Marines Ordered Home

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Five Marines have been transferred to the United States from the security force at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow in the wake of an investigation of a former embassy guard charged with spying for the Soviets, Pentagon sources said today.

The sources, who asked not to be named, said the five had been transferred to the Quantico Marine Base in northern Virginia pending completion of an "administrative inquiry." The sources asserted the transfers were not directly connected to the probe of Sgt. Clayton J. Lonetree, the former Marine guard who is now being held at Quantico on charges of espionage.

"The Marines are looking into some violations of military regulations," said one official. "No charges have been filed against anyone yet and nobody is being confined to quarters."

"This isn't another case of espionage," added a second official. The Washington Post today quoted U.S. Ambassador Arthur A. Hartman as saying the investigation of Lonetree "had revealed that other things were happening," requiring that "several" other Marines be sent to the United States.

The Marine Corps has charged that Lonetree, while an embassy guard in 1985 and 1986, provided Soviet agents with the identities of U.S. intelligence officials on the embassy's staff along with floor plans of the U.S. embassies in Moscow and Vienna, Austria.

Sources have said Lonetree became involved with a female Soviet translator who worked at the embassy.

Lonetree, 25, was returned to the United States in December. If court-martialed and convicted on the espionage charge, he would face a possible death penalty.

The Marines assigned to the Moscow embassy live and work under strict military regulations, including a rule barring females from entering their quarters and another discouraging them from close contacts with the Soviets. The Post said that some of those Marines transferred from the embassy might have violated such rules.

Ms. Randolph, a member of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 7032, said the hat took 21 hours to make and sports 1,000 red paper poppies. ## Council Approves Zoning Concept To Cut Delays

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
The Greenville City Council has approved a Planned Unit Development Ordinance designed to facilitate compromises between developers and surrounding landowners on controversial projects.

The ordinance, which establishes a new zoning classification and can be requested by developers, was unanimously approved by council members at their monthly meeting Wednesday night.

"The purpose of developing a planned unit development concept is to allow the development of politically hard-to-build parcels through the conditional use process and the cluster development," City Planner Harry Hamilton said.

Problems with developing land in odd-shaped parcels and flood zones or near single-family residential zones will be alleviated under the PUD plan, according to city planning officials.

The PUD ordinance will allow developers to present plans at an earlier date than is presently permitted, according to Bobby Roberson, director of Planning and Community Development, who said an eight-member committee began work on the proposal about 17 months ago.

"It means they would have the opportunity to show how they are going to develop property," Roberson said. "It also gives residents the opportunity to see exactly where single-family, multifamily and duplexes will be placed on the tract."

"It guarantees the planning commission (the power) to require the developer to actually show what he's going to do. The proposal would, in reality be part of the rezoning request."

Under the district concept, the Zoning Ordinance specifications will be amended to provide a new zoning district like one of the medical districts, Hamilton said.

"Within that district, we would have some specific use and dimensional standards listed right in the text of the ordinance," Hamilton said. "Prior to any type of development, a special use permit for a specific development or a land use plan would have to be presented and approved."

Meanwhile, council members approved a request by Daniel J. Hanks for a privilege license to operate a stress reduction massage therapy business despite objections from Council member Janice Buck, who cast the only dissenting vote on the matter.

"I'm concerned about a state statute and city code that allows house-to-house solicitation for massages," Mrs. Buck said. "I have no problem with massages in the proper places."

The council also approved an amendment to the Subdivision Ordinance concerning required improvement performance guarantees which will eliminate second deeds of trust as forms of security.

"Because of what we learned when the Radisson project failed, we knew that second deeds of trust were going to be unacceptable as forms of security for subdivision improvements," City Attorney Mac McCarley said.

"The amendment provides that first deeds of trust will be acceptable because they are not subject to the

KEYNOTE SPEAKER — State Human Resources Secretary Phillip J. Kirk Jr., standing, was the keynote speaker Wednesday night at the third annual Lincoln Day Dinner held at the Sheraton Greenville. ## Republicans Honor East At Pitt Lincoln Day Dinner

By JERRY RAYNOR

Pitt County's Republicans used their third annual Lincoln Day dinner Wednesday night as an "In Memoriam" tribute to the late Sen. John P. East, a former East Carolina University professor whose suicide last June 30 shocked the state and nation.

Principal tributes were made by Thomas Herndon, a retired department of history faculty member at ECU, and Max Joyner Sr., vice chairman of the ECU Board of Trustees.

Herndon, noting that he and East first came to East Carolina University in 1964 when it was still a college," emphasized that "East was best known as a scholar, a man with a brilliant mind and a close friend to many."

"He may be best known nationally as a senator, but those of us who knew him well think of his success both as an achiever in the academic world as well as a politician, despite his physical handicap."

East was confined to a wheelchair during most of his adulthood because of paralysis caused by polio.

Herndon briefly traced the life of East, from his birth in "the hometown of another noted Republican, Abraham Lincoln," to his service in the U.S. Marine Corps, his battle with polio and his college years terminating with a Ph.D. in law from the University of Florida just prior to coming to ECU.

"John East was at all times an achiever and thinker," Herndon said, "a man who studied seriously not only the political thinkers of the 19th and 20th centuries, but one who was knowledgeable about thinkers all the way back to Plato and Aristotle, who was familiar with the thoughts of Voltaire, Burke and Locke."

"His ability to synthesize ideas, to apply them to his own personal role

Lincoln ... As Youngsters Recall

CHICAGO (AP) — Some grade-schoolers from Abraham Lincoln's home state describe him as a good president who freed the slaves and tried his hand at less serious duties — like throwing pies and making pennies.

Second- and third-graders at Newberry Academy in Chicago and second-graders at DuBois School in Springfield were asked about Lincoln as they prepared to stay home from school today in honor of his birthday 178 years ago.

Most had no trouble remembering Lincoln was a president, and some gave him even a bit more credit than he was due.

"He was the very, very first president," said Lisa C. Fischer, 7, of DuBois.

"He made the penny," said classmate Daymon Kilman, 7.

But Newberry third-grader Karrie Radloff, 8, pointed out. "Abraham Lincoln's face is on the penny."

Slavery, war and monetary issues aside, the children sometimes remembered Lincoln for less historic events, even though DuBois' Khara Geders, 7, observed, "Abraham Lincoln was a famous guy."

"One thing that he did was that he got the pig out of the mud," said Matt Maddox, also 7 and of DuBois.

"Abraham Lincoln was the first pie-thrower," said classmate Grant Johnson, 7, who insisted Lincoln also was "the fastest pie-thrower."

Yet, it was clearly the pictures of the 6-foot-4, big-boned and bearded president that 8-year-old Cynthia Alfaro of Newberry recalled. "Abe was tall and strong," she wrote.

Many youngsters wrote of the studious but personable young Lincoln as well as his opposition to slavery. And most remembered the human side of the man who got his first job as a store clerk after he moved to New Salem in 1831.

Lincoln "was a man who had a mom and had two sisters and he lived in a log cabin," wrote DuBois' Keegan Smith, 7.

"Abraham Lincoln was honest and against slavery," said Vashti Cleveland, a 7-year-old second-grader at Newberry. "He loved to read and tell jokes and he loved to write. Abraham was our 16th president."

"He gave black people freedom," Newberry second-grader Sonja Henry, 8, wrote. "Without him, we would not have a free country."

And 7-year-old Tim DaRosa of DuBois had the right idea but not quite the right spelling. Lincoln, he said, "won the silver war."

"Perhaps the most frightening characteristic of this decade worldwide may turn out to be this topic, the role of religion in politics," said Judge Gerald Arnold, forum moderator at a debate at East Carolina University Tuesday night.

The debate was sponsored by the ECU chapter of Phi Sigma Alpha Political Science honor society and was held at Mendenhall Student Center.

Panelists chosen to discuss the role of religion in politics were the Rev. Coy Privette, director of the Christian Action League; the Rev. Kent Kelly, head of the Moral Majority in North Carolina; George Gardner, state director of the Civil Liberties Union, and Dr. Roger Sharpe, director of North Carolinians for First Amendment Freedoms.

"If a person is a good Christian, a good Jew, he has got to be a good citizen involved in his government," Privette said.

Privette and Kelly discussed the importance of having a religious background in state and national government. "The ultimate bigotry is not to want to have me have the right to go into the General Assembly to advocate what I believe ... because I am a fundamentalist," Kelly said.

"The inherent danger to our liberties is their movement to have government coerce or force their views, be they religious or political, on those of us who differ in our religious or political views," Sharpe said.

Gardner also said political freedom could be hindered if religion was allowed a great role in politics. "Some people settled in this country in order to escape religious persecution. Who was persecuting them?"

Christians, because some Christians had the ear of the king ... ?"

The forum, which took questions from the audience, covered such topics as voluntary silent prayer in schools and censorship.

On the subject of silent prayer, Gardner commented, "The slogans 'One Nation Under God' and 'In God We Trust' passed by an act of Congress in 1954 and 1956 are nothing but politics playing to superstition." He went on to say, "Those who want to force children to pray distort Supreme Court decisions."

"To tell our children that they are not allowed to engage in silent prayer if they desire is the biggest hypocrisy I have seen in our nation today," said Privette, who also is a Republican member of the state House from Cabarrus County.

When the discussion moved to censorship, the panelists were in agreement that individuals should be allowed to decide what they find offensive or distasteful.

"Censorship comes about by community standards," Kelly said. "The individual has the right to be offended by anything."

"Many students are getting cheated of this great value in our history because it (religion) has been censored out of our textbooks," Privette said.

In closing, Privette summed up his views by quoting Plato, "The price that good people pay in not being involved in politics is to be governed by people worse than themselves."

"If you have freedom, you've got freedom not to believe as well as you have freedom to believe, or else it's not really freedom," Sharpe commented.

Georgia Governor Calls On Activists To Quit Protests While Talks Continue

By JOHN A. BOLT
Associated Press Writer
ATLANTA (AP) — Gov. Joe Frank Harris told civil rights leaders no more marches are needed in virtually all-white Forsyth County, but the activists threatened immediate escalation of non-violent activity there unless Harris accedes to their demands.

Harris met for about 80 minutes Wednesday with members of the Coalition to End Fear and Intimidation in Forsyth County. The coalition presented Harris with a "statement of concerns" asking he use his influence to have criminal charges dropped against the Rev. Hosea Williams and others and to encourage county officials to restructure a biracial committee.

"Unless the problems are solved, we are going to mount a major non-violent campaign" in Forsyth County, Williams said. He previously has promised sit-ins and other demonstrations in the county.

And the statement said, "If these conditions are not responded to positively within 24 hours, we are left with no other alternative but to escalate our non-violent direct action campaign immediately."

Mrs. Coretta Scott King said after the meeting the coalition did not expect a conclusive answer, but an indication of what the governor would do.

Meanwhile, Williams said the FBI had told him it had information of a Ku Klux Klan plot to kill him.

Williams said FBI agent Jeffrey Holmes had notified him Wednesday of a plot. "They told me to be careful," Williams said.

FBI spokesman Ed Horne said, "Whatever he (Williams) tells you is his own dealing, but I can't comment on anything like that."

Bill Padgett, commander of the anti-terrorist squad of the Georgia Bureau of Investigation, said, "The FBI made us aware of it (a plot)."

Neither Williams nor Padgett had further information.

Williams, his son and daughter and five others were charged with unlawful assembly Monday for picketing outside a restaurant where syndicated talk show host Oprah Winfrey was interviewing residents of the county, which has been the scene of recent civil rights activity, including a Jan. 24 march by about 25,000 demonstrators. Williams also was charged with obstructing a state highway.

Few blacks have lived in the county north of Atlanta since 1912 when thousands were run out following the death of a white teen-ager who claimed she had been raped by three black youths. One of the youths was lynched and the others tried, convicted and executed.

The coalition also requested that Harris encourage Forsyth County officials to restructure a biracial committee formed in response to a previous coalition demand.

Following the Jan. 24 march, the coalition asked civic and government leaders to appoint a committee to study the county's racial past and to investigate racial practices in hiring and housing.

County officials announced 10 members of the proposed 12-member committee, including four blacks from neighboring counties, but the coalition objected to the county naming black members.

In Wednesday's meeting with Harris, the coalition suggested the committee be expanded to 33 members, 16 appointed by the coalition, 16 by the county and one by Harris.

After the meeting, Mrs. Coretta Scott King said she felt Harris was sympathetic to their suggestions, but had given them no promises.

In his own news conference, Harris said "dropping the charges is going to be hard" and he said if the arrests had been inappropriate, federal observers on the scene would have registered their own objections.

Harris said Monday's arrests were in line with arrests of Ku Klux Klansmen and sympathizers during the Jan. 24 march in which 56 whites were charged with various misdemeanors stemming from counter-protests.

"The same conditions applied on that day (Monday) as the day of the march," Harris said. "The law was being applied equally."

Harris said he did not know what specific action he would take, although he said he would be willing to serve as an arbitrator to keep both sides talking.

"I don't think any more marches are necessary," Harris said, because "we haven't pinpointed the problem ... other than an attitude of intimidation."

Besides Mrs. King and Williams, others meeting with Harris included the Rev. Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference; the Rev. C.T. Vivian, president of the Center for Democratic Renewal, formerly the National Anti-Klan Network; and Dean Carter, a Gainesville businessman.

Sharpe said 108 cassette tapes and three tape boxes, with a combined value of $1,125, were taken from a vehicle parked in a lot near Hooter's Fine Food and Spirits at 605 S.E. Greenville Blvd. in an incident reported at 8:21 p.m.

Officer J.E. Woolard said a citizens band radio and speaker were taken from a vehicle parked at The Plaza in an incident reported at 9:02 p.m., while Sharpe said 15 cassette tapes valued at $150 were taken from one car and four cassette tapes were taken from a second vehicle — both parked at The Plaza — in incidents reported about 9:20 p.m.

Robertson Panel Raises $6 Million

CHESAPEAKE, Va. (AP) — A political group backing the Rev. Pat Robertson for president says it is one-fifth of the way to its fund-raising goal of $30 million.

Connie Snapp, a spokeswoman for Americans for Robertson, said Tuesday the group has raised $6 million for Robertson's potential bid for the Republican presidential nomination.

Americans for Robertson, which has offices in Chesapeake and Alexandria, registered with the Federal Election Commission last July as an "exploratory committee" to determine whether there is broad support for a Robertson candidacy. The group is not required to report how much it has raised.

Robertson's official political action committee, the Committee for Freedom, has raised $561,236, far less than the PACs of other Republican presidential hopefuls, according to FEC reports filed last week.

A PAC for Vice President George Bush has raised $9.4 million; one for Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kansas, has raised $3.3 million and one for Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., has raised $3.2 million, FEC reports showed.

Robertson, an evangelist who founded the Christian Broadcasting Network in Virginia Beach, has said he will seek the GOP nomination for president in 1988 if 3 million registered voters sign petitions supporting him by Sept. 17.

Ms. Snapp said she did not know how many signatures of support Robertson has received.

"The news is all good," she said. "There's literally boxes of petitions that haven't been counted yet. We're trying to determine how many we have at this moment."

In November, Robertson said about 300,000 people had signed the petitions.

For the last 10 days, Robertson has been making political speeches, primarily to Republican groups, in California, Michigan and New Hampshire, Ms. Snapp said. He will speak in Tennessee on Thursday and in Texas on Monday, she said.

Youngster Shot

ASHEVILLE (AP) — A 7-year-old boy who was playing "G.I. Joe" critically injured his playmate's brother Wednesday afternoon when he fired what he thought was a toy gun, authorities said.

The boy, whose identity was not disclosed by authorities, found a loaded .38-caliber revolver under a pillow on a couch at the home of John Lape, 18, and fired it, striking Lape above his left eye, according to Capt. Rick Cummings of the Buncombe County Sheriff's Department.

Cummings said Lape was taken to Memorial Mission Hospital where he was undergoing brain surgery late Wednesday. Lape was listed in critical condition, Cummings said.

Dixie Fair

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Winston-Salem Alderman Larry W. Womble wants to change the name of the fair in Winston-Salem, and he's not just whistling Dixie.

Womble said Wednesday that the use of the word "Dixie" — as in the Dixie Classic Fair — is offensive to some people. He said that he's had three or four calls from constituents in the past few weeks.

"It's a throwback to the traditional South," Womble said. "Dixie may be offensive, may leave a connotation that is not acceptable to a certain segment of society."

Growing Burden

Vocational education is strong in North Carolina. You can bet your auto mechanic and computer programmer on that quite safely.

It will continue to grow more energetic as the state approaches a new decade — and on that you can bet your secretary and draftsman. But vocational education will also acquire a heavier burden as it shoulders a growing share of the responsibility for training the state's workers.

That is a burden that local and state governments cannot bear alone. In a time when vocational education will be forced to gear up to train workers for changing economic times, federal funding of programs is shrinking. State funding methods sometimes force programs to fight over students to get dollars. They also create friction between public schools and community colleges that sometimes compete for the same students.

These are trends that must be reversed. During the celebration of National Vocational Education Week this week, that is a goal that should be emphasized at the local, state and national levels.

The value of vocational education to the state — and local — economy is considerable. The impact that graduates of Pitt County schools' and Pitt Community College's vocational education programs is equally significant.

For example, of Pitt County's 4,769 ninth-12th graders, 3,099 are taking vocational courses in 1987-88. Approximately 55 percent of that total will be placed in either entry level jobs, the armed forces or a community college.

Furthermore, over the next three years the N.C. Board of Community Colleges forecasts 105,000 job openings in the vocational/technical field — 105,000 jobs in 40 areas over and above current enrollment in the state's high school and community college vocational education systems.

Those jobs are a reflection of the declining need for white collar workers. They also represent a backlash from heavy emphasis on high technology programs. In a period when the state's hiring is predicted to shift away from traditional agricultural and manufacturing, those jobs will play a pivotal role in the economy. Whether or not the individuals who fill those slots are adequately trained will be crucial to growth, progress and profitability.

How well vocational education programs do their job affects local budgets, both in tax dollars spent and tax bills collected. Vocational education graduates often own their own businesses, get excellent wages, make good career advancement and positively contribute to economic growth.

Both PCC and PCS have excellent success records, thanks to a tradition of cooperation between the local public school system and community college. But local support alone cannot meet the challenges that will face vocational education in the next decade.

For vocational education to continue to thrive, federal financial support must be reinforced and solidified. The state must also find a more equitable means of funding programs than doling out dollars per student head.

With financial backing, cooperation and proper leadership, Pitt County's vocational education programs can keep turning out the type of workers the county — and state — needs to grow and prosper.

Behind It All

Mikhail Gorbachev acts like a man in a hurry.

In recent weeks the General Secretary of the Communist Party in the Soviet Union has been calling for great changes in the way things are being done in his country.

There is one overriding reason, and perhaps secondary reasons as well. But growth of the Soviet economy has gone into a decline; better trade and political relations with the West loom as prime necessities and probably account for much of what is going on.

The Soviet Union is looking forward to a forum on peace and disarmament to which many Western political, business, cultural and religious figures are invited. Projecting a more democratic image would be an important step toward laying the groundwork for that event.

Public release of many political prisoners and "prisoners of conscience" is logically related to that remedial action, as would be the easing of curbs on emigration.

There is talk, too, that Gorbachev would like to win agreement on holding a human rights conference in Moscow this spring. This does seem far-fetched, but the General Secretary has been building an image as a reasonable person as well as one who is deeply involved in reforms at home.

He even charmed Margaret Thatcher into volunteering he was someone with whom she could do business; so don't count him out, yet.

A Georgia Convention And Jimmy Carter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Democrats are going to Jimmy Carter territory to select a presidential nominee in 1988, but there's been barely a mention of the southerner who last won the White House for the party.

If the thousands of Democrats who gather at the Omni Center in Atlanta in July 1988 go a little ways out of town, they will find a new library — the Carter presidential library. And the former president still lives down the road a bit, in Plains, Ga.

But there was no talk about Carter on Wednesday when Democratic Party chairman Paul Kirk announced that Atlanta had been selected as the convention site.

Kirk, the Massachusetts lawyer who heads the party, talked of the need to reach out to the once solidly Democratic South, to build on the election victories in the region in 1966 for victory in the 1988 presidential contest.

"If we're to be a competitive national party, we have to be competitive in the Southern part of this country," Kirk said. "I think people recognize that the capital and hub and heart of the South is Atlanta."

Only at the end of Kirk's news conference did a reporter ask about the former president. First, Kirk started to dodge the question: "I think the Democrats are going to pull together and get moving to the future."

But then Kirk reflected and allowed as how Carter is looking better and better as President Reagan's administration becomes increasingly mired in the scandal over Iran arms and Contra aid.

"Given what this Republican administration has been involved in, I think President Carter's standing is improving in the country," Kirk said.

The Reagan landslide of 1980 that swept Carter from the White House seemed to sweep the Georgia son out of the party's view and memory.

Carter wasn't at the 1984 Democratic Convention, even though his former vice president, Walter Mondale, was on hand in San Francisco to pick up the presidential nomination.

Reagan's 1980 victory was due in part to Americans' deep dissatisfaction with Carter's performance as president, with soaring inflation and Americans held hostage in Iran. And Reagan continued to beat on the Carter record even as he won re-election in 1984.

There were echoes of that rhetoric as the Democrats chose Atlanta over Houston.

Texas GOP Chairman George Strake of Houston said: "In effect, the national Democratic Party has chosen to ignore the importance of Texas and has returned to the malaise of 'Jimmy Carter' land."

A key lesson for Democrats from Jimmy Carter comes not from partisan memories like Strake's, but from a look at the map.

Both Democrats and Republicans are holding their 1988 conventions in the South because the region is growing rapidly, gaining both popular and electoral votes in presidential elections.

And the map for the Democrats is a daunting one.

While the South was once solid for the Democrats, it's been a disaster except when Carter was on the ticket. In 1968, the Democrats under Hubert Humphrey won one Southern state — Texas. In 1972, none went Democratic in the South.

