Ocean Threat To Oil Tanks At Port Eased

MOREHEAD CITY, N.C. (AP) — More than 130 truckloads of rock have been hauled to the coast to build a retaining wall to protect at least two oil tanks that had been in danger of being overwashed by ocean water, a North Carolina State Ports Authority spokesman said Saturday.

"They're still bringing that rock in and they're also hauling sand in the area and everything seems to be going really good," said spokesman David Lawrence, after the ocean had broken through a bulkhead and eroded the shoreline at up to 10 feet an hour near Fort Macon Friday.

Lawrence said the oil tanks are out of danger after engineering crews worked through the night to build the wall. "The best they (the engineers) can tell they are, they have rock up in front of it now," he said.

The slippage slowed Friday night, easing the threat that thousands of gallons of oil would be dumped from tanks.

Sam Taylor, director of public affairs for the state Commerce Department, said no appreciable erosion occurred during high tide at 8:30 p.m. Friday. He said teams of engineers at the state port then begun building a dike made of gravel in front of the fuel oil tanks.

Earlier Friday, the erosion, sparked in part by offshore dredging, buckled railroad tracks and sideswiped a supply store.

Jim Sheppard, public information officer for the state Division of Environmental Management, said the sea crashed through a protective bulkhead and erosion had been moving at 5 to 10 feet per hour toward a 1 million-gallon-capacity tank at Colonial Oil's storage depot. Emergency crews worked to drain all but 18,000 gallons of the fuel oil.

Don McMahan, manager of the state port from which the Colonial Oil storage depot is leased, said Friday evening that 11 inches of oil were left in the bottom of the tank, and workers were beginning to heat the fuel in another tank so the oil could be transferred to another facility.

No officials were available Saturday to determine how much, if any, oil was left in either tank.

Gov. Jim Martin, who toured the area Friday with state Natural Resources Secretary Thomas Rhodes, said the biggest concern was protecting an area 30 to 40 feet behind the erosion, where the oil tanks are located.

The break in the bulkhead was discovered at 8:45 a.m. Friday, officials said.

"They were finishing the dredging," McMahan said. "It (the dredging) contributed to it, but it didn't cause it."

Officials apparently had been aware of a problem at Berth 1, where the erosion occurred. A booklet prepared by the North Carolina State Ports Authority sought $800,000 to rebuild the 350-foot berth, which is more than 50 years old, saying it was structurally unsafe.

PCMH Trustees To Decide Fate Of EastCare Service

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Will Pitt County Memorial's EastCare air ambulance service continue? PCMH Trustees will vote yes or no Tuesday night.

From all indications, the answer will be yes. It's expected that the hospital administration and EastCare personnel will be asked to get the helicopters flying and serving Eastern North Carolinians with medical emergencies as quickly as is prudent and possible.

Hospital President Jack Richardson said he and all hospital personnel involved in emergency air transport work are operating under the assumption that the program will continue.

Flights by the EastCare helicopter were suspended Jan. 8 when a helicopter with three crew members the hospital was held Tuesday "to gain insight into the events since Jan. 8."

Jay Golden, the lead investigator from the National Air Transportation Board, told the group that it may be three to six months before all reports on the crash are in, Richardson said.

Storm Blamed In 11 Deaths

By ROGER PETERSON
Associated Press Writer

A storm blamed for at least 11 deaths blocked highways in the Southwest and blew snow onto the Plains on Saturday, after dumping up to 5 feet of snow and icing up normally warm desert winter refuges.

Ice- and snow-covered roads and streets caused scores of accidents, and stranded travelers in New Mexico. The cold chased people into shelters in Arizona and Southern California and frosted crops in California.

New Mexico Gov. Garrey Carruthers sent National Guardsmen out to distribute food, cots and blankets, and state police discouraged travel statewide Saturday.

"It's coming down real heavy — big old snowflakes. It's real pretty. I love snow, though," said Laura Ashley, a police dispatcher at Ruidoso, N.M.

Winter storm warnings were issued for much of New Mexico and over northwestern and north-central Texas, and advisories were posted from parts of Arizona into Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri.

Chancellor Transition Activities Progressing Smoothly At ECU

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Preparations for turning over East Carolina University's reins to incoming chief executive officer, Dr. Richard R. Eakin, are moving on schedule, according to retiring ECU Chancellor John Howell.

"It's moving along very smoothly," Howell said. "I think the people in eastern North Carolina will like the Eakin family very much."

Eakin, who was elected as East Carolina's new chancellor by the University of North Carolina Board of Governors on Jan. 9, is expected to assume his responsibilities on the Greenville campus March 1.

The 48-year-old vice president for planning and budgeting for Bowling Green State University, and his wife, Jo Ann, are in the process of tying up loose ends in Ohio before moving to Greenville.

In the meantime, ECU administrators and staff members are making every effort to assist Eakin in his move, Howell said.

"I have told him that if he wants to talk with any of the staff he should feel free to do that, and they will be in contact with him while he is in Ohio," Howell said.

"I have started sending him the correspondence that concerns him so he will be aware in a very direct way of the activities that will be going on when he comes in."

Even though Eakin and his family are expected to remain in Ohio for the next several weeks, the change-over process should not be affected, according to Howell, who has served as ECU chancellor since 1982.

"I have told him that if he wants to come and if he has the time, he should," Howell said. "For business with the vice chancellors, I don't think physical presence is necessary for the transition at all. We haven't set a date on when he'll come down. He'll have to fit it in with his schedule."

Howell said Eakin, who has made two visits to Greenville including one on the weekend of Jan. 10, is acquainted with his new residence in the chancellor's home.

"We showed them through the

Photos Released Of Hostages

By RIMA SALAMEH
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An extremist group released photographs of two kidnapped Americans without making any demands Saturday, a development that Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite called "a very good sign."

In a separate statement, the group, the Revolutionary Justice Organization, threatened to punish all participants in an Islamic summit to be held Jan. 26 in Kuwait.

The pictures of Joseph Cicippio, 56, of Valley Forge, Pa., and Edward Tracy, 56, formerly of Burlington, Vt., both abducted last year, were delivered to Beirut's independent daily An-Nahar in an envelope that carried only the name of the terrorist group.

"I think it's a very good sign," Waite said. "They are alive and I'm pleased that there's this development."

Waite, the personal emissary of Archbishop Robert Runcie of Canterbury, was on the sixth day of his stay in Moslem west Beirut in a new bid to win the release of American and other foreign hostages held in Lebanon.

He met twice Saturday with Cicippio's wife, Ilham. At the second meeting, she was accompanied by the wives of American hostages Frank Herbert Reed and Thomas Sutherland. The women declined to talk to reporters afterward and Waite made no comment.

There was no indication of a link between Waite's mission and the release of the pictures by Revolutionary Justice, a group believed made up of Shiite Moslems loyal to

Texasgulf Chief Challenges Record Fine

RALEIGH (AP) — The president of Texasgulf Chemicals Co. denies the allegations of a state agency that employers knowingly violated air-quality laws, and has formally challenged a $5.7 million fine against the company — the largest of its kind ever levied by the state.

"We don't consider there was any willful violation, nor do we consider that there was any threat to any health or vegetation," Texasgulf President Tom Wright said in a telephone interview Friday with The Associated Press.

"I think that is the main point," Wright said. "I'm not sure that we fully understand the information on which they based the allegations."

The company filed a petition with the state Office of Administrative Hearings Friday for a review of the proposed fine levied by the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development in December for 1,724 alleged environmental allegations.

The state agency says workers at Texasgulf's Beaufort County fertilizer plant near Aurora modified pollution control equipment at the plant three years ago without obtaining permission from the state.

But a Texasgulf press release said a review by "outside counsel" showed its employees "acted in good faith and in accordance with law in making changes to its diammonium phosphate plant."

NRCD officials said the plant had emitted unacceptable levels of sulfur oxides and fluorides, including chemicals that can harm the human liver, kidneys, skin, eyes and bones. Environmental Management Director Paul Wilms said in December that there was no evidence that people living near the plant had been hurt, but he said there was damage to vegetation in the area and NRCD had received complaints from resident saying they had respiratory ailments and burning eyes.

The most serious charge in the action, which covered alleged violations from 1983 to 1986, was that Texasgulf operated the plant 1,164 days without packing material needed for a scrubbing device to keep emissions from reaching the atmosphere. The NRCD levied a fine of $4.6 million for that alone.

However, the petition said Texasgulf officials "had a good faith belief that the removal of this packing and the cessation of the pond water spray would not contravene or was not likely to contravene any standards" applicable to the plant. The petition said testing indicated the packing and spray contributed to an increase in fluoride emissions.

Texasgulf officials acknowledged in the press release that the plant's fluoride emissions exceeded the allowable limit on Nov. 19, 1986 and that there were high sulfur dioxide readings on Jan. 19 and July 7, 1986.

"These high readings resulted from a sulfur fire at its rail unloading facility in January and a sulfuric acid plant start-up and malfunction in July," the statement said.

"We are agreeing that those high readings occurred on that day," Wright said. "There are legal questions whether they have an authority to levy a fine under that condition."

The company cited a 1977 Environmental Protection Agency document in saying fluorides "were not a health-related pollutant." The release also said a June 1986 study in which the Division of Environmental Management and Texasgulf participated showed "there was no clear correlation between nearby air pollution sources and any detrimental effects to plant life in the area."

NRCD spokesman Tom Hegele said state officials had received a copy of the petition and press release on Friday but declined to comment on the case.

Hegele said he did not know when a hearing would be held.

Ocean Threat Eased

"Continued use of Berth 1 poses an unacceptable risk of damage to the environment and property," the booklet said, adding that dredging or tidal erosion could further undermine the bulkhead.

"I don't think you could go back to the people who designed it 50 years and say there was a design flaw. It's designed, I guess, as well as they would done 50 years ago," Martin said. "It's obviously not the standard that we have put in on the adjoining berth, the newer berth...."

PCMH Trustees Vote

Dan McKenzie, president of OmniFlight, the company which supplies the hospital its helicopters, pilots and mechanic, was also present. He assured the group that his company is cooperating fully with investigators of the crash, Richardson said.

"I think once the trustee board is assured that the greatest precautions possible for the safety of our crews and patients are being taken, we'll be flying again," Richardson said. He predicted that the next flight of EastCare is not more than six weeks away, possibly as little as three weeks.

Staff training and retraining seems to be a major consideration before flights can resume. The three people killed were key people — the chief flight nurse, Mike McGinnis, the assistant chief flight nurse, Pam Demaree, and the lead pilot, Perry Reynolds.

along with Dr. Nick Benson, medical director of the program, will have some of the largest responsibilities for staff training.

What are the EastCare crew members doing while they wait and see? Mrs. Poole said some are taking benefit time off. Others are attending to clerical duties and the like. The three new staff members are being assigned to work in other parts of the hospital.

If the investigators were to find something about EastCare safety precautions or other practices that warranted it, it would be up to the Federal Aeronautics Administration to shut the operation down and this would be done, even though the service would have resumed operation.

Some of the expenses of the program are on-going during the time helicopters are not flying; some are not. Employees are still being paid by the hospital. Helicopter expense has virtually stopped, as OmniFlight was paid an as used basis.

Richardson said the hospital census shows no signs of being adversely affected by the EastCare shutdown. "We had 540 patients in the hospital Wednesday morning," he said, "and it's been this full for quite some time."

He said the cardiac surgery program volume of work has not been decreased either.

It's assumed that patients are being brought by ground transportation that would normally be brought by air. A critically burned Ayden woman was airlifted this week from PCMH to the Burn Center at N.C. Memorial Hospital.

It's up to Marilyn Rhodes, hospital vice president for nursing services, to appoint a new chief flight nurse and decide if an assistant flight nurse will be chosen. Mary Jo Nimmo, an experienced crew member of the 22-month-old program, has been appointed acting chief flight nurse.

Diane Poole, senior assistant vice president for nursing services, said everything about the program's operation, including training, is on hold until Tuesday night's board meeting. "We're moving ahead with looking at staffing and equipment needs," she said. "but everything's tentative until Tuesday night."

If resumption of service is advocated by the board, Ms. Nimmo,

Storm Causes Deaths

"Things are really treacherous," said Arizona state police Sgt. Dan Sanders.

Los Alamos, N.M., had at least 50 inches of snow by Saturday. Los Alamos National Laboratory was shut down Friday except for essential personnel, and roads in Los Alamos County were open only to emergency vehicles. Five feet of snow had fallen in the sparsely populated foothills of southern Colorado.

The storm was blamed for three deaths in Texas; two deaths each in New Mexico, Arizona and Missouri; and one each in Colorado and Oklahoma.

Tucson, Ariz., a cactus-decorated desert mecca for winter refugees just 65 miles from the Mexican border, had a record low of 19 degrees and ice forced police to close most bridges and overpasses overnight.

About 150 miles of the nation's southernmost coast-to-coast route, Interstate 10, was closed by ice from Tucson east to Lordsburg, N.M. State Department of Public Safety spokesman Allan Schmidt said Arizona officials were considering keeping it closed through Sunday.

Some state highways were closed by snow in mountainous northern Arizona, where Flagstaff, at about 7,000 feet, had a record low of 13 below zero.

In New Mexico, highway closings included sections of U.S. 64 and 60, and I-25 from Socorro to Truth or Consequences.

About 80 people were sheltered overnight at a community center at Moriarty, N.M., east of Albuquerque on I-40, said city clerk Karen Armijo. The National Guard sent food and 100 coats and blankets to the city, which had 14 inches of snow. And about 100 stranded travelers spent the night in a church at Mountainair, on U.S. 60 southeast of Albuquerque, said sheriff's dispatcher Runnel Riley.

"It's pitiful, just pitiful," said trucker Bobby Broom, who pulled his rig off I-40 at Clines Corners, N.M. "The wind's blowing real hard and visibility is real poor. We came out of Colorado last night and this is as far as we got."

"In our parking lot, cars are parked any which way," said Nicky Vahlkamp, a cashier at a truck stop in Moriarty where tractor trailers and other vehicles pulled off I-40 and lined the shoulders.

A layer of ice on roads in western Texas halted mail delivery Saturday at Midland, for the first time in at least eight years, said Postal Service spokesman Stan Sartain.

Buses in western Texas ran up to six hours late, said Trailways spokesman James Worden.

In the Texas Panhandle, runways at Amarillo's International Airport were open but with a half-inch layer of packed snow "and 6-foot piles along each side," said air traffic manager Herb Sellers.

Roads throughout Oklahoma were slick and hazardous, the state Highway Patrol reported. Highways were slippery over most of Kansas, where Topeka had 5 inches of snow by daybreak and Wichita had 4. Central Missouri got 1 to 2 overnight, on top of 2 to 4 that fell Friday.

In Phoenix, Ariz., the St. Vincent de Paul Society stayed open all night to shelter the homeless. The Salvation Army in Mesa sent of food, medical supplies and blankets to an estimated 150 families living in tents near Apache Junction. Tucson police were told to take homeless people to a Salvation Army shelter.

Street people in downtown Los Angeles burned their cardboard-box shelters to keep warm after being turned away from packed shelters. "They're banging on the door at night," said John Young of the Union Rescue Mission.

Downtown Los Angeles had a low of 36 degrees and the cold was blamed for the rupture of a large water pipe that flooded homes in Canyon County, 25 miles north of downtown, said fire department Capt. Terry Hart.

BLANKET COVERAGE — Bob Wiswell of Seal Beach, Calif., bundles up against the early morning chill Saturday as he donned hat, gloves and scarf to sit sand-side while his son joined a few other courageous-types for some surfing. tees to work with law enforcement personnel in the sheriff's department and in the police departments."

Another point Garner terms encouraging "is the interest and expressions of support for such a program that we have received from the county commissioners. The county board's chairman, Charles McLawhorn, told the mayors the commissioners will do everything possible to help get the program effectively under way.

Garner said the concept of a resolution to be endorsed by mayors of all Pitt County towns came from Bethel Mayor Frank Hemingway. "Back in November, Frank presented a resolution condemning drug use to Bethel's Town Board. The people there and mayors in the county thought it was such a good idea that we scheduled this meeting to present it jointly to all town mayors.

"Another individual who has provided especially useful information and suggestions is Farmville Police Chief William Waters. He spoke to us about ways that law enforcement personnel can help other officials in efforts to cope with the drug problem."

The resolution cited a statement that America, "has an internal enemy (illegal drugs) that is causing the very cornerstone of our society to decay and never has American been in such a vulnerable position with an enemy...."

The resolution further notes that "unless we act now, history might well label this generation of public servants and society alike as having been negligent in attacking the apparent enemy of America with the vigor and efforts necessary to rid our country of a force that could lead to total disruption of the American way of life...."

The 10 mayors signed an agreement "to plan to take whatever steps necessary, to allocate adequate funds... and educate the general population of the adverse effects of drug abuse, and publicly condemn the use of illegal drugs in our society...."

Garner said "it is not the small man, the misguided user that we will be after. Our efforts will be directed to ways to try to find the main people responsible, the supplier. It will take a lot of work, but we feel much can be done and we all agree we are ready to work hard on this problem and to take a tough stand."

Mock Hijacking Blasted In India

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The government's mock airline hijacking to test security drew criticism Saturday as a costly and frightening case of crying wolf.

A government spokesman said the 13-hour mock hijack carried out Friday was "satisfactory" and the Civil Aviation Ministry defended it as necessary to test alertness.

But newspapers across India ridiculed the exercise and questioned its cost and effectiveness.

Four government security men, posing as Sikh terrorists, staged the hijacking and the scheme also was severely criticized by Sikhs.

In Amritsar, the Sikh holy city in Punjab state, both moderate and militant Sikhs expressed anger.

"Why does the government use the Sikh name in their drama? Do only Sikhs hijack planes," said Gurjeet Singh, a leader of the militant All-India Sikh Students Federation.

Menus

Here are the scheduled lunch menus for the Pitt County schools for the coming week:

MONDAY — Spaghetti with meat sauce, tossed salad, dressing, garden peas, French bread, milk.

TUESDAY — Chicken sandwich, French fries, catsup, fruit cup, milk.

WEDNESDAY — Barbecue on bun, boiled potatoes, steamed cabbage, milk.

THURSDAY — Pizza, French fries, catsup, apple salad, milk.

FRIDAY — Vegetable beef soup, grilled cheese sandwich, crackers, pear, milk.

News reports said the passengers, including a woman and infant, aboard a special chartered flight — all government employees — also didn't know they were part of a drill.

Calcutta's Telegraph newspaper, in an editorial entitled "Crying Wolf," said Mehta "must have been ruing the day he entered the flying business."

It asked, "Did the genuine passengers deserve the experience with all its attendant and potential trauma?"

A senior official of Indian Airlines called it "stupidity," according to the Bombay Free Press. "Exercises are fine, but why the hell choose Aurangabad?" the official said.

Something To Think About

Donovan Phillips
DIRECTOR CHILD'S RIGHT TO KNOW

We tend to assume that death is beyond a child's comprehension. In a sense it is; for even adults do not understand the complete meaning of death. This does not mean that the parent should not share with the youngster the fragments of adult experience and knowledge, and that the child should not be allowed to absorb as much of the concept as he is capable of.

The other argument for not speaking of the death of a loved one to a child is to protect him. The adult may feel such intense anguish at the loss that he chooses to spare the child similar suffering. This is somewhat unfair. The child has every right to be included in that situation which seriously affects him. Silence only deprives him of the opportunity to share his grief. Besides, left alone to understand the absence of a loved one, he will often end up feeling bewildered, confused, even guilty.

All Started With Hogs

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The loss of R.J.R. Nabisco Inc.'s corporate headquarters to the more cosmopolitan city of Atlanta led one historian to recall a time when R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co. battled city officials over free-roaming hogs in the streets. It was the business interests of R.J. Reynolds, which later merged with several consumer and packaged goods companies, that helped defeat early efforts to merge Winston and Salem in the late 1800s, said historian Fambrough Brownlee. And the issue was hogs. Brownlee said that hogs were allowed to roam free in the early days of both towns. But as Winston became more and more of a business town, R.J. Reynolds and other businesses began to object. "The basic premise was that if you are going to have businessmen move in — and industry was beginning to become very important at the time — you couldn't have hogs running around the city," Brownlee said.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

Shared Districts Could Eliminate Voter Confusion

The idea of coterminous boundaries for election districts for the Pitt County Commissioners and the Pitt County Board of Education merits careful consideration.

Shared election district boundaries would be less confusing to voters and candidates. A system utilizing them could be more efficient for the election office to operate. If it's more efficient, it's likely less expensive. But before a concrete proposal on the issue is made, thorough examination of the feasibility of coinciding lines should be made.

Having the commissioners and the board of education share election districts is a decision that involves teamwork by the commissioners and the board of education. Those two bodies, with input from the elections office, are in the best position to determine whether the issue is practical and applicable.

The idea does have drawbacks — politically. Board members working on election revisions likely fear a plan that could eliminate their re-election to the board. In some areas, coterminous boundaries could do this.

Practical objections, however, appear minor. Coterminous boundaries could put residents in some school districts voting on representatives that don't represent the schools in that area.

But that objection is overcome by the fact that the situation could work to discourage provincialism that can create disunity on an elected board. The system could actually strengthen representation.

A decision to adopt coterminous boundaries is a move that cannot be made in a hasty manner. If it is done, it should occur after careful study of the benefits and disadvantages.

Coinciding election boundaries could impact positively on the community. Because of this fact, it would benefit the members of the two boards to roll up their sleeves and wrestle with it.

Occupancy Tax Sound Measure

A room occupancy tax in Pitt County — with revenue earmarked to support a tourism bureau — is an idea whose time has come.

The state allows counties to enact a 3 percent tax on motel and hotel rooms as a local option.

The Convention and Visitors Bureau Committee in a recent meeting agreed unanimously to support such a tax and sent a proposal to the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce.

The tax should not discourage visitors from coming here because it is something they will likely be charged in other areas they visit. Local residents generally wouldn't be subject to the tax. On the other hand, they will certainly be subsidizing other areas when they visit counties which have the room occupancy tax.

Committee representatives said all travel agencies, restaurants and retail stores which were contacted supported the tax. Ruth Matous, chairman of the Visitors and Conventions Task Force, said at this point there was no opposition to the tax, although "smaller properties are very cautious."

In Forsyth County the tax provides a $1 million tourism budget — an amount that would be welcome in Pitt County.

Various locations in the state have specific projects which they promote. Asheville uses a "Biltmore at Christmas" promotion; Beaufort stresses its Maritime Museum. Burlington markets its retail outlets and Charlotte promotes the Charlotte Motor Speedway.

It is virtually certain what Greenville and Pitt County can promote. It is a prime location for regional meetings and conventions. Greenville has major sports events at East Carolina University, the summer theater and other important entertainment on campus. The community has the motels, restaurants, shopping areas and even some nightlife, all of which is important to attracting groups here for their meetings. The geographic location is central to eastern North Carolina.

The university, School of Medicine, Pitt County Memorial Hospital and industries are naturals for generating meetings. Thus, what the community needs to do is draw all this together. That requires an active tourism bureau and the logical way to financially support such an endeavor is through the room occupancy tax.

Alvin Taylor

Dr. Richard R. Eakin paid an unheralded visit to the campus of East Carolina University last weekend.

He and his family were taking a look at the campus he will soon serve as chancellor and at the community in which they will live.

Only a couple of days prior to that Eakin was officially named chancellor of ECU by the UNC Board of Governors. That action came after months of screening of candidates by a search committee, visits by two leading candidates and recommendations to UNC President C.D. Spangler. Finally it was officially determined who would succeed Dr. John Howell as the next administrative head of the bustling campus.

Eakin attended the ECU-University of Richmond basketball, which was one of the most exciting games to be played in Minges for some time.

I caught up with him following the game and introduced myself. He obviously enjoyed the game and asked, "Are all the games here this exciting?"

I had to tell him this was something new to us old fans — that there probably hadn't been that much enthusiasm for basketball in ten years.

Of course a new chancellor will put his brand on everything a university does, including sports. And it is nice that the chancellor and his family, attending their first major sports event here, could see the Pirates basketball team in an outstanding victory.

