PCMH Team Transplants Heart For Beaufort Man

By CAROL TYER

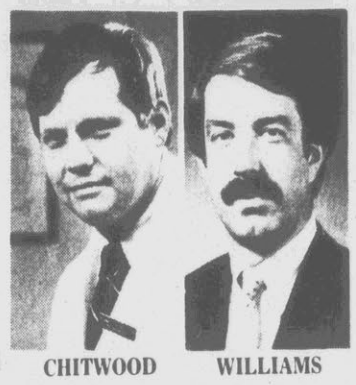
Pitt County Memorial Hospital's first heart transplant was performed Tuesday night on a Beaufort County man whose health doctors say was "without hope of improvement without a heart transplant."

The 58-year-old former auto mechanic was reported to be in "critical but stable" condition this morning. The man reportedly had been disabled since a severe heart attack last summer and the later development of ischemic cardiomyopathy, a condition which diminishes the heart's pumping ability.

To protect the privacy of the recipient and his family, his name was not released. Also for privacy purposes, no information on the donor was given.



CHITWOOD WILLIAMS

A surgical team led by Drs. W. Randolph Chitwood and J. Mark Williams, cardiac surgeons with the East Carolina University School of Medicine, performed the six-hour operation. It reportedly began about 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Dr. Walter Pories, chairman of the ECU School of Medicine Department of Surgery, said that the decision for transplantation, if a suitable heart could be found, was made Saturday. A computer-transmitted request for a heart donation went out nationally and the heart was received Tuesday.

In the meantime, the patient's condition continued to deteriorate, he said. He said defibrillation to keep his heart functioning was needed on the way to the operating room.

"This hospital is committed to the most advanced cardiac care possible," Dave McRae, PCMH senior vice president, said at a news conference today. "We are pleased that our surgeons have the capability of performing heart transplants when they are indicated."

A kidney-pancreas transplant, the first in North Carolina, was performed last April at Pitt Memorial and the recipient, a Martin County man, is doing well, though waiting for another pancreas transplant since the previously donated pancreas had to be removed because of infection. His new kidney is functioning well, his doctors say.

Pories said kidney transplants have been done here for the past seven years, with long-term results for patients, among the most favorable of any institution's in the world.

He added that, because of the commitment which the ECU Medical School's Department of Surgery made nine years ago to perfection in its transplant and immunology knowledge, he believes that this heart transplant recipient has chances of long-term survival as good as if he'd had the surgery at any other medical facility in the world.

He said 80 percent of all heart transplant patients survive at least a year and 65 to 70 percent of them are living three years after the surgery.

GUC Board OKs Connection Rules

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission's board approved changes in the commission's water and sewer regulations and rate schedules, reviewed a computer needs study and moved to accept bids on a totally new computer system at a meeting Tuesday night.

Changes in the regulations approved at the meeting will require the owner of any house or building within the city limits to connect the structure to commission water and sewer lines — where available — within three years of the date of issuance of an official notice of the requirement to connect.

The new regulations also set the sewer acreage fee at $850 per acre (now $700) and the sewer main fee at $750 for each lot (now $500), effective July 1.

Just as the present regulations, the revised group provides that houses or buildings within the corporate limits prior to July 1, 1985, be connected to sanitary sewer on or before July 1, 1987.

The regulations approved Tuesday also require that houses or buildings in areas annexed on or after July 1, 1985, be connected to GUC's sanitary sewer within three years following the issuance of a notice of requirement to connect. But the new regulations offer a reduction of 50 percent in the applicable fees in effect "for those persons applying for sanitary sewer service during the first 180 days after the date established by the notification of requirement to connect."

Approved changes in the sewer rate schedule provide that "except in areas where it is obvious that water customers are not connected to the sewer, the commission will assume water customers have sewer connections and will be billed both sewer service charge and sewer volume charge. However, the regulation provides that upon request and verification, customers not connected to available sewer mains will cease to be billed.

The final change approved in the policies provides for payment of water and sewer main, acerage and tap fees — in certain situations — on an installment plan over a 24 month period at 12 percent interest. The present policy allows fees to be paid over a 12-month period.

Representatives of Arthur Young & Co., a consulting firm hired last year to study and analyze the commission's computer needs, reviewed the report for the board. Following the review, the board agreed to continue the Arthur Young contract through the detail design, bidding and evaluation phases, at a cost not to exceed $32,000.

Hospital Computer Filling Up

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

The computer system recently installed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital is already at near-capacity, Hospital Trustees were told Tuesday night.

"Thank goodness, we have a very clearly written, strong contract with SMS," Dave McRae, hospital senior vice president, said. He said he was recently in Pennsylvania negotiating with the computer software supplier for additions and adaptations to the software that would increase capacity to the levels the hospital had believed it had when the system was installed.

It was reported to the board that the EastCare Air Ambulance Service should have a helicopter on site within a few days. Resumption of emergency helicopter transport service on a 12-hour-a-day basis is expected to begin at least by March 15 and resumption of round-the-clock service about 10 weeks later.

Approval was given for the renewal of a contract with McLaurin Parking of Raleigh for management of the hospital's parking lot. The company has asked for and was granted a 2.8 percent increase in its part of the money taken in. The hospital makes about $125,000 a year on the operation of the parking lots, the board was told.

INTERNATIONAL COMPETITION — Debra Sermons, right, of Greenville is in training for International Special Olympics bowling at Notre Dame University this summer. Special Olympian Will Compete In International Bowling Event

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

Debra Sermons, an avid bowler for the past 10 years, will be bowling this summer in the big leagues — the international big leagues.

She'll be the Greenville area's only participant in the 1987 International Special Olympics at the University of Notre Dame in South Bend, Ind., in late July and early August.

The International Special Olympics competition is held every four years and only about 3,000 athletes from more than 30 countries take part. So Ms. Sermons has had to be both lucky and skilled to be eligible. She was one of 22 gold medal winners in the North Carolina State Special Olympics held in Hendersonville earlier this month and she was one of eight chosen by the luck of a drawing to go on to Notre Dame.

Ms. Sermons, 34, has been participating in Special Olympics for several years. She used to take part in the track and field events of Special Olympics held in Greenville each spring — this year's track and field events will be held April 10 — but for the past several years she's specialized in bowling. "I love bowling," she said. "It's my favorite sport."

She practices each Monday with a group of other Special Olympian bowling enthusiasts and from now until late July, she'll be putting in extra practice in preparation for the international competition. Joyce Cates, a promotions person for the firm which manages Hillcrest Lanes here, will be giving her special assistance from now through late July.

Ms. Sermons is a miracle child in many ways, her mother, Johnnie Sermons, said. When she was born, she was paralyzed from the waist down. Her parents were told she might be paralyzed forever, but they did not accept this assessment. They took her from doctor to doctor and found one at the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond who agreed to operate on her in hopes of correcting her condition.

She had surgery again a few months later and by the time she was 2 years old, she was walking. Since then there's been more surgery and much special education to bring her to where she is today. She works at the East Carolina Vocational Center each weekday and bowls and participate in other community activities in her leisure time.

Renee Dease of the Special Olympics International-Kennedy Foundation in Washington came to Greenville to present Ms. Sermons a special invitation to the International Special Olympics. A former Special Olympian herself, Ms. Dease is a receptionist in the office of the foundation. She brought greetings from Eunice Kennedy Shriver, founder and director of the foundation, with whom she works.

Ms. Dease said, also, during the presentation that she is nominating Ms. Sermons for the "Special Olympics Success Story" from North Carolina. The foundation is adopting her idea of choosing one person from each state and country participating in the international competition at Notre Dame as a "Success Story." Special recognition will be given this person during the games.

Special Olympics in Greenville is sponsored by the Greenville Recreation and Parks Department, with cooperation from the local schools, activities programs and recreational facilities. Hillcrest Lanes is a co-sponsor of the Special Olympics Bowling Program.

Reagan Decides To Lift Sanctions Against Poland

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan will lift U.S. economic sanctions against Poland in response to reforms undertaken by the East European government and appeals from Polish church and trade union leaders, administration officials say.

The decision was accelerated by a visit to Warsaw late last month by Deputy Secretary of State John C. Whitehead that extended a thaw in U.S. dealings with the once-isolated Communist country.

It followed the release last September of almost all of Poland's political prisoners. Despite the amnesty, however, opposition sources said more than 20 such prisoners were still being held. And Lech Walesa, a leader of Solidarity, had urged the United States to press for restoration of the independent trade union.

The Polish government's suppression of Solidarity and its imposition of martial law had prompted Reagan to impose the sanctions in December 1981. U.S. relations with Warsaw were frozen. The sanctions included the denial of new U.S. trade credits and higher-than-usual tariffs for Polish goods.

Also, Reagan suspended Polish fishing privileges in U.S. waters and landing rights for Polish commercial aircraft. The fishing and commercial aircraft sanctions were lifted on Jan. 19, 1984.

The NATO allies joined in the U.S. sanctions in 1982, suspending official credits for non-food items and negotiations on rescheduling Poland's debt.

Whitehead met with Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski, the Polish leader, other government officials, and with Walesa and senior Roman Catholic church figures.

"Everyone said lift the sanctions," a U.S. official said Tuesday night. "It seems the time had come."

Winding up the three-day visit Jan. 31, Whitehead said, "We have engaged in a step-by-step effort to re-engage with Poland." He added: "Our remaining differences ... are in thearea of human rights and national reconciliation."

The two governments agreed to begin talks in Washington this month on an agreement for scientific and technological cooperation and for the visit here of a Polish parliamentary delegation headed by Jozef Czyrek, a key member of the Communist party Politburo.

Also, U.S. firms will participate in the annual Polish industrial trade fair in Poznan in June for the first time since normal relations were broken off.

The sanctions cut into Poland's trade with the United States, which dropped from $1 billion in 1979 to an estimated $400 million last year.

Three conditions were set for removing them: lifting of martial law, release of political prisoners and progress toward reconciliation between the government and segments of Polish society, including the trade union movement.

"It's not a reward to the Poles as such," the official said.

He pointed out that martial law was lifted in 1983, there were two releases of political prisoners, and reconciliation between the Communist government and segments of Polish society has begun.

An announcement of Reagan's decision is expected by the end of the week.

Israel May Use 'Scorched Earth' Policy

By NICOLAS B. TATRO
Associated Press Writer

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — A senior Israeli official said Israel's army may re-enter Lebanon and carry out a "scorched earth" policy if life along Israel's northern border is disrupted by Lebanese guerrilla attacks.

Uri Lubrani, the government's coordinator of Lebanon policy, said in a recent interview with The Associated Press that military intervention would follow if rocket barrages made normal living impossible along Israel's 50-mile-long border with Lebanon.

"If, God forbid, we have a situation in (the northern city of) Qiryat Shmoneh where people can't go to school any more, where children have been killed by Katyusha rockets, the government will have to address itself to what it will do.

"What can the government do short of a military re-entry? Our leaders have said it: scorched earth one way or another," he said.

Asked to define a scorched earth policy, Lubrani said:

"The moment we are not able to conduct a normal life along our borders, then they (the guerrillas) will not be able to conduct a normal life along the border. And believe me, if it comes to disrupting normal life we have ways of achieving that easily."

He refused to give specifics but said residents of south Lebanon would not be able to "do their jobs or circulate, and I say this is an understatement."

Lubrani, speaking in his office in the Israeli Defense Ministry last week, said Israel also could enter Lebanon if the Israeli-backed South Lebanon Army (SLA), a mainly Christian militia, collapses under attack by Shiite Moslem groups.

"If the SLA should cave in, then the IDF (Israeli Defense Forces) is in," said Lubrani.

The South Lebanon Army is trained and financed by Israel and has come under increasing pressure from the guerrillas, which Lubrani identified as the Iranian-backed Hezbollah. Little is known about the Shiite Moslem group, which has been linked to organizations that claim to hold foreigners hostage in Lebanon. However, Hezbollah has denied involvement in kidnappings.

Lubrani said the volunteer militia was holding together but conceded it suffered heavy losses and sagging morale "from time to time."

The militia, which patrols a buffer zone that is up to 10 miles deep inside Lebanon's border with Israel, has had more than 100 men killed in fighting since Israel withdrew the bulk of its troops from Lebanon in June 1985.

The English-language Jerusalem Post says the militia has suffered a serious drop in morale and 300 desertions, bringing its size to only 1,300 men.

U.N. sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the Hezbollah-led guerrillas were carrying out 50 to 60 attacks a month against the South Lebanon Army and have killed 22 of its men since January.

The Sunday Telegraph reported earlier this month that Israel had doubled the size of its contingent in south Lebanon to 3,000 men, including a mechanized infantry brigade.

Lubrani said Hezbollah guerrillas carried out two or three attacks each week. He said they were trained by "hundreds" of Iranian Revolutionary Guards in the Syrian-controlled Bekaa Valley.

He said Iranian political activists and embassy diplomats circulated frequently in south Lebanon, with the result that "Iran has a great deal of influence."

Lubrani said his primary task was "to try and prevent an eventual necessity of Israel having to move back into Lebanon in force."

But he said a cardinal principle was: "Don't threaten if you are not prepared to go the whole hog. In Arab psychology, a threat that cannot be or will not be consumated is counter-productive to the extreme."

Lubrani said most of the 150,000 Lebanese who live near the border realize that Israel is willing to use force "and that's the reason we have a manageable situation."

Israeli leaders repeatedly have refused to turn over the task of guarding their border to either the nine-nation United Nations Interim Force in Lebanon or the mainstream Shiite militia Amal.

Gemayel Said No To Waite

KUWAIT (AP) — Lebanese President Amin Gemayel was quoted today as saying he advised missing hostage negotiator Terry Waite not to return to Lebanon and that the Anglican Church envoy was responsible for the consequences of his decision.

"The Lebanese state advised Waite not to travel to Beirut, but he opted for a different decision," the Kuwaiti newspaper Al-Anbaa quoted Gemayel as saying in an interview in London.

The newspaper did not give details of when or how Gemayel gave the advice to Waite, who has not been seen publicly since he left his west Beirut hotel Jan. 20. He reportedly was headed for a meeting with the kidnappers of two missing Americans.

There have been conflicting unconfirmed reports that Waite is being held hostage, that he is under house arrest and that he simply is conducting negotiations.

Waite, the personal envoy of Archbishop of Canterbury Robert Runcie, had made four previous trips to Lebanon since late 1985 to seek freedom for hostages. He told reporters before he disappeared that on earlier trips the kidnappers held a gun held to his head during negotiations and discussed whether to take him hostage.

Al-Anbaa quoted Gemayel as lashing out at unidentified nations for "dealing with Lebanese militias," apparently in an effort to free their kidnapped nationals. Twenty-six foreigners are missing and believed kidnapped in Lebanon, including eight Americans.

"I do not understand why some states opted to deal with militias," he was quoted as saying. "The world has to know that dealing with militias will serve neither Lebanon nor those states which deal with militias."

Ballot Counting Starts In Ireland

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Voters turned out in large numbers for a general election dominated by economic problems, then settled back while a lengthy ballot count began today to determine whether Prime Minister Garret FitzGerald lost as predicted.

Opinion polls consistently put challenger and former Prime Minister Charles Haughey well ahead, and the question was whether he would command the strong parliamentary majority needed to tackle record national debt and unemployment.

Vote-counting began at 9 a.m. Counting is by hand, so early unofficial trends were expected from the computer of Radio Telefis Eireann, the state radio and television station.

If Haughey has a landslide, it will be known within hours. Otherwise it may not be known until early Thursday who is to govern Ireland for the next five years.

RTE said an estimated 75 percent of the 2.4 million eligible voters cast ballots, compared with 72.8 percent in the previous election in 1982.

The election, Ireland's fourth in six years, was clouded by unknowns:

—A new party, the center-right Progressive Democrats, made its electoral debut after scoring impressively in opinion polls, seeking to play power-broker if neither Haughey's Fianna Fail party nor FitzGerald's Fine Gael party has a majority.

—The number of undecided voters — 15 percent according to a final opinion poll Friday — was among the highest in memory and large enough to sway the result either way.

Ireland's electoral system is a complicated combination of constituency and proportional representation in which voters can list candidates in order of preference and preferences are shuffled among the candidates to extract maximum clout from each vote.

Friday's opinion poll, published in the Sunday Independent, put support for Haughey at 45 percent, 15 points ahead of FitzGerald. Forty-five percent is the bare minimum usually needed to secure a majority in the 166-seat Dail, the lower house of the Irish Parliament.

FitzGerald and Haughey, both 61, have alternated as prime minister since 1979. Each faces the risk of being unseated as party leader if he loses the election.

Haughey, who said he was confident of winning an absolute majority, said he would form a minority government if necessary but conceded such a government could not take the "tough action" needed to trim a $36 billion national debt and a 19.6-percent jobless rate.

Brazilian Train Wreck Kills 45

SAO PAULO, Brazil (AP) — Crews today cleared away the mangled cars of two commuter trains that collided in a Sao Paulo suburb, killing at least 46 people and injuring about 100 others.

A spokesman for the federal railroad system, Joao Carlos Goncalves Tavares da Costa, said late Tuesday that rescue teams believed all the bodies had been found.

He said 46 people were killed, 86 were hospitalized with injuries and 25 were treated and released. Fire officials this morning said 12 of the injured had died, bringing the number dead to 58, but Tavares said his figures remained the same.

An official at the Sao Paulo morgue, Gaspar Ilidio de Souza, said 40 bodies had arrived there and six others were on the way.

Railroad officials estimated that a total of more than 1,000 people were on the two six-car trains when the collision occurred at 3:30 p.m. Tuesday just outside the station in the impoverished suburb of Itaquera.

Police and rescue workers used blow torches and electric saws under a driving rain to free injured passengers from the twisted cars. Several cars were derailed and debris littered the area.

Iranians Protest TV Spoof

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Hundreds of students chanting slogans against the United States and West Germany marched on the West German Embassy in Tehran today to protest a televison show mocking Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, Iran's official news agency reported.

The Iranian government said it ordered a West German cultural center in Tehran to close in retaliation for the 14-second sketch carried on West German television Sunday night. On Tuesday, two West German diplomats were ordered to leave Iran because of the program.

"We warn the Bonn government that if such acts are repeated, our warning will change into revolutionary wrath and our language will not be in the least diplomatic," the Islamic Republic News Agency quoted one student as saying.

The sketch used camera tricks to make exultant women appear to be throwing their underwear at Khomeini's feet. It was part of a comedy show on the ARD network.

Rural Redirection

As North Carolina's rural economy continues to change, a serious chasm in the state's job climate widens. Pitt County — a largely rural area — is caught in that gap.

A redirection of resources is needed to keep the state and county's prosperity — both in urban and rural areas — on a positive curve. A state-backed rural economic program — backed by the establishment of centers for rural development — would be a great asset for this redirection. But those measures aren't adequate. Local initiatives must also begin.

Clearly, a report called "Three Faces of North Carolina" that champions increased support for small business, resource-based initiatives, minority-owned businesses and cottage industries has great merit.

Rural North Carolina counties are in a state of transition. Two industries on which the rural ecomomy has depended — tobacco and textiles — are changing. Sharp decreases in rural employment have occurred.

These facts are backed up by startling statistics. Since 1980, 20,000 farms have gone out of business. Textile jobs declined by 20,000 in the same period. From 1978 to 1984 rural counties added only 7,000 new manufacturing jobs.

This decline is inconsistent with the growth urban areas experienced, and the contrast has created an economically unhealthy "boom or bust" atmosphere in many areas.

The report appropriately suggests developing small businesses with strong ties to existing area resources is a viable solution to the rural "bust." The facts back up that assertion. Employment in rural areas is moving toward smaller firms and away from agriculture and manufacturing.

For example, businesses with less than 100 employees account for 97 percent of all business firms in North Carolina and 45 percent of the jobs. In addition, small businesses generated almost three-quarters of all new jobs in the state between 1979 and 1983 — 104,000 positions.

Clearly, rural areas — and Pitt County is included in that category — must focus attention on nurturing new business. As the primary center of progress in eastern North Carolina, Pitt must take the lead.

To accomplish this, local officials, chambers of commerce and task forces might concentrate on measures aimed at rural development — specifically funding for new business start-ups and technical assistance for new business owners. Efforts might also be made to recruit resource-based and cottage industries to the area.

Some of these measures must incorporate bold thinking, such as creating new pools of capital — from local investors — available to rural entrepreneurs. Many rural small businesses need loans of $5,000 to $125,000 — meager amounts compared to the borrowing requirements of large manufacturers. These smaller loans cause lenders high paperwork costs for a relatively low return.

With these special funding sources and with guidance from development centers, North Carolinians forced off their farms and locked out of factories have a stronger chance to move beyond the "bust."

Winter Message

Lest we come to believe we are immune to the blasts of winter, nature sent us a message this week that it was not to be ignored.

Sleet, snow and ice covered the state Monday and another storm was predicted for Tuesday night.

Fortunately for the Greenville area, at least, a slight warming Monday turned the accumulated sleet on streets and highways to slush. Rain overnight washed it away so that driving was reasonably normal the next morning. One didn't have to travel far north or west to find a different picture, however. Lower temperatures meant ice on the highways and that portended extremely dangerous driving conditions.

The outlook for Thursday remains questionable as precipitation moves up from the south and winter temperatures from the north hang over our area.

Pitt County often escapes the worst of the winter snow and ice storms because of our proximity to the coast and the warming currents of the gulf stream. Often, however, a change of a couple of degrees can mean the difference between rain and ice or snow. This seems to occur frequently during the late winter season.

It should tell us not to write winter off — not until spring is well established. Our weather history is strewn with the dates of severe winter storms. And usually, given our mild climate, we are not prepared.

Today's Thought

If Pitt County establishes a Convention and Visitors Bureau, it needs an attraction to draw tourists — something like Plymouth Rock in Massachusetts. Wonder if there is a rock on the Tar River where the first settlers might have landed?

Report Emphasizes Bold Local Leadership

'Bureaucrats can't drive into Ahoskie and serve up workable ideas. It is the responsibility of local leaders to think creatively, to find ways to develop best what each county has to offer.'

RALEIGH — Local leaders may complain that government policies have depressed their economies, but the greatest barrier to effective rural economic development is a shortage of creative and bold local leadership.

That is the conclusion which MDC Inc., an economic consulting firm which specializes in rural southern development, makes in a report to the North Carolina Commission on Jobs and Economic Growth.

"In examining rural counties around the South, including North Carolina, MDC found that the greatest single barrier to effective alternative development is local leadership," says the report, "Three Faces of Rural North Carolina."

"Unfortunately, most Southern communities are not well organized to pursue this new style of development. In each of the (three North Carolina) counties studied, local leadership was concentrated with a relatively small, homogeneous group. These leaders tended to be traditional in their approach to development — pursuing a narrow range of development options pioneered a generation ago."

MDC was asked to study three rural counties: Richmond, Jackson and Hertford. The counties are located in the state's three geographic regions and represent the broad middle, in economic terms, of the state's rural counties.

All three counties face stagnant economies because they have long relied on recruitment of outside industries as their prime strategy for economic development, MDC says.

Today, the number of industries moving around the country has decreased, and most of those relocations are going into urban areas. MCD says rural areas will have to foster alternative forms of economic development because they won't land those relocating firms. "Far greater attention should be focused on promoting new business start-ups and expansions, resource-based industries, minority-owned businesses, and also nontraditional business."

But this kind of development requires creative thinking and planning, which is exactly contrary to tradition-minded strategies.

"The difficulty in these rural areas is the same as in any human activity; The leadership cadre resists changes that will dilute its standing and influence," MDC says. This "creates a serious barrier for rural communities attempting to implement a new approach to development."

MDC says new approaches must be based on local resources. Every community has something which, when used properly, can form the basis of a new industry. For example, in Jackson County, the town of Dillsboro has restored its historic railroad facilities and tourist now vist year round. Dillsboro went a step beyond tourism, however, by developing itself as a retail center for the many craftspeople who live in the surrounding mountains. The tourists not only spend money on gas and meals, they also buy locally produced crafts.

MDC says Richmond County could do more to exploit its lumber and water resources while Hertford County could tie into the growing metropolitan Norfolk area of Virginia.

In the cases of all North Carolina counties, however, state government cannot be the source of for these ideas. Bureaucrats can't drive into Ahoskie and serve up workable ideas. It is the responsibility of local leaders to think creatively, to find ways to develop best what each county has to offer.

Making A Case For Taiwan

'If Congress determines to enact protective trade legislation, Taiwan asks, please, sir, do not clobber us. We don't deserve to be clobbered.'

WASHINGTON — A delegation of Chinese scholars turned up in Washington a few days ago. These were not scholars, Peking style. These were scholars, Taiwan style, and they had come to make a case for their beleaguered but prospering island. They made a good one.

