School Board Approves Plan To Create Six Election Districts

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education Thursday unanimously approved an election plan for board members consisting of six districts with two members elected from each district.

The six districts would have the same lines as the districts being considered by the County Commissioners, according to the accepted plan, which was proposed by board member Ferrell Blount.

At a meeting Monday, board members are scheduled to consider formal legislation on the election plan that will be presented to the N.C. General Assembly Feb. 9. If the General Assembly approves the legislation, the plan must be submitted to the U.S. Justice Department for review.

At a public hearing earlier this month, Pitt County residents expressed support for the six-district plan.

The approved plan calls for the two seats in each district to be labeled "Seat A" and "Seat B." In the first election on Nov. 3, 1987, the person from Seat A would be elected to serve until 1992 and the person elected from Seat B would serve until 1990. Their successors and all future board members would be elected for six-year terms. There will be no at-large seats.

Board attorney Mike Crowell said the staggered terms would uphold the requirement of single-member districts and would increase the possibility of black representation. The candidates would choose whether to run for Seat A or Seat B in the first election. In subsequent elections, one board member would be elected from each district.

The six districts, each with an ideal population of 15,024 people, are made up of the western edge and central part of Greenville and East Carolina University; the northwest part of Greenville, Belvoir, Bethel, Carolina township and part of Pactolus; Fountain, Falkland, Arthur and Farmville townships; Ayden, Grifton, Swift Creek, Chicod and a corner of Winterville township; Pactolus, Grimesland and the eastern part of Greenville, and Winterville and part of Greenville.

Crowell said the 1st District is 51.7 percent black, the 2nd District is 58.8 percent black and the 3rd District is 40 percent black.

Speakers Oppose At-Large Seats

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

PACTOLUS — The fourth of six public hearings on proposed changes in the method of electing members of the Pitt County Board of Commissioners was held Thursday at the Pactolus Elementary School.

Six speakers — out of 22 people attending the hearing — voiced support for a plan to create six districts from which a member of the board would be elected only by people living in the district.

But speakers voiced varying views on the proposal to have three commissioners, who would not have to live in any particular district, elected by voters county-wide.

Levi Clemons Jr. of Route 5, Greenville said, "I'd like to see the six districts (but) it seems to me we don't need any at-large seats."

The Rev. Alonzo L. Mills of Route 1, Vanceboro, and D.D. Garrett of Greenville — Mills reading from a resolution adopted jointly by the Concerned Citizens for Justice (a local civil right group) and the Pitt County chapters of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, and Garrett speaking as president of the Pitt NAACP chapter — voiced support for the six-district plan and opposition for any at-large seats.

Garrett said "I think the (U.S.) Justice Department will approve" the six districts. But he said "we oppose the at-large election (because it) dilutes the black vote ... works against the black vote," and questioned whether the Justice Department would give its approval to at-large representatives.

"We do need six districts," Terry Little of Route 3, Washington, said, but suggested no at-large seats should be included in the new election plan.

Noel Lee III of Route 3, Washington, said "my main concern" is once Greenville resumes annexation procedures, the majority of the people in the proposed 3rd District (which includes all of Pactolus and Grimesland townships and a portion of Greenville Township) could be living within the city of Greenville.

"You need to look at this," Lee suggested.

Lee's father, Noel Lee Jr., also voiced concern about the number of potential Greenville residents included in the district.

"The real issue," he said, is "do we want county government or do we want city government?"

Greenville is growing and annexation is coming, Lee said. "It's a simple fact that as Greenville expands," the majority of voters in the district will be city residents. "It's a problem we need to consider (to) assure county representation."

Lee suggested that at-large representatives on the board would help insure that residents outside the city would be represented.

The next public hearing is scheduled for Wednesday at Wahl-Coates School in Greenville, with the final hearing scheduled for Thursday at A.G. Cox School in Winterville.

Both meetings will begin at 7 p.m.

Senate Report Leaves Details Of Iran-Arms Affair Up In Air

By JIM DRINKARD
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new Senate report portrays a U.S.-Iranian arms deal largely plotted by foreign weapons merchants, encouraged by Israel and kept alive by a White House aide's zealous support for Nicaragua's Contra rebels and by President Reagan's concern for U.S. hostages.

Despite the breadth of its accounting, the Senate Intelligence Committee admits in a 65-page report issued Thursday that it cannot answer 14 crucial questions that go to the heart of the Iran-Contra scandal.

One of them is to what extent was the conduct of American foreign policy turned over to private individuals, accountable to no one. Other questions involve the role of the White House staff, the CIA and other nations in the affair, the extent to which actions taken were authorized and legal, whether all activities have been disclosed, and what happened to the money.

While the report raises serious question about Reagan's control over his foreign policy apparatus, the White House welcomed its release. David Abshire, the president's special counselor on the Iran-Contra issue, called it "an important step toward getting to the bottom of this matter, as the president has promised."

Its authors cautioned that the report, the result of three weeks of intensive secret hearings with 36 witnesses and examination of thousands of documents, still was preliminary and incomplete, and pointed the way for future inquiries by two special congressional investigating panels.

Departing White House chief spokesman Larry Speakes, interviewed on ABC, said today the report "does vindicate what the president has been saying, that, first of all, it was a strategic opening to Iran that later involved an operation that we hoped would set our hostages free. And on the other hand, the illegal part of it would be a diversion of Contra funds, if that occurred. And this indicates that the president knew nothing about that."

In its report Thursday, the Intelligence Committee said Attorney General Edwin Meese III, when he informed Reagan and Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan about the diversion of arms-sale proceeds to the Contras last November, said "the president looked shocked and very surprised, as did Regan, who uttered an expletive."

In another development, the FBI has opened a criminal investigation to determine what happened to most of the $27 million approved by Congress in 1985 for non-lethal aid to the Contras, the New York Times reported today, quoting congressional sources.

A General Accounting Office report published earlier said most of the money could not be traced.

While there was no direct evidence Reagan knew about the diversion of money to the Contras, he did have at least 17 meetings at which then-National Security Council aide Lt. Col. Oliver North was present in 1985 and 1986, the report found. It also found that on April 23, 1986, the president met with North, Poindexter, a lower-echelon CIA official stationed in a Central American country and a "security official" from that country.

Although much of the basic chronology laid out by the report has been reported previously, it offers new detail about meetings and other contacts that went into the arms deal and reveals the Contras probably set up a Cayman Islands bank account to receive money diverted from the arms sales.

And it clearly portrays an administration preoccupation with the fate of U.S. hostages, making it appear that in the minds of some, at least, the idea of a diplomatic opening to Iranian moderates was more of a "cover story" for use in case the deal should become public. CIA Director William J. Casey used such a portrayal in a memo in December 1985, the report said.

According to evidence compiled, the decision to begin shipping arms to Iran — in contradiction of U.S. policy not to sell arms to terrorist nations — was made by Reagan as early as August 1985, although there was conflicting information about the precise date.

The first shipment of 508 TOW anti-tank missiles by Israel was made Aug. 30.

The deal evolved after an intelligence assessment found Iran might be ripe for a diplomatic opening that could help counter what was seen as growing Soviet influence, and initial contacts brought forth the idea that Iran could help win the release of U.S. hostages. Israeli officials figured prominently in the deal's early stages, the report said.

The key Iranian contact during the early stages was Manucher Ghorbanifar, an arms dealer described by

Daily Reflector Wins Press Award

CHAPEL HILL — The Daily Reflector received a second place award for general excellence from the North Carolina Press Association Thursday.

The awards, presented as part of the NCPA's annual N.C. Press Institute, are co-sponsored by the journalism school at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill.

Reflector General Manager D. Jordan Whichard III, who accepted the award for the newspaper, said this morning, "We are deeply gratified to have been accorded this honor by our peers in the industry."

"The scope of the general excellence category encompasses nearly all aspects of a newspaper operation. Therefore this recognition is shared by all of our employees, contractors and suppliers who work as a team to produce the best newspaper possible."

"We are especially grateful," Whichard said, "to our readers and advertisers, who constantly challenge us to improve the quality and content of our product in order to meet the changing informational needs of this market."

"We pledge our continued commitment to the standards of excellence defined by this award," Whichard said.

The general excellence award is based on general and departmental news coverage, literary excellence, promotion of community interests, graphics and appearance, editorial vigor, use of pictures, advertising enterprise and mechanical excellence.

The Reflector won second place for general excellence among newspapers with a circulation of from 15,000 to 35,000.

First place in the category went to the Salisbury Post and third place went to the Hendersonville Times-News.

The Lexington Dispatch won first place among newspapers with a circulation of under 15,000, followed by the Enquirer-Journal of Monroe and the Lenoir News-Topic.

The Winston-Salem Journal took first place in the over 35,000 circulation category, with the Greensboro News & Record placing second and The Charlotte Observer taking third place.

Competing newspapers submitted complete papers for any two issues published during February or June 1986.

The Reflector's entry included editions published Feb. 2 and June 30.

Reagan Vetoes Water Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan today vetoed — for the second time in three months — a $20 billion water cleanup bill that he denounced as "loaded with waste and larded with pork." He acknowledged his veto would be overridden "because I don't have the votes to sustain it."

Reagan called his action "the first battle over deficit spending in the 100th Congress."

The House has scheduled a vote on overriding the veto for next Tuesday and Senate action is expected later in the week.

Reagan, speaking before an audience in the Old Executive Office Building, noted that he had offered to compromise with Congress on a $12 billion bill but was turned down.

Chiding Congress for insisting on the $20 billion measure, Reagan said, "you cannot vote to radically increase deficits one day and decry them before the nation the next."

The measure was passed 406-6 by the House and 93-6 by the Senate.

A presidential veto can be overridden by a two-thirds majority of both houses, but Reagan's first veto in November was not subject to an override because it was a pocket veto, exercised after Congress had quit for the year.

In a letter dated Nov. 22 and released Thursday, 76 senators including both Democrats and Republicans urged the president not to veto the bill, saying the funds it provided would be "an investment which will repay dividends of a clean environment for years to come."

Senate Republican leader Bob Dole of Kansas endorsed the president's decision, calling the bill a "budget buster."

In his original veto memorandum, the president said his administration was making "remarkable progress" in cleaning up water and the bill "so far exceeds acceptable levels of intended budgetary commitments that I must withhold my approval."

He also objected to the inclusion of programs that the administration opposes, such as reinstatement of a federal financial assistance program to pay for local plans to control diffuse sources of pollution.

"Restarting expensive grant programs that have failed in the past is not justifiable," Reagan said.

shooting death of Frances Cannon, 35, of 1009B Broad St. Thursday night.

Detective J.E. Nichols said Ms. Cannon died when she was shot in the head with a shotgun at the Broad Street apartment shortly after 8 p.m.

He said the shooting resulted from a domestic dispute.

The incident, which occurred inside the home, was reported by a neighbor.

Theft Arrests

Greenville police arrested two people in connection with separate theft cases that were reported to the department Thursday.

Officer B.M. Highland said Donald Gregory Frederick, 22, of 1092 Cheyenne Court was charged with shoplifting in connection with the theft of $3.11 worth of merchandise from the Farm Fresh store on Greenville Boulevard about 6 p.m.

Highland said Frederick was also charged with possession of a controlled substance and possession of drug paraphernalia as a result of the investigation.

Little More Rain

Rain apparently had little effect this morning on the Tar River level, which continues to decrease, said local officials.

The Greenville Utilities Commission water plant recorded .09 inches of rain earlier today with the river level at 16.6 feet above sea level. The river was at 17.6 feet above sea level Thursday.

The rain also had little effect on the amount of water still flooding a street near the river, said Mayo Allen of the Greenville Public Works Department.

River Drive, located near Tar River Estates, is the only street still barricaded because of flooding, he said. Those barricades may be removed this afternoon depending upon how much the water recedes today.

Drug Debate Set

Dr. Timothy Leary, "the father of the drug culture," and Peter Bensing, former head of the Drug Enforcement Administration, will meet in "Drugs: The Great Debate" Tuesday at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater at Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University.

Bensing favors drug testing for all Americans and has lectured throughout the country on the subject. Leary, who opposed mandatory drug testing, is often associated with drug experimentation.

A fee will be charged for the debate and tickets will be available at the central ticket office in Mendenhall

Semifinalists Chosen For Scholars Awards

Four regional committees met this week to choose approximately 30 semifinalists for the 1987 University Scholars Awards at East Carolina University.

From a total of 110 applications, the regional committees were considering 65 outstanding high school seniors from seven states and Canada. At least six of the prestigious, full tuition and fees scholarships for four years of study at East Carolina University are to be awarded this year.

In the third year of the program, the six awards this year will bring the total number of University Scholars on campus to 22.

Based on academic achievement and leadership potential, each of the awards is privately financed and named for the donor or donor family. Each carries a funding base of at least $40,000 and the scholarships are administered through the ECU office of Institutional Advancement.

Local students being considered for the awards are: Jennifer Jo Hardee of Winterville and Susan Ann Stocks and Amy Lynn Verreault, both of Greenville, all students at D.H. Conley High School; Leigh Darlene Mills of Washington, N.C., a student at Bath High School; Jamie Leigh Moore, Lynn Diane Worley, Angela Douglass Raper and Richard James Murphy, all from Greenville and students at J.H. Rose High School; Meredith Lane Page of Ayden and Melissa Ann Rose of Grifton, both students at Ayden-Grifton High School, and Angela Gail Rouse of Williamston, a student at Roanoke High School.

The regional selection committees are to choose six to eight nominees each for interviews which are scheduled Feb. 14. Three finalists from each region will be named and the 12 finalists will be invited to the campus for visits and interviews on March 7.

UW Names Andy Warren To Head 1987 Campaign

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County United Way celebrated its success in the 1986 "Celebrate the Giving" fund-raising campaign Thursday at a luncheon meeting.

To live up to the festivities and honor campaign chairman Joe Gantz, entertainment was provided by belly dancer Donna Whitley.

The 1986 campaign netted $969,574 for the 31 health and human service agencies in Pitt County supported by the United Way.

Plaques were presented to 29 local business and industry representatives for the instrumental part they played in the campaign.

United Way President Frank Grooms noted that the campaign was successful because of the "tremendous support from the people of Pitt County" and the work of hundreds of United Way volunteers.

Gold Medal awards were presented to the city of Greenville and Pitt County Memorial Hospital for their outstanding campaigns.

Andy Warren was elected 1987 president of United Way. The approved slate of officers includes Mike Renn, first vice president; Chris McCoy, second vice president; Peter Hollis, secretary; John West, treasurer, and Mike Strickland, legal counsel.

Executive committee members to fill the unexpired terms ending in 1989 are Petty Christopher, Charles Coble, Phil Dixon and Lib Layne. For terms ending in 1990, the committee members are Jim Cheatham, Richard Gammon, Robert Griffin, Reid Hooper, Jack Richardson, Luby Skinner, Mamie Smith and Ernest Uhr.

Warren said he hopes to "continue in the great tradition we have started here in Pitt County." He said that Ed Kirby will serve as the 1987 campaign leader.

Grooms announced that the 1986 campaign's communications efforts were rewarded with an Addy Award for public service advertising from the East Carolina Advertising Federation.

This year's poster, printed and donated by Morgan Printers and designed by the agency's communications committee, featured an elderly woman holding a young child in her lap. The poster was festooned with balloons and confetti and bore the logo, "Celebrate the Giving." The brochures and other campaign information carried out the theme.

"I am proud of the communications effort," Grooms said. He said that the communications committee "created a very effective communications program."

He noted the success of the Curtis

Restaurant, Motel Report Robberies

A man was arrested in connection with one of two armed robberies — one at the Western Steer Family Steakhouse at 3005 E. 10th St., the other at the Camelot Inn on Memorial Drive — that were reported to Greenville police early this morning.

Detective Sgt. J.M. Simonowich said Samuel Allen McCoy, 34, of Route 8, Greenville, was arrested about five minutes after the robbery at the Camelot Inn was reported at 1:35 a.m.

Simonowich said a clerk at the motel told officers that a man — with his hand in his pocket — approached, told the clerk he had a gun, and demanded money.

After the clerk gave the robber cash from the register, the man left the scene driving south on Memorial Drive.

Simonowich said a Pitt County deputy sheriff, Calvin Craft, stopped McCoy's car at the intersection of Memorial and Mall drives about 1:40 a.m. and Greenville police took McCoy into custody. He said $271 in cash was found in McCoy's vehicle.

In addition to the robbery charge, McCoy was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia, Simonowich said.

