Howell Says Farewell

CHAPEL HILL — The University of North Carolina Board of Governors has established a system where "fairness and common sense have prevailed," outgoing East Carolina University Chancellor Dr. John M. Howell told the board today.

"All parts of the system have flourished and a statewide responsibility for educational opportunity for those who were capable of being educated and wanted to be educated has been discharged," Howell said in his final speech as ECU chancellor to the board of governors.

"I urge you not only to keep it that way but to pass that tradition on to your successors. If you do, some chancellor who is retiring in 3000 or 4000 could note that the University of North Carolina is among the oldest organizations in the world."

Howell, who is retiring and will be replaced by Dr. Richard R. Eakin on March 1, has served as ECU chancellor since 1982.

School Board Orders New Attendance Plans

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Education on Thursday asked the staff to prepare long-term and short-term proposals for school attendance areas that would provide an equal education for all students while racially balancing the schools, providing for a consistent organizational grade pattern, allowing for construction and avoiding a segregated inner-city system.

In response to a board directive at the Feb. 2 meeting, the county school staff prepared a report reviewing the above criteria for drawing attendance lines for the school system and the impact those criteria would have on the school system. After discussing the report and reviewing the two alternative attendance line proposals prepared for presentation at the Feb. 2 meeting but never addressed, board members asked that the staff prepare both a short-term and a long-term proposal combining the previous options and using the criteria as goals.

An overflow crowd of concerned citizens stood in the hall of the Pitt County offices during the meeting. The workshop session was for discussion by the board; there was no public participation at the meeting. No action can be taken at a workshop session.

According to the report prepared by the staff, there is an equitable education program for all students in the county. The report states that of the 19 honors courses listed, 18 will be offered at every high school, and that there is a college preparatory level of every course required for graduation offered at every high school.

Using the criteria of a consistent grade pattern for the school system, the report notes that the school system would consist of 18 elementary schools housing grades kindergarten through five; seven middle schools for grades six through eight, and five high schools with grades nine through 12. The grade distribution at many of the schools would be changed in order to provide a consistent grade pattern.

Racial balancing by grade level consistent with school system ratios would require additional busing. In the report, a chart depicting the systemwide black-white ratio by grade shows that in the 12th grade the distribution is 43.07 percent black students to 56.04 percent white students. In the first grade, 50.03 percent of the students are black and 49.07 percent of the students are white.

The number of students who must be moved to adjust the balance with a deviation of 1 percent would range from 18 students at E.B. Aycock Junior High School to 259 students at North Pitt High School, according to the report.

"In order to get the racial balance equal with the school system, students would need to be moved," Superintendent Eddie West said. "We would try to get students to the closest school to equal the racial balance. It would require some distance" in some cases.

A deviation of 1 percent in the racial makeup of the school was used in the criteria. However, board members discussed the possibility of having a deviation of as much as 20 percent, which is legally possible.

The criteria have interlocking relationships and may work against each other. In order to make a consistent organizational pattern, for instance, racial balance would be affected and

Citizens Panel Will Advise On Cable TV

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

Greenville city officials are hoping a newly formed Citizens Advisory Committee on Cable TV will give them insight into the needs of area subscribers before they negotiate a franchise renewal, according to City Manager Gail Meeks.

"We have a 15-year franchise with Greenville Cable TV, which is set to expire in 1991," Ms. Meeks said. "It's customary for a cable company to try to renew that franchise 24 to 36 months in advance.

Input for the nine-member committee, which held an organizational meeting Thursday night, will be helpful when the talks begin, according to Ms. Meeks.

"We could be looking at beginning negotiations with the cable company as early as the fall of 1988," she said, "and the purpose of the committee is to help the city and the City Council negotiate a new franchise or recommend terms or forfeiture of the existing franchise.

"We're hoping this committee can give us the citizens' views on what they're interested in in cable television."

City officials presented a six- to eight-month program of work for the committee and reviewed the history of the franchise with Greenville Cable TV at the meeting.

City Attorney Mac McCarley briefed committee members on cable regulations and the authority of local governments.

The committee also reviewed on a preliminary basis a summary of concerns and complaints submitted to the city on cable since January 1981,

FHA Students Give Helping Hand

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

Members of the Future Homemakers of America at J.H. Rose High School provided food for the needy in a Greenville soup kitchen Thursday, applying the skills they have learned in the classroom.

In honor of Vocational Education Week and Future Homemakers of America Week held Monday through today, the 125 FHA members at Rose prepared and served a meal at the soup kitchen on Fifth Street. The meal consisted of turkey and dressing, gravy, green beans, corn muffins, corn pudding and pumpkin pie.

"When they go out this way they are showing their ability to do the things they learn in class," FHA adviser Marian Wilkes said.

Adviser Elaine Tschetter said, "It is good for the students to know that they should give of themselves, reach out and help other people. Part of our purpose is to get our kids involved in the community."

Teacher Renetta Smith is also an adviser for the group.

The students in the organization discussed ideas for projects and decided on preparing food for the soup kitchen, the advisers said. They prepared the food in the classroom and then took the food to the site and served it. They purchased some of the food with FHA funds and some food was donated from the soup kitchen and other sources.

The theme for National FHA Week is "America At Its Best: Future Homemakers of America." There are 11,500 FHA chapters nationally.

In celebration of FHA Week this year, the Rose group made a bulletin board, had speakers come into the classroom and sent goodies to teachers on Teacher Appreciation Day. All FHA members wore red and white, the organization's colors, to school today.

Students who are members of FHA presently are taking a home economics class or have previously had such a class. The Rose FHA chapter has been active for over 20 years, the advisers said.

PCMH Board Nominees Announced

The University of North Carolina Board of Governors today recommended three appointments to the Pitt County Memorial Hospital Board.

The three are Ray Rogers of New Bern, Robert Spivey of Windsor and Michael Mosley of Rocky Mount.

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners appoints hospital board members but historically has followed the recommendations of the UNC Board in appointing members from outside Pitt County. This item is not on the agenda for Monday's County Commissioners meeting, but may be acted on anyway if it is brought to the commissioners' attention, Assistant County Manager John Bulow said.

Sixty percent of the board's membership is from inside Pitt County — historically, two from each commissioner district, except Greenville, which has four — and 40 percent from other eastern N.C. counties. This composition was developed when the affiliation agreement which makes Pitt Memorial the teaching hospital for the East Carolina University School of Medicine was struck several years ago.

Consideration of local members of the trustee board is on the commissioners' Monday agenda. These names have not been released.

Pageant Recruiting

Miss Wheelchair North Carolina Inc. is recruiting women age 21 or older who use wheelchairs for 50 percent of mobility for the 1987 Miss Wheelchair North Carolina pageant.

The city of Greenville will initiate public advertisement of delinquent taxes on March 9.

Separate listings on real and personal property taxes will be published in The Daily Reflector.

For persons with escrow accounts, mortgage companies may have failed to pay both real and personal taxes. If there is reasonable doubt, check with the city tax collection office to inquire about the status of tax payments.

Calling in advance will allow sufficient time to remove from the public advertisement the names of property owners who have reconciled their delinquent taxes.

Questions should be directed to the city tax collector's office, Municipal Building, 201 W. Fifth St., or by telephone, 752-4137.

Industries Group Re-Elects Horne

Charles Horne, former general manager of the Greenville Utilities Commission, was re-elected president of Greenville Industries at the group's annual meeting Thursday.

Other officers re-elected at the meeting include Bill Clark as vice president, Robert Wilkerson as secretary, Jim Sullivan as treasurer and W.H. Watson as general council.

In a report on Greenville Industries' activities during the past year, stockholders attending the meeting were told that a road — complete with base for future construction — has been cut into the organization's 285-acre Hopkins Farm off the four-lane bypass between N.C. 11 and the Old Creek Road north of Greenville.

Maps of the land, outlining possible industrial sites to show prospective buyers, have also been made, stockholders were told.

John Chafee, director of the Pitt

County Development Commission, reported on industrial prospects that are currently looking at Pitt County.

Greenville Industries, a for-profit corporation, was founded in the early 1950s with the "intent to make land available for industry as a reasonable cost," Horne said this morning.

Greenville Industries purchased about 250 acres north of Greenville about 1960, Horne said, and sold the property to such firms as Empire Brushes Inc., Vermont American, Fieldcrest Mills and the Eastern Carolina Vocational Center.

The Hopkins Farm was purchased later and a portion of that property was sold to the Eaton Corp., now Yale Materials Handling Corp.

"As we sold land, we'd take that money and buy some more land (so Greenville Industries) would always have land available for industry," Horne said.

Board Orders Plans

overcrowding would occur in some schools, the report said. Some schools would be underutilized and some would require additional mobile units.

After discussing the report on the suggested criteria for redrawing the attendance lines, the board members asked for an explanation of two alternative options which had been prepared by the school system staff earlier. A slide presentation was shown which reviews the initial staff recommendations on drawing attendance lines and discussed the alternative options developed after a public hearing.

In drawing the second set of attendance lines, the staff used the criteria of building capacity and usage, potential for growth, cost effectiveness, racial balance, transportation and extent of change.

Two options were developed, one of which included the construction of a second high school in the Greenville attendance area. Both J.H. Rose High School and Greenville Middle School would contain grades nine through 12 under the alternative proposal, and E.B. Aycock would house grades six through eight.

"Within the next 10 years, the way the county is growing, there will be a need for another high school" in the city attendance area, West said. "There will be 1,800 students at Rose."

The option also calls for the Greenville area elementary schools to be reorganized to a kindergarten through fifth-grade configuration. The school grade levels for the other attendance areas would vary.

Racial balance is substantially improved under the alternatives, with many students being transferred. "The only way to get the racial balance is to bring students in from the suburbs and change the configuration," West said. "This proposal would racially balance Greenville on a 50-50 ratio."

According to the report, the alternative proposals would take 18 months to two years to implement and would cost approximately $4 million.

The staff will prepare the long-term and short-term proposals to be presented to the board next week.

West said that the attendance line issue must be resolved by March 15 in order to assign pupils for the coming school year.

"It seems to me we must look at the long-term and short-term perspective," West said. "Progress requires slow deliberate study. Rather than solve all the problems at once, we should solve them in stages."

West said things that can be immediately done will be considered short-term plans. "Attacking the problem in stages reduces the amount of upheaval," he said.

"The criteria presented today is a base to start from," said board member Frank Grooms. He said that a planned pattern will "ensure that we are going in the right direction."

The board asked the staff to apply the recommended criteria where feasible. "A racial balance of 50-50 would be Utopia," said board member Anne McLaughlin. "In some areas, 10 percent (deviation) would be hard to meet unless there is a lot of busing.... A 20 percent (deviation) would be feasible... more realistic and obtainable."

The board also discussed quality points assigned to grades on the high school level. The board requested additional information which will be presented at the workshop session to be held next week.

Boat Company Funds Exhibit

Grady-White Boats Inc. of Greenville has contributed $20,000 to fund a new shark exhibit at the North Carolina Aquarium on Roanoke Island.

The donation, announced Thursday by the Office of Marine Affairs, is the first major corporate gift to the N.C. Aquarium Society.

The society is a non-profit group organized to raise money to help support exhibits and activities at the three North Carolina aquariums, located at Roanoke Island, Pine Knoll Shores and Fort Fisher.

Rhett White, director of the North Carolina Aquarium on Roanoke Island, said work has already been started on the project, which is scheduled for completion by April 1.

"The 3,000 gallon aquarium is in place and has been water tested," said White. "Renovations are under way on the exhibit gallery area and all preliminary design work has been completed for graphic and exhibit panels."

Dogs Revived

VACAVILLE, Calif. (AP) — Firefighters coping with a smoky pet shop blaze on Thursday pulled up to 10 unconscious dogs into the street and revived them with oxygen, the department said.

Robinson said investigators believed some kind of electrical problem ignited the fire before dawn at Pet Country.

German Freighter Braves High Seas

To Rescue 25 From Sinking Vessel

NEW YORK (AP) — A German freighter rescued 25 crew members from a merchant ship sinking fast in the Atlantic today, and three people were missing after their life boat capsized in the stormy sea, the Coast Guard said.

Four crew members stranded on the 387-foot Turkish merchant ship Bora Isik through the night were rescued by the freighter Colombo after earlier attempts had been delayed because of rough seas, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Matthew Pleasant.

The freighter had rescued 21 crew members before the effort was temporarily suspended.

"She's going down pretty much like a rock," Coast Guard Petty Officer Randy Midgett said earlier.

A C-130 rescue plane sent by the Coast Guard to search for the three missing men was expected to arrive about 10 a.m. EST, Pleasant said. The 25 crew members safely aboard the German vessel were reported to be in good condition.

The Bora Isik, battling 25-foot waves and 40 mph winds, began issuing a distress call at 11 p.m. Thursday, informing the Coast Guard it was taking on 440 tons of water an hour and "sinking fast," said Coast Guard Lt. J.G. Bryant of the operations center for the Atlantic Area.

The 580-foot Colombo, bound for the port of New York, reached the Bora Isik shortly before 2 a.m. The ships were 720 miles east of New York and 260 miles south of Sable Island near Nova Scotia.

Bryant said the Colombo began using two life boats and one life raft in the rescue.

One life vessel carrying seven crew members from the sinking ship collided with the Colombo and three crew members were lost, Pleasant said.

"It took quite a rigorous effort for the Colombo to do what it's done so far. The seas out there are very very rough," he said.

The Coast Guard had no information on what the vessels were carrying or why the Bora Isik was sinking.

Bryant credited the quick reaction of radio operators in the Boston area and Canada for helping with the rescue attempt.

Coast Guard stations in Boston and several Canadian communications stations picked up the Bora Isik's distress signal and relayed it to the Coast Guard's operations center for the Atlantic, he said.

The Bora Isik, which sailed from Istanbul, Turkey, was bound for Bridgeport, Conn. The Colombo was due to arrive in New York on Sunday.

Soviet Agents Again Use Fists

To Break Up Street Protests

By JOHN-THOR DAHLBURG
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Security agents today punched protesters rallying for a fifth day to demand freedom for a jailed Jewish activist. Dissident sources said four demonstrators — including the activist's son — were given jail terms.

The agents also punched Western reporters covering the protest and smashed their cameras. Police detained three American newsmen for more than two hours.

It was the second day authorities used force to break up the protests in Arbat Street in central Moscow. The action against the demonstrators came as the Soviets announced the mass release of dissidents.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Genady Gerasimov on Thursday blamed young right-wing vigilantes — called "Lyubers" after the Lyuberts neighborhood where they supposedly live — for violence during that day's demonstration.

But during today's protest, as on Thursday, at least a half-dozen uniformed policemen stood by and did nothing to stop the violence. The men who broke up today's protest were highly organized, and afterward about two dozen of them piled into a police bus and drove off.

The protesters demand emigration rights and the release of Josef Begun, a Hebrew teacher who was sentenced in 1983 to seven years in prison for anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Gerasimov said Thursday that Begun "can apply for reconsideration of his case."

Speaking in a satellite interview with Britain's ITN network, Gerasimov said that if Begun does so, "I suspect that it will be reviewed favorably to him. So actually there's no need for any demonstration."

Gerasimov has said Begun was not among 140 dissidents being released early from jail because he declined to apply for a pardon. However, dissident sources said authorities, not prisoners, initiate the pardoning process.

Begun's son, Boris, who was wearing a blue-and-white stocking cap bearing the Star of David, was dragged away today by the plainclothes security agents before he could unfold a placard he was carrying.

Begun was taken to a nearby militia station along with Vladimir Pimonov, who shouted: "They're fascists, fascists." Pimonov has said he has been denied permission to emigrate so he can join his wife and daughter in Denmark.

Pimonov's wife, Lisa Petersen, who now is in Moscow, said her husband called her from a militia station to say he would be taken to a hospital. She did not know the extent of his injuries.

Another protester, Nastasha Bekman, was shoved off Arbat Street and dragged down a nearby alley in front of the Ministry of Culture. As uniformed policemen looked on, she was punched and kicked by the men in civilian clothes.

Western reporters who tried to film or photograph the scene were struck or shoved away by the plainclothes men.

"No photographs," shouted one plainclothes agent as he slammed his fist into an Associated Press reporter's camera. Agents also smashed cameras of the Cable News Network and French television crews.

Dissident sources said Boris Begun and two other protesters, Fyodor

Finkel and Galina Gerasimova, were ordered to appear at police headquarters on Wednesday to serve 15-day jail terms, apparently for disturbing the peace.

Another protester, Mark Kurkov, was ordered to serve a 10-day term, said the sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Such sentences, known as "administrative punishment," can be handed out at militia stations without any court hearing.

Joseph Richey, cameraman for CBS's Moscow bureau, and his soundman, Armand Deus, were detained for more than two hours in a militia station after trying to film the protest.

Antero Pietila, correspondent for the Baltimore Sun, also was taken to the militia station near Arbat Street and held for 2½ hours. At the station, authorities produced a Soviet citizen who, according to Pietila, claimed the reporter had thrown him to the ground.

Josef Begun's wife, Nina, said by telephone that she and a friend went to the Central Telegraph Office early today to send a telegram asking authorities to free her husband, but that a uniformed police officer grabbed the telegram form out of her hands.

She and her friend were driven to her apartment and were being held there under police guard, Mrs. Begun said.

The official news agency Tass today charged that the daily demonstrations were staged by Western reporters "according to prearranged scenarios complete with 'stars,' mass scenes and 'lyrical heroes.'"

Tass also announced the government was considering applications for pardon from about 140 people jailed for alleged anti-Soviet activities. Gerasimov said Tuesday that 140 dissidents had been freed and the cases of another 140 were being reviewed, but it was not clear if Tass was referring to either of these groups.

Gerasimov, said those released early were sentenced under a law banning anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda.

Deficiencies

Are 4,782 rural Pitt County homes substandard?

That is the finding of a housing needs survey which was accepted by the Pitt County Board of Commissioners last week. The survey was funded by a $10,000 federal grant with the intent of examining existing housing conditions in the county's rural areas.

The report examines 13,285 dwellings units beyond the county's municipal limits, of which 8,780 are conventional housing and 4,505 are mobile or modular homes.

The report says 5,156 or 58 percent of the conventional homes were rated standard, 2,406 or 20 percent needed moderate repairs and 1,218 or 13 percent were deteriorated.

Of the mobile homes, 3,347, or 74 percent, were found to be standard and 1,158 were seen as substandard.

In many cases the deficiencies found are not major. For mobile homes substandard might involve the lack of adequate underpinning or steps. Moderate needs for conventional housing might mean need for moderate repairs to roofs, walls or foundations.

Nevertheless, it would seem from this survey that too many rural Pitt Countians are living in homes which are deficient in some way, and some are living in homes with major structural problems.

It is expected that the county will apply for a Community Development Block Grant to bring some of the substandard homes up to standard.

The county should do that and more. Some years back the municipalities of the county developed vigorous programs for bringing housing up to standard. They have been successful.

Rural citizens deserve adequate housing, too, and the county government should develop adequate sound housing ordinances which will assure that all Pitt County citizens, wherever they may live, will be in dwellings which meet contemporary housing standards.

Solid Ground

Governor Jim Martin's rejection of the plan to consolidate two N.C. high schools for the deaf and move them to Greensboro appears to be on good grounds if for no other reason than geographic.

The two institutions were wisely located at their inception. The Morganton school is centrally located to serve western N.C. patrons and the Wilson school serves needs in eastern North Carolina.

Both have a small horde of supporters made up of past and present faculty, families and graduates. Families have moved to Morganton and Wilson because of the presence of those existing schools. They want homes near their children attending those schools. Some have said they would be unwilling to make that kind of move to Greensboro.

Availability insofar as distance is concerned is important, especially when one considers the distance from the eastern edge of the state to its western line.

True, Greensboro represents a central location with its appropriately-named Central N.C. School for the Deaf, but its easy availability to needs in the west and east is marred by the mileage involved.

A task force which studied state needs in educating hearing-impaired Tar Heels proposed building a $7.3 million high school at Greensboro to serve the envisioned influx of students. The recommendation appears to be the fruit of that panel's feeling pushed to make a recommendation for change — and so they made one.

The group neglected to mention how that kind of investment was economically practical in light of the many millions of dollars already being considered for education and existing needs of education across the state.

Some of those needs are very visible here at home in Pitt. The perennial question of how to pay for them all arises.

Coupled with that of future economic uncertainties and you have one more reason for saying "Whoa!" If upgrading is required at the schools in Wilson and Morganton, that action would be easier and less costly by dealing with existing facilities.

The governor was on good ground when he observed further study of the issue was not likely to be helpful and he didn't think it would do any good to keep the issue stirred up.

One might further say that it ain't broke, don't fix it.

Today's Thought

Premature Front-Runner Strategy

WASHINGTON — George Bush will skip the first Republican presidential cattle show and gain special status for the second, suggesting a premature front-runner's strategy.

