Reagan Gave NSC 'Too Much Leeway'

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan "did not seem to be aware" of the way his arms-to-Iran policy was implemented nor of "the full consequences" of that policy, the Tower commission said today in a report harshly critical of the leeway Reagan gave his National Security Council.

The president's handpicked investigators bluntly challenged Reagan's off-stated explanation for his policy, saying that the Iran initiative became almost from the outset "a series of arms-for-hostages deals."

As such, "they could not help but create an incentive for further hostage taking," threaten to upset the military balance of the Iran-Iraq war and "rewarded a regime that clearly supported terrorism and hostage taking."

An hour after receiving the report for the first time, the president introduced the panel to a news conference and announced he would make a nationally televised speech next week.

"I will do whatever is necessary to enact the proper reforms and to meet the challenges ahead," Reagan said.

The president refused to answer reporters' questions about the future of embattled White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan before leaving the room. But he did repeat that he has worked to make sure the facts of the Iran-Contra controversy become known to the public, and in that, the Tower Commission agreed.

"The board is convinced that the president does indeed want the full story to be told."

The panel concluded that, "if but one of the major policy mistakes we examined had been avoided, the nation's history would bear one less scar, one less embarrassment, one less opportunity for opponents to reverse the principles this nation seeks to preserve and advance in the world."

The panel said Reagan himself was apparently motivated, according to notes and diary entries, by a strong and compassionate desire to see the American hostages released from captivity in Lebanon.

Even so, the report said, "This sad history is powerful evidence of why the United States should never have become involved in the arms transfers," the report said.

The commission spread the blame around to the president and many of

Panel Says President 'Preoccupied' With Hostages

Three Groups Supplied Contras Banned Arms

By BENJAMIN WEISER and JOE PICHIRALLO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Three distinct and competing groups supplied millions of dollars in weapons to the Nicaraguan contras after Congress banned the U.S. government in October 1984 from providing arms directly, according to documents, contra officials and brokers involved in the transactions.

Two of the groups providing arms had direct ties to Lt. Col. Oliver L. North, the National Security Council staff aide fired Nov. 25 for his role in the Iran arms sales-contras aid affair.

One rebel source described North's intervention as critical in making certain that the weapons reached the contras after they were shipped from Europe.

Retired Army Maj. Gen. John K. Singlaub was the principal figure in one of the three channels through which arms flowed to the contras. While he was publicly raising money to clothe and feed the contras, he was trying to arrange arms shipments to them behind the scenes. In an interview, Singlaub said he completed one $5 million shipment in 1985 — which has not been previously disclosed — before he was shoved aside by a competing group that portrayed itself as having an inside track with the contras.

A second channel included retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard V. Secord, who has been identified by Senate investigators as one of North's key lieutenants in keeping the contras alive during the congressional ban and in facilitating the arms shipments to Iran. Singlaub said he talked with Secord about their efforts to arm the contras, and they even compared prices.

The third group providing arms — the group that Singlaub said outmaneuvered him — was headed by Ronald J. Martin, a Miami arms broker whose long involvement in supplying arms to Central American countries is documented in court records. Martin's group had its own contacts in the Reagan administration that helped it establish a foothold in Honduras, where the contras received their weapons, according to two knowledgeable sources.

There is some evidence that arms also reached the contras through a fourth channel, at least in 1985, when brokers bought grenade launchers and rifles from Israel and shipped them to the contras, also through Honduras.

Much of what has been reported on contra arms deals has focused on individual shipments. This report, though still incomplete, is an attempt to provide a comprehensive account of how arms were provided to the contras after the congressional ban went into effect, cutting off a well-established arms supply network that was managed by the Central Intelligence Agency. It is based on documents and interviews in the United States, Europe and Central America.

The loss of aid opened up a potentially lucrative market, and the hodgepodge of people who make up the international arms trade — shippers, financiers, lawyers, brokers — rushed in to fill the vacuum. Those who cornered the market hid their involvement by setting up dummy corporations in Panama and elsewhere, sometimes relying on Swiss bank accounts and usually using shipping documents that showed the final destination of the arms as Honduras or Guatemala, not the contras.

The contras bought the weapons in 1985, dipping into $25 million in rebel-controlled funds that had been raised from private sources overseas, one contra source said. Unable to use all the weapons at once, the contras left the arms overseas and shipped them to Central America piecemeal during 1985 and 1986, according to this source and shipping documents.

After the money ran out — it was also used to ship the weapons and buy

Soviets Resume Nuclear Testing

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union today staged its first nuclear test in 19 months, exploding a device in Soviet Central Asia that ended the Kremlin's unilateral freeze on weapons testing started in August 1985.

Soviet officials said they were forced to resume testing for reasons of national security because the United States had refused Kremlin overtures to suspend its own weapons tests.

"The irresponsible policies of Washington made it necessary for Moscow to stop the effects of its test moratorium, and the historic opportunity to end testing once and for all was lost," Soviet army Maj. Gen. Gely Batenin told a news briefing in Moscow.

The official news agency Tass said in a two-paragraph report that the test was conducted at 8 a.m. Moscow time (midnight EST) and had a yield of less than 20 kilotons, the force of the U.S. atomic bomb dropped on Hiroshima in World War II.

It was conducted at the Soviet test site near Semipalatinsk in Soviet Kazakhstan, about 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow, "to check the results of research into the physics of a nuclear explosion," Tass said. It gave no further details.

Batenin called the Soviet explosion "a forced measure motivated by security concerns," and said his country did not plan to stage a series of tests to catch up with any possible decline in superpower parity.

"We do not plan to compete as to the frequency of nuclear tests with the United States," Batenin said. "We will proceed from the basis of the minimum number of nuclear tests required."

Ayden Council Names Dixon Citizen Of Year

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

AYDEN — Dr. J. Elliott Dixon, an Ayden physician, was named the Outstanding Citizen of the Year at the annual dinner meeting of the Ayden Council of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce Wednesday night.

State Transportation Secretary James Harrington delivered the keynote address, reviewing North Carolina's ongoing highway improvement program.

Dixon, a graduate of Duke and Michigan universities, this year observes his 25th anniversary of practicing medicine in Ayden.

Ed Skinner, winner of the 1985 citizen of the year award, presented the award to Dixon for 1986. "Elliott Dixon has been active for many years in community affairs," Skinner said. "He has consistently been a strong leader in all fields of community life, in its public and community life, and in working with and helping individuals."

Dixon praised the work of the chamber as a vital factor in Ayden's growth and economic well-being, and pledged his continued service to the community.

Other presentations included the 1986 annual report presented by Louise Moseley, outgoing chairman of the board; a brief message by Dr. Ned Craft, the 1987 chairman, and announcement of new board members.

In his speech, Harrington touched on a broad range of transportation achievements, needs and frustrations.

"Our most pressing and significant problem at this moment is that the House and Senate versions of the national highway bill are still delayed in disagreements," Harrington said. "Congress is still trying to pass last year's bill that expired Sept. 30. We have been running on what was left over in federal funds." He noted the House version is for considerably less funds than the Senate version.

Harrington says that unless the highway bill is signed soon and approved by the president within 30 days after passage, "April will be the last month we can continue on our present highway programs until action for additional funds are passed."

"Stated quite simply," Harrington said, "Congress must pass a highway bill that will provide at least $275 million a year for us to meet our commitment in highway construction."

Harrington touched on current and long-range plans already approved or on the state transportation drawing board, including the U.S. 264 bypass in Pitt County and work on N.C. 11 "to provide an access from this area to I-40. When completed, I-40 will be the window to the world through the port of Wilmington."

Villages Bombed

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (AP) — Afghan aircraft bombed two Pakistani villages today, killing at least 35 people and wrecking homes and businesses, government officials said.

The officials said eight Afghan aircraft attacked the Pakistani villages of Saidganj and Ghulam Mohammad, about 190 miles southwest of Islamabad and near the Afghan border.

The bombs flattened at least 100 shops and many houses, and killed a large number of cattle, the officials said. No other details on the attacks were immediately available.

The bombings, the worst such attacks in recent years, came on the second day of another round of U.N.-mediated talks in Geneva between Afghanistan and Pakistan.

Pitt Board Completes Hearings

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners, meeting at the Third Street School Wednesday night, has held the seventh and final hearing in a series to receive public comment on proposals to change the method used to elect members of the board.

And just as at the six previous hearings, the board heard the majority of the speakers support the election of six commissioners from districts, with no at-large representatives.

Mike Crowell, a Raleigh lawyer hired to help devise a new election method, told the 30 or more people attending the hearing that, under the proposed plan, six commissioners would be elected from districts by the voters in the districts and three would be elected by countywide vote.

At present the six board members are required to live in districts, but are voted on at-large.

Two of the new districts would be predominately black, "to increase the likelihood that minority candidates ... can be elected to the board," Crowell said.

He also said that the three at-large seats would be up for election at the same time to increase the chances that a black could fill one of those seats through one-shot voting.

The reason for the proposed at-large seats, Crowell said, is "so some members of the board would feel like they represent the entire county."

But 11 of the 13 speakers — including Nick Patrone, Judy Kornegay, Farney Moore, Alonzo Mills, David Hammond, William Myers, Steve Blades, David Ames, Ernest Brown, Ed Griffith and Pitt NAACP chapter president D.D. Garrett — voiced support for a six-district plan with no at-large seats.

Only Bob Griffin, speaking for the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce, and Artemis Kares, lent support for three at-large seats.

Site Choice Delayed

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Members of a Southeast Compact Commission committee say they need more than just one year to pick a suitable site for the region's third low-level nuclear waste dump. The commission's host state identification committee Wednesday rejected an appeal that it agree to make a recommendation for a third site within a year of the commission's next meeting March 26. That decision will make it difficult for compact commission representatives from North Carolina, picked for the second waste dump, to convince wary North Carolina legislators that the other seven states won't pull out of the compact, N.C. state Rep. George Miller Jr. said Wednesday. "What I'm telling you here today is a very practical lesson in dealing with the legislature," Miller told committee members. Threats of North Carolina pulling out of the compact are "no longer something that's just been talked about." Miller displayed a handful of House bills that he said could effectively

A two-day sailing and cruising instruction class will begin April 11-12, Saturday 10 a.m. to Sunday 4 p.m. Class will be conducted by Tilton Willcox at Sailcraft Marina, Oriental.

Basic sailing will also be taught April 16 to May 2 in Brewster 101.

For more information on any of the courses, contact the Division of Continuing Education or call 757-6143.

Remove North Carolina from the compact remove North Carolina from the compact if legislators become convinced that representatives of the other seven states — Virginia, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama and Mississippi — are not dealing in good faith. Miller insisted that the host state identification committee agree to make a recommendation for the next nuclear waste dump within a year. Committee members rejected his arguments but agreed to set a deadline for deciding on a recommendation after they hear from the compact commission's public participation committee and technical committee. "In all good conscience I can't make a decision that'll put this commission in jeopardy later," said Jim Setser of Georgia. "I can't just pick an arbitrary date just because we want to meet a timetable." "He has to do what he has to do for his state. They have to live up to their obligation," said Barbara Wrenn, a commission alternate and Virginia's deputy secretary of natural resources.

Twelve members are to be represented from each church in the Black Pastors Conference.

School Program

A black role model presentation was held recently at Third Street School in conjunction with Black History Month.

Five People Get Bravery Awards

RALEIGH (AP) — Five North Carolinians have been named recipients of the Governor's Award for Bravery and Heroism, which are given each year to civilians who risk their lives in an attempt to save another person.

The recipients, who were scheduled to receive their awards today, are Joyce Dewitt and her daughter, Teresa Williams, Tony Howard, John Hudson and the late Susan Carper.

On May 6, 1986, Ms. Dewitt and her daughter went into a burning house to save a 74-year-old wheelchair-bound woman. The two Kenansville women were driving to work when they noticed the house was on fire. A young child told them that his grandmother was trapped inside.

Ms. Dewitt and Ms. Williams entered the house from a back entrance and found Nora Summerlin lying on a bed. They were able to get Ms. Summerlin into her wheelchair and away from the house before the bedroom was engulfed in flames.

Garner, a former Marine from Garner, saved a 2-year-old child who accidentally knocked a car out of gear.

On June 30, 1986, Whitney Little's father left her buckled in her toddler seat while he went into a grocery store in Raleigh to run a quick errand. The child managed to free herself from the seat and knocked the car out of gear, sending it rolling down a hill into U.S. 401 traffic.

Howard began chasing the car and reached it in time to apply the brakes, just as the vehicle hit another car. Howard and Whitney Little suffered only scrapes and bruises, and Howard was able to cradle the child in his arms during the impact of the collision.

Hudson, of Bell's Island, is credited with saving a woman whose car flipped over into the icy waters of Coinjock Bay.

On Feb. 27, 1986, Hudson was driving behind Hazel Lohman's car near Bill's Island when her vehicle ran off the road and overturned. Hudson dove into the water to free Ms. Lohman, and reached her on the third attempt. Using his hand to break the glass, he freed her from the vehicle and administered cardiopulmonary resuscitation until the rescue squad arrived.

Hudson sustained cuts on his hands and arms from breaking the glass. Mrs. Lohman died two days later.

Susan Carper, of Wilmington, was driving to Raleigh on the night of Jan. 24, 1986, with two of her children to attend at Commander's Conference of the North Carolina National Guard with her husband when she came upon an automobile accident near Benson.

Mrs. Carper, a registered nurse, stopped to help the accident victim. While tending to injuries, both Mrs. Carper and the accident victim were hit by an oncoming car and killed instantly.

Tower Report

the most senior officials in his administration:

—Reagan was portrayed as being unaware of the way in which his policy was carried out, and "at no time did he insist upon accountability and performance review."

—White House Chief of Staff Donald Regan — widely rumored to be leaving his post in a few days — "must bear primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House when" there was public disclosure of the secret arms sales.

—Former National Security Director John Poindexter "failed grievously" for failing to investigate the apparent funneling of funds to the Contras or bring it to Reagan's attention.

—Former CIA Director William Casey "shared a similar responsibility."

—As for Secretary of State George Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, they "distanced themselves from the march of events."

All in all, the investigators concluded, the National Security Council-run operation that provided arms to Iran "was a very unprofessional operation."

The inch-thick report, given to Reagan and reporters simultaneously at mid-morning, said:

"By his own account, as evidenced in his diary and notes, and as conveyed to the board by his principal advisers, President Reagan was deeply committed to securing the release of the hostages.

"It was this intense compassion for the hostages that appeared to motivate his steadfast support of the Iran initiative, even in the face of opposition from his secretaries of State and Defense," the report said.

Reagan, however, has consistently denied that concern for the hostages was his chief motivation for selling arms to Iran. In a speech to the nation Nov. 13, he said, "The United States has not made concessions to those who hold our people captive in Lebanon. And we will not. The United States has not swapped boatloads or plane-loads of American weapons for the return of American hostages. And we will not."

The panel's report afforded the most complete account so far of the crisis triggered by public word of the arms sale and the diversion of proceeds to support the Nicaraguan Contra rebels.

The man held most responsible for the two operations, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, came in for tough scrutiny by the commission, led by former Sen. John Tower and including former National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft and former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie.

In the harshest criticism yet of the president's handling of foreign policy and his own National Security Council and White House staff, the three-member board said that Reagan "appears to have proceeded with a concept of the initiative that was not accurately reflected in the reality of the operation."

"The president did not seem to be aware of the way in which the operation was implemented and the full consequences of U.S. participation."

While offering a lengthy description of the arms sale and profits diversion, the report said the whole affair "has been an in some respects still is an enigma. ... The whole matter cannot be fully explained."

The panel concluded that Regan — who is expected to resign under pressure within days — "must bear primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House" when the Iran initiative was disclosed.

The report said that the strong-willed Regan exerted more personal control over the White House staff than any other chief of staff has in recent memory and "should have insisted that an orderly process be observed."

The panel also concluded that Poindexter, the president's national security adviser and North's boss until his resignation last November, "failed grievously on the matter of Contra diversion."

It said the evidence indicates that Poindexter knew a diversion of funds to the Contras had occurred but "apparently failed to appreciate or ignore the serious legal and political risks presented."

"His clear obligation was either to investigate the matter or take it to the president or both. He did neither."

Poindexter tried to exclude members of his National Security Council staff from knowing about the Iran deal and actively misled Shultz "on one or more occasions," the report added.

The board said it "found indications" that North "was involved in an effort, over time, to conceal or withhold important information." North was fired over the Iran episode.

A chronology of events written by North was full of inaccuracies, the report said, lending evidence "to the proposition that Lt. Col. North, either on his own or at the behest of others, actively sought to conceal important information."

While saying it could not confirm that North had destroyed any documents, the report said it was concerned that some notes appeared to be missing.

The commission noted that Poindexter was the official notetaker in some key meetings, "yet no notes for the meetings can be found."

It added that Casey "shared a similar responsibility" with Poindexter to inform the president about the dimensions of the Iran affair. Casey had received information about the diversion almost a month before the story broke but did not raise the subject with the president, the report added.

Appointed by Reagan 90 days ago and lacking subpoena power or an opportunity to question North or Poindexter, the Tower board was unable to trace the chain of money that Attorney General Edwin Meese III has said was diverted to the Contras.

In two meetings with the board, Reagan made conflicting statements about when he authorized the first shipment of U.S. weapons to Iran, according to published reports. Current and former White House aides have disputed each other on when Reagan approved the transaction.

An administration source said a letter Reagan sent the board last week offered yet a third version — that he simply had no recollection of when he approved the shipment and that he may have allowed himself to be influenced by the recollection of others.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said on Wednesday that Reagan will analyze the Tower report over the weekend "with an eye toward what he wants to say next week and what directions he might want to give in terms of making changes and following the recommendations."

Six Argentine Admirals Surrender To Face Charges Of Rights Abuse

By WILLIAM D. MONTALBANO

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — After frantic maneuvering that tested the strength of Argentina's civilian government, six recalcitrant admirals surrendered to a federal court Wednesday to face charges of human rights abuses.

"It was an arm wrestle between justice and the past," said federal prosecutor Julio Strassera after the six retired officers were brought to the court Wednesday night.

The navy, which furiously opposes human rights proceedings, said the admirals went voluntarily, but the court locked them up for the night as prisoners after ordering their arrest earlier in the day when they failed to appear as scheduled.

The navy's corps of admirals met in continuous session Wednesday before agreeing to acknowledge the arrest order issued by the court and seconded by the civilian minister of defense.

In a telegram to all units Wednesday night, navy commander Ramon Arosa acknowledged "the extreme gravity" of the situation triggered by charges against navy officers but said the navy acknowledges civilian juridical forms "as the only way to justice and the constitution."

The eight officers are accused of crimes committed at a navy mechanics' school here that became Argentina's most infamous clandestine center for torture and murder.

