Kidnappers Say U.S. Planning Rescue Effort

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — A Moslem extremist group that holds two Americans claimed the United States is planning a rescue effort in collaboration with Israel and vowed "very cruel" retaliation.

The statement signed by the Revolutionary Justice Organization claimed units of Lebanon's Christian-led army also would participate in what it said would be an air-and-sea landing in Beirut.

Meanwhile, newspapers in London and Israel today reported behind-the-scene negotiations were under way aimed at forging a deal to free foreigners held hostage in Lebanon.

The Israeli newspaper Davar said Israel and the United States were negotiating a multination deal to free all captives held in Lebanon by pro-Syrian and pro-Iranian groups, and would involve Isreal's being asked to release 400 Arab prisoners.

The London Times reported a "wide-ranging deal" was being negotiated for three Americans and an Indian held hostage by Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, and a captured Israeli airman, in exchange for the Arab prisoners. It did not say where the supposed negotiations were taking place.

However, the report claimed the negotiations followed "months of secret contacts between the Israelis and guerrilla leaders in southern Lebanon" through the International Committee of the Red Cross.

The International Committee of the Red Cross in Geneva has denied involvement in any negotiations.

Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine on Tuesday was reported trying to strike a similar deal with Israel. It had threatened to kill the four teachers kidnapped Jan. 24 from Beirut University College at midnight Monday unless Israel released the Arab prisoners, but postponed the killings at the last minute.

Shiite Moslem Amal militia leader Nabih Berri, whose men hold the captured Israeli, proposed the exchange Saturday. Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir of Israel said his government would be willing to consider a direct request for negotiations, but that no such request was made.

Shamir refused comment Tuesday about reports the Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine had given the Red Cross a list of 400 Lebanese and Palestinians whose release it seeks.

Dominique Gross, Swiss head of the International Red Cross in Beirut, today denied that such a list had been presented to its office.

"I know nothing on that," Gross told The Associated Press. "Our headquarters in Geneva hasn't informed us of anything regarding the handover to the Red Cross of a list of prisoners.'"

Altogether, 26 foreigners, including eight Americans, are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon. Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite resumed efforts last month to negotiate the release of hostages, but disappeared Jan. 20 and unconfirmed reports have said he is being held by the kidnappers.

The Revolutionary Justice Organization, in a statement delivered Tuesday to the Beirut office of a Western news agency, claimed the United States and Israel were planning a rescue efforts.

The extremists, citing "documents in our possession," detailed a meeting it said was held Feb. 2 at the Lebanese Defense Ministry. It claimed Lebanese and U.S. intelligence officers and an Israeli security officer "debated a lightning military operation in Beirut" with European participation.

Atlanta Chosen

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta will be primping and preening like Scarlett O'Hara getting ready for a visit from Rhett Butler as it prepares for the 1988 Democratic National Convention.

Party Chairman Paul Kirk announced Tuesday that Atlanta had been chosen as the site for the four-day event the city expects will cost it $15 million.

But officials say the city will recoup its losses at least four-fold, with the estimated 35,000 visitors spending $60 million. Mayor Andrew Young predicts publicity will be worth another $10 million.

"Georgia is a success story," a jubilant Young said after the announcement.

Kirk was scheduled to sign the contract here today, giving Georgia its first national political convention.

The announcement ended an intense bidding war between Atlanta and Houston. The largest city in Texas had hoped the influx of Democrats and their money would buoy an economy reeling because of falling oil prices.

D.H. Conley Teacher Receives Outstanding Educator Award

ECU News Bureau

A first grade teacher, a high school teacher, a school librarian and an assistant county school superintendent received 1987 Outstanding Educator Awards presented by East Carolina University's Council for Teacher Education in ceremonies Tuesday night.

Receiving the awards were Barbara P. Rouse of Grimesland, an English teacher and English Department chairman at D.H. Conley High School; Joan Morrison Tolley, a first grade teacher at Gibsonville Elementary School in Guilford County; Diane D. Kester of Goldsboro, a media specialist for Wayne County schools, currently pursuing doctoral degree studies in the school of library science at the University of North Carolina-Chapel Hill, and Charles Whitney Bradham of Lillington, assistant superintendent of Harnett County schools.

Dr. John M. Howell, chancellor of ECU, was presented the CTE's Distinguished Service Award in recognition of his contributions to strengthening of teacher education during 30 years of service as an ECU administrator and professor. He will retire at the end of this month.

The second annual presentation of Outstanding Educator Awards and special recognition of Dr. Howell took place at the annual Batten-Brimley Distinguished Educator Lecture which featured an address by Dr. Ernest Boyer, president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching.

Outstanding Educator Award recipients are selected from nominations submitted by school principals and superintendents in four of the state's eight education regions and by the ECU teacher education faculty. In addition to recommendations and endorsements attesting to significant contributions and exceptional services to education, the recipients must be graduates of East Carolina University.

Ms. Rouse received her bachelor's degree in English and social studies and the master's in supervision and English. She has taught at Conley and at Ayden-Grifton high schools in Pitt County, in Johnson City, N.Y., at Josephus Daniels High, Vaiden-Whitley High, Enloe and Sanderson High Schools in Raleigh and Wake County, and at Mark Twain High in Alexandria, Va.

She helped write the basic English curriculum at Conley and at Sanderson High and the basic English program for academically gifted, college preparatory and general classes for Pitt County schools. She also designed the advanced placement English program at Conley and has served as an adviser to the N.C. Testing Commission. She is a member of the Conley Initially Certified Teacher Evaluation Team, chairman of the steering committee for Southern Association of Colleges and Schools reaccreditation and recipient of Conley and Pitt County's Teacher of the Year award.

Bradham, who received his master's degree from ECU, has been assistant superintendent of Harnett County schools since 1982. He previously was principal of Dunn High School for nine years, and has served as a teacher and coach, assistant principal and director of instruction at Dunn High School. He has served 16 years as a member of the Dunn City Council and as mayor pro tem of Dunn for the past four years. He has 30 years of service with the Harnett County school system including 24 years at Dunn High School.

Ms. Kester holds the master of education degree, the master's degree in library science and a certificate of advanced study in education from ECU. She became a media specialist at Central Union High School, Goldsboro, in 1967, and media specialist at Eastern Wayne Junior High School, Goldsboro, in 1969 serv-

Family Patterns Can Affect Schools

Dr. Ernest Boyer, who delivered the Batten-Brimley Distinguished Educator Lecture at East Carolina University Tuesday night, said that changing family patterns will help form the education patterns of the future.

He predicted that the schools of tommorrow will feature extended hours, lengthier calendars, workshops, special and optional summer programs and prekindergarten for 4 and even 3 year olds.

Boyer is president of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, based in Princeton, N.J. He also is a senior fellow of the Woodrow Wilson School of Princeton University and has served as U.S. commissioner of education.

"The school schedules will reflect family patterns, changing to adjust to a mismatch between the family and the school schedules of today," he said.

He said changes already are occurring and school-family schedules will emerge. As the latchkey problem grows, schools will be expected to offer after-hours programs.

"There will be early learning programs, extended days, and the school calendar will have to be lengthened," Boyer predicted in his address titled "Education in the Year 2000."

Noting that the 21st century is only 13 years in the future, he said it is not difficult to see "trends inevitably moving us toward certain outcomes," The most significant outcome of today's reform movement in education, he said, has been the "turnaround in attitudes towards teachers."

He said that, while reforms bring

Public Input Sought On Bonds

GRIMESLAND — About 100 residents of Grimesland were on hand Tuesday night for a discussion period focusing on an upcoming referendum on a water-sewer bond issue for the town scheduled for March 17

The commitment being sought on the part of Grimesland residents is passage of a bond issue in the amount of $700,000 on a project with an estimated cost of $2.15 million. Additional funds would come from state and federal grants.

"We have already had a public meeting on the bond issue," Mayor Ann Hudson said today, "but we added a discussion period to the regular meeting of the town board last night to give people another opportunity to ask questions and give us their viewpoints."

Factors that Mrs. Hudson feels might sway the townspeople in favor of passing the bond issue include the fact that Grimesland has no bond debt, and that a new facility is necessary to serve present needs as well as future growth. "This is the first time we have called for a bond issue on water," she said.

Several presenters were on hand to provide information to those attending. They included Roy Spainhour of the N.C. Plan and Design Office in Raleigh; Connie Price and Bob Paciocco, both of the Mid-East Commission; Grimesland town attorney Weyland Sermons; Beth Ward, principal of G.R. Whitfield School; Tim Glendon, manager and part owner of Grimesland's principal industry, Too Tough Togs, and W.M. Pate of the Pitt County Health Department.

"Everybody agreed it was a most productive and informative meeting," Mrs. Hudson said. "We hope that a number of people who have expressed uncertainty about favoring a bond issue are now convinced of our needs. At this time, it's a case of some for, some against. We know that we have a lot of work to do before the March referendum."

If Grimesland residents approve the bond issue, Mrs. Hudson said "that work on the project can begin this summer."

GUC Cites Savings On Power Costs

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

Load management operations saved the Greenville Utilities Commission $160,038 dollars in January, according to Roger Jones, director of electric systems for the utility.

Jones, reporting to GUC board members at a meeting Tuesday night, said the savings resulted because GUC's load management system was in operation during the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's monthly peak, between 8 a.m. and 9 a.m. Jan. 27.

The savings, Jones said, included $77,384 realized through operation of radio-controlled "Beat-the-Peak" switches installed on some 8,245 domestic water heaters throughout GUC's system and $76,715 through voltage adjustments.

Other savings included $2,798 from operation of an emergency generator at GUC's water plant and $3,141 from operation of an emergency generator at Procter & Gamble Paper Products Co. during the peak period.

Jones said since January 1985 load management operations have saved GUC $2.99 million in wholesale power costs.

The largest portion of the savings — 46 percent — has resulted from the operation of beat-the-peak switches on domestic water heaters, while voltage adjustments have accounted for another 43 percent of the savings, Jones said.

Eleven percent of the total savings has resulted from beat-the-peak switches installed on central air conditioning units. Operation of the water plant generator has accounted for another 2 percent of the savings over the period, while operation of the generator at P&G — which started in January 1986 — has accounted for about 1 percent of the total.

Under the load management program, customers with beat-the-peak switches installed on domestic water heaters and central air conditioning units can receive up to $40 credit on summer utility bills for participating in the load management program.

The commission's water plant and Procter & Gamble also receive credit for operating their generators during peak use periods.

In other business Tuesday, the GUC board approved the purchase of eight padmount transformers from Eastern Electric Supply Inc. for $27,920 and three larger padmount transformers from the same firm for $20,532.

Parker & Allen Construction Co. of Winterville was awarded a contract amounting to $217,905 for work to improve fire protection at various locations throughout GUC's water system, while Hendrix-Barnhill Co. of Greenville was awarded a contract totaling $238,332 to install water mains along the Belvoir Highway to the intersection of Secondary Road 1402 and a shorter extension in an area near Oakgrove Estates.

The board has scheduled a workshop meeting for Feb. 17 to review a study of the commission's computer needs and proposals to change the sewer extension policy.

New Greenville Rotary Club Plans Installations Saturday

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Twenty-five professionals will be installed in the new Rotary Club of Greenville (Morning) on Saturday, the club's chartering president said.

Dr. Harold Zallen said Rotary clubs limit men of a particular profession to only 10 percent of the membership. "We were having people that would like to come into Rotary but could not be admitted," he said. "The Noon Club was in a situation that it couldn't grow any more.

"The growth of Greenville and its leadership and professional community is one of the reasons" a new club was established, Zallen said.

The Greenville Rotary Club, organized in 1923, and the Greenville Noon Rotary, organized in 1980, are supporting the new club, he said. "They have agreed to share the territory" of Greenville and the surrounding community.

The official charter date of the new club was Jan. 12, Zallen said, and installation ceremonies and dinner will be at the Greenville Golf and Country Club at 6 p.m. Saturday The East Carolina University Chorale will provide the music for the event.

HAROLD ZALLEN

"Rotary is a service organization made up of leadership individuals — men from all areas of business and professions," Zallen said. It sponsors scholarships and exchange programs in addition to exposing youth to professional leaders through youth-oriented activities such as the Rotary Youth Leadership Conferences.

Rotary clubs also aid organizations in need, he said.

Gunman Holding Mother, Child

MANNS HARBOR, N.C. (AP) — Nineteen law enforcement officers surrounded a mobile home here today where a man held a mother and her child after another woman who escaped was shot in the face, authorities said.

"He's willing to talk, so are we," said Dare County Sheriff Bert Austin, adding that officers wouldn't move on the mobile home as long as the man was willing to talk.

The 66-year-old woman who was shot was identified as Mattie Wiles of Manteo, mother of the woman inside the mobile home, said Austin. Mrs. Wiles was reported in critical condition at Norfolk, Va., General Hospital with a gunshot wound in the left check and hand, the hospital said. She had been taken to Chesapeake General Hospital by ambulance and transferred to Norfolk by helicopter.

Mr. Wiles, whose first name wasn't available, escaped without injury and called authorities about 7:30 a.m. His daughter, Barbara Jo Smutek and her young daughter, whose age was between 2 and 5, were being held in the mobile home, Austin said.

The mobile home was located off U.S. 64-264 at Manns Harbor, a village across Croatan Sound from Roanoke Island.

Austin said a six-member tactical team from Kill Devil Hills had been called to the scene. In addition, there were 10 county deputies on the scene, one agent from the State Bureau of Investigation, a state Highway Patrol trooper and an officer from the Alcohol Law Enforcement agency.

'Platoon,' 'Room' Top Nominations

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "Platoon," the grim saga of a soldier's loss of innocence in Vietnam, and "A Room With a View," an elegant comedy of vacationing Britons in Italy, took top honors with eight nominations apiece today in the 59th Academy Awards race.

Both were nominated for best picture of 1986, along with "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters" and "The Mission."

"Aliens," "Hannah and Her Sisters" and "The Mission" scored seven nominations apiece.

Paul Newman was nominated for a seventh time as best actor for his role as a pool hustler in "The Color of Money." He has never won an acting Oscar but was given an honorary award last year.

Jazz great Dexter Gordon, playing a semi-autobiographical role in "Round Midnight," was a nominee for best actor in his film debut. Other nominees were Bob Hoskins in "Mona Lisa"; William Hurt in "Children of a Lesser God"; and James Woods in "Salvador."

Two-time winner Jane Fonda was nominated for best actress for her role as a faded actress in "The Morning After."

Another Oscar winner, Sissy Spacek, was a nominee for "Crimes of the Heart" along with first-time nominees Marlee Matlin in "Children of a Lesser God"; Kathleen Turner in "Peggy Sue Got Married"; and Sigourney Weaver in "Aliens."

Two actors from "Platoon," Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe, were named for supporting actor, along with four-time nominee Michael Caine in "Hannah and Her Sisters"; Denholm Elliott in "A Room With a View"; and Dennis Hopper in "Hoosiers."

Maggie Smith, previous winner for both lead acting and support, won another nomination as supporting actress for "A Room With a View." Others in the race are Tess Harper in "Crimes of the Heart"; Piper Laurie in "Children of a Lesser God"; Mary Elizabeth Mastrantonio in "The Color of Money"; and Dianne Wiest in "Hannah and Her Sisters."

"Blue Velvet," the sex-filled story of small-town America which won many critics' prizes, was given only one nomination by the academy voters, but it was an important one: Best direction, by David Lynch. Other director nominees were Woody Allen ("Hannah and Her Sisters"), Roland Joffe ("The Mission"), Oliver Stone ("Platoon"), James Ivory ("A Room With a View").

Nominees for best foreign-language film were "The Assault," the Netherlands; "Betty Blue," France; "The Decline of the American Empire," Canada; "My Sweet Village," Czechoslovakia; and "38," Austria.

The songs nominated for the Oscar: "The Glory of Love," from "The Karate Kid Part II"; "Life in a Looking Glass," from "That's Life"; "Mean, Green Mother from Outer Space," from "The Little Shop of Horrors"; "Somewhere Out There," from "An American Tail"; and "Take My Breath Away," from "Top Gun."

"'Crocodile' Dundee," the surprise hit of 1986, collected only one nomination, for star Paul Hogan, Ken Shadie and John Cornell in the original screenplay category. Also nominated: Woody Allen ("Hannah and Her Sisters"), Hanif Kureishi ("My Beautiful Launderette"), Oliver Stone ("Platoon"), and Oliver Stone and Richard Boyle ("Salvador").

Nominees for best screenplay adaptation were Hesper Anderson and Mark Medoff ("Children of a Lesser God"), Richard Price ("The Color of Money"), Beth Henley ("Crimes of the Heart"), Ruth Prawer Jhabvala ("A Room With a View") and Raynold Gideon and Bruce A. Evans ("Stand by Me").

The 59th nominations brought a few curiosities. Sigourney Weaver and Paul Newman were nominated for roles they have played before, she as Warrant Officer Ripley in "Alien" and he as Fast Eddie Felson in the 1961 classic "The Hustler."

Oliver Stone's three nominations represent a triumph for the director-writer who made "Salvador" on a shoestring and spent 10 years trying to find a backer for "Platoon." The film, based on his own experiences in Vietnam, was No. 1 at the box office this week.

Austria's "38" and Canada's French-language "The Decline of the American Empire" are the first nominations for those countries in the foreign-language category.

This year's 5:30 a.m. announcement of the nominations was timed to coincide with the last half-hour of the network morning shows, but viewers saw none of the glitter associated with the Academy Awards.

Aquino Ordering Troops To Fight

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Corazon Aquino today called on troops to resume military operations against Communist rebels, saying her government had done its best to negotiate an end to the 18-year-old insurgency.

Mrs. Aquino issued the call just hours after a nationally-televised ceremony in which she proclaimed the new constitution ratified and urged Filipinos to offer each other "the hand of peace."

"The truce is over," the president told about 500 soldiers at the Camp Aguinaldo military headquarters. A 60-day cease-fire between the government and rebel New People's Army expired Sunday.

"God may yet snatch us from the brink of war and set us gently down in peace," she said. "In the meantime, we are pledged to secure the persons and property of our citizens. To that end, the New Armed Forces will resume operations against the insurgents. We shall have law and order throughout our country."

Government troops backed by helicopters today searched the jungle-covered hills of Nueva Ecija province for Communist rebels after a clash Tuesday that left 18 dead and at least 20 wounded, most of them civilians caught in cross fire.

The fighting near Lupao, about 90 miles north of Manila, was the first reported since the truce expired. Press reports and regional officials said at least seven other people were killed in other "insurgency-related incidents" later Tuesday and today.

The collapse of Mrs. Aquino's peace negotiations with the Communists has been a major blow to her efforts toward national reconciliation.

"History will decide who is to blame," Mrs. Aquino told the Camp Aguinaldo soldiers. "I know that for our part, you and I did our best to explore the path of negotiations to the utmost."

The 54-year-old president promised to continue with amnesty and rehabilitation programs for "non-ideologues" among the 23,500 New People's Army rebels and seek peace talks with regional rebel leaders.

Last month the Communist-dominated National Democratic Front broke off peace talks it was conducting with the government on behalf of the NPA, and refused to extend the cease-fire. Front spokesman Antonio Zumel called on the government to withdraw the constitution as the basis for negotiations.

In today's ceremony, Mrs. Aquino signed a proclamation declaring the constitution ratified by 76 percent of the more than 22 million voters in a Feb. 2 national plebiscite. The charter confirms Mrs. Aquino as president without an election until 1992.

With her left hand resting on a Bible held by her daughter, Maria Elena Cruz, Mrs. Aquino took her presidential oath under the new constitution and then swore in her 27-member Cabinet.

"My fellow countrymen, we have a constitution," Mrs. Aquino said. "One law now channels the unswerving loyalty of all Filipinos to democracy and its ways."

Quoting from the Apostle Paul, Mrs. Aquino proclaimed: "The night is over, the day is here." She urged her 56 million fellow countrymen to "put aside the deeds of darkness" and "offer each other the hand of peace and friendship."

The new constitution clears the way for elections for a bicameral Congress on May 11 and for local and regional offices Aug. 24. Political Affairs Minister Antonio Cuenco said Mrs. Aquino would soon announce her choices for Congress and that about half the 27-member Cabinet might resign in order to run.

The charter also establishes a U.S.-style system of checks and balances and reduces the powers of the president in an effort to prevent the rise of another strongman like Ferdinand E. Marcos who was ousted as president last Feb. 25 in a civilian-backed military uprising that propelled Mrs. Aquino to power.

Mrs. Aquino will retain sole lawmaking powers until the new Congress goes into session, probably in June.

U.S. Ambassador Hit By Tear Gas

ASUNCION, Paraguay (AP) — U.S. Marines whisked U.S. Ambassador Clyde Taylor and his wife from an opposition-organized party in his honor when police fired tear gas to break it up, diplomatic sources and witnesses said.

The U.S. State Department condemned the police raid and summoned the Paraguayan ambassador in Washington to make an official protest.

The incident occurred Monday night at the home of opposition activist Josefina Sosa in suburban Trinidad during a party given in Taylor's honor by a group called Women for Democracy.

Other diplomats, political independents, some members of the Paraguyan opposition, an 85-year old retired army general and small children also were at the party. No arrests or serious injuries were reported.

Police said Tuesday they had been ordered to the residence because the gathering of the women's group had not been authorized by the government.

The rightist military government of President Alfredo Stoessner, who has held office since 1954, has accused Taylor of repeatedly interfering with the South American country's internal affairs by calling for greater democracy.

"Police threw a (tear-gas) grenade near a table where Taylor was," said one U.S. diplomatic source in Asuncion, speaking on condition of anonymity. Taylor, a 49-year-old cathe area outside Ms. Sosa's home and asked arriving guests to identify themselves. Diplomats were admitted but many others were turned away and joined a large group of onlookers who had gathered nearby.

After police tried to disperse the crowd with tear gas, many tried to flee to safety at Ms. Sosa's house.

Police then fired another tear gas grenade from an adjoining home into the backyard patio where the reception was being held. The ambassador and most of the guests left after the tear gas dissipated.

Witnesses and U.S. diplomatic sources in Asuncion said several U.S. Marines who provide protection for Taylor escorted him and his wife away.

Taylor, ambassador since late 1985, suffered temporary eye irritation from the fumes, said a U.S. Embassy spokesman.

Workshop Meeting

The Pitt County Board of Education will hold a workshop meeting at 2 p.m. Thursday in the third floor conference room of the Pitt County Office Building, 1717 W. Fifth St.

The board is set to discuss revisions to school attendance lines. According to Barry Gaskins, public information officer for the schools, persons planning to attend should be aware that seating capacity in the board room is limited.

"The central office has received a number of inquiries already about the meeting, so we anticipate a large public turnout," Gaskins said. "Space in the meeting room is limited, so groups might want to consider limiting representatives to two or three."

For further information call 830-4258.

Advisory Board

The Greenville Environmental Advisory Commission will meet on Thursday at 5:30 p.m. in the first floor conference room of the Community Building, located on the corner of Fourth and Greene streets.

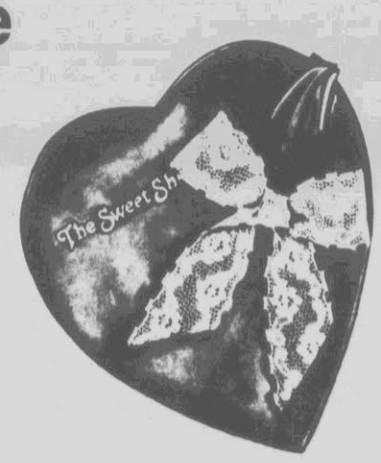

Choir Concert Set

Cedar Grove Missionary Baptist Choir of Bell Fork will be in concert Saturday at 7 p.m. at Warren Chapel Free Will Baptist Church.

Second Chance

The Pitt County Board of Education will have a second chance Thursday to act responsibly concerning attendance line revisions.

When it meets Thursday afternoon, the board should consider the two options it spurned last week without even a cursory examination.

Once it examines them, it can either accept or reject the plans on their merits or shortcomings. But board members owe it to the citizens they represent to take a close look at any proposed solution before tossing it out the window.

How do board members know the options aren't suitable if they didn't even discuss them? At its last meeting, the board set down criteria and asked for new proposals — without any knowledge of whether the existing options met these criteria.

The board's earlier action amounts to letting one group of citizens sway attention away from the big picture. Public officials have an obligation to act in the best interest of all Pitt County's citizens. Certainly discussing a proposal that might, in the long run, improve education in the county, is consistent with this responsibility.

Time is an important consideration in the issue. The new elementary school will be open in September. Student assignments should be made in early spring. That means attendance revisions of some sort must be implemented soon — unless the board proposes the brand new facility stand vacant until the 1988-89 school year. The board can't afford to waste time, and ignoring what appear to be viable options is wasting time.

The time is right for serious, system-wide attendance line revisions. By avoiding discussion on two basically sound proposals and asking for a third plan, the board seems to be delaying action on the issue in the face of public controversy.

The board made the wrong decision in arbitrarily declining to discuss proposals before it. It should make amends Thursday by formally considering the two attendance lines alternatives. Then, and only then, can the board make an informed choice about what course the schools should take when redrawing attendance lines.

Open Season

As Rep. Charlie Rose says, tobacco has become an easy target. It is also "open season".

He sees a growing public sentiment against tobacco — it is encountered almost everywhere one turns — and that, coupled with Congress' need to find additional revenues means this could be one more bad year for the tobacco grower.

A Rhode Island senator (Chafee) last week introduced legislation to double the excise tax on cigarettes to 32 cents per pack (double the total price paid by consumers prior to World War II). And a New Jersey senator (Bradley) would disallow the tax deduction for tobacco advertising for another source of revenue topping $3 billion.

Bradley and Chafee say they will promote their bills as health-promoting measures, and their proposals will also be attractive to some lawmakers as revenue sources.

Other anti-smoking measures are expected to get some attention in Congress. They include raising cigarette prices on U.S. military bases to the level of cigarette prices on the civilian market; and a move to make law guidelines that took effect last week restricting smoking in federal buildings.

Just about the only base that hasn't been touched is the clean air factor. When pedestrians or bicyclists who smoke are required to wear catalytic converters, you'll know for sure that tobacco is a thing of the past.

It won't be long, now.

An Example

Sportsmanship was the real hallmark of those final races between Stars and Stripes and Kookaburra III at Fremantle.

True, the U.S. recaptured America's Cup from Australia, and that was great, but the heartwarming reactions by skippers Dennis Conner and Iain Murray were impressive, too.

Conner leaned over backward in his tribute to the Australian crew, even to the extent of opening the door to possible alibis (which the Aussies declined).

Conner knew too well the bitter taste of defeat and did not want Murray to endure the pain he suffered at Newport.

Press accounts of the celebrations following the final race carried no mention of any recriminations and bitter feelings that might well have erupted in the wake of a shut-out victory. Rather, all shared elation that followed the matchup of challengers and the defending champions. Mutual admiration and the bonds of common love for the sport dominated all.

They set an example for participants and fans in other sports who take the fun out of their games by ugly displays of bluster, heated words and intemperate actions. We on the sidelines need civilized conduct on and off our fields of sport.

'Eggs Bentsen' Might Prompt Scrutiny

WASHINGTON — The recipe, so it was said, called for a layer of scrambled eggs, topped by three strips of bacon, topped by more scrambled eggs. The lobbyists were expected to eat the eggs. One day they could expect to bring home some bacon.

This was Eggs Bentsen, named for the senior senator from Texas, who briefly proposed to sell his culinary concoction to 40 friends who would pay $10,000 a year for the privilege of having breakfast with him once a month. The distinguished host, incidentally, is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee.

The genial gentleman from Texas was nothing if not obliging. If more than 40 customers signed up, he would hold two breakfasts a month. The check could be paid in installments — $5,000 now, $5,000 by June 1. The guests would talk about "matters of trade and taxation and anything else anyone wants to raise." He would be relying upon his guests for advice and assistance. The proceeds would go into a fund for his re-election in 1988.

For a couple of days it looked as if Bentsen might have to hire a hostess to seat the crowd, but then the story of his remarkable invitation got out. Suddenly it was no fun any more. The senator penitently disbanded his breakfast club, returned the payments, and confessed that "when I make a mistake, it's a doozy."

Well, ex malis moribus, and all that. Maybe good laws will spring from bad practices. Maybe. It is possible — barely possible — that public reaction to Eggs Bentsen may provoke some serious action on the whole business of financing congressional elections. If I sound pessimistic it's because I am pessimistic. Republican senators John Chafee of Rhode Island and William Roth of Delaware expect to continue their $5,000 clubs. Majority Leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia reportedly will carry on his little intimate society. Lloyd Bentsen's mistake was not a mistake in kind, but in degree. It was the 10 grand that done him in. They do things big in Texas.

I know the senator as a fine, decent and honorable man. Why did he get himself in this embarrassing mess? It is because the astronomical costs of a senatorial campaign drive even the best men to acts of desperation. The same unhealthy situation obtains in the House. Members no sooner take their seats than they must begin worrying about financing their next campaign. Money is the mother's milk of politics. Money buys TV spots and newspaper ads; money buys direct-mail solicitations; money buys staff and money pays the rent; and except for those fortunate members who have no opposition at the polls, money becomes an obsession.

What do the big-money boys buy? Not eggs, surely. They buy access. It is as simple as that. The system may have apparent aspects of prostitution or of bribery, but the appearance is deceptive. If anyone were to offer Lloyd Bentsen $10,000 to vote for a specific tariff on textiles, Bentsen would throw the bum out. Bentsen's vote is not for sale. But his ear is for rent.

Nobody likes the situation. For members the incessant hunt for campaign contributions is stultifying and degrading. For the big donors, the constant dunning gets expensive. The voting public reads of breakfast clubs and political action committees and its cynicism deepens.

A hundred proposals for election reform have been advanced. Last August the Senate voted 69-30 for a bill sponsored by David Boren of Oklahoma. The measure would have imposed tight ceilings on the sums that political action committees (PACs) could contribute to individual candidates. The Senate then voted 58-42 for an amendment sponsored by Rudy Boschwitz of Minnesota. His bill would have limited contributions to political parties. Nothing came of either proposal.

Public Forum

To the editor:

Your editorial of Feb. 5 calling the Pitt County Board of Education's plan for a 12-member board, with two representatives from each of six districts a "wrong decision" is illogical. A person who is "elected at large" has no magical wisdom conferred on him by virtue of the method. Nor is a person elected by his or her particular district automatically narrow-minded and unconcerned about the welfare of the whole county. The root problem for most opposition to the district approach is very simple; there are those who feel the school system would go to hell in a handbasket if a few blacks and Republicans got elected. And, correctly, they believe the minority party and the minority race have a better shot at being elected directly by their friends and neighbors in the districts where they live.

Is this proposed plan much different than the way the Congress is elected? Do you really think a board of 12 members is so huge as to make it impossible to do business?

The democratic process has always been a bit cumbersome and tedious. All that bother could be eliminated by electing one little dictator.

Intellectual honesty suggests that the board of education made a very good decision and should stick with it!

Bill Byrd
Route 3, Greenville

To the editor:

Your editorial of Feb. 6 ("Error Committed") once again displays a disturbing distortion of facts and an obvious support of unfeasible alternative school attendance lines proposals. The editor chastises school board members for not studying these alternatives when it is obvious that the editor himself has not made the effort to study them.