What makes the vice president's pass of the first affair remarkable is that it happens to be the year's most encompassing conservative event, the annual CPAC meeting in Washington. His insistence on speaking separately at next month's regional party conference in critically important New Hampshire suggests failure to comprehend how shaky his lead has become.

The Bush camp seems complacent. Noting how little the Iran arms scandal has affected the vice president in national polls, his operatives compare the downbeat turbulence a year ago with today's calm. But amid the self-satisfaction, there seems no clear tactical line.

That is the conclusion drawn from the no-show decision at CPAC. Far from herding him into a cattle-show format, the sponsoring American Conservative Union (ACU) offered Bush the Friday night, Feb. 20, dinner speech (second billing only to President Reagan, speaking the night before). Bush said no, to that or any CPAC date.

'The Bush camp seems complacent. Noting how little the Iran arms scandal has affected the vice president in national polls, his operatives compare the downbeat turbulence a year ago with today's calm. But amid the self-satisfaction, there seems no clear tactical line.'

The two excuses variously given by Bush spokesmen lack credibility and do not support each other: first, a schedule conflict; second, that he had attended the last five such right-wing festivals. "Yeah, but now's the crunch," was the comment to the latter reason from a disappointed conservative Bushie, Rep. Bob Dornan of California, who won a commitment that the vice president will be at CPAC in 1988.

"Do you really think the Iowa voters will worry whether he was at CPAC?" Bush campaign manager Lee Atwater asked us. In fact, key Bush operatives privately share Dornan's concern and puzzle about the decision no less than the congressman.

Republican insiders suggest the truth is that the vice president will have nothing to do with anything run by David Keene, the political consultant and current ACU head. Keene was political director of Bush's 1980 presidential bid, but now advises Sen. Robert J. Dole.

Yet, Keene had nothing whatever to do with the recent annual meeting of the National Religious Broadcasters, where Bush unexpectedly attacked fundamentalists who "dictate their own interpretation of morality on the rest of society." National right-wing operatives who shrug off skipping CPAC were stunned — and offended — by that performance.

Considering Bush's earlier progress with the religious right and the fact the conservative movement's loyalty is yet to be won by anybody, Bush's conduct cannot be explained as a hard political strategy. Rather, efforts to stifle criticism from his moderate supporters that he is pandering to the right smack of the premature front-runner's attitude that often has characterized his campaign.

That attitude may explain insistence on special treatment from the Northeastern GOP conference at Nashua, N.H., March 13-14. When Bush's aides heard he would get five minutes along with the rest of the presidential herd, they demanded the Saturday noon speaking slot for him alone.

New Hampshire Republican State Chairman Elsie Vartanian hesitated, then sought guidance from political aides to Gov. John Sununu (a putative Bush backer). That settled it. Invitations to spend "an evening" with the next president were changed to "a weekend." The old unspent invitations were consigned to a wood-burning stove, but at least one survives.

Thus, while Bush has the Saturday luncheon all to himself, Dole, Rep. Jack Kemp and other hopefuls will make do with the leftovers: a minute or so speaking Friday night plus an assignment on Saturday panels.

Actually, Bush is barely a front-runner. He has fallen further behind Dole in Iowa polls, signaling an extended fight for the nomination.

Freedom And Student Editors

WASHINGTON — The student editors liked the feature on teen-age pregnancy. They thought it was hot stuff. The high school principal didn't like the piece at all. He thought it was too revealing. So the principal killed the story and the student editors sued. Who's right?

The U.S. Supreme Court last month agreed to have the last word on the question. The case is Hazelwood School District v. Cathy Kuhlmeier, et al. No. 86-836, and some of us who have been both student editors and real-world editors will look forward to having the argument settled.

These were the facts: Hazelwood East High School in St. Louis has a school-sponsored newspaper called Spectrum. The paper appears nine or 10 times during the school year. It is written as a class project by students enrolled in Journalism II. The journalism teacher appoints the editors, selects letters to the editor, makes assignments, and generally supervises the choice and display of stories. The teacher customarily checks with the principal before publication of each issue. Except for minor income from the sale of individual copies, Spectrum's expenses are paid from public funds.

Early in May 1983, Hazelwood's incumbent teacher of journalism resigned to go into private business. He left behind an almost completed issue of Spectrum that was to include two articles in particular. One article provided personal accounts by three students who had become pregnant; the story gave details of their sex lives and dealt with the use or non-use of contraceptives. A second story dealt with a student's personal experience with her parents' divorce.

Howard Emerson, retained as a journalism instructor to complete the school year, had doubts about the stories. He took galley proofs to Robert Reynolds, Hazelwood's principal. Reynolds thought the story about the pregnant girls, even though their names had been changed to a fictitious Terri, Patti and Julie, was too revealing. Only eight to 10 girls at Hazelwood were generally known to be pregnant, and Reynolds felt the subjects might be identified. Reynolds also objected to the piece on divorce: It was entirely one-sided; it failed to give the parents a fair shake; and it too amounted to an invasion of privacy.

Reynolds thus ordered the stories killed. The effect was to kill two entire pages of what had been scheduled as a six-page issue. The disappointed student editors subsequently brought suit in U.S. District Court seeking a declaratory judgment that their constitutional rights had been violated. They also sought nominal damages for their pain and suffering.

District Judge John F. Nangle ruled against the student editors and in favor of the school authorities. He concluded that Spectrum was a part of the course in journalism; as such it was as much subject to official supervision as a textbook. The 8th Circuit Court of Appeals, voting 2-1, reversed his decision. The appellate court found that the newspaper was a conduit for student opinions. It was in effect a public forum. Citing other cases on student rights, the court held that student newspapers may be restricted only when (1) publication might result in tort liability for the school or (2) publication might result in material and substantial interference with school work or discipline. Neither of these reasons, said the court, justified Reynolds' censorship.

This is the legal reasoning: The 14th Amendment says that no state may deny "liberty" to its citizens. These editors were citizens of Missouri. The school is an agency of the state. Freedom of press is a constitutional liberty. Therefore the principal of Hazelwood High School may not constitutionally restrict what students write and publish in a state-sponsored newspaper.

This is my own opinion: Horsefeathers! The real world is different. In a real, grown-up world an editor is subject to a publisher, and if the publisher says "Kill the piece," that's it, sweetheart, the piece is killed. The right of a free press attaches to the guy who owns one. Students do not own a school paper. They have invested not one dime in its production. They are here today and gone tomorrow. In a real sense they are both irresponsible and unaccountable. If their notions of journalism result in a libel suit, they do not pay the costs. If a scandalous story costs a college the benefaction of a blue-nosed alumnus, no skin off their backs.

I would give student publications a great deal of freedom. Fledglings must try their wings. But to accord students virtually absolute freedom of press is to let the animals run the zoo.

Strength For Today

When St. Paul was a prisoner in Rome, he was constantly attended by a soldier and since the custom is those days was to chain a guard and his prisoner together, the great apostle and the soldier in the emperor's service were probably linked together in this fashion.

Of course, a number of soldiers would stand watch by turns. We wonder what must have been their reaction and whether any of the group realized that his prisoner would go down in history as one of the greatest men of all time. Was any one of the guards converted to the Christian faith? Perhaps most regarded Paul as a tiresome fanatic.

Were there any who listened to him, felt the hand of God on their hearts and realized how meaningless there lives were? We know that there were many soldiers in the early church. What a privilege it would be to know God through the Apostle Paul!

Condos Burn

SPRING LAKE, N.C. (AP) — Two condominium buildings under construction were destroyed and a third was heavily damaged when a fire broke out Thursday night.

No one was injured seriously in the fire, which began about 5:40 p.m. at the Lake Hurst Condominium Complex located off N.C. 210 north. The blaze was brought under control a little more than an hour later.

The two-story buildings, which were in the final stages of construction, house eight units each.

Sentence

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A wheelchair-bound Henderson County man, paralyzed from the waist down 13 years ago when he was shot in the back with a .38-caliber pistol, was sentenced to five years in prison for inflicting an almost identical wound on a Fletcher man.

Brady Briggs Jr., 50, pleaded guilty in Superior Court Wednesday to assault with a deadly weapon inflicting serious injury.

The plea stemmed from the shooting of William Richard Matthews, 28. At Wednesday's hearing, Briggs admitted to shooting Matthews in the back on Feb. 21, 1986.

The beginning of Briggs' five-year sentence was delayed until Feb. 20 so the Department of Corrections can arrange transport to the wheelchair prison unit in Raleigh, officials said.

Drinkers

ELON COLLEGE, N.C. (AP) — The Soviet Union is "drinking itself to death," says Dr. Vladimir Tremel, who says alcohol abuse has reached a crisis level in his native country.

Tremel, a Duke University economics professor, spoke Wednesday during Elon College's week-long symposium on U.S.-Soviet relations.

The country leads the world in annual consumption of hard liquor, mostly vodka. And Tremel said the drinking has an impact on levels of violence, child and wife abuse, crime, divorce rates, accidents, fatalities, lowered productivity and other social ills.

In the late 70s, an average of 60,000 Soviets a year died of acute alcoholism or fatal alcohol poisoning. The average for the United States is between 400 and 600 deaths a year.

Fifth Man

RALEIGH (AP) — A fifth man indicted on federal charges of conspiring to obtain weapons and explosives stolen from a National Guard armory is in custody, U.S. Attorney Sam Currin said Thursday.

Robert E. Jackson was the last of the defendants to be arrested. He was picked up Wednesday in Midwest City, Okla., by Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms agents, Currin said.

The U.S. Justice Department said Jackson was a member of the Ku Klux Klan and the White Patriot Party.

The indictments stemmed from an alleged plot that included an attempt to blow up the Southern Poverty Law Center in Montgomery, Ala., and to kill center director Morris Dees, Currin said.

Jackson will be returned to North Carolina for trial March 9, Currin said.

Whiteville Fire

WHITEVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A fire in the downtown business district Thursday heavily damaged two department stores and caused smoke damage to three others.

No injuries were reported from the fire.

The fire broke out shortly before 4 p.m. in Leinwand's Department Store, and spread next door to J.S. Mann's Department Store. Three other stores in the same block — the Style Shop, Kramer's and Colliers Jewelers Inc. — sustained heavy smoke damage.

Firefighters battled the blaze for nearly four hours before it was finally under control.

Impaired

GREENSBORO (AP) — An off-duty Guilford County sheriff's deputy killed in a five-vehicle wreck had a blood-alcohol content almost twice the legal intoxication level, a state medical examiner said Thursday.

Toxicology tests performed on Lt. Richard A. Weaver showed he had a .19 blood alcohol level, said Dr. Robert Thompson, associate chief of the medical examiner's office in Chapel Hill.

A driver with a blood-alcohol content of .10 is considered legally impaired under state law.

Thompson said Weaver, 39, died of a torn aorta because of chest trauma received in the wreck. Weaver, who had worked for the sheriff's department since 1971, had never been arrested for driving while impaired, said Maj. Ed Pons.

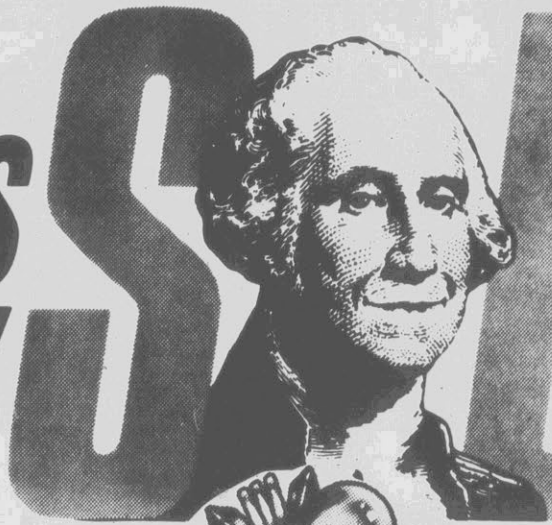

The wreck is being investigated by the Greensboro Police Department.

HONDURAS EXERCISE — Paratroopers from the U.S. Army's 82nd Airborne, based at Fort Bragg, jump from a C-141 transport plane near La Paz, Honduras, Thursday. The paratroopers were participating in a joint U.S.-Honduran maneuver to test their alert readiness. (AP Laserphoto)

Bragg Troopers Conduct Test Of Alert Readiness

PALMEROLA AIR BASE, Honduras (AP) — More than 300 U.S. Army airborne troops parachuted today into Honduras, about 75 miles from the Nicaraguan border, to begin a high-readiness alert exercise. The paratroopers are part of a 750-member task force of the 82nd Airborne Division from Fort Bragg, N.C. They are beginning two weeks of training that Pentagon officials said would help demonstrate U.S. military capability to swiftly challenge Soviet, Cuban or Nicaraguan threats in the region. The parachute jump over the La Paz drop zone in central Honduras south of the Palmerola Air Base was witnessed by a special pool of journalists convened by the Defense Department in Washington on Wednesday evening. The pool system was formed following protests by news organizations that the Pentagon had shut out reporters and photographers during the United States' October 1983 invasion of Grenada.

The training exercise was intended primarily to benefit the U.S. forces, although some Honduran forces also were participating, military officials said.

Prison Package Studied

RALEIGH (AP) — Legislative leaders say they have not yet reached a consensus with Gov. Jim Martin on a package of emergency measures that would spend about $29 million to reduce crowding in the state prison system.

He (Martin) would like an agreement and I'm sure there will be one eventually, but we don't have one yet," state Sen. David Parnell, D-Robeson, said Thursday after a closed-door meeting between Martin, other state officials and legislative leaders.

Budget Director C.C. Cameron said Martin will forward the proposals to House Speaker Liston Ramsey and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, possibly as early as today. Officials say the emergency legislation is needed to ward off a federal takeover of the prison system.

"The idea was to get together and ... try to iron out all the differences so we could send clean bills that would really trot once they get to the Legislature," Cameron said.

Neither Jordan nor Ramsey was available for comment after the meeting. Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, and Parnell, co-chairmen of a legislative study panel that has developed proposals for relieving the problem, declined substantive comment on the Martin plan, saying they wanted to study it.

Among the items in the Martin package are a ceiling of 18,000 on the prison population, which the administration says is some 4,500 above the maximum capacity under federal standards that recommend 50 square feet per inmate.

The legislative study panel also has endorsed the ceiling proposal.

Martin also is recommending measures to cut red tape in the spending of $14 million appropriated last year for construction of space for 900 beds in six institutions.

Hardee's Claims It's No. Three

NEW YORK (AP) — Hardee's Food Systems Inc. says it has climbed into the Big Three in the fast-food business by giving customers what they want — a bigger burger.

Executives from the Rocky Mount, N.C.-based restaurant chain made that case at a news conference Thursday in New York where they displayed their latest television commercials. They also cited new statistics that indicate Hardee's has by at least one measure — share of customers — moved ahead of Wendy's International Inc., the nation's third largest fast-food company.

The industry leader is McDonald's Corp., based in Oak Brook, Ill., and Miami-based Burger King Corp. is second.

Hardee's, which had more than 2,700 restaurants worldwide at the end of 1986, said it has been spending as much as $50 million a year on advertising and could boost that figure to $70 million this year.

In its two latest commercials, which began airing in selected markets last month, Hardee's takes a humorous jab at the competition.

In a commercial called "Disguise," an announcer says, "When you take away all the toppings some burger places are making such a fuss about these days, it has to make you wonder."

While the announcer is talking, a hamburger with the works is methodically stripped of each topping until nothing is left but a thin hamburger patty.

"Is there a reason why they aren't making a fuss about their burgers?" the announcer says.

A side view is then shown of a thick

Hardee's hamburger, and the announcer concludes, "You see, unlike the other places, we have nothing to hide."

In the second commercial called "Magician," a man wearing a ceremonial robe and crown unveils a bigger burger to great fanfare.

But the announcer notes some companies have more recently started making their hamburgers smaller.

"Well, while they're trying to decide just how their burgers should be, you might decide to come to Hardee's," the announcer said.

Both ads carry the tag line, "Hardee's. We're out to win you over."

Gary Langstaff, chief marketing officer for Hardee's, said the commercials are "more overtly competitive than we would like to be in the long run."

But he said the company is hoping they will give the company "a competitive edge in an increasingly competitive industry."

On that score, the company cited a new Consumer Restaurant Eating Share Trends report that said Hardee's had 9.1 percent of the customer traffic at fast-food outlets last year, edging Wendy's 9.0 percent.

In Dublin, Ohio, Wendy's spokesman Paul Raab said, "I don't think the statistics that Hardee's is presenting are truly indicative of who is No. 3 and who is No. 4."

He said the same report indicates Wendy's captured 10.36 percent of the dollar share of the market last year to 8.12 percent for Hardee's.

"You can put dollars in the bank, but you can't put traffic in there," he said.

Jordan Supports Study Of Judges' Selection

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A legislative study commission is needed to determine what, if any, reforms are needed in the way North Carolina judges are chosen, Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan says.

Jordan Thursday announced his support for a 20-member commission on merit selection of judges.

He said Democrats have long been interested in changing the way judges are chosen, but also referred to Republican campaigns last November. The GOP-backed Citizens for a Conservative Court attacked the personal views of Democratic candidates on such issues as the death penalty, although the Judicial Code of Ethics bars candidates from addressing political issues. A Democratic committee launched replies.

"The governor's negative tactics may well have heightened our interest," Jordan said. "I think the negative committee that was established was formed out of his office. That sort of created an atmosphere last fall that was different."

Jordan said he would like to improve the process, but he and Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, who filed the bill for introduction, said they were not proposing any specific changes.

The purpose of the study is to build enough support for a proposal to get the two-thirds House and Senate votes needed for a constitutional amendment, Hipps said.

Supporters of merit selection say removing politics from the judicial arena will result in a more independent and effective system. But Jordan said there are strong objections.

"There are people even in the legal profession that think that a judge not having to stand election isn't quite as in tune as he should be," he said. "... There's a lot of people in the general public that say any time you take their opportunity to vote away, it's wrong. So I would say there are more places you can find opposition than there are that you can find support."

"A lot of the so-called merit plans do not work because you are simply moving the politics from one area to another area," added Hipps.

Jordan and Hipps emphasized that the study was backed by the governor, House Speaker Liston Ramsey, Chief Justice Jim Exum and Attorney General Lacy Thornburg.

Hipps denied that a merit selection process would weaken the Democratic party by helping Republicans get elected.

"If people realize we are trying to do the right thing for the right reasons and use the right kinds of policies, the Democratic Party's going to be strengthened by it, not weakened," he said.

The commission could report back as early as 1988. Then, if a bill is approved, the public would have to back a statewide referendum before any change could become law.

In other legislative action: The state would refuse to fund more than 100 public school systems — one per county — under a bill filed for introduction by Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore.

"It's equal distribution of the tax dollar," Craven said. "We have 140 school systems now and that reduces the amount of money that goes to some schools that really need it."

School merger historically has been a hot issue in counties with multiple systems. Critics charge that some opponents of merger are motivated by a desire to avoid racial integration.

Craven said a number of local officials were asking their legislators to introduce bills that would deal with multiple-system problems in their counties. He said a statewide approach would be better.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey said he had not formed an opinion on Craven's bill, but added that a reduction in the number of school systems probably was inevitable.

"I don't see anything wrong with having more than one per county if the county commissioners want to pay for it," he said. "Right now, with 140 systems, it means 40 extra superintendents, support personnel and so on."

Rep. Jim Craven, R-Moore, filed for introduction a bill that would require all North Carolina youngsters to attend school until graduation or age 18.

"Right now, a person who turns 16 can say 'I'm not going back to school' and there's nothing anyone can do," Craven said. "With the dropout problem as bad as it is, we need to do this."

Eight states require school attendance until age 18, he said.

Martin Defends Political Aide

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says having a staff member to deal largely with political matters frees him and other top administration officials to make state business their primary concern.

In his weekly news conference Thursday, Martin defended his special assistant and counsel, Alan Pugh, who has drawn fire for making telephone calls on state time to seek support from Republican state employees for state GOP Chairman Jack Hawke.

Pugh generally is referred to as the Martin administration's political director. He serves as a liaison between the governor and his political supporters across the state, taking their suggestions for policy and appointments, Martin said.

Carter Wrenn, executive director of the National Congressional Club, complained this week that Pugh was telephoning state workers to solicit support for Hawke.

Hawke, whom Martin recommended for the post, was elected interim chairman by the state GOP Executive Committee last week. But the Congressional Club is waging a campaign to replace Hawke with Barry McCarty, a professor at a fundamentalist college in Elizabeth City, at the party's convention in May.

"There are so many calls that come in from people that have to be responded to," Martin said. "And rather than just have them distract all our people in state government, I think it's a better organizational plan to have Mr. Pugh do that."