Detective S.B. Pass said the robbery at the Western Steer Family Steakhouse at 3005 E. 10th St. was reported at 1:14 a.m.

According to Pass two men wearing black ski masks — one armed with a shotgun, the other with a knife — approached three Western Steer employees as they were leaving the restaurant after closing.

He said the robbers took more than $1,000 after forcing the assistant manager to open the company safe.

Pass said the robbers forced the employees to the floor and tied them with shoestrings before they fled.

Request Continued

The Greenville Board of Adjustment continued a request by Bishop Arizona H. Hatsfield and the Higgs heirs for a special use permit allowing a care home at 112 Dickinson Ave.

Board members made their decision at their monthly meeting Thursday night.

The request for a usage change for the property, which is zoned commercial downtown fringe, will be discussed at the board's next monthly meeting on Feb. 26 at 7 p.m. in the council chambers of City Hall.

Meanwhile, the board continued a request by Charles D. Woodward for a special use permit to allow a care home on the north side of State Road 1134 until a special call meeting on Feb. 12 at 5:30 p.m.

The property, which is located .66 miles west of Highway 11 South, is zoned for residential-agriculture.

Board members also continued a request by Joseph D. Speight for a special use permit in order to construct multifamily dwellings at a land use intensity rating of 50 on the north side of Adams Boulevard adjacent to Jaycee Park until the Feb. 12 call meeting.

The applicant had proposed locating 40 one and two-bedroom apartments on 1.79 acres. The property is zoned high density residential.

The panel approved a request by Sports Galore Inc. for a special use permit allowing the expansion of the Sports Pad billiard parlor into the building located at 117 East Fifth St. The property is zoned downtown commercial.

In other business, the panel approved an amendment to the Rules of Procedure, which removes references to lengths of terms because they are included in the Zoning Ordinance.

Commissioners Meet

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners will meet Monday at 10 a.m. at the county office building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

Agenda items include the appointment of an animal cruelty investigator, a flood damage prevention ordinance, changes in fees for building permits, and acceptance of a housing needs survey.

Alumni Gathering

The Pitt County chapter of the Winston-Salem State University Alumni Association will meet Sunday at 3 p.m. in the home of Vanessa Roberts, 717-B Hooker Road. For more information, call 757-3010 or 355-6321.

Car Bomb Hits School Bus In Beirut, Kills Five People

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A car bomb exploded today in Christian east Beirut as a school bus drove by. Police said at least five people were killed and 37 were wounded, including some children.

A police report said the bomb went off at 1:40 p.m. near the Moussa commercial center in the Zalka neighborhood. The explosion damaged the school bus and dozen of parked cars and shattered nearby windows.

Police reported at least five people died and 37 people were injured in the blast. No details were immediately available on the number of injured children or on the condition of the wounded.

The Christian-controlled Voice of Lebanon radio station said ambulances rushed to the scene to evacuate the injured. The radio repeatedly broadcast appeals from hospitals for blood donations.

After examining several wrecked vehicles, police said the explosives had been packed in a gray Datsun.

The sound of the explosion, the second in east Beirut this year, echoed across the Lebanese capital. Some people on the Moslem side of the city's dividing Green Line said they heard the blast.

One witness, reporting by telephone from east Beirut, said a mushroom-like cloud of black smoke engulfed the main square in the Zalka neighborhood.

Former President Camille Chamoun was wounded Jan. 7 by a car bombing in east Beirut in which four people were killed and 35 others were wounded.

At least 113 people were killed and 658 injured by seven car bombs in east Beirut in 1986, according to police records.

Newspaper Says Waite Seen In East Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Hostage negotiator Terry Waite has been seen travelling in a motorcade in Syrian-controlled east Lebanon and will return to Moslem west Beirut within 48 hours, a leading Beirut newspaper reported today.

The report by the independent newspaper An-Nahar came a day after Moslem kidnappers released a picture of a newly abducted American hostage with two automatic rifles held to his head.

A statement accompanying the photograph warned that he, two fellow Americans and an Indian kidnapped from Beirut University College last Saturday will be killed if U.S. military forces attack Lebanon.

Waite, an Anglican Church envoy who has been working for the release of foreign hostages in Lebanon, remained at a secret hideout for an 11th day today, reportedly negotiating with the Shiite Moslem captors of two Americans kidnapped in 1985.

A Lebanese militia leader said Thursday that Waite was seen "moving around freely," but did not say when or where.

However, An-Nahar said Waite was seen Thursday traveling in a motorcade made up of a Range Rover, a grey BMW car and a blue Mercedes-Benz limousine between the Bekaa valley villages of Nahleh and Bazzanieh.

Runcie's office said Thursday night that the archbishop was aware of new reports suggesting Waite was seen in one part or another of Lebanon, and reiterated that he had received information "from reliable sources that Mr. Waite is safe, well and continuing his mission."

The newspaper quoted unnamed reliable sources in Beirut as saying Waite was not detained by the hostage holders and would return to Beirut in the next two days. It did not elaborate.

He has been out of sight since Jan. 20 and is believed to be concentrating on the cases of Terry Anderson, 39, chief Middle East correspondent of The Associated Press, and Thomas Sutherland, 55, acting dean of agriculture at the American University of Beirut.

Earlier reports from the Bekaa city of Baalbek had said that Waite stayed a few days during his secret negotiations at hotel Khawam, the headquarters of an Iranian Islamic Revolutionary Guards contingent based in that ancient city.

The reports said he talked with Sheikh Sobhi Tofaili, leader of Hezbollah, an Iranian-backed Shiite Moslem militant faction, and Hussein Musawi, another Shiite extremist leader.

Musawi, who heads the Islamic Amal movement, Wednesday declared public support for the abduction of foreigners as a means of exerting political pressure. He and Tofaili are the most influential Shiite activists in the Bekaa.

A previously unknown group calling itself Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine issued Thursday's death threat in a statement delivered to a Western news agency in west Beirut. Accompanying it was a photograph of hostage Robert Polhill with two automatic rifles pointed at his head.

Polhill, 53, of New York City, is a certified public accountant who lectured at Beirut University College.

The note, handwritten in Arabic, said it believed the United States planned to attack Lebanon with the help of other Western nations, and warned that it would execute Polhill and three other teachers kidnapped with him "as an initial countermeasure upon the occurrence of this aggression."

Press Secretary Leaves Post Today

WASHINGTON (AP) — Larry Speakes became White House spokesman nearly six years ago in the midst of a crisis: President Reagan and his press secretary had been wounded by a would-be assassin's bullets. The press and public were clamoring for details.

Speakes is leaving the post today as the administration battles another crisis — this one involving the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of proceeds to the Nicaraguan rebels.

Speakes, who on Monday becomes senior communications adviser at Merrill Lynch in New York, said in two television interviews today that he has been thinking about his six years in the White House and remembering the hard times and the good.

"I was thinking back the other day listing crises that really began with the shooting at the president on March 30, 1981. There probably are a dozen of them that have been difficult times for all of us — the press, the public and the press secretary. This (the Iran-Contra affair) is nothing new," Speakes said in an interview on NBC-TV's "Today" show. "It, too, will pass."

Speakes said he recalls "that fateful day back in 1981 when we were all thrust into the spotlight, when there was so much tension and so much lack of knowledge."

Memories of that day, he said, are "never far from my mind."

As for the administration's problems involving the Iran-Contra affair, Speakes said on ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" that a Senate report released Thursday "vindicates" Reagan and "indicates the president knew nothing" about the diversion of proceeds from the arms sales to the Contra rebels.

The 47-year-old Speakes, a Mississippi native, came to Washington as press secretary to former Mississippi Sen. James O. Eastland. But even though he liked working on Capitol Hill, his ambition was to hold a post in the White House because, he once told an interviewer, "the town revolved around it, the country revolved around it."

He finally made it to the White House in the final months of the Nixon administration, when he was hired in early 1974 as a staff assistant in the executive office of the president.

He survived the change of administrations after Richard Nixon resigned in August 1974 and remained as assistant press secretary to President Gerald Ford.

He returned to private life when Ford lost to Jimmy Carter, but came back to the White House when Reagan became president.

"The most difficult decision I've had to make in this job in these six years is to leave," Speakes said on the "Today" show. "I wanted to be standing on the Capitol steps when the president left office for the last time in 1989. But the opportunity came and I looked at it and it was an opportunity that probably would not have presented itself again."

"And I think Wall Street, Merrill Lynch, offers the excitement and the pace that will come closest to what I've been doing here for the last six years," Speakes said.

Speakes, who has made $77,400 as chief spokesman and will reportedly be paid $250,000 in his new job, will be succeeded by Marlin Fitzwater, Vice President George Bush's press secretary.

Iranian Questions Still Unanswered

the CIA as a "talented fabricator" who later failed a CIA-administered lie-detector test. But despite the misgivings, Ghorbanifar was kept involved by North, according to one committee witness.

One of the earliest links between the sale of arms to Iran and the effort to provide aid to the Contras came in January 1986 during talks between North and Amiram Nir, an anti-terrorism adviser to then-Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres, the report stated.

North, under questioning by Meese after the plan was discovered last November, said it was Nir who proposed using money from the arms deal to help the Contras.

At the time, North was dividing his activities between the Iran project and generating private aid for the Nicaraguan rebels during a period when U.S. military aid was forbidden by Congress.

The report says documents indicate that at the time of the meeting between North and Nir, the Israelis may already have been holding money from a November 1985 weapons shipment to Iran to make it available to the Contras.

North is portrayed as a zealous supporter of the Contras who saw an opportunity to combine his two missions while using Israeli intermediaries and money that did not come from U.S. sources.

In addition to North, others who played key roles in both the Iran arms shipments and the Contra aid effort were retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord and his business associate, Albert Hakim, the panel found.

Hakim, at a meeting dealing with the arms sales between Americans and Iranians in early 1986, suggested the Iranians make a "contribution" over and above the cost of the arms "for the use of the Contras or 'of us'."

That comment was the basis for the pricing of a February shipment to Iran of TOW anti-tank missiles, the report said, attributing the information to Tom Green, an attorney who said he represented North and Secord.

Green said money from that sale "was routed through Israelis into Hakim's financial network," and that the same thing happened again with an arms sale in May. "Green reportedly said none of this violated the law because no U.S. money was involved — only Iranians making a contribution," the report says.

Later, it states: "Green said Hakim and Secord felt like they were doing the Lord's work. They believed they were not violating any laws."

After meeting with Nir in January 1986, North contacted Adolfo Calero, a Contra leader, and three bank accounts were subsequently opened in Switzerland, the report said.

North told Meese he had given the account numbers to the Israelis, and money was deposited in those accounts. "North guessed the money got to the Contras; they knew money came and were appreciative," the report states.

On Nov. 25, after the administration went public with news of the funds diversion, Peres called Meese and told him "all they had done was tell the Iranians where to put the money. They had told the Iranians what bank accounts to put the money into, and how much," according to Meese's testimony.

The committee found evidence that Israel had been active in arms deals with the Iranians for years before the U.S. initiative, and Reagan was aware as well that Israel planned to directly help the Contras with arms.

A memorandum prepared by North for Poindexter to use in briefing the president before a Sept. 15, 1986 meeting with Peres states that Israeli defense minister Rabin had offered a "significant quantity" of captured Soviet bloc arms to the Contras. If Peres brought the matter up, Reagan was advised to "just say thanks."

Trouble Ahead

Circle the wagons, friends of democracy and voices of reason.

Here comes Sen. Jesse Helms, minority leader of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Helms' new post means trouble ahead for the committee — and for the nation's foreign policy. Helms will polarize the committee. He will work against compromise and for his own notions of what foreign policy should be. The senator is out in right field, with his own agenda, oblivious to the needs of the nation — and to an extent, the needs of his constituents.

What Helms' new post means is the powerful Congressional Club may have a spot from which to manipulate national foreign policy.

Helms' presence will likely divide the committee — that's his style. His record is one of obstruction — not constructive negotiation. The senator thrives on antagonism, not reason. He is apt to lead the committee — and the nation — out on shaky limbs of support for Latin dictators and queer duck leaders of other nations.

Helms' leadership in the realm of foreign affairs will likely be characterized by eccentricity. He has a reputation for going off on tangents.

And each time he is questioned, he will block appointments and scream state department liberal.

The Foreign Relations Committee struggles with questions of button pushing — one little red button says destruction and the other says negotiation. Put in this perspective, Helms' extreme point of view is not necessarily the one the nation should apply to foreign affairs.

No discussion of Helms' new post would be complete without pointing out how he swapped his interest in tobacco for interests abroad. The Senator campaigned in 1984 with the promise he would remain chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee. Although he didn't say how long he'd stay, the move still looks like a broken campaign pledge.

That switch, however, is no shock. Throughout his tenure, Helms' professed sympathy for agriculture issues was sometimes inconsistent with his actions.

Helms will no doubt be a stumbling block to a careful, uniform, foreign policy. The best the nation can hope for is that his strident voice is calmed by the quieter voices of reason on the committee.

Aid To Iran Could Boomerang

WASHINGTON — The Soviet rockets Iran is using to bombard the Iraqi cities of Basra and Baghdad have become a bad dream to Moammar Gadhafi.

The Libyan leader, who bought the Scud missiles from the Soviet Union, sold them to the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini in 1985. Gadhafi told a Syrian diplomat last year that he had awakened one night in a sweat.

"Gadhafi said he dreamed that the missiles were killing his Arab brothers in Iraq," the diplomat said.

A version of the same nightmare could soon haunt President Reagan. His secret sale of weapons to the Khomeini government included 235 packages of spare parts for American anti-aircraft missiles originally purchased from the United States by the Shah of Iran.

American pilots could face the Iranian missiles, known as Hawk II, if the ayatollah's forces cripple Iraq and threaten the oil-rich Persian Gulf with a takeover by Moslem fanatics. Possible use of American forces against Iran was a major reason Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger opposed Reagan's arms sales to Iran.

"It was just crazy," said a Pentagon officer, reflecting the muffled anger of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the president's top military advisers.

Under a series of defense agreements — some of them still secret — the United States is committed to provide military assistance to the Gulf countries of Saudi Arabia and Oman. Reagan reaffirmed those commitments last week in a White House statement aimed at reassuring those Arab countries alarmed by the recently intensified six-year-old Gulf war.

U.S. Navy air and sea forces along with U.S. Marines in the American Indian Ocean Task Force routinely stage Gulf exercises that assume Iran is threatening Gulf countries and the flow of Arab oil. The force includes U.S. Navy destroyers in the Gulf and an American carrier task force poised just outside in the Indian Ocean.

"We remain determined to ensure the free flow of oil through the Strait of Hormuz," said Reagan, referring to the Gulf chokepoint. "We also remain strongly committed to supporting the individual and collective self-defense of our friends in the Gulf."

If U.S. support was formally requested, American forces would stage at bases in Oman, U.S. officials said. There are extensive U.S. military supplies in the Indian Ocean at Diego Garcia, a base established by the United States when the ayatollah seized power in Iran.

The chance of American military involvement in the Gulf is tied to the growing uncertainty over the Iran-Iraq conflict.

Earned Respect

If any one adjective best applies to Terry Waite it would have to be brave. Others that could apply would be selfless, dedicated and loyal.

Time after time he has gone to the lawless land of Lebanon to negotiate for the release of hostages held by Moslem gunmen.

He is the envoy of the Church of England and skilled in negotiations for hostages. It is dangerous work but Waite won the confidence of the captors and, while he was not totally successful in his mission, he remained free to work on Beirut.

For a time it seemed that Terry Waite's luck might have run out. He had not been seen for days and the British Foreign Office said it was conducting a search for him. Reports, not necessarily reliable, had it that he was under house arrest by those he was negotiating with. They were reported divided as to whether to hold him as a hostage or release him along with other hostages. In an atmosphere like Beirut nothing is surprising, and thus there was immense concern for the safety of Terry Waite.

Then the Anglican Church announced it had information that Waite was safe and the civilized world breathed easier.

The negotiator knows the risks and has spoken of them in interviews. Still he has built such confidence among the terrorist leaders that there is a feeling he, alone, might be safe in meeting with their representatives. In a lawless situation, however, anything is possible. There are no restraints on human behavior and those with guns are the ones with power.

Terry Waite appears safe for the moment. Still there is real cause for concern about his safety. We can only hope that, even among the lawless, there will be those who continue to have respect for his mission.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I would like this opportunity to express my dissatisfaction with Greenville Cable Company. The company has a monopoly on cable services in our area. It seems that, in maintaining that monopoly, the company has a responsibility to diligently work toward providing service to anyone, within a reasonable perimeter, desiring service.

