Radio Says U.S. Hostages' Release Near

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Christian-controlled radio station said today the kidnapers of American hostages Terry A. Anderson and Thomas Sutherland would hand the two over to Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite.

There was no word from Waite, who was in his fourth consecutive day of negotiations with the captors of American hostages. The Voice of Lebanon cited no source for its information, and its report could not be confirmed independently.

The radio report said Waite was negotiating with the captors in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon and that Anderson and Sutherland would be turned over to him in the ancient city of Baalbek. Both men were kidnapped in 1985.

Also today, gunmen abducted two men believed to be foreigners in Moslem west Beirut, witnesses said.

The Voice of Lebanon report said Waite was meeting in Baalbek with officials of the Iranian-backed Hezbollah, the most militant Shiite Moslem faction in Lebanon.

The radio report said Hezbollah was making "stiffer demands" in the talks, and that a note containing these demands was handed to the Anglican Church envoy.

The radio said Waite was trying to obtain letters from the two hostages to deliver to their families in case he fails to win their release.

The kidnappings of Anderson and Sutherland were claimed by Islamic Jihad, a pro-Iranian Shiite group believed linked to Hezbollah.

The Voice of Lebanon has in the past made inaccurate reports on Moslem affairs.

Police said they received unconfirmed reports that today's two kidnap victims were West Germans who called on their embassy in West Beirut minutes before being abducted.

But in Bonn, West German Foreign Ministry spokesman Hans Gnodtke said the government did not know whether the two men were Germans. The West German Embassy in Beirut refused to comment.

At least four Lebanese witnesses said five gunmen in a gray Mercedes seized the two victims in Pavillon Street off west Beirut's commercial district of Hamra at about 9:30 a.m.

Police, however, said there were four gunmen in a curtained black BMW.

The witnesses, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said they heard the victims protesting to the kidnapers in a foreign language that they could not identify.

"Their looks and clothes made me feel certain they are foreigners," one witness said.

A perfume vendor who identified himself as Abu Khalil said he saw the Mercedes pull to a stop as the two men walked from the opposite direction.

"Three gunmen leaped out. One came to me and threatened to shoot me if I move. The other two bundled the victims into the Mercedes and all sped away," Abu Khalil said. "I couldn't do anything."

Waite left his Beirut hotel Tuesday night and has not been seen in public since.

His bodyguards in a Druse militia said he sent word late Thursday that he was well, apparently to calm fears.

Greenville's Snow ... It's Here And Gone

UNEXPECTED SNOW — An unexpected snowfall hit the Greenville area during the work rush hour this morning, causing difficult travel conditions. Two pedestrians are almost invisible along Evans Street during the height of the snowstorm. Flurries lasted nearly two hours in Greenville before giving way to a clearing sky. Forecasters say cold will follow the snow, with temperatures expected to drop to 15 degrees tonight. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Crippling Storm Leaves 2 Dead

By DAVID DROSCAK
Associated Press Writer

North Carolina residents are digging out after a winter storm that dumped up to 20 inches of snow, and preparing for the lowest temperatures of the winter as an Arctic air mass moves toward the state.

Thursday's snowstorm was blamed for at least two deaths and knocked out power to more than 70,000 homes in North and South Carolina. Road conditions were still so bad early today that Duke Power Co. used helicopters to ferry repair crews to Rutherfordton, said Duke spokeswoman Lucinda Trew.

The National Weather Service said the state would receive a chilling blast tonight, with temperatures expected to dip to 5-10 degrees in the mountains and 10-15 degrees across the state.

The heaviest snowfall came east of the mountains, the National Weather Service reported, with 20 inches reported in northern Iredell County and 12 inches or more in the rest of the county. Sixteen to 18 inches were reported in Surry and Rockingham counties, although the average in Rockingham was six to 12. In Alexander County, 17.5 inches were reported.

Counties reporting 10 to 14 inches included Alleghany, Wilkes, Yadkin, Davie, Rowan, Caswell, Forsyth and Davidson. The Greensboro-Winston-Salem-High Point Regional Airport reported 10 inches of snow, with wind-swept snow cutting visibility to 1/4-mile.

Eight inches of snow was reported as far east as Roxboro in Person County, while just 20 miles south and east accumulations were less than 2 inches.

The weather service said a few snow flurries continued to fall in the northern mountains early today, but there was little additional accumulation.

"It's been a wonderful day," Blue Ridge Parkway Ranger Larry Fitz said late Thursday. "Just a beautiful snow."

Election Hearing

Speakers Oppose At-Large Seats

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

LITTLEFIELD — The second of six public hearings on proposed changes in the method of electing members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners was held Thursday night at Ayden-Gritton High School.

Six speakers — out of the 18 people attending the hearing — voiced support for a plan to create six districts from which a member of the board would be elected only by people living in the district.

But the speakers took varying views on part of the proposal which calls for the election of three commissioners by the county at-large.

The board now consists of six members who must live in one of five residency districts (the Greenville district has two representatives), but are elected by countywide vote.

Mike Crowell, a Raleigh lawyer hired by the board to assist with the development of a new voting method, said the proposed plan is designed to "comply with the federal Voting Rights Act," by giving minority groups "equal opportunity to elect candidates of their choice."

Two of the proposed six districts have a predominately black population, he said.

He said the proposed districts are about equal in population to comply with the "one-man, one-vote" rule, and said the proposed districts, for the most part, follow "existing boundaries (township lines)." Only Greenville township and a small portion of Winterville township east on N.C. 43, are split by the proposed plan.

Crowell said three at-large representatives were proposed to assure that there are some members of the board who feel they represent the entire county rather than just a single geographical area.

He suggested that having three at-large members, rather than one or two, would give minorities a better

Snowed-In Coast Gripped By Cold

By The Associated Press

A paralyzing winter storm blamed for at least nine deaths from the Deep South to New England moved into Canada early today as plows and road-sanders moved up and down the snowed-in Atlantic Coast to clear roads and open airports.

"It's a classic Nor'easter," said National Weather Service meteorologist Bob Thomas in Albany, N.Y. "On the way it buries everybody."

Wind-whipped snow lashed New York state and New England early today and blizzard warnings were posted for parts of Massachusetts and Connecticut before the storm moved into northern Maine and Canada. Wind gusts up to 76 mph were clocked late Thursday at Chatham, Mass., and more than a foot of snow fell over inland New England.

But behind the storm, more trouble loomed. Temperatures plunged in parts of the South and hit the lowest point of the season along the upper Great Lakes.

"We're concerned that the temperature is going to drop and we're going to have the whole metropolitan area turn into an ice-skating rink," said Boston police Lt. Gerald Burke.

The storm, which brewed in the Gulf of Mexico and began blanketing Dixie with snow Wednesday night before developing into a blizzard, pounded states from Mississippi to Maine, dumping 20 inches in some areas.

The force of the storm wedged a 600-foot Greek freighter between two docks in Searsport, Maine. Crews worked today to free it.

The storm closed airports, schools, businesses and government offices, knocked out power over wide areas, particularly in the South, and stranded thousands of travelers.

Snow and ice made roads treacherous and brought traffic to a virtual halt in the Northeast, hit with its worst winter storm since mid-February 1983. Snow-packed roads were strewn with abandoned cars.

National Airport in Washington, D.C., New Jersey's Newark International and New York's Kennedy and LaGuardia airports reopened this morning after being shut down Thursday.

A single runway at Boston's Logan Airport was open for departures early today. A runway opened at Philadelphia International Airport for arrivals and departures.

At age 40, Tommy Edwards of Greenville was the youngest recipient ever to receive the Citizen of the Year Award given by the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

The award was presented at the chamber's annual meeting.

Edwards accepted the award on behalf of his family, co-workers and friends.

"My heart is filled with joy and pride at your thoughtfulness and generosity with this recognition," Edwards said.

He said that, when he thinks of the prior winners of the award, "I can't tell you how humble I am."

Edwards is president of Carolina Dairies and Fresh Way stores. He is a director of Branch Banking and Trust Co. and is president of the North Carolina Association of Convenience Stores. He serves as secretary-treasurer of the Kinston Wholesale Grocery and the Carolina Ice Co. and is treasurer and director of the North Carolina Dairy Products Association.

He has served on the chamber's board of directors for 10 years and is a past chairman of the board.

He is a member of the East Carolina University Foundation and a former director of the Pitt County Boys Club. He was the charter president of the Greenville Noon Rotary Club, where he has served in many capacities. The local club named him its Paul Harris Fellow. He was district governor for Rotary.

Edwards was recognized for outstanding service by Pitt County Memorial Hospital and is a member of Ducks Unlimited.

He is a member of Jarvis Memorial United Methodist. He and his wife Carla have two sons, Thomas Jr. and Stuart Michael.

"This award is Greenville's most prestigious and coveted award," said Wally Howard, a former winner of the Citizen of the Year Award who introduced Edwards.

"Over the years, you have chosen not to be a common man," Howard said of Edwards. "You have seized your opportunity to be uncommon. You have become involved and your purpose has been to contribute, not to be recognized."

City Manager Gail Meeks was named the Outstanding Volunteer of About 15 people gathered in front of the Pitt County Courthouse Thursday night to commemorate the 14th anniversary of the Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision that supported legal abortions.

"People should have a right whether or not to terminate" a pregnancy, said Fran Parrott, president of the local chapter of the National Organization for Women, which organized the candlelight vigil.

Participants in the half-hour vigil read from literature distributed by the Religious Coalition for Abortion Rights, "We Affirm." It is a collection of statements of "very religious groups on abortion," she said.

"Many of the things it mentions are in line with what we feel," Ms. Parrott said. "It's (abortion) a real private, personal thing and people need to choose for themselves what's right for them."

Organizations included in the literature are the American Baptist Churches, U.S.A., American Jewish Congress, American Protestant Health Association, Catholics For A Free Choice and Christian Church (Disciples of Christ).

This is the second consecutive year NOW has observed the anniversary of the Supreme Court decision through a vigil, Ms. Parrott said. In addition to the vigil last year, about 30 local participants joined in the March For Women's Lives in Washington and Los Angeles in March, she said.

Museum Record

RALEIGH (AP) — A total of 3,849 people visited the North Carolina Museum of Art on Jan. 18, the highest walk-in attendance for a regular opening day since the museum opened in 1956.

The figure was exceeded only by the attendance at the grand opening festival for the new building in 1983, which attracted about 20,000 visitors in two days.

High Court Upholds Victory For Coble

RALEIGH (AP) — A Superior Court judge today rejected former Rep. Robin Britt's call for a recount or a new election in the 6th District congressional race, which he lost to Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., by 79 votes.

Judge Giles Clark upheld the state Board of Election's decision last month to certify Coble as the winner.

"We're obviously pleased with the ruling," said Arch Allen, Coble's attorney. "After the state board ruled,

I certainly saw no reason for them to be reversed. They acted with careful deliberation and the court so found and affirmed."

Coble's attorneys responded that all of Britt's complaints were considered at length by the state board in a four-day hearing in Greensboro.

Britt, a Democrat unseated by Coble in 1984, contended in his suit that massive irregularities in tabulation of the vote in the Nov. 6 election justified a recount.

PCC Posts Increase In Winter Enrollment

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Pitt Community College has recorded an 8 percent increase in enrollment during the winter quarter, the board of trustees was told Thursday.

The total enrollment for the quarter is 2,675 during the day and 2,459 at night, an increase of 216 students.

Two new two-year programs — Marketing and Retailing and Personnel Management Technology — are being planned at PCC. The program committee reported that the curriculum for the two new programs is being designed for implementation by fall 1987.

According to the committee, instruction for the programs will be provided by part-time instruction from local people with experience in the fields and from PCC full-time faculty. The existing facilities can accommodate the programs.

Because there is no other two-year associate degree program in these areas in the state, funds will be available from the Department of Community Colleges. PCC Dean of Instruction Ed Bright said that money will be provided by the state for instructors and equipment.

The state Department of Transportation has recommended that a traffic light be installed at the southern entrance of the PCC campus at the intersection of N.C. 11 and State Road 1700 after a study of traffic patterns at the entrance of the campus. The cost estimate for the signal intersection is $25,000, according to the letter sent by DOT.

A.B. Whitley, chairman of the Building Committee, said that the final state inspection of the college's learning resource center should be completed by the end of the month. He said that the staff expects to move into the building during the first week of March.

A committee composed of Kay Whichard, Vernon White and Joe Taft was selected to suggest a name for the learning resources center and the planned vocational building.

PCC President Charles Russell said that he is expecting approval from the state for the Pitt Community College Foundation established by the board.

The board adopted a resolution naming Feb. 8-13 Vocational Education Week.

Board members were reminded that a vocational education conference and luncheon featuring a speech by N.C. Department of Community Colleges President Robert W. Scott will be held Feb. 2 at the Sheraton-Greenville.

The board members discussed a legislative change calling for trustee terms to be four years rather than six. Russell said that the state Trustees Association is lobbying for the Legislature to return the term to six years.

The board members viewed a slide presentation describing the Department of Community Colleges biennial budget.

The board accepted gifts presented to the school and adopted budget transactions. Policy information was presented to the board for information; action will be taken on the policy matters at the Feb. 26 meeting of the board.

Official's Suicide Shocked Friends Despite His Anger

By DAVID MORRIS
Associated Press Writer
HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — Friends and associates of Pennsylvania's treasurer say he had been angered and upset at being convicted of bribery, but they never dreamed he might shoot himself in front of a crowded news conference.

R. Budd Dwyer, who was to have been sentenced today, pulled a high-powered revolver from a manila envelope Thursday morning and waved off frantic onlookers in his office.

About two dozen horrified reporters, photographers and aides, some of them screaming, "No, Budd! Don't do this!" watched as the 47-year-old Republican put the gun barrel into his mouth and pulled the trigger. Cameras recorded the act.

Dwyer died instantly, said Dauphin County Coroner William Bush.

The state attorney general had ruled Wednesday that Dwyer would lose his job after being sentenced for awarding a state computer contract in return for a promised $300,000 payoff. No money changed hands.

Dwyer, who was to have been sentenced by U.S. District Judge Malcolm Muir, had faced up to 55 years in prison and a $305,000 fine on 11 counts.

"I've repeatedly said that I'm not going to resign as state Treasurer," Dwyer said in a suicide note released after his death.

"Please tell my story on every radio and television station and in every newspaper and magazine in the U.S. ... Please make sure that the sacrifice of my life is not in vain."

Dwyer purchased the .357-caliber Magnum revolver in 1982 and had it properly registered, state police said.

Rob Dwyer, 21, said his father had given no indication of what he intended to do.

"We're pretty broken up," he said, his voice breaking during a telephone interview. He said he heard the news at home with his mother, Joanne, 47, and sister, Dyan, 18.

Mrs. Dwyer, her eyes swollen from crying, talked briefly with reporters at the door of the family's Hershey home. She said only that she was sorry about what had happened.

Senate President Pro Tempore Robert Dole, who served with Dwyer when he was a state senator, said he had intended to call Dwyer after the sentencing to wish him well, "but in my wildest imagination I could never have expected anything like this kind of ending."

State Sen. Tim Shaffer, a friend of Dwyer's, said he was in complete shock.

"This was so totally uncharacteristic of Budd because he was such an upbeat guy," Shaffer said.

"He was down, he was angry about the verdict, but he seemed to be on an even keel," Dwyer spokesman Duke Horschok said of his boss.

Before pulling the gun, Dwyer read for more than 20 minutes from a statement proclaiming his innocence and criticizing the news media, the federal attorney who prosecuted him and Muir, who he said had a history of imposing stiff sentences.