Former Gov. Jim Hunt had a system under which anyone wanting a political appointment had to confer with a "key" — a local Hunt supporter who advised him on patronage matters. But Martin said he preferred his own system.

Appointee To Stay

WILMINGTON (AP) — A former Wilmington bank manager who is now the director of the state Division of Economic Opportunity has been indicted by a federal grand jury on four counts of bank fraud, but state officials say there are no plans to remove him from office.

James Forte was one of seven people, including several former bank employees and a former Wilmington minister, indicted Tuesday.

Forte, a former Wilmington branch manager with Wachovia Bank and Trust Co., was appointed to the Martin administration in April 1985, shortly after he left Wachovia, said Don Follmer, a spokesman for the state Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Follmer said Forte was hired as deputy director of the Division of Economic Opportunity and promoted to director last August.

Follmer, who said state laws prevent him from discussing personnel matters in detail, described Forte as "well-qualified."

"I assume he will stay on," Follmer said. "He hasn't been convicted of anything and we're operating on that."

Forte is charged with two counts of making false entries in bank records, one count of misapplying bank money and one count of conspiring to violate federal banking laws.

Martin Wants Less Red Tape For Landfills

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Making groundwater pollution standards more realistic and shortening the process of approving landfill permits will help local governments deal with solid-waste disposal problems, Gov. Jim Martin says.

"There's a growing concern ... that our permitting process can create lengthy delays," Martin said in a news conference Thursday.

Local governments have warned that if existing landfills run out of space before others are approved, waste is "going to just get discarded along the roadsides," he added.

Martin said at his weekly news conference he had directed the state Environmental Management Commission to drop what he called an unrealistic rule that bars virtually any groundwater contamination — even miniscule levels that do not endanger human health.

He also said he had established an inter-agency task force to speed up the process of reviewing landfill construction applications.

A third step Martin said he is proposing is to make a $60 million revolving loan fund for water and sewer system improvements available for solid-waste landfill construction.

The moves, Martin said, are attempts to further what he called occasionally conflicting goals: effective waste disposal and safeguarding groundwater quality. "We ought to achieve both of these goals. We figure we've got to have a better mechanism for dealing with them," Martin said.

The governor conceded that landfills are not a long-range solution to the waste management problem, and said new technology such as conservation, incineration and composting eventually should replace them. Landfills present a "threat to our ground and surface water quality and rob us of land," he said.

Martin said he had directed state agencies to develop a plan for phasing out landfills by the year 2000. In the meantime, he said, state government should help counties by streamlining the process of issuing landfill permits.

A major problem, he said, is the "zero standard," under which virtually any contaminant not covered by U.S. Environmental Protection Agency regulations is barred from state drinking water supplies.

Technology has advanced to the point that scientists can detect pollution in such small amounts that "in almost all circumstances it has no significance to any biological system," Martin said.

Forcing industry or local governments to remove every trace of such chemicals or other contaminants imposes an unnecessary and unaffordable cost, he said.

"So I'm trying to turn us away from that zero standard — not to expose you to danger, but to have a safety level that is well below" danger thresholds, he said. "I'm talking about maintaining a realistic, rational level."

Martin said the task force, which will use personnel from the state Department of Human Resources and the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development, will try to quicken the permitting process.

DHR already has reduced the time for reviewing the typical application from nine months to three months since the Legislature appropriated funds for additional staff last year, Martin said.

In the past eight months, the department has reduced an application backlog by 50 percent, approving 22 applications and rejecting seven. Still pending are seven proposals to expand landfills and seven applications for new ones.

The task force will meet with local officials at the site of a proposed landfill, tell the officials what data is needed, and meet when the application is submitted, Martin said. He said he hoped one or two meetings would be sufficient to process most applications.

Martin said his proposal to bring solid-waste landfills under his revolving loan program would help local governments pay for top-quality facilities that would comply with groundwater rules.

He insisted that the loan program would be better than the grants that the Legislature approved for water-sewer upgrading in 1985-87. The Legislature required that the money be distributed on a per capita basis, meaning that much of it went to urban counties that needed it less than small, rural counties.

ABA Board Opposes Outlawing Tobacco Product Advertising

By RICHARD CARELLI
Associated Press Writer

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — American Bar Association leaders oppose outlawing tobacco product advertising but predict a spirited debate before the lawyer group adopts an official policy on the proposed ban.

The ABA's board of governors, meeting at the 330,000-lawyer group's convention, voted Thursday to oppose a pro-ban effort by the New York and Maryland state bar associations.

The 32-member board wants the ABA's policy-making House of Delegates, which convenes here next week, to refuse putting the ABA's support behind an ad ban being studied by Congress.

"I think the proposal is an inappropriate assault on the First Amendment," board member Howard Vogel of Knoxville, Tenn., said.

The Constitution's First Amendment guarantees freedom of speech.

But backers of the proposal, calling tobacco use "the greatest present threat to the national health," say a recent U.S. Supreme Court decision makes clear that such a ban would be constitutional.

Horace Kornegay, the retired chairman of the Tobacco Institute and now a Greensboro, N.C., lawyer, left Thursday to lobby against the proposal.

"It's just one more problem to deal with," Kornegay said. "This resolution just adds fuel to the flames that are already burning brightly out there."

Kornegay and others have spent two months preparing for the showdown. He has several file folders packed with materials he has sent to delegates, including the six from North Carolina.

"I feel very comfortable that it will not pass," Kornegay told the Greensboro News & Record.

"They are going to look at the constitutionality of it," Kornegay predicted. "Most of them are inclined to be fairly objective about matters like this when considering what this would do to the First Amendment."

"It doesn't take but one person with one match to sometime start a conflagration if you don't get the bucket brigade out in a hurry," he said. "The bucket brigade is mustered. We are dipping, passing and throwing."

The ABA, which lobbies Congress with considerable success, itself has been subjected to heavy lobbying on whether the tobacco industry should be forced to stop spending $2 billion a year to promote its products.

Health organizations are leading the pro-ban forces. The tobacco industry's lobbying effort has been aided by groups such as the American Newspaper Publishers Association, which is concerned about squelching speech.

Less than 1 percent of the advertising revenues collected by the nation's newspapers is generated by tobacco product advertising. Magazines, however, receive about 15 percent of their advertising money from the tobacco industry.

"I think you'll enjoy the very spirited debate we'll have in the House of Delegates," Vogel said. "We should hear from constitutional scholars on both sides."

Philip Morris To Buy More Leaf

By The Associated Press

Tobacco interests are welcoming Philip Morris USA's announcement that it plans to increase its purchases of domestic leaf to help the troubled industry.

Ernest P. Quinby, the company's director of communications, said Thursday the plan was prompted by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's 1987 production quotas for flue-cured and burley tobacco, which are down from last year's levels by 3 percent and 6 percent, respectively.

"The tobacco state congressional delegations have done a good job of pointing out the woes of tobacco farmers, and we're gladly responding," Quinby said Thursday.

Virginia's two Republican senators, John Warner and Paul Trible, said the 1987 quota for flue-cured and burley tobacco will need to be increased to meet the new demand created by the Philip Morris decision.

"Philip Morris' decision to increase its 1987 tobacco purchases by an estimated 30 million pounds, which is over and above its already increased buying commitment, will go a long way in ensuring the financial security of the small family tobacco farmer," Warner and Trible said in a joint statement.

Reagan Proposes Catastrophic Benefits For Elderly

By JERRY ESTILL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's proposal to provide the elderly with Medicare protection against massive hospital and doctor bills is being greeted as a welcome but limited step by health care activists in Congress.

While the plan embraced Thursday by Reagan also outlines potential approaches for improving health insurance for Americans under 65, as well as long-term nursing home care, the immediate focus is on acute care for Medicare beneficiaries.

Under the proposal, Medicare recipients could insure themselves against more than $2,000 a year in out-of-pocket hospital and doctor bills by paying an additional $4.92 a month under the Part B coverage that now costs $17.90 monthly.

Part B generally covers doctor bills and is voluntary, although about 98 percent of the elderly take the coverage. Part A of Medicare pays hospital bills and is financed through Social Security tax deductions.

Still not covered under the expanded Medicare program drafted by Health and Human Services Secretary

Otis R. Bowen would be bills for drugs and eye and dental care, as well as long-term nursing home care.

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Commerce health subcommittee, said the president's move was "an important first step," but noted the plan does not offer a specific solution to paying for long-term nursing home care.

"Now we in the Congress will have to make the hard decisions about whether this limited proposal is an adequate response or whether we can do more to assist Americans who are severely ill," Waxman said in a statement.

Rep. Edward R. Roybal, D-Calif., chairman of the House Select Committee on Aging, said the plan falls short of the president's promise for a broad, national solution for uninsured and underinsured people and predicted Congress would go beyond the Reagan proposal.

Sen. David Durenberger of Minnesota, ranking Republican on the Senate Finance Committee's health subcommittee, praised Reagan's decision and said, "It is unconscionable that we have let senior citizens and the disabled impoverish themselves at the very time they are the sickest, under the most stress and have huge medical bills."

Durenberger called the increase in the monthly premium "modest" and said "the most serious criticism that can be offered of this proposal is that it is far too little."

Eighty-seven-year-old Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., complained the plan was not a giant step, but rather "the step of a dwarf, timid about going forward."

Reagan overruled conservative opposition within his administration to recommend the Bowen plan, which already has received wide bipartisan support in Congress.

"I think there is a very good chance of legislation," White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said. "There will be a lively debate but I expect legislation to pass, and I think the Reagan plan will be the basis for that legislation."

Conservatives led by Attorney General Edwin Meese III and the budget director, James A. Miller, had fought against the plan as it was being developed, arguing that it relied too much on the government and not enough on the health industry.

Reagan revealed his decision to adopt the Bowen proposal in a speech to junior high school students.

"With the protection that this plan would provide, senior citizens will now be safe from the worst fear of old age — having their life savings taken away to pay the costs for an acute care due to a catastrophic illness," he said.

Of the 30 million older Americans covered by Medicare, only 1.4 million people have medical expenses costing more than $2,000 a year, Bowen said.

"But it is a big worry to all of the people," Bowen said. "The older people worry about two things: their health and their finances and which one is going to run out first."

He said many had written to him saying, "For $5 a month — I would be glad to pay that just so I don't worry."

Under the current Medicare hospital insurance program, only the second through 60th days of a hospital stay are fully paid.

Fitzwater said the expanded program would pay for itself through the higher premiums, which would be indexed to medical inflation as would the $2,000 annual cap.

"The total cost to the government would be nothing," Bowen said.

Unions Staging Recovery

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — After backpedaling through the early 1980s with rapidly declining memberships, wage concessions and other lost benefits, American unions may be on the verge of a resurgence.

Union membership in terms of hard numbers is still falling, according to soon-to-be-published data from the government, but the losses in 1986 are a tiny fraction of what they were the previous six years, and the number of women carrying union cards rose by 70,000 last year.

In addition, Labor Department statistics show that union members last year enjoyed more than twice the average wage gains of their non-union counterparts in absolute dollars.

As a result, the pay gap between union and non-union workers widened from $108 a week in 1985 to an average $119 per week in 1986.

The Bureau of Labor Statistics figures, which were obtained by The Associated Press, showed the weekly wage earnings of union members rose $21 to an average $444 last year, compared with average pay increase of $10 for non-union workers, raising their earnings to an average $325 per week.

All is not rosy, however, for the American labor movement. Unions' share of the rapidly expanding job market continues to erode, and outside experts are skeptical that organized labor will ever regain the clout it enjoyed immediately after World War II and through the early 1950s.

"There is going to continue to be an organized labor movement," said Richard Belous, a labor market analyst for the Conference Board, a New York-based business research house.

"The interesting thing will be to see if they can reverse the numbers," Belous said. "It's going to be extremely difficult for unions to get back up to the point where they again represent 25 percent of the work force."

Unions' share of the U.S. labor force peaked at 35.5 percent in 1945 at the end of World War II. It held fairly close to that level until 1954, when it began declining, according to government data.

By 1978, only 23 percent of American workers belonged to unions. That figure rose slightly, to 24.1 percent in 1979 when membership peaked at 21 million in the United States, but it has been declining ever since.

While the U.S. economy put 4.7 million more Americans to work in 1986, compared with the year average for 1985, the number of workers who maintain union memberships fell by 21,000 to 1,975,000, dropping organized labor's share of the work force from 18 percent to 17.5 percent.

Compared with membership declines of 344,000 in 1985 and 377,000 in 1984, the relatively small dip this year is seen as evidence that a focused effort by unions in trying to organize professional, other white-collar workers and women is beginning to pay off.

"We really haven't had enough time to see if those strategies are going to work," said Charles McDonald, director of organizing for the 12.8-million-member AFL-CIO.

The Labor Department data, however, indicate the turning point has arrived for so-called pink-collar workers. Union membership among women rose by 70,000 in 1986 to 5,802,000 after falling by 97,000 the previous year.

Reagan Call, Theft Of Funds Brings Support For Youngster

By DONALD W. SWINTON
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI (AP) — A call from President Reagan and the theft of $4,000 collected by Ronnie DeSillers' schoolmates brought an outpouring of sympathy and donations today for the 7-year-old who needs $162,000 for a liver transplant.

By early today, more than 1,300 people had paid $10 each to attend a benefit for the boy at a Miami Beach nightclub.

"Every major television station is here right now and some companies have announced major pledges tonight," Stan Saruski, assistant promotions director for WPOW radio, said Thursday. "I think we could raise $50,000 to $60,000."

Charlotte Grows

CHARLOTTE (AP) — Charlotte's economy grew in 1986, including an 81 percent increase in new jobs, according to statistics released by the Charlotte Chamber of Commerce Thursday.

More than 9,000 new jobs were created by 621 new or expanded businesses that were added to Mecklenburg County in 1986. The additional employment brought to Charlotte Mecklenburg's unemployment rate to 3.4 percent in December 1986, below the national average of 6.67 percent.

Radio stations plan to accept pledges all week and members of the Metro-Dade police SWAT team will solicit contributions for Ronnie, who doctors say has six to 18 months to live without a transplant for his deteriorating liver.

On Wednesday, the first-grader got a call from Reagan at Miami Children's Hospital. The president promised a donation and urged him to "keep the faith."

A few hours later, police learned that thieves broke into the boy's Fort Lauderdale school overnight and stole $4,000 his schoolmates raised by donating lunch money and holding bake sales and other activities.

"I'm sorry that this is the lesson my children in this school have learned after a lot of hard work and all the money they've collected," said Elaine Patterson, principal of St. Anthony's School. "Who would come and do such a thing? It's a sickness."

The stolen money was part of $89,000 raised so far for Ronnie, who needs $162,000 to get onto a waiting list for a transplant at Pittsburgh's Children's Hospital. Final costs could be more than $300,000.

The thief entered the accounting office where the money was stored by breaking a window, police said.

At the White House, presidential spokesman Albert Brashear said: "We're shocked. I can't believe it."

Ronnie was ecstatic about the president's call, said his mother, Maria. He wanted to speak to Reagan

Three Top Stock-Traders Accused In Insiders Probe

By DAVID A. VISE and MICHAEL SCHRAGE
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Three of Wall Street's top stock traders were arrested Thursday and charged with engaging in a multimillion-dollar illegal trading scheme involving Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Kidder, Peabody & Co.

Bringing two of the nation's most prestigious investment banking firms into the middle of the Ivan F. Boesky insider trading scandal, federal prosecutors accused the top traders at Goldman and Kidder of swapping secrets about corporate takeovers.

Robert M. Freeman, a 44-year-old Goldman partner who heads the firm's arbitrage trading, Richard B. Wigton, a 52-year-old Kidder vice president who directs that firm's arbitrage desk, and Timothy L. Tabor, a 33-year-old former arbitrage trader at Kidder, were charged with violating federal securities laws by trading stocks on the basis of confidential information.

U.S. marshals arrested Freeman and Wigton at the Goldman and Kidder offices near Wall Street and picked up Tabor at his apartment.

After the arrests, federal investigators appeared at Goldman, Sachs and Kidder to collect trading records and other documents, Wall Street sources said.

Wigton's attorney, Stanley Arkin, said his client denies the charges. A spokesman for Goldman said that based on an internal review, "We have no reason to believe that there has been any wrongdoing" by Freeman. Tabor could not be reached for comment.

The allegations Thursday were the most significant actions since stock speculator Ivan F. Boesky paid the government $100 million in November to settle charges that he used confidential information to make illegal stock trading profits. Boesky, who has agreed to plead guilty to one felony count, is cooperating with investigators.

The arrests were made on the basis of information provided by an informant identified in court documents only as CS-1. Sources said the informant was not Boesky.

The complaints said CS-1 — which stands for Confidential Source 1 — participated in the scheme while he was employed at Kidder, is cooperating with the probe and has agreed to plead guilty to two criminal felony counts. CS-1 also has provided the government with extensive information about illegal insider trading that was not disclosed Thursday, the complaints said.

High-ranking Wall Street executives said they have been informed that the Securities and Exchange Commission and the U.S. attorney's office in New York are examining Freeman's ties to Martin A. Siegel, the codirector of Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.'s merger department. Before joining Drexel last year, Siegel was a top dealmaker at Kidder. Siegel has been subpoenaed by the government and has been reported to be cooperating with the probe.

The arrests of the three men Thursday surprised many Wall Street observers, who considered it an unusually harsh way to proceed in a white-collar crime case. Most of the other defendants in the earlier insider trading cases were telephoned and asked to turn themselves in.

Ira Lee Sorkin, the former head of the SEC's New York office, said individuals generally are arrested in such matters if "they are about to flee the jurisdiction. You arrest people if they are in the act of committing a crime. Or you arrest people to throw the fear of God into them."

Freeman and Wigton are senior executives at investment banking firms that are leaders in arranging corporate mergers. Freeman is one of Wall Street's best known and most respected arbitrageurs. Arbitrageurs try to make money by buying the stocks of companies that are involved in mergers. These stocks typically increase after takeover bids are announced. Goldman's arbitrage desk takes some of the biggest trading positions on the Street.

Tabor had left Kidder and had since worked as an arbitrageur at Chemical Bank and Merrill Lynch. He recently resigned from Merrill, which issued a statement noting that the charges involve activities that took place before Tabor joined the firm.

Freeman, Wigton and Tabor did not enter pleas in court Thursday and were released after posting bond.

The details of the scheme provided by CS-1 has been corroborated by other witnesses, the complaints said.

A Texas appeals court Thursday trimmed $2 billion from the record $10.53 billion damage award against Texaco but upheld the basic 1985 jury verdict that Texaco had wrongfully interfered with Pennzoil's plan to merge with Getty Oil three years ago.

The unanimous ruling by the special three-judge appeals panel was not considered a surprise, but Texaco attacked it as "absurd," "appalling" and "outrageous" and reiterated that it would appeal the case to the U.S. Supreme Court if necessary.

Details of the 162-page opinion were not immediately available, but court officials said that the original jury verdict was upheld in all respects except the $3 billion portion of the award specified as punitive damages. The appeals court said $1 billion was punishment enough.

The loss of $2 billion, however, would be offset by accrued interest, which, since the jury verdict 15 months ago, has raised the total owed Pennzoil to about $12.2 billion, said Pennzoil attorney Joseph Jamail of Houston. Thursday's opinion reduces that figure to $10.2 billion.

"We've picked up another billion and a half in interest while they were appealing it," said Jamail. Despite Thursday's action, "We're almost back to the original verdict."

Texaco stepped in and acquired Getty Oil after Getty and Pennzoil had struck a supposed deal to merge, and Pennzoil sued for damages. The resulting verdict was the biggest in U.S. history and threatened Texaco's survival.

The legal dispute centers on whether Pennzoil and Getty had a binding contract to merge and what Texaco knew about that when it entered the picture. Texaco's major claim in its appeal is that the Texas lower court misapplied New York contract law and left the jury little choice but to find as it did.

Jamail boasted that the appeals court rebuffed Texaco "at every turn" and that "every position Pennzoil took in the trial has been affirmed." Texaco, meanwhile, took little comfort in the reduction of the punitive damages.

"The court's reduction of the unlawful and outrageous punitive damage award cannot be allowed to mask the absurdity of today's basic ruling," Texaco's new chief executive, James W. Kinnear, said in a lengthy statement. "It is appalling that the ... decision today continues to misapply the law of New York on the basic issues of contract formation and illegal interference."

The sharp words reflect the hard feelings that have characterized the case ever since the jury verdict, but there has been speculation that Kinnear's recent promotion to the top post at Texaco might improve the chances for an out-of-court settlement.

Jamail said flatly that "nothing is going on" on that front.

An important side issue — whether Texaco should be required to post a $12 billion bond while it appeals the jury verdict — was argued last month before the U.S. Supreme Court and a decision is expected this summer. A federal court in White Plains, N.Y., last year held that Texaco had to put up only $1 billion.

