Kidnappers Threaten To Kill Three Americans

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — An underground group today threatened to kill three American hostages and one Indian hostage if U.S. forces attack Lebanon.

The threat came in a handwritten Arabic statement from Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine that was delivered to the Beirut office of a Western news agency. The previously unknown group issued a statement Wednesday claiming it kidnapped the four teachers.

The statement issued today was accompanied by a photograph of hostage Robert Polhill, 53, of New York City. The photograph showed Polhill with two sub-machine guns pointed at his head.

The Anglican Church, meanwhile, received assurances that envoy Terry Waite is safe and continuing his mission to win freedom for hostages. But Waite's wife and other close relatives said they remain concerned about his safety because of his absence and prolonged failure to contact relatives or church officials.

The Pentagon announced earlier this week it had postponed indefinitely the departure for home from the Mediterranean of the aircraft carrier USS John F. Kennedy and her 11-ship battle group. Another carrier, the

Waite Reported Safe

USS Nimitz, which had been scheduled to relieve the Kennedy, is also operating in the Mediterranean.

The Pentagon gave no reason for the change in plans. But informed sources who requested anonymity said the Reagan administration decided it should keep two carriers in the Mediterranean in light of the wave of hostage-taking in Lebanon.

Today's statement said: "After it was ascertained for us that the United States harbors the intention to attack Lebanon with the help of other Western nations, the Islamic Jihad Organization for the Liberation of Palestine declares it will execute the four American hostages as an initial countermeasure upon the occurrence of this aggression. Other operations will follow in adequate places."

The Indian hostage is a resident in the United States but not a U.S. citizen.

Angry students from Beirut University College, where the four were teachers, burned tires and blocked traffic in west Beirut today to protest the abductions, which took place Saturday at the school.

The Wednesday statement said the four were taken because they were carrying out "American intrigues."

Also Wednesday, the U.S. State Department announced restrictions on travel to Lebanon to force U.S. citizens to leave the country. The estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in Lebanon will be given 30 days to leave before their passports become invalid.

Conditions in Lebanon have become so chaotic, with the abduction of 11 foreigners in the past two weeks, that no Americans can be considered safe in Lebanon, the U.S. government said.

Of 26 foreigners missing in Lebanon, eight are Americans. One of them, Associated Press chief Middle East correspondent Terry A. Anderson, has been held nearly two years.

Waite was last seen in publicly Jan.

City Council Considers Allowances For Travel

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

City Council members have asked the staff for information regarding the car allowance policies of surrounding cities in order to compare with Greenville's practice of paying five department heads $260 per month for their vehicles.

The council also sought information on the costs of courses at Pitt Community College and East Carolina University in an effort to reduce the training costs for city employees. Council members made the requests at a 1987-88 budget workshop Wednesday.

Presently, the city manager, police chief, director of public works, director of engineering and inspections and director of parks and recreation receive a standard car allowance of $260 per month, and eight Greenville Utilities employees receive $240 allowances.

"About three years ago, the City Council determined that it was less expensive for the city to have the car allowances," City Manager Gail Meeks said. "We don't have the capital expense of city vehicles, upkeep, gasoline, insurance and liability."

Ms. Meeks said the car allowance is used in preference to the standard rate of 21 cents per mile of use.

"At 21 cents per mile, the employee is still responsible," she said. "It doesn't compensate the employee for the complete cost of the vehicle."

Council members also agreed to include their $100 per month car allowance under the line item of fees paid elected officials as requested by council member Lorraine Shinn.

The council reviewed line items in budget requests from the city manager's office, city clerk, mayor and City Council and personnel departments during Wednesday's budget workshop.

Council members were given an overview of preliminary expenditures expected in each department, according to Ms. Meeks, who said she will provide recommendations after studying all of the city's needs.

"These are very preliminary budgets. After we have more experience on expenditures and revenue projections and have a good understanding of all department requirements, I will form my recommendations to the City Council," Ms. Meeks said.

Council members reviewed a $125,716 request from the city manager's office, which included $107,582 in salaries, compared with $105,223 in the 1986-87 budget. The city manager's office is estimated to receive $121,710 in the current budget 1986.

Ms. Meeks said the slight increase, which appears in all departments, is due to an additional working day falling on the 1987-88 calendar.

The city manager's office budget request also includes $17,674 in operating expenses for printing, public information, travel, maintenance of equipment, car allowance, supplies and materials, contracted services, dues and subscriptions, and $460 in capital outlay.

A $98,406 request from the personnel department is down from the

Pair Sentenced In Tyson Death

Two Pitt County men have been sentenced to prison after pleading guilty to charges stemming from the 1986 slaying of a 32-year-old Greenville woman whose body was found in a Martin County farm pond on Dec. 13.

Fernando Scott Jackson of 119 Terrace St., Winterville, was sentenced Wednesday to 40 years in prison after pleading guilty to second-degree murder in the death of Lois Hales Tyson of Route 5, Greenville.

Jackson, whose prison term was restricted by an agreement with authorities that led to the discovery of the body, told investigators he strangled Mrs. Tyson when she attempted to end their sexual relationship, according to testimony in Pitt County Superior Court.

Jerry Wayne Martin, 40, of P.O. Box 68, Stokes, received a five-year sentence after pleading guilty to conspiring to kill Mrs. Tyson.

Billy J. Vandiford, a detective with the Pitt County Sheriff's Department, testified that Jackson gave Martin $650 as partial payment to murder Mrs. Tyson but that Martin did not participate in the act.

Judge David E. Reid Jr. handed down the sentences, capping a four-month investigation.

Investigators made an agreement with Jackson that limited his maximum sentence to 45 years after they had difficulty developing evidence to support a murder charge and finding Mrs. Tyson's body, according to District Attorney Thomas Haigwood, who said Jackson led investigators to the body after making the agreement.

Vandiford testified that Jackson originally denied knowledge of Mrs. Tyson's death but later told investigators he killed her when she came to his home.

Jackson told investigators he choked her with his hands and later put her body in the trunk of his car, Vandiford said. Jackson then went to a Greenville nightclub before he drove to a remote area in Martin County, where he put the body in some brush. He went back the next day and put the body in a small pond, according to testimony.

Vandiford testified that Martin earlier had agreed to kill the woman for $1,300. Jackson said he paid Martin $650 in mid-July and was supposed to pay the rest by Aug. 10. Vandiford testified.

Vandiford also said Jackson told investigators he had been unable to finish the payments and Martin then threatened to kill him if he didn't.

According to defense testimony, Jackson had a turbulent relationship with Mrs. Tyson, who had been sepa-

Mutinous Filipino Soldiers End Takeover Of TV Station

By ROBERT H. REID

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The government said today it thwarted plans by deposed President Ferdinand E. Marcos to return from his Hawaiian exile, and about 200 mutinous soldiers ended a rebellion they apparently staged to aid his return.

In an address broadcast live on government television, President Corazon Aquino said the mutineers' 61-hour seizure of a broadcast center was part of an attempted coup designed to block approval of her proposed constitution. She called the new charter "essential to the preservation of democracy in the Philippines."

"Here was a clear attempt to disrupt the first principle of democracy, which is civilian supremacy, by those specially charged with its preservation," she said in the speech 45 minutes after the rebellion ended.

A plebiscite scheduled Monday on the new constitution is considered the first electoral test of Mrs. Aquino's support since she was swept into office in a military-civilian uprising that ousted Marcos 11 months ago.

Mrs. Aquino said she ordered that the military rebels be court-martialed and that the civilians who joined them be charged with rebellion. After several earlier coup attempts, she was criticized for leniency toward the participants.

Government spokesman Teodoro Benigno said Marcos' unauthorized plan to return to his homeland aboard a special plane was blocked by the Philippine consul general in Honolulu.

The announcement and Mrs. Aquino's speech appeared to mark the end to the most serious challenge to date against her government.

The rebellion began Tuesday when about 500 troops attempted to seize

Swollen Tar Begins To Drop

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Although dropping today from a crest of 18 feet, the Tar River continued to spill into low-lying areas and block streets in Greenville.

"We'll keep barricades (in the streets) as long as the water is on the streets for safety," said Mayo Allen of the Greenville Public Works Department. The area around Tar River Estates and Cedar Lane has experienced extreme flooding since weekend rain and snow pushed the river beyond its banks.

More rain is forecast for tonight and Friday, according to the National Weather Service.

High water has caused some area residents to leave their homes, but most homes and apartments have escaped the water.

Of the 17 houses on Cedar Lane in Greenville, "the lower five are in water," said Bob Wendling, a resident in that area. Some families have moved out, but those that remain "are using row boats" to get in and out.

"The water is under the foundation of at least three of the houses," he said.

There has been no apartment damage, however, at Tar River Estates on Willow Street, according to Charles Eppes, director of corporate communications at U.S. Shelter Corporation. The corporation manages the property.

"We do have some minor problems in the clubhouse" and with the pool, he said. "It (water) gets to the pool first — that we can clean and fix."

Corporation staff have been on 24-hour alert since Friday, awaiting possible flood problems, Eppes said. Property manager Jim Willis was sent to Greenville to monitor the situations, and Mike Collins, the

Groundwater Levels Fall In East

Groundwater levels in parts of eastern North Carolina have dropped more than 100 feet since 1900, creating problems for many communities that depend on wells for their water supplies, scientists say.

Such declines — as much as 5 feet a year in places — can be largely attributed to increased groundwater pumping by cities and industries, a new report by the U.S. Geological Survey says.

"Twenty years ago, this was not perceived as a problem by these communities," said M.D. Winner Jr., a hydrologist who co-authored the USGS report, part of a four-year study of groundwater usage in the central coastal plain.

"The main problem at this point is the dropping of water levels, affecting the operation of pumps and the locations of wells," Winner said Wednesday. "The people of this area are concerned about managing this resource so they can avoid a serious problem some time down the road. And that's why they came to us."

The USGS began studying groundwater in an area centered around the cities of Kinston and Greenville in 1985, he said, after a consortium of coastal plain communities asked for help in managing their water supplies. The federal government and the communities are splitting the $500,000 cost of the study, which is to be completed in 1988.

Malcolm Green, general manager of the Greenville Utilities Commission, said today that Greenville's share of the cost — $10,000 — was paid more than a year ago.

He said others participating in the study include Ayden, Farmville, Kinston, La Grange, New Bern, Pinetops, Stantonsburg, Snow Hill, Greene County and the North Lenoir Water Corp.

"Other than Greenville, all of the other communities depend 100 percent on groundwater," Winner said. "It's fairly easy to manage a surface water reservoir, like Falls Lake (Raleigh's main water supply), because you can see it. The groundwater system is also a reservoir, but you can't see it."

The USGS study, co-authored by William L. Lyke, showed a steady increase in the water pumped from deep, water-bearing rocks called aquifers.

Since 1910, the number of water systems tapping the deep aquifers in the area has increased from one to

Groundwater Levels

Groundwater levels of the North Carolina plain around Kinston and Greenville have been lowered by over 100 feet since the turn of the century, according to a recent report by the U.S. Geographical Survey, Department of the Interior.

Total groundwater withdrawals from deep, water-bearing rocks called aquifers have increased from an average of about 120,000 gallons per day in 1910 to about 21.7 million gallons per day in 1980, according to the report.

The increase in groundwater withdrawal by both municipalities and industry has contributed to a lowering of water levels at a rate of nearly 5 feet per year in some places, said M.D. Winner Jr. and William L. Lyke, authors of the report.

Leaf Presentations

The Tobacco Growers Association of North Carolina will hold a series of presentations at the Southern Farm Show Feb. 6 at Dorton Arena on the state fairgrounds. The presentations will be held from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m.

F.A. "Buzz" Shackelford, a tobacco farmer from Hookerton, will present a slide presentation on how tobacco is marketed in the countries that are the United States' major competitors — Brazil, Zimbabwe, Malawi and Canada.

For more information, call Southern Shows Inc. at 800-532-0189.

Education Session

More than 400 business and marketing educators from the Carolinas and Virginia are expected to attend the fourth annual Atlantic Coast Business and Marketing Education Conference Friday and Saturday in Raleigh.

The conference for the professional development of educators is being directed by Drs. William H. Durham Jr. and H. Frances Daniels, professors of business, vocational and technical education at East Carolina University.

The conference will be held in the North Carolina Hilton. It is the second year that the event has been held in Raleigh instead of Greenville where it was inaugurated by the business, vocational and technical education department at ECU.

'John Doe' Identified

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Federal authorities believe that they have solved the puzzle of "John Doe," a man arrested in Alamance County last month on charges of possession of 145 unauthorized credit and bank cards.

Prosecutors, the U.S. magistrate, and even the man's attorney had no idea what the man's real name was — and Doe wasn't telling.

While he was in jail, Doe filed a request with the court asking if he could join his attorney as co-counsel in his defense, Paul A. Weinman, an assistant U.S. attorney, filed a response with the court, asking that Doe's request be denied.

In his response this week, Weinman cited the ruling in a Florida case — Richard T. Dorman vs. Louie L. Wainwright. The Dorman case, which was decided by the 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Atlanta, was similar to that of John Doe's.

Weinman says that John Doe and Richard T. Dorman are the same man, and fingerprint files have confirmed Weinman's suspicion.

Dorman was arrested Dec. 7 and charged under the name John Doe. A federal grand jury indicted him on the possession charge Dec. 29.

Dorman is being held without bond in the Alamance County Jail, authorities said.

Quarterly Meeting

Quarterly meeting will be held this weekend at Warren Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Saturday at 7 p.m. Eldress Mary Wallace of Gospel Outreach Church and the junior choir and ushers of Warren Chapel will hold Holy Communion.

Sunday school will be held Sunday at 10 a.m. Elder A. L. Miller, pastor, the Gospel Chorus and Ever Ready ushers will serve the 11 a.m. service. Dinner will be served at 1:45 p.m. Elder E.L. Garner and Friendship F.W.B. Church congregation will be in charge of the 3 p.m. service.

Wednesday Thefts

Three thefts were reported to Greenville police on Wednesday.

Officer E.M. Haddock said a checkbook was taken from a car parked in a lot at the intersection of Sixth and Evans streets in an incident reported at 8:30 a.m., while Officer M.T. Scheid said a purse containing $4 in cash was taken from Sheppard Memorial Library on Evans Street in an incident reported at 6:27 p.m.

According to Officer J.W. Isenhour, a bicycle was taken from the West Greenville Gymnasium at the intersection of Fourth and Nash streets in an incident reported at 8:12 p.m.

Four Arrests Made

Greenville police arrested four people Wednesday on theft charges in connection with three separate cases — one of them involving the theft of an estimated $22,000 worth of tires.

Detective S.B. Pass said Eddie Warren Ward, 40, of Route 5, Greenville, and Linwood Earl Horton, 42, of Ayden was arrested on charges of larceny by employee about 3 p.m. in connection with the theft of tires from Sutton's Service Center on Dickinson Avenue.

Pass said that over a period of more than a year, an estimated $22,000 worth of commercial truck tires have been taken from Sutton's.

Officer D.W. Nichols said Floyd Lee Daniels, 31, of 112 Greenfield Blvd. was charged with larceny in connection with the theft of two lamps from Bostic Sugg Furniture Co. on West 10th Street Tuesday, while Officer B.M. Highland said Jacki Elizabeth Jones, 18, of Durham was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of four packs of cigarettes from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard that was reported at 4:33 p.m.

Multiple Charges

Lavon Ruben Capucine Purvis, 16, of 203 Cadillac St. was arrested Tuesday by Greenville police on auto larceny and careless and reckless driving charges, as well as six counts of damage to personal property.

Sgt. T.V. Woolard said Coward was charged in connection with a Jan. 12 incident at Brown-Wood Pontiac-Cadillac on Greenville Boulevard in which a 1987 model car was taken, then driven into other 1987 model cars on the sales lot, causing an estimated $6,700 in damages.

Purvis was the second person charged in connection with the incident. Anthony Lee Coward, 19, of 1606B Hopkins Drive was arrested on similar charges last week.

LCC Students On List

The 1987 edition of "Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges" will include the names of 45 students from Lenoir Community College who have been selected as national outstanding campus leaders.

Philosophy Degree

Thomas Charles Chenier of Greenville recently received a doctor of philosophy degree from Baylor University in Waco, Texas.

Mother's Death Under Examination

The death of an 18-year-old Pinetops woman Tuesday at Pitt County Memorial Hospital is under investigation by regional medical examiner Stan Harris.

According to Harris, the death of Allison Johnston, who died Tuesday after giving birth by Caesarean section Jan. 22, is being investigated by his office to determine if she died because of a "therapeutic mistake" or whether her death was "the natural outcome of her illness."

Harris said that although Mrs. Johnston's death is connected to the childbirth, he is not prepared to determine the exact cause of death at this time. He said the possibility that incorrect medication was given is being considered, but said Mrs. Johnston was "also very sick, suffering from preeclampsia."

Preeclampsia is a severe high blood pressure which occurs in some women during pregnancy and is potentially life-threatening to both mother and child.

Mrs. Johnston's infant was reported in satisfactory condition today in the PCMH neonatal unit.

Jack Richardson, president of the hospital, declined comment on the case.

Financial Workshop

The guidance department of D.H. Conley High School is sponsoring a financial aid workshop Monday at 7 p.m. in the school library.

Seniors and their parents interested in applying for financial assistance will receive information at the session. A representative of East Carolina University's financial aid office will conduct the workshop.

Center Contribution

St. Gabriel and St. Peter's Catholic Youth Organization recently contributed $1,000 to the state mental retardation center in Kinston so that its residents could go on vacation. The money was raised by selling candy bars.

Finance Degree

William Stephenson of Greenville received his bachelor's degree in finance from Brigham Young University in late December.

ACSI Sessions

Greenville Christian Academy faculty members are attending the 1987 teachers convention sponsored by the Association of Christian Schools International in Williamsburg, Va., today and Friday.

Kindergarten teacher Sandra Gray will present a seminar on "Practical Discipline Techniques for Kindergarten," while sixth grade teacher Beverly Barts will present "Character is the Key." Gene S. Lewis, principal, will discuss "Character Training versus Character Conformity," a study of the contrasts between biblical character training and behavioral modification.

Lewis and Dr. David Lee Ralston, GCA president, will attend a board conference sponsored by the ACSI Saturday in Norfolk, Va.

Keynote speakers will be Dr. Paul F. Ienel, ACSI executive director, and Dr. Eugene Fadel, ACSI northwest director.

Proclamation Issued

Mayor Les Garner has proclaimed February as "Afro-American History Month" in Greenville.

"Black Americans have contributed immeasurably to the success of our nation from the days of early colonization to the present despite hardships which included bigotry, disenfranchisement, laws which prevented them from owning land and slavery itself," Garner said in the proclamation.

"Black Americans have excelled in every facet of life, including education, science, medicine, the arts, politics, and every profession," Garner said.

Duke Center Rebuilds Ape Skull Found After 32 Million Years

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — The first female skull of a 32-million-year-old ape widely regarded as man's oldest known ancestor has been reconstructed at the Duke University Primate Center while work continues on recovering a male skull found in Egypt.

The skulls of the primates known as Aegyptopithecus were found about 250 yards apart in the Fayum Depression about 60 miles southwest of Cairo, said Elwyn Simons, primate center director.

"We are calling the new skulls Adam and Eve," he said. "They are, after all, the oldest adult male and female fossils known to lie in the line of human ancestry."

The female skull was found during Simons' 1985 expedition and took more than a year to reconstruct. The male skull was found last fall in an expedition sponsored by the National Science Foundation and the Geological Survey of Egypt.

Casts made from the skulls reveal major details of the brain structure, indicating the cat-sized ape had a brain rivaling the complexity of that of some modern South American monkeys, Simons said.

Aegyptopithecus is the oldest known ape to possess unique skull structures such as eye sockets that were later common to monkeys, apes and humans, Simons said.

The new finds bring the total of Aegyptopithecus skulls to three. The first, that of a young male, was recovered from the Fayum in 1966. Simon said the three skulls complement each other.

"The young male skull has the snout and bottom more intact, but has lost a large part of the brain case on the top of the skull," he said. "This is an area that is well-preserved in both of the new skulls. The missing part in the young skull had made interpretation of the brain difficult."

Earlier studies of Aegyptopithecus teeth showed the primate was a tree-dwelling vegetarian that flourished in the tropical rain forests of northern Egypt during the Oligocene epoch.

The fact that males had well-developed, fang-like canine teeth compared to those of females suggests that the primates lived in large social groups probably dominated by males, Simons said.

Lobbyist

RALEIGH (AP) — Former state Sen. Wilma Woodard of Wake County will return to the General Assembly next month as a lobbyist for a Raleigh lawyer who represents business and industry.

Mrs. Woodard will work for Samuel H. Johnson. Although Johnson opposed some of Mrs. Woodard's votes as a legislator — including her support of a proposed ban on phosphate detergents — that won't pose problems, Mrs. Woodard and Johnson said Tuesday.

TWIN STUDY

The Genetics Program of the East Carolina University School of Medicine is preparing to participate in a nationwide study to determine whether all fraternal twins come from two eggs. Dr. Charles E. Boklage, associate professor and director of the program, said families with twins are needed to answer questions about their pregnancies and have blood samples taken. Both twins and both natural parents will be needed, and a brother or sister of the twins may be included. Families will be told whether their twins came from one egg or two. All information will be kept confidential. The questionnaire and all procedures have been approved by the ECU Human Subjects Research Committee and the National Institutes of Health. Any family with twins which would like to take part may call Dr. Boklage at 757-2301.

Shultz Says Kidnappers Have Strong Ties To Iran

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) — The groups responsible for the kidnapping of 11 foreigners — including three Americans — in the last two weeks in Beirut are linked to each other and have strong ties to Iran, Secretary of State George P. Shultz said today.

Shultz, in an interview today, also vehemently rejected a suggestion that the United States try winning the release of the captives by softening its determination to prosecute a suspected Lebanese terrorist whose arrest in West Germany appears to have sparked the latest wave of abductions.

Asked on a satellite news conference with reporters in Europe, Israel and Japan who was responsible for the recent Beirut kidnappings of three Americans and citizens of several other countries, Shultz said, "It is our basic information that with whatever names may emerge they are to a substantial degree linked together."

"And we also observe some very strong ties to Iran," he added.

At the White House on Wednesday, a senior administration official said that a small faction within the Hezbollah organization, operating in southern Lebanon, may be responsible for the latest round of kidnappings in Lebanon.

"There is a cell within the Hezbollah headed by a man named (Imad) Mugnyah which is relatively small that may well be the group that has done this," said the official, speaking on grounds he not be identified.

The Hezbollah, or Party of God, is a militant group of fundamentalist Shiite Moslems with ties to Iran. While the official provided no additional information on Mugnyah, he was named in published reports last year as the reputed organizer of the 1983 bombings that killed 300 American and French servicemen in Lebanon. Mugnyah is said to be the head of the "action group" of the Hezbollah.

Islamic Jihad, or Islamic Holy

War, a group believed linked to Hezbollah, has claimed responsibility for a number of kidnappings in the past.

The kidnappings have taken place since West German authorities arrested Mohammed Ali Hamadi, a Lebanese under indictment in the United States on charges of hijacking a Trans World Airways jetliner to Beirut in 1985.

In that incident, U.S. navy diver Robert Stethem was killed and 39 Americans held hostage for 17 days.

The West German government still has not acted on a U.S. request for Hamadi's extradition.

Asked today whether the United States would drop its demand for Hamadi's extradition if such a move could help win the release of the hostages, Shultz replied:

"Our efforts and request for extradition stands. I am certain it will continue to stand."

"If somebody is indicted and there is evidence of complicity in a dire crime, the hijacking of an airplane and the murder of one of its occupants and the virtual torture of others, in a civilized society we must follow through and punish such crimes," Shultz said.

"If we don't do that what happens to our civilization is to break into a kind of chaotic situation like what we see in Beirut right now. We don't want that. We have to make plain civilized standards, which means we have to maintain the rule of law. That means we have to prosecute people who violate the law."

On Wednesday, the Reagan administration declared Lebanon off-limits to Americans because of the threat of kidnappings.

Announcing the imposition of passport restrictions, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Wednesday: "The situation in Lebanon, in West Beirut in particular, is so chaotic that we do not believe that any American citizens can be considered safe from terrorist acts."

Violators could face up to five years in prison, he warned. The estimated 1,500 U.S. citizens in Lebanon will be given 30 days to leave before their U.S. passports become invalid.

The step — similar to a ban on travel to Libya — represents an acknowledgment that the United States is unable to protect U.S. citizens in Lebanon. It also may make U.S. military action against terrorists less risky by reducing the number of Americans who might be targeted for retaliation.

Eight Americans are in the hands of kidnappers. One of them, Associated Press correspondent Terry A. Anderson, has been held nearly two years.

