10-point lead. San Jose led by as many as seven points in the first half.

"They hurt you at every spot, then they come off the bench to hurt you," San Jose State Coach Bill Berry said. "They have great players and great depth."

No. 3 North Carolina 98, Maryland 65
Maryland Coach Bob Wade had nothing but praise for Carolina freshman J.R. Reid but Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith is still waiting for the 6-foot-10 center to mature.

Reid scored 19 points and Kenny Smith had 18 as North Carolina ran its winning streak to 10 games in its Atlantic Coast Conference opener.

"Reid has great hands and runs the floor well and he also has a nice assortment of shots," Wade said.

But Smith would like for Reid to improve his defensive repertoire, especially after he tried to guard Derrick Lewis, who led the Terrapins with 16 points.

"Lewis hurt Reid early in our man-to-man, but (Dave) Popson did a great job on him," Smith said.

Maryland took an early 13-9 lead before North Carolina began to pour it on.

"It's not often that a team can come in and beat Carolina," Wade said. "Maryland did it last year, but that was last year and this is this year."

No. 4 Indiana 79, Michigan State 60
At East Lansing, Mich., Indiana's Steve Alford scored 22 of his 33 points in the second half. A 15-foot jumper by Alford with 9:29 remaining forged a 51-51 tie and Indiana, 11-1, outscored the Spartans 28-9 the rest of the way. Alford had 13 points during the spurt and made seven of 10 shots in the second half.

He attributed his sharpshooting to the reappearance of starting center Daryl Thomas, who missed all but two minutes of the first half with three fouls.

"I was happy with my performance and I think having Thomas in more in the second half really opened up some shots for me," Alford said. "Losing Daryl was a big problem for us in the first half."

No. 6 Purdue 85, Northwestern 67
"We wanted to come out and get them running with us," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "It worked in the first half."

At Evanston, Ill., Purdue, 11-1, built a 21-point halftime lead and was never threatened, although Northwestern's Shon Moris scored 19 of his season-high 27 points in the second half. Troy Lewis scored 26 points and Todd Mitchell added 17 to pace Purdue.

No. 19 Kansas 67, No. 8 Temple 64
"I think I have the ability to at least change situations in the game," Kansas' 6-11 Danny Manning said after the Jayhawks posted their 40th straight home court triumph.

Manning hit his first three-point goal in three tries this season and made eight of nine field goal attempts as Kansas snapped Temple's 11-game winning streak. Manning scored 15 of his 17 points in the second half.

"In the second half we started moving more and we ran the floor a lot better," Manning said. "I ducked in and out of the post and I was able to get more shots."

Temple Coach John Cheney waxed eloquent over Manning.

"The magnitude of Danny Manning is just terrific," he said. "He is a super player and I thought he really showed what he was made of, especially in the second half. He is just a pro playing on a college basketball team."

Second Ten

No. 12 Illinois 68, Wisconsin 66
"It was the greatest win of my career," Norman said after taking an inbound pass the length of the court from Doug Altenberger and hitting the winning shot from just inside the free-throw circle as the horn sounded.

Wisconsin's Mike Heineman was called for traveling with three seconds left, setting up Norman's basket. Wisconsin Coach Steve Yoder said he thought Heineman was fouled.

"It's frustrating, especially when you get a guy right at the end of the game driving down the lane," he said.

Norman, who led Illinois with 22 points, blocked a shot by Wisconsin's Danny Jones and threw a court-length pass to Glynn Blackwell, who tied the game 66-66 with 17 seconds left.

Richmond 64, No. 15 Navy 62
Trailing 62-51 with just under seven minutes left, Richmond ran off the last 13 points, including 11 of his game-high 24 by Peter Woolfolk.

"Other teams make mistakes by trying to play Robinson one-on-one," Woolfolk said. "We keep two people on him at all times and try to harass him throughout the game. We tried to take him off his game and, fortunately, it worked."

Navy had a chance to tie the game with 10 seconds left but Robinson missed twice from the foul line. Robinson spent almost 16 minutes on the bench because of foul trouble. Even without him, Navy built a 25-10 first half lead on six three-point baskets by guards Doug Wojcik and Cliff Rees, who led the Midshipmen with 19 points.

'Rookie' Fehr In T Of C Lead

CARLSBAD, Calif. (AP) — Rick Fehr is a rookie in this elite tournament that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour titles from the past 12 months.