This was the long and short of it: Taiwan is doing the best it can to be a good customer of the United States. Taiwan has instituted political reforms that move it closer to Western concepts of a free society. If Congress determines to enact protective trade legislation, Taiwan asks, please, sir, do not clobber us. We don't deserve to be clobbered.

The delegation included Dr. Chao, 40, who took his doctorate in Edinburgh; Dr. Wu, 47, who did his graduate work in Louvain; Dr. Ger, 32, who received his Ph.D. at the University of Wisconsin; and Dr. Hsiao, 38, who won his doctorate at the State University of New York in Buffalo. They had done their homework.

Almost 40 years have passed since the Nationalist Chinese, led by Chiang Kai-shek, were driven off the mainland. The communists settled into power as the People's Republic of China. Chiang's remnant followers occupied the province of Taiwan and declared themselves to be the Republic of China. Four decades later the unreality continues. Peking insists there is but one China; time will take care of its rebellious province. Taipei also insists there is but one China; eventually the communist usurpers will be replaced.

The visitors ruefully acknowledged that such an eventuality is not exactly close at hand. Of the 159 members of the United Nations, 133 maintain diplomatic relations with Peking. Only 24 nations in the world recognize Taiwan. Said Dr. Ger: "We get compared to the Transkei." The United States officially severed diplomatic relations with Taiwan at the time of "normalization" with the People's Republic in 1978. Since then our relations with Taiwan have been symbolized by an unofficial "American Institute" in Taipei. Taiwan maintains a "Coordination Council" in the United States. It is not much, but it is better than nothing.

The Taiwanese, said the delegation, are making the best of it. Until recently, the Nationalists ran Taiwan as a one-party state under at least quasi-military rule. That is changing. In this past December's elections, the opposition Democratic Progressive Party won almost 20 percent of the vote and claimed 12 of the 73 seats in Taiwan's lower legislative house. This is seen as a respectable beginning, on the order of Republican seats in the Virginia House of Delegates, but a closely contested two-party system is well in the future.

Further reforms are in more immediate prospect. The next few months will see adoption of a revised National Security Act that will put almost all judicial proceedings in civilian, rather than military courts. Press freedom is assured.

The visitors understandably are anxious about what our Congress may do in the realm of trade relations. Almost half (48 percent) of Taiwan's exports go to the United States. In 1985 Taiwan enjoyed a favorable balance of about $10 billion. That grew to $13.6 billion in 1986. Taiwan sells us electronic gear, textiles, footwear, toys and sporting goods. With wage rates averaging $2.40 in hour in manufacturing, Taiwan's industries can compete around the world. The island ranks 15th in exports worldwide.

The thing is, said the visitors, a bit plaintively, Taiwan buys an awful lot from us. The United States supplies 100 percent of Taiwan's soybeans and 99 percent of its corn. Taiwan imports more U.S. apples than any nation in the world. We also sell Taiwan Alaskan oil, for which, they said, we charge 15 percent more than the world price. Taiwan also buys significant amounts of U.S. tobacco, rather to the distress of Dr. Chao and Dr. Ger, non-smokers both of them, and Taiwan has reduced its tariffs on U.S. goods. American banks and insurance companies now operate competitively in Taipei.

For an island of 19 million people, they contend, that is an impressive record. Taiwan willingly would buy fighter planes, anti-submarine warfare devices and high-tech computers — but we won't sell them. By law the United States is committed to providing sufficient weapons for Taiwan's defense, but the White House decides what is sufficient.

So matters stand. The People's Republic hasn't rattled a saber toward Taiwan in six years; on the contrary, overtures toward reunification, on communist terms, have been made and rejected. Capitalistically speaking, Taiwan is doing OK: Its per capita income of $3,800 is 10 times the mainland's.

Strength For Today

If you have ever been to a section of the world which is below sea level, you have no doubt been entirely unaware of the fact.

Morally and spiritually, many people often live below sea level without realizing it. They have never been on the mountaintops of peace and confidence which belief in God establishes in one's heart. They have never known what it means to have an experience in prayer which lifted them up as with eagles' wings and caused them to walk through hours and perhaps days with light and joyful steps.

Faith abides in the mountain tops of life. We have to be willing to move out of the areas which spiritually are below sea level and follow the rough track of renunciations and self-effacement until we have scaled the mountain peaks of faith.

Courts-Martial In Order For Poindexter And North

WASHINGTON — Everyone agrees that the testimony of Vice Adm. John Poindexter and Lt. Col. Oliver North is essential to bring all of the facts relating to the Iran-contra fiasco to the light of day.

House Speaker Jim Wright has suggested that President Reagan pardon the two officers, thus freeing them to testify without incriminating themselves and forfeiting their Fifth Amendment guarantees. The president, mindful of the public outcry against President Ford's pardon of President Nixon, has declined to do so.

In riposte, the president has urged Congress to grant use immunity, which would free Poindexter and North to testify while safeguarding their Fifth Amendment rights. The president, however, has promised full cooperation in the inquiries. Press reports note that the Tower Commission has also asked Reagan to use his power as commander-in-chief to compel testimony by the two officers.

In a statement issued last week, Marlin Fitzwater, the president's spokesman, said that such an order "would be unlawful" because it would violate the officers' constitutional rights as well as the Uniform Code of Military Justice. Not so.

Poindexter and North, on active duty in the military although they were formerly detailed to the White House, are subject to military law. If they violated federal statutes, they may be charged and tried before a military judicial tribunal. On the basis of the evidence that has already come to light, as detailed by the Senate Intelligence Committee and by Attorney General Edwin Meese, there is probable cause to believe that Poindexter and North violated several statutes, among them the Boland Amendment, the Neutrality Act and other federal laws. This showing of probable cause, not their mere invocation of their Fifth Amendment rights, warrants a court-martial of both officers.

'A court-martial of the two officers would ensure their testimony, without sacrificing their Fifth Amendment constitutional rights, and with all reasonable speed.'

President Reagan, under our Constitution, is commander-in-chief of the armed forces and, by virtue of the express language of the Uniform Code of Military Justice may, in light of the proven circumstances, order the secretary of the Navy promptly to bring general court-martial proceedings against both officers.

In court-martial proceedings, the admiral and the colonel, as Fitzwater correctly states, may invoke the Fifth Amendment, and doing so must be respected.

If a court-martial is ordered, the members of the court-martial, while respecting this constitutional right, are authorized by the Immunity Statute to grant them use immunity and compel them to testify. Unless, as is unlikely, they commit perjury, their testimony should help unravel this debacle.

This is not to say that the granting of use immunity by a court-martial will, by itself, allow Poindexter and North to go scot-free.

Independent evidence, other than their own testimony, may well be developed after more prolonged inquiries by the Select Committee of the Senate and the House and the special prosecutor, which may establish illegal conduct on the part of Poindexter and North and perhaps on the part of others. Such independent evidence is admissible in court-martial proceedings and criminal prosecutions.

There is no overwhelming desire, on the part of the public or responsible politicians of either party, for "president-bashing." Nor should there be any desire to "dump" on Poindexter and North.

Since this is not Watergate, where justice was obstructed for personal gain, justice in this matter, whether by way of court-martial or a criminal prosecution, can be tempered by mercy, consideration of the national interest, appropriate acknowledgment of mistakes made by those on high and remedial measures to ensure against repetition.

There are advantages to this procedure. Gamesmanship and fallout for granting immunity will be minimized since neither the president nor Congress need be primarily involved in the immunity grants.

Despite the misgivings of Special Prosecutor Lawrence E. Walsh about granting immunity, it would seem that after prolonged investigations, consuming most of the year, use immunity will be granted by Congress.

There are, however, disadvantages inherent in a prolonged inquiry. Our body politic, strong as it is, is hard-put to suffer another flawed presidency. More important, the confidence of the people and that of our allies in our government and its leaders, a confidence now impaired, can, along with the credibility of our foreign policy, be restored by an early airing of the truth and remedial measures, rather than further diminished by lengthy and inevitable partisan controversy.

To avoid a prolonged trauma, the testimony of Poindexter and North is imperative to enlighten the public and governments here and abroad at the earliest possible time. A court-martial of the two officers would ensure their testimony, without sacrificing their Fifth Amendment constitutional rights, and with all reasonable speed.

Arthur J. Goldberg is a former associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Sanford Says Contras Can't Win

By The Associated Press

America needs a two-track policy in Central America and a proposal by Costa Rica to end hostilities in the region through negotiation could provide the second track, Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., says.

Sanford, at a Washington news conference after a six-day trip to Central America, said the Contras are not capable of overthrowing the Sandanista government in Nicaragua.

"Their (Contras) objective is primarily to put on the pressure so that you can have a satisfactory solution," Sanford said Tuesday. "That's not a very good policy unless you've got a second track looking for a practical, political solution that assures a pluralistic country. And that's what this plan is designed to do."

The proposal advanced Monday by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias Sanchez could serve as the basis for a solution, Sanford said. Sanford attended a meeting Monday in Costa Rica at which Arias presented his plan to the presidents of El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala.

The 10-step proposal calls for Nicaragua and other Central American countries facing armed rebellions to grant amnesty to rebels, start negotiations with internal political opponents and agree to ceasefires with guerrillas. It also calls for those countries to take steps toward "democratization," including free elections and the reduction of security forces.

Sanford said the Arias proposal was appealing because it had the support of the leaders of Costa Rica, El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala. He also said he thought there was "a fair chance" the Sandinista government would agree to the plan.

"I would hope that the policy of this country would be to give support to (the proposal)," Sanford said. "I think it's a proper strategy and I think it's a good plan."

Sanford said he had reached the conclusions after speaking with leaders in the Sandinista government in Nicaragua and leaders of the U.S.-backed Contras, who are battling the government.

"Nobody that I talked to thought that the (Sandanista) government could be overthrown militarily," he said. "They cannot march into Managua and take over the government."

During his visit to Central America, Sanford made stops in Honduras, Nicaragua, and Costa Rica. In Nicaragua, Sanford met with Miquel D'Escoto, the Nicaraguan foreign minister and Vice President Sergio Ramirez. He also talked with the leaders of several opposition groups.

Emergency Prison Bill Introduced

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — A $6.8 million emergency funding bill intended to keep North Carolina prisons out of federal hands was among $50 million worth of appropriations sought for corrections.

Sen. David Parnell, D-Robeson, filed the emergency bill Tuesday to provide modular units at 16 prison locations.

Meanwhile, Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, filed companion bills to establish how some of the money would be spent, including a proposal to keep the prison population below 18,000.

The emergency bill, which is expected to see quick action, notes that state prisons have 18,000 inmates but are rated for only 16,600. Lawsuits concerning overcrowding have raised the threat that the federal government may take over their administration barring immediate action.

Under Ms. Barnes bill, when the prison population reaches 97 percent of 18,000, the state has 60 days to reduce the population to 96 percent of the cap. To accomplish the reduction, the Parole Commission, with the help of an expanded staff, will screen and parole inmates who are eligible under current guidelines and misdemeanants who are jailed for nonviolent and non-alcohol related crimes automatically become eligible for parole.

In addition, during the 60 days, state prisons will not be allowed to accept county prisoners.

Ms. Barnes emphasized that the bill would not put any criminals on the streets. It would only expand those people who can be paroled at the discretion of the commission.

Parnell filed a bill to set up a $20 million fund for 1987-88 in the satellite jail-work release program. Ms. Barnes, filed a companion bill that explains the program would provide funds to any county that volunteers to use local jails to handle misdemeanants instead of sending them to the state prison system.

"Some of those counties are already under stress with their jail populations," Ms. Barnes said.

Parnell also filed a bill to appropriate $2,658,300 for a laundry at the replacement for Craggy Prison in Buncombe County, $2,632,800 for two 100-bed dorms in Robeson County and Wake County and $10,803,950 to build and staff up to 10 28-cell units at existing minimum- or medium-custody facilities. It also would put $7,097,500 in a fund for 1987-88 that the Department of Correction could, with the approval of the Office of State Budget and Management, use to improve physical support systems at prison field units through the state.

Embezzlement

THOMASVILLE, N.C. (AP) — The treasurer of the Ledford Senior High School Athletic Boosters Club was arrested and charged with embezzlement of nearly $28,000 from the club, the Davidson County Sheriff's Department said.

Wilson Chavis, 44, was charged with 16 counts of embezzlement over a period between November 1984 and December 1986, Detective Louis A. Saintsing said. So far, auditors have found that 16 fraudulent checks for a total $27,975 were issued by Chavis, Saintsing said.

The checks were issued to his own company, C and E Drywall Co. of High Point, Saintsing said.

ON THE ROAD — Tom Maryscuk of Jacksonville doesn't need big trucks to carry his goods around town. Using a technique he learned in Japan, Maryscuk just hooks up his cart to his bicycle and takes off. It's inexpensive, and he can set his own pace. (AP Laserphoto)

RALEIGH (AP) — The winter storm and a light schedule produced a slow day at the General Assembly, but didn't stop lawmakers and others from using creative methods to reach the Legislative Building.

Legislators, most of whom had journeyed to Raleigh the previous night for Gov. Jim Martin's State of the State address, trickled into the Statehouse throughout the morning Tuesday.

Some arrived in four-wheel drive vehicles, some in Highway Patrol cars and others on foot. But Bill Holman, an environmental lobbyist, may have had the brightest idea: He skied to work.

"I've had these cross-country skis for years and I never got to use them," Holman said, wiping off his skis and handing them to a receptionist for safekeeping. "It's better than walking, and it's a heck of a lot better than driving."

Outside the Legislative Building, a 2-foot-wide path stretched to the unshoveled sidewalk. Inside, most of the lawmakers had traded street shoes for a collection of galoshes and boots.

"How much money does this county spend on snow removal?" asked Sen. Charles Hipps, from mountainous Haywood County. "Back home, they'd have had this cleared up in no time."

Sen. Joe Johnson, D-Wake, replied, "You all seem to get the lion's share of that money in the mountains. But we'd be happy to support efforts to get us some more."

Joe Dean, secretary of crime control and public safety, said the Highway Patrol ferried 10 to 15 legislators to Raleigh from their home districts because of the weather. Dean said it was the first time such emergency measures have been needed since he took office.

Legislators who took advantage of the service included Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, and Reps. Vernon Abernethy, D-Gaston, Johnathan Rhyne, R-Lincoln, and Walter Windley, D-Gaston.

Reps. Gordon Greenwood and Narvel Jim Crawford, both D-Buncombe, said it took them eight hours to drive to Raleigh on Monday.

"I've never seen it like this before — when all the major highways were covered with about the same amount of snow — since I went to State College in 1928," said Greenwood.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, had no trouble reaching Raleigh by air Tuesday after a trip to New York. But the journey to the Legislative Building from the Raleigh-Durham Airport was another matter.

"It took me longer to get downtown than it did to fly down here," Rauch said. "It was amazing."

As the House prepared to adjourn, Speaker Liston Ramsey announced that power would be cut off to the Legislative Building at 4 p.m. due to problems with a power transformer. Several legislators responded, "We won't be here."

Martin Plan Makes Judges Accountable

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin's proposal to overhaul the system of electing judges is an effort to make them more accountable to the public, his chief legal counsel says.

Jim Trotter, Martin's executive assistant and legal counsel, said the proposals on judicial selection in the governor's State of the State address were designed to improve a system that has escaped change despite repeated criticism over the years.

But a legislator who last week introduced a bill to authorize a two-year study of the issue said there was no use pushing for action during this year's session.

"It's a question of what you can do," Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, said Tuesday. "I'm pretty good at counting noses and I tell you that anything with the word 'M-E-R-I-T' in it doesn't have a chance. That's why it's important to have this study and try to build a consensus."

Trotter agreed that "the mood of the Legislature is to do nothing." But he said recent developments, including Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan's support of Hipps' bill and the bitterly contested 1986 races for appellate judgeships, offered hope that the General Assembly would act.

Martin, a Republican and longtime critic of the partisan judicial election system and a supporter of "meritorious selection," proposed Monday a distinction between trial judgeships and appellate judgeships.

He recommended electing Superior Court judges on a district-wide basis, as District Court judges are chosen.

The city of Greenville has a 24-hour leash law. Dogs are permitted off personal property as long as they are on a leash or are restrained by some other means of physical control. Dogs found running at large will be picked up and taken to the City-County Animal Shelter on County Home Road.

Mandatory AIDS Tests Considered

RALEIGH (AP) — Mandatory testing for AIDS for hospital admittees may be proposed to the General Assembly if the idea is backed by health officials at a meeting in Atlanta next week, a state official told the House Health Committee.

Dr. Ron Levine, state health director, said Tuesday that representatives of every state will meet Feb. 24 to "review features, both plus and minus, of extending mandatory screening to other groups," including those seeking marriage licenses.

Levine also called for strengthening AIDS education in the public schools, but sidestepped the potentially controversial issue of suggesting how early to begin the lessons.

"We feel it is important to strengthen that portion of the health curriculum dealing with AIDS so that the young people will know how serious, how tragic this disease can be," he said.

Since health officials first learned of Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, 186 cases in North Carolina have resulted in 120 deaths due to the destruction of each victim's immune system, Levine said. Most cases have involved male homosexuals, intravenous drug users and hemophiliacs, he said.

Already, North Carolina has more free AIDS-screening clinics — 98 — than any other state, Levine said.

The other major recommendation from Levine was to "fine-tune" legislation aimed at reducing the cost of state-mandated childhood vaccines.

The Medical Malpractice Study Commission pushed through a law last year to insulate pediatricians and drug companies from lawsuits sparked by the DPT vaccine, Levine said.

"We were very surprised and disappointed that the industry did not respond in a positive way to the legislation," Levine said, adding that company officials remained concerned that offering cut-rate vaccine to one state might encourage black marketing by neighboring states.

If amendments are adopted to address the concerns, Levine said, "We are looking forward to renegotiating our contract with this company with the lowest rate in the country by this fall."

Levine said state officials don't plan to seek additional funds for the no-fault program set up to handle vaccine-related injuries. He said there are two such cases before the North Carolina Industrial Commission and that there is no way to predict how much money might be needed to compensate victims.

The vaccine on rare occasions causes neurological damage to children. Under the new law, the state guarantees life-long treatment for such victims. In return, parents agree not to seek damages against the doctors who administered the vaccine or the drug manufacturer.

More Funds Likely For Proton Device

By The Associated Press

Key legislative leaders say the General Assembly will probably approve additional funds so the state can compete for a giant proton smasher to be built by the federal government.

"We talked about this some this morning at breakfast with the governor," said Rep. Billy Watkins, whose home, Granville County, is part of the state's proposed site.

"The consensus of the leadership of both houses of the General Assembly is to go after it," Watkins, co-chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, said Tuesday.

The federal project — formally called the Superconducting Super Collider — would be the world's largest atomic-particle accelerator, allowing high-energy physicists to better study the fundamental particles of matter and energy.

Cooper Speech

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. Rep. Jim Cooper of Tennessee accepted $1,000 to speak before tobacco industry executives and took the opportunity to lambaste the group about the health problems associated with their product.

"I told them ahead of time that it wouldn't be what they would want to hear, and they said come on anyway," said the 4th District Democratic congressman who represents many tobacco farmers.

Cooper started out his speech to tobacco executives at the Tobacco Institute, a lobbying group representing the interests of tobacco companies and tobacco growers, talking about how important tobacco is for providing jobs. However, he said he quickly moved on to the health problems during the talk last week.

"I told them that as valuable as the crop is to my constituents, most of my growers do not want their kids to smoke. To me, that is the bottom line," Cooper said. "There is no reputable scientific body in the United States that disagrees that smoke is harmful to the smoker."

Cooper, 32, said he also told the executives that he does not think the Tobacco Institute is doing its job well.

Agency Closed

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — A private social service agency that serves Columbus, Brunswick and Pender counties has closed its doors following reports of financial irregularities, and the agency's board of directors has asked for an investigation.

The board of Sencland Community Action Inc. voted unanimously to shut down the agency after learning that Sencland lacks the money to pay federal and state withholding taxes for the last six months.

The board also asked District Attorney Mike Easley to investigate. Easley said Tuesday he expects a joint federal-state probe, possibly involving SBI and FBI agents.

Fewer Lawyers

GREENSBORO (AP) — An American Bar Association study indicates lawyers just don't seem to have the same appeal in North Carolina that they do elsewhere in the nation.

The bar association says North Carolina ranks dead last in the number of attorneys based on population figures. The state has 8,913 lawyers, or 1.4 attorneys for every 1,000 residents. The national average is 2.8 lawyers per 1,000.

South Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee also post low lawyer-client ratios.

Heart Disease

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Medical researchers at Wake Forest University's medical school hope an $11.5 million, five-year grant will help them explain the nearly 400,000 heart-related deaths each year that cannot be linked with traditional risk factors.

The three traditional risk factors are cigarette smoking, high blood pressure and high cholesterol levels, said Dr. Richard St. Clair, associate director of the Specialized Center of Research in Arteriosclerosis at the Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

The grant from the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute is the largest in the school's history. It will fund eight projects and 10 laboratories for five years.

Billboard Suit

HENDERSONVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Summey Outdoor Advertising has filed suit against Henderson County contending its billboard regulations are unconstitutional and designed to put billboard companies out of business.

"We have made every attempt to try to work with the county and would be happy to live with a sign ordinance, if it weren't an abusive ordinance," Mike Summey, owner of the Black Mountain-based company, said Tuesday. "We simply can't live with an ordinance that will end up putting us out of business."

County Commission Chairman Bill Drake said Tuesday that he saw "no grounds for the suit."

Court Changes

HICKORY, N.C. (AP) — Changes are coming to the courtrooms of the 25th Judicial District, Chief Judge Oliver Noble has announced.

New court schedules, child support guidelines, and rules for calendaring and disposing of domestic cases have been mailed to all attorneys and court officials in the district which includes Catawba, Burke, and Caldwell counties, Noble said.

The new rules took effect Monday and will be fully enforced on and after April 6, and the revised judicial assignment calendar will take effect within the next few weeks.

Office Open

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Maude Fowler remained in charge of the Gastonia license bureau of the Department of Motor Vehicles Tuesday, as Superior Court Judge Forrest Ferrell of Hickory signed an order preventing the state from closing the office.

The bureau was scheduled to close for good at 5 p.m. Monday, but attorney David Childers obtained the temporary restraining order from Ferrell at 3:17 p.m.

Mrs. Fowler filed suit in Gaston County Superior Court Feb. 10, alleging that the state terminated her contract to run the bureau Dec. 19 because of politics, and that the state did not give 60 days notice of the closing, as mandated in the contract.

Mrs. Fowler is active in Democratic politics. A new contract to operate the bureau was granted to Marianne Williams, wife of former state Department of Transportation representative H. Lanier Williams.

Settlement

RALEIGH (AP) — A woman who suffered a broken nose when she was punched by a drunken patron at a Raleigh nightclub will receive money from the club's owner to settle a civil lawsuit out of court.

The lawsuit was brought by Van Eure, granddaughter of Secretary of State Thad Eure, against the now-closed Sensations nightclub under the dram shop law. The law makes tavern owners responsible for customers who are served too much alcohol and then drive drunk.

Lawyers said they knew of no other case in North Carolina in which the dram shop law was applied to something other than drunken driving.

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Piedmont Airlines and NCNB have teamed to offer a Visa bank card for Piedmont frequent flyers.

Under the new arrangement, members of Piedmont's Frequent Flyer Bonus Program will be offered the opportunity to apply for a Piedmont-NCNB jointly issued Visa card. With the card, program members will be able to recieve one mile of credit for every dollar in purchases charged to the credit card.

The Piedmont Frequent Flyer Bonus Program allows members to earn mileage credit good for free and discounted Piedmont tickets, Hertz and National car rentals and lodging at Stouffer, Radisson and Omni hotels.

Farmers Aren't Rushing To Request Protection Under Bankruptcy Rule

By The Associated Press

About noon last Nov. 26, Julius Wiley Eldridge's attorney filed the first bankruptcy case in North Carolina under new legislation aimed at keeping financially troubled family farmers on the land.

Time was of the essence. The law took effect the previous midnight, and the attorney, John W. Morris, was trying to stave off creditors who had given notice that they were going to foreclose on Eldridge's equipment and force him off his land in Sampson County.

The filing under Chapter 12 of the federal bankruptcy code bought Eldridge some much-needed time. He was allowed to remain on his land while he tried to work out his financial difficulties.

Congress created Chapter 12 last year to give farmers the same ability to reorganize their debts that consumers and corporations have under other provisions of the bankruptcy code.

Bankers opposed the legislation on the grounds that it would give farmers an unfair advantage and that it would force bankers to tighten their lending policies.

But the stampede of farmers filing for protection under Chapter 12 that many bankers predicted has not materialized. As of last week, more than 400 farmers across the country — and 78 in North Carolina — had used the provision to work their way out of trouble.