The editor states: "It's not sound policy to let 250 people alter judgment on an issue that affects roughly 95,000." First, let me assure the editor that the several hundred people who took the time and effort to attend the school board meetings and who objected to the present/ alternative attendance lines proposals actually represent the emotions of thousands of people. These citizens are not a bunch of "rabble-rousers" who get upset at every issue that comes along but rather hard-working, tax-paying parents who are tremendously concerned about the future education of their children.

Secondly, the editor implies that the vast majority of persons in Greenville and Pitt County are in favor of the tabled proposals. If this is true, then why is it that not one single person of the 95,000 people in this county has spoken in support of these proposals at either of the public hearings regarding these issues? In fact, there have been no letter in the "Public Forum" in support of these proposals — all have been opposed. Perhaps it is only in the editor's imagination that this support exists. If the editor feels that citizens not be heard by the school board, is he then in favor of closed meetings where public views are not even considered?

In conclusion, I urge the editor to study the issues in detail before sharpening his pencil to write again. The future of our children and our county is at stake.

William A. Burke
Greenville

To the editor:

An "error" certainly was "committed," your editorial of Feb. 6. It was totally inaccurate. Naturally, no one person takes credit for that editorial, but it was "written by the staff and reflects the opinion of the newspaper." The "newspaper" was obviously not present at the school board meeting or, if there, scrupulously avoided listening to any of the "250 vocal citizens" it credits with bullying the school board into putting aside the two alternative plans for school attendance lines.

The speakers and most of the audience at the board meeting were there to protest the ridiculously unfair first proposal presented by Superintendent West for public scrutiny during the Christmas holiday period. The two alternatives (seemingly deemed too costly by West) were presented less than a week before the meeting, but had been viewed by members of the board and by many in the audience. Problems mentioned in connection with these options were that they allegedly require 18 to 24 months to implement and that allegedly they require up to four million dollars in additional funding. Both plans were clearly more fair than the first, but that price tag and the delay in implementation were questioned.

The school board took a very positive stand. Mr. Grooms' motion, as passed by the board, simply requires that any proposal for redrawing attendance lines be fair and treat each and every school in Pitt County equally so that every child has an opportunity for quality education.

I am very grateful to our school board for demanding that all of our children be treated fairly and that our school system develop long term plans which strive for equal opportunity. Your condemnation of the school board is as ludicrous as the idea that your anonymous opinions speak for "95,000" Pitt County citizens.

Paul Hartley

Strength For Today

The Roman city of Pompeii was destroyed in a matter of minutes by a great eruption of the volcano Vesuvius in A.D. 79. About 100 years ago when the ruins were freed from the great blanket of ash and lava which had covered them, people were found in a variety of postures.

Most crouched in honor at the impending disaster. But one figure, a Roman soldier, was found standing at the city gate where he had been placed by his officer. He was at attention and his spear was firmly in his grasp. While others fled as destruction poured down upon the city, the soldier stood as he had been ordered, doing his duty until the last.

"Put on the whole armor of God," said St. Paul, "that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day and having done so to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth and wearing the breastplate of righteousness."

Congressmen Make Oddball Employees: They Fight Raises

WASHINGTON (AP) — Most of the 535 men and women who are members of Congress have one quality which sets them apart from most other American employees: The thought of passively accepting a pay raise without putting up a fight sets them shuddering with horror.

It has been so throughout history and the reason has always been the same. The voters, it is feared, might not like the idea of a member of Congress voting to improve his economic position from the public treasury.

In 1816, when the compensation of members of the House and Senate was $6 a day, the passage of a bill to raise that to $1,500 a session caused such an uproar that the pay-increase legislation had to be repealed.

In a Capitol Hill compromise, the law makers got a more modest pay boost — $8 a day.

One hundred and seventy-one years later, pay raises for senators and House members still cause congressional jitters, even when they are also tied to raises for federal judges and high ranking federal bureaucrats.

And while skeptics suspect there are few members of Congress actually anxious to decline a pay raise, there are also very few ready to vote for one, or who fail to proclaim their anxiety to vote against one.

So the scene was set for a round of high-decible griping last week when a 15.6 percent, $12,100 pay raise went into effect automatically because efforts to schedule a House vote on a resolution of disapproval succeeded only after the automatic deadline had come and gone.

The failure to act in a timely fashion apparently resulted in moving senators and House members from a $77,400 pay plateau to a new $89,500 pay peak.

The entire federal executive pay structure had fallen well below comparable compensation in the private sector due in large part to the historic reluctance of members of Congress to vote to raise congressional pay for fear of arousing voter wrath in the process.

An outside compensation commission concerned with making top-level federal pay comparable to executive compensation in the private sector had originally recommended a top $135,000 pay hike.

That proposal reached Capitol Hill after being pared down by President Reagan.

The Senate voted overwhelmingly to disapprove the raise. Only six senators went on record as favoring the pay boost while 88 voted no.

The House followed suit, but only after the deadline for action had passed. Legislative attempts still will be made to rescind the pay raise. The outcome is in doubt.

But the rhetorical record has been made.

And when Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., asked Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., whether he would advise him to bet on the possibility of the House leadership permitting a vote on a resolution of disapproval before the expiration of the deadline, he was rewarded with a fog of words, and a childhood memory.

"I do not wager," Byrd said. "I learned when I was growing up that I did not have money to throw away. Nickels came pretty hard.

"If I was able to get a bottle of pop a year I was pretty lucky," he recalled.

"An ice cream cone cost five cents. I could go to the store for the lady next door and she would give me a nickel, and I recall on one occasion buying a cone of ice cream, talking to someone, and the cone tipped, the ice cream dropped on the ground, and I made up my mind then and there that I would eat all of the ice cream I could eat if I lived to be a man and had a few nickels to spare."

"So I do not wager," said the majority leader. "Why do I not wager? Because I might lose my nickels.

And addressing Helms, and returning, more or less, to the pay raise issue, Byrd continued:

"So my suggestion to the distinguished senator would be that he not wager on this matter. He may not win any money, but he will certainly save his own."

As events unfolded it was good advice.

The pay raise did have its defenders.

They contended that government service should be adequately rewarded in order to provide an incentive for the the best and brightest of Americans to seek government careers.

And some said the voters might not object to that.

Profit-Making Tax Code Change Being Prepared

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill that could bring North Carolina a windfall by bringing the state's income tax code in line with the revised federal law is being prepared for introduction in the General Assembly.

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, said Tuesday the proposal will be included in a package of bills he and Sen. A.D. Guy, D-Onslow, will file for the Revenue Laws Study Commission.

Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, newly named chairman of the House Finance Committee, said there probably would be little opposition to making the changes. "There probably is a general feeling that we ought to do that." The Department of Revenue and legislative analysts have predicted that updating North Carolina tax law would create a windfall of $20 million to $25 million.

Gov. Jim Martin has said he would propose that the money be put into the state budget's general fund for education and other programs.

But Martin said last week some business analysts had predicted the windfall would be much higher than originally thought — perhaps as much as $50 million to $70 million.

If that happens, Martin said, he will recommend a tax cut — possibly a further reduction of the intangibles and inventory taxes, which the Legislature reduced in 1985.

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Tuesday any windfall should be used for capital improvements only, because the one-time nature of the fund could otherwise saddle the state with debt.

The bill would update the references to the Internal Revenue Code used for income tax purposes from Jan. 1, 1986, to Jan. 1, 1987, and delete or rewrite other income tax provisions that must be changed if the reference date is changed.

In other legislative action:

The House approved a resolution scheduling Martin's State of the State speech for next Monday at 7:30 p.m. The Senate already has approved a similar resolution.

The General Assembly got off to a relatively slow start as committees appointed in the first two days had few bills to consider.

Ward Purrington, Martin's legislative liaison, said the governor's major initiatives would not be filed until Martin's State of the State address.

Martin's spending plan, filed for introduction Monday, awaited action by joint committees whose House members were appointed Tuesday. But no meetings were scheduled for today.

"I would expect those committees to begin meeting this week," said Jordan, but he added that legislators "will be judged more by some of the tough decisions we make that don't cost money than we will by those that do."

Rep. Dan Lilley, D-Lenoir, filed a bill to transfer the responsibility for issuing bingo licenses and establishing audit procedures for bingo accounts from the Department of Revenue to the Department of Justice, headed by the attorney general.

A memo Lilley attached to the bill said the attorney general's office was better suited than the Department of Revenue to answer questions about enforcement of bingo laws.

A similar bill was defeated in 1985, primarily because of objections from the attorney general's office, which complained it would get no additional funding for taking on the new task. The new bill also offers no additional money to the attorney general, noting that the Department of Revenue got none when it was assigned bingo licensing.

Rep. H.M. "Mickey" Michaux, D-Durham, said he has not abandoned efforts to reduce the threshold for victory in primary elections.

Michaux tried unsuccessfully last session to have candidates avoid second primaries by getting 40 percent of the vote instead of the current 50 percent. Supporters maintain the current system discriminates against minorities, who often receive a plurality in multi-candidate races but fall short of a majority in runoffs.

Michaux said he might try to run similar efforts through the House Committee on Courts and the Administration of Justice, which he chairs.

While bound copies of Martin's proposed 1987-89 state budget were delivered to legislative offices, Democrats prepared to carefully scrutinize every line in the five volumes.

Jordan said Martin's revenue growth projections were somewhat higher than those traditionally arrived at by the Advisory Budget Commission.

"Normally, what we do early on or what the governors normally do and ABC normally does is come in with a conservative estimate," Jordan said. "This time, he has come in with what I call a liberal estimate."

In addition, the budget fails to compensate for a $30 million to $50 million shortfall in health insurance costs or a $20 million shortfall for sewer and water projects, he said.

"You have a balloon that is blown up real tight and in order to put some of the other items in there without bursting the balloon you have to pull something out," Jordan said. "So the dilemma now is what to pull out."

Martin, Jordan and House Speaker Liston Ramsey have been meeting on proposed emergency measures to relieve prison crowding and a package "will be forthcoming very shortly," a correction official said Tuesday.

"Those discussions have not been completed as of right now," said Ben Irons, executive administrative assistant for the Department of Correction.

Irons declined to say what precipitated the high-level conference on the package, which would be a reply to lawsuits filed against the state because of crowded prisons. But he said officials have agreed to put a cap of 18,000 on the state's prison population.

Meanwhile, Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, said a study commission she chaired was still working on non-emergency bills to address prison problems. She said it was up to the governor to request emergency funds to address the lawsuit.

Senate Minority Leader Bill Redman, R-Iredell, said a decision on the issue was expected at a meeting scheduled for Thursday.

Sen. Helen Marvin, D-Gaston, filed a bill that would clarify a 1986 law permitting officials to dock the paychecks of parents who fall behind in child support payments.

The bill would make clear that when a parent is delinquent by an amount equal to or above his required monthly payment, his paycheck can be garnished — even if he continues to make payments.

"There was some misunderstanding on the part of some lawyers and judges as to whether we could do that," Ms. Marvin said.

Another provision allows delinquent parents to voluntarily get child support payments withheld from their wages. "I have been told that a lot of people are doing that," Ms. Marvin said. "It's easier that way."

House Panels Get New Leaders

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Some of the state House's most influential committees are getting new leaders, but the changes probably will not bring a noticeable philosophical shift, lawmakers say.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey continued to announce his appointments Tuesday, the second day of the 1987 General Assembly. He said he would complete the process today. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who presides over the Senate, announced that chamber's committee assignments Monday.

Veteran Rep. George Miller, D-Durham, will be chairman of the tax-writing House Finance Committee, Ramsey said. Miller, a nine-term representative, has spent the last six years as chairman of the Judiciary I Committee.

Miller's departure means all four House judiciary committees will get new leaders. Ramsey named Rep. Richard Wright, D-Columbus, chairman of Judiciary II last year, as Miller's Judiciary I successor.

Ramsey tapped three young attorneys, all beginning their fourth terms, to fill vacant chairmanships of the remaining judiciary panels: Reps. Dan Blue, D-Wake (Judiciary II); Joe Hackney, D-Orange (Judiciary III); and Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, (Judiciary IV).

Also, Ramsey said his top lieutenants, Billy Watkins, D-Granville, and Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, will continue as co-chairmen of the House Appropriations Committee.

Watkins will chair the Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee, which handles new expenditures, and Etheridge the Appropriations Base Budget Committee, which oversees funding of continuing programs.

Miller, an attorney widely respected for his intellect and organizational skills, replaces former Finance chairman Dwight Quinn, D-Cabarrus, who retired last year.

Miller was reluctant to speculate on how the finance panel might change under his leadership, saying all bills sent there would receive fair consideration.

In 1983, the House and Senate finance committees were instrumental in the enactment of a tax-increase package to keep the state budget balanced. The panels also were a hotbed of activity in 1985, as Gov. Jim Martin pushed for major tax cuts.

This year, neither Martin nor the legislative leadership has called for major tax legislation. However, the finance panels will consider proposals to bring the state tax code in line with changes made on the federal level in 1986.

Analysts have predicted that such revisions would add $20 million to $25 million to state coffers. Gov. Jim Martin has said he would seek a tax cut if the windfall is much higher.

"I think it's probably too early to pass judgment on that," Miller said, adding that it probably would take a month or more to determine the size of the windfall.

Wright, a seven-term lawmaker, generally is regarded as the most conservative of the four judiciary chairmen. He said the new chairmen should not alter the ideological mixture of recent sessions.

He said Hackney, 41, who has championed stricter environmental protection laws, probably will inherit Miller's label as the most liberal judiciary chairman. The views of Blue, 37, are similar to the moderately liberal Rep. Paul Pulley, D-Durham, the former Judiciary IV chairman who didn't seek re-election, Wright said.

Wicker, 34, who has expressed interest in running for attorney general, is a moderate conservative as was former Rep. Martin Lancaster, D-Wayne, who chaired the Judiciary III committee last year before his election to Congress, Wright said.

"I just don't see any radical ... changes taking place" in the actions of the judiciary panels, Wicker said.

An issue that might go before one or more of the committees is "tort reform" — proposals to change the civil-justice system under which accident victims collect damages.

The insurance industry, the medical profession and businesses have called for limits on certain types of awards, such as punitive damages and damages for pain and suffering.

But all four of the judiciary chairmen said they opposed such change. "It would have rough going in my committee," said Wright, calling tort reform "anti-consumer."

Blue said supporters had failed to prove that tort changes would lower insurance premiums. "We want insurance to be available to everyone in this state and we want it affordable," he said. "That means the rates should go down...."

Other House committees that will have new leadership this year are: Base Budget subcommittee on General Government (Wendell Murphy, D-Duplin); Base Budget on Human Resources (Sidney Locks, D-Robeson); Expansion Budget on Education (Martin Nesbitt, D-Buncombe); Constitutional Amendments (Harry Payne, D-New Hanover); and Courts and Administraion of Justice (Mickey Michaux, D-Durham).

Also, Economic Growth (Al Lineberry, D-Guilford); Education (Aaron Fussell, D-Wake); Governmental Ethics (Jo Graham Foster, D-Mecklenburg); Higher Eduction (Gordon Greenwood, D-Buncombe); Highway Safety (Herman Gist, D-Guilford); and Housing (Milton Fitch, D-Wilson).

Trio Seeks GOP Post For Senate

RALEIGH (AP) — More than an hour in a closed caucus brought Republicans no closer to choosing a Senate minority leader, but they thrashed out some plans for the coming session.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, who will give up his seat and the position of minority leader when he joins the state Utilities Commission, said a final vote was scheduled for 6 p.m. Monday night. Howard Bryan, Statesville mayor pro tem, has been nominated for Redman's Senate seat.

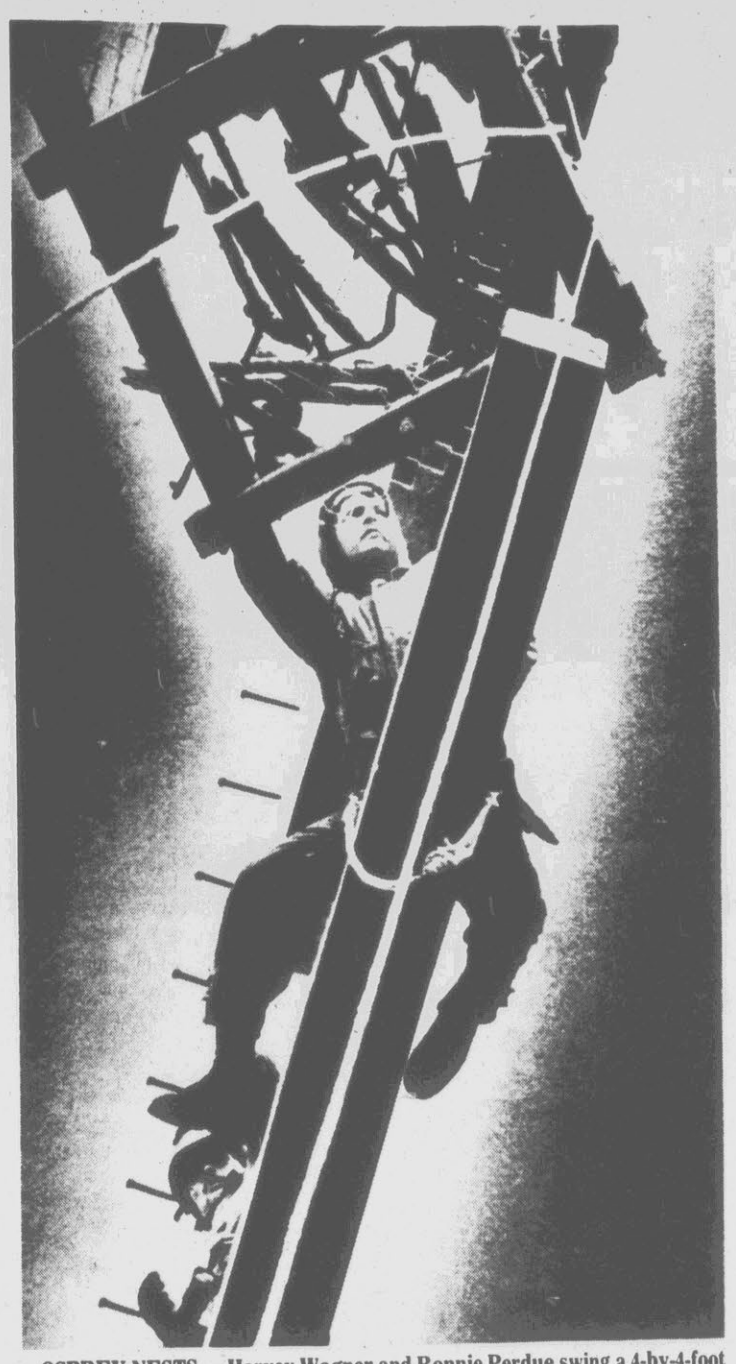

Sens. Paul Smith, R-Rowan, and Don Kincaid, R-Caldwell, each claimed the support of five of the Senate's 10 Republicans after the meeting. But Sen. Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, said there was no way of knowing how the vote would go.

"I'm still interested in the job," Cobb said. "I've got a lot of experience. I think I have the parliamentary knowledge to protect the governor."

Smith, now the minority whip, said Sen. Jim McDuffie, R-Mecklenburg, would likely support Cobb on the first ballot, then switch to Smith. Sen. Austin Allran, R-Catawba, a freshman who was in the House last session, also might be a swing vote, Smith said.

Kincaid said he had five sure votes "and one leaning," but declined to say who was on the fence. Like Cobb, Kincaid emphasized his experience in seeking the post.

"I get along with Democrats, but at the same time they know I'm a Republican," he said.

State Forecasts Economic Rebound

RALEIGH (AP) — Industrial production in North Carolina should rebound this year from a two-year lag, a state economic forecast indicates.

The report by the N.C. Office of Budget and Management released last week is slightly more optimistic than other reports produced by economists at the state's universities and banks. But all the reports indicate the robust growth of the post-recession years has tapered off in North Carolina.

Industrial production — a measure of the quantity of output by the state's manufacturers — will increase 3.8 percent this year and then 4.2 percent in 1988, the state government report predicts. That growth rate compares with a 2.1 percent increase in 1986 and a 0.9 percent rise in 1985.

The report also forecast that the number of jobs created in the state will grow more slowly through the remainder of the decade. By 1989, non-farm employment will total 2.9 million, up 207,000 jobs from last year.

The forecast produced by the state economists is used by the General Assembly to estimate tax revenues and, in turn, the size of the state government budget.

Lawmakers also use a less-detailed forecast produced by the Legislature's fiscal research division. That report is due out this spring, but one of its principal authors expects it to be less optimistic than the report by the Office of Budget and Management. The forecasts will have differing views on the impact of the trade deficit on the state's economy, said David F. Crotts, a senior fiscal analyst for the General Assembly.

"We're generally in the same ballpark as the governor's office," Crotts told The News and Observer of Raleigh.

"Though the value of the dollar has fallen 40 percent, trade (in North Carolina) has not improved a whole lot in response," he said.

"It's been much slower than expected and as a result we do not want to be too optimistic yet."

According to the Office of Budget and Management report, many of the state's industries will benefit this year from the fall of the dollar's value and from continual upgrading in manufacturing plants.

Textile mills, for example, are expected to increase production 5.6 percent this year after only a 2.4 percent increase last year. However, in 1988 the rate of growth again will level off.

In non-electrical machinery, which includes computers, industrial output will jump 9.7 percent this year, compared with only a 2.6 percent increase last year. But in 1988 that growth will also taper off.

T. Michael Kiltie, an economist with the budget office, attributed the leveling off to industries being able to capitalize on the value of the dollar and improving efficiency in the plants.

"We'll have both factors working for us this year," he said. "But once that recovery is factored in, 1988 will return" to slower growth.

Rules May Cause Labor Squeeze

By The Associated Press

New federal immigration laws could cause a labor squeeze that will drive up labor costs and eventually affect prices in the marketplace, state agricultural officials say.

But advocates for migrant farm workers say the new laws will probably be ignored because there are not enough immigration agents to enforce them.

Changes in the laws, effective in May, are aimed at cutting the flow of illegal aliens into this country by requiring documentation from workers. Estimates of the percentage of migrant workers who are illegally in this country run as high as 60 percent.

"I suspect North Carolina will be among the nation's top five states in terms of the act's impact on agriculture," said Stephen Sutter, an extension economist at North Carolina State University. "Agriculture is a business of narrow margins, of pennies per bushel and pound. This law could tip the scales in some growers' minds."

North Carolina farmers hire an estimated 30,000 to 50,000 migrant workers to help harvest tobacco, cucumbers, bell peppers, sweet potatoes and other crops. But Sutter said the new laws could force some farmers to plant corn, soybeans and wheat rather than vegetables.

"Crop farmers are going to reconsider whether they plant," Sutter said. "It's certainly not going to be business as usual anymore."

For the first time, the law forbids employers from knowingly hiring illegal aliens, and it establishes fines for first-time offenders and prison sentences for repeat offenders. It provides for a warning period to run through June 1, 1988.

Observers say that enforcement could be difficult for the Immigration and Naturalization Service, which already is strained for manpower.

Chuck Eppinette, the director of Farmworkers Legal Services of North Carolina, said, "It's not going to have a great effect on how things have been. I just don't see the INS doing anything about it."

State Scholarship Plan Generates Hard Feelings

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — A state-funded scholarship program that will pay students up to $20,000 to major in education has generated hard feelings among officials at colleges that have been left out of the program.

The Teaching Fellows Program will lend students $5,000 a year for four years if they major in education at one of nine North Carolina universities. If the student teaches four years in the state's public school system, the total loan is forgiven.

But officials at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and UNC-Asheville — two of the six state universities left out of the program — say they stand to lose talented students.

The scholarship program was approved by the General Assembly last year as a way of recruiting more students into teaching. Between 300 and 500 scholarships, costing between $6 million and $10 million, will be awarded.

Also omitted from the program are Elizabeth City State University, Fayetteville State University, Pembroke State University and Winston-Salem State University.

"I feel confident that we'll lose some very talented students," Frank Brown, dean of the School of Education at UNC-CH, said Monday. "We'll have students who would have wanted to attend Chapel Hill but will not because they cannot refuse a $20,000 scholarship."

Prayers

LONDON (AP) — North Carolina evangelist Billy Graham has sent a message to the Archbishop of Canterbury saying "many thousands of American Christians" are praying for missing hostage negotiator Terry Waite, the Church of England said today.

In a telegram to the Most Rev. Robert Runcie, Graham said Waite's "sacrificial efforts in the face of great difficulty and danger have become a symbol of compassion and courage throughout the world."

Waite, Runcie's personal envoy, was last seen Jan. 20 when he left his hotel in Moslem west Beirut, presumably to meet with the kidnappers of two Americans.

Various reports have said Waite is being held against his will, but the church has said it cannot confirm those reports or other reports that he has been seen in west Beirut or in east Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

AIDS Birth

RALEIGH (AP) — A women's prison inmate from Mecklenburg County, who has tested positive for the AIDS virus, gave birth to a boy at a Raleigh hospital last week.

"I can tell you that she (the inmate) does not have AIDS at this time," said Parker Eales, director of nursing at Central Prison and a certified infection control practitioner.

It isn't known yet whether the baby is infected with the deadly virus. But Eales said that, according to a study from the Center for Disease Control, 65 percent of infants born to infected mothers had blood test evidence, or clinical evidence, of infection several months after birth.

The mother, in her 20s, was placed in the custody of the Women's Correctional Center in Raleigh as a "safekeeper" until she is sentenced in court.

The woman was pregnant when she was transferred to Raleigh in January. She was taken directly to a Raleigh hospital.

Topless Suit

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Topless dancing has returned to Hay Street in the newly rebuilt Rick's Lounge, but the city is taking the nightclub's owners to court on the grounds that topless dancing is no longer allowed in the area.

The City of Fayetteville, which has been trying to rid downtown Hay Street of its adult bookstores and topless nightclubs, filed suitin Cumberland County Superior Court, seeking an injunction to stop topless dancing at the lounge's two locations.

The nightclub reopened at two Hay Street locations after a fire last August destroyed the original building, but the city said local ordinances barred the clubs from offering topless dancers in the new buildings.

Earnings

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — RJR Nabisco, Inc., citing progress in its tobacco and food and beverage businesses, has reported record financial results for 1986.

Net earnings from continuing operations were $1.08 billion, up 11 percent from $976 million in 1985. Net earnings from continuing operations per share were $3.90, up 40 cents from 1985, the company said Tuesday.

Consolidated net sales rose 29 percent in 1986 to $15.98 billion, compared to 1985 sales of $12.39 billion. Consolidated earnings from continuing operations were $2.48 billion, up 19 percent from $2.08 billion in 1985. Some of the increase reflects the full-year inclusion of Nabisco Brands in RJR Nabisco's results for 1986, the company said.

Junket

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., will make a six-day fact-finding trip to Central America during Congress' February recess, a Sanford aide said Tuesday.

Tom Lawton said Sanford would travel Feb. 11-16 to Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica to collect opinions and information. Sanford is a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and its subcommittee on Western Hemisphere affairs.

He will meet with the heads of state and other government officials in each country, and with a cross section of leaders in religion, business and industry, Lawton said.

Trade Policy

ARCHDALE, N.C. (AP) — Rep. David Price, D-N.C., says trade policy is in for a restructuring this year after being rejected by President Reagan a year ago.

The 4th District freshman said he believes trade bills will fare better this year, although Reagan is still expected to oppose measures like the Textiles and Apparel Act of 1986.

He said textile supporters are more confident after the congressional override of the president's veto on the Clean Water Act.

"With the increased majority (of Democrats) in the House and control of the Senate, I think we have the votes to override a veto," Price said. "I think we could have overridden the veto last year if we had had this kind of strength.

Sanford Studies Relocation Of Lighthouse

NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — Sen. Terry Sanford is considering a proposal to move the Cape Hatteras Lighthouse farther inland away from encroaching ocean waves, an aide says.

John Blackburn, a Sanford legislative assistant, said that he has been gathering information on alteratives for saving the historic lighthouse, which the National Park Service wants to protect with a $5.6 million seawall.

"We certainly feel the lighthouse should be protected," Blackburn said, "but we want to make sure that any project is going to be the best way to do that and that money is spent properly."

Sanford's review was ignited in part by lobbying from the Move the Lighthouse Committee, an affiliation of scientists, engineers and naturalists who say building the steel-and-concrete revetment wall is too expensive and would doom the lighthouse.

Instead of building the wall, the committee has proposed moving the lighthouse along a short railway to a site about half a mile west and farther inland from its present location.

"This is an argument that has some merit," Blackburn told The Virginian-Pilot and The Ledger-Star in Norfolk, Va.

The 116-year-old lighthouse was once more than 1,000 feet from the ocean, but in recent years the pounding surf has come within 70 feet of the lighthouse base.

The revetment wall plan, which has been formally adopted by the National Park Service, would be handled by the Army Corps of Engineers beginning next fall if the plan proceeds as scheduled. The wall is designed to be 23 feet high and 36 feet thick at its base.

The Corps design envisions the lighthouse and its wall becoming a 3.3-acre island as the shoreline recedes.

But some of the state's leading coastal scientists, including Duke University marine geologist Orrin Pilkey, call the plan impractical. They contend that the wall would accelerate erosion around the famous landmark.

Minister Indicted In Fraud

WILMINGTON (AP) — A former Wilmington minister and used car salesman who once chaired the city's Minority Affairs Committee has been arrested in Washington on charges of bank and mail fraud, federal investigators say.

The Rev. Carl R. Lee, 35, and six others were indicted Tuesday on 46 counts involving illegal transactions at four North Carolina banks, Assistant U.S. Attorney Peter Kellen told the The Morning Star in Wilmington.

The sealed indictments were opened after Lee's arrest Tuesday night.

Kellen said others indicted with Lee included a former Wachovia Bank and Trust Co. executive in Wilmington and a former bank officer and head teller of Peoples Federal Savings and Loan in Wilmington, Kellen said. Other banks involved include Peoples Bank and Trust in Rocky Mount and a branch of NCNB National Bank.

The names of others indicted were disclosed, but it was unclear how many charges had been lodged against each of them. Keller said only Lee was charged in all 46 counts of the indictment.

A former pastor of the First Cosmopolitan Baptist Church in Wilmington, Lee was chairman of Wilmington's 16-member Minority Affairs Committee in 1984.

Hymnals Revised

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — A United Methodist hymnal committee has revised some songs to eliminate gender references, but not without debate over whether the changes would be accepted by church's 9.5 million members.

The 25-member panel, which is scheduled to wrap up a three-day meeting today, also voted to soften an anti-militarist statement made last year.

The committee on Tuesday voted to revise the classic Easter hymn, Christ the Lord is Risen Today, to read "all on earth and angels say" in place of "sons of men and angels say."

"Changing this one would be a mistake," Randy Smith, a Houston layman, told his colleagues on the committee. "This is one that's in the memory bank. It's one people know well."

Smith was outnumbered by committee members who felt the hymn's reference left women out of the picture.

"We can't say 'sons of men,' " retorted the Rev. Beryl Ingram-Ward of Bellevue, Wash. "That's so blatantly exclusive."

