Storm Dumps Up To 14 Inches Of Snow Over Western N.C.

By The Associated Press
A winter storm dumped snow as far east as Raleigh early today, with accumulations of up to 14 inches in the northern North Carolina foothills making two interstate highways "virtually impassable," the state Highway Patrol reported.

"Right now Interstate 40 is impassable in both lanes because of tractor-trailers jackknifed in the snow and ice on Old Fort Mountain," Highway Patrol Telecommunicator Elaine Cowan said about 5 a.m. "We have several tractor-trailers jackknifed in both the eastbound and westbound lanes."

"Interstate 26 is in about the same shape as I-40 — several inches of snow over ice," she said. "And it's snowing so hard that a soon as they get it scraped off, it fills back over again."

The National Weather Service said the snow line extended from southeast of Charlotte to just west of Raleigh early today, with accumulations up to 12 to 14 inches in the northern foothills and up to 10 inches in the mountains.

The massive winter storm moving east across Florida and Georgia continued to intensify today producing heavier snow than anticipated across the state, the weather service said.

Reidsville had received 11 inches of snow by 8 a.m., while Hickory reported between 9 and 11 inches, the weather service said.

At 8 a.m., 3 inches of snow covered the ground in Charlotte, making it the heaviest snowfall for the city since Feb. 1, 1984, when 5.9 inches was recorded, the weather service said.

The Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point Regional Airport reported 6 to 7 inches of snow by 7:30 a.m. and the weather service said snow was still falling there at a rate of about one inch an hour.

Surry and Yadkin counties were the hardest hit with accumulations of up to 14 inches in some spots, the weather service said.

Rowan and Stokes counties reported 9 to 10 inches of snow, while Iredell, Wilkes, Alleghany, Alexander, Forsyth and Guilford counties had received 8 to 10 inches with heavy snow still falling. Davidson had 7 inches, while Alamance had 5 inches and Randolph 3 to 4 inches.

Eight inches of snow was reported in Roxboro in Person County while just 20 miles south and east amounts dropped to 2 inches with only a trace of snow and slush remaining in southern Durham and northern Wake counties.

Local law enforcement agencies throughout the mountains, foothills and Piedmont said roads were extremely hazardous early today, and were advising residents to stay off the roads except in emergencies.

In areas just east of the snow line, the weather service said temperatures were still low enough to cause freezing on bridges and overpasses.

Forecasters said the snow should end tonight, but a blast of cold air is expected to plunge temperatures to

Greenville Settles For Steady Rain

By CHERIE EVANS

Steady rain, expected to continue in Pitt County for most of the day, has brought its usual inconveniences into the county, local officials said, but it has not caused any major problems.

"We've had very, very few calls" today because of flooding, said Mayo Allen of the Greenville Public Works Department. But, "I immediately put out two crews" this morning to survey the city for flooding.

The two incidents reported were due to a clogged "catch base" at First and Elm streets, and water was blocked from the drainage in a parking lot, he said.

Steady rain usually does not cause problems in the city drainage systems, Allen said. But, when it "quick floods" or rains heavily, "water can't go down as fast because the pipes are too small" to handle the water all at one time, he said.

There were a few school buses that got stuck or were drowned out

Waite Still Out Of Sight In Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite apparently was continuing marathon negotiations with Shiite Moslem kidnapers today, according to a Druse militiaman who earlier said the envoy would see two Americans held captive since 1985.

"He is still talking to them (the kidnapers) as far as we can tell," said the militiaman, an official of Druse warlord Walid Jumblatt's Progressive Socialist Party that is guarding Waite.

The militiaman, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Wednesday that Waite would be allowed to "see and converse" with American hostages Terry A. Anderson and Thomas Sutherland. He did not elaborate.

Waite, an Anglican Church envoy, was last seen in public Tuesday evening when he left his seafront Riviera Hotel in mostly Moslem west Beirut.

Lebanese police, meanwhile, confirmed that a West German businessman was abducted from his hotel room Tuesday. He became the

Hearing Draws Sparse Crowd

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

BETHEL — Only 19 people attended a public hearing on a proposed change in the method of electing members of the county's Board of Commissioners Wednesday night at North Pitt High School.

And only four of the 19 — in a proposed district with a population of just under 15,000 — had comments to make.

The hearing was the first of six — one in each of the proposed new election districts — scheduled to be held by commissioners to receive input on the proposed election plan.

Mike Crowell, a lawyer with the Raleigh firm of Tharrington, Smith &

Hargrove (who has been hired by commissioners to assist with the development of a new voting plan), outlined the proposed method, which calls for the election of six commissioners from districts — with only people living in the districts voting — and three commissioners elected by the county at-large.

"One of the major considerations in drawing the plan" Crowell said, was to provide two predominately black districts which would give "minority citizens ... equal opportunity to elect representatives of their choice," as required by the federal Voting Rights Act.

Another consideration the board faced, Crowell said, was the "one-person, one-vote requirement" which requires that the proposed districts "be fairly equal in population."

A third consideration — which the plan meets — was to "retain existing boundaries as much as possible," Crowell said.

Saying the proposed six district plan primarily follows existing township lines, Crowell said for the most part "this plan doesn't split townships ... except Greenville township."

The at-large seats were included, Crowell said, "to be sure there are some people on the board who represent the entire county ... have the entire county at heart."

By having three at-large seats, rather than one or two, Crowell said, minorities would have a better chance of electing one by "single-shot voting."

He said the plan calls for the six commissioners representing the districts to be elected for the first time in 1988.

The three commissioners elected to the board in 1986 — Charles McLawhorn, Kenneth Dews and Tom Johnson — would assume the at-large seats and those seats would be up for election in 1990.

"Following the hearings," according to Crowell, commissioners will "decide on what plan to present to

N.C. State Faculty To Urge Divesture

RALEIGH (AP) — Some members of the North Carolina State University faculty plan to ask the faculty senate to consider a resolution urging the school's endowment board to drop its investments in companies with direct dealings in South Africa.

They plan to ask the senate to consider the resolution at its meeting Tuesday.

The proposal would apply to more than $1 million in the university's main endowment, which totals about $20 million, John T. Kanipe Jr., NCSU's vice chancellor for development, said Wednesday.

It would not apply to a dozen or more separate endowments supporting individual NCSU schools and other operations, which are private funds, said Kenneth P. Vickery, NCSU professor of African history.

Vickery said the resolution was being prepared "at my urging at that of some other faculty members."

The resolution comes on the heels of a student protest against South African holdings last Monday and deliberations about the issue by the student and campus affairs committee of the NCSU Board of Trustees.

Blount Firm Joins Coldwell Banker

W.G. Blount & Associates, a residential real estate firm at 201 E. Arlington Blvd., announced its affiliation with Coldwell Banker, one of the nation's leading residential real estate brokerage firms, at a ribbon-cutting ceremony Wednesday.

W.G. Blount & Associates was founded in 1970 as Blount & Ball Realty. Following a reorganization in 1980, the company's name was changed to W.G. Blount & Associates. With the new affiliation, the firm's name becomes Coldwell Banker W.G. Blount & Associates.

William G. Blount, owner of the firm, and Greenville Mayor Les Garner dedicated the agency's new sign as part of the ceremony. Blount, a real estate broker for 16 years, is a past president of the Greenville-Pitt County board of Realtors and is a former state director of the N.C. Realtors Association.

Coldwell Banker Real Estate Group, a member of the Sears Financial Network, began its residential affiliates franchise program in 1981 to serve and satisfy real estate needs in small and mid-sized towns across the nation. The first franchisee was signed in February 1982 and there are now 900 affiliate offices and more than 840 company-owned offices nationwide.

Coldwell Banker offices supply a complete range of real estate services, including brokerage, relocation, mortgage, title, escrow and new homes marketing.

The company's share of the national resale home market in 1986 was about 9 percent.

CREDIT CARD INFORMATION

Area readers may be interested to know that on Jan. 13 the Wall Street Journal started listing selected banks across the country which offer credit card services. On Page 46 of Section 2, banks and interest rates were listed, ranging from a low of 10 1/2 percent with a grace period of 25 days (annual card fee of $22.50) to a high of 22 percent, no card fee, with interest charged from the date of purchase. The lowest rates were for banks in Arkansas, where state law limits credit card interest to 5 percentage points above the Federal Reserve's discount rate, 5 1/2 percent as of Jan. 13. The representative list showed 13 banks, from Tampa to Boston, with rates under 16 percent.

The list is to appear daily in the Wall Street Journal hereafter, as a service to the public. W.C. Byrd Sr., Greenville

Military Jets Collide

BROWNWOOD, Texas (AP) — Two Air Force reconnaissance jets engaged in a mock dogfight collided 14,000 feet over this remote area, killing two crew members as two others parachuted to safety, authorities said.

The accident Wednesday was the second fatal collision involving military aircraft in as many days.

The two RF-4C Phantom IIs collided around 4 p.m. as they were practicing dogfight maneuvers, said Fire Capt. Donald Reiger. "Someone zigged when they should have zagged," Reiger said.

Airman Sean Ruark, a spokeswoman at Bergstrom Air Force Base where the planes were based, said she could neither confirm nor deny the dogfight report. The base is in Austin about 140 miles to the southeast.

The North Carolina driver's license office is located in the Highway Patrol building on East 10th Street. Call 752-4182.

Searchers recovered one crew member's body about two hours after the crash, said Texas Ranger Norman Autrey. They found body parts and the other pilot's flight suit in a field a half mile from Lake Brownwood, Reiger said. A streak of smoldering debris stretched five miles, he said.

Both survivors were found near Sandy Beach on the lake, Autrey said.

Richard Dietrich, 28, of Austin, was in good condition at Brownwood Regional Hospital with second-degree burns and contusions on his right knee, said hospital spokeswoman Cheryl Wilson. The other crewman, James Johnston, was taken to the hospital after helping in the search but was not treated.

The identities of the two dead had not been released early today.

Autrey said a witness told investigators that before the crash the planes passed each other, one upside down, the other right side up, as in an airshow.

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Marines today fired into a crowd of 10,000 peasants demanding land reform when club-wielding farmers tried to storm the presidential palace. Hospitals reported at least 12 people were killed and 94 were injured.

It was the first time since President Corazon Aquino took office 11 months ago that her security forces have shot demonstrators.

There was no official word on casualties.

The clash occurred on Mendiola Bridge about 300 yards from Malacanang Palace. During the 20-year authoritarian rule of President Ferdinand E. Marcos, the area was the scene of repeated bloody confrontations between security forces and opposition demonstrators.

Mrs. Aquino came to power last February after massive street demonstrations and a military-civilian revolt forced Marcos to flee to Hawaii.

Government and Communist rebel negotiators later announced they were suspending peace talks because of death threats against representatives of both sides by unidentified forces seeking to destabilize the Aquino administration. The chief rebel negotiator said today's shootings would make resumption of the talks difficult.

The marines, who have been guarding the palace since coup rumors circulated last weekend, turned their guns on a crowd of about 10,000 people organized by the leftist Movement of Philippine Farmers. Security forces said they were provoked when demonstrators threw rocks and tried to break through a phalanx of about 500 troops and riot police.

Some of the militants carried iron bars and wooden clubs with three-inch nails as they marched on the palace from a rallying point in front of the main downtown post office.

Mrs. Aquino summoned key civilian and military advisers, including Defense Minister Rafael Ilo, to an emergency meeting after the clash. Her spokesman, Teodoro Benigno, said the president "expressed deep regret" over the confrontation and ordered an investigation.

The leftists, some of whom Wednesday barricaded entrances to the Ministry of Agrarian Reform, had vowed to march on Malacanang regardless of security measures to demand the immediate distribution of land.

The marchers scattered in terror when the troops opened fire. Security forces also fired tear gas, and two jeeploads of troops chased after the fleeing demonstrators.

Hours later, crowds of angry protesters milled about in a nearby square in front of the main post office.

Scores of troops armed with M-16 rifles stood guard near the palace after the incident, and barricaded major streets leading to Mrs. Aquino's residence, located a short distance from Malacanang.

One policeman, who refused to give his name, told a reporter he thought the marines "fired too soon."

One police officer was struck on the head with a rock and slightly injured in the clash, police said. No immediate reports were available on the injured protesters.

Crispin Beltran, chairman of the leftist May 1st Movement labor federation, condemned what he termed "the brutal massacre done by the troops of President Aquino." The Student Christian Movement of the Philippines said the killing shows the Aquino government "is shedding its disguise as being protectors of human rights" and "is no better than the past dictator."

Brig. Gen. Ramon Montano, commander of the capital region, said of the peasants' march on the palace: "This is a very clear, provocative act. This time they just rushed the police lines without any preliminaries."

Montano said security forces were unprepared for such a determined move by the marchers and that his troops were "caught flat-footed."

In previous marches by leftist groups, the protesters made no attempt to break through police lines and authorities permitted them to hold rallies on the Mendiola Bridge.

Since Mrs. Aquino took office, the country has been rife with coup rumors and Philippine and foreign analysts say land reform may be the key to restoring stability.

Land reform has been one of the main topics discussed by Mrs.

Aquino's government and Communist representatives in talks designed to end an 18-year-old insurgency. A 60-day truce took effect Dec. 10.

Despite the suspension of peace talks, chief rebel negotiator Satur Ocampo said the Communist New People's Army would abide by the cease-fire that expires Feb. 6.

On Feb. 2, a proposed constitution goes before the voters in a national plebiscite which has been described as a "vote of confidence" in Mrs. Aquino's leadership.

Her government recently granted land titles to nearly 6,000 landless tenants in northern Luzon and says it hopes eventually to enable up to 4 million landless peasants to own their own tracts.

The Movement of Philippine Farmers has accused Mrs. Aquino of snubbing the farmers and called on her to act as a model for land reform by redistributing land from her family's 14,800 acre estate in central Luzon.

Latin Diplomats Ask U.S. To Join Peace Movement

L.A. Times-Washington Post

MEXICO CITY — Eight Latin American diplomats promoting peace talks in Central America moved Wednesday to persuade the United States to take an active role in peace negotiations.

The diplomats, members of the so-called Contadora Group, said that they would "maintain" a dialogue in the coming weeks with the United States, "whose contribution is necessary to reach a peaceful solution" of Central American conflicts.

The diplomats made their appeal in a communique issued here Wednesday night. The note followed their tour this week of five Central American capitals. The tour was designed to revive moribund peace talks.

The message said that the main obstacles to peace in the area were "different perceptions" of how to resolve problems and "the persistence of acts that violate international law."

The latter phrase was widely interpreted to mean U.S. funding for Nicaraguan contras. The call for talks with the United States comes at a time when future U.S. aid for the contras is in question due to the uproar over the Iran-contra arms scandal.

The Contadora negotiations began four years ago when diplomats from Mexico, Colombia, Venezuela and Panama tried to forge a peace treaty among Nicaragua and its neighbors — Honduras, El Salvador, Costa Rica and Guatemala.

Last year, as the talks withered, Peru, Argentina, Brazil and Uruguay joined in a support group for the original four. Along with the eight peace-seeking nations, U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar and Joao Baena Soares, secretary general of the Organization of American States, also participated in this week's Central American tour.

