Waite Missing As New Kidnap Occurs In Beirut

By RODEINA KENAN
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police today said gunmen kidnaped a Saudi Arabian, bringing to 11 the number of foreigners reported abducted in two weeks. A news agency said hostage negotiator Terry Waite was detained by the kidnapers with whom he was meeting.

Waite, a lay envoy for the Anglican Church, has not been seen in public since Jan. 20, when he set out from his hotel in Moslem west Beirut for a meeting with the captors of two Americans.

It was the longest he has remained underground in his five trips to Lebanon to negotiate freedom for hostages.

Kuwait's official news agency KUNA said Monday night that the Moslem kidnapers with whom Waite was negotiating had placed him under house arrest in a secret location.

The agency quoted unidentified sources close to the negotiations as saying, "They (the kidnapers) detained him and put him under forced habitation after his attempts to reach a quick agreement were snarled."

In London, the Anglican Church said it was making "urgent inquiries" about Waite's whereabouts. The British Foreign Office said it was "in contact with Terry Waite's bodyguards seeking clarification of this report."

Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, in his first public comment since Waite embarked on this mission, said he was "greatly concerned" about his envoy's safety, but that he had "no direct evidence" to confirm a report that Waite was under house arrest.

"Needless to say we continue to check with our contacts," Runcie said.

Spokesmen for the Progressive Socialist Party, a Druse militia that has been in charge of guarding Waite, refused to comment on the Kuwaiti report.

The leftist Beirut daily As-Safir said today that when Waite's Druse bodyguards drove him to a secret location in the area of the American University of Beirut on Jan. 20, he rejected their attempts to stay with him.

As-Safir, quoting unidentified security sources, said Waite went into an apartment building and then emerged to demand his Druse escort leave him and return to the hotel.

The guards called their chief by telephone, and he rejected Waite's request, the newspaper said. But Waite insisted on being left, saying he needed to go alone outside Beirut to renew secret negotiations with the captors, it said.

As-Safir did not give the name of the Druse official who counseled against leaving Waite.

Police said three gunmen seized Khaled Deeb, a Saudi Arabian, on Beirut's airport highway near the Palestinian refugee camp of Bourj el-Barajneh at 10 p.m. Monday.

They said they have no further information about the Saudi, who became the 11th foreigner kidnaped since Waite arrived from London Jan. 12. The spate of kidnappings began a few hours after Waite's arrival, when gunmen seized Saudi Arabian Embassy employee Bakr Damanhour near the airport.

French freelance photo-journalist Roger Auque, 31, was kidnaped the following day, minutes after he covered a Waite seaside stroll in west Beirut.

Two West Germans, three Americans and an Indian also have been seized. The West German government said its nationals were grabbed in hopes of a swap for a Lebanese hijacking suspect arrested at Frankfurt airport on Jan. 13.

On Monday, gunmen seized two unidentified men from a store in west Beirut, and a store employee said the victims spoke broken English and might be Poles.

Altogether, 26 foreigners are missing in Lebanon: eight Americans, six Frenchmen, two West Germans, two Britons, two Saudis, one Irishman, one Italian, one South Korean, an Indian and two unidentified.

Snow Clears, But More May Be Coming

By CHERIE EVANS

Here one day, gone the next. It happened just that fast.

Sleet and snow blanketed roads in the Pitt County area Monday, giving county students an unexpected holiday and causing several minor accidents.

Local officials say evidence of the disruption was just about gone by today, but the Weather Service says more snow is possible tonight and Wednesday. Temperatures are forecast to drop into the high teens tonight.

There were 14 accidents in Greenville recorded from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday, said Linda Williams of the Greenville Police Department. But she said it could not be determined how many of them were weather related.

"We can't say how many of them were because of the snow," she said. Most of the accidents did not cause any injuries.

From midnight Sunday to noon Monday, there were about 165 accidents reported to Troop A of the state Highway Patrol, said dispatcher Leon Tolson. Troop A patrols 24 eastern counties, including Pitt County.

Counties reporting the most accidents were Bertie, Hertford and Chowan, he said. "It was pretty bad in those areas."

Pitt County students began school an hour late today, and "everything went smoothly as far as I know," said Barry Gaskins, public information director. Students were dismissed at 10 a.m. Monday as weather conditions continued to grow worse, but are expected to be in school all day today, he said.

Remnants of Monday's snow were not creating any danger on city streets, said Mayo Allen of the Greenville Public Works Department.

There was a crew working at 4 a.m. today checking for possible road hazards, he said.

Surplus Foods Program Faces Loss Of Funding

By JANE WELBORN

Pitt County welfare recipients who have been receiving butter, cheese and other surplus commodities from the Department of Social Services might not be given the staples any longer, according to the local DSS director.

Edward Garrison told DSS board members Monday that the program is "on the verge of being terminated."

Garrison said that, although there is nothing official from the U.S. Department of Agriculture, "the administration in D.C. deemed it will no longer support" the program. "The states won't receive any money, and the N.C. Department of Agriculture said it can't administer the program unless the administrative money is available.

"It looks like the program, unless state funds are available, will no longer be in existence as of January 1987," Garrison said.

"I do not know the rationale for the sudden change," Garrison said.

"That food has been very important to a lot of people."

The commodities distribution program, which began four years ago, provided cheese, butter, corn meal, dry milk, honey, rice and flour to eligible residents. Eligibility director Debbie Ryals said that about 3,450 households participated in the distributions, which provided staples for approximately 10,000 county residents.

"We won't know until closer to the date of the February distribution whether or not we will have the distribution," Mrs. Ryals said. "The only thing we have been told is that there is still a chance for the Feb. 18 and Feb. 19 distribution, but that the future after February looks bleak.

"This is a program that has touched a large portion of the community," she said. "There has been good community response and the program has gone smoothly administratively.

"A lot of people are going to be affected if the program is cut out," Mrs. Ryals said.

Garrison said the agency's spending is "on target" for this time of year. He said that the fiscal year is half over and approximately 50 percent of the funds have been spent. He said that public assistance programs, which usually cause the most problems in overspending, have used 49.8 percent of the allocated funds.

The director said he is concerned about the emergency funds, which provide money for area residents in life-threatening situations. Garrison said that $17,000 in Crisis Intervention funds were cut as a result of the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings budget-balancing legislation and that the $5,000 left in that fund has been frozen for use later in the year. "We must save some for the spring and summer months," he said.

There are other emergency programs, he said, such as the County Only Emergency Assistance Fund

William "Griff" Garner, president and chief executive officer of Garner Wholesale Merchandisers, has been named the 1986 recipient of the Greenville Jaycees' Distinguished Service Award.

Garner, 29, was honored along with 1986 Boss of the Year Award winner Wayne Trull, president and owner of Goodyear Tire Center, at the Greenville Jaycees' 41st annual Distinguished Service Award and Bosses Night banquet at the Sheraton Greenville Monday night.

"It's an honor to serve for the community of Pitt County," Garner told about 60 guests after receiving the award.

"It's the one thing we can do, as your (the Jaycee) motto says, to serve our fellow man and help our fellow man meet the needs that he has and some of those people who cannot meet their needs on their own."

Garner, who also serves as president of Computer Displays, said the work of the Jaycees is an important part of the Pitt County community.

"I've always respected the work of the Jaycees and what the Jaycees stand for and do," he said.

"I'm so surprised and so honored to be listed among the names of your DSA winners — some of whom I know — and I know what those folks mean to this community. If I have been honored to be one like them, this is very very special."

Joseph W. Dean, secretary of the N.C. Department of Crime Control and Public Safety, called Garner an illustration of concerned area residents.

"He is fine example of what Pitt County can produce," said Dean, guest speaker at the banquet. "He is a good example of where service to humanity is the best work of life.

"I will tell you to keep on reaching out to others with the knowledge that the troubles facing our communities in our state are no match for the heart and commitment of the people of North Carolina when we work together in a unified state," Dean told the Jaycees at the dinner.

Garner, son of Greenville Mayor Les Garner, received a bachelor's degree in business administration from East Carolina University and a master's degree in business administration from Harvard University.

He was a summa cum laude graduate of ECU, where he was Beta Gamma Sigma's outstanding business student for 1978-79. He won the Elijah Watts Silver Medal for a second place national finish in the certified public accountant's examination in 1979.

In recognition of his achievements in wholesale management, Garner was elected to the board of directors of the National Association of Service Merchandisers in 1986. He has served on the NASM Industry Education and Training Committee since 1983.

Garner, who was the youngest member of the University City Kiwanis Club when he joined in 1976, has served on the club's board of directors for several years, and is chairman of the finance and budget committee and president-elect to the club.

He joined the board of directors of

The function of the unit is to identify and investigate suspect fraud and, when necessary, seek prosecution of persons conducting fraudulent activities involving BCBSNC benefits.

Rose Carpenter, head of the fraud unit, said the unit is not a law enforcement agency, so information it develops will be turned over to proper authorities.

She said it is estimated that as much as 7 percent of the nation's health care bill is being consumed by fraud. "Fraud, even the smallest amount of it, costs us all by driving up health care costs in the long run," she said.

Anti-fraud efforts by other BCBS plans across the country have saved more than $51 million for subscribers and resulted in the prosecution of 467 cases in the past two years, she said.

She asked persons suspecting fraudulent activity related to Blue Cross benefits to contact her at 439-7431. She said confidentiality is assured.

Pitt County property owners who fail to list their property for tax purposes before the close of business Monday will face a 10 percent late-listing penalty, county Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee cautioned today.

The normal deadline for listing property for tax purposes is midnight Jan. 31. But Hardee said that since Jan. 31 falls on Saturday this year, the deadline has been extended to midnight Monday.

About 65 percent of the property has already been listed, Hardee said, leaving 35 percent to be listed before the tax supervisor's office closes Monday afternoon.

Hardee suggested that property owners list as early as possible to avoid the waiting lines that normally develop on the last day.

Hardee said that persons listing by mail should be sure that their tax abstracts are mailed early enough to insure that they will be postmarked before the midnight Monday deadline. Abstracts postmarked after that time will also be subject to the 10 percent late listing penalty, he said.

AGREEMENT

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg has signed an agreement with Livingwell Health Spas that calls for the firm to resolve over 100 complaints to the state consumer protection agency and sets standards for the firm's future operations in North Carolina.

"This agreement covers every phase of the health spa business," Thornburg said.

Livingwell, while denying any wrongdoing, has agreed to pay the state Department of Justice $50,000, refrain from certain advertising and sales practices, honor consumers' refund rights and comply with North Carolina's debt collection laws.

Consumers complained to the state consumer protection agency about misleading advertising, being high-pressured into signing contracts on the spot, being denied their three-day right to cancel contracts, not getting refunds for medical disabilities, and being badgered for money they did not owe.

Consumers with similar complaints also may be entitled to relief under the terms of the settlement agreement.

Thornburg said, "We do not view these practices as minor infractions of the law. They are serious issues that confront people every day."

Calling the agreement a comprehensive review of common practices throughout the health spa industry, Thornburg added, "Others engaging in these practices are now on notice to clean up their acts."

Complaints may be sent to: Consumer Protection, N.C. Attorney General's Office, P.O. Box 629, Raleigh, N.C. 27602.

Inmates Fight As Fire Forces Prison Evacuation

By EARL BOHN
Associated Press Writer
PITTSBURGH (AP) — Fire broke out at a state penitentiary early today and at least three guards and 15 inmates were injured as numerous fights broke out among convicts evacuated to a frigid prison yard, officials said.

Some convicts barricaded themselves in a prison auditorium and set fire to it, said officials at the State Correctional Institution at Pittsburgh, but there were unconfirmed reports that the inmates fled after setting the blaze.

"We definitely have the situation under control. ... The inmates are confined," prison spokesman

Thomas Seiverling said about four hours after the first of several fires was reported at 3:24 a.m.

The auditorium was on fire about seven hours later. Seiverling said the prisoners' barricade was not reported by guards earlier because "we were not that concerned about it."

About 100 state troopers and 100 city police armed with shotguns and wearing flak jackets were called to the penitentiary, also known as Western Pen, near the Ohio River, authorities said.

Three guards were treated and released at Allegheny General Hospital and 14 inmates were treated in the prison's infirmary, their injuries ranging from smoke inhalation to lacerations, said prison and hospital officials.

Another inmate was taken to St. John's Hospital in Pittsburgh suffering from smoke inhalation, officials said.

City fire units were called to the huge stone prison, which houses about 1,600 maximum- and minimum-security inmates, in response to a fire in a prison basement, said Margaret Rizza, spokeswoman for the city Department of Public Safety.

Inmates apparently started other fires, authorities said.

Heavy smoke forced guards to evacuate hundreds of inmates from the 640-cell north block, and some from the upper tiers of the south cell block, and moved into the outdoor prison yard, Seiverling said.

As many as 800 prisoners were evacuated to the prison yard, inside the walls, where the temperature was 4 degrees. They were wearing only T-shirts, bed clothes and blankets, said Police Chief William Moore.

Immediately, scores of fights broke out among inmates and between guards and inmates in the yard. Guards fired shots into the air to control the prisoners, Seiverling said.

"I don't think it was rioting," Moore said. "The inmates were severely cold. There was a great deal of confusion. Certainly, there were some taunts and some fighting between inmates, but I wouldn't say rioting."

Inmates broke up and burned picnic tables in the yard in an effort to keep warm, and prison staff prepared food for a hot meal.

The trouble began when a fire broke out in a utility tunnel, in a section separate from the cell blocks, and inmates broke down interior barriers, said Ken Robinson, spokesman for the state Department of Corrections in Harrisburg.

The fires appeared to be under control at dawn, said Fire Chief John Leahy.

Leahy said he didn't know how many fires broke out inside the prison. He said inmates apparently added to the first fires by igniting beds, benches and garbage. About 50 firefighters were inside the prison, he said.

A second fire was reported on the second tier of the prison on the river side, Miss Rizza said.

"There are two separate fires in the building. One is in the basement and one is on the second tier of the river side. The one to worry about is on the second tier," she said.

The prison, built in 1882, is undergoing a $20 million renovation, including the construction of new cell blocks.

Snowed-In East Shivers As West Braces For Floods

By JONATHAN OATIS
Associated Press Writer
The snowed-in East shivered in temperatures as low as minus 22 degrees today, sending record numbers of homeless people to shelters, while bad weather kept schools closed in three states and the Delaware legislature canceled hearings.

Buffalo, N.Y.; 8 degrees in Pittsburgh and Portland, Maine; 13 in Philadelphia, and 16 in Washington, D.C.

By contrast, Los Angeles reached a record-tying 86 degrees Monday, and lifeguards said about 40,000 people visited beaches from Zuma to Newport.

James River Bridge at Newport News, Va.

In New Jersey and Delaware, the National Guard was called out to transport people to hospitals and nursing homes. Many Virginia hospitals asked owners of four-wheel drive vehicles to help carry patients and staff members.

As road crews worked around the clock in the East, which had drifts up to 4 feet deep from Monday's snow, a storm packing gale-force winds took aim at the Northwest, triggering flood watches.

