Soviets Release 42 Dissidents, Activists

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet authorities have freed 42 dissidents and human rights activists from labor camps, prisons and internal exile in the largest known release in more than 30 years, dissident sources said Saturday.

It did not appear to be a general amnesty, however.

Dissident sources said word was still coming in on dissidents who were being allowed to return home, including emigration activists, human rights monitors, Jewish and Christian religious activists and Ukrainian nationalists.

A friend of Andrei Sakharov, who was reached at the home of the Nobel Peace laureate and spoke on his behalf, said the dissidents were released over a period of less than a week.

They were allowed to go home under an order of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet, or national parliament, the source said. Some live in Moscow, but the others were scattered around Russia, the Ukraine and the Baltic republics.

There is no mass release of political prisoners of this scale on record since 1953, when Nikita Khrushchev's de-Stalinization drive began a period in which thousands of political prisoners were freed.

Among those newly released were well-known names, including mathematician Yuri Shikhanovich, who edited the human rights journal Chronicle of Current Events until he was sentenced in September 1984 to five years' hard labor.

Some prominent dissidents were not included, including some who reportedly were promised their freedom last week.

Sakharov's friend, who insisted on anonymity, said the physicist wanted to "draw attention to the fact that many people are still in prison. He would rather talk about these cases than those who are being freed."

Yelena Bonner, Sakharov's wife, called the releases "a wonderful turnaround."

She told reporters by telephone Saturday night, "We are very grateful to (Soviet leader Mikhail) Gorbachev for this. But we are still very concerned about many of the people whose cases we have followed but about whom we have no news."

Bonner implied the list could grow, saying it was being compiled on the basis of telephone calls and telegrams received from the freed prisoners or their friends.

"The phone does not stop ringing," she said.

Naum Meiman, a former member of Moscow's Helsinki Human Rights Committee, said he was pleased by the news.

"Of course this is a good step by the government and we can only be happy about it for those who have been freed," said Meiman, who has been refused permission to leave the country even though his cancer-stricken wife was allowed to go to the United States last month for treatment.

"I think they've freed the most simple cases," Meiman said. "But we need to explain that this is not a general amnesty."

It is too soon to say if those freed will be allowed to resume political activities.

Sakharov declined comment on the releases.

ECU Board Supports Effort For Research Designation

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

East Carolina University's board of trustees — without comment — have given approval to a long-range plan recommending that the university be reclassified as a research institution and that the number of doctoral programs at the medical school be increased.

The board action Friday endorsed a recommendation made by the school's long-range planning commission in January.

The proposals now go to C.D. Spangler, president of the University of North Carolina system, then must be approved by the UNC system board of governors.

"It's a matter of reclassifying us at that level ... so we can be about discharging our mission," Ralph Kinsey, ECU board chairman said. "It's a matter of being reclassified so we can offer doctoral degrees in academic areas."

Only three of the UNC system's 16 campuses are now classified as research institutions — the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, N.C. State University in Raleigh and the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

East Carolina is now classified as a comprehensive university, offering doctorates only in connection with medical school programs.

Five doctorates — biochemistry, microbiology, anatomy, pharmacology and physiology — are now offered in addition to medical degrees.

The reclassification would put East Carolina a notch below UNC-Chapel Hill and N.C. State and on an equal level with UNC-Greensboro.

Trustee Max Joyner, reporting for the board's medical affairs committee, said officials are considering options in the area of liability insurance for the medical school faculty.

He said liability premiums last year amounted to about $500,000, while this year the cost of coverage is $900,000. He said the cost of insurance is expected to reach $1.2 million next year.

In another medical school matter, the board approved the lease of 3,100 square feet of space in the BB&T building off the Stantonsburg Road for school of medicine offices.

Chancellor John Howell, who will retire at the end of this month, told trustees, "This is going to be my last meeting of the board. I've enjoyed working with you. I think we've made a lot of progress."

Howell reminded board members that "we're in a period of transition," and that the transition from one chancellor to another is "moving along nicely."

"I hope you support him (Dr. Richard Eakin) as well as you have supported me," Howell said.

As a farewell gesture the board voted to name Howell chancellor emeritus upon his retirement.

Howell began his career at ECU in 1957 as an associate professor. He has, over the years, been a professor, department chairman, dean of the college of arts and sciences, dean of the graduate sdhool, vice chancellor for academic affairs and, for the past five years, chancellor of the school.

The UNC board of governors last month named Eakin, vice president for planning and budgeting at Bowling Greene State University in Bowling Green, Ohio, to replace Howell.

Eakin will begin his duties as ECU chancellor on March 1.

Mexican Inmates Riot; 64 Escape

CULIACAN, Mexico (AP) — Inmates at the Sinaloa state penitentiary seized rifles from the armory and fought a gun battle with guards, and 64 escaped during the uprising, authorities said Saturday.

They said the escapees took the warden with them as a hostage, but he was freed later.

Three inmates were reported killed in the shootout during the Friday night riot.

Mario Rocha Reyes, a spokesman for the Sinaloa district attorney's office, told reporters seven escapees were recaptured early Saturday by highway patrolmen.

He said the rioting continued early Saturday and about 500 state troopers surrounded the penitentiary where the inmates had started several small fires. By midday, the troopers entered the prison and peace was restored, Rocha Reyes said.

"There was no further violence," he said.

The federal Attorney General's Office in Mexico City said in a statement that more than 3,000 federal and state police plus military personnel were searching the mountains and coast of Sinaloa state for the 57 inmates still at large.

Twelve of those at large were drug traffickers or bank robbers and were considered extremely dangerous because they carried weapons, most of them stolen from the prison armory, it said.

Pitt Legislators Will Stress Education, Rural Programs

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of Pitt County's legislative delegation say education and rural economic improvements are their primary concerns as they head to Raleigh for the start of the 1987 session of the N.C. General Assembly on Monday.

"Pitt County-Greenville is the 'hub' of eastern North Carolina, which is an intersection for education, agriculture and industry," Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, said. "The 1987 session will be an important one for the future growth of our district as well as for the entire state."

Improving education on a statewide level and strengthening the economic base of eastern North Carolina will be priorities in the upcoming session, according to the lawmakers.

"My two priorities will again be education and agriculture," Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said. "Education includes the public schools, community colleges and the (East Carolina) University.

"I believe that nothing is more important to the future of our district and North Carolina than continuing to strengthen public education, our community colleges in Pitt, Martin and Beaufort and ECU."

Sen. Bob Martin, D-Pitt, and Rep. Walter B. Jones Jr., D-Pitt, said they were concerned with employment in rural farm communities.

"I'm concerned with jobs and the farming economy because I think that (situation) is much more serious in the east than in other parts of the state," Martin said.

"I expect more emphasis to be placed on small businesses and other growth opportunities that are not dependent upon the presence of a major industry in a community," Jones said.

"Farm families will need help with finding sources of off-farm income so

Cosmonauts Link Up With Mir Space Lab

MOSCOW (AP) — Two Soviet cosmonauts linked up successfully early Sunday with the orbiting Mir space laboratory, Tass reported.

The official news agency said the docking of the Soyuz TM-2 capsule carrying Yuri Romanenko and Alexander Laveikin took place at 2:28 a.m. Moscow time (6:28 p.m. Saturday EST).

Tass later reported: "According to telemetry information, the onboard systems of the Mir manned complex, including the base unit and the Soyuz TM-2 and Progress-27 spaceships, are functioning normally.

"Romanenko and Laveikin are in good health," the English-language report said.

It said the two cosmonauts "are to carry out an extensive program of astrophysical, geophysical, technological, medical and biological studies and experiments aboard the complex."

Reports in the Soviet media said Romanenko and Laveikin would remain aboard the space station for several months.

Alexander Urges Blacks To 'Think' For Survival

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

The state president of the NAACP encouraged an audience of more than 100 people "to think" Saturday night during an Emancipation Proclamation celebration at the Roxy Theater.

"If we don't think, we'll move from the old slavery to the new," said Kelly Alexander Jr. when he spoke to those who had gathered for the Pitt County Branch of the NAACP Fellowship Banquet.

Alexander focused on four meanings of freedom in his speech — freedom from political oppression, freedom from social stagnationm freedom from mental bondage, and freedom from re-enslavement.

"Each of us has a right to become a partner in the American political process," he said. "We have a right to vote," but many blacks do not exercise that right.

"One of the few things we've got is our vote," Alexander said. But, "you've got to stop selling yourselves out for a party. It's the man, the objective — not the party.

"I want to know not his promises but his track record. What are they promising to give us," he said.

"When I came in here, I looked for a politician," Alexander said. "I found one, and he works for the politician. Where are the politicians? If we were having an election next week, they would be standing at the door.

"You've got to pay attention to the man — not the party, the man," he said.

Blacks also have to be free from social stagnation, Alexander said. "We want to keep up with the Joneses. You know the Joneses. They're the ones that got everything you want," he said. "It's called conspicuous consumption."

Blacks should be concerned with building an economic base in the black community, Alexander said.

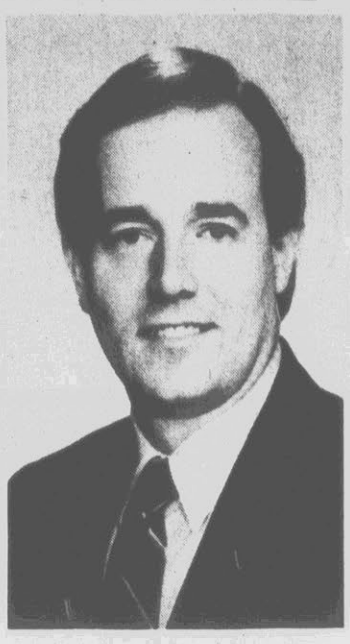
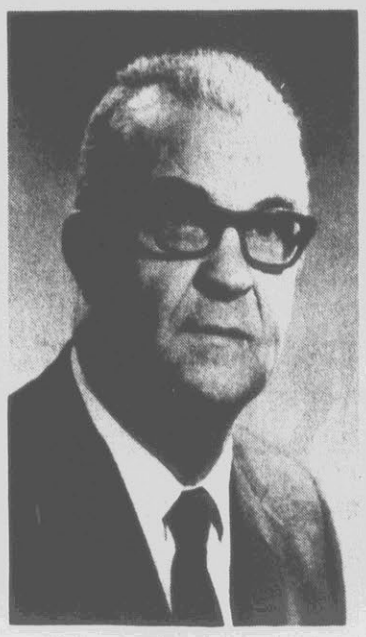
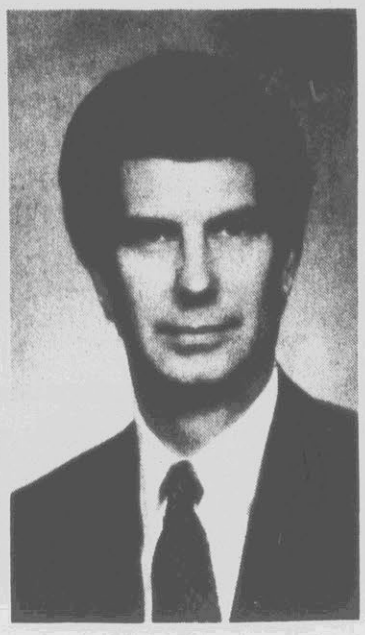
Rep. ED WARREN



Sen. TOM TAFT



Sen. BOB MARTIN



Rep. WALTER B. JONES JR.

Legislators Stress Education, Rural Aid

that their standard of living can be protected."

Jones said the adoption of a rural economic development program would be a great asset to Pitt County.

"Both the governor and the lieutenent governor have issued reports on the economic development of the state," he said. "One recommendation on which they have reached agreement is the establishment of a center for rural economic development with offices in the east and in the west.

"Such a center can help us to redirect some of our resources so that they can bring greater benefits to our farmers and to our people in our small towns."

In the meantime, lawmakers should continue to make every effort to assist local farmers, according to Taft.

"Agriculture continues to be the most important economic factor in our district," Taft said. "We are not able to do as much at the state level as the federal level for agriculture, but there are steps that we must take that include strengthening the extension programs at North Carolina State University, ensuring the use valuation for tax purposes statewide."

The Pitt lawmakers said they expected the General Assembly to be involved in a variety of issues in 1987.

"I anticipate a challenging year for the upcoming legislative session," Warren said. "Some major issues will be the Basic Education Plan, insurance, phosphate bill, salary schedule for public school employees, appointment or election of the state superintendent of public instruction, additional funding for the needs of senior citizens, state employees and teachers, prisons, mental health, transportation, fire and rescue.

"Education and health care and insurance continue to lead the list of issues requiring the attention of the Legislature," Jones said. "Day care for the children of working parents must be made more readily available, especially in eastern North Carolina.

"Children in eastern North Carolina deserve the same opportunities available to those in the other areas of our state, and we will most likely be looking at ways to improve and increase services for children as well as services for the elderly."

"It's going to be a very busy session," said Martin. "We'll see some major issues and they are going to be made bigger issues because we're not going to have the money we've been having — mainly funding the Basic Education Plan and providing for the expansion of the state budget and meeting all the other needs. It will be a lot of hard work to put it together."

Eastern North Carolinians will also be affected by legislation involving environmental issues, according to Taft and Jones.

"Other areas I will be interested in are environmental issues such as hazardous waste, leaking underground storage tanks, water quality, and the Pamico Sound estuary," Taft said.

"In eastern North Carolina, water quality and other environmental issues will require more attention than previously," Jones said.

Taft said revising the prison system and protecting motorists and small business owners from unfair insurance rates are on his agenda for the session.

"I'm particularly concerned about overcrowding in the prisons," he said. "We need alternatives to incarceration, but, likewise, we need adequate cells for those that truly need to be imprisoned.

"For the small businessmen, we must be particularly concerned about insurance rates and for the motorists we must ensure that the rate-setting system is fair."

The amount of money set aside during the budget process will dictate the effectiveness of a number of state and local projects, according to Taft.

"One of the real challenges is to ensure that we have enough funds to continue the basic education plan, increase salaries for public school employees, state employees in general and the community college and university faculty."

Meanwhile, legislators will have to examine the recent decrease in state growth, according to Warren, who said a number of local projects will require funding.

"We will need to address the fact that our state growth has slowed. Revenues are coming in at a 5.5 percent to 6 percent rate," he said.

"For our area, capital improvements are needed for Pitt Community College, and East Carolina University for a new sports medicine building, additional space for the library, and the completion of the medical school building. The budget enacted will determine progress in education, prisons, economic growth and many other areas."

Soviets Free 42 Dissidents, Activists

Among those still in prison, the friend said, are Sergei Khodorovich and Anatoly Koryagin. Last week, Sakharov said their wives were promised the two men would be allowed out of labor camp if they agreed to leave the country.

Two other prominent activists still in prison were Josef Begun, a Jewish activist sentenced in 1983 to seven years in labor camp, and Alexander Ogorodnikov, sentenced to six years in prison and five in exile in 1980 for organizing a Christian rights group.

Bonner said those released were being freed by a decree of the Presidium that took effect last Monday.

Sources said Shikhanovich told Sakharov he left the labor camp with a pass signed by the Presidium. They said Shikhanovich reported seeing many others leaving the area near the Ural mountain city of Perm, a center for labor camps, when he headed home to Moscow.

Bonner said Shikhanovich, 53, called Friday. He did not mention his health. Sakharov has said Shikhanovich was nearly blind and had three fingers severed by a machine on which he was working in the camp.

One freed prisoner, Sergei Grigoryants, told The Associated Press Saturday the warden of Chistopol Prison showed him a list of 51 people earmarked for release. But he did not know how many were actually freed.

"It's not really clear to me why I or anyone else on it (the list) is being freed," said Grigoryants, who wrote for the underground Bulletin V, a source book on human rights.

NAACP Urged To Exercise Vote

"In every other community, the dollar goes in and rolls over several times," creating jobs.

"In the black community, the dollar goes in and goes out just as fast," he said. "Don't be consumers all your life," but create businesses in the black community.

Freedom from mental bondage includes knowing the basics of reading, writing and arithmetic, Alexander said. "How many of you have read a book lately?"

It is important to "transmit to the younger generation the ability to read, the ability to write and the ability to count," he said. "Tell that generation, you've got to do some homework."

But "before you get the calculator and the computer, learn how to add, subtract, multiply and divide."

Knowing your heritage will bring freedom from re-enslavement, Alexander said. "If you want to destroy a people you take their history away from them so they don't know who they are."

Many courses in the schools that taught black history have been taken out of the curriculum, Alexander said, but blacks still need to know their heritage.

"Something's wrong in your neighborhood if the young people don't know their heritage — not racism — heritage," he said.

"The Civil Rights Movement is not over," Alexander said as he cited recent marches in Georgia. "They want to ship you back to Africa. Why don't they go back to Europe," he said. "The racists are there."

Four people also received certificates of appreciation during the banquet. Marion Wilkes was recognized for her service as the 1986-87 Mother of the Year, and Ernest Brown was cited for aiding blacks through his services with the Pitt County Concerned Citizens for Justice.

The Rev. Alonzo Mills was recognized as the Minister of the Year, and D.D. Garrett was cited for his services as the president of the local branch of the NAACP.

The Emancipation Proclamation celebration was scheduled to continue today with a mass meeting at Cornerstone Missionary Baptist Church at 7 p.m. The speaker was to be Dr. Morris L. Shearin Sr., vice president of the state NAACP.

Clarification

Lisa LeFaye Worthington was crowned the 1987 homecoming queen of Greenville Christian Academy at halftime of the basketball game between the Greenville Christian Knights and the Wilmington Christian School Friday night.

She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L.F. Worthington of Greenville.

Members of the homecoming court were Paula Dail and Jackie Rollins, senior attendants; Kim Faulkner, junior attendant; Joanie Cherry, sophomore attendant and Myra Locklear, freshman attendant.

Last year's queen, Paige Brown, gave her farewell comments and Greenville Christian Academy Principal Gene S. Lewis presented the new queen.

A news item announcing the homecoming queen was included in Friday's edition. It should have been published Sunday.

Salvadorans Hold March

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — An estimated 70,000 people marched peacefully through San Salvador Saturday to show their support of measures ordered by President Jose Napoleon Duarte to revive the war-battered economy.

The march and then a rally in a park was organized by Duarte's Christian Democratic Party. Party leaders called for the demonstration in response to a one-day strike on Jan. 22 by businessmen who are demanding the repeal of some of the economic measures that include sharp increases in income taxes and other levies.

Some businessmen have said the tax hikes, ordered in December, placed an unfair burden on them.

Among the other measures were a devaluation of the currency to make Salvadoran goods more competitive abroad, an increase in interest rates to encourage savings, and higher prices for gasoline, foods and other items that are partially subsidized by the government.

Addressing the rally in Liberty Party, Duarte said the demonstration was not only a "show of support" for his U.S.-backed administration but also was a declaration to business leaders "that the people want a change" in the country's economic system.

Salvadoran business leaders generally belong to conservative groups that oppose Duarte's centrist government.

"This demonstration it telling the radicals of the extreme right they are in the wrong," Duarte said. "For their own security, for their own good, for their very lives they must understand that the people want change."

Thank You!

The family of the late Matthew L. Sheppard wishes to thank its many friends for their prayers and kindness shown during the time of his illness and passing.

A special thanks goes to Bishop W.L. Phillips and the Rock Spring Church family, Dr. Isaac Artis, Dr. Robert Shaw, Dr. Sumiko Ts'Kamura, Pitt County Memorial Hospital staff and Eastern Carolina Health Care and special thanks to the staff and management of Flanagan Funeral Home. We also would like to thank our many friends for all of the food and cards.

May God richly bless and keep you.

Something To Think About

Roderick M. Phillips
DIRECTOR

THE CASKET

Caskets come in two basic types: Protective and Non-Protective. Protective caskets, which are designed to resist the entrance of air, water and other graveside substances, are made of steel, copper or bronze. Non-Protective caskets, which are made of steel, hardwoods and cloth covered softwoods, offer no resistance to the entrance of the elements.

The cost of the casket is determined by four things: construction materials, quality of workmanship, type and grade of interior materials, and features you may desire such as swingbar handles or cathodic protection.

The selection of a casket is a matter of personal or family preference which can be arranged before actual need. Most funeral homes offer a wide range of caskets to satisfy varying tastes and budgets. It is important to remember that the casket is the last material gift the survivors can give the body which once was a beloved person. It can add greatly to the esthetics of the funeral setting and to the repose of the body.

Isn't it odd that most people never make prearrangement plans? After all most people wouldn't think of waiting until the worst possible time to make plans for anything else. But with funeral and burial prearrangement, all too often, people shirk their responsibility and force their family to make arrangements under great stress. When you think about it, you realize that can be quite unfair.

But there is a simple answer. In the time it takes to go to lunch, you can take care of all your prearrangement needs in a private consultation with us at S.G. Wilkerson and Sons. Annette A. Nelson has successfully completed the Uniform Certified Public Accountant Examination, according to an announcement by the North Carolina State Board of Certified Public Accountants Examiners.

A graduate of the University of North Carolina at Wilmington, she was one of the 272 successful CPA exam candidates. A Greenville resident, she is employed by the Taylor, Rice and Associates CPA firm in Farmville.

Call Meeting

The Greenville City Council will hold a special meeting Monday at 5:45 p.m. in the first floor conference room of City Hall to consider a contract for a joint city-utilities wage study.

Council members will also conduct a workshop to discuss an agenda for their monthly meeting scheduled for Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the Council Chambers of City Hall.

Scholastic Arts Awards Presented

The eighth annual Scholastic Arts Awards for 46 counties in eastern North Carolina recently were presented at Atlantic Christian College, Wilson.

Debbie Seykora, a student at J.H. Rose High School, received the Kodak Medallion of Excellence for her work.

Pitt County students with winning entries — Gold Key and honorable mention awards — were:

Gold Key Award

AYDEN-GRIFTON HIGH SCHOOL — Phoebe Crouch and James Tingen II (two).

D.H. CONLEY HIGH SCHOOL — Trudy Coggins and Corey Phillips.

FARMVILLE MIDDLE SCHOOL — Zimmie Coward and Elizabeth Deans.

J.H. ROSE HIGH SCHOOL — Joe Fulghum, James McPherson and Debbie Seykora (two).

Honorable Mention

AYDEN-GRIFTON HIGH SCHOOL — Joni Fenner and Paul Huggett.

D.H. CONLEY HIGH SCHOOL — Corey Phillips.

FARMVILLE CENTRAL HIGH SCHOOL — Kevin Barrett.

FARMVILLE MIDDLE SCHOOL — Randall Harris.

Sunday Opinion

Commissioners Should Preserve At-Large Voting

The Pitt County Commission should not abandon its support of an election plan that utilizes a combination of at-large and district voting.

Public disagreement with the option for at-large representatives should not dissuade the commissioners from selecting the election plan that is best for Pitt County. There is no doubt that a plan employing representatives elected at-large would be the soundest.

The outcry against at-large representation should be seen for what it truly is — sincere but misguided concern for Pitt County's political future. The citizens who have spoken against the commissioners' proposed plan should consider these facts.

First, a board elected entirely by district voting would foster a narrow perspective on issues. Rather than considering the needs of the entire county, commissioners could easily concentrate only on the needs of their individual districts. That inclination would damage unity and encourage bickering.

Second, although district voting is necessary to ensure minority representation on the commission, at-large voting is equally imperative to a balanced board. Neither method by itself is adequate for sound leadership. Clearly, when the facts are examined, a combination of the two provides the kind of representation that would govern the county effectively.

Attendance at the public hearings has been abysmal, averaging 18-19 persons. Most have spoken against at-large representation in an election plan. The remainder of the 95,000 or so citizens the plan affects have been mute.

The commissioners should be reminded they represent those silent citizens not at the meeting and that they are obligated to consider their interests as well as the interests of those publically commenting on the plan.

A county commission elected wholly by district would be a political throwback to the days when Pitt County was governed provincially. Greenville fought only for Greenville, Chicod fought only for Chicod and Bethel fought only for Bethel. Returning to this narrow-mindedness would be a mistake.

The commission should adhere firmly to its commitment to a combination of at-large and district voting for its new election plan.

Citizens Are True Winners

Unless our reading glasses lead us astray, Tar Heels have got it made.

The story is (according to AP writer John Flesher) Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan are waging a test of image-building strength long before the anticipated 1988 race; each claiming to be the source of varied proposals for the "right ideas" leading to a shining future for the state.

Claims of me-tooism are cited as frequent and sometimes sharp.

The Blueprint For Economic Development produced by Martin's Department of Commerce and the report issued last November by Jordan's Commission on Jobs and Economic Growth have points in common. Both want credit.

The Basic Education Program — which early came under Martin's criticism, is now supported by Martin with an added proviso local school officials would have more flexibility in using BEP funds. Jordan sees it as me-tooism.

Jack Hawke, the new interim GOP chairman and Martin supporter got into the act, citing Martin's criticisms of the "supersub" (made up of Democratic heavyweights) and subsequent Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey promising to enlarge the state budget decision-making panel and open its meetings to the public. Hawke called it another example of me-tooing.

There will doubtless be other instances in the months to come with Martin and Jordan competing as the source of actions intended to illustrate just who is conceiving the right ideas and who is copying them. That is important to the rivals but much less so to North Carolinians as a whole.

What is really important is that varied ideas are emerging and they have a better than usual chance of being favorably acted upon.

If those proposals are really good ideas (and at this stage we can only have hopes), then the obvious beneficiaries will be North Carolinians and an ongoing quest for improving their quality of life.

Landmarks Quickly Fade Into History

Alvin Taylor

Sunday Morning Notes

Someone who read last week's column about the restoration of the bell in the county court house clock suggested that your columnist write about Five Points, which will never be restored.

Five Points? How quickly old landmarks fade into history. There are undoubtedly thousands of people living in Pitt County today who never heard of Five Points.

Many cities have such a location, however. It involves a regular intersection of two streets with a third one coming in at an angle. Five streets radiate out and thus the name Five Points.

In Greenville Five Points was the center of the universe for many years. It was formed at the intersection of what is now Fifth and Evans streets with Dickinson Avenue. I know, if you go to look at it now, Dickinson doesn't come close to Fifth and Evans. It is, however, directioned that way. When the old telephone building at Dickinson and Washington and the State Bank building (NCNB) at Dickinson and Evans were removed a parking lot was built. Now Fifth and Evans still intersect, but that's all; hence no Five Points.

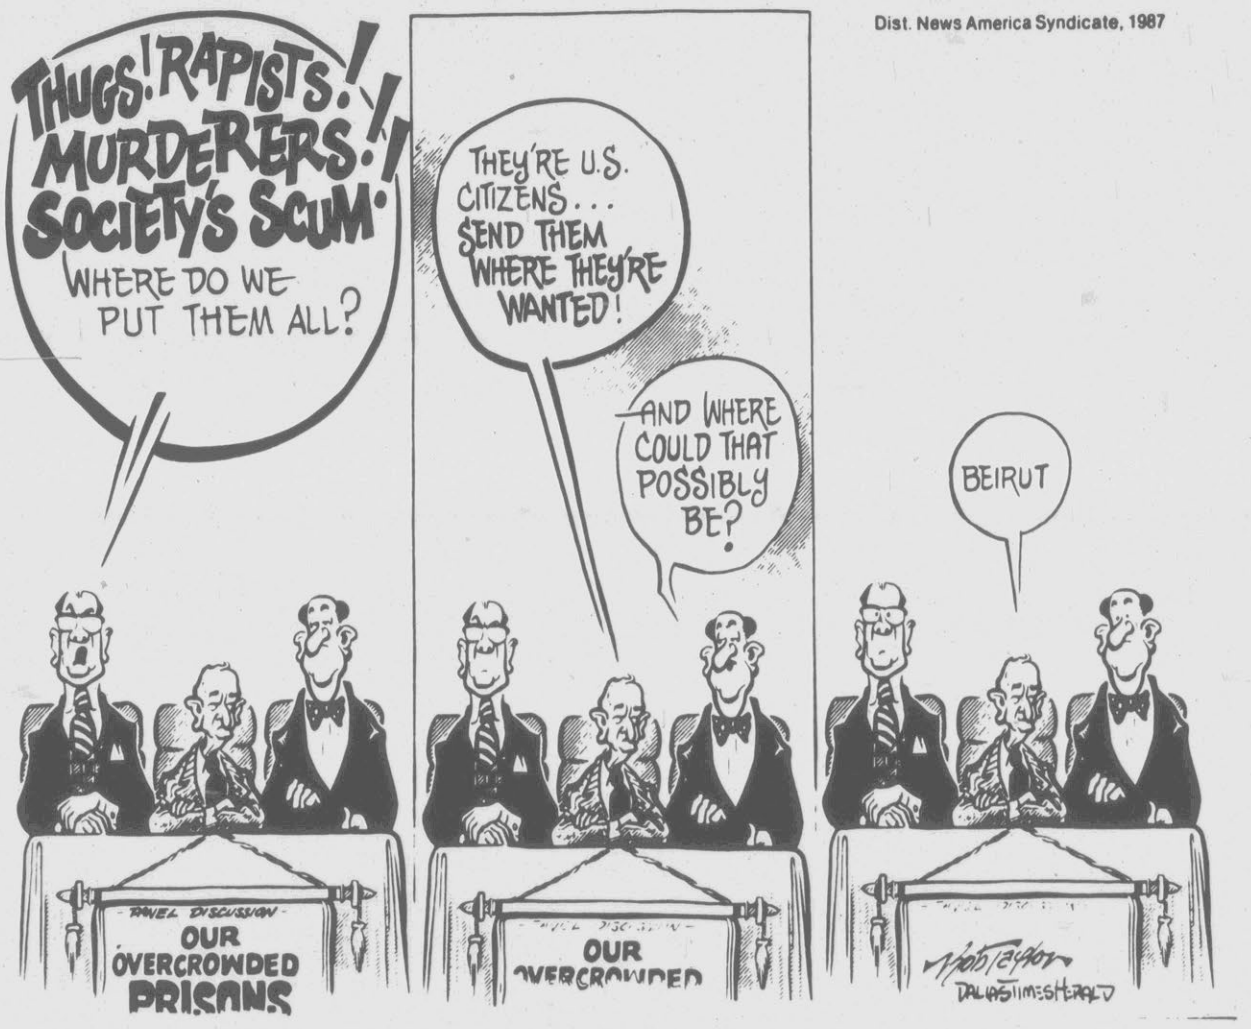
When downtown Greenville was the heart of the city's business area, most all traffic eventually passed through Five Points. A concrete pillar stood in the center of the intersection with a five way traffic control light atop it. It was the busiest traffic controller in town. Most of the retail establishments were nearby as were most restaurants and ice cream parlors. Thus everybody met at Five Points. Teenagers "hung out" there in hopes their buddies would come by and everyone could pile in a car to cruise.

Girl watchers went there because every college girl came by en route to the area restaurants.

There was nobody who didn't know where Five Points was located.

Some landmarks go and some stay. The old court house building is becoming one of the county's historic buildings. It has been renovated a number of times but its exterior maintains the appearance that a number of generations have been familiar with.

Historic old Austin on the ECU campus, the original building, fell to the wreckers when it was deemed to be settling and unsafe. Wright auditorium, built after Austin, remains. Though it has been added to and its interior completely redone to acccomodate a concert auditorium, its exterior front still appears much as it did with it was originally constructed.



Health Care Plans On Front Burner

Spencer Rich

WASHINGTON — In the month since the 100th Congress convened, proposals for "catastrophic" health insurance — designed to protect Americans against devastating medical bills stemming from lengthy illnesses — have moved from the legislative back burner they occupied for nearly a decade to the top of the agenda.

Since the 1970s, legislators such as Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kans., Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, Sen. Dave Durenberger, R-Minn., and Reps. Fortney H. (Pete) Stark, D-Calif., and Willis D. Gradison Jr., R-Ohio, have advocated legislation to protect people against the costs of catastrophic illness.

But there has never been anything like the current tide of support. From one end of Capitol Hill to the other, Republicans and Democrats are endorsing proposals and predicting action soon.

"Something will be enacted" this Congress, said Finance Committee member John Chafee, R-R.I., in an interview, "no question."

Why the surge of backing this year?

One of the major factors, according to Chafee and other lawmakers, is that Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen and President Reagan made catastrophic insurance a priority.

"This president got behind it. He put it on the agenda," said Gradison in an interview, emphasizing the power of the president and a senior cabinet secretary to give an issue prominence and thereby elevate it to a front rank of legislative concerns.

"The main thing has been Ronald Reagan setting the ball rolling last year," said Stuart Butler of the Heritage Foundation.

When Bowen took office in December 1985, he began pressing for a Medicare catastrophic program recommended by a special Social Security advisory commission that he had headed two years earlier.

The president did not ask Congress to approve that program (and still has made no specific legislative recommendation), but in his 1986 State of the Union message a year ago, he publicly directed a study by Bowen.

Bowen produced a report last November, which received wide and sympathetic news coverage and has dominated debate on the issue since. It addressed the hospital and doctor bills of the elderly; the nursing home and home-health-care costs of the elderly, and also the problems of more than 40 million people under 65 who have no health insurance at all or whose insurance doesn't include any form of catastrophic protection. Its centerpiece was a recommendation to work largely through the existing Medicare structure.

The president gave the issue added prominence by declaring again in his State of the Union Message last week that catastrophic insurance should be a priority, and promising a specific legislative proposal shortly.

His proposal is expected to be limited to protecting the elderly against catastrophic hospital and doctors' bills. It is not expected to cover long-term nursing home costs for the elderly or catastrophic insurance for the population under 65.

Among the options he is reportedly considering is one favored by insurance firms and conservatives who prefer a private-sector approach. It would have the government give each Medicare beneficiary a voucher to purchase a catastrophic policy from a private health insurance firm.

Bowen's plan, which many on Capitol Hill favor and which may pass even if the president recommends something else, would increase the Medicare premium by $4.92 a month and use the proceeds to guarantee Medicare beneficiaries up to 365 days a year of hospital care, and to ensure that no Medicare recipient need pay more than $2,000 a year out of pocket for Medicare-related hospital and doctors' bills.

Several variations on each of these proposals are before the president.

A second factor now at play in the widespread support for action on some form of catastrophic insurance has been described by Stark, aides said, as legislators' desire to do something that demonstrably helps people after an era in which federal health programs have been frozen or even cut.

Said Gradison, "For a period of time, Medicare has been subject to a freeze in benefits, retrenchment, cost containment — so there is a backlog of pressure to improve Medicare."

"After six years of cutting, it is something to be for," said an aide to a GOP Senator.

Another major factor is, in Gradison's words, "the cumulative impact of information and concern on costs and gaps" in medical coverage.

The Political Swoon Over Bill Bradley Moves West

Ronald Brownstein

LOS ANGELES — At least in one respect, politics is a lot like real life: People always want what they can't have.

As the object of what amounts to a national political crush, Sen. Bill Bradley, D-N.J., is learning something about this. Bradley will be swooping into California later this week for a series of fund-raisers including a $1,500 a couple gathering sponsored by two Hollywood heavies, Michael D. Eisner of Disney and Michael Ovitz of the Creative Artists Agency.

The event has raised eyebrows throughout the political community here because Eisner and Ovitz are not known for flagging down politicians with their checkbooks. For Bradley to line up both is considered a coup. Eisner, a New York City native, has been a fan of Bradley's from the time he played professional basketball with the New York Knicks, and was an early backer of his political career. Ovitz, who was involved on the periphery of Gary Hart's 1984 presidential campaign, was recruited by Eisner.

Neither would discuss why they are sponsoring the event for Bradley, but one source who knows both said, "I don't think you can attribute it to parochial entertainment industry interests. I think what's crucial to them is that there is this pizazzy quality about Bradley's thinking and the long-range potential of his leadership." In other words, they are getting in near the ground floor.

Bradley's trip has raised eyebrows also because it comes just as the first wave of Democratic presidential candidates is descending on Los Angeles, wallets outstretched. Officially, the $250,000 Bradley hopes to raise here and in San Francisco will go to his 1990 Senate reelection campaign. But one of his local supporters said "absolutely, one of the reasons for this trip" is to expand the network of California donors that Bradley could tap should he choose to seek the presidency sometime in the future.

In many respects, Bradley is an ideal candidate to mine the Los Angeles community of liberal donors: He's smart and serious, and somehow stylish in a rumpled way. In person, Bradley doesn't set off any sparks that might be confused with charisma; though he's relaxed and engaging in small groups, the kindest thing you can say about his public appearances is that he's a better after-dinner speaker than most former athletes. But his previous career as a professional basketball player (and his stint as a Rhodes scholar) has invested him with a kind of sweaty celebrity.

'Bradley has always navigated by his own lights. When he graduated from college, he went to Oxford, though many said it would cost him his basketball career; when his basketball career ended he ignored offers to run for lower office before winning his Senate seat in 1978.'

Bradley does have one major problem with the big givers here. Last March, he voted in favor of aid to the Nicaraguan contras, stunning Washington's liberal community — not to mention many of his constituents, who showered his office with 7,000 letters, almost all opposed to his vote. His position continues to create problems for him within the party; even last week, some local Democratic givers were looking for ways to advertise their disappointment over his switch.

But the uproar over Bradley's contra vote hasn't drowned out the chorus of party activists trying to entice him into the presidential race. Al Jackson, political director for the National Committee for an Effective Congress, a prominent liberal organization, said, "A lot of people who worked at the organizer level for Walter Mondale are still looking for a horse in the race to get excited about, and the only horse that excites them is Bill Bradley."

The only problem is that Bradley refuses to saddle up. He insists he isn't running for president this time, and he apparently means it.

Bradley seems to understand that he's attractive partly because he isn't running. Nowhere does familiarity breed contempt quite so efficiently as in presidential politics. The presidential race is so exhausting and demeaning that those who haven't entered the hunt always look statesmanlike beside those who are already careening through the course, tattered and bleeding. Over the years, many otherwise sober politicians — Edward M. Kennedy, to name one — have been seduced into presidential quests by this optical illusion, only to find that after their first tumble in the mud they look as grubby and grasping as everyone else.

This year, even more Democrats than usual are wailing about the lack of qualified candidates. There's some ritual in this, but some merit too. The Democrats are looking at a relatively small field: Only three hopefuls (Hart, Bruce E. Babbitt and Rep. Richard A. Gephardt of Missouri) have entered the race, and just four more are behind them (Jesse Jackson, Sen. Joseph R. Biden of Delaware, and Governors Mario M. Cuomo of New York and Michael S. Dukakis of Massachusetts), some of whom may not run. And, except for Hart, most of these candidates are unfamiliar to the public — and even to much of the party.

Not surprisingly, then, many Democrats yearn for more choices. Bradley is a natural object for their affections. Many Democrats like Bradley because they believe that he could attract voters from across the political spectrum. Conservative leaders tend to agree. "Bradley would be the most formidable (Democratic candidate)," Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y., said last fall. "He's a pro-Strategic Defense Initiative, pro-trade, pro-contras, growth-oriented Democrat."

That's a fine endorsement, whose value is depreciated only by the fact that Kemp and most people who think like him don't vote in Democratic primaries. It's also overstated. In their praise of Bradley, Kemp and the conservatives are projecting what they want to see. Bradley isn't nearly as far from the Democratic liberal mainstream as Kemp implies.

Though conservatives invariably describe Bradley as a supporter of the "Star Wars" initiative, in the last congressional session he voted to ban testing of anti-satellite weapons (reversing an earlier position).

Increased Park Fees Declined

Paul O'Connor

RALEIGH — In a year when money for new state spending is expected to be very tight, a study commission that will advocate major improvements in the state parks system has opted not to recommend user fees or new taxes for the parks.

The State Parks Study Commission, which has been trying for four years to increase state spending on parks, has decided to gamble on getting a small piece of the general tax funds available and, in addition, to create a state fund to match private donations.

Since the close of the 1986 session, the commission had given much thought to charging entrace fees at the state's most popular parks. (Fees at low-use parks might have cost more to collect than they brought in.)

North Carolina ranks last among the 50 states in its per capita spending for operation of a state parks system. Many parks are in poor condition, and many lack adequate public facilities. Some face encroachment from developers.

During commission debate, Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, argued that park fees had the potential to raise the several million dollars which the parks need every year. He said that an entrance fee of a dollar or two per car would not be a great burden but "thinking about the whole state, you're talking about a lot of money to do a lot of things."

But Winner was almost alone in his advocacy of fees. Charles Taylor of Brevard, a businessman and commission member, said that $2 was a lot of money to ask a family to pay for a park visit. "You're sending a signal that first you have to pay your taxes and then you have to pay an additional fee" to use state facilities. "You're sending a signal that parks are not important enough to warrant tax money."

Sen. Henson Barnes, D-Wayne, commission co-chairman, said, "I'm convinced that if we go to fees then the General Assembly will move to go to more fees" and that General Fund appropriations for the parks will be eliminated completely.

Finally, Sen. Bo Thomas, D-Henderson, said that imposition of fees would demean the state. North Carolina, he argued, does not charge its citizens fees to use roads and state parks, he said, and it shouldn't start. By providing for basic facilities from tax money, he said, "we're setting a standard for the rest of the world and setting fees would mean that all we're doing is dragging ourselves down."

Winner said concern about declining legislative appropriations was unfounded because the General Assembly wasn't doing enough now anyhow.

In its deliberations, the commission had considered asking for new taxes that would then be committed to the parks. In the final report, however, the commission did not recommend any specific tax.

The commission recommended that the assembly spend $25 million in the next two years for land purchases. In 1985, $25 million was appropriated for land purchases in 1986 and 1987, but the assembly later put $5 million of that in reserve and redirected another $3.7 million into park maintenance. (The commission also wants the $5 million reserve released immediately.)

Finally, the commission is recommending that the state appropriate $500,000 in each of the next two years for a state matching grant fund.

Salary Increases Opposed

George Gallup

PRINCETON, N.J. — The American people staunchly oppose salary increases for members of Congress and top federal officials, now slated to go into effect Wednesday morning unless the House of Representatives moves to block them.

In the latest Gallup Poll, public opposition (76 percent) heavily outweighs support (18 percent) for pay raises such as those recently proposed by President Reagan.

One of the main arguments for salary increases for members of Congress, federal judges and other key executives is that the government will not be able to attract competent officials unless it brings their pay more into line with what they could earn in the private sector.

This argument also finds little public support, with 64 percent expressing the belief that the best and brightest people will continue to accept lower wages in order to serve the people. In contrast, only 25 percent feel that higher salaries are necessary.

The survey found at least 2-to-1 opposition to the salary proposals among all major population groups, although Republicans, college graduates and persons from upper-income households express slightly greater support than do their opposite numbers.

Similarly, Republicans, the well-educated and affluent are relatively more inclined to the view that the government must pay higher salaries, but the prevailing view in these groups, too, is that the opportunity to serve the people should override salary considerations.

Little difference of opinion is found between those who have a fairly accurate knowledge of U.S. senators' and representatives' salary ($77,400 per year) and those who are less knowledgable. Roughly one-fourth (24 percent) are able to identify the correct amount within a narrrow range, while 39 percent tend to overestimate and 21 percent to underestimate the amount.

Last week the Senate voted 87 to 7 to block the President's proposal, which includes hikes of about 15 percent for U.S. senators, congressmen, the vice president and the speaker of the House, and different amounts for other federal office-holders. However, all the raises will become effective at 12:01 Wednesday morning, 30 days after Reagan submitted his recommendations, unless the House also votes against them.

The findings are based on in-person interviews with 1,562 adults, 18 and older, conducted in more than 300 scientifically selected localities across the nation during the period Jan. 16-19. For results based on samples of this size, one can say with 95 percent confidence that the error attributable to sampling and other random effects could be 3 percentage points in either direction.

Thanks, But No Thanks, Paul

Rowland Evans & Robert Novak

WASHINGTON — What former senator Paul Laxalt meant as an offer to take over the White House chief of staff post from the beleaguered Donald T. Regan was interpreted by President Reagan as merely a token statement of support for the next two years.

Laxalt told the president he would be willing to peform any task needed, meaning replacement of Regan. Reagan shrugged it off with a routine thank-you.

In fact, the two old friends see little of each other these days. Regan is by far the most influential voice with the president and even Nancy Reagan has told close friends that nothing will sway here husband against Regan today.

A footnote: Laxalt has asked friends to wait at least until April to see whether he will run for president. He was bitterly disappointed when Ed Rollins, who ran the Reagan-Bush re-election campaign under Laxalt's chairmanship, defected to Rep. Jack Kemp without wating for his ex-chief's decision.

Meese's Rescue

Summoned by a last-second telephone call from the Pentagon, Attorney General Edwin Meese III appeared at the White House to plead for early deployment of President Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative (SDI) at a key policy-setting meeting.

Meese, Reagan's oldest political friend left in the administration and a committed hard-liner, put his full weight behind the move. The president is believed to favor it despite State Department opposition.

Meese argued against the diplomats' case that early deployment would endanger the Anti-Ballistic Missile (ABM) treaty. His active participation could give Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger his most important victory over Secretary of State George Shultz.

Fussy Bush

The desire by Vice President George Bush not to mingle with other presidential hopefuls at Republican cattle shows has led to a tentative separate billing at the northeastern GOP conference in Lebanon, N.H., Feb. 13-14 and a problem with a New York City meeting of Republican House members March 27-28.

Bush operative Rich Bond asked New Hampshire Republican Chairman Elsie Vartanian whether the vice president might speak Saturday noon instead of Friday night, when the other hopefuls were scheduled. After the intervention of pro-Bush Gov. John Sununu, she agreed. But when word leaked out, Bush forces said it was not even settled whether their man would attend.

Shultz For Finland

The State Department's lack of finesse in dealing with congressmen was demonstrated when Secretary George Shultz defended the foreign assistance budget by warning that the U.S. Information Service library in Helsinki might be closed for insufficient funding.

After quoting a Finnish statesman as recalling that he had learned much at that library, Shultz pondered the folly of closing it. Rep. Mickey Edwards of Oklahoma, scarcely able to keep a straight face, noted that libraries in his and other congressional districts were threatened by the tight Reagan budget and were of more concern to congressmen than what happened in Helsinki.

Reagan Will Survive Defeat Over Water Quality Act

James Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON — With a whoop and a holler and some crocodile tears, the House and Senate last week voted to override President Reagan's veto of the Water Quality Act of 1987. Poor old Reagan! He suffered what the papers are calling a "humiliating defeat."

Maybe so, but the president will survive the experience. He has the satisfaction of knowing that he stood on principle, always a wobbly platform in this town, and the next few years will confirm his judgment. Reagan termed this $20 billion bill a pork barrel budget-buster. That's about the size of it.

The best that can be said of the act is that it will phase out the indefensible practice of federal grants for local sewers. In another five years, unless Congress succumbs to political temptation, the outright grants will yield to loans. A revolving fund will be created, primed by $8.4 billion from the federal treasury, and as local loans are repaid the fund will be replenished.

Reagan's chief objection to the act was based upon one of the bedrock principles of American government — the principle of federalism. This principle holds that certain responsibilities, such as national defense, are properly the business of the federal government. Other responsibilities are the business of local governments.

Until 1972, no one ever dreamed that the construction of a local sewer line was anything but a local responsibility. Then came the water pollution control amendments, providing federal grants of 75 percent of construction costs, and the gravy boat sailed down the river. The 1972 act gave localities all the fun of spending money without the pain of raising it. Fifty billion dollars later, our waters have improved but the principle has suffered.

Reagan also objected to the bureaucratic expansion this act will demand. The law vests immense regulatory and discretionary powers in the Environmental Protection Agency. Cities of more than 100,000 population will find themselves tediously involved in official permits for the discharge of stormwater. New programs are to be established for "non-point source pollution." Industries will keep their lawyers busy defining "fundamentally different factors" that make their pollution exceptional. The act bristles with timetables and deadlines, many of which cannot possibly be met. This is a bureaucratic monstrosity.

The president's sensitive nose quivered at the unmistakable smell of pork. The act provides a grant of $100 million toward cleaning up Boston harbor. Why isn't this the business of Boston? The act provides $50 million for sewage treatment in Des Moines. Why isn't this the business of Des Moines? The village of Lena, Ill., is singled out for a grant of 75 percent of its sewerage costs. What's so special about the village of Lena, Ill.?

All kinds of raisins are in this oatmeal. There's money for a demonstration project at Beaver Lake in Arkansas, and thank you, Rep. John Paul Hammerschmidt. There's money for testing the waters of Lake Houston, and thank you, Rep. Jack Fields of Texas. One of the floor managers of the bill was Rep. Robert Roe of New Jersey. Whaddya know? The aquifers of the Rockaway River area will get special attention. A grant of 75 percent of costs goes to Wanaque, N.J. What's so hot about Wanaque?

California's delegation brought home some bacon for Orange County, Avalon and San Diego. The gentlemen from Arizona took care of Pima, Pinal and Santa Cruz counties. Walker and Smithfield Townships in Pennsylvania get special benefits. The act smiles upon five counties in Connecticut and two counties in New York.

Under Sec. 213(c) there's a $250,000 raisin for Taylor Mill, Ky. For the record, Taylor Mill (pop. 4,509) is off I-275 in Kenton County, up around Covington, about three miles from the Licking River. Maybe Taylor Mill has pollution problems so distinctive, so remarkable, so indubitably unique, that they require federal attention. But if the feds take care of Taylor Mill, who is to look after the needs of nearby Sugartit, Rabbit Hash and Big Bone?

It is plausible, under the Commerce Clause, to discover a federal interest in cleaning up the Great Lakes, the Chesapeake Bay and certain major rivers that flow from one state to another. The goal of clean waters — waters that are fishable and swimmable and drinkable and pleasant to look upon — is a goal that has great appeal. Everyone shares that happy vision, but Reagan was right: This act is a poor boat for getting there.

In a recent column from the Mediterranean, I wrote about planes catapulted from the stern of the aircraft carrier Kennedy. Five hundred old Navy types have informed me that planes are catapulted from the bow. I am reminded of Dr. Johnson's response to the woman who asked why he defined "pastern" as "the knee of a horse." Said the sage: "Ignorance, madam, pure ignorance."

Friday Panel Calls For Rural Development

By JODY TAYLOR
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The economic emphasis in rural North Carolina needs to shift from recruiting large industries to developing smaller businesses with strong ties to existing area strengths, a new study says.

State and local leaders need to become more involved in education, the development of small businesses in rural areas, and lending institutions must become more receptive to the needs of the small borrower, according to the report, "Three Faces of Rural North Carolina."

"What has happened, we've had an exceleration of jobs and a boom atmosphere at the Research Triangle Park, University Park in Charlotte, in southeastern North Carolina ...," said William Friday, chairman of the Rural Economic Development Center Steering Committee.

"But in any one of these communities, you can drive 20 miles out in the country and you find that other North Carolina," Friday said. "They have been beset by drought, by debt ...."

The report, which was released Saturday, was prepared at the direction of the N.C. Commission on Jobs and Economic Growth by MDC. Corp. of Chapel Hill. It summarizes the economic condition of three rural North Carolina counties — Hertford, Jackson and Richmond counties. The counties were chosen, the report said, because "none was unusally blessed or depressed economically."

Rural counties in North Carolina are in a state of transition. Two industries upon which the rural economy has depended — tobacco and textiles — are changing, and there has been a sharp decrease in rural employment.

The report says 20,000 farms have disappeared since 1980 in North Carolina, and textile employment has declined by 20,000 workers. MDC said the three North Carolina counties surveyed have not "fully responded to the new challenges of a transitional economy."

Employment in rural areas is moving toward smaller firms and away from manufacturing, the report said. Small businesses with less than 100 employees account for 97 percent of all business firms in North Carolina and 45 percent of all jobs. The small businesses generated almost three-quarters of all new jobs generated in the state between 1979 and 1983 — 104,000 new jobs in the period.

But the report said that between 1978 and 1984, rural counties added a total of only 7,000 new manufacturing jobs.

"Given these trends, it is clear that a strategy focused largely on recruiting large manufacturing busineses is inappropriate for the emerging economy of rural areas," the report said. "Instead, far greater attention should be focused on promoting new business start-ups and expansions, resource-based industries, minority-owned businesses, school-based enterprises, cooperatives, and cottage industries."

"That doesn't mean you're not going to go out and find a large company," Friday said. "We must work within our own resources, finding a person who has some really good idea, finding a way to put him in business."

The report noted that three-quarters of all small businesses in North Carolina fail in their first two years, and nine out of 10 eventually fail. But the report says some businesses fail unnecessarily.

"Especially in rural areas where education levels are low, knowledge and experience in how to start up and run a small or medium-sized business is often limited," the report said. "Advice and technical assistance to these businesses can be critical in helping them to clear the initial hurdles involved in starting up a successful enterprise and in expanding operations after initial success has been achieved."

Small loans from $5,000 to $125,000 can present lenders with high paperwork costs for a relatively low return, the report said. It suggests the creation of new pools of capital that will be more responsive to the rural entrepreneur.

Friday said North Carolina may wish to look to an idea like one that is being used in Florida, where the state, through a non-profit agency, makes grants to small businessmen and takes an equity interest in it. The grant can be paid back as the businessman is more financially stable.

The report said 49 percent of rural adults in North Carolina who are older than 24 have received a high school diploma, and as many as one-third may have eight years of education or less.

"The issue that has been most distressing to me is that one out of four children live in these circumstances," Friday said. "This kind of situation is one that impacts each and every North Carolinian....

"It has everything to do with economic growth at a certain level," Friday said. "The problem of illiteracy is serious and has a direct impact on economic growth."

Friday said officials will also look to the General Assembly for help. He hopes to see implementation of the Basic Education Plan, and more support for community colleges in their battle against adult illiteracy. He would also like to see funding for the Rural Development Center.

"We need to get the message of help to those who are totally without," Friday said. "The important thing here is that we all recognize that this is everybody's obligation. Everybody's got a role to play in it somewhere. It's not the haves against the have nots."

Martin Backs Use Of Cost Factor To Equalize Paving Of Rural Roads

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin said he supports adding a cost factor to the road formula to account for higher road construction costs in western North Carolina, a region that characteristically has more miles of unpaved roads than other parts of the state.

Martin said he would like to pattern a new formula after one put in place during Republican Gov. Jim Holshouser's administration in the mid-1970s.

Jack Murdock, secondary roads officer for the state Department of Transportation, said Holshouser's formula was based on the costs of building one mile of road in each of the state's 100 counties.

It was struck down when the attorney general ruled the formula could only be changed by an act of the General Assembly.

"If you take the unpaved mileage and say that if the county has 1 percent of that, then they'd get 1 percent of the miles paved," Martin said. "Then the western counties would be treated more fairly. The mountain counties particularly would be treated more fairly in my opinion."

Martin said the change could be made without affecting the $128.6 million allocation for secondary road construction in his proposed $19.6 billion budget for the next two fiscal years.

Martin could have an unusual ally in the powerful speaker of the House of Representatives, Liston B. Ramsey, D-Madison. But Ramsey said Friday he would have to learn more about Martin's proposal before he could lend his full support.

"If they can come up with a road formula to put more money into our mountain counties, I'm in favor of it," Ramsey said.

Ramsey said adding a cost factor to the formula, which is based on a county's percentage of the total unpaved roads in the state, would take money away from all but 37 mostly rural counties.

Counties in western North Carolina would benefit from the cost factor, except Jackson, Graham, Cherokee, Clay, Avery, Watauga and Caldwell.

Still, the North Carolina Association of County Commissioners endorses adding a cost factor to the road formula.

"We don't have enough votes to take away from all these other counties," Ramsey said.

He said the only way to make up for the discrepancy in the other 63 counties is to add more money to the secondary road construction fund. Now every $1\frac{3}{4}$ cents of the per-gallon gas tax goes to the fund.

"There would have to be a deduction in other things the highway department does," he said. "Of course, that suits me."

Ramsey said the formula already gives western counties a disproportionate amount of money.

"To say our part of the state is discriminated against is ridiculous," Ramsey said. "Madison County is getting twice as much as Mecklenburg. Can they complain? That's true with the other mountain counties."

Former SBI Chemist Freed Of Contempt

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A former State Bureau of Investigation chemist was cleared Friday of contempt of court charges stemming from his original refusal to answer a question concerning his drug use at the SBI's former laboratory in Swannanoa.

Charles McDonald cited his Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination, Jan. 7 when he refused to answer the question, "Is there a likelihood that you tampered with the evidence in some other case?"

McDonald cited the Fifth Amendment during a hearing n whether George "Little George" Smith deserves a new trial on drug charges. Smith's attorneys charge McDonald tampered with the evidence in Smith's case.

When asked if he would answer the same question Friday by Judge Robert E. Lewis in Buncombe County Superior Court, McDonald said his answer is, "I can't honestly say."

Lewis then said he "declines to hold Mr. McDonald in contempt since he has answered the question directly."

McDonald frequently invoked his Fifth Amendment rights during the hearing for Smith when asked about his drug use while working at the SBI lab. But when ordered by Judge Chase B. Saunders to answer, McDonald often said only, "I can't remember."

McDonald was dismissed by the SBI in May 1985 after he admitted stealing and ingesting cocaine and other drugs from the lab valued by the SBI at $300,000.

In 1985, Pitt County's average weekly manufacturing wage was $332.98.

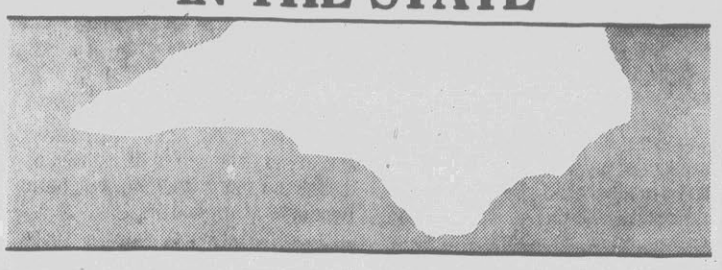
IN THE STATE



Bricks Improve

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina's brick industry had its best year since 1978 last year as factory shipments exceeded 1.1 billion bricks, officials for the Brick Association of North Carolina said.

The state, which has an abundance of clayish soil in the Piedmont and easy access to rail construction, is the leading U.S. brick producer, making 15 percent of the nation's bricks in 1986, said brick association spokesman Peter Cieslak.

Factory shipments of bricks last year increased 15.5 percent from 1985, Cieslak said.

An increase in construction in the years since 1982 has the state's brick industry healthy again, Cieslak said.

Headquarters

RALEIGH (AP) — Construction is set to begin in early summer on a new headquarters for the N.C. Biotechnology Center in Research Triangle Park, officials said.

J.N. Pease Associates Inc. in Charlotte has been selected to design the 20,000-square-foot center, which is scheduled to be completed by August 1988.

The General Assembly has allocated $1.2 million for construction of the building, which replaces a temporary headquarters in the park.

The Biotechnology Center is a private, non-profit corporation that funds research, product development and economic growth for biotechnology.

Business Up

RALEIGH (AP) — Business activity, powered by job gains and a drop in unemployment claims, rose in December in North Carolina, according to one business report.

New claims for unemployment insurance fell nearly 10 percent during the month, while non-agricultural employment rose 0.4 percent, according to the First Wachovia Business Index.

On the downside, the manufacturing work week in the state was unchanged in December at 40.7 hours, while residential building permits fell 3.4 percent.

Crime Agenda

RALEIGH (AP) — The Governor's Crime Commission has presented a 1987 legislative agenda that includes proposals to revise the Fair Sentencing Act, put more money into victim's compensation and increase penalties for cocaine possession.

Commission chairman Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, said some people will find parts of the agenda controversial, but he said he was optimistic about the chances of legislative action.

"We have spent a lot of time and had a great deal of input from the public, with public hearings and we hope that we've reached a good balance that can be supported," Cobb said.

Solicitation

RALEIGH (AP) — A Willow Springs man has pleaded guilty in Wake County Superior Court to the charge that he solicited someone in November to murder his wife.

In exchange for his guilty plea, assistant district attorney Susan Edwards agreed that Donald Vann should be evaluated by prison officials and state psychiatrists before he is sentenced. Vann, who will undergo up to 90 days of diagnostic testing, faces a maximum possible sentence of 10 years in prison.

Asphyxiation

RALEIGH (AP) — A 29-year-old Wake Forest man has been found dead, apparently asphyxiated while sleeping under a tarpaulin on a farm outside Zebulon, authorities say.

Calvin E. Cone, who was dropped off near the farm by his nephew, apparently planned to use the tarp as a makeshift tent for the night, authorities say.

Lt. T. S. Matthews of the Wake County Sheriff's Department said the tarp had been sprayed with a toxic fumigant. As Cone slept, the fumes apparently killed him, Matthews said.

Power Plant

GREENSBORO (AP) — The Piedmont Triad Regional Water Authority has voted unanimously to tell federal energy officials it wants a license to generate electricity at the $138 million Randleman Dam.

Tentative plans envision a $14 million hydroelectrical plant with turbines powered primarily by 10 million gallons of water the dam is required to discharge daily to replenish the Deep River below the dam.

Lindsay Cox, head of the Piedmont Triad Council of Governments, said the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, which will build the dam, hopes to complete the project by 1994.

Electricity would be a sideline for the authority. Its main business is operating a water treatment plant to be built at the dam and pipe up to 48 million gallons a day to six local governments. The governments are Greensboro, High Point, Jamestown, Archdale, Randleman and Randolph County.

Sanford Seeks Extra Contributions To Erase $1 Million Campaign Debt

RALEIGH (AP) — U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford says he has a committee of about 40 supporters helping him raise money to erase his campaign debt, which was about $1 million following the November election in which he defeated former U.S. Sen. Jim Broyhill.

Since mid-November, Sanford said his aides have made the rounds of Washington-based PACs, pressing new contributors for a $15,000 pledge, and soliciting an additional $5,000 from those who gave $10,000 earlier.

When Sanford was a candidate last year, he refused to take advantage of a loophole in the law that permitted him and his opponent to accept $15,000 from political action committees — $5,000 more than the usual limit.

Sanford, a Democrat, said he wouldn't accept the additional money because it "violated the spirit of the law."

But now that the election is over, Sanford said the situation has changed, and his aides are seeking the extra contributions they rejected during the campaign.

The shift has helped Sanford raise more than $250,000 since his come-from-behind victory over Republican Jim Broyhill, who sought and accepted the larger contributions before the election.

"I didn't make a campaign pledge," Sanford told the News & Observer of Raleigh Friday in a telephone interview from his Durham home. "It was no pledge. It was a comment on the situation. I don't see that as any binding pledge. We're certainly not doing anything improper."

The contribution limit became a campaign issue in the Sanford-Broyhill race when the Federal Election Commission announced in July that the two candidates could accept twice the normal maximum contribution from PACs and individuals in the general election.

The reason was that the Nov. 4 Senate election actually was two elections in one: a special election to fill the unexpired term of the late Sen. John East, and a regular election for a full six-year term.

Federal election laws allow PACs to give $5,000 per election; counting the May primary, Sanford and Broyhill were permitted to accept $15,000 from any PAC for the 1986 election.

"I thought the rule was foolish and that we were not seeking those funds, and we didn't," Sanford said Friday of the FEC ruling. "Now the campaign is over, and we have a debt ... so we will quite properly accept" $15,000 contributions from PACs that offer it, he said.

Task Force Drops Fight To Merge Schools

GREENSBORO (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's opposition and statewide pressure made a proposal to build a consolidated high school for the deaf in Greensboro a hurdle too great to leap this year, members of the task force that recommended the move said.