When he took the gun out of the envelope, several reporters pleaded with him not to do anything. Dwyer waved off someone who appeared to move toward him.

"No," he said. "This will hurt someone."

Philadelphia Inquirer reporter Fred Cusick, who was sitting on the floor at the front of the room, said: "I should have run and grabbed him when he pulled out the envelope. I knew that was it."

Most reporters and Treasury Department officials thought Dwyer was going to announce his resignation. He indicated during the news conference that the last page of his statement would reveal his decision, but said that page would be distributed later because he didn't have enough copies.

Horschok released the page later.

"After many hours of thought and meditation, I've made a decision that should not be an example to anyone else because it is unique to my situation," Dwyer said in the statement.

He said Muir was noted for his "medieval sentences. I face a maximum sentence of 55 years in prison and a $305,000 fine for being innocent. ... Since I'm a victim of political persecution my prison would simply be an American Gulag."

IRS May Change New W-4 Format

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Senate subcommittee that oversees the Internal Revenue Service said today he thinks the agency will retract the W-4 withholding form that all taxpayers are required to fill out, and hopes it's done soon.

The IRS has been told to consider designing a simpler W-4 form, on which workers calculate the proper income tax withholdings from paychecks, following widespread complaints that the new form is too complicated.

"I think there will be ... a retraction of this form," Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., chairman of the subcommittee on IRS oversight, said on ABC's "Good Morning America" program. "I just hope it's done early."

Pryor said, "We're about to start a taxpayers revolt out there. People can't understand it, many of the accountants who call cannot understand it. ... So we've got a real problem. We should admit this has been a big mistake. Hopefully IRS will back off and come back to a more simple form like we've been used to in the past."

The IRS already has mailed out about 300 million of the four-page documents, which are designed to help taxpayers adjust their 1987 paycheck withholdings to square with the tax law revisions passed by Congress last year. But Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III said Thursday the current form and the lengthy worksheet that it includes for calculating the scores of changes in deductions and tax rates that Congress made is "entirely too complicated."

"I have asked that there be a review of the W-4 form with a view toward changing it, seeing if we can simplify it," Baker told the House Budget Committee.

"We're going to ... see if we can't come up with a better form," he said.

The Treasury secretary said he did not know how long it would take to develop a new form or when it might be distributed. But he said that taxpayers in the meantime should continue filling out the present version "to avoid a lot of unpleasant surprises down the road."

The W-4 form is the document which tells employers how much to withhold from employees' paychecks — an amount which, in turn, is based on how many dependants or other allowances an individual or couple claims.

Aspin Wins New Term On Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — A chagrined Rep. Les Aspin, after reversing an earlier defeat to win another term as chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, said he knows he has to be "more upfront" in dealing with Democratic colleagues.

The Wisconsin Democrat defeated three other Democrats on the Armed Services Committee in a series of secret ballot votes by party members meeting behind closed doors Thursday.

The final 133-116 tally overturned the 130-124 vote two weeks ago in which Aspin was rejected for a new term in the post he won in 1985. Aspin spent much of the past two weeks talking with his Democratic colleagues and succeeded in convincing enough of them to give him another chance.

"There was a message two weeks ago, and it was that there are a lot of things I need to do differently in dealing with people in here," Aspin said after Thursday's vote.

"I said then that the message was received and it was," he said, "it has a lot to do with the way I deal with people. I need to be more open. I need to be more upfront, I've got to make it clear what I'm doing and saying."

After the defeat two weeks ago, Democrats who voted against Aspin said they didn't trust him. They cited his support for President Reagan's MX nuclear-tipped missile and military aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua, two programs opposed by liberals.

Aspin won the powerful job two years ago by appealing to liberals in his successful effort to unseat the aging Rep. Melvin Price of Illinois as chairman. He said then he would move the committee, which oversees the Pentagon and which is traditionally one of the most conservative in the House, more to the left.

"I've gotten the message," said Aspin. "I think the entire effort will produce a more united Democratic party."

Van Gogh Painting Scheduled For Sale

LONDON (AP) — Vincent van Gogh's masterpiece "Sunflowers" will be sold in London in March and is expected to fetch a record price of well above $11 million, Christie's auction house said today.

"The painting is one of the most important we have ever had to sell. It is popular throughout the world and is a glamorous image of modern art," said James Roundell, director of Christie's Impressionist Paintings Department.

"When people think of van Gogh they think of sunflowers, and when they think of sunflowers they think of van Gogh," he said.

Roundell said the auction would take place March 30.

The predominantly yellow still life has hung in the British National Gallery in London since 1959, on loan from the family of mining magnate Sir Chester Beatty, who bought it in Paris in 1934 for an undisclosed sum.

It is being sold by executors of its last owner, the late Helen Beatty, widow of Alfred Beatty, the magnate's son. She died in 1983.

The record price for any painting sold at auction is $11,088,000 paid Dec. 1 in London for Edouard Manet's oil of workmen in Paris, "La Rue Mosnier aux Paveurs" (Mosnier Street with Road Workers).

"Sunflowers" depicts 15 flowers in a vase.

Van Gogh, who was born in 1853, painted seven sunflower pictures. The one for sale he painted in January 1889. It has more flowers than the others and is the largest, measuring 39½ inches by 30 inches.

Of the other six, four are in public museums in London, Munich, Philadelphia and Amsterdam, one was destroyed by bombing in Yokohama, Japan, in World War II, and one is in a private European collection, Roundell said.

He said: "Van Gogh did his sunflower pictures at a critical moment in his life, a time of intense optimism, and the yellow paint symbolizes hope, light and warmth. He was hoping to create a 'Studio of the South,' including his friend Paul Gauguin, which would push forward the development of post-Impressionist art."

Five months later, he shot himself to death.

Abortion Opponents Rally In Storm To Stage Protest

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Abortion opponents protested the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion for the 14th year in a row, their ranks thinned by heavy snow but buoyed by President Reagan's commitment to "the most basic civil right, the right to life."

A few thousand marchers bundled in snow gear made the trek Thursday from the White House to the Supreme Court. U.S. Park Police estimated the crowd at 2,000; District of Columbia police said 5,000. Previous years' marches have attracted up to 100,000 participants.

But those who marched were undeterred by half a foot of snow.

"They kill babies every day of the year, regardless of the weather," said Hal Brown, who traveled from Topeka, Kan., for his third march.

"Kids can't fight back so we're doing the fighting back for them," said Rosa Hopkins of Washington, D.C.

Among the protesters' signs was one that read, "Pick on someone your own size."

The narrow pro-choice majority on the court was on the minds of abortion supporters and opponents alike. Although the court last June reaffirmed its decision legalizing abortion in a Pennsylvania case, the 5-4 vote was much narrower than the 7-2 majority that legalized abortion in the 1973 Roe vs. Wade case.

"Thanks to you, we're only one vote away from overturning Roe vs. Wade," Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., a staunch abortion foe, told the demonstrators at the outdoor rally.

Kate Michelman, director of the National Abortion Rights Action League, acknowledged the narrow majority is worrisome to her constituency.

"There's no question we're concerned about the 5-4 majority in the court. If the president has the opportunity to appoint another Supreme Court justice, it could tip the balance," Ms. Michelman said.

"There's a sense we have this right and it's secure. But it's a fragile balance right now."

Reagan, speaking to the demonstrators via telephone hookup to an outdoor speaker, referred to the Supreme Court ruling as "the tragedy of 1973."

"Abortion is not a harmless medical procedure but the taking of the life of a living human being. This tragic and terrible toll continues at a rate of more than 4,000 young lives lost each day," he said.

"Our national commitment to the dignity of all human life must begin with respect for the most basic civil right, the right to life."

Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., marked the anniversary by introducing anti-abortion legislation in the House, including a constitutional amendment to ban abortion.

Twenty-one adults and two juveniles were arrested when they defied police warnings and moved onto Supreme Court property, spokesman Toni House said.

An Example

Physician, benefactor, sportsman, humanitarian, community leader.

The words all describe the late Dr. Ray Donald Minges. If the number of lives touched is a measure of a man's assets, he was an immensely wealthy man.

Minges was an individual who spent much of his time bettering the lives of others — through medical care, fund raising and community work. Pitt County was the focus of much of his caring. He was a leader loyal to his home.

Minges' contributions surpass any effort to list them. Very tangible achievements are behind the words used to praise him. He came from a family where public service is emphasized, and Minges continued that direction.

First, he was a surgeon at a time when there were few of them in Pitt County. He provided Pitt County Memorial Hospital with leadership that no doubt helped it to the pinnacle of growth it has reached. In his practice, he was true to the ideals of healing. His study of medicine was service, not just a way to make a living. He performed operations because they were needed, without attention to profit or pay.

Second, he was a friend to Pitt County as a contributor, fund raiser and worker. His pockets opened to many causes, but merely giving wasn't enough for Minges. He used his time and talents to persuade others to contribute. His success sent projects like the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center and the Century Club of East Carolina College soaring.

His love and respect for the outdoors benefitted Ducks Unlimited on both the local and national levels. This concern extended to his own community and the Pitt County Wildlife Club felt the impact of his caring.

Minges was also a sleeves-rolled-up worker for the community. Those involved with Babe Ruth baseball and Boy Scouts knew him as a member devoted to hands-on service as well as a financial patron.

Pitt County will miss Ray Minges' talent, fund raising capabilities and devotion. It will be most difficult to replace his leadership.

His life should stand as a challenge to each individual to seek happiness in giving, caring and sharing. His example should prompt in others the qualities of dedication to service, concern about those less fortunate and the best interest of the community.

Serious Problem

The mayors of Pitt County's 10 incorporated municipalities have unanimously approved a resolution which condemns illegal drug use.

The resolution calls illegal drugs an "internal enemy that is causing the very cornerstone of our society to decay and never has America been in such a vulnerable position with an enemy ..."

It continues, "unless we act now, history might well label this generation of public servants and society alike as having been negligent in attacking the apparent enemy of America with the vigor and efforts necessary to rid our country of a force that could lead to total disruption of the American way of life."

The mayors agreed to take steps to allocate adequate funds ... and educate the general population on the adverse effects of drug abuse, and publicly condemn the use of illegal drugs in our society."

The concept of a resolution condemning illegal drugs came from Frank Hemingway, mayor of Bethel. Farmville Police Chief William Waters has also been active in the effort.

The resolution was presented to the Pitt County Commissioners and Chairman Charles McLawhorn said they would do all they could to get an effective drug program under way.

Adopting such a resolution could be synonymous with favoring motherhood — except that the nation, right down to Pitt County, does face a serious illegal drug problem.

Since little progress at reducing illegal drug flow appears to have been made at the federal level, perhaps we can reverse things and provide the impetus from the grassroots.

If enough communities throughout the nation express their dissatisfaction, the message will be heard in Washington. Eventually it will get through that street drug busts won't stop the illegal traffic. The major supplies and suppliers must be stopped if we are ever to dry up the illegal drug business. The availability must end before drugs ever reach small town America.

Today's Thoughts

North Carolina's Senator Jesse Helms won the place he wanted on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Seniority was the key as Republican senators voted Helms in over Sen. Richard G. Lugar of Indiana. It seems safe to conclude that in the United States Senate, the traditional pecking order prevailed.

The Politics Of Caution

WASHINGTON — The offer to former senator Howard Baker to succeed William J. Casey as CIA director confirms Reaganaut fears that the Reagan Era will be allowed to wither away in its final two years, dying not with a bang but a whimper.

Baker's initial "no" to White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan may not be final. But the stark contrast between daring, swashbuckling Bill Casey and cautious, popular Howard Baker measures the White House retreat in the wake of the Iran-contra scandal. "It shows that Regan wants a safe political head at the CIA, not a Reaganaut activist," a conservative leader told us. "That is the mark of a lifeless administration."

Regan's caution is reinforced by the president's own partial withdrawal from active duty. That enthrone caution in the place of the politics of aggressive activism that distinguished Reagan's first six years. It guarantees that public attention will remain fixed on new revelations sure to emerge drip-by-drip, torture-style from Iran-contra investigations.

The president's withdrawal is noted by Oval Office visitors, including members of the administration. Ambassador David Abshire, the resident Iran-contra fact-finder, was surprised during his first effort to debrief the president on what he knew and when he knew it. Reagan's response on the issue was negligible and his apparent interest in it less than consuming. He told Abshire his best old Hollywood tales.

The torture treatment from ever-widening but never conclusive disclosures is bound to worsen, threatening such high officials as Secretary of State George Shultz. Testifying before the Tower Commission recently, Regan was asked whether Shultz had expressed his self-proclaimed opposition to the Iran arms deal with real force and conviction on Jan. 7, 1986 — or had simply indicated opposition when the deal was raised at the National Security Council.

Regan's response, according to White House insiders, was that he did not recall any strong Shultz intervention, such as "banging the table" to register his opposition.

The Tower Commission, headed by former senator John Tower, may pass judgment on Shultz's behavior in its report on grounds that the secretary had an obligation either to say "no" and resign — or to say he did not like the proposal but would do what he could to make it work better.

Instead, Shultz may simply have turned his back and ignored the most fateful foreign policy action ever mounted by the administration.

Likewise, when the Justice Department finally gets to inspect those still-secret bank accounts in Switzerland, top officials predict that new scandals are inevitable. Lt. Col. Oliver North told Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams, one Iran-contra investigator reported to us, that the $10 million Abrams legally raised for the contras from the sultan of Brunei "never arrived."

The money was supposed to have been "wired" to a North-controlled secret Swiss bank account. North's veracity is not doubted here, but if what he told the State Department's Latin American specialist was accurate, it will be another dose of big trouble for the Reagan administration posing this question: Who got the $10 million?

Yet the apparent White House choice of caution as the best policy for the next two years will, for want of anything else, focus public interest on one lurid piece of the scandal after another. Congressional Reaganauts are trying — so far unsuccessfully — to pierce the iron curtain dropped by Reagan and Regan around the Oval Office and counsel a return to activism.

Reflecting discontent, Sen. Malcolm Wallop told us what is needed from the White House is "challenge." He defined that as a toughly-worded Reagan veto of the Clean Water Act before the Jan. 27 State of the Union message — if the bill reaches his desk before then — and an "aggressive commitment" to the contras and the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) in that speech.

But caution, not challenge, is enveloping the White House. And it seems to be thickening, not dissipating.

Here We Go Again!

WASHINGTON — Well, here we go again. The opening gavel scarcely had fallen in the U.S. Senate before Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, joined by 42 colleagues, revived the poor old Equal Rights Amendment to the Constitution. This is a sleeping dog. Congress ought to let it lie.

The discredited ERA was only one of a dozen resolutions of constitutional amendment to be offered on opening day. Not a one of them is worth the paper it is printed on. In this bicentennial year of the Constitution, couldn't we just leave the charter of our liberties alone?

Age has not improved the ERA. The Kennedy resolution is identical to the resolution that failed over a 10-year period to win the support of three-fourths of the states. It is just as ambiguous, just as needless, just as unwise as before. If it should win the approval of two-thirds of each house of Congress, it will prove just as divisive within the state legislatures. This we positively do not need.

Is it ambiguous? The proposed amendment says that "equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex." What rights does the amendment contemplate? No one can say for sure. The feeble answer of proponents is that they would leave all that to the courts.

Is it needless? Over the past 20 years, relying upon the "equal protection" clause of the 14th Amendment, proponents of the ERA have won every constitutional battle they have waged. In Congress and in the state legislatures, sexist statutes have everywhere been repealed. What is there left to fight about? Where in our public laws is there any significant trace of discrimination "on account of sex"?