Senator Wants Delay In Proposed FmHA Credit Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Proposed Farmers Home Administration credit rule changes should be delayed because they are too complex and will make it tougher to get loans, the Senate Agriculture Committee chairman says.

"Farmers would have to hire a Wall Street attorney to decipher these rules," Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., told a news conference Thursday.

Leahy made public a letter he sent to Agriculture Secretary Richard Lyng, asking for a 60-day extension of the public comment period that is part of federal rulemaking.

The period for the Farmers Home proposal ends Tuesday and the new rules are set to go into effect in March.

"The proposal could seriously restrict the availability of credit to farmers and ranchers and have a major impact on credit institutions and on rural communities," Leahy's letter said.

Leahy, whose panel just completed hearings in the Midwest at which farmers vented frustration at tight credit, said the agency's announcement of the proposed changes explained them in terms of journals that are not usually available in farm towns.

"For example, the February 1982 issue of the 'Journal of Commercial Bank Lending' upon which you rely is more likely to be easily available in Manhattan than in small towns in North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska and my home state of Vermont," he said.

The administration's proposal would make numerous changes. Among other things, they would allow the agency to write off bad debt in one year instead of the current five.

They also would eliminate red tape involved in loan decisions.

Under the changes, the agency would give first priority to current borrowers in making loans. Farmers who currently are not Farmers Home borrowers "would have to get to the back of the line," said Ron Ence, associate administrator of Farmers Home.

"We're not going to be able to make loans to everyone," he said.

He said funds are limited and the agency feels it must give preference to current borrowers because "we have an investment in them."

He said farmers will be far better off knowing quickly whether they will get a loan than hoping for weeks only to have their hopes dashed. He acknowledged that the rules as published in the Federal Register are complicated but said they are "no more complicated than other federal regulations."

The period set aside for public comment on the rules expires Tuesday and, with no delays, they would go into effect 30 days thereafter. But Ence said the agency is considering Leahy's request and expects to receive a similar one from the House of Representatives.

Mother Wins Klan Damages

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — The mother of a black teen-ager murdered by two Ku Klux Klansmen has been awarded $7 million in damages, a verdict her lawyer says may put the nation's largest Klan group out of business.

The all-white jury deliberated about 4½ hours Thursday before returning the award against the United Klans of America Inc. and six past or present members, including the two sent to prison for the slaying.

U.S. District Judge Alex T. Howard Jr., who presided over the three-day trial, will hold a hearing within 90 days to determine the assets of the United Klans, which has about 2,500 members and operates in the Southeast.

"I hope the jury's decision will put it out of business," said Morris Dees, a lawyer for the family of 19-year-old Michael Donald, who was beaten and strangled in 1981 and whose body was left dangling from a tree.

Irwin Suall, a Klan expert with the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith in New York City, said the verdict could ruin United Klans and make it less attractive to potential members than rival Klan groups such as the Birmingham-based Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

The United Klans is the largest and most secretive of several rival Klan organizations, he said.

Suall said United Klans already is so financially pressed that it can no longer pay the salary of Imperial Wizard Robert Shelton, who "had to go back to work as a car salesman."

"I'm just glad justice was done," said Beulah Mae Donald. "Money don't mean a thing to me. It won't bring my child back. But I'm glad they caught the guilty and brought them to court."

Steps will be taken to gain title of a spacious office building occupied by the United Klans in Tuscaloosa, said Dees, who valued the building at about $100,000.

"We will take appropriate action to do something with it for the benefit of people — good things instead of bad things," Dees said, adding that the verdict was the first damage award against the United Klans for the actions of its members.

John Mays, an attorney for the United Klans, argued the corporation is a political organization that could not be held accountable for the murder. He said he had not decided whether to appeal.

Bill Stanton, director of Klanwatch, an arm of the Southern Poverty Law Center, praised the award.

"Victims of Klan violence now have a precedent to seek damages from the corporate Klan behind the perpetrators of these kinds of violent acts," he said.

Henry Francis Hays, 32, received the death sentence in 1984 for the slaying. Klansman James "Tiger" Knowles, 24, was sentenced to life in prison after pleading guilty to violating Donald's civil rights.

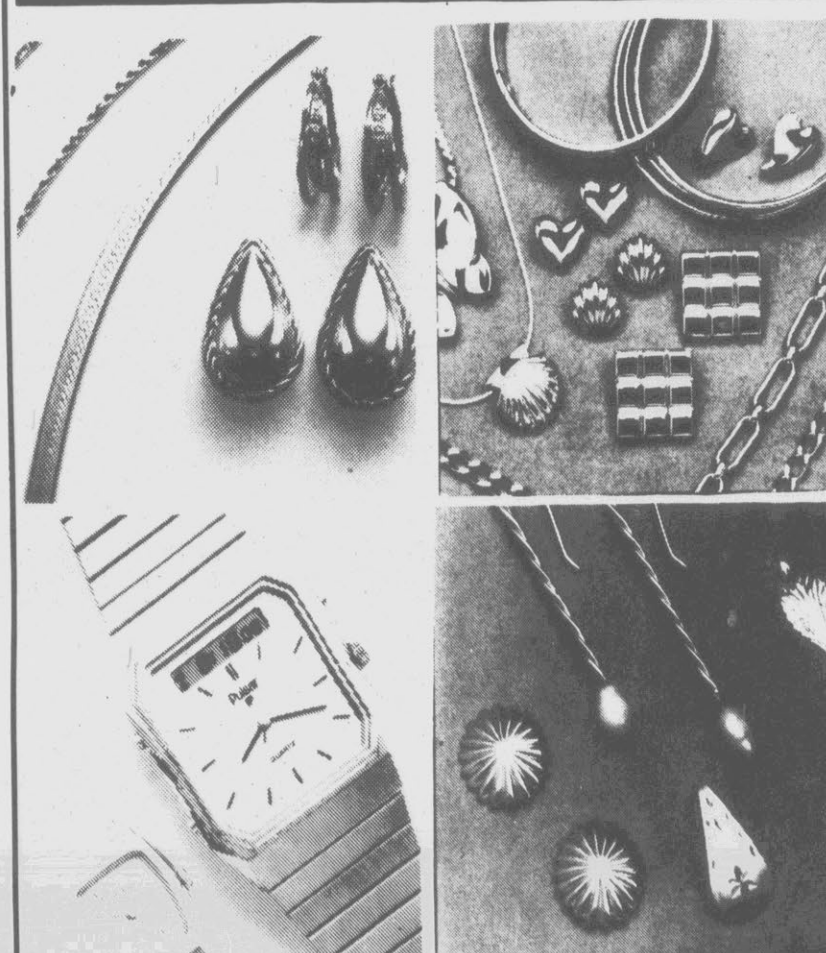

Knowles testified during Hays' trial that Donald was abducted at random from a Mobile street and killed "to show Klan strength in Alabama." According to testimony, the local Klan was angered by an unrelated trial in which a black was accused of murdering a white police officer in Birmingham.

The other defendants in the lawsuit were Bennie Jack Hays, a Klan officer and father of Henry Francis Hays, and former Klansmen Thaddeus Betancourt, Frank Cox and William O'Connor.

At a news conference, Mrs. Donald said she had forgiven Knowles. "I have no hatred in my heart," she said.

State, Military Disagree Over Contra Progress

By GEORGE GEDDA
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz is calling for continued U.S. assistance to the Nicaraguan rebels, but the nation's leading military man says American patience with the Contras may be running out.

Hours before Shultz delivered a ringing defense of U.S. policy toward Central America during a speech in New Orleans, Adm. William Crowe, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, said the American people will not support the rebels indefinitely unless they have some battlefield successes.

"You've got to have some kind of success or you're not going to get a continuing commitment," Crowe told reporters Thursday. "I don't think there's any question about that. And I don't know of anybody who would ask the American people to go on and on indefinitely without progress."

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked for reaction to Crowe's linking of future aid to battlefield success, said the U.S. commitment to the rebels "is fixed and is steadfast ... I don't know that I can address their tactics, but our support is not conditioned on any specific strategy or tactic."

Shultz, speaking to the American Bar Association in New Orleans, said the rebels cannot succeed without U.S. support and said that support should not be undercut by the scandal over U.S. arms sales to Iran and the diversion of profits to the Contras.

"It would be immoral to abandon them," he said.

On Capitol Hill, opponents of Contra aid say the controversy, coupled with internal squabbling in the rebels' ranks, has enhanced their chances to defeat an expected $105 million aid request for fiscal year 1988.

In an effort to patch up the latest internal problem with the rebels, Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams met Thursday with rebel leader Arturo Cruz apparently to persuade him not to resign from the rebel umbrella group United Nicaraguan Opposition.

There were also reports that Abrams met with Adolfo Calero, an UNO chieftain with whom Cruz has had frequent clashes.

Meanwhile, Alfonso Robelo, another of the top rebel leaders, demanded Calero's resignation, along with that of eight other rebel figures, The Washington Post reported today.

In other developments: —The chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., said his panel would proceed slowly on confirmation for Robert Gates, Reagan's nominee to replace the ailing William Casey as CIA director. Gates is likely to face intense questioning about the agency's role in the Iran-Contra arms deal.

—Vice President George Bush, in an appearance in Lansing, Mich., for the first time acknowledged that he had voiced some reservations in the administration's inner councils about the Iran arms sale. He did not elaborate.

—NBC-TV reported today that former CIA Director William Casey sent a memorandum last November to Lt. Col. Oliver North, then a National Security Council aide, arguing that the congressional ban on military aid to the Contra rebels in Nicaragua was unconstitutional.

The network, quoting unidentified congressional sources, said Casey also urged North, already under investigation for his role in the Iran arms deals, "to hang in there." Casey's memo did not reveal whether he knew that North was involved in a plan to divert cash from the Iran arms sales to the Contras, NBC said. The alleged diversion plan was revealed last Nov. 25 by Attorney General Edwin Meese.

—Iran's official news agency reported that Hashemi Rafsanjani, speaker of the Iranian parliament, said former National Security Adviser Robert McFarlane offered during a secret visit last year to trade himself for American hostages in Lebanon. White House spokesman Fitzwater said he knew nothing about the reported offer.

—ABC News reported Thursday night that conservative fund-raiser Carl Channell was instrumental in a fund-raising project for the Contras called "Toys." The report said that former White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, fired for his role in the purported diversion of Iran arms sales profits to the Contras, discussed rebel needs with Channell's contributors. Jane McLaughlin, a former Channell associate, told ABC she understood "we were working directly on behalf of the president and his policy in Central America, via Col. Oliver North."

—The Washington Post reported today that Reagan's hand-picked commission investigating the Iran-Contra affair has received a new file of computer messages sent within the National Security Council.

—Printouts of the NSC computer messages between North and the CIA station chief in Costa Rica indicate that the NSC was overseeing private efforts to supply the Contras and suggested that they may need to "cover their tracks," according to unnamed congressional investigators cited in today's editions of the New York Daily News.

—Canadian External Affairs Minister Joe Clark said the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is investigating the role of a Trans World Arms of Montreal company in an arms shipment that may have been diverted from Guatemala to the Contras.

—Two associates of North — businessman Albert A. Hakim — and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord — shipped 358 tons of arms, including Communist Bloc assault rifles, to a Pentagon warehouse in the United States, possibly for later shipment to the Contras, the Los Angeles Times reported today. The newspaper said it had not been determined whether the materiel ever reached the Contras.

Crowe, the nation's top-ranking military officer, said he was uncertain whether the Contras could achieve a military victory over the leftist Sandinista government, but Shultz expressed confidence in the rebels' prospects.

"We should read again the history of our own fight for independence," Shultz said. "Those on the side of liberty and human dignity are on the side of history."

The Sandinista government maintains that the Contras' inability to control any Nicaraguan territory after five years of struggle demonstrates their ineffectiveness and lack of popular support.

Both the Reagan administration and rebel leaders have said recently that the prospects for the Contras have improved since U.S. military aid was resumed last fall.

Calero, leader of the main insurgent force, said last week 6,000 Contras have re-infiltrated Nicaragua over the past two months and that 15,000 will have crossed the border by spring.

Bush Slips Away From White House Stance On Iran

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush is taking his first step toward political independence from President Reagan, disclosing that he privately "expressed certain reservations" about the administration's Iran policy.

Looking ahead to the 1988 presidential race, Bush said he doesn't intend to "jump away from the president" as he begins his own White House quest. At a news conference Thursday in Lansing, Mich., however, he added that there "might be a little bit of friction, might be a little contradiction."

"But I think the president would understand it," he said. "The American people every eight years are entitled to expect change," said Bush, who has served as Reagan's unflinching defender for six years.

Bush fielded questions during a two-day Midwestern trip during which he also conceded the Iran-Contra controversy is hampering his still unannounced presidential campaign. Bush returned to Washington on Thursday afternoon after a stop in Springfield, Ill., and arranged a trip to Cincinnati today.

Bush is expected to make a formal announcement of his presidential candidacy next fall, but intends to step up the pace of his political travel in the next several weeks. He will visit seven cities in Iowa on March 5-6, touring the state that holds the first presidential caucuses of the election year next February.

The vice president's statement that the Iran-Contra controversy has hurt him politically coincides with public opinion polls showing him losing strength in recent months.

"What is happening is not that he is losing support, but people are saying, 'We want to wait' before deciding whether to support him," said one aide, speaking on condition of anonymity.

Bush's comments in Iran marked his first expression of dissatisfaction with any element of the president's Iran policy and amounted to a violation of his own oft-cited rule of never disclosing what he tells the president in private.

Previously he had defended the arms sale to Iran as an attempt to establish ties with moderates in Tehran, although he said in a speech last December that mistakes were made in implementing the policy.

But at his news conference, he said, "The key players around there (in the White House) know that I expressed certain reservations on certain aspects." He refused to provide specifics.

Bush also said he could not recall when he first learned of the decision to sell arms to Iran secretly, and refused to say what action he took after being informed by Israeli Amiran Nir last summer that the United States was dealing with radicals and not moderates in the Iranian regime.

Bush conceded the perception exists that the United States swapped arms for hostages, but said he was not personally ready to make that judgment. If the various investigations under way prove that was the case, he said, "I would be the first to say that is wrong."

As for the effect the controversy has had on his own political standing, Bush said, "If I'm going to take the credit for the good things (accomplished by the Reagan administration) ... then I've got to be man enough to take the associational guilt."

U.S. May Investigate 74 Suspected As Nazis

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department's Nazi-hunting section says it may investigate a list of 74 suspected war criminals who came to the United States after serving in military units that killed tens of thousands of Jews.

The list was assembled by the Simon Wiesenthal Center of Los Angeles from a variety of sources, including archives in the Soviet Union. The names on it are of former Lithuanian and Latvian soldiers assigned to Nazi SS-controlled units which killed Eastern European Jews during World War II.

Lawyers for the center submitted the list to the Justice Department's Office of Special Investigations.

The office will review the names, and some of them may already be the subject of OSI inquiries, Neal Sher, the office's director, said Thursday.

Sher said there will be a thorough review of whatever new leads are contained in the group's list of names. This could lead to in-depth investigations and denaturalization and deportation proceedings, Sher said.

"The units these men belonged to were part of Hitler's Final Solution, which was more successful in Lithuania and Latvia than anywhere else," Rabbi Marvin Hier, dean of the Wiesenthal Center, told a news conference.

Hier acknowledged that some of the 74 likely have died and that others may no longer be in the United States. But he said "many are still alive and living here," in Chicago, New York and Los Angeles.

Hier also urged Attorney General Edwin Meese III to move swiftly to deport to the Soviet Union Karl Linnas, an accused Nazi collaborator whose U.S. citizenship was revoked in 1981.

Hier said failing to take action against Linnas would send a signal to other Nazi war criminals that they can use delaying tactics to fight deportation proceedings. Justice Department spokesman Terry Eastland said Meese has the matter under review.

Surging Energy Costs Pace Rise In Wholesale Prices

By TOM RAUM
AP Economics Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, on the heels of their best yearly performance since 1949, rose 0.6 percent in January as energy prices surged, the government reported today.

The overall gain was the sharpest since November 1985. Energy prices have not risen so steeply since 1979.

Gasoline prices rose 18.0 percent in January as home heating oil costs gained 15.7 percent and natural gas prices advanced 4.2 percent.

Economists suggested the energy price increases would have been even higher had it not been for a milder-than-usual winter and noted that prices had begun edging up in December.

Food prices last month fell 1.9 percent, the second straight dip. Excluding food and energy, wholesale prices were up 0.5 percent in January.

Last month's overall increase in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index would be equivalent to an annual inflation rate of 7.7 percent if maintained for 12 consecutive months.

That compares to a drop in wholesale prices of 2.5 percent for all of 1986. Wholesale prices in December, however, had fallen 0.1 percent.

It was the collapse of energy prices in early 1986 that sent the full-year index tumbling for the first time since 1963. Indeed, only in 1949 did prices fall at a faster clip, 4.6 percent.

Now, it is largely because of the rebound in energy prices that economists are predicting moderately rising prices for the foreseeable future.

Analysts also point to declines in the value of the dollar against other major currencies in forecasting that prices of industrial products will rise in the months to come. In January, heavy machinery and other capital equipment rose 0.2 percent, double December's 0.1 percent.

"I think we're at the beginning of a substantial increase of inflation," said Michael K. Evans, president of a private economic forecasting service. "I think we've pretty much run out of our luck."

In December, gasoline prices had risen 2.6 percent; home heating oil costs had been up 5.1 percent and natural gas prices had fallen 7.8 percent.

Politicians Keep Religions Quiet

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Shortly before last fall's general elections, a plea went out to United Methodist communications offices around the country for information on religious affiliations of elected U.S. Congress members and governors.
"As soon as possible," urged Robert Lear, news director of the denomination's Washington, D.C. office. But in the months since then, he's received only five responses, specifying the religion of only a dozen legislators.

The information "is hard to find out," he says. "It's usually a gap that requires some effort to fill. You have to dig for it. It's a gray area of non-information."

News stories about candidates, detailing almost everything else — habits, background and hobbies — generally omit any mention of religious connections, as is often the case in official biographies.

Silence about it has become a wide pattern in a time styled as an age of information, except for the presidency or in rare cases of preacher-politicians such as Baptists Pat Robertson or Jesse Jackson.

Even telephone inquiries at offices of lawmakers or Cabinet members about their religious affiliations frequently elicit a "don't know" from secretaries or press officers until they themselves probe into it.

"People are entitled to the information," says Lear, 59, former newspaperman and long-time church communications officer. "I would hope they wouldn't misuse it, but they're entitled to have it."

He emphasizes that "candidates should not be judged simply on the strength of whether they're Methodists, Presbyterians, Jews or Roman Catholics, but it's important to know whether they have religious commitments.

"Religious and moral principles are prime grounds for action in the public arena."

The simplest way to indicate these principles is by affiliations, Lear said.

"These days, about the only ones who are popularly known as religious are the so-called born-again group," he said, even though many other public officials have religious convictions just as strong or more so.

Despite the dearth of information, Lear has pursued his research with help of other organizations and records, determining that 77 Methodists now are in Congress.

An interfaith organization, Americans United for Separation of Church and State, also has issued findings on affiliations of the entire 535-member House and Senate, the largest bloc being Roman Catholics, United Methodists, Episcopalians, Presbyterians and Baptists.

But the information doesn't come easily, and sometimes is outdated even when it is recorded, Lear said in a telephone interview. "In our times, politicians change affiliations frequently, like anybody else."

For example, he said, House Speaker Jim Wright of Texas still is identified as a Presbyterian in biographical sketches in the Congressional Directory, but he has been a Methodist for 15 years.

Information in this area "is an inexact science," Lear said.

He said that while specific affiliation is not the essential point, "it's an interesting footnote" to a biographical record, and should be reported.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

ODED - THE FAIR-MINDED PROPHET!

ODED WAS AN ISRAELITE PROPHET IN THE REIGN OF KING PEKAH. HE WAS ON HAND TO MEET THE ARMY OF THE NORTHERN KINGDOM OF ISRAEL WHICH WAS RETURNING FROM A MOST SUCCESSFUL BATTLE WITH JUDAH, IN WHICH THEY TOOK TWO HUNDRED THOUSAND CAPTIVES, AFTER HAVING SLAIN AN HUNDRED AND TWENTY THOUSAND IN ONE DAY! THESE, WITH HUGE AMOUNTS OF SPOIL PILFERED FROM THE CAPTIVES AND TOWNS AND VILLAGES OF JUDAH, WERE BEING BROUGHT UP TO ISRAEL TO BEGIN A LIFE OF SLAVERY! BUT OBED REMONSTRATED WITH THEM ON THE UNBROTHERLY CONDUCT AND, IN THE NAME OF JEHOVA, CALLED ON THEM TO SEND ALL THE CAPTIVES HOME! OBED'S WORDS HAD A GREAT EFFECT ON SOME OF THE LEADING MEN IN SAMARIA AND THEY REFUSED TO LET THE ARMY BRING THE PRISONERS INTO THE CITY - INSTEAD, THEY CLOTHED THE NAKED, FED THE HUNGRY, TOOK CARE OF THE WOUNDED, GAVE BACK ALL THE SPOIL, PUT THOSE WHO WERE TOO FEEBLE TO WALK, ON ANIMALS AND CARRIED THEM ALL THE WAY TO JERICHO WHERE THEY HANDED THEM OVER TO THEIR COUNTRYMEN (II CHRON. 26: 6-15).