Eakin has indicated in previous interviews that he is a sports enthusiast. However, he warned that ECU should "be vigilant to guard against excesses" as it strives to build a winning program. That seems logical. Major sports events at ECU contribute to improved lifestyle for eastern North Carolina. Above all, though, we should want the caliber of sports programs in which we can all take pride.

Sports is only a small part of running a major university. Eakin has not yet given indication of any major directions in which he might move the university.

He said that would follow several months of becoming familiar with faculty, staff and students. He did say in an interview last week that a priority would be to hold down costs of attending East Carolina. Again that is important in an area such as Eastern North Carolina. It is easy to forget that many students are attending college on very close budgets. One has to wonder how many are not here because they could not muster even the minimum amount of money.

Moscow Increases Ferment

'But a better future for Eastern Europe must come out of Western Europe, too; not just out of Moscow. In fact, a solution to the problem must lie in a whole new European system.'

ROME — There was a time after the Treaty of Verdun, a time that lasted for about 1,100 years, when major European wars tended to be fought for pieces of that impossibly long and narrow kingdom — the Low Countries and parts of Germany, France and Italy — awarded to Lothair I in 843. Perhaps the next world war won't start in Europe; the Middle East usually seems the best candidate to light a big fire.

In any case, inside Europe the zone of contest and confrontation now lies farther east, in the group of countries that fell under Stalin's dominance after 1945. Can anyone doubt the instability that lies there? It is not hard to imagine, among possible scenarios for Eastern Europe, one or another of those nations rising up and the Russians decide they cannot stand this and finally invade, and the people are not cowed but continue, and the result is horrendous bloodshed, and Western governments decide they cannot stand that and warn Moscow to stop, and... at some point comes a big bang.

Let us hope against this. But even now, in almost every country in that region, there is enough going on to warrant a new edition of that periodic news story headlined "Ferment in Eastern Europe." The ferment this time is increased by what is going on in Moscow.

Mikhail S. Gorbachev is moving in

'But even now, in almost every country in that region, there is enough going on to warrant a new edition of that periodic news story headlined "Ferment in Eastern Europe." The ferment this time is increased by what is going on in Moscow.'

new directions faster than anyone predicted. Reports from Prague indicate that the Czechoslovak leadership, afraid that the wind from the East may blow reform instead of freeze, has even held up distribution of some issues of Pravda. The aged leaders of Eastern Europe like Gustav Husak of Czechoslovakia, Janos Kadar of Hungary and Todor Zhivkov of Bulgaria must also wonder what the advent to power of the younger Gorbachev must mean for them. It is obvious that they will soon leave the scene, but leave it to whom?

Given all this, and given an administration in Washington that, like Husak, is reportedly more interested in survival than in new moves, is there any reason to think the situation in Eastern Europe can change much for the better in coming years? My answer — from someone known by diplomatic colleagues more for glumness than optimism — is that the situation can indeed improve, though not quickly. And this is a good time to start thinking about the forms that change could take, east of that Iron Curtain still in place.

In two years' time, God willing, there will be a new administration in Washington that includes wise statesmen, and in Moscow the wind of reform will perhaps have grown even stronger. It took a long time for the West and the East to sit down to strategic-arms talks; it may take longer for West and East to agree on what to do about Eastern Europe.

Soon or late, Moscow should come to see that the current situation in Eastern Europe is not favorable to longer-term Soviet interests. The Soviets want stability on their borders; they hardly have it in today's Eastern Europe, in spite of Soviet divisions and some of the world's most efficient police cautious Czechs take a sudden new turn as they did in 1968? Afghanistan is not much like Eastern Europe, but one hopes it taught Moscow a lesson about seeking "stability" through the use of force on neighboring countries.

But a better future for Eastern Europe must come out of Western Europe, too; not just out of Moscow. In fact, a solution to the problem must lie in a whole new European system. The Russians have failed to produce anything of the sort that works, and prewar history indicates that an Eastern European union would never work, either. Leninism papered over a series of sharp old quarrels between Eastern European countries, some of which are visible again.

The question is rather one of normalizing intra-European contacts on all levels, following up indeed on the Helsinki agreements. We know the difficulties caused by Western concerns about strategic trade items and Eastern governments' distrust of their own populations. But the difficulties are not insoluble, if Moscow can come to agree with us that major changes must be had.

To think big about Eastern Europe means logically considering the eventual end of both the Warsaw Pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. It means ensuring that individual Warsaw Pact members do not turn into individual crisis-makers in Europe. It means ensuring for both West and East that a newly united Germany, bigger and stronger than anything else in the heart of Europe, does not turn again aggressive.

These are bigger thoughts than have been thought in Washington for some decades. Our policy, based on the sensible assumption that little new on Eastern Europe could be expected from a Leonid I. Brezhnev, amounted to small carrots like most-favored-nation trade status for countries showing a degree of autonomy, and small sticks (no American ambassador for Warsaw) when we were angry.

We do not have to rush to provide answers to questions Gorbachev has not raised. We need, rather, always to proceed with the utmost care on European questions, because nothing beyond our borders can be more important to us — or to the Russians. Again, SALT was long in coming; but it proved worthwhile. It seems sensible to start now thinking, and debating, about what might be done someday for Eastern Europe.

Broader Questions May Go Unanswered

WASHINGTON — The capital is abuzz with investigation fever. The two select congressional committees looking into the Iran arms scandal are busy interviewing and conducting security checks on prospective staffers. New security restrictions are also being imposed on the new employees these committees hire.

Weeks, possibly months away from public hearings, there is private speculation on Capitol Hill that little new information will come from any future testimony: Eighty percent of the details surrounding Irangate previously surfaced during the intelligence committee investigations, say some investigators. Nevertheless, leaders of the select congressional panels have asked the State Department for permission to have committee investigators interview officials from Iran, Israel, Switzerland and Brunei.

When the select committees eventually begin their work, they'll first draft requests for documents from the White House and other related agencies, concentrating on those papers related to specific procedures and authorities. The next step will be to draft, elaborate on and make follow-up requests for documents, delving more deeply into the intricacies of operational and organizational details. An initial set of questions will then be dispatched to relevant officials during the interview stage of the fact-finding mission.

The committees must establish facts, judge their illegality and legality and then recommend, if necessary, legislative remedies.

The problem with the current investigation is that only a limited number of individuals may have known of the operation. Central figures Oliver North and John Poindexter are expected to receive immunity, but not in the foreseeable future.

If they are anything like past investigative bodies, the present select committees can be expected to offer findings and recommendations that are incomplete and unrefined. The best an investigative panel can hope for is to inform the public as accurately as possible of the details of the scandal. Ultimately, the good done by these committees will depend on the intelligence and responsibility of their members.

Of course, lost in the details of the investigation will be the broader, more important constitutional questions concerning an Executive Branch that has willfully disobeyed the Legislative chamber. The one hope is that Rep. Lee Hamilton (D-Ind.), chairman of the House Select Committee, will play the role of chief constitutionalist that the late senator Sam Ervin (D-N.C.) performed so well during the Watergate hearings.

On the House floor and in past committee hearings, Hamilton, 55, has fought for the principle that the Executive Branch should keep the Legislative arm informed. In this respect, Hamilton could prove a formidable adversary for the Reagan White House and become the bright star of the forthcoming hearings.

If new elections were held in Nicaragua and the Sandinistas won, would the United States Government abide by those results? This question was asked recently of Elliot Abrams, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, during a Voice of America-sponsored satellite interview with international journalists. Abrams replied affirmatively. "Sometimes people we don't like win; it has happened all over the world," he said. "... after the people of Nicaragua have forced the Sandinistas out, they will be free to participate in new elections .... There has never been a case in history in which a communist has won a free election."

Chances are minimal that Congress will reaffirm its previous commitment to supply the contras with $40 million in heavy military armaments. Efforts are under way in Congress to withhold such funds until completion of the special investigations into the arms sale to Iran and the diversion of proceeds from those sales to assist the contras.

Good news for holiday lovers. A move is under way in Congress to designate Sept. 17, 1987, as "Constitution Day" and to make the day a legal public holiday. Sept. 17 will mark the bicentennial of the signing of the U.S. Constitution.

Among the low-income programs that would sustain the largest cuts under President Reagan's fiscal 1988 budget are Medicaid and financial aid to help low- and moderate-income students attend college.

Public Forum

To the editor:

It has been widely reported in the news media of the verbal uproar over the school attendance lines as presented during the most recent public hearings. Since it is the purpose of a public hearing to give all interested persons a chance to voice their concerns, I applaud the tremendous response that the parents showed in expressing their respective points.

However, I feel that when the speakers try to illustrate their positions by comparing one school against another, then the impact of their presentation becomes weak. Statistics were cited by several speakers to document their point that W.H. Robinson School is superior in quality education to Sadie Sautler School. Such critical assumptions are being made by people who are unfamiliar with the education being presented at Sadie Sautler School. Being a public school teacher in another county for 15 years who has two children presently attending Sadie Sautler School, I want to stand up and be counted as a true supporter of the teaching staff and administration at Sadie Sautler School. Due to my teaching background in elementary education, I believe I can recognize quality teachers and educational programs more readily than the average parent. I can honestly and unequivocally state that every teacher that has taught my children has been superior, not only in education, but also in the extracurricular activities, enrichment programs, and in the love given to my children from this group of dedicated and professional people.

I think everyone should adopt the goal that is stated in the Sadie Sautler Handbook: "Our goal is to help the child to develop emotionally, physically, intellectually, morally, socially, and academically in a changing world."

Teachers at Sadie Sautler School, keep up the excellent work!

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — The moment of greatest tension at Patrick J. Buchanan's first presidential campaign organizational meeting came when he revealed he would fly to New Jersey the next day to see his former chief, Richard M. Nixon, at his estate.

Tom Winter, editor of the conservative weekly Human Events, commented that Nixon is not for Buchanan and supports "somebody else" — presumably Robert J. Dole. Wall Street financier Harlan Schlicher, who might wind up as Buchanan's finance chairman, snapped to Winter: "I see you're still talking to Roger Stone." That produced general laughter.

Washington-based campaign consultant Stone, a key operative in Rep. Jack Kemp's presidential campaign, is on close terms with Nixon. Schlicher and other Buchanan boosters were irritated by the presence at the meeting in their prospective candidate's northern Virginia home of avowed Kemp backers — especially Winter and his Human Events colleague, Allan Ryskind.

CONNIE MACK'S HOMERUN

A backbench conservative Republican, Rep. Connie Mack of Florida, is trying to scuttle plans for a painless congressional pay raise with this slogan: "Congress must get higher pay the old-fashioned way — earn it by voting for it."

Mack sees virtually no chance to block the raise — from $77,400 to $89,500 — before it automatically takes effect Feb. 5. But he is quietly lining up support for a separate bill that would repeal the pay hike decreed by President Reagan and thwart the carefully-constructed scheme to avoid a roll-call vote on the issue.

Mack has been outraged by House GOP leadership silence on the issue. He also suspects that Republican leaders placed older members on the House Civil Service Committee — including Reps. John Myers, 59, of Indiana and Frank Horton, 67, of New York — two years ago in anticipation Women Voters of Greenville/Pitt County urges the council to repeal the refuse collection fee. At the public hearing last year, the League, along with many citizens, urged the council to fund refuse collection from taxes, as had been done in the past. The position of League remains the same. We urge the repeal of the refuse collection fee for the following reasons:

1. The League has long supported progressive taxation, but this refuse collection fee is in actuality a form of regressive taxation.

2. Refuse collection is a fundamental and indispensable public health service and protection with the entire community benefiting from such a service. Using special collection fees hardly seems an appropriate way to generate funds for so basic a service.

A recent amendment to the refuse collection fee ordinance by the council allows business to do what the individual citizen is not permitted to do: 1. haul away their own garbage and 1. share a container, and thus the cost, with another business. No doubt the council passed this amendment to correct what they considered to be inequities. However, to be fair to all its citizens, should not the individual citizen be allowed the same options?

As one studies this situation, though, it becomes even more clear that the best way to fund this basic service is through the traditional taxes and not individual user fees.

Therefore, the League of Women Voters of Greenville/Pitt County strongly urges the council to repeal the special refuse collection fee in the 1987-88 budget.

of the pay raise. Congressional veterans nearing the end of their careers presumably would have less fear of voter wrath for refusing in committee to block the automatic pay hike.

FREEZING OUT TREASURY

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and Deputy Secretary Richard Darman, all-powerful during the first four years of the Reagan administration, have been frozen out of strategy discussions for the president's State of the Union message.

Alfred Kingon, secretary to the Cabinet, suggested that the innovative Darman be brought in for some of the planning meetings. But Dennis Thomas, chief of staff Donald T. Regan's right-hand man, put his foot down. Under no circumstances, he said, would Darman be permitted at the table.

That puts Baker, chief of staff during the first four years, on the outside looking in. He has been reduced to asking Cabinet colleagues if they know what's afoot.

CAP MEETS RR

With his former deputy Frank Carlucci installed in the White House as the national security adviser, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger is now assured for the first time of getting the same Oval Office access as Secretary of State George Shultz.

Shultz had special treatment from Carlucci's predecessor: a virtual pass-key to the Oval Office for those highly persuasive tete-a-tetes with President Reagan. That gave Shultz an edge over Cabinet adversary Weinberger, particularly on arms control. While Carlucci is not making any announcements, Weinberger will now have entree on a par with Shultz.

A footnote: Anti-Shultz feeling is running high inside the White House, partly because of hostile reaction to the long, highly-favorable article about the secretary in the New York Times Magazine.

Methods Must Be American

RALEIGH — The success of the Japanese educational system is once again being placed before the American people as a golden ring to grasp. A U.S. Department of Education study has attributed the success of the Japanese economy to the rigors and efficiency of its school system.

No doubt, the Japanese schools do their job exceedingly well. One need only look at the scores Japanese children make on international exams to see that success. In the U.S. DOE study, American educators noted that many of the reforms advocated for American education today would make American schools more like their Japanese counterparts.

This reporter had the opportunity to visit Japan several years ago and to discuss with some leading Japanese educators the possibility of American adaptation of Japanese education methods. In those interviews, and in follow-up interviews at home with educators familiar with Japanese education, one message rang clear: Japan and the U.S. are very different countries and to expect Japanese methods to work here is foolish.

Take, for example, the experiment in two North Carolina school districts that would extend both the length of the school day and the school year. These experiments were conducted with one eye on Japanese experience. While these innovations had some success, neither had enough to offset the outcry of public opposition, nor to generate enough enthusiasm to spread the programs across the state.

Japanese educators, when interviewed by this reporter, said they were skeptical that the uniformity of Japanese education would be accepted in this country. In Japan, decisions are handed down to the schools. There is national education policy unlike anything we see in the United States where education policy is made by local school boards. Japan, being a homogenous country, is much more suited to such uniformity than the U.S. would be. Imagine a national education board trying to create a curriculum for both Clayton and Chicago.

The Japanese also believe in placing a great deal more pressure on their young students. The pressure to succeed is great in the lower grades. This is due in part to the long and tedious route a Japanese student must take just to learn his own language.

American educators, on the other hand, are seriously rethinking the amount of pressure placed on pre-school children through nursery schools and day care learning centers. In the U.S., there is a lot of sentiment for letting kids be kids for a while and for delaying the heavy duty schoolwork for later years.

Japanese children show the results of this early pressure. According to Japanese educators, Japanese kids are burned out by the time they reach college. That may be just as well because the Japanese are noted for their mediocre universities. Going to college in Japan is a joyride.

The uniformity of early Japanese education, with its emphasis on learning rote skills, may make terrific exam takers, but it does little to develop creativity in the Japanese people, Japanese educators told DOE. Japanese schools prepare children to take other people's ideas and improve them, not to come up with their own ideas.

Finally, there is the strain that the education system places on the Japanese child. Their teen suicide rate is among the highest in the world — it may be the highest.

FINAL PREPARATIONS — East Carolina University Chancellor John Howell, right, and James H. Bearden, assistant to the chancellor, discuss plans at the site of the new classroom building located on central campus. house," Howell said. "We have gone very far on their relocation into the house."

As the new chancellor, Eakin's primary responsibility will be to provide the institution with strong leadership, Howell said.

"A university of this size makes most of its decisions below the level of chancellor. The chancellor sets some general tone and guidance," Howell said. "He couldn't possibly deal with the details that go on in each of these decisions. Most business goes on without direct involvement of the chancellor."

Eakin, who was one of two finalists recommended to UNC System President C.D. Spangler by the ECU Board of Trustees, was an ideal candidate for chancellor, according to Howell, a longtime East Carolina professor of political science and former dean, provost and vice chancellor for academic affairs.

"The search committee, the (UNC) board and president were looking for a person to continue the course of university," Howell said.

"Looking at Dr. Eakin's public statements since his election, he has said he wants to see the university move ahead and he wants to enhance the university, which is what I've been trying to do."

Howell said he doesn't expect the impending change of leadership to have a disruptive effect on the university.

"If it were a small institution, the chief executive officer might deal in detail and have a more definite impact," Howell said. "But in an institution that is mature, it simply continues."

The selection of a spring date for the change-over will also reduce the impact, according to Angelo A. Volpe, ECU vice chancellor for academic affairs.

"I think from the very beginning when Dr. Howell announced his plans to retire, he suggested getting a replacement early in the year rather than July when things are going on like the budget and legislative session," Volpe said.

"A lot of thought was given to planning the transition to make it much smoother and easier. We expect it to be smooth due to the planning beforehand and the type of individual and chancellor Dr. Eakin will be."

Meanwhile, Elmer Meyer Jr., ECU vice chancellor for student life, said he is anxious to work with Eakin, but harbors mixed emotions about Howell's departure.

"I personally have enjoyed working with Chancellor John Howell for these five years," Meyers said. "I'm convinced the new chancellor will continue to move in a direction to improve the university much in the way Howell did in his tenure. We look forward to having Dr. Eakin on board. I think he will try to continue to improve the quality of East Carolina University."

Dr. William Laupus, ECU vice chancellor, dean of the School of Medicine, said he expects to establish a strong relationship with the new chief executive.

"The School of Medicine looks forward to working with the new chancellor," Laupus said. "We expect that the transition period of direction by him will go smoothly, and the medical school expects to proceed as it has since its inception to providing an exceptional an education as is possible."

Clifton G. Moore, vice chancellor for business affairs, said Eakin's previous experience at Bowling Green will help him deal with the university's finances.

"I've been quite impressed. He (Eakin) is approachable and a person you can talk with," Moore said. "He's from the business side of the street at Bowling Green, and he can appreciate and understand what we do in the business sector."

James Lanier Jr., vice chancellor for institutional advancement, said Eakin has already made strides in understanding the ECU system.

"I am very impressed with his openness and the quickness with which he picks up information about the university and the environment in which we operate at East Carolina," Lanier said. "I am confident he will give us the leadership that is essential as East Carolina continues to be recognized as one of the great young universities of the South."

EMS Helicopter Air Service Seen As 'Industry In Distress'

By CAROL TYER and STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writers

The deaths of all four occupants of Pitt County Memorial Hospital's EastCare helicopter air ambulance Jan. 8 added to already grim nationwide statistics of the still relatively new air medical services industry.

According to the national Emergency Medical Service Pilots Association, there have been 53 accidents and 46 fatalities since the industry began in 1978.

In 1986 there were 16 fatalities; in 1985, 13. The numbers have increased each year since 1978, as the ranks of air medical services have mushroomed. Four such services existed in 1978. Today about 150 companies provide EMS helicopters to hospitals throughout the United States.

Tom Einhorn, a co-founder of the NEMSPA, said that, based on flying time, medical helicopters are twice as likely to crash as other types of helicopters and 2.5 times as likely to crash as small planes and other non-commercial aircraft. Per 100,000 hours of operation, in 1986, there were 2.2 accidents for commercial helicopters and 6.5 for medical helicopters.

An accident is defined by the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) as an incident which results in major damage to the aircraft or injury or fatality.

Causes of accidents in 1986, according to Nina Merrill, executive director of ASH-BEAMS — the American Society of Hospital-Based Emergency Air Medical Services — have included "blade strike, tail rotor wire strike, wire strike, hit ground tail rotor failure, bad weather, hydraulics and power loss."

The cause of the EastCare crash has not been determined. A radio transmission from the craft seconds before it crash indicated there was a fire on board.

Einhorn said EMS helicopter service "is an industry in distress. We are experiencing the worst accident rate in modern aviation history right now."

He explained that helicopter ambulances are among the newest, fastest-growing medical care services.

In Einhorn's opinion, helicopter rescues are more dangerous than other types of flights because pilots may have to land on highway median strips or in fields. They face ground hazards unknown at conventional landing pads. The pilots often accept risky missions more readily because they know that patients' lives are at stake.

"I guess you can understand," Einhorn said, "that flying to an accident in the middle of the night where you have two or three people pinned in a car can be a stressful situation."

We don't have the luxury other pilots have. We don't know where we're going days in advance. We have about five minutes alert. You have to get into the air, know where you're going in an area you've never been to before at 3 o'clock in the morning in marginal weather."

Merrill said. "With any growth comes problems. And these accidents are a problem we need to deal with. ASH-BEAMS has been providing safety guidelines to members."

EastCare is a member of ASH-BEAMS. In fact, its medical director, Dr. Nicholas Benson, was at an ASH-BEAMS meeting when the Jan. 8 crash occurred.

Power Squirrel

ABILENE, Texas (AP) — A squirrel single-handedly shorted out power to downtown Abilene and sent firefighters scurrying to non-existent fires when it crawled into a mass of circuits and was electrocuted, officials say.

The animal "got into a transformer bank and caused quite a bit of damage to transformers," West Texas Utilities spokesman Sherwyn McNair said.

Power was out for about 40 minutes for most of downtown and the east side, and firefighters answered four emergency calls when the surge from returning power set off four alarms, Fire Lt. Carl Collum said.

In Abilene and San Angelo, squirrels are the leading animal cause of power outages, although snakes and occasionally birds cause blackouts, McNair said.

Photos Released In Beirut

Iran's revolutionary patriarch Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini.

An-Nahar said there was no note in the envelope to explain why the photographs were sent.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization announced Oct. 21 that it had abducted Tracy, a self-styled children's book writer.

Cicippio, acting controller at the American University of Beirut, was kidnapped Sept. 12, and the group also claimed responsibility. It claims both men spied for the United States and Israel.

The Polaroid photographs showed Cicippio and Tracy from the waist up wearing track suits and looking straight into the camera. Bespectacled Cicippio had a thick black beard grown in captivity. The white-haired Tracy had a smaller beard.

Revolutionary Justice Organization has not been involved in any known negotiations with Waite, who arrived in Beirut on Monday on his fifth visit since November 1985.

Waite met Saturday with Education Minister Salim Hoss, a Sunni Moslem, at his home in west Beirut.

"We had a very good conversation together. We both feel that if the hostage problem is resolved at least it's one step toward resolving broader problems," Waite told reporters after the 30-minute meeting.

Commission Will Meet

A long-range planning commission for East Carolina University has scheduled a meeting Friday to act on proposals to reclassify ECU as a research university and to increase the number of doctoral programs in the School of Medicine.

"There is a 40-page packet of proposals," said Dr. Henry C. Ferrell, professor of history and coordinator of the planning commission.

The 20-member planning board was established during the administration of Dr. Thomas B. Brewer, ECU chancellor from 1978-1981. When Dr. John M. Howell succeeded Brewer as chancellor the planning commission was reorganized and Howell assumed the chairmanship. Ferrell indicated that the proposals to be considered Friday have been prepared during Howell's administration.

Howell, who is retiring, will be succeeded March 1 by Dr. Richard R. Eakin, now at Bowling Green State University in Ohio.

If approved, the planning proposals would be forwarded to University of North Carolina system president C.D. Spangler Jr., Ferrell said.

An Open Letter To The People Of Eastern North Carolina

The Board of Trustees and staff of Pitt County Memorial Hospital want to thank you for every expression of sympathy you have extended to us following the crash of our EastCare air ambulance on January 8. The tragic death of three leading members of our flight crew and their young patient has been made easier to bear by the many remembrances that have poured into the hospital in recent days.

We appreciate the hundreds of prayers, flowers, letters, memorial gifts and other expressions we have received and are touched by the many friends of EastCare who attended the memorial service on Sunday. Each kind gesture has helped to sustain us through this difficult time. For this support we are grateful.