Is it unwise? The overlooked second section of this well-intended but misguided resolution would authorize a major transfer of power from the states to the Congress. This section would vest in Congress the power to enforce the article "by appropriate legislation." No one knows exactly what this means, either. If the ERA ever should be added to the Constitution, the states would lose the power they historically have exercised over legislative areas that touch upon "sex." Among these areas are divorce, inheritance, criminal law, homosexuality and conditions of employment. The ancient and honored principle of federalism argues strongly against so radical an innovation.

At least five amendments have been proposed to require a balanced federal budget except in time of war. The version offered by Strom Thurmond of South Carolina is the shortest of the lot and therefore the least offensive, but all of them are unrealistic and none of them could be enforced. The way to balance the budget is to elect members with the guts to make income and outgo coincide. Lacking that kind of political courage, no constitutional amendment ever would be effective.

Here we go again on school prayer. This is Thurmond's proposal: "Nothing in this Constitution shall be construed to prohibit individual or group prayer in public schools or other public institutions. No person shall be required by the United States or by any state to participate in prayer. Neither the United States nor any state shall compose the words of any prayer to be said in public schools." We have lived a long time under the rule that no laws may be passed "respecting an establishment of religion," and though this commandment has been erratically interpreted by the Supreme Court, the results have not been intolerable.

This amendment could not be adopted without the most bitter controversy — controversy that would tear the country apart.

Here we go again on abortion. Andy Jacobs of Indiana proposes to write this provision into the Constitution: "The birth of any person shall not be prevented by the voluntary termination of the pregnancy of any person, unless such pregnancy is the result of an act of rape or incest, or such termination is necessary to prevent the death of the woman." Virginia Smith of Nebraska proposes a similar but more restrictive guarantee of the right to life of unborn persons. She would not exempt even those pregnancies resulting from rape or incest. Any such amendment, if ratified, would drive the agonizing business of abortion back to the back-alley butcher shops of old.

Other resolutions of amendment deal with establishing English as our official language, with restricting invocation of the Fifth Amendment, and with limiting senators to two six-year terms and representatives to six three-year terms. None of these is urgently required. As the conservative maxim goes, when it is unnecessary to change, it is necessary not to change.

Strength For Today

We read in the Bible that the apostle Peter was so respected by his generation that people brought their sick and ailing and laid them in the street, believing that the lives of these loved ones would be benefited and their ailments cured if only the shadow of Peter fell on them.

There are also men and women today whose lives are such that even when their shadow falls across us we are blessed. They are unselfish. They talk about themselves little and about others much. Generally they have little money, but they have a richness of heart that everybody sees and acknowledges.

None of us has the powers of the apostle Peter, but all of us, with the help of our religion, can cultivate the capacity to ease the burdens of others by our interest, good will and friendliness. In a limited sense, then, we can also become apostles.

Attorney Says Rose Made Loan

WILMINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charlie Rose, who came under fire from Republicans last fall for borrowing money from his campaign committees, made a previously unreported loan to his campaign committee in 1973, Rose's attorney says.

William C. Oldaker, Rose's Washington lawyer, said a bank draft proves that Rose loaned his campaign committee $50,000 in 1973, but he said he did not know if Rose would show the proof publicly.

"We can show the documentation that he loaned the money," Oldaker said. "We have the actual check going from him to the campaign."

Rose's previous statements and previous filings with the Federal Elections Commission described money he got from his committee as loans. He replaced the money, sometimes paying interest.

In amended FEC reports filed Jan. 6, Rose's campaign committee claims the money Rose took from the committee were repayments to him of the 1973 loan. The new reports were the first public disclosures of the 14-year-old loan and obligate the committee to pay Rose $50,000 on demand.

"I don't think Rose has done anything illegal," Oldaker told The Morning Star in Wilmington. "It was just inaccurate reporting. It was improperly characterized. ... He's the candidate. He doesn't fill out the report."

Oldaker said the loan was never reported, although such reporting was required by a law passed in 1971. It was not until 13 years later, he said, that Rose told him of the loan.

"My judgment is it should have been reported," said Oldaker, who served as a counsel to the Federal Elections Commission from 1976 to 1979. "But whoever did it back then — I don't know who it was — I think made the wrong judgment."

When asked why Rose had not mentioned the loan before, Oldaker said: "I think he basically thought in his mind that the $50,000 was long gone, but in my legal opinion it wasn't long gone."

Oldaker said Rose was "speaking in lay terms, not legal terms" when he referred to the repayments as loans.

Oldaker said Rose told him of the 1973 loan when N.C. Republican Chairman Bob Bradshaw charged that Rose may have used money from his campaign for personal purposes.

Rose, in past statements, has denied using the money for personal purposes.

Bradshaw has asked the House Ethics Committee to investigate, but the committee has not yet formally accepted Bradshaw's complaint. A decision could come as early as February.

Helms Says Congressional Club Needs Money

RALEIGH (AP) — Senator Jesse Helms says in a fund-raising letter that the National Congressional Club has fallen on "financial hard times" and is struggling to pay its creditors, but club officials say the wolves are not baying at their door.

Helms said in the fund-raising letter dated Dec. 31 that the club was "faced with cutting back to pay debts."

"Frankly, because the club overextended itself in the final days of the recent campaign, helping Jerry Denton and Steve Symms and others, the club has fallen on financial hard times," Helms wrote.

He was referring to former Sen. Jeremiah Denton, R-Ala., and Sen. Steven D. Symms, R-Idaho. Denton lost a bid for re-election, while Symms was re-elected.

"At a time when it must be building its financial base for 1988, it is struggling to pay impatient creditors," Helms wrote.

But Carter Wrenn, executive director of the club, said the club's debts were typical for the end of an election year, and that workers are normally laid off after an election.

"The political fund-raising business is a seasonal operation,"

Wrenn said. "After an election and in off years you have less interest and less fund raising than you do during election years."

As of Nov. 24, the Congressional Club owed $339,827 to creditors and had $4,969 on hand, according to campaign finance reports filed with the state Board of Elections. The club was owed $81,070.

Published reports quoting unnamed sources had said the club and its subsidiary organizations recently laid off 24 to 27 workers.

But Wrenn said he could not confirm how many people were laid off because the Federal Election Commission ordered him to remove himself from the direction of Jefferson Marketing Inc., a for-profit political advertising and consulting firm.

Fire Blamed On Oily Rags

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Oily rags used to refinish furniture are believed to have ignited a fire that destroyed a downtown Asheville furniture company and heavily damaged another historic building, authorities said.

Asheville Fire Chief John Rukavina said no injuries were reported in the Thursday blaze, which at its peak sent flames soaring 75 feet into the air.

Although the actual cause of the fire cannot be determined because of the extensive damage, authorities believe linseed oil and rags ignited spontaneously in the rear of the first floor of Livingstone Upholstery Shop and Globe Furniture Co., caused the fire.

Rukavina said more than $250,000 in damages were incurred at the furniture company, a vacant building south of it and several buildings across the street.

Firefighters first learned of the blaze when they received a call at 12:21 a.m. that heavy smoke was seen around the back of the Windsor Hotel, Rukavina said.

Moments after firefighters arrived on the scene the fire shattered the front of the furniture store, igniting awnings at two buildings across the street, he said.

The intensity of the heat also shattered windows at Finkelstein's Inc., Sluder Furniture Co. and an antique shop, Rukavina said.

As Storm Rages, Lock Operators Clear Out

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — With half the state covered in snow, the other half drowning in rain and waters approaching flood stage, workers at the Cape Fear River's locks and dams decided it was time to clear out.

Workers at the William O. Huske Lock and Dam 3 near Fayetteville and at Lock and Dam 2 near Elizabethtown Thursday pulled up their fences, removed the electric motors that operate the lock gates and left the river.

The workers will wait until waters recede before they return to operate the locks, which are used by tugs and barges chugging up and down the river between Fayetteville and Wilmington.

Thursday brought as much as 20 inches of snow to parts of the state west of Raleigh, while to the east, heavy rain fell. More than 1.5 inches of rain fell in Wilmington in about 12 hours during the storm — 1.36 inches during Thursday.

S.L. Crawley, chief of the Army Corps of Engineers' bridges and locks management section in Wilmington, said fencing at the locks on the Cape Fear River had to be removed because of floating logs.

"The logs would tear the fencing off otherwise," he said.

Towns below the dams are in no danger, despite the overflow, because the dams are only about 10 feet high, Crawley said. They are designed to cause a slightly deeper back-pool of water upstream, and water washes over them several times a year.

The federal government in 1910 authorized building the locks and dams as aids to navigation, said Bob Thomson, chief of the Wilmington corps operations branch. Lock and Dam 1, the closest to Wilmington, and Lock and Dam 2 were built around 1915, he said.

"They're fairly low dams and water spills right over the top. It happens fairly regularly," Thomson said.

The wet weather has passed, but snow has yet to melt in the western part of the state. The weather service called for the Cape Fear River to crest Thursday and fall below flood stage by Sunday at lock and dams 2 and 3. The weather service said the river was at 27.53 inches Thursday afternoon, more than twice its normal level, but below the flood stage of 35 feet.

SNOW AND MORE SNOW — Becky Joyce attempts to kick snow from the sidewalk as Russ Franklin tries to move his car out of his driveway in Greensboro Thursday afternoon. Greensboro received about 10 inches of snow early Thursday as the western half of North Carolina was blanketed by a winter storm. (AP Laserphoto)

Democrats Question Cost Of Security For Governor

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — A report by the Martin administration says replacing the governor's Highway Patrol bodyguards with a private security force would cost an additional $56,000, but some Democratic legislative leaders questioned the report's findings.

"The governor needs protection; you've got a lot of crackpots," House Speaker Liston Ramsey said Thursday in an interview. At issue, he said, is how to provide the best security for the least money.

The report, presented at a meeting of the Joint Commission on Governmental Operations by patrol Maj. W.D. Teem and Sgt. C.A. Danieley, said the present executive security detail costs $693,077 for round-the-clock protection of the governor and his family. The costs include salaries, benefits, uniforms, weapons, vehicles, equipment and travel expenses.

The cost would increase to $769,472, not including training, if the state created a new security force and returned the 17 patrolmen to regular duties, the report said.

It said the change would require the purchase of new equipment, autos and other items plus the same salaries and benefits paid now.

Lawmakers questioned why each of the patrolmen assigned to the Executive Mansion needed a state car, and contended that members of the security detail often get promotions ahead of other patrolmen who are at least as deserving.

During the 1986 short session, a provision slipped into a budget bill would have ordered Republican Gov. Jim Martin to replace the Highway Patrol officers with a private security force.

The provision was deleted when the administration objected, but the Commission on Governmental Operations asked for an administration study of the feasibility and cost of the proposed change.

Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, challenged the report's findings. "I have not found from a single detailed question I have asked ... where it would cost more," he said.

The report said 37 of 40 states responding to an inquiry provided security for the governor or other "executive personnel." New York assigns 42 officers to the task, while Maryland assigns 22, South Carolina and Georgia 18, and Florida 12.

None of the 40 responding states uses a private security firm, the report said.

In the interview, Ramsey questioned whether Martin reimbursed the state for costs of his protection while attending political events.

Karen H. Rotterman, Martin's communications director, said the governor's political organization pays for his and his bodyguards' transportation to and from political events.

But the reimbursement doesn't cover the Highway Patrolmen's salaries, "because they are assigned to stay with him 24 hours a day,"

Mrs. Rotterman said, adding that previous administrations had the same policy.

The report included a letter from the U.S. Secret Service recommending that North Carolina add four people to its detail and boost security in other ways, such as installing an infrared or microwave alarm system on the Executive Mansion grounds.

Watkins and Ramsey said they had heard complaints that most patrolmen who serve on the security detail were promoted during or shortly after their time with the governor.

"They go there a year or two and come out as a sergeant, and the fellow that stays on the highways in the rain and the mud doesn't get promoted as quickly, if at all, Ramsey said. "Whether it's going on now or not, I don't know."

Ramsey said, however, he had no plans to push for legislation to strip the Highway Patrol of the security duty.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said he had no quarrel with the current system.

Sentenced

LENOIR, N.C. (AP) — Fred Coffey was sentenced Wednesday to 50 years in prison after pleading guilty to sexually abusing three Caldwell County children.

Coffey, 41, pleaded guilty to nine counts of taking indecent liberties with children.

He originally was charged with six counts of taking indecent liberties — punishable by a maximum of 10 years in prison each — and four counts of first-degree sexual offense — punishable by a mandatory life term.

Durham Recalls Suspect As 'Responsible' Student

DURHAM (AP) — People in Durham remember Terence Peter Jackson as a quiet, intelligent and responsible man who expressed an interest in elderly people while earning a master's degree in physical therapy from Duke University in 1981.

But the FBI says Jackson was really Silas Trim Bissell, an organizer of the radical student group Weather Underground who they had been seeking for nearly 17 years in connection with an attempt to bomb an ROTC building in Seattle.

"It's certainly disconcerting to realize that someone's not being totally honest," said Dr. Robert C. Bartlett, chairman of the physical therapy department at Duke.

"As he dealt with us in the program, he always demonstrated the utmost integrity," Bartlett said Thursday.

The FBI had sought Bissell for nearly 17 years before arresting him Tuesday in Eugene, Ore., where he worked as a physical therapist in a hospital. He is being held on charges of conspiring to damage federal property and possessing an unregistered destructive device.

Bissell enrolled in Duke's physical therapy program in the fall of 1979 and finished in the spring of 1981. Bartlett said Bissell was quiet and did not act in a way that made him stand out. "He expressed, I think, a lot of concern and interest in elderly people," Bartlett said.

Before Bissell entered the physical therapy program, he worked as a nurse's aide at Hillhaven LaSalle Nursing Center in Durham from September 1978 until July 1979.

Bissell and his wife, Judith Emily, 42, were arrested Jan. 18, 1970, by University of Washington police on charges stemming from the alleged bombing attempt. They were released on bond, but did not appear for trial.

Soldier Held In Fire

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A Fort Bragg soldier has been charged with arson in the burning of a mobile home belonging to a woman whose body was discovered on the Army post last weekend.

Spec. 4 Ronald Adrin Gray, 21, an Army cook, was charged Thursday in the burning of Laura Lee Vickery Clay's Fairlane Acres Mobile Home City trailer Dec. 16.

Shortly after the fire was reported, investigators found Mrs. Clay's car about a block away. The 18-year-old Army mail clerk, who had been married only three weeks, could not be found.

Her nude body was found early Saturday in woods on the Army post. She appeared to have been shot at the site where she was found, authorities said.

Gray was in jail on several rape charges when he was charged with arson.

Mrs. Clay is one of three women from the mobile home park killed in the last year. A fourth woman, a taxi driver, was killed shortly after reporting she was picking up a rider near the park.

No arrests have been made in the slayings.

Phone Bills

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Utilities Commission has entered an order expanding a program of the Federal Communications Commission designed to reduce monthly telephone bills for recipients of aid to families with dependent children and supplemental security income benefits.

Effective July 1, the subscriber line charge waiver program will be expanded in scope to provide for a 100 percent match of the $2 federal residential subscriber line charge, resulting in a total rate reduction for eligible recipients of $4 per month, the commission said Thursday.

Under the expanded program, eligible recipients of benefits will not be required to pay the $2 per month federal charge and will also have their monthly rates for basic service reduced to $2.