Moderate Baptists Join Forces

CHARLOTTE (AP) — The president of the North Carolina Baptist State Convention says a new alliance of moderate Southern Baptists could be the beginning of a split in the nation's largest protestant denomination.

"This strikes me as the beginning of a fracture point within the Southern Baptist Convention which I personally do not welcome at this time," said Charlotte lawyer Bill Poe, who is also a member of the SBC Peace Committee seeking solutions to the convention's internal problems.

"It sounds very much like the roots of another organization quite different from the Southern Baptist Convention," Poe said. "I had hoped we would at least wait for the results of the Peace Committee report and see what's going to happen in St. Louis (at the SBC's annual June meeting)."

The Rev. Henry Crouch of Charlotte's Providence Baptist Church Thursday released details of the new Southern Baptist Alliance, which he will serve as president.

The Rev. Adrian Rogers of Memphis, president of the 14.5 million-member convention, said the new group will "polarize people." He suggested that moderates and liberals who don't support SBC policies simply go elsewhere.

Crouch said the coalition of individuals and churches would give moderates a way to lend moral and financial support to causes unpopular with the convention's fundamentalist leaders.

"We would hope the convention would right itself so that an organization like ours would not be necessary," Crouch said. "But the chances of that are slim. The convention will probably move in the other direction."

Crouch said the alliance was born of frustration over the eight-year-old battle between fundamentalists and moderates for control of the SBC, a battle moderates say they are losing in the boardrooms of Southern Baptist agencies and schools.

The group is not political in nature and will not draft a candidate for president at the St. Louis convention, Crouch said. Its founding principles include commitment to freedom for individuals to interpret the Bible, freedom for local churches to call female pastors and freedom of thought at schools and seminaries.

The Rev. Robert Tenery, a fundamentalist leader from Morganton, laughed at the idea that the alliance is not a political group.

"If you can believe that, you can look for the tooth fairy," said Tenery, who edits the Southern Baptist Advocate, a national fundamentalist newspaper. "By its very nature, it's political. All that talk is just to divert attention from what their real goals are so conservative people will say, 'OK, we don't have to worry about them.'"

"But our people have their eyes open. They are beginning to wake up to the fact that the St. Louis convention will be very tough, and they are going to attend."

Poe says he doubts the Peace Committee will present a unanimous report at the St. Louis convention.

"I seriously doubt there's going to be a report that we can all sign off on," he said. "There is still a substantial gulf between fundamentalists and moderates. What's likely to come out is a majority report."

When Fungus Cuddles Up To Mildew, It's An Endearment

By BETTY CUNIBERTI
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Are you so sick of your husband leaving toothpaste all over the sink that you have taken a can of whipped cream and covered the bathroom with giant white trails? Have you ever shoved a banana in your wife's ear when you were a little angry, and you both ended up laughing?

Do you call your mate Love Rhino? Kisskins? Or Nerdman? Perhaps the two of you have the secret identities Fungus and Mildew.

Or do you call your wife Mommy, like the 76-year-old president of the United States does?

If you do any of the above things or anything resembling them, you need not worry.

You are probably an extremely healthy adult, reverting to childlike play in ways that greatly enhance your intimate adult relationship.

All of the above questions are based on real couples and real things they did and said, and psychologist-physician William Betcher has just written a book called "Intimate Play" (Viking, $16.95) that brings such behavior uproariously out of the closet.

Betcher, who graduated from Harvard Medical School and is completing a residency in psychiatry at McLean Hospital in Belmont, Mass., has been fascinated with romantic playfulness since he wrote his doctoral dissertation in psychology on the subject more than 10 years ago.

It struck Betcher that in his own relationships, as well as those of friends he questioned, the best ones contained an element of spontaneous playfulness that was greatly treasured.

"It seemed so self-evident, and yet it hadn't been talked about. No one had studied it," Betcher said in an interview here. "There had been a lot written about why relationships didn't work."

Betcher decided to look instead at something that perhaps did help relationships work. He studied couples' romantic play, through interviews with 30 couples and questionnaires of many more, and his book is full of nicknames and anecdotes that are real and funny and perhaps useful.

Silliness and playfulness can be used to defuse an endless argument, to ease the tension surrounding sensitive subjects, to keep the relationship unpredictable and exciting and to add a sense of adventure in the bedroom, Betcher found. The silly names and games that couples do only with one another create a "culture of two," which is practically intimacy defined.

"A very important part of what the book is about is that people in intimate relationships have the leeway to not only be silly but to some extent be kids with each other," Betcher said.

"While we go about our adult roles in the workday, that's not all we are. There is a way in which we all are, sort of deep down, scared little kids who want to be taken care of. To be able to be childlike, not childish, to let down your hair and be silly is an asset. It is part of maturity. It is enriching and it's fun."

Betcher traces intimate play through history, noting that Napoleon called Josephine "Naughty Gawkly Foolish Cinderella."

Theodore Roosevelt called his wife "My Bewitching Moonbeam."

As for Reagan calling his wife Mommy, even though their children have been away for years, Betcher ventured that "there's a way in which men relate to their wives to some extent as mothers. And it's actually normal that couples who have been together for a period of time relate to each other, to a certain extent, as if they were kids and parents."

Betcher confessed to being astonished at the range of nicknames people admitted to calling each other.

"One of the common nicknames is food. People call each other things like Peach and Apple Fritter and Dumpling," said Betcher, who would not reveal what he calls his wife of two years.

"My thinking about it is that we call the people we are intimate with names according to our desires. One of the basic needs we have is to eat, and to enjoy the sensual experience in itself. And then there's the feeling that 'I love you so much I could eat you up.'"

Another popular category is animal names, with bears — Boobobear, Honbear, Yogibear, Huggybear, and so forth the most common.

"I think it has to do with cuddly animals, not the Yellowstone Park kind of bear," Betcher said.

A cuddly anteater?

Although Anteater, one of the names Betcher unearthed, is technically an animal nickname, it also falls into another category, which is just something foolish and funny, like Rat Features or Nerdman. Names like that say, "We're unique and special, and, therefore, so is our relationship." Still other names invoke baby talk — Snookums, Cutesy Pooh — again invoking the warmth and good feelings of childhood.

Names like Angel, Princess and Superman are "idealizations," Betcher said, and they usually crop up early in the love process, when one is entirely swept off one's feet with the wonderfulness of his or her mate.

The use of nicknames is a "rechristening," Betcher said, as if to symbolically say, "Our life starts here and now, and this is different from any other relationship we have ever had."

When Betcher sees patients in marital counseling who are having trouble and arguing, he teaches some of them his technique of using "the absurd word."

"They agree together on an absurd word. It can be anything, like pomegranate or rutabaga. The agreement I ask them to make is that either one can provoke this word at any time if they feel they're having a destructive, run-on argument, and they have to then stop talking and back off for 15 minutes until they've calmed down."

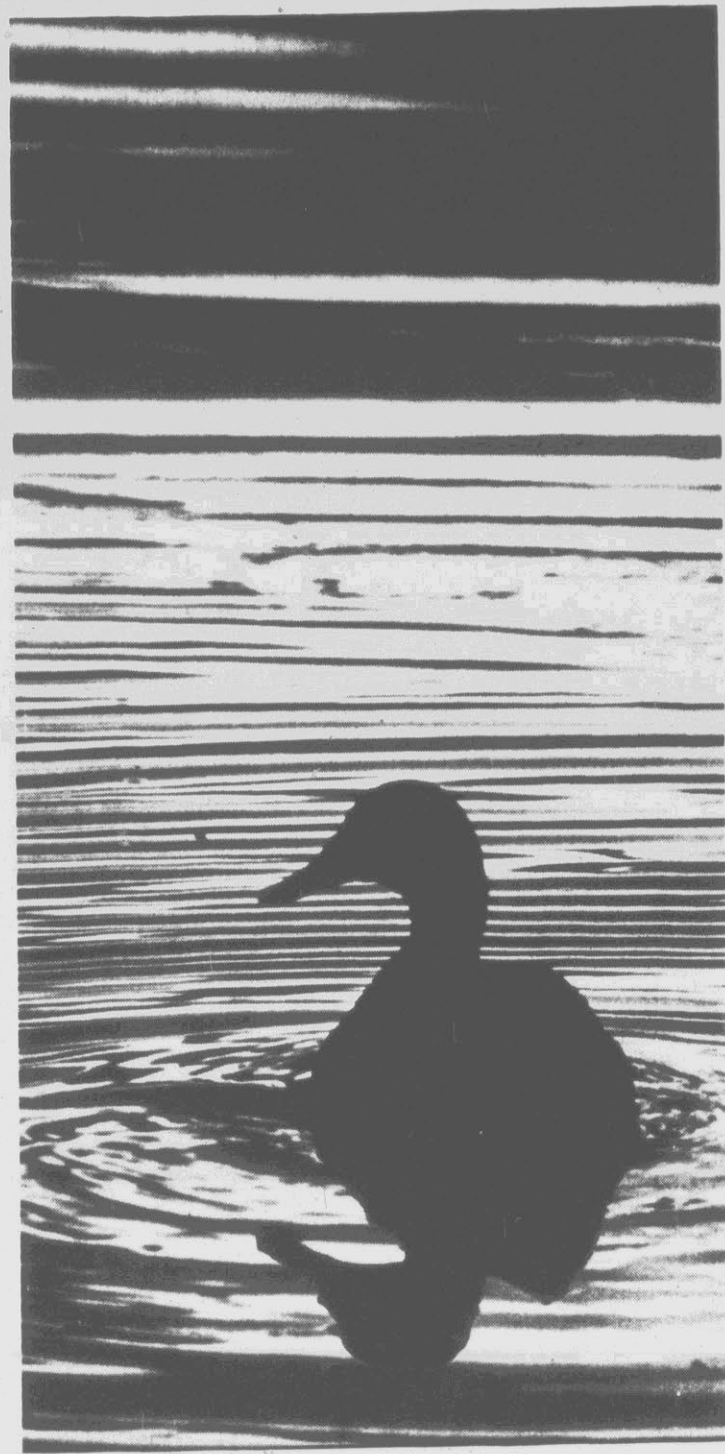

Another woman suddenly found herself interrupting a fight by finding a light bulb and handing it to her husband.

"What's this?" the husband said. "It's a bright idea," she said. "The bright idea is, let's stop arguing."

Playfulness and the use of shared fantasies have long been recommended for couples who want to put the spark back in their sex lives, and Betcher has an entire chapter on this. The point is, let loose and pretend that you are the boss and the secretary, or that you've just met that day in a bar, or that you are a teacher seducing a student.

But what if you have no imagination, no sense of humor?

Betcher said this is doubtful. "Most people have at least some innate rudimentary capacity to have a sense of humor or play," he said. "There are very few people who are sort of terminally serious."

Tips On Checking Gaskets Marina Welcomer Looks Back

Homemaker's Haven

Evelyn Spangler

Warm weather always reminds consumers that they should keep refrigerator doors closed and check refrigerator gaskets for tears and gaps. This is a good idea, since the door gasket seal is the most vulnerable area for heat leaking into the refrigerator cabinet.

Just as heat causes a substance to expand, the cold air within the refrigerator contracts, results in a partial vacuum inside the cabinet. Warm, moisture-laden air from the kitchen will attempt to enter the cabinet at the smallest opening. So it is very important to maintain a good door seal.

What is the correct way to check for good gasket seals? On today's refrigerators, it is a little more cumbersome than it was when a dollar bill held tightly by a gasket was the test.

Video Given At Network Meet

A video program on spring and summer fashions and patterns was shown at the meeting of Women's Network held last week.

Louise Downing, co-chairman of programs, introduced the program.

Guests for the meeting, recognized by Evelyn Darden, president, were Sylvia English, Martha Smith, Rosalie Trotman, Connie Kuenzi, Kay Krusa, Mary Ward and Hannah Wille.

The meeting was held at the Greenville Country Club.

The dollar bill test worked well when refrigerators had mechanical door latches and firms rubber gaskets. However, most refrigerators in use today do not have mechanical door latches. A federal regulation requires that the force necessary to open a refrigerator or freezer or freezer door from the inside must not be more than 15 pounds.

To meet this standard, refrigerators today use magnetic door gaskets that have a much lighter sealing pressure. Even when the seal is good, a dollar bill can be easily removed at any point around the door.

The only sure method for checking magnetic door gaskets is to place a 150-watt outdoor flood lamp inside the refrigerator and freezer compartments. (A smaller watt bulb is not bright enough to work.) The lighting in the room should be dimmed. Aim the light to one length of the gasket at a time, having the light cord exit through the other side. Close the door. Check the entire length of the gasket for light showing through. Reposition the lamp and cord to the other sides of the gasket. Use a mirror to inspect along the bottom of the door.

What causes a poor gasket seal? The usual reason, where the gasket is not obviously torn or damaged, is the cabinet improperly positioned on the floor. This causes the door to gap open at the top or bottom. To correct this, simply adjust the leveling legs or rollers until the cabinet is firmly positioned on the floor.

AHAM (Association of Home Appliance Manufacturers) has established a dehumidification selection guide to help consumers choose a unit with the correct capacity for their needs. Values in the table indicate dehumidification required in pints per 24 hours. This is based on the area and moisture level of the space to be dehumidified. To select a unit that can dehumidify the space you have, compare the number of pints in the AHAM guide to the capacity of different models in the product specification. Call the Agricultural Extension Service at 752-2934 for a copy of this guide.

By JOHN PLATERO

Fort Lauderdale News Sun-Sentinel

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Ruth Baer is retiring from the glassed-in control tower at the large marina where for 25 years she has served as concierge for the plush yachts of the rich and famous.

Looking back over the quarter century she's spent at Bahia Mar Resort & Yachting Center, Baer says she's seen more change in the vessels that berth here than in those who sail them.

"The boats used to be long and skinny," she said. "Now they are big and fat with a broad beam. But yachtsmen haven't changed — they are still nice people."

Another difference is the diminishing number of yachts manned by hired skippers.

"At first, the boats had captains. Now, the owners do it themselves and have a crew to clean up. Times have changed."

Another noticed trend in yachting is that the affluent now leave their vessels in South Florida after the November through April winter season.

"It used to be they took their boats up North. Now it's too expensive," she explained.

Baer, her husband, Bob, and their two children came from Columbus, Ohio, to Broward County in 1962 in a 28-foot boat. Her husband owns a Pompano Beach plastics company.

Soon after their arrival, she recalled, Coast Guard Auxiliary officials asked her to operate a welcoming station for yachtsmen who stopped at the marina, which was then owned by the late restaurateur Patricia Murphy. When that season was over, she was asked by the marina to stay on.

Every boat — small and large — that spends at least one night in one of the marina's 350 slips is handled by Baer, who is called a marina coordinator. Besides being a one-person welcoming committee, she functions like the front desk clerk at a hotel, registering guests, explaining services available and collecting when they leave.

Her office, shared with senior tower operator Timothy Wood, resembles an airport control tower. From her desk she enjoys a panoramic view of the marina's 40 acres fronting on the Intracoastal Waterway.

"There's hundreds of millions of dollars worth of boats there," she said. "Some are exquisite and even have helicopters and cars on them."

Many yachts, she added, stay for weeks or months.

"For some, it's their winter home. Some boats never move. Others go out often to Miami, Palm Beach or the islands."

Berthing charges, she said, are determined by a boat's length and beam. The maximum charge is $1.25 per foot per day, which includes normal water and electric services.

Hookups for cable TV are available at $5 a day or $25 a month and a phone put aboard costs 50 cents per local call.

Straight Face Is Difficult

By DAWN MORVILLE
Decatur Herald & Review
FORSYTH, Ill. (AP) — They stand as still as fiberglass mannequins. Then you see them blink.

If they look lifelike, that's because they are alive.

When shoppers pass by, "I think they think we're real (mannequins)," 14-year-old Jennifer Meyer said.

Rudi Pyle, 14, agreed. "At first they do, and then they look closer and see you blink."

They and two other Decatur girls were working as "freeze models" in front of the Ups 'n Downs clothing store in Hickory Point Mall. The store has 30 models who pose on weekends.

Some people are scared when they see the "mannequins" move, said Karissa Koyak, 13.

"Some people have to come up and touch you to make sure, and then they feel like fools," added Laura Suckow, 13.

Do the models feel like fools? "Sometimes," Laura admitted, "when they say some really weird comment to make you laugh."

The girls agreed that keeping a straight face was one of the more difficult parts of the job.

Karissa says when she sees people she knows, "I get red." But Rudi says she just smiles "so they know I'm not stuck up or anything."

Instead of payment, the models get a 20 percent discount on clothing they buy in the store on the days they work.

Some, interested in being professional models, value the experience. Others just see it as a way to pass the time and enjoy shoppers' reactions.

"It's sort of something for them to do for fun," said Dawn Lazell, assistant store manager, who coordinates the program.

The girls choose poses that resemble the non-living mannequins seen in storefront displays. They alternate sitting and standing so their feet don't get too tired. Their positions change about every 15 minutes during the two-hour period they work, Rudi said.

The girls are not allowed to chew gum or start conversations among themselves or with shoppers — though Laura admits they do whisper to each other sometimes.

Lazell said the freeze model idea was the company's and was a first for the mall. But it is seen frequently in bigger cities such as Chicago and St. Louis to promote clothing, store manager Paula Jones said.

The models can be seen from 1 to 3 p.m. every Saturday and Sunday wearing clothing — usually new merchandise, price tags and all — chosen by store employees. The girls provide their own shoes, socks and earrings.

"I started because I want to be a model when I get older so I thought this would be a good opportunity to practice," Laura said.

Jennifer said, "I just think it's fun, something to do on weekends because there's nothing to do." It also looks good on a resume, she said. "Plus, the 20 percent off on clothes."

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

Sharon Denise Garris and Mark Montgomery Angel were married in a private double ring ceremony Saturday at 2 p.m.

The bride is the daughter of Judith A. Garris and Bobby G. Garris, both of Greenville, and the bridegroom is the son of Patsy J. Angel of Louisville, Ky., and the late Lt. Col. William E. Angel.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Michael G. Garris. Her honor attendant was Cathy Dennis of Greenville.

William B. Ellington Jr. of Greenville was best man. Eric Angel and William Angel of Greenville, sons of the bridegroom, were ushers.

The bride wore a two-piece ivory tea length dress styled with an embroidered bodice and long sleeves. She carried a bouquet of white silk roses with lace and satin streamers.

A reception was held at the home of the bride and was given by Peggy Woodruff and Barbara Howlett, both of Greenville.

The couple will live in Greenville after a wedding trip to Wintergreen Ski Resort in Virginia.

MRS. ANGEL

The bride is a graduate of East Carolina University with a B.S.A. accounting degree and is employed by Dixon, Duffus and Doub, attorneys at law, and the bridegroom is employed by Fieldcrest-Cannon Inc.

Have A Heart, Lend A Hand

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR READERS: Don't tell me tomorrow is St. Valentine's Day again! We just finished with Christmas. Well, it's true, so be a sweetheart and call someone you love and say, "I love you." Make two or three calls. Who said you can't love more than one person — in different ways, of course.

Go through your closets and get rid of all those clothes you've been saving until you lose 10 pounds. Your favorite charity can turn those good-as-new garments into money.

Visit someone in a nursing home and take him or her for a ride. Forgive an enemy, hug your children, neuter your cat, spay your dog, listen to a bore, tell your parents you appreciate them, send a donation to CARE, the Salvation Army or your United Way, fix up a date for someone who doesn't get many, quit smoking, get some exercise, count your calories, pay your dentist, donate some blood, return the book you borrowed, update your will, drive carefully, and if you're wrking, thank God you're able to, and watch where you're going. And don't wait until next St. Valentine's Day to be a sweetheart again.

DEAR ABBY: Does saying "I'm sorry" absolve a person from any further responsibility? I was wearing my best dress at a formal affair when a man I did not know accidentally spilled a drink on it. He said, "Oh, I'm sorry," then I pleasantly — not rudely — told him I was sure he was sorry, but it would cost $10 to have the dress cleaned, and I thought he should pay for it.

He said he was not that sorry, and turned away. I might add that I then spilled my drink all over his tuxedo and told him that we were even now.