A storm brewing off the Gulf Coast could bring rain and more snow to the East Coast by Thursday, along with above-normal tides that could produce some flooding, said forecaster Jim Eberwine in New Jersey.

The brunt of the latest Eastern storm moved out to the North Atlantic on Monday, but it was still snowing on Cape Cod, blown by 30-40 mph winds. Gale warnings remained in effect from Maine to Rhode Island.

Yet another storm was dusting the Carolinas today, "but it's not nearly as heavy" as earlier storms, said Scott Tansey of the National Severe Storms Forecast Center in Kansas City, Mo.

Atlantic City, N.J., and surrounding communities closed streets to all but emergency traffic.

Philadelphia International, Baltimore-Washington International, Dulles and National airports in Washington and the airports in Richmond, Va., and Charlotte, N.C., were closed for at least several hours Monday.

Since Thursday, when the first paralyzing snowstorm rolled up the Atlantic Coast, at least 53 deaths have been blamed on snow, slippery roads and cold from the South to New England.

Schools remained closed today in Delaware, on Cape Cod in Massachusetts, and in most of Maryland. Delaware legislative leaders canceled House and Senate sessions, extending a recess that began with the first storm.

The Northwest's storm was off the northern California coast.

"It's fairly strong. The problem with this particular storm is there's unusually high astronomical tides," Tansey said.

In Washington, about 300,000 federal workers stayed home. The Supreme Court postponed issuing orders, and the House and Senate met in abbreviated sessions.

Most state offices in southern New Jersey closed, Maryland state workers were told to stay home and all Virginia state agencies closed. In Annapolis, the bad weather postponed the swearing-in of Maryland's comptroller, Louis Goldstein.

Washington's Dulles Airport reopened at 5 a.m. today.

Thousands of New York City's homeless sought shelter overnight from 15-degree cold. Figures were not immediately available, but officials expected about the record 10,144 people who stayed in 21 shelters Sunday night.

Coastal flood watches were posted for Oregon and northern California, and gale warnings were up along the coast as far north as Washington.

In the East, the storm Monday closed major airports and gave thousands of schoolchildren in 14 states from Alabama to Massachusetts and the District of Columbia a day off, along with some 300,000 federal workers.

The weather was hard on crime, too. In Baltimore, police said they arrested a man in a burglary at a liquor store Monday, then followed tracks in the snow to four men who were allegedly trying to make off with more than $1,200 worth of liquor, cheese and chicken wings.

The storm bombed Kinsale in eastern Virginia with 2 feet of snow and left accumulations of 23 inches in Roanoke and 17 inches in Richmond. Southern New Jersey and Cape Cod picked up as much as 18 inches, Washington up to a foot, Philadelphia 6 inches and New York and Boston 4 inches each. Drifts up to 4 feet high piled up in southern New Jersey.

The storm was blamed for hundreds of traffic accidents Monday, including an 18-car pileup on the icy

Since last week, the cold, snow and slippery roads have been blamed for 19 deaths in Pennsylvania, most from shoveling snow; seven in Alabama; five in North Carolina; four in Tennessee and Maryland; three in Connecticut and Virginia; two each in New York and Rhode Island; and one each in South Carolina, Massachusetts, Michigan and Kentucky.

Reagan To Give His State Of Union Speech Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, out of the public eye for a month, is returning to center stage tonight with a State of the Union address intended to show him in command, undaunted by the Iran-Contra scandal and promoting an agenda for arms control and economic strength.

Reagan will go before the nation and the Congress at 9 p.m. EST in a nationally broadcast address from the rostrum of the House of Representatives.

It will be his first major speech of the year, and it is expected to be the first time since before Christmas that he publicly mentions the secret arms sale to Iran and diversion of profits to Contra rebels in Nicaragua.

Portraying Reagan as unfazed by the Iran-Contra controversy, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said, "The president will go to Capitol Hill much in the same manner that he has done in previous years, and in each and every year his message has been a strong message ... received and accepted by the American people."

panies to engage in more joint ventures overseas.

Speakes said Reagan would stress economic progress under his administration and offer ideas to "maintain the economic momentum."

Because of disagreement within the administration, work was not completed on an expected insurance program to deal with the huge costs of catastrophic illness. "It will be mentioned, but final decisions have not been made," said White House deputy press secretary Albert Brashear.

Ms. Saballos declined to specify Hall's illness, but government sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said he suffered from a mental disorder.

Hall, 49, is the brother of Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio.

No date was given for his release, but Ms. Saballos said the government

Nicaragua Will Free Hall On Spy Charge

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government said it will release jailed American Sam Nesley Hall because of health reasons, dropping plans to try him on charges of spying.

Angela Saballos, a spokeswoman for the Foreign Ministry, said Monday night the government made the decision "because it is impossible to place him in Nicaragua in the type of institution doctors recommend for him."

hoped the congressman would come to Nicaragua to take his brother home.

Sam Hall was arrested Dec. 12 at Punta Huete air base, 13 miles northeast of Managua. Sandinista officials said they found maps and sketches of the airfield, crudely drawn on hotel stationery, in his socks.

In subsequent interviews, Hall said he was paid $12,500 for his secret mission and worked for a previously unheard of organization called the Phoenix Battalion. He said he knew his superiors only as Tinker, Evers and Chance, the last names of a famous Chicago Cubs double-play combination in the 1930s.

Hall said he was not working for the U.S. government.

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Mental health workers should monitor the cases of non-violent mentally ill children as closely as they monitor violent ones, the staff director of a North Carolina group studying child mental health care says.

More mental health workers would be required to monitor cases and the N.C. Mental Health Study Commission plans to ask the General Assembly to fund their hiring, Lynn Gunn, staff director of the commission, said at a meeting of legislators and mental health workers in Chapel Hill.

The state spends less than $3 million on mental health care for non-violent children per year, Ms. Gunn said.

Right Track

There is nothing more sensitive in planning and zoning than consideration of what will go adjacent, or near to, previously developed residential areas.

City planners know that a request for development of commercial property or multifamily units will bring protests from nearby resident owners, who understandably want to protect their property values. Sometimes residential owners inject themselves into zoning disputes far removed from their own location, perhaps unreasonably so. Nevertheless, there is justification when changes are sought in nearby residential zoning.

The city is scrutinizing a way to deal with such controversial matters. Planning officials presented a proposed Planned Unit Development Ordinance to the City Council recently.

The ordinance would provide for a new zoning classification for difficult to develop tracts. A spokesman said the ordinance would provide for planned unit development through the conditional use process and cluster development.

Developers would present their plans at an earlier date than is now permitted and would have adequate time to show how their property would be developed. Residents in the area would also have more time to see precisely how the property would be developed.

The Planning Commission would be able to require the developer to actually show what is going to be done as a part of the rezoning request.

The ordinance would allow for creation of specific districts with definite use and dimensional standards.

Before anything is done to the property a special use permit for specific development or a land use plan would have to be offered and approved.

The city seems to be on the right track in handling the development of difficult tracts. As the city has grown many areas of open land have been bypassed by outward development. These parcels will be utilized someday, and a specific ordinance which allows for careful development is in order.

Unlikely Hero

Announcement that Georgia and Alabama will join forces in one more war against the mighty boll weevil comes as a small surprise. In some parts of the South the weevil is a hero.

In a nutshell, the two states have agreed to drive the pest from 275,000 acres of their land. Spraying Malathion and special traps are the weapons of choice.

Similar tactics were used in the Carolinas and the goal is to create a weevil-free zone through the South from the Carolinas to Texas. Divide and conquer is a longstanding strategy for victories.

If you came in late, the boll weevil invaded the U.S. from Mexico in the early 1890s and infested 85 percent of the Cotton Belt by 1922. It changed the Southland forever.

The weevils forced many farmers to plant other crops and use some of their land for raising cattle, hogs and chickens. It turned out to be a blessing. The insects had an advantage; several generations of boll weevils could be produced in a single season.

The town of Enterprise, Ala., erected a monument to the weevil after its cotton crop was destroyed; its farmers were forced into diversified farming and became more prosperous.

The statue bears the inscription "In profound appreciation of the boll weevil, and what it has done to herald prosperity".

Today's Thought

If President Reagan talks about the Cold War in his State of the Union address from Washington tonight, he will likely be referring to the weather, not the Russians.

Meeting The African National Congress

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is an enigmatic fellow. He threatened to resign last year when asked to take a lie detector test, but didn't do likewise when his principles were abused by the Iran arms scandal. Meanwhile, he helped the Reagan administration battle against South African sanctions on Capitol Hill. This week he's hosting Oliver Tambo, president of the South African-banned African National Congress (ANC), at the State Department.

Some of the secretary's nervous aides think the Tambo meeting will only mean personal trouble. "I don't know why he's doing this," said one aide. "We're not going to solve the crisis in South Africa before the end of the Reagan administration." But Shultz is smart enough to size up the importance of this encounter as one step toward balancing the ledger in U.S./South African relations.

Shultz will have much ground to smooth over with the ANC. Though lesser American officials have met with Tambo before, previous administrations have considered the ANC's 30-man National Executive Committee, based in Lusaka, Zambia, a Soviet puppet and treated it accordingly. The United States has even spied on the ANC for the government of South Africa.

While the Shultz/Tambo meeting isn't likely to have any positive impact on the ruling Botha government, the tete-a-tete comes at a favorable time. Tambo is still considered reasonable and approachable. He's labeled conservative by the standards of some of the young comrades in the ANC. And though his leadership comes under constant pressure from black radicals and left-wing socialists, Tambo still enjoys the support of the majority of the 75-year-old organization's members. He is widely admired for making the ANC the No. 1 anti-apartheid organization and saving it from the kind of internal strife that plagues most exiled political groups.

But his power is not going to last forever. Tambo, who looks like a reverend (which he nearly was) with his gray sideburns and piercing eyes, is 70 years old. No one is sure how long his health will hold up.

Meanwhile, Tambo is pursuing a two-track policy. On the one hand he's making diplomatic contacts with influential groups to gain the ANC international recognition as a government in exile. To sustain this effort, the ANC receives most of its financial support from Sweden ($20 million a year) and the Soviet Union ($24 million a year). It also receives in-kind assistance from church groups and sympathetic followers in Europe.

Simultaneously, Tambo maintains a guerrilla strategy through the ANC's armed wing, Umkhonto we Sizwe (MK). There are probably 10,000 ANC guerrillas training outside South Africa and another 1,000 doing so inside the country. Outside South Africa, the ANC uses military training facilities at Viana in Angola. Smaller numbers of recruits are trained in Cuba, East Germany and the Soviet Union. Groups of trained guerrillas infiltrate South Africa across its borders with Zimbabwe, Mozambique and Botswana, in cadres of up to a dozen men which separate upon entering the homeland. By conducting isolated bombings of non-civilian targets in South Africa, the ANC hopes to demonstrate its strength.

The ANC is particularly anxious not to encourage radical divisions since the organization is multi-racial. Its reluctance to attack civilian targets, though not always successful, represents a deliberate policy rather than any military deficiency.

The ANC's biggest problem is incorporating township radicals into disciplined cadres. This group tends to have little patience with the sort of pragmatism taught by ANC leaders like Tambo. In the meantime, Tambo is trying to determine how to absorb radicals without disrupting the party and losing the organization's international standing.

In spite of its Soviet support, the ANC's political approach is still pragmatic and sensible. Many white South Africans, in fact, favor the legalization of the ANC, in preparation for fair elections, as the only hope for a peaceful South Africa. The ANC agreed last year to negotiate a future constitutional dispensation with the Botha government on the basis of reserved seats for whites in a national parliament.

George Shultz isn't the only prominent character of late to meet with Tambo. Last year, a respected group of white South African businessmen, including Gavin Rely, chairman of the Anglo-American Corporation, met with him. The businessmen were told that, when the ANC comes to power in South Africa, certain corporations would be taken over by the state, but a mixed economy would survive.

Strength For Today

There is an old story in the Arabian Nights about a genie who was corked up in a bottle by a magician and then thrown into the sea. The genie at first made vows to bestow on his liberator everything his heart could desire. But as the centuries rolled on and the genie still lay in his bottle in the sea, he became bitter and swore that he would kill his liberator. A poor fisherman one day found the bottle and opened it. But because of the fisherman's unexpected cleverness, the genie was not able to carry out his intentions and wound up again in the bottle at the bottom of the sea.

This fanciful tale is a parable on frustration. Many people, as their lives progress and problems increase, become bitter like the genie.

It might be better if they could remember that this bitterness led the genie to miss his only chance for escape.

How Suite It Is

There have been recent reports that President Reagan's attention span is getting shorter and he keeps wandering away from the subject at hand.

One article written by Martin Tolchin in The New York Times reported Congressman Robert Michel, the House Republican leader, urged the President to support a federal health insurance program for catastrophic illness. Mr. Reagan responded to the request by telling a story about a welfare family living in a plush hotel in New York at enormous cost to the taxpayer. When it was pointed out to the President that health insurance is not a welfare program, Mr. Reagan is said to have repeated the story again.

Before anyone comes to any conclusions that the President has changed since the Republicans lost the Senate and the United States lost the contra money in Switzerland, let me say the story of a welfare family living in a plush hotel in New York has been bugging Mr. Reagan for six years.

White House sources say the President is obsessed with finding this family and showing them up for what they are — liberal chiselers feeding at the government trough.

The problem Mr. Reagan has in producing the family is that he heard the story about them secondhand. He can't remember who told it to him, and so he has been forced to instigate a search himself. It's taken up a great deal of his time.

They say the President will sit in his Oval Office late at night studying a map of Manhattan. Then he'll pick up the phone and speak to FBI Director William Webster.

"Bill, did you find them yet?"
"No, Mr. President. But we're thinking of organizing a sting operation and offering free rooms in the Ritz Carlton to anyone now on welfare. We think that way we could smoke them out."

"What about the Plaza, Bill?"
"We've got every room wired and we're giving lie detector tests to anyone who gets on the elevator."

"They have to be somewhere," the President protests. "A welfare family can't just disappear among eight million people in a city like New York."

Mr. Webster says, "The FBI SWAT team is raiding Mrs. Helmsley's Palace tomorrow."
"Be careful, Bill. A welfare family who lives in a deluxe hotel can be very dangerous."

The President hangs up and buzzes the Air Force command center. "Any photos of the welfare family who are living off the fat of the land?"

"No, sir. Today's satellite pictures show nothing but a string of muggings and a dozen city commissioners being paid off by contractors."

Don Regan comes in, "Mr. President do you want to check over this trillion-dollar budget?"

"Don, if you were a welfare cheat what fancy hotel would you hole up in in New York?"

"How about the Hilton?"
"That's a thought. Why don't we stay there the next time we're in the city. Then when I'm taking a nap Pat Buchanan can hold you up on his shoulders and you can peek over the transoms."

"I think you ought to read this latest Senate report which tells how badly you fouled up on the Iran business."

"What I'd like to do," says Mr. Reagan, "is drag the entire family on television and show the American people what kind of welfare bums are living in our best hotels these days."