He's won once in his life. After two rounds of the Tournament of Champions, the soft-spoken 24-year-old found himself two strokes ahead of the field.

Immediately behind him, however, is a starry group that includes some of the finest players in the world: Greg Norman, Ray Floyd, Bob Tway and John Mahaffey.

And it doesn't bother Fehr a bit. "Taking nothing away from those players or their accomplishments — and they're some of the best — it doesn't bother me," Fehr said Wednesday after a scramble 67 had put his name atop the leaderboard.

"I've found my place out here. I feel I can compete out here. I know I've got the best behind me, but I feel that when I'm on my game I can compete with anyone," he said.

Fehr didn't make a bogey in the 5-under-par effort that put him in front, but three times turned potential disaster into what he called "unlikely" birdies.

"Three times I drove into the trees, and all three times I made birdie," Fehr said. The last of that trio came on the 16th hole, where he chipped a wobbling, mud-encrusted ball into the hole.

"It was a day when all the right things happened," he said. But they didn't happen to Mac O'Grady.

"I felt like I stepped into the twilight zone. It was tedious, tormenting," said the controversial golfer who shared the first-round lead.

Students Protest Album

WASHINGTON (AP) — Singer-songwriter Paul Simon, just after learning of the four Grammy nominations for his "Graceland" album, walked into a heated session with Howard University students critical of the way he used South African music on the LP.

One student, who would not give his name but said he was from the Bedford-Stuyvesant section of New York, accused Simon of "stealing" African music and trying unsuccessfully to "diffuse" it into white culture.

Another suggested that the video for the "Homeless" cut on the LP could allow people to ignore the violence in South Africa because it shows smiling Africans dancing and singing with Simon.

Nearly all the students who took the microphone at the predominantly black university during the nearly three-hour session said they didn't think Simon really understood the problem, though several praised his effort.

"I don't expect that I can fully capture a culture, and that was not the extent of my thinking," the songwriter told his audience of about 40 students. "I'm just a person who fell in love with South African music and made a record that became a hit."

"I am a beginning for people who know nothing about this subject."

Howard, established as a black college in 1867, has a reputation for political activism and has been protesting apartheid since the 1960s. It attracts many South African students, including Mpho Tutu, the daughter of anti-apartheid leader Desmond Tutu. She was in Simon's audience.

ABC Dumping Nielsen Ratings

NEW YORK (AP) — ABC has notified A.C. Nielsen Co. that it wants to end its agreement with the ratings company effective Aug. 31, just before the beginning of the new television season, according to a report published today.

The Daily News reported that ABC, the third-ranked network, was dropping Nielsen just as the ratings service was set to change its way of measuring a show's popularity.

The company uses an audiometer, which is attached to the back of television sets, but soon will install People Meters, a system in which viewers push buttons to record what they watch.

CBS said it did not object to the system, but NBC and ABC had said it should be given more study.

The networks pay Nielsen about $3.5 million annually for their daily ratings service.

Marvin Mord, ABC vice president of marketing and research services, said ABC was terminating the agreement because it wanted to "explore more fully the range of options available for the '87-'88 season."

The newspaper reported that the three networks were considering picking up a new service, Audits of Great Britain.

Mord said the network might return to Nielsen.

Veterans Top Grammys List

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Steve Winwood and Paul Simon, music-makers who advanced beyond their 1960s roots, and avant-garde rocker Peter Gabriel are the top nominees for the 29th annual Grammy Awards.

Winwood received five nominations, while Gabriel and Simon got four each. The nominations by the National Academy for Recording Arts and Sciences also had a few surprises Thursday, including nominations for such non-mainstream groups as Timbuk 3 and the Chicago Bears.

Jazzman Wynton Marsalis received four nominations, while Barbra Streisand and Janet Jackson, sister of Michael, were among those receiving three nominations each, along with Robert Palmer and Dionne Warwick.

The albums by Simon, Gabriel and Winwood reflect influences of Third World rhythms and musicians. Simon's "Graceland," some of which was recorded in South Africa, is filled with "jive" music and vocals by several South African groups.

Simon said he thought the album would be nominated, but was surprised that the song "Graceland" was.

"It's got to be the first time for a song that's not a hit," he said in a telephone interview from Washington, D.C.

It was the most nominations for Simon, 46, since the "Bridge Over Troubled Water" album, which won six Grammys in 1970. Simon has won 10 Grammys, four shared with former partner Art Garfunkel.

