Teachers May Request Posts At New School

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer
Preferences expressed by Pitt County school personnel will be taken into consideration during the reassignment of teachers to the county's new elementary school, according to the system's associate superintendent in charge of personnel.
Leck Keeter said that staff positions must be balanced between the schools in the D.H. Conley attendance area, but personnel will be able to request the school where they will be employed next school year.

He said personnel at W.H. Robinson, A.G. Cox and G.R. Whitfield elementary schools will be shifted to staff the new elementary school. Staff members from the other county schools also may request placement at the new school.
"When we get the situation balanced, we will try to honor as many recommendations as we can," the associate superintendent said.
The new school on the old County Home property south of Greenville, which will house kindergarten through fifth grades, is expected to be completed for use in the 1987-88 school year. New attendance lines are being drawn and teachers and other employees must be assigned to staff the new school. The changes in the attendance lines also involve changing the grade levels taught at several schools.

The staff assignments will not be made until the attendance lines have been completed and the pupil population at each school has been determined, Keeter said. The teachers will know of their assignments for the next school year before summer vacation.

"It will probably be some time in April before the people know exactly which schools they will be assigned, Keeter said. "The personnel department will be responsible for making the decisions, but we will work with the principals in making the final staff assignments."
"We have put down some criteria that we will be using in order to try to balance the different staff members in all schools that are involved," he said. "We are going to be looking at experience of teachers, the type of certification they have and the area they are certified in, the requirements of the Southern Association and the state accreditation requirements, the race and the sex of the individuals and extracurricular activity assignments.

"Robinson is now K-3. More than likely, about 50 percent of the staff members at that school will have to be reassigned to the new school" when the school is changed to include kindergarten through fifth grades, Keeter said. "We are going to take the criteria we have just listed and try to balance this type of information between the schools."

"We would not want to leave all inexperienced teachers at one site and put all experienced teachers at another site," the associate superintendent said. "We are going to try to balance this between the schools involved, at the same time looking at the individual teacher's personal choice. Where we can, we will honor their recommendation."

Trident Missile Scores Success

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A Trident II submarine missile thundered off a land launch pad today on the successful first test flight of the Navy's newest, most powerful rocket.
Scores of anti-nuclear protesters watched as the solid-fuel missile, which the Pentagon says will be potent and accurate enough to destroy nuclear-hardened missile silos and command centers, left its pad at 10:25 a.m. EST.
A Navy spokesman, Lt. Cmdr. Bob Pritchard, said the missile scored "a complete success" as it sent a dummy warhead to an Atlantic Ocean target several thousand miles to the southeast.
"It operated as advertised," he said.
Security was extremely tight today, especially in the Trident II launch area. The launch, delayed more than two hours by antenna and computer problems, was not announced in advance, but anti-nuclear protesters opposed to plans for it began gathering here last weekend. Fifty-three have been arrested on trespassing charges since Friday.
About 75 protesters gathered at the main Cape Canaveral gate this morning, and some tried to block traffic by linking arms in the middle of the road. The Air Force diverted workers to a gate at nearby Kennedy Space Center.
Denis Doyan, an organizer for Cancel the Countdown, a coalition of peace groups, said before the launch that protesters hoped to stop the countdown by penetrating Cape Canaveral security to reach the launch area. Several have managed to breach the Cape perimeter, on foot or in boats, this week. Helicopters circled today to keep a lookout for intruders.
A big demonstration against the Trident II is planned Saturday.
The test today was the first of 20 scheduled from a land pad, with one planned about every 40 days. That will be followed by 10 submarine-launched tests before the missile becomes operational in 1989.
The Trident II, or D-5, is an intercontinental range missile capable of striking targets up to 6,900 miles away. It is much more accurate than its undersea predecessors, Polaris, Poseidon and Trident I, so accurate that the Navy says it can match the targeting ability of land-based missiles even though it is launched from a submerged, moving submarine.
Critics say the Reagan administration's decision to pursue development of the Trident II will turn the nation's missile submarines into "first strike" weapons, undermining the deterrent balance with the Soviet Union.
Pentagon officials like Assistant Defense Secretary Richard Perle dismiss such charges, saying it is the Soviet Union which possesses the largest arsenal of first-strike weapons — missiles accurate enough to blast targets hardened against nuclear attack.

Ayden Expects Revenue Loss From Plant Closing

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer
AYDEN — The closing of the Wrangler plant here — announced Tuesday by the Pennsylvania-based VF Corp., which bought the Wrangler label when it purchased Blue Bell in November 1986 — will mean a loss of income to the town in addition to the loss of income to the Ayden area residents who work at the plant.
Ayden Town Manager Don Russell said that the planned closing of the plant "will definitely have an impact on Ayden. The plant has been the largest employer in our immediate area."
"It's too early to tell exactly how extensive the impact of the closure will be, since employees live as far away as Grifton and Kinston and we have no way of knowing how much of their shopping is done in Ayden.

"Since the plant is located outside Ayden's corporate limits, we will not suffer a tax loss. However, we serve the plant with electricity, water and sewer facilities (and) the closure of the plant will result in a loss of revenue of $35,000 to $40,000 or more annually in these services," Russell said.
One of the "problems I see," Russell said, "is that many of the employees are females and a portion of them are heads of households."
"We are sorry to see Blue Bell go," Russell said. "It was only a couple of years ago there was talk of expansion of the Ayden plant, but that did not materialize."
If the plant had been expanded it might not have been among the seven of 13 Wrangler plants VF Corp. will close in North Carolina within the next 90 days.

Greg Edmundson, manager of the plant, said the Ayden facility has "good employees" who have a good performance record of producing quality products. He said the reason for the Ayden plant closing is because it is a small plant with "only 90 people" employed.
Edmundson said the decision to close some of the other plants was based on poor performance by employees and the poor quality of production.

Arms Talks Resuming

GENEVA (AP) — A new Soviet negotiator sat down with his American counterpart over lunch today to begin the seventh round of superpower nuclear arms talks.
Yuli Vorontsov, the new Soviet delegation head, greeted U.S. chief negotiator Max Kampelman in front of his residence at the Soviet mission compound at 1 p.m.
The two men, who were meeting for the first time, greeted each other warmly by shaking hands, smiling and slapping each other on the back as snow fell.
The two negotiators declined to answer reporters' questions.
The official Soviet news agency Tass today quoted Vorontsov as saying in an interview that the Soviets see their principal task as making progress in the 22-month-old arms talks.

RAINY DAY AT SCHOOL — Katie Dunn, right, second grader at W.H. Robinson Elementary School, and her sister, Patty, who is in the first grade, make their way to school with umbrellas early today as rain and drizzle set in over eastern North Carolina. Cloudy skies and a chance of rain are forecast across the state through Friday. Mild temperatures will continue tonight, but cooler air should move into the state Friday behind a cold front. Lows tonight will be mainly in the 40s. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Wednesday Thefts

Three thefts were reported to Greenville police Wednesday. Officer F.G. Pruitt said several radios and speakers, with an estimated value of $800, were taken from vehicles at Cooke and Elks Motors on Bismark Street in an incident reported at 9:17 a.m., while Officer T.E. Nevelle said a bicycle was taken from 141 Cypress Gardens Apartments in an incident reported at 11:04 a.m. Detective C.E. Weatherington said three bonds, with a combined value of $15,000, were taken from 106A Stencil Drive in an incident reported at 3:40 p.m. Weatherington, who said two of the bonds have been forged and cashed, said the bonds were taken between July 1 and Dec. 31.

Postal Holiday

The Greenville Post Office and ECU Station Post Office will be closed Monday in observance of Martin Luther King's birthday. There will be no deliveries by rural and city carriers and window service will not be provided, Postmaster Charles Caulk said. Caulk said mail will be delivered to post office boxes and express and special delivery mail will be delivered. A special 3 p.m. holiday collection will be made from all boxes with 5 p.m. collection times. This collection will be dispatched at 5:30 p.m. The self-service postal unit in the lobby of the main post office will supply customers with most postal needs and permit them to mail parcels.

Drug Charges

Greenville police arrested two people Wednesday on drug related charges. Sgt. J.M. Simmonowich said Bernard Paige, 27, of 1500 W. Fourth St. was arrested about 9:15 a.m. on a charge of possession of drug paraphernalia. Detective J.E. Harris said Karen Cox Pollard, 29, of Ayden was arrested about 4 p.m. on a misdemeanor charge of possessing a non-controlled substance without a prescription. Harris said Ms. Pollard, an emergency medical technician and dispatcher in the emergency department at Pitt County Memorial Hospital, was charged with possessing Nubain, a synthetic narcotic.

Cookie Sale Rally

A pep rally to kick off the local Girl Scout cookie sale will be held Saturday from 2 p.m. until 3 p.m. in the gymnasium of E.B. Aycock Junior High School. The activities will include cheers, skits and cookie tasting. Lisa Boykin of Ayden and William Zadeits of Greenville earned the honor by compiling a grade point average of 3.25 or better in 12 or more semester hours.

Organizing committees from each area are meeting in Whispering Pines today and Friday to discuss strategic planning and to begin their local projects.

PAC Officers Elected

Camella Edwards was elected president of the countywide Parent Advisory Council for the Compensatory Program of the Pitt County schools Tuesday night. Other officers are James Chapman, vice president; Carolyn Smith, secretary; Rosa Martinez, vice secretary, and Samuel Hardy, chaplain. Each participant made a statement concerning the school or community he or she represents. Freager Sanders Jr., coordinator of federal programs for Pitt County schools, gave an update on the compensatory program. He discussed the role of the advisory council and the importance of parents working with schools. Bernard Haselrig, volunteer coordinator for Pitt County schools, discussed the importance of volunteers to the school system. Attendance at the Eastern Stream Migrant Education Conference was discussed. The next meeting will be Feb. 10. The program topic will be "Special Education and Testing in Pitt County Schools."

Quiz Bowl Saturday

The Pitt County Quiz Bowl will be held Saturday beginning at 10 a.m. in the City Council chambers on the third floor of the Municipal Building, Fifth and Washington streets.

Police Arrest Two

Greenville police arrested two people in connection with separate theft cases Wednesday. Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said Derrick Cecil Harris, 17, of 404A Darden Drive was charged with larceny and possession of stolen property about 3:13 p.m. in connection with the theft of a car from Pugh's Tire and Service Center at the intersection of Fifth and Greene streets on Tuesday. Michael Leroy Harris, 18, of 1600 Myrtle Ave. was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of a dual cassette recorder from Rose's at Stanton Square Shopping Center that was reported about 3:58 p.m., Officer T.E. Evans said.

The Boys Club of Pitt County named its 1986 Youth of the Year during its annual directors' dinner Wednesday night at the club. Eddie Aldridge, a sophomore at Rose High School, received the title as he begins his fifth year as a member of the club this month. He has been involved in Toastmasters, Keystone, basketball and baseball. In addition to his club activities, Aldridge is a junior varsity football player at Rose, and he is an honors student. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Aldridge of Grimesland. The club also presented 1986 president Griff Garner the Boys Club Medallion for outstanding service to the club, and board members Ronny Greene, Craig Smith and Mary-Hannah Taft received special recognition for their services to the club. The 1987 officers installed at the dinner were Cordell Avery, president; Ronny Greene, first vice president; Jordan Whichard, second vice president; Stan Sams, secretary, and Hyman Brody, treasurer.

Clark Donates Seven-Acre Tract For Recreation Area

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission on Wednesday night accepted a donation of seven acres of land to be used for a neighborhood recreational area. Realtor-developer Bill Clark presented the land as a recreational area in the Oakdale Subdivision located a short distance off Greenville Boulevard. "We are delighted and fortunate in being presented this tract of land," said Boyd Lee, director of the department. "The seven acre plot has an appraised value of about $70,000. This area was designated seven or eight years ago as a subdivision needing a park area in the future. Just now, we can't say how long it will be before we can get money to develop the area, but the good thing is that we have it." Lee said "this is the first land we've received in some time, and the largest donation in a number of years." He lauded Clark for the interest he has shown in Greenville's recreational programs over many years. Clark said Greenville "is fortunate to have a vital and growing recreational program," and that "Lee is doing a really good job in a situation where it's tough to please all the people."

The Recreation and Parks Department can develop the donated land at its discretion. In a report on the status of the Greenville Aquatics and Fitness Center at the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center on Staton Road, center director Bill Twine reported "in spite of some problems, all minor in nature, that have arisen, the center is really rolling along far beyond our expectations." Twine reported that, as of Jan. 14, "our goal of 1,100 members has been fully subscribed to. Now, we are taking names of persons interested in becoming members and putting them on a waiting list until a vacancy opens. We had not expected to reach that goal until after a full year's operation, but we're already there within six weeks after opening and getting fully operational."

Twine said since the center is primarily an indoor facility, "winter months is the peak period of usage. With warm weather, we can expect to see a small drop in the number participating daily as outdoor activities get under way again." The center, which has an Olympic-size swimming pool, an aerobics center, weight room, and a kids' play room, had 4,700 users during the month of December. "And in the first half of January, we have had 3,500 visitations logged. There's no doubt about it, the people of Greenville have discovered the facility and evidently like what it offers," Twine said. The center operates from 8 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Friday, from 6 a.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays, and from noon to 6 p.m. on Sundays. Another status report, presented by Lee, updated progress on the amphitheater at the Town Common. "We have finally let bids," Lee said. "The lowest bidder was the Eastern Construction Company. Work has been started on the foundations this week, and by the end of May we plan to have the basic structure completed." Lee said that Jeanette Cox, "has quietly, on a one-to-one basis in the fund-raising campaign she headed, raised $41,400. This is enough in public commitment to do the project." "All the environmental studies have been completed and approved," he said. The Elks Lodge was the subject of a third status report considered at Wednesday night's meeting. "Members of the Elks Lodge approached the City Council and the council in turn asked us if acceptance of the property and operating it as a teen center would be feasible. We feel that we can handle it," Lee said, "although it's certainly going to take the assistance of volunteer parents to help in whatever programs are designed for a teen-age center." The main thrust of generating interest among young people using such a center, according to Lee, "will be at the junior high level." The City Council has appropriated $56,000 to operate the facility through July 1, "and by that time we will see how things shape up. The Elks people in making the facility available for a teen center did stipulate that the city would keep the property for five years before taking any action to dispose of it." The basic agreement for the city in accepting the Elks Lodge property is to take over $33,640 outstanding in obligations, plus $4,000 on a 90-day note arranged by the Lodge. The building, including a three acre site, is valued at $200,000.

Burn Victim Is 'Critical'

AYDEN — An Ayden woman is in critical condition in the Jaycee Burn Center in Chapel Hill, having suffered burns in a fire in her home Wednesday morning. Letha Burney, the critically injured woman, was pulled from the fire by Capt. Bennie Benson, an Ayden policeman, and Robert Joyner, an Ayden fireman. She was in a bed near the kitchen where it is believed the fire originated. A second occupant of the house at 108 Mills St., Ayden, Maggie Burney, was not injured. She was helped out of the house by Richard Keys, the first Ayden fireman to arrive on the scene. Keys attempted to get Letha Burney out, but was overcome by smoke, Ayden Fire Chief Jeff Tripp said. He said Key was treated at Pitt County Memorial Hospital for smoke inhalation, as was Maggie Burney. Both were reported doing fine Thursday. Ms. Burney was taken first to Pitt Memorial and then transported to the Burn Center by helicopter. Ayden firemen fought the 1:18 a.m. blaze. They said they believe the fire started from a gas cookstove burner left on. Everything in the house was ruined and the house was "all but destroyed," Tripp said. He estimated the loss at $30,000.

Shearon Harris

NEW HILL, N.C. (AP) — The Shearon Harris Nuclear Plant, shut down because of problems with backup cooling systems, remained idle Wednesday as Carolina Power & Light Co. workers tested repairs before restarting the 900-megawatt power plant. A problem with the plant's emergency cooling system for heating and ventilation equipment had been fixed and successfully tested, but workers were still testing adjustments to an auxiliary feed water pump for the reactor's steam generator. CP&L spokeswoman Elizabeth M. Bean said Wednesday. The shutdown occurred Tuesday, one day after the Nuclear Regulatory Commission had issued a full-power license to the $3.8 billion plant.

North Plan Envisioned Swap For Hostages

By DAVID HOFFMAN and WALTER PINCUS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Former National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North wrote a long-term plan last January that envisioned a chain of events including the exchange of U.S. weapons for the release of all American hostages and an end to the rule of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, according to sources familiar with the document.

North's plan explicitly showed that a goal of the Iran initiative was the departure of Khomeini and the rise to power of a new group of "moderates" in Iran, sources said. The plan was found in North's files and was dated Jan. 24, a week after the Jan. 17 intelligence "finding" in which Reagan authorized the shipment of weapons.

The finding set as its first goal "establishing a more moderate government in Iran." An accompanying background paper, made public last week, said Israel had a plan "by which Israel, with limited assistance from the U.S., can create conditions to bring about a more moderate government in Iran."

North's plan envisioned an initial trade of weapons for hostages to establish good faith, followed by the involvement of religious leaders such as Pope John Paul II, Anglican Church official Terry Waite and Cardinal John J. O'Connor of New York; it would culminate in a high-level meeting, the exchange of more weapons for all hostages being held by pro-Iranian extremists in Lebanon and Khomeini's departure, according to the sources.

The plan was described Wednesday by knowledgeable officials in Congress and the administration as the type of tentative timetable or contingency plan that North was constantly producing. A White House official said it illustrated that "Ollie North lived in a Peter Pan world" and a congressional source said it was North's "pipe dream."

However, some elements of the North plan came to pass. In May, former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane, accompanied by North and other U.S. and Israeli officials, secretly flew to Iran, and McFarlane has testified that he expected all the hostages would be released upon his arrival in Tehran.

The hostages were not released, the McFarlane mission broke down and McFarlane returned to the United States to urge that the initiative be halted. But North and other officials pressed forward with the bartering of arms for hostages.

The North paper came as senior U.S. officials were resuming the clandestine arms shipments to Iran, halted in December 1985. The weapons deals were revived in a rapid-fire series of meetings Jan. 2-17, according to material developed by the Senate Select Committee on Intelligence and a chronology written later by North.

The records of these meetings show that normal White House procedures for handling highly sensitive national security decisions were seriously violated or disregarded, according to the sources. For example, it was common practice in this period to exclude from key meetings such top officials as Vice President Bush and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

As reported, the trigger for restarting the Iran initiative was a visit to Washington by Amiram Nir, the top counterterrorism adviser to Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres. Nir met with North and Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter, then national security adviser, to stress new possibilities for reaching out to elements in Iran, and urged them to reconsider sending weapons.

It was learned Wednesday that Poindexter and North met with William J. Casey, director of central intelligence, at his home the day after they saw Nir, to discuss the Iran effort. The shipments of U.S. weapons from Israel had been stopped in December under pressure from Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger.

According to North's chronology, on Jan. 4 he began drafting a presidential intelligence order to permit the arms sales. Normally, the drafting of such a finding would be conducted by an interagency group representing different views and agencies in the government.

However, in this case, two days later, according to North's chronology, the draft finding was discussed with Reagan in a meeting with Bush, White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan, McFarlane and Poindexter. Shultz, Weinberger and Casey were not at the meeting, according to North's chronology; their absence is not explained.