"That's fine, sir. Now what do you want to do about the contras in Nicaragua?"
"Fly them up here and have them search the Waldorf Astoria room by room."

Driving Politicians Mad

WASHINGTON (AP) — The American economy is looking like those good-news bad-news jokes that were popular a few years ago and it's leaving politicians wondering who will be laughing a year and a half from now.

Consider the numbers issued by the government in recent weeks.

The civilian unemployment rate in December was the lowest since early 1980, a number sure to set Republicans smiling.

The news was even better on inflation. Prices went up only 1.1 percent last year, the smallest increase in 25 years.

And, of course, there's that crazy bull tearing up Wall Street and sending the Dow-Jones average to a new record over the 2,000 mark.

Those are the kind of numbers that keep incumbents in office and encourage voters to shrug off headlines about secret arms sales to Iran and money being slipped to the Contras.

That's the pocketbook theory of politics.

Then why aren't Republicans already making plans for the 1989 Inaugural celebration? With unemployment dropping and inflation at the vanishing point, what can break the GOP hold on the White House?

The answer lies in other numbers, the bad news that often seems to alternate with the good.

The nation's trade deficit for 1986 is expected to top $170 billion, a new record.

That deficit was blamed for the anemic state of the economy as measured by the gross national product for 1986. The Commerce Department reported last week that this measure of economic health rose only 2.5 percent last year, the weakest growth rate since the GNP declined during the 1982 recession.

Add to the trade deficit the persistent federal budget deficits. Shortly after the new year began, President Reagan sent Congress his proposed budget for the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1 and declared it would meet the $108 billion deficit reduction target.

But that prediction was based on economic assumptions which have a way of not meeting expectations.

Meeting the deficit target set by the Gramm-Rudman law was dependent on the administration's prediction that the GNP would grow by 3.2 percent this year. A year ago, the administration was forecasting GNP growth of 3.4 percent for 1986 — a figure that turned out to be 2.5 percent.

Forecasters regularly scratch their heads and seem astonished by trade figures.

"It's horrendous," said a Commerce Department official when confronted with a new monthly record for last November. Just when economists inside and outside government were predicting a turnaround on trade, the November deficit came to $19.2 billion.

"What is this, some kind of New Year's joke?" asked Lawrence Chimerine, president of Chase Econometrics, a private economic forecasting service. "It's such a giant number that it dashes the argument that we've turned the corner on trade."

There is a sense the numbers not only defy prediction but that they have a life of their own beyond the control of economists and politicians.

Even where some national numbers look good, conditions in specific regions — the Farm Belt and in oil producing states — are bad.

Both Senate Majority Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., and House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Tex., are talking about enacting "comprehensive trade and competitiveness legislation."

The Democrats tried to make trade an issue in 1984, but they couldn't dent Reagan's popularity.

But Reagan will be off the ballot in 1988 and if the trade numbers are off the charts, it could be a Democratic year. On the other hand, if the good economic news dominates and the long forecast trade turnaround occurs, the Republicans could have reason to smile.

China Walks Tightrope Of Domestic, Foreign Relations

Tough criticism of Western democracy, economics and society has dominated the official Chinese media during the last month in a propaganda barrage some Western scholars say is without precedent since the days of Chairman Mao Tse-tung.

Much of the anti-Western material, however, particularly articles focused on the United States, has been omitted systematically from Chinese publications prepared for foreign consumption. This seems to be part of an effort to reassure the outside world that the recent turmoil in China will not affect the country's market-oriented economic reforms or its policy of remaining open to the West.

Articles and broadcasts prepared for domestic use, on the other hand, convey a more troubling picture to Western interests. Combined with the abrupt removal of Hu Yaobang as general secretary earlier this month, and with the Communist Party's attacks on intellectuals who had advocated political liberalization, the rhetoric sweeping through the Chinese media concerns some analysts.

"Not since the Cultural Revolution era (of the mid-1960s to mid-1970s) has the press exhibited the kind of anti-Western and anti-intellectual tone that it is currently manifesting," said Michael Oksenberg, a political scientist at the University of Michigan who was President Jimmy Carter's chief adviser on Chinese affairs when the United States and China resumed full diplomatic relations.

Oksenberg said that it would be premature to assume that reforms instituted in China during the last eight years under the leadership of Deng Xiaoping have been "jeopardized." But he said the current situation in China is "baffling and raises a very legitimate question: Will the reforms of recent years be permitted to exist?"

The United States, which had been held up as the model of a free society by student protesters last month, has been the target of pointed criticism. One lengthy article in the Communist Party organ People's Daily attacked the United States in classic Marxist terms as a country controlled by a relatively small capitalist class with no concern for the "masses."

"Fundamentally speaking," the article said, "the people of the United States have no right to exercise the power to administer their country so as to serve the interests of the majority of the people." The article did not appear in the Overseas Edition of the paper received in the United States.

Articles in People's Daily and other official media have criticized

Western "bourgeois" economies for "excessive consumption," and for the "wasteful" practice of allowing "the stimulation of demand" to guide the economy rather than drafting a central state economic plan. Some have attacked the "false" notion that people in the West are "free." This is impossible, one People's Daily commentary said, because in the West the people don't own "the means of production."

A Peking domestic radio broadcast monitored by the U.S. government's Foreign Broadcast Information Service disputed the idea that "U.S. presidents are elected democratically." The broadcast said, "those who have no money cannot run for the presidency, and only millionaires or people supported by large financial groups can possibly be elected."

At the same time, recent articles have cast the Soviet Union in a relatively favorable light. A People's Daily feature story late last month gave a generally positive assessment of the economic reforms being attempted by Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev. The story was headlined, "Scoring Initial Results, Progressing With Difficulty — Changes Brought by Reform in the Soviet Union Over the Past Year."

Sino-Soviet relations are gradually improving, and some "conservatives" within China favor a development of China's society and economy along traditional Stalinist lines.

In the Chinese context, "leftists," who advocate strict adherence to the doctrine of Marxist-Leninist-Maoist Thought, now are generally known as "conservatives." "Rightists" tend to favor introduction of market forces in the economy and to believe that China should participate in some measure in the Western humanistic, political and intellectual tradition.

Such political labels had not been much in use in the past few years; when a relatively pluralistic intellectual climate flourished, but have been revived with a vengeance recently.

What is most striking about the current campaign is the unanimity of opinion in the media, which is devoting enormous space to attacking "rightists" who advocate intellectual and political freedom, said Merle Goldman, professor of history at Boston University and author of the study, "Chinese Intellectuals: Advise and Consent."

"There have been crackdowns on intellectuals before, but not since Mao's day has there been such uniformity in political line," she said. In a 1983 campaign to crack down on "spiritual pollution," for example, the prevailing "anti-rightist" line still permitted dissenting opinions.

Grooming Successor

PEKING — Deng Xiaoping remains firmly in control of China's destiny and will soon be grooming a new successor to his own position as paramount leader, knowledgeable sources say.

Premier Zhao Ziyang, who stepped up to the second-ranking position in the hierarchy after Communist Party chief Hu Yaobang's surprise dismissal last Friday, is not considered to be a permanent appointee. Thus, still more change is in store for China's top leadership over the long term, sources say.

More important, Deng's ambition of loosening doctrinaire Marxist control over the economy and government apparently will be put on hold while the Chinese Communist Party sorts out the sharp split between doctrinaire Marxists and the reform wing led by Hu Yaobang.

The earliest opportunity is probably a Party congress already scheduled for October.

One authoritative assessment is that because Hu alienated crucial sectors of the Party hierarchy, including the military, Deng had no choice but to dump his heir-apparent and to call on Zhao to take over as acting general secretary of the party.

That happened despite the fact that Zhao had no experience in the central party apparatus. No one else had been around long enough to command domestic respect, much less international recognition.

But Zhao's talent is administrative, not formulation of policy, and the latter is what party leaders are supposed to do. Also, he is already 76 years old.

So Deng, although 82, confronts the task of bringing along a new face before he can enjoy the retirement he has long sought.

For the moment, Hu Qili, a 57-year-old intellectual, is regarded as the leading candidate to assume the leadership when Deng relinquishes it.

Hu Qili is that rarity, a university graduate in the Party hierarchy. A former mayor of Tianjin, China's third-largest city, he became a member of the Party secretariat under Hu Yaobang and quickly rose to head its day-to-day operations while General Secretary Hu was out front pushing the reforms that finally got him into trouble with the Party old guard.

Like the older Hu Yaobang, Hu Qili has no military background. He could not hope to govern without a strong supporter at the head of the Party military commission — the role Deng played for Hu Yaobang as long as he could.

Deng will need time — at least several years, knowledgeable observers say — to bring along a new Party chief. The question deeply concerning Party members is whether there will be enough time considering Deng's age.

"Comrade Deng will be needed for another five years at least," one Chinese source said. "He will be very much needed."

Ice, Snow Slows State's Motorists To Crawl

By The Associated Press
Ice-covered highways across much of North Carolina forced businesses and schools to shut down, and apparently convinced many drivers to stay at home, Highway Patrol officials said.

"It was rough this morning, but I've seen it worse," Sgt. T.T. Jeffries of the state Highway Patrol said Monday. He said there appeared to be fewer accidents than in previous snowstorms because of the lower number of drivers.

"I've heard people say that the people in the South can't drive in weather like this," Jeffries said. "But I don't care if you're an Eskimo, you can't drive a vehicle on ice."

In Spring Lake, which got its first snow of the season Monday, Police Chief Don Latham reported only two accidents.

"This morning it seemed like the roads were so bad, and people knew they were bad and were being more careful," Latham said.

No accidents were reported in the nearby town of Hope Mills.

"The ones that were moving around did very good," said Police Chief John Hodges. "We usually have one or two a day, and didn't have any today."

Much of the ice had disappeared from the highways by Monday afternoon, and travelers advisories were lifted for all but 22 counties along the coast. But forecasters said overnight temperatures in the teens and lower 20s would make driving hazardous until at least Thursday.

"The main roads have been cleared off fairly well," said Sgt. B.W. Oakes, traffic safety coordinator with the Highway Patrol. "But most of them have icy patches and are still treacherous."

The storm began Sunday with snow in the mountains, rain in the east and freezing rain and sleet in between. By Monday morning, the freezing rain turned to snow over most of the state.

The heaviest reported accumulation was 9 inches in Highlands in Macon County, and accumulations ranged from 2 inches to 8 inches through most of the mountains and foothills.

Accumulations in the Sandhills and Piedmont generally were about an inch.

The National Weather Service said 1 to 2 inches of snow had been reported in the southeast coastal area early today and there was a 50 percent chance of snow for the rest of the coast. The mountains could receive another 1 to 3 inches Wednesday as a western storm blows into the state.

Forecaster Larry Gabric said the winter weather could lighten some by the end of the week.

"We're expecting a warming trend to continue in the latter part of the week, with high temperatures in the 40s on Thursday and perhaps in the 50s on Friday," Gabric said.

The warming trend should bring some relief to transportation workers, law enforcement officers, utility repair crews and emergency workers who have been swamped since a winter storm dumped up to 20 inches of snow in the state Thursday.

State Department of Transportation spokesman William D. Jones said the state's biggest problem was trying to get enough equipment to the areas with the most snow.

Snow-removing equipment was being transferred Monday from Greenville, Wilmington, Fayetteville, Aberdeen and Charlotte to the hardest-hit areas — Winston-Salem, North Wilkesboro and Asheville, he said.

Meanwhile, some minor flooding was reported along several eastern rivers.

The Tar River Monday was at 26 2 feet, or about 7 feet above flood stage, the weather service said. In Rocky Mount, the river had crested at 16.4 feet, about 1 1/2 feet above flood stage, but had fallen to 14.3 feet Monday.

The Lumber River was holding steady at 13.1 feet or about 2 feet above flood stage, as was the Cape Fear River except at Elizabethtown and the William O. Huske Lock and Dam in Bladen County, where the river had risen to 7 feet above flood stage.

The Neuse River was 6 feet above flood stage near Goldsboro and 2 feet above flood stage at Kinston, the weather service said. The Roanoke River also was about 1 foot above flood stage at Williamston.

IN THE STATE

Deaths Increase

RALEIGH (AP) — Highway Patrol officials say the number of traffic deaths in North Carolina were at their highest level in 14 years in 1986, and the number of driving-while-impaired arrests were up 18 percent over 1985.

Maj. W.D. Teem of the patrol estimated that 50 percent or more of the 1,626 traffic deaths last year were alcohol related. The number of deaths was up 9.7 percent over the 1,482 deaths in 1985 and higher than any year since 1972.

At the same time, the patrol made 44,318 arrests for driving while impaired last year, compared to 37,517 arrests in 1985.

Water Tests

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. Pesticide Board wants the state to create a program to monitor whether underground water supplies are being tainted by pesticides and other pollutants.

Morris McGough of Buncombe County, the board's chairman, said the General Assembly should fund such a program, which he said would cost at least $1 million.

The board's move, approved 6-0, drew limited praise from some environmentalists, who accused the board of moving too slowly on the monitoring program.

Fire Deaths

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Two children were killed when a fire gutted their father's home Sunday morning, officials said.

The bodies of Deon Lemont Knight, 11, and James Ray Knight, 3, were found in the den area of the home, said Roy Spell, assistant fire chief. The father, Donald Ray Knight, escaped from the house by climbing through a window, officials said.

Spell said the children appeared to have been overcome by smoke. Firefighters answered a call to Knight's home and found the roof collapsed on two rooms of the three-bedroom home.

Wilson Fire Chief Bruce Rose said the fire was caused by a malfunctioning gas heater in the den.

Grandy Visits

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Rep. Fred Grandy, R-Iowa, who once played the character "Gopher" on the television show "The Love Boat", attended two Hickory fund-raising events Saturday to help 10th District Rep. Cass Ballenger, retire a $103,000 campaign debt.

Grandy played the television character from 1976 until December 1985, and said he was at ease with his move from television star to congressman. "That's what you have to learn to do as an actor and a candidate," he said. "not take things too seriously."

Grandy spoke to about 125 people at a $125-a-person reception at Lake Hickory Country Club.

WHITE FIGHT — Rodney Harrell, 14, and Chris Seymour, 14, both of Camden, take a beating as they engage in a snowball fight Monday. Northeastern North Carolina received more than 2 inches of snow, the first accumulation for that area this year. Forecasters said some snow was likely along the coast today. (AP Laser-photo)

Other States Cool To N.C. Proposal To Rank Host Areas For Waste Sites

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Members of the Southeast Compact Commission have given a cool reception to a proposal by North Carolina that states in the regional compact agree now on the order for hosting a low-level radioactive waste facility.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, one of North Carolina's two representatives on the commission, said some legislators believed ranking the states now — and forcing those states to pick sites for the future facilities — is one way to guarantee those states will not back out of the compact when their turn comes.

"The idea was, let's put the shoes on the same foot that North Carolina's wearing," Miller said. Early identification would force the hand of any state secretly planning to quit the compact, he said.