"We are loathe to impede the travel of American citizens in any way," Redman said at the State Department, adding, however, that Americans cannot be considered safe in Lebanon.

Exceptions to the passport restrictions will be made for the immediate families of the eight American hostages. Journalists and others may also apply for special permission to go to Lebanon. Otherwise, U.S. passports will no longer be valid for travel in or through the country.

Redman said violators could face prison terms of up to five years and a $2,000 fine if convicted. But he acknowledged it was unlikely the U.S. citizens in Lebanon, most of whom are either dual citizens or married to Lebanese, would be prosecuted if they simply let their passports lapse.

Dr. M.T. Mehdi, president of the American Arab Relations Committee, criticized the action.

"The State Department's ban on travel to Lebanon is a violation of the First Amendment right of the citizens," said Mehdi, who is planning a trip to Lebanon to continue his efforts to free the hostages. The Americans who go to Lebanon represent "the best of America and should not be denied their right to contribute" just because of the wrong policies of the State Department, he said in New York.

Iranian Says Kidnappers Have 'Some Justification'

By CHARLES CAMPBELL
Associated Press Writer

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Parliament Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani said Iran is prepared to work for the release of American hostages in Lebanon if Washington shows its good will, but defended the hostage-takers as having some justification.

Rafsanjani, who gave a rare news conference Wednesday with foreign reporters, said Iran's main concern is for the United States to release $507 million in Iranian assets frozen by President Carter after the seizure of the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. The United States and Iran have been negotiating over the assets at a special tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands.

"The Americans must release our assets and when they give the orders for their release, we are prepared to help them," Rafsanjani told a news conference.

But the Iranian speaker also offered a justification for terrorism, saying people in Lebanon take hostages because they have no other way of exerting pressure, unlike Western industrial powers.

"They have to aim their attack at your airplanes, your embassies or officials," he said. "Therefore, do not be oppressive if you want terrorism to be ended."

Some Shiite Moslem groups holding Western hostages in Lebanon are believed to have close ties to Iran, but Iranian officials deny they have the power to order the captives freed.

The Parliament speaker, seen as his country's most powerful figure after revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, said Iran has told the United States and France they must stop being hostile to Iran if they want help.

"If you expect us to do something for you, you must do something to show you are not against us," he said.

He said he had no information on Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who has been in Beirut working to win freedom for Western hostages and has not been seen since Jan. 20. The Church of England said in London late Wednesday that it received word Waite was safe and continuing his mission.

"If we can do anything for him we shall do so," Rafsanjani said.

At the conference, he flourished a Bible he said was sent by President Reagan as a token of goodwill.

The title page of the leather-bound "Open Book Bible-Expanded Edition" bore Ronald Reagan's name and a handwritten New Testament verse:

"And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the Gentile by faith, preached the gospel beforehand to Abraham, saying, 'All the nations shall be blessed in you.' Galatians 3:8, Ronald Reagan, Oct. 3, 1986."

Abraham is regarded as the common ancestor of both the Arabs and the Jews and the great unifying figure of the Judeo-Christian and Moslem religions. Moslems know him as Ibrahim. Jews trace their ancestry through his son, Isaac, and Moslems through his oldest son, Ishmael.

In Washington, White House spokesman Larry Speakes today confirmed that Reagan signed the Bible. "It was a gesture to indicate that those who were there were truly representing the president and the president, too, was a man of God," Speakes said.

Hostages Threatened

20 when he left his Beirut hotel to negotiate with the Shiite Moslem group Islamic Jihad, believed to hold Anderson and American education Thomas Sutherland.

Concern for Waite's welfare had been building, especially after a Kuwaiti news agency report the kidnappers put Waite under house arrest after negotiations bogged down.

But in a statement from London, the Church of England said late Wednesday that it had been reassured about Waite's well-being by leaders of the Druse community in Beirut who spoke with representatives of the Shiite community.

"They have now informed the archbishop's office in London that Mr. Waite is continuing his discussions and will return on the completion of his mission," the church said.

Waite's wife, Frances, said today she is still "very concerned" about her husband. "I sincerely hope all is well with him," she said in a statement issued in London.

And Waite's mother-in-law, Joan Watters, said late Wednesday she remains very worried. "I will not be happy until I see Terry in the flesh," she said from home in Belfast, Northern Ireland.

The four college instructors were kidnapped by gunmen posing as Lebanese police. Wednesday's statement said they were "conspirators under the pretext of education."

That statement was also accompanied by a black-and-white picture of Polhill, an accounting lecturer from New York. In the photo he wore a white T-shirt and glasses and stared at the camera with a slight smile.

The language in the statement suggested that the group is made up of Shiite Moslem extremists loyal to Iran.

The statement accused the hostages of "using the facade of intrigue to carry out American intrigues at Beirut University College." It was also critical of Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Palestine Liberation Organization Chairman Yasser Arafat.

Abducted with Polhill were Alann Steen, 47, a native of Boston, a communications instructor; Jesse Turner, 39, a native of Boise, Idaho, a visiting professor of mathematics and computer science; and Mithileshwar Singh, 60, a visiting professor of finance. He is an Indian with resident alien status in the United States.

A photo of Singh with the same claim of responsibility was sent to the Beirut newspaper An-Nahar.

A Reagan administration official, speaking in Washington on condition of anonymity, said the recent spate of kidnappings may have been the work of a small group within Hezbollah, an organization of pro-Iranian Shiites believed to have ties to Islamic Jihad.

In addition to the eight Americans, six Frenchmen, two West Germans, two Britons, two Saudis, an Irishman, an Italian, a South Korean, an Indian and two as yet unidentified foreigners are missing in Lebanon.

Tweezers

NEW YORK (AP) — Scientists have used high-tech "tweezers" to build a pile of no more than 10 atoms on a crystal, an ability that they say may lead someday to faster computers and physical manipulation of molecules.

The atoms were moved by an electronic microscope that gives atom-by-atom images of a surface, the researchers report in Thursday's issue of the British journal Nature.

More Latitude

East Carolina University's long range planning commission has recommended that the school be reclassified as a research institution with an increase in the number of doctoral programs.

The recommendation is expected to be approved by the ECU Board of Trustees and then will be sent to C.D. Spangler, president of the University of North Carolina System.

If approved ECU would join N.C. State, UNC-Chapel Hill and UNC-Greensboro as research institutions. It would, however, be below the level of UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State, and on an equal level with UNC-Greensboro.

ECU is now classified as a comprehensive university and offers doctorates in the medical school only.

Ralph Kinsey, board chairman at ECU, said the school is asking to be reclassified at that level "so that we can be about discharging our mission." The reclassification would allow the offering of doctorates in academic areas.

ECU now offers doctorates in biochemistry, microbiology, anatomy, pharmacology and physiology. A doctorate in pathology is being developed.

The change in designation certainly seems logical as East Carolina develops its programs in the School of Medicine. It is already awarding doctorates. In addition the School of Medicine is heavily involved in research. There is also considerable research under way in academic areas.

The new designation would mean no radical changes for ECU. Indeed, it could not offer new degrees without prior approval by the UNC Board of Governors. Approval would not be forthcoming without demonstrated benefits to ECU and the state.

East Carolina University is at a plateau in its development. It will continue to develop and serve our state, but the university will need more latitude if it is to reach its full potential.

Premature Verdict

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration set a tentative target date for resuming shuttle flights in 1988. It is a target that may not be met, yet might be met. Possibilities (some now say probabilities) the shuttle will not meet the hoped-for flight date have come to the fore because testing of the redesigned booster is behind schedule.

"Fixes" for the main engines and brakes are needed and the engines probably will have to be test-fired with Discovery locked on its launch pad, we're told.

Those who are afraid of missing the initial flight date are also muttering doubts over the entire space shuttle concept. Their fears can be put into three words: too many problems.

That verdict is premature.

That opinion is linked to the whole shuttle story and not the disaster episode.

Remember? The shuttle began with an idea that carried a host of unknown factors. The wholly new concept was accompanied by problems that had not even been envisaged. One by one they were encountered and overcome.

Designers are today dealing with just one more in a long string of unanticipated complications. This one has to deal with a safety factor. It too will be resolved.

Space shuttle flights became so routine they were likened to riding a truck from point A to point B. Their periodic launches became so familiar that on occasion other news events took top headlines of the day.

It was almost too good to be true. No new machine we can recall enjoyed a flawless early application and the shuttle was no different. There were minor glitches galore on the launch pad and each in turn was resolved.

The disaster of January 28, 1986 was worsened by the death of seven people aboard Challenger. Still, this country lost more pilots testing untried aircraft for the Air Force than have been lost in the new field of space flight.

It would be an incredible admission of defeat to abandon the space shuttle so early in its life. Few people would buy that option.

The Republicans And The Conservatives

RALEIGH — The scene was very familiar. A Republican officeholder stood before the press in the crowded parlor of the GOP's stately Victorian headquarters and tried to discount press inquiries of a rift in the GOP.

At least twice during the past year, Jim Broyhill had stood at the same podium and told reporters that mainstream Republicans and those aligned with the National Congressional Club would unite once the GOP had a nominee in the 1986 U.S. Senate race.

"He may have been a little bit naive," Sen. Bill Reman, R-Iredell, one of Broyhill's most vocal supporters, said about Broyhill's hopes for unity. Now Republicans must ask if Gov. Jim Martin, the officeholder most recently assuring unity, is also being "a bit naive."

At GOP headquarters, Martin told reporters that the club was merely exercising its right to field a candidate for part chairman. He and Jack Hawke, his nominee for party chairman, said they fully expected an honest non-acrimonious campaign for the chairman's post, one which would not leave the party divided after the GOP convention next spring.

"Someday, we won't have a Republican Party in North Carolina, they'll call it the Conservative Party," one Raleigh Republican said privately.

Other Martin allies fear that the fight won't be honorable. They say the club will wage a bitter, hard-hitting campaign that leaves scars.

"Someday, we won't have a Republican Party in North Carolina, they'll call it the Conservative Party," one Raleigh Republican said privately. She said the club won't support Hawke because it can't control him.

Redman was equally negative. The club "is just an outside organization that wants to take complete control" of the party, he said.

Former Sen. Ken Harris, R-Mecklenburg, now Martin's insurance adviser, said the club "is just picking a fight" in putting forth a candidate.

If there is a fight, can the party recover from it? Dave Flaherty, now chairman of the Employment Security Commission, remembers the bitterness involved in his fight for reelection as party chairman in 1983. "We all pulled back together and won big in 1984," Reman agrees saying the stakes will be so high in 1988 that the warring factions will pull back together. Even Carter Wrenn, executive director of the club, says he doesn't expect a "bloodletting" in this race. Party unity for 1988 is very possible, he said.

But there are indications that the fight will be ugly, and that could mean trouble for the GOP in 1988.

This fight can only add to a "base of bitterness" that already exists in the GOP, one Republican noted. Some in the Martin wing blame Broyhill's defeat on the hard-hitting campaign waged against him by the club in the GOP primary, and on the club's refusal to rally to Broyhill's side after the primary. A highly reliable Democratic source recently showed this reporter evidence that at least some club member — she called them "renegades" — were providing Democrats with anti-Broyhill material during the general election campaign.

Even on the day that Martin, Hawke and Wrenn denied that the fight would get ugly, there was name-calling from both sides. Hawke noted that he was a Republican 23 years ago when most of the clubbers were still "registered Democrat." Wrenn persisted in calling the Martin wing of the party the "country club Republicans," a disparaging title which Republicans like Redman says is "very destructive to the Republican Party."

Then there are the personalities involved. Hawke is a real street-fighter who'll have trouble biting his tongue if Wrenn and the club start chopping him up.

The Environmental Crisis Of The 1990s

WASHINGTON — The Government Accounting Office (GAO) releases so many reports each week that it's virtually impossible to keep up with them. But one study issued last week deserves comment. The GAO accused the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) of failing to identify and regulate many hazardous wastes, thereby contaminating groundwater and threatening human health.

In the words of Rep. James Florio (D-N.J.): "The Environmental Protection Agency has spent the last six years actively ignoring congressional requirements to control hazardous wastes."

To some skeptics, the news was business as usual. The problem is that the agency's intransigence has gotten to the point that harmful exposure of the citizenry to hazardous chemicals in the air, water, ground and food products cannot be reversed.

Of course, hazardous waste is not the only area where the EPA has dropped the ball. Take, for instance, radon, a naturally-occurring radioactive gas which seeps out of mineral deposits and the soil on which many homes are built. Federal health officials estimate it is responsible for between 5,000 and 30,000 lung-cancer deaths in America each year. The EPA goes so far as to speculate that 4 million to 12 million households — roughly 12 percent of the total — have radon levels above their recommended "action level" of 4 picocuries (pci) per liter of air.

What's disheartening about this situation is that Uncle Sam knew about the radon threat more than a decade ago. So did a dozen other nations, including England, West Germany, France and Denmark. But these countries have conducted national surveys and actively addressed the problem.

In 1976, for instance, the Canadian government ran a nationwide survey of 14,000 homes in 18 cities and determined that 10 percent of all Canadian homes had radon in excess of the EPA action level.

Similarly, Sweden, which estimates that 40 percent of all lung cancers there are related to excessive radon exposure, issued new building codes a decade ago and set up a low-interest loan program to help homeowners pay to reduce radon in existing homes with high exposure levels.

Meanwhile, the United States government has issued no radon warnings. It wasn't until six months ago that the EPA, and the U.S. Centers for Disease Control (CDC) in Atlanta, first printed citizen guides to radon.

Dr. Matthew Zack of the CDC recently stated that radon risks were even greater than those from toxic chemicals — such as dioxin — because radon gas is more concentrated and widespread throughout the country.

Strength For Today

"God gave us memory," said Sir James Barrie, "so that we might have roses in December."

But memory brings roses in December only when we have been at pains to cultivate roses at an earlier season of the year. December memories are anything but roses for some people. Men and women who have wrecked their homes with selfishness have a December memory, but not of roses. Those who have nursed grudges for years come to a December that is cold, bleak and windswept.

But what Sir James meant is that when life is lived with courage and love, days that might be bleak and barren turn out to be days of roses and delight. We shall gather in December what we tended in June. And in the green spring and the sunny days of summer we must plan and cultivate in such a way that we shall know the joys of roses in December.

No-Win Fairness Doctrine

— Art Buchwald —

The new foreign policy of the United States is to feed disinformation to both countries engaged in a war so that neither one can win. It's called the "No-Win Good Neighbor Fairness Doctrine."

The need for such a policy came to light when the Iraqis and Iranians started shooting at each other six years ago and the U.S. decided it would be a disaster if one of them won.

A special working group called "Double Dealer" was set up in a safe house on North Poindexter Street to see it did not happen.

Luke Booney, recently retired from the CIA, the National Security Council, Southern Airways, Singlaub's Raiders and the Iranian-American Friendship Society, is in charge of Double Dealer. He said the program is one of the most complicated projects the U.S. has ever been involved with.

Booney told me, "It's one thing to see that one side defeats another in war. It's much more difficult to make sure both lose."

I said, "No one said being evenhanded in war was a picnic."

"The only thing that keeps us going is that we hate the people running Iran — and we can't stomach those running Iraq."

"Recently you gave Iran arms to beat up on Iraq. Aren't you tilting towards the Ayatollah?"

"No, because at the same time we gave Iraq top secret satellite photos showing where the Iranian arms were. This is a perfect example of double dealing. It's called playing both sides against the Middle East. The Iraqis got arms to kill Iraqis, the Iraqis received intelligence photos to destroy the Iraqis, and we got money for the Contras."

"What else does Double Dealer do to keep the war stalemated?"

"We provide misinformation to both sides. Recently Iraq was expecting an attack on its border by the Iraqis. We misinformed the Iraqis where the Iraqis were going to come. The Iraqis prepared their defense in one place and the Iraqis attacked in another."

"How did you guarantee that the Iraqis wouldn't gain the upper hand?"

"We sold them faulty arms so when they attacked their missiles would fail. Because of our reliable disinformation no one got anywhere. Excuse me, I have to send a telex to Teheran informing them that Baghdad is going to overrun Qof (Qom)."

"That's not true, is it?" I asked

"Of course not, but it might slow down the fighting in Basra. We don't want the Iraqis to win in Basra because it will only encourage them to keep fighting. The Fairness Doctrine requires that both sides get so exhausted they ask us to be the peacemakers."

"Is this the first war the U.S. ever got involved with in which we didn't want anyone to win?"

"There have been others, but this is the first one which we've taken such an active role. The reason why is because we have both Iran and Iraq's best interests at heart."

"I read the other day that Iraq claims the disinformation you gave them produced a disastrous defeat for them at the Iraqi seaport of Fao. They're pretty darned mad about it."

"They have nothing to be upset about. Double Dealers are scrupulous about seeing everyone gets a fair shake."

"How can they be sure they're getting equal amounts of disinformation?"

Booney said, "They just have to trust us."

Reagan's Attempts To Appease Congress Will Fall Short

WASHINGTON — President Reagan gave Congress some of what it wanted Tuesday night. But it will not be enough.

To meet demands from GOP leaders, Reagan showed some regret for his bungled overture to Iran. "It did not work, and for that I assume full responsibility," he said. "We did not achieve what we wished, and serious mistakes were made in trying to do so."

For the Democrats, he offered some pointed camaraderie. It was aimed at the new Speaker, Rep. Jim Wright of Texas, who has been complaining that Reagan lacks the presidential deference to Congress that Dwight D. Eisenhower showed when Rep. Sam Rayburn of Texas became speaker 32 years ago.

Reagan, who had clearly gotten wind of Wright's grumbling, used the same words Ike did to Mr. Sam. "We shall have much to do together; I am sure that we shall get it done — and, that we shall do it in harmony and good will."

But the two gestures will not halt congressional pursuit of details about the Iran deal that Reagan continued to withhold Tuesday night even though his speech was designed in part to get the scandal behind him and rebuild White House credibility.

To insiders, the president's comment to Wright was more of a sharp needle than a warm hand to a speaker who openly dislikes the Reagan style as well as his conservative politics.

Both Wright and Senate Majority leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., are preparing to extend the growing scandal surrounding Reagan's arms sales to Iran far beyond the five paragraphs the president devoted to it in his State of the Union message. Two special congressional investigating panels will be pursuing details of what Byrd called a "breach of trust," assuring the issue will be in the public eye for months to come.

"We're going to help him," said Byrd, noting Reagan's promise to get to the bottom of the scandal. Both Byrd and Wright were undeterred by the president's warning that a partisan debate about White House decisions could jeopardize U.S. foreign policy.

"Much is at stake here, and the nation and the world are watching — to see if we go forward together in the national interest or if we let partisanship weaken us," Reagan said.

But that ploy is likely to prove ineffective. In secretly supplying the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's war machine, Reagan has disabled American foreign policy. In response to his attempt to free U.S. hostages held by Iranian-backed terrorists in Lebanon — "It was not wrong" — the terrorists have increased their hoard of helpless U.S. citizens.

Although intended to win applause, Reagan's reiterated vow "never to yield to terrorist blackmail" was a laugh line for his critics. But it produced neither applause nor laughter, only a stony silence.

As Byrd noted, Americans are still in the hands of the terrorists. "It raises real doubts about competence," Byrd said of the Iran affair.

Martin Budget Stresses Public Education

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says his $19.6 billion state budget proposal for fiscal 1987-89 meets the legislative and public sentiment that education should be the state's first priority.

Martin Wednesday told members of the Advisory Budget Commission, which includes some of the Legislature's most influential Democrats, his budget puts "the kind of emphasis on public education that you want."

"I believe there has been a general recognition in the General Assembly and in the public at large ... that our public schools are an area where we've got to do more," Martin said.

His proposed budget would give teachers and state employees annual 4.5 percent pay raises, set in motion statewide implementation of the Career Ladder Plan and seeks a $357 million increase in funding under the Basic Education Program. The BEP funding includes money to hire new teachers and other personnel, purchase textbooks and expand remedial summer school.

In the first budget prepared completely by the Republican administration, Martin also calls for spending increases to ease prison crowding, expand anti-drug abuse programs, implement his "blueprint" for economic development, repair and construct state buildings, and hire 100 new state Highway Patrol troopers.

But he requests a cut in the state fund for poor women's abortions from $924,500 per year to $200,000. The reduction would be coupled with stricter eligibility criteria under which the state would pay only for abortions resulting from rape or incest or needed to save a woman's life.

The proposed budget, including the general and highway funds plus anticipated federal allocations and receipts, is $9.59 billion in 1987-88 and $10 billion in 1988-89. The budget for the current fiscal year totals $8.75 billion.

Martin's plan calls for no major tax increase and is based on the assumption that state revenues will rise by 16.6 percent over the biennium, reflecting mild economic growth.

"This is the kind of budget that deals with the needs of the state within the available revenues," Martin told the commission.

The ABC balked at Martin's request for a quick endorsement of his package, voting instead to study it and meet again Feb. 6 — three days before the 1987 General Assembly convenes.

Martin said he hoped the ABC would give his budget at least conditional approval, even though the group is predominantly Democratic.

But Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said Martin should simply present the package to the Legislature without seeking ABC backing, since the commission's role in developing the budget was greatly reduced from past years.

Martin's call for expanding the Career Ladder Plan promises to be controversial. The plan, designed to increase the pay of deserving teachers, is being tried on a pilot basis in 16 school systems.

Under Martin's budget, the 16 pilots would be continued and 12 more would be established in 1987-88 at a cost of $31.5 million. The next year, Martin recommends spending $64 million to implement the program across the state.

While acknowledging that the program has gotten "mixed reviews" from participating teachers, he said it was the best way to "strengthen the single most important part of our school system ... the classroom teachers."

Martin, a critic of the Basic Education Program when the Legislature enacted it in 1985, said his budget would keep funding of the eight-year, $800 million plan on schedule.

The only major deviation he is seeking, he said, is a one-year delay in expansion of remedial summer school, which would be done in 1988-89 instead of next year, saving $32.8 million in 1987-88.

Martin's other major education initiative is using state bonds to create a pool from which local governments could borrow for school construction. He said he probably would request authorization of $1 billion to $2 billion worth of bonds.

Other highlights of the governor's budget proposal include:

— $36.9 million for enrollment changes and strengthened undergraduate instruction in liberal arts programs at University of North Carolina schools.

— $26.4 million to improve programs in the 58-campus community college system.

— $37.7 million to reduce prison crowding, including reducing caseloads for probation officers, establishment of a community punishment pilot program, and contracting with private firms to build and operate two prisons.

Additionally, the budget seeks an $17.5 million emergency appropriation for construction of 32 "modular" prison units, each housing 50 inmates, and for other construction projects that have received legislative approval.

— $5.7 million to enact the governor's economic blueprint, including increasing efforts to expand markets for North Carolina goods and assistance to traditional industry.

— Adjusting the state tax code to comply with changes made in the federal tax code last year. Martin said he expected that to produce a windfall of about $25 million.

— $338.9 million for capital projects such as construction and renovation of state buildings, including $31.5 million for development of the state government complex in Raleigh.

Martin also recommends issuing bonds to fund construction of a Judicial Center and a new building to house the Department of Revenue, plus development of the state's ports.

— $65.6 million for programs to promote energy conservation and help the poor pay their heating bills. The money is North Carolina's share of funds that several oil companies, including Exxon and Amoco II, were ordered to give states for exceeding federal price controls in the 1970s.

Democrats Approve Concept Of Martin's Budget Proposal

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Democratic legislative leaders on the Advisory Budget Commission appeared unlikely to endorse the two-year budget announced by Republican Gov. Jim Martin, but many approved it in concept.

While Martin asked for an ABC endorsement of the $19.6 billion spending proposal, House Appropriations Chairman Rep. Billy Watkins, D-Granville, said, "I have my doubts he'll get it."

"How you going to endorse all that when you don't know what's in it," Watkins said Wednesday. "It used to be the Advisory Budget Commission goes over it line by line and you'd know everything that's in it."

"Basically, I think it sounds good, but I reserve the right of not saying I endorse it wholeheartedly until I digest it," said Sen. Harold Hardison, D-Lenoir.

In many cases, Democrats took credit for initiatives in Martin's budget, especially increased funding for education.

"There's some good things here," said Senate Majority Leader Ken Royall, D-Durham. "I'm happy he's come along with us on the Basic Education Plan."

In Martin's first two years, his budget proposals competed with those of outgoing Gov. Jim Hunt. Many of Hunt's education plans were cut back by Martin to pave the way for a tax cut. The General Assembly finally approved a smaller tax cut and a larger education spending package.

On Wednesday, Martin recommended continuing the Basic Education Plan approximately as it was set up by the General Assembly, but proposed postponing spending for remedial summer school until 1988-89 and instituting a statewide career ladder in 1988-89.