The denomination's General Conference must approve of the changes next year for the New Methodist Hymnal to be published in 1989. The panel is working to trim down the list of hymns that will find a place in the 650-song hymnal. The list exceeds 700 right now, said Editor Carlton Young.

Other references that were revised included "mankind" and "man." However, the panel retained masculine imagery for God such as "King" and "Father" in traditional hymns.

Committee member Roger Deschner, a professor at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, says church members will learn to accept the revised version of the hymn Christ the Lord.

"It may be irritable to some but it's the Easter hymn and it will pass into usage," said Deschner.

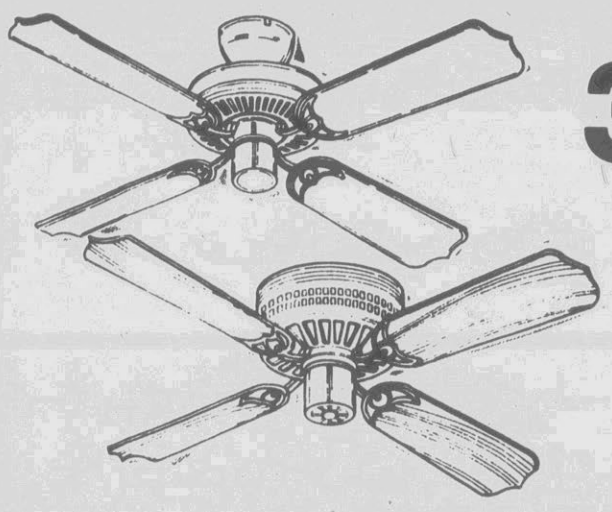

The hymn is written by 18th century poet Charles Wesley, brother of Methodist founder John Wesley.

The committee examined about 50 Wesley hymns Tuesday for possible inclusion in the new hymnal.

Organizers Expect Thousands For N.C. Farm Rally Saturday

ELIZABETH CITY, N.C. (AP) — Picking up a telephone — one of 28 linking his home with farmers across the nation — Gene Meads calmly ordered 30,000 dinner rolls.

"But wait a minute — we don't need that many because we'll have hush puppies too," the 48-year-old businessman said. "Let's just get 10,000."

The rest of the dinner plans include a ton of cole slaw, 3,000 pounds of potato salad and pork contributed by farmers all over North Carolina.

Since late last month, when they began inviting U.S. farmers to a rally in Elizabeth City, organizers of Farm Save claim they have been overwhelmed by the response.

More than 25,000 people have called to say they will attend the event Saturday at Elizabeth City State University, organizer Gloria Barry told The Virginian-Pilot and Ledger-Star in Norfolk, Va.

Farm Save drew the huge response, she said, by contacting Future Farmers of America chapters in all 50 states.

"We've talked to everyone we could," she said. "We've just been on the phone all the time."

Many farmers have shared horror stories of foreclosures, Meads said. On Monday, he said he persuaded a loan officer to accept a late payment from a North Carolina farmer struggling to pay the mortgage on his property.

Organizers seem less concerned with promoting a specific agenda than in projecting a friendly atmosphere where all will feel at home.

"This is not a fund-raising event, nor is it a political rally," the event's program reads. "Farm Save Day is to draw national attention to the farm crisis we are now facing in this country."

Arrangements have been made to house visitors with local farmers, Ms. Barry said. Local law enforcement officers met Tuesday to prepare plans to handle traffic, she said, and owners of an old drive-in theater near the ECSU campus will allow campers to park on the property.

The schedule of events on Saturday is deliberately light, organizers said, to give farmers a chance to enjoy the pig-pickin' and to share ideas.

State officers and other members of Future Farmers of America will meet at Williams Hall at 10 a.m. At the same time, local legislators and baseball great Jim "Catfish" Hunter will speak briefly at Vaughn Center.

Meads, a Pasquotank county native, has been the prime mover behind Farm Save. Concerned for years with falling farm prices, Meads initiated the event last month by simply installing the phone lines in his home and issuing a call to farmers across the country.

Although many donations have been received, not enough has been raised so far to cover all costs. But Meads has faith that the necessary money will be found — and that the get-together will serve to bolster the spirits of farm families everywhere.

"The main purpose," he said, "is for farmers to talk to other farmers and hopefully find some new information to take home with them."

Superintendent Receives Ticket

MARION, N.C. (AP) — McDowell County School Superintendent Terry Grier says a charge against him for passing a stopped school bus is an attempt to discredit him and the school system.

"I've not committed a crime," Grier said Tuesday. "The safety and welfare of children has always been my primary focus and I would never knowingly do anything to endanger them. It's disappointing when people are apparently more interested in doing damage to my reputation and to the reputation of our school system than they apparently are in educating children."

A summons was taken out by three bus drivers for an incident which allegedly occurred at Pleasant Garden Elementary School. According to the summons, Grier drove past a school bus on John Roach Drive in front of the school while students were being discharged.

Maj. Don Ramsey of the McDowell County Sheriff's Department said no law enforcement officers were involved. The three listed as witnesses were school bus driver Arthur Bush, and two other drivers, Kathleen Collier and Beverly Mills.

"I knew and have known for a long while that a school official passing a stopped school bus on school property is not against the law," Grier said.

Grier's attorney, Frank Goldsmith, said he has asked District Attorney Alan Leonard to seek a ruling from the state attorney general's office on whether the area where the buses were parked is a public street or highway as defined by the state law on passing a stopped school bus.

Trailer Of Beef Stolen

MOCKSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Nobody has to tell Leroy Cranfill about the price of beef.

Last Saturday, about midnight, someone hooked up to a trailer full of beef Cranfill had parked at a truck stop and drove away.

"This has got to be the worst thing to happen to me," said Cranfill, who is responsible for the $100,000 load. "You always hear about these things happening, but you never think it will happen to you."

Cranfill, an independent operator from Mocksville, picked up the 45,700 pounds of beef in Amarillo, Texas, Thursday. It was due Tuesday in Edison, N.J. He parked it at the truck stop thinking it could stay there until he was ready to leave.

Lester Cranfill, Leroy's dad, discovered Sunday that the trailer was missing.

John Stephens, the detective with the Davie County Sheriff's Department who is investigating the theft, said that he has few solid leads.

Cranfill has been driving trucks for the past 25 years. Eighteen months ago he bought his own rig and contracted with Lisa Motor Lines of Fort Worth, Texas, to haul the company's trailers.

Because he's an independent operator, Cranfill is responsible for part of the lost trailer and beef, said Wendal Short, the safety director of Lisa Motor Lines.

Ports Authority To Replace Dock

RALEIGH (AP) — The N.C. State Ports Authority voted Tuesday to spend $5.2 million to reconstruct a dock in Morehead City that collapsed and almost led to an oil spill.

Meeting for the first time since last month's accident, the board voted unanimously to build a new 80-foot-deep bulkhead at the port.

The bulkhead of the dock that collapsed was embedded at a depth of 41 feet. It was undermined after the harbor was dredged to nearly the same depth.

In addition to replacing the old dock, the board voted to make the new one longer so it could accommodate large, 800-foot tankers that officials say are essential to a prosperous port.

The board left unresolved the question of how the construction would be funded, preferring to wait until the General Assembly acts on the authority's budget request. Gov. Jim Martin's budget proposal calls for spending a total of $3.3 million for improvements to the port at Morehead City.

Deadline May Complicate State Effort To Land Supercollider

By The Associated Press

An August deadline for bids and a requirement that states must buy or condemn all land needed for a giant underground scientific complex will complicate North Carolina's quest for the project, state officials say.

"The real issue here today is the time issue," Patricia Poteat, the deputy director of the N.C. Board of Science and Technology, said Tuesday. "If these proposals are due in August, that's going to make it very difficult to submit the kind of proposal we want to submit. ... Notice I said 'difficult,' not 'impossible.'"

John S. Herrington, the U.S. energy secretary, Tuesday set a deadline of August for states to submit bids for the $6 billion superconducting supercollider.

Ms. Poteat and other N.C. officials remained confident that the state's bid for the supercollider will be a sound one — "superb" in Ms. Poteat's estimation — provided a bid is feasible.

But in view of the time and land factors laid out by Herrington, it is clear that any serious bid by North Carolina for the supercollider will require more than the $750,000 the General Assembly set aside for preparation of a bid, Ms. Poteat said.

A state task force has recommended a tract in Granville, Person and northern Durham counties for the underground, 52-mile-long loop that will safely smash subatomic particles at tremendous energy levels.

Gov. Jim Martin has said that the state is willing to donate a 3,000-acre tract for the scientific campus supporting the supercollider.

But Herrington said the federal government is unwilling to pay for any land for the project. In all, the supercollider will require at least 8,000 acres of surface and underground land rights, according to Alvin Trivelpiece, the director of the Office of Energy Research.

No state's bid for the supercollider will be accepted unless it can demonstrate, by August, its ability to buy directly or condemn the land needed, Trivelpiece said.

But state law would need to be changed to meet that condition, officials said, because North Carolina's statutes forbid the state to condemn private land to turn it over to the federal government.

David Guth, a special assistant to the N.C. secretary of administration, said that meeting the deadline may mean completing rock borings on the site in two to three months — less than half the normal time. And contractors charge more for rush jobs, he said.

Other criteria for the site noted by Herrington are proximity to research universities, freshwater supply of at least 2,000 gallons per minute, and an ample power supply. North Carolina officials boast that their site more than qualifies on all three counts.

Under the schedule set by Herrington, a site for the project will be selected in January 1989.

S.C. Lawmaker Upset Over Road Wants To Secede

By DAVID REED
Associated Press Writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — Charleston Rep. Woody Aydlette hasn't been able to get any colleagues to back his proposal that South Carolina secede from the United States, but he says several sympathize with his frustration with the federal government.

"I'm slam fed up with it," Aydlette said Tuesday after learning that the federal highway commission planned to cut the funding for a bridge in his district.

The secession resolution sent to a House committee for study Tuesday stems from sentiment similar to — but not as widespread as — that on Dec. 20, 1860, when South Carolina became the first state to vote to secede from the union and started the chain of events that led to the Civil War.

The vote in the General Assembly that day in Charleston was unanimous.

"Some times you feel like Don Quixote, frustrated with bureaucrats and no way to get to them — they're there (in office) until they die," Aydlette said.

The tall, deep-voiced Republican with a thick black moustache is known for taking outlandish stands. And he's been stewing for some time because of the trend in federal government of threatening to withhold funds to force states to pass legislation, such as lowering the drinking age.

His pot boiled over Tuesday morning when he learned that the federal highway administration planned to cut funding to construct a bridge from James Island to Charleston.

"That basically dooms the project; we're back to square one," Aydlette said while leaning back in his state office chair with his hands behind his head.

The federal agency says that while the state can get $47.9 million to build the bridge, interchanges on the elevated expressway at Lockwood Drive and Harbor View Road as well as a connector to South Carolina 61 are not eligible for funding. Originally, the federal government had approved $92.4 million for the project.

Residents have been trying for 25 years to get a new bridge built across the Ashley River. The main route to the city from James Island now is across two bridges, one that opens for boat traffic and has 50,000 cars a day pass across it, Aydlette said.

"We've gone through every conceivable (federal) hearing you could go through — and some twice," he said.

"There was no problem with the plans for the bridge until now, the day we are to sign the contract to sink the pilings, they do this," Aydlette said. "They'll pay for the middle. Now how can you have a bridge that doesn't touch down?"

Aydlette said the money to fund the federal government comes from state taxpayers. "It's our money, after all, and sometimes they forget that."

Bush Hits Campaign Trail To Offset U.S.-Iran Fallout

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, confronted with fresh questions about the Iran-Contra controversy that may be eroding political support, is stepping up the pace of his travel in pursuit of the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

Once the early, unchallenged front-runner for the party's 1988 nomination, the undeclared candidate sets out today on two-day trip to Michigan and Illinois with his political pursuers closing in, according to the latest public opinion polls.

A recent survey in Iowa indicated Bush was struggling to keep up with Senate GOP Leader Bob Dole for support among Republicans in Iowa, which holds an early presidential caucus next year.

Bush also plans trips to Ohio, New York, Louisiana, Massachusetts and New Hampshire in the next few weeks, before setting out for Iowa on March 5-6 on a seven-city tour.

"We see ourselves as really starting to open up the afterburners in a couple of the early states" where convention delegates will be selected, said Rich Bond, a political aide to Bush.

"We don't see those states as popularity contests. We see them as a test of organization."

Bond said that in Michigan, where the first delegates will be selected next winter, Bush will hold a series of meetings to discuss his campaign. The balance of his itinerary includes a Lincoln Day dinner in Lansing, Mich., a wreath-laying ceremony at Lincoln's tomb and Lincoln Day lunch in Springfield, Ill., where the 16th president practiced law before winning the White House.

Aides also added a news conference to the schedule for Thursday morning, where the vice president is likely to face questions for the first time about the disclosure this past weekend that he received a detailed briefing last summer from a key Israeli figure in the secret sale of American arms to Iran.

According to a memo written by the vice president's chief of staff, the Israeli told Bush the United States was dealing with radical forces in Iran, rather than moderates, as President Reagan has maintained.

The Iran-Contra controversy has turned into the most damaging episode of the Reagan presidency, and with Bush attempting to run for president as political heir to the president, it has coincided with a deterioration of his own standing as well.

A Washington Post-ABC nationwide survey of Republicans completed in mid-January ranked Bush as first choice of 35 percent of those surveyed, with Dole the favorite of 20 percent. A similar survey taken last February showed Bush the favored candidate of 42 percent, to 13 percent for Dole.

The change in fortunes is clearer in polls taken among Republicans in Iowa. There — where Reagan's job approval rating has slipped to a low 31 percent — Dole was favored by 33 percent to 28 percent for Bush in a survey taken in the last few weeks for the Des Moines Register. The five percent gap is within the poll's 6.7 percent margin of error.

An Iowa survey in December showed Dole favored, 28 percent to 25 percent for Bush. A poll last May, before the Iran controversy developed, showed Bush the favorite candidate, 34 percent to 16 percent, over Dole.

Bush has said relatively little in public in recent weeks about the arms sale and apparent diversion of profits to the Contra rebels.

Reagan Wants Consultations On Speeding Up 'Star Wars'

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan plans to step up consultations with Congress and U.S. allies on the fast-developing "Star Wars" program to mount a defense in space against Soviet missiles, administration sources say.

Reagan and his senior advisers, meeting privately Tuesday, concluded the "Star Wars" program had reached the point at which stepped-up consultations with members of Congress and the NATO allies should begin, according to the sources, who spoke only on condition of anonymity.

The president may send Edward Rowny, his senior arms control adviser, and Paul H. Nitze, the top adviser on arms issues to Secretary of State George P. Shultz, to Europe to brief Western leaders on the developing technology, two U.S. officials said.

That would indicate that major decisions on whether to deploy the first phase of an anti-missile defense may be pending. But the officials said Rowny and Nitze had not packed their bags yet.

The administration sources said no decisions on deployment were taken at the White House meeting and that none were anticipated perhaps for months.

The agenda included a review of the pace of technology research and how soon deployment in space might be feasible, another U.S. official said.

Summoned to meet with Reagan were Shultz, Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger, Kenneth L. Adelman, the U.S. arms control director, and other senior advisers.

The meeting was not on Reagan's public schedule, nor on the one distributed for Shultz at the State Department, and its participants were cautioned not to dislcose what went on.

Shultz told the Senate Armed Services Committee after a similar session last week that Reagan was unlikely to be faced with a decision this year on whether to deploy the first phase of a space-based missile defense.

He also sought to play down reported differences with Weinberger, who is understood to be more eager to move ahead with the program known officially as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

On Sunday, in an ABC-TV interview, Shultz said no decision would be made on deploying elements of the Star Wars program over the next two years. Shultz said he was reflecting Reagan's thinking.

Last week Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, told Reagan there would be a "constitutional confrontation of profund dimensions" unless the Senate was consulted on interpreting the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

Shultz and Weinberger both have endorsed a legal finding by administration lawyers that the research program is consistent with the agreement with the Soviet Union, which was ratified by the Senate.

However, Shultz testified that amending the treaty may be necessary in order to deploy anti-missile weapons in space.

Marlin Fitzwater, the White House spokesman, said Tuesday "there is no timetable for decision-making and I would not predict a decision or no decision at any meeting."

Fitzwater said "the consensus among everyone is that it's going to require considerble amount of time for study and deliberation before final decisions are made."

He said the discussions involve the technology of the program and "the pace of the testing and development and how it would impact on the interpretation of the ABM treaty."

Charles E. Redman, the State Department spokesman, said the United States was already consulting with its allies. "There have been lots and lots of consultations on that particular question," he said, "and there will continue to be consultations — in the plural."

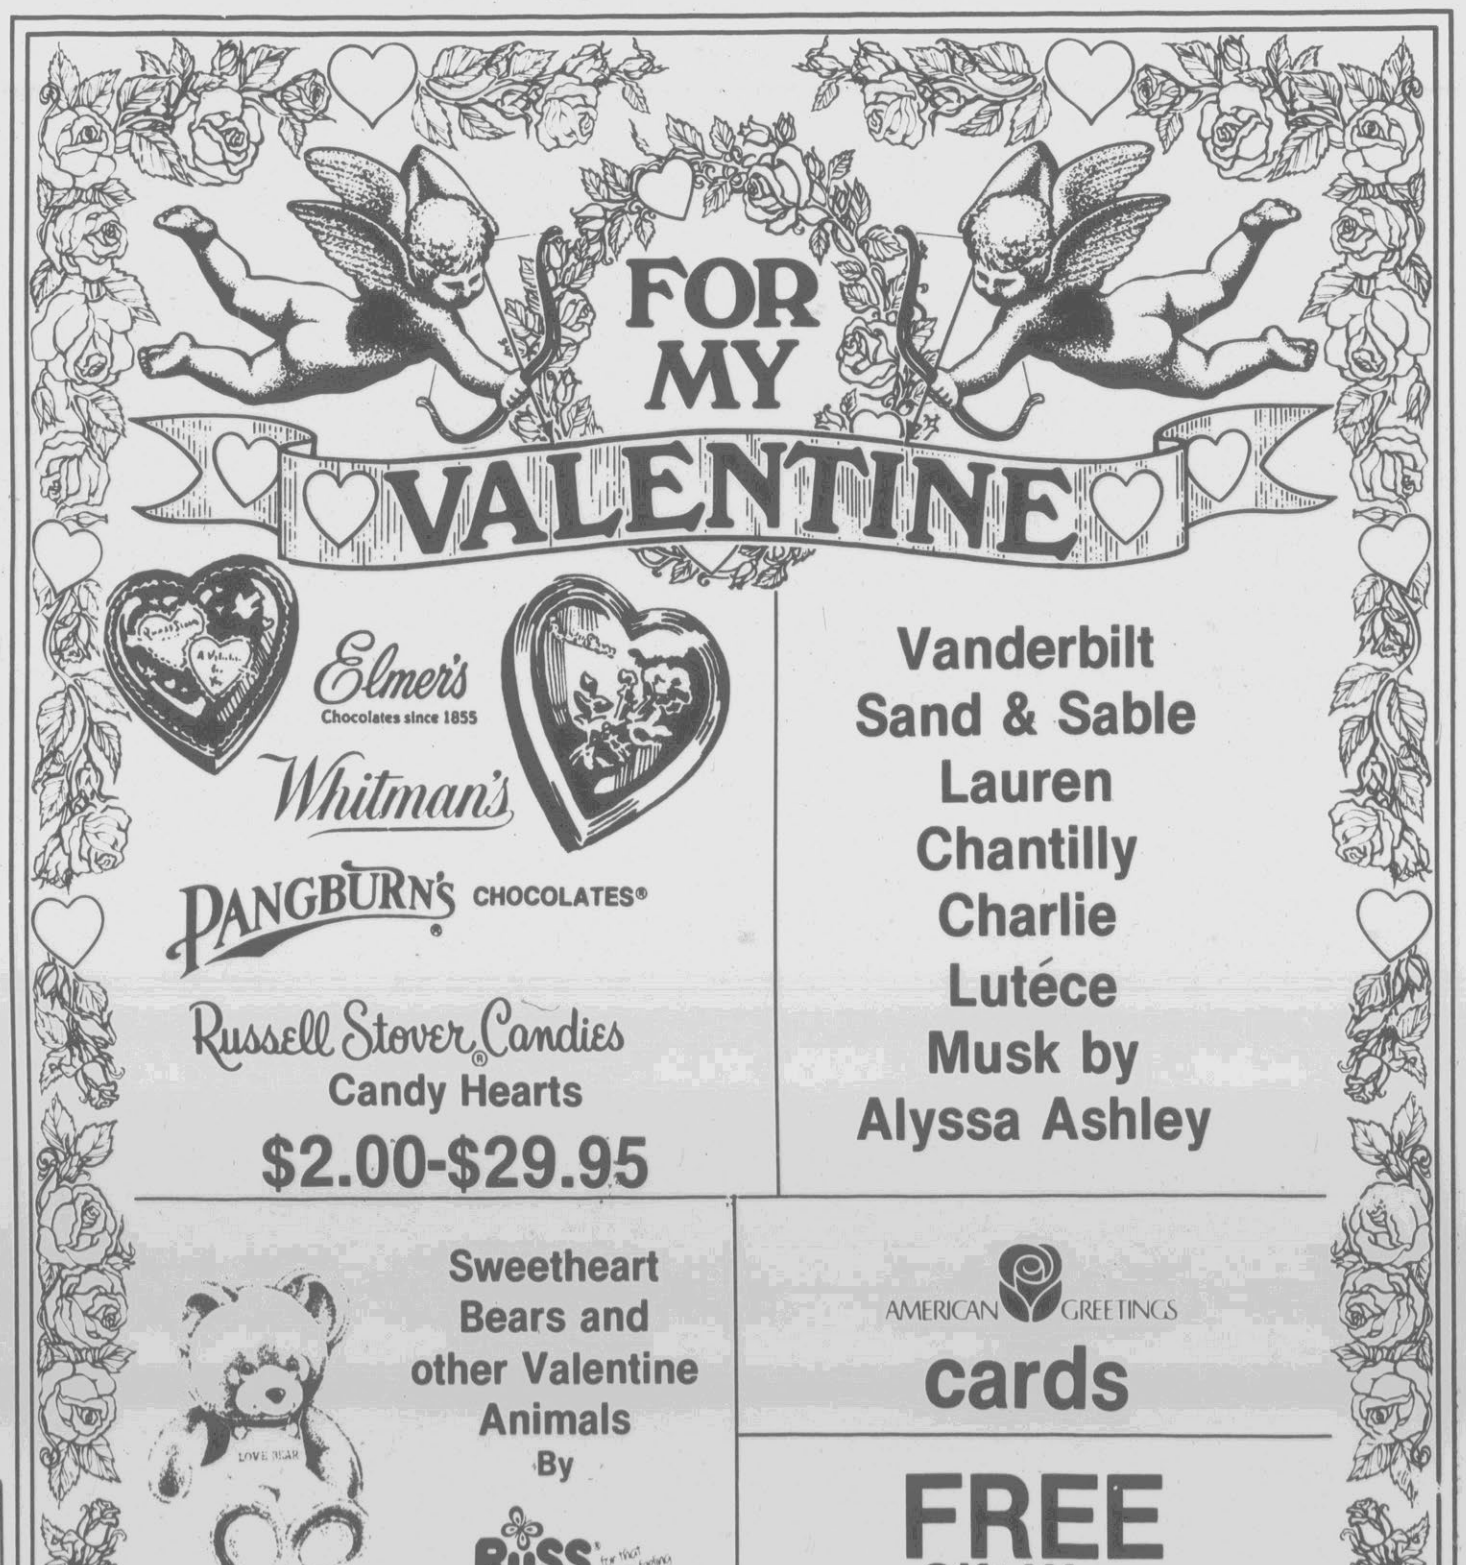

Supporters of the treaty consider it a bedrock of the arms control process. Some are concerned that Reagan's program could unravel the accord.

The president last year authorized the Air Force to exceed limits under another arms control treaty, SALT II, imposed on bombers carrying cruise missiles.

Fitzwater said he did not know if the administration's eventual decisions would be made public. "Normally, national security decisions are not made public and there are any number of reasons," he said.

The city of Greenville has a 24-hour leash law. Dogs are permitted off personal property as long as they are on a leash or are restrained by some other means of physical control. Dogs found running at large will be picked up and taken to the City-County Animal Shelter on County Home Road.

Solons Say McFarlane Still Faces Questioning

By JOAN MOWER
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Robert C. McFarlane's apparent suicide attempt is prompting an outpouring of shock and sympathy, but lawmakers say that after his recovery the president's former national security adviser will still face tough questions over the sale of U.S. arms to Iran.

McFarlane, 49, was visited Tuesday by his wife, Jonda, but did not receive telephone calls at Bethesda Naval Hospital in a Maryland suburb of Washington. He was expected to remain there at least until today, hospital spokesman Lt. Russ Sanford said.

"Tough questions will be asked" about the arms sales, said Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, a member of the House select committee investigating the sales and possible diversion of funds to Nicaraguan rebels.

The House panel, like a similiar special Senate committee, is not expected to begin public hearings in the case until mid-April.

McFarlane remained in good condition Tuesday, the day after police said he took between 25 and 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Valium.

A police source who spoke only on condition of anonymity characterized the pill overdose as an attempted suicide, but officially, authorities said only there was no evidence of foul play.

President Reagan spoke to Mrs. McFarlane by telephone on Tuesday, according to White House spokesman Ben Jarratt. Details of the conversation were not available, he said.

Reagan had not tried to contact his former aide but would likely do so by telephone "when it is appropriate," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

The overdose came the same day McFarlane was to testify for a second time before a special presidential commission investigating the U.S.-Iran case.

The commission, which is expected to release its findings by Feb. 19, is headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, who once was McFarlane's boss on the Senate Armed Services Committee.

McFarlane's hospitalization sent shockwaves through the nation's capital.

In a letter to McFarlane, Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said, "I learned last night of your misfortune and was both deeply troubled and saddened by the news," according to a Hatch aide, Paul Smith.

"It's sad it happened," said Rep. William Broomfield, R-Mich. "He has been under intense pressure and the pressure got to him."

Although associates said McFarlane, who resigned from the national security council in December 1985, had been under great strain because of the U.S.-Iran case, he appeared collected and calm in his frequent public appearances.

"He always seemed 'Mr. Cucumber,'" said Parker Borg, a State Department official who knew McFarlane.

Leonard Garment, McFarlane's attorney, said his client had chronic back pain for which his doctors had prescribed Valium.

First lady Nancy Reagan, attending a drug abuse class in Los Angeles, said she felt "sorrow" for McFarlane.

Since resigning, McFarlane worked extensively as an unpaid consultant to the NSC dealing with the secret program to sell weapons to Iran, delivered lectures and served as counselor at the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington think tank.

Once McFarlane has recovered, he is expected to appear before various groups investigating the Iran-Contra case.

"I don't think there's any question about that," Garment said when asked if his client would talk more about the events that have created the biggest controversy of Reagan's administration.

Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, acknowledged that while some might see the event as casting a shadow on McFarlane's earlier testimony, it would not affect his own judgment of McFarlane's credibility. "I don't see why it should," he said.

Meanwhile, a federal grand jury was empaneled last week to hear evidence in the case. It is under the direction of Lawrence Walsh, an independent counsel appointed by a panel of three federal judges. Gail Alexander, Walsh's spokeswoman, said Walsh would have no comment on McFarlane's condition.

McFarlane's previous testimony has raised questions, particularly over his assertion that Reagan verbally gave prior approval for the shipment of U.S. arms to Iran in September 1985. The weapons were sent from existing stocks in Israel.

White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan and others have disputed McFarlane's version.

"There are things that strike me as strange about Mr. McFarlane's testimony," Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, said in a recent interview.

What perplexed him, Boren said, is why McFarlane would sign on with the NSC as a consultant handling the sale of weapons to Iran after he testified that in December 1985, he suggested halting such sales. McFarlane also visited Tehran last May.

"His testimony leaves a lot of questions unresolved," Boren said.

DOE Allows Restart Of Hanford Reactor

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department has agreed to make a limited study of the potential environmental threats posed by its Chernobyl-like nuclear reactor, but without delaying the scheduled July restart of the aging facility.

The department's decision, revealed Tuesday at a House Energy subcommittee hearing, brought cries of foul from several members of Congress and other critics who believe the N Reactor at the Hanford nuclear reservation in Richland, Wash., should be retired forever.

Rep. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., sponsor of legislation to bring the Energy Department's nuclear reactors under the same safety scrutiny accorded commercial reactors, said, "We can't afford to let the department play nuclear solitaire."

Mary L. Walker, assistant energy secretary for environment, safety and health, told the House panel, "It was my conclusion that the reactor's continued operation did not pose an unacceptable risk to workers or the public."

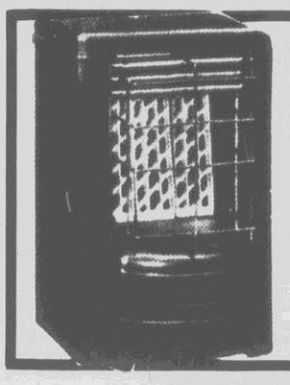

The N Reactor, which makes plutonium for nuclear weapons, remains "essential for national security," she said.

She said the department would proceed with its timetable for restarting the reactor after $50 million in "safety enhancement" modifications but prior to the completion of an environmental assessment of the changes.

But Rep. Les AuCoin, D-Ore., complained that the 24-year-old reactor "has never been the subject of a complete environmental study. And now the department wants only a partial study while it pumps $50 million into piecemeal repairs on a facility that already is five years older than it was supposed to last."

AuCoin served notice he may attempt to block the plan in the courts. Later, Dan Riker of the Natural Resources Defense Council said his group also is considering legal action.

National concern was raised about the N Reactor because of its similarity of design with the Soviet reactor at Chernobyl.

Airline Travelers Report Frustration Over Fares

By RICK GLADSTONE
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Many air travelers looking for bargain rates are finding frustration because of small-print restrictions placed on the discount tickets.

Customers in search of the low fares find that only a limited number of seats are available on most flights, especially on busy routes, and that the sale has a no-refund clause.

Travel agents, who book the vast majority of airline tickets, say they have had to spend much time explaining the restrictions to clients, many of whom become angry and exasperated after learning they cannot get an advertised fare or that their plans disqualify them.

"There's a lot of confusion, a lot of disappointment, a lot of irate customers," said Bernice Rosmarin, co-owner of Edison Travel Inc. in Edison, N.J."I think most people look to get something for nothing. They don't really look at the fine print."

Eric Munro, head of the Travelwise agency in San Diego, said airlines were not making it clear enough in their advertisements that the number of seats available at the special fares is limited.

"This is one of our biggest problems," Munro said. "The airlines keep calling it marketing. It's really a deceptive practice."

The airlines report that their reservation centers have been swamped with calls seeking the discounted fares, and some say they have received complaints from consumers who allege the discounts are unavailable. The fares are available through mid-May.

Airline executives blame the problem on public failure to understand that each destination has a different number of seats allotted for discounts, depending on how heavily traveled the route.

Popular New York-Florida routes, for example, may have only a few seats per flight for sale, if that many, but a largely empty St. Louis-Cleveland flight may be 100 percent discounted to fill it.