But commissioners of other states, who have voted that North Carolina should host the next regional waste dump when the current facility at Barnwell, S.C., closes in 1992, questioned whether the other states should be ranked now.

The idea drew a cool response from other members of the sanctions panel.

Allen L. Schubert, a Florida commissioner and manager of that state's Office of Radiation Control, said there might be "technical barriers" to designating states to host sites 40 or 60 years down the road.

"You really can't use the same criteria (used to select North Carolina) for something so far in the future," Schubert said in an interview.

William F. Newberry, a South Carolina commissioner and policy analyst for the Governor's Division of Energy Policy, said picking all the other sites in the next three or four years would be "very difficult."

While none of the states likely will experience major hydrological or geological change during the life of the compact, there might be technological advances or changes in population or volume of waste generated, Newberry said.

"That raises in my mind a question about the equity of picking the sites now," he said.

Miller, however, said the criteria that was used to select North Carolina should be good enough to choose the others.

Miller said his colleagues in the General Assembly might make such a move a prerequisite for accepting the commission's designation of North Carolina as the next host state.

"The people I've talked to ... want some assurance — and they want it in a balled-up fist — that if we're going to do this, we want the other states to do it too," Miller said.

Once the lineup is set, each state could designate its precise site, Miller said. The commission could purchase the land, making it harder for any state to withdraw from the compact before taking its turn.

"It would be a showing of good faith by the other states," Miller said.

Miller pushed the idea during meetings of two of the commission's standing committees — one dealing

Rose Challenges Need For Lobbyist In Tobacco Fight

RALEIGH (AP) — Rep. Charlie Rose says a move by the Flue-Cured Tobacco Cooperative Stabilization Corp. to hire a consulting firm to fight anti-tobacco legislation will help cigarette companies more than farmers.

"Has (cooperative general manager Fred Bond) signed up the farmers' pocketbooks ... to do the work of the cigarette companies?" Rose asked Monday. "I think Stabilization is beginning to see itself more of an extension of the cigarette companies, and it's a tragedy. They better look out for those farmers."

Some board members of the farmer-run cooperative are questioning the board's decision to pay a Washington consulting firm more than $100,000 to fight anti-tobacco legislation in Congress this year.

The board voted unanimously in the fall to hire Wallace and Edwards, a Washington-based agriculture consulting firm, to fight a move to raise the excise tax on cigarettes in the 1986 session of Congress.

But when the contract came up for renewal in 1987, some board members wondered whether it was worth the money to continue to use the firm when there are farm groups that lobby for tobacco interests.

"The co-op is to operate the co-op," board member W. Graham Smith told the News and Observer of Raleigh. "I don't see where it's their job to try to run the whole tobacco program. I've got a wait-and-see attitude. They're hired, and I hope they'll be worth it."

Smith, a Robeson County tobacco farmer who represents Border Belt growers, said Monday he did not know the exact amount of the contract with consulting firm for 1987. But he said it was more than $100,000.

The vote to renew the contract was not unanimous, he said. He declined to say how he voted.

"My point is I want to make sure we're getting our money's worth," Smith said. "I'm fairly convinced they're a good firm, but that's a right good little money to spend. We farmers right now are in a bind; we need to make everything count."

Bond, the cooperative's general manager, would not say how much the consulting firm was hired for.

Justice Officials Investigate Shooting

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — U.S. Justice Department officials say they will discuss the shooting of a Lumbee Indian by a Robeson County sheriff's deputy with county officials and members of the victim's family.

Bob Ensley, who works with the community relations branch in Atlanta, said he would visit Lumberton today after being presented with "concerns by a number of community people" about the Nov. 1 death of Jimmy Earl Cummings, a suspected drug dealer who was shot by Deputy Kevin Stone, the son of Sheriff Hubert Stone.

Ensley said the length of his stay would depend on developments in a series of racial demonstrations in Cummings, Ga. — another situation he is attempting to conciliate.

Aquino Says Attempted Military Coup Foiled

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino said the military today crushed a coup attempt by mutinous soldiers and warned she would use force to oust as many as 300 rebels holed up in a broadcast complex.

The attempts to take over military bases and media centers in the Manila area was the most serious effort by disgruntled soldiers to grab power since Mrs. Aquino became president in February.

Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said the mutineers were supporters of deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos out to destabilize the country before Monday's national plebiscite on Mrs. Aquino's proposed constitution.

The military said it put down attempted pre-dawn takeovers of two military bases and quashed planned revolts at three camps in the Manila area. One mutineer was killed and 16 were injured at Villamor air base in a sporadic four-hour gunbattle. As many as 180 rebels were arrested.

After sundown, about 300 Marcos supporters clashed with hundreds of government troops on the street in front of the broadcast complex, throwing stones and setting bonfires.

Earlier in the day, riot police used water hoses and tear gas to clear crowds that included people who chanted "We want Marcos" and threw bags of food over the wall.

The whereabouts of Marcos was unknown. He has lived in exile in Hawaii since being deposed.

The leader of the group holding the broadcast complex denied any links to Marcos and said his men were "nationalists" out to save the country from communism.

"We are fighting communism and we feel that the influence of communism has grown very fast" since Mrs. Aquino came to power, said the rebel leader, air force Col. Oscar Canlas. The Aquino government has negotiated a cease-fire with Communist rebels and held peace talks to end the 18-year-old insurgency.

Canlas spoke to reporters who climbed over a 7-foot-high wall into the suburban Quezon complex that houses television Channel 7 and radio station DZBB.

Canlas said he was negotiating by radio with Ramos. He said he anticipated no bloodshed but added, "If they come at us with guns and we have guns, what would you do?" He refused to discuss specific demands or his next move.

Ramos appealed to "our good friend Colonel Canlas" to surrender and promised "honorable treatment." Deputy Chief of Staff Maj. Gen. Eduardo Ermita met with the rebels in the besieged complex for about three hours.

In a nationwide radio and television address this afternoon, Mrs. Aquino said, "The situation is well in hand."

Mrs. Aquino ordered Ramos to apply "the full force of the law" against the rebels. "Their situation is hopeless," she said.

"There may have to be intensive military operations around Channel 7," she said, urging people to leave the area "or you will be hurt."

Electric power to the stations was cut off so they could not broadcast.

Military sources said as many as 300 mutinous soldiers took over the complex at about 3 a.m. (2 p.m. Monday EST). But reporters saw only about 200 rebels in full combat dress armed with automatic rifles. At one point today, most of the mutineers were lying around listlessly. Some were sleeping.

The mutineers, who wore blue head bands and red scarves emblazoned with the word "Guardians," placed machine guns on the roof. The Guardians is a military social fraternity.

The rebels released 37 station employees late today. One of them, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said no more employees were inside.

Cardinal Jaime L. Sin, the archbishop of Manila, appealed to the public to stay off the streets and to go to churches for prayer.

The government's Philippines News Agency said about 500 mutinous troops tried to infiltrate the Manila area late Monday and early today from garrisons in central and northern Luzon island. Officials said members of all branches of the military were involved.

Mrs. Aquino said most mutineers were captured and warned she would not show the leniency she displayed against those in an abortive coup at the Manila Hotel last July and an alleged plot in November by officers linked to former Defense Minister Juan Ponce Enrile. Enrile, who was fired, denied any knowledge of a coup plot.

"I have ordered the chief of staff to proceed against the officers responsible for this act of rebellion in accordance with the manual of court martial," Mrs. Aquino said today. "There is a time for reconciliation and a time for justice and retribution. That time has come."

Mrs. Aquino said that in addition to Villamor, the mutineers tried to take over Camp Aguinaldo, headquarters of the armed forces; Camp Crame, headquarters of the national police; Sangley Point, a military base 10 miles south of Manila; and Fort Bonafacio in the suburb of Makati.

Government radio said the situation was normal in other major cities.

Ramos said 52 mutineers surrendered after the gunbattle at Villamor next to Manila airport. At Sangley Point, an undetermined number of rebels took two officers hostage but released them unharmed and surrendered, he said.

Rebels stormed those two sites to take control of helicopters and T-28 bombers, Ramos said.

Terrorists' Threats Hang Over Summit By Moslems

KUWAIT (AP) — Thirty leaders of Moslem nations heard a call for peace between Iran and Iraq and an end to Soviet intervention in Afghanistan as they began a three-day summit under tight security.

"God beckons us to mediate and reconcile" Iraq and Iran, Kuwaiti ruler Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah told the Organization of Islamic Conference in an opening speech Monday.

The 6 1/2-year-old war between Iran and Iraq, both Moslem countries, was expected to be the meeting's main topic.

But Iran is boycotting the session, saying Kuwait supports Iraq, and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, who had planned to attend, instead sent Vice President Izzat Ibrahim.

Hussein was believed to have remained in Baghdad because Iranian forces are threatening Basra, Iraq's southern provincial capital near the border, in an offensive that began Jan. 9.

Pro-Iranians terrorists have threatened to disrupt the conference and Lebanon's government radio reported an anonymous telephone caller said guerrillas would fire on any planes in Kuwaiti air space after noon Monday. The caller said he represented a group called the Revolutionary Organization-Forces of the Prophet Mohammed.

Aircraft carrying King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, King Hussein of Jordan and President Hafez Assad of Syria landed after the deadline without incident.

They were the last leaders to arrive for the fifth summit of the 46-member organization, which was founded 17 years ago with the goals of unity and development among the world's 850 million Moslems.

All members except Iran and Afghanistan, whose membership has been suspended since Soviet troops entered in 1979, were represented at the conference. Thirty heads of state attended and the remaining members sent lower-ranking officials.

Iran's fundamentalist Shiite Moslem government led by Ayaollah Ruhollah Khomeini has said it will not be bound by any of the conference's decisions.

Most Arab states back Arab Iraq in the war against Persian Iran.

Sheik Jaber on Monday called for "continued intensive efforts to arrest this bloodshed." An estimated 1 million people have been killed or wounded since the war began in September 1980.

The Kuwaiti ruler also deplored Soviet intervention in predominantly Moslem Afghanistan, where an estimated 115,000 Soviet troops are helping the Marxist government battle Moslem rebels.

He urged the creation of a Palestinian homeland and an end to Israeli rule in Jerusalem, which is holy to Moslems, Jews and Christians.

The only Christian leader attending is President Amin Gemayel of Lebanon, a Maronite Catholic whose country is torn by an 11-year-old civil war. Lebanon has a slight Moslem majority but Christians traditionally have held the top government and military posts.

The kings, presidents, princes and prime ministers were meeting in a walled complex ringed by armored cars, watchtowers and heavily armed soldiers on Kuwait city's southern outskirts.

A bomb exploded in downtown Kuwait city Saturday night, and three fires were set at oil installations Jan. 20.

Several terrorist attacks have occurred in the emirate since 1983, including bombings of the U.S. and French embassies in December 1983 and an attempt to assassinate Sheikh Jaber. The attacks were blamed on pro-Iranian extremists.

Kidnappers holding at least two American hostages in Lebanon have demanded the release of 17 people imprisoned for the embassy bombings as ransom for their captives.

Gorbachev Calls For More Input By Citizens In Party

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Kremlin leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev today called for more citizen involvement in Communist Party and parliamentary elections and repeated harsh criticism of Soviet society under the late President Leonid I. Brezhnev.

In a speech to the Communist Party Central Committee, Gorbachev did not mention Brezhnev by name, but sharply attacked economic stagnation, corruption and moral decline in the 1970s and early 1980s.

Gorbachev also made oblique references to programs and policies of late Premier Nikita S. Khrushchev in his sweeping denunciation of past Communist Party and government activity.

The official Tass news agency carried a full text of Gorbachev's speech to the twice-yearly gathering of the Central Committee's 300-plus members.

Gorbachev said a national party conference should be held next year. Such a conference is held between party congresses, which take place every five years. The last national party conference was in 1941.

In his speech, Gorbachev also urged the Central Committee to allow the name of more than one candidate on ballots for party positions.

Gorbachev, Communist Party general secretary since March 1985, said the economy is turning around after years of decline, but complained improvement is not occurring fast enough.

"There are positive changes. But the weight of problems that have accumulated in this important sphere is too great and we are still too timid in tackling them," he said.

"There are quite a few people who are slow in throwing off the burden of the past, who are adopting a wait-and-see attitude and openly putting a spoke in the wheel, impeding the extensive development of the people's political, public and labor activity," Gorbachev said.

He criticized the loss of creativity in science and theory under the weight of "authoritarian evaluations and opinions that became unquestionable truths," an apparent reference to the policies of Josef Stalin.

He denounced the appearance of "volunteerism" and "spurious notions of Communism" — a standard reference to Khrushchev — then went on to a lengthy criticism of the "ossified" concepts of industry and social development in the Brezhnev years.

"There emerged violations of the most important principle of socialism, distribution according to work," Gorbachev said.

"Real care for people, for the conditions of their life and work and for social well-being were often replaced with political flirtation — the mass distribution of awards, titles and prizes," he said.

Much of the problem is the fault of party leaders, Gorbachev said, calling for changes to more effectively involve Soviet citizens in decision-making.

He said party members should be allowed to nominate as many candidates as they wish for top leadership jobs in the party. And he urged adoption of secret ballots instead of the current practice of voting by a show of hands.

There was no immediate word of any changes in the party leadership.

Among personnel changes expected at the session are the ouster of Dinmukhamed Kunaev from the ruling 12-man Politburo.

Kunaev, 75, was removed as party leader from the Central Asian republic of Kazakhstan on Dec. 16, reportedly because of involvement in corruption, inefficiency and cronyism that plagues the republic.

Ethnic rioting broke out the day after the republic party's decision to replace Kunaev with a Russian, Gennady Kolbin. The state-run media say the situation in Kazakhstan has returned to normal.

Central Committee member Georgy Arbatov told reporters earlier this month that Kunaev would be retired during the committee's next plenary meeting.

NATO Members Expected To Share Arms Research

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — NATO hopes next month to take a step toward resolving a longstanding problem in the military alliance — coordinating arms manufacture so that, in effect, all its guns will shoot the same bullets.

Lord Carrington of Britain, NATO's secretary general, said in October: "We cannot afford ... a system which has resulted in four main battle tanks being lined up to fight the same battle in the same place on the same day and not even being able to use the same ammunition."

That particular problem won't be resolved in February but to Carrington, the money the 16 members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization spend on making incompatible arms systems is a scandal. He has support of others in that view, including David Abshire, until recently the U.S. envoy to NATO, who called it a "shameful waste of resources."

At a meeting in February, 13 of the 16 NATO member nations are expected to sign an accord to share in the research and development of seven major arms systems.

These include airborne radar, a common 155-mm, heat-seeking battlefield shell, a NATO-wide "friend-or-foe" identification system for aircraft, and "smart" bombs and missiles that home in on targets.

The matter of compatible tank ammunition awaits future resolution.

NATO's four main battle tanks are the Leopard from West Germany, the M-1 Abrams from the United States, the Challenger from Britain and the AMX-40 from France.

Dimming hopes for a resolution of the tank problem and other joint arms-making is protectionist pressure from national defense contractors.