Robert N. Collender, an extension economist at N.C. State University, said that bankers and agriculture officials overestimate the provision's potential effect. He pointed to changes in bankruptcy laws in the late 1970s that were more far-reaching but failed to dramatically affect commercial lending, and he cited a natural aversion among farmers to filing for protection.

While most lenders agreed it was too early to assess the effect of Chapter 12 on traditional spring lending, they said that in many cases economically marginal farmers will find it tougher to get financing for another year of operation.

Thomas J. Emerson, the president of the Farm Credit Service in Graham, said that Chapter 12 could have an adverse effect on borrowers.

"There hasn't been a change in Land Bank policies in response to Chapter 12," he said, "but lenders are going to be a little more analytical on marginal loans because of the option of Chapter 12."

Wilbur Cabe, the president of the Federal Land Bank Association in Statesville, says: "There is risk involved with any bankruptcy. If it's made easier, that creates more risk, and bankers sure are going to keep a closer watch on their money when the risk goes up."

The new provisions set down strict qualifications for farmers, among them that they be family farmers who receive at least half their income from farming and whose farm operations account for at least 80 percent of their debts.

But the provisions give them an edge in reorganizing they did not have before: The farmer can now pay his debt at the current deflated market value of his land and equipment collateral instead of at its older, higher value.

This is the provision to which bankers have objected most because, they say, it almost assures that they will not collect the full value of the loans.

The provision "only serves to hurt the banks. It takes a situation where the farmer is beyond help and stretches it out," said Jim Fowles, a Land Bank attorney in Columbia, S.C., who represents many of North Carolina's Land Banks.

The law stresses that it will work only for the farmer with the financial vitality to stay in business under a court-approved reorganization plan. It also expedites processing of plans and, unlike other provisions of the bankruptcy code, denies creditors veto power.

Piedmont Considers Buyout Bid

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Norfolk Southern Corp. has offered to buy Piedmont Airlines for $65 in a share in cash, a move that analysts say could open a bidding war for the Winston-Salem airline.

Piedmont said a committee of four independent directors that studied Norfolk-Southern's offer "intends to recommend it be approved by the Piedmont board," which meets Thursday.

The committee also recommended the airline reject two offers from USAir, based in Washington. One was a swap of USAir stock worth $71 a share, and the other a cash-and-stock offer equaling $68 a share.

Piedmont stock rose $6.25 to close at $65.37½ a share in heavy trading Tuesday on the New York Stock Exchange, prompted by speculation that USAir or a larger airline might take a higher offer directly to Piedmont stockholders, analysts said.

One of the nation's largest railroads, Norfolk Southern is a holding company that owns all the common stock of the Norfolk and Western Railway Co. and the Southern Railway Co. and North American Van Lines Inc. The company already owns 19.5 percent of Piedmont's stock.

The two railroads operate on more than 17,000 miles of track in 20 states in the Southeast and Midwest and in the Province of Ontario.

On Jan. 27, Norfolk Southern reported the highest profits for a fourth quarter and for a year in its history. Earnings in the fourth quarter of 86 were $144.2 million, or $2.28 per common share. For the year, profits were $518.7 million, or $3.22 per share.

Piedmont is about the ninth largest airline in the United States, said Piedmont spokesman Don McGuire, and is one of only three that has been profitable in each year since airlines were deregulated nine years ago.

Piedmont had per share earnings of 78 cents a share for the fourth quarter of 1986, McGuire said, and per share earnings for the entire year of $3.45. Total earnings for 1986 were $72.4 million compared to $66.7 million for the previous year.

Piedmont employs about 20,000 people and has a fleet of 160 jet aircraft. It has more than 1,215 departures daily serving more than 100 cities in 30 states and the District of Columbia, McGuire said.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

The average of 30 blue-chip stocks jumped to 2,237.49, surpassing the previous record of 2,201.49 set Feb. 5. It was just over 340 points higher than at the beginning of the year. (AP Laserphoto)

Ford Passes GM In Earnings For First Time Since Model T

By JANET BRAUNSTEIN
AP Auto Writer

DETROIT (AP) — Popular products, improved productivity and continuous cost-cutting helped Ford Motor Co. earn $3.29 billion in 1986 and pass General Motors Corp. for the first time since the Model-T era, analysts say.

Ford, the nation's No. 2 automaker, said Tuesday its earnings, worth $12.32 a share, came on record worldwide sales of $62.7 billion in 1986.

That was a 31 percent increase over 1985 earnings of $2.5 billion, or $9.09 a share, on sales of $52.7 billion, making Ford the only Big Three automaker to increase earnings over 1985. Ford said it planned to announce the amount of 1986 profit-sharing for employees today.

GM and Chrysler reported two weeks ago that their profits declined in 1986. The last time Ford's profits surpassed GM's was in 1924.

"It's a combination of Ford doing very well and GM having problems. GM should be earning a lot more than it is," said Harvey Heinbach, an industry analyst with Merrill Lynch in New York.

Heinbach said it's possible Ford could earn more than GM again in 1987. However, he predicted some decline in Ford earnings for that year, saying "it will be difficult to sustain this level of profitability."

Ford has increased productivity and held down capital expenditure by renovating old plants rather than building new ones and by cutting white-collar staff every year since 1980, said Maryann Keller, analyst at Furman, Selz, Mager Dietz & Birney in New York.

Ford's success formula also includes a fast-selling, high-profit car line that includes the aerodynamic Taurus and Sable sedans and wagons and a very strong presence in Europe, she said.

"Here's a company with half the market share of GM outearning GM. It certainly underscores the profitability of both companies," Ms. Keller said.

GM, the nation's largest automaker, said it earned $2.95 billion, or $8.21 per common share, on revenues of $102.8 billion in 1986, down 26 percent from $3.99 billion, or $12.28 per share, on revenues of $96.4 billion in 1985.

GM workers, who also have a profit-sharing formula in their labor contract, will receive no share of profits for 1986. The company said it has set aside $169 million for executive bonuses.

Chrysler said it earned $1.4 billion, or $9.47 per share, on sales of $22.59 billion in 1986, down 14.6 percent from $1.64 billion, or $9.38 per share, on sales of $21.26 billion in 1985.

Eligible Chrysler hourly workers each receive a flat $500 profit-sharing payment for 1986, negotiated into their three-year contract, regardless of Chrysler's performance, said spokesman John Guiniven.

Ford's fourth-quarter earnings increased 9 percent over fourth-quarter 1985, the company reported. Fourth-quarter earnings were $785 million, or $2.99 a share, on sales of $16.3 billion in 1986, compared with $720 million, or $2.65 a share, on sales of $14 billion in 1985.

"Teamwork and concentration on the basics led to today's record results and are the key ingredients of future performance," Ford chairman Donald Petersen and president Harold Poling said in a statement

"Although 1986 was a very good year for Ford, it also was a good year for sales of foreign cars and trucks in the United States," they said.

"The automotive markets will be even more competitive in the future, making it imperative that we continue improving our quality, our products and our cost position."

GM reported a 69.5 percent plunge in fourth-quarter earnings from 1985 as a result of slow sales, the high cost of incentive programs and production, heavy capital investment and a one-time charge for future closure of nine plants and parts of two others.

Analysts attributed the decline in Chrysler earnings to costs incurred in introducing a large number of new products.

Dow Index Jumps Record 54 Points

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dow Jones industrial average has hit a new all-time high, surging by a record 54.14 points as cash-laden institutions and foreign investors rushed to buy U.S. securities.

The average of 30 blue-chip stocks jumped to 2,237.49 on Tuesday, surpassing the previous record of 2,201.49 set Feb. 5.

Tuesday's rise also broke the daily point-gain record of 51.60 set Jan. 22.

The closely watched average stood today more than 340 points above its level when the year began.

Analysts said the surge was supported by big cash holdings of institutions and foreign traders, who were reluctant to put their money into the sagging bond market.

Bond prices continued falling Tuesday, amid investor concerns about prospects for higher interest rates and lower foreign participation due to the dollar's steady decline against other currencies.

The shrinking U.S. dollar makes dollar-denominated securities such as bonds relatively less attractive to foreign investors, but also makes U.S. stocks comparatively attractive and U.S. companies more competitive overseas.

The analysts also said investors were encouraged by the way the market had shrugged off the latest developments in the insider trading scandal last week, and that this optimism bolstered the market's bullish mood.

Organized Labor Reviving Bid For Higher Minimums

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

BAL HARBOUR, Fla. (AP) — Organized labor, recharged by its success in the 1986 election, has revived proposals to raise the minimum wage, require advance notice of layoffs and rescind scheduled tax cuts for the wealthy.

"We have seen in recent years the erosion of a broad middle class that produced goods and services and could afford to buy them — an economy benefiting only a few and providing less and less for the rest," AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland said Tuesday at the organization's annual winter meeting.

Just a day earlier, the 12.8-million-member labor federation won assurances from House and Senate Democratic leaders that Congress by summer will pass trade legislation to reduce record imports blamed for the loss of 2.5 million U.S. jobs. President Reagan opposes such measures as protectionist.

Labor Secretary and former GOP National Chairman William E. Brock met privately with the labor leaders here Tuesday in an effort to find some common ground in the wake of Democrats regaining control of the Senate last November after six years.

"They have a right to that," Brock told reporters when asked if unions are now flexing their muscle. "They had a big success in the elections last year."

But he added he is confident that Reagan can muster the 34 Senate votes needed to sustain a veto of the protectionist trade legislation wanted by unions.

"There's no way any one group can force its will on the rest of the country; it just doesn't work that way," Brock said before returning to Washington to help Reagan unveil a competitiveness initiative aimed at stalling AFL-CIO-backed trade bills.

The labor federation's 35-member executive council on Tuesday called for raising the minimum wage through "appropriate steps" to $4.61 per hour. The council also said it will lobby for automatically raising the minimum wage annually to keep it at roughly half the national average for all workers, currently $8.85 per hour.

The minimum wage, paid to 7.4 million workers according to latest government statistics, has been frozen at $3.35 per hour the past six years. During that time prices have risen an average 27 percent.

Brock said the Reagan administration likely will try to condition any increase in the minimum wage upon the establishment of a sub-minimum wage for teenagers.

"That will allow young people who don't have skills ... to get some skills without being precluded from that first job by a minimum wage that is beyond their talents," he said.

Reagan tried unsuccessfully in 1981 and 1982 to sell the same point to Congress, arguing that a $2.50-per-hour wage would open up hundreds of thousands of jobs for unskilled teenagers.

"We of course find that unacceptable," Kirkland said.

The labor leaders also declared that they will push for laws requiring employers to give workers advance notice before plant closings and mass layoffs.

Fewer than half the estimated 2 million workers who annually lose their jobs to such events now receive more than two weeks notice, according to a study last year by the congressional Office of Technology Assessment.

Train Official Says Safety Units Bypassed

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The head of the Federal Railroad Administration says he is aware that safety devices required on trains are being tampered with and regularly made useless, but there's little his agency can do about it.

When tampering is discovered, it is usually by luck, says FRA Administrator John Riley, although federal inspectors caught two railroad workers "redhanded" this week, observing them disengaging safety devices.

Equipment tampering has been one of the most controversial issues to emerge from the recent collision of an Amtrak passenger train and Conrail freight locomotives near Baltimore. A cab signal warning whistle was found taped shut in the Conrail locomotive, contributing to the accident which claimed 16 lives.

On another controversial issue, that of drug testing for railroad workers, railroad labor leaders Tuesday reversed earlier opposition to such testing and supported a random drug-testing program they said would satisfy their previous objections.

At a Senate hearing Tuesday, Riley disclosed that since the Jan. 4 accident, enforcement actions have been taken against eight railroads after inspectors found 18 cases of tampering with safety devices by train operators.

"I fear what we have discovered may truly be the tip of the iceberg," Riley told the Senate Commerce subcommittee on surface transportation. While such tampering may be widespread, detection is difficult and usually possible only when flagrant, he said.

Among the equipment being disconnected or otherwise made inoperable in train locomotives are speed governors, signal alerting equipment and automatic train braking devices, as well as so-called "dead-man pedals" which guard against an engineer falling asleep or becoming incapacitated, officials said.

Sen. James Exon, D-Neb., chairman of the subcommittee, said the railroads "have not been as forthcoming" as they could be in dealing with equipment tampering. The panel's ranking Republican, Sen. Bob Kasten of Wisconsin, expressed outrage at "the deliberate sabotage of important safety devices."

Riley told the Senate panel that his agency needs new powers to get directly at the railroad employees who do the tampering. When a tampering incident is found, the FRA may issue a fine of up to $2,500 against the railroad, but may take no action against the employee.

Even when federal inspectors in two cases this week observed railroad operators interfering with safety equipment, "We could do nothing but turn them over to the (railroad) company," Riley complained.

He told the subcommittee that disciplinary action often becomes bogged down in "complex and time-consuming grievance procedures" outlined by collective bargaining agreements between the railroad and rail unions.

In separate testimony, Jim Burnett, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board, said that while sanctions directly against rail employes might produce some benefits, they also might shift enforcement responsibilities from the railroads to the federal government "which is not prepared to step in" because of manpower and budget shortages.

Burnett suggested that penalties against railroad companies be increased sharply, perhaps even in the "hundreds of thousands and millions of dollars" range as has been the case in the aviation industry when safety violations have been found.

Riley said the maximum fine for a tampering violation whould be increased from $2,500 to $10,000, and $25,000 when the violation is flagrant.

Rail labor officials acknowledged that equipment tampering exists in the industry, although they declined to estimate how widespread such activity might be. They said direct government sanctions against employees is not the answer.

"The grievance procedure is not that slow" and can deal with safety violators, Jim Snyder, legislative and safety chairman of the Railway Labor Executive Association, said in an interview.

He and other union officials blamed tampering on management pressures on employees and on poor design of some of the devices.

Lawyer Charged In Insider Probe

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

NEW YORK — A 34-year-old lawyer was arrested Tuesday on insider trading charges and accused of informing relatives and friends about the $1.7 million recapitalization of Colt Industries last summer, allegedly allowing them to parlay an investment of $38,273 into $1.5 million in just two weeks.

The lawyer, Israel G. Grossman, was charged in a criminal complaint with violating federal securities laws and mail fraud. He and six relatives and friends were also charged in a civil complaint filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The case, originally brought to the attention of the SEC by the market surveillance department of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange whose computers picked up unusual trading patterns, is not connected with other major insider trading cases brought by the government in recent months.

The biggest such case involves former investment banker Dennis B. Levine and millionaire stock speculator Ivan F. Boesky. Levine, arrested last May on charges of making $12.6 million from illegal stock trading, led federal investigators to Boesky, Wall Street's best-known stock arbitrageur.

The latest development in that case came Friday, when former investment banker Martin A. Siegel pleaded guilty to criminal conspiracy and tax evasion charges and paid the government $9 million to settle civil charges that he was a tipster for Boesky.

Webb To Succeed Lehman As Secretary Of The Navy

By GEORGE C. WILSON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — James H. Webb Jr., a gung-ho ex-Marine who has chronicled everything from ground soldiers in Vietnam to lofty principles he believes undergird the republic, is slated to succeed John F. Lehman Jr. as secretary of the Navy.

Once Webb is nominated and confirmed, the helm of the Navy will pass from one aggressive and strong-willed secretary to another. Neither, Webb, 41, nor Lehman, 44, is intimidated by the military's stars and gold braid. Both have taken on the military brass, and won.

Webb has done this in his current job as assistant secretary of defense for reserve affairs and is expected to keep doing it when he takes over the Navy's top job from Lehman early in April. Lehman in his six years as Navy secretary has made a habit of steaming over admirals on issues as far-ranging as the proper price of airplane ashtrays to whether aircraft carriers in wartime should sail into the Soviet Union's front yard.

Webb had announced he would leave the Pentagon to return to writing novels — this one on the Civil War. But apparently the idea of a one-time Marine company commander taking over the Navy, of which the Marine Corps is a part, proved irresistible.

Lehman had been rumored to be leaving for months, some said for a political career. "I don't have any foreseeable plans to run for any office or manage anyone's campaign," Lehman said at a Pentagon news conference Tuesday of rumors he might run George Bush's presidential campaign or run for office himself. Lehman said he was leaving "the best job in the world" because now that the 600-ship Navy is virtually built, "It's time to move on." He said he is seeking an executive post in industry and did not rule out the defense industry as an eventual employer.

Lehman's six years as Navy secretary have drawn both praise and criticism.

His backers credit Lehman with wresting from Congress the money needed to modernize the fleet, including authorizing two aircraft carriers in one year, and keeping it ready to fight.

Shamir Faces Congress On Arms Deal

WASHINGTON (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir faced quizzing by members of Congress on U.S. arms shipments to Iran after a meeting with President Reagan that was likely to focus on a strategic defense against the Soviet Union in the Middle East.

Shamir is not getting any heat on the arms deals from the administration. Secretary of State George P. Shultz said Tuesday he had touched on the scandal "very, very briefly" in a meeting with the visiting Israeli leader at the State Department that lasted more than two hours.

"Whatever the participation of various people from Israel may be, in the end the decisions of the United States government are the responsibility of the United States government," Shultz said.

But on Capitol Hill, where the seven U.S. arms shipments last year to Tehran are under investigation, the origins of Reagan's decision in January 1986 to authorize the sales are among the targets of close scrutiny.

Shamir had separate sessions set for late afternoon with Senate Democratic and Republican leaders and with members of the Senate and House foreign affairs committees.

On Tuesday, he defended Israel's overtures to Iran and also condemned the idea of a Mideast peace conference as an invention of the Soviet Union and radical Arabs.

"I am strongly opposed to this invention of an international conference for peace," Shamir said after meeting with Shultz. "It will not bring peace to the area. It will not serve the cause of peace."

Shamir said direct negotiations involving Israel and its Arab neighbors, including Palestinians who live under Israeli jursidiction, remain "the most reasonable and practicable approach" to an overall settlement.

"I trust that the United States will not agree to substitute this program for Soviet-inspired notions supported by radical Arabs, such as an international conference. I will not deny I am strongly opposed to this invention," he said.

A senior U.S. official, who spoke only on condition of anonymity, told reporters at the White House: "We look at an international conference as one of the possible ways, if it can be properly structured, to get at direct negotiations."

He said the prime minister's talks with Reagan and key aides were designed to focus on peace prospects and how the United States and Israel "must deal with the Soviet threat" to the Middle East.

Shultz, who stood at Shamir's side in the State Department lobby, had raised the idea of a conference as possibly a way to hold peace talks between Israel and its Arab neighbors.

After Shamir objected to the notion as Soviet-inspired, Shultz assured him: "We are not going to fall for that."

Shultz added: "Our objective is not an international conference but direct negotiations."

On Iran, the prime minister defended his government's policy of trying to encourage moderation in Tehran.

"I think it is one of the most dangerous countries in the world," Shamir said. "It is a terrorist country, a totalitarian country." But, he said, despite Iran's behavior, "We have to do everything possible to change the situation. I think we will not cease our efforts to have and exercise a certain influence in that country."

The U.S. official said U.S. arms sales to Iran were not the centerpiece of Shamir's three-day visit.

Gates Says CIA Sought 'Buffer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's choice to head the CIA, Robert M. Gates, said agency officials avoided learning about diversion of Iran arms sale money to the Nicaraguan Contras to avoid accusations of violating Congress' ban on aid to the rebels.

"We don't have the faintest idea how much the Contras obtained from various sources" during the two-year aid ban that began in 1984, Gates told the Senate Intelligence Committee during his confirmation hearings Tuesday. "We tried to build in a buffer. ... It was best to build as big a buffer as possible."

Gates said agency officials from top to bottom had been instructed to stay far clear of anything dealing with Contra aid.

"It was out of caution to avoid crossing the bounds of the permissible that CIA officers at all levels were urged to avoid involvement with matters concerning private efforts to support the Contras," Gates said.

Gates handled questions, sharp and skeptical at times, from the panel for 5½ hours and faced more grilling today, both in public and behind closed doors.

Committee Chairman David Boren, D-Okla., said any vote on whether to confirm the 43-year-old career intelligence analyst to succeed the ailing William J. Casey would be delayed at least until early March, in part to see whether Reagan's commission investigating the Iran-Contra scandal turns up additional information on the CIA's conduct.

"I don't think any members of the committee have prejudged this or decided how they're going to vote," Boren said, although the consensus on Capitol Hill was that Gates would have a relatively easy time winning confirmation, barring any late and damaging revelations.

Under close questioning on Tuesday, Gates promised to report any illegal or suspicious intelligence activities to Congress but said he had not challenged the Iran-Contra arms deal because there was no evidence of wrongdoing.

"While this was a risky operation, there was no reason to quarrel with it," he said at one point, prompting a quick response from committee vice chairman Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine.

"Of course there was reason to quarrel with it," Cohen said, reminding Gates that during questioning earlier in the day the nominee had said he would have approached the situation far more skeptically than Casey apparently did and ultimately would have recommended against the deal if he had been director at the time.

"You are an ambitious young man. You didn't want to rock the boat," Cohen said, advising Gates against trying to adopt the administration's rationales that the initiative was a justifiable foreign policy exercise.

"No one wanted to know what was going on," Cohen said of the agency's response to the Iran initiative, which was carried out by the White House National Security Council staff. "Everybody was kind of putting up buffers, as you said. They didn't want to get involved."

Japan To Make Bid For U.S. Colleges

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese officials will host a tour by U.S. university administrators next week, offering them land, buildings and other incentives in hopes of recruiting American campuses for 27 Japanese cities.

About 30 administrators representing 90 colleges have signed up for the trip, organized by a group of U.S. and Japanese legislators called the U.S.-Japan Committee for Promoting Trade Expansion.

To entice the American schools into opening branch campuses, state and local officials in Japan are offering vacant land and office space; banks will provide low-interest construction and renovation loans and attractive lease-back arrangements; Japanese corporations promise to contribute endowed chairs and student scholarships.

Promoters of the project call it the first of its kind. They say the export of U.S. higher education, generally assessed as superior to the Japanese system, will benefit Japan and America equally.

"It's not that we anticipate there will be any direct impact on the balance of trade," said Andie King, chief legislative aide to Rep. Richard Gephardt, D-Mo., who was instrumental in forming the committee.

"But part of our problem in doing business with Japan has been our lack of knowledge of the country, its history, its customs, its language and in particular its people," King said. "The Japanese do business with people they know. They are very reluctant to do business with strangers."

The zeal and largess of the Japanese recruiters were contrasted Tuesday to the Reagan administration's proposed cuts in student financial aid by David Reed, chancellor of Florida's state university system.

"The Japanese are recruiting the resources of American higher education for the benefit of Japanese students, while the Congress debates a reduction in support for American students to access these same resources," Reed told the Senate Budget Committee. "Are we playing in the same game? ... The reality is that America cannot sustain economic growth without an outstanding educational enterprise."

Assistant Education Secretary Chester E. Finn Jr. called Reed's criticism "rubbish" and "horsefeathers." He said the incentives to U.S. colleges are coming from state and local Japanese officials and not from the federal government there.

"Our states are the main sponsors of public higher education in this country too," he said. "It is absolutely irresponsible for (Reed) to try to suggest an analogy between prefectural (state-level) governments in Japan and federal budgets in the United States."

Finn, who supervised a study of Japanese education released by his department last month, said the Japanese system of higher education is "not held in particularly high esteem elsewhere in the world. It could probably benefit from some help. I am not surprised or displeased that they are seeking to benefit from contacts with U.S. higher education."

King said U.S. universities conduct many exchange programs and joint research projects with Japanese institutions, but Temple University's Tokyo branch is the only independent U.S. campus in the country.

She said the goal of the new programs is a 50-50 mix of Japanese and American students, with all work conducted in English and some U.S. students participating in internships at Japanese businesses. Cities of all sizes are competing for the campuses, she said.

American colleges have conducted economically viable degree-granting programs at branch campuses in Europe and Asia for many years, but have not made inroads in Japan. "Japan just hasn't been a country that we've thought about in terms of establishing a permanent American presence," King said.

Once the idea was presented, she said, some schools were so enthusiastic that they didn't want to wait for this month's trip. Boston University sent a vice president over for a 10-month stay last October, she said.

Among other schools that got a jump with early visits: the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Ohio University, the University of Maryland and Johns Hopkins University.

Nancy Shuts Out Regan In Bid For His Ouster

By LOU CANNON
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan, under fire for managerial shortcomings from Republican politicians and first lady Nancy Reagan, is finding it increasingly difficult to fill the growing number of vacancies on the White House staff.

Two well-informed sources said Tuesday that the first lady is no longer speaking to Regan, whose replacement she has been urging since December. The sources said that President Reagan has not indicated any change in his commitment to keep Regan, but said the chief of staff might leave on his own within the next few weeks if he concludes that it would benefit the president.

"The consensus has firmed that Regan's demise is inevitable," said one Republican source close to the administration. "There is virtually unanimous consensus on the hill and in the Washington political community that the sooner Regan departs the more opportunity there is to rejuvenate the last period of the Reagan presidency."

