Surprise N.C. Storm Drops Up To 7 Inches Of Snow

By The Associated Press
A surprise winter storm dumped eight or more inches of snow on North Carolina's northern mountains today and brought lesser amounts as far east as the state's coastal plain, the National Weather Service said.
"I live 11 miles up the highway in Boone and it was bad coming in to work this morning," said Zelma Goforth, a secretary for a law firm in Wilkesboro. "There wasn't much traffic on the road coming in because everything up here is closed. We have got about 9 inches ... is that enough? Yes, it was a surprise."

The weather service issued a winter storm warning today for the northern mountains and foothills and the northeast and northwest Piedmont. A travelers advisory was issued for the central coastal plains and northern coastal area.

In Nash County, a school bus overturned about 11:10 a.m. while taking students home after classes were cancelled at 10:30 a.m. because of a mixture of sleet and rain falling in the area.
"We do know that an ambulance has been sent," said a woman who answered the telephone at the Nash County Bus Garage in Nashville. "We don't know the extent of injuries or how many children were involved or anything."
Additional details of the school bus accident were not available, but no other vehicles were believed involved in the wreck, officials said.

"Precipitation is falling over all of North Carolina except the extreme east and parts of the mountains," the weather service said at 8:30 a.m. "A mixture of rain snow and sleet was falling over the (Raleigh-Durham area) and areas to the north and east. Rain was falling south of a line from New Bern to Goldsboro to north of Charlotte to Asheville."

The Ice Returns

Sleet again threatened to cover the Pitt County area in ice today, but area forecasters said rain would wash it away before traveling hazards developed.
Area precipitation began this morning with a combination of sleet and rain that was expected to change to rain by early afternoon, according to area forecasts. High and low temperatures were expected to range from low to mid 40s.
The Greenville Public Works Department had crews checking bridges and trouble areas this morning for accumulated sleet and ice, said Mayo Allen.

"They're wet, but there's no ice," he said. "Sleet is falling, but it's not sticking on the highway."
Bethel and Williamston officials also reported sleet and wet conditions, but no ice had accumulated on the roads.
Rain is expected to continue through the weekend with high temperatures ranging from the mid to high 50s.

Regan Set To Resign

'Angry' President Seeks New Direction For Staff

By MERRILL HARTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House said today President Reagan is "rightfully angry" about foreign policy mismanagement in the Iran-Contra affair and "intends to make changes as soon as possible."

Perhaps signaling the start of a shake-up in senior levels of the White House staff after the Tower commission's critical report Thursday, a senior administration official said Reagan's chief of staff, Donald T. Regan, had told the president he intends to resign.

This official, who spoke only on condition that he not be identified, said the president was leaving the timing of the departure up to Regan.

Presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, delivering the Reagan administration's first substantive reaction to the Tower commission's criticism of White House decision-making, would neither confirm nor deny that Regan's resignation was imminent.

Fitzwater did tell reporters that the president "is discussing the chief of staff situation" with longtime political associates and advisers.

Over the next several days — in what may be the most crucial days of his presidency — Reagan will analyze the Tower panel's report criticizing his supervision of national security aides in the Iran-Contra affair and confer with a wide range of advisers, the spokesman said.

"The president is rightfully angry about the mismanagement described in this report and he intends to take action as soon as possible. ... I would say he is determined and eager to set the administration back on course," Fitzwater said.

Reagan is entering a period of mostly seclusion and introspection as he prepares for a nationally televised response to the Tower commission report sometime next week. Officials said the day had not been decided.

Two prime candidates as Regan's successors, former Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., and former Transportation Secretary Drew Lewis, have declined to serve. Others mentioned for the chief of staff job are Energy Secretary John Herrington and Treasury Secretary James A. Baker III, who served as chief of staff before Regan.

Lewis, according to an administration source, was offered the job but turned it down, and Laxalt told the president Thursday he could not accept the job full time.

Fitzwater said that Laxalt and Lewis "are old friends and advisers. Both of them have offered in various ways (to help). I wouldn't comment on specifics."

While the Tower report bluntly criticized Reagan's arms-length style of managing subordinates, it concluded he didn't know about a diversion of arms sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels and that he made a good-faith attempt to get the facts out about what happened.

The three-member board, however, rejected his oft-stated assertion that the overriding principal of selling arms to Tehran was to make contacts with moderate political elements in Iran.

Reagan "clearly didn't understand the nature of this (arms-and-hostage) operation, who was involved and what was happening," Tower told reporters. "Now you can say the president holds himself a little bit too aloof from the implementation of policy."

"The board believes that a

Howell Spends Last Day In ECU Office

Today is Dr. John Howell's last day of work as chancellor of East Carolina University. Monday will be Dr. Richard Eakin's first day of work as chancellor.

Howell said he received several well-wishers at his office on campus this morning. He called his day's work "tying up loose ends" and said he expected to be complete with his chancellor's duties when he went home this afternoon.

Eakin and his wife and daughter, Maridy, were unpacking at the chancellor's residence just off the ECU campus. He predicted they'd be doing the same thing most of the weekend. The family's possessions were delivered from their previous home in Bowling Green, Ky., on Thursday. "I'm very happy to be here at ECU and in Greenville," he said, "and am very excited about beginning work Monday."

Gladys Howell, wife of the chancellor, said she and her husband are happy in the home into which they moved about a week ago. She said they're "about settled in." The Howells plan a trip to Europe this spring.

"We have enjoyed the time that John has been chancellor," she said, "but look forward to the next phase of our life with great anticipation and joy."

BOARD MEMBERS HONORED — Clifton W. Everett, left, chairman of the board of trustees at Pitt Community College, and PCC board member A.B. The recently completed Learning Resources Center on the campus of Pitt Community College will bear the name of board chairman Clifton W. Everett, it was decided by a unanimous vote of the PCC board Thursday.

The board also voted to name the school's soon-to-be-constructed vocational education building for board member A.B. Whitley, who serves as chairman of the board's building committee.

"It is a high and great honor to have the building bear my name," Everett said. "I certainly appreciate this honor and I hope I deserve it."
Everett has served on the PCC

Board of Trustees since its inception.

The library and media center will be dedicated in late April or early May, according to PCC President Charles Russell.

Whitley, who has been a board member for 24 years, said, "I feel very humble. I greatly appreciate being associated with vocational education and the vocational education part of this institution."

The floor plans of the vocational education building have been completed and part of the funds for the construction have been appropriated by the N.C. General Assembly and the Pitt County Commissioners.

Following the board meeting, board members and County Commissioners toured the facilities, which include library and periodical facilities, a dark room, study areas and audio-visual rooms.

The board formally accepted the building subject to the completion of items yet unfinished. Whitley reported that the final inspection on the building has been performed by state construction officials.

The committee established to name the new buildings recommended that deceased PCC faculty members be honored with plaques or portraits located in the new building.

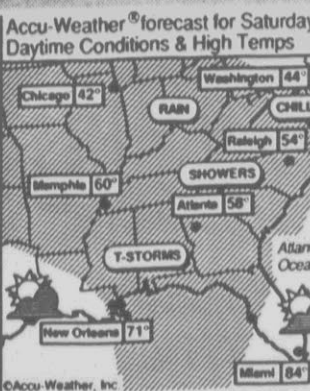

Two policy changes were approved by the board, one concerning accountability and credibility and one relating to the Learning Resources Center Collection, Development and Management Policy.

The Continuing Education Division Accountability and Credibility Policy required by the N.C. Department of Community Colleges calls for documentation and safeguards to assure quality control and accountability for classes and courses. Many of the provisions of the proposed PCC policy had been routinely done by the school's personnel.