White House officials confirmed last week that Reagan signed a finding dated Jan. 6. However, they were unable to explain why, since it was portrayed as a draft. Also, one official said Reagan did not sign it at the meeting, and others do not recall him signing it then.

A White House official said Wednesday that a background paper was prepared for Reagan at this meeting, but it has not been made public. The Senate investigation has found that only Poindexter and Casey knew that Reagan had signed the Jan. 6 finding. Casey testified in closed session before the Senate panel; Poindexter and North refused, invoking their Fifth Amendment protections against self-incrimination.

Afghanistan Government Launches Cease-Fire As Goodwill Gesture

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

KABUL, Afghanistan (AP) — The leader of Afghanistan said today his Communist government's unilateral cease-fire was a gesture of good will. The crowd he addressed shouted that government troops should shoot back if attacked by guerrillas.

Guerrilla commanders, speaking in neighboring Pakistan, said today their forces attacked several government positions to underscore their rejection of the cease-fire. The Kabul regime made no report of fighting. Early today it said the cease-fire, which took effect today, appeared to be holding.

An Afghan army official, who identified himself only as Col. Fakri, said all Afghan troops had been pulled back to their permanent bases.

It was not clear whether the estimated 115,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan were observing the cease-fire.

Moscow-based reporters flown into Kabul for a government-sponsored visit saw soldiers out in force on the streets of the capital. No fighting could be heard in the capital today.

Afghan leader Najibullah, who uses a single name, has said the truce would remain in effect for six months if the guerrillas agree not to fight.

But spokesmen for the seven main guerrilla groups, which are based in Pakistan, all said their forces were conducting military operations as usual and some said their forces had increased operations.

Guerrilla officials said their forces killed or wounded dozens of government soldiers and militiamen in today's attacks. They reported clashes in eastern Afghanistan close to the Pakistani border, around Torkham in Ningrahar province, around Khost in Paktia province and in the southwestern province of Kandahar.

There was no way to independently check the reports.

"We are attacking Soviet army bases and Afghan army bases and military convoys. Nobody will accept what the Communists say," Abdul Haq, a top military commander, told The Associated Press in Pakistan.

The seven major groups have said they would only accept a truce after the Communist government was toppled and all Soviet troops had withdrawn from Afghanistan.

In Kabul, Abdul Arhim Nortef, leader of the National Fatherland Front, addressed about 200 delegates at a congress. The front is a national umbrella organization of political and social groups.

Noting that a guerrilla group in the southeastern Khost province had announced it would not observe the cease-fire, he shouted: "What should we do? Allow them to go on or give them the proper reply?"

The delegates shouted back: "Respond, respond."

Najibullah told the delegates today the cease-fire was a sign of the government's good will in reaching a political settlement, but added any further steps would depend on a response from what he called the "imperialist forces" supporting the guerrillas, an apparent reference to the United States and Pakistan.

"It is appropriate to remind those who are supporting and financing the undeclared war that in case of continuation of the aggressions against the democratic republic of Afghanistan, the Soviet Union will not leave us alone," he declared to loud applause.

Philippine Rebels Step Up Attacks

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military rushed more troops to Mindanao Island today after Moslem rebels killed five people and injured at least 24 in a series of attacks to protest government talks with a rival group.

A government negotiator, meanwhile, expressed hope for a quick breakthrough in talks being held today with Communists waging a separate rebellion.

Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said that "the government is in full control" in the four provinces of central Mindanao where the attacks took place Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Under the present circumstances, my order is for the military to clamp down on any show of force that endangers the lives and property of the people," Ramos told reporters in Zamboanga City on Mindanao.

But national constabulary commander Maj. Gen. Renato de Villa said in Manila the situation remained "very unstable." He said there were no reports of clashes between soldiers and rebels.

Brig. Gen. Cesar Tapia said two additional battalions were being airlifted to Cotabato City about 560 miles south of the capital to help restore order.

The Moro Islamic Liberation Front has said it launched the attacks because President Corazon Aquino conducted peace talks only with a larger, rival Moslem rebel group. Front leader Hashim Salamat warned from exile in Saudi Arabia that more attacks would follow.

The government and the official Philippine News Agency issued conflicting reports about the number of casualties.

Ramos said four civilians were killed Wednesday when rebels sprayed automatic gunfire into a residential neighborhood in Cotabato City.

He also said 11 people were injured, three seriously, when rebels fired five grenades into residential areas in the city. The news agency said 12 people, including an infant, were injured in that attack.

The military said one person was killed and 13 injured when rebels attacked a university, blew up bridges and burned a government buildings earlier Wednesday and Tuesday. The news agency said one was killed and 17 injured.

Ramos said it was too early to decide if Mrs. Aquino should go ahead with plans to visit Cotabato City on Sunday as part of her push for ratification of a new constitution.

Well Equipped

Dr. Richard Eakin, now vice president for planning and budgeting at Bowling Green State University in Ohio, has been formally named as chancellor of East Carolina University.

Eakin will replace retiring Chancellor John M. Howell on March 1. He will assume control of a university of 14,000 students offering many degrees, including the doctorate.

Eakin seems well equipped to head a university which aspires to improve life for all the people who live in eastern North Carolina. He was chosen after a search for a new chancellor — a search which lasted a year and drew 186 applications and nominations. Of that number, 20 candidates were interviewed by the search committee.

Following that, two leading candidates made on campus visits and a recommendation was made to University of North Carolina President C.D. Spangler. He, in turn, made a recommendation to the board of governors which formally chose Eakin last Wednesday.

The new chancellor will find a great challenge here. The faculty, students, and supporters of the university feel it is an institution which can take its place among the outstanding of the nation. There is the feeling that ECU can be the catalyst for an improved way of life for the east, but one free of many problems which have plagued other developing areas.

No institution, of course, can provide all the answers, but one with the resources such as ECU has can achieve considerable progress. Leadership, however, will be essential to fulfilling its role in academics and area involvement.

Eakin appears to possess the type of leadership necessary for this position. He made a visit to Greenville last weekend to look over the campus and the community with his family. One of his stops was the East Carolina-University of Richmond basketball game where he engaged in easy conversation with those who recognized him and came over to meet him. He left every reason to believe he will quickly involve himself in the affairs of the university. As always, leadership starts at the top and there is every reason to believe that Richard Eakin offers direction to East Carolina University.

VOA Important

There are times when the feeling is strong that eastern North Carolinians have a vested interest in Voice of America. It surfaced anew a few days ago in a story about VOA's reporting of student demonstrations in China.

The story involved VOA's expressed surprise at a Chinese government news agency's criticism of a broadcast including views of an American leftist using Marxist theory to justify the demonstrations.

VOA Director Richard Carlson says the criticism was unjustified because "we have been extraordinarily careful; we don't want to incite the demonstrators".

After an initial broadcast carrying the American leftist's comments, Carlson says the script was revised to include a line noting the speaker's advocacy of close U.S.-Chinese ties.

Carlson says the VOA has carried no commentaries, analyses or editorials about the demonstrations as a precaution against being accused of pushing a point of view — only the hard news which is its strongest point.

In addition to round-the-clock English language programs beamed to China from transmitters in Greece and the Philippines, China gets 10 hours of Mandarin programming from the VOA each day. The broadcasts are even used in China to teach the English language.

It's rare that we see news reports of the life and times of the VOA and sometimes we forget the global role it plays. Such stories reassure us the VOA's credibility is generally high in a part of the world that is important to us.

Wrong Priorities For The King Holiday

WASHINGTON — While the dream of having Martin Luther King's birthday a national holiday is now reality, the second national celebration in King's honor is already off course in spirit and practice.

Money is one indication. The Martin Luther King Federal Holiday Commission has raised less than half of the $250,000 it needs to meet its proposed activities budget. Since most citizens and businesses think the commission receives federal funds, few contribute or even care about its activities.

But there are deeper, longer-term problems associated with the King holiday that go beyond budget and the commercialization of the event. For one, the activities planned by the commission don't add up to much, even for an exercise in hero worship. This month, an East Coast "Freedom Train" will take college students to Atlanta for a conference at the King Center and the planting of a time capsule. A national bell-ringing ceremony is also planned at 12:30 p.m. on Jan. 19.

King, no doubt, would be embarrassed that these events focus on him rather than on the civil rights movement at large. Before the King holiday loses its meaning, it should be reshaped and given a subtitle: Civil Rights Movement Day. Though King did a miraculous job in preventing this country from self-destructing, he was hardly the only player on the scene.

In the 1950s and '60s, America fought a second revolution to secure "inalienable rights" for black and white Americans. The fight was waged by thousands of blacks and whites in the streets and the churches, the courts and the schools of the American South. It was a struggle for racial integration and equal rights that changed the fabric of American life, a struggle whose reverberations continue to be felt in different ways, such as Rev. Jesse Jackson's pending presidential candidacy.

People forget that during the civil rights movement there were thousands of blacks and whites who were as courageous as Dr. King. And they should be honored as well as he. But no one remembers the others, especially the young. Ask college students if they've read about Rosa Parks' refusal to relinquish her bus seat to a white man in Montgomery, Ala. Ask them if they know about the sit-in by four black college students at a lunch counter in Greensboro, N.C., on Feb. 1, 1960. Chances are most people under 30 don't have the slightest appreciation of what civil rights activists endured.

Of course, King was always modest about his role in the civil rights movement. He knew the movement had made him, not the other way around. He was also full of self-doubt about his abilities, but tireless in his commitment, especially in dealing with a father who wanted him to give up the civil rights "nonsense" and return as a preacher to Atlanta, where it was safe.

There are serious dangers in focusing on King alone. "By idolizing whom we honor," writes black educator Charles Willie, one of King's classmates at Moorhouse College, "we do a disservice both to them and to ourselves. By exalting accomplishments of Martin Luther King Jr. into a legendary tale that is annually told, we fail to recognize this humanity — his personal and public struggles that are similar to yours and mine. By idolizing those whom we honor, we fail to realize that we could go and do likewise."

Demythologizing a hero is no easy matter, given the nature of Americans to simplify the past. We just have to accept that many of the present-day images of Dr. King are a bit exaggerated.

The major drawback to the King holiday is that people still think King was the movement. There is a feeling, especially among young blacks, that if we only had Martin Luther King around to lead us, everything would be all right. Surely, if there was a deeper understanding of the civil rights movement, its players and sacrifices, more people would ask themselves, "What can I do to carry on this cause?"

The likelihood of that happening is rather slim. In the interim, we're stuck with a holiday that idolizes Dr. King.

Before King died he acknowledged that his work was not done. The legislative and judicial victories the movement had won had done little to improve the lot of millions of blacks in urban America. The movement would have to pursue "substantive" rather than "surface" changes, he said. In King's book, that meant jobs and economic equality.

Surely, his friends, family and supporters would be better off spending their energies on this agenda than ringing bells in King's memory.

Early Start, Early Lockup?

WASHINGTON (AP) — The South rushed to the front of the 1988 political calendar to give the next presidential race a Southern flavor and hold out the prospect of a mercifully early end to the races for the Republican and Democratic nominations.

It is plausible, and some believe downright likely, that the ultimate choice for president will be evident by April Fool's Day 1988 — an extraordinarily early date in a year with wide open contests in both parties.

Between Feb. 8 next year, when Iowa holds its precinct caucuses, and the end of March, 27 states that will send nearly half the delegates to the Democratic National Convention, will have held their primaries and caucuses.

Republicans will begin choosing their delegates even earlier — the first event being the Michigan state convention, expected to be held late in January.

It now looks certain that 28 states that will send 1,247 delegates to the GOP National Convention will have held their primaries and caucuses by the end of March. That's more than half the 2,270 delegates who will select the Republican presidential nominee.

Never before have so many delegates been chosen so early in the process. The big reason for what politicians call front-loading was the desire of Southerners, particularly Democrats, to create a regional primary to give them greater influence in selecting the nominees.

Southern Democrats designed the move to counterbalance what they saw as the influence of Northern liberals and organized labor which had resulted in nominating presidential candidates unacceptable to the Southern voters.

The flaw in their reasoning was apparent to anyone who cared to remember Georgian Jimmy Carter and Texan Lyndon B. Johnson.

But they went ahead anyway and now the strategists for presidential aspirants in both parties are nibbling at their fingernails and trying to come up with a way to deal with the new math of the 1988 campaign.

The consensus appears to be that candidates will have to spend more time than ever in Iowa and New Hampshire and count on strong showings in those states to carry them through the South.

That should be dubbed the Gary Hart approach. In 1984, the Colorado senator ignored the South early in the campaign. But after his victory in New Hampshire his recognition in the region soared and he beat Walter F. Mondale in Florida and came within 3 percentage points of him in Georgia.

Under this reasoning, the candidates who do well in Iowa and New Hampshire will also do well in the South and should have the two nominations locked up by April 1.

It may not work that way.

If Bush or Sen. Bob Dole of Kansas or Rep. Jack Kemp of New York or former Sen. Howard H. Baker of Tennessee were to win both Iowa and New Hampshire, the race could be over. Each of the four is already well known and two early victories would make them apparently unstoppable.

The same would apply in the Democratic Party to Hart and Gov. Mario Cuomo of New York.

If there is no clear winner in Iowa and New Hampshire, the 18 states that hold primaries and caucuses on March 8 may split their delegates among several contenders.

Strength For Today

"All who joy would win must share it;

Happiness was born a twin."

We can no more imagine a happy person locking himself or herself in an ivory tower and devouring happiness all alone than we can imagine a trumpeter locking his trumpet in a closet and refusing ever to take it out and blast forth notes of triumph and exultation.

The only way to keep anything for ourselves is by giving it away to others. The only way to enjoy happiness is to share it.

When Christ fed the five thousand, the miracle appears to have occurred as he broke the bread and made it ready for distribution. This was not only a miracle; it was also a parable. Life is to be shared, not hoarded.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Early Friday morning, Jan. 9, eight minutes after midnight on one of the coldest nights of the year so far, a convoy of four U.S. Air Force missile launches accompanied by two vehicles equipped with computers (ready to expedite a launching) emerged from the gates of Greenham Common Air Force Base to practice convoy maneuvers on Salisbury Plains not far from Stonehenge. Despite the darkness of night, these midnight convoys have never been secret. Witnesses are always aware of their departure from the base, where they travel and seek cover and when they return.

These huge vehicles are often driven by young men of 20, 21. The ice-slicked roads, the darkness of midnight, the covert, dramatic setting of being simultaneously in charge of large, powerful vehicles and enormously powerful and dangerous weapons is a scenario super-charged with electric excitement.

I first learned of this particular convoy traveling over icy roads Friday evening. On Sunday I learned that two AP wires services as well as Public Radio were carrying news coverage of this particular convoy outing. One of the missile launches skidded on ice and turned over in a ditch. Witnesses, on approaching the scene of the accident, were turned away by U.S. Air Force personnel and warned if they came closer they would be shot. Neither British nor U.S. military personnel would say whether missiles were or were not present on this particular convoy. That is, of course, intrinsic in these kinds of games. There are 160 U.S. military bases in Great Britain.

Appearing Unaware

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is conspicuously keeping his distance from developments in the Iran-Contra scandal, and his people in the White House are portraying a chief executive who was only casually involved in a controversial decision to send arms to Tehran.

Reagan himself has little to say about it these days.

Although fallout from the sale of arms to Iran and diversion of profits to Nicaraguan Contra rebels dominates the news daily, Reagan has been virtually silent on the subject for weeks, leaving it to others to deal with what he knew and what he approved.

The president's last news conference — filled with Iran-Contra questions — was on Nov. 19. Now presidential spokesman Larry Speakes says it will be some time in February, at the earliest, before Reagan holds another.

He has made no move to clear up confusion about the contradictory recollections of current and former members of his staff on key questions such as when he first authorized sending arms to Iran.

Instead, the White House seems content to let the story unfold from congressional investigations and eventually from the investigation by independent counsel Lawrence Walsh and his staff of former prosecutors.

"There is nothing you're going to do that gets this behind you. There is no big-bang solution," said one White House official, speaking privately.

"There is nothing you can do to short-circuit this process," the official added, arguing that the administration's best strategy is to try to get out all the facts and promise to fix whatever was wrong.

Reagan will not call in former aides John Poindexter and Oliver North — both of whom have invoked the Fifth Amendment and refused to answer questions in Congress — and ask them what they knew because that would subject him to criticism that he was trying to be "the defense attorney, prosecutor, judge and jury," the official said.

When reporters protested earlier this week that Reagan has not given his version of Iran-Contra events, Speakes said, "Good. Well, in due course he will tell you."

Despite a multitude of questions about the Iran-Contra deal, Reagan has not made any public comment on it since two days before Christmas, when he said in a speech, "And I really mean, when all of these indications that maybe I know more than I'm talking about — I'm trying to find, too, what happened."

At the risk of portraying Reagan as being out of touch, White House officials have gone out of their way to emphasize that not only was he unaware that arms-sale money going to the Contras, but that he also had almost a hands-off attitude toward approving the arms shipments.

A White House official at a briefing for reporters distributed copies of a 2½-page memorandum presented to Reagan in January 1986 setting out the administration's rationale for selling arms to Iran. A note scribbled on the document showed that Reagan did not even read the memo but "was briefed verbally from this paper."

Nor did Reagan take the time to initial his recommendation on the memo in a space reserved for that purpose. Instead, Reagan's initials were scribbled by Poindexter, who resigned last Nov. 25 when North was fired.

Speakes said it is not a general practice for aides to initial things for the president but that it happens from time to time.

With the documents now included in an unpublished report by the Senate Intelligence Committee, which investigated the Iran-Contra matter, Speakes says, "I think in due course that he (Reagan) will certainly read the documents."

While that unpublished report is likely to contain information that is not flattering to Reagan, the administration is pushing for its public release.

"It will not clear up a lot of questions. It is not going to be positive (in terms of Reagan)," the senior administration official said. "But it will reinforce that the president wants to get all the facts out and will fix the process."

Terence Hunt has covered Ronald Reagan beginning with his 1980 campaign for the presidency and throughout his six years at the White House.

County Officials Want Local Pay Supplements For Teachers Banned

FAYETTEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — On split votes, representatives of North Carolina county governments have agreed to seek legislation that would abolish local teacher pay supplements and require the state to fund only one school system per county.

The resolutions were among 17 adopted Wednesday during the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners' conference on legislative goals through 1988. More than 350 county officials representing 82 counties of the state's 100 counties attended the meeting.

The resolution on teacher supplements calls for a constitutional amendment on the November 1988 ballot that would prohibit counties from using local tax funds "to compete with other systems for the employment of educational personnel."

The measure was adopted by a narrow margin after the failure of a substitute motion to eliminate supplements by requiring sufficient state teacher funding to attract and keep teachers.

"Through the adopted resolution, the association aims to lobby the General Assembly into bringing the state teacher pay schedule where it should be," said Jim Blackburn, the association's staff counsel.

Cumberland County Board of Commissioners Chairman Morris Bedsole said he is not "totally satisfied" with the measure but added that "this gives the people the right to decide whether to have the supplements."

Steve Hauge, president of the Cumberland-Fayetteville Association of Educators, said the proposal "would not be a very popular piece of legislation."

Hauge said locally-paid supplements are an integral part of educators' salaries in some counties, and that prohibiting such payments "could cause a drastic cut in salaries across the state."