Body Of Woman Found On Fort Bragg

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The body of an 18-year-old Fayetteville woman, who had been married only three weeks before she disappeared more than a month ago, was found Saturday in a wooded area of Fort Bragg.

Laura Lee Vickery Clay is the third Fairlane Acres trailer park resident who has been murdered since last spring. Two other residents of the trailer park have been kidnapped and raped.

A fourth woman, a 23-year-old taxi driver named Kimberly Ann Ruggles, was found murdered on Fort Bragg earlier this month. Investigators say they believe she picked up her murderer near Fairlane Acres.

Military authorities said Laura Lee Vickery Clay apparently had been shot to death. Her nude and partially decomposed body was found by two men who were searching for a deer that had been hit by a car on a roadway near McKellar's Lodge in the northwest area of Fort Bragg, according to Maj. Kendal Smith, public affairs spokesman for Fort Bragg.

The Army's Criminal Investigation division took charge of the Clay investigation shortly after the discovery of the body. The Army did not disclose if a weapon had been found.

Mrs. Clay, an Army private, was a native of Plainwell, Mich., and had been in the Army since December 1985. She had been assigned to the 14th Data Processing Detachment at Fort Bragg since April 1986. She married Army Staff Sgt. Michael Anthony Clay of the 82nd Airborne three weeks before she disappeared.

The terror in the Fairlane Acres mobile home park began April 1986 when a Campbell University student, 24-year-old Linda Jean Coats, was killed in her trailer. Her body was found by a friend. She was nude and had been sexually assaulted and shot in the head.

On Nov. 16, two women were kidnapped at gunpoint from a telephone booth and forced into woods at the end of Navajo Street and were raped.

On Nov. 22, a woman was kidnapped and forced into a wooded area and raped. She was slashed about the head and body with a knife and left for dead. However, she recovered from her wounds.

On Dec. 12, Pvt. Troy Wilson of Fort Bragg arrived at his Huron Street home in Fairlane Acres and discovered his 18-year-old wife, Tammy, was missing. Deputies searched the area but the body was not found until the next morning in woods behind the trailer park. The young woman was nude and had been shot in the head. An autopsy disclosed she had been sexually assaulted.

A week later, the Clays' mobile home was badly damaged by fire. Clay, who was on a three-day training exercise at Fort Bragg, was notified of the fire and he was relieved of duty to return home.

Clay reported his wife was missing. Her car was found parked about a block away and investigators said the paint on the vehicle had been scratched, indicating it had been driven through underbrush.

On Jan. 7, the nude body of Ms.

Ruggles was found in a remote area near No Name Road and Chicken Road on Fort Bragg. She had been killed with a knife.

Cumberland County homicide detectives said Ms. Ruggles had received a call to pick up a fare at a telephone booth near the trailer park. Her cab company dispatcher reported she had lost radio contact with the driver a short while later.

Maj. Charles Smith, chief of detectives of the sheriff's department, said his homicide squad, assisted by the SBI and other detectives, "are proceeding slowly at this point as we are making every effort to put together all the evidence that we have found before we filed charges in murders."

IN THE STATE

Tracking Truckers

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A new portable sensor system imbedded in highways will make life tougher for truckers who speed and try to cheat on the 80,000-pound limit placed on their vehicles, truckers and state officials say.

State motor vehicle enforcement officials displayed the new system during a Friday demonstration on Interstate 77 in Charlotte. The sensor imbedded instantly recorded each passing vehicle's speed, weight and length, then fed the information to a printer inside an unmarked white van.

A state Division of Motor Vehicles officer then read the information and notified other enforcement officials of potential lawbreakers.

Within five minutes Friday, the sensor recorded 17 of 70 trucks either speeding or carrying too much freight, officials said. Only a couple of violators were stopped because Friday was largely a demonstration day and most of the violations were relatively minor, said Thedward Neal Jr., program coordinator for the DMV.

Social Loafing

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Social loafing, a term used to describe the fact that people don't work as hard when they're in a group as they do when they work alone, increases in direct proportion to the size of the group, a pair of University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill professors say.

"It's commonly believed that when people work together in committees, task forces and teams, the presence of other people encourages a greater sense of responsibility, spurring individual effort and enhancing productivity," said UNC-CH psychologists Charlie Hardy and Bibb Latane. "Overwhelmingly, individuals predict that others will try harder in groups, but that's not necessarily so."

Latane, professor of psychology and director of UNC's Institute for Research in Social Science, has been studying social loafing for the past decade. During 1984, he and Hardy, who is assistant professor of physical education, conducted experiments in which students were paid to clap and shout singly and in pairs.

The students wore blindfolds and earphones so that scientists could tell them they were alone or in pairs without the students knowing the real experimental situation.

Fair Facilities

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly will be asked for money to replace much of restaurant row at the State Fairgrounds after the buildings, some of which were built in the 1930s, were demolished, fair manager Sam Rand said.

Rand said Friday it was a question of tearing down the buildings before they fell down.

Rand said food vendors who operated restaurants in the demolished structures will have to bring trailers or tents into the site for the 1987 fair.

The legislature will be asked to provide the cost of the buildings, estimated at $2.2 million, but Rand said if the funding were approved tomorrow, it would be impossible to get the new buildings up in time for this year's fair.

"They were wooden pole-type construction," Rand said. "They were beyond repair."

Prison Population

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative committee on prisons says the number of inmates in North Carolina's prison system should be held temporarily to 18,000 to buy time with federal courts, which have ordered some jails in the state to reduce overcrowding.

"We need to stabilize the prison population while we put our plans (for expanding the correction system) into effect," said Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, co-chairwoman of the Special Committee on Prisons.

The committee included the cap in a package of proposed legislation for the 1987 General Assembly, which convenes Feb. 9. But the group did not recommend how the limit should be achieved.

The state government is the target of numerous lawsuits charging that North Carolina's prisons are overcrowded.

Worship Attitudes Among Sailors Pleases Chaplain

GREENSBORO (AP) — After meeting with naval chaplains from 22 cities across the nation this week in Greensboro, the top-ranking reserve chaplain in the U.S. Navy says he sees more results of his labor on a ship than in a parish on shore.

"Just to see the prayerful, worshipful attitude that comes through from those photographs (of sailors in worship services), it makes it all worthwhile," said Rear Adm. John Hever of Washington.

Lots of naval reserve chaplains agree. This week, the admiral was one of 23 chaplains assigned to the Navy's Reserve Naval Construction Force — popularly called the "Seabees" — who gathered in Greensboro for a three-day ministry workshop.

The workshop was in the Triad because Greensboro is the national headquarters for the Reserve Naval Construction Force's 1st Naval Construction Brigade.

The brigade consists of the Seabees' 17 reserve battalions in the continental United States. Custom is that the commander of a reserve Seabee force bases his headquarters near his civilian job. So Greensboro is headquarters for the 1st Brigade because Rear Adm. Charles R. (Dick) Smith is marketing manager for Carolina Steel Corporation.

"Seabees has nothing to do, exactly, with radios," Cmdr. W.C. Manley, the brigade's chaplain, jokes. "It has to do with construction battalions. They're comprised of officers, many of whom are Civil Engineering Corps officers; and the (enlisted) men themselves are in the construction trades."

Annexation Law Said Still Vague

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer

Hazelwood plans to finish taking over land it disputed with Waynesville, but some officials say the state Court of Appeals decision in favor of Hazelwood failed to clarify North Carolina's murky annexation law.

"We want to do everything we can for the citizens of Plott Creek," said Hazelwood Town Manager Bob Gardner. "We want to let them be part of our growing little town."

Gardner said the annexation of the 500-foot-wide, mile-long, 100-person Plott Creek area would take effect Aug. 18, because while Hazelwood and Waynesville fought over the area, Hazelwood continued to follow the steps required for annexation. Hazelwood already has extended a water line into the area and has plans for a sewer line and expanded police service.

But there was more at stake in the dispute than the land, and Waynesville has asked the state Supreme Court to review the Court of Appeals decision. The larger, statewide issue was what constitutes the first step in annexation.

The appeals court ruled Jan. 6 that Hazelwood had the right to annex the land because the town issued a "resolution of consideration" on Nov. 5, 1985, more than a year before Waynesville issued a "resolution of intent" on Nov. 26, 1986.

A resolution of consideration merely states an interest in an area, said Laura Kranfield, assistant general counsel for the North Carolina League of Municipalities.

Taiwan Flu Picks On Students

RALEIGH (AP) — The Taiwan A strain of flu could be the reason for the increase in flu cases among college students across the state because its most likely victims are people younger than 35, said Dr. J. Newton MacCormack, chief of the state's epidemiology section.

As of Friday, 648 cases of flu had been reported at 11 college campuses since October. At the same time last year, 170 cases had been reported, MacCormack said.

"The bug that is causing it, so far as we can tell, is the A Taiwan strain," MacCormack said.

Scientists had expected to see this year only three strains of flu viruses that had circled worldwide last year: A-Chile, A-Mississippi and B-Ann Arbor. But a fourth variation, the A-Taiwan virus, was detected in May. All are named after their places of origin.

The reason younger people are likely victims of the Taiwan-A strain is because older people developed an immunity to it in the late 1940s and early 1950s, when it last circulated in the United States.

The state uses colleges as a barometer for the number of flu cases statewide. A total 3,043 flu cases were reported on the campuses during the 1985-86 flu season, he said.

There were 261 flu cases reported at the campuses this week, with the largest number, 125, reported at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, MacCormack said. North Carolina State University reported the second largest number of flu cases at 59, he said.

The 261 cases were the largest number reported for any one week so far this flu season. Flu seasons usually run from October to March or April.

"We're not as nearly as high as we were at our peak week last year, which was near 1,000 cases," MacCormack said. "But I wouldn't be at all surprised if we did hit that."

Raleigh-area physicians interviewed Friday said they had begun to see more flu cases, but had not seen the numbers reported at the college monitoring sites.

"It's just starting to hit," said Dr. Paul J. Strang of Cary. "It's hitting a little later than usual. I've just in the past week seen four or five."

The flu killed 48 people in North Carolina last year, health officials have said. Nationwide, fatalities range from 10,000 to 40,000 each year, making the flu one of the nation's 10 leading causes of death.

Exum Endorses Merit Selection In Filling Judicial Vacancies

RALEIGH (AP) — Although refusing to endorse any particular alternative, state Supreme Court Chief Justice James Exum says the method "best suited" to shielding judicial selection from political partisanship is merit selection.

Under merit selection, a special committee evaluates candidates for judicial vacancies and makes recommendations to the governor, who appoints one of the recommended candidates. If the General Assembly approves the governor's choice, the voters would be given a chance to accept or to reject the appointee shortly after appointment or periodically, Exum said.

However, despite recent legal and political challenges to the Democratic Party's dominance of the North Carolina judiciary, the N.C. Courts Commission has decided not to ask the General Assembly to scrap partisan election of judges.

Instead, at the request of Exum, the commission said Friday the state's method of selecting judges should be put to a special legislative commission.

Exum, who headed a slate of Democratic judicial candidates that defeated Republican challengers and gubernatorial appointees in November, said he had "never been personally in favor" of North Carolina's partisan judicial elections.

"Our citizens have difficulty assessing the qualifications of judicial candidates" and end up voting along party lines, Exum said. But he said the system was unlikely to be changed soon.

"The Democratic leadership is going to have to be persuaded" before the Legislature agrees to change the way North Carolinians select their judges, Exum told the commission, which met in Raleigh Friday to consider recommendations to the General Assembly. "If pressed, I'm afraid the idea for change would suffer another setback."

Exum said partisan campaigns required judicial candidates to seek support from political parties and from individuals who might appear before them in court later.

Hearings Closed On Gateway Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — An administrative law judge has closed nine days of hearings on an air route case in which four cities, including two in North Carolina, and four airlines are competing for the right to begin direct service to London.

Judge William A. Kane Jr., will make a recommendation to senior Transportation Department officials in the coming weeks on which two of the four cities will be selected as the U.S. gateways for the routes.

A final decision is expected by Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole by April 1, possibly sooner. A department spokesman said it's hoped the routes could be awarded in time for the heavy summer air travel season.

The hearings, which ended Friday, have included the unusual situation of two cities from one state — Charlotte and Raleigh-Durham in North Carolina — competing vigorously against each other.

American Airlines wants to begin service to London from Raleigh-Durham, where it has established a major hub, and Piedmont Airlines wants to fly the route from Charlotte.

"There are 7,000 Piedmont employees and their families who see it as a battle between a North Carolina corporation and a Texas corporation," Don McGuire, a spokesman for Piedmont, has said.

American has its headquarters near Dallas, while Piedmont has its headquarters at Winston-Salem, N.C.

"Our office has been inundated by correspondence from Carolina on both sides," department analyst John Keppel said.

Meanwhile, Delta Air Lines is arguing the government ought to award it one of the routes out of Cincinnati. At the same time Pan American World Airways wants to fly to London out of Pittsburgh where it plans to link schedules with USAir.

Ed O'Hare, a Transportation Department spokesman, said it's not known whether the department will give one of the routes to one of the North Carolina cities and the other to either Pittsburgh or Cincinnati, although industry source privately suggest that may be the most likely outcome.

Kane began the hearings Jan. 6.

Since then, he has heard witnesses that included congressmen and senators from states involved, officials from each of the cities, and representatives of the each of the four airlines.

The department instituted the route case last October so that U.S. airlines could be allowed to begin direct service to London from two new cities.

"This aspect damages at least the appearance of impartiality," Exum said.

"I have no illusions about the difficulty of devising this kind of mechanism," he said. He recommended that the Legislature authorize a special commission to study judicial selection methods and report back during the 1989 session.

The courts commission adopted Exum's recommendation and said the special commission should report back to the Legislature during its 1988 session.

If the General Assembly does not act before 1989, Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe said, "the federal courts may push us into remedying what they perceive to be a violation of ... the Voting Rights Act."

Two lawsuits pending in federal court contend that the state's judicial election laws make it more difficult for racial minorities to elect the candidates of their choice. But if they're successful, the lawsuits also could make it easier for political minorities, such as Republicans, to elect judges of their choice.

No Republicans, and only two blacks, have been elected to the Superior Court bench in this century.

C. Allen Foster, a Republican lawyer from Greensboro who filed both lawsuits, criticized the recommendations made by Exum and the commission.

"This matter has been studied to death," Foster said in a telephone interview. "My clients are not willing to let another election pass."

Gadgets Continue To Invade American Homes

By BRUCE SHUTAN
The Gastonia Gazette
GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Americans have already shelled out more than $15 billion on entertainment products for their homes in just the first nine months of 1986, according to the Washington, D.C.-based Electronic Industries Association.

When television first invaded American living rooms in the 1950s, it was a big deal for a family to be the first on its block to own one. Nowadays, it's not unusual for families to have a TV set in every room of the house. The Electronic Industries Association says 98 percent of homes contain at least one TV, while 30 percent own a video cassette recorder. What's one to make of this electrical frenzy?

Somewhere between the decor and the coffee table lies the latest in what retailers are now calling "personal electronics."

And with another Christmas gone by, it appears the invasion of the gadgets has come full circle.

Some are concerned about what's happening to the "personal" in personal electronics.

It's got Bill Absher thinking "we may lose the art of conversation."

That is, "unless Teddy Ruxpin (the talking teddy bear) is talking to you!"

If anyone should know how tomorrow's electronics are affecting today's families, it's Absher — he's been running Shiflet & Dickson, a wholesale distributor of consumer electronics, for more than 20 years.

"I think the entertainment is really coming into the home, and it'll probably stay there," Absher said.

"I'm wondering, are we becoming a lazy society? Everything we do, we want it easy."

Another electronics insider who also knows all too well the direction the consumer revolution is taking is Bill Wysong, Wysong, a Radio Shack manager, has a 2-year-old who carries on half-hour conversations with a toy bear that mumbles.

"We're getting out of the Industrial Revolution and into the Information Age," Wysong said, citing the book "Megatrends" by John Nesbit, the bearded information consultant who's been appearing on recent TV commercials for Southern Bell.

One of the newest innovations Wysong said his employer is now peddling is a wrist watch with a talking alarm whose proclamation, "The time is 6 a.m. ..." forces sleepy heads out of bed with a prompt reminder, "The time is 6:05 — hurry up!"

While talking watches might help push busy breadwinners out the front door, personal electronics are luring them back home.

And home is where the heart of this revolution is taking place.

"It used to be that families would congregate around the radio until they went to bed," Mark Raiteri said as his family looked on in a living room brimming with the latest in electronic gadgetry.

For the Raiteris, a two-VCR household that includes both beta and VHS formats, the new tube of the '80s has become a center of attention.

Not only does it allow them to view worthwhile programs that wouldn't otherwise fit in with their busy schedules, the VCR adds a new dimension to home movies — once a staid source of documenting trials and tribulations of family life.

It also serves as an educational device.

After viewing a videotape of themselves in a school play, Kent and Ashley Raiteri were able to get the kinks out of their roles and turn in better performances the next night.

What's probably even more fun is tapping into the power of video to play a board game the whole family can enjoy. Some games now boast software programs that allow families to see what a simple throw of the dice will get them.

The game Clue, traditionally played on a board, has taken on a three dimensional appearance for the Raiteris.

"On a board game, it's cut-and-dried," said Ashley, 14.

"But when it's on a TV screen, you've got to remember things like who wore the purple dress. It's a lot more challenging," added Ashley's mom, Lynn.

To the family on the go, personal electronics in the home spells convenience. And the Raiteris are one of those families.

"We really lead a hectic life most of the time," said Mrs. Raiteri. "So to be able to sit back and totally relax is such a luxury for us."

For Ashley, living an electrified life "keeps you from having to spend time with things that are trivial, like checking the thermometer."

Track Said Needed To Draw Bicyclists

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — The nation's top bicycle racers will not compete in the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival in North Carolina this summer if festival organizers fail to build an outdoor track, a national cycling official says.

Plans for the cement track, called a velodrome, are in jeopardy since the facility must be ready by July 23 and festival organizers say they are far short of raising the $1.2 million needed for its construction.

Velodrome racing is one of three cycling events in the festival, scheduled to be held July 13-26 in Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill and Greensboro. The other two cycling events are men's and women's road racing.

"If Raleigh falls down on us, we will have to go elsewhere," said Richard Hauser, the U.S. Cycling Federation's coordinator for the Olympic Festival. "I won't say that we won't come ... but I can assure you our best athletes will have to go elsewhere."

Hauser said he could not rule out the possibility that the federation would decide not to send any cyclists to the festival if the track is not built.

Earlier this month, Hill Carrow, executive director of North Carolina Amateur Sports, said his group had raised $200,000 in pledges toward the velodrome construction. With $1 million still needed, Carrow said the organizing group has not yet determined whether to proceed with plans to build the cycling track.

Reagan Urged To Take More Blame For Blunder

By WILLIAM M. WELCH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of President Reagan's own party urged him to begin shouldering more of the blame for the Iran-Contra deal, while his administration reassured Israeli officials that it was not fingering them in the affair.

There also was a moment of bitter irony last week for a president who used his predecessor's Iran-hostage problems as a stepping stone to the Oval Office. Former President Jimmy Carter's secretary of state went before Congress to call Reagan's arms deals an expensive and amateurish blunder.

"To be blunt, this great nation — if it is to remain worthy of global leadership — cannot again manage its foreign relations as an amateur," Cyrus Vance said.

He was the first witness in a series of Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings on the policies behind Reagan's clandestine arms deals and the diversion of proceeds to rebels fighting the Nicaraguan government, who are known as the Contras.

Carter himself said, through a spokesman, that he had agreed to meet with members of a commission named by Reagan to investigate how the Reagan administration's National Security Council carried out the Iran-Contra policy.

Two more former presidents — Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford — have also been asked to appear before that commission, headed by former Texas Republican Sen. John Tower.

It was a week that ended with former national security adviser Robert C. McFarlane testifying before the Senate panel that Reagan first approved a plan for Israelis to ship arms to Iran in a telephone conversation in the summer of 1985.

McFarlane said Reagan gave that approval even though McFarlane reminded him that his secretary of defense and secretary of state opposed the deal.

The week began with administration officials sending word to Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir that the White House's release of documents last week was not an effort to cast blame on Israel. The assurance was delivered Monday by U.S. ambassador Thomas Pickering.

The documents said a key factor in Reagan's decision to approve weapons shipments to Tehran was a belief by Israeli officials the deal would create a "dependency" by some elements in Iran, a situation that the United States could then exploit.

Israeli officials have denied disclosures in Washington that high-level Israeli officials played pivotal roles in the arms-for-hostage deals and that they had first suggested that money be funneled to the Contras.

Republicans on Capitol Hill stepped forward with a suggestion that Reagan should do more to take responsibility for the affair.

Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., vice chairman of the Senate's Iran-Contra special investigative committee, stopped short of calling for Reagan to apologize. But he said his constituents believe Reagan has not done enough to demonstrate that he considers himself to be responsible, especially in view of the intensive finger-pointing going on toward former national security adviser John Poindexter and ex-NSC aide Oliver North.

"He is the president and he is accountable," Rudman said.

Another conservative Reagan supporter went further. Rep. Henry Hyde, R-Ill., urged Reagan to admit "an error of the heart" in approving the arms sales to Iran, whose leader Ayatollah Khomeini calls the United States the "great Satan" and where U.S. hostages were held for more than a year at the U.S. embassy in Tehran during Carter's administration.

A spokesman for Reagan said no apology was planned. "The president feels that he has done nothing for which he must apologize," Albert R. Brashear said.

There were also these developments:

—ABC News reported that North, on a trip to Iran last May, argued in favor of accepting the proffered release of two hostages in exchange for arms. But, the report said, McFarlane held out for release of all four kidnapped Americans, and the U.S. officials ultimately went home with none.

—CBS News reported that North had told associates he threatened to kill Iranian middleman Manucher Ghorbanifar if word of the secret arms deal leaked out. "I'm going to give you a chance to become a martyr," he reportedly said.

North and other officials were said to distrust Ghorbanifar and had evidence he misrepresented arrangements, but there was no evidence North tried to carry out his threat.

—FBI Director William H. Webster's name surfaced in speculation about a successor to CIA Director William J. Casey, who is recovering slowly from surgery to remove a cancerous brain tumor. Webster, according to sources, is interested in the job.

—Another Israeli official, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, said an Israeli envoy told U.S. officials a year ago that they had no better than a one-in-four chance of gaining freedom for the U.S. hostages in Lebanon by selling arms to Iran.

Peres, the former prime minister, said the word was given by Amiram Nir, the counterterrorism adviser shown in U.S. documents to have played a lead role in urging skeptical U.S. officials to continue the arms sales, according to reports.

—Elliott Abrams, assistant secretary of state, was named by a source in the Contra aid network, who insisted on anonymity, as one of three officials who made key decisions on the Contras, including an American distribution of weapons. The others, the source told The Associated Press, were North and a CIA officer.

—Reagan last May 15 personally authorized a clandestine trip by U.S. officials to Tehran and approved a document outlining the "pillars and principles" of U.S. policy toward Iran, the Los Angeles Times said.

—The chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said the panel is still sorting through documents to trace the money purportedly diverted to the Contras. So far, no conclusive evidence has been found to show where the money went, committee members say.

—The New York Times reported that the arms deal may have had its genesis in plans by commercial arms merchants more than a year before the Reagan officials began considering such sales. It quoted sources as saying the arms dealers who eventually helped bring about the change in policy had been planning among themselves to sell U.S. arms to Iran, which was seeking military equipment for its bloody war with Iraq.

Probe Of Former Aide Nofziger Wanted By Justice Department

By PETE YOST
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said Friday an independent counsel should be appointed to investigate former White House aide Lyn Nofziger's lobbying activities on behalf of a New York military contractor and a company selling rice to South Korea.

The department's position, outlined in a six-page application to the U.S. Court of Appeals in Washington, suggests that Nofziger may have violated federal conflict of interest laws when he lobbied the government for Wedtech Corp., which was seeking a $31 million Pentagon contract for small engines, and Comet Rice Inc.

The application was filed Jan. 6 with the court's independent counsel division, which gave the department permission Friday to release it publicly. A three-judge court panel has yet to appoint an independent counsel in the matter.

The Justice Department's application outlines Nofziger's lobbying activities on behalf of Wedtech and Comet Rice, which first came under close scrutiny by the U.S. attorney's office in the Southern District of New York.