The new policy approved by the board calls for an affirmation signature by each of the instructors on the class roster and attendance forms.

The Learning Resources Center Collection, Development and Management Policy approved by board sets forth procedures for the operation of the new facility.

Davis said 150 cartons of cigarettes valued at $7.26 each and 30 cassette tapes valued at $3.20 each were taken from Bailey's Convenient Mart at 1201 Dickinson Ave. in an incident reported at 4:52 a.m.

According to Officer Alexander Batts, a television set was taken from 1208B Ward St. in a break-in reported at 7:10 p.m.

Favorite Teachers

The school newspaper at Eastern Elementary School recently sponsored a favorite teacher contest, with students in kindergarten through third grade submitting articles about their favorite teachers.

Prizes for the winners were awarded at an assembly today. Students submitting the winning articles were Meredith Galloway, Katie Yeager, Amanda Williams, Kelly Tetterton and Leslie Beam.

Permits Approved

The Greenville Board of Adjustment approved three special use permits at its monthly meeting Thursday night.

The board approved a request by Bishop Arizona H. Hartsfield and the Higgs Heirs for a special use permit to allow a rooming-boarding house at 1112 Dickinson Ave. The property is zoned commercial downtown fringe.

The panel also approved a request by Carolina Telephone and Telegraph Co. and Durward M. Harris Jr. for a special use permit to allow a public utility use (telephone remote switching module) in the existing Bells Fork Shopping Center on N.C. 43. The property is zoned shopping center.

Board members approved a request by Collice C. Moore for a special use permit to allow a sporting goods store at 3194 E. 10th St. The property is zoned highway commercial.

A request by Jesse R. Laughinghouse for a variance in order to expand the Bostic-Sugg Furniture building beyond the 40 percent maximum lot coverage limit was continued. The property is located at 401 W. 10th St.

A request by Charles D. Woodard for a special use permit allowing a care home on the north side of State Road 1134 was withdrawn. The property, located approximately 0.7 miles west of N.C. 11 south, is zoned residential-agricultural.

A request by Jack and Maggie Yow for a special use permit allowing a full service car wash and gasoline sales on the west side of South Memorial Drive was withdrawn. The property, which is adjacent to Crazy Joes Auto Parts, is zoned shopping center.

Teachers chosen as favorites were Delores Ford, kindergarten; Laura Gooding, first grade; Margaret Brown, second grade; Barbara Brown, third grade, and Jean Tinkham, honorable mention.

No opposition was voiced over a proposed dog leash ordinance, or ordinances to regulate noise and massage businesses in the county, at a public hearing at the county office building Thursday night.

In fact the only three people to speak at the hearings voiced support for the noise control proposal.

If given final approval by the board, the noise control ordinance would prohibit persons from creating any unreasonably loud, disturbing and unnecessary noise within 300 yards of a dwelling from 7 a.m. to 10 p.m. — unless the person in control of the dwelling has given prior consent.

The ordinance would also prohibit the creation of any unreasonably loud, disturbing and unnecessary noise within 100 yards of any dwelling between the hours of 10 p.m. and 7 a.m. — unless the person in control of the dwelling has given prior consent.

Under the ordinance, prohibited acts generally include: blowing

Report Depicts North As Man Under Pressure

By W. DALE NELSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Oliver L. North emerges from the Tower commission report as a man so bedeviled by the pressures of his White House job that his former boss suggested he be hospitalized for disability review.
He is portrayed as having made up stories about meetings with President Reagan at Camp David, Md., that never took place.
And he is shown to have misjudged the political impact of what he was doing, writing in a memo that everything was "going to be just fine" as soon as people knew that money received for arms from Iran was being used to assist rebels in Nicaragua and that "the Ayatollah ... is helping us with the Contras."

OLIVER NORTH

Scattered throughout Thursday's inch-thick report by the presidential panel are illuminating glimpses of the Marine Corps officer who ran the Iran-Contra operation from his National Security Council office.

As he drove away from his suburban Great Falls, Va., home this morning, North told reporters he had read the Tower commission report but refused to comment. He said his lawyer had advised him that "at the appropriate time and the appropriate forum, I will make a full ... statement of all the facts as I know them."

Asked what he wanted Americans to know about him as they read the report, North suggested that they read the eighth Beatitude in Matthew

5 of the Bible. That passage reads, "Blessed are those who are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven."
North was fired Nov. 25 after it was disclosed that proceeds from the secret arms sales to Iran apparently had been diverted to assist the Nicaraguan guerrillas whom the president has described as freedom fighters.
But as early as last June, the report shows, former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane wrote to his successor, John M. Poindexter, that he was worried about the pressure on North.
"I don't (know) what you do about it but in Ollie's interest I would get him transferred or sent to Bethesda (Naval Medical Center) for disability review board," McFarlane wrote. He also wrote that apparently "the Marine Corps has already tried to survey him once."
McFarlane said North's departure would be a loss but, "In the end it may be better anyway."

Poindexter replied that he would consider McFarlane's concerns.

North said this morning he was aware that McFarlane raised the possibility of disability review with Poindexter, and had overlooked the reference to it in the Tower report.

"I missed that," North told reporters. "What page is that on?"
In mid-July, after what North described as a "disturbing" meeting with Poindexter on Central American issues, the lieutenant colonel wrote Poindexter that it was "deeply disappointing to have lost your confidence" and that "it would probably be best if I were to move on as quietly, but expeditiously, as possible."
"You should not be expected to retain on your staff someone who you suspect could be talking to the media or whom you believe to be too emotionally involved in an issue to be objective in the development of policy options and recommendations," North wrote.

He stayed on, however, after Poindexter replied, "Now you are getting emotional again" and added, "I do not want you to leave and to be honest cannot afford to let you go."

Less than three months later, on Oct. 5-7, North met with Iranian representatives in Frankfurt, West Germany, and, according to the report, "misrepresented his access to the president and attributed to the president things the president never said."

At that meeting, the American delegation brought a Bible signed by the president and inscribed by him with a scriptural passage that reads: "And the scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the gentile by faith, preached the gospel beforehand to Abraham, saying, 'All the nations shall be blessed in you.'"
The report quoted North as telling the Iranians:
"We inside our government had an enormous debate, a very angry debate inside our government over whether or not my president should authorize me to say, 'We accept the Islamic Revolution of Iran as a fact.'"

"He (the president) went off one whole weekend and prayed about what the answer should be and he came back almost a year ago with the passage I gave you that he wrote in front of the Bible I gave you. And he said to me, 'This is a promise that God gave to Abraham. Who am I to say that we should not do this?'"

Actually, the commission said, North suggested the Bible and inscription in a memo to Poindexter on Oct. 2. Poindexter approved, and the president inscribed the Bible the next morning.

Also at the Frankfurt meeting, the commission's report said, North told stories of private discussions with Reagan at Camp David, the presidential hideaway in the Catoctin Mountains of Maryland.
"The first had the president saying that he wanted an end to the Iran-Iraq war on terms acceptable to Iran," the commission said. "The second had the president saying that the Gulf states had to be convinced that it was Saddam Hussein of Iraq that was 'causing the problem.'"
Reagan told the commission the stories were "absolute fiction" and the meetings never took place, the report said. The administration maintains that it wants the Iran-Iraq war settled without a military victory by either side.
A month later, in November, according to what Assistant Secretary of Defense Richard Armitage told the commission, North said to Armitage, "It's going to be just fine ... as soon as everyone knows that the Ayatollah (Ruhollah Khomeini of Iran) ... is helping us with the Contras," as the Nicaraguan rebels are known.