In 1976, Carter swept the South except for Virginia.

In 1980, Carter managed to carry only Georgia in his home region. And in 1984, it was another Republican sweep.

As the Democrats work to grab a good portion of the South's electoral votes to win in 1988, Carter is working his way back into the party's view and memory.

The rehabilitation of Jimmy Carter within the Democratic Party may well be complete by 1988. And you can count on his showing up at the 1988 Democratic convention.

Public Forum

To the editor:

I wish to speak out on an issue which greatly concerns me — that of not being able to get help for troubled young people. In the past two months, I have experienced three cases in which help has been needed but has not been available.

The first case involves a young alcoholic. His family has sought help from all sources they know of — law enforcement, the courts, mental health and alcohol rehabilitation. They have received the same response from all: "There is nothing we can do." Now he is in prison, where he has been promised help for his problem. His only therapy has been shooting basketball, playing cards and watching television! Not once has anyone even spoken to him about the problem for which he is supposed to be getting help.

The second case involves a young man who obviously had a mental disorder — obvious to everyone except those who are supposed to know about these conditions. His parents, too, have been everywhere they know trying to get help, but have been told that nothing can be done. He was buried recently, having met a violent death.

The third case involves a teenaged girl who has tried to commit suicide. After spending four hours in the emergency room, after having her stomach pumped out, and after talking to two psychiatrists, she was sent home, even though she explicitly stated that she wanted to die and would try again.

There is something wrong somewhere. The law enforcement officers blame the courts; the courts blame the lawmakers; the lawmakers blame society. Where does the blame lie? Have we forgotten the rule of "loving our neighbors" and "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure"?

I ask our county commissioners and our legislators to examine the coordination of our rehabilitation services so that those who are "falling through the net" may be rescued.

To the editor:

Since January 28, when the American Senior Citizens "Galaxy of Stars" show article appeared in the Daily Reflector, I have had several calls asking if the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club is affiliated with that organization. Until that newspaper notice, we had never heard of the American Senior Citizens Association. This letter is to inform the public that the Town and Country Senior Citizens Club is not associated with the American Senior Citizens Association, nor to my knowledge, is any other senior citizens group of Pitt County.

The American Senior Citizens Association is not a Pitt County organization, and neither as a group nor as individuals are we supporting its activities.

As to the claim that bringing the show to Greenville will make Pitt County a better place for senior citizens, we would like to see a list of specific ways, rather than such a general statement.

Sarah Ashton, president
Town and Country Senior Citizens Club

To the editor:

I must comment on several glaring errors you committed in your recent editorial "Error Committed" concerning Pitt County school attendance lines. First, any group of responsible citizens who take the time and effort to do research and make a presentation to any public board should be praised and applauded, not chastised as you wrongly did. This is a civic right.

Secondly, you fail to realize that groups wishing to promote the idea of tremendous racial imbalance and inequitable capital funding in our public schools have just as much opportunity to present and espouse this view as does any other. If some citizens chose not to speak up on the issues, this was their option.

Thirdly, by all accounts, the crowd at the Brody Building Monday night was an overflowing 600, not 250 as you have suggested.

Lastly, according to your logic, public boards and commissions should not be influenced or take into consideration any public statements or presentations unless the board has heard from all the citizens of the county. According to you, then, we should close down the public meetings of the Planning and Zoning Commission, the City Council, the County Commissioners, or the School Board simply because all involved citizens do not show up to speak! No more City Council meetings, then, if only 75 people attend, since there must be 35,000 there to be representative.

Come on, Reflector, admit you made an error and recognize a truly inequitable situation. Applaud the Pitt County School Board for being sensitive to the unified voices of hundreds (representing thousands) of concerned citizens and parents!

Richard L. Tucker

To the editor:

In response to your editorial, "Error Committed," regarding the Feb. 2, 1987, Pitt County School Board meeting and, in particular, with respect to attendance lines and capital funding:

You imply that only 250 people — vocal mind you — can sway the considered opinions of our duly elected officials. We disagree!

For once, we feel that the governing board has listened to the wishes of the people they are serving; and though walking in newly turned soil, they are trying, not only to do what is best for the county, but also they are giving consideration to individual problems created. We recognize that the attendance line problem is a difficult issue and that any proposal will have its detractors.

For you to say that the 250 "vocal citizens" did the thinking for the Board of Education is a slap in the face. We say to you — Those 250 "vocal citizens" were speaking for the majority of citizens of Pitt County, and we applaud their efforts.

We do regret the Board not hearing Dr. West's presentation. The Board needs a starting point to work from, and regrettably we do not have that.

We, as citizens of Pitt County, need to forget the idea of the Pitt County Schools and the Greenville City Schools as separate entities and think of our schools as a consolidated system. As a consolidated system, our future is only limited by our drive and desire. We hope that we can realize a conclusion to the problems before us and get on with the business of educating our children.

Strength For Today

The great English statesman William Gladstone once remarked, when all has been said of man's gifts, the critical question still stands — how will he use them?

Some people seem to have little sense of responsibility in such matters. One of the most disappointing of spectacles is to see the way gifted people often neglect their capacities or misuse them. The possession of any ability carries with it a profound responsibility. To bury one's talents in the ground is one of the most hopeless and soul-destroying of sins. God has given us gifts for the express purpose of achieving something with them. We flout the Almighty when we neglect them or use them for base purposes.

A little ability honestly employed is better than great powers misused or neglected.

Ramsey Completes House Committee Lineup

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — All of the General Assembly committees have been selected, but lawmakers remain uncertain which panel will focus on efforts to remove North Carolina from an eight-state compact on low-level radioactive waste.

Rep. Joe Mavretic, D-Edgecombe, said Wednesday he would introduce a bill Friday to take North Carolina out of the compact and have the state handle its own waste.

Mavretic said there were several committees that might handle the issue, adding, "I'll have to look over the membership and try to get it sent to the most sympathetic committee." Two committees likely to play roles in environmental legislation were among 19 panels created Wednesday as House Speaker Liston Ramsey completed a list of 58 House committees.

Rep. Dan DeVane, D-Hoke, chairman of the Committee on Water and Air Resources, and Rep. David Diamont, D-Surry, chairman of the Committee on Natural and Economic Resources, were optimistic about environmental legislation.

"The feeling of the general public is we've got to do something to protect our natural resources," said DeVane. "I'd like to see us looking a little more closely at the compact we were forced to join."

The eight-state compact recently chose North Carolina as the next host of a low-level radioactive waste repository when one in Barnwell, S.C., closes.

Gov. Jim Martin has urged continued membership as long as the other states agree to take their turns.

Mavretic said he has urged the congressional delegation to consider legislation to clearly say a state may go it alone on the waste issue.

"The initiative for the compact approach from the federal level was to have three to four low-level sites around the country," Mavretic said. "Now it looks like we'll have 20 to 30 sites. I just don't think that's what the feds intended."

While compact bills were handled in a House judiciary committee last session and the Water and Air Resources Committee took most of the other environmental bills, Diamont said he hoped "to get my share of major legislation."

Diamont suggested his committee might handle proposals to ban or limit phosphorus in laundry detergent — a move supporters say would help reduce algae blooms in rivers and avert fish kills. A bill that would have let local governments limit phosphates in designated "nutrient-sensitive watersheds" passed the House last session but never got out of committee in the Senate.

DeVane and Diamont said that might change now that the Senate has a new Committee on the Environment.

"That's a major step in the right direction," said Diamont. "What he (Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan) has done is probably guarantee that all the bills will be taken up and dealt with fairly. That's all we can ask."

DeVane, who will take over a committee chaired last session by Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, admitted his seat might be a hot one.

"Condolences, rather than congratulations, might be in order," he said.

Another committee that traditionally draws some controversial issues is the Committee on Manufacturing and Labor. Rep. Annie Kennedy, D-Forsyth, was named chairman of that panel after former chairman Rep. Harry Payne, D-New Hanover, took over the Constitutional Amendments Committee.

The key issues will likely concern changes in workers compensation, Ms. Kennedy said. The committee in the past has been asked to extend workers compensation to migrant laborers — something that drew outcries from farmers.

Other committees announced Wednesday that will have new leadership were: Law Enforcement (Rep. Joe Raynor, D-Cumberland), Mental Health (Rep. J.W. Crawford, D-Granville), Small Business (Rep. Alex Hall, D-New Hanover), State Properties (Rep. Don Dawkins, D-Richmond), Transportation (Rep. John Church, D-ance) and Wildlife Resources (Rep. Paul Tyndall, D-Onslow).

Martin Joins Jordan's Call For Fighting 'Status Quo'

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Republican Gov. Jim Martin says he agrees with his likely Democratic rival in next year's gubernatorial race — Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan — that North Carolina should avoid the "status quo" in economic policy.

In a speech Wednesday at the second Emerging Issues Forum at North Carolina State University, Martin said he hoped Jordan's attitude meant bipartisan support for the governor's initiatives in the General Assembly.

Martin also used the occasion to respond to several criticisms recently directed at him by Democrats — including a charge that he didn't try hard enough to dissuade RJR Nabisco from moving its corporate headquarters from Winston-Salem to Atlanta.

Martin and Jordan were among the speakers at the forum on the world economy attended by legislators, other state officials and education and business leaders.

Discarding a 17-page text he had prepared for introducing Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Martin hurriedly summarized the initiatives he is proposing for this year's Legislature — ranging from expansion of the Career Ladder Plan for teachers to a $50 million program to train displaced workers for new jobs.

First, however, he responded to a speech Jordan made after the session convened Monday in which he warned against government inertia and "the voices of caution."

"I am indeed fascinated with the excellent analysis by ... Bob Jordan, my good friend, recently in talking about the fact that North Carolina too long has been held in the grip of the status quo ... and he's right," Martin said.

"And what I propose is that we go in together in supporting these initiatives to move away from the status quo and get North Carolina ... to move forward to where we need to be in the next decade."

Supporters of Martin and Jordan recently have accused both men of seeking credit for each other's ideas. Dukakis began his address by needing Martin, saying he was "acting like a Democrat lately."

Later in his speech, Martin brought up the RJR Nabisco departure as he discussed his administration's call for bolstering the farm economy by recruiting related businesses such as food processors.

At a meeting last Saturday of his party's Executive Committee, state Democratic Executive Director Ken Eddy said former Democratic Govs. Terry Sanford and Jim Hunt would have "prostrated themselves in front of the moving van" to keep RJR Nabisco from leaving.

N.C. Democrats Take Look At Dukakis As Candidate

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis is credited with reversing his state's economic decline, but it's too early to tell how he would fare in the South as a presidential contender, North Carolina Democratic leaders say.

"He's solved a lot of the problems we're going to have to address," Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Wednesday after Dukakis spoke at a state Democratic Party meeting. "But regardless, we need to have a Southerner on the ticket as either number one or number two."

Dukakis, hinting at a presidential bid while professing to have made no decision, was guest of honor at the annual Democratic gala. Earlier, he delivered the keynote speech at a forum on the global economy at North Carolina State University, saying state governments had a major role to play in boosting the national economy.

The three-term governor has made recent trips to Iowa, the first state to name its presidential convention delegates, and other states expected to figure prominently in the chase for the nomination.

North Carolina Democrats were noncommittal on Dukakis' prospects in the South, where about a dozen states are planning to have simultaneous primaries in March 1988 to enhance their influence.

"It seems to me that Dukakis has every opportunity that the other (potential candidates) have unless (New York Gov. Mario) Cuomo gets in it," said Jordan, adding that he expected Dukakis to reach a decision within 30 days.

Former Gov. Jim Hunt, who invited Dukakis to address the NCSU forum, said he would be a "legitimate contender" because "he knows how to create jobs. That's the biggest issue — creating jobs."

State House Speaker Liston Ramsey, D-Madison, said he knew little about Dukakis, but that the nomination "boils down to charisma and who looks good on television — showmanship."

"President Reagan has convinced me that you don't have to have a brain to get elected — just be good on TV," Ramsey said, adding that Dukakis' northern roots should not be an overwhelming handicap in the South. "John Kennedy carried North Carolina," Ramsey said.

Dukakis sprinkled his 30-minute forum speech with jokes about the presidential race, but dealt mostly with how his state has improved its economic fortunes.

In "very deep trouble" 12 years ago, Massachusetts has become "one of the ... success stories of the decade" by combining public and private resources to build a better business climate and improve services, Dukakis said.

The state government has pumped nearly $100 million into the once-ailing textile manufacturing city of Lowell, renovating buildings for use as offices and high-technology manufacturing centers; providing venture capital and "incubator space" for promising new companies; and creating a "national urban park" that attracted 800,000 tourists last year.

Much of the money Massachusetts has used for prodding its economy was generated by toughening laws against tax evasion to the point that nearly $1 billion in delinquent taxes were collected, Dukakis said.

Additionally, the state made a major effort to improve its public schools and gained a reputation as a haven for new ideas and approaches to old problems, Dukakis said.

Worker Dies In Rock Slide

HIGH POINT, N.C. (AP) — A construction crew chief was killed Wednesday when a 1,000 pound slab of sand rock slid loose from its base and pinned him in the 12-foot ditch where he was working.

Officials said Albert Farley of High Point, who was in his 50s, was pronounced dead on arrival at High Point Regional Hospital.

The accident occurred at a construction site across Hartley Avenue from the YMCA. Farley was employed by Smith & Jennings Grading of High Point.

Farley was working in a 55-foot long ditch at the site about 10 a.m. when the accident occurred. He and another worker were laying sewer pipes for an apartment complex when the sand rock came loose.

Gunman Surrenders At Manns Harbor

MANN'S HARBOR, N.C. (AP) — A man who held his estranged wife and young daughter hostage after wounding his mother-in-law was arrested Wednesday following a three-hour standoff in this remote eastern North Carolina community, authorities said.

Michael F. Smutek, 23, of Baltimore, Md., surrendered to a force of about 20 officers after the standoff at his in-law's mobile home, said Dare County Sheriff Bert Austin. Smutek was charged with one count of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to kill and two counts of kidnapping and was held on $40,000 bond in the Dare County Jail, Austin said. A first appearance hearing is scheduled for Friday.

"Apparently he and his wife had had a separation and she moved back to this area with her parents. ... this created a domestic situation where the child was involved ... and he wanted custody," the sheriff said. "He had an order from the state of Maryland giving him custody but it had not been processed through the state of North Carolina."

Smutek was charged with kidnapping Barbara Jo Smutek and their daughter, Angela, whose age was between 3 and 4, Austin said. He was charged with wounding Mittie Wile, 66, in whose mobile home the incident occurred.

Mrs. Wile was being treated for a bullet wound to her left hand and cheek at Norfolk General Hospital, Austin said. She was shot with .357-Magnum pistol and Smutek also was armed with a .22-caliber rifle, he said.

"Apparently a struggle occurred and whether she was trying to knock the gun away or get away we really don't know," the sheriff said.

Raymond Wile escaped without harm shortly around 7:30 a.m. when the standoff started and called police. While law enforcement officers, guns drawn, waited for the standoff to end, Wile stood nearby with a neighbor, shook his head and cried.

SBI agent W.A. Hoggard said Smutek threw a rifle and handgun out of the mobile home before he was taken away in handcuffs about 10:45 a.m. Chief Deputy Rodney Midgett talked to Smutek on the telephone from a neighbor's house for about two hours before the crisis ended.

Authorities said Mrs. Smutek and her daughter were not harmed.

The mobile home was located off U.S. 64-264 at Manns Harbor, a village across Croatan Sound from Roanoke Island.

Guilford Deputy Killed In Wreck

GREENSBORO (AP) — An off-duty Guilford County sheriff's deputy was killed and two people were injured in a five-car wreck in Greensboro, authorities say.

Lt. Richard A. Weaver, 39, was pronounced dead Tuesday at Moses Hone Hospital after the wreck at 1:55 p.m. on U.S. 29. Weaver, who had been with the department since 1971, was driving a private car which belonged to a friend.

"I think his loss will be deeply felt by his platoon and the rest of the department," said Sheriff Walter Burch. "He was a fine young man and we will miss him a lot."

The other four drivers involved in the accident were Worth Eugene Jones, 43, of Climax; Alexander McGill, 42, of Greensboro; Bernice Frazier Simmons, 45, of Browns Summit, and Ronald Webster Alston, 36, of Greensboro.

Alston and Alexander were treated at Cone Hospital and released late Tuesday.

According to a police report, Weaver was driving south in the left lane of U.S. 29 and tried to move into the right lane. The Honda he was driving collided with a 1981 Lincoln Continental driven by Simmons, who was not injured.

Weaver's car careened off the Continental and across a grass median into the northbound lanes of U.S. 29. The car collided with McGill's car, a 1974 Chevrolet. The Chevrolet then hit Jones' car.

Sanford Trip To Nicaragua Brings Outburst From State GOP Leader

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The chairman of the state Republican Party has accused Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., of currying favor with communists, only to find himself accused of trying to "cozy up to conservatives."
GOP Chairman Jack Hawke issued a statement Wednesday in which he said he was "amazed and disturbed" that Sanford was "going to meet with the communist head of government in Nicaragua and have dinner with him."
"Senator Sanford needs to understand that the people of North Carolina do not support a Communist government in Central America," Hawke said. "The people he represents in the Senate will not approve of helping a government dedicated to spreading terrorism and communist rule to neighboring countries."

"Senator Sanford's liberal philosophy and permissive approach to communist expansion is not in the solid tradition of North Carolina senators such as Sam Ervin, Everett Jordan, John East and Jesse Helms," Hawke added. "I would rest much better if our junior senator would learn the ropes in Washington and follow the solid tradition of our dedicated senators who have helped make America strong. Instead, it appears that he wants to grandstand, take junkets and dine with communists."
Ken Eudy, executive director of the state Democratic Party, said Hawke hopes to win over conservative Republicans who have said they would oppose him in the May convention to choose a GOP chairman.

"He's trying to solidify his own support to become chairman of the Republican Party at the convention," Eudy said. "He's trying to cozy up to conservatives and the red baiters in the Republican Party — those that think that he does not pass the conservative litmus test."
Paul Vick, administrative assistant for Sanford in Washington, D.C., said Sanford's six-day tour of Honduras, Costa Rica and Nicaragua is "a genuine attempt to try to develop solutions to the problems of that region."
"In light of Mr. Hawke's political position, I understand his comments," Vick said. "But I think that all North Carolinians support a serious and genuine effort to find a solution to the problems of Central America."
Eudy said Sanford "has said all along that he does not favor ending aid to the Contras immediately." If there is criticism to be levied, it should be against Republicans and secret sales of arms to Iran, he added.

"How dare Jack Hawke talk about terrorists in Nicaragua?" Eudy said. "It's Republican leaders who are dealing with the real terrorists in Iran in order to get money for the Contras in Nicaragua in a policy that circumvents the law."
Sanford, a member of the Western Hemisphere Affairs Subcommittee of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is preparing a detailed proposal on Central American policy, said a spokesman in his office.
"Senator Helms has taken trips at taxpayers' expense," added Eudy. "Would he (Hawke) call those junkets as well?"

UNC Officials Tentatively Support Proposal For Guaranteed Tuition

By The Associated Press
University of North Carolina officials have given tentative approval to proposed legislation that would establish a guaranteed tuition program to help families pay for a college education.
"It looks to us that anything that would make it easier for parents to plan college expenses for their children would be beneficial," UNC System President C.D. Spangler Jr. said Wednesday.
But Spangler and other UNC officials said they wanted more specifics before officially endorsing legislation being planned by Sen. Marshall A. Rauch, D-Gaston.
Last month, Rauch said he would like North Carolina to establish a prepayment plan similar to one in Michigan, but he wanted Spangler's approval before proceeding.
Under the Michigan plan, the state guarantees a child's tuition in any public college or university in the state if the parents deposit as little as $3,000 in a state-sponsored trust fund. Under the plan, families who invest earlier in the program would get more tuition funds than those who would wait until just a year or two before a student enrolls in college.

The state would invest and administer the fund free of charge and use the earnings to finance educational needs.
Rauch said any plan developed in North Carolina would assist students at public and private schools.
Rauch said this week the legislative staff is trying to sort out the complexities such a plan presents.
"It's presenting several difficulties," Rauch said in an interview. "I don't know how costs are going to go up or what is going to happen to interest rates over 18 years. If we're lucky, we'll have a bill within 60 days."
Although they like the idea of making it easier for people to go to college, UNC officials said they are concerned about a number of pitfalls.

They said the plan would have to be financially sound, and it must be made clear the fund would be administered by the state and not the university system.
They also don't want parents to think participation in such a plan would enhance their child's chance of being admitted to college.
"It would have to be clear that this is no guarantee to get into any one of the 16 institutions, and (Rauch) understands that, too," Spangler said.
A major unknown facing any guaranteed tuition program is whether the money generated will be tax free.
"Everybody is getting excited," said Hope Williams, executive director of North Carolina Center for Independent Higher Education, "but the IRS hasn't made a ruling. And many people think the ruling will be negative."

Nevertheless, Ms. Williams said at least 27 states have introduced legislation similar to the one in Michigan. "They're everywhere now, and they'll probably be here soon," she said.
Cocaine Seized
FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Two pounds of cocaine and seven pounds of marijuana were seized from one motorist, and $199,400 in cash was confiscated from another in separate traffic stops on Interstate 95 in Cumberland County.
The traffic stops and drug seizures were part of the state Highway Patrol's program to stop the flow of illegal drugs on the interstate system, a patrol spokesman said.

Fuller Brush Moves

NORTH KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — The Fuller Brush Co. will move its corporate headquarters from North Kansas City, Mo., to Winston-Salem, N.C., the company said.
The company will transfer about 20 employees, and another 15 employees will receive severance pay and the company will try to find other work for them, according to Derek Stryker, a Fuller Brush vice president.
The North Kansas City office oversees the company's commercial and household divisions. Fuller Brush already operates a direct mail division in Winston-Salem.
Fuller Brush is a division of the Sara Lee Corp., which has offices in Chicago and Winston-Salem. Fuller Brush's president, Lee Dunlap, said the move will allow the company to take greater advantage of expertise at other corporate divisions in Winston-Salem.