China Fires Two Top Scientists

PEKING (AP) — The Communist government today fired the president and vice president of China's prestigious Academy of Sciences in a move that appeared part of the leadership's crackdown on Western liberal ideas.

The official Xinhua News Agency said the academy president, Lu Jiayi, and vice president, Yan Dongsheng, were dismissed at a meeting of the National People's Congress Standing Committee that ended today. It did not say why they were fired.

The leadership changes at the Academy of Sciences apparently were part of the crackdown. The academy represents about 100 institutes with more than 30,000 scientists. Some members have spoken out in the past year for greater intellectual freedom, making the academy a possible target.

Watching Change

The whole community watches when a new chancellor begins the process of assuming his duties at East Carolina University. It is, after all, a change that will affect the University community, the area and the state. A new personality will have a far ranging effect on the direction the university will take.

There have been only eight other chief executives for the institution since its founding and some of them served for short periods. Thus it is not difficult to understand the interest in Dr. Richard R. Eakin assuming office.

Retiring Chancellor John Howell says preparation is moving very well.

"I have told him that if he wants to talk with any of the staff he should feel free to do that, and they will be in contact with him while he is in Ohio," Howell said. Correspondence is being sent to Eakin to help him make the change.

Because of ECU's size, many of the decisions once made by the chancellor, or president, are now made at other levels. "The chancellor sets some general tone and guidance," according to Howell. "He couldn't possibly deal with the details that go on in each of these decisions."

The new chancellor undoubtedly will have a mountain of material with which he must become familiar as he moves into the new position. Obviously it will be time consuming to study the missions of the various schools and departments of the university, meet administrators, faculty, student leaders and community supports of the university. Nevertheless the objectives of the university will continue during the interim, thanks to a strong gridwork of planning that is already in place.

WASHINGTON (AP) — In his heart, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy remains a liberal, but he is a practical politician with a sense of the times in which he is shaping an agenda that seeks progress with minimal impact on the federal budget.

It's been a long six years in the minority for Kennedy and other Senate Democrats. Ronald Reagan's landslide victory swept the Republicans to power in the Senate in 1980.

Nowhere was that shift better demonstrated than when Republican Sen. Strom Thurmond of South Carolina replaced Kennedy as chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

But the Democrats came roaring back in 1986, and now they control the Senate again by a margin of 55 to 45.

Once again, Kennedy is a committee chairman, this time choosing to head the panel on Labor and Human Resources.

Moving quickly to establish his agenda, he has held hearings on a range of issues, including health, education and the federal minimum wage.

During an interview in his office, he talked about all those issues, as well as about how the Senate has changed.

His office walls are filled with pictures that remind a visitor of other times when Democrats talked of a New Frontier and Camelot, days when there were no problems so great they could not be attacked with the unlimited resources of the federal government.

There were pictures of brothers John and Robert and of the youngest in the famous family, Teddy, who presumed to run for the Senate at age 29, which prompted an opponent to mock. "If your name were Edward Moore instead of Edward Moore Kennedy your candidacy would be a joke."

But the voters of Massachusetts knew the name and sent him to the Senate to work with his brother, the president.

That was nearly 25 years ago and Kennedy now is a Senate elder, a committee chairman who ranks seventh in seniority among the 100 members of the body.

Often viewed as the last liberal in the age of Reagan, Kennedy stunned many of his supporters by voting for the Gramm-Rudman deficit reduction bill.

As the Senate's strongest advocate of national health insurance, Kennedy opposed for many years legislation that would provide a program of coverage for catastrophic illness. Kennedy reasoned that enactment of catastrophic coverage would ease the pressure for a far broader program.

"I'm still for national health," he said. "I feel strongly about it. But I think you're going to have to try and do what you can do."

The tone was similar when he talked about introducing legislation to increase the federal minimum wage, which has been at $3.35 an hour since January 1981.

He thinks it ought to go up at least $1.25 an hour and quickly notes, "It would have no budgetary impact."

Kennedy also sits on the Armed Services Committee and like most members of the Senate, Democrats and Republicans, he won't buy the administration's proposal for a $32 billion increase in the defense budget.

"I think the American people will not support an increase in the MX missile; they will not support a 68 percent increase in Star Wars and they're not going to support two additional aircraft carriers," he said.

He has taken himself out of the 1988 presidential race, but he had a prediction about the Democrats who make the run.

"I think when you sit down in Iowa a year from now and those Democratic candidates are asked do they support two aircraft carriers, I think the answer of all the Democratic candidates will be no," he said.

He gave no sign he feels any yearning to join those candidates in Iowa.

Safe Year

It's hard to believe, but the nation's airlines recorded their lowest accident rate in six years in 1986. It was also one of the safest years for private pilots.

It is difficult to believe because emphasis is so often given to aviation mishaps, and memories often retain stories of aerial disaster because those sudden disasters leave an indelible mark.

Still, the National Transportation Safety Board tells us scheduled airlines had an accident rate in '86 of 0.016 per 100,000 departures; the lowest since 1980. The only accident involved a Southern Air Transport cargo plane in Texas last October in which three crew members were killed. The board included that accident under scheduled airlines — even though it was a cargo flight — because the company has some scheduled air service.

Collision of an Aeromexico DC-9 with a private plane in California wasn't counted because the airliner was a foreign carrier. Eighty-two people died in that accident.

There was no fatal accident involving any regularly scheduled passenger airline. Commuter flights included but two fatal accidents.

The safety board said charter airlines had no fatal accidents during 1986 while 329 people were killed in charter air crashes the year before; most of them in two accidents involving Aero Air in Newfoundland and Galaxy Airlines in Nevada.

Last year's remarkable safety record should not be regarded as part of a trend. In the previous year we're told aviation had one of its poorer safety records. Still, in terms of travel-miles per casualty, it's a safe bet 1985 would have seen aerial travel safety far superior to a corresponding highway travel record.

Private, general aviation pilots also recorded one of their safest years ever in 1986. Generally speaking U.S. aviation enjoyed a very good year.

Today's Thought

The West Germans captured a suspect in the hijacking of an American jet in 1985. The United States wants the man enough to waive the possibility of the death penalty. Considering the chance of reprisals, West Germany may be only too glad to give up the suspect.

To the editor:

My letter today is about tunnel vision.

It is a common ailment. Tunnel vision is the failure to see an important part of the scene or problem — or context. Let's call tunnel viewers, looking through their tubes at a cookie-shaped piece of the world, tubers.

They come in infinite variety. There's your Russian tuber, whom you hear yelling "Nuke 'em!" from pickup windows. They'd chance finishing humans forever and setting back the evolution of intelligence 10 million years (I used to think a billion years before reading "Microcosmos" by Lynn Margulis and Dorion Sagan) for fear that we'll become Kremlins serfs in Amerika — coming on WITN-TV. Russian tubers are real macho.

Then the American tuber. They think capitalism so horrifying they would chance finishing humans forever and setting back the evolution of intelligence 10 million years on a blackened radioactive planet full of cockroaches for fear that their Soviet empire will become like a nightmare with unemployment and people without health insurance. They are real macho.

Peace tubers, too, have tunnel vision. They would disarm unilaterally, period. Criminals would keep Ujis and hijackers their Kalashnikovs. Shieldless Japan would rearb. But better a doormat than a killer. They are real macho.

What can we make of the Greenham women? Not Russian tubers certainly: As Ms. Purrington reported in her letter, they oppose American nukes in Wiltshire ditches. Not American tubers: they try to incite East European dissident women against the SS-20s and such. Not peace tubers either, unless your doormat climbs fences and blocks trucks. But they, too, have tubed vision.

Can't we enlarge our tubes? How about inviting your "enemy" to your next meeting? Peat miners and fishers, environmentalists and industrialists, bakers and anorexics, unite. You have nothing to lose but your tubes. Away, tuber-culous rigor. Hooray, hybrid vigor!

To the editors:

In 1986, Governor Martin appointed a task force to study the needs of hearing- and/or visual-impaired children in North Carolina. On Jan. 19, 1987, the task force recommended that the high schools located at Wilson and Morganton should be closed and a new school built in Greensboro. This is frustrating news for those of us with children at these two schools.

We have so little choice now in educating our children. Most school systems do not have the qualifications to properly teach these children so that they become productive, self-reliant adults. Many systems should become aware that this recommendation may result in more parents demanding the local system implement a qualified program for these hearing-impaired children.

Some of us have made the changes and sacrifices necessary to permit our children to attend the School for the Deaf and still be home daily, instead of only weekends and holiday. We don't believe it is possible to transport our children home, statewide, on a weekly basis if there is only one school located in Greensboro. This would mean a five-to-eight-hour bus ride biweekly for some of our children.

It is frustrating to see all the millions of dollars spent for the School of Math and Science in Durham to further the education of gifted children and, at the same time, hear that there is not enough money to operate two high schools for deaf children. For parents of hearing children, there have always been many options in selecting a school, but, as parents of deaf children, we encounter countless obstacles in obtaining the educational needs for our children near our homes. We need to convince the task force that there must be another alternative besides closing the high schools in Wilson and Morganton.

Reverse Peace Corps

WASHINGTON — Former secretary of state Cyrus Vance is not what you'd call an extravagant guy who engages in political hyperbole. The low-key New York lawyer is a thoughtful, principled gentleman who is more likely to remain silent at the dinner table than gab about Cybill Shepherd's latest performance in "Moonlighting."

So when Cy Vance expounds, as he did recently before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, that our allies no longer trust us, there is reason for concern.

Vance, of course, is not alone in his assessment. Foreign newspapers have used words like "shabby," "deceitful" and "duplicitous" to register their displeasure with the Reagan administration's decision to sell arms secretly to Iran. For all too many people, the Iran decision makes as much sense as releasing Charles Manson from prison with a guide map to movie stars' homes.

Despite the work of Pat Buchanan, Charles Wick and the United States Information Agency, the U.S. still suffers from an image problem.

Besides removing amateurs from managing American foreign policy, what option does one pursue to help outsiders better understand the United States and its people?

An idea being floated on Capitol Hill could improve America's image and go far in separating the people from their government, Hollywood and Madison Avenue. It's a new twist to an old idea: forming a "Reverse Peace Corps" of Third World volunteers who'd come to the United States to teach their native languages and work in various development projects which would benefit the U.S., while learning about the real America.

Such a project would not divert from the agency's principles. The Peace Corps was founded on three basic ideas: to offer technical assistance to the Third World; to learn about other cultures; and to teach foreigners about America. A Reverse Peace Corps would accomplish the latter two goals.

"If we had a Reverse Peace Corps in place in a foreign policy crisis like today," admits Lewis Greenstein, a Peace Corps planner, "thousands of foreigners wouldn't be so willing to tar all Americans with the brush of our government, as I'm sure they're now doing."

More than 120,000 Peace Corps volunteers have returned to the United States and entered American life with a broader understanding of other cultures during the past 25 years. Within the next decade, Greenstein and others would like to see half as many foreign volunteers doing likewise here. He believes the practice would enrich the volunteers, their native societies and ours as well.

According to Greenstein, the Reverse Peace Corps idea was originally introduced during the late 1960s as part of an Organization for Economic Opportunity (OEO) test project that brought 50 foreigners to American Indian reservations and mental hospitals. It failed because of a lack of funds and direction.

Of course, Third World nations are also struggling with a brain-drain that has badly sapped them of human resources. They might be reluctant to send their best and brightest.

But a bigger problem is Gramm-Rudman-Hollings. Peace Corps director Loret Miller Ruppe, an heiress to the Miller Brewing fortune and a George Bush ally, has fought for every dime in the agency's budget. Yet Congress has only given her $130 million, which is less than half of the money the Pentagon receives for its marching bands and only $15 million more than the Peace Corps operated on in 1967.

That a slimmed-down Peace Corps has survived is a miracle. More than 200,000 individuals sought information about the agency in 1986, a 20 percent increase over 1985. And though the average age of recruits is 28.5 years, up from 23 in the 1960s, there is no lack of enthusiasm. There is no reason to suspect that similarly ambitious volunteers don't exist abroad.

Why the Reagan White House doesn't seize on a publicity coup like the "Reverse Peace Corps" is baffling. A message that emphasizes building bridges for peace and understanding is just the hook Uncle Sam needs.

Strength For Today

There are three Greek words for love. One is "philia," meaning friendship and good will. Another is "eros," meaning romantic or sexual love. The third is "agape."

The latter is a strictly Biblical word for which there is no single equivalent in English. As used in the 13th chapter of I Corinthians it is translated as both "charity" and "love." But even these translations are inadequate to convey the true meaning of agape. It is an emotion and a moral purpose people have because they are children of God, because they are made in God's image and after his likeness. It signifies also the love God has for mankind, and the love he expects men to show toward their fellows.

The life of agape is the noblest life of which mankind is capable. "Agape never faileth."

Dealing With 'Topic A'

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Ronald Reagan goes to Capitol Hill on Tuesday, following in the footsteps of George Washington to report on the State of the Union, some congressional Republicans are counting on him to deal not only with the economy and national security but also with Topic A.

Topic A, of course, is the Iran-Contra scandal, a subject on which Reagan has been doggedly silent for weeks. Some lawmakers see his address — broadcast live from the ornate chamber of the House of Representatives — as a critical opportunity to begin to reassert his leadership and restore Americans' confidence in him.

Publicly, White House officials say it has not been determined even if Reagan will deal with the subject. "I don't think it's been ruled out or ruled in," insisted White House deputy press secretary Albert R. Brashear.

However, it seems inconceivable he could ignore it. "I'm sure he will touch on it," said a senior White House official, speaking privately. "He's going to deal with it," another senior White House aide said.

There will be no apology from Reagan, as suggested by some, and apparently no major exposition or chronology of events. "It's a 30-minute speech and you've got a lot to say" on subjects other than Iran-Contra, one of the officials added.

Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, chairman of the Ripon Society, a liberal GOP organization, said a statement on the Iran-Contra matter should be a substantial part of the State of the Union.

Analysis

"It's going to be very interesting whether he can paper over with words a replacement for action," Leach said.

"The White House has been experimenting with words and experimenting with time, and both experiments have failed," he added. "The American public wants this issue concluded, but the only way to conclude it is to reveal all and replace many (on the White House staff)."

At the other end of the political spectrum, conservative Republican Rep. Henry Hyde of Illinois said Reagan "should explain the rationale for the Iran initiative and assume personal responsibility, rather than simply saying mistakes were made."

The congressman added, "I think it would be a mistake to underestimate the power of Ronald Reagan to come back from this diversion and this distraction, this serious problem, and be effective. I would not underrate that at all."

The scandal, involving the sale of arms to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, has damaged U.S. credibility abroad and undermined Reagan's image at home.

A poll by the Gallup organization, published Jan. 15, said 42 percent of people surveyed believe the Iran-Contra case is so serious that it has hurt Reagan's ability to run the country.

The survey said that 46 percent of Americans say Reagan is generally "not believable," while 38 percent said he is holding back information to protect himself and others.

A CBS-New York Times poll in early December said 47 percent of people surveyed believed Reagan was lying when he denied knowing anything about the diversion of profits to the Contras.

A senior administration official, speaking on condition he not be identified, said the White House is still trying to calculate how the scandal, combined with the Democratic takeover of the Senate, will affect Reagan's ability to work with Congress.