"We've had some calls from people who say they cannot get the advertised fare," said Charles Novak, spokesman for United Airlines. "You have this problem of people wanting to go to areas that are booked or overbooked. In high-density markets, you're not going to have seats available."

None of the airlines will disclose how many discount seats are offered for specific flights. But they do give estimates for their overall system.

American Airlines has said it is selling 35 percent of all seats at a discount, Continental Airlines 40 percent and Eastern 10 percent to 20 percent.

Texas Air Corp., the biggest U.S. airline operator, announced the fare cuts Jan. 30 to stimulate business for its Continental and Eastern subsidiaries, recently expanded through the acquisition of People Express.

All major competitors quickly matched the discounts, which are as much as 80 percent lower than regular coach prices and up to 40 percent cheaper than the "supersaver" rates offered previously. For example, a New York to Chicago roundtrip flight that sells for $560 without any discount is going for $98 under the special fare.

The restrictions generally require purchase at least two days in advance, roundtrip travel, a Saturday night stayover, no Friday or Sunday flights, and no refund.

"One of the hardest things we have to do is make people truly understand that the fare is not refundable," said Ms. Rosmarin at Edison Travel. "Before anyone wants to take advantage of it, they have to be absolutely certain they won't change their plans."

Manacled Prisoner Shoots 2 Deputies

DE WITT, N.Y. (AP) — A manacled prisoner opened fire with the gun he grabbed from a deputy during a courthouse scuffle, killing one officer and seriously wounding another, authorities said today.

Deputy David Clark, 33, of Salina, died hours after Tuesday night's shooting, said Beverly Abt, spokeswoman for Crouse-Irving Memorial Hospital in Syracuse.

Clark and Deputy Bernard Meleski were leading three prisoners from the De Witt town court when the scuffle broke out, said Onondaga County Sheriff's spokesman Robert Burns.

William Blake, 23, who was handcuffed with two other prisoners, grabbed a gun from one of the officers and opened fire, said Burns.

Blake tried to drag the other prisoners with him but didn't get far and was quickly recaptured, said Fred Johnson, 21, a witness.

Blake was facing narcotics, weapons, burglary and robbery charges in connection with his arrest Friday. Charges stemming from the shooting were not immediately filed, Burns said.

Meleski, 47, of Manlius, was in serious condition early today at the State University of New York Health Science Center hospital in Syracuse. Meleski was shot more than once in the stomach and suffered wounds to the spleen and liver, hospital spokesman Daniel Hurley said.

Father, Two Sons Honored For Heroics

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The Air Force has presented Bronze Stars to a missionary and his two sons who contended with head-hunting cannibals to help downed American fliers out of Asia during World War II.

J. Russell Morse, 89, and sons Robert and Eugene were honored Tuesday at Tinker Air Force Base for their heroics in western China and Burma between 1943 and 1946.

President Reagan approved the medals on Dec. 31 after a family friend wrote to Congress suggesting the men deserved recognition.

Allied aircraft flew across the Burma-China "hump" to resupply Chinese forces against the invading Japanese early in World War II. The Air Force lost 2,000 planes flying over the treacherous mountain region known as the "roof of the world."

The elder Morse, and his wife, Gertrude, were working as missionaries in Burma. He and his sons set up a search-and-rescue network of tribal natives.

"What made the Hump so terrifying for the fliers was that they were flying in from India and they had heard of the head-hunting Nagas," Robert Morse, 55, said.

The Nagas, a tribe that once practiced cannibalism in the eastern foothills of the Himalayas, would kill nearly every stranger they saw, he said. His family could speak the tribe's language and would occasionally wear loincloths to be better accepted, he said.

"By relating to them that way, we could get across to them to help us save the birdmen. We told them that if they helped us we would have plane loads of salt dropped down for them," Robert Morse said.

The elder Morse, who lives in Tulsa, spent 15 months in a communist Chinese prison in 1951 and 1952. In 1972, the family was deported from Burma as part of an expulsion of missionaries.

Some Kids Can't Cope With Parents' Divorce

By MARY JO KOCHAKIAN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The children whose grades drop, who become hostile or who regress — those you easily can see need attention. But children who seem to take their parents' separation or divorce in stride need just as much attention.

Some children react to their parents' breakup by "not saying anything, at least openly," says Barbara Rzepski, a psychologist at Newington (Conn.) Children's Hospital. "The parents assume that they do not have any questions." But children do. They want to know how the new arrangements will affect them, and it will help them adjust if they talk about how they feel.

"Then it's up to the parent to bring it up," Rzepski says.

For example, a parent might say, " 'I notice you've been hanging out in your room a lot. I wonder what you've been thinking,' " Rzepski suggests.

If the child rejects the parent's invitation to talk, the adult has to realize that "you can't drag feelings out of a kid," she says. But "keep making the opportunity available."

It is also very important for parents to set examples of openness, she says. A parent could say, "I feel really sad a lot, too," or "It makes me feel bad to see you feeling this way."

"Don't think those words go unheard," Rzepski says. "It gives them the opportunity to see a parent attempt to cope in an appropriate way, and it leaves the door open."

But be careful not to disclose too much, she says. "They don't need to know all the details. Don't say, 'I'm sad, too, because daddy did this ... ' using the child as a confidant."

The more parents keep to themselves about a crisis such as a divorce, the stronger the message to the child "that we don't talk about this," Rzepski says.

Rzepski, who will conduct a children-of-divorce group starting in February for children 6 to 12 years old at Newington Children's Hospital, says that for younger children, "talking is not always the easiest medium" for expressing feelings.

"Encourage the children to draw," she says. And the parent should not feel compelled to look for deep meanings in all of a child's drawings. For example, "You can say, 'I see a house. Can you tell me about it?,' " she says. Such open-ended questions can elicit telling comments from the child. Parents may find it useful to tape the stories the child makes up; that can fire enthusiasm for expression.

Also, it may be easier to draw out a child with a storybook about divorce than with conversation. "That often is a helpful way for parents particularly uncomfortable (talking about divorce) of putting the topic out there."

It is not always a danger sign for a child to be withdrawn, Rzepski notes. A spell of keeping to one's self can be entirely natural in turmoil. And "boys tend to be less self-disclosing" than girls, she adds.

"When those kinds of patterns solidify, that's the real danger," she says. "That does need some dealing with."

"Growing and Changing: A Handbook for Preteens" by Kathy McCoy and Charles Wibbelsman, M.D. (Perigee Books, $9.95) answers common questions about puberty and emotional changes that many preteens find embarrassing to ask. Among the topics covered are the stages of puberty (illustrated with line drawings), late and early blooming, dangers of poor diets, crushes and how to get help from parents, teachers and doctors.

Best Way To Fight Racism

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Not long ago, an acquaintance told me that her 5-year-old son had had an accident. She told me that when she took him to the hospital for emergency care she said, "I want a white, American doctor, and don't let my son bleed to death while you're looking for one."

Although I found such a racist remark offensive, I remained silent. It's certain that whatever I might have said would not have altered her views, but I feel that my silence condoned her sentiments. What should I have said? — COLOR-BLIND IN W.VA.

DEAR COLOR-BLIND: You should have said exactly what you thought — that she was an ignorant, narrow-minded bigot to believe that a doctor had to be white and American in order to be competent, and you were offended by her racist remark.

Apropos remaining silent when you should have spoken up, I offer this gem of a piece that I have kept for more than 30 years. It was written by the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, a German Lutheran pastor who was arrested by the Gestapo in 1938 and sent to Dachau concentration camp until he was freed by the Allied forces in 1945.

I DIDN'T SPEAK UP

"In Germany, the Nazis first came for the communists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a communist. Then they came for the Jews, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I didn't speak up because I wasn't a trade unionist. Then they came for the Catholics, and I didn't speak up because I was a Protestant. Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak for me."

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently had five couples to our home for dinner. It was a lot of work, as an extensive menu had been requested. We spent the entire day preparing the dinner and were busy in the kitchen up until the time we served it. We didn't even have a chance to sit down and converse with our guests.

The dinner was delicious — everyone raved. But immediately after the dessert, one of the guests asked for a newspaper to check the movie listings!

Before we knew it, four couples were putting on their coats and running out the door so they wouldn't be late for the movie. I will say in their defense that they invited my husband and me to join them, but we declined.

I may be old-fashioned or too sensitive, but when people go to someone's home for the kind of meal we prepared, and then run away to a movie immediately afterward, I call that unacceptable behavior.

To add insult to injury, they telephoned us to say they couldn't get into the movie of their first choice, and would we check the listings for their second choice!

What do you think of such people? — TOO SENSITIVE IN N.Y.

DEAR SENSITIVE: The behavior you describe is not only "unacceptable," it's downright rude! You say the menu had been "requested," which would indicate that your dinner guests came primarily to eat. Well-mannered guests would have remained after dinner to converse. These folks obviously came only to eat, so all you missed was the company of a lot of "oink-oinks" to round out the evening.

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 years old and I need your help. I want a telephone in my bedroom, but my dad says no because he thinks I would spend too much time talking, and my grades would go down.

Do you think I should be able to have my own phone, or is my dad right? — GIRL IN ROGERS, ARK.

DEAR GIRL: If money is not a problem, your father should let you have the phone. If your grades go down, the phone goes out. Get the message?

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

New Dowry Order For Central Java

Suara Sam, a Malaysian environmentalist newspaper, reports that "in an effort to make a dent in the rodent population, bridegrooms in Central Java have been ordered to produce a 'dowry' of at least 25 dead rats before being allowed to marry."

Stitch Weaves A Tapestry Of Colors

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

Easy and fast to make, this gorgeous sweater can be created in a week. The tapestry look is achieved by the combination of three elegant yarns: a rich wool ombre in indigo blues, a silky pearl-colored yarn and a hand-dyed chenille with the look of cut velvet. It's a $300 designer look that you can create for a fraction of the price.

Simple garter and stockinette stitches are combined in an exciting wave stitch to make the knitting fun.

Pick up your needles and treat yourself to this versatile, feminine sweater with soft sleeves and peplum skirting. Worn as a blouse or as a jacket, it will complement a variety of colors. Easy-to-follow directions are written for small, medium and large sizes with finished bust measurements of 32, 35 and 37 inches respectively.

To obtain directions for making the Tapestry Design, send your request for Leaflet No. z-020887 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. k-020887 by sending a check or money order for $34.95 for small or $41.95 for medium or large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and one selection of yarns in shades on indigo blues with petal pink and roses.

Nothing can do more to add interest and excitment to your knitting than the imaginative use of pattern stitches. Some are best used in panels while others are most effective as overall patterns. Some pattern stitches require a great deal of concentration, while many others are much simpler than they appear.

The wave stitch is a good example of the latter. It requires a multiple of nine stitches — that is, it can be worked on any number of stitches, evenly divisible by nine:

On the first and second rows, all stitches are knitted. For Row 3, (knit 2 stitches together). Repeat the steps between parentheses over and over across the row. Until you become thoroughly familiar with the pattern stitch, you will probably need to refer back to the instructions for each repeat of this row.

On Rows 4 and 6, purl all stitches; on Rows 5 and 8, knit all stitches; on Row 7, repeat Row 3. Repeat these eight rows over and over for the pattern.

An interesting effect is created with simple knits and purls in the Canterbury stitch. To work this stitch, use one needle three to four sizes smaller than the other, and work on any uneven number of stitches. The smaller needle is used for all odd-numbered rows, and the larger one for the even-numbered rows.

On each row, after working the first stitch or stitches, repeat the steps given within parentheses to the end of the row, or until you reach the stitches needed to end the row.

Row 4: Knit 1, (knit in back of next stitch, purl 1). End with knit in back of a stitch, knit 1. Repeat these four rows over and over for pattern.

A mock cable stitch can be worked on any number of stitches evenly divisible by four with the addition of two extra stitches (a multiple of four plus two).

For Row 1: Purl 2, (knit 1, yarnover, knit 1, purl 2). On this row and the third row, repeat the steps between parentheses over and over to end of row.

On Rows 2 and 4: Purl all stitches.

Row 3: Purl 2, (slip 1 stitch, knit 2, pass the slipped stitch over the 2 knit stitches, purl 2). Repeat steps between parentheses as before.

If you are one of the many knitters who works everything in stockinette or garter stitches, take out some needles and a variety of yarns and play around with these pattern stitches. You might be surprised at how much fun you can have and at the interesting effects you achieve. There are literally hundreds more pattern stitches available, and most of them are within the skills of the average knitter.

WAVE STITCH — This tapestry-design sweater was created using the wave stitch.

Mrs. Savage To Represent Sorority

Elizabeth E. Savage of Greenville has been chosen as a "Woman of Distinction" to represent N.C. Alpha Delta Kappa International Sorority for Women Educators.

She was chosen from among candidates entered by chapters throughout the state.

Mrs. Savage will be competing with candidates from the 49 different affiliated organizations in the N.C. Council of Womans Organizations. The winners will be honored March 28 at the celebration of the 35th anniversary of the NCCWO.

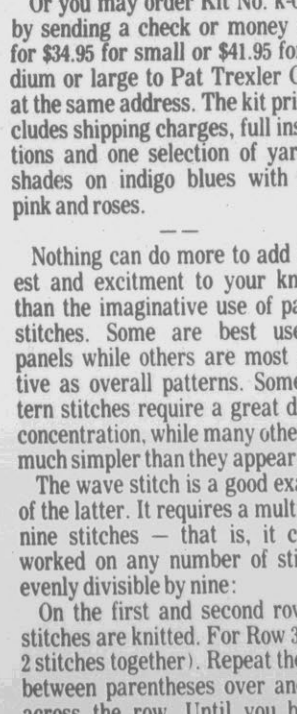

The executive board of N.C. Alpha Delta Kappa met in Greensboro. Plans are being made for the 35 anniversary celebration at which the founder of the group, Dr. Guion Johnson, is to be honored with the naming of a scholarship. Kay Holoman will update the group's history with highlights of significant happenings in the past 10 years.

Studies Being Done On Treating PMS As Disease

By ELIZABETH GORDEN
Reflector Staff Writer

The woman was acting a bit irritable, but her husband thought she was just having a bad day. He soon discovered it was more than that when she picked up his birthday cake and pushed it into his face.

The woman was suffering from Premenstrual Syndrome (PMS).

Increasing attention has been given to the affliction — some call it a disease — known as PMS, according to local health professionals. PMS is a physical disorder that is caused by hormonal fluctuations that take place in a woman's body.

"Diagnosis and treatment of PMS were very vague 10 years ago," according to Dr. David Ostman, an obstetrician/gynecologist, who has done special research on PMS. "Only recently has PMS been considered a disease, and studies on how to alleviate symptoms have been done."

Ostman suggests that the best way to determine if a woman is experiencing PMS is to record her symptoms on a calender. If the symptoms form a pattern and are related to the menstrual cycle then most likely she has PMS. If the pattern is not there, the symptoms may be caused by another disorder.

"Women should beware of unproven methods of PMS relief," he said. "A medical examination is definitely very important."

The disorder can occur in any woman during her childbearing years, and severity usually increases after 30 and continuously becomes worse, according to Donna Lee, a nurse with the pyschiatric/mental health ward at Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Menopause is the only absolute cure for PMS because as long as the ovaries (female hormone-producing organs) are functioning properly PMS can occur, she said.

Women suffering from PMS experience the bloating, headaches, weight gain, backaches and breast tenderness. It is, however, the pyschological symptoms that are the most disturbing and the most serious, Ms. Lee said. These symptoms range from suicidal and homicidal thoughts, rejection-sensitiveness and paranoia to clumsiness, indecision, irritability, forgetfulness and anger.

Approximately 20 percent of all women in their childbearing years suffer from PMS, she said. Many women who suffer PMS do not know they have the disease and consider their mental health at stake. Others have been misdiagnosed as manic depressives or as having other psychological disorders.

"Women who have severe PMS travel through a cycle between anger and guilt," Ms. Lee said. "Small things are more apt to set them off, guilt sets in and then depression follows."

Women with PMS can experience symptoms anywhere from two days to three weeks, according to the book "PMS, a Positive Program to Gain Control" by Stephanie DeGraff Bender and Kathleen Kelleher. Women who have the most severe type of PMS, usually only have five "good days" a month when they are free from any symptoms.

There are three important steps in treating PMS, according to Dr. Ostman. The first step is medical treatment.

Several medications — such as progesterone suppositories and birth control pills — can be prescribed to alleviate the physical symptoms, he said. Water pills can curtail bloating and muscle relaxers help relieve headaches and muscle aches.

The next step in treatment involves nutritional guidance, Ostman said. Vitamin B-6 is believed to be helpful in relieving some pain associated with PMS. Items that include caffeine, refined sugar, salt or alcohol should be reduced in the diet.

High potassium foods and complex carbohydrates such as wheat, barley corn, oats and fresh vegetables are thought to be very helpful, according to the book. Exercise also should be part of a daily routine. Early morning can be the optimal time to exercise because the blood circulation is increased and the heart rate becomes steady.

The last step in the treatment of PMS is pyschological counsel. "Many women become isolated and want to suffer in silence and solitude," Ms. Lee said. "Pyschotherapy will not get rid of PMS, but it will help you cope."

Pyschotherapy is usually done on a one-to-one basis between patient and doctor. This confrontation helps women who are nervous about talking to others about their PMS, she said.

After they are more comfortable with their problem, they can join a self-help group with other women who suffer from PMS. "Women can share experiences and ways they have learned to cope with PMS," Ms. Lee said.

Although understanding PMS-related behavior can be difficult, families and spouses should try to comprehend the disease and cope with it, she said. A support group for them could be helpful too. "If men are willing to learn they can help deal with it."

PMS — Approximately 20 percent of all women in their childbearing years suffer from premenstrual syndrome. The disease recently has gained national attention by health care officials. (Reflector graphic by Marty Hardin)

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market turned upward today, rebounding from a three- session spell of profit-taking.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 4.36 to 2,162.40 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by more than 3 to 2 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 645 up, 407 down and 458 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 22.09 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said many traders regarded the market's recent pullback as a healthy, mild "correction" after its dramatic gains through the first five weeks of the year.

As stock prices retreated, they apparently attracted buyers who had been waiting for a pullback.

Some hesitancy of late has been attributed to uncertainties about weakness in the dollar and a modest upswing in interest rates.

Rates were little changed today in early trading in the government securities market.

British Airways' American depositary shares traded at 16¾ on heavy volume, making their debut as part of a public offering in Britain.

Other gainers on the active list included International Business Machines, up ⅜ at 133¾; Philip Morris, up ¼ at 84⅞, and AMP, up 1 at 47½.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks rose .41 to 157.59. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .80 at 314.44.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average fell 18.70 to 2,158.04.

Losers outpaced gainers by slightly more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, with 1,076 issues down, 528 up and 373 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 168.29 million shares, against 143.30 million in the previous session.

Murder Charges

YADKINVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Two men were held on first-degree murder charges Tuesday in the stabbing death of an elderly Yadkin County man, authorities said.

Sheriff Jack Henderson said Donald Gray Bates, 48, and Jackie Dean Bullin, 19, both of Boonville, are being held without bond in the slaying Monday of Howard Eugene Moorefield, 70, of Yadkinville.

Authorities said a motive in Moorefield's death has not been determined.

Reagan Refuses To Order Former Aides To Testify About Arms Deal

By TERENCE HUNT
AP White House Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is heeding advice that it would be unlawful for him to order former White House aides Oliver L. North and John M. Poindexter to break their silence and appear before a presidential board investigating the Iran-Contra scandal.

Reagan was to meet today with the three-member panel, headed by former Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, to answer questions for a second time. On the eve of the hour-long session in the Oval Office, board members were allowed to look at — but not keep — typewritten excerpts of Reagan's handwritten notes dealing with the subject.

Reagan personally reviewed his notes and determined what was relevant to the panel's inquiry before sending them to the commission, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. A courier picked them up at the White House and took them to the board, waiting to take them back to Reagan, board spokesman Herbert Hetu said.

Meanwhile, a police source said Tuesday that investigators have concluded Reagan's former national security adviser, Robert C. McFarlane, attempted suicide when he took 25 to 30 tablets of the tranquilizer Valium. But a police spokesman said there would be no official finding.

In other developments related to the sale of arms to Iran and the alleged diversion of profits to Nicaragua's Contra rebels:

—Members of a House panel investigating the scandal said they did not believe McFarlane's drug overdose would affect their investigation. Rep. Michael DeWine, R-Ohio, said he expects the panel to eventually summon McFarlane anyway. Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., said he did not think the incident should cast a shadow on McFarlane's earlier testimony and he has seen no reason to doubt McFarlane's good faith when he testified before the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

—Reagan, speaking to American Legion leaders, denounced Nicaragua's government as a "communist totalitarian state" and vowed to oppose efforts in Congress to cut off U.S. assistance to the Contras fighting the Sandinistas.

"It is both in our national interest and consistent with our traditions as a free people to assist those brave souls who are struggling for freedom and national independence," the president said.

Reagan is seeking an additional $105 million in assistance to the Nicaraguan rebels while some members of Congress are trying to cut off $40 million in aid already approved but not yet sent.

—The Washington Post today reported that congressional investigators have tallied $10.5 million believed diverted to the Contras from Iranian arms sales money. Of that total, $2 million came from Iran's payments for the weapons and $8.5 million from a loan from Saudi arms dealer Adnan Khashoggi, the newspaper said, quoting congressional sources.

—The Los Angeles Times reported today that the federal probe into possible criminal activity concerning the Iran-Contra affair has extended to include recently discovered indications that key figures in the operation tried to cover up the scandal. The newspaper cited unidentified sources for the report.

The expansion of independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's investigation came as FBI agents reviewed National Security Council computer records, but it was not immediately clear whether information in those records is linked to the broadened scope of the investigation, the newspaper said.

In a written statement Tuesday night, Fitzwater revealed that Tower had asked Reagan a week ago, in the president's role as commander in chief of the armed forces, to order Poindexter and North to appear before the board investigating the Iran-Contra matter.

Both men are still on active duty; Poindexter is a Navy vice admiral and North is a Marine lieutenant colonel. Both have refused to appear voluntarily before the Tower board.

Appearing under subpoena from congressional committees, North and Poindexter have refused to answer questions, invoking the Fifth Amendment protection against self-incrimination.

Replying to Tower's board on Reagan's behalf, White House counsel Peter Wallison said an order for Poindexter and North to appear "would be unlawful because it would in effect be ordering Admiral Poindexter and Colonel North to testify against themselves," Fitzwater said.

Wallison said his letter to the board was based upon a written opinion from the Pentagon's general counsel.

Poindexter resigned as Reagan's national security adviser and North was fired from the National Security Council staff last Nov. 25 after disclosure of the diversion of arms sale funds to the Contras.

Neither the board nor the White House would describe what was in the president's notes or the amount of material involved.

Eastern Airlines Agrees To Fine

WASHINGTON (AP) — Eastern Airlines, avoiding a long court battle with the Federal Aviation Administration, has agreed to pay the biggest fine ever against an airline for safety violations — $9.5 million.

The settlement was announced by the FAA on Tuesday, ending a year-long dispute with Eastern, one of the country's largest airlines. Eastern's former chairman, ex-astronaut Frank Borman, had vowed not to pay the penalty without a court order.

The fine stems from civil penalties that could have reached $78.4 million in a 1985 in-depth inspection of the air carrier. The infractions involved mostly maintenance and record-keeping irregularities, which the FAA and the airline say have been corrected.

Last August, Pan American World Airways agreed to pay $1.95 million for safety violations, the largest until the Eastern agreement. Other payments in recent years included a $1.5 million by American Airlines, $700,000 by Western Airlines, $402,000 by Continental Airlines, and $300,000 by Alaska Airlines.

FAA Adminstrator Donald Engen, who last March turned the Eastern matter over to the Justice Department after the airline steadfastly refused to pay the fine, said he is pleased with Eastern's decision to pay before court action.

Under the agreement, Eastern will pay $1 million immediately and the remaining $8.5 million by Dec. 31, 1989. Engen said the agency agreed to the drawn-out payment plan to avoid the costs and delays of court action.

Phil Bakes, who became Eastern's president and chief executive officer after the airline was acquired last year by Texas Air Corp., also cited the prospects of a lenghty legal fight as the reason the airline decided to pay the record fine.

Borman, who was Eastern's chairman at the time of the FAA special inspection, disputed the "technical integrity" of the government review and the FAA inspectors' conclusions. Borman resigned his job before Eastern's merger with Texas Air was completed.

The FAA action and prospects of litigation "were clouding both Eastern's outstanding safety record and (its) substantial maintenance improvements," said Bakes in a statement issued from the airline's Miami headquarters.

status and recognition to teachers and "give empowerment to teachers," the teaching profession "must police itself."

"No profession can be made healthy by focusing only on what's wrong," he said.

Calling for total educational opportunity, he said, "would hope that this country would affirm its commitment, not only to excellence in education, but to equity for all. ... Education must not be 'just for the gifted few. ... We have not found the final answer."

"I believe we must give more status and dignity to teaching," Boyer told an overflow audience at the lecture. He said that "we expect them (teachers) to work miracles every day ... We should be honest enough to acknowledge that we ask the schools and the teachers to accomplish what we have been unable to do."

He referred to "the carelessness with which we view the teaching profession." Teachers, he said, fill a vital role.

"Technology may bring information, but it cannot bring wisdom," he said.

Boyer predicted, however, that the impact of technology will continue to expand and the influence of "informal" teachers will increase.

Children today spend more time with informal teachers such as television and their peers than with parents and teachers, he said. "Informal teachers are gaining leverage," he said, "and schools will ignore this at their peril."

He said education will be moving "to focus on the early years of learning, which are crucial." He urged giving priority "'to the early years and to the centrality of language."

He said there is danger that, unless emphasis shifts to meet changing situations, shifting family patterns and lifestyles "the children who need the most help will get the least."

He said schools must meet the challenge because in today's society 'the family is more imperiled than the schools."

Clinches Tie For Big East Title

Rose Slips Past Kinston

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

Trailing by four points with 2:55 left in the game, Rose High School's Big East perfect string appeared headed for an end Tuesday night at the hands of Kinston's Vikings.

Kinston last week handed Wilson Fike only its second loss in the league and appeared ready to play giant killer again.

But the Rampants were not ready to die, fighting back to pull out a 70-69 heart-stopping victory that wasn't decided until Kinston's final shot at the horn bounced across the basket and fell away.

Keyford Langley hit the first of a one-and-one to get the rally going with 2:28 left, cutting the lead to 67-64. Thirty seconds later, Melvin Jenkins banged in both shots on a two-shot attempt, trimming the lead to just one.

Langley then stole the ball and laid the ball in with 54 seconds remaining to put Rose back into the lead, but J.J. Haddock answered with a jumper with 41 seconds left to put Kinston back up, 69-68.

Rose worked the ball around before setting up their final play with a timeout at the 17 second mark.

"We felt Terry (Warren) had the hot hand," Coach Jim Brewington said, "and we wanted to get the ball to him."

And that's what they did, giving him the ball on the right wing. Warren dribbled into the free throw circle and lofted up a 15-footer that swished through with six seconds left, making it 70-69 for the Rampants.

Kinston, after calling time out, got the ball down court, but had to hurry its shot and it bounced away, keeping Rose unbeaten in the conference after 11 games.

The victory, combined with Beddingfield's upset win over Fike, clinched at least a tie for the league championship for Rose. One more win will ice the title and the league's top spot in the 4-A State Playoffs.

Meanwhile, Rose's girls also moved another step closer to clinching their league title with a 53-35 win over the Lady Vikings. The Rampettes are 11-0 in league play also and can clinch the top seeding with a win over Fike on Friday, along with no worse than a tie for the league championship.

"I thought both teams played extremely well," Brewington said. "Kinston had to win to keep its hopes alive and they were sky-high. They played as good as I've ever seen them play.

"But I can't say enough for Terry Warren, he kept us in the game and then won it for us."

Brewington said he didn't think the Rose defense played that well in the first half, but came back in the second. The Rampants also went to the boards a little harder in the second half than the first and that helped them to pull out the win.

Both teams played outstandingly in the game — one of the better high school games played in this area. Rose shot quite well, hitting 57.1 percent from the floor. It made good on six of nine at the foul line and committed only eight turnovers.

Kinston shot well, too, hitting an even 50 percent of its shots. The Vikings tossed in all 11 attempts at the line, but committed 16 turnovers. They made up for that, however, with a 35-20 edge in rebounding.

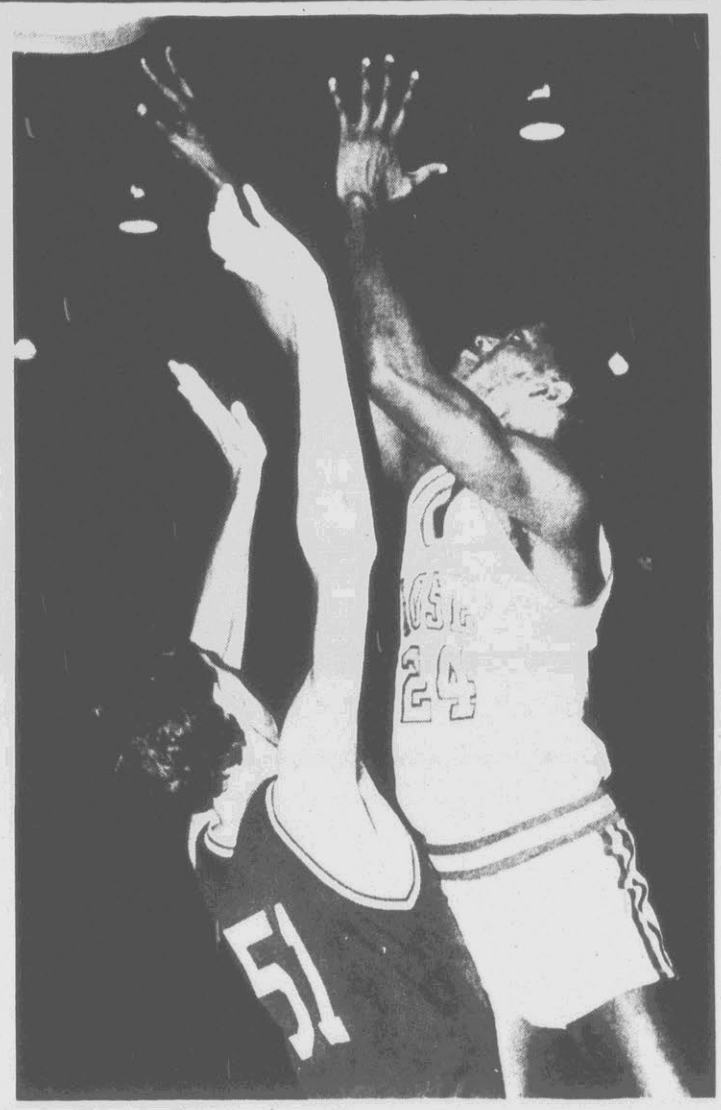

"We regrouped somewhat at the half," Brewington said. "We didn't do anything different, we just tried to do what we do best. We told them to do things well and then a little better. The kids wanted this one, coming up with the steals and baskets they had to have to win it."

It was a great spectator game, with the lead bouncing back and fourth. Kinston built up only a five-point lead at one time while Rose never led by more than three.