My question: Is saying "I'm sorry" enough? If he had hit my car, he would have had to pay for the damages — sorry or not. Isn't spilling a drink on someone just a smaller accident? — BOCA RATON ACCIDENT

DEAR BOCA RATON: A gentleman (or lady) who accidentally spills a drink on someone should not need to be asked to pay the dry cleaning bill — it should be offered. The man who rebuked you was no gentleman, and repaying him in kind as you did was somewhat immature — but that's another letter.

Is saying "I'm sorry" enough? Certainly not. One puts his money where his mouth is.

DEAR ABBY: I could have written that letter signed "Touch-Me-Not." I was glad to see it because I thought I was the only person in the world who did not like to be touched by people I don't know very well. I am a woman, and I particularly do not like to be touched by men.

Now, please tell me — and other women like me — how to signal the touchers of the world to please keep their hands off me? I am not a cold person, but here's the way most men operate: First, they touch your hand, then they place a hand around your shoulder and tend to draw you closer, and unless they are stopped, before you know it, they have their arm around your waist, and so on. So how do I handle that situation? — INDIANA TOUCH-ME-NOT

DEAR TOUCH-ME-NOT: When a man whose advances you do not welcome touches your hand, deftly move so that you are not within his reach. If he repositions himself and touches you again, move — but not so subtly this time. If he either doesn't get the message or chooses to ignore it and places a hand on you, don't rely on body language — get verbal. If that fails — leave.

Howell

"It seems only yesterday that I stood here and told you I was challenged by, and accepted your appointment to the chancellorship of East Carolina University," Howell said in his address to the board.

"Five years are but a blip compared to the age astronomers hypothesize for the universe. The board of governors would be about three blips and the University of North Carolina would possibly be visible on a chart of human history. That universities are among the oldest institutions in the world today leads to the conclusion that we have joined the survivors."

Howell thanked board members for their efforts during his tenure. "Gladys (Howell's wife) and I have been gratified during our time at East Carolina University," he said. "The work has been continuous, but we have enjoyed most of it. We deeply appreciate the friendship and support of many groups that have made all this possible."

The UNC Board of Governors and ECU officials have worked together to make East Carolina a stronger institution, according to Howell.

"The initial members of this board know that the people at ECU came into the system in 1971 with some uncertainty about the future," Howell said. "I can tell you that we were alert to any possible disadvantage we might suffer at your hands."

"I can also tell you that the General Administration and their board gave us no cause to complain. We found instead a resolute determination to maintain a rational basis for decisions and fair treatment for all constituent institutions."

Universities continue to endure on the basis of strong decisions and their place in society, according to Howell.

"Education is essential to society and that no doubt has been a major factor in the unmatched longevity of universities," he said. "But I am also confident that universities have survived because the people in our surviving universities who make the university's decisions have tried, like you have, to be equitable."

Robinson School.

"It is a great honor to be chosen by the committee and to be in such good company with the other teachers who were nominated," Ms. Jordan said.

She credited "the support of the people I work with everyday, my family and friends, and my faith that keeps me from being alone in the classroom" with her success.

Ms. Jordan, 25, has been teaching for four years. She received a pre-elementary education degree from the College of the Albemarle and a bachelor's degree in special education from East Carolina University. She is pursuing a master's degree in special education learning disabilities at East Carolina University.

She is a member of the Pitt-Greenville International Reading Association, the North Carolina Association of Educators, the National Education Association, the Council for Exceptional Children, and the Association for Retarded Citizens. She is a member of Kappa Delta Phi Educational Fraternity.

"Many of my family members have had careers in education, so I grew up hearing much about teaching and developed a great respect for the field," she said in a biographical sketch written for the competition.

"A positive school experience, caring individuals and enjoyment of children affected my decision to become a teacher. The added challenge of working with exceptional students caused me to choose special education," she added.

"Being a teacher means devoting your life's vocation to the pursuit of learning and to making a difference, no matter how great or small, in the lives of others," she said.

"Our students look to teachers as examples of what adults are and should be. Therefore, we are obliged to strive to be our best as we ask the same of our students," Ms. Jordan said. "If we want our students to be excited about learning, we must also keep alive our own love of learning by taking advantage of educational opportunities. Teachers must be open-minded and thoughtful to initiate new teaching techniques and resources."

"We are not limited to academics in our teaching," she said. "Often unwittingly, the teacher demonstrates social and coping skills throughout the day by the way he or she gets along with others. We expect student's respect; we must also show our students that we have respect for them and other people."

Pirates Close Out Road Schedule

East Carolina's Pirates will attempt to do something Saturday night that they haven't done all year long — win a Colonial Athletic Conference basketball game on the road.

The Pirates will be invading the less-than-friendly confines of Trask Coliseum at UNC-Wilmington, attempting to snap a four-game winning streak by the Seahawks and a second four-game streak in Trask.

If successful, the Pirates will also snap a 10-game dive in the league, dating back through four games in the 1985-86 season.

They've come close this year to winning, being in every game with the exception of the Navy contest, at the end. In their last outing, this past Monday at Richmond, the Pirates had the ball facing a one-point deficit in the closing seconds, but were called for a controversial charge with six seconds left, allowing Richmond to pull out the victory.

The game, set for 7:30 p.m., will be telecast locally over Home Team Sports Network, a cable channel.

The contest is the final road CAA game for the Pirates, who will then close out their regular season road slate by traveling on to Rock Hill, S.C., on Monday to face Winthrop College.

The Pirates go into the two-game trip with an 11-12 record — the first time this season that they have fallen below .500. They are 3-8 in CAA action with two home games against George Mason and James Madison still to play before the CAA tournament in Hampton, Va., starting Feb. 28, along with the UNCW game.

"We had a very disappointing weekend," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said of the last road trip to William & Mary and Richmond. "Both the William & Mary and Richmond games were ones we could have won, but we couldn't get any breaks. The road gets even tougher though as we travel to Wilmington."

"They have been playing very well and doing the things you have to do in this league. We did not play that badly earlier this year against them (in a 85-70 loss) but (Brian Rowson had an outstanding game."

Rowson, the Seahawks' 6-9 senior all-star, poured in a school record 39 points in that first game this year, and has been devastating in each meeting between the Pirates and UNCW over the years.

Wilmington comes into the game with a 13-9 overall mark and a 7-4 CAA record.

Rowson leads the way with a 22.6 point per game scoring average. He's also the leading rebounder with an 11.4 mark. The only other Seahawk in double figures is 6-2 senior guard Sandy Anderson, hitting 10.5 per game.

The other starters include 6-5 senior forward Charles Cherry, 3.8 ppg; 6-6 sophomore forward Greg Bender, 8.1 ppg, and 6-2 junior Mark Gary, hitting 7.0 ppg.

Rowson has scored 110 points in the last four games against the Pirates, a fined 27.5 per game average.

Winthrop is currently 5-17 on the year, with a home game against Augusta on Saturday night.

In each of their previous two meetings, both in Greenville, the Pirates have come out on top, winning 74-66 in 1984-85 and 77-69 last year. Winthrop, in its first season as a Division I team, has played a demanding schedule, facing N.C. State, Wake Forest and Clemson, along with Miami, Fla., New Orleans, New Mexico, Air Force and Brooklyn College — all on the road. The school is a member of the Big South Conference.

The Eagles are coached by former Duke University star Steve Vacendak, who came to Winthrop as athletic director and found himself without a basketball coach — and had to take the job himself.

The Eagles are led by 6-3 senior guard Ted Houpt, hitting 16.4 points a game. Two other players also score in double figures, 6-4 junior forward Lenwood Harris at 11.5 and 6-5 sophomore forward Greg Washington at 10.3.

The other two starters are 6-5 junior Kenny Smith, hitting 9.7 and 6-0 freshman guard Sean Smith at 5.2.

Smith is the leading rebounder at 7.3 per game while Washington has a 6.5 average on the boards.

Lady Pirates Rally To Win

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina University overcame a poor first half to pull past tall South Carolina State, 62-53, in a women's basketball game Thursday night in Minges Coliseum.

The Lady Pirates, who trailed by as much as nine points in the first half, struggled back and had several opportunities throughout the second part of the first and the first part of the second halves to take the lead.

But it wasn't until Gretta O'Neal, playing her first game in several weeks after an injury, hit a layup with 7:34 left in the game, that the Lady Pirates took the lead for the first time at 45-43.

And it so appealed to them that they held it the rest of the way, moving out by as many as 10 before the final nine-point spread.

The game also saw the return of forward Monique Pompili, also sidelined for a couple of weeks with a hand injury. Pompili scored seven points in 21 minutes of play while O'Neal, playing only 16 minutes, pushed in 14 points.

Delphine Mabry led the Pirate scoring attack, hitting 17 points in the game — including the first three baskets — as the ECU women got off to a cold start. Alma Bethea added 13 points and snatched away 15 rebounds — high for the night — over the taller South Carolina State team.

State, paced by 6-6 center Wanda Pittman, held the lead most of the night until fouls began to mount up on the squad. Pittman finished with 17 points and 10 rebounds, while teammate, Cynthia Stevens, 6-1, had 14 rebounds. Both Susan Brown and Katrina Harris added 10 points each.

East Carolina shot only 33.3 percent in the first half, hitting just nine of 27 attempts from the field. But in the second half, they warmed to a fine 13 of 23 — 56.5 percent.

However, the Lady Pirates were chilly all night from the foul line making just 18 of 34 attempts.

That, however, was more than enough to overcome a three field goal deficit as South Carolina went to the line only seven times, making three. ECU held an 8-24 foul advantage against the Lady Bulldogs.

Coach Emily Manwaring was pleased with the play of both O'Neal and Pompili, coming off the injury list. "Gretta came in and did a good job in her first play in six to seven weeks," she said. "Mo was consistent and I thought Irish Hamilton played well."

"Getting players like Gretta and Mo back have got to help our morale," Manwaring added.

The Lady Pirates seemed content in the early going — and at times in the second half — to take their game straight at Pittman, who blocked five shots on the night. It wasn't what Manwaring wanted, however.

"We wanted to take the shots on the opposite side. Going at her is something you don't do. If she was guarding Alma (Bethea) then we were supposed to go to Val (Cooper). But it took us a while to figure out that we weren't supposed to go straight at her."

Strategy or not, it seemed to work for the good as Pittman picked up four fouls along the way and was held back on her defense because of it.

On defense, the Pirate plan was to try and force the ball to the opposite side Pittman was on and prevent the lob inside to her. "It took us a half to finally start sandwiching her in there so she couldn't get it and score," Manwaring said.

After a 2-2 tie, the Bulldogs started to pull away, scoring the next three baskets to open up a six-point lead, 8-2. The margin moved out to as much as nine, 15-6, before the Lady Pirates eased back and finally closed to one, 17-16 on a Pompili layup.

But despite having a couple of chances to take the lead, the Lady Pirates fell back again before tying it at 21-21 and 23-23. South Carolina State opened up another lead, 30-24, before Bethea made a free throw and a basket to trim it to 30-27 at intermission.

Bethea hit to open the second half and close the gap to one again, 30-29, but just as in the first half, the Pirates failed to convert opportunities to take the lead and South Carolina opened up a five-point lead once more, 36-31.

East Carolina finally fought back and tied it at 43-43 on a basket by Hamilton and then got the go-ahead shot from O'Neal at 45-43 with 7:34 left.

From there on out, the Lady

Pirates were in charge, steadily building up a 10-point lead at 55-45 with 2:59 left.

State closed back within six at 57-51 with 57 seconds to go, but the Lady Pirates hit just enough at the foul line to keep their distance.

The win boosts ECU to 14-10 on the season while State drops to 12-9.

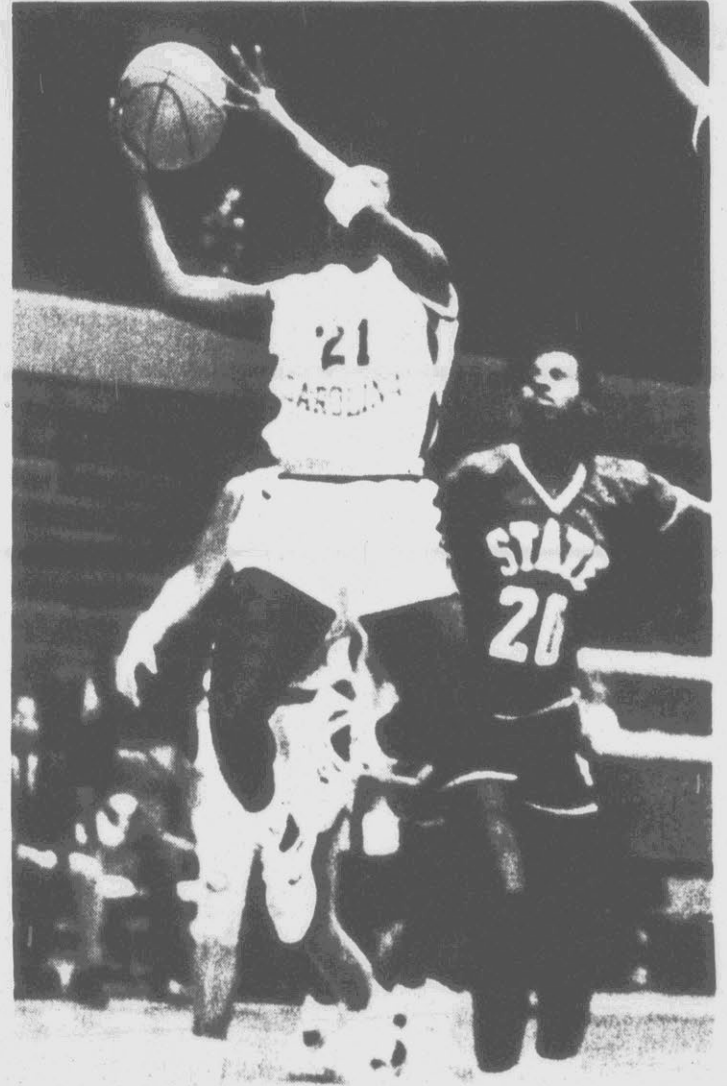

East Carolina's Lady Pirates will close out their home campaign on Saturday night, playing host to UNC-Wilmington in a 7:30 p.m. game in Minges.

Ken Schrader Nips Elliott By Four Inches

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Ken Schrader began celebrating the moment he hit the finish line even though he didn't know who had won.

The victory Thursday, the first of Schrader's Winston Cup career, wasn't confirmed until a photo of the finish was examined. It showed him edging Bill Elliott by four inches to win the first of two 125-mile qualifying races for Sunday's $1.5-million Daytona 500.

Benny Parsons won the companion event, beating Bobby Allison by one second.

"I didn't know, but I started celebrating anyway because we finished at least second," said Schrader, whose showing demonstrated that Elliott's is not the only Ford to be reckoned with Sunday.

But the races also gave hope to General Motors drivers, who had taken a backseat to the faster Fords all week.

"Maybe we can go Ford hunting now," said Parsons, who took advantage of lapped traffic and a final-lap spin by Blackie Wangerin to hold off Allison. "Some of them (Fords) are beatable."

Schrader, whose victory was the first in six years for car owner Junie Donlavey, barely hung on. But he wouldn't have been in the lead had his crew decided to change tires during a caution period with 23 laps remaining in the 50-lap event.

"That was Junie's decision," Schrader said. "That left us at the head of the pack" because they emerged from the pits first after taking gas only.

Elliott, who set a Daytona International Speedway qualifying record of 210.364 mph in Monday time trials, had new tires. He steadily closed a 15-car-length deficit.

But four laps from the finish, Elliott tried to set up a pass only to lose control of his car. He gathered it back in, but was forced to wait until the final lap to make a move.

"It felt like all four wheels came off the ground," said Elliott, the 1985

Daytona 500 winner. "That sort of changed my strategy."

He waited until the final lap, but was unable to use the typical Daytona slingshot maneuver in which a driver moves to the bottom of the banked track approaching the third turn on the 2.5-mile oval.

"He didn't have much choice," Schrader said of Elliott's high line through the turn. "If he could beat me that way, then he deserved to win."

Elliott lost speed as his car moved up the banking, and Schrader had just enough to hold him off to collect $22,000 in the track's first photo finish for a victory since the inaugural Daytona 500 in 1959.

Schrader said he felt no pressure despite Elliott's mastery of the track at which he has five career victories.

"That's not pressure," he explained. Pressure is when you come down here in 1986, run 194 (mph), wind up 46th fastest and have to start as a provisional from the back of the field."

He'll start third Sunday behind Elliott and Davey Allison, who secured front-row starting positions in Monday's qualifying. Allison had the pole in the second race Thursday and was strong in his Ford until succumbing to handling problems that relegated him to a sixth-place finish behind Parsons.

Allison's father Bobby, a two-time winner of the Daytona 500, had a shot at beating Parsons until Wangerin's mishap.

"I had to go by him on the high side," said Parsons, who was alongside Wangerin when the latter spun entering the first turn. "That just blocked it for Bobby. He couldn't come on after that."

Off his victory, Parsons will start fourth on Sunday. Allison, driving a Buick, will start sixth.

Starting fifth will be Darrell Waltrip, who finished third behind Elliott and Schrader. Defending 500 champion Geoff Bodine, was third to Parsons and Bobby Allison and will start eighth in his Chevrolet, one spot behind former 500 winner Buddy Baker.

Former winner A.J. Foyt, one of four drivers involved in an accident in the first race, will start 41st. Foyt, who strained his right shoulder in the crash, will drive a backup Oldsmobile.

The first race was slowed for 17 laps by three caution flags. They reduced Schrader's average speed to 130.397 mph.

Parsons, the 1975 Daytona 500 winner and 1973 Winston Cup champion, averaged 182.778 in a race slowed only once for three laps. He also won $22,000.

Action Underway

The Colonial Athletic Association Swimming and Diving Championships get underway with the women's 800 freestyle relay Thursday night in Minges Natatorium. East Carolina's Lady Pirates won the event by five seconds, but were disqualified, giving the win to James Madison. The event, which includes both men's and women's teams, continues through Saturday. (Reflector Photo by Tommy Forrest)

Divers Help Pace Navy To Early CAA Swim Lead

Navy's men swept the first four places in one-meter diving to gain the lead after one day's competition in the Colonial Athletic Association's swimming and diving championships which began Thursday at East Carolina University.

The Midshipmen finished the first day of the three-day event with a total of 208 points while East Carolina is in second place with 172 points.

East Carolina's women suffered a heavy loss in the 800 medley relay suffering a disqualification after easily winning the event in pool record time.

An overeager member of the team, however, leaped into the water in celebration before the event had been concluded, bringing on the automatic disqualification.

It not only cost the Lady Pirates the 20 points it would have gotten for winning, it also moved everyone else up a notch.

Thus, James Madison leads the women's standings with 239 points while Navy is second with 186 and ECU third with 185.

James Madison finished the relay in 7:57.67, a full five seconds behind the Lady Pirates, but gained first place with it.

Three new conference records were set during the evening, two by the men and one by the women.

The lone women's record came in the 200 medley relay, won by Navy's Debbie Williams, Dora Lockwood, Heidi Savage and Christi Frugh. Their time of 1:50.47 broke the old mark set last year by East Carolina of 1:58.78.

East Carolina's 800 freestyle relay team of Andy Jeter, Andy Johns, Kevin Hidalgo and David Killean set a new mark of 6:54.72, breaking the Pirates' old mark of 6:55.51, set last year.

The other new mark was made by Richmond's George Edelman in winning the 500 freestyle. His time of 4:36.86 broke the old record of UNCW's Don Hosier, set last year.

Action continues today and Saturday in Minges Natatorium.

Net Clinic Scheduled

The Greenville Recreation and Parks Department will sponsor a tennis verification clinic on Feb. 21.

The purpose of the clinic is for each person attending to receive a rating on his game. The National Tennis Rating Program was begun five years ago by the U.S. Tennis Association to try to form a uniform rating system throughout the country.

Players are ranked from one to seven, and players ranked the same in different parts of the country should be on a par.

The clinic will be held at the River Birch Tennis Center and any players who wish to participate in a USTA league this year must be verified. Since the N.C. State league championships will be held in Greenville June 6-7, all Greenville Tennis League players are encouraged to attend, but the clinic is not limited to those players.

Cost of the clinic is $3 and advanced registration is required.

For further information, call the River Birch Tennis Center, 756-9343.

Waltrip Plans To Stay Ahead

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Darrell Waltrip will start today's opening round of the International Race of Champions XI from the front. And he plans to stay there.

The three-time NASCAR stock car champion drew the pole position in a blind draw on Wednesday.

That drew a big grin from Waltrip, who said, "My plan is to start first and stay there the whole way, including the last lap."

"If I'm in the lead, I'll take my chances on the last lap, even if a couple other guys get together in a draft and come after me."

The winner of the 40-lap, 100-mile event on Daytona International Speedway's 2.5-mile track, will earn just $5,000, but it will give him a big leg up on the $175,000 that goes to the winner of the four-race series.