"Exactly what the makeup and the chemistry is going to be, we don't know yet," the official said. "I think that will become clearer after both the House and Senate ... spend a couple of weeks working. We'll have a better handle on how we are going to handle some of the issues."

Leach said Reagan, in his address Tuesday, must make clear that "trading hostages for arms will not be contended in the future and that legal aspects of going beyond the law for whatever motives in Central America will not be contended."

Terence Hunt has covered Ronald Reagan since his 1980 campaign for the presidency and throughout his six years in the White House.

Helms' Changeover Casts Doubt On Tobacco's Fate

RALEIGH (AP) — Some tobacco-state congressmen are wondering what perils await the federal tobacco program since the new chairman and ranking minority member of the Senate Agriculture Committee are both opponents of tobacco.

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was chairman of the Agriculture Committee for the last two years while Republicans controlled the Senate. But Tuesday, Helms defeated Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., in a vote of Senate Republicans for the ranking minority spot on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

That means that Lugar will become the ranking minority member on the Agriculture Committee, which will be chaired by Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt. Both Lugar and Leahy previously have opposed the tobacco program.

"Certainly, there is a potential there for an adverse effect on the tobacco program," Rep. Martin Lancaster, a Democrat from Goldsboro, said in an interview. "I would suspect the manner in which he (Lugar) was disposed from foreign relations did not create any warm feelings for Sen. Helms or issues important to Sen. Helms."

Rep. Charles Rose, a Democrat from Fayetteville who has differed with Helms over the tobacco program, said Lugar opposed both the leaf program and a similar federal program for peanuts.

"We've just got to find a way to change some of his attitudes," Rose said. "We're going to have to do a lot of missionary work with Mr. Lugar on tobacco and peanuts."

Rose said Leahy's opposition to the tobacco program was blunted to some degree because of his desire to protect the federal price support program for the dairy industry, which is vital to Vermont.

"We have always had a finely tuned relationship between dairy and tobacco people," Rose said.

Lugar declined to discuss the tobacco program Tuesday, but Helms, who is still a member of the agriculture committee, said there is ample support in Congress to protect the program.

"Dick Lugar is a fair man, and he's bound to know that with this tobacco reform legislation that was adopted in 1985 it does not involve a subsidy and never has," Helms said. "There is not a great likelihood that anybody will be able to hurt a program that is working, that is not costing the taxpayer."

Former Rep. Charlie Whitley, now a lobbyist for the Tobacco Institute, said the program was "pretty well stabilized right now. I don't know of anybody who has plans to do anything with the program this year."

Scientists Begin Study Of Hatteras Inlet Whale

HATTERAS, N.C. (AP) — Jim Mead of the Smithsonian Institution has discovered that filleting a 50-ton sperm whale is no easy operation.

"This is a new experience for us," Mead, curator of the marine mammal program at the Smithsonian, said Wednesday. "I'm not quite sure how we'll proceed."

Scientists Wednesday floated the remains of the giant whale from the Hatteras Inlet Coast Guard station to a flat stretch of beach at the tip of Hatteras Island.

The carcass has been decomposing since it was found Sunday, and Coast Guardsmen said they were happy to see it leave its temporary resting spot.

For more than five hours Wednesday, the team of guardsmen and scientists tried to pull, push and roll the remains of the rare, fully mature male whale onto the dry sand. But two trucks and a bulldozer proved useless against the whale's bulk, and it remained immovable about 25 feet offshore.

"I think it was just too much for them," Chief Petty Officer Bertie Pittman, commander of the Hatteras Inlet station, told The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star of Norfolk, Va. Pittman said more than 1,000 sightseers have gawked at the whale since it was berthed Sunday.

With the whale wallowing in about three feet of water, scientists began the week-long task late Wednesday of cutting away 30 tons of blubber using large flensing knives designed specially to skin the animals. The remains will either be buried at the site or trucked to the Dare County landfill near East Lake.

Eventually, the scientists will enter and explore the giant's soupy insides and preserve its skeleton in an effort to learn more about the male sperm whale, which officially is listed on the nation's endangered species roster.

Hatteras Inlet whale was actually the third male sperm whale seen in the state in recent years, and by far the largest.

One recovered last year near Cape Lookout was never adequately studied because scientists were unable to beach the carcass. They destroyed it using dynamite, Bowen said.

The beaching operation Wednesday attracted about 30 onlookers, including Lucille Lamberto of Roper. She and her friend, Dr. Candace Corson of Edenton, had gotten up at 5:30 Wednesday morning to drive down to Hatteras to see the whale.

"We studied whales in the Encyclopedia Britannica this morning before we left," Ms. Lamberto said. "We figured it was as long as from the front of our house to the back."

Her son, Josia, wasn't as impressed. He scrunched his nose at the smell wafting from the whale and frowned. "It's not that exciting to wake up at 5:30," he said, "and come and see a dead whale."

Bootlegger Is Killed

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A convicted Wayne county bootlegger was shot to death Tuesday night in the driveway of his home and two men have been charged with murder in the case, officials said.

Wayne Red Smith, 57, of Goldsboro died about 6 p.m. of a single gunshot wound in his chest. Lt. David Earl Lewis of the sheriff's department said.

Bill Vester Coker, 51, of LaGrange and Ralph Harvey Barfield, 62, of Goldsboro were jailed without bond.

Smith had been convicted of possession of equipment with intent to make nontax paid whiskey, illegal manufacturer of liquor, manufacturing alcohol and possession and sale of nontax paid whiskey.

Sheriff James Sasser said Coker was armed with two weapons when arrested in a field near Smith's home.

"He had one in his hand and one in his pocket," he said.

Lewis said a handgun was used in the shooting but an autopsy would be required to identify the firearm used.

Three More Charged In Bogus Class Case

JACKSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Three employees of Cape Fear Technical Institute's Pender County branch have been charged in connection with a bogus class scheme that investigators say bilked the school of at least $1.4 million.

Michael D. Bonner, 42, a director of continuing education, was charged with one county of conspiracy and 36 counts of embezzlement by a state employee. John Jesse Braswell, 54, a director of continuing education, and Mary Ruth Pyland, 46, a secretary, were each charged with one count of embezzlement by a state employee.

The arrests Wednesday bring to five the number of people charged in the scheme so far, and prosecutors say more charges are expected.

David Marshall, SBI supervisor in Jacksonville, said Bonner remains in jail under a $550,195 bond. Braswell was released on $10,000 bond and Ms. Pyland on $5,000 bond, he said.

Marshall said the maximum sentence for a conspiracy conviction is 10 years, and 20 years for each embezzlement conviction.

Earlier this month, Richard T. Pigford, 41, was charged on 13 counts of obtaining property by false pretenses while a part-time supervisor in the school's Pender County continuing education division. Carol Newton, 31, a part-time supervisor at the school, faces 11 counts of obtaining property by false pretenses as a result of contracts signed in 1980.

Ban Sought On Cotton Pesticide

NEW YORK (AP) — Environmentalists are calling for an immediate halt in the manufacture and sale of the pesticide chlordimeform, saying precautions to protect workers from exposure to the cancer-causing chemical may be inadequate.

A report on the possible hazards of chlordimeform was released Wednesday by the Pesticide Action Network, a coalition of about 300 organizations including the Sierra Club, the National Wildlife Federation, Greenpeace and the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The pesticide has been shown to cause cancer in mice but not in humans.

In the United States, chlordimeform is allowed to be used only to control insect pests in cotton, but it is used elsewhere in the world on food crops, suggesting it could enter the food chain, said Karim Ahmed, who wrote the 15-page report. He is a biochemist with the Natural Resources Defense Council here.

The pesticide is produced by several manufacturers, among them the Ciba-Geigy Corporation, which markets it under the trade name Galecron.

Chlordimeform was introduced in 1968 for use on fruit, vegetables and cotton, said Skip Ragland, spokesman for Ciba-Geigy's agricultural division in Greensboro, N.C.

It was withdrawn in 1976 after tests showed it caused rare cancer tumors of the blood vessels in two strains of laboratory mice.

Continued testing showed the pesticide did not produce cancer in rats, dogs or other laboratory animals, so it was re-introduced in 1978, Ragland said.

"After we developed some measures which could reduce exposure or keep it at an acceptable level, we brought the product back on the market only for use on cotton," he said in a telephone interview.

Ciba-Geigy and Ahmed agree that chlordimeform causes cancer in animals but disagree on whether it is possible to protect workers from exposure to it.

The company decided within the past month to recommend withdrawing sale of the pesticide in Central and South America because the company could not be certain that label instructions intended to prevent human exposure were being followed, Ragland said.

"In the United States, we feel completely different about that," Ragland said in a telephone interview.

"I would say we need more data," said Ahmed. "What they have to give us is urine analysis of the workers who are in fact exposed to the compound, to find out if the exposure is as low as they claim it to be."

"It's dangerous work," said Smithsonian researcher Bill McLellan, who later this week will venture inside the whale's carcass to study what's left of its organs. "The knives are really sharp, and there's so much animal that you can just slide right in (to an incision) and disappear."

The team also is concerned the whale might literally explode. Heat is slow to leave a whale's body because of its mass, McLellan said, and a rapid release of pent-up gases might rupture the entire carcass.

The whale is now believed by Mead and others to be the largest male sperm whale ever recovered on the Atlantic Coast. Though official measurements had not been taken late Wednesday, they estimate the 20- to 40-year-old beast could reach 60 feet in length.

Because male sperm whales are so rare, little is known about their movements, anatomy and diets, other than that they feast mostly on squid. Though the Smithsonian team probably won't learn much from the whale's interior, McLellan said retrieving the skeleton was important because "we don't have any large skeletons we know anything about."

The bones, which researchers will remove piecemeal and pile on the beach, will give clues to the whale's age and fitness, and might shed light on how the creature died.

Lead Contamination Threat Prompts Fear

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Neighbors of a city water tank blamed for lead contamination of the soil say they are concerned about the possible long-term effects of the metal on their health.

Sandblasting of the tank to remove a 39-year-old coat of lead-based paint was halted after a resident questioned the environmental hazard of dust created by the process. Soil tests revealed a lead content that a state health official described as "three to four times the hazard level."

"There was a constant settling of sand," said David Page, 31, an English teacher at Fayetteville Technical Institute who lives in the shadow of the tank. "It fell like in snow storms. You could hear it; it sounded like hail. It landed on my house, and it would be all over my car in the morning. It scratched the paint and windshield. I'd turn on the fan and it would blow out all over the car."

Page is well above the 6-year-old-and-under age group that has been targeted for free blood checks after the lead was discovered. But he worries about the residual effects of what was a nuisance long before it was suspected to be a hazard.

"I don't go out and eat dirt, but obviously I'm tracking it in every time," he said. "And I don't know if it filtered in through the attic. I think I would like to have the county pay to have me checked."

Charlene Wiggins, a lead epidemiologist with the Division of Health Services, said children under 6 are most susceptible to the effects of lead contamination.

Some of the problems are sleeping difficulties, learning problems, weak or tired a lot of the time, loss of appetite, constipation or diarrhea, she said. "If they continue to be exposed to the lead and not treated, it can run into mental retardation, loss of hearing and blindness, and in rare situations a child can slip into a coma and die."

"They should have been a little more careful and examined the paint before they went as far as they did," said neighbor Albert Taylor. "That certainly wasn't a very smart thing to do without checking the paint."

State approval is required before any project that affects a public water supply can be initiated.

James Stamey, who heads the state Environmental Health Division, said the Fayetteville Public Works Commission followed guidelines by retaining a consulting engineer to draw up specifications for the work. Stamey said the plan was submitted to his office and approved.

Taft Backed

RALEIGH (AP) — The chairman of the North Carolina Industrial Commission has backed proposals to raise the amount of money injured workers can collect.

David Brooks said he supported bills proposed by Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt. Key changes would raise the maximum weekly compensation above the current $308 per week, do away with a seven-day waiting period that forces many injured employees to take sick leave instead of money and extend the commission's jurisdiction to employers of one or more persons, instead of the current four or more persons.

crombie announced he would retire Feb. 1. But commissioners said this week it was not the right time for consolidation.

"There are more negatives than pluses," said commission chairman Carla Dupuy. "If it ain't broke, don't fix it."

Denny Named

RALEIGH (AP) — The director of tobacco affairs for the North Carolina Department of Agriculture has been named an assistant commissioner in the agency effective Feb. 1.

Weldon B. Denny will replace Melvin H. Hearn, who has held the assistant commissioner's position since January 1975. Hearn will retire Jan. 31.

Denny was a 31-year employee with the U.S. Department of Agriculture, Agricultural Stabilization Conservation Service. He was N.C. executive director from 1977 to 1980. After retirement, he joined the NCDA as a commodity inspector.

MADD Proposals

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina chapter of Mothers Against Drunk Driving plans to ask the 1987 General Assembly to pass tougher measures in dealing with drunken drivers.

- The measures include:
- Immediate 30-day license revocation upon registering .10 percent or greater blood alcohol content.
 - Outlawing all open containers of alcoholic beverages in moving vehicles.
 - Impounding license plates of repeat offenders at time of arrest.
 - Raising court costs so offenders pay the true costs of using the courts.
 - Increasing money for alcohol and drug education in public schools.

Bottled Water

PEACHTREE, N.C. (AP) — Bottled water was put in Ruth Rogers' Small World Child Care Center after traces of three chemicals found in cleaning solvents were discovered in the center's well.

State officials have advised the day-care center, two nearby businesses and four households to drink only bottled water after traces of the solvents were found two weeks ago in the well they share in the Peachtree community.

Health officials told Ms. Rogers the day-care center could use the well water for all other uses. The center rinses all cooking and heating utensils with bottled water, Ms. Rogers said.

The source of the contamination has not been discovered.

Congress Dares Reagan To Veto Clean Water Bill

By DAVID GOELLER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The 100th Congress is sending President Reagan a big-bucks water-quality bill and some free advice to go along with it: veto the popular legislation again at your own risk.

"The veto will be quickly overridden," Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I., said Wednesday moments after the Senate voted 93-6 for legislation that is identical to a 1986 bill that Reagan pocket-vetoed as too costly after the 99th Congress adjourned and was unable to take override votes.

The bill's floor manager, Sen. George Mitchell, D-Maine, joined Chafee in urging a presidential turnaround. "This is the worst possible time and the worst possible issue for the president to engage in a confrontation with Congress," said Mitchell, referring to the Iran-Contra controversy.

Conversely, Mitchell said by withholding a veto, Reagan "would spare himself enormous difficulty and avoid another self-inflicted wound... There is nothing wrong with going along with the American people."

All but the most conservative administration loyalists joined in support of the $20 billion bill, which would reauthorize and strengthen the Clean Water Act of 1972, one of the nation's most successful environmental programs.

"The time has passed for the administration to circle its wagons and hope to survive a veto override attempt," said Sen. Robert Kasten, R-Wis. "If the president doesn't sign this, not only will his veto be overridden by Congress but he will have been saddled with a major political defeat in his first battle with the 100th Congress."

The congressional numbers are decidedly against Reagan. The House passed the legislation 406-8 on Jan. 8. And just before the Senate passed it, senators voted 82-17 against an administration substitute costing $6 billion less.