The expanded program will include all of the regulated local exchange telephone companies operating in North Carolina throughout their service territories, the commission said.

Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Co., Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. and Continental Telephone Co. of North Carolina estimate that there are approximately 80,000 recipients of AFDC and SSI benefits in their combined service territories in North Carolina.

Safeguards

RALEIGH (AP) — Families of patients who have escaped from state mental hospitals need more safeguards to protect their privacy, a Raleigh woman told a 13-member committee studying the problem on Thursday.

The woman, who asked not to be identified, told of how two area television stations aired the name of her 16-year-old son when he escaped from Dorothea Dix Hospital Jan. 12. They learned his name from a police scanner after Dix security called for help in finding him, she said.

Her son ran off campus and had a knife with him but never pointed it at anyone, the woman said. When Dix security officers saw him with the knife they didn't pursue him because they were afraid he would fall and hurt himself. He later returned to the children's building on his own.

The woman said her other children were teased by friends who heard the news and disturbed for a week after the incident. The son at Dix was so upset that he no longer talks to his brother and sister.

Drug Raid

BELMONT, N.C. (AP) — County and state drug agents have confiscated more than $100,000 in cocaine and marijuana during a series of arrests in eastern Gaston County.

Officers arrested six people from Belmont and Mount Holly after a 2½-month undercover operation, said county police Capt. C.T. Fuller. The operation was a joint project of Gaston County Police and the State Bureau of Investigation.

Shoes Seized

ROXBORO, N.C. (AP) — The U.S. Customs Service confiscated 44 pairs of counterfeit Reebok athletic shoes from a Roxboro sporting good store last week, and officials say counterfeit shoes have turned up in several other locations in North Carolina.

Pete Killan, assistant U.S. Attorney, said the counterfeit shoes were not being made in the United States but were being shipped into this country.

"When the investigation is complete, we will be presenting the results to a federal grand jury in the Eastern District of North Carolina and there may or may not be indictments," Killan said.

Wayne Roberts, manager and owner of the Roxboro R&S Sporting Goods store, said he spent about $1,000 on the 44 pairs of shoes.

No arrests in the case have been made, Killan said.

Appointment

RALEIGH (AP) — State Rep. Bobby Etheridge, a Democrat who represents agriculture-oriented Harnett County, soon will have a chance to discuss farming at the national level.

Etheridge has been named vice chairman of the Agriculture, Food Policy and Rural Development Committee of the National Conference of State Legislatures in Washington. The group helps set the agenda for the conference's lobbying efforts in Congress.

Dog Starvation

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A Marshville man received a 90-day suspended jail term and was ordered to pay a $250 fine Wednesday for starving two dogs to death.

Thomas Helms of Route 2, Marshville, was found guilty in Union County District Court of cruelty to animals by failing to feed them.

Sponsors Say 10,000 Will March In Georgia

By KAREN BENNETT
Associated Press Writer

ATLANTA (AP) — A march by as many as 10,000 people through virtually all-white Forsyth County will launch a new civil rights movement, a veteran activist says.

"This ain't no march, we're starting a movement," the Rev. Hosea Williams told a racially mixed crowd that packed Ebenezer Baptist Church on Thursday night.

"We have not been together this way since Martin Luther King was put in that grave," said Williams, pointing to the slain civil rights leader's grave near the church that served as a King's base of operations during the 1950s and '60s.

Saturday's planned "March Against Fear and Intimidation" was organized after a Jan. 17 march by about 75 blacks and whites was met by about 400 Ku Klux Klan-led counterdemonstrators who pelted them with rocks, mud and bottles.

Williams' son, Hosea Williams II, said the projected 10,000 marchers was five times the number originally expected.

Law enforcement officials have estimated that 1,200 counterdemonstrators will show up, although two Klan leaders said their groups would not attend.

The elder Williams, a member of the Atlanta City Council, said he expected counterdemonstrators Saturday to be "more vicious" than last week.

Meanwhile, 10 members of the Guardian Angels spent Thursday night in tents near a Forsyth County trailer park after being heckled by up to 100 whites, said Curtis Sliwa, leader of the citizen crimefighters.

The Angels, who marched 30 miles north from Atlanta, want to prove that blacks can spend the night in the county, Sliwa said. They planned to begin walking the remaining 11 miles to Cumming today, said Angel Thomas Hunt.

At a news conference Thursday, county Sheriff Wesley Walraven said authorities would work to ensure that last weekend's violence was not repeated. Law officers will "make sure that each person can exhibit their point of view," Walraven said.

Among those who have said they would march are former U.S. Sen. Gary Hart, the Rev. Jesse Jackson, comedian Dick Gregory, Benjamin Hooks, executive director of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Corretta Scott King.

Although two KKK leaders have said their groups would not attend, Ed Fields of Marietta, editor of the right-wing newspaper "The Thunderbolt," said he was "doing everything I can to urge them to change their minds."

Fields said David Dukes, head of the National Association for the Advancement of White People, would be in Forsyth County on Saturday.

S.C. Textile Group Optimistic About 1987 Prospects

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — The South Carolina Textile Manufacturers Association believes the state's textile industry will remain steady in 1987 and earn more than the previous year, SCTMA President Marshall Chapman says.

"While 1,900 manufacturing jobs were lost last year in South Carolina, the textile industry actually gained 200 jobs. We are very optimistic," said Chapman, who also is president of Inman Mills.

"Our industry is not a sunset industry," Chapman said Thursday at the conclusion of a two-day meeting of the SCTMA board of directors.

The stabilization of the industry beleaguered by imports is because of the modernization of plants, increased productivity and increased demand for products made in the United States following a national advertising campaign, Chapman said.

According to the state Employment Security Commission, an estimated 1,275 jobs will be created as a result of four companies opening plants in South Carolina that are directly related to the textile and apparel industry, Chapman said.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

PROPHETIC ASSOCIATIONS

THE FIRST MENTION OF A COMPANY OF PROPHETS, AS A GROUP IS NOTED IN THE BOOK OF I SAMUEL (I SAM. 10:5). THAT WAS IN THE TOWN OF GIBEAH OF GOD THE HOME OF SAUL, FIRST KING OF ISRAEL. WHETHER THEY WERE A WANDERING BAND OF PROPHETS, GOING FROM TOWN TO TOWN OR A COMMUNITY OF PROPHETS LIVING AT GIBEAH IS HARD TO SAY NOW. NEVERTHELESS, THIS IS THE BAND THAT KING SAUL PROPHESIED WITH IN NAIOTH, IN RAMAH, WHEN HE WAS SEARCHING FOR DAVID. (I SAM. 19:18-24) THE BIBLE TELLS US, HERE THAT SAMUEL STOOD AS ONE APPOINTED OVER THEM AND SAUL PROPHESIED BEFORE SAMUEL -- IT LEAVES THE IMPRESSION THAT SAMUEL DID HAVE SOME LEADERSHIP OVER THEM. HOWEVER, TWO HUNDRED YEARS LATER, IN THE NORTHERN KINGDOM OF ISRAEL, PROPHETIC COMMUNITIES DID MAKE THEIR APPEARANCE FOR A BRIEF SPELL. PROBABLY FOUNDED BY ELIJAH, ON THE MODEL OF THE EARLIER SOCIETY UNDER SAMUEL, THESE MEMBERS WERE CALLED...

...SONS OF THE PROPHETS? THE NAME DENOTES THAT THEY DID BELONG TO A PROPHETIC ORDER, JUST AS A SON OF THE GOLDSMITH FOLLOWED THE GOLDSMITH'S ART, AND THE SON OF AN APOTHECARY, THE TRADE OF HIS FATHER, AND A SON OF A SINGER BELONGED TO A SINGER'S GUILD (NEH. 3:8,31) — ALSO (II KINGS 2:3,7,16).

Evangelist's Wife Receives Treatment

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Tammy Bakker, wife of PTL President Jim Bakker, is in good condition after 10 days at a California hospital where she is being treated for pneumonia and for complications caused by callers.

PTL Executive Director Richard Dortch said the PTL had received a half dozen phone calls from people who said they had heard or read Mrs. Bakker had died.

Neither Dortch nor PTL spokesman Neil Eskelin had specifics on the reports cited by callers.

"I heard it for the first time yesterday at work," Eskelin said Thursday. "I don't know where the rumor started."

Mrs. Bakker entered Eisenhower Medical Center in Rancho Mirage, Calif., on Jan. 13. The 290-bed hospital is near Palm Desert, Calif., where the Bakkers own a home. "The only update we've gotten is that she is in good condition," said a hospital spokeswoman, who declined to give her name.

Eskelin said Thursday that Mrs. Bakker is expected to remain hospitalized "for a while longer."

"They are doing a series of tests on her to be absolutely sure she is OK," Eskelin said. "She is still not over her pneumonia."

Bakker has been visiting with his wife at the California hospital since her admission, Eskelin said. The Bakkers' 16-year-old daughter, Tammy Sue Bakker, has been hosting PTL's "Jim and Tammy" show.

Campaign

NEW YORK (AP) — Facing a study finding that Jewish students are heavy abusers of drugs, the New York Board of Rabbis has launched a special campaign to combat drug abuse, alcoholism and compulsive gambling.

Rabbi Haskel Lookstein, president of the 1,000-member board, said the anti-addiction campaign was being pressed through synagogues, religious schools, rabbinical seminaries and community programs.

Saying addiction has reached "crisis proportions," he cited a study on religious affiliations and patterns of drug usage in urban universities finding that "Jewish students as a group were heavier users than Catholic or Protestant students."

Opposition

NEW YORK (AP) — Church groups concerned about corporate responsibility have voiced opposition to a New York Stock Exchange proposal to allow corporations to issue non-voting stock.

Program Uses Exercises In Heart Attack Recovery

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The track at Duke University's Wallace Wade Stadium is packed with people engaged in what therapists like to call lifestyle management.

Some 40 people, most dressed in sweatsuits, turn circle after circle. Some jog, others alternate between brisk and slow walks. Those who move too fast or too slow are soon joined by a doctor or nurse, who are monitoring the group.

In a room above the track, other people are riding stationary bicycles or doing slow rolls and leg lifts on floor mats.

Some patients are in their 40s, others in their 70s. Some have suffered heart attacks and others are working to prevent the onset of heart disease.

Duke University's Preventive Approach to Cardiology, or DUPAC, began in 1976 with one doctor, two nurses and four patients. The program to rehabilitate patients who have had heart attacks has grown to 650 patients and some 20 DUPAC employees, and it now includes people who see exercise as a way to prevent heart attacks.

Officials say thousands of people have used the DUPAC program in the past 10 years. The cardiac rehabilitation program is certified by the state every two years.

The founder of the program, Dr. Andrew G. Wallace, believes exercise may be the key to prevention. The doctors and nurses of DUPAC have developed a structured plan of diet and exercise that pinpoints bad habits and revises them. They provide clinics to help patients stop smoking, and diet instructions for those who are overweight or eating foods with too much cholesterol.

"Behavior modification is part of the program," said Dot Efland, the patient relations representative for DUPAC. "We recommend that they see a psychologist. We have a quit smoking clinic and they are encouraged to go. In many cases, it's just a habit."

Mrs. Efland is a believer in the program. Her husband, Bill, is in DUPAC after undergoing bypass surgery late last year.

A typical patient, like Bill Efland, will commit to six months of treatment. They come at least three times a week for three months, following meal and exercise plans. Patients must either follow the meal plan developed by a nutritionist or be on the Duke rice diet.

Patients receive treadmill tests to determine their endurance, and workers gear exercise programs to their needs.

"They want every single patient to know about their disease — to know what they can do about it," said one DUPAC patient.

In the first six weeks, patients find they can do more exercise because their heart rate is getting stronger. Mrs. Efland said. Chip Spann, DUPAC's director, remembers a woman who was thought to be too sick to exercise. She began the program and worked her way up to walking a mile and a half on the track.

But patients are monitored by doctors and nurses to be certain that they don't overextend themselves. Pulse and blood pressure checks are routine.

Mrs. Efland said the mean age for a patient is somewhere in the 50s, but some are in their 40s, while others are in their 80s. They can be referred to the program by doctors, though that is not required. Some stay only a few months. Others continue to participate for years.

Both patients and DUPAC personnel say part of the program's success can be attributed to the camaraderie that develops between the participants. They look forward to their meetings on the track and in the exercise classes.

"They almost rediscover the wheel," Spann said. "They discover they have a body."

"They help each other," he said. "Someone can always help someone in the group they care about."

"This is a fountain of youth," said one patient, who had bypass surgery in Seattle and came to Durham after his wife searched for the best cardiac rehabilitation center in the country. "I've seen people who came in here dragging and go out running."

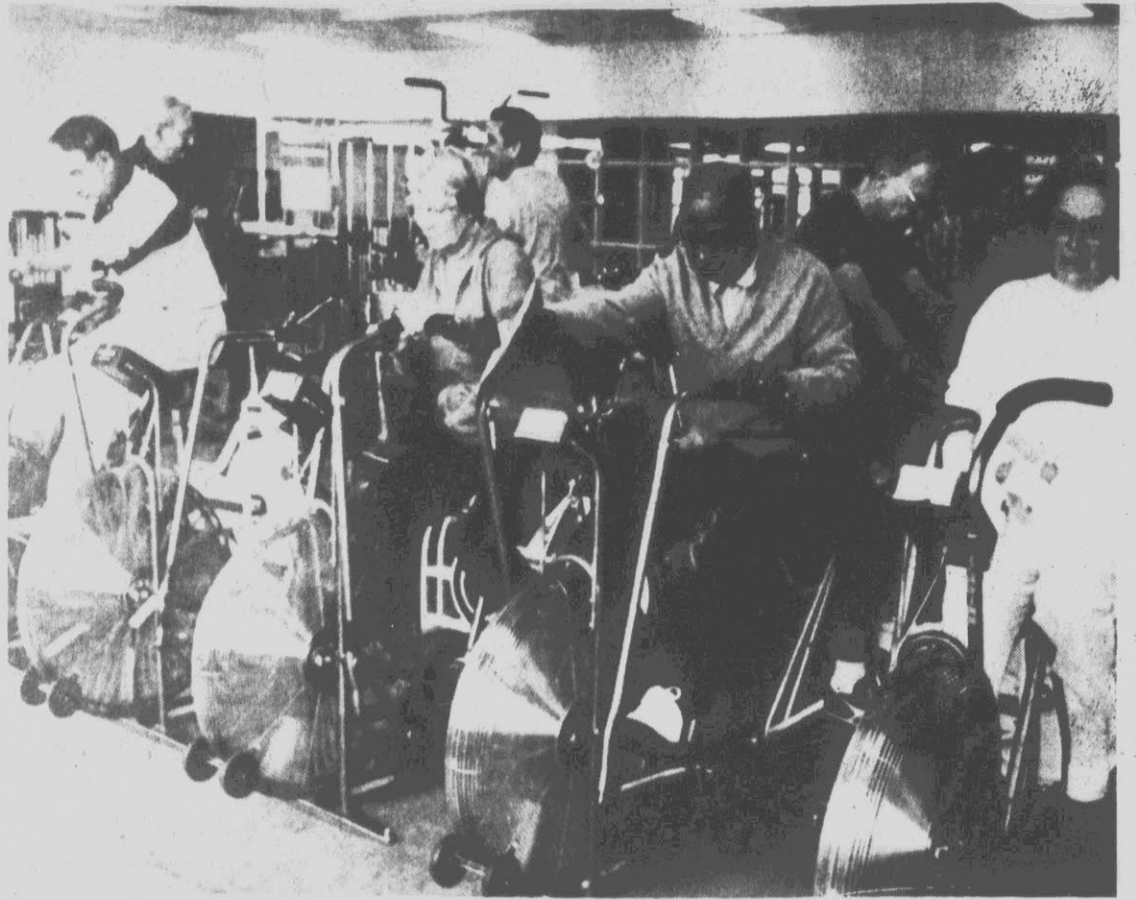

Participants say spouses of patients sometimes get involved. They go to cooking classes, attend the periodic 45-minute lectures on cardiac health, and join patients on the track for exercise.