I have been told by the Cable Company that my area is not included in the budget for cable. While I understand budgets and money matters involving public utilities, I do not understand the company's apparent money shortage. It seems there is a long waiting list of areas needing to be "hooked up" and a shortage of funds for laying cable. There appears to be a large market for cable, so I do not understand why the company has not picked up enough momentum to meet the demand of this area. If a public utility cannot meet the needs of the public, that utility is not fulfilling its responsibility to the people it serves.

To the editor:

Roanoke Island has a unique place in the history of our nation and state. It was the birthplace of English colonization in this land. In Sir Walter Raleigh's day, men, women and children went through great hardship to travel to this island and then endured even greater hardship trying to survive on it.

Last Friday, I was struck with the thought that this is still going on. The board of directors of the Roanoke Island Historical Association gathered at 2 p.m. for a meeting. The Association, producer of Paul Green's outdoor drama, "The Lost Colony," is attempting a new and exciting project to enhance the play and the economic and cultural life of the area.

The plan involves combining support from public, private and government groups in financial and physical ways. It also involves the combining of commercial endeavors with artistic ones. When the complex is built, it will provide a visitor with a view of the Elizabethan experience not possible anywhere else. There will be an inn and a performance center for the nucleus of the project. It is an ambitious undertaking, but one which has successful prototypes across the country.

When "The Lost Colony" was begun, no one thought one play could sell tickets night after night all summer. That production will see its 50th season this year. The people involved with the production have never been put off by what others are sure cannot be done. Sir Walter's colony must have been the same or they would not have come.

Last Friday the board members of the Roanoke Island Historical Association traveled from as far as Washington, D.C., and Charlotte in a snow storm. I am impressed by the commitment of this unpaid group.

I am appreciative, because the efforts of this group and others like it are important to the future of North Carolina.

Strength For Today

Someone has said that philosophers build castles and then live in hovels. What is meant is that their philosophies are often much greater than the principles and hopes which govern their lives.

The same, of course, can be said of people who profess a philosophy of life to the exclusion of religion. We might well ask why the profound philosophies which have come down to us through the centuries should help so little in the living of a righteous and peaceful life. Do we go to Plato when we want to know the right thing to do? Do we find consolation in the writings of Kant?

The answer, of course, is no. When we want to know what is right we go to the Ten Commandments. When we need consolation, we turn to the New Testament. Why? Because philosophy concerns what men have thought and the teachings of the Bible concern what God has said.

Reagan's White Flag

WASHINGTON — Late Tuesday, awaiting President Reagan's State of the Union address, staunch congressional supporters were bowled over to learn he would sign a bill passed that very day providing an extra $50 million for the homeless.

No rumor, that was a direct communication from the White House to Republican legislative leaders. Yet earlier, Reagan's lobbyists had urged GOP congressmen to vote against the bill at risk of being branded heartless. Now the president had flinched. To seasoned politicians, that was the telltale sign not to expect much from Reagan's sixth and, because of the Iran arms deal, most difficult State of the Union.

In the event, the president's address lived down to expectations. Even a convalescent, septuagenarian Reagan can out-orate younger, healthier statesmen. He demolished rumors of creeping senility. But aside from an intrepid defense of his Central American policy, this was not vintage Reagan.

Particularly in domestic policy, the prevailing suspicion that the Reagan administration is out of intellectual gas was confirmed. Proposals were either warmed-up leftovers (item veto, balanced budget amendment) or bureaucratic fast food (welfare reform and catastrophic health insurance). The president's militant tone was viewed even by Reaganauts as false bravado after they learned about the switch on the homeless bill.

False or not, that tone was more than matched by majority Democrats in Congress. They sat on their hands Tuesday night when the president invoked national security. Sen. Howell Heflin of Alabama (frequently joined by his freshman colleague, Sen. Richard Shelby) was on his feet cheering. But they were alone. Even defense-oriented Sen. Sam Nunn of Georgia expressed disapproval with silence.

In such an atmosphere, why sign the homeless bill? Arguments had been made around the White House senior staff table that contingency funds could handle any real winter emergency. Wasn't the $50 million package — elevated to major status in Speaker Jim Wright's televised response to the president — an attempt to demonstrate the administration's heartlessness?

But the view finally prevailing at the White House was that Reagan could not be seen as deficient in "compassion." "Our country club Republicans," one right-wing administration official told us, "live in dread of being insufficiently compassionate."

"I am stunned by it," Rep. Robert Walker of Pennsylvania, chairman of the Conservative Opportunity Society, told us. He and other COS members believe signing the homeless bill shows the Democratic-controlled Congress which button will hoist the white flag up the White House flagpole. Hints by presidential aides that clean water and highway bills may be vetoed suggest that the pork barrel button does not work, but that the compassion button does.

So, in a speech barren of new initiatives, the president proposes an undetailed new government health program covering catastrophic illness of the aged. While two months of bickering inside the administration have not resolved disagreements, the State of the Union still promised something — trying to show non-ideological compassion.

The domestic side of the speech was light on ideology. Secretary of Education William Bennett, preaching values instead of cold cash, was brought into the White House to supply badly-needed ideas. Unfortunately, they got into the wrong speech draft, one written by presidential aide Dennis Thomas that did not make the final cut. Bennett's rhetoric was not in the preferred version written by Ken Kachigian, Reagan's favorite speechwriter, imported from California.

The Kachigian draft reflected the president's fervor for his commitment to the Nicaraguan contras, but otherwise was short on Reaganaut substance. There was disappointment about the absence of commitment for early deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI). "But that would have meant a decision, and we're not ready for that," a White House aide told us.

Reagan's Address Was Symbolic, Not Substantive

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's State of the Union address Tuesday night was seen by the White House as an important symbolic event to demonstrate the president's vitality and authority. In the effort to make that impression, however, the president skimmed over the important substantive issues — particularly the budget deficit and arms control — on which his legacy may depend.

"There wasn't anything in it," complained a high-ranking administration policy-maker who has served since Reagan first took office. "They have finally achieved the content-free presidency. It doesn't work."

Reagan's rhetoric seemed crafted to shift the blame for many of his problems to others. Even in addressing the Iran scandal and saying he would accept responsibility for it, Reagan did not concede that he had personally made any mistakes.

A number of administration policy-makers said Wednesday the speech reflected a lack of imagination and boldness at the White House, which many of them attribute to Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan. These officials said Regan seems content with the modest agenda advanced in the speech. He convened a planning meeting Wednesday to discuss implementation of the few initiatives it outlined, despite widespread dissatisfaction in the ranks.

In the speech Reagan called the $200 billion budget deficits "outrageous," but said no more about the policies that created them over the last six years. Reagan was the architect of those policies, which Congress adopted. In the speech, Reagan tendered vague challenges to Capitol Hill and repeated old homilies about a balanced budget.

Reagan's own advisers were privately confused and puzzled over some deliberately ambiguous parts of the speech, and they argued over them beforehand, according to several sources. For example, on the budget deficit, Reagan said in the speech: "I will send Congress broad recommendations on the budget, but first I'd like to see yours."

One of Reagan's senior assistants objected to the line in advance, pointing out that Reagan had already sent his budget to Congress, and that making detailed proposals is supposed to be his prerogative.

"You couldn't tell what Reagan meant," said another official who was also confused. "It was idiotic."

But the line remained in the speech, as did others that seemed to dance lightly over Reagan's biggest problems. For example, Reagan said the superpowers are at a "moment of rare opportunity" on arms control, but he did not explain why, and he raised more questions that he answered by neglecting to mention his sweeping proposal at the Reykjavik summit last year to eliminate all ballistic missiles.

There were other passages which suggested that the White House is struggling to shape even a modest agenda for the rest of Reagan's second term.

For instance, Reagan called in last year's State of the Union address for a yearlong study on a catastrophic health insurance plan to protect people against huge medical bills. The study produced a plan favored by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen. But even after a year, the White House could not settle on whether this should be Reagan's plan and the president failed to endorse it in his address.

'... the president skimmed over the important substantive issues — particularly the budget deficit and arms control — on which his legacy may depend.'

Wednesday, a White House official said Bowen was angry over the slight, and further conflict developed over Bowen's plan to testify in favor of his plan in Congress Thursday. "It appears he's getting ready to go out on a limb even further," said the White House official.

Further evidence of uncertainty about Reagan's direction was the acknowledgement Wednesday by a senior White House official who briefed reporters that Reagan has not decided on any plan for early deployment of the Strategic Defense Initiative, a proposed missile defense plan. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has recently been advocating an earlier deployment, displeasing White House officials, including National Security Adviser Frank Carlucci.

White House officials said they realized that even Reagan's most ambitious new proposal — to enhance American "competitiveness" — was received with little enthusiasm on Capitol Hill. One presidential adviser said Democrats "obviously see a gap between the rhetoric and the reality on the section of the president's speech that we have called a quest for excellence. The question is whether we're going to be able to bridge that gap."

Presidential spokesman Larry Speakes said Wednesday that Democrats who derided Reagan's speech were "hooters" and "soreheads." But other officials said the strongly negative Democratic reaction probably presaged a period of confrontation between Reagan and Congress.

"The president succeeded in demonstrating that he's committed to his agenda, but there doesn't seem to be much realistic hope of getting much of it through Congress at this point," said a White House official.

The veteran administration policy-maker also said that White House officials are suffering from the "utter absence" of a long-range strategy for dealing with a Congress newly controlled by Democrats.

"They are making ad hoc decisions on the clean water bill, on the surface transportation bill," the official said, referring to two pieces of legislation Reagan has threatened to veto in recent days. "It's 'Oh my God, it passed.' This is going to be the central feature of the next two years. Getting this stuff (legislation the White House did not want) handed to you is the central process" that Reagan faces now, he said, but the White House has yet to devise a strategy for dealing with it.

Not A Caretaker

WASHINGTON — President Reagan, faced with what key advisers said was perhaps his last opportunity to restore his damaged leadership, Tuesday night demonstrated he can still dominate a stage filled with his political adversaries.

Democratic as well as Republican strategists agreed after the president's nationally televised State of the Union address that Reagan's physical vigor and skillful rhetoric showed that he is not willing to accept the role of a caretaker president in the last two years of his second term.

But whether the speech — which offered a basketful of familiar legislative remedies but barely touched on the arms-to-Iran affair that has crippled his presidency — will restore his control of the national agenda remained very much in doubt.

"He is going to be a player," said Republican pollster Robert Teeter. "The idea that because he had an operation and there's Iran he's going to dribble off to the ranch just won't wash." Several Democrats echoed that sentiment.

But Teeter, who has worked in the last two Reagan campaigns, conceded that the proposals Reagan laid before the country "lack the big ticket item" that would keep him in command of a Congress now dominated for the first time in his presidency by the opposition Democrats.

Geoff Garin, a Democratic pollster, described the speech as "good vintage Reagan" but said "he needed more than that. He needed to address the new business of the nation."

Democratic and Republican strategists split on whether Reagan had said enough about the Iran affair to ease the damage that has been caused him by the most serious political scandal of his administration. He devoted only two paragraphs of the speech to the clandestine arms deal and did not mention the diversion of funds from this transaction to aid the contra rebels fighting the government of Nicaragua.

While Reagan took "full responsibility" for what happened, he could not bring himself to acknowledge what his own polls show an overwhelming number of Americans believe: that the deal was a trade of arms for U.S. hostages being held in Lebanon.

Instead, the president proclaimed that "the goals were worthy" and said simply that "serious mistakes were made" without identifying what they were or saying who made them.

The phrasing was a presidential softening of proposals made in some earlier drafts — and strongly urged by some Republican leaders.

Storm-Battered Coast Doesn't Qualify For Federal Assistance

RALEIGH (AP) — Four coastal North Carolina counties battered by a New Year's Day storm do not qualify for federal disaster aid, despite damages totaling nearly $7 million, emergency officials say.

Damages in Pender, Onslow, Brunswick and New Hanover counties would have to exceed local or state capabilities before a presidential disaster declaration could be sought, said Chrystal Stowe, a spokeswoman for the state Department of Crime Control and Public Safety.

"In some of these counties, the extent of the damage did not go beyond local capabilities," Ms. Stowe said. "And where it did go beyond local capabilities, it did not go beyond state capabilities."

Coastal damage also did not meet federal guidelines specifying that the storm impacted the community at large and had left a significant number of structures in imminent danger from future floods, officials said.

The survey team found that only a small percentage of structures were in imminent danger, officials said, despite earlier state estimates that the storm left more than 500 homes with little or no protection by sand dunes.

At Long Beach, the area hit hardest by the storm, Town Manager Troy Davis said residents would have welcomed federal money for restoring beaches, but were coping with their property damage without such help.

"Most of the property owners are in contact with their insurance companies," Davis said. "And for the most part, most of them are getting satisfactory results."

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers also has helped the town restore its beaches, he said, by using sand dredged from nearby waterways.

"They have placed about 80,000 cubic yards on the beach at 8 feet above low water," he said. "And they are stockpiling an additional 60,000 cubic yards that we will be looking at methods for transporting further down the beach."

Although none of the coastal counties currently meet federal disaster aid guidelines, officials said the Small Business Administration still could offer loans to the area if residents or communities report more damage within 60 days of the storm.

Britt May Appeal Court's Rejection

RALEIGH (AP) — Former congressman Robin Britt is leaning toward appealing a Superior Court judge's rejection of a complete recount in the 6th District congressional election, his attorney says.

David F. Kirby said Britt, a Democrat who lost to U.S. Rep. Howard Coble, R-N.C., by 79 votes, should decide within the next couple of days whether to take his case to the North Carolina Court of Appeals or the state Supreme Court.

"I think... he still believes that a recount was appropriate and should have been ordered by the State Board of Elections and the Guilford County Board of Elections," Kirby said. "I think it's his current desire to continue to pursue this matter."

Superior Court Judge Giles Clark last week ruled against Britt's lawsuit demanding that all 144,579 votes cast in the Nov. 4 election be recounted.

A special city government information channel is available to Cable TV viewers. Channel 9 is programmed daily and informs citizens of current events, scheduled meetings, workshops and present a broad range of information on city services.

Britt charged that a recount was justified by widespread irregularities in the vote tabulation in the three-county district.

The election board in Guilford County, where Britt says most of the problems occurred, refused to recount the ballots. The State Board of Elections ordered a partial recount in December after a four-day hearing and threw out 172 absentee ballots, but also found that a full recount was not justified.

The state board certified Coble's victory Dec. 19.

In upholding the ruling last week, Clark said that under state law a judge cannot strike down an agency's decision because he disagrees with it. Rather, the judge must base his ruling on whether the agency acted legally, Clark said.

Under federal law, Britt could take his case to the U.S. House of Representatives after exhausting his court appeals.

Britt said earlier this month he had notified the House clerk that he might take such action, but had made no decision. Kirby declined to speculate on whether Britt would ask the predominantly Democratic House to unseat Coble if Britt loses in court.

SBI Says Cocaine Usage Increasing

RALEIGH (AP) — The number of cocaine samples submitted to the State Bureau of Investigation laboratories in 1986 was up 44 percent over the previous year, indicating a substantial rise in the cocaine trade, SBI officials say.

The statistics show that the main SBI drug laboratory in Raleigh and its western branch in Asheville analyzed 3,303 cocaine samples from January through December 1986, as compared to 2,294 for the same period in 1985, SBI officials said.

At least one cocaine sample was submitted for laboratory testing from 95 of the state's 100 counties, SBI director Robert Morgan said Thursday.

"Even though our emphasis to curtail the narcotic traffic increases daily, statistics indicate we are still losing ground," Morgan said, "and this means that we must increase our efforts even more."

The most cocaine cases came from Wake County, which had 387; followed by Guilford's 293; Cumberland's 278; Durham's 253 and Robeson's 119. Pitt County had 111 cases while Alamance and New Hanover counties had 93, Catawba 84 and Onslow 77.

The 74 samples of "crack," an extremely addictive form of cocaine, identified separately over the last six months of the year, were confined to 16 counties. The highest number of crack cases were reported in Harnett, which had 21 cases, followed by Lenoir's 13 and Pitt's nine.

Federal Team Will Scan Robeson Area

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal official says the U.S. Justice Department will not investigate the slaying of a Lumbee Indian by a Robeson County sheriff's deputy, but will look at other problems raised by a citizens group.