"It would be nice that with this legislation there would also be a move to raise teachers salaries statewide," he said. "Perhaps if the county commissioners were willing to support some type of statewide legislation that would raise the state salaries of all educators to the level of the areas where the salaries are the highest, then it would get more support."

Blackburn said that if voters approved abolishing pay supplements and the state did not agree to increase teacher pay scales, then the association probably would apply lobbying efforts for the pay raises.

Blackburn said there is a strong possibility that 28 counties with more than one school system would eventually be forced to merge if the General Assembly enacts the second resolution requiring funding for only one system per county.

"It will become very apparent to the counties of how much it costs to maintain duplicate or triplicate school systems," Blackburn said.

Officials estimated that the state would save between $10 million and $15 million if the resolution became law. Blackburn said the 72 counties with only one school system lose money now being spent on administrative expenses in counties with more than one system.

Robeson County Commissioner Henry Douglas, whose county is divided over a proposal to merge its five school systems, said he voted for the resolution because "otherwise we don't know how to solve the problem ourselves. Even on the Board of Commissioners we have some for it and some against," he said.

Association members acknowledged that whatever decisions made during the two-day conference would face tough going in the General Assembly.

"For the next five or six months, the weather is going to be cloudy, windy, unsettled and even stormy," Legislative Goals Committee Chairman Robert S. Ewing.

I-95 Crackdown On Drugs Works

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — State troopers confiscated more than $343,000 in cash and $1.5 million in drugs during an eight-month surveillance program on Interstate 95, a route investigators say is a drug pipeline from Florida to northern states.

George Russ of the patrol's district office in Fayetteville said 18 pounds of cocaine, 44 pounds of marijuana and 30 marijuana plants have been seized from 27 motorists along the interstate.

While most of the drugs were seized from northbound cars, much of the confiscated cash was taken from motorists driving south to Florida from northern states, officials said.

Of the 27 people stopped, 24 were charged with drug law offenses, Russ said. Four have been convicted, he said. Trials are pending for others charged.

The estimated street value of the cocaine is $200,000, and the estimated street value of the marijuana is $1,500,000, said Barry Lea, director of the Fayetteville-Cumberland County Bureau of Narcotics.

The surveillance began after about a dozen troopers attended a federal drug raid on an Administration summer at Miami in April to learn how to spot drug traffickers, Russ said.

Bureau of Control officials have developed a number of techniques they learned to help them spot drug traffickers, but some of those arrested were driving rental cars with Florida license plates.

"We were just feeling it out to see if we have a problem," Russ said. "We must continue the program, and we hope to train more troopers and expand the program."

In addition to the drugs and money seized, seven vehicles were impounded, Russ said. One of the vehicles was returned to its owner while the rest are being held pending court dispositions, he said.

Much of the confiscated money has shown traces of cocaine on it, according to tests at the State Bureau of Investigation laboratory at Raleigh, said Ray Davis, the SBI district supervisor at Fayetteville.

In the biggest cash seizure, trooper T.L. Isaacs of Fayetteville stopped a motorist on April 19 in a rental car for speeding 75 mph in a 55 mph zone on I-95 at Fayetteville and discovered $224,610 in cash in the car trunk.

The motorist, en route from New York City to his home in Miami Beach, Fla., disclaimed knowledge of the money, authorities said.

After questioning by troopers and SBI agents, he paid a fine for speeding and resumed his trip while the cash was taken to the U.S. Marshal's office in Raleigh, authorities said.

Charlotte Police Officer Killed

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Charlotte police officer was shot and killed early Wednesday by a man holding a rifle near a condominium complex, a police spokesman says.

Police Chaplain said Police Officer Robert L. Smith, 27, was killed in the shooting. Smith had been with the Charlotte Police Department for seven years, Ms. Chapman said.

The victim, Dr. Ham Leroux, 32, of Charlotte was arrested in the shooting, Ms. Chapman said. He was listed in stable condition at Charlotte Memorial Hospital.

Chapman said residents of the complex had reported a man firing shots near the complex, and Smith was one of several officers to respond. She said she saw the man on a golf course beside the complex.

The officer turned his flashlight on the suspect, and that's when he was shot, Ms. Chapman said. "Several other officers worked their way close to the suspect and identified themselves as police officers. When he turned the other way, the suspect was shot with a shotgun, which wounded him in both

Officials Question Soup Kitchen Study

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Some mental health officials are questioning a study of North Carolina's soup kitchen patrons which says only 7.2 percent of the people interviewed had received services from the mental health system in the last three years.

Anthony D.M. Mulvihill, one of the authors of the study conducted by the United Health Service for Alcohol and Drug Abuse, said the statistic dispels the stereotype that street people are former mental patients.

"After all I had read and heard about de-institutionalized people, I expected a large number of people who had been institutionalized to be in a soup kitchen. That simply was not the fact," Mulvihill said.

Thomas P. Ryan, the director of the Mental Health Association in Forsyth County, suspects that the actual percentage is much higher than 7.2.

Ryan said that up to half of the nation's street people have been treated for mental disorders and that Winston-Salem is "pretty typical."

John K. Canupp, the coordinator for the new homeless outreach project of the Forsyth-Stokes Mental Health Authority, agrees with Ryan.

"At least 30 percent of our street people have some mental disorder," he said.

Ann Hensel, the director of Samaritan Soup Kitchen in Winston-Salem, agreed with many of the study's findings, but said that the implied focus on "street people" is misleading.

Death Suit

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — The family of a man killed during a car racing incident has filed a $1.5 million wrongful death suit against a man acquitted Oct. 29 of first-degree murder charges in Caldwell County.

Michael Dean Smith, who was acquitted of murder charges, and Michael Dennis Marley's childhood friend, Randy Triplett were named in the suit, which charges Smith and Triplett with gross negligence and "extreme and outrageous conduct" during a car racing incident that resulted in Marley's death.

The suit also claims the incident resulted in severe emotional distress to Marley's 10-year-old son, Michael Marley Jr. Marley, 28, a Lenoir truck driver, could have expected to live a full life and to provide for his family, the suit says. Michael Marley Jr., who saw his father die, has needed counseling and will suffer for the rest of his life, the suit says.

The criminal charges and the suit stem from the June 13 shooting death of Marley, in which he was struck in the back of the head with a bullet fired from a .357 Magnum.

I-40 Bypass

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Work for a new 21-mile Interstate 40 bypass south of Winston-Salem is expected to start late this spring at a cost of about $180 million, but the highway won't be finished until at least 1996, highway officials said.

Douglas Waters, a division engineer for the N.C. Department of Transportation, said the Board of Transportation plans to take bids in mid-March for construction on the first of nine sections of the new Interstate 40.

The road will stretch from Guilford County to the existing junction between I-40 and U.S. 421, Waters said.

If the state Board of Transportation approves the contract at its meeting in April, construction on the project should begin in May or June, Waters said.

Body Recovered

FORT MACON, N.C. (AP) — The body of one duck hunter has been recovered and the U.S. Coast Guard intensified its search Wednesday for two other men missing after their small boat was found capsized in Pamlico Sound near Great Island in Hyde County.

The victim was identified as William R. Wheless, 51, of Asheboro. Still missing are his sons, Steven Wheless, 28, and Mark Wheless, 25, said a spokeswoman for the Hyde County Sheriff's Department.

Wheless' body was found Tuesday about five miles southeast of Great Island, said Chief Petty Officer C.F. Jones of the Coast Guard station at Fort Macon.

Drug Tested

WILSON (AP) — Two clinics in Wilson are participating in a nationwide test of a drug to see whether it reduces fevers and body aches that come with flu.

The drug, called Virazole, is one form of a compound called ribavirin that also is under study for its ability to fight AIDS.

A spokesman for the institute organizing the flu tests said the drug was believed to block the reproduction of various viruses, from AIDS to influenza.

Ribavirin has been marketed since January 1986 for the treatment of a kind of pneumonia in infants caused by respiratory syncytial virus, said James Langford, senior director of the Institute for Biological Research and Development in Newport Beach, Calif.

Langford said Virazole was being tested against flu in private clinics rather than large university medical centers because the drug's effects needed to be closely monitored.

Greenville has an ordinance which prohibits the abandonment of vehicles on private property. To report an abandoned or junked vehicle, call the Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Surgeon Is Guard's Oldest WWII Vet

MAGNOLIA, N.C. (AP) — To his Duplin County neighbors Dr. Corbett Quinn is the family physician, but in the North Carolina National Guard, it's Col. Quinn — the guard's state surgeon and its senior member to have served in World War II.

Quinn was drafted in 1945 and served two years as a Japanese language expert. When he returned to Duplin County, all he wanted to do was go back to school and become a country doctor.

But in 1957, he signed up for the National Guard, and 16 years later became the guard's senior medical officer.

The post means that, in addition to his 590 neighbors in Magnolia, Quinn looks after the medical needs of 12,000 men and women in the guard.

"I have enjoyed my National Guard duty," said Quinn. "I feel a sense of duty to serve my country."

Military medicine, he said, has changed since the days of WWII. "It used to be that many of our cases resulted from poor conditioning and accidents," he said. "Training has changed that."

Argentine Judge Sets Bond

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Four Americans held in an Argentine jail on smuggling charges, including two from North Carolina, may not have enough money to pay $9,400 in bail, a diplomatic official says.

A federal judge Wednesday set the bail for the four Americans who were arrested in connection with an alleged plot to ship arms to West African guerrillas, authorities said.

A diplomatic official who spoke on condition of anonymity said he believed the four "are broke ... foreign legionnaires."

The official also said the four, who were extradited Saturday from Brazil, had given enough testimony to Judge Jorge Pisarenco to implicate "local big fish" in arms trading.

Pisarenco heard testimony Monday from Early and Steven Villa Sosa, of Fayetteville, N.C., regarding their role in the case. On Tuesday, Robert Edward Foti, of Scotia, N.Y., and Julio Rodriguez-Larrabazal, also of Fayetteville, testified.

The four have been charged with violating Argentine export laws in connection with an alleged plot to ship six tons of armaments to rebels fighting the government of Ghana leader Jerry Rawlings.

Since the four were acquitted in Brazil last October on charges of smuggling arms, the Argentine charges are limited to the export of inflatable landing rafts and motors used to power the crafts that were included in the shipment, officials said.

Pisarenco agreed to allow their release on bail because the charges against them did not specifically include smuggling of the arms themselves. Bail was set at 12,000 australes, or $9,375, each.

On Tuesday, a public defender was appointed for three of the Americans. The fourth, John Dee Early of Illinois, employed his own attorney, a U.S. official said.

Atlanta Service Launches King Remembrances

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Martin Luther King Jr., who would have turned 58 today, was remembered on the eve of the federal holiday in his memory by hundreds who packed the church where "the peaceful warrior" began fighting racism.

The bittersweet service Wednesday night at Ebenezer Baptist Church was one of many remembrances this week and next here in King's hometown and across the nation. Today is Martin Luther King Day, a federal holiday first observed last year. Some states will observe the holiday Monday.

U.S. Education Secretary William

Bennett was scheduled to teach an elementary school class today on King's achievements, then speak at the King Center for Nonviolent Social Change. Gov. Joe Frank Harris also planned a tribute to the Baptist minister who won the 1964 Nobel Peace Prize.

King was assassinated in 1968 as he stood on a motel balcony in Memphis, Tenn. His daughter, Yolanda King, was to attend a musical tribute to her father there tonight.

In the 2½-hour ceremony Wednesday night at Ebenezer Baptist, ministers remembered King and spoke of the need to keep working for his dream of peace and justice achieved through non-violence.

The church's pastor, the Rev. Joseph L. Roberts Jr., welcomed the congregation to the place "where the peaceful warrior began his battle" and spoke against bloodshed.

The Rev. Timothy McDonald of Atlanta's First Iconium Baptist Church painted a bleak picture of America.

"The truth has been gagged," McDonald said. "Righteousness has been locked up. ... The Statue of Liberty has blown out her torch and sat down.

"I wish we could allow Dr. King to rest in peace. But as long as racism is alive, Martin, you cannot rest.

"They thought they could kill the dream if they killed the dreamer. But the dream is alive and well."

The Rev. John Fife, pastor of the Sanctuary Movement Southside Presbyterian Church of Tucson, Ariz., said King's example helped his congregation decide to provide sanctuary to Central American refugees.

"History will look back and say Martin Luther King became the Martin Luther of the new Reformation," said Fife, who is on five years' probation for illegally harboring refugees and was in Atlanta by special legal permission.

The minister also apologized for Arizona Gov. Evan Mecham's cancellation Monday of Jan. 19 as the state's King holiday.

Mecham, a Republican, rescinded the order of his Democratic predecessor, Bruce Babbitt, making the day a holiday. The governor said Babbitt was "pandering to blacks" and lacked the authority to issue the order.

Other scheduled observances today included the unveiling of a King bust at Rhode Island's Statehouse, the naming of a plaza for King in Omaha, Neb., and a speech in Little Rock, Ark., by Lottie Shackelford, the city's first black female mayor.

In Mississippi, the state House was expected to consider a bill making Monday a holiday honoring King. Like many Southern states, Mississippi honors Confederate Gen.

Robert E. Lee on Jan. 19, his birthday.

In other King observances Wednesday, the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, which King founded, and the National Conference of Christians and Jews held interfaith prayer breakfasts in Los Angeles. The SCLC plans to present its second annual Martin Luther King Jr. International Award to South African anti-apartheid activist Rev. Allan Boesak there Monday.

In Memphis, the Congress on Religion and Racism is sponsoring a parade from a park where slaves once were sold to the motel where King was slain.

CONTROVERSIAL GIFT — American University President Richard Berendzen stands in front of the construction site of a $14 million sports-convention center being built on the campus in Washington. Saudi's $5 Million Gift Stirs University Community

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The $5 million gift that Adnan Khashoggi pledged to The American University in 1984 is troubling some students and faculty members who disapprove of the Saudi's involvement with arms trading and the Iran case.

But Richard Berendzen, president of the 94-year-old school, and others defend the gift, which is being used to build what they say is a much-needed $14 million sports and convention center that will bear Khashoggi's name.

"He's been one of the best donors we have had," Berendzen said. Despite reports that Khashoggi has encountered a financial crunch recently, Berendzen said the payments have been made promptly. Khashoggi is considered one of the world's richest men.

Echoing the sentiments of some of the school's 12,500 students, Kat Hurst, 21, a senior from Bethesda, Md., said, "I just happen to feel that the university should not be accepting money from an arms dealer."

Khashoggi gave the private university the money for the Adnan Khashoggi Sports and Convocation Center shortly after the school invited him to join the school's board of trustees.

In a Nov. 2, 1984 interview with university's student newspaper, The Eagle, Khashoggi said he donated the money because he was impressed with the "caliber of people" at the school, including Berendzen, with whom he had developed a social relationship.

"At the same time, American University in Washington, D.C., is a very important place to be," Khashoggi said. "This is the capital of the United States."

The 46-member board of trustees welcomed enthusiastically Khashoggi's gift that enabled the university, which is located in the city's fashionable northwest residential area, to break ground for the center on Nov. 1, 1985.

The facility, which will have a 4,000-seat indoor arena, an aquatic center, administrative offices, a bookstore and athletic practice rooms, is about half built and is expected to be completed in late 1987.

Questions about Khashoggi's gift surfaced after revelations late last year that the wealthy Saudi was a middleman in several deals involving administration-backed shipments of U.S. arms to Iran in 1985 and 1986.

The arms deals, along with the claimed diversion of profits from the weapons sales to rebels fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government, are under investigation in Congress and by a federal independent counsel.

Gidget Fuentes, editor of the school newspaper's editorial page, urged university officials to return Khashoggi's money and solicit new money to replace it.

"Remove Khashoggi from the BOT (board of trustees) and renounce his donation on the sports center..." she wrote. "Distancing ourselves from Khashoggi is probably the best thing to do — and we have a chance to do it."

But other students advised against that course.

"We can't afford the (construction) delay that would come if Khashoggi's money were cut out," wrote David Aldridge, who said it would be hypocritical to return the gift nearly three years after it was pledged.

Evidence Of Drugs Found In Crewmen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal investigators, after finding evidence of marijuana in both the engineer and brakeman of the Conrail locomotive that collided with an Amtrak train near Baltimore, are trying to determine whether drug use affected the crew's performance.

The Federal Railroad Administration revealed Wednesday that tests on blood and urine samples from both Conrail crewmembers showed marijuana, although officials said the tests could not determine whether the two were impaired at the time of the Jan. 4 accident in which 16 people were killed and 175 injured.

Sources close to the investigation, however, suggested the levels of marijuana revealed in the tests appeared to be of "a sufficient amount" to reflect possible chronic or recent use of the drug.

The tests showed no evidence of alcohol in either crewman at the time of the collision.

A National Transportation Safety Board spokeswoman, Rachel Halterman, said the agency would not comment on the test results, but The Washington Post quoted a drug expert as saying the marijuana levels were three to four times higher than standards used by transportation companies for the amount that impairs behavior.

Dr. Robert L. DuPont, the former head of the National Institute for Drug Abuse, was quoted as saying the levels indicate the men had used the drug either the day of the crash or the day before.

The railroad agency said the findings "do not constitute an allegation of fault or determination of probable cause" and will be used only as part of the overall investigation into the collision.

Air Force May Get Half Of Secret Pentagon Funds

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Air Force and its growing array of high-technology "stealth" weapons will receive at least half the $25 billion the Pentagon lists for classified programs, according to an analysis of the proposed spending plan.

The Air Force will receive an estimated $12.5 billion for a variety of programs known as "black" because little or no information about them is publicly released.

The rest of the proposed classified budget for fiscal 1988 will be spread among the Navy, Army, other defense agencies and intelligence agencies such as the Central Intelligence Agency and the National Security Agency.

The estimates are based on information provided by Pentagon and congressional officials, along with two separate reviews by the Center for Defense Information, a private group which has been critical of past Reagan administration defense proposals, and the Defense Budget Project, a private organization which seeks to inform the public about defense spending.

The studies show proposed spending for classified programs is increasing, but at a slower pace than in past years in the Reagan administration when annual increases were as much as 15 percent. Classified spending for the current fiscal year is estimated to be about $23 billion.

The classified spending is part of the administration's request for a $312 billion defense spending plan for the fiscal year that begins Oct. 1, which would be a 3 percent increase after inflation. That is the smallest increase yet sought by Reagan during his presidency.

The secret portions of the defense budget are considered by congressional committees behind closed doors. They are not publicly discussed by legislators before Congress votes, but House and Senate members can receive classified briefings if they choose.

The $25 billion request for next year includes some, but not all, of the money appropriated by Congress for intelligence activities such as the CIA and other agencies. The CIA also receives money through a separate bill providing for intelligence agencies, but that amount is not made public.

Gordon Adams of the Defense Budget Project said that in general, "The black budget as a share of the overall defense budget project seems to be leveling off."

He suggested one reason is because many of the major high-tech programs are now moving from the research phase into development, meaning more details are made public.

Lee Feinstein of the Center for Defense Information said, "Overall, the defense budget is leveling off and I think that's what we're seeing at the same time in the black side."

PASSING THROUGH GUARDS — A Druse militiaman, right, and a fighter of the Shiite Moslem AMAL militia armed with Soviet-made AK-47 automatic rifles stand guard as Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite leaves the office of AMAL leader Akef Haidar in West Beirut on Wednesday. Waite Says He's 'Encouraged' After Talks About Hostages

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite said he was greatly encouraged by meetings with Lebanese militia and religious leaders as he works for the release of foreign hostages.