"Camaraderie is the key to what attracts a lot of us and holds a lot of us," said a patient, whose wife began running road races after he joined DUPAC.

Spann noted that the approach to care of heart disease patients has changed in the past decade. The belief that heart patients should go home and put their feet up is past. With exercise, and the 700-calorie low fat, low salt diets, patients can reduce and sometimes eliminate their medication.

"We know the pattern of the disease starts in the 20s," Spann said. "You can have 90 percent blockage before you even know there's a problem."

"Sure, we miss chocolate ice cream," said one patient. "But that's nothing compared to the sickness we're missing. If someone had told me the importance of this, I think I could have avoided the heart attack."

Housing Costs Vary From City To City

BETTER HOMES AND GARDENS
A Meredith Magazine

America's housing costs and the length of time it takes to sell a home vary greatly from city to city, according to a recent survey conducted nationwide by Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service.

The housing cost comparison survey matches home prices in about 400 cities that represent different geographic areas and population size. The average price tag for a typical, upscale American family home in these communities is $119,345 for a newly constructed home and $92,807 for a resale property. Findings are based on Better Homes and Gardens real estate brokers' estimates of the cost of a three-bedroom, 1,600-square foot home, with one and a half to two baths, located in a desirable neighborhood.

But, what consumers pay for such a home largely depends on where they buy and local price tags often don't reflect the national averages. In Saddle River, N.J., the most expensive market represented, the average price of a new home is $525,000, while an existing home costs $475,000. In other markets, buyers can purchase a newly constructed home for $45,000 in Glasgow, Ky., or a resale property in Pittsburg, Kan., for $35,700.

In the communities analyzed, a typical family home is on the market an average of 96 days from the initial listing through closing of the sale. The shortest reported sales period occurred in four Michigan locations: Livonia, Shelby, St. Clair Shores and Utica, where homes are snatched up in an average of 10 days. In Wharton, Texas, however, sellers wait an average of 360 days before the right buyer comes along.

The survey showed that nationally the average ratio of sales price to asking price is 94 percent. This means a house initially priced at $100,000 sells for about $94,000.

Market conditions look steady to members of the Better Homes and Gardens Real Estate Service, with 71 percent expecting sales to remain constant, 14 percent predicting improving activity, and 15 percent of the respondents expecting a decline. In addition, 58 percent rate business activity as "good," 35 percent as "average," and only 7 percent as "poor."

The 30-year conventional mortgage is still the single most common type of financing used, according to 62 percent of the respondents. FHA mortgages place a significant second at 25 percent, while 15-year conventional mortgages are used for 4 percent of home financing. Adjustable-rate mortgages (ARMs) are used to finance only 2 percent of transactions.

The beard area of adult men contains from 6,000 to 25,000 coarse hair fibers or whiskers. These hairs grow at different rates but average approximately one-half millimeter every 24 hours.

Be Honest With Lady Love

DEAR ABBY: I am 18 years old and I'm stationed in Germany. Four months ago I fell in love with a German woman. She's 33 years old and married. I met her when I went out with her daughter, who is 16. Our relationship started out just talking about our problems. She has a very unhappy marriage, and this was my first time away from home. I was lonely, and she was very understanding.

Well, I sure didn't expect it to happen, but we had a love affair the second time we were together. I saw her every chance I could. The problem is that she's in love with me, but I'm not sure I'm in love with her. I care for her and feel sorry for her, but the feelings I had for her in the beginning are just not there anymore.

I can't turn her away because it would cause her so much heartbreak and sadness. She wants me to wait until she can divorce her husband, but I really don't want to go through with anything like that. I hate to hurt her. Please help me. — COUNTRY BOY IN GERMANY

DEAR COUNTRY BOY: What you felt in the beginning wasn't "love" — it was a combination of infatuation, loneliness and opportunity. Be honest with this woman, and tell her exactly how you feel.

Don't worry about hurting her. She's 33 and can take care of herself. You're only 18 and have your whole life ahead of you. Don't mess it up by continuing in this dangerous relationship. Talk to your chaplain. He's seen many a young soldier in your position and can help you handle it. I'm glad you wrote. Please write again and let me know how your life is going, Country Boy. I care.

DEAR ABBY: Your nomination of the word "hors d'oeuvre" as the most commonly misspelled word is a good one. However, it is a French word, and not commonly used here.

I've been a proofreader for nearly 40 years, and I've also written a book on proofreading. This may be considered a common error in punctuation, but I think the most common mistake I have run across is the use of the possessive "its" spelled with an apostrophe — "it's."

Properly used, "it's" is a contraction for "it is" or "it has." — JACK FRIEDBERG, CLEVELAND

DEAR JACK: Thanks for the spelling-punctuation lesson — it's both, and its importance is acknowledged by all who want to preserve high standards of written English.

DEAR ABBY: I have had a quote for a very long time, but I have never been able to locate the source. I have been to the public library and looked in every collection of quotations I could find, and I still can't find it. Can you — or one of your readers — help me? This is it:

"When, wherever you live in the world, you can have children only when you wish, that will be a revolution with more far-reaching effects on the pattern of human culture than the discovery of atomic energy." — M.J.S. IN ORLANDO

DEAR M.J.S.: That statement was made by Lord Brain, a former president of the International Society of Internal Medicine, Obstetrics and Gynecology in Great Britain. He died in 1966.

As America Ages, It Is Healthier, Wealthier

By FRANK SPENCER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

While the 80 million Americans who make up the baby-boom generation are grabbing attention in the 1980s, wide-ranging changes are oc-curing at the upper end of the age spectrum. The generation of 28 million people aged 65 and over, whose early years were spent in hard times, who went off to fight the "good war" and returned to tame suburbia, are at the head of a profound demographic shift, a generationwide transformation in health and wealth and attitudes. Although critical problems remain, the elderly today, as compared with 20 years ago, "are astoundingly better off by anything you want to measure, not just by longevity but years of independent life, disposable income, housing and health care," said Richard W. Besdine, director of The Travelers Center on Aging at the University of Connecticut Health Center in Farmington, Conn.

Their rapidly growing ranks exert a powerful influence on the rest of America and, experts say, illustrate how drastic changes in social policy will be needed in the years ahead.

Consider: —We are an aging nation. The great population spurt the nation experienced early in the century has resulted in an increasingly older population. At the same time, the birthrate is dropping. The median age, after bottoming out at 28 years in 1970, is 32 now and is expected to reach 36 in the year 2000 and 42 in 2050.

—The process will accelerate further in 2010, "the magic year when the baby boom begins to turn 65," said Cynthia M. Taeuber, an expert on aging trends with the U.S. Census Bureau. By 2050, the elderly will constitute 22 percent of the population, compared with 7 percent in 1940 and 12 percent today.

—Those 65 and older are richer than the elderly ever have been. Although income falls sharply after retirement, the elderly, with their earnings head start, have amassed significant wealth. As a group, their assets exceed those of the general population by a ratio of 2-1.

—The elderly live longer than ever before, although disagreement persists over whether those final years are being spent in sickness or health. Today a person reaching age 65 can expect to live another 17 years. Since 1960, life expectancy at age 65 has increased 2.5 years. It took the 60 years preceding 1960 for life expectancy to edge up 2.4 years.

In 1980, those 65 to 74, whom demographers call the "young old," outnumbered those 75 and over by a ratio of 3-2. By 2000 their numbers are expected to be equal. Those 85 and over are in the fastest-growing group. Since 1900, that group has grown almost 3,000 percent and today makes up between 1 percent to 2 percent of the population. By 2050 it is projected that those 85 and over will make up 5 percent of the population.

The obstacle course of diseases that once stood between children and their hope of growing to old age has been effectively dismantled during this century.

In 1983, newborns had an average life expectancy of 74.7 years. But in 1900, when sanitation was poor and penicillin was not yet discovered, infant mortality was high. Newborns then had a life expectancy averaging 47.3 years.

The sharp drop in deaths among the young and a downturn since 1968 in deaths from heart disease, the No. 1 killer of the aged, have resulted in what gerontologists have called the "squaring of the age curve."

Americans, while living longer, also seem to be staying well longer, although, said Richard Suzman, a health sciences administrator at the National Institutes of Health, no hard data exist to confirm that claim. Those convinced that the elderly are staying healthy longer point to a conspicuous increase in their vitality.

Although the public's perception has been that there is widespread frailty and poor health among the elderly, a landmark study conducted for the National Institute of Aging and released Dec. 9 at Yale University suggests that the vast majority of the elderly are active, independent and mentally alert. Of those who became ill or disabled, most had recovered or improved within a year.

But as encouraging as those figures sound, the latter years are as puzzling as they are promising. They are the time of chronic debilitating ailments, heart conditions, strokes, arthritis, Alzheimer's disease, fractured hips, osteoporosis and Parkinson's disease.

In dealing with the afflictions of old age, the science of medicine is virtually helpless.

"Rather than discovering Methuselah enzymes or a Ponce de Leon serum that will keep us all at a 28-year-old's vigor for 150 years," said Besdine, "what is far more likely is that we will begin to make secondary preventive inroads into those chronic disabling diseases that spoil old age."

A quarter-century ago, one in three older Americans lived in poverty, twice the ratio for those under 65. "You can no longer say that," said James Schulz, a professor at the Heller Institute of Aging Studies at Brandeis University in Waltham, Mass. Today, that figure is one in eight nationally.

"That means the elderly really look like the rest of the population," Schulz said. "There is great variation, of course, with some living very well off and some who are destitute." But "a sizable group is retaining the standard of living they had before retirement."

Households headed by people 55 or older have "nearly double (the discretionary dollars) available to households headed by persons 34 or under," reports a recent study by the Gerontological Society of America, a Washington-based clearinghouse for information on matters affecting the elderly.

"These 12 million households of the mature generation are the most affluent consumer group in the country today," the society's study said.

Income continues to lag significantly for the elderly, if only because fewer than 25 percent of all men 65 and older work. In 1984, the median income for families headed by someone 65 or older was $18,236, compared with $29,292 for families whose heads were 25 to 64 years old.

But a Census Bureau report issued last summer shows surprising facts about accumulated wealth. If assets, not just income, are compared, the median net worth of households headed by people 65 and up in 1984 was $60,266, compared with $32,667 for all households. Even if home equity, an asset not easily liquidated, is excluded, the figure is $18,790 for the elderly, compared with $7,783 for the entire population.

Despite improvements in the standard of living, Social Security is still the primary income source for a majority of retiree households, and half of the labor force is not covered by a company pension of any kind.

Financial security beyond the working years becomes more important when one considers that one-fourth to one-third of one's life will be spent in retirement.

Blanche Jackson read two poems in keeping with the new year. She expressed appreciation to the refreshment committee, Lib and C.M. Respass, Imelda and Cliff Stang, Wylie Christy and Lillian Hendrix. A ceremonial will be held at the February meeting.

ARTHRITIS AND EDUCATION

ATLANTA (AP) — Recent studies show that college-educated people with arthritis tend to feel better and function better than those with less education, according to the Arthritis Foundation.

Though all the reasons for this are not known, college-educated people tend to make more of an effort to find out about their disease, ask more questions of their doctors and follow their treatment program better, the foundation says.

In 1858, the county's courthouse was destroyed by a blaze supposedly set by a man trying to destroy a will. In 1910, the courthouse burned again.

Boycott

Approximately 150 Pitt County students did not attend classes Monday in honor of Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday.

The Southern Christian Leadership Conference called for the boycott because the schools did not recognize the day with a holiday. The figure represents the number of students who told the administration they did not attend school Monday because of the boycott.

chance to elect someone of their choice by single-shot voting.

D.D. Garrett, president of the Pitt County chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, voiced support for the six-district plan, as did speakers G.L. Harris, Griffon Mayor Ralph Thaxton, J.R. Payton, and Terry Shank, president of the League of Women Voters of Greenville-Pitt County.

But Garrett, Harris and Payton said they are opposed to the three at-large seats, while Thaxton said, "I have a little problem" with them.

While not mentioning the proposed at-large seats, Mrs. Shank said the League of Women Voters "strongly" recommends that "six coterminous election districts" be established for both the Board of Commissioners and the county Board of Education, which is also in the process of creating a new method of electing school board members.

"We do support the six district lines," Garrett said. But "as relates to the at-large ... we are opposed to the at-large seats. At-large seats," Garrett said, "dilute the black voting power. I don't know that it (having at-large seats) would pass the (U.S.) justice department (which must approve any election change).

MASONIC NOTICE

Mount Herman Masonic Lodge No. 35 will hold a communication Monday at 7:30 p.m.

"Let's keep it six districts ... no at-large and be on solid ground" as far as the Justice Department is concerned, Garrett suggested. "I hope we do not have to go under court order. This to us is our last resort."

Thaxton, in questioning the at-large seats, said "I could support (them) if they were split up," in a different way.

"Find some other way to distribute the three at-large," Thaxton urged the board.

Jim Young, a resident of the Brook Valley subdivision east of Greenville, was the only other person to speak on the election plan.

He told commissioners "the subdivision of Brook Valley (would be) split down the middle" by the proposed new district lines.

"I don't believe that to be the way to deal with a homogeneous and coterminous subdivision," Young said, asking commissioners to give further consideration to including all of the subdivision in one district.

But Crowell and County Attorney Bill Watson — himself a Brook Valley resident — both told Young that the Southern Railroad tracks which run through the subdivision are the township boundary line.

Public hearing on the proposed changes in the election method will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. at Farmville Central High School and Thursday at 7 p.m. at the Pactolus School.

The final two hearings will be Feb. 4 at Wahl-Coates School in Greenville and Feb. 5 at A.G. Cox School in Winterville.

"It will stay closed as long as it's impassable," Fitz said. "Most people could probably maneuver in this snowfall if they had the right equipment."

"But keep in mind we have people from Florida who have never seen snow. It's a real thrill to watch them see snow — they get out and roll around in it," he said. "But they don't know how to drive in it."

Dispatcher G.C. Michaels of the state Highway Patrol's office in Greensboro said parts of Interstate 40 in Winston-Salem were closed Thursday and even some troopers had become stuck.

Super Bowl Teams Took Different Paths

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The New York Giants drove down a smoothly paved freeway to the Super Bowl. For the Denver Broncos, it was more like a dirt road with speed bumps, potholes and detours.

When the teams meet for the NFL championship Sunday, will the Giants' life in the fast lane give them an edge? Or will the Broncos be toughened up by their travails along the back roads?

"We've had every scenario you can come up with," Broncos wide receiver Steve Watson said. "We've had blowouts, games where we had to come from behind, good streaks and bad. There isn't anything you can do to us that we haven't experienced."

The Broncos went 11-5 in 1985, but came off that season with an extra bite in their playoff appetite after failing to qualify for the postseason with such a gaudy record. They used that hunger as impetus for a 6-0 start.

"Everything looked great then," Watson said. "But we didn't expect a 16-0 season."

What they got was a 5-5 finish which raised doubts about their ability to win a big game, a playoff game. When they were routed 41-16 by Seattle in the regular season finale, the Broncos realized they were on a ride to nowhere.