They are the first of some 150 military officers scheduled to be tried in a final round of accounting for abuses during military repression of Marxist guerrillas between 1976-80, a repression that turned into an epidemic of state terrorism.

The six-judge federal appeals court acted after the officers ignored summonses to appear for testimony Wednesday morning, instead sending lawyers who asked for a postponement.

The court, the same one which has convicted other ranking officers, including two former presidents, on human rights charges, declared the eight in contempt, ordering federal police to arrest them.

In all, 18 officers and one petty officer stationed at the mechanics' school during the "dirty war" had been accused of abuses committed there. A controversial deadline for filing of human rights charges expired at midnight Sunday.

Pentagon Says Japanese Building Military Strength

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union, pursuing a massive military buildup in the Pacific, faces an expanding and sophisticated deterrent in the form of the Japanese military, says a Pentagon official.

The idea that "Japan is enjoying a free ride in defense" from the United States has become inaccurate, Assistant Defense Secretary Richard L. Armitage told a Congressional panel Wednesday.

Under current plans, Japan's defense force by 1990 will have 200 F-15 and 100-F-4 jets, "more aircraft than the U.S. Air Force has in Japan, Korea and the Philippines combined, and about as many tactical aircraft as we have defending the continental United States," Armitage testified to the House Asia-Pacific subcommittee.

The Japanese Navy, known officially as the Maritime Self-Defense Force, expects to have 60 destroyers and 100 P-3-C antisubmarine planes, "nearly three and five times, respectively, as many as in the entire U.S. 7th (Pacific) fleet," he said.

"This increasingly sophisticated Japanese air defense and antisubmarine self-defense network, coupled with a credible U.S. nuclear umbrella, severely complicates Soviet military adventurism in the Pacific," Armitage added. "Forced to give priority to its East European and China border fronts, the Soviets could decide to stay out of the Pacific...."

Japanese military buildup has been slow since World War II, partly because of concern from its neighbors in the Pacific, particularly the Philippines under ex-President Ferdinand E. Marcos, that it never again become an aggressor power.

Statements that Japan has gone too far or that the United States has pushed the buildup too hard "are as inaccurate as allegations that Japan is enjoying a free ride in defense," Armitage said.

Japanese air and naval forces, plus 13 ground divisions, "are on station 365 days a year, paid for by Japanese taxpayers, along a 1,000-mile (1,600km) Japanese territorial barrier" against the Soviets, said Armitage.

Even though it has the world's seventh largest military budget, "Japan is only acquiring the ... minimal self-defense capability" under goals set in 1981, he said.

Armitage called the buildup "a success story" aided by the United States using "quiet diplomacy rather than publicly criticizing Japan" for military dependence on America.

The Japanese military budget of slightly more than 1 percent of gross national product is small for such a wealthy country, he said, but neither the Japanese people nor the Asian countries Japan occupied in World War II — now its trading partners — "desire to see Japan assume military superpower status."

Armitage asked the subcommittee to recognize that under Japan's concept of comprehensive security, it "has doubled and redoubled its overseas economic assistance ... pledged another redoubling within a seven-year period and begun to direct more of its assistance to strategically important countries both inside and outside of Asia."

Soviets

the exact type of device that was detonated but said it was not a nuclear warhead. He called the blast "just a test explosion for fundamental research."

In Geneva, the chief Soviet delegate to the Geneva Conference on Disarmament, Yuri Nazarkin, said: "We wish to reaffirm that if the United States halts its nuclear testing, the Soviet Union will be prepared to halt on a reciprocal basis the implementation of its own program of nuclear testing any day or month."

In Washington, State Department spokeswoman Deborah Cabin said she had not heard about the Soviet test and had no comment.

The Kremlin had announced earlier this year that it was ending its moratorium, begun on Aug. 6, 1985 — the 40th anniversary of the bombing of Hiroshima.

The freeze became a centerpiece of Soviet foreign policy, and Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev and other officials repeatedly called on Washington to make the test ban a mutual one as a first step toward nuclear weapons reductions.

However, Washington claimed the Soviets were ahead of the United States in their test program, and said continued U.S. testing was needed to ensure the reliability of existing weapons and modernize the nation's nuclear arsenal.

American officials also said that moratoriums cannot be reliably verified.

The Soviet Union extended the test freeze four times, most recently until Jan. 1. However, the Kremlin said this year it would end its freeze after the first American test of 1987. The United States conducted two tests this month.

In an attempt to demonstrate that a test halt could be monitored, the U.S. Natural Resources Defense Council and Soviet Academy of Sciences agreed in June 1986 to install seismic equipment at three spots near the Semipalatinsk testing ground, about 1,700 miles southeast of Moscow.

On Saturday, the Soviet Union told the American monitors that a test was imminent and they should shut off their equipment.

A lawyer for the group, Jacob Scherr, said the Soviets had made it clear from the start that they would be allowed only to monitor the moratorium and not to collect data on an actual test.

The rapid Tass announcement of the test was unusual and appeared intended to underscore the Kremlin's contention that continued American testing had forced the resumption of Soviet tests for reasons of national security.

A spokesman at Swedish government research institute Foersvarets Forskningsanstalt, Nils-Olov Bergkvist, said the last recorded test in the Soviet Union was made July 25, 1985.

airplanes, helicopters, uniforms, medicines and food — the contras relied on a secret air resupply mission run by former U.S. military officers. Members of the resupply mission said Secord directed the operation with the help of two longtime colleagues experienced in covert work.

If the arms shipments were handled privately and outside the United States, they would not violate U.S. law. Several sources familiar with the transactions said their legality depended on where the contras got the money to pay for the weapons, and on whether North's assistance to the contras violated the congressional ban.

To get the arms shipments, the contras needed the cooperation of the Honduran military, which set itself up as a conduit for deliveries when the CIA was legally running the arms network and then maintained control after the ban went into effect, according to current and former Honduran military officers.

Although the Honduran government does not officially acknowledge the presence of fixed contra bases in its country, many of the shipments went into the Honduran port of Puerto Cortes, where they were unloaded under the eyes of the military.

Ozone Crisis

A deepening involvement of Congress in environmentalists' campaign against continued use of chlorofluorocarbons (CFCs) would be the biggest gun yet brought to bear against those industrialized countries who refuse to heed appeals or warnings.

A number of scientists determined in the mid-1970s that releasing quantities of CFCs into the atmosphere damaged a protective layer of ozone which filters out ultraviolet rays from the sun.

Japan and industrialized countries of Europe (excepting Sweden) don't take the warnings seriously despite the United States having banned the most conspicuous use of CFCs, which are also used as coolants in refrigerators and air conditioners and are found in the foam containers for fast-food hamburgers and are used in production of computer chips. Time may be running out on remedial efforts.

Some scientists estimate Earth's ozone layer has decreased up to 40 percent in the last seven years and without international restraint CFC emissions could grow up to five percent a year.

Early warnings by scientists in the 1970s caused Congress to ban CFCs as propellants in aerosol cans. Canada and Sweden followed suit.

Commercial ozone can be made, but that layer 15 miles above earth is the real blessing. It contains only about six parts of ozone per million parts of air, but it does the job.

The laws of nature built the protective screen over eons of time. That ozone was created by very high energy radiation from the sun striking earth's oxygen, some of which is converted into ozone. Every bolt of lightning also creates ozone. Even so, with the silent assist of uncountable years, that screen was made dangerously frail in mere decades.

One report prepared for the Environmental Protection Agency suggests the EPA might review its priorities; that the perceived threat from CFCs may outweigh that of hazardous waste.

Life on our planet is made possible by a spectrum of small but sensitive checks and balances. Those checks and balances require safeguarding.

Seat Belt Issue One Of Public Safety

RALEIGH — The General Assembly must once again face an emotional issue that raises the conflict between an individual's right to make his own decisions and the government's duty to promote the general welfare.

The state's mandatory seat belt usage law, enacted by the 1985 General Assembly, is under attack. A citizen's group says the law should be repealed, or at the very least, stripped of its $25 fine for noncompliance.

Opponents of the law say it is an individual's right to decide whether or not to wear a seat belt. That individual may feel safer without a belt, opponents say. Supporters of the law say that seat belt usage saves lives and reduces injuries in car accidents, and that the demonstration of that fact obliges the state to mandate the use of seat belts.

When carried to their logical conclusions, both lines of thinking carry consequences far beyond what the supporters of either position might be willing to accept.

Take, for example, the reasoning of seat belt opponents. The government has no right, they say, to protect us from ourselves. If our actions will only harm ourselves, this line of reasoning goes, the government should not impede those actions.

That is the same argument the proponents of legal marijuana have been making for years. Smoking a little pot doesn't hurt anyone but the smoker, they've been saying.

The proponents of gambling, prostitution, glue-sniffing and other "victimless crimes," all say the same thing. "It's our money, or its our bodies, that are involved, so the government should leave us alone."

Several legislators queried on this point added that under this type of governmental philosophy, the state would have no right to commit mental patients to a hospital against their will, to make children go to school against their will. The state wouldn't even be able to enforce traffic laws against speeding or running red lights if it could be shown that there was no one else on the road, they said.

The state couldn't order people to evacuate the coast during a hurricane, and the State Department couldn't order American citizens out of places like Beirut and Libya.

But if the extremes of the individual rights philosophy sound scary, so do the extremes of the argument that underpins the seat belt law, that is, that the government has a right to protect us from ourselves.

Carry this logic to an extreme and smoking gets banned, because we all know that smoking isn't good for us.

At the same time, the feds could reinstate prohibition because drinking is harmful to our health.

Red meat is bad for us, we hear, and so are pork sausages. Let's ban hamburgers and sausage biscuits. Soybean meal is good for us, so let's mandate a soy cake a day for everyone.

This column has now reached the preposterous, which is just the point, because framing this issue as one of profound philosophical importance is preposterous. The issue is simply one of public safety and whether the state has the right to write the rules that we all must follow while we travel the public roadways.

That issue was decided a long time ago. In 1987, the debate should center solely on the question of public safety: Does the seat belt law improve public safety, harm it, or have no influence?

Handicap

Strong pressures are underway in Washington to evade curbs of the Anti-Ballistic Missile treaty of 1972 with the Soviet Union. It's being done to clear the tracks for the highly-touted "Star Wars" project. Advocates of evasion want to "redefine" or re-interpret certain terms they regard as restrictive on development and application of SDI which basically is just another ABM system.

Only one senior member of the U.S. team that negotiated the ABM treaty has publicly defended the Reagan Administration's position. He's now a member of the Reagan team, which tells us something.

The amazing thing about the whole episode is increasing doubts whether the Soviets ever agreed to the ban the U.S. was seeking to install on development, testing and deployment of ABM systems. If our negotiators of 15 years ago did not know what they were negotiating it would certainly create doubts of another kind. But the question was raised only when an excuse was necessary for "Star Wars".

The image of trustworthiness and dependability of Washington's officialdom was tarnished by events surrounding the Iran-Contra affair. That apparently was not enough. Treaty-abrogation was too tempting to be concerned over U.S. credibility.

Saying "no" to a pact willingly entered into by our country in 1972 would handicap any desirable agreement during the remaining years of the Reagan term and possibly for years to follow. Not only would Moscow avoid any commitments but so too might other governments. We couldn't blame them.

Senator Sam Nunn (D-Ga.), chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, has warned the president that unilateral "re-interpretation" of the treaty as ratified by the Senate would provoke a Constitutional confrontation of "profound dimension".

We hope the White House was listening.

A White House Conversation

— Art Buchwald —

There's trouble at the White House, and it has to do with communication. I have in my hand the transcript of a phone conversation between Nancy Reagan and Don Regan.

Nancy: Don, can we talk?
Don: I told you never to call me at the office. What is it this time?

Nancy: I want to know why you don't send me flowers any more.

Don: Because I'm trying to run the White House and you keep butting in with some crazy idea about the president to make my life miserable.

Nancy: I don't believe I'm out of line by objecting to you sending Ronnie down the Snake River on a raft two weeks after his prostate operation.

Don: The president has a lot of admirers along the Snake River.

Nancy: You don't care about Ron. All you're trying to do is make an abusive name for yourself.

Don: If you keep talking like that I'm going to put you on HOLD.

Nancy: If you put me on HOLD I'll sic my dog on you.

Don: Nancy, you have to stay out of the Oval Office. Women just don't belong there.

Nancy: Listen, worm, we had a very nice White House until you took over as chief of staff. Why don't you pack your bags and take the next $39 United flight to Syracuse?

Don: Stick to baking birthday cakes and leave the business of running the country to me.

Nancy: Why don't you stuff your Touchtone in your ear?

Don: That does it. Now I am going to hang up on you.

Nancy: You wouldn't dare hang up on the First Lady. If you did you'd wind up as our next ambassador to Iran.

Don: The president has assured me my job with him is safe. After the Tower report he needs me more than ever.

Nancy: Why does the president need you?

Don: Because I'm the only one who tells him what he said and why he said it.

Nancy: Ronnie doesn't have to know (ital) anything (unital). All he has to do is be himself.

Don: Are you finished? I have work to do to save the country from the horrible mess we got it into.

Nancy: I want to know why you attacked me for supporting the president's new communications chief because he was a cub Nazi when he was 10 years old.

Don: I didn't attack you — I attacked the East Wing of the White House where you work. All I said was the East Wing was stupid, incompetent and interfered in West Wing business.

Nancy: Do you know what I suspect, Donald Regan? You're trying to get me to resign as the First Lady so you can have Ronnie all to yourself.

Don: It's not true. I know the president respects you very much and it's my job to make sure he never has to choose between us. In the meantime I think I'll hang up on you.

Nancy: I don't you dare hang up on me. I was talking to Ronnie last night and we thought it would be nice if you took a private office next to Michael Deaver's. In that way you'd still be near to us and at the same time be out of our hair.

Don: Nancy, may I ask you personal question? Why are you calling me?

Nancy: It's no mystery the telephone company wants us all to reach out and touch someone we love.

— Elisha Douglas — Strength For Today

One of the most remarkable preachers of early Methodism was converted at a meeting which he attended for the sole purpose of breaking it up. He went with a crowd of rowdies to stone John Wesley and run him out of town. But the Spirit of God laid hold on him and to the end of his life he counted it his greatest glory to serve in the ministry of that gospel at which he had scoffed.

The sword of the Spirit is a relentless weapon and we steel our hearts against it to our own peril. That man is indeed a fool who knows that God is speaking to him and yet persists in his sin.

Happy is the man who can turn from evil ways while there is yet time. Of the ruffians who went to stone John Wesley, there was one who had not closed his heart to God, even though he appeared to have done so. The King of Glory went into the heart and made it secure and happy in his service.

Crusaders And Coffin Nails

— James Kilpatrick —

WASHINGTON — Like the old Indian chiefs of his native Oklahoma, Congressman Mike Synar is back on the warpath again. He has his tomahawk poised against cigarette advertising, and he has reintroduced a bill to scalp the tobacco industry. In the process he would do violence to the principle of a free press.

Cigarettes historically have been a favorite target of reformers, busybodies, do-gooders, health nuts and Puritans. These are people who find their most gratifying pleasure in suppressing other people's pleasure, and lately their anti-nicotine crusade has taken on an almost virulent passion. Beverly Hills, by way of example, has adopted an ordinance to ban smoking in restaurants, even in segregated sections of restaurants, and the federal government has exiled employees who smoke to basement dungeons.

My own position, for the record, is decisively ambivalent. One has to agree with Rep. Jim Cooper of Tennessee when he says that to many people, "tobacco smoke is obnoxious; it's like body odor." Mike Pertshuk, a former firebrand at the Federal Trade Commission, is quite right in observing that "there are people who care passionately about having smoke blown in their faces." All the same, there is something to be said in behalf of the smoker who wants to smoke under circumstances that give minimal offense — or no offense at all — to others.

Synar's bill would prohibit "all newspaper and magazine advertisements, billboards, posters, signs, decals, matchbook advertising, and all other written or other material used for promoting the sale or consumption of tobacco products to consumers." He would make it unlawful for the Virginia Slims people to sponsor a tennis tournament. Free samples would be forbidden. He seems to have overlooked skywriting, but perhaps a timely amendment will cure that omission.

I have never understood how newspapers and magazines constitutionally can be forbidden to accept advertising for legal products. The Supreme Court's occasional pronouncements to this effect are remarkably unconvincing. The Constitution says flatly that Congress shall make no law abridging freedom of the press. The language makes no distinction between commercial and non-commercial material.

Nevertheless, in 1980 Justice Powell peered into the penumbra of the First Amendment and there he found a four-part test for restrictions on advertising. A majority of the court held that government may prohibit advertising that is misleading or fraudulent, or promotes an unlawful activity. Advertising may be restricted only if the government's interest is "substantial." The restrictions must directly advance the government's interest. Finally, restrictions must be "no more extensive than necessary to serve that interest."

Suppose Synar's bill is passed. Given the mounting pressure, it may indeed pass. We then will have congressional precedent for banning advertisements of other legal products. Alcohol causes terrible damage to health. Why not ban advertising of whiskey, wine and beer? Obesity leads to heart attacks. Why not ban the advertisement of fattening foods? Many persons regard gambling as a greater curse than nicotine. It would make sense, under Synar's solicitous reasoning, to forbid advertising of legal casinos and pari-mutuel tracks.

The Puritanical streak runs a long way back in American law. A century ago, under the goading of Anthony Comstock, Congress adopted a sheaf of postal regulations on the mailing of "obscene" matter; many of these laws are still on the books. You cannot lawfully mail a gift bottle of scotch to a friend. The bottle might find some pleasure in it. Postal regulations prohibit newspaper advertising of the most innocent bingo games at a parish hall.

Somebody up there in Congress, or in the American Medical Association, or in Ralph Nader's outfits, always is aching, yearning, striving, slaving to enact laws that will make us be good. Why won't they leave us alone to be our petty little selves?

Living With Far Right Is Living With 'Politics Of Frustration'

Analysis

WASHINGTON — After spending three days at the Conservative Political Action Conference here last week, I am ready for a visit to a detoxification center.

One easily forgets how crazed the Far Right is until spending time at their major gathering of the year. At one table at the Washington Hilton, visitors learned how AIDS was a plague to get pervers. In another corner, a group held court, demanding that Secretary of State George Shultz conduct a full-scale investigation into the dozens of American MIAs who are believed to be in Hanoi.

Richard Viguier, the conservative direct-mail wizard characterizes the Far Right coalition as a minority of country-club Republicans, businessmen who resent government regulations, born-again Christians upset by sexual overtones on T.V. and parents opposed to busing and abortion proponents. The Rev. Jerry Falwell offers a more self-serving definition. He claims the Far Right consists of "citizens who are pro-family, pro-moral, pro-life and pro-visitors learned how AIDS was a plague to get pervers. In another corner, a group held court, demanding that Secretary of State George Shultz conduct a full-scale investigation into the dozens of American MIAs who are believed to be in Hanoi.