He also urged Westerners to take "extreme precautions" when entering Moslem west Beirut because of the danger of being kidnapped.

Since Waite arrived Monday in Beirut, two more foreigners have been kidnapped: a Saudi Arabian Embassy employee and a French journalist. No group claimed responsibility for the abductions, which brought to 18 the number of foreigners missing in Lebanon.

Waite, a layman and personal emissary of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, told a news conference Wednesday that he was "greatly encouraged by the support that has been expressed for my humanitarian mission here. I've received a great deal of support and understanding."

"I have every reason to believe that good progress is being made," Waite said, stressing that he was "not going to be specific about certain plans, but there are plans."

There was no word yet whether Waite had established contact with any group holding hostages.

Waite met Wednesday with Assem Kansou, secretary-general of the pro-Syrian Baath Party in Lebanon. Kansou said Waite asked him to try to arrange a meeting with Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kanaan, who heads the Syrian army's intelligence operation in Lebanon.

Syria is the main power broker in Lebanon, with 25,000 troops in eastern and northern Lebanon under a 1976 peacekeeping mandate from the Arab League.

Sheikh Mohammed Mehdi Shamseddin, deputy president of the Higher Shiite Council and spiritual leader of Lebanon's Shiite Moslem sect, also met with Waite and later told reporters, "I call on all those responsible for the freedom and safety of the hostages to positively respond to any effort to free them and reunite them with their families."

Many of the hostages, including five of the six missing Americans, are believed held by Shiite extremists loyal to Iran's Shiite leadership.

Retired Col. Akef Haidar, second-in-command of Justice Minister Nabih Berri's Shiite Amal militia, who said Amal condemns kidnappings but failed to give Waite an outright pledge of support. He said even Lebanese must take precautions because of the country's 11-year-old sectarian civil war, and advised foreigners to avoid walking on the streets.

Waite similarly told the news conference he advised "foreign correspondents who want to come to this part of Beirut not to come for the time being."

He said his concern sprang from the abduction Tuesday of French reporter-photographer Roger Auque, the 13th foreign journalist kidnapped in west Beirut since Moslem militias seized control from the army in February 1984. Seven have escaped or have been set free.

"And I advise Westerners who are still living in this part of Beirut to take extreme precautions," Waite said.

A Saudi Arabian government announcement said the kidnapped Saudi, Bakr Damanhour, was abducted from its embassy's cultural office Monday night.

Police said unknown gunmen seized Damanhour hours after Waite arrived in west Beirut.

But a police spokesman, who refused to be identified further, said authorities were under the impression Damanhour was a Saudi businessman kidnapped for ransom.

The Lone Ranger Rides Again — With His Guns

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — The Lone Ranger retrieved his stolen guns and silver bullets, then rode off in a cloud of dust with a hearty "Hi Ho Silver!"

The horse was absent; actor Clayton Moore was in a Mercedes, Los Angeles County sheriff's Sgt. John Flaherty said.

But the dust was real. "The wind cooperated," said Flaherty, who heads the detective bureau at the Malibu sheriff's station, where Moore picked up the weapons Wednesday. "As he left our parking lot a huge cloud of dust did go up in the air, and he did yell 'Hi Ho Silver!' as he left."

And the masked man left a familiar calling card. "I have in my hand here one bullet, silver, .45 Colt," said Flaherty, 44, who grew up with the old "Lone Ranger" radio and television series.

"It has on the base of it 'The Lone Ranger.' I'm thinking about making it part of a pen set for my desk."

He said the bullet is solid silver in a casing that contains a dummy firing cap and no powder.

Houston police and the Texas Rangers are investigating who took Moore's suitcase after it was checked through a Continental Airlines ticket counter on Christmas Eve at Houston's airport, Flaherty said. The bag vanished somewhere between the counter and the plane Moore took to Los Angeles.

Two costumes, including a neckerchief with silver clasp, remain missing. The guns, bullets and belts are worth "somewhere in the neighborhood of $12,000," Flaherty said.

"I'm elated," Moore, 72, said before retrieving the six-shooters. "The guns, gun holster and gun belt do belong to my fans and to Clayton Moore, the Lone Ranger. I'm just glad they didn't get the Lone Ranger's mask and my hat."

Moore, who played the Lone Ranger during six of the show's eight television seasons from 1949 to 1957, said he carried the white cowboy hat with him during the flight. The mask was in his wife's purse, Flaherty said.

The pistols were bought by a Texas collector who didn't realize the items were reported missing, attorney Lum Hawthorn of Beaumont, Texas, said Tuesday.

The gear was returned by the collector, who did not want to be identified. Flaherty said investigators do not believe Hawthorn's client was involved in taking the items.

"We would just like to find out who his client got the guns from," he said.

Curran Backs Off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Suspended theology professor Charles Curran today ended his efforts to teach at Catholic University of America this semester, saying that to keep pushing could hurt his students and Catholic education in general.

But Curran, a priest, said he would continue his fight for eventual reinstatement.

The university on Wednesday, just before the beginning of the school's spring term today, canceled the three courses he normally teaches.

Curran said today that if he conducted the classes anyway while appealing the suspension, as he had said earlier he would do, students would not know whether they eventually would get credit.

In addition, Curran provided copies of a letter to him in which the university's chancellor, Archbishop James Hickey of Washington, threatened to invoke a Roman Catholic canon law provision that Curran said could spread the controversy to other Catholic institutions.

Audi Recalls Models With Auto Shifts

DETROIT (AP) — Audi of America Inc. today announced the recall of all Audi 5000 models with automatic transmissions, including those involved in a federal investigation into sudden acceleration which allegedly has resulted in at least four deaths.

"This is a total recall," said spokesman Joseph Bennett from company headquarters in Troy, a Detroit suburb. "If it's an Audi 5000 with an automatic transmission it is involved in this."

The recall covers some 250,000 cars.

Last year, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration launched a formal investigation into Audi 5000 models after receiving nearly 400 complaints that the cars suddenly accelerated from standstill to full power, most when drivers tried to shift transmissions into park.

NHTSA said at that time that four people had been killed and at least 175 had been injured in accidents stemming from sudden acceleration.

Audi, a subsidiary of Volkswagen of America Inc., announced a voluntary program last July to install a shift locking device designed to eliminate sudden acceleration. At that time, the company denied that the cars, which sell for about $20,000 apiece, had a safety-related problem.

Today, Bennett said Audi 5000s owners would be notified by mail that there was a safety problem in the cars. He said the notification includes an announcement that 5000s models would be recalled for inspection and repair of an engine idle device, which the company has said does not contribute to unexpected acceleration.

Bennett added there is a continuation of a recall of all 5000 models for adjustment of a floor mat and installation of a brake pedal pad.

The plan to change the voluntary installation of the shift-lock devices in automatic transmissions to a formal recall drew criticism from the private Washington-based Center for Auto Safety. It has urged that the government order Volkswagen to repurchase all Audi 5000 models because the sudden acceleration problem could not be repaired.

"If NHTSA allows Audi to do this, it's putting a seal of approval on a phony repair that will lead to the death of more Americans," The Detroit News today quoted center director Clarence Ditlow as saying.

But Bennett said analysis of the shift-lock device is premature.

Sources Say Reagan Pushed Cut In Big Pay Hikes

By JUDITH HAVEMANN and LOU CANNON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A decision to reduce substantially recommended pay increases for top federal officials, judges and members of Congress was made primarily by White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan with minimal involvement by the president, according to two sources familiar with the process.

The pay decision illustrates the growing power of the chief of staff, whose views prevailed over those of Attorney General Edwin Meese III. Meese fought hard and publicly for bigger raises, other sources said. One source said that Meese was not informed of the decision to slash the recommendations until after President Reagan had gone into the hospital for surgery on Jan. 4.

"Going into the weekend they (federal judges) felt they were going to succeed" in getting the large increase "but Regan turned it around," according to one government official. "My own feeling," said the source, "is that Regan in his own inimitable fashion decided the president had enough grief with Iran and he didn't need any more grief from giving government officials a big pay increase."

White House spokesman Rusty Brashear called that contention "ludicrous." The president was quite involved in the decision, he said. "The attorney general's views were welcomed, and the issue was discussed at a Cabinet meeting at which the president and attorney general were present. Everyone had an opportunity to have his or her say."

One source said the decision was made in a conference call during the first weekend in January and that a decision document was sent to Reagan in his residence in the White House and signed there that same weekend, probably before he went into the hospital.

The pay decision has produced "a lot of bitter people," one official said. Several judges said the decision was a bigger blow because it was so unexpected.

"We are tremendously disappointed," said U.S. Appeals Court Judge Frank M. Coffin, head of the Committee on the Judicial Branch of the Judicial Conference of the United States, the policy arm of the federal judiciary.

"A slap in the face is too strong," said James Ferguson, chairman of the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, which recommended raises of up to 80 percent to make up for inflation over the past 20 years. "but the commission is disappointed. We felt we had done what was right."

The president raised expectations in meetings with Cabinet officials, members of the pay commission and congressional leaders by leaving the impression that he favored substantial raises, according to five sources.

Meese spoke to Judge Spencer Williams, an old friend and the president's former chief of staff in California, shortly after Christmas. Williams, head of the Federal Judges Association, said in an interview that Meese told him that the president "hasn't made up his mind yet, but it looks fine; there's every reason to be optimistic" that a big raise would be recommended.

"I'm an outsider," said Williams, "but I think everybody was pretty optimistic. We were unaware of any dissent. We felt the climate was pretty favorable to restore the pay cuts" the pay commission said judges have suffered as a result of inflation. "Some staff people in the White House recommended something different to the president."

Meese refused to comment on the issue, saying through a spokesman that "he feels very strongly that any advice he gives the president be kept confidential."

Officials at the Supreme Court were also optimistic and the likelihood of substantial pay raises was discussed at a meeting of judicial officials, two sources said. Some members of Congress confidently expected that the president would recommend a figure of slightly under $100,000 for them.

But when Budget Director James C. Miller III announced the final decision 11 days ago, something had happened.

Instead of the $175,000 recommended by the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries, the president officially proposed to give his new chief justice a 3 percent increase, to $115,000.

For Supreme Court associate justices, the president called for a salary of $110,000, a 2.6 percent hike, instead of the $165,000 recommended by the commission.

U.S. district judges, such as Williams, would get a 10.4 percent increase ($8,400) instead of the $49,000 raise that the commission recommended.

The biggest increases recommended by the White House — 16 percent, from $77,400 to $89,500 — were proposed for Congress, but this was far less than the $135,000 salary proposed by the commission.

Details of the decision to scale back the commission's recommendations are closely held within the tight circle surrounding Regan. But interviews with 12 government officials and three other players in the pay controversy suggest that the decision was essentially made by Regan and that, as one source said, the "attorney general got rolled."

Under a law passed in December 1985, the president's decision had to be sent to Congress with the federal budget on Jan. 5, to go into effect automatically 30 days later unless overturned by both houses of Congress.

The president appeared sympathetic when the commission presented him with its recommendations on Dec. 15, according to Ferguson, though Reagan didn't endorse the full recommendations.

The president met with top Republican leaders before leaving for California and was advised to keep his recommendation under $100,000, according to one source, or "all hell would break loose."

On Jan. 1 officials were still conferring in Washington about a Regan proposal to freeze the lower levels of executive pay. This would have automatically frozen the pay for the Senior Executive Service — top career officials whose salaries are linked to executive salaries — and reduced the number of people affected, according to a source.

One White House official said that the president had decided earlier to grant a pay raise in two steps — one in 30 days and the rest next year. This option was thrown out, probably on Jan. 2, on legal grounds.

On Friday, Jan. 2, as the president flew home from California, Meese "fought very hard" for sending the commission's full recommendations to the Hill, another source said, but "he didn't prevail."

Budget Director Miller sent a "wide range of options" to the president, according to an informed official, apparently while he was still in California. The proposal ranged from "doing nothing to going all the way to sending out the full recommendations." In fact, the range was so broad that the president complained of "too many options," the source said.

Whatever the paper flow, the final decision was made "over the course of the weekend of Jan. 3-4. The president's schedule for that Saturday shows no meetings and he went into the hospital Sunday for prostate surgery."

The decision was announced in a news release Monday morning as the president was emerging from surgery.

Shrinking Dollar May Help But Does Contain Pitfalls

By PETER COY
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar's latest skid on currency markets should help shrink the mammoth U.S. trade deficit, but it also could re-ignite inflation and even trigger a recession if it gets out of control, some economists say.

The dollar dropped sharply again Wednesday as the White House said it expected the dollar to fall further.

Economists said that while the dollar's drop aids the Reagan administration in its contest with Congress and major U.S. trading partners, it carries dangers as well.

"This is a high-risk strategy. I call it an international game of chicken," said Robert Brusca, chief economist of Nikko Securities Co. International Inc. in New York.

"It's comparable to navigating a ship in rocky waters. You have to zig and zag at the right time, or something is going to get you," said Irwin Kellner, chief economist for Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

The dollar's fall is heightening tensions with major U.S. trading partners, particularly the Japanese, whose exports to the United States have been devastated by the cheaper dollar.

"Some people in Japan think the dollar-yen rate is manipulated by the U.S. government. I'm afraid that right now in Japan there has been growing some anti-American feeling," Yoshihisa Kitai, an economist in the New York office of the Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan, said Wednesday.

In Paris, French Finance Minister Edouard Balladur said European nations and Japan "consider that the current drop of the dollar is excessive, unjustified and damaging for the world economy."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes denied that the U.S. government is doing anything to encourage a lower dollar, but the dollar continued to drop against other currencies.

Just two weeks into the new year, the dollar has sunk further against the West German mark than it was expected to fall in all of 1987 in a recent poll of 48 international economists by Blue Chip Economic Worldscan of St. Louis.

Against the Japanese yen, the dollar is nearing the Blue Chip forecast for its value at the end of 1987.

The dollar began its most recent slide late last month after the government reported a record monthly trade deficit of more than $19 billion for November; the economy showed signs of weakness and oil prices rose.

On the positive side, a further fall in the dollar eventually should shrink the trade deficit, which topped $170 billion last year, and that could help the Reagan administration dissuade Congress from enacting protectionist legislation.

A deflated dollar helps U.S. producers by making imports more expensive and exports cheaper.

The lower dollar also is putting intense pressure on Japan and West Germany to take the advice of the United States and stimulate their domestic economies. If they do, it could spark a worldwide economic revival, which would create a bigger market for U.S. exports and shrink its trade deficit.

But the falling dollar could cause a new round of inflation, especially if domestic manufacturers take advantage of the breathing room from higher import prices to raise their own prices.

It even could cause a recession. If foreign investors saw no end in sight to the dollar's fall, they would be reluctant to buy dollar-denominated securities, such as Treasury bonds.

Since the United States relies heavily on foreigners to finance its debt, U.S. interest rates would have to rise to keep the foreign money flowing in. High interest rates would make it more expensive for U.S. companies to borrow, stifling economic growth.

Because of high levels of debt worldwide, a recession could cause serious damage. Third World nations would not be able to make payments on their foreign debt, dealing a shock to the international financial system.

"The international situation has become extraordinarily intractable," Brusca said. "Things are moving not in the direction you would want at all."

Kitai said the Japanese and West Germans believe the United States ought to do more to right its own trade imbalance before calling on trading partners to change their economic policies. West Germans are worried about inflation and the Japanese about their large government deficit.

Farm Program Backed

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The nation's largest organization of family farmers directed its lobbyists Wednesday to oppose any effort in Congress to rewrite the nation's year-old farm program.

The decision by delegates to the American Farm Bureau Federation's annual meeting here reflected the organization's support of the federal agriculture program's effort to cut growers' reliance on government aid.

It also was a rebuff to the calls by some smaller farm groups and their supporters in Congress for production controls and other government measures to boost crop prices.

In fact, the only revision to the Food Security Act of 1985 endorsed by the federation was a Reagan administration proposal to slash farm subsidies by 30 percent, instead of the currently scheduled 10 percent, over the next three years.

The federation, in a policy statement supporting the five-year farm program, said it strongly opposed "any type of mandatory production, acreage control or marketing quotas."

Production controls are supported by such rival farm organizations as the 250,000-member National Farmers Union and the 150,000-member American Agricultural Movement.

Hospital Gives Hinckley Pass Over Secret Service Objections

WASHINGTON (AP) — A mental hospital gave would-be presidential assassin John W. Hinckley Jr. a 12-hour pass for a holiday meeting with his parents last month, despite objections by the Secret Service.

The Secret Service, notified about a week before the Dec. 28 pass was issued, consulted U.S. Attorney Joseph E. diGenova but found it could not block the decision by the St. Elizabeths Hospital in Washington, Secret Service spokesman Richard Adams said Wednesday.

"This was a decision made by the hospital. It was a medical decision they made over our objections," Adams said. "Our evaluation of Mr. Hinckley hasn't changed. We still feel him to be a threat to our protectees."

Hinckley, 31, has been confined in the federal institution since being found innocent by reason of insanity in the March 30, 1981, shooting of President Reagan.

Reagan was vacationing at his California ranch when Hinckley, accompanied by a hospital escort, met his parents, Jack and Jo Ann Hinckley, at a center in Reston, Va., run by Prison Fellowship Ministries.

DiGenova, in a statement Wednesday, said Hinckley was released under a federal statute that places the decision in the hands of the hospital administrator and does not require court permission.

"If there had been a request for the court's permission, we would have opposed release because we do not believe that anyone who tries to nullify a national election with a bullet deserves the privilege of moving freely in a civilized society," diGenova said.

Toll From European Weather Climbs To 200

By MICHAEL WEST
Associated Press Writer

LONDON (AP) — Hungry wolf packs scavenged near Czechoslovakian villages, Soviet tanks pulled drivers from 6-foot snowdrifts and soldiers were called out to clear the streets as Europe remained paralyzed by snow and cold blamed for at least 200 deaths this month.

British travelers were urged to stay home because some roads were buried under snow. In France, churches opened to shelter the homeless. In Austria, 28 members of an military band suffered frostbite after playing outdoors.

Although temperatures were somewhat milder today, the British Meteorological Office said there was no end in sight to the cold wave that has gripped the continent since last week. Temperatures dipped to 27 degrees today in Dublin, 23 degrees in Copenhagen, 12 degrees in Stockholm, 9 degrees in Vienna and zero in Helsinki.

Travel by air and sea was disrupted. France closed nine airports and Italy closed five due to snow or ice. A Dutch freighter with a crew of seven was missing in the storm off the southeast coast of Sardinia. In Denmark, authorities warned small boats not to leave harbor without assistance from an icebreaker.

Reports from Associated Press bureaus put the total of weather-related deaths in Europe, excluding Poland and the Soviet Union, at 88 since Friday.

Poland and the Soviet Union, which only issued reports for all of January, said the total in the two countries since Jan. 1 stands at 112 — 77 deaths in the Soviet Union and 35 in Poland.

Among the deaths were 10 from exposure reported by a Hungarian newspaper and a 79-year-old West German woman who wandered from a home for the elderly and was found frozen near the Berlin Wall.

London's Daily Telegraph newspaper said Soviet tanks based in Hungary plowed through deep snow Monday to rescue motorists, mostly Austrians and West Germans, after their cars ran into snowdrifts en route to Budapest.