Nofziger, assistant to President Reagan for political affairs until January 1982, under federal law was barred for one year after leaving the White House from lobbying his former employer.

Nevertheless, in May 1982, four months after his resignation, he wrote a letter to James Jenkins, then deputy counselor to President Reagan, asking Jenkins' assistance in obtaining a letter of intent for Wedtech from the U.S.

Army regarding the contract for military engines, said the Justice Department.

The Justice Department application goes on to say that shortly before receiving the letter, representatives of the Army and the Small Business Administration participated along with Nofziger's lobbying partner in a meeting held by Jenkins at the White House to discuss financing for Wedtech. The financing was in connection with its proposal to the Army for the 6-horsepower engines designed for a variety of military uses.

The Justice Department said the fact that the meeting took place shows that Jenkins' office thus had a direct and substantial interest in the contract, a legal requirement for a conflict of interest violation to have taken place.

Regarding Comet Rice, the application says that 11 months after leaving the White House, Nofziger sent a letter on behalf of Comet Rice to then-national security adviser William P. Clark. Nofziger urged Clark to assist in preserving a rice contract the company had with South Korea. Nofziger wanted Clark to persuade the State Department to approve a crop substitution sought by Comet Rice.

Nofziger also sent two follow-up memos to Clark on behalf of Comet Rice, which ultimately did obtain approval from the government to make a substitution it wanted, using 1982 rice in place of rice grown in 1981.

The company's contract with South Korea called for shipping 370,000 tons of California's 1981 rice crop. But Comet was unable to buy 1981 rice from two large California cooperatives.

The Justice Department application was written by Deputy Attorney General Arnold Burns.

King's Widow Issues Appeal To Continue Husband's Dream

By The Associated Press

Coretta Scott King urged students Saturday to embrace non-violence and carry on the dream of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., while the holiday that honors him spurred Klan rallies and other challenges.

Mrs. King, widow of the civil rights leader, spoke to an Atlanta conference of college students from around the nation as part of the observances leading up to Monday's second annual federal holiday marking King's birthday.

King, who would have been 58 on Jan. 15, was assassinated in Memphis on April 4, 1968.

"It's important that we train a new generation of leadership to move toward the dream Dr. King had," Mrs. King told the students.

In a program Friday night, Mrs. King had promised to lobby for laws to decrease unemployment and hunger, stiffen sanctions against South Africa and cut the national defense budget.

The conference Saturday, with the theme "Stand Up for Martin Luther King Jr. and Nonviolence," was organized by Bernice King, his youngest daughter.

King's son, a county commissioner in Fulton County, Ga., said in a speech in Austin, Texas. "We've come a long way but we still have a long way to go."

"If my father was still alive, he would say the struggle is not over yet. Freedom has not been universally achieved," Martin Luther King III told more than 200 people at a Friday night observance.

"White people talk about the Holocaust because they don't ever want it to happen again. We need to do the same with black children," he said.

Also Saturday, white-robed marchers paraded through the streets of Pulaski, Tenn., where the original Ku Klux Klan was founded 120 years ago.

"The Klan and all the crowd equalled about 200," said Pulaski police dispatcher Henry Vernon. "There was no trouble."

The Liberty Bell will become a focus of King Day observances on Monday, with a national "Let Freedom Ring" ceremony.

Since the bell in Philadelphia has been silenced by a century-old crack, it will receive only a symbolic tap by Housing and Urban Development Secretary Samuel Pierce Jr., representing President Reagan.

But simultaneously, the Centennial Bell in the Independence Hall tower across the street will toll seven times.

Spock Arrested With Trident Protesters At Cape Canaveral

By RON WORD
Associated Press Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Over 100 protesters, including Dr. Benjamin Spock, were arrested Saturday when they scrambled over a fence at Cape Canaveral Air Force Station as thousands of peace activists protested the launch of a Trident 2 missile.

Spock, 83, brought a cheer from many in the crowd of at least 4,000 as he hoisted himself over the fence and dropped to the ground. Dozens of other protesters jumped the fence and others went around it.

Spock and his wife, Mary Morgan, were among 138 protesters arrested and charged with misdemeanor counts of trespassing, said sheriff's department spokeswoman Joan Heller.

Those arrested were bused to the Brevard County Jail, where they were held under canopies set up in the jail yard.

"It's a good cause, a very good cause," Spock said, peering from a window in the prisoners' bus.

The demonstrators marched on the air station to protest nuclear proliferation and the test launch Thursday of the Trident 2.

"Cape Canaveral means something special to the American people so it's good to be making our protest here," Spock said of the home of America's space program. "They'll immediately understand the connection here."

The peace marchers gathered at the entrance of Port Canaveral to make the three-mile march to the gate of the Air Force Station and participate in civil disobedience.

The protesters voicing their concern over the nuclear arms race ranged from high school students to peace movement activists to wealthy retirees. Organizers and police placed the crowd at approximately 4,000.

"I'd like to see my grandchildren grow up and for their children not to have to face this stuff," said Bert Blankenship, 63, wearing a straw hat with a hatband that said "I'm a grandma for peace."

About 125 counter-demonstrators had tried to stand in the way of the activists, but were outnumbered. No violent was reported.

"Hundreds of people called me and told me they felt the same way and they would come out here and show the world how we felt," said David Kraak, a counter-protester calling for "peace through strength."

An Amtrak train that rally organizers dubbed the "Peace Train" brought more than 100 protesters to the rally. Buses brought hundreds of others wanting to join the march.

"For 20 years, I've been watching Benjamin Spock and Jane Fonda speak against our national defense and values. I'm getting sick of it," said Joel Ruth, 34, of nearby Indianland, one of the organizers of the counter protest. "These people have no real popular backing. We hope this will be their Waterloo."

About 200 protesters ended a month-long, 217-mile peace march

Friday that started in St. Marys, Ga., where Trident submarines will be based. The Trident 2 missile would be carried on the submarines and carry multiple warheads.

By Friday, the number of people arrested from the vanguard of the protest, including those who tried to halt a Thursday test launch of a Trident 2 missile, had swelled to at least 66.

"The fact that the launch went off successfully makes the rally particularly appropriate," Spock, 83, told activists Friday. "The question is not the success of the launch, but the future of our world."

Protesters arrested earlier in the week faced an unsympathetic judge in Brevard County Court.

"I hope you'll take your protest to Soviet Russia after you're finished in Florida," Judge Peter Haddad told protesters Friday. "You've got the whole jail in an uproar. You've got police officers working double time. You're humiliating the military."

Most of the people arrested on trespassing charges have been detained because they refuse to identify themselves.

Authorities erected four large canopies in the yard of the Brevard County jail to accommodate up to 200 protesters.

The 237 jail beds in Titusville are full, and about 100 more inmates, including 42 protesters, were sleeping on mattresses on the floor, said Brevard Sheriff's spokeswoman Joan Heller.

Private Plane's Pilot Reportedly Lacked Experience

By LAURIE SULLIVAN
Associated Press Writer
SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A pilot whose light plane collided with a commuter airliner, killing 10 people, had logged 38 hours flying the craft and had deftly avoided another plane five weeks before, officials said Saturday.

Federal investigators planned to interview pilots and relatives who may have flown with Chester Baker to determine his "approach to flying," National Transportation Safety Board member John Lauber said Saturday.

Investigators refused to speculate on whether pilot error was responsible for Thursday's collision of the SkyWest Fairchild Metroliner and Baker's Mooney M-20C, which killed all 10 occupants of both planes and pelted a residential neighborhood with debris and bodies.

A flight log recovered from the wreckage of the Mooney showed Baker, 38, had 300 hours total flying time, including 38 hours in the craft he owned.

"Thirty-eight hours is a low amount of time, but is consistent with being checked out on that aircraft," Lauber said.

"Virtually all Baker's experience was at Airport No. 2, 10 miles south of Salt Lake International Airport, he said.

In early December, Baker had to dodge an oncoming plane landing on the wrong end of the runway at that smaller airport after he had just touched down at the other end, Kendra Hunter, who witnessed the incident, said Saturday.

The unidentified pilot of that plane was from out of state and unfamiliar with the field and was not on a radio frequency that would provide wind reports dictating the correct pattern, she said.

The two pilots saw each other just as they touched down, and Baker veered his four-seat Mooney to the side of the runway, coming within 25 to 35 feet of the other craft, airport base manager Ron Nelson said Saturday.

"Chester made an excellent maneuver around the aircraft and did everything right," Nelson said.

Thursday's collision occurred as the SkyWest plane, en route from Pocatello, Idaho, was banking into its final approach to Salt Lake International and Baker was practicing landings and takeoffs at Airport No. 2.

Baker's passenger Thursday was Paul Lietz, 54, a licensed pilot and part-time flight instructor who may have been monitoring Baker's biannually required proficiency test, Nelson has said.

Lauber said a preliminary review of radar data recorded at the main airport showed an unidentified plane entered the restricted Airport Radar Service Area about one minute before the collision.

Only planes which have contacted the control tower and received clearance are allowed in the ARSA.

The unidentified plane was flying on visual flight rules and was not equipped to provide altitude readings on radar. So although investigators know it flew 1½ miles into the ARSA, they do not know its altitude, he said.

The SkyWest craft was flying under a "discrete code," an exact pattern assigned by air traffic controllers, and had been given clearance to descend to 2,700 feet for approach, investigators said.

"Very shortly into the development of this sequence ... the computer indicates a lost target," Lauber said.

Air traffic controllers said the Mooney made no radio contact with the Salt Lake International tower, Lauber said.

Lauder said 36 witnesses will be questioned further, including three who told investigators the Mooney hit the SkyWest plane's right wing at about a 45-degree angle.

March Halted After Pelting By Klan Members

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer
CUMMING, Ga. (AP) — Hundreds of Ku Klux Klan members and supporters throwing rocks, bottles, and mud stopped a smaller group of people on an "anti-intimidation march" Saturday through a county that has been all white for decades.

At least nine people were arrested and several of the estimated 75 black and white marchers were struck or grazed by thrown debris but no serious injuries were reported.

The Forsyth County "brotherhood anti-intimidation march" was planned to mark Thursday's birthday of the late Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. and was led by Atlanta City Councilman Hosea Williams, a former aide to the slain civil rights leader.

The trouble started when the marchers were met by several hundred Klan members, supporters and spectators. Some Klan members were clad in white robes and hoods, others in fatigues. Between 70 and 75 law enforcement officers were on hand as the march traveled through Forsyth County, but officials said it wasn't enough.

"We lost control of the crowd," said Bonnie M. Pike, inspector of field operations for the Georgia Bureau of Investigation.

The hostile crowd, estimated by reporters and Georgia Bureau of Investigation agents at between 100 and 300, gathered near the march's starting point in this northern Georgia community.

The march began 45 minutes after its 10 a.m. starting time, and that gave the waiting Klan members and supporters "a longer time to get together and become more agitated," said Forsyth County Sheriff Wesley Walraven.

Many in the anti-march crowd began walking down the two-lane country highway alongside the brotherhood demonstrators.

Fatigue-clad Klan members and supporters chanted racist slogans and carried signs such as "Forsyth Stays White" and "Sickle Cell Anemia — The Great White Hope." White racist attorney, publisher and politician J.B. Stoner passed out material describing AIDS as a black disease plaguing America.

Near the halfway point, as Williams spoke through a bullhorn, rocks, bottles, cans and mud balls were tossed at the marchers, who were partially shielded by their rented bus and a van.

Some marchers put jackets over their children's heads to protect them.

GBI agents and police moved in to stop the Klan group from entering the highway in front of the march.

The marchers got on their bus and left, traveling farther along their planned route, marched again, apparently without incident, before disbanding.

Forsyth County, with a population of about 38,000, has no black residents. Blacks who lived there in the first 12 years of this century moved away after local disturbances following rape accusations against a black man.

The Klan group went to downtown Cumming, where Klan leaders delivered speeches to a crowd that reporters estimated at some 400 to 500 people.

Later Saturday afternoon, a large crowd of people lingered in Cumming, and a few robed Klansmen passed out literature.

Williams had said the march was a natural thing to do for followers of King's dream of peace and justice.

"For those who support the non-violent philosophy of Dr. King to allow the violent white racists of Forsyth County, Ga., to continue usurping the constitutional rights of black people and all whites who respect the American rights of blacks to stand unchallenged is to contribute to making Dr. King's dream become a nightmare for all Americans," Williams said.

Williams took up the idea of the planned 2½-mile march for after planners in Forsyth County called it off amid local opposition.

Williams was a top lieutenant to King in the days of the civil rights movement, often acting as an advance man and planner for King's historic marches.

Gov. Joe Frank Harris, in a statement Saturday afternoon, said he deplored the disturbance.

"We do not and will not tolerate a rabble-rousing, troublemaking element which casts a negative image on a state whose race relations have been marked in large measure by harmony, good will and peaceful co-existence," he said.

MARCH TROUBLE — Law enforcement officers wrestle an unidentified man on the highway during a march Saturday in Forsyth County, Ga. The "brotherhood anti-intimidation march" was led by Hosea Williams but was halted and abandoned at the halfway point after marchers were hit by bottles, rocks and cans through from a crowd of Ku Klux Klan members, supporters and spectators. (AP Laserphoto)

Rail Accidents Linked To Drug, Alcohol Use

By KAREN L. SCRIVO
Associated Press Writer
BALTIMORE (AP) — Drug or alcohol use figured in at least 48 train accidents from 1975 to 1984 that caused 37 deaths and $34 million in property damage, according to the Federal Railroad Administration.

And federal investigators are looking into whether drug use played a role in the Jan. 4 collision between three Conrail locomotives and an Amtrak train near Baltimore in which 16 people died and 175 were injured.

Conrail engineer Richard Gates and Conrail brakeman Edward Cromwell were found to have marijuana in their systems at the time of the accident, the FRA said last week.

However, it remains uncertain whether the marijuana impaired the performance of either man when the Conrail locomotives ran a stop signal and slid into the path of the high-speed passenger train.

The pre-1985 statistics on major drug-and alcohol-related train accidents are conservative because the FRA did not compile figures until February, when a federal law went into effect prohibiting railroad employees from working while drunk or under the influence of drugs, said spokesman Tom Simpson.

This week, the FRA is expected to release a study of 170 accidents since the new law took effect, in which drug or alcohol was involved, Simpson said in a telephone interview from Washington.

One of the worst accidents before the new law was enacted involved a freight train loaded with hazardous materials which derailed in Livingston, La., in September 1982, causing $14 million in damage and forcing the evacuation of 3,000 people.

Investigators found that that train's engineer and head brakeman had been drinking before work and that at the time of the accident the train was being operated by a friend of the engineer.

Drug and alcohol tests, like those administered to the Conrail crew members involved in the Jan. 4 accident, are required after accidents that cause a fatality, at least $500,000 in damage or that release hazardous material which causes injury or evacuation.

Amtrak was fined for failing to test its surviving crew members after the Jan. 4 accident. The company has said it did not administer the tests for humanitarian reasons because of the shock of the accident.

The tests also can be administered if a supervisor has reason to believe that an engineer, brakeman or signal operator is under the influence of drugs or alcohol, Simpson said.

Employees covered by the new federal rule include engineers, conductors, brakemen, dispatchers, signal operators and others in charge of moving a train, he said.

The National Transportation Safety Board had been pushing for the drug and alcohol testing regulation since 1973, said Bill Bush, an NTSB spokesman.

Opposition has come in part from railroad unions which complain that the tests infringe on workers' constitutional rights.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Engineers has no objections to requiring the tests after major accidents, but opposes compelling people to submit to tests without showing cause, spokesman John McCown said from the union's Cleveland headquarters.

A spokesman for the United Transportation Union, which is also based in Cleveland, did not return telephone messages left by The Associated Press.

Ship Sinks In Mediterranean

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — A Malta-registered cargo ship sank Saturday in the Mediterranean off the coast of this northeastern city and just two of its 20 crewmen were rescued, a coast guard official said.

The official, who declined to give his name, said the 4,500-ton Kyretha Star sent out a radio distress call early Saturday before sinking 72 miles east of Barcelona.

He said the ship, carrying a cargo of iron bars, left Barcelona on Friday en route to an undetermined North African port.

A passing Soviet freighter picked up one crewman from a life raft and another was rescued by a coast guard helicopter, the official said. Both crewmen were unhurt, he added.

The official said the ship appeared to have sunk as a result of a shifting of its cargo in heavy seas.

Several coast guard airplanes and helicopters and nearby freighters searched for other members of the crew, which included Greeks, Filipinos and Yugoslavs.

White House Promotes Image Of Still-Aggressive President

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — White House aides are battling a perception that Iran arms sales disclosures have left President Reagan without the heart or vigor for new legislative battles in the final two years of his presidency.

"He is not, as some might suggest, sitting here devoting all his time to reviewing what is behind him," says White House spokesman Albert R. Brashear. "The president is looking forward, as he must in his job of carrying out the last two years of his term in office."

"He's going to be an aggressive president," says Larry Speakes, who is winding up nearly six years as Reagan's chief spokesman at the end of this month.

"We are getting on with the business of foreign policy," says Rozanne Ridgway, assistant secretary of state for European affairs. "The president is directing that pursuit of foreign policy."

Still, aides concede privately that they cannot gauge how seriously the Iran crisis will affect the president in his relations with Congress. Some say his battles will be mainly to preserve gains he has already made.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said recently that in terms of ideas the administration has "really run out of string."

Asked how the Iran crisis has affected the president's prospects on Capitol Hill, a senior administration official began his response by saying, "It's clear that," then paused and added, "Well, it's not clear."

"The polls show there's been an effect," said this official, who spoke on condition he not be identified. "So members of Congress can see that, and I don't know, I can't tell you how it affects their thinking."

A Gallup Organization poll of 1,500 adults for Times-Mirror, taken Dec. 27 to Jan. 4, showed that Reagan's favorable or very favorable rating had fallen from 83 percent in July 1985 to 61 percent.

The White House has declined to reveal its own polling results, but an administration source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said "They are not too far off from what you are seeing in some of the other polls. I think they're pretty consistent."

Reagan backers are still predicting, though, that the public will support him when all the facts are known.

"I think it would be a mistake to underestimate the power of a Ronald Reagan to come back from this diversion and this distraction, this serious problem, and be effective," said Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill. "I would not underestimate that at all."

"The whole thing is going to be based on the State of the Union," said Tom Korologos, a lobbyist with strong ties to the administration. "We'll see then what kind of an atmosphere they create."

The president will deliver his State of the Union message to Congress on Jan. 27. It is expected to sound a number of familiar themes such as a bigger role for states in welfare programs, a balanced budget constitutional amendment and authority for the president to veto items in spending bills.

But William L. Ball III, assistant to the president for legislative affairs, said there will be new ideas including a proposal for catastrophic illness insurance, although its form is not yet clear, and changes in the way the administration and Congress shape the federal budget.

In addition, Ball said, there will be "some proposals on agriculture" and a cluster of ideas designed to make American business more competitive with other nations. He said this will include trade legislation; changes in antitrust laws and product liability laws and regulatory revision.

Korologos predicted that most congressional supporters would continue to stand by the president, despite his troubles over secret arms sales to Iran and diversion of profits to rebels fighting the leftist government of Nicaragua.

"Some of them are going to cut and run for him, but for the most part these guys who are voting this way in the 100th Congress have been voting that way in the 99th and the 98th," said the lobbyist.

The administration official said of the controversy, "It's not clear how it affects different issues. It may have one kind of an effect on foreign policy issues and another kind of effect on domestic issues."

Ms. Ridgway, asked whether the "weakened presidency" would be able to achieve its foreign policy objectives, replied, "You are asking me to accept an adjective that I will not accept. Certainly in the world of things that I follow I see no basis for the assumption."

On counter-terrorism measures, however, she conceded, "I am not going to deny the sense that there has been a pause perhaps on the allied side. ... They haven't expressed it to us, but there's no doubt it's there."

Some argue that the November election, in which Democrats regained control of the Senate while holding their majority in the House, poses a bigger problem for Reagan in Congress than his Iranian difficulties.

"Because of the outcome of the elections, we know we are going to have to work harder," said the administration official.

Budget Appeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, using his weekly radio address for the third week in a row to appeal for support of the budget he has submitted to Congress, exhorted lawmakers Saturday not to turn Pentagon spending into "a kind of crazy roller coaster."

"There could be no thrill in going down hill very fast when what would be going down would be our ability to defend ourselves," the president said in the speech delivered from Camp David, Md., where he is spending a three-day holiday weekend.

He thanked those who sent him get-well wishes, especially 8-year-old Colin MacDonald of Holbrook, N.Y., who he said "told me he liked my speeches except when they preempted his favorite TV shows."

Gossip Columnist Earl Wilson Dies In New York At Age 79

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — Earl Wilson, the prolific gossip columnist who brought Broadway's nightlife to millions of Americans and took pride that celebrities did not fear him, has died at age 79.

Wilson, who during his 48-year career churned out 11,424 daily columns, mostly for the New York Post, died Friday at St. Joseph's Hospital after nearly a week in a coma, said hospital spokeswoman Jodi Horton.

He had Parkinson's disease and was admitted to the hospital after suffering a stroke last Dec. 14.

Known for his trademark signoff, "That's Earl, brother," Wilson's "It Happened Last Night" column was carried by the Field Newspaper Service and before that by the Hall Syndicate.

When he retired in 1983, he said his subjects never feared him.

But, he quipped: "My decision to retire as a gossip columnist is the most popular thing I ever did. ... If I'd known how much everybody would be pleased, I would have done it long ago."

In 1923, at age 16, the Rockford,

Ohio, native began writing for magazines and later became a regular contributor to the Saturday Evening Post, Liberty and Esquire.

His column was picked up by the Post and Hall Syndicate in 1943 and he also broadcast gossip tidbits on the WOR-Mutual radio broadcasting system in 1945.

His books included "I Am Gazing Into My 8-Ball" in 1945, "Let 'Em Eat Cheese Cake" in 1949 and "The Show Business Nobody Knows" in 1971.

Wilson, a regular at opening nights and celebrity haunts, was especially fond of profiling starlets and ingenues. He said he was known as "the three B's editor — booze, bosoms and behinds."

He praised more than he slammed and his humorous darts generally were more gentle than barbed. One of his standard interview questions was to ask what his subject wore to bed.

A typical column consisted of a couple of interviews or topical observations interspersed with short, humorous fixtures. On March 18, 1981, for example, Wilson began: "Just as we fearlessly forecast two months ago, the bottom is falling out of blue jeans and women's pants are dropping off."

He went on to explain that skirts and dresses were in at the best places since Nancy Reagan replaced Amy and Rosalynn Carter as a sartorial role model.

The usual final item was Earl's Pearls, one-liners making the Broadway rounds, like this one: "A bus is a conveyance that goes twice as fast when you're chasing it as it does when you're on it."

He signed off, "That's Earl, brother."

People from, and things about, Ohio got special plugs. Wilson frequently talked about his subjects through the eyes of "The B.W.," which stood for beautiful wife, meaning his wife, Rosemary. The former Rosemary Lyons died in February at age 76. They had been married 50 years.

"Nobody ever feared me," he said in his farewell, recounting a time he telephoned Elizabeth Taylor to ask whether her latest marital split was permanent.

He said Miss Taylor responded, crossly: "Hang up Earl. I'm watching a movie."

"That ended my dreams of being a superpower," Wilson wrote.

A rival columnist, Liz Smith, called Wilson "a tireless, terrific reporter who could simply slide near a celebrity and then turn away moments later to concoct a complete, complex and unique miniprofile, full of wit and truth. Nobody did it better. Nobody ever will."

A son, Earl Jr., survives. Funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Official Reports Astronaut Knew About Seal Problem

AP Aerospace Writer

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — A Morton Thiokol Inc. executive says in the first deposition in a lawsuit over the Challenger explosion that NASA's chief astronaut asked him about booster rocket seals before the blast and he replied: "It appears to be a problem."

Edward J. Mason, Thiokol's office manager at the Johnson Space Center, made the statement in connection with a suit against the Utah based maker of the space shuttle's solid-fuel boosters by the widow of Ronald McNair, one of seven crew members killed in the Jan. 28 explosion.