Report Doesn't Explain What Happened To Funds

By DAVID ESPO
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tower commission is leaving it to future investigators to determine whether any of the profits from secret arms sales to Iran went to the Contras rebels in Nicaragua and who authorized such a diversion.

"Sizeable sums of money generated by the arms sale to Iran remain unaccounted for," the board said Thursday in a report which left unsolved several other mysteries in the complex controversy.
"There was considerable evidence before the board of a diversion to support the Contras. But the board had no hard proof," said the report, which was able to track in great detail events surrounding the string of secret arms sales.

In all, the report said the price charged to Iran was nearly $20 million in excess of what the Pentagon received for the weapons contained in four shipments. And while they concluded that some of that money eventually found its way to the Contras, board members also suggested that some of it found its way to middlemen in the form of "kickbacks and payoffs."

The Tower Commission was the second — and more comprehensive — attempt to get to the bottom of the foreign policy debacle that has rocked the Reagan administration. And while it uncovered far more information than a quick, three-week probe conducted last December by the Senate Intelligence Committee, it conceded it was unable to resolve several lingering questions.

Untangling these questions now will fall to independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh and special House and Senate committees already at work on their own investigations. Even so, these probes will be forced to confront the same obstacles the Tower Commission faced.

Two key figures in the affair, former National Security Council staff member Oliver L. North and former National Security Adviser John M. Poindexter, have refused to testify. It may take months for investigators to gain access to records from bank accounts in Switzerland and elsewhere, and while Israelis who played a key role have agreed to respond to written questions, they have not agreed to answer questions in person.

The central questions revolve around the apparent diversion of funds to the Contra rebels.

—The board found that North, a Marine lieutenant colonel, masterminded the apparent attempt to divert funds to the Contras, and that Poindexter had acknowledged to former administration colleagues he knew about it. But it said, "It is unclear whether Lt. Col. North ever sought or received prior approval" for his activities.

The board reported finding a memo authored by North in April 1986 in which he wrote that $12 million in arms sales funds would be used to purchase supplies for the Contras. But it also said it had no evidence North ever showed the memo to Poindexter, the president or any other government official.

—The board left unclear who in the administration knew of the apparent diversion, which was publicly disclosed by Attorney General Edwin Meese III on Nov. 25. Former National Security Adviser Robert C. McFarlane said North told him of the effort while the two were on their way home from a secret trip to Tehran in 1986.

The board turned up no evidence to contradict Reagan's claim that he didn't know of the diversion until Meese told him, although it said former CIA Director William J. Casey likely received information about the diversion "almost a month before the story broke."

These other questions also await Walsh and the investigators in Congress.

—Did the president give formal approval in advance for Israeli arms shipments to Iran in the summer of 1985? "On balance, the board believes that it is plausible to conclude that he did approve them in advance," the report said. Reagan at first told the board he had, then — after conferring with chief of staff Donald T. Regan — said he hadn't. Finally, in a letter to the board last week, Regan wrote, "the simple truth is, 'I don't remember — period.'"

—Do official notes exist recounting key meetings at which Poindexter was the official note taker? The commission said it was concerned that various notes appear to be missing, and said, "If they were written they may contain very important information. We have no way of knowing if they exist."

—Was there a wider effort to cover up essential elements of the Iran-Contra developments? The board said it is convinced Reagan "does indeed want the full story to be told."

Israelis Cite U.S. Responsibility

JERUSALEM (AP) — A spokesman for Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir said today the Tower commission report showed that arms deals with Iran were "mostly an internal American matter," but promised to provide further information about Israel's role.
Israeli officials expressed relief that the report released in Washington on Thursday did not make Israel a scapegoat. The report said U.S. decision-makers had to bear responsibility for the secret arms sales however much Israel encouraged such dealings.

"Our impression is that indeed it turns out Israel was not the focus, and that it is mostly an internal American matter," Shamir spokesman Yossi Ahimeir said in a telephone interview.
After the report was issued, Shamir met with Cabinet Secretary Eliakim Rubinstein, who was assigned to coordinate Israel's side of the investigation.

"We plan to answer the questions they (U.S. investigators) give us in writing," said Ahimeir.
Rubinstein, who accompanied Shamir to Washington last week, received questions from the Tower commission Feb. 16, but Israeli officials said there was not enough time to respond before the report was published.

Sound Leader

Dr. John Howell is at last at the point in his life where he can look back on an academic administrative career that he did not plan.

He never asked for administrative duties, but it was something he was called upon to do time and time again. And he never shirked when asked.

The East Carolina University chancellor is retiring today from a career in education which began in 1950 and service to ECU that began in 1957. Prior to coming here he had served at the University of Idaho, Randolph-Macon Women's College, Duke University, Sweetbriar College and Memphis State University. After that it was a position at ECU as a professor of political science. He never left. He served as department chairman, dean of the college of arts and sciences, dean of the graduate school, vice chancellor for academic affairs, acting chancellor and culminated his career as chancellor of East Carolina University.

The five years he served as chancellor capped his academic career. History may view it as the time when many of the gains won by ECU in the 1950s, '60s and '70s were consolidated and polished. Certainly it was that, and it was also a time of progress. Howell established the University Scholars program which is already paying dividends and will pay more. There has been clear academic progress during his tenure. The medical school, which was already established when he assumed the chancellorship, has developed to a nationally respected level.

Interestingly the Howell era was one when a leveling off, or even a decline of enrollment, was predicted because of a shrinking number of young people in the college age pool. It didn't happen here and that is an indication of the strong interest that is being maintained in the varied programs offered by ECU.

Sound judgement on the part of Dr. Howell, a sense of humor and a strong desire to be of service have been his hallmarks. Today he leaves a thriving campus, one he played a major role in developing during his years here.

Dr. Howell can take pride in a job well done. He is handing over to future leaders a university that is ready for new challenges. As long as there is an East Carolina University he will be remembered as one who helped guide it to the pinnacles it may reach.

No Defense

Tom Wicker, the astute political columnist for The New York Times, strongly questions President Reagan's defense of his Iran-Contra arms deal affair.

Wicker said in a recent interview while in Greenville that the president's saying he didn't know about the dealings is "not much of a defense."

Wicker said the arms sale to Iran "does deal quite profoundly with national security." Thus it is something about which the president should have been informed.

The argument that the arms sale was designed to improve relations with Iranian moderate elements is weak because the arms were going to Ayatollah Khomeini controlled armed forces.

Wicker said it was "almost inconceivable" to him that two relatively low ranking officers could, on their own, carry out the arms deal and diversion of funds to the Contras. It was his opinion that Reagan approved the arms sales. However, he said it was less clear whether the president actually knew of the diversion of funds to the Contras.

The presidential role in the entire affair is muddled, indeed. That in itself is ominous. A matter that includes arms sales and secret transfers of money, thus invoking the nation's security should include the president's involvement. If that was not the case, now it is proper to determine why.

Problems Lurk

These days Congress is wrestling with how far to go in discouraging Americans from smoking. Its contemplated moves range from a cigarette advertising ban to higher cigarette taxes. It appears in a position to apply either or both.

The world knows full well "the power to tax is the power to destroy" and we suspect the multi-layered processes of taxation and increasing cigarette costs to consumers have done more to dampen the smoking habit than any other single factor.

Oklahoma's Rep. Mike Synar has legislation being considered to ban cigarette ads from magazines, newspapers and elsewhere. Cigarette makers spent an estimated $2.1 billion on advertising in 1985.