Fuller Brush has been in the Kansas City area since 1980.
Fuller Brush will continue to operate its manufacturing plant in Great Bend, Kan., which employs about 450 people in the making of the company's household products.

Pitt County is named for William Pitt the Elder, Earl of Chatham.

Prison Suit

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A New Jersey expert on prisons says conditions at the Columbus County prison unit are subhuman and any state that would allow such conditions should not be called civilized.

"In a space equivalent to a courtroom, 150-160 people have to shower, wash, toilet, watch television, play cards, try to read, mill, talk, sleep, write letters — all of those things at the same time," William Nagel says in an affidavit filed by attorneys representing inmates at 48 prisons who have sued the state.

"These conditions reduce the occupants of that place to subhuman level, and in my view, any state that would permit those conditions is not worthy of being called civilized," said Nagel, a former New Jersey corrections official who is retired president of the American Foundation, a group that studies prison reform.

Attorneys Wednesday filed affidavits from Nagel and inmates with the U.S. District Court in Raleigh to describe the conditions at the Columbus County unit.

In a class-action lawsuit, prisoners from Columbus County and 47 other Depression-era state prisons are suing the state, charging that overcrowding and inhumane conditions amount to cruel and unusual punishment.

Fetus Shot

WADESBORO, N.C. (AP) — The Anson County sheriff says a woman who reported that an intruder shot her and killed her unborn baby apparently shot herself, but he doubts the woman will be charged in the death of the fetus.

"Based on our investigation and the evidence collected at the scene and statements, the unborn baby died from a gunshot wound inflicted by the mother," Sheriff Tommy Allen said Wednesday. "The case is closed and we are no longer looking for an alleged intruder."

Allen said his department's investigative report of the Jan. 14 shooting will be sent to the district attorney, but he doubts any charges will be filed against the mother, Teresa Carpenter, 23.

"She has enough problems right now," Allen said.

Perot Speaks

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Society must eliminate the class system which permeates industry and join forces to raise America's rank among the world's industrialized nations, businessman H. Ross Perot says.

Perot said the nation must put aside social and economic differences and work side-by-side.

"We're all in this together. We've spent a tremendous amount of time Protestants versus Catholics, blacks versus whites," Perot said Wednesday. "We're at a time now when we'd better link arms, work together, form a team and solve these problems if we're going to do what every generation before us has done and that is make a better life for our children."

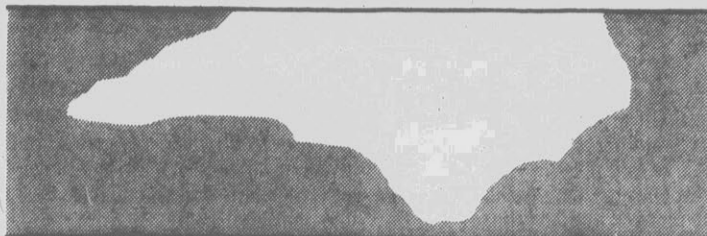

Speaking at the Emerging Issues Forum at North Carolina State University, Perot said the nation's industrial problems stem from an education system which has fallen behind the rest of the world, and also is teaching the importance of money above the workers.

Job Suit

CLINTON, N.C. (AP) — A former laundry supervisor at the Sampson County prison unit has gone to court in a bid to get his job back, but Attorney General Lacy Thornburg says the man cost the state $53,000 and deserved to lose his job.

Buck A. Holland of Clinton was fired after, state officials said, it was discovered that he was routinely padding laundry orders from area hospitals.

Holland claims he was a scapegoat because a previous supervisor had given him a formula for adding poundage to laundry orders from hospitals. He also contended that even if the practice was improper, he should not have been fired because he received no monetary gain.

A brief filed by Thornburg disagreed, saying that the practice cost the state $53,000 and damaged the credibility of the laundry system. He said that supported dismissal rather than a lesser penalty.

The prison laundry contracts with hospitals and other institutions to clean linens and uniforms, and cleaning charges are based on weight of the items before washing.

No Fine

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Officials say they will not fine Hanes Printables Inc. in connection with a fuel oil spill at the company's Winston-Salem plant last November partly because the company helped in the cleanup.

Nearly 1,000 gallons of fuel oil accidentally leaked into city sewer lines from the Hanes Printables plant on Nov. 20. The oil tainted Salem Creek and flowed into the Archie Elledge Wastewater Treatment Plant, where it collected in a settling tank.

After the incident, Hanes Printables quickly claimed responsibility and said that it would pay all cleanup costs and any fines associated with the spill.

Interest Rate

RALEIGH (AP) — State Treasurer Harlan Boyles has announced that the rate of interest charged to banks and savings institutions for state funds invested in six-month certificates has been raised from 5 1/4 percent to 6 1/4 percent.

The change took effect Wednesday, and reflects an increase in interest rates in the market for U.S. government and agency securities.

Rates changed by the state, by law, must not be less than those available in the marketplace on U.S. government and agency securities of comparable maturity.

Monitor-Merrimack's 125th Anniversary Set

By JEAN McNAIR
Associated Press Writer
NORFOLK (AP) — Organizers of next month's 125th anniversary celebration of the first battle of ironclad ships expect the four-day event to attract fans of the Civil War, genealogy and shipwrecks.

"Everybody seems to be interested in this thing," said J. Herbert Simpson, chairman of a Hampton Roads committee planning the anniversary. "I was so surprised to see how people have taken to it."

March 9 is the 125th anniversary of the battle in Hampton Roads between the Union ironclad Monitor and its Confederate counterpart, the Merrimack. The standoff battle between the two vessels did not turn the course of the Civil War, it did end the era of wooden warships.

"It was basically the birth of the modern navies of the world because they started to go to iron," said F. Ross Holland, who turned to heading a national committee on the Monitor-Merrimack anniversary after working on the Statue of Liberty centennial last year.

The 172-foot USS Monitor and the 275-foot CSS Virginia, originally named the Merrimack, clashed in the Hampton Roads harbor off Norfolk and Portsmouth. The day before their battle, the Merrimack had destroyed the wooden-hulled Union ships USS Congress and USS Cumberland.

"If there had been no Monitor to stop the Merrimack, it would have sunk a lot more federal ships," Holland said.

The anniversary celebration will begin March 6 with a gathering of descendants of Monitor and Merrimack crewmen in Portsmouth and end March 9 with a ceremony designating the sunken remains of the Monitor a National Historical Landmark.

Also on March 9, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration will announce its choice of a principal museum to house artifacts from the Monitor. The site of the announcement has not been selected.

Simpson said the local committee plans to raise about $20,000 to finance the celebration.

Irwin M. Berent, a professional archivist in Norfolk, said he expects at least 40 descendants of Monitor and Merrimack crewmen to attend the March 6 reception. He located about 160 descendants in hopes of bringing them together and perhaps finding valuable artifacts of the battle.

One descendant claims to have a compass from the Monitor, Berent said. "Another individual has letters that were written by Monitor crewmen to his family while he was aboard the Monitor," he said.

The Portsmouth Civil War Roundtable, a chapter of a national organization that studies the Civil War, will sponsor a symposium on the first ironclad battle March 7, said Al Harris, chairman of the group's anniversary program.

Members of the 9th Virginia Infantry, a Civil War re-enactment group, will dress in authentic uniforms and speak at various sites around the city that were important during the Civil War, he said.

On March 8, small-scale models of the Monitor and Merrimack will re-enact the battle in the downtown Norfolk harbor.

The 33- to 36-foot-long models are made of plywood, not iron, but they do carry functioning cannons, said Ron Hess, a Norfolk man who built the vessels with a friend, Bill Whorton.

"We're both people that grew up in the Navy. The biggest thing that led to the modern Navy was this battle," he said.

Hess said he and Whorton have re-enacted the battle with their models about four times.

While the modern-day Merrimack and Monitor are battling, a symposium will be held in Hampton on the recovery of the real Monitor. The ironclad sank in a storm off North Carolina in December 1862 and divers found its wreckage off Cape Hatteras, N.C., in 1973. The Merrimack was blown up by Confederate troops in advance of a Union invasion of Hampton Roads two months after the ironclad battle.

Holland said the symposium participants will discuss developing a program for managing underwater shipwrecks such as the Monitor.

"We would like to use the Monitor, since it is so high-profile, as a catalyst for doing much further work on underwater shipwrecks. Right now, we don't have a national policy on dealing with these underwater shipwrecks," Holland said.

"The shipwrecks really contain a great deal of history," he said. "It's a shame to lose it to the treasure hunters."

NOAA oversees a national marine sanctuary around the Monitor and has responsibility for more than 100 artifacts retrieved from the site. Applications to house the artifacts have come from the Mariners' Museum in Newport News, the city of Portsmouth, a New York City museum group and a consortium of the Hampton Roads Naval Museum, the Smithsonian Institution and the state of North Carolina.

Divers will return to the Monitor site this summer to photograph the ship's interior for the first time and to test how rapidly the vessel is deteriorating, Holland said.

"I think it's just impossible to think about moving the thing," he said. "It's in a very fragile state."

DOE Will Resume Effort To Place Nuclear Waste Dump Site In East

WASHINGTON (AP) — Energy Secretary John Herrington says that the U.S. Department of Energy will resume efforts to put a second national high-level nuclear waste dump site in the East if plans to postpone the second repository aren't approved by Congress.

Herrington said Wednesday that delaying the second site is "the proper way to go" and that the nation might not need two repositories, but he said his department would be willing to reverse its decision to indefinitely postpone the second repository.

The DOE drew many protests and lawsuits last May when it selected three sites in the West — the Hanford nuclear reservation in southeastern Washington state and sites in Nevada and Texas — as finalist candidates for the first dump, and canceled studies of sites in seven Eastern states for a second repository.

"Congress needs to face this issue," Herrington said in an interview. "If they refuse to act, that's a clear indication to me they don't like what we're doing and that we'll go back immediately and begin site specific work for a second repository."

probably sometime this summer."

Herrington's comments came after two weeks of Senate and House hearings during which members of Congress said delaying a second nuclear dump violates provisions of the 1982 Nuclear Waste Policy Act.

The act set a March 31, 1990, deadline for choosing a second site.

Herrington's announcement that he would follow Congress could spark confrontation between Western lawmakers and some in the East who were relieved when studies in their states stopped. Those states included

North Carolina, Maine, New Hampshire and Virginia.

The first repository is expected to hold up to 70,000 metric tons of highly radioactive waste from the nation's nuclear plants.

"Everybody knows there will not be enough waste to fill a second repository," said Herrington. "And we may only need a first repository. For instance, we have 45,000 metric tons of commercial waste and only 15,000 metric tons of defense waste. They don't add up to 70,000 metric tons. There are no new reactors coming on line. There is a real good possibility we won't need a second repository."

Postponing the second site could save as much as $900 million, Herrington said, and the decision about whether to pursue it could easily be put off until 1995.

"I am sorry in a way Washington state is picked as one of the first ones, but that's what the geologic evidence said," Herrington said. "So, we just made it strictly on a geologic basis. We ranked the sites and picked 'em."

Duke Challenges Benefactor's Demand For Hiring Approval

DURHAM (AP) — A New York financier's offer of $20 million to Duke University is unacceptable as long as the donor insists on a strong role in deciding who is hired with the money, Duke President Keith Brodie says.

Brodie, in an interview published Tuesday by the Duke student newspaper, The Chronicle, said the university's decision on whether to accept the gift from Disque D. Deane would "depend on the willingness of the donor to move from the position he's now firmly entrenched in."

Deane, however, said he won't bargain away his condition that he have a voice in choosing professors. If Duke will not accept his terms, Deane said, it will have to wait until he dies to receive the money, which he earmarked for Duke in his will 10 years ago.

"I'm not going to give a carte blanche to Duke University... without the opportunity to know what the money is going to be used for," Deane, 65, told The News and Observer of Raleigh in a telephone interview Tuesday. "But Keith Brodie is a longtime friend of mine, and my intentions here are good to work something out with him."

Duke's Board Chairman Neil Williams Jr., Provost Phillip A. Griffiths and Vice Chancellor Joel L. Fleishman have said they do not object to Deane's terms.

Deane's gift, if accepted, would be the second largest in Duke's history. As a challenge gift to be made as Duke raises matching funds, it is seen as a boost to Duke's lagging $200 million fund-raising campaign.

The money would create 20 endowed chairs in a new multidisciplinary Institute on the Human Future. As Deane sees it, the institute would be overseen by an executive committee made up of him or another family member, his attorney, the Duke president and two other officials chosen by him and the Duke president.

"If I am satisfied myself, and in my exclusive and sole opinion, that the individual is able to satisfy my objectives, I'll have no objection," Deane said. "If, on the other hand, I'm not satisfied, the university will have to come up with another individual. They may hire the individual using university funds or by finding another donor."

Brodie told The Chronicle the gift would be acceptable if Deane agreed to make the institute a "support corporation" dominated by Duke officials or if the institute incorporated itself as a separate foundation to which Duke could apply for funds for professorships or programs.

FIRST FEDERAL EQUITYLINE

A Tax Deductible Line of Credit Secured by the Equity in Your First or Second Home.

New Tax Law

The new tax law takes away valuable deductions for consumer credit interest. Most of the itemized deductions for the interest you pay on such things as your car loan, credit cards or charge accounts will be discontinued under the new tax law. First Federal's EQUITYLINE provides a way for you to have consumer credit and deduct the interest.

Equityline

Your home is an excellent source of credit and you can turn the equity in your first or second home into a line of credit you can use at any time, for any reason—education expenses, a new car, bill consolidation, home improvements or whatever you want. And within certain guidelines your interest will be tax deductible.

Equity is the difference between what you owe on your home and what it's worth.

You can have an EQUITYLINE of credit that will put cash in your hands immediately—right up to your approved credit limit. Or you can establish your EQUITYLINE today, and have it available for future needs.

Competitive Rates/Amounts

The EQUITYLINE interest rate is prime plus 1% for a line of credit $15,000 and over; and prime plus 1½% for $10,000-$14,999. The minimum EQUITYLINE is $10,000—maximum $100,000. The monthly payment on your EQUITYLINE can be as little as interest only or any amount you may choose above the interest.

Easy Process/Minimum Cost

First Federal's EQUITYLINE has no origination fee and no annual fees. We will work to minimize your closing costs—call us for more details.

You have an easy, one-time application. Once your line of credit is established, that's the end of the paperwork. In fact, when your line of credit is approved, the cash you want will always be only a check away. Just use one of the special checks provided to access your line of credit.

LAST MAN — John Sullivan of Union, S.C., sits and remembers his comrades of Company E., 118th Infantry, of World War I. Sullivan is the sole survivor of his group, and the last holder of a bottle of wine he and his comrades brought in 1932. The bottle was to be opened when there was only one survivor left. Sullivan donated the bottle to a museum and toasted his friends with a glass of Coke. (AP Laserphoto)

Last Survivor Toasts Buddies

UNION, S.C. (AP) — For 55 years, the bottle of Santa Alicia wine has been kept for the time when there would be only one member of Company E, 118th Infantry, World War I.

With the death Monday of former Pvt. Norman Keisler of Union, former Sgt. John Sullivan, also of Union, became the last survivor of the 250-member company that went to war as teen-agers in 1917.

Sullivan, now 89, said the wine was bought in 1932 during the first reunion of Company E members. At that time, the Last Man's Club was formed as a part of Company E, World War I Association.

A "keeper of the wine" was elected at each reunion meeting of the Last Man's Club, and Sullivan has held that position for many years.

The original intent was for the last man in the company to drink a toast to his departed comrades, but Sullivan elected to drink his toast from another wine and allow the bottle to remain intact.

He said he plans to donate the bottle of wine, still sealed, to the Union County Museum as a final tribute to his former buddies so there will be something left to remember them by after he has gone.

Before World War I, Sullivan already had served a three-year hitch in the Army on the Mexican border and had returned home to begin a four-year enlistment in the reserves.

"When war broke out, I was told to report to the nearest recruiting office for assignment. I was working on the railroad in North Carolina so I headed to Union and reported to Company E so I would be with people I knew," he recalled this week as he talked of the men in his company.

The unit of volunteers from Union County first was sent to a camp near Columbia and went in with the first load of lumber at Camp Jackson — now Fort Jackson.

From there, they moved to a camp near Greenville where they were brought up to full military strength with National Guardsmen from North Carolina and were shipped overseas.

Company E saw action in France and at Ypres, Belgium, and on Sept. 29, 1918, was the first unit to crack the Hindenburg Line.

Sullivan said of the 250 men in the unit, only 20 escaped the fighting without wounds. But all brought home the effects of mustard gas and other gasses used in the trenches.

The reunions began in 1932, and each year on Veterans Day the members came back to Union.

During the 1960s, when there were demonstrations against the armed forces and flags were being burned, they made no attempt to hide their pride in their country and their flag.

Stanford Study Raps 'Star Wars'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A report by a Stanford University group criticizes the Reagan administration's "Star Wars" policy and finds little evidence of cheating by the Soviet Union on arms control treaties.

The report, being released today, said U.S. statements about early deployment of a space-based defense against Soviet missiles and a "permissive interpretation" of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty threaten to undercut the accord.

The statements could prompt the Soviets to violate the agreement and spoil efforts to impose new limitations on superpower offensive nuclear arms, said the report, prepared by a group at Stanford's Center for International Security and Arms Control.

On Wednesday, Secretary of State George P. Shultz, appearing before a House Appropriations subcommittee, counseled restraint in deciding whether to deploy the first phase of a U.S. space-based defense against Soviet missiles.

"You don't want to start until you have a clear and confident idea where you are going," Shultz said.

His testimony reflected a cautious stance in the ongoing debate over how fast to proceed with a missile defense.

"The program is an essential one for our country on its merits," Shultz said. "We must try to learn, if we can, how to defend ourselves against ballistic missiles. We know very well the Soviets are trying to do it."

He urged Congress not to enact legislation to block funds for testing or deploying various components of an anti-ballistic missile program.

"I think that would be very harmful to us," Shultz said. "It is a way of tying our hands while our adversaries' hands are not tied at all."

However, he stressed the program must meet several tests before any of the exotic technology is deployed in space. "You want to find a system that inherently is a defense that cannot be overwhelmed just by adding more offense," Shultz said.

The Stanford group's report was critical of U.S. arms control policy, saying the Reagan administration had helped create the perception that the Soviets were violating a number of agreements with the United States.

Describing the perception as false, the report also accused the administration of exaggerating the military significance of the alleged violations.

"The Soviet Union may sometimes stretch the terms of agreements, as does the U.S. on occasion, but rarely directly violates an arms control agreement," the report said.

Only one clear Soviet violation was cited in the report. That is a large early warning radar in Siberia that, the report said, is sited in a way that conflicts with the 1972 ABM treaty.

By the same token, the report said the propriety of the U.S. program to replace or construct new early warning radars in Greenland and Britain was questionable under the same agreement.

The treaty, which the Senate ratified, imposed limitations on U.S. and Soviet defenses against missiles. The idea behind it was that a poor defense would discourage nuclear attack because the retaliatory blow could be devastating.

Critics of the Strategic Defense Initiative, as Star Wars is known officially, are concerned the program could imperil the treaty.

"There is considerable anxiety within the U.S. arms control community about a variety of future tests of SDI components planned for the late 1980s and early 1990s," the report said.

"In general, their concern is that the continued active pursuit of the SDI will inevitably lead the United States into a position where it will be forced either to amend, violate or withdraw from the ABM treaty."

GIs Find Dollar Buys Less In West Germany

By GEORGE BOEHMER
Associated Press Writer

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — With the dollar worth about half what it was a few years ago, many of the 250,000 U.S. military personnel in West Germany are shunning fancy restaurants and rediscovering the delights of home cooking.

They also are buying fewer cars and making greater use of cut-rate or free military-sponsored recreation instead of more costly local entertainment.

The dollar, which reached a high of nearly 3.50 West German marks in mid-1985, now exchanges for 1.85 to 1.75 marks.

"The main thing that affects us is that we can't afford restaurants or entertainment downtown anymore," said Airman 1st Class Linda Iper-Nelson, 22, a Cleveland native. She is stationed at Lindsey Air Station in Wiesbaden, 25 miles west of Frankfurt.

Mrs. Iper-Nelson said she and her husband Curtis, of Miami, Fla., a sergeant at Lindsey, used to dine out once a week when the dollar was high.

"Now we stay home and cook," she said in an interview with The Associated Press.

The couple currently pays 1,225 marks — about $680 — for their apartment and utilities. "When the dollar was still three marks, it was $408 a month, and that's a big difference," she said.

In Frankfurt, Spec. 4 Arthur Brown, 29, of Washington D.C., said the low dollar is tough on people accustomed to higher exchange rates.

"I was here for the steady rise in 1985, when the dollar went up to 3.47 marks. You could go out to restaurants then, buy clothes in local shops. I even went skiing several times," he said. "Now we're limited to buying in the PX. I can't afford to buy anything that costs marks."

PX is slang for "post exchange," the on-base shopping centers that offer military personnel products ranging from American-built cars to Burger King hamburgers — for dollars instead of local currency.

In 1985, an extra-large hamburger cost the equivalent of $1.40 downtown, compared with $1.50 at the PX. Now it costs $2.33 in town — but still $1.50 at the base exchange.

The military also offers cut-rate excursions, and many soldiers travel to the Bavarian Alps where the military operates hotels with skiing, swimming, golf, tennis and restaurants.

"We're booked full here for the ski weeks," said Harry Connors, spokesman for a military recreation center in Garmisch-Partenkirchen, a ski resort 55 miles south of Munich.