"We had no fuel left and had given up hope when we heard a noise like thunder," the newspaper quoted an Austrian motorist as saying.

"It was a Soviet tank that came charging through the 2-meter-high (6-foot) snowdrift. They smashed into our car before they came to a stop but at least we were saved."

The newspaper quoted the motorists as saying they had feared death as winds reached 62 mph and temperatures fell to minus 4 degrees.

The Czechoslovak newspaper Rude Pravo said hungry wolf packs have been driven by the bitter cold to scavenge near isolated communities in search of food, including cattle and geese.

In Britain, Royal Air Force helicopters on Wednesday flew nine pregnant women to hospitals. One woman, who was in advanced labor, was airlifted from a highway in Norfolk when her ambulance was caught behind a snowplow that failed to break through drifts. Eighteen inches of snow had fallen in the area.

Army personnel carriers ferried food and relief supplies to snowbound towns and coastal islands in Kent in southeastern England. In London, government buildings and churches were opened to house the homeless.

Many British roads and rail links were impassable. A notice at London's Charing Cross railroad station, which operates commuter lines to the southeast, warned travelers: "There is very little chance of anyone reaching their intended destination and even less chance of them getting back again. Anyone who does insist on traveling does so entirely at their own risk."

In France, Premier Jacques

Chirac called in nearly 2,000 soldiers to help clear streets in Paris after the capital was blanketed by 5½ inches of snow, the fourth largest accumulation on record.

Paris, which usually gets only a dusting, has just two snowplows and city workers began working with shovels and wheelbarrows to clear thoroughfares.

Hijack Suspect Arrested

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — Police have arrested a suspect in the 1985 hijacking of a TWA jetliner to Beirut, the Frankfurt prosecutor's office said today. The Lebanese man was carrying what authorities suspected were explosives.

The man was arrested at Frankfurt airport Tuesday after customs police discovered he was carrying "material that could be explosives," Jochen Schroers, a spokesman for Frankfurt prosecutor Hans-Eberhard Klein, told The Associated Press.

Authorities believe the man was preparing a bomb attack, but it is unclear whether the attack was to have been in West Germany, Schroers said.

Police declined to give the suspect's name. He is in investigative custody and has not been formally charged.

Interior Minister Friedrich Zimmermann told journalists in Bonn today the suspect was "a big fish."

The TWA airliner was hijacked June 14, 1985, on a flight from Athens to Rome. It was taken to Beirut, where the hijackers killed a U.S.

Navy diver and held 39 other Americans for 17 days before releasing them.

The man arrested Tuesday had flown to Frankfurt from Beirut on Middle East Airlines, Schroers said.

The suspect, who was carrying a forged passport, was identified by fingerprints as one of the hijackers of the TWA plane, security sources said. The sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said he is believed to belong to a Shiite Moslem group.

To Life Group Helps People Cope With Death

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP)—People need to learn to help each other more in coping with death and other losses, say the founders of an educational organization dedicated — and called — To Life.

"Life is a series of losses," said Alexis Stein, executive director of To Life, which sponsors programs and counseling on bereavement, suicide, separation and divorce and other crises. "When a community is hit by a tornado, people pull together because they are united in pain. But when a loss hits an individual, that person is often forced to grieve alone."

"If you're there for others, when it's your turn, there'll be someone there for you," said Howard Winokuer, who founded the non-profit grassroots organization with Ms. Stein in 1979. There are other organizations dealing with bereavement and loss, they say, but To Life is unique in that it also focuses on "life enhancement."

To that end, it sponsors talks by people like "Professor of Love" Dr. Leo Buscaglia and Dr. Howard Halpern, author of a column for singles and the book "How to Break an Addiction to a Person." It organizes workshops on enhancing children's self-esteem and on breaking free of stress and depression.

But running throughout the activities of To Life is the theme that loss is both an inescapable part of life and an opportunity to grow. The "small deaths" of life include not only the loss of loved ones but also the losses of youth, material possessions, independence, moving away, friends who move away, pets, even belief in Santa Claus.

"In our society, we tend to try to avoid pain and to put on a happy face," said Ms. Stein, 42. "That's denying our humanity."

Winokuer, 36, said the lack of communication about loss could lead to all sorts of other problems, such as drug abuse and suicide. Working with clergy, teachers, students, grieving relatives, the terminally ill and others, To Life's four professional staffers hold about 150 workshops and seminars around the country each year to improve that communication.

"The time to talk about death is not when you're dying, it's when you're healthy," said Winokuer. That applies especially to children, whose eyes are shielded when it comes to death, said Ms. Stein.

Healing the wound of loss first requires a full acknowledgement of the sadness or anger it causes, said Ms. Stein. Crying, exercise, talking and journal writing may provide an outlet for some of the pain.

"Loss is a scar that must be cleaned or it will develop an infection," said Winokuer. "If the grief isn't dealt with, it's going to fester... After the scar heals, it's still there, but there isn't any pain. It's there to let you know that what you lost was an important part of you."

The support of friends is an important part of the healing, despite the tendency of many friends to try to ignore the death or make the grieving person forget it.

"What do you say (to a grieving person)? Your greatest present is your presence, that you were there to touch or hug," said Winokuer.

The next step in grieving involves changing the environment, such as painting the room of a family member who has died. Finally, the grieving person "reinvests in living" in small steps — going out, meeting new friends, even joining activities he or she used to enjoy with the family member.

To Life also sponsors programs on suicide, including teen suicide prevention.

DEDICATED TO LIFE — Howard Winokuer and Alexis Stein of Charlotte, N.C., are the founders of To Life, an educational organization that helps people with bereavement and life enhancement.

Traffic Games Are Needed

There's a message here somewhere. The faster automobile manufacturers are making cars go, the slower the cars are moving in today's traffic.

At the peak of a rush hour in big cities, cars are averaging two blocks to a gallon and there's a projection for Los Angeles that by the year 2000 the average speed on the freeways will be 17 miles per hour.

A tortoise running away from home averages 23 miles an hour. A '48 Chevy whose motor has died rolls downhill at 30 m.p.h. The only thing that travels slower is the U.S. mail.

Can you imagine what this will mean to a jet-speedy-quick-fast-developed-while-you-wait-just-add-water-turn-right-on-red-same-day-delivery society? Why, they're not going to sit still in a line of borderline gridlock and listen to a traffic reporter in a helicopter telling them they should have taken another route. No siree.

I think we're going to see a new wrinkle in our lifestyle. Everyone knows how much Americans hate to waste time. Whether it's leisure activities or work... they are driven to fill every minute of every hour.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Oh sure, you can always read, take your blood pressure, clean out your glove compartment or drink coffee, but where are the challenges?

Drivers need to be kept busy. So, what can you do at 17 miles an hour or less? Games are good. How about MILEAGE BINGO? A cluster of drivers will all throw in a buck or two and the person having the best poker hand on his mileage gauge will win. The more serious players might want to engage in RADIATOR ROULETTE. This is for drivers who make book on the exact second a radiator will blow. That's fun for the whole family.

For a while, a Phoenix disc jockey, Alan Chilcoat, KOY, conducted stranded-in-traffic aerobics spots. At the height of the rush-hour traffic, drivers would don a headband and roll down the windows and do arm circles or grab the steering wheel and do buttock tucks.

It's not too crazy to foresee car tops made out of trampolines where drivers can actually jog while waiting for traffic to move.

Look for television cassettes to get into the act. "HONK IF YOU WANT TO SEE PARADISE" would bring a messenger on a bicycle with films to fill in your time while you wait for the lights to change.

Already there are signs appearing in car windows for people expressing their availability to date. They list measurements, interests, phone numbers and addresses.

Gridlock doesn't have to be a G word. Look upon it as an alternative to the bar scene... at a reduced speed, of course.

Was Invitation An Insult?

DEAR ABBY: When a person says to you, "If you have no place else to go for Thanksgiving, you are welcome to join us," would you call that an invitation or an insult? — WONDERRING IN ST. PETERSBURG

DEAR WONDERRING: It was, no doubt, intended as an invitation, but it could have been more graciously extended.

DEAR ABIGAIL VAN BUREN: This is in reference to the letter from "Private Person," who described himself as a slim, trim, 26-year-old, happily married man who is now serving in the U.S. Army. His problem was that he enjoyed wearing women's underwear. You advised the private to keep the matter private.

To enlighten yourself regarding the military and what it can do for those who find themselves burdened with a desire to wear women's underwear, you should call the military's installation hospital and speak to the psychiatrist about the medical and psychiatric assistance that this man is entitled to gratis.

But now that you have already advised the soldier to keep his problem hidden, perhaps you should learn what might happen to such soldiers if they continue to hide such aberrations. Then your advice to others in similar circumstances might change, as it should, in order to be correct. — JAY M. HAMILTON, LIEUTENANT COLONEL, U.S. ARMY (RET.), GRANT'S PASS, ORE.

DEAR ABBY: "Private Person" wrote to you about being in the Army — and wanting to wear women's undergarments. You advised him that the two just wouldn't fit together.

When I was with the Navy SEAL Team in Vietnam, we ALL wore panty hose. We were out in the muck of

P.S. Many of our wives and girlfriends reported embarrassing moments when shopping in San Diego stores for dozens of size XL and XXL panty hose. (We didn't have the nerve to go buy them ourselves.)

— JERRY J. FLETCHER, LA JOLLA, CALIF.

DEAR JERRY: The things I learn while writing this column! You Navy commandos wore panty hose openly, out of necessity, but the aforementioned Army private wore women's lingerie for kicks, which is quite another matter.

Cross-dressing is nothing new; it's been with us for centuries. It's a compulsion — not something that requires "curing," unless, of course, it creates marital or martial problems.

Marlene Among Honorees

By MARGARET ROACH
L.A. Times-Washington Post

NEW YORK — Most industries toil toward an annual awards night, and the world of fashion is no exception. In a fete Monday night at the Metropolitan Museum — inside the imposing Temple of Dendur to be precise — the garment industry's top talents toasted a list of 11 honorees that included some of its best-known designers and others: a magazine, a model, a cable television personality and Marlene Dietrich.

Dietrich, who along with designer Bill Blass was one of two persons cited for "lifetime achievement" in fashion, did not attend the Council of Fashion Designers of America dinner, and was represented by Mikhail Baryshnikov, who accepted her award. The actress, whose exotic personal style made it acceptable — indeed glamorous — to toss a man's trench coat over an evening gown or wear tailored suits and trousers by day then change to drop-dead femininity at night, was praised for her lasting impact as an inspiration to designers of women's wear. Last year, Katharine Hepburn received a similar honor.

Also absent from the festivities was Nancy Reagan, announced in the formal invitation as "honorary chairman" of the evening's proceedings.

Besides Blass, award-winning Seventh Avenue designers included Geoffrey Beene (for two consecutive hit seasons); Donna Karan (for her easy, put-together look now dominating fashion); Ralph Lauren (for his retailing successes), and David Cameron (a new face on the scene). Elle, one of the newest and brightest entries into the vast fashion magazine arena; Dalma Callado, one of the industry's longtime favorite models, and Elsa Klensch, the on-camera voice of Cable News Network's fashion broadcasts, were among the other honorees. Many Would Trade Benefits For Total Care

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly 40 percent of the people receiving Social Security would be willing to take a cut in benefits to assure all medical costs would be paid for the elderly, according to a survey of the elderly issued today.

The findings come as Congress prepares to consider a plan to insure the elderly against catastrophic illness by increasing Medicare premiums by about $5 a month, far less than the Social Security reductions of $20 to $30 a month envisioned in the survey questions.

Roughly four in 10 of the 2,314 people over 65 questioned also said they would be willing to accept Social Security cuts to guarantee that nursing home costs would be paid for the elderly, that home health services be provided so they could continue living at home and that no elderly person would live in poverty.

"We find it remarkable that so many elderly Americans agree to accept such trade-offs," said the report by Louis Harris and Associates.

"This is especially so in light of the more limited interest shown in some of the other measures for aiding the elderly that were explored in this survey" — such as renting out a room, using their houses to get cash through so-called reverse mortgage home equity loans or doing volunteer work to build up credits for their own future needs.

"But some of the other measures are rather new and unfamiliar to the public," the survey noted. "The results in the case of Social Security may reflect the elderly public's greater familiarity with the Social Security system ... their longstanding trust in it, and their willingness to use it or extend it or revise it in order to solve remaining unmet needs of other elderly citizens."

The survey, which was issued at a news conference, was done for The Commonwealth Fund's Commission on Elderly People Living Alone. The Commonwealth Fund is a national philanthropic foundation created in 1918 to identify long-term health care needs.

The telephone interviews were conducted from last June 11-July 31 after "tens of thousands of households" were screened to assure a representative random sampling. "In all ... a sampling effort equivalent to more than 35 separate normal Harris national polls was required," the report said. It claimed to have a 2 percent margin of error.

Although the survey was aimed largely at developing information on the more than 8 million elderly Americans living alone, many of the results — such as the willingness to trade Social Security benefits for increased health care — applied to the elderly population as a whole.

In addition to the 40 percent who said they would make such swaps, roughly 20 percent choose the "depends or not sure" response. Only 40 percent said flatly they would not be willing.

In other areas:
—25 percent said they would perform volunteer work now for other elderly people in exchange for work credits for free help in the future; 36 percent said they were not able and 34 percent not willing. The rest were unsure.

—5 percent said they would be interested in renting out a room in their house to increase income; an additional 4 percent would be interested if "a religious group or community group could guarantee an acceptable boarder" and yet an additional 2 percent would be interested if that boarder was a college student who would help out around the house.

—8 percent said they would be interested in a plan where they "could obtain a credit card ... where you borrow up to 75 percent of the value of your home, as you wanted it or needed it. You would not have to repay the loan until you choose to sell your home, or until you die." An additional 6 percent said they were not sure and 85 percent were not interested.

Knit Coat Is Fashion Right For 1987

At last, there's a versatile jacket designed for the woman who wants elegance and style, comfort and warmth from the same garment. The fingertip length and V-neck design make this coat flattering to many shapes and sizes.

Imagination and accessories are all you need to dress up or dress down this perfect knit coat. Layer it over turtle-necks or blouses; accent it with scarves and jewelry.

So simple to knit and assemble, this jacket is worked on size 17 needles with a gauge of two stitches per inch. The combination of bulky or boucle yarns knit in seed stitch creates the right texture for shape retention. The deep square-set armholes are easy to wear, and the shaped sleeves accented by bands of stockinette and seed stitch make the knitting interesting.

Easy-to-follow directions are given for small, medium and large sizes. Measurements for the finished coat (buttoned) are 38 1/2, 43 1/2 and 46 1/2 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Speedy Knit Coat, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-011187 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-011187 by sending a check or money order for $39.95 for small, $42.95 for medium or $48.95 for large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions, and yarn in your choice of ecru heather or plum with boysenberry heather.

The padded-shoulder look, so fashionable today, often presents a problem for the hand knitter. Your directions may be for the big, oversized look, but usually the correct fit and look will not be achieved without shoulder pads.

You may have difficulty finding a good color match in purchased shoulder pads and, of course, this adds extra expense to your hand-knit garment. The solution? Knit or crochet your own shoulder pads. You'll often have sufficient yarn left over, or you can use worsted-weight yarn in a matching or blending color.

For most shoulder pads, you can follow these directions: Using double strands of worsted-weight yarn (or single strands of a bulky yarn), cast on 2 stitches using size 10 needles. Work in garter stitch. Increase 1 stitch at the beginning of each row until piece is the desired width, and then work even (with no more increases made) for three or four rows. Bind off and sew to your garment, placing the widest edge at the sleeve edge.

When you want a heavily padded shoulder, knit bigger shoulder pads using these directions: With size 10 needles and worsted-weight yarn, cast on 25 stitches and work in stockinette stitch until you have a square. Bind off loosely.

Fold the square into a triangular shape and sew up one side of the triangle. Stuff the triangle lightly with poly fill and sew the remaining side. Sew into your garment again having the wide edge along the sleeve edge. Be sure to match the center of the pad with the garment's shoulder seam.

If you prefer, you can crochet the pads. With a size H hook and knitting worsted-weight yarn, chain 23. On Row 1, work a double crochet in the 4th chain from the hook and in each remaining chain across. Chain 3 and turn.

For Row 2, skip the first 2 stitches of the previous row, then decrease 1 over the next 2 stitches. Repeat this decrease across row; you'll be left with 10 stitches. Chain 3, turn. Repeat Row 2 once more and you will have 5 stitches.

On the final row, skip the first stitch of the previous row and decrease 1 over the next 2 stitches. Work one more decrease, leaving 3 stitches. Fasten off and sew in garment.

To decrease over 2 stitches, work in the following manner: Work a double crochet to the point where 2 loops are on the hook. Leave them on the hook and then work a double crochet in the next stitch to the point where there are 3 loops on the hook. Yarnover and pull yarn through all 3 loops at once.

For an oversized crocheted pad, work a square piece in single crochet and follow the instructions for finishing given for the big knitted pad. Have fun!

Network Officers Named At Meet

Evelyn Darden has been named president of Women's Network of Pitt County.

Other officers are Vicki Gregory, vice president; Sally Lucido, communications; Carolyn Powell, treasurer, Louise Downing and Annette Parker-Butler, program committee.

The program was presented by members on holiday experiences and a special achievement of honor.

The purpose of network is to promote and enhance the professional standing of women in Pitt County. Meetings take place the first Thursday of the month at the Greenville Country Club. For further information call 758-1161.

WANTED TO RENT
Designer, female, seeks heated studio/room/space, preferably unfurnished, with good natural lighting. Daytime use only.
Telephone 752-5287

A computer figure analysis will be offered at the Agricultural Extension Service office Monday through Friday.

The program will help determine a woman's bone structure as well as vertical and horizontal figure type. "The most becoming necklines and collars, sleeves, jackets, skirt style and length and accessories will also be given," said Evelyn Spangler, home economics extension agent.

The analysis will be done by appointment only. Call 752-2934, extension 370 for appointment information.

Woman's Club Hears Speaker

Mary Outerbridge was guest speaker at the meeting of the Greenville Woman's Club held last week.

Ms. Outerbridge spoke on the literacy program at Pitt Community College and the need for more volunteers in this program. Ms. Outerbridge has been with PCC for the past 8 years in adult basic education. Elsie Eagan, chairman of the education department, introduced the speaker.

President Betty Tate presented Barbara Hall with pins for services rendered to the club as president and past president.

Dot Harrigan, chairman of the arts department, thanked members for participating in the upcoming District Arts Festival. First place winners in the local competition for the categories were Jean DeVanzo, original design of crewel work; Dee Alley, counted cross stitch picture; Doris Ballenger, knitted leg warmers, and Jeanne Rabey, original oil paint, still life. These items will be entered in the district event in Aurora Feb. 28.

Jane Hulsey was welcomed as a new member.

Club members will visit the Greenville Villa Nursing Home Monday 19 at 3 p.m.

Hostesses for the meeting were Marilyn Alexander and Mary Ann Clark.

In 1985, Pitt County's average weekly manufacturing wage was $32.98.

Ayden

The Ayden plant, operated by Blue Bell since June 1979, produces Wrangler and Rustler denim jeans.