A coalition of blacks and Indians has protested the Nov. 1 shooting of Jimmy Earl Cummings by deputy Kevin Stone, the son of Sheriff Hubert Stone. A coroner's inquest ruled two weeks after the shooting that Stone fired his pistol either accidentally or in self-defense.

"What I think is that perhaps the greatest concern registered with our office, based on what we heard, were the charges that the coroner's inquest was not conducted properly," Richard Ensley of the Justice Department Community Relations Division said Thursday. "We're not going to get involved in that at all. They (Cummings' family) will have to be told by their attorneys how best to handle that."

But Ensley said he would bring a team of federal officials to Robeson County within two weeks to look into other problems identified by the Robeson County Citizens for Better Government. He said those problems include the existence of five separate school systems in the county, concerns that the county could be considered as a site for a toxic waste dump and complaints about widespread drug abuse.

Ensley said the decision to bring in a team of education, drug enforcement and Environmental Protection Agency personnel came after he met this week with leaders of the coalition and Cummings' family.

Ensley, whose Atlanta-based office is one of 10 regional offices that helps minorities and ethnic groups address community racial problems, met with relatives of the slain Indian during his two-day visit to the county.

"Our meeting with the Cummings' family was more a courtesy call to hear what other concerns they had, other than those that dealt directly with Cummings' death," Ensley said. "My understanding is that they already have attorneys and we in no way want to interfere with the client-attorney relationship."

"I think what's going to happen — the Cummings incident will act as a catalyst to trigger and allow people to get involved in some things they haven't been able to before."

Donation

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The PepsiCo Foundation has donated $1 million to Wake Forest University toward construction of a new University Center, D. Wayne Calloway, the company's chairman and chief executive officer said Thursday.

The new facility will incorporate the "PepsiCo Entertainment Center," housing a film theater, listening and activity room. The entertainment level will also feature a 2,000 square-foot cafe-like area called "PepsiCo Center Stage," which will be the site of performances by students, faculty and professional entertainers.

Wake Forest President Thomas K. Hearn Jr. said that construction of the 90,000 square-foot building will cost between $7 and $8 million.

L&M Layoffs

DURHAM (AP) — Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co. has laid off 104 hourly manufacturing employees, and company officials say an additional 71 people have voluntarily quit or have agreed to retire early on March 1.

Employees were notified Thursday and the layoffs affected all three shifts.

Liggett's manufacturing work force was 1,003 people a month ago but will shrink to less than 700 by March. In December, Liggett announced that layoffs would be necessary this winter, but said it was offering early retirement and voluntary layoff programs. Company spokeswoman Carol Jova said Thursday that 21 people quit voluntarily in exchange for a package including money and benefits.

Charged

RALEIGH (AP) — A staff psychologist with a state-run school for troubled youth near Kinston has been arrested on charges he had sex with a student, a State Bureau of Investigation agent says.

Thomas Cushing Phillips, 33, of Kinston was being held on $10,000 bond at the Lenoir County Jail Thursday. A warrant charges he "did engage in a sex act ... with a student who at that time was in custody of Dobbs School."

Phillips was charged with sexual activity by a custodian as a result of an incident Dec. 22, said SBI Special Agent James M. Wilson. Phillips' arrest came after an investigation that began Jan. 20 at the request of Lenoir County District Attorney Donald M. Jacobs, Wilson said.

Meredith Smith, director of public affairs with the state Department of Human Resources said Phillips submitted his resignation to school officials after his arrest Wednesday.

AIDS Drug

RALEIGH (AP) — A Swiss drug company says it is close to receiving a federal license to test an AIDS drug similar to Burroughs Wellcome Co.'s AZT.

Approval would be the first step in expanding testing of the drug — dideoxycytidine, or DDC — in humans. Hoffmann-La Roche Inc., is seeking permission to test the drug.

Company official say early testing indicates DDC might be less toxic than AZT, but cautioned the tests are preliminary.

Burroughs Wellcome's AZT has already been tested on humans under federal auspices and shown to prolong the lives of AIDS patients, though — like DDC — it does not cure the deadly disease.

Polluted Wells

PEACHTREE, N.C. (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency will investigate why private and commercial wells in the Peachtree community of Cherokee County have been contaminated with a solvent, an agency spokesman says.

State officials have advised that a day-care center, several businesses, several households and Tri-County Community College use bottled water after traces of a cleaning solvent were found in the wells earlier this month.

Murphy Medical Center, one of two hospitals in Cherokee County, is also in the community, but its water supply appears to be free of the contaminant except for a small amount state officials said is "insignificant."

Ed Hatcher of the EPA's regional office in Atlanta, said his agency and state authorities will get together next week to determine the cause of the contamination and to examine possible health risks.

Reward

SHELBY, N.C. (AP) — A reward has been increased to $25,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of those responsible for the Jan. 17 killing of three men and the wounding of two others at a Shelby adult book store.

Roger Griggs, supervisor of Shelby III Adult Books, previously had increased the reward from $5,000 to $10,000. He said the latest amount is his final offer.

Martin Wants Advisory Panel To Endorse Budget Proposal

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says he still wants the Democrat-controlled Advisory Budget Commission to endorse his proposed two-year budget, but a top Martin aide says he believes the Republican governor is wasting his time.

Martin Wednesday unveiled his $19.6 billion spending program for 1987-89, the first budget produced entirely by his administration and the first in years developed without the approval of the ABC.

"Unless they are in substantial disagreement, which I don't think they're going to be ... I think they ought to say that substantially we're in agreement," Martin said Thursday. "That would be an opportunity ... to join me in presenting this. If they will do that, that makes it a bipartisan budget. That will be good."

But Budget Director C.C. Cameron said Thursday he had advised Martin to submit his budget directly to the General Assembly rather than involve the ABC.

"I think he's wasting his time," Cameron said. "But I'm on his team and I'm going to do everything I can to sell it to the Advisory Budget Commission."

Historically, the governor and the ABC were equals in developing the proposed budget. But the state Supreme Court ruled unconstitutional in 1982 a law requiring the governor to get ABC approval of a budget before submitting it to the Legislature.

Even so, former Gov. Jim Hunt, who left office in 1985, did not change the ABC's role in formulating his subsequent budgets. Martin sought advice from the ABC, but the commission did not participate in the drafting of his proposed budget.

"The ABC has lost its teeth," Cameron said.

Martin asked the ABC for its endorsement when he presented it his budget plan Wednesday, but the group declined. Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, the ABC chairman, said it was unfair to expect an immediate vote when the panel had not had time to study the document.

Instead, the ABC voted to meet again Feb. 6, leaving unclear what action — if any — it would take.

Asked whether he expected an endorsement, Martin said, "I do."

"I think it would be good for the state," he said. "I think it would be good for all of us to show bipartisan support for the essentials of this proposal."

Advocate Says Plan Short On Mentally Ill

RALEIGH (AP) — A mental health advocate says Gov. Jim Martin's proposed budget shows the administration is beginning to pay attention to the needs of the mentally ill, but it does not address the urgency of improving conditions.

In his 1987-89 biennium budget, released Wednesday, Martin recommended earmarking $4.1 million to create a "safer environment at psychiatric hospitals" and to buy equipment.

"I am somewhat surprised this item did not receive greater priority than it did," said John Baggett, executive director of the North Carolina Alliance for the Mentally Ill. "The publicity (about escapes at Dorothea Dix Hospital) that's occurred over the past months has dramatically illustrated this is a crisis area and it needs to be dealt with with a sense of urgency."

"I think this budget does show this administration is beginning to pay attention, but it also shows we have a long way to go," Baggett said. Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk said this month the public has lost confidence in security measures at the hospitals. He appointed a panel to study ways to reduce escapes and recommended hiring 240 additional employees. Kirk also recommended an additional $4 million in the first year of the biennium and $6 million in the second.

Baggett said Kirk's suggestions were the bare minimum.

"First of all, (Martin's) budget is for personnel, since the figure also included some money for equipment and it's not broken down anywhere," Baggett said. "Even if all of it were used for the positions, it would not be enough ..."

The Wake County Mental Health Board has said that at least $12 million is needed statewide over the next two years.

FULL SCHEDULE
The new church at 404 S. Evans St. is meeting each Sunday at 10:00 a.m., 11:00 a.m. and 6:30 p.m., and Wednesday at 7:00 p.m. All peoples are welcome. Bill Rouse, Pastor, 355-7886.

He emphasized that an endorsement, as he interpreted it, would not preclude any ABC member from supporting changes. Under the state Constitution, the governor proposes the budget but the Legislature has the final say.

An endorsement "would be saying that our combined thinking is reflected in this budget" and that the ABC supports its emphasis on education, Martin said.

Royall said in an interview Thursday that he supported some parts of the Martin budget but did not expect the ABC to endorse it. Refusal would not mean the ABC was repudiating the budget, Royall said.

"I don't think it would hurt the (budget's) momentum," he said. "It's just that there are certain things the Legislature's going to differ on."

Education is the big-ticket item in Martin's budget, getting 68 percent of all new spending proposed. Of the $1.3 billion in additional expenditures over two years, $929 million would go to schools.

Democrats have praised Martin's inclusion of $356.9 million in the budget to keep the Basic Education Program on schedule, but have questioned his call for beginning statewide implementation of the Career Ladder Plan for teachers in the 1988-89 school year.

Lawmakers also have voiced skepticism of Martin's proposal to issue $1 billion to $2 billion in bonds to create a pool for school construction.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said in a statement that the administration had based its budget on overly optimistic revenue estimates and had left too little money in reserve to allow for an economic downturn.

Corn Producers Feel Betrayed By Trade Pact

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Although last-minute negotiations averted a costly agricultural trade war between the United States and the 12-nation European Economic Community, some farm groups say American corn producers were betrayed.

The settlement came on Thursday, just as the United States prepared to establish duties of as much as 200 percent on European gin, cognac, cheeses and vegetables. U.S. Trade Representative Clayton K. Yeutter said President Reagan would rescind his order levying the import duties, which were to have gone into effect today.

Yeutter, in a statement, said that as part of the agreement, the EEC, also known as the Common Market, promised "full and fair compensation" to the United States for an estimated $400 million in lost U.S. grain sales to Spain.

The sales were lost when Spain joined the EEC last year and adopted its tariff system. Yeutter said the accord was "the first time that the United States has received full compensation following an enlargement of the EEC."

But U.S. farm groups said the compromise does not go far enough because part of that compensation will be in the form of reduced tariffs on non-agricultural products.

Michael Hall, executive vice president of the National Corn Growers Association, called the settlement "inadequate, insufficient and not anywhere near the market compensation" needed by American feed grains producers.

"They've got to get some backbone and walk away from these cockeyed things that restrict our ability to sell into export markets, and not tell farmers this is the best we could do," Hall said in an interview. "If that's the best they can do, they shouldn't have done it. They should have walked away."

Dean Kleckner, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation, said the agreement "may represent the best deal that's possible, but it's not everything corn farmers had hoped for."

While the agreement appeared to signal at least a temporary halt in an escalating trade war with Europe, deep frictions remained.

Deputy Trade Representative Alan Woods told a news conference that the compromise would have no effect on other ongoing trade disputes, including possible U.S. retaliation to protest European commercial aircraft subsidies.

In Brussels, Willy de Clercq, the EEC's chief negotiator, said he was satisfied with the accord, calling it "an honorable compromise."

And U.S. Agriculture Secretary Ricahrd E. Lyng said the agreement would help avoid "a trade war with our major trading partner" while clearing the way for an upcoming round of global trade liberalization talks in Geneva.

Under the four-year agreement, the EEC promised to ensure annual imports of 2 million metric tons of corn and 300,000 metric tons of sorghum into Spain from the United States and other nations, U.S. officials said.

They estimated that of these shipments, about 2 million tons would come from the United States.

The EEC also promised to drop a requirement that Portugal purchase 15 percent of its feed grain imports from other EEC members, worth an estimated additional 400,000 metric tons of sales. That would have the effect of raising the annual feed grains import total for Spain and Portugal to 2.7 million tons.

A metric ton is 2,205 pounds — equal to 39.4 bushels of corn.

According to Yeutter, the EEC also will provide compensation in the form of lower tariffs for 26 products, including dried onions, avocados, roasted nuts, plywood, sheet aluminum and some chemicals.

This will account for between $70 million to $90 million annually of the overall $400 million in compensation, U.S. officials estimated.

It was this part of the agreement that drew the criticism of American farm organizations, who claimed that U.S. farmers should receive compensation equivalent to 4.1 million tons of feed grain sales a year.

Hall, representing the National Corn Growers Association, said the whole point of U.S. negotiations with the EEC was to gain market access for American farmers

"They are wanting us to be market-oriented, and all the while they agreed to an insufficient settlement," Hall said, referring to the Reagan administration push for less government in farm programs and more reliance on the marketplace.

Hall said the administration keeps pushing for lower crop price supports and cuts in "target prices" for setting subsidy levels in hopes of making U.S. commodities cheaper and more attractive to foreign buyers.

"Then these negotiators are out here saying it's a good agreement, that we at least got an inch when we needed a yard," he said. "That doesn't fly in Iowa, it doesn't fly in Kansas, it's not good for agriculture."

Undersecretary of Agriculture Daniel G. Amstutz told reporters: "It is likely that some feed grains interests are disappointed with the amount of the settlement. We understand that." But he said that under the accord, U.S. farmers will be able to export four times more grain to Spain than they would have without it.

If the dispute had not been settled, the "yuppie trade war" duties would have been imposed on British gin, French cognac and inexpensive white wines, Danish canned ham, Belgian endives and carrots, Spanish and Greek olives and on various types of European cheese.

The EEC had threatened retaliatory action against U.S. feed grains, rice and wheat if the new American tariffs took effect.

December Gains Keep Record Trade Deficit From Growing

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States accumulated a $169.8 billion trade deficit in 1986, its largest ever, but a sharp improvement in December kept it from soaring even higher, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said Americans imported $10.7 billion more than they exported in December, down from the $19.2 billion deficit reported the previous month.

The Reagan administration had contended that the November figures were a fluke and that the trade imbalance is easing under pressures of a weakening dollar. It had predicted an improvement in the deficit this year in the vicinity of $30 billion.

There have been declines in the deficit in five of the last six months.

Still, the total 1986 deficit was $21.3 billion higher than the 1985 deficit of $148.5 billion — a disappointment to the administration and some private analysts who earlier had expected an improvement in trade accounts in 1986.

Americans imported $387.1 billion in merchandise in 1986, up 7 percent from the previous year. Exports rose by 2 percent, to $217.3 billion.

Agricultural exports during the year declined 10.7 percent, to $26.1 billion, reflecting lost markets to U.S. farmers, partly due to world surpluses. Agricultural imports increased 5.3 percent, to $23.2 billion.

As before, the United States ran its largest deficit with Japan, a record $58.6 billion in 1986, the largest trade imbalance ever posted between two nations. It was up from a $49.7 billion deficit with Japan of the previous year.

The next largest deficit was with the 12-nation European Economic Community, $26.4 billion, up from $22.6 billion the year before.

The United States ran a $23.3 billion deficit with Canada, up from $22.1 billion; a $15.7 billion deficit with Taiwan, up from $13.0 billion; and a $10.7 billion deficit with the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), down from $11.6 billion.

Analysts said the large jump in the November figures partly reflected a surge in imports that were brought in to beat a new customs fee on all imports that took effect on Dec. 1.

Beryl Sprinkel, chairman of the White House Council of Economic Advisers, told reporters on Thursday that "we are hopeful over the next few months we will get an improvement. We're quite confident over the next few months."

Administration officials have conceded disappointment that the trade deficit has not narrowed, given the 35 percent drop in the value of the U.S. dollar against other major currencies over the past 18 months.

For instance, in early 1986 Treasury Secretary James A. Baker

III predicted that the deficit would fall during the year to about $135 billion.

A weaker dollar is supposed to bring higher import prices at home and lower prices for U.S. products abroad.

House Members Have Huge Excess Campaign Funds Available For Use

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dozens of House members who won re-election in November have enough campaign money left over to put a good scare into future opponents — or to retire, should they choose, with a generous nest egg.

Campaign treasuries approaching $1 million by the top fund raiser in the House, Republican David Dreier of California, and more than $2 million for the Senate leader, Republican Bob Dole of Kansas, point out the growing emphasis on money as a safety net even for incumbents who win re-election easily.

Of the 435 House members elected last fall, 54 reported leftover campaign treasuries of more than $250,000. Election law allows them to convert the money to personal use if they were in Congress before January 1980. A hefty percentage of them began their service prior to that time, and of the 54 sitting on the largest campaign chests, all but eight are eligible to keep the money for themselves by virtue of taking office before 1980.