On the one hand, it was irksome to listen to 1,200 predominantly white, male activists for 30 hours and not hear diddly about human rights, only a lot of peculiar squabble about who among us is more pure. Equally painful was observing many of the prospective 1988 Republican presidential contenders, excluding Vice President Bush, who chose not to jump through the hoops for the Far Right. Indeed, there was practically nothing that Sen. Robert Dole (R-Kan.) or Gen. Alexander Haig or former governor Pete du Pont (R-Del.) or Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.) would not say to elicit the crowd's encouragement.

Kemp stole the attendees' hearts by demanding Shultz's resignation. But that didn't stop the others from offering similarly idiotic war cries. Haig, for example, said he'd never talk to the communist-tainted African National Congress (ANC).

Though some candidates may have blushed in private after groveling for the Far Rights' support, it has become a necessary evil in order to lure big money and foot soldiers for the Republican presidential primary season.

One would think the Far Right would be content with Ronald Reagan in the White House. But that's hardly the case. A number of conservative organizations have encountered resistance in fund-raising because many longtime contributors have decided the cause has essentially triumphed.

However, the true believers know their movement has failed to bring ideological purity to the White House. The Reagan administration may have given lip service to school prayer and banning abortions, but these objectives are not closer to reality in 1987 than they were when Ronald Reagan was elected president in 1980. Few view Mr. Reagan as anything more than a ceremonial leader for their causes. Others accept the half-loaf outcome of the Reagan presidency as a predictable outgrowth of practical politics. Nevertheless, the expectations and frustrations of the movement linger.

"When we have a secretary of state who invites a communist murderer to Washington to talk diplomacy, that stinks," said L. Brent Bozell III, president of the National Conservative Political Action Committee, in an interview with the Washington Post. "When we have a secretary of health and human services who wants to give more funds to Planned Parenthood for their murder clinics, that stinks. When we have a surgeon general who wants to introduce condoms into every classroom, that stinks."

There is no pleasing Far Right activists, who seem to get hysterical about every presidential appointment. There was, for example, conversation at the conference about Nancy Riske, who will soon succeed Al King as secretary of the Cabinet. She is viewed as a feminist and a good friend of that ardent liberal, First Daughter Maureen Reagan.

Of course, the Far Right blames the media for blocking its path in converting the nation into right-to-life, right-to-bear arms, pro-Contra, Strategic-Defense-Initiative advocates. The "Big Media," after all, are responsible for everything that goes sour, including the weather. Everyone knows the "Big Media" report alleged atrocities by U.S. allies far more frequently than those of its enemies. One conference participant told media guest Sam Donaldson, of ABC News, that he didn't deserve to be an American citizen.

Surely this movement will never succeed because of its inherent characteristics. It will just have to be tolerated. Daniel Bell, the noted sociologist, summed up the Far Right's problems after Sen. Barry Goldwater captured the Republican presidential nomination in 1964: "The politics of the radical right is the politics of frustration — the sour impotence of those who find themselves unable to understand, let alone command, the complex mass society that is the policy today"

Shedding Light

Someday a potential candidate for president will decide not to run for the White House and, when others demand to know why, will simply say, "Because I don't want to."

Such a statement would not seem to befit a national political leader, or to satisfy those who wanted the man to run. But New York Gov. Mario Cuomo may have come close to it the other day when he made his "surprise" announcement that he will not be a candidate for president in 1988.

In a prepared statement read during a radio talk show, Cuomo said that he was not running because Democrats have other qualified candidates and that he can continue to do the things he wants to do as governor of New York. Asked to elaborate on his decision, Cuomo said, "It's very, very difficult to elaborate on it."

There are several elements of Cuomo's decision and announcement that bear examining, because decisions of people not to run for president often have a tremendous bearing on the ultimate outcome.

First there is the element of "surprise." Were people surprised because Cuomo decided not to become a candidate? There already were clear signs that he would not run.

Was the surprise caused by the nature of his announcement, coming on a radio talk show rather than at a press conference? The use of the radio format should not have been that surprising. Cuomo is fond of communicating with his constituents through that medium.

Or was the timing a surprise because he had not announced in advance that he would make the announcement? Candidates preparing to announce their plans to run often engage in an elaborate pre-announcement buildup to heighten the suspense and attract attention. But it seems natural for someone who has decided not to run to want to get it over with quickly and simply.

Walter F. Mondale decided not to run in 1976 because he lacked "fire in the belly" and did not want to spend up to two years living in Holiday Inns. Certainly his decision was more elaborate than that, but the fire-in-the-belly shorthand finally was accepted. With it, however, went the unspoken conclusion by some that Mondale just didn't have the courage to run, or perhaps that he did not have enough ambition.

Leading up to the 1984 campaign, Mondale had to explain why he did not have fire in the belly in 1975, but did in 1983.

There is particular irony in the distress over Cuomo's reluctance to elaborate on his decision, since he has perhaps gone to greater lengths than any other major American officeholder in explaining himself in public.

Following election to his first term, Cuomo published a diary of his campaign that described in great and fascinating detail virtually every decision that he made, beginning with the decision to run for governor. Rarely does the public ever get such insight into the thinking and emotions of a public official.

Ronald Reagan was the governor of California for eight years, ran four times for president and now has served more than six years as Chief Executive. Yet he has never explained in even the simplest of terms why he ran for office, save for the silly statement that candidates don't decide to run, that the people make the decision for them.

Someday Cuomo may publish another book in which he describes in minute detail the process by which he decided not to run for president in 1988. By then the issue may be a footnote in American political history. But Cuomo's explanation may help solve the relative mystery of what makes candidates run, or not run.

Martin Shuffles Cabinet In Major Realignment

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — In what aides call a move to boost efficiency, Gov. Jim Martin has shuffled his senior staff, reassigning two Cabinet members and forming a powerful troika to manage his administration. "I think the time has come when I need to reorganize myself and my offices," Martin said in a Wednesday staff meeting at which he announced the changes.

In a prepared statement, the Republican governor said that Phil Kirk, secretary of the Department of Human Resources the past two years, will become chief of staff. In that new position, Kirk will run the governor's office and act as liaison between Martin and state agencies headed by Cabinet secretaries.

Kirk's temporary replacement as Human Resources secretary will be Paul Kaye, director of the Division of Mental Health, Mental Retardation and Substance Abuse Services. Martin also announced that Grace Rohrer, secretary of the Department of Administration, will be shifted to a new Cabinet-level post of special assistant and director of policy and planning. The new administration secretary will be Jim Lofton, Martin's executive assistant.

Martin described the changes as part of a reorganization under which the management of his administration will be overseen by a three-man team including Kirk, Budget Director C.C. Cameron and Jim Trotter, whose title will change from executive assistant and special counsel to general counsel.

Administration officials said the moves were normal for the midway point in a governor's term, when many people quit or take new jobs and the governor decides on ways to make his administration operate better.

"The goal is to streamline the operations of the governor's office, to make things move more quickly and cleanly," Tim Pittman, Martin's press secretary, said.

Pittman denied that any major problems led to the shakeup. However, some GOP legislators said privately there were longstanding complaints that the governor's office lacked clear lines of authority and had problems communicating with lawmakers and other government agencies.

A Republican official, speaking on condition that he not be identified, said there also were fears that the governor's top staff lacked political savvy and had failed to prevent some politically costly moves — some involving the governor's schedule.

Kirk, a longtime GOP activist, held a top staff job in the administration of former Gov. Jim Holshouser and also ran former U.S. Rep. Jim Bryhill's Washington office before joining the Martin administration. "I would think that Phil Kirk brings some North Carolina political expertise to the governor's office," House Minority Leader Betsy Cochrane, R-Davie, said. "But it takes nothing away from the people who are there."

With Kirk leading the governor's staff, "it may very well be that political ramifications will bear more weight in decision making... with the campaign coming up," Ms. Cochrane said.

Martin's statement offered no explanation for Ms. Rohrer's removal as administration secretary. However, she recently enraged Democratic legislators by firing Ray DeBruhl as director of DOA's Building Section.

DeBruhl, a Democrat, was a key figure in negotiations between the Martin administration and legislative leaders over emergency legislation to ward off a federal takeover of the state prison system. "The timing of that (DeBruhl's dismissal) was awful," a GOP official said.

Pittman said Ms. Rohrer's reassignment was not a demotion. As special assistant and director of policy and planning, she will remain on the Cabinet and report directly to Martin, Pittman said.

She also will advise the governor on women's issues and be responsible for the state's Women in Economic Development program and the Council on the Status of Women.

Senate Minority Leader Larry Cobb, R-Mecklenburg, said he was "very pleased" with the changes. "For a long time there's been talk about having a chief of staff," Cobb said. "When you have divided responsibility, things can fall between the cracks."

Sen. Donald Kincaid, R-Caldwell, said he hoped the moves would improve communications between the governor and lawmakers of both parties.

"I've heard some Democrats rumbling and grumbling about the slow responses they've been getting," Kincaid said. "I think this will speed things up."

Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, a Democrat who is expected to challenge Martin's re-election next year, avoided substantive comment but said he was baffled by Kirk's reassignment.

The Department of Human Resources "is the biggest department of state government," Jordan said. "It seems to me that if Kirk is his best man, he ought to leave Kirk there."

Martin also announced that his legislative liaison, J. Ward Purrington, was being elevated to Cabinet-level status. He's also getting a new title: special assistant and director of legislative relations.

Kemp Plane Makes Stop

MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — A small plane carrying two congressmen and a U.S. Senator from Washington to a fund-raiser in South Carolina landed at Raleigh-Durham Airport after one of its two engines shut down.

There were conflicting reports whether the plane carrying Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., and Rep. Arthur Ravenel Jr., R-S.C., was scheduled to land or forced to land at Raleigh-Durham Wednesday night.

The three were traveling to a fund-raiser in Columbia for Henry McMaster, a Republican who ran unsuccessfully against Sen. Ernest Hollings last year. McMaster was also on the plane, along with Kemp staff member Bernie Merritt, according to John David Hoppe, a Kemp aide.

Bill Stallworth, finance director of McMaster, said the plane lost an engine and landed in Raleigh about 5:30 p.m. They rented another plane and took off for Columbia an hour later, Stallworth said.

Kemp, as he began his speech at a building at the South Carolina state fairgrounds said, "When I say I'm glad to be here, I really mean it."

"There were a lot of prayers said up there," Kemp told the crowd.

A spokesman for the RDU fire department said an aircraft made an emergency landing at the airport about 5:30 p.m., but he said he did not know who was on the plane. One engine on the plane had shut down, he said.

"One of the engines failed," Hoppe said. "How it clunked out or what, I don't think they are even aware. It was apparently serious enough that they did not want to continue with one engine."

But Charles Underwood, an FAA supervisor in the control tower at RDU, said the plane was scheduled to land at RDU.

The plane "was inbound to Raleigh and was scheduled to stop," he said. "The plane had a minor problem. It wasn't what you would call a forced landing."

LADDER CLIMBER — Roofer Ned Davis, working on his son's home in Morganton, found an unexpected companion in the son's dog, C.J. Davis said the dog watched him climb the ladder, then joined in — repeatedly going up and down the ladder with ease. (AP Laserphoto)

Crime Rate
HONG KONG (AP) — A visible police presence and closed circuit television have helped keep the crime rate down on the Hong Kong subway system, a police officer said.

A total of 221 crimes, most of them petty, were reported last year on the Hong Kong Mass Transit Railway, which carries about 1.5 million passengers a day, transit police district commander Jame Clements said. He said 207 crimes were reported the year before.

Grange Seeks New Study On Quota Lease-Transfer

RALEIGH (AP) — The North Carolina State Grange is pushing for a federal study on the economic impact of eliminating lease and transfer agreements in this year's flue-cured tobacco season, contending the leases are good for rural areas.

"It was our concern that with a lot of small allotments and the depressed situation in rural areas, this would be another blow to family farmers," Robert Caldwell, master of the Grange, said in an interview.

Under the federal tobacco program, allotments specify the amount of leaf farmers can grow to be eligible for price supports. Allotment holders until this season were allowed to lease their allotment to other growers.

But the practice drew fire from critics who said growers should use their own allotments or lose them. The federal leaf program this year requires that allotments be planted on farms to which they were issued, or the holder can give up his allotment by selling it.

Caldwell said leases and transfers allowed growers to consolidate allotments on one farm, establishing more efficient operations. He said many allotments are owned by elderly or retired people who count on leasing for income.

Acting on the Grange's request, Rep. Stephen Neal, a Democrat from Winston-Salem, Tuesday introduced legislation that would require a study committee to monitor the effects of doing away with lease and transfer arrangements.

But Rep. Charlie Rose, D-N.C., chairman of the House subcommittee on tobacco and peanuts, said there already has been such a study, as well as unsuccessful efforts to protect some low-income and elderly allotment holders.

"I'm not immediately impressed that we need to study it anymore," Rose said. "I think the problem with the study is that people who want leases and transfers to continue don't need a study — they need a change in the law. We tried to do that."

Rose said he attempted to amend farm legislation passed last year to authorize a two-year continuation of lease and transfer arrangements for allotment holders 55 and older and those who receive more than half their income from leasing. He said those amendments had been passed by the House, but were defeated in the Senate.

J.W. York, deputy director of the U.S. Department of Agriculture tobacco division, said previous studies did not justify keeping leases. He said the legislation approved in 1983 was designed to put quotas in the hands of producers and there was a lot of support for the change.

"The department has no plans for another study as of right now," York said.

Regular meetings of the city council are held at 7:30 p.m. on the second Thursday of each month. Meetings are held in the city council chambers, third floor, west wing of the municipal building, located at the corner of Fifth and Washington streets. Members of the public are urged to attend to express their views and observe city government in operation.

Democrats Unveil New Road Plan

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Democrats have filed a bill they say will go hand-in-hand with Gov. Jim Martin's plans to equalize secondary road funding across the state, but the Martin administration is still working on its own version.

Sen. Marc Basnight, D-Dare, one of five senators who co-sponsored a bill to let 42 counties share in $20 million from the highway fund, said the effort was partly in response to Martin's State of the State address.

"I don't know specifically what he meant, but I'm sure we can amend this bill to accommodate him," Basnight said.

"All we want to do is get as much money as the other counties get on a mile-per-capita basis," said Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, chief sponsor of the bill. He said counties with high road-building costs get fewer miles per state dollar.

Thomas agreed that the money would have to come at the expense of other programs, but added, "Out of that billion-dollar budget, we ought to be able to find $20 million."

Thomas admitted the equalization could be accomplished for $10 million, but added, "We don't want to ask for $10 million because that way we might get just $3 million. If we get $20 million, we'll have enough for two years."

Jim Sughrue, spokesman for the state Department of Transportation, said Martin and Transportation Secretary James Harrington are planning a "Fair Roads Act" to address the disparity in secondary road funding. However, he declined to give details of the plan.

"We'll let the governor announce that when he's ready to announce it," Sughrue said. "He will have all the information in hand to make his announcement soon, but when he makes it is up to him."

Ward Purrington, Martin's special assistant for legislative liaison, said the governor's plan "will not take anything out of the general fund," but said he was not familiar with the details.

Thomas' bill, co-sponsored by Sens. Charles Hippy, D-Haywood, Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, and Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, notes that under current law the amount of money a county receives for secondary roads is determined by the county's total road mileage.

Thomas said 37 of the counties in the bill have higher-than-average road building costs and that a few others from his district were added because "they believe the state figures are not entirely accurate."

Royall Questions Figures In Budget

RALEIGH (AP) — A state Senate leader has asked Gov. Jim Martin where he got the 1986-87 figures in the budget he has proposed for the next two years, saying the governor's numbers differ from what the State Auditor's Office says is being spent.

In a letter to Martin, state Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, the chairman of the Advisory Budget Commission, asked that Martin "eliminate differences between such figures in your budget preparation system and the state's accounting system."

"We need timely and accurate budget information immediately to avoid delays in the legislative appropriations process," the senator's letter said.

Royall's letter was hand-delivered to Martin Wednesday afternoon. Copies were distributed to reporters after Royall left his office, and he could not be reached for comment. Neither C.C. Cameron, Martin's budget director, nor Deputy Budget Director Marvin Dorman could be reached.

Legislative leaders have grumbled about what they call revisions in the format used by the budget office in compiling Martin's $19.6 billion plan.

IN THE STATE

Gateway Ruling

RALEIGH (AP) — Piedmont Airlines officials say they are delighted with an administrative law judge's recommendation that Piedmont be awarded flights to London from Charlotte, but officials for American Airlines — who wanted the service for Raleigh-Durham Airport — say they aren't giving up.

"We said all along that our case was stronger," Piedmont spokesman Don McGuire said Wednesday. "The judge's decision lends credence to what we've said."

Al Becker, a spokesman for American, said his company was disappointed and thought it was wrong.

"In our minds, this game is far from over," Becker said. He said American will outline its objections to Administrative Law Judge William Kane's recommendation in papers to be filed with the U.S. Department of Transportation March 11.

CP&L Cited

RALEIGH (AP) — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has cited Carolina Power & Light Co. for a security violation at the Shearon Harris Nuclear Power Plant.

WPTF radio reported that an NRC inspection last month found an interior area of the plant was not secured as well as it should have been. NRC security inspector Jerry Ennis would not say what was inside that area, saying only that it was "a vital area."

Unauthorized personnel could have entered the area, Ennis said.

NRC project branch chief David Verrelli said the NRC regional staff in Atlanta will make a recommendation within eight weeks on what punitive action should be taken against CP&L. That recommendation will go to commission officials in Washington.

Verrelli said the problem at the plant has been corrected.

Coliseum Probe

RALEIGH (AP) — The State Bureau of Investigation has been asked to probe possible conflicts of interest in the management of Reynolds Coliseum and the coliseum manager has been relieved of his duties pending an internal audit.

Manager Richard H. Farrell will continue to receive his salary of $31,300 and will work full-time with the auditors, Becky R. French, counsel for North Carolina State University, said Wednesday.

Wake County District Attorney C. Colon Willoughby Jr. had said Monday he would not get involved before NCSU's audit was finished, but he said Wednesday he had changed his mind and asked the SBI to investigate. The audit began Monday after NCSU officials learned Farrell had moonlighted since 1982 for a Columbia, S.C., rock concert promoter who was indicted Feb. 2 on charges of defrauding Reynolds and the Greensboro Coliseum.

Fuel Spilled

MONROE, N.C. (AP) — The amount of kerosene spilled from the Brewer Hendley Oil Co. bulk plant was 500 gallons, rather than the 30 gallons earlier reported, but environmental officials said the spill posed no threat to area water systems.