"I think it's dead as a doornail. But it will come up again," said Rep. James Crawford Jr., D-Granville, a member of the task force.

The proposal calls for building a $7.3 million high school at the Central North Carolina School for the Deaf in Greensboro. Central has 158 students in pre-school through grade eight. Students advance to high school at Western North Carolina School for the Deaf in Morganton or Eastern North Carolina School for the Deaf in Wilson.

Deaf students, their parents and teachers from Morganton and Wilson vigorously opposed the move. Many of them moved to those towns so their children could go to school there for 13 years without family disruption, Martin said.

Jo-Anne Long, another task force member, agreed Friday that the idea probably would go nowhere this year.

"I have a feeling that, right now, it is dead," said Ms. Long, the parent of a deaf child. But she added, "Sooner or later, that's the way it's going to have to go."

Ms. Long and Crawford said the proposal has little chance in the General Assembly this year partly because Martin announced his opposition Thursday to consolidating the high schools in Morganton and Wilson by 1991.

But Crawford predicted that the consolidation issue would return because enrollment is respected to continue to decline.

"As soon as enrollment really drops and they see that some of the staff has to go, it'll come back," he said.

Human Resources Secretary Phil Kirk, whose department oversees the schools for the deaf, appointed the 23-member task force to study the schools' needs.

The task force recommended consolidation largely because enrollment has declined by about one-third statewide in the past 10 years. By consolidating, the school could offer students more courses, more extracurricular activities and more programs, the task force said. It estimated that consolidation would save about $600,000 a year.

An Answer To Disappearing Tax Deductions.

Seeing those valuable deductions for consumer credit interest go away?
Wachovia Equity BankLine® helps you keep them.

You could watch the new tax law do away with most of the itemized deductions for the interest you pay on such things as your car loan, credit cards or charge accounts. Or, you could continue to take those deductions, within certain limitations, with Wachovia Equity BankLine. A line of credit secured by the equity in your home.

Hold the line on deductions.

You can consolidate your present credit balances with Equity BankLine or use it to borrow in the future. And if you itemize, the interest you pay for the money you borrow will, in most cases, still be deductible. (Certain limitations may apply.)

A price break on a tax break.

Because your rate is based on Wachovia's Prime Rate*, the interest you pay for the money you borrow on Equity BankLine may be substantially lower than on other types of credit you may have.

Fort Bragg Soldiers Build Air Strip In Dust

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

SAN LORENZO, Honduras (AP) — Hundreds of U.S. soldiers are working ankle deep in dust under a tropical sun to complete a dirt and concrete airstrip that seasonal rains will make unusable in just six months.

The project is a drill for the 548th Engineer Battalion from Fort Bragg, N.C., which would be expected in war time to quickly build airstrips for troop landings.

It is part of the U.S. Army's latest joint military exercises with Honduras, designed to underscore American opposition to the leftist Sandinista government in neighboring Nicaragua.

However, the 4,200-foot airstrip, which will be capable of handling C-130 transport planes, will not play a role in the fight of U.S.-backed Contra rebels against the Nicaraguan government. The airstrip, less than 2 miles from the Gulf of Fonseca, is about 120 miles southwest of Contra bases inside the Honduran border.

At the airstrip, on a clear day one can see Nicaragua about 25 miles across the water.

"We are about a week ahead of schedule and with any luck this strip should be completed in March," battalion commander Lt. Col. Donald Tomasik told visiting reporters Thursday.

For the troops working on the project, it has been a constant battle against the powdery fine dust and heat that at times reaches 105 degrees.

"The winds sometimes have kicked up to 35 knots, really creating a brownout where you can't see a thing," said Tomasik, of Allentown, Pa., as he watched a pair of earth movers race up and down the fledgling strip, carrying their payloads of dirt.

Since starting the project in January, men and machines have moved 50,000 cubic yards of dirt to the flat area to make the strip. More than 2 million pounds of cement is added to the dirt to harden the strip.

Tomasik said the strip should last six months before the seasonal tropical rains and erosion make repairs necessary.

He said troops also are helping nearby villages by repairing the roof of a school and community building, rebuilding a soccer field and digging wells in an area where fresh water is in short supply.

At Punta Raton, on a spit of land about 10 miles southeast of San Lorenzo, Tomasik's men are repairing and widening a causeway. About 500-600 men are in the battalion.

The troops live in tents that hold 12 men each. Temporary huts house the mess hall, showers and command post, all behind a perimeter of a barbed-wire fence that serves mainly to keep out stray cattle from nearby farms.

The day begins at 4:30 a.m. with exercises, which Tomasik says draws local residents amused by the soldiers running and jumping at daybreak.

Then comes a 12-hour work day, with breaks for rest. The soldiers get an occasional day off to go into a nearby town or the beach.

"It really gives the troops a chance to do what they are trained to do in a real-life situation. You have go out and find water and all that," Tomasik said.

Completion of the air strip is only the first phase of the U.S.-Honduran Big Pine 87 military exercise, which involves about 1,100 Army troops.

During a three-week second phase that begins in March, U.S. and Honduran commanders plan to practice defending the southern border, presumably against a Sandinista attack.

No estimate has been given on the number of troops who will be involved in the second phase.

In addition to the air strip in San Lorenzo, other soldiers are working on a similar project at Jamastran, about 60 miles to the northeast, and improvements at the Palmerola Air Base, headquarters of the U.S. joint task force operation, 50 miles northwest of the capital of Tegucigalpa.

The joint exercises have been under way almost continuously since 1983.

National Guard and Army Reserve units are take part in a separate military exercise dubbed Blazing Trails, a road-building project now in its second year in north and central Honduras. About 4,500 guardsmen and reservists will participate, although no more than 600 will be in Honduras at any one time.

U.S. officials say up to 10,000 troops could be rotated through Honduras during 1987, representing a significant increase in the American military presence.

The increase comes at a time when there are complaints in the United States that American soldiers could become involved in a war with Nicaragua.

Twice last year, U.S. helicopters ferried Honduran troops to the southern border following reported incursions by Sandinistas looking for Contras.

Van Hecke Re-Elected

Jordan Leads Democratic Attack On Martin Policies

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan preached party unity Saturday while his allies fired barbs at Republican Gov. Jim Martin as Democrats launched their drive to recapture the Executive Mansion next year.

While continuing to savor Sen. Terry Sanford's victory of last November, the 300 Democrats who attended a meeting of the state party's Executive Committee — the biggest gathering of Democratic leaders since Sanford was sworn into office Dec. 10 in Washington — had 1988 on their minds.

"We have a governor's race in 1988, and nothing is more important to us than winning that race," said Jim Van Hecke, who was elected without opposition to a second term as state Democratic chairman.

Sanford, Van Hecke, and new party Executive Director Ken Eudy blasted Martin in speeches, accusing him of offering no original ideas for moving the state ahead and of making the Republican Party his chief concern.

"We need governors for whom people are more important than politics," Sanford, governor from 1961-65, said. He criticized Martin for seeking gubernatorial veto authority: "We do not need a governor with more power. We need a governor with more vision.

"A veto is a negative device," Sanford said. "Ideas, vision, political courage are positive devices, and that is what our governors need."

Jordan, already the front-runner for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, got a boost last week when Attorney General Lacy Thornburg announced he would seek re-election instead of running for governor. Thornburg was considered perhaps the most formidable of Jordan's potential rivals.

But Raleigh businessman William Carl, who said last fall he might run for governor, said in an interview Saturday he was leaning toward doing so.

"I don't think any prospective Democratic nominee for governor should go unchallenged," Carl said. "If you think you've got the leadership and the new ideas we need, you should show your horsepower and firepower and let the people decide."

Jordan and Carl discussed the race over lunch Friday. "I told Bill it would be wonderful if he would support me," Jordan said in an interview. But he said it would be unrealistic to expect no opposition, and that Democrats would "resent someone being anointed. I don't want to give the perception that I ... think that ought to happen."

Thornburg said his decision was made in the interest of party unity. But Carl, wealthy owner of the Golden Corral restaurant chain, said if Thornburg had felt he could beat Jordan, "he would still be in there hot and heavy."

Sanford made the governor's race the focus of his speech, saying the outcome "will probably decide the course and direction for North Carolina for the rest of the century."

Eudy, a former newspaper reporter who recently became Democratic executive director, ridiculed Martin's economic development program, saying his outspoken support of business had failed to dissuade RJR Nabisco officials from moving their corporate headquarters from Winston-Salem to Atlanta.

"Democratic governors like Jim Hunt and Terry Sanford would have prostrated themselves in front of the moving van and said 'over my dead body,'" Eudy said.

Jordan, who has made no formal announcement of his 1988 intentions, did not mention the governor's race in his address. Instead, he praised the party faithful for their role in the Democratic comeback in 1986 and warned against complacency.

Georgia Police Outnumber Marchers In Klan Protest

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER
Associated Press Writer

COLLEGE PARK, Ga. (AP) — A far lower than expected turnout of about 200 white-robed Ku Klux Klan members and supporters marched peacefully through this Atlanta suburb Saturday, outnumbered by more than 300 law enforcement officers in riot gear.

"Are you proud to be white? Does it feel good to be white?" yelled Ed Stephens of Jonesboro, Georgia grand dragon of the Invisible Empire Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, shouting through a bullhorn as he led the march.

Stephens said the rally was in response to the Dec. 3 killing of a 15-year-old white boy, not to a pair of marches that brought thousands of civil rights demonstrators to all-white Forsyth County last month. Four black teen-agers are charged with the killing.

"God bless that little white boy who was murdered," Stephens bellowed.

Klan organizers had predicted from 500 to 1,000 Klansmen would come from 26 states. They had no explanation for the lower turnout.

There were few spectators along the half-mile parade route, but police said at least two of them were arrested on disorderly conduct charges after shoving incidents broke out.

Helmeted officers from College Park, Fulton County and the Georgia Bureau of Investigation lined the route and confined spectators, reporters and latecomers to the sidewalk.

Police estimated their own ranks at between 300 and 400.

Most civil rights groups and many churches had urged members to stay away from the march, but a few black counter-demonstrators exchanged insults with the Klansmen.

At the end, members of an activist group calling itself the All People's Congress displayed signs condemning racism at the end of the march route.

James Farrands, imperial wizard of the Invisible Empire Knights, flew in from Connecticut for the march. "I've been meeting some good friends, good white people who believe in our cause," he said.

He claimed Klan membership was growing and that most new members were "in the 30-and-up bracket" but would not give a number for total membership.

Stephens said two civil rights demonstrations in Forsyth County last month resulted in more than 300 applications for Klan membership, mostly from that area.

In addition to robed Klansmen, there were members of the White Partriot Party in combat fatigues. Most of the Klan marchers were young; some were children carrying Confederate flags.

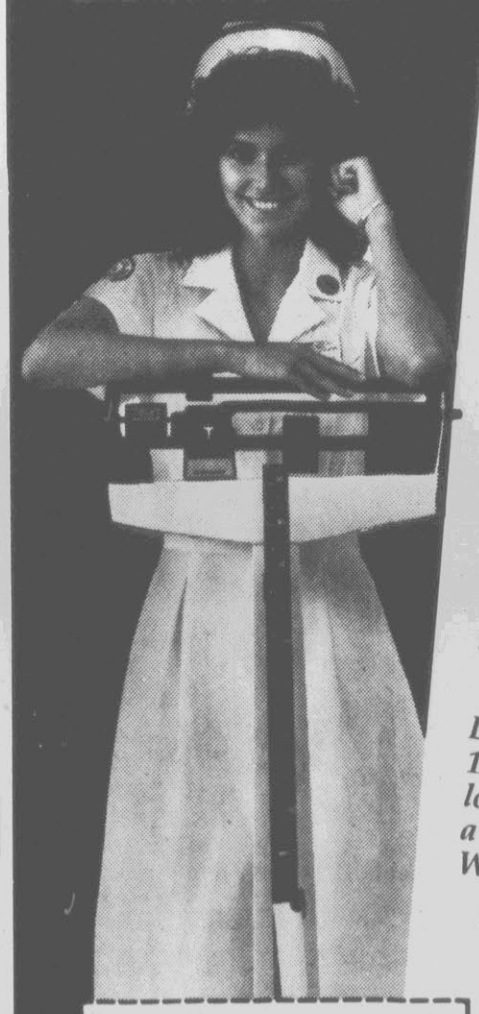
"The South will rise again and the white man is going to rise with it," screamed one adolescent marcher.

The Klan marched after a federal judge ruled that College Park, a bedroom community on the south edge of Atlanta, could not force the Klan to put up more than $3,000 to pay for added police protection.

Saturday's demonstration was sparked by the death in Dec. 3 of Andrew Reid Martin, 15, who was shot in the back and robbed. Four teenagers identified by police as members of a gang called BBB, for Bad Black Boys, were charged.

In the first march in Forsyth County, Klan members and supporters at pelted about 75 marchers with rocks and mud. The next weekend, 25,000 marchers returned, protected by nearly 3,000 law enforcement officers and National Guard troops.

"My Letter to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers" —Bruce Thornton



Dear Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers,

Until a year ago, I had lived a life of obesity, finding happiness in handfuls of potato chips and great gobs of ice cream.

In March of 1985, my world came to a screeching halt when I suffered a serious heart attack at the age of 37. I had lost my father when I was two years old and, while recuperating, I remembered growing up without the love and direction only a father can give. I was determined not to let this happen to my children and committed myself to losing weight.

With the help of Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers' supportive staff, I lost over 125 pounds and 115 inches. My whole outlook on life has changed. I look and feel like a new man and I owe it all to Physicians WEIGHT LOSS Centers.

Thank you.

Thinserely,
Bruce Thornton

NCSU Trustees Conditionally Agree To Cut Off Funds Tied To S. Africa

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State University's Endowment Board said it took into account the wishes of students and faculty when it voted Saturday to drop investments in companies operating in South Africa if American leaders call for divestiture in May.

Endowment board member T. Baxter Williams Jr. said the resolution was adopted in a unanimous vote. The board tied its actions to statements expected from the Rev. Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia.

Sullivan is the author of the widely used 1977 guidelines on treatment of black employees by companies in South Africa. But he has said the principles have not been successful in discouraging apartheid, N.C. State student body president Gary V. Mauney said.

Mauney said Sullivan promises to call for all U.S. companies to abandon operations in South Africa if apartheid, South Africa's system of segregation, has not ended by May 31.

The board voted to divest if Sullivan and others call for divestiture. The university would retain stocks in companies in South Africa if the condition of a bequest prevents N.C. State from selling the stock.

Meeting Friday and Saturday, the board also considered how best to help an estimated 75,000 non-whites working for American companies in South Africa, N.C. State Board of Trustees chairman James A Hackney III said.

Hackney said the board also considered its duty by law to invest wisely, and the effect of divestiture on giving to the university. He predicted that effect would be negative.

"How much remains to be seen," Hackney said.

Approximately $1.5 million of N.C. State' $20.6 million endowment is invested in companies operating in South Africa. Three of those companies — Eastman Kodak, General Motors and IBM — have announced they will leave the country.

The board considered the issue in response to an N.C. State Student Senate resolution calling for disposal of all South Africa-related holdings by May if apartheid hasn't ended. Last month, the N.C. State Faculty Senate voted to condemn apartheid, although it rejected a move to recommend university divestiture.

Duke Professor Says Limits Needed For Fund-Raisers

DURHAM (AP) — There should be Christian organizations that look more closely at the content of television ministry shows and their methods of fund-raising, a Duke Divinity School professor says.

Evangelist Oral Roberts' recent television warning that God may take his life if he is unable to raise $4.5 million by March "exceeds the limits of the kind of appeal that one should be making to support a ministry," said Dr. Paul Mickey, an associate professor of pastoral theology in the Divinity School.

"When we look at television ministries, the question becomes: What are the limitations? And are they imposed by the Federal Communications Commission, local station management or should there be internal spiritual restraints? I think there should be internal spiritual restraints," Mickey said this week.

"Those restraints aren't being exercised when people are manipulated or made to feel guilty about their lack of Christian discipleship or charitable contributions, or, in the case of Oral Roberts, being made to feel responsible for causing his death," Mickey added.

Mickey, who counsels clergy and lay people and speaks regularly on radio and television, said the issues being raised by Roberts' recent remarks could mean it's time for closer scrutiny of fund-raising by television ministries.

Existing organizations like the Evangelical Council for Financial Accountability, composed of non-profit Christian organizations, provide internal policing of the financial records of such organizations. Voluntary compliance with the council, or making public financial and fund-raising records, creates the kind of legal credibility that these ministries need, Mickey said.

Mickey recommends checking to see if a ministry is a member of that organization or the Evangelical Press Association, a similar operation, before sending donations.

Although rising costs of television time today create pressure to raise more and more money, fund-raising issues should be addressed in ways that are not harmful to the faith and welfare of viewers and contributors, Mickey said.

Mickey believes that many of the people who turn exclusively to television evangelists for spiritual sustenance — such as shut-ins or people who simply choose to stay home and watch — do so because they have no regular contact with a local church.

"Visitation has been a persistent problem at the Divinity School for years; students don't like to visit people in their homes," Mickey said. "They're scared and so they resist it."

Mickey encourages local churches to focus on visitation. On the other hand, he cautions television ministry viewers against donating more of their income than they can afford and against using television ministries as their exclusive spiritual outlets.

"I see the electronic media as supplementary, and I caution against idealizing it against the weaknesses ... of the local church," Mickey said. "The airwaves sanitize it, but there's still just as much gossip and dissenion in Tulsa or Charlotte or Garden Grove as there is in your hometown. You just don't hear it."

Burke Man Charged

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — A 21-year-old Burke County man has been charged with murder in the 1986 Easter weekend stabbing death of a 66-year-old woman, the Hickory Daily Record reported Friday.

Zeb Davis Jr. of Icard, who was in the Watauga County prison for misdemeanor convictions of resisting, delaying and obstructing an officer and non-support of an illegitimate child, was charged Friday with murder in the death of Lillie Pike, whose body was discovered March 30 in her Hickory home. Davis was also charged with burglary.

Rescued Children Moved In Wake Of Threats

By ED BIRK
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Six unidentified children taken from two men believed to be members of a satanic cult were moved from a shelter when officials there received threatening phone calls, police said Saturday.

The cult, known as the Finders, may have been accustomed to selling or smuggling its members' children out of the country, a police spokesman said.

The four boys and two girls were moved to an undisclosed location and were being protected by armed guards after the half-dozen threats were phoned Friday night to a temporary shelter in Tallahassee, said police spokesman Scott Hunt.

"Evidently someone found out where these children were staying, called and said there was going to be physical harm brought to the children," said Hunt, who declined to detail contents of the calls.

"You never want to underestimate the power of somebody who wants to do damage to children," said Hunt. "We didn't anticipate any ... threats against six obviously very forlorn children who were in a very sad state."

Investigators said they did not know if the calls were local or long distance, or if they were made by cult members, said Hunt.

Two men found with the children Wednesday at a Tallahassee playground remained in the Leon County Jail Saturday, charged with one count each of felony child abuse and held in lieu of $100,000 bond each.

Police identified the two as Douglas Edward Ammerman, 27, also known as Kenny Rogers, and Michael Houlihan, 28, also known as Michael Holwell James, James Michael Holwell and at least two other aliases.

The children's identities still had not been confirmed Saturday, police said.,

The men were dressed in coats and ties while the children were in tattered clothing. The children, ranging in age from 2 to 7 years old, had not been bathed in several days, had insect bites and had not been fed in more than a day.

Evidence found in a van at the playground led to a search by District of Columbia police Thursday of a warehouse and a home identified in court documents as having been used by the Finders.

"The search warrant revealed that the organization is probably headquarters for some type of satanic cult," Hunt said Friday. "Adults are encouraged to join this group and one of the stipulations ... is that they give up the rights (to) their children."

The Washington Post reported that police removed bags of color slides and photographs from the warehouse, and that some were of naked children. It quoted unidentified officials of the U.S. Customs Service as saying the material included photos of children involved in bloodletting ceremonies of animalsand one photo of a child in chains.

The Finders evolved from a 1960s hippie refuge on a Virginia farm into a satanist society dedicated to communalism, the newspaper said.

Police also searched a rural house Saturday in Virginia and seized several items, said Virginia state police Lt. J.P. Henries. But no "obvious new evidence of criminal activity was found," Henries said.

Police also were working with the FBI in an effort to learn what information might be stored on about 20 computer floppy disks found in the van in Tallahassee.

Two of the children have claimed that Houlihan is their father, but he has denied any blood relation.

The oldest child was the only one of the group who would talk to police. She said they had been traveling for several days or weeks through various cities but could not say which ones. She said she and the other children had not seen their parents since before Christmas. They had never been to school, she said.

Investigators said the children appeared to be ignorant of such daily conveniences as hot water, electricity, television, an office stapler and telephones, said Hunt.

NO ISOLATION — AIDS victim Ryan White, right, 15, tells a crowd of nearly 900 people at the "AIDS in the Heartland" conference in Indianapolis Saturday that he and other victims need to be protected from isolation. Ryan's mother, Jeanne, left, was a speaker at the conference. (AP Laserphoto)

AIDS Patients, Families Plead For Understanding

By ALAN FLIPPEN
Associated Press Writer

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — AIDS patients and their families called for understanding and contact with victims of the fatal disease Saturday at the second day of an "AIDS In The Heartland Conference."

"Whatever you do, please don't isolate us," Ryan White, 15, said to applause from the crowd of nearly 900.

Ryan attracted national publicity when authorities barred him from Western Middle School in Kokomo after learning of his illness. He won the right to return to school after a protracted court battle.

Marge Miller of Fort Wayne, whose son Stephen died of AIDS in October 1985, spoke of seeing hospital workers cover another AIDS patient with a sheet from head to toe as the patient was taken for X-rays.

"His mother ... thought that he had died," Mrs. Miller said.

The two-day conference sponsored by the Indiana State Board of Health brought together medical professionals and laymen from at least seven states. Friday's sessions dealt largely with medical and legal aspects of the disease.

State Health Commissioner Woodrow A. Myers Jr. worked at San Francisco General Hospital from 1982 to 1984, when AIDS was thought to be a problem limited to a few large cities.

Even then it was obvious that that was not the case, he said.

"Many of these patients were not California natives at all," Myers said. "You'd take their histories and you'd find out that they were natives of Saginaw, Michigan; Columbus, Ohio; or Peru, Indiana. Many of them are coming back now to Indiana, to Ohio, to Michigan — to the heartland."

Most of the victims of acquired immune deficiency syndrome have been homosexual men and one of them, Tom Brennan of Fort Wayne, said even his doctor was squeamish about raising the subject.

Brennan, 39, told of being asked not to come to his family's home in Bowling Green, Ky., for Christmas, and of being told of his sister's death from cancer three weeks after she was buried.

"I suddenly became very aware that I was a leper, that I was marked, that I was different," he said.

Ryan, a hemophiliac who contracted AIDS from infected blood products, and his mother Jeanne White also spoke of the reactions they encounter.

"You get people who back away, who stare a lot," Ryan said.

"A lot of people cough in church. But when Ryan White coughs in church, everybody starts looking around and moving away," Mrs. White said.

Although Ryan has received more publicity than the thousands of male homosexuals who have died of AIDS, Brennan said he is not upset and noted the disease is spreading beyond the homosexual community.

"His story is going to be more typical," Brennan said. "My story is going to become progressively less typical. ... Whatever can get the word out is most important, and I don't really care who or what that is."

As of Feb. 2, AIDS had been diagnosed in 30,396 people in the United States, with 17,338 deaths, according to the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

About 70 percent of the victims have been male homosexuals and 14 percent were intravenous drug abusers who shared infected needles. Eight percent were both gay and drug abusers, and hemophiliacs, recipients of blood transfusions, and people infected through heterosexual contact made up the balance.

Bad Liquor

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (AP) — At least 20 people died and 171 are being treated for poisoning from homemade liquor consumed on Sri Lanka's Independence Day, police said Saturday.

Authorities investigating the mass poisonings said it appeared a moonshiner laced the drink, called "kassipu," with methyl alcohol. Police said they were holding two people for questioning.

Victims were vomiting blood and many were blinded, according to city hospitals in Colombo.

Officials Say Children May Be Tied To Devil Worshipers

By ANITA WOMACK
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Virginia police searched a rural farm Saturday as officials in two states and the District of Columbia tried to unravel the case of six ragged children who the officials said may have been the victims of a devil-worship cult.

The children were taken into custody in Tallahassee, Fla., late Wednesday and two well-dressed men with them were arrested, Florida officials said.

Evidence in a van where the children were found led District of Columbia police to search a home and a warehouse Friday in the nation's capital, where more evidence led to Virginia, the officials said.

Virginia state police and Madison County, Va., sheriff's deputies searched a farm early Saturday about 100 miles southwest of Washington, near Shenandoah National Park. No arrests were made, according to state police Lt. J.P. Henries, who said he did not know the identity of the farm's owners.

"Several items of evidentary nature were seized and they are going to be analyzed. No obvious new evidence of criminal activity was found," Henries said.

"There was no one on the property when we executed the warrants, and some of it had not been inhabited for some time," he added.

District of Columbia police said Saturday they had no new information they could release.

"We are still in the process of analyzing and evaluating the records and documents that were seized during the execution of the two warrants on Thursday night," police spokesman Capt. William White III said.

The 1960s-style commune, known as the Finders, was described in a court document as a "cult" that allegedly conducted "brainwashing" and used children "in rituals."

The children, four boys and two girls ranging in age from 2 to 7 — were put in shelters after they were picked up in Florida, police said. Although the children were dirty and insect-bitten, they were in good spirits and apparently good health.

The two men arrested, Douglas Edward Ammerman, 27, and Michael Houlihan, 28, were being held in the Leon County, Fla., jail in lieu of $100,000 bond each. They were each charged with child abuse.

Tallahassee police said the men claimed to be taking the children to Mexico to start a school for brilliant children, but Hunt said the men were believed to be heading to Bradenton, Fla., where one of the pair may have relatives.

The house where the group was centered in Washington is in the District of Columbia's Glover Park section, an area of middle-class homes near the fashionable Georgetown area.

Neighbors said a number of persons had visited the two-story, colonial-style home saying they were looking for the Chinese embassy.

"They were always Oriental," said Dan Mulholland, a medical student who lives two doors from the home. Mulholland and another medical student, Michael Finger, said they never saw children at the home during the three years the pair have lived in the neighborhood.

But Mulholland added, "There were lots of pregnant women and couples."

On one occasion, a man who was looking for the Finders told Finger that the address had been advertised in Europe as a youth hostel.

Court Says Farms Must Provide Toilets, Water

By ROBERT L. JACKSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — A federal appeals court Friday ordered the Department of Labor promptly to draft requirements that farm workers in the fields be provided with drinking water and toilets, saying they have suffered through a "disgraceful chapter of legal neglect."

In a sharply worded 2-1 ruling, the court gave officials 30 days to set field sanitation standards, which have long been available to workers in factories and offices. The rules will apply to farms with more than 10 workers.

The opinion by the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia climaxed more than 14 years of inaction by the Department of Labor through both Republican and Democratic administrations. A spokesman for Secretary of Labor William E. Brock III said he would decide within the legal limit of 45 days whether to appeal for a rehearing.

Brock generally has been sympathetic to the long protests of migrant farm workers. Last February, for example, he criticized state governments for failing to enact laws of their own to upgrade sanitation standards for migrant workers and pledged that he would issue federal standards by this April if the states failed to act.

Nineteen states have their own field sanitation standards, but those rules could be preempted by new federal regulations if the U.S. rules are more effective, officials said. Federal standards would also apply in states that have not acted on their own.

George Mernick III, who brought the suit on behalf of the Farmworker Justice Fund and other groups, including El Congreso, an organization representing many Latino American field workers, praised the court's decision.

"It means that, finally, after 14 years of delay, farm workers at least get the basic essentials all of us are entitled to, such as toilets and clean drinking water — just the basic human necessities we've all come to expect in our daily lives," Mernick said.

Since the suit was filed in September 1972, the Department of Labor's Occupational Safety and Health Administration has held many public hearings and has come close to issuing field sanitation standards from time to time, only to back off in favor of further delays.

Some OSHA officials have contended that farm health problems are not serious enough to merit federal action and should be left to the states. Some growers and large farm owners have adopted the same position, arguing that the link between field sanitation and disease is unproved.

A panel of public health experts commissioned by the Department of Labor reported two years ago that more than 500,000 American farm workers suffer rates of infection comparable to those of Third World peasants. The panel attributed this to employers' refusal to provide them with drinking water, toilets or a place to wash their hands.

In writing the majority opinion, Chief Judge Patricia M. Wald sided with the public health experts.

"The rule-making record demonstrates beyond dispute that lack of drinking water and toilets causes the spread of contagion, bladder disease and heat-prostration among farm workers," she said. "Yet resistance to issuing the standard, a counterpart of which is already in place for every other OSHA-covered type of employment, has been intractable."

She charged that OSHA has used "an arsenal of administrative law doctrines ... for ricocheting the case between the agency and the courts for over a decade."

National Museum Opens Exhibit Documenting Migration Of Blacks

By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Marjorie Stewart Joyner, at 91, remembers how it felt to be black in the South: the humiliation of being barred from white-only restaurants, the terror of traveling all night through Texas in a railroad baggage car she shared with a coffin.

"There's not an ounce of hatred or animosity in my heart," says Mrs. Joyner, who was a special guest at the preview last week of a poignant new exhibition at the National Museum of American History that mirrors her own life.

The show, representing a breakthrough of sorts for the Smithsonian Institution, documents the mass exodus of blacks from the cotton fields of the South before World War II in search of a better life in the industrial cities of the North.

Mrs. Joyner left rural Virginia when she was a young girl, lived in Dayton, Ohio, for a while and settled in Chicago, where she became a business executive, entertainer, educator and civic, religious and political leader.

Among the exhibition's nearly 400 artifacts, photographs and displays is a reconstruction of Mrs. Joyner's renowned State Street beauty salon. Other displays trace journeys similar to hers, from the rural sharecropper's shack to the grimy, northbound train coach to the front stoop of an urban tenement house.

The show, titled "Field to Factory: Afro-American Migration, 1915-1940," opened Feb. 5 for a year-long engagement here. It is the creation of Spencer Crew, 38, a Smithsonian historian whose own grandfather, Rufus Crew, took his family on a tortuous odyssey that began in South Carolina and ended in Cleveland in 1927.

It wasn't until the show's curator interviewed his aunt while gathering material for the exhibition that he saw a photograph of his grandfather for the first time, along with a snapshot of his father as a child.

"That experience helped give me a sense of continuity, a better sense of myself and the other people in my family's story," Crew said.

The exhibition, he said, "indicates a new direction on the part of the Smithsonian, a broadening of interest in the people who are part of America's history, not just the famous and powerful figures but the diversity of ordinary people — blacks, women, Hispanics, native Americans — who make up this country and its past."

The Smithsonian says the show marks the first time that "an in-depth Smithsonian exhibition has focused on such an important part of America's overall social and demographic history from an Afro-American perspective."

Parked outside the entrance is a symbol of the "field to factory" saga, a shiny black, 1935 Chevrolet sedan with Georgia license plates, battered luggage strapped to the roof and road maps for New Jersey and New York stuck in the dashboard.

Langston Hughes' defiant poem, "One-Way Ticket," is displayed nearby:

"I am fed up
"With Jim Crow laws,
"People who are cruel
"And afraid,
"Who lynch and run,
"Who are scared of me
"And me of them.
"I pick up my life
"And take it away
"On a one-way ticket —
"Gone up North,
"Gone out West,
"Gone!"

Inside are graphic reminders of the hard labor and grinding poverty of blacks in the rural South, made worse by boll weevils and flooding that destroyed cotton crops, cheating landlords, lynchings by hooded Klansmen, inferior schools and omnipresent "Colored Only" signs.

The printed recollections of old-timers seem to tell it best.

"We went barefooted," says Moses Burse of Georgia. "My feet been frostbitten a lot of times. My dad couldn't afford to buy no shoes."

Or James Plunkett of Virginia, recalling the words of a local white official: "We don't stop colored from voting if he want to vote, but a bullet would follow him out the door."

Lured by the promise of high-paying jobs in northern factories, their horizons expanded by military service abroad in World War I, more than 1 million blacks trekked to the North and Midwest by 1940 to find a strange, raucous new life.

Starting in January 1988, an abbreviated version of the "Field to Factory" exhibition will tour museums and universities across the country until late 1990.

Urban Institute Says Racial Integration Increased In '70s

By MARTHA M. HAMILTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Neighborhoods across the nation became more integrated during the 1970s, reversing an increase in racial separation the decade before, according to a study by the Urban Institute.

The analysis of U.S. Census data found that a smaller proportion of blacks and whites now live in extremely segregated neighborhoods. Integration in housing apparently has been propelled by the movement of more prosperous black families to the suburbs.

"The growing tendency towards more segregated living patterns, which has characterized most of the postwar period, has been reversed," according to the study by Ann B. Schnare, director of the Urban Institute's Public Finance and Housing Center, and Scott McKinney of Hobart and William Smith Colleges.

"While housing markets remain highly segregated today, barriers to integration appear to be breaking down," the study said.

The researchers looked at census data for metropolitan areas in 11 states: Alabama, California, Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Louisiana, Massachusetts, North Carolina, New York, Ohio and Texas. Schnare said the results are representative of the trend nationwide.

The study found that the proportion of blacks living in census tracts that were more than 90 percent black increased from 34.8 percent to 38.6 percent between 1960 and 1970 but fell to 31 percent in 1980.

On the other end of the spectrum, the proportion of whites living in all-white neighborhoods — considered those with populations that were less than 1 percent black — fell from 70.7 percent in 1960 to 64.6 percent in 1970 and to 57.2 percent in 1980.

The study also found a shift by black families out of low-income census tracts. The proportion of blacks residing in those tracts dropped from 80 percent to 64 percent between 1970 and 1980, according to the study.

This movement lagged behind gains in income by black families. The median income of non-white families was 64 percent of the median income of white families in 1970, compared with 55 percent in 1960. By 1980, it had dipped to 58 percent.

National legislation prohibiting discrimination in private housing was enacted in 1968, which probably helped accelerate the movement into integrated neighborhoods in the 1970s, the authors speculated.

In addition, "it is probable that a lag exists between the time that a family's income rises and the time that it takes to move from one type of neighborhood to another," the study said.

It also noted evidence that suggests that "the black population became increasingly divided into 'haves' and 'have nots.' As a result, those blacks who remain in highly segregated neighborhoods may have fewer prospects for mobility.

"Since blacks, like whites, are now distributing themselves on the basis of income, segregation by class may be on the rise," the study noted.

Schnare said increased integration reflected the move to the suburbs by blacks rather than the gentrification of inner-city neighborhoods. Other studies have shown that the relative income of cities versus their suburbs in the 100 largest metropolitan areas continued to decline throughout the 1970s, she said.

That suggests that although the movement of more affluent white families into some inner-city neighborhoods has been highly visible, it has had a small impact on housing patterns overall, Schnare said.

The study found that there was more separation between blacks and Anglo whites in metropolitan areas in states with large Hispanic populations, such as Texas and California.

Civil Rights Enforcer Says Racism Is Not Intensifying

By RONALD J. OSTROW
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The government's chief civil rights enforcer said Friday that racism was not on the rise in America and contended that all available data supports that view despite recent well-publicized incidents in Howard Beach, N.Y., and Forsyth County, Ga.

Assistant Attorney General William Bradford Reynolds apparently made his remarks in response to a charge by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., who said earlier in the week that the Reagan administration was creating a climate that encourages discrimination. Reynolds contended that the New York and Georgia incidents were isolated examples of a lingering racial cancer that must be removed before it spreads.

America has always had areas more prone to racial tensions and violence than others, Reynolds told a conference on equal opportunity held by the Orlando, Fla., bar. Likewise, he added, there "long have been individuals amongst us who dress up in robes or other foolish costumes, preach hate and prejudice and engage in violent acts."

"But the geographic areas where such behavior is commonplace are far fewer now than ever before in our history," Reynolds said, "and the size and strength of such hate groups as the Klan, the Aryan Nations, and the like, are much smaller and weaker."

Reynolds attributed the improvement largely to "civil rights law enforcement efforts of the last 20 years, initially most visible at the federal level and later increasingly prominent at the state and local levels."

A Department of Justice spokesman said that Reynolds' remarks were aimed at Kennedy's attack Wednesday on the administration's civil rights policies.

In a sharp clash with Attorney General Edwin Meese III at Senate Judiciary Committee hearings Wednesday, Kennedy accused the administration "of creating a climate that encourages discrimination or repudiates opportunity. Howard Beach and Forsyth County are happening on your watch, Mr. Meese .... What do you intend to do about them?"

Meese, branding Kennedy's comments "a political diatribe," said he considered himself "one of the foremost defenders of civil rights in the United States."

In his speech Friday, Reynolds stressed that it is important "not to overstate the illness" in searching for the cure to such incidents as those that occurred in Forsyth County and in Howard Beach, where a black man was run over on a parkway while being chased by whites.

Reynolds, noting that he had gone to Forsyth County to demonstrate the administration's law enforcement commitment, said that Georgia's state and local police showed "a similar commitment" in protecting marchers there who had been attacked by rock- and bottle-throwing whites in an earlier civil rights march.

"Let us not forget that it was just a few decades ago that state and local law enforcement in much of the South was very much aligned on the other side of the racial issue," he said. The change stands as "a powerful testament to how far we have come in the civil rights struggle."

Bridge Dedicated

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Seven years after a ship rammed the Sunshine Skyway Bridge over Tampa Bay, killing 35 motorists, the span's $250 million successor was dedicated Saturday and opened to thousands of pedestrians.

The new single-span bridge, five years in construction, is the longest cable-stayed, concrete segmental suspension bridge in the world, and the only one of its type in the Western Hemisphere.

The bridge was opened at noon with a parade and crowds of people walked the two-mile incline to the top of the 4.1-mile bridge that connects St. Petersburg and Bradenton on Interstate 275.

Twin cable towers rise 40 stories above the waterline anchoring the bridge's main span, a 1,200-foot-long ribbon of pre-cast concrete slabs 175 feet above the shipping channel linking the nation's seventh busiest port with the Gulf of Mexico.

Crews still have to finish chores such as painting the cables and the center stripes, and the new bridge isn't scheduled to open to traffic until early March.

Construction delays pushed the opening date back from September 1985 and the cost is nearly $50 million above estimates. And a pier protection system to safeguard the bridge from a wayward ship won't be completed until October 1988.

Man Watches As Friends Drown With Sinking Boat

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (AP) — Tears rolled down the cheeks of Jim Sims as he told how he watched four friends and shipmates drown after a charter fishing boat sank, and how one of the four helped him and gave his life for another.

"I knew if I stopped, I would die," the 29-year-old Riverside tile worker recalled during interviews at his home Friday. He credited Tim York, 25, of Huntington Beach, with helping him.

"I've never been much of a swimmer," he said. "I'm overweight. I smoke. Tim's encouragement is what kept me going."

York was one of the last of his companions to drown, he said. He heard York screaming, apparently stricken with cramps, and tried to reach him but couldn't.

Eleven people were aboard the 53-foot Fish-n-Fool when it sank Thursday off the Baja California coastal town of Cabo San Quintin, about 150 miles south-southwest of San Diego.

Only Sims and a crew member survived. The Coast Guard found one body Friday and suspended its search for the others, leaving them presumed dead.

Sims said he spent nearly eight hours in the cold water clinging to a 2-foot-by-2-foot piece of wood before Mexican fishermen heard his shouts and helped him ashore.

Sims said that when a huge wave capsized the San Diego-based boat, he was thrown into the sea and began swimming with York; George Stinson, 40, of Orange; Rusty Paxton, 40, of Riverside; and Ken Baldwin, 65, of Huntington Beach.

Each of the men grabbed a piece of floating wreckage from the vessel and began to swim toward San Martin Island, about five miles away.

But they were quickly separated by the strong current.

"The first one to go was Ken Baldwin," Sims recalled. "He started falling behind. After about an hour, he just disappeared.

"The next one was Rusty. He said he couldn't make it. I tried to encourage him, to keep him going, but when I turned around he was gone."

After another hour or so, Sims said, he could see only Stinson and York. Both were clinging to an ice chest.

"We were kicking hard, trying to get ashore," Sims said. "Suddenly a current caught us.

"Tim knew the ice chest couldn't hold them both any longer. So he left the chest for George. And he swam over to me. He told me not to give up ... to keep going ... and he got out in front."

Then Sims heard York's screams.

"Tim gave his life for George," Sims said. But George also slipped from sight.

He eventually spotted lights on the island and yelled to the Mexican fishermen who saved him. "If they hadn't come out, I wouldn't have made it," Sims said. "I owe them my life, and I don't even know their names."

Cathy Compton, 38, of San Diego, a crew member, was the other survivor. She was rescued by a Coast Guard helicopter crew about 10 miles south of Cabo San Quintin late Thursday as she clung to four life rafts lashed together.

Only Stinson's body was recovered.

Stan Simants, an employee of H&M Sportfishing, said the Fish-n-Fool was owned by Gary Lamont of Spring Valley, who was aboard when the wave struck. The other passengers were believed to be friends of his.

Senator Backs Up, Saying: 'I Blew It'

L.A. Times-Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Tex., acknowledging a "doozy" of a mistake, Friday announced that he has dissolved his $10,000 breakfast club for lobbyists and will return all contributions.

"I'm not known to make many mistakes, but when I do, it's a doozy, and in forming the breakfast club, I really blew it," the new chairman of the Senate Finance Committee said in a statement issued by his office.

"I did not anticipate the perception of it. The last thing I want is anything that would reflect on my integrity. The club will be disbanded today. The contributions to the campaign will be returned to the contributors," he declared.

At a meeting Jan. 29, Bentsen offered about 200 lobbyists and political action committee directors the chance to meet with him for breakfast once a month if they would contribute $10,000 for his reelection campgaign. Disclosure of the event, and the fact that at least 40 people agreed to give $10,000 each, produced widespread adverse publicity.

Despite Benten's announcement, three other senators who have formed clubs or councils for major Washington contributors and fund-raisers indicated that they plan to continue to provide lobbyists and PAC officials with special meetings.

At a news conference, Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., who set up a group similar to Bentsen's, said he does not plan to disband the group of at least 67 lobbyists and PAC directors who have agreed to provide $10,000 each for Byrd's reelection.

A proponent of major campaign reforms, Byrd said, "I am also a realist." He said that "in this effort, I am working within the law. ... The only way I can change it (the law) is to be reelected."

Spokesmen for two Republican members of the Senate Finance Committee, John H. Chafee of Rhode Island and William V. Roth Jr. of Delaware, indicated they intend to continue their clubs for those willing to raise $5,000.

"I don't know that the senator (Roth) has considered (canceling). I don't know that (Bentsen's announcement) would make a difference," a spokesman for Roth said. "I really don't see any reason to (cancel)," Robert Hurley, Chafee's administrative assistant, said. "We don't see any compelling reason to disband" the group, which meets about four times a year for breakfasts at the exclusive Metropolitan Club in Washington.

Hurley supplied a partial list of those who go to the Chafee breakfasts, including Gael M. Sullivan, lobbyist for the LTV Corp.; John H.F. Hoving, whose firm's clients include Eagle-Picher Industries and the government of Liberia; William T. Kendall, whose clients include Toyota and the Manville Corp; and Mark Gorman of General Mills Corp.

A spokesman for former Senate Finance Committee chairman Bob Packwood, R-Ore., said he has not revived his $5,000 breakfast club since his re-election last November.

Asked if Packwood, who has $692,291 left over in his campaign fund, would consider returning the contributions as Bentsen plans, the spokesman said, "Absolutely not. We are not going to return the money. That's not even under consideration."

Tests Still Incompete

Coroner Says Liberace Had Been Exposed To AIDS Virus

By MARK EVJE
Associated Press Writer

INDIO, Calif. (AP) — Liberace was exposed to the AIDS virus, but tests of tissue samples were inconclusive Saturday on whether the flamboyant pianist died of the disease, officials said.

The body of the 67-year-old entertainer, who died Wednesday, was entombed Saturday in private services at Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Los Angeles.

The tests, which involve microscopic tissue studies and which will reveal whether Liberace had AIDS, will be completed Monday, said Riverside County Coroner Raymond Carrillo. Results will be released that afternoon, he said.

Medical records obtained under subpoena from Eisenhower Medical Center showed Liberace tested positive in January for exposure to the AIDS virus, said Supervising Coroner's Investigator Sabas Rosas. But it was not known whether he actually had the disease, Rosas said.

An autopsy conducted Friday, however, did not reveal any sign of the AIDS virus, which is why coroner's officials are awaiting the toxicological studies, Carrillo said.

"They will determine whether he had AIDS or just had the virus. That's why we're hesitant to bring this whole thing up," Carrillo said.

Carrillo said results were delayed because the tests were being conducted by a private laboratory in Colton, in neighboring San Bernardino County. Riverside County has no facilities for the tests, he said.

The autopsy was performed after Carrillo rejected a doctor's certificate that attributed the death to congestive heart failure stemming from an inflammation of the brain.

Liberace's personal physician of 15 years, Dr. Elias Ghanem of Las Vegas, on Saturday disputed the reliability of the Riverside autopsy and said he hoped to make a statement soon "that will clear everything up."

"There's no way they can determine the cause of death from that type of autopsy," Ghanem said, declining further comment.

Democrat Discourages Efforts To Tighten Controls Over CIA

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, at least for now, is discouraging proposals to drastically tighten congressional oversight of the CIA and predicting continued increases in the agency's budget.

"As long as they treat me right, I am going to be their greatest advocate," says Sen. David Boren, a roundish Democrat who jokingly credits his jovial manner to happy days spent in the oil fields of his native Oklahoma.

"But the first time they don't tell me something that they should have, when they have reason to trust me, then there will be hell to pay," he said in an interview with The Associated Press.

In the third year of his second six-year term, the 45-year-old Boren is one of the most junior committee chairmen in the Senate. His style is marked more by conciliation than confrontation, and he is among the most conservative Democrats elected to the Senate in recent years.

Boren may have spent time in the oil fields around his hometown of Seminole in the heart of Oklahoma petroleum production, but little of it was as a roughneck, according to associates from his home state. Boren's father, Lyle H. Boren, served five terms in the House of Representatives from 1936-46, and he had an extensive education, winning two advanced degrees.

Boren said he got worried about the decline in U.S. intelligence when he was assured in early 1979 by a senior official in the Carter administration that Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi would ride out the storm.

"Practically the next day, the shah was on a plane out of the country," and Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was soon in power, Boren said.

"I think we have seen a steady improvement since that debacle," said Boren, citing "significant" increases in the amount of money that Congress allocates the intelligence community.

The rising budget has boosted morale, driving the number of young CIA applicants "up, up, up," he said. The size of the budget and the number of people employed by the CIA and other spy agencies are classified, although congressional sources say the overall intelligence budget has doubled since 1977.

Improvements in U.S. capability since the late 1970s, Boren said, convince him that "we have an overall intelligence capability that is second to none. This is one area where we have a clear superiority over the Soviet Union."

But advances on the technical side, such as reconnaissance satellites that photograph Soviet military installations, have outstripped efforts to attract people able to interpret such photographs or to speak exotic languages, Boren said.

"Human intelligence is a problem," he said. "It took a while after the Vietnam era to get over the image that somehow, you couldn't be a decent person and still be in intelligence. That is waning."

"To stay ahead, we are still going to have to keep up with increases that will exceed the rate of inflation," he said, pledging to cooperate with President Reagan's efforts to further build U.S. intelligence capability.

"NOTICE"

SUBJECT: CITY OF GREENVILLE SIGN ORDINANCE

On November 13, 1986, the City Council adopted a new Sign Ordinance (Ordinance No. 1667) affecting all signs within City of Greenville corporate limits and extraterritorial jurisdiction. Ordinance No. 1667 stipulates that all temporary signs must be removed within six (6) months of the effective date but no later than May 13, 1987. Temporary signs defined by this Ordinance include but are not limited to:

1. Signs made of paper, cloth, polyethylene film or other similar material
2. Signs which are not permanently affixed to the ground or a building surface in a manner approved by the Building Inspector
3. Trailer signs
4. Portable signs
5. Banners, flags or similar devices

The Ordinance does, however, allow the use of one temporary sign per lot not exceeding six (6) square feet, provided it violates no other applicable regulations.

This notice has been prepared by the Engineering and Inspections Department to allow you ample time to remove the above-mentioned temporary signs on or before the applicable date of May 13, 1987 so as to come into compliance with the new City of Greenville Sign Ordinance. Failure to do so may result in enforcement action including the issuance of Civil Citations of $50 per day, each day being a separate offense in the matter. Should you have any questions, please contact the Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137, extension 221.

Expelled Reporter Spends First Day At Secret Location In Switzerland

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Reporter Gerald F. Seib of The Wall Street Journal spent his first full day of freedom at a secret location Saturday after being detained in Iran as a suspected spy for nearly a week.

Seib, an American based in Cairo, arrived in Switzerland from Tehran on Friday, his 31st birthday, and told reporters his release was the "best birthday present possible." He was joined by his wife, Barbara Rosewicz.

Swiss and American officials said they did not know the couple's whereabouts. The New York Times on Saturday quoted unidentified U.S. officials as saying the couple would remain in Switzerland for a day or two.

Seib went to Iran at the government's invitation Jan. 21 to tour the Iran-Iraq war front with 56 other foreign correspondents. He was arrested Jan. 31 in Tehran and released Wednesday to the Swiss Embassy, which handles U.S. interests in Iran. The other journalists left as scheduled.

"I am still not sure why I was detained or how I was released. All I know is that any suggestion I was involved in any kind of espionage is completely false. I am a journalist and that is all I am," Seib said in a statement read to reporters after his arrival from Tehran.

Seib, looking pale but well-groomed, said he suffered no physical harm while being detained and that he felt "just fine."

He asked news media to "respect our desire for privacy," and was whisked away with his wife, also a reporter for The Wall Street Journal, by two escorts who refused to identify themselves. Seib shrugged off shouted questions, including ones about his further travel plans.

The day Seib was detained, Iran's official Islamic Republic News Agency said a "spy of the Zionist regime" was arrested after entering the country with a false passport, in the guise of a journalist.

In his statement Friday, Seib said: "I was in Iran as an invited reporter on a valid U.S. passport along with more than 50 other reporters from around the world, simply doing my job."

Iranian officials said Wednesday the decision to "expel" Seib was made after completion of a "judicial probe into his case" and he would be barred from the country permanently.

No details of the inquiry or its findings were released, but Seib apparently was cleared of the allegations.

There was speculation that his detention was the result of factional fighting within Iran's leadership.

In Washington, White House spokesman Martin Fitzwater hailed Seib's release and said the United States considered his detention "unjustified."

Switzerland had looked after Seib and served as a go-between in Tehran in efforts to secure his release. The United States cut diplomatic ties with Iran in 1980 over the hostage crisis.

Dentist Tests Police Efficiency, And Loses

PORTAGE, Mich. (AP) — A small-town dentist with no criminal record created a phony identity and wrote thousands of dollars in bad checks — all, he says, to prove how ineffective police are in fighting crime.

Instead, Dr. Victor Bigford wound up with a felony record and, perhaps, a stint in jail.

"I guess I haven't proved as much as I thought," said Bigford, 55, who practices dentistry in the rural southwest Michigan town of Berrien Springs. "I guess they can prosecute and punish people when they want to."

Portage police say Bigford wrote $9,000 in bad checks last year while using a phony identity, even fashioning a bridge of false teeth to alter his appearance.

Bigford estimates his bad-check total at $5,000, and said he paid it all back.

He was arrested Sept. 16 on a charge of writing a bad check for $267 at a Sears store. He eventually pleaded no contest and faces up to 13 months in jail and a $500 fine when sentenced Feb. 17. A charge of perjury for having a false driver's license was dropped.

After he got caught, Bigford told police he was researching a book on crime called "The Crook Book," said Mark Courtade, Kalamazoo County assistant prosecutor.

"He brought a manuscript down," Courtade said. "It explained how to change a birth date, get a different Social Security number, things like that." Courtade described the manuscript as elaborate and said it seemed to have been worked on for a long time.

But Courtade said whatever Bigford's motives, the crime binge wasn't a harmless lark. Bigford didn't reimburse store owners for the bad checks until the day after police told him that he was a suspect, he added.

But Bigford said he had planned to pay off the checks all along.

The whole plot, he said, stemmed from his frustration from being victimized over the years by bad checks, burglaries and failed business deals that he says were fraudulent. No arrests were ever made, he said.

Reagan Seeks State Help With Welfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, arguing that America "can and must do better" for its poor, invited the nation's governors on Saturday to support dramatic changes in the welfare program that would give states a bigger role.

Reagan, kicking off a weeklong focus on welfare reform in his radio address, termed the nation's poverty assistance program a "long and sorry tale of disappointment" that has sapped the energy and self-respect of millions of Americans.

In his five-minute Oval Office speech, Reagan announced that he has invited the nation's governors to the White House on Feb. 23 to discuss the idea of welfare reform suggested in his State of the Union address. Reagan also said his administration will release a report on the welfare system later this week that outlines the role states might play.

The president said the nation's anti-poverty program, while set up with the best intentions, is a failure because it has not been able to make citizens independent of the federal government.

As the government began to spend billions on welfare programs, Reagan said, "poverty stopped shrinking and actually began to grow worse. For the first time in our nation's history, millions of Americans became virtual wards of the state, trapped in a cycle of welfare dependency that robs them of dignity and opportunity."

Reagan pledged to make "dramatic changes in the old, unworkable government programs" and to suggest ways to bolster the virtues of family and the individual work ethic.

"We're too great a nation — too generous of heart, too bold in finding solutions — to permit this waste of lives and money to continue," Reagan said.

In his letter to the governors that was released by the White House shortly after the radio address, the president called welfare reform "a top national priority." But he also emphasized that he envisions a lesser role for the federal government.

"We can and must do better," Reagan wrote.

"It is clear from 20 years' experience that no single policy mandated from Washington can solve this problem," Reagan said. "Our goal instead must be to establish a process that allows states and communities to implement their own anti-poverty ideas based on their own unique circumstances."

The president said the federal govrnment "must retain its current level of financing," but individual states and communities would be the ones who would "find the solutions to welfare dependency."

Reagan told the governors, "Together we must persuade Congress to provide you the tools necessary to create a better life for Americans in need."

In his address to Congress last month, Reagan proposed to let states experiment with individualized, community-based welfare programs.

Democrats have attacked Reagan's proposal, decrying Reagan's plan as experimentation rather than reform.

Sen. Patrick Moynihan, D-N.Y., has suggested replacing the welfare program with a child-support system that relies primarily on parental support. Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., is drafting legislation to reward job-training programs that successfully place long-term welfare recipients.

Philippine Rebels Say Peace Effort Is Failure, Declare Truce Is Over

By PETER ENG
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — Communist rebels declared President Corazon Aquino's peace initiative a failure on Saturday, one day after they killed five soldiers in an attack and one day before a 60-day cease-fire formally expired.

Armed forces chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos promised to hit hard at rebels who resume fighting their 18-year insurrection.

The cease-fire that took effect in December was to expire at noon Sunday. But the rebels, who pulled out of national-level peace negotiations on Jan. 30, declared an early end to the truce.

The government's Philippine News Agency said insurgents assaulted an army camp in the northern province of Kalinga Apayao on Friday, killing five soldiers and wounding five.

The Communists said Saturday their decision was a "temporary closure" of avenues toward peace. But it dealt a major blow to Mrs. Aquino's efforts to resolve the insurgency. She has made the pursuit of peace the cornerstone of her national reconciliation policy.

"The initial peace negotiations have failed and responsibility for the failure rests with the government side," said a statement from the National Democratic Front, the Communist-led organization that represented the 23,500-strong New People's Army in national-level peace negotiations.

The statement was signed by chief rebel negotiator Satur Ocampo, Antonio Zumel and Rololfo Salas.

"We call on the people's organizations to wage militant and unremitting struggles on all fronts for their patriotic and democratic interests," it said.

Government officials could not been reached late Saturday for comment.

Ramos said Friday that regional cease-fire contacts would be respected by the armed forces as long as rebels did not violate them.

"After deep reflection on the conduct of the peace talks and the implementation of the 60-day preliminary cease-fire agreement, we are convinced that the Aquino government is not serious about a durable and just peace," the Communist statement said.

Mrs. Aquino told a religious rally earlier Friday: "Let us all pray that a permanent and honorable peace will come to our land (and that) not give in to the impulses of fear and despair."

She did not refer directly to the rebels.

Friday's attack brought to at least 22 the number of people killed in renewed fighting since the Democratic Front ended a month of fruitless negotiations Jan. 30.

The military said late last year that more than 16,000 people died in insurgency-related incidents from 1979 to 1985.

The Philippine News Agency quoted Brig. Gen. Manuel S. Avila, the northern regional commander, as vowing full-scale operations against the rebels after the cease-fire lapsed.

Chief government negotiator Teofisto Guingona said in an interview with radio station DZMM Saturday that the government will try to sustain peace talks with regional guerrilla groups.

The Communist statement said: "We cannot see any justification for extending the cease-fire agreement which (government forces) blatantly subverted and violated.

"The Armed Forces of the Philippines took advantage of the concessions we granted and of its overwhelming military superiority to try to push back the New People's Army from its previously held positions."

The Democratic Front said it could not resume talks while "the Commander-in-Chief of the armed forces herself tolerates and coddles a military ... which has brazenly flouted the peace process and whose intensifying factionalism is becoming more difficult to control."

The statement blamed the military for killing 12 leftist protesters in Manila on Jan. 22 and in the killing of two demonstrators in Bataan province west of the capital on Jan. 30.

The rebels rejected government insistence that the talks be based on reform programs outlined in the new constitution which Filipino voters approved in a plebiscite last Monday. They called the document "woefully inadequate."

The Communists said they would return to the negotiating table only if the government pursued social reforms, controlled and reformed the armed forces, and tried to resolve military and political conflict.

The Commission on Elections on Saturday reported that 76.29 percent of Filipinos who cast ballots Monday voted to approve the new charter. The commission had tallied almost 21.8 million ballots and had fewer than a half million left to count.

The constitution provides for a six-year term for Mrs. Aquino without new presidential elections. She took power in February 1986 following a civilian-military uprising that ousted Ferdinand E. Marcos as president.

Marcos, who had governed for 20 years, lives in exile in Hawaii.

Soviet Forces Capture Afghan Mountain Pass

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Soviet and Afghan soldiers recaptured a key mountain pass in eastern Afghanistan after a fierce battle with anti-Marxist guerrillas, sources said Saturday.

At least 200 people were killed or wounded on both sides in the fight for Sinakai Pass and the surrounding Manau Kandau hills in Paktia province in eastern Afghanistan, said guerrilla officials based in Pakistan.

The Islamic guerrillas said 24 of their fighters were killed and more than 80 wounded. The guerrillas routinely understate their losses.

More than 10,000 Soviet and Afghan troops on Wednesday launched an offensive to retake the pass, which was captured by guerrillas last month and is part of a key supply route from Pakistan into Afghanistan.

Soviet and Afghan air force jets and artillery pounded guerrilla positions.

The Afghan Information Center, which monitors events in Afghanistan from neighboring Pakistan and is not linked with the guerrillas, confirmed Saturday that Soviet and Afghan forces had taken Sinakai.

A official, who spoke on condition of anonymity, called it a major victory for the rebels.

Scattered clashes were reported in Paktia province Saturday, said guerrilla officials, who also spoke on condition of anonymity. They said Soviet and Afghan forces were building fortifications to defend the pass and seal the border.

The guerrillas have about 2,500 fighters in Paktia. They still hold a chain of fortified bases in Zhawar area of Paktia province, about 20 miles from the Pakistani border. The bases serve as operational centers for bringing weapons and supplies across the border.

Soviet and Afghan forces bombarded guerrilla bases during the week, and guerrilla officials said they anticipated a major offensive against the fortifications.

The offensive in Paktia is the first major military operation by Afghanistan's Soviet-backed Communist government since it declared a unilateral cease-fire Jan. 15.

Guerrilla leaders rejected the cease-fire and vowed to fight until the government was destroyed and the estimated 115,000 Soviet troops in Afghanistan left the country.

The government, which seized power in an April 1978 military coup, rarely allows Western journalists into Afghanistan and reports from inside the country cannot as a rule be checked independently.

Police Shoot Suspect

LONDON (AP) — Police staked out at an arts museum shot and killed one robbery suspect, wounded another and arrested five men for questioning, authorities said Saturday.

The shootings occurred Friday night at Sir John Soane's Museum in central London, which houses the famous eight canvases of "A Rake's Progress" by the 18th-century English master William Hogarth. Nothing was stolen.

Police Commander Richard Wells said five officers on the stakeout were inside the museum after closing when two men entered, one brandishing a shotgun and shouting what Wells called "violent threats."

Gorbachev Changing West's View Of Soviets

By ANDREW ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — In less than two years, Mikhail S. Gorbachev's Kremlin has shaken the nation's slumbering economy, declared war on bureaucracy, loosened some cultural bonds and challenged the way outsiders have viewed the Soviets for decades.

In actions probably unthinkable more than a year ago, Gorbachev released dissidents in prisoner swaps with the West, removed Nobel laureate Andrei Sakharov from internal exile and allowed the release of a film that deals critically with the Stalin purges.

Especially striking is the way Gorbachev has loosened the seal of secrecy around Soviet life, allowed artists, writers and actors their first taste of relative freedom in 20 years and debunked some historical taboos.

He has displayed personal confidence in throwing out a challenge to the administrative and political apparatus and a sense of public relations unmatched by previous Kremlin leaders.

Many Soviets speak positively about the changing atmosphere, although their optimism is tempered by caution born of seeing earlier hopes dashed. While dramatic, Gorbachev's moves have have had only limited impact on the daily lives of the nation's 280 million citizens.

Gorbachev, who came to power in March 1985, is not the first Soviet leader to talk of change and it's too early to judge his sincerity.

The 55-year-old Communist Party leader regularly offers reminders that whatever comes out of his new era, it will fit into the mold created by Vladimir I. Lenin, toughened by Josef Stalin but changed little by subsequent leaders.

His goal, Gorbachev told an American delegation last week, "is more socialism and more democracy. It is not renunciation of the socalist system — let nobody have any hopes for this."

Some Soviets and Westerners believe Gorbachev's adherence to the Marxist-Leninist pattern may frustrate ambitious reforms.

For outsiders, many dramatic changes have come in the Kremlin approach to human rights and emigration.

The Kremlin last year released dissidents Anatoly Shcharansky and Yuri Orlov in prisoner swaps and allowed Andrei Sakharov, the 1975 Nobel Peace Prize winner and dean of the 1970s dissident movement, to return to Moscow from his exile in the closed city of Gorky.

On Saturday dissident sources said Soviet authorities have freed another 42 political prisoners, the largest group to be released in more than three decades.

All of this, including the freedom of expression given to Sakharov in Moscow, would have been unthinkable a year ago.

But it's not clear if the Kremlin is displaying new tolerance of dissent or simply a realization it can resolve with relative ease specific cases that have troubled its relations with the West.

Soviet officials mostly continue to dismiss dissidents, religious activists and would-be emigres as criminals, traitors and tools of Western intelligence.

In addition, reported offers of freedom for some imprisoned dissidents are said to be contingent on their leaving the country.

Some of these people never sought to emigrate, but the Kremlin appears to have learned that dissidents abroad are less damaging to its image than dissidents in labor camps.