In the weeks that followed the Challenger disaster, the crew members' families took a public stance against legal action, but some of them changed their minds after public hearings revealed the rocket flaw.

Cheryl McNair, who filed suit in October seeking unspecified damages, explained: "To do nothing would be a tacit acquiescence or stamp of approval of the type of conduct that took my husband's life."

Mason said Monday in a deposition taken by attorney Ronald Krist that Robert Crippen asked him in October or November 1985 about the rubberized O-ring gaskets used to seal joints between segments of the booster rockets.

"He knew about the problem and he asked me is it a real problem and I said ... something like 'It appears to be,'" Mason said.

He said the two had met to discuss another matter, and Crippen "mentioned it casually. So I just said, 'It appears to be a problem,' or words to that effect."

A presidential commission said the explosion was caused when one of the shuttle's boosters leaked burning gases through one of its joints.

Mason said he did not know the rocket problem was life-threatening until after the accident.

Key NASA officials, including astronauts, have said they were not aware of the significance of the booster problem until after the explosion. Crippen was out of town and not available to comment on Mason's statement, said Cindy Robinson, a secretary at his Washington office.

Mason said he worked mostly as a marketing representative for Thiokol in Houston and was not familiar with technical details. He said he did show briefing documents on the problem to James Wood, a NASA engineer who worked for shuttle program director Arnold Aldrich.

"Our discussion was not really an engineering discussion, but just almost casual discussion," said Mason.

Aldrich received a more detailed briefing from Lawrence Mulloy, a NASA engineer at the Marshall Space Flight Center in Alabama, he said.

Krist said he negotiated unsuccessfully with Thiokol representatives for months after filing Mrs. McNair's lawsuit. Now, he said, families plan to sue for an amount large enough "to get Morton Thiokol's attention."

Elections Injunction

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — A federal judge has issued an injunction preventing the city from holding any elections and gave officials 60 days to propose a new form of government that does not violate the voting rights of blacks.

"The commission form of government cannot be allowed to continue," U.S. District Judge Harold Baker said at a hearing. He gave the city, best known as the home of President Abraham Lincoln, until March 20 to propose a remedy.

Baker had ruled that the current system, with a mayor and four commissioners elected at large, violates the federal voting rights act by diluting the votes of blacks, making it impossible for them to be adequately represented.

No black has been elected to the council in the 75 years the commission system has been in place.

Steelworkers Union, USX Corp. OK Tentative Pact On Contract

By MICHAEL HIRSH
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — United Steelworkers union and USX Corp. officials who reached tentative agreement Saturday on a contract to end their industry's longest work stoppage, said both sides achieved their objectives.

The agreement gives both the nation's largest steelmaker and its workers "a fighting chance to compete in a harsh steel marketplace," said USX Chairman David Roderick and USW President Lynn Williams in a joint statement.

Williams said the union's main objective "of greater job security was essential for an agreement, and that objective has been met."

The settlement, reached about 12:45 a.m. Saturday, came after a week of protracted bargaining sessions, with both sides under intense pressure to resolve the 170-day-old dispute that has idled 22,000 workers.

Rank and file steelworkers won't go back to work, however, unless they vote in favor of the contract later this month, officials said.

The negotiating teams agreed to withhold details of the agreement, including the length of the contract, until the local presidents could be briefed on it Sunday in Pittsburgh.

But a source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the settlement includes pay cuts of about $2 per hour, profit-sharing and restrictions on the company's use of non-union labor.

After seven months of bargaining, USX, formerly the United States Steel Corp., was under pressure to get its plants back on line to get a share of steel orders in the second quarter, traditionally the industry's busiest.

The union, meanwhile, was looking to relieve its financially strapped workers, whose unemployment benefits are about to expire after 26 weeks of picketing.

"This certainly was as difficult a negotiation as any I have experienced," said mediator Sylvester Garrett, a veteran of nearly 50 years of steel bargaining who was called in Dec. 19 after talks broke off.

The work stoppage began Aug. 1 when the previous contract expired. Most of eight states where USX has steel-related plants ruled the dispute a lockout for unemployment compensation purposes. The company called it a strike.

If the local presidents ratify the contract, the union expects to begin membership meetings Tuesday and get a completed vote count by Jan. 31, according to union spokesman Gary Hubbard.

The workers wouldn't go back before the contract was ratified, he said, adding that he believed it would pass.

About 33,000 of the 45,000 USX union workers affected by the pact are eligible to vote on the agreement, Hubbard said. Excluded are those who have been laid off more than two years.

Larry Regan, president of the largest USW local in Gary, Ind., where about 6,000 workers would be affected by the agreement, said he believed the new pact also contained some job reductions, but fewer than the 1,500 USX demanded in November.

USX had been pressing for concessions similar to those the union granted last year to Bethlehem and other major steelmakers, including LTV Steel Co. and Wheeling-Pittsburgh Steel Corp., both of which are under Chapter 11 reorganization under federal bankruptcy laws.

The union originally opposed any wage-and-benefit concessions, claiming that USX was in better financial shape than its competitors. But the union agreed to some givebacks if the company would fall in line with the others in curbing the use of cheaper, non-union labor.

Although USX controlled about 17 percent of the domestic steel market before the dispute, its absence has had only minor effects because the markets for most steel products are glutted with low-cost domestic and foreign metal.

By contrast, the previous record steel walkout, a 116-day strike in 1959, ended when the U.S. Supreme Court upheld President Eisenhower's decision to order 500,000 union members back to work, citing national security. The strike had idled virtually all U.S. steel production.

Railroad Strike Talks Extended

NEW YORK (AP) — With tempers running short, exhausted union negotiators pushed back a strike deadline Saturday and gave themselves another day to reach agreement with the nation's largest commuter railroad.

"I think the people just ran out of steam," Long Island Rail Road President Bruce McIver said, explaining why a deadline of 6 a.m. Saturday had been pushed back 24 hours.

"There were tempers in the room up there," said John Caggiano, business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, one of 11 unions negotiating with the railroad. Explaining the unions' decision to postpone a strike, he said, "The ultimate goal is to reach a settlement, not get into the street."

After the deadline extension was announced Saturday morning, negotiators broke up to get some rest before resuming negotiations in the evening. Marathon negotiations had been going on since Monday.

A walkout would affect 272,000 passengers who rely on the LIRR each week-day for transportation from the Long Island suburbs into New York City. Settlements with all 11 unions are considered necessary to avoid a strike, since the unions generally respect each other's picket lines.

Five other unions, representing 40 percent of the railroad's 6,600 workers, have already reached settlements with the railroad.

The strike would not be fully felt by commuters until Tuesday because Monday is the federal holiday honoring the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr.

The original strike deadline was 12:01 a.m. Saturday, but at 11:30 p.m. Friday, negotiators announced the extension until 6 a.m. though talks had been at an impasse. It was a similar story at 5 a.m. Saturday, when union negotiators approved the 24-hour extension of the deadline even though talks were stalled again.

The unions are seeking a 21 percent wage increase over a 4½-year contract, effective retroactively to January 1985. McIver has said he wants to base new contracts on settlements with five other unions that agreed to 19.5 percent raises over the same period.

Caggiano said that although he was pleased with the extension, he was not optimistic a strike could be averted within 24 hours. "Sometimes tempers fly, and if tempers fly, somebody could just walk," he said.

Key Witness Testifies

CINCINNATI (AP) — After eight weeks of dry testimony on the financial dealings that led to Ohio's 1985 banking crisis, jurors heard the state's key witness testify about his million-dollar spending while his company went under.

Jurors inundated by charts, earnings reports and financial arguments last week heard Ronnie Ewton testify about shopping sprees for $1 million in jewelry, meetings in a private jet, and cruises on a $1.3 million yacht.

Ewton, 44, is the handsome, articulate founder of the defunct ESM Government Securities Inc. of Fort Lauderdale, Fla. He already has pleaded guilty to federal and Ohio fraud charges and faces up to 15 years in prison.

The defendants are Home State former owner Marvin L. Warner, ambassador to Switzerland in the Carter administration, and former Home State presidents David Schiebel and Burton Bongard. They face charges of misapplication of funds in connection with the bank's dealings with ESM.

The Securities and Exchange Commission closed ESM in March 1985, after the brokerage was discovered to be hundreds of millions of dollars in debt.

The news that Home State lost $144 million in the closing sparked a depositor run that forced the thrift to close and gutted the private Ohio Deposit Guarantee Fund, which insured their accounts.

Runs on deposits began at other thrift institutions insured by the fund, prompting Gov. Richard Celeste to order all 69 savings and loans to close temporarily. Eventually, all the depositors got their money back.

Cordero's Deal With Kidnappers Angers Foes

By SERGIO CARRASCO
Associated Press Writer
QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — Opposition leaders on Saturday harshly criticized President Leon Febres Cordero, who gained his freedom from rebel paratroopers holding him hostage by ordering the release of a jailed mutinous general.
Former President Osvaldo Hurtado, who handed power to Febres Cordero in August 1984, called for the 55-year-old president's resignation.

Gen. Frank Vargas Pazzos, the former air force commander whose release Friday night ended Febres Cordero's 11-hour captivity, remained secluded at an air base outside Guayaquil. Rene Vargas Pazzos, his brother and a member of Congress, said the general would probably go to Quito "to inform the people of his future activity."

Vargas Pazzos, 52, had been imprisoned since last March for leading an unsuccessful rebellion against Febres Cordero.
Andres Vallejo, president of the unicameral Congress, called an extraordinary congressional session for Tuesday "to analyze the country's situation and the conduct of the president of the republic and adopt the pertinent resolutions."

Febres Cordero went to a Guayaquil hospital to visit people wounded in a gunbattle preceding his capture. He himself was unhurt.
Renegade paratroop commandos surrounded him and his defense minister, Gen. Medardo Salazar, at a military ceremony at Taura air base 15 miles southeast of Guayaquil Friday morning. The paratroopers fought presidential bodyguards before taking the two men and other members of presidential delegation captive. There was no official report on casualties, but local news media said Saturday two people were killed and four wounded.
Febres Cordero and the other hostages were released at 8 p.m. Friday after Vargas Pazzos arrived at the base aboard a government plane.

Vargas Pazzos had been detained at an army garrison east of Quito, the capital, awaiting trial on charges stemming from his insurrection.
Besides freedom for Vargas Pazzos, the rebel troops Friday originally demanded that Febres Cordero be removed from office.
Soon after he was released, Febres Cordero called the outcome of the incident a "triumph" of Ecuadorean democracy.
He told reporters in Guayaquil on Saturday: "As long as democracy continues going forward, overcoming obstacles like the ones we saw yesterday, democracy gets stronger."
He remained in Guayaquil, Ecuador's largest city and main port 170 miles southwest of Quito, but said he had resumed his presidential duties.
Vallejo said he called the special session after "gathering all the criteria expressed by the different parliamentary sectors."

against the troops who took part in the kidnapping.
"Vargas Pazzos is now a free citizen," Vice President Blasco Penaherrera said Friday in announcing the swap.
"Febres Cordero has taken it upon himself to foment physical violence and verbal violence and that violence has now enveloped him," said Rodrigo Borja, leader of the Democratic Left party, which holds the largest congressional bloc.
"It was a mistake to use violence against the military. The president's resignation is the only way to preserve the constitutional order," said Hurtado, leader of the Popular Democracy Party.
Febres Cordero put down Vargas Pazzos' rebellion last year by sending about 2,000 troops backed by tanks into the Quito air base held by the general and forces loyal to him. Several soldiers were killed.
The next general election is set for January 1988. Febres Cordero's term expires in August 1988.

KEEPING INFORMED — Military guards in the government palace in Quito, Ecuador, read a newspaper about the kidnapping of President Leon Febres Cordero, who was kidnapped Friday by renegade paratroopers during a visit to the Taura air base, was freed 11 hours later when the government released the leader of an earlier revolt. ## Chad Chief Seeks Help From West

By JEFFREY ULBRICH
Associated Press Writer
N'DJAMENA, Chad (AP) — President Hissene Habre called Saturday for increased help, saying Libya has doubled its forces in Chad since being routed from a northeastern garrison by Chadian troops two weeks ago.
"Libya is in the process of considerably reinforcing its forces in northern Chad," Habre told a news conference in the Cabinet room in the presidential compound. "And I would even say, in a very precise manner, that since the events at Fada, Libya has doubled its forces in the north."
Habre called for additional help from the West to counter the increased Libyan threat. "Our needs are immense," he said.
Chad, a former French colony in north-central Africa, became independent in 1960.
There was no way to verify independently the figures on Libyan troops. A week ago, Western diplomatic and military sources estimated the number of Libyan troops in northern Chad at between 8,000 and 10,000.
Libya has occupied the northern half of Chad since 1983. The Libyans first were ruling the north with the help of former President Goukouni Oueddei's rebels. Last fall, however, Col. Moammar Gadhafi dropped his support for Goukouni and switched to Acheikh Ibn Omar, head of another rebel faction, but one which has no significant military force.
On Dec. 1, Libya launched a drive in Chad's northwestern Tibesti mountains to subdue the Goukouni fighters who had rallied to Habre's government in N'Djamena. Seizing the chance, Habre sent his own troops to fight alongside the former rebels.
Since then, according to all reports, the Chadians have succeeded in blunting the Libyan offensive, and the government has announced several victories.
On Jan. 2, the Chadian army routed the Libyans at Fada, killing nearly 800 of them, capturing more than 100 and seizing a huge amount of military equipment, the government said.
But the Libyans since have strengthened both their ground troops and aviation capabilities, Habre said. "As a consequence, the war is continuing."

Afghan Tensions Still High In Border Section

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
JALALABAD, Afghanistan (AP) — Residents of this Afghan city say there have been only minor breakdowns near Jalalabad in the government's failing cease-fire. But the signs of war abound.
Outside Jalalabad, in eastern Afghanistan 45 miles from the border with Pakistan, armor rumbles along the road to the fabled Khyber Pass. Afghan guards man checkpoints on the route, favored by smugglers of arms and contraband. Soviet helicopters swarm over the city's military airport.
"The city is quiet, but that's bad country over there," said a Soviet journalist, gesturing to the east and the border with Pakistan.
In Kabul on Saturday, the Soviet army scaled down the deployment of armored units that had taken up key positions throughout the capital the previous day in an unusual show of strength.
Armored personnel carriers that had been guarding major intersections and the Soviet residential district were gone by late afternoon. But armored personnel carriers remained at the national television station's transmission center, at the Soviet military hospital and other points.
Friday was the second day of a unilateral cease-fire declared by Afghan leader Najibullah. Some diplomatic sources speculated that the Soviets, who intervened in the war in Afghanistan in December 1979, feared internal problems in Najibullah's ruling Marxist party or an attack by anti-government guerrillas.
Kabul was quiet Saturday.
In Peshawar, Pakistan, top Afghan guerrilla leaders announced their rejection of the cease-fire and their plan to form a government-in-exile to step up the nearly 9-year-old civil war. Guerrilla sources in Pakistan and diplomats in Kabul said earlier the cease-fire was broken by both sides on Thursday in Kandahar and in the Kabul area.

Near Jalalabad, at the Khoziabad olive orchard, a wizened old civil guardsmen in a turban leaned on his pre-World War I bolt-action rifle and said he had heard shooting every night in the hills to the east since the cease-fire was to have started.
He claimed all the firing was from "the counter-revolutionary bandits" and that no Afghan government forces returned fire.
The rifleman, Alim Khan, said it had been years since there was any fighting at the sprawling farm, founded 20 years ago under the Afghan monarchy and since taken over by the ruling People's Democratic Party of Afghanistan.
But the orchard 15 miles from the border still devotes 700 of its 5,000 workers to protecting its land, some of them uniformed soldiers and others, like Alim Khan, civilian militiamen.
A group of foreign reporters visited the orchard and Jalalabad on Saturday in a carefully controlled and very quick tour arranged by the Kabul government as part of the reporters' visit from Moscow.
On the road between the farm and Jalalabad, a potholed stretch that cuts across the brown, rock-strewn plain at the foot of a mountain wall, a column of eight Afghan armored personnel carriers rolled back to base, apparently from a border patrol.
Two other armored personnel carriers had stopped a crowded and gaily decorated bus. One occupant had been taken off and was lying on the road at gunpoint, his hands clasped behind his head.
Afghan soldiers with assault rifles stopped buses at a highway checkpoint, searching for arms smugglers descending from the Khyber Pass, an ancient invasion route followed by Alexander the Great.

Merchants in Jalalabad's teeming marketplace differed on whether there had been any cease-fire breaches. Some said they had heard shooting, but others said it had been quiet since the last big battle three weeks ago in the hills near the city.
The civil war is impossible to forget anywhere in Afghanistan. But in Jalalabad, one of the few areas where Soviet and Afghan government forces have maintained virtually uninterrupted control, there is a pronounced feeling of surrounding strife.
The airport is filled with Soviet Mi-24 attack helicopters. The missile-carrying helicopters buzzed back and forth across the valley all morning Saturday, but were not involved in any visible engagement.
The airport's tower is covered with camouflage netting and its key buildings are sandbagged. Along the perimeter, anti-aircraft guns and artillery are dug into permanent trenches.
On the road to town, camels loaded with dried and citrus fruits and almonds, the region's chief crops, amble past a junkyard of burned out and demolished military trucks, tanks and armored personnel carriers.
Soldiers stand guard in the marketplace, where stalls overflow with handicrafts, fruits and vegetables and the electronic goods and consumer items that come by smugglers' caravans from Pakistan.

HOW TO ESTABLISH A FAIR MARKET PRICE FOR YOUR HOME

How successful you will be in selling your home will depend on the accuracy of your appraisal and the resulting price you place on it. There are a number of ways to arrive at a precise market value, but I believe that there is no better nor more accurate method than comparative analysis. By keeping abreast of the current and recent real estate activity in your neighborhood you will be able to compare your home feature for feature with others having sold recently or currently on the market. By making such a comparison of features and prices you will be able to establish a price range for your particular home. Once this price range has been established you should put your home on the market at the top of the price range and consider accepting an offer which falls between the high and low prices.

One method, and undoubtedly the most complete and accurate, is to discuss the matter with a local real estate broker who maintains extensive records of all real estate activity in your area. Who can tell you which homes have been sold, precisely what they sold for, and the exact features of each home.

If my office may be of assistance to you in any real estate matter please don't hesitate to call. We will be happy to answer your questions.

Aquino Visits Mindanao After Truce Agreement

By MIGUEL C. SUAREZ
Associated Press Writer

COTABATO CITY, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino, saying she is ready to die for her people, flew to strife-torn Mindanao on Saturday after a Moslem chief agreed to halt five days of fighting that killed up to 67 people.

Haji Murad, the senior Moro Islamic Liberation Front official in the country, agreed to a temporary truce during a half-hour meeting Saturday with presidential adviser Aquilino Pimentel at a Moslem religious school 7 miles northeast of Cotabato City on Mindanao island.

Mrs. Aquino arrived soon after in largely Christian Iligan City, 70 miles to the north. Amid heavy security there, she appealed for an end to the bloodshed over Moslem demands for self-rule and asked voters to ratify the Philippines' draft constitution in a Feb. 2 plebiscite.

Murad said it was up to Hashim Salamat, the Moro Islamic Liberation Front chief, to decide how long the cease-fire would last. Salamat told The Associated Press by telephone from Saudi Arabia that "the doors to negotiation are still open," but refused to reveal his next move.

Estimates of casualties since the Moro Islamic Liberation Front began its attacks on the island Tuesday varied. The government news agency put the toll at 46 dead, 86 hurt. Local military officials said as many as 67 people died.

In a separate rebellion, Communist rebels have fought the government for 18 years, but agreed to a 60-day cease-fire which went into effect on Dec. 10. The Communist rebels and the government now are trying to work out a peace accord.

The Moro Islamic Liberation Front said it resumed fighting in the 14-year Moslem insurgency because the government excluded it from peace talks in favor of the rival Moro National Liberation Front. Both groups seek Moslem autonomy but are divided on the terms of self-rule and by factional jealousies.

In Manila, the capital, police went on maximum alert Saturday as a precaution against clashes between Christians and Moslems. Patrolman Joaquin Canagan said extra mobile patrols were deployed to two Moslem neighborhoods but no incidents were reported.

Military units in the capital were also placed on red alert, a precaution taken in the past when Mrs. Aquino left the city. Troops closed a major street that runs beside her office at Malacanang Palace.

Mrs. Aquino went ahead with her tour of the large, southern island despite fears for her safety. She spoke in Iligan City, Surigao and Bislig to promote the constitution. She arranged to travel to Mati, Cotabato City and Zamboanga City on Sunday.

Mrs. Aquino told about 30,000 people in Iligan City that "we need to bring peace back to our land."

"I am a Filipino, and I am willing to offer my life for the Filipino people," she said. "It is high time that we Filipinos should forget our differences and unite for the good of the country."

Up to 700 soldiers, armed with M-16 rifles, grenade launchers and truck-mounted machine guns, ringed the high school campus where she spoke. Military cadets stood guard between the crowd and the makeshift stage.

After meeting with Pimentel, Murad told reporters that government emissaries offered to set up a meeting with Mrs. Aquino after her arrival in Cotabato City. But he said the decision to accept was up to Salamat.

Murad said the Moro Islamic Liberation Front was insisting that any future peace talks be held under the auspices of the international Moslem League and that the first session take place outside the Philippines.

In Jidda, Saudi Arabia, Salamat told the English-language Saudi Gazette that his group demands confiscation of land given to Christian settlers in the 1950s and 1960s, Islamic law, integration of rebels into local security units and use of the island's resources for its own people.

Last month, the rival Moro National Liberation Front dropped its demand for an independent Islamic state and agreed to start negotiations next month on autonomy for the estimated 5 million Moslems in the southern Philippines.

About 60 percent of Mindanao's people are Christian and the rest Moslem. Thousands of Christians from northern and central islands were resettled in Mindanao in the 1950s and 1960s in a program which helped set off the Islamic revolt.

Japan Reports AIDS Case

TOKYO (AP) — Health authorities Saturday reported the first known case of a Japanese woman contracting AIDS, a 29-year-old former prostitute in the port city of Kobe.

The chairman of the Health and Welfare Ministry's AIDS Surveillance Commission said the woman brought to 26 the number of people in Japan identified as suffering from AIDS, or acquired immune deficiency syndrome. Seventeen of the 26 have died.

Yuichi Shiohara told reporters the woman was diagnosed as having AIDS after being hospitalized for pneumonia. His remarks were nationally televised.

The woman, who was not identified, told doctors she had foreign customers while working as a prostitute, he said.

AIDS is a viral disease which destroys the body's ability to resist infection and is spread through sexual relations or through bodily fluids. The disease is fatal and there is no known cure.

The woman also is the first known case in Japan of a person getting AIDS through heterosexual relations. Of Japan's 25 previous AIDS patients reported since May 1985, 10 were homosexuals and 14 were hemophiliacs who received regular blood transfusions. The cause of one case was uncertain.

The United States, with about twice Japan's population of 117 million, has had 29,435 confirmed cases of AIDS, claiming 16,667 lives, officials say.

In 1858, the county's courthouse was destroyed by a blaze supposedly set by a man trying to destroy a will. In 1910, the courthouse burned again.

Rowsom Wreaks Havoc As UNC-W Pops Pirates

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Rowsom does not, despite the brochures handed out by UNC Wilmington, rhyme with "awesome."

But the appellation certainly does apply to the Seahawks' Brian Rowsom, who, if not for Navy's David Robinson, would certainly be the top candidate for the Player of the Year in the Colonial Athletic Association.

Saturday night, Rowsom and company invaded Minges Coliseum and the 6-9 senior from tiny Columbia, N.C., poured in 39 points and pulled away 15 rebounds in leading the Seahawks to an 85-70 victory over East Carolina.

A sellout crowd of 6,500 — the largest since nationally ranked Jacksonville invaded Minges with Artis Gilmore 17 years ago — jammed into Minges, but the Pirates just could not respond enough as they dropped their fourth straight game to UNCW over the past two years.

Rowsom dominated the game. He fired through 14 of 21 field goals and made 11 of 15 free throws along the way. East Carolina used every defense in the book to try and hold him down, but it wasn't to be.

"He played a magnificent game," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "For the most part, every time he went up, he had a hand in his face. But he made the tough shots and that's a compliment to him. He played as well as I've ever seen him play. He played with a purpose and he played strong."