Unlike the House's more generous set-up, Senate ethics rules prohibit the conversion of excess campaign funds for personal use, but permit senators to give the money to political parties or use it for other legal, non-political causes after leaving office.

Fifteen winners came out of last fall's Senate elections with war chests of more than $250,000, led by Dole with $2.2 million, according to Federal Election Commission statements they filed.

In addition, several senators who are not up for re-election until 1988 or 1990 also have been raking in contributions, in some cases to the tune of more than $1 million.

Many winners with the biggest leftover treasuries faced only token or non-threatening opponents in the general election.

Of the 21 House members who currently have more than $400,000 in the bank, all but one, Rep. Steve Bartlett, R-Texas, have far more money left than they actually spent on their elections.

But they say they feel compelled to raise the large sums to ward off potential primary challengers and because they don't know who might run against them in the general election. Leading all House members with a bank account approaching $1 million is Dreier, who has carried over increasingly large surpluses after each election.

"As a Boy Scout, I was always taught to be prepared," Dreier said in an interview Thursday, noting that after he ousted an incumbent congressman in 1980, California's new reapportionment lines forced him to run against another Republican incumbent in 1982. That put him in a difficult fund-raising position since contributors had to choose between two GOP incumbents.

"I made a decision about five years ago to never be in that position again," Dreier said. He pointed out that since he was elected in 1980 he cannot convert his campaign funds to personal use, but added, "There's no secret that a lot of people have been encouraging me to run for the U.S. Senate in a few years."

Dreier has $942,371 in excess campaign funds, after spending some $147,000 against Democrat Lamont Hempel, who spent about $23,000.

Rep. Steven Solarz, D-N.Y., has the second richest war chest in the House, with $793,864 cash on hand after spending some $398,000 on his election.

"We're not the least bit embarrassed by our riches.... We're kind of proud to have this money," Solarz aide Michael Lewan said.

"We believe it's prudent to have a substantial war chest in the event that in the next election... somebody emerges in the district with substantial personal funds and wants to take him on," Lewan said.

Much of the money was raised when Solarz feared New York's reapportionment would force him into a race with another Democratic incumbent, Lewan said.

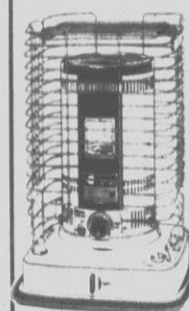

Dole, the Senate GOP leader who is eyeing a possible 1988 White House bid, has $2.2 million left after spending $1.4 million on his campaign. His 1986 opponent, Democrat Guy MacDonald, reported spending no money, and Dole dumped him by a 70-30 percent margin.

Dole's spokesman, Walt Riker, said Dole had been collecting the large sums over the years because the Democrats were "making a lot of noises" about running a tough challenger.

"With that in mind, Senator Dole was out very early raising money to build a war chest and send a message that we're going to be ready for all comers," Riker said. Federal election law would allow transfer of leftover Senate funds to a presidential committee if Dole runs.

Other senators who emerged from the 1986 elections with surpluses above $500,000 were: Bob Packwood, R-Ore., with $957,161; John Glenn, D-Ohio, with $797,411; Alfonse D'Amato, R-N.Y., $652,971; and Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, $612,649.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

THE PHARAOHS OF THE BIBLE!

GENERALLY, WHEN ONE THINKS OF THE ANCIENT PHARAOHS OF EGYPT, ONE THINKS OF THE PHARAOHS OF THE OPPRESSION AND THE EXODUS. BUT THE BIBLE TELLS OF MORE RULERS OF EGYPT THAN THESE, CALLING THEM BY NAME! FIRST, THERE WAS SHISHAK--THE BIBLE TELLS OF HIS EXPEDITION INTO ISRAEL. (I KINGS 14:25,26). HE WAS CERTAINLY AN ABLE STATESMAN SINCE HE AVOIDED A CLASH WITH KING SOLOMON WHILE KEEPING SOLOMON'S SWORN ENEMY AS A PROTECTED GUEST! (I KINGS 11:40). HE WAS SHREWD IN HIS PLANS, NOT MAKING A MILITARY MOVE UNTIL THE DIVISION OF JUDAH AND ISRAEL, WHEN BOTH KINGDOMS WERE AT THEIR WEAKEST! HE RULED EGYPT FROM 945 B.C. TO 924 B.C. ZERAH, THE CUSHITE, SUCCEEDED SHISHAK IN 924 B.C. THIS PHARAOH UNDERTOOK AN EXPEDITION AGAINST JUDAH DURING THE REIGN OF KING ASA, BUT HIS FORCES WERE ROUTED AT MARESHAH (II CHRON. 14:9-15:16:8) SO DECISIVELY THAT IT WAS NEVER TRIED AGAIN BY THIS PHARAOH! THE BIBLE TELLS US THAT KING HOSHEA OF ISRAEL, ABOUT 724 B.C., ATTEMPTED TO ENLIST THE AID OF SO KING OF EGYPT TO DEFEAT SHALMANESER, KING OF ASSYRIA (II KINGS 17:3-5) ONLY TO BE BITTERLY DEFEATED BY THE ASSYRIAN TROOPS! THE BIBLE ALSO MENTIONS TIRHAKAH, KING OF ETHIOPIA, THIS PHARAOH WAS LAST KING OF THE XXV DYNASTY OR THE ETHIOPIAN DYNASTY IN EGYPT. (II KINGS 19:9) HE WAS ALSO ROUNDLY DEFEATED BY THE ASSYRIAN ARMIES! PHARAOH-NECOH (II KINGS 23:29) WAS THE EGYPTIAN PHARAOH THAT SLEW KING JOSIAH AT MEGIDDO WHEN JOSIAH TRIED TO OPPOSE HIM IN HIS MARCH AGAINST THE ASSYRIANS, THE LAST PHARAOH NAMED IN THE BIBLE IS PHARAOH-HOPHRA (JER. 44:30). HE WAS A CONQUERING WARRIOR WHOM, JEREMIAH SAID, SHOULD FALL INTO THE HANDS OF HIS ENEMIES, WHICH FINALLY DID HAPPEN!!

Mykonos Is Wealthiest Island

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer
MYKONOS, Greece (AP) — In summer, 30,000 tourists crowd onto this rocky Aegean island every day, putting its 4,000 residents on a hectic schedule catering to them. It also puts money in their pockets.

But when this sophisticated vacation resort shuts down for the winter, the islanders resume a leisurely Greek lifestyle. Men play cards in the cafes when the weather turns too stormy for fishing. Women cook huge meals for family and friends.

"In the season, it's so frenetic that my wife's on tranquilizers and I'm too tired to talk to my friends," said hotelier Alecos Galounis.

Mykonos, 34 square miles in area, is known for its cube-shaped white houses, whitewashed alleys, donkeys and thatched windmills. Its nudist beaches, gay bars and wild nightlife attract jet-setters of all nationalities.

A 25-year tourism boom has brought in hundreds of millions of dollars, making the resort the wealthiest of Greece's 200 or so inhabited islands.

Mykonians take Caribbean cruises in winter, send their children to American universities and drink imported Scotch whisky by the crate.

The islanders say that although Mykonos now attracts too many visitors, it's still essentially unspoiled.

"We get more than 550,000 tourists every year, far more than any other small Greek island," Mayor Matthew Apostolou said in an interview. "It's really too many. They choke the town in July and August, but how can we turn visitors away?"

"We have real problems in summer with noise, traffic jams and garbage disposal. But if the island was losing its appeal, I don't think people would still be streaming in."

The island has 15 sandy beaches, around 200 restaurants, bars and discos and 15,000 beds in quaint hotels.

The mayor said that not all the tourists who come to Mykonos use hotel space. He estimated that about 5,000 on any given day sleep at campsites or on beaches, while about 10,000 others stay aboard cruise ships or yachts.

"But almost everyone comes into town at dusk for the evening's entertainment," he added.

A 50 percent decline last year in American visitors to Greece cut down on cruise-ship arrivals on Mykonos. But larger numbers of Italians, Swiss, Japanese and Greeks came.

Mykonos' reputation for carefree hospitality is said to date from the 1770s, when the island was held for four years by Russian forces fighting Ottoman Turkey in the days of the Empress Catherine the Great.

"It was after the Russian period that Mykonos began to acquire its unique attitude to visitors," said newspaper publisher Helen Vlachos, one of dozens of prominent Athenians who own homes on the island. "Mykonians don't mind if you stay up all night, go around nude, or dance in their churches."

Organized tourism to Mykonos began in the 1930s when wealthy foreigners stopped off en route to a famous archeological site on the nearby island of Delos. It took off in the early 1960s as Mykonos became known as a place where celebrities could relax undisturbed.

"There wasn't any security then," said restaurateur Philip Kontizas. "People like Jackie Kennedy just strolled around. The celebrities still come, but (Saudi Arabian billionaire) Adnan Khashoggi has a crowd of guards with him."

Officially, Mykonos earns $21 million annually from tourism. But islanders say that about $63 million in undeclared income is stashed away every year in cash or in bank accounts outside Greece.

Real estate prices have soared. An old-fashioned two-room apartment overlooking the waterfront is offered for sale at $170,000. A modern vacation home near a beach can run more than $230,000.

The tourism boom also has stemmed a centuries-old tradition of migration from the island.

"Mykonos used to suffer from real poverty," said Thodoros Fouskis, a fisherman turned bar-owner. "People had to go to sea or find construction jobs in Athens. Tourism changed all that. Nobody leaves now."

Things To Fix Around Home

Better Homes And Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

If you grumble every time you think about how your driveway is falling apart, or if you listen in dismay as winter winds howl through inadequate windows, take consolation.

Your neighbor is probably doing the same thing.

A recent survey by the Better Homes and Gardens Consumer Panel indicates that repairing driveways and replacing windows are at the top of the homeowner's list of problems. Following close behind, however, are porches or decks that need fixing, screen and storm windows that require attention and doors which should be replaced.

Big ticket items such as new roofing, adding a garage or carport or putting on new siding came much further down on the list.

Most of the respondents in the survey — 28 percent — had only lived in their homes between one and five years. Another 21 percent had been in the same home between six and 10 years.

For the most part, the homes they planned to fix were relatively new. Twenty-two percent of the respondents, the largest group, said their homes were less than 10 years old. Another 21 percent had homes between 10 and 19 years old.

A majority of the homeowners indicated they were seriously considering remodeling the kitchen. Next in line for a spruce-up was the bath, followed by the basement and master bedroom.

Asked why they were thinking about such projects, 33 percent replied that they wanted to gain more space. Twenty-nine percent, however, said a remodeling project was necessary to repair wear or damage. Other reasons included updating fixtures, increasing the value of the home, increasing energy-efficiency, accommodating a growing family, or personalizing a home recently purchased or keeping up with friends.

It was found that fully 84 percent of the remodeling ideas homeowners used came from magazines. Another 19 percent originated with remodeling contractors.

Most survey respondents indicated they'd probably choose their remodeling contractor on the basis of a referral by a friend. Some, however, would rely on a recommendation from a lumberyard or other building-supply source.

Of course, some homeowners plan to take on projects themselves. An overwhelming number of respondents (86 percent) do their own painting and/or wall papering. More than half install their own light fixtures. Some will also lay tile or build a deck.

Finally, the Panel indicated the do-it-yourself trend will probably remain constant for the near future. Almost half said they planned to do the same amount of work on their home as they've been doing.

Have A Cold? Better Not Fly

NEW YORK (AP) — If you fly when you have a cold, you may subject yourself to ear damage called aerotitis, warns Dr. Walter A. Petryshyn, medical director of the Deafness Research Foundation.

So serious is the problem, he says, that more than 2 million cases of pressure-related ear disorders occur each year from changes in air pressure when an airplane descends.

And at this stage of technology, he adds, little can be done to protect air passengers with a cold or upper respiratory problem from possible ear damage.

"As more people fly, the number of cases of ear problems will continue to escalate," says Petryshyn.

To try to avert trouble, a passenger can chew gum, yawn, pinch his nose gently and blow — and use nasal decongestants a half hour before descent, he says.

The ear problems manifest themselves through symptoms ranging from mild inflammation of the ear to more severe and relatively rare inner-ear trouble.

"During descent from flight a person's ear drum is subjected to rapid pressure change," says Petryshyn. "If the Eustachian tube doesn't equalize air pressure fast enough to cope with this change, aerotitis can result."

"This is due to failure of the Eustachian tube to open spontaneously and an inability to open the tube by deliberate means, such as yawning, chewing gum or gently pinching your nose and blowing."

In its mildest form, aerotitis causes a feeling of pressure in the ear and some pain, which usually abates after the plane has landed. The passengers may complain of some hearing loss, but for the most part this is transient.

"Most air travelers regard this as a normal result of flying," Petryshyn says.

But in many cases the symptoms can be more severe, with passengers having severe pains in the ear; experiencing tinnitus, or a ringing sensation in the ear; having the disturbing sensation of hearing their own voice amplified and distorted; and suffering vertigo, or dizziness.

Serious inner-ear trauma may occur when a fistula develops in the oval or round windows of the fragile inner-ear structure. Endo-lymphatic fluid leaks out, causing hearing loss and dizziness.

"This problem may not be reversible," says Petryshyn. "And ruptures of the inner-ear membrane can result in a total hearing loss."

Women Are Stepping Forward

By COSMOPOLITAN
A Hearst Magazine

From Sheila E.'s funky macha to Syd Straw's skewed country-rock, women have exploded onto the once masculine rock music scene.

They are not just singers, accompanying to an article in the January issue of Cosmopolitan, but also guitarists, drummers, producers, engineers, bandleaders — professionals.

"Women are stepping forward on other fronts," said Anita Pointer of the Pointer Sisters, "becoming mayors and running for vice president. It's the same in rock."

Debbi Peterson, drummer for Bangles, the first big rock hit of 1986, said:

"Women all over the place are getting up there and playing whatever instruments they choose, writing whatever songs they feel."

"And a woman doesn't have to act like a guy anymore to make rock 'n' roll, doesn't have to do an imitation macho thing. Nor does she have to be a wimp, like girl singers used to."

"You know, 'Oh Johnny, I'll sit by the phone forever.' In our songs, it's more 'Johnny, be cool. I'm independent. I don't like to sit by the phone and wait; if you don't call pretty soon, I'm goin' out by myself..."

Ann Wilson, 35, lead singer of Heart, is one of the few who have been around since the 1970s.

She said it has taken so long for women to join rock bands "because it's male aggressive. There've been very few women who can be that aggressive."

Sexism among rockers is on the decline, according to Patty Smyth, leader and lead singer of hard-rocking Scandal. She was backed by Syd Straw, who last year finally made it big fronting the avant-garde Golden Palominos.

"All of a sudden, it's attractive to be a female and in the forefront," she said. "Audiences are fed up with watching five strutting guys up there. Chemically, it's so much more interesting to watch both sexes onstage."

What gets women into rock? Katrina Leskanich, whose voice ranges from lullaby to wrecking ball, was 16 when she left home to tour Britain with a band that became Katrina and the Waves.

"I'd always felt men got to do the fun things while women cooked, cleaned up, gossiped at parties. When I got old enough to rock and roll — bang, I was gone."

Not every woman rocker wants to be thought of as a "woman in rock"

— Aimee Mann, lead singer, bassist and songwriter for the Boston group 'Til Tuesday, has some reservations.

"For the first time, women are breaking through; they're showing they can vary in all the ways men vary," she said. "They can be sexual or tough or sensitive or technical wizards."

"But you choose your own way of dealing with things. For me, the best way to prove that women can play rock music just as well as men is to go ahead and do it."

Fleming Ads

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Figure skater Peggy Fleming says she's eager to begin a pork industry ad campaign, but hopes people don't start calling her "Miss Piggy."

The National Pork Board will spend $4.5 million for the campaign, to begin in March.

Miss Fleming, who won a gold medal in the 1968 Olympics, said at a Wednesday news conference that pork had been part of her diet since she was a child.

Canine Visitors Cheer Sick Kids

By KARREN MILLS
Associated Press Writer
ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — The shining eyes of the children are what Harold Selby remembers best from the many years he has brought his dogs to perform and visit with patients at Gillette Children's Hospital.

Selby, a member of the St. Paul Dog Training Club, has been visiting Gillette since 1959 with fellow club members, and the group began making regularly scheduled visits three years ago.

"I've enjoyed it all the time. I've learned to look at their eyes and that tells it," said Selby, of Roseville. "There was one little boy here who was burned all over his head. He couldn't smile but his eyes would twinkle."