"Our report states that there were approximately 500 gallons of No. 1 kerosene," said Rex Gleason, water quality regional supervisor of the Department of Natural Resources and Community Development.

Some of the fuel went into nearby Bearskin Creek, officials said.

Re-Elected

SNOW HILL, N.C. (AP) — F.W. Shackelford Jr., a Greene County tobacco farmer, has won re-election to a second three-year term on the board of directors for the Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Cooperative Corp.

He turned back a challenge from Gene Lanier, a Pender County tobacco farmer, by a 219-178 vote. Shackelford will represent members of the cooperative in District 5, which covers Duplin, Pender, Onslow, Sampson, Greene, Harnett and Wayne counties.

The Flue-Cured Tobacco Stabilization Cooperative is a grower-owned cooperative that administers the tobacco price-support program. The cooperative purchases surplus tobacco to help stabilize prices paid to farmers and provides other marketing assistance.

Sewer Grant

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The Environmental Protection Agency is awarding a $1.5 million grant to the Winston-Salem-Forsyth County Utilities Commission to help pay for a new sewer line along South Fork Creek.

Local officials say that pipe would expand sewage service for new homes and businesses from Kernersville through southwestern Forsyth County.

The Utilities Commission will contribute $505,000 in local money toward the $2 million needed to complete the project.

Clean Water

GREENSBORO (AP) — Guilford County's drinking water can be saved from further pollution if governments spend $2.5 million to buy up land around each of the five reservoirs in the county and make those sites off-limits to developers, officials said.

"We felt that the funds could be made available without having to go with a bond referendum to do it," said Guilford County Commissioner J. Douglas Galyon. "That is basically the way to go about it."

The latest proposal being considered by a panel of the Guilford Watershed Committee includes public ownership of 200-foot strips of land immediately around Brandt, Higgins and Townsend lakes in the Greensboro water system.

Similar buffers would be sought for Oak Hollow Lake and City Lake in the High Point water system.

TRUTH ABOUT ROCK — Stukka, Redd Scarre and Spank, left to right, all members of the punk rock band The Misfortunes of Virtue, watch a video about the negative aspects of rock 'n' roll music at the Mainland Assembly of God in Linwood, N.J. Church Plans Record Burning To Protest Rock 'N' Rolling

By JOYCE A. VENEZIA
Associated Press Writer
LINWOOD, N.J. (AP) — Church members contending rock music promotes immorality plan a record burning Friday, and punk rockers say they'll be there, but not to toss anything onto the fire.

"We're bringing the Bill of Rights," Bryant Amper said Wednesday, swinging his long hair. The Rev. Jerry Sturgeon, pastor at the Mainland Assembly of God Church, held a viewing of the movie "The Truth About Rock" Wednesday as a preview to Friday's record burning in this affluent Atlantic City suburb.

As the congregants watched the movie here, about 40 people outside a church in Johnson City, Tenn., participated in the burning of adult magazines and records of the Beatles, Bob Dylan and others.

Most of the 200 or so people attending the movie here nodded in agreement as youth pastor Richard Kin warned, "You hear a lot nowadays about sex and drugs and rock 'n' roll. I believe rock 'n' roll is the most influential."

The movie, narrated by Steve and Dan Peters of the Zion Christian Life Center in St. Paul, Minn., accuses various rock artists of promoting immorality.

Black-leather-clad members of the Misfortunes of Virtue punk band, seated in the back of the church, looked around at the audience and grinned. A punk rocker named Redd Scarre starred at the ceiling, sunglasses on. Next to him, a friend with studded wristbands who called himself Stukka lit a cigarette.

In a front row, Martha Conover clutched a Bible and turned away when album covers depicting the devil or satanic images appeared on the screen. "Disgusting. That's sick," she muttered throughout the movie.

Afterward, she said her three teen-agers listen to gospel music. As for the punk rockers in the audience, she said, "I'm believing that God brought them here for a reason."

In the church parking lot, a lively debate went on between Julie Sturgeon, the pastor's daughter, and punk rock accordionist Malcolm Tent.

"I serve only one master," said Miss Sturgeon.

"I choose not to serve," Tent said.

"I want to listen to music that glorifies Jesus Christ," she said.

"I don't believe that music has to say 'Praise the Lord,'" he said.

Describing the Rolling Stone magazine cover of several years ago, depicting a nude John Lennon clinging to Yoko Ono, Tent said, "He just wanted to show his vulnerability."

Miss Sturgeon smiled and replied, "But I don't think he was saved."

Deacon Tom Hoskins came outside to thank the punkers for attending the movie. "They have a right to come here and say what they want," he said.

George Lind, one of the punk rockers, viewed the movie and the record burning as religious intolerance.

"I do believe people have a soul and a spirit, but I don't think what you do here on Earth decides where you're going," he said.

In Tennessee, the Rev. Hank Smith led members of his United house of Prayer outside the church in the record and magazine burning.

"I pray for the old people who allowed this in their houses, for the mothers and fathers who allow this in their homes," Smith said as he stirred the fire in a 55-gallon drum.

"Hell will be a lot hotter than that," he said.

Deaver Wins Court Order Blocking Indictment Effort

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Reagan aide Michael K. Deaver staved off a possible indictment by a whisker, winning a court order that temporarily halted a planned grand jury vote on four perjury counts.

The emergency order Wednesday awarded the Washington lobbyist Round One in his constitutional challenge to the law establishing independent counsel investigations of top federal officials.

Another hearing was set for March 11 by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson.

The implications of the case may eventually reach beyond the conflict-of-interest investigation of Deaver, a personal friend of President and Mrs. Reagan and former deputy White House chief of staff.

Other independent counsel probes — including Lawrence E. Walsh's investigation of the Iran-Contra affair — operate under the same portions of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act being challenged by Deaver.

Walsh's own investigation was challenged in court Tuesday by fired National Security Council aide Oliver L. North, a key figure in the Iran arms case. No decision was issued, and Walsh promised after the Deaver ruling to continue his work.

Attorneys for North and Deaver argued in their separate cases that a court-appointed independent counsel improperly took over a function reserved for the executive branch of government.

But in Jackson's courtroom Wednesday, the human drama overshadowed the legalities.

While grand jurors waited a floor above to vote, Deaver lawyer Herbert J. Miller argued, "If an indictment is returned, his client's 'livelihood will be totally destroyed.'"

Miller said independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. has "investigated each and every client Mr. Deaver has ever had ... almost every act Mr. Deaver has done." The grand jury, he said, sought "every scrap of paper. I have never seen a broader scope investigation."

Seymour, a former U.S. attorney in New York City, appeared incensed that Deaver would try to stop his nine-month investigation only moments before he was to present the case to grand jurors.

Forced to abandon normal grand jury secrecy, Seymour acknowledged what he was planning to do, and pointed out that Deaver himself asked for the independent probe.

"So long as he thought the investigation might clear him, it was a wonderful investigation and a constitutional investigation," Seymour said.

"Now that his gamble has been lost," Seymour added, Deaver is "coming in and talking of disrupting the process. He can't use this court to play games with an expensive, time-consuming process of government."

If it had turned out differently,

Seymour argued, Deaver would have said, "Wow — this is wonderful."

He said the grand jurors just wanted to go home.

Ruling two hours after oral argument was completed, Jackson said he agreed there may be constitutional problems with a non-government employee, chosen by a three-judge court, conducting a criminal investigation in place of the attorney general.

Jackson said "the public interest would be best served" by granting the motion for a temporary delay. He agreed with Deaver lawyer Miller that "no irreparable harm" would result from a brief halt, and noted the grand jury term is not expiring.

Any group or organization that would like to charter bus service through the Greenville Area Transit (GREAT) system should call the city's Public Works Department at 752-4137. Charters can be arranged to destinations within a 50 mile radius of Greenville. The service is available 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

AIDS Conferees Reject Mandatory Test Plans

By MARLENE CIMONS
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

ATLANTA — Participants at an unusual two-day conference called to debate the expanded use of the controversial AIDS antibody test Wednesday overwhelmingly opposed mandatory testing under any circumstances, including couples applying for marriage licenses and patients routinely admitted to hospitals.

However, they endorsed wider use of the test on a voluntary basis, even occasionally in the above settings, but only if the procedure is offered with comprehensive pre- and post-test counseling, confidentiality of test results and the informed consent of the patient.

"The test should only be done as an adjunct to counseling," said Dr. Robert J. Levine, professor of medicine at Yale University Medical School. "Most of the good that comes comes from the counseling."

Participants also urged the enactment of new federal legislation and other safeguards to protect confidentiality of test results and to prohibit discrimination against infected individuals.

The federal government must "firmly support" the concept that "confidentiality breaches will not be tolerated, and that they will be punished," said William J. Curran, professor of legal medicine at the Harvard University School of Public Health and School of Medicine.

Confidentiality can be better maintained "within the context of public health practice" — the activities of state and local public health agencies, which often are forbidden by law from making disclosures — rather than in "the context of medical practice," Levine said.

By that, he said, he meant "the one-to-one, doctor-patient relationships, or clinics, or in-patient facilities, such as hospitals." There, he said, the problems of ensuring confidentiality are "much more formidable."

He said there could be "inadvertent violations, such as sending the bill for the test to the insurance company."

The meeting was called to examine possible expanded uses of the procedure, including couples applying for marriage licenses, patients at drug, family planning, and sexually transmitted disease clinics, pregnant women, and patients routinely admitted to hospitals.

The issues were discussed in three separate workshops, whose panel members reported their recommendations at the close of the meeting Wednesday.

Walter Dowdle, acting deputy director of the federal Centers for Disease Control and director of its AIDS programs, said that federal health officials would evaluate the conference findings and issue recommendations to Dr. Robert E. Windom, assistant secretary for health, in about a month.

While there was substantial opposition to compulsory testing of any kind, particularly in the specific situations under scrutiny, most participants agreed that the test should be more widely offered in drug, family planning and sexually transmitted disease clinics, but only with counseling and with the consent of the patient.

"The patient should have the right to say anywhere along the line: 'I don't want this,'" said Dr. Franklyn N. Judson, director of public health for the city of Denver.

Further, participants said, voluntary premarital testing is "appropriate" but should be considered "less of a priority" than making the test available in family planning, drug abuse and sexually transmitted disease clinics.

They said that the test should be routinely offered to patients admitted to hospitals only in regions known to have a high prevalence of infection.

Comprehensive counseling involves, among other things, explaining that the test determines whether an individual has been exposed to the virus that causes AIDS and does not mean that he or she will contract the deadly disease.

A person who tests positive is presumed to be infected and infectious to others. Thus, counseling also entails an explicit description of the behaviors that transmit AIDS, including unprotected anal and vaginal sexual intercourse and the sharing of unsterilized hypodermic needles.

The virus also can be transmitted by an infected woman to her unborn child. There is no medical treatment for infection.

Since its introduction in 1985, the test has been the focus of intense controversy. Many medical and public health personnel, gay rights and civil liberties groups have feared that test information, unless kept anonymous or confidential, would result in stigmatization and be used to discriminate in such areas as employment, life insurance and medical insurance.

Political Aide Urges Reagan To Go On Offensive

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's departing political director is urging him to pick some fights with Congress to overcome "discouragement and restlessness" among his supporters because of the Iran-Contra affair.

Mitchell E. Daniels Jr., who is leaving his White House post this week, said in an interview Wednesday that he believed the arms sales affair "can be transcended and put in the shadows by remedial action and by the passage of time."

Asked what kind of steps Reagan should take, Daniels said that, while he believes the president should cooperate with Congress on such issues as welfare overhaul, "I think he probably needs to pick a couple of well-selected fights."

"A good fight is politically useful to the president if the issue is carefully selected," said the aide, who has been assistant to the president for political and governmental affairs.

"Especially right now when there is some discouragement and restlessness among our core supporters, it is very necessary to identify certain issues which are bedrock and on which we are prepared to fight, and I'd go looking for a fight, or I'd certainly not run away from one, on those kinds of issues," he said.

He said both Central America and reduction of the deficit are potentially the kinds of issues on which he would favor putting up a fight. The president is encountering resistance in Congress to his request for continued aid to Nicaraguan rebels and has accused some Democrats of seeking to abandon the deficit reduction goals of the Gramm-Rudman Act passed by the last Congress.

Daniels also said he believed that the president's recuperation from prostate surgery has compounded his problems and that the White House should have prepared people more fully for the amount of recovery time he would need.

Daniels said opinion polls reflect "a shift of public opinion in their view toward the president" and these shifts "tend to go to the president personally: Is he too influenced? Is he too old?"

"The answer to those questions is 'no,' but he has been unable, because of medical restrictions, to get out and prove it," the political adviser said.

"I think that all of us have just seen him sort of do the miraculous before, and we kind of assumed it would be the same thing — a few days of R and R and he would be back to chopping wood and lifting weights. We should have ... prepared the county for the fact this was probably going to put him under wraps that would be different this time."

At the time of the president's Jan. 5 surgery for an enlarged prostate, doctors pronounced the operation a success and said a normal recovery would take about six weeks. It has been more than seven weeks, and officials say the president is gradually increasing his activity but is still under some restrictions. Daniels said he expects Reagan to begin making speaking trips around the country next month.

Daniels said he does not believe the Iran controversy has damaged

Republican chances of retaining control of the White House in 1988.

"I think Iran has been of unquestionable damage to the president's standing, and to some extent that always rubs off on the party, but it will be largely temporary," he said.

"I start from the standpoint that 1988 was always going to be tough. I just don't see it getting a lot tougher because of Iran," Daniels said.

Daniels, a former aide to Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., and former director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, came to the White House in 1985. He is resigning to become an executive of the Hudson Institute, a think tank in Indianapolis, and partner in a law firm with offices in Indianapolis and Washington.

Rescue Efforts Called Off For Crew Of Stricken Ship

By RAYNER PIKE
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — A Navy submarine saved a crewman of a cargo ship that capsized in a raging Atlantic storm, but authorities have terminated the search for his 18 shipmates, including one who was washed off a rescue ship's ladder.

The Coast Guard listed only five as known dead but said four other men had vanished from sight and nine were missing since the crew abandoned the Philippines-registered Balsa 24 on Tuesday.

The storm, which claimed three other victims off the New Jersey coast, continued today with winds up to 40 mph and waves 30 feet high, the Coast Guard said.

The survivor was pulled from the sea Wednesday by the Navy submarine Scamp, which was taking on water and had to limit its rescue role, said Coast Guard Petty Officer Randy Midgett.

The Scamp was to land in Bermuda with the survivor but the date of its port call was not known, said Coast Guard Lt. Reb Bryant. Bryant refused to release the crewman's name.

At daybreak Wednesday, search vessels and planes had eight Balsa survivors in sight on a raft and two in a lifeboat, the Coast Guard said.

The raft overturned when a Panamanian-registered car carrier, the Friasi, tried to pick up the eight during the morning. One man was halfway up the Friasi's ladder when he lost his grip and fell into the sea, said Gerry Minser, a spokesman at the U.S. Navy Air Station in Bermuda.

One survivor was pulled in by the Scamp and two other men made it back to the raft. Later in the morning, one man on the raft and one in the lifeboat were swept overboard.

The search was terminated at mid-afternoon, after those in the water had vanished and the two aboard the raft and lifeboat showed no response to repeated efforts to get their attention, said Midgett.

There are no plans to resume the search, Bryant said. The Balsa was last seen still afloat where it was abandoned, upside down, 1,100 miles east of New York and 280 miles south of Newfoundland, the Coast Guard said.

The 345-foot ship left Savannah, Ga., on Feb. 18, for Spain with a cargo of clay, said Petty Officer Loren Bullard. The ship was owned by Abacast Shipping and Management and its home port was Manila, the Philippines.

Sixty miles off Cape May, N.J., a search for the capsized fishing boat Delores Marie, out of Wanchese, N.C., and its three crewmen was ended Tuesday night, a day after it was reported missing, the Coast Guard said.

Ronnie 'Doing Well'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Ronnie DeSillers was conscious and squeezed his mother's hand after receiving a liver transplant funded by donations from President Reagan and thousands of others touched by his plight.

An autographed photo of the president and stuffed toys sat on a table next to the 7-year-old Miami boy's bed in the intensive care unit Wednesday. Ronnie clung to the photo, which accompanied Reagan's $1,000 donation, and the toys as he was taken into surgery Tuesday evening.

"They're right where he can see them," said Jose Castillo, who is engaged to Ronnie's mother, Maria DeSillers.

The gravely ill boy was in desperate need of a transplant when he arrived at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh last week, and the 12-hour operation began Tuesday after a donor liver was found.

Ronnie was thrust into the national spotlight when $4,000 raised by classmates to help pay for the operation was stolen from his Fort Lauderdale school.

The boy was listed in critical but stable condition, considered normal after transplant surgery.

Congress Balks At Dump Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two key congressional committees are turning thumbs down on the Reagan administration's controversial proposals for major changes in planning for disposal of the nation's high-level nuclear waste.

In reports adopted Wednesday, the Senate Energy and Natural Resources and House Interior committees said Energy Secretary John Herrington should forget his proposals to deviate from the terms of the Nuclear Waste Policy Act of 1982.

The action represents the first formal word from Capitol Hill against Herrington's most controversial nuclear-waste idea: indefinitely shelving the search for a spent-fuel repository east of the Mississippi River.

Also rejected by the Western-dominated committees were proposals to develop an interim waste storage facility in Tennessee and to delay the opening of a permanent repository in the West from 1998 to 2003.

Herrington's congressional critics, especially Western lawmakers, have said the proposals do not follow the terms of the delicately balanced 1982 law, a compromise plan that was produced after months of tough negotiations.

The law requires the Western facility to open first, to be followed by the Eastern repository. The law authorizes the Energy Department to study the need for the temporary or monitored retrievable storage facility but not to build it without specific congressional approval.

Last June, Herrington announced he was halting preliminary work on the permanent repository in the East because nuclear waste, principally from power plants, was not accumulating as fast as thought in 1982.

Herrington repeatedly has denied accusations by Westerners that this action was designed to aid the election chances of Republican candidates east of the Mississippi.

Earlier this month, Herrington told congressional panels that unless Congress endorsed his proposals to change the department's nuclear waste "mission plan," he would drop them and return to the planning and siting steps specified in the law.

He said he would interpret endorsement as approval of the $725 million sought by the Energy Department to operate the nuclear waste program in fiscal 1988, which begins Oct. 1.

The two committees rejected Herrington's proposals in reports to the House and Senate Budget committees, which will make the final recommendations on the department's fiscal 1988 spending.

"The waste program is in disarray, raising doubts that Congress will appropriate the $725 million," Senate Energy and Natural Resources said.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

Sanford's Mom Going Strong At Age 98

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer
LAURINBURG, N.C. (AP) — Elizabeth Martin Sanford, better known as Betsy, is 98 years old, broke her hip several years ago, and is a walker to get around. But she still scolds herself when she feels she's getting lazy.