The Pirates tried playing him one-on-one, playing him front and back and at times, gathered three defenders around him, but he still managed to do his thing. "We didn't play that badly against him, he just played that well," Harrison said.

"We had a super crowd, a super setting — and Wilmington played super. They played extremely, extremely well," Harrison continued. "We couldn't generate any baskets off our defense tonight like we usually do."

"The kids played hard. I have no complaints about that," the coach said. "It's amazing when you have a game of the intensity of this one and there are only 19 turnovers." ECU

Lady Pirates Fall To UNCW, 87-77

WILMINGTON — Sharon McDowell scored a career high 33 points as UNC-Wilmington handed East Carolina its first conference loss of the year, 87-77, in women's college basketball action Saturday night.

"The team played true to form as they have all year," said ECU coach Emily Manwaring. "They established a weak defensive pattern early in the game and could not find a way to dig out of it."

"Until the players can accept responsibility for their own performance, nothing will change...with only half a season remaining and judging by our 15 game performance, we are definitely in trouble."

The Lady Seahawks led at the half, 40-31. They improve to 9-2 overall and 2-2 in the Colonial Athletic Association. ECU falls to 10-5 and 3-1.

Monique Pompili led ECU with 18 points and Jody Rodriguez added 16. The Lady Pirates return to action Monday at UNC-Charlotte.

Timely Play Helps Duke Roll Past Wake Forest

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — As far as Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski was concerned, his 14th-ranked Blue Devils played well for only 17:22 against Wake Forest.

He was pleased that it was the final 17:22.

"That's the first time I haven't seen us play aggressive in the first half," said Krzyzewski, whose Blue Devils defeated Wake Forest 69-49 in Atlantic Coast Conference basketball Saturday.

"We were playing on our heels.... Maybe we didn't attack as much as we needed to."

Krzyzewski says the turnaround began when Tommy Amaker, who had drawn the toughest defensive assignment in Tyrone Bogues, caused two straight steals. He scored only eight points, but Krzyzewski said that didn't matter.

"Tommy's steal, where he left Bogues, then came from behind and got it ignited us and just seemed to pick up the whole defense," Krzyzewski said. "It didn't matter that if he scored or not. He really understood his impact on the game without scoring."

The scoring was left to Danny Ferry, who finished with 17 points and freshman Robert Brickey added a second half scoring spark to lead the Blue Devils to the victory.

It was the 21st consecutive conference loss for the Demon Deacons, who last won an ACC game on Feb. 27, 1985, with a 68-65 victory over Virginia. The Demon Deacons are now 8-5 and 0-4 in the ACC, while Duke improves to 13-2 and 3-1.

Wake Forest, playing a tenacious man-to-man defense in the first half, came away with a 30-27 halftime lead, and freshman Sam Ivy scored the first basket of the second half to give the Demon Deacons a five-point lead.

But Duke capitalized on backcourt steals to tie the score at 34. The score was tied three more times, and Billy King's reverse layup with 12:33 left gave Duke a 42-40 lead, and the Blue Devils never trailed again.

Duke outscored Wake Forest 25-7 over the next 10 minutes, led by Brickey, who scored eight inside points in about seven minutes. He finished with 12 points.

"I felt we played a great 25 minutes of basketball," said Wake Forest coach Bob Staak. "In the first half, and early part of the second half, we ran effective offense, competed well on the boards and controlled them on defense. When Duke came back and took the lead, we did not respond very well."

Ivy led Wake Forest's scoring effort in the first half, leading the team with 10 points and seven rebounds. But he was smothered by the Blue Devil defense in the second half and was hampered by foul trouble. He finished with 18 points after fouling out with 5:25 left. Mark Cline added 15 for the Demon Deacons.

Bunn Steps Down As Conley Coach

HOLLYWOOD — Donnie Bunn, head football coach at D.H. Conley High School, has resigned as teacher and coach in order to pursue a career in private business.

Bunn posted a 15-15 record in his three years as the Vikings' coach, which included a 7-3 mark in 1985 that tied the team for the Coastal Conference Championship with West Craven.

In addition, the 1985 team was the first Conley team to advance to the state-3-A football playoffs. In 1986, the Vikings slumped to 2-8 in a rebuilding year.

Bunn came to Conley from Southwest Edgecombe High School, where he served as offensive coordinator on teams that won three Eastern Carolina Conference Championships and one Division II Eastern 3-A title.

In his first year as coach of the Vikings, Conley's football team posted the first winning record in the history of the school with a 6-4 record.

In addition to coaching football, Bunn guided the 1985 men's track team to a 13-6 record, with conference championships in five events. Bunn was selected as the 1985 Coastal Football coach of the year and the 1985 Daily Reflector Area Coach of the Year.

Tired Tigers Top The Terps

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson has been battling fatigue and the flu this week, a combination that Coach Cliff Ellis said hampered his 12th-ranked Tigers on Saturday against Maryland.

"On the whole, this was one of our weaker performances," Ellis said after the Tigers beat Maryland 72-64 in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game. "There were several things that contributed to that. We've had this flu bug, plus this was our ninth game in 20 days."

"But give Maryland credit, too," Ellis said. "They made it a 25-minute game by spreading it out and milking the clock. And they did an excellent job shutting down our inside game. It was a hard-fought win for us."

Maryland Coach Bob Wade, still seeking his first conference victory, said the Terrapins' lack of depth hurt down the stretch.

Three Point Landing

game played in Durham, N.C. The 14th-ranked Blue Devils defeated the Demon Deacons, 69-49. (AP Laserphoto)

"It's difficult for anyone, especially the youngsters, to play 40 minutes. We are working on developing our depth," he said.

"But Clemson has a very good basketball team, and they are worthy of their ranking. They have players who compliment each other, and they're tough inside as well as outside."

Guards Michael Tait and Michael Brown had 16 points each to spark Clemson, 16-0. The Tigers' 3-0 mark in the ACC matched their best start ever in the league. Clemson also opened the 1979-80 season with three straight league triumphs.

Center Horace Grant had 11 points for Clemson and guard Grayson Marshall added 10.

Maryland cut Clemson's lead to 40-38, on Ivan Powell's jump shot with 15:05 remaining, but the Tigers then outscored Maryland 12-3 over the next 6:13 to take a 52-41 lead.

Clemson's largest lead of the game came on a dunk by Grant with 2:49 to go to make it 67-50. The Terrapins never got closer than eight the rest of the game.

Maryland, 3-6 and 0-5, was led by forward Steve Hood's 20 points. Center Derrick Lewis and forward Dave Dickerson both contributed 15 points.

The Tigers led by as many as 13 points in the first half, thanks in part to four three-pointers in the first eight minutes. But Maryland, led by Hood, rallied to cut its deficit to 32-28 at the half.

Clemson, which entered the game as the nation's best field-goal percentage team, could not get its inside game in gear in the first half. The Terrapins, meanwhile, were content to stall as much as the 45-second clock allowed.

Stars And Stripes 1 Win From Finals

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — It was a bad day for skipper Chris Dickson and the New Zealand in the America's Cup.

Stars & Stripes beat the Kiwi yacht by a massive three minutes and 38 seconds Saturday to move to within one victory of ending the challenger series and advancing to the America's Cup final.

Not only did it suffer the worst beating of its 42 races and fall behind 3-1 in the best-of-seven series, but New Zealand also suffered crippling equipment damage in the wild wind and waves that the heavier Stars & Stripes survived.

Still, Dickson found a bright side. "At least we made it back to the dock," he said. "There were a few times today when we were actually wondering if we'd get that far."

New Zealand used its last lay day Sunday to repair its damaged arials and replace its ripped mainsail.

So, Dennis Conner and his American crew will have to wait at least one more day before moving on to the final.

The defender finals also have been one-sided. Kookaburra III whipped Australia IV by 2:06 to grab a 3-0 lead in their best-of-nine series. Australia IV also took Sunday off.

The best-of-seven final, matching the winning challenger with an Australian defender, begins Jan. 31.

Conner, the only American skipper to lose the Cup, is on track to become the only American skipper to regain it.

The man who lost yachting's top prize in 1983 won the start by two seconds in a hefty 22-knot wind, the kind his sturdy boat thrives in. By the time the race ended, the wind had reached 26 knots and shredded New Zealand's chances.

The fiberglass boat's problems began on the first downwind run, the second leg of the race, when it had trouble with a sail zipper. Efforts to fix it forced the crew to jibe quickly around the bottom mark. As the sail shifted from one side of the boat to the other, arials were torn off the back, knocking out electronic instruments. The mast also was damaged.

New Zealand entered the final leg trailing by 1:47, then another zipper problem led to a hole in the mainsail, which Dickson said resulted in "the mainsail blowing apart about 10 seconds after the race." He said New Zealand has an identical mainsail it can use.

"We had what we have quietly termed a disaster day where everything broke and everything went wrong," Dickson said. "We're just more than happy that it all happened on the same day."

For Conner, there was no repeat of the equipment problems on the second leg of Friday's third race when his spinnaker collapsed and New Zealand passed him en route to a 38-second triumph.

As Stars & Stripes had done in each of her other two victories, she won all four of the windward legs. Her average margin on those beats Saturday was a huge 52 seconds.

"The more wind increases the size and frequency of the waves and slows you down," Conner said. "At a certain time the sea condition would start hampering the performance of the boat."

Still, Conner led all the way. He started from the left side of the line on starboard tack. New Zealand was on port tack at the other end. His advantage was 31 seconds at the first mark and 28 seconds after the second leg, a downwind run in which the trailing boat can block his wind.

But on the next leg, sailing into the wind, New Zealand's equipment problems took their toll and Conner's boat picked up 42 seconds to lead by 1:10 going to the first reach.

With such a substantial lead, Stars & Stripes could dictate strategy and avoid a tacking duel with its more agile opponent.

In the defender race, the Alan Bond syndicate's grasp on the Cup slipped further. His group's Australia II won the trophy from Conner and Liberty in 1983.

But it was all Kookaburra III on Saturday.

The boat won the start by four seconds and, with Iain Murray at the helm, took all but the two reaching legs. It killed any of Australia IV's comeback hopes by adding 1:13 to its lead on the last three legs.

"During our lay day we will look to improve Australia IV," Bond's syndicate said in a statement.

Murray said the "victory over Australia IV showed that our defender selection trial program is right on target."

Final Round Holds Good, Bad

LA QUINTA, Calif. (AP) — Mark Calcavecchia could have been talking about Tip O'Neill's golf game when he made this description of PGA West, that new and controversial course that will serve as the site of Sunday's final round of the Bob Hope Classic:

"There's both good and bad," mused Calcavecchia, whose late charge — and even later trouble — left him one shot behind West Germany's Bernhard Langer going into the final round of this five-day, 90-hole tournament.

"It's such a hard golf course that the leaders might all shoot 75 or 76 or more. I could shoot 75 tomorrow and win. That's the good," said Calcavecchia.

"I don't like the golf course very much," Calcavecchia said.

He was not alone. "It is not my favorite golf course," said Langer, who retained sole control of the lead with what he called "a boring" 2-under-par 70 — 16 pars sandwiched between birdies on the first and 18th holes at Bermuda Dunes.

That got him through one round on each of the four courses in 272, 16 under par.

Calcavecchia, the last man off the tee, chipped in for a birdie on the 17th at Bermuda Dunes to tie for the top spot, then hit into the water and bogeyed the 18th.

That finished off a 66 that left him at 273.

On-rushing Corey Pavin, who has played his last two rounds in 131, and Jeff Sluman were another shot back at 274 in the chase for a $162,000 first prize. Pavin made up more ground with a 66 in the sunny, chilly, weather at Indian Wells. Sluman had a 67 at Tamarisk.

It was another two strokes back to David Edwards and Willie Wood at 276. Edwards, who opened the tournament with a 61, had a 69 at Tamarisk and Wood compiled a 66 at Bermuda Dunes.

Second-round leader Andy Bean had a 72 at Bermuda Dunes and was at 278. U.S. Open champ Ray Floyd and PGA title-holder Bob Tway each struggled to a 74 at PGA West. Tway, who had an 8 on the fifth hole, finished 72 holes at 280 and Floyd had a 279 total.

Arnold Palmer, a five-time winner of this title, had a 77 at PGA West and failed to qualify for the final round at 291.

Langer, whose last American victory came in 1985, had a 3-shot lead going into the day's play but could not retain that margin.

"I'm a little disappointed with the way I played. Not with the score. I scored about as well as I could. But I'm disappointed with the way I drove the ball. I didn't play quite as well as I had the last couple of days," Langer said.

He was less than enthusiastic about playing what he called "not my favorite course" on the final round.

"If I can stay under par, I'll be very difficult to overtake. But staying under par is very difficult, too," he said of the tough PGA West course.

ECU Swim Teams Sweep Seahawks

The East Carolina men's and women's swimming teams swept UNC-Wilmington, with the men taking a 125-91 win and the women winning by a score of 99-75.

For the men, Ronald Fleming had three first place finishes and David Killeen had two first half finishes. Scotia Miller and Caycee Poust had two wins each for the women.

"We swam very well and are exactly where we want to be going into the CAA's," said ECU coach Rick Kobe. The CAA championships are to be held Feb. 11-14 at Minges Aquatic Center.

The men are 7-1 and the women are 9-1. Both teams return to action Jan. 21 at North Carolina.

Little-Known Okoye Aids South Past North, 42-38

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Christian Okoye, a Little All-American from tiny Azusa Pacific, set a Senior Bowl scoring record with four touchdowns and enhanced his position among NFL scouts Saturday as the South edged the North 42-38.

"Even I got excited," South Coach Don Shula of the Miami Dolphins said of the highest scoring contest in Senior Bowl history.

"Coming from the NAIA to the Senior Bowl, I had a lot to learn," Okoye said. "I thought I did what I had to do to impress the scouts."

Okoye's first three scores came on 1-yard runs and he later put the game out of reach with a 6-yard touchdown with 1:06 left in the game the offset a North touchdown in the closing seconds.

Okoye, who didn't like football when he first saw a game, said he was excited about breaking the Senior Bowl scoring record.

"I always try to do my best," he said.

Okoye finished with 47 yards on 13 carries.

Okoye's 1-yard run with 13:11 left in the game, played under cloudy skies and in intermittent light showers.

The South, leading 35-31, got Okoye's icing touchdown after the North failed to convert on two straight attempts to get one yard at its own 35, turning the ball over on downs.

Big First Half Helps Cavs Blow By Villanova

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. (AP) — Andrew Kennedy scored 15 of his game-high 23 points in the first half as Virginia built a 13-point intermission lead en route to an 88-59 win over Villanova in college basketball Saturday.

Virginia converted 13 consecutive free throws in the latter stages of the nationally televised game and moved to 10-4.

It was the third straight defeat and the worst of the season for the Wildcats. Villanova, which had won its previous five games on the road this season, slipped to 10-6.

Virginia took the lead for good at 5:4 when Kennedy sank a layup and free throw just 2:35 into the contest.

The Cavaliers held a 34-21 lead after the first half, in which Villanova made just nine of 24 field-goal attempts, lost the rebounding battle 18-10 and had eight turnovers while forcing five Virginia miscues.

Villanova used a trapping defense to keep Virginia from pulling away early in the second half, and Harold Jensen's layup and free throw cut the Cavaliers' lead to 60-47 with 7:39 to play.

committed nine of those while the Seahawks had 10.

"We just didn't shoot well. Blue (Edwards) was able to get the ball inside early, but the ball just wouldn't fall for him. We got good shots but they wouldn't go."

The Pirates finished the game with a 40.9 percentage, but made only 37.0 percent in the first half — when Wilmington was able to build much of its lead. The Seahawks shot 52.9 percent, including 63.6 percent in the second half.

Each time the Pirates seemed to be ready to make a move, the Seahawks would come up with the basket to break momentum.

Ironically, Rowsom scored the first — and the last — baskets of the game. The first came on a layup 15 seconds into play and the last came on the slam back of a missed shot coming off the rim milliseconds before the horn.

The Pirates tied it at 2-2 and again at 4-4 before Rowsom hit a six-foot turnaround for a 6-4 lead. Marchell Henry had the opportunity to tie it up once more at the stripe, but missed the second of two, leaving it at 6-5. Rowsom then hit a 15-footer for an 8-5 lead with 15:30 to go.

One last time, the Pirates tied it up as Keith Sledge hit a three-pointer to knot it at 8-8, but Kevin Miles' short jumper put the Seahawks back up, 10-8 and the Pirates never caught up again.

Greg Bender and Rowsom both hit to open the lead to six, 14-8, and after Edwards was charged with a technical for hanging on the rim, Mark Gary made the free throw then hit a three-pointer to open up a 10-point lead, 20-10.

Leon Bass keyed a rally by the Pirates that cut it back to five, 23-18, but Rowsom and Sandy Anderson both hit to up it to nine again, 27-18. The two swapped baskets the rest of the half, leaving UNC up, 31-24, at the horn.

In the early going of the second half, the Seahawks built their lead up to as much as 15 points, 48-33 with 11:39 remaining. East Carolina struggled back within nine, 52-43, and again at 57-48, but could never really make a run at the Seahawks.

One last time, it fell to nine, 67-58, but the Seahawks made 11 of 13 free throws down the stretch to build the lead back to the final 15-point spread.

In the second half, Pitt got off to a slow start, allowing Mt. Olive to come back and tie the score at 63-63 with 16:10 remaining in the game. Tony Clemons put Pitt back up, however, 67-65, with 14:11 to go, and the Paladins never trailed again.

Sooners Upend Top-Ranked Rebels

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Darryl Kennedy's basket with 12 seconds remaining carried No. 16 Oklahoma to an 89-88 victory over top-ranked and previously unbeaten Nevada-Las Vegas in college basketball Saturday afternoon.

UNLV forward Armon Gilliam, who finished with 23 points, tried to win it with a jumper from the foul line, but the shot bounced away and a tip-in by Jarvis Basnight at the buzzer also missed as the Runnin' Rebels dropped to 15-1.

Kennedy, who had 16 points, made his shot from inside 30 seconds after Gilliam had given UNLV an 88-87 lead with an inside shot of his own.

The Sooners, 12-3, led by as many as 10 points in the first half but the Runnin' Rebels pulled into a 48-48 tie at halftime after a disputed jump shot by Gary Graham. UNLV claimed Graham's shot at the buzzer should have been a three-pointer, but after checking the television replay, all three officials said it had come inside the 19-foot, 9-inch line.

UNLV, behind a pair of three-pointers by Freddie Banks, took a 58-52 lead with 17:05 left in the game. But the Sooners came back behind Kennedy and David Johnson to outscore the Rebels 17-7 in a five-minute span to take a 69-65 lead with 11:47 left.

The Rebels, with Gilliam and Graham doing most of the scoring, twice opened four-point leads, the latter after a Gilliam turnaround with 3:40 to play. But Oklahoma tied it 85-85 on a follow shot by Johnson, who had 22 points.

Gilliam answered with a free throw for an 86-85 UNLV advantage with 2:11 to play, but Oklahoma regained the lead again when Harvey Grant, who led the Sooners with 23 points and 16 rebounds, made two free throws with 1:18 left.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Forward Ken Norman scored 27 points and had 12 rebounds Saturday to lead eighth-ranked Illinois to an 80-58 victory over Minnesota in Big Ten Conference play.

Norman strung together 16 of his total in the opening period and, after helping fight off a brief Minnesota rally early in the second half, helped the Illini win going away.

Doug Altenberger added 13 points and Lowell Hamilton 11 as Illinois improved to 13-3 overall and 5-1 in the Big Ten.

Minnesota, which got 16 points from Terrence Woods and 10 from Willie Burton, slipped to 9-6 and 2-3 in the league.

Despite Norman's quick start, Illinois managed just a 23-20 lead at the seven-minute mark. But a 12-4 scoring run pushed that margin to 35-24 by halftime.

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Seton Hall upset No. 9 Georgetown for the second time in two weeks Saturday as Mark Bryant hit two free throws with six seconds remaining for a 66-65 Big East Conference triumph.

Seton Hall, a 74-53 winner over Georgetown at Landover, Md. Jan. 3, has handed the Hoyas, 12-2, their only losses of the season. The Hoyas are 3-2 in conference play.

The Pirates, 11-4 and 2-4, grabbed a 64-61 lead with 2:02 remaining on James Major's 19-foot goal. But Mark Tillman scored a goal and Bobby Winston stole the ball from John Morton and threw it downcourt for a Reggie Williams' jam, putting the Hoyas ahead 65-64 with 24 seconds to go.

Williams then fouled Bryant, who made good on the one-and-one situation. Bryant, a 6-foot-9 senior, finished as the Pirates' top scorer with 22 points.

Georgetown had one last shot, but Tillman's jumper missed.

Williams, a 6-7 senior, had only seven points in the first meeting between the two teams, but came through with 28 points Saturday, including 16 in the second half.

Williams' basket gave Georgetown a 30-29 lead at halftime and he made two straight goals, including a three-pointer, to cap a 7-0 run and give the Hoyas a 43-37 lead with 13:05 left.

Seton Hall, which had dropped three straight Big East games since downing Georgetown, came back to tie it at 45. The score was tied five more times, the last at 61 before sophomore Ramon Ramos connected on three of four free throws and Major hit his goal.

(13)St. John's.....69
Connecticut.....54

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Shelton Jones scored 18 points as 13th-ranked St. John's overpowered Connecticut 69-54 Saturday in a Big East Conference basketball game.

It was the third straight victory for St. John's, which has beaten Connecticut in their last 13 meetings dating back five years.

The Redmen improved their record to 12-2 overall and 3-2 in the Big East, while the Huskies fell to 6-8 overall and 1-4 in the conference with their second straight loss.

Mark Jackson scored 15 points and had four assists and Terry Bross added 13 points and seven rebounds for the Redmen.

Connecticut was led by Phil Gamble, who scored 16 points, and Steve Pikiell, who added 13. Gerry Besselink had a game-high 12 rebounds.

Cliff Robinson, the Huskies' leading scorer, was held to five points before fouling out.

St. John's outrebounded Connecticut 44-30 and the Huskies hit on only 40 percent of their shots.

In the opening half, St. John's outrebounded Connecticut 25-14, including 15 on the offensive boards, while Connecticut made just 27 percent of its field goal attempts.

Mississippi.....62

OXFORD, Miss. (AP) — Jim Farmer made two free throws with 8:29 remaining to put 15th-ranked Alabama ahead to stay in a 71-62 victory over Mississippi in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday.

Farmer led all scorers with 24 points as the Crimson Tide, 13-2 overall, won its sixth SEC game without a loss. Mississippi, which led 33-32 at halftime, fell to 8-6 overall and 1-6 in the SEC.

The Rebels jumped to a 7-4 lead, but Alabama built a seven-point advantage behind Farmer's shooting. Guard Rod Barnes hit two straight three-point plays to spark Ole Miss, which grabbed the halftime lead on a short jumper by Eric Smith.

It was a seesaw game until Farmer hit the free throws in the second half and Alabama went on to build a 10-point lead. The Rebels pulled to within six points at 59-53, but Alabama hit 10 free throws in the final three minutes to seal the victory.

Derrick McKey and Terry Conner chipped in with 15 points each for Alabama, while Michael Ansley added 11.

Barnes led Mississippi with 19 points, followed by Charles Prater with 11 and Joe Ayers with 10.

(19)Navy.....6
American U.....60

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — David Robinson scored 31 points to power 19th-ranked Navy to a 96-60 victory over American University in a Colonial Athletic Association game Saturday.

The 7-foot-1 Robinson, the CAA's leading scorer with a 27.3 average, also had a game-high 12 rebounds, one short of the Navy career record of 1,102 set by Vernon Butler in the 1982-86 seasons.

Frank Ross of American, the second-leading scorer in the CAA with a 24.9 average, was held to 12 points. The 6-2 senior guard scored just four of his points in the first half after missing his first six field-goal attempts.

"We used a triangle defense on him and it's the best we've done against him in three years," Navy Coach Pete Herrmann said.

Cliff Rees of Navy scored 14 of his 21 points in the first half as the Midshipmen built a 42-27 halftime lead.

Doug Wojcik added 11 points and Carl Liebert contributed 10 to the Navy attack.