The 17 votes received by the White House plan were half the number Reagan would need to sustain a veto in the Senate if all members were present and voting on the override question.

There was no comment from the White House after the clean-water bill became the first legislation passed by the new Congress — exactly as promised by lawmakers after the 1986 bill was vetoed.

Earlier Wednesday, White House spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The president's advisers will wholeheartedly recommend that he veto it" a second time.

Congress and the White House are fighting over how much federal aid states should get to help build more of the wastewater and sewage treatment plants that have been credited with cleaning up many of the nation's waterways.

Congress wants to provide $18 billion more before ending the construction grants program in 1994. The Environmental Protection Agency estimates that $108 billion worth of treatment facilities are needed by 2000.

WASHINGTON — The House and Senate are expected to pass another clean water bill to spend billions of dollars on the nation's water treatment systems.

The House bill would fund $20 billion more for transit, construction and other projects. The Senate Public Works Committee four-year bill would provide $18 billion more.

Ever since the House decided to give funding for transportation assistance, it has been pressing the money bill through the House.

Bennett Wants Stronger Sex Education Courses

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett called on school board leaders today to insist that sex education courses teach children not to fornicate.

Bennett said sex education courses that do not teach such moral values are worthless.

And noting that 1 million teenagers become pregnant in the United States each year, and more than half of teens lose their virginity by age 17, Bennett said, "It is doubtful that much sex education is doing any good at all."

The remarks came in a speech prepared for delivery today at a National School Boards Association conference on "Building Character in Public Schools." Bennett's department gave the group an $83,233 grant to host the meeting.

Bennett lashed out anew at a report issued last month by the National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences, which called for making contraceptives "available to all teen-agers at low or no cost."

Bennett, a frequent critic of school clinics that distribute birth control pills, condoms and other contraceptives, said the National Research Council displayed "an extravagantly single-minded blindness" in proposing that solution.

It "betrays a view of sex and of life that is dangerous for our children" by suggesting that pleasure or getting pregnant or avoiding a disease are "the only things that matter about sexual activity."

Bennett said polls have shown most parents want sex education taught in the schools, but they also want their children to be told not to engage in sexual intercourse before marriage.

"Why not say in schools to students exactly what most American parents say at home: Children should not engage in sexual intercourse," Bennett said. "Why isn't this message being taught in more classrooms?"

He urged the school board members "to follow your common sense. Don't be intimidated by the sexologists, by the so-called sex experts, by the sex technicians."

"If sex education courses do not help in the effort to provide an education in character, then let them be gone from the presence of our children," he said.

"A sex education course in which issues of right and wrong do not occupy center stage is an evasion and an irresponsibility," he said.

Seventy percent of all high school seniors had taken sex education courses in 1985, up from 60 percent in 1976, Bennett said. But "40 percent of today's 14-year-old girls will become pregnant by the time they are 19."

Too many instructors have banished "the words of morality" from their lexicon, he said, and too many materials leave the impression that "comfort alone (has) now become our moral compass."

Bennett said children must be taught the basic facts of life, but "in a moral context." Most parents, he added, "would gratefully welcome help in transmitting such values. And I don't think they would view this as indoctrination."

He said nine out of 10 of the girls under 16 surveyed by a teen services program at Atlanta's Grady Memorial Hospital "wanted to learn how to say 'no.'"

"This is not just Reagan and Bennett talking — it's girls under 16 talking," Bennett said.

U.S. Prepares New Arms Package For Middle East

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has approached Congress with a plan to improve Jordan's anti-aircraft missiles and Saudi Arabia's jet fighter planes through weapons deals with the two Middle Eastern countries that could ignite a fight with Israel's supporters, informed sources say.

The deal with Jordan would meet a persistent request from King Hussein that the 14 Hawk anti-aircraft missile batteries supplied by the United States in the mid-1970s be made mobile.

Congress has blocked new U.S. weapons sales to Jordan until Hussein showed he was willing to negotiate peace terms with Israel.

The deal with Saudi Arabia would install electronic devices called "countermeasures" on 105 F-5 and 60 F-15 jets already purchased by the oil-rich kingdom from the United States.

The sources, declining to be identified, said Wednesday night mobile Hawks would be an offensive threat to Israel and improving the Saudi jets would conflict with an agreement with Congress not to make the warplanes more powerful.

The Reagan administration has held off notifying Congress of its intentions until it assesses reaction on Capitol Hill. Both purchases would require Congressional approval.

In another move, also unannounced, Congress was told the United States was selling Jordan 100 Copperhead anti-tank artillery shells worth $5 million. In this case, no Congressional approval is necessary.

The Jordanian and Saudi monarchs are considered by the State Department to be supportive of U.S.

peace efforts in the Middle East.

Hussein tried last year to get the backing of the Palestine Liberation Organization to negotiate with Israel. He failed, gave up the effort and said last week the United States had "near-zero" credibility as a peacemaker because of a pro-Israel stance.

The administration has notified Congress, meanwhile, that it intends to sell F-16 jet fighters to Bahrain and Bradley armored vehicles to Saudi Arabia, the State Department said.

Mistrial Declared In Police Scandal

MIAMI (AP) — New trials planned against seven police officers will keep the corruption charges that have wracked the department from dropping out of public scrutiny, the mayor said after a juror's dissent in court forced a mistrial.

U.S. District Judge Kenneth L. Ryskamp declared the mistrial Wednesday on charges that the seven men were members of a $15 million cocaine ripoff ring that was involved in the deaths of three men.

Mayor Xavier Suarez called the mistrial the worst possible outcome.

"I'm not at all looking forward to another year of this matter being in the public eye, in this community and the nation," he said.

The trial and related administrative charges have wracked the police department. At least 30 of its 1,050 members have been hit with criminal or administrative charges since corruption scandals became public in 1985.

More than 170 witnesses testified during the 3½-month racketeering trial. Prosecutors tried to prove that the defendants were members of a cocaine ring that shook down users and dealers and then sold the drugs to other traffickers.

The mistrial throws out all verdicts and means prosecutors must start over.

"We will go to trial on all the counts we went to trial on before, plus more," said federal prosecutor Michael P. Sullivan. He did not elaborate on what the new charges might be.

The jury Wednesday returned guilty verdicts against Armando Estrada, 27, and Roman Rodriguez, 30, on racketeering and racketeering conspiracy as well as several drug charges.

But the panel, which had been sequestered during its 10½ days of deliberation, could reach no verdict on a variety of charges against the five other defendants.

Japan, U.S. Renew Pledge To Stabilize Currencies

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials of the United States and Japan, struggling to cope with growing trade tensions between the two nations, are once again pledging to cooperate in an effort to promote economic growth and stabilize currency rates.

Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and Japanese Finance Minister Kiichi Miyazawa issued a joint statement following a 2½ hour meeting late Wednesday in which both sides "reaffirmed their willingness" to work together in managing the exchange rate between the Japanese yen and the American dollar.

The hastily arranged meeting had been requested by the Japanese, who were alarmed at the rapid slide in the value of the dollar against the yen in the past week. On Monday, the dollar hit a 37-year low of 150.45 Japanese yen.

After moving up to 154.40 yen for this morning's opening in Tokyo, the dollar plunged again, closing the session at 152.40. An official of a major Japanese bank, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said dealers decided "there was nothing new" resulting from the meeting in Washington.

The slide to Monday's low had been precipitated by published reports quoting Reagan administration officials saying they wanted the dollar to decline in order to correct America's huge trade deficit.

A cheaper dollar makes foreign-made goods more expensive for American consumers while making U.S. products cheaper on overseas markets.

The Reagan administration is under growing congressional pressure to do something about the trade deficit, which is expected to top $170 billion when final figures are available for 1986, with one-third of that imbalance coming in trade with Japan.

Administration officials said countries such as Japan and West Germany must do more to stimulate domestic growth in order to expand markets for American products or the dollar will have to fall farther as a way of correcting the trade imbalances.

That talk has put world currency markets in an uproar and precipitated the sharp drop in the dollar's value, a decline that some economists have warned could threaten to bring a return of high inflation in this country.

In their new agreement, Baker and Miyazawa reaffirmed their support for an earlier joint statement issued on Oct. 31 in which both countries pledged to work together to stabilize the yen-dollar exchange rate.

The new statement called the sharp drop in the dollar temporary, with both officials restating "their willingness to cooperate on exchange market issues."

Baker did not speak to reporters following the meeting, but Miyazawa held a news conference in which he said he was satisfied with the assurances he had received from Baker.

"The objective of my visit has been fully achieved," he said, speaking through a translator.

Miyazawa, however, sidestepped all questions about what types of actions the two countries might take to fulfill the new pledge.

Earlier reports said it was likely the central bank of Japan would cut its discount rate, the rate it charges to make commercial bank loans, as a way to hasten economic growth. There also were reports a West German discount rate cut was imminent.

The Reagan administration has been seeking such cuts from both countries as well as other government actions such as tax cuts to stimulate growth.

Miyazawa refused to say whether Baker had made any commitments that the United States would join with Japan in intervening to purchase dollars on the open market in order to prop up the price of the dollar.

Market analysts called such intervention unlikely, but they said the Reagan administration probably will cease its verbal warfare aimed at talking the value of the dollar down, an action they predicted will calm traders' jitters over holding dollars.

Federal Reserve Chairman Paul Volcker, who has in the past taken issue with administration efforts to push for a lower dollar, on Wednesday repeated warnings that a precipitous drop in the value of the dollar could worsen inflation in this country and push up interest rates as the United States is forced to pay more for the foreign investment it needs to finance the huge U.S. budget deficit.

"I don't think I have any disagreement with the administration," he said. "I think there is a consensus on this point."

Economy Makes Poorest Showing Since 1982 Loss

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. economy, held back by a soaring trade deficit, grew at an anemic 2.5 percent rate for all of 1986, the poorest performance since the last recession, the government reported today.

The growth in the gross national product was far below the Reagan administration's expectations when the year began and was, in fact, the weakest showing since an actual decline of 2.5 percent in the recession year of 1982.

In 1983, the first year of the recovery, the GNP grew 3.6 percent followed by an even more robust 6.4 percent rise in 1984, the best performance in more than three decades.

But since that time, economic growth has turned decidedly weaker. The economy grew just 2.7 percent in 1985, a rate similar to last year's 2.5 percent growth.

While the Reagan administration is predicting a substantial pickup in activity for 1987, many analysts believe growth this year will show little improvement from the past two years.

In an ominous sign for the future, the government reported that growth during the final three months of 1986 slumped to an annual rate of just 1.7 percent, substantially below a 2.8 percent growth rate in the July-September quarter.

Analysts are warning that growth is likely to weaken even more in the current January-March period based on adverse impacts from the massive overhaul of the income tax code.

For 1986, inflation, as measured by a price index tied to the GNP, turned in its best performance since 1967. The GNP deflator rose just 2.5 percent for the year, as a dramatic plunge in oil prices kept the lid on costs.

The poor economic showing in the fourth quarter was a big disappointment for the Reagan administration, which had been expecting a growth rate better than the third quarter.

Much of the weakness came in a 0.5 percent decline in personal consumption spending, the first drop in this category since the 1981-82 recession.

Economists closely monitor consumer spending because it accounts for two-thirds of GNP activity.

Analysts are worried that American consumers, already burdened by high debt loads, will begin cutting back on purchases, a situation that would lead to even weaker growth in the future.

Analysts still believe the economy will avoid a recession this year because they expect that the huge trade deficit, which has been a drag on growth for the past two years, will start showing improvements this year.

That improvement began in a modest way in the fourth quarter, which showed exports rising a sharp 16.1 percent, overshadowing a 4.8 percent rise in imports.

But the trade figures, like all of the fourth quarter numbers are based on incomplete data because the December trade deficit will not be reported until later this month. If that figure is weaker than the estimate used to prepare the GNP report, then the overall growth rate of 1.7 percent would drop even further.

The various changes left the GNP, after adjusting for inflation, at $3.702 trillion in the fourth quarter and at $3.676 trillion for the entire year.

For the fourth quarter, the GNP price deflator rose just 1.0 percent,

FBI Arrests Long-Sought Suspect In Bomb Attempt

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A founder of the Weather Underground wanted since the 1970 attempted bombing of an ROTC building was caught after someone recognized him from a wanted poster, authorities say.

Silas Trim Bissell, 44, was ordered held Wednesday without bond pending a hearing Friday.

Bissell, a once-promising poet who had been living under the name Terence Peter Jackson and working as a physical therapist, was arrested Tuesday night at his home in this western Oregon university city, said FBI agent Norman Mollerup, who had been tracking Bissell for 14 years.

"Trim promptly admitted his identity and behaved like a perfect gentleman," Mollerup told a federal magistrate Wednesday. "He's likable. He's the type of person who if you met him you never would suspect he was anything other than a caring, nice guy."

Bissell, the heir to the founder of the carpet sweeping company, was once described by the FBI as extremely dangerous. He was believed to be a founder of the Weathermen, a violent Students for a Democratic Society faction that later changed its name to Weather Underground.

He was charged with conspiracy to damage federal property and possession of an unregistered destructive device. If convicted of both charges, he faces a maximum sentence of 15 years in prison and a $20,000 fine.

SILAS T. BISSELL

In Washington, U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese cited the arrest as an example of the FBI's determination to counter domestic terrorism.

Bissell had been living in Eugene for at least the past six years, said Mollerup, who hunted him in Puerto Rico in 1973 and was transferred here two years ago.

"It's ironic that he wound up here," said the agent, who was also involved in the investigation of newspaper heiress Patty Hearst's 1974 kidnapping by the Symbionese Liberation Army.

Mollerup said new clues led authorities to Bissell, a former Vietnam War protester wanted for allegedly planting a bomb in an Air Force ROTC building on the University of Washington's Seattle campus.

Someone who knew Jackson contacted police saying he resembled Bissell in a wanted poster, said FBI spokesman Bart Gori in Portland. "I think it was a kind of typical, routine thing. It was a look-alike sort of call, which we get thousands of."

Bissell's neighbors and co-workers described the man they knew as Jackson as intelligent and friendly.

"I'd like people to know that this was a nice guy," said Anna May Herbert, a nurse who has worked with Bissell at Sacred Heart General Hospital since 1981.

"I consider him brilliant, smart at least, and outspoken in a way," said Tim Foley, a physical therapist who supervised Bissell's internship in 1981. "He didn't talk much about his past, of course."

Bissell has a master's degree in literature and won several poetry awards before disappearing. He taught at Earlham College in Richmond, Ind., and at Wayne State University in Detroit.

He lived in Eugene with a companion, Shirley Atwood, who refused to be interviewed.

Modern Textile Mill Reverses Production

By MIKE HENDRICKS
Associated Press Writer
COBLESKILL, N.Y. (AP) —

Thanks to the savvy of an innovative entrepreneur who defied international economic forces, the textile industry is thriving in this small upstate New York village known more for farms than fabric.

Nationwide, more than 250 textile plants have closed and 350,000 textile, fiber and apparel workers have lost their jobs in the last six years, according to the American Textile Manufacturers Institute in Washington.

But business is brisk at the textile mills operated by Bruno Hofmann.

In the 10 years since Hofmann opened his Interknitting Ltd. with 10 employees at the site of an abandoned textile mill, the company has prospered.