However, a senior White House official close to Regan said that the view that Regan will depart because of his widespread unpopularity represents "wishful thinking" by his critics.

Regan, who acknowledges that he supported the president's clandestine arms sale to Iran, has been virtually invisible in Washington since he held a news conference in mid-December after testifying before the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Regan spoke to reporters briefly Sunday in Waterville Valley, N.H., after addressing a conference of conservative political activists there. The Manchester (N.H.) Union Leader quoted Regan as saying that he had no plans to resign, adding, "if the president feels that way, I will, but I work at his pleasure and he hasn't

White House and Republican sources said Tuesday that Regan was encountering difficulty in trying to fill the job of White House political director. The job will soon be vacated by Mitchell E. Daniels, who resigned two months after he urged Regan to quit and allow the president to make "a fresh start."

President Says 'Star Wars' Test Allowed By Pact

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told both the Soviet Union and Congress that the administration is justified in viewing a 1972 nuclear arms control treaty in a way that permits testing of a "Star Wars" anti-missile system.

Reagan on Tuesday also again asserted that the United States will comply with all superpower treaties, including the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile pact which limits the types of defenses each side can build.

In a letter to congressional leaders, the president noted that the United States has complained before about what it says are violations by the Soviets of treaties and said, "these concerns remain." The Soviets deny the violations.

The current dispute involves whether to use a "narrow" or "broad" interpretation of the 1972 pact.

Under the narrow view which has been in effect since the treaty was approved by the Senate, there could be no major tests of the Strategic Defense Initiative, the formal name of Reagan's four-year-old Star Wars program. The broader interpretation would permit a wide range of tests.

While Reagan was reporting to Congress, State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said Soviet negotiators at the U.S.-Soviet arms control talks in Geneva had asked U.S. officials about how the 1972 treaty was viewed.

"We've responded by explaining the broad interpretation and why we believe it is fully justified," Redman said.

Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev said in a speech Monday that any U.S. effort to undermine the 1972 treaty would violate the spirit of a broad agreement to stop the arms race which Gorbachev said he and Reagan agreed upon during their November 1985 summit meeting.

The Soviet leader said talk in the United States about a new, broader interpretation "scorns the pledge" made at the Geneva meeting. He called for an international treaty specifically banning deployment of weapons in space.

Some Star Wars supporters within the administration, chiefly Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, are pushing for an early decision to deploy an SDI system. But others oppose the move.

Weinberger told the Senate Armed Services Committee on Tuesday that the Pentagon was drawing up a list of SDI experiments which could go ahead if that broader interpretation of the ABM treaty is put into effect. The wider view was first asserted by administration officials in 1985 but has not been used.

The list of experiments will be sent to the White House in the next few weeks, said Weinberger, although he said he had no figures on what the test program would cost.

Weinberger repeated his contention that the SDI program has advanced faster than anticipated when it was first announced by Reagan in 1983.

Study Shows Soviet Youth More Dissatisfied Than Western Youth

By THOMAS H. MAUGH II
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

CHICAGO — The young, the educated, and the affluent in the Soviet Union are much more likely to be dissatisfied with their lives than their counterparts in the West, American researchers reported Tuesday. They said there seems to be a direct correlation between the amount of exposure to Western influences and the degree of dissatisfaction.

The last such survey, done after World War II, had found that the older Soviet citizens were the least satisfied with their lot.

The new study, based on detailed interviews with Soviet emigres in the United States, was reported at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science here.

It is the first such study since the Harvard Refugee Project, which studied Soviets in displaced-persons camps after the second World War.

Lead by economist James R. Millar of the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign, the team interviewed 2,793 Soviet emigres between January 1979 and April 1982. The subjects were selected from more than 34,000 Soviet immigrants who arrived in the United States during that period.

Nearly 85 percent of those interviewed were Jewish, and religious discrimination was one of their main reasons for leaving. Yet their answers were the same as those of non-Jews on virtually all questions in the survey, Millar said.

"We are confident that their answers give us a good cross-section of the opinions of individuals of European heritage who live in large and medium-size cities in the Soviet Union," he said.

The Harvard Refugee Project had found that the older generation was least satisfied and that the youngest and best educated were the most satisfied.

But today, Millar said, the elderly are "more compliant and conformant" because they look back on the ravages of World War II "and find the present more pleasant."

On the other hand, the younger and the better educated "don't look back, they look abroad," said sociologist Michael S. Swafford of Vanderbilt University.

Most of the emigres were happy with their lives in the United States, the researchers said. They are especially pleased with their incomes and the fact that they can get their children into good schools. Their major dislikes were the lack of discipline, as manifested by their children's small amount of homework, for example, and the prevalence of crime.

The study was supported by the National Council for Soviet and East European Research.

LaRouche Followers Face Fraud Charges

LEESBURG, Va. (AP) — Sixteen followers of political extremist Lyndon H. LaRouche face securities fraud and other charges stemming from what a state prosecutor says is $30 million in allegedly fraudulent loans solicited from people around the country.

Also named in sealed indictments returned by a state grand jury Tuesday were five organizations affiliated with the frequent fringe candidate for president, authorities said Tuesday.

State and county authorities arrested 13 of the LaRouche followers Tuesday night, 10 in Leesburg, a town where LaRouche makes his headquarters 40 miles from Washington, D.C. Three were arrested in Baltimore, and three more were being sought.

LaRouche spokeswoman Dana Scanlon described those arrested as political fund-raisers and organizers, and charged that their arrest was part of a government effort "to shut down his (LaRouche's) political movement."

"The only victims here are victims of a fraud of justice," she said, standing outside the Loudoun County jail as sheriff's deputies, city and Virginia state police brought in those arrested.

All 16 people were charged with multiple counts of securities fraud, sale of unregistered securities and selling securities as an unregistered agent, all felonies, authorities said. Charges against the five corporations, which were not immediately named, were described as misdemeanors.

Commonwealth's Attorney William Burch said the securities charges carry a maximum two-to-10 years in prison each.

Burch said he did not know how much money was involved in the charges but that investigators had found $30 million had been raised by LaRouche fund-raisers "through similar transactions" over several years.

He said they involved soliciting a loan or sale of a promissory note in which the person selling the note was not registered with the state and made false or misleading representations.

Burch said that figure and the arrests were based on financial records and other evidence seized by state and federal agents in a raid at LaRouche headquarters last Oct. 6. He said the money was raised on behalf of LaRouche causes but that the indictments did not name LaRouche's presidential campaigns.

More than 400 state and federal agents seized two truckloads of documents as well as computer records and other evidence in that raid.

Child's Seizure Can Be More Upsetting Than Dangerous

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Perhaps one of the most frightening experiences parents can ever have is watching their child have a seizure. But as upsetting as this can be, seizures in children are common, according to Dr. Leonard J. Graziani, director of the division of child neurology and development at Thomas Jefferson University Hospital.

"Approximately 5 percent of all children will have a seizure during their lifetime. It's important to realize that seizures themselves do not cause damage to the child's brain," said Graziani, who is professor of pediatrics and neurology at Jefferson Medical College.

"A single, brief seizure is not harmful and, if a seizure occurs, it must be considered in the appropriate context. It doesn't mean the child will have recurrent seizures or will be mentally handicapped."

When a child has recurrent seizures, and tests disclose neither a progressive abnormality of the brain nor a metabolic disease, the disorder is known as epilepsy, or a seizure disorder.

According to Graziani, seizures can almost always be controlled with anti-convulsant medication in children who do not have an associated neurological handicap such as severe cerebral palsy.

A seizure is the result of intermittent disorganized electrical discharges in the brain associated with a sudden change in the child's behavior, sensory perceptions or consciousness. It is usually accompanied by involuntary movements, convulsive jerking of the body and — or — a sudden fall.

If this abnormal electrical activity affects only a portion of the brain, a partial seizure results, in which the child can become disoriented or may show signs of decreased responsiveness, involuntary movements or sudden change in behavior.

Both hemispheres of the brain are affected simultaneously during a generalized seizure, which can cause the child to fall to the ground and sometimes cause the whole body to convulse, Graziani notes.

On the other hand, generalized seizures may produce only brief periods of unconsciousness in which the child stares blankly for five to 30 seconds many times during the day.

"There is no single definition for the term 'seizure,' " said Graziani. "Clinically, it is an involuntary event characterized by various degrees of unresponsiveness, convulsive or automatic movements and — or — unusual sensations. Not all of these qualities are present in any one seizure, and no two have exactly the same seizure pattern. However, the seizure pattern tends to remain unchanged in each patient."

In many cases, he points out, the cause of a child's seizure disorder is never known; however, seizures can be precipitated by head trauma and, in some young children, by high fever.

In fact, he adds, simple febrile seizures, those associated with infection and a high fever, are the most common type of seizure seen in older infants and young children. This type of seizure runs in families and usually requires no medication.

"The most difficult aspect in the management of seizure disorders is overcoming the associated emotional and social stigma and the parents' fears," noted Graziani.

Most non-handicapped children with epilepsy can lead a normal life, have completely or very well controlled seizures, and will not require medication after they are seizure-free for three to five years, he explained.

Unfortunately, he added, the child with a handicapping neurological disorder may also have epilepsy with difficult-to-control seizures that may occur daily.

Anna Harrington Is State Sweetheart

Anna Harrington

Anna Harrington of Winterville was crowned Miss North Carolina Sweetheart of 1987 Saturday in a statewide pageant sponsored by Teen Pageants Inc.

Participants were judged on intelligence and personality. Each contestant modeled in a party dress, sportswear and evening gown. "Finalists were also asked to answer a spontaneous question," said Miss Harrington.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Harrington, she is a sophomore at D.H. Conley High School. Miss Harrington is a student government representative and member of FBLA, French Club, Close Up Club and the track team.

She has performed in the local production of "The Nutcracker" for four years. She has attended the N.C. School of the Arts in Winston-Salem for two summers.

Miss Harrington enjoys running, dancing, water skiing and sailing. She has skippership in sevral sailing and boating activities. She plans to be a sailing counselor at Camp Morehead this summer.

She is a student and performer with Dance Arts Theater and the Jazz Ensemble. She is also a model in training with Touch of Class Modeling School, where she was named 1986 model of the year.

Couple Make Plans For Airlift

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My fiance (I'll call him Arni) and I are getting married soon. We've been dating for three years — Arni's 23 and I'm 21. His family is in Rhode Island and mine are in North Carolina. I'm a Presbyterian and Arni is a Roman Catholic. We'd like to get married in a Catholic church in Rhode Island with my pastor officiating and his priest assisting. Is this possible? I prefer to get married in a Presbyterian church here in North Carolina, but the church is too small, and Arni's family is too large.

I would like to charter a plane to fly all our friends and relatives from North Carolina to Rhode Island and back. It's only an hour and 13 minutes each way. I think the expense of the chartered plane should be Arni's and mine. We'd need a plane that seats about 60. Arni thinks we should write the North Carolina people and ask them to chip in about $5 — or whatever they can afford — toward chartering the plane, and forget the wedding presents because their "presence" is all we really want. (It's true; I designed and built our home six months ago and we have everything we need — and then some!)

Is Arni's suggestion proper or not? What do you think of our idea of flying everyone to Rhode Island? — IN LOVE IN MATTHEWS, N.C.

DEAR IN LOVE: The idea of flying your wedding guests from North Carolina to Rhode Island sounds great, but since you have everything you need — and then some — don't ask your guests to finance the chartered flight in lieu of wedding gifts. Pay for it yourselves, or let them get there on their own power.

However, asking a Roman Catholic priest to "assist" in a marriage ceremony in his church is out of order. If you want to be married in a church, first consult the Rhode Island priest and the North Carolina minister.

DEAR ABBY: I am a faithful reader of your column in the Utica Observer-Dispatch, and I hope you won't think me petty, but I think you owe dentists an apology. In a recent column you made a reference to "all of the doctors and dentists."

Abby, don't you know that all dentists ARE doctors? They are doctors of dentistry — a profession equally as prestigious as physicians who are doctors of medicine.

My husband is a first-class dentist, and it rankles me when people say "doctors" and "dentists," as though dentists were not doctors.

Please print this, but withhold my name, or my husband would have a fit. — DENTIST'S WIFE, UTICA, N.Y.

DEAR WIFE: Thank you for setting me straight. One day I may be in Utica and require the services of a first-class dentist to extract my foot from my mouth.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in regard to the man who became violent when a neighbor determined he was too drunk to drive and took his car keys. I am a recovering alcoholic who has been sober for over a year. I speak from experience when I say that alcoholism is the only fatal disease known to man where one of the major symptoms is denial of its existence.

It's too late to determine "how drunk" a driver was after someone has been killed by a drunk driver. PLEASE don't drink and drive. — AN ANONYMOUS ALCOHOLIC

Proper Planning Helps Problems

Better Homes And Gardens
A Meredith Magazine

By taking appropriate steps to support your first child's adjustment to the second, you help set a positive tone in the sibling relationship from the very beginning. That means less jealousy now and less sibling rivalry later.

Whatever your child's reaction to the new baby, problems can be minimized with proper planning and management in key areas, says Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

A space of three to four years between children is ideal, agree most child-rearing experts. A child less than three years old is likely to have lots of difficulty seeing his or her parents' attention going to a younger sibling. A child four years or older may have become accustomed to being an "only," and may resent sharing the spotlight.

Three-year-olds are beginning to do a lot on their own and, therefore, require less parental attention.

Include your older child in such activities as shopping for baby furniture, cleaning and decorating the nursery, and talking about names for the baby. This helps your youngster to feel as if he or she is playing an important role in bringing the baby into the family. The greater your first child's "investment" along these lines, the more likely he or she will be to develop feelings of closeness and affection toward the baby — long before the big day.

Once the baby is born, continue to find ways of engaging your older child's help. You'll boost your youngster's self-esteem and minimize feelings of competition with the baby for your attention.

For the child who's too young to help without getting underfoot, buy a baby doll and accessories. When the older child begins clamoring for attention while your hands are full with the baby, say, "I'm feeding the baby. It's time for you to feed your baby, too."

The under-involved child is likely to regard the baby as a trespasser. Expressions of jealousy signal that the first child is feeling left out and needs more parental attention and more involvement with the baby.

Try to avoid surprises that might cause your child to feel angry or frustrated. Don't suddenly take the older child out of a crib or room because of the baby, for example. Your firstborn will have enough to deal with without feeling as if the baby has just moved in and taken over.

Let your firstborn feel the baby's movements. Show the child his or her pictures as a newborn. Talk about your youngster's responsibilities after the baby is born.

It might help to read your older child a book that explains, in child's terms, where babies come from, how they are born and what they are like at first. If your firstborn is having problems with jealousy, you might investigate some child-oriented books on this subject.

The fact that most babies are born away from home often makes it difficult for young children to relate to the event. Further, the rules and formalities of hospitals tend to increase the first child's feelings that he or she has no part in the process.

If the hospital has a sibling program, sign up your older child well in advance. If allowed, take your child for a first look at the new baby through the nursery window. If these aren't options, at least make sure the older child speaks to Mom by phone a couple of times a day, especially right before bedtime.

Encourage friends and relatives to bring a small surprise for the older child when they're coming with a gift for the baby. Ask them to make a bit of a fuss over your older child as well, congratulating the youngster on how cute his or her baby brother or sister is and how proud he or she must be.

Find Winter Warmth Under Afghan

Knit a cozy afghan as a treat for yourself or as a thoughtful gift. Made in one piece so there is no tiresome assembly or finishing, this "lapghan" works up in about 30 hours on size 35 needles, using four strands of yarn. It measures approximately 48 inches by 54 inches — just the right size for watching TV or napping in the car or by a warm fire.

Simple purl stitches on a knit background look like textured popcorn diamonds. With a stitch guage of only three stitches for every two inches, you'll finish this machine wash-and-dry afghan in a jiffy.

To obtain directions for making the Quick Diamond Stitch Afghan, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-021587 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

The afghan featured today provides a good opportunity for experimenting with pattern stitches using various weights and sizes of yarn.

A magnificent vest worked in the same stitch as the afghan was worn by King Charles I of England when he was executed in 1649. Fittingly, the stitch is known as King Charles Brocade.

Today the vest can be found in the London Museum. Because this vest was knit of extremely fine blue silk thread on needles smaller than any we would use today, the stitch has an entirely different look than it does when worked with heavier yarn and large needles as we did for the afghan. Either way, it is a fabulous stitch — and fun to work.

This bit of history and the pattern stitch are found in Barbara Walker's original "Treasury of Knitting Patterns" (Charles Scribner's Sons: New York). Another interesting footnote to history found in the same book concerns a simple but very effective pattern stitch often called the Wager Welt. It actually is just a combination of stockinette and garter stitches. The "wager" refers to the question of how many rows are purled out of eight pattern rows.

Most people would fail to guess that only one out of the eight rows is purled with the rest worked solely in knit stitches. This must date back many years as I can hardly imagine many people in today's hectic world being concerned enough about the matter to make bets on it.

To quote directly from Barbara's text: "The French called it Puzzle stitch and the Germans called it Dispute stitch; but the English, who seemed to believe that only a fool could be stumped by the problem, called it All Fools' Welt."

Wager Welt is worked on any number of stitches, with the first row knitted and the second row purled. When working Row 2, the wrong side of the work is facing you. Rows 3 through 8 are knitted. Repeat the eight rows for any desired length.

Another simple knit/purl combination appears in the Broken Rib pattern, which is worked on any odd number of stitches. For Row 1, which is the right side, knit the first stitch and then alternate one purl and one knit stitch across to the end of the row. Row 2 is purled. Repeat these two rows for desired length.

Most people think the Moss and Seed stitches are identical, but there is a definite difference. Both are worked on an even number of stitches. For the Seed stitch, work as follows: (knit 1, purl 1) repeating the steps within parentheses across the row for the first row. For Row 2, purl 1, knit 1 repeating as before.

To work the Moss stitch, work the first two rows in the same way as you did for the first row of Seed stitch; then work rows 3 and 4 as you did for the second row of Seed stitch. Repeat these four rows until desired length is reached.

When experimenting with any pattern stitch, use a variety of yarns and needle sizes. It's fun, and some surprising textures will develop from your sample swatches. If you'll file these samples with information on the yarn and needles used, you'll have the nucleus of a design readily available.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market swept ahead today, picking up where it left off in Tuesday's record-setting rise to new highs.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials climbed 17.58 to 2,255.06 in the first half hour of trading.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 2 to 1 in the early tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 761 up, 373 down and 388 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 41.13 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Analysts said the market's runaway rise was attracting numerous foreign buyers and other investors scrambling to get aboard. The bull market also has been fed by increasing evidence that the domestic economy is gathering strength.

The latest surge in stock prices has impressed many observers because it came in the face of Wall Street's spreading insider-trading scandal.

In addition, investors have kept bidding up stocks even though interest rates have no longer been declining of late. Rates showed some spotty increases again today in the credit markets.

Ford Motor, which posted record earnings for 1986 on Tuesday, gained 1⅛ to 80.

Among other actively traded blue chips, Eastman Kodak rose ½ to 80¼; International Business Machines ⅞ to 139¼, and General Electric ⅜ to 103⅝.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks added 1.00 to 163.48. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.09 at 320.34.

On Tuesday the Dow Jones industrial average soared 54.14 points to 2,237.49, surpassing the previous record point gain of 51.60 it set on Jan. 22.

Gainers outpaced losers by more than 2 to 1 on the NYSE, 1,130 issues up, 502 down and 359 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 187.82 million shares, against 184.38 million in the previous session.

GUC

The original contract for the review and analysis cost $61,000.

The commission now uses two main computer systems, an in-house computer to handle such tasks as general ledger, payroll, budgeting, payables and receivables and a time-shared service from Network Computing Corp. of Charlotte to provide utility billing and collection support.

Arthur Young's Chuck Morn, suggesting there are "quite a few opportunities for increased automation" within GUC, said the commission has three alternatives: purchase no new hardware and continue operations as it does now; purchase new hardware for financial and project management and continue with NCC handling billings or purchase new hardware for all systems.

A cost analysis, Morn said, shows that the first alternative — continuing present operations — would cost about $1.029 million over the next five years, while the second option — continuing to use NCC for billing and installing new hardware and software to update in-house financial operations would cost about $1.51 million over the next five years.

The third option — doing billing in-house, moving to integrated hand-held meter reading devices to capture and edit meter readings at the source, updating financial and project management operations — depending on software and hardware alternatives, would cost between $840,000 and $1.015 million over the next five years.

In view of the lower five-year cost to go to a new, totally in-house operation, the board agreed to move toward receiving bids for a new computer system.

Morn, who said installation of a new system could take from 12 to 18 months, said the detail design of the system could be completed and bids received in time for implementation money to be included in the commission's 1987-1988 budget.

Bedford Plat Revision Delayed

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Planning and Zoning Commission has continued a decision on a revised preliminary plat of the Bedford development until a compromise move which includes a traffic circle can be further explored.

The revised plat, which was rejected by the board in January, calls for an extension of Bremerton Drive to Evans Street. Commissioners cited increased traffic as the reason for the ruling.

The development is located off the eastern right-of-way of Evans Street Extension, north of Fork Swamp Canal and west of Bedford subdivision. The plat involves seven lots and 3,100 linear feet of street on a 59-acre tract.

The compromise, which was suggested by the developer and area residents when the revised plat was resubmitted at the commission's monthly meeting Tuesday night, would replace a "horseshoe" street pattern with a circle in an effort to reduce speed and discourage use by non-residents.

"The city feels (traffic) in the horseshoe curve could better be controlled while the neighbors think it would be better to come to a complete stop prior to getting on a rotary system," Bobby Roberson, director of Planning and Community Development, said.

"The commission has told the staff to take a look at the rotary system to see if it can be worked out with the developers and the engineering firm."

Meanwhile, commissioners rejected a preliminary plat of Westhaven, Section 8, located east of Westhaven and south of Whichport development, saying another street is needed to accomodate additional traffic in the area. The plat included 55 lots and 3,770 linear feet of streets on a 26.5-acre tract.

City officials asked that an extension of Landmark Street be included in the plat, despite objections from the developer and area homeowners who said they disapproved of the addition to the plat.

"The city feels that Crestline Boulevard is a collector street and is near capacity," Roberson said. "Providing another access would assist the traffic flow in the back section of Westhaven. Our basic belief is that Crestline Boulevard is near capacity and the continuing (development) of Westhaven 9, 10, and 11 would include an additional 150 houses which would throw Crestline over capacity.

"Providing a minor thoroughfare would assist the traffic flow and provide for adequate fire and police protection."

In other business, commissioners approved a request by Warren Street residents to rezone lots located off the eastern and western right-of-way of Warren Street from high density residential to high density single-family residential.

The board approved a preliminary plat of Rabbit Run subdivision. The development, located west of Tuckahoe subdivision, involves five lots and 375 linear feet of streets on a 4.64-acre tract.

A request by the adjoining property owners, Walter and Lallah Heath and William and Carolyn Tolson, to close a portion of Hill Top Avenue was approved. The 300 block of Hill Top Avenue has not been accepted by the city, is currently unimproved and is located at the intersection of East Fourth Street and proposed Hill Top Avenue.

The panel approved a request by Bill Clark to change the name of a street in Willoughby Park subdivision from Winnetka Avenue to Victoria Court.

Ric Miller, chairman of the commission, announced the resignations of Rufus Keel and Dennis Alexander from the panel.

Storage was extended for two years beginning March 15. The storage space rented costs $1,575 a month.

Trustees were told that office space at the hospital is becoming critically short. Hospital personnel offices and others have been moved to the county office building recently and more moving is needed as soon as space can be found, President Jack Richardson said. He estimated that approximately 7,000 square feet is needed.

Nominated for election during the March meeting were J. Reid Hooper as chairman; Robert E. Harrington as vice chairman; William Flowers as secretary; Bernice Turnage as treasurer, and W. Charles Joyner as assistant treasurer. Executive committee members, other than officers, nominated were B. Gene Paramore, Joe M. Parker and Norma Van Veld.

Fire Hits Rest Home

By The Associated Press

A fire destroyed a section of an Ahoskie rest home today and forced the evacuation of about 35 residents, but officials say the residents got out of the building safely.

The residents of Pinewood Manor were taken to the gymnasium at Ahoskie High School, according to Lucy Walker, a dispatcher for the Ahoskie Police Department.

An unidentified employee of the rest home slipped on the ice and suffered a cut on the back of her head, according to Roanoke-Chowan Hospital President Peter Geilich.

"There have been three or four residents of the rest home who've come to the emergency room, really for evaluation ...," Geilich said. "They were either excited or such that they wanted them checked out."

Ms. Walker said the cause of the fire was under investigation, and police officers said it appeared to have started near the rest home's furnace.

"It didn't burn completely to the ground," Ms. Walker said. "One wing might be usable, but the rest is unusable at this time."