After the first opening skirmish, Kinston broke out of a 4-4 tie on baskets by Trey Martin and Kevin Taylor to take an 8-4 lead. But Rose came back to tie it up at 10-10 on a steal by Langley.

The Rampants, however, were never able to take the lead, tying Kinston three more times before the

Conley Dumps Eagles To Insure No Worse Than Tie

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writers

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley coach Walter Claybrook said the key to his team's 53-42 high school basketball win over Coastal Conference foe West Craven Tuesday night was that his team wasn't intimidated by the Eagles.

West Craven, ranked second in the Eastern 3-A poll heading into the ballgame, jumped out to an early 8-0 lead with it's aggressive, baseline to baseline style of play, but the Vikings weathered the early storm and came back to tie the game up after the opening quarter of play at 9-9.

"I really thought the key was when they jumped out hot (in the beginning of the game) and we kept our composure," Claybrook said. "I think the key tonight was we didn't play intimidated."

Indeed, on Jan. 16th, the Eagles took a 69-46 win over the Vikings by outscoring them 21-8 in the fourth quarter in a game in which Claybrook said his team played somewhat intimidated.

It was a different story this time. Conley weathered every charge the Eagles attempted.

With the win, the Vikings, 13-7 and 9-1, clinch no worse than a tie for the Coastal Conference regular season championship. West Craven, 14-5 and 6-3, falls into a second-place tie with Havelock, also 6-3 in the conference.

"Our guys just gave an all-out effort," Claybrook said. "When they made a run at us as most good teams do, we got everything back together and started going at it again."

Conley's Ricky Farrow echoed his coach's sentiments. "We had a game like this earlier against North Lenoir," Farrow said of the game's opening minutes. "Coach Claybrook told us never to quit and that's what we did."

West Craven took its early first quarter lead on two long jumpers by Gary Blount and one by Eric Raspberry while forcing three early turnovers by the Vikings. Dexter Coward and Blount added a free throw apiece and the Eagles had an early 8-0 lead.

With 5:40 to go in the opening period, Paul Merritt hit a jumper to open the scoring for Conley. Troy Ebron and Phil Medlin added two more jumpers and the score was 8-6.

Bonner added a free throw and Medlin scored on a follow shot after a steal by Ebron to give Conley a 9-8 advantage.

Keith Rountree countered with a free throw for West Craven to tie the game at 9-9 as the first period ended.

The Vikings quickly took the lead in the second quarter with Farrow leading the way with three baskets and an assist to Bronswell Patrick for another basket as the Vikings went up by as many as eight points at 22-14 before West Craven narrowed the gap to 25-20 at halftime.

West Craven came back to take the lead briefly at 30-28 with just under five minutes to go in the third quarter but the Vikings didn't crumble.

Farrow scored on a reverse layup to tie the game at 30-30. After an Eagle turnover, Medlin followed a miss by Farrow to make it 32-30 with 2:53 remaining in the quarter.

Blount countered for West Craven with a free throw but Farrow hit two free throws for Conley and Ebron added a layup after a steal by Bonner to give Conley a 37-31 lead.

West Craven's Jesse Campbell dunked off the fast break to make it 37-33 but Medlin hit a jumper as the quarter ended to make it 39-33.

The Vikings were able to maintain at least a six-point advantage the rest of the way as they spread things out, ran time off the clock and cashed in on their free throw chances. They scored eight of their 14 fourth-quarter points from the line.

"We knew it was an important game and everybody knew we had to win," Farrow said. "I think this will give us a lot of confidence down the stretch. People will know Conley is for real."

Medlin scored 13 points to lead the Vikings while Farrow added 12. Blount and Rasberry led the Eagles with 13 points apiece.

"I think it was just a matter of a bunch of guys who weren't going to be denied," Claybrook said. "We knew we were going to be in for a fight. We've gotta enjoy this but we can't dwell on it."

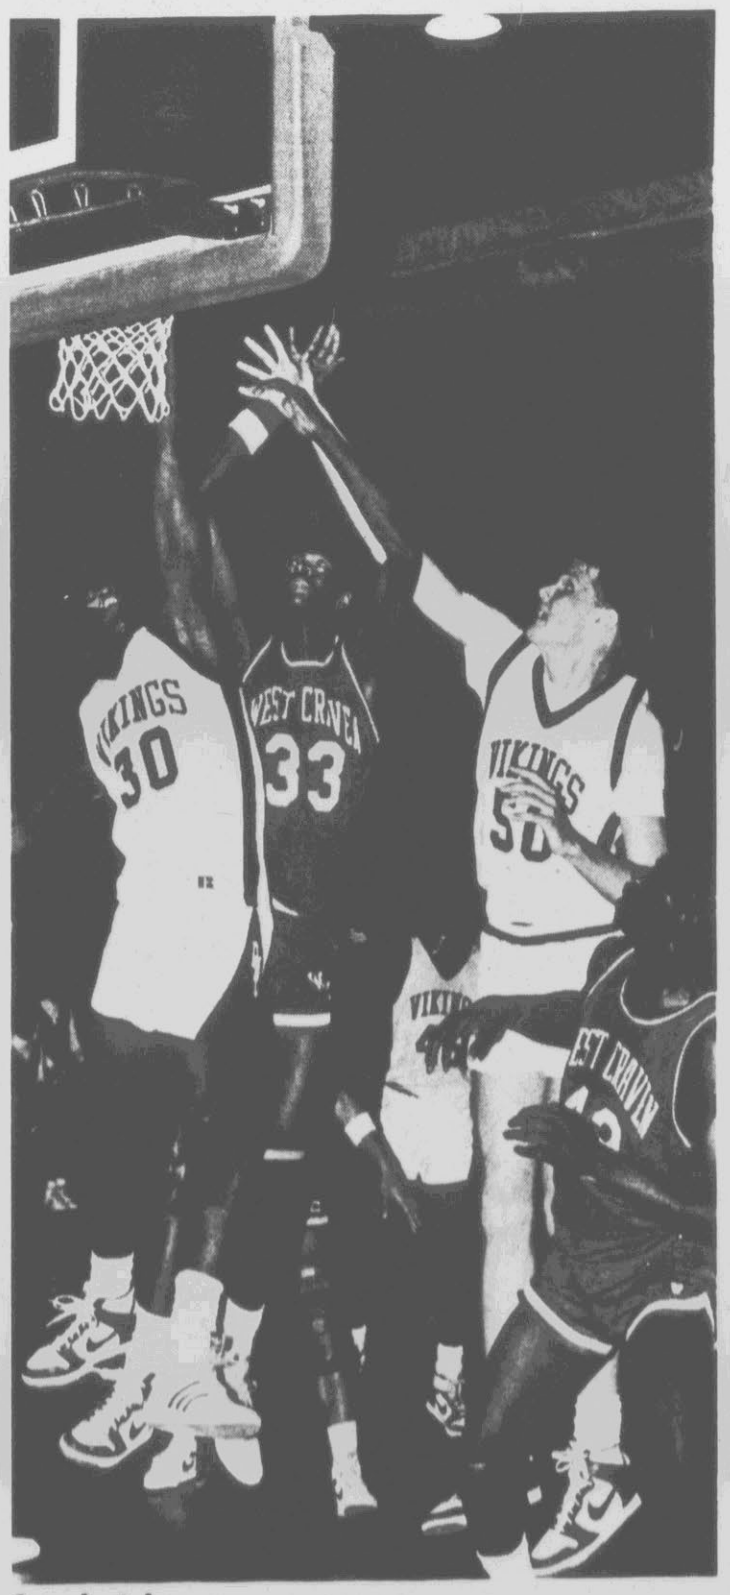

Next up for the Vikings is a road trip to East Carteret on Friday.

In the girl's game, West Craven outscored the Valkyries 8-2 in the second overtime to take a 70-64 win.

Conley trailed by as many six in the fourth quarter but rallied back from a 52-46 deficit in the final two and a half minutes.

Jags Stun Chargers; Take Over EP Lead

LITTLEFIELD — Late-charging Farmville Central handed Ayden-Grifton its second loss in three games Tuesday night, 64-59, and moved into first place in the Eastern Plains Conference basketball race.

Farmville Central's girls, meanwhile, took a 47-45 win over the Lady Chargers and clinched at least a tie for the league championship and assured themselves of the league's top seeding in the 2-A State Playoffs.

Just a few weeks ago, Farmville had lost two straight league games, to Pamlico and Ayden-Grifton, along with one of its starting players.

But the Jaguars, now 8-2 in conference action, are now a half-game ahead of Ayden-Grifton, which drops to 7-2 with the loss. Just one week ago, Pamlico handed the Chargers their first league loss, only to lose to Farmville in their rematch on Friday.

The Chargers managed to inch out into a 16-14 lead in the opening quarter, but Farmville Central charged back in the second period. The Jags posted a 22-16 advantage and took a 36-32 lead into the dressing rooms.

Both teams pushed through 12 points in the third quarter as Farmville held on to take a 48-44 margin into the last period. In that, the Jags held off Ayden-Grifton, 16-15, to post the win.

Kennedy Williams led Farmville with 22 points while Tyrone Joyner added 18 and Gary Moore had 10. Ronnell Peterson was high for the Chargers with 19 while Eric Blount had 14 and Hilton Ellison had 12.

Farmville is now 15-4 overall while Ayden-Grifton drops to 14-5.

With the win, Farmville Central's girls boosted their record to 10-0 in league play. Ayden-Grifton, in second place, is now 7-2 and at best could only tie the Lady Jaguars for the title. And since Farmville won both meetings of the two, the Jags will be the league's top seed come the playoffs. One more Farmville win or an Ayden-Grifton loss will wrap up the title for the Jaguars.

But it was a hard win to come by. Ayden-Grifton jumped off to an 8-3 lead in the opening period and sped away with a 23-14 margin in the second quarter. That left the Lady Chargers in a 31-17 halftime lead.

But Farmville held the Chargers to only four third period points and scored 12 of their own to close to 35-29. Then, in the last quarter, Farmville outhit the Chargers, 18-10, building up a four-point lead near the end and never allowing A-G to have a shot at tying the game again.

Liesa Lang led Farmville with 27 points while Michel Whitfield had 16 and Karen Edmonds had 14 for Ayden-Grifton.

Ayden-Grifton travels to C.B. Aycock while Farmville entertains non-conference foe North Lenoir on Friday.

Over 30 Seek Job

East Carolina University Director of Athletics Ken Karr announced Wednesday that applications are coming in for the men's head basketball coaching position for the Pirates.

Karr, who is chairman of the search committee, said that more than 30 applications have been received although the search process is not even into its first week.

"We've had tremendous response from interested candidates as well as those wishing to act as a reference in behalf of a candidate," Dr. Karr said. "It has reinforced our view that the head basketball coaching opportunity at East Carolina is an attractive one,"

Karr also announced that he has completed talks with former University of Maryland coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell. Driesell has been speculated as a possible candidate for the ECU post.

"Coach Driesell and I had extensive telephone conversations concerning our head coaching position," Karr said. "He stated to me that he was not ready to make a career decision at this time and wished to keep his future options open," thus withdrawing his name.

CAA Swim Title Goes On Line

East Carolina, fresh off a combined 17-5 dual meet season, prepares to host the second annual Colonial Athletic Association swimming and diving championships which begin tonight at Minges Natatorium.

ECU will join six other teams in the battle for the CAA crown. The Pirates narrowly defeated James Madison for the men's title last year at UNC-Wilmington, while the women's championship was captured by James Madison.

"We've been gearing toward this meet all year," ECU swim coach Rick Kobe said. "It should be a very competitive meet. The CAA has turned into a very good swimming conference.

"Navy appears to be the team to beat in the men's competition, with East Carolina and James Madison on their heels," Kobe said. "JMU once again is the top women's team, but you could see us give them a little more competition this year."

The Pirates finished the regular season at 7-3, their fourth consecutive winning season. The ECU men recorded impressive regular season wins over Furman and Duke, and victories over CAA foes Richmond, American and UNC-Wilmington.

Leading the ECU effort has been sophomore distance freestyler David Killeen, senior Rolo Fleming, and freshman Andy Jeter and Raymond Kennedy. The latter has been ECU's biggest surprise this year, and is undefeated in the breaststroke.

The Lady Pirates finished the 1986-87 season with a 10-2 record, including wins over Furman, Duke and Old Dominion. Seniors Scotia Miller and Caycee Poust, along with newcomers Robin Wicks and Pamela Wilbanks, have been ECU's outstanding performers.

In addition to ECU, teams from James Madison, UNC-Wilmington, Richmond, William & Mary, American and Navy will be competing. Only George Mason of the CAA will not be represented.

Tonight's activities begin at 5:30 p.m. with trials in the 1-meter diving.

The remainder of the week's schedule calls for trials to be held Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 11 a.m., with finals at 7 p.m. nightly.

Edenton Holds Off Williamston

EDENTON — Edenton Holmes held off Williamston to claim a 54-49 Northeastern Conference basketball victory Tuesday night. Edenton's girls also came away with a win, taking a 46-32 decision.

The Aces inched out into a 12-11 lead in the first period. For most of the rest of the way, the two teams swapped points on a fairly equal basis. The score was 24-23 at the half and 36-35 as the final period got underway.

In that, Edenton held off Williamston, 18-14, to pull out the win.

Robert Rankins led Edenton with 18 points while Devonne Felton added 15 and Darrell Overton had 13. Guy Spruill led Williamston with 17 while Reggie Randolph added 10.

Edenton's girls inched out to a 12-10 lead after one period and doubled that margin in the second. Edenton held a 10-8 margin in that, giving the Lady Aces a 22-18 halftime edge.

The third period decided it as Edenton outshot Williamston, 16-6, to power out to a 38-24 lead. Both teams scored eight points in the final quarter.

Arlene Twine led Edenton with 19 points while Monique Pou had 18 to lead Williamston.

Williamston's boys are now 4-6 in league play and 9-10 overall. The girls are 3-7, 7-12.

Williamston travels to Roanoke Rapids on Friday.

Jamesville Nips Aurora, 47-45

JAMESVILLE — Jamesville held off Aurora to gain a 47-45 Tobacco Belt Conference basketball victory Tuesday night.

Aurora's girls, however, took a 36-32 win over Jamesville, in their game.

Jamesville's boys pushed out to a 13-7 lead in the first period of play and held onto that margin through the rest of the half. At intermission, the Bullets took a 26-20 edge into the dressing rooms.

Aurora came back and outscored the Bullets, 11-8, in the third quarter, cutting the lead back to 34-31.

Then, with under a minute to go in the game, Jamesville held only a 44-43 lead. After missing at the line, the Bullets got the ball back on a missed shot by the Trojans and Ben James was intentionally fouled. He hit the second for a 45-43 lead and the Bullets took the ball out of bounds. John Hagan was then fouled on the inbounds and made both for a 47-43 lead.

Aurora cut the gap back to the final 47-45 margin by scoring the final points of the game.

Hagan and Eric Spruill each had 12 while Charles Parker had 11 for Jamesville. Byron Hill had 20 and Ricky Smith added 13 for Aurora.

Jamesville's girls took a 12-7 lead after one period, but were unable to hold onto it. Aurora came back with a 15-7 margin in the second quarter, pushing ahead, 22-19, at halftime.

Aurora then held Jamesville scoreless in the third quarter, pushing out to a 32-19 lead. Jamesville rallied, 13-4, but could not catch up again.

Crystal Lupton led Aurora with 14 while Chanin Perry had 18 for Jamesville.

Jamesville's boys are now 7-9 in TBC play and 7-11 overall. The girls drop to 3-13 in the league and 3-15 overall.

Rams Top Devils In OT By 46-44

DEEP RUN — Jake Barrow hit a shot at the horn to pull Greene Central through an overtime basketball victory over South Lenoir, 46-44, Tuesday night.

South Lenoir's girls downed Greene Central, 55-46, in their meeting earlier in the evening.

South Lenoir was suffering through the game due to the absence of seven regulars, including three starters, benched for disciplinary reasons. "They played a great ball game, considering the circumstances they were under," Greene Central coach Lewis Godwin said.

The Rams jumped out to a 14-8 lead in the opening quarter, only to see the Blue Devils outhit them, 16-14, in the second. That still left the Rams up, 28-24, at intermission.

In the third quarter, a 7-3 Blue Devil advantage knotted it at 31-31 as the final period opened.

Tyrone Hardy tied it at 41-41 for the Rams and with 48 seconds left, the Blue Devils missed a chance to take the lead with a one-and-one. The Rams got the rebound but missed on the final shot to send it into overtime.

Michael Hooker made three of four free throws in the early going to give South Lenoir a 44-41 lead with 1:25 to go. Anthony Jones, however, made the first of two shots for the Rams, and O.J. Shepherd cleared the rebound when the second was missed and threw it back to tie it at 44-44 with 10 seconds to go.

South Lenoir turned the ball over on the inbounds and Woodrow Wallace got it with a time called with five seconds to go. Barrow then made the 15-footer to give the Rams the win.

"I had a lot of confidence in our players, so it didn't matter that much who shot," Godwin said. "I have to give our bench a lot of credit for playing as they did when we got into foul trouble."

Hooker finished with 16 points to lead all scorers while Melvin Dove added 14 for the Devils. No one scored in double figures for Greene Central.

South Lenoir's girls took a 16-10 lead after one period then had to scramble in the second period as the Lady Rams rallied, 15-8. That put Greene Central ahead at the half, 25-24.

South Lenoir came back to take the lead as the third ended, 37-35. They outhit the Rams, 18-11, in the final period to take the win.

Sonya King led the Lady Devils with 19 while Joanna Grant added 18 and Kelly Thompson had 10. Joy Albritton led Greene Central with 19 while Chanel Hooker had 15.

Greene Central's boys are now 5-4 in league play and 9-10 overall. The girls slump to 1-8 in the league and 3-16 overall.

The Rams play host to Pamlico on Friday.

Rose Tops Kinston...

period ended in an 18-18 deadlock on Jenkins' slam dunk with 16 seconds to go.

Rose took the lead for the first time as Warren hit off the baseline nine seconds into the second period, 20-18. The two then exchanged the lead three times and knotted it up on six occasions before it again ended in a 34-34 deadlock at the half. Kinston did built up a 32-28 lead before Rose got two straight baskets from Errol Wooten to tie it up one more time.

Oddly enough, neither team went to the free throw line in the first half.

Rose retook the lead to open the third period on a basket by Wooten, 36-34, but a three-point play by Taylor — including the game's first free throw — put the Vikes back up, 39-38.

There were two more exchanges of the lead before Wooten's baseline jumper was followed by a driving layup by Warren to give Rose a 44-41 lead.

The Rampants held the lead until the final second of the half, when, after a turnover, Kinston regained the lead, 53-52, on a tap-back by Milton Gooding just before the horn sounded.

Leo Lockhard nailed two free throws and Gooding added a basket as the final period opened to run the Viking lead to 57-52 before Rose put together a rally.

Trailing 59-54, Rose got eight straight to push into a 62-59 lead. Jenkins started it with two free throws and Warren followed with a layup and a steal for two baskets. He then finished it off with a third basket, but missed on a chance at a three-point play with 5:29 left.

Kinston came back, however, and recaptured the lead at 65-63 as Gooding made a basket and then added two free throws. He then followed up his own miss the next time down the court to pad the lead to 67-63 and set up the last frantic Rose rally that carried through to the win.

Jenkins finished with 24 points for Rose, now 17-2 overall. Both Wooten and Warren added 16 and Langley had 10. Kinston, which is now 12-7 overall and 7-4 in the league, was led by Gooding with 24 while Lockhart had 14, Taylor had 13 and Haddock had 10.

Rose's girls shot out to an 8-0 lead before Kinston finally got on the scoreboard with a basket by Crystal Wooten, and the period ended there — 8-2.

Rose scored the first two baskets of the second period to up its lead to 12-2 before Kinston came alive and scored six straight to cut it to 12-8.

But the Rampettes again went on a four-point binge, running the lead back to eight, and finally to 21-12 as the half ended.

Rose scored the first five of the second half to make it 26-12, boosted it to 16 at 32-16, and finally scored the last six points of the period to run the lead out to 38-18.

The margin reached 43-20 early in the final period before Kinston managed to cut it back to 49-33 with 1:46 left. But Rose outhit them, 4-2 the rest of the way to settle it.

"We got off to a little bit of a slow start, but I thought we played fairly well after that," Rose Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "I was very impressed with the way we passed, especially Kim Bridges. She had an awful lot of assists out there tonight.

"We played a lot harder these last few games. We're playing defense better. Both (Kim) Dupree and Bridges are doing a good job of leading the team," Kuykendall said. "And both (Nicole) Maxon and (Lisa) Leisten are doing a good job on the other teams' guards."

Rose was led by Dupree with 22 while Leisten added 12. Kinston was paced by Melvina Barnes with 16.

The Rose girls are now 15-2 overall while Kinston falls to 8-12 overall and 4-7 in Big East play.

Rose travels to Wilson Fike for two very important games on Friday.

Terra Ceia In Upset Of Trinity

TERRA CEIA — Ted O'Harrow poured in 34 points to lead Terra Ceia Christian to a 59-51 upset basketball victory over Trinity Christian Tuesday night.

Terra Ceia's girls also came away with a win, downing Trinity, 55-38.

Trinity held a 14-9 lead after one period, but the Knights came back with a 14-12 advantage in the second quarter. That cut the Tiger lead to 26-23 lead at the half.

In the third, Terra Ceia outhit Trinity again, 16-14, to close to within 40-39. Then, in the final period, the Knights outhit the Tigers, 20-11, to pull off the upset.

Todd Tinker added 13 more points for the Knights, while Trinity was led by Joey Braxton with 15, Kyler Welch with 12 and Kresten Welch with 10.

The two girls teams battled under even terms throughout the first quarter, which ended in a 11-11 deadlock. But in the second quarter, the Lady Knights began to pull away, taking a 22-16 halftime lead.

Neither team could gain on the other in the third period, which ended with Terra Ceia leading, 34-28. Terra Ceia outhit Trinity, 21-10, in the final period to win going away.

Trinity's boys are now 16-2 while the girls are 1-7. Trinity travels to Durham Liberty on Friday.

Cox Finished Second In Meet

WINTERVILLE — Faulty information given to The Daily Reflector earlier this week resulted in an incorrect impression regarding the A.G. Cox wrestling program.

Cox finished second in a seven-team tournament, losing to the winner by one point in the event. Cox won the regular season title with a 7-1 record on the season.

Growth of wholesale/retail, government and service employment in Pitt County exceeded 70 percent in the past decade.

For Valentine's Day,
Brody's Wants You,
The Public,
To Be Our Valentine.

We think you deserve some nice things...a new tie, new dress, new coat, new perfume, or maybe, new shoes. In fact, Brody's invites you to take home one of these items as a Valentine's gift from us to you...to show how much we care. Of course, we will require a slight compensation. After all, True Love is not cheap.

Brody's for men.
And Brody's for women.

Conley Tops Eagles...

Rhonda Jackson, who led Conley with 16 points, nailed two free throws with just over two and a half minutes left in regulation to pull the Valkyries within four at 52-48.

Conley's Charlene Davenport then nailed a jumper to make it 52-50 with 2:21 remaining.

After Chundra Crouell missed two free throws for the Lady Eagles with 1:35 to go, the Valkyries' Trellaney Boyd scored to tie the game at 52-52.

Glenda Hardy then came up with a steal for Conley and with 46 seconds left in the fourth period, Boyd knocked in two free throws to make it 54-52.

West Craven then moved the ball down court and tied the game at 54-54 on a jumper by Crouell as the teams headed for overtime.

Conley took the initial lead in the first overtime at 56-54 on a layup by Boyd but West Craven countered with a free throw from Linetta Bryant and a basket by Patricia Bryant to take a 57-56 lead.

Hardy hit for Conley to make it 58-57. The teams then traded free throws for the remainder of the first overtime period.

Kisha Raynor hit two and Patricia Bryant hit one for West Craven while Jackson hit four from the line, including two with 14 seconds to go that tied the game at 62-62.

In the second overtime, Crouell gave West Craven a 64-62 early lead. West Craven hit four of seven free throws in the second extra period while Conley hit on one of seven free throws in the final period to seal its fate.

Kim Payton added 14 points for Conley while Hardy and Boyd each had 11. Crouell led the Lady Eagles with 17 points while Patricia Bryant added 11.

With the loss, the Valkyries fall to 6-15 and 1-9 in the Coastal.

Duggins' Basket Eases Roanoke Past Panthers

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke's Mike Duggins sunk a shot with seven seconds left to allow the Redskins to pull out a 51-50 basketball victory over North Pitt in a non-conference game Tuesday night.

The North Pitt girls came away with a 47-25 win in their meeting with the Redskins.

Roanoke built up a 16-10 lead in the opening period of the boys' game and continued to hold onto it in the second quarter. The Redskins posted a 16-12 margin and built their lead to 32-22 by halftime.

But in the third period, North Pitt rallied and outhit Roanoke, 18-13, cutting the lead to 45-40. In the final quarter, North Pitt finally took the lead, 50-49, on a basket by William Morning with 16 seconds left following a steal.

But Duggins hit with seven seconds to go and North Pitt's buzzer attempt to pull it out missed.

Derrick Boyd led Roanoke with 21 points while Ricky Congleton added 14. North Pitt was led by Ashley Sheppard with 17.

North Pitt's girls built up a 13-9 lead in the first period and outscored the Lady Redskins, 10-4, in the second. That made it 23-13 at the half.

The Pant-Hers continued to pull away in the third, building the lead to 36-22. They finished off Roanoke, 11-3, in the final quarter.

Amy Heath led North Pitt with 17 points while Keisha Pilgreen had 11 and Gwen Pilgreen had 10. Joyce Outlaw had 10 to lead Roanoke.

Roanoke's boys are now 7-11 overall while North Pitt falls to 8-11. The North Pitt girls are 11-9 while Roanoke is 10-8.

North Pitt plays host to South Lenoir on Friday, while Roanoke travels to Ahoskie.

N. Lenoir Nips Pack

WASHINGTON — Keisha Bouie scored with 13 seconds left in overtime as North Lenoir girl's slipped past Washington, 52-51, in Coastal Conference basketball action Tuesday night.

The Pam Pack led 26-25 at the half and expanded that to 39-33 after three quarters of play. North Lenoir then outscored Washington 17-11 over the final quarter to draw even.

Lisa West led North Lenoir with 12 points while Diane Wooten added 11. Washington, 4-5 in the Coastal and 10-7 overall, was led by Tonya Holley with 16 points and Catherine Occhipinti with 15.

The boy's game was postponed until tonight at 6:30 because of a clock malfunction.

The Pam Pack returns to action Friday at Havelock.

Greenville Christian Gets Sweep Over Bethel Christian

Greenville Christian Academy romped to a 77-50 basketball victory over Bethel Christian Tuesday night.

Greenville's girls also had an easy time, rolling up a 68-12 victory.

The Knights charged out to a 26-12 lead in the first quarter of the boys' game. They came back with a 27-16 margin in the second frame, taking a 53-28 lead into the dressing rooms.

Greenville continued to pull away in the third period, 13-8, giving the Knights a 66-36 edge. Bethel managed a 14-11 margin in the final quarter.

Paul Hollingsworth led the Knights with 23 points while John May added 15 and Robin House had 14. Bethel was paced by Jesse Harrison with 14, Dan Heath with 12 and Barry Deaver with 11.

"We played a good first half," Coach Dale Thatcher said, "one of our better halves fo the year. We played good defense, but there are still other areas we need to work on."

The win boosts Greenville to 13-4 on the year.

Greenvile's girls rolled up a 12-4 lead in the first quarter and extended that to 28-6 at halftime. By the end of the third period, it was 48-8. Greenville outscored Bethel, 20-4, in the final quarter.

Kim Faulkner led Greenville with 15 while Sandy Johnston had 12 and both Amber Tripp and Myra Locklear each had 10.

"Our defense was good all night long," Thatcher said. "I think we're ready for Friday night's game."

That contest, when Greenville hosts Wilson Christian, is an important one in the Eastern Carolina Christian Conference standings. The girls are now 11-1.

Blue Devils Roll Past Harvard

By The Associated Press

With a 6- to 8-inch advantage over Harvard's players, 7-foot-2 Duke reserve center Martin Nessley was easy to spot and the visibility helped him to a career-high 25 points.

"It really felt good playing tonight," Nessley said Tuesday after the 15th-ranked Blue Devils defeated Harvard 98-86. "The guys were looking for me more. Harvard had 6-6 guys and we could throw it over them."

Harvard, 8-11, made a brief run in the second half as senior Arne Duncan scored seven straight points and Tedd Evers added five to cut the lead to 86-69 with 3:24 remaining. Nessley responded with a three-point play, and Duke, 20-4, then pulled further ahead.

Four other Blue Devils were also in double figures: Quin Snyder with 17, Danny Ferry, 15, Tommy Amaker, 14, and John Smith, 10.

Harvard was led by Duncan's 20 points, while Evers contributed 17 and Kyle Dodson added 14.

"I was not pleased with our defensive performance," Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "It seemed as though every time down court in the last 11 minutes, Harvard either scored or we fouled them. Harvard keeps good pressure on you offensively. They ran their system and had confidence in it throughout the game."

Duke has won 20 games for the fourth straight season, the first time the Blue Devils have done that since 1961-66.

"We're certainly pleased," Krzyzewski said. "Going into the season, that was one of our goals. It's especially good to do it after 24 games."

In the only other Atlantic Coast Conference game Tuesday, Georgia Tech held off a Maryland rally to take a 78-74 victory.

Maryland twice rallied from 10-point deficits in the second half, but Craig Neal came off the bench to sink five three-point shots and then calmly sank two free throws with nine seconds left to seal the victory.

Georgia Tech is now 14-7 overall record, 5-4 in the ACC, while the Terps are 6-12 and 0-10 in the conference.

Aycock Slips Past Kinston

KINSTON — E.B. Aycock posted a 59-58 win over Kinston in junior high basketball action Tuesday.

Aycock was led by Julius Smith with 14 points while Walter Gatlin added 11. Aycock improves to 6-2 and returns to action Friday hosting Wilson Fike.

Houston Sets Track Mark; Takes Goody's 500 Pole

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Tommy Houston set a late model sportsman track qualifying record Tuesday as he won the pole position for the Goody's 300 with a lap averaging 194.389 mph at Daytona International Speedway.

Houston, driving a Buick, won his first-ever superspeedway pole in 22 years of racing as he led the opening round of time trials for Saturday's 300-mile event.

"I'm kind of flabbergasted at finally doing this well on one of the bigger tracks," said Houston, whose 22-year-old son Scott is his crew chief. "It's taken a long time and it feels just as sweet I thought it would."

His lap broke the record of 191.310 set by Larry Pearson in 1986.

L.D. Ottinger was second in another Buick, well behind Houston at 192.691, while Dale Jarrett's Buick was third at 192.567.

Dale Earnhardt, the defending Goody's 300 and Winston Cup champion and one of 11 NASCAR stock car regulars entered in the season-opening Busch Grand National series event, was fourth at 192.464 in a Chevrolet.

The top 20 positions were filled Tuesday, with 56 competitors taking qualifying laps. The rest of the 40-car field will be filled in another round of time trials Wednesday.

Seventeen of the top 20 cars, including Houston's, are powered by V6 engines.