"The remedial program has been postponed and postponed," said Royall. "They're the ones we're most concerned about right now."

But Watkins said the change in career ladder was "not that drastic" and praised Martin's progress as a governor.

"Two years ago, it (the Martin budget) showed the governor just was not in tune with state government," he said. "This year shows he's learned a lot about state government and he's in tune with state government. It must be, because he's adopted a lot of our proposals."

Royall, who has been active in legislative commissions on prison construction and helping local governments meet construction needs, said the new budget did not go far enough in those areas.

"I think we were looking for around $60 million in prisons and he recommended $38 million," Royall said. "That's another thing we'd like to work out."

Royall said Martin's proposal to sell bonds so local governments can build schools doesn't go far enough to address local needs for roads, sewers and other economic building blocks.

"To me, on the infrastructure needs of our state, it's much greater than just the school buildings," he said, adding that funding for water and sewer needs was reduced from $120 million favored by legislative committees to $80 million in the budget.

Watkins assailed the bond proposal, saying, "He's just giving the counties a credit card."

"It would let counties borrow against their present tax income over and above the vote of the people," Watkins said.

A proposed 4.5 percent pay raise for state employees drew mixed reviews.

Watkins suggested it be increased to 4.8 percent — roughly the raise an employee receives when he goes up a step on the government pay scale. But Butch Gunnells, director of the State Employees Association of North Carolina, said state workers seeking a 10 percent raise would be in a double bind because health insurance premiums have not kept pace with medical bills.

"There has been no increase in premiums in two years, while health costs have gone up 8 percent each year," Gunnells said. "That's $25 million a year, and we're afraid they'll say, 'Fine, we'll take it out of your raise.'"

State workers are becoming increasingly sensitive to the attention being paid to teachers, Gunnells added.

"I think the equity issue is as important to our members as the raise," he said. "I think the wording of our resolution (seeking a raise) was 10 percent across the board or the equivalent to public school teachers."

Justice Expresses Caution

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — The judicial system should be wary of efforts to undermine legal rights, including a recent challenge of a rule requiring law officers to advise suspects of rights before questioning, said North Carolina's Chief Justice James Exum.

"Courts must not bend under pressure to deviate from constitutional rights and freedoms for the sake of expediency," Exum said at Fort Bragg. "I think judges should be careful of using short term solutions. Judges have always got to look at the long term consequences."

U.S. Attorney General Ed Meese recently proposed finding an appropriate court case to challenge the Miranda ruling, which requires law enforcement officers to advise suspects of their rights before questioning.

Exum said the Constitution was written by men who were alert to the evils of tyranny.

"The real genius of the final document with its addition of the Bill of Rights ... is the way it delicately balances governmental power and order on one hand, and personal freedom and individual rights on the other," he said. "Without individual rights, there are no protections against abusive governmental encroachment upon freedom. And without freedom, individual members of society cannot grow to their fullest potentials and make their fullest possible contribution to the betterment of the whole."

State Says Food Orders Abandoned After Budget Cuts

By The Associated Press

North Carolina has canceled its orders for surplus cheese and other agricultural products from the federal government, and will probably cease distributing the food to 188,000 state residents after February, state officials say.

The Temporary Emergency Food Assistance Program is in jeopardy because an order by the Reagan administration reduces administrative program funding by 29 percent from January to March, said Bill Ray, director of the food distribution program for the state Department of Agriculture.

The executive order eliminates administrative funds beginning April 1, Ray said Wednesday.

The program provides butter, dried milk, cheese, rice, flour, honey and cornmeal to qualified needy families.

Ray said North Carolina received $1.27 million in administrative funds during fiscal 1986. The money helped provide free food to an average 187,986 people in the state per month, or about 71,360 households per month.

"What it means in reality is we have cancelled all (food) orders for the program effective Feb. 1 due to the fact that we are required to order 90 days in advance," Ray said.

North Carolina has only enough money and enough food in warehouses to distribute the commodities through February, he said.

"I am perplexed that they pick on this program simply because the program performs all of the functions that were intended by Congress," Ray said.

He said most people participating in the program use the free commodities to supplement federal food stamps.

The state plans to lay off eight employees in the distribution program on Feb. 2, he said.

The funding elimination, an apparent attempt to help balance the federal budget, has enflamed state and local officials, including state Agriculture Commissioner Jim Graham.

"People on TEFAP depend on us for the lifeline these commodities provide," Graham said in a recent news release. "We will not improve the deficit on the backs of the poor, the elderly and children. Short-term savings by elimination of this program will mean long-term costs through health and learning problems resulting from poor nutrition."

"Children, infants, elderly people, handicapped people and the traditional poor people are served by this program," Graham said. "Since food stamps often do not supply sufficient food to take a family through a month, TEFAP can often mean the difference between eating and not eating for many of these folks."

More than half of home viewers using VCR units to tape record TV shows remove the commercials, according to A.C. Nielsen Co.

CP&L Earnings

RALEIGH (AP) — Carolina Power & Light Co. has reported its earnings increased 7.9 percent in 1986.

Company officials said Wednesday net income grew $26.3 million to $357.8 million on revenues of $2 billion. Earnings for the year were $3.96 per share, up from $3.86 per share in 1985. Net income in 1985 was $331.4 million on revenues of $1.9 billion.

Edward G. Lilly Jr., CP&L's executive vice president and chief financial officer, attributed the improved earnings to higher sales, better performance by the company's nuclear plants and lower interest rates.

The portion of electricity generated by CP&L's nuclear plants increased from 33 percent in 1985 to 35 percent in 1986.

For the fourth quarter ended Dec. 31, the company's net income grew $1 million from $72.7 million to $73.7 million. Revenues for the period increased from $461.9 million in 1985 to $483.2 million in 1986.

Earnings in the fourth quarter were 80 cents per share, compared with 79 cents a year earlier.

Trooper Attacked

FAISON, N.C. (AP) — Authorities are searching for three men who attacked and beat a North Carolina highway patrol trooper in Duplin County.

Trooper T.A. Sinclair had stopped a motorist for speeding about 6:15 p.m. Tuesday near Faison when the driver jumped out of the car and ran, said Lt. Steven Goodson of the highway patrol office in Fayetteville.

When Sinclair caught the driver, two other men in the car attacked the trooper and the three fled in the car, a black Monte Carlo, Goodson said.

No weapons were used in the attack, Goodson said.

Sinclair was treated for minor injuries at Duplin General Hospital in Kenansville and released, Goodson said.

Contract Quotas

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — City aldermen aren't likely to get the authority they want to set quotas for contracts with blacks and women, several Forsyth County legislators have said.

The Board of Aldermen briefed legislators this week on the bills that the city of Winston-Salem wants passed in the General Assembly this year. Wednesday, the legislators said that they are divided on the issue of quotas.

The aldermen want a bill, similar to one passed for the city of Durham, that allows quotas on the share of city business that goes to blacks and women. The main focus in Forsyth County has been on city building contracts, where a white man is the general contractor, and companies owned by blacks or women subcontract for a portion of the work.

Educator Charged

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — An educator who resigned after an investigation of $19,000 missing from fund-raising activities at Douglas Byrd Junior High School has been charged with illegally taking $800 in PTA funds, police said.

Joe Alsberry, 36, was charged for obtaining property by false pretenses, said Cumberland County Sheriff's Department spokesman Harold Little.

Alsberry, who coached football and taught health and physical education at Byrd, was released on an unsecured bond. At a first-appearance hearing in Cumberland County District Court Wednesday a probable cause hearing was set for Feb. 18.

Libel Suit

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The New York Daily News has settled a libel suit filed by a Chapel Hill man by paying him an undisclosed cash sum and publishing a "clarification" of the 1976 story that prompted the suit.

Jerry Bruno, 60, was director of the New York State Lottery from April to December 1975. He filed suit in April 1976 accusing the Daily News of libeling him in an article that said a lottery game called Colossus had been mismanaged and prize money had been withheld.

The settlement was reached Jan. 14 as the case was about to go to trial before a New York Supreme Court jury in Albany. The terms of the settlement forbade either side to disclose how much money the Daily News had paid Bruno, a court official said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

Backfire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford's attempt to placate some partisans of Piedmont Airlines in the North Carolina-London air wars has backfired because of an error in a form letter.

Two reservations agents with Piedmont who had urged Sanford to back the airline's plan to fly between Charlotte and London were peeved when Sanford's written reply thanked them "for your letter of support of Raleigh-Durham as a gateway to London."

Sanford has stayed neutral, but his letter ran afoul of the Piedmont workers.

Tom Lawton, Sanford's press secretary, estimated that Sanford has received between 4,000 and 5,000 letters on the London flight proposals, the majority in favor of Raleigh-Durham. The mistake, he said, was caused by a mix-up in form letters, one geared to Raleigh-Durham backers and the other geared to Charlotte backers.

Adult Status

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — A 15-year-old juvenile will be tried as an adult in the December bludgeoning death of an 84-year-old Marshville woman, a Union County District Court judge has ordered.

Judge Kenneth Honeycutt ordered Herman Lee Young of Monroe held in the Gaston Detention Center in Dallas under $50,000 bond.

Forsythe Group Endorses Merger

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Guilford County Merger Task Force has resoundingly endorsed consolidating Greensboro, High Point and the county schools into one system, but stopped short of asking for legislation requiring such a move.

Overriding the wishes of Guilford school officials, the 41-member task force recommended in a 31-7 vote Wednesday that the Board of Commissioners call on the three school boards to come up with a plan by Sept. 30 to solve problems caused by racial imbalances, declining enrollments and other trends.

The resolution stated that if one of the three boards refuses to participate, the other two would be free to develop a plan for all three systems without it.

The resolution does not require merger, but it recommends that the county commissioners seek special legislation requiring consolidation by July 1, 1990, if the school boards fail to agree on how to solve the problems.

Commissioners created the task force to study a $120,000 report by the Research Triangle Institute, which found that merger would help school officials solve some major problems.

The report said those problems include declining enrollments, racial imbalances, a shift in tax wealth from the cities to the rural areas, inefficient use of school buildings and lack of a unified commitment to education.

State Will Have First Controller

Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said today he had appointed Farris W. Womack as North Carolina's first state controller.

Womack, who will retain his position as vice chancellor for business and finance at the University at North Carolina at Chapel Hill, will be the state's chief financial officer. He will be responsible for developing a new accounting system for state agencies, Martin said in a news conference.

ernor, state auditor, treasurer and the state budget office.

Womack, 52, who formerly served as chief financial officer for Arkansas, said he would spend 12 to 18 months setting up the controller's office. He then will return to UNC-CH full time.

While serving as controller, Womack will spend about 80 percent of his time at that job, and the rest at UNC-CH.

Martin and State Auditor Ed Renfrow said the new post was needed to improve management of state finances and to centralize the state's financial management.

"It makes good sense for the business of the state," Martin said.

Want to get involved? Want a say in the future of your city? If so, sign up with the city's Talent Bank.

Initiated several years ago, the Talent Bank provides city council members with immediate access to persons who have indicated a desire to serve on one of the city's 14 boards and commissions when a vacancy arises.

State May Seek Receipts For Travel Pay

RALEIGH (AP) — The General Assembly will be asked to adopt new travel reimbursement laws that would require state employees to present hotel or motel receipts before they can collect for lodging expenses, state officials say.

"That's the way anybody does it," State Budget Officer C.C. Cameron said Wednesday. "I can't believe that we've done it differently."

Under present state regulations, employees traveling in North Carolina are paid $52 a day for food and lodging, regardless of the actual cost. If they spend the night with family, friends or in complimentary motel rooms, they can still collect the reimbursement.

The proposal to require receipts was sparked by the disclosure last September that Craig Phillips, state superintendent of public instruction, stayed 10 nights in a free hotel room in Asheville and then collected $441 from the state for lodging.

Phillips' room and other rooms used by subordinates were made available free of charge by hotels that benefited from meetings sponsored by the State Department of Public Instruction. Phillips repaid the state, but said he and nine subordinates did not violate state policy.

State Auditor Ed Renfrow, in a report released Wednesday, said state law and regulations governing travel allowances do not provide any guidance on complimentary rooms.

But the report said, "We believe that it is inappropriate for the benefits resulting from state business to accrue to individuals."

The report recommended the practice be stopped and also suggested a reimbursement system for lodging up to a maximum set by the General Assembly.

"We're ahead of the report," Cameron said. He said language had been included in the appropriations bill to stop payments for complimentary rooms and keep employees from collecting reimbursements when they stay with family or friends.

The General Assembly switched from a reimbursement system to a flat rate in 1977, said Robert Brinson, chief of management in the State Budget Office. He said he thought the law had been changed because the State Auditor's Office believed it would be easier to audit and would give employees an incentive to cut costs.

Renfrow said 13 state agencies, including N.C. State University and the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, had admitted paying lodging expenses to employees who stayed in complimentary rooms.

State Health Plan Trustees Eye Another Round Of Possible Cuts

RALEIGH (AP) — With the state health plan for teachers and state employees facing as much as a $90 million deficit, the plan's board of trustees has submitted a package of benefit cuts that could be imposed if the state finds no new money for the program.

But in a letter to state Insurance Commissioner Jim Long, the trustees warned Wednesday that repeated changes in benefits have caused "a serious erosion in confidence" in the plan and that reducing benefits should be a last resort.

If the reductions in benefits were implemented, they would shift a larger burden of the health plan's cost from the state to the employees. The first package of cuts, totaling $17 million, include raising the $150 deductible by $50, increasing the employees share of their health care from 10 percent to 20 percent and, in some cases, increasing the employee's share of the hospital room fee.

For example, the out-of-pocket costs for an employee's first trip to a hospital would double, from $25 to $1,030, the trustees said.

"Yearly, non-debated, last-minute changes to the health plan benefits over the last several years have caused a serious erosion in confidence among participants," the trustees said in their letter to Long.

"Many members remember the years when increases in benefits were granted in lieu of salary increases and therefore feel very strongly that any reduction in benefits is in fact, for active members, a reduction in compensation."

The trustee's recommendations were based on a report by a task force which studied the plan's financial status and identified benefit cuts that would be least objectionable if there is no additional revenue from premiums.

The state pays the premium for its employees, but the workers must pay for dependents' coverage. The plan provides health insurance for 212,000 state employees, 169,000 dependents and 53,000 retirees.

Long said the plan is estimated to have a shortfall of $80 million to $90 million by June 30, 1988. About $35 million of the estimated shortfall is blamed on increases in medical costs and an additional $45 million to $55 million in reserves would be needed to pay any future claims.

"I am always in favor of the state continuing to fully fund the program," Long said. "But being realistic about it, you have got to look at a fallback position."

Lynn E. Gunn, acting chairman of the trustee board, said the trustees were not recommending the benefit cuts, but were attempting to list priorities if they had to be made.

"The best case scenario would be if the projections of the deficit were overly conservative and there will be a significantly small enough deficit when we get down to the deadline in May that the legislature would be able to come up with enough money to cover the deficit through premium increases and we wouldn't have to reduce benefits at all," Ms. Gunn said.

The report was presented to Long, but it will be up to state lawmakers preparing next year's budget to make the final decision on whether to increase premiums or cut benefits.

Woman Recovers Her Land

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A Charlotte real estate man has agreed to repay and return property to a woman who claimed he tricked her into signing over her home to him.

Dorothy Robinson of Lilesville told an Anson County court that she was behind on mortgage payments in June 1984 and thought she was signing a second mortgage on her $38,000 house. But when the house burned five months later, she says she learned the document Bobby Jack Pressley had her sign was the deed.

Services Across Nation Honor Memory Of Challenger Astronauts

By The Associated Press
 Schoolchildren fired rockets, balloons were sent aloft and monuments were dedicated as the nation set aside time to remember the seven Challenger astronauts on the anniversary of their death.
 Seven chimes rang at Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., which is in charge of developing the propulsion systems for the nation's space efforts. The accident "is a black eye you never get over," said Judson Lovingood, associate director for propulsion.
 Thousands of workers at the nine other National Aeronautics and Space Administration centers on Wednesday also observed 73 seconds of silence, the length of Challenger's final flight, at 11:38 a.m., the time the shuttle roared off an icicle-draped launch pad at Cape Canaveral.

 Killed in the space shuttle accident were Cmdr. Dick Scobee, Pilot Michael Smith, schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe and crew members Judy Resnik, Ronald McNair, Ellison Onizuka and Greg Jarvis.
 President Reagan, in taped remarks played at NASA centers, said Mrs. McAuliffe and her fellow astronauts taught a "lesson of courage, spirit and love to America's children, and now it is for all of us to learn the lesson from them."

 Seven students released seven silver balloons at Framingham (Mass.) State College, where Mrs. McAuliffe earned her undergraduate degree in 1970.
 Carolla Haglund, a former instructor of Mrs. McAuliffe's, said, "She did not want that jaunt for personal satisfaction. Throughout those days, weeks and months of training, she kept putting forth the idea of the ultimate field trip, a way to help others learn along with her."
 Also at the ceremony was Mrs. McAuliffe's brother, Chris Corrigan, who said it was time to end such observances. "This is all right," Corrigan said, but "enough is enough."
 Fourth-graders at Hughes Elementary School in West Seattle, Wash., launched 30-inch-long model rockets. "My dream is that I hope they have a safe trip up and a safe trip back," said 9-year-old Derrick Hall, 9.
 Stephanie Smith, a seventh-grader at Rockford, Ill., summed up comments of many schoolchildren in saying: "I imagine some day I will tell my children about Christa McAuliffe and the day she died, just like my parents tell us what they were doing the day John F. Kennedy died."
 Scobee's former school in Auburn, Wash., renamed Dick Scobee Elementary, held a memorial in which pupils read poems and short stories and sang songs dedicated to Scobee.
 Seven balloons were released at a private ceremony at Concord (N.H.) High School, where Mrs. McAuliffe taught social science.
 A space agency official presented New Hampshire a portrait of Mrs. McAuliffe done while she was training at Johnson Space Center in Houston.

Brown, director of the NASA Teacher in Space Program.
 A life-size statue of Mrs. McAuliffe, made with pennies donated by West Virginia schoolchildren, was dedicated at Charleston, W.Va.
 Sculptor Bill Hopen melted the children's pennies into the artwork "so they can look at the statue and think, 'Maybe the pennies I gave are in there.'"
 About 90 people attended the dedication of a granite monument at the Michigan Space Center in Jackson, to Jarvis and to another Michigan native, Roger Chaffee, who died in the Apollo I launch pad fire 20 years ago Tuesday.
 A black granite monument honoring the nation's 10 dead astronauts was dedicated at Albany, Ga.
 Albert Hirschensohn, 79, a native of nearby Leesburg and now living in Hallandale, Fla., commissioned the $30,000 monument. He said he picked Albany for the 8.5 foot monument after being turned down by three Florida communities. "Everybody has read about the astronauts, but nobody had done anything," he said.
 Besides the Challenger astronauts, the monument honors Virgil "Gus" Grissom, Chaffee and Edward White, who were killed when an electrical fire ignited in their space capsule during the Apollo-Saturn program.
 Onizuka, the first astronaut of Japanese ancestry, was remembered during a graveside service in Honolulu.

Engineer Sues Morton Thiokol In Dispute Over Shuttle Safety

By JAMES ROWLEY
 Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — An engineer who tried to stop last year's ill-fated space shuttle Challenger launch is accusing Morton Thiokol Inc. of punishing him for telling investigators about defective rocket booster seals.
 Roger Boisjoly alleges in a $1 billion lawsuit that Morton Thiokol defamed his professional reputation as punishment for giving truthful testimony to the presidential commission and congressional committees that investigated the Jan. 28, 1986 shuttle explosion which killed seven crew members.
 The lawsuit was filed here Wednesday in U.S. District Court on the first anniversary of the Challenger disaster. It accuses the company and NASA of conspiring to thwart the investigations as part of a longstanding effort to withhold information about defective O-ring seals and joints between the solid rocket motor units.
 The National Aeronautics and Space Administration is not named in the lawsuit as a defendant. But Robert N. Levin, Boisjoly's attorney, said he planned to file a similar complaint with the agency for administrative adjudication.
 Boisjoly, 48, of Willard, Utah, contends the space agency was part of the conspiracy with Morton Thiokol that was "motivated by their desire to keep secret their long-term mismanagement of the joint and seal problem; their mutual interest in withholding from the Congress and the public the many safety problems with the shuttle."

 "NASA consistently lied to the Congress and the public as to the safety record of the shuttles," the lawsuit says.
 Neither NASA's David Garrett nor Morton Thiokol spokesman Gilbert Moore would comment on the lawsuit, saying they had not seen the 26-page complaint.
 Boisjoly told the presidential commission chaired by former Secretary of State William Rogers that he was prevented from talking to NASA investigators and he believed this was the result of retaliation for his testimony.
 The lawsuit alleges that Morton Thiokol publicly threatened his job and portrayed him as "a disgruntled or malcontented employee whose views should be discounted and whose professional expertise should be doubted."
 "Although Thiokol gave lip service to the idea of cooperation, in fact defendant removed plaintiff from any position where he could interact directly with NASA investigators and Thiokol publicly threatened his job, labeling him in press interviews as a 'tattle tale,'" the lawsuit contends.
 Boisjoly alleged that since the mid-1970s, NASA and Morton Thiokol concealed from the public and company stockholders information about deficiencies in the seal joints.

A day before the explosion, Boisjoly was among a group of Morton Thiokol engineers who urged NASA not to launch Challenger in cold weather because the joint seals might break.
 "Neither NASA nor Thiokol advised the flight crew, the owners of the payloads aboard the Challenger, the insurance companies with coverage involved in the flight nor the public of the extreme hazards presented by the cold nor the unanimous position of the Thiokol engineers that it was grossly unsafe to fly in those conditions," the lawsuit says.
 It also contends that Boisjoly became disabled from "post-traumatic stress disorder and depression caused directly by the disaster" and "the intentional wrongdoings of NASA and Thiokol."
 Boisjoly, who had been on medical leave from the company since last July, recently was placed on permanent disability.
 Besides defamation, Boisjoly accuses Morton Thiokol of anti-trust violations, obstruction of the shuttle investigations, and racketeering under the federal racketeer influenced corrupt organization (RICO) statute.
 The RICO count accuses the Chicago-based company of securities fraud for its failure to notify stockholders of its longstanding knowledge about the dangers of the design flaws.

BACK IN U.S. — Sam Hall, who had been held prisoner in Nicaragua, arrives in Miami Wednesday. Hall is the brother of Ohio Rep. Tony Hall, who was in Miami for the arrival. (AP Laserphoto)

Hall Checks Into Miami Hospital For Examinations

By RICHARD COLE
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — Self-styled soldier of fortune Sam Nesley Hall says he has given up his anti-communist commando activities because his imprisonment by the leftist Nicaraguan government on spying charges has blown his cover.

Hall returned Wednesday to the United States after spending 49 days in a Nicaraguan jail. Sandinista officials said they released him because he was mentally unstable and a suicide risk.

Hall voluntarily checked into a Veterans Administration hospital here, said lawyer Gary Froelich, a hometown friend who accompanied him on the flight. "We are also concerned about the claims made by the Nicaraguan government."

"It is in the best interest of Sam to have an immediate, complete and thorough medical and psychological examination."

Hall, 49, was driven directly to the hospital with his two brothers, U.S. Rep. Tony Hall, D-Ohio, and Michael Hall, a Cincinnati educator. He is expected to stay at the hospital for several days.

In Dayton, Ohio, Hall's mother, Ann, said she talked with her son by telephone for about five minutes shortly after his arrival in Miami.

"He sounded pretty good, and I've seen him on TV and he looks good," she said, adding he did not indicate when he might return to Dayton.

Mrs. Hall said she did not ask her son about the mental problems referred to by the Nicaraguans, "but I think he heard about it and he was very upset about it."

As Hall was leaving Nicaragua on Wednesday morning, he told reporters, "I just have one thing to say to the Nicaraguan people. 'I'm sorry I tried to ambush them.'"

He told reporters aboard the plane to Miami that he was treated well by his captors, but said his "days of adventure are over."

"I'm finished. I'm done. I'm too well known now. My name is out there too far," Hall said in an interview published in today's Dayton Daily News and Journal Herald.

Hall said he "thirsted to speak English" during his captivity and described his underground cell as a cement bunker.

"You eat with your fingers. When you go to the bathroom, you have a hole in the corner. And there is a lot of bugs, cockroaches and spiders that were always crawling on you," he said.

Hall, a 1960 Olympic silver medalist in springboard diving and one-time Ohio state representative, said he intended to get a lot of rest.

"Even though I worked out a lot, I can tell that physically I am not 100 percent," he said. "So it's advised that I get some rest and some normalcy at a very slow pace."