Simon's nominations were for album of the year and best pop male vocal performance and producer of the year. "Graceland" was nominated for song of the year.

Winwood, 38, whose reedy voice is on such rock classics as "Gimme Some Loving," with the Spencer Davis Group from the 1960s, and "Dear Mr. Fantasy" with Traffic from the 1970s, was nominated for record and album of the year for his "Higher Love" single and "Back in the High Life" LP.

He also was nominated for pop male vocal performance, song of the year and producer of the year.

Gabriel's "Sledgehammer" was nominated for record and song of the year, while his "So" LP was nominated for album of the year. Gabriel, 36, also was nominated for best rock male vocal performance.

Nominated for best new artist were Glass Tiger, Bruce Hornsby and the Range, Nu Shooz, Simply Red and Timbuk 3.

Trumpeter Marsalis' four nominations include two in jazz: one as an instrumentalist, the other as a group leader. He also received nominations as a classical trumpeter and as a composer.

Miss Jackson's nominations were for album, best female rhythm and blues performance and songwriter for "What Have You Done For Me Lately?"

Miss Streisand, who has won seven Grammys since 1963, was nominated for album of the year for "The Broadway Album," as co-producer, for best female pop vocal performance and for best instrumental arrangement accompanying vocals.

Miss Warwick, whose performance on "That's What Friends Are For" reunited with songwriter Burt Bacharach, was nominated for record of the year.

She also was nominated for best pop performance by a duo or group and best female vocal, for her "Friends" album.

Palmer's "Addicted to Love" won him nominations for record and song of the year and for top male rock vocal.

The most surprising nomination may have been the Chicago Bears. Their Shufflin' Crew was nominated for group rhythm and blues vocal for "The Super Bowl Shuffle."

Networks Ready To Launch Revamped Morning Shows

NEW YORK (AP) — Look for the year 1987 to be printed in boldface in histories of morning network programming.

CBS launches its new "The Morning Program" on Monday, the "Today" show turns 35 on Wednesday and David Hartman, host of "Good Morning America," is leaving in February after 11 years with the show.

GMA executive producer Jack Reilly says Hartman's replacement will be announced this month. The search has been narrowed to three or four contenders, he said, with ABC news correspondent Charles Gibson the leading candidate.

After shuffling hosts for months and trailing the two other morning programs for years, CBS is replacing the last 90 minutes of the "CBS Morning News" with a show produced by the entertainment division instead of the news division, which has had a show in the 7-9 a.m. EST timeslot since Walter Cronkite anchored "The Morning Show" in 1954.

The new entry is "The Morning Program," with actress Mariette Hartley and news anchor Rolland Smith as cohosts of a variety talk show, complete with a studio audience.

"We're going to have a little fun in the morning," says executive producer Bob Shanks. "It shouldn't be so grim to have to get up every day."

Regular segments include taped performances by stand-up comics, "personal" ads for selected applicants, celebrities accompanied by teachers they say changed their lives, Hollywood gossip, and instant surveys of home and studio audiences on a topical question of the day.

At a recent news conference in Los Angeles, "Today" executive producer Steve Friedman was downright contemptuous of CBS' effort. "Today" is now the only network morning program produced by a news division.

Friedman maintains the morning television audience wants news, not comedy.

"I don't think what they're doing has any chance to make it," he said. "The fact of the matter is that at best they're wrong, at worst they're very cynical."

Predicting flat out the new show would fail, Friedman suggested the CBS news division take back the timeslot and build on the reputation CBS had for offering the serious news alternative in the morning.

The "CBS Morning News" will still exist as a 90-minute broadcast beginning at 6 a.m. EST. There will be brief news breaks twice on the quarter hour during "The Morning Program." If there is a major news event, CBS News will take over the time period that day.

The solution to your problem is to use the club suit itself as the means of transportation! Win the opening lead in hand and immediately duck a club. Let's suppose East wins and shifts to a diamond. Grab the ace, cash a high trump just as an extra precaution should they be 2-2, then cross to the king of clubs and ruff a club high. That sets up the suit, and you can get back to the board with the ace of trumps, in the process drawing West's last fang, to take two discards on the ace of clubs and the long card in the suit. Well done.

Dow's Path Above 2,000 Leads Some To Say Index 'Outmoded'

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average passed a symbolic milestone when it leaped over the 2,000 mark for the first time, but some analysts say the "granddaddy" of stock barometers is outmoded.