But Connors said the low dollar was a problem for the centers, which are required to be self-supporting.

"About 700 of our 1,000 employees are local nationals, and they're paid in marks so it costs more to operate," he said.

"Our budget for the new fiscal year beginning Oct. 1, was based on 2.16 marks to the dollar. Now with the dollar at 1.80, it's hitting us hard. We may have to increase prices," Connors told the AP by telephone.

The center now charges $189 for six nights plus two meals daily and ski equipment, he added. Again, the soldiers pay in dollars.

Jim Slemper, a car salesman in Frankfurt who caters to the military, said there has been a decline in sales since the dollar began its plunge.

"The low dollar has virtually wiped out the German cars, priced in marks" such as Mercedes, Volkswagen and BMW, Slemper said.

"But we're still selling dollar-priced Swedish cars, mostly to officers and higher-ranking non-commissioned officers. The lower ranks can't afford to buy them," Slemper told the AP.

Soldiers receive a cost-of-living allowance, but it does not compensate for the loss from the lower exchange rate, officials said.

"A private who lives on base gets an allowance of $26 a month, and a Specialist 4, living on base, about $33," said Rex Gribble, spokesman for the U.S. Army's European headquarters in Heidelberg. Others get more, depending on marital status and rank.

One minor consolation for soldiers is that West Germany has been inflation-free the last two years. Retail prices in marks actually dropped slightly in that period.

Boeing Offers To Replace Cracked Frames On 747s

SEATTLE (AP) — The Boeing Co. is offering to replace frames in its 747 jets in order to eliminate hairline cracks that have developed in some of the older models.

The 76 airlines that use about 650 of the popular jumbo jets were offered a modification program designed by Boeing to replace some or all of the 26 circular structural frames in the forward part of the plane, Boeing spokeswoman Elizabeth Reese said Wednesday.

"As the airplanes get older, they crack, which isn't unusual in any airplane," Ms. Reese said. But in the past year, Boeing discovered the 747s were cracking sooner than expected, she said.

"Internal cracks can happen and it doesn't affect the safety of the airplane," because the outer layer holds, she said. "But cracks that are not watched and repaired can be dangerous," she added.

A Federal Aviation Administration ruling last year required all airlines with 747s with more than 8,000 landings to inspect the planes for cracks and make repairs. Ms. Reese said 8,000 landings is about eight to 10 years in the life of an average 747.

Boeing has discovered the one-inch-long hairline cracks are found widely among 747s with more than 8,000 landings.

The repair work can be done at the same time as other maintenance, Ms. Reese said, eliminating the need to take the plane out of service to fix the problem.

Boeing will not disclose the costs of the program or say whether it will pick up part of the repair bill. Ms. Reese said the company has been negotiating the modification plan with its customers for several months.

The Seattle Times, in a story Wednesday, said it is believed Boeing will pick up the major cost, which could be as high as $600 million.

The replacement frames will be made of a stronger aluminum alloy that was unavailable when the 747 was developed. Commercial operation of the 747 began in 1970.

Boeing's later models, the 757 and 767, already use the stronger alloy, Ms. Reese said.

Boeing will use the stronger frames in all new 747s, starting with those scheduled for delivery in September, she said.

White House Wants Grants Eliminated

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is asking Congress to deny federal family planning grants to private organizations, such as Planned Parenthood, that perform abortions or refer clients to abortion clinics.

Proposed legislation released Wednesday by Health and Human Services Secretary Otis R. Bowen also would make permanent a ban on federal financing of abortions except in cases where the life of the mother is threatened.

A third proposal in the administration measure would not have the force of law but would place Congress on record as disagreeing with the 1973 Supreme Court decision legalizing abortion.

Federal financing of abortions, except when the mother's life would be endangered by giving birth, has been banned on a year-to-year basis in appropriations bills for the past 10 years.

However, the proposal on family planning grants — if approved — would reverse policies dating back to the inception of the family planning program in 1970 and is certain to set off another congressional firestorm.

Conservatives in Congress have sought repeatedly and unsuccessfully to pass similar legislation for years.

Although the Reagan White House has supported those efforts in the past, the initiatives had not originated with the administration until this year.

President Reagan said in material accompanying his State of the Union speech Jan. 27 that he would be offering abortion legislation but gave no details.

The decision to initiate legislation this year is viewed as a renewed effort to translate into law Reagan's strong opposition to abortion during his last two years in office.

She Has Memories By The Volume

By SARAH BOOTH CONROY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — If a congressional committee asks, "What do you know? And when did you know it?" Marvin Breckinridge (Mrs. Jefferson) Patterson will be able to answer, promptly.

She would not need to plead the Fifth, nor forgetfulness. Her 67 engagement books, 1920-1987, stand safely in the bookcase beside her desk in her Washington mansion, ready to be sent off to the National Archives. In another room are her mother's agendas, 1890-1959, headed for the Library of Congress.

At 81, ready to begin her autobiography, Patterson has perhaps one of the best documented personal histories of anyone who hasn't lived in an oval office equipped with voice-activated recording systems.

Her lifetime of organization, suitable for running at least a mid-sized principality if not a large corporation, is a lesson to all of us who can't remember where our last year's agenda is, much less kept our New Year's resolution to write everything down.

In these days of Filofax and faux Filofax frenzies, Oscar Wilde is oft quoted as saying, "I never travel without my diary. One should always have something sensational to read in the train."

Patterson has traveled with her diary not only by train, but also by plane, helicopter and ship as a photojournalist and broadcaster in the early days of World War II, and afterward as the wife of a diplomat.

When she left CBS's "World News Roundup" to marry, Edward R. Murrow took her job. She filmed a movie, "Forgotten Frontier," from horseback in Kentucky. She rode a bicycle from northern Finland to shoot pictures of an arctic Lapp colony for Life magazine and Town and Country. She rode camels in Egypt (and two years ago in central Australia) and elephants in India as a diplomat's wife.

Now most of her travels are by chauffeur-driven car on her rounds as a philanthropist and grande dame in Washington and Patterson Park at Point Farm, her gift to Maryland. All those travels have been duly noted with pertinent details in her loose-leaf notebooks.

Before there was Filofax, there was Marvin Breckinridge. She began keeping an engagement book in her 14th spring, coincidentally in 1920, the year the Filofax system began. But Filofax is not her system. She buys a loose-leaf notebook with a week spread over two pages and has the spine stamped with the year.

"My aunt gave me my first travel diary in the spring of 1920. Its title was 'My American Trip,' though we were going to the Orient. Unlike my mother, I didn't have to make travel arrangements for 11 people, so I had plenty of time to write in it."

But after her years at Vassar, "I never had time to keep a diary, a commentary," she said the other day. Not to worry. Her engagement books aren't her only records. She has two full rooms of personal archives, plus an archivist, Joan Koven, and a curator, Betty Powers. She also keeps a day book.

"Every day, I record what I and all my divisions (the cook, the maid, the driver) do. I write down the names of everyone who comes to the house, and what they are there for — the man who paints the shutters, the plumber and so on. I keep lists of what I have ordered, the price and particulars and when it's received."

She also keeps a separate log of letters received and of handwritten notes sent. Since her books are loose-leaf, she moves from year to year the lists of credit cards, her passport number, employees' Social Security numbers and other constants. She has an active file of 1,000 cards on people, color-coded by country where she met them, and an inactive file of more people she doesn't expect to see often.

"I never throw them away, because, for instance, I had a call the other day from the son of a former chauffeur, who had grown up here. So I could look him up before he came," she explained. She can tell much by her cards — for instance, never to have seafood if a certain ambassador's widow is coming to dinner, because the guest is allergic.

Of course, she has lists of her and her late husband's clothes. (He had 495 shirts.) And she has bound (by Gruver Binders) books recording parties. "I keep the menus, you see, with notes like this one — 'Too much food for tea.' Or another one — 'delicious.' If the table setting is particularly interesting, or the chair arrangement successful, I photograph them. That way, when I have the same sort of party, I know what worked and what didn't."

Some parties rate complete books of their own — her two children's birthday parties, a farewell party given for her husband.

The records of her professional life are just as extensive. Contact prints of her photographs, including those of a book she illustrated, "Olivia's African Diary — Cape Town to Cairo, 1932," are in albums, with the numbered negatives in archival plastic envelopes.

File cabinets, discreetly hidden behind sliding doors, hold papers on her committee work: the Frontier Nursing Service, International Student House, the U.S. Association of Museum Volunteers, the Murrow Center, the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy and numerous preservation associations.

Her honors, cups, badges, buttons and even her hand, cast by an admirer, stand on the top of a bookcase.

And if she ever runs out of documents, there's always the photocopying machine in the former dressing room.

Film On AIDS Is An Eye Opener

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I just saw a 20-minute film at a church that I think should be required viewing for everyone between the ages of 11 and 65. It is titled "Sex, Drugs and AIDS." Afterward, a panel of medical experts answered questions from the audience.

This film is for males, females, straights, gays or bisexuals; also for IV drug users and especially teenagers. It stressed that everyone who is sexually active can be a victim of AIDS. This film really opened my eyes.

I understand that some civic-minded people and Houston citizens interested in public health were the sponsors of this meeting. It was open to the public and there was no charge. I went out of curiosity because everyone is talking about AIDS, and I just can't say enough about how terrific I thought it was. — SAFE AND ALIVE IN HOUSTON

DEAR SAFE AND ALIVE: The film, "Sex, Drugs and AIDS," was produced by ODN Productions, Suite 304, 74 Varick St., New York, N.Y. 10013. It is available as a videocassette to qualified civic and community organizations for $35 a print. It has been endorsed by the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

I have seen it, and agree it should be seen by everyone between the ages of 10 and 65. It's the kind of plain talk young (and older) people can relate to.

DEAR ABBY: A new club just opened up deep in the heart of Texas. It's a country-western club and is decorated inside and out western style.

The owner asked for suggestions as to what to put on the doors of the restrooms. I suggested "Cows" and "Bulls." He used my suggestion, and in three days he got four complaints from women who resented being called "cows," so he changed it to "heifers." "Heifers" has been on the door for three months, and he hasn't had one complaint.

As far as I'm concerned, "heifers" sounds worse than cows. Comments welcomed. — PROUD TEXAN

DEAR TEXAS: Since a heifer is a young cow who has never had a calf, some women may deem the term "heifers" more flattering than "cows" — which I find utterly ridiculous.

What's the matter with "His" and "Hers," "Men" and "Women," or "Ladies" and "Gentlemen"? Or, if a picture is worth 10,000 words, use a picture of a cowboy and a cowgirl on appropriate doors. Foreign tourists who can't read English might appreciate it — and that's no bull.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young, happily married woman with two children. Last year my parents divorced, and I just learned that my father is having an affair with my mother-in-law, who is still married and living with her husband. This came as a shock to me because I never suspected that my in-laws were having problems.

My husband is aware of what's going on between my father and his mother, and says it's none of his business, it doesn't bother him, and he doesn't care to discuss it.

Well, it bothers me, and I do want to discuss it. I'm afraid if my father breaks up my in-laws' marriage, it might break up our marriage. What should I do? — WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: You can't force your husband to discuss anything he doesn't care to discuss. However, if you feel that your own marriage is threatened for any reason, it's important for you and your husband to discuss the matter with a professional counselor.

About the affair between your father and your husband's mother: If you want to let them know that you disapprove of their behavior, go ahead, but philandering parents are no more inclined to accept advice and criticism from their adult children than vice versa.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. All correspondence is confidential.)

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Friday Is 'Blame It Day'

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

Tomorrow is a very special day for many Americans. It's officially designated as "Blame Someone Else Day." It's a day set aside to share responsibility and guilt for the mess we're in.

Some people observe it with large parties, tables of food and parades with funny hats. Personally, I like to sit alone in my room, talking to myself and sinking into a black pit of self-pity.

I like to devote the entire day to thinking about people who have screwed up my life, taken away my dreams and altered the course of my destiny.

I think about Wayne Wingate, whom I dated in college. Wayne had success written all over him, and he was going to take me with him. We would get married, go to New York and have two and a half children. He would practice law and I would be a feature writer for the New York Times. Then one evening, we went to a movie to see the classic "Citizen Kane," and just as Orson Welles muttered the mysterious "Rosebud" before he died, Wayne leaned over and said, "Rosebud is his sled."

It could have been good for both of us, but no, Wayne had to destroy our relationship forever. No thanks to Wayne, I never even saw New York until I was 39 years old.

I think about a policeman who asked me to move my car from a fire lane at a shopping center 25 years ago. I had just had three children in five years and could barely fasten my seat belt. I had talked myself into enrolling in an exercise class at the shopping center and was running late. If that insensitive Neanderthal had not taken away my parking place, I would be Jane Fonda today.

I blame my agent for sending me on a book tour to New Zealand where there were 15 million sheep, none of whom could read. I blame my hips on all the people who, when I am on a diet, say, "But I made this dessert especially for you." I blame my husband who knows very good and well that when I look at him from across the room and smile, I am really saying I am dead on my feet and want to go home.

I blame my mother for my hair that frizzes and goes out of control in the rain ... it's all genetics. I blame my son for me not winning the Pillsbury Bake-Off when he spit out my croissants and said, "Maybe you should learn to play a musical instrument." One never gets her confidence back after that.

Yes, tomorrow will be spent in isolation where I will put all my ills and bad decisions where they belong ... at the feet of those I trusted with my faith and my future. If I cannot be reached to hear about my lottery winnings or if Redford invites me to dinner, guess who is going to get blamed? The jerk who invented "Blame Someone Else Day," that's who.

Warren Seeks Funds For EastCare

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

State Rep. Ed Warren has filed a bill in the State House of Representatives asking for $350,000 in state money toward operation of Pitt County Memorial Hospital's EastCare Air Ambulance Program.

"This is good news, wonderful news," PCMH President Jack Richardson said. He said Warren, a Democrat representing Pitt and Greene counties who filed the bill Wednesday, offered several weeks ago to investigate whether there would be state funds available this legislative session to assist with the cost of operation of the helicopter emergency transportation program.

"Ed has been very diligent in following up on this possibility," he said.

"State funding is not something we had counted on or even expected," Richardson said. "Yet it's not the first time it's been thought of."

When the board instituted the program, he said, it was Pitt Memorial officials' understanding that the EastCare program might become part of a statewide program for emergency air transportation and that EastCare would be its eastern regional component.

"We have understood since then that both Chapel Hill and Asheville have received some state funds, so we think it's appropriate that Mr. Warren ask for some for us," he said.

Richardson said EastCare will resume flights, possibly on a 12-hour-a-day schedule at first, probably in mid-to-late March. Service was suspended in early January when one of EastCare's helicopters crashed while making an emergency run from Jacksonville.

Richardson said OmniFlight, supplier of the program's helicopters, pilots and mechanics, expects to have a helicopter at Pitt Memorial about March 1. For the first few weeks, it will be used for crew training, he said.

as a conservative politician was an astonishing achievement. John East was also a master teacher and was recognized by the university on two occasions for his teaching ability. One of the finest tributes to this man is the fact that many students demanded to get into his class. They said he was a teacher who could make remote philosophers come alive."

Herndon said that "John East served his country in the same spirit of another fallen hero of the Republican Party, Abraham Lincoln, both of Springfield, Illinois."

Joyner spoke of "the long and lasting friendship between my family and the family of John East since the time he first came to Greenville."

"He was a fighter, a man who decided to run again after losing in his first three efforts to seek public office. He was always grateful and encouraged by the support given to him by friends and those who believed in him. You must remember that back in 1966 it was tough being a Republican in this area.

"I believe John ran for public office because of his sincere desire to serve his state and his country. He was a person of integrity, courage, a keen intelligence, strong convictions. The extent of the recognition of his intelligence was recognized nationally. After his death, The Los Angeles Times wrote of him as the brightest mind in the U.S. Senate."

In reference to another award, it was announced that the executive committee of the Pitt County Republican Party had voted to establish an annual John East Service Award, to be presented beginning in 1988.

In an unprogrammed event, Ed Griffith and Andy Andrews announced an award to honor the person considered to be the hardest working Republican in Pitt County — the Pitt County Republican of the Year. The first award was bestowed on Leon Bonner, who was cited as the person who alone in the 1986 campaign did the work of 28 committee members.

The keynote speaker for the Lincoln Day Dinner was Phillip J. Kirk Jr., secretary of the state Department of Human Resources.

Smith Wins 600th Of Career Wake Fails To Halt Climb

By The Associated Press
North Carolina coach Dean Smith got his 600th career coaching victory, but he says Wake Forest came to Chapel Hill prepared to delay his move up to the 10th winningest coach in NCAA Division I history.

"They (Wake Forest) were loose, particularly in the second half when they came back and shot the lights out," Smith said Wednesday after his Tar Heels defeated Wake Forest 94-

85. "Those weren't open shots they were hitting."

The Tar Heels sprinted away several times, but could not seem to build a commanding lead until the final five minutes. Then the North Carolina defense forced mistakes, and the free throws and 3-point jumpers began falling.

North Carolina, 21-2 overall and 10-0 in the conference, held a 65-61 with 11:18 left.

"You have to hand it to Wake Forest that they played so well and shot the 3-pointer shot so well," Smith said. "A lot of teams would have been beaten by Wake. That's why I want to hand it to our team for hanging tough when Wake came back in that sensational second half."

The four-point spread was as close as Wake Forest, 11-11 and 1-9, could come.

Wake Forest coach Bob Staak said his team had played their best 40 minutes of basketball this season.

"I told the team that we can be pleased with that, but we are never pleased when we do not win," Staak said. "Our goal now is to play with the same intensity and execution during our last five games of the regular season."

In other Atlantic Coast Conference action Wednesday, 16th-ranked Clemson defeated North Carolina State 78-75 and Virginia defeated Virginia Tech 91-73.

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis said he was always happy to get victories on the road.

"If the team wins on the road, it really gives our ball club a great deal of confidence," Ellis said. "That makes us feel good about our team."

When N.C. State opened in a zone, Michael Tait took advantage and bombed in three 3-point field goals. In the first six minutes, Tait had 13 points as Clemson took a 21-13 edge.

The Wolfpack then switched to a box-and-one, leaving one man on Tait and the other four in a zone defense. That strategy backfired when Anthony Jenkins hit two straight 3-pointers, the second of which lifted the Tigers to a 27-16 edge at the 12:33 mark.

"Opening the game, we tried to play a big zone to offset their inside scoring, but they were hot from the outside," N.C. State coach Jim Valvano said. "I thought we did a better job defensively on Michael Tait in the second half."

After Tait's initial explosion — 21 points in 16 minutes — N.C. State's man-to-man defense stemmed the barrage and helped the Wolfpack get within 45-40 at halftime.

The Wolfpack took the lead for the last time at 68-66 on a 3-pointer by Bennie Bolton, but Tait hit a baseline jumper at 4:05 to tie the score.

Charles Shackelford's short baseline jumper pulled N.C. State within one with 1:30 left and the Wolfpack resorted to fouling to try to keep the rally going.

"We played one of our best games in quite a while," said Valvano, whose Wolfpack has lost eight of its last 10 games and fell to 13-11 and 4-5.

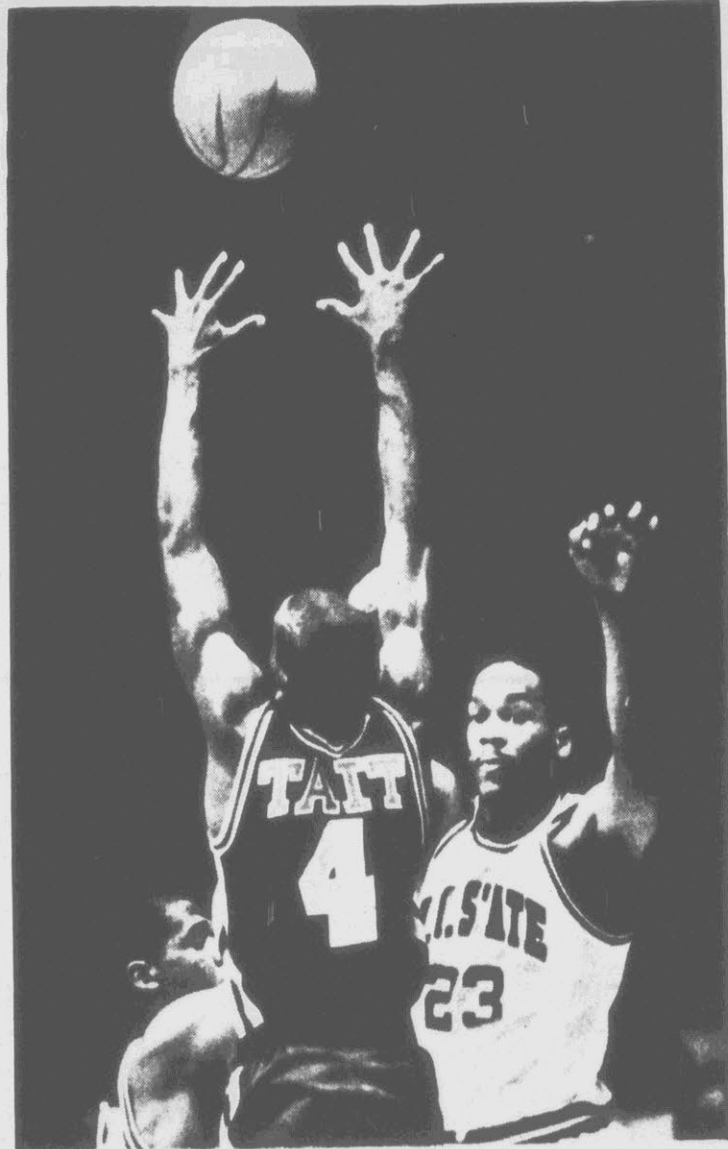

Clemson is now 22-2 overall and 7-2 in the ACC.

Going into Wednesday night's non-conference basketball game against Virginia Tech, Virginia had lost three straight contests, all to Top 20 teams.