The residents were evacuated in ambulances by area rescue squads, Ms. Walker said. She said officials were attempting to find new places to house the residents.

Iowa State Continues To Hold Sway Over Brown, His Kansas Team, 95-86

AMES, Iowa (AP) — Call it a hex, call it a jinx, call it just plain bad luck. Whatever it is, it continues to keep Kansas Coach Larry Brown from winning at Iowa State.

Brown has made four visits to Iowa State's Hilton Coliseum and each time, his Kansas Jayhawk basketball team has left a loser. Iowa State defeated the 15th-ranked Kansas 95-86 on Tuesday night — only three days after the Cyclones had lost to lowly Colorado.

"I don't think it's a tough place to play," Brown said when asked about his troubles in Ames. "They've played well against us. I don't think we've lost to bad teams. They would have beaten a lot of teams tonight."

In the only other Top 20 game, No. 19 Providence beat Seton Hall 91-87.

A crowd of 14,233 saw Jeff Grayer score 26 points and Tom Schafer pitch in 25 to help Iowa State snap a three-game losing streak and win for only the second time in the last eight games.

It was reminiscent of last season, when a fast-breaking, free-wheeling Iowa State team was 13-0 at home en route to a school-record 22 victories and a spot in the final 16 of the NCAA tournament.

"My guys really played super. That's the first time I've seen 'em play like they did last year," said Iowa State Coach Johnny Orr, whose team overcame a 30-point effort by Kansas' Danny Manning.

"They really had intensity; they really went after it. It was a great win on our part. If we could just get that going every game like that, we could beat anybody."

The trouble is, Iowa State always hasn't played that way and that's why the Cyclones are 12-12 now and only 4-7 in the Big Eight Conference.

But Orr said he knew long before the game that his team was ready on Tuesday.

"They hadn't won up here and we felt we could beat 'em," he said. "You've just got to be around our guys to know how that is. In practice, we really went at it and did a good job. Today in shooting practice everybody was calm and tonight in the locker room, they were ready to go.

"You knew they were going to go; you just didn't know if they were going to be good enough to do it. But you knew they were going to play well and play hard."

The Cyclones ran off eight straight points to take a 12-9 lead five minutes into the game and they never trailed after that.

Iowa State continually beat Kansas down the floor and rebounded well under its own basket, scoring 20 points after grabbing offensive rebounds or tipping in missed shots.

The Cyclones led 46-38 at halftime, and with Grayer and Schafer combining for 16 of their team's 18 points during one stretch, increased the lead to 84-65 with 6:11 left.

"I have a lot of respect for Iowa State and Coach Orr and I understand what they've been going through," Brown said. "At the same time, I would have liked to come in here and feel we played as hard as we could have. We never talk to the kids about winning and losing, only about playing hard and we didn't play hard enough tonight."

Kansas still leads the Big Eight, but just barely. The Jayhawks are 8-3 in the conference — half a game ahead of Oklahoma and Missouri, both of whom play tonight. The Jayhawks are 19-7 overall.

Kansasn made a run at the end, cutting Iowa State's lead to 86-75 on reserve Jeff Gueldner's 3-point basket with 3:13 left and getting it down to 91-84 on a 3-pointer by Mark Turgeon with 30 seconds to go.

But Schafer made two free throws at the :21 mark and Elmer Robinson got free for a breakaway dunk 11 seconds later to secure the victory.

Sam Hill added 20 points for Iowa State and Robinson scored 14. Chris Piper and Cedric Hunter had 12 each for Kansas.

No. 19 Providence 91, Seton Hall 87

In Providence, Billy Donovan scored 23 points and made five free throws in the final 25 seconds as the Friars beat stubborn Seton Hall in Big East basketball.

Senior Ernie Lewis added 20 points for the Friars, now 18-5 overall and 8-4 in the conference. Seton Hall dropped to 14-10 and 3-10.

A 12-foot jumper by Gerald Greene pulled the Pirates to within 80-75 and James Major, who was 7-for-9 in 3-point attempts, made a 3-point shot with 1:34 left to narrow the deficit to 82-81.

Lewis put the Friars back ahead by four points 10 seconds later with a 3-pointer, but Major made another 3-point shot to make it 85-84. Donovan then preserved the lead from the foul line.

Games Are Postponed

Bad weather forced the postponment of several area basketball games on Tuesday night. Most of them have been rescheduled for tonight.

Set for tonight are: C.B. Aycock at Farmville Central; Greene Central at Ayuden-Grifotn, Plymouth at Williamston and Northampton East at Roanoke.

The game between Wilson Hunt and Rose, in Greenville, has been moved to Thursday night. Trinity Christian's game at Raleigh Christian has been tentatively rescheduled for Saturday.

BAYBORO — North Pitt High School swept a pair of basketball games from Pamlico in Eastern Plains Conference action Tuesday night.

The Panthers took a 56-45 win in their game while the Pant-Hers came away with a 49-32 win.

In the boys' game, North Pitt held a slim 10-9 lead after the first eight minutes of play. In the second quarter, however, the Panthers pulled away, 17-6, and built up a 27-15 lead by intermission.

Pamlico rallied in the third quarter, 15-10, cutting the lead back to 37-30, but a 19-15 margin by the Panthers in the final quarter wrapped up the win.

Calvin Hunter led North Pitt with 16 points while Billy Hardison added 13 and Michael Wilkes had 10. Pamlico was led by Guion Sawyer with 14, Jamie Gibbs with 13 and Stuart Squires with 12.

North Pitt's girls edged ahead, 10-7, after the first period, then outhit the Lady Hurricanes, 17-5, in the second frame. That gave the Pant-Hers a 27-12 lead at the half.

North Pitt continued to pull away in the second half, as the Pant-Hers held a 37-19 lead. Pamlico outhit the Pant-Hers, 13-12, in the final quarter.

Baker Names Two New Coaches; Promotes One

Art Baker, head coach of the East Carolina University football Pirates, has announced the signing of two new assistants and the promotion of another, completing his staff for the 1987 season.

Steve Shankweiler has been named offensive line coach, replacing John Zernhelt, who accepted a similar position at Maryland. Don Thompson will coach the Pirate defensive line, replacing Wally Chambers, who is the new line coach at Temple.

Clyde Christensen, who coached the ECU running backs during the 1986 season, has been named as the team's new offensive coordinator.

Shankweiler and Thompson both come to East Carolina after serving on the staff at Western Kentucky.

Shankweiler, 34, was the Hilltoppers' offensive coordinator and offensive line coach for three seasons. The Fort Bragg native began his collegiate coaching career as an assistant to Baker at The Citadel in 1980.

Shankweiler began his coaching career in the high school ranks in Georgia. He was the head coach at Redan High School in Stone Mountain, Ga., from 1976-79. His teams there were 35-8 and won the Georgia AAA state championship in 1979. He received his undergraduate degree from Davidson in 1974 and his master's degree from Georgia State in 179.

Shankweiler is married to the former Patti Thompson and they have three children.

Thompson coached the Hilltoppers' linebackers for two seasons. He came to WKU from the University of Pittsburgh, where he was the defensive line coach for Foge Fazio from 1982-84. He coached three linemen at Pitt who went on to professional football.

Thompson's coaching career began a the University of Connecticut, where he was an assistant coach for the Huskies' program from 1975-81. A native of Bogalusa, La., he was an all-conference and all-East linebacker at Connecticut. He received his undergraduate and master's degree from UConn.

Thompson is married to the former Gilda Packard and they have two children.

Christensen was elevated to the offensive coordinator position after Don Murry resigned that post last month. He joined the Pirate coaching staff after coaching at Temple.

"This completes what we feel is an excellent staff," Baker said. "Steve was my number one choice for the offensive line position after that slot came open. Don Thompson comes highly recommended and his coached some outstanding talent, while Clyde has proved to be a fine you coach with innovative ideas.

"It was a tough year in terms of coaching changes throughout the country, and we feel very fortunate to have landed some hard-working coaches for our football team."

Mabry Gets CAA Honor

Delphine Mabry, who led East Carolina University's Lady Pirates to two victories last week, has been named as the Colonial Athletic Association's Player of the Week.

Mabry, a 5-5 senior point guard, scored a game-high 17 points and recorded seven steals in leading ECU to a 62-53 win over South Carolina State Thursday. Two nights later, she scored a game-high 19 points and dished out five assists as the Lady Pirates downed UNC-Wilmington 68-57 in Mabry's last home game.

With the victories, ECU improved its overall record to 15-10 and its Colonial record to 7-3.

Mabry, who holds school records for most steals in a season and career, is averaging 10.7 points, 3.2 assists and a league-leading 4.2 steals per game.

Mabry is the second Lady Pirate to be named Player of the Week this year. ECU forward Monique Pompili earned the award for the week of Jan. 6.

Some All-American Thoughts

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Football Writer

Some of the nation's top college football players were honored in New Haven, Conn., at the recent banquet of the Walter Camp Football Foundation. Here are some of the thoughts they expressed to a black-tie audience of more than 1,100 persons.

Alabama linebacker Cornelius Bennett: "I think Tampa Bay will make Vinny Testaverde the No. 1 (NFL) draft pick."

Oklahoma linebacker Brian Bosworth: "I want people to look past the negative (image) of the Boz and see the football player and the student (Bosworth is an Academic All-American)."

Mississippi punter Bill Smith: "The trend nowadays is for a punter to be big and strong (Smith is 6-foot-3, 222 and bench-presses 420 pounds) and kick the ball a little harder."

Michigan defensive back Garland Rivers on why the Big Ten representative always seems to lose to the Pac-10 in the Rose Bowl: "We're from the cold. We go out there, we go to Disneyland ... there are a lot of distractions. And (Coach) Bo (Schembechler) ran us so hard that by game time we didn't have any legs left. We worked too hard because we wanted the game so bad (Michigan lost to Arizona State 22-15)."

Temple tailback Paul "Boo Boo" Palmer: "It's a cute nickname given to a cute kid by the great-grandmother who raised him from the time he was three years old."

Nebraska nose guard Danny Noonan: "I like to get double-teamed and have my own little war down there."

Pitt offensive tackle Randy Dixon: "I learned a lot from watching (former teammate) Bill Fralic. I was very fortunate I had a role model like that to follow."

Georgia defensive back John Little: "My biggest thrill was beating Auburn last season. I played four years and never beat Auburn until last year. They kept a lot of (conference) championship rings off my fingers."

Auburn running back Brent Fullwood, asked if he ever doubted that he could replace 1985 Heisman Trophy winner Bo Jackson: "I'm not going to put myself down for anybody in the world."

Washington placekicker Jeff Jaeger, the NCAA record-holder with 80 career field goals, on kicking without a tee in the NFL: "I can adjust to it."

Oklahoma tight end Keith Jackson: "Boz, go the NFL. You're taking up all the media."

More Jackson, noting that Kellen Winslow of the San Diego Chargers was in attendance: "The highlight of this weekend was that I got to meet the second best tight end to ever play the game — Kellen Winslow."

On Oklahoma's lack of a passing attack: "Kellen Winslow and Mark Bavaro didn't catch that many passes in college."

Miami quarterback Vinny Testaverde, addressing some 100 high school players in the audience: "You have a great opportunity. Don't spoil that opportunity by putting foreign substances in your body like drugs and steroids."

Dallas Cowboys Coach Tom Landry, who received the Camp Foundation's Distinguished American Award, touched on the same topic.

"Peer pressure is probably the strongest force within America today," he said. "Two former Cowboys spent time in prison because peer pressure took them in the wrong direction. The value system we have today is on a drastic decline. Role models are what we need in America today.

"Everyone influences someone, but coaches and athletes can influence many more people than anyone in America today."

According to a CBS spokesman, defending national champion Penn State has turned down a chance to play Alabama on prime-time television the night of Sept. 12. It would have been the opener of CBS-TV's new four-year contract with the College Football Association.

"Penn State opens against Bowling Green on Sept. 5. They're going to have a young team and Joe (Paterno) apparently would like to have a week off after that rather than play a tough team like Alabama that early in the season," the spokesman said.

Penn State and Alabama will meet, as scheduled, in State College on Oct. 24.

CBS hasn't given up on a prime-time game Sept. 12, possibly UCLA at Nebraska.

The son of former hockey great Bobby Hull will attend Boise State on a football scholarship. Bart Hull, a 5-foot-11, 205-pound running back, accepted the scholarship from Skip Hall, Boise State's new coach, who spotted Hull at a development camp last summer when Hall was on the staff at Washington.

"I went down to the camp because I knew American universities don't scout Canadians unless they're about 300 pounds. I wanted to get into the American system if I could," said Hull, who rushed for 1,352 yards and 14 touchdowns in eight games last year for Vancouver College, a private high school in Vancouver, British Columbia.

He also played linebacker and was named the league's most valuable player.

Derek Isaman, an Ohio State linebacker, probably doesn't find Big Ten football all that tough. He once lost a decision to heavyweight boxing champion Mike Tyson in the national Golden Gloves. He finished seventh nationally and was the only fighter Tyson didn't knock out.

Auburn defeated the nation's two winningest bowl teams in the same year, Southern Cal and Alabama. Not that many schools have that opportunity in one year, much less win the game.

Auburn defeated Alabama 21-17 in the regular-season finale and Southern Cal 16-7 in the Florida Citrus Bowl. Alabama has the most bowl victories (22) while Southern Cal has the best winning percentage in bowls (21-9, .700).

Three Kentucky football players made perfect 4.0 grade point averages during the fall semester. They are senior fullback John Groves, junior defensive end Mike Robinson and offensive guard Joe Turner, who graduated in December with a degree in social work.

"This is the first semester that we have ever had three players with a perfect 4.0 in their academic work," Coach Jerry Claiborne said. "I am tremendously proud of them, and also of all our players who made a 'B' average or better during the fall semester (25 in all)."

Assistant athletic director for academics Bob Bradley called it "one of the finest semesters ever for UK football players."

Tewell Happy To Return To L.A.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A year ago, Doug Tewell was contemplating retirement from the PGA Tour. A brilliant performance in the Los Angeles Open changed his plans abruptly.

Tewell shot an 8-under-par 63 in the final round to finish at 270, 14 under par for the Riviera Country Club course, and win the 1986 L.A. Open by seven shots.

The $81,000 payoff started Tewell on the biggest money-earning year by far in a career that began in 1975. After placing no higher than 49th on the PGA money list during the 1980s, Tewell earned $310,285 to finish 18th last year.

"It was a great year and Riviera kicked it off," Tewell said. "I had thought I wanted to retire and I got into the automobile business. Oftentimes, you don't commit yourself to what you really want to do. (Winning) was my statement that I really do want to play golf."

Tewell, 37, is among those entered in this year's Los Angeles Open, which begins Thursday and runs through Sunday. A purse of $600,000 is being offered.

"It is indeed a privilege to be here," he said. "I'd like to do about 10 of these a year.

"Once I play the first round, last year will be over. I hope I can live up to my expectations at this golf course. It's been written that this course has been known to humble past champions."

Among others who will attempt to see that Tewell doesn't duplicate his feat of last year are 1985 champion Lanny Wadkins, who finished sixth in his attempt to repeat; Corey Pavin, a winner of two events already this year; Craig Stadler, Johnny Miller, PGA champion Bob Tway, Seve Ballersteros, Mac O'Grady, Calvin Peete, and Hal Sutton.

Ballesteros, the charismatic European champion from Spain, will be making his second appearance of an abbreviated American schedule. Last week's Andy Williams Open at San Diego was his first, and he finished 11 shots behind winner George Burns.

Ballesteros admitted he is using the Southern California events to begin preparing for the Masters, a tournament he nearly won last year. He appeared to have it wrapped up before hitting a 4-iron into the lake in front of the 15th hole at Augusta and three-putting the 17th green.

"This is the only time I could come," Ballesteros said. "I am playing here for two weeks, then will play Doral (in Florida next week), then return to Spain for two tournaments, then come back for the TPC and the Masters."

Jack Nicklaus, who won the Masters last year, has expressed the opinion that Ballesteros' limited time in this country didn't prepare him for those pressure shots on the last day of the Masters.

"Jack is not right about everything, but he is right about that," Ballesteros said.

Clinic Set For Officials

A United States Soccer Federation referee certification clinic will be held Saturday at 9 a.m. in Room 102 of Memorial Gymnasium on the East Carolina University campus.

The clinic will last approximately eight hours and will include a test on the rules of soccer.

Individuals who successfully complete the clinic will be certified as USSF referees. Such officials are then entitled to officiate in USSF sponsored youth and adult soccer leagues. The clinic is also open to those individuals who wish to update their USSF certificates.

The cost of the clinic is $25, which includes all fees necessary for referee certification for 1987. For more information, call 756-3879 after 6 p.m.

Bullets Break Lakers' Streak

By The Associated Press

Thirteen proved to be a lucky number for the Washington Bullets.

That's how many consecutive games the Bullets had lost at the Forum in Inglewood, Calif., since Jan. 25, 1976, until they beat the Los Angeles Lakers 114-99 Tuesday night.

"It was the right time to catch them," Washington Coach Kevin Loughery said, referring to the Lakers' victory on Sunday over the Boston Celtics in a battle of the teams with the two best records in the NBA. "They had an emotional game on Sunday and seemed a little flat tonight."

Elsewhere, Atlanta held off Detroit 107-103 and San Antonio defeated Denver 131-126 in overtime.

Moses Malone scored 20 of his 27 points and grabbed 14 of his 19 rebounds in the second half as Washington won for the seventh time in its last nine games, including 4-1 on the current road trip. They trail second-place Philadelphia by one game in the Atlantic Division.

The Bullets trailed 77-67 with five minutes left in the third quarter but tied the game 80-80 with a 13-3 burst. It was still tied early in the fourth quarter when a 13-0 run gave Washington a 101-88 lead.

The Lakers scored the next six points but 101-94 was as close as they could get. Los Angeles lost only their third game at home this season against 22 victories and were held under 100 points for only the third time all season.

"I get fired up to play against Kareem (Abdul-Jabbar) because he's the best," Malone said. "I just hope I can keep playing right along with him until I'm 39 or 40."

Abdul-Jabbar, who turns 40 in April, had 17 points and six rebounds.

Jeff Malone added 19 points for the Bullets and Jay Vincent came off the bench to score 16. James Worthy led the Lakers with 21 points while Earvin "Magic" Johnson and Byron Scott added 20 apiece, although Johnson shot only 7-for-18.

"We wanted to slow the pace down to try to keep Magic from penetrating as much as possible," Moses Malone said. "When he does that they're a tough team to beat. The turning point tonight was when our second unit came in and turned a big deficit into a lead (near the end of the third quarter). After that, the front-liners came in and kept it going. The rest that we got really helped us."

Lakers Coach Pat Riley agreed his team looked somewhat flat.

"Although our spirit was very high in practice yesterday and today, we just didn't apply any of that in the game," he said. "I'm sensing some of that 'coasting' that I saw last season about this time, and it's something we have to stop."

Hawks 107, Pistons 103

Dominique Wilkins says the Hawks can see the light at the top of the Central Division. Wilkins' 35 points helped them snap a two-game losing streak and move within one-half game of Detroit's Central Division leaders.

"In our darkest moment we didn't give up," Wilkins said. "We kept our confidence that we were going to win this game."

Detroit led 91-84 with 7:38 left but the Hawks tied it three times before Glenn Rivers put them ahead to stay 102-101 with 1:38 to go. Randy Wittman hit two free throws, Kevin Willis made one and Wilkins sank two to close out Atlanta's scoring.

Willis scored 19 points for the Hawks while Isiah Thomas led Detroit with 23.

The Hawks and Pistons, who have split four games so far this season, play again in Detroit on Saturday.

Spurs 131, Nuggets 126

Alvin Robertson, the NBA's leader in steals, converted one of his patented thefts into a tie-breaking layup with 49 seconds to play in overtime. Robertson got a hand on a Bill Hanzlik pass intended for Darrell Walker, then beat Hanzlik to the ball and drove from mid-court for a slam that put the Spurs ahead 126-124.

"Anticipation was the key to my steal," Robertson said. "I happened to be in the right place at the right time and I just wanted to finish the play off hard."

Reserve guard Johnny Dawkins, who scored five of his 21 points in the overtime, put the game away with three free throws and Larry Krystkowiak added a dunk. Robertson led the Spurs with 23 points and Walter Berry had 20. Denver was led by Alex English with 41 and Lafayette Lever with 28.

Wildcats, Lakers Roll In TBC Play

BEAR GRASS — Columbia High School and Mattamuskeet advanced to the second round of the Tobacco Belt Conference tournament in girls' play last night, ending the season for Jamesville and Bear Grass.

Columbia downed Jamesville, 35-33, in its game while Mattamuskeet topped Bear Grass, 28-26.

In the opening game, Jamesville inched out into a 7-6 lead after one period and expanded that to 16-13 by halftime. The Lady Bullets continued to be in charge in the third period, running their lead to 23-17 as the final quarter got underway.

But from as much as a nine-point lead in the third quarter, Jamesville saw its lead slip away as Columbia rallied. Columbia finally pushed ahead, gaining a 33-29 lead with 30 seconds to go. But Val Clark stole the ball for Jamesville and scored and following another steal, Sherri Lilley hit two free throws to tie the score at 33-33 with 12 seconds to go.

Columbia came down and missed a shot at the basket but Juanita Midgett managed to pull the ball away from a Jamesville rebounder, tossing it back in with two seconds left to give Columbia the victory.

Lavora Spencer led Columbia with 17 points while no one scored in double figures for Jamesville.

Bear Grass trailed the entire game, then missed on three opportunities in the final 20 second to tie it up at the foul line. The Lady Lakers held a 8-3 lea after one period, but that fell to 18-14 at the half.

The Lakers again pulled away in the third, holding a 24-17 edge, then held off one last Bear rally. Bear Grass, trailing by two, missed five straight opportunities at the line with a chance to tie the game.

Janet Rodgerson led Bear Grass with 18 points and was the only player in double figures in the game.

Owners Are Fighting Themselves

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer
AP Sports Analysis

One day Pogo looked around the Okefenokee Swamp, thought for a moment about conditions in the mud, and sagely observed: "We have met the enemy and they is us."

Give that little fellow a major league baseball franchise.

Fourteen years ago, while fighting a holding action against free agency — a battle they eventually would lose — baseball's bosses agreed to salary arbitration for the hired hands.

Bingo, there went the war.

Perhaps because they are slow learners, it took a while for the owners to figure out that free agency was less of a headache for them than arbitration.

For a free agent to reap a king's ransom contract, some club has to offer it. So if Mr. Owner keeps his checkbook zipped tight, free agency need not break his bank. For evidence of that, consider the current unemployed status of Tim Raines, Lance Parrish et al.

Even the most penurious owner, however, can't do a thing about an arbitration award. Lose in that forum and it's back up the Brinks truck, boys.

Last Friday, Detroit pitcher Jack Morris (winningest pitcher of this decade with 123 victories) set an arbitration record with a tidy $1.85 million award. The mark lasted only until first baseman Don Mattingly of the New York Yankees (.352 batting average, 31 home runs, 113 runs batted in) presented his case and was rewarded with $1.975 million. Both results were predictable.

That left management with 13 victories and seven defeats in the current arbitration box score. However, that log includes some pyrrhic victories. They include, for example, a $210,000 award to Daryl Motley, who batted .203 in 77 games last year and spent part of the season in the minors.

All of this was greeted with great interest by Calvin Griffith, former proprietor of the Minnesota Twins, and the first member of his fraternity to get burned by the arbitration fire in 1974. Three Twins — pitcher Dick Woodson, outfielder Larry Hisle and infielder Steve Braun — filed that year and all won, costing Calvin a cumulative $18,000.

'I was disappointed because those players didn't bring people into the park," Griffith said. "I told those fellows if they were going to get it, they were going to get it only through arbitration, not from me. I didn't think they had earned it."

The first case was Woodson, who successfully argued that his 10-8 record was worth $28,500, not the $22,500 Griffith wanted to pay. "A mediocre pitcher," Griffith said. "We had five or six like him."

Next was Hisle, who hit .272 and was awarded $29,000 instead of the $23,000 Griffith wanted to pay. "A good hitter," the ex-owner decided somewhat grudgingly and long after the fact.

Then there was Braun, who had batted .283 the previous season and was offered $25,000. "He couldn't run or field," Griffith said. "We should have paid him one-third of a major league salary." The final price was $31,000, which happens to be one-half of today's minimum major league salary.

"What made me mad is that the arbitators who decided the cases didn't know anything about baseball," Griffith said. "They didn't know what an RBI was or what an ERA was. That irritated me. The arbitrators were used to labor cases. They were 5-and-10-cent, $1-an-hour guys and suddenly they were deciding $30,000, $40,000, $50,000, $100,000 cases."

They also had their hands on Calvin's wallet, a most uncomfortable situation for the owner.