The work force has grown to 240 employees at Hofmann's two mills, making Interknitting and its subsidiary the largest private business in this quiet village of 5,000 people. Hofmann's textile mill is the largest private employer in Schoharie County and his new plants are the only occupants of the village's new industrial park.

In addition to the original mill, Hofmann purchased another company, American Rebers Zwieme, and moved it from Shelby, N.C., a year ago, reversing the historical migration of textile firms out of upstate New York to the South.

"We're glad he's here," said Mayor Leon E. Wilson. "It has certainly been beneficial to our community."

Hofmann said he located his plants in Cobleskill because he wanted to be near the Canadian and American markets — and out of an unawareness of the South's economic benefits.

"We are here only out of practicality and ignorance," he said. "We wanted to be between the Canadian and American market and close to a finishing plant. That is the practicality. And I had never been to the South; that is the ignorance."

The nearby finishing plant that played a role in locating his operations in Cobleskill has since closed. Electrical costs in upstate New York are double what he would pay in the South, Hofmann said, and there is a problem finding experienced industrial workers around Cobleskill.

But business has been so good that Interknitting now operates 24 hours a day. In the last year, production has doubled on state-of-the-art, automated European knitting machinery while construction continues on yet another expansion.

Hofmann's mills maintain a low profile, and he would not talk about the companies' revenues.

"That would sound like bragging, but we produce 500,000 yards of fabric a week, and that is a lot of fabric," he said.

"It is hard, but we are showing that the impossible is possible," said Hofmann. "If you're modern and specialized, there will be a market."

Hofmann developed a niche in the tough textile market by producing bulk rolls of designed fabric, sold to companies that turn it into such household items as shower curtains and tablecloths.

"We take styles and designs from Europe and make them popularly priced," Hofmann said.

Interknitting introduces new styles twice a year and has a research and development staff of six design specialists with eight knitting machines working on new product designs, Hofmann said.

"We have a little factory doing nothing but development," Hofmann said. "We take entrepreneur risks. We put our neck out if we believe in something. We have no secrets. Just hard work, and a portion of good luck. You need luck, no question of that."

Although Hofmann had done well against foreign imports, he said it is a constant struggle.

Waving a sample of Taiwanese nylon fabric selling for $1.25, Hofmann said he would be complaining to U.S. Customs officials. "There is no way that can be produced for $1.25," he said. "That is dumping."

The term dumping is used to describe the practice of selling goods at below cost in order to grab a greater share of the market.

Despite the foreign imports that have been blamed for decimating much of the American textile industry, Hofmann said he is confident the industry will survive.

"I don't think the textile industry will ever disappear. I say we cannot afford to let textiles disappear."

"We have underdeveloped countries right here in the United States, places like upstate New York and West Virginia where you do not have a high-tech work force. We need factory jobs for people who are just people," Hofmann said.

'Executive Privilege' History Given DAR

The history of a U.S. President's "executive privilege" to withhold information from Congress was discussed by Donnie Bunn at the meeting of the Susanna Coutanch Evans chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Bunn is a government and history teacher at Conley High School. He spoke at the January meeting.

Executive privilege dates back to the presidency of George Washington, Bunn said. Other notable instances in which "executive privilege" were invoked occurred during the terms of Jefferson, Jackson, Tyler, Grant and Theodore Roosevelt.

"Each president has had his own concept of what executive privilege means," Bunn said.

Chapter regent Anne Briley announced that several members will accompany the three local student nominees for the DAR Good Citizens Award to District DAR Good Citizens Day events in Halifax. Local nominees are Angela Wilson, Ayden-Grifton, John Howard, Conley, and Scott Davis, Rose.

Members were reminded to bring crafts or white elephant items to the February meeting to be sold at the junior bazaar at the state DAR convention in Pinehurst March 9-11.

Elected delegates to the event were Mrs. Briley, Mrs. Donald McLane and Mrs. J.B. Surles III. Alternate delegates will be Mrs. Everett Ballangee, Mrs. Garland Waters and Mrs. Dennis Winstead.

Man Wonders Where He's Gone Wrong

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a nice-looking, clean, personable, intelligent, sensitive fellow. I'm 23, masculine (but thin), have a good sense of humor and I'm friendly. However, I'm shy, insecure and very, very lonely. I am currently attending a university for graduate study. I have only two friends here. (They're both from home.) I was never with the "in" crowd.

I'm polite, have social skills and I'm always first to offer my congratulations for an achievement. I offer compliments to others on their appearance (especially girls), but no one has ever congratulated me on any of my numerous achievements. (I do not brag about them.) Actually, I was complimented once. A homosexual said I was "cute," and he was sorry I was straight.

I'm adored by my female relatives, but treated with contempt by most girls in my age group. Younger girls mainly ignore me.

Don't tell me to just be myself. I've been myself forever, and the only women who express any interest in me are either going steady, engaged, married or over 60. Where did I go wrong?

Don't suggest joining a group. I've joined groups all my life and always felt like an uninvited guest. Please don't suggest counseling. I saw two licensed psychologists in college, and all they did was make me poor. I'm out of ideas. Can you help me? — ON THE OUTSIDE LOOKING IN

DEAR OUTSIDE: You write a charming letter, and I'll bet you'd be great company, but I don't qualify because I'm over 60 and married.

If you describe yourself accurately, something is wrong here. It's either your perception of yourself, or the world's perception of you. Ask a friend for an honest evaluation. Ask two friends. If they can't offer any constructive criticism, maybe you're trying too hard. For a shy but intelligent guy, how about Toastmasters? Or a drama group? Even though you've already rejected joining a group, try again.

If none of the above relieves you of your loneliness, perhaps the counselor at the university can help you. Whatever you do, don't give up. Somewhere there's a nice-looking, clean, personable, intelligent, insecure, conservative, lonely female in your age group who's just dying to be discovered.

DEAR ABBY: I need help real fast. My husband and I have always had a wonderful relationship with my parents, but lately my mother and I had a serious disagreement concerning my three small sons. We want our children to respect and enjoy their grandparents' company without thinking that every time they stay with them they are going to either get a present, or get away with something while they are visiting. (We do not allow the boys to eat sweets all day; Grandma says at her house, she makes the rules.)

Two weeks ago we took the boys over to help Dad trim his trees and pile the branches. Mother insisted the boys should be paid for helping. I objected, saying this would only teach them that every time they went to help they should get paid. My husband agreed with me. (Our middle son, 8, said he could not understand why Grandma would want to give them money for helping when they were having fun.)

I wish Mother would just say she disagrees with us, but will abide by our rules, instead of getting into a big heated argument. By the way, my father thinks that if we say "No," it should be "No," not, "You can do it because you're at Grandma's house."

Mother told me that if I had the nerve to mail this letter, she would abide by your decision. Should there be two sets of rules — one for Grandma's house and one for home? — BETTY BLUE

DEAR BETTY: One set only: yours. Some grandparents tend to spoil their grandchildren, not realizing they could also be spoiling the efforts of parents who try to raise their children to be generous, honest, and to take good care of their bodies.

DEAR ABBY: My co-workers and I have a supervisor I'll call John Smith. To make a long story short, John got a college graduate degree by correspondence. It took only a short period of time, and to my knowledge the college (in California) is not accredited.

Anyway, there is now a diploma on the wall in John's office that says: Doctor of Philosophy in Small Business Management. He is beginning to introduce himself to new clients and in correspondence as "Dr. Smith." So far, he hasn't asked any of us to address him as "Doctor"; but what should we do if he requests it? — G.R. IN NORMANGEE, TEXAS

DEAR G.R.: Since he is your supervisor, should he ask you to call him "Doctor," though it may be a hard pill to swallow, call him "Doctor."

To put more fiber in your diet, make split pea soup or a pot of baked beans.

Town Attracts Few Tourists

By ELAINE GRAYBILL
The Bloomington Pantagraph
 NORMAL, Ill. (AP) — A couple from Normal wanted to see the end of the road. That's how they happened to spend a week recently in a small Arctic town named Inuvik.

"Where ... is Inuvik?" the travel agent asked when C.M. "Remy" and Genevieve Remsburg went to him with their plan.

Inuvik, population about 3,000, is the place where the highway ends on the North American continent. Inuvik is 140 miles inside the Arctic Circle, in Canada's Northwest Territories.

That's all the Remsburgs knew when they decided to travel there. Apparently, that isn't enough to attract a lot of people. The Remsburgs were the only tourists in town, and they leased the only rental car.

"I thought it was just the end of the world," says Mrs. Remsburg, who agreed to go to Inuvik only if her husband would accompany her to Hawaii next year. The Remsburgs are retired and travel a lot, both separately and together.

Inuvik, however, surprised Mrs. Remsburg. She and her husband liked it so much they hope to go back and stay longer.

The Remsburgs were fascinated by the good — even sophisticated — quality of life in Inuvik, despite its hostile environment and remoteness. The closest town is about 75 miles away.

Everything is scarce in Inuvik except brutal cold in the winter and bloodthirsty mosquitoes in the summer.

Yet the inhabitants are proud of their way of life. They have a saying that goes "if we can't get it, it is not necessary and probably not worth having."

The highway leading to Inuvik is rough gravel for about 1,000 miles to the south and is not passable part of the year, so supplies and food are flown in or brought by barge.

Life is expensive. A head of lettuce costs $5, a small whole chicken is $7 and minute steak is $11.69 a pound. Mrs. Remsburg overheard a customer at the grocery store say, "Oh, good, today we have milk."

Some food is available locally and is cheaper. For example, muskrat meat is $3.59 a pound, and caribou heart and liver are $2.75 a pound.

Eskimos and Indians native to the Arctic area know how to live off the land, Remsburg says, and still consider that knowledge an essential part of the children's education.

Nevertheless, the restaurants in Inuvik have linen, fresh flowers and fine china. The town has an adult education program, a computer club, seven churches, an indoor swimming pool, a hockey rink and virtually every video cassette known to man.

Inuvik, which means "place of man," is a new town, having been established by the Canadian government 28 years ago to serve partly as a shipping point and a base for gas and oil exploration. Also, it was to replace the town across the Mackenzie River, Aklavik, which appeared to be sinking into the ground.

As a side trip during their visit, the Remsburgs paid a pilot $900 to take them on a four-hour air expedition farther north into the Arctic Circle and over the Arctic Ocean, where they saw seals lounging on ice floes and a rusting 150-foot ship that stayed too long one fall and was stranded and abandoned in the ice.

You don't realize how much noise there is in our everyday world until you go to a place as remote as Inuvik, Remsburg says. "One of the most amazing things," he says, "is the absolute silence" at the end of the road.

To cut down on monthly water waste, put sealed plastic bottles filled with water and an inch or two of sand or pebbles in your toilet tank. In an average home, taking such a measure can save 10 or more gallons of water a day.

Watching Reruns Hard Trend To Understand

You're all probably wondering why I don't have an extensive video library. Most Americans do. Their shelves are bulging with cassettes of everything from the film classic "Treasure of Sierra Madre" to the how-to of "Getting a Divorce" to "Shopping at Sears."

The trouble with me is I remember "The Wizard of Oz." God, do I remember "The Wizard of Oz." I remember every little white anklet on Dorothy's skinny legs. I remember Billie Burke's laugh that sounded like buttermilk sloshing out of a bucket. I remember watching "The Wizard of Oz" so many times I couldn't wait for the tornado to suck up the dog. Familiarity does indeed breed contempt.

So, I look over the list of cassettes and cannot imagine wanting to see any of them again and again and again. How many times, for example, can you sit around in an evening and watch "How to Have a Baby"? After the first time, you'd probably never have a need for it again.

"How to Beat a Speeding Ticket" sounds like a one-time cassette to me. If you're so dumb that you have to watch it every time you get a ticket, you deserve to get another one.

I wouldn't want to put money on how many times you'd play "Ringling Bros. and Barnum and Bailey Video" which tells you how to be a clown and shows off death-defying stunts. (In a living room, this could be a one shot viewing experience.)

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Even a film as great as "Gone With the Wind" could get on your nerves with overexposure. I've seen it four times. The last time after I saw the two-second-gross-leg shot in Atlanta, it was sorta downhill for me.

I think I've only had one cassette that I played a total of four times. It was Jane Fonda's "Prime Time" exercise video that was to make me a legend in my own time. Every time I got to the part where she sat on the floor with her legs outstretched and she placed her chest on the floor between them, I found myself crawling into a corner and assuming a fetal position. It did not give me the euphoria I had hoped for.

Stockpiling videocassettes is a trend that is hard for me to understand. People will become downright militant when summer television is given over to reruns. Yet, they will sit and watch "Raiders of the Lost Ark" again and again.

All I know is I don't like reruns, instant replays or leftovers. I ask myself why would anyone want to sit around and watch "Cooking with Beefcake"? Imagine, six men wearing only aprons teaching cooking from recipes from famous restaurants. I say seeing it 20 times in one afternoon is just too much.

NEW YORK (AP) — Stock prices bolted higher in early trading today, shaking off the broad declines of the previous session.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial rose 14.20 to 2,108.27 in the first half hour of trading.

In the broader market, rising issues outpaced decliners by nearly 3 to 1 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 851 rising, 312 falling and 408 unchanged.

The government reported today that the U.S. economy, held back by a soaring trade deficit, grew at an anemic 2.5 percent rate for all of 1986, the poorest performance since the last recession.

On world money markets, the dollar went into a fresh plunge today, reflecting market disappointment with the outcome of a meeting between Japanese and U.S. treasury chiefs to discuss stabilizing exchange rates. Gold rose.

the General Assembly." Once the Legislature creates a new election method, it must be reviewed by the U.S. Justice Department to be sure it complies with the Voting Rights Act.

Clifton Everett Sr., a Bethel lawyer, endorsed the plan for electing six commissioners from districts and three at-large.

"I ... do not question the six districts," Everett said. But he suggested the county needs "some one or more who would be politically accountable to all the people of Pitt County ... three persons at-large (would be) accountable to all the voters."

Bryant Tripp, another speaker, said he had "no argument" with the idea of electing six commissioners from districts and three at-large members. But he suggested that two of the district representatives and one of the at-large seats be elected each two years. "Have six-year terms (with) one-third (elected) each two years."

William Elbert, speaking "on behalf of the Concerned Citizens for Justice (a local civil rights group), the Pitt County chapter of the NAACP and the Pitt County chapter of the SCLC (Southern Christian Leadership Conference)," said "we support the six-district plan ... but no at-large."

When bus drivers have trouble on the roads, "they call the garage and we dispatch someone out there" to fix the bus or tow it in, he said.

The Pitt County school had no problems with planes leaving or arriving this morning because of the rain, but flights have been delayed or canceled in Charlotte because of poor weather conditions, said Jim Turcotte, airport manager.

"Airports in the west of us are in poor shape today," he said.

Rain was forecast to continue throughout the day with partly cloudy skies forming late today. Low temperatures tonight are to be in the 20s.

Convicted State Official Shoots Himself During News Conference

By DAVID MORRIS Associated Press Writer

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — State Treasurer R. Budd Dwyer shot himself today during a press conference where he was expected to announce his resignation, witnesses said.

At the end of a long, rambling statement in which he proclaimed his innocence in a bribery case in which he was convicted, Dwyer pulled a revolver from a manila envelope he was holding, put the gun in his mouth and pulled the trigger.