"I get ashamed of myself when I think 'I don't want to sweep that room,'" Mrs. Sanford, mother of North Carolina's junior senator, said in a recent interview at her home in Laurinburg.

Despite her age, Mrs. Sanford lives alone in the home she and her late husband, Cecil, bought in 1932 — the height of the Depression — for "practically nothing." But she never forgets about the nursing home nearby.

"I don't pride myself (on living alone)," she said. "I just thank the Lord every morning I can get up and get my breakfast for myself. There's a nursing home down the street. Most of them are younger than I am and have to have help getting out of bed."

Until her 98th birthday last November, Mrs. Sanford drove her own car. But she was sick when it came time to renew her license, and she hasn't gotten around to it yet. Her car, complete with a Sanford bumper sticker, sits in front of her house.

Before she got sick, however, son Terry tried to warn her that since she would be 98, she might not get her license.

"That's what they said when I was 94," Mrs. Sanford replied.

The Sanfords had five children, including one who died young of spinal meningitis. There are now nine grandchildren — including two named Elizabeth — and four great-grandchildren in the family.

Terry is 17 months younger than his older brother, Cecil Jr. There are also two daughters, both younger than Cecil and Terry.

Sanford has spent much of his career — political and otherwise — emphasizing education. It's part of his family history. Of the 12 children in Mrs. Sanford's family, two died early. Eight of the remaining 10 went to college.

"If you were first-class folks, you sent your children off to college," Mrs. Sanford said.

Terry Sanford said the example of his mother's family was constantly held up to him and his siblings. The family frequently drove through the campuses of UNC and Duke. "There was an assumption you would go on to college," he said.

She graduated from Randolph-Macon Women's College in Virginia and taught in the public schools for 40 years. Since then, she's gone to nearby St. Andrews College to take courses.

During her years in the public schools, Mrs. Sanford taught "practically everything" to students in the fifth grade through senior high.

"I had never taken chemistry in college and I taught it," she said. "I figure you can get a book out of the library and teach anything."

The effect of both his parents on Sanford is clear in his first book, "But What About the People?" The book, published in 1966, was dedicated to his mother "who heightened my interest in education" and to his father, "who heightened my interest in politics."

"The importance of education and the importance of the support of public education became apparent to me very early," Sanford said in a telephone interview from his Washington office. "Schooling wasn't remote."

Sanford remembers that his entry into politics came in 1928 when, as an 11-year-old, he marched in a torchlight parade in Laurinburg for Al Smith. He carried a sign saying "Me and Ma Is for Al."

When Sanford ran for governor his mother asked him why. "He told me it was because he thought he could help somebody," she said. "When he decided to run for Senate, he said the same thing. He had told me when he stopped being president at Duke that he wouldn't have to go to the office every day any more. When I asked him why he wanted to do that again,

FEELS FORTUNATE — Betsy Sanford says she feels fortunate to still be able to look after herself at 98. The mother of Sen. Terry Sanford says she went to bed at her usual time on election night and would just as soon her son would have lost the election so he could retire. (AP Laserphoto)

he said 'I feel like maybe I can help somebody.'"

But Betsy Sanford wasn't certain her son should have run for office again — and isn't certain that winning was the best thing for him and his family.

She didn't stay up election night to watch the returns. "I wasn't that excited. I would have been just as relieved if he didn't get it," she said.

Her indifference on election night was in sharp contrast to her activities on Election Day. Terry Sanford said. Mrs. Sanford worked outside a polling place, handing out literature on her son and asking people to vote for him.

Sanford's campaign against Republican Sen. Jim Broyhill didn't match the bitterness of the race between former Democratic Gov. Jim Hunt and Republican Sen. Jesse Helms. But the barbs flew, with Broyhill calling Sanford "Food-Tax Terry" and questioning Sanford's patriotism.

None of it, says Mrs. Sanford, disturbed her.

"I felt critical of some of the ones who were running," Mrs. Sanford said. "If people disagree with Terry, they should say so. That's what politics is."

But Mrs. Sanford doesn't disagree with her son often.

"I was for helping people, and he's for helping people," she said.

But if Mrs. Sanford thinks a lot of her children, her children think even more of her.

"She's a remarkable lady," Cecil Jr. said. "I'm glad I know her and that she's my mother."

Telephone Helps Daughter, Mom

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

I called my mother the day after I got back from my honeymoon 37 years ago, and I have been calling her every day ever since.

Before that time, weeks would pass and I would never have any curiosity as to what the weather was like at her house (a mile away from my house), what she was having for dinner or what she was doing when I called.

Sometimes she would ask me to spell my name... slowly.

Since none of my kids calls me "just to talk," I can only assume this is a condition that goes with married life. Once they find a mate, my phone will ring off the hook. Nearly every woman I talk with says this is so. Not only that, once there is a grandchild there could be as many as two or three calls per day, depending on how many times the child makes tinkle or poo poo.

Calling one's mother is a phenomenon most men do not understand. They regard it as a duty which they perform or something evil will happen to them. I can honestly say I didn't know my mother at all until Ma Bell came into our lives. Oh, I knew her political preference, favorite perfume and cold remedy, but I never really knew her.

It took the daily phone call to learn that her secret pie crust came from a secret box in the supermarket. I had to discover by a slip of the tongue that she hid her billfold in the vegetable crisper of the refrigerator because only junk food addicts would rob a house in the first place and would never look under the lettuce.

One day she surprised me by commenting on how kissing on television bothered her. She said they always look like they were chewing on a ham sandwich and bit down on a piece of fat they were trying to get out. She admitted one day that when I was 6 months old, she was bathing me and I fell off the table. She never told anyone in case I wasn't right and she didn't want to take the blame for it.

I know never to call her until the stove is turned off, I have gone to the bathroom and have eaten within three hours. No matter that we have talked 24 hours earlier, there is always something to say. Some things take longer than others.

"There's nothing going on here" takes 45 minutes to relate.

"I'm just going out the door" takes 35 minutes.

"I can only talk five minutes, my soap comes on" requires 18 minutes.

"Something's burning, I have to check the stove" takes 12 minutes.

"I'll just tell you this story and I've got to run" it compressed into 15 minutes.

Women's Filmmaking Festival Opens

By PAUL PAGE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — When the first "Women Make Movies" festival was launched six years ago, organizers depended on foreign films, documentaries and low budget independent features to fill out the program.

While the week-long festival is still a showcase for filmmakers on the way up, it is now the largest in North America devoted to women and reflects their growing power in the movie industry.

"I think you're seeing here what the future will be," said Bonnie Schwartz, co-programmer of the festival that begins March 1 at the American Film Institute in Washington.

"Women are no longer just making a living in movies, they're making a mark," said Karen Jaehne, festival co-programmer. "They have made enormous gains. That may not be visible at the Oscars, but it is certainly visible in the corridors of the film industry."

Though many of the movies have political themes, the intent of the festival is not to show how women filmmakers explore feminist issues, Jaehne said.

"These films don't necessarily tell 'women's stories.' We show films that are produced and directed by women," she said. "I have my eye firmly fixed on a horizon out there where the fact that a woman is in a film industry job is not eyebrow-elevating."

In the past, "Women Make Movies" has provided an early audience for such directors as Susan Seidelman, now considered one of the industry's rising directors after her 1985 hit, "Desperately Seeking Susan."

With premieres of Hollywood features, screenings of documentaries and animation shorts and workshops on film craft, this year's edition is a measure of the barriers that have fallen in the film world.

"We're looking for personalities behind the movies as well as the movies themselves," said Jaehne. "Every one chosen is essentially a spokeswoman for a kind of movie, or a country, Hollywood or a movement like animation."

"Square Dance" is the opening night attraction. It was produced by Jane Alexander and also stars the actress, and was directed by Daniel Petrie.

The week will include eclectic productions, bowing to the past with a night devoted to Hollywood actress and director Ida Lupino and looking ahead with such works as "Working Girls," Lizzie Borden's controversial film about life in a Manhattan brothel.

Doris Dorrie, the German director who scored an art-house hit last year in the United States with her movie, "Men ...," will show her latest, "In the Belly of the Whale."

Two of this year's female Academy Award nominees will participate in workshops: Susan Morse, who edited "Hannah and Her Sisters," and Hesper Anderson who with Mark Medoff wrote the screenplay of the stage production, "Children of a Lesser God."

Randa Haines, who directed "Children of a Lesser God" — the touching love story starring William Hurt and Marlee Matlin, is the first American woman to be nominated as best film director by the Directors Guild of America. The only other woman ever nominated by the guild was Italy's Lina Wertmuller in 1977 for "Seven Beauties."

The result of an idea born at the festival two years ago will be shown with the movie, "Miss Mary" by Maria Luisa Bemberg of Argentina. Bemberg, nominated for an Oscar for her hit, "Camila," got the idea to cast actress Julie Christie in "Miss Mary" when festival organizers told her of Christie's interest in women filmmakers.

However, the growth of this festival may be most evident on the closing night when Seidelman premieres her new movie, "Making Mr. Right." It is a comic science-fiction film about a mechanical man, set in a world that Seidelman describes as a combination of "the Jetsons and the 1964 New York World Fair."

Seidelman was the hit of "Women Make Movies" in 1985 with her "Desperately Seeking Susan," a movie set in the New Wave world of downtown New York that became a box-office hit. Her first big exposure came a few years before when she showed her scruffy, independent feature, "Smithereens."

Wedding Vows Said Saturday

ROBERSONVILLE — On Saturday in the First Christian Church, Laurie Nell Doll and Wallace Reid Bullock Jr. exchanged wedding vows. The Rev. Robert Wallace conducted the double ring ceremony.

A program of wedding music was presented by organist Mike Harris and vocalists Eva Hatcherson and Mrs. Irving Smith.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Doll of Chestertown, Md. Parents of the bridegroom are Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Reid Bullock Sr. of Robersonville.

Escorted to the altar by her father and given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white tissue taffeta styled with a sabrina neckline, long sleeves and a puffed shoulder accented by a V-back. The fitted bodice was adorned with alencon lace, seed pearls and sequins. The full skirt flowed from a dropped waistline into a cathedral train accented with alencon appliques. Her two tiered fingertip veil of illusion was attached to a flower and seed pearl wreath. She carried a formal cascading bouquet of white roses and stephanotis.

Mrs. Mike Dowling of Chestertown, Md., was honor attendant. She wore a tea length dress of royal blue French latticework lace over matching satin. The gown was fashioned with a V-neckline and long sleeves of lace. The waistline of the gathered skirt was accented with a cummerbund and bow of satin. She carried a classical bouquet of mauve alstromerias, gerber daisies and blue delphiniums tied with royal blue satin with long streamers.

Bridesmaids included Mrs. David Michael Renn of Greenville, sister of the bridegroom, Mrs. Gerarado Cobo of Raleigh, Mrs. Charles Lucas Tripp of Greenville, Eva Hatcherson of Tappahannock, Va., Leslie Lane of Greenville, and Brenda Joyner. Their dresses and bouquets were identical to that of the honor attendant.

Flower girls were Margaret Anne Dowling of Chestertown, Md., and Courtney Renn of Greenville, niece of the bridegroom. Each wore a formal white satin dress accented with a royal blue sash at the waist. Each carried a nosegay of flowers.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Ushers included David

MRS. BULLOCK

Mrs. Lee Smith of Robersonville was mistress of ceremonies. Mrs. Charles Smith and Janet Clark presided at the register.

Immediately following the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a reception in the church fellowship hall. Assisting were Elizabeth Coleman, aunt of the bride, Kathy Doll, cousin of the bride, and Robin Spencer. Birdseed bags were distributed by Margaret Anne Dowling and Courtney Renn.

After a wedding trip to Cancun, Mexico, the couple will live in Greenville.

The bride is a graduate of Kent County High School in Worton, Md., and Atlantic Christian College in Wilson, where she received a B.S. degree in nursing. She is employed by Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

The bridegroom, employed by Burroughs Wellcome in Greenville, graduated from Roanoke High School in Robersonville and received an associate degree in environmental science from Pitt Community College.

The parents of the bridegroom, his sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. David Michael Renn entertained at a rehearsal dinner at the Sheraton-Greenville.

A bridesmaids luncheon, pig picking, lingerie shower, supper and surprise miscellaneous shower were held prior to the wedding.

Birthday Card Has More Sense

DEAR ABBY: On my son's 16th birthday, he received a birthday card from his grandparents on his father's side. (His father and I are divorced.) "Grandma Jones" added the following handwritten message on the card: "Sorry, Billy, no money this time because we received no thank-you for the money we sent with our card last year. Lots of love, Grandma and Grandpa Jones."

Abby, although these grandparents are retired and living on a fixed income, they are far from poor, and it wouldn't have hurt them to have enclosed a $10 bill. It would have made the difference between my son feeling good or bad on his birthday.

I wrote to my ex-mother-in-law and told her what I thought about her birthday message to Billy. I haven't heard from her since, and I don't expect to.

What do you (and your readers) think about the message a grandmother sent to her grandson on his 16th birthday? — BURNED UP IN BUTTE

DEAR BURNED: I think Grand-

Dear Abby

ma may have given Billy a birthday gift that was far more valuable than a $10 bill.

DEAR ABBY: I am a very attractive 17-year-old girl. I am also a romantic person, but my relationships never last any more than two weeks — maybe three. I don't know what's wrong. I am a very outgoing person, but I've never had one relationship that lasted. I'm still a virgin. Maybe that's my problem. Is it true that nowadays you have to have sex in order to make a relationship last?

I started seeing a guy a couple of weeks ago, but he is very pushy. He has too many hands and I get worn out trying to protect myself. He told me he probably wouldn't be calling me again. Could my virginity be standing in the way of my popularity?

I would like to have a good relationship with a guy, but I'm not ready to include sex. Am I weird or what? — HURTING IN HARTFORD

DEAR HURTING: You are not weird and you are no dope. All relationships do not include sex — many long-standing relationships are based on friendship and mutual interest. If you are being made to feel that the price of going out is "putting out" — you are being blackmailed. Stick with your principles.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I were separated for several months, during which time he admitted that he had played the field and had several affairs.

We've decided to give our marriage one more try. I've told him that I will not go to bed with him unless he has a test for AIDS.

He refuses, saying I am unreasonable. What do you think? — CONCERNED

DEAR CONCERNED: I think you are wise, and he is foolish. He should have the test not only for your peace of mind, but for his.

DEAR ABBY: Last year I was diagnosed as having multiple sclerosis and I recently began using a cane. My question is this: How do I respond to people I don't know very well (nor care to) when they ask, "Why the cane?"

I don't wish to discuss my disability with people who are merely making small talk on the sidewalk. If it is someone I dislike, I say, "Oh, this is just an affectation." But I can't use this response to people who are genuine acquaintances, or are actually concerned.

What do you think? — MINNESOTAN

DEAR MINNESOTAN: Why not use the same response for all inquiries? There is nothing wrong with saying, "I have multiple sclerosis," even to people who are making small talk on the sidewalk. It might shake them up a bit.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Be Popular: You're Never Too Young or Too Old," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Popularity, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61051.)

Syria Says Militia Offices Are Closed

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Syria's military intelligence chief in Lebanon said today his troops have closed all 75 militia offices in west Beirut in an effort to end the bloody reign of lawless gunmen in the Moslem sector of the Lebanese capital. Brig. Gen. Ghazi Kenaan made the announcement a day after pro-Iranian Shiite Moslem militants vowed vengeance against the Syrians for killing 23 of their men. The killings Tuesday were the bloodiest incident since an estimated

7,500 Syrian soldiers entered Beirut on Sunday to enforce a truce among warring militias. British Ambassador John Gray, meanwhile, hinted today that Syria's intervention could help free foreign hostages and said he hoped to have news soon about Anglican Church envoy Terry Waite, who has been missing in Lebanon since Jan. 20. NBC News in New York quoted intelligence sources as saying four of the 26 foreign hostages in Lebanon may have come under the protection of Syrian troops.

She was born in Halifax County but attended Martin County schools. She was a member of Holy Temple Church of God in Christ, Hamilton.

NBC Says Syrians Now Hold Hostages

NEW YORK (AP) — Three Americans and an Indian kidnapped in Lebanon last month are now in the hands of Syrian army intelligence officers in Beirut who are trying to figure out how to release them, NBC reported. NBC, citing unidentified Mideast and Western intelligence sources, said Wednesday that the four had been turned over to Col. Amir Taleh, a senior Syrian army intelligence officer.

"We have no independent confirmation at all" of the report, said Dan Howard, a White House spokesman. State Department spokeswoman Deborah Calvin also said she had no information regarding the report.

Professors Robert Polhill, Jesse Turner and Alann Steen and Mithileshwar Singh, an Indian with resident alien status in the United States, were kidnapped from the Beirut University College campus on Jan. 24.

NBC said it remained unclear who had kidnapped the four. A previously unknown group, Islamic Jihad for the Liberation of Palestine, on Jan. 28 claimed responsibility for kidnapping the four, and had demanded that Israel free 400 Arab prisoners. The group has released photographs and videotapes of the four.

The hostages were turned over to Taleh when it became known Syrian troops were going to move into Beirut in force last weekend to quell fighting among Lebanon's warring factions, NBC said.

The network's sources said the kidnapers acted to keep the hostages out of the hands of the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God, which is believed to hold some other hostages in Lebanon.

Intelligence sources said the Syrians were seeking a way to release the four without offending Hezbollah or its Iranian backers, according to NBC.

Surviving are his parents, Vance and Maple Northern of Vandemere; three brothers, Donald Northern of Greenville, Velton Northern of Boston and Jay Northern of Morehead City, and three sisters, Darlene Miller of Maribel, Rose Northern of Bronx, N.Y., and Edna Glasper of Salt Lake City.

The family will receive friends Saturday from 7 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the funeral chapel, and at other times will be at 103 Lakeview Terrace, Apt. D.

Farmville Girls Win

Greene C. Upsets Jaguars

By WOODY PEELE
Reflector Sports Editor

LITTLEFIELD — Farmville Central's girls survived a scare, but Farmville Central's boys saw a 20-foot jumper in overtime spell disaster for them in the semifinals of the Eastern Plains Conference basketball tournament Wednesday night.

The Lady Jaguars, who won the EPC regular season title and league's top seed in the 2-A State Playoffs, had to fight off #4 Charles B. Aycock in a 53-48 game to advance to the tournament finals. The Jaguars, who shared the conference title with Ayden-Grifton, and will still be top-seeded in the playoffs, found their chances of a sweep halted by number five Greene Central, 45-43 in overtime.