He said he was speechless after hearing he was to be released, "but I didn't cry. I'll save that for (today) when I see my kids. I choked up mostly. I haven't cried for a long time."

Hall was arrested Dec. 12 in a restricted military area near the Nicaraguan capital. Authorities said they found maps and sketches of military targets, crudely drawn on hotel stationery, stuffed in his socks, and threatened to try him for espionage.

In interviews after his arrest, Hall said he was paid $12,500 for his mission and worked for a previously unknown group called the Phoenix Battalion. He also said his superiors were code-named Tinker, Evers and Chance, the last names of a famous Chicago Cubs double-play combination early in the century.

He once belonged to Civilian Military Assistance of Decatur, Ala., a private organization formed three years ago to help the Contra rebels. The organization's director, Thomas V. Posey, said his group had disassociated itself from Hall more than 1½ years ago.

The FBI and the U.S. State Department said Wednesday they have no interest in Hall, and don't want to question him.

Tony Hall's office in Washington released a statement saying he has decided to limit his brother's access to the media.

"Tony will make every effort to keep this a family matter," said spokesman Michael Gessel. "He views what happens to Sam as a personal family matter."

Reagan Submits Economic Plan Calling For Governmental Curbs

By MARTIN CRUTSINGER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, reporting on the state of the economy, today said the current recovery is on its way to becoming the longest peacetime expansion since World War II but warned of future threats to growth.

The president in his annual economic message sounded some favorite themes, contending his administration was engaged in a battle to curb government's desire to "overtax, overspend and over-regulate."

While claiming successes in this effort, the president conceded there were major problems left to correct, singling out the government's burgeoning farm subsidy program, and the twin deficit demons which have plagued his administration, the huge federal budget deficit and the seemingly intractable trade deficit.

Reagan urged renewed efforts in Congress to attack these problems, but he repeated his opposition to reducing the deficit through tax increases and warned that erecting protectionist trade barriers would be the wrong way to reduce the trade imbalance.

"Protectionism is anti-growth. It would make us less competitive not more," Reagan said. "It would hurt most Americans in the interest of helping a few."

The report made no changes in the administration's earlier economic forecast that the economy, as measured by the gross national product, would expand 3.2 percent this year, up from 2.5 percent growth in 1986, the slowest rate since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

Even this modest pickup in growth is contingent on a turnaround in the U.S. trade deficit, which has contributed to sluggish growth for the past two years.

Beryl Sprinkel, the president's chief economic adviser, said in a briefing on the new report, that the administration still expects the trade deficit to begin to improve in 1987. But he conceded, "I have not yet seen the string of numbers that have convinced me we are seeing that improvement."

The economic recovery, which began in December 1982, is already 50 months long. If it lasts nine more months, it will become the longest peacetime expansion since World War II. The 1961-70 recovery went longer without a recession, but it occurred during the Vietnam war.

"Our market-oriented policies are paying off," Reagan said. "By October, the current expansion will become the longest peacetime expansion of the postwar era."

The president cited the major tax overhaul and the miniscule 1.1 percent rise in consumer prices last year, the smallest inflation increase in 25 years, as major accomplishments of his administration.

He said he was encouraged by the drop in the unemployment rate in December, which fell to 6.7 percent, the lowest point of his presidency, although historically high for this period of a recovery.

"Since 1982, we have avoided the economic problems that have plagued our recent past — accelerating inflation, rising interest rates and severe recession," he said.

The "Economic Report of the President" expanded on many of the proposals the president has already put forward in his 1988 budget and in his State of the Union address on Tuesday.

It repeated a call for government efforts to make American businesses more competitive against foreign firms, a major initiative the administration is pushing this year in hopes of derailing protectionist trade legislation.

To boost U.S. competitiveness, the economic message said Congress needs to go even further in eliminating unnecessary government regulations on businesses. The president called for an end to price controls on natural gas, elimination of remaining regulations on the trucking industry and less-restrictive air pollution regulations, all initiatives he has raised without success in the past.

U.S., Common Market Avert Trade War Over Grain Sales

By ROBERT BURNS
Associated Press Writer

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — U.S. and European Common Market negotiators reached final agreement today to settle a grain-sales dispute that had threatened to become a trade war, officials said.

Willy de Clercq, the Common Market's chief negotiator, announced a four-year agreement was reached providing compensation to the United States for about $400 million in lost grain sales to Spain.

"It's a political solution to avoid a trade war," De Clercq told a news conference.

Representatives of the 12 Common Market nations, which must approve the agreement, were to meet here later in the day. The accord was worked out during nearly 24 hours of nearly continuous trans-Atlantic telephone consultations.

A U.S. official, who spoke on condition he not be identified, called the agreement "good, sound and balanced."

The negotiators were working against a deadline of midnight Thursday, when U.S. duties of 200 percent on selected European products including liquor and cheese were to go into effect to retaliate for higher Common Market duties on Spanish grain imports. The Common Market countries in turn threatened higher tariffs on U.S. products.

U.S. corn and sorghum sales to Spain declined in 1986 after import duties rose from about 20 percent to 100 percent in March as a result of Spain's joining the Common Market.

De Clercq said the sides agreed in principle that Spain would buy from non-Common Market exporters 2.3 million metric tons of corn and sorghum a year, of which the United States would get its historic share of about 65 percent.

But the Common Market stipulated that Spain's imports of corn and sorghum gradually would be replaced by imports of corn gluten feed, brewer's yeast and citrus peels.

To further compensate the United States, import duties would be lowered on a variety of American industrial products and processed agricultural goods, including cigars, polyester and bourbon, according to a statement issued by De Clercq's office.

Details of this portion of the accord were not disclosed, but a U.S. official in Brussels said the value of the reductions represented about one-third of the total compensation to the United States.

Unexpectedly, the two sides also resolved a related dispute over Portugal's grain market.

The Common Market agreed to lift a provision that 15 percent of Portugal's grain imports come from other member countries. The United States said this arrangement, in effect since Portugal joined the Common Market in January 1986, violated international trading rules.

U.S. grain exporters traditionally had more than 90 percent of the Portuguese market.

De Clercq said that in return for dropping the 15 percent quota, the Reagan administration agreed to abandon its threat to eventually retaliate with restrictions on imports of European beer, white wine, apple juice, candy and chocolate.

The U.S. administration announced Dec. 30 that if there were no settlement within one month it would slap 200 percent import duties on European white wines, brandy, gin, cheeses, olives, endives, carrots and canned ham. The Common Market said it would respond by restricting U.S. exports of corn gluten feed and rice.

The Common Market nations are: Belgium, France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands, Denmark, Ireland, United Kingdom, Greece, Spain and Portugal.

Meanwhile, in Washington, administration sources who spoke on condition they not be identified said retaliatory action to protest European commercial aircraft subsidies is under consideration.

The sources said the target is Airbus Industries, an aircraft consortium in which Britain, France and West Germany participate. The sources said that with European government subsidies, Airbus is able to undercut U.S. aircraft manufacturers by offering aircraft at prices 25 percent below those of comparable American jetliners. The U.S. aircraft industry estimates the subsidies cost it as much as $3 billion in potential trade.

U.S. officials planned talks next week in London, Bonn and Paris on the issue.

President Orders Cooling Off Period In Railroad Strike

By MARJORIE ANDERS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The strike-iddled Long Island Rail Road will resume service Saturday and should be prepared for its 150,000 rush-hour passengers Monday, officials said after President Reagan imposed a cooling-off period in the 10-day-old walkout.

Workers began trickling back to work Wednesday night, not long after Reagan signed back-to-work legislation pushed through Congress.

LIRR President Bruce McIver said he hoped ticket windows would be staffed at 12:01 a.m. Saturday and that trains would roll shortly thereafter.

"I think we'll be pretty much back to normal on Monday morning," McIver said.

The strike by 6,600 employees in 15 unions idled the railroad since Jan. 18, forcing commuters to find other means of transportation.

Workers were "heading back in, getting their assignments and they're doing their jobs," railway spokesman Michael Charles said early today.

McIver ordered crews to clear more than a foot of snow and ice from about 700 miles of track and to make sure gates, signals and switches are working.

More than an hour after recalling employees, McIver heard from John Caggiano, who heads a coalition of four shop craft unions that had not reached agreement on a contract.

He said Caggiano told him he was calling off pickets and telling his 920 workers to obey the order, "so the strike is over."

The law, passed by Congress on Tuesday, ordered strikers back to work for a 60-day cooling-off period and directs the National Mediation Board to recommend a settlement to Congress.

"I guess there's mixed emotions, a little relief, a little unhappiness," said Caggiano, business manager of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

The federal legislation was necessary because the LIRR employees are covered by the Federal Railway Labor Act.

The signalmen's union was the only other union still on strike when the bill passed. Ten other unions either reached agreement on contracts retroactive to two years ago or agreed to binding arbitration.

Bennett Insists Budget Cutbacks Haven't Harmed Public Education

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
AP Education Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of Education William J. Bennett says congressional criticism of the Reagan administration's education policies are "rubbish" and accused the lawmakers of spreading falsehoods.

Bennett himself was criticized Wednesday when he announced he was naming an $80 million teacher training program after the late teacher-astronaut Christa McAuliffe.

Teachers union leaders said attaching her name to a program of budget cuts was inappropriate.

Bennett blasted House Speaker Jim Wright for charging during a televised response to President Reagan's State of the Union address that the administration has "shrunk educational opportunity" and allowed the schools to slip into "mediocrity."

"This is incorrect. This is rubbish. He doesn't know what he's talking about. Educational opportunity and performance have improved on our watch," Bennett told reporters.

Bennett accused the Democrats of trying to make the administration "a whipping boy" on the issue. "Education's improved on our watch. We're not going to take that rap," he said.

An aide to Wright, who asked not to be named, said only, "The speaker refers anyone who's interested to the president's budget."

That budget, submitted to Congress three weeks ago, shows Reagan seeking $2.5 billion in rescissions from this year's $19.5 billion Education budget, and further cuts to $14 billion for 1988.

Among the cuts — which face stiff opposition in Congress — are a proposed $11.2 million reduction in the department's $91.2 million teacher training programs, including elimination of a $2 million teacher fellowship program named for Ms. McAuliffe, killed a year ago with six other astronauts in the Challenger explosion.

Bennett visited Eastern High School in Washington Wednesday to mark National Teacher Appreciation Day and the shuttle anniversary by announcing he wants to rename the whole revised $80 million program in McAuliffe's honor.

But Bennett's efforts to couple savings with homage for McAuliffe drew angry retorts from teachers union leaders.

"I am a little flabbergasted that they would talk about the teacher training program, especially in the name of Christa McAuliffe, while at the same time cutting the budget," said Mary Hatwood Futrell, president of the National Education Association. "They are trying to repackage it to make it appear it is a new program, and it's nothing but a facade."

"This is a travesty, not a tribute," said Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers.

Mrs. McAuliffe's father wrote to President Reagan recently to protest the proposed elimination of the "Talented Teacher" fellowships named for his daughter, who taught social sciences at Concord High School in New Hampshire.

Dole Wants To End Delays For Airlines

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department is proposing to grant antitrust immunity to airlines to permit discussions aimed at adjusting schedules to reduce airline delays.

"I hope this action will encourage the airlines to move some flights to less-congested times and reduce delays," Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said Wednesday.

She said the department also is starting an investigation at 13 airports to determine if and how airline scheduling processes contribute to delays.

"We plan to determine whether airlines routinely misrepresent their schedules to consumers," she said.

Flight delays have increased substantially in the last year, Mrs. Dole said. "At the 22 busiest airports, there were 367,000 delays in 1986, compared with 295,000 in 1985," she said.

"While an estimated 65 to 70 percent of these delays were weather-related, there is increasing evidence that at many busy airports, airlines are scheduling more operations at peak hours than the airports can handle even in good weather," she said.

The investigation will begin with Atlanta Hartsfield Airport. After that, scheduling will be examined at 12 other airports which experience delays — Boston, Chicago O'Hare; Denver; Minneapolis-St. Paul; the New York area's LaGuardia, Kennedy and Newark airports; St. Louis; San Francisco; Dallas-Fort Worth; Philadelphia and Washington Dulles International Airport.

Other steps to be taken by the Federal Aviation Administration in the effort to reduce delays include:

- Providing technical support using computer traffic models to help airlines adjust schedules at specific airports.
- Use of special FAA teams to review air traffic control procedures at various facilities.

— Implementation next month of an East Coast plan to increase from 17 to 25 the number of departure paths from New York area airports. A similar plan is being developed for West Coast airports.

Communists Tighten Gorbachev's Control Over Party Organization

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer
MOSCOW (AP) — The Communist Party ousted two holdovers from the Brezhnev era from its highest ranks and cemented Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's control over the powerful secretariat.

But a final resolution adopted Wednesday at the close of the two-day plenum of more than 300 Central Committee members did not include in detail Gorbachev's call for multiple-candidate and secret-ballot elections in regional party committees.

It only spoke in general terms of "the need to broaden inner-party democracy," suggesting continued division over what would represent a significant change in party procedure.

In an unusual move, the government press agency Novosti offered foreign correspondents interviews today to explain the results of the plenum and a senior editor confirmed there had been debate over the party elections issue.

The editor, Yevgeny Pozdnyakov, said such a change would require further discussion and noted it also would necessitate amendments to the party rules. That would have to wait for a national party conference planned for the summer of 1988, or for the next party congress in 1991.

But he added, "I can tell you that the majority of people at the plenum supported the proposal, or it wouldn't have been mentioned in the (meeting's) resolution in any form at all."

In his speech, Gorbachev also suggested a slight broadening of the system by which candidates are chosen to run for legislative bodies, known as soviets.

These candidates are put forward, one for each seat in a district, at pre-election meetings. Currently, those at the meetings discuss only one name, presumably chosen by the party, and generally give their ritual endorsement.

Gorbachev suggested the procedure be widened, a plan endorsed in principle by the Central Committee resolution.

"The point is to require two or three candidacies be discussed before the (election) meetings decide which to submit for voting," Pozdnyakov said. "That does not mean that there will be more than one candidate for each post on the ballot."

The Central Committee endorsed Gorbachev's call for accelerated economic change and more openness in Soviet society, saying, "There is nowhere we can retreat."

But it did not produce the kind of dramatic leadership changes that had been rumored in advance.

Since Gorbachev became Soviet leader in March 1985, he has stressed the need to bring fresh ideas to the party and to dislodge bureaucrats linked with the stagnation that was widespread during the rule of late party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev.

Wednesday's removal from the ruling Politburo of the former Kazakhstan party leader, 74-year-old Dinmukhamed A. Kunaev, eliminated one of the last Brezhnev-era leaders from the national leadership. Kunaev joined the Politburo in 1972.

The Central Committee, which groups the top party members from Moscow and the 15 Soviet republics, also retired 72-year-old Mikhail S. Zimyanin from the party Secretariat "for health reasons."

Kunaev's ouster was considered a foregone conclusion after his dismissal Dec. 16 as party chief of Kazakhstan, a Central Asian republic the state-run press had called a hotbed of corruption and mismanagement.

Replacement of Kunaev, a Kazakh, with Gennady Kolbin, an ethnic Russian, prompted student riots in Alma Ata, the Kazakhstan capital.

Shultz And Tambo Disagree On Key S. African Issues

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A meeting between Secretary of State George P. Shultz and a leading South African black nationalist produced sharp disagreement on the need for violence and the degree of Soviet penetration in the anti-apartheid struggle.

Oliver Tambo, president of the African National Congress, said Wednesday night after the 50-minute State Department meeting that Shultz's concerns about possible Soviet domination of the ANC are unfounded.

"There is no Soviet influence in the ANC," he said. State Department spokesman Charles Redman said Shultz told Tambo a peaceful settlement to South Africa's conflict can be achieved only through negotiations and that the "pursuit of violence will only lead to catastrophe for all."

Tambo countered that the way "to stop our armed struggle is to stop the apartheid system."

Despite the disagreements, Tambo seemed satisfied with the outcome of the first meeting a U.S. secretary of state has ever had with an ANC leader in the group's 75-year history.

Tambo called the meeting "very friendly, very friendly indeed." His tone seemed to contrast with Redman's account of the meeting, which was notably devoid of the usual diplomatic courtesies and expressions of friendship.

This seemed to reflect the strong opposition to the meeting by some conservatives, who look on the ANC as a terrorist organization and believe the United States should deal exclusively with more moderate South African groups.

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., said Tuesday that Tambo's meeting with Shultz "comes perilously close to sending the wrong kind of message on terrorism — the same kind of message that may have inadvertently been sent in our arms dealings with Iran."

Shultz agreed to go ahead with the meeting despite conservative protests. He has said that the United States, if it is to play a constructive role in South Africa, should be willing to meet with all parties, including those whose tactics he opposes.

South Africa has outlawed the ANC and claims much of its directorate is made up of communists or communist sympathizers. Tambo, 69, who is reported to have strong religious beliefs, said he is not a communist.

But much of the ANC's military equipment is provided by the Soviet Union. In addition, ANC fighters receive training at camps in Marxist Angola, State Department officials say.

Tambo apparently made little headway when he asked Shultz to persuade West European nations to impose economic sanctions against South Africa that are similar to the package approved by the U.S. Congress last fall.

Shultz responded that the administration's opposition to sanctions remains unchanged, according to Redman.

The sanctions package bans new U.S. investments in South Africa and prohibits the import of a number of commodities from that country. Both houses of Congress voted decisively to override President Reagan's veto of the measure.

Before his meeting with Shultz, Tambo said the ANC once turned to non-violent protest but resorted to armed struggle after Pretoria's forces "massacred" 42 South African blacks in Lesotho in 1983.

Still, he said, the ANC has carried out its campaign with restraint. "We could have killed hundreds of whites. We could have blown them up. We had the capacity," said Tambo.

Redman said Shultz told Tambo he was encouraged by a recent ANC statement on the need for a multi-party democratic system. But, in an apparent reference to communist influence in the ANC, Shultz said he was worried that apartheid might be replaced "by another form of unrepresentative government."

On snow-covered sidewalks outside the State Department, a small group of anti-ANC demonstrators staged a protest during the meeting and exchanged taunts with a smaller group of pro-ANC militants.

Growth of wholesale/retail, government and service employment in Pitt County exceeded 70 percent in the past decade.

Networking Aids Job Search

ROCHESTER, N.Y. (AP) — Even when the job market isn't golden, the student who thinks creatively about the search and puts effort into it will come out on top, says James Case, director of Career Services and Placement at the University of Rochester.

Placement officers like Case are discovering that one of the oldest ways of looking for a job is also one of the best for today's new grads — using the "old boy" or "old girl" network.

Believing that networking helps today's students make good career choices and land jobs, Rochester and other colleges and universities create opportunities for students and alumni to meet and talk about careers.

"It sounds like an old-fashioned idea — one that's out of sync with a world where graduates are supposed to get jobs because of their skills, and not because of whom they know," Case says. "And no employer today hires a person just because he or she went to a particular school. But we find that if students meet alumni, it definitely helps move them along toward the right career."

University of Rochester students and alumni meet each other at an annual reception in New York City called "The New York Connection." The career services staff invites alumni who live and work in the New York City area to come talk about their careers with students.

The staff points out to students that there's a big difference between a networking opportunity like a reception and a jobs fair.

"At a jobs fair, the employer is there to recruit, and the student is there for a job," says Sue Mejerowitz, a career counselor at Rochester. "But networking is different. It's more like a party. If you went to a party and straightaway pressed your resume into the hand of everyone you met, you'd offend the guests."

In workshops on networking, career counselors like Rochester's Richard Magere rehearse students on how to relate to the alumni, how to conduct an informational interview and how to present themselves.

"I show them that they've been networking all their lives, that they probably decided to attend Rochester based partly on what they learned about it from people they already knew — friends, guidance counselors or relatives. And once they arrived, they used information they got from other students they knew in choosing a major, classes or maybe a place to live."

Even though everyone has networked before, it hasn't necessarily been with strangers, Magere points out, so he gives students some pointers.

"Initiate conversations, I tell them. This is hard for some students, but they can't expect others to come to them. And students have to establish rapport; discover an area of mutual interest to talk about. Many alumni enjoy talking about their work, and about how their education prepared them for their careers."

Magere cautions students that they shouldn't expect instant rewards, such as a job offer, from a networking opportunity. Instead, they should focus on what they can learn about careers.

"When a student meets a graduate who works at a large New York advertising agency or law firm, it's an opportunity to ask about the pressures and rewards of the job, about what kind of person is happy there. Maybe the student will decide that looking for work with a smaller company would better suit his or her temperament."

"I also tell them to bring a resume, but not to pull it out unless it really seems appropriate."

As for what they should wear, Magere tells them that presenting a professional appearance is safest. For men, that includes a short, neat hairstyle and a sport coat, tie and slacks or suit. For women, it means no exotic fashions or hairstyles, but rather a businesslike dress, stockings and pumps.

Do these networks produce jobs for students? Sometimes, says Case. Or they lead to an internship that in turn leads to a job after graduation.

"But even when this doesn't happen," he says, "students get valuable information about what jobs are really like, and pick up tips for their search. Or they meet a graduate with the same major they chose who has moved on to a wonderful job the student never even thought of as a possibility."

Educate Household To Use Gun Safety

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Thanks for printing that beautiful letter from the parents whose 15-year-old son, victim of a gun "accident," donated his organs so that others might live. It was a wonderful testimony for organ donation. But something has to be added.

When I was a boy, we always had guns in the house. They were kept locked up, but my father didn't stop there. At a very early age, he taught us, "There is no such thing as an unloaded gun!" We were not allowed to point toy guns at our playmates. Each of us was given a closely supervised chance to fire a real gun so we knew what it could do. He taught us that if we were at a friend's house, and that friend found a real gun and played with it, to get the hell out of there and tell an adult! Any explanations to the friend could be made later by telephone, at a safe distance.

As a result of his wise teaching, we grew up regarding guns with understanding and respect, instead of fear and fascination. I wish every parent would do the same. — GEORGE W., NORMAL, ILL.

DEAR GEORGE: Your point is well taken. But you and I part company when it comes to guns in the house. Guns in the house have killed more people (especially children) accidentally than on purpose.

DEAR ABBY: "Not Guilty in Elgin" wrote that she and her husband of six months had agreed that each would write thank-you notes to their own friends and relatives for their wedding gifts.

It seems that she wrote hers, but her husband failed to write his, and now she is receiving "hints" that she has failed to acknowledge some wedding gifts.

Abby, he will never write his, and she will always be blamed for not writing the thank-you notes to his family and friends, so I think she would be wise to go ahead and write the remaining notes herself. It would relieve her of the constant guilt feelings and reminders that something was left undone after the wedding.

I know it isn't fair, but she will feel better in the years to come for having done it. She should also be prepared for future failed agreements. This was probably not the first time her husband welched on a deal. — BOB IN PORT ANGELES, WASH.

DEAR BOB: You're undoubtedly right. It isn't fair, but when it comes to acknowledging wedding presents, getting the job done is more important than who does it.

DEAR ABBY: My dear young son is very sad tonight, and his older sister says that she has often felt the same way. Why? Because a well-intentioned schoolteacher appointed other classmates to be team "captains," and to choose up their teams. They chose their classmates — one by one — until none remained.

Abby, only a child who has felt the pain and humiliation of having been chosen last can understand the feeling. My husband and I both experienced this as children, and now we are going through it again watching our own children. It would save many children many scars if teachers would find another way to divide the classroom into two teams to compete in spelling bees, gymnastics or whatever.

Abby, please pass this along. If just one teacher will discontinue that practice, it will be worthwhile. The joy of being chosen first — or early — does not last nearly as long as the pain those children feel when they are the last to be chosen. — HURTING IN OHIO

DEAR HURTING: I will gladly pass this important message along with the hope that it will be seen by teachers who will discontinue the cruel practice. This was done when I was a child. And recalling how deeply many children were hurt, I am appalled that this thoughtless, insensitive system still persists.

Making Vacation Plans For Home

At Wits End

By ERMA BOMBECK

Every year my husband and I go through the ritual of planning our vacation. We start early in the year because past experience has taught us that it takes as long as four or five months to arrive at a consensus.

He is a lobbyist for back-to-nature treks. The man can be turned on by a ranger picking his teeth around a campfire and drinking hot coffee from a metal cup that sticks to his lips.

I, on the other hand, am turned on by the sound of three little words, "Room service, please."

The other night we sat at the kitchen table and pitched our respective choices for an idyllic vacation.

"Would you listen to this," he said. "How would you like to shoot the rapids on the Zambezi River through Zambia and Zimbabwe?"

I countered with, "You want excitement? How would you like to run through five people passing out free samples of perfume in the main aisle of Bloomingdale's during the white sales?"

"I love this one," he said. "A six-day World Elephant Polo championship meet in Nepal. But we have to move fast or it'll be sold out."