"We really needed a big win here tonight," said Mel Kennedy, a junior forward who responded with a career-high 24 points to lead Virginia to a 91-73 win over the Hokies.

Lady Pirates Host S.C. State

East Carolina's Lady Pirates open their final two home games tonight at 7:30 p.m., playing host to South Carolina State.

Saturday night, the Lady Pirates will close out the home schedule by facing UNC-Wilmington, also in a 7:30 p.m. game.

The Saturday game will also be a Colonial Athletic Association game and will bring in the leaders in nearly every category in the league — except the standings.

The Lady Seahawks, only 4-4 in CAA play, are 14-5 overall, and are unbeaten against in-state opponents. They took an 87-77 victory over East Carolina earlier in the year in Wilmington.

The Lady Seahawks are hitting 55.6 percent from the floor and have been among the national leaders in that category, leading the NCAA for several weeks before having one bad game in the low 40s.

Center Elizabeth Bell, a 6-0 junior, is scoring at a 21.3 clip, leading the CAA. She also pulls away 7.9 rebounds a game. Actually, all five of the starters are in double figures in scoring.

The others include 5-8 junior forward Sharon McDowell, 16.1 ppg, 5-10 junior forward Sissy Morse, 14.7 ppg, 5-5 senior guard Wanda Carroll, 15.7 ppg, and 5-5 sophomore guard Johnnie Smith, 10.4 ppg.

McDowell leads the conference in rebounding and in field goal percentage, with figures of 10.1 and 67.9, respectively. Smith is the leader in assists with 132 and Carroll is second to ECU's Delphine Mabry in steals.

The Lady Pirates come into the two-game series with a 13-10 overall record and a 6-3 CAA mark.

Information on South Carolina State's team was unavailable.

Saturday night, the only two seniors on the team, Mabry and Cathy Ellis, a reserve, will be honored in their final home appearance.

The Lady Pirates travel to George Mason and James Madison next weekend, then return to Madison for the conference tournament the following week.

Pirates Sign 19 Recruits

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

East Carolina's football coaches breathed a sigh of relief as Wednesday marked the first day the nation's prep football stars could sign with the school of their choice and the Pirates were able to ink 19 prospects for the 1987 season.

Although not a banner recruiting year for the Pirates, head coach Art Baker said he was satisfied with the results as the Pirates were able to fill a glaring need for defensive backs.

"Obviously, we didn't do as well as we had hoped, particularly in the state of North Carolina. N.C. State had a great year recruiting, they pretty much cleaned house around here," Baker said.

"Our two biggest objectives were to bring in immediate help in the secondary or as near to it as we could. We had to recruit skill people who could run and play slot, defensive back, wide receiver and running back. We did well in that category. We were also able to sign our top two prospects in the defensive secondary in Bryan Haywood and Errol McCorvey."

Of the Pirates' 19 signees, seven are defensive backs. Tops among these are Haywood (6-0 185), a junior college All-American from Arizona Western Junior College and McCorvey (6-1, 175) of Escambia High School in Pensacola, Fla.

Baker said he is particularly high on Haywood, who prepped at Douglas Byrd High School in Fayetteville.

"We went to California, New Jersey, Illinois and Iowa and we looked at defensive backs all over the country," he said. "Of course, grades had something to do with it and competition had something to do with it, but he is the best one available for us. We brought in three defensive backs and we picked him number one."

McCorvey played on an Escambia team that was rated as one of the best in the country by USA Today and also boasted the top running back prospect in the country in Emmett Smith. ECU beat out Southern Mississippi and Tulane for McCorvey's services.

Baker said the Pirates picked up two other defensive back prospects from the Miami area in Michael Rhett (5-10, 190) and Terry Bennett (5-8, 155). Bennett, who chose ECU over Boston College, runs a 4.3 40.

Around the state, ECU signed two defensive backs in Donald Porch (5-10, 160) of Northampton West, and Richard Wright (6-1, 180), of Fayetteville Byrd. Both players were selected among the Top 40 players in the state this past season by the Durham Herald while Wright was also selected as one of the state's top 100 players in the pre-season by the Greensboro News and Record.

"I see him as a corner," said Byrd coach Bob Paroli of Wright. "He has great speed and he's a very aggressive football player. He can make the big play because of his athletic ability."

"He's got plenty of speed. His aggressiveness and his courage combined with his speed make him an outstanding prospect."

In his junior year, Wright was the state 200-meter champion in the 1-A 2-A classification. Last weekend, he ran a 6.3 60-yard dash in the State Indoor Track Meet in Chapel Hill.

Porch, who runs a 4.4 40, was named All-East by the Raleigh News and Observer and All-Conference in the Roanoke-Chowan. On the season, he ran for 1,400 yards and scored 22 touchdowns Porch had nine interceptions on the season and returned three for touchdowns.

"He played running back and deep corner for us," said Northampton West coach Gerald Hall of Porch. "He's very fast. The recruiters were looking at him to play defensive back. He will hit you. He's not big for a defensive back but he is aggressive with speed as his main attribute."

ECU's recruiting efforts were hampered by the loss of three assistant coaches, all of whom had specific recruiting areas, as well as the bowl appearances of both North Carolina State and North Carolina.

"When they went to bowl games, particularly N.C. State, it just went right through into recruiting," Baker said. "On top of that, we end up losing three coaches in the early stages of recruiting. By that time, two of them had established home visits and school visits with the players in the Tidewater area (of Virginia). Consequently, we come out of the Tidewater area with one player where we had been thinking we would get five or six."

Making all of that a little easier to swallow is the addition of four of last year's freshman who did not play because of proposition 48, along with four transfers who will be eligible to play next fall.

Anthony Thompson, the prize of last year's recruiting class, heads the list of players who sat out their freshman season due to proposition 48. Thompson (6-2 205) will play linebacker. Bojack Davenport (6-1, 175), Denell Harper (5-8, 170) and Junior Robinson (5-10, 185), all defensive back-running back types, are the remaining three.

"That made our recruiting a lot easier," Baker said. "They are all doing well (and) the transfers are all doing well. That takes a little pressure off of us but we still have not gotten the offensive linemen we wanted. We wanted a center and we lost a couple of tackles right there in the end (Most notably Danny Branch of Fayetteville 71st, who signed with South Carolina)."

Baker said he is high on offensive lineman Mark Weatherford of Chowan. "We looked at him in high school," he said. "He was about 6-5 and about 210 pounds. Now he's 6-7 and 245 pounds and he runs well (4.9 40). He could play tight end, defensive end or offensive line. That's the kind of guy you like to recruit."

ECU coaches are also pleased with signee Dale Pope (6-1, 225, DE) of Athens, Ga., a brother of former ECU player Damon Pope.

Baker said that the Pirates have completed most of their signings but that they may sign a few more players, including a quarterback.

Little Fanfare For No. 600

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — It was another game, another day of squeaking sneakers and bouncing basketballs — and another basketball victory — No. 600 for North Carolina coach Dean Smith.

The victory that made Smith the 10th winningest coach in NCAA Division I history came with a minimum of fanfare.

The crowd chanted 6-0-0 briefly, and cheerleaders unfurled a banner congratulating the 55-year-old coach, who disappeared quickly after the third-ranked Tar Heels' 94-85 victory over Wake Forest Wednesday into the tunnels at the Dean E. Smith Center.

Smith remembers his first win, an 80-46 victory over Virginia in the 1961-1962 season. The Tar Heels finished 8-9, the only losing season Smith has had at North Carolina. He remembers the game mostly for what he forgot.

"We beat Virginia. That was a famous," Smith said. "I can say I was so organized, the team was ready to play and the referee said, 'Where's the ball?'"

"I thought of everything except the most important thing — you have to have a game ball to play with," Smith said. "That seems like 80 years ago."

In the seasons since, Smith has won 600 games and lost 173, for a winning percentage of .776. His teams have won 20 or more games for 17 straight seasons, and the Tar Heels finished first or second in the Atlantic Coast Conference from 1967 until 1985. The Tar Heels have been in the NCAA tournament field for the past 12 seasons. North Carolina won the NCAA national championship in 1982 — Smith's 20th season — with a 63-62 victory over Georgetown.

But Smith said the statistics don't mean much.

"It means you've coached a long time," Smith said.

"This is not a case of counting numbers. I'm concerned with this team and bringing out the best in it ... I'm taking my life one day at a time. This is not a day to reflect any more to me than last week when our staff won 599. I don't see the particular significance," Smith said.

The players knew the milestone was coming, and one player was not surprised that Smith hardly acknowledged it.

"I thought Coach downplayed it," said senior point guard Kenny Smith. "We were more excited than he was. He didn't even speak about it after the game."

"I was really surprised when he won the 500th, the way he downplayed it," Kenny Smith said. "This time, I expected it. I feel like a veteran to be around so long. It gives me a little bragging rights, too."

Kenny Smith was there in December 1983 when Smith won his 500th victory, an 88-75 triumph over Stanford in the Stanford Invitational. His coach also remembers the day.

"It's pretty interesting ... I should thank the seniors," Dean Smith said.

Alford Draws Bob Knight's Ire

By The Associated Press

Bob Knight had some words for Steve Alford after the Indiana guard matched the Hoosiers career scoring mark. He omitted congratulations.

Alford scored 15 points on 4 of 13 shooting from the field in No. 2 Indiana's 77-75 Big Ten victory over Northwestern Wednesday night to give him 2,192 points, matching the total posted by Don Schlundt from 1952-1955.

However, Knight didn't talk about Alford's success, rather his failure in the coach's eyes.

"It was obvious that Alford did not provide the leadership we needed," Knight said. "He showed no leadership tonight. If I'd been a fan, I'd have been rooting for Northwestern."

The Wildcats, 6-16 overall and 1-11 in the conference, had 8,117 other fans in sold-out Welsh-Ryan Arena rooting them on, but it wasn't enough to offset the 32-point, 11-rebound performance of Daryl Thomas.

"Alford had two good games (42 points against Michigan State and 30 against Michigan last week) and I guess that's enough for him," Knight said. "If we don't have Daryl Thomas, we lose. Daryl Thomas was the only player we had."

Midway through the second half, Thomas scored three consecutive baskets on rebounds and sophomore Rick Calloway, who finished with 14 points, scored nine straight points to break up a close game and give the Hoosiers, 20-2 and 11-1, a 58-47 lead with 8:50 left.

But the Wildcats closed the deficit to 70-66 with 2:42 remaining, and two free throws by Northwestern's Elliot Fullen with 43 seconds left made it 76-72. Calloway made one free throw and Jeff Grose hit his fifth 3-pointer of the game to account for the final margin.

In other games involving ranked teams Wednesday night, No. 3 North Carolina beat Wake Forest 94-85 for Tar Heels Coach Dean Smith's 600th victory; Oklahoma State upset No. 8 Oklahoma 75-74; No. 12 Clemson beat North Carolina State 78-75; No. 13 Georgetown defeated Connecticut 78-50; No. 14 Alabama downed Vanderbilt 71-67; Missouri beat No. 17 Kansas 63-60; and No. 19 Florida defeated Mississippi 85-62.

Northwestern was beaten 95-43 in its first meeting with Indiana this year.

"We were so scared of Alford we didn't bother with Thomas who literally beat our brains out," Northwestern Coach Bill Foster said. "But, we had great effort and we did not break down like we did in Bloomington when we shot only 21 percent. We played one of the great teams to a virtual standstill despite the fact we had two players playing out of position and threw the ball away repeatedly."

Knight, who did not allow the media into the locker room, had said all along he felt his team was not as good as its record or lofty ranking.

"When I told people we did not have a good team they laughed at me," Knight said. "Well, I know more about basketball than any of them."

portant when Oklahoma's Dave Sieger hit a 40-footer at the buzzer.

"There were a lot of guys who contributed. A lot of heroes," Oklahoma State Coach Leonard Hamilton said. "We beat them to loose balls, got the long rebounds ... and played with the desire and effort it takes to beat a great ball club."

The Cowboys, 7-15 and 3-6, shot 51 percent compared to Oklahoma's 38 percent that included a 2-for-16 performance from Tim McCalister.

"When your best shooter goes 2 for 16 from the field and you shoot as poorly as we did from the 3-point range (4-for-20), it's hard to beat anybody," said Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs, whose team remained tied with Kansas atop the Big Eight.

Darryl Kennedy led the Sooners, 19-4 and 7-2, with 21 points.

No. 13 Georgetown 78, Connecticut 50

The Hoyas marched easily to the 1,000th victory in their history as Reggie Williams led the way with 34 points at the Hartford Civic Center.

Georgetown, which has won 339 games since John Thompson took over as coach in 1972, scored the first nine points of the Big East Conference game and that was it.

Georgetown, 18-4 and 8-4, led by as many as 32 points in beating the Huskies for the 12th straight time.

Tate George led Connecticut, 8-14 and 2-9, with 11 points.

No. 14 Alabama 71, Vanderbilt 67

Derrick McKey, usually the center for Alabama, moved to forward in the second half, and the move by Coach Wimp Sanderson was a success.

The 6-foot-9 McKey went outside to avoid Vanderbilt's 7-0 Will Perdue and the Crimson Tide new forward made 7 of 10 shots from the floor, including four of six from 3-point range.

"I decided we needed to put Derrick at the forward. We tried to get as much help on the perimeter and against Perdue as we could," Sanderson said.

Alabama, 18-4 and 11-2, held first place in the Southeastern Conference as it ran off nine straight points after Vanderbilt tied the game 59-59 with 6:04 to play.

Barry Booker led the Commodores, 14-11 and 5-8, with 21 points.

Missouri 63, No. 17 Kansas 60

Freshman guard Lee Coward was the hero for Missouri, which avenged a one-point loss to the Jayhawks earlier in the season. Coward, who finished with 11 points, hit a 3-pointer with two seconds to play to give the Tigers the homecourt victory.

"It really hasn't sunk in yet that I made it," Coward said. "Maybe later tonight when I'm in my room it will sink in. It just means a lot to beat KU and I'm glad I was the person to do it."

Helping Coward immensely was the Big Eight's leading scorer, Derrick Chievous, who finished with 26 points as he outdueled Kansas' heralded Danny Manning, who missed a lot of time because of foul trouble.

"Danny got strapped with some fouls early and I had to keep him out," Kansas Coach Larry Brown said. "But I'm just happy with the way our kids responded to having him on the bench. All I wish is that a couple of things had gone our way."

Missouri, 16-9 and 6-3, had some luck to set up Coward's game-winner as Devin Rolf missed the front end of a 1-and-1 with the game tied 60-60. Greg Church rebounded the miss and tapped it to Coward.

Manning, who had scored 68 points in his last two games, finished with 21 as the Jayhawks, 18-6 and 7-2, remained tied with Oklahoma atop the Big Eight.

No. 19 Florida 85, Mississippi 62

Florida broke from a 36-28 halftime lead with a 10-4 spurt to start the second half and coasted to the Southeastern Conference victory. Vernon Maxwell led the Gators, 19-6 and 11-3, with 16 points, while fellow guards Andrew Moten and Clifford Lett added 12 each.

Mississippi, 13-9 and 6-7, was led by forward Eric Smith's 20 points as the visitors were outrebanded by the Gators 40-28.

UNLV Back Is Off Team After Arrest

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Nevada-Las Vegas running back Alan Rodney Trammel has been suspended from the football team following his arrest on burglary and battery charges.

Trammel, a recent transfer from El Camino (Calif.) Junior College, was released late Tuesday from the Clark County Detention Center on $5,250 bail. He had been booked for investigation of burglary and battery.

According to police, Trammel was arrested by campus police Saturday morning after he allegedly broke into rooms at the university's only dormitory. He also allegedly shoved a female student, resulting in the battery charge.

UNLV football Coach Wayne Nun-nely said in a statement that if Trammel is guilty "I do not want him as part of our program."

Under guidelines set forth by the university in November, athletes who are arrested are automatically suspended from their teams.

Trammel is the second Rebel football player to be arrested since Nunely was named head coach last April. His arrest is the latest in a long string of police incidents involving UNLV football players, which eventually led to the resignation of former Coach Harvey Hyde.

On Monday, UNLV basketball recruit Lloyd Daniels was arrested on drug charges, and university officials banned him from ever playing for UNLV.

Oklahoma State 75, No. 8 Oklahoma 74

Oklahoma State lost to the Sooners by 27 points the first time the teams met this season. The outcome was quite different this time in Stillwater as Royce Jeffries made a layup with seven seconds left to give the Cowboys a 73-71 lead and Todd Christian, who finished with 22 points, made two free throws six seconds later. The free throws became important when Oklahoma's Dave Sieger hit a 40-footer at the buzzer.

The 6-foot-5 Kennedy hit the basket that put Virginia ahead for good with 14:19 to play, and the Cavaliers improved to 15-7.

"In the second half I thought we came out and did a better job offensively," Virginia Coach Terry Holland said. "but I thought the real key to the game was that we picked up our defense."

The Metro Conference Hokies fell to 9-14 on the season.

Virginia Tech Coach Charles Moir said Kennedy "certainly had a hot hand. I can't remember seeing him shoot the ball that well from the outside."

Pam Pack Romps By North Lenoir

WASHINGTON — Washington High School used the foul line to round up an 80-66 Coastal Conference basketball victory over North Lenoir Wednesday night.

The game, originally scheduled for Tuesday night, was postponed because of a malfunction of the clock. The clock problems continued Wednesday night, but the game was played to a conclusion.

The Pam Pack pushed out to an 18-10 lead in the opening period of the game. The Hawks, however, rallied with a 24-21 margin in the second quarter. That cut the Washington lead back to 39-34 at intermission.

In the third period, Washington inched further out to a 51-44 lead. The Pack outbit the Hawks, 29-22, in the final period to wrap it up.

Washington made good on 22 of 25 shots at the stripe while North Lenoir hit on just eight of 13.

Frankie Warren led Washington with 25 points while Franz Holscher had 17, Ryan Dixon had 13 and Dwayne Moore had 10. North Lenoir was led by Donald Mitchell with 25 while Darryl McNeil had 17 and Dave Hinson hit 14.

The win boosted the Washington record to 2-7 on the year in conference play. The Pack is 4-15 overall.

To The Sports Editor:
 I was very sad to hear of Coach Charlie Harrison's resignation as ECU's basketball coach. Charlie inherited a difficult situation and has done a superb job of rebuilding the Pirate basketball program under less than ideal conditions. More importantly, Charlie has done a great job with his "kids." I have never seen a coach as devoted as Charlie is to the welfare of his team, both as players and individuals. His player are better people because of their association with Charlie. ECU has a better basketball program because of his efforts. If his replacement has half of his honesty and drive we can look for good things from the program in the future.
 Charlie — you did a hell of a good job. Best luck in the future.

To The Sports Editor:
 I have noticed negative attitudes by some people about the possible hiring of Lefty Driesell. At the same time, these people want a big name coach. In my opinion, no unemployed coach has a bigger name. Said people should reconsider their thoughts. Coach Driesell is or would not be a bad influence on ECU's athletics. If he decides to become our basketball coach we should welcome him, not shun him.

Sutton's 32 Leads Craven Past Pitt

NEW BERN — Roylee Sutton scored 32 points to lead five players in double figures as hosting Craven Community College rolled over Pitt Community College, 139-98, Wednesday night in basketball action.

The two teams played fairly evenly through the first seven and a half minutes of the game. Craven held a 21-18 lead with 12:39 showing.

"But from there on in," Coach Charles Coburn said, "(Pitt) got called for a lot of little tough fouls and it seemed like (Craven) could do anything it wanted to. We're not that great a defensive team to start with, but we should get credit for what we do.

"I'm upset about the officiating and it shows in the disparity in the shooting. We shot only eight free throws and they shot 24.

Craven ran on out to a 70-47 lead in the game at halftime and never looked back. They outbit the Paladins, Marvin Dawson added 24 points for Craven while Leander Shroud had 21, Tony Copeland had 16 and Mark Page had 10.

Pitt was led by Tyrone Andrews with 22, Mike Hathaway with 18, Jarvis Wiggins with 17, Tony Clemons with 14, Rodney Scott with 13 and Joel Isley with 10.

Now 17-8, Pitt travels to Richmond, Va., on Friday, to face Virginia Union's junior varsity.

Rowson Leads Seahawks Past Coastal Carolina

WILMINGTON (AP) — Brian Rowson scored 21 points and pulled down 11 rebounds to lead North Carolina-Wilmington to an 81-66 college basketball victory over Coastal Carolina Wednesday night.
 The Seahawks pushed their record to 13-9 overall and remain in second place in the Colonial Athletic Association with 7-4 mark. The Chanticleers are now 10-13 and 2-3 in the Big South Conference.
 Coastal Carolina jumped out to an early lead behind the shooting of William Calvin, who scored four of the Chanticleer's first six points to give the team an 8-3 lead at the 16:16 mark.
 But the Seahawks used an eight-point steak midway through the first half to take a 37-35 lead at halftime. Rowson put North Carolina-Wilmington up at halftime with a baseline jumper with six seconds remaining.
 North Carolina-Wilmington outscored the Chanticleers 7-2 in the first four minutes of the second half.
 Mark Gary scored 15 points for the Seahawks, Charles Cherry had 13 and Greg Bender added 10.
 Calvin led the Chanticleers with 14 points. Dave Mooney had 13, including three 3-pointers.