"The main difficulty ... continues to be the general reluctance of nations to relinquish a small amount of national sovereignty," Deputy Defense Minister Eduardo Serra Rexach of Spain wrote in a recent NATO Review, an alliance periodical.

In some areas standardization has prevailed. An example came in mid-December when Britain decided to buy U.S. AWACS (airborne warning and control system) planes, thus staying in step with NATO, which has 18 of the aircraft.

But the British decision came only after a wrenching debate over the merits of the home-developed Nimrod system, whose backers complained bitterly that by buying AWACS the British government had harmed domestic industry and technological growth.

Politics also get in the way. From 1978 through 1982, the decision to deploy U.S. nuclear cruise and Pershing-2 missiles in Western Europe, and the severe political fallout it yielded, dominated all allied consultations.

UNC Expands Call-In Service For Parents

CHAPEL HILL-The hardest job in the world may be raising a child. On tough days, parents often throw up their hands and ask, "Why is my kid acting like this?"

Now they can get an answer from child development experts at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill by calling 1-800-942-KIDS.

The toll-free, statewide hotline kicked off Monday. Hours are 8-9 a.m. on Mondays and 1-2 p.m. Mondays through Wednesdays. The number is believed to be the first of its kind in the nation.

"We started the hotline because parents out there have questions, and many are not finding any answers," said Debbie Brandon, a clinical nursing specialist who runs the hotline.

"We as parents are less knowledgeable at solving problems when our children are younger. Many young mothers today, especially professional women, are reluctant to ask family members about these things. They are afraid to show that they don't know how to handle the situation. They also want the advice of an expert."

Brandon has been a staff member of the Clinical Center for the Study of Development and Learning, part of UNC's Child Development Institute, since 1982 and has worked with high-risk infants and children with developmental disorders for a decade. She has a master's degree in nursing from UNC with a specialty in developmental disabilities and child development.

The call-in service has been tested in the Chapel Hill area since November 1985. Brandon said one reason for switching to a toll-free number was because calls were coming in from parents as far west as Asheville, some 200 miles away from Chapel Hill. Parents using the Chapel Hill telephone exchange should continue to dial only the number's last seven digits.

When a parent calls, Brandon will listen for the first few minutes and try to find out the problem. She will provide information, give advice and, if necessary, consult with children's growth and development experts at UNC, ranging from physicians to psychologists.

Parents can expect Brandon to use a behavioral approach in solving problems.

"I tell parents to reinforce behavior that they want from their child and ignore behavior that they want to get rid of. I always ask parents what they think of the information that I've given them. I also ask if they'll be able to try the ideas that I've suggested."

Brandon said she would try to check with parents within six weeks to eight weeks after they called. If the problem hasn't been solved, she will try to find out what went wrong.

"Sometimes parents can have a hard time sticking to the solution agreed on or have trouble being consistent. Sometimes, however, the child will come up with a new twist, and parents aren't sure what to do next."

If parents need more help, Brandon will refer them to professionals in their area. She said she would give parents two or three names, so they can make their own choice. She estimated that 20 percent of callers would be referred.

Over the last year questions asked by Chapel Hill-area parents have depended on the child's age. With children under 2, parents often ask what to do when their child won't sleep through the night, refuses to be weaned or won't eat. Two and 3-year-olds leave their parents wondering about toilet training.

"The most common complaint about older preschoolers is non-compliant behavior," she said. "They won't listen at home, they fight with their siblings or they're aggressive at preschool." When children start public school, parents worry about learning problems or youngsters who don't like school.

Some parents have called when their children were doing exceptionally well, she said. The mother of a 15-month-old wanted to know if it was normal for the child to talk in sentences.

Brandon said she believed such call-in services may be common in the future. She noted that the American Academy of Pediatricians has predicted the questions about children's behavior would consume more of a pediatrician's time as infectious diseases are brought under control.

"Most parents, however, get the sense that all doctors are very busy, and hold their calls for medical emergencies. Also, many don't want to pay for an office visit just to ask questions about their child's behavior."

If the new UNC hotline number receives more calls than Brandon can handle in four hours each week, she said the service would be expanded.

Fruit Basket Was Wasted

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: During the holidays someone left a beautiful big basket of fruit on my doorstep. I thought it a wonderful gesture, but after careful examination, I found there was not a card or any sort of identification on it anywhere.

Now, I'm not usually the fraidy-cat sort of person, but after thinking about it, and having checked with friends and co-workers (all to no avail), I became rather concerned. Who would leave such a lovely basket with no card? Any other time I would have no qualms about eating it, but because of the Tylenol deaths and other such scares, there is no way I would eat it or give it to anyone else. It's a shame. Maybe I am being overly cautious, but then again, what if I'm not?

To the person, or persons, who left it, please don't ever do anything like that again. If there was nothing wrong with it, a lovely basket of fruit went to waste. And if there was something in it, well, God help you.

By the way, there were three people home the day it was put on the doorstep. If anyone knocked or rang our bell, nobody heard it. Only a few people at work even know where I live, and I checked with the neighbors to see if it could have been delivered to us by accident, and maybe their relatives were asking if they'd received it. Nothing. It seems so strange that no one knows where it came from, who delivered it, and no one saw anyone leave it on the step.

Tell me, Abby, am I being foolish? — JUDITH K., ST. LOUIS

DEAR JUDITH: Foolish? Certainly not. I wouldn't eat it either. The most plausible explanation: The giver probably delegated the job of delivering it to someone who was not very responsible — and the card that should have been delivered with the basket was "lost."

After this hits print, let me know if the giver comes forward.

DEAR ABBY: This is not tragic or world-shaking, but I would like your opinion and possibly the opinion of your readers.

I just discovered that my college-age daughter does not wear underwear (panties). I was shocked, and told her I thought it was indecent. She replied, "I don't want party lines."

She is a hard-working student, works part-time in a department store and does not drink, smoke or use drugs. I am very proud of her, but this really bothers me. Am I hopelessly old-fashioned? Or is this a common practice among young women today? — SHOCKED

DEAR SHOCKED: Old-fashioned? Not really. But in your daughter's case the absence of panties has more to do with vanity than "decency."

DEAR ABBY: You advised "Miffed in D.C." that her weight was her business.

What about people who live with an obese spouse? As the wife of a very obese man, I am subjected to constant "jokes" and even laughter in regard to our habits, my cooking and even our sex lives.

So, please do me a favor, Abby, and let me (and others in my unhappy situation) know if there is a support group for family members of an obese person that my children and I can join so we can at least learn to accept the fact that "Dad" might not be with us for very long. — SLIM AND HURTING

DEAR SLIM: I have never heard of such a group, but if there is one, I am sure someone will let me know. And if there isn't one, there should be. Readers?

Museum To Mark Birthday

This has to be a landmark event, but I don't know why.

Frederick's of Hollywood will observe its 40th birthday with a bra museum. Under one roof will be such historical displays as the plunge and peekaboo bras and everyone's favorite, a black lace bra with matching garter belt.

Something tells me it will only be a matter of time before a bus will unload a group of fourth graders on a field trip to its doors. I can hardly wait for a report at the dinner tables of America on the "Missiles and Snow Cones" section.

I have always believed as lingerie goes... so goes the nation. Throughout the years our undergarments have reflected our lifestyles, our culture, our morality.

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

I think most of us were raised with the basic ethic underwear philosophy, "Change daily. Don't fiddle with it once it's on. Wear new on vacations, the first day of school, your wedding day, and if you're in an accident... or something unspeakable will happen to you."

For years, "bra" was pronounced with a whisper... especially those with training wheels on them. Even in commercials, live models were never used. Bras were displayed only on plastic forms that never slouched or had moles. In fact, pitchwomen used to have a pointer that touched upon all the advantages, like the one teachers used when diagramming a sentence.

I can't remember the exact year they started to trash underwear. It seems like one minute, we were running around in pajamas with feet in them and the next we were wearing briefs around our hips that had a hand imprinted in lace over the hipbone.

On soaps, lingerie replaced house dresses. On prime time it was a uniform. Lingerie became the workhorse (so to speak) of the fashion industry. I am on a mailing list for a catalogue of lingerie that leaves nothing to the imagination. Mailmen enter a lottery to see who gets to deliver my route. There is page after page of pouty models staring me right in the eye wearing little Band-Aids of satin and lace and daring me to pass out. (I have dressed turkeys in more than they have on.)

It takes all the control I have not to ask, "Who would ever see them in those outfits?"

Recently, the Futuristic Society predicted that in another 10 years we will return to a Victorian society where women are paragons of purity, modesty and decorum. It will be a time when only wenches will have cleavages and you will know the Belle Watlings by what time of day they put on their negligees.

I don't know what will happen to the Bra Museum. Will it have a place alongside the Metropolitan in New York or the Space Museum in Washington? Or will it struggle between peaks and valleys of social acceptance? I didn't say that, did I?

PSYCHOLOGICAL FACTORS

DENVER (AP) — The importance of psychological factors in successfully coping with chronic physical illness can be very great, a study at the National Jewish Center for Immunology and Respiratory Medicine shows.

In the study, the records of more than 40 children and adolescents with severe cases of asthma were examined. As compared with the children who survived the disease, those children who died from asthma, after discharge from the facility, were seen to have been also suffering from deep-seated psychological problems.

Jaycees

the Boys Club of Pitt County in 1983 and became involved in promoting club programs. Garner chaired the first annual Boys Club Dinner-Auction, raising $17,000 the first year. The event raised $37,000 in its third year.

Garner served as president of the Boy's Club board of directors in 1985 and 1986, and the club's membership has increased to over 700 young boys. Garner was a member of the United Way allocation committee in 1983, and chaired the commercial division in 1985.

Garner and his wife, Christie, have a son, Brad, 4, and two daughters, Amie, 2, and Ashley, 6 months.

Trull was cited for his contributions to the community and his business accomplishments.

"He is a great supporter of the Jaycees by allowing us the use of his warehouse and equipment for many Jaycee functions," Jeff Allen, 1985 Jaycee president and 1979 DSA recipient, said of Trull while presenting the Boss of the Year award.

Suspect's Brother Arrested

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Security sources today confirmed a report that a brother of the jailed Lebanese man accused of taking part in the 1985 TWA hijacking was arrested in Frankfurt.

The Bild newspaper reported the arrest of Abbas Hamadi, a brother of Mohammed Ali Hamadi. Security sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, confirmed the report but refused to provide further details.

Two West Germans have been kidnapped in Beirut since Mohammed Ali Hamadi was arrested in Frankfurt on Jan. 13.

A West German official, speaking on condition of anonymity, has told The Associated Press that authorities suspect the kidnappings were engineered by a brother of Hamadi who was a member of the militant Shiite Moslem group Hezbollah.

Published reports have identified that brother as Abdul Hadi Hamadi. Bild said Abbas Hamadi was arrested at the Frankfurt airport and is now being held in the same Frankfurt prison as his brother.

The paper said Abbas Hamadi, an unemployed welder, has been a citizen of West Germany since 1984. Bild said he had lived in West Germany for eight years and had married a West German in 1980.

and the Emergency Food and Shelter program. Garrison said a $10,250 grant from the United Way has been awarded for assistance in emergency programs, but the money has not been received. He said that he will go before the County Commissioners and ask that the funds be put into the DSS budget as soon as the check is received.

Garrison said donations from the Salvation Army and church and civic groups have assisted the department with the emergency funds.

"This winter concerns me more than any other before because I am just not sure we are going to have the resources to meet the needs for the entire winter," Garrison said.

The agency will begin work on its 1987-88 fiscal year budget, Garrison said. A tentative budget will be presented to the board by March.

In Washington, President Reagan's administration condemned the kidnappings as a declaration of war against civilization.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes also told Americans still living in Lebanon to leave and warned, "There's a limit to what our government can do."

Fewer than five American men are believed still living in Beirut's Moslem sector apart from those in captivity. But about 50 American women — many married to Lebanese men — are living in west Beirut despite repeated appeals from the U.S. administration to leave.

Classes remained suspended at Beirut University College today to protest Saturday's abductions of Alann Steen, 47, of Arcata, Calif., a journalism instructor; Jesse Turner, 39, of Boise, Idaho, a visiting professor of mathematics and computer sciences; Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City, a lecturer in accounting; and Mithileshwar Singh, 60, an Indian who carries a U.S. green card, a visiting professor of finance.

Their wives published a front-page advertisement Monday in Beirut's leading newspapers An-Nahar and As-Safir, appealing to the captors "in the name of God and humanity to return our husbands to their families and students."

"They had decided to stay in Lebanon despite the security risks and the advice of their relatives and friends in order to pursue their responsibilities towards their students and their institution," the ad said. "They have never been involved in politics."

The ad said Polhill and Singh have diabetes.

Jury Award $76,700 Supervisor Fired

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A jury awarded $76,700 in a management lawsuit Monday to a former City Healthstead Apartment Department supervisor who Monday for failing to take proper safety measures following a June 1985 apartment fire at the south Mecklenburg area.

The six-member Charlotte jury deliberated Monday, before awarding $10,000 to the former Police Officer Alason $75,000 in former Charlotte apartment manager's attorney damages and $1,000 in rape in her apartment in the same building from City Manager 1985, six weeks after the June 1985 fire.

In both cases, police department supervisor also was awarded $100 the rape entered through a window in damage from each of the doors with no sign of forced entry. The two victims testified the doors had been locked.

Attorneys for the supervisor, August contended the fire was caused by Home Realty and Management Inc., the company that owned the Healthstead, was a consultant for the company. The company fired the resident after the fire. The woman's attorney said.

It also failed to change the complex's master key system. Employees held at least two master keys when the rape occurred, according to testimony. Those keys could open all 534 units.

James Madison Rallies To Defeat Bucs, 78-70

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

HARRISONBURG — John Newman led a balanced scoring attack as James Madison University rallied from 10 points down to take a 78-70 Colonial Athletic Association Basketball win over East Carolina Monday night.

The loss was the fourth in a row for the Pirates, their longest losing streak of the year, dropping them to 9-9. They are now 2-5, halfway through the CAA season.

Madison improved its record to 14-4 overall and to 4-3 in the CAA.

ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said he was not unhappy with the way his team played. "They did everything that we asked of them. They did the things that were necessary to win," he said.

"But somehow it's ironic that we can play a zone all the second half and they can play an aggressive man to man and they hold a free throw advantage like they did."

The Dukes, who made only five of 14 free throws in the first half, completed 17-21 in the second half for a 22 of 35 total. ECU, in contrast, made all 12 of its opportunities but shot only three in the second half after Madison switched from a zone to a man to man.

"These guys (officials) are just not consistent. They called us rightly for belling up on them inside in the first half. But in the second half, they belied up on us the whole time and they never called the foul," Harrison said. "It hurt our inside game and frustrated us. I just don't understand why they call something one time and not the next."

Harrison said he wasn't taking anything away from the Madison effort. "They played well in the second half. The crowd got into the game too and that helped to rattle us," he said. "But we still got the ball inside where we needed to get it. But we didn't get the whistles."