Tonight, second-seeded Ayden-Grifton takes on #3 North Pitt in the girls' semifinals, while #2 Ayden-Grifton's boys face #3 Pamlico for the right to advance into Friday night's finals against Farmville and Greene Central, respectively.

"We didn't shoot very well," Farmville Coach Mike Terrell said. "We played tight offensively and didn't relax. On defense, I thought we did a good job."

"Both teams played hard, but the rebounding at the end made the difference," he added.

Farmville carried a 28-21 rebounding edge into the final period of the game, only to see Greene Central assume control of the backboards, 10-7. That enabled the Rams, trailing by three at the start of the fourth period to stay in the game and avoid a Farmville pullaway.

And poor shooting did, indeed, do in the Jaguars. They made only 19 of 54 shots from the floor, 35.2 percent. Greene Central, meanwhile, hit on 21 of 49, 42.9 percent.

Early in the final period, Greene Central, which trailed, 33-30, as the quarter opened, pulled back even at 34-34, on a turnaround jumper by Woodrow Wallace. But James Reid followed his own miss and Gary Moore hit from the baseline to push Farmville back out by four, 38-34 with 5:21 left to go.

Helped by some key Jaguars misses at the free throw line, Greene Central scrambled back and finally tied it up on a layup by Wallace with 36 seconds to go.

Wallace was fouled on the play and had the chance to give the Rams the lead, but missed and Farmville controlled the ball, leaving it tied at 41-41.

The Jaguars twice called time out before getting the ball to Reid, who missed just before the horn, and the game went into overtime.

Reid, who scored 21 of the 43 points made by the Jaguars, was the man Terrell wanted with the ball for the final shot, but it would not go. "For a sophomore he did a heck of a job," the coach said. "Kennedy Williams is usually the man we want to get the ball to on offense, but he's been feeling sick and played like it tonight." Williams, usually a double figure scorer, got only six points in the game.

Tyrone Joyner put Farmville back up in the overtime, hitting with 1:59 left after Greene Central had missed its initial try.

But Melvin Croom tied it up on a baseline jumper with 1:21 left, and after a Farmville miss, Greene Central controlled the ball until Jake Barrow launched one from the corner with three seconds to go that swished the nets to give the Rams the upset win, 45-43.

"I didn't feel like we needed a time out to set anything up," Ram Coach Lewis Godwin said. "The other night against Ayden-Grifton, we had the chance to win, and we called a time out and spend the whole minute diagramming a play and they went out and didn't do any of it. I figured the worst that could happen would be another overtime period if we missed, so I just let them play. And Jake's one of two I would have wanted to take the shot if we couldn't get the ball inside."

The other one was Anthony Jones, who missed the game with the flu. "The kids reached down and got a little extra with him out," Godwin said.

Godwin said the rebounding turned around when the Rams switched to a man-to-man defense in the fourth period. "We don't block out well from the zone, but we do in man-to-man for some reason. We usually don't play our man that well, but we have for the last two games."

The game was close all the way. Both teams started slowly, with the Jags taking a 6-2 lead before the Rams came back to score six in a row and take an 8-6 lead after one period.

Rose Girls Rip Gryphons, 52-39

WILSON — Rose High School's girls basketball team, winners of the regular season Big East Championship, vaulted into the league's tournament finals with a 52-39 romp over Rocky Mount Wednesday night.

In boys' action, Kinston, the number four seed, ripped upstart Rocky Mount, 68-47. The Gryphons had gained the second round by knocking off regular season champ Rose, 66-61, in the first round.

Tonight's semifinals wind up with Beddingfield facing Fike in a boys' game and Northern Nash and Fike colliding in a girls' game. The winners will meet Kinston and Rose for the championships on Friday.

Rocky Mount held a slim 10-9 lead over the Rampettes in the first period, but the Rampettes held the Lady Gryphons to only two points in the second frame. Rose added 10 of its own to take a 19-12 lead at halftime.

In the third period, Rose continued to pull away, outshooting Rocky Mount, 17-10, for a 36-22 lead. Rocky Mount was allowed a 17-16 rally in the final quarter.

"We didn't run much in the first half," Rose Coach Bill Kuykendall said. "They slowed the offense down against our 2-1-2 defense and did a lot of passing around on the outside and we didn't pick it up very well. But in the second quarter, we switched to a pressing 1-3-1 and it bothered them. We were able to get our running game going then. (Lisa) Leisten got hot and starting hitting from the outside. Then, in the second half, they fouled (Kim) Bridges a lot and she just kept putting them in to help break it open."

Leisten led the Rampette attack with 19 points while Kim Dupree added 16. Bridges hit 13, including 11 of 15 at the stripe.

Rocky Mount was led by Sheila Ruffin with 18 and Brenda Howell with 11.

Jackson Sparks State Victory

By The Associated Press

North Carolina State got an unexpected spark from seldom-used point guard Quentin Jackson to end its six-game conference losing streak, but Maryland moved one step closer to a winless season in the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"Coach Valvano believes in playing the right people at the right time and he felt I deserved the position," Jackson said Wednesday after the Wolfpack took an 85-72 victory. "Our intensity was good throughout the game, especially on defense."

Jackson, in his first start this year, came through with nine points, eight steals and four assists.

"I'm really proud of our kids," North Carolina State Coach Jim Valvano said. "We've been through some very difficult, frustrating and tough times. Even though we haven't got a lot of W's lately, I'm proud of our attitude and hard work."

The Wolfpack, 15-14 and 5-8 in the ACC, took control just before intermission when consecutive baskets by Kelsey Weems and Vinny Del Negro gave them a 43-35 halftime lead.

North Carolina State then pulled away by holding the Terrapins, 8-15, 0-15, scoreless for six minutes to open the second half.

Bennie Bolton and Charles Shackelford led North Carolina State with 17 points each.

Derrick Lewis led Maryland with 26 points, 10 rebounds and three blocked shots before fouling out for the first time this season with 3:29 left in the game.

In other ACC action Wednesday night, Clemson defeated Georgia Tech 88-77 and Virginia defeated Wake Forest 59-45.

Clemson coach Cliff Ellis credited his seniors for the victory in their last home game.

"We took Georgia Tech out of their ball game at times, and at times they took us out of our game," Ellis said. "Our seniors did not want to go out on a bad note, and I am very happy for them."

Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins said the game against 13th-ranked Clemson was a painful reminder of Sunday's game with DePaul.

"I think this schedule is catching up with us," Cremins said. "It seems one day we're playing against a Dallas Comegys and the next day it's against Horace Grant."

While Comegys helped DePaul bury the Yellow Jackets on Sunday, it was Grant who sent Georgia Tech packing.

Grant, a 6-foot-10 center playing his final home game, scored 30 points and grabbed 11 rebounds to pace the Tigers.

Grant scored 21 of his points in the second half as the Tigers improved their record to 25-3 overall and 10-3 in the ACC.

Georgia Tech, which got 25 points from forward Tom Hammonds, fell to 7-6 in the conference and 16-10 overall.

Joining Grant in double figures for Clemson were Jenkins with 13 points, point guard Grayson Marshall with 12 and Tait with 11.

Guard Bruce Dalrymple tossed in 18 points for the Yellow Jackets, while guard Craig Neal and forward Duane Ferrell added 12 and 11 points, respectively.

Wake Forest coach Bob Staak said his team had chances to win against the Cavaliers, but couldn't get the critical baskets.

"We must have had three or four opportunities, very good shots, to cut it to four and the ball just wouldn't go in the hole," Staak said. "I really think that was the key to the game."

John Johnson said Virginia coach Terry Holland had told him to be aggressive, and he took the advice to heart, scoring a career-high 24 points.

"They told me to go ahead and be aggressive. Then I could take it upon myself to try and create some things," Johnson said.

Holland said Johnson also had to take control because the offense "was out of sync."

Virginia was 12 of 19 from the field in the first half, while Wake Forest hit nine of 23 from the field.

Conley Runs By Washington Five

HAVELOCK — D.H. Conley's Vikings, the top-seeded boys' team in the Coastal Conference Tournament, had an easy time with it Wednesday night, running past Washington, 63-51, in a game not as close as the score would indicate.

In girls' action, #4 East Carteret upset top-seeded Havelock, 44-39, to gain the finals.

Conley will face the winner of tonight's game between West Craven and Havelock on Friday. East Carteret's girls will face either Washington or West Carteret in that championship game.

Conley pushed out into a 15-6 lead in the opening quarter and never looked back. The Vikings outscored the Pam Pack, 11-7, in the second frame to take a 26-13 lead into the dressing rooms.

In the third quarter, Conley continued to pull away, outscoring Washington, 19-12, to build its lead to 45-25. Washington was allowed a 26-18 rally in the final quarter.

Ricky Farrow led Conley with 13 points while Phil Medlin and Troy Ebron each contributed 11. Frankie Warren led Washington with 26 while Ryan Dixon added 13.

Lady Pirates Open CAA Quest

East Carolina's Lady Pirates take to the court again on Friday night in Harrisonburg, Va., in the Colonial Athletic Association's tournament.

East Carolina, which finished the season with a 7-5 league record, was 15-12 overall on the season. Still, the Lady Pirates will be seeded second in the seven-team tournament field, with hopes of winning the event and gaining the league's automatic NCAA tournament bid.

James Madison, which went through the league undefeated at 12-0, will be the favorite for the tournament, held on its home court. The Lady Dukes have been nationally ranked all year, and their success in last year's NCAA tournament, where they advanced to the third round before losing, helped gain the automatic berth.

East Carolina will meet seventh seeded William & Mary in the closing game of the first night's competition, at 8 p.m.

UNC-Wilmington and Richmond, which tied for fourth place in the final standings, will open the tournament at 4 p.m., followed by American, the third seed, facing number six George Mason.

The semifinals will be played at 6 and 8 p.m. on Saturday, with ECU, should it advance, playing in the latter game. The championship game will be at 4 p.m. Sunday.

The Lady Pirates carry a two-game losing streak into the tournament. They were defeated by both George Mason and James Madison on the road this Saturday and Monday, respectively.

The Lady Pirates are led by Monique Pompili, averaging 12.3 points a game. She is also the leading rebounder at 7.8. Also in double figure scoring is Alma Bethea at 11.9 and Delphine Mabry at 10.4.

Other likely starters are Chris O'Connor at 7.5 and Val Cooper, hitting 4.7 per game.

Betha is pulling 6.3 rebounds per game also.

William & Mary, 4-22 overall and 1-11 in the conference, will be meeting the Lady Pirates for the second straight year in the tournament's first round. Last year, ECU took an 84-56 decision.

Earlier this year, ECU won both games, downing the Lady Tribe, 74-50, in Williamsburg, despite a season high 31 turnovers. In Greenville, ECU rolled up a 67-41 win, forcing 40 turnovers, including 25 steals, both team season highs for the Pirates. Mabry recorded a school record 11 steals in that game.

The Indians are led by 5-11 senior forward Karen Jordan, averaging 14.7 points and 8.1 rebounds per game. She is the only Indian in double figures.

Other starters include 5-8 junior guard Fonda Gray, 7.4 ppg; 5-6 freshman guard Robin Marino, 2.9 ppg; 6-1 junior center Beth Hairfield, 8.3 ppg, 6.2 rpg; and 5-11 junior forward Debbie Wade, 8.7 ppg, and 6.2 rpg.

SMU Foes Left High And Dry

DALLAS (AP) — Schools scheduled to play Southern Methodist in football were mostly left high and dry after the NCAA scrapped the Mustang program this fall because of recruiting violations.

But while faced with schedule problems and sympathetic to SMU because of the severity of the penalties, some said the action might help stop cheating by recruiters and boosters.

"People say the distasteful thing about college football is recruiting," Houston Coach Jack Pardee said. "Well, I like recruiting. The only distasteful thing about it is not playing by the same rules. If you are trying to run an honest program, you don't want to be recruiting against someone who is cheating."

Most schools in the Southwest Conference, were scrambling to fill vacancies in their schedules. Texas A&M, Rice and Arkansas, said they had the problems solved. Arkansas

Athletic Director Frank Broyles said he would ask the SWC to appeal to the NCAA the additional restrictions on SMU for 1988.

The Mustangs are limited to just seven games, all on the road, in 1988. There are nine SWC teams.

Broyles said he wants the SWC to ask the NCAA to amend the penalty to allow SMU to play eight games in 1988 "to ensure a balance and equity of percentages in the Southwest Conference championship race and ensuring Cotton Bowl bid."

NCAA enforcement director David Berst said it will be up to the conference and SMU to work out the scheduling problems. Conference commissioner Fred Jacoby said he would have to consult with conference and other SWC school officials before making a decision.

Broyles said the Razorbacks had made plans to play New Mexico in Little Rock Nov. 28, and there is a conditional agreement for 1988 depending on SMU's situation then. The Aggies said they will be playing Louisiana Tech this fall instead of the Mustangs.

Message Out NCAA Serious

By The Associated Press
A guillotine blade fell on the 1987 Southern Methodist University football program, sending a message that the NCAA is getting serious about recruiting cheaters.

"It was the result of legislation that was aimed at programs which have repeated violations," Florida Athletic Director Bill Arnsperger said Wednesday after a one-year "death penalty" was imposed on SMU. "The intent was to impose severe sanctions and that's exactly what the NCAA infractions committee has done. I think they have sent a strong message to those involved in college football."

"If you don't get the clear, vivid picture now as to what's involved, I don't think you'll ever get it," South Carolina Athletic Director Bob Marcum said. "I think the message is reaching far beyond the SMU people."

In addition to a complete ban on football at SMU for the 1987 season, the team will be allowed to play just seven games, all on the road, in 1988. Other sanctions included prohibition from playing in bowls and on television, and reduction of scholarships and restraints on recruiting until 1990.

While still on probation for previous infractions, SMU was found guilty of making monthly cash payments to student athletes from funds provided by a booster.

Although the NCAA could have banned football at SMU for two complete seasons under the new death penalty rule, administrators felt the sanction was strong enough to get the point across.

"They might not call it the 'death penalty,' but it left them on life support systems," South Carolina's Marcum said.

The only negative reaction was from those who thought the sanctions also penalized the innocent.

"I feel sorry for the players who went there in good faith and had the integrity," former SMU star Doak Walker said. "I feel sorry for the coaches who were there. It's a shame. The NCAA had to do something. The rules are there."

"At this point, you feel for SMU and for the players who weren't recruited illegally and have had the football program pulled out from under them," Texas Christian Coach Jim Wacker said. "But life will go on."

"It's unfortunate because I'm sure there are a lot of players at SMU who received nothing and will be penalized," Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne said. "There are a lot of schools on their schedule that are going to be penalized. Next fall's games are going to be hard to come up with."

Osborne, however, did not disapprove of the penalties.

"If it's as it appears — that they were on major probation with sanctions and had done a lot of serious things and went ahead and did some more of them — that's the price you pay."

While many college athletic officials reacted with sympathy for

SMU, they also were hoping the action would deter cheaters.

"You would hope that this ruling would really help," said Gerry Faust, former Notre Dame football coach now at Akron, "and that it would make people aware that college athletics is striving to have competition in an honest and above-board way."

"You hope the spirit will be carried out to everybody."

"When the president's commission passed the legislation, it was meant to force institutions to comply by the rules," Northwestern Athletic Director Don Single said. "The penalties were probably warranted. The action forces institutions to feel there will be enforcement of the rules."

"In my opinion, the death penalty is there to protect other institutions from the behavior that goes on."

The 1987 sanctions left the eight other Southwest Conference teams with a hole in their schedules.

Rice and LSU officials said Wednesday that a verbal agreement had been reached to play a game in Baton Rouge Sept. 19 to replace games both teams had scheduled against the Mustangs. LSU was scheduled to host SMU on Nov. 28 and Rice was slated to visit SMU on Nov. 7.

Texas Tech spokesman Joe Hornaday said, "We're kind of lucky in a sense. We're not locked into only one date."

He said in addition to the Nov. 14 date with SMU, the Red Raiders also had a Sept. 19 opening on their schedule.

Outside the conference, SMU had been scheduled to play Oklahoma and New Mexico in 1987 and Oklahoma and Notre Dame in 1988.

Notre Dame officials, anticipating the possibility of strong penalties against SMU, had made some preliminary contacts with other schools as a possible schedule replacement.

"It's a difficult position for the Irish, because football schedules are made years in advance," said Athletic Director Gene Corrigan. "However, schools on SMU's 1987 schedule have bigger headaches. It's shocking that the NCAA did it for 1987."

Oklahoma Athletic Director Donnie Duncan said he was disappointed the Sooners would not be able to face SMU as a competitor this fall.

"And now we have to develop something to give us a game. We have some possibilities and will be working on those in the next few days," Duncan said.

"Obviously we're all scrambling to find an 11th game," said Texas Christian coach Jim Wacker, whose on team was placed on probation last year. "But at this point you hate to lose a member, especially a strong one as SMU has been."

"We at the University of Texas were for stiffer penalties to help stop violations of NCAA rules," Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds said. "At the same time, I feel a little bit saddened. I have a great concern for SMU and their program and for the Southwest Conference."

Baylor Athletic Director Bill Menefee said the penalties were "not entirely unexpected."

"We regret that one of our sister institutions has received such a penalty because it affects all of us," Menefee said. "But we know that they are in a very difficult situation right now and we feel for them."

Rice Athletic Director Jerry Berndt said he thought SMU officials had taken steps to clean up their program.

"I'm a little surprised that they have suspended the program," Berndt said. "I really felt that they would allow them to play the conference."

Furman's Estes S.C.'s Top Coach

ASHEVILLE (AP) — Butch Estes, who guided Furman to its best season in seven years, was chosen Southern Conference basketball Coach of the Year for 1987, the Southern Conference Sports Media Association announced today.

Estes edged Mack McCarthy of Tennessee-Chattanooga for the honor in balloting by members of the association.

Estes received 30 of the 65 votes cast with McCarthy following with 26. Rick Huckabay, who directed Marshall to the league's regular-season championship, received the other nine votes.

"What an honor," Estes said. "I'm shocked. That's amazing."

In his second season at Furman, Estes steered Furman to a 16-11 overall record and a 10-6 league mark headed into the Southern Conference Tournament this weekend in Asheville, N.C.

The Paladins, seeded fourth, posted the school's first winning record since 1979-80.

Estes came to Furman after a successful rebuilding job at Presbyterian College, a member of NIAA District 6. After two building seasons, he guided Presbyterian to 21, 25 and 24 victories before moving to Furman in April 1985.

A native of High Point, N.C., Estes is a graduate of the University of North Carolina. He began his coaching career at The Citadel before moving to East Carolina and then to Rice University.

His first head coaching job came at Presbyterian, and his Blue Hose teams compiled a series of "firsts" for the school. He was District 6 Coach of the Year in 1983, his 1984 team was Presbyterian's first to attain national ranking and his '85 team was the school's first to reach the NIAA District 6 tournament finals.