Any suggestion Synar's measure might run counter to the First Amendment rights of free speech are met with a handful of court opinions to bolster his campaign. The advertising program must have proven effective because no one simply throws away that kind of money.

Still, it's plain that problems of tobacco growers and manufacturers are far from being behind them. Overcoming obstacles year after year can be wearying and frustrating. There are always more in the wings.

An Image Of A Declining America

RALEIGH — When many of today's adults were growing up, there was little doubt that America was the most powerful nation on earth.

Our military had just freed two continents from Axis rule, our farms were feeding the world and our factories operated pretty much without foreign competition because of the devastation the war brought to Europe and Japan.

Today, America holds no such lofty position. Our military may be the world's most powerful, but our industry is getting beat all over the globe and our farms are failing. And in debates from one end of the country to another, Americans are searching for ways to regain our lost pre-eminence.

At N.C. State University's recent "Emerging Issues Forum," one speaker asked a jolting question: Does America have to be number one?

There is little doubt that America will never be number one in the post war sense of the words. In 1946, America had no competition.

'These people did not foresee an America in the process of regaining her old glory. Rather, they saw America clinging desperately just to stay near the top.'

Alice Rivlin, director of economic studies at the Brookings Institution, said Americans are focusing in on the wrong metaphor when they say they want to win in the economic marketplace. Ms. Rivlin said Americans should focus instead on the idea of growing with the world economy.

The idea of "winning" some form of economic contest with Japan, the European Common Market or the Third World is misguided, she said, because America's purpose is served when those countries prosper, also. In fact, their prosperity is proof, said former IBM vice president Lewis Branscomb, that a major American foreign policy initiative, the rebuilding of Japan and Europe after World War II, was a huge success.

Ms. Rivlin said Americans should cheer Japanese, European and Third World successes and should gear our energies to grow with those countries. "It is necessary for all of our economies to grow because that causes the standard of living to rise and it helps more people move out of poverty."

That speech led Washington post columnist David Broder to ask, "Will we ever be number one again?"

Massachusetts Gov. Mike Dukakis said that the world will continue to have more than one superpower, and that the definition of superpower will not be limited to military strength. "There will be other winners as well (as the U.S.). I feel comfortable knowing there will be other winners because there can be a lot of winners, and we'll be one of the biggest. Anyone who doesn't understand that doesn't understand the outside world and will be very unhappy and very frustrated and angry."

While the speakers said that America must understand that the days of absolute pre-eminence are guaranteed not to return, there is no guarantee that this country will even stay competitive. In a few short years, if some current shortcomings are allowed to continue, America will begin slipping into a second tier of nations.

Retired Admiral Bobby Inman stressed the deficiencies of American education as compared to the education which Asian and European children receive. American universities, long considered to be heads and shoulders above those of the rest of the world, are also losing their lead.

Ms. Rivlin, former lead of the congressional budget office, said America's position as one of the world's leading economies is severely threatened by continuance of massive budget deficits.

Bringing Home The Highway Bacon

'The 99th Congress bogged down last October on a highway authorization measure. Now it is imperative that some bill — any bill — be adopted. Otherwise funds for highway construction will be suspended in May.'

WASHINGTON — Within the next few days, unless some irreconcilable hitch develops, House and Senate conferees will agree on terms of a $65 billion highway bill. They will come up with a bad bill, and the bad bill will pass. This is how things work on Capitol Hill.

The 99th Congress bogged down last October on a highway authorization measure. Now it is imperative that some bill — any bill — be adopted. Otherwise funds for highway construction will be suspended in May. Congress has a positive genius for fouling things up, but not even the 100th Congress will permit this political calamity. We will get a bill of some sort.

But what sort? The Senate tried to get a provision by which the states may increase the speed limit on rural interstate highways from 55 to 65 miles per hour. The House is balking. The Senate proposal makes sense. It would not compel any state to raise the limit; the provision is wholly permissive. Surely this is one area in which the venerable principle of federalism could be prudently employed.

The bill will do nothing to curb billboard blight. Robert Stafford of Vermont did his best in the Senate to achieve a reduction in billboards. In the House, Clay Shaw of Florida prepared an admirable amendment to the same effect. The powerful billboard lobby easily defeated their efforts. As a result, the conferees probably will accept language that simply freezes the number of billboards at present levels.

One area of conflict involves the federal subsidy for municipal mass transit systems. Every motorist pays the same gasoline tax, but a part of the tax goes into a special fund for local bus and subway systems. The problem is that only 18 states share in the transit largess; 32 states get nothing at all. This strikes Midwesterners as just a tad unfair; Easterners respond that they support farm subsidies, so shut up and mind your manners.

The conferees will lock horns again this year, as they did last fall, on the "demonstration projects" so beloved by the House Subcommittee on Surface Transportation. The House bill provides 93 of these pretty little pork barrel projects. The goodies, paid in full from the federal highway fund, are spread over 26 states at a cost of $1.1 billion.

The boys will be bringing home some bacon. By way of example, the bill includes nine projects in Chicago. An old drawbridge will be rehabilitated, a new bridge will be built on Lake Shore Drive, and a bridge over Goose Island will be "disinvested." Three parking facilities will be built to serve commuters in southwest Chicago. A street will be reconstructed between Nagle and Oak Park Avenues. Among the subcommittee members who wrote Section 144 are Reps. Gus Savage and William O. Lipinski of Chicago.

The bill provides $29 million to demonstrate methods of reducing traffic congestion at a busy intersection in San Jose, Calif. By remarkable coincidence, another committee member is Norman Mineta, who represents — San Jose.

A minor item appropriates $4 million to build a service road between Massachusetts Avenue and Merrimack Street in Lawrence, Mass. This will demonstrate methods of "enhancing the benefits of an economic rehabilitation project." Committee member Chester Atkins represents, well, Lawrence, Mass.

Surely no one could question the desirability of a project to demonstrate "methods of accommodating increasing truck traffic." And where better to make the demonstration than in New Sewickley, Pa.? Its representative is Joe Kolter, seventh-ranking Democrat on the subcommittee.

Glenn Anderson of Los Angeles is chairman of the subcommittee. You will find this hard to believe, but the largest of the demonstration projects, funded at $74 million, is intended to demonstrate "methods of improving vehicular circulation related to the intermodal transportation of port-related traffic" in, of all places, Los Angeles. If we didn't know better, we might suppose politics plays a part.

Looking over the list, one finds a new bridge over the Toms River in Dover Township, N.J., a new bridge over the Savannah River in Savannah, Ga., and a new bridge over the Tennessee River near Patton Island, Ala. Something of major importance will be demonstrated by widening the highway between Carthage and Noel, Mo. Something else will be demonstrated by improvements on roads leading to the airports of Pittsburgh and San Bernardino, Calif.

Project No. 77 provides $5 million toward a new bridge connecting Gloucester and York counties, Va. This is for the purpose of facilitating the resolution of federal intragovernmental conflicts." This one has to be for real: There's no Virginian on the committee.

Strength For Today

How much do we know? Very little. Every moment of our lives we respond to the force of gravity, yet after centuries of research, science cannot tell us what gravity is or what makes it work.

What is time? There would be no sequence to our thought or life if it were not for the reality of time. Yet, is time a reality? May it be that there are places in the universe where time does not operate?

Almighty God has revealed to us the knowledge we need in order to adapt ourselves to life on this planet. He has shown us how we may live in a satisfactory fashion, fulfilling certain projects, meeting our duties, living our lives with honesty, peace and faith. You may say that this is not much, but as a matter of fact, it is all we need. Let us live up to the best we know and something better will be revealed to us.