Griffith, however, was not the biggest management loser that winter. Five Oakland A's beat Charley Finley in arbitration with the largest award going to Reggie Jackson, who came away with $135,000.

That's $75,000 less than Daryl Motley will get this year. And remember, Motley lost.

UNC Switches Coaches

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — Marc Dove will replace Denny Marcin as defensive coordinator of the University of North Carolina football team next season as part of a major reorganization of the Tar Heel coaching staff.

Marcin, who has been the Tar Heels' defensive coordinator since coming to UNC with head coach Dick Crum in 1978, will move into the newly established position of assistant head coach and will also coach the tight ends on offense.

Two other coaches will also change responsilities next season. Bobby Elliott will move from coaching the offensive receivers to taking over for Dove in the secondary. Bobby Cale, who was a full-time recruiter last year, will take over Elliott's duties as receivers' coach.

After holding its opponents to 24 points in the first three games, UNC allowed the opposition to score 30 or more points in seven of the last eight games. The Tar Heels also finished last in the ACC in pass defense for the third straight season.

Crum said the defensive struggles "really doesn't have that much to do" with the re-organization the coaching staff. He said one of his major concerns was to take some of the load off Jack Himebauch, UNC's recruiting coordinator.

Hagler's Title May Be Stripped

NEW YORK (AP) — Marvelous Marvin Hagler is in danger of losing the World Boxing Association portion of his undisputed world middleweight title after a WBA committee voted unanimously to recommend that he be stripped of the title.

Counsel James Binn said Tuesday that the vote, taken last week, was based on Hagler's failure to fufill the WBA requirement that he defend his title within six months. Hagler's last title defense took place last March when he defeated John Mugabi.

Hagler's co-manager Pat Petronelli said the champion "is not losing any sleep over it."

Hagler is scheduled to fight former welterweight champion Sugar Ray Leonard April 6 in Las Vegas, Nev.

Morris Goldings, Hagler's attorney, said in Boston that the committee's vote will be appealed.

"We have the greatest respect for Hagler but he has not defended his title in the required time and he has not sought an extension," Binns said.

The appeal will be taken up by the WBA's 21-man executive board, Binns said, and it will either uphold or reject the championship committee's recommendation.

"It will really be up to President Gilberto Mendoza," Binns said.

Goldings obtained a court order last week in Boston to temporarily bar the WBA from withdrawing its title from Hagler.

Goldings said until his appeal is acted on, the vote of the championship committee was "really of no effect."

"Judge James R. Lawton issued a temporary restraining order Feb. 10 that blocks any action," Goldings said.

Lawton's order, issued in Plymouth County Probate and Family Court, enjoined the WBA from "taking away, stripping, withdrawing, vacating or in any way interfering with or modifying the World Boxing Association middleweight world championship title presently held by Marvelous Marvin Hagler until further order of the court."

Goldings said the order remained in effect even though the WBA had the case moved to U.S. District Court in Boston.

"The WBA can make such a move because it is from outside Massachusetts," he said. "But there can be no change in the ruling by Judge Lawton until somebody requests further action. And that hasn't happened yet."

Steinbrenner Argues Mattingly Award

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankees first baseman Don Mattingly and his agent bowed to union pressure to go through with an arbitration hearing, says club owner George Steinbrenner, indicating he may file a grievance of his player's $1,975,000 salary award.

The union called the charge "patent claptrap."

The award was the largest in the 13 years of salary arbitration, breaking the record of $1.85 million awarded to Detroit Tigers pitcher Jack Morris last Friday. The Yankees had offered Mattingly $1.7 million.

Steinbrenner said he and Mattingly were "very close" to an agreement that could have avoided a hearing, "but both the player and his agent came back and said they were getting pressure from the union" to take the matter to arbitration.

"I'm not sure that's totally ungrievable. It may be grievable," Steinbrenner said in a telephone interview from his Tampa, Fla., office.

Don Fehr, executive director of the Major League Players Association, denied any coercion but said it was part of the union's job to give advice.

"This is a bully acting like somebody in the corner," Fehr said of Steinbrenner. "Here's a man realizing now that he can't explain to the people of New York how he let all these star players, who could have filled holes in his lineup, get away.

"George can file a grievance if he wants. It's just public relations."

The case was heard Monday by arbitrator Arvid Anderson. Under rules of the collective bargaining agreement between players and owners, the arbitrator must pick one figure or the other.

Mattingly's agent, Jim Krivacs, reportedly rejected an offer from Steinbrenner that would have paid the player $3.5 million over two years. Krivacs said the decision was made to go through arbitration because Mattingly wanted to avoid carrying negotiations into spring training. Yankee regulars are due to report to the Fort Lauderdale, Fla., camp next Tuesday.

"I'm very happy and very pleased with the decision," Mattingly said through Krivacs. "I'm happy that it's over."

Mattingly won a Gold Glove at first base last year and batted .352 with 113 RBI and 31 homers. He set club records with 238 hits and 53 doubles. In 1985, Mattingly hit .324 with 35 homers and an American League-leading 145 RBI. He won the AL batting title in 1984, hitting .343.

"I have no bitter feelings," Steinbrenner said. "But I fully expect Don Mattingly to lead us to a championship at these figures, like Gary Carter did with the Mets."

Krivacs added: "There were no darts thrown from their side to us, or from our side to them during the negotiations. The negotiations were very upbeat and very positive. There were no hard feelings."

Despite the award, Mattingly still trails Jim Rice of the Boston Red Sox, Eddie Murray of the Baltimore Orioles and ike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies, all believed to make more than $2 million a year.

Decisions also were reached Tuesday on three other arbitration cases heard the day before. All three players — outfielder Kevin McReynolds of the New York Mets and pitchers Danny Cox of St. Louis and Jay Howell of Oakland — were losers.

McReynolds, traded during the offseason from San Diego, had asked $825,000, while the Mets offered $625,000. Cox asked for $875,000, while St. Louis came in at $600,000. Howell sought $630,000 but will receive the club's offer of $530,000.

Of the 20 cases resolved thus far, management has won 13.

Steinbrenner said Krivacs told him Mattingly settled on the $1,975,000 request because the Yankees owner had said he would "never have another $2 million ballplayer."

"From that standpoint, it was some concession," Steinbrenner said, "but the millstone is now on his back to produce. It's really on his back because the market is going the other way."

Fehr said he thought Mattingly "did George a favor. He could have gone in a couple hundred thousand higher."

Krivacs spoke to Mattingly Tuesday morning from an airport. Mattingly was en route home to Evansville, Ind., where he planned to work out until flying to spring training.

"This is still a team sport," Steinbrenner said, "and he has to do his part for us to win. I have great confidence in him. The only thing that came to me — and, mind you, there was no bitterness — is that I used to think of Don Mattingly as the little kid from Evansville. That's the way he portrayed himself. The union had a fine hand in driving this kid, and he's now no longer the little Hoosier from the Indiana river. He's out for the almighty buck."

Krivacs denied that money was Mattingly's primary concern.

"He feels just tremendous. This is the business part of it. We wanted to get by it. He's hoping to get a real hot start this year," Krivacs said. Krivacs said Mattingly wanted to keep the negotiations from "becoming a distraction."

Through Krivacs, Mattingly said he felt it was "in the best interests of the club to get on with it," and while he was happy with the outcome of the hearing, his "big concern is just getting down there" to spring training.

McReynolds, who hit .288 with 26 homers and 96 RBI last year with San Diego, said he was satisfied with his 1987 salary. "We tried our case and lost," McReynolds said. "The Mets didn't do anything that put me in a bad light."

At the same time, the Mets said they had come to terms on one-year contracts with two other players who had filed for arbitration — second baseman Tim Teufel and pitcher Doug Sisk. Teufel had asked for $315,000, and the Mets offered $240,000. Sisk asked for $368,000, the Mets offered $300,000.

The Mets have one other player, pitcher Ron Darling, still headed for arbitration. His hearing was scheduled today.

Meyer Is Top Vote-Getter

NEW YORK (AP) — DePaul's Joey Meyer, successor to a winning tradition begun by his father, was the top vote-getter in nominations for The Associated Press Coach of the Year in college basketball.

In the balloting announced today, Meyer collected 316 points to 308 for Tom Davis of Iowa and 296 for John Chaney of Temple.

Poll members were asked to vote for five nominees, and the top 10 vote-getters will be placed on a ballot that will decide the coach of the year. Nominees received 10 points for a first-place vote, 8 for second, 6 for third, 4 for fourth and 2 for fifth.

The 37-year-old Meyer, whose baby face belies his age as well as his 17 years of coaching experience, was named on 46 ballots cast by members of the AP's college poll board. He collected 12 first-place votes and 308 points.

Davis also got 12 first-place nods from among the 44 votes on which he was listed. Chaney was named on 43 ballots, with 11 firsts.

Last year's winner was Eddie Sutton, who guided Kentucky to a 32-4 record in his first year as coach.

Meyer, in his third year and coming off an 18-13 season, has the Blue Demons ranked fourth nationally with a 23-1 record. It is DePaul's best record at this juncture since 1982, when Meyer's father, Ray, coached DePaul to 26 victories in first 27 games.

Davis, in his first year at Iowa after stints at Boston College and Stanford, has paced the seventh-ranked Hawkeyes to a 22-3 record. Chaney, whose teams have won at least 25 games in each of the last four seasons, has the Owls at 25-2 and No. 5.

The other seven nominees were Jerry Tarkanian of top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas, 268 points; Paul Evans of No. 8 Pittsburgh, 167 points; Bob Knight of No. 2 Indiana, 96 points; Gene Keady of No. 6 Purdue, 92 points; Cliff Ellis of No. 10 Clemson, 75 points; Rick Pitino of No. 19 Providence; and Dean Smith of No. 3 North Carolina, 74.

Navy's David Robinson, who leads the nation in blocked shots and is among the leaders in scoring and rebounding, was the leading vote-getter in Player of the Year nominations announced Tuesday. Robinson received 558 points and 40 first-place votes from members of the AP's college poll board.

Steve Alford of Indiana was second with 370 points and 10 first-place votes.

The other eight nominees are Danny Manning of Kansas, 220 points; Dennis Hopson, Ohio State, 214; Reggie Williams, Georgetown, 180; Kenny Smith, North Carolina, 156; Armon Gilliam, Nevada-Las Vegas, 62; Mark Jackson, St. John's, 32; Ken Norman, Illinois, 28; and Horace Grant, Clemson, 22.

Last year's winner was center Walter Berry of St. John's, now playing in the NBA with San Antonio.

Gooden Ready For Return To Old Form

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — New York Mets pitcher Dwight Gooden wants to recapture the form that helped him win the National League Cy Young Award two years ago. He offers a simple strategy for getting the job done.

"Just stay consistent, go out and work hard and give it my best," the 22-year-old right-hander said Tuesday after signing a one-year, $1.5 million contract with the World Series champions.

Gooden, who won the 1985 National League Cy Young Award with a 24-4 record and 1.53 earned run average, went 17-6 with a 2.84 ERA last season when he earned $1.32 million.

"I'm not going to go out and try to do too much," Gooden said at the office of his agent, Jim Neader, where the signing took place. "I'm just going to go out and pitch the way I can pitch and take it a game at a time."

Last month, Gooden filed for salary arbitration and asked for $1.8 million. The Mets offered him the same salary as last season.

The two sides, scheduled for an arbitration hearing Friday, reached agreement during the weekend.

"There's a lot of hard cash out there on the table and in this situation it was something we couldn't pass up," Neader said at a news conference.

"We thought it was a very fair deal," he added. "I think it would have been very tragic to lose (arbitration) and play another season at the same salary."

Gooden and the Mets had wanted to avoid arbitration in the wake of the pitcher's off-the-field troubles.

"It's a good thing for both parties that we didn't go to arbitration," Gooden said. "I'm glad with the way things turned out."

There was little discussion about the off-season incidents, including a fight with Tampa police, that kept Gooden's name in headlines this winter.

Jay Horwitz, a Mets spokesman, attempted to establish ground rules for the news conference, telling reporters that questions should focus on baseball only.

"Everybody is well aware of some of the off-the-field events that involved some of our players this year," Horwitz said. "The club and the players involved have already addressed those issues and we feel they really have no relevanace to the 1987 season."

Gooden was arrested in December after an altercation with Tampa police, who stopped his car for an alleged traffic violation. He pleaded no contest to felony charges of resisting arrest with violence and battery on a law enforcement officer and was sentenced to three years' probation and community service.

Gooden, who will report to training camp on Friday, said he hasn't set specific goals for the season, other than to improve on last year. The best way to do that, he said, is by returning to the simpler pitching style that made him one of baseball's most dominating pitchers his first two seasons in the majors. "I think last year I got caught up trying to fool the hitters instead of going with the pitches I was getting by with in '84 and '85," Gooden said.

Asked how he intends to handle reporters who ask about his off-season problems, Gooden said: "Once the season starts, I'm just going to talk about baseball. As far as anything off the field, I have no comment."

Refuge Manager Says It's 'Sewer'

RENO, Nev. (AP) — The mysterious death of an estimated 3 million fish and hundreds of birds at a wildlife refuge doesn't surprise its manager, who says man has turned a freshwater marsh there into a sewer.

"The only thing the place has ever gotten is man's leftovers since man started messing with it," Ron Anglin, manager of the Stillwater Wildlife Refuge, said Tuesday.

Avian cholera killed some of the 1,500 water birds that have died since shortly before Christmas, but what killed the fish and the other birds remains a mystery, Anglin said. "We know it's a toxin or poison of some type, probably a natural toxin out there."

Tests are being done to determine any link between the deaths of the fish and the fish-eating birds, he said.

The growth of farming along the Carson River and Carson City's growing population upstream have spoiled what was a high-quality marsh at the refuge, Anglin said. "We used to be the end of the Carson River. Now, we're the end of everybody on the Carson River, what gets dumped back in. What's been used and re-used and re-used and re-used and re-used and now we have, really, a sewer."

A 1985 government sample revealed a level of selenium in one part of the refuge that was nearly as high as some readings at California's Kesterson National Wildlife Refuge, near Los Banos, which was hard hit by bird deaths and deformities.

However, the limited number of samples from Stillwater did not determine whether the contamination from the sulfur-like mineral contained in agricultural runoff was widespread or localized.

Anglin said it was too early to pinpoint selenium as the culprit because the water also had high levels of toxins such as arsenic, boron and mercury, which are contained naturally in the soil or are byproducts of mining.

The die-off started with the deaths of about 500,000 tui chub, a scavenger fish that grows up to 10 inches long. Earlier this month, an estimated 3 million dead chub lined the 30-mile shoreline of the Carson Sink 60 miles east of Reno.

At the same time, pelicans, ducks, coots, ravens, gulls, egrets and herons began dying.

Since all the deaths occurred in the Carson Sink, a normally dry basin now under water because of wet years in 1983 and 1984, the deaths were at first attributed to a concentration of salts in the basin.

But when the die-off grew this month, U.S. Geological Survey scientists were called in to take water samples, and dead fish and birds were sent to other laboratories for analysis. Results are expected later this week.

Anglin said fish and birds were still dying Tuesday, but wildlife experts had not come up with a revised tally. The refuge is operated by the state and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Appliance Bill May Avoid Veto

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate and the White House are agreeing on legislation to require energy efficiency in new appliances, with a display of unity that could turn the bill into law without a veto override fight.

The unity was produced through a minor amendment proposed by the Reagan administration and accepted by the Senate on Tuesday minutes before the legislation was sent to the House by an 89-6 roll call.

The amendment addressed none of President Reagan's previous objections to the bill, but an administration official said the measure would be acceptable now.

The bill, similar to one pocket-vetoed by Reagan last November, would apply federal efficiency standards to such items as air conditioners, furnaces, heat pumps, stoves, refrigerators, washers and dryers.

The legislation is being pushed by an unusual coalition: environmental and consumer groups wanting to conserve energy and cut utility bills and appliance manufacturers who once opposed federal standards but now find an increasing number of states setting their own differing standards.

Reagan vetoed the 1986 bill because it "intrudes unduly on the free market, limits the freedom of choice available to consumers who would be denied the opportunity to purchase lower-cost appliances and constitutes a substantial intrusion into traditiona state responsibilities and prerogatives."

The Senate amendment, addressing none of these concerns, simply dropped language that would have required the Energy Department to review and if necessary revise the standards every five years.

Ed Dale, a spokesman for the Office of Management and Budget, said that "with the amendment, the bill is acceptable" to Reagan's senior advisers. Dale said the aides would recommend the president sign it this time around.

Asked why the bill had become acceptable even though it still was at odds with Reagan's stated reasons for vetoeing it, Dale said: "I'm not going to argue that with you."

Congressional backers of the appliance legislation had been gearing up for the second veto override fight of the 100th Congress. Many of the same lawmakers earlier this month led the effort that saw Congress overwhelmingly override Reagan's veto of legislation to combat water pollution.

One of the bill's principal House sponsors, Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., said he could accept the amendment and was pleased with the large Senate vote.

Markey said, however, that "it is not yet clear to me that there has been a direct commitment from the White House that they will not veto it."

The Senate floor manager, Energy Committee Chairman Bennett Johnston, D-La., said the administration's amendment to the appliance bill was "a sensible compromise. ... The administration is to be praised for recognizing the obvious ... that they were going to lose."

ABA Backs Change In Injury Awards

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The American Bar Association has endorsed major reforms that would hold down personal-injury awards, but a consumer activist says the move is a "knee-jerk reaction" to insurance industry propaganda.

The ABA's policy-making House of Delegates on Tuesday voted for proposals to make it more difficult to collect punitive damages — those assessed against defendants to punish conduct worse than mere negligence.

The delegates also adopted a policy that would reduce accident victims' chances of collecting the full amount of money awarded them.

At the same time, the leaders of the 330,000-member AMA came out against state laws that impose ceilings on the amount of money people can be awarded for pain and suffering.

Joanne Doroshow, a consumer lobbyist, called the ABA actions "ill-advised and ill-considered."

"As have state legislatures, the ABA has produced a knee-jerk reaction to insurance industry misinformation about a 'crisis' of skyrocketing premiums and reduced coverage," she said.

Rising premiums have made it difficult or impossible for municipalities and organizations to get liability insurance. The insurance industry has blamed the increases on big personal-injury awards and called for relief through legal reform.

Ms. Doroshow said the insurance crisis "had nothing to do with the lawsuits and everything to do with the insurance industry itself."

ABA policy becomes the subject of lobbying efforts in state legislatures and in Congress by the group's members.

The ABA leaders voted to modify the longstanding legal doctrine of joint and several liability, which allows victims of accidents caused by the negligence of more than one defendant to collect fully from any one of the defendants.

If a state were to adopt the ABA policy, the full amount of "non-economic" injuries such as pain and suffering could not be collected against a defendant "whose responsibility is substantially disproportionate to liability for the entire loss suffered."

For example, if a penniless defendant were 80 percent responsible for the accident and another defendant with "deep pockets" were 20 percent responsible, the victim would not be able to collect the full pain-and-suffering award from the wealthier defendant.

In a separate move, the ABA supported a proposal to let accident victims win personal injury lawsuits by non-unanimous jury verdicts such as 5-1 or 10-2 votes.

James K. Coyne of the American Tort Reform Association, a trade group that includes insurance industry members, said he was heartened by the ABA action on joint and several liability but displeased by the opposition to ceilings on pain-and-suffering awards.

"It pleases us that the ABA now officially has gone on record and said we need tort reform," Coyne said. "We differ on the amount of reform needed."

The ABA had come under heavy insurance industry pressure to support such caps, or at least defer consideration of the entire package of changes until the ABA's next national convention, in August.

But William Falsgraf, a Cleveland lawyer and former ABA president, argued against any delay. "You're not a bunch of first-year lawyers. You've considered tort problems for years and years," he said.

Robert McKay, the New York University law school dean who headed the ABA commission offering the proposals, said it would be a "public relations disaster" to delay a stand.

Public Colleges In Farm, Energy States Likely To See More Cuts

By LEE MITGANG
AP Education Writer

Public college officials in depressed farmbelt and energy states see little relief from money woes that have forced cuts in courses and teaching jobs. But elsewhere, especially in New England, public higher education is prospering.

The current financial plight of state colleges and universities resembles a giant "Y" when plotted on a U.S. map: it starts in the energy-producing states of Montana and Wyoming, swerves up through Iowa and Wisconsin to the east, extends southward through the depressed Farm Belt states of Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma, and ends in Texas, where state colleges are suffering some of the most stunning reversals of all.

Outside that unlucky "Y" are scattered other problems. Last month, California Gov. George Deukmejian, faced with smaller than expected state tax receipts, ordered the University of California and the California State University systems to trim their current budgets by more than 1 percent.

At the Berkeley campus, for example, that 1 percent translates to about $2.4 million, said Tom Debley, a university spokesman, and means "we will further defer some deferred maintenance projects."

But outside a dozen or so energy and farm states in the nation's heartland, the fortunes of public colleges and universities generally have risen along with improved state economies.

Nowhere is that truer than New England, where legislatures in Maine and New Hampshire have boosted higher education spending by upwards of 30 percent in the last two years.

State campuses in Michigan, Indiana and Ohio, among the hardest hit in the last recession, are now among those making the strongest financial recoveries.

Another factor likely to weigh on state college fortunes is the federal income tax bill that took effect in January. Public and private college officials alike have complained that its provisions make college donations less attractive, especially large gifts of art, books or real estate that appreciate in value. That could be particularly hard on college museums and libraries.

But the tax code changes could also help some state campuses, at least in the short run. In Idaho, for example, newly elected Gov. Cecil Andrus wants to use the state tax windfall resulting from the federal reforms to boost higher education spending after years of tight budgets.

But for state campuses in most Farm Belt and oil-producing states, higher education analysts see continued tough times.

"Unfortunately, I don't think the situation will change much," said Edward R. Hines of the Illinois State University's college of education, who compiles monthly and annual national data on public higher education finances.

His surveys show that for the 1987 school year, the 50 states spent $32.4 billion on higher education, up from $30.7 billion a year earlier.

But five states are spending less on public colleges than two years ago, according to Hines's survey: Texas, Louisiana, Alaska, Montana and Mississippi.

Texas A&M University in College Station is a prime case of the reversal of fortunes in recent years. Less than five years ago, the school was aggressively luring top faculty from financially beleaguered campuses in other states with hefty salaries and other perks.

Ronnie To Get Tests For Liver Transplant

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Maria DeSillers succeeded in getting her gravely ill 7-year-old son to Children's Hospital for tests, but officials warn the boy may not be eligible for a liver transplant.

"We will not listen to any negative thoughts," Ms. DeSillers said after arriving here Tuesday. "My next goal is to find a liver."

Ronnie DeSillers, whose fight for life made headlines after a portion of his medical funds were stolen, flew with his mother Tuesday from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., for tests to determine if a transplant will help him.

Aboard the donated corporate jet for the two-hour flight, Ronnie's mood shifted from excitement about his first plane ride and the possibility of seeing his first snow to concern about finding a donor liver, his mother said.

"He said, 'I'm worried that they won't be able to find a liver for me.' But the doctors told him they would and not to worry about it,'" Ms. DeSillers said.

Ronnie will undergo about five days of tests, said hospital spokeswoman Lynn McMahon.

"There are some liver conditions that cannot be corrected or reversed through liver transplants," she said. "The surgeons want to make sure that his condition can be corrected through this surgery."

The boy was born with liver ducts too small to expel fluids. The condition has led to cirrhosis, and the liver is failing. Florida doctors estimate he has about six months to live without a transplant.

Ronnie was relatively unknown outside Florida until last week, when $4,000 raised by classmates to help pay his expenses was stolen. The money was part of $89,000 raised for the boy.

After news reports publicized Ronnie's need for $300,000 to $500,000, there was an outpouring of donations and pledges totaling an estimated $400,000.

"I always knew I would get here. It was just a matter of time," said Ms. DeSillers, a 31-year-old single mother who lost her health insurance 4½ years ago when she lost her job.

Before the theft was discovered, President Reagan telephoned Ronnie to wish hime well and pledged $1,000.

The search for a suitable liver for the 38-pound youth will be difficult, Miss McMahon said, adding that the most important criteria in matching a liver is not age or blood type, but body weight.

"It is ... more difficult to procure a donor organ for a child because what we need are small organs and that just means there's a smaller pool to draw from," Miss McMahon said.

About 90 children usually are on a waiting list to receive a liver transplant at the hospital, she said. Deciding which child will receive a donor organ, should a suitable one be found, is based "strictly on the basis of urgency."

FAA To Seek Drug, Alcohol Users

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is sending a warning to both commercial and private pilots who may have a drunken-driving record or a past drug conviction: Beware, we're looking for you.

The department announced Tuesday it plans an elaborate campaign to match the names in Federal Aviation Administration computers with those in law enforcement files to find pilots who have been convicted of drug offenses or had a suspended drivers license because of drunken driving.