The 36-year-old Estes has a 118-91 head coaching record.

Roanoke Girls Reach Finals

ROBERSONVILLE — Roanoke High School's top-seeded girls' basketball team pulled away from Edenton in the final period to take a 38-25 victory and gain the Northeastern Conference tournament finals Wednesday night.

In the other game Wednesday, Ahoskie took a 47-45 win over Roanoke Rapids to eliminate the Yellow Jackets from any further post-season play. Ahoskie, the third seed, will play in the championship game Friday.

In tonight's other semifinal games, at Plymouth, top-seeded Plymouth's boys face Roanoke, while Plymouth's girls face Northampton East.

The girls winner will play Roanoke for the title on Friday, while the boys' winner faces Ahoskie.

Both girls' teams got off to a slow start, leaving the score tied at 4-4 after the first period of play. But Roanoke pulled away in the second quarter, outscoring the Lady Aces, 14-5. That left the Lady Redskins in an 18-9 lead at the half.

In the third period, Edenton outthrew Roanoke, 8-5, to cut the lead back to 23-17. But in the final quarter, Roanoke left no doubt, outscoring Edenton, 15-8, to win going away.

Michelle Hoggard led Roanoke with 16 points, and was the only scorer in the game in double figures.

DePaul Latest Irish Victim

By The Associated Press
The gremlins that seem to haunt ranked teams visiting Notre Dame this season caught up with the No. 4 DePaul Blue Demons.

"It was in the back of their minds. I could tell that," Donald Royal said after scoring 22 points and grabbing 14 rebounds as Notre Dame beat DePaul 73-62 Wednesday night.

The Fighting Irish had upset then-No. 1 North Carolina and then-No. 15 Duke at home earlier this season, and used fine foul shooting to victimize DePaul.

"They knew North Carolina and Duke came in here and went away without a win," Royal said. Notre Dame improved to 18-7 while DePaul lost for only the second time in 27 games this season.

"I don't like losing, but I hope it makes them think a little bit and makes them a little more hungry," DePaul Coach Joey Meyer said.

Two other Top Twenty teams lost Wednesday. Houston trounced No. 15 Texas Christian 84-65 and Colorado stopped No. 16 Kansas 66-56. Elsewhere, it was Alabama 93, Florida 71; No. 11 Syracuse 88, St. John's 80; No. 13 Clemson 88, Georgia Tech 77; No. 14 Illinois 93, Ohio State 70; No. 19 New Orleans 91, Northern Illinois 76 and No. 20 Providence 85, Seton Hall 72.

Notre Dame made 19 of 21 foul shots, including 10-of-11 in the final five minutes, and pressured DePaul all over the court.

"Anything on the floor, they came up with," Meyer said.

The score was tied at 29 at halftime before Notre Dame took a six-point lead early in the second half. After DePaul rallied to go ahead, the teams swapped the lead before the Fighting Irish began pulling away.

Mark Stevenson and Scott Hicks each had 15 for the Irish. David Rivers added 14 points for the Irish, including six in the final three minutes.

Rod Strickland led DePaul with 17 points and Dallas Comegys had 16.

No. 10 Alabama 93, Tennessee 71 Michael Ansley scored 20 points and the Crimson Tide won its first Southeastern Conference regular-season basketball title in 11 years.

Alabama, 22-4 overall and 15-2 in the SEC, scored 12 straight points to take a 36-12 lead with six minutes left in the first half.

Tony White scored 18 for the visiting Volunteers.

No. 11 Syracuse 88, St. John's 80 Sherman Douglas scored 18 of his 20 points in the second half, helping Syracuse hold off St. John's in a Big East game at Madison Square Garden.

The Orangemen, 23-5, led 60-49 midway through the second half before the Redmen rallied within 66-65. But Douglas and Rony Seikaly, who finished with 14 points, enabled Syracuse to stay ahead.

Mark Jackson scored 19 for St. John's, 19-7.

No. 14 Illinois 93, Ohio State 73 Ken Norman scored 26 points and grabbed 16 rebounds as Illinois pulled away from Ohio State in the Big Ten.

The Illini, 20-7, jumped to a 25-12 lead and then coasted. Dennis Hopson scored 28 for the visiting Buckeyes.

Houston 84, No. 15 Texas Christian 65 Greg Anderson scored 27 points and Houston led the entire way in ending TCU's 24-game home winning streak.

Tim Hobby added 25 points for the Cougars in the Southwest Conference game. He made nine of 13 shots from the field, including five 3-pointers.

Houston used a tight man-to-man defense in stopping the Horned Frogs, 22-5. Carl Lott, playing for the first time in 11 games after a broken finger, scored 16 for TCU.

Colorado 66, No. 16 Kansas 56 Matt Bullard scored 23 points and Colorado surged in the second half to beat visiting Kansas in the Big Eight.

The Buffs trailed 28-23 at halftime before rallying past the Jayhawks for only their second conference victory in 13 games.

Danny Manning led Kansas, 21-8, with 19 points.

No. 19 New Orleans 91, N. Illinois 76 Ledell Eackles scored 27 points and Gabe Corchiani added 20 as New Orleans defeated visiting Northern Illinois.

The Privateers overcame an eight-point deficit 15 minutes into the game and tied it 36-36 at halftime. New Orleans, 24-3, moved to an 11-point lead early in the second half and went on to win its eighth straight game.

No. 20 Providence 85, Seton Hall 72 Billy Donovan scored 19 points and Providence ran off the final 14 points of the game to beat Seton Hall in a Big East matchup.

A Big Change Since Last Win

MIAMI (AP) — Billy Casper recalled his victory in the first Doral Open Golf Tournament 25 years ago.

"I won $9,000," Casper said.

Today, Casper and 146 other pros began the chase for $1 million in total prize money, with $180,000 going to the winner of the 1987 Doral Open.

"It's amazing. I never thought we'd see anything like this," Casper, a Hall of Fame player, said of the 20-fold increase in prize money.

It is in keeping with the overall increase on the PGA Tour. In 1962, total prize money on the Tour was $1,790,000. This year, it is about $31 million.

Arnold Palmer was the leading money-winner in 1962 with $81,000. Seven weeks deep into the 1987 schedule, 14 players already have won more than that this year.

"Incredible," marveled Casper, who is making one of his rare appearances in regular tour competition.

"It's even happening on our tour," he said of the Seniors Tour, where he now plays most of his golf. The circuit for players 55 and older now offers about $10 million in total prize money, with one tournament carrying a $1 million purse.

The Doral, the first stop on a four-tournament swing around Florida, is the first of five regular-tour events offering $1 million or more this year.

Is that big purse the reason Seve Ballesteros is making one of his few American appearances in this event?

"Ten years ago, maybe. Now, no. That is not the reason," said the Spanish star, who is making a third consecutive American appearance.

"The purses really don't have that much to do with where I play," said Corey Pavin, already a two-time winner this year. "It's just where it fits into my schedule. I skipped San Diego because I needed a break. I'm playing here because it fits into the schedule."

Whatever the reason, 59 of last year's top 60 money winners are in the field. Only Australian Greg Norman is among the missing.

"I guess," said Jack Nicklaus, "there are just a lot of guys who like to play Doral."

Other major contenders include U.S. Open champ Ray Floyd, twice a winner of this title, PGA title-holder Bob Tway, and Andy Bean, who won his third Doral Open last year.

Also on hand are Tom Watson, Johnny Miller, Fuzzy Zoeller, Calvin Peete, Lanny Wadkins, Ben Crenshaw and Tom Kite, who has a history of strong play in this tournament.

Portions of the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday will be televised nationally by CBS.

Andrew Kennedy had 12 points for Virginia.

Tyrone Bogues had 17 for Wake Forest and Sam Ivy added 10.

Farmville regained the lead at 11-10 on a three-point play by Reid, and he slammed back a Jag miss for a 13-10 edge. The Jaguars then held the lead until Croom came up with a three-point play with 1:03 left, tying it again, 19-19, and that held the rest of the period.

Reid put Farmville back up on top with a pair of shots to open the second half, and the Jaguars moved out by as much as six, 29-23, before the Rams closed it back to 33-30 at the end of the frame, setting up the final quarter and the overtime.

Wallace and Croom each hit 15 points for Greene Central while Reid was the only Jaguar in double figures with 21.

a fast break bucket by Cafina Powell with 2:29 left. But Farmville regained the lead and held a 34-32 edge going into the final period.

Aycock came back and finally took the lead at 38-37 on a fast break basket by Cynthia Parker with 6:30 showing. The Falcons held on until Lang hit the first of a one-and-one, tying it up at 42-42. When Lang missed the second, Reid grabbed off the rebound and put it in to return the lead to Farmville, 44-42.

But Monica Lewis hit off a rebound for Aycock to give the Falcons a 45-44 lead before Lang hit for a 46-45 lead that was never overcome.

Farmville then stretched its lead out to as much as eight points in the final minute and a half of play, 53-45, before Aycock scored the final three of the game.

"It was a poorly played basketball game," Jaguar coach Hilda Worthington said. "It's probably the worst we've played this year."

Worthington said that having beaten Aycock twice may have had something to do with it, but she said the team was not mentally ready.

"We were prepared to play, but just not mentally in it. I try to say that the bye (in the first round) had nothing to do with it, but I think Aycock played better for having played one game already. We just missed too many free throws (only five of 22). We made them turn the ball over, then didn't capitalize on it."

"But I do think we'll be ready Friday (for the championship)," Worthington said.

Lang led Farmville with 30 points while Lancastrer had 18 and Kennedy had 11 for Aycock.

Robinson Tops Team

CHARLOTTE (AP) — David Robinson, Navy's 6-11 center, heads the list of players selected to the 11-man U.S. Basketball Writers Association All-District III basketball team, the district office announced Wednesday.

Robinson was named the district's player of the year while North Carolina coach Dean Smith was selected coach of the year by the panel of more than 30 basketball writers from Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina and South Carolina.

Three of Smith's players — guard Kenny Smith and forwards Joe Wolf and J.R. Reid — were included on the team.

Other Atlantic Coast Conference selections to the team were Duke's Tommy Amaker and Danny Ferry, Maryland's Derrick Lewis, Clemson's Horace Grant, Wake Forest's Tyrone Bogues and Virginia's Andrew Kennedy.

North Carolina-Wilmington center Brian Rowsom joins Robinson on the team as the only other representative of the Colonial Athletic Association.

Bird Posts Season-High 43 In Boston's Victory

By BILL BARNARD
AP Basketball Writer

Larry Bird has won three consecutive Most Valuable Player awards on the strength of his all-around play. But he has no qualms about turning himself into a gunner when the opportunity arises.
 Bird took 30 shots — and made 17 — Wednesday night, posting a season-high 43 points as the Boston Celtics captured a 122-116 NBA victory over Portland, the only visiting team to win a game at Boston Garden last season.
 "I take pride in all phases of my game; when the opportunity is there to score, I'll take it," said Bird, who also had 10 rebounds and eight assists. "My teammates were isolating me, and when I was open I took the shot."
 Forward Kevin McHale had 29 points and 13 rebounds and center Robert Parish added 16 points and 13 rebounds as the Celtics dominated the smaller Trail Blazers inside.
 "I don't think Portland did anything tricky," Bird said. "They played it straight away and we took advantage of our height and scoring ability. They didn't come at me with the double-team as much as I expected."
 "The Celtics gear their whole offense around Larry," said Steve Johnson, who led Portland with 34 points. "They move the ball around and hope to find him open. They get the ball to him and he makes the shots."
 In other NBA games, the Los Angeles Lakers rallied to beat Phoenix 99-91, Dallas tripped Sacramento 108-101 and Detroit edged Cleveland 106-105.
 Johnson carried Portland to a 10-point lead in the first half and a 61-55 halftime advantage, but Bird, whose previous high for the season was 40 points, scored 13 in the third period. He and McHale sparked a 21-12 spurt that pulled the Celtics into an 88-88 tie.
 Although Boston tightened its defense around Johnson, who was held to one basket in the fourth period, the Trail Blazers trailed by only three points with three minutes left as Kiki Vandeweghe scored 14 of his 32 points in the final 12 minutes.
 "We went into the fourth period with a chance to win," Portland Coach Mike Schuler said. "That's all you can ask for from your team when you're going against a great team like Boston."

The victory was Boston's fifth straight, while Portland had its five-game winning streak snapped.
 "We're playing better now, we really are," McHale said. "I said earlier in the season that you wait to get geared up in March and April and May, and we are getting geared up now."
Lakers 99, Suns 91
 Los Angeles rallied from a 13-point third-quarter deficit to defeat visiting Phoenix and sweep a home-and-home series.
 Kareem Abdul-Jabbar scored 10 of his game-high 26 points in the final 5:08 for the Lakers, who trailed 76-69 at the end of three quarters after the Suns grabbed a 68-55 with a 15-0 spurt in the third period.
 The game was tied six times in the final 6:29 before Michael Cooper, who started in place of the injured Magic Johnson, gave the Lakers the lead for good at 93-91.
 Larry Nance scored 24 points and Walter Davis 19 for Phoenix, losers of five straight, while Byron Scott had 18 for Los Angeles, which has won five in a row and now leads the Pacific Division by 7 1/2 games.
Pistons 106, Cavaliers 105
 Isiah Thomas sank one of two free throws with six seconds left as Detroit won its fifth straight game and handed Cleveland its 15th consecutive road defeat.
 A layup by John Bagley tied the score 105-105 with eight seconds remaining, but Bagley fouled Thomas in the backcourt two seconds later.
 After Thomas' free throw, Cavaliers rookie Ron Harper, who scored 33 points, missed an 18-foot jump shot with one second left.
 Adrian Dantley had 26 points and Joe Dumars tied his season high with 24 for the Pistons, who have a 21/2-game lead over Milwaukee in the Central Division.
 Thomas and rookie Mark Price wrestled each other to the floor in the second quarter after Price slapped away the Detroit guard's hand while Thomas was on defense. No punches were thrown and neither player was ejected.
Mavericks 108, Kings 101
 Dallas extended its Midwest Division lead to four games behind Rolando Blackman's 35 points against visiting Sacramento.

 With the Mavericks leading 104-101 and less than a minute to play, Blackman stole a pass and was fouled. He made both free throws to give Dallas a 106-101 lead, and Mark Aguirre accounted for the final two points when he made two free throws with three seconds to play.

WBA Strips Hagler Of Title For Refusing Fight

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Supporters of undisputed world middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler reacted with anger and shrugs to the news that Hagler is being stripped of his World Boxing Association title.
 "We're disgusted with the WBA," Hagler's co-manager, Pat Petronelli, said Wednesday at Hagler's training camp in Palm Springs, Calif. "We always honored their rules and we always had a good relationship with them."
 "Nobody gives a damn," Morris Goldings, Hagler's lawyer, said in Boston. "Everybody knows that Marvin Hagler is the middleweight champion regardless of what the WBA does."
 The WBA said it took the action because Hagler refused to fight top-ranked contender Herol Graham of Britain.
 The decision was announced by at WBA headquarters by President Gilberto Mendoza, who said that to date, 18 of the WBA's 24 executive committee members had voted to take away Hagler's title, more than enough to announce a ruling.
 Hagler, who retains the World Boxing Council and International Boxing Federation middleweight titles, will earn at least $12 million for his April 6 bout in Las Vegas, Nev., against Sugar Ray Leonard, who retired as world welterweight champion and is making a comeback. Only the WBC is sanctioning their fight.
 Hagler, who has been middleweight champion since 1980, has 30 days to appeal, but Goldings said no decision has been made on whether to challenge the decision.
 "The WBA executive committee will be meeting at the end of March and I will consult with Marvin before deciding whether we will attend the meeting. We probably will because we want to exhaust all remedies before proceeding with legal action," Goldings said.
 Goldings called the WBA action "lawless and illegal." He said the organization had ignored a temporary restraining order he obtained in Massachusetts earlier this month to bar any action.
 Goldings went to court after the WBA's championship committee voted to recommend that the executive committee strip Hagler.
 According to WBA rules, Hagler had to defend his title against top-ranked Graham by last Dec. 10. Hagler has not defended his title since beating John Mugabi last March.
 "We ruffled a lot of feathers when we signed to fight Leonard," Petronelli said. "There are people who are trying to get Graham up in the picture."
 Petronelli said Hagler would "fight anyone they want, No. 1 or anybody else after Leonard."

Canned Conquests

On this day in 1815, Napoleon Bonaparte and 1,200 of his soldiers left the Isle of Elba to return to France. His troops occupied Paris on March 20, beginning the period known as the "Hundred Days." Napoleon knew well that armies marched "on their stomachs." In 1795, he offered a prize for the best idea for preserving food. The french inventor Nicolas Appert won the prize by developing a technique for food canning. He heated foods and sealed them in glass.

Alpwater, the European mineral water company, might find itself running afoul of women's rights activists for its involvement in bridge. The reason? Alpwater has decided to award an annual prize for the Best Play by a Woman!

The runner-up for 1986 was Mme. Claude Blouquit of France. The hand occurred during the trials to select the French women's team for last year's Bridge Olympiad. The situation that arose has been written about frequently in bridge literature, bringing to mind Oscar Wilde's remark: "Life imitates art."

There are those who might feel that North had done her hand full justice with her first three bids, and there was little reason why she should have committed the hand to game. Nevertheless, careful defense was needed to defeat the final contract.

Since all four suits had been bid, Mme. Blouquit selected the jack of diamonds as her opening lead. Declarer won in dummy and immediately led a low spade to her queen and West's ace. The crucial moment was already at hand. Had West defended passively, declarer could now come to nine tricks by taking a right view in spades.

Declarer's dummy play technique was never put to the test, for West found the killing return—the nine of hearts! East won the queen and returned the suit to her partner's ace, and when West continued with the three East was poised with the K-8 of hearts over the table's J-6. The defenders took four heart tricks in addition to the ace of spades for an excellent result.

Excavation Turns Up Signs Of First Free Black Colony

ST. AUGUSTINE, Fla. (AP) — Archaeologists believe that 24 acres of marsh near here hold the remains of North America's first free black colony, a fortified refuge for fugitive slaves more than 100 years before the Civil War.

University of Florida archaeologists have uncovered parts of a defensive system, including a moat, earthen walls and posts that were probably parts of an interior blockhouse and watch tower, said Kathleen Deagan, who is leading the dig.

"It is evidence of black contribution to colonial life outside of the realm of servitude," Ms. Deagan was quoted as saying in today's editions of The New York Times. "Fort Mose is a symbol of black freedom in colonial America and that's an image we don't get much of in the history books.

"In terms of history and black culture, I believe this find is very important."

The dig near St. Augustine, the nation's oldest city, began Jan. 12. A test project 10 years ago found artifacts, including gun flints, buttons and metals from the early 18th century, Ms. Deagan said.