The series includes races at Mid-Ohio Sports Car Course, Michigan International Speedway and Watkins Glen International.

Today's race will be taped for broadcast by ABC-TV at 2 p.m. EST Saturday.

The rest of the field includes stock car drivers Bill Elliott, Dale Earnhardt and Geoff Bodine, Indy-car drivers Al Unser and Al Unser Jr., Mario and Michael Andretti and Bobby Rahal, and road racers Derek Bell of Britain, Scott Pruett and Wally Dallenbach Jr.

Bodine, who is the defending champion in Sunday's Daytona 500 here, is a first-time starter in the IROC series, as are three of the four youngsters in the race — Pruett, 26; Michael Andretti, 24, and Dallenbach, 23.

Unser Jr., 24, the defending IROC champion and the youngest man ever to win the all-star series, said, "It's tough the first time. You have so much to learn and so little time in the cars to learn it."

Pruett, who has gotten as much practice time in the identically prepared Chevrolet IROC Z-28 Camaros as possible this week, said, "I haven't figured it all out yet."

"When you're out there by yourself, it's easy, almost boring. But when you're in a group, it's almost like you're riding, not driving the car. They (the veterans) are teaching me a lot ... scaring me, too."

The younger Andretti said: "I've never been in a car as heavy as that on a superspeedway, and driving these cars at these speeds is a new experience. I'm sure I'm going to learn a lot of lessons on Friday."

Dallenbach, another second generation driver agreed, saying, "Experience-wise, we're about 20 years behind."

Waltrip said he was happy to see all the youngsters coming to the series, adding jokingly, "They're nice young boys. They believe anything I tell them."

Chicod, Whitfield Split Two Games

CHICOD — Chicod and G.R. Whitfield split a pair of junior high school basketball games Thursday.

Chicod won the girls' game, taking a 29-13 victory. Nikki Adams led Chicod with 14 points while P. Telfaire led Whitfield with eight.

Whitfield came away with a 42-30 win in the boy's game. Wayne McCullough and Eric Ruffin each had 10 points to lead Whitfield. Stuart Roach had 16 and Patrick Leary had 11 for Chicod.

Holyfield, Tillman Meet In Battle Of Roommates

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Evander Holyfield and Henry Tillman haven't seen much of each other since they were roommates at the 1984 Olympics.

They will get together again on Valentine's Day, but not in the name of friendship.

Holyfield will defend his World Boxing Association junior heavyweight title against Tillman Saturday in a scheduled 15-round bout at Bally's Reno Hotel and Casino.

"Henry and I were friends in the Olympics and we're still friends, but he wants something I have, and I'm not willing to give it to him," Holyfield said Thursday at a news conference.

"We became friends in 1983 when we got into the Operation Gold program. We did a lot of things together."

What Holyfield would like to do Saturday is move inside on Tillman and keep the pressure on. Tillman would like to keep the fight in the middle of the ring.

"We want him to jab his way inside and we want him to rip up his body," said Lou Duva, who, along with George Benton, trains Holyfield.

"My height and reach advantages are good, so it's only smart for me to fight in the middle of the ring," the 6-foot-3 Tillman said.

Against Bert Cooper, Tillman elected to brawl and he got knocked down twice in suffering his only loss, a 12-round decision.

"It looked like he was intimidated, not because Bert Cooper hit hard, but because Bert Cooper was in his face," the 6-1 Holyfield said.

"I don't feel he can move 15 rounds at a fast pace," the champion added.

The two have been in the ring together before. They sparred three rounds before the Pan American Games, and they engaged in controlled sparring before the Olympics. One man would be the aggressor for a round, then the other would assume that role for a round.

Holyfield's first title defense is scheduled to start at about 1:50 p.m. PST and will be televised by ABC. The champion was a 4-1 favorite.

"He's the champion, and the champion automatically is supposed to be the favorite," Tillman, 26, said.

Holyfield and Tillman each won silver medals at the Pan American Games in 1983 at Venezuela. Then, Tillman won a gold medal in the 201-pound class at the Los Angeles Olympics, while Holyfield had to settle for a bronze medal at 178 pounds following a controversial disqualification in a semifinal bout.

The weight limit for the junior heavyweight division is 190 pounds. The weigh-in was scheduled for 8 p.m. tonight.

Tillman weighed 210 pounds for his pro debut, but he doesn't feel he will be hurt by dropping down. He weighed only 194 pounds when he won the 201 final at the Olympics and he has been fighting in the 190s.

"It's not as if I'm dropping 10 or 15 pounds," the challenger said.

Holyfield weighed in the 170s when he first turned pro, but could not fight at 175-pound limit of the light heavyweight division.

The 24-year-old Holyfield, of Atlanta, became the first member of the 1984 Olympic team to win a pro title.

In his 12th fight, July 20, 1986, at Atlanta, Holyfield won the junior heavyweight title with a 15-round decision over Dwight Muhammad Qawi. Last Dec. 8, Holyfield knocked out Michael Brothers in the third round of a nontitle bout at Paris for a 13-0 record, with nine knockouts.

Tillman, of Los Angeles, has won four straight fights for a 14-1 mark, with 10 knockouts, since losing the North American Boxing Federation junior heavyweight title to Cooper last June 15 at Atlantic City, N.J.

Cooper is the WBA's top contender. Qawi is ranked second, and Tillman is No. 3.

No Progress By Morris, Tigs

CHICAGO (AP) — With the Detroit Tigers and pitcher Jack Morris arguing over a half million dollars, neither side could agree on who who would pay for a $30 urn of coffee provided by the hotel.

"No one in there would sign for it," said a waiter, who shrugged and walked away with the full pot.

Morris, baseball's winningest pitcher in the 1980s, has asked for a one-year, $1.85 million contract and the American League club has countered with a $1.35 million offer.

Representatives for each side met Thursday in a Chicago hotel with arbitrator Richard Bloch, a Washington, D.C., attorney who said he would choose one of the two figures today.

"The performance of the player is the key question in any of these hearings," Bloch said Thursday.

If Morris wins, it will be the largest arbitration award ever and make him one of the highest-paid pitchers in baseball.

Morris, 31, had a 21-8 record with a 3.27 earned run average last season. His victory total was second only to Roger Clemens of the Boston Red Sox.

Morris' six shutouts were tops in the majors, while he ranked fifth in innings pitched with 267 and strikeouts with 223. He tied for third in complete games with 15.

His 123-81 record is baseball's best this decade.

"We based our case on Jack's achievements," said Morris' agent, Dick Moss. "Jack hasn't done anything to be ashamed of."

The Tigers contend that Morris' ERA isn't among the top 10 in baseball, while he led all pitchers for much of last season in home runs allowed. For the entire year, Morris allowed 40 home runs, second behind Minnesota's Bert Blyleven with 50.

"I don't think there was anything that they introduced as something that we weren't prepared for," Morris said after the 4½-hour session Thursday.

Tigers General Manager Bill Lajoie declined comment on the proceedings.

BUILDING AMERICA'S FUTURE

Purdue Avenges Earlier Loss To Iowa By 80-73

By The Associated Press
The good college basketball teams win on the road. Purdue and Iowa must be good; they beat each other on the road.

The seventh-ranked Boilermakers turned the tables on No. 4 Iowa from last month and beat the Hawkeyes 80-73 Thursday night to claim second place in the Big Ten Conference.

"This was the biggest game we've ever had on the road," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said. "I can say without hesitation that this is the best team we've played. We finally had all eight guys working together."

One Purdue player worked a little better than the rest as guard Everett Stephens scored a career-high 23 points as he made all five of his shots from 3-point range.

In other games involving ranked teams Thursday night, No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Fullerton State 74-64; No. 11 Illinois defeated Minnesota 79-67; and No. 18 Texas Christian downed Southern Methodist 69-50.

Iowa, which has lost two games at home this season, beat Purdue 70-67 on Jan. 19 in Mackey Arena when the Hawkeyes were ranked No. 1. In that game, Iowa rallied from an eight-point second-half deficit, a point which did not escape Keady.

"Last time we got beat, we got a lead and we got carried away shooting outside jumpers," Keady said. "Our shot selection was one thing we changed. Our second priority was to be tough on the boards."

The teams finished with 32 rebounds each, a far cry from the 43-24 advantage Iowa had in their last meeting.

"We're doing better with the zone," Keady said. "Before, people were outrebounding us; now we're packing it in better."

"I think perhaps Purdue did the best job rebounding against us tonight than any team has done this season," Iowa Coach Tom Davis said. "They have very good overall team speed and their quickness really helps them in rebounding."

Iowa, which trailed 57-47 with 10:43 to play, cut the deficit to 66-61 with 2:50 left. But Purdue hit six straight free throws and a goaltending call went against the Hawkeyes, while Iowa managed one free throw and the Boilermakers had an 11-point lead.

"I thought we came back well late in the game and maybe even had them on the verge, but then they made their free throws and some good plays and put it away," Davis said.

No. 1 UNLV 74, Fullerton State 64
Nevada-Las Vegas had its lowest offensive output of the season, but the Runnin' Rebels still won to clinch their fifth consecutive Pacific Coast Athletic Association regular-season title.

"The team was really ripe (for an upset) coming in with all the distractions," UNLV Coach Jerry Tarkanian said of his team that had to deal with the drug-related arrest earlier in the week of recruit Lloyd Daniels. "It was a test of character for the ballclub to come out and play hard."

Armon Gilliam scored 22 points and Mark Wade added 14 as the Runnin' Rebels, the nation's leading offensive team at 95.7 points per game, improved to 25-1 overall and 13-0 in the conference.

The Runnin' Rebels broke a 52-52 tie midway through the second half as they scored eight straight points, six by Gilliam.

Fullerton State, 13-9 and 6-7, was led by Henry Turner and Richard Morton with 20 points each.

No. 11 Illinois 79, Minnesota 67
Senior Ken Norman and freshman Steve Bardo combined to give the Illini their fifth straight victory. Norman scored 26 points and Bardo added 16 and the two combined to spark an 11-1 run at the start of the second half that turned a 38-35 halftime lead into a comfortable cushion.

A Minnesota turnover at the start of the second half led to a layup by Illinois' Tony Wysinger. Then Bardo stole the ball and drove for a layup. After a Minnesota free throw, Bardo fed Norman for a layup, Doug Altenberger hit a 3-point field goal and Norman scored on an inbounds pass from Altenberger for a 49-36 Illinois lead.

"We played a beautiful first half," Minnesota Coach Clem Haskins said. "The start of the second half we turned the ball over, some critical turnovers. We cannot start the second half like that."

Illinois Coach Lou Henson not only likes Bardo but what the 6-foot-6 guard does for the team.

"He's gotten better and played better; we're a little better ballclub with him in there," Henson said. "Right now, it's our best ballclub."

Visiting Illinois improved to 19-5 and 9-3, while Minnesota, which was led by Jim Shikenjanski's 14 points, fell to 9-12 and 2-9 with its ninth straight loss.

No. 18 Texas Christian 69, SMU 50
Texas Christian Coach Jim Killingsworth feels his team will be part of the "March Madness" this year.

"You're talkin' NCAA bid now," Killingsworth said after the Horned Frogs improved to 20-4 overall and kept first place in the Southwest Conference with an 11-1 mark.

"I feel with 20 victories and beating LSU and Oklahoma on the road we should get an NCAA bid no matter what happens in the conference," Killingsworth said. "They'll have to come up with a new excuse if they don't give it to us this year."

Carven Holcombe had 17 points and Larry Richard added 16 to carry the Horned Frogs to their 23rd consecutive victory in Daniel-Meyer Coliseum.

Texas Christian hit eight of its first 11 shots in the second half to pull away from a 32-24 halftime lead.

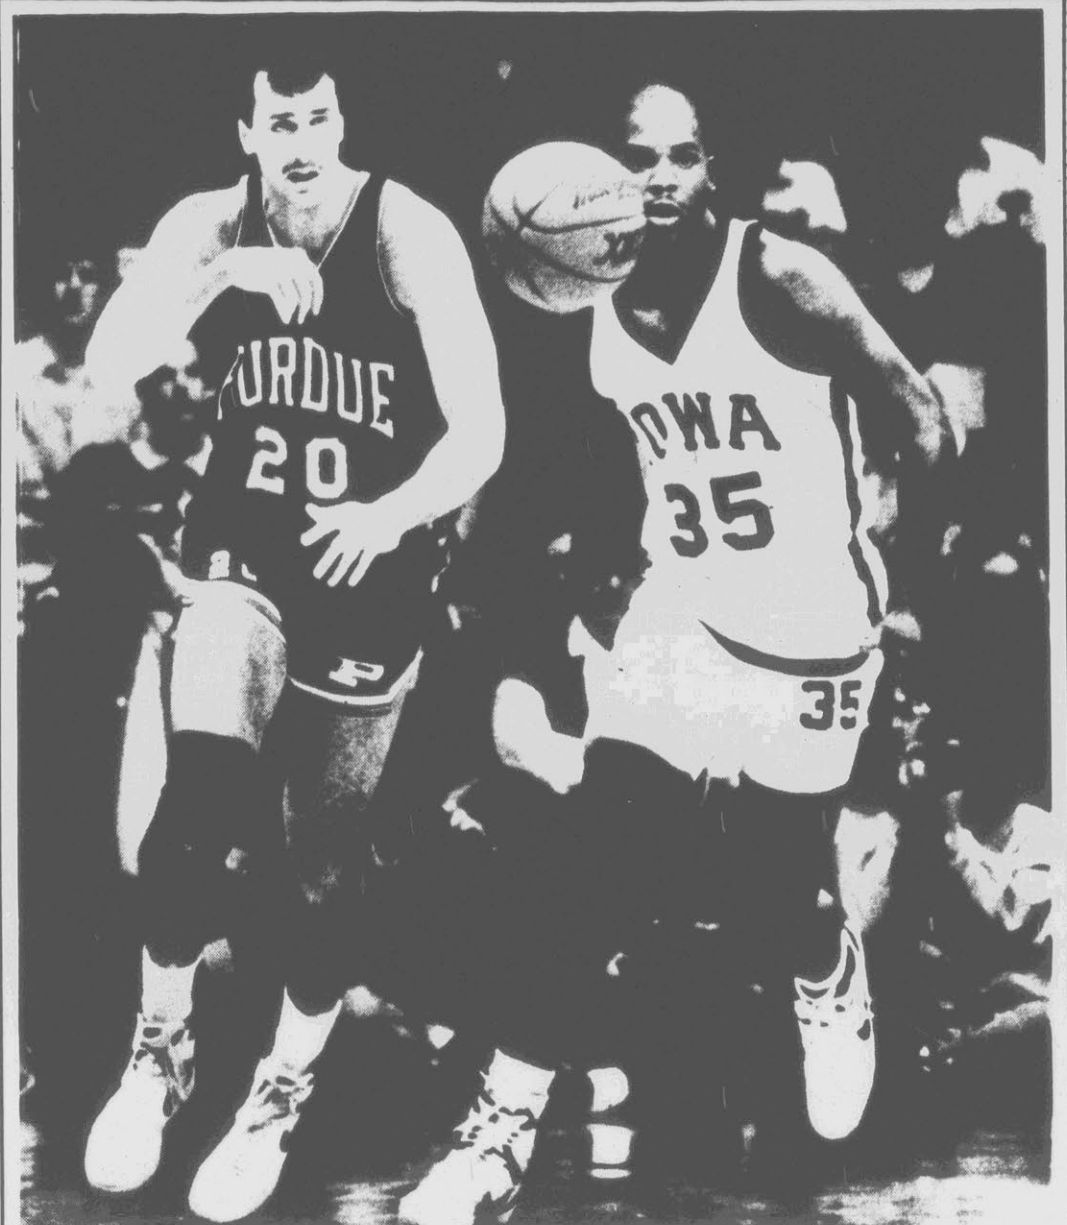

Southern Methodist, 12-11 and 3-8, was led by Scott Johnson, who finished with 19 points, including five 3-pointers.

Other Games
Hersey Hawkins scored a career-high 43 points to lead Bradley to a 113-84 victory over Indiana State, which lost for the 22nd time in 24 road games.

Eric Riggins scored a career-high 39 points as Rutgers defeated Massachusetts 82-67. Riggins has averaged 29.1 points in his last seven games.

Tom Domako scored a career-high 39 points as Montana State rolled over Weber State 108-78 to remain in first place in the Big Sky Conference. Domako was 15 of 19 from the field, including 4 of 5 from 3-point range.

The game between Arkansas College and Central Arkansas was postponed by school officials because of a bomb threat. A telephoned threat was received by a campus security officer and the 800 spectators in Becknell Gym were evacuated. No bomb was found and the teams rescheduled the game for Feb. 21.

Purdue Push
Purdue's Doug Lee (20) pushes the ball upcourt during a fast break during the Boilermakers' game with Iowa Thursday night. Iowa's Kevin Gabel (35) follows closely behind. The Boilermakers upset the number four ranks Hawkeyes, 80-73. (AP Laserphoto)

Burns Blisters Williams Course

LA JOLLA, Calif. (AP) — George Burns says part of the credit for his pace-setting, course-record 63, should go to veteran Ray Floyd.

"When you're paired with Ray Floyd, you're playing with one of the greatest competitors in all of sports," Burns said.

"He motivates you. He's dogged. He's always there. He makes you want to play better," Burns said.

"And if you believe that I've got some swamp land in Florida for sale," responded Floyd, who played with Burns in Thursday's first round of the $500,000 Andy Williams Open golf tournament.

Floyd, 44, the current U.S. Open champ, shot a 7-under-par 65 and said "I'm pretty proud of it. It was a pretty good round."

"But I saw a better one." Burns did not make a bogey. He hit all the greens in regulation, and reached three of the par-5s in two.

"One of the best rounds I've played in a long time," Burns said. And it could have been better.

"I had a chance to shoot even lower," said Burns, who missed one birdie putt from about three feet and failed on three others from 6-8 feet. "But that often happens when you've got a round like this going."

J.C. Snead, who scored consecutive victories in this tournament in 1975-76, and Lon Hinkle, each of whom had an eagle, were a single stroke off the lead with 64s.

Burns, Floyd and the other first-round leaders played the North course, by far the easier of the two ocean-side layouts at Torrey Pines.

"With the par 5s playing downwind, that knocks par back down to about 70," Burns said. "The South definitely plays about two shots harder."

The scoreboard reflected that estimate. The seven best scorers all played on the 6,659-yard North course.

But defending champion Bob Tway was not able to take advantage of the shorter, easier course in the cool, cloudy weather. He could do no better than a 71 in exceptionally low scoring that had 118 of the 156-man field breaking par.

Seve Ballesteros of Spain, making his first start of the season, had a 69, also on the North.

Tom Watson shot 68 on the South, where a 66 by Mark McCumber was the low score.

The players switch courses today, with the final two rounds scheduled at the South course.

Today's Cryptiquip clue: D equals O

The Cryptiquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels.

All Tired Out

Americans discard hundreds of thousands of tires each year. Ironically, the tire was invented by an Irish vet who specialized in taking care of the automobile's predecessor — the horse. John Boyd Dunlop discovered the tire in 1888 when he fixed up his son's bicycle wheels with some air-inflated rubber. Dunlop soon abandoned his horses and began mass-producing tires for motorcycles. In 1895, the Michelin brothers in France became the first to use tires on automobiles.

DO YOU KNOW — What are "radial" tires?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Water freezes at zero degrees centigrade.

 Opening lead: Five of ♣

Friday the 13th is a day when, traditionally, all the ills of the world are likely to befall you. However, we leave it to you to judge how much of South's misfortune was due to the day.

The final contract was certainly beyond reproach. West attacked with his fourth-best spade, East won the king and returned the suit. Declarer split his honors, but West made a fine defensive play when he allowed the jack to hold the trick.

There was no way for declarer to come close to nine tricks without the club suit, so he tried the finesse. In with the king of clubs, East returned his last spade and West could not be prevented from scoring three spade tricks for a one-trick set. "Black Friday," muttered South.

Perhaps so, but not as dark as the looks North gave his partner. For South had blown the contract at the second trick!

If West held the king of clubs, the contract was always secure. Declarer had to time the play to make sure that, if East held the king, he won it at a time when he could not harm South with another spade lead. See what a difference it would have made had South played a low spade to the second trick.

East can continue the suit, but after the jack gets played the defenders are helpless. Either the spades split evenly or, when East does gain the lead in clubs, he will have no spade to return.

Incidentally, note that five clubs will make without a heart lead. When declarer leads a spade from dummy, if East rises with the king, declarer can take a ruffing finesse against the ace to set up a spade for a heart discard. And should East duck and allow West to win the ace, the king of spades can be ruffed out.

Contempt Citation Dismissed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A contempt of court action against "Dynasty" star Joan Collins was dismissed after she testified she had turned over all the tax documents requested by her estranged husband in a divorce proceeding.