The new campaign, spearheaded by the department's Inspector General's Office "is designed to identify and prosecute pilots who failed to declare drug or alcohol related convictions on (FAA) medical certificate applications," said Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole.

The new initiative by the Transportation Department comes as a House subcommittee has scheduled hearings today and Thursday on drug and alcohol abuse among pilots.

Federal regulations specifically require that past drug-related convictions be included in applications for a pilot's medical certificate, which is needed to get a pilot's license. If such information is not included a pilot could be guilty of willfully falsifying his application and subject to license suspension or revocation, officials said.

Delaware

Tiny State Of Corners, Crossroads And History

By CHARLES HILLINGER
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

DINAHS CORNER, Del. — "If you don't know your Corners and Crossroads, you don't know Delaware," said Joan Stewart, 40, as she collected her mail from a rural box on the country road near her home.

A black, wooden-wheeled, horse-drawn Amish buggy rattled by just as she reached into her mailbox. "This is Amish country, you know," she said, commenting on the passing carriage. "Dinahs Corner is the heart of Delaware's Amish settlement. Every other house around here is Amish."

Delaware, America's second-smallest state, 96 miles long, 9 to 35 miles wide, is mostly farmland, a state sprinkled with tiny hamlets called Corners and Crossroads and other communities with quaint names like:

Blackbird, Brick Store, Alms House, Hour Glass, Little Heaven, Rising Sun, Blue Ball, Cocked Hat, Hardscrabble, Mermaid, Old Furnace, Seven Hickories and Shortly.

There are more than 100 Corners and Crossroads listed on the Delaware state map: Anthony's Corner, Cabbage Corner, Dinahs Corner, Everetts Corner, Stumps Corner, Pine Tree Corner, Packing House Corner, Shaft Ox Corner, McKay's Corner, McKnatt Corner and many more.

Crossroads include Gum, Kings, Queens, Lords, Marvels, Milford, Smith, Jones and Dutch Neck.

Many Corners and Crossroads do not appear on the maps. Their names are known only to locals.

Delaware's population is only 600,000. Its biggest city, Wilmington, has 72,000 people. Dover, the capital, has a population of 23,000.

Harvey Yoder, 51, an Amish with a long, scraggly white beard, has lived on a farm in Dinahs Corner all his life. He uses a horse and plow to till his field. His home has no electricity.

"We Amish won't get involved with modern things," he explained. He said there are about 200 Amish families in Delaware, about 1,500 Amish in all living in a 14-by 12-mile area.

At Old Wiley School Corner, handsome, 6-foot, bearded Amish schoolteacher Cristy Byler, 26, was teaching 39 first- to eighth-graders in the one-room Old Wiley School. There was no electricity in the school house, no lights. It was a gloomy day outside, making it hard for the children to read inside.

The curriculum at the Amish school was deliberately designed so that the children don't learn too much about the world. In Delaware, Amish children do not go farther than eighth grade. Amish don't listen to the radio, watch television, read the daily newspapers or popular magazines.

"I went to Old Wiley School all my years," said Byler, who has been the school's sole teacher since he was 18. The shy youngsters sat at turn-of-the-century-style desks with inkwells. Girls wore black bonnets, long dresses, black stockings; boys wore suspenders over their shirts to hold up their trousers. Outhouses stood outside the school.

What are you going to do when you graduate from school, eighth grader Benny Beachy, 13, was asked. "I'm going to do what all the boys do, help my pa on the farm," he replied.

Few fences separate farms or homes in Delaware. Even the country cemeteries are without fences.

"Don't need fences around cemeteries. They're not going anywhere," observed Helen McVey, 82, who lives in a hamlet called Alms House, named years ago when the state poor farm was located there.

(By the way, Delaware is one of few places left in America where footstones are still used with headstones in graveyards.)

"Miss Helen," as the widow is known to everyone, has been out of the tiny state only twice in her life, and then only for a few days. "Why leave?" she mused. "Couldn't find a prettier, more peaceful place.

"As my time is drawing close, I've gotten a prune face, but I don't have to look at it. I didn't get these wrinkles from worryin'."

A graduate of Old Shade School in Alms House, Miss Helen pointed out the local landmarks. "That old CCC camp over there hasn't been used since Roosevelt's time," she noted.

Howard Killen, 66, runs the Rainbow Inn, a bar and cafe in Little Heaven, in the middle of the state. Years ago, said Killen, there was a community up the road called Little Hell.

"I've been halfway around the world, to a country fair and to two hog callin's, and Little Heaven is still the best place on earth," allowed Killen.

Out in the country miles from any populated area is Oliver Jones Crossroads, site of Oliver Jones General Store, the most famous country store in all Delaware.

When Oliver Jones, who is now 70, graduated from high school in 1936, he started his store in a closet in his home. Farmers would bring their eggs and vegetables to trade for merchandise. The young entrepreneur would take the farm products he received in trade and sell them in the city and use that money to buy more merchandise.

"My mother said one day: 'Son, I want to talk to you. If you're going to keep the store, you better build you a building,' " recalled Jones. He erected the store, has since added seven additions plus two 130-by-21-foot warehouses.

He sells 32 tons of Christmas candy alone each year. People shop at his store from as far away as Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The saying is, "If you can't get it anywhere else, come to Oliver Jones."

Port Penn (pop. 237), where Delaware Bay meets the Delaware River, calls itself the muskrat capital of the world. The town has an annual marshland dinner featuring muskrat as the main course.

Locals call the foot-long, ratlike rodent "rats." Muskrat is a Delaware delicacy sold at groceries and seafood shops and featured at local restaurants.

"All my life since I can remember I've been munching on rats," said farmer Burton Voss, 68. "I like the taste of rats. Some fry 'em, some pot 'em (cook them in little iron pots), some bake 'em. Best eating there is. You wouldn't know what you were eating unless you knew what it was."

East Berlin Cabaret Pokes Fun At Communist System

By SUSAN J. SMITH
Associated Press Writer

BERLIN (AP) — On a main street in East Berlin, a state-approved cabaret pokes fun every weekend at the shortcomings of the communist system — the scarce goods, shoddy workmanship and the trains that often arrive late.

Even Karl Marx and Freidrich Engels, the German-born founders of modern communism, are not spared at The Distel (The Thistle), East Berlin's oldest and most popular cabaret.

"Hey, Engels, what did you pay for that coat?" a bearded Marx asks a scruffily dressed Engels in one scene in the current show.

"Twelve hundred eighty-three marks," Engels replies, an amount large enough to cover a worker's small apartment rent for an entire year.

"Twelve hundred eighty-three marks for that thing?" sputters Marx in disbelief.

"Well, you said yourself that the price of something has nothing to do with its value," Engels retorts.

The Distel, which plays to packed houses every weekend, is tolerated by East Germany's communist government because it serves as a release for pent-up frustration, Western officials say.

The Distel's performers are paid by the state, and their scripts are censored by the East German Culture Ministry. But for a system that tightly controls all news media and culture, a suprising number of jokes are allowed about problems in East Germany.

"The show fills the classic function of political cabaret — releasing frustration through laughter," said Manfred Ackermann, an official at West Germany's Intra-German Relations Ministry who was formerly stationed at the West German mission in East Berlin.

East Germans, however, are not likely to see on the state television network anything like the humor seen by a few hundred people at a time at the Distel.

The Distel was opened on Oct. 2, 1953, just 3½ months after Soviet tanks put down a workers' revolt in East Berlin. Local legend has it that it was part of the government's effort to calm down the unhappy masses.

Pre-Nazi Berlin was jammed with cabarets, but the Nazis closed most of them and none were operating by the time the Allied powers entered a largely destroyed Berlin at the end of World War II.

East Berlin has other political cabarets, but the Distel is the best-known and operates in a comfortable theater building downtown. Most of its clientele are East Germans, including Communist Party members.

Distel productions are a simple series of skits, many based on happenings around Berlin. In the show in early February, a woman acting as a city tour guide makes wisecracks about the hotels being built for foreigners in East Berlin.

"In the old days, the exploiter class lived in the hotels and the working class lived outside," she says. "Today, the working class builds the hotels and hopes the exploiters come back to stay in them."

Even the division of the city is not taboo, although handled with care. In one skit, a gardener says he is studying the effect of the Berlin Wall on plant life.

But the Distel avoids direct attacks on personalities in the government. Neither does it question the communist system itself, zeroing in on its shortcomings instead.

'Murder At Ho-Jo's' Set This Weekend

"Murder At The Howard Johnson's" will be presented at the Student Union Production Committee's dinner theater Friday and Saturday at 6:30 p.m. in Auditorium 244 at Mendenhall Student Center, East Carolina University.

Rollicking through this comedy is Arlene, the flightly housewife, who teams up with her dentist-lover, Mitchell, to get rid of her used car salesman husband, Paul.

The deed is planned during the Christmas holidays to take place at the local Howard Johnson's Motel, but it fails. And so does the affair between Arlene and Mitchell when she discovers his infidelity. Another murder plot warms up for July 4th, when Paul aggrees to his wife's plan to do away with the dentist in order to win her back, again at Howard Johnson's. It's a caper through this holiday to find the two men returning to Ho-Jo's on New Year's Eve, again with murder in mind — but this time with Arlene as the intended victim.

"Murder At The Howard Johnson's" was written by comedy writers Ron Clark and Sam Bobrick, who have won four Writers Guild Awards.

The play will be performed by the Alpha-Omega Players (Repertory Theater of America), a touring company based in Rockport, Texas. Repertory Theater of America is comprised of three national touring groups, each equipped to perform in three to four shows. Since 1967, the company has traveled nearly 3 million miles and played nearly 9,000 performances.

Tickets for the dinner theater must be purchased in advance. For additional information and to reserve tickets, call the Central Ticket Office, Monday-Friday, 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. at 757-6611, ext. 266.

REPERTORY TROUPE — Members of Alpha-Omega Players (Repertory Theater of America) will perform the play "Murder At The Howard Johnson's," at East Carolina University Friday and Saturday at 6:30 p.m. at Mendenhall Student Center.

Jargon Expert Loves Power Of Work Words

By LEW POWELL
The Charlotte Observer

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) — "Jargon," says Michael Montgomery, "is the hallmark of a profession or industry. It signifies a coming of age.

"It helps people talk more efficiently, and it serves a sociological function as well — it indicates a shared membership."

Montgomery, a 36-year-old associate professor of English and linguistics at the University of South Carolina, holds great affection for jargon. He happily cites an account of the recent fraud conviction of former Spartanburg legislator Sterling Anderson.

"Embedded in that story was a lengthy discussion of jargon from the mobile home loansharking business," he said. "It sort of takes jargon out of the realm of computer experts and technicians — even folks trying to swindle loan companies have their jargon."

The creation of fictitious credit is "jazzing;" salesmen skilled at forging documents are "doctors." A light table for tracing signatures is a "cricket box."

Jargon becomes counterproductive, he said, "only when there's not agreement between speaker and audience about what words mean and how they should be used."

Here's a sampler of jargon and slang — jargon's less businesslike cousin — collected from various fields of Carolinas endeavor:

Basketball:

PT: Playing time. As in, "I told coach I wanted more PT." (This term could well spread to TV, where members of big soap opera casts frequently complain about being "underutilized.")

Paint: The lanes under the baskets where the big guys reign.

Real estate:

PIGS and PALS: Passive Income Generators and Passive Activity Losses. Under the new tax laws investors are seeking PIGS to offset their PALS.

FSBOs (or "fizzboes"): Houses that are For Sale By Owner. Often uttered disparagingly by real estate agents, who don't like being fizzboed out of a commission.

Radio and Television:

Lead-in and lead-out: Programs immediately preceding and following other programs. "Wheel of Fortune" is the lead-in for WBTV's evening news; "PM Magazine" is the lead-out.

Hammock: A support system created by strong lead-ins and lead-outs. Very healthy for ratings. (Viewers don't like to bother to change channels.)

The book: The all-important ratings surveys by Nielsen and Arbitron. As in: "Have you seen how John-Boy and Billy did in the new book?"

Churn: Portion of cable subscribers who drop off during a billing period.

Style:

High and tight: Tar Heel basketball star J.R. Reid's hairstyle — flat on top, short on the sides.

Chads and Chadettes: Male and female preppies.

Couch potato: Someone whose idea of a big time is eating nachos (or some variation thereof) while watching "Lifestyles of the Rich and Famous" (or some variation thereof).

Running:

'PR: Personal record — best time to date. (Although runners more commonly say "personal best" than "personal record," they seldom abbreviate it to "PB.")

Politics and Government:

Infrastructure: Roads and water and sewer lines, considered as a whole. Often referred to contentiously among planners, developers, politicians and neighborhood leaders.

In-fill: To make better use of vacant lots and run-down buildings near the central city, taking advantage of existing infrastructure instead of having to pay for more.

Bodily Functions:

Bio Break: Time-out to use the restroom. Sometimes built into meeting schedules.

Kids:

Jam: An old term that keeps turning up with new nuances. Currently means going strong. As in: "That Chevy is jammin'!"

Rad: Radical in an exemplary way. Often modified by "totally."

Take a chill pill (or chill out): Cool off.

Kick back: Take it easy.

Psych! A recent variation on "Gotcha!" (The prankster says something like, "Did you know you've got spinach on your teeth?" then, as the victim rushes for a mirror, "Psych!")

Gay: Just when gay had almost shed its original meaning — merry — and become synonymous with homosexual, comes yet another twist. Now it means stupid or bad.

Def: Hip, cool.

Ill: Obnoxious, loud, rude, out of it.

Dis: To insult, to verbally intimidate, to embarrass someone in front of friends. As in: "Don't dis me."

Law and Order:

Advise: Say or tell. As in, "Please advise me that number" or "Complainant advises his window was broken." If Joe Friday didn't originate this bit of jargon, he should have.

Newspapers:

Dead zone: A location on the bottom half of your newspaper's front page notorious for low readership. Typically includes an inconspicuous headline and no photo. The journalistic equivalent of the sound of a tree falling in the wilderness.

Pooje (rhymes with rouge; spelling debatable): Boring and insignificant stories that go into the paper only for want of something better. Most often found during and immediately after the ad-heavy holiday season. Similar to the "boilerplate" of an earlier generation.

Nut graf: The paragraph that sums up the point of the story. Sometimes it's the first paragraph. Usually it's one of the first three paragraphs. Sometimes it's not there at all (see pooje).

Public Utilities:

CWIP (pronounced quip): Construction Work in Progress. A controversial accounting technique used to bill consumers for the financing costs of plant construction before the plant goes into use.

Miscellaneous:

Bashing: Beat up, either physically (as in "gay bashing") or figuratively (as in "developer bashing").

Aspiring Actors Take Odd Jobs While Seeking Break

By HARRY DEDERICHS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) - Dan Bullington dreams of a movie role, sharing the credits with a famous actor. But for now, he serves drinks in New York for a living.

Louis Mustillo yearns for a chance to act in a Broadway play. He visits 20 or 25 agents and casting offices each week with pictures of himself and written material.

"They sometimes don't even look at the material and throw it in the waste basket," Mustillo said. He, too, works in a New York bar to keep himself financially afloat.

The two are among the hordes of would-be actors and actresses in New York City who support themselves by odd jobs while they haunt audition studios and casting offices.

Unions estimate the number at about 17,000 aspiring stage performers and thousands of hopeful movie actors.

Many are handsome and talented. But most will never be stars, and face what can be a difficult existence in New York, where many feel daunted by crime and high living costs.

Bullington, 28, arrived in New York from Kentucky with $250 cash, a guitar and two suitcases. Within a week, he had been robbed. He took acting and voice lessons, then dropped out of the acting scene for months before recently going back to an acting school.

Jane Wilson said she had had "two good years" since coming from Iowa in 1982 after college, but had been forced to seek other jobs while waiting for her big break.

Each morning, she leaves her apartment at the edge of the theater district to work as a waitress. When not at afternoon auditions, she does baby-sitting or types letters.

Rick Johnson came here three years ago from Dallas. In the absence of the stage role he wants, he performs odd jobs and says he is thinking of opening his own mail-order business.

The Stage Actors Union says it has 38,000 members nationwide. Spokeswoman Helen Donier said 85 percent of the 20,000 New York members were unemployed. A shrinking number of Broadway shows hasn't helped things, dropping from 55 in 1976 to 36 last year, according to the League of American Directors and Producers.

The New York branch of the Screen Actors' Guild has 22,500 members. It does not keep unemployment statistics, but guild official William Weiler said "a great number" of members are unemployed.

Although Hollywood is America's most famous movie center, 500 to 550 films are produced in New York every year, according to the Motion Picture Association.

Only a few aspiring actors have a chance to make it, either with talent or connections.

One who has carved a spot for herself is Antoinette Reragine, who proudly says she can live on the money she earns from film and stage roles and as a model.

"My father is in the cable TV business and my brother is a producer," she said. "I grew up in a family connected with entertainment, and that helps." Ms. Reragine and a handful of colleagues meet once a week for acting lessons at a small Manhattan theater. It is one of several groups that help unemployed actors.

For four to five hours they act on the stage. Janis Powell, an actress and producer who also is an instructor at the New York Academy of Arts, then offers criticism and advice.

"Some actors have made it and have left the group," said Ms. Powell, who formed the group four years ago. "But some come back after a while to get more practice."

Mustillo, 27, says he would accept making less money if it meant a full-time acting job.

His dream role, he said, would be Erie Smith in Eugene O'Neill's play, "Hughie." But he admits that he has to grow older for that character, who is about 40 years old.

So far, he has played in two off-Broadway productions and soon will have another chance to perform on stage. He is rehearsing, with Ms. Powell's help, for a one-man show he hopes to open this spring.

"Since we don't have acting jobs, we have to take our own initiatives," he says. "We can't give up; we have to keep going."

In 1858, the county's courthouse was destroyed by a blaze supposedly set by a man trying to destory a will. In 1910, the courthouse burned again.

'Mephisto' Star Makes It Big On German Television

By KEVIN COSTELLOE
Associated Press Writer

BONN, West Germany (AP) — When the movie, "Mephisto," was nominated for an Academy Award for best foreign picture in 1981, its co-star Karin Boyd requested permission to travel from her home in East Berlin to Los Angeles for the awards night.

However, East Germany's communist officials refused, even though Miss Boyd, the daughter of an American soldier and an East German woman, had won critical acclaim for her performance as Juliette in the film.

"I just wanted to go and be in Los Angeles for the awards night," the 33-year-old actress recalled. "In East Germany, winning an Academy Award isn't such a big thing. But it was important for me. The authorities gave me no reason for the refusal."

"Mephisto," the story of a German actor who furthers his career under the Nazi regime, went on to win an Oscar for best foreign film and catapulted Miss Boyd's co-star, actor Klaus Maria Brandauer, to international stardom.

For Miss Boyd, the road to fame hasn't been as spectacular as it was for the man who played her lover in "Mephisto."

She was already famous in East Germany when "Mephisto" was made, but she said the opportunities for professional development there were severely restricted.

In February 1983 she made another application to leave East Germany, this time to emigrate.

"I told them my grandmother in New York was sick," Miss Boyd said with a smile. "She even wrote me a document saying she needed my help and had no one else to care for her. Of course, my grandmother knew I really wanted to go to West Germany. She understands."

Permission was granted in November 1983, and the divorced actress went to West Germany with her then 12-year-old son, Philipp.

After a series of acting roles on German TV and a stint on the Vienna stage, Miss Boyd played a leading role in the six-part German TV series based on West Germany's most popular circus.

Late last year, she filmed "Bonner Geschichten" ("Bonn Stories"), about a young American TV correspondent who becomes romantically involved with a Soviet journalist in the West German capital. Miss Boyd stars as correspondent Jennifer Donner in the six-part series.

Another starring role is under way in a three-part TV series called "Wilder Western Inklusive" ("Wild West Included"), a comedy about a German travel group in the United States. Four months of filming in the United States are scheduled to start in New York in August, followed by shooting in Los Angeles, Phoenix and other locations.

Miss Boyd, who spoke in German during a recent interview, is also trying to improve her English. "My father spoke German to us at home," she said.

Her father, Arthur, was in the U.S. Army in Germany when he fell in love with an East German woman and settled with her in East Berlin in 1953. Miss Boyd is the oldest of six children from their marriage.

Miss Boyd, who visited New York once in 1978, has not seriously considered an acting career in the United States because of language problems and the intense competition in the business.

Public Radio's Noah Adams Will Fill 'Companion' Slot

By CHRISTOPHER CONNELL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Noah Adams doesn't sing and he has no tall tales to tell about Lake Wobegon. But he's hoping to capture the "Prairie Home Companion" audience with a new Saturday night show on public radio.

Adams has been hired by Minnesota Public Radio to fill the void left when humorist Garrison Keillor announced that in June he will leave the offbeat variety show he created 13 years ago.

Adams, a co-host for the past 10 years of "All Things Considered," National Public Radio's 90-minute evening news program, said in a telephone interview Monday that the new show will feature music and literature.

"It's not designed to replace 'A Prairie Home Companion.' That would be a folly, I think," Adams said. But it will be broadcast live on Saturday night from St. Paul's World Theater — just as "Prairie Home" has been.

Keillor dropped his bombshell at the start of last Saturday night's show, heard weekly over 275 American Public Radio outlets by an audience estimated at 4 million.

Keillor said he would depart the show June 13 to "resume the life of a shy person."

Keillor, whose book "Lake Wobegon Days" topped the best-seller lists in 1985, said he wanted more time to write and to visit his recent bride's native Denmark.

On Sunday, Minnesota Public Radio President William Kling announced he had hired Adams "to come in with us and develop the new show." He said Adams "is one of the best people in radio, commercial or noncommercial."

Adams, 44, is a native of Ashland, Ky., who began working as a rock 'n' roll disc jockey in 1962 after dropping out of Eastern Kentucky State University. He said he will go to St. Paul in the early spring to start developing the still unnamed program.

Adams said he did not know yet how to describe it.

"We have a time slot, two hours where people are used to listening on Saturday night. We know that those people will appreciate good music. We know that they'll appreciate good literature, being treated intelligently and with some empathy, and that's what we're going to work on," he said.

Adams joined "All Things Considered" as a production assistant 12 years ago and became the show's weekend co-host two years later. Five years ago, he became co-host of the daily show with the veteran Susan Stamberg. She quit "All Things Considered" last August and recently began a Sunday morning news and talk show.

Adams said he is "an absolute fan" of Keillor.

"I think his genius sometimes is overlooked. Somebody with the ability he has as a humorist — the ability to be able to write humor for The New Yorker and to be as wonderful a communicator as he is on the radio, it's just an extraordinary combination. It would be folly for someone to try to replace him."

Keillor mixes tall tales of his fictitious hometown, Lake Wobegon ("where all the women are strong, all the men are good-looking and all the children are above average") with skits and songs from his own troupe and visiting artists, along with "commercials" for imaginary products, such as Powdermilk Biscuits.

As for his new job, Adams said he did not know if Minnesota Public Radio had considered anyone else.

"They approached me. I had been talking with the people at Minnesota Public Radio for five years. ... I always thought that when the time came that I would want to get away from the daily program, that I would go to Minnesota."

NEW SHOW HOST — Noah Adams, host of "All Things Considered" on National Public Radio, has been hired to develop a new show to replace Garrison Keillor's "A Prairie Home Companion" on Saturday nights. Keillor has announced he is giving up the show. (AP Laserphoto)

Training

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Julie Andrews had to arrive in London long before filming began for her latest movie, "Duet for One," because the role required a convincing violin performance.

"I had four weeks intensive training, three to four hours a day," she said in a recent interview. "I had about six weeks in all, and it was not nearly enough. I was very scared. It's a very difficult instrument to play."

Miss Andrews, who stars with Alan Bates and Max Von Sydow, plays a famous violinist who suffers multiple sclerosis.

Darkness

By Dennise Bright

I contain the secrets of young ones' fears.
The hiding monsters you often hear.
The imagined forms when we turn off the light

As you pull up your covers to your chin tight.

I cause your sleepless turning nights.
While you wish everything will be alright
Here gnomes dwell and goblins, too.
For I am just darkness frightening you.

Dennise Bright, 15, a student at J.H. Rose High School wins this week's writing contest.

Homeless

By Carey Kruger

Cold, dark and wet,
Are the alleys at night.
Filled with homeless people,
Easily in sight.
Some are poor and all alone,

Others just have no home.
Why should we help them,
Some might say. They had their chance and gave it away.

Carey Kruger, 16, a student at J.H. Rose High School receives special mention.

Donald Cox, 12, a student at Ayden Middle School wins this week's drawing contest.

George Washington

By Beau Williams

George Washington was the first president. Washington served two terms or eight years. He picked his own cabinet. He was a colonel in the Revolutionary War. He lived at Mount Vernon. Washington died riding around Mount Vernon. He caught a cold and became ill and died. That was the end of a great man.