Television reporter Mark Stultz and photographer Gary Miller, who were both at the front of the room near Dwyer at the time, said Dwyer warned everyone, "Stay away, this thing will hurt someone."

Just before he pulled the gun, Dwyer called acting treasurer Donald L. Johnson and two other aides to his side. He handed each of them sealed envelopes that he said contained instructions for them to read "later."

Treasury spokesman Duke Horshock told reporters after the shooting "the expectation was that he was using this forum to resign his position. ... He said he was going to give an update on his status."

The state attorney general had determined that Dwyer would lose his job as state treasurer as soon as he was sentenced. Robert Gentzel, a spokesman for Attorney General LeRoy S. Zimmerman, said Wednesday that if Dwyer does not resign first, removal from office was automatic with the sentencing.

Dwyer faced up to 55 years in prison for his conviction on five counts of mail fraud, four counts of interstate transportation in aid of racketeering, one count of perjury and one count of conspiracy to commit bribery.

The charges stemmed from the Treasury Department's 1984 decision to award a $4.6 million no-bid contract to a California firm, Computer Technology Associates.

Two CTA officials, John Torquato Jr. and William T. Smith, testified they won the contract by offering a $300,000 payoff to Dwyer. Smith testified that Asher found out about the offer several days later and ordered that the money go to the Republican State Committee.

No money actually changed hands. Dwyer, a Republican, had won reelection to a four-year term in 1984.

Kenny Drummond Paces N.C. State To 87-74 Victory Over Blue Devils

By The Associated Press
Kenny Drummond went wild as No. 20 North Carolina State defeated 12th ranked Duke, but seven turnovers took some of the shine off his 26-point offensive effort.

"I don't think this was my best game," Drummond said after the Wolfpack defeated Duke 87-74. "But my confidence is getting better and better. Tonight, I got the grace."

"I thought Kenny Drummond was sensational. He is hard to defend because he's so quick," said Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano. "I might be a little happier if he could hold on to the rock a little bit at the end."

The Blue Devils were weakened by several cases of the flu, but Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski refused to use illness as an excuse for Drummond's offensive blitz.

"He played a terrific game. Our defense never put him in a position to get him out of his game and that's what we try to do 98 percent of the time — try to get people out of their games," Krzyzewski said. "We did not do that tonight."

In the only other Atlantic Coast Conference game Wednesday, Maryland defeated West Virginia 65-62.

Drummond did much of his damage against Duke in the first half, scoring 18 points. N.C. State led by 11 points on two occasions in the first half.

The Wolfpack led by as much as 53-38 with 17:40 remaining, but the Blue Devils closed the gap to 67-61 on a three-point play with 7:23 remaining.

But Duke's comeback fizzled, and N.C. State outscored the Blue Devils 14-4 in the next six minutes to clinch the victory.

The Wolfpack raised its record to 12-4 overall and 4-2 in the ACC.

Danny Ferry led Duke, 13-2 and 3-2, with 23 points.

Derrick Lewis scored 22 points, including a game-winning field goal with 47 seconds left, to give Maryland a confidence-building win over the Mountaineers.

"I think a lot of people had written us off," said Lewis, whose all-around game also included 17 rebounds and six blocked shots. "We wanted to show people, and ourselves, that we can play. Now, we just have to play two halves instead of one."

West Virginia, 12-4, had two final chances to forge a tie on three-point shots, but both missed.

"We got 4-foot shots and couldn't hit them," said West Virginia Coach Gale Catlett. "There is no excuse for that. When we were hustling, our press was magnificent. But, unfortunately, we were not as consistent as we needed to be."

Staak Is Given 2-Year Extension

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Wake Forest basketball coach Bob Staak says the progress made in the Demon Deacon program in the last 18 months is probably behind a two-year extension he has been given on his five-year contract. Staak received a two-year extension on his five-year contract, Athletic Director Gene Hooks announced Wednesday.

"I was comfortable with the contract I signed when I first got here. I think people have realized that the program as it existed when I got here needed some rebuilding, some things added to it," Staak said. "I think that the progress we've shown in roughly a year and a half has been something the administration felt they wanted to do something with."

Staak came to Wake Forest in 1985, replacing Carl Tracy. The Demon Deacons struggled to an 8-21 record last season, but have an 8-5 start this year.

Staak said the difference between last year's team and the 1987 club is the competitiveness.

"We lost two games in overtime — one we had the opportunity to win and one we could have won," he said. "Obviously, you would like to win a few more games here or there, but I think our young players are coming along well and once we get over the flu bug which we're going through right now, I think that we'll become a more consistent team."

Wake Forest lost overtime decisions to Georgia Tech and Clemson, and has dropped two other ACC games to Duke and North Carolina State. The Demon Deacons have lost 21 straight league games.

North Carolina faces Wake Forest in Greensboro tonight.

"At least I know now that I won't have to beat Carolina to hang around awhile," Staak joked.

As for the illnesses, Staak said Tyrone Bogues, Mark Cline and Sam Ivy have been hit with the flu, but he said he expected the three to be healthy enough to play.

"We're just going to play, go out and do the things we do well and hopefully we can do it for 40 minutes," Staak said.

Clemson Tigers Shedding Image Of ACC Doormat

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Clemson is working to shed its image as the "doormat" of the Atlantic Coast Conference by refusing to be walked on this season.

"Clemson has not traditionally been known as a basketball power. It's something we have to go out and prove every time that we play," Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said.

The 10th-ranked Tigers showed the conference and the country just how tough they can be Tuesday when Michael Tait hit an 18-foot jumper from the right corner to lift Clemson past Georgia Tech 67-66.

"I think it squelched any questions about whether Clemson is any good," Ellis said in a telephone interview from his office Wednesday. "I don't think there are any doubts now."

With the victory — a school-record seventh straight road triumph — Clemson is 17-0 and 4-0, the best start overall and in the ACC for the Tigers.

"The eyebrows are raised more so than ever before," Ellis said. "We've played four of the seven teams we have to play in the league, and we've defeated all four."

Still, history is not on Clemson's side. Clemson has been a member of the ACC since it was formed in 1954 and is the only school to never have won a league basketball title.

Clemson also has the worst composite tournament and regular-season record of any ACC team in the 32-year history of the league.

Ellis is aware — painfully so — of that history. But he also knows the Tigers are ranked the highest in its history and is playing well — so well that he can't think of anything he'd change.

Still, Ellis is not talking ACC title — not with Clemson returning home to face No. 12 Duke on Saturday and second-ranked North Carolina on Wednesday.

"Outside ourselves," Ellis said, "I'd have to say the two teams we are facing next are the two teams who are playing the best in our league, Duke and North Carolina."

Regardless of how the Tigers do against the two ACC powers, Ellis feels his team proved it is a good team getting better.

"Clemson has been a doormat school in the ACC for so many years," he said. "It puts an enormous amount of pressure on our young men."

The pressure only increased as Clemson continued winning against a schedule criticized as being too weak, particularly after the Tigers whipped Prairie View — dubbed Prairie 'Who' in one newspaper headline — 103-45 and followed that by beating Armstrong State 112-39.

The number of critics shrunk after Clemson beat North Carolina St. 73-69 in its ACC opener. Ellis believes the victory over Georgia Tech will silence the critics — both in the ACC and in the nation.

"I think we knew all the pressures of the game. It was nationally televised and it was going to show ... whether Clemson is any good. We knew we had a chance to show the nation."

"To go in there and win like that is certainly gratifying. It was a great win. But at the same time, there's still a lot more time. With our league, there are so many tough games ahead that you savor the win but you're also looking ahead."

Guard Grayson Marshall said last year's squad, which finished 3-11 in the ACC, may have "folded" against the Yellow Jackets.

Ellis agreed. "Last year's team did not do that in the league. It just couldn't find a way to do it. It had not been in that role and it was still ... trying to find itself," Ellis said.

The Tigers are led by center Horace Grant, a 6-foot-11, 215-pound senior who's expected to be a high NBA draft pick. Grant is averaging 18.9 points and 9.4 rebounds.

"He's a key. He's doing the things we asked. If he wants to be a first-round draft choice and prove what he's about, we need to win," Ellis said.

Grant ranked No. 4 nationally in shooting at 67 percent going into Tuesday's game. As a team, the Tigers are No. 1 nationally in margin of victory (25.4 points a game) and field goal percent (54.3) — a vast improvement over last year when Clemson hit just 47.5 percent.

Ellis said last year's performance — particularly making it to the quarterfinals of the NIT — has helped this year's team.

"That was something that gave us the lift that we needed," Ellis said. "Naturally I'm surprised at how well we've done. We're playing with the same group as last year."

"But I think the key with our club is the chemistry," he said. "I don't think we are made up of a bunch of NBA draft choices. But it is a group of players who play together well."

King Says Tubbs Won't Draw Flies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — James "Bonecrusher" Smith and unbeaten Mike Tyson want to fight each other. Tony Tubbs wants to fight Smith. In fact, Tubbs contends he has the right to fight Smith.

A Smith-Tyson fight with Smith's World Boxing Association title and Tyson's World Boxing Council title on the line already is set for March 7 at Las Vegas, Nev., as part of the HBO television heavyweight title unification series.

A Smith-Tubbs fight for the WBA title would not be part of the unification series.

"Outside the series, Tubbs and Smith fighting wouldn't draw flies at a dump," Don King, a promoter of the HBO series, said Tuesday at hearing on whether the WBA should allow a Smith-Tyson bout.

Tar Heels Top Pirates

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina swept past East Carolina University in a pair of swimming meets Wednesday night.

The Tar Heels left the Pirate men in their wake, 160-52, while the Lady Heels recorded a 129-82 victory over the ECU lassies.

East Carolina had only three wins in the entire afternoon. Among individuals, freshman Raymond Kennedy won the 100-meter breaststroke in a time of 1:00.00, while Caycee Poust won the 100-meter women's breaststroke in 1:03.27.

The only other ECU victory came in the women's 400-yard medley relay, where the Pirate entry came home in 4:09.02.

East Carolina's men are now 8-2 on the year while the women at 9-2. The Pirates will play host to Old Dominion in a home meet at Minges Natatorium on Saturday at 2 p.m.

Since Smith was not ranked No. 1 when he won the WBA title on a first-round knockout of Tim Witherspoon Dec. 12 as a replacement for Tubbs, who said he was injured, he is required under WBA rules to make a mandatory defense within 120 days.

But regardless of who is ranked No. 1, Tubbs and his attorney, Cary Medill, contended at a hearing before WBA counsel James Binns at a hotel in Philadelphia's Society Hill section, that Smith assumed Witherspoon's obligation to fight Tubbs.

King, Smith's co-managers Alan Kornberg and King's son Carl, and Jimmy Jacobs and Bill Cayton, co-managers of Tyson, are requesting Smith be allowed to fight Tyson under Rule 19 of the WBA by-laws.

Rule 19 states: "The world championship regulations may be amended at any time in relation to any matters by way of an exception or special case, provided such amendment is approved by the president of the WBA, by two-thirds majority vote of the World Championships Committee and by two-thirds majority vote of the Executive Committee."

Tubbs has been suspended by the New York State Athletic Commission and has been dropped from the rankings.

Medill said Tubbs should be restored to his No. 1 spot, and that two New York Commission physicians and a member of the California Commission, who also examined Tubbs, said the fighter was hurt before the Witherspoon fight. He also said he had reason to believe the New York commission would lift the suspension.

But regardless of Tubbs' ranking, Medill said, he still deserved a fight for the title under the mandate issued by WBA.

A rematch between Tubbs and Witherspoon was ordered when Witherspoon tested positive for marijuana after winning the title on a 15-round decision over Tubbs Jan. 17, 1986, at Atlanta.

Random Testing Said Essential

FORT WORTH, Texas AP — Random testing of players is essential in any new drug program worked out by the National Football League and the players' association, according to a newspaper's survey of 22 of the league's 28 teams.

"I think if it isn't something random, it wouldn't have any teeth," Kansas City Chiefs owner Lamar Hunt told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram. "If the Players Association doesn't agree, it's a mistake, because we're dealing with the lives of players, not just an issue."

The NFL's current drug policy allows teams to test players once a year on a mandatory basis. These tests are scheduled in advance and are usually conducted before a spring mini-camp or the start of summer practice.

However, several club officials surveyed said the program is inadequate.

"We do regular testing now, and they all come in clean," said Russ Thomas, executive vice president and general manager of the Detroit Lions. "But some drugs can be out of your system in 72 hours, and when a player knows he's going to be tested, he can prepare himself."

Cleveland Browns owner Art Modell said, "I feel deeply that unscheduled testing — done in strict confidence, and that is a key — is necessary for an effective program."

Mike McCormack, president and general manager of the Seattle Seahawks, added, "All the people I've listened to who have had problems with drugs say you've got to have random testing."

Management and the NFL Players Association agree the league's drug program needs to be improved and that random testing should figure into the new equation. How is the point of debate.

Management prefers a broad application, with all players subject to random testing. The union's position is that it should be done on an individual-case basis, only after reasonable cause has been determined. An NFLPA spokesman said surveys indicate 80 to 85 percent of players oppose across-the-board random testing.

The league and the Players Association have said establishing a new drug program will be a priority when negotiations for a collective bargaining agreement begin this spring.

"If you look at it, we have the same goal. We want the game clean and want to help players with problems," said Mark Murphy, executive director of the NFLPA. "From that perspective, we should not have much problem with a new agreement. The trouble is the focus has shifted some since 1982 when the last collective bargaining agreement was signed."

"Then, it was let's try to help these people. Now it's more like let's catch them."

Under the present policy, if a player's mandatory test is positive or if there is reasonable cause to suspect drug use, the club can order further testing. Reasonable cause is determined by the team physician.

The NFLPA would like the definition of reasonable cause clarified and the determination made by an independent expert.

"To some clubs, reasonable cause is getting beat for two touchdowns," Murphy said.

The NFLPA also wants stricter guidelines in the new program to assure equality for all players.

"Now what the clubs do is often determined by who the player is," Murphy said. "If it's a star that tests positive, they have the tendency to look the other way. If it's the 45th guy on the roster, he's in trouble."

Sparring over random testing began last July when NFL commissioner Pete Rozelle unilaterally announced a new drug policy allowing teams two unscheduled regular-season urinalyses of every player.

The NFLPA filed a grievance in a U.S. District Court in New York, and Rozelle's plan eventually was overturned by arbitrator Richard Kasher.

"I think if they the players understand fully what the problems are medically and that the intent here is not to level punitive action but to provide a system for them to get well, an agreement could be reached," said Mike Lynn, executive vice president and general manager of the Minnesota Vikings.

Several of the team executives interviewed by the Star-Telegram expressed concern over how best to implement a new testing program.

"I believe strongly in controlling the drug problem, and I think the answer is severe penalties," said Al LoCasale, executive assistant of the Los Angeles Raiders. "At the same time, we have problems overriding people's civil liberties. I know one of the fears of the players is that they're going to have a system run by one side."

The majority of those interviewed, however, said the need for random testing superseded the players' concern for individual rights.

"We're not the government. We're a private employer doing what is best for the employee and the business," said Mike Brown, assistant general manager for the Cincinnati Bengals.