The Dow Jones average close Thursday at 2,002.25 as part of a rally that has seen a rise of more than 100 points in the first five trading sessions of 1987.

"Obviously there will be hoopla in the market for the simple reason that most round numbers carry a mystique about them," said Newton D. Zinder, technical analyst with the New York investment firm E.F. Hutton Group Inc. But "from a market standpoint, 2,000 is only one point above 1,999," Zinder said.

Some analysts suggested that the closely watched average of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks has become an outmoded gauge of Wall Street's health, although it still reflects the strong underlying demand for stocks that has helped drive the market with dizzying speed for more than four years.

"I really think the numbers game for the Dow is totally meaningless," said Robert Nurock, publisher of the Astute Investor newsletter and designer of a technical market index for the PBS-TV program "Wall Street Week."

"While round numbers may affect investor psychology in a short-term basis, they have little to do with long-term investing."

The Dow Jones average still is Wall Street's best-known indicator and is regarded as "the granddaddy of all measurements," but it covers only a fraction of the enormous range of stocks sought by investors in an increasingly international market, said Theodore Halligan, a stock analyst for Piper Jaffray & Hopwood Inc. of Minneapolis.

"The Dow is an anachronism in many ways and does not reflect the strength or weakness of the marketplace," Halligan said. "I think the 2,000 mark is of much greater significance to the press than the money manager or general public."

Historically, the Dow Jones average attracted enormous investor interest as an exponent of American industrial might, particularly because the stocks making up the average represent some of the best-known companies, ranging from Exxon Corp. to General Motors Corp.

For that reason, a big rise or fall in the average was viewed as a significant indicator, especially to managers of institutional investment funds who are important buyers of quality stocks.

The average's movement often would drag other indexes in the same direction.

But John J. Smith, analyst at the New York investment firm Fehnestock & Co., said he didn't think the market "responds to the things it used to before. We're in a completely different environment now. We're doing business all around the world."

When the Dow Jones average was languishing below 1,000 in the late 1970s, a rise of 30 or 40 points would invite jubilation on Wall Street. But Smith said such movements have become so routine "the institutions just don't get excited about this anymore."

Nevertheless, round numbers have represented psychological barriers for the Dow Jones average since Jan. 12, 1906, when it closed above the 100 mark for the first time.

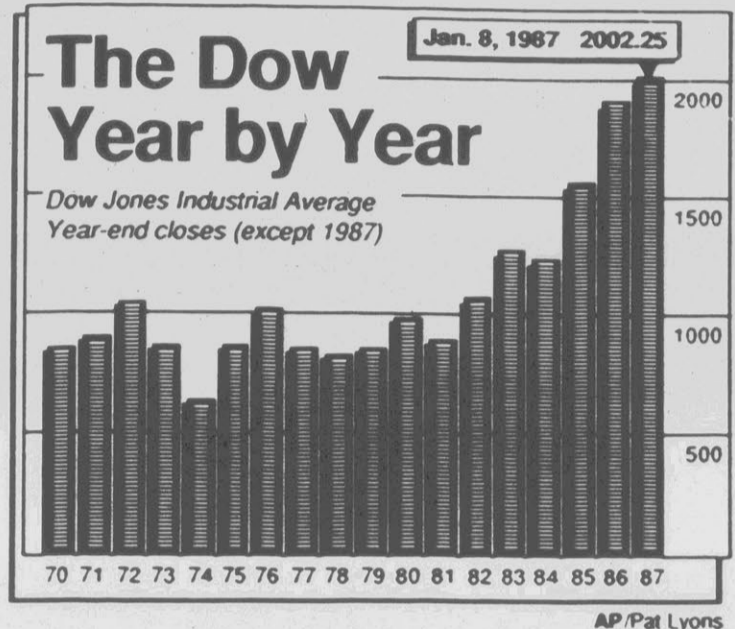

Although it flirted with 1,000 for the first time in 1966, it was not until Nov. 14, 1972, that it closed above 1,000. The first time it finished above 500 was March 12, 1956.

Few market analysts pay attention to the movement of the Dow Jones average as a reason in itself to buy or sell. Many scrutinize overall supply and demand for stocks, interest rates and other economic elements.

Many also look to broader market indexes, such as Standard & Poor's 500-stock composite index and the National Association of Securities Dealers' over-the-counter composite index.

But now that the Dow has surpassed 2,000, the frenetic pace on Wall Street will likely continue as usual, analysts said.