The new policy is not consistent. Naum Meiman, a former member of Moscow's Helsinki human rights group, still cannot leave the country, even though his cancer-stricken wife has been sent to the United States for treatment.

Soviet officials late last year announced new, "more humane" emigration rules.

However, some are more restrictive than before and institutionalize what activists say are artificial barriers, including the required invitation from a close relative living abroad.

Samuil Zivs, a government spokesman on Jewish emigration, said 500 visa permits were approved in January and 10,000 cases were under review. But Western reports said only 98 people actually left last month.

Under Gorbachev, the state-run printing establishment has published its first works by emigre author Vladimir Nabokov. The media have recognized the Nobel Prize in literature awarded to Boris Pasternak in 1958 for the banned novel "Doctor Zhivago."

In 1979, Viktor Yerofeyev was barred from the writers union for publishing the underground literary journal, "Metropol." He recently published some literary criticism, but still cannot publish his own prose and poetry.

Some young avant-garde artists have been allowed to exhibit their paintings in official halls, but only for a day or a few hours. They cannot join the Union of Artists, which they must do to earn a legal living from their work.

The Kremlin appears ready to give its blessing to some great emigre artists and performers.

There have been reports Soviet officials are trying to woo back avant-garde theater director Yuri Lyubimov and to arrange visits by ballet dancer Mikhail Baryshnikov and cellist Mstislav Rostropovich.

But pianist Vladimir Feltsman, stripped of his position as a Moscow symphony soloist when he applied to emigrate, still cannot play in major halls in the capital.

Part of the cultural process is the careful rewriting of official history to deal publicly with periods that had been erased from the books. The recently released film, "Confession," deals allegorically with the Stalin purges of the 1930s.

In assessing this cultural ferment, many Soviet intellectuals recall the famed "thaw" cut short by Khrushchev's fall in 1964.

"The point is that once you allow the voice to speak, then it will be heard," Yevegeny Pasternak, son of the famed author, said in an interview. "The pressure for more change increases, and all in public."

Soviet Dancers Begin U.S. Tour

NEW HARMONY, Ind. (AP) — The visit of Soviet dance students to the United States and this placid town, home of two 19th century Utopian societies, may help improve relations between the two countries, says a backer of the tour.

"I know this is only a tiny drop in the bucket, but if it leads to something else then we're really accomplishing good here," said Jane B. Owen, a Texas heiress who donated $10,000 to help pay for the trip.

The two-week tour by teen-age members of the Perm Dance Ensemble begins Sunday and includes stops in Washington, New York, Indianapolis and Lancaster, Pa. Their four-day visit to New Harmony, a town of 945 people in the southwest corner of the state, begins Saturday.

The 22-member troupe, from the city of Perm about 600 miles east of Moscow, will perform Lithuanian folk dances and excerpts from "Swan Lake," "Raimonda," "Giselle" and "Coppelia."

The school has had a reputation for excellence since the 1940s, when dancers from Leningrad's Kirov ballet moved to Perm during World War II.

The trip is sponsored by the Friendship Ambassadors Foundation of Upper Montclair, N.J., a private group that organizes cultural exchanges of U.S. and Soviet performers.

Mrs. Owen said the visit to New Harmony is appropriate because of its Utopian history.

George Rapp led a group of dissident German Lutherans to the area in 1814. Known as Rappites and Harmonists, they practiced celibacy and a communal way of life and believed the end of the world was near.

Rapp sold the community 10 years later to Robert Owen, a Welsh-born industrialist, who also tried a communal venture for two years with intellectuals from several fields. New Harmony became known as a leading center in child education, geological research and feminism.

The dance students' New Harmony schedule includes three performances interspersed with some tours, a square dance, a picnic and a meeting with local elementary and high school students.

Just over 50,000 people visited the tranquil community last year, said Jim Sanders, director of Historic New Harmony, a division of the University of Southern Indiana that oversees the preservation area.

Mrs. Owen said she hopes the dancers will return to the Soviet Union with positive impressions about America.

"We just want them to go back and tell everyone they know about the good things in this country," she said. "Human relations are too important to be left to government officials. And what better place to start than in New Harmony?"

Canada Caught In Squeeze Over Nazis

By JEFF BRADLEY
Associated Press Writer

TORONTO (AP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's Conservative government faces a cross-fire within its diverse population in handling accusations that Canada harbors more than 500 Nazi war criminals.

On one side are Canada's 300,000 Jews, whose leaders have been pressing for action against war criminals for years.

On the other are the country's East European minorities, including about 800,000 Ukrainians strongly opposed to any special Nazi-hunting operation.

Most of the 575 suspects whose names were given to the Commission on War Criminals, headed by Quebec Superior Court Judge Jules Deschenes, came from the Ukraine, the Baltic republics and other parts of Eastern Europe.

Anxious not to stir up animosities between the two sides, the government has pledged to publish and respond to the findings of the commission's two-year inquiry into the problem within weeks.

"If the government does its job, then there's no question that a majority of these cases could be proven," said Sol Littman, Canadian representative of the Simon Wiesenthal organization, which hunts Nazi war criminals around the world.

Littman's group compiled the list of suspects, which includes a Lithuanian accused of taking part in the July 1941 mass murder of 2,000 Jews in the town of Plunge; members of Arajs Commando, a volunteer murder squad that killed thousands of Jews in Latvia; recruits to the Ukrainian SS; an Estonian concentration camp guard; and a priest who was a Gestapo agent.

Others allegedly informed on partisans, revealed Jewish hiding places, rounded up Jews and Gypsies and joined the Nazi Einsatzkommando execution squads that slaughtered 1.5 million Jews on Soviet territory.

Most suspects belonged to anti-Semitic, pro-Nazi, fascist political movements before the war, Littman said in an interview.

Since 1979, the United States has been prosecuting alleged war criminals, most of them Eastern European, on charges of violating U.S. immigration laws. Thirteen have been deported.

As in the United States, "enemy aliens," including war criminals, were barred from entering Canada after World War II.

But because of a global need to accept Europe's refugees and displaced persons, Canada relaxed its controls and the flood of applicants made it difficult to screen out undesirables. Apporoximately 2.5 million Europeans were admitted from 1945-67.

Among them were up to 2,000 members of the Ukrainian Waffen SS, who were allowed to emigrate in 1951 because of the certain death they faced if returned to the Soviet Union.

"The presence of Nazi war criminals in Canada is an affront to conscience, a moral stain, a betrayal of survivors," Irwin Cotler, counsel to the Canadian Jewish Congress, told Deschenes.

Canada's options include:

—Establishing a permanent Nazi-hunting unit like the U.S. Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations;

—Negotiating extradition treaties with Israel and the Soviet Union;

—Amending Canada's laws so the accused can be prosecuted here for war crimes;

—Or, it can do nothing.

Some members of Mulroney's Conservative Party want the Deschenes report shelved following complaints by Ukrainian-Canadians and other East European groups who fear they may be targeted unfairly or subjected to tainted Soviet evidence because of their staunch anti-communism.

"Canada doesn't need a witch-hunting brigade like the Americans have because it would only cause anger and panic in East European communities," said Conservative legislator Andrew Witer, who is of Ukrainian descent.

Concerned groups include immigrants from the former republics of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, whose annexation by the Soviet Union in 1940 is not recognized by Canada. Most welcomed the 1941 German invasion of their Soviet-occupied homelands, only to see their dream of independence dashed by Nazi brutality.

"Anyone in Europe who survived had to collaborate with the Nazis," said John Gregorovich, a Toronto lawyer and chairman of the Ukrainian Canadian Committee's Civil Liberties Commission. "But collaboration is not a war crime."

Gregorovich concedes that war criminals probably slipped through lax postwar screening. But he said he is unaware of conclusive evidence against any individual, and said some have been accused unfairly.

"The Soviets accuse everyone who was against them of being a war criminal," he said.

The Ukrainians feel vulnerable because many joined German units to fight the communists, who engineered a famine in the Ukraine in the early 1930s.

But Littman says the Ukrainians, like other occupied peoples, had choices.

"They rushed to don arm bands and volunteered to join SS units whose main job was to police behind the lines. They made a deliberate choice. They made a league with the devil."

Littman said his group's evidence comes from accounts written by Nazi officers and Holocaust survivors, the files of postwar investigators, foreign war-crime court records, hundreds of witnesses, shipping logs, Red Cross refugee lists and immigration records.

Most of Canada's original immigration files have been destroyed.

Seoul Riot Police Battle With Protesters In Streets

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Tens of thousands of riot police fought for hours with anti-government protesters Saturday in the streets of Seoul, firing tear gas to prevent a memorial rally for a student tortured to death by police.

Clashes were also reported in the major cities of Pusan and Kwangju.

News reports said dozens of people, including 12 police officers, were injured across South Korea. Police said 551 people in all were detained.

Thousands of demonstrators, chanting and hurling rocks, confronted rank upon rank of police officers wearing gas masks and plastic helmets in the broad thoroughfares of this capital city of 10 million people.

The crack of tear gas canisters sounded as crowds swirled through the streets, dispersed and regrouped. Stinging fumes floated over a wide area, sending demonstrators and passers-by fleeing with eyes and noses streaming.

A local newspaper estimated that about 20,000 people took part in the Seoul demonstration. Other reports said about 70,000 police had been mobilized across the country, and that about 37,000 of them were deployed in the capital.

The memorial rallies were called to mark the Jan. 14 death of Park Jong-chul, a 21-year-old Seoul National University student. An official investigation showed Park died after his throat was pressed against a bathtub during questioning by police about anti-government activities. He was undergoing water torture.

Clashes on Saturday against the government of President Chun Doo-hwan began around 1 p.m. and continued sporadically until about 6 p.m. in a 10-block block area. By nightfall, clouds of tear gas hung over the downtown area and the streets were littered with rocks, broken bottles and spent tear gas canisters.

Later, the opposition New Korea Democratic Party said in a statement that the police had created a situation in which "our anger at the present regime (is) no longer bearable."

Opposition leaders had scheduled a 2 p.m. rally and memorial service at Myungdong Cathedral. The government declared the rally illegal and police Friday sealed off the area around the cathedral.

Demonstrators converged on the cathedral from different directions Saturday, but were pushed back by police.

At one point, more than 100 demonstrators attacked two police substations with stones and bottles, and a police bus was set afire.

Police responded by firing tear gas, punching and kicking protesters and dragging them away to buses.

Yonhap News Agency said about 500 students clashed with police in a theater area for 10 minutes, hurling 40 fire bombs. Police replied by firing 200 rounds of tear gas, it said.

At the cathedral, priests and nuns held a memorial Mass attended by hundreds if people who came before barricades went up or who slipped through police lines.

Demonstrators held impromptu services in the streets, holding black-ribboned pictures of the slain student, praying and singing funeral songs.

Lee Min-woo, the 71-year-old president of the New Korea Democratic Party, gathered with supporters for lunch in the basement of a big hotel.

HEALTH TIPS!
BRONCHITIS
Bronchitis - an inflammation of the bronchial tubes (the air passage that extends from the windpipe into the lung) which may be caused by smoking, air pollution and viral or bacterial infections.
Acute bronchitis often evolves from a severe cold, it may also follow or accompany the flu, or it may begin without having had an infection. Acute bronchitis usually lasts about 10 days, severe cases may cause chest pain and fever, as well as cough.
Chronic bronchitis is defined as excessive mucus secretion in the bronchi and a chronic or recurrent mucus-producing cough, that lasts 3-4 months and recurs year after year. In diagnosing chronic bronchitis, it is important to rule out heart disease, lung infection, cancer and other disorders that may produce bronchitis-like symptoms. There is no doubt that cigarette smoking is the chief cause of chronic bronchitis. When the so-called smokers cough has become constant rather than occasional, the likelihood exists that mucus producing layer of the bronchial lining may have tissue damage.
Suffering from a series of acute bronchitis attacks and heavy smoking can result in chronic bronchitis. A physician should be consulted when sputum produced by coughing is greenish-yellow and thick rather than gray and watery, or when a fever rises and chest pain is present. Chronic bronchitis may be life threatening.

Paintings Reportedly Losing Their 'Spirit'

Critics Say Michelangelo's Work Being Ruined As Vatican Cleans Up

By STEPHEN R. WILSON
Associated Press Writer

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Halfway through the cleaning of Michelangelo's frescoes in the Sistine Chapel, Vatican restorers are tackling the "Fall and the Expulsion" and brushing off critics who say the Renaissance masterpiece is being ruined.

A bitter dispute between the chief restorer and a leading American art historian has refocused attention on the merits of the 12-year project to clean away centuries of soot, grime and dust on the majestic chapel ceiling.

The fundamental question is: Which is the real Michelangelo? The bright new version or the somber, dark frescoes that viewers are accustomed to?

Critics say the restorers are "taking the spirit out of the painting," removing some of Michelangelo's retouchings and altering the colors of the 16th-century works of art.

The restorers say they are using scientifically proven methods that are faithful to the artist.

The main protagonists in the controversy are chief restorer Gianluigi Colalucci and James Beck, chairman of the art history and archaelogy department at Columbia University.

Beck wrote an open letter to Colalucci urging him to halt the project immediately while experts study his restoration technique.

The letter, published last Sunday in Rome's La Repubblica newspaper, said, "We have to save what can still be saved. ... A glass half-full is always better than a glass half-empty. ... One more day may be too late."

Beck said he was alarmed by a recent New York Times article that portrayed Colalucci as a man whose hair had turned white because he harbored doubts and second-thoughts about the project.

"I have absolutely no doubts," Colalucci told reporters. "This is a vulgar and violent campaign. If someone is really worried by our work, they should come here and talk to us instead of publishing it in newspapers."

The Vatican, apparently seeking to counter the negative publicity, organized a series of news media visits to the chapel in recent days to give journalists a rare close-up look at the restoration work.

Reporters were allowed on the covered, mobile scaffolding, putting them facr to face with the larger-than-life figures of Adam and Eve being expelled from the Garden of Eden.

The "Fall and the Expulsion" is one of nine scenes from the Book of Genesis that Michelangelo painted on the vaulted chapel ceiling between 1508 and 1512.

The restoration, which began in 1980 and is scheduled to be completed in 1992, has so far covered the 14 arched panels or lunettes above the windows and 2,540 square feet of the 5,533-square-foot ceiling. The final stage will involve the cleaning of Michelangelo's Last Judgment, painted on the altar wall between 1536 and 1541.

Fabrizio Mancinelli, director of the project, said the true colors of the frescoes were hidden over the centuries by dirt and smoke from candles, oil lamps and braziers. Sections have been damaged by water that leaked through the ceiling.

Mancinelli said the frescoes also have suffered at the hands of 17th- and 18th-century restorers who used slices of bread and Greek wine as well as glue-varnish that muted Michelangelo's colors.

To protect the frescoes from today's pollutants, the Vatican installed a special dust-absorbing carpet over the staircase leading to the chapel and part of the chapel floor.

Colalucci uses the cleaning solvent AB57, developed more than 20 years ago at Italy's Central Restoration Institute. The solvent is left on for three minutes, then washed with distilled water. The process is repeated 24 hours later once the plaster has dried.

The contrasts in the chapel are striking. The sections that have been restored are bright and electric, compared to the darker, more somber colors of the "old Michelangelo."

Beck and other critics have argued that the restorers are removing Michelangelo's retouchings a secco, paint applied on the dry wall after the fresco and plaster had dried.

Colalucci and Mancinelli say Michelangelo did not use the technique, that the retouchings were done by previous restorers.

Beck also claims there is "reasonably good evidence" that the artist used sizing, a type of varnish, to modify the colors of the frescoes and that this substance is being removed indiscriminately.

"Vatican restorers believe that Michelangelo was such a genius that he didn't need to retouch," Beck said in a telephone interview from New York with The Associated Press. "This is a romantic view. I think he had to make adjustments.

Trout, Bock Set Career Highs As Tribe Dumps East Carolina, 69-65

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Tim Trout poured in a career high 23 points and Tom Bock had a career-tying 18 as William & Mary pulled out a 69-65 Colonial Athletic Association basketball victory over East Carolina University Saturday night.

The Pirates, who led only briefly, trailed throughout the second half of the game, falling down by as much as nine points before rallying to within two on several occasions.

But each time the Pirates had the opportunity to cut into the lead once more, they would turn the ball over or take a poor shot at the basket, allowing the Indians to pull away.

"(William & Mary) played awfully well and we didn't," ECU coach Charlie Harrison summed up at the end of the game. "They went inside and they got a lot out of it, while we didn't get much of anything inside."

Pirate center Leon Bass, averaging 10 points a game, failed to score in the contest, and took only one shot the entire evening. He did pull away a team high 11 rebounds, but otherwise contributed little.

The Pirates also had 19 turnovers as compared to 11 by the Indians.

And again, just as it has been in nearly every road conference defeat, the Pirates won from the floor only to lose at the foul line. East Carolina outhit the Tribe by eight points from the floor but were outhit at the line 21-6.

"A nine (attempt) to 29 (attempt) night is difficult to overcome, but you have to give them credit for going inside like they did to draw the fouls," Harrison said.

"They played extremely, extremely well and didn't turn it over and just went down our throats with the ball," Harrison added.

And just as he has most of the year, the coach thought his team played hard, although not well on this occasion. "We had a lot of lapses, mental lapses on both the offensive and defensive ends of the court."

Harrison didn't think that the Pirates, which beat the Tribe, 56-52, in Greenville earlier this year, took the Indians lightly. "Anytime you go on the road, you have to be ready. These guys (W&M) beat James Madison by 10 here and have played everyone else close here. You have to play better on the road than you do at home and we didn't do that tonight."

The loss was the fifth straight for the Pirates in CAA play on the road, where they have yet to win this year.

Richmond Overcomes ECU Rally To Defeat Lady Buccaneers, 59-57

After taking a 10-point lead early in the second half, Richmond's Lady Spiders survived an East Carolina comeback to hold on for a 59-57 Colonial Athletic Association women's college basketball win Saturday night.

Richmond moved out to a 53-43 lead with just over eight minutes remaining in the second half but then the Lady Spiders went cold.

They failed to connect on a field goal over the next five minutes as the Lady Pirates rallied.

After Richmond's Peggy Fitzimmons canned a jumper to give the Lady Spiders a 53-43 advantage, ECU's Alma Bethea countered with a three-point play that pulled the Lady Pirates within 53-46.

Fitzimmons then missed from outside and ECU's Jody Rodriquez converted two free throws off of a one and one.

Richmond's Dana Pappas continued the Lady Spider's cold streak with a miss from the right side. ECU failed to take advantage of the miss but got a second chance when Richmond's Glenda Miller missed and Bethea grabbed the rebound.

Bethea then drew a foul at the offensive end and hit the resulting free throws to pull ECU within 53-50.

Pappas missed two shots in a row for Richmond and Rodriquez connected on a drive to make it a one-point ball game at 53-52.

Richmond then turned the ball over and Bethea hit on a turnaround jumper in the lane with 3:38 to go to give ECU their first and only lead of the second half at 54-53.

"I think what did it was they started missing their shots," said ECU coach Emily Manwaring of the Lady Pirates' second half rally. "I (also) think we got a lot more rebounds (in the second half). We held them to one shot (on offense)."

ECU had a chance to add to their lead when Delphine Mabry came up with a steal but Mabry missed the layup and Richmond regained possession. Fitzimmons then ended the Lady Spider cold streak with a

Pack Comeback Falls Short

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Two Louisville starters were on the bench midway through the second half and North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano thought it was the time for his team to make the move to get back into the game.

But the starters — forward Herbert Crook and center Pervis Ellison — returned to action and helped stall a Wolfpack comeback as Louisville went on to an 87-75 victory in a nationally televised non-conference college basketball game Saturday.

Crook, who made seven of 11 field goals and 11 of 13 free throws, led his team with 25 points and Ellison added 14 points and seven rebounds.

Ellison went to the bench with four fouls with 11:36 left in the game and Crook was sidelined with an ankle injury with 9:36 remaining with Louisville holding a 62-53 edge. Vinny Del Negro, who led the Wolfpack with a career-high 25 points, hit a 3-pointer to pull his team within 64-56 with 7:26 left.

"I felt we had an opportunity to come back," Valvano said. "I thought if we could have done some things offensively, we could have gotten back into it. Louisville did a good job of making us shoot a tough shot."

Crook and Ellison returned with 5:53 left and the Wolfpack never got any closer. Louisville shot 72 percent from the field in the second half, compared to North Carolina State's 37 percent on 13 of 35 shooting.

"They were playing some kind of zone and I was just getting my shot," Crook said. "I was either getting the basket or getting fouled."

Louisville improved to 13-10, while the Wolfpack dropped their sixth straight and fell to 12-10.

Louisville took a 46-34 lead with 17:40 left in the game on Ellison's dunk off a fast break. But North Carolina State went on a 13-4 run to pull within 50-47 with 14:52 left on Kelsey Weems' two free throws.

Louisville started pulling away, taking a 64-53 lead on Mark McSwain's field goal with 8:44 remaining. Del Negro then hit his 3-pointer, but that was the closest the Wolfpack could get.

Louisville's shooting picked up as the Cardinals went on an 8-2 spurt to go up 72-58 on Ellison's two free throws with 4:07 left.

Louisville made 16 of 22 shots in the second period and was 29 of 50 for the game for 58 percent. The Wolfpack made just 23 of 62 for 37 percent.

Reserve McSwain scored 13 for Louisville and Tony Kimbro added 12.

Charles Shackleford scored 15 points for the Wolfpack and Bennie Bolton added 14.

Louisville also had 25 assists compared to the Wolfpack's nine. Guards Keith Williams, Chris West and Mike Abram had six assists apiece.

Howell Announces Search Committees

From Staff and Wire Reports

East Carolina University Chancellor John M. Howell has announced the formation of two search committees to seek candidates for the positions of head coach for the ECU men's and women's basketball programs.

Named to the men's search committee were Thomas A. Bennett, Board of Trustees; Jack Edwards, Executive President of the Pirate Club; Karen Hancock, Acting Chair of HPERS Department; Dave Hart Jr., Associate Director of Athletics-External; James A. Hicks, President of the Alumni Association; Ernest W. Schwarz, Faculty Athletic Representative and Gene A. Templeton, Associate Director of Athletics-Internal. The committee will be chaired by Dr. Ken Karr, ECU director of athletics.

Edwards, Hart, Schwarz, Hancock, Leggett and Templeton were also named to the search committe for the women's basketball head coach position. Other members of the group include Mark Garner, president of the Pitt County Alumni Chapter; Susan McDaniel, Associate Professor of Science and Biology; Dianna Morris, assistant to Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Riley Roberson of the board of Trustees. Karr will also chair this committee.

"We will attempt to have a meeting sometime in the next week," Karr said in an interview Saturday night. "We will have to make an announcement of the meeting far enough in advance so that people can make (necessary) plans.

"We also are going to have to wait another 10 days before we have a formal number of applicants ready to screen. I would say we won't be able to screen effectively before the 15th (of February)."

Karr said he will talk to former Maryland basketball coach Lefty Driesell and current Auburn coach Sonny Smith about the Pirate coaching position, which will become vacant at the end of the season.

"I'm sure I'll speak with Coach Driesell some time the early part of next week," Karr told The News and Observer of Raleigh Friday.

Karr also said he would call Auburn athletic director Pat Dye next week and ask permission to speak to Smith.

Pirate coach Charlie Harrison announced Jan. 29 that he would step down at the end of this season while women's coach Emily Manwaring announced her resignation Jan. 30.

"A search is a long drown out type of thing," Karr said. "We have been fortunate in a way that the coaches gave us advance notice so that we can have coaches named by the end of the season or shortly after so that these persons have a chance to get their staff togethers."

Driesell, now an assistant athletic director at Maryland, said Thursday night that he had talked with "a couple of trustees" earlier in the day about the East Carolina job. During his meeting with the individual trustees, Driesell had said that the university would have to drop out of the Colonial Athletic Association if he was going to consider taking the job.

But Karr said he didn't expect that would occur.

"East Carolina is a charter member of the Colonial Athletic Association," Karr said. "I don't see that situation (withdrawing) happening."

Karr said he would contact Dye, a former East Carolina football coach, by next week about talking to Smith, whose basketball team is ranked 20th in this week's Associated Press poll.

Karr said the mention of Driesell in connection with the vacancy had attracted national attention to the position.

"We've had more than 35 people who have made inquiries about it," Karr said.

Applications likely will be accepted through Feb. 28 and a new coach could be named by March 15, Karr said.

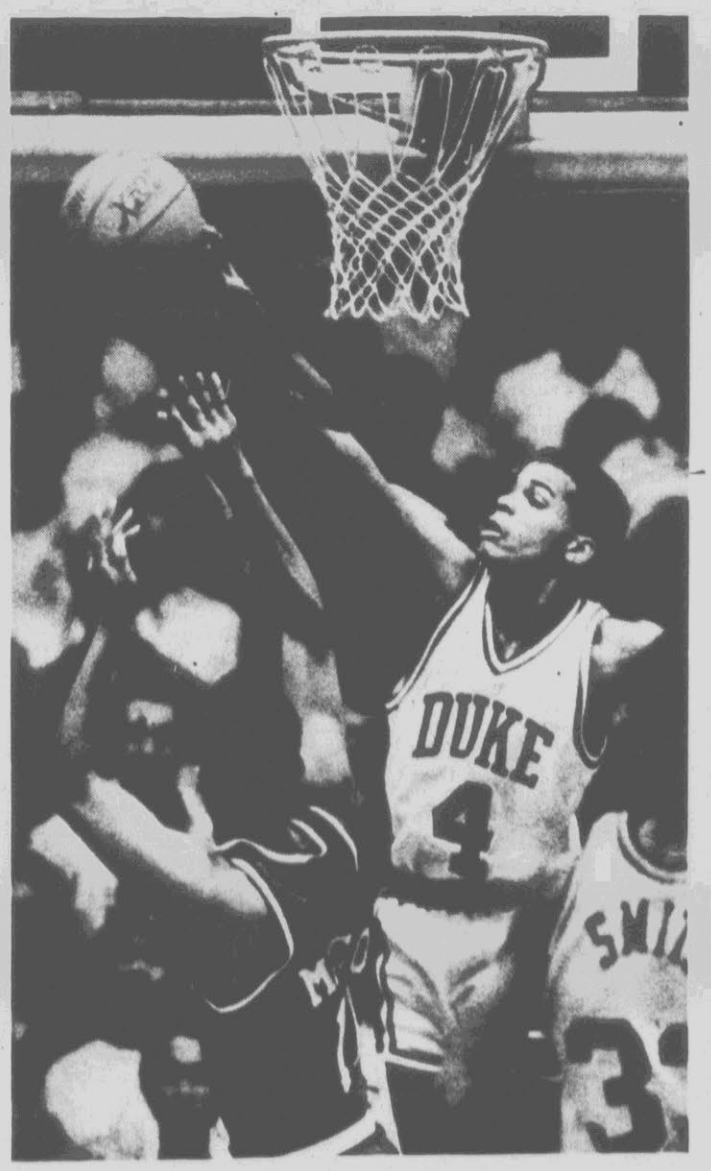
Blue Devils Hold Off Terps



Rejection

DURHAM, N.C. (AP) — Maryland has lost nine straight Atlantic Coast Conference basketball games this season, but Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski says the Terrapins won't have to wait much longer for a league victory.

The Terrapins gave 16th-ranked Duke a scare Saturday, but John Smith's 22 points along with several key second-half baskets and steals by Kevin Strickland enabled Duke to record a sluggish 76-67 victory.

"I'm very impressed by the way Maryland is playing," Krzyzewski said. "We had to play very good basketball (in the second half) to win. I thought our defense in the second half was the story of the game."

The Blue Devils turned five second-half steals and nine Terrapin turnovers into several key baskets down the stretch. Maryland had 18 turnovers for the game.

"I think the thing that turned it around for us was that we were a little fresher," Krzyzewski said. "We were able to rotate a number of people in ... and we stayed fresh throughout the ballgame."

Maryland coach Bob Wade said his team is playing well, but must now put two halves of basketball together in order to record a victory.

"We don't have the luxury of going to the bench so we have to take advantage of every situation," Wade said. "In the second half they turned up the pressure and got second and third shots."

Maryland, 6-11 overall and winless in the conference, increased its 34-28 halftime lead to 10 points when John Johnson scored on a driving layup with 13:55 remaining.

But Strickland scored seven points over a two-minute span to narrow the gap to 51-48.

Duke, now 19-4 and 7-3 in the ACC, took the lead for good at 57-55 with 8:49 left after Strickland stole the ball and made his second 3-point field goal of the half.

Over the next two minutes the Blue Devils outscored Maryland 8-2 to increase the margin to 66-57 with 6:38 remaining on two foul shots by Smith.

The Terrapins pulled to 66-61 on a driving layup by Steve Hood with 5:51 left, but could get no closer.

After the score was tied five times in the opening eight minutes, Duke grabbed a four-point lead at 19-15 on baskets by Smith and Danny Ferry with 11:19 left.

But over the next six minutes, the Terrapins used a zone defense and hot shooting from Dave Dickerson to outscore Duke 12 to four to take a 29-23 lead with 5:08 left in the half. Dickerson scored 14 first-half points, hitting six of seven shots from the field.

Strickland added 15 points for Duke, while Ferry had 12.

Hood scored a game-high 23 points to lead Maryland, while Dickerson added 18 and Derrick Lewis 11.

UNLV Rallies To Beat Spartans

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Freddie Banks scored 33 points, including nine on 3-point bombs, as top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas rallied to beat San Jose State, 83-74, Saturday in a Pacific Coast Athletic Association basketball game.

Las Vegas, badly beaten off both backboards, trailed 60-54 midway through the second half after the Spartans went on an 18-4 tear.

Banks then hit a 3-point shot, Gary Graham hit another one, and Banks hit one more to put the Runnin' Rebels ahead 63-60.

San Jose, which outrebounded Las Vegas 48-23, trailed 73-72 with 1:45 to go. Forward Armon Gilliam, who finished with 22 points, then hit a jumper and the Rebels sank six straight field goals as they stretched out their lead in the final minute.

"Obviously I'm glad to get out of here with a win," said Rebels Coach Jerry Tarkanian, whose squad is 23-1 overall and 11-0 atop the PCAA.

San Jose is 11-11 overall and 7-6 in the conference.

San Jose's top player, 6-foot-8 guard Ricky Berry, scored 20 of his 22 points in the second half. He sat out most of the first half after picking up his third foul seven minutes into the game.

San Jose's Reggie Owens grabbed a career-high 19 rebounds and scored 15 points.

Banks' four 3-point shots helped the Rebels to a 40-32 halftime lead.

San Jose took the early lead, 16-10, but Banks scored the next eight points on a fullcourt drive and a pair of 3-point baskets to give Las Vegas an 18-16 lead.

The Spartans stayed close until consecutive 3-pointers by Gary Graham and Banks broke a 23-23 tie and gave the Rebels a 29-23 lead.

(4)Iowa 89
Arizona 80

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Coach Tom Davis said senior forward Kevin Gamble came to the rescue of his fourth-ranked Hawkeyes as Iowa rallied to beat Arizona 89-80 in a non-conference basketball game Saturday.

"We struggled in the first half, mainly due to Arizona's great defense," Davis said. "They had shut out (sophomore forward Ed) Horton and (sophomore guard Roy) Marble, so someone else had to pick up the slack. Gamble did that."

The 6-foot-6 Gamble scored 11 of his 20 points in the second half, including five to key a comeback rally, as the Hawkeyes overcame a 13-point deficit.

Iowa, 21-2, trailed 64-51 before reeling off a 25-4 spurt in the second half to take lead for good.

With 10:55 remaining, sophomore guard B.J. Armstrong made a 3-point field goal to start the run. During the stretch, Gamble had a three-point play with 7:49 left to give Iowa a 69-68 lead.

The run ended with 6:06 left when Jeff Moe hit a 3-point goal — his fifth of the game — to make it 76-68.

Arizona, 13-8, pulled to within 83-80 when Kenny Lofton sank two free throws with 1:27 left. But the Wildcats got no closer as Iowa hit six of nine foul shots in the final seconds.

"No question the game was won in that five-minute stretch," said Arizona Coach Lute Olson, who coached Iowa for nine seasons before taking the Wildcats' job in 1983.

"The Hawkeyes got their transition game going and they beat us every way in those five minutes," Olson added. "The principal difference between a top 10 team and us was that five-minute segment."

Moe and Gerry Wright both finished with 15 points for Iowa while Brad Lohaus had 14 and Armstrong 11, including nine in the second half. Lohaus also had a game-high nine rebounds.

Sean Elliott paced Arizona with 25 points, 18 coming in the second half. Craig McMillan added 18 and Tom Tolbert 10 for the Wildcats, who used an 8-0 run late in the first half to take a 40-37 halftime lead.

(6)Temple 78
St. Joseph's 69

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The sixth-ranked Temple Owls divided the work Saturday to edge city rival St. Joseph's 78-69 in the Atlantic 10.

Guard Nate Blackwell scored the points, forward Tim Perry collected the rebounds and guard Howard Evans handled the ball as Temple won its 10th straight game.

"Howard did a great job," Temple Coach John Chaney said. "He has to realize how important he is even if he doesn't score a lot of points." Evans had a team-high four assists and only turned the ball over once in 38 minutes.

Blackwell scored 24 points and Perry had 17 points and 17 rebounds, including 12 on the offensive boards.

"There is no question Perry was a big factor, especially on the boards," Chaney said.

The combination of Blackwell, Evans and Perry had St. Joseph's Coach Jim Boyle predicting the Owls would go far in the NCAA tournament next month.

"I think Temple is a great team, a potential final four team," Boyle said. "They're one of the best I've seen since I've been coaching. They're also one of the best defensive teams you'll see anywhere."

The Owls, 23-2 overall and 12-0 in the league, have won 32 straight at McGonigle Hall. St. Joseph's fell to 12-7 and 6-5.

The Hawks led 60-56 with 10:12 left, but Temple went on a 11-2 run to take a 67-62 advantage with 3:58 remaining. A free throw by the Hawks' Rodney Blake with 1:50 to go cut the Temple lead to 70-67, but Howard Evans' two free throws and a driving layup by Blackwell put Temple ahead 74-67 at the 1:14 mark.

Tim Perry had 17 points and Evans 14 for the Owls. Tarone Thornton scored 20 points and Greg Mullee added 17 for St. Joseph's.

St. Joseph's led throughout most of the first half and held a 39-32 lead with 4:37 left. However, Temple rallied and a jumper by Blackwell with 54 seconds to go brought the Owls to 41-40 at halftime.

Rodney Blake, St. Joe's 6-foot-8, 240-pound center, collected three fouls in the first half and was on the bench at the start of the second period. However, the Hawks moved out to a 55-49 advantage with 14 minutes left before Temple scored seven straight points to move ahead on an Evans' 3-pointer.

(7)Purdue 86
Northwestern 60

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. (AP) — Soon after Purdue's 86-60 victory over Northwestern Saturday, Coach Gene Keady was looking at the remainder of his team's Big Ten schedule.

"This was a game we had to have to stay in the league race," said Keady, whose team has lost to conference foes Iowa and Indiana. "The stretch of games coming up is the most difficult part of the schedule, with five of seven games on the road.

"This is where we really have to suck up and concentrate."

Troy Lewis scored 17 points and Todd Mitchell added 14 for Purdue, but both saw little action in the second half.

The Boilermakers, one-half game behind first-place Indiana in the Big Ten, outscored Northwestern 13-2 in a 15-minute span of the first half to take a 23-10 lead with 10:43 remaining.

Everette Stephens and Lewis each scored five points in that stretch, with both sinking a basket from 3-point range.

Purdue finally seemed to recover from the slump that has followed its recent losses, Keady said.

"I rode them pretty hard after the losses to North Carolina, Iowa and Indiana. That probably hurt their confidence a little," he said. "I'm not a very good guy to be around after a loss."

Purdue led 30-15 with 7:21 left, and the Wildcats were unable to sink a field goal for the remainder of the first half. Kip Jones began an 11-0 Purdue streak with an alley-oop slam dunk, then Doug Lee and Lewis took over.

Lee scored eight of Purdue's next 14 points and Lewis added four to give Purdue a 46-20 halftime lead.

Northwestern, 6-15 overall and 1-10 in the conference, had 11 turnovers in the first half and made just seven of its 22 field goal attempts.

Northwestern Coach Bill Foster, whose team is in the Big Ten basement, praised the Purdue defense but also saw some promise in his team.

"Against a Top 10 team we're staying in there better, at least in the last two games," Foster said. "We've been able to keep some intensity defensively, even when the offense wasn't scoring."

The Boilermakers, 18-3 and 9-2, outscored Northwestern 21-5 in the first 12:33 of the second half, taking their biggest lead at 67-25.

Mitchell had 10 points in that stretch and Lewis added 6. Purdue then cleared its bench and no starters saw any more action.

Purdue outrebounded Northwestern 41-19, with Mitchell grabbing 12. Elliott Fullen scored 20 points for Northwestern, 15 in the second half.

(8)Oklahoma 81
Missouri 78

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs wasn't surprised to see Tim McCalister take a long 3-point shot that beat Missouri on Saturday.

"He shoots it when he's hot or cold," Tubbs said following his eighth-ranked team's 81-78 victory. "But we made a lot of mistakes we haven't been making. It's nice to know you can win when you struggle like that."

McCalister, who finished with 34 points, drilled his seventh 3-pointer of the game from deep in the left corner with six seconds left. His shot followed by 14 seconds an off-balance jumper by Derrick Chievous that had tied the game at 78-all.

"I had a good feeling it was going in," said McCalister, who was seven of 10 from outside the 19-foot, 9-inch line. "It had been feeling good all day."

Chievous, who finished with 28, tried a long 3-pointer at the buzzer, but the ball bounced off the rim.

The Sooners avenged their only Big Eight loss of the season, 87-83 at Missouri. They are now 19-3 overall and 7-1 in the conference.

The game also meant personal gratification for McCalister, who made only four of 15 shots from the field and scored 11 points in the loss to Missouri.

"I've only been averaging about 10 points per game against Missouri during my career," the senior guard said. "I was fortunate to get off to a good start, and I shot the ball well the whole game."

Missouri dropped to 15-9 and 5-3.

"We played really well today," said Missouri Coach Norm Stewart, whose team led by eight at one point in the first half. "I have no complaints."

The Tigers held a five-point halftime lead, but Oklahoma went on an 11-4 run to start the second half and grabbed a 50-48 lead.

"We accidentally got into a defense that we haven't used all year," Tubbs said. "It confused Missouri. I'm still not sure what we were doing."

The Sooners widened their lead to seven, 62-55, with 10:30 to play, but Chievous scored nine straight Missouri points to lead the Tigers back.

With 2:18 remaining, Lynn Hardy made a 3-pointer from the top of the key that tied the score at 78-all. McCalister answered with a jumper at the 1:40 mark, but Chievous tied it with an off-balance jumper with 20 seconds left.

That led to McCalister's game-winner, a wide open shot that was clearly behind the 3-point line.

"It was just another one of those shots that went down for me," McCalister said. "I ust seem to be in situations like that all the time. I don't mind having the ball like that because I figure I'll either make the shot or get fouled."

Darryl Kennedy scored 16 points for Oklahoma. Harvey Grant, hindered by foul trouble, finished with 12 points and 12 rebounds.

Greg Church scored 15 points for Missouri.

Kentucky 70
(9)Alabama 69

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — Both teams went to their leading scorer with the game on the line. Ed Davender came through for Kentucky while Derrick McKey missed for Alabama.

The result was a 70-69 victory for Kentucky over the ninth-ranked Crimson Tide in a Southeastern Conference basketball game Saturday.

With six seconds left, Davender sank a 10-footer to give Kentucky the victory.

"Our strategy was to run a clear-out and get Davender the ball," Kentucky Coach Eddie Sutton said. The winning shot gave Davender 29 points for the game.

Alabama had one more chance and worked the ball to McKey, but his 14-foot jumper bounced off the rim at the final horn.

"It feels good just to beat them," Davender said. "It's what we came down here to do."

Despite the loss, Alabama remained atop the SEC at 10-2 and raised its overall record to 17-4. Kentucky, 14-6 and 7-5, is in third place in the conference behind Florida.

"Alabama is still the best team in the league," Sutton said, "and I'm just proud of our guys for pulling out a win down here."

Coach Wimp Sanderson said his Alabama team kept as much pressure as possible on Davender, "but he just made good shots." Sanderson called the loss one of the hardest defeats in his seven years as the Tide coach.

Hoyas Nip Wildcats, 89-86

Battle Of The Big Men

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — Reggie Williams scored 21 points and keyed a second-half surge Saturday that lifted No. 10 Georgetown to an 89-86 Big East victory over Villanova.

The Hoyas never trailed in the second half, but could not clinch the triumph until Dwayne Bryant made a pair of free throws with two seconds left to give Georgetown a three-point advantage.

Ten seconds earlier, Bryant had made a free throw to give Georgetown an 87-83 lead. Doug West responded with a 3-point field goal with two seconds remaining to pull the Wildcats within a point, but Villanova then had to foul Bryant.

A shot at the buzzer from past midcourt by the Wildcats' Rodney Taylor sailed well over the backboard.

It was the Hoyas' fifth consecutive game decided by three points or less. Villanova's last five games have been decided by four points or less.

Perry McDonald scored 19 points for the Hoyas, who improved their record to 16-4 overall and 6-4 in the Big East.

Villanova, which got 23 points from West and 22 from Mark Plansky, fell to 12-10 and 5-6.

Georgetown held a 67-66 lead with 9:51 left, but Mark Tillmon scored six points and Williams added four in a 10-3 burst that gave the Hoyas a 77-69 lead.

But Villanova made nine free throws in an 11-6 burst to cut the margin to 83-80 with 2:51 left.

Villanova made only two field goals in the final 10 minutes, but made 17 free throws in that span.

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Pittsburgh usually plays a zone defense, but the Panthers resorted to man-to-man coverage Saturday to beat Providence 87-81 in a battle of ranked Big East Conference teams.

"We had to play man-to-man to shut down the outside game," said Pitt Coach Paul Evans.

Evans voiced respect for Providence's high-scoring backcourt of Billy Donovan and Delray Brooks, and forward Ernie Lewis.

"It's tough to get to all three of them," Evans said, "but we felt with all of them shooting the three-pointers so well now, we had to pressure them with the man defense."

The Pitt frontcourt of Charles Smith, Demetreus Gore and Jerome Lane, with 63 points and 46 rebounds between them, took care of the inside game.

With the win, No. 13 Pitt improved its record to 19-4 overall and 8-2 in the Big East Conference. No. 17 Providence fell to 16-5 and 6-4.

Pitt, behind Lane's 15 and Smith's 14 points, led 43-38 at the half. Brooks' three-pointer cut the lead to three, at 54-51, with 14:38 left to play.

Gore then scored seven points in 2½ minutes to move the Pitt lead to 67-55 with 12:13 remaining in the game.

Providence rallied behind Dave Kipfer, who scored 10 points over the final 12 minutes. The lead was cut to four, 84-80, on Donovan's three-pointer with 44 seconds left, but that was as close as Providence could come.

Smith led Pitt with 25 points and 17 rebounds. Lane scored 20 and grabbed 17 rebounds, while Gore had 18 points and 12 rebounds. Pitt outrebounded Providence 68-36.

Donovan led Providence with 19 points, while Kipfer and Lewis added 14 each.

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Even Larry Brown was shocked at how thoroughly dominating his 18th-ranked Kansas Jayhawks were Saturday against Oklahoma State.

In their earlier game at Stillwater, Okla., Kansas squeezed out a 66-63 victory. But Saturday, with Danny Manning taking charge from the outset, the Jayhawks raced to an 88-63 rout.

"The difference was Danny," Brown said. "Also, we got to run. They shot well at Stillwater but today we got the ball down court before they could get their zone defense set. But I was still shocked that we would have a 17-0 lead."

The outmanned Cowboys did not score until Melvin Gilliam hit a pair of free throws with 14:30 left in the first half.

"Kansas is a great basketball team, especially in this place, and when they're playing well, that's what they can do to you," said Oklahoma State Coach Leonard Hamilton.

Manning, Kansas' 6-foot-11 junior and last season's Big Eight player of the year, led the Jayhawks with 28 points and 12 rebounds. He had only eight points at Stillwater.

"I knew Danny wouldn't make only eight today," said Oklahoma State's Todd Christian. "Danny was much more into the game. He just came in and told OSU, 'Hey, it's my night.'"

The Jayhawks, notching their 45th straight home victory, raised their overall record to 17-5 and their Big Eight mark to 7-1. Oklahoma State dropped to 6-15 and 2-6.

Clemson Romps Over Gamecocks

CLEMSON, S.C. (AP) — Clemson center Horace Grant, who missed a week of practice because of a flu, told Coach Cliff Ellis that he could play 30 minutes against rival South Carolina on Saturday.

Grant lived up to his promise and scored 24 points to lead the No. 12 Tigers to a 74-52 college basketball victory.

"Grant was exhausted when he came out of the game," Ellis said. "But he was a big spark for the team."

Grant was held out for the first 6 minutes, 46 seconds of the game. When he came in Clemson was trailing 8-4. With Grant playing, the Tigers took a 27-25 lead at halftime.

The 6-10 center scored 12 points in the first 13 minutes of the second half as the Tigers, 21-2, buried their rival.

"Our defense carried the ballclub tonight until the offense got on track in the second half," Ellis said. "I feel this is the best defense we've played in a long time."

South Carolina coach George Felton said the difference between the two halves was like night and day. "In the first half the tempo was what we wanted. In the second half it wasn't. Our execution was off. We didn't follow through on what we wanted to do."

Tiger guard Michael Tait added 17 points, all in the second half, for Clemson. Guard Grayson Marshall added 12 points and forward Jerry Pryor 10.

South Carolina, 12-9, got 15 points from center Darryl Martin and 12 points from guard Tony Shaw. Forward Terry Dozier scored 10 points before fouling out with 6:04 to play.

South Carolina had a 12-8 lead before Clemson rallied to take a 27-25 halftime advantage.

The Gamecocks tied the score on a layup by Martin to open the second half but Clemson scored the next seven points to take control.

The Tigers padded the lead to 17 points after five consecutive points by Grant, who scored the last basket in the lane with 5:48 remaining.

Grant increased his career scoring total to 1,511 points, fourth-highest in Clemson history. Butch Zatezalo scored 1,761, Bill Yarborough 1,553 and Vincent Hamilton 1,530.

Seikaly Relative Reported Abducted

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Rony Seikaly, Syracuse's 6-foot-10 center, was aware that his uncle Jack had been kidnapped in Lebanon, a family member said Saturday, but would not comment on matter.

"Of course he's upset, the whole family is upset. He has been trying to talk to my brother (Rony's father) in Athens for some peace of mind," said Clemance Seikaly.

Some family members said they had heard that Jack Seikaly, a Lebanese businessman, had been freed, but there was no police confirmation.

Stadler Ties Course Record

HONOLULU (AP) — Craig Stadler tied the course record with a 10-under-par 62 and was positively glowering in indignation when he stared at a missed putt on the 18th hole.

Curtis Strange shot 64 and was an angry man when he stalked into the scorer's tent.

Lanny Wadkins shot a bogey-free round of 5-under-par 67 and the expression on his face was an eloquent statement of disgust.

With the Waialae Country Club course robbed of it's natural defenses by the absense of wind, phenomenally low scores were the order of the day during the third round of the $600,000 Hawaiian Open Saturday.

Stadler's 62, which he said could have been better, tied the course record set by Nick Faldo of Britain and Hale Irwin in 1981, and gave him a one-shot lead over Paul Azinger going into Sunday's final round of the chase for a $108,000 first prize.

"It could have been better; it could have been anything. But I'll definitely take what I got," said Stadler, who finished off a string of five consecutive birdies with a pair of 30-foot putts followed by a chip-in from 25-30 yards on the 17th.

"It was a positioning day. And I got myself in position where second isn't going to be very good," Stadler said, looking ahead to Sunday's final round.

"It's all or nothing," said Stadler, a former Masters champion who hasn't won in 2½ seasons.

He takes a 200 total, 16 under par, into the final round.

"It's been so long since I've been in position to win a golf tounament, I can't lay back and let somebody catch me. I've got to make birdies tomorrow," he said.

The incredibly low scoring — 64s were reasonably common and 66s were lost in the shuffle — prohibited Stadler from opening an appreciable gap between himself and the rest of the field.

Azinger, who scored his first PGA Tour victory last month in Phoenix, was the closest, one stroke back at 201 after a 7-under-par 65.

"Tomorrow, I'm going to try to do just like I did at Phoenix; just go out there and mind my own business and just be one-shot conscious and not get into a match play situation," he said.

Fred Couples, who shared the second-round lead, battled back from a double bogey and salvaged a 68 that left him at 202, two off the pace.

Strange, Wadkins and John Cook were next at 204, 12 under par. Cook scattered 10 birdies across his card in a 64. Strange also had a 64, which included a bogey-6 on the final hole, where he took two to get out of a bad lie in a bunker.

"I was thinking 62 all the way," Strange said. "It's just terrible to have a round like that going then not shoot 62 or 63.

"It was a very, very tough shot, and it was made tougher by a bad rake job in the bunker," Strange said.

The group at 205 included Bobby Wadkins, Mark Lye, Mac O'Grady, Larry Mize, Steve Jones, Scott Simpson and West German Bernhard Langer, who shared the second-round lead.

Wadkins and Lye each had a 66, O'Grady 67, Jones and Simpson 68, Mize 70 and Langer a struggling 71, one under par but a relatively high score on this balmy day.

Defending champion Corey Pavin was another stroke back at 206 after a 66.

Stadler opened up birdie-birdie, scored from 20 feet on the fourth hole and 2-putted for birdie-4 on the 9th to turn in 32.

He dropped an 8-foot birdie putt on the 11th, then started his drive to the top with another 2-putt birdie-4 on the 13th.

He made it from 15 feet on the 14th, and watched 30-footers find the cup on both the 15th and 16th.

His fifth consecutive birdie came on the long chip from the rough at the left of the green on the 17th.

The 18th, a par-5, gave him an opportunity for 61. But he drove into the rough, couldn't reach the green and eventually missed from about 20 feet.

"I was kind of surprised the putt on 18 didn't go in. I was making everything there at the end. I guess I thought all I had to do to make it was hit it," Stadler said.

Lopez Opens Five-Stroke Lead

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Nancy Lopez couldn't remember ever being in such a good position heading into the final round of an LPGA tournament. A 5-shot lead is by no means unbeatable, but she couldn't recall ever losing an advantage that large.

"Most of the tournaments I've won, I've been behind one or two shots," said Lopez, who fired a 4-under-par 68 Saturday to open a 5-stroke advantage over Cathy Morse and Kathy Baker after three rounds of the $200,000 Sarasota Classic.

"I really can't remember if I've ever lost a lead like this," Lopez said. "Most of the times I've led from the start, though, I've won."

Lopez, who started the day tied for the lead with Chris Johnson, carded six birdies and two bogeys to fuel her bid to qualify for the LPGA Hall of Fame on the same course where she won her first tournament nine years ago.

Lopez pulled away from the field with four birdies on the front nine of the 6,124-yard course at Bent Tree Country Club and said she will have to play the same way Sunday to earn her first victory here since the 1978 Bent Tree Ladies Classic.

"You never really win a tournament until you win it," said Lopez, 30. "I don't think you can go out and protect a lead. Anybody can shoot a 65 and come back. You have to be be aggressive out there."

Lopez, a winner of 34 LPGA events, added birdies on No. 13 and No. 17 on the back side and finished the day with a 54-hole total of 9-under-par 207.

Morse and Baker, who shot 71 and 72, respectively, have three-day scores of 4-under 212.

"I made that first birdie and then another and it was like the door was swinging open," Lopez said. "I told myself, 'You've got to take advantage of it.'"

Johnson, who failed to make a birdie on her way to a 74, and last Sunday's Mazda Classic winner Kathy Postlewait, who shot 71, trailed Lopez by six shots. Six golfers — Tammie Green, Heather Farr, Juli Inkster, Hollis Stacy, Muffin Spencer-Devlin and Anne Marie Palli — were bunched at 215, eight strokes back heading into Sunday's final round.

Pat Bradley, the 1986 Player of the Year, shot a 73 and was among a group at even par 216.

Lopez, who missed most of last season to have a baby, needs one more victory to automatically qualify for the Hall of Fame. She will not be eligible for induction, however, until July when she will complete 10 years of membership in the LPGA.

Birdies on two of the first three holes got Lopez, who shot a 66 in Friday's third round, off to a blistering start. She bogeyed No. 5, but came back with birdies on the seventh and eighth holes to take a four-shot advantage over Johnson.

She was never challenged on the back nine where her birdie on No. 13 increased her lead to five shots. Lopez lost a stroke with her second bogey of the day of the par 4, 349-yard 15th hole, but regained it with a 1-foot putt for birdie on No. 17.

Johnson, the first-round leader, shot par on 16 of the 18 holes. She bogeyed No. 7 and No. 16 and gradually slipped down the leader board as Lopez excelled despite gusting winds.

"It was a tough day, but it really didn't bother me," Lopez said. "I was concentrating so much that I really didn't think about the wind."

Morse and Jane Geddes started the round one shot behind Lopez and Johnson. While Morse stayed in contention with her 1-under-par score, Geddes faded early in the round.

Geddes, who posted a 77, shot a 31 on the front nine Friday. She shot 40 over the same nine holes Saturday and dropped 10 shots behind Lopez.

Sunday's winner will purse $30,000.

short jumper to put Richmond back in front 55-54.

ECU had two chances to retake the lead but failed to capitalize as Rodriquez missed a jumper on one possession and Bethea was called for a three second violation on the other.

Fitzimmons then buried another jumper to put Richmond up by three, 57-54. Chris O'Connor's free throw pulled ECU within two with one minute to go at 57-55, but Pappas then converted two free throws to move Richmond back out to a 59-55 advantage.

O'Connor hit a jumper with one second remaining to provide the final margin.

"We were late getting out to their shots. We just didn't get out and contest their shots," Manwaring said.

ECU Men Lose ...

The Indians held the lead for most of the first half, shooting out to a 6-0 margin in the first three minutes as the Pirates got off only one shot in their first four possessions — turning it over four times in the same period.

But Howard Brown helped spark a comeback that tied it at 8-8 on a Blue Edwards dunk with 14:20 left.

The Indians, however, again pulled out to a six-point spread, 14-10, on two free throws by Trout, and baskets by Mark Batzel and Scott Trimble.

Edwards again led the Pirates back hitting a three-point play, and finally scoring off a fast break to knot it at 18-18 with 8:08 showing. The Indians regained the lead on a jumper by Bock, but Marchell Henry tied it at 22-22. Then, after Trout hit the first of a two-shot opportunity, Sledge popped in a three-pointer for a 25-23 lead at the 3:40 mark — ECU's first lead of the night.

But, despite having several opportunities, the Pirates were unable to add to the lead as the Indians tied it up three more times in the half, the last time at 29-29 on two more free throws by Trout with three seconds left.

Bock got the Indians on the move at the start of the second half, hitting the go-ahead basket just 37 seconds into play. It put the Tribe up, 31-29 and they were never caught again.

Trout opened the lead to four before Henry finally got the Pirates on the scoreboard. A three-point play by Edwards closed it to 35-34 with 17:34 left, but Trout got a basket from underneath, Curtis Pride was awarded one on goal-tending and Batzel added one off a drive for a 41-34 lead.

After an exchange of baskets, Bock again hit to open the lead to 45-36, the largest margin of the night at 14:19.

Brown scored five straight points for ECU to close it back within four, 45-41 with 13:21 remaining. Following a Trout free throw, Edwards stole the ball for a dunk to trim it to 46-43 with 12:29 to go, but that was as close as it got.

Leading by three again, 50-47, the Indians ran off six in a row over the next minute to open up a nine-point lead again, 56-47, with 7:30 to go.

Keith Sledge and Henry both hit three-point jumpers to close to within 65-63 with 36 seconds to go, but Pride, a 57 percent free throw shooter, banged through two pressure shots at the line and after Edwards hit with 15 seconds to go, Trimble closed it off with three more with nine seconds remaining.

Trout, who connected on 11 of 17 at the line, surpassed his previous high of 21 against Towson State last season, while Bock, with nine of 14 from the floor, evened his career mark for the third time.

Trimble added 12 for the Indians.

Henry led the Pirates with 24 points while Edwards added 19 and Brown tossed in 11.

The two were even off the glass, each picking off 33 rebounds.

The loss dropped the Pirates to 11-11 overall and 3-7 in the CAA. The Indians climb to 2-8 in the league and 5-15 overall.

East Carolina travels on to Richmond to face the University of Richmond Spiders on Monday night.

King Richard Strolls

Race driver Richard Petty of Randleman, N.C., wears a slicker to ward off the Daytona chill as he strolls through the garage area Saturday. Petty and other NASCAR drivers were preparing for pole qualifying for the Daytona 500 but the event was postponed until Monday at noon. (AP Laserphoto)

Daytona Trials Postponed

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The weather refused to cooperate Saturday with NASCAR's tight "Speed Weeks" schedule as intermittent rain postponed pole qualifying for the Daytona 500 until Monday.

It was the second straight year and the third time since 1983 that the opening round of time trials for NASCAR's biggest stock car event was put off by rain.

The qualifying was moved to Monday because the Sunday schedule already is filled with the Busch Clash and the ARCA 200 late model stock car race.

"It don't really mean a thing," said Bill Elliott, the favorite to win the pole for the Feb. 15 race and expected to lead the assault on his own Daytona International Speedway track record of 205.114 mph.

Elliott pointed out that the on-again, off-again rain had cut practice sessions short on both Friday and Saturday.

"I wasn't really ready to qualify," said stock car racing's fastest driver. "But everybody's in the same situation. None of us was really ready to qualify.

"But it don't really matter," he added. "Ain't nobody can do anything about the weather. Now we'll all just be more ready."

One driver who was particularly happy about the postponement was seven-time Daytona 500 winner Richard Petty, whose qualifying engine was shipped back to Randleman, N.C., Friday for repairs after it blew in practice.

"We ain't got the car handling too good, so going faster would probably make it worse anyway," said Petty. "But now we'll be able to get some more work on the track and get that engine back here and maybe have a chance at a good qualifying run.

Other drivers were relieved by the postponement because of their involvement in Sunday's Busch Clash, a 10-car, $210,000 dash for the pole winners from the 1986 season.

All of the drivers in the Clash had two cars on hand at Daytona, one for Sunday's race and the other for the 500. Following the announcement of the postponement by NASCAR, most of them quickly decided to concentrate on one car for both events.

"Really, we were behind in our work. Everybody was," said three-time Winston Cup champion Darrell Waltrip. "We lost time to the weather and had to keep jumping back and forth from our Clash car to our race car.

Dalrymple Scores 26 Points In Tech's Triumph Over Deacs

ATLANTA (AP) — Coach Bobby Cremins was ready for another down-to-the-wire Atlantic Coast Conference basketball game Saturday, but Bruce Dalrymple didn't let it happen.

Dalrymple scored a career-high 26 points, including 10 in the first 12 minutes when Georgia Tech built a 30-8 lead, to spark the Yellow Jackets to an 83-69 league triumph over Wake Forest.

"I just couldn't believe the lead we had," Cremins said. "We jumped all over them. I thought the game would go down to the wire."

Tech never trailed as Antoine Ford blocked the first two Wake Forest shots of the game and the Yellow Jackets took a 5-0 lead, stretching it to 22 points behind the scoring of Dalrymple.

"I felt great," Cremins said of the big lead. "Then Wake Forest got back into it late in the first half. In the second half it was another typical Georgia Tech ACC game."

The Demon Deacons scratched back as Mark Cline scored seven points and Sam Ivy six during a surge that cut Tech's lead to 44-31 at the half.

"You just can't spot a team a 20-point lead like that," Wake Forest Coach Bob Staak said. "I thought we played a good zone in the second half. We couldn't do it in the first half because they got off to such a big lead."

Wake Forest kept the momentum going, outscoring the Yellow Jackets 12-3 at the outset of the second half to cut the lead to 47-43, 4½ minutes into the period.

Dalrymple and Duane Ferrell got hot at that point, and Tech began to pull away again.

Tech outrebounded Wake Forest 38-25 with Tom Hammonds (11), Ferrell (8) and Ford (7) getting more rebounds than the entire Demon Deacons team.

Ferrell added 17 points for Tech, while Hammonds scored 16 and Craig Neal 13. Ivy led Wake Forest with 25 points, Cline added 16, Rod Watson 11 and Tyrone Bogues 10.

The victory improved Tech's record to 13-7 overall and 4-4 in the ACC. Wake Forest fell to 11-10 and 1-8.

Bird, Jordan Top NBA Headliners

SEATTLE (AP) — Larry Bird and Michael Jordan, headliners when the games are played for keeps, showed Saturday that they can also steal the spotlight when the NBA gives a party.

Bird and Jordan both started slowly, Bird in the NBA three-point shootout and Jordan in the slam-dunk contest, then swept lesser-known competitors aside to win $12,500 each in the NBA's tribute to specialized skills.

The events preceded Sunday's 37th NBA All-Star Game, which has Bird, of the Boston Celtics, and Jordan, of the Chicago Bulls, starting for the Eastern Conference.

"I was lucky to get in the semifinals," Jordan said. "I barely made it in. It was somewhat similar to Bird barely making it to the semifinals in the shootout. Then we both went on to win."

Jordan got only 41 of a possible 50 points on his first dunk in the first round, then got no less than 47 points on his last seven attempts.

He got two perfect scores of 50, including one in the semifinal round in which he twisted his body at a 45-degree angle before slamming the ball with one hand. Semifinalist Terence Stansbury of Seattle called it "the greatest dunk I've ever seen."

Jordan beat Jerome Kersey of Portland 146-140 in the final round with scores of 48, 48 and 50.

Kersey entered the contest only on Friday when he was named as a replacement for Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta, who skipped the contest because of a back problem. Kersey said that he had little time to prepare and had nothing creative to offer in the final round.

Jordan, who has made millions of dollars endorsing Air Jordan shoes, said, "I've got little engines in these shoes."

"Michael is a little more flashy than I am," Kersey said. "He has a certain charisma that goes with being Michael Jordan.

"It's always a thrill to watch Michael. Just to see him in something like this, where he can exhibit his talent to the highest degree, is a real treat."

"The adrenalin that started pumping through me is unexplainable," Jordan said. "I felt I was really high (with my jumps). That's the highest I've been in a while."

Bird had to survive a three-man runoff with Dale Ellis of Seattle and Craig Hodges of Milwaukee for the fourth and final berth in the three-point shootout semifinals. He hit six of 10 shots in the 24-second runoff.

After advancing to the final round against Detlef Schrempf of Dallas, Bird, shooting first, hit the first eight of his 25 attempts and finished with 16 points.

Schrempf, whose first-round total of 19 points was the highest of the day, then missed nine of his first 11 three-point tries before rallying. He would have forced a playoff by making his last shot, but it went long from the far corner.

"Can you imagine Detlef had one $12,000 shot and missed?" Bird said.

Bird, who also won the long-distance event last year when he hit 11 straight three-pointers in the final round, said he "didn't shoot as well as I would have liked to. But it was good enough to win."

Bird said he was spurred on by a heckler during the final round.