Tower Panel Lets Chips Fall On Reagan's Head

WASHINGTON — For all the mistakes Ronald Reagan made as president, the one that may return to haunt him most may be his selection of the three men who left his leadership in tatters Thursday.

A Republican who campaigned for Reagan's election, a Democrat with a reputation for steely integrity, and a military man who once ran the White House nerve center have produced one of the harshest indictments in American history of a sitting president and his top advisers by an agency of the executive branch.

It is a portrait of a president concerned about his image of impotence in freeing American hostages held by Iranian-backed terrorists in Lebanon agreeing to fundamentally "flawed" ransom schemes executed by "amateurish, unprofessional" and "unskilled" aides who, at one point, fumbled away a chance to free four U.S. hostages in a single deal.

"This is a story where everyone fell short," said former Sen. John Tower, the Texas Republican and chairman of the special review board that produced the report that bore a red-white-and-blue presidential seal.

"We operated not in a bipartisan but a non-partisan fashion," said retired general Brent Scowcroft, former national security adviser to President Gerald R. Ford.

"There was no cover up within our operation," said Edmund S. Muskie, a former senator, secretary of state and Democratic presidential candidate.

Although handpicked by the president, the panel on a number of points did not give Reagan the benefit of the doubt. The report brushed aside Reagan's conflicting statements and bad memory about granting approval of weapon shipments by Israel in 1985. The panel said it was "plausible to conclude" that he had granted approval.

Evidence presented showed Reagan clearly worried about the fate of U.S. hostages. But he was also worried about his image in the 1986 election-year.

During the crucial decisions of December 1985, "the president noted that it would be another Christmas with hostages still in Beirut, and that he (the president) was looking powerless and inept because he was unable to do anything to get the hostages out," Donald Regan, the president's chief of staff, told the panel.

The panel openly acknowledged that incomplete records and silent key witnesses prevented getting at all the facts. "The Iran-contra affair has been and in some respects still is an enigma," the report said. However, the panel laid a foundation on which investigators for Congress and the office of special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh will build in the coming months.

But it will be difficult for a Democratic Congress to match the blow delivered to the Reagan presidency by the members of the Washington establishment represented by the Tower commission. While squarely placing the blame on the president for overall failures, the panel delivered stinging rebukes to Secretary of State George P. Shultz and Secretary of Defense Caspar W. Weinberger for distancing themselves from the affair.

"They were not energetic in attempting to protect the president," the panel said.

Although the report acknowledged the potential loss of Reagan's political influence at home, the panel used some of its strongest words to explain the damage Reagan had done to American interests abroad.

"As for arms-for-hostages trades, they could not help but create incentive for further hostage taking," the report said. "The trades rewarded a regime that clearly supported terrorism and hostage-taking."

Other nations would ship arms to Iran, the panel said. The Arab world would see Washington acting on behalf of Israel in siding with Iran. Moderate U.S. allies would doubt American reliability.

The panel said Reagan was tempted by an offer to get all seven U.S. hostages free in one sale of anti-tank missiles. "But it was not genuine," the report said. The sale did not produce the seven hostages, the price quickly went up and negotiations became protracted. "While release of all the hostages continued to be promised, in fact the hostages came out singly if at all.

"This sad history is powerful evidence of why the United States should never have become involved in the arms transfers," the report said.

During once such effort to get all the hostages, the report recounts the ill-fated mission of Robert McFarlane to Tehran last May. McFarlane, a former national security adviser, along with Lt. Col. Oliver North, were so unprepared for the meetings, the report says, that they missed an opportunity to free the four remaining U.S. hostages. North had failed to tell McFarlane that only one hostage was expected to be released when the U.S. plane arrived with part of a delivery of spare parts of anti-aircraft missiles.

"This led McFarlane to refuse an even better Iranian offer than the one North had reason to expect — two hostages immediately and the remaining two after delivery of the rest of the spare parts."

Although Reagan later approved shipment of the rest of the spare parts, only one hostage, Robert Jenico, was released. And the Iranian-backed terrorists in Lebanon seized three more Americans later that summer.

The closest the panel came to acknowledging the difficulty of its task was in the preface to the report's narrative. "Who will guard the guards?" the report asked in Latin.

But in the closing words of its report, the Tower commission made clear that its painful task was a necessary one if future presidents are to avoid repeating Reagan's mistakes.

"If but one of the major policy mistakes we examined had been avoided, the nation's history would bear one less scar, one less embarrassment, one less opportunity for opponents to reverse the principles this nation seeks to preserve."

President Must Be More Involved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Tower Commission had harsh words Thursday for all the key officials involved in the Iran-Contra affair, and the panel's report did not spare the individual who stood above them all, President Reagan.

A damning section, titled "Failure of Responsibility," opened by focusing on the man who had the ultimate responsibility for the actions of the National Security Council.

"You can say this president holds himself a little too aloof from the implementation of policy," the commission's chairman, former Republican Sen. John Tower of Texas, told a news conference.

His description seemed to sum up much of what the commission felt was wrong with the council's operation. Repeatedly, the report returned to that theme.

"The NSC system will not work unless the president makes it work," it said.

"By his actions, by his leadership, the president therefore determines the quality of its performance," the report added.

When it came to recommending reforms in the system, the commission made it clear that the president, the nation's chief executive, is the key. His responsibility does not end with setting policy. He also must demand from his aides an accounting of how that policy is implemented.

"His task is to provide them leadership and direction," said the report. It was clear that leadership and direction in the matter of the Iran-Contra affair was left to others.

As expected, White House staff chief Donald Regan, who is expected to resign shortly, was singled out for particularly harsh criticism.

"He must bear primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House" when the operation was disclosed.

Vice Adm. John Poindexter who served as Reagan's national security adviser during much of the period of secret arms sales to Iran and diversion of funds to the Contra forces in Central America was criticized for misleading Secretary of State George Shultz and for his failure to understand "the serious legal and political risks" presented by the Contra diversion.

Shultz and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger did not escape unscathed.

While both disapproved of the secret policy, the panel declared that rather than make their dissent clear to Reagan "they simply distanced themselves from the program."

And on it went.

Former CIA Director William Casey failed to explain to the president the risks of the operation being conducted by Marine Lt. Col. Oliver L. North. The commission also found no evidence Casey was bothered by the fact a lieutenant colonel on the National Security Council staff was running an operation more properly handled by the CIA.

The president introduced the three members of the board — Tower, former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie and Gen. Brent Scowcroft, who served as national security adviser to President Gerald R. Ford. But he refused to answer any questions about the report.

The board praised Reagan for his determination to have the whole story told, but criticized his aides for what Tower called "a deliberate effort to mislead."

The report said that while Reagan was concerned about the possibility too much disclosure could endanger the hostages "he did not, we believe, intend to mislead the American public or cover up unlawful conduct."

And the president said he would address the nation next week "to give the American people my response to this report. But I pledge to the American people today that I will do whatever is necessary to enact the proper reforms and to meet the challenges ahead."

The Tower commission seemed to suggest that at the top of his list of reforms ought to be a determination to maintain tighter personal control of his staff and demand greater accountability from them.

House OKs Limits On Prisons

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state House voted 106-6 in favor of a bill to cap North Carolina's prison population at 18,000 after members were told the action would pave the way for other efforts to reduce crowding.

"This bill is not a cure-all for overcrowding and other problems," Rep. Anne Barnes, D-Orange, told the House Thursday. "Rather, it is a temporary measure intended to give us time to complete our construction and renovation projects and to assess the impact of our recently expanded diversionary programs."