Beau Williams, 10, a student at Wahl-Coates Elementary School receives special mention.

Project For A Rainy Day

Papermaking

Materials:
Old newspapers or paper towels
Wood strips, nail, hammer
Staple gun
Fine wire screen or sponge
A blender or a big dishpan and an eggbeater
Dishwashing liquid or bleach
An iron, some pieces of old sheet

Make two small wooden frames the same size (about 6 inches). Staple wire screen to one frame. This will be called the mold. Tear up old newspapers or paper towels. Fill the blender 3/4 cup full of warm water and tear up and add pieces of scrap paper until the liquid is cloudy but not thick. Hold the mold screen side up and place the empty frame on top. The empty frame is called the deckle. The deckle allows the water to drain slowly and forms the edges of the paper. Dip both frames, with the screen sandwiched in the middle, into the dishpan. Raise the frames straight up from the dishpan and drain. Remove the top frame. Turn the screen over onto some folded fabric, sheet or paper towel blotter. Blot the back of the screen with a sponge to absorb excess moisture. Remove the screen. Put another blotter on top of the paper and iron dry. Remove blotters. Small objects like leaves and flowers can be embedded in the paper while still wet.

As It Would Fall

By Jay Perry

The sensation of the moon in my hands
The ruling king of all the lands
In the sky
A star shining bright
Into my eyes
A diamond delight
But just as
My kingdom would rise just as any franchise
Soon to be Nothing at all
From the top
Only to fall
Into the hands of the night

All would seem wrong
but all would be right
My world
A star in the sky
As I would live
As I would die
Into the hands of the moon
all gone too quick and too soon as it would rise
as it would fall
From everything to nothing at all

Jay Perry, 16, a student at Tarboro High School receives special mention.

Play It Again, Wabot

"Wabot II" may be a heap of wires and tubes, but the keyboard-playing robot has really been wowing them recently at the Boston Museum of Science's "Robots and Beyond" exhibition. As impressive as robots like Wabot are, the computers that control them still can't compare with the three-pound human brain. According to one scientist, a computer that powerful built with current technology would have to be one hundred stories tall and cover an area the size of Texas.

Opening lead: Four of ♣.

Don't overlook any chance, no matter how slight, in your plan of campaign. South missed such a possibility on this hand from a rubber bridge game in Jerusalem, and it cost him a vulnerable slam.

South's bidding was a little impetuous, but the final contract could hardly be faulted. Certainly, the double fit made South's hand very attractive.

West got his side off to its best lead of a club, and declarer was in trouble. Since the defenders had set up a trick in that suit on the go, declarer could not afford to lose a trump trick until he got rid of two clubs from his hand.

One line of play was to rely on the trump finesse; but, assuming a 3-2 split, that offered only a 50 percent chance of success. Declarer rightly rejected that line in favor of a superior method. He cashed the ace and king of trumps in an attempt to drop the queen. When that card failed to appear, declarer cashed the ace-king of diamonds and then the king-queen of hearts. He continued with a heart to the ace. Had both defenders followed, declarer would have been able to pitch his two clubs on the queen of diamonds and the long heart. Unfortunately, East ruffed the ace of hearts and returned a club to his partner's queen for down one.

Declarer could have added another string to his bow. If either defender held J-10-x of diamonds, the contract was cold regardless of the heart position. At trick two declarer should cash one high trump, then the two top diamonds. After crossing back to dummy with the other master trump, declarer should now have cashed the queen of diamonds. If the J-10 drop, as was the case here, declarer would get rid of his last club on the nine. If not, he could still have fallen back on a 3-3 heart split for his contract.

Fried Fish Fanciers Welcome Herring's Return

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

It's time to go down the river hill in Jamesville again. The herring are back in the Roanoke River.

Herring, fish with blue-green or blackish scales and silver on the sides, swim in large schools in deep water part of the time and then migrate to shallower coastal waters to lay their eggs.

According to the book, "A Field Guide To Atlantic Coast Fishes of North America" by C. Richard Robins and G. Carleton Ray, the Atlantic Herring is the most common of the herring species to migrate to North Carolina waters.

Used smoked, salted, pickled and canned, the herring is also cooked fresh from the Roanoke River in Jamesville where townspeople and others from neighboring towns and counties consider it a seasonal delicacy.

The Cypress Grill, flanked by a hill and the Roanoke River, opens in late January and operates until late April, said Sallie Gardner, who owns the restaurant with her husband, Leslie.

"We have to go all the way to Columbia" in Tyrrell County to get the herring before they begin to migrate down the river in late February or early March, she said. When the herring arrive in the Jamesville area, "my son fishes and we catch them right out here."

Herring has been a popular food in Jamesville for a long time, Mrs. Gardner said. The town even has a Herring Festival on Easter Monday when locals and visitors enjoy the fish.

Many people like fishing for herring from the river and then cooking it along the banks, she said. "They're not as good in the house as they are cooked outside."

Drift nets are used to fish the herring from the water, and as they come up "they look like diamonds," Mrs. Gardner said.

After the fish are cleaned at the grill, they are kept in the refrigerator until it is time to cook them, she said. The fish are battered in cornmeal before they are fried in a deep pan of hog lard and cooking oil.

"The oil helps prevent it (the herring) from burning a bit," Mrs. Gardner said.

The fish is served with a variety of foods including slaw, french fries and hush puppies. "We make our own corn meal out of Abbott's meal, and we make our own hush puppies," Mrs. Gardner said.

Cypress Grill also serves homemade pies to compliment the herring meal. The recipes for the lemon and chocolate pies are listed below.

Lemon Pie

1 1/2 cup sugar
1/3 cup corn starch
1 1/2 cup boiling water
Dash salt
1 tablespoon margarine
1/3 cup lemon juice

HERRING FEAST — The Cypress Grill in Jamesville serves herring from late January to late April, said owner Sallie Gardner. A variety of side dishes can be ordered with the fried fish, but most folks prefer to eat it with french fries, slaw and corn bread. (Reflector Photos by Cliff Hollis)

Even Dad Can Fix Spinach Quiche

When you work, getting dinner on the table can be difficult, especially when the rest of the family gets home before you do. Wouldn't it be great if dad or the kids could start dinner before you arrive? They can — and they'll probably enjoy it — if you make sure all the ingredients for a quick and easy menu are on hand.

A Spinach Quiche would be a great entree for less-than-experienced cooks to prepare. It's simply a main dish custard pie flavored with spinach, Swiss cheese and mushrooms. The littlest one could beat all the ingredients together while dad or the oldest cooks and drains the spinach and pops a frozen pie shell into the oven to brown.

While the quiche is in the oven, there's plenty of time to set the table, toss a green salad and put out bread or rolls. That's all you need to round out a well-balanced meal.

Put Spinach Quiche on the menu and let your family discover how easy it is to prepare a simple, but sensational supper.

SPINACH QUICHE

1 package (10-ounce) frozen chopped spinach
1 9-inch frozen deep-dish pie shell, thawed
5 eggs, beaten
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Swiss cheese
1 can (2 or 2 1/2 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained
3/4 cup half and half or light cream
1/8 teaspoon pepper

Cook spinach according to package directions and drain, pressing out excess water. Set aside. Brush the inside of the pie shell with a small amount of the beaten eggs. Prick bottom and sides with fork. Bake shell in preheated 425-degree oven 5 minutes or until light golden brown. Set pie shell aside.

Reduce oven temperature to 350 degrees. Stir together spinach, cheese and mushrooms. Turn into pie shell. To the beaten eggs, add remaining ingredients. Beat until well blended. Pour over spinach mixture.

Bake in preheated oven 45 to 50 minutes or until knife inserted near center comes out clean. Let stand 5 minutes before serving.

FRYING — Caffie Cooper prepares to remove the herring from the pan where it is cooked in hog lard and cooking oil. The fish is fried so that all of it can be eaten except the backbone.

Brown-Bag Lunches Can Be Tasty Treats

Here are two ways to take the "ho hum" out of brown-bag lunches.

Egg Salad Bunwiches are a tasty combination of two old favorites — egg salad and bologna with Cheddar cheese. And they're delicious hot or cold.

Who wouldn't be delighted to find a brownie tucked into their lunch bag or box? These are doubly delicious with a quick-fix chocolate icing.

Try them both and add a little excitement to your brown-bagger's lunch.

BROWNIE DELIGHTS

1 1/4 cups sugar
3 eggs
1/3 cup butter, melted
3 squares (3 ounces) unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 teaspoon vanilla
2/3 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
Chocolate icing
9 pecan halves

In large mixing bowl, beat sugar and eggs together on medium speed until well blended. Stir in butter, chocolate and vanilla until well combined. Stir in flour and salt just until blended. Pour batter into greased 9x9x2-inch baking pan.

Bake in a preheated oven at 350 degrees 30 to 35 minutes or until brownies begin to pull away from the sides of pan. Cool on wire rack. Frost with chocolate icing, and arrange pecan halves on top. Cut into squares. Yield: 9 servings.

CHOCOLATE ICING

3/4 cup powdered sugar
1 square (1 ounce) unsweetened chocolate, melted
1 tablespoon butter, melted
1 1/2 tablespoons milk
1/2 teaspoon vanilla

Occasional Meatless Meal Healthy Idea

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

Meat and potatoes people who need to monitor their saturated fat and blood cholesterol intake may consider preparing meals without meat every once in a while, said a local dietician.

Meatless meals are low in saturated fat and cholesterol, said Linda Walker of the department of family medicine at Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center. "You get rid of some fat by getting rid of the meat."

Ms. Walker was discussing meatless meals with people in the fourth class of Eating for Heart Health that meets at the center from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Meatless meals also add variety to the diet; they are economical and are highly nutritious, she said.

"Populations of people (who do not eat meat) tend not to have as much heart disease and tend to have lower rates of cancer," Ms. Walker said. These people usually avoid health risks such as smoking also.

When preparing meatless meals, however, it is important to combine foods to get nine essential amino acids that are used to make the different proteins in the body, she said. "It's important to get all the ones we need at the same time (within a day) and in about the same amount."

Meats, milk, cheese, eggs and soy are complete proteins because they each carry all the nine essential amino acids needed in the body, she said. But, other amino acid-contributing products such as beans, nuts, seeds and grains have to be combined in a meal to get all the essential amino acids needed.

If the necessary amino acids are not consumed for periods of time, "all of the things protein is used for is compromised," Ms. Walker said, such as the need to produce red blood cells and enzymes.

"Protein is something we've got to have, (but) we need some — not a lot of it," she said.

Healthy people need about .8 grams of protein per kilogram of body weight, Ms. Walker said. For example, if a person weighs 154 pounds, their weight would equal 70 kilograms. Dividing that figure by .8 grams would leave .56 grams of protein needed by that person each day.

But, six ounces of meat have about 48 grams of protein, and two cups of milk have about 14 grams, totaling 62 grams, she said. "That gives you more protein than you really need, and you also get protein from other foods."

If the body gets too much protein and not enough calories, "the body takes the protein and uses it for energy," Ms. Walker said. Too much protein also may make the kidneys work harder to break down the protein, which may create health problems for those who have kidney malfunctions.

Try some of the meatless recipes listed below.

JOHN TYLER'S MEATLESS LENTIL CURRY

4 onions, chopped
4 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup brown rice, uncooked
4 tablespoons oil
2 teaspoons curry powder
8 cups water
1/4 teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons lemon juice
2 cups dry lentils
2 10-ounce packages frozen spinach
1 cup yogurt

Saute onions, garlic and rice in oil for 3 to 4 minutes. Add curry powder and stir through. Add water, salt, lemon juice and lentils. Stir and simmer covered until tender (about 30 minutes). Add spinach. Cook another 15 minutes or until spinach is thawed and heated through. Stir to mix. Serve with about 2 tablespoons yogurt topping each serving. Yield: 6 servings.

CHEESY EGGPLANT CASSEROLE

1 cup uncooked rice
1 medium eggplant sliced in 1/2-inch rounds
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 small onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
1 8-ounce can tomato sauce
1 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon basil
12-ounce low fat (1 percent) cottage cheese

2 ounces part skim mozzarella cheese, shredded

Cook rice. Steam eggplant slices just until tender. Saute onion, garlic and mushrooms in oil until brown. Add tomato sauce and herbs, scraping up drippings. Simmer for a few minutes. Mix cottage cheese and milk. In a greased baking dish, layer cooked rice, eggplant, cottage cheese and sauce. Repeat, ending with sauce. Top with Mozzarella. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Yield: 6 servings.

MACARONI & COTTAGE CHEESE CASSEROLE

2 cups macaroni
1 medium onion, chopped
1/2 pound mushrooms, sliced
2/3 cup sunflower seeds
2 tablespoons oil
1 1/2 cup (1 percent fat) cottage cheese
1/4 cup skim milk
1 1/4 cup yogurt
Dash cayenne
1/8 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons parsley flakes
1/2 cup bread crumbs
2 tablespoons grated parmesan

Saute onion, mushrooms and sunflower seeds in oil. Cook macaroni and combine with mushroom mixture. Beat cottage cheese, yogurt, milk and seasonings together. Stir into macaroni mixture. Put in lightly greased casserole. Mix bread crumbs and parmesan. Sprinkle on top. Bake for 30 minutes at 350 degrees.

VEGETABLE BEAN STEW

3/4 cup dry white beans
1 1/4 cups cold water
3 teaspoons vegetable oil
1/2 cup chopped onion (about 1/2 medium)
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 16-ounce can whole tomatoes, crushed
1/2 teaspoon thyme, crushed
1/2 teaspoon basil, crushed
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon crushed red pepper
1 cup sliced carrot (about 2 medium)
1 cup sliced zucchini (about 1 medium)
1 8 3/4-ounce can kidney beans

In small saucepan, soak beans in cold water overnight. (Quick method: heat beans and water to boiling. Cover and boil about 2 minutes. Remove from heat and let stand, covered, about 1 hour. Drain and measure soaking or cooking liquid and add enough water to make 1 1/4 cups.

Return water and beans to saucepan; heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover ad simmer about 1 hour. In medium saucepan over medium-high heat in hot oil, cook onion and garlic about 3 minutes.

Add white beans and bean liquid, tomatoes and seasonings; heat to boiling. Reduce heat to low; cover and simmer about 30 minutes. Add carrots and zucchini; continue to simmer, covered, about 30 minutes.

Stir in kidney beans; cook about 5 minutes until beans and vegetables are tender. Yield 6 1-cup servings.

TOFU-STUFFED ZUCCHINI

1 8-ounce cake tofu (bean curd)
1/3 cup chopped onion
1 clove garlic, minced
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
1 tablespoon fresh parsley
1 teaspoon dried oregano leaves
1/8 teaspoon freshly-ground pepper
1 cup tomato sauce or 1 cup chicken broth
2 tablespoons Parmesan cheese for topping, optional

Wrap the tofu in absorbent toweling. Place a heavy weight on top for 10 minutes to squeeze out the excess moisture. (A heavy skillet works well as a weight).

Wash thoroughly and trim ends from zucchini. Slice zucchini in half lengthwise. Scoop out the pulp, leaving a 1/4-inch shell. Chop the zucchini pulp and reserve for later use.

Saute the onion and garlic in the vegetable oil until softened. Add the chopped zucchini pulp and spices. Simmer over low heat until zucchini pulp is softened (about 10 minutes). Do not be afraid to add spices. The tofu is very bland and absorbs the flavors well.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Take the tofu and, using your hands, squeeze out any remaining moisture. Crumble the tofu, and add to the zucchini mixture and blend. Remove from heat and spoon into the reserved zucchini shells.

Using a small baking dish (preferably glass), pour in enough tomato sauce (or chicken broth) to cover bottom of pan. Add stuffed zucchini and pour the remaining sauce (broth) on top. If desired, sprinkle with Parmesan cheese. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

Uncover dish and bake an additional 10 minutes or until zucchini is tender. Yield: allow 1 stuffed zucchini half per person. Serve with green salad and crusty bread. The zucchini may be served cold.

GREEN BEANS IN WALNUT-DILL DRESSING

1 pound fresh green beans
1/2 cup chopped scallions including green tops
1/2 cup chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons snipped, fresh dill
2 tablespoons chopped fresh parsley, preferably Italian
3 tablespoons rice wine or mild vinegar
1/3 to 1/2 cup vegetable oil
Salt, if desired
Freshly ground pepper to taste

In large saucepan over boiling water, steam beans until just tender — about 8 to 10 minutes. Remove from heat and plunge beans into cold water to stop the cooking. Drain well and set aside.

In blender or food processor, combine scallions, walnuts, dill, parsley, vinegar and 1/3 cup oil. Blend, adding a little more oil if necessary. Season with salt and pepper to taste. Pour over beans and toss. Let beans set one hour before serving to develop and blend flavors. Yield: 5 servings.

MUSHROOM SALAD

3 cups mushrooms, thinly sliced
1 cup diced celery
1/2 cup diced green pepper
1/2 cup diced red onion
1/2 cup diced pimientos
2 teaspoons red wine vinegar
1 teaspoon minced garlic
1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup vegetable oil

In a large bowl, combine the mushrooms, celery, green pepper, red onion and pimientos. In another bowl, combine the red wine vinegar, garlic, Worcestershire sauce and salt. Add the vegetable oil in a stream, whisking as you mix.

Toss the mushroom mixture with the dressing. Serve as is or on a large lettuce leaf.

Herring Are Back

CHOCOLATE PIE

1 cup sugar
2 cups milk
Dash salt
1 tablespoon margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla flavor

Mix cocoa, sugar, salt and margarine. Add flavoring and milk. Place mixture in an unbaked pie shell. Bake at about 350 degrees until done.

Potassium May Help Lower Risk Of Stroke

By DANIEL Q. HANEY
AP Science Writer

BOSTON (AP) — Eating an extra helping of fresh fruit or vegetables each day could cut the risk of stroke nearly in half by increasing the body's supply of potassium, a study concludes.

Potassium is found abundantly in many kinds of food, especially fruits and vegetables. The new research suggests that even a small increase in the daily intake of this element can significantly reduce the hazard of stroke.

Dr. Elizabeth Barrett-Connor, a co-author of the study at the University of California, San Diego, said the research is the first to find that people with relatively high levels of potassium in their diets have fewer strokes.

"The results indicate that one extra serving of fresh fruits or vegetables each day may decrease the risk of stroke by as much as 40 percent, regardless of other known risk factors," she said.

She cautioned that her findings must yet be duplicated by other researchers. But in the meantime, eating extra fruits and vegetables can't hurt, as long as people don't increase their total daily calories.

Strokes are the nation's third leading cause of death after heart attacks and cancer. This year, they will take an estimated 155,000 lives in the United States.

"In this country, the stroke rate has declined rather dramatically since the late 1940s, and certainly before the wide use of blood pressure medicine," Barrett-Connor said in an interview. "It's always been a puzzle what caused this decrease. During that time, there was an increase in the availability of fresh fruit and vegetables. This may be part of the missing link."

The study, conducted with Dr. Kay-Tee Khaw of the University of Cambridge in England, was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Some other experts were skeptical about the researchers' conclusions.

"I'm amazed the journal would take a paper like this. I don't think it's very good science," said Dr. Jerome P. Kassirer of New England Medical Center.

He said the researchers looked for statistical links between a variety of dietary factors and stroke without having a clear idea of how they could affect this health problem.

"When you start out with a whole body of data, you are going to find correlations between some things," he said. "It just has to be, depending on how much data you have."

Dr. Franklin Epstein of Boston's Beth Israel Hospital said it's possible some stroke victims got less potassium simply because they didn't feel well, had poor appetites and ate less food.

He agreed that people should eat more fruit and vegetables, but cautioned against taking potassium pills, which might cause heart trouble in people with diabetes or kidney problems.

Barrett-Connor agreed that people should get their potassium from food, because other things in fruits and vegetables may also help ward off disease.

The study was based on 859 men and women between ages 50 and 79 who lived in Rancho Bernardo, Calif. Doctors questioned them about their diets and lifestyles and gave them physical exams. Twelve years later, 24 of them had died of stroke, and the doctors attempted to see how the stroke victims differed from the other people.

Lunches

Combine all ingredients and beat or stir until smooth. Yield: 1/3 cup.

EGG SALAD BUNWICHES

1/3 cup mayonnaise or salad dressing
3 tablespoons sweet pickle relish
1 teaspoon prepared mustard
1/2 teaspoon salt
6 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
1 cup (4 ounces) shredded Cheddar cheese
1/4 cup chopped celery
Lettuce leaves
6 hamburger rolls, split and buttered
6 slices bologna

In medium bowl, stir together mayonnaise, relish, mustard and salt until well blended. Fold in eggs, cheese and celery. Refrigerate covered in bowl or in individual serving-size thermal containers.

Just before serving, place a lettuce leaf on the bottom half of each bun. Top with a slice of bologna and about 1/2 cup egg salad mixture. Top with bun top.

Note: Sandwich may be served hot. Omit lettuce leaves and wrap in foil. Bake in preheated 450-degree oven 10 to 15 minutes or until cheese is melted and egg salad is hot.

To microwave, cook uncovered on paper plate at HIGH for 1 minute.

Duckling Is Simple, Yet Elegant Meal To Prepare

With everyone's busy schedules, very few of us have the time or patience to give to hours of traditional meal preparation. A good meat to remember when looking for a memorable meal that is sure to impress family and friends is Duck. Duckling is deceptively simple to prepare while easily casting an aura of elegance upon any candlelight table.

Duckling is available year round and is usually found next to the turkeys in the frozen meat counter. They are now available in portions (breast, legs, quarters and halves) as well as whole birds. When shopping, why not look for duckling from North Carolina.

Concord Farms, located in Concord, is one of several duckling plants in the United States. Concord Farms' brands have been tested against other popular labels of duckling, and were found to have considerably more lean meat and decidely less fat. These tests were run by a leading university's food lab.

To decide the amount needed for an evening meal, allow 1 1/2 pounds per serving. Duckling is considered done when it reaches an internal temperature of 185 to 190 degrees. On a half or whole bird, the leg will easily move up and down.

Duckling easily compliments a host of fruits and vegetables making menu selections full of variety. Why not try duckling soon and enjoy some of North Carolina's goodness.

ROAST DUCKLING
(With Fruit Stuffing)

1 frozen duckling, defrosted
3/4 teaspoon salt
1 can (1 pound) fruit cocktail
2/3 cup diced celery
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 cups toasted (1/2-inch) bread cubes
1/3 cup diced (1/4-inch) pitted prunes
1/3 cup chopped blanched or toasted almonds

Wash, drain and dry duckling. Sprinkle 1/2 teaspoon salt evenly over body and neck cavities. Prepare stuffing. Drain fruit cocktail; save 1/4 cup syrup. Saute celery in butter or margarine until tender. Add bread cubes, remaining 1/4 teaspoon salt, fruit cocktail, prunes, almonds and reserved fruit cocktail syrup; mix carefully.

Fill neck and body cavities loosely with stuffing mixture. Skewer neck skin to back. Cover opening of body cavity with aluminum foil; tie legs together loosely. Place duckling on rack in roasting pan. Bake in slow oven (350 degrees) until drumstick meat is tender, 45 minutes per pound. Yield: 4 servings.

DUCKLING BREASTS

2 tablespoons unsalted butter
4 duckling breast halves (about 1/2-pound each), trimmed of fat (skin off)
1/2 cup madeira or dry sherry
1 cup whipping cream
Salt and pepper to taste (optional)
4 Parsley sprigs for garnish

In large skillet, melt butter over medium heat. Add duck breasts and saute 2 minutes on each side. Reduce heat to low. Cover and cook about 4 minutes longer. Transfer breasts to serving platter. Cover lightly with foil and keep warm in 300-degree oven while finishing sauce.

Add madeira to skillet. Over high heat, deglaze pan by cooking 1 minute, stirring with wooden spoon to scrape up any particles stuck to bottom. Add cream and continue to cook over high heatm stirring occassionally, until sauce is reduced by 1/2 and coats back of spoon. Taste and season with salt and pepper, if desired.

Press breasts with finger for doneness. Finger should meet some resistance when pressed into breasts. Season with salt and pepper, if desired. Divide sauce over breast. Garnish each breast with parsley sprig.

MARINATED DUCKLING TERRIYAKI

1 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup soy sauce
1/4 cup cider vinegar
1 cup honey
2 teaspoons ground ginger
2 garlic salt
4 pounds duckling boneless breast

Combine first 6 ingredients; pour into shallow dish. Add meat, turning to coat. Cover and marinate 24 hours, turning occasionally. Remove meat from marinade. Bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until tender.

Food labels given cluses to taste. For example, a grape jelly that has "grape juice" listed first ont its label will have more grape flavor than one that lists "corn syrup" first.

An average, 14 cubic-foot, frost-free refrigerator costs approximately $11.63 per month to operate at today's electricity prices; a non-frost free refrigerator costs $7.13 to operate.