"It may be we may find only traces of a rugged frontier outpost similar to many others," Ms. Deagan told the Times. "But we are hoping for artifacts or details that may reveal echoes of Africa, from such things as basketry, architecture and personal items."

Jack Williams, who owns the site and the St. Augustine Museum of Weapons, said he began researching Fort Mose 25 years ago "just as an avocation." At the time, no one was certain it even existed.

"I found it and bought it," Williams said recently.

The fort, founded by the Spaniards in 1736, became a haven for runaway slaves from English colonies in Georgia and South Carolina, Ms. Deagan said. Nearly 100 settlers lived there, including Indians the British chased out of Georgia.

"The Spanish crown had a policy of giving slaves freedom after they served a few years service to the crown and converted to Catholicism," Ms. Deagan said.

In an attempt to recapture the former slaves and take over St.

Augustine, Georgia Gov. James Oglethorpe attacked the fort in 1743. The settlers fled and the fort was abandoned for five years.

After the fort was re-established in 1748, the settlers lived there until 1763, the year Florida became an English colony. They moved on to Cuba, Ms. Deagan said.

Records show Fort Mose was last used in 1812 by Gen. George Matthews, who was sent by President James Madison to wage a secret war on the Spanish and get control of Florida.

"Spanish troops blew him off the island and blew away the top of the fort," Williams said.

Fort Mose's remains sank into the marsh during the next 150 years and its history was all-but forgotten.

Full-scale digging began after state Rep. Bill Clark persuaded the Legislature to appropriate $100,000 for the project.

"This is important to all citizens, especially black citizens of the state," Clark said last month. "Ever since there were slaves in this country, we have been searching for freedom. Fort Mose symbolizes that, since it is the first free black community."

USDA Says Food-System Sales Climbed 5 Percent Last Year

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preliminary estimates by the Agriculture Department showed the food marketing pipeline, extending from the farm to the kitchen table, had sales of $484.3 billion last year, up 5 percent from $460.9 billion in 1985.

"The food system (even without non-food grocery items) in 1986 will continue to be the largest marketing system in the U.S. economy, accounting for about one-tenth of both U.S. employment and gross national product," the department's report said Wednesday.

Economists projected sales of about $70 billion worth of non-food items such as tobacco, health and beauty aids, and household supplies.

"Food manufacturers, retailers (both grocery retailing and food service), and wholesalers in 1986 will rank first in sales among all manufacturers, retailers and wholesalers," the report said.

The report, prepared under the direction of Anthony E. Gallo of the department's Economic Research Service, explained that the annual sales value takes into account the value added through each step of the marketing pipeline.

For example, about $110 billion worth of raw agricultural and fishery products made up the starting value. That included about $18 billion worth of imported agricultural products, including meat, coffee, bananas, cocoa, spices, dairy products and produce.

The food system, which includes alcoholic beverages, added more than $300 billion to the value of those raw products, with processing, transportation, wholesaling, retailing and others adding their charges. For example, the report said, the nation's 16,800 food processors probably added $80 billion last year.

Wholesalers, retailers and transportation firms, plus separate eating and drinking establishments, made up the remainder.

"The major portion of the value added by the food marketing system is labor, ranging from payroll for workers in food processing plants to waiters in restaurants and institutional dining rooms," the report said. "Although the U.S. food system is the major customer of the domestic farm economy, purchased agricultural products are not the major cost of the food system."

Although some of the figures for 1986 were incomplete, the preliminary findings showed that overall profit margins in the food system probably did not increase "despite volume growth and favorable wage and price stability."

The average consumer cost of food last year rose about 3 percent from 1985, the report said. Food bought for home use rose about 2.7 percent, while food eaten in restaurants and other away-from-home establishments went up 3.9 percent.

DOT Will Allow Airline Smoking

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department decided to continue allowing smoking aboard commercial jetliners, despite a scientific panel's recommendation that smoking be barred on all domestic flights, department sources say.

The department plans to send its response to the National Academy of Sciences report on airline smoking to Congress within the next few days, including its conclusion that more studies are needed before a ban on airline smoking should be considered.

The academy's National Research Council concluded an 18-month study of aircraft cabin air, including the effects of tobacco smoke, last August and issued a report which urged that smoking be prohibited on all domestic airline flights.

Drifting tobacco smoke in aircraft cabins poses "a clear health risk" to frequent flyers and airline employees, the 12-member panel concluded. It said for flight attendants the exposure to drifting smoke was equivalent to smoking a pack of cigarettes a day.

But in its response to that report, the Transportation Department contends the academy's findings were not convincing and that further studies on the effects of tobacco smoke in airline cabins are needed, according to sources familiar with the department's position.

The Transportation Department has jurisdiction over regulations that would govern smoking aboard commercial aircraft, including those now in effect which require airlines to maintain separate smoking and nonsmoking sections.

Unions representing flight attendants and various anti-smoking groups had sought some new curbs on smoking aboard aircraft.

British Actress Patricia Hodge Appears In Three PBS Shows

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — British actress Patricia Hodge is enjoying a bit of an American television festival with appearances on three public broadcasting shows this year.

Her first appearance is tonight as guest star in an episode of "Sherlock Holmes" in the "Mystery!" series. On May 3, she costars with Nigel Havers in "The Death of the Heart" on "Masterpiece Theatre." Next fall, she will return as the lady barrister in two episodes of "Rumpole of the Bailey."

She has also just been nominated for the British equivalent of the Emmy for her role as Monica in "Hotel du Lac."

Hodge flew here from London immediately after closing in "Noel and Gertie," in which she played Gertrude Lawrence. Australian actor Lewis Fiander played Noel Coward.

"We may bring the show to New York in September," she said. Negotiations are now under way for the play, which would be produced on Broadway by Frank Goodman.

The svelte, red-haired actress stars in an episode of the Sherlock Holmes series called "The Second Stain." Jeremy Brett is Holmes in this latest incarnation. Holmes was created 100 years ago this year by Arthur Conan Doyle.

"I play a disconsolate woman," Hodge explained. "She's a woman who's gotten herself into a terrible mess. She's done it for the best of reasons, but her husband's in the government and it's about to cause a crisis. Holmes helps her in a purely personal way, so that the cracks are sealed without anyone noticing."

The Holmes mystery is set in the 1890s. "Rumpole" is contemporary. Hodge plays barrister Phillida Erskine-Brown.

She has played the role since the beginning of the "Rumpole" series nine years ago, although she makes only occasional appearances each season. In the fall, she's due to be in two of the five shows. Leo McKern stars as rumpole in the series created by John Mortimer ("Paradise Postponed").

"When it got going, I was a very, very junior barrister in chambers," she said. "He didn't like the idea of a woman in chambers. He led her down the garden path. She thought he was being helpful, and he was actually teaching her a rough lesson."

"Then he became her mentor. They actually help each other. She's now become a QC, which is Queen's Counsel (prosecutor)."

"The Death of the Heart," based on the novel by Elizabeth Bowen, tells the story of a bored couple in pre-war England and a young girl who comes to live with them.

"They are disturbed by the arrival of this child," said Hodge. "She ruffles the surface of their hitherto perfect existence. It's really about the child finding love for the first time."

Hodge grew up in Lincolnshire on England's east coast, moving to London at age 18. She taught school in the "home counties" around London, then studied drama at the London Academy of Music and Dramatic Arts.

"I'd always wanted to be an actress," she said. "It just took me a while to work up the courage to do anything about it. Everybody tried to dissuade me. I was just too nervous to try drama school when I was 18. I needed some more time, although I was involved in amateur productions."

She won the best actress award when she graduated. A director who had seen her perform in school inited her to join a repertory company in Edinburgh. After touring with the company she got her first role in London's West End in "Popkiss." Within a year she had the leading role in the London version of "Pippin."

She has also appeared extensively on British television and starred with Jeremy Irons and Ben Kingsley in the movie "Betrayal."

She is married to musician Peter Owen.

"I hope to return to this country for 'Noel and Gertie,'" said Hodge. "She and Coward had known each other since they were children. He wrote many of his best roles for her. He said she was one of the greatest exponents of his work."

Heart Attack Kills James Coco

NEW YORK (AP) — James Coco, a one-time dishwasher whose love for the theater propelled him into a lifetime of character roles on Broadway and television, has died after suffering a heart attack. He was 56.

The Emmy award-winning actor was pronounced dead Wednesday night at St. Vincent's Hospital, less than three hours after being admitted, said spokesman Paul Simonetti.

Emergency medical personnel had been called to Coco's Greenwich Village home at 7:45 p.m., said Capt. Thomas M. Ryan of Emergency Medical Service.

"I'm very upset. I think he was one of the best actors I've had the privilege of working with," playwright Terrence McNally said early today.

"He could make you care very deeply. It was an enormous gift. ... He could make us laugh and cry both. Audiences liked him from the instant he walked on stage."

Coco's career spanned three decades, and he appeared in such Broadway shows as "The Last of the Red Hot Lovers," "Man of La Mancha" and "You Can't Take It With You." He made his off-Broadway debut in "Salome" in 1956.

In the late 1960s, he was best known as Willie, the plump plumber on Drano commercials.

Coco got a boost in the 1968 off-Broadway production of McNally's "Next."

His big break came in 1969 in Neil Simon's "Red Hot Lovers," a role that earned him a Tony nomination. In the show's more than 700 performances, he played a middle-aged, overweight married restaurant owner trying unsuccessfully to join the sexual revolution.

"Up until then, I'd just been another character actor," he told an interviewer when "Red Hot Lovers" made him a star. "I guess right now I'm giving a lot of other character actors — fat and skinny — hope. The impossible can happen. You, too, can become a star."

Most recently, the once-rotund Coco made the interview show circuit to promote his book, "The James Coco Diet."

Coco's dream of becoming an actor began when he was a child.

"When I was around 8, my mother began taking me to the movies and I got hooked by Hollywood and the glamour of the stars," he once said. "I begged to see everything. The Andy Hardy movies. All of Garland. Priscilla Lane, Bette Davis and Paul Muni were my idols."

"In a sense, I was formed by the movies. I got most of my ideas and fantasies from them and I think I must have started imagining what it could like to be an actor when I was sitting in the darkness of some Loew's movie palace."

Born in the New York City borough of the Bronx on March 21, 1930, Coco worked as a toy salesman, night clerk, waiter and dishwasher. His strict father did not approve of his dreams of stardom, and put him to work at age 10 shining shoes in the family shoe shop. His mother died when he was 13.

Coco became a stage manager of a touring children's theater while still in his teens, and appeared in his first role as Old King Cole. He went on to become a character actor in summer stock and off-Broadway.

In 1983, Coco won an Emmy as the outstanding supporting actor in a drama series for his appearance in an episode on NBC-TV's "St. Elsewhere." He also received two Obie awards for off-Broadway appearances.

His Obies were for his 1959 performance as a humorless German scientist in "The Moon in the Yellow River" and for his 1967 role in "Fragments."

He appeared in a number of movies, including "A New Leaf," "The Strawberry Statement," "Tell Me That You Love Me, Junie Moon," "Such Good Friends," "Man of La Mancha," "The Wild Party" and "Murder by Death." His last film was the "The Muppets Take Manhattan" in 1984.

Coco had two short-lived television series, "Calucci's Dept." in 1973 and

Norman Lear's "The Dumplings" in 1976. He also made numerous guest appearances on various TV shows, including "Marcus Welby, M.D."

"The Flip Wilson Show" and "Who's The Boss." Coco appeared regularly on "The Tonight Show With Johnny Carson Show."

Cheaper Vehicles Rank Among Best In Bumper Study

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Expensive does not automatically mean better when it comes to automobile bumpers, says an insurance industry group that ranks repair costs for your average 5 mph fender-bender.

The Insurance Institute for Highway Safety said that of 22 mid-size cars tested in a series of low-speed crashes, six of the more expensive cars fared poorly, while some of the cheaper models had relatively low repair costs because of greater bumper protection.

The new Chevrolet Corsica, for example, had a total repair bill of $419, the lowest of any of the cars, although its base list price was less than $9,000.

In all, four of the six best performers in the tests had sticker prices less than $9,000, while the six worst performers carried base sticker prices of between $10,000 and $10,998.

The cars included in the four tests (front and rear barrier, front angle, and rear into a pole) were 1987 models with base sticker prices from $7,499 to $10,998.

Damage as a result of crashes ranged widely from $419 in all four tests on the Corsica and $866 for the Toyota Camry to just over $2,000 for the Pontiac 6000 and Honda Accord DX. In the least severe front and rear barrier crash, 10 cars had little or no damage, while several cars sustained around $600 in damage.

"As in previous low-speed crash tests ... the price of the cars did not reflect the performance of their bumper systems," said Brian O'Neill, president of the Insurance Institute.

O'Neill said, however, that the test results of the Corsica, a new car that recently went on the market, demonstrated that design considerations can reduce repair costs in low-speed, fender-bender accidents.

"It's encouraging to see a manufacturer substantially exceed federal bumper requirements and help consumers avoid the cost and aggravation of fender-benders," O'Neill said.

While General Motors Corp. fared well with the Corsica, it did not do as well with several other models. The Buick Century and the Pontiac 6000 were among the cars with the highest repair costs.

GM spokesman Bill Noack said the company was pleased with the Corsica's ranking. When asked about the relatively high repair costs of the Pontiac 6000, he noted that four of the top best performers were GM cars.

"I think that speaks for itself," Noack said.

Only three of the cars tested were Japanese imports, but they showed a wide range of repair costs as well. While the Toyota Camry ranked second ($866), the Nissan Stanza E was seventh ($1,379), the Honda Accord was last ($2,030).

Another popular car, the Ford Taurus, ranked 19th ($1,945), but Ford officials defended Ford bumpers, which are above federal minimum standards. Robert Munson, director of safety at Ford, said both the Taurus and its sister car, the Mercury Sable, qualify for insurance premium discounts and have average loss payments as much as 30 percent below average.

Here is a list of the 22 cars and their total repair costs as a result of the four crash tests (front and rear barrier, front angle, and rear into a pole):

Chevrolet Corsica, $419; Toyota Camry, $866; Buick Skyhawk, $1,024; Oldsmobile Firenza, $1,125; Pontiac Sunbird, $1,243; Ford Tempo GL, $1,259; Nissan Stanza E, $1,379; Oldsmobile Calais, $1,381; Chrysler LeBaron GTS, $1,530;

Mercury Sable GS, $1,571; Plymouth Reliant LE, $1,617; Chevrolet Celebrity, $1,619; Chevrolet Cavalier, $1,655; Oldsmobile Ciera, $1,704; Buick Skylark, $1,710; Pontiac Grand Am, $1,749; Chrysler LeBaron, $1,872; Dodge 600, $1,884; Ford Taurus GL, $1,945; Buick Century, $1,996; Pontiac 6000, $2,004; Honda Accord DX, $2,030.

GAO Says B-1 Has Built-In Beacon To Guide Enemy

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ordering a warplane before it is fully tested is the wrong way to build a complex weapon like the B-1 bomber and it will cost billions of dollars to correct all the problems, the General Accounting Office says.

One problem with the bomber is that the electronic defenses to protect it as it flies actually create a "beacon effect" that make it easier for enemies to spot the plane, the Los Angeles Times reported today.

The GAO, the congressional watchdog agency, told a House Armed Services subcommittee Wednesday that the 1981 decision to go ahead and build 100 of the long-range bombers and test them as the program went along was "a major contributor to all the present problems."

"The very heavy concurrency (between production and testing) resulted in almost all the problems," said Frank Conahan, director of GAO's national security division.

Congressional sources not identified by the Times said the "beacon effect" problem was discussed in secret by House subcommittee members following the GAO findings presentation.

"We don't know how difficult it will be to fix, but right now it causes the B-1B to stand out like a lighthouse" on Soviet radar screens, one source was quoted as saying.

"It may not be the most difficult or critical problem, but it is the most dramatic yet," the source said, adding that the Air Force is trying to correct the problem and Pentagon officials are confident it won't derail the program.

The problem is "in the 100 or so black boxes" that make up the plane's electronic countermeasures system, the source said.

Other problems with the bomber include bugs in the terrain-following radar which allows it to fly low under enemy radars and (not) such weight.

All the plane's problems can be fixed, but it will be expensive, Conahan said during the open hearing. He estimated the original $20.5 billion cost for 100 of the planes may rise to a $28.1 billion total.

"Performance has been considerably less than originally intended," Conahan said. "We have an airplane that can essentially proceed to its target, deliver its load and do its mission," although not as well as it was supposed to, he told the panel.

Air Force officials did not immediately react to the GAO criticism, but at a separate Senate hearing Monday, they defended the B-1 as "the best warplane in the world today."

"It's even going to be better tomorrow," said Gen. John Chain Jr., commander of the Strategic Air Command, as he testified to the Senate Armed Services Committee.

In reaction, Conahan said, "It could potentially become the best bomber in the world, but I don't think the Air Force is in a position to give that assurance."

In 1977, President Carter killed the B-1A program when he decided the successor to the aging B-52 long-range bomber should be the radar-evading "stealth" plane instead of the B-1.

But when President Reagan took office in 1981, he resurrected the bomber as the B-1B, saying it was quickly needed as a bridge until the "stealth" planes could be built. Congress went along, but in an effort to save time and money, agreed with Reagan that the plane should be produced at the same time it was tested.

Rockwell International, the prime contractor, began delivering B-1s last fall and about one-third of the total have been sent to the Air Force, Conahan said. The last is scheduled for delivery in the summer of 1988.

"It's kind of late in the game to make a major shift," Conahan said in answer to questions about what choices Congress now has. "What we need to do is learn some lessons for the future. The very heavy concurrency resulted in almost all the problems."

Asked who was at fault, Conahan cited the Air Force and Rockwell for saying the plane could be produced at the same time it was tested, but also noted that Congress had approved the plan.

Rep. Sam Stratton, D-N.Y., said, "What we've got here is a pretty substantial disaster on the part of the Air Force."

But Conahan said that "in areas where significant changes were made from the B-1A, much of the redesign and development had to be conducted while production efforts were under way."

"Maintaining the production schedule, which was established to meet the (October 1986) date, often meant that some components were based on an immature design," he said.

A First Federal IRA specialist will be happy to help you maximize your individual tax savings on a high-yielding First Federal IRA.

We'll help you maximize your tax benefits this year while explaining what the new tax laws may bring next year.

We know the ins and outs of making an IRA work harder to meet your needs. That's why we're happy to explain our different IRA plans and help you select the one plan that makes the most sense for your particular situation.

So instead of being a face in the crowd at one of the big banks' IRA factories, bring this year's IRA investment to First Federal.

That's the way we do things at Golden Corral. And there's no secret about that. Maybe that's why everything tastes better at Golden Corral.