Knight Signs With Birds

BALTIMORE (AP) — Ray Knight wanted a chance to play regularly and to feel needed. He got both, but paid a price to get them.
 Knight, who rejected an $800,000 offer from the New York Mets after being named the Most Valuable Player in the 1986 World Series, accepted a $475,000 pact Wednesday for a one-year contract with the Baltimore Orioles.
 By reaching various incentive goals, the 34-year-old third baseman could come close to matching the $645,000 he made last season, as well as kick in an option year.
 Knight started his postseason negotiations with the Mets by seeking a two-year guarantee of $2 million. He later scaled down his demands to $850,000 a year, but the Mets balked and then declined to offer him salary arbitration.
 Knight, who now becomes the first World Series MVP not to return to his team the following season, thought he could recoup on the free agent market. To his dismay, the offers were few and the deal from the Orioles was the best available.
 He put the Orioles on hold several times, most recently after his wife, golfer Nancy Lopez, won the Sarasota Classic last Sunday and they went home to celebrate her automatic qualification into the LPGA Hall of Fame.
 Baltimore General Manager Hank Peters said he pointed out to Knight during their negotiations that, at least in the American League, no other clubs were in need of a third baseman.
 "He was a perfect match for us, and we were a perfect match for him," Peters said.
 "The incentives are very fair," Knight said Wednesday night in Springfield, Mo., where he was attending a sports banquet. "And, although it's not as much money, it's seemingly a more solid situation. I'll play everyday, and really, that's all I had hoped for."
 The Mets had indicated that Howard Johnson and rookie Dave Magadan probably would share most of the playing time at third base in 1987, dimming Knight's chances for extensive action.
 He should have no such problem with the Orioles, whose 10 performers at third base last season committed 40 errors and drove in 50 runs. Since Doug DeCinces left Baltimore after the 1981, the Orioles have not been able to find a steady performer at the position where Hall of Famer Brooks Robinson ruled for nearly a quarter century.
 Knight batted .298 with 11 home runs and 76 RBI last season.
 "I'm really not sure about changing leagues," said Knight, who has spent his entire career in the National League with Cincinnati, Houston and the Mets. "But it's really a nice feeling to be appreciated and wanted."
 Peters sought Knight for more than just his playing ability.

Bodine Relegated To Underdog Role

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — As the defending champion of the world's richest stock car race, Geoff Bodine should be the center of attention in the days preceding the Daytona 500.

But a rash of rapid Ford Thunderbirds has relegated Bodine and the rest of General Motors drivers to the status of designated also-rans, at least in the collective mind of the media.

"Hey, I'm getting plenty of attention," Bodine said Wednesday when asked if he was surprised not to be considered among the favorites Sunday to collect the lion's share of a $1.5 million purse.

It's not that Bodine, who survived a race of attrition last year, isn't being asked his share of the questions. It's simply that the awesome showing this week of the Fords has been the story.

Bodine's Chevrolet was the eighth-fastest in qualifying, earning him the fourth starting position today in one of two 125-mile races from which most of the 42 starters will emerge for Sunday's race.

Four Fords, an oddity in a sport dominated by GM cars, had superior qualifying speeds. That Bill Elliott was fastest at 210.364 mph was no surprise.

But the likes of unheralded Davey Allison, Ken Schrader and Kyle Petty among the fastest qualifiers proved stunning. Collectively, they have one Winston Cup victory, the first of Petty's career last season at Richmond.

Elliott, who won the race two years ago and toyed with the field last Sunday in the Busch Clash of 1986 pole winners, started on the pole in one of the qualifying races. Like Allison, who started first in the other, Elliott's front-row start in the Daytona 500 is already assured.

Most of the others will establish starting positions for Sunday's race based on their finishing positions today.

"I am not surprised by the showing of the Fords this week," Bodine said. "But that doesn't mean the race is over. They still have to go out there and run."

Bodine said the "law of physics" itself makes one believe the bullet-shaped Thunderbirds should be superior.

"Look at the aerodynamics of the car," he said. "The nose is just perfect. I'd say it's a perfect race car."

"All I can say is I expect to win, but then I expect to win all the time," Bodine said. "I don't have any particular feeling for this race. But I know what I've got to do."

Bodine, who outlasted Elliott and the others last year — securing his victory when 1986 Winston Cup champion Dale Earnhardt ran out of gas late in the race — believes he can repeat.

"What I've got to do is drive a perfect race, not make any mistakes, and hope no one blows in front of me."

Even that may not be enough.

Pontiac driver Rusty Wallace, who starts ninth in one qualifier off a speed of 204.448, said extensive wind-tunnel testing and early practices have convinced him the Fords are superior.

"I saw some aero (wind-tunnel test) numbers that staggered me and they were not from one of the top Ford teams," Wallace said.

"You look and see drivers like Davey Allison (209.084) and Ken Schrader (208.227) up there and you know those cars are fast," he said.

"I'm not trying to take anything away from those drivers, but if they don't blow, they're going to be tough."

Andretti Experiences Daytona 500 Anniversary

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — It's an anniversary of sorts for Mario Andretti as he heads into Friday's opening round of the International Race of Champions XI at Daytona International Speedway.

It was 20 years ago this week that Andretti, the 1969 Indianapolis 500 winner and the 1978 Formula One world champion, captured the crown jewel of stock car racing, the Daytona 500.

Andretti will not be competing in Sunday's $1.5 million 500, but just being back at the same 2.5-mile, high-banked tri-oval evokes fond memories.

"Daytona has always been a special place for me," Andretti said Wednesday after drawing the 11th starting position in the 12-car race.

"There's a lot of tradition here and it's a feather in any driver's cap to do well here," Andretti said.

Another thing that makes this race special for Andretti is the presence of his son, 24-year-old Michael, who is making his IROC debut after finishing second to Bobby Rahal in a tight CART Indy-car championship battle last season.

"I've just told him to stay behind me and watch what I do," joked the elder Andretti. "But he won't listen to me. He never does about that."

Father and son came to Daytona in December for a bit of testing in two of the 12 identically prepared Chevrolet IROC Z-28 Camaros which will be used in Friday's 100-mile dash.

Michael said, "I'm sort of surprised to be here. It's a real honor. And it's a new experience for me. I've never been in a car that heavy at these speeds."

NASCAR stock car star Darrell Waltrip drew the pole position for the race in a blind draw Wednesday, with Trans-Am competitor Wally Dallenbach Jr. on the outside of the front row.

Swaim Is Disqualified

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The record-setting pole-qualifying lap of Mike Swaim for the Komfort Koach 200 subcompact car race has been disqualified because of technical violations.

Swaim, who has won the Charlotte-Daytona Dash series opener at Daytona International Speedway three straight years, qualified Tuesday at 163.520 mph. But NASCAR officials said a post-qualifying inspection determined his Pontiac was equipped with a carburetor restrictor plate that did not conform to specifications.

That gave the pole for Friday's 200-mile race to second-place qualifier Larry Caudill, who had a fast lap of 161.296 on Tuesday.

Swaim was allowed to requalify on Wednesday and was the fastest driver of the session, taking the 26th position in the 45-car lineup at 155.261.

Jesse Samples Jr. was second in Wednesday's session at 151.604, followed by Andy Belmont at 150.396.

Azinger Won't Fail

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — The record book says that Bob Tway won his first PGA Tour title in this tournament a year ago.

Paul Azinger has a different version.

"I lost it," Azinger said before teeing off today in the first round of the $500,000 Andy Williams Open Golf Tournament.

"I should have won the tournament," said the lanky, 27-year-old Azinger, who was engaged in a multiple-man struggle down the stretch, then hit into a canyon on the 16th hole and made double bogey.

That took him out of it, and Tway went on to a playoff victory that served as the springboard to his Player of the Year season.

Hensley Top Qualifier In Final Day Trials

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Jimmy Hensley was the fast qualifier Wednesday in the final round of time trials for Saturday's Goody's 300 late model sportsman race.

Hensley's Buick turned a fast lap of 188.750 mph around Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile tri-oval, earning the 21st starting position in the 42-car lineup.

Tommy Houston won the pole position Tuesday at 194.389 mph, a track record for the Busch Grand National series cars.

Jimmy Horton was second on Wednesday's speed list at 188.517, followed by Brett Hearn at 187.430 and Ed Berrier 187.266.

Bill Elliott, the NASCAR stock car star who earlier this week set a track qualifying record of 210.364 mph, continued to have problems with his sportsman car, qualifying 26th on the grid at 187.071.

The lineup for Saturday's Goody's 300 late model sportsman race, with type of car and qualifying speed in mph:

1. Tommy Houston, Buick, 194.389 (breaks sportsman track qualifying record of 191.130 by Larry Pearson in 1986).
2. L.D. Ottinger, Buick, 192.691.

Snowflake Shapes
 It may be that no two are identical, but snowflakes can be grouped into seven basic shapes. Most common are the six-pointed star, the column, the needle, and the hexagon. Most snowflakes are hexagonal, or six-sided, due to the arrangement of the oxygen atoms. The precise shape and size are determined by the temperature and the humidity of the air when the ice crystal is formed. The coldest temperatures form crystals shaped like hollow prisms.

 The great magicians are successful because they can make you believe in the illusions they create. That holds true for the great defenders at bridge as well.

 With only three-card spade support, North had to make a waiting bid at his first turn. However, it did not take long for North-South to reach their optimum contract.
 Against four spades, West led the ace of clubs and continued with the four to his partner's jack. Declarer ruffed the club king with the eight and West overruffed—with the king!
 To appreciate the beauty of this defense, let's pause for a moment to consider what would have happened had West made the seemingly normal play of overruffing with the jack. Declarer would win any return and would have only one play for his contract: a trump finesse. That would have succeeded and the contract would have coasted home.
 Now we return to what actually happened. West exited with a heart, declarer won in hand and cashed the ace of trumps, both defenders following with a low trump. It seemed to declarer that East had to have the jack of trumps, so when he continued with a low trump from dummy and East followed with the five, South confidently finessed the 10. West produced the jack for the setting trick.
 This form of deceptive play is quite common and, used judiciously, it can earn you many an extra trick. However, bear in mind that usually it is correct to win tricks as cheaply as possible, and a successful "swindle" works only when partner can't be fooled by the play into doing something suicidal.

Discovery Channel Will Offer Soviet TV To U.S. Next Week

By DEBORAH MESCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some Americans will get a glimpse of daily Soviet television — news programs, cartoons, rock videos, game shows and more — during a week-long experiment by a U.S. cable channel that begins Sunday.

The Discovery Channel, in an effort "to present an accurate view of state-controlled Soviet TV", will provide 66 hours of Russian television to its 14 million U.S. subscribers, said TDC Chairman John Hendricks.

"The Discovery Channel will carry for one week a broad array of Soviet news, prime-time and morning programming, but we will carry no programming that is not typical of regular Soviet television fare — no 'made-for-America' specials," Hendricks told reporters Wednesday.

The Landover, Md.-based channel, launched in June 1985, provides programs about nature, history, science and technology, travel and world cultures. Channel officials said cable operators that do not carry TDC can arrange to take the service for the eight days of the experiment.

All the Russian programs except the news shows will be viewed in the United States at the same time they are broadcast in the Soviet Union, he said. The hour-long Soviet evening news programs will be tape delayed so they may be shown to American viewers after the U.S. evening news programs.

"We will be giving Americans the opportunity to watch U.S. national news and then turn to Soviet national news and make their own comparisons," TDC President Ruth Otte said.

English subtitles will provide word-for-word translations of the news programs. For other programs, English subtitles will summarize and explain what is happening in a general sense.

The Russian programming will run the same week as ABC's mini-series "Amerika," a portrayal of the United States under Soviet domination. TDC officials said their programming, which will partially overlap the ABC mini-series in the Mountain and Pacific time zones, was designed to complement rather than compete with "Amerika."

TDC will present roughly nine hours of Soviet TV each day, beginning Sunday and ending the following Sunday, Feb. 22. Because of at least eight hours' time difference between the two countries, American viewers will see Soviet morning programming between 11 p.m. and 3 a.m. EST. They will see Soviet prime-time programs between 9 a.m. and 1 p.m. EST. The news programs will be shown from 8 p.m. to 9 p.m. EST Sunday through Friday.

The programs will include aerobics, short documentaries about science and nature, cartoons, children's programs, sports programs, game shows, music videos and "how-to" shows.

Otte said the channel decided to devote about half of its daily programming to Soviet TV each day during the experiment "to give Americans a representative sampling of what domestic Russian television really is."

However, TDC officials said they had no plans currently to offer Soviet programming on a regular basis.

Writer-Director Oliver Stone Sees Films Collect 10 Oscar Nominations

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Writer-director Oliver Stone has been doubly vindicated by the motion picture academy, which honored his two war-theme films with 10 Oscar nominations and assured them larger audiences.

The eight nominations for the grim

Vietnam saga "Platoon," in contention for best movie, director, writing and acting Oscars, culminated a 10-year battle to bring the movie that no studio would touch to the screen.

"A Room with a View," a period romance regarded as a longshot, also got eight nominations Wednesday, while Woody Allen's "Hannah and Her Sisters," the outer-space sequel "Aliens" and "The Mission," had seven each.

"It would be very hard to have another year as good as this one has been," said Stone, nominated as director and writer for "Platoon," No. 1 at the box office for the last two weeks, and as writer for "Salvador."

"I am thrilled by both honors, especially that 'Salvador' has been retrieved from obscurity," Stone said.

Two actors from "Platoon," Tom Berenger and Willem Dafoe, were nominated in the supporting actor category.

"I am honored and surprised because I thought 'Platoon' was an ensemble picture," Berenger said.

If the nominations carry any message, it may be that money doesn't matter.

Except for "Platoon," none of the best picture nominees was a box-office smash.

The year's blockbusters "Top Gun" and "Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home" each managed four nominations in lesser categories, while "Crocodile Dundee" and "The Karate Kid Part II" had one apiece.

The 59th annual Academy Awards presentations will be broadcast by ABC-TV on March 30.

The more than 4,000 voting members of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences chose "Children of a Lesser God," "Hannah and Her Sisters," "The Mission," "Platoon" and "A Room with a View" as nominees for the best picture of 1986.

The nominations also featured Paul Newman, who has never won despite six nominations; longtime jazz great Dexter Gordon in his acting debut; and hearing-impaired

Marlee Matlin in a nearly mute performance.

Newman was nominated for best actor for a reprise of his Fast Eddie Felson role in "The Color of Money," a sequel to "The Hustler" of 25 years ago.

Also nominated in the best-actor category were last year's winner, William Hurt, as Miss Matlin's teacher in "Children of a Lesser God," Gordon for "Round Midnight," James Woods for "Salvador" and Bob Hoskins for "Mona Lisa."

"I didn't really expect anything like that, but I was very, very hopeful," Hoskins said in a telephone interview from a London film set.

Hurt said he was "truly pleased" by his nomination.

Woods said he was asleep when the nominations were announced at 5:30 a.m. local time. "I couldn't bring myself to watch it because of the possibility of disappointment," he said. "I'm so amazed. I'm shocked."

Cloris Leachman Celebrates Her 40 Years As An Actress

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — Cloris Leachman, celebrating 40 years as an actress, says she doesn't believe in the "big break" theory of stardom. "My career is really one foot, other foot," she said. "There is no big door to get your foot in. One thing leads to another. The old adage is, 'When the student is ready, the master is at hand.' And my mother always said, 'There's plenty of room at the top.' "The fond myth about actors is that you live in a cold-water flat and struggle until your first break. For me there were people all along the way who made a place for me." Ms. Leachman, winner of an Academy Award, a Golden Globe and five Emmys, is currently starring on NBC's "Facts of Life." She is probably best remembered for her role as Phyllis Lindstrom on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" and later on "Phyllis." She started acting as a teen-ager in Iowa, both on the stage and in radio. When she was 17, Warner Bros. filmed a movie in Des Moines. "Someone from the production saw me in a little play and wrote a part for me in the movie," she said. "But I didn't go off to Hollywood. I went to college." She went to Northwestern University, where her acting classmates included Paul Lynde, Jean Hagen and Charlotte Rae, the woman she replaced in "Facts of Life." "Mostly, I acted in workshops at Northwestern," she said. "But I also went down to the Loop to see about doing some radio. Chicago in those days was a major center of network radio." She also won the Miss Chicago pageant and went on to become runner-up for Miss America.

"It was always clear to me that I was going somewhere," she said. "It didn't matter what road I took, if you have something it's going to come out. When I was 15 I did a play in Iowa and I didn't know the director of the High School Institute at Northwestern was in the audience. So I became a 'cherub' and went to high school there for a year. I went back to Northwestern on another scholarship when I was 18." Ms. Leachman said there are no highlights of her career, but added, "I do have favorites." "One of my favorites almost went by unnoticed. It was an afternoon special I did for no money. I wouldn't compromise. I made it work. It was 'The Woman Who Willed a Miracle.' I got an Emmy for it." "Tears still come inside of me when I think of 'The Migrants.' It took me weeks to recover from that. Ronny Howard and Sissy Spacek played my children. I realized that more than life itself this woman wanted to get her children out of that environment." She won her Oscar in 1971 for her portrayal of the drab wife of a high school coach in "The Last Picture Show." Charlie Chaplin received an honorary award that same year, which reminded her that she was one of three finalists for a role in Chaplin's "Limelight."

"He finally chose Claire Bloom," Ms. Leachman said, "chose the one who looked liked his wife, Oona." Ms. Leachman, who has five children, is divorced from producer George Englund. Her movie credits include "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," "Daisy Miller," "Young Frankenstein" and "High Anxiety." She has also starred in many TV movies. "I always knew I was in for the long haul," she said. "I knew I wasn't a meteor. I consider myself a character actress, and there's longevity there. You have to be honest. You don't hide your age, or hide your mistakes, or hide your foibles or hide your secrets. I've always put it up front and it's allowed me to do what I want."

Of her role on "Facts of Life," she said, "I don't want to give the girls motherly advice. The girls are older now. I think I should try to help them, but not, 'Here's the advice, kids.' I don't think they want to hear that. We're still exploring my role to see who she is." "This is the most straightforward role I've had in a while. I like to lean in a bit. I always knew what to do with Phyllis. She always had a sure and firm touch on the wrong note." As she prepared to return to the studio for more rehearsal, she said, "Forty years. I almost faint."

Priscilla Presley Says 'No' Marriage

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Priscilla Presley, former wife of Elvis Presley, says that although she is expecting a baby she has put aside marriage for now. In the March issue of McCALL'S magazine, she said that after finally winning her independence, she is wary of "signing a piece of paper and being owned by someone, like I was with Elvis." Ms. Presley, who appears regularly on "Dallas," has been living for three years with Marco Garibaldi, a 31-year-old Brazilian writer-director who is the father of the child they are expecting. The fact that he is 11 years her junior doesn't bother Ms. Presley because she says they understand each other and have a mutual admiration for each other's accomplishments and talents. "I couldn't be involved with a man who doesn't feel the way I do about family," she told the magazine. "That was one of the main stumbling blocks in my relationships in the past." Her daughter by Elvis, Lisa Marie, is 19 years old.

ABC Will Use 'Fiction' Notes On Each 'Amerika' Segment

By JAY SHARBUTT
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
NEW YORK — ABC, which has been emphasizing for months that its controversial "Amerika" is only make-believe, said Tuesday that it will open each episode of the seven-part miniseries with a disclaimer noting that the show is fiction. Its announcement came after weeks of negotiations between ABC and the United Nations, which has protested the program's depiction of an oppressive, Soviet-controlled U.N. force occupying the United States 10 years after a bloodless takeover by the Soviet Union.

However, an ABC spokesman said the inclusion of the disclaimer on the program was not made in response to requests from the United Nations. He said ABC decided months ago to include the announcements but delayed announcing it until now. ABC makes no reference to the United Nations in its disclaimer, which the spokesman said would be shown but not spoken at the beginning of each "Amerika" episode. The program premieres Sunday night. "This series is fiction," ABC's disclaimer will say. "The institutions and organizations depicted are not intended to bear any resemblance to today's counterparts." In addition to its vague wording, the pre-show notice to viewers is far shorter than one originally sought by the United Nations — a 90- to 120-second announcement by a U.N. or United Nations Association spokesman. That version would have emphasized that the U.N. forces depicted in ABC's $35 million miniseries "bear no resemblance to the true U.N. peacekeeping forces" serving around the world today. Broadcast of that message had been on a list of requests made of ABC in a Nov. 25 letter sent by Theodore Sorenson, a prominent attorney hired by the United Nations to press its case at the network.

In a telephone interview, Sorenson, a former special counsel to President Kennedy, called the network's disclaimer decision "a constructive move on ABC's part." It is not precisely what he had asked for, he conceded, "but I'm sure you know enough about negotiations to know that there's a difference between what is sought and what is realistically achievable." "I'm far from satisfied with the various steps ABC is taking, but I'm pleased that they at least have made some moves in the right direction."

He said he was still pressing for the airing by ABC — at no cost to the United Nations — of "public-service announcements" designed to bolster public understanding of what the U.N. actually is and does. He also has been seeking a special late-hour "Viewpoint" program Feb. 23, a day after the end of "Amerika," in which "Amerika" and the United Nations could be discussed by a panel including a U.N. spokesman. Although reports quoting "a source close to the U.N." say ABC News has agreed to air such a program, a spokeswoman for the network's news division, Carol Olwert, said Tuesday that a final decision has not yet been made, and may not be made until the middle of next week.

Tomlin Wins Council Award

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Lily Tomlin and writer-director Jane Wagner won California Theater Council awards for their "Search for Intelligent Life in the Universe" stage show. The 11th annual awards were announced Monday at the Beverly Hills Hotel, and Tomlin seemed initially speechless — prompting Wagner to note that first came "the words." "Fame is a terrible price to pay for the loss of your dignity," Tomlin joked. Los Angeles City Councilman Joel Wachs announced that Monday was Lily Tomlin and Jane Wagner Day, but there was only one hour left of it by the time they found out about it. "This is politics instead of art," said Tomlin.

Farrow Comedy

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Mia Farrow will star in a romantic comedy to be filmed at and around Yale University this spring. "Woman Wanted" is based on a novel by Joanna Glass about a woman at war with herself, the state Film Commission said Wednesday. The film will be produced by Richard D. Zanuck and David Brown. Farrow has a home in Bridgewater.