It was the second straight CAA game in which the Pirates were beaten at the foul line, outshooting their foe from the floor. George Mason, a 79-74 winner over the Pirates Saturday, was 29-30 from the line as compared to 12 of 20 by ECU.

Madison coach John Thurston, displeased with his team's first half play, issued a challenge to them in the second half. "We had not played well in the first half," he said. "It was halves like that make us 14-4 instead of 12-2 right now."

"We challenged them not to get beat one on one or to give up a defensive rebound. We told them if they did they would come out. I can only remember one time when we got beat in the second half."

ECU did hold a rebounding edge in the game, 34-29. Madison had a 16-14 edge in the second half.

Madison also shot 66.3 percent in the half after a 41.4 mark in the first. ECU was held to only 38.7 percent shooting in the second half.

The Pirates got out to as much as a 12 point lead in the first half at 24-12. Madison tied the game twice early at 2-2 and 7-7 before Leon Bass, Blue Edwards and Marchell Henry keyed a 13-3 string that included nine in a row.

Madison however reeled off seven straight to close within five at 24-19 before the Pirates pulled away again by nine.

But ECU then went 5:39 without a basket and 4:38 without a point allowing Madison to come back from a 30-27 deficit. Edwards scored five straight for a 37-28 lead and the Pirates led by 10, 41-31 at the half.

Madison got the first two baskets of the second half before Henry hit for three to make it 44-35 lead.

But Madison came back with five straight points to close within 44-40. After two baskets by ECU, Ben Gordon hit a three pointer for the Dukes. Henry countered for ECU but Eric Brent answered with another three pointer.

Claude Ferdinand and Kennard Winchester each made two free throws to make it 51-50 and Newman canned a jumper with 13:03 left to give Madison its first lead, 52-51.

Henry gave the lead back to the Pirates but baskets by Newman, Robert Griffin and Gordon ran the Dukes out to a 58-53 lead.

Edwards sandwiched two baskets around one by Henry to put ECU back up, 59-58, with 9:12 remaining. It was the last Pirate lead.

Two free throws by Winchester put the Dukes back up, 60-59. Newman followed with a jumper. Ferdinand made two more free throws and Newman again hit for a 66-59 lead with 7:04 left.

John Williams hit a three pointer and two pointer to pull ECU back within one at 69-68 but that was as close as the Pirates would come.

Brent made another three pointer and added the first of two free throws after Bass made a basket to cut it to 73-70 with 50 seconds left. Madison closed out the scoring hitting five of six from the line.

Newman finished with 17 points while Gordon and Brent had 13 each and Ferdinand and Winchester added 12 each.

JMU's 18-Point Outburst Puts Away Lady Pirates

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Five and a half minutes in ordinary time may seem insignificant to most, but in basketball it can be an eternity. For East Carolina's Lady Pirates, five and a half minutes was the difference between being in their game with James Madison and being blown out.

ECU tied the game at 10-10 on a jumper by Alma Bethea with 10:27 remaining, but James Madison went on a 18-0 run that put them ahead for good as they rolled to a 73-47 Colonial Athletic Association win over the Lady Pirates.

"We were a little out of sync for the first few minutes," said James Madison coach Sheila Moorman. "Once we got back to doing what we do best we played better defense (and) we got out and ran the ball a little bit."

The Lady Dukes, ranked 18th nationally, improve to 15-3 and 5-0 in the CAA.

ECU coach Emily Manwaring said the absence of forward Monique Pompili, who was held out of the game due to injury, hurt the Lady Pirates in more ways than one. "Her not being able to play (hurts)," Manwaring said. "How would the Giants have looked had Simms not been able to play."

"I thought we would stay with them for a much longer time. The only way we're going to win is with a team game."

Sydney Beasley, who led the Lady Dukes with 19 points, broke the early 10-10 tie with a layup. ECU's Chris O'Connor was then called for a walk to turn the ball back to James Madison.

ECU came back with a press and the Lady Dukes' Flo Jackson sprinted the length of the court to haul in a baseball pass and hit a layup, drawing a foul in the process. Her free throw was no good, but Beasley hit on the follow and James Madison led, 16-10.

After a missed jumper by ECU's Pam Williams, Beasley again hit for the Lady Dukes to run the lead to 18-10. Betsy Witman then came up with a steal for James Madison and Beasley responded with another layup to bring it to 20-10 with 7:44 remaining.

Julie Franken hit a layup and a jumper to bring the lead to 24-10. Alisa Harris and Jackson added a jumper apiece that brought the count to 28-10 with 5:28 remaining.

Christy Harris finally broke the string for the Lady Pirates with a short jumper with 4:50 to go in the half that made it 28-12.

The Lady Dukes had broken the game open, taking advantage of 14 first-half turnovers by ECU. James Madison was hitting both inside and outside and getting second and third chances under the boards.

"I think we have a real balanced game as witnessed by our statistics," Moorman said. "We have three or four girls averaging in double figures, but we do feel real good about our inside game."

The Lady Pirates, meanwhile, were neither hitting inside nor outside. And when they did shoot, they only got one shot on offense as they were outrebounded 23-13 in the first half and 43-25 for the entire game.

James Madison continued to stretch their lead in the first half, building up a 38-16 advantage by halftime.

The second half was more of the same. The Lady Dukes continued to pour it on. The lead got as high as 34 points at 61-27 with just over 10 minutes remaining.

In a loss by this large a margin, Manwaring said you learn one thing. "You learn it (losing) is no fun," she said. "As coaches it's our job to try to get players prepared physically and mentally. It's a constant coaching battle. They (the ECU team) are nice girls and they work hard, but you kind of have to transform yourself into a ball player when you get on the court. The game is not a finesse game."

Bethea led ECU, 11-7 and 4-2, with 19 points.

Jackson added 14 points for the Lady Dukes, while Witman chipped in 12.

Pompili Decision Questioned

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina women's basketball coach Emily Manwaring is at odds with the school's athletic department over its decision not to allow forward Monique Pompili to practice or play due to a hand injury.

Pompili suffered a ligament injury to her thumb Jan. 19 in a game against the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

She was examined at East Carolina's Student Health Center and referred to Eastern Orthopedics in Greenville where her hand was placed in a cast. Pompili said doctors at Eastern Orthopedics told her she could play if game officials would allow her to play with a hard cast.

Pompili said she went to Raleigh Orthopedics where she was fitted with a rubber cast that doctors told her would allow her to resume play.

Upon evaluation of the injury, Dr. Jim McCallum, ECU team physician, recommended that Pompili not participate in games or practices.

"I think there is a potential for harm to the point that she could have a permanent problem as a result of this thing and that is something I don't want to risk if at all possible," McCallum said.

"If after a little time and further investigation and further consultation with our orthopedic consultants, if there is indication she could participate without risk, I would be happy to reverse my decision," McCallum said.

"It absolutely does not have anything to do with my trying to keep her from playing ball. It is purely a medical decision."

Dr. Ken Karr, ECU's director of athletics, notified Manwaring and Pompili of McCallum's decision just prior to the Lady Pirates' game against George Mason Saturday night. Pompili played one minute in the game.

"There has been a medical opinion expressed by the physician who is the (official medical) opinion at the university who has said Monique should not practice or play," said Dr. Gene Templeton, associate director of athletics for internal affairs at ECU.

The problem, according to Manwaring and Pompili, is that Pompili had been given medical approval by doctors at Eastern Orthopedics and Raleigh Orthopedics to resume playing.

"They (athletic department officials) are going to do what they want to," Manwaring said. "She (Pompili) could be playing right now."

However, ECU decided to stick by McCallum's decision. "He (McCallum) never saw my hand," Pompili said, "(and) no doctor here in Greenville saw the (rubber) cast."

Templeton said the athletic department has two responsibilities in these matters. The first is to the student athlete and the second is to the university. The decision was based on this criteria, Templeton added.

"Those are objectives that we are responsible for meeting. The student athletes' welfare comes first and that which is in the best interest of the university (second)."

Pompili said she practiced three days with the cast on and although the ball was hard to catch, she felt she was able to play.

"The situation with Monique has been a very distracting thing for the team," Manwaring said. "Especially when she's in the chair Saturday ready to start and she's told she can't play."

Pompili also said the situation has adversely affected the team. "Yes it has, mentally and on the scoreboard. It was obvious we needed some help inside," she said, referring to the Lady Pirates' Monday night loss to James Madison, 73-47.

"I think the athletic department doesn't want to do anything to help us. Everything they seem to do seems to be against us," Pompili said.

Pompili said Karr told her he would send her mother some papers for her to sign that would release ECU from liability concerning further injury if she played against the medical advice.

She thought she would be able to play against James Madison but then found out she was out indefinitely. Templeton said it was discovered, after legal consultation, that it was not a viable option.

"That (matters of liability) wouldn't change my recommendation at all," McCallum said. "My (opinion) is based on what I believe the medical problem to be."

By The Associated Press
Syracuse has lost in the Carrier Dome only 19 times since it opened for the 1980-81 season. The last two defeats have come at the hands of teams coached by Paul Evans.

Evans' 17th-ranked Pittsburgh Panthers ended a 26-year losing streak in Syracuse Monday night with an 84-70 victory over the No. 6 Orangemen and extended his personal winning streak in the Dome to two games.

In last year's NCAA Eastern Regional quarterfinals, Evans' Navy team, led by 7-foot-1 center David Robinson, beat Syracuse 97-85.

Evans preferred to concentrate on Monday night's Big East Conference game.

"It was a good win for us in that we've had some trouble against the name teams in the Big East," said Evans, whose Panthers, 15-4 overall and 4-2 in the league, lost conference games earlier this season to Georgetown and St. John's, both of which are ranked.

Pitt's sophomore forward Jerome Lane, the nation's leading rebounder, led the Panthers with 26 points and 15 rebounds, while 6-10 junior center Charles Smith added 21 points.

"It would have broken our backs to lose this game," Lane said.

Smith viewed the game as a confidence builder for his team and a warning for the rest of the Big East.

"It was a little hump we had to get over," Smith said after the Panthers ended a 13-game losing streak in Syracuse.

"We had to give ourselves confidence and let people know that we're Pitt, and we're just as good as any other team in the Big East," he said.

In other games involving ranked teams Monday night, No. 3 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fresno State 106-58; No. 13 Duke defeated Cornell 85-59; and No. 14 Clemson beat Winthrop 96-69. The Atlantic 10 Conference game between Rutgers and No. 7 Temple was postponed because of snow and was rescheduled for tonight.

Pitt took the lead early in the game and extended it to a 43-32 halftime advantage. Lane and Smith's continued dominance inside gave Pitt a 17-point lead in the second half before a brief Syracuse rally cut the lead to 66-57 with seven minutes to play. That was as close as the Orangemen, 17-2 and 6-1, could get.

"I give Pitt a tremendous amount of credit," Syracuse Coach Jim Boheim said. "They just completely took it to us inside, dominated inside on the backboards. I thought Lane and Smith did a great job."

Sherman Douglas led Syracuse with 18 points.

The last time Pittsburgh left Syracuse with a victory was in 1961 when the Panthers prevailed 74-63.

"I didn't know about the streak," Lane said. "But, we broke it, and got a Big East rival in the process."

No. 3 Nevada-Las Vegas 106, Fresno State 58

The Runnin' Rebels surpassed the 100-point mark for the eighth time this season as they scored the game's first 12 points and led by as many as 34 in the first half. Nevada-Las Vegas scored the first 20 points of the second half to take a 76-24 lead with 13:50 to play.

Armon Gilliam's 23 points led UNLV, the nation's highest scoring team with a 94.7 points-per-game average. The Runnin' Rebels improved to 19-1 overall and 8-0 in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Fresno State, 7-12 and 2-6, was led by Mike Mitchell's 22 points.

"Our kids came to play," said UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian, whose team played for the sixth time in 12 days. "I was kind of concerned coming into tonight because we really didn't have a chance to prepare for Fresno."

No. 13 Duke 85, Cornell 59

The visitors from the Ivy League were within 61-52 with 5:38 to play when Duke went on an 8-0 burst that started a 24-7 run over the final minutes.

"They're (Cornell) not a bad ballclub, but we can't kid anybody, it is tougher to get up for games like this," Duke's Kevin Strickland, who scored his 13 points in less than four minutes, said. "But overall, we've done a good job of getting ourselves pumped up for non-conference games."

The Blue Devils, 15-3, took the lead for good at 31-30 on a jumper by John Smith with 4:42 left in the first half and led 41-33 at halftime. Smith led Duke with 22 points and seven rebounds.

John Bajusz led Cornell, 8-7, with 18 points.

No. 14 Clemson 96, Winthrop 69

Clemson bounced back from its first defeat of the season with an easy victory over the Eagles, 5-13.

Anthony Jenkins' 19 points led five Tigers in double figures as Clemson used an 18-0 run to break from a 28-23 lead with 7:49 left in the first half.

Clemson had its 17-game winning streak broken last weekend with a 105-103 overtime loss to Duke.

Ted Houpt led Winthrop with 21 points.

Other Games

Youngstown State forward Tilman Bevely scored 55 points, tying the Ohio Valley Conference mark set 22 years ago by Clem Haskins, in the Penguins' 115-87 victory over Tennessee Tech.

Bevely, a 6-foot-4 junior, made 19 of 27 shots from the field — including four of eight from 3-point range — and made 13 of 17 free throws in matching Haskins' total which he set for Western Kentucky on Jan. 30, 1965 against Middle Tennessee. Bevely also led the Penguins with 12 rebounds.

New Orleans won its 14th consecutive game and improved to 16-2 overall with a 91-87 victory over Baptist. Ledell Eackles led the Privateers, who became a Division I team 10 years ago, with 26 points and six assists.

Northwestern ended a 10-game losing streak with a 67-65 victory over Michigan State that also ended an 11-game losing streak in the Big Ten Conference. Shon Morris made two free throws with five seconds to play to give the Wildcats, 6-12, the victory.

Giants Humble About Past

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Standing atop the NFL mountain, the New York Giants aren't getting carried away with their success. They are humbled by their own history.

Team history, for instance, shows 30 years between Giant championships, a streak that ended Sunday with a 39-20 Super Bowl victory over the Denver Broncos. After their 1956 National Football League title, the Giants lost their next five title games and then went 23 years without even getting into one after falling 14-10 to the Chicago Bears in 1963.

Coach Bill Parcells and quarterback Phil Simms, the Super Bowl most valuable player with a record-setting 22-of-25 passing performance, can learn from their personal histories. Just three seasons back, they were surrounded by failure. It was a long climb from that 3-12-1 mark to this year's 17-2.

"I know now what real euphoria is," Parcells said Monday. "It's a wonderful feeling and I don't know if I'll ever be able to duplicate it."

Just three years ago, Parcells wasn't even sure he'd be coaching, much less winning a championship. He had replaced Ray Perkins, who left the Giants for the University of Alabama, and those 1983 Giants weren't really his players.

At that point, he was just trying to survive in the NFL after stints at seven colleges and a job as linebacker coach in New England.