"Civil rights?" Modell said. "They surrendered their right to privacy when they signed a contract to play professional football. Just like I surrendered mine when I bought this team."

"There's no such thing as invasion of privacy for a professional football player. Just like there isn't for a member of the White House staff."

The Star-Telegram said although most club officials surveyed said random testing would be a strong deterrent to drug use in the NFL and would help identify players with problems, not all felt it would be the solution to drug use in the league.

If Giants Are NFL Tanks, Broncos Are The Ferraris

PASADENA Calif. AP — The New York Giants are the Sherman tank of the NFL. The Denver Broncos are the Ferrari.

The Giants' patron saint could be Rambo. The Broncos would be Merlin.

In the interview swirl of Super Bowl weeks, the Giants are more likely to squal, the Broncos to smile.

We don't fool around. Giants tackle Karl Nelson said. "Our style is not flashy. We show you what we are going to do and we go out and try to do it."

That's the way Bill Parcells is as a coach and he has gotten those type of people to surround him.

Dan Reeves, coach of the Broncos, was a master of the halfback option pass when he played for Dallas after quarterbacking at South Carolina. Under Reeves, the Broncos have gained the reputation of a team that will try any trick to win.

"We have 15-20 gimmick plays," Reeves said. "We put in a few plays every week. We'll have five or so for Sunday."

On Sunday, the Broncos put their speed and skullduggery against the Giants' size and power in the Super Bowl.

They play a basic 3-4 defense that says, "You beat us or we're going to beat you." Denver running back Gerald Wilhite said. "They say, 'We're coming straight at you. No detours. You have to be ready to deal with that. When we're done with this game, we'll know we've been in a fight."

The Broncos say they are anything but intimidated by the Giants, who built their 16-2 record and 11-game winning streak on a ferocious defense and a no-nonsense attack led by running back Joe Morris. New York's streak includes a 19-16 victory over the Broncos at Giants Stadium and a 66-3 margin in two playoff games.

"We're not afraid of them," Denver's Pro Bowl strong safety Dennis Smith said. "We respect them and I think they respect us."

"I like playing a team like this. They're like the Raiders. They don't present a lot of different formations so we don't have to prepare for a lot of different things. They are very physical, they feel they can match up with anybody."

Where the Giants don't match up well with the Broncos is in team speed. Nelson thinks that doesn't matter.

"It's not their speed that can hurt you, it's the different ways they use it," he said. "Their style is to get a lot of penetration upfield, stop the flow of the play. It's our job to recognize the different fronts and twists and handle them."

"Most of the teams we play, the teams in our division, play a straight defense. Denver is out there to confuse you."

On defense, the Broncos move linebacker Karl Mecklenburg all over the field and often flop ends Rulon Jones and Andre Townsend. The secondary plays combination zone and man-to-man, blitzes enough to keep an offense off-balance and generally attempts to hide its intentions until the last second.

"These teams are quite different," Parcells said. "Denver is a little smaller and quicker in some areas, a speed team. We're a power team. They're a more multiple type offense and defense."

How will the Giants handle Denver's cloak-and-dagger defense?

"We'd better do it better than the last game," quarterback Phil Simms said. "I look at it as we are the underdogs because we didn't attack them or move the way we wanted to or get into the end zone on offense against them. Their defense has a lot of speed and if we have a weakness, it's not having speed. We have to get rid of those problems Sunday."

They'll try to do it with Morris' running and a simple passing scheme featuring short throws, particularly to tight-lipped tight end Mark Bavaro.

Bavaro made his Super Bowl public speaking debut Wednesday after running away from reporters the previous day as well as he bowls over tacklers.

"It was photo day, they took my picture and I left," Bavaro said of Tuesday's media session, where his teammates spent more than an hour talking to reporters.

Bavaro insisted he doesn't like the comparisons with Rambo.

"I don't like it because of the exploitation of the Vietnam veterans," Bavaro said. "I have respect for the men who went over there, members of my family went over there. I don't like to be called Rambo."

The rambling Bavaro is typical of New York's receiving corps, which will be up against a fast Denver secondary.

"Their speed makes it more equal," Giants receiver Solomon Miller said. "We've got to use more techniques and moves."

"We're not a big bomb-catching team."

With John Elway's strong arm and scrambling skill, the Broncos most certainly are a big-play, deep-threat team. He has thrown the ball 70 yards during a game, 50 on the run, and says he has yet to throw as far as he can because he doesn't want to hurt his arm.

"John makes chances out of nothing," Denver wide receiver Mark Jackson said. "He's almost like a magician."

Giants Said Not As Fast On Grass

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Take away artificial turf and you take away Joe Morris' speed. And that takes away a big advantage for the New York Giants in Sunday's Super Bowl.

So the reasoning goes, and the statistics would seem to bear that out.

But to the Giants, that reasoning is artificial and the statistics are meaningless. In fact, they seem to prefer playing on natural grass, as they will in the Rose Bowl, and not artificial turf.

"There's no difference, man," New York wide receiver Bobby Johnson said. "Football's football.

"I love playing on grass. Our receivers play better on grass. They cut better."

Morris concedes he might not be as quick on grass. But, he said, he won't be the only one when the Giants meet the Denver Broncos.

"They'll be 22 guys out there on grass and it'll affect them the same way it'll affect me," he said. "Twenty-one other guys will also be slower than usual."

But 21 other guys might not depend on speed as much as Morris. Still, he is undaunted.

"All my high school games were on grass. I started in college (at Syracuse) on grass," he said. "I did fine in college and high school. This is a grass game, and I'm going to practice and play on grass. When you get used to it, it's not that different."

So he says. The statistics say there is a difference.

Morris averaged better than 100 yards a game this season. But in three games on grass, he averaged just 62 yards — 110 yards on 18 carries against the Los Angeles Raiders, but only 14 yards on 13 carries against the San Francisco 49ers and 62 yards on 22 carries against the Washington Redskins.

Misleading, the Giants insist.

In San Francisco, they say, what the game was played on was less a factor than how it was played.

"The 49ers believe if they stop the run, they'll win the game," Ard said. "They forgot we have two dimensions. And the field was lousy."

Also rushing to Morris' defense is offensive coordinator Ron Erhardt.

"If the hole is there, he'll scoot," Erhardt said. "It's like playing on tile or wood in basketball. He has had good games on grass."

So, actually, have the Giants, even when Morris hasn't.

The NFC champions, whose home field is artificial turf, won all three of their games on grass — 14-9 over the Raiders, 21-17 over the 49ers and 24-14 over the Redskins. Overall, New York is 16-2.

The AFC champion Broncos play their home games on grass and won 11 of 12 games on natural surface this season. The only loss was a 9-3 setback to San Diego at Mile High Stadium. Overall, Denver is 13-5.

"They're making a lot out of nothing," said Stacy Robinson, another Giants wide receiver. "We played well on grass this year. I prefer grass. I think most players prefer it.

"You get a game of this magnitude, we'll play it on concrete. Guys have been playing football for years. You didn't play on artificial turf in high school."

"I much prefer grass," said wide receiver Lionel Manuel, who scored both New York touchdowns against the Raiders on passes from Phil Simms. "It's a lot softer. It's easier on your knees, easier when you fall down or get knocked down."

While Morris was held down at San Francisco, Simms completed 27 of 38 passes for 388 yards.

"I'd rather play on grass," Simms said. "It's better to fall on, it's better to throw the football on grass. We practice on it nearly every day. We seem to play well on grass."

Another Giant who had his problems at San Francisco was place-kicker Raul Allegre. But he didn't sound concerned about it.

"People have bad games," he said. "I would prefer a good grass field and a nice, sunny day."

Chances are, he'll get both Sunday at the Rose Bowl.

"Grass is no different," Allegre said. "It's not bad unless you have a rainstorm and mud. Then, it's bad."

Denver Coach Dan Reeves said he didn't believe his team had an advantage because of the playing surface.

"They're 3-0 against good teams," Reeves said of the Giants.

Reeves said there was no question as to his preference and that of his players.

"Our players enjoy playing on natural grass. I think every player does," he said. "You see guys dripping mud, you see guys bleeding."

"I had 10 knee operations. It hurts when I have to stand on the sidelines and watch on artificial turf. It particularly hurts guys the older they get."

Earnhardt Tries To Forget 1986

NEW YORK (AP) — Dale Earnhardt is a man of simple pleasures and down-to-earth opinions.

Earnhardt, the defending NASCAR Winston Cup champion, is preparing to start defense of his second stock car title on Feb. 15 in the Daytona 500. But he's trying to mentally separate the new season from his triumphs in 1986.

"We're last year's champions," Earnhardt said earlier this week in an interview during the Eastern Motorsports Press Association convention. "That might carry some weight somewhere. But it don't mean much on the racetrack."

Earnhardt, who won five races and nearly $1.8 million last season, drives for the team owned and operated by Richard Childress, who never won a race in his NASCAR driving career.

"The championship doesn't change anything," Earnhardt said. "We're still hungry. I think we've always been hungry. I won the championship in 1990 and that was very satisfying, but it took several years for us to win the second one, and that shows what you're up against. Nothing comes easy."

"And, right now, everybody's dealt a new hand. We're pumped up just like we were at the start of last season. I'm as determined and hungry as I've ever been."

Earnhardt says the major difference between the two championships he has won is the way he feels about himself and his career. After winning the first one, times got tough for the young second-generation driver and he often appeared surly and uncommunicative.

"In 1980, I was on a rollercoaster," Earnhardt said. "Back then, I didn't know where I was going. I was just taking things as they came and waiting to see what would happen next."

"Now, I'm getting things planned out. I know what we're going to do and how we're going to do it. And I've learned how to take defeat as well as victory."

The only driver to win more races than Earnhardt on NASCAR's premier circuit last year was Tim Richmond, who will miss at least a month of the season while recuperating from pneumonia. Richmond won seven times and had eight pole positions in 1986, but finished third in the point standings behind Earnhardt and three-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip.

"When Richard (Childress) and I were out hunting, we were talking about how Tim was going to be our main worry (in 1987). It looked like it was going to be his year. But, now that he's sick, that's changed."

"I think Terry Labonte will be the man to beat now," Earnhardt added, referring to the 1984 Winston Cup champion, who has been hired to replace Waltrip on Junior Johnson's elite team.

"That team, from what I've seen, has a real positive attitude now," Earnhardt said. "They needed some new blood and a new attitude. It seemed last year that there were times they were just going through the motions."

Earnhardt, who was fined and narrowly avoided suspension in the wake of a crashing incident with Waltrip early last season, says one thing that hasn't changed is his aggressive attitude on the track.

For the critics who insist he is too aggressive, Earnhardt said: "If you don't want to race, stay home."

Robinson's 44 Not Enough For Navy

By The Associated Press
David Robinson scored 44 points, more than half of Navy's total. The 7-foot-1 center also grabbed a game-high 14 rebounds. He made 67 percent of his field goal attempts, matching his teammates' total of 16 field goals.

Oh yes — Drexel beat the 18th-ranked Midshipmen.
Casper Cooper scored a career-high 23 points as the Dragons ended Navy's five-game winning streak, beating the visiting Middies 83-80 Wednesday night.

"He's a great ballplayer, but he can't do it all by himself," Drexel guard Michael Anderson said of Robinson, who almost did it all by himself.

The 44 points were one below Robinson's career high, but it was his three missed free throws in the game's final four minutes that allowed the Dragons, 7-7, to overcome a 78-74 deficit with 2:11 to play.

"Basketball is a team game and (Drexel Coach) Eddie (Burke) got a real good performance from his whole team," Navy Coach Pete Herrmann said of his club, which fell to 12-4.

In other games involving ranked teams Wednesday night, No. 6 DePaul beat Evansville 78-68; No. 7 Syracuse defeated Villanova 70-58; No. 8 Temple held off Massachusetts 72-60; No. 11 Oklahoma beat Oklahoma State 94-67; No. 20 North Carolina State defeated No. 12 Duke 87-74; No. 15 Georgetown beat Connecticut 65-51; and No. 19 Texas Christian defeated Texas Tech 48-43.

Cooper scored with 1:51 to play to cut the Navy lead to 78-76. Anderson followed with a foul shot and then a bank shot to put the Dragons in front to stay 79-78 with 54 seconds left.

Robinson then missed the front end of a 1-and-1 and Anderson made two free throws to give Drexel an 81-78 advantage with 31 seconds left.

Robinson dunked a rebound of a missed shot by Neal Fenton to cut the lead to 81-80 with 14 seconds remaining. But free throws from Anderson and Todd Lehmann and a traveling call on Fenton sealed the Dragons' victory.

Navy's last two victories were by comfortable margins of 36 and 24 points over American and Delaware, respectively, but the two before that were by two and four points over George Mason and Lafayette.

"We're not jelling as a team," Robinson said. "Lately we haven't played as well as we're capable of playing. I don't know what our problem is. We have to start piecing things back together."

"He's a tremendous athlete," Burke said of Robinson. "He can block shots, he can rebound, he could go out and shoot the jumper. He doesn't because that's not in their game plan."

Navy guard Doug Wojcik added another problem to the Middies' woes.

"You don't know who is going to come to play for us," Wojcik said. At least they knew Robinson did.

No. 6 DePaul 78, Evansville 68
The Blue Demons remained one of three unbeaten Division I teams with their 16th victory of the season. Kevin Edwards scored 26 points and Rod Strickland added 22 as visiting DePaul never trailed.

"A lot of people have been questioning this team's heart," DePaul Coach Joey Meyer said. "But this game here should show some people we do have heart."

The Blue Demons built leads of as much as 14 points in the first half and were never really pushed by Evansville, 8-9, which was led by Scott Haffner's 28 points.

No. 7 Syracuse 70, Villanova 58
Visiting Villanova actually led 52-51 with 3:54 to play, but the Orangemen went on a 17-0 run to seal the victory and keep the top spot in the Big East with a 5-0 record.

"Defensively, we played well. Unfortunately they exploded at the end," Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino said.

Derrick Coleman led the Orangemen, 16-1, with 17 points, 15 in the second half, and Rony Seikaly had 15 points and 14 rebounds. Kenny Wilson led Villanova, 10-7 and 3-3, with 13 points.

"We were a little sluggish in the first half. I'm not sure what the reason was," Syracuse guard Greg Monroe, who had 10 points, said. "Our press (in the second half) didn't seem to bother them a whole lot, but it I think it was able to get us going."

No. 8 Temple 72, Massachusetts 60
Temple's Mike Vreeswyk held Massachusetts Lorenzo Sutton, who had 21 points in the first half, scoreless over the final 20 minutes. Vreeswyk, who scored 18 points himself, covered Sutton in a box-and-one defense that turned the game around for the Owls, 16-2 and 7-0, who remained atop the Atlantic 10 standings.

Sutton, a 6-2 guard, was 8-for-13 from the field in the first half, including five of seven on 3-point attempts.

"We had to do something because he was hitting all those long shots," Temple Coach John Chaney said of Sutton. "I've seen Mike play one-on-one before, so I knew he could do the job."

Massachusetts, 5-10 and 2-6, led 53-51 with 11:09 to play, but a 13-3 run by the Owls gave them their 28th consecutive victory at McGonigle Hall.