"The team has always spread the wealth, they don't always go to Dave (Robinson)," Herrmann said about the Navy starters' scoring production.

Ahead 60-43, Navy outscored American 36-17 in the game's final 10 minutes. Robinson, who left with 4:30 left to play, accounted for 10 of the 36, while four reserves shared the balance.

Andy Bonsalle, a 6-7 senior forward, had highs of 15 points and eight rebounds for American.

Navy, which has beaten American eight straight times, leads the eight-team CAA with a 5-1 record and is 11-3 overall. American is 2-3 in the conference and 6-6 overall.

Tito Horford and Dennis Burns each had 13 points for Miami, 8-8.

The Hurricanes scored the first three points of the second half to take a 27-26 lead, but the Jayhawks then outscored the Hurricanes 10-2 for a 38-29 lead with about 13 minutes left. Manning and Cedric Hunter each had four points in the streak.

After Dennis Burns made two free throws for Miami, Kansas scored 12 straight points to go ahead 50-31. Hunter stole the ball three times during that run.

Kansas led 54-33 with about nine minutes left after Mark Pellock hit a jump shot.

The Hurricanes stayed close in the first half by sagging on Manning and throwing the Jayhawks off-balance by trapping the guards at the half-court line.

Burns scored eight points in a stretch midway through the first half, the last two on a dunk after he stole the ball to give Miami its biggest lead at 20-14 with about 5 1/2 minutes left.

Criticism Is More Than Elway's Wife Expected

DENVER (AP) — When quarterback John Elway signed a $5 million contract with the Denver Broncos in 1983, his Stanford sweetheart and bride-to-be knew he would be a public figure but didn't expect the public criticism.

"When we got married I knew he'd be a public figure but I had no idea," Janet Elway said.

The early, seasoning years for the Elways were rugged both on and off the field.

"When I would go into a department store or a grocery store and sign a check, they would say, well, not good things about John," she said in an interview with the Rocky Mountain News.

The situation became intolerable for Janet during the 1985 season just after she gave birth to their first child.

"A guy was sitting behind me at Mile High Stadium, right after I had Jessica and John had five interceptions against Kansas City. After the fourth, the guy was quiet, but after the fifth, he stood up and yelled, 'You can get your bleeping wife pregnant but you can't do anything else!' I turned around and slapped him. It was really embarrassing because the guy didn't know it was me. He said, 'Gee, out of all these people I have to be sitting by his wife.' He apologized and everything."

Mrs. Elway is unlikely to have resort to such action for a while, not since John led the Broncos to the American Football Conference championship a week ago and a trip to Super Bowl XXI.

But now there are other drawbacks.

"The feeling of sharing John is difficult. After the AFC game I had maybe one second with him, then the cameras came. I understand it, but there are times when I just want him to myself," she said.

In an earlier interview, she recalled how they met.

"I was on the (Stanford) swimming team and John came to watch our meet. A neighbor introduced us. I was shocked because I'd heard his name before at a football game, when the crowd was chanting 'El-way, El-way.' I asked someone what an Elway was," she said.

And since 1983, she said, "he's learned how to handle things. He's becoming more mature. But it's scary to think what will happen. Sometimes I wish he was just a regular guy."

Rose Tops Fike; Alone In First

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Terry Warren and Earrol Wooten each scored 16 points, half of that total at the foul line, as Rose High School's Rampants broke away from Wilson Fike in the final period and gained a 52-41 Big East basketball victory.

Rose's girls built up a 20-point first half lead, then survived a frenzied rally in the second half to take a 44-32 win their game.

The two victories by the Rose teams left them in sole possession of first place in the Big East after five league contests. Fike had been tied with Rose in both the boys' and girls' races, but slips to 4-1 in the conference.

Rose's boys are now 11-2 overall — and one would have to go back over 20 years to find a start that good — if it, indeed, ever happened. The Rampette girls, 9-2, are also off to their best start ever.

The key to the win for Rose was a combination of three things: defense, free throw shooting and rebounding. The Rampants refused to let Fike, billed as the pre-season favorite in the conference, pull away and constantly harassed them. Only five Golden Demons managed to put points on the board and only two of them scored more than five points.

"I said before the game that if we could hold them to 50 points, we could beat them," Rampant coach Jim Brewington said. "They've been scoring 70 or 80 points a game, and we knew that we had to hold them well below that."

At the free throw line, the difference was devastating. The Rampants canned 20 of 23 shots while Fike made good on only one of eight shots — a 19-point swing.

On the boards, Rose outrebounded the Demons, 33-19, and that helped overcome a minus six deficit in turnovers, 24-18.

Both teams suffered in their shooting, too. Rose connected on 16 of 36 for 44.4 while Fike hit on 20 of 46, a slightly cooler 43.5 percent.

"I keep underestimating these kids," Brewington said. "They really played their hearts out in this one."

"We changed defenses several times in the game and finally went back to the (1-3-1). I thought we did a good job on (Curtis) Canady tonight. We had to keep him from killing us and we did. I thought Kevin Cobb did a good job off the bench on him."

Brewington expressed surprise that the Rampants outrebounded the Demons. "We've got some leapers, but I didn't think we could take them on the boards like that. One good thing about our kids, though, is that we don't have to look to any one player to win. Everybody contributes."

Fike led much of the way, moving out to as much as a five-point lead before Rose finally took the lead for good.

Rose got the initial basket but a quick basket by Canady and another by Keith Hines gave Fike the lead. Rose tied it back up at 4-4 and 6-6 before moving back out to an 8-6 lead on two free throws by Warren.

Canady twice connected from the top of the key, however, to put Fike back up, 10-8. Then, after Rose tied it once more, two baskets by Kevin Hines put Fike back up and the Demons held a 14-11 lead at the horn.

Canady drove in for a layup early in the second period to up the lead to five, 16-11, but Rose struggled back to within one again and the two swapped points the rest of the quarter, which ended with Fike up, 24-23.

The Golden Demons padded the lead back to five by opening the third period with two baskets, one each by Kevin Hines and Canady for a 28-23 lead.

But after the score reached 32-27, Fike went cold, missing five straight shots and scoring only once more in the final 4:40 of the period.

Rose meanwhile, came to life before Wooten. He scored from underneath, then Warren scored off a steal to pull back within one. Wooten hit two free throws with 2:24 showing to give Rose the lead, and the Rampants never trailed again.

Wooten hit from the corner, then Warren added two free throws with 22 seconds left to make it 37-32 before Clarence Fuller hit for Fike at the horn.

Wooten and Cobb both made a pair of free throws to open the final period, spreading the margin to 41-34. The two teams then again swapped points over the next few minutes until Wooten added two more at the stripe to make it 48-39 with 53 seconds to go.

Hines hit one last basket for Fike but two free throws by Warren and a basket off the fast break by Melvin Jenkins ran it to the final 52-41 score.

Canady led the Fike effort with 19 points while Kevin Hines added 12.

Fike drops to 10-3 overall with the loss.

In the second period, Rose upped the lead to 19-2 before Fike finally got a field goal after 11 minutes and 59 seconds without one. Rose, however, continued to pull away, and built up a 28-8 lead as Kim Bridges hit at the horn.

Rose Coach Bill Kuykendall, however, said he couldn't believe that Fike would take a half like that lying down — and he was right.

The Golden Demons stormed back in the third period, led by a balanced attack and trimmed the lead to as little as eight points, 30-22, before the reeling Rampettes, got back on their feet and limped to a 34-25 lead as the final quarter opened.

In that, Fike continued to rally, cutting the lead to six at 36-30, and again at 38-32. The Lady Demons had several opportunities to cut into that as Rose missed on three straight trips to the foul line before Andrea Rodgers hit from underneath to make it 40-32.

Rose added two free throws by Bridges and a jumper by Lisa Leisten to wrap it up after that.

Dupree finished with 17 points to lead Rose, while no one scored in double figures for Fike.

Fike falls to 4-1 in the league and 7-6 overall.

The Rampants will return to action on Monday, traveling to Wilson Hunt. They return home on Friday to complete the first round of play in the league against Elizabeth City North-eastern.

Panthers Power Past Rams, 60-38

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

BETHEL — North Pitt got its first win of 1987, using a powerful inside game led by Ashley Sheppard and William Morning to defeat Greene Central, 60-38, in high school basketball action Friday night.

In the girl's game, the Pant-Hers won a four-overtime thriller over the Lady Rams, 47-44.

Sheppard and Morning scored 12 points apiece to lead the Panthers over the Rams for their first Eastern Plains Conference win of the year. The win also broke a four-game losing streak dating back to Dec. 19, when the Panthers beat Williamston, 60-51.

"It's nice to win one in the conference," said North Pitt coach Cobb by Deans. "It's definitely our best second half. We have played better (individual) quarters but (this is) probably our most consistent game."

The Panthers took control of the game in the third quarter, outscoring the Rams 21-10. North Pitt led 25-21 at the half but quickly stretched that to 33-23 with 5:34 to go in the third period.

"You have to come to play every night," said Greene Central Coach Lewis Godwin. "They wanted the game more than we did. We got complacent. We had won five in a row. (Tonight) we got our tails kicked on the boards."

Calvin Hunter opened the third period with a jumper that pushed the lead to 27-21. Morning followed with a layup to counter a jumper by Greene Central's Anthony Jones. That left the score at 29-23.

Sheppard then followed a miss by Paul Blow for a 31-23 advantage and then connected on a jumper from the side for a 33-23 lead.

With 1:45 left in the third frame, the Rams' Jake Barrow connected from the outside to draw Greene Central within 39-30 and it looked like the Rams were beginning to rally.

It was short-lived as Hunter drove the lane for a bucket and William Morning dunked on a pass from Reggie Daniels to make it 43-30. Daniels and Woodrow Wallace traded free throws to bring the count to 44-31 before Billy Hardison nailed to free throws in the waning seconds of the period for a 46-31 bulge.

"We did a good job on the boards," Deans said. "This is the time that we had to do it. I think Ashley, William, Reggie and Maurice did a super job both offensively and defensively on the boards."

"When we can get on the boards and get second shots, that sort of carries over. If you can get aggressive on the boards it can help you offensively and defensively."

"I'm not taking anything away from North Pitt, but we have played teams that are better and beat them. We just got our tails kicked. They are a good team," Godwin said.

Daniels, Blow and Hunter all added eight points apiece for the Panthers, 48 and 1-3 in the EPC. Greene Central, 6-8 overall and 2-2 in the EPC, was led by Melvin Croom's 10 points.

"What's so hard to take was we were playing better than in years past and not winning," Deans said of the losing streak. "I think the kids showed a lot of class. I'm real proud that the guys kept trying. The easiest thing to do would be to give up a little intensity."

Clemmie Harris scored on a follow shot at the outset of the fourth overtime period to put North Pitt up 45-43 and Amy Heath scored with 31 seconds remaining to put the game away, 47-44.

It was the game that didn't want to end.

North Pitt rallied from an eight-point final period deficit to lead by six, 35-29, with just over two and half minutes left only to see Greene Central rally to force overtime.

The Lady Rams outscored the Pant-Hers six to nothing over the final 2:44.

With four seconds remaining, Mary Joyner hit the front end of a one-and-one to tie the game at 35-35 and send into overtime.

In the first extra period, Harris put North Pitt ahead early, 37-35, but Joy Albritton scored inside in the final minute to knot the score at 37-37.

In the second extra quarter, Joyner opened up the scoring to put the Lady Rams up, 39-37. North Pitt's Keisha Pilgreen followed with a jumper to bring it to 39-39. Pilgreen then hit again to make it 41-39 but Chanel Hooker scored with 49 seconds to go and neither team was able to score in the remaining seconds.

In the third overtime, Hooker scored for Greene Central and Heath for North Pitt in the opening minute but this period too ended in a dead heat and the teams headed for a fourth extra quarter knotted at 43-43.

In the final extra frame, the Lady Rams had a chance to tie it with 1:05 to go but could muster only one point out of two one-and-one situations. Harris and Heath's baskets were all the Pant-Hers needed.

North Pitt improved to 7-6 and 1-3. Greene Central falls to 3-11 and 1-3.

"We have not been a very intense team and we have not been spirited at practice," said North Pitt Coach Randy Avery. "I guess we just woke up."

"I told them that if we kept playing hard we would get some breaks and we did. They played four good overtimes and four poor quarters."

"Greene Central did a real good job of denying the passing lanes and keeping the pressure on. I thought Tammy Beacham did a real good job (against that pressure)," Avery said.

Greene Central looked to be in charge most of the game. The Lady Rams led 16-11 at halftime and 27-21 heading into the final quarter, but were outscored 14-8 in that final period.

In the girl's game, Sandy Johnston scored 23 points and Amber Tripp added 15 as the Greenville Christian girls defeated Wake, 55-38.

Williamston clawed its way out to a 21-13 lead in the first period of the boys' game, but was unable to hang onto it. The Rams came roaring back with 30 points in the second quarter while holding Williamston to just 13. That pushed Northampton in to a 43-34 halftime advantage.

Williamston again rallied in the third frame, outscoring the Rams, 20-6, to charge back ahead, 54-49. But Northampton came back with a 23-13 advantage in the final stanza to chalk up the win.

Derrick Magette added 11 points for the Rams, while Guy Spruill led the Tigers with 21. Reggie Randolph added 16 while Felix Purvis and Robert James each had 11.

Braxton Leads Trinity To Win

Trinity Christian School got 29 points and 14 rebounds from Joey Braxton and overcame some sluggish play to take a 62-54 basketball victory over Terra Ceia Friday night.

Trinity's girls also came away with a win in the game, downing the Lady Knights, 37-33.

Trinity, playing for the first time since last Saturday's victory in the Nashville College Invitational Tournament in Tennessee, had its worst defensive game of the season, according to coach Don Southerland. "We were in exams all this week and had only one practice, and it really showed on us," he said. "We were awfully sluggish throughout the whole game."

Trinity inched out to a 15-13 lead after one period of play and then outthrew the Knights, 14-8, in the second. That allowed the Tigers to forge a 29-21 lead at the half.

In the third period, Trinity edged its lead out to 42-31. Then in the final period, Trinity held on as Terra Ceia outthrew the Tigers, 23-20, only to fall short.

Kreston Welch added 10 points to Braxton's total for the Tigers. Terra Ceia was led by Todd Tinker with 23 and Ted O'Harrow with 19.

In the girls' contest, Trinity fell behind early and trailed 8-5 after one quarter. The Lady Tigers outthrew Terra Ceia, 10-9, in the second quarter and trailed by 17-15 at the half.

The Lady Tigers then took control in the third period, 16-8, powering out to a 31-25 lead. Terra Ceia again outthrew them, 8-6, in the final frame, but didn't catch up. Trinity played the final five minutes with two starters. Rhonda Harris and Becky Stocks on the bench after fouling out.

Jennifer Alexander led Trinity with 15 points while Natalie Godwin pulled away a team high eight rebounds. Laura Bortgie led Terra Ceia with 12 points.

Trinity returns to action on Tuesday, traveling to Hilltop.

Jamesville Slips By Chocowinity, 55-53

CHOCOWINITY — Chocowinity missed two shots in the final seconds of the game, allowing visiting Jamesville to come away with a 55-53 Tobacco Belt Conference basketball victory Friday night. Chocowinity's girls, however, remained unbeaten in league play with a 58-29 romp. The win by the Bullets was the second over the Indians this winter as Jamesville evened its conference record at 5-5. The Bullets are 5-7 overall. Chocowinity drops to 6-6 overall and 4-6 in league play.

Chocowinity held a slim 9-7 lead after one period and was able to build on that in the second period, 18-16. That left the Indians up, 27-23, at intermission.

But in the third period, Jamesville matched points with the Tribe and trailed by four, 45-41, going into the final quarter. The Bullets then outthit the Indians, 14-8, in the last period to pull out the win. Chocowinity closed back to within two and got the ball back with 13 seconds to go, but missed on two shots that could have tied it up. Charles Parker led Jamesville with 20 points while Eric Spruill had 14. Deryl Moore had 16, Dale Garrett had 14 and Curtis Myers had 12 for Chocowinity.

In the girls' game, Chocowinity wasted little time in moving for the lead, taking a 12-2 lead after the first eight minutes. That advantage was boosted to 22-8 by halftime.

Chocowinity ran its lead out to 40-17 in the third period and cruised in with an 18-12 advantage in the final quarter.

Paula Peele poured in 23 points to lead the Lady Tribe while Chrylene Myers added 12, China Grice had 11 and Drusilla Crawford hit 10. Val Clark led Jamesville with 12 while Kim Goldberg added 10.

The Lady Indians are now 10-0 in the league and 11-1 overall.

Foster Bests Old Foe Nehemiah

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Renaldo Nehemiah made a less than auspicious return to track, but the world record-holding hurdler says he'll bounce back quickly.

"I used this race as a jumping-off point back into track and field," Nehemiah said after finishing third in his first race in almost five years.

Greg Foster, Nehemiah's old rival, won the race, the 60-meter hurdles, in a world indoor best time of 7.37 seconds at Friday night's Sunkist meet.

Tonie Campbell was second in 7.54, and Nehemiah finished in 7.59.

Nehemiah, who turned away from track to play football for four seasons with the San Francisco 49ers of the NFL, said of his first American race in almost four years: "Every hurdle was a new experience. I couldn't expect to all come back in one meet. I have to piece it together week by week, meet by meet."

"By the third or fourth meet, it should be there, and everyone will know it."

Foster, who had beaten Nehemiah only once in 12 previous meetings in the hurdles indoors, sped away from Campbell and Nehemiah in the final 20 meters of the race at the Sports Arena.

The time bettered the old indoor world best of 7.47 set by Canada's Mark McKoy last year.

Roger Kingdom, who upset Foster in the final of the 110-meter hurdles in the 1984 Olympics, was fourth in 7.64.

Nehemiah still holds the 110-meter hurdles record outdoors, 12.93. He also has dominated Foster in past meetings, holding an 18-4 edge over him outdoors and 28-5 in all meetings.

He regained his amateur status from the International Amateur Athletic Federation last summer.

Just after the Sunkist race, Foster was booed when he appeared to shy away as Nehemiah attempted to shake his hand.

"I was still ecstatic about the race," Foster said. "Somebody stuck out a hand, but I had no idea it was Renaldo."

"I apologized to him afterward." Foster added, "It's great to have him (Nehemiah) back in track and field."

"With him back, the hurdles is definitely the glamour event in the sport."

Although Nehemiah acknowledged that Foster apologized to him after they left the track, he said, "He shrugged me off; I didn't appreciate it. I would never do that.

"The tide will turn."

Schlichter Arrested

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A psychiatrist who has been treating former Indianapolis Colts quarterback Art Schlichter for compulsive gambling says it is not unusual for recovering gamblers to suffer relapses.

"It has happened to me with others, so I have to continue to treat them to get the gambling under control," Dr. Robert Custer said.

Schlichter, 26, turned himself in to Indianapolis authorities Friday and was arrested on a charge of unlawful gambling. He was released on his own recognizance and returned to his parents' home in Washington Court House, Ohio.

In 1983, the NFL suspended Schlichter for 13 months for gambling.

Custer said he had no indication that Schlichter was still gambling. "I was convinced that he had stopped — for a while," he said.

Custer said he expected to meet soon with Schlichter.

"We just try to treat them as soon as possible after (the relapse) happens," he said.

Custer is considered a leading authority on compulsive gambling, but he says the disease is still largely a mystery.

"It's difficult even for me to understand," he said.

Custer said professional athletes aren't the only ones susceptible to the disease. Studies have shown that attorneys are the most common victims of compulsive gambling, followed by accountants, bankers, brokers and sports figures.

Schlichter, who most recently worked as a credit insurance salesman, said Friday that he was "doing pretty well."

"This is not going to be fatal for me, but it is embarrassing for my family and myself," he said. "I have to press on and try and get my life back in order."

Schlichter admitted he "was a little bit depressed" after being cut by the Buffalo Bills two weeks into the 1986 pre-season schedule.

North Edgecombe Tops Bear Grass

BEAR GRASS — North Edgecombe shook off pesky Bear Grass in the final quarter Friday night to come away with a 68-48 Tobacco Belt Conference basketball victory.

The North Edgecombe girls also were winners, downing the Lady Bears, 41-35.

The Warriors edged out into the early lead in the game, building up a 20-14 lead in the first quarter of action in the boys' game. But Bear Grass held on and trailed by only one more point at intermission, 30-23.

North Edgecombe was able to stretch the lead over 10 points in the third period with a 20-15 advantage. That gave the Warriors a 50-38 lead. They then outthit the Bears, 18-10, in the final period to pull away for the win.

Anthony Davis led the Warriors with 18 points while Jeff Whitaker added 14 and David Garnett had 10. Jimmy Rodgers led the Bears with 14 while Almer Riddick hit 12.

The loss dropped the Bears to 3-12 overall and 2-8 in league play.

Bear Grass' girls failed to get on the scoreboard in the first quarter of their game, then outscored North Edgecombe the rest of the way. However, the 12-0 hole they had fallen into proved too deep to climb out of. They trailed, 21-12 after two quarters, and 31-22 after three. Bear Grass again outthit the Lady Warriors, 13-10, in the last period, but couldn't rally enough.

Shonika Hill led North Edgecombe with 14 points while Christy Peele led the Bears with 12 and Janet Rodgers added 11.

The Lady Bears fall to 2-11, 2-8. Bear Grass plays host to Chocowinity on Monday.

The loss dropped Farmville to 10-3 overall and to 3-1 in Eastern Plains play.

Farmville's girls held only an 8-6 lead after the first quarter of their game, but then caught fire in the second period. The Lady Jaguars outthit Pamlico, 23-12, to charge out to a 31-18 halftime advantage.

Groh Resigns

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Al Groh of Wake Forest has become the fourth Atlantic Coast Conference football coach to leave the league in the past two months, after he asked for a longer contract than school officials would agree on.

"I feel that after six years the test was over," said Groh, who compiled a 26-40 record with the Demon Deacons. "I felt that six years, that was pretty good time to determine yes or no, this guy's a good coach for the school and he needs to stay here a long time."

"It is common knowledge that for several years, Coach Groh has sought other coaching positions," said athletic director Gene Hooks. "We regret that we were unable to reach an agreement and wish Coach Groh all the best."

Groh, 42, said he had no immediate plans to take another coaching job.

"This is not a decision I like or feel comfortable with," he said in a prepared statement he read at a news conference Friday. "However, extended conversations between our administration and myself have been fruitless toward developing a common ground of agreement on the future direction of Wake Forest and my role in it."

"It is quite disappointing to me that things didn't quite work out," Groh said.

Groh's contract ended at the end of the 1986 season. He and Hooks had been negotiating since October. Groh said he received several proposals but the terms were not acceptable to him. He had asked for a two-year pact.

Safety Course Offered

The Pitt County Wildlife Club is offering a free Firearms and Hunter Safety Course designed to "make hunters more knowledgeable about handling firearms and to help protect hunters and the health and safety of other people," according to Jim Whitehead, an instructor of the course.

The course will be held Saturday at the club, located on N.C. 222 near Falkland. Registration is at 7:30 a.m. and the course lasts from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Participants should bring their lunches and beverages.

Whitehead said anyone over 11 years old can participate in the event. After the course, participants will take a written examination and receive a certificate if they pass.

This certificate, good for a lifetime, makes hunters eligible to hunt in some other states and Canada, where a hunter safety certificate is required before a hunting license can be purchased.

The course will be taught by Whitehead, Fred Farrell, Garland Anderson and Jim Harrison.

According to Whitehead, areas that will be covered by the course include conservation, game laws, firearms safety, marksmanship, small and large game in North Carolina, first aid, wilderness skills and archery safety.

"We're also going to practice shooting a rifle and shotgun. We'll not only be working in the classroom, but we're going to use the skills we've learned," Whitehead commented.

Interested persons should contact Fred Farrell at 752-6110 (days) or 752-1106 (nights), or Whitehead at 758-0612 (nights).

Hearings Scheduled

Thousands of sportsmen are expected to attend the nine public hearings scheduled for February by the N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission on proposed hunting, fishing and trapping regulation changes.

Commission members and staff will conduct a hearing in each of the state's wildlife districts. The commission will vote on March 9 on next year's regulations.

The hearing for this area's wildlife district will be held at 7 p.m. on Feb. 19 in the Craven County Courthouse in New Bern.