"Or better still," I said, "here's a month-long cruise where you eat 15 times a day and they roll you to one of the five swimming pools to sunbathe."

"No, no, we sit too much," he reasoned. "What we really need this year is a trip to the Orient where you run a 10-K along the Great Wall of China."

"Forget it," I said, "here's a package deal to Las Vegas that includes a champagne dinner and a breathless run up to the stage to throw your hotel key to Tom Jones."

It's the same every year. We can't seem to agree on what is adventure and what isn't. He wants to sleep on caribou hides. I want to buy them for a coat. He wants to work up a sweat. I want designer sweat that comes out of a steam bath or a Jacuzzi.

He wants to take risks like traveling on ice floes, piloting a hot air balloon, riding a horse through the Amazon, racing a camel or smiling at people who are carrying spears.

I want to take chances of a different nature... like charging something when I know I've reached my credit limit or checking into the Plaza without reservations.

After one of these sessions, we silently put together our brochures and pack them away. Our car has about 200 more miles left on the transmission... there's a suspicious wet spot in the ceiling of the dining room... one of the kid's tuition is supposed to increase... and the dog looks fat. That's probably about all the adventure we can handle.

hand knitted or crocheted garments, even if the separate pieces are assembled by machine. Also, if pieces are to be blocked, this should be done before stitching in the zipper.

Unless there is some other type of edging planned, I like to work a row of single crochet on both edges of the zipper opening. I then always baste the zipper in place before doing the final stitching.

When setting in a zipper, be sure the two edges of the garment meet over the center of the zipper, completely concealing it. Once basted in, check to see that the zipper lies flat without buckling. When you are satisfied with the appearance, use a sewing needle and doubled thread to take tiny back stitches through the crocheted edging and the zipper. Working in this way the stitches will be invisible.

I cannot stress enough how important it is to achieve the listed gauge on any knit or crochet project in order to have a properly fitting garment. Don't automatically use the needle or hook size listed -- that is the size used by the designer and may or may not be the size you should be using. Think of it only as a general guide.

With the yarn you have selected and the suggested needle or hook size, cast on (or crochet make a chain of) enough stitches to make a sample swatch at least 4 inches wide. Then, work until the piece is 4 inches long. Bind off loosely and measure the width of your swatch. If it is narrower, your gauge -- or tension -- is tighter than that of the designer and you will need a larger hook or needles. If, on the other hand, the swatch is larger, you will need smaller implements.

Keep making sample swatches with varying sizes of tools until your gauge is the same as that listed. Don't fudge on this by stretching or squeezing in your swatch -- you'll only be causing yourself headache.

Sometimes the gauge listing will be shown for stockinette stitch or single crochet and at other times it will specify a pattern stitch. The wording may be: "Gauge equals 3 stitches per inch in basketweave pattern stitch."

In this case you would need to work the swatch in that pattern. It is dangerous to take a short cut by assuming that your tension will be the same as the designer's even when you have not had trouble in meeting gauge in the past. There is supposed to be some standardization in our industry on sizing, but this is one area where differences show up frequently.

I am fortunate in that my knitting tension most often falls into the average category and I usually can use the suggested size. However, I have found that I crochet more tightly than most crochet designers, so I move up a size or two for my first sample swatch.

What about row gauge? Most often

Some Families Remain In Poverty

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) -- Inflation and budget cuts have eroded the ability of government welfare programs to keep families out of poverty, a research group said Tuesday.

The Center on Budget and Policy Priorities said its analysis of Census Bureau figures indicated that among low-income families with children, 38 percent were lifted out of poverty in 1979 by welfare programs that provided cash, food, medical and housing benefits.

But the same programs in 1985 lifted only 24 percent of these families out of poverty, said the center, a non-profit think tank often critical of the Reagan administration.

"The greatest benefit lags appear to have occurred during the period of highest inflation," the report said. That was in 1979 and 1980 -- during the Carter administration -- when most states let their Aid to Families with Dependent Children payments and unemployment compensation lag behind inflation.

The next biggest drop in the programs' effectiveness came in the 1981-82 period, the report said, when the Reagan administration and Congress cut many aid programs.

Since 1983 there have been few cuts in welfare and "modest restorations have been made in several of the programs, such as AFDC," the report said. AFDC benefits rose in 1985 in real dollars -- after inflation -- for the first time in a decade. States set their own AFDC levels, with the federal government kicking in more than half the payments.

More than 33 million Americans, or 1 in 7, was living in poverty last year. But the poverty rate of 14 percent was down from a 10-year high of 14.4 percent in 1984. The official poverty measure counts only families' cash income, not housing subsidies and food stamps.

The center said the Census figures show that in 1979, 5 million families with children had incomes below the poverty line before counting government cash benefits such as Social Security, unemployment compensation and AFDC. Those programs lifted 949,000 families out of poverty, or nearly 19 percent.

But by 1985, 6.3 million families with children had incomes below the poverty line before their government stipends. Counting those payments, only 735,000 families, or 11.8 percent, were removed from the poverty rolls.

"The anti-poverty impact of the programs diminished just as poverty became more severe," the report said. "Had the programs had the same anti-poverty impact in 1985 as in 1979 ... then 458,000 fewer families with children would have been poor last year."

Counting all welfare benefits -- including food stamps, housing and Medicaid -- the poverty programs lifted 38 percent of low-income families out of poverty in 1979, but only 24 percent in 1985. If the programs had not lost their punch, "864,000 fewer families with children would have been poor in 1985," it said.

Water Levels Falling

42. Total withdrawals have increased from about 120,000 gallons a day in 1910 to about 21.7 million gallons a day in 1980.

Communities in the coastal plain generally prefer groundwater to surface water, Winner said, because it is more pure and requires less treatment. But groundwater has become more expensive to pump as water tables have declined.

"Some of the wells are being over-pumped for the capacity of the aquifer," Winner said. "The pumps that are being put on the wells are larger than maybe what ought to be pumped. Some wells may be spaced too closely together, so they cause larger than normal drawdown in an area."

At one time, groundwater levels were so high in the coastal plain that water flowed freely from wells bored into deep aquifers, he said. Most of those artesian wells had stopped flowing by the 1950s, he said, forcing communities and industries to install pumps.

Eventually, the USGS plans to recommend alternatives for communities to follow in managing their groundwater supplies, Winner said. Recommendations could include limiting the size of pumps, restricting pumping to specified time periods and digging new well fields in areas where water levels are higher.

"The first solution, the most obvious one, is conservation," he said. "Do people really need to use as much water as they're using?"

Green suggested the study will serve as a management tool for the GUC.

"We now have a 16 million gallon (per day) capacity for our water system ... 12 million from the water plant (which draws water from the Tar River) and 4 million from (eight) wells," Green said.

"We've noticed, over the past 10 to 15 years, that each time we replace a pump, the water table has gone down some, so the wells have been lowered."

On one well, installed in 1966, "we've seen a 45 to 50 foot decline in the water from that well," Green said.

"As you lower wells, you use more energy ... you're looking at a fair amount of energy cost," to pump the water out.

One day, Green said, "energy costs (to pump water) on wells on a per gallon basis may exceed the cost of treating surface water."

"The study will help us determine estimated $101,379 in this year's budget, including a reduction from $72,270 in 1986-87 to $66,398 in salaries.

Ms. Meeks said two positions will be filled by employees making entry-level salaries, replacing others who made more money.

The personnel department requests includes $31,744 in operating expenses, up from $29,744 in the present budget. The request also calls for $264 in capital outlay.

The city clerk's department has requested $87,553, compared to $76,893 in 1986-87. The budget requests include $54,113 in salaries, $31,145 in operating expenses and $2,300 in capital outlay.

A $57,009 request from the mayor and City Council department, marks a $16,004 increase from the estimated total of $41,005 in the present budget.

An increase from $5,000 to $14,000 in election spending is responsible for much of the increase, according to Ms. Meeks, who said adapting to the 5-1-1 method of election will raise expenses.

The council will receive budget proposals from the engineering and planning departments at a budget workshop Monday at 5:45 p.m. in the first floor conference room of City Hall.

the ultimate capacity of the aquifer, project the useful life of a well, and help us decide whether or not to increase our capacity from wells or from surface water," Green said.

"Our immediate goal is to see which is more cost effective (in order to produce) the lowest cost water that we can get."

GUC has eight wells "pumping water from 200 to 250 feet at maximum draw," according to Green.

But he said "we don't use the wells on a daily basis. We use the wells as a peaking tool. We turn the wells on and pump directly into the (distribution) system" during periods of high water use.

However, pressed about whether he had planned to return, he said, "I am aware of no such plan."

Trade Minister Jose Conception, interviewed from Manila on NBC's "Today" show, said the quashing of the coup attempt has strengthened Mrs. Aquino's hand.

"She's under firmer control of the country, and the coup (attempt) to a large extent has swung to her favor. It has brought more 'yes' votes," he said, referring to Monday's plebscite.

Conception was asked if he believed Marcos was behind the coup attempt.

"Probably so, because you cannot have three simultaneous attacks in three different places without any master plan," he said.

Marcos, who has lived in Hawaii since February, said Carl Taylor and Elwood J. MacGuire — both State Department representatives, visited him Wednesday and told him not to leave Hawaii.

The owner of a military clothing store in Honolulu said earlier Wednesday that Marcos' wife, Imelda, purchased $2,000 worth of jungle boots, camouflage outfits, belts and other items Monday for people of various sizes.

A Boeing 707 was parked at Honolulu airport, and radio reports in Manila said it was intended to carry Marcos to the Philippines. The Philippine consul general, Tomas Gomez, said he was tipped about the plane's presence and contacted the Philippine Embassy in Washington.

Vice President Salvador Laurel said that the U.S. State Department was closely monitoring Marcos' movements.

At the State Department in Washington, spokesman Pete Martinez today said the government had no immediate comment.

Marcos spokesman Jemmo Trinidad told KHVH radio in Honolulu that the State Department representatives told Marcos "they will stop him from going home. If it is necessary that they will do it physically, they will do it."

The Philippine government last year canceled the passports of Marcos, his wife, Imelda, and other family members. Last month the Cabinet decided unanimously to prevent Marcos from returning either for Christmas or the funeral of his sister.

regional vice president in Charlotte "is checking about every two hours on the situation."

"We're taking care of people's homes," Eppes said, and the job has been easier with the help of the public works department and the Greenville police.

"We've had excellent cooperation with the public works department and the police department," he said. Waves created by cars traveling through the flooded streets posed possible problems for the apartments and motorists, "so they barricaded the streets to keep from making waves."

Water also threatened Langston Park Apartments and River Oak Apartments, but no damage has been reported.

Water covered the parking lot and seeped into the laundry room at River Oak but there was no damage to the utilities in there, according to Judy Mills, manager of Remco East.

Who's Ahead

Blue Edwards (30) of East Carolina University goes up for a basket against Virginia Commonwealth's Phil Stinnie (35) during action in the first half at the Richmond Coliseum Wednesday night. The Pirates pulled out a 57-56 win in the contest, snapping a four-game losing streak. (AP Laserphoto)

Brown's Three-Point Play Helps Hold Off VCU Rams As Bucs Take 57-56 Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

RICHMOND, Va. — Howard Brown made a three-point play with 1:10 left to put East Carolina University into the lead and the Pirates hung on through a couple of missed free throws and a desperation shot to claim a 57-56 non-conference basketball victory over Virginia Commonwealth University Wednesday night.

The win snapped a four-game losing skid by the Pirates and was their first win on the road since an overtime victory over Campbell on Dec. 17.

It also snapped a few Virginia Commonwealth streaks — it was the Rams first loss after three straight wins; it was the first Ram loss in six meetings with ECU; it was the first Ram loss in which it held an opponent under 68 points, and was only the second loss in which the Rams had been ahead at the half.

However, it was the fifth loss in ten home games for VCU, which holds a 7-1 road record.

The game was close most of the way. VCU led stretch out to an eight point lead early in the second half, 40-32, but the Pirates rallied and drew even again at 46-46.

But it wasn't until Brown hit the first of two free throws with 4:57 left that they took the lead, 49-48.

Phil Stinnie worked free for a dunk shot with 3:43 left to put the Rams back into the lead, 50-49, but Leon Bass was fouled and hit both shots with 3:04 remaining to again put ECU into the lead, 51-50.

John Thompson responded by grabbing off an offensive rebound and putting in back in with 2:43 left, 52-51, but Blue Edwards countered for ECU to again put ECU back up, 53-52, with 2:24 to go.

Pete Strayhorn banged through two free throws with 1:53 showing to give VCU one last lead, 54-53, but Brown stripped a rebound from Stinnie under the Pirate basket and put it back up for the basket with 1:10 left. He was fouled by Stinnie and made the free throw for a 56-54 lead.

Thirty seconds later, Brown was fouled again and made the first of a one-and-one opportunity to up the lead to 57-54. Alvin Hicks drove in for a layup with 26 seconds left to pull it within one, 57-56.

VCU used a time out to set up its defense, and it nearly worked as Brown was fouled as he crossed mid-court with one second left in the 10-second count. Brown, however, missed the free throw, only to see VCU knock it out of bounds with 16 seconds left. Keith Sledge was then fouled three seconds back into play, but he, too, missed, as his first shot went in and came back out, giving VCU the ball.

But in their haste, VCU dished the ball off to forward John Thompson, who was caught in a no-dribble situation. The four remaining players all dashed down court, and precious time went off the clock before they realized and came back to get the ball from him.

Hicks then fired up a 15-footer with one second on the clock, but it bounced off the rim to preserve the Pirate victory.

ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said that the Rams getting caught with a non-dribbler with the ball in the final seconds really helped the Pirates because of the time situation.

"We wanted to take some time off the clock with a soft press (on VCU's final possession)," he said. "They got caught with the ball in a non-ball handler's hands, but they still got a good shot off at the basket."

Harrison said he was hopeful that the Pirates could hit their late free throws, but he had no intention of taking anyone out, especially Brown. "He's struggling against some problems, and I would have destroyed his confidence if I had pulled him. When they called a time out (before Brown's final free throw), I told him I was going with him the rest of the way, regardless."

Harrison said he thought the win showed a lot of character by his players. "We played well enough to win at George Mason and James Madison. But beating a team that's been playing so well recently shows that they haven't given up. Maybe now the pendulum is starting to swing back our way," Harrison said.

"Now we've got to go up to American and on the road we've got to have a stiff upper lip," Manwaring said. "Some tournament time we'll be back and have everybody healthy."

Hicks started the second half with another basket and then Henry hit for the Pirates, VCU rattled off three in a row. Thompson, a transfer from N.C. State, hit the first two and Stinnie made the third to open up a 40-32 lead.

But the Pirates struggled back over the next few minutes, and finally tied it up on a turnaround jumper in the lane by Bass with 7:51 left, 46-46.

That set up the final race to the wire.

Henry finished with 15 points to lead the Pirates while Bass had 14 and Edwards added 10. Henry also led the ECU rebounding with 10 while Edwards contributed seven as the Pirates held a 29-25 edge in that department.

Stinnie led the Rams with 13 while Allen hit 12.

East Carolina shot a blazing 70 percent in the first half and 50 percent in the second for a fine 59.5 percentage in the game. They held the Rams to just 40.4 percent for the contest.

The win boosts the Pirates to 10-9, while VCU drops to 13-8 on the year.

East Carolina will return home for a two-game stand against Colonial Athletic Association foes starting Saturday when American visits for a 7:30 p.m. game. Navy comes in on Monday, also at 7:30 p.m.

ODU Runs By Lady Pirates

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

Old Dominion took control late in the first half and then blew East Carolina out in the second period for a 90-57 women's college basketball win Wednesday night.

The Lady Monarchs took the lead for good with 5:20 to go in the first half and began a 17-6 streak that put ODU up 36-26 at the half.

"I thought it took our girls a while to get used to how physical the game was," said ODU coach Marianne Stanley. "We knew with (Monique) Pompili out, we had to take advantage."

ECU played its third straight game without Pompili, who has an injured thumb.

"They've (ODU) got everything they need," said ECU coach Emily Manwaring. "Even though they're only 9-9, some of those losses have been to top 10 teams. We've just got to do with what we've got."

The Lady Monarchs completed their adjustment over the final five minutes of the opening period. Marie Christian began the ODU streak when she hit on a layup and a foul shot for a three point play to put ODU up 22-19.

ODU promptly gained possession again before ECU's Irish Hamilton came up with a steal from Christian but Christian then stole it back and hit Bridget Jenkins, whose jumper made it 24-20 with 4:20 remaining.

Sara Gray countered with two free throws for ECU to make it 24-22 before Christian hit a jumper to bring the ODU lead back to four at 26-22.

Delphine Mabry hit for ECU to pull the Lady Pirates back within 26-24.

ODU then scored 10 points in a row. Kelly Lyons stared things off with a layup. Jenkins connected on a jumper, followed by a layup by Lyons to make it 32-24.

Stephanie Garner added two free throws for the Lady Monarchs before Goodson finished off the streak with a short jumper that made it 36-24 with 43 seconds left.

A layup by Hamilton with two seconds remaining in the first half broke the ECU drought and brought the Lady Pirates within 10 at 36-26.

"I felt like the first 10 minutes of this game were typical of how these two teams always play," Stanley said. "I felt like we kind of broke things open with our defense and our rebounding. I thought our defense was real solid."

ECU came out pressing in the second half and was able to close the gap to six at 44-38 on a free throw by Bethea with 15:14 remaining.

Donna Harrington, who led ODU with 19 points, hit to put the Lady Monarchs up 46-38 before Jody Rodriguez hit a jumper to narrow the lead to 46-40.

ODU then went on an 8-0 tear to push out ahead by 14 at 54-40, keyed by two baskets by Harrington.

That was as close as ECU would get the rest of the game as the Lady Monarchs continued to build on their lead, going up by as many as 35 points.

"I thought maybe we'd try a little zone press in the first few minutes of the second half," Manwaring said. "The first few times they turned the ball over and then they took us apart."

Bethea led ECU with 22 points and was the Lady Pirates only double figure scorer. She hit seven of 12 but connected on only three of eight in the first half when the game was on the line.

"Alma was a little more aggressive (tonight)," Manwaring said. "She gets her body going but she doesn't (always) get the touch on it." Manwaring added that it was tough for Bethea being alone on the inside without Pompili.

Overall, the coach said she was happy with the team's aggressiveness.

"We're doing a better job (on offense)," she said. "We've really worked since Tuesday on getting our people posted up but our perimeter people are still playing (too far) out."

ECU falls to 11-7 and hits the road for a Colonial Athletic Association game against American on Saturday night.

"Now we've got to go up to American and on the road we've got to have a stiff upper lip," Manwaring said. "Some tournament time we'll be back and have everybody healthy."

Rose Hosts Northern

Rose High School's Rampants, leading the Big East Conference with a perfect 7-0 record, returns to action Friday night to play host to Northern Nash.

The Rampants, 13-2 overall, will be seeking to start the second half of the league season with another victory, moving another step closer to claiming a league championship — and first seeding in the state tournament for the conference.

Meanwhile, the Rampettes, also unbeaten in the league at 7-0, have an 11-2 overall mark, and will be trying to extend their record also.

Junior varsity action begins at 4:30 p.m., with the girls' game following at approximately 6 p.m. and the varsity boys at around 7:45 p.m.

Elliott In New Record

TALLADEGA, Ala. (AP) — Bill Elliott set an unofficial stock car speed record of 214.66 mph during a test run at the Alabama International Motor Speedway, breaking the old mark by more than 2 mph.

Elliott's car toured the 2.66-mile track in 44.61 seconds Tuesday to top the previous mark of 212.229 mph that he set during qualifying for the 1986 Winston 500 at Talladega.

The old mark, however, remains the official record because Tuesday's run came during an unofficial test session, NASCAR officials said.

Smith, Heels Pop Clemson

By TOM FOREMAN Jr.
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina guard Kenny Smith said his knee didn't feel good before he faced Clemson in an Atlantic Coast Conference basketball showdown, but when the night was over, it was the Tigers who were feeling the pain.

Smith missed last Saturday's victory over Georgia Tech after he sprained his knee in last Friday's practice. He celebrated his return to the lineup by scoring a career-high 41 points as the top-ranked Tar Heels rallied from a 19-point deficit and knocked off the 14th-rated Tigers 108-99.

"I walked out today and it was still hurting slightly," said Smith, who made 14 of 19 shots from the field, including six of nine 3-pointers. "I came out in pregame and shot around and it still didn't feel right."

Smith said he made one cutting move on the knee and it felt fine. Then, he led the assault on the Tigers which erased the deficit in the first half and led the second-half rally that raised the Tar Heels to a 7-0 ACC mark and an 18-1 record overall.

The Tar Heels outscored Clemson 22-5 over a six-minute span in the second half to erase a 78-73 deficit and take a 95-83 edge with 2:49 left. Smith, whose previous high was 23 points, had eight points during the run as he scored 25 points in the final 20 minutes.

North Carolina cut a 59-32 halftime deficit to seven early in the second half and then used a 14-4 run to take a 63-60 lead on Smith's second straight 3-point field goal with 12:57 to go.

"I've never believed in any one player stepping forward. I've never understood that," North Carolina coach Dean Smith said. "I think that's a media thing. About the closest I've seen is Charles Scott against Duke in the ACC tournament."

Scott scored 40 points against the Blue Devils to rally North Carolina to a victory in the tournament finals in 1969.

"It wasn't a one-man show, but Kenny certainly did his part," Coach Smith said.

J.R. Reid scored 22 points and grabbed 10 rebounds for the Tar Heels, who outrebounded the Tigers 36-26. Jeff Lebo added 20 points.

Clemson 18-2 and 4-2, was led by Jerry Pryor with 24 points, while Horace Grant had 19. Michael Brown added 17, including five of six 3-pointers, while Anthony Jenkins had 16 and Michael Tait 11. Coach Cliff Ellis gave some credit to North Carolina.

"We hung in there," Ellis said. "They are just a great team."

In the other conference game, Virginia claimed a 61-60 victory over North Carolina State in a game decided by a rule instituted this season. Outside the league, Maryland downed James Madison 99-76 and Wake Forest nipped Richmond 64-61 in overtime.

The Wolfpack had a 60-59 lead and appeared to be in control after Charles Shackelford blocked Andrew Kennedy's jumper with 16 seconds left and John Johnson fouled Vinny Del Negro, a 90 percent free throw shooter.

Enter the new rule.

Following a Virginia timeout, Del Negro failed to get to the free throw line within the allotted 15 seconds, a rule which applies in the last two minutes of play and the resulting lane violation turned the ball over to Virginia.

The Cavaliers quickly inbounded to Johnson, who went the length of the court to score.

"The rule on the timeout was one of those things we were praying for," Virginia coach Terry Holland said.

Wolfpack coach Jim Valvano felt robbed.

"I've lost games in a lot of ways, but this one is absurd," said Valvano. "It's embarrassing for the conference. It's not the intent of the rule to take the game away from the kids. It's a silly way to lose a basketball game. It's a terrible way to lose a basketball game."

Tom Sheehy led Virginia with a season-high 20 points while Andrew Kennedy tallied 15 and Mel Kennedy 10.

Del Negro led the Wolfpack with a season-high 23 points, hitting five of eight three-point shots, while Bennie Bolton contributed 16 points.

The Cavaliers improved to 14-4 overall and 4-2 in the ACC. The Wolfpack fell to 12-6 and 4-3.

At Harrisonburg, Va., junior center Derrick Lewis scored 29 points, grabbed 23 rebounds and blocked 12 shots as the Terrapins knocked off the Dukes.

Freshman forward Steve Hood scored 22 points, and sophomore reserve guard Ivan Powell came off the bench to score 16 as the Terrapins improved to 6-7 with their first road victory this season.

Mark Cline broke a tie with a free throw with six seconds left in overtime and Tyrone Bogues added two free throws as Wake Forest climbed to 9-8.

With the score knotted at 61, Wake Forest had the ball and a chance to take the lead. But Scott Stapleton stole the ball and drove to the basket.

He missed the dunk and got a technical foul for hanging onto the rim.

Cline, who led Wake Forest with 20 points, sank the free throws, giving the Demon Deacons a 62-61 lead. After a timeout, Bogues was fouled and converted both ends of a one-and-one with three seconds to play.

Richmond's Benji Taylor got off a shot before the buzzer, but his three-point attempt bounced off the back of the rim.

Tonight, Duke goes to Georgia Tech.

Reid On A Roll

LPGA Opens 1987 Season

BOCA RATON, Fla. (AP) — The $200,000 Mazda Classic offers a fresh start for a field of 144 golfers on the LPGA Tour, including 1986 Player of the Year Pat Bradley.

The winner of three of the circuit's four major titles last season, Bradley begins the 1987 season today with aspirations to not only duplicate the success she enjoyed a year ago, but to improve her game.