"And when they giggle and laugh, you know you've won the show."

Once a month, the club's obedience demonstration team visits the hospital to show the children how dogs are trained for competition, to show off tricks the dogs have learned and to let the patients pet the dogs and feed them dog treats.

The team also volunteers at another hospital and at nursing homes throughout the Minneapolis-St. Paul area, said demonstration team leader Margaret Polnaszek, of Minneapolis.

It was Polnaszek's black poodle, Trouble, who drew the most giggles during a recent visit to Gillette by 11 team members and their dogs. Trouble was so excited he forgot, or ignored, most of Polnaszek's instructions as the group performed in the hospital recreation room.

When she told Trouble to lower his bark to a "whisper" to get a treat, Trouble rolled over instead and the children for a moment forgot their wheelchairs, casts, and intravenous tubes, and enjoyed the fun.

When he was supposed to walk at Polnaszek's side, Trouble was dancing around excitedly and heading off to visit one of his cocker spaniel friends.

"Everybody's dog knows what heel position is except mine. It never fails," Polnaszek lamented to the delighted children.

During visiting time after the show, Stephanie Harper, 8, of Shoreview, wanted to meet Trouble and as many of the other dogs as she could.

"Not on my leg," Stephanie warned one large dog who got close to her sore foot that was in a cast.

"I was here this summer for a spinal fusion and I've seen some of these dogs before," Stephanie said. "We have a cat at home and I want a dog."

Gary Newman, therapeutic recreation-child life supervisor at Gillette, says there has never been a problem with dogs being aggressive with children in all the time the animals have been coming to the hospital.

"They've been real warm with the kids. They're well-trained dogs and well behaved," he said.

As the dogs are in different levels of obedience training, some are more jumpy than others, Newman said. But he noted that children always clap and laugh the most when the dogs make mistakes.

Gillette also has puppies brought in from the Humane Society and permits hospital visits by the children's own pets, Newman said.

"It's important to try to make the hospital as normal an environment as you can. And dogs are part of the family," he said.

Gillette psychologist Lynn Blackburn says she thinks pet therapy is very important in treatment of the children, and adds that the hospital has permitted animal visits since the early 1900s.

"This is an idea that's gaining greater and greater acceptance in hospitals," Blackburn said.

"When children are in the hospital, they are taken away from things that are familiar to them. The pets bring something they're familiar with back into that strange setting," she said.

She also noted the therapeutic value of interaction between sick children and pets.

"Animals are not turned off by sickness," Blackburn said. "They don't look upset. If a child is missing a limb, a dog or a cat doesn't care. Animals aren't scared about things that are visually different about people."

This Woman Doesn't 'Skirt' Issue

Dear Abby

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I haven't quite decided whether I am more amused or outraged by the infantile attitude of "Al From Santa Barbara." He's the jerk who said if a woman wore pants (slacks) on their first date, there wouldn't be a second one. He thinks women should wear dresses so he can tell the difference between men and women. If this is the only way Al can tell the difference, he has a serious problem. — VICKI FROM SEATTLE

DEAR ABBY: Al is right. If a man picked me up for a date dressed like a slob, I wouldn't say anything either. If that's his style, who am I to try to change him? Most women wear slacks because it's too much trouble to put on a foundation garment, hosiery and heels, which is the proper way for a lady to dress. They'd rather throw on a pair of pants, never mind if their abdomen sticks out six inches ahead of their bust — not to mention what their rear looks like. — ANTI-PANTS WOMAN

DEAR ABBY: I am over 40, plump, female and married, and I wear pants ALL the time. My legs are too heavy from the hips down to wear anything else. I would gross people out if I wore a skirt or dress. And I'm not the only woman with that problem. — TAMMY IN TROY, MICH.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 63-year-old woman who agrees with Al. I don't like pants on women. I wear them only during bad weather and for sports events requiring pants. Then I wear an overblouse to cover my behind and stomach. I hate pants on older women. The only females who should wear pants in public are cute little girls with well-rounded behinds. — PANTLESS IN POMPANO

DEAR ABBY: May I answer Al

who thinks women don't look good in pants? A lot of men don't look good in pants either. If you think women should wear dresses so you can distinguish them from men, maybe you should join a nudist colony. — JANELLE FROM LINCOLN, NEB.

DEAR ABBY: After a woman has worn slacks for a while she is never warm in a dress. That's why I haven't allowed myself to become addicted to slacks. Also, after seeing myself in a rearview mirror, I realized I looked better in a dress. Another reason for wearing pants: After a certain age many women have chosen "Deep Purple" as their theme song — to match the varicose veins in their legs. Pants hide them well. — PRACTICAL IN TITUSVILLE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: I am an eighth-grader in a Catholic grade school, and ever since I was 6 years old I have worn a skirt every school day of my life. Next year I will be attending an all-girls Catholic high school where I will have to wear skirts for another four years. Who does Al think he is to tell me I can't wear pants? Skirts are impractical and uncomfortable. I detest them. A girl can't run, jump or bend over in a skirt.

Al also said it wasn't fair that men were not allowed to wear skirts, but women can wear whatever they want. If Al really wants to wear a skirt, he can buy a kilt and move to Scotland. — GREEN BAY GIRL

women in pants, he really should get himself gussied up in panty hose and high heels and hike around the city for a day and a half. I'm a pants-wearing woman who wears a dress only when I have to (funerals and church). I was also the victim of a violent crime, so I wear only shoes I can RUN in! — YOUNGSTOWN GRANDMA

DEAR ABBY: Al said, "Very few women look good in pants." The truth is, very few of anybody look good in pants — including men. Probably men should wear long skirts to hide their bowlegs, knock-knees, wide backsides, and tummies they can't pull their waistbands up over. If we're going to criticize, let's spread it around evenly. — IRRITATED IN OAKLAND

DEAR ABBY: Re: "Al From Santa Barbara": Sentence this jackrabbit to four seasons in the Midwest living as a woman. In no time he'll learn the "hunch over and grab his skirt around the knees" trick (without losing his purse)! Give him big hips for skirts to ride up on, and tell him flared skirts will hide his hips — that his varicose veins won't show, and his damaged nylons are covered. Give him this outfit with high heels to match, and I'll wish him one heckuva corn! — LILLIAN IN AURORA

Religious Beliefs Lead To Isolation

By JOAN BECKER-CARY
Peoria Journal Star
SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — Ken Strange has returned from the back of the house in his faded denim overalls, a flannel shirt and work gloves.

Within minutes, his five children, ages 2 to 8, scamper out the door after him to do the chores, take care of the goats, the ducks, the bees, the rabbits, the steer.

Susan, their mother, in a navy print dress that flows to her feet, walks past the wood-burning stove to the kitchen to start the evening meal.

Ken and Susan Strange live a life all their own in this small mobile home near the Springfield Capital Airport.

They have no TV. "Why teach your children what they're not supposed to do and then set them down in front of it? In front of TV?" Mrs. Strange asks.

They never go to movies. They live on $25 a week in store-bought groceries, added to their own goat meat, duck, rabbit, honey, organically grown vegetables from the garden and goat milk in the summertime.

Their children sit in a circle around the kitchen table every weekday from 9 a.m. until about 3 p.m. for lessons. Mrs. Strange teaches them at home.

During "recess," they run and make their beds or play outside with the dog, Peter, and the cats. At night, they read the Bible together. After Bible readings, each prays individually.

Ken, 30, met Susan, 28, about 12 years ago at The Little Church in the Valley, East Peoria, where Mrs. Strange's father, A.D. Hawkins, now of Mississippi, was minister. Mrs. Strange was a teen-ager and "questioning everything."

She and Ken married in 1975, when she was 16 and he was 18. In 1977, they left the Peoria area to join a missionary who planned to buy a 31-foot boat and sail it to the New Hebrides Islands, near Australia, to spread the gospel.

Despite giving everything they had, $15,000, toward the trip, they decided not to go because "we didn't agree with some of what we were seeing," Mrs. Strange says.

They packed what little they had left in 1978 and moved to Springfield, where they joined the Wesleyan Holiness Church, a congregation of "old-fashioned Methodists," in which people practice what they preach, Mrs. Strange says.

Strange has his own business, Professional Floor Care Systems. And he takes care of the five acres they live on in return for use of the land.

He is also building his wife a small schoolhouse where she can teach their children — Faith, Jehu, Enoch, Joshua and Heather.

The figures reported by the U.S. Commerce Department showed a merchandise trade deficit of $10.66 billion for December, the smallest December gap since the $8.14 billion deficit posted in March 1985. The dollar was boosted by the report, leaping to around 1.8425 West German marks in New York trading from 1.7830 marks at midmorning in Europe.

The Dow Jones industrials fell 3.38 Thursday to close at 2,160.01. It was only the third time this month that the indicator has fallen.

Volume on the New York Stock Exchange totaled 205.25 million shares vs. 195.82 million the previous session.

Players Saddened By Decision

In general, Coach Charlie Harrison's players expressed shock and sadness at his resignation Thursday afternoon at East Carolina University.

"I'm just sorry about it," sophomore Jeff Kelly, a sometime starter at point guard said. "He's done a lot for the program. I think East Carolina's basketball program is a lot better since he came here, and he's done a lot for us personally. I don't think you'll find too many coaches who care as much about the players as he does. I know that he's done a lot for me."

Reed Lose, a freshman guard, said he had wanted Harrison to be at ECU throughout his playing days.

"But now, we're just going to go out and play as hard as we can to get into the tournament and win it for him," he said.

Keith Sledge, one of the senior co-captains, said he didn't think it was fair for Harrison.

"For someone to be as concerned about his players as he is, it's unfair. He's someone who always want to have around you. He's just a great person," Sledge said.

Another senior co-captain, Leon Bass, echoed the others. "All we can do is to get ready for the tournament," he said.

Blue Edwards, a junior who has been one of the leaders on the team this winter, said the resignation would have an effect on team the rest of the season.

"If anything, it's just going to make us closer. Then, too, I wonder what the new coach is going to be like, what type players he'll want and so on."

A former player, Scott Hardy, who completed his playing days last season, but is continuing to work toward his degree, said he has always had the highest regard for Harrison.

"The program has had hard days, but it's on the upswing," Hardy said. "Sure, they've lost some games they shouldn't have, but everyone does. It's still getting better. His leaving is not going to make East Carolina an instant winner. He really put his heart into the team and the game."

Phil Dixon, the former president of the Pirate Club, said he had seen improvement in the program, especially this year.

"Charlie is a very personable man and I'm sorry that he's leaving. I think he's made this year's team competitive and I think the fans will agree with that. The team is in a position to win now, and they've had some sweet wins and Charlie is the kind of guy you want to see succeed."

Dixon said that there has been a lot of talk about Harrison being in his final year at East Carolina.

"I think that if he felt that he was in the final year, he has made a good decision to go out like he is doing, giving East Carolina the opportunity to start the search early. From the things I've heard from people at the university, there is interest in really building a good program."

Blount Leads Charger Win in 2 OTs

SNOW HILL — Eric Blount led Ayden-Grifton to a 76-74 double overtime basketball victory over Greene Central Thursday night.

Earlier, Ayden-Grifton's girls had taken a 50-38 win over the Lady Rams.

The Chargers pushed out to an early lead in the boys' game, 17-12, and outscored the Rams again, 19-17, in the second quarter to take a 36-29 lead into the dressing rooms.

In the third period, however, Greene Central powered back with a 20-10 margin and took the lead, 49-46, going into the final quarter. In that, Ayden-Grifton fought back and regained the lead, 60-58. Anthony Jones missed a shot for the Rams, but Woodrow Wallace got the rebound to score just before the horn to force the overtime.

In the first overtime, the two exchanged baskets all the way, with Blount scoring all eight points for Ayden-Grifton, including the final one with six seconds left, as he hit a 25-footer for a 68-68 deadlock.

Then, in the second overtime, Ayden-Grifton made six free throws including two by Leon Dixon with 16 seconds to go. The Rams, with the chance to tie it once more, failed and Ayden-Grifton hung on for the win.

Blount finished with 27 points while Ronnell Peterson added 24 and Shawn Farmer had 10. Greene Central was paced by Wallace with 22 with Melvin Croom adding 19. Jones hit 14 and O.J. Sheppard had 12.

The Chargers improve their record to 12-3 overall and 6-0 in EPC play. Greene Central slips to 6-10, 2-4.

Ayden-Grifton's girls moved out to an early lead building up a 16-10 edge in the first period. The action slowed somewhat in the second, but Ayden-Grifton still managed a 10-8 edge for a 26-18 halftime lead.

In the third, the Lady Chargers held Greene Central to only two points while adding nine of their own for a 35-20 margin. Greene Central managed an 18-15 comeback in the final period, but fell well short.

Karen Edmonds led Ayden-Grifton with 20 points while Michele Whitfield had 13. Chanel Hooker led Greene Central with 13 while Joy Albritton had 12.

The win runs the Ayden-Grifton record to 12-3 overall and to 5-1 in EPC play. Greene Central falls to 3-13 overall, 1-5 in the conference.

Iowa Bounces Back With Win

By The Associated Press
The doctor didn't have to worry. The patient came through the test just fine.

Iowa Coach Dr. Tom Davis had to watch his Hawkeyes play for the first time this year with a number besides "0" in the loss column. They handled it without a problem.

The second-ranked Hawkeyes beat Michigan State 89-75 Thursday night in their first outing since having their undefeated season ended by Ohio State last Saturday.

"I was worried because I didn't know how our kids would respond after the loss," Davis said. "After winning so many in a row, we hadn't experienced defeat in a while. I was very happy with the way the kids bounced back."

Kevin Gamble scored 19 points and Jeff Moe added 15 as the Hawkeyes, 19-1, moved into a tie with Indiana and Purdue atop the Big Ten standings with 7-1 records.

In other games involving ranked teams Thursday night, No. 3 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Cal-Irvine 114-103; No. 4 Purdue defeated Ohio State 75-73; No. 7 Temple downed Duquesne 82-64; No. 10 Oklahoma beat Iowa State 82-76; and Georgia Tech defeated Duke 75-66.

With their victories, Nevada-Las Vegas and Temple became the first Division I teams to win 20 games this season.

Michigan State never got closer than seven points in the second half as the Hawkeyes made seven of 13 shots from 3-point range.

"We weren't prepared for their outside shooting," Spartans Coach Jud Heathcote said. "They've been a suspect outside shooting team and suddenly they come in here and start burying everything — 3-pointers and 20-footers."

Gamble and Moe each had three 3-pointers. Moe had two and Gamble one in a 16-2 burst that turned a one-point deficit into a 26-13 lead with 9:03 left in the first half.

"I haven't been shooting too well these last couple of games," Moe said. "Tonight I started hitting."

"I was happy with my shooting and the way we played as a team," Gamble said. "Michigan State forced us to do some things we didn't want to do early. Then we got things rolling."

Michigan State, which was led by Todd Wolfe's 18 points, fell to 7-11 and 2-6.

No. 3 UNLV 114, Cal-Irvine 103
Armon Gilliam scored 36 points on 14 of 19 shooting from the field and grabbed 14 rebounds as the Runnin' Rebels remained undefeated in the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

Nevada-Las Vegas, 20-1 and 9-0, led by as many as 17 points in the second half, but the Anteaters, 11-9 and 6-5, pulled within 87-82 with 6:43 to play on a 3-pointer by Scott Brooks, who finished with 27 points, all on three-point jumpers. Brooks, who scored 18 of his points in the second half, took 14 3-point shots.

Freddie Banks added 27 points for UNLV, which made eight consecutive free throws in the final 72 seconds to preserve the victory.

No. 4 Purdue 75, Ohio State 73
Troy Lewis scored 26 points, including a 3-pointer with 3:11 to play that gave visiting Purdue the lead for good. The Boilermakers, 16-2 and 7-1 in the Big Ten, trailed 63-61 when Lewis nailed his long jumper. Ohio State, 13-7 and 4-4, climbed within 71-70 with 17 seconds to play on a 3-pointer by Dennis Hopson, who finished with 35 points. But four Purdue free throws were able to offset a 3-pointer on the buzzer by Ohio State's Tony White.

"Hopson did about everything you could think of tonight," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "We had three guys on him at different times and tried different defenses. ... We did a good job on Hopson the first half, and that let us get a good start."

Ohio State Coach Gary Williams, whose team upset then-No. 1 Iowa in its last outing was pleased with the Buckeyes' effort but not the outcome.