Edmundson, who said the plant will begin to lay off people as early as next week and will be "closed by the end of January," said all employees who have been with the plant for as much as six months will receive "severance pay."

"We are trying to relocate people," according to Edmundson, who said about 10 of the plant's 90 workers will be relocated to Blue Bell plants in La Grange and Windsor.

"Three other businesses have called" about hiring Ayden plant employees and he said "interviews will be held in the plant."

China Leadership May Be Changed

By JIM MANN
 L.A. Times-Washington Post

PEKING — The Chinese Communist Party on Wednesday convened an extraordinary high-level meeting that, according to Peking-based diplomats, may soon approve changes in the party leadership.

The diplomats said that it appeared increasingly likely that the meeting was called to approve the ouster of Hu Yaobang, the top aide to Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping, as general secretary of the party.

Foreign Communist newspapers have printed rumors that Hu will be replaced as party chief by Premier Zhao Ziyang. The premier is another Deng protégé, but he has concerned himself primarily with economic reform and not with questions of political or ideological change.

Hu has not been seen in public for more than two weeks. A spokesman for the party's International Liaison Department said Monday that Hu has health problems. The spokesman would not respond to questions about whether Hu is still general secretary of the party.

A Western diplomat said that he believes that the party has called a special meeting of the Central Committee, the 209-member group responsible for setting the overall direction of party policy.

"The meeting is now under way," he said.

Generally the Central Committee meets only about once a year. It met last September and has not been expected to meet again until next fall. One source said that he was not sure whether the full Central Committee

Teachers May Seek New Posts

"A.G. Cox will lose teachers in the fourth and fifth grade because there will be no more fourth and fifth grades at the school. Half of those teachers will go to Robinson and half to the new school," Keeter explained. "However, it could be that some of them would be certified in grades four through six, and a small number of them could possibly stay."

"The teachers at Cox in the sixth and seventh grades would not have to move unless they opted to move," he said. A.G. Cox School will contain sixth through eighth grades beginning with the 1987-88 school year.

"We met with the teachers at G.R. Whitfield School Wednesday and will meet with the faculties at W.H. Robinson and A.G. Cox during the next two weeks," Keeter said. Forms were distributed for the personnel to complete, and central office staff members will return to the schools to pick up the forms and "answer questions or share concerns." On the forms, the teachers can request the school at which they would like to be employed.

"We will use the criteria and at the same time try to honor the requests whenever possible," Keeter said. "We will look at the needs of the students as first priority and the needs of the staff as a second priority."

Keeter said each staff member — including the custodial staff, office workers and lunchroom personnel — will complete a form and be able to request the school at which they wish to work next school year.

"The allotment of personnel is based on two factors — student count and square footage of the program. The lunchroom is based on plate count," Keeter said. "Allotment formulas will be applied to each school to make the allotment of personnel, and some will have to change due to the change in students."

"For instance, the custodial staff in some of the schools will be smaller. Cox will reduce the number of mobile units, so the custodial staff will be reduced and assigned to new school. The size of Cox will be reduced so lunchroom staff will be assigned elsewhere."

"We cannot make the final determination about how many students will be at each school until the attendance lines presently being discussed are finalized. That is a key factor in determining the population of the school," Keeter said.

However, when the attendance lines are finalized, the criteria will be taken into consideration and the staff will be assigned. "At the same time, we will take into consideration the desires of the individual personnel. We are going to honor their requests any time we can.

"Any personnel that has to move due to the allotment formulas will have first priority at the new school, he said. "We have to take care of those people first, and then any others in the county who want to move to the new school can request to move to the new school."

"We have had more requests for the new school than we normally have for any other school throughout the year," Keeter said. "There is a lot of interest in teaching at the new school from teachers throughout the county."

'Catfish' Hunter Elected To Baseball Hall Of Fame With Cubs' Billy Williams

NEW YORK (AP) — The waiting finally ended for Billy Williams, while Jim "Catfish" Hunter won another close one.

Williams and Hunter were elected to baseball's Hall of Fame Wednesday night, culminating careers marked by consistency but separated by their teams' results.

Hunter, with a 224-166 lifetime record in 15 seasons for the Kansas City and Oakland A's and the New York Yankees, played on five World Series winners. Williams, who hit .290 with 426 home runs during 16 years in the Chicago Cubs' outfield and two more seasons with Oakland, never played in a World Series.

Williams' frustration continued as he was bypassed by the Baseball Writers Association of America in Hall of Fame voting the last five years, missing by just four votes in 1986.

But that ended Wednesday night. "I guess the smile on my face tells it all. 'Wait 'til next year' is now a phrase of the past," Williams, 20th on the all-time home run list, said from Glen Ellyn, Ill. "I can truly say it's one of the most exciting moments of my life."

Williams was named on 354 of 413 votes for 85.7 percent, well above the required 75 percent. Hunter got 315 votes, five over the minimum, and reached the Hall in his third try after missing by 30 votes last year.

Jim Bunning, the recently elected Congressman from Kentucky, came up 21 votes short of election. He missed by 40 votes last year.

None of the other 25 players on the ballot got as much as 50 percent of the vote. Orlando Cepeda was fourth with 179, followed by Roger Maris with 176 and Tony Oliva with 160.

While Williams was cautiously optimistic this would be his year, partly because there were no new big names on the ballot to splinter support, Hunter said he was surprised that he was elected on his third try. "I don't know if I deserved it," said Hunter, who spent Wednesday boar hunting near his Hartford, N.C., farm. "I was a control pitcher who hit spots."

"I had players behind me to back me up. If I didn't play on those teams, I wouldn't have won as many as I did and I wouldn't have been in the World Series six times."

Hunter won 20 or more games from 1971 through 1975 and finished with a career earned run average of 3.26. His reputation as a big-game pitcher may have helped him as much as Williams' lack of post-season play hurt him.

Hunter was 5-3 in World Series games and still holds Championship Series records with 10 starts and 69 1-3 innings pitched. The closest Williams got to a World Series was the 1975 American League playoffs

Carolina, Duke Take ACC Wins

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina took first place in the Atlantic Coast Conference with its 12th straight victory, a 95-80 basketball triumph over a Virginia team from which Coach Dean Smith expects trouble in the future.

Senior guard Kenny Smith led the way with 19 points, one of four Tar Heels in double figures as North Carolina raised its record to 3-0 in the ACC, one-half game ahead of Clemson, which took a 94-77 triumph over Furman in non-league play.

Despite the margin of victory, Tar Heel coach Dean Smith said he expects the return match with Coach Terry Holland's Cavaliers on Feb. 8 will be a lot tougher.

"... Terry's club will be there. He always has his club ready," Coach Smith said. "We'll struggle in Chapel Hill."

After five early lead changes, North Carolina went ahead for good at 16-15 on Kenny Smith's three-point field goal with 14:49 left in the first half. At 9:18, Andrew Kennedy's baseline jumper brought Virginia's within 26-23, but the Tar Heels rushed away for a 51-37 halftime lead.

North Carolina outscored the Cavaliers 9-3 at the start of the second half.

"The first 15 minutes is the best we've played this year," Coach Smith said. "I liked our start to the second half. The defense did that. We were very active defensively tonight."

The Tar Heels got 17 points from J.R. Reid, 16 from Joe Wolf and 15 from Jeff Lebo. North Carolina is 14-1 overall.

Virginia, getting a game-high 21 points from Andrew Kennedy, dropped to 9-4 and 1-2. The Cavaliers shot 32 of 69 from the field for 46.4 percent.

"Right now we're a bunch of whipped puppies," Holland said. "I think by Saturday, we'll be ready to play. If we had to play right now, though, I'd have to say we wouldn't be prepared."

Horace Grant scored 33 points and grabbed 14 rebounds as Clemson stretched its unbeaten string to 15. The Tigers meet Maryland Saturday afternoon to try and regain the share of first place it held before North Carolina's victory.

The 6-foot-10 Grant, who is fifth nationally in field goal percentage, hit 15 of 19 shots from the floor and three of four from the foul line in tying his career high.

"We had a great first half and Horace played like an NBA first-rounder, and that was the name of the game," Ellis said after his team built a 52-37 halftime lead.

No. 14 Duke stopped Maryland 85-61 to raise its league mark to 2-1. Outside the league, Georgia Tech downed North Carolina A&T 83-67.

Tonight, 17th-ranked North Carolina State is at home to Wake Forest.

Danny Ferry scored 20 points, Kevin Strickland had 18 and Tommy Amaker added 17 as the Blue Devils opened each half with a strong scoring burst.

Amaker scored eight of his 15 first-half points while pacing Duke to a 19-4 lead after 7:43 of play, including two of his team's six three-point baskets during the opening 20 minutes.

Duke came back from a 45-36 halftime lead with a 21-8 streak to build a 66-44 lead. Maryland comeback closed the gap to 69-55. Ferry, who also grabbed 19 rebounds, scored eight of his points during the second-half spurt.

"I think the rebounding helps the rest of my game," said Ferry, who was in double figures in scoring and rebounding for the fifth time this season. "That's something you really have to concentrate on. I only had four (rebounds) in my last game, and we lost."

"I heard the coaches yelling that we needed to score," Ferrell said. "We got into a situation where I had inside position and had the open shot. I was looking to score and taking my shot. I wanted to create something."

Ferrell scored 11 points in the last seven minutes of the first half and finished with 24 points as Georgia Tech raised its record to 9-4.

Also in Charlottesville, former Maryland coach Lefty Driesell made his debut as an analyst for televised ACC games. He worked with play-by-play man Mike Patrick.

Navy Game Sold Out

General public ticket allotments for the East Carolina-Navy basketball game for Feb. 2, have been sold out, ECU ticket manager Brenda Edwards announced today.

Student ticket pickup will begin at 8 a.m. the day of the game at the Minges Coliseum Ticket office. The tickets will be distributed on a first-come-first-served basis to students presenting proper ID until 3 p.m. por until the supply is exhausted, Edwards said.

In the unlikely event that all tickets are not picked up, the remainder will be on sale to the general public after 3 p.m.

"Because of the excellent student support that we have had at our home basketball games, our administration is allocating more than 50 percent of the capacity of Minges Coliseum to our students for this game," Edwards said. "Once that allotment is taken, we will have no more tickets."

No one will be admitted at any point during the game without a ticket. The doors will not be opened after halftime.

The game will feature national Player of the Year candidate David Robinson of the Midshipmen.

The capacity of the coliseum is 6,500.

Zernhelt Joins Maryland Staff

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — John Zernhelt, for five years the offensive line coach at East Carolina University, has been named to the same position at the University of Maryland.

Zernhelt was a lineman on three Terrapin bowl teams while an undergraduate at Maryland.

The 33-year-old native of Newton, Pa., will be joining the staff of new head coach Joe Krivak. He replaces Ralph Friedgen, who left the Terp staff to join former coach Bobby Ross' staff at Georgia Tech. Friedgen has worked 10 years as an assistant to Ross, the last five at Maryland and five years earlier at The Citadel.

Zernhelt earned three letters as an offensive tackle at Maryland from 1974 through 1976, during Krivak's first stint as an assistant coach with the Terps.

"My decision to leave the East Carolina program was a difficult one," Zernhelt said, "but the opportunity to return to my alma mater with Coach Krivak was a major factor."

For the past five years, Zernhelt was offensive line coach at East Carolina under coaches Ed Emory and Art Baker.

Prior to that, he served four years at Ferrum College, coaching four Coastal Conference championship teams and one National Junior College championship, and one year at Marshall University.

Before leaving East Carolina, he was the veteran among the Pirate coaching staff, having served three years under Ed Emory and two under present coach Art Baker.

The resignation of Zernhelt leaves two vacancies on the Pirate staff. The resignation of Ben Griffin, who had just been hired a week earlier as offensive coordinator, was announced Tuesday night. Griffin, who had just arrived on campus from the University of New Mexico, was hired away by new Arizona coach Dick Tomey.

Baker said Wednesday that other schools were talking to several of his staff members but did not foresee, at this time, any other vacancies.

Zernhelt's wife, Katie, has also been an integral part of the Pirate program, serving as a photographer for the Pirate Sports Information Office. She also has worked as a photographer stringer for the Daily Reflector.

Kookaburra III, Despite Troubles, Tops Australia

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Kookaburra III ignored mainsail troubles on the final leg and limped home to beat Australia IV today and take a protest-free 1-0 lead in the America's Cup defender finals.

Leading easily on the last leg in winds rising to 20 knots, Kookaburra III's most head fitting gave way, leaving her mainsail flapping in the breeze. But skipper Iain Murray had enough of a lead to beat Colin Beashel and Australian IV to the finish line by one minute, 34 seconds.

Stars & Stripes and New Zealand took the day off and will resume their challenger final series Friday. Stars & Stripes, skippered by Dennis Conner, won the first two races in the best-of-seven series.

Kookaburra III's victory was her second over the Australia IV, but Wednesday's triumph was thrown out when both yachts were disqualified over a pre-start collision.

This time, Murray steered Kookaburra III away from the start in a safe position, but two seconds behind. However, he caught Beashel before the first mark and led the rest of the way.

In the defenders series opener Wednesday, Australia IV was hit in the stern by Kookaburra III before they could even get across the starting line of the first race in the best-of-nine finals.

Both yachts immediately raised red protest flags, something the Aussie defenders did 43 times in their preliminary races.

The collision occurred as both yachts were circling in pre-start maneuvers and Beashel jibed so that Kookaburra's bow came in contact with Australia IV's reverse slanted transom.

Kookaburra III, undamaged, went on to overtake Beashel midway in their race after the two yachts raced side-by-side much of the way.

Meanwhile, the New Zealand camp spent the day off trying to figure out a way to catch up with Conner and Stars & Stripes. After losing only once in 38 previous races, skipper Chris Dickson has seen his boat blitzed twice by Conner and his San Diego-based entry.

Should Stars & Stripes win, New Zealand syndicate head Michael Fay said he would break with tradition and give the Australians, not the challengers, any support they might need.

With two more victories, Conner will get his chance to take back the trophy he lost to the Australians in 1983, ending 132 years of American possession.

Dickson told a post-race news conference Wednesday he would not cry the "if only" blues about what might have been.

"We were not sailing to our potential today. Maybe the wrong sail combination, sheet leads. We need a little more practice getting our Porsche from fourth into fifth gear. And, he added, "Stars & Stripes is very fast."

Iowa Rallies To Nip Illini

By The Associated Press
Iowa is 16-0 and looking for the Comeback of the Year award.

The second-ranked Hawkeyes rallied from a 22-point second-half deficit Wednesday night for a 91-88 overtime victory over No. 8 Illinois.

"I was just literally speechless in the locker room afterwards," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said after his team ran its Big Ten Conference record to 4-0. "The effort was outstanding. It couldn't be stronger. I just can't believe we ever came back from 22, especially on the road."

The Hawkeyes trailed 61-39 with 16 minutes to play and were able to make up the deficit as the Fighting Illini, 12-3 and 4-1, had trouble with Iowa's full-court defense and fell apart at the free-throw line.

Illinois led 52-35 at halftime, shooting 65 percent from the field as Tony Wysinger, who had a career-high 34 points, was virtually unstoppable. "They just disrupted us totally. We had trouble with their shooter (Wysinger) in the first half, but we showed more poise in the second half," Davis said. "I thought we got rattled several times in the first half."

His team didn't appear rattled in the final 20 minutes as Iowa finished with a 49-31 rebounding advantage while outscoring the Illini 25-7 from the free-throw line.

"We just didn't play well," Illinois Coach Lou Henson said. "We just didn't get it down. They were too tough around the basket. Mistakes and missed free throws lost the ballgame."

In other games involving members of the Top Twenty Wednesday, No. 3 North Carolina beat Virginia 95-80; No. 6 Purdue defeated Minnesota 86-

59; No. 10 Auburn downed Tennessee 66-56; No. 12 Clemson beat Furman 94-77; No. 13 St. John's defeated Brooklyn College 70-48; No. 14 Duke beat Maryland 85-61; No. 18 Pittsburgh edged Seton Hall 87-85; and No. 19 Navy defeated Lafayette 75-71.

B.J. Armstrong, who had a chance to give Iowa the victory in regulation but missed an 18-footer with two seconds left, canned a 15-footer with 20 seconds left in the overtime gave the Hawkeyes the lead for good.

The Hawkeyes grabbed an early lead in overtime on two free throws, but a 3-point field goal by Wysinger put Illinois back on top 84-83. From there, the teams traded baskets until Armstrong's field goal put the Hawkeyes ahead 89-88 with 20 seconds left. Brad Lohaus, who led Iowa with 23, made two free throws for the final margin.

"We wanted to make the game respectable. We didn't want to get blown out," Lohaus said.

"I'm not sure if we're that terrific, but we keep winning," Davis said.

No. 3 North Carolina 95, Virginia 80

Kenny Smith scored 19 points as the Tar Heels cruised to their 12th straight victory and avenged last year's defeat at Virginia when North Carolina was top-ranked and 21-0. North Carolina, 14-1 and 3-0 in the Atlantic Coast Conference, took the lead early and was never threatened by the Cavaliers, 9-4 and 1-2, as the final score was the closest the teams were in the last 10 minutes.

J.R. Reid added 17 points, Joe Wolf 16 and Jeff Lebo 15 for the Tar Heels. Andrew Kennedy's 21 points led the Cavaliers.

No. 6 Purdue 86, Minnesota 59
Purdue forced 27 turnovers in coasting to its sixth consecutive victory and a 13-1 record, the best start for the Boilermakers since 1937-38. Despite missing starter Melvin McCants, who was sidelined with a bad back, Purdue Coach Gene Keady was able to play his reserves throughout the home game as he beat his former assistant at Western Kentucky, Clem Haskins.

"I thought our bench played really well," Keady said. "It enabled us to hold out Melvin to get ready for Iowa. He could have played if he was needed."

Doug Lee's 19 points paced Purdue, 5-0 in the Big Ten, while Kim Zurcher led the Golden Gophers, 9-5 and 2-2, with 16 points.

No. 10 Auburn 66, Tennessee 56
Auburn was able to overcome hot first-half shooting by the visiting Volunteers to win the Southeastern Conference game.

"We went in at halftime and saw that they were shooting 64 percent," Auburn Coach Sonny Smith said. "We knew we were going to win. We knew there wasn't any way they could keep that up."

Smith was right. The Tigers, 10-2 and 3-1, used a 12-0 run in the final minutes to put the victory away. Frank Ford's 15 points led Auburn, while Tennessee, 8-5 and 2-2, was led by Tony White's 16 points.

No. 12 Clemson 94, Furman 77
Horace Grant scored a season-high 33 points and grabbed 14 rebounds as the Tigers remained undefeated. The 6-foot-10 Grant made 15 of 19 shots from the field as Clemson, 15-0, used a 12-0 run for a 19-5 lead with six minutes gone and the closest the visiting Paladins, 8-5, could get was 11 points late in the game. David Brown led Furman with 25 points.

No. 13 St. John's 70, Brooklyn C. 48

Shelton Jones' 18 points and 13 rebounds led the Redmen, 11-2, to their 29th consecutive homecourt victory. St. John's broke the game open early with a 12-2 run that gave it a 22-11 lead. The Redmen's largest lead was 56-34 with 9:11 to play. Spius Kilpatrick led the Kingsmen, 6-9, with 16 points.