"A guy from Seattle or maybe Dallas was sitting behind me yelling 'You're going to miss. You're going to choke.' I knew I was going to make that rack."

In the annual old timers game, three former Seattle players delighted the hometown crowd as the West defeated the East 54-43.

Fred Brown led all scorers with 16 points, including four three-pointers; Spencer Haywood had 11 points and Slick Watts seven points and six assists, double the number of any other player.

"For awhile out there, I thought it was real," Watts said. "I wish I could always have the feeling of running down the court with the crowd screaming. Me and Fred Brown really had it going."

But Walt Frazier summed up the feeling of the retired NBA stars when he said: "We are a shadow of what we once were. But this was like a family reunion. That's what this is all about."

Also on Saturday, the NBA Board of Governors met with Boris Stankovic, secretary general of the International Basketball Federation (FIBA), the sport's amateur governing body, to discuss open tournaments between NBA teams and international teams, possibly as early as next fall.

Curry Takes Crown On Disqualification

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Former welterweight champion Donald Curry and Tony Montgomery were both busy apologizing Saturday after Curry knocked Montgomery down three times before winning their scheduled 12-round fight on a disqualification.

Montgomery said he was sorry for the head butts that caused the disqualification, while Curry apologized for hitting Montgomery from behind after the fight ended — a punch that almost precipitated an all-out brawl in the ring.

"I just got mad and lost my cool," Curry said. "I got so mad my first reaction was to hit him."

Curry, who captured the U.S. Boxing Federation junior middleweight title with the victory, went over to Montgomery after security guards gained control in the ring and apologized for the late hit. He received an apology in return for the butting.

"I didn't deliberately try to butt him but I got a little bit confused out there," Montgomery said. "I couldn't do what I wanted to do."

Montgomery, who twice had points taken away for butting, was disqualified by referee James Molinell at 2:29 of the fifth round after he again lunged into Curry with his head.

The punch triggered a near-brawl as cornermen from both camps raced into the ring and tried to fight each other before security guards and fight officials managed to gain control. It led the Nevada State Athletic Commission to announce that the purses of both fighters would be withheld pending a viewing of the tape of the bout.

"We're not happy with what happened in there," said Sig Rogich, a commissioner, who said the withholding was routine in disputed fights.

The strange ending came in a fight that Curry dominated from the opening bell. It was his first bout since losing the undisputed welterweight crown last September when he was he was stopped in the sixth round by Lloyd Honeyghan.

The Forth Worth, Tex.-based Curry, displaying the power that has given him 20 knockouts in 27 fights, first put Montgomery down with only seconds to go in the second round when he caught him with a chopping left followed by a short right.

Montgomery was up at the count of four and bell for the end of the round sounded just as Molinell signalled for the fighters to continue.

Montgomery, who was warned for butting in the third round, had a point taken away in the fourth. Later in the round, Curry drove Montgomery into the ropes with a left and followed it with a right uppercut to the body that put him down for the second time in the fight.

Montgomery, who comes from Detroit, managed to get up at the count of nine, but Curry was back on top of him and put him down again with a right uppercut. Montgomery stayed on one knee until the count of nine and got up as the bell sounded.

Curry, 153½, came after Montgomery in the fifth round and Montgomery immediately butted him, causing Molinell to take away a second point. Shortly after action resumed, Montgomery appeared to try to ram his head into Curry and Molinell stepped in to end the fight on a disqualification.

Curry, who ran his record to 26-1, put himself in line for a possible title fight at 154 pounds next month against either Buster Drayton or Mike McMcCallum. He earned $100,000 for the scheduled 12-round fight, which was televised nationally by CBS.

Montgomery, 154, lost his first bout in 18 career starts. It was the first time he had been knocked down in his professional career.

Bosworth Favors Staying Put

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — All-American linebacker Brian Bosworth, who is eligible to turn professional this year, said Saturday he would like to return to Oklahoma for his senior season instead of jumping to the NFL.

"That's probably what I want to do right now," said the colorful and controversial Bosworth, who was in New Haven for the annual banquet of the Walter Camp Football Foundation.

"I have to talk with Coach (Barry) Switzer and work out something about coming back."

Bosworth, who will be eligible to play in the NFL if he graduates this spring, as expected, has expressed a desire to play for the New York Giants or Los Angeles Raiders but said he doesn't "feel comfortable" with a draft situation in which he almost certainly will be taken by a team with losing record.

"I don't see why I should leave a place where I'm comfortable to go to a place where I might not be as comfortable," he said. "I've gotten used to winning too much, and with next year's schedule, climate and atmosphere we have a chance to win the national championship."

Besides its Big Eight Conference games and traditional rival Texas, Oklahoma's 1987 schedule includes North Texas State, SMU and North Carolina instead of Miami, UCLA and Minnesota.

"As soon as all the recruiting gets over with and things start settling down, I'll talk with Coach Switzer and see if we can come to an agreement," Bosworth said. "The biggest thing has been trying to track each other down because he's been on the road recruiting and I've been going to so many functions."

To preserve his final season of collegiate eligibility, Bosworth turned down an invitation to participate in ABC-TV's Superstars competition.

Switzer said last week he doesn't expect Bosworth to return to Oklahoma this fall. The NFL draft is April 28 and Bosworth must declare by April 13.

The NCAA ruled Bosworth ineligible for the Orange Bowl last season because a drug test showed traces of a steroid. Bosworth said he used the steroid last March because of a shoulder injury and he subsequently blasted the NCAA's drug enforcement policy and also appeared on the sidelines at the Orange Bowl wearing a T-shirt which referred to the NCAA as "National Communists Against Athletes." He later issued a public apology to the NCAA and to Oklahoma.

Dodger's Hershiser Loses Arbitration

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Orel Hershiser of the Los Angeles Dodgers must accept a $200,000 pay cut, an arbitrator ruled Saturday, handing the pitcher the worst loss of any player in baseball's salary arbitration.

The 26-year-old right-hander, who was 14-14 last season with an earned run average of 3.85, had asked the National League club to boost his $1 million salary to $1.1 million.

But arbitrator Ray Goetz agreed with the Dodgers' contention that Hershiser is worth only $800,000 this season. That amounts to a 20 percent pay cut, the most allowed under the players' overall agreement with the club owners.

It was the first arbitration decision of the year, and only the second time an arbitrator has reduced a player's salary.

"It's not going to affect me in the least bit," Hershiser said from Santa Barbara in a conference call with reporters. "I'm going to go out and work as hard as I did in the past."

Rose Holds Off Bruins, 65-55

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Point guard Keyford Langley poured in 20 points and three other Rose players reached double figures as the Rampants held off upset-minded Wilson Beddingfield, 65-55, Friday night to remain undefeated in Big East Conference play.

Melvin Jenkins and Terry Warren chipped in 13 points apeice and Errol Wooten added 11 for Rose, which improved to 16-2 overall and 10-0 in the division.

Kim Dupree and Kim Bridges combined for 32 points to lead the Rampettes, who also haven't been beaten by a conference foe, to a 74-34 rout of the Lady Bruins to complete the sweep.

Rose Coach Jim Brewington said he expected a strong performance from the pesky Beddingfield team.

"They've got to win (at this point of the season) because they're fighting for a playoff birth," he said. "They really needed a win."

The fourth-place Bruins, who went into Friday night's contest holding a one-game lead over Northeastern, fell to 12-6 and 5-5.

Beddingfield's Gus Ward scored 16 points in the first half, but managed just two in the second half when the Rampants used a variety of zone defenses to shut him down.

"Any team with a Gus Ward is capable of winning any game," Brewington said. "I thought we did a real good job on him in the second half."

Brewington said Langley made the most of his opportunities during the game, which just happened to be played on his birthday.

"Tonight was his birthday, and he played like it was," Brewington said. "We've been telling him we're not overly concerned with his turnovers because he's going to make his share of them when he's handling the ball 90 percent of the time."

The Rampants fell behind 8-6 early in the first quarter, but outscored the Bruins 12-4 over the last 4:41 of the first quarter to take a 18-12 lead by the end of the period.

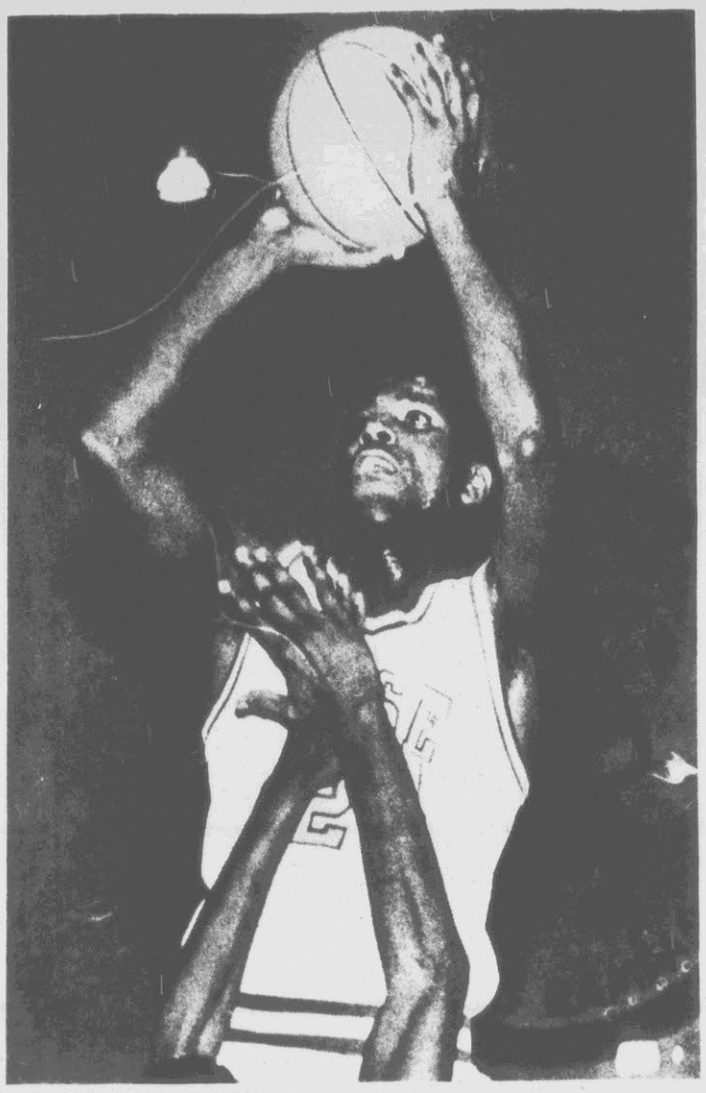
Ward scored 10 of the Bruins 12 points in the quarter.

After Ward nailed a 10-foot jumper to knot the score at 22-22 with 5:12 to go in the first half, Langley scored four consecutive points in a 12-second span to move the Rampants out to a 26-22 lead.

Ward came back for the Bruins with a pair of free throws to make it 26-24 with 4:21 left until intermission, but Rose went ona 8-0 tear, and Langley's layup with 21 seconds on the clock gave the Rampants a 34-24 lead.

Jeff Farmer sank two free throws and David Langston canned another for Beddingfield to tighten the score at 34-27 at halftime.

Langston opened the second half with a three point play to make it 34-30, but Rose outscored the Bruins 18-8 over the next 5:15 of play to move out to a 52-38 lead on a bucket by Langley. The Bruins scored the final four points of the period to make it 42-32 with eight minutes to play.



Squaring Up
Rose's Terry Warren goes up for a jumper against Wilson Beddingfield in Friday night's Big East Conference game in Greenville. The Rampants went on to win the contest, 65-55. (Reflector Photo by Cliff Hollis)

Trailing by 10 points with 5:59 to play, Beddingfield scored six unanswered points and moved to within four at 55-51 on a layup by Willie Woodward with 4:27 to go.

But that was as close as the Bruins could get. Rose then poured in eight straight points, taking a 63-51 lead on two free throws by Jenkins with 1:40 to go.

In the clinching stretch, Warren sank a short jumper and Wooten completed a three-point play.

A pair of buckets by Beddingfield's Tyrone Willoughby made it 63-55 with 1:03 to go, but Jenkins netted two free throws with six seconds left to close out the scoring at 65-55.

The win puts the Rampants one step closer to clinching the conference title, Brewington said.

"This was a big boost for us," he said.

In the girls' game, the Rampettes used their quickness and aggressive defense to bury the Lady Bruins.

Dupree, who was playing with a sore mouth, led all scorers with 17 points, while Bridges added 15, and Lisa Leisten chipped in 13 for Rose, which improved its first place record to 14-2 overall and 10-0 in the Big East.

Beddingfield's girls fall to 3-15 and 3-7.

Rose Coach Bill Kuykendall said the aggressive style led many scoring opportunities as well as some early turnovers for the Rampettes.

"I think whenever you don't have to set an offense up and you get into a running game you're going to have some turnovers," he said.

Despite, the injury to her mouth, Dupree was able to make a strong contribution under the boards, according to Kuykendall.

"It looked like her mouth bothered her out there, but she still rebounded well," he said. "The whole team did a good job. I'm real happy with the win.

The Rampettes, who never trailed in the contest, put the game out of reach early.

After moving out to an 18-9 lead after one period of play, Rose outscored the Lady Bruins, 14-3, in the first 6:12 of the second quarter and took a 34-12 lead on a three-point play by Amy Barr with 1:48 left in the half.

Beddingfield chipped the lead down to 35-18 by intermission, but the Rampettes moved out to a 43-18 lead on a bucket by Dupree with 4:23 left in the third quarter.

Rose continued to pour it on and led 55-26 after three periods of play.

With both teams substituting freely in the final period, the Rampettes outscored the Lady Bruins, 19-8, to take the 74-34 win.

Rose hosts Kinston Tuesday night in another Big East Conference game.

UNC's Kenny Smith Shows No Ills From Operation

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — After watching what North Carolina's Kenny Smith did to his team, North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano says is talking of putting some of his players through arthroscopic surgery.

Smith, five days after undergoing the procedure on his left knee, put on a near perfect display of basketball talent Thursday night.

Smith operated the Tar Heel fast-break offense for 30 minutes, drove inside for baskets and popped outside to nail three 3-point field goals in a 21-point performance. Third-ranked North Carolina crushed the Wolfpack 96-79.

All week, Valvano had heard Smith would be out of the lineup, but that was not the case when the two teams took the floor for the Atlantic Coast Conference game.

"Next time, three of my players will have arthroscopic surgery and a couple will get the flu and maybe we'll win," Valvano said. "Kenny Smith was great from the opening 3-pointer to the final buzzer."

"The knee is definitely not 100 percent, but it's close to top-notch," Smith said. "About the only thing I couldn't do is dunk the ball with ease."

Rick Brewer, North Carolina's sports information director, said Friday that team physician Dr. Joseph DeWalt told him after Smith's surgery last Saturday, that the senior guard would probably play against N.C. State.

"Yeah, Joe (DeWalt) told me that Kenny had a good chance to play, but he didn't want to say anything in case Kenny couldn't play," Brewer said.

Smith, who leads the Tar Heels with his 17.7 point scoring average, not only impressed Valvano, but his teammates.

"I'm not surprised he came back from surgery so fast," said freshman center J.R. Reid. "He's a tough kind of guy — a New Yorker. He likes to play."

Smith scored a career-high 41 points against Clemson after missing a game two weeks ago against Georgia Tech for a knee injury unrelated to the cartilage damage he suffered in his left knee.

However, going into Thursday night's game, Smith said he felt great.

"I knew ... I was going to be fine," he said. "It was the first time since last summer that my knee wasn't tight. I knew I could go full speed. It felt good to be able to cut and run without having to worry about the knee."

Gaines Calls It Quits At San Diego State

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Losing was making David "Smokey" Gaines physically sick, so he decided to resign as coach of the San Diego State basketball team.

"I wasn't pressured into resigning, but in my situation, I was going uphill. I would look and see a record of 2-19, I've lost 17-18 pounds, and this is the first time that I've been sick during the season," said Gaines, who announced his resignation Friday.

Gaines, whose team is mired in the longest losing streak in the school's history, said his resignation is effective at the end of this season. He will be reassigned as an assistant athletic director for marketing and promotions for the duration of his contract though mid-1989, Athletic Director Fred Miller said.

Miller said he hopes to name a new coach by the completion of the NCAA tournament this spring.

Gaines decision to resign came one day after the Aztecs lost their 13th straight game, falling to 2-19 overall and 0-9 in the Western Athletic Conference.

In eight seasons at San Diego State, Gaines has an overall record of 109-111.

Gaines missed the Jan. 29 game that the Aztecs lost to U.S. International, 87-81, due to the flu. That loss broke the previous school record of 10 straight defeats.

Gaines said he has been thinking of quitting since last year, when San Diego State finished at 10-19, the team's first losing mark in six years.

He said he made up his mind to resign after the Aztecs lost Thursday night to Colorado State. A few hours later, he met with Miller to finalize the decision.

Gaines came to San Diego State in 1979 from the University of Detroit, where in two seasons he went 47-10.

San Diego State's best record as a Division I team came under Gaines during the 1984-85 season, when it finished 23-8. The Aztecs beat Texas-El Paso in the WAC tournament that season to qualify for the NCAA tournament for the first time in 10 years, but lost to Nevada-Las Vegas in the opening round.

Jordan, Erving To Showcase Talents

SEATTLE (AP) — Michael Jordan doesn't mind at all when he hears somebody call him the next Dr. J.

"I'd like to have that same type of respect by the time I retire and put down the ball," Jordan said as he prepared for Sunday's NBA All-Star Game.

"The way he carries himself," Jordan said, "I'd love to follow his footsteps."

Jordan, the flamboyant 23-year-old basketball artist who is averaging a league-leading 37 points per game in his third season with the Chicago Bulls, will get to play on the same team as Julius Erving for probably the last time Sunday.

The 36-year-old Erving, playing in his 11th All-Star Game, is retiring at the end of the season. Both he and Jordan are starters on the East squad.

"I want this to be his best All-Star game," Jordan said. "When I was young, when you thought NBA basketball, you thought Dr. J.

"You never really felt that you'd get the chance to play with him at all. This is one of those rare times that I get a chance to play with him and I'm going to cherish it a whole lot.

"I think there's a lot of sentiment on the Eastern team for him," Jordan said, "and I think we're going to come out and win for him."

Jordan, who also went after his first NBA slam-dunk title today, will be making his second all-star appearance.

He started as a rookie, scoring seven points while hitting two of nine shots from the field. Last season, the fans voted him into the starting lineup, but he didn't play because of the broken foot that wiped out most of his second season with the Bulls.

"I was so in awe (as a rookie) that I was probably more nervous than ever," Jordan remembered. "I think I'll be more relaxed this time."

"I didn't know exactly what to do in an all-star situation in my rookie season," he said. "Now I think I do have a handle on what to do and what the people want to see."

And what is that?

"Entertainment, dunks, good basketball, good passes, all the spectacular plays that come in a basketball game."

Jordan was criticized two years ago for wearing his Nike-brand warmups in the slam-dunk competition.

Although he wore a sample of his new "Air Jordan" line of attire at Friday's news conference, he promised not to wear them in the weekend competition.

"I did what Nike asked me to do," he said of his decision to wear the warmups two years ago, "and I thought any normal person would have done that in the same predicament. But I won't do it tomorrow. You can believe that."

Jordan became the slam-dunk favorite when Dominique Wilkins of Atlanta pulled out due to a sore back.

"I offered him $1,000 to drop out," Jordan joked.

Wilkins was second to Atlanta's 5-foot-7 Spud Webb last year and Jordan was second to Wilkins two years ago. Webb isn't entered in the slam-dunk event this year because of an injury.

Carlton, Reds Discuss Non-Roster Tryout

CINCINNATI (AP) — Steve Carlton, a four-time Cy Young Award winner who pitched for three major-league teams last season, is bidding for a non-roster tryout with the Cincinnati Reds this spring.

The Reds are talking with Carlton's agent about the possibility, according to General Manager Bill Bergesch.

"I'd say there's a mutual interest," Bergesch told The Cincinnati Enquirer. "I don't want to get into the details of it, because that's part of the negotiations."

Carlton, 42, pitched for Philadelphia, San Francisco and the Chicago White Sox last season and was ultimately released by all three teams. He was 9-14 with a 5.10 earned run average overall.

He has 324 career victories and is interested in pitching this year, said his agent, Peter Funsten.

"Cincinnati is at the top of our list," Funsten said. "And we are not consulting with anyone else at the moment. Obviously, the situation would be ideal for Steve ... He's very interested."

Sheldon "Chief" Bender, the Reds' vice president for player personnel, is inclined to think Carlton's career is over.

"I wouldn't count on what he's got left," Bender said. "He's counting on his pitching knowledge to get by. I can't feel that we've got any interest in him."

Bergesch indicated the Reds are interested in Carlton on a tryout basis only.

"If he would make the club, we would sign him to a contract," Bergesch said. "But we're not going to remove any of the players from the roster to make room for anybody. We like what we have."

AHOSKIE — Tony Clemons poured in 29 points to lead five players in double figures as Pitt Community College held off Roanoke-Chowan Technical College, 89-86 in community college basketball action Friday night.

Mike Hathaway added 24 points for Pitt, with Jarvis Wiggins chipping in 13 and Joel Isley and Tyrone Andrews scoring 10 apiece.

Roanoke-Chowan led 46-36 at the half but Pitt came back to take the lead, 60-58, with 11:35 to go on a basket Tyrone Andrews.

Pitt advanced to a 75-66 lead with 7:32 remaining but Roanoke-Chowan rallied back as Andrews, Isley and Wiggins all fouled out in the final minute. Pitt finished the game with four players but held on to win.

The closest Roanoke-Chowan could pull in the final minutes was 86-82.

Pitt improves to 17-6 and returns to action at Chowan Junior College on Monday night.

Roanoke-Chawan's Tommy Vaughn led all scorers with 33 points.

Northampton East Defeats Tigers

WILLIAMSTON — Northampton East came from behind in the final quarter to claim a 53-46 victory over Williamston in Northeastern 2-A conference basketball action Friday night.

Williamston led 35-31 at the end of three quarters of play, but Northampton rallied by outscoring Williamston 22-11 in the fourth period. During that stretch, Northampton East went 12-16 from the free throw line with Edward Vaughan connecting on all four of his attempts.

Rod Sexton led Northampton East with 16 points while Jeff Ramsey added 12 and Vaughan 10 more.

The Tigers, 7-11 overall and 3-6 in the conference, were led by Vincent's Speller's 12 points. Reggie Randolph added 10 more.

Williamston returns to action Tuesday at Edenton.

The Northampton girls edged out to a 25-11 halftime advantage and never looked back as they popped the Lady Tigers, 51-38.

Josie Bell led Northampton with 33 points with Stephanie Harris added 11.

Dana Hardison and Kim Hawkins scored 13 and 12 respectively for Williamston, 9-9 and 4-5.

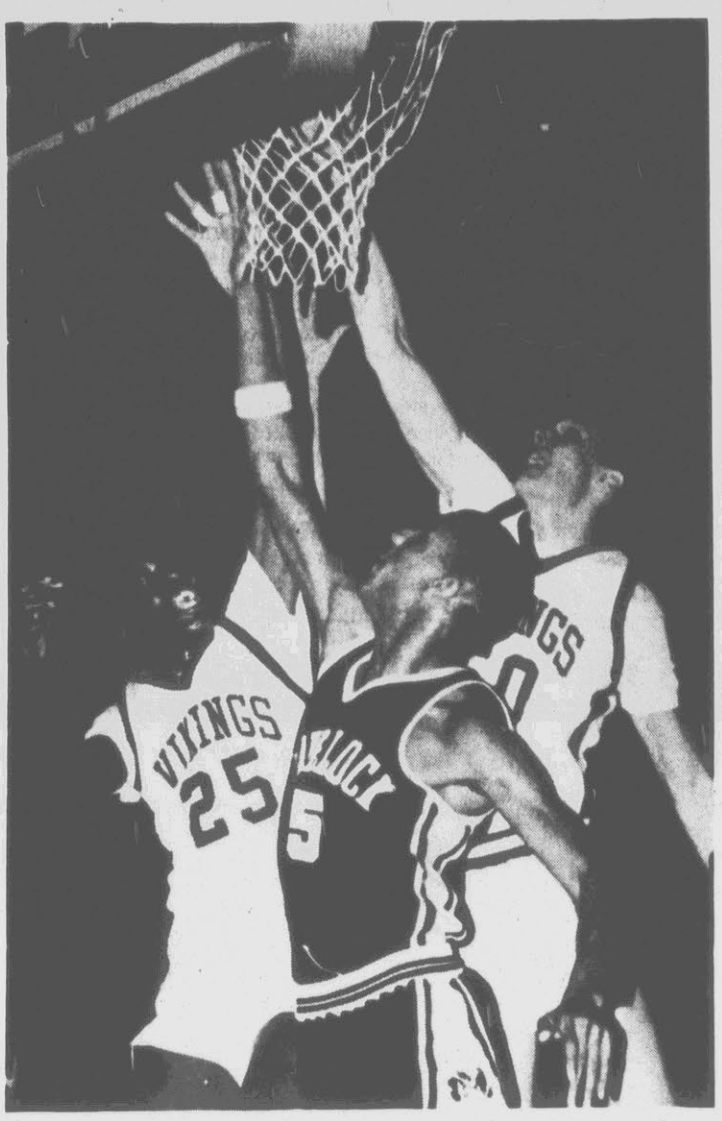
2nd-Half Surge Keys Vikes Past Rams



Pounding The Glass

D.H. Conley's Phil Medlin (50) and Paul Merritt (25) battle for a rebound with Havelock's Anthony Robinson (5) during action from their Coastal Conference game Friday night. The Vikings beat the Rams, 69-52.

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley coach Walter Claybrook was not happy with his team at halftime of their game against Havelock Friday night and he let them know it. The Vikings responded by taking control of the game in the third quarter en route to 69-52 Coastal Conference Basketball victory.

"We probably had a more serious talk at halftime than at any time this year. We were really upset with them at halftime because this was a big game and they did not carry over anything from our practices (the week prior to the game)," Claybrook said.

In the girl's game, the Lady Rams broke open a tight game in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter and rolled to a 57-46 win.

The Conley boys had broken out to a 29-21 lead with just over two and a half minutes remaining in the second quarter but scored only two free throws the rest of the period as Havelock climbed back into the game.

The Rams scored eight straight points to tie the game at 29-29 on a jumper by Al McCabe with 53 seconds before halftime.

Ricky Farrow broke Conley's drought with two free throws with 28 seconds to go in the quarter but Havelock came right back with Joy Carter scoring on a follow shot with two seconds to go in the half to knot the game at 31-31.

"We were scoring points," Claybrook said. "But we weren't doing it the way we had practiced. We had a real serious talk at halftime and (then) we had a good second half. They took to heart what we said about execution."

Phil Medlin opened the second half with a free throw to break the tie. Following a turnover by Havelock, Jonathon Bonner then followed a miss by Troy Ebron to put Conley up 34-31.

After another Ram turnover, Paul Merrit knocked in a jumper to make it 36-31.

With just under five minutes to go in the third period, Havelock's Derek Borden got the first Ram points of the second half when Medlin goaltended one of his shots. Borden was also fouled on the shot and hit the resulting free throw to pull Havelock within two at 36-34.

At this point, the Vikings took matters into their own hands. Farrow hit a free throw. Medlin then hit inside and Bonner converted a steal into a layup to make it 41-34.

Medlin hit inside again and Farrow followed with a reverse layup with 2:33 left in the quarter to make it 45-34. Bonner added a jumper and Farrow finished off the string with a follow shot of a miss by Merrit that ran the lead to 49-34 with just under a minute to go in the third quarter.

McCabe countered with a jumper for Havelock to make it 49-36 as the quarter ended.

Claybrook said he thought the use of a half-court trap was a key in the second half surge. "I think that was what turned the game around," he said. "And in the second half we got on the boards better.

"I was extremely pleased with the second half but I want to stress that they had three of their players out. We don't need any false security."

Bonner led a balanced Viking scoring attack with 17 points, with Farrow chipping in 14, Medlin and Bronswell Patrick 11 apiece and 10 more from Merrit.

Medlin also had five blocked shots while Ebron dished out six assists.

Havelock got no closer than 10 points during the fourth quarter.

Borden hit a basket with just over five and half minutes to go that made it 52-42 but Bonner and Ebron both nailed consecutive one and ones to move the lead back to 56-42.

Mark George countered with a jumper for Havelock but Merrit hit a layup and Farrow followed with a jumper to put the game out of reach at 62-44.

Conley improves to 8-1 in the Coastal Conference and 12-7 overall. Havelock falls two games behind Conley at 6-3 and 15-4.

"I think everybody in their own way contributed in the second half," Claybrook said. "Phil gave us some points when we needed some points. Jonathon Bonner played a good all-around game. Ricky Farrow did not have one of his better games but he was there when it counted."

In the girl's game, the Lady Rams broke open a tie ball game in the opening minutes of the fourth quarter and eased past the Valkyries, 57-46.

Conley trailed 30-19 at the half but rallied in the third quarter by outscoring the Lady Rams 17-6.

Trellany Boyd opened the string for the Valkyries with a jumper. Michelle Barret countered for Havelock to make it 32-21.

The Valkyries countered with an 8-0 run, with Boyd contributing four points to bring the score to 34-29.

Conley continued to close in with Boyd finally tying the game at 36 on a layup as the quarter ended following a steal by Kim Payton.

Havelock though slowly moved ahead in the final period, outscoring the Valkyries 12-4 over the first five minutes of the quarter to forge a 48-40 lead.

"I think the difference was after we tied it up, we were playing not to lose instead of to win," said Conley coach Joy Riddick. "They've got outstanding shooters. We kept (Laura) Maxwell to six points in the second half but Victoria Morris got in there for offensive rebounds and sparked them. Tonight, the last place team was playing the first place team. We showed it we play ball like we did in the third quarter, we can win."

The closest the Valkryies got in the final minutes was 51-46 with just over a minute and a half to go following a jumper by Jackson.

Havelock then converted four consecutive free throws to move back out to a 55-46 lead with 23 seconds remaining.

Conley falls to 6-14 and 1-8 while Havelock improves to 16-4 and 7-2.

"It's just very frustrating," Riddick said. "They really work hard. They gave it everything they had and it's frustrating when you don't come out a winner."

Maxwell led Havelock with 20 points while Boyd was high for Conley with 24.

Conley returns to action Tuesday, hosting West Craven.

Strategy Change In Busch Clash

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The traditional strategy for the Busch Clash has been for the drivers running the best in the 20-lap sprint for big dollars to work on setting themselves up for a last-lap effort.

That has made for some pretty uneventful races in the first eight years of the 50-mile competition for the previous year's pole winners.

However, Terry Labonte, who won the race with a last-lap dash in 1985, said he expects that a new infusion of lap money will change the strategy Sunday in the $210,000 event.

"How you set yourself up, of course, depended on your circumstances — how well you were running, where you were starting, who was in front of you and who was behind you," said Labonte, who will be running for car-owner Junior Johnson for the first time. "Things might be a little different this time. It ought to be pretty exciting to watch.

"The big prize is still the $50,000 for leading the final lap, but I think you're going to see a lot of people shooting for those other lap-leader awards, too."

The leader at the end of lap 5 will earn $10,000, with $15,000 going to the leader at lap 10 and another $10,000 to the leader at lap 15.

Breland Won Fight With Broken Hand

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Mark Breland won the World Boxing Association welterweight title with a broken left hand, he revealed today.

"I broke it in the first round," the 1984 Olympic welterweight champion said. Six rounds later Breland won the title by knocking out Harold Volbrecht of South Africa with a crashing right to the jaw.

Breland said it was the third time since September that he had broken the fourth metacarpal bone in the left hand.

Both he and manager Shelly Finkel said he felt the hand had healed enough before Friday night that the fight was worth the risk.

Finkel also said Breland had a tendon problem in his left hand and would undergo surgery next week to correct that problem.

Breland had a tendon problem in the right hand corrected by surgery in 1983.

Breland, after ending the fight at 2:07 of the seventh round, appeared at a post-fight party with the hand bandaged and said that it "might be broken."

With the victory, the 23-year-old from Brooklyn became the second 1984 Olympian to win a world pro title. Evander Holyfield, a light heavyweight bronze medal winner at the Los Angeles Games, is the WBA junior heavyweight champion.

The unbeaten Breland's 17th win and 12th knockout wasn't achieved in spectacular fashion. In fact, for six rounds the fight was on the dull side and a crowd of 2,800 at the Atlantic City Convention Center Ballroom was getting restless.

"He needs a bit of polish," said the 30-year-old Volbrecht, whose awkward left-handed style wouldn't let Breland get set through the first six rounds.

Deer, Bear Hunters May Have to Wear Blaze Orange

The N.C. Wildlife Federation, the state's largest conservation group, recently called on the 1987 General Assembly to enact a law requiring the use of a blaze orange cap and vest during the gun hunting season for deer and bear.

The federation said six people died during the 1986-87 hunting season and that five of the six would probably still be alive today if they had been wearing a blaze orange vest or cap.

Even so, local hunters said in interviews Friday that they have mixed feelings about the proposed law.

"I think wearing blaze orange is a good habit to get into, but it should not be mandatory. It should be left up to the individual hunter," said Allen Clark, a Greenville deer hunter.

"I wear orange when I'm walking to the stand, then I take it off. The only reason I don't want it to be a law is because I wouldn't like to have to keep it (orange) on when I got up the tree. I like to look as natural as I can because I need all the help I can get," he commented.

Larry Hawkins, a deer hunter who lives in Bell Arthur, agreed that wearing blaze orange should be a matter of choice.

"It would save lives and I think it should be practiced, but I don't like to practice it myself. There are some places where you know nobody can hunt even within a mile or two of you and you shouldn't have to wear orange there. But if you're hunting where a bunch of people are, like at game lands, then you should have to wear it," Hawkins said.

Randy Hawkins of Greene County, Larry's brother, said the proposed law is "not a bad idea. I would prefer they didn't (make it a law), but it would make things safer for a lot of hunters."

Mike Corcoran, executive vice president of the 30,000-member federation, said he thinks "we are at the point now that most folks see the need for a law requiring hunters to wear it. It will save lives."

Corcoran said he sees the proposed law as "another case where responsible hunters have an opportunity to do something positive. If we, as hunters, do not clean up our own house, then someone else will. And we might not like the job they do."

Thirty-seven states require the use of blaze orange. Massachusetts was the first state to enact a law 18 years ago and that state has not had a single "mistaken-for-game" accident since. Other states report similar results.

"Blaze orange is like a beacon in the woods," said Doug Painter, communications director for the National Shooting Sports Foundation and an expert on hunting safety.

"There is no color like it in the woods. The human eye immediately picks it up in even low-light conditions. We see dramatic results from states that have the requirement," Painter said.

The N.C. Wildlife Resources Commission, the agency that would enforce the new law, is holding public hearings across the state beginning Monday and continuing through Feb. 23.

"We need to carefully consider all aspects of making hunter orange clothing mandatory and obtain as much advice as possible from the people it will affect," said commission chairman Jerry Wright.

"For now, our policy as a commission is that we vigorously encourage the use of hunter orange on a voluntary basis," he commented.

The public hearing closest to this area will be held Feb. 19 at 7 p.m. in the Craven County Courthouse in New Bern.

Fishing Guide

UNC Sea Grant has recently published a guide to some of the state's best offshore fishing spots.

The publication, a poster called "The Hardbottom Distribution Map," is a four-color map covering Onslow Bay, an offshore area between Cape Lookout and Cape Fear. It includes Loran-C readings so fishermen can locate natural reefs.

"Hardbottoms" is a geologic term for underwater mesas, which form natural reefs that attract some of the ocean's most delectable fare — snapper, grouper and black bass.

On the other side of the poster are five detailed paintings that realistically depict the mesas and the life nearby.

Offshore sport fishermen say the maps will take much of the guesswork out of snapper and grouper fishing. According to Sea Grant, some fishermen have begged the agency to keep the posters secret.

The maps cost $5 and are avilable from UNC Sea Grant, Box 8605, N.C. State University, Raleigh, N.C. 27695 (telephone: 737-2454).

Sea Grant is a federal and state program that promotes the wise use of our coastal and marine resources through research, education and extension.

Greene Central Dumps North Pitt

SNOW HILL — Jake Barrow scored 18 points and Anthony Jones added 13 as Greene Central defeated North Pitt, 62-53, in Eastern Plains Conference basketball action Friday night.

Greene Central led from the opening tip but was not able to pull away from the Panthers until the final minute.

The Rams led at the half, 28-26, and at the end of three quarters of play, 46-43, but the Panthers pulled within 52-51 with just over two minutes remaining.

Greene Central then hit free throws down the stretch as three Panthers starters, Calvin Hunter, Paul Blow and Ashley Sheppard, fouled out in the final two minues.

The Rams converted the fouls into points and eased past the Panthers.

Woodrow Wallace and Melvin Croom aided the Ram cause with 12 and 11 points respectively.

Sheppard led North Pitt, 8-10 and 4-5, with 12 points. Greene Central improves to 7-11 and 3-5.

The Pant-HERS topped the Lady Rams by a score of 66-53 behind 17 points by Keisha Pilgreen.

North Pitt led 34-20 at the half and moved out to a 50-35 lead after three quarters of play.

Climmie Harris added 16 points for the Pant-HERS, 10-9 and 4-5, while Gwen Pilgreen added 13 and Amy Heath 12.

Peterson Powers Chargers Past Washington, 70-62

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton's Ronnell Peterson scorched the nets for 21 points as the Chargers outlasted Washington, 70-62, in a non-conference high school basketball game Friday night.

Angie Holley scored 15 points to lead Washington to a 43-29 victory in the girls' game.

The Chargers, who also got 13 points from Hilton Ellison and 12 from Eric Blount, trailed the Pam Pack, 50-48, heading into the final eight minutes, but outscored Washington, 22-12, in the fourth quarter to come away with the win.

Ayden-Grifton held a slim 15-14 lead after one period of play, but trailed, 34-28, at halftime.

The Chargers outscored the Pam Pack, 20-16, in the third period to set the stage for the final quarter.

Ryan Dixon led Washington with 18 points, while Frankie Warren and Tyrone Lodge chipped in 14 points each. Dwayne Moore added 10 for Washington, which fell to 3-15 overall.

Ayden-Grifton improves to 14-4.

In the girls' game, the Lady Chargers moved out to a 11-10 lead after the first period, but Washington rallied for a 25-15 lead at the half after outscoring Ayden-Grifton, 15-4, in the second quarter.

Washington continued to pull away in the third quarter and moved out to a 39-17 lead with eight minutes to play.

The Lady Chargers scored 12 fourth quarter points as opposed to only four by Washington to make the final score a bit closer at 43-29.

Yolanda Oden scored 11 points and Tanya Holley chipped in 10 for Washington, which improved to 10-6.

The Lady Chargers fall to 14-4.

Gymnastics

Rose High School's Karen Dixon leaped 36-feet-1 to capture first place in the triple jump competition of the North Carolina High School Athletic Association indoor state championship Friday.

Since this is the first year the state has recognized and sponsored the indoor meet, the distance will be considered a new record.

"Karen finished second last year in outdoors," said Rose Coach Dennis Gibson. "She should be a strong contender for the outdoor championship this spring.

Carter, Armond Lead Plymouth Over Roanoke

PLYMOUTH — James Carter scored 18 points and Marvin Armond tallied 17 as Plymouth defeated Roanoke, 70-59, in a Northeastern Conference 2-A basketball game Friday night.

Plymouth's Patricia Boston poured in 16 points to lead the Lady Vikings to a 47-43 win in the girls' game to hand the Lady Redskins their first conference loss of the season.

Plymouth jumped out to an early 13-8 advantage, but Roanoke tightened the score at 26-24 at the half. Plymouth outscored the Redskins, 22-17, in the third quarter to increase the lead to 48-41.

The Vikings held off Roanoke, 22-18, in the final frame to secure the 70-59 win.

Derrick Boyd led the Redskins, who fell to 6-11 overall and 4-5 in the conference, with 15 points, while Ricky Congleton chipped in 12 and Richard Moore added 11.

Plymouth upped its record to 15-1 and 7-1.

In the girls' game, Roanoke crept out to a 10-9 lead in the first quarter, but Plymouth exploded for 17 points in the second frame while limiting the Lady Redskins to just two to take a 26-12 lead at intermission.

Roanoke pulled to within 37-25 after the third quarter and outscored the Lady Vikings, 18-10, in the final quarter, but it was too little too late.

Joyce Outlaw scored 20 points to lead the Lady Redskins, who fell to 10-7 and 8-1. Plymouth improves to 4-4 and 6-11.

Roanoke hosts North Pitt Tuesday night.

Smaller Companies Want Voice In Forging 'Competitiveness' Plan

By MARK POTTS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — According to the stereotype, the companies getting hammered by the United States' ebbing competitiveness in world markets are large ones in industries such as steel and auto manufacturing.

That's why leaders in the call for improvement of the nation's competitive position include such big business organizations as the Business Roundtable and the National Association of Manufacturers.

But now, groups representing smaller companies are weighing in with studies and recommendations on competitiveness. And while they agree that the United States' viability in world markets is a problem, their approaches and priorities differ in many ways from those of Big Business.

The smaller companies argue that, because they created many of the new jobs in the United States in the past decade, they deserve a major role in shaping the competitiveness doctrine that Congress and the Reagan administration are debating.

"I think our companies are a darn good example to the larger companies in America in terms of the way they approach their business," said Arthur Levitt Jr., president of the American Stock Exchange and chairman of the American Business Conference, a group of 100 midsize companies.

Last week, ABC issued a report on its members' relative success in cracking international markets. The ABC report was released one day after the National Commission on Jobs and Small Business issued recommendations on competitiveness, particularly in relation to smaller companies.

The jobs and small business commission, composed of a group of small business leaders and legislators, was directed by former presidents Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter.

"The commission does not pretend that small business alone can bear the burden of restoring the competitiveness of the United States," the commission's report states. "We maintain, however, that the initiative and flexibility of small firms can play a vital role in the vigorous, growing economy essential to securing America's place in the world. And we insist that sustaining the creativity and growth of small business is crucial to our national vigor."

The two reports add to the growing volume of major studies on competitiveness. (One analyst counts more than three dozen during the past couple of years.)

Many of the recommendations in the reports are similar to points in the administration's competitiveness package, which President Reagan unveiled two weeks ago in the State of the Union Address: that reduction of the budget and trade deficits, more education, increased use of technology and encouragement of business initiatives are essential to improving the ability of American companies to compete in world markets.

But the ABC and the Commission on Jobs and Small Business reports put different emphasis on some of these issues. These groups are more vocal in their call for improvement in the climate for capital formation, to make it easier for smaller companies to raise money for expansion. In addition, they tend to be fiercely antiprotectionist, arguing that trade curbs put in place by the United States cause retaliatory actions that tend to hurt smaller companies that have managed to carve out niches in foreign markets.

Many small companies want help in furthering their efforts to win overseas business, arguing that unlike their larger counterparts, they are too small to organize and run their own foreign marketing operations.

The ABC survey of its members' views on competitiveness differs from other reports because it has a tinge of optimism. It turns out that the 100 ABC companies-many of them in high-technology fields-are doing fine in the overseas markets that are upsetting bigger, and smaller, companies.

According to the survey, 22.1 percent of the ABC companies' revenue came from overseas sales in 1985, making them relatively worldly compared with most of their counterparts. "ABC companies, representing all sectors of the economy, are meeting the challenge of international competition," the report said. "Clearly, the penetration of foreign markets has become, and will continue to be, crucial to the high growth strategies of ABC executives."

What's their secret? "We compete by promoting value-added products, niche marketing, better product performance, more product variety, and using entrepreneurial salesmen," said Roland Boreham, chairman of Baldor Electric Co., an ABC member that makes electric motors.

Boreham is specifically describing his own company's strategy but, according to the report, the formula is similar for the other firms surveyed. "ABC companies compete against their international rivals primarily on quality, value, innovation, service and marketing," the report concludes.

Still, ABC officials admit that all is not rosy. "Encouraging as they are, the results of the survey should not be misconstrued," the organization wrote in the preface to the report. "ABC executives are fully aware of the fragility of their international success. None are complacent about maintaining that success. Nor do they believe that their example yields easy, readily transferable lessons for industries suffering decline and job losses. If this survey is used to camouflage the grave economic problems confronting the United States, problems of which the lack of competitiveness is both a symptom and a cause, it will prove to be a counterproductive enterprise."

Because its membership is so heavily involved in foreign trade, the ABC report comes out strongly against American barriers to imports, on the grounds that protectionism can backfire on companies that depend on exports.

"It's our companies, who are abroad, who will be retaliated against," said William Lilley III, president of the group. "Because our companies are expanding so fast abroad, they are concerned, realistically concerned, that any sort of (protectionist) cycle will take them hostage. ... The American Business

NOW, FOUR YEARS OF COLLEGE TUITION ON THE HOUSE!

If you're in the position of facing college tuition payments, and you make too much to qualify for grants and aid, but too little to tote the bills out of current income—then we have the answer.

Equity Line from First Citizens Bank. Simply put, it is a line of credit based on the equity you now have in your home, and it offers a lot of benefits you won't find under ordinary loan programs.

First, even under the new tax laws, every penny of interest you pay is tax deductible.

Second, the interest rate is incredibly low. Prime plus 1½% on amounts up to $14,999 and prime plus 1% on Equity Line accounts set up for greater amounts.

And perhaps best of all, repayments can be extended over many years. Plus, since you write checks on your Equity Line account as you need the funds, you're not paying in advance for money you haven't used yet.

So, even if college is still a couple of years off, it makes sense to get your financing in place right now. Particularly since First Citizens has eliminated all origination fees. Like all mortgage backed loans of this type, closing costs may apply, but your First Citizens branch manager or loan officer will help you keep those to the absolute minimum.

College tuition on the house. It's a great idea for anyone whose dreams are bigger than their bank accounts.

Congress Gets Plea From Housing Industry

By KENNETH BREDEMEIER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — While Congress debates the trade and budget deficits and investigates arms sales to Iran, the housing and mortgage-lending industries are trying to persuade the nation's lawmakers that they should make a renewed commitment to housing and to easier terms to finance it.

The National Association of Home Builders and the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, buffeted by six years of sharp Reagan administration cuts in federal housing programs and new proposals to make it more costly to obtain a mortgage insured by the Veterans Administration or the Federal Housing Administration, have in the last three weeks adopted long lists of goals that they believe Congress should embrace as a national housing policy.

The National Association of Realtors also is drafting a statement that, like the home builders' and mortgage bankers' statements, is likely to call for more funding for federal housing programs, larger tax breaks for real-estate investors and less onerous provisions for mortgage borrowers.

Thomas M. French Jr., president of the mortgage-bankers group, said the VA and FHA mortgage programs "have changed us from a nation of renters into a nation of homeowners." But he said that what President Reagan has done in allowing the Office of Management and Budget to seek to impose various user fees on the programs "has been devastating and unwise.

"With each change," he said, "the opportunities are diminished. Always it's the lower echelon (of would-be home buyers) that's most affected."

Kent W. Colton, executive vice president of the home-builders group, said at the organization's recent annual convention in Dallas that the administration's fiscal 1988 budget calling for continued housing-budget cuts leaves "the impression that housing is not that important. We do need a more positive national housing policy."

While home builders and mortgage lenders would obviously stand to gain from more housing programs and easier lending terms, it is would-be homeowners who would bear the brunt of the administration's proposals.

In part, the proposed 1988 budget would prevent home buyers from financing their closing costs under government-backed mortgage-loan programs, instead requiring them to pay the fees up front. FHA's mortgage-insurance premium would rise from 3.8 percent to 5 percent of the loan, while the minimum down payment for families earning more than $40,000 annually would rise from 4.5 percent to 5 percent of the FHA loans.

The Veterans Administration has proposed increasing its insurance fee from 1 percent to 2.5 percent of the value of the loan.

French said that while the government seeks to increase the amount of revenue it can gain from the popular housing-loan programs, the levies actually are rooted in the Reagan administration's belief that the government simply should not be deeply involved in housing programs.

While the home builders and the mortgage bankers trumpet free enterprise, they also firmly support the government's heavy involvement in housing programs.

"The private sector is the best mechanism for meeting the demands for housing for most Americans," the home builders said in their publication, "A Blueprint for National Housing Policy." But the group quickly added that "all levels of government must be involved in assuring decent and affordable housing for all Americans and widespread home-ownership opportunities."

For their part, the mortgage bankers said, "The federal government has a responsibility to maintain and improve the affordability of housing for all its citizens. ... "

Oddly, while members of both the home-builders and mortgage-bankers groups have generally supported the conservative policies of the Reagan administration, they now find themselves turning to the Democratic-controlled Congress for help in staving off further housing-program cuts.

Officials of the home builders' group said they generally find more sympathy for their positions among Democrats, while French said,

"We're encouraged that many members of Congress believe housing is a fundamental part of the quality of life in America."

JOB HUNTER — Unemployment rates have fallen slightly in recent weeks but Art Fosle of Sauk Village, Ill., says he has been out of work for nearly three months. That's also when his daughter was born, making the lack of income even worse. A construction worker, Fosle took his plight to a safety strip on Interstate 94 in Chicago last week. As of Saturday, he was still unemployed. (AP Laserphoto)

Mortgage Service Confuses

By WENDY SWALLOW
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Mortgage lending once was simple. The home buyer would go to a local bank or savings and loan, get a mortgage and then send mortgage payments to the lender. If the home buyer had a problem with the loan, he or she would go down to the lender's office and talk with a loan officer.

Now, however, the majority of new mortgages are sold into the secondary mortgage market, and homeowners often end up making mortgage payments to unknown companies hundreds of miles from their homes. Those companies often do not own the loan. But they collect the payments and can sell the right to collect payments to another company.

Welcome to the Byzantine world of mortgage servicing, a corner of the mortgage-finance industry that has existed for years but lay dormant in a simplified state until the interest-rate increases of the late 1970s. Since then, mortgage servicing has grown increasingly complex as lenders have turned to servicing to help them increase income and manage interest rate risk.

Servicing and trading of servicing contracts has become a booming sideline for a number of mortgage companies. Of the $2.5 trillion in outstanding mortgage debt in the United States at the end of September, industry analysts estimate that $800 billion worth of loans were being serviced by companies other than the owners of the loans. Of that $800 billion, $100 billion worth of servicing contracts were traded among mortgage companies last year.

Servicing contracts are valuable for a number of reasons. When a company buys a servicing contract, it usually pays a fee equal to about 1½ percent of the outstanding loan amount. The company then takes a monthly fee of an average of 0.37 percent out of each mortgage payment.

In most states, the servicer of a mortgage collects money not only to pay the principal and interest on the loan, but also to pay property taxes and often hazard insurance as well as private mortgage insurance. While the homeowner usually pays a portion of these costs in each monthly payment, the servicer normally pays the insurance and tax bills once or twice a year. The servicer is required to keep the funds in escrow accounts, but is allowed to keep the interest the money earns before the bills are paid.

A spokeswoman for the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), the country's largest buyer of loans for sale in the secondary mortgage market, said that mergers, acquisitions and consolidations of mortgage companies during the past four years have triggered much of the trading of servicing contracts.

"Times were tough for a lot of smaller lenders during the years when mortgage rates were above 13 percent, and a number of those lenders were absorbed into larger companies," said Bonnie O'Dell of Fannie Mae. Other industry analysts said some troubled lenders have sold their servicing to raise cash quickly.

Peter Knight, vice president and director of mortgage finance for the National Council of Savings Institutions, said there is a trend toward consolidation in the servicing industry, as several large corporations have invested thousands of dollars in sophisticated computer systems to manage servicing contracts. Knight said that studies of the industry show that the largest players in the market are growing two to three times as fast as the overall market.

The Newest Name In Mortgage Banking Has A Long Family History.

First Union Mortgage Corporation may be a brand new name on the mortgage banking scene. But our company has been arranging mortgage loans for American families for over 40 years.

You see, until recently, we were Cameron-Brown Company, one of the largest mortgage banking firms in America. And now, we've changed our name to reflect our long association with First Union Corporation, one of America's fastest-growing bank holding companies.

But even though our name has changed, we're not about to change what has made us so successful.

We offer a wide variety of conventional, FHA and VA mortgage plans. We also offer some very attractive refinancing plans. Plus income property loans. And a complete line of insurance services.

What's more, we're providing important new services like relocation financing, which helps corporations move employees from city to city efficiently and economically.

And when you deal with First Union Mortgage, you know you're doing business with one of the most trusted companies in America. A company with a servicing portfolio exceeding $10 billion. A network of over 130 offices located in 33 states. And, of course, 40 years of experience.

So whether you're a home buyer shopping for a loan, a builder, or a Realtor, call the First Union Mortgage office nearest you.

And find out more about mortgage banking's exciting new name.

"CALL TRACKING PLUGGED OUR LONG DISTANCE LEAK."

—Bill Self
Vice President–Finance
Applied Control Systems

"We were wasting money on the telephone. Call tracking showed us where. With BTI, we can code our calls by job number, individual or department. After all, time is money. BTI saves us a lot of both."

Reagan 'Competitiveness' Plan Faces Stiff Battle In Congress

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is seeking to turn the Capitol Hill tide of restrictive trade legislation with its own package of remedies, but the president's "competitiveness" proposals are facing stiff competition.

A rival trade bill filed late last week by Senate Finance Committee Chairman Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, already has the bipartisan backing of 55 senators, a majority of the Senate.

While the Reagan and Bentsen proposals have many similarities, the Reagan proposals overall would increase the president's flexibility in dealing with trade disputes; the Bentsen bill would sharply limit it.

The administration takes the offensive this week on trade, with Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III and Trade Representative Clayton Yeutter testifying on Tuesday before the House Ways and Means Committee.

And Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige on Monday will announce the administration's plans to ease export licensing requirements, another major portion of the "competitiveness" program President Reagan highlighted in his State of the Union message last month.

The Reagan trade bill, not expected to be formally submitted to Congress until Feb. 19 or later, is the first major piece of trade legislation that the administration has proposed. In past years, the administration opposed a variety of measures in Congress it considered protectionist, while repeatedly voicing its policy of hands-off "free trade."

But the administration changed tactics this year, contending its own set of proposals would give it a stronger bargaining position with Congress.

Those proposals, as outlined by administration officials familiar with them, run the gamut from giving the president more authority to retaliate against trading partners and authority to engage in new global trade negotiations to a new proposed two-year limit on trade disputes.

Also included are proposals already announced by the administration, including a $980 million program to help retrain workers displaced by import competition — a program the administration sought to trim in previous years in the name of deficit-reduction.

"What we're trying to do is make the trading system work, and work well," Yeutter said last week. But he added that, given the record $169.8 billion trade deficit amassed last year, "I don't underestimate the challenge of that legislative task."

The Reagan administration is expected to oppose the most restrictive provisions of the Bentsen measure in its testimony this week, but officials privately expressed gratification that the bill did not contain even tougher measures.

Firms Want Voice

Conference executives believe that the first thing the American government should do to encourage trade is to avoid protectionism."

If there must be trade barriers, the ABC says, they should be flexible to allow for adjustment on a case-by-case basis. "We don't want any kind of forced provisions that make response mandatory," Lilley said.

The trade issue also troubles smaller companies that are the subject of the National Commission on Jobs and Small Business report, but to a different degree: They argue that they could be competitive in foreign markets if they could only get to them. "There are a minimum of 30,000 small businesses that have the know-how and ability to compete internationally, so now the question is, what do you do?" said Sam Beard, chairman of the commission.

Beard said it is difficult for many small companies to cultivate foreign business. "There's no mechanism either in the private sector or the public sector combined to stimulate that," he said.

"What does the guy do if he has a product in Indianapolis?" Beard said. "Is he going to leave Indianapolis and fly to 12 capitals and meet people and so forth?" That's impractical, Beard said, because it leaves the small company leaderless for a time and, in any case, provides no means for follow-up, since small companies often cannot afford to maintain foreign sales forces.

To solve that problem, the commission report recommends greater emphasis on making foreign business leads available to small companies, incentives for multinational companies to use small firms as subcontractors on foreign projects, and other measures to help small companies get a foothold abroad.

The ABC and small business commission reports are emphatic on capital formation, arguing that growth of small and medium-size companies is stifled by their difficulty in getting expansion capital, which is more readily available to larger corporations.

"Government must supply the appropriate environment in which managerial will and skill can flourish," the ABC report said. "To that end, government must address the related problems of high capital costs and low national savings caused by federal deficits and economic policies that reward consumption over savings."

"There are serious flaws in the capital market relating to small business," Beard said. For one, he said, major banks are oriented toward short-term lending which, while satisfactory to big companies, is often not good for smaller firms with little internal financing. "Small businesses, to build plants, need 15- to 20-year money," he said. "So automatically, you have a major problem." It also is hard for small companies to borrow from such major long-term lenders as insurance companies and pension funds, Beard said.

Business Notes

As a result of completing the session, Tugwell and Yakim have been certified as commercial energy auditors by ElectriCities of North Carolina.

Staff Changes

Wiley B. Corbett, president of Grady-White Boats of Greenville, has announced the promotion of Dinah Gradis to buyer/expeditor in the purchasing department, and the addition of Richard Smith as lead person in the boat repair department.

Ms. Gradis joined Grady-White in 1983 and was previously responsible for purchasing department data processing. She will be responsible for purchasing and scheduling delivery of production materials.

An Oak City native, she attended East Carolina University.

As lead person in the boat repair department, Smith will be responsible for direction of repair personnal. He attended Pitt Community College.

Course Scheduled

The Pitt County Association of Insurance Women has announced that it will sponsor CPCU 4, a commercial liability risk management and insurance course, beginning Tuesday from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. and running for 15 weeks.

Mary Parsons will be the instructor for the course, which will be taught in the Vernon White Building at Pitt Community College.

For further information, contact Mary Page at 758-1165 or Louise Downing at 756-3130.

Reorganization Plan

Long Manufacturing N.C. Inc. of Tarboro has announced that a reorganization plan has been finalized whereby the company's new owners have named a board of directors and top management.

The firm said Anthony C. Alvarez is the new president and chief executive officer and David Walsh is executive vice president of operations.

Officials said management has reorganized sales and marketing into three separate marketing division organized along product lines, including agricultural equipment products, grain handling and storage products, and woodstove products.

All branch locations are closed and consolidated into newly relocated corporate offices in Tarboro, according to the company.

TEMPNET Network

Anne's Temporaries Inc. has been selected as representative for TEMPNET in the eastern North Carolina market.

TEMPNET is a nationwide network of over 90 other independently-owned temporary help companies in 110 cities, with 149 offices in the continental United States and Hawaii, that provide mutual sharing of marketing and operational approaches including nationwide client and employee employment relocation services.

Anne's Temporaries specializes in the placement of clerical and industrial temporary personnel with offices in Greenville, Rocky Mount, New Bern and Washington, N.C., according to Anne Sneed, president.

Mexico Convention

Javier Castillo, financial director and controller for Lawrence Behr Associates Inc. of Greenville, recently attended a radio and television convention in Nexico City.

The firm said the purpose for attending the convention was to introduce the folded unipole antenna to Mexico. The antenna is manufactured by LBA Technologies of Greenville, a division of Lawrence Behr Associates.

Castillo said the trip was part of LBA's effort to enter into the international marketplace.

Addy Award Won

Adams & Longino of Greenville won "Best of Show" in the East Carolina Advertising Federation's 1987 Addy Awards held recently in New Bern.

The award was presented to the agency for a local newspaper advertising campaign it created, according to the firm.

Adams & Longino also won "Best of Print" for the same entry as well as three other gold awards in other categories. The agency also won three silver and two bronze awards including three awards in the category of business publications.

Addy Awards, held each year to promote advertising excellence and creativity, are sponsored by the local chapter of the American Advertising Federation. Local winners are eligible to be entered in district and national competition.

CAMP ACTIVITIES — Activities throughout the week for the campers include sailing, canoeing, arts and crafts, theater arts, singing and campfires.

Specialist Works At Giving Hope

Giving a family hope is one of the job functions of Jacque Price. She is a child/family specialist in pediatric hematology/oncology at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

She uses her background in psychology, child development and family relations in working with children and families in coping with illnesses in the areas of cancer, sickle cell disease and hemophilia.

"Once a family experiences the stresses of one of these diseases, their lives change drastically. Often there is no cure in sight initially when they are diagnosed. We are hoping to give them hope — by letting them interact with other families going through similar experiences or those who have completed therapy," she said.

"When a family is faced with a diagnosis of the above three diseases, they often think, 'How will I deal with my child now and in the future? Why my child? and Why do I have to face this threat?' Our whole team deals with families functioning as a family, talking about living a normal life with their child as part of the family. Families should stress the child as a child doing normal, everyday activities — going to school and playing," she said.

The pediatric hematology/oncology team consists of two physicians, Dr. Tate Holbrook and Dr. Dorothy Ganic; two specialized nurses, Sharon Bolster and Louise Peele; data manager, Cindy Boyd; social worker, Jeannette Villines, and Miss Price.

Miss Price works with the children and their families while the child is hospitalized and in the out-patient clinic.

"About 50 percent of my time is spent in the clinic. I practice medical procedures with the children to find out any misconceptions or fears they might have, allowing them time to express their feelings and experiences. Children have proven to be the best source of support for each other. We work very hard to encourage parents to communicate in similar experiences and to share common feelings and support. Having a family to realize that even though their child has a medical problem, they are still part of the family with the same thoughts, fears and responsibilities of their other children," she said.

Miss Price became involved in her current field while working as a volunteer in pediatric therapeutic recreation which eventually led to a part-time summer position. The job is full-time, which is funded by the Pitt County United Way. "I probably have learned more about children and families in this position than through my years in college study," she said.

The pediatric hematology/oncology team started Rainbow Services to normalize families' lives. Camp Rainbow, a component project of the services, began in the summer of 1982 as a one-day camp in a city park in Greenville. A two-day camp was held in 1983 and in 1984, Camp Rainbow was expanded to a three-day overnight excursion to Camp Don-Lee in Arapahoe. A full week has been spent there for the past two summers.

Any child with cancer and his or her siblings between the ages of 6 and 18 years are eligible to attend Camp Rainbow. Medical needs are met at all times. The camp staff includes one of the team physicians, oncology nurse and volunteer counselors in addition to the regular Camp Don-Lee staff.

Camp activities include horseback riding; swimming; adapted swimming lessons for handicapped; sailing; canoeing; arts and crafts; cooking in the woods; singing; camp fires, and overnight camping trip for senior campers.

"Purposes of the camp are fun and recreation in an intensive camping experience, emphasis on normalcy and group dynamics and building long term friendships and a network of emotional support among families," said Miss Price.

Other activities encompassed in the Rainbow Services program include family weekends attended by all family members of children with cancer.

"One of the most beneficial things camp offers these kids is a real chance to show what they can do and what they want to do. It also allows them to be with others who have had similar experiences — to share how they felt when their hair came out due to chemotherapy, dealing with painful procedures and returning to school," she said.

"One of the difficult things we have to deal with are a child not seeing a certain friend the following year. We then try to focus on special memories we have shared with that friend," Miss Price said.

"The children at camp participate in a vigorous schedule of camp activities from sunup to sundown. Evenings are spent in cabins discussing the day's events, sharing feelings. The counselors, too, get tired," she said.

"By far the most rewarding aspect of camp for campers and staff alike is sharing of fun, friendship and love. The memories we bring back from camp will live with us forever. At camp, the kids are striving to be kids — not seen as different from their peers but to be allowed to do what they are able to do," Miss Price said.