"We were in a position to win the game, but we didn't play well in the last five minutes," Williams said. "There are no moral victories — you either win or you lose."

Todd Mitchell added 21 points for Purdue, which is in a three-way tie with Iowa and Indiana for first place in the Big Ten.

No. 7 Temple 82, Duquesne 64
Temple used the outside shooting of Mike Vreeswyk and Nate Blackwell and the defense of Howard Evans to remain unbeaten in the Atlantic 10.

Vreeswyk and Blackwell each made three 3-pointers to finish with 22 and 19 points, respectively. Evans, who finished with 18 points and four steals, was credited with stopping Duquesne's Emmett Sellers, who entered the game with the conference's best scoring average, 20.5. Sellers finished with 10.

"They did a very good job on Emmett Sellers," Duquesne Coach Jim Satalin said. "They play a very active zone and they cause a lot of turnovers."

Temple, 20-2 and 9-0, won its 30th consecutive game at McGonigle Hall, while Duquesne, which was led by Brian Shanahan and Tony Petrarca with 14 each, fell to 8-11 and 4-6.

No. 10 Oklahoma 82, Iowa State 76
Tim McCalister scored 28 points as Oklahoma broke from a 49-49 tie with 14:23 to play to move into a first-place tie in the Big Eight with Kansas at 5-1.

The Sooners, 16-3, took a 72-63 lead with 5:27 to play on a layup by Ricky Grace and the visiting Cyclones, 10-9 and 2-4, were never able to get closer than four points the rest of the way.

"There are games you're not into, but you win them because you're a good team," Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs said. "It's been a long time since we've hit on all five cylinders offensively."

Jeff Grayer, who missed all eight of his shots from the field in the first half scored 24 of his 29 points in the second half for Iowa State, while Tom Schafer scored 22.

Other Games
Phil Zevenbergen scored 23 points and Christian Welp added 20 as Washington beat UCLA 95-87 for its second victory in 36 games against the Bruins in Los Angeles. The Huskies scored 57 points in the second half to overcome a seven-point deficit seven minutes into the second half of the Pac-10 game.

Mississippi ended an 11-game losing streak to Kentucky with a 76-65 victory over the Wildcats. Joe Ayers scored 19 points to lead the Rebels, who now have a 6-69 all-time record against their Southeastern Conference foe.

George Washington won its first road game of the season and the second in 20 games over two seasons as the Colonials beat Rhode Island 75-71 in an Atlantic 10 game. Gerald Jackson led George Washington with 18 points.

Arthur Walton scored 29 points and Omar Sierra added 25 to lead Houston Baptist to an 85-69 Trans America Athletic Conference victory over Arkansas-Little Rock, snapping the Trojans' 17-game conference winning streak.

Long Says LA Better Improve

HONOLULU (AP) — Howie Long figures the Los Angeles Raiders, who have slipped from Super Bowl champions in 1984 to being a .500 team this past season, better get their act together.

"I know Al Davis and I know he's not going to put up with this," the Los Angeles defensive end said of the Raiders' managing general partner.

"We've just changed defensive coordinators, and everyone's job could be in trouble if it keeps up, everyone's, including mine."

"We should be hungry next season. An 8-8 record better make us hungry. Hungry teams win championships."

After they lost their final four games, the Raiders fired linebacker coach Bob Zeman and brought back former assistant Charlie Sumner to fill the post.

Sumner had left to coach the United States Football League Oakland Invaders.

The Raiders' most visible problem has been weakness at quarterback, with Marc Wilson struggling and the venerable Jim Plunkett apparently having used up his last comeback.

Rusty Hilger, a seldom-used second-year pro, may get his chance next season.

The Raiders also have an aging offensive line, which has cut down on the effectiveness of running back Marcus Allen.

Long, in Hawaii for Sunday's Pro Bowl, would not talk about the Raiders' quarterback woes, saying, "I'm on the defensive side of the line."

He did say, however, "I think we'll probably go after an offensive lineman in the draft."

"And we've got two wide receivers, Mervyn Fernandez and Chris Woods, coming down from Canada (the Canadian Football League) who should help us."

Although the Raiders' defense had what Long termed a subpar year, he pointed out that they allowed the least yards in the AFC, and led the league in quarterback sacks with 63.

Long said the Raiders have to improve greatly just to stay in the AFC West race, since the division's teams are good and getting better.

"Dan Reeves (Denver coach) has done a heck of a job with the Broncos. Chuck Knox (Seattle coach) always turns out good teams," Long said.

"And San Diego's going to come on. The Chargers are going to be a much improved team."

"We're going to have play well every week if we're going to win the division."

"The whole league's gotten more competitive," Long continued. "Look at Kansas City; they make the playoffs then they fire their coach."

Although the Raiders rarely have dipped as low as .500 in their very successful history, Long recalled that his rookie year, 1981, was even worse than 1986. The Raiders were 7-9 that season and missed the playoffs for the last time prior to this season.

"Everybody was kicking us around then," he said. "I sure don't want us to go through anything like that again."

Dean Smith Cites Reid's Improvement

By DAVID DROSCHEK
Associated Press Writer

His slam dunks have been thunderous and his rebounding impressive, but the J.R. Reid who has been getting rave reviews lately isn't the same one North Carolina coach Dean Smith saw last summer.

Smith, who has watched Reid grow into one of the league's top scorers, said he had questions about whether his star recruit could make it in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"J.R. has improved rapidly ... his shot selection has gotten better," Smith said Thursday. "There were expectations for Reid, but when I saw him in the (U.S. Olympic) Festival last summer, I had my doubts."

Reid, a 6-foot-9, 244-pound baby-faced freshman with a flat-top hair cut, is averaging 13.1 points and 7.7 rebounds a game.

Former Maryland basketball coach Lefty Driesell, now an analyst for Jefferson Pilot Teleproductions, said several weeks ago that Reid was "a man, not a boy" and added he was the best big player to suit up in the ACC as a freshman — including Virginia's 7-4 Ralph Sampson.

"I have questioned Lefty on that," Smith said. "Expectations for Ralph were so high because he was supposed to be the next (Kareem Abdul) Jabbar or (Bill) Walton."

"I certainly wouldn't say J.R. is the best ... Sam Perkins had a great freshman year for us."

Airlines' New Price Slashes Could Help Consumer, But Hurt Carriers

By BILL MENEZES
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The winner in the latest round of airline price slashing will be the consumer, but analysts say the loser may be the small carrier unable to stay on the front lines of the fare war.

Continental and Eastern unveiled their "MaxSaver" campaign Thursday, touting a new type of restricted fare discounted up to 40 percent from "supersaver" fares.

United Airlines responded quickly, saying it would match the cuts where it had the same number of scheduled flights. American Airlines vowed to remain competitive, and Florida Express Airlines said it would match the reduced fares on all 18 of its routes between Florida, the mid-Atlantic states and the Midwest.

Deep fare-cutting in the deregulated airline industry in-rears, coupled with the birth of cut-rate carriers, have caused financial problems for several major airlines and the demise or absorption of many smaller ones.

Analysts said a fare war was the last thing needed by some airlines, badly battered by price-cutting in early 1986. On Wall Street, airline stocks dropped on fears a fare war would cut into profits.

Texas Air fell $1.12 1/2 a share, closing Thursday at $44.75; American dropped $1.50, closing at $58; United fell $1.87 1/2, to $53.37 1/2; and Delta fell $2.12 1/2, to $56.62 1/2.

"I think this competition is heating up again, and the ones that will get caught in the pressure will be the smaller lines," said William Brunet, a vice president of research at Advest Inc. in Hartford, Conn.

Continental and Eastern, both Texas Air Corp. subsidiaries, said the MaxSaver fares would apply through May 20 and could become a regular part of the fare structure after the airlines study consumer reaction.

The fares apply to a limited number of seats on all Eastern and Continental routes within the continental United States. Tickets may be purchased up to two days before a flight, but there is no refund if a customer cancels or changes travel plans.

Supersaver fares, which are about 70 percent below regular coach, have a 30-day advance purchase requirement and a 50 percent cancellation penalty.

Eastern has lost $350 million since 1983 and was taken over last year by Texas Air, helping to make the latter the nation's largest airline. Continental, bought by Texas Air in 1982, emerged from a two-year Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization in June.

Texas Air also bought cut-rate pioneer People Express, which will be fully consolidated into Continental on Sunday.

At a news conference, Continental's president and chief executive Tom Plaskett and Eastern vice president John Nelson contended the new fare would raise revenue by filling seats that otherwise would go empty.

But one analyst said Texas Air already had a large share of the domestic market and would have been better off trying to narrow the spread between discount and regular coach fares rather than widening it.

"I see a repeat of the first half of 1986, where air fare wars just destroyed the profitability of the (airline) group," said Louis Markesano, an analyst for Janney Montgomery Scott Inc. in Pittsburgh.

MaxSaver one-way fares, based on a round-trip purchase, range from $29 to $99 Monday through Thursday and $39 to $119 on Friday and Sunday, the busiest travel days.

Savings vary depending on the route. The $89 off-peak and $99 peak New York-Los Angeles fare, for example, compares with $109 for the lowest supersaver fare and $510 for the regular coach fare offered by some airlines.

MaxSaver fares will be available for about 40 percent of the seats on Continental's mainland routes, but less than that probably will be available during peak travel times on the busiest routes because those flights already are heavily booked or sold out, Plaskett said.

Eastern will make only 10 percent to 20 percent of its seats available for MaxSavers because a large proportion of its flights are to and from the heavily booked Florida market.

The fare announcement came a day after New York City blocked Continental from giving away $100 million worth of round-trip tickets in a promotion at Madison Square Garden.

Senate Axes Congressional Pay Raise, But House Has Final Say

By SANDY JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate has tossed a political hot potato to the House, leaving it to decide the fate of a $12,100 congressional pay raise scheduled to take effect next week.

The Senate, voting 88-6, rejected the pay increases Monday and then attached an amendment killing the raises to emergency legislation providing $50 million in aid for the homeless. It then sent the measure to the House.

Next Wednesday, the action raising salaries of senators and representatives to $89,500 a year automatically becomes law, unless both houses reject it.

A House task force will hold hearings on the pay raises Monday and Tuesday, but the full House doesn't meet again until Tuesday.

Before Sen. Gordon J. Humphrey, R-N.H., proposed the amendment attaching the pay issue to the homeless bill, there were indications the Democratic House leadership had no intention of putting the issue to a vote on the floor, instead letting the deadline for disapproval pass without action.

"You're assuming there would be a House vote. Who says that?" said one congressional staffer, who spoke on condition he not be identified.

Another said a House vote was "unrealistic." In the Senate, there also was doubt the other chamber would take any action.

"I would offer 10-to-1 odds the House won't act," Sen. Pete Wilson, R-Calif., said.

"Clearly the leadership of the House intends to sit on its hands and let this pay raise go into effect," Humphrey added before introducing his amendment.

Also at stake are large salary increases for high-level federal officials and federal judges. All the increases were recommended by President Reagan earlier this month.

GAO Says $9 Billion Program To Create More Jobs Failed

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly four years after President Reagan and Congress agreed on a $9 billion package to create jobs during the nation's worst recession since the early 1930s, the General Accounting Office says the effort was pretty much a failure.

"Most funds made available were not spent quickly, and relatively few jobs were provided when they were most needed in the economy," the congressional watchdog agency said in a report released this week.

At the lowest point in the job market in January 1983, more than 12.5 million Americans — or 11.4 percent of the labor force — were out of work.

The most vocal advocates of the 1983 Emergency Jobs Act claimed that priming the public works pump with billions of dollars for dams, highways, airports, libraries, housing and hospitals would provide jobs for up to 500,000.

But, according to the GAO, the number of new jobs that can be attributed to the program peaked at 35,000 in June 1984 — 15 months after the act was passed and a full three years after the beginning of the 1981-82 recession.

That is less than 1 percent of the 5.8 million new jobs created by therecovering private economy during that same 15-month period, when the unemployment rate fell back down to 7.4 percent. With $3.1 billion of the money spent during that interim, the cost of those 35,000 new jobs figures out to $88,571 each.

By a year later, June 1985, when about $4.5 billion of the funds had been spent, the number of jobs attributable to the program had declined to 8,000, the GAO said. That works out to $562,500 each.

"Compared to an estimated 4 million increase in the aggregate number of persons unemployed during the recession, the number of jobs created with Emergency Jobs Act funds was modest," the congressional auditors said.

Had all $9 billion been spent within a year after the law was enacted, they said, the program would have created 131,000 new jobs "when they were most needed."

The Reagan administration, commenting through the Office of Management and Budget, said the GAO report suggests that "countercyclical job creation programs ... are inevitably too late and too small to have an effect on a recession" and should not be undertaken in the future.

Echoing remarks by some congressional critics when the act was being debated, the GAO said too much of the $9 billion — 86 percent — went to public works projects that historically are slower in getting money into the job market because of the time required to select and plan them.

For example, $40 million of the emergency jobs money was appropriated to the Department of Education for removing barriers to the handicapped in school buildings.

But none of that money had been spent by July 1985 because the Education Department had not developed the rules, criteria and formulas for distributing it — even though Congress had said in 1974 it waded those barriers to start coming down.

An exception was the Pentagon, where the four armed services managed to spend $164 million of the $180 appropriated to them under the program for building and improving family housing on military bases.

The congressional auditors also found that some of the states with the biggest unemployment problems got the least amount of money while those with less severe joblessness got more.

For example, West Virginia, which had the highest unemployment rate in the country — 20.5 percent — when the law was passed in March 1983, had received only $301 per jobless person under the program by June 1985. By contrast, North Dakota, which had employment of 7.8 percent when the law was passed, had received $1,163 per jobless person.

Randy Quaid Makes Role Look Natural In TV's 'LBJ'

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Some actors play historical figures so well, they become permanently identified with the roles — George C. Scott as Patton, Raymond Massey as Lincoln, Hal Holbrook as Mark Twain.

Randy Quaid may soon be added to that list as Lyndon Johnson. Quaid, a movie actor who last season was a cast member on "Saturday Night Live," is a Texan who has said he always wanted to play the late president. He gets his chance in the NBC movie "LBJ: The Early Years," airing Sunday.

True, Quaid, a big ol', good ol' boy from Houston, didn't have to stretch too much to play Lyndon. But it was no mean task to convincingly transform during the three-hour movie from bounding, young congressional aide to sad, wise veteran politician. (The movie ends when Johnson becomes president.) Quaid makes it look so natural that the heavy makeup to age him seems unnecessary.

As Lady Bird, Patti LuPone ("Evita" on Broadway) occasionally lapses into a hybrid accent that sounds more like Teaneck than Texas, but she has the look and mannerisms down cold.

The movie is love story as historical accounting.

Lyndon badgers "Bird" out of her shell. ("Go put on some more lipstick like I told you. You're not sellin' for what you're worth.") When she stands in for him at a campaign rally and somebody in the crowd yells, "Where's Lyndon?" she's ready with the comeback, "That's what I'd like to know every night at dinner, buster."

In turn, Bird shames Lyndon out of Benefit

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Singer Patti LaBelle will give a benefit concert here next month, with most of the proceeds going to AIDS research.

Eighty percent of the money raised by the Feb. 20 solo concert will be donated to the American Foundation for AIDS Research, a non-profit research organization, promoters said. The remainder will go to a Philadelphia food bank and a youth support agency.

his sickbed after a heart attack and back into the fray in Washington.

"LBJ: The Early Years" is openly favorable toward Johnson, but it seems only fair after all those those made-for-TV Kennedy movies depicting Lyndon as a redneck buffoon. Writer Ken Trevey, however, goes a little far in painting the Kennedys as conniving weasels.

For balance, though, the movie also more than hints at Johnson's adultery, male chauvinism and vulgarity. (When young Sen. Jack Kennedy calls on then-Majority Leader Johnson, Lyndon stops midsentence and says, "I smell gas. You been eatin' them Boston beans?")

Lady Bird is not slighted in the sympathy department, either. There is a nice, touching scene when Lyndon and Sam Rayburn get into the "Members Only" Senate elevator. The camera freezes on her as the door slams shut in her face.

When she is hurt by Lyndon's attention to another woman, what Pat Hingle as Rayburn tells her seems to form the message of the movie: "A great man can have great flaws."

British Actor, American Wife Star In 'Holiday'

LONDON (AP) — It's 6:30 p.m. Backstage at London's Old Vic Theater, Malcolm McDowell and Mary Steenburgen are nursing each other's sore throats as they wait to go on in a revival of "Holiday."