No. 14 Duke 85, Maryland 61
Sophomore Danny Ferry was a one-man gang for the Blue Devils, scoring 20 points, grabbing 19 rebounds, handing out seven assists and blocking three shots in the ACC game.

Duke, 12-2 and 2-1, took a 19-4 lead with Tommy Amaker scoring eight of the points, six on 3-point field goals. The Blue Devils used a 21-8 streak at the start of the second half to open a 66-44 lead.

"We had more depth inside, and we figured that would wear them down," Ferry said. "We had to capitalize on it."

Maryland, 3-5 and 0-4, was led Steve Hood's career-high 22 points.

No. 18 Pittsburgh 87, Seton Hall 85
Demetres Gore's 18 points included six free throws in the final minutes as the Panthers managed the road victory. Gore tied the game 81-81 with two free throws with 2:12 to play. Charles Smith put Pittsburgh, 12-3 and 2-1, ahead for good with a layup one minute later. Seton Hall, 10-4 and 1-4, closed to within twice but couldn't tie the score.

No. 19 Navy 75, Lafayette 71
David Robinson scored 30 points and grabbed 15 rebounds but the visiting Midshipmen needed some clutch foul shooting to hold off the Leopards, 5-8.

Peoples Bank Hits A New Low

On Home Equity Loans Through April 15, 1987.

Introducing Peoples Equity Line that features a limited-time 7% interest rate that's well below prime. And, there's no origination fee. Lately you've been bombarded by bank advertising telling you all you ever wanted to know about home equity loans and how you can take advantage of the last of the big tax loopholes. And, it's all true.

But, why pay more for a home equity loan than you have to? The next time you need cash for a car, tuition, home improvement or other major expenditure, write yourself a loan with your Peoples Equity Line. Clippers Snap Losing Streak

By The Associated Press

The Los Angeles Clippers haven't proven much except for how bad they are this season. The team with the NBA's worst record has gotten tired of that — and the finally did something about it.

The Clippers snapped a 16-game losing streak with a 123-105 rout of Denver Wednesday night. The 5-31 Clippers got 22 points from Michael Cage and Mike Woodson added 20 for their first victory since beating Seattle Dec. 10.

The streak was three games shy of tying the franchise record for losses, set in 1981-82.

"We're a better team than we've shown," Woodson said. "It's no fun going through something like that. No one wants to be the laughingstock of the league. I sure don't."

"Tonight I saw something I haven't seen all year, and if we can keep that up, we're going to win some games." They won this game, their 100th home game at the Sports Arena since moving from San Diego to Los Angeles in 1984, by building a 17-point margin in the third quarter and never letting the Nuggets challenge.

"Thank God the streak is finally over," said Cedric Maxwell, who stopped to shake hands with a few of the 6,948 fans in attendance.

The loss ended a three-game Denver winning streak, despite 39 points by Alex English and 18 by Mike Evans coming off the bench.

"It was downright embarrassing," said English, who scored 22 of his points in the first half and committed five of the Nuggets' 27 turnovers. "They lost 16 in a row and they come home and beat us. They seemed ready to play and we weren't. It's over."

Elsewhere Wednesday, it was Washington 118, New Jersey 100; Philadelphia 96, Atlanta 93; Boston 117, Dallas 108; Detroit 104, Cleveland 87; Seattle 130, San Antonio 104.

Bullets 118, Nets 100
Moses Malone led seven Bullets in double figures with 21 points as he moved into 12th place on the NBA's all-time scoring list, ahead of Dolph Schayes and Bob Lanier. He also kept the Bullets in hot pursuit of the 76ers.

Malone was dealt to Washington last summer in a trade which brought Jeff Ruland to Philadelphia. Ruland returned to the 76ers' lineup Wednesday night following a knee injury.

"This can be a good running team. We have a lot of quickness up front. We've got to take advantage of the situation," said Malone, who added eight rebounds and hit all 11 of his free throws, giving him 41 straight successful foul shots. "I want to run against any team. We've got to make it work."

The Bullets won their fourth straight game. The last time they had a longer winning streak or better record was in 1984-85, and only Jeff Malone is left with the team since then.

"We're still adding new players, and having to adjust to injuries, and it makes it more difficult than we'd like," Bullets Coach Kevin Loughery said, "but this year is going to be a period of adjustment."

Jeff Malone contributed 17 points for Washington, John Williams and Michael Adams 13 each, Jay Vincent and Darwin Cook scored 11 each, and Terry Catledge 10. The Nets were led by Orlando Woolridge's 21 points.

76ers 96, Hawks 93
Ruland had missed 34 games with a knee injury. His performance in returning to the lineup Wednesday was a key to host Philadelphia's victory.

"It's great to be out there again," the 6-foot-11 center said after he scored 19 points, had five rebounds, two assists and blocked a pair of shots.

Ruland played with a brace on his left knee following arthroscopic surgery on Nov. 19.

"The knee felt great. It doesn't bother me at all. I promised myself I wouldn't even think about it (the knee), just go out and play my game," Ruland said.

Also playing his game was Charles Barkley, who scored 24 points, including a dunk for the winning points. Atlanta didn't score in the last 5:18 of the game.

Barkley was 10-of-11 from the field and had 20 rebounds, handed out four assists and blocked three shots.

Dominique Wilkins' 27 points was high for Atlanta.

Celtics 117, Mavericks 108
At Boston, a balanced attack led the league champions as Larry Bird and Kevin McHale each scored 25 points. Danny Ainge had 24, Dennis Johnson 20 and Robert Parish 16 in Boston's ninth victory in the last 10 starts. Bird also had 15 rebounds.

The Celtics broke open a close game with a 40-point third quarter. The Mavericks, who lead the Midwest Division, were hurt when Mark Aguirre, their leading scorer, was ejected on two technical fouls.

Dallas was led by Sam Perkins with 29 points and Rolando Blackman with 25.

"Larry got going in the third quarter," Boston Coach K.C. Jones said. "We were getting him open with the picks. You have to stick the ball in his hands and get him started. He's been off for a long time and we should have got him going earlier."

Pistons 104, Cavaliers 87
Detroit swept its home-and-home series with Cleveland behind 26 points by Adrian Dantley, a season-high 22 from Sidney Green and 20 by Isiah Thomas. Detroit also won 103-101 on the road the previous night.

The Pistons prevailed despite 23 points and 16 rebounds by Brad Daugherty, the Cavaliers' top pick in the draft.

"It's a matter of experience," Thomas said of the sweep. "You know when to play. You know how hard to play. You know the important parts of the basketball game. That's something you learn through experience."

SuperSonics 130, Spurs 104
Dale Ellis scored 25 of his game-high 32 points in the first half and Xavier McDaniel added 20 for host Seattle.

Ellis scored 17 points in the first period, including a three-point shot to open the scoring for Seattle. Alton Lister scored 14 points and had a game-high 15 rebounds for Seattle.

The Spurs, who lost their third consecutive game, were led by rookie Walter Berry, who had 24 points. Alvin Robertson added 17. San Antonio has now lost six of its last seven games and 14 of its last 15 on the road.

with Oakland, when the A's were swept by Boston and Williams went 0-for-8.

Williams finished with 2,711 career hits, batted over .300 five times and in 1969 became the last player to hit four doubles in a game, which ties for the major-league record.

Williams was the NL Rookie of the Year in 1961 and went on to hit 20 or more home runs for 13 straight seasons. He led the league with a .333 average in 1972, which came during a streak in which he played 1,117 consecutive games.

Hunter, who won the AL Cy Young Award in 1974 and pitched a perfect game in 1968, was a six-time All-Star, as was Williams.

Induction ceremonies for Hunter and Williams — bringing the Hall of Fame total to 199 — are tentatively scheduled for July 26. The Veterans Committee is scheduled to announce results of its voting on older players in early March.

Williams and Hunter were scheduled to be in New York this morning for a press conference.

"I don't know whether to laugh or cry. It hasn't sunk in yet," said Williams, the Cubs' current batting coach.

Cubs General Manager Dallas Green, who pitched against Williams for Philadelphia in the 1960s, said Williams' election "was long deserved."

"He should have gotten it earlier," Green said.

Hunter said his "first dream was to become a major league ballplayer" and that he "never dreamed of being in the Hall of Fame."

"This is the greatest thing I could get through baseball. I always hoped something good would happen and it did."

Hunter got his nickname from flamboyant A's owner Charlie Finley. But after winning three straight World Series championships for Finley, Hunter became the first major free agent of the multimillion dollar era on New Year's Eve 1974 when he joined George Steinbrenner's Yankees.

Hunter, a right-hander, signed a five-year contract for $3.5 million and then went 23-14 with a 2.58 ERA in 1975. The Yankees lost the World Series in 1976, but came back to win in 1977 and 1978.

Following the top five in this year's Hall of Fame voting was Harvey Kuenn with 144 votes; Bill Mazeroski 125; Maury Wills 113; and Ken Boyer and Lew Burdette with 96 each.

This was Burdette's final year of eligibility on the BBWAA ballot. He now must wait three years before being eligible with the Veterans Committee.

"I was a little nervous, not as nervous as I would have been if I'd have been playing Virginia tonight," Driesell said. "I enjoyed it. It's a lot of fun."

And what is the difference, in Driesell's opinion, between getting ready to coach an ACC game and being prepared to watch one?

"The only thing is I have to get to the game earlier. When I coached, I got here about 35 minutes before the game," Driesell said. "Now I have to get here about an hour and a half before the game. That's the worst thing about it."

Edwards Atop Hope Standings

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Plain old good luck played an important part in the best round of his career, a 61, David Edwards said.

ry of the PGA Tour, Al Geiberger in 1977 with a 59.

Edwards, on the other hand, got the most out of his play at Indian Wells.

for Thursday," said Edwards, with a tongue-in-cheek reference to the new, controversial PGA West course he's scheduled to play today.

Petty In Record Run

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Kyle Petty, son of seven-time Daytona 500 winner Richard Petty, Wednesday ran the fastest lap ever at Daytona International Speedway.

Petty, one of eight Ford drivers testing at the 2.5-mile speedway for the Feb. 15 Daytona 500 NASCAR Winston Cup stock car race, recorded a best lap of 43.05 seconds. That translates to 209.059 mph, nearly 9 mph faster than his previous best at Daytona.

Although Petty's lap was the fastest ever run at the speedway, it's not an official record since it wasn't recorded in an official event qualifying session.

Davey Allison and track record holder Bill Elliott both ran more than 208 mph in their Ford Thunderbirds. Allison ran 208.547 mph and Elliott, whose official track record is 205.114 mph, went 208.183.

"I don't really know what's making the speeds faster," Petty said, shaking his head after his run. "The new Thunderbird body style has helped us a lot, along with a lot of hard work from the guys."

There was some luck involved in Andy Bean's round of 63, too.

But it was a different kind. Bean's effort very easily could have been in the 50s, a score that has been achieved only once in the history of the PGA Tour, Al Geiberger in 1977 with a 59. "It could have been low, seriously low," Bean said.

Bean had seven birdies and an eagle. He also: missed twice from 6 feet, failed on another 5-foot putt, missed one from 4 feet, once 3-putted (missing an 18-inch second putt) for par and saw an approach shot spin out of the hole and some 12-15 feet back to the front of the green.

"It could have been in the 50s, but it was not to be," Bean said after finishing at Tamarisk, one of four desert courses used for the first four days of this tournament.

The score matched the best on the PGA Tour all of last season (by Don Pooley at Phoenix and Rod Curl at the Southern Open) and tied the course record set by Bert Yancey a decade ago.

"I needed to get some in the bank

Dan Forsman, with a 65 at Indian Wells, was two strokes back of Bean and alone in third with 72 holes to go in the chase for a $162,000 first prize.

Fuzzy Zoeller led the group at 66,

Zoeller played at Bermuda Dunes, where former President Ford and most of the rest of the celebrity amateurs drew the bulk of the gallery.

PGA champion Bob Tway had a 67, U.S. Open title-holder Ray Floyd shot 69, Tom Watson opened his season with a 70 and Arnold Palmer shot 73, all at Bermuda Dunes.

Seahawks Top Coastal

CONWAY, S.C. (AP) — Sandy Anderson scored 22 points, including all four of his three-pointers, to lead North Carolina-Wilmington past Coastal Carolina 72-60 in a college basketball game Wednesday night.

The game started a half-hour late because the bus carrying the Seahawks was involved in an accident. Coastal Carolina Sports Information Director Glenn Mishoe said no one was injured in the "fender-bender."

Brian Rowsom scored 21 points and grabbed eight rebounds as the Seahawks raised their record to 7-6. Coastal Carolina is 8-6.

Neither team could manage more than a five-point lead in the first half. North Carolina-Wilmington grabbed a 26-21 lead with 5:23 remaining on Ricky Griffin's follow shot.

But the Chanticleers rallied, scoring nine of the game's next 13 points to tie it at 30. Anderson hit a three-pointer with 10 seconds remaining in the half to help the Seahawks take a 33-30 halftime lead.

The Seahawks upped their lead to 52-44 with 11 minutes left, but Coastal Carolina pulled within 62-58 with seven minutes remaining on a dunk by Derek Wilson.

But the Seahawks used a 10-1 run in the final seven minutes to seal the victory.

Wilson led Coastal Carolina with 14 points. Dave Mooney scored 12 points off of four three-pointers for the Chanticleers. William Calvin and Michael Anderson added 11 points. Calvin led all rebounders with 10.

On this day in 1943, the five-story, five-sided Pentagon, the world's largest office building, was completed. It has 3.7 million square feet of office space. It also has its own fire department, police force, radio and television station, and telephone exchange. Architect G.E. Bergstrom designed the building. The design conserves structural steel, which was in short supply during World War II. Work on the building was completed after 16 months of round-the-clock labor.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR FRIDAY Jan. 16
GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today can have frustrations for you when you try to put across a plan of action that means a good deal to you. Later something will happen and you will find your means.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Don't try to push your talents on someone. Before you handle a business matter, consider your family.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Use tact in handling a difficult affair at home. Show your friends and kin that you truly care.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A letter or phone call could cause you to worry, but know that the matter can soon be rectified.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Today is not ideal for handling financial matters. You get good ideas from partners, so listen carefully.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Your intuitive perception is erroneous, so don't follow any hunches you have. Your mate has good ideas for you.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Don't let some annoying worry bother you. Extend invitations to persons who are successful.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A friend wants to think over a plan of action before going through with it, so wait it out patiently.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Avoid a bigwig who doesn't want to be bothered. You may find it difficult to start new tasks.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Be sure to plan how best to gain new aims. Don't run off on any tangents and things go smoothly.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Study a bill well before you pay it and make sure it's correct. Be careful with your expenditures.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Do whatever will bring greater understanding with an older partner. Be careful in conversations with others.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Don't let a thoughtless remark from a co-worker disturb you. Later you come to a better understanding.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will have very expansive ideas for the future, so be sure to give as fine an education as money can buy. Praise when exceptional work is accomplished is wise, for this will raise the incentive and insure success. Your progeny will be concerned with humanity.

 4♣ Pass 4♦ Pass
 4♣ Pass Pass Pass
 Opening lead: King of ♥

On the first hand of a rubber you reach four spades after North has bid both of his suits and you have shown a strong five-card major. Cover the East-West cards and decide how you would play after the defenders start with the king-queen of hearts.

You are on the right track if you elected to ruff the second heart with a high trump, and then crossed to dummy with a club to run the nine of spades. That holds the trick. What next?

It might seem you have no problem. Simply repeat the trump finesse, cash the ace and go about cashing your clubs whether the king of spades drops or not.

Hold it! You are getting ahead of yourself. When you repeat the trump finesse West wins the king and continues with hearts. If you look at the full hand, you will see you have lost trump control and your contract is doomed.

You can afford to lose two trump tricks and a heart, so the hand is a laydown as long as trumps are no worse than 4-2. The solution is to win the second round of trumps with the ace, leaving two trumps outstanding, and start running clubs. West can ruff and shift to a diamond, but you are in charge. Win and continue clubs, and the king of trumps will be the third and last trick the defenders can get.

The principle of this hand is basic. If you count your tricks, both winners and losers, the line of play to ensure your contract often becomes obvious.

'The Fonz' Will Host TV's Cerebral Palsy Fund-Raiser

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Henry Winkler spends so much time behind the camera these days that one of the few places you'll see him is on the annual "Weekend With the Stars Telethon for Cerebral Palsy."

"The Fonz," as he was known for 11 years on "Happy Days," lately has been working as a producer and director.

Winkler and his partner John Rich produce ABC's "MacGyver," developed the short-lived series "Mr. Sunshine" and have several other projects in the works.

For eight of the last nine years, Winkler has been on the screen for the cerebral palsy telethon. This year's 21-hour event will be carried Saturday and Sunday on 83 stations.

The telethon, which raised 18.5 million last year, also features John Ritter and his wife, Nancy Morgan, and Nancy Dussault in Los Angeles, with Wayne Newton, Dennis James and Florence Henderson in New York.

Winkler hasn't appeared in a movie since "Night Shift" five years ago, and his run on "Happy Days" ended in 1984.

"I haven't thought about acting in three years," he said one morning in his office at Paramount Studios, where he works as a producer and director. "I'm a character actor. I'm not a leading man. I guess a part will come along."

"I'm not consciously moving away from acting. It's weird, but it's happening. I have nothing to do with it. I would like to become a good director."

Winkler, a vision of casualness in a four-day beard and a dark green sweater, said he did not think his acting career had been hurt by playing the Fonz.

"The Fonz helped me in my whole life," he said. "I can't think of one negative. I have lived the most incredible life and partly because I was fortunate enough to be picked to play the Fonz."

Winkler became involved with the cerebral palsy telethon while he was still playing the ducktailed, leather-jacketed Arthur Fonzairelli. His wife, Stacey, was his co-host the first year, but Winkler said she was uncomfortable in front of the camera. Nancy Dussault has been his co-host since then.

Stacey Winkler is now a commissioner overseeing the city's Department of Children's Services, and both Winklers are heavily involved in various events and services for children.

"I spend most of my time working on child abuse and neglect," said Winkler, who is a spokesman for United Friends of the Children.

"John and I work four hours on and four hours off on the telethon," he said. "By the time your four hours are up you drag out and get some rest. Then you come back in and by

Differences

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robin Williams says the difference between standup comedy and performing in television drama is like "the difference between hang gliding and oil drilling."

The comic has the starring role in a coming TV production of Saul Bellow's "Seize the Day," playing a failed actor-turned-salesman questioning the purpose in his life and going through a cathartic re-evaluation of his relationship with his father.

The production is Williams' most dramatic role ever and will be broadcast this spring on the Public Broadcasting Service.

HENRY WINKLER

the time you're in the makeup room the adrenalin gets going. We've been lucky. Every year we've raised more and more money. One thing we do is explain where the money goes so that people aren't sending it in blindly."

In the years he's been on the show Winkler has followed the progress of a youth named Craig Clifton. "He's an incredible guy," he said. "He's now in college, but it was once thought he wouldn't have any kind of quality life. He's won gold medals in the Special Olympics and he drives a car.

"I remember another young man who learned to use a typewriter. He became a sports analyst. The thing about cerebral palsy is that it affects the muscles, not the brain. So there's a person and a personality inside that needs to be nurtured even though he can't walk or talk."

"Smokey Mountain Christmas" was the first movie Winkler directed, and he got the job because its star, Dolly Parton, thought he would work well with children.