Among items to be discussed are:

- Prohibit training of raccoon and opossum dogs at night in Wildlife Districts 7, 8 and 9 from March 1 through Aug. 31 except for sanctioned field trials. The commission says this regulation would reduce the illegal harvest and harassment of raccoons during the breeding season.
- Permit waterfowl hunting on the Goose Creek Game Lands outside posted waterfowl impoundments from Monday through Saturday during the waterfowl season.
- Restrict waterfowl hunting on the Butner, Falls of the Neuse, New Hope and Shearon Harris game lands to one-half hour before sunrise until 1 p.m. on designated hunting days.
- Change the Bertie Game Lands from a six-day-per-week hunting area to a three-day-per-week area.
- Prohibit pen-raised wild turkeys kept under a propagation license from being released or allowed to range free.
- Open Hyde and Surry counties and a portion of Graham County to wild turkey hunting.
- Establish a four-day, either-sex deer season Dec. 2-5 in Washington County west of N.C. 32 and south of U.S. 64.
- Establish a bear season Nov. 9-14 in Hyde County.

Conley Grapplers Pop West Craven

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley's Vikings rolled up a 60-18 wrestling victory over West Craven Friday night in the Coastal Conference.

The Vikings won 10 of the 13 weight classes on the night, five of them by forfeits. The remaining five came on three technical pins (15 or more points ahead) while the other two were true pins. West Craven's wins included two technical pins and a pin.

Conley's David Farris upped his record to 22-0 on the year with a technical pin over Russell Acker.

The Vikes are now 10-3 overall and 3-3 in league action. They travel to West Carteret on Friday.

Rose ..... 41
Fike ..... 26

WILSON — Rose High School defeated Wilson Fike, 41-26, in a Big East wrestling match Friday night, but it may have been a costly victory. Rose's 197-pounder, Adrian Barnhill, suffered a dislocated shoulder in the match and will miss at least three weeks — possibly the remainder of the season.

"It was amazing," Coach Walt McCauley said. "He didn't even realize what had happened and kept right on wrestling, and nearly had his man pinned before the arm went numb and he got rolled over and pinned himself."

Another of the top matches was between defending conference champion Mike Taylor of Rose and Cornelius Ellis of Fike. In an earlier match this year, Ellis had defeated Taylor, but the Rampant came back to win a pin in this one.

The win boosted the Rose record to 6-7 overall and to 4-0 in league action. Rose will play host to Wilson Hunt on Tuesday.

Summary:

- 100 — Marcus Watson (F) won by forfeit.

We have become a nation of collectors. There are, for example, a documented 6.4 million plate collectors in the United States, as well as a plethora of other groups of collectors. For every individual who belongs to a group, there are at least five without an official affiliation.

Where do all those collectors put the objects they are assembling? One place is in curio cabinets, which, according to several authorities, are enjoying unusually brisk sales these days.

"Last year, when our dealers asked us for cabinets that would display their customers' collections, we decided to enter the curio market. The initial response was so great that we've already expanded our program," said Richard J. Udouj, president of Riverside Furniture Corp.

Curios are certainly not a new item of furniture, but, according to Dave Zagaroli, an independent furniture designer from Hickory, N.C., they have been improved upon lately.

"Today, a curio is an extremely flexible display case," says Zagaroli. There are more styles and configurations to choose from. Features include interior lighting which can be controlled by a rheostat; leveling guides; mirrored backs; plate rails and security locks. The new angled cabinets provide as many as five or six sides of glass for in-the-round viewing.

Originally, curios were small cabinets for the storage and display of small "curiosities."

They were typically only about a foot or so wide, a foot deep and 64 inches high. Today, they come in a great assortment of sizes from slender cabinets to china size, and bunching cabinets can be stacked to form walls of display space.

The price range for curios also has expanded. The most popular price points are from $199 to $299, according to Zagaroli, who has created curios for a number of producers. He added that prices can easily go up to $1,000.

Besides the size and workmanship, other factors controlling price include the materials employed and features offered.

If the cabinet has a wood center shelf required for structural strength in larger sizes, there has to be a source of light in the bottom of the cabinet. Often it is a fluorescent light. But the more expensive models may have incandescent light in the bottom, which is preferable, in his opinion, because it is softer and more flattering to objects.

The more expensive cabinets can usually be leveled from the inside bottom with a screwdriver. They offer a potential adjustment of from 2 to 2½ inches. If several cabinets will be bunched, it can be a tricky installation, according to Zagaroli, since the units will have to be aligned with one another as well as leveled on the floor.

The more expensive units generally use thicker glass shelves. The thicker shelves are more luxurious and sparkling, in his opinion. Better quality glass may also have greater clarity.

Although the curio selected should relate comfortably to the other furniture in the room, the cabinetry itself is not the primary style issue, say Udouj and Zagaroli.

The most successful curios are almost unobtrusive in style, since their purpose is to show off the pieces that are displayed. Because they are usually mostly glass and often have either a glass or mirrored back, they are not bulky in appearance.

Ideal locations for the cabinets include entries, hallways and unused wall areas or jogs in a wall — spaces that may be going to waste at present. The cabinets also work well bunched to make a display wall in a living room, dining room or den.

Besides taking into account the style of the room and other furnishings, consider, too, what will be displayed inside the cabinet, said Udouj. He said a massive cabinet would dwarf a display of small, delicate things such as sea shells, even if the collection were large.

Instead of showing the entire collection in a large cabinet, it would be more decoratively appealing to choose a small-scale cabinet to show off a few special shells and rotate the display so that there is always something fresh to look at and enjoy.

House Prices Determined By Location

From BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

America's housing costs and the length of time it takes to sell a home vary greatly from city to city, according to a recent survey conducted nationwide by Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service.

The housing cost comparison survey matches home prices in about 400 cities that represent different geographic areas and population size. The average price tag for a typical, upscale American family home in these communities is $119,345 for a newly constructed home and $92,807 for a resale property. Findings are based on Better Homes and Gardens real estate brokers' estimates of the cost of a three-bedroom, 1,600-square foot home, with one and a half to two baths, located in a desirable neighborhood.

But, what consumers pay for such a home largely depends on where they buy and local price tags often don't reflect the national averages. In Saddle River, N.J., the most expensive market represented, the average price of a new home is $525,000, while an existing home costs $475,000. In other markets, buyers can purchase a newly constructed home for $45,000 in Glasgow, Ky.

In the communities analyzed, a typical family home is on the market an average of 96 days from the initial listing through closing of the sale.

Q. Will there be another horticultural symposium at Davidson College this spring?

A. Yes. The Davidson College Horticultural Symposium will be March 3. Each year this program produces an excellent opportunity to learn and to meet a wide variety of speakers. Registration information may be obtained from Phyllis Herring, P.O. Box 372, Davidson, N.C. 28036.

Q. What causes hollow potatoes?
A. This is due to extremely rapid growth, usually in periods of abundant moisture after drier growing conditions.

Q. I use salt to melt the ice in my driveway. Will the salt harm the plants along the driveway?

A. Be careful if you use rock salt or regular table salt to melt ice on sidewalks and driveways. The salt can hurt trees, shrubs and lawns. When the soluble salt level becomes too high in the soil, it retards growth and can kill plants. Symptoms of salt injury are similar to those of drought. The plant begins to die back gradually, with the tips and margins of leaves turning brown first. Heavy watering as soon as the symptoms appear will often help leach salts out of the root zone to prevent further injury. However, this will not correct the damage. Nitrogen fertilizers, sand and wood ashes are safer to use on ice and snow. (But don't use ashes around acid-loving plants like azaleas and blueberries.) These materials are likely to cause little, if any, damage to plants. Also, nitrogen fertilizer and calcium chloride are not likely to damage cement driveways or walks like sodium chloride can. On a related subject, automobile exhaust fumes have been known to kill needles and entire branches of evergreens. Sometimes the damage doesn't become apparent until spring. The fumes are absorbed through the pores on the bark of evergreen or deciduous plants. Months later, scorch-like injuries show up. Heat from automobile exhaust may also interrupt dormancy of plants lining a driveway. Hemlock, boxwood, junipers and other prized evergreens should be protected by idling the car away from them.

Here's The Answer

Q. — I tried to open some windows in our house and found several were stuck and would not move. They are the double-hung type, the kind where one window slides up, the other down. We had our house painted a few months ago and have never had the windows open since, because we have air conditioning. Is it possible some paint got stuck in the channels and that is why the windows are stuck. If so, how do we get them loose?

A. — You have hit on the probable — almost certain — cause of the trouble. If you have a putty knife, insert the blade between the sash and the strip along the channel. Tap the head of the knife with a hammer gently. Keep doing this at different places along the sash and then try to move it. No force is required. Once the paint seal has been broken, the sash will move easily, provided there has been no warpage, in which case you should call in a professional to help you. If you succeed in getting the sash loose, lubricate the sliding part with a lubricant you can buy in a hardware store.

Q. — I would like to get a sprinkler system for our lawn, which is very large and extends around the side and back. Do you think I will be able to install it myself?

A. — Some lawn sprinkler systems are fairly simple, some very complex. You have to be your own judge of what you can handle. The best way is to shop for a system suitable for the size of your property, and find out the cost of it as is or installed. You must also find out whether you are permitted by the codes in your town to do such work, since it involves water lines. You can attempt your own installation. From here it appears you should have it done, since your question implies your do-it-yourself experience may be limited.

Q. — I saw a large amount of lumber stored the other day. It was in an open shed, but the top was protected from the rain by a home-made roof. I noticed the ends of all the boards had been painted. What is the reason for this?

pounds without guidebar and chain and had an engine operating speed of 6,000 to 7,000 revolutions per minute. Today's heavy duty saws, with the same 3.5 cubic-inch engine displacement weigh less than 12 pounds and have an operating engine speed of 8,000 to 11,000 rpm. Many are up to 20 percent more powerful as a result of improved engine efficiency and performance.

More important, they are safer to operate. In order to meet the new American National Standard In-

A. — The ends of long boards are sometimes painted or otherwise sealed because the ends dry out much faster than the centers. If the wood is stored for a period of time, warping will result. Painting the ends is not always done, but it is a precautionary measure.

Q. — I took all the old varnish off a piece of furniture. It took out most of the color, but a little still remains. I haven't done anything to it yet. Should I try to get out the color by sanding?

A. — You can try, but if that doesn't work, use a commercial bleach. Follow the directions exactly. Work where there is plenty of ventilation, wear gloves, be very careful and sand the wood with fine paper after you have completed the bleaching.

(The techniques of using varnish, lacquer, shellac, bleach, remover, stain, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's handbook, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P.O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

stitute safety standards, they come with features to help reduce the possibility of kickback-related injuries. They also have front headguards, superior anti-vibration systems, effective noise-reduction mufflers and such safety measures as chain brakes, noseguards and low kickback sidebars.

The average heavy duty chain saw in 1983 had only about 5 percent of its parts made from plastic. Today's saws have at least 75 percent made from plastic. That makes them lighter in weight, less likely to crack or break and less vulnerable to corrosion than metal. The president of Solo Inc., James Dunne, points out that today's saws will not break if dropped on a hard surface and have engines that can last 1,000 hours, compared with the capability of about 200 hours four years ago.

Chain saw manufacturers have found ways to pack more power and reliability into their two-cycle engines. These engines now run faster and cooler and last longer. Some are incorporating new engine designs, while others have improved the air flow and combustion with more effective air filters and more efficient cylinders.

The technological revolution in chain saws translates into a big plus for homeowners who want a faster, safer and more comfortable way to cut firewood, remove storm damage, fell trees or prune tree limbs. A lighter chain saw that is more powerful and more comfortable to handle certainly cuts down on the time and energy expended for any wood-cutting chore. It also makes the job less difficult and less fatiguing.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this paper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Smoother Relations For Employers, Unions Forecast

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Forced into the same lifeboat by imports and a deregulation-spawned, sink-or-swim economy, U.S. companies and unions are shaking their fists at each other less often as they enter 1987 contract talks.

There are likely to be confrontations, but observers say 1987 should feature higher wage settlements, a gradual abandonment of two-tier pay scales and more companies relying on joint union-management decision-making.

While acknowledging that pay increases negotiated this year will likely rise above the average 1.9 percent bargained in 1986, employers say that won't diminish their efforts to contain labor costs by reducing fringe benefits and work rules won by unions in the past.

For 1987, unions want better job guarantees, commitments by employers not to farm out work to non-union suppliers, and bigger shares of healthier companies' profits as paybacks for past concessions and the price of new work rules.

Despite the two sides' conflicting goals, John Zalusky, an economist for the AFL-CIO, said he saw increased cooperation by some unions and employers.

He cited agreements in the import-battered auto industry, such as those between the United Auto Workers and General Motors and Chrysler Corp. at a joint GM-Toyota plant in California, at GM's proposed Saturn venture in Tennessee and at Chrysler plants in Alabama, New Jersey and Detroit.

Traditional UAW work rules at all those plants were slashed in exchange for more union participation in management and new productivity-based bonus incentives.

Despite those instances of compatibility, there should be several interesting confrontations in the private and public sectors this year.

The deregulation of several industries in recent years, including trucking, communications and the airlines, has allowed non-union competitors to enter those fields, leading to price wars and encouraging companies to cut costs.

In the private sector, bargaining this year is relatively light. Less than one-third of the 6.5 million workers under major collective bargaining agreements covering 1,000 or more workers have contracts expiring in 1987.

Activity will be heaviest this summer. The Teamsters' contract with United Parcel Service Inc. covering 74,000 workers expires in July. United Auto Workers contracts now providing average wages of $13.70 for 374,000 employees of General Motors Corp. and 114,000 at Ford Motor Co. expire in September.

Among government workers, the biggest attention will be on the Postal Service, where contracts with three unions covering 540,000 employees now paid between $22,000 and $23,000 a year expire in July.

Also up for renegotiation this year are 312 — about half — of the contracts covering 2.3 million state and local government workers.

With city employees in Detroit and Philadelphia last year demonstrating a renewed militancy in striking for 5 percent to 6 percent wage boosts, the bargaining will be most intense in New York City, where contracts covering nearly 300,000 municipal workers expire in June.

According to a survey by the Bureau of National Affairs, a private business research publisher based on Washington, 77 percent of the responding companies with expiring contracts expect to bargain pay increases averaging 2 percent to 4 percent in 1987.

The Conference Board, a New York-based business research group, predicts union pay gains in 1987 will average 2.5 percent, compared with an average wage earnings increase of 3 percent for all workers this year.

That would continue a trend begun in 1983 in which percentage wage gains for union members have been less than those of non-union workers. Union members, however, continue to enjoy wages averaging 20 to 30 percent above those of unorganized workers, according to Labor Department figures.

Recent actions by the Reagan administration have emboldened a tougher attitude by several employers.

Armed with a favorable ruling from the National Labor Relations Board, 73 percent of the 181 companies responding to the Bureau of National Affairs survey said they would consider replacing locked out workers with new temporary employees to keep their businesses operating.

The NLRB, in a ruling last June, said employers could effectively lock out current workers and hire temporary replacements as long as there was no anti-union motivation behind the actions.

On the other hand, employers are becoming less enthralled with two-tier wage systems that dominated the labor-management relations of the early 1980s.

Following the lead of Hughes Aircraft Corp. in 1984 and General Dynamics Corp. in 1985, the Boeing Co. agreed last fall to phase out its two-tier system establishing different longevity-based scales for new and veteran employees.

"I don't see any great growth in two-tier wage systems," says Randolph Hill, vice president of industrial relations for the National Manufacturers Association. "In the long run, most companies find the hostility they generate not worth the immediate savings."

Zalusky said he saw two other labor-management patterns emerging:

—Continued traditional adversarial bargaining as characterized by the 24-day strike last summer by the Communications Workers of America against American Telephone & Telegraph Co. The union won an 8 percent wage gain over three years, but lost cost-of-living protections and accepted a limited two-tier wage system for some production workers. AT&T lost $60 million in earnings as a result of the walkout.

—More union activity in capital and bond markets when direct talks with management fail. "The best example of that was the Air Line Pilots Association and the Machinists union going to Carl Ichan, helping him take over TWA and getting rid of the existing management," Zalusky said.

Zalusky believes unions are becoming more adept at using so-called corporate campaigns in pressuring bankers, mutual funds and other asset and debt holders to force company managers to accommodate their workers.

"What all this says is that if unions, particularly under the Reagan administration, believe they can't get justice under traditional collective bargaining procedures, they will step outside of them," Zalusky said.

HOW TO MAKE THE MOST OF YOUR LAST BIG TAX SHELTER.

Deducting interest payments from tax returns used to be the American way of life. Over the next couple of years, that major tax break is going to disappear. Now, under the new tax law, the only deductible interest left will be the interest on your mortgage. And that's why Equity Line from First Citizens Bank makes so much sense.

An innovative concept in consumer credit, Equity Line gives you a line of credit based on the equity you have in your home. At First Citizens Bank, an Equity Line credit account can range from $5,000 (half the minimum required by our major competitors) to $200,000. And there are no origination fees for setting up your account!

Best of all, Equity Line is not nearly as expensive as other forms of credit. Our smallest lines of credit ($5,000-$14,999) carry an interest rate of prime + 1½%. Higher amounts are prime + 1%! And because Equity Line is a mortgage based lending instrument, all interest paid — within certain limitations — remains tax deductible.

With these rates, and the average amount of equity most people have in their homes, your borrowing power is increased dramatically. Equity Line could literally be the last loan you ever have to apply for.

So, how can you make the most of your last big tax shelter? Simply call or visit your nearest First Citizens Bank branch office and apply for Equity Line.

Because these days the only way to shelter a lot of credit is to get it all under one roof.

British Firm To Buy RJR Nabisco Unit

By BRUCE KEPPEL

Grand Metropolitan of Britain will buy Heublein, RJR Nabisco's wine and spirits subsidiary, for about $1.2 billion cash, the companies said Friday.

The purchase of Farmington, Conn.-based Heublein, which controls about 11 percent of the U.S. alcoholic-beverage market, will make Grand Metropolitan one of the world's largest marketers of spirits and wines.

California's sprawling Almaden Vineyards, which Heublein this month agreed in principle to buy from National Distillers & Chemical Corp., is expected to be part of the sales agreement by the time the transaction is completed in March, the companies said. A Heublein spokesman said Heublein's purchase of Almaden and the agreement of Grand Metropolitan to buy Heublein, which sold 8.3 million cases of wines last year, were "more coincidental than anything else."

The deal is subject to approval by London-based Grand Metropolitan's shareholders and by federal government agencies.

RJR Nabisco said the sale will "substantially strengthen" its balance sheet, which took on a heavy load of debt in 1985 when R. J. Reynolds Industries acquired Nabisco Brands for $4.9 billion. Last October, the renamed RJR Nabisco sold its Kentucky Fried Chicken unit to PepsiCo for $840 million.

Sir Stanley Grinstead, Grand Metropolitan's chairman, called Heublein's purchase "very exciting." Grand Metropolitan has worldwide interests in spirits and wines through its International Distillers and Vintners subsidiary, and in hotels, brewing and consumer services. Its major products include J & B Scotch, Bailey's Original Irish Cream, Sambuca Romana, Gilbey's gin and Bombay gin.

Heublein and International Distillers & Vintners have had joint marketing agreements since 1953, the companies said. "We have been discussing for some time possible business arrangements between Heublein and IDV," Grinstead said in a statement released by RJR Nabisco in Winston-Salem, N.C., "and this purchase is a natural outcome. The acquisition is in line with Grand Metropolitan's strategy of developing its core businesses and increasing the international content of its earnings."

That statement and the proximity of Heublein's purchase to its announced acquisition of Almaden Vineyards suggested to some industry observers that Heublein may have acted on behalf of Grand Metropolitan.

"Heublein may have been a stalking horse if not a Trojan horse," suggested Paul Gillette, publisher of Wine Investor. Grand Metropolitan, he explained, may have reasoned that Almaden's purchase price, which was not disclosed, might have been higher had National Distillers known Grand Metropolitan was behind it.

According to Beverage Media, a trade journal, 23 major alcoholic-beverage firms have changed hands in the last year with a total price tag of $6.7 billion. About half the sales involved acquisitions by foreign companies, mostly British, said Publisher Bill Stone.

U.S. Industrial Production, Operating Rate Improved

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. industrial production rose a solid 0.5 percent in December, the third consecutive monthly improvement, while the operating rate at the nation's factories, mines and utilities climbed to the highest level since February, the government said Friday.

The dual reports on industrial production and capacity utilization provided new evidence, economists said, that the nation's beleaguered manufacturing sector is staging a rebound.

The Federal Reserve Board said the December gain in industrial production followed an even better 0.6 percent November increase and a 0.3 percent October rise.

A companion report said the nation's industry operated at 79.6 percent of capacity in December, up from 79.4 percent in November and a 0.6 percentage point improvement since September. It was the highest operating rate since last February, when the nation's factories, mines and utilities were operating at 80.2 percent of capacity.

For the past three months, industrial production has been rising at an annual rate of 3.25 percent, sharply ahead of the actual advance for the entire year of just 0.9 percent.

The weakness in 1986 came from a big drop in oil and gas well production and continued troubles in American manufacturing, where foreign competition has deprived domestic producers of sales both at home and abroad.

"I think we are seeing a turnaround in a previously devastated sector (manufacturing) and it should continue to improve in 1987," said David Jones, an economist with Aubrey G. Lanston & Co., a government securities dealer.

Jerry Jasinowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, said that certain industries, particularly chemicals and paper, are already beginning to benefit from a lower dollar, which has helped boost their export sales. He predicted this would spread to other manufacturing areas, but he said the advances would be a slow process.

"The December number is great but we should not think we are off to the races," he said. "We are getting misleadingly strong economic activity in the fourth quarter associated with people trying to beat the tax law."

David Hale, chief economist for Kemper Financial Services, said he believed economic growth would rise at an anemic 1 percent to 2 percent annual rate in the January-March quarter this year and he said the economy may not do even that well unless the trade deficit begins to show improvement.

The Reagan administration is much more upbeat about economic prospects, forecasting growth for all of 1987 at a respectable 3.2 percent annual rate.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Albert R. Brashear said the gain in production and the drop in unemployment in December were all good signs as the "Reagan economic recovery marches into its 50th consecutive month of steady growth."

The report Friday said production by U.S. manufacturers climbed 0.6

percent in December and was 2.4 percent above where it was a year ago.

Companies making durable goods, items expected to last three or more years, saw output rise 0.7 percent last month with most durable goods industries except steel enjoying gains.

Autos were assembled at an annual rate of 7.9 million units in December, up from a rate of 7.3 million units in both November and October.

Firms producing non-durable goods saw output rise 0.5 percent in December to stand 4.9 percent above a year ago, the best performance of any of the major categories.

By contrast, output in the mining industry is 9.7 percent lower than it was a year ago, reflecting the big cutbacks in the oil and gas industry. For December, mining output edged up a slight 0.4 percent.

Output at the nation's utilities dropped 0.2 percent in December and is 3.7 percent lower than it was a year ago.

VA Drops Ceiling On Interest Rates

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Administration announced Friday it was lowering the maximum interest rate on federally backed VA mortgages to 8.5 percent, the lowest level in nine years.

The reduction, which will take effect Monday, is the eighth cut in the past 21 months and marks the longest sustained decline in VA mortgage rates in the 43-year history of the program, the agency said. The last half-point cut to 9 percent occurred on Nov. 21.

VA Administrator Thomas Turnage said, "The favorable trends in home loan rates reflects the mortgage market's increasing faith in the economy. Lenders are demonstrating with lower rates that they need less margin for inflation in the years ahead."

The rate has dropped a total of 4.5

percentage points since April 1985 and now is at the lowest level since February 1978. VA rates hit an all-time high of 17.5 percent in September 1981.

The new 8.5 percent mortgage rate translates into a $25 reduction in the monthly payment for a $70,000 mortgage, dropping it $538.24, the agency said.

The VA said it was also decreasing by one-half percentage point other loan rates. This includes a new rate of 8.75 percent for graduated payment mortgages and 10 percent for home improvement loans.

The rates apply to new loans, not existing ones. However, the VA said veterans with existing VA mortgages of 10.5 percent or higher should investigate the possibility of refinancing those loans.