"It really woke us up," running back Gerald Willhite said. "It made us think about the type of game we had to play to beat a playoff team. We've got guys who take things very seriously. There were goals to be met. We set them and now we have almost reached them."

But even Coach Dan Reeves wondered where his club was headed after the Seattle blowout.

"That was the most disappointed

I've ever been in this football team," he said. "I'm not taking anything away from Seattle, but we were embarrassing. We didn't look like a professional football team heading into the playoffs. It was not the situation that makes you confident."

"It was one of the few times I felt we didn't play hard. It woke us up. We realized we had to get back to where we wanted to be in a hurry, get back to the things we did to win 11 games."

"We don't want to get into a situation where a loss has to help you. You learn more from winning."

"But when it happens, you have to take something from it, use it and make sure something like that doesn't happen again."

"It was like being inside a cage against a very worthy opponent, with everyone on the outside rooting against you and all you ever worked for depending on that last drive."

The Giants avoided such critical situations in the playoffs, routing San Francisco and Washington by a combined 66-3. New York had several games go down to the wire, but the Giants were in control in most.

They finished the regular season 14-2 with a nine-game winning streak. Rarely did they stall.

"We don't win very pretty, but we win," star running back Joe Morris said, "and nobody cares how you do it. We win and we get more confidence to keep winning. People write about winners, they don't write about losers."

Like Reeves, Giants quarterback Phil Simms sees little use in examining losses. This season, he had little need to do so, anyway.

"You don't learn nothing by losing," he said. "It just makes you self-doubt everything. ... When you lose, the tendency is to be twice as hard on yourself and self-doubt creeps in, and you can only be in trouble."

Linebacker Lawrence Taylor doesn't think his team has been spoiled by success.

Panthers Hold Off Vikings

HOLLYWOOD — North Pitt hit on six free throws in the final minutes to stave off a comeback by D.H. Conley as the Panthers held on for a 56-54 win in high school basketball action Thursday night.

North Pitt led 48-47 with just over a minute to go. Conley's Ricky Farrow connected on a jumper at the 1:00 minute mark to make it 49-48.

Paul Blow countered with a jumper for North Pitt to put the Panthers back on top, 50-49.

Conley then turned the ball over and North Pitt's Ashley Sheppard was fouled and hit one of two free throws to bring it to 51-49.

After a missed shot by Conley, Blow was fouled and hit the front end of a one and one to put the Panthers up, 52-49. North Pitt then got possession again and Blow was fouled and hit two free throws to make it 54-49.

Farrow countered with a free throw and Phil Medlin tapped in Farrow's miss on the second free throw to bring it to 54-52 with 29 seconds left.

North Pitt's Calvin Hunter was fouled with 27 seconds and hit two free throws to make it 56-52.

After a Conley missed shot, North Pitt turned the ball over. Farrow hit with six seconds left to draw the Vikings within 56-54, but that was as close as they would get as they were unable to call a time out in the final seconds.

Conley led 21-11 after the first quarter, but the Panthers outscored the Vikings 25-10 over the next two periods to take a 36-31 lead heading into the final quarter.

From there, Conley rallied, outscoring North Pitt 23-14, but it wasn't enough as the Panthers hung on for the win.

Ashley Sheppard led North Pitt, which improves to 5-7, with 13 points while Calvin Hunter and Paul Blow added 12 points and 11 points respectively.

Ricky Farrow had 13 and Phil Medlin had 12 to lead the Vikings, who fall to 8-7.

In the girl's game, Trellaney Boyd scored 20 points to lead the Valkyries to a 50-45 win over the Pant-HERS.

Conley improves to 6-10 while North Pitt falls to 7-7.

NFL TV Refs To Use Bigger Sets

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The NFL wants to make sure it gets the big picture for the big game Sunday, especially on any instant replays. So it will simply use a bigger screen.

Art McNally will have a pair of 13-inch television sets — as opposed to the eight-inch screens used during the regular season — to review the officials' calls.

"We'd been using the smaller screens mostly because they were easier to see over," explained McNally, the NFL's supervisor of officials and the league's man in the glass booth for the first instant replay Super Bowl.

"We've learned a lot as we've gone through the season with instant replay. For instance, it was suggested that I stand during the game so I could see everything better."

"I don't mind standing for three hours, but when you're standing, it makes it easier to make a mistake when you punch the buttons on the VCR. I know it sounds funny, but you have to be careful or you won't have any tape to review."

"So we've gone to a higher chair than we were using before."

"I'll have help up there Sunday, including a technician, to make sure everything goes OK."

The instant replay, used by the NFL on an experimental basis this season, will be making its Super Bowl debut.

Ironically, the Super Bowl teams — the Denver Broncos and New York Giants — were among the only four of the league's 28 clubs to vote against the use of instant replay this season.

Although there have been problems with the video review process — including game delays of up to five minutes — McNally said he believes the bugs have been worked out of the system.

"I think the instant replay has come of age," he said. "The biggest improvement is in communications, where we've gone to headsets for the umpire and the replay official."

"Before, the umpire would have to stop the game, take out his walkie-talkie and then you still couldn't hear him or he couldn't hear the official in the replay booth."

"You both were hollering at the top of your voice and still couldn't hear. That took up a lot of time, delayed the game and just wasn't very efficient."

"But when we improved the communication, about the middle of October, it started to go more smoothly."

The instant replay rule, which will be voted on again by the owners at their annual meetings this year, allows the replay official to review and either uphold or reverse a decision by officials on the field.

The rule is invoked only on questionable calls concerning change of possession, whether a player is in bounds, and whether a player has crossed the goal line.

The 61-year-old McNally, an NFL referee for nine seasons before becoming supervisor of officials 19 years ago, said he's heard mostly positive comments about instant replay since the improvements were made.

There are still dissenting voices, though, including George Young, the Giants' vice president and general manager.

"We voted against it and my feelings against it have hardened since then," Young said. "I still believe the game belongs on the field and not up in the booth in the press box."

"All we've done is add an eighth official, so you've got one more human and one more chance for human error. The guys on the field have been officiating for years, starting with high school games, then college, then the pros."

"They must be good at it, and they must love it to take all the abuse they have to. Officials are the most vulnerable people on the field, and I don't think they should have somebody sitting and watching a TV second-guessing them."

The opposing Super Bowl coaches, Denver's Dan Reeves and New York's Bill Parcells, generally favor instant replay.

"It has a lot of merit," Reeves said. "Anytime you have the capability to change a wrong decision, it's a good thing."

"I think any coach in the league wouldn't oppose anything that would really help the officials make the right call," Parcells said.

The instant replay seemingly puts added pressure on the officials, both on the field and in the booth.

But McNally said that goes with the territory.

"Once the game starts, you know you have a great number of years of experience," he said, "and the important thing is to do everything you can to get the call right."

Blue Devils Add Brown

DURHAM (AP) — Former Duke wide receiver Marvin Brown has been added to new football coach Steve Spurrier's staff, school officials announced Thursday.

Brown, who will coach wide receivers, played for the Blue Devils in 1979 and 1980. He was the team's leading pass catcher in 1980 with 34 receptions for 451 yards.

Brown graduated with a degree in public policy studies, and has been working as a personnel analyst for the city of Newport News, Va., for the past two years. He also has been playing semi-pro football.

Spurrier, who was hired to replace Steve Sloan, has completed his coaching staff with Brown's hiring.

As the East Carolina basketball team hits the midpoint of the season, it's hard to assess the progress the team has made.

Game to game, it's difficult to know which Pirate team will show up. The only consistent trait of this team is its inconsistency.

The Pirates are 9-7 following a 81-64 loss to Central Connecticut State University Tuesday night.

The season started out with a great promise as ECU defeated both South Carolina and Northeastern while cruising to a 7-3 record during the first two months of the season.

At that point, it was clear to see that the team was much improved over a year ago. Marchell Henry and Blue Edwards were providing the scoring. Howard Brown was running the point position and Leon Bass had become a factor both offensively and defensively from the center spot.

In addition, Keith Sledge was making timely use of the three-point basket from the other guard position and it helped open things up inside. The bench too, had improved.

But 1986 is over and in 1987 the team has gone 4-4, including Tuesday's 81-64 loss to CCSU. That's 500 ball and not bad. It's even a slight improvement over last season, when the Pirates were 7-8 at the same mid-point juncture.

But now it's not as easy to distinguish how improved this team is. The Pirates have a tendency to struggle against less talented or less-renowned teams. Witness losses to Penn State, CCSU and American, as well as tight ball games with Campbell and William and Mary.

However, just when you're ready to put a label on this team, it rises up and plays to its potential, such as when it defeated Richmond, 78-70 on Jan. 10, to win its first Colonial Athletic Association game.

"Early in the year, the chemistry was very important for us to be successful," said senior forward Marchell Henry. "At times the chemistry has worked well and at times it hasn't. I think that has a lot to do with our consistency. When the chemistry is going well, we play very consistent basketball. When it's not we struggle. Hopefully, coming down the stretch, we'll play consistent. If we do, you'll see that the chemistry will be there."

So where are they? It's hard to say. When they play hard and together for 40 minutes, they can be trouble.

On the other hand, when they are lackadaisical and unmotivated, they are in trouble.

"It's certainly a disappointing road trip for me," ECU coach Charlie Harrison said after the loss to CCSU. "I really felt that even though the repercussions of the Wilmington game (an 85-70 loss) had to have a little effect, we thought we were ready to play and we were ready to play, but they played better and we didn't win."

"I thought we would come out with a little more mental intensity than we did. These types of games scare me."

"The only thing I can do is tell the players that they've got to go out and tough it out. You have to work through bad calls and you've got to work through bad shooting."

"As a coach, the only thing I know to do is to tell them what I think they are going to be in for."

Indeed, because it's out on the court where matters are settled and games are won or lost.

Regardless, it doesn't get any easier from here for ECU.

The Pirates are 0-3 on the road in January. Saturday, they embark on three-game road trip on which they will face CAA foes George Mason and James Madison as well as Virginia Commonwealth.

The death of Dr. Ray Minges this week took from Greenville one of its most prominent citizens — one who has long been associated with the athletic program at East Carolina University.

Dr. Minges was the first president of the old Century Club and also served as a president of the East Carolina Pirate Club, which replaced the Century Club. He was one of the prominent leaders of the drive which built the first portion of Ficklen Stadium, and later headed the drive that raised the funds to build the permanent north stands.

For many years, he was very close to the late Clarence Stasavich, whose tenure as head football coach and athletic director brought ECU to its first prominence in football. As president of the fund-raising arm of the athletic department, Dr. Minges worked closely with Coach Stasavich in building the program to one of the best in the Southern Conference, and not just only in football, but in the total program. East Carolina, during most of its years in the Southern Conference, won the league's trophy — now known as the Stasavich Trophy — for overall excellence in participation in the league.

Dr. Minges and his wife, Virginia, often accompanied Stas and his wife, Helen, on trips in the conference, including the annual Football Rouser, which kicked off the season each fall with meetings between the football coaches and media.

In honor of much of what Dr. Minges had done — along with other members of his family, who also supported East Carolina athletics — the school named its new basketball facility for the family back in 1967.

Much of what Dr. Minges did for East Carolina — and for other worthy causes in Greenville — went without publicity. He was active in many, many public projects, not the least of which was Ducks Unlimited.

There is no question that he will be missed by Greenville and East Carolina.

But he, too, leaves a legacy in still another project. Just prior to his final illness, Dr. Minges accepted the job of heading up still another fund raising job — that to build a new athletic complex for Rose High School.

Now, of course, someone else will handle that project. But there could be no better tribute to this great citizen of Greenville than for this last project of his to be seen through to completion.

We shall miss him, but we shall also remember him.

Hawkeyes Roll By Hoosiers

By The Associated Press
Iowa went to the top of the Associated Press college basketball poll for the first time this week. The Hawkeyes must like the view.

For the second time in four nights, Iowa beat a ranked opponent from the Big Ten to remain undefeated and erase any doubts about its stature as the nation's top team.

The Hawkeyes beat No. 3 Indiana 101-88 Thursday night for their school-record 18th consecutive victory. On Monday night, Iowa beat No. 5 Purdue 70-67 and the Hawkeyes are 6-0 atop one of the toughest conferences in the country.

"I think we're probably the deepest club in the league, one of the deepest in the country," first-year Coach Tom Davis said of his team on which everybody gets plenty of minutes because of his lineup shuffling. "The way we press and run, we need to go eight guys deep for sure."

Six players scored between 13 and 17 points for Iowa against the Hoosiers, 14-2 and 5-1, who allowed more than 100 points for the first time since Bob Knight became coach there in 1972.

In other games involving ranked teams Thursday night, No. 2 North Carolina beat Wake Forest 79-53; No. 4 Nevada-Las Vegas defeated Long Beach State 104-74; No. 5 Purdue downed No. 9 Illinois 87-86 in overtime; and No. 13 Alabama defeated No. 17 Auburn 88-82.

Reserve guard Jeff Moe sparked a 19-4 outburst that allowed Iowa to break from a 59-59 tie. Moe hit a 3-point field goal with 15:24 to play and added two other field goals as Iowa raced to a 78-63 lead with 11:17 remaining.

"Jeff Moe is Mr. Inspiration to us," Davis said. "He's very, very important to our ballclub, especially for his defense."

"Everyone's always talking about his offense, but I think he means even more to our defense."

"I've been extremely impressed with Iowa as we've prepared to play them," Knight said. "I think Tom Davis is as an ideal a coach as can be to coach this team."

When asked if anybody could slow the Hawkeyes down and beat them, Knight replied: "How the hell do I know? We couldn't."

Steve Alford, held to seven points in the first half, hit three consecutive 3-pointers to bring Indiana back after Iowa built its big lead and the Hoosiers trailed 93-88 after Tony Freeman made two free throws with 2:24 left.

B.J. Armstrong's layup gave Iowa a 95-88 lead with 1:10 left and the Hawkeyes then ran off six straight points.

Moe and Kevin Gamble each had 17 points, while Armstrong and Roy Marble scored 16 each, Ed Horton added 14 and Brad Lohaus 13.

Daryl Thomas led Indiana with 22 points, one more than Alford.

No. 4 UN-LV 104, Long Beach State 74 Armon Gilliam's 25 points led the Runnin' Rebels, who took over sole possession of first place in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Long Beach State, 10-9 and 5-1, jumped to a 5-0 lead but Gilliam scored 10 of Nevada-Las Vegas' first 24 points as the Runnin' Rebels, 17-1 and 6-0, took a 24-18 after 12:2 minutes and coasted from there to the home victory.

John Hoffman and John Haten scored 14 points each for the 49ers, who had a five-game winning streak snapped.

No. 5 Purdue 87, No. 9 Illinois 86 The last second of play at Purdue's

Mackey Arena seemed to last an eternity.

Reserve sophomore forward Kip Jones was fouled as time ran out in overtime with the score tied at 86. The buzzer, however, did not sound — and Jones missed the first free throw but made the second to give the Boilermakers an 87-86 lead.

The rest of the Purdue team thought the game was over and charged on the court to congratulate Jones, who scored only one other point in the Big Ten Conference game.

However, a technical foul was assessed against Purdue for the premature celebration — but Illinois' Doug Altenberger missed the free throw. The Illini were awarded the ball out of bounds but a final shot was short and Purdue had the hard-fought victory.

"After I missed the first free throw I felt more relaxed," Jones, who averages 2.0 points, said. "The second one, I knew I was going to hit it."