"I'm not setting goals to outdo what I did last year," said Bradley, who earned a record $492,021 to boost her lifetime winnings to an LPGA-high $2,286,218. "There are ways to do better and I hope I will find those ways."

Bradley, who won a total of five tournaments in 1986, earned nearly $202,000 more than Betsy King, the next player on LPGA money list. She and JoAnne Carner, beginning her 18th season with $2,013,991, are the only women who have topped the $2 million mark in career earnings.

Hagler Says Leonard Fight To Be Memorable

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Undisputed world middleweight champ Marvelous Marvin Hagler expects his fight with Sugar Ray Leonard will be remembered for a long time.

Hagler, who has hinted that he's considering retirement after the match with Leonard, figures the bout will generate the crowd and purse that will not be matched for years to come.

"I'm making history without even trying," said Hagler at a press conference Wednesday.

"This fight will draw probably the (greatest) crowd of all fights and the biggest purse, which probably won't be touched for a long time. I have to feel very proud about that."

The fight, which will also be televised nationwide on a pay-per-view basis, is expected to gross $100 million.

Hagler and Leonard will meet April 6 at an already sold-out Caesars Palace in Las Vegas, Nev. He set up training camp in Palm Springs on Wednesday.

The reigning middleweight champ has successfully defended his title 12 straight times, and at one time expressed interest in breaking Carlos Monzon's record of 14 consecutive title defenses.

But he thinks the recognition he would get from the fight with Leonard, a former Olympic gold medalist and undisputed world welterweight champion who hasn't fought since 1984, would more than match the recognition he would gain from beating Monzon's record.

He said the fight with Leonard would be a highlight in his career.

"I think I can walk away after this fight and feel very proud and happy with myself about my accomplishments," said Hagler.

Hagler, who has a career record of 62-2-2 with 52 knockouts, is guaranteed a purse of $12 million. Leonard, 33-1 with 24 knockouts, is guaranteed $11 million.

Hagler, undefeated in his last 37 fights dating back to 1976, said he's fighting Leonard because "I'm the true champion and have given every opponent an opportunity to dethrone me."

But he also said Leonard should have been forced to fight other top contenders — including John Mugabi, Thomas Hearn and Donald Curry — before getting a title fight.

Aussie Bosses Fling Insults

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Australia's America's Cup symbol is a yellow kangaroo in a fighting stance with red boxing gloves. It might also be Kookaburra boss Kevin Parry flinging verbal haymakers at Alan Bond.

The fracas occurred at a news conference after Parry's yacht, Kookaburra III, had eliminated Australia IV. Bond's hope to defend the Cup he won for Australia in 1983.

Instead of a "Love Boat" scene of mutual congratulations, Parry fired a barrage at Bond, accusing him of innuendoes and spite.

Like an iceberg, much of this uproar lies under water.

Begin with Perth. For so long, the upper crust of the city were landed aristocrats who made immense fortunes in livestock and wheat. When they talked of "going home," they meant visiting Britain.

Proper Perthites sent their boys to Guilford Grammar School, which had English masters and a chapel to rival King's College "back home" in Cambridge, England.

Their fathers gathered downtown at the Weld Club, a male sanctuary where the chairs are leather, the walls are adorned with tiger skin and women are allowed only for dinner. Sport meant horse racing or a spot of golf.

If one must sail, he did it at the Royal Freshwater Bay Yacht Club, not the Royal Perth Yacht Club which was for newly rich businessmen. The old establishment would have thought Bond's $26 million yacht was "vulgar," a yachtsman said.

But 20 years ago, Perth was a little pond with some very wealthy frogs who wanted to keep it that way.

"Even when the jet age reached Perth, natives looked at the passengers as if they came from outer space," John Hamilton, assistant editor of the West Australian newspaper, said.

Modern Perth was really the result of immense ore finds up north and astronaut John Glenn's epic space circumnavigation. Fellow astronaut Gordon Cooper suggested Perth turn its lights on as a beacon for Glenn.

Lord Mayor Freddie Howard scoffed that it would be a waste of electricity. Townsfolk got their backs up, turned on the juice and even strung Christmas tree lights from clotheslines.

Glenn and the rest of the world suddenly took notice of this remote city in Western Australia. Howard even reversed field and attended Glenn's triumphal homecoming parade in New York. Vast discoveries of nickel and iron about the same time turned Perth into a boom town. Stock in mining companies like Poseidon skyrocketed from 50 cents to $360. What went up came down as quickly, but a new entrepreneurial attitude had come to town.

"Clever people suddenly saw you could make a buck here," Hamilton said, "and the climate was good."

Bond and Parry were clever. Bond, a school dropout at age 14, parlayed sign painting into a giant landscape of companies that have made him just about a billionaire by local estimate.

His five races for the Cup have made him a folk hero. He is naturally gregarious. People call "G'day, Bondy" when they see him on the street and he "G'days" right back.

Parry is more private. Son of a backyard furniture maker, his intelligence won him a scholarship to a state school for the gifted. A 15-year-old classmate, noticing how many metal roofs there were in town, started a company to paint them and hired his mates to do the work. He is now rich, as is Parry, reportedly third wealthiest in town behind Bond and Robert Holmes, another local entrepreneur.

Parry parlayed his father's backyard lathe into a furniture business, stores, oil, communications, mining and high technology.

He was not a sailor as Bond was. But the two, who swam in different social circles, had lunch one day. Parry thought it would be helpful for Australia's defense of the Cup if Bond's syndicate had some competition.

Parry gathered technicians who told him it would cost $8 million to build and race his three Kookaburras. He asked them to recheck the figures.

"They came back and said it would be $10 million. When they did, the bills were already $16 million," a Perth yachtsman said.

Bond was a showman who had been handling the press for years. Parry, no extrovert, was new to the game.

Bond is comfortable behind the wheel of the Cup, which has become an advertising machine. Parry seems ill at ease, even secretive.

One source says Parry may resent Bond's popularity with the populace. Furthermore, the day Parry's yachtsmen sank the Bondies, Bond announced that he was buying a bundle of Australian TV stations for $1.2 million that would make him the owner of 59 percent of the viewing audience.

"The day should have been Parry's, but Bond upstaged him. I think that's what set him off," Hamilton said.

After eliminating New Zealand, Dennis Conner, skipper of American challenger Stars & Stripes, returned to port like a World War I fighter pilot buzzing the aerodrome after a winning dogfight. He sailed into the harbor tacking from one cheering crowd to another.

Parry, on the other hand, chose the news conference after his triumph to fling harsh words at the Bond camp. He said he did it to "defend my mates" after Bond told Parry not to lose the Cup or "we'll have to go get it back."

Such rough stuff, Hamilton said, probably prompted considerable discussion in the Weld Club smoking room.

"They probably don't understand all this Cup business. People wearing kangaroos on their shirt. And Gucci giving America's Cup briefs to the Italian crewmen. They're probably snorting into their port or having another gin and tonic against the heat of the day."

"They're millionaires who never get their names in the paper. Bond and Parry are a new breed."

Farmville Takes Win

GRIMESLAND — Farmville Middle School defeated hosting G.R. Whitfield in a junior high school basketball game Wednesday, 59-28.

M. Foreman led Farmville with 17 points while Tyrell Barnhill was high for Whitfield with seven points.

The Whitfield girls were forced to forfeit their game to Farmville due to a lack of players because of illness.

Ebron Leads Viking Win

MOREHEAD CITY — Troy Ebron led a balanced scoring attack as D.H. Conley overcame West Carteret, 50-43, in Coastal Conference basketball action Wednesday night.

In the girl's game, West Carteret took a 35-20 win over the Valkyries.

Conley trailed by two after the first quarter of the boy's game but took the lead for good with 1:18 remaining in the first half and led 24-22 at the intermission.

The Vikings expanded that to 36-30 at the end of the third period and never looked back.

Ricky Farrow and Phil Medlin chipped in 10 points apiece for Conley, which improved to 9-7 overall and 5-1 in the conference.

Eric Lewis led West Carteret with 17 points.

Cindy Murdoch scored 12 points and Laura Brown added 10 as West Carteret topped the Lady Vikings, 35-20.

West Carteret shut Conley out in the third quarter, outscoring the Valkyries 12-0 to take control.

Trellany Boyd led Conley, 7-10 and 1-5, with eight points.

The Vikings return to action at Washington on Friday.

North Edgecombe Sweeps Indians

CONWAY — North Edgecombe handed Chocowinity's girls basketball team its first loss of the Tobacco Belt Conference season Wednesday night, taking a 40-39 decision.

North Edgecombe also downed the Tribe boys by a 69-49 score.

Chocowinity's girls went into the game with a 12-0 record in the conference, 13-1 overall.

North Edgecombe, however, built up a 12-8 lead in the first period and matched points with the Lady Tribe in the second frame for a 21-17 halftime edge. In the third quarter, the Lady Warriors again outscored Chocowinity, 10-9, to hold onto a 31-28 advantage. Chocowinity, which had trailed by as much as 12 rallied in the final period, and finally tied it at 39-39, but Shonika Hill hit a free throw with eight seconds left to give the lead back to North Edgecombe, 40-39, and the Tribe missed a shot at the horn that could have pulled it out for it.

Hill led the Warriors with 12 while Drucilla Crawford had 12 and China Grice had 10 for Chocowinity.

North Edgecombe's boys pushed out into a 17-10 lead in the first period of their game and held off the Indians, 14-13, in the second period. That gave the Warriors a 31-23 lead to take into the dressing rooms.

The Warriors continued to inch away in the third period, building the lead to 48-39. They ran away in the final period, 21-10, to wrap it up.

Jeff Whitaker and Willie Kea each had 15 to lead North Edgecombe while Anthony Davis added 14 and Rodney Conyers hit 11.

Curtis Myers had 18 and both Daryl Moore and Martin Abdullah had 10 to pace Chocowinity.

Chocowinity's boys fall to 8-7 overall, 7-6 in league play. They play host to Columbia on Friday.

Garrett Lifts Indiana Past Illini

By The Associated Press
Dean Garrett scored the go-ahead basket then came up with the blocked shot that gave Indiana undisputed possession of first place in the Big Ten as the Hoosiers defeated Illinois, 69-66.

Garrett, a junior college transfer, led the Hoosiers with 20 points, nine rebounds and six blocked shots, and hit a jumper in the lane with 1:35 to play to break a 64-64 tie. He then blocked a shot by Illinois' Ken Norman, retrieved the ball and got it to Steve Alford who made two free throws with 30 seconds to play to seal the victory.

Indiana Coach Bob Knight praised Garrett, almost.

"Garrett has a long way to go," Knight said. "He was a key in the second half. He played very well the last 10 minutes and made some crucial plays on both ends."

The Hoosiers, 16-2 and 7-1, hold a half-game lead over Iowa and Purdue. Illinois, 14-5 and 5-3, was led by Norman and Lowell Hamilton with 16 points each.

No. 9 Alabama 80, OT
Florida allowed Alabama to erase a 14-point lead in the second half, but the Gators used the long jumper in overtime for the victory that tied the teams atop the Southeastern Conference standings.

The Gators, 16-4 and 8-1, held a 56-42 lead early in the second half but the Crimson Tide, which had a 12-game winning streak snapped, chipped away with 3-pointers — three by Derrick McKey — and tied the game 74-74 with eight seconds left to force the overtime.

The extra period belonged to Florida as Joe Lawrence, who scored all 18 of his points on 3-pointers, nailed two in the opening 1:30 and the Gators made eight of 11 free throws to take the victory.

"I thought we had good pressure on them, but they jacked up a couple of shots just this side of Jupiter and they went in," Alabama Coach Wimp Sanderson said.

Andrew Moten led Florida with 25 points, while McKey led the Crimson Tide, 15-3 and 8-1, with 27 points and 10 rebounds.

Providence 82, No. 11 Georgetown 79
Ernie Lewis made three 3-pointers in the final 2:02, the last with two seconds to play as the Friars, 15-3 and 5-2, snapped an 11-game losing streak to Georgetown, which was led by Reggie Williams, who scored 33 points and grabbed 18 rebounds.

Perry McDonald gave Georgetown, 14-3 and 4-3, its last lead, 77-76, with a free throw with 1:25 left. Lewis' 3-pointer with 44 seconds left made it 79-77. Two free throws by Jonathan Edwards 14 seconds later tied the Big East game and set the stage for Lewis' winning bomb from deep in the right corner.

Three minutes into the second half, tempers flared briefly as Providence's Jacek Duda fouled Georgetown's Mark Tillmon on a breakaway. The coaches exchanged words about the play and both were slapped with technicals.

"We foul a lot because we were aggressive," Providence's Rick Pitino said of his team which was called for 30 fouls compared to the Hoyas' 22. "Maybe he (Thompson) was trying to psych up his team."

"If you were playing the way we were, you've got to do something," Thompson said. "I'm a competitive person. I don't have any hard feelings."

The Panthers, 16-4 and 5-2, led by at least 12 points throughout the second half of the Big East game. Charles Smith, the Panthers' leading scorer at 18.2, was held to four in a foul-plagued performance, while Jerome Lane, the nation's leading rebounder who scored 27 against Syracuse, had just 11 points. Curtis Aiken and Rod Brookin picked up the scoring slack for Pitt with 21 and 17 points, respectively.

James Major led Seton Hall, 11-7 and 2-7, with 17 points.

Louisiana State 75, No. 18 Auburn 73
Louisiana State blew a 17-point halftime lead but rallied for the Southeastern Conference victory.

Auburn, 11-5 and 4-4, managed a 57-56 lead with just under 12 minutes to play, but Louisiana State, 13-9 and 4-6, took the lead right back on a field goal by Anthony Wilson and was never headed.

Wilson, who finished with 25 points, was a one-man show for the Tigers in the first half scoring 19 of his points, including five 3-pointers. Jeff Moore led Auburn with 21 points and the junior had a chance to tie the game but his shot in the final seconds missed and he lost the rebound in the lane as the buzzer sounded.

Washburn Admits Drug Problem

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Golden State Warriors Coach George Karl says he's hopeful that rookie Chris Washburn is able to iron out his troubles — and that Washburn's decision to enter drug rehabilitation will eliminate one of the distractions that has slowed down his club.

The Warriors announced Wednesday that Washburn, a rookie from North Carolina State who had skipped practices or showed up late several times in the past few months, has voluntarily sought treatment under the NBA's drug program.

"I just hope it works out for him," Karl said. "I'd like to think about the positive, but there's a sadness for a young man who needs to get grips on who he is and what he is and what it is to give respect to his body and his potential."

"The Washburn thing has been a distraction, but that can't be the reason for the loss in this game," Karl added after Wednesday's 131-104 loss in Phoenix, the Warriors' fifth straight loss.

"I can't honestly say that it was something that could be ruled out in light of his behavior," said Warriors center Joe Barry Carroll. "It's unfortunate, and we all hope it's something he can overcome."

Another teammate, Purvis Short, said, "I just hope and pray he's able to get himself together. You never want to see it happen to a guy because you're right at the edge where you can lose everything."

The Warriors announced that Washburn is expected to remain for at least four weeks at the ASAP Center in Van Nuys, Calif., an NBA-sanctioned facility near Los Angeles. Team officials did not say what drugs are involved in Washburn's case.

Washburn, 21, was the third player chosen in last spring's draft.

The 6-foot-11 forward and center started the Warriors' first two games this season, but he quickly worked his way to the bench partly because of several missed practices.

"I can't deny there were suspicions," said Karl. "He missed two practices this week. Sunday, he said his car was in the shop. Tuesday, I didn't even bother to ask."

Washburn was placed on the injured list on Tuesday because of a kidney ailment, which was not connected to any drug problem, the Warriors said.

"His kidney problem is no smoke-screen," Karl said. "He was in the hospital for kidney malfunctions. He does have a kidney problem."

Washburn has played in 27 games, averaging 10 minutes per contest and 3.5 points per game. Last season, his only full season at N.C. State, he averaged 17.6 points and 6.7 rebounds per game.

Washburn was the third pick in the NBA draft behind Brad Daugherty and the late Len Bias, who died of cocaine intoxication two days after the draft.

"Chris is a fine person and an exceptional athlete, and we look forward to his return to the Warriors," said Dan Finnane, the team president.

Under the NBA drug program, players are not permanently disqualified the first two times they voluntarily step forward for drug abuse treatment. However, a player who is tested positive for drugs without first volunteering for treatment will be banned for life, with the possibility of reinstatement after two years.

On Jan. 13, Lewis Lloyd and Mitchell Wiggins of the Houston Rockets were permanently banned after testing positive for cocaine. Walter Davis of Phoenix, Quintin Dailey of the Los Angeles Clippers and John Lucas of Milwaukee previously have been treated for drug problems without being permanently suspended.

"If he can get this problem straightened out, we will re-evaluate and redefine his role with us and go forward," Karl said.

Sonics Surprise Lakers

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

The Seattle SuperSonics, expected to be one of the worst teams in the NBA this season, have convinced the Los Angeles Lakers that they aren't.

Tom Chambers, Xavier McDaniel and Dale Ellis — each averaging between 22 and 24 points per game — scored 37, 28 and 25 points, respectively, and the Sonics outrebounced the Lakers 65-46 Wednesday night en route to a 125-101 victory over the team with the best record in the NBA.

"They are a vastly improved team than earlier in the year, and they're going to make a lot of noise before it's all over," Lakers Coach Pat Riley said. "They certainly opened our eyes."

Riley is most impressed with the job Seattle Coach Bernie Bickerstaff is doing with a young team.

"Bernie is as deserving a coach as there is in the league for Coach of the Year. When you start hanging a plaque for Coach of the Year, he deserves the award more than anybody," Riley said.

In other NBA game, it was Boston 132, Chicago 103; Philadelphia 109, Cleveland 107; Phoenix 131, Golden State 104; and Los Angeles Clippers 98, New Jersey 91.

Seattle used two 9-0 streaks in the second half to rout the Lakers after the Sonics' grabbed a 63-55 halftime lead.

The first surge, which started with Seattle ahead by six points, gave the Sonics a 74-59 advantage. The second 9-0 run, in the first 3:29 of the fourth period, made it 103-82.

Chambers said Seattle's big rebounding advantage kept Los Angeles from using its vaunted running game.

"They didn't have any fast-break hoops tonight," he said. "That's because we were rebounding so well."

While Chambers, McDaniel and Ellis were the only Sonics with double-figure scoring, they also had three double-figure rebounders. Alton Lister had 16, McDaniel 13 and Chambers 10.

"We played exceptionally well tonight when it counted. We sustained it the whole game," Bickerstaff said. "Win or lose, we are an exciting basketball team to watch."

Magic Johnson had 24 points and 11 rebounds for the Lakers and James Worthy added 20 points. Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 18 points and 11 rebounds, but he was scoreless in the first half.

"Right now our mental tenacity is not good enough. We always seem to have a period of funk in January and February," Riley said. "We have to collect ourselves and kick out of it."

Clippers 98, Nets 91
The Clippers beat New Jersey for only their third victory in 36 games.

Los Angeles, 6-36 for the season, forced a season-high 32 turnovers by the Nets, whose 11-31 mark is the second-worst in the NBA.

The Clippers took control of the game in the fourth quarter with an 8-1 spurt that gave them an 88-77 lead with 5:25 remaining. New Jersey got no closer than seven points the rest of the way.

Darnell Valentine had 20 points and

Celtics 132, Bulls 103
Boston hit 29 of 43 field-goal attempts en route to a 71-46 halftime lead, then coasted over Chicago.

Larry Bird and Dennis Johnson scored 26 points each and Kevin McHale added 22 for the Celtics, all in the first three quarters. Johnson finished 11-for-13 from the field with 10 assists.

76ers 109, Cavaliers 107
Philadelphia survived a 13-point third quarter and Andrew Toney scored 14 of his 21 points in the final period against Cleveland.

The Cavaliers outscored the 76ers 26-13 in the third quarter to take a 85-79 lead, but Philadelphia started the final period with a 7-0 spurt, and a 13-4 run later in the quarter put the 76ers in front to stay.

Cliff Robinson scored 23 for Philadelphia and Charles Barkley added 14 points and 14 rebounds despite being ejected from the game with two technical fouls in the third period. Rookie Johnny Newman scored 22 points for Cleveland.

Suns 131, Warriors 104
Phoenix beat Golden State for the fourth straight time this season as Larry Nance scored 29 points.

Nance had 19 while the Suns grabbed a 65-49 halftime advantage and went on to lead by as many as 29 points in the fourth quarter. The Warriors, who have lost five straight, scored only 17 points in the second quarter, making just 33 percent of their field-goal attempts while Phoenix shot 79 percent from the field.

Ed Pinckney finished with 19 points and rookie guard Jeff Hornacek added 18 assists — one short of the Suns' club record. Chris Mullin paced the Warriors with 21 points.

Youth Has Woody Allen Type Role In 'Radio Days'

By JOSEPH GELMIS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Woody Allen has no on-screen role in "Radio Days," but while he narrates, Seth Green plays, "a red-headed kid with almost no teeth who enjoys listening to radio, playing with his friends, watching out for German planes and, also, looking at naked women, heh, heh, heh."

In other words, precisely the sort of precocious know-it-all scamp you'd imagine Woody to have been as a 12 year old. You can hear echoes of the adult Allen's caustic humor, as the boy reminisces about the scene in "Radio Days" in which his rabbi and his parents take turns smacking him.

"I wore no padding whatsoever," he says. "And Ken Mars (the rabbi's) depth perception was off — he wasn't wearing glasses — so he clobbered me. We had to stop shooting. I don't blame him. But he left a handmark across my face and a black eye."

impression. Seth adds: "Funny, isn't it, that the guy who played the Nazi in 'The Producers' played a rabbi in this one? Heh, heh, heh."

One has to remind oneself while interviewing this self-assured actor on the telephone that he's just 53 inches tall and won't be 13 until Feb. 8. He spoke after school — Lambertson Public School, in Philadelphia — let out and Seth had returned to the row house where he lives with his mother, a teacher of math and computer science; and his sister, 14.

"Seth being in show business is his own idea," says his mother, Barbara. "At 6 1-2, he told us we were wasting the best years of his career. He made a phone call to a relative who was involved in casting in Philadelphia and said, 'Help me, they won't take me to auditions.'"

By the age of 7, Seth was doing TV commercials. Half a lifetime later, he is now a veteran of television and motion pictures. "The downside," says his mother. "It's a merry-go-round. Very hard on Seth's father and sister. We are away a lot — 18 weeks on 'Radio Days.' I was a production assistant on the movie, walked around with a walkie-talkie doing odd jobs. It is better to be part of the crew than to be the mother of the child on a moviet set."

what I liked about him. He gave you a lot of room.

"I don't really know why Woody chose me," says Seth. "I suppose I reminded him of himself as a kid. And he liked the way I read. I'm just glad I got the part. Working with him was incredible. I found it a pleasure and what's the word for it? A privilege. An honor. Feel free to use either word."

LEAVING — Actress Victoria Principal has notified producers of the nighttime soap "Dallas" she will leave the show when her contract ends this season. She is now negotiating with other companies for television deals, including her own series. She has been with "Dallas" for nine years. (AP Laserphoto)

ABC-TV Says 'Amerika' Will Stay On Air Despite Chrysler's Pullout

By SKIP WOLLENBERG
AP Business Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — ABC, with a fresh commitment from two advertisers, says its miniseries "Amerika" is on track regardless of economic pressure and loss of Chrysler as a sponsor, reportedly at a cost of $5 million.

General Foods Corp. and North-western Mutual Life Insurance Co. said Wednesday they were standing by plans to advertise on the 14 1/2-hour program that depicts a Soviet takeover of the United States.

Chrysler Corp., the single largest sponsor of the week-long miniseries, scheduled for next month, said Tuesday it would pull its ads because it felt the program didn't mesh with its commercial theme "The Pride Is Back — Born in America."

The miniseries deals with life in the United States after a Soviet takeover accomplished with cooperation of an international peace-keeping force.

It has drawn criticism from the left and right, over whether international relations could be damaged, whether the peacekeeping troops too closely resemble United Nations' forces and whether the Soviets are portrayed too sympathetically.

ABC said it would look for other sponsors for the time Chrysler ordered but that it would hold Chrysler responsible to make up any difference if it gets less than Chrysler had agreed to pay.

ABC said it was "concerned that certain organizations for their own special interests have criticized 'Amerika' sight unseen and would threaten advertisers for supporting the program."

It said the miniseries would run on schedule next month "because we believe in the program, and it will air irrespective of economic pressure."

General Foods has bought 26 commercials, or about 13 percent of the available time on the program, for products such as Jello pudding, Maxwell House coffee and Raisin Bran cereal.