Ms. Barnes reminded lawmakers that North Carolina prisons face dozens of lawsuits sparked by crowded conditions and could be taken over by the federal government unless something is done. "North Carolina knows itself best and we should have some control of our destiny in regard to our prison system," Ms. Barnes said in an interview. "It would not serve us well to lose that control. ... And, of course, it (federal intervention) has proven monstrously expensive in other states."

Under the bill passed unanimously by Ms. Barnes' House Corrections Committee and now heading to the Senate, several actions would be instituted whenever the prison population reaches 97 percent of capacity.

Authorities would have 60 days to reduce the population to 96 percent of 18,000 and would rely heavily on the quick parole of those eligible. During the 60 days, inmates convicted of non-violent misdemeanors other than drunken driving would become automatically eligible for parole, although it would still be up to the Parole Commission to decide, Ms. Barnes said. Another bill seeks funding to expand the Parole Commission staff, she added. In addition, state prisons could refuse to take inmates from county jails and could return inmates to county facilities, Ms. Barnes said. "I know they will do everything they can to get it done," she said.

Martin Says Budget Pay Raise Intended For Across-Board Hikes

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Seeking to clarify his position on pay and benefit improvements for state employees, Gov. Jim Martin says his proposed budget does not include money to prop up the troubled state health program.

But Martin said Thursday he is willing to discuss ways to make up for what state officials predict will be a $30 million shortfall in the medical insurance plan.

"I have yet to receive recommendations from anyone to support a subsidy for the health plan," Martin said at his weekly news conference. He said a provision in his 1987-89 spending plan that asks $566.7 million for "compensation improvements" refers to an across-the-board pay increase and merit raises.

Raises would be higher for some workers than for others, but the average employee's paycheck would increase by 4.5 percent under the Martin plan, he said.

However, recent newspaper reports quoted Martin's top budget aides as saying a portion of the "compensation" money could go to the health plan. Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan said Martin's budget director, C.C. Cameron, told a state Senate leader last week that the governor's proposed "compensation increase" did include funds for the health plan.

"He (Martin) has changed his position, or at least Mr. Cameron did not fully understand the position last week," Jordan, who presides over the Senate, told reporters after Martin's news conference.

Martin insisted he had not flipped and refused to say that either Cameron or Marvin Dorman, his deputy budget director, had misspoken. But he said Dorman, whom a newspaper interviewed while Martin was out of town this week, might have given an ambiguous answer so the governor would have "wiggled room."

"My proposal is still the same as it was when I submitted it," Martin said.

Using "compensation improvements" money for the health plan would leave less for state employee pay raises. Observers have said Martin likely would score political points by seeking a 4.5 percent pay increase, a figure legislative Democrats would find hard to beat because of tight revenues.

Martin said Insurance Commissioner Jim Long had jurisdiction over the health plan. If extra funds were needed, Long should have included them in the budget for his department that he forwarded to the State Budget Office, Martin said.

But a Long aide said the plan was run by an independent board and was not funded by the Department of Insurance budget, although Long serves as "ex-officio" administrator. And several sources insisted that Martin's office had been aware of problems with the health program months before the governor's budget was submitted in late January.

"At no time were we requested to provide to the governor the budget needs of the independent state employee health program," Allen Feezor, Long's chief deputy, said in an interview.

But Feezor added that the health program, responsibility for which has bounced from the governor's office to the Legislature to the current independent status in recent years, "has been so well traveled and been such a political hot potato that it's very understandable why he (Martin) would think we should also submit the state health plan funding requests."

Durwood "Butch" Gunnels, executive director of the State Employees Association of North Carolina, said his group mentioned the health plan's needs when presenting its budget request to the Advisory Budget Commission last year.

"Clearly it's needed," Gunnels said. "I'm not interested in this business of who should have asked for it. I'm just very concerned about the health plan."

State May Owe U.S. $1.5 Million

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina may owe the federal government more than $1 million because of overcharges the state made under a program that sells goods and services provided by inmates, a state budget official says.

But an effort to settle the matter is being hampered because key records may have been destroyed, Marvin Dorman, the state's deputy budget director, told The Winston-Salem Journal Thursday.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services released an audit report in Washington Thursday that says the N.C. Department of Correction overcharged it for products made by inmates between 1980 and 1983. The Health and Human Services Department says that the overcharges totaled $1.5 million.

Members of the Correction Department's staff have been culling records since the audit was completed on Feb. 9 to find documents that would account for the money.

"Those people are under a lot of pressure now," Dorman said. "They've been working on this for some time. I don't mean to say government records were destroyed without any thought, but right now, for us, the question is whether the records are even there."

Dorman said that records from 1980 may have been destroyed by the Department of Cultural Resources under a program to weed out records considered outdated or non-essential. Those records, including purchase orders and detailed accounting books, would be used to justify charges made to the Department of Health and Human Services.

The audit focused primarily on the Department of Correction's Prison Enterprise Fund. The fund puts inmates to work making license plates and signs and performing other services. Those services, sold at a profit, are generally bought by other state agencies, said Benjamin Irons, a spokesman for the Correction Department.

The problem identified in the audit occurred when some state agencies bought services from the fund with federal money earmarked for non-profit use.

Governor Says Kirk Will Free Him For Policy Work

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — While denying that his office has major operational problems, Gov. Jim Martin says the appointment of a chief of staff should free the governor to sell his policies to the Legislature and public.

"It frees up more time for other things that are expected out of the governor and are the responsibility of the governor," Martin said at his weekly news conference Thursday.

Martin announced Wednesday that Phil Kirk was leaving his post as secretary of human resources to become chief of staff. He will handle most of the day-to-day management of the governor's office.

The move was part of a reshuffling of Martin's senior staff that included the reassignment of two Cabinet officers and a senior adviser.

Martin said one reason why he was willing to appoint a staff chief after resisting it earlier was that he had learned his way around state government and was comfortable enough to leave the details to others.

He acknowledged there had been complaints that his office had been slow to respond to outside contacts.

"There have been many legislators and political leaders around the state who, particularly in our first year, complained a great deal about not getting phone calls returned," Martin said.

One problem, he said, was that many people would contact more than one administration official for help with the same matter. He said the situation had improved, but that Kirk's presence should make things even better.

Jim Lofton, Martin's former executive assistant who is replacing

Grace Rohrer as secretary of administration, has no political experience, although he was manager of Martin's Washington office while he was in Congress.

Kirk, 42, served briefly in the state Senate and has lengthy experience in state Republican politics.

Diamonds Replaced

GREENSBORO (AP) — Police say a thief made off with real diamonds by pulling a switch with cheap imitations, and the operation worked so smoothly that owners didn't realize they had fake stones until it was too late.

Police have arrested William Randall Shelton, 36, on five felony charges of larceny after nearly $25,000 worth of diamonds disappeared from five Greensboro stores between November and February. Shelton was being held in the Guilford County Jail with bond set at $250,000 after his arrest Tuesday.

Police in Greensboro and Winston-Salem are investigating at least nine other recent diamond thefts in the two cities that followed a similar pattern. Nearly $40,000 in jewelry was taken during those incidents, police say.

A three-carat diamond, which was taken Nov. 20 from Yamamori Ltd. in Greensboro, has been recovered, said Greensboro police Lt. J.L. Hightower.

The three-carat diamond from Yamamori had been sent to the shop on consignment from a New York City dealer at a caller's request, shop employee Lois Williams said.

When the man came in to inspect it, he told Ms. Williams he wanted a friend to look at it before he bought it.