"Should I take one or two, darling?" asks McDowell, mixing sachets of lemon flavored powder to help soothe the throat. For the British actor and Ms. Steenburgen, his American wife, good health is important.

They are appearing onstage together for the first time in Philip Barry's 1928 comedy of American manners, which was made into a 1938 movie confection starring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant.

McDowell and Ms. Steenburgen met while filming "Time After Time" in 1979 and have two children. In separate interviews in adjacent dressing rooms, both said they were happy to be working on stage together.

"It intensifies the delight I take in the play to go home and keep talking about it," said Ms. Steenburgen in her Arkansas drawl. "I feel excited for everybody in the cast, but I especially feel that for Malcolm. There are moments where he gets a response he hadn't before, and you enjoy it more than going through something for yourself."

McDowell plays Johnny Case, a dapper lawyer who is to marry into the uppercrust Seton clan. But as his fiancée Julia (Cherie Lunghi) gets drunk on the elixir of money and a dreamed-of high life, Johnny finds himself drawn instead to her sister Linda (Steenburgen), a like-minded free spirit.

The play's plot mechanics require McDowell to couch his love for the woman who is his real-life wife, but he said the nightly concealment left him unfazed. "That's life, isn't it?"

The 43-year-old, silver-haired star of such films as "A Clockwork Orange" and "If" said "Holiday" was the culmination of a six-year search for a suitable stage project for the duo.

"It's so difficult to find plays we can believe in that have reasonably equal parts. We don't want one so one-sided that it's no fun for both," he said.

Even though some acting couples such as Hume Cronyn and Jessica Tandy, and Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee, often find two-character vehicles for themselves, McDowell stressed that "Holiday" is an ensemble piece.

"There are 12 of us in this play, and we're all characters together," he said.

McDowell often finds himself observing his wife during performances to see how she's doing her part.

"Holiday" marked a welcome change from his film parts as rebel outsiders and his recent off-Broadway runs in two British revivals, John Osborne's landmark "Look Back In Anger" and David Storey's "In Celebration."

Philippines Orders Arrest Of Four Officers In Wake Of Aborted Coup

By RICHARD BILL
Associated Press Writer
MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos today ordered the arrest of a general and three officers for alleged involvement in this week's aborted coup.

Ramos also said a board of officers was set up to counter future efforts at destabilizing the government of President Corazon Aquino, following the failed uprising in which mutinous soldiers attacked military and media facilities and held a broadcast station for 61 hours.

Mrs. Aquino, campaigning today in Davao City for ratification Monday of the new constitution, declared before a crowd of 50,000 people that her 11-month-old government plans to take a hard line against those who would destabilize it.

"I had forgiven them (in the past) but this is too much," Mrs. Aquino said, referring to the aborted coup. "We cannot allow this anymore.

Everyone should respect law and order."

As she spoke, the government faced a renewed challenge from Communist rebels who announced today they were formally withdrawing from suspended peace talks.

The Communist-dominated National Democratic Front said in a statement issued in Manila that the government was insincere in seeking peace. It cited the killings last week by security forces of 12 demonstrators who were marching on the presidential palace to demand land reform.

The statement said rebel forces would continue to observe a 60-day cease-fire agreement until it expires Feb. 8.

Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona declined to comment on the rebel announcement, saying he had received no official notification.

At his news conference in Manila, Ramos said he had ordered the arrest of Brig. Gen. Jose Zumel, Col. Rolando Abadilla, Lt. Col. Reynaldo Cabautan and a Maj. Baquiran, whose first name was not announced. He said more arrests would be announced later but gave no details.

It was not clear if the four were already in custody.

Ramos also announced that 13 officers, 359 enlisted men and 137 civilians were being held for actively participating in the coup attempt.

He said the rebellion involved only three-tenths of one percent of the 260,000 armed forces, "a minuscule minority."

"The events of the last few days once more underline the need for unity of the New Armed Forces of the Philippines," Ramos said.

At least two of the four officers cited by Ramos — Zumel and Abadilla — were involved in another abortive coup in July at the Manila Hotel, for which they were never prosecuted. Leaders in that incident were ordered simply to swear an oath of allegiance and do 30 push-ups as punishment.

Voters Will Decide Monday

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The draft constitution that President Corazon Aquino promises will firmly establish democracy in the Philippines is designed to prevent the rise of another strongman like Ferdinand E. Marcos.

Twenty-five million adult Filipinos, out of a population of 55 million, are eligible to vote "yes" or "no" Monday on the long, complex draft charter. Even government officials who have been campaigning hard for approval concede that few citizens have read the document and fewer thoroughly understand it.

Mrs. Aquino said Thursday that a foiled coup attempt this week was intended to block the plebiscite, which is considered a vote of confidence in her stewardship.

"Here was a clear attempt to disrupt the first principle of democracy, which is civilian supremacy, by those specially charged with its preservation," she said shortly after a 61-hour mutiny ended with the rebel soldiers' surrender.

The draft charter diminishes the authority of the traditionally dominant executive branch, assigning increased power to the legislative and judicial branches in a system of U.S.-style checks and balances. Such restraints on executive power were absent from the constitution of 1973 voided by Mrs. Aquino after she took office in February 1986.

She came to power after a civilian-military uprising forced Marcos, who had ruled for 20 years, to flee the country. He now lives in exile in Hawaii.

The draft constitution limits the president to one six-year term and bans spouses and close relatives of the president from appointments to major government posts. Marcos appointed his wife Imelda and other relatives to national, regional or local positions.

The charter also voids the president's sole power to enter into treaties with foreign powers. The draft requires that two-thirds of the Senate approve all treaties.

For the first time in Philippine history, courts will be able to rule on and strike down presidential executive decrees.

South Africa Expands Censorship Powers

By LAURINDA KEYS
Associated Press Writer

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The police commissioner today reinstated a ban on publishing ads that support outlawed organizations, and President P.W. Botha scheduled new elections expected to serve as a referendum on his race policies.

Police Commissioner John Coetzee issued the regulation under an hours-old order allowing him to ban "any matter" he chooses. A judge Thursday had nullified one of Coetzee's earlier media restrictions, but the government promptly gave the commissioner wide-ranging censorship powers.

A media attorney, Paul Jenkins, said the government action in effect makes the police commissioner "the country's chief censor."

Botha, addressing the opening of the 1987 session of Parliament in Cape Town, formally called new elections May 6 for Parliament's all-white chamber. He previously had announced plans to hold elections sometime this year.

The elections will be the first for whites in six years and are expected to serve as a referendum on Botha's program of limited social reforms combined with crackdowns on black-rights activists who demand more far-reaching changes.

In his speech, Botha defended his policies and denounced "unwarranted interference in our domestic affairs" by foreign governments.

"South Africa must stand united against the spirit of revolution incited against us from abroad," he said.

In an apparent reference to recent meetings of African National Congress guerrilla leaders with British and American officials, Botha said,

"Nobody should be misled by the fine phrases with which" the group has been seeking recognition.

The president restated terms for negotiating with the ANC — abandonment of violence and cutting of the group's links with the South African Communist Party.

Mixed-race and Asians in South Africa elected their chambers of Parliament in 1984, one year after the country's 5-million-strong white minority approved establishing a three-chamber legislature.

Under apartheid, the nation's 24-million black majority has no national vote. The government maintains separate districts, health facilities and schools for whites and blacks.

Coetzee's order, issued at 1 a.m., prohibited ads that "defended, praised or endeavored to justify unlawful programs or actions."

On Thursday, Judge H. Daniels of Rand Supreme Court in Johannesburg, invalidated an order Coetzee issued Jan. 8 covering not just advertisements, but also prohibiting news reports and comment that explained, defended, supported or might enhance the public image of any banned organization.

The Jan. 8 order was issued one day after 22 newspapers published advertisements urging legalization of the ANC, the main black guerrilla group fighting apartheid.

Daniels said the police commissioner did not have the authority to issue such a nationwide ban, but left open the possibility of reissuing the ban district by district. He did not rule on other arguments raised by the plaintiffs, the nation's two largest chains of English-language newspapers.

After the ruling, Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok promptly announced the police commissioner's new powers, saying, "The government is determined that there will be no supportive statements and/or advertisements for terrorist organizations whatsoever."

The government has responded similarly to previous court decisions against emergency regulations or practices.

Under the new rules: "The (police) commissioner may, for the purpose of the safety of the public, the maintenance of public order or the termination of the state of emergency, and without prior notice to any person, issue any order not inconsistent with a provision of these regulations prohibiting any publication, television recording, film recording or sound recording containing any news, comment, or advertisement on or in connection with any matter specified in the order, to be published."

The existing regulations were promulgated by Botha on Dec. 11 under the state of emergency imposed June 12, and a court challenge is pending.

Those rules severely restrict or ban reporting on unrest, security force actions, treatment of detainees, most forms of peaceful protest and a broad range of statements the government considers subversive. They are being challenged in the Pietermaritzburg Supreme Court of Natal province.

Coetzee now appears to have the power to decide what matters are subject to the existing regulation on "publication control," which covers both print and broadcast reports.

According to the South African Press Association, the new regulations also appear to broaden the definition of subversive statements to include taking part in or supporting the "campaigns, projects, programs or actions of violence or resistance against... the authority of the state" by an unlawful organization.

"Let the ANC speak for itself," a reference to the fact that quoting ANC President Oliver Tambo and other ANC members is prohibited.

About 2,400 people, most of them black, have been killed in political violence since near daily anti-apartheid protests began in September 1984.

Contra Rebels' Organization Faces Internal Crisis Over Power Struggle

By REID G. MILLER
Associated Press Writer

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — Nicaragua's Contra rebels, always a diverse lot with conflicting interests, are facing an internal crisis just as $100 million of U.S. aid is flowing in to help them fight the leftist Sandinista government.

One of their top three leaders may quit because of a power struggle and commanders of their southern front have broken a fragile alliance with the central organization.

More unity is evident on the other side and the Sandinistas say they are preparing more aggressively for any attack.

"Thousands of thousands of thousands" of Nicaraguans will be trained in the next six months, Nicaraguan Defense Minister Humberto Ortega said Wednesday.

Nicaragua already has more than 100,000 men and women under arms in the army, reserves and militia.

New divisions within the Contras came to light as Reagan promised to push for more aid for the rebel movement. In his State of the Union address Tuesday, he said he would "fight any effort to shut off their lifeblood and consign them to death, defeat or a life without freedom."

At the heart of the new troubles is the umbrella group known as the United Nicaraguan Opposition, whose initials UNO spell "one" in Spanish. It was formed in early 1985 at U.S. urging to bring unity among rebel groups that sometimes competed.

That unity was not achieved. Almost from the day UNO was founded, leaders of its military wing and political front have argued about what direction the Contra movement should take.

Associates say Arturo Cruz, one of UNO's top three directors, is on the verge of resigning, which could be devastating to Contra hopes of more aid and Reagan's hopes of supplying it.

In Miami on Tuesday, Cruz acknowledged he had removed his papers and belongings from UNO's office there and hinted at resignation. "At the appropriate moment I will make a full declaration," he said.

It is not the first time Cruz has considered quitting UNO. He and another director, Alfonso Robelo, threatened to walk out last May in a dispute over control of the main rebel fighting unit, the Nicaraguan Democratic Force, known by its Spanish initials FDN.

Cruz and Robelo, both former leaders in the Sandinista government, are considered moderates and deal primarily with political affairs. The third director is Adolfo Calero, a conservative representing the FDN, which fights from bases in southern Honduras with an estimated strength of about 12,000 men.

The two politicians agreed to remain only after Calero promised them a bigger say in military operations, which they said was necessary to reduce human rights abuses, improve the rebels' image in the United States and give them greater credibility within Nicaragua.

Reports indicate Cruz has become frustrated by what he considers resistance to implementing Calero's promised reforms by the FDN and conservative exile groups that support it.

Attempts to reach Calero in Central America for an interview this week have been unsuccessful.

Robelo said in an interview here Thursday that he had heard about Cruz's statements. "For my part, I'm not considering any resignation and, to the contrary, I prefer to continue looking for the means by which things might be arranged and corrected."

He said UNO "urgently needs deep changes that might revitalize the direction which is imparted on political and military action in the struggle against the regime that has been imposed in Nicaragua."

Seven Contra field commanders circulated a statement in San Jose saying they were ending an alliance with UNO "to maintain our unity as the southern front in an independent form." They said they had received none of the $100 million in aid Congress voted last fall.

The commanders belong to the Nicaraguan Revolutionary Armed Forces, which is believed to include no more than 1,500 men fighting in southern Nicaragua, along the border with Costa Rica.

Six of the seven formerly followed Eden Pastora, a Sandinista hero who later turned against the Nicaraguan leadership. The six were said to have been wooed away from Pastora by promises of U.S. aid.

Pastora received no official American aid for more than two years. After losing his key commanders, he gave up the fight and went into exile in Costa Rica.

Bomb Hits Military Bus, Killing Two

ZARAGOZA, Spain (AP) — A van packed with explosives was detonated today as a military bus passed by, killing two occupants and wound-ding at least 36 people, the provincial government said.

The dead were identified as Angel Ramos Saavedra, the civilian driver of the bus, and army Maj. Manuel Rivera, a passenger. The injured included 24 army officers, four of them in critical condition, and 12 pedestrians.

One of the injured was a blind woman selling lottery tickets.

There was no immediate claim of responsibility for the attack, but provincial Gov. Angel Luis Serrano told a news conference it bore the marks of the ETA. The group has waged an insurgency since 1968 to win independence for Spain's northern Basque region.

Zaragoza, about 160 miles northeast of Madrid, is the capital of the autonomous region of Aragon and is not part of Basque territory.

The explosion occurred at 8:10 a.m. in Panetes Square less than a block from Zaragoza's famous cathedral and Pilar Basilica in the heart of the city. It destroyed 13 cars and caused extensive damage to a nearby church, government buildings and apartments.

Police said a small van loaded with explosives and parked on a curve leading to the square was detonated, apparently by remote control, as the bus passed.

The bus was carrying instructors to Spain's Army Academy on the outskirts of Zaragoza.

An unidentified witness told Spanish National Radio the blast was tremendous and "left me speechless."

Today was a religious holiday in Zaragoza for the celebration of the day of its patron saint, San Valero, so traffic was lighter than usual, officials said.

'Arthritis Today' Publication

The Arthritis Foundation is now publishing six times a year a magazine called "Arthritis Today."

The first issue was distributed to about 600,000 homes this month. It replaces the Arthritis Foundation newsletter, giving information about research, products, medications and treatments for arthritis, plus practical tips for persons with arthritis.

According to Betsy Brewster Case, national chairman of the Arthritis Foundation, the purpose of the magazine is to show people they don't need to be depressed or give up on life because they have arthritis, that they can maintain control over their lives even when they have one of the about 100 related diseases that are collectively called arthritis.

For information about the magazine, write the Arthritis Foundation, N.C. Division, 3115 Guess Road, Durham, N.C. 27705.

Polking Along
 Former Arizona Governor Bruce Babbitt recently became the first Democrat to organize a presidential campaign committee for the 1988 election. Babbitt and other "dark horse" candidates can look to President James Polk for inspiration. In 1844, Polk was not even mentioned during the first seven ballots of the Democratic National Convention. After a stalemate on the eighth ballot, he was suggested as a compromise candidate. He won the nomination on the ninth ballot.

East-West vulnerable. South you can derive from the cards your opponents play.

The auction was routine. North checked for four-card majors in case his side had a 4-4 spade fit, then settled in the no trump game when his partner showed the "wrong" major.

West's lead of a heart was a devastating blow. To come to nine tricks, declarer would have to develop three tricks in spades, and the opening lead attacked his only entries. There would be no problem if spades split evenly and East had the jack, but if the suit divided 4-2, the defenders might be able to knock out the second heart entry before the spades were cashable.

At trick two declarer led a low spade from dummy, and East made the fine play of rising with the ace. (Had he meekly produced the jack, declarer would have won with the king, used the 10 to force out the ace, and then taken a marked fi-ness for the nine.) Declarer was at the crossroads.

Declarer realized that East would play the ace in second seat from only one of two holdings: the singleton ace, or A-J doubleton. With any other holding it would have been automatic to play low.

If East held the bare ace, the contract was destined to fail. But if East held A-J, declarer had to create a finesse position. To accomplish that, he unblocked his 10 under the ace. Thereafter, matters were routine. Declarer won the heart return on the table, picked up the jack of spades by leading to his king, and then confidently finessed the eight of spades. When that held, nine tricks were in the bank.