"I think they might raise a few beers down at Harry's saloon on Wall Street," Halligan said. "But as they put the beer down, they'll be looking at the strengths and weaknesses of individual stocks."

Dow Index Tracks Daily Price Changes

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average, Wall Street's best-known barometer, tracks daily changes in the prices of 30 stocks of major U.S. companies traded on the New York Stock Exchange.

The average of 30 blue-chip stocks crossed the 2,000 mark for the first time Thursday, rising 8.30 points to close at 2,002.25.

Devised by Charles Dow, who with Edward Jones founded Dow Jones & Co. Inc., the average first appeared in the company's Wall Street Journal in 1896.

It traditionally has been associated with the nation's industrial base of "smokestack" companies, such as General Motors Corp. and USX Corp.

The Dow is not calculated as a pure average, that is, by dividing the sum of the prices of its 30 component stocks by 30.

In order to maintain statistical continuity, the average is calculated by using a "divisor" that periodically is adjusted to reflect changes in the stocks tracked by the Dow.

Over the years, the divisor generally has been shrinking, reflecting trends such as changes in the prices and the numbers of shares as the result of stock splits by the companies in the average.

When the divisor recently fell below 1, to 0.889, it became a multiplier. So now a move of one point up or down by an individual stock translates into a movement of more than one point in the industrial average.

The 30 companies whose stock prices form the Dow Jones industrial average are: Alcoa, Allied-Signal, American Can, American Express, American Telephone & Telegraph, Bethlehem Steel, Chevron, Du Pont, Eastman Kodak, Exxon, General Electric, General Motors, Goodyear, Inco, IBM, International Paper, McDonald's, Merck, Minnesota Mining & Manufacturing, Navistar, Owens Illinois, Philip Morris, Procter & Gamble, Sears Roebuck, Texaco, Union Carbide, USX, United Technologies, Westinghouse and Woolworth.

Homeless Keep Vigil Pentagon Uncertain Who Fired At Copter Job Market Sees Rally

WASHINGTON (AP) — Demonstrators have been allowed to maintain a vigil around a museum-like statue on the Capitol grounds today after police nearly evicted them Thursday just as House leaders inside were introducing a $500 million emergency package to aid the homeless.

"Their sense of timing is about the worst I've ever seen," said Mitch Snyder, leader of the Community for Creative Non-Violence's crusade on behalf of the homeless, a quilt wrapped around him as he huddled next to the nearly life-sized statue that has been on the grounds since Thanksgiving.

Rep. Henry Gonzalez, D-Texas, intervened to keep Capitol police from removing the sculpture which depicts a homeless couple and child in a nativity pose, a shopping cart filled with household items in the background. "And still there is no room at the inn" reads the inscription on its base.

Under Capitol regulations, props considered part of demonstrations must be moved off the grounds at least every 24 hours. CNNV's demonstration permit expired Dec. 30 and a federal judge refused late last month to grant an injunction preventing eviction.

House leaders have allowed the vigil to continue, but the sergeant-at-arms had told the protesters they would be evicted and the statue removed by 4 p.m. Thursday. Gonzalez, chairman of the House housing subcommittee, pleaded the group's case to the leadership and the action was called off.

Protesters at the site Thursday held a banner that said "Congress Shelter the Homeless."

WASHINGTON — The mystery over who fired a missile at a U.S. helicopter in the Persian Gulf Monday — and why — remains unsolved, Pentagon officials said Thursday, although sources said that the chief suspect was a Greek freighter whose captain denied to U.S. officials that his ship was the culprit.

"We don't know enough to claim to be able to identify any particular ship, and no ship has volunteered that it was the one doing this," Robert Sims, the Pentagon's chief spokesman, said of the incident, in which a Navy helicopter on routine patrol reported that it dodged a missile fired as it flew within three miles of what was described only as a merchant ship.

The helicopter returned to the U.S. destroyer O'Bannon, one of five U.S. warships operating in the gulf, scene of international tensions because of the Iran-Iraq war and because of attacks by both combatants on vessels that they suspect of trading with the other side. Some merchant ships plying the gulf were reported several months ago to have equipped themselves with portable missiles.

Based on descriptions from the scene, sources who asked not to be identified said the Navy thinks that the merchant vessel involved in the incident is the Norasia Karsten, a cargo ship of Greek registry.