N.C. Rate Bureau filed last November is out of line.

"We expect fewer claims than they expect, we expect lower payoffs than they expect, and finally, they've asked for more profit than we think is reasonable," Hunter said.

Hunter said the Safe Roads Act, the seat belt law and the higher drinking age should combine to reduce the number of accidents.

A spokesman for the state's insurance industry said he was "disappointed" by the announcement.

"The overall indicators are that our request would produce a reasonable profit," said John Watkins, general manager of the rate bureau. The proposal would raise the average driver's rate for liability and collision insurance $30 a year.

Hearings on the request could last a month or more, department officials said. Then Insurance Commissioner Jim Long — acting as the judge in the case — will have another 45 days in which to make a final decision.

Should Long reject the rate request, the industry can appeal to the state's courts.

Hunter, who is also president of the National Insurance Consumer Organization, said the proposed rate increase would give the state's insurance industry an estimated return on equity of 30 percent. Return on equity is one measure of how profitable a company is. It is derived by dividing a company's net profits by the amount paid in by the company's investors.

The 30 percent return on equity is "very excessive" and far above the industry average of 11.5 percent percent to 12.5 percent.

Coffee Trial

BOONE, N.C. (AP) — T.O. Phillips was convicted Thursday of putting LSD into a coffee container in the Sweet Shop at Appalachian State University.

Phillips, 26, of Boone, was convicted on charges of possession of LSD and putting it into a pot of coffee at a self-service station at the campus snack shop last May 13.

Jurors deliberated about three hours before returning the verdict.

Seven people who drank the coffee sought medical help for dizziness and hallucinations.

Phillips and Steven Gregory Travis, 26, of Boone, were both charged in the case. Under a plea arrangement, a charge of contaminating the coffee was dropped against Travis, who pleaded guilty to the possession charge.

Gateway

RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin says direct flights between North Carolina and London will enhance the state's business climate, regardless of which airport and airline provide the service.

"We did not get involved in trying to favor one of the airports or the other and are not going to get involved in that now," Martin said Thursday. "Our position, rather, has been that we had two good applicants and we felt very strongly that at least one of those should be recommended for the gateway."

On Wednesday, an administrative law judge recommended Piedmont Airlines and the Charlotte-Douglas International Airport for direct flights to London. A final decision from the U.S. Department of Transportation is expected by April.

American Airlines had been bidding for a gateway to provide flights from the Raleigh-Durham Airport.

Land Sale

RALEIGH (AP) — Zeno Ponder's indictment on conspiracy charges won't color the N.C. Department of Correction's consideration of land he has offered to sell the state for a new Craggy Prison, Gov. Jim Martin says.

"If land is available at a good price, then I think that you ought to look at that land," Martin said at his news conference. "I would not rule out consideration of land on the basis of who might own it."

Ponder, Madison's Democratic patriarch and former member of the state Board of Transportation, says the ideal location for the prison would be his property at the junction U.S. 25-70 and N.C. 213.

The land is at the center of a criminal charge against Ponder, who has been indicted by a Madison County grand jury for allegedly acquiring in secret with intent to sell right-of-way for a new N.C. 213.

RALEIGH (AP) — A not-for-profit company that manages research for firms that mine and smelt zinc and lead is moving its headquarters from New York City to Durham County.

International Lead Zinc Research Organization Inc., which will employ 17 people, has set up temporary headquarters in an office building near Interstate 40 and N.C. 55, and expects to move into permanent offices in the building soon.

ILZRO, which is financed by about 30 mining and smelting firms worldwide, contracts out research on the use of zinc and lead products and environmental health. The results of the research are distributed to members. The company has a research budget this year of $3.1 million.

Heating Funds

RALEIGH (AP) — Sharp cutbacks in federal housing subsidies for the poor make it essential that North Carolina establish a housing trust fund, legislators said Thursday.

Two lawmakers urged the Joint Appropriations Committee to set up the fund with $17.3 million North Carolina is getting in overcharge payments from major oil companies.

Exxon and other firms were ordered by a federal court to divide some $2 billion among the states as punishment for overcharges during the 1970s. North Carolina's share, plus interest, is estimated at $65.6 million.

The Martin administration, in accordance with federal guidelines, has recommended dividing the money among five programs involving energy conservation and heating bill assistance for low-income households.

Rep. Bertha Holt, D-Alamance, and Sen. Russell Walker, D-Randolph, Thursday presented the recommendations of a subcommittee of the Joint Legislative Commission on Governmental Operations.

Paddling

RALEIGH (AP) — A federal judge's recent ruling on standards for reasonable corporal punishment should make it easier for parents to win lawsuits against teachers who paddle students, an attorney says.

The ruling came in a lawsuit filed by a Nash County man who accused an elementary school teacher of using unreasonable force when she paddled his son. U.S. District Judge Franklin Dupree said teachers could be found liable in such cases even if they had not acted with malice and were not likely to have caused serious injury.

Leslie P. Burroughs contended that teacher Margaret L. Blalock had violated state laws on corporal punishment by using unreasonable force when she paddled the boy, Leslie P. Burroughs Jr., in 1985.

Fire Death

LAKE WACCAMAW, N.C. (AP) — A 66-year-old Lake Waccamaw man died in a fire early Thursday while trying to save his dog.

William Keith Foley died after waking his sister, Nita Foley Moore, Police Chief T.J. Barrett said. Foley awakened Mrs. Moore shouting, "Get out of the house!" Barrett said. Foley then went into his bedroom to get Kimo, his dog.

Mrs. Moore crawled to a telephone to call the fire department and then tried to get Foley out of the house but was driven out by the smoke and flames, Barrett said.

Firefighters found the bodies of Foley and the dog in the bedroom, he said.

Senate Is Rushing Legislation To Boost Farm Credit System

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Legislation to aid the nation's financially ailing Farm Credit System is going on a fast track in the Senate with lawmakers planning to have it ready for floor action within six weeks.

"This train is gonna move," Sen. David Boren, D-Okla., declared Thursday after the Agriculture Committee's credit panel heard from leaders of farm groups and federal regulators.

The lending network, which is spread over 12 districts nationwide, lost $1.9 billion last year and is currently facing a major cash drain. A quarter of its holdings are in high-risk assets.

Most deeply troubled among its components are federal land banks, which make long-term real estate loans. The system also includes banks that make intermediate and short-term loans as well as banks for cooperatives.

One third of U.S. farmers and ranchers obtain credit through the system, whose initial components were established in 1916.

Boren, chairman of the credit subcommittee, said Senate leaders have been pressing him to draft legislation and "have it ready and on the calendar for action by the full Senate by the Easter recess."

Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., chairman of the full Agriculture Committee, dropped in on the session to proclaim that lawmakers intended to "put it on a fast track in the committee."

There is no agreement on just how to aid the system.

Rescue plans range from greater centralization to increased decentralization. Some analysts say as much as $8 billion may be needed while others argue that no "cash infusion" may be necessary.

Boren did not rule out cash from Congress and he pounded on the table when Frank Naylor, chairman of the Farm Credit Administration board, the major regulatory agency involved, said that he was not prepared to certify that the system needed federal funds.

Naylor said the system still has considerable resources with which to fight its problems as well as accounting procedures that could be used to stave off a collapse.

"We aren't going to play ring around the rosy around here," Boren said. He prodded Naylor either to certify that the system needs cash or, if that proved impossible, to signal the need in some form that would stop short of a formal certification.

Under a system contained in federal law, the head of the Farm Credit Administration first certifies that cash is needed and then the Treasury Department makes its own determination on whether to ask Congress for money.