Purdue's Doug Lee made sure there was an extra session as he hit a 3-point field goal as the buzzer sounded in regulation.

Troy Lewis led Purdue, 15-2 and 6-1, with 31 points, while Ken Norman led Illinois, 13-4 and 5-2, with 19 points.

Illinois played the final five minutes of regulation and the overtime period without guard Tony Wysinger, who reinjured a shoulder in a collision and will be out indefinitely.

No. 13 Alabama 88, No. 17 Auburn 82

It was a game of two very separate halves as Alabama nearly blew a 21-point lead in its Southeastern Conference home game.

The Crimson Tide, 14-2 and 7-0, broke from a 24-21 lead with a 15-0 run as Derrick McKey scored seven points. After an Auburn field goal, a 10-5 Crimson Tide burst made it 49-28 at halftime.

Auburn, 10-4 and 3-3, was not done yet, however. The Tigers closed within 66-60 on a 10-0 run, but McKey dunked to end the threat.

"Alabama played up to its capabilities in the first half and Auburn played up to its capabilities in the second half," Crimson Tide Coach Wimp Sanderson said.

"The first half was the worst half we have played and the second half was the best half we have played," Tigers Coach Sonny Smith said.

Jim Farmer led Alabama with 20 points, while Frank Ford topped the Tigers with 23.

O'Meara Makes Golf Resolution

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Mark O'Meara has a goal for the 1987 PGA Tour season, and a plan to achieve it.

"I'm going to play more in the United States this year, not so much overseas, work on my game and try to get back on top," O'Meara said.

He took the first step toward that goal with an 8-under-par 63 that provided him with the lead Thursday in the unfinished first round of the $600,000 Phoenix Open golf tournament.

Frost and frozen greens delayed the start of play by 1½ hours, backed up the starting times and left 45 players stranded on the course by darkness.

They marked their positions on the course and were scheduled to return at daylight today to complete their first rounds.

O'Meara won two American tournaments and two foreign events in 1985, was second on the season's money-winning list and appeared poised to take a step toward the top of the game.

"But I didn't play as well as I could last year," he said. "Pro golf is like any other job. You go at it, and go at it, and go at it, and you get tired of it."

"About the middle of the season last year, I got tired of playing golf," he said. And, while he finished second or third in five tournaments, he failed to win in this country.

Now, after a lengthy break from golf, O'Meara said he's excited about the prospect of making an attempt at regaining lost ground.

"I have goals I want to achieve this year, like playing on the Ryder Cup team. So I'm going to play a lot in this country — the first eight tournaments in a row — and try to get back on top," he said.

O'Meara, using a new driver, did not miss a fairway on the new TPC course at Scottsdale, missed only one green, didn't make a bogey and didn't have a 5 on his card.

He capped his effort, "the best score I've had in several years," he said, with a 2-iron shot that set up a 3-foot eagle putt on the 15th.

That gave him a one-shot lead over Brad Faxon, who had four birdies and an eagle in one 5-hole stretch.

Corey Pavin, a winner last week in the Bob Hope Classic, led a group at 65 that included Bobby Clampett, Ed Fiori and Steve Jones. Rocco Mediate was another stroke back at 66.

Defending champion Hal Sutton was in a large group at 67 that also included Fuzzy Zoeller and Andy Bean.

PGA champion Bob Tway matched par 71.

Davis Shining Bright For Suns

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Walter Davis is shining brighter this season than at any time in his career with the Phoenix Suns.

Not only is his scoring average of 23.5 points higher than it's been since 1978-79, his second season in the NBA, but the 32-year-old Davis also has climbed back from the depths of cocaine and alcohol abuse to bring order to his life.

Davis, the youngest of 13 children, recently became the 10th in his family to earn a college degree. He completed several courses last summer and fall at Arizona State and transferred the credits to North Carolina, which he attended before starting his pro career.

The Arizona State and North Carolina semesters didn't mesh, so he is waiting until May before he officially receives a Parks and Recreation degree.

"I missed several credits because of the Olympics in 1976 and didn't get my degree," Davis said. "I went back to school after my rookie year, but I still didn't finish. I didn't go back again because my priorities weren't straight. Then last summer, I realized I was in the last years of my career and had to get ready for my life after the NBA."

One of Davis' courses last summer was a work-study program to establish youth basketball clinics in Phoenix. He also took a travel course that will help his wife manage their Phoenix travel agency when his basketball career is over, probably after two more seasons when his current contract expires.

The 6-foot-6 guard also worked hard last summer to strengthen his left knee, which he injured during a preseason game at the Inglewood Forum in 1984. A lawsuit that was filed as a result of the injury, which he said was caused by an oily substance left on the floor to protect it during the offseason, is still pending.

"The knee felt good last year, but I felt I could get it stronger," Davis said.

"He was always a tremendous shooter, not good but great," Suns Coach John MacLeod said. "He's in great shape this year. He feels better than he has in years. His knee wasn't ready last season, but when we had sprints in training camp last fall, he led everyone on the team. Not bad for someone who's 32."

Davis, who spent a month in a rehabilitation clinic last season, also is fighting a daily battle against cocaine and alcohol abuse.

"I would never say I'm cured," said Davis, who is reluctant to talk about his problem and the permanent suspensions of two players last week for failing to come forward voluntarily for treatment of cocaine abuse.

He said the NBA's antidrug policy is fair and admits that his one-month absence from the game "could have been a lot worse for me."

But he added, "I never had any doubts about playing the game, and people who really love me will accept me and help me through my past problems."

Just as Davis' offcourt life has taken several turns for the better, Davis is showing in his 10th NBA season that his basketball skills are as good as ever.

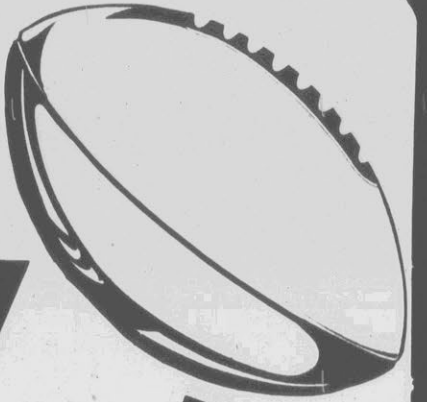

A forward for the first half of his career, he moved to guard when the NBA got bigger at every position.

Last week, however, with injuries hampering regular forward Larry Nance, MacLeod moved Davis to forward against the Utah Jazz and he scored a career-high 45 points.

Two nights later, he scored 27 more from the forward position against the Los Angeles Clippers. In the two games, Davis was 28-for-45 from the field.

Machine Exports Fall As Plants Move Overseas

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exports of farm machinery have suffered in recent years as U.S. companies continue to relocate plants overseas, says an Agriculture Department report.

In the first three quarters of 1986, there was a $114 million farm machinery trade deficit as exports sagged 19 percent from the same period of 1985 to about $1.2 billion. Imports, meanwhile, rose 5 percent to about $1.3 billion.

"Weak economies, foreign trade barriers, the cessation of agricultural modernization programs, and movement of U.S. production to overseas plants have contributed to the collapse of the U.S. farm machinery export base," the report said.

According to Commerce Department figures, imports accounted for a record share of almost 25 percent of the U.S. domestic supply of farm machinery in 1985. The report by USDA's Economic Research Service said the share of imports was probably larger in 1986.

Imports from Japan, mostly wheel-type tractors of less than 40 horsepower, accounted for more than a fourth of the total value of imported farm machinery last year, while shipments from West Germany, Italy, United Kingdom and the rest of Western Europe made up nearly half of the total.

"The foreign trade sector of the U.S. farm machinery industry will continue to be affected by the transfer of additional domestic tractor production capacity abroad and by declining export markets," the report said.

It added: "The transfer of wheel-tractor production to Western Europe and Japan is but one dimension in the overall restructuring of the domestic farm machinery industry. Likewise, declining export markets for domestically produced farm machinery, especially Canada and Australia, are creating long-term changes in the industry's structure, and as a result, the United States may continue to be a net importer of farm machinery."

Domestically, machinery sales to American farmers continue to reflect recent years of financial hardship on thousands of producers, their debt burdens and the decline in farmland values.

Farm equipment expenditures dropped to an estimated $4.5 billion in 1986, the seventh consecutive year of decline, the report said. Sales may start leveling off in 1987 but still could show another drop. Overall, analysts said sales this year might be in the range of $4.1 billion to $4.7 billion.

Preliminary estimates for 1986 show another decline in the sales of two-wheel drive tractors in the 40 to 99 horsepower range and those of more than 100 horsepower, but the larger four-wheel drive models continue to lose the most ground.

"Dealer incentive programs offered on self-propelled combines in third-quarter 1986 appear to have turned around what would have been a precipitous decline in combine and corn head sales," the report said. "However, self-propelled combine unit sales still fell an estimated 11 percent in 1986."

GMC Doubles Auto Warranty

By JAMES RISEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

DETROIT — General Motors, in an apparent attempt to improve the public's perception of the quality of its cars, said Thursday that it would effectively double the length of its repair warranties and offer the longest available in the auto industry.

In a press conference Thursday, GM Chairman Roger B. Smith announced the new program, which provides a six-year warranty on the engines, powertrains and exterior rust-proofing of all of GM's new cars built in the United States and Canada. He added that the warranty was made possible by the rapid improvements GM has made in the quality of its passenger cars.

"Five years ago, our studies indicated that a six-year warranty program would have been too costly," because of the poor quality and high repair costs at that time, Smith acknowledged.

But Smith insisted that GM's quality had risen so much since 1980 that the company could now offer the new warranties without suffering dramatically higher warranty costs and without hurting earnings. "I think we can absorb the extra costs of this program," he said.

The new warranty program will cover all cars built since the start of the 1987 model year and can be transferred to a second owner when a car is sold, GM said. The program will not cover GM's light trucks or its Japanese imports.

GM's move is likely to intensify the highly public war of words that has developed among the major domestic automakers over which company produces the highest quality cars.

Both Ford and Chrysler have repeatedly claimed in their advertisements that they build the best cars in the United States, omitting the fact that the quality throughout the domestic industry is still considered by many industry experts to be below Japanese standards.

Independent surveys have generally supported Ford's claims. The Power Report, a highly-respected survey of automotive customer satisfaction, found that in 1986 Ford had the lowest incidence of owners experiencing problems during the warranty period. At the same time, the report noted that, during the same year, GM "appears to have made little progress, and perhaps even regressed, when it comes to reducing problems at delivery and during the warranty period."

But on Thursday, GM's Smith denied that either Ford or Chrysler had better quality than GM. "Maybe two years ago, I would have agreed, but not today."

Ford, which currently offers three-year warranties on most of its cars, refused to respond to GM's announcement Thursday. Chrysler, which in its advertisements has repeatedly dared its competitors to match its five-year warranties, said that it would study GM's program and respond later. Neither Toyota, Honda nor Nissan moved to match GM.

Stock Market Roars Back After Rest Day

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — After taking a one-day breather, the stock market has come roaring back to its torrid 1987 pace in what analysts say is an apparent signal that investors believe stocks will keep climbing for some time.

Stock prices Thursday shrugged off the broad declines of the day before, moving higher in a rebound that pushed several market indexes to record heights.

One of the most widely followed market barometers, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks, soared a record 51.60 points to close at a new high of 2,145.67. That topped the record gain of 44.01 points Jan. 5 and pushed the Dow over the record close of 2,104.47 set Tuesday.

The record close was the 13th this year for the blue-chip market index, which had followed the general decline Wednesday and lost ground for the first time in 1987.

Wednesday's broad-based losses were written off by many analysts as a temporary "correction," in which investors decided to cash in on profits made so far in the 1987 rally.

"Now that the correction is over we can go on to new heights," said Raymond F. DeVoe Jr. of Legg Mason Wood Walker Inc.

Much of Thursday's advance was attributed to buying by investors who had been wary about getting into the market during the New Year rally but who had become increasingly afraid of missing out on a prolonged advance.

"There's a lot of money still out there, so that every time it (the market) backs off, that money finds its way in here," said Hildegarde Zagorski, an analyst for Prudential-Bache Securities Inc.

Elevations in Pitt County range from approximately 10 to 75 feet above mean sea level with the highest elevations occurring along the extreme western boundary of the county.

Super Bowl Makes Sunday Difficult For TV Networks

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Network prime-time ratings are no laughing matter, but ABC may be making an unintentional joke by putting a movie called "The Dead Zone" on opposite the Super Bowl on Sunday.

CBS is hoping that this year's championship game between the New York Giants and the Denver Broncos will rival the all-time high Super Bowl rating of 49.1 set by the 1982 matchup between San Francisco and Cincinnati — an estimated 43 million households tuned in.

The network will take full advantage by promoting its news, new morning show and prime-time schedule during the broadcast, and by giving a jump-start to a new series, "Hard Copy," which will debut afterward.

Damage control is the name of the game for the two other networks, which will try to draw the audience the competition leaves out.

The Super Bowl presumably bores only women and children. Unless they have never seen television, they won't find much relief on ABC and NBC. Both will offer mostly repeats.

ABC will rerun the Disney movie "The Undergrads," followed by the network premiere of "The Dead Zone," a science-fiction thriller starring Christopher Walken as a man who becomes prescient after a near-fatal accident.

NBC will have repeats of "Our House" and "Easy Street," a new episode of "Valerie," and "Return to Mayberry," the highest-rated TV movie of last season.

Even though it has the big game, prime-time strategizing is not on hold for the day at CBS, where programmers hope to take advantage of the huge audience to benefit the rest of the year's ratings.

"Hard Copy" is the latest in a series of post-Super Bowl premieres.

NBC started it in 1983 with "The A-Team," a male-oriented, grit-and-clenched-teeth saga of rogue commandos. The huge introductory audience was credited with launching the show on its five-season run.

In 1984, CBS followed the Super Bowl with "60 Minutes" and a two-hour premiere "Airwolf." That series, not dissimilar to "The A-Team" in its male-oriented adventure, lasted 2½ seasons.

But the trend has been downhill.

ABC's husband-and-wife cop show "MacGruder & Loud" had its debut on Super Bowl Sunday 1986 and was dropped after half a season.

Last year, NBC heavily promoted its silly cop sitcom "The Last Precinct" throughout the game, then aired the premiere episode. But "The Last Precinct" didn't last a season.

The 90-minute premiere of "Hard Copy," a drama about crime reporters, will be promoted during the Super Bowl. The show will join the Monday lineup on Feb. 1.

Other CBS entertainment shows also will be promoted during the game, and so will the "CBS Evening News."

But the news division was undecided three days before the broadcast whether anchor Dan Rather would do a newsbreak, which can provide as much promotion as public service.

A spokeswoman for the news show insisted the decision would have nothing to do with criticism of NBC for its news broadcast from the booth at the Fiesta Bowl to the accompaniment of half-time music, since Rather would be operating out of the CBS studio in New York before the game.

NBC News also was taken to task by critics for a halftime interview of President Reagan by sports announcer Bob Costas while newsman

Tom Brokaw sat by. Costas limited his questions to sports.

CBS said it doesn't plan to put Reagan on the air, even when he makes the obligatory call to the winning team's locker room.

Mariette Hartley, cohost of the network's new morning show, will be featured during pregame doing a piece on football movies. But CBS Sports said no other CBS entertainment personalities would appear.

During the game, CBS will advertise its news and prime-time shows in 10-second spots.

CBS spokesman George Schweitzer pointed out the network cannot use the game as "one long promotion," but is limited to one minute per half.