Superior Court Commissioner ruled Thursday there was a reasonable doubt that the 53-year-old actress, who plays Alexis Carrington Colby on the ABC-TV series, would be found guilty.

Miss Collins' husband, Peter Holm, 39, had asked that she be held in contempt.

Miss Collins testified she had given him the records and added that Holm had failed to turn over items she has sought, including a computer, the bed her daughter sleeps in and two chandeliers.

Outside court, her lawyer, Marvin Mitchelson, called the dispute "a silly squabble" and said he hopes a referee will be appointed to oversee the property exchange. He said the tax documents Holm seeks predate the marriage.

Miss Collins has described Holm, a former Swedish rock star whose real name is Peter Gustaf Sjolom, as a violent man who refused to account for $1 million in missing money.

But Holm has said he is confident that if the records are turned over, they will vindicate his position. Holm was Miss Collins' manager during their yearlong marriage.

The estranged couple agreed to a temporary restraining order Dec. 26 that bars Holm from using Miss Collins' bank account and orders him to stay 100 yards from her Beverly Hills home and the "Dynasty" production set.

Miss Collins claims Holm has caused her so much stress that she suffered unnatural heart palpitations.

She had said her performance on "Dynasty" would suffer unless she was granted a divorce from Holm based on irreconcilable differences, or an annulment based on alleged fraud.

"I still love Joan, but I hate Alexis," Holm said in the hallway before the hearing.

Asked which one she was more frequently, he said: "She's both."

A Reflector Review

'Crimes Of The Heart' Delivers Early Promise

When the curtain goes up on the set of "Crimes of The Heart" at McGinnis Theater on campus, it is ice-cream for the eyes, the promise of a good play.

At the beginning, Grandpop's had a stroke, and the McGrath sisters have convened at the family home to deal with it. And deal with it they do — and with everything else that goes wrong.

Lenny (Kelly Anchors), the oldest sister, discovers that her favorite horse has been struck by lightning. Babe (Marilyn Molloy) the youngest, has just shot her attorney husband in the leg, and Meg (Rosemary Curtis), a singer, has returned from Hollywood to re-encounter her old friend, Doc Porter.

Throughout, the comic timing is impeccable. The characters speak the truth. Their frankness is not only refreshing, it becomes hilarious.

Meg delivers her lines with a throaty self-assurance that lets you know she's been a part of the Hollywood scene. She tells Babe to get the best lawyer in town. Too bad, though. The best lawyer in town, Babe's husband, has Babe's bullet in his leg.

Lenny, as the stay-at-home daughter, is so believable that I found myself silently egging her one.

Chick Boyle (Debbie Shirley) as the holier than thou relative, plays her role with singular savvy. She convinced me so thoroughly of her character that I felt personally gratified when Lenny, in rising indignation, and in her best moment, orders her out of the house and follows through with a broom.

Barnette Lloyd (Mike McGehee), performs well as the injured husband-attorney, but he could have projected a bit more volume. Doc Porter (Kevin Robert Crowe) has a fine stage presence, although his limp could have been more noticeable.

Oddly enough, by the play's end, Grandpop's stroke seems dangerously funny. Yet when your husband's been shot, your favorite horse has been struck by lightning, and you've come home via a nervous breakdown in Hollywood, it seems far better to laugh than cry.

On top of everything else, Lenny's birthday has been forgotten, but the McGrath sisters do the right thing when they do remember — one day late. As one of them notes, "Birthday wishes don't count if you don't have a cake. Sometimes they don't count when you do."

Transitions throughout are executed smoothly by effective lighting and good blocking. The lighting contributes a great deal to the mood and progress of the play.

"Crimes of The Heart" is worth seeing just to watch Babe descend the stairs entangled in something, putting her head in the oven in trying to cope; or to see Lenny conquer her albatross and chase Chick right out the door. It's rewarding to follow the developments as the players come together and deliver understated humor with sophisticated charm — in short, I'd like to see it again.

The final scene is framed in nostalgia like a family photograph, with the three of them having cake, laughing on in spite of adversity. It's something everyone can relate to.

(Seats for all performances have been sold out. However, those wanting to try to get tickets in case of cancellation can report to the ticket office at McGinnis at 7:15 nightly to sign up for any cancellations with these tickets to be sold on a first-come first-served basis. 'Amerika' Came At Right Time For Poor Farm Town

By ROBERT BARR
Associated Press Writer
TECUMSEH, Neb. (AP) — A year ago, this farm town scraped bottom when its only bank closed. The crisis of Feb. 7, 1986, was brief. The Johnson County Bank was federally insured, and it soon reopened under new ownership. There was nothing unique about a bank failure — 138 federally insured banks failed last year. But it does explain something about the town's enthusiasm and affection for "Amerika," the television extravaganza that chose Tecumseh as its main locale. "Amerika," a drama about life in America under Soviet rule, begins a seven-day, 14 1/2-hour run on ABC Sunday night. It concludes Feb. 22. "I think the morale boost was as great as the money boost," said Eloise Bartels, secretary-treasurer of the local Chamber of Commerce and the mayor's wife. For her carpenter husband, Lavern, "Amerika" meant work. For the members of the chamber, whose shops were boarded up and festooned with weeds for the filming, ABC left each with a fresh paint job and built a handsome gazebo on the courthouse lawn. "They left the town much better than when they came in," said Mrs. Bartels. "It was the best thing that could have happened to our town," said Sue Cooper, who is blind and sort of a newcomer, arriving eight years ago. "It brought income and jobs — a job for me, which I hadn't been able to find since moving here." Ms. Cooper worked two days as an extra with help from Amber, her itchy, amiable golden retriever. "It gave Tecumseh something new to talk about," she said. "I think it revived some people." There's not much to Tecumseh, founded in 1856. It has 1,900 residents, a seven-page telephone directory, and a downtown on the four streets around the courthouse, an ornate red-and-white structure built in 1889 that is the town's only excuse to print postcards. Hundreds of people worked as extras, marching in parades, standing in crowds, running from tanks, posing as exiled dissidents at a "squatter camp" outside town. They rubbed elbows with Kris Kristofferson, Robert Ulrich and Mariel Hemingway. They waited a lot, worked a little and thought about what it would be like to live in a conquered country. "I tell you, when the helicopters flew over the parade, tears came to my eyes," said Su Goracke, who talked about her role as an exile over coffee at Helen's Cafe, the town's daytime social center. "They just scared you, and those men drove by you with guns," she said. "When you're dressed like we were dressed, it could have been happening."

Tecumseh residents sometimes are defensive about "Amerika," which has been criticized as anti-Soviet, or even as anti-American because it depicts a country that had no will to resist. "I don't think anyone is trying to slam our nation, to say we wouldn't defend ourselves," said Ms. Goracke, who had seen the first four hours of "Amerika" at a January preview in Lincoln. "Ever since I've been to the premiere, I've thought about it more. It won't be put aside." "Don't take for granted what you've got," said her companion, Jody Gregory. "Things we used to take for granted we can't anymore." "Both my parents owned businesses before this farm crisis, but we have neither business now," added Ms. Goracke. Johnson County, with 5,000 residents and slipping, ranked 72nd among Nebraska's 93 counties in terms of per capita income in 1984, according to the state Department of Economic Development. In 1985, buying income per household was $14,828 in Johnson County compared with the state average of $22,143. The bank is still open, but hard times persist for the people who raise milk, soybeans and corn on the gently undulating land. There has been "quite a drop" in the acreage under cultivation, said Marge Morrissey, the county agent's secretary, but she said no figures were available. "I don't intend to be in it next year, or even this year," said Gary Pope, a dairy farmer who dropped by Helen's one afternoon. "I can see the end. It's time to get out."

ABC's Jules Bergman Found Dead At Home

NEW YORK (AP) — Jules Bergman, the Emmy-winning science editor for ABC News who covered 54 manned spaceflights from the Mercury launch to the Challenger disaster, has died at age 57. Bergman, who suffered from "numerous brain tumors and seizures" and took medication for epilepsy, died Thursday at his Manhattan home, said police Sgt. Norris Hollomon. A maid found Bergman's body about noon in a bathtub "with scalding hot water running but the drain open," said Hollomon, adding that an autopsy would be conducted to determine the cause of death. Bergman joined ABC as a news writer in 1953 and became science editor in 1961. "Jules Bergman has been a mainstay of ABC News for 30 years," said Roone Arledge, president of ABC News. "He will be sorely missed by the scientific community he covered, by the audience he served, but most of all by those of us who have worked with him for more than a generation." Bergman practiced participatory journalism, especially while covering the activities of American astronauts. He said he wanted to give audiences "not an ivory-tower discussion of science, but an on-the-spot report of discoveries, which are changing the lives of human beings daily." An experienced pilot himself, Bergman covered the first flights of almost every U.S. military and commercial aircraft, personally flying in many of them. Bergman wrote the book "90 Seconds to Space," published in 1962, and "Anyone Can Fly," published in 1965, as well as many magazine articles on scientific subjects.

White Athletes To Boycotting South African Track Tourney

By DAVID CRARY
Associated Press Writer
JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The sponsor of a major high school track tournament withdrew its support today and 100 white athletes announced a boycott because a black student was barred from competing.

The decision to keep a black student athlete from taking part in the Annual South African Foundation Schools Athletics Meeting this weekend prompted 100 out of 279 white athletes from 13 Natal province schools to announce a boycott.

Nkululeko "Squeegie" Skweyiya, 17, a sprinter and relay runner, was to represent his integrated private Durban-area high school at the games. But Menlo Park High School in Pretoria, which has been host for the games for 15 years, barred Skweyiya because he is black.

According to news reports, Skweyiya was the only non-white among 1,500 high school athletes scheduled to compete. The reports said no black had ever competed in the games.

Skweyiya's father, Louis, is a lawyer in Durban, capital of Natal province.

A Menlo Park school secretary said today the games would go on despite the boycott. The Natal Amateur Athletics Association called on all other Natal schools to boycott the competition.

Members of opposition parties and other sports organizations said the government should intervene to permit Skweyiya's participation.

Renier Schoeman, a Durban-area member of Parliament, and information director for the governing National Party in Natal province, said the exclusion of Skweyiya was "totally indefensible and I condemn it unconditionally."

It was unclear who made the decision. The principal of Menlo Park, C. Van der Merwe, has refused to comment.

The Sports Foundation of Southern Africa, which sponsors the meet, said today it was withdrawing support. In a statement, it said it has "for the past 21 years rendered assistance with sports training and coaching to all in South Africa on an equal basis."

Jan Preuyt, chairman of the non-racial South African High Schools Sports Union, said he would hold discussions on the situation today, but it was "a bit of a problem as to what we can do at the eleventh hour."

In other developments, Foreign Minister R.F. Botha said Thursday that U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz would not be welcome in South Africa to discuss dismantling apartheid.

Botha said South Africa would react coolly to a visit from Shultz to discuss South Africa's apartheid policies. "We will solve our problems ourselves," the foreign minister said.

An advisory panel to President Reagan issued a report Tuesday calling for Shultz to make such a trip and recommending the United States urge other countries to toughen their sanctions against the white-controlled government.

President P.W. Botha, meanwhile, canceled negotiations planned for today with newspaper publishers on easing the government's tight censorship rules, citing "the abuse of the media by revolutionary elements."

Botha said such talks would be pointless because South Africa's four main newspaper companies had refused to adopt a strict self-administered code of conduct. The government supported the code.

One of the companies, South African Associated Newspapers, said it could not accept a code that would require the media to administer government-imposed censorship regulations.

It said it rejected government proposals that would have exempted the major publishers from censorship but maintained the restrictions for smaller opposition newspapers.

Botha said the government would continue to seek ways of "combating the abuse of the media by revolutionary elements and of promoting the free flow of information to the South African public." Meanwhile, he said, the current press restrictions would remain.

Rules imposed under the state of emergency declared June 12 ban or restrict reporting about unrest, security force actions, treatment of detainees, most forms of peaceful protest and a broad range of statements the government considers subversive.

The government said it imposed the state of emergency to curb violence linked to anti-apartheid protests. Since the protests began in September 1984, at least 2,345 people have been killed, most of them blacks, according to independent monitors.

By law and custom, South Africa's apartheid system establishes a racially segregated society in which the 24 million blacks have no vote in national affairs. The 5 million whites control the economy and maintain separate districts, schools and health services.

Philippine Toll Mounts

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — The military chief of staff today ordered an investigation into charges that soldiers massacred seven civilians in a rebel-dominated village.

Soldiers today raided another Communist hideout and wounded two rebels, the army said.

Military chief Gen. Fidel V. Ramos said 38 people have been killed since a cease-fire with Communist insurgents ended five days ago, but said the door to peace remains open to the rebels.

Troops this morning spotted a small Communist force hiding in a coconut grove 2 1/2 miles from Davao's city center, constabulary commander Maj. Franco Calida said.

All the rebels escaped and but were seen dragging away two wounded comrades, Calida said. The rebels were believed responsible for a grenade attack Thursday at a local police station in which 13 people were injured.

Davao, 600 miles southeast of Manila and the country's third-largest city, has been a stronghold for Communist fighters of the New People's Army. The rebels withdrew from peace talks last month and vowed to resume their 18-year civil war.

In another development, several hundred people marched toward Clark Air Base in Angeles City and near the U.S. Navy base at Subic Bay protesting the presence of the bases and U.S. military aid. A similar peaceful demonstration also was in front of the U.S. Embassy in Manila.

The charges of a massacre involved a three-hour clash Tuesday in a farming community near Lupao in Nueva Ecija province, 90 miles north of Manila.

Ramos ordered the Provost Marshal's office to investigate after a newspaper reported today that troops killed at least seven civilians.

Israel Attacks Palestinian Bases For 2nd Day In Row

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Israel today attacked Palestinian guerrilla bases in a refugee camp in south Lebanon. U.N. officials prepared to move trucks with desperately needed food into besieged Palestinian camps in Beirut.

U.N. officials said food was being loaded in two convoys of six-wheel trucks to go simultaneously into the Bourj el-Barajneh refugee camp and surrounding Shiite slums under a new compromise with Shiite fighters besieging the camp.

Officials said the supplies would be delivered as soon as they received a "green light" from the Shiite Amal militia.

Three truckloads were allotted for the camp's famished population and three others for Shiite inhabitants who have suffered from Palestinian bombardment in the three months of Shiite-Palestinian fighting.

The siege of Bourj el-Barajneh reportedly has forced its 35,000 Palestinian population to eat cats, dogs and rats.

Meanwhile, police said Israeli jet fighters dropped illuminating flares as three helicopter gunships blasted five targets in and around the Mieh Mieh refugee camp on Sidon's southeastern outskirts at 1 a.m. They said four PLO guerrillas were wounded.

It was the second Israeli air raid in Lebanon in 20 hours and the sixth this year. Israeli jets Thursday bombed Fatah bases near Mieh Mieh. Police said one civilian was killed and three people, including two guerrillas, were wounded in that raid.

Police in Sidon, 25 miles south of Beirut, said all stricken targets in the 15-minute raid belonged to Palestine Liberation Organization chairman Yasser Arafat's mainstream Fatah faction.

Two rockets also slammed in a Lebanese army barracks in Mieh Mieh, but no casualties were reported among the soldiers, police said.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv confirmed the raid, but said it was carried out by planes and did not mention helicopters. It said the pilots reported accurate hits on targets used as guerrilla headquarters and returned safely.

State-run Beirut Radio said Israeli gunboats cruising off Sidon also fired at the guerrilla bases, but police could not confirm that report.

It was the first time in at least two years that Israel struck during the night.

Israel and Amal both have been fighting Palestinians in Lebanon. Although there is no known coordination between them, they share the goal of keeping the PLO from regaining Lebanese bases lost in Israel's 1982 invasion.

U.N. officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Justice Minister Nabih Berri, leader of Amal, said he would allow relief supplies to enter Bourj el-Barajneh provided an equal amount of food is distributed to the Shiite community.

A U.N. spokeswoman said the Vienna headquarters of the United Nations Relief and Works Agency agreed to the compromise.

"We are awaiting the green light from Amal to begin the emergency relief mission. We can't find an Amal official who would order the protection of our convoys," she said.

Amal and the Palestinians had declared a cease-fire Wednesday and agreed that food would be allowed into Bourj el-Barajneh if the Palestinians withdrew from strategic positions they captured last November in the Christian town of Maghdousheh southeast of Sidon.

However, intermittent fighting continued around Bourj el-Barajneh and the Palestinians stalled on withdrawing from Maghdousheh. Amal said today that its militiamen finally had returned to some former positions in that town but not all.

Police said two people were killed and nine wounded in Shiite attacks Thursday on Palestinian camps in Beirut and near Tyre, 50 miles south of Beirut.

Navy Overrules Fleet Directive Banning Jogging

By NORMAN BLACK
AP Military Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The commander of the Navy's Pacific Fleet lacked the authority to reduce physical fitness standards for older sailors and officers, and his order has been overruled, sources said.

Adm. Carlisle A.H. Trost, the chief of naval operations, rescinded a directive issued by Adm. James A. Lyons Jr. last week as "an administrative error," said one ranking Navy official who summarized Trost's decision.

"Physical fitness standards for naval personnel are promulgated by the chief of naval operations and apply Navy-wide," the source, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Thursday.

"There's only one Navy and Lyons had no authority to do this."

Lyons, who commands more than 200,000 sailors and officers assigned to the Pacific Fleet, issued a directive from Honolulu warning against jogging or running too much.

Declaring that heart attacks are taking the lives of too many members, Lyons said that those under his command who were 45 or older could pass their semi-annual physical fitness tests by walking briskly for three miles instead of running for 1½ miles.

"The Navy can ill afford to lose more personnel to unnecessary heart attacks," Lyons wrote. "My bottom line is I expect you to be physically fit. I don't expect you to die getting there."

Under current standards, men in the Navy age 40 to 49 are expected to run 1½ miles in no more than 16 minutes, 30 seconds, and women in no more than 18 minutes, 15 seconds.

Lyons sought to replace that requirement with a brisk walking test, establishing a new standard for men 45 and older of walking three miles within 45 minutes, 34 seconds, and for women, 48 minutes, 55 seconds.

According to Pentagon sources, Lyons issued his directive in part because of the Jan. 19 death of Rear Adm. Jack Darby, the commander of submarine forces in the Pacific, who suffered a heart attack after a lengthy morning run.

"Lyons' action was probably in response to the tragic death of Darby," the Navy source said Thursday. "But it was an administrative error, albeit with good intentions."

"The (chief of naval operations) sets these fitness standards based on careful review by medical personnel to ensure that they are appropriate to meet desired standards of fitness," the source said. "These guidelines undergo periodic review. And there is no plan under way to change existing standards."

Gem Experts Claim Sapphire Overrated

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Gem experts are disputing the $2.28 million appraisal given the stone bought for $10 by a Texan who hailed it as the biggest star sapphire ever, according to a report published today.

"I've handled it and I've spoken to the owner," John Sampson White, curator of the National Gem and Mineral Collection at the Smithsonian Institution, said. "It reconfirmed all my initial opinions. It's an insignificant stone."

"We wouldn't buy it," White said. "We didn't want it, I don't think, even if it were offered to us. We certainly couldn't accept it as a gift, given the crazy values on it."

The Los Angeles Times interviewed five experts at the annual Winter Gem and Mineral Show in Tucson, Ariz., where the owner of the "Star of America," Roy Whetstone, 47, bought it last year and is displaying it this week.

"It's been a media blitz and the unusual and peculiar thing about this whole thing is that none of the people in any of the national press ... ever questioned it (the value)," said Cosmo Altobelli, appraisal committee chairman for the American Gem Society.

"They thought it was a fairy tale story and ran with it," said Altobelli, a Los Angeles jeweler.

Whetstone said he has received offers of more than $2 million for the six-pointed star, which has been cut and polished to a fine lavender luster.

The man who appraised the stone for Whetstone, Lawrence Ward, was dropped from his membership in the American Gem Society last November over complaints he had inflated appraisals, according to Laurie Hudson, the society's marketing manager.

Ward, the owner of a Fallbrook jewelry store, said he was dropped because of a personal vendetta.

"NOT A DIME OVER $5,995."

I went to Brown Wood last Tuesday and I told the young man, "I want a 1987 pickup. And I told him I wasn't spending a dime over $5,995." So the youngster says to me, "Sir, I got just the truck for you."
And he did.
A 1987 Isuzu pickup.

Now I got it. Like taking candy from a baby.

With a black step bumper. Stainless steel mirrors. Power assisted brakes with front discs. Steel belted radial tires. Maintenance free battery. Driver and passenger arm rest. Dual sun visors. Lockable glove box. Cigarette lighter. Low fuel warning light. Knit vinyl upholstery. Available in a variety of colors. All this for only $5,995. Plus tax & tags.