"Our decision to buy time was based on our belief that this was an appropriate dramatic theme, and our intention is to stay in," said spokesman Cliff Sessions from General Foods' headquarters in White Plains.

In Milwaukee, Northwestern Mutual's manager of advertising and corporate information, Santo Saliture, said "we feel very good" about being a sponsor.

Northwestern Mutual has spent nearly $1.3 million to buy eight 30-second commercials over the seven nights.

Saliture said his company had received a few complaints about its sponsorship, but that they seemed to have come from groups "that probably don't know as much about the show as we do." He said Northwestern managers had reviewed four hours of the program.

"It will probably disappoint those who are upset about it," he said.

Chrysler spokesman John Guiniven said from Detroit that Chrysler's action was "strictly an economic decision" about where the company could best spend advertising money. "We are used to pressure and we don't bow to pressure," he said.

Guiniven said the company "didn't receive an inordinate amount of letters on this" but that management, including Chairman Lee Iacocca, decided after looking at six hours of film that it was "not a good match" for Chrysler's commercial approach.

ABC and Chrysler declined to say how much time Chrysler had ordered, but an industry source who spoke on condition of anonymity said the automaker agreed to pay about $5 million for between 36 and 38 of the 204 network commercials.

'Designing Women' Returns To Air Sunday To Finish Out Its Season

By JUDY FLANDER
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service
HOLLYWOOD — After a roller-coaster ride in the ratings that catapulted "Designing Women" out of the CBS schedule after its airing on New Year's Day, the comedy resumes Sunday at 9 p.m. (EST) to finish out the season. It's a choice spot, right after "Murder, She Wrote," which has regularly been in the Top 10.

"We wanted 'Designing Women' back on, and in its original time slot," says the show's creator, Linda Bloodworth-Thomason, who now is more than satisfied. "We have a time period we deserved."

Bloodworth-Thomason, the show's co-executive producer and writer, credits the quick return of "Designing Women" to her husband and co-executive producer, Harry Thomason, who sparked several drives.

They included letter-writing and press-alerting campaign led by Dorothy Swanson, co-founder of Viewers for Quality Television; the efforts of Phyllis Hall, a Los Angeles receptionist who heads a "Designing Women" fan club; and a groundswell of mail from outraged viewers.

Reportedly, more than 50,000 letters have poured in.

Bloodworth-Thomason is the sole writer for "Designing Women," which stars Delta Burke, Dixie Carter, Annie Potts and Jean Smart as four outspoken single Southern women who run Sugarbaker's, an interior design company in Atlanta, Ga. Mostly they are a mutual support and comfort society. The show is unique in its use of humor to portray female bonding, and that was one of the chords that touched the viewers who came to its rescue.

In the upcoming hour show, Mary Jo (Annie Potts) takes some of her ex-husband's vitamins. "You know they lose their potency after awhile," remarks Charlene (Jean Smart). "That's OK, so did he," quips Mary Jo. Because of "Designing Women's" irreverent view of patronizing, chauvinistic or smug men, it has sometimes been tarred as "feminist."

Feminism — "a no-no word at the networks" — has, Bloodworth-Thomason says, been wrongly interpreted to mean "that women are bitter, unhappy and anti-male. Her 'Designing Women' and its stars 'are women who like men.'"

Bloodworth-Thomason, 40, is a sweet-faced woman who "loves what I believe feminism really is, and that is living up to your female potential in every way. Feminism isn't a war between men and women. We can all join hands."

Strong, important issues are on her agenda. In Sunday's show — an hour special — the women insist that Charlene (Jean Smart) get a second opinion when her doctor assures her that the lump in her breast is not malignant and that she needn't come back for six months. "That's what happened to my mother-in-law," Bloodworth-Thomason says, angered. Harry Thomason's mother died of breast cancer Christmas Eve.

The Thomasons had a very bad year in 1986. Both their mothers had been terminally ill during the creation of "Designing Women." Bloodworth-Thomason's mother died Nov. 24.

After Christmas, the Thomasons spent two days in front of the fire in her family home in Poplar Bluff, Mo., during "the most beautiful snowstorm since I was a child and it was the best thing that happened to us all year," says Bloodworth-Thomason. "Harry made up his mind he was going to save the show for me. He went back to California shot out of a cannon."

The first thing he did was contact Swanson and Hall.

"If I were a candidate for president," says a grateful Harry Thomason, "I'd consider getting those two women on board." Swanson's organization, Viewers for Quality Television, came into being two years ago when she and other supporters of CBS' "Cagney & Lacey" mounted the letter-writing campaign that helped bring it back on the air. "I never thought I would feel this strongly about a show again," Swanson said.

An arc of promise, disappointment and anger characterized the tumultuous life of "Designing Women." After its Monday-night premiere, it was CBS' first clear hit of the 1986 fall season with ratings as high as No. 16

Comic Paul Reiser Has Disney Role Opposite 'Punky'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Paul Reiser is earnestly trying to say nice things about the Disney TV movie he made with the kid from "Punky Brewster," but once a comedian, always a comedian.

"What was nice was I got to work with this Soleil Moon Frye," he said. "It was fun. She's a real nice kid. She's like 10 going on 25. We had a brief affair, but not sexual, per se — I bought her some little Gobots."

In "You Ruined My Life," Sunday on ABC, Reiser plays a sort of Henry Higgins to Frye's diminutive Eliza Doolittle.

His character is a computer whiz who tries his luck in Las Vegas but runs up a hefty tab and is coerced into helping the casino manager's smart-mouth daughter get accepted by an exclusive private school.

"It was a cute story and a nice part," said Reiser, noting the film marks the movie debut of successful British commercial director David Ashwell.

Reiser, whose standup career climb was featured in an HBO comedy special a few years ago, got his first big acting break in the 1982 movie "Diner." A small part in "Beverly Hills Cop" ended up mostly on the cutting-room floor. (The role will be reprised in the sequel.)

Last summer's box office megahit "Aliens" has given Reiser his biggest exposure to date, as the Yuppie villain, and he says the resulting celebrity has been "tremendous. It's costing me money just talking to you here."

But seriously .... He is writing a TV pilot to be produced by "Family Ties" creator Gary Goldberg for NBC about a guy "not unlike me in looks or age or speech patterns" who is yanked away from his writing career to run his father's business. It's a situation Reiser said he feared in his own life.

"I realized, here I went out of my way to alter my life, to be in California, to be an actor, to be a writer, and just my luck this show will go and I'll end up in a mock office the rest of my life."

He's also co-writing a feature film with "Diner" director Barry Levinson, set in the world of live television in Washington, D.C., circa 1963.

"It's a comedy. I hate the term 'coming of age,' but it's a coming-of-age piece."

In between projects, Reiser maintains his standup career.

"Standup I probably enjoy the most because it's the most immediate," he said. "It's the one that's fun during the process for me. I don't think acting is fun. I think it's great fun to see a movie that you've been in, if it came out well, and it's a tremendous charge to hand in a 120-page script that you took from inception to the end. But along the way is a lot of tedium and a lot of frustration. "Standup is the only one that's fun on the job, and it's the one I feel is more in line with my psyche — you're there, you're talking, and it's what's coming out of your mouth at the time."

It's just more connected to my personality than the others might be. But more people will see "Aliens" in a weekend than will see me do standup in my lifetime."

Roger Mudd Quits NBC

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC News is parting company with Roger Mudd, whose "1986" program was canceled last month, according to a report published today.

Mudd's departure had been expected since December after the correspondent became engaged in bitter discussions with management about the cancellation of "1986," the news magazine program Mudd co-hosted with Connie Chung.

According to unidentified sources quoted by The New York Times, the network had been negotiating with Mudd's agent for several weeks trying to reach a settlement on the remainder of his contract.

The contract guarantees more than $1 million annually until it expires in 1990.

Neither Mudd nor his agent, Ralph Mann, would comment, the newspaper said.

Bill McAndrew, an NBC spokesman, said early today that he could "not get in touch with NBC officials to confirm or deny" the Times story.

The show began as "American Almanac," a weekly sketch of Americana, but was revamped after poor ratings. Ms. Chung became co-anchor and it was renamed "1986."

Last month, after more poor ratings, it was canceled.

Mudd said the cancellation was like "killing a newspaper" and that NBC had yielded to "the pressure for profits."

The Times said Lawrence K. Grossman, te president of NBC News, accused Mudd of being emotional and acting silly.

Mudd, according to the newspaper, was expected to explore making documentaries and other programs for public television.

ABC Will Name Charles Gibson To Follow Hartman On 'GMA'

By JOHN CARMODY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — ABC Entertainment has called a press conference for Thursday to announce that veteran ABC News correspondent Charles Gibson will replace David Hartman as co-anchor of "Good Morning America," joining Joan Lunden on the show.

Hartman, who announced his withdrawal from the daily grind last October, is expected to end his 11 years and four months with GMA on Feb. 20, with Gibson moving in the following Monday.

Gibson, currently the chief House of Representatives correspondent for ABC News, has been the favorite to succeed Hartman almost from the start, in part because his long career in a variety of network news posts would assure that the morning show's interview and straight news strengths would be maintained at a time when the competition at CBS has turned away completely from any emphasis on hard news after 7:30 a.m.

On the other hand, Gibson's affection for straight news and the gap between top line entertainment and news division salaries posed a major problem for the network.

A story leaked in a New York paper two weeks ago suggesting that Gibson, who was probably in the $250,000-to-$300,000 annual salary range in the news division, was being offered only about $400,000 to work with Lunden, who recently signed a contract in the $700,000-a-year range (Hartman had received at least $2 million annually in recent years but he had put GMA at the top of the morning network race for a five-year span that ended in late 1985 and had kept GMA in sight of NBC's "Today" ever since).

Recording

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Pianist Vladimir Horowitz will record with an orchestra for the first time in eight years, the Deutsche Gramophon company said.

The 84-year-old pianist will begin recording Mozart works next month in Milan accompanied by the La Scala Opera Orchestra, the company said. The recording will be released this year.

On publication of the story in mid-January, ABC's negotiations with Gibson's agent, Cindy Riley, reportedly went back to square one. Gibson, still loyal to News, reportedly had second thoughts about the expense of moving his family to New York for a comparatively low wage.

Riley was unavailable but sources at the ABC News bureau in Washington close to Gibson suggested that Gibson will not only be on parity with Lunden (with "incentives," he reportedly will make about $750,000 a year under a multi-year contract) but that he will retain a connection with ABC News, as the network gears up for election year.

Actress Says 'Convicted' Is Different Prison Movie

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ann Jillian said her eyebrows shot up when her husband-manager Andy Murcia told her the newly arrived script was a prison movie for television.

"I said, 'Oh, no, not another prison picture!'" she recalled. She had been in prison in her last picture, NBC's "Killer in the Mirror."

But she said she found "Convicted: A Mother's Story" was not just another movie about women behind bars.

"It was being made by NBC Productions and they had made (five Emmy-winner) 'An Early Frost,'" she said.

"The first thing that popped out of the script was that it was about priorities. Sure, it's about incarcerated women, but it's also about what priorities do we place on our children."

In "Convicted: A Mother's Story," which NBC will telecast next Monday, Ms. Jillian plays a mother who is separated from her two children when she is sent to prison.

"After a year she learns her children may be put up for adoption by the state," she said. "That's what we focus on — the children. Not women in prison. The children and the psychological effect of being separated from their mother."

Kiel Martin also stars as her boyfriend, who coerces her to "borrow" $10,000 from her employer with the promise that he only needs it for a few days and will return it. But he skips town with the money. Gloria Loring also stars as her sister, who reluctantly agrees to care for the children.

"It's a Living" last year and said at this time she doesn't want to do another series.

"I'm doing more movies than ever before," she said. "I'm getting more scripts than ever before. I'm turning down more stuff than ever before. And it's because people know I'm available because I'm not tied down by a series."

 An anonymous coin collector recently bought this rare 1894 "Barber Head" dime for $83,000. It is one of only 12 known to be in existence. Unlike modern dimes, the Barber Head faces to the right. Today, only the penny's face is turned to the right. The dime got a big boost in 1933. Before that year, it was legal tender only in transactions of ten dollars or less. The U.S. dime is currently minted with 118 grooves, one less than a quarter.

In duplicate, much of the strategy of defensive play centers around scoring 200 points. That is known as the "magic number" because it scores more than any partscore the defenders might have collected had they not elected to defend.
 Overcalls on four-card suits are not usually recommended, but on this hand from the recent Fall North American Championships held in Atlanta, it was directly responsible for East-West reaching their holy grail. South became declarer at three clubs after he elected to reopen the bidding on sub-minimum values, and he paid the price.
 West led his top spade and declarer, looking at seven spades in his combined holding after East had overcalled in that suit, thought the lead was a singleton. Therefore, he was afraid to duck a spade mond loser. The defenders collected two spade tricks and a ruff, two diamonds and a trump for down two, and a top score on the board.

USDA Says Farm Use Of Chemical Pesticides Declines

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farm use of the major chemical pesticides for killing insects, controlling weeds and preventing plant diseases should decline sharply this year because of heavy participation in crop acreage programs, says an Agriculture Department report.

Overall, use could decline to between 405 million and 445 million pounds of active ingredients in 1987, a 6 percent to 15 percent reduction from the 475 million pounds used in 1986.

"Herbicides will account for 85 percent of total pesticide use, followed by insecticides at 12 percent," the report said. "Corn and soybean production account for most of the herbicide use, while corn and cotton dominate insecticide use. Fungicides are most commonly used in peanut production."

The forecasts are in a new outlook report by the department's Economic Research Service, which released a summary of the analysis earlier this month.

Supplies of domestically produced chemicals available for U.S. farm use are expected to be down 4 percent from last year but still adequate to meet 1987 crop needs, the report said. Prices quoted by manufacturers are up slightly from last year.

"Manufacturers have reduced available supplies, reflecting the anticipated decrease in crop acres planted under the 1985 Food Security Act," the report said. "If the price increase is realized at the retail level this coming spring and summer, it could reverse the general decline in pesticide prices over the last 4 to 5 years."

On an aggregate basis used for comparison, herbicide prices declined 13 percent from $4.62 per pound in 1982 to $4.05 per pound in 1986. Insecticide prices fluctuated during the same period between $10 and $10.50 per pound.

"The price of atrazine, a major corn herbicide, declined about 25 percent between 1982 and 1985 but rose 2 percent in 1986," the report said. "The price of trifluralin, a major soybean and cotton herbicide, declined more than 25 percent from 1982 to 1986. Wheat farmers who use 2,4-D for weed control enjoyed a 19 percent price decline during 1982-86."

For insecticides, the major price change was a 25 percent decline during 1982-86 for synthetic pyrethroid, from $68 per pound to $51.

Herbicides were used on 96 percent of the surveyed corn acreage in 1986, similar to the two previous years, the report said. About 96 percent of the soybean acreage also was treated with herbicides. Only 38 percent of the winter wheat was treated with weed-killing chemicals, while farmers treated 86 percent of their spring wheat and 98 percent of their durum.

Mail-Order Ammo Sales Are Soaring

By ROBERT O'MEARA
Associated Press Writer

MILWAUKEE (AP) — People across the country pick up the telephone every day to dial BANG, and Aaron S. Zelman fires off a round of mail-order ammunition.

But Zelman's Worldwide Ammo Inc., believed to be the nation's first mail-order ammunition company selling to the general public, is under attack from critics who say it gives terrorists and criminals easy access to ammunition.

Since Congress approved mail-order ammunition in November, the Milwaukee-based company has been filling an average 200 orders a day, Zelman said.

"Yesterday, I personally handled

100 calls between 8 a.m. and 1 p.m.," he said in a recent interview. "We're going into another printing of our catalog, which we hadn't expected to do for a long time yet. We're putting new phone lines in."

Callers dial a toll-free number whose last four digits spell BANG.

Before Nov. 15, only licensed dealers could buy ammunition via mail order. Congress then changed the Federal Gun Control Act of 1968 to allow customers to receive ammunition through commercial delivery, not the U.S. Postal Service.

Opponents were quick to criticize. "Terrorists and criminals now have virtual access to ammunition, no questions asked," said Michael Hancock, general counsel in Washington for the National Coalition to Ban Handguns. "Now all they need is cash or a credit card."

Rep. Mario Biaggi, D-N.Y., a former police officer who was wounded while on duty, has introduced legislation that would rescind the change in the law.

"It's a very dangerous problem potentially," said Craig Floyd, Biaggi's legislative assistant. "As it now stands, it makes virtually unenforceable state laws on selling ammunition to drug addicts, underage persons, convicted felons and illegal aliens."

Lisa Navarez of Guns and Ammo Magazine, a Los Angeles publication covering the shooting sports industry, said Worldwide Ammo was the only mail-order ammunition supplier for the general public about which she knows.

Zelman "won't have a corner on the market for long," Hancock said. "It's too profitable."

Before the change in the law, the U.S. Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms kept records on sales to licensed dealers. Spokesman Jerry Rudden said the agency wouldn't comment on the mail-order sales.

The National Rifle Association, the nation's largest gun-lobbying group, disagrees with opponents of mail-order sales.

"There's never been any evidence that the prohibition on ammunition sales by mail resulted in a reduction in violent crimes," said Richard Gardiner, assistant general counsel for the Washington, D.C.-based association.

Zelman, who's been a federally licensed firearms dealer for seven years, began selling mail-order bullets as soon as it became legal. He has partners who've invested in the company and a full-time assistant. He declines to say how many people work in his warehouse.

"We're filling a need," he said. "There are 100 million gun owners in the country, more than 99 percent of them law-abiding, and we're selling them ammunition at 20 to 30 percent discount."

For instance, he said he sells .38-caliber Super rifle ammunition at $11.65 a box and customers have told him stores have charged $19.80.

Zelman said he sells everything from .22-caliber bullets to .458-caliber Winchester Magnums, or "elephant bullets." He doesn't sell armor-piercing bullets, the so-called cop-killers.

His orders, he said, total $6,000 a day, while the U.S. ammunition market is $400 million annually.

His only advertising, he said, is a notice in the monthly newsletter of the Gun Owners of America.

Ethanol Firm Paid $29 Million

WASHINGTON (AP) — Archer Daniels Midland Co. received $29.23 million in Agriculture Department subsidies for its ethanol-production operations, 54 percent of all federal subsidies to the gasohol industry, a published report said today.

The payments appeared to be the largest one-time subsidy USDA has provided to a single agricultural producer, according to department officials who released the material under the Freedom of Information Act.

Gasohol is a fuel consisting of nine parts gasoline and one part ethanol made from corn. It accounts for about 10 percent of the national gasoline market.

The subsidy program, castigated by critics as "corporate food stamps," has come under fire even from within the department, with the USDA's energy office saying in a report last year that gasohol production "cannot be justified on economic grounds."

Five other large gasohol firms received the bulk of the remaining subsidies under the program, receiving a total of $18.67 million, according to the data obtained by the Post. In all, 41 companies received subsidies but the top six got almost 90 percent of the money, according to USDA records.

Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng announced the gasohol subsidy program last May 2, following an active lobbying campaign by industry officials. He said it was needed to "permit the industry to survive" at a time of plummeting energy prices and high corn prices.

The Post said ADM officials did not return phone calls seeking comment on the figures, but that company Chairman Dwayne O. Andreas told the newspaper last year the company's ethanol plants had lost several million dollars during one month last spring due to the drop in world oil prices. He said the company was considering closing some or all of its plants if it did not receive immediate government aid.

ADM, based in Decatur, Ill., reported profits for all its businesses of $230.3 million on revenues of $5.3 billion for its last fiscal year ending June 30.

Caltech Study Finds Space Collisions Form Quasars

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Scientists say they have identified a key stage in the birth of quasars, the universe's brightest objects: collisions of spiral-shaped galaxies that form star systems emitting little visible light.

"We think we're seeing quasars in the early stages of formation," David Sanders, an astrophysicist at the California Institute of Technology, said in a report earlier this month.

The star systems, which are known as infrared galaxies, "appear to have all the characteristics of quasars, except they're not yet shining brightly in visible light wavelengths," Sanders said.

They emit 10 times more heat than visible light, he said. Caltech studies of 10 of the systems showed they apparently were formed by the gravity-caused collision of spiral galaxies, Sanders said during the American Astronomical Society's annual meeting.

The theory that galactic collisions form quasars is well-accepted, but Caltech's research is significant because it identifies the infrared galaxies as an intermediate step in quasar formation, said society spokesman Steve Maran, a senior scientist for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration.

About 3,600 quasars have been seen since the class of superbright objects was first identified in 1963. With cores the size of Earth's solar system, the mysterious bodies emit ultraviolet and visible light that outshines galaxies of billions of suns. The most powerful quasars are the brightest objects in the universe.

Photographs made with the 200- and 60-inch telescopes at Caltech's Palomar Observatory, near San Diego, show that the infrared galaxies look like the result of collisions between galaxies with spiral arms.

The infrared galaxies have "a distorted central disk that is essentially the merged product of two individual galaxies and long tidal tails, which are stars that are stripped off" as two galaxies bash into each other, Sanders said.

A second series of studies involved radio telescopes at California's Owens Valley, Arizona's Kitt Peak and Amherst, Mass.

Radio images showed extremely high concentrations of gas in the center of the infrared galaxies, indicating that galactic collisions help concentrate the gas needed to fuel quasars, which are believed to have black holes as their central power generator.

Black holes are objects so dense that their tremendous gravity sucks in even light. But scientists theorize that when gas and dust fall into black holes within quasars, tremendous amounts of energy are spewed outward to produce intense quasar light.

The third set of studies "analyzed the small amount of (visible) light that actually leaks out" from infrared galaxies, Sanders said. "We found the light is more characteristic of what you see coming from a quasar" than from other galactic formations.

Last September, Caltech astronomers Charles Beichman and Tom Soifer announced the discovery of a more advanced stage in quasar formation: an infrared galaxy with an internal power source that was blowing holes in the surrounding shroud of gas and dust.

Infrared galaxies produce more heat than visible light because the quasars believed to be forming within them emit ultraviolet and visible light that heat surrounding dust and gas. They apparently become mature quasars when the dust and gas is blown away.

The infrared galaxies studied in the latest research were identified by the Infrared Astronomical Satellite, which orbited Earth in 1983. They are located between 200 million and 1 billion light years from Earth, or between 1.2 billion trillion and 5.9 billion trillion miles away.

Authors of the new studies were Sanders, Scoville, Soifer, Gerry Neugebauer, Jonathan Elias, Barry Madore, Keith Matthews and Anneila Sargent, all of Caltech; and Judith Young of the University of Massachusetts.

Lasers Offer Alternatives To Surgery On Leg Vessels

By SALLY SQUIRES
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Laser devices may offer an important alternative to bypass surgery and amputation for people who suffer from clogged vessels in the legs.

Known as thermal angioplasty, the technique relies on a laser heat probe to unblock obstructed blood vessels and is sometimes called the "Star Wars" approach to cardiology.

While laser angioplasty is still experimental, researchers recently moved a step closer to gaining final approval from the Food and Drug Administration for its use. On Jan. 23, thermal angioplasty was approved by the FDA's cardiovascular device scientific advisory panel for patients with what doctors call intermittent claudication — a painful cramping of the legs due to blocked blood vessels in the limbs, a condition associated with cigarette smoking and high blood levels of cholesterol.

The procedure is also being tested on a limited basis in patients with completely obstructed heart arteries — a far riskier type of operation, since a mistake resulting in a punctured artery can be fatal.

Yet many researchers believe lasers will one day have a place in treating the major heart arteries.

"Our ultimate goal is to treat total coronary-artery obstruction," said Dr. Timothy Sanborn, a Boston University School of Medicine associate professor and one of the pioneers of this technique.

For the immediate future, however, thermal angioplasty seems to hold the most promise for intermittent claudication. People with this problem have an inadequate supply of blood to the muscles in their legs because partially or totally obstructed blood vessels are unable to carry enough oxygen to extreme parts of the body. As a result, walking just a few steps can produce severe leg cramps.

The main treatments for this condition are bypass surgery (which replaces the blocked vessel); amputation (in the most severe cases); or a newer procedure known as balloon angioplasty, which unclogs the vessel by threading an inflatable device into the artery.

At the American Heart Association's 14th Science Writers Forum last week, Sanborn described how a 10-center study of 219 patients showed that thermal angioplasty — use of the laser — can be an important addition to other methods of treatment for this condition.

Seventy of the patients in the trial "were considered impossible to treat and faced either bypass surgery or amputation," Sanborn said. "Approximately 60 percent of these patients with the so-called 'impossible' lesions were successfully treated" with the laser, he said.

Overall — including the patients whose conditions were less severe — the procedure was successful 72 percent of the time. No symptoms reappeared for at least a year.

While the balloon technique has proved to be a significant alternative to bypass surgery, Sanborn said, there are problems in treating blood vessels that are totally blocked with this procedure. For this reason, balloon angioplasty is successful only in about 56 to 84 percent of cases tried.