Let anyone doubt the value of that time, two minutes in this year's Super Bowl are worth $2.4 million.

Former U.S. Officials Urge Antidote to TV's 'Amerika'

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — ABC, whose "Amerika" miniseries has angered the left, the right, the Soviet Union and the United Nations even before it has aired, now has a letter of concern signed by three former U.S. secretaries of state.

In it, Edmund Muskie, Alexander M. Haig and Dean Rusk urged the network to provide programming about U.N. peace-keeping operations to offset the miniseries' depictions of oppression by Soviet-controlled U.N. forces.

The 14½-hour production, to air Feb. 15-22, dramatizes life in the United States 10 years after a bloodless takeover by the Soviet Union, with the occupation forces known as "U.N. Special Service Units."

ABC had no immediate comment Wednesday on their appeal, made in a letter to Capital Cities-ABC board Chairman Thomas S. Murphy. An ABC spokesman said Murphy was out of town when the letter arrived Tuesday afternoon and had not seen it yet. Murphy is due back Thursday, the spokesman said.

ABC officials previously have insisted that the $35 million miniseries in no way means to disparage the United Nations as it exists today.

Still, in their appeal to ABC, Haig, Muskie, Rusk and several other former top U.S. officials expressed concern "that the portrayal of U.N. peace-keeping forces as brutal oppressors ... will undermine public support for one of the most valuable aspects of the U.N.'s work."

They asserted that "ABC could limit this damage by providing programming in conjunction with the miniseries that presents a balanced picture of the U.N.'s real-life efforts to keep peace in a troubled world."

The letter was organized and sent by the United Nations Association of the U.S.A., a private research and educational group. Others who signed the letter included Jeane Kirkpatrick and Andrew Young, two former chief United States delegates to the U.N.

Former national security advisers Robert McFarlane, now a central figure in the Iran-contra arms investigation, and Brent Scowcroft also signed the appeal.

The petition was yet another round in efforts by the United Nations and its supporters to seek changes in "Amerika" and to provide what they call a true picture of U.N. peacekeeping forces in the world's trouble spots.

In October, the United Nations, distressed by the use of blue-and-white U.N. symbols and the depiction of oppressive, black-uniformed U.N. troops in "Amerika," hired Theodore Sorensen, once a special counsel to President Kennedy, to negotiate with the network for changes.

 The Giants and the Broncos will clash in the Super Bowl this weekend. Some say that the animal names of football teams have a much more aggressive ring than those of baseball teams. In the past, for example, there were the Canton Bulldogs. Today, there are the Lions, the Falcons, and the Rams. Compared with the Chicago Bears, the Cubs seem pretty tame — to say nothing of the Cardinals. Of course, keep in mind that only the Dolphins could defeat the Bears in 1985.

 Opening lead: Four of ♠

At our father's knee in the Old Country, we learned the adage: "Lead up to your high cards." Apparently South's sire was born in the New World and forgot to impart this wisdom to his offspring.

Note North's waiting bid of three spades. Since South's jump shift was game-forcing, North did not have to guess what his partner's distribution was. The temporizing action allowed South the room to describe his holding.

West shrewdly led a trump, and declarer saw no problem in the hand. He won with the nine and, in an attempt to ruff at least one spade, he laid down the king. His complacency was shattered when East ruffed this trick and exited with a trump, and declarer found he could come to no more than nine tricks—one fewer than he had contracted for.

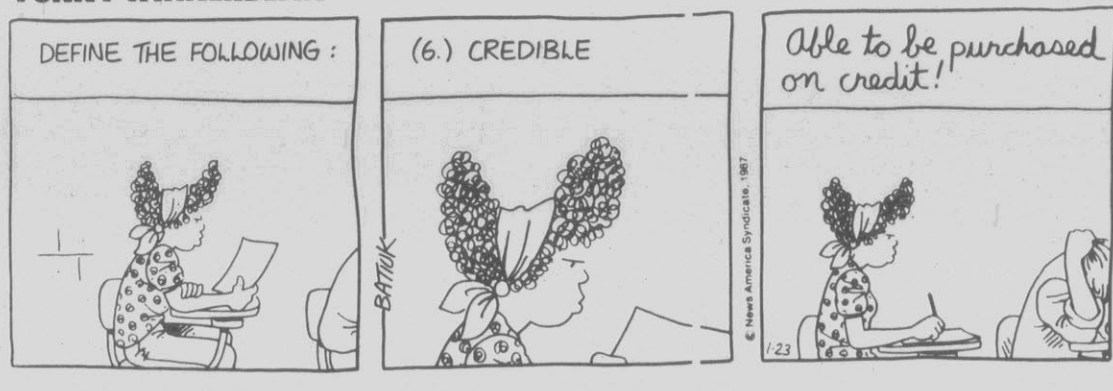

There is no magic to this hand. All declarer had to do to land his contract was to follow one of the oldest rubrics in bridge.

Let's see what would happen had declarer won the first trick in dummy and led a spade toward his ace-king. If East trumps this trick, he will be ruffing air—declarer will follow with a low spade and preserve his winners. If East does not ruff, declarer wins with the ace, crosses to the ace of diamonds and leads another spade from the table. Again it does not help East to ruff, and when he discards declarer's king wins. Now he ruffs a spade with the board's high trump, draws trumps and then forces out the ace of clubs. In all, declarer scores five trump tricks, two spades and a ruff, the ace of diamonds and a club.

Those players in the Old Country must have been pretty good.

Official Vows War On High Card Interests

By BRENDA C. COLEMAN
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Illinois will continue to wage war on high credit-card interest rates with more withdrawals such as the removal of nearly $220 million in investments from First National Bank of Chicago, the state treasurer warned.

"Illinois taxpayers will not help fund their gouging of consumers any longer," Jerome Cosentino said.

Cosentino's withdrawal Thursday was the first such action by an elected official in the nation, according to a national consumer group that has called for similar action in other states.

First National, whose credit-card interest rate of 19.8 percent ranks among the highest in the state, was singled out because it has more cardholders than any other bank in Illinois.

First National is just "the beginning of a string of banks" that will lose their state deposits if they do not relent on credit-card interest, Cosentino told a news conference.

He also announced that four Illinois banks have lowered their rates to 13.8 percent in an effort to attract state business.

"This will result in a major savings to their customers and to people who tear up their First cards and apply instead to these banks," he said.

Cosentino said he planned to use as leverage the more than $3 billion the state invests annually in Illinois banks, but he did not specify a deadline or identify banks to be targeted.

The $220 million taken from First National represents all state investments held by the bank, he said.

First National spokesman Peter Soraparu called the withdrawal unfortunate.

"We value all the business we do with the state of Illinois, and we will continue to serve various state departments we continue to have relationships with," Soraparu said.

However, Cosentino said all other state money would be removed during the next few weeks.

Roughly $1 billion, including receipts from the state lottery, passes through First National annually by way of about 30 transaction accounts, he said.

Cosentino, a Democrat who took office earlier this month and served a term from 1979 to 1983, acknowledged the withdrawal was "a drop in the bucket" for First National, with total assets of $39.1 billion.

"Not only are we doing what is right socially, but the taxpayers will actually earn more," he said.

The withdrawn money has been deposited with three investment brokers and one commercial bank and will draw 5.9 percent annually, instead of the 5.85 percent it was earning with First National, Cosentino said.

First National, the nation's fifth-largest issuer of bank credit cards, raised its interest rate from 17.8 percent during the past five years, according to Cosentino and the Bankcard Holders of America, a Washington-based non-profit group that also said Cosentino's action was unprecedented.

During his campaign, Cosentino called for a cap on credit-card interest rates of 3 percentage points above the prime rate, now 10.5 percent, and he said Thursday he is backing legislation to restore a cap lifted several years ago.

Cosentino said the state invests in about 1,000 banks in Illinois. He was unable to say how much money is held in the 25 or so banks that issue credit cards.

Elgie Holstein, director of the 130,000-member Bankcard Holders, said Cosentino "has sent a message to the banks that they can no longer get away with this sort of highway robbery."

About 7 million Illinois residents hold bank credit cards, Cosentino said.

Shorthand Turns 150, Still Going

LONDON (AP) — In 1837, a 24-year-old English schoolteacher developed a new phonetic shorthand system that used dots and strokes to represent sounds.

It was simple to use and recorded speech faster than any other type of shorthand. Eventually learned by tens of millions of people across the world, it became an indispensable tool for many office secretaries, journalists and court stenographers.

The 150th anniversary of Isaac Pitman's invention was marked Thursday by Pitman Publishing, which Pitman set up soon after the first edition of his "Stenographic Shorthand" was printed because demand for the manuals was so phenomenal.

Kicking off a yearlong celebration, Pitman admirers said his shorthand has brought millions of women into the work place, made verbatim reporting commonplace and still is a sure ticket to a job.

To honor its founder, Pitman Publishing opened an exhibition at its London headquarters recreating a male-dominated clerk's office in 1890 complete with ink wells, an early form of typewriter and actors in Victorian dress showing their proficiency at shorthand with quills.

Among other events will be a reception at the House of Commons on June 15 hosted by the shorthand specialists who record parliamentary proceedings. On average, they can take down 200 words a minute.

Pitman Publishing managing director, Ian Pringle, said demand for shorthand and accompanying secretarial skills has not waned over the years.

"When unemployment is a strong national issue (in Britain), we believe ... the important skills from shorthand get people jobs," he said. Britain has more than 3 million people out of work.

"There is no unemployment for secretaries," he maintained. "Secretarial qualifications ... get people jobs internationally."

The fastest recorded shorthand speed ever attained was 350 words per minute for 2 minutes by American Nathan Behrin in tests in New York in World Records. Behrin used the Pitman method.

By the time the inventor was knighted by Queen Victoria in 1894, about 100,000 people, mostly men, were using Pitman shorthand. Many had learned the system through the world's first correspondence school, which Pitman started in 1840 on the first day that British postal rates were cut sharply to make the postal system accessible to all.

Women, previously restricted mainly to nursing, teaching and domestic work, took up shorthand and moved into offices across the country in large numbers during World War I.

Gadhafi Operating By Remote Control

By DAVID B. OTTAWAY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi has ordered his capital moved from Tripoli deep into the desert heartland of his nation and is running the government from various small hideaways since the U.S. bombings April 15, according to U.S. intelligence reports.

Gadhafi also appears to have had a major falling out with his closest associate, Abdel Salem Jalloud, who has been in Damascus, Syria, for two months.

U.S. analysts say the reason for the Gadhafi-Jalloud discord is not clear. But they say they think it may stem from a disagreement over Libya's occupation of the northern part of Chad and whether it should increase its military commitment there.

Jalloud has been out of the country throughout the latest round of escalated warfare in Chad despite his normal role as Gadhafi's de facto prime minister in charge of day-to-day government operations. He initially went to Damascus in mid-November to help mediate in the fighting between Palestinians and Shiites in southern Lebanon. But U.S. analysts have no indication he has ever returned.

U.S. analysts are watching closely for signs that the Libyan army's reverses in Chad are causing political troubles for Gadhafi that could lead to his downfall. Chad is widely regarded in U.S. intelligence circles as a potential catalyst for an attempted military coup against him.

The Libyan army suffered a serious defeat in early January when a 1,000-man garrison at Fada, deep inside Chad, was routed by Chadian forces, leaving behind scores of tanks and six aircraft. On Wednesday, the Chadian government claimed to have inflicted another defeat on the Libyan army at Zouar in the Tebesti Mountains of northern Chad.

One cautious U.S. official said he believed it would still be "quite a few more months" before the full political impact of the army's battlefield reverses hit Gadhafi. Another equally cautious analyst noted that Gadhafi had ridden out a similar military disaster at the hands of Tanzanian troops in Uganda in 1979.

Gadhafi has sought to limit the Chad war's impact on Tripoli by using soldiers from the southern part of the country and recruits from other parts of Africa. In addition, he has ordered that the wounded be treated in field hospitals rather than in the capital, and has blocked news about what is really happening to his army, according to U.S. intelligence reports.

He also has begun seeking mediation by other African countries, including Algeria, Nigeria and the Sudan, according to these reports.

U.S. analysts are being extremely cautious in their assessment of Gadhafi's present dilemma following the disclosure in October that the White House had deliberately leaked false information last summer to make him believe another U.S. attack, or coup attempt, was in preparation.

Some reports after the U.S. bombing of Tripoli last April said Gadhafi had been effectively replaced as Libya's sole ruler by a collective leadership of his military colleagues. But the latest U.S. intelligence reports indicate the contrary, and that he now has what one U.S. official called "a firm lock" on the country, particularly its extensive security apparatus.

Gadhafi, who is known for his sharp emotional ups and downs, has periodically taken temporary refuge in one or another desert retreat after a setback throughout his 18 years in power. This appears to have happened again after last April's bombing by U.S. warplanes of Tripoli and Benghazi and to have been mistakenly interpreted as an end to his one-man leadership.

Nonetheless, there are signs that he has changed his style of running the country, if only to avoid being killed in another American attack.

On Jan. 1, he gave a speech in which he announced he was moving the government from Tripoli to Hun, a small town more than 300 miles southeast of Tripoli. Military headquarters, he said, was being moved to nearby Jufra.

"He wants to move everything away from the coast for security reasons," said one U.S. analyst.

It is not clear that any government ministries have actually moved, but the army's command — although not the navy's — has begun operating from Jufra, U.S. intelligence reports say.

According to the reports, Gadhafi also has built a number of secret fortified hideaways around the country that he uses as command posts in running the government. In addition, he has mobile command posts that can be set up anywhere.

"Gadhafi is running the government by remote control," a U.S. official said. "He's traveling around the country and sending messages. He communicates regularly but there are not frequent meetings with other government leaders."

Philip's Letter Published

LONDON (AP) — A newspaper today published what it said was a letter from Prince Philip to the Royal Marines about his son's controversial decision to quit the elite corps. Buckingham Palace denounced the publication.

The Sun, a London tabloid, quoted Prince Philip as saying that 22-year-old Prince Edward now faces "a very difficult problem of adjustment." It said the letter was addressed to the commandant general of the marines, Gen. Sir Michael Wilkins.

Asked if the letter was authentic, palace press officer John Haslam told The Associated Press: "We are not commenting on that. You must draw your own conclusions on that."

Michael Shea, Queen Elizabeth II's press secretary, said in a statement: "We consider it deplorable that a national newspaper appears to have published the contents of a private and personal letter from the Duke of Edinburgh (Prince Philip) which must originally have been obtained by dishonest means."

Shea is thought to have used the word "appears" only to indicate that he did not know of the contents because it was a personal letter.

Prince Edward, the youngest of the three sons of the queen and Prince Philip, resigned from the marines Jan. 12, breaking with a longstanding family tradition of military service. He had completed four months of a yearlong training course as a marine commando officer.

A palace statement at the time, which climaxed six days of intense press speculation about Edward's future, said the prince "does not wish to make the service his long-term career."

No specific reason was given for his resignation and Edward made no public statements. The Sun, which broke the story that he planned to quit, said he had found the training too tough.

Prince Edward's commanding officer, Col. Ian Moore, denied that explanation, and press reports concluded that the prince, who faced a nine-year career in the marines, simply decided the life of a commando officer was not for him.

Reports said his resignation angered Prince Philip, who holds the honorary rank of captain general in the Royal Marines.

The Sun said the letter was dated Jan. 12. The paper said it had received the contents from a telephone caller who claimed he was speaking from Exeter in southwest England near the marines' Lympstone training camp, where Prince Edward was based.