No. 11 Oklahoma 94, Ok. State 67
The Sooners handed Oklahoma State the worst loss in the intrastate series since 1929.

Reserve guard Dave Sieger used the 3-point field goal for all but two of his 17 points as the Sooners improved to 13-3 and 2-1 in the Big Eight. Five other Sooners finished in double figures.

Oklahoma used a 22-10 run to take a 31-18 lead with 3:45 left in the first half and the Sooners led by as many as 30 in the second half.

Todd Christian, who scored all 19 of his points in the second half, led the Cowboys, 4-12 and 0-3.

No. 20 N.C. State 87, No. 12 Duke 74
Kenny Drummond scored 26 points and handed out eight assists to lead the Wolfpack to the Atlantic Coast Conference victory.

North Carolina State took a 53-38 lead with 17:40 to play on a layup by Mike Giomi but the Blue Devils, 13-3 and 3-2, were able to close the gap to 67-61 with 7:23 remaining on a three-point play by John Smith. However, that was as close as Duke could get as the Wolfpack, 12-4 and 4-2, went on a 14-4 run.

Danny Ferry led Duke with 23 points.

No. 15 Georgetown 65, Connecticut 51
Georgetown never trailed as it coasted to the Big East Conference victory over the Huskies, who lost to the Hoyas for the 11th consecutive time.

The Hoyas, 13-2 and 4-2, held Connecticut to 16 first-half points and Perry McDonald scored 13 of his 22 points in the opening 20 minutes that ended with Georgetown leading by 11.

Two ECU Teams Place

Two flag football teams from East Carolina University were top 10 finishers in the National Collegiate Flag Football Championships held recently in New Orleans.

The Enforcers, a women's team, finished sixth in the nation after losing games to Southeast Louisiana University and the University of Southern Mississippi. Last year the Enforcers finished in 12th place.

Two players, Jill Contarino, a senior and the team's captain from Lynchburg, Va., and Sandra Bush of Hubert were named second team All-Americans. Ms. Contarino was honored for her offensive play while Ms. Bush made the All-American team for defense.

The other ECU team, the Lake Boys, advanced through the qualifying rounds and into the semi-finals before losing to Florida State University. It was their first appearance in the tournament and they also finished in the top 10.

About 50 colleges and universities were represented at the tournament. Flag football is an intramural sport at ECU sponsored by the Department of Intramural/Recreational Services.

Actress Says 'Tortellis' Role Is Show's 'Jiminy Cricket'

By JERRY BUCK
 AP Television Writer
 LOS ANGELES (AP) — Jean Kasem says that despite rather convincing appearances to the contrary on NBC's "Cheers" and new spinoff "The Tortellis," her character, Loretta, is no stereotypical dumb blonde.
 Ms. Kasem and Dan Hedaya take their characters, Loretta and Nick Tortelli, from "Cheers" to their own series in a special airing tonight before settling into a regular Wednesday timeslot Jan. 28.
 "It's very hard to say Loretta's not a dumb blonde," said Ms. Kasem. "She has many of the shades of the dumb blonde. But she's really just naive and vulnerable. I say she's the Jiminy Cricket of the show. She always sees the bright side of life."
 "She's not intimidating to women because they know she's not going to steal their husbands, the way Jayne Mansfield would. Loretta's very popular with women."
 Loretta and Nick get a sendoff on "Cheers," then pick up immediately on the first episode of "The Tortellis" in the time period of "Night Court" for one night. The new comedy replaces "You Again?" and will be the lead-in to "St. Elsewhere."
 Nick Tortelli appeared on "Cheers" as the unscrupulous ex-husband of barmaid Carla, played by Rhea Perlman. Loretta played his ditzy new wife. Hedaya and Ms. Kasem auditioned together for the roles strictly by chance.
 "It was a cattle call and we were the last ones to read," Ms. Kasem said. "We'd never met before. I thought it was my worst audition."
 She said the writers and producers in the room broke up when the two walked into the room, before they ever opened their mouths. She went home and cried, thinking she had lost the job, but her mother and husband told her the show had already called and offered her the part.

 In the new series, Nick and Loretta move to Las Vegas where Loretta pursues a career as a showgirl. Nick, promising to mend his evil ways, hopes to strike it rich as a TV repairman. They live with Loretta's sister, played by Carlene Watkins.
 The Tortellis are television's newest odd couple. Ms. Kasem, at 5-foot-10½, towers over Hedaya. Loretta is sweet and cheery. Nick is grouchy and usually up to no good. Nick is a notorious womanizer. Loretta has faith in him.
 "We move in with my sister, but Nick doesn't say he's bringing his teen-age son Anthony, who has a 16-year-old bride," said Ms. Kasem. "My sister's divorced and has a 5-year-old who's going on 30."
 She said Nick's character will show "more shades."
 "It's not as on 'Cheers' when the door flies open and Nick blows in and makes a threat," she said. "We have an opportunity to show that we can also walk and talk. I think Las Vegas is a good setting for a comedy. Usually, you see it as the setting for the Mafia and a crime story."
 Cliff and Norm from "Cheers" will show up in an episode. They arrive for a gambling trip, then lose all their money in the slot machines at the airport.
 And Ms. Kasem said she is co-writing a script in which the Tortellis nearly win the California Lottery.
 "It's based on the real incident when the ball landed in the million-dollar slot then jumped into the $10,000 slot," she said. "That sounded so Tortelli."
 Ms. Kasem was born in New Hampshire, but grew up mostly on Guam, where her father was a government employee. She set out to be a television newswoman, but was told she was too emotional when she read the news. She tried her hand at soft features, but that didn't work either, and she ended up in an acting workshop.
 She is married to radio and television personality Casey Kasem, who is the host of "American Top 40." She said their meeting was like something out of a Doris Day movie.

 "I was working as a messenger and was coming out of his agent's office as he was coming in with his arms loaded with Christmas packages," she said. "We ran into each other. It was love at first sight and we got married a year later. We've been married now for seven years."
 Not only is Jean Kasem not dumb, she isn't a blonde.
 She said her mother was an Iroquois Indian.
 "My hair was black until I changed to blonde to get more roles," she said.

Kids Get TV Show On Math

By KATHRYN BAKER
 AP Television Writer
 NEW YORK (AP) — Pick any number of three different digits and its reverse. Subtract the smaller from the larger. Take the answer and its reverse and add them. The answer will always be 1,089.
 Why?
 "I asked the same question of one of our renowned international mathematicians. He lost me shortly after the first step," said David Connell, the original executive producer of "Sesame Street," whose new math show for kids, "Square One TV," premieres Monday on public television stations.
 The five-time Emmy winner hopes "SOTV" will get kids 8-12 interested in mathematics, and perhaps entertain the older crowd as well.
 Connell has some others stumbers. For example: How long does it take to count to a billion, saying one number a second, 24 hours a day, seven days a week? Answer: Thirty-two years.
 "To get a kid to begin to think, 'That's interesting,' is to begin to get him to think about math," Connell said. "Math is about thinking. It's not manipulating numbers on a blackboard."
 "SOTV" is from Children's Television Workshop, which produced "Sesame Street," the revolutionary pre-schoolers' educational program, and "The Electric Company," a show about reading. On "SOTV," as with the other programs, experts from academia were brought in as consultants.
 "Some of our key advisers were skeptical at first. Their feeling was that television is a spectator sport and mathematics is not," Connell said.
 "There are certain things television can do and certain things television cannot. For instance, it would not be appropriate to show long division. What television can do is change attitudes and model problem-solving behavior."
 But the big task with "SOTV," Connell said, was "to make it compelling enough that the audience will tune in voluntarily at 5 o'clock when they have 'Gilligan's Island' and who knows what else to choose from."
 "One of the first things we looked at was the concept of television satire," he said. "If there is one thing kids are literate at, it's television in all its formats."
 "SOTV" satirizes music videos, cop shows, sitcoms and news. It is simple enough to be educational to younger children, but hip enough to amuse older kids and even adults.
 The talented cast of young, adult actor-singers is introduced in a techno-graphic opening straight from "Saturday Night Live." Later, the "Blues Brothers" sing an R&B song about square numbers in an MTV-like video.
 Connell said the show's writers came from television, not academia. They get assignments to write skits and musical numbers on subjects like "infinity."
 "It's been fun trying to figure out how to get some fairly serious mathematical theories into a music video," Connell said.
 "Infinity" turned out to be a bouncy song, presented by the whole cast in a musical comedy setting — "That's infinity, you can count forever, there'll always be one more. That's infinity, count from dusk to dawn. You'll never reach infinity, you'll just go on."
 Then, there is a newsbreak in which an anchorwoman announces, "New theories on infinity — film at 11 — and midnight and 1 and 2 and 3 and 4 and 5 and 6 and 7..."
 The show also will feature a continuing drama, "Mathnet," a takeoff on "Dragnet." The announcer introduces it by intoning, "The story you're about to see is a fib — but it's short." A male-female detective team solves mysteries using math and problem-solving.

These specks of light are actually galaxy cluster 2242-02. Astronomers say that a strange arc near this cluster is the largest optically visible structure observed in the universe. Experts estimate that there are more than a trillion galaxies. Our galaxy alone contains about 250 billion stars, or suns. The Sun at the center of our solar system is 330,330 times the size of the Earth. If Earth were the size of a quarter, the Sun would be as large as a 9-foot ball.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): A message from far away could disturb you if you don't take it in stride. Use your magnetism today.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Figure out how much entertainment will cost and then choose whatever is within your means.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): The evening is ideal for inviting worthwhile guests into your home. This can lead to an interesting alliance.

young man who put all his eggs in one basket and then tripped on the way to the market. The bridge version of this saga is to pin all your faith on one suit.

The auction was routine. South showed a hand too strong to open one no trump and North judged that his six-card suit merited stretching to game.

After winning the opening lead (a spade switch might prove embarrassing), the unthinking play is to cash the king of diamonds and then finesse the jack. East would win and exit with a heart, and those gorgeous diamonds in dummy would wither on the vine. Declarer would probably end up with six tricks.

The thinking declarer would realize that the club suit also offers chances for developing three extra tricks if East has at least one of the missing honors. The problem is how best to combine the chances in the two minor suits.

The secret is to lead the 10 of diamonds at trick two and overtake with the table's jack. Best defense is for East to withhold the queen; if he wins, the diamond suit is good. Now declarer should take advantage of being in dummy by running the seven of clubs.

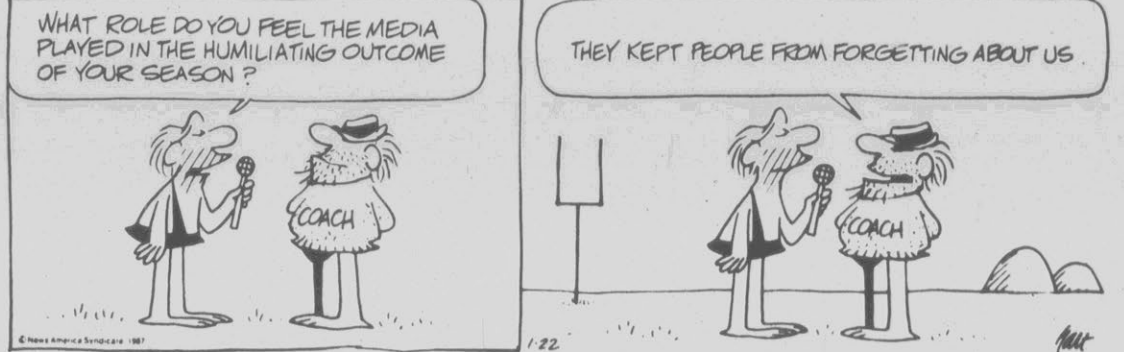

West wins and can do no better than continue the attack on hearts. Declarer takes the trick, then overtakes the king of diamonds with the ace. If the queen drops, well and good. If it does not, as is the case here, declarer is back on the board to repeat the club finesse by running the 10. In all, declarer takes one spade trick, two hearts, two diamonds and four clubs.

A Place You Can Count On

In New York, Rich Are Even Richer Than Ever

NEW YORK — The chateaus of the rich that once graced this city's streets have been demolished, victims of high taxes, a shortage of servants and changing lifestyles.

While wealthy New York families may still treasure maids and governesses, they no longer keep a dozen faithful retainers. When large numbers of English butlers and French maids are needed at galas and large dinners nowadays, they often are played convincingly by unemployed actors and actresses.

But if the butlers and maids are pretenders, the wealth is still real, and for those who have it, life in New York City can be filled with great comfort, opulence and privacy behind the facades of apartment buildings that give little hint of the vast luxury inside.

The most illustrious of these neighborhoods today is a principality of plenty tucked away within Zip Code 10021, a narrow strip of land running along three of the world's most famous avenues, Park, Madison and Fifth, from the Metropolitan Museum on the north at 80th Street to the Regency Hotel at 61st Street on the south.

"I think there has never been such a concentration of wealth in such a small area in the history of man," said Edward Lee Cave, who owns a company specializing in apartments and townhouses for the affluent.

"I don't say it's all piled up in apartments here. It can be in Swiss banks, Hong Kong holding companies or 10,000 acres in Australia somewhere. But everybody who is really important and powerful keeps some sort of presence in New York. There is probably a larger concentration of wealth than ever existed at Versailles or anywhere else. In this town, you don't have to apologize for being rich."

Zip Code 10021 is a neighborhood where buyers of multimillion dollar apartments often must pay for them in cash and display net worth of at least three times the purchase price to pass the scrutiny of co-op boards. Many of its dwellings hold private art collections rivaling those in museums. It is a world of exclusive clubs, lavish charity balls and black-tie dinner parties. Like some European duchy, the neighborhood has its own military drill team, housed in an armory largely furnished by Louis Comfort Tiffany.

These days, the style of old wealth once again is fashionable in New York, and many new millionaires are working hard to give the impression that their vast fortunes are old and inherited. The spartan, minimal look of the 1960s and '70s, when social consciousness was a decorating as well as a social style, has given way. Ball gowns have replaced gingham and blue jeans. It is the time of the lavish decorator, the socially correct florist, the society caterer.

Some residents of Zip Code 10021 think that they are part of a new Belle Epoque.

"It's far more lavish now than Paris. Paris is a very staid city now. I think London has great charm and style of life that is comparable to ours," said Mai Hallingby, the wife of an investment banker. "Maybe the life in New York is more opulent. We have many more galas and grand events and black tie dinner parties. The food is getting better and better. We're right now in our glory. We're at the peak of the Renaissance."

In Zip Code 10021, a life of champagne wishes and caviar dreams is often lived by many who would hang up if Robin Leach, television's guide to lifestyles of the rich and famous, phoned. Privacy is a precious commodity guarded by uniformed doormen. The exteriors of most apartment houses give little hint of the opulent minimansions within, often with spectacular views of Central Park.

"The sybaritic style is hidden in New York," said Robert Denning of Denning & Fourcade Inc., decorators of luxurious residences. "You can achieve a lot of privacy in New York," observed Mark Hampton, another prominent society decorator. "New York is so big it can be impenetrable if you want it to be. There are a lot of people who live public lives and then drop the curtain if they want."

"In many ways the extremely wealthy live in the city but also above the city," said one perceptive Park Avenue resident who asked that she not be identified.