In both the balloon and laser techniques, doctors thread a probe through a patient's blood vessels, usually beginning in the leg.

In balloon angioplasty, at the site of the obstruction, a balloon is gently inflated, which opens the blocked vessel. The balloon is then collapsed and withdrawn.

About 25,000 patients undergo conventional balloon angioplasty for intermittent claudication each year.

Storm Can Act As Carrier For Atmospheric Pollution

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thunderstorms appear to act as engines that drive columns of air pollution high into the atmosphere, where it can spread to affect regional and global air chemistry, scientists say.

Researchers, who flew around thunderstorms to trace the movements of polluting gases, say the storms move air from near the surface to higher levels much more quickly than it would travel normally.

In a report published today in the journal Science, scientists from the University of Maryland, the National Center for Atmospheric Research (NCAR) and other institutions said storms cause local pollution to infiltrate global air chemistry.

Pollution such as photochemical smog, acid rain and ozone are serious environmental problems at the city and state levels, the researchers said.

"How far these phenomena extend on the regional or global scale is a major unanswered question in at-

Theorists, including Robert Chatfield of NCAR, suggested that strong vertical mixing of the air, which occurs during thunderstorms, may be an important factor in changing the chemical composition of the atmosphere.

To test the idea, Russell Dickerson and colleagues at Maryland, working with scientists elsewhere, used three aircraft to fly in and around thunderstorms over Oklahoma and Kansas.

Instruments in the planes traced the paths of carbon monoxide, ozone and nitrogen compounds such as nitric acid during the atmospheric disturbances. These data were combined with information from radar, space satellites, weather balloons and instruments on the ground.

Scientists estimate it normally takes about two months for air in the lowest mile of the atmosphere to move up to the higher levels of the troposphere, the weather-producing region that extends to about 10 miles above the surface.

During a thunderstorm, the scientists found, the transport time of columns of air going from the surface to about six miles altitude is a matter of hours, not months.

"Pollutants travel farther at higher altitudes," said the report. "In the lowest layer of the atmosphere, the planetary boundary layer, friction with the earth's surface reduces wind speeds."

ATTENTION PURCHASERS OF MINOLTA MAXXUM OR MINOLTA AF-TELE PRODUCTS

A proposed settlement of a lawsuit brought on behalf of North Carolina Purchasers of Minolta Maxxum and Minolta AF-Tele products has been reached. Purchasers of Minolta Maxxum 7000 or Minolta AF-Tele cameras purchased on or before March 21, 1986, may be entitled to a monetary payment under the proposed settlement. Upon request, a claim form will be mailed to you. To be eligible for any payment, the claim form must be completed and submitted to the North Carolina Attorney General's office at the address indicated below, by April 27, 1987.

The legal rights of Minolta Maxxum and Minolta AF-Tele purchasers are affected by this settlement. If you are such a purchaser and do not wish to be bound by the terms of this settlement, you must expressly exclude your claim. For further information on making or excluding a claim you must contact the North Carolina Attorney General's office. Write to Consumer Protection-Antitrust Division, Post Office Box 629, Raleigh, North Carolina 27602 or call (919) 733-7741. To protect your legal rights, please act promptly.

Association Says 1 Out Of 3 Heart Attack Victims Will Die

By LEE SIEGEL
AP Science Writer

MONTEREY, Calif. (AP) — About 1.5 million people are expected to suffer heart attacks this year and as many as a third of them will be fatal, the American Heart Association says.

Nearly 1 million people will die from heart and circulatory disease, and the cost of the nation's leading cause of death will rise to about $85.2 billion, the association predicted in a report this month.

The non-profit group, holding its 14th annual Science Writers Forum, said the average heart attack victim waits three hours before getting help. About 350,000 of those people will die before they get to a hospital, while an additional 190,000 will die even though they get to a hospital.

The U.S. cardiovascular disease death rate has dropped about 40 percent since the early 1960s because of changes in lifestyles and better medical treatment. But more money should be spent on basic research and public education to further reduce the toll, association President Dr. Kenneth

I. Shine said as the group released its statistical outlook for the year.

The booklet, called "1987 Heart Facts," says the $85.2 billion in estimated 1987 cardiovascular disease costs works out to $361 for each adult and child in the United States. The total compares with estimates of $78.6 billion last year and $72.1 billion in 1985. The increases are primarily due to inflation and more intensive medical care, association spokesman Howard Lewis said.

The figures include doctor, nurse, hospital, nursing home and medicine costs, as well as lost productivity due to disability.

The new edition of "Heart Facts" says that 986,400 Americans were killed by cardiovascular diseases in 1984, the latest year for which statistics are available. That represents nearly half of all U.S. deaths that year, or almost twice the number of cancer deaths and more than 10 times the number of accident-related deaths.

The estimated 1987 death toll again will be "just short of 1 million," Lewis said. But the toll should be lower than in 1984 and subsequent years because of improvements in medical care and because people continue to reduce cholesterol, saturated fat and cigarette consumption and get more exercise, he said.

The trend toward decreasing cardiovascular mortality in recent decades "is sort of flattening out, but hasn't completely flattened out yet," Lewis said.

The 986,400 deaths in 1984 represent about 540,000 caused by heart attacks, 155,000 from strokes, 30,600 from high blood pressure, 6,900 from rheumatic fever and rheumatic heart disease, and 253,500 from other cardiovascular illnesses, including hardening of the arteries, other artery ailments, aneurysms and diseases of the heart's inner lining.

About 63.4 million Americans, or one of every four people, suffer one or more forms of cardiovascular disease, including 57.7 million with high blood pressure, only a small fraction of whom have their hypertension under control, the association said.

FDA Puts Clamp On 'Gender Choice' Kits, Labels Them 'Gross Deception'

By CRISTINE RUSSELL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — One kit comes in blue, the other in pink, and on the front is a picture of a man and woman embracing a newborn baby. They have been marketed for up to $49.95 by a Colorado company as "Gender Choice" kits, accompanied by claims that the product will greatly improve the odds of conceiving a child of a selected sex.

But they are also at odds with the law, according to the Food and Drug Administration.

The FDA, in its weekly enforcement report on deceptive products and misleading claims, listed the Gender Choice kit as a "gross deception of the consumer."

"Prospective buyers are warned that the firm has failed to submit sound or substantial scientific evidence to back up its claims," the FDA said, citing concerns that the kits are "unproven, deceptive and misleading."

"We have told them that continued marketing is illegal," added Walter Gundaker, director of the office of compliance in the FDA's Center for Devices and Radiological Health.

But while the FDA contends that the kits are medical devices, which require approval before marketing, the manufacturer, ProCare Industries Ltd. of Englewood, Colo., is going ahead with distribution of a revised version of its sex-selection kits.

"ProCare has taken a stand that Gender Choice is not a device but rather an information kit and is therefore not subject to the FDA's jurisdiction," said Vicki Henry, speaking for a public relations firm representing the company. She added that the company's view was backed by "three different Washington, D.C., law firms."

The Gender Choice kit consists of disposable thermometers to measure a woman's temperature changes during ovulation, materials for sampling vaginal mucus to help pinpoint ovulation, and instructions on when and how to have intercourse in order to promote conception of the desired gender.

It is based on an old — and long controversial — theory that the sex of a child is affected by the timing of intercourse and the placement of sperm, with the male-producing sperm said to be smaller and faster and female-producing sperm larger and longer-lived. According to the company, a boy is more likely to be conceived if intercourse takes place as close as possible to ovulation, and a girl is more likely from earlier or later intercourse.

The timing and type of intercourse is also said to affect the alkalinity and acidity of the vagina, which in turn are said to affect the gender-selection process.

The theory convinced ProCare president Robert Marsik and his wife, Carlotta, 11 years ago. According to spokeswoman Henry, the couple, who already had a son, wanted a girl, and were successful when they used the theoretical sex-selection techniques.

Later, Marsik decided to market the techniques. But for more than a year, his company has been locked in a regulatory struggle with the FDA.

According to the agency, ProCare originally came to the government in late 1985 with a proposal to market a kit, then to be called "Choice Child," that would contain a douche material intended to alter the acidity and alkalinity of the vagina, as well as materials for measuring the time of ovulation.

But, Gundaker said, the FDA declared that this would make the kit a new drug, subject to requirements for testing and approval. The firm withdrew its application, changed the name, removed the douche preparations and began marketing the product as Gender Choice last summer, without FDA approval, he said.

Advertisements for the non-prescription kits to be sold in drug stores proclaimed that they "raise the odds of conceiving a child of a certain sex — up to 85 percent for a boy and up to 80 percent for a girl."

Last October, Gundaker said, the FDA informed ProCare that the new kits were considered medical devices and would still require advance approval. The company was ordered, Gundaker said, to stop selling the kits and submit a new application.

It did so for a time, attempting to convince the FDA that the product was not really a medical device but simply an informational kit, he said. But the FDA disagreed and matters are now at a standoff.

ProCare has just come out with a revised "Gender Choice Information Kit" that offers a money-back guarantee and tones down the claims of success. Henry said yesterday that the new packaging says the product is founded on theories, research and studies showing "results of 77 percent to 98 percent effectiveness . . . The manufacturer believes this scientific basis to be valid; however, it acknowledges that some members of the scientific community question the validity of the studies and theories."

The FDA, meanwhile, is hoping that the public will listen to its warnings against the kit, while weighing its options as to whether to take stronger regulatory actions, such as seizure or injunctions.

Dr. Frank E. Young, the FDA commissioner, said that, given limited resources, he generally prefers to "go after the real health hazards . . . The best thing to do here is provide the information."

Extra Serving Of Potassium In Diet May Help Reduce Threat Of Strokes

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — There may be some truth to the old adage that an apple a day keeps the doctor away, according to a new study of the diets of stroke victims.

Fruits and vegetables are a good source of potassium, and the research, released today, suggests an extra serving daily may provide enough potassium to significantly reduce the odds of stroke.

The research was viewed skeptically by some experts who contend it's too soon to conclude that potassium prevents strokes. But even they agree that boosting consumption of fruits and vegetables is a healthy idea.

The researchers at the University of California, San Diego, found that people who got plenty of potassium were more likely than those with low consumption to escape strokes.

"The results indicate that one extra serving of fresh fruits or vegetables each day may decrease the risk of stroke by as much as 40 percent, regardless of other known risk factors," said Dr. Elizabeth

Barrett-Connor, a co-author of the study.

People following her advice should rearrange their diets so they don't take in more calories.

"We probably eat too much meat, so the obvious thing to have it (fruits and vegetables) replace is fatty food," she said.

The study, conducted with Dr. Kay-Te Khaw of the University of Cambridge in England, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Among those who question the conclusions is Dr. Franklin Epstein of Boston's Beth Israel Hospital.

"It's conceivable to me that the people who ate less, and therefore ate less potassium, weren't feeling well," Epstein said. "Their appetites were poor. This might have predisposed those people to an increased risk of stroke."

Epstein cautioned against taking potassium pills because they might cause heart trouble in people with diabetes or kidney problems.

Barrett-Connor agreed that people should get their potassium from food, because other things in fruits and

Whooping Cough Vaccine Tested For Side Effects

By LARRY THOMPSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — A new vaccine for whooping cough that may eliminate the serious side effects of the current vaccine has been developed by scientists at the National Institutes of Health and is now undergoing tests in children.

Concern over the present vaccine prompted Congress to pass legislation last year that would compensate victims who suffered bad reactions and also protect manufacturers from liability suits. Though very rare, severe side effects include high fevers, seizures, brain damage and even death. Because of the risk of side effects, all but two pharmaceutical companies stopped making the vaccine and some parents decided not to have their children immunized.

A preliminary test of the new vaccine in 76 healthy adult volunteers shows that it does produce protective antibodies against the disease and had no immediate serious side effects.

"It is at least as safe, and probably safer, than any existing vaccine," said Dr. Ronald D. Sekura of the National Institute of Child Health and Human Development, who developed the new vaccine. It causes an immune response in adults that should protect them from the disease, Sekura said, "but we have to show it's safe and effective in the intended age group."

A pilot study of 100-150 children aged 18 months has just started in Massachusetts under the direction of Dr. George Siber, director of the Massachusetts Public Health Biologic Laboratories in Boston. Researchers will look for immediate side effects such as fever and sore arms, and will determine whether the children are producing antibodies to protect them from the disease.

Large-scale clinical trials with up to several thousand children are being planned in Sweden. A similar trial is being designed in Massachusetts.

If these studies confirm the safety and effectiveness of the new type of vaccine, it may become commercially available within three to five years, said Sekura.

The current vaccine against whooping cough, or pertussis, was developed more than 40 years ago. A Los Angeles study of 15,000 children who received the DPT (diphtheria, pertussis and tetanus) vaccine found that half had minor reactions such as low fever or swelling. But one in 1,750 children suffered convulsions and one in 1,750 collapsed. A study in England found that in one in 310,000 doses of vaccine, a child would suffer permanent brain damage.

In the old vaccine, the pertussis bacteria is grown and then "killed," or deactivated. Ultimately the entire solution is injected into a child to stimulate immunity. But the whole bacteria contains at least four major toxic proteins and a number of endotoxins — toxins made of sugar and fats that normally are found inside the bacteria — all of which can cause side effects, and probably do nothing to enhance immunity.

The new vaccine should eliminate most of the old vaccine's side effects because only a single protein from the pertussis bacteria will be injected, not the entire bacteria.

In 1979, Dr. Margaret Pittman, a long-time pertussis researcher who now, at 87, is a guest researcher at the Center for Drugs and Biologics, Food and Drug Administration, published her hypothesis that a specific toxin in the pertussis bacteria that caused the disease was also the protein that the immune system made antibodies against.

NICHD's Sekura, a biochemist and enzymologist, discovered a way to purify Dr. Pittman's pertussis toxin by using a technique called affinity chromatography. The technique is based on how biological molecules fit together depending on their shapes and electrical charges — like fitting pieces into a jigsaw puzzle.

Sekura discovered that fetuin, a protein found in cow's blood, and affigel blue, a dye, were very effective in trapping the pertussis toxin from the rest of the bacteria.

In the new vaccine, the pure pertussis toxin is deactivated and turned into a so-called toxoid that is unable to cause the disease, but still stimulates the immune system to make antibodies against the real toxin.

The vaccine was then tested in adults — including Sekura himself — to see if it caused side effects and to see if people produced antibodies against the disease.

"If I am going to stick something into a little kid," Sekura said, "I have to have enough confidence to stick it into myself."

Health officials point out that even with the current vaccine, the risk of developing a severe case of whooping cough is much greater than any risk from immunization. Despite the estimated 18 million doses of vaccine administered last year, 4,162 cases of whooping cough were reported to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta. In 1985, there were 3,579 reported cases.

The increase, said Dr. Alan Hinman, director of CDC's immunization program, is partly due to some sizable outbreaks in 1986. More than 1,200 new cases of pertussis were reported in Kansas alone.

Whooping cough causes five to 20 deaths each year in this country; worldwide, it is estimated to kill 700,000 babies each year.

Even when not lethal, pertussis (which means severe cough) can be a nasty disease. Caused by Bordetella pertussis, a bacteria that lives on the surface of cells that line the lungs, the infection begins with the symptoms of a common cold. But after a week to 10 days, severe coughing begins. Eventually the patient develops spasms of uncontrollable coughing that go on and on until the child, or the adult, runs out of breath and then, while inhaling, makes the peculiar whooping sound that gives the disease its nickname. In Chinese, the disease is called "the 100-day cough."

In a study of 2,000 U.S. children younger than six months who got pertussis between 1979 and 1984, 77 percent had to be hospitalized, 23 percent had pneumonia, 4 percent had seizures and 1 percent died, said CDC's Hinman.

"It is not a minor illness for a young infant," he added.

The researchers in Building 6 at NIH should know. In the course of devising the new vaccine, one scientist caught the disease when the building was accidentally contaminated with the bacteria. Although she had a mild case, the symptoms lasted for weeks. She described the cough as "irresistible."

vegetables may also help ward off disease.

Strokes are the nation's third-leading cause of death after heart attacks and cancer. This year, they will kill an estimated 155,000 people in the United States.

"In this country, the stroke rate has declined rather dramatically since the late 1940s, and certainly before the wide use of blood pressure medicine," Barrett-Connor said. "It's always been a puzzle what caused this decrease. During that time, there was an increase in the availability of fresh fruit and vegetables. This may be part of the missing link."

The study was based on 859 men and women between ages 50 and 74 who lived in Rancho Bernardo, Calif. Doctors questioned them about diet and lifestyle and gave them physical exams. Twelve years later, 24 had died of stroke, and the physicians attempted to see how the stroke victims differed.

The researchers found that the stroke rate in men whose daily potassium intake was below 59 millimoles was about three times that of men with higher consumption. For women, the risk for those who took in less than 49 millimoles each day was five times that of women who ate more.

In this study, there were no strokes among men with consumption over 76 millimoles and women over 67 millimoles.

They calculated that a 10-millimole increase in daily potassium intake was associated with a 40 percent reduction in risk.

One serving of raw fruit or vegetables contains about 10 millimoles of potassium. Americans typically consume between 60 millimoles and 70 millimoles of potassium each day.

Receptors Identified

Duke University Medical Center researchers have identified the receptors on the surface of brain cells with which a naturally occurring brain chemical interacts to prevent epilepsy.

Dr. James O. McNamara said scientists have known for some time that norepinephrine protects the brain from epilepsy, but it was unclear which receptors the chemical activated to suppress it.

He said this new molecular clue could eventually yield new drugs for better control and perhaps even the prevention of epilepsy.

Normally, the cell receptors and norepinephrine work like lock and key to protect the brain from epilepsy. The Duke research suggests the disorder may involve a malfunction of this basic biochemical interaction.

McNamara is professor of neurology, director of Duke's Center for the Advanced Study of Epilepsy and attending neurologist at the Durham Veterans Administration Medical Center.

He recently became one of a few scientists in the country to receive a Jacob Javits Neuroscience Investigator Award from the National Institutes of Health. As a Javits Investigator, McNamara will receive $700,000 over the next seven years to support his work.

The award is named for the late U.S. Sen. Jacob Javits of New York, who was stricken with Lou Gehrig's disease, and is given to investigators "who have a distinguished record of substantial contributions in some field of neurological or communicative sciences," according to the citation.

Epilepsy can be inherited but may also develop following head injury or stroke. It affects approximately 4 million Americans of all ages. The periodic, unpredictable seizures that characterize the disorder are caused by uncontrolled nerve firing in the brain.

Anti-convulsant drugs — and in some cases surgery — allow many victims of epilepsy to lead normal lives. But there is no cure, and the side effects of anti-convulsants can affect intellect, emotions and muscle coordination.

McNamara said he and Duke colleagues Dr. John Kallianos and Ms. Randy Gellman have found that norepinephrine, which is secreted by nerve cells, apparently interacts with alpha-two adrenergic receptors to protect the brain against epilepsy.

"It has been known for some time that eliminating norepinephrine from the brains of laboratory rats predisposes them to become epileptic," McNamara said.

But he noted that if the rat is first made epileptic by a series of weak electrical stimuli and norepinephrine is then eliminated, it does not aggravate or intensify the epileptic condition.

"It raises the possibility that epilepsy involves an impaired function of norepinephrine," McNamara continued.

"The evidence suggests the defect is not in norepinephrine itself but either in the cell receptor to which it binds or in a chain of molecular events controlled by the receptor. This defect may contribute to the development of epilepsy."

If epilepsy is governed by the same rules in humans, it may be possible to find a drug that binds to the cell receptors and activates them, thereby preventing epilepsy, the Duke scientist said.

"Ideally, if such a drug were available," McNamara added, "it could be given to victims of head trauma or stroke to prevent epilepsy, since epilepsy often results from brain injury after a delay of months to years."

Oxygen Can Harm Eyes

Infants born prematurely often need oxygen to sustain them until their tiny lungs can perform normally. However, the life-giving oxygen can threaten the child's eyesight, even causing blindness.

Neonatologists have become very skillful at regulating the amount of oxygen, so that the disorder becomes sight-threatening in only 5 percent of those infants at risk, those babies weighing less than three pounds at birth. In 1984, 1,147 babies weighing less than three pounds at birth were born in North Carolina.

If the patient's condition does become serious, complicated to the point that doctors deem there is a 50-50 chance that sight will be lost, a technique called cryotherapy can be used to save the patient's sight.

A study under way at Duke University Eye Center will help determine whether cryotherapy is an appropriate method for curtailing this disease known as retinopathy of prematurity.

The problem begins because blood vessels in the retina of premature infants are not fully developed. "The oxygen in incubators is, for some reason, toxic to developing vessels and causes them to act bizarrely," said Dr. Edward Buckley, assistant professor of ophthalmology and director of the study at Duke.

"The vessels continue to grow because part of the retina is sending the message that it needs a blood supply. However, they grow wrong and that causes the problems," Buckley said.

Rather than reaching into the part of the retina not yet supplied with blood, the vessels form a shunt and begin to knot, pulling the retina away from the eye's back wall and causing blindness.

In cryotherapy, a freezing probe is used to kill the part of the retina that has no blood vessels. Once the tissue is dead, it stops demanding blood vessels, and the harmful growth stops. The child loses some peripheral vision when the part of the retina lacking blood vessels is killed, but most of the eyesight is protected or can be restored after the uncontrolled growth is stopped.

"Some physicians say cryotherapy is definitely the way to go; others disagree. A national study was needed to find out scientifically if cryotherapy should be used in these cases," Buckley said.

The Duke center is collaborating with North Carolina Memorial Hospital at Chapel Hill. There are 22 other sites across the nation studying the treatment of retinopathy of prematurity. Duke and N.C. Memorial are the only North Carolina facilities participating.

Hepatitis Vaccine Available

NEW YORK (AP) — A new hepatitis B vaccine, the first genetically engineered immunization approved for any disease, is now available to fight a virus that infects about 200,000 Americans a year, its maker says.

The vaccine, made by the Merck Sharp & Dohme division of Merck & Co., produces immunity with a substance derived from a genetically engineered form of baker's yeast. A previous Merck vaccine derived that substance from human blood.

The Food and Drug Administration, in approving the new vaccine last July, said it should ease unwarranted fears about possible AIDS virus contamination in the older, blood-derived vaccine.

About 10,000 Americans are hospitalized with hepatitis B annually and on average 250 die, according to the American Liver Foundation.

People at high risk of infection include health care professionals, recipients of frequent or large transfusions, Alaskan Eskimos, Indo-Chinese and Haitian refugees, homosexually active males, female prostitutes, abusers of injected drugs and infants of infected mothers, the foundation said.

Vest Helps CPR Effort

L.A. Times-Washington Post

Doctors last week introduced an experimental vest that makes the life-saving technique of cardiopulmonary resuscitation more uniform and less apt to cause injury.

Developed by researchers at the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions, the vest is being tested on dogs, where it has been shown to provide "improved survival from cardiac arrest," reported Dr. Henry R. Halperin, assistant professor of medicine at Hopkins and one of the co-developers of the vest.

The CPR vest is not expected to replace conventional CPR, Halperin said. But it could be used by emergency medical teams when manual CPR fails. The vest and its suction pump would be carried in ambulances along with other essential emergency medical equipment.

Studies show that conventional CPR often does not provide enough blood flow and oxygen to allow defibrillation — or electrical shocks — to work to restart the heart. The technique fails on up to 300,000 people a year.

In a study of 21 dogs, the vest produced less injury and greater blood flow to the heart and brain than conventional CPR. Using manual CPR, only one of every seven dogs survived the day after their hearts stopped, compared with seven out of every seven treated with the vest.

Similar to a large blood-pressure cuff, the CPR vest contains an innertube, which is rapidly inflated and deflated by a vacuum pump. The result is high pressure in the chest, which helps keep blood circulating throughout the heart and the body.

The vest alone, which is constructed to fit almost any size person, costs several hundred dollars, and the vacuum pump that powers it costs between $4,000 and $6,000.

We admit that stocks, bonds and mutual funds offer one possibility we're not allowed to offer.

No one has ever lost a dime in a First Federal account. Which is a whole lot more than you can say about Wall Street investments.

Even better, the various First Federal accounts offer most of the flexibility of Wall Street accounts, too. Come in, and we'll discuss accounts which offer long or short term yield, high interest, even tax planning options—almost any financial feature you're likely to need. All guaranteed. Because First Federal accounts are insured against loss to $100,000 by the Federal Savings and Loan Insurance Corporation (FSLIC).

Why play games? Play it safe, play it smart with First Federal and get the investment with the right financial features for you without playing the Wall Street poker game. Earn a guaranteed high return without risk.

Say good-bye to Wall Street. And hello to First Federal.