Tomlinson-Curry Vows Spoken

Shelia Moore Curry and Charles Leonard Tomlinson were united in marriage Saturday at 2 p.m. in The Memorial Baptist Church. E.T. Vinson conducted the double ring ceremony.

Joseph Goodwin was organist for the ceremony. Rick Bailey was vocalist and also played the guitar.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Moore Jr. of Ayden and Mr. and Mrs. J. Sid Tomlinson Jr. of Black Creek are parents of the bridal couple.

The bride was escorted by her son, James Robert Curry.

The attendant was Amy Marie Tomlinson of Winterville, daughter of the bridegroom.

The bride wore a matte taffeta gown in blue styled with off-shoulder ruffled sleeves and ruffled back. The skirt extended into a brush train with back pickup. She wore a garland of silk flowers with pearls and carried a colonial bouquet of white roses, miniature carnations, freesia and baby's breath.

The attendant wore an ivory dress with embroidered lace bodice and cuffed lace sleeves. The dress was accented by a blue sash. She carried a fireside basket of mixed pastel freesia, alstromeria, daisies and baby's breath.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Florida.

The bride is a graduate of Greene Central High School and is employed by TRW Inc. in Greenville. The bridegroom received bachelor and master degrees from N.C. State University. He is employed by the N.C. Department of Transportation.

A shower was given for the bride prior to the wedding.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. A.C. Shackleford of Greenville and the late Mr. Shackleford. The bridegroom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Andre Lacoste.

After a wedding trip to Colorado, the couple will live in Greenville.

Reviving Fine Art Of Introductions

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In these times of stress and affliction, a revived organization promises to assist the absent-minded party-goer in solving one of the great problems of the day: what to do when you forget names.

"The Glad to See You, I'm Franc Shor Society" promises a way out for that embarrassing impasse when you see someone you know but can't think of his or her name.

Shor maintained that by saying your own name, you encourage others to say theirs. Thus is the polite fiction sustained that you both remember.

Shor also held that it is the duty of anyone who actually remembered the other to say the name firmly and add, "We met at the Zabowaskis' " (or whatever salon it might have been).

Membership in the "I'm Franc ... " is a simple matter. You must swear on a biography of Jim Farley — the legendary Democratic Party chairman (1932-1940) who never forgot a name — this oath: "I promise upon seeing anyone, anywhere, no matter how well we know each other, to immediately and clearly give my name and, if necessary, spell it."

Shor, a National Geographic editor who died in 1974, was a prodigious giver and attender of parties with his wife, food-wine writer Donna Shor.

As founder, president and chief operating officer, he enforced the society's bylaws severely. You could be removed from membership, for instance, for such infractions as forgetting to say "I'm Franc" (or whoever), even upon meeting anyone in a public place, even your wife, child or lover.

Failing to do so when encountering close relations at home, though not incurring the full wrath of Shor if it were reported, would still put you in peril of being placed on probation.

Eleanor Merrill, Washington publisher and practitioner of the Shor statutes for some time, has been elected president of the revived association.

She accepted the honor at simplified ceremonies, reduced by her being snowed in at the Merrill home in Annapolis, Md. In her inaugural speech, she pledged "to get more and more people into the society. The world needs common courtesy.

"I always introduce myself when I meet people," she says, "because, unlike my husband (Philip) who is fabulous at remembering, I have trouble remembering names and faces. And when people are introducing me and hesitate when they get to my name, I quickly say it. On the other hand, I'm always trying to introduce people to each other, especially those who are relatives or best friends."

Eleanor Merrill has given up on another practice. "Two years ago, I was at a big political affair in Baltimore. I encountered someone who looked familiar, but I couldn't remember his name, though he immediately called me 'Eleanor.'

"We went through 'How have you been' and 'Lovely party.' Finally, hoping he would have the decency to tell me where we last saw each other, I said, 'I haven't seen you in a while.'

"He retorted: 'Nope, not since we graduated from college together.' "

Clement Conger, State Department curator, was a friend of Shor's and a founding member of the original society. Conger agreed to serve as chairman of the board of the revived organization.

He discussed the problem as he sorted through his slides on his way to lecture last week at the Winter Antiques Show in New York.

"In my day as deputy chief of protocol, I once introduced — by memory — 96 ambassadors and their wives, each with the name of their country, to then-President Dwight Eisenhower. However, I know more people now, and more people know me, so I don't always remember every name — especially those of people who know me from my lectures that I may have met only in passing.

"So I always announce my name and hope they will do the same. But 25 to 30 percent of the time, they say, 'Oh, everyone knows you' — and don't give their own."

The late Stellita Renchard, a great preservationist and the wife of former Ambassador George Renchard, had a hard time remembering names, Conger said. "When she was in a position where she should introduce two people and couldn't remember their names, she would say, 'I'm sure you two know each other.' She hoped of course, that neither would be such a bastard as to say, 'No.' It didn't always work."

Conger admits to using another device, when desperate. "I say, 'I'm such terrible speller; please spell your name for my records.' Now actually, I am one of the world's best spellers, but it's a way of finding out their name."

Actually, Conger makes it a habit, when dropping a name, of picking it up and spelling it. "Especially when being interviewed, because I don't want to be blamed for getting the name of a donor to the Diplomatic Reception Rooms wrong."

The "spell-your-name ploy" was one beloved of my grandfather, Moody Booth, a circuit-riding Methodist minister in Georgia. His method was to say: "I'm always forgetting, do you spell your name with an 'i' or an 'e'?"

He figured most people had one or the other in their name. Well, it worked fine, until he said it to one of his congregation, who replied with a rueful face, "Why preacher, you know I spell my name H-i-l-l."

Forgiveness Week Offers Us A Divine Opportunity

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Are you holding a grudge? Don't feel guilty. Many of us are. But we don't have to hold it forever.

Did you know there is an International Forgiveness Week? Well, neither did I. I recently learned that there is such a week. It's from Feb. 8 until the 14.

Robert Muller, former assistant secretary-general of the United Nations, wrote this piece for International Forgiveness Week.

DECIDE TO FORGIVE
Decide to forgive
For resentment is negative
Resentment is poisonous
Resentment diminishes and devours the self.
Be the first to forgive,
To smile and to take the first step,
And you will see happiness bloom
On the face of your human brother or sister.
Be always the first
Do not wait for others to forgive
For by forgiving
You become the master of fate
The fashioner of life
The doer of miracles.
To forgive is the highest
Most beautiful form of love.
In return you will receive
Untold peace and happiness.

Here is the program for achieving a truly forgiving heart:

Sunday: Forgive yourself.

Monday: Forgive your family.

Tuesday: Forgive your friends and associates.

Wednesday: Forgive across economic lines within your own nation.

Thursday: Forgive across cultural lines within your own nation.

Friday: Forgive across political lines within your own nation.

Saturday: Forgive other nations.

Only the brave know how to forgive. A coward never forgives. It is not in his nature. -- ROBERT MULLER

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the letter from "Perplexed in Washington State" who wanted to preserve her husband's tattoo for posterity: She should find a good taxidermist and stuff her husband in toto with tattoo bared for all to see. He would make a great living room conversation piece.

After all, they have the leg of some Union general on exhibition in the Medical Museum in Washington, D.C., for visitors to ogle. -- JIM GRIFFITH, CINCINNATI

DEAR MR. GRIFFITH: I thought you were pulling my leg, but my research disclosed the following: After Maj. Gen. Daniel Stickles' leg was shattered by a cannonball during the Battle of Gettysburg in 1863, the general himself sent the flesh and bones to the museum in a little black "coffin." He frequently went there to visit his leg, and even brought visitors to view it. There is even an example of the cannonball that did the damage.

DEAR ABBY: Apropos the woman who wanted to preserve her husband's tattoo after his demise: How gross! Assuming it could be done, think of all the morbid things it could lead to. For instance, the husband of a well-endowed wife might decide he'd like "bookends." -- ALSO PERPLEXED

CONFIDENTIAL TO C.O.W., WATERLOO, IOWA: Heed the words of the wise philosopher Schopenhauer: "It is easy to let the adulation of the Deity make amends for the lack of proper behavior toward men. And so we see that in all times and in all countries, the great majority of mankind find it easier to beg their way into heaven by prayers than to deserve to go there by their actions."

Tailored Jackets Are Big

By RALPH DiGENNARO
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

In a season that promises to romance the feminine figure in bustiers, crunchy crinolines, satiny flounces and myriad forms of pouffery, many retailers are nevertheless hedging their bets that the tailored jacket will be at the top of their customers' shopping lists come spring.

Despite the hoopla surrounding the "Les Girls Meet Lolita" look espoused by many French and American designers in the spring collections now reaching the stores, fashion experts agree that although frills and furbelows were enchanting on the runway, it is the new dressmaker-quality jackets that are most likely to be seen on fashionable streets here and abroad.

Indeed, many believe the jacket, in all its manifestations, from the shortest bolero to the important new 7-8 length, will be the focal point of many a stylish woman's outfit once the warm weather hits.

Tailored jackets always have been an integral part of a working woman's wardrobe, but there is an important difference, retailers say, between those man-tailored "career dressing" suits and blazers for day, and the breezy, softly tailored jackets in so many American and European collections.

For one thing, although many short bolero styles, longer collarless tunics and drapey, hipwrapping, double-breasted models could be worn for day, most look even newer worn in the evening, paired with skirts, pants and dresses of printed silk chiffon or loose-fitting pajama pants of charmeuse or lightweight wool. Heavily padded at the shoulders and cut to accentuate the waist, spring's best jackets are nothing if not feminine.

"A fabulous jacket will make the outfit this spring," said Selma Weiser, owner of the Charivari boutique chain in Manhattan. "We saw the trend coming six months ago and have been doing extremely well with longer, seven-eighths jackets over kicky, gathered skirts. Woman are buying outfits again, not just a skirt or a pair of pants. Clothes keep getting more expensive, so they want a total look and the jacket is an important piece to that end."

While Weiser preferred the longish 7-8 jacket styles, Bernie Ozer, senior vice president of fashion marketing at Associated Merchandising Corp. (AMC), one of the nation's leading buying offices, reported that to his eye, the very short jacket styles are the biggest news.

"Shorter over sheer – that's the big message, at least in high fashion," said Ozer. "In missy and moderate departments the look is bound to be translated a little differently. But the short jacket, less full but not skin-tight either, looks very right with the new high-rise pants and feminine, fluid skirts. It even has a nice proportion when worn with Bermuda shorts. To me, the look of a long jacket over a long dress is not new anymore."

At the Hirshleifer Etc. boutique in Manhasset, N.Y., buyer Lori Hirshleifer called the new jackets "terrific."

"We had some of the short ones last season, but they were a little difficult to sell," she added, "even though they looked new to us and a large part of our customers come to us for whatever is new. Now the word on short jackets has spread. Thankfully, we have bought quite a few."

Hirshleifer called the new jackets she bought "easier, less constructed and softer" than those of a few seasons ago. "They're less tailored, meant to be worn almost as a shirt. We call them jacket tops."

Annual Leadership Session Takes Place

The fourth annual High School Leadership Workshop was held Saturday at the Brody Building, East Carolina University.

Students from the five area high schools attended the workshop sponsored by Alpha Kappa Alpha Sorority and the ECU Organization of Black Faculty and Staff. The workshop theme was "Developing Leadership for the 21st Century," and featured a keynote address by Ralph Mitchell, management, motivation and marketing consultant from Durham.

A student "speak out" featured ECU student leaders Chrystal Fray, Anthony Jackson and Ralph Meachum.

Members of the leadership workshop committee were Dr. Lillia Holsey, chairperson, Jacqui Hawkins, Beulah Moore, Maxine Whitener, Lucille Sledge, Helen Harrell, Gwendolyn Lee, Barbara Johnson, Phyllis Stevens, Helen Johnson and Madeline Taylor.

Local medical, educational and business leaders served as presenters during the sessions. Jennifer King-Congleton, chapter basileus, presented each student a certificate of participation.

After 30 Years, He's Still Popular

By M.R. KROPKO
Associated Press Writer

CLEVELAND (AP) — The distinguished-looking, white-haired man prepared to order breakfast. Before he could say he wanted bacon and eggs, his wide-eyed waitress volunteered her admiration.

"I always used to watch Barnaby on television. Now my kids do," the waitress said.

Linn Sheldon flashed the smile that makes his face so recognizable in Cleveland.

"I get that all the time," Sheldon told a table companion. "It's a very personal thing, but that's what Barnaby is. And I mean personal. They come to you, and then they go away and then one day they come back."

Sheldon, 66, has been the likable Barnaby character on Cleveland television about 30 years, by his recollection. In that time, the generation of children from his first television audiences became adults. Those with children of their own tend to rediscover Barnaby.

They find that after all these years, Barnaby still closes his program with: "If anybody calls, tell them Barnaby said hello. And tell them I think you are the nicest person in the whole world. Just you."

Having overcome more than a few personal problems, including alcoholism, Sheldon as Barnaby is low key and conversational in a grandfatherly sort of way.

Shortly after Sheldon was born in Norwalk in northern Ohio, his mother died, so he grew up living with relatives and friends. After duty in the Army during World War II, he returned to Ohio and found work in Cleveland as a stand-up comic.

A few months after WEWS, the city's first television station, opened in 1947, he became an on-air personality specializing in children's programs. He used various characters until he went on the air with Barnaby in the late 1950s.

The character was a leprechaun, with large pointy ears, a boater hat and a double-breasted sport coat with big buttons on the front. Sheldon took the Barnaby name at the suggestion of television station staffer who had a dog with that name.

He left Cleveland's NBC affiliate in 1971 and went to WUAB, where his work ever since has widened his character's audience. Cable viewers can see Barnaby in 43 Ohio counties, 13 Pennsylvania counties and parts of West Virginia and Kentucky.

Because of a bout with skin cancer, Barnaby has stopped wearing the large, pointy ears. He still wears the rest of the traditional Barnaby costume and plays the ukulele.

Children seldom appear on "Barnaby and Friends," on which Sheldon banters with several puppets and his companion of 25 years, Long John, an invisible parrot. He does all the voices except that of OT, "The Other Terrestial," done by a crew member.

Sheldon's shows are taped and shown in the mornings now, but in his early years as Barnaby he did a daily after-school show live. And at that time, he did not always overcome his urge to drink.

Sheldon, a widower with three grown children, said he overcame his alcohol dependency about 13 years ago and now tries to speak to groups about alcoholism at least once a week. Recently, he began a campaign against drug abuse.

Cyndi Lauper Lives On Razor's Edge Of Outrageous

By MARY CAMPBELL
Associated Writer Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The top layer of Cyndi Lauper's blond hair is pinned up on her head. The rest, flowing to her shoulders, is Christmas-tree green — for the holidays, she explains, as she coaxes one of her two cats into a carrier for a friend to carry to the vet.

"I've got to be sure my baby is all right," she says.

It's a typical juxtaposition for Lauper, the pop rocker who lives on the razor's edge of outrageous. But she'll soon dabble in domesticity when she marries her manager, Dave Wolff: "If we ever get off this tour," she says.

The tour began in the fall in Japan as the master of her new Portrait Records LP, "True Colors," was flown over so it could be pressed and released.

In the United States, "True Colors" rose to No. 1 on Cashbox magazine's best-selling chart. Madonna's similarly named "True Blue" was No. 8 at the same time.

Lauper and Madonna are the two most visible female singer-songwriters of the 1980s, frequently compared and considered rivals.

"I've been compared to everyone," Lauper said. "I'm so used to it now. I don't know her. I've never spoken with her except once, 'Hello, great track of yours,' at one of the award shows.

"I've seen two major performers influenced by Marilyn Monroe — Debbie Harry and now Madonna. I think Debbie's great and her comeback deserves a real push because she is one of the innovative forces of the '80s. I think that's where Madonna got her whole trip."

"True Colors" is Lauper's first album in the nearly three years since her debut LP, "She's So Unusual," which sold 4.4 million copies. In June 1985, she had an abdominal operation. She will not discuss what it was. "I went in on my birthday, in Nashville. I happened to be near there. It was not cancer. I recovered and I'm OK. It was no big deal."

Lauper said it was great to be going out and performing again. "I asked them to make a fresco floor for me. I never was able to take a floor with me before," she said.

The U.S. tour started Dec. 3 in Providence, R.I., and is scheduled into February.

"I've been fortunate," Lauper said. "When you sing you share so much. You feel it back and forth with the audience. Sometimes I can't believe it. When I'm singing, that's when I'm my happiest."

However, as a video-era star she's more than just a singer. "I think of everything. I met Paul Simon once, who told me he thinks mostly about the song. I think about the whole thing. I don't know if that's good or bad. I get up and sing and use the lights to move to. I use that stage; that's your prop."

Lauper is co-producer of "True Colors," co-art director of the cover, co-writer of six of its 10 songs, co-writer of the video of the title song. She styles her videos, using outfits found by vintage clothing expert Laura Wills. "I think, 'How will it read on TV or in a picture?' There has to be something that isn't straight conservative about it," Lauper said.

Lauper enjoys talking about the days before fame, when she sang in clubs for four years in Queens and Long Island.

"I sang 'Born to Run.' I loved that song but I hated the way I did it," she said. "They wouldn't move the guitar riff because it was good for the guitar. I had to sing high. I couldn't do the whole song singing high or I would have sounded like a chipmunk. I had to come down and sing an octave lower.

"I had to get out because I couldn't deal with it anymore. People on Long Island didn't appreciate me. I moved around too much. I didn't stand and smile and look alluring. I decided to come to Manhattan and see if they would just appreciate my voice. I played Trude Heller's and people were listening. I found there was a life beyond those other places."

She met John Turi in 1978. They co-wrote songs and formed the group Blue Angel, which made one LP for Polygram in 1980.

She met Dave Wolff at a party near the end of 1981, after he'd made a few novelty records and was starting a management company.

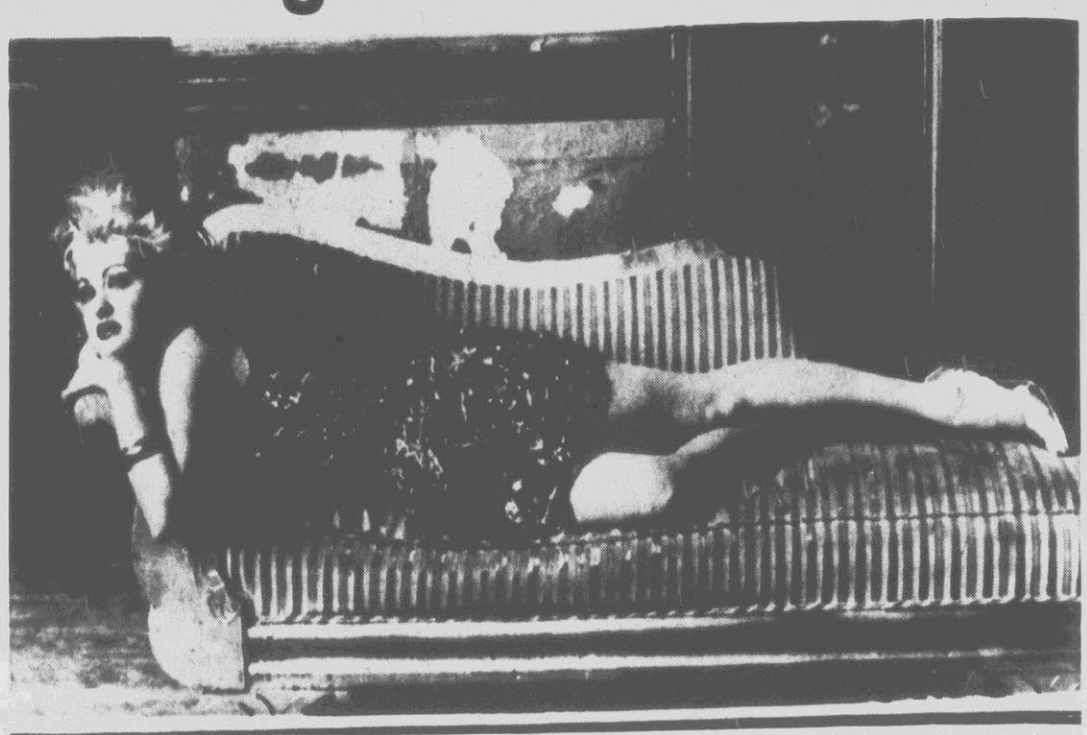
"I was a singer in a band," the 33-year-old entertainer said. "Anybody I would meet, once they saw me sing, they would change. Totally. Either they would be frightened to death or didn't understand or admired it too much. I lost them. When I met Dave I was afraid to have him see me sing. We were getting along and I wanted to have a relationship with him. He came on New Year's Eve to this small place in New Jersey. It was so depressing.

"The record deal was gone. Everything had fallen apart with the band and we were still trying to make ends meet. I sprayed my hair blue and sang 'Blue Christmas.' I thought Dave would be gone when I finished.

"Usually in a band, they'll let you off at the end of a gig and watch till you get into the hallway. Then the hike was mine. I lived five flights up. Dave drove me home, parked the car, took my stuff from the gig and carried it up for me. The kindness that he showed was amazing. I was saying, 'How do I love thee? Let me count the steps.'

"Later, when I was having problems, I would tell him I can take care of myself. Who are you supposed to be, Prince Charming saying, 'I'll save you?' I guess he was used to the type of girl that would expect a guy to do things for her. I expected just the opposite. I didn't trust anybody that wanted to help me. I was always a bullhead. I could always do it on my own."

But they wound up working together and Lauper got a record deal in 1983. She received a Grammy award in 1984 as best new artist for her debut LP.



LAUPER HAS HIT ALBUM — Cyndi Lauper, shown in a pose for her new record album, "True Colors," is enjoying her No. 1 listing on Cashbox magazine's best-selling chart with her current LP. Lauper, who had an abdominal operation in June, 1985, is back on top with her album and her current tour which is scheduled into February. The pop singer who performs on the razor's edge of courageousness, currently sports green hair. She says she is fortunate because "when you sing you share so much, back and forth with the audience." Cocaine Use Linked To Brain Disorders

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

NEW YORK (AP) — Pregnant women who use cocaine have an increased risk of bearing children who suffer seizures and who have smaller-than-normal head size, suggesting abnormalities in brain development, a new study suggests.

Dr. Ira Chasnoff, a pediatrician at Northwestern University Medical School in Evanston, Ill. said Sunday he has found that cocaine-affected infants are excessively jittery, experience rapid changes of mood, and are extremely sensitive to noise and other external stimuli.

All these findings suggest the possibility of brain abnormalities, he said at a symposium sponsored by the Greater New York Chapter of the March of Dimes.

In a separate report at the symposium, Diana Dow-Edwards, a researcher at the State University of New York Health Science Center in Brooklyn, said her experiments with rats suggest that cocaine use during pregnancy can produce infants with long-term abnormalities in the brain systems that control sensation, movement and emotions.

This occurs despite the frequent absence of any physical defects in the offspring, she said.

In studies with about 30 rats, Dow-Edwards found that rats exposed to cocaine during early development mature into adults with marked hypersensitivity in the brain's motor system, its sensory system and in the limbic system, which governs emotions and such functions as eating and sleeping.

Chasnoff said that Dow-Edwards' research could explain some of the defects he is cataloging in the infants of cocaine-using mothers.

For example, the finding that such babies probably have an increased rate of seizures could be due to a hypersensitivity in the brain similar to what Dow-Edwards has observed in rats, he said.

The report that infants of cocaine-using mothers have a significantly smaller head size than normal infants likewise suggests that cocaine is altering brain development, he said.

The smaller head size could indicate a retardation in brain growth and foreshadow future brain deficits, he said.

Chasnoff has previously reported that pregnant women using cocaine are more likely than others, even heroin users, to have spontaneous abortions and that the infants of cocaine-using mothers have an increased risk of sudden infant death syndrome, or crib death.

His more recent studies have considerably broadened the list of abnormalities associated with cocaine use.

Among his other findings:

— Cocaine can be passed to infants through breast milk and can remain in breast milk for up to 60 hours after the mother uses it.

— Cocaine-using mothers have a 17.3 percent chance of going into labor prematurely, compared with a 2 percent risk in the general population.

— Cocaine users also have a 17.3 percent chance of the placenta ripping away from the wall of the uterus, causing severe complications for the fetus, including death. The risk in non-drug-using mothers is 1 percent to 2 percent, he said.

— Measures of fetal stress are much greater in the infants of cocaine-using mothers.

Dow-Edwards said her findings in rats suggest "that cocaine exposure during pregnancy produces long-term and perhaps permanent alterations in brain function activity."

The hypersensitivity she found in the rats' brains is apparently due to the excessive build-up of certain chemicals called neurotransmitters that are used by brain cells to communicate with one another, she said.

For 10 days after the rats were born — a period that parallels the third trimester of human pregnancy — she gave the rats a daily dose of cocaine equivalent to a human dose of slightly more than one gram of cocaine. "This level of abuse is, I believe, quite common among the abusing populations," she said.

The drug produced no change in the growth of the young rats, nor did it produce obvious physical defects.

But studies to assess the brain development of the rats when they were young adults, 60 days old, showed that their brains had excess levels of three neurotransmitters — dopamine, norepinephrine and serotonin.

The surplus of these substances probably accounts for the hypersensitivity in the rats' brains, she said.

A Keeper Of Dinosaur Boneyards

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

DINOSAUR NATIONAL MONUMENT, Utah — Ann Schaffer is keeper of one of the world's prime dinosaur boneyards.

Wearing white coveralls, she chips away at the steep, 190-foot-long, 30-foot-high sandstone cliff inside Dinosaur Quarry Visitor Center, exposing bones of giant prehistoric beasts.

There is not a similar wall of dinosaur bones on exhibit anywhere. So far, 2,200 bones representing about 200 individual dinosaurs have been exposed.

"It's exciting work," said Schaffer, 28, who received her master's degree in geology from Utah State University. "Every time I encounter a new bone on the wall, I am the first person to see it since that dinosaur died about 145 million years ago."

As the 5-foot-3 Schaffer uncovers dinosaur bones with the tools of her trade — a 90-pound jackhammer, drills, wedges, chipping hammers, chisels and ice picks — she says that her mind often wanders back to when the huge animal thrived in this part of Utah.

"I think about what it must have been like around here with brontosauruses three times the size of today's biggest elephants grazing in the wild," she mused.

"Or what it was like when sharp-clawed, carnivorous allosaurus ripped into other giant animals to satisfy hunger. I can just imagine the bizarre stegosaurus with huge triangular bony spiked backs and tails and all the other strange prehistoric creatures running around."

Every year thousands of visitors come to the Dinosaur Quarry, seven miles north of the tiny town of Jensen in Utah's northeastern corner.

Scientists come to study the exposed skulls and bones embedded in the wall. Paleontologists also travel here to view the skeletal remains from the quarry that are kept on shelves in the National Monument's scientific lab.

Since its discovery in 1909 by paleontologist Earl Douglass, the quarry has produced an unequaled number of dinosaur bones. He searched for two years in the rainbow-hued sandstone cliffs of Split Mountain before he found the first indication that he was working above one of the most outstanding dinosaur cemeteries ever encountered.

On Aug. 17, 1909, Douglass noted in his diary: "At last in the top of the ledge where the softer overlying beds form a divide, I saw eight of the tail bones of a brontosaurus in exact position...."

Several of the best preserved specimens of Jurassic Period (136-193 million years ago) dinosaurs have been found here.

How did the bones get on the upturned cliff inside the Dinosaur Quarry Visitors Center?

It is thought that the carcasses of the dead dinosaurs washed downstream in a huge, winding river and lodged against the sandbar. In time the animals were buried by river sands and gravels, cementing into hard sandstone, the bones fossilized within it.

Millions of centuries passed and the 15-foot-thick bone-bearing layer was covered with sand, sediments, rock and other soil a mile deep. The sandstone layer was upended by pressure. Eventually, erosion wore away the top cover, exposing the tail bones of the brontosaurus discovered by Douglass.

He had come to Utah's Green River country because of the proliferation of Morrison Formation Rock, the same formation where dinosaur bones had been found earlier in Wyoming and Colorado. His expedition was financed by Andrew Carnegie, who wanted dinosaur skeletons to fill his new museum in Pittsburgh.

For 15 years, Douglass and his party dug out and transported 350 tons of dinosaur bones from the 600-foot-long, 80-foot-deep trench. Skeletons from the quarry now stand in the Carnegie Museum, the Smithsonian and other notable collections.

When President Woodrow Wilson designated the quarry a national monument in 1915, Douglass proposed that one wall of the trench be set aside as an exhibit.

But the National Park Service did not have the funds to carry out Douglass' dream in 1915, nor for the next 38 years. The paleontologist died in 1931.

In 1953 work finally began on Douglass' dream to excavate a wall, leave the bones in place and construct a building around the exhibit. The Dinosaur Quarry Visitor Center opened in 1958.

Tobe Wilkins worked 34 years, and Jim Adams worked 30 years chipping away at the wall exposing the bones. When Adams retired two years ago, Ann Schaffer was hired to take his place. Wilkins retired three months ago.

On Schaffer's two days off, Lorraine Ferris, 33, wife of the quarry's resident paleontologist, Dan Chure, 33, works on the wall.

Many visitors ask them questions as they peck away at the ever-growing giant jigsaw puzzle on the sandstone cliff.

"The great thing about working on the wall is you never know what you're going to find next," Schaffer said.

Record Number Of Visitors

RALEIGH — A total of 3,849 people visited the North Carolina Museum of Art on Jan. 18, the highest walk-in attandance for a regular opening day since the museum opened in 1956. This figure was exceeded only by the attendance at the grand opening festival for the new building, which attracted about 20,000 visitors in two days.

Museum officials attribute the high attendance on Jan. 18 to the recent opening of the African, Oceanic and New World Gallery.

Additionally, attendance has been unusually high since the new gallery opened Jan. 10. A total of 11,637 people visited the museum from Jan. 10 through Jan. 18. The museum usually averages about 4,000 visitors per week.

Collecting slang words for "intoxicated" began in this country with the publication in 1733 of Benjamin Franklin's "Drinker's Dictionary." Currently there are some 2,200 words and phrases that mean drunk.

Denim is the hottest phenomenon in the sportswear market right now. It was once thought of as just basic five pocket business, perfect for back-to-school fall selling. This concept has been re-evaluated, as denim now makes a definite fashion statement.

The denim color palette is explosive, covering a broad spectrum. The shades range from superbleached (almost white), to chambray, to rich shades of indigo, and then to black. Different 'distressing' processes range from diamond washing, stonewashing or bleaching.

Styling possibilities are infinite. Key silhouettes are the bib overall and the suspender pant. The single most important craze in denim is the skirt. For juniors, the slim mini is the favorite, yet the overall market goes for slim and pleated extra long styles.

The denim dress (especially in chambray) is hot for spring. Lace and eyelet trims and petticoats beneath add icing to the cake. Denim shorts make a surprise entrance this spring. The best style to go for is the walking short or bermuda.

For the finale, chambray shirtings complete the denim picture. Some studs, jewels, lace trims and stripes will add excitement to the look.

To find these hot new looks and to be your very best, shop Scott's...when fashion matters.

Grass Cutters Invade Birdwatchers Paradise In India

By DONALD J. FREDERICK
National Geographic News Service

BHARATPUR, India — Dusk gently enveloped India's Keoladeo National Park. A flight of Sarus cranes wheeled overhead and a kingfisher stood on the end of a dead branch.

The young naturalist peered through his binoculars, then suddenly handed them to a visitor.

"Look," he said, pointing to a spot about 100 yards away. There, instead of another exotic bird, the visitor saw four motionless figures flattened in a small depression in the ground. Behind them, 50 or 60 more people could be seen in a distant stand of trees.

Fodder For Cattle

"Grass cutters," explained the naturalist. "They come here at dusk from nearby villages to get fodder for their cattle."

The invasion of the grass cutters is only one of the recent problems to beset the small but famous bird sanctuary in Northern India. A severe drought has dried up marshes and wetlands, disrupting the breeding cycles of many waterbirds. And not long ago a mysterious fire scorched 267 acres in the 11.6-square-mile park.

The events have alarmed the world's bird watchers, who travel great distances to see the park's 374 species of birds.

Normally some 400,000 indigenous Indian birds arrive to breed in the park during the summer and fall.

About 200,000 migrant birds come for winter feeding.

Located in an agricultural area bordered by villages, Keoladeo is especially vulnerable this year. The ground is dry and fodder is scarce. The park's neighbors have been banned from grazing their cattle in the park since 1982. Some Indian newspapers speculated that the fire might have been purposely set by villages. It is still being investigated.

Both the cutting and the fire may be blessings in disguise, according to V.S. Vijayan, who has been conducting a long-range study of the park for the Bombay Natural History Society. He points out that one species of a perennial, amphibious grass has spread so much that it threatens open-water areas of the park vital to waterfowl.

To check the grass, Vijayan proposes reintroducing cattle in confined, closely supervised areas. These selected grazing areas would be rotated annually.

Balance Of Pressures

David Ferguson of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, which helped sponsor the study, sees the events "as a microcosm of the kind of situation faced by wildlife in many parts of the world. It boils down to an ever-increasing pressure for resources by an ever-increasing population, and the efforts to balance them against the needs of wildlife."

Even in a difficult year, the bird watchers who come to Keoladeo seldom leave disappointed. Bill and Julie Rea of Albuquerque, N.M., were no exceptions. "We've added more than 50 species to our list in just one afternoon," says Bill Rea. "But the biggest thrill was seeing three Siberian cranes."

Keoladeo is one of the few wintering grounds of the rare cranes, which fly down from western Siberia.

Few people gave much thought to vanishing species in the 1920s, when the land was flooded to attract migrating waterfowl. It became an outsize shooting gallery, and huge kills were recorded. The record belongs to the Viceroy Lord Linlithgow's hunting party, which, on Nov. 12, 1938, killed 4,273 birds.

A TWILIGHT RETURN — Painted storks in India's Keoladeo National Park return to their nests at twilight, a time that also atttacts grass cutters from nearby villages. A shortage of fodder caused by a severe drought in the area has caused an upswing in the illegal harvest of grass. Officials fear the drought may disrupt the winter migration. About 200,000 birds migrate to the park for winter feeding. Among them is the rare and endangered Siberian crane. (Photography by Stanley Breeden, National Geographic Society)

Environmental Funds To North Carolina

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The national Environmental Defense Fund has announced that the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, Inc. and the Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, Inc. have awarded the EDF grants totaling $780,000 to establish the North Carolina Environmental Defense Fund to begin operation this spring.

The new North Carolina organization will be staffed by two scientists and an attorney.

The grant funds are to be used over a four-year period in conjunction with equivalent support from the national organization to bring to the state a blend of science and law which is hoped to result in a solution oriented approach to environmental problems.

The Environmental Defense Fund was founded in 1967 and is now a national organization with 50,000 members and offices in New York, Richmond, Va., Boulder, Colo., Washington, D.C., and Berkeley, Calif.

Frederic D. Krupp, executive director of the national fund, said "We are searching for the best North Carolinians to staff the effort. North Carolina has beautiful natural resources and citizens who care deeply about them as well. We at EDF are excited about being the first national environmental organization to put substantial monetary resources and skills into North Carolina."

A commission on the Future of North Carolina has identified many serious environmental problems that need to be addressed in the state. North Carolina has 700 large generators of hazardous waste and eight national priority superfund sites. The state will capitalize on EDF's many years of experience in addressing the problems of toxic substances and waste disposal as well as management and protection of sensitive land areas.

The Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, established in 1936 as a memorial to the youngest son of the R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, has made grants of more than $130,000,000 to recipients throughout North Carolina. The Mary Reynolds Babcock Foundation, founded in 1953 by Mrs. Mary Reynolds Babcock and Charles H. Babcock, has a history of funding North Carolina and the Southeast in many areas of assistance.

All of the money from the two foundations will be spent in North Carolina, with the national EFD to double the foundations' support for the new enterprise.

Strange Things People Believed

By MICHAEL BEZDEK
Associated Press Writer

BOSTON (AP) — They were the days when some people believed X-rays might be used to cure broken hearts or to actually view someone's thoughts.

They were the days when industrial chemistry was applauded for creating the potential for "Plastic Man" who could live in a world "free from moth and rust and full of color" and promise.

They were the days when writers imagined escalator sidewalks, machines to control climate and pneumatic tubes that would deliver store goods right into individual homes.

Those heady days of modern American invention have been chronicled by 10 historians of technology in a new book edited by Joseph J. Corn, "Imagining Tomorrow: History, Technology, and the American Future" (The MIT Press, $17.50.).

Corn, a lecturer in values, technology and science and society at Stamford University, wrote the introduction and compiled the individual chapters and essays.

The essays deal with reactions to some of the major inventions of the last 100 years, including the automobile, radio, X-rays, nuclear energy, plastics and the electric light.

By culling popular science and general circulation magazines, the authors tell of a time when writing about science meant seeing technological breakthroughs as additional steps toward a utopian world.

Some of the reactions and predictions are funny, some are sad and a few turned out to be appropriate.

Some utility companies were so taken by the electric light that they promoted their services through "electric girl" hostesses adorned with filament lamps.

A Man's Home In A Rock Hole

By LISA LEVITT RYCKMAN
Associated Press Writer

MOAB, Utah (AP) — Fred Flintstone had nothing over Albert Christensen, who spent 12 years blasting 50,000 cubic feet of rock from a giant lump of sandstone and then took up residence in the result.

This wasn't just some mole hole out of a mountain but a "World Famous Hole N' The Rock!" 5,000 Square-Feet of Floor Space! 14 Fabulous Rooms! with a gift shop, a deep French-fryer hewn out of a rock counter and a solid rock bathtub big enough for a Neanderthal.

Travelers tootling along U.S. 191 in southeastern Utah can't miss it, thanks to four-foot white block letters painted on either side of the red sandstone hill. Those who stop can buy "World Famous Hole N' The Rock" coffee mugs and T-shirts, picnic out front at solid-stone tables and tour the hole-home itself, a monument to a man who "just did his thing," as his stepson puts it.

"He did the things he liked to do," Hub Davis said of Christensen. "He didn't do anything he didn't like to do. He never started one thing and finished it right then. He had other things going."

Among those were a mammoth likeness of Franklin Delano Roosevelt sculpted on the mountainside above the home, innumerable paintings — most with a religious motif — and taxidermy. One of the donkeys that helped haul rock out of the mountain now stands preserved in the living room, a straw hat adorned with plastic flowers perched on its fuzzy head.

Christensen was as handy with a spatula as he was with a drill, and for a while in the '40s the hole was a diner, serving mostly steaks, chicken and sandwiches.

The restaurant closed in 1955, and Christensen died two years later. But his wife, Gladys, continued to develop the property until her death in 1974; she created the 10-minute spiel used by the local girls who give the tours, finished the fireplace stonework and sculpted the simple stone markers for the nearby rock cove where she and her husband are buried.

Christensen, it seems, had the skills of a miner and the heart of an artiste, but it was his wife who saw the profit in his fun.

"She was the one who got the place going as a business and prodded him to complete it," recalled Davis, who lives in the home, with his wife and six children, part-time. "When she moved in, there was hardly anything, no fronts on it or anything. It was just a hole."

But what a hole. A hole among holes. A hole with a soul.

"It actually was started up there in the front by his father, who blasted out a little small hole," Davis said. "Then his brother blasted out another little small hole. Then (Christensen) finished it."

"Why'd he do it?" a visitor asked a tour guide.

"Nobody really knew," she replied candidly. "People around here thought he was nuts."

Naw, said his stepson. Christensen was just a man ahead of his time.

"In my opinion, this could be the future way of building homes," Davis said. "It's very easy to keep up, if the property was available.

"That's the problem — you can't just go out and blast a hole out of any old rock."

Artifacts Reveal Indian Life

By ELLIOTT MINOR
Associated Press Writer

DOUGLAS, Ga. (AP) — Charred corn cobs, arrowheads and copper finger rings may not seem like buried treasure but archaeologist Frankie Snow is hoping they'll yield valuable information about the Indians who lived in south-central Georgia more than 300 years ago.

Snow, former president of the Society for Georgia Archaeology, has focused his search for artifacts in an area near Hazlehurst, where the Ocmulgee and Oconee rivers merge into the Altamaha. The area was known to the Spanish as La Tama province. It includes parts of Jeff Davis, Wheeler, Telfair and Coffee counties.

He said he is particularly interested in learning how the Indians' lives were changed through their early contacts with the Spanish.

"Basically, we're just trying to have a physical record of the people who were here," he said. "We're finding lots of Indian artifacts. Occasionally, we see Spanish contact in the form of glass beads and copper finger rings."

Snow, director of the science laboratory at South Georgia College in Douglas, said the time of contact with the Spanish is important because the Indians' lives changed dramatically after the arrival of European settlers.

"The Indians didn't have resistance to their diseases and the Indians were poorly prepared for the European technology," he said. "They were really overwhelmed."

The Spanish, concerned about the presence of English and French settlers and committed to converting Indians to Catholicism, stepped up their travels into central Georgia between 1580 and 1630, he said.

The earliest contacts between the Indians and the Spanish occurred along the coast in about 1526, when an explorer rounded up some of the natives and transported them to Cuba as slaves, he said.

Hernando De Soto led an expedition through Georgia in 1540. He was looking for precious metals. The largely unsuccessful expedition ended when the group reached what is now Mississippi and De Soto was killed.

Some of the early Spanish travelers were priests who came to convert the Indians. Others were representatives of the Spanish government who wanted to exploit the area's resources, he said.

Documents confirm a visit to La Tama in 1597 by a Spanish soldier, Gaspar de Salas, and two Franciscan priests, Pedro Fernandez de Chosas and Francisco des Verascola, Snow said.

"Those were the three people we know from Spanish documents who came up," he said. "They were interested in converting the natives to Catholicism."

Snow, assisted by volunteers from the college, does most of his archaeological work on weekends and concentrates on land that has been cleared by commercial timber companies. Their bulldoziers and harrows expose many artifacts, he said.

Besides pottery and arrowheads, he has discovered charred corn cobs and the remains of deer and other animals eaten by the Indians. The presence of corn cobs shows that the Indians relied on farming for some of their food, he noted.

Archaeologists have done little excavating in the interior of the state south of Macon, leaving many questions about the early inhabitants, he said.

Snow, who has written several articles on his discoveries, said the Indians in La Tama may have been forerunners of the Hitchiti Indians, who lived along the Ocmulgee and were absorbed by the Creek Indians in the 1700s.

A Different Scene In Art

By MARCIA DUNN
Associated Press Writer

PITTSBURGH (AP) — For Cynthia F. Cooley there's nothing like a roaring, sweltering glass factory or a rusting, hulking steel mill to spark the artistic senses.

Armed with a pair of goggles, a hardhat and a camera, the 55-year-old painter heads straight for the noisiest, grimiest, sweatiest section of a plant, going through several rolls of film before pulling out a sketchpad to record her close-up impressions of a flaming forge or a steel rolling mill in action.

It isn't until later at home that the photographs and sketches of this award-winning artist of industrial scenes are transferred onto canvas, and the oranges and yellows and purples and blues begin to take geometric shape.

Many of the industries Cooley illuminates are not dying, despite today's economic climate. "They're in operation and they're thriving," she said. "But I'm also drawn to some of the skeleton-type mills that are going to be torn down. It's something that should be preserved."

Cooley is often asked why she's lured to factories and such.

"It takes a certain kind of strange interest to like big, rusty, metal forms," she said. "Most of the areas are very involved. When you're looking at the machinery, there's a great deal of confusing things going on.

"It's kind of difficult to make a composition out of it and simplify it and make it into a painting that holds together. Whereas the more traditional kind of landscape that has a few trees and a vine or something is easier to compose."

Painting steel mills and factories is not a new art form. In fact, the genre dates back to the 1920s and '30s. However, few artists have focused on machinery as Cooley has, according to Frances Venardos Gialamas, past president of the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh.

"Cynthia is really expanding the image of machinery as design in and of itself," she said, and Cooley's success may, in part, stem from the freshness with which she approaches her subjects.

"She comes from Minnesota, so for her it (industry) would be an image that would be memorable and interesting. For me it was the landscape. I thought the sky was orange."

The daughter of an electrical engineer, Cooley never encountered heavy industry while she was growing up in Minneapolis during the '30s and '40s, but she had had an interest in painting since childhood. She studied art at Lawrence University in Appleton, Wis., and later at the Minneapolis College of Art and Design and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts School.

At the time, her primary interest was traditional landscapes. That quickly changed, however, after she and her husband, Bill, a professor of educational research, moved to Pittsburgh with their two children in 1964.

"I thought, 'Oh, what am I going to paint?'" she recalled. "I started looking at the hillsides. Then I started looking at the river valleys and I got interested in the barges and the steel mills — all smoke."

For hours at a time, she would sit on street corners or along the Monongahela River painting smokestacks, factories and other industrial scenes. Many of her watercolor and acrylic pieces, considered realistic impressionism, eventually made their way into exhibitions and galleries around the world.

Cooley won her first industrial commission in 1983, a request from Blount Inc. of Montgomery, Ala., to portray the fiery pouring of steel at its Washington Steel Corp. in Washington, Pa. The 58-by-42-inch acrylic painting won an award in the Associated Artists of Pittsburgh's 1983 exhibition at the Museum of Art at the Carnegie Institute.

The following year, she was commissioned by W.C. Bradley Co. of Columbus, Ga., to paint a forge at a plant where blades for farm equipment were being made. Her latest assignment involved depicting the glass making process at PPG Industries Inc.'s plant in Meadville, Pa.

Only occasionally has she actually researched the machines in her paintings. "I don't want to know what they're doing. I just paint them," she said.

So far, Cooley has made about 300 industrial paintings, some of which have fetched as much as $2,200 to $2,500.

Twenty-seven of her pieces recently were exhibited at the Pittsburgh Center for the Arts. Several times during the month-long show, she quietly mingled with the unsuspecting gallery-goers so she could overhear their conversations.

"Most of them had the reaction that I really want. They said, 'Oh, I can really feel the heat from the blast furnace.' And a lot of them felt very nostalgic with all the blast furnaces disappearing," she said.

The highest form of praise has come from locals.

"A lot of people say they lived here all their lives and they never really looked at it until they saw some of my paintings and then they started looking at it — which is kind of fun."

A Mission To Civilize

MISSION TO CIVILIZE: The French Way. By Mort Rosenblum. Harcourt Brace Jovanovich. 480 Pages. $19.95.

There will always be a French empire — even though the empire may have no clothes.

No longer a colonizer, France still considers itself a global "civilizer." Freed of its colonies, it is master. This is the core of Mort Rosenblum's "Mission to Civilize: The French Way," an impressive analysis of French influence from Paris to Polynesia, Gabon to Guadeloupe, New Caledonia to New Orleans, and from pre-Charlemagne to post-Charles de Gaulle, Richelieu to the Rainbow Warrior.

Rosenblum, formerly editor-in-chief of the International Herald Tribune and Paris chief of bureau for The Associated Press, now is a special correspondent for AP, based in Paris. He has mined his experiences of some 20 years as foreign correspondent and his visits to 140 nations — "wherever the French flag flies, or flew" — to provide a fascinating work that combines scholarship with entertainment, detailed reporting with personal insight. And he's not shy about using the beau "jest" to enliven the attempt to fathom the unfathomable: how has this fifth-ranked global power been able to preserve its far-flung influence despite giving up its colonies, by choice or otherwise, despite its defeats, despite its weaknesses and warts?

"Wherever the French have been and gone, the Gallic stamp remains indelible," he writes.

A good part of his "answer" is French culture and "le flair" — and the pride and tradition of a people who somehow find a way to see (and project) victory with dignity in all that is French — no matter what.

Rosenblum sees France as perhaps the only cultural superpower, but "one that is based firmly and squarely on illusion...One can assume any pose, and command any priority, if it is done with conviction and flair," he writes.

Here is an American who simultaneously loves and hates the French (well, maybe not "hates," but at least gets exasperated with them at times), and provides one of the better attempts at understanding them and the role they play in contemporary global politics. And it's done with a pleasant combination of information and entertainment.

Grant To NCSA

WINSTON—SALEM —The North Carolina School of the Arts has been awarded a grant in the amount of $150,000 from the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, Inc.

The grant, to be paid to the school over a three-year period, will be used for student scholarships and guest artists, and is a lead gift to the school's Quarter-Century Challenge Campaign.

With this latest grant, the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation, Inc. has increased the total of its gifts to the N.C. School of the Arts to more than $2 million.

Wins An Award

GRIFTON — A design submitted by 16-year-old Tim Hathaway of Ayden-Grifton High School has been selected for the cover of the 1987 Grifton Shad Festival souvenir brochure.

Hathaway will receive a trophy and be identified in the brochure, 5,000 copies of which will be distributed free.

He is one of two cartoonists who illustrated the Ayden-Grifton High School newspaper, and he has several pieces of art entered in the Wilson Art Competition.

Free Brochure

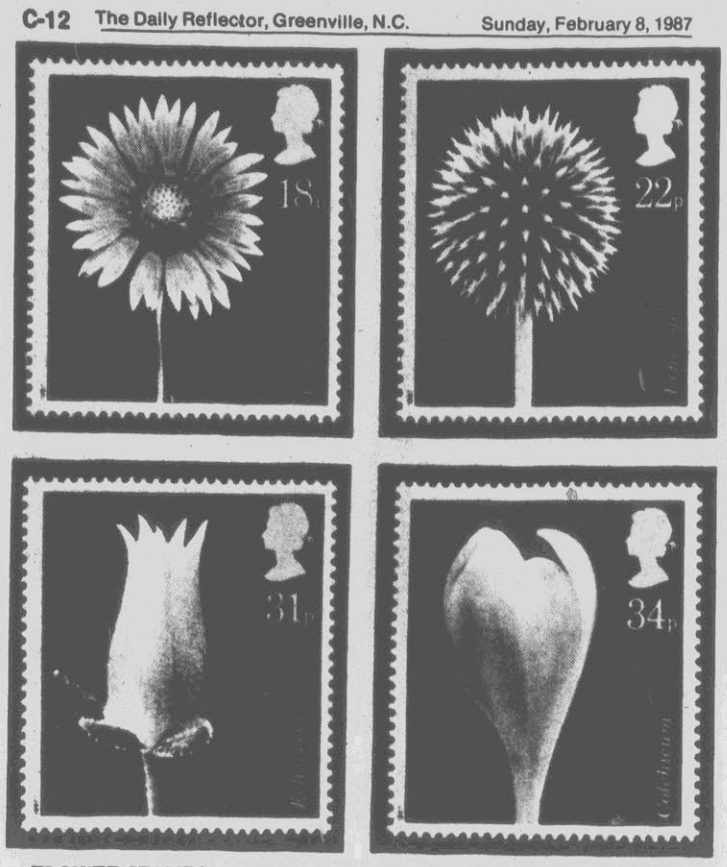
ALBANY, N.Y. — Two items that will be of particular interest to visitors to New York City are now being offered without charge.

One is a 72-page paper (3.5 by 9 inches) "New York City Tour Package Directory"; the second is a color illustrated map of the city that pinpoints the location of dozens of highlight points in Manhattan, Brooklyn, the Bronx, Queens and Staten Island.

Free copies of the two items can be had by sending a request to: New York, Box 992, Latham, N.Y., 12110 or by calling toll free 1-800-CALL-NYS.

Art Show Change

KINSTON — The Community Council for the Arts in Kinston has announced a change in its February exhibition schedule. The previously announced exhibition of work by Greensboro artist Eva Hamlin-Miller has been cancelled. The space will instead feature work by Kinston watercolor artist Jeanette K. Hill.



FLOWER STAMPS — A set of four stamps depicting flowers were issued by the British Post Office on Jan. 20, based on color photographs by Alfred Lammer. Flowers shown are Gaillardia, Echinops, Echeveria and Colchicum on denominations of 18, 22, 31 and 34 pence respectively. (Photograph courtesy the British Post Office).

Britain Issues Flower Stamps

By MARGARET MacDONAGH
The British Post Office

Myriad shapes, colors and forms in nature seen through the camera lens of United Kingdom photograper Alfred Lammer take on a visual richness in the veteran photographer's work.

Four of the 77-year-old photographer's pictures feature on a set of British stamps showing flowers and highlighting unusual aspects and angles of plant life.

The stamps show Gaillardia, also known as blanket flower (18 pence); Echinops, or globe thistle (22 pence); Echeveria (31 pence) and Colchicum or autumn crocus (34 pence). They were issued January 20.

Alfred Lammer captures the vitality and scope of nature by emphasizing aspects of plants and flowers that would normally go unnoticed. His photographs are created to educate the viewer to the color and design of plant life rather than provide a definitive study of a particular plant.

The photographs chosen for the stamp designs all have a dark natural background in stark contrast to the color and details of the flowers. Lammer has always been interested in the interplay of light among leaves and flowers but it was not until the introduction of the single lens reflex camera that he was able to capture the photographic effects he sought. From then on he was able to frame and focus plants with a precision previously impossible. He usually takes his picture on 35mm Kodakchrome 64 film and prints them himself on Cibachrome.

Lammer was born in Austria in 1909 and completed his education at Munich University. He went to Britain in 1934, working for the Austrian travel bureau. When the Nazis came to power he refused to accept German nationality offered to Austrians, and became a stateless subject. He took up photography, studying at the Reimann School in London. When war started, he joined the RAF and was eventually awarded the DFC and bar and was twice mentioned in dispaches. He was granted British citizenship in 1941 — unusually early for a stateless subject.

After the war, Lammer worked for Studio Briggs as a photographic assistant to gain practical experience in a discipline he intended to make his life's work. Eventually, he set up as a freelance photographer.

His career as a teacher of photography started in 1948 at the Guildford School of Art. From 1957 he was official photographer for the Design Council (then the Council of Industrial Design) but returned to teaching in 1964. Since 1978, he has taught at the Royal College of Art as a visiting tutor.

The stamps are available from Interpost, P.O. Box 378, Malverne, N.Y., 11565 or from the British Philatelic Bureau, 20 Brandon St., Edinburgh, Scotland, EH3 5BB.

New Stamp Issues In The News

BY SYD KRONISH
AP Newsfeatures

Julia Ward Howe, a staunch supporter of women's rights as well as of the abolition of slavery in the 18th century, is honored on a 14-cent regular stamp in the Great Americans Series. The Howe stamp is the 36th in the series and the first Great Americans issue for 1987.

Howe is best known, however, as the author of the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," first published in the Atlantic Month yin 1862. The first-day-of-issue ceremony will be in Boston, 125 years after the publication of the poem. Ironically, she received just $5 for her efforts.

Born May 27, 1819, in New York City, Howe moved to Boston in 1843 after marrying philanthropist Dr. Samuel Gridley Howe who also was the publisher of the "Commonwealth."

President Abraham Lincoln first heard the "Battle Hymn" during a Washington's Birthday celebration in 1862 and shouted above the applause, "Sing it again, sing it again!" The song was sung at Lincoln's funeral. Frequently performed at services honoring American leaders, the Hymn was a favorite of British Prime Minkuer Winston Churchill, who included a provision in his will that the song be played at his funeral.

The design of the stamp features a pencil drawing of a photograph of Mrs. Howe taken about the time she penned the Hymn. The denomination "14 USA" appears in the upper left corner. Her name is at the bottom of the stamp.

First-day cancellations are available for collectors.

The stamp may be purchased at your local post office and affixed to your own envelope. At least eight cents additional postage must also be affixed to meet the minimum first class letter rate. Send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Julia Ward Howe Stamp, Postmaster, Boston, MA 02205-9991. It must be postmarked by March 14.

Collectors preferring the USPS to affix the stamp should enclose a money order or check for 23 cents per envelope. One 8.3-cent Ambulance stamp will be added to meet the first class letter requirement. Send to: Julia Ward Howe Stamp, Postmaster, Boston, MA, 02205-9992. Deadline is March 14.

Here's how to get your first-day covers for the new 1987 Love Stamp as described in my previous columns.

If you purchase the stamp at your local post office, place it on your envelope and send to: Customer-Affixed Envelopes, Love Stamp, San Francisco, CA 94188-9991. Collectors having the Postal Service affix the stamp must enclose a money order or check for 22 cents and send to: Love Stamp, Postmaster, San Francisco, CA 94188-9992. Requests must be postmarked by March 1.

As with previous Love stamps, the 1987 issue is classified as a "special" stamp. That category of U.S. stamps is produced in larger quantities than commemoratives.

The new Love adhesive is the sixth on that subject since the first one was issued in 1973. The USPS says a new Love stamp will be issued annually in the years ahead.

Prominent in the 1987 design is a large, multicolored heart. Its pointed base is green, with orange, yellow and two shades of blue overlapping in various shapes that suggest the petals of flowers. The word "Love" appears across the top of the stamp in large letters. "USA" is at the lower left and "22" is at the lower right.

GREAT AMERICAN — Mary Lyon, founder of Mount Holyoke College and an organizer of Wheaton College, will be honored by a new postage stamp, the U.S. Postal Service announced recently. The new two-cent stamp, part of the Great American series, will be issued starting Feb. 28, Miss Lyon's birthday. (AP Laserphoto)

Black History Events Slated

WILMINGTON — Two more events in conjunction with the celebration of February as Black History Month in North Carolina are scheduled at the New Hanover County Museum Of The Lower Cape Fear.

At 2:30 p.m. Feb. 21, the N.C. Geneological Society and the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources will present "Tracing Your Family Tree." The program is designed to give special directions to professional and amateur black historians tracing their family roots.

At 2:30 p.m. Feb. 22, Dr. Todd Savitt of the Department of Medical Humanities at East Carolina University will present "Leonard: North Carolina Medical School for Blacks, 1882-1918." The slide/lecture program will address the issues related to training of black physicians. Wilmington's connection with the medical school will be highlighted.

Both programs are free and open to the public.

The New Hanover County Museum is located at 814 Market Street, Wilmington. For more details, call 763-0852.

Photo Show

DURHAM — An exhibition of photographs made with the gum bichromate process by John Scarlata will be on view in the Institute of the Arts Gallery at Duke University in the Bivings Building on east campus from Feb. 15 through March 19.

The exhibition is comprised of self protraits made with multiple exposure. They are in soft focus and colored in varied hues.

Scarlata is a member of the photography faculty at Virginia Intermont College in Britsol, Va. He has taught at the Penland School and UNC/Charlotte.

A reception, free and open to the public, will be held from 3 to 5 p.m. on Feb. 15. For more details, call 6s84-6654.

Play In Wilson

WILSON — The Playhouse of Wilson will present Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite" at 8 p.m. nightly Wednesday through Friday in the new Forest Hills Middle School in Wilson

Tickets are $5 for adults and $3 for students. For more details, call 243-5147.

Free N.C. Directory

RALEIGH — Travelers who have intentions of going to places in North Carolina have at their disposal a free comprehensive 1987 "North Carolina Accommodations Directory."

The paper booklet runs to 72 pages in a six by nine inches format. It contains six full-page black and white photographs, and four color photographs on the outer and inner cover pages.

The first 13 pages of text are devoted to a listing of "North Carolina Bed and Breakfasts, and Country Inns;" with the bulk of listings, 55 pages, covering "North Carolina Hotels, Motels and Rental Property."

Listings are alphabetical, and include addresses, telephone numbers, dates of seasonal openings (if applicable), number of units available, and amenities such as swimming pools, sports facilities, picnic facilities, etc. The only item not listed, understandably due to fluctuations, is the price charged for rooms and meals.

The directory lists also the state's eight convention centers which are spread from Asheveille in the mountains to Wilmington on the coast.

People who travel frequently and extensively will find this a convenient booklet to keep in the car pocket or some other handy place.

MILLIKEN CARPETS STAY BEAUTIFUL WITH MILLICARE

Your Milliken Place® dealer recognizes the importance of aesthetics, performance and value of carpet in the residential environment. To ensure that every piece of Milliken carpet performs with distinction in your home, we have put our technological expertise to work to develop the Millicare system.

At Milliken Place, we know that carpeting is an investment and that ease of maintenance and continuing good looks are important to you. With Millicare, we have refined the process to lighten carpet maintenance chores. Millicare incorporates the inherent quality of the carpet with a topical treatment and a dry carpet cleaner.

The first element of Millicare is the built-in quality of the carpet. Commitment and master craftsmanship join with technological superiority to produce American made carpeting with superior quality standards. Milliken carpets are manufactured in state-of-the-art facilities that yield the most consistent product in the industry.

Milliguard,® the second element of the Millicare system, is a topical fluoro-carbon treatment that improved carpet soil resistance. This application is so effective that DuPont, the chemical and fiber company, considers Milliguard® to be the most effective soil retardant stain repellent system used on carpet today.

The third element of the Millicare system is the Capture® Dry Carpet Cleaner. Capture's absorbent particles penetrate deeply into the carpet and lift out soil stains and odors. Leaving no soil attracting residue, Capture® adds to the life of the carpet.

The Millicare maintenance system is the most advanced care system available for Milliken Place carpets. Millicare not only adds superior performance to Milliken carpeting, it adds to its value by enhancing its beauty and extending its viability.

For all your carpeting needs and ideas, and of course to see a wonderful selection of carpets, we invite you to visit Milliken Place.

Cecelia Hill's Art At The Hospital

Cecelia Anne Hill of Nags Head is the artist showing during February at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The show will be on view in the main first floor hallway and can be seen 24 hours daily seven days weekly.

A native of Norfolk, Va., Ms. Hill grew up in Windsor and is a graduate of Salem College. Later she attended nursing school and became a registered nurse.

Eventually, she fulfilled a lifelong interest by studying art at the University of Virginia and at Virginia Wesleyan College.

Human subjects in rural settings dominate Ms. Hill's paintings, which include scenes from Hellenic ruins in Turkey, a misty morning on Paris' Champs Elysees, and a Spanish cathedral surrounded by orange groves. Also, her love of simple, everyday activities is reflected in paintings such as "Tobacco Field" and "Clothes Line."

Among her numerous patrons are Phillip Morris, USA; United Virgina Bank; Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., and R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Company. Her paintings additionally are in the collections of many individuals and are shown at the Island Art Gallery in Manteo.

Art By Larry Holmes Scheduled For GMA

An exhibition of recent work by artist Larry Holmes will be shown in the North Gallery of the Greenville Museum of Art beginning Feb. 17 and continuing through March 31.

Holmes, a professor of art and chairman of the University of Delaware Art Department, received his undergraduate degree at Kansas State College and his master of fine arts degree at Cranbrook Academy of Art, Michigan.

His work has evolved from pattern paintings and shaped canvases in the 1970s to his current realistic, even somewhat surrealistic, paintings and pastels.

He depicts animals in architectural and landscape spaces. "My ideas about the devices I use in these paintings have grown to be as much about the psychology of what is depicted and the gaps it leaves the viewer to fill, as they are about the formal aspects and connotations that each device inherently possesses," Holmes has said about his art.

Being interested in pictorial spaces, Holmes uses diptychs and triptychs and uses the idea of narrative which suggests sequence and time passage but does not present a specific story line.

Holmes has exhibited widely including a ten-year retrospective show at St. Lawrance University, Canton, N.Y. His work is represented in numerous private, public and corporate collections.

In 1980, Holmes was a Yaddo Fellow at Yaddo, Inc. in Saratoga Springs, N.Y.