"Sometimes I think I get along better with children than adults," he said. "All you have to do is be honest and they respond to you. When we started rehearsal I didn't go to the script immediately. I made them into a family and assigned them to look after each other and be responsible for their behavior."

Although he's executive producer of "MacGyver" he hasn't assigned himself to direct any of the episodes.

"Nor will I," he said. "If I don't come in on time and on budget I certainly can't yell at anyone else for not coming in on time and on budget."

ACTRESS RETURNS — Actress Jill Ireland returns to acting after four years to star with her husband, Charles Bronson, in "Assassination." In 1984, Miss Ireland had cancer, a mastectomy, and six months of chemotherapy. She and Bronson are shown here in a scene from the new film. (AP Laserphoto)

Bronson Is Best Thing Coming Out Of Movie 'Assassination'

By MICHAEL WILMINGTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

HOLLYWOOD — One could make any number of mild complaints about the latest Charles Bronson thriller, "Assassination."

One might grouse, for example, that the love-on-the-run storyline — terrorist hit squads pursuing a White House Secret Service agent and America's first lady — is so absurd that the movie becomes instant camp after half an hour. One might grumble about some of the line readings, which suggest the bright, brittle tones of TV Vegemetic commercials.

One could complain, in fact, about almost everything but Bronson's performance. As the slightly gone-to-seed but battle-hardened agent Jay Killian, he remains, as always, cool, adroitly understated, the very picture of no-nonsense professionalism. Bronson clips off his lines with the battle-weary disgust of a tough-shell veteran. He strikes the right sparks with his wife and co-star Jill Ireland (cast, flabbergastingly, as first lady Laramie Craig who is referred to as "One Mama").

The plot, adapted by Richard Sale from his novel, "My Affair With the President's Wife," is, to put it mildly, weird. Consider the razor-sharp perceptions of Ireland's One Mama: Even after a motorcycle blows up near her motorcade and her yacht explodes as she prepares to board it, she refuses to believe anything is afoot but misfortune and coincidence (Two terrorists with flame throwers who shoot down a helicopter finally convince her). The movie is obviously intended as tongue-in-cheek, but, after a while, a tongue of leather seems to be scraping against cheeks of iron.

In "Assassination" we are well beyond Watergate, or any overly reverent concepts of the presidency. President Craig, identified as Reagan's successor, is impotent, and his sexual inadequacies are bandied about at press conferences. First lady Craig is a feline feminist on spiky heels who constantly threatens to kneel her bodyguards, and dashes off with the willful wiliness of a '30s screwball heiress (Claudette Colbert has to be one of her models). The presidential chief of staff is a stuffed shirt and bully, up to all kinds of strange antics. (Topical humor here?)

As for members of the Secret Service, they apparently drink too much, sleep too late and sleep around with one another. The only people who seem to take their jobs seriously are the terrorists after One Mama. They are a grim-faced, tight-lipped bunch, and at one point, their leader — perhaps angry at all the folderol around him — remarks: "Listen! Terror is a serious game."

Maybe, but "Assassination" is not. Director Peter Hunt, editor of most of the Sean Connery James Bond films and a thriller specialist since, handles the action briskly and the dialogue languorously. Writer Sale, a 40-year movie veteran with dozens of credits (including "Abandon Ship!" and John Ford's "When Willie Comes Marching Home"), contributes some nice wisecracks.

But overall, "Assassination" (PG-13) is a floundering enterprise, almost like a hit squad that has lost its bullets.

TV Shopping Goes To Japan

L.A. Times-Washington Post

NEW YORK — Move over Home Shopping Network. Television shopping went international Wednesday night, as Tokyo viewers with a yen for American goods got a chance to buy on a live, first-ever satellite broadcast from here.

Offered were such items as three-piece rain gear sets, a silver necklace, handbags and a three-piece woman's suit by Anne Klein II. Fourteen items were featured in the special broadcast by Fujisankei Communications International, the U.S. arm of Fujisankei Communications Group, whose 120 companies include Japan's largest commercial TV network and its largest direct marketing company. While television shopping only began to catch on in the United States since Home Shopping Network's launch in 1985, Fujisankei has broadcast a shopping show for about 15 years.

Fujisankei sponsored the show, complete with song-and-dance numbers and skits, in hopes of developing trade and business ties with American companies.

"If we receive a favorable reaction, we might do it on a regular basis," said Mitsunori Sasa, president of Fujisankei.

Science And Medicine

Health Institutes Dominate Medical Scene

By LARRY THOMPSON L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — It is a collection of research baronies in Bethesda, Md., and it dominates the medical landscape in the 20th century.

It is where scientists study the basic biology of disease and search for tomorrow's cures to a range of modern scourges, from cancer to stroke, arthritis to diabetes, hypertension to depression, AIDS to MS. It's the symbol of high-technology medicine; the last-resort clinic where people may turn for the latest experimental therapies when conventional remedies have failed.

The National Institutes of Health: this 306-acre campus with satellite centers including those in Research Triangle Park, N.C., Hamilton, Mont., and Sabana Seca, Puerto Rico, undoubtedly has the largest concentration of biomedical researchers in the world: 3,183 physicians and Ph.D. scientists among its staff of 14,799. It spends more than $6 billion a year and publishes more than 2,000 reports and scientific papers each year. NIH researchers have won the Nobel Prize four times. NIH grants to laboratories across the country have helped 65 scientists capture that highest honor in medical research since 1939.

It was at NIH where pellagra, a leading killer of children, was cured and a virus that causes today's epidemic of acquired immune deficiency syndrome was discovered. It is the war on cancer — the cracking of the genetic code.

"It is," said former NIH director Dr. Donald S. Frederickson, "where big government and big science meet."

This year, the cradle of biomedical research in America turns a century old. Its leaders and supporters will pause to reflect on its past achievements and wonder whether its future can live up to the challenges and expectations of a public hungry for progress against disease.

It is a time when the more traditional model of a lone scientist struggling to push back the edges of ignorance is changing. It is a future where big projects are expected to dominate the agenda of medical science. These are special initiatives that are equivalent to the Manhattan Project, which developed the atom bomb, or the Apollo program, which landed human beings on the moon.

Some major projects — like the war on cancer — have been controversial. The potential multi-million dollar project to map all the genes on all the human chromosomes, has already triggered debate within the scientific community. Still other projects, such as the $40 million that may soon be spent to develop anti-viral drugs, or the $12 million to build a supercomputer to study protein structures, or the $416 million spent in the fight against AIDS this year, are redefining the way scientists do research.

"Science is changing," said Dr. Vincent T. DeVita Jr., director of the National Cancer Institute. "We can now take on whole projects like sequencing the human genome that requires a coordinated effort. Big science is upon us."

The National Institutes of Health didn't begin life as a grand and glorious institution marching to conquer disease. Instead, it started in 1887 as a rather tiny laboratory, a single attic room in the Marine Hospital on Staten Island, N.Y. It was called the Laboratory of Hygiene and had one researcher — Dr. Joseph J. Kinyoun — to begin the conquest of yellow fever and cholera. Its annual budget was $300.

At the time, American medicine was barely on the map. All the great scientists came from Europe.

For the first 50 years of its existence, NIH remained a sleepy little federal laboratory, but a good one, mostly concerned with microbiology and preventing public-health problems. In 1891, the lab had moved to Washington, and by 1910 it had grown to 53 staffers. Although its overall impact was limited, it had a few brilliant moments that would set the tone for the rest of the century.

An early high point was finding a cure for pellagra in 1914. Physicians of that era believed that an infection caused pellagra, a disease that led to skin disorders and diarrhea and killed 200,000 people a year, mostly children. But Dr. Joseph Goldberger, who worked at the hygienic lab, went on a tour of orphanages and lumber camps. He looked at the screens on the windows and the sewage systems. And he looked at the diets of the children — diets that consisted of corn pone and pot liquor and little else.

From his clinical research, Goldberger concluded that pellagra was not an infection, which would be contagious. It was, he said, a dietary deficiency, and to prove the point he injected himself with blood from an afflicted patient. He didn't get the disease. He went on to show that adding yeast extract — which contained nicotinamide, a B vitamin — to the diet completely cured, and prevented, pellagra. Nicotinamide was made available to patients in 1924; pellagra disappeared overnight.

To the public as well as the medical community, the pellagra cure was astonishing. "Even Congress recognized that putting money into medical research was a smart thing to do," said long-time NIH researcher Dr. DeWitt Stetten Jr.

In 1930, the Ransdell Act renamed the lab the National Institute of Health and authorized $750,000 to construct two buildings. The first — Building I, a stately red brick structure with white pillars — was completed in 1938. Things were moving, but slowly.

Then along came World War II. The U.S. government went into a crash program of research not only in medicine but in all areas of science. Most of this research was performed in university laboratories with the support of federal dollars.

The results were stunning: The development of penicillin. Gamma globulin to control measles and hepatitis. Cortisone to alleviate symptoms of arthritis. These were heady days. Congress and the public believed science was on a roll. The impression grew that medical science, if given enough money to do enough research, could cure anything.

To Congress, the time had come for the federal government to play the major role in improving the health of the population. The logical place to begin was the still rather small in-house laboratories of the National Institute of Health.

In 1948 alone, four institutes were created: the National Heart Institute, the National Institute of Dental Research, the National Microbiological Institute and the Experimental Biology and Medicine Institute. At the same time, the National Institute of Health, singular, became the National Institutes of Health, plural. Construction began on the Clinical Center, a 540-bed hospital on the NIH campus.

Then came the National Institute of Mental Health, the National Institute of Neurological Diseases and Blindness, and the National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases.

The Clinical Center opened in 1953 and admitted its first patient on July 6. That meant ideas generated in a basic research laboratory in the morning could be tested at the bedside that afternoon. And so NIH's hospital in Building 10 became a focal point surrounded by a network of basic biological laboratories scattered across the NIH campus.

As NIH director Dr. James B. Wyngaarden put it: "The Clinical Center is the keystone of the arch, but it is not the arch."

With the growth of the NIH campus came the power of the purse in directing research in laboratories throughout the country.

After World War II, the Office of Scientific Research and Development, which had administered the war-effort research, was disbanded. The NIH director at the time, Dr. Rolla E. Dyer, inherited about 250 grants for research that was still under way. Out of these ongoing projects, the NIH Office of Research Grants — now the Division of Research Grants — was born.

Before that, biomedical research was a gentlemanly pastime. A few towering researchers operated on endowments of a few thousand dollars a year at various universities. Medical schools, for the most part, existed to train new doctors, not conduct research.

Now, money, through NIH, poured into the university system. For the first time, academic medical centers could afford to do research on a grand scale. New research buildings were constructed. Equipment was purchased. Scientists were trained.

The biomedical-research community began to grow. From 1950 to the present, annual NIH funding to outside researchers has grown from $36.7 million to $3.5 billion. NIH, meanwhile, created a brain bank — training researchers on campus and then sending them back to the universities, where they could then apply to the NIH for grant support to continue their research. As a result, mini-NIHs were essentially established all over the country.

"It changed the character of medical schools very dramatically," said NIH director Wyngaarden. "It transformed the (university) system." Central to the growth of NIH is the close and unique relationship (for a federal agency) it has with Congress. Congress has been a good friend to biomedical research, often because of pressure from constituents who cry for assistance as their families suffer various diseases.

Illnesses suffered by individual members of Congress also have been a factor. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., for example, whose arthritis forced him to have two hip replacements, was instrumental in the congressional decision last year to once again create a separate institute for arthritis.

In addition, the specialty associations representing patients — the American Heart Association, the American Cancer Society, or the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation — lobby heavily to influence how research money is spent. So do private individuals with money and power and their own access to Congress, such as Mary Lasker or Dr. Armand Hammer, chairman of Occidental Petroleum Corp.

While Congress may scrutinize NIH, it also continues to protect it. Even in the years of budget retrenchment, NIH survived pretty well. Its budget, presented by the Department of Health and Human Services, is usually cut by the Office of Management and Budget. But Congress, after extensive hearings, usually restores the funding to NIH and even adds to its budget. It's a dance that has gone on for decades, and is likely to continue.

One of the most remarkable relationships that helped propel the growth of NIH developed between director James A. Shannon, Sen. Lister Hill and Rep. John Fogarty, each chairman of a significant appropriations committee.

It was only natural that as Congress spent more and more money on research through NIH, it became more and more interested in deciding what research should be done. And it became more and more of a forum for debating what the public and the scientific community wanted to do.

As NCI's DeVita said: "It wasn't congressmen themselves who woke up one day and said, 'Yeah, I think I'll start (for example) a cancer program.' Obviously, they were approached by scientists who felt the time was right to infuse more resources into the cancer program."

There's no question the biggest — and most political — initiative undertaken by the American research community was the war on cancer.

It began in the late 1960s with an alliance between Mary Lasker, a New York health philanthropist, and Elmer Bobst, then chairman of Hoffmann-La Roche Inc., a huge drug company, said Dr. Stephen P. Strickland, author of "Politics, Science & Dread Disease," (Harvard, 1972).

Both had been involved in the American Cancer Society for decades. Through their network of contacts in the scientific community, they became convinced that the time was ripe to mount a concerted attack on America's most feared disease.

Bobst, who contributed heavily to both of Richard Nixon's presidential election campaigns, was Nixon's close friend. The president once referred to Bobst as "my foster father."

With Bobst lobbying the administration and Lasker lobbying Congress, especially her friend in the Senate, Edward Kennedy, the initiative began to move. In his 1971 State of the Union address, Nixon called for a Manhattan-like project, a trip to the moon to vanquish cancer.

Legislation calling for the war on cancer passed overwhelmingly in 1971.

As Nixon took "personal command of the federal effort to conquer cancer so that its activities (would) not be stymied by the familiar dangers of bureaucracy and red tape," even he had to admit that

PCMH Clinic Seeks Patients With Post-Polio Syndrome

By LESLIE DEANE Medical Writer

Pitt County Memorial Hospital Post-polio syndrome victims are usually successful people, survivors with an enduring sense of pride in their independence. Dr. Ulrich Alsentzer, chairman of rehabilitation medicine at Pitt County Memorial Hospital in Greenville, says

He said they are generally in their late 40s at least, a few years away from retirement and financial security. Their ranks are virtually limited to a single generation of people, those who contracted and survived polio. And it is the very disease they survived so well that threatens the lifestyles of many of them today.

An estimated 20 percent of the people who had polio as children or young adults will experience progressive weakening of the muscles affected by polio 25 to 30 years ago. In clinical terms, the condition is called progressive post polio muscular atrophy. In personal terms, it means an incurable and debilitating condition caused by the disease patients thought they overcame several decades ago.

The history of polio explains the uniqueness of PPPMA in the United States. In the early years before the iron lung, most polio victims did not survive. By the 1930s, treatment and rehabilitation of patients had improved dramatically, and so did their survival rate.

The Salk and Sabine vaccines virtually eradicated the disease with immunization causing a spectacular decline in the incidence of polio in North America. More than 28,000 cases were reported in 1955 and less than 15 are reported annually today.

"The rapid rise and fall of polio in the United States created an unusual set of circumstances for the victims of post polio syndrome," Alsentzer said.

"Since the syndrome takes from 25 to 30 years to develop, PPPMA is a condition that has only recent come of age. The relatively small patient population is isolated into a finite group," he said.

It must be emphasized that most of the polio survivors will never experience the progressive weakness of post polio syndrome. For those who do, early diagnosis is vital, but often elusive.

"Odds are high that the patient might consult a physician who has never seen a case of PPPMA," Alsentzer said. "Confusion of it with any number of other neuromuscular disorders is possible, and happens."

Patients themselves may confuse the symptoms with a recurrence of polio, using exercise to treat the weakness as they did many years ago. In most cases, exercise aggravates instead of alleviates the condition.

"Few centers in the country actively seek out and treat patients with PPPMA," Alsentzer said. The only one in North Carolina is the Post Polio Clinic which Alsentzer started last year at the Regional Rehabilitation Center at Pitt Memorial. Increased awareness of PPPMA has vaulted attendance at the clinic to capacity, with patients waiting sometimes several months for an opening at the center. Last year the Post Polio Clinic treated more than 40 patients from the entire eastern seaboard.

The program provides an in-depth evaluation of PPPMA-related problems, including strength and endurance, respiration and swallowing, skeletal deformities and vocational implications of weakness and fatigue.

"Emphasis is placed on the connection between physical activity and weakness," Alsentzer said. Conservation of energy is a major goal.

"I tell patients that their strength is like bank account to which no more deposits can be made," he said. "Each withdrawal leaves the account a little bit smaller. They must learn to use the strength they have left to its best advantage. We teach them how at our clinic," Alsentzer said.

The clinic also provides psychological counseling to help post polio patients cope with the lifestyle changes which become necessary as their condition progresses. Prescriptions for assistive devices are provided for the patients who require braces, crutches, wheelchairs or other equipment. The clinic also plays a role in designing equipment to meet special needs.

An important part of the educational services provided at the rehabilitation center is an ad hoc support group that meets in the afternoon of the day-long clinic. Patients interact with each other as well as with the clinic staff, sharing experience and expertise. They learn that through adjustments to their activity levels, post polio patients can lead productive and challenging lives.

Report Says Mentally Ill Children Going Untreated

By PHYLLIS MESSINGER Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — At least 7.5 million children in the United States may need treatment for mental health problems, yet the majority never get the proper help, a congressional research unit says.

And if untreated, mental health problems could lead the children to later, more serious troubles in school or with the law, the Office of Technology Assessment found.

"Mental health problems are a source of suffering for children, difficulties for their families and great loss for society," the office said in a report released Wednesday. "Though such problems are sometimes tragic, an even greater tragedy may be that we currently know more about how to prevent and treat children's mental health problems than is reflected in the care available."

The office, which provides Congress with scientific and technical information, prepared the report on mental health services for children at the request of Sens. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, and Mark O. Hatfield, R-Ore., members of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

The office concluded that, in general, mental health services for children are helpful, although it could not determine what programs are best for particular children with particular problems.

The office also found that although there are shortages in all forms of mental health care for youths under age 18, community-based services and coordination of services seem to most need improvement.

"Available epidemiologic data indicate that at least 12 percent, or 7.5 million, of the nation's approximately 63 million children suffer from emotional or other problems that warrant mental health treatment — and that figure may be as high as 15 percent, or 9.5 million children," the report said.

Of those in need, 70 percent to 80 percent may not be getting the proper services, the report said.

Family support programs, prevention programs in schools and preschools and pregnancy prevention programs for teen-agers have been found to help children with mental health problems, the report said.

The problem with most big banks' Individual Retirement Accounts is that they don't treat customers as individuals.

A First Federal IRA specialist will be happy to help you maximize your individual tax savings on a high-yielding First Federal IRA.

We'll help you maximize your tax benefits this year while explaining what the new tax laws may bring next year.

We know the ins and outs of making an IRA work harder to meet your needs. That's why we're happy to explain our different IRA plans and help you select the one plan that makes the most sense for your particular situation.

So instead of being a face in the crowd at one of the big banks' IRA factories, bring this year's IRA investment to First Federal.

As the only financial institution with offices only in Pitt County, your business is important to us at First Federal. That's why we make an extra effort to meet your individual financial needs. See us about an IRA today.

FIRST FEDERAL

The best place to bank.