Other Winston Cup drivers who were among the top 20 were defending Daytona 500 champion Geoff Bodine, Bobby Allison, Harry Gant, Donnie Allison, Morgan Shepherd and Darrell Waltrip.

Bill Elliott, who won the pole for Sunday's $1.5 million Daytona 500 with a track qualifying record of 210.364 mph on Monday, was well off the pace in the sportsman qualifying. His Ford was 31st at 185.981.

"This is an all-new operation, something all new for us," said Elliott, who insisted he was not disappointed by his performance. "We haven't had that much time to practice in the car and we've just got to work on handling."

Neil Bonnett, Rusty Wallace and Ron Bouchard also failed to qualify in the top 20.

The top 20 qualifiers for Saturday's Goody's 300 late model sportsman race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph. (Remainder of 40-car field will be determined in time trials Wednesday):

1. Tommy Houston, Buick, 194.389 (breaks sportsman track qualifying record of 191.130 by Larry Pearson in 1986).
2. L.D. Ottinger, Buick, 192.691.
3. Dale Jarrett, Buick, 192.567.
4. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 192.464.
5. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 192.033.
6. Bobby Allison, Buick, 191.791.
7. Harry Gant, Buick, 191.693.
8. Donnie Allison, Buick, 191.689.
9. Morgan Shepherd, Buick, 191.063.
10. Mike Alexander, Buick, 190.658.
11. Darrell Waltrip, Chevrolet, 190.512.
12. Larry Pearson, Chevrolet, 189.970.
13. Merv Treichler, Buick, 189.813.
14. Robert Ingram, Buick, 189.076.
15. Tommy Riggins, Buick, 188.877.
16. Elton Sawyer, Chevrolet, 188.632.
17. Larry Pollard, Chevrolet, 188.497.
18. Mark Martin, Ford, 188.186.
19. Kenny Burks, Pontiac, 187.856.
20. Glenn Jarrett, Ford, 187.762.

Heggie's Free Throws Lift Tribe Past Pirates

BATH — Greg Heggie hit two free throws with 13 seconds left to lift Chocowinity past Bath, 45-43, in Tobacco Belt conference basketball Tuesday night.

Bath's Ed Russ had a chance to tie the game with one second to go but he missed the front end of a one and one and the Indians' Deryl Moore got the rebound.

The Indians led 28-23 at the half and expanded that to 36-28 by the end of the third quarter but Bath outscored Chocowinity 15-9 over the final frame to narrow the gap.

Dale Garrett added 12 points for Chocowinity, 9-10 and 7-10.

Tommy Warren led Bath with 15 points while Steven Braddy added 12.

In the girl's game, Paula Peele scored a season-high 25 points to lead Chocowinity to a 59-26 romp over Bath.

Chocowinity jumped out to a 19-4 lead after the first quarter and never looked back, building up a 31-11 halftime advantage.

Chocowinity improves to 15-2 in the Tobacco Belt 1-A ad 16-3 overall.

To The Sports Editor:

The progress that the men's basketball program as ECU has made in the past five years is about to go down the drain.

The athletic department should stop its search for a men's basketball coach and look right under their noses. Charlie Harrison is the best thing to happen to ECU basketball in the history of their program. There is no way they could hire a better coach and they probably could convince Charlie to come back if they just give him what he deserves — a raise.

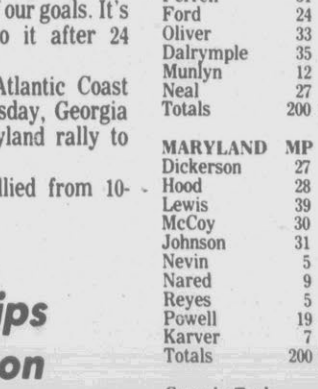

How many people work five years without one?

If ECU is going to develop a class program, they need to make class decisions. Charlie should have gotten a new contract back in December.

Charlie will get another job in basketball and I'd bet Ken Karr's next pay raise that we will regret letting him go. In several years we'll be saying goodbye to the next men's basketball coach who leaves because of lack of support.

Sacks Leads Daytona 500 Qualifying

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Greg Sacks led second-day qualifiers for the Daytona 500 with a lap of 201.428 mph Tuesday at Daytona International Speedway.

Sacks was one of only three drivers among the 37 who qualified over 200 mph in the opening round of time trials on Monday who decided not to stand on their first-day laps.

It was a good decision for the winner of the 1985 Firecracker 400 here as his Pontiac Grand Prix 2+2 improved from 200.508, moving him up several rows for Thursday's Twin 125-mile qualifying race. However, he wasn't very happy with the small improvement.

"It was a little disappointing," said Sacks. "We expected to run faster. But I think it will make a good race car."

In all 60 drivers have posted qualifying speeds Monday and Tuesday and two others, Jonathon Edwards and Steve Christman, will be given an opportunity to run Wednesday morning. If they are deemed fast enough by NASCAR officials, one of them will be added to the back of each of the 30-car twin qualifier lineups.

David Sosebee was 35th on Monday at 200.579, but decided to try to better that on Tuesday. However, he had a problem with a tire and crashed, damaging his car. NASCAR officials allowed him to go back to his Monday lap because the tire that went flat was ruled defective.

Chet Fillip, the former Indy-car driver who qualified Monday at 200.566, requalified Tuesday and lost ground all the way to 198.330 because of an engine problem.

However, both Phil Barkdoll and Ed Pimm moved above the 200 mph mark Tuesday, with Barkdoll turning a 200.463 and Pimm, another Indy-car driver, coming up with a 200.133 lap.

Pimm said, "It's the first time I've ever raced a car with a roof and I'm really enjoying it. Wow! An Indy-car would go about 250 miles an hour down here and this (200) is plenty fast for one of these (stock cars)."

Bill Elliott and Davey Allison led the qualifying on Monday at 210.364 — a track qualifying record — and 209.084, locking in starting spots in Sunday's 40-car field.

Positions 2 through 30 will be determined in Thursday's qualifiers, with the rest of the field reverting to qualifying speeds Monday and Tuesday.

America's Cup Makes Stop At Its Old Home

NEW YORK (AP) — The America's Cup is destined to go to San Diego, but it made a brief return appearance in the Big Apple — too brief for some at the New York Yacht Club.

The cup, for 132 years a private treasure of the city's sailing set, was lost in 1983 to the Australians, then won back a week ago — but by a California-sponsored crew.

Tuesday, in ticker-tape parade up Fifth Avenue, the trophy passed less than half a block from the yacht club, as close as it will get to its former home until at least 1989, when the race is to be held again.

A number of the club staff and members joined about 100,000 fans watching the parade. It was the first time in their recollection that the urn-like silver vessel had been viewed by the public.

"As long as I have been here, it has never been on public display," club librarian and curator Sohei Hohri said. "In 1951, it was sent to London for the Festival of England for several months. But never otherwise."

"It's a once in a lifetime thing, to be in a ticker-tape parade," he said.

Youth Soccer Registration

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will offer an indoor soccer program for youths ages 5-18.

Registration will be held at Elm Street Gym, Feb. 16-20, from 3 to 6 p.m. T-shirts will be provided and a registration fee of $10 is charged per entrant.

The program will be held at Elm Street Gym, with teams of 6-8 players. General high school rules will be in effect with some modifications. Regular and youth sized felt soccer balls will be used.

Age groups include 5-6, 7-8, 9-10, 11-12, 13-14 and 15-18, ages as of April 1, 1987. Five year old competitors must be in a kindergarten program, either private or public. Play will begin on March 16.

Practice days and times are as follows:

☐5-6 — Mondays and Wednesdays, 3:30-4:30 p.m.
☐7-8 — Mondays and Wednesdays, 4:30-5:30 p.m.
☐9-10 — Tuesdays and Thursdays, 3:30-4:30 p.m.
☐11-12 — Tuesday and Thursdays, 4:30-5:30 p.m.
☐13-14 — Tuesdays and Thursdays, 7-8 p.m.
☐15-18 — Tuesdays and Thursdays, 8-9 p.m.

Belhaven Rolls Past Bear Grass

BELHAVEN — Melvin Stachell poured in 32 points as Belhaven rolled past Bear Grass, 70-56, in a Tobacco Belt 1-A Conference basketball game Tuesday.

Belhaven led 42-31 at the half and expanded that to 56-41 by the end of the third frame. Bear Grass outscored Belhaven 17-14 in the final frame but could get no closer.

Galet Holloway added 14 points for Belhaven. Bear Grass, 4-23 and 3-18, was led by Steve Cowan's 17 points. Almer Riddick's chipped in 14 and Steve Brown added 13 more.

In the girl's game, Michelle Leathers scored 28 points to lead Belhaven to a 58-55 win over the Lady Bears.

Bear Grass led by seven at the half, 31-24, and but Belhaven came back to take a 42-40 lead after three quarters of play.

Janet Rogerson scored 28 points to lead Bear Grass, 4-20 and 4-14 in the Tobacco Belt 1-A.

The Bears return to action Friday hosting Bath.

Son Arrested

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A sheriff's lieutenant who was leading an undercover crackdown on illegal drugs saw his own son arrested and taken to jail.

David Reese, 22, son of Indian River County sheriff's Lt. Bob Reese, was charged with possession of cocaine, officials said.

"No one is immune" from being arrested, said the officer, who for months has helped coordinate a county-wide crackdown on street-level drug sales and was out with other officers when his son was arrested.

Sheriff Tim Dobeck said the officer "is having a heartbreak from both sides," referring to Reese's efforts dealing with the county's cocaine problem and his son's arrest.

Refusal

DALLAS (AP) — The United Methodist Reporter, a weekly newspaper with a circulation of about 500,000, has refused to run an advertisment for Affirmation, the unofficial caucus of lesbian and gay United Methodists.

The paper's editor-general manager, Spurgeon Dunnam III, said the ad would put "us in position of promoting something" repudiated by the denomination's governing General Council.

It has termed homosexual activity "imcompatible with Christian teaching."

USDA Says Farm Supports Adding To Worldwide Economic Problems

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government farm price supports and subsidies are important in many countries, including the United States, but they also are adding to some of the problems in the global economy, says a new study by the Agriculture Department.

"This intervention has been costly for taxpayers and consumers, has contributed to serious imbalances in world supply and demand, has limited world trade opportunities, and has contributed to depressed world commodity prices," the department's Economic Research Service said.

The report was prepared by the agency's international and national economics divisions "for limited distribution to the research community" outside the department as part of a trade liberalization project.

Information in the report was said to be important in negotiations affecting global trade since it offers "a possible framework for multilateral exchange of concessions on agricultural policies."

Analysts looked at government intervention in the agricultural sectors of market-oriented countries most active in world trade as either exporters or importers. Those included 10 less-developed countries and six developed countries during the 1982-84 period.

"Findings reveal a tendency for less-developed nations to assist consumers and for developed nations to assist producers," the report said. "Food grain, dairy product and sugar producer assistance tended to be higher than assistance to other producers."

The six developed countries or regions included: Australia, Canada, the European Common Market, New Zealand, Japan and the United States. Less-developed countries included: Argentina, Brazil, India, Mexico, Nigeria, South Africa, South Korea, Sudan, Taiwan and Thailand.

In order to make comparisons, analysts calculated equivalent numbers to measure subsidies benefiting producers and consumers. Those measured "the levels of subsidies which would be required to compensate producers and consumers for removing government programs."

Allowances were made for tariff and non-tariff policies, and other government policies that enhance or subsidize in one way or another.

No U.S. dollar amounts were attached to the comparisons, since all benefits were converted to numerical ratios or indicators. The higher the indicator on a scale of zero to 1.0 or higher, the heavier the subsidy.

The ratios are called "producer subsidy equivalents" and "consumer subsidy equivalents," depending on how the various countries skewed their programs.

"For example, India and Argentina taxed their wheat producers while Japan and Brazil heavily subsidized theirs," the report said. "Australia provided little assistance to producers of most commodities considered, except dairy products. Japan, on the other hand, heavily subsidized producers of most products, except citrus and non-ruminant meat products."

The report added: "Consumer subsidy equivalent calculations suggest that the effect of government intervention in developed agricultural sectors has been to tax consumers through higher-than-world domestic prices. Taxpayers also assumed the costs of government intervention through government expenditures."

European Common Market and Japanese consumers bore most of the cost of their governments' farm supports for all commodities except oilseeds, the study found.

In the United States, Canada and Australia, consumers bore the costs of government support to dairy farmers, the report said. On the other hand, assistance to U.S. and Canadian grain producers mostly came from government spending.

"In developing countries such as Nigeria, India and Argentina, we often found that government intervention in agriculture resulted in consumer subsidies," the report said.

The ratios were used to rank some counties according to their degree of subsidization of producers. For example, Austalia was put at the bottom of the scale for wheat subsidies for producers, while Brazil and Japan were at the top. The United States was ranked with the Common Market, South Africa and Nigeria, all of which were exceeded by South Korea, Taiwan, Japan and Brazil.

IN RE: Foreclosure of Deed of Trust Executed by Roy E. Ballard and wife, Jane M. Ballard, dated January 28, 1975, and of record in Book G-43, Page 37, Pitt County Public Registry by C.W. Everett, Trustee
NOTICE OF SALE OF LAND UNDER DEED OF TRUST

Under and by virtue of the power and authority contained in that certain deed of trust dated January 28, 1975, executed by Roy E. Ballard and wife, Jane M. Ballard, and duly recorded in the Office of the Register of Deeds for Pitt County, North Carolina, in Book G-43, page 37, in which C.W. Everett, was named Trustee, default having been made in the payment of the indebtedness thereby secured, and pursuant to the demand of the owner and holder of the indebtedness secured thereby, and after notice and hearing and order authorizing foreclosure to proceed by the Clerk of Superior Court of Pitt County dated June 25, 1986, and done in accordance with Section 45-21.16 of the General Statutes of North Carolina, the undersigned Trustee will, at 12:00 Noon on February 13, 1987, at the front door of the Pitt County Courthouse (Third Street entrance), offer for sale to the highest bidder for cash, at public auction, that certain real property and the improvements located thereon described as lying and being in Pitt County, North Carolina, and more particularly described as follows:

Lying and being in Bethel Township, Pitt County, State of North Carolina, and being situated on the south side of U.S. Highway #64 about two miles westwardly from the Town of Bethel, being bounded on the north by U.S. Highway #64 and the lands of Lindsay Griffin, on the east by Walter Latham and F.L. Bount, on the south by J.D. Batchelor and Grover Wynne, and being that land shown on a plat entitled "Della Martin Warren Plat of Land", prepared by L.S. Manning, R.L.S., dated July 28, 1967, and recorded in the Public Registry of Pitt County in Map Book 20, Page 90, to which map reference is hereby made, containing 115 acres, more or less.

The improvements on said property are included in the sale. Said sale will be made subject to all ad valorem taxes and any outstanding governmental assessments, building restrictions and easements of record and drainage assessments then due and outstanding.

The last and highest bidder at the sale will be required to make a cash deposit of ten percent (10%) of the first one thousand dollars of the bid price and five percent (5%) of the balance of the bid price at said sale.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area members of Congress were recordeds on major roll call votes during the week ending Feb. 9.

House

VETO OVERRIDE — By a vote of 401 for and 26 against, the House overrode President Reagan's veto of a bill authorizing $20 billion through 1994 for federal clean water programs, including $18 billion to help communities build sewage treatment facilities.

The Senate followed suit and the measure (HR 1) became law.

Arlan Stangeland, R-Minn., who voted to override the veto, said, "I believe President Reagan has listened to the wrong advice on clean water."

Robert Michel, R-Ill., who voted to sustain the veto, said he agrees with Reagan that the bill provides "excessive spending at a time of high deficits."

Members voting yes wanted the bill to become law.

Senate

CLEAN WATER VETO — By a tally of 86 for and 14 against, the Senate joined the House (above) in voting to negate President Reagan's veto of legislation reauthorizing the Federal Water Pollution Control Act at a cost of $20 billion through 1994.

Senators voting yes wanted the clean water bill to become law.

North Carolina Sen. Terry Sanford, D, voted yes. Sen. Jesse Helms, R, voted no.

55 MPH LIMIT — The Senate adopted, 65 for and 33 against, an amendment enabling states to raise the speed limit on rural interstates from 55 mph to 65 mph.

This occurred during debate on a $52.3 billion, four-year continuation of federal highway programs, a bill (S 387) later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Senators voting yes supported the 65 mph limit.

Sens. Sanford and Helms both voted yes.

BILLBOARD CONTROL — By a vote of 57 for and 40 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to hasten the removal of billboards from alongside interstates and other federal-aid highways.

The amendment sought to reform the Highway Beautification Act, which environmentalists say protects rather than polices the outdoor advertising industry.

To speed the removal of thousands of non-conforming billboards, it sought to ease the requirement that federal and state governments pay cash compensation whenever they force a billboard to be taken down.

Among other provisions, it makes it illegal to cut trees and vegetation on federal land to make billboards more visible.

The amendment was proposed to S 387 (see preceding vote).

Senators voting yes were opposed to the toughening of the Highway Beautification Act.

Sens. Sanford and Helms both voted yes.

"BUY AMERICA" — By a vote of 65 for and 33 against, the Senate tabled (killed) an amendment to S 387 (above) adding cement to the list of components of the federal-aid highway system that must be American-made.

Supporters of the requirement said it would help the U.S. cement industry combat unfair foreign competition, while foes said it would make federal highway construction even more costly to taxpayers.

Senators voting no supported the "buy American" amendment.

Sens. Sanford and Helms both voted yes.

TRANSIT WORKERS — The Senate rejected, 30 for and 70 against, an amendment to the highway bill (above) concerning unionized transit workers' rights under the Urban Mass Transportation Act (UMTA).

Sponsor Phil Gramm, R-Tex., said his amendment would stop unions from blocking efforts by public transit authorities to legally "contract-out" certain functions, such as bus service to an outlying suburb, to a private company that is non-union.

Senators voting no sided with organized labor and opposed the amendment.

Sen. Sanford voted no and Sen. Helms voted yes.

Greenville has an ordinance which prohibits the abandonment of vehicles on private property. To report an abandoned or junked vehicle, call the Engineering and Inspections Department at 752-4137.

Stress

Learning To Respond And Live With Tension In Everyday Life

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Individuals need some stress in their lives to be productive, said a local cardiovascular clinical nurse specialist, but too much stress may be harmful to a person's health.

"We all need a little stress in our lives to be alive, alert and with it," said Cindy Mayo, a nurse at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. She was speaking to people in the third class of a six-week series, "Eating for Heart Health," meeting at Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center.

"You have to respond to something," she said. "Stress and our response to stress are healthy."

But stress may not be the ideal stimulant for those suffering from heart disease, Ms. Mayo said. "Stress increases the blood pressure" and could create hypertension or abnormally high blood pressure.

When people are under a lot of stress, their muscles may tighten and they may experience tremors from the chronic anxiety of not being able to handle a situation they are experiencing, Ms. Mayo said. "It's the person that lives with that every day of their lives that are really in trouble.

"Hypertension is one of the big major bad guys" in contributing to heart disease, she said. The other two controllable risk factors for coronary heart disease are blood cholesterol and cigarette smoking.

"People don't seek help for hypertension because they don't feel bad," said Benno Marx, a doctor in the department of family medicine at the center. But, when a person suffers from hypertension, the heart has to work harder because the wall of the arteries become thicker.

Deposits from cholesterol, clots and debris mount in the arteries during normal blood circulation, he said. If a person also suffers from hypertension, "it's harder for the heart to contract with those thickened walls."

People are not always victims of their environment or a certain lifestyle, Ms. Mayo said. "We can control some things" to alleviate stress.

"Setting unrealistic expectations for yourself" increases stress, she said. "If you are a person with a very stressful lifestyle, some behaviors toward stress can be changed."

Exercises such as walking, doing needlework or gardening may help relax people when they are stressed if those are activities they enjoy doing, Ms. Mayo said. "Probably the premise to all relaxation exercise is deep breathing."

One exercise to alleviate stress includes giving the pain or aggravating incident a color, she said. Then, concentrate on breathing in white light and breathing out the nagging color.

As people concentrate on doing that, "that nagging feeling or pain will be a little bit less," Ms. Mayo said.

"Proven Stress Reducers" distributed to the class include:

*Get up 15 minutes earlier in the morning to make inevitable mishaps less stressful.

*Do not depend on memory. Write down appointments and things to do.

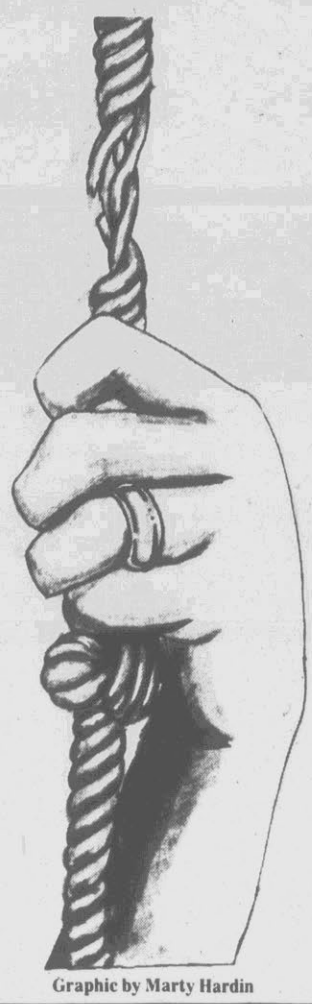

*Avoid procrastination, and plan ahead.

*Be patient.

*Simplify, simplify, simplify, and become more flexible.

Have a forgiving view of events and people, accepting the fact the world is imperfect.

"Setting unrealistic expectations for yourself" increases stress. "If you are a person with a very stressful lifestyle, some behaviors toward stress can be changed."

Horseback Riding Brings Solution

AVON, Minn. (AP) — Mary Lahr had never seen her son Michael ride a horse until recently.

"He's very stubborn. He doesn't like to be told to do anything," Mrs. Lahr said of her son, who is afflicted with tuberous sclerosis, a rare hereditary disease that is manifested by convulsive seizures, a progressive mental disorder and tumors of the kidneys and brain.

Michael, 18, has had brain surgery twice, his mother said.

Michael's stubborness showed when a volunteer at the therapeutic horseback riding clinic he was attending asked him to groom a horse with a stiff-bristled brush.

Michael made a growling noise, a noise he often makes when he's angry. He also didn't want to wear a riding helmet.

"He won't even wear a stocking cap unless it's 30 below," said his father, Duane Lahr.

So the Lahrs were amazed when volunteers hoisted their 96-pound son onto the back of a chestnut-colored quarter horse named Luke.

It took Michael a minute or two to realize what was going on. But when he did, his exuberance was easy to see.

"He's happy," Mrs. Lahr said as her son sat atop the horse and clapped his hands wildly. "He's excited. He does that when he's excited."

Using horses as therapy is not a new idea, said Don Holden, a professor at St. Cloud State University who was responsible for implementing the local program.

The idea began after Liz Hartel, who was crippled by polio as a young girl in Denmark, won a silver medal for dressage at the 1952 Olympic Games. Her efforts inspired a Norwegian physical therapist to develop a program whereby other handicapped youngsters could use horseback riding as therapy, Holden said. Since then, programs have started up around the world, he said.

"It's intended to be a family recreational program," said Mollie Wise, who assists Holden in locating handicapped people to take part in the clinic. "But more than anything it's a normalized experience for handicapped children and young adults."

For Holden, the idea of starting such a program began two years ago when he read some literature on therapeutic riding.

"Since I have horses and am interested in horses, something just clicked," he said. He called around and got information on how to begin such a program.

The riding sessions began this past summer.

"This is really a great program," said Terry Slingluff, father of 10-year-old Ryan Slingluff, who was born with Down's syndrome and rode a horse for the first time this summer. As Slingluff spoke, Ryan made noises imitating the horse he was about to ride.

"He imitates them all the way home," Slingluff said. "He loves this."

Holden provides the horses and volunteers provide the needed guidance for the therapy sessions. Three volunteers assist each rider, and sessions usually include six riders.

Volunteers are trained on riding techniques as well as what to expect from each rider they work with.

Magic Takes Seagoing Couple To All Corners Of The World

STREAMWOOD, Ill. (AP) — Magic has taken Jennifer and Jody Baran around the world.

It has landed them in Leningrad, put them in the People's Republic of China, swept them off to Singapore, taken them to Tokyo.

"Yeah. Singapore is great, but Boston is one of my favorite places," says Jody. A grin like a Cheshire cat appears on his face — a Cheshire cat that has just made a canary disappear.

In Baran's case, the canary would be his wife, Jennifer. Baran makes her disappear several times a week all over the globe. At least it appears that he makes her disappear.

After months of cruising to such places as Rio de Janeiro and other intriguing ports of call, Jody and Jennifer reappeared in their hometown of Streamwood recently to take one of their occasional timeouts from their now-you-see-them, now-you-don't life.

The resident magic act on board the Royal Viking Cruise Lines, the Barans have cruised the oceans of the world for the past six years.

"We have the largest illusion show on a cruise ship," says Jody, explaining that it takes two tons of equipment to perform the 12 major illusions in the Barans' act.

That includes such tricks as making Jennifer disappear, cutting her in half and piercing her with swords while she's shut up in a trunk. No way to treat your high school sweetheart, but it's all illusion, something the couple has become so good at that they won the World Cup of Magic competition in Tokyo last year, the first time Americans have done so, Jody says.

The Barans hope to find a performing spot in Las Vegas so they can settle down and have a home larger than a ship's cabin.

The two have been working together since they graduated together from Elgin High School in 1976.

Their first job was at Great America theme park in Illinois, and then in California, where they worked for several years. Then, they saw the country.

"We went on the road for three years, a 37-state tour," says Jody. "We did four shows a day, five days a week."

"We played high schools, colleges, prisons, institutions," says Jennifer. "We drove everywhere."

"It's a long, drawn-out process to become a magician," says Jody. "You must practice the craft and understand people. You have to think one step ahead of people. Our years on the road — that was our school of hard knocks."

Jody says his interest in magic began as a child and continued through adolescence and adulthood. He's now 28.

"My father kept asking me when was I going to get a real job," he says.

Although working 11 months out of the year on a cruise ship doesn't sound like a real job, the Barans take it very seriously, practicing four to five hours a day. On shore, they also work.

When the ship's passengers take a tour of a country, as they did in China, the Barans go along as entertainers and public relations emissaries.

"In magic, there are no language barriers," says Jody. "China was a very emotional trip for us. It was so huge, so different. The Chinese never see Westerners, most of them, so we would find ourselves surrounded. They were amazed at Jennifer's blond hair."

The Barans return to their hometown for holidays and family gatherings as well as personal business.

And after all the intrigue and fascination with cultures ranging from Bombay to Los Angeles, what do the Barans want when they return?

"A deep-dish Chicago pizza," says Jody

"A Chicago Vienna hot dog," says Jennifer.

Just Floating On A Lazy River

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Sam McKinney, 59, recently completed the second leg of a transcontinental solo float trip that eventually will see his little homemade boat over a network of rivers from coast to coast. With his boat dry-docked for the winter outside St. Louis, McKinney is writing a book about his journey while sketching out the next leg of the trip.

So far, McKinney has traveled west-to-east from the Pacific Ocean at Astoria up the Columbia and Snake rivers, over the Continental Divide and down the Missouri River.

Next May 15, he will say goodbye to his wife, Gail Broderick, to pick up where he left off, hoping to get as far as he can while the weather holds up. Setting out from his Portland home, he will fly back to St. Louis, pilot his 24-foot flat boat, which looks something like a barge with a cabin, up the Mississippi River to the Illinois River, then up a small canal outside Chicago to the Great Lakes.

Then he'll cross Lake Michigan and Lake Ontario to the Trent-Severn Canal, to the St. Lawrence River, where he hopes to rendezvous with his wife. From there, the St. Lawrence connects to the Richleau River, to Lake Champlain, to the New York Barge Canal, to the Hudson River, which flows past New York City to the Atlantic.

This basic route in reverse was the long-sought and elusive "Northwest Passage," by which explorers hoped to find a shortcut to the Orient. In contrast, McKinney today is traveling a well-known, but little-traveled route to rediscover America and explore himself.

"In another sense, the trip reaffirmed my faith in the people who live along the river, in the vast and sparsely populated farmland that makes up so much of this country. I was continually amazed at their hospitality and warmth. I also found out I could get pretty lonely out there on a boat alone — just me, watching for

Plans For Hotel Causes Uproar On Apollo's Famed Aegean Island

By KERIN HOPE
Associated Press Writer

DELOS, Greece (AP) — Culture Minister Melina Mercouri faces fierce opposition to her plan to build a hotel on this deserted Aegean island famed for its mythological sanctuary to Apollo, the god of music and poetry.

Islanders on nearby Mykonos, which houses many visitors to Delos, say the project could encourage pilfering of archaeological treasures from the sprawling ruins. They also fear the hotel, which Ms. Mercouri, the former actress, says would be for scientists and archaeologists only, could turn into a resort.

"Delos is unique and must be preserved for future generations. Putting up a hotel there amounts to sacrilege," said Mykonos' Mayor Matthaios Apostolou, a leader of the campaign to block the Culture Ministry's plan.

Delos belongs to the municipality of Mykonos, whose town council has rejected the proposal for the hotel, which would cost the government an estimated $1.38 million.

A barren islet of two square miles, Delos lies at the center of the Cyclades archipelago and is one of Greece's most important archaeological sites.

According to mythology, Delos drifted around the Aegean before anchoring itself off Mykonos to become the birthplace of Apollo, a son of Zeus, the king of the gods. In classical times the island was renowned as a place of pilgrimage and a commercial center.

More than 40,000 tourists visit Delos every year, ferried in fishing boats across a 1.5-mile strait from Mykonos. But they aren't allowed to stay on the island after sunset.

In summer, French archaeologists excavate on the island. In winter the only residents are six Greek archaeological service guards, who live in cottages without electricity and running water.

The government plan calls for a 12-room, 24-bed hotel for scholars and scientists studying the island's antiquities and wildlife set on a 10-acre site overlooking a sheltered yacht anchorage.

"Our intention is to create a small modern hotel of limited capacity for experts from all over the world who have a scientific interest in this place," Ms. Mercouri said in one statement if defense of the project. "We are committed to preserving and upgrading the archaeological site on Delos." Opponents say the proposed site is far larger than needed for a small hotel and claim it will be expanded into a vacation resort.

They also say there are enough hotels on Mykonos to serve visitors to Delos and that specialists can commute easily on the 30-minute boat ride.

"Delos is one of the things that has made Mykonos a successful tourist resort. Nothing should be allowed to spoil it" said Nikos Palaiologos, a member of the Friends of Delos Committee campaigning against the Culture Ministry.

"We fear that even if this hotel is intended only for archaeologists, sooner or later it will become the starting point for tourist development on the island," the influential conservative Athens daily Kathimerini wrote in an editorial.

Some islanders on Mykonos are also worried that the presence of a hotel will result in more antiquity looting on Delos.

"It would make it easier for people to dig illegally at night or rip up pieces of mosaic floor or carved marble and send them off by sea aboard yachts," said Panayotis Kousathanas, headmaster of Mykonos' high school.

In more than 100 years of digging, the French archaeologists have unearthed temples, gymnasiums, wealthy merchants' houses decorated with frescoes and colorful mosaic floors, and a road overlooked by a line of marble statues of lions.