Florence Invitational Details

FLORENCE, S.C. — Early March is the date of selection of artists to be invited to submit works for a major exhibiton of two-dimensional works planned by the Florence Art's Alive Committee and the Florence Museum.

The exhibition will be a memorial show to the late Joyce Dickinson Dowis.

All artists who are residents of North or South Carolina are eligible for consideration. Any interested artist may obtain an invitation form with detailed information upon request by writing to: Committee on Visual Arts, Art's Alive, P.O. Box 613, Florence, S.C., 29503. Those requesting the invitation and information are to send a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Initial exhibition of the works of selected artists and announcement of awards will be at Francis Marion College on April 15. The exhibition will then be installed at the Florence Museum where it will open for a month's showing beginning May 3.

A merit award of $1,500 will be given for the work selected as best in show. There will be a second place award of $600 and a third place award of $300.

Potters Show To Open Friday

WINSTON-SALEM "Potters's Potters," an exhibition of clay sculpture and vessels by four American ceramists, will open in the Gallery of Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc. on Friday. The exhibition will continue through March 22.

The four featured are long-standing PCI members Cynthia Bringle, Sally Bowen Prange, Norman Schulman and Tom Turner.

Bringle's vessels and wall pieces feature painterly and abstract surfaces. Prange will show a new sculpture series, Schulman will exhibit several large geometric slab constructions with images, and Turner's vessels have an oriental flavor and glazing.

The four will present a roundtable discussion at 8 p.m. on Feb. 27 in the Gallery of Piedmont Craftsmen, Inc.

Both the show and the discussion are free and open to the public.

The PCI Gallery is located at 411 North Cherry Street, downtown Winston-Salem. Gallery hours are 10 a.m. to 6 a.m. Mondays through Fridays, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays, and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Peoples Bank Hits A New Low
APR
On Home Equity Loans Through April 15, 1987.

Introducing Peoples Equity Line that features a limited-time 7% interest rate that's well below prime. And, there's no origination fee. Lately you've been bombarded by bank advertising telling you all you ever wanted to know about home equity loans and how you can take advantage of the last of the big tax loopholes. And, it's all true.

But, why pay more for a home equity loan than you have to? The next time you need cash for a car, tuition, home improvement or other major expenditure, write yourself a loan with your Peoples Equity Line. And, if you draw against your Peoples Equity Line now, you'll pay only 7% interest rate on the outstanding balance through April 15, 1987. After that time, your interest rate will continue at a low rate of Peoples Bank's Prime Rate + ½% for balances over $15,000 and Prime + 1% for balances below $15,000.* You only have to pay 1.5% of the balance (or $100, whichever is greater) each month, and your line of credit is open for 15 years.

Build up your tax deductions with Peoples Equity Line. By obtaining a home equity loan from Peoples Bank, you could possibly start adding up your tax deductions for the future. The staff of Peoples Bank will be happy to assist you in setting up your Peoples Equity Line. Call or visit any of our 62 offices today.

* This interest rate applies to Peoples Bank deposit customers. If the rate were not discounted at this time, it would be either 8% or 8½% depending on the outstanding balance. (Please refer to the rate formula stated above.) The rate may vary monthly after April 15, 1987, depending on Peoples Bank's Prime Rate.  For non-deposit customers of Peoples, ½% should be added to all interest rates quoted. For complete information on interest deductions for tax purposes, consult your tax advisor. The Prime Rate is that rate from time to time announced as Peoples Bank's Prime Rate.

Ottoman Empire Treasures Showing In The National Gallery

RARE CHAIR — This rare hairy paw foot wing armchair fetched $2.75 million at auction recently, establishing a record for any piece of furniture sold at auction, a spokesman for Sotheby's in New York said. By ROBERT M. ANDREWS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After scoring a hit with its lavish "Treasure Houses of Britain" exhibition last winter, the National Gallery of Art is taking a calculated gamble by inviting Americans to explore the unfamiliar but equally magnificent 16th century art treasures of the Ottoman Empire.

The show which opened Jan. 25 in the gallery's starkly modern East Building for a four-month engagement is the first major U.S. exhibition of art from the golden age of the Ottoman Empire, titled "The Age of Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent."

Made possible by a change in Turkish law, which until three years ago prohibited the export of national art treasures, the exhibition will run at the National Gallery until May 17. It will appear at the Art Institute of Chicago from June 13 to Sept. 6, and at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, Oct. 4 to Jan. 17.

"The artistic legacy of the Ottoman Empire is one of history's richest and most enduring," said J. Carter Brown, director of the National Gallery of Art, adding that the show "brings together works of extraordinary beauty and sumptuousness."

Brown said the exhibition will be one of the major arts events of 1987.

The exhibition, organized by the National Gallery with a grant from Philip Morris Companies Inc., features more than 200 works, including illustrated manuscripts, textiles, ceramics, metalwork and rare objects from the treasury of Sultan Suleyman the Magnificent, the fabled ruler, diplomat, military strategist, jurist, poet and arts patron still revered by Turkish people more than 400 years after his death.

During his 46-year reign, Suleyman led armies that more than doubled the size of his empire, which stretched from Austria to Iran, and bequeathed judicial principles that form the basis of many Western constitutional laws. In fact, Suleyman is best known to Turkish schoolchildren as "Kanuni," or "Lawgiver," and a Suleyman medallion decorates the walls of the U.S. House of Representatives.

One of the sultan's most enduring legacies is the vocabulary of a decorative arts language produced by the "nakkashane," Suleyman's imperial design studio.

His calligraphers, weavers, architects, metalworkers and ceramists produced distinctive motifs and themes — spring blossoms, three-pronged tulips, fan-shaped carnations, sprays of fruit tree branches — that embroider and give symbolic meaning to Turkish art even today.

The National Gallery exhibition features many imperial treasures that once belonged to Suleyman. They include a rock crystal pen box banded in gold and set with emeralds and rubies, the sultan's elegant hand mirror with ebony handle and intricately carved ivory back, a gem-encrusted gold battle helmet and turban ornaments of gold and peacock plumes.

His ceremonial sword boasts an ivory hilt set with rubies and turquoises and a steel blade that is inlaid with gold and decorated with depictions of mythical creatures in combat.

Suleyman's portable carved-walnut throne is completely covered with ebony, ivory and mother-of-pearl inlays and banded in silver. There are richly embroidered kaftans and a talismanic shirt inscribed with verses from the Koran, prayers and magical numbers and letters — all believed to protect the wearer from illness and evil forces.

Among the dazzling ceramics on display is a large panel of 45 square tiles made for an anteroom of the imperial baths in the harem of the Topkapi Palace in Istanbul, where Suleyman lived and worked. Also on view is a parchment map of the Americas made in 1513, based partly on descriptions by Christopher Columbus, and illuminated copies of Suleyman's collected poems.

Most of the 200 art objects were loaned by the Topkapi Palace Museum and other national museums in Istanbul. Others are on loan from major museums in New York, Los Angeles, Boston, London, Paris, Copenhagen, Demark and Kuwait.

Whether Suleyman can outdraw the gallery's "Treasure Houses" extravaganza, which attracted nearly 1 million visitors for a widely publicized show that lasted six weeks longer, is questionable.

Dr. Esin Atil, a Turkish-born curator and Islamic art historian at the Smithsonian Institution who is guest curator for the Suleyman exhibition, acknowledged in an interview that the Eastern flavor of Turkey's artistic traditions may seem strangely different to American audiences more accustomed to Western art.

However, she said, "there is a great sympathy for the arts and intellectual curiosity among Americans. (The) best way to inform ourselves about a distant culture is through its art, because art is the illustration of history."

Brown said the richness of Islamic and Ottoman artistry will be a great revelation for American viewers whose education has been influenced primarily by the masters of Western Europe.

The Turkish government is doing its best to acquaint Americans with what an embassy press release described as "a crucially important but little-known NATO ally." Ambassador Sukru Elekdaq said he hoped the exhibition would contribute to a greater American understanding of the Turks.

Four months of cultural activities are scheduled during the exhibition's Washington engagement. They will include exhibits of Ottoman architecture, silk screen prints, carpet weaving and contemporary Turkish art, lectures, films, seminars, concerts, a trade show and a demonstration of Turkish cuisine.

There also will be performances by the Turkish National Folk Dance Company and the celebrated Ottoman Mehter Military Band, which is bringing its chanting warriors and thundering drums to the United States for the first time.

Described as the world's oldest military band, its purpose was to "strike fear into the hearts of the enemy with cymbals and drums" when Ottoman armies advanced as far west as Vienna four centuries ago.

Reminders Of The Past

WILMINGTON — Reminders of the past, whether fairly recent or long ago, have an inherent attraction for those who remember them at the time as well as for younger people to whom the objects are not familiar.

One North Carolina musuem, The New Hanover County Museum of the Lower Cape Fear, has as part of its operations, the continuing solicition and acceptance from interested persons of artifact donors suitable to the museum's need and plans.

These range from the very small to the large, from items used by individuals to ones which were part of public displays and usage over the years.

Priodically, New Hanover County Museum publishes a list of donations received over the period of a few months.

Among the items received within the past few months are the ones listed below — a few selected at random from the many items received.

They include:

- A dance championship trophy and a dance trophy, both Lumina 1925.
- A parking meter and a free standing fire alarm.
- A turpentine collection pan.
- Caricatures advertising war bonds.
- A collection of Lumbee Indian objects.
- A wooden barrel; and lantern slides.
- A straightening comb and a funeral invitation.

Clarence Morgan To Give An Art Lecture At SECCA

WINSTON-SALEM — Clarence Morgan, an associate professor of art at East Carolina University, will present a slide lecture, "Thinking with Lines: A New Dialectic" at 12:30 p.m. Friday at the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art (SECCA) in Winston-Salem.

Morgan has large-scale drawings currently on view at SECCA, works which he says are "a reconsideration of hidden image potential which came about through examining the virtues of rejection, which are inherent in the process of working."

A native of Philadelphia, Morgan was educated at Pennsylvania schools and received the master of fine arts degree from the Pennsylvania Graduate School of Fine Arts.

In 1982, Morgan was awarded a North Carolina Arts Council Visual Artist Fellowship, and he has received numerous other grants and commissions including a recent one from the N.C. Department of Cultural Resources.

He has exhibited widely in solo and gorup exhibitions and his art is represented in numerous collections including the Philip Morris corporate collection, the RCA Corporation collection and the Greenville Museum of Art.

The Friday program is free and open to the public, and participants may bring a bag lunch. Caterered lunches for $4 are available by reservation to be made by Wednesday. For this and other information, call 725-1904.

SECCA is located at 750 Marguerite Drive.

SECCA Shows

WINSTON-SALEM — Two shows are currently on view at the SECCA, the Southeastern Center for Contemporary Art, 750 Marguerite Drive, Winston-Salem.

In Gallery B, a group exhibition of work produced by 8-9 year olds is on view. Art objects include personal TV sets and imaginary sculpture using found objects. Through Feb. 22.

In the Porch Gallery, Jack Clellen has a solo exhibitin of large contour, ink drawing depicting landscapes and interiors. Through March 1.

Book News

FROM SHEPPARD MEMORIAL LIBRARY

By WILLIE NELMS

Professional football is a major part of Sunday afternoons in the fall and winter for many American households. "The League: The Rise and Decline of the NFL", a new book by journalist David Harris, reveals the billion-dollar business that exists behind the Sunday afternoon contests.

A thoroughly researched, investigative report based on more than three years of work, this book relates the little-known power struggles among the owners that have drastically remade the internal politics and structure of the National Football League.

As a result of these battles, the future of professional football as we know it is not bright.

Harris shows how the league was at the peak of its unity in 1974, guided by the masterful hand of NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle. The league gained this power because of its commitment to "League Think" — a philosophy in which unity and stability were key, and each member club acted for the good of all.

Over the next ten years, League Think would unravel as internal war intensified, fueled by ego, greed, and conflicts of interest. By 1986, Commissioner Rozelle would preside over what looked very much from within like anarchy.

The author examines the 27 men and one woman who were the team owners during this time. He reveals how they ran their clubs and how the owners interacted with each other.

The personalities involved in this book are indeed fascinating. Each club owner is a unique personality, and the results of their confrontations in the boardroom are often more entertaining than the struggles between their teams on the gridiron.

While this book will obviously appeal to fans of professional football, it is also great reading for anyone interested in the world of business politics.

N.C. Touring Program

BY MEG GUNKEL
N.C. Department
Of Cultural Resources

RALEIGH — The N.C. Arts Council's 1986-87 touring program is bringing more than 250 performances and workshops by national and state artists to communities from the mountains to the coast.

The touring program has offered 26 North Carolina dance, music and theater groups and 33 national dance and theater groups. The artists were selected by the Touring Panel of the Arts Council, which offers up to 50 percent of the performance or residency costs through grants to theaters, schools, concert series, performing arts centers, civic groups and local arts councils.

Now in its seventh season, the program encourages touring to expose audiences to high-caliber state and national artists. "The touring program," said Amy Smith, the Arts Council's performing arts assistant, " has continued to grow each year, demonstrating that audiences in both rural and urban settings are eager to attend professional arts events in their home communities."

Many towns with annual outdoor festivals also are using the touring program subsidies to increase the level of artistry at the events, as well as provide outstanding talent, Ms. Smith added.

The deadline for artists to apply for a position on next season's touring roster is Aug. 1. The deadline for booking current touring program artists is six weeks in advance for North Carolina Touring Program engagements occurring July 1 through Oct.14; Sept. 15 for North Carolina Touring Program engagements occurring Oct. 15, 1987 through June 30, 1988, and June 1 for National Touring Program engagements booked for July 1, 1987, through June 30, 1988.

The 1987-88 roster is now available from the council for these booking deadlines.

The national touring roster offers performances in ballet, modern dance, jazz/ballroom dance, folk/ethnic dance and theater. The North Carolina roster includes ballet, modern dance and folk/ethnic dance; general, mime, puppet and children's theater; and orchestral, chamber, folk/ethnic, jazz, opera and band music.

• The 1986-87 North Carolina Touring Program roster included the African-American Dance Ensemble, Green Grass Cloggers, New Performing Dance Company, North Carolina Dance Theater and Wall St. Dance Works. Music groups were the Big Zucchini Washboard Bandits, Charlotte Symphony Orchestra, Ciompi Quartet, Cornelious/Crawford Duo, Loonis McGlohon Trio, Dungey, Tyson, McCrae Jazz Trio, National Opera Company, North Carolina Opera, Jeff Robbins, Shady Grove Band, Smoky Mountain British Brass Band and Winfield-Ericourt Duo.

• Theater groups in the program are Appalachian Puppet Theatre, The Belov's Contemporary Clown Drama, Doug Berky, Grey Seal Puppels, N.C. Black Repertory Company, N.C. Shakespeare Festival, N.C. Theatre for Young People, Tarradiddle Players and Touch Mime Theatre.

• The artists' roster for the National Touring Program included Ballet America Concert Dancers, Chamber Ballet USA, The Feld Ballet, Hartford Ballet, Indianapolis Ballet Theatre, Joffrey II Dancers, Les Ballets Trockadero Monte Carlo, Alvin Ailey Repertory Ensemble, David Gordon/Pick Up Company, Eiko-Koma, Elisa Monte Dance Company, Jubilation Dance Company, Meredith Monk, Musign, ODC/San Francisco, Paul Taylor Dance Company, Pilobolus Dance Theatre, Pooh Kaye and Eccentric Motions, and Trisha Brown Company.

• Also, American Ballroom Theatre, Peter Maxwell's Ballroom Dance Theatre, Balasarawati, Tamburitazans, The Acting Company, The Crossroads Theatre, Missouri Repertory Company, and The Negro Ensemble.

BRUEGEL DRAWINGS

NEW YORK (AP) — The first major loan exhibition in the United States devoted to the drawings of Pieter Bruegel the Elder and other 16th-century Netherlands masters is on view at the Morgan Library through April 5.

"The Age of Bruegel" consists of about 120 drawings from more than 40 museums and private collections throughout Europe and America

Princess Of Poetry To Read Here Feb. 16

Nikki Giovanni, known as "The Princess of Black Poetry," will give a combined lecture/poetry reading on Feb. 16 at 8 p.m. in Hendrix Theater.

The event is part of the Black Arts Festival being sponsored by the Student Union Minority Arts Committee. Her appearance is being co-sponsored by the Student Union Forum and Minority Arts Committee.

Ms. Giovanni's works are the collected experiences of being black, of being a woman, a mother, a person. Hers are poems of life set to verse.

She has been described by critics as being a prophet, a witness, at other times a person looking at the world with the wonder and awe of a little girl visiting Cinderella's Castle.

A native of Knoxville, Tenn., Ms. Giovanni was raised in Cincinnati, Ohio. She is a graduate of Fisk University where her major was history. New Program For N.C. Genealogists

RALEIGH — A new program to promote North Carolina genealogical research and publication has been established by the North Carolina Genealogical Society and was announced recently during its annual meeting held in Raleigh.

The new program, named the NCGS Publications Incentives Program, will be a means through which the society can discover, foster and encourage unrecognized genealogists, advance scholarly research, and promote distribution of important information.

Topics for entries must deal with North Carolina or North Carolina related subjects and may include research aids, church records, business records, private papers, public records, cemetery records, abstracts of newspapers or indexed county records, but may not include individual county censuses or family histories.

Additionally, a topic must be one of general genealogical interest and the information not otherwise widely available.

Persons or groups interested in submitting grant or loan applications are encouraged to obtain an application blank and additional information before completion of manuscript for entry.

This information can be requested from the Publications Incentives Program Committee, which will administer the program, by writing its chairman, R.S. Spencer, Jr., Box 159, Engelhard, N.C., 27824.

Application deadline for 1987 is March 31 with completed entries or, in the case of lengthy works by the submission of substantive samples, due April 30.

The Society's Board of Directors has the sole authority to determine the incentives to be awarded and winners will be notified in August with publication to follow immediately in order that the author and the published work can be announced at the society's annual meeting in late October.

Incentive loans and grants will be available for both emerging and established genealogists and genealogical groups who are current members of the society and who can meet the other qualifications and requirements of the specific incentive being sought.

Zoo Valentine

ASHEBORO — The North Carolina Zoological Park and the North Carolina Zoological Society are offering zoogoers a chance to send "A Valentine to the World."

All it takes is a valentine and a contribution of any amount to support World Wildlife Fund efforts in one of the most endangered tropical forest regions in the world.

On two Saturdays, Feb. 7 and Feb. 14, zoo visitors are invited to bring valentines and contributions to the R.J. Reynolds Forest Aviary. The greetings will be posted in the aviary lobby, and all gifts will be sent to the World Wildlife Fund, the world's premier wildlife conservation organization.

At 2 p.m. Dr. Jayne Owen Parker, zoo education coordinator, will present a talk entitled "Jungle Cries" in the aviary, which is a tropical forest habitat for 150 exotic birds and 2,300 jungle plants.

"Amazonia: A Celebration of Life" will be shown continuously in the aviary lobby from 1 to 2 p.m. and after her talk until 3 p.m.

Contributions from "A Valentine to the World" will go to support conservation efforts in the Atlantic Rain Forest in the Montes Claros Ecological Reserve and the Rio Doce State Park, in Minas Gerais, Brazil.

This project will contribute critical data for the development of overall management plans for these reserves which shelter many endangered wildlife species.

Admission is $3 for adults and $1 for children ages 2-15 and senior citizens. The tram ride between exhibits costs $1 per day.

For information, call 879-5606.

Focus On North Carolina Based Literature

Scenes Behind The First Roanoke Settlements

BACKGROUNDS AND PREPARATIONS FOR THE ROANOKE VOAYGES, 1584-1590. By John L. Humber. Raleigh, N.C. Division of Archieves and History. Paper, 108 pp illustrated, $6 plus $1.50 postage and handling.

It is obvious that the author, Greenville native John L. Humber, is a writer with a keen interest in exploring early American history. He has researched extensively and has come up with an extraordinary book on the subject of preparations for the early voyages to Roanoke Island.

Through illustrations, artists' conceptions, paintings and the written word, Humber has presented an account of hardships and sacrifices that were imposed upon hundreds of valiant men and women that was required in British efforts to settle the New World during the 16th century.

The author has focused primary attention on the years 1584-1590, years in which Queen Elizabeth I of England granted a charter to Sir Walter Raleigh, authorizing occupation and explorations of lands in America. Based on this authorization, Raleigh undertook efforts to send expeditions to what is now North Carolina, expeditions that attempted settlements on Roanoke Island.

Humber explores the financial struggles, the unchartered voyages and vivid characters instrumental in developing the project.

Many settlers, he says, came to America for economic reasons, thinking they could eventually establish trade with China through a northwest passage. Others came because of religious pressure under the Catholic reign of Henry VII and the Protestant influence of Mary Tudor. Some were sent to escape crime and unemployment.

In chapter 3, "Ships of the Expedition," Humber details the involvement of preparing a ship for sea, giving the structural makeup of the vessel, the type of crew, loading capacities, cargo carried and the names and dates applicable to the voyage.

He provides additional insight on the cost of putting a vessel to sea in a passage which relates: "Shipping hired for a voyage in 1585 cost approximately two shillings per ton a month, and the average purchase price of a used vessel was about four pounds per ton."

Another interesting aspect of the book deals with the food furnished to the voyagers crew and owners. Ten days monthly were designated to rations of fish and 16 days to servings of meat. Four Fridays were set aside as half-ration days to save two full days ration per month. Biscuits were served by the pound, beer by the gallon, stock fish by the quarter, cheese by the quarter pound, and butter by the half pound. Each shipman was allotted one pound of bacon and one pint of peas weekly.

The book is well illustrated with numerous maps such as a map of the world and John White's map of the N.C. coast around Roanoke Island; pictures of ships including the modern Elizabeth II; an artist's conception of the drowning of Captain Edward Spicer; 16th century navigational instruments, and others.

A Glossary of Terms related to ships and weaponry is helpful and covers such iems as a Caliver, an early handgun; Morion, a helmet without a visor, and Corselet, armor covering the front and back of the upper part of the body.

Space is devoted to a genealogical chart of the lineage of Sir Walter Raleigh and his blood ties to several prominent persons of his time.

"Backgrounds and Preparations" provides rewards for those interested in serious discovery of the knowledge of events that led to early attempts to settle America.

Poems Of Promise

THE POINTED TO. Poems By Skip Anderson. Laurinburg. St. Andrews Presbyterian College Press. Paper, 42 pages, $3.00. Edition limited to 300 copies.

Poetry lovers who enjoy deceptively simple poetic structures will be warmed and delighted by Skip Anderson's Blue Coot Chapbook, "The Pointed To," one of the series of chapbooks published periodically by the St. Andrews Press.

Anderson, a North Carolina native who has spent considerable time traveling in the United States and Mexico, says he sees life "as a mystery and an adventure," and that he "has been attempting to capture this sense in song and verse for 15 years."

The appeal of these poems is that the poet has been able to capture the ever-fresh awe of a child about the world in which he lives, particularly the poems in which he sensitively probes nature.

I'm drawn especially to poems such as "Morning," which opens with — "Leafless stand the tall gray trees/ More like stone than living things/ But breath appears to come with breeze/ And the melody she sings . . ." The concluding lines sing about a day's beginning — "Slowly walks the noise of dawn/ And brings forth life, though sleepily/ And color rolls forth once again/ And sound of beast and sound of man."

In another poem, "Voices Among the Trees," in which nature again is the dominant touchstone, Anderson creates miniature kaleidoscopic contrasts between objects and his highly personal individual imaginings about the objects — "A star a sapphire/ Glitters/ On an arthritic finger/ Of crepe myrtle . . ." and "With yearning spells/ of lunar inspiration/ Swaying to the waltz/ Of rustling leaves/ Eerie incantations/ Responding/ To the moontides . . ."

Anderson's talent for dealing with human relationships seems not to be as finely attuned as when he concentrates on the world of nature. He is still a young poet, so the ability to grow in that direction will doubtless come with time.

"A Repentence," for example, in which he writes — "Pardon me for being less than what a son should be;/ I fear I've failed you in so many ways./ The 'real' and the 'ideal' are stationed at opposing gates;/ They never meet except in bitter gaze . . ." has promise as an expression of human frailty; nonetheless, it lacks the sharp dilineation, the shining thrusts of revelation that he achieves when writing about nature.

Exciting Prose, Poetry In St. Andrews Review

ST. ANDREWS REVIEW. Issue Number Thirty-One. Fall/Winter 1986. Editor, Susan Ketchin Edgerton. Laurinburg. St. Andrews Presbyterian College Press. Paper, 116 pages, $6.00.

North Carolina is rich in literature published by small presses in the state, and one press that stands high on the list is that of St. Andrews Presbyterian College in the town of Laurinburg. Under the guidance of founding editor Ronald H. Bayes, himself a writer of note, the twice yearly St. Andrews Review has earned a well-deserved reputation for discovering talented writers, both in prose and poetry.

The most recent issue of St. Andrews Review for fall and winter 1986 is a slim treasure that in my opinion is equal to, or maybe even excels, anything published earlier by St. Andrews Press.

First off, there are seven excellent short stories. Each is attuned to its own tempo of life, embodying attitudes and emotions that no matter how off-beat the situation or setting, rings true.

My favorite is Jacob Mufson's "The Savior," a densely-packed tale that builds incessantly, like Ravel's "Boloro" to a taunt near-climax which then ends on a subdued note of wryness. Set in a remote area of Guatemala, the story is a beautiful evocation of a journey both through changing, dreamlike landscape and one man's search for meaning in his life.

Poignancy void of sentimentality is the key to the effectiveness of Anthony N. Fragola's "The Garden," a story centered on the special relationship between an old man, an immigrant from Italy and his grandson. The old man's pleasure in life revolves around his beloved garden and the dream he nourishes that he and the grandson might someday visit his old home in Italy before he dies. The dream never materializes, but the grandson never forgets the ties of blood and love that binds the young and the old.

Rebecca McClanahan Devet's "The Rapture" is both chilling and comic. A young girl, Hattie, tries valiantly to capture the rapture of being saved by grace and being called to testify at one of the emotional religious meetings she attends as the protege of Mrs. Abernathy. The portrait of Mrs. Abernathy, bedecked in glitter and owner of a gold-colored Chrysler, is a powerful personality study of a woman smugly cocooned in the certainly of blessed rewards in the future. "The Rapture" is an evangelistic tale not soon forgotten.

The other stories convey their messages with compassion and succinctness of the kind that make short stories rewarding.

• Eighteen poets have contributed about two dozen poems to this issue of St. Andrews Review. Here are expressions of philosophy, of loves remembered, of childhood scenes, the tastes and feels of landscapes and seasons. One of the factors which make these poems a joy to read is the diversity of styles and techniques employed by the poets. Some are spare, little more than suggestions; others are beads of words strung leisurely together. Some relate to Carolina rural life, while others take the reader to far away, sometimes imaginary places.

Unfortunately, review space permits only the briefest reference to individual poems. Below are a few of the verses that for me struck a responsive chord:

— "She kneels before me,/ the daughter of a distant king./ There were blossoms, she says,/ on the river. We walk/ into the garden. A carp/ touches the surface of the pond,/ an eddy subtle as a navel."... From Michael Cadnum's "Emperor." This poem in six numbered verses evokes a melody of color and mystery akin to Wallace Steven's "Sunday Morning."

— Michael McFee's "A Glove From The Lake District," poses questions about things lost: "Granted, the saved may have a place/ to go, a final focus; but might the lost/ also be found at certain coordinates, . . ."

— In "Indian Winter" (for Guy Owen), poet Phillip Horne summons the joys of boyhood in North Carolina: "A doorway of fire/ is what we will run through,/ we said, as Indians; the rich mild glow of the portal,/ of smoked clay walls;/ a tobacco barn looks like/ the wilderness in September dusk. . ."

Readers wanting an excellent source of continuing literary pleasures will do well to consider a subscription to the St. Andrews Review. A gift subscription is also a thoughtful gesture to a friend who enjoys good reading.

Subscriptions, for two issues yearly, is $12 for one year, $20 for two years. These are to be sent to: St. Andrews Review, St. Andrews Presbyterian College, Laurinburg, N.C., 28352.

BLUEGRASS MANDOLINS — Luke Thompson works on one of his handcrafted mandolins in Baton Rouge, La. It takes Thompson about a month to build one from scratch. Busy Handcrafting Mandolins

By GUY COATES
Associated Press Writer

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — In Louisiana, the land of Cajun zydeco and New Orleans jazz, Luke Thompson gets little notice as he handcrafts bluegrass mandolins.

His work is on exhibit at the Capitol, he was featured at the 1984 World's Fair and the state folklife association wants Thompson to share his talents with school kids.

But there is little fame for the shy, modest craftsman and musician, who stresses that first and foremost he's a performer.

Buck White, one of America's best known bluegrass musicians, uses a Thompson hand-crafted mandolin. Also a fan of Thompson is Nashville musician Mark O'Connor, who boasted of Thompson's prowess in Frets Magazine, calling him a true luthier — a maker of string instruments.

O'Connor won the Buck White International Mandolin Championship in 1982 and the prize was one of Thompson's custom built instruments. Mandolins, used mostly in bluegrass music, are pear-shaped with a fretted neck and four to six strings.

However, Thompson can't turn them out like an assembly line. "I need about a month, maybe more, to build one from scratch," he said. "Right now, I'm building a mandolin for a boy in Japan. Bluegrass gets around even if it doesn't here.

"There's not much picking down here. The culture is mostly Cajun. They play a lot of good music but don't care for bluegrass or square dancing. The hotbeds are in New York, Boston, Indiana, Texas and places like that."

Thompson worked 10 years with Bill Monroe, the legendary Kentuckian who developed bluegrass from old time mountain string music in the 1940s.

"I worked with him at the Bean Blossom Festival in Indiana, but wasn't one of his Bluegrass Boys (band members). I emceed and played with him some on stage."

Thompson started making madolins in 1960 at the suggestion of musician Herschel Sizemoore.

"We were in Muscle Shoals, Ala., looking at a 1923 Gibson — that's the most popular ever made," he said. "Bill Monroe uses one. Found it in a Florida barbershop in 1940 or 1941. If you can find one, you can buy it for what an expensive new car would cost.

"Herschel and me were just looking and I told him I thought I could make one. He told me to do it. I got rid of the first one I made. The second went to Buck White."

Word spread about Thompson's mandolins. He recently contracted to assemble mandolins for Gibson, which sends him the pre-cut pieces.

"I've put a few together for them in the white (without a finish) and take them to the Nashville plant where they finish 'em," he said. "They have a good acoustic design engineer in Charlie Derrington."

The mandolins Thompson builds from scratch have different sounds.

"Each one has a bit different tone but I don't know why. I haven't figured that out. I don't think nobody else has neither.

"The important thing is the graduation of the top and back plates," he said, referring to the curve in the wood. "The air chamber has a lot to do with it. You need a certain amount of cubic inches in the box.

"Gibson makes about the best in the world. There's a lot who make good ones besides myself. I can't take credit for being better than nobody else. I wouldn't want to. It wouldn't be fair."

A custom-made mandolin averages $3,000, said Thompson, but a lot depends on dickering between the willing buyer and the maker.

Thompson also mends guitars and mandolins. "This one was busted over somebody's head," he said, holding up the fragments of a guitar. "What a shame to use something like this for a club."

Dinner Theater

NEW BERN — The Harvey Mansion Cabaret dinner-theater production of "The Sea Horse" is scheduled to open Feb. 20 and to run Fridays and Saturdays through March 14.

The play, by Edward J. Moore, is a courtship ritual dance with two characters. The performers are Cindy Sutton as Gertrude Blum, proprietor of a seaside tavern, and Bob Hollatschek ss Harry Bales, a seaman who frequents the tavern.

Dinner is scheduled for 7 p.m. each performance, with curtain time at 8:15 p.m.

For more details and reservations call 638-3205 after 2 p.m. on any day.

Student At St. Andrews Learns The Art Of Banjos

LAURINBURG — When Darin Lawrence was a child he listened to some of the best mountain music there is — in his living room.

"My dad (George Lawrence) used to play country music back in the 1940s; we used to have some of the best banjo players in the world playing in our living room," Lawrence said. "Folks like Earl Scruggs and Grandpa Jones."

With that in mind it's easier to understand why this St. Andrews Presbyterian College pre-med junior is spending his winter term learning "Building a Better Banjo."

Lawrence is interning with Geoff Stelling at his banjo-production plant in Afton, Va. Stelling is one of the world's premier banjo makers.

"Ever since I was a little kid, I have been fascinated with the sound of a banjo," Lawrence said. "It's upbeat music."

With Stelling, Lawrence is learning all the finer points involved in putting together a banjo. He said there are many subtle skills that go into crafting a banjo.

"Everything is important," Lawrence said. "Everything including selection of the wood for the instrument; that makes a difference in the brightness and darkness of the sound it produces."

Even though Lawrence plans on medical school and on a profession as a physician after graduation from St. Andrews, the Staunton, Va., junior is drawn to mountain music as though it were a deep-rooted love. "I've been playing with a band since I was 14," he said.

Lawrence played in the Kennedy Center in Washington D.C. with Hill Country, a bluegrass band. He also performed in such farflung places as a folk music festival in the hills of Greece with that band.

His present band, the East Coast Bluegrass Band, cut its first album, with Lawrence on string bass, in September. As much as he enjoys mountain music, Lawrence said he enjoys listening to all types of music — "as long as it has drive."

St. Andrews music professor, Bob Engleson said "Darin is real appreciative of mountain music — and he's quite accomplished in its performance."

At St. Andrews, Lawrence has played with Norm Boggs, an associate professor of chemistry and an accomplished bluegrass musician, and Clyde Edgerton, an associate professor of English, novelist and musician. "We have a lot of fun playing around," Lawrence said.

Asked why he chose building a banjo as an internship, Lawrence said, "Well it's a lot of fun and even though I plan on medical school, mountain music is an obsession with me.

"I quess you could say it's in my blood."

Duke Group To Present Two Contemporary Operas

DURHAM — The Duke University Institute of the Arts and Triangle Music Theater Associates will join forces to present two one-act music theater pieces showing the work of young American composers during Duke's annual Winterfest of Contemporary arts.

Performances will be at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the Shaefer Theater of the Bryan Center on Duke's West Campus, with a matinee performance at 3 p.m. Saturday.

Two works will be presented.

The first is "The Informer," with music by James Legg and libretto by Legg and collaborator Sandra Collins. It was first performed in Texas and then in New Jersey. The Duke presentation has been extensively revised by Legg, who is currently a graduate student in composition studying with Robert Ward at Duke University.

Cast for "The Informer" includes Thom King, Ellen Williams, Laura Baxter and Robert Chapman.

The second work being presented is Richard Wargo's "The Seduction of a Lady." Wargo, a native of Pennsylvania, is a graduate of Eastman School of Music. The opera was performed earlier by the Lake George Opera and the Florida State Opera.

Wargo's work is a comic opera set in Russia in the late 19th century. Cast members include James Hopkins, Jacquelyn Culpepper and Thom King.

The matinee and evening performances on Saturday will include an intermission discussion with the composers and performers. Tickets for all performances are $6. For more details and ticket reservations, call 684-6654.

New Bern Theater One-Acts

NEW BERN — The New Bern Civic Theater will present the Saax Bradbury Players in a production of three one-act plays under the title "It's Not Just An Act" on Friday and Saturday and again on Feb. 20 and 21 with performances at the Saax Bradbury Playhouse at 8 p.m. each of the four nights.

The three one-act plays being presented are: "The Trysting Place" by Booth Tarkington; Edward Albee's "The Sandbox"; and "Sometimes I Wake Up in the Middle of the Night," a compilation of monologues and skits by young people, authored by students at Walden Theater Conservatory.

Directors are Lu Tilley Hoff and Marcia Morgan, with Dinah Tingle producer.

Performers in the three plays are Shem Applegate, Lisa Daughtry, Will Henson, Dan Husson, Alice Johnson, Julie Johnson, Kristal Manning, Eddie Mooring, Linda Pike, Ala Pound, Dail Reed, Kerry C. Reynolds, Dov Sherman, Marianna Smith, Tracy Stephenson, Tray Stubbs and Jennifer Willingham.

Tickets for the production go on sale Monday. More details and ticket reservations may be made by calling 633-0567 or 633-3310.

Two Plays For NCSU

RALEIGH — The Acting Company will present two productions this week at Stewart Theater on the second floor of the North Carolina State University, Raleigh. Both productions will be at 8 p.m.

On Friday, the company will present the premiere adaptation of the Mark Twain/Dudley Warner novel, "The Gilded Cage." Director is Mark Lamos, artistic director of the Hartford State Company. The play is being co-produced with The Acting Company by Connecticut's Hartford Stage Company as adapted by Constance Congdon, Hartford's playwright-in-residence.

The Saturday offering is John Houseman's version of Skakespeare's romantic comedy "Much Ado About Nothing," being presented celebration of Valentine's Day.

Gerald Gutierrez will direct the "Much Ado" production, in which he has incorporated brilliant colors, festive costumes and Latin rhythms.

Tickets for either production are priced at $14. More details and reservations can be made by calling the Center Stage Box Office at 737-3104 between 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Black Play Set

WINSTON-SALEM — Larry Leon Hamlin will direct the American premiere of "Toussant-Angel-Warrior of Haiti" by Audley Haffenden.

The North Carolina Black Repertory Company will present this historical drama at the Arts Council Theater, 610 Colilseum Drive, Winston-Salem on Friday, Saturday and Sunday and again from Feb. 12-15 at 8 p.m. A matinee performance will be given at 3 p.m. Feb. 15 in addition to the 8 p.m. performance.

Commenting on Haffenden's play, director Hamlin said "Toussaint is a very important historical figure, one that should not be forgotten and whose story should be illuminated . . . along with other historical heroes and heroines."

Tickets are now on sale at the company's office, and can be reserved by calling 723-7907.

Pollock Play Is Among Offerings

RALEIGH — Three more of the four plays selected by the Raleigh Ensemble Players are scheduled to be presented in February, March and May for the ensemble's sping season play readings.

The play designated as best of the year will be produced during the company's regular summer season.

The plays are presented to the public in staged readings at 2:30 p.m. on the designated dates, with readings to be held in Raleigh's Sertoma Arts Center.

All readings are free and open to the public. The authors are to be present, with audience comment and critique encouraged.

The three spring season plays scheduled are:

- Feb. 15 — "In Between Us" by Kathy Kirkland of Raleigh.
- March 15 — "The Garden Path," a comedy by Joey Pollock of Ayden.
- May 17 — "Pot of Gold" by Gloria Monday of Durham.

For more details, write to: Raleigh Ensemble Players, 6905 Park Place, Raleigh, N.C., 27604 or call 872-2716.

Leigh Albee On Dance Staff

Leigh Messner Albee of Greenville has joined the teaching staff of Down East Dance. A Rose High graduate, she attended the N.C. School of the Arts, Virginia Intermont College, and East Carolina University as a ballet major.

She has been trained primarily in classical ballet, but has also trained in contemporary jazz, modern, tap and aerobics. She was a member of Dance Impressions Theater in Charlotte which toured the area.

Her major roles have been as Swanhilda in "Coppelia," as a tormentor in the ECU production of "Jesus Christ Superstar," and in two annual concerts with the ECU Dance Theater. She also was a choreographer and performer in the Bath outdoor "Blackbeard" drama, and most recently danced locally in "Couples," directed by New York choreographer David Anderson.

Festival Kickoff

NASHVILLE, TENN. — The Music City Song Festival will kick off its eighth annual competition for amateur and professionals songwriters in April with the distribution of a free, educational publication for songwriters, lyricists and vocalists.

To receive a copy of the upcoming publication, obtain entry information or to inquire about the year-round program, send a request to: MCSF, P.O. Box 17999-G, Nashville, Tenn., 37217.

Auditions For ECU Orchestra

The East Carolina Orchestra and Chamber Music Association will hold auditions for an advanced string quartet on Feb. 23 at 6 p.m. in Room 101 of the East Carolina University School of Music.

Student musicians of high school age or younger performing repertoire on the level of the Mozart violin concertos or above may audition. They should be prepared to play a work of their choice.

For more information, contact Dr. Charles Schwartz, president of the association, at 757-6851.

Bluesman Shuns Publicity

By DAVID BEARD
Associated Press Writer

BENTONIA, Miss. (AP) — Jack Owens still gets those offers to go to Europe and Japan after nearly seven decades of playing the blues. But he's not straying from his poor, rural roots in Mississippi.

"Can't do it," said the bluesman as he strummed a beaten guitar on a front porch one recent afternoon. "I'm scared to go up in them things and go across the water."

Though the 82-year-old Owens may be afraid of traveling by plane or ship, he's been recognized as a living blues master. He swapped guitar licks with bluesman Elmore James, whose recordings inspired early rock 'n' rollers.

But he lives in a small wood-frame home on a dirt road outside of town, does yard work for others and tends to his dog, goat and hog. He plays on the porch or in a small sitting room with a wood stove and is frequently interrupted by his wife, Mabel, who is confined to a bed in the next room.

"He's one of several great artists here," said Bill Ferris, director of the Center for the Study of Southern Culture at the University of Mississippi, and a blues scholar. "They are bards, but live here without any sense of their own importance.

"The Europeans know much more about Jack Owens than Mississippians do. It's like a prophet isn't appreciated in his own land."

Owens and the late blues giant, Skip James, came from Bentonia, a small sawmill and cotton crossroads in the foothills between Jackson and the Mississippi Delta. They played "Baby Gal" and "The Devil Got My Woman" together, and they popularized a strain of music known as "Bentonia blues," based on field hollers from cotton slave and sharecropping days.

"They all have this high-pitched falsetto that they sing in. It's a very distinct style, kind of haunting and eerie," Ferris said.

At one time, musicians such as Charlie Patton and Robert Johnson exemplified some of the dozen distinct Mississippi blues styles, but time and increased mobility have worn down many differences.

While other players toured the country, Owens remained in his native town, mule farming by day, performing at his rural restaurant and nightspot in the evenings.

"I would be thinking about how to play when I was behind my mule, plowing the fields," Owens said. "I would play all night and fall asleep in the fields. Sometimes, I'd hear somebody coming my way. Sometimes I wouldn't."

He learned to play as a child from his mother and father. "My father moved away when I was 8 years old," Owens said between songs. "He gave me a guitar and a Texas saddle, and that guitar ruined me. I didn't care about nothing but the guitar. I can't read and I can just barely write my name."

But he can play.

His fingers speed up and down the frets, seemingly untroubled by age. Larry Allen, who lives in the trailer next door, just stares as Owens manages to play bass lines, rhythm and occasional musical melodies while he sings.

"He uses all six strings," Allen said. "I don't think he's slowed down at all. He just plays so natural."

Yet Owens never quit his job and left for Memphis, Tenn., or Chicago, as did better-known Mississippi blues musicians such as B.B. King, Willie Dixon, Muddy Waters, Mississippi John Hurt or John Lee Hooker.

"I made it to Greenwood and Flora, and I played in Jackson a while back," Owens said. "But I am from the country. I don't like those cities. I don't like to lock my door and shut my windows and be scared."

His wife's illness limits him to day trips for solo shows or with his longtime partner, harmonica player Bud Spires.

Owens likes to tell visitors about his old nightspot, about playing for rich white landowners, about traveling as a young man throughout Mississippi and of the adventures from playing what he calls "the devil's music."

During the past two centuries, man's indiscriminate hunting and destruction of habitat has exterminated the North American wapiti (elk) throughout 90 percent of its former range.

Japanese Comedian Inspired By Chaplin

By MARGARET SCHERF
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO (AP) — Kinichi Hagimoto admired Charlie Chaplin so much that he traveled to Switzerland from his native Japan to meet the great silent-film star he sometimes imitated.

"I tried to call on him and I knocked at the door," Hagimoto recalled in a recent interview. "His manager said, 'no.' So the next day, I knocked on the door again and the manager said, 'no.'

"And the third day, I asked the manager if Chaplin himself knew I was here. I had flown 20 hours from Japan. It was such cold weather. I admired Chaplin so much. 'Does he know that I am here?' And I cried loudly, 'Mr. Chaplin, I am here. I want to meet you.' And Mr. Chaplin came downstairs."

Fifteen years after his meeting with Chaplin, Hagimoto is one of the most popular comedians in Japan. He does three TV comedy shows a week and is known to millions of viewers by his nickname, "Kinchan."

Though he still admires Chaplin, he no longer imitates him. Nor does he try to be a Japanese Jerry Lewis, another favorite early impersonation.

"As I grow older, I want to cherish myself more. Rather than impersonating somebody, I try to keep my own personality," Hagimoto said in Japanese, speaking through an interpreter.

Until about a decade ago, the Japanese were not regarded as having an enormous sense of humor, he said. "So until 10 years ago, I always admired American people because they had a very good sense of humor."

But the situation is changing in Japan, "especially among the younger generation. They like humor very much, and they do understand and appreciate humor. So the recent trend is that the older generation still does not appreciate humor, but the younger people do. So there is a gap, between the younger and older generation."

Most of the humor in Japan tends to be childish, Hagimoto said.

"In the case of American entertainment, entertainers first approach adults," he said. "Children see adults laughing and then the children laugh."

But in Japan entertainers first try to entertain the children. "Looking at the children laughing makes the adults enjoy it," he said.

Hagimoto, who says he's not a physical or verbal entertainer, tries to aim somewhere in between children and adults, such as at high school or university students.

He doesn't want to limit himself to one field. "An example," he said, "is that I have organized a charity marathon for the handicapped, and my purpose is that if a handicapped person is given a wheelchair as a result of that marathon, he probably will be laughing."

He described one of his favorite comedy routines: "A school kid comes home and complains to his mother, 'The only thing I find in my lunchbox is just rice and pickles. Can't you do anything about this?' His mother says, 'Well, I'm always careful not to place the pickle in the same position.'"

The routine gets appreciative laughs in Japan, where the artistic arrangement of food is a strong cultural tradition.

Laughter can mean many things in Japan, Hagimoto said.

"When we feel embarrassed, we laugh. When we are shy, we also laugh. When we are sad, we try to disillusion ourselves by laughing. Because when we are sad, people around us worry. But we don't want to make them worry, so we try to laugh in order to hide ourself."

Japanese comedy doesn't often include jokes about the work place, in part because of the image of Japanese as hard workers who devote much of their time and energy to their jobs.

"I don't think that makes a good joke, because working hard is common sense to us," Hagimoto said. "So if I make a joke about the work place, usually I talk about somebody who is very lazy."

Hagimoto himself spends so much time at his work that he doesn't have enough time to spend with his three children.

"At my home, my children never call me daddy or father. They call me Kinchan, my nickname, because when they see television the audience will always call me that," he said.

"I try to be a very good father to my children but they do not consider me as their father. They think I am just Kinchan, a comedian. So when I scold my children, they laugh. Even when I want to discipline my children, they never understand it as discipline."

Some native Americans dislike the name Custer Battlefield National Monument because Lt. Col. George Armstrong Custer and the U.S. Cavalry lost the Battle of Little Bighorn and the Sioux and Cheyenne won, says National Geographic.

Black Film To Premiere In Oxford February 15

RALEIGH - A premiere public screening of the award winning documentary film, "A Singing Stream," will be held at 3 p.m. Feb. 15 at the Orpheum Theater in downtown Oxford.

A reception hosted by St. Peter's United Methodist Church of Oxford will be held following the screening of the film, and will be at the Granville County Museum and Cultural Center, located near the theater on Court Street.

Both the screening and the reception are free and open to the public.

Recently honored by the National Black Programming Consortium, "A Singing Stream" is the first known film to trace 20th century black history through the musical and cultural traditions of a Southern black family.

The film chronicles the lives and music of the Landis family of Creedmore, a small community in Granville County, north of Durham.

The matriarch of the family, 86-year-old Bertha M. Landis, inspired and taught her 11 children and 19 grandchildren to enrich their lives through gospel music and singing. Her example and skill helped to prepare the family to successfully meet the difficult challenges posed to rual black Southerners over the past several decades.

Dr. Daniel Patterson, a folklorist at UNC-Chapel Hill and one of the film's producers, notes that "the documentary illustrates how the Landis family used music to promote family loyalty and purposefulness as they progressed from tenant farmers to landowners, and to cope with the dispersal of family members to northern jobs after the war.

Much of the musical excitement of the film revolves around scenes featuring the dynamic singing of the popular and long-lived male gospel group known as the Golden Echoes. The group includes several of the Landis sons.

George Holt, director of the Folklife Section of the North Carolia Arts Council, has commented that "the film contributes much to our understanding and apprecation of the cultural resources of black family and community life in North Carolina. It presents a well balanced and always honest treatment of its subject with a warm and engaging style."

The film was produced and directed by Tom Davenport under the auspices of the Curriculum in Folklore at UNC-Chapel Hill. Funds for the project were provided by grants from the N.C. Arts Council, the National Endowment for the Arts, the American Film Institute and other sources.

The Granville County premiere of "A Singing Stream" is sponsored by the Granville Arts Council and other agencies.

The premiere will be attended by the film makers and several members of the Landis family, including Mrs. Bertha Landis.

For more information, contact 733-7897 in Raleigh or 693-8272 in Oxford.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — Princeton University says it has received a commitment of $1.25 million from Louisa Stude Sarofim and Fayez Shalaby Sarofim of Houston, Texas, and from The Brown Foundation, also of Houston.

It says the funds will be used to endow a professorship in American Art.

It says the professorship will "complement existing faculty strength in American studies and contemporary art and enable Princeton to play a leading role in the development of an emerging area of art history."

Jeremy Menhuin Is Czech Orchestra Pianist

To Perform At ECU Thursday

PIANIST JEREMY MENUHIN

"If any young pianist can be called truly gifted, it is Jeremy Menuhin. With the most elegant tone, silken dexterity and volatile, spontaneous imagination among his many virtues, he made a magical experience," wrote a critic in London's Daily Telegraph.

Menuhin will be featured with the Czech Philharmonic on Thursday at 8 p.m. in Wright Auditorium. The concert is sponsored by the Department of University Unions' Artists Series.

Tickets for this performance are available from the Central Ticket Office in Mendenhall Student Center, Monday-Friday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tickets are priced at $10.00 For more information and tickets, call 757-6611, ext. 226 during the above hours.

It is seldom that great musicians have produced children who have followed in their footsteps but there is the exception: Jeremy Menuhin, son of he violinist, Yehundi Menuhin, has earned an enviable reputation as one of the finest pianists appearing today. Like his father, he has the ability to communicate to audiences the essence of Beethoven, Schubert, Mozart, Bartok or Debussy. Wrote the "Chicago Tribune:" "Yet another musical Menuhin whose talents prove that a noble performance tradition has been carried into the second generation. Jeremy Menuhin is a pianist of exceptional attainments."

Born in San Francisco, Jeremy Menuhin spent his early years there and — like his father — took a keen interest in the musical life of the city. It was after a formal academic education that he seriously began his musical studies. In Paris, he studied composition with Nadia Boulanger and conducting with Hans Swarowsky in Vienna. It was the piano, however, which won out.

In the past decade, Menuhin has performed throughout Europe, Australia and North America with major symphony orchestras, including the Berlin Philharmonic, London Philharmonic, Orchestre National de France, Royal Philharmonic (including a United States tour in the 1984-85 season) and the Amsterdam Philharmonic. Critical success followed his 1984 New York recital debut. In the 1985-86 season, he appeared in recital again in New York and made his Washington, D.C. recital debut at the Kennedy Center.

Jeremy Menuhin's most recent recordings include all-Debussy and all-Schubert discs, as well as Beethoven's Third Piano Concerto. His album of the Bartok violin and piano sonatas with his father won the Grand Prix du Disque. His special relationship with the Polish Chamber Orchestra has resulted in recordings of several Mozart concertos.

Conducting the Czech Philharmonic will be Zdenek Kosler, a recipient of Czechoslovokia's highest artistic honor, the title of "National Artist," in appreciation of his merit in promoting Czech music and for his interpretation of Smetana's operas.

Having recently completed five years as chief conductor and artistic director of the opera ensemble of the National Theatre in Prague, Kosler has often guest conducted, leading world orchestras such as the New York Philharmonic, London Symphony Orchestra, Wiener Symphoniker and the Leningrad Philharmonic.

DREXLER RETIRES

NEW YORK (AP) — Arthur Drexler, director of the Department of Architecture and Design at the Museum of Modern Art for 30 years, has retired.

Stuart Wrede, curator of architecture and design, has been named acting director of the department.

Roanoke Gala Set At Kennedy Center

The North Carolina Congressional delegation will hold a gala at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts on February 24. Prior to the gala, an international reception will be held at the Embassy of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland.

Entitled "A North Carolina Salute to the Voyages of Discovery," the gala will pay tribute to three significant voyages in the history of the nation; voyages that opened new domains of discovery.

The first tribute, "The Voyage of Space," represents man's desire to challenge the heavens and understand the stars.

This tribute will be paid to North Carolinian astronaut, Michael Smith, who was killed aboard the space shuttle Challenger.

The second tribute, "The Voyage of Flight," represents man's quest to soar above the horizon and view the world beyond. This tribute will be paid to the memory of Orville and Wilbur Wright, who conquered the skies at Kitty Hawk, North Carolina.

The third tribute, "The Voyage of Roanoke," represents man's struggle to survive in the face of hardship and adversity. This tribute will be paid to Operation Raleigh, a four-year, round-the-world expedition series, originated by H.R.H. The Prince of Wales and headquartered in Raleigh. Operation Raleigh promotes international leadership development for youth through the adventure of sailing in tall ships throughout the world.

The program for "A North Carolina Salute to the Voyages of Discovery" gala will consist of historical readings, presentations and musical offerings recalling the historic birth and growth of our nation.

Reading the tributes will be three prominent guests to be joined on stage by a group of performers including Anne Jeffreys, George Grizzard, Eugenia Rawls, Louise Fletcher, William Shust, Fred Moyer, John Houseman, Jim Secrest, Nancy Green, James Pritchett and Jenny Seham.

The gala will benefit the capital campaign for The Roanoke Island Center for the Arts, a $6.1 million year-round, multi-use theater complex to be located on Roanoke Island in Manteo.

Construction of the Center will begin in the summer of 1987 and is projected to be completed in 1989.

Admission, in the form of three levels of contributions, are:

- Sponsors — $10,000;
- Preferred seating — $500; and
- Regular seating — $250.

For more information, call (202) 488-7229.

Mozart Opera

Mozart's "La Clemenza di Tito" will be broadcast live from the Metropolitan Opera radio network beginning at 2 p.m. Saturday. Locally, it will be aired over radio stations WTEB-New Bern and WRRF-Washington, N.C.

Carol Vaness will sing Vitellia; Tatiana Troyanas has the role of her lover and reluctant co-conspirator Sesto; David Rendall is the emperor Tito; Hei-Kyung Hong will sing Sesto's sister Servilia; Diana Montague, in her Met broadcast debut will appear as Servilia's lover Annio, and Julie Robbins will be Tito's adviser, Publio.

Senior Recitals Scheduled

Four recitals by seniors in the School of Music, East Carolina University, are scheduled at ECU during the coming week.

All are to be held at the A.J. Fletcher Recital Hall on campus, and all are free and open to the public.

The four seniors, times and dates of their recitals, are:

- Tuesday, 7 p.m. — Natalie A. Beacham of Williamston, piano, a student of Dr. Henry Doskey. Pianist Warren Gordon will assist her.

For her program, Miss Beacham has listed: Mozart's "Sonata;" Bela Bartok's "Rumanian Folk Dances;" Maurice Ravel's "Ma mere l'Oye," and Frederic Chopin's "Ballade No. 3 in A-Flat, Opus 47."

- Friday, 7 p.m. — Paul Andrew Orsett and Mrs. Claire Zawistowski will share their senior recital program. Both are voice students and both will be assisted by Cheryl Kite, piano.

Orsett, of Knightdale, is a student of Dr. Charles Moore. Songs he has listed are: "Ich trage meine Minne," Strauss; "Standchen" by Brahms; "Der Vogelfanger" from "Fetes Galantes," Hahn; two "Mandolines," one by Dupont, the other by Debussy, and four songs from Butterworth's "A Shropshire Lad."

Mrs. Zawistowki, of Jacksonville, is a student of Mrs. Glady White. Songs listed for her program are: "She Never Told Her Love" by Haydn; "Tu Mancavi a tormentarmi," Cesti; "Auf Flugeln des Gesanges," Mendelssohn; "Rastlose Liebe," Schubert; "Prison" by Faure; "Faites-lui mes aveux," Gounod, and "Two Folk Songs" by McCabe.

- Friday, 9 p.m. — Speros Katopodis of Chrlotte, a student of Dr. Paul Topper, violin. Katopodis has listed two compositions for his program — the Beethoven "Violin Sonata No. 7, Opus 30, No. 2 in C Minor" and the Corelli-Leonard "La Folia Variations." Katopolis' recital was originally scheduled for Feb. 2 but has been changed to Feb. 13.

Israeli Academy Entry Film Features Two Egyptian Heroes

By RUTH SINAI
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israel's entry for this year's best foreign picture Academy Award is a surrealistic, anti-war movie that has provoked the ire of political hawks.

"Avanti Popolo" ("Onward People") is set on the battlefield, as are many of the serious movies made in Israel, a nation that has fought five wars in its 38-year history. However, the heroes are not what you'd expect; they aren't even Israeli soldiers.

They are two parched and bewildered Egyptians, innocents in camouflage, who are cut off from their unit and stumble through the sands of Sinai as they seek the safety of the Suez Canal and home.

The two Egyptian conscripts, one an actor played by Israeli Arab Selim Daw and the other a farmer portrayed by Suhail Hadad, also an Israeli Arab, constitute a complete break from Israeli stereotypes of Arab soldiers: They are cultured, friendly and vulnerable.

"I wasn't preparing a political manifesto, but I hoped my movie would change Israelis' feelings toward another people," said director Rafi Bukai.

The movie, begun as a class project at Tel Aviv University, was produced on a shoestring budget of $60,000 and is Bukai's first full-length feature. It won first prize at the 1986 Locarno Film Festival.

With an eye for the absurd, Bukai has Daw, the Egyptian soldier-actor, beg for water and win over three Israeli soldiers by comparing himself to a wandering Jew and reciting the monologue of Shylock, the Jewish money lender in Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice."

"Has not a Jew hands, organs, dimensions, senses, affections, passions? ... If you prick us do we not bleed?" recites the Egyptian soldier, kneeling in the sand with his arms outstretched toward a can of water held by the Israelis.

The Israelis are reservists, indifferent to military procedure and determined not to bother with taking the Egyptians as prisoners. One hides in the music of his transistor radio, a second sadistically tries to scare away the Egyptians with gunfire and a third is curious about his adversaries and convinces his compatriots to accept them.

The Egyptians, one carrying a parasol and both drunk from bottles of Scotch whisky they find in the jeep of a dead United Nations observer, team up with the Israeli patrol and follow them through the desert.

In one memorable scene, the silhouetted figures of the five Israeli and Egyptian soldiers are shown dancing and breaking into song as the sun sets in the Sinai Desert. They sing "Avanti Popolo," a marching tune adopted first by one and then another of Italy's political movements, including the Socialists and Fascists.

"The song for me is a symbol of the many ideals for which people go off to wars," Bukai, 30, said in an interview. "It shows how an ideal can be emptied of meaning when it costs a human life."

Former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon condemned the movie and said it lacked any "motives of Jewish or Israeli pride."

Billy Taylor Trio To Perform In Greensboro's Carolina Theater

The Billy Taylor Trio will perform on Thursday at 8:15 p.m. in the Greensboro historic Carolina Theatre.

Dr. Taylor's appearance is sponsored by the Impresarios of the Carolina Theatre and is billed in conjunction with the United Arts Council's first annual Black American Festival.

As jazz educator and performer, Greenville native Billy Taylor has accomplished much during his career spanning more than four decades. His professional credits include the publishing of 12 books on the art of jazz piano, more than 300 songs, a doctoral degree in musicology from the University of Massachusetts, and over 30 recordings, which he refers to as "the best kept secrets in jazz."

In 1969, Taylor became the first black music director of a major television series on the "David Frost Show," and his original composition, "I Wish I Knew How It Would Feel To Be Free," became a popular theme in the early days of the civil rights movement.

Away from the touring circuit, Taylor stays busy as the featured music commentator on the CBS "Sunday Morning" news magazine program with Charles Kuralt. His popular syndicated series for National Public Radio, "Jazz Alive," won him the distinguished Peabody Award, while his public television specials on "Swingin' the Blues" and "Salute to the Duke (Ellington)" represented breakthroughs in music educational programming.

Tickets for the Billy Taylor Trio concert are on sale at the Carolina Theatre Box Office, Monday thru Friday, from noon until 5:30 p.m. Credit card reservations can be made by calling 275-2536. Tickets are $12.50 each, and all seating is reserved.

UNC-TV Weekly Calendar

CHAPEL HILL — Black history, including a half-hour film on the reunion of descendants of slaves at Somerset Place on Lake Phelps near Creswell, is one of the subjects to be seen on the UNC Center for Public Television during the coming week. There are also a number of nature and travel programs on the schedule.

A listing of highlights for the week is:

• Today — 7 p.m., Profiles of Nature. The Water Raiders. An account of North American birds that depend on marine life for food; 8 p.m., Nature — Between the Desert and the Deep Blue Sea. A Tunisian lake is an important wetland and a birdwatcher's paradise; 9 p.m., Masterpiece Theater. Lost Empires. Part 3 of 7; 11 p.m., Shoestring. The Mayfly Dance. A record request from a "dead" girl becomes a clue in the search for a 1960s pop star.

• Monday — 8 p.m. Planet Earth. Tales from Other Worlds. Seldom-seen space photographs uncover several mysteries of the solar system. Part 4 of 7; 10:30 p.m., Summer's End. An award-winning film of the experience of a tomboy in smalltown America in the 1940s.

• Tuesday — 8 p.m., Nova. Orangutans of the Rain Forest. Scientists live with and film the primate most similar to humans; 9 p.m. Frontline. Stopping Drugs. Part 1. The first of a two-part special examining the war on drugs, and the effectiveness of drug treatment; 10 p.m. Non-Fiction Television. The Shakers: Hands to Work, Hearts to God. Two hundred years of Shaker life is presented through recollections of three remaining Shakers and others, in a documentary on the decline of a religious group.

• Wednesday — 8 p.m., National Geographic Special. In the Shadow of Vesuvius. Scientists search the Naples area of southern Italy for the remains of the city of Herculaneum, destroyed by volcanic eruption in 79 A.D.; 9 p.m. Eyes on the Prize — America's Civil Rights Years 1954-1965. The 1963 march on Washington; 10 p.m., Passion and Memory. The personal lives and professional careers of black movie film stars of the past 60 years.

• Thursday — 7:30 p.m., A Need to Remember. A half-hour UNC production, hosted by reporter Chris Fitzsimon, on the August 1986 reunion of blacks who are descendants of slaves who lived at Somerset House, a rice plantation on the shores of Lake Phelps near Creswell in Washington County, eastern North Carolina; 8 p.m., The Lucy Jarvis Classics. The Forbidden City. A look at Peking's Forbidden City and the Imperial Palace.

• Friday — 9 p.m., Great Performances. Monsignor Quixote. Sir Alec Guinness and Leo McKern in Graham Greene's story about the friendship between a Catholic priest and a communist mayor.