"You don't think in terms of the Super Bowl," Parcells said when asked if he ever despaired of making it to the top. "You just work hard and hope you put a competitive team on the field."

Parcells began doing that in 1984, when the Giants were a wild-card playoff team with a 9-7 record. They moved up to 10-6 the next season but, each time, lost in the playoffs to the eventual Super Bowl winner.

"I felt we could have won last year," he said. "I was quite disappointed with what happened in Chicago."

This year, the Giants started winning on Oct. 27 — the same night the New York Mets won the World Series. The Giants didn't stop winning, taking 12 straight games to give

New York a Super Bowl-World Series exacta. Only Baltimore in 1971 and Pittsburgh in 1979 managed a similar feat.

What does it all mean for the future, particularly since the 49ers and Bears didn't come close to repeating after thoroughly dominating the competition in 1984 and 1985, respectively?

"We have to prepare ourselves for the next challenge," Parcells said.

Sluggish Tigers Pound Winthrop

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson Coach Cliff Ellis says the Tiger's victory over Winthrop wasn't one of their best performances this season, but it was about what he expected after a tough loss this weekend to an Atlantic Coast Conference rival.

"We knew we would come out and play this flat and rough, but in the end we played well," Ellis said after

Monday night's 96-69 victory over Winthrop. "This wasn't one of our better performances, but after a tough one like the Duke game, we expected this."

Duke defeated the Tigers 105-103 on Saturday to break Clemson's perfect record. The Tigers are now 18-1.

Forward Anthony Jenkins scored 19 points to lead the No. 14 Tigers past the Eagles in a non-conference game.

Clemson also got double-figure scoring from center Horace Grant and guard Michael Tait, both with 17 points, while forward Jerry Pryor added 11 and reserve center Elden Campbell 10.

Winthrop, which fell to 5-13, was led in scoring by guard Ted Houpt with 21 points.

ter after that timeout. Everybody picked their game up just a notch. All my points during that stretch were layups."

Leading 61-52, the Blue Devils took a timeout with 5:38 left, and then exploded for eight straight points to start a 24-7 final run.

Strickland sparked the rally, scoring 13 points in less than four minutes. He said Duke accomplished its goals in the second half, but in the first half, the Blue Devils looked like a team that wasn't prepared to play.

"They're (Cornell) not a bad ballclub, but we can't kid anybody, it is tougher to get up for games like this," Strickland said. "But overall, we've done a good job of getting ourselves pumped up for non-conference games."

"I think Cornell is a good basketball team. I'm impressed with the way (Cornell coach) Mike (Dement) had that team going," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski. "I can certainly see why they're leading the Ivy League. They'll have a shot at winning it. I hope they do."

Cornell, 8-7, managed to stay close until Duke's final run. The Blue Devils' 41-33 halftime lead was the largest of the first half.

Duke, 15-3, took the lead for good at 31-30 on John Smith's 18-foot jumper with 4:42 left in the first half. Smith led the Blue Devils with 22 points and pulled down seven rebounds, and Danny Ferry added 11 points.

"Duke's defensive pressure was tremendous," Dement said. "Obviously we're not the only ones they do that to. I saw them take North Carolina out of their offense and Alabama completely out of their offense."

Senior guard John Bajusz, who led Cornell with 18 points, set a torrid shooting pace in the first half. Bajusz, Cornell's all-time leading scorer, was 6-of-7 from the field in the first half, including one three-pointer.

Pirates...

Henry led ECU with 20. Edwards added 19 and Bass 18.

The loss continued an ECU drought in Harrisonburg. The Pirates have never won on JMU's home court having bowed now for the seventh straight time.

ECU will close out its current road trip Wednesday night in Richmond meeting Virginia Commonwealth.

The Pirates then return home on Saturday to resume CAA action hosting American University.

His 88.0 completion percentage (22 of 25) was the highest for any of the 213 NFL post-season games with a minimum of 15 completions. The old record was 84.2 percent (16 of 19) by Miami's David Woodley against New England in an AFC first round game Jan. 8, 1983.

Largest Scoring Margin
 The Giants' 105-23 scoring margin over their playoff opponents is the largest total in history for a Super Bowl winner. New York defeated San Francisco 49-3, Washington 17-0, and Denver 39-20. The previous record was 91-10 margin set by Chicago last year. The Bears defeated New York 21-0, Los Angeles 24-0, and New England 14-6.

Giant Fans Set For Party After 30 Seasons Of Waiting

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — After 30 seasons of waiting, fans of the New York Giants finally are getting their chance to celebrate a championship.

More than 80,000 confetti-throwing, kazoo-blowing fans were expected to be on hand today to give the Super Bowl champions a warm reception in frosty Giants Stadium.

New Jersey Gov. Thomas Kean planned to present the players with gold medallions for their 39-20 victory over the Denver Broncos in Pasadena, Calif., on Sunday.

The victory gave the Giants their first NFL title since 1956, and team officials said they wanted the celebration to take place where the Giants made it happen this year — at the 76,891-seat Giants Stadium.

New Jersey Sports and Exposition Authority spokesman Paul Wolcott said Monday that $650,000 had been raised through private donations to stage the party, to be hosted by comedian and New Jersey native Joe Piscopo.

Officials from ShopRite, a supermarket chain, and Prudential Insurance Co. together donated $200,000, Wolcott said.

Other entertainers who agreed to appear included comedian Henny Youngman, professional wrestler Captain Lou Albano, and The Roches, a female singing group.

Also planned were film highlights of the Giants' games, performances by marching bands and, as a grand finale, the crowd playing "California Here I Come" on kazooes. The song is in reference to next year's Super Bowl, to be held in San Diego.

Wolcott said the first 73,000 seats will go to season ticketholders and their friends and families on a first-come, first-served basis. There was room on the tarpaulin-covered field for another 8,000 people. And doubtless there would be those waiting in the parking lot, hoping to see the Giants make an appearance there.

"We're trying to get them to go out to the parking lot," Wolcott said. "But we're not sure yet. Some of the program still has to be worked out."

Weather forecasters said partly cloudy skies and 25-degree temperatures were in store for the outdoor party. That temperature would be 52 degrees cooler than the temperature at kickoff time in Pasadena Sunday.

Workers labored all day Monday preparing the snow-covered stadium for the bash.

Crews shoveled snow from the aisles and bulldozed it from the parking lot. A stage was set near the eastern goal line, and blue-and-red banners were hung from the balconies.

To ease the travel crunch along northern New Jersey's icy roads, New Jersey Transit Corp. offered a number of special shuttle buses and shuttle trains today.

In the stadium's private clubhouse Monday, employees of the sports complex and family members prepared gift packages for fans.

Many were called first thing Monday morning and offered $7 an hour to stuff pompons, buttons, confetti and kazooes into plastic grocery store bags.

"I love the Giants and everything, but I don't want to be doing this for nothing," said Maria De Sousa, daughter of a sports complex worker, who spent half the day putting baggies full of white confetti into the grocery bags.

The kazooes arrived Monday, packed in 100 boxes each containing 1,000 of the plastic musical instruments.

They were sent to the stadium by express mail by a Los Angeles maker who was a little worried about Monday morning's snowstorm.

"I told them that if they couldn't get them there because of the snow, I'd have them parachuted into the Meadowlands," said Albert Broder, owner of Kazoos By Broder, billed as the nation's only kazoo manufacturer.

The company's 12 employees worked around-the-clock last weekend to fill the Giants' order of 100,000 kazooes, he said.

"I was in a big sweat a few minutes ago when the kazooes hadn't made it yet to the stadium. They called and said, 'If we don't have those kazooes you're dead.' Five minutes later they got there," Broder said.

Absent from the gala will be New York City Mayor Edward Koch, who is vacationing in Poland. Koch, upset that the team no longer plays its home games in New York City, initially refused to hold a Manhattan victory parade for the team.

His move sparked a number of offers from mayors of cities on the western side of the Hudson River.

He changed his mind when the American Express Co. offered to pay for a parade. In a telephone interview Monday, the mayor said his offer for a celebration in Manhattan still stood.

"I repeat my offer, which is that the Giants can have two parades: one, a practice parade in the Meadowlands, walk around the stadium — and the second, a ticker-tape parade down Broadway."

Hagler Is The Tops, Says Leonard

By RICK SCOPPE
Associated Press Writer
HILTON HEAD, S.C. (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler is more than just another boxer to Sugar Ray Leonard.

"He is that mountain," Leonard said. "I look at Hagler as being the ultimate. He is what the Olympics meant to me when I was an amateur boxer."

Leonard, 30, will fight Hagler, 32, the world middleweight champ, April 6 at Caesars Palace in Las Vegas in what is being billed as "The Super Fight."

In preparing for the fight, Leonard will be working out in Hilton Head, where Monday he officially opened his training camp. If Leonard wins, he will be only the ninth boxer to have won three world titles.

But Leonard is considered the underdog by many close to the sport.

And Leonard said he'd lose to Hagler in a battle of resumes. But when the two boxers step into the ring, Leonard said the battle will be won on the canvas — not on paper.

Still, Leonard said he understood why he was the underdog. "I think if you look at it from a paper standpoint, if both of us had to fill out an application, quite naturally he would have a better resume, a better present resume, than mine," Leonard said.

But Leonard said those who are picking him to lose are wrong. "I will win. I don't know how, but I will," he said.

Hagler, who hasn't lost a fight in 11 years, has a 66-2-2 record that includes 52 knockouts. Leonard, who hasn't fought in nearly three years, is 33-1 with 24 KOs.

Hagler is training in Palm Springs, Calif. Leonard will prepare for the fight at the Hotel Inter-Continental in Hilton Head, where he has been since Wednesday.

Leonard sparred three three-minute rounds and also shadow boxed and hit the speed bag at the official opening of his camp. After his light workout before more than 100 people in a hotel ballroom, Leonard said the upcoming fight will be his last.

"If I told you yes, you wouldn't believe me. If I told you no, you wouldn't believe," Leonard said at a news conference. "But yes, it's my last fight."

Leonard challenged Hagler to the fight on May 1, 1986. But Hagler didn't accept the challenge until Aug. 18, and then he announced his decision through a spokesman.

Leonard was a one of five boxers to take home a gold medal in the 1976 Olympics. After turning pro, he won the world welterweight title and the WBA junior middleweight title.

But in 1982 Leonard retired after suffering an eye injury while training for a fight against Roger Stafford. Leonard returned to the ring in May 1984, stopping Howard in the ninth round.

Leonard said his eye is doing fine. "For those of you who are ophthalmologists," Leonard said with a laugh, "my eyes are fine. If you know me, I wouldn't do it if they were not fine."

Leonard, who fought at 147 pounds and 154 pounds, said his weight fluctuates but that he now weighs about 153 or 154 pounds as he begins his climb to the 160-middleweight class.

"The weight will not prove to be ... a significant factor," he said. "It depends upon how I approach the fight."

"Quite naturally, I could not stand toe-to-toe with Hagler. He's much too strong and much too big a man.... To wrestle him, to clinch and hold would prove to be disastrous. The key to winning the fight is to box Hagler, to stay on the outside."

Leonard said he doesn't feel any pressure as he prepares for a comeback that many have said is foolish. He said the only pressure he felt was from the media and the public when he challenged Hagler.

"Everything else is behind me, and what's in front of me is Hagler," Leonard said. "So, there is no pressure on me."

Jackson Sympathizes With Fullwoods Woes

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Bo Jackson, who spurned football for baseball after winning the Heisman Trophy at Auburn in 1985, says he can sympathize with the player who took his place in the Tigers backfield, Brent Fullwood.

Jackson is enrolled at Auburn, where he working toward a degree in family and child development. He said he will graduate in one or two quarters.

Jackson also has been practicing with the Tigers baseball team until the Kansas City Royals begin spring training next month.

In an interview last week with The Auburn Plainsman, Jackson came to the defense of Fullwood, who was criticized for continuing to play football last season although he had stopped going to class earlier in the season because of personal and physical problems.

"I haven't talked to Brent since I've been back," Jackson said. "But I think there's a reason for everything. He has problems like everyone else."

"He's a great running back and will make a fine addition to any NFL team. He has a lot of character."

Jackson remembered the criticism he got during his senior season at Auburn when he missed parts of the Tennessee and Florida games because of injuries.

"The way I handle it (criticism) is to use it in a positive manner," he said. "If somebody prints something bad about me, I figure he doesn't like Bo Jackson or he's jealous. The sun's going to shine the next day no matter what they say."

"The only thing I read in the paper is the comics. When they start mixing the sports with the comics, I'll stop getting my subscriptions."

Jackson said he has enjoyed his return to Auburn.

"It's very relaxing," he said. "It's my second home. I can be by myself here."

Jackson starred at running back for Auburn from 1982-85 and was the first pick in the National Football League draft last year. But he turned down a multi-million-dollar offer from the Tampa Bay Buccaneers and signed with Kansas City.

Since then, Jackson has stated repeatedly that he doesn't intend to return to football.

"I'm happy. My body is happy," he said. "People say, 'Bo's a fool' (for not playing football). But if I'm happy, that's all that matters."

President Reagan may be hoping that tonight's State of the Union address will divert public attention from the so-called Iran-contra scandal. Theodore Roosevelt knew how to distract critical Americans. He made headlines for himself by becoming the first President to take a dive in a sub.

Championships held recently in Atlanta, was won by two internationalists playing together for the first time. They were the highest-ranked U.S. star in the world, Bob Hamman of Dallas, and San Franciscan Ron Von der Porten, who co-authored a book with our senior columnist and is a regular on Goren bridge cruises. And for those who think that the methods we have espoused over the years are passee, we take pleasure in recording that they were the only pair in the final playing a four-card major system!

On this hand from the event, Hamman became declarer at three hearts doubled after a dubious overall. West's double, which shook the rafters of the Atlanta Hilton, convinced Hamman he was facing a probable 5-0 trump break.

Had West's skill and volume been equal, the defense would have attacked with three rounds of trumps, and declarer would have been doomed. The opening lead of a spade gave declarer a chance, however, and Hamman made the most of it. He won the jack of spades and led the club king to the ace. The spade return went to the ace, and a diamond to the jack lost to the king.

Declarer won the club return in dummy, cashed the ace of diamonds, ruffed a spade in hand and cashed the queen of diamonds, discarding dummy's last club. That reduced West to nothing but trumps, so when declarer continued with a diamond, West was faced with losing options. It would not have helped to ruff high, but ruffing low allowed dummy to overruff. Dummy's remaining spade was ruffed with the queen of trumps and West overruffed. But now West was down to A 8 6 of trumps, while dummy held J 4 3 and declarer 10 7. There was no way declarer could be prevented from scoring two more tricks and his contract.

NASA May Not Keep February Launch Date

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer
CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — NASA's goal of resuming shuttle flights early next year is in jeopardy, say officials in and out of the space agency.

Testing of the redesigned booster rocket is behind schedule, fixes for the main engines and brakes are needed and the engines probably will have to be test-fired first with Discovery locked on its launch pad, they say.