After the incident, sources said, the ship was tracked to the United Arab Emirates port of Ash Shiraqah. There, the U.S. counsel boarded the vessel and was told by the captain, who was not identified, that his ship had been in the area but was not involved in firing any missile, the sources said.

The incident, Sims said, was "one of those ambiguities of life in the ever-dangerous Persian Gulf."

According to a Pentagon statement Monday, the Navy helicopter was on a "routine surface surveillance mission" in the southern Persian Gulf, 75 miles west-northwest of Dubai, when it "was fired upon by a merchant vessel of undetermined registry."

The helicopter took immediate evasive action, and the missile "passed within about 500 yards," the Pentagon said. The helicopter and other U.S. forces in the area took no retaliatory action, officials said.

U.S. warships have continued to operate in the gulf on a regular basis, although the waterway's strategic importance has been lessened by changes in world demand for the region's oil.

A decade ago, nearly half the non-commissioned world's oil was carried by tanker through the gulf and its narrow entrance at the Strait of Hormuz, a fact that generated profound strategic worries. Today, however, with a drop in worldwide oil consumption and the construction of new oil pipelines, the percentage of the free world's oil passing through the potential bottleneck has declined to about 15 percent.

In 1985, the assessed valuation of real property in Pitt County totaled $1,744,612,157; personal property was valued at $750,322,923.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's job market ended 1986 with a long-awaited rally as civilian unemployment fell to 6.7 percent last month — the year's low mark, the government reported today. The number of out-of-work Americans dipped below 8 million for the first time since January.

The Labor Department said its monthly household survey showed the economy created 205,000 jobs last month, raising total employment to a record 110,637,000. That is an increase of nearly 2.5 million jobs since December 1985.

The department, meanwhile, revised both the October and November unemployment rates from 7.0 percent to 6.9 percent. December's 0.2 percentage point drop reflected a decline of 294,000 in the number of jobless Americans, from 8.24 million to 7.95 million.

The commissioner of labor statistics, Janet L. Norwood, said the downward revisions were the result of year-end refinements in the seasonal-adjustment process.

"The revised rates do show more clearly than the previously published data that a slight decline in the jobless rate occurred in the second half of 1986," she said.

But that drop was not enough to send the average unemployment rate for all of 1986 to below 7.0 percent. The decline did send the fourth quarter rate to 6.9 percent, just 0.1 percentage point above what the Reagan administration had predicted a year ago.

In its latest economic forecast, the White House predicted Monday that civilian joblessness would fall to 6.6 percent by the end of 1987.

Inflation Declined During 1986

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices fell 2.5 percent in 1986 — the best inflation performance in 37 years — as civilian unemployment fell to a yearly low of 6.7 percent in December, the government reported today.

It was the first time prices at the wholesale level had fallen for a year since 1963 and it was the second biggest decline on record, topped only by a 4.6 percent plunge in 1949.

Meanwhile, the number of out-of-work Americans dipped below 8 million for the first time since January.

The economy created 205,000 jobs last month, the Labor Department's monthly household survey showed, raising total employment to a record 110,637,000. That was an increase of nearly 2.5 million jobs since December 1985.

For December, the Labor Department said in its inflation report, prices held steady as a modest increase in energy costs was offset by a decline in food prices.

Last year's decline in inflation was attributed almost entirely to falling energy costs. Without a record 39.1 percent drop in energy prices, the overall index would have risen 2.7 percent.

The 2.5 percent price decline in 1986 followed modest increases of 1.8 percent in 1985, 1.7 percent in 1984 and 0.6 percent in 1983 and was a dramatic turnaround from the double-digit rates suffered in 1979 and 1980 when oil prices soared.

It was the first decline since the overall index edged down 0.2 percent in 1983.

The downward spiral in energy costs came from a dramatic plunge in world petroleum prices that paid big dividends for American consumers but left the U.S. oilpatch in a virtual recession.

In recent months, energy prices have stabilized as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has struggled to dampen a worldwide glut by imposing more stringent production quotas on its member countries.

The success of this effort is part of the reason most economists believe that the United States has seen the best of the inflation news.

"Oil just dominated the inflation picture in 1986, but it was a one-year phenomenon," said Donald Ratajezak, director of the economic forecasting project at Georgia State University.

Many analysts are predicting prices next year at the wholesale level will rise between 2 percent and 3 percent, with consumer prices rising at an even faster 4 percent clip.

The zero change in wholesale prices in December followed modest gains of 0.2 percent in November and 0.3 percent in October.