• Saturday — 5 p.m., The Woodwright's Shop. Baby Cradle. Host Roy Underhill shows how to make a rocking cradle; 7 p.m. Wild America. Wild Texas. Adobe Brick Practical For Building Homes

By MERCER CROSS
National Geographic News Service

SKY CITY, N.M. -- Brick by adobe brick, Acoma Indian workmen are rebuilding 400-year-old apartments in their ancestral pueblo atop an isolated 367-foot mesa.

Since the work began in 1982, about 100 units have been completed, says supervisor Dennis Vallo. He hopes the restored two- and three-story buildings will induce more Acoma to return to Sky City.

All roots of the word Acoma denote "a place that always was," writes historian Alan Minge. The people claim that their mesa-top home about 60 miles west of Albuquerque is the oldest continuously inhabited city in the United States. Minge says they've been there for at least 1,000 years — possibly much longer — and archeologists agree that Acoma Pueblo has been occupied at least since A.D. 1200.

Learned From Spanish

The enduring technique of making adobe bricks in molds was introduced to the Acoma by Spanish conquistadores in the mid-1500s. Only 50 or so Acoma now live year-round in the pueblo. Their determination to preserve their ancient traditions means that they lack such amenities as electricity and running water.

Their adviser on the restoration is a white man from Albuquerque, Paul Graham McHenry Jr., an architect and builder who specializes in adobe construction and sees adobe as a solution to many of the Third World's increasingly urgent housing problems.

"The worldwide energy crisis, particularly in developing nations, must lead to the utilization of earth as a building material to meet ever-increasing needs," McHenry wrote in a paper presented in Ankara, Turkey, last summer. "We have no other choice."

McHenry, author of several books on adobe and other earthen buildings, notes that more than half of the world's people live in houses made of earth. He traces their early development to the Middle East, where he says such structures were built as early as 8000 B.C. in the Tigris-Euphrates Valley.

He is a member of the Advisory Council of the International Foundation for Earth Construction, a three-year-old organization committed to helping solve global housing problems. An estimated 800 million units are needed to house the world's poor.

Foundation president is Eric Carlson of Closter, N.J., former chief of housing for the United Nations. "Our main interest," he says, " is in how to transfer some of this relatively simple technology to countries where there are serious housing problems."

The U.N. General Assembly has designated 1987 the International Year of Shelter for the Homeless. The foundation's activities next year will be linked to that theme.

Examples Worldwide

The well-traveled Carlson lists widespread examples of earthen building: Grenoble, France, site of active training and research in such construction; China, where more than 30 million people dwell in caves; Colombia, where volcanic soil is proving to be an ideal material for pressed brick; and numerous other areas.

Carlson pegs much of his hope to a 55-year-old process, developed in California, to mass-produce "stabilized" bricks, waterproof and erosion-resistant, by mixing mud with an asphalt emulsion. Building with earth "has the potential for catching on," he says.

McHenry views it as "an uphill battle," partly because of adobe's "split image of either poverty or great affluence."

Traditionally, earthen buildings have provided shelter for the world's neediest people. In the southwestern United States, adobe provided an inexpensive answer to housing needs for generations. Only in the past few decades has it become, in Carlson's words, a "chic and aesthetic building material."

President Reagan lives in an old adobe house, stucco-faced and white-painted when he goes home to Rancho Cielo in California. U.S. Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor used to live in an adobe house in Phoenix.

McHenry and his sons design and build everything from expensive adobe homes to shopping centers in the Albuquerque area. Adobe dominates many of the richest suburbs in New Mexico, Arizona, and California.

But McHenry emphasizes its simplicity and universality. With very little experience and equipment, anyone can make his own bricks. If he has sufficient skill and diligence, he can build a comfortable home. Thick adobe walls ensure coolness in the summer and warmth in the winter. And they are almost soundproof.

Do-It-Yourself Adobe

In a homemade adobe house in a suburb of Santa Fe live a writer-photographer, David Noble, and his artist wife, Ruth Meria. They are members of a legion of erstwhile easterners who have fallen in love with the Southwest and moved there.

Unless they'd built it themselves, they couldn't have afforded the snug house. With a lot of trial and error along the way, they've been building it for 12 years. It began with a single room and gradually expanded to include a bedroom, a darkroom for David, a studio for Ruth, and an office, now under construction.

Last winter the couple's only heating expense was a cord and a half of wood for their living-room stove.

"It's very straightforward and simple," Noble, a Yale-educated former French teacher, says of the adobe-building process. "It's very creative and satisfying. It feels very much like home when you build it yourself."

BEING REBUILT — Holding an adobe brick, Dennis Vallo stands next to one of 400-year old apartments being rebuilt at Sky City, New Mexico, ancient pueblo home of the Acoma Indians. Although adobe is one of the oldest building materials, dating back 10,000 years, it still houses more than half of the world's people. (Photograph by Rick Cooke, National Geographic Society)

Zimbabwe's Bush Sculpture Popular In Major Museums

By ALLISTER SPARKS
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

TENGENENGE, Zimbabwe — On a still summer's day in this part of the African bush, a light "chink-chink" sound can be heard above the singing of the cicadas.

Around a bend in the gravel road, half a dozen men in dungarees are squatting beneath the low-limbed mahobohobo trees, chipping with chisels and small adzes at chunks of the region's hard black stone.

Around them are the products of their labor, rows of sculpture on wooden posts, looking like a crop of oversize mushrooms in the dappled shade: solemn owls and graceful, long-necked water birds, dramatically shaped African heads and large, strange spirit creatures, half human, half animal.

The figures are carved in smooth, sweeping shapes, some slightly abstracted. Although the subject matter is drawn from the primitive world of tribal mythology and the creatures of the bush, the effect is modern and sophisticated.

It is part of an artistic resurgence that began here and in several other parts of rural Zimbabwe 20 years ago and is now reaching a maturity that is winning international acclaim.

The works of these sculptors of the Shona tribe, most of them untrained and little educated, have been exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art in New York, the Rodin Museum in Paris and in Los Angeles, London and Sydney. Some have sold for more than $15,000.

There is evidence of an ancient artistic tradition among the Shona people. The ruins of a mysterious walled settlement called Great Zimbabwe, in the southeast of the country, has giant stone birds on its columns.

The exquisitely carved birds, which are the national emblem of Zimbabwe, are said to be the work of early Shona sculptors.

But the tradition was lost for at least a thousand years. "Now it is as though everything is coming back with a rush," said Tom Blomefield, a white farmer turned sculptor who founded the Tengenenge community. "Everyone seems to be gripped by the same force."

There is a touch of the divine accident about the way this revival began. Blomefield, a South African who had emigrated to what was then Rhodesia in the hope of becoming a big game hunter and finally settled down as a tobacco farmer, suddenly found himself facing ruin in the mid-'60s as United Nations sanctions against the white-minority regime of Ian Smith rendered his crop unsalable.

Blomefield, who knew nothing about art and had never carved anything before, decided to abandon farming and become a sculptor. "Some people say I must have been an artist in another life," he said in explanation.

He invited the African laborers on his Tengenenge tobacco farm, 100 miles north of Harare, to join him. The deal was that he would feed and clothe them and take a commission on any of their work that he could sell.

A laborer, Crispin Chakonyoka, had once done a little stone carving at an Anglican mission in the neighborhood. "I asked Crispin how one went about it," Blomefield recalled in an interview. "He said I should start at the head and work down. That was the only art lesson I ever had."

Ten days later Blomefield loaded his pick-up truck with the efforts of his rookie artists and drove to the National Gallery in Harare, then called Salisbury. He sold two works, including one of his own, and was encouraged by the curator to continue.

The word spread through Africa's ubiquitous bush telegraph, and would-be sculptors began arriving at Blomefield's tobacco farm — field hands, gardeners, factory workers, cooks and miners.

To each, Blomefield gave a set of simple chiseling tools, told him to choose a spot under the trees to work and not to copy the others.

Many failed but a remarkable number soon revealed an inherent talent and began to develop. By 1968, Blomefield had a village of 69 sculptors. As success bred enthusiasm, output surged. At one stage, Tengenenge was producing between 200 and 300 sculptures per month.

"The gallery told me to limit the production, not to swamp the market," Blomefield said. "But I couldn't stop them. It was a creative outpouring."

Some of today's best known sculptors were among those early arrivals. Two of them, Bernard Matemera and Henry Munyaradzi, are opposites in both personality and artistic style.

Matemera, a burly, hearty, former farm laborer, carves dramatically abstracted African heads and huge, grotesque mythological figures of great power. There are creatures with long, elephantine trunks and menacing reptiles with terrible clawed feet.

Munyaradzi, a gentle man with sensitive hands, lives in a peaceful world where spirits, ancestors, men, women and children, animals and birds are close to each other in the same land under a spirit of tender protection.

His work blends the simplicity of the primitive with stylized sophistication. Some of his figures have the delicacy and stillness of Chinese sculpture.

Both men, although unschooled, have gained international recognition. After successful one-man exhibitions in London and Los Angeles, Munyaradzi bought a farm just outside Harare and moved there to work. Conversation is difficult as he speaks little English, but his son Billy, 16, interprets.

"I look at the stone first and decide what it will make," he said. "This one, perhaps a woman or a child. And this one, look it's long and thin. I think it would make a bird, or a python."

Matemera sounds deceptively matter-of-fact. "I just look at the stone, and I can see the figure inside. Then all I have to do is cut it out," he said with a throaty chuckle.

In his plain-speaking peasant manner, he unconsciously echoes Michelangelo's spiritual ideal of the individual form's waiting to be released from the individual stone.

A third sculptor in the front rank is Nicholas Mukomberanwa, a former policeman who began working in one of the other rural art communities that sprang up after the founding of Tengenenge. His work has cubist planes and facets, like Picasso's.

Tengenenge is currently undergoing a revival. As the guerrilla war that finally brought Zimbabwe its independence intensified in the '70s, life became too dangerous on the farm, and Blomefield sold it.

However, he retained the rights to a 15-acre sector that has an abundant supply of good stone. Now that peace has returned to the countryside, Blomefield has come back to the site to reassemble a community of sculptors. He lives there in a van, a rotund, Pickwickian figure in a pith helmet.

Matemera and five others have rejoined him. The bush is alive once more with the "chink-chink" of their chisels, and their mushroom harvest is flourishing under the trees.

Eastern North Carolina Reflections At Their Best In Watery Winter Days

A WINTER REFLECTION — With the recent deluge of winter rains, numerous low areas have been transformed from damp ground into shallow ponds. One such small pond along a rural road near Everetts in Martin County, poetically reflects the skeleton of an old farm barn at the back edge of the temporary winter water. Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SUNDAY Feb. 8

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Today is by far your best time to get anything of a worthwhile and constructive nature attended to. Control your temper and avoid dangerous arguments.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Your newspaper can give you excellent ideas and suggestions, so read carefully. Avoid those who irk you.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You are inspired with good ideas for your advancement, but carry through with them wisely.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Analysis of your finest desires should be followed with a good plan for gaining them now.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Find the right way to please the one you love. Make important decisions Now.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): A good pal can be of real assistance in an enthusiastic way, but later others are too busy with their own affairs.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): The morning is fine for gaining the benefits you need. If possible, be more self-reliant now.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): An ideal time for garnering data you can use in the future. Don't go off on any tangets that could spoil things.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Do whatever will please your mate and avoid a tense situation later. Establish more harmony at home.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): An outside affair can bring a fine opportunity to advance, but don't make any changes in contracts.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can state your views to one who works by your side, but don't try to convince anyone else.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You can plan how to have a good time in the days ahead. Be happy with your mate tonight.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You can improve the situation at home in the morning, but don't make any changes. Drive carefully.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be anxious to learn and should be given as fine an education as possible. There will be so many changes and situations arising during this lifetime that a firm foundation is important, so give good ethical training. Don't force your progeny into your profession.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

FORECAST FOR MONDAY Feb. 9

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Daytime changes where home, family and property interests are concerned can be replaced by a calm and successful evening. Go along with any plans for revision.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Outside affairs and home matters could be conflicting if you do not plan your time wisely.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): You may find it difficult to make your plan of action work properly. Others won't accept your ideas now.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): New situations must developed before you can handle your practical affairs. Listen to advice from experts.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): A new contact tries to force you into a plan that will benefit only him, or her, so be careful.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Some problematical affair seems to be getting worse, but keep applying yourself and you solve things.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Think of the friends who can assist you in gaining aims, but contact them tonight for best results.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): You need to use more care in outside career affairs. Try not to force your public ideas now.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Avoid getting into new interests today. Be very discriminating and steer clear of fast talkers.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): You may find it difficult to keep any promises you have made, but persevere and all goes well.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Be more objective and avoid an overly emotional person who could upset you today.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Keep plugging away at your activities even though you have to contend with some tension.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): Your talents are not working very well today, but later you find romance and recreation very rewarding.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be able to solve problems that are very complicated, so be sure to give the finest education that you can. Slant schooling along the lines of troubleshooting. There can be a great deal of prosperity during this lifetime, provided ethical training is given.

"The Stars impel; they do not compel." What you make of your life is largely up to you!

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	1 ◇	Pass
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♠

To the uninitiated, it might seem that South has a choice of finesses in his attempt to make nine tricks at no trump. To the cognoscenti, the play is automatic.

We applaud North's decision to respond one diamond rather than two no trump with his balanced 13 points. His spade weakness made it likely that a no trump contract would play better from the other side of the table, where a possible spade tenace would be protected from a lead through at trick one. The correct contract was soon reached.

As a formality, declarer ducked the opening lead and won the continuation. He had six fast tricks, and a successful finesse in either minor suit would bring in the extra three. And in each suit the chance of finding the key card onside was exactly 50 percent. (Note that declarer cannot afford a losing finesse, because the defenders will then be able to reel off three more spade tricks.)

Declarer landed his contract in quick time. After winning the ace of spades, he cashed the ace-king of clubs. When the queen dropped, declarer took his nine tricks and gladly conceded the rest.

No, declarer had not caught a glimpse of West's holding; he was simply giving himself two chances instead of one. Rather than rely solely on guessing which finesse to take, he combined the chances of the diamond hook with finding either defender with a doubleton queen of clubs.

Had the club lady not appeared, declarer would have reverted to diamonds. Incidentally, the correct play in that suit is to run the nine first, not the queen. Then the queen can be led next and declarer will still be in hand, so preserving his entries.

President's Man Still Stirring Up Anger Over Farm Credit

By WARD SINCLAIR
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — His golden era as the Reagan administration's Designated Grinch on farm lending may be over, but Frank W. Naylor Jr. is still out there making people mad as hell.

Come to think of it, that's his job. But the style ... well, the style is something else.

Between 1981 and last spring, as the undersecretary of agriculture charged with overseeing the administration's farm-credit policy, Naylor found ways to make just about everyone angry. Congressmen. Farmers. Fellow Republicans.

An I-know-best demeanor that many called arrogance and his role as the man who had to say no to lending more Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) money to farmers who couldn't pay it back made Naylor one of the least popular GOP functionaries in town.

And Naylor seemed to revel in the role. Verbal sparring with congressional interrogators often devolved into outright anger, and Naylor, to demonstrate his widely recognized grasp of matters, made it worse by insisting on testifying without notes, written statements or aides at his elbow to whisper advice.

The last time he did it, just before the 99th Congress adjourned, Naylor was put on notice by Rep. Ed Jones, D-Tenn., chairman of the House Agriculture subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development, that his comportment violated rules that required written testimony, and that it would no longer be tolerated.

Naylor got the message. "I took pride, and maybe it was a false pride, in going up to the Hill without notes or staff to testify. That irritates the hell out of people, and I probably shouldn't have done it. It's not the way to make friends," he said.

Yet Naylor loved the combat and his lightning-rod role. Former secretary John R. Block, who would refuse to appear on television with Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, a fiery critic of administration farm policy, regularly used to send a willing Naylor out to confront the nemesis.

CREDIT VOICE — Frank W. Naylor Jr., as chairman of the Farm Credit Administration, is the "president's man" on the farm credit front. He took the job after serving as the U.S. Department of Agriculture official responsible last year for cutting off many of the loans usually made by the Farmers Home Administration. (L.A. Times-Washington Post Photo)

There are signs that Naylor may be mellowing a tad, but now he's doing his thing as chairman of the revamped and newly muscled Farm Credit Administration (FCA), the regulatory agency charged with overseeing the tangled affairs of the Farm Credit System, the farmer-owned lending institution that holds about one-third of the nation's farm debt.

And naturally, he's still making people angry. A housecleaning at the FCA that swept out as many identifiable Democrats as possible caused angst inside the agency. Stern lecturing and stern demands Naylor has placed on the Farm Credit System, forcing it to make unpopular changes in management procedures, have sent fear and loathing up and down the system.

The ill feeling that Naylor engendered ran so deep that for a while, when he was openly looking for a new job before he got the president's nod for the six-year term as head of the FCA, some Farm Credit System poohbahs had a standing joke: They would pool their funds, put Naylor on the payroll and then exile him to a post somewhere around Timbuktu to get him out of their hair.

Now the shoe is on the other foot. Naylor, who was a Farm Credit System official before he joined Agriculture Department in 1981, remains highly critical of the system for its laxity in managing its multibillion-dollar affairs.

"The system has got to deal with market discipline — for good management and good credit operations," he said. "But almost nobody is accountable."

Naylor played a role in developing legislation enacted last year that gave the FCA new regulatory powers while requiring major changes in the system's management practices as the price for federal bailout money if needed to help cover massive losses. Many agriculture experts think that a credit system request for federal aid is inevitable.

Naylor says, "The jury is still out on whether the system will seek federal guarantees — it's a little too early to say if federal help will be needed. But Congress and the administration will insist that basic changes be made before any help is extended."

In Naylor's view, the system must restructure more of the $8 billion in loans on which no interest is being paid; it must find ways to unload some of its $18 billion in high-cost debt; it must reduce operating overhead and restore waning confidence of member-borrowers in its ability to survive.

Much of Naylor's time since May has been spent beefing up the FCA staff to cope with its new regulatory responsibility. About 200 examiners have been added to the payroll and many have been assigned to the most troubled areas of the system to monitor books in a way they have never been monitored.

But in some precincts of Capitol Hill, Naylor's hard line on aid to farmers and his activities last year in helping shape the administration position on the Farm Credit System bill have left deep-seated rancor.

"He's one of the most talented people I've met, but it's a shame he brings so many problems on himself. Frank ought to send bills around for all the entertainment he gives us. But he doesn't have a management personality — wants to micromanage everything at the FCA like he did at Farmers Home," said one congressional source. "He's getting mixed reviews on the new job, but he's irritated an awful lot of system people.

"He was really cut out of the game in 1985, because we couldn't get cooperation from him. ... We did our dealing on the legislation with Treasury. His stock is way down in the administration partly because of this."

Devalued stock or not, Naylor ended up with the nomination to be chairman of the restructured FCA and point man in the government's efforts to get the Farm Credit System onto an even keel. A former close associate at the Agriculture Department, who is not an admirer of Naylor, attributed his rise to his political acumen. "He's a politician, no doubt, but he sort of goes with the wind. ... He would go up to Congress and talk tough, but when pressure came, he would go in that direction. He got in trouble two or three times with the Office of Management and Budget for this," the source said. "He didn't make many friends, but he knew the programs real well."

Naylor is aware of charges that he is human sandpaper. "I've always been identified as a partisan person, very hard on policy. I'm the president's man," he said. "My philosophy is that I will argue like hell for what I believe is the right course, but if the boss says I'm wrong, you'll never know that what I support publicly is not my own view."

Naylor, whose parents were school teachers, grew up in Kansas and attended the University of Kansas. His partisanship for Kansas athletics is denoted by Jayhawk totems in his office, and a splendid Jayhawk quilt (made by Naylor) on a wall of what is now known at the FCA as the Jayhawk Room.

After college, where he studied international relations, Naylor saw combat duty with the Navy in Vietnam. He was brought to Washington in 1969 by then-Secretary of Agriculture Clifford Hardin to work in department's crop-insurance program. After a year on loan to the Veterans Administration, Naylor went back to the department and rose to administrator of the FmHA under President Gerald R. Ford.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
Town of Winterville

A public hearing will be held by the Board of Adjustment of the Town of Winterville in the Municipal Building at 7:30 p.m. on February 24, 1987. The purpose of this meeting is to hear the views of the public on an application for a Conditional Use Permit. The permit would allow Wanda Pittman to operate a Home Occupation (a beauty salon) in her residence at Route 1, Winterville, an Agricultural-Residential Zoning District. For more information contact the Town Planner's Office in the Municipal Building.

U.S. POSTAL SERVICE

BECOME A POSTAL WORKER. TRAIN NOW FOR EXAMS TO OPEN IN EASTERN NORTH CAROLINA. WANT TO RELOCATE? WE CAN SHOW YOU THE SECRET OF GETTING ON THE HIRING LISTS OF MAJOR POST OFFICES NATIONWIDE IMMEDIATELY.
The Postal Services hires over 5,000 people a month with the average salary plus benefits being $27,500. There are no layoffs, no strikes, and no shut-downs. Men and women, regardless of age or experience are eligible to apply. These exams do not test general knowledge. Proper preparation is the key to getting hired, because people are hired for these positions based on their exam scores. The easy to learn techniques taught in this course were designed by Bill Harold. He is a former Postal Employee, the author of three postal exam guides, and has repeatedly scored 100% on Postal Tests.

3 HOUR WORKSHOP; SCORE 95-100%
A survey in January for Boston's new hiring list indicated that 39 of the first 40 hired had taken a workshop course. Of the 287 people who took our course last year in Northwest Indiana, 282 indicated they were offered positions with the Postal Service.

GUARANTEE: The time saving and accuracy-increasing methods taught in this course are so powerful that we will enter into a written agreement.
*You will score 95% or higher or your money will be refunded.
*If you do not receive a job applications/interview within 90 days of your score, your money will be refunded.

WORKSHOP TUITION is $30 and includes the guaranteed workshop, 3 workbooks covering all 3 major exams, interview hints, study guide with 25 complete take-home exams, follow-up consultation privileges with free information phone number, home study program kit, and the free Postal Alert Bulletin giving you postal exam dates nationwide...and more. You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal review.

Two years in the Army can bring you a whole lot. Like mental alertness. Physical toughness. Valuable skill training. And maybe most important of all: money for college.

Qualify and enlist for a skill under the GI Bill Plus the Army College Fund, and you can earn $17,000 in college money with a two-year enlistment.

You'll start college two years older, a lot stronger and wiser, and $17,000 richer. It's one college prep course you can build on for the rest of your life.

Call your local Army Recruiter and ask about our special Two-Year Enlistment.

Now that we are all becoming familiar with the new tax laws and understand how we can make them work for us, the decision to lease your new car or truck has been made a lot simpler. With no more I.T.C., and only partial interest deduction to the individual, vehicle leasing has never been more advantageous. And since maximum allowable depreciation for businesses or business use has now been stretched over five years, leasing becomes an even more attractive alternative to buying your new car or truck. Leasing allows you to deduct your true cost of depreciation annually (for business use).

So you see, leasing is really in your best interest. And at LeasePro, we like to think we're looking out for your best interest. Call the Leasing Professionals today and start putting the new tax laws to work for you in any type or model vehicle you need.

	corn base	14.9
	wheat base	4.4
	grain	3/10

This property will be sold as one property.

Sealed bids will be received by Farmers Home Administration, Pitt County, North Carolina, until Friday, February 13, 1987 at 3:00, and will be publicly opened at the Farmers Home Administration, Room 570, 310 New Bern Avenue, Raleigh, North Carolina, 27601, on February 19, 1987 at 1:00. A ten percent (10%) bid deposit in the form of a cashier's check, certified check, postal or bank money order or bank draft payable to FmHA will be required. The bid will be considered delivered when actually received at the FmHA County Office in a sealed envelop marked as follows:

"SEALED BID OFFER"

Date of bid opening: February 19, 1987
FmHA Advice Number: 38988
Property Address or Location: 6 miles East of Ayden on HWY 102 of Pitt County, North Carolina consisting of a 48.97 acre farm formerly owned by Wayland J. Hardee.

The Government reserved the right to reject any and all bids.

TERMS: Cash or 10 percent (10%) down and the balance payable in twenty-five (25) equal annual installments of principal plus interest on the unpaid balance at a rate of eleven and five-eights percent (11 5/8%) per annum or the prevailing rate at the time of bid acceptance by the Government.

For inspection of the property, information, and bid forms, contact Bert M. Hall, County Supervisor, Farmers Home Administration, 1411 South Evans Street, Greenville N.C. 27835. Telephone: (919) 752-2035.

PLEASE NOTE THAT:
1. Bids will be accepted only in writing on Form FmHA 1955-46, "Invitation, Bid and Acceptance.". Any conditions of the bid proposed by the bidder which are not specified on Form FmHA 1955-46 must be attached to Form FmHA 1955-46.
2. If a cash bid is received which is at least 97% of the highest bid requiring financing by FmHA, preference will be given to the bid offering cash.
3. Bidders whose bids contain the condition that FmHA finance the sale on terms will submit along with Form 1955-46, a current financial statement and pro forma statement indicating their repayment ability.
4. Purchasers using FmHA financing will be required to follow a soil conservation plan as prepared by the Pitt County Soil Conservation Service.

Farmers Home Administration properties are sold without regard to race, sex, creed, color or national origin.

On The House

By ANDY LANG

The rungs of a chair sometimes need attention after a period of time because they are the part of that particular piece of furniture that gets a lot of abuse.

People rest or wrap their feet around chair rungs intended to support chair legs or, occasionally, be used as decorative separators. Add that to the problems caused by dampness and dry heat and you have good reasons why chair rungs require periodic care. The key ingredient in the repair of a chair rung is glue. It cannot be just any glue and it cannot be a sloppy repair, since rungs are integral parts that add strength to construction and so help prevent injury to the people who use the chair.

Having determined, by talking to your dealer or reading the label on the container, whether your glue choice is suitable for joints that must undergo stress, you cannot forget that new glue seldom adheres well to old glue. You have to get off as much of the old glue as possible, not always an easy job. But if you work carefully, scraping and sanding the parts of the rung ends that can be reached, you usually can provide enough clean surface for the adhesion of the new glue.

When you run into a repair that is especially difficult because a rung cannot be removed from its socket, you can sometimes squeeze glue into the joint. Glue injectors and similar tools are invaluable in these cases, as well as in any others involving hard-to-reach areas. Depending on the type of furniture and the nature of the trouble, there are some cases where small screws, wood dowels, mending plates and various other furniture strengtheners may be needed. But these usually are used in conjunction with the glue. It is rare indeed when the repair can be made without the use of glue in some way.

Once the repair has been made and it is necessary to keep the joints tight until the glue sets, there are various ways you can clamp the rungs. One of the simplest is to wind a length of clothesline or similar cord around the legs, looping the rope from leg to leg and then holding everything tight with a twist stick. Place a large screwdriver or dowel or anything appropriate between the loops of the line, but be very sure it is braced in some way so it doesn't spin loose when you let go of it. If you get one of the professional straps that are used for clamps in this fashion, it usually comes with an appropriate gadget to hold the strap in place. You will find a number of such straps available. All serve the purpose, which is merely to hold the joints fairly tight until the glue sets. How long that is depends on the kind of glue you use, so be sure to read the instructions to determine the setting time.

If you are able to get a rung loose, you sometimes will find it has become wobbly in its socket because the end no longer is as big as it was or the hole itself has become enlarged. The best way to handle this is to make a small wooden wedge, saw a slit in the end of the rung and insert the wedge in it. This will make the joint tight automatically. In fact, occasionally, it will make it too tight. In which case, trim the wedge gradually until you get a secure fit.

By the way, when placing the rope clamp around the legs of the chair, use pads of some kind to prevent the rope from damaging the legs.

Should the chair being repaired be one that is used outdoors in all kinds of weather, be sure to use a waterproof glue. One of the best of this type is resorcinol, which comes in two parts and must be mixed according to the directions.

(Do-it-yourselfers will find much helpful information on a variety of subjects in Andy Lang's handbook, "Practical Home Repairs," which can be obtained by sending $2 to this newspaper at Box 5, Teaneck, NJ 07666.)

Lots Of Room In Ranch Design

This delightful ranch design utilizes space with great efficiency. Enter a tiled foyer and immediately be greeted with an excellent floor plan designed for immense traffic. From the foyer the great room lies off to the right. The great room has sloping open-beamed ceilings, and a wood-burning fireplace. A den/bedroom lies to the left of the foyer. Connected next to the great room are the dining room and the kitchen. Sliding glass doors lead from the dining room out to a large wooden deck. Other features in this plan include a laundry room and two other bedrooms that have their own full baths. A two-car garage is offered in this design.

Here's The Answer

By ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Q. — I have some property in the country and intend to build on it within a year. Meanwhile, I intend to build a septic tank. Can you give me some information about this?

A. — This entire column is not large enough to hold all the data you will need. The first thing you should do is to go to your local town hall and find out whether you are allowed to build it yourself and, if so, what specifications must be met. Authorities will be able to tell you, assuming you are permitted to do it, where to obtain books and other literature on the construction of such tanks. Most local codes specify the work must be done professionally.

Q. — I bought a second-hand chain saw and now find the starter rope breaks almost every time I use it. What causes this?

A. — If the engine is balky because of some trouble inside it, there may be too much strain on the rope, resulting in the frequent breakage. But there can be a number of other reasons. The rope could be too short or you may be not be pulling it properly. Have a chain store dealer look into it once you are sure it not a faulty engine.

Q. — We have an oak floor I intend to refinish soon and then use penetrating sealer as the finish coat. I want to keep the wood the same color it is. Can this be done?

A. — Not very likely. All finishing materials, including but not exclusively penetrating sealers, darken the wood to some extent. Be sure that, after each coat, the excess sealer is wiped off.

Q. — Our coffee table has a stain on it that we did not see until recently, a matter of months since it undoubtedly was stained. It probably was alcohol. We do not want to touch it for fear of making it worse. Is there anything we can do to get it out at this late stage?

A. — Unfortunately, alcohol stains must be removed quickly. You can try rubbing it with the ashes from a cigar or with linseed oil. But, because of the long delay, the only thing that probably will work is to rub the area with powdered pumice and a few drops of a vegetable oil. If this takes some of it out but not all, follow with the same treatment, this time using powdered rottenstone instead of powedered pumice. No matter which method gets out the stain, the chances are that some kind of refinishing may be in order.

(The techniques of using varnish, shellac, lacquer, stain, remover, bleach, etc., are detailed in Andy Lang's booklet, "Wood Finishing in the Home," which can be obtained by sending 50 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Know-How, P. O. Box 477, Huntington, NY 11743. Questions of general interest will be answered in the column.)

Q Was Martin Luther King's marriage to Coretta as perfect as I've read, or was it really tough going? How many children did they have, and what is each doing?—Terry Porter, Gary, Ind.

A The marriage of Martin Luther King Jr. and Coretta Scott King was not the idyllic coupling some writers have described. It endured from 1953 to 1968, many of those years characterized by almost unbearable stress and strain. The Kings had four children: Yolanda, 31, a producer, lecturer, director and artist; Martin Luther King III, 29, elected last year to a seat on the Fulton County Commission in Atlanta; Dexter, 26, a consultant in Atlanta in the music and real-estate fields; and Bernice, 23, candidate for a law degree and master's degree in theology at Emory University, Atlanta.

Q Is it true, as printed in "The Chief," by Lance Morrow in "Time" magazine, that President Kennedy had to have daily sex relations or he would get a bad headache?—C.H., Stanford, Calif.

A Morrow writes in his book: "Once, John Kennedy told Harold Macmillan that he would get a headache if he did not have sex with a woman at least once a day." Morrow's best memory holds that the late British prime minister picked up that information when he and Kennedy conferred in Bermuda in December 1961. Only Kennedy, of course, knew the truth of his sexual needs.

Q How did the wife of the late President Lyndon Johnson come to be known as Lady Bird?—Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Bensinger, Grantville, Pa.

L.B. Johnson Library

Lady Bird as toddler

A When the former Claudia Alta Taylor was a tot in Karnack, Tex., a nurse said of her, "She's as pretty as a ladybird." From then on, she was called Lady Bird—a nickname Mrs. Johnson, 74, has retained all through her eventful life.

Q Does Henry Kissinger own Macy's, the department-store chain? That's what I've been told by a friend who is in the retail business.—Nora G., Birmingham, Mich.

A Kissinger does not own R.H. Macy & Co. According to a 10K report filed with the Securities and Exchange Commission, however, he does own 2524 preferred shares (or 6.03%) of the Macy Acquiring Corp., which last July purchased R.H. Macy in a leveraged buyout. Kissinger also has a seat on the corporation's board of directors.

Q Diane Sawyer of "60 Minutes" and Richard Holbrooke, who was an assistant secretary for East Asian and Pacific affairs under President Carter—weren't they quietly married in Elkton, Md., some weeks ago?—Heather R., McLean, Va.

A At this writing, Sawyer of CBS and Holbrooke, who works for the Shearson Lehman brokerage firm in New York, are not married.

Q It has been said and written of the late Marilyn Monroe that she was promiscuous, not by nature, but because that was the only way she could survive in her early days in the Hollywood jungle. It also has been said that she engaged in at least one lesbian affair with a writer, a press agent or a drama coach. Are these stories based on fact or fiction?—Jan W., Ann Arbor, Mich.

A Marilyn Monroe, according to several PARADE photographers and at least one reporter who knew her well, used her sexuality to get ahead in Hollywood because she realized early in the game that it was her sole negotiable asset. Few men, in or out of the film industry, were interested in her mind, but she was frequently interested in theirs. She was basically heterosexual but hinted of one lesbian dalliance with a press agent.

Sean and Madonna as newlyweds: Still in love, she says

Q Is it true that rock star Madonna plans quietly to divorce actor Sean Penn in the weeks to come and devote most of her time to her film career?—Liz Gillespie, Petersburg, Va.

A According to disk jockey Simon Bates of the British Broadcasting Corp., who interviewed her not too long ago, Madonna is a good Catholic girl who—despite numerous quarrels with her temperamental husband—maintains, "I'm still in love with Sean, and there's no question of my divorcing him . . . I plan to go easy on the music this year and concentrate on three films."

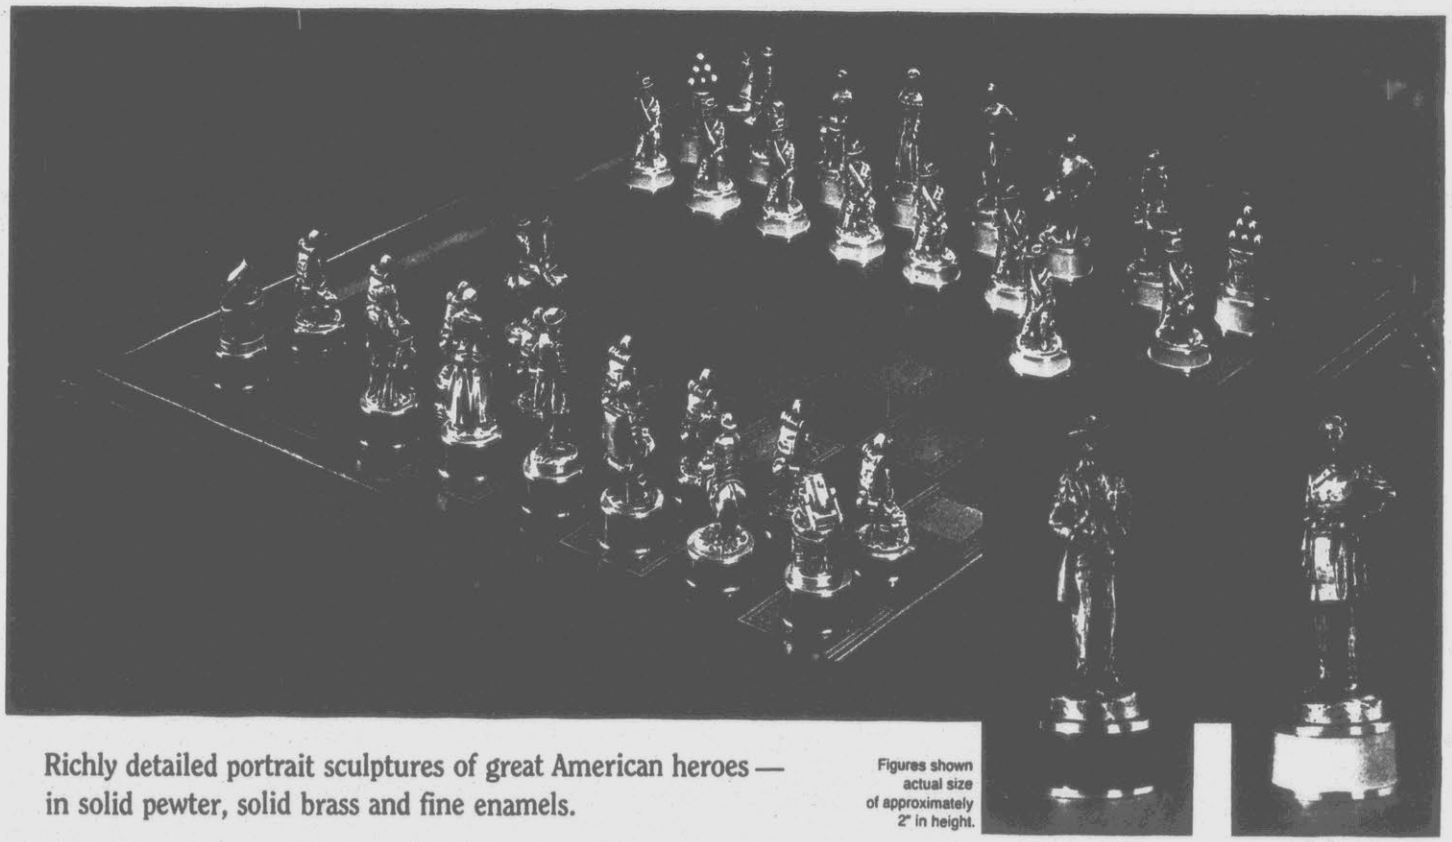
THE NATIONAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY

CIVIL WAR CHESS SET



Richly detailed portrait sculptures of great American heroes — in solid pewter, solid brass and fine enamels.

An heirloom chess set to be enjoyed for generations. Created by the world-famous craftsmen of The Franklin Mint.

Figures shown actual size of approximately 2" in height.

General in Chief Ulysses S. Grant

Available only by direct subscription.

Issue Price: $17.50 per sculptured chess piece.

Please enter your subscription by March 10, 1987.

The National Historical Society Civil War Chess Set is a dramatic and fascinating tribute to the heroes of both North and South. For the playing pieces will include richly-detailed three-dimensional portrait sculptures of the great Generals on both sides, as well as enlisted men.

Each figure will be captured for the ages in solid pewter, then set atop a solid brass pedestal base embellished with a circular band of richly colored enamel—blue for the soldiers of the Union, gray for those of the Confederacy. And every nuance of facial expression, uniform and weaponry—right down to the buttons, braiding, sabers and carbines—will be depicted with uncompromising accuracy.

The result is a work that will bring lasting pleasure to chess enthusiasts, history buffs, collectors of military miniatures—anyone who appreciates our nation's heritage. An imported work of heirloom quality, certain to evoke admiration from all who see it when the set is displayed in your living room, den or office.

Crafted for the Society by The Franklin Mint, each figure is scaled to suit the role assigned to it in the game of chess. The chessmen will be issued at the attractive price of $17.50 each. The handsome pewter-finished playing board, the fitted protective case, a Certificate of Authenticity and specially written reference materials will be provided at no additional charge.

As a subscriber, you will receive two sculptured pieces every other month. You will, however, be billed for only one chessman at a time—a total of just $17.50 per month. In addition, you will be given the option to complete your set even earlier—but will be under no obligation to do so.

No advance payment is required. But please note that the accompanying application is dated and should be mailed by March 10, 1987.

A seasoned reporter visits both sides of "The Peace Line" in Ulster

Can The War In Northern

Turnley/Black Star

Catholic youths in Londonderry look on at Protestant parade last August as British soldier stands guard. Angry over Anglo-Irish accord, marchers rioted, attacked police.

In late 1985, a new agreement between the governments in Dublin and London was heralded as a significant step toward peace in war-shattered Northern Ireland. We asked the respected writer Peter Maas to assess the situation there and the impact of the agreement, more than a year after its signing.

THE WALL CURVES THROUGH western Belfast, capital of Northern Ireland, dividing the Falls area, the heart of the city's Roman Catholic population, from the sprawling, aggressively Protestant Shankill district. Except for Berlin, there is nothing like it today, even in Beirut.

On a building in the Shankill, there is a huge mural showing King William III—the English monarch who crushed an Irish rebellion at the Battle of the Boyne nearly 300 years ago—mounted on a prancing white charger. Not far off is another colorful mural depicting a King James Bible and, underneath, the words "One Faith" and "One Crown."

A stone's throw away, on the opposite side of the wall in the Falls, you see a different mural, memorializing a more recent event, the 1981 death of the imprisoned hunger-striker Bobby Sands. Stark letters in white paint proclaim: "Blessed are those who hunger for Justice."

The wall abruptly cuts off municipal thoroughfares, slices across backyards and runs past churches and factories. Made of brick, cinder block and corrugated steel, it is as much as 20 feet high. It is topped by coils of razored wire, TV monitors and mesh-covered lights. Its ugly presence symbolizes perfectly the plight of Northern Ireland, or Ulster, and the bitter ironies that swirl around it. In a land where there is no peace, the wall is called "The Peace Line."

I stood gazing at it one night not long ago. I was with a man who had served time for suspected membership in the Irish Republican Army (IRA), in the same prison on the outskirts of Belfast where Bobby Sands died.

"That wall," my companion suddenly said, to my surprise, "is an indictment of the people who live on both sides of it. We have allowed a foreign army to occupy us." He had a special concern: His son, 13 years old, couldn't wait to join Ireland's Warriors, the IRA's junior wing.

A few minutes later, driving down the Falls Road, I saw the occupation army he was talking about in action. A group of young people had been lined up against a fence and was being frisked by British paratroopers. Across the way stood more paratroopers, automatic weapons at the ready. They were backed up by two Saracens, armored attack vehicles, each with a heavy machine gun manned from an open hatch.

These British patrols regularly move along Belfast streets night and day, almost always in the Catholic areas. It is a stunningly bizarre sight, like watching two different movies being shot on the same set. The troops—in full battle gear, crouching, whirling and aiming their rifles—seem to be picking their way through some hostile jungle, while all around them ordinary citizens, including women wheeling prams, go about their daily business.

The British army has been in force in Northern Ireland for nearly 18 years—the latest, longest and arguably the most violent chapter in a lethal struggle that is centuries old (see box, page 6). The troops were sent there in August 1969 to maintain order after Catholic civil rights marchers—inspired by similar marches in the Southern United States—protested systematic discrimination in housing, education, job opportunities and voting rights and were savagely attacked by Protestant "loyalist" mobs while local police did nothing.

A Belfast Catholic, whose name I can't mention because of the threat of retribution against him, recalled what those days were like. "First, we were ordered out," he told me, "and they firebombed our house. The RUCs [Royal Ulster Constabulary] just laughed. The next morning, they said we could come back and pick up what was left. Then, after we loaded up everything we could salvage in a lorry, they threw a petrol bomb in that too."

He told me he was 16 when the British soldiers came. He remembered how he, along with other neighborhood kids, carried tea and sweets to them. But after it became apparent that not much was being done to redress the grievances that had triggered their arrival in the first place, he joined the IRA—and learned to kill. Since that time, there have been nearly 2600 bloody deaths in a population of only 1.5 million. A comparable figure for the United States would number close to 400,000, rivaling the mortality rate of the U.S. Civil War. One out of every 20 households in Northern Ireland has experienced a death or injury from shootings and bombings.

All the streets leading into downtown Belfast's main shopping and commercial center remain barricaded. To get through in a car, everyone needs a special pass. Fortified British army and police barracks dot the city and countryside. Highway roadblocks are a way of life. Helicopters constantly hover overhead. At Crossmaglen, a community not far from the border of the Irish Republic, hostility against the British presence has made rural roads so unsafe that helicopters are even required to bring in supplies and carry out the garbage of the army garrison positioned there.

Unemployment in Northern Ireland is about 19 percent overall—among the highest in Western Europe. In Catholic areas, though, it ranges from 40 percent to as much as 70 percent. This discrepancy has a simple explanation, according to a shipyard worker in a militant Protestant loyalist, or "unionist," waterfront district in Belfast, where Union Jacks wave and sidewalk curbs are painted red, white and blue as a warning to Catholics to keep out. "They breed like rabbits," the worker said. "They don't know the meaning of cleanliness. Many of them can hardly read or write. We'll not be dragged down to their level."

The man was an avid follower of the fundamentalist minister Ian Paisley, who is also a member of the British Parliament and for years the dominant voice in Ulster's loyalist politics. Paisley spews religious hatred right out of the Reformation. The Pope is "the anti-Christ!" he thunders. "Victory for our enemies would put us under the jackboot of priestly tyranny. To submit to Rome and Dublin would be worse than death!"

Mural in the Falls section of Belfast memorializes the death of Bobby Sands.

One afternoon, after changing cars twice, I was passed on to still another escort on foot, led along a circuitous route near The Peace Line, then hustled down an alley and into the rear of a row house, an IRA "safe house." In the parlor, a pretty, dark-haired young woman sat watching TV with her daughter, who looked about 5. An infant crawled on the floor.

Has a healing process begun with the new Anglo-Irish agreement? Some Irish think so.

In an upstairs bedroom, an active-service volunteer in the IRA awaited me. The woman brought up tea and cookies. When she left, he told me the details of the headline-making death the week before of a Protestant paramilitary leader named John Bingham, whose gang had murdered eight people, one a Protestant woman who was slain in her bed simply for having married a Catholic.

"The dogs on the street knew what Bingham had done," the volunteer said. Then he calmly described how, over a period of a month, the IRA had tracked Bingham from a rural hideout back to his residence in a north Belfast Protestant redoubt; how a scout car equipped with a radio scanner was first sent in to monitor police traffic; how three armed men followed in a second car and, around midnight, sledgehammered their way through Bingham's front door. While one stood guard, the other two raced to the second floor, shot off the lock of a steel security door, dragged Bingham from under a bed and "executed" him "in the name of the Irish people." It had all happened in less than 10 minutes, the IRA man said. "It sent a message to our enemies that we can go in anywhere," he added. The next day, of course, there was a retaliatory murder.

"We have to keep fighting till the Brits go," he told me. But wouldn't the withdrawal of British troops invite the same sort of Protestant mob attacks that had occurred in 1969? "No," he insisted. "Then we didn't have two pistols among us. Now we have arms stashed all over, and the 'Prods' know it. I don't think there will be the bloodbath that is predicted. We're going to have to work this out ourselves. As long as the Brits stay, Paisley and his crowd believe they'll always bail them out at the last minute."

As I was departing, I asked the young mistress of the house if she wasn't afraid of lending her home to the IRA. "I am, yes," she replied, "but there's nothing to do. They're the only ones who care for us. The police don't do anything." She was 28, she told me, and in the early 1980s had participated in the massive women's peace crusade that demanded an end to violence in Northern Ireland (PARADE, Sept. 25, 1983). "Nobody paid us any mind," she said.

Her distrust of the police is almost universally shared by the Catholics, who make up a third of Ulster's population. You understand this immediately upon entering Belfast's main police headquarters, where you see a tattered Union Jack enshrined to lament the exact moment when the British officially withdrew from

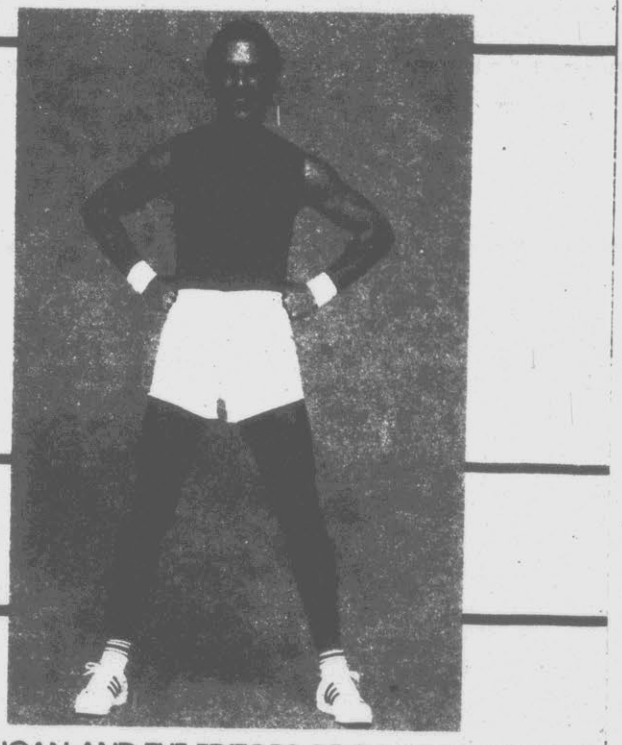
FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH

FOR MEN OVER 40



BY A. DUGAN AND THE EDITORS OF CONSUMER GUIDE®

WHAT DIET ALONE WON'T DO, AND SIT-UPS WON'T DO— THIS BOOK CAN DO FOR MEN OVER 40 . . . OR YOUR MONEY BACK!

It's never too late to flatten your stomach and narrow your waistline. But as you have probably noticed, diets alone are not enough.

That is especially true as you get older. Even if you keep your weight down and get some exercise, your stomach may bulge and sag because your abdominal muscles are not properly toned.

Sit-ups alone work on only some of these muscles. But unless you exercise all four major abdominal muscles—your stomach may be hard, but it won't be flat.

This new book shows you how to flatten your stomach by exercising all—and not just some—of your stomach muscles. And it is specially designed to meet the needs of men over 40. Strenuous exercises are avoided . . . so you need not be in shape to get started.* After you get going, you progress at your own speed to intermediate and advanced programs. And each level includes exercises to strengthen your back and give your cardiovascular system vital aerobic conditioning.

Give this NEW QUICK, EASY WAY TO FLATTEN YOUR STOMACH FOR MEN OVER 40 a try. It has easy-to-follow directions. All exercises are fully illustrated in color. Plus it's spiral bound to stay open and lie flat while you exercise. See if you don't feel more fit, energetic and self-confident in just a few short weeks. You must get the results you want or we'll give you your money back. So don't wait any longer. Put your order in the mail today!

*We recommend you check with your doctor before starting this or any other exercise program.

How The 'Troubles' Came To Northern Ireland

THE CURRENT STRIFE BETWEEN PROTESTANTS AND CATHOLICS in Northern Ireland is more than a religious conflict. It is ethnic as well and is laced with unique political, economic and cultural factors.

When Protestant Britain completed its conquest of Catholic Ireland in the 17th century, London sponsored the arrival of Scottish Presbyterians, who settled mainly in the ancient northern Irish province of Ulster.

But rents paid to absentee English landlords took a quarter of Ireland's total income, and trade laws were enacted by the English Parliament designed to thwart industrial growth in Ireland and keep it a subservient agricultural state.

Toward the end of the 18th century—about the time of the American Revolution—a man named Wolfe Tone, called the father of modern Irish independence, led a movement bent on breaking Britain's colonial exploitation of the island. Ironically, Tone was himself of Scottish descent. And in the late 19th century, one of the legendary heroes of the continuing Irish republican movement, Charles Stewart Parnell, was both Anglican and English.

After six years of bloody violence following the famous Easter Sunday uprising in Dublin in 1916—put down by the British—Ireland was finally partitioned in 1922, creating the Irish Free State (now called the Republic of Ireland) in the south and Northern Ireland (popularly known as Ulster) in the north. By careful gerrymandering, London insured itself a 2-1 majority of those loyal to the British crown, who also happened to be Protestant.

The Ulster loyalists ruled the Catholic minority with an iron hand, leading to the bloody "troubles" of our own time, which date fom 1969. The key events:

1969. Inspired by civil rights efforts in the U.S., Catholics in Northern Ireland take to the streets. Two events trigger the marches: the decision to create a new university in the overwhelmingly Protestant east Ulster rather than to expand an existing facility in the Catholic city of Londonderry, and the arbitrary bypassing of 10 Catholic families in favor of a Protestant for public housing.

Religion becomes a paramount issue, fanned by the anti-Catholic rhetoric of the Rev. Ian Paisley. Attacks on the marchers culminate in a loyalist mob pillaging and burning a Catholic neighborhood in Belfast. British troops are sent into Londonderry, Belfast and eventually other areas of Northern Ireland. The Irish Republican Army (IRA), outlawed ever since it refused to accept the partition of Ireland in 1922, is reorganized to better protect Catholics.

1972. The British army becomes a hated foe of Catholics after paratroopers kill 13 unarmed civilians in Londonderry during an "illegal" march on Bloody Sunday, Jan. 30, 1972. Britain suspends home rule in Northern Ireland and assumes direct control.

1973. London suspends normal civil liberties in Ulster. Anyone suspected of IRA activity is given a one-judge, no-jury trial. Britain proposes a power-sharing plan between Irish Protestants and Catholics.

1974. Protestant electrical workers, with the Reverend Paisley again in the lead, paralyze Ulster, and the British abandon the power-sharing idea.

1976. Two Northern Irish women—Mairead Corrigan and Betty Williams—sickened by the violence, organize Protestant and Catholic women in a crusade for peace. For their efforts, they receive the Nobel Peace Prize, but in Ulster nobody in power listens, and the crusade falters.

1979. The violence escalates as IRA bombers assassinate Lord Louis Mountbatten, a member of the British royal family.

1981. IRA hunger-striker Bobby Sands dies in prison. Nine other hunger-strikers also will die. The death of Sands reenergizes the Irish republican movement in Ulster. Whereas IRA activity had been sporadic, now, for the first time in this century, it jumps in a continuous flow from one generation to the next. Those who were teenagers in 1969 begin to assume command roles.

1984. A bomb assassination attempt fails against British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and members of her Cabinet.

1985. The governments in London and Dublin sign a new power-sharing agreement. This time, Britain insists that it will not back away.

Reactions vary. In Ulster, moderate loyalists seeking some accommodation are afraid to speak as the Reverend Paisley cries betrayal: For him, this agreement is the first step in Britain's withdrawal from Ulster. On the other hand, Sinn Fein ("Ourselves Alone")—the political wing of the IRA, committed to a united and independent Ireland—insists the Anglo-Irish accord is just a way for Britain to prolong its presence in Ireland.

But the largest Catholic political organization, the Social Democrat and Labor Party, supports the agreement. Its leader, John Hume, calls it a means to an end, not the end itself—"a healing process that is going to take a long time."

1986. On Nov. 15, the first anniversary of the signing of the power-sharing agreement, the Reverend Paisley addresses a huge Protestant rally in downtown Belfast. "We are prepared to die!" he shouts. Behind him, a banner declares: "Ulster Still Says No." But threats of a general strike do not materialize.

the Irish republic. The inscription underneath the flag reads: "This Union Flag flew over the [Dublin] Barracks at 3:15 p.m., 1 March 1922, when the Barracks was handed over to the Provisional Government of the Irish Free State."

This year may prove decisive in the modern Irish "troubles," leading either to a reconciliation of the warring factions or to an escalation of violence beyond anything that we have yet witnessed. The reason for this is the agreement signed in late 1985 by leaders in both London and Dublin, known as the Anglo-Irish accord. In it, the Republic of Ireland recognizes the right of self-determination by majority vote in Northern Ireland, while London formally grants Dublin the role of a consultant in affairs affecting Northern Ireland's Catholic minority.

So far, the agreement, a little more than a year old, has yet to produce any visible reforms—especially sought in the judicial and police systems. Ironically, though, because of it, the IRA no longer exclusively bears the "terrorist" tag. Last summer, Protestant paramilitary groups went on a murderous rampage, attacking even the police for preventing their traditional marches into Catholic districts to celebrate England's victory over the rebel Irish at the Battle of the Boyne so many years ago.

The tension in Northern Ireland, meanwhile, remains palpable. I was in a parked car in Belfast writing some notes when a British patrol moved past. The next thing I knew, I was staring at the wrong end of an automatic rifle. What was I doing? Had I marked down the time the patrol had appeared on the street? Only when my credentials had been checked out by radio did the patrol move off. "The boys are a wee bit jumpy," the officer in charge explained.

I recalled a similar encounter some 25 years before—with a deputy sheriff on a road near Philadelphia, Miss., when I was a reporter covering the murders of three young civil rights activists. And as I drove from Belfast to Londonderry and then to other places named Portadown and Newry, I remembered Albany in Georgia and Selma and Montgomery in Alabama.

I never thought I'd be seeing all of that again—not, at least, in what we call the civilized world. But I was.

BEAUTY REPORT

HAIR CARE

WHY YOUR FAVORITE SHAMPOO WILL WORK BETTER IF YOU STOP USING IT FOR 14 DAYS.

It's exasperating. The very shampoo that has left your hair so silky and clean, the shampoo you depend on—subtly, then noticeably stops working. That fresh softness you prize so much in clean hair is gone. Your hair looks limp... dull... blah.

Why why why? "Shampoo build-up" is the reason. Each washing, even by fine shampoos, leaves a shampoo "residue." Sadly, certain cleansing mixtures, and conditioning agents, if they are effective, leave a telltale residue that has been measured precisely in laboratory studies.

Recent tests on 15 quality shampoos show that residues keep accumulating each time you shampoo. It's a fact of hair life!

Getting rid of the build-up. Make no mistake. You must, temporarily, switch to a shampoo with super rinsability. One that has gently proven its power to revitalize the hair. And don't put it off. Shampoo build-up is more than unattractive: it can impair the soft feel of your hair... its manageability ... and it can eventually harm your hair.

"A single wash reduces residue by 70% to 90%. Test results indicate a single wash with Neutrogena® Shampoo was adequate to remove in excess of 90% of the residue. Even with conditioners, which are far more substantive to the hair, a single wash with Neutrogena removes 70% of the residue."*

*Excerpt from Neutrogena Skin Care Institute Report.

Which shampoo rinses the best? According to laboratory tests of 15 quality shampoos, Neutrogena Shampoo ranked No. 1, and "demonstrated consistently superior rinsability with almost no build-up itself."

The clincher: in addition to instantly freeing your hair from most build-up in a single washing, Neutrogena leaves a scant residue, a negligible trace compared to all the other shampoos tested.

If you feel you want to revitalize your hair, try Neutrogena Shampoo for 14 days. Think of it as a freshening "vacation"... and afterwards, your hair will respond again happily to your favorite shampoo. If you use your Neutrogena as often as needed, your favorite shampoo will keep on being your favorite!

Neutrogena Shampoo is sold with a satisfaction-or-your-money-back guarantee. It is available at better drug stores and cosmetic counters. Look for it—in the white box with the brown band.

©1985 Neutrogena Corp.

ATTENTION: MOUSSE/GEL USERS: Daily use of mousses and gels gradually builds up residue. Hair resists styling, loses shine. Most shampoos just can't cope. But just completed tests show high-rinsability Neutrogena Shampoo is able to remove an average 90% of mousse or gel residue in 1 washing. (Residue Removal Study, April, 1985. Neutrogena Laboratories.)

Unmarried Couples

It's nothing to brag about, but for the first time in American history, more than 2 million couples—2.2 million, to be exact—are living together without benefit of marriage. This fact undoubtedly is reflective of a more permissive lifestyle.

Cossack Clothes For Princess Diana

Diana, Princess of Wales, has become the style-setter in Britain for both young and not-so-young women. Several weeks ago, the wife of the heir to the throne flew into chilly Kent to visit the Archbishop of Canterbury, who was recovering from a fall in which he broke two ribs. For the occasion, Diana wore a blue Cossack greatcoat with matching hat and muff, and patent-leather Cossack-style boots. Estimated minimum cost of her outfit: $750.

A Little-Known Story

Senpo Sugihara in later years and with family in Lithuania, 1940, when he foiled Nazis

Many Americans do not regard the Japanese as a particularly kind, compassionate and tender people. The brutality of the Japanese military in World War II is largely responsible for this negative view. But, in truth, there were Japanese in that conflict who exhibited humanitarianism of the highest order. One was Senpo Sugihara, a diplomat who saved thousands of Jews in Europe.

In the summer of 1940, Sugihara was running a small Japanese consulate in Kovno, Lithuania. Each day, hundreds of Jews besieged the consulate, begging for visas that would permit them—with passports they'd already acquired—to flee east to Siberia. Sugihara wired his foreign office in Tokyo of the situation. He explained that if the refugees were not granted visas, the advancing Germans would surely capture and kill them. From Tokyo, Sugihara received orders to issue no visas and to close the consulate.

Certain his career as a diplomat would be finished if he violated orders, Sugihara nevertheless issued more than 5000 transit visas before taking off for Berlin. Those visas permitted thousands of Jews, mostly Poles, to escape the Nazi blitzkrieg and make their way by rail to the Far East. There, the Japanese settled many of them in Kobe and later moved some to Shanghai, where they survived the war.

As for Sugihara, he and his wife, Yukiko, spent the rest of the war working in Japanese consulates in Berlin and Bucharest. At war's end, the Japanese made it known that they had no place for Sugihara in their diplomatic service. He managed eventually, however, to obtain a job managing a U.S. Army post exchange near Tokyo.

In 1968, one of the Jews he'd saved spotted Sugihara in Tokyo and sent word to the Israeli government. Sugihara was invited to Jerusalem, where his son, Nobuki, was awarded a scholarship to the Hebrew University. Two years ago, Sugihara was invited back to Jerusalem for further honors. Then 85 and too weak to travel, he was represented by his wife.

The Japanese have produced an hour-long TV film on Senpo Sugihara's humanitarian accomplishments, while the Israelis have planted a grove of trees in memory of his kindness. And before he died last July, Sugihara became the first Japanese to be recognized as a "Righteous Gentile" by the executives of the Holocaust memorial in Jerusalem.

To Those I Love

In response to the many reader requests for the poem recited by Clark Clifford at the memorial service for statesman W. Averell Harriman (PARADE, Nov. 16, 1986), we herewith offer "To Those I Love," by Isla Paschal Richardson:

If I should ever leave you whom I love
To go along the Silent Way, grieve not,
Nor speak of me with tears,
but laugh and talk
Of me as if I were beside you there.
(I'd come—I'd come,
could I but find a way!
But would not tears and grief be barriers?)
And when you hear a song or see a bird
I loved, please do not let the thought of me
Be sad... For I am loving you just as
I always have...
You were so good to me!
There are so many things
I wanted still
To do—so many things to say to you...
Remember that I did not fear... It was Just leaving you that was so hard to face...
We cannot see Beyond...
But this I know:
I loved you so—'twas heaven
here with you!

Now you can own any three movies here for just $3.30 each with membership in the CBS Video Club! That's for less than the price of movie tickets, less than the price of most rentals, and they're yours for keeps!

Choose from the best, too. Return of the Jedi, Spies Like Us, Sleeping Beauty and more. There's no membership fee, and you don't have to buy a lot of movies.

Just buy five more within the next two years. The movies you order will be mailed and billed at regular Club prices, which currently range from $29.95 to $79.95, plus shipping and handling. (Extra-long films and specials may cost a bit more.)

BONUS PLAN—SAVE 50%

After buying five movies at regular Club prices in the next two years, you can cancel. Or stay with us and save even more under our current Bonus Plan. With each movie you buy, the plan currently allows you to help yourself to another movie of equal value or less at 50% off. (And you can save as much as $65 more right now—see the Advance Selection box at right.)