Super Fashion

PALISADES, N.Y. (AP) — Actress Margot Kidder, who as Lois Lane won the Man of Steel's heart, responded in Superman-like fashion when a candle ignited a mattress in her bedroom. By the time police and firefighters arrived, Ms. Kidder and her sister-in-law, Joanna Kidder, had tossed the mattress from the second floor and dumped the sheets in the bathtub. The smoldering fire at the house in Sneden's Landing, an exclusive neighborhood where stars such as Al Pacino and Ellen Burstyn also reside, was put out in minutes early Thursday, authorities said.

Ms. Kidder, who starred in two "Superman" movies, said the house will need a new paint job and all her clothes will have to go to the cleaners.

White House Aide Says 'Crazies' Are Hurting MIA Cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House official says some of the protesters claiming the government is dragging its feet on the POW-MIA issue are "crazies" who are harming U.S. efforts to learn more about missing servicemen in Southeast Asia.

Richard Childress of the National Security Council said Wednesday that protests directed at the administration and the Laotian government have brought complaints from the Laotians.

Childress, who directs Asian affairs, including talks on the POW-MIA issue, for the NSC, said U.S. officials agree the protests are posing difficulties.

"They (the Laotians) told us this kind of activity can inhibit cooperation," Childress said. "It's not helpful to the process. And we agree with them."

Childress also said the government has received word from the Vietnam government that it is interested in continuing technical talks with the United States on the MIA issue, despite a two-month interruption.

He said Vietnamese leadership changes during an internal party congress have not changed its willingness to talk on the issue.

About two dozen people, many of them children of U.S. servicemen shot down over Laos or captured as ground soldiers there during the Vietnam War, attempted to deliver more than 1,500 packages of food, medicine and other items last month to the Laotian Embassy in Washington.

They were blocked by police after depositing about 100 packages, which were addressed to men missing in action in that country and included letters from their families.

The activists contend the Reagan administration has not done enough to press the governments of Vietnam and Laos for information about the missing men or to release any who may still be held alive.

Childress told reporters after an Americana Legion speech Wednesday that Laotian officials complained about the activities of the POW-MIA protesters to U.S. officials both in Washington and in Laos. He said their message was "that this kind of activity can threaten POW-MIA cooperation."

Marine Lance Cpl. Danny G. Wilson recently was awarded the U.S. Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal. He is the son of Jessie M. Wilson of Greenville.

Army Pfc. Richard H. Rice has completed basic training at Fort Jackson, S.C. He is the son of Thomas D. and Joann Rice of Greenville.

Dole Aide Says Campaign Panel Will Be Formed

By RITA BEAMISH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Dole, gaining ground on Vice President George Bush in the opinion polls in the wake of the Iran-Contra scandal, next month will take a step closer to becoming a presidential candidate.

Dole's top political consultant, David Keene, said Wednesday the Kansas Republican will announce March 3 the formation of a presidential exploratory committee.

"We just want to get it done because we want to get out and organize a committee," Keene said in a telephone interview.

Dole, who was Senate majority leader until the Democrats gained control of the Senate in November, will become the fifth Republican hopeful to form a "testing the waters" committee for 1988. The others are: Bush, Rep. Jack Kemp of New York, TV evangelist Pat Robertson and former Sen. Howard Baker of Tennessee. A step ahead of the pack is former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont, who already has declared himself a candidate and set up an official campaign committee.

The exploratory committees can be converted eventually into full-fledged presidential campaign organizations, but until then, they do not have to report to the Federal Election Commission the money they raise and spend.

Dole's committee will be headed by former Rep. Robert Ellsworth, R-Kan., Keene said.

Dole won re-election in November, easily beating a Democrat who raised no money. Dole nonetheless built a huge war chest and came out of the campaign with more than $2 million remaining, more than any other senator. Election law allows for transferring the money, within certain guidelines, into a presidential campaign account should he decide to run.

During the current 10-day Senate recess, Dole has been stumping the nation vigorously, giving speeches and wooing supporters from Hawaii to New Hampshire and Mississippi to Wisconsin.

Dole is married to Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole and was the GOP vice presidential nominee in 1976. He made an unsuccessful presidential bid in 1980.

Among GOP presidential aspirants, Dole appears to be the principal beneficiary in public opinion as details have emerged about the administration's secret arms sales to Iran and alleged diversion of profits to the Contra rebels fighting Nicaragua's leftist government.

But Dole said Wednesday night in Kansas City that he wouldn't use the controversy and its political fallout against Bush.

"If it (political fallout) happens, it happens," Dole said at a news conference, adding that, "I'm not out to do in George Bush."

The Reagan administration's description of the U.S. contacts in Iran as "moderates" was shaken by disclosure this week of a memo showing that an Israeli official told Bush last summer that the United States was dealing with "radical" factions.

Still, Dole said, "I don't think I benefited and I don't think the vice president has been hurt" by the disclosures.

Bush had been recognized as the early front-runner but has suffered in polls since the Iran-Contra controversy blew up in November.

A recent Washington Post-ABC survey of Republicans found Bush the first choice of 35 percent of those surveyed, to 20 percent for Dole. A similar poll last February showed Bush with 42 percent, to 13 percent for Dole.

An Iowa survey taken over the last few weeks for the Des Moines Register showed Dole moving up to 33 percent, compared with 28 percent for Bush. The gap is within the poll's 6 percent margin of error.

An Iowa survey in December showed Dole with 28 percent, to 25 percent for Bush. Last May, before the Iran controversy developed, a poll showed Bush the favorite with 34 percent, to 16 percent for Dole.

Bush Avoids Iran-Contra Issue In Trying To Revive Candidacy

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
LANSING, Mich. (AP) — Like a polite guest at a party, Vice President George Bush isn't raising the issue of the Iran-Contra controversy on his own.

He's waiting to be asked.

At the first stop of a two-day Midwest trip, Bush praised the accomplishments of "this Republican administration" in a Lincoln Day speech Wednesday night. But he made no mention of the controversy that has clouded the Reagan presidency and appears to be sapping his own political strength.

"He's said all he knows about this" subject, said Craig L. Fuller, Bush's chief of staff.

"Any speech he's given for the past month he's touched upon it. I don't think there's a need to put it in every speech," the aide said.

The subject is certain to come up today, though, when Bush holds a news conference before leaving Michigan. The vice president's schedule also includes a stop in Springfield, Ill., where the nation's 16th president practiced law before winning the White House, and where he is buried.

Bush's two-state trip is the leading edge of a series of forays in the next several weeks in which the vice president will be trying to protect his standing as front-runner in the early going for the 1988 Republican presidential nomination.

In recent months, the vice president has seen Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., narrow the gap in public opinion polls. The change has occurred at the same time as the controversy has unfolded concerning the secret sale of U.S. arms to Iran and apparent diversion of profits to Contra rebels battling the Nicaragua government.

Dole, whose top political consultant said Wednesday that he soon will announce the formation of a presidential exploratory committee, said Wednesday night in Kansas City that he would not use the Iran-Contra issue to take advantage of Bush.

"If it (political fallout) happens, it happens," said Dole, who has called the sale of arms to Iran a "big mistake." "I'm not out to do in George Bush."

The Reagan administration's description of the U.S. contacts in Iran as "moderates" was shaken this week by disclosure of a memo showing Israeli officials told Bush last summer that the United States was dealing with "radical" factions.

Still, Dole said, "I don't think I benefited and I don't think the vice president has been hurt" by the disclosures.

In Michigan, where the first delegates will be picked next winter for the 1988 Republican National Convention, Bush co-chairman Peter Secchia said the U.S.-Iran issue has added an air of uncertainty to the campaign.

But the vice president made no mention either of the controversy or its effect on his political future as he addressed the traditional Lincoln Day dinner in Michigan.

Instead, he praised what he said was "an outstanding job of leading America" the administration has compiled in six years, and threw a few barbs the Democrats' way.

"During the past six years, we have engineered an economic revival unmatched in the history of the United States. We are now in the 50th consecutive month of economic expansion," Bush said.

He took credit for Republicans for enactment of the tax revision bill that was approved with bipartisan support in Congress, and noted that 6 million low income Americans have been removed from the tax rolls.

"If the Democrats think they have a better anti-poverty, pro-family program, I would like to see it," he said.

Citing another issue, Bush said "dedication to preserving our nation's security has also been among the most important distinctions between our party and the Democrats. We are the party that stands for a strong America."

Southern Democrats Find Candidates' List Lacking

By PAUL TAYLOR
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service
WASHINGTON — In three of the last five presidential elections, the Democratic Party hasn't had a Southerner on its ticket. In those contests, it carried one Southern state, Texas, once.

Outside of Texas once, the Democrats, in losing the 1968, 1972 and 1984 elections, were skunked 0 for 32 among the states of the Old Confederacy that had for a century before been a base of Democratic support.

Those kind of results concentrate the mind. In 1985, Southern statehouse Democrats — tired of national candidates who didn't hunt at home — came up with a plan to bunch their primaries and caucuses at the beginning of the 1988 nomination calendar.

The idea was to flex the region's muscle and, maybe, to nominate a native son.

The rescheduling came off without a hitch. All the Deep South states are expected to hold their primaries or caucuses on Mega-Tuesday, March 8, 1988, or the following Saturday. (A handful of non-Southern states also are scheduled for the same dates.)

But finding a Southern candidate to vote for has proved far more elusive. No Southerner is yet in the race, and while four names continue to be bandied about with a varying mix of hope and enthusiasm — Sen. Sam Nunn, Ga.; Sen. Dale Bumpers, Ark.; Gov. Bill Clinton of Arkansas and former governor Charles Robb of Virginia — it's not clear if any will take the plunge.

Southern leaders insist that the absence of a Southern candidate wouldn't nullify the wisdom of their strategy. "As a guy who sat in on those closed-door meetings, I can tell you without the hint of a blush that the point of the exercise was not to have a Southern candidate," said Robert Slagle, chairman of the Texas Democratic Party. "It was to have a candidate to emerge who would speak to the issues the South is interested in."

He added: "If the candidate turned out to be a Southerner, well, that certainly wouldn't hurt."

In 1858, the county's courthouse was destroyed by a blaze supposedly set by a man trying to destroy a will. In 1910, the courthouse burned again.

Caller Prompts Tea Bag Search

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, N.J. (AP) — About 10,000 cheese packages have been removed from a supermarket's shelves after a lethal dose of cyanide was found in a tea bag in the store, officials said.

The tainted tea bag was found at a Super Fresh supermarket here after an anonymous caller posing as a newspaper reporter told the store he was investigating a report that cyanide had been placed in a tea bag and some cheese.

"We don't have a reason to believe any cheese at any other store is contaminated," state Health Department spokeswoman Leigh Cook said Wednesday. She said no tainted cheese had turned up at the Princeton Township store, either.

No injuries as a result of the tampering were reported, authorities said. The caller, who telephoned the market Tuesday night, said he had been told that cyanide was placed in a tea bag and cheese, according to officials. He reportedly said he had been told the poison had been placed in the tea bag to give credibility to the threat of cyanide in the cheese.

The tea bag was found in a location given by the caller and all cheese products and tea were pulled from the shelves, Ms. Cook said. Tests conducted Wednesday by the Health Department and the federal Food and Drug Administration found no additional poison, she said.

About 10,000 cheese packages were removed from the shelves and about 200 randomly sent to the FDA and the Health Department for analysis, Ms. Cook said. She said she did not know how many of the 200 packages had been analyzed by late Wednesday.

However, the Health Department laboratory analyzed the tea bag and determined it contained a lethal dose of the poison, Ms. Cook said. She said the brand of tea bag that was contaminated is not carried by the store.

Super Fresh Markets Inc. issued a recall for any cheese products purchased at the supermarket near Princeton University, said the supermarket's area manager, Dennis Chalela. Authorities urged supermarket patrons not to eat any cheese purchased at the store.

Health officials suspect the caller was the same person who tampered with the tea bag, Ms. Cook said.

The FBI, FDA and local authorities were investigating, she said. Mercer County Prosecutor Pete Koenig would not comment on whether there were any suspects.

On Labor Day, 27-year-old Louis Denber of the southern New Jersey town of Runnemede died after eating cyanide-laced chicken noodle soup.

The case is unsolved, as are the deaths of the 10 other people nationwide who ingested cyanide-tainted consumer products in recent years.

FBI investigators have said all the killings may be random. No one has been charged in any of the deaths.

Alaskan Senator Tries To Hush Tales Of Cold

JUNEAU, Alaska (AP) — Cold weather and snow in Alaska? Not if a state legislator has his way.

Sen. Mitch Abood says he's concerned about the state's image and its tourist industry, and suggested Wednesday that words like "snow" and "cold" not be used.

While Abood was making his sunny speech to fellow legislators, the temperature in Prudhoe Bay was 45 below zero and a 40 mph wind was knocking people off their feet here.

The argument began when a resolution asking Congress for federal highway funds referred to Alaska's "harsh environment."

"I don't think we should be using that type of word when we're doing everything we can to attract the tourism industry," Abood said. "We've got to eliminate such words as 'harsh,' 'ice,' 'snow,' 'ice-bound' — things of that nature."

He suggested "harsh" be changed to "unique."

Sen. Mike Szymanski protested. "I've always been a believer in truth in advertising," Szymanski said.

Abood's colleagues eventually agreed to the change after giving him a bit of ribbing.

"Obviously we're having unique weather out there today — it's blowing about 40 miles per hour and snowing," said Sen. Dick Eliason.

In 1985, Pitt County's average weekly manufacturing wage was $332.98.

Subversion

VIENNA, Austria (AP) — A leading human rights activist in Czechoslovakia has been charged with subversion of the republic in co-operation with a foreign power, the London-based Palach Press reported.

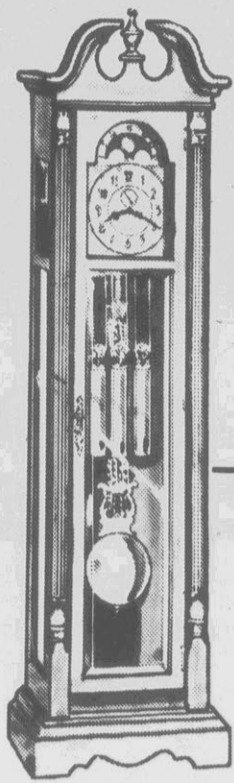

It said Petr Pospichal of the Czech Committee for the Defense of the Unjustly Prosecuted faces up to 10 years in prison if convicted.

Pospichal, 26, was arrested in January and appealed to Polish organizations and the West for help, it said, adding that he had been in contact with Poland's banned Solidarity free trade federation. The reason for the charge was not clear, and there was no word on when Pospichal would be tried.

Palach Press is a private monitoring service on dissident activity in Communist-ruled Czechoslovakia and has been reliable in the past.

Study Downplays Dangers Of Estrogen-Based Therapy

By RAY FORMANEK Jr.
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The benefits of a female hormone taken by women to diminish the symptoms of menopause or to prevent bone deterioration, strokes and heart attacks outweigh the risks, a new study indicates.

Most women who have had their ovaries removed and undergo estrogen replacement therapy don't face an increased risk of breast cancer, say researchers at the Federal Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

But the risk doubled for those women if they were between 50 and 54 years old or if an immediate female relative had developed breast cancer, the researchers said.

"It's important to emphasize that overall, there was no significant increase" because of the use of estrogen, said Dr. Peter M. Layde, an epidemiologist for the CDC and a co-author of the study.

"There was a increase in risk for some women who had had their ovaries removed, but some of that is chance and you would expect to see some cases," Layde said. "We can't rule out that part of the reason was estrogen replacement therapy."

"But the significance of this study is that ... the number is probably not too great."

The study, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, involved nearly 1,400 women with breast cancer and more than 1,600 randomly selected control subjects.

"Although our study is the largest case-control series to comprehensively consider the relationship between breast cancer and ERT (estrogen replacement therapy), it can only address the association between breast cancer and ERT in postmenopausal woman younger than 55 years of age," the report said.

DURHAM — Duke University Medical Center researchers say a drug known generically as alprazolam has brought some relief to all 17 victims of panic attacks who have participated in an ongoing study here.

"The study is based on the premise that panic attacks are chemically induced and can be controlled by medication," said Dr. Redford B. Williams, professor of psychiatry and director of the Duke Behavioral Medicine Research Center.

"The evidence suggests alprazolam may counteract an inherited sensitivity to lactate, or lactic acid, a chemical produced naturally in the body," he said.

By defining the drug's action, Williams said, researchers may be able to develop more effective diagnosis and treatment for this often misunderstood, potentially disabling anxiety disorder.

Study participant Joseph Koger III of Eden said the drug has been 95 percent effective in relieving the panic attacks that have plagued him for 11 years.

"I could talk for hours about how debilitating the distressing these attacks are," Koger said in a telephone interview. "I know some people become shut-ins because of them. I've been determined not to let that happen to me."

Williams said panic attacks usually begin with a vague feeling that something is wrong. Anxiety quickly grows into an overwhelming sense of impending doom.

Many victims are convinced they are dying, according to study collaborator Dr. Charles B. Nemeroff.

The feeling may be reinforced by chest pain, heart palpitations, a choking or smothering sensation, hot and cold flashes, dizziness, sweating and nausea.

Panic attacks can occur weeks or months apart or as often as six or seven times a day. "Some say they worry about it 90 percent of the time," Williams said. "They think they're going crazy or that they have a strange disease."

Fearing the possibility of an attack, victims may avoid public places or stressful situations. And because the disorder is difficult to diagnose, Williams said, many end up being treated for depression or other medical problems.

The Duke study is open to men and women ages 18 to 60 who have panic attacks. Participants receive free diagnosis and may be given free medication for up to eight weeks. For more information, call 684-2941 and ask for the panic study.

"At first I was skeptical," Koger admitted, "but Dr. (Ranga R.) Krishnan told me they considered panic attacks treatable because they were chemical in nature. It came as a tremendous relief." Krishnan, a Duke psychiatrist, is also involved in the study.

Koger, 27, designs computer software for heavy industry. He works in Martinsville, Va., near his hometown. He said he had learned to cope with panic attacks.

"But I was expending 50 percent of my energy on them," Koger said. "It meant I had to work twice as hard to accomplish the things I wanted to."

The attacks began when he was in high school and were so sudden, intense and frequent that he dropped out of school. His reaction was typical. "I thought I was going crazy."

After two years of psychotherapy, he was still having attacks, but made a personal decision "to continue with my life in spite of them." That meant completing high school and going on to college, where he made the dean's list as a music major.

"I learned to cope with it. I did all the things other college students do, but inside I was racked by these attacks. I convinced myself that they were due to a chemical imbalance and worked as hard as I could to prove that they were not controlling my life."

His sister heard about the Duke study on a local television station. "It was frightening at first," Koger said. "Part of the study involves a lactate infusion that provokes a panic attack in people who are sensitive to it."

"It took some coaxing on their part," he said, "but I am very glad I went through it. The attack I had in the lab was relatively mild. If I had to, I'd go through it 10 times over again. I felt like I was finally doing something about this."

Since taking alprazolam, Koger said he has more energy to devote to other things. "I feel that I am free to do anything that I want to," he said "that I can enjoy life more and live to my full potential."

Search For Ulcers

BOSTON (AP) — Many ulcer victims do not produce enough natural antacid to protect their intestines from digestive juices, and this may be a major factor among the elusive causes of their misery, new research concludes.

More than 3 million Americans suffer ulcer flareups each year, yet the cause of the illness remains a mystery in most cases. Contrary to popular belief, there is little firm evidence that stress is a significant cause of ulcers.

In the latest study, doctors found that most people with duodenal ulcers — by far the most common variety — produce significantly less bicarbonate than usual in their intestinal linings. Bicarbonate protects the system from the strong acids needed to digest food.

They said this impaired secretion "may be an important factor" in both the cause and the frequency of recurrence of duodenal ulcers. If so, their finding could help open up new strategies for treating and preventing this common disease.

Dr. Jon I. Isenberg, the study's director, said that for many years the focus in ulcer research has been on "aggressive factors," such as high acid production, that might cause the disease.

"This is the first paper that demonstrates that patients with duodenal ulcer disease, in whom the disease is inactive, have impairment of a defensive factor, that being bicarbonate secretion," he said in an interview.

Scorpion Farm

PEKING (AP) — A young man who got rich by raising poisonous scorpions for medicinal purposes was praised today for contributing to technological progress.

Zhou Jihu, 27, of Wuhan has made $27,000 since setting up his scorpion farm last year, and he now employs 14 people, the official Xinhua News Agency said.

"Zhou's scorpion-raising techniques have become so renowned that he has been given 1.5 million yuan ($405,000) for a state-funded research project," Xinhua said.

Poisonous scorpions are highly prized for making traditional Chinese medicines to treat symptoms of rheumatism, headaches and other pains.

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

Study Of Animals May Provide Lead In Alzheimer's Research

NEW YORK (AP) — Brains from aged dogs, monkeys and a polar bear show lump-like plaques similar to those found in Alzheimer's victims, suggesting that clues to the disease may be found in animal experiments, a researcher says.

Although the animals did not have Alzheimer's, further studies might lead to an animal version of at least part of the disease, said Dr. Dennis Selkoe of Harvard's Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Scientists have not yet found an animal version of Alzheimer's, which would allow more experimentation than is now possible.

Selkoe's research focused on amyloid, a fibrous material that makes up the plaques found in brains of Alzheimer's victims. Such plaques also appear in normal aging, but Alzheimer's victims accumulate them in greater numbers. Nobody knows what role they may play in the disease.

The aged-animal experiment involved nine dogs older than 12 years, three rhesus monkeys, two squirrel monkeys, an orangutan and a polar bear, Selkoe said Monday in an interview.

Scientists had known that aged monkeys developed plaques, but in the new work, tests showed the plaques in the aged animal brains to be chemically indistinguishable from those found in Alzheimer's patients, Selkoe said.

Such plaques were absent in younger animals, he said.

Scientists now should see if there are aged monkeys whose brains show an abundance of plaques along with cognitive impairment characteristic of Alzheimer's, he said.