The working date for Discovery's launch is Feb. 18, 1988. Many here believe it's an overly optimistic goal, but a necessary one by which to set milestones.

"It's a good target and we may come close, but nobody I know around this place is going to tell you we're going to make that date," said Charles D. Gay, shuttle operations director.

Top officials here say it could be accomplished, but only if many other milestones are met on the road to recovery.

Air Force Gen. Forrest S. McCartney, director of Kennedy Space Center, said officials think the schedule is realistic. He said it is longer than those in the past "because we are cutting out overtime and proceeding very cautiously."

"Now that means a lot of things have to fall in place," he said. "The redesigned solid rocket motors have to be tested and qualified, hardware has to be delivered here to meet our flow schedule and no additional requirements can be put in the pot."

Space shuttle Challenger exploded Jan. 28, killing its crew of seven and grounding the three remaining shuttles. The accident was blamed on a faulty joint in one of the two solid-fuel boosters.

The first full-scale firing test of a redesigned booster, which had been set for December, has slipped to mid-March.

"We're having difficulty getting the necessary tooling done," said Rocky Raab, a spokesman for the booster's manufacturer, Morton Thiokol Inc.

Other things that could affect the schedule would be Congress or outside monitoring groups calling for additional reviews of NASA's recovery work or a decision to have a flight readiness firing of a shuttle locked on the pad, McCartney said.

A consensus is growing within the National Aeronautics and Space Administration that a flight readiness firing will be necessary to check out the vehicle and the launch team after the shuttle system has been grounded for nearly two years. That would cause an estimated two-month delay in the actual launch.

Thomas E. Utsman, the center's deputy director, says the date is achievable, but "I'm not going to tell you it's 100 percent."

"From an engineering and technical standpoint it's not out of bed," he said. "Another issue is a non-engineering issue. That is the assessment the world is going to make as to whether we're ready to launch."

Bob Sieck, shuttle launch director, said Feb. 18 "is a tight date... There could be hiccups. We have to have a target date to give the work force motivation to work toward something. I'm never one to give up early. We'll continue to press on."

"It's going to be very difficult to make Feb. 18," said astronaut Rick Hauck, who will command Discovery on the first flight after the accident. "But it's possible and we ought to go for it. The important thing is the system allows it to slip. We'll launch only if we're ready."

An independent research group said recently that NASA's analysis of critical space shuttle hardware, scheduled to be completed next summer, will not allow enough time to make substantial design changes if flights are to resume in early 1988.

The finding was made by the National Research Council, which is auditing NASA's review of 748 items deemed critical to a mission's success. The failure of any of those items could lead to the loss of a shuttle and its crew.

"Many engineering changes have been undertaken since the accident to improve shuttle safety prior to resumption of flight," the council said. "Thus, the re-evaluation may not adequately reflect all of the engineering changes, nor will there be time to incorporate any substantial design changes that may be indicated by the outcome of the re-evaluation."

The council urged NASA to proceed cautiously. It also criticized the goal of 16 flights a year by 1994, saying 11 to 13 flights would be more reasonable and safer because the agency wouldn't be pressing too hard to meet launch schedules.

John Pike, space policy analyst for the Federation of American Scientists, said Feb. 18 is not realistic because he believes NASA, in addition to correcting the booster problem, also has to deal more thoroughly with other problems before shuttles can fly. Among them are main engine turbine blades, which tend to crack after a few flights, and the brakes and landing gear, which have failed several times.

"It looks like they're on their way to fixing the immediate technical problem with the Challenger," he said. "But they're a long way from fixing other technical problems that could lead to a repeat of the disaster."

The House Science and Technology Committee also recently expressed concern about problems with engine turbine blade cracks and with the brakes, both of which might require time-consuming testing that could affect the launch.

The committee also said it was bothered because it felt some people within NASA still were exerting pressure to resume flying an "unrealistic" number of shuttle missions.

McCartney said, "If at any time we feel we are not comfortable with that schedule, you're looking at a fellow who is going to stand up and say I want to extend that schedule."

"Under no circumstances will we compromise mission success," he said. "While schedule is important, it takes a back seat to safety."

"All you have to do is think, my friend, of what happens if we break another one of those birds. This nation cannot stand another 51-L (Challenger)."

CHALLENGER TRIBUTE — An estimated 50,000 students, teachers and parents from 67 public schools in the Kennedy Space Center area took part in a special flag-raising program Monday to honor the crew of the shuttle Challenger. Here students at the Challenger 7 Elementary School at Cocoa, Fla., look on as the "Learning and Liberty" flag is raised at their school. The flag, a special symbol of education, was carried aboard the Challenger by astronaut-teacher Christa McAuliffe. (AP Laser-photo)

Memorials Honor Crew Of Ill-Fated Challenger

By DAVID TIRRELL-WYSOCKI
Associated Press Writer

Fourteen-year-old Tami Quinn in Grants Pass, Ore., raised $6,000 for NASA. Audiences at "Star Trek IV" see a dedication to Challenger's crew as the film opens. New Hampshire plans a planetarium to honor Christa McAuliffe.

The international outpouring of grief set off last Jan. 28, when the space shuttle exploded, has been channeled into dozens of projects over the past year to remember the astronauts in song, scholarships, paintings and monuments.

The largest is the Challenger Center project taken on by the crew members' families.

They are trying to raise $50 million for a space science teaching laboratory in Washington and a regional center in Houston, and to provide scholarships and sabbaticals for teachers to attend. About $250,000 had been raised by Jan. 6, and the families hope businesses will donate 10 percent of their sales on Wednesday's anniversary.

The Tennessee Education Association is sponsoring Tennessee Space Week this week, with lessons geared toward space. Television and radio stations in the state planned space quizzes and space-related news coverage. The state also set up a teaching scholarship.

In another major effort, about $1.2 million has been collected for the Challenger astronauts' 11 children, ages 2 to 25.

A month after the blast, children at Livingston Park Elementary School in North Brunswick, N.J., raised $400 for the fund through a bake sale. Tami Quinn raised $6,000 for NASA in the "Kids for Space" fund she established.

Children in West Virginia collected pennies for a statue of McAuliffe. And in Bath, N.Y., Haverling High School students raised $17,000 in their "Pennies for Space-Rebuild the Spirit" fund. They plan to ask the president where to send the money.

In Winston-Salem, N.C., Jonathan Pitts, 12, who wants to be an astronaut, spearheaded a drive that raised $10,000 for a shuttle mock-up and scholarship.

Ronald McNair's family established a scholarship foundation in South Carolina for disadvantaged students. The state inducted McNair into its Hall of Science and Technology, plans to exhibit his space momentos in a museum to be opened next year and named a highway for him.

The Soviet Union named craters on Venus for McAuliffe, the high school teacher who was to have been the first "ordinary" American in space, and Judith Resnik, the only other woman on the flight that ended in disaster just more than a minute after liftoff.

The Paris-based International Astronomical Union named asteroids after all seven crewmembers.

In Florida's Brevard County, home of Cape Canaveral, schools have been named for McNair, McAuliffe and the "Challenger 7."

More than 50,000 children and teachers in the county paid tribute Monday by raising replicas of a flag McAuliffe carried on the flight. The red, white and blue Flag of Learning and Liberty, a symbol of education, was raised simultaneously at each of the county's 67 public schools at 10 a.m. EST.

Auburn, Wash., where Richard Scobee grew up, has a Dick Scobee Elementary School and a Scobee scholarship fund. The municipal airport was renamed for him, and a Scobee mural hangs at his high school.

In Akron, Ohio, Resnik's Firestone High School this month named a library addition for her and has established a scholarship fund in her name.

Hawaii's tributes to native-son Ellison Onizuka include a scholarship fund of more than $300,000. An educational pavilion and museum are being built. An astronomy center and an island flower were named for him.

The Sunnyvale Air Force Station outside San Francisco was renamed in Onizuka's honor.

In Beaufort, N.C., Michael Smith's hometown, the airport where Smith learned to fly as a teen-ager now is Michael J. Smith Field.

Many scholarships and educational awards have been named for McAuliffe. New Hampshire plans a planetarium in her honor, and the government of Japan sent the high school where she taught more than $120,000.

John Denver, a church choir, a symphony composer and school children have recorded music. In Philadelphia, composer Christopher Rouse dedicated the first of six works commemorating the U.S. Constitution's 200th anniversary to the astronauts. The shuttle exploded as he was composing a section about Zeus, the Greek god, knocking a runaway chariot out of the sky with a thunderbolt.

Apollo Fire Was 20 Years Ago

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Sheryl Chaffee will join other NASA workers in 73 seconds of silence on Wednesday to honor the seven astronauts killed a year ago in the Challenger explosion.

But she wonders why something like that wasn't being done today for her father and two other astronauts killed in the Apollo 1 fire.

It was 20 years ago today, on Jan. 27, 1967, that astronauts Roger Chaffee, Gus Grissom and Ed White died when a fire flashed through their spacecraft during a launch pad test.

A wreath hangs in the lobby of the Kennedy Space Center headquarters building as tribute to the three. No ceremony is planned.

There will be another wreath in the lobby Wednesday, for the Challenger crew, killed Jan. 28 when the spaceship blew apart 73 seconds after liftoff. But there also will be those 73 seconds of silence at 11:38 a.m., the shuttle's liftoff time; flags will be lowered to half staff, and the center director will speak briefly.

"What is wrong with the 27th? Why don't they honor that?" Ms. Chaffee, 29, asked in an interview.

NASA said no elaborate tribute is planned for the Apollo 1 crew because of the passage of time. It noted there was a brief ceremony on the first anniversary.

Singer Whitney Houston Wins Five Music Awards

By RICHARD DE ATLEY
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Whitney Houston's 2-year-old album brought her five American Music Awards, while Lionel Richie, whose album wasn't even nominated, won four trophies for songs and videos from his "Dancing on the Ceiling" LP.

Miss Houston won favorite female vocalist and album in the pop rock category, and in the soul-rhythm-and-blues category claimed the female vocalist, album and video single honors.

"Thank you mom and dad for your love and support," a tearful Miss Houston said Monday night at the 14th annual awards. She lost in only two of her seven nominations.

A song and a video from the same "Whitney Houston" album brought her two American Music Awards in 1986. The awards, based on a popularity poll, do not have a deadline for consideration.

The album has been on the Billboard charts for 97 weeks and has sold 8 million copies, the best-selling record of 1986, according to the magazine.

Miss Houston's victories came chiefly at the expense of Michael Jackson's sister Janet, whose "Control" album, along with its "Nasty" single and videos, garnered her nine nominations, five in the same category as Miss Houston. Miss Jackson won two trophies.

Richie was chosen favorite male pop vocalist, favorite male vocalist and male video artist in the soul-rhythm-and-blues category, and favorite video single for "Dancing on the Ceiling" in the pop rock category.

The LP wasn't nominated in any of the American Music Awards' album categories and Richie also isn't up for any Grammy Awards. Richie, on tour in Australia, was not at Monday night's ceremony. A favorite at the American Music Awards, Richie now has 15 statues.

Alabama won three awards — favorite country album for "Greatest Hits," favorite country group, and favorite country video group.

Huey Lewis and the News, Billy Ocean and the mother-daughter country duo, The Judds, won two each.

"Finally, country music is coming to Hollywood," said Wynonna Judd.

The Judds' "Grandpa" won favorite country single and country video honors.

rhythm-and-blues single for "Nasty" and favorite female video artist in the same category.

"This means so much to me. Thank you," she told the nationally televised audience.

Huey Lewis and the News won in the pop rock category for favorite group and favorite video group. The vocal quartet New Edition won favorite soul-rhythm-and-blues group and Willie Nelson got the favorite country male vocalist award.

Billy Ocean, the soulful-voiced singer from Trinidad, had the favorite pop single with "There'll Be Sad Songs" and took the favorite male video artist award in the pop rock category.

Lewis, who has a hit with his current album "Fore" and the single "Hip to Be Square," thanked the crowd for the honor via a television link from a San Francisco recording studio.

"We know this is a people's award," Lewis said. "Without you there wouldn't be us." Lewis failed to garner a Grammy nomination for his album.

Alabama, a perennial favorite, was nominated in three categories this

Actress Says New CBS Drama Is Emotional With Light Touch

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Stockard Channing says CBS' "The Room Upstairs" is a drama that's as light and restrained as a watercolor.

"She wasn't referring to the fact that the production was often waterlogged during frequent rainstorms while filming in Boston and Vancouver, Canada."

"I say it's like a watercolor because it's not heavy with many layers like an oil painting," she said. "There's a lot of emotional stuff but it has a light touch. It's done with clear and careful and fast strokes, the way you do a watercolor. The emotions are heavy enough without layering them."

STOCKARD CHANNING

Ms. Channing stars as Leah Lazenby in "The Room Upstairs," a Hallmark Hall of Fame presentation on CBS this Saturday. Leah works with learning-impaired youngsters and has turned the old family home into a boarding house filled with fascinating characters.

The production also stars Sam Waterston and Linda Hunt. Stuart Margolin directed from a screenplay by Steve Lawson, adapted from the English novel by Norma Levinson.

"We did it like a play," Ms. Channing said. "We had a lot of rehearsal. The cast was mostly stage actors, so there was a lot of familiarity with the process. We worked 14 hours a day. Nobody phoned in his role. There was a lot of intensity and a lot of dedication, and fortunately everyone had a mutual vision of it."

"One of my challenges was Leah. When you first meet her she's thorny. She's poured herself into working with emotionally damaged children, and the irony is that she can't communicate with other people. She is cut off and lonely. She has all these people living in her house and it forces her to open up. She also develops a love relationship with Sam Waterston."

Ms. Channing said she was put off by the character when she first started reading the script. "I said, 'What a pain,'" she recalled. "Do I care about this woman? Then she got involved with the children and I was attracted. The writer didn't sweeten her up. She stays an anti-heroine."

Margolin filmed exteriors on location in Boston, and the interiors were shot in Vancouver, where the house was built on a soundstage. Ms. Channing said the production was rushed to get it on the air before Valentine's Day, which is Hallmark's biggest occasion for greeting cards.

"It was raining and cold in Boston and raining and cold in Vancouver," she said. "That was good because we were able to match some exterior scenes that had to be re-shot in Vancouver. We did one scene in a car in the rain and they'd do my closeup with the windshield wipers on. Then the sun would come out when it was time to do Sam's. We spent almost the whole day doing that until we got them both the same."

She grew up in Park Avenue luxury in New York, but one of her best-known roles was as tough, streetwise Rizzo in the movie "Grease." She was the diamond-studded heiress Warren Beatty and Jack Nicholson plotted to kill in "The Fortune," her first movie in 1975.

She won a Tony as the spastic daughter in "Joe Egg," and recently returned to Broadway for "The House of Blue Leaves." She starred with Meryl Streep and Jack Nicholson in "Heartburn," then did "A Man's a Man" in upstate New York and went to Yugoslavia for "Destiny."

She was also in two TV series, in 1979 and again in 1980, but neither lasted very long. "People keep offering me things, but I haven't found anything yet that interests me," she said.