In the 5th century B.C., Delos served as a religious center and symbolic capital of a political alliance of Greek city states headed by Athens.

Tens of thousands of pilgrims flocked to the island for lavish festivals staged in honor of Apollo that included music, poetry, athletics and horseracing.

In Roman times, Delos was a major commercial port and site of the biggest slave market in the eastern Mediterranean. Ancient historians record that up to 10,000 slaves were bought and sold in a single day's trading.

Last December, the nine-member Mykonos town council turned down the Culture Ministry's request to cede the hotel site.

"That land won't be transferred to the Culture Ministry or anyone else," Mayor Apostolou said. "We will fight Ms. Mercouri and her advisers all the way through the courts over this project."

Although the Culture Ministry could overrule the council and requisition the hotel site, such an action more than likely would raise a storm of protest. It would also undermine the Socialist government's credibility on its policy of promoting decision-making by local government.

Wilderness Photographer Finds Another World Behind Lens

By JACK SCHREIBMAN
Associated Press Writer

ALBANY, Calif. (AP) — Galen Rowell has two passports. One is a small blue booklet issued by the U.S. government, the other a 35mm camera which takes him to a land where he's the only inhabitant and sees what no one else can see.

Through the lens, the 46-year-old former auto mechanic records a colorful planet where man is a tiny, insignificant thing. His subjects are mountains whose craggy masses leap into the heavens, suns that set fire to unearthly landscapes, veiled moons shimmering against raven-black skies and trees that almost talk.

In a little studio tucked between an antique shop and a hair salon, a jeans-clad Rowell speaks passionately of his philosophy and the work that has put him in the top ranks among the world's wilderness photographers.

"I wait to be turned on," says Rowell, a smile stretching his seamed, sunburned face. "I'm not obsessed. Oh, for short periods, I am. Working in the field for a day or a week, I can be obsessed."

In the '60s, Rowell's mind was more occupied with hot-rodding around Berkeley than taking photographs. He used his income from an auto shop to soup-up innocent-looking station wagons.

"I started taking photographs just to show friends and family what I was doing, then I got curious about the photographic process. Making good photos became an end in itself."

Rowell's career went into high gear in 1973 when he was assigned to do a cover story on Yosemite National Park for National Geographic.

Rowell was raised in the San Francisco Bay area by college-professor parents, but the mountains have been a key part of his life since almost before he could walk.

To get his pictures, Rowell has participated in, and led, some of the most challenging climbs in the world, including Everest and K2.

An anecdote in his latest book — "Mountain Light: In Search of the Dynamic Landscape" — explains his determination to get the perfect picture. Rowell tells of the time he chased a rainbow to get a stunning image of a Tibetan palace.

In 1981, Rowell was in a guest house at Lhasa, Tibet, 12,000 feet high. A mile away, in golden splendor, sat Potala Palace, traditional home of the Dalai Lama, spiritual and political leader of Tibet.

"We could see a dim rainbow hovering over a field miles from (the palace)," he says in the book. Rowell took off running.

"I hopped a fence with a bag of cameras and walked diagonally away from the rainbow. It followed. I knew that with each step I was actually seeing a different rainbow from inside a different set of water droplets."

Rowell chased the rainbow toward the palace, firing "insurance shots" as he ran. "Soon, the rainbow grew more intense, and so did my pursuit of it. I ditched my heavy camera bag in a bush and took off running...the rainbow grew more intense ... I reached a spot where the rainbow

Others also have donated their time and services. Richard and Marlys Backes offered to let Holden use their spacious indoor arena in Avon. St. Cloud attorney Kevin Hughes donated his services in helping the group to incorporate. Many other groups and individuals donated money to sponsor riders.

With that kind of help, the program has been a success, Holden said.

"Some kids were deathly afraid of horses this summer," he said.

One of those students was Ryan Slingluff. But it didn't take long for Ryan to warm to the idea of riding a horse.

"After 10 minutes he wanted to know if the horse could run," Holden said. "It's just great to see people grow and learn. I think it does something for their self-esteem."

Holden says riders enjoy the activity for many reasons, but one of the most significant is the power they feel sitting atop a horse.

"They're in control instead of being controlled," he said.

Christian Surfers Spread Gospel Along Beaches

By ERIC BAILEY
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

ENCINITAS, Calif. — It had been months since Stone Steps, a popular surfing spot in Encinitas had been blessed with any respectable swells, and that had Mark Curtis worried.

Curtis and a few buddies were planning a surfing contest off the craggy stretch of shoreline, about 25 miles north of San Diego, and they knew it would be a bust if the waves failed to shape up.

Desperate, they decided to turn to a friend with clout.

"We prayed that night for God to do a miracle," recalled Curtis, head of the Christian Surfing Association. "The next day there were some of the best waves of the year."

As Curtis sees it, working wonders with the help of the Lord is what the Christian Surfing Association is all about.

Since the organization's inception in early 1984, Curtis and fellow members have been blending the seemingly incongruous worlds of surfing and Christianity to spread the Gospel to tousle-haired beach boys and bikini-clad sun worshipers from Malibu to the shores of San Diego.

The group sponsors 20 surfing contests a year, hitting all the hot shoreline spots in Southern California. It publishes a monthly newsletter that includes an up-to-date point ranking of the top surfers in the organization's events.

But this is not just another surf outfit. Mixed in with discussions of gnarly wipeouts and "getting tubular" is solemn talk of another kind — about Jesus, about forgiving sins, about the weakness of the flesh.

Indeed, these guys are not out to just ride the waves. They are into surfing for Christ.

"We're on a mission. Our goal is to reach people," said Donald Gaunder, an Encinitas resident who works for a company that manufactures surf products and serves as Curtis' right-hand man. "We just want them to know that there's a better life out there than sex, drugs and surfing."

The pulpit for their preaching is the beach. As befits the venue, the approach is decidedly low key.

Christian Surfer Association's weekly events, which are held Saturdays between January and the end of July and generally draw about 100 participants, look like just about any other surf contest. Banners flap in the offshore breezes. Fifteen-minute heats are sent off with the blaring of an air horn. Judges score contestants on their four best rides.

But there are differences. Bibles and other literature on Christianity are available to anyone who wants them. During the daylong events, Curtis and Gaunder typically take time out from their administrative duties to approach contestants and spectators — the vast majority of whom are not evangelical Christians — to discuss the Bible or talk about their beliefs.

"I realize that these people we're dealing with probably are not going to be found in church on Sunday, so we start each contest off with a prayer," Curtis, 32, said. "Then it's off and running with the surfing.

"We don't expect to have Billy Graham-type altar calls or go through a whole candelabra service on the beach. We don't believe you have to club people over the head with Christianity."

Instead, Curtis feels that the most effective proselytizing comes by offering an inexpensive, well-run contest and acting as a straightforward, honest example for young, waterlogged surfers.

"Some kids may never warm up to the Christian idea, and we know that," acknowledged Curtis, a husky man with a bushy beard and a radio pitchman's voice. "But what we can do is give them an idea what Christianity is. That Christianity is not locked up in some dusty place with stained glass windows. That Christianity is relevant to life.

"It's a soft sell. The hope is that when they have a time in their life when they need to turn to something, they may remember these Christian guys at a surfing contest who weren't half bad. We're kind of seed planting."

The group's genesis dates to 1983 when Curtis organized a weekly Bible study at a friend's home for a band of about two dozen north San Diego County surfers. Dubbed the Monday Night Surf Fellowship, the group would ride the waves in the late afternoon and then spend an evening "eating munchies" and talking about the Bible, Gaunder said.

Early on, Curtis decided to hold surfing contests for members of the fellowship. These were casual affairs with other local surfers joining in.

In addition, Curtis began sponsoring Gaunder and other Christian surfers in amateur surfing contests throughout the county. Watching these other events, Curtis was struck by the participants, who seemed to let the intensity of the competition overshadow their ability to have fun.

By the end of 1983, the fellowship's contests had become a monthly ritual. Seeing a need for a type of event that would be well-run but a bit less cutthroat than the other amateur contests, Curtis decided to form the Christian Surfing Association and sponsor a slate of meets.

While the group has had few problems drawing participants, its efforts to spread the faith have not always been met with open arms.

"There's no end to the variation of reactions when I approach people to talk," said Gaunder, 29. "I haven't had anyone yell or scream. I think most people listen to me. I give them something to think about, and that's what we want to do. Our job is to get the message out. Only God can draw them in."

While most other surfing associations stick by hard-and-fast rules during contests, the Christian Surfing Association will bend when it seems justified. Moreover, the group charges a $10 entry fee, which goes to pay for judges, insurance and the trophies awarded to the top six finishers in each division. That is about half what other surfing associations ask.

Cable Comedies Feature Bruce Willis, Chris Elliott

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Two television personalities have comedy specials on cable this month — one a wacky, low-budget tribute to TV, and the other a super-produced rock takeoff that is ultimately a pointless ego trip.

Chris Elliott of "Late Night with David Letterman" is the brains behind the TV spoof, "Action Family," one in Cinemax's "Comedy Experiment" series.

Bruce Willis of "Moonlighting" stars in the turkey, "The Return of Bruno," an hour-long video on HBO to go along with his album of the same name — the blues wailings of Willis' character on "Moonlighting" having inexplicably led to a recording contract with Motown Records.

Viewers, being generally easy-going sorts, might be willing to overlook the minor detail that Willis cannot sing. But patience is severely tested when is becomes apparent that the video is not funny.

Willis is to be congratulated for extracting millions of dollars' worth of recording, movie and commercial endorsement contracts from his "Moonlighting" persona — basically Michael Keaton's character in "Night Shift" combined with a dash of Mickey Roarke.

Let's hope Willis got all his money up front.

"The Return of Bruno" is a sendup of "rockumentaries," an area already definitively satirized by Rob Reiner's movie "Spinal Tap." Willis plays a mythical underground rock hero supposedly responsible for everything from the Beatles to Woodstock.

The character's name is Willis' real-life nickname from back when, all those three or so years ago when he was a bartender.

The most impressive, and at the same time puzzling, aspect of the video is the roster of stars who enlisted to deliver testimonials to the fictional Bruno — Ringo Starr, Grace Slick, Joan Baez, Bill Graham, Freddie Garrity (of Freddie and the Dreamers), Brian Wilson, Graham Nash and Stephen Stills, among others.

The real stars of "The Return of Bruno," however, are production designer Rhaz Zeizler, photographer Jeff Zimmerman and lighting designers Lee Rose and Richard Ocean. They have superbly re-created everything from grungy, sub-basement nightclub footage to slick British Invasion television appearances, the Woodstock movie and even a "Sgt. Pepper"-like psychedelic video.

But Willis' lack of voice shows up embarrassingly in the finale, a concert at a nightclub in New York.

Perhaps some good will come of all this. Willis is an undeniably appealing screen presence and a more than decent actor. (Remember his tour-de-force dual role in a "Twilight Zone" episode a couple of seasons back?)

Critics have been less than kind to "Bruno." Maybe now that his declaration of rock stardom has been annulled by Rolling Stone magazine, Willis will settle down and get on with his career.

Over on Cinemax, meanwhile, Chris Elliott is celebrating television as non sequitur in the bizarre and hilarious "Action Family."

It might be easier to list the television shows that Elliott does not spoof in this half-hour, combination family sitcom and detective drama. Elliott stars as a Robert Young-Mannix character — "Prin-cess! It's your turn to clean Daddy's gu-un."

Elliott suspects his daughter's new boyfriend of committing a series of killings — and he is sure he's right after dreaming of being spanked by Abraham Lincoln.

In his savvy private investigator role, he takes his case to the police.

Tough, by-the-book desk cop: "Until you've got some real proof, I got other things to worry about. You get me?"

Elliott (using Clint Eastwood's voice): "I get you. I'm the big monkey, huh? I'm the big chimpanzee. I'm the ape-boy. Is that what you're trying to say?"

Cop (unsure): "Well, sort of ..."

When Elliott walks into his house as Father who Knows Best, there is sudden laughter and applause. Anytime anyone mentions "Grandpa," the toilet flushes and their laugh-track howls.

Elliott goes a step beyond making fun of sitcoms and makes fun of sitcom tapings: in the middle of a scene, the audience goes particularly crazy over a generic laugh line. The characters get up and accept the applause, then Elliott explains kindly that the cast appreciates the accolade but they are on a tight schedule.

Minneapolis Producers Make String Of Top-Selling Records

By JEFF BAENEN
Associated Press Writer

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Their office is a nondescript brick building in south Minneapolis, an unlikely place for producers Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis to be turning out some of the hottest music in the country.

They have become one of the nation's most sought after production teams, with clients ranging from Janet Jackson, to Gladys Knight and the Pips, The Human League and Herb Alpert. They also have a Grammy nomination for producer of the year (non-classical).

"Right now we basically do what we like, and it just happens that we're in tune with the public's taste," Jam said.

"We're trend setters, not trend followers," said Lewis.

Their magic touch crosses musical categories. Jam and Lewis co-wrote with Miss Jackson most of the songs on her platinum-selling (1 million or more) "Control" LP, including the Top 10 hits "What Have You Done for Me Lately" and "Nasty." The LP is up for album of the year, and "What Have You Done for Me Lately" has been nominated for best rhythm and blues song.

The 27-year-old Jam and the 30-year-old Lewis also wrote and produced "Human" for The Human League.

"We like good lyrics. We like to address subjects maybe that have been addressed before but maybe in a different fashion," said Jam, whose father is a jazz keyboard player.

"We're not opposed to dancing," he added. "But if you ever sit down and listen to a record, we'd like it to have some kind of a substantial meaning and you go, 'Ah, yeah, yeah, that's right.'"

Jam, whose real name is James Harris III, and Lewis were members of The Time, a band that helped develop the "Minneapolis Sound" — which had been pioneered by the rock star Prince.

A native of Minneapolis, Jam started on drums and later switched to keyboards. He worked as a radio disc jockey and in discos before joining Flyte Tyme, which evolved into The Time, with Morris Day. Lewis, who's from Omaha, Neb., played bass guitar in Flyte Tyme, a group he originated, and in The Time.

After the first Time tour in 1982, Jam and Lewis started doing production work in Los Angeles for such acts as Klymaxx and Gladys Knight. In 1983, when a snowstorm in Atlanta stranded them from a concert date with The Time, the group dropped them. So Jam and Lewis began full-time production work.

But instead of remaining in Los Angeles, they returned to Minneapolis. Two years ago they bought an old studio across from a hardware store and a funeral home, installed state-of-the-art recording equipment and christened it Flyte Tyme Productions.

Gold records adorn the office walls. A back room has pool and Ping-Pong tables to help break the monotony during recording sessions, and Jam and Lewis clean up in a shower room after playing basketball at the local YMCA.

"This is our home. This is where we grew up. This is where our friends are," said Jam, a large man with a well-trimmed beard, a long braid and a gold earring in his left ear.

"It's good creatively for us. It's real quiet, clean air, and it's away from the industry, which is real nice."

Lewis, a smaller man with a thin mustache who likes to wear a black fedora, said he and his partner will listen to anything that's good.

While busy with The Human League project, Jam and Lewis passed up a chance to produce a song for megastar Lionel Richie. "We have a philosophy that we like to help people that we feel need some help," Jam said. "And we didn't feel like he needed any help. He's doing fine on his own."

But the team won't produce just anyting.

"Some things are really boring. It has to be mentally stimulating to do," Jam said. "What you do as a producer is basically bring out the best of the artist. You try to bring out the talent. If there's no talent there, there's nothing to bring out."

Lewis said their goal is to "just try to keep it fun and do what we like and hope someone likes it. Being creative is fun."

'Sweetheart'

A Valentine "Sweetheart" Dance sponsored by the Women of the Moose will be held Saturday from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m. in the Moose Lodge. Music will be provided by disc jockey Guy Stocks and light refreshments will be served.

An admission fee will be charged.

Recital

Laura Lynn Gaither of Miami, a student in the school of music at East Carolina University will present her junior organ recital at 3 p.m. Saturday at the First Presbyterian Church, corner of 14th and Elm streets. The recital is free and open to the public.

A student of Dr. E. Robert Irwin, Miss Gaither will be accompanied by Barbara Memory and Carol Moore, violinists; Martin Glasco, violist; Jennifee Lucht, cellist, and Jay Bulger, bass.

Compositions she has listed for her program are: "Suite du Deuxieme Ton" by Louis-Nicolas Clerambault; "Praeludium et Fuga in C" by Bach; "Orgelkonzert No. 4," by Handel; "Nova" by Myron J. Roberts, and two works by Jehan Alain, "Choral Dorien" and "Litanies."

'Napoleon'

BURBANK, Calif. (AP) — Armand Assante will play Napoleon in next season's six-hour TV miniseries "Napoleon and Josephine: A Love Story."

The role of Josephine Beauharnais has not been cast, said Warner Bros. Television. David L. Wolper Productions will produce the ABC-TV miniseries in association with Warner.

Floating

deadheads, sandbars and bends in the river while talking into my tape recorder."

However, McKinney is no stranger to bends in the river or romantic musing.

Born and reared in Portland, he began his love affair with words as a reporter at The Oregonian after World War II. Later, he served as advertising director for a shopping center.

In 1965, McKinney helped to design and found the University Outdoor Program at Portland State University, where he later served as director for 10 years. He also was one of the founders of Northwest Outward Bound School.

By the late '70s, however, McKinney yielded to his restless urges and bought a 40-foot wooden schooner which needed fixing up, with visions of sailing the South Seas. But after two years of backbreaking work, and after spending more money than he likes to remember, McKinney stopped so he could amend his dream.

"I realized it wasn't the yacht I really wanted all along," he said. "It was the image. So I chucked the image and got to work on the boat I really wanted. In three weeks, I built Barge I, which I also called Time of the River."

Testing proved, however, that Barge I was overbuilt — too heavy for portages and too difficult to handle under less-than-ideal conditions. He immediately set about building Gander I, a 16-footer, at the modest cost of $635.

Armed with nerve and vision, McKinney began his first would-be transcontinental boat trip. But howling winds up the Snake River around Lewiston, Idaho, clobbered him, and McKinney again amended his dream and cut his losses.

"I sold the boat to the postman," he said.

Gander II was, in some ways, the most aesthetically pleasing of his boats, he said. Blessed with the graceful lines of a lapstrake dory, the $5,000 Gander II also was outfitted with a pleasant cabin. Setting out on May 15, 1985, McKinney made his way upriver to Montana, where he was shipwrecked in August.

"There I was — stuck in the mud, heartbroken, in the worst weather, with all my dreams dashed," he said. "But I took a good look at the wrecked boat, took a twig and began to sketch out a new boat right there in the mud at my feet. I got home on a Saturday and I started buildig on Tuesday. That's how Gander III was born."

And that's how McKinney launched the most successful and dramatic leg of his journey. He built Gander III in seven weeks for $2,000, designing it along the lines of the old Mississippi River johnboats, the pickups of their day. The shallow draft proved extremely valuable for navigating the shallow water of shifting channels, and the cabin was rigged with a reading light. He also added a 25-horsepower motor that pushed the fiberglass plywood hull along smartly.

Setting out just east of the Continental Divide, he logged some 2,200 miles in a little more than two months, battling torrential rain, dust and wind. He endured headwinds of 40 mph in Montana and seven inches of rain in 24 hours in South Dakota.

" I wouldn't do it again for anything," he said. "I wouldn't have missed it for anything, either."

Rowell

was directly behind the palace."

What happened next, he said, seemed miraculous.

"As if by magic, a hole opened in the sky, beaming a spot of evening light directly onto the palace ... as vivid a rainbow as I have ever seen."

Panting heavily in the thin air, his motorized camera braced against a post, he quicky exhausted two rolls of film. The result was a surreal smash hit, appearing on posters, ads, calendars and in magazines.

When Rowell goes to the mountains he searches doggedly "for the fleeting happening. The unrepeatable moment. There's a dynamic tension. It's what this book is about — the processes coming together.

"Three things have to come together to make a good photograph. You have to have the technical thing down and have that work for you. Then, you have to have the personal vision to make everything come together compositionally and creatively — and then, you have to have the natural thing, very fine natural light."

Rowell scoffs at camera ads that boast, "What you see is what you get."

"That's just not true. If I'm going to photograph something I'm going to think in the foreign language of film — not what I see, but what the film sees."

Rowell explains with some difficulty the relationship of his beloved outdoors, his cameras and the busy world of commerce. But he leaves little doubt he considers his camera a support system for his adventures.

Researcher Takes Look At Hoboes

By HOYT HARWELL
Associated Press Writer

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. (AP) — A hobo was a person who wandered and worked; a tramp wandered and wouldn't work; a bum couldn't wander and wouldn't work.

Those definitions come from Lynn Adrian, an assistant professor of American studies at the University of Alabama, who has completed a study of the subcultures of the late 1800s and early 1900s.

She said the hobo life ended for the most part in the 1930s, but it spawned terms that added spice to the language.

Reefers, for instance, were refrigerated railroad cars. Jungles were hobo camps on the side of railroads. A lump was a lunch hoboes were given to take away and eat. A sit-down meant they were invited to eat with the family, a prized invitation.

There were abou 10 names for lice, including crumbs, cooties and seam-squirrels. The term buggy, often used to mean crazy, comes from lice and the feeling that one's head is crawling.

Hoboes gave us bull for a policeman, cush for easy as in riding on a cushion inside a railroad car, collar for getting arrested, and on the lam for fleeing.

Chi for Chicago, K.C. for Kansas City, Philly for Philadelphia and Minnie for Minneapolis come from hoboes.

Hoboes usually wentby nicknames. Since injuries were common, some names stemmed from physical problems. Blinkies were those who had lost an eye. Lefties were those who had lost an arm.

"The way you spoke identified you as a part of the subculture," Mrs. Adrian said.

Hoboes would leave large pots in their jungles for other hoboes. A hobo would bathe in the nearest source of water and use the pots to "boil up," boil his clothes.

Carrying the banner meant waling all night to keep from being arrested.

Mrs. Adrian said hoboes formed a migratory work force, unskilled or semiskilled, working in such jobs as harvesting, lumbering, railroad track repair and construction.

Women hoboes sometimes were harvesters or cooks, or just chose to travel, usually disguised as men and always wearing pants, because that's the only way they could ride trains

The hobo subculture primarily was in the Midwest and West, with some in the East. Hoboes tended to stay away from the South because of chain gangs and strict enforcement of vagrancy laws. There also was a ready pool of unskilled labor in the South.

There was de facto segregation in the hobo jungles, but blacks and whites sometimes traveled together, another reason for avoiding the South in that era.

Hoboes liked to spend the winter in cities, in areas called hobohemias: districts with cheap lodging, second-han clothing stores, saloons and other businesses that catered to them.

Mrs. Adrian said most hoboes were under 30, after which they tended to settle down unless they were stricken with wanderlust. In 1924, she said, there were close to 2 million hoboes.

Almost every major city outside the South had a hobo college that served as an educational forum, a social gathering place and a sourc of information about social programs and train schedules. The colleges were sponsored by the International Brotherhood Welfare Association.

Hobo colleges faded in the 1920s and the subculture all but died in the 1930s, she said, because there was less need for the kind of labor hoboes did and because there was a large population base everywhere and no need for a traveling wrk force.

In addition, she said, trains became faster and more streamlined and therefore harder to ride, while the automobile brought more hitchhiking.

During the Depression, the country experienced massive economic relocation because of people looking for work, but they were not a part of the hobo subculture.

The hobo language, Mrs. Adrian said, "was something that could be carried anywhere as a means of identification."

Hoboes, she said, were part of the working class culture, not skid row bums or street peope.

Delving into the hobo subculture, she said, "was like researching the hole of a doughnut; you have to go all around it."

Much of the material she examined came from the National Archives, the Library of Congress and the library at the University of Illinois in Chicago. Mrs. Adrian said she also found material in copies of hobo news publications.

In 1858, the county's courthouse was destroyed by a blaze supposedly set by a man trying to destory a will. In 1910, the courthouse burned again.

Young And Old

By Betsy Bullock

Said the little boy ,"Sometimes I don't fit in." "Me too," said the old man with a grin. The boy said,"Folks try to tell me what I should eat." The old man said, "I love to sneak a treat." The boy wants to stay up all night and fish. The old man too if he had his wish. The boy naver ever wants to die. For the the old man to say so would be a lie. The big hand fits the small one like a glove. And they both share a smile that is filled with love.

Thinking About Valentine's Day

By James Ebron III

Thinking about Valentine's Friendship
I wish that it were Valentine's Day;
Because if it were
I could really say;
A kind word to someone who;
Needs a friend or maybe two;
I'd be with them through thick, and thin;
And when Valentine spirit comes rolling in;
By then I could really say;
Hooray! Hooray!
It's Valentine's Day.

James EbronIII, 10, a student at Wahl-Coates Elementary School, receives special mention.

Stephanie Miller, 6, a student at W.H. Robinson wins this week's drawing contest.

Winter Thoughts

Winter, Summer

Winter, Summer come and go, make the flowers sing and glow

LaTara Carney, 9, a student at Falkland Elementary School receives special mention.

Snowflakes

I like to watch snowflakes fall to the ground,
I wish it would do this all year round,
People like snow young and old,
Because it makes their hands feel cold,
I like snow especially because,
Of the many wonderful things
it does,
When sun shines on it, it gives a beautiful glare,
Then it melts away like it was never there.

Matthew Hungate, 10, a student at South Greenville School receives special mention.

Winter

Winter cold, Icy freezing, frost-biting, skiing stoves heating our homes numbing, breezing, ice skating

John And The Snowman

A little boy named John made a snowman. John wished really hard, and the snowman came alive. He was happy to be alive. The boy and the snowman danced and ran, and threw snowballs at each other. The snowman got hot playing so much, and melted away!

Kindergarten students at Bethel Elementary School recieve special mention.

Winter

January, February, and December,
They are the months in the winter.
Boy, Do I love the snow then,
But I do dislike the harsh, cold wind.
Yet I love the sight at night,
When the moon is shining bright!

Juliana Whitehurst, 11, a student at Bethel Elementary School recieves special mention.

PUZZLE CORNER

Can You Find 25 Hearts In The Picture Below?

Adventures In Science

Water Pressure

Water weighs over 62 pounds per cubic foot. Therefore, pressure increases greatly as a body of water increases in depth. Try this experiment. Materials you will need are the following: A large juice can, a sharp instrument to punch holes in the can, and water.

Punch four or five holes in the side of the can, the same distance apart, starting an inch from the top and finishing as close to the bottom as possible. Over a sink, fill the can with water. Observe the streams of water passing through the holes.

The closer the streams of water are to the bottom of the can, the stronger they are, showing that water pressure increases with depth.

Project For A Rainy Day

Valentine Pins

Materials:
7-10 loaves of white bread
White Glue
Shellac
Poster or Acrylic Paints
India Ink and Pens
1/4 inch wide, brightly colored ribbon
Small gold safety pins

To make one recipe of bread clay, the crusts from 8 slices of white bread must be removed. Tear the slices into small pieces and combine with 1/2 cup glue. The ingredients must be mixed for 5 minutes or so, until the stickiness is gone. If you would like colored dough, add the paint directly to the dough, kneading until the color is worked through. Make the pins by shaping the dough into the shape you would like. Make sure you poke a hole near the top through which you can string the ribbon when the pin is dry. It will take a couple of days for your piece to dry. Add details with the paint or ink, then shellac and allow to dry. String the ribbon through the top and pin on a small safety pin.

Yesterday's Cryptoquip: STODGY CATTLEMAN'S COMMITMENT: "I WOULDN'T STEER YOU WRONG."

Today's Cryptoquip clue: P equals L

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

FOCUS

Cheap Money

Shoppers rejoiced in 1986 at the U.S. inflation rate of 1.1 percent. A decade ago, Americans were wrestling with double-digit inflation. In the 1920s, Germany suffered its hyperinflation. But the world's worst inflation took place in Hungary. Just before World War II, the dollar bought 3.38 Hungarian pengos. By 1946, the dollar bought 500 million trillion pengos — an incredible 23-digit inflation rate. Rural Hungarians quickly abandoned money in favor of barter.

Horoscope

From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR THURSDAY Feb. 12

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Only by using your charm to the greatest possible advantage will you overcome today's tendency to get involved in the negative factors of your activites.

ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Some talent you possess requires a new inspiration before you can use it to your advantage.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): It would be wise to absent yourself from home today. Have guests in tonight and show you are an excellent host.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Go over any writings and be careful of what you say. Much care in driving is advised.

MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): Do nothing that can ruin your bank account. Budget your assets wisely.

LEO (July 22 to August 21): Try to get a point across to another, but don't be surprised if you meet with a lot of resistance.

VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): Be tactful if you want to get out of some responsibility that irks you. Set up a new plan of action.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): A thoughtless person could give you trouble during the daytime if you permit, but later you can be happy.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Take care you do not lose prestige in public, or at work, by some foolish actions.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): If you try to keep a promise you will be confused. Your mate can be helpful.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): You can make long-term plans with a close friend today. Be clever and cooperative for best results.

AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): Plan how best to get an associate to understand your views. Don't attempt public matters today.

PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You may not be content with your environment, but don't make any changes yet. A prominent person is supportive now.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will be tested early, so give fine training in ethics so that your progeny can handle whatever comes up intelligently. Upon reaching maturity life will be much easier and there will be more money to do with as he, or she, likes. Be sure to give praise when earned.

Opening lead: King of ♡ Usually, there is more than one line that gives you a chance for your contract. See if you can spot all South's options and find a way to combine them.

The bidding is not what we would call scientific. South did not have the machinery to probe for all he needed to know, but we are sure we could not have done any better than he did.

As to the play, there is no problem if diamonds break 3-3. However, that is against the odds. If they do split 4-2, you have to hope for one of two possibilities. Either the player with four diamonds has at least two trumps, or the player with the short diamonds does not have the seven of trumps.

How many rounds of trumps can you afford to draw? Not one. If you draw even one trump, you run the risk of the player with four diamonds being able to lead a second trump, which would prevent you from ruffing your fourth diamond.

So you win the ace of hearts perforce and cash the ace-king of diamonds. When both live, you are well on your way. Lead another diamond. If the suit splits 3-3, you can claim. Unfortunately, East turns up with four diamonds, so now you will need a bit of luck.

If East returns a heart, you ruff, draw one round of trumps and, when the seven does not fall, you lead your last diamond and hope West does not have the missing trump. Your prayers will be answered.

If West is a shrewd defender, he will return a fourth diamond immediately. Now all you can do is follow suit and pray that West was not dealt the seven. Again, all is well and the slam comes home.

The Versatile Spud

Turning Those Tubers Into Top-Notch Table Toppers

By SUE HINSON
Reflector Staff Writer

You can boil them, bake them, cream them, mash them, or you can chunk and mix them with mayonnaise and mustard for a summer salad. But have you ever thought of treating the potato with a little more kindness, a touch more creativity?

Have you ever considered giving the lowly, yet oh-so-versatile spud the type of culinary attention it truly deserves? Pitt County tuber lovers Hal Daniel, Scott Hinson, Jackie Loesche and Mary Muzzarelli have.

Their recipes are anything but dud spuds.