About every four weeks (up to 13 times a year) we'll send you our CBS Video Club Magazine, reviewing our Director's Selection plus many alternate movies. You may also receive up to four times a year, Special Selection offers, usually at a discount off regular Club prices, for a total of up to 17 buying opportunities.

CHOOSE FROM HUNDREDS OF HIT MOVIES

As a member, you'll always have a wide range of choices. If you want the Director's Selection, don't do a thing. It will arrive automatically. If you prefer an alternate title, or none at all, just return the card provided by the date specified.

You'll always have two full weeks to decide. (If you ever receive a movie without having had a full two weeks to decide, send it back at our expense.) There's a toll-free number to call if you have any questions or service requests.

Join today and we'll send your three movies for just $3.30 each along with more details on how the Club works. If you're not satisfied, return everything within 10 days for a full, prompt refund with no further obligation.

Iris Love—the world-famous archaeologist whose accomplishments include the discovery of the most esteemed and sought-for temple of the Greek goddess Aphrodite, at Cnidus in Turkey, and fragments of perhaps the most celebrated work of art in antiquity, the Cnidian Aphrodite—offers in this article practical advice to would-be collectors and tells how, as a young beginner, she managed to acquire some valuable artifacts.

The author with an ancient Greek (3rd century B.C.) hydria, or water jar, which she purchased at auction in 1959 for $140. Worth at least $5000 today, it can be seen at New York's Brooklyn Museum.

HOW TO FIND A TREASURE

BY IRIS LOVE

"IF I HAD MY LIFE TO LIVE OVER, I would become an archaeologist." How often people say that to me. In fact, Shirley MacLaine, Vincent Price, Candice Bergen, Roberta Flack, Marilyn Horne and Ellen Burstyn are just a few who have. So, if you feel this way, don't wait for your next life—begin now!

I am a field archaeologist by training, passion and interest. That is, I dig in the earth for the remains of cities and cemeteries. I excavate to retrieve evidence of human creation, objects that will aid scholars in reconstructing the past.

But digging is not all there is to archaeology. Important discoveries have been made in museums, galleries, churches, antique shops and at auctions. Recently, a painting by the Italian Renaissance master Andrea Mantegna was discovered in a private chapel in the South of France. It brought $2.5 million at auction.

You can make discoveries too, with a little persistence, a touch of daring and a dash of faith in your instincts—as I did. Let me share some of these experiences with you and what I learned from them. Maybe they'll help you get started.

When I was 12, visiting my grandmother in Goshen, N.Y., my Aunt Margretta suggested that we go to a country auction. There, among the farm machinery, old brooms, scythes, shovels, pots and pans, I saw a numbered odd lot for sale: two American Indian jars and a Campanian olive oil vessel called a guttus. (Campania is the once-Greek, now Southern Italian region around Naples.) In modern terms, a guttus would be comparable to a fine bottle for holding a good cosmetic cleansing lotion (olive oil in ancient Greece was used not only for eating but also for cleansing the skin).

This guttus bore the head of Medusa, the snaky-haired creature whose glance turned the beholder to stone. I was attracted to it because my father used to call me "Medusa with the snaky locks." But I thought, "I shall never be able to afford this." Aunt Margretta urged me to stand below the auctioneer and make a bid. I was shy, but I planted myself near him.

The lot came up, and nobody responded. The auctioneer didn't seem to know what the objects were. I knew the pieces had value and thought the opening bid would be at least $100—way out of my range.

When no one bid and the auctioneer was looking around half disgusted, I said timidly, "One dollar." Feeling greatly embarrassed and silly, I assumed I'd be laughed at. But this started someone else bidding, and I began to compete avidly, since the raise was only about 25 cents each time. Finally, the lot was sold to me at the high bid—$3.50.

I was thrilled as the cashier took my money. The pieces were wrapped in newspaper, and Aunt Margretta drove me triumphantly back to Grandma's house.

I took the objects home to New York City and showed them to my art-collector father. He was amused and congratulated me. I placed them with my few precious prizes—several Indian arrowheads, a big copper "Britannia" penny and a Roman glass oil vessel.

Time passed, and I grew and studied more and collected when I could. Then, in 1959-60, an exhibition of antiquities from New York collectors was put on at the Metropolitan Museum of Art. My collection had improved, and the Met's curator of Greek and Roman art, Dietrich von Bothmer, asked to see some of my objects. He chose seven of them, and one was the guttus from Goshen. He called it "a very fine example of 4th-century B.C. Campanian ware."

After this praise from such a great expert, the guttus was selected by the Brooklyn Museum to go on exhibition in its Greek and Roman Gallery, and it remains there to this day. It is not a rare piece, but it is of museum quality and worth probably $500 to $1000 on the commercial art market. Of course, it is worth much more to me, as it was the first time I ever bid at an auction. It was my first outstanding art bargain.

Moral: You don't have to be J. Paul Getty to begin collecting or to bid at an auction. Don't be afraid to make a low bid.

In 1958, I was taking courses in black- and red-figured Attic, or ancient Greek, vases given by the same Dr. von Bothmer at the Metropolitan. One of our assignments from this wonderful and demanding teacher was for each of us to seek out and buy an ancient object in New York for $10 or less.

The entire class despaired over this impossible task, but no student dared give up. I spent my time systematically combing 57th Street and Second and

Third Avenues, with little hope. I had been searching for three weeks when I walked into a little shop on Third Avenue, and there I found an ancient Greek black-figured lekythos, a flask for perfumed oil. It was in a glass case surrounded by a number of 19th-century Victorian curios. I knew from my studies that it was a late 6th-century B.C. Attic piece. My heart leaped, then sank—it had been broken and restored. Even if the dealer underestimated the object, he was bound to know that the restoration had cost at least $50.

I had already decided to buy it, no matter the cost—though I felt the price would be way beyond the $10 limit. The shopkeeper placed the small vase in my hands. It looked even more important away from its all-too-recent Victorian neighbors. It had been burned on a funeral pyre, and its orangy Attic clay had turned gray. I surmised that it had originally contained oil to anoint a dead body, possibly of a child. I remember thinking about that child, who had died 2500 years before, around 510 B.C.

I asked the price. It was far lower than I'd expected. "Fifty dollars!" said the shopkeeper. (Incredible, I thought, but still too high for Dr. von Bothmer.) I handed it back, saying, "Too much," and started walking toward the door.

"Forty," said the shopkeeper.

I shook my head forlornly.

"Thirty . . . Twenty-five?"

I said, "I honestly can't buy it for that price."

He went down to $20, then $15.

I stared at him as sadly as I could and said, "I just can't buy it for that price."

He slammed down his hand and extended the lekythos, saying, "All right, all right, take it for $10."

Adding insult to injury, I asked for a bill of sale. Exasperated, he made it out.

The next class day, I marched into Dietrich von Bothmer's office and produced my prize. He looked at me in disbelief. In a second, he had identified the lekythos as the work of the Sappho painter. He asked if it had come from my father's collection. I reminded him that my father did not collect Greek vases. Dr. von Bothmer said, "The restoration alone was expensive." He questioned the low price, but the fact that we were on the honor system convinced him (and I did have the bill of sale).

No one else in the class matched my discovery, which made me immensely unpopular. I still own the lekythos, which on today's market is worth $1500-$2500.

Moral: Have patience in your search, and don't be afraid to bargain—they can't eat you. In many places, bargaining is a custom that is expected.

In 1959, I was in Egypt. When I wasn't in the Valley of the Kings or the museums, I "excavated" in the antique shops of Cairo and Luxor. One of the stores I visited had a magnificent fragment of a red-figured Attic kylix (a wide, shallow, two-handled wine cup). I assumed the shopowner knew what he had and how valuable it might be. So I averted my eyes from this masterpiece and examined everything else in the place. I even purchased some terra-cotta Hellenistic statuettes to disguise my interest.

Pretending to leave, I screwed up my courage and asked the price of the fragment. The shopowner looked at me and said, "You like it?"

Why lie? "Yes, very much," I replied. I waited for his bound-to-be-exorbitant price. He plucked it from the glass case and wrapped it carelessly in brown tissue. "It is yours," he said. "Since you like it so much, it is my gift to you." Miracles never cease.

Later I sent a photograph of this sherd to Sir John Beazley, the then acknowledged expert in the field. He wrote me a note of congratulation, saying that the fragment was by the master Skythes and was "very precious indeed!" And to think that Iris, of little faith, received it as a gift!

Moral: Don't assume that a dealer knows more than you do.

Still a student, in 1959, I went to an auction at the Parke-Bernet Galleries. I was attracted by a hydria (water jar), which had come from a cemetery in Hadra, a suburb of Alexandria in Egypt. It appealed to me because of its frieze of black and brown cavorting dolphins.

This large, ancient vessel had been a funeral urn. Its journey has been traced from the point of its discovery in the delta of the Nile. In 1890, it had formed part of a collection in Alexandria. It subsequently came across the Atlantic to New York and by 1909 was in the Metropolitan. In 1928, it was purchased by the Minneapolis Museum and then, 30 years later, was sold at Parke-Bernet.

I wanted it very much, but the first time it came up for auction, the bids were too high, and I had to drop out. The following year, however, the delightful dolphins were once again on the block. This time, the vessel was mine for only $140.

No sooner did I own the hydria than I was approached by Brian Cook, assistant curator of Greek and Roman art at the Metropolitan Museum at the time. He asked for permission to write about the piece. Publishing adds importance and value to objects by reconstructing their histories, suggesting theories about possible origins and giving interpretations of the work of art. Perhaps most important, publishing brings a work to the attention of other experts, collectors and the general public.

Today, the hydria is one of the prizes on exhibition at the Brooklyn Museum. Because of its large size and because it is intact, the market value now is proba-

This book covers most everything you need to build quality wooden structures for the birds you want to attract! Even if you are inexperienced in woodworking, you may make more than 40 superbly designed projects—from simple window feeders to three-story nesting boxes and shingled houses, and even a birdbath!

Master woodworker Charles Self gives expert instructions on how to:

- build many different types of houses and feeders
- use the best, least-expensive, easiest-to-work-with woods
- choose and work with hand and power tools (most of the projects require hand tools only)
- create structures that are durable, effective, and attractive
- attract specific species of birds
- feed the birds (what to give them, where and how to buy it inexpensively or make it yourself)
- entice some birds to stay with you year round

Most important, he outlines several strategies for deterring predators: making the entry hole just large enough for the desired species, placing cones beneath feeders on posts, and rigging an ingenious, yet simple, pulley-and-slide setup to prevent squirrels from reaching the feed.

With specific, detailed information on how to attract, house, and feed the following:

robins	chickadees	song sparrows	woodpeckers
bluebirds	warblers	cardinals	catbirds
phoebes	thrushes	hummingbirds	wrens
martins	nuthatches	owls	and more!

You will be able to immediately attract the birds you want—robins, bluebirds, cardinals, hummingbirds, many more—and protect them from predators with these 41 expertly designed birdhouses, feeders, birdbaths, nesting boxes. Everything you'll need, every instruction, every plan, every step-by-step instruction is so clear and simple that even the beginning woodworker will get perfect results every time, from simple window feeders to 3-story nesting boxes and shingled houses.

Learn how to choose the best wood (and the easiest to work with), construction techniques, joints, adhesives, finishes. How you can build every design with simple hand tools (or power tools if you prefer), what size the entry hole must be to attract the birds you want, even how high to hang the birdhouses and how to entice the birds to stay all year long.

Plus—complete instructions on what to feed the birds and where and how to buy it inexpensively. There are even recipes for making your own feed. Order MAKING BIRDHOUSES & FEEDERS today!

Moral: Study auction catalogs—if you lose an object at first, it may come around again. Even if you have to drop out of an auction, it's worthwhile to bid—you have given some substance to a work of art.

In November 1968, an astrologer cast my horoscope: "At the end of February," she said, "you will find yourself on the frontier of China." I told her I was going to South America. "No," she insisted, "you will find yourself on the frontier of China at the end of February."

I thought nothing of this incredible prophecy. I was teaching art history and archaeology at Long Island University for a pittance, and my chances for any kind of travel were slim at best. Eventually, I accumulated enough money to go to South America at the semester break. A friend then asked suddenly if I would like to go to India instead.

Impulsive and always eager to go anywhere, I changed my plans. Four days later, my companion and I landed in Bombay. We visited much of the north of India, and as we were preparing to leave, I said, "It's really a shame to be in India and not see Nepal." So we cashed our remaining traveler's checks and flew to Katmandu.

There, we stayed in a place right out of Raiders of the Lost Ark. Mostly we froze and spent our time hovering near charcoal braziers. But we did hire a guide to take us up a mountain. "You are on the roof of the world," he told us as we gazed out at the spectacular Himalayas. "And over there is the frontier of China." It was the end of February.

The same guide took us to a village to meet a man who had, he said, "Tibetan artifacts." Most of the objects were small and lightweight, obviously from families who had smuggled them out of Tibet when fleeing the Communist Chinese.

I bought a beautiful tanka—a Tibetan wall hanging painted on silk—and two magnificent stirrups with dragon heads interwoven in gilded bronze and encrusted with semiprecious stones. I paid $300 for them, the last of my money. The seller said, "Keep them covered up. It is rumored they once belonged to the Dalai Lama." I figured he said this to everybody.

In time, I took them to the Metropolitan to show to the curator of Asian art. He was so taken with them that he asked to borrow the objects for an exhibition, and for a while the stirrups of the Dalai Lama, or at least some great lord, lived in the Metropolitan. They are two of the most beautiful things I have ever been lucky enough to own. And they always remind me that sometimes prophecies, just like dreams, come true.

Moral: Buy whatever strikes you when you see it. Use your intuition. You may not pass this way again.

FOCUS ON

Fitness

BY STUART M. BERGER, M.D. AND MICHAEL O'SHEA, PH.D.

Q Is it true that you lose heat faster through your head than other parts of the body?

A Heat is lost faster in areas of the body that expose a great amount of surface area. These areas include the head, especially the ears, and the hands and feet. It is important that you cover these areas when the weather is cold. If you allow too much heat to escape during cold-weather exercising, you run the risk of hypothermia and frostbite. Under cool conditions, the body must work all the harder to maintain a safe inner temperature if you allow heat to escape because these areas are exposed.

Q Do antacids reduce the effect of other medications? Do they have any effect on calcium supplements?

A Antacids, used by millions of Americans to relieve upset stomach, heartburn and acid indigestion, can indeed reduce the effectiveness of other drugs. Any of the antacids can decrease the effectiveness of tetracycline antibiotics; certain psychiatric medications, such as phenothiazines; iron pills; and certain nerve medications. Additional effects depend on whether the antacid has an aluminum, magnesium or calcium base. Those with an aluminum base can interfere with the action of steroids and digoxin (a heart medication) and with the body's absorption of calcium. Magnesium-based antacids, on the other hand, are helpful in the absorption of calcium, which is essential in helping to prevent many serious diseases. The best natural sources of calcium are dairy products. Others include tofu, broccoli, kale, salmon and sardines (canned, with bones), shrimp, oysters, almonds and sesame seeds.

Calcium-based antacids act, in effect, as a calcium supplement. Taking an additional calcium supplement could be dangerous.

Heartless answers to six questions

Does Love Really Make The World Go Round?

Love, the most popular of human emotions, also may be the most misunderstood. Social scientists, gathering hard evidence about it, are making some surprising findings. Here are six questions about love that most of us would unhesitatingly answer—wrongly:

1. Which Is The Romantic Sex?

THE PSYCHOLOGISTS Kenneth and Karen Dion found that when people answer questionnaires about love anonymously, men are more idealistic than women, women more practical than men.

A team of sex researchers, after interviewing 700 young lovers, reported in The Journal of Sex Research that men fall in love sooner and more impulsively than women, women more cautiously and sensibly than men.

Three Harvard psychologists who studied 231 couples in love found that it's more often the women who break up affairs and the men who try to hang on, and that women have less trouble than men getting over breakups.

2. Does Love Conquer All?

LOVE SOMETIMES CAN conquer such obstacles as class, religious and ethnic differences. But more often it does not. Spouses from the same class, say the sociologists Bernard Berelson and Gary Steiner, have three times as good a chance of a happy marriage as spouses from very different classes.

Spouses of different religions, Ira Reiss and other sociologists report, are more likely to break up than spouses of the same faith. The same is true for partners of different races, ages and levels of education, says the sociologist Graham Spanier.

Love, on the other hand, does conquer such formidable obstacles as selfishness, fear of commitment and the difficulty men and women have understanding each other's feelings.

3. Where Dwells My Other Half?

THERE IS A POPULAR BELIEF that we fall in love when we find the "right" one. We think we look far and wide, but in reality we almost always choose our "one-and-only" from someone conveniently near.

In the 1960s, researchers at the University of Minnesota found that half of all pairs of young lovers lived within walking distance of each other. And when the sociologist A.C. Clarke interviewed 431 engaged couples, he found that most partners lived within three-quarters of a mile of one another.

It appears, then, that we make someone close at hand into the "right" person. When you think about it, that's far more adaptive and creative than finding a ready-made right person.

4. Is Love Unselfish?

IF LOVE ISN'T ALL GETTING, neither is it all giving; it's a trade. We give, but if we don't get a fair return, love withers.

Elaine Hatfield and G. William Walster, social psychologists who specialize in research on love, say that singles tend to pair up with people about as attractive, intelligent, educated and socially desirable as themselves, and to avoid those who have less to offer than they have.

Drs. Hatfield and Walster and another researcher asked 600 married and paired people who had the better deal in their relationships and how they felt about it. Those who were on the short end were unhappy and angry—but those who were getting the better deal felt uneasy and guilty. The happiest were those who saw their relationship as equal.

5. Is Love Universal?

"LOVE IS THE SAME IN everyone," wrote the Roman poet Virgil. Novels, movies and plays reinforce our belief that in every time and place, people have loved as we do. But is that so?

Our kind of love didn't really appear until the Middle Ages—and then it often took the form of extramarital affairs among European courtiers. Not until much later—and chiefly in this country, in fact—did the concept of love have anything to do with marriage.

We don't love instinctively. Child psychologists find that love develops in children only if they have loving family experiences, and that adult love evolves out of childhood love. Says Marcia Lasswell, a professor of psychology at California State University: "Love is a set of feelings and a pattern of actions that we have learned."

Physiologically, love isn't specific: Professor Lasswell says that heart rate, blood pressure and brain-wave patterns are much the same whether we're feeling love, fear, hate or merely tension. We're taught to call certain feelings love; it's not a built-in response.

So our concept of love is relatively modern. And a good thing it got invented: In our vast impersonal world, we really need love. Without it, we'd have no one to rely on, no place to call home.

6. Does Love Last?

HARDLY. THE FEELING OF "being in love" lasts from six to 30 months, says Dr. Hatfield.

This doesn't always mean that love has died. Instead, romantic or passionate love often is transformed into placid, affectionate, companionate love. Research by the Yale psychologist Robert Sternberg indicates that, although passion wanes with time, intimacy and commitment may continue to grow. The quieter kind of love gives us what we needed all along: a friend, confidant and partner to share life with.

And in marriages that last, romance often makes a comeback. Research confirms that, after the children leave, romance revives, and even sexual passion returns. Not that companionate love is replaced; both forms exist together.

There was, you remember, a poet who wrote: "Grow old along with me, the best is yet to be."

AUDREY HEPBURN Wooed Back to Work

Larkin-Celpictures

Robert Wagner and Audrey Hepburn cuddle in Love Among Thieves

"I was very hesitant to work again," says Audrey Hepburn, who has been living in Switzerland with her family. But Karen Mack, executive producer of Love Among Thieves, approached Hepburn with the chance to help develop any kind of story she wanted. The result is this comedy-mystery-romance about a concert pianist whose fiancé is kidnapped—and what she does to get him back. ABC, Feb. 23, 9-11 p.m. EST.

Ann-Margret, Stephen Collins, Claudette Colbert In Real-Life Drama

There was one scene during the filming of The Two Mrs. Grenvilles, says Stephen Collins, that upset his co-star Ann-Margret so, she turned to him and cried, "I can't do this anymore." Playing a Broadway showgirl whose marriage to a very rich New York aristocrat turns ugly, the actress beseeched Collins, "I need a break—let's be nice to each other for a minute." Collins' mother in the fact-based story is played by Claudette Colbert, and he says there was some concern because one scene was to be shot from the legendary star's "wrong" side. But the 83-year-old Colbert told them: "Oh, don't worry—that was a long time ago." NBC, tonight and Monday, 9-11 p.m. EST.

MOVIES

Sylvester Stallone Strives for Son's Love

"You'll see a very different Sylvester Stallone in Over the Top," says Menahem Golan, who directed the film. Stallone plays a truck driver-arm wrestler who's trying to get to know his 12-year-old upper-crust son after years of separation—and despite the efforts of the boy's millionaire grandfather to separate them. And he takes on a guy with much bigger biceps for the World Arm Wrestling Championship. Golan, who wants us to picture a kind of working-class Kramer vs. Kramer cum Rocky, says Stallone talks and gets emotional in this movie. Did his facial muscles need practice? From Cannon.

MUSIC

JAZZMAN JOHN LEWIS UPDATES BACH

After 300 years, people are still finding new ways to play the music of Johann Sebastian Bach. The latest to succeed is pianist John Lewis, formerly of the Modern Jazz Quartet, who has come up with a refreshing once-over-lightly release titled The Bridge Game, a delectably jazzy updating of several Preludes and Fugues from "The Well-Tempered Clavier."

Issued on the Philips label (826 698-1), the LP record has Lewis—assisted by strings, bass and guitar—recast these classic pieces into his own modern idiom, adding a lilt as delightful as it is unobtrusive. The record, incidentally, is marked Vol. 2. Whatever happened to Vol. 1? —Herbert Kupferberg

BLUE JAY

Announcing the important new issue in the Lenox Garden Bird Sculpture Collection

Intricately handcrafted of the finest bisque porcelain and meticulously painted by hand

Available only by reservation

On a warm spring day, amid the pastel blossoms of a cherry tree, a brilliant flash of blue attracts the eye. It is one of nature's loveliest creations, as vivid as a springtime sky—the blue jay.

Lenox has now captured this striking garden bird in Blue Jay, a new, fine bisque porcelain sculpture. A dramatically beautiful work of art, handcrafted and hand painted to reveal the most intricate detail.

Meticulous handcraftsmanship . . . uncompromising quality

Blue Jay is portrayed with its wings outspread in a magnificent courtship display. And this sculpture is created with extraordinary realism. Each fine detail has been individually sculpted . . . each feather painted by hand in the blue jay's vibrant azure blue colors.

In your home, this delightful sculpture will provide a striking display of color to attract the eye . . . a delightful touch of nature to warm the heart. It will be a conversation piece, attracting the admiration of all who see it. A unique and much-appreciated gift. And an heirloom to pass down to future generations with pride. For its quality, authenticity and fine handcraftsmanship are hallmarks of the finest porcelain sculpture.

Created and designed by the master artists of Lenox, each imported sculpture will bear a pure 24 karat gold backstamp inscribed with the title of the work and the world-famous Lenox® trademark. In addition, your sculpture will also be accompanied by a Certificate of Authenticity.

Available only direct from Lenox

The important new issue in the Lenox Garden Bird Sculpture Collection, Blue Jay is available only direct from Lenox. It will not be sold through even the most prestigious dealers or galleries. The issue price is $39, payable in convenient monthly installments of $13 with no finance charge. And, of course, your satisfaction is completely guaranteed.

Because each sculpture is individually handcrafted and orders will be accepted in strict sequence of receipt, your Reservation Application should be postmarked by February 28, 1987. Please allow 6 to 8 weeks for delivery. For your convenience on credit card orders, you may call TOLL FREE, 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 1-800-262-9500 ext. 906.

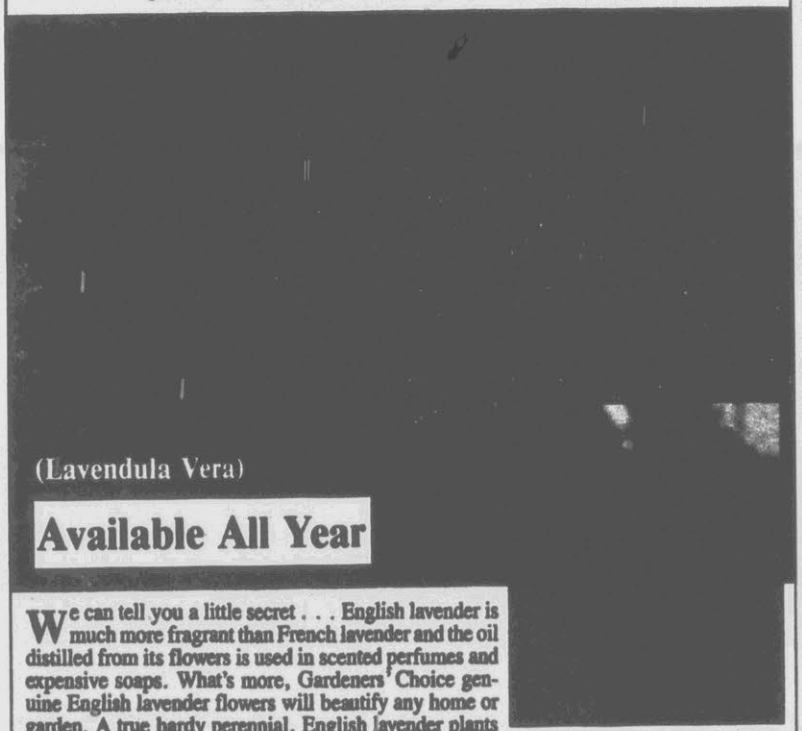
Wonderful Old-Fashioned Fragrance, Summer-long Flowers Year after Year!

Old English Lavender



(Lavendula Vera)

Available All Year

We can tell you a little secret . . . English lavender is much more fragrant than French lavender and the oil distilled from its flowers is used in scented perfumes and expensive soaps. What's more, Gardeners' Choice genuine English lavender flowers will beautify any home or garden. A true hardy perennial, English lavender plants bloom each summer, year after year and even when the plant takes a well-deserved rest from all that spectacular perpetual flowering, the silvery leaves are decorative right into winter months.

Cut-And-Come-Again Flowers

Cut a few sprigs of lavender, drop them into a teacup and steep for a few minutes in boiling water to make one of the most delicious and refreshing herbal teas imaginable. A few sprigs of lavender in a hot bath can also have a wonderful soothing effect at the end of a tiring day. AND it is an effective natural insect repellent against pesky midges and mosquito bites, if rubbed on your skin.

No matter how much you cut the violet-blue flowers, more new flowers are stimulated into blooming. Use them fresh to create instant floral arrangements for the house, or air-dry some stems to make herbal sachets and potpourris that will add an enchanting summer-time freshness to linens and clothes.

Plants grow 1-3 feet high and these hearty perennials actually prefer dry soils.

Perry King

BRADY'S BITS

I asked Perry about his early movie, The Lords of Flatbush, where he and Ray Sharkey and Henry Winkler and Sly Stallone all worked together. Did he have any suspicion back then that Stallone would become so big? Yes, said King, Stallone was always working on a project, always writing, always planning. "I didn't know what he was going to end up doing, but I knew he was going to be rich." See, Yale guys are smart.

Perry King will be on TV next month in I'll Take Manhattan. Valerie Bertinelli is the heroine, but keep your eye on Perry, the smoothest villain this side of J.R.

THE LEGENDARY BOOK EDITOR Maxwell Perkins—who worked with Ernest Hemingway, F. Scott Fitzgerald and Thomas Wolfe—was known for always wearing a hat in the office on the theory that, when confronted by a bore, he could escape by saying he was on the way out. I asked his grandson, the actor Perry King, about that story.

"I think he just liked hats," said Perry, puncturing yet another legend.

That's the sort of guy King is—straightforward, relaxed, no hype. In I'll Take Manhattan, the mini-series that airs next month on CBS, he plays the wicked Cutter Amberville. He likes playing bad guys. "They get to dominate the scene," he said. But like all good actors, King has the range to play just about any kind of role, from the streetwise tough in The Lords of Flatbush to the sexy private eye in Riptide to the neurotic gay in A Different Story, until now his favorite role. But it was Riptide that made him cover-story material.

Unlike most actors, King comes out of a privileged background. He graduated from the exclusive St. Paul's School and from Yale, which he chose over Harvard because of its drama school. His ancestors include two signers of the Declaration of Independence and Gen. William T. ("war is hell") Sherman of Civil War fame. From Yale, he won a scholarship to study acting under the formidable John Houseman and then, with deceptive ease, inherited a Broadway leading role in his very first professional acting job. His first movie wasn't too shabby either, as he got to play opposite Shirley MacLaine in The Possession of Joel Delaney.

An early marriage (at age 19) didn't last, and since then King has free-lanced romantically, being linked with different beauties but never getting tied down by anyone but his teenage daughter, Louise, whom he calls "Ouisie" (pronounced "Weezie"). Ouisie rides horses, spends weekends with Daddy and speaks French.

When I'd finished the interview, Perry gave me a lift across town in a hired limo and talked about Grandpa Perkins. He thinks there's terrific dramatic material in Max Perkins and wants to do the story himself. As we were passing the Coliseum book shop in midtown Manhattan, King stopped the car. "Come on," he said. "I want to buy some books." That was such a shock, coming from an actor, that I blurted out my new novel had just been published. Perry rooted around until we found a copy, which I duly signed, and he paid for. Full price.

BORN: April 30, 1949, in Alliance, Ohio.
PERSONAL: Married his college sweetheart, Karen, in 1968; separated in 1980. One daughter, Louise, 15.
THEATER DEBUT: Child's Play, on Broadway, 1970.
FILMS: Include The Possession of Joel Delaney, 1971; The Lords of Flatbush, 1974; The Wild Party, 1974; Mandingo, 1975; Lipstick, 1976; A Different Story, 1978; Class of 1984, 1982.
TV: Includes Captains and Kings, 1976; The Last Convertible, 1979; Aspen, 1977; The Quest, 1982-83; Riptide, 1984.
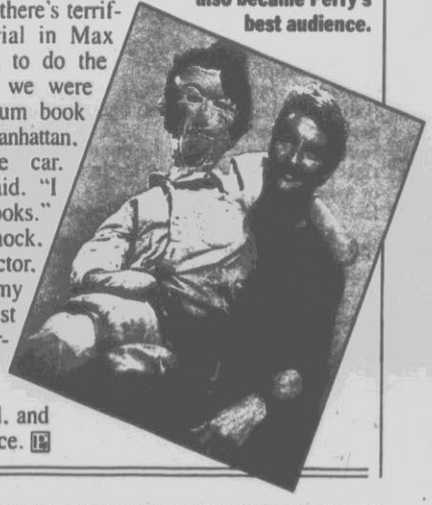
HOBBIES: Restoring old cars and motorcycles, writing.



Perry King with the dummy the actor says started his career. Perry's mother made him the dummy when he was 8, so that he could beat it up instead of his older brother, who picked fights with him. Along the way, the dummy also became Perry's best audience.

Linda Lavin Turns To Life On Sheep Ranch

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Linda Lavin stars as an American who moves her 11 children halfway around the world to start life anew on a remote sheep ranch in the Australian Outback in the CBS movie "A Place to Call Home."

If that sounds familiar, CBS thought the same thing and held the two-hour movie up for nearly six months so that it would not compete with the Linda Evans miniseries "The Last Frontier." That two-part show, also about an American woman who moves her children to the Outback, ran last October.

Lavin is now starring on Broadway in "Broadway Bound," the third in a Neil Simon trilogy, following "Brighton Beach Memoirs" and "Biloxi Blues."

She made "A Place to Call Home" last summer in Australia and talked about it in an interview before taking off for New York.

"This is a true story about a woman who took her 11 children to Australia and became a sheep farmer," she said. "She and her husband bought the land and dreamed of moving to the Outback. But when they were ready to leave, her husband had some problems at work and she went ahead.

"She arrived in the middle of a five-year drought. It was an alien land and the husband never came to stay. You have the choice of giving up and going back or standing on your own two feet and making a go of it. She became successful in that hostile environment. The people were friendly but the land wasn't."

"A Place to Call Home," which CBS will telecast Saturday, also stars Lane Smith, Lori Loughlin, Robert Macnaughton, Paul Cronin and Maggie Fitzgibbon. Russ Mayberry directed on location in Australia from a screenplay by Carol Sobieski and Jeri Taylor.

Lavin's character, Liz Gavin, was living in Houston with her husband and 13 children, some adopted, when she decided to escape contemporary big-city America and its climate of drugs and violence. The two oldest children remained behind in college.

Despite the absence of her husband and the opposition of her children who yearn to return to this country, she makes a go of it on the sheep ranch. The story is based on the experiences of a woman and her family in the 1970s. That woman and some of her children have remained in Australia.

"It's a beautiful film," said Lavin. "The light is different, the landscape is different. It has the look of a real Western. Once I saw Australia I could see that 'The Thorn Birds' was filmed in California. It just doesn't look the same."

Lavin left the sitcom "Alice" in February 1985 after nine years air as the waitress at Mel's Diner. She said she spent three years developing "A Place to Call Home" for her own film company, Big Deal Inc.

"It was both a relief and sad to stop doing 'Alice,'" she said. "It was especially sad to say goodbye to a family of people I'd been with for nine years. It was sad not to have a job on a daily basis. But it was a relief in terms of the fact that you start to get bored after a while in the same role. You need to stop and look at what else you can do. There's a lot of pressure in getting out a weekly show. It was time for it to end."

She said she would do another series, but she's not rushing it. "I'm very happy to be going back to New York to do another play," she said. "I try not to make long-range plans. If we come up with a good series I'd enjoy doing it."

Steele Mill

Pierce Brosnan may have lost out to Timothy Dalton as the new James Bond, but he has plenty of other work lined up. Look for him in the eight-hour NBC miniseries "James Clavell's Noble House," to be broadcast next season. Brosnan plays Ian Dunross, the leader of an influential Hong Kong trading house that becomes the takeover target of an American conglomerate. "Noble House" is the fourth book in Clavell's Asian saga ("King Rat," "Tai-Pan" and "Shogun").

Clothing Value

In these days of high clothing prices, you wonder what value you're getting for your money. It would help to know, as you pay rising prices for clothes, how long a garment can be expected to last.

The International Fabricare Institute, a worldwide association of drycleaners and launderers, has published with the Better Business Bureau a list of textile life expectancies. These standards take into account changes in fashion, fabric characteristics and normal amount of wear and tear.

5 Years: formal wear, leather coats, tablecloths
4 Years: jackets, sport coats, wool slacks
3 Years: sweaters, robes, raincoats, sport shirts, dresses
2 Years: cotton or synthetic suits, dress shirts, children's wear

Older garments are still useful, but the fabrics are not as sturdy or the colors sharp, and they will soil more easily.

Taking good care of your clothes will add years to their service. Regular cleaning will prevent a build-up of soil, which weakens fabrics. Drycleaning is gentler on fabric finishes and colors than washing. Steam pressing helps fabrics retain their luster and feel. Stop in at A CLEANER WORLD and make buying clothes a little cheaper!

Oz Alert

Wondering when TV will next send us off to see "The Wizard of Oz"? CBS will broadcast the 1939 classic on March 6. Some quick trivia in the meanwhile: Name the actors who were originally cast as the Wizard; the Wicked Witch of the West; the Tin Woodsman; the Scarecrow; and Dorothy. The respective answers: W.C. Fields; Gale Sondergaard; Buddy Ebsen; Jack Haley (who was recast as the Woodsman because Ebsen was allergic to the silver paint); and Shirley Temple.

New Name, New Life For 'Together We Stand'

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Proving that not only chickens, but turkeys can come home to roost, "Together We Stand," one of the bombs of the 1986-87 season, returns to CBS on Sunday, Feb. 8, with a new name: "Nothing Is Easy."

For those with short memories, "Together We Stand" was a sitcom created by Sherwood Schwartz ("Gilligan's Island," "The Brady Bunch") that took the warm fuzzies of "The Cosby Show" to its treacly extreme. Elliott Gould and Dee Wallace Stone played a white, middle-class couple with one natural child and one adopted (white) child, who decided to adopt two more children — an Oriental boy (Ke Huy Quan) and a black girl (Natasha Bobo, apparently one of the first graduates of the Keshia Knight Pulliam School for Adorable Imps).

The name change reflects a major change in the sitcom's structure. Gould has been written out of the show. We learn that his character has died. Stone will now be faced with the dilemma of raising the kids alone. Just when you thought the nuclear family was back on TV, here comes another single, presumably super, mom. Eliminating the father is at least one way to dispel those "Cosby" look-alike rumors.

Whatever the motivation involved, one still has to wonder about the laugh quotient, not to mention the taste, involved for two former orphans to deal with the death of a new parent. Is this a TV movie or a sitcom? One also has to wonder about the reasons that a show with such strong kiddie appeal is airing at 9:30 p.m. (ET), between two decidedly adult shows — the newly returned "Designing Women" and the new newspaper drama "Hard Copy."

• Sweeps programming continues this week. In addition to the requisite miniseries ("The Two Mrs. Grenvilles," NBC, Feb. 8 and 9) and blockbuster feature films ("Romancing the Stone," ABC, Feb. 8), "Webster" star Emmanuel Lewis headlines his own ABC special.

Wesley Bring Her C&W Sound To Soaps

By Connie Passalacqua

Soaps usually recruit actors who are also singers to create pleasant — or poignant — musical interludes amid the dramatic action. These actor/singers rarely have anything more than serviceable voices. A most welcome exception is pretty Kassie Wesley, who just joined "Guiding Light" as Chelsea Reardon.

Wesley's voice is not only refreshingly good, but different for soaps, where supper-club style is the norm. Wesley's style contains elements reflecting her background.

"I started singing in church, later in weddings," says the Morganfield, Ky., native. "I went to Indiana University for a year and a half and that summer I worked at Opryland USA. I got my first professional singing job there, which was to sing two songs at the Grand Ole Opry with Roy Acuff. It was so exciting. What a thrill!

"From the age of 13, I've known I've wanted to act," she continues in a southern lilt that she disguises well on "GL." "No one in my family is in the business, but my father is an attorney and I guess that is a glorified actor."

She studied acting in high school. After her Nashville experience, she decided to transfer to UCLA and attempt to get work in Los Angeles. She was able to land commercial work and a part in a horror movie, "Evil Dead 2." "I play a Southern spitfire, wouldn't you know it?" she says.

After going on a USO tour of Japan, she returned home and went out on a long domestic tour as one of three backup singers to soul singer Bobby Womack.

Gosh, gang, it's Valentine's Day! Linus is not quite in the spirit of brotherly love in "Be My Valentine, Charlie Brown." The animated special airs Saturday, Feb. 14, on CBS. (Rebroadcast)

Funny folk: Carol Burnett hosts some of comedy's brightest stars in "A Carol Burnett Special: Carol, Carl, Whoopi and Robin." It airs Tuesday, Feb. 10, on ABC.

Kiddie Cosmos

For youngsters who can't sit through "Nova" or "Discover," PBS offers a new half-hour science and nature series especially for pre-teens. "KnowZone" is hosted by David Morse ("St. Elsewhere"), who conducts interviews and experiments in an on-stage laboratory. The premiere episode, airing Feb. 28 (check local listings), is "The Dinosaur and the Cosmic Collision"; upcoming programs will focus on trains of the future, tornadoes, apes who use sign language and Henry Ford.

TV Chatter

Carol Burnett could hardly contain her excitement: In a few hours she was going to have lunch! But this was no ordinary lunch. For Burnett was dining with the three cutest boys from her Hollywood High School days. "I'm prepared for a shock," she says. "I still think of them as cute 17-year-olds, and we're all in our 50s now." On "The Carol Burnett Show" during the '70s, and more recently in her best-selling memoirs, "One More Time," Burnett often announced her unrequited love for three fellow students. When the book came out, one of them, now a successful Los Angeles businessman, wrote her a letter. She responded with a phone call, inviting all three heartthrobs to lunch. "How many women get this chance? I had a real crush on one of them and used to dream we'd get married someday. He's the reason I kept my real name when I went into show business. I figured if I ever was a success, I wanted him to know." Anyway, we'll let you know how it all went.

Melissa Gilbert has all but shed her nice-girl image from "Little House on the Prairie." First, there was last month's NBC movie "Blood Vows," in which she played the Mafia wife of gangster Joe Penny. The duo's lovemaking smoked up the small screen with R-rated passion. Now we hear that next September, Gilbert and on-again-off-again beau Rob Lowe will finally tie the knot after a six-year courtship. It took the handsome movie actor six months to get his bride to say yes. Knowing of his past liaisons with everyone from Princess Stephanie to Nastassja Kinski, Gilbert, 22, was reluctant to make her relationship with Malibu's resident Don Juan permanent. So what changed her mind? "He told me I wasn't the kind of person to live in fear," she says. Fear, no; anger, definitely. When the pair confessed their previous infidelities to each other ("He had seven to my one," she says), Lowe blew up. Gilbert got even angrier and started breaking dishes in the kitchen until she realized they belonged to her mother. "I wasn't mad at Mom, so I stopped."

If you listen very closely, you can still hear a whisper of a Southern accent in David Selby's voice, even though as the evil businessman David Channing on "Falcon Crest" he is supposed to hail from the Napa Valley. Selby, who grew up as the son of a carpenter in West Virginia, used to have a much stronger accent, which he gradually lost over the years without benefit of a voice coach. At first, it looked like his twang would forever keep him from stage and screen except in Tennessee Williams revivals. As a 6-foot-3 17-year-old, Selby hopped a train from West Virginia to New York with only $25 in his pocket. He was lured to Gotham by a notice he saw in the paper — a casting call for "Tiger at the Gates," a classic play by French playwright Jean Giraudoux. Selby auditioned for the role of Hector, brother-in-law of Helen of Troy. "Can you imagine Hector, the hero of Troy, with a West Virginia twang?" Selby asks. Just as easily as we could imagine the ex-wife of the president of the United States as a little old winemaker. "I didn't get the part," Selby adds, perhaps unnecessarily.

Gregory Harrison takes method acting to the brink of madness. He was recently spotted at a party wearing an earring, which is not extraordinary. But how did Harrison have the ear pierced? For a scene in a TV movie, Harrison's character was supposed to get his ear pierced without benefit of anesthesia. To get in the right mood, Harrison had the small operation just before shooting began — without an anesthetic!

CINDY SAYS

It's a Grey cabaret; Carr fuels up for TV

By Cindy Adams

Maureen O'Sullivan, Mia Farrow's ma, who played ma of Mia in "Hannah and Her Sisters," landed an eight-week film job. She'll play Mia's ma in Woody Allen's next.

Marilu Henner

Joel Grey

Tommy Tune's doing a summer tour of "My One and Only" again. Honi Cole is in it again. Sandy Duncan isn't. ... Marilu Henner has replaced pregnant Maureen Anderman in Broadway's "Social Security." ... Martin Poll shoots "Haunted Summer" this spring. It's about Byron and Shelley's first meeting.

A party of Charles Bronson's 300 nearest and closest enjoyed music from the Salvation Army band. Bronson loves the Army.

"They gave me shoes when I couldn't afford them."

What good is sitting alone in your room? Come to the "Cabaret." Twenty years ago this big-time show played the Imperial on Broadway. Joel Grey, its perennial star, was billed fourth. Now he's over the title, in letters as large as the name "Cabaret."

Joel told me: "I have the original props, hat and cane. And my makeup kit is still intact. Only my salary has changed. Let's say it's gone up a little."

Added to the already announced cast is opera's Regina Resnick, in the Lotte Lenya role. Jack Gilford's part is now Werner Klemperer's: the German Col. Klink of TV's "Hogan's Heroes" plays the Jew, Schultz. The Jill Haworth (Liza Minnelli in the movie) role now goes to Alyson Reed. Reed's last outing was "Marilyn," which, unfortunately, laid a small omelet.

So come next fall, come to the cabaret, old chum, come to the cabaret.

Alan Carr's dickering for a daily gossip segment on TV. This Broadway Hollywood producer usually dishes dirt for fun, not profit. ... Shy Stallone's been around New York with five bodyguards. ... Shecky Greene nixed the lead in Broadway's revival of "Hellzapoppin."

SUNDAY
ROMANCE AND ADVENTURE

Alone in the jungles of South America, in search of a kidnapped sister, writer Joan Wilder (Kathleen Turner) finds refuge with a modern day swashbuckler, Jack Colton (Michael Douglas). But the search is not easy as the mismatched duo discover in the hit adventure movie "Romancing the Stone." It airs Sunday, Feb. 8, on ABC.

MONDAY
TWO MRS. GRENVILLES

Ann-Margret (l.) stars as an ambitious Broadway showgirl who marries into the aristocratic Grenville family and Claudette Colbert plays her disapproving mother-in-law in "The Two Mrs. Grenvilles." The four-hour miniseries concludes Monday, Feb. 9, on NBC.

Allman Returns With 'Honest' Rock 'N' Roll

By E.A. Vare

After a five-year absence from recording, Gregg Allman returns to the world of rock 'n' roll with a new album, "I'm No Angel," and the first video of his career. Having taken early-'70s radio by storm with the Allman Brothers Band, Gregg became a victim of his highly publicized personal life — the deaths of his brother/guitarist Duane, and of his bassist, Berry Oakley; his marriage and subsequent divorce from actress/singer Cher; a vicious court battle centered around the band's road manager; and a lifestyle that caused a four-year songwriting block and even a recent spell in jail for drunk driving.

Now, Allman says he has cleaned up his act and is ready to take it on the road.

"People are going to hear this record on the radio, and say 'That's who? Allman, like the guy from the Brothers?'" laughs Allman. "The new record is totally modern-day: jazz-blues-fusion and honest rock 'n' roll."

Guest-singing on one track is a thoroughly modern hero: "Miami Vice" star Don Johnson, who has been a buddy ever since the movie "Return to Macon County" was filmed near Allman's home in 1975. "There were all these funny-looking vehicles blocking the road," recalls Allman, "and I said 'Whoa, what are you guys doing blocking my road?' And this guy comes up to me and Dickie Betts and says, 'Ain't you guys from the Allman Brothers? My name's Donny, Donny Johnson.'"

Performing is as natural as breathing for Allman: His band has been playing 200 gigs a year even during his recording slump. But taping a video for the album's title cut will be a new experience.

"I want to do a video with the guy who does those '501 Blues' commercials," he says. "I want to shoot in black-and-white, and I want to do it in a really rough section of New Orleans. But for the time being, I'll take whatever the record company gives me.

Michele Will Tell

Dear Michele: What are Jack Lord's future professional plans? — ELSIE WINTERHALTER, PETALUMA, CALIF.

Look out, "Hawaii Five-O" fans! Lord is negotiating with CBS for a TV movie that would bring McGarrett back in "Hawaii Five-O Revisited."

Dear Michele: My friend insists comedian Joan Rivers is not Jewish. I say that she is. Who is right? — MARY CANADE, NEWBURGH, N.Y.

Evidently you and your friend haven't caught Rivers' act on stage or screen. She often mentions her Jewish heritage. The 50-year-old comedian, who now stars nightly on "The Late Show Starring Joan Rivers," is the daughter of Meyer C. Molinsky. She has been married to producer Edgar Rosenberg since 1965.

Dear Michele: Isn't Bobby from the series "Taxi" the same actor who portrays the leading role on "MacGyver"? — KIM JUREWICZ, CRYSTAL LAKE, ILL.

You picked the wrong cab! Bobby Wheeler on "Taxi" was played by Jeff Conaway. "MacGyver" stars Richard Dean Anderson in the title role.

Dear Michele: I think British actor David Rappaport is wonderful! How tall is "The Wizard" star? In what else has he appeared? — F.M. BAILEY, BANGOR, MAINE

The English-born Rappaport reached his current 3-foot-11-inch height at age 7. He was a psychology student at Bristol University from 1970-73 and was actively involved in music. He was a rock and jazz drummer, performed in various reviews and directed a multimedia show. Although most of his stage and TV credits are British, fans this side of the Atlantic may remember him from the feature films "Cuba" (1979) and "Time Bandits" (1981).

Take the Clara Johnson Test.

In Alamance County, North Carolina, Honda lawn mowers are assembled from the wheels up. Then each mower must pass rigid quality control standards before we ship it.

The final test is a critical performance check to ensure easy starting. We call it the Clara Johnson Test. At the end of the assembly line, each mower is started or it doesn't ship.

Come in and give the whole line of Honda mowers the Clara Johnson Test yourself. Each one will start easily, or it wouldn't be a Honda.

'Colorized' Classics Come To Home Video

By Frank Lovece

With CBS/Fox's recent releases of the colorized "Yankee Doodle Dandy," "The Maltese Falcon" and "42nd Street," and with its commitment to several more colorized versions of classic black-and-white films, the largest home video label has entered an extremely controversial realm. Until now, only Walt Disney and Hal Roach Studios have offered a small number of colorized cassettes, and Vestron will market its first on Feb. 25. None of these previous releases were exactly "Casablanca," however. Now, "Casablanca" in color may be in the works.

The controversy reached a head late last year when media mogul Ted Turner, owner of superstation WTBS and of more than 3,000 MGM, Warner Brothers and RKO films, began colorizing an initial batch of 100. In addition to the ones mentioned, Turner had colorized "Father of the Bride," "They Drive by Night" and "The Bad and the Beautiful." Replying to a reporter's question over creators' rights, Turner responded, "The last time I checked, they were my films."

Naturally, this didn't sit too well with the directors and actors who actually made them, none of whom were consulted or given even a token fee. An immense backlash is growing among certain film-business groups.

Here's the general issues of the debate:

Pro: Most people don't want to see black-and-white movies on TV, but prefer color. Consumers deserve the choice, and most colorized movies shown on TV so far have scored good ratings. Black-and-white movies aren't one-of-a-kind items like a painting or a sculpture, and the originals will always be around. And a viewer can always turn the TV's color knob down.

Con: Dozens of black-and-white TV series from "I Love Lucy" to "Perry Mason" remain extremely popular; no independent study has been done to assess whether people actually refuse to watch black-and-white movies such as "The Maltese Falcon" and "Casablanca." The good ratings for colorized films may simply reflect their novelty value. While movies aren't one-of-a-kind items, black-and-white films may be shoved into the vaults and left unseen — especially if TV programmers and video stores decide not to stock duplicates of the same movie. Finally, not all televisions have color knobs, and even if so, there is a visible difference between something shot in black-and-white, and something shot in color and de-colorized.

These arguments don't, of course, even begin to take the creators' rights into consideration. Turner and other copyright holders say the creators sold off their rights when the movies were originally made. Creators point to the countless instances where films put to video were given new soundtracks because musicians successfully claimed they didn't specifically give up the video rights.

Litigation and boycott campaigns seem inevitable. For if Turner and the colorizers win, the next thing we'll probably see is silent Charlie Chaplin movies with dubbed-in dialogue.

Up Against The Fourth Wall, Shandling

By Andrew J. Edelstein

Since it debuted last fall, Showtime's "It's Garry Shandling's Show" has shown that made-for-cable sitcoms do not have to be lightweight fluff like "Check It Out" or smarmy jock-yocks like HBO's "1st & Ten." The offbeat, innovative show has become cable's second comedy cult phenomenon, following USA's wacky wrestling talk-show "Wrestling TNT." For those who live in areas where Showtime is not available, home-made video tapes of the Shandling show are in high demand and are passed around like bootleg Springsteen LPs.

"It's Garry Shandling's Show" has the irreverent, self-reflexive sensibility of the glory days of "Saturday Night Live." This is not surprising, since the show's co-creator and producer is Alan Zweibel, one of the original "SNL" writers.

Shandling's forte is breaking down the "fourth wall" — where the performer steps out of character and brings the audience into his confidence. Critics find this to be one of the show's charms, as if Shandling had stumbled on to terra incognita.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Connie Sellecca stars in 'The Last Fling'

By Dennis Flaim

Connie Sellecca has been quite the TV romantic of late. Last season, her character on the ABC series "Hotel" fell for the St. Gregory proprietor played by James Brolin. This week, on Monday, Feb. 9, the actress checks out of "Hotel" (temporarily) to team with John Ritter in "The Last Fling."

Connie Sellecca

The ABC movie gives affairs of the heart a three's-company twist: Before her wedding to her flirtatious fiance, Gloria Franklin (Sellecca) has a last fling of her own with a charming stranger (Ritter).

There was a lot of publicity about your backstage practical jokes on "Hotel." Was there any prankstering on "The Last Fling"?

Just once. We were doing an interview on "Entertainment Tonight," and I interrupted and said, "That's it. I've had enough," and got up and walked away. John followed me, and I walked him right into a swimming pool.

The film poses a sticky romantic dilemma — do you marry the fiance you're loyal to or leave him for the stranger you've fallen for?

If it were me, I wouldn't go ahead with the marriage. I had a wedding planned once. I went to my parents and said, "This isn't going to work."

You're a born-again Christian. Doesn't portraying this character conflict with that?

It certainly does. I'm not going to tell you that every character I play is righteous.

How do you handle Christine's righteousness quotient on "Hotel"?

I don't have the power to say yea or nay to most things, but I do have to look at what kind of statement I'm making. This year I insisted that Christine and Peter not live together; the producers accepted that. I don't have that power on a movie of the week.

Rumor has it that your "Hotel" success was notoriously bad for your marriage to actor Gil Gerard.

I don't want to get into that part of it, but I'd say generally, in any relationship, those things will enter into it.

And now you're separated.

It was awful. I never, ever thought it would happen.

Whose idea was it to get the two characters on "Hotel" romantically involved?

The audience demanded that we be brought together. They want to see us get married, but I think if we did, it would be the end of the show. Where do you go from there? It's notoriously bad for ratings.

TUESDAY
CAROL AND FRIENDS

Carol Burnett stars in "A Carol Burnett Special: Carol, Carl, Whoopi and Robin." The ABC special features appearances by Carl Reiner, Whoopi Goldberg and Robin Williams. It airs Tuesday, Feb.10.

WEDNESDAY
McCALL TO THE RESCUE

McCall (Edward Woodward) comes to the aid of Control's goddaughter, Yvette (Melissa Sue Anderson, formerly of "Little House on the Prairie") on "The Equalizer." The second half of the two-part episode airs Wednesday, Feb. 11, on CBS.

ASK ME ABOUT TV

By Toni D'Amato

Where can I get the music for the series "Reilly, Ace of Spies"? It was on public television some time ago and I've been looking for it since. — C.M., New York, N.Y.

According to station WGBH in Boston, from which the mystery series originated, some of the "Reilly" music is available on the "Secret Agent File" album from Crescendo Records (ID #2166).

The "Reilly theme" is also on Crescendo, ID #GNP831. Some of the music is also contained on an album titled "Flight of the Bumblebee and Other Favorites From Old Russia."

Write to Crescendo Records at 8400 Sunset Blvd., Hollywood, CA 90069.

Do you remember a show called "Hootenanny Saturday Night"? When I was telling my kids about it, they looked at me as if I was crazy. — D.R., Minneapolis, MN.

The name of the show was actually "Hootenanny," the theme song was "Hootenanny Saturday Night." This show aired on ABC from April 1963 to September the following year. It was at the height of the popularity of folk music and was hosted by Jack Linkletter, but the show was not spared many of the controversies of the early '60s.

It aired during a time when there was tremendous pressure from both left and right wing politics in this country, and some performers were allegedly blacklisted because of their supposed left-wing positions. Because of this, other performers refused to appear on the show, including The Kingston Trio and Joan Baez.

The show was broadcast each week from a different college campus, and included such guests as the Limeliters, the Carter Family and the Smothers Brothers.

Robert Conrad

I'd like to know where I can write to Robert Conrad. I've been a fan for years and he deserves to be credited for his dedication to his work.-V.M., Anaheim, CA.

Conrad, whose recent TV movies include "Charley Hannah," "Assassin" and "The Fifth Missile," receives mail c o CBS Entertainment, 7800 Beverly Boulevard, Los Angeles CA 90036.

ESPN's Cup Coverage Is Ship-Shape

By Adam Beckerman

Thank you, ESPN. Your live coverage of America's Cup racing from Perth, Australia, has been dazzling; so good that this columnist switches to Letterman only during the commercials. Not only is this cablecast mind-boggling in its technological complexity – imagine the headaches involved in sending us boat, aerial and mast-eye feeds, plus instant replays and tack-by-tack analysis from across the globe – it is revolutionary in its implications.

Most of us have never crewed a 12-meter through rocking, 5-foot swells in the Indian Ocean. Hence, the pictures provided by the Budweiser yacht cam are truly phenomenal. The most amazing scenes of all to watch have been the grinders. For three-and-a-half hours these lineman-types tirelessly crank over-sized horizontal coffee-grinders, re-adjusting the angles of jibs and spinnakers. Halyards clanging and winches churning are new sports sounds to hear and recognize.

A great sequence came in the third race of the Challenger's series between Stars & Stripes and New Zealand. ESPN analyst Gary Jobson, a smooth-talking former tactician from Ted Turner's Cup-winning "Courageous" campaign, was waxing on the merits of the experience on Dennis Conner's crew. He noted that 70 percent of the crew had been racing with Conner since '74. Then, as if on cue, a spinnaker came down and all on board but Conner and his tactician rushed to the bow and hauled the soaking sail up from the water.

From the yacht cam we saw Kiwi Magic close a 23-second deficit and eventually pull ahead. The we saw bowman Scott Vogel scale the 90-foot mast and repair a halyard shackle that had failed. This was a scene full of guts. ESPN, you did a brilliant job.

For those who don't get cable, ABC's "Wide World of Sports" will air prerecorded interviews and highlights of the America's Cup on Sunday, Feb. 8.

• CBS airs the 37th annual NBA All-Star game, live from Seattle on Sunday, Feb. 8. While this is state-of-the-art, free-form roundball being practiced by the most coordinated humans in the world, this columnist is still partial to the super-specialists – the slam-dunk and three-point shot competitors. Last year, tiny Atlanta Hawk Spud Webb outdueled Dominique Wilkins, his buddy, teammate and defending champ, for the dunk title. It catapulted Webb to cult-jam status – and Pony now pays him millions to wear its shoes.

Cable Corral

The Movie Channel wraps up Saturday, Feb. 21, with a bang with its Western marathon. Jason Robards discovers an oasis in "The Ballad of Cable Hogue" (1970); Robert Mitchum rubs holsters with "The Good Guys and the Bad Guys" (1969); Cheyenne Injuns is a-rampagin' in "Charge at Feather River" (1953); Randolph Scott builds a railroad through "Carson City" (1952); Richard Widmark helps find an old outlaw's buried loot in "The Law and Jake Wade" (1958); and Greer Garson is "A Strange Lady in Town" (1955).

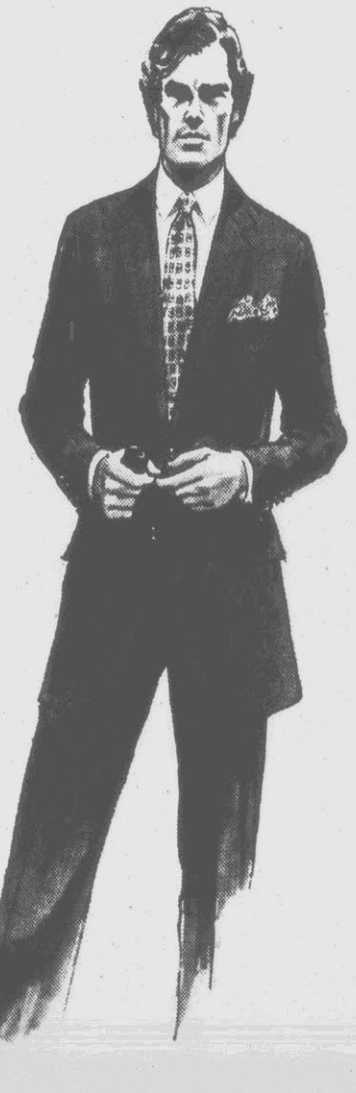
"Quality isn't something that can be promised into an article. It must be put there. If it isn't put there, the finest sales talk in the world won't act as a substitute."



At Coffman's, Quality Menswear is our game. Our strength in making a presentation to you is our market and merchandising know-how. We just don't continue to sell an item if the quality isn't there...and our experience tells us that the search for quality is never-ending. Over the years we have seen many "old friends" lose their quality definition, either because of a change in ownership, or just a drop off of personal input by management. Because of this, you often see changes in our merchandising of specific brand names. We just won't continue to buy an item where quality has become a secondary thing. Our pledge to you, our customers, is a continuing effort on your behalf to offer you the finest in quality and fashion that is available in the menswear market.

CAN YOU TRUST YOUR EYES? There are at least six differences in drawing details between top and bottom panels. How quickly can you find them? Check answers with those below.

Differences: 1. Picture is missing. 2. Table base is smaller. 3. Ham line is missing. 4. Jacket is different. 5. Paper is smaller. 6. Coverlet is missing.

- PLAY CUPID! Dan Cupid wrote the word EDEN, skipped a line, wrote the word KNEW, see right. Between these two terms, he inserted another word, often expressed on St. Valentine's Day, forming four random three-letter words reading downward. What timely word could Cupid have used?

The word LOVE will do it.

DAY, MONTH, AGE GIVE-AWAY

Ask someone to jot down secretly the day and month of his or her birth. Have the person multiply by 2, add 5, multiply by 50, add his or her age on last birthday, and add 365.

Given the total, subtract 615. Presto, you have left to right day of birth, month, age.

Example: Let's say subject was born on 7th of May, and is 16. 75 (day, month) times 2, plus 5, times 50, plus 16 (age), plus 365, is 8131. This minus 615 is 7516, l. to r., 7 May, age, 16.

Try it on yourself.

- NAME GAME! Rearrange letters in each of these words to form the name of a girl or boy: 1. Tap. 2. Sore. 3. Army. 4. Sail. 5. Gray. 6. Grade. 7. Events. No fair peeking below.

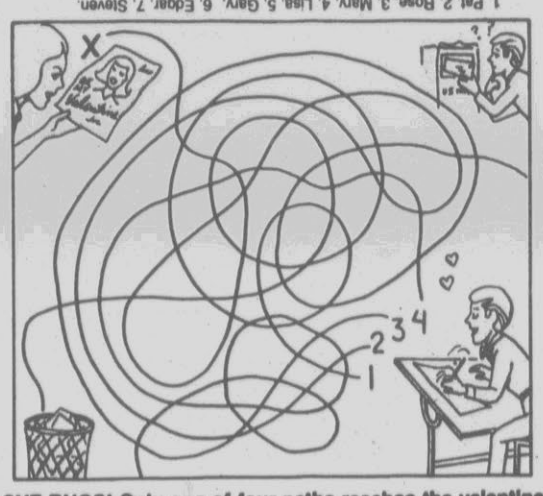
1. Pat. 2. Rose. 3. Mary. 4. Lisa. 5. Gary. 6. Edgar. 7. Steven.



LOVE BUGS! Only one of four paths reaches the valentine recipient above. Which one is for you to decide.

© 1987 King Features Syndicate, Inc. 2/8

ICE PACK! Apply colored pencils or crayons neatly to numbered segments above: 1—Red. 2—Lt. blue. 3—Yellow. 4—Lt. brown. 5—Flesh tones. 6—Lt. green. 7—Dk. brown. 8—Purple.

SPELLBINDER

SCORE 10 points for using all the letters in the word below to form two complete words:

CLEAREST

THEN score 2 points each for all words of four letters or more found among the letters.

Try to score at least 50 points.

Possible answers: Clear, rest.