"My gut feeling is that it's likely that there are," he said.

Scientists could also see if adding amyloid to the brains of younger animals brings on Alzheimer's, he said. Without such a cause-and-effect demonstration, "we don't know that amyloid is really the bad guy," he said.

Selkoe described his research after receiving a $250,000 Metropolitan Life Foundation award for medical research. An also award went to another Alzheimer's expert, Peter Davies of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York.

An estimated 2.5 million American adults suffer from Alzheimer's, and more than 100,000 die from it each year, according to the Alzheimer's Disease and Related Disorders Association Inc.

Most victims are older than 65.

Space Station Allies Discuss Policy Problems

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The four international partners in the 1990s space station are meeting for the first time, trying to settle such divisive issues as Pentagon use of the space station and whether the United States will have veto power over big decisions.

The talks are secret, but the State Department's Andrew Parker said a joint statement might be issued after they end today.

The United States has met separately previously with representatives of the European Space Agency, Japan and Canada, but all four partners have not gathered together before, Parker said.

It is also the first meeting since the Defense Department let it be known it wants to preserve an option of doing research on the station and to have that written into any international agreements.

In congressional hearings, the military had always professed no interest in the manned station, which is to orbit Earth at low altitudes. The civilian and scientific nature of the station had been emphasized in U.S. proposals to other nations to join in the venture.

After negotiations, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Defense Department on Feb. 4 worked out specifics to be presented at the partners meeting. A high-level group, including representatives of the State, Commerce and Transportation departments approved the United States position.

None of the government agencies would give details of the content.

"It's a broad, policy-type document — a piece of paper that the international partners will all read and respond to," said Mark Hess, spokesman for NASA's space station office. "It's not the kind of thing you can hand out and read."

In testimony last week, NASA Administrator James C. Fletcher said the military would put no major weapons systems on the station but that it might do research. Asked whether that included weapons research, he replied: "In terms of laser beams, no, but research on semiconductors would be fair game."

Lt. Col. Don Brownlee, a Defense Department spokesman, said the Pentagon's recently expressed interest was not a reversal of policy but an effort to prevent language barring research from being written into any international agreements.

"We still really don't know whether we have any potential uses or requirements," Brownlee said. "But as a contingency it's important."

The European Space Agency, which represents 11 member states, is expected to contribute more than $2 billion for the module it plans to attach to the station. Japan is committed for $1 billion for its module and Canada for $800 million to be used on a "garage" at which visiting spacecraft will dock.

The United States, which has said it will go ahead with or without the others, had estimated the cost at $8 billion. But Fletcher said it certainly would go higher and that $13 billion was "in the ballpark."

The European delegation is headed by George van Reeth, ESA's director of administration.

ESA officials have said NASA insists it should retain the right of veto over all major decisions.

"When you have a number of partners you also have to protect certain minority rights," said Reimar Lust, director general of ESA, at an international space technology meeting in France in December. "We could never give a blank check to NASA; we need guarantees."

Navy Cuts Down On Required Runs For Fitness Tests

By GEORGE C. WILSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The 238,000 Navy members in the Pacific Fleet have been warned not to jog themselves to death, and fitness tests that require running by the command's men and women 45 and older have been scrapped.

Declaring that "heart attacks are taking the lives of too many members," Adm. James A. "Ace" Lyons Jr. has ordered, "effective immediately," that those in his command 45 and older need only walk briskly for three miles, not run 1½ miles, to be declared physically fit.

Lyons' order, issued last Thursday, amounts to the most significant attack on jogging by a military leader. Navy officials conceded here that they were startled to learn that Lyons had taken it upon himself to change the service's worldwide fitness requirements, if only for his own command.

"He's the admiral," one Navy official said, "and, if you're in the Pacific, his standards are the ones you follow unless the CNO (chief of naval operations) changes them."

The requirement scuttled by Lyons still applies to the other 345,000 members of the Navy. It states that, in fitness tests conducted every six months, men aged 40 to 49 must run 1½ miles in no more than 16 minutes 30 seconds and women in no more than 18 minutes 15 seconds.

Lyons' directive apparently was prompted in part by the death Jan. 19 of Rear Adm. Jack N. Darby, 50, the Pacific submarine-force commander, who had a heart attack after his morning run.

Darby was found dead on the floor at home after returning from his customary early-morning jog. Lyons said: "His death is a tragedy, a loss not only to the Navy but also to our country."

Men in the Pacific Command 45 and older now can satisfy the running requirement by walking three miles in 45 minutes 34 seconds. The time for women is 48 minutes 55 seconds.

"The Navy can ill-afford to lose more personnel to unnecessary heart attacks," Lyons said in the directive. "My bottom line is I expect you to be physically fit. I don't expect you to die getting there."

"We are not all built alike," wrote Lyons, who is on the portly side. "While stressful exercise may be fine for certain individuals, it may not be for others. Certainly, as one gets older, it is not prudent to overtax oneself. ..."

"Recent deaths involving shipmates with known family histories of heart disease and indications of excessive physical stress require that we review methods to minimize the potential for heart failure," Lyons wrote.

He ordered that those in his command over 45 be examined by an internist and cardiologist before a "strenuous exercise" program such as running.

Navy personnel are required to take fitness tests twice a year. One part requires men and women to run 1½ miles in at least these times:

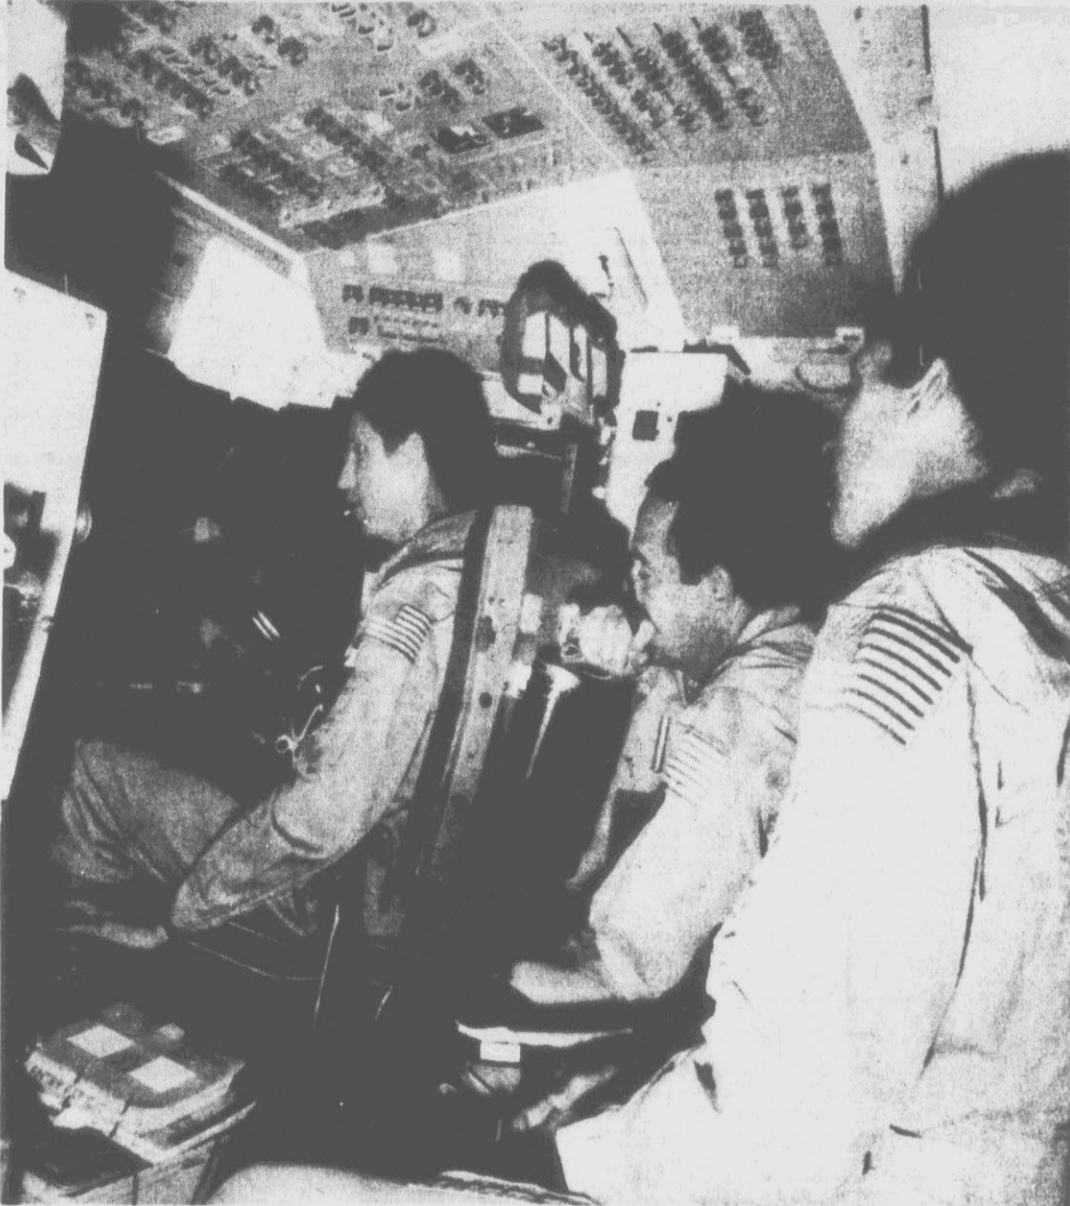

Age 17-19, men, 12 minutes, 45 seconds; women, 16 minutes, 15 seconds; age 20-29, men 13:45, women 16:45; age 30-39, men 15:30, women 17:15; age 40-49, men 16:30, women 18:15; 50 and above, men 17:00, women 19:00.

A Navy Personnel Command spokesman said Tuesday that Lyons' order is "under review" to determine if running tests should be eased throughout the Navy.

In the directive, entitled "Physical Fitness and Heart Attacks," Lyons said that "even with a clean bill of health from medical experts, one can overstress his/her system. Physical fitness is the goal. Overdoing exercise does not accomplish it."

Dr. Barry J. Maron, a cardiologist and researcher at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute of the National Institutes of Health, said data on whether jogging does one more harm than good are "not comprehensive and not conclusive."

He said medical experts generally agree, however, that a brisk three-mile walk does as much good for health as a 1½-mile jog. "It's in the same kind of ballpark," Maron said.

AMA Official Says Patients' Histories Should Be Secret

By LINDSEY TANNER
Associated Press Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — The public, employers and insurance companies have no right to know an individual's medical history unless the condition is a threat to society, even if the patient is a doctor or public figure, an American Medical Association executive says.

Recent publicity over Liberace's death and a Cook County Hospital doctor's infection with AIDS is not in the public interest, said Dr. James S. Todd, the AMA's senior deputy executive vice president.

Todd discussed medical-records confidentiality Wednesday with four other panelists representing hospitals, insurers and a hospital-review agency at the American College of Healthcare Executives' 30th annual meeting.

He criticized the news media's "insatiable desire to know what's going on."

Noting that AIDS is not spread by casual contact, Todd said a person who shook Liberace's hand at a Las Vegas show doesn't need to know the pianist suffered from AIDS.

But Dr. Dennis O'Leary, who once served as President Reagan's attending physician, argued that publicity surrounding Liberace's death last week may have been justified because information may have been improperly withheld on the death certificate.

"Anytime you become a public figure, you do yield some of your right to privacy," said O'Leary, now head of the Joint Commission on Accreditation of Hospitals.

Todd also said the name of the Cook County Hospital doctor with AIDS, suspended last week but later reinstated to restricted duty with no patient contact, should remain confidential.

There's virtually no chance a doctor would transmit the disease to patients if he followed proper guidelines, Todd said, adding it's up to a physician to notify patients.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome destroys the body's immune system, leaving the victim prey to life-threatening infection. It is caused by a virus, believed transmitted by blood or semen.

Employers should not have access to an individual's medical records unless an employee or applicant suffers from a disease that could affect job performance, Todd said. Individual health records should be withheld from insurance companies providing group employee coverage, he added.

O'Leary said if an individual tests positive for AIDS antibodies, meaning he has been exposed to the disease, it's the responsibility of the individual — not a hospital or doctor — to report it to the employer or insurance company.

But such a finding is not an employer's concern, unless the individual's job carries a risk of transmission, Todd said.

He noted some life insurance companies won't write policies for those who test positive for AIDS exposure, even if the individual has not developed the disease.

Insurers increasingly are pressured by corporations for information on workers' medical history, said Kenneth Krispin, executive vice president of Mass Insurance Consultants Administrators Inc.

"If you're putting out billions of dollars a year" to provide health care to employees, Krispin said, "then don't you have a right to know?"

The college adopted a confidentiality policy at its five-day meeting that includes a call for medical workers to limit access to patient information to authorized staff only, and to "adopt a specialized process to protect sensitive information such as psychiatric or substance abuse treatment records."

The college is a Chicago-based professional society of more than 20,000 health-care professionals worldwide.

Bio-Chem Industry Wins Fight On Genetics

By PHILIP J. HILTS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The Environmental Protection Agency Wednesday re-approved a controversial genetic engineering experiment to help retard frost formation on strawberries.

The action is one in a series of regulatory victories for the biotechnology industry, following years of battles in court and with government agencies over testing of their products.

The test, which involves spraying genetically-engineered bacteria on a small test patch of strawberries, will be carried out by Advanced Genetic Sciences, Inc. of Oakland, Calif. The company has had its experiments delayed for the past two years by protests, court actions, and EPA disciplinary action in which the company was found to have violated federal rules by spraying the bacteria on trees rather than keeping it contained in a laboratory.

The company was required to do new safety tests and to choose new, more remote sites than those readied for earlier tests. The three sites now approved are in Northern California, including two some miles from Hollister in San Benito County and one near Bryon in Contra Costa County. All the sites are in relatively remote, unincorporated areas, said an EPA press spokesman.

The experiments involve spraying the plants with bacteria that will help block the formation of frost, lowering the temperature at which it forms by as many as seven degrees Fahrenheit.

Alan Goldhammer, spokesman for the Industrial Biotechnology Association, a Washington-based trade association, said: "We're pleased to see that the experiment is going ahead." He added that the action could put a frost-blocking product "on the road to commercialization."

In other action recently, two lawsuits filed by gene-engineering opponent Jeremy Rifkin were dismissed in federal court. The suits sought to block the federal rules intended to coordinate federal regulation of the biotechnology industry.

Rifkin said the federal guidelines were inadequate to prevent ecological problems from biotechnology experiments, but attacked the federal rules on the grounds that they did not comply with the Administrative Procedures Act and the National Environmental Policy Act.

U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Gesell dismissed the suits, saying that Rifkin failed to show that any federal agency action had caused environmental injury, and specifically no injury which would affect Rifkin and give him standing to sue.

In another action, the EPA last Friday received its first application for a biotechnology experiment under the Toxic Substances Control Act. Biotechnica International, Inc., of Cambridge, Mass. has proposed to put a newly-engineered strain of a common bacterium on alfalfa plants in an attempt to increase their yield.

Radiologic Process Detects Osteoporosis

DURHAM — As people, especially women, age, their bones begin to weaken because calcium is being leached out.

The disorder is known as osteoporosis, and while medical researchers are still debating why it happens, a recently developed radiologic technique, now in use at Duke University Medical Center, can catch the problem earlier and follow it more closely than was possible in the past.

"Many researchers believe that Quantitative Computed Tomography (QCT) is the most sensitive way to detect and monitor the loss of bone density," said Dr. James B. Vogler, assistant professor of radiology. At present, Duke is one of only a handful of medical centers in the region with QCT.

Broken bones, which can result from the loss of bone density, are not usually a serious matter. However, in the elderly they can be a big problem, particularly hip fractures, Vogler said. "Research has found that hip fractures in the elderly are associated with a high mortality rate. Lengthy bed rest can start a downward spiral in an older person."

QCT can help with this problem in several ways, Vogler said. "Because QCT is sensitive to minute bone loss, we can tell when to use particular treatments. Since the treatments may have side-effects, some more dramatic than others, this is very helpful. Also, the process allows us to see whether the treatments are making progress or not and whether we need to increase the dosage."

Before QCT, it could take two years for monitoring devices to detect changes in bone density. Now changes can be seen in as little as three to six months.

"There seems to be a 'fracture threshold,' and once bones fall below this density level, they are almost certain to break. If, by treatment, we can keep people above the threshold, we may prevent serious problems," Vogler said.

QCT uses basic computed tomography techniques that are not really new. However, a rectangular cushion that contains varying degrees of bone density is placed under the patient, and, after an x-ray-like picture is made, a computer is used to compare bone densities in the body to areas in the cushion.

"The computer can be very precise in comparing the densities. Also, it measures the differences in percents, which reveals the minute quantities we need to know about," Vogler said.

Nuclear medicine techniques previously used to measure bone density are not as sensitive to certain types of bone loss as QCT and require that the patient be injected with radioactive tracers.

Giveaway

WASHINGTON (AP) — G.D. Searle & Co. said Wednesday it will make $10 million worth of a newly approved high blood pressure medicine available to doctors for free distribution to poor patients.

Rep. Henry A. Waxman, D-Calif., joining company officials for the announcement in a House office building, called the program "a very small step that's going to help a lot of people" and challenged other drug companies to offer similar programs.

Company officials insisted the plan was not conceived as a marketing gimmick to promote the drug Calan.

DNA Test Can Detect Disease

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — University of North Carolina researchers have successfully used DNA testing to determine whether a child will be born with cystic fibrosis.

A test conducted on the sweat of a one-month-old Fayetteville boy confirmed what scientists have been saying since last summer — that the boy will not suffer from cystic fibrosis — as his older sister does.

Cystic fibrosis is the most common lethal genetic disease among whites.

"What this revolutionary test does is to offer families who already have one child with cystic fibrosis the possibility of having another child who they will know in advance will be free of the disease," said Dr. Robert E. Wood, associate professor and the child's physician at UNC-Chapel Hill.

"A lot of families who have been touched by this illness have said they would like to have another child, but have been afraid to," Wood said. "Now we can give them a definitive answer by the fourth month of pregnancy which is early enough to terminate the pregnancy and try again if they want."

The Fayetteville, whose name was not released, was "ecstatic" at the good news, Wood said.

The child's mother had had amniotic fluid drawn from her uterus in July so that the DNA testing could be performed. Within a few weeks, she was told her son would carry the cystic fibrosis gene but would not develop the disease. The traditional sweat test was done to prove that her baby is normal and healthy.

General Motors Says 39 Passenger Models Will Be Dropped By 1990

By WARREN BROWN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — General Motors Corp., often criticized for redundancy in its vehicle offerings, said Wednesday it will remove 39 passenger car models from its lineup by 1990.

GM officials did not identify the cars targeted for phaseout. But auto industry analysts familiar with the plan said it would affect many of the company's front-wheel-drive com-compact and midsize cars and virtually all of its rear-wheel-drive full-size cars.

"Essentially what you're going to have is a consolidation of body styles," said Chris Cedergren, automotive analyst with J.D. Power and Associates, a California marketing research firm.

For example, the compact, front-wheel-drive J-car shared by GM's five automotive divisions probably will be restricted to the Chevrolet division, Cedergren said. That means the probable elimination of the Cadillac Cimarron, Buick Skyhawk, Oldsmobile Firenza and Pontiac Sunbird, leaving the Chevrolet Cavalier as the sole member of the J-car family, Cedergren said.

Two-door coupes in the Buick Electra and Oldsmobile 98 Regency lines also might get the boot. Other analysts expect the huge, aging, rear-wheel-drive Chevrolet Caprice to get cut along with the company's big station wagons — the Pontiac Safari, Oldsmobile Custom Cruiser and the Buick Estate.

The cuts would reduce GM's lineup by 22 percent, to 136 models from 175 in 1986. The reductions should yield more notable styling differences among the company's Buick, Cadillac, Chevrolet, Oldsmobile and Pontiac divisions, GM Chairman Roger B. Smith said.

"This has been our product plan for some time. We've been like a hockey team with too many players on the ice. We need fewer players," Smith said in an interview after the release of a letter to stockholders describing GM's product and business plans.

GM sold 4.7 million cars in the United States last year for a 41.1 percent share of the total U.S. auto market, down from a 42.7 percent share in 1985. The planned model reduction does not mean GM will sell fewer cars in coming years. But the move should demonstrate to stockholders that the company is serious about reducing costs and turning out better products, Smith said.

GM will continue pushing for cost reductions, which are expected to amount to $3 billion in 1987 and an accumulated annual savings of $10 billion by 1990, Smith said.

GM Transmission Suit Settled

CHICAGO (AP) — Nearly 5 million consumers will be reimbursed from a $19.5 million out-of-court settlement with General Motors Corp. for automatic transmission repairs made on 1976-1980 GM vehicles.

"It's been a long time coming," Arlie G. Skelton Jr. said Wednesday after a federal judge approved the settlement. Nearly eight years ago, Skelton sued GM, claiming the transmission in his Oldsmobile Delta 88 was too small for the car.

Skelton now stands to be reimbursed for a $458 repair bill.

Under the 40-page agreement approved Wednesday by U.S. District Judge John A. Nordberg, original owners of certain GM vehicles are to be notified by the automaker and reimbursed for as much as 90 percent of the cost of repairing the transmissions.

Attorney Abraham Goldman, who represented plaintiffs in the class-action lawsuit, said the settlement includes a $14.4 million repair fund, a $2.5 million reserve to cover any additional repair costs and $2.6 million in legal fees.

At issue were about 4.7 million Chevrolets, Pontiacs, Oldsmobiles, Buicks and Cadillac Sevelles equipped with GM's Turbohydramatic-200 automatic transmissions.

The lawsuit, filed in March 1979, challenged GM's use of the THM-200 transmission in cars that usually carried the larger, more durable and more costly THM-350.