"IT'S ALL YOU NEED POTATO"

Two crystals of champagne, two tall candles and a rose on an early evening table form the perfect setting for this elegant, easy dish, according to creator Hal Daniel.

Idaho baker, about 3 1/2 inches long
Sour cream, good quality
Russian caviar, preferably black

Bake potato slowly in 350-degree oven. When fork inserts easily into potato, take from oven, split open and mix sour cream with potato meat. Drop caviar and an additional spoon of sour cream on top. Light candles and serve your potato with a tall crystal of champagne.

FISHYSSOISE

Also from the Daniel household, this recipe for cold fish and potato soup is sure to be a hit whether served in front of a blazing winter fire or during hot weather.

4 well washed leeks halved lengthwise and thinly sliced
1 onion thinly sliced
2 tablespoons butter
6 potatos
4 cups white fish stock
4 cups milk
2 cups flaked cooked white fish
1 cup heavy cream
Snipped chives or snipped dill

In a deep skillet, saute leeks and onion in butter until the vegetables are softened. Add potatoes and white fish stock. Bring the liquid to a boil over moderately high heat and then simmer covered for 20 minutes or until the potatoes are very tender. Add milk and flaked white fish. Bring the mixture to a boil again and then puree it through a food mill into a bowl. Let the soup cool, stir in heavy cream and chill covered for at least 4 hours. Serve in chilled bowls and garnish with snipped chives or dill. Serves 8.

BASIL POTATOES

Easy to fix and adaptable to the tightest schedule, this potato dish from Scott Hinson will dress up even the most dreary weekday meal.

5 1/2 pounds red new potatoes
Freshly crushed garlic to taste
1 tablespoon olive oil
1 stick butter or margerine
3 pinches basil or dried mint
1/2 teaspoon medium grind pepper
1 teaspoon salt

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. While oven is warming, wash and prick each potato several times with a fork. Place clean potatoes in deep covered casserole dish and roast about two hours or until fork inserts easily into potatoes. When potatoes are done, cut each in half and stir in remaining ingredients. Let stand covered for 15 minutes. (If you are short on time, simply boil the potatoes, cut in half and transfer to covered casserole dish before adding final ingredients. Instead of letting the potatoes stand to take on the flavor of spices, put casserole in 350 degree oven for 15 minutes.)

Yield: three servings.

Potato Eaters Find Good Taste, Solid Nutrition

By THE POTATO BOARD

With no time to cook and busy people coming and going in all directions, nutrition is often sacrificed today in favor of calorie-laden meals and snacks eaten on the run. With Potato Lover's Month fast approaching, now is a good time to rethink eating habits and to revitalize your own personal nutrition program.

Potato lovers know that no matter how active they are, there is always time to enjoy their favorite vegetable. Whether you pop a potato into the microwave, cook your potatoes ahead of time and reheat them, or simply cut them in half to bake, there are dozens of timesaving ways to enjoy the good taste and solid nutrition of potatoes at any meal.

Many of these timesaving tips are included in our Potato Lover's month kit along with recipes, nutritional information and clip art. All are designed to help you participate in our February celebration. If you would like additional materials, please call us at The Potato Board, (303) 758-7783. We'd love to hear from you.

In the meantime, have a happy Potato Lover's Month!

Quick Potato Lunch

There is always time for good nutrition. No matter how busy you are, it's important to take a few minutes out for good nutrition. It keeps your energy level up and your good health intact. For a quick and nutritious lunch, pop a potato in the microwave, cook it for about four minutes (depending on the wattage of your oven), fluff it open with a fork and top it with cottage cheese and your favorite seasonings. Serve it with a salad or fruit for a low calorie, no-fuss lunch.

Think Ahead

Make the most of your time in the kitchen, says The Potato Board staff. Whenever you have time to cook, think about making extra portions of your favorite foods to refrigerate and enjoy later. Boiled potatoes, for example, can be stored, loosely covered, in the refrigerator for several days. You can then slice them into salads, add them to omelettes or reheat with butter and onions for home fries. Leftover baked potatoes also make delicious home fries and hash browns.

Carbohydrates

The Potato Board says that carbohydrates aren't just for athletes. Whether you are a professional athlete, a weekend jogger or an executive on the go, carbohydrates are your body's main energy source. They not only power your muscles, they fuel your brain as well.

There are two types of carbohydrates, simple and complex. Simple carbohydrates, found primarily in sugars and refined products, burn their energy quickly. The candy bar you grab for lunch, for instance, gives you a quick lift and a fast drop. But complex carbohydrates, like the ones found in potatoes, release their energy more slowly, keeping your blood sugar steadier. So the baked potato you enjoy for lunch or the plate of hash browns you order for breakfast not only keeps you physically fit, but mentally alert as well. How's that for a winning combination?

Dieter's Delight

Carbohydrates are a dieter's best friend. Ounce for ounce, carbohydrates have the same number of calories as pure protein (about 4 calories/gram) and half the calories of fat (about 9 calories/gram). So you can eat a lot of carbohydrates without piling up on calories. A five-ounce potato, for example, has 110 calories, a third of the calories in five

It's time to lighten up family meals after the holiday season's bounty of rich foods, but that doesn't mean you can't enjoy dessert. The orange and apple flavor combination makes this pie a tangy, refreshing finish for a light meal.

Soup, Bread A Winning Duo

By MARIE BIANCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

When it comes at the end of a cold and blustery weekend, Sunday-night supper calls for warm and comforting food. After you've spent an afternoon cross-country skiing or ice skating, a hot, satisfying soup and a chunk of homemade bread are naturals.

The British brought Mulligatawny soup home with them from India, where it originally was called milakutanni or "pepper-water." This curry-inspired soup can probably be found in as many versions in India as there are barbecue-sauce recipes in this country.

Despite its foreign-sounding name, there are no rare or unusual ingredients in the soup, provided you don't consider curry powder exotic. The recipe requires only a tablespoon, but the amount to use is at the discretion of the cook. Cook twice as much chicken in the soup as needed, and this extra meat later becomes the basis for a warm chicken salad.

To make the salad, dice the chicken and mix with a chopped green apple, a small onion, a rib of celery and a handful of golden raisins and almonds. Dress with equal amounts of mayonnaise and yogurt mixed with curry powder.

Make the soup early in the day and start the bread rising. Serve the soup in mugs and enjoy it before a roaring fire.

MULLIGATAWNY SOUP

4 tablespoons butter
3 stalks celery, sliced
1 large potato, peeled, diced
2 large onions, chopped
4 cloves garlic, smashed
2 carrots, diced
1 tablespoon curry powder
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
1/4 teaspoon ground clove
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
Dash cayenne pepper
Salt and pepper to taste
8 cups chicken broth
6 chicken-breast halves, with attached ribs (three halves will be used for the chicken salad)
3 cups cooked rice
2 Granny Smith apples, peeled, cored, shredded
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup plain yogurt

1. Melt butter in stockpot and saute celery, potato, onion, garlic, carrot, curry, cumin, clove, ginger, cayenne, salt and pepper 5 minutes. Add chicken stock and chicken breasts; simmer 20 minutes. Remove chicken breasts and set three aside for chicken salad. Remove bones and cut meat into bite-size pieces. Return chicken to pot with apples and lemon juice.

2. Add rice to soup with yogurt and reheat, but do not boil. Makes 8 servings.

BEER RYE BREAD

1/4 pound fatty bacon
2 cups beer
1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar
1/2 cup light molasses
1 tablespoon salt
1 tablespoon freshly grated orange rind
2 tablespoons caraway seeds
2 packages active dry yeast
1/2 cup water (110 to 115 degrees)
3 cups rye flour
3 to 4 cups bread flour

1. In a saucepan, cook bacon until crisp. Remove bacon, drain and crumble. Set aside. In same pan, heat beer, add sugar, molasses, salt, orange rind and caraway seeds. Cool.

2. Dissolve yeast in warm water

Tasty Yams High In Food Value

Columbus found it here, and carried it back as proof of the riches of the new world. The cajuns who settled in South Louisiana soon made it one of their favorite foods because of its special flavor.

Today, the sweet potato or "yam" is still a special dish. It graces holiday tables in varied recipes all over the country. It is also a prize package of food value. A rich source of Vitamin A, the yam also contains Vitamins B and C and minerals, and is a good source of food energy. Try the colorful, easy to make recipe below anytime you want a special dish.

1 (30 ounce) can whole yams or cut yams
2 large red apples
1 (16 ounce) bottle white corn syrup
4 tablespoons margarine
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons water
3tablespoons cherry juice
12 maraschino cherries, chopped
1/2 cup chopped pecans
1/2 cup seedless raisins (optional)

Cut yams in half. Core apples and cut lengthwise into 3/4 inch thick pieces. In a buttered 9x13 inch pan, alternate apples with yams. Cover with foil. Place baking dish of yams and apples in 350*F oven. Bake until all moisture disappears, about 20 minutes. In a quart saucepan, combine corn syrup, margarine, sugar, water, and cherry juice; cook about 30 minutes or until very thick. Stir occasionally. Pour sauce over yams and apples. Bake 30 minutes uncovered. Sprinkle with cherries, pecans and raisins. Glaze by basting with pan syrup and bake for 5 minutes. Serves 8.

Potato Eaters Enjoy Good Taste As Well As Solid Nutrition ounces of roasted chicken. And because natural carbohydrate foods, like potatoes, have a lot of bulk, they fulfill both your physical and psychological need for food.

Source Of Nutrution

Nutrition is more than skin deep. The skin of the potato helps preserve the vegetable's nutrients during cooking. It is also an important source of vitamins, minerals and fiber. Dietary fiber is plant material which cannot be digested. It adds bulk to your diet, satisfying your appetite and keeping your digestive system running smoothly. According to the Center for Science in the Public Interest, a large-sized potato eaten with its skin on provides four grams of dietary fiber, roughly 10 percent of a desireable daily intake. So throw away your potato peeler and start enjoying your spuds with their skins on!

CAJUN SMOKED FISH 'N' TATERS

4 large baking potatoes (about 10 oz. each
1/2 cup coarsely chopped mushrooms
2/3 cup minced celery
2 tablespoons each minced green pepper and onion
6 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1/4 cup half and half, or milk
1/2 cup shredded Chedder cheese
2 cups flaked, smoked fish (salmon, trout or whatever is available)* salt and cayenne pepper to taste
paprika (for garnish)

Wash potatoes, pierce skins and bake at 400 degrees F for 50-60 minutes or until tender. In a skillet, saute mushrooms, celery, pepper and onions in 2 tablespoons of butter. Cut cooked potatoes in half lengthwise: scoop out pulp leaving enough pulp to make a sturdy shell. Mash pulp with remaining 4 tablespoons of butter and the half and half until fluffy. Stir in vegetables and cheese. Fold in fish. Season with salt and cayenne. Spoon mixture into potato shells. Place on baking sheet; bake in preheated, 350 degree F oven 10 minutes or until tops are lightly browned. Dust with paprika. (Makes 8 stuffed potato halves.)

(Note: One 15 1/2 oz. can of salmon, drained, or other canned or cooked fish can be substituted for the smoked fish. Season with a dash of liquid smoke.)

ROQUEFORT POTATO SALAD

Dressing:
1/3 cup olive oil
1 tablespoon tarragon vinegar
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 tablespoons minced shallots
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 tablespoon finely minced parsley salt and pepper

Salad:
20 small potatoes (about 2 lbs.)
1 head leafy lettuce
1/2 bunch watercress or parsley
1/4 cup half and half or cream
6 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled
2 tablespoons minced fresh chives
1/4 cup Roquefort or blue cheese, crumbled

Mix all dressing ingredients together and set aside. Steam and boil potatoes in their jackets until tender, about 20-30 minutes. While still warm, slice potatoes into bowl. Pour 1/4 cup of the dressing over the potatoes and mix gently. To serve, line a large platter with lettuce leaves. Arrange potatoes in long even rows divided by ruffles of watercress. Add cheese and half and half to remainder of dressing and spoon over potatoes. Sprinkle with cooked, crumbled bacon and minced chives. (Makes 6 servings.)

THE FAT-COUNTER'S PETTICOAT POTATOES

4 medium potatoes, unpeeled
4 teaspoons melted butter
salt and pepper
paprika

Slice potatoes 1/8-inch thick. Spray shallow baking sheet with natural vegetable spray. Arrange potato slices in 4 circles, overlapping slices. Sprinkle with salt, pepper and paprika. Drizzle butter on top, dividing equally. Bake at 450 degrees F for 20 minutes. (Makes 4 servings.)

CHINESE RED, WHITE AND BEEF STIR FRY

2 medium potatoes (about 2/3 lb.), peeled and cut into 1/2-inch cubes
1 lb. lean beef (flank steak, top round or chuck)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
1 tablespoon dry sherry
2 tablespoons soy sauce
2 tablespoons oil
1 large onion, thinly sliced
2 gloves garlic, minced
1 1/2 teaspoons minced fresh ginger or 3/4 teaspoon ground
1/4 cup beef or chicken broth
2 firm tomatoes, peeled and cut into eighths
1/4 cup sliced green onions

Parboil potatoes until just tender (about 6-8 minutes). Cut beef against grain in 1/4-inch slices and then cut into strips. Combine cornstarch, sherry and soy sauce and toss beef in mixture until evenly covered. Heat oil in wok or skillet, add onion, garlic and ginger and stir-fry until meat loses its redness. Stir in broth and heat quickly. Cook, covered, 1-2 minutes over medium heat. Gently stir in tomato wedges and cook just long enough to heat them through (tomatoes should be firm and retain shape). Sprinkle with green onions. (Makes 4 servings.)

STEAMED POTATO BITES

Steam or boil scrubbed small potatoes (with skins on) until fork tender (about 20-30 minutes). With a melon baller, scoop out a cavity in each potato and fill with: sour cream topped with chives or red caviar; cottage cheese topped with cooked crumbled sausage or crisp bacon; chicken liver pate; a spicy salsa; chutney; or your own favorite dip.

CHOCOLATE CRUMB CRUST

30 chocolate wafers
1/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup butter, at room temperature
2 teaspoons powdered instant coffee

Spin the wafers in the blender, 5 or 6 at a time, then empty the crumbs into a bowl. Add sugar, butter and powdered coffee to the crumbs and combine with a fork or by rubbing between your fingertips. Press into a 9-inch pie plate and chill.

For the raspberry sauce, defrost a 10-ounce package of frozen raspberries and puree in the blender.

Soup, Bread Duo

and add to beer mixture. Beat in 3 cups rye flour and 3 cups bread flour. Turn out onto a heavily floured board and knead until smooth and elastic, using extra cup of flour as necessary. Knead in bacon.

3. Place dough in a greased bowl, turning to grease top. Cover with plastic wrap and let rise in a warm place until double in bulk, about 1 to 1½ hours. Punch dough down. Divide in half and shape into two round loaves. Place on buttered baking sheets and slash tops with a razor blade. Cover with greased plastic wrap and allow to rise until doubled in bulk, about 1 hour. Bake loaves in a 350-degree oven for 40 to 45 minutes or until done.

GNOCCHI
(Potato Pastry)

A favorite among the Muzzarelli and Gentilini families for many generations, this rainy day recipe is one the whole family can get involved in. The ingredient list originated in Bologna, Italy, and was brought to America with Italia Gentilini in the early 1900s.

1 large sweet potato
Flour
Salt

Boil potatoes in skins until done. Skin and put through potato ricer to mash. Add enough flour to make a soft (not sticky) dough. Roll small portion of dough between hands to produce a long, round 1/2 inch strand. Place on cutting board and cut into 1 inch sections. Roll each section off the end of a table fork to form a shell appearance. Boil in salted water for 20 minutes and drain in colander. Serve topped with your favorite meat spaghetti sauce. Sprinkle with parmagiana cheese.

GERMAN COFFEE CAKE WITH POTATOES

Glazed with peanut butter, margarine, cinnamon and sugar or traditional confectioner's icing, this recipe from Jackie Loesche was passed on to her by her two "very German" grandmothers.

1 cup sugar
1/2 cup shortening
1 cup lukearm water
1 package yeast
1 cup mashed potatoes
1 cup potato water
2 eggs separated
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 1/2 cups flour

Dissolve yeast in lukewarm water and set aside. Cream sugar and shortening and add to mashed potatoes and potato water. Stir in yeast water and let the mixture sit for 1 1/2 to 2 hours until bubbly. Beat egg whites and yolks separately and add to bubbly mixture. Mix in flour and salt and let dough rise for approximately 2 hours. Once dough has risen, knead down, wrap and refrigerate over night. The next morning, press dough into cake pans, let rise for 1 hour and bake in a 375 degree oven for 20 to 30 minutes or until lightly browned. Makes three to four coffee cakes.

Fruit

finely shredded
2 egg whites
1/4 cup sugar
9-inch graham cracker crust

In a blender container or food processor bowl combine orange sections, juice concentrate and lemon juice. Cover; blend until smooth. Add water to make 1½ cups liquid. In saucepan stir together the 1/3 cup sugar and gelatin; stir in orange mixture. Cook and stir until gelatin is dissolved. Cool; chill to consistency of egg whites, stirring occasionally. Stir in apple. Beat whites until soft peaks form. Fold whites into orange mixture. Turn into crust. Chill at least 3 hours or overnight. Garnish with quartered orange slices, if desired. Makes 8 servings.

Calif. Cooks Offer Stock Simple Way: It's Frozen

By BARBARA HANSEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

If a recipe calls for stock, most cooks respond by opening a can of broth or dissolving a bouillon cube or bouillon granules. Only professionals or serious hobbyists make stock from scratch, a time-consuming process that requires expertise and an assortment of bones or fish parts that may not be easy to obtain.

Into this culinary gap have stepped two entrepreneurs from Southern California, Jane Matyas and Connie Grigsby. Dedicated cooks, they have put on the market a line of frozen stocks — beef, chicken and fish — that are made in the classical French style.

So confident are Matyas and Grigsby of the quality of their product that they have named the line Perfect Addition. Introduced last May, the stocks are carried in many upscale markets throughout California.

What makes these additions perfect? Unlike bouillon cubes, which list salt as their main ingredient, the stocks are salt-free and also free of additives and preservatives. That is why they must be marketed frozen. There is no secret to the formula.

"It's just good bones, good meat and good vegetables, wine and long cooking," Matyas said.

Retail prices are high compared with those of canned broth and bouillon cubes. The eight-ounce cartons of frozen chicken or fish stock sell for about $2.39. The beef stock is slightly higher at $2.59 to $2.69.

The following recipes, developed by Matyas and Grigsby, include chicken fajitas that are cooked in stock and an herb-flavored vinaigrette that calls for stock as a means of reducing the oil content.

SLIM AND TRIM FAJITAS

1 green pepper
1 sweet yellow pepper
1 sweet red pepper
1 or 2 jalapeno chiles
2 whole chicken breasts, skinned and boned
1 tablespoon chili powder
2 teaspoons cumin
1 medium onion, chopped
1 large clove garlic, minced
1 cup chicken stock
1/4 cup chopped cilantro
Dash lime juice
Flour or corn tortillas, warmed

Core and seed peppers and jalapeno chile. Cut peppers into 1-inch squares. Finely chop chile. Set aside.

Cut chicken meat into 3/4-inch cubes. Place in bowl and toss with chili powder and cumin.

Lightly spray large non-stick skillet with vegetable coating. Add onion and garlic and cook over medium-high heat, tossing frequently, until onion begins to brown lightly, about 5 minutes.

Add peppers and chile and toss 5 minutes. Add 3 to 4 tablespoons chicken stock and chicken cubes. Toss 3 to 4 minutes, until chicken is slightly cooked and beginning to take on color. Do not overcook chicken at this point.

Add remaining stock and cook over high heat, tossing frequently, until sauce is reduced to desired consistency and chicken is cooked through. Stir in cilantro, then lime juice to taste. Serve at once with warm tortillas. Makes 4 servings.

HERB VINAIGRETTE

2 tablespoons extra virgin olive oil
3 tablespoons chicken stock
1 medium clove garlic, peeled and cut in half
1 teaspoon chopped tarragon
1 teaspoon chopped basil
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
2 tablespoons balsamic vinegar
Dash lemon juice
Salt, pepper

Combine oil, stock, garlic, tarragon, basil and mustard in small bowl. Let stand 1 hour at room temperature. Whisk in vinegar, lemon juice and salt and pepper to taste. Remove garlic before serving. Shake well before using. Keep refrigerated and use within 3 days. Makes about 1/2 cup.

SHERRIED MUSHROOMS

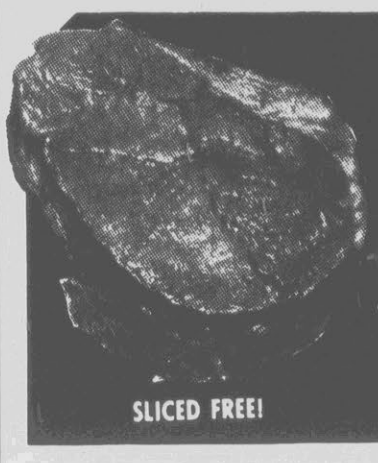

2 tablespoons butter or 1 tablespoon butter and 1 tablespoon oil
2 teaspoons minced shallot
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced or quartered
1/3 cup dry Sherry
1 1/2 cups beef stock
Salt
Freshly ground black pepper

Heat butter in large skillet over medium heat until butter begins to foam. Add shallot and stir until wilted. Do not brown. Add mushrooms and toss over medium-high heat until mushrooms begin to take on color and release juice.

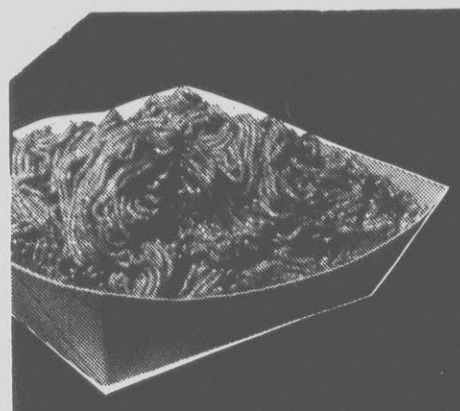

Add Sherry and cook 1 minute. Add beef stock, mix well and cook over medium heat until sauce coats back of spoon and mushrooms are shiny and well glazed. Season to taste with salt and pepper. Serve as accompaniment to steaks, chops and roasts, or add to gravies and sauces. Makes 4 servings.

Teens Have Influence As Trendsetters Of the '80s

Today's teen-age offspring of the 1960s' Flower Children are a new breed of Power Children, an annual $50 billion spending machine, according to a recent study conducted by Cambell Soup Company.

The "Material Girl" or boy of the 1980s spends a lot of money on food. In fact, the growth of weekly dollars spent on food away from home since 1980 has averaged 30 percent among teens 13 to 15 years of age, and 60 percent among teens aged 16 to 19. And while soft drinks and snacks are by far the most popular items that teen-agers buy for themselves, soup is not far behind, points out Mara Rastovsky, Campbell's Marketing Research Manager.

"Today's teen-agers are trendsetters," says Rastovsky. "They can create an impact on the market far greater than their numbers. They can turn a promoted product into an overnight phenomenon. And, What's more significant is that today teenhood extends into the 20s, 30s and even beyond. Product or brand images formed in the teen years are swept along into adulthood."

One in a series of American Food Preferences studies, "The Food World of Teen-agers" reveals a fascinating portrait of approximately 24,772,000 young Americans who represent 10 percent of the U.S. population.

Unlike their "me" generation parents who yelled and rebelled, these teen-agers have no strong ties to political or social movements. They speak softly and involve themselves in socially acceptable movements like Live Aid. They repect their parents, steer to the middle of the road politically, and pursue their own version of the American Dream: college, careers, marriage and 2.4 children. They are into healthy lifestyles and are, perhaps, more independent than their parents were as teen-agers.

In the past decade and-a-half there have been dramatic demographic as well as cultural shifts. The teen population has declined, although it is projected to rise by the year 2000. There's a different lifestyle pattern for the "me" generation's children. Many are latch-key children: 50 percent of teen households have a full-time working mother; 20 percent have a part-time one. Some are victims of divorce and a fragmented society: one-fourth of 10-to17-year-old children live in one-parent households. Today's teens are from smaller families: baby boomers are marrying later and having fewer babies. They are from dual-income households: only 27 percent of all teens live in traditional households where mom stays home and dad goes to work.

But in spite of the decline in teen population, teen-age spending is on the increase — from $25.3 billion in 1975 when there were five million more teens, to $49.8 billion in 1985. In other words, each teen-ager had, on average, $38.82 a week to spend, a 137 percent (nominal) increase in spending power over 1975's average. In 1985, the average teen had 46 percent more real dollars, or $23.83 to spend any way he or she wanted.

Teen's money comes from a combination of an allowance and earnings. Some teen-age girls help to manage the house for their working moms, and do most of the food shopping. During the school year, 44.7 percent of teens work outside the home, and when summer vacation comes, 61.3 percent have jobs.

How do teens spend their money? Boys 13 to 15 spend one-third on food. Older boys treat food as a top priority but spend slightly more on the "social" aspects of their lives. Girls 13 to 15 rate food second only to clothing, while their older sisters invest half their weekly spending money on personal appearance — probably in the hope of being invited out for a hamburger!

Young people today are caught up in role reversal with 63 percent of teen girls and 39 percent of teen boys reporting that they shope "quite a bit" for food for their families. In 1985, that "bit" represented $16 billion or 40 percent of the teen family's budget.

But what do teen-agers like to eat? To find out, Campbell marketing researchers sent a questionnaire to 215 teen girls and 196 teen boys relative to the U.S. population. The teens rated 289 foods on how much they like them and how often they eat them.

Their favorite foods are not necessarily the most healthful. Besides ice cream, the top 10 included homemade cookies, french fries, restaurant pizza, hamburgers, and corn-on-the-cob.

By meal occasion, they like donuts best for breakfast, but their list also includes some relatively trendy items such as croissants and bagels. Although sweet fruit juices and dairy products are favorite breakfast beverages, hot tea and herbal teas are making an appearance.

Lunchtime means hamburgers to teens. They do, however, prefer chicken noodle soup to hot dogs. Chicken noodle soup, in fact, gets a lunchtime vote from children and adults, as well as teens.

Door Is Open For Genetically Engineered Food

By ROBERT COOKE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

"Tremendous" is the way one scientist put it.

"The significance is enormous," said another.

"The first beacon in the darkness," said a third.

After decades of frustration and defeat, researchers have finally coaxed mature rice plants to grow from single, naked cells. Mundane and ordinary as the experiment may seem, it marks the opening of a bold new era, a Greener Revolution.

Successful experiments reported by scientists in England, Japan and France now show that the world's most important food crops — rice, corn and wheat — can be manipulated by genetic engineers. The door, suddenly, is thrown wide open.

Heretofore, the grasses have stubbornly resisted manipulation, mainly because scientists couldn't get whole plants to grow from single cells in culture. Now they can do it, and agriculture, worldwide, will change dramatically.

Like the bacteria already being redesigned and rebuilt by molecular biologists, the cells of cereal plants — stripped bare of their protective cell walls — are ripe for experiment. They will be recipients of new genes providing disease resistance, drought tolerance and greater yield.

"The significance of accomplishing this is enormous," said geneticist John Scandalios, distinguished university research professor and head of genetics at North Carolina State University. Now, he said, researchers can begin using the powerful tools of biotechnology on the world's most important food crops.

"There's no question it's a landmark achievement," said Joe Key, a respected plant biochemist and vice president for research at the University of Georgia. "This is one of the things that hasn't been possible with any of the major food crops. So it is a major success."

According to a recent report in Science magazine, success in cloning rice protoplasts was reported in December by botanist Edward Cocking and his colleagues at the University of Nottingham, in England. Earlier, four research groups in Japan — at Mitsui-Toatsu Chemicals Inc., at Kyoto University, at the Plantech Research Institute, and at Tohoku University — had also reported success. In addition, a team at the University of Paris-South, in Orsay, succeeded in growing adult plants from rice protoplasts.

The work in rice parallels a wide range of successful experiments already performed on other plant families. For example, scientists have inserted bioluminescence genes into tobacco plants to make them glow in the dark, induced petunia plants to make a human hormone, and have tailored several types of plants to survive contact with lethal herbicides.

The grasses, however, have stubbornly resisted such manipulation. They resisted so well, in fact, that many researchers simply gave up trying.

Now, said pioneering rice researcher Roy Chaleff, plant-genetics research supervisor for Du Pont, the cloning of rice protoplasts "has removed not only a technical barrier, but also a psychological one."

"After trying for years, many researchers had just given up hope. They had abandoned the idea and just wouldn't work on it anymore," Chaleff said. "Now these researchers are encouraged, and they will renew their efforts to extend this procedure to other cereals."

The reports of success in rice have already spurred new work, said Gary Toenniessen, who oversees the Rockefeller Foundation's rice-research program.

"The complete process of introducing foreign DNA (genes) and regenerating a rice plant with the DNA active in it has not yet been published," Toenniessen said. "But I know for a fact that several laboratories have that experiment under way. Within a year we should have genetically transformed rice plants."

Some experts think, however, that even though the cloning was first successful in rice, the findings will be quickly applied to corn, especially in the United States, where the largest profits will come from improved corn.

Leon Dure, molecular biologist and botanist at the University of Georgia, said success in rice cloning "insinuates that success with corn is just around the corner. In the Western world, corn is a more important crop than rice; there are probably 20 people working on corn for every one working on rice."

Commercial interests may even drive the research in strange ways, said Robert Bondaryk, a senior biotechnology consultant at Arthur D. Little Inc., in Cambridge, Mass.

In early research, he said, "all we're going to be able to do is stick in some interesting new single genes. One that everyone is doing, for example, is herbicide tolerance."

"Because it's one of the few things we can do, and because it seems to have some kind of commercial potential, chances are we're going to have a lot more herbicide tolerance than this world needs or wants," Bondaryk said.

In time, however, he thinks improvements in nutritional quality — such as increasing the amino acids lysine in corn and methionine in soybeans — will be made.

"In wheat, disease resistance is always a big issue. And nutritional enhancement may simply involve more protein; high-protein wheats already have market value."

Given time, Bondaryk added, "it's probably correct that every plant will be manipulable, the way tobacco is manipulable now."

The problems involved in putting new genes into plant cells have largely been solved already, using tobacco plants as the main "guinea pig" species. Japanese scientists learned years ago that special enzymes can be used to dissolve away the rigid cellulose barrier that surrounds each plant cell, thus exposing the cell to manipulation.

Cocking, in England, and others have also worked for years on ways to insert new genes. One approach is to force two naked cells to fuse into a single cell containing the combined genes of both original cells.

A more precise approach, which allows insertion of single genes into the cells, is called electroporation. This involves briefly shocking the cells with an electric jolt, causing them to open pores in the cell membrane, allowing new genes to flow in.

Ideally, however, scientists would like to have a "vector," or vehicle to carry genes into specific cells. One, the so-called Ti plasmid, is already available for plants like tobacco and tomato, and has been highly successful in numerous experiments.

Unfortunately, the Ti plasmid — which is a small ring of DNA isolated from a bacterium that causes tumors in plants — doesn't work well, yet, in plants of the grass family. There were recent reports from Switzerland, however, that the Ti plasmid may soon be useful in corn cells.

Among plant scientists the Ti plasmid is known as Mother Nature's genetic engineer.