Another member of the board, Jim Billington, told Boren that financial aid might be in order fairly soon.

"We're losing money at the rate of $400 million each quarter," Billington said. "So we don't have many more quarters to play around with."

"This system itself must realize that the glory of yesterday has passed and that the income is going, the goodwill has been bruised and that the quality of loans is continuing to deteriorate rapidly," he said.

Fugitive Killer Dies

ANNISTON, Ala. (AP) — A woman dubbed "Black Widow" after she was convicted of poisoning her husband and who once faked her own death has died of exposure while trying to elude authorities, officials said.

"It seems to be an anticlimactic way for someone who was the great escape artist" to die, said Calhoun County District Attorney Bob Field.

Audrey Marie Hiley, who had received a three-day pass from prison to visit her second husband at a hotel, was muddy and incoherent when she was found Thursday on a porch in a rural area, witnesses said.

Doctors pronounced Mrs. Hiley dead 3½ hours later, listing exposure and hypothermia as preliminary causes, said Linda Barnes, vice president at Northeast Alabama Regional Medical Center.

An autopsy was scheduled for today, police said.

Mrs. Hiley, 53, had failed to return after being furloughed Sunday from a prison near Wetumpka.

She was sentenced to life in prison in 1983 for the 1975 murder of her first husband, Frank Hiley.

Chinese Increase Imports Of Wood

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study says China could be the largest single importer of U.S. lumber and other wood products, possibly making it a billion-dollar export market within five years, says an Agriculture Department report.

The study was commissioned by the National Forest Products Association and the department's Foreign Agricultural Service, according to the report in a forthcoming issue of the agency's Foreign Agriculture magazine.

In 1985, U.S. wood exports to China grew to $329 million but then plunged 44 percent to $183.1 million last year.

"Sales did drop in 1986 as a result of China's shortage of foreign exchange, but this is not believed to be indicative of future trends," the report said.

By the year 2000, according to the report, planned wood consumption in China is projected to increase from 17 billion board feet to 35 billion, and even if demand falls short of that projection, the need for increased imports is virtually certain.

"China's planners believe that at least 13 percent of planned consumption will consist of imports," the report said. "This is probably unrealistically low since current imports now account for 12 percent of consumption."

One reason for the outlook is China's forest land, which is roughly half of the area in the United States. Moreover, most of the forest land is in remote areas of the northeast and southwest, while accessible forests are generally poorly stocked and overexploited.

"Currently, annual harvests, estimated at 64 billion board feet, appear to exceed annual growth considerably," the report said. "The proportion of softwoods in the inventory also has been steadily declining, from about 70 percent in 1965 to 58 percent in 1984."

Although China has plans to increase forest area and timber production sharply, there are hindrances. For example, the report said, illegal logging accounts for more than a third of total wood consumption.

Weather Satellite Soars Into Orbit

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — The flawless launch of a weather satellite marks the sixth straight success for an American space program that a year ago was in disarray.

A Delta rocket Thursday night drilled into orbit the $55 million GOES-7 satellite, which will fill a critical surveillance void in the coming hurricane season.

"We've got a satellite proceeding on its own and it appears to be in good health," NASA spokesman George Diller reported after the spacecraft separated from the rocket.

GOES-7, which stands for geostationary operational environmental satellite, will join the orbiting GOES-6 satellite to monitor weather patterns in an area ranging from the mid-Pacific to the east coast of Africa.

The new satellite will replace GOES-5, which lost its ability to transmit cloud cover pictures nearly three years ago, cutting in half the nation's weather watch capability from stationary orbit.

Vatican Banking Officials Charged

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican today expressed "profound astonishment" at reports of arrest warrants being issued for three Vatican bank officials and cited a treaty barring Italian interference in the city-state's affairs.

The official communique also said American Archbishop Paul C. Marcinkus would cooperate with magistrates investigating Italy's biggest financial scandal since World War II.

A Milan judge investigating the 1982 collapse of Banco Ambrosiano and its dealings with the Institute of Religious Works, the Vatican's bank, has said warrants were issued for the arrest of Marcinkus, longtime head of the bank, and two of his colleagues.

The warrants charge the three men as "accessories to fraudulent bankruptcy" in the Ambrosiano scandal, according to the judge, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity.

Authorities said earlier that Marcinkus avoided arrest by leaving a villa in Rome's southern hills for the safety of Vatican City.

Massive Storm Cripples Southwest, Plains States

By MICHAEL WOLCOTT
Associated Press Writer

A huge storm blamed for at least one death churned into the central Plains today after dumping more snow on Colorado and much of the Southwest, where accumulations of up to 5 feet closed highways, schools and airports.

High winds combined with several inches of new snow to whip up near-blizzard conditions in the mountains of Colorado and southeastern Wyoming, where the slow-moving storm refused to subside.

The storm dropped heavy snow in Nebraska today, and drenched the area from eastern Texas across the lower Gulf Coast.

A foot or more of snow is likely to fall by Saturday as the storm moved east, and heavy rain from east Texas into Georgia could cause local flooding, Bill Barlow of the National Weather Service's severe storms center in Kansas City, Mo., said early today.

Nearly a half-foot of new snow also was expected today in New Mexico and Arizona as the storm swept eastward. Snow mixed with sleet and rain was forecast for central Nebraska and the eastern Dakotas.

The storm that spread snow from Arizona to the Dakotas paralyzed Colorado Springs on Thursday, closing the airport, schools and the newspaper.

"It's probably the slowest moving storm of the year and the worst storm of the year for Colorado Springs," said Peter Reynolds of the storms center.

In Arizona, where the storm has duped up to 5 feet of snow since it began Tuesday, officials said an 89-year-old Flagstaff woman froze to death in a blizzard. The woman's body was found late Wednesday under a 2-foot drift in her yard, authorities said.

The Arizona National Guard continued to check on residents in remote areas after Gov. Evan Mecham declared two counties disaster areas.

Mecham said a Guard helicopter would check today on about 30 Hopi Indian families isolated by the storm, according to tribal press secretary

Bertha Torres of Albuquerque, N.M.

An elderly Hopi woman was reported missing from her home near the Reservation in northeastern Arizona. The tribe planned to deliver 40 tons of hay today for animals starving in the 24-inch snowpack, said tribal chairman Ivan Sidney.

Up to 60 inches of snow had fallen by early today on the 8,000-foot Mogollon Rim in central Arizona, said Gila County sheriff's Lt. Harry Cain.

In Colorado, the Colorado Springs Municipal Airport closed Thursday afternoon and remained closed early today, said Ed Stricker, the airport's director of aviation.

Schools in the state closed early Thursday, and the Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph decided not to publish this morning's edition because of distribution problems.

Seven children were slightly injured Thursday near Salida, Colo., when a school bus struck a snow plow during a blizzard, authorities said.

The weather also caused problems in western Colorado, where an America West jet with 48 passengers slid off a runway at the Durango-La Plata County Airport. No one was injured but the airport was closed for the rest of the day, officials said.

Thirty avalanches were reported in the Colorado mountains. Backcountry avalanche danger was rated extreme and several roads were closed by snowslides, the State Patrol said.

In Wyoming, the storm eased early today, but not before leaving behind more than 2 feet of snow in some areas.

"The end is in sight," weather service meteorologist Therese Pierce said Thursday night. "We're only expecting another 2-3 inches in Cheyenne."

However, rising winds were expected to create problems by blowing and drifting the snow today, she said. Clear weather was expected to spread slowly southward late in the day.

In southern New Mexico, at least 4 inches of new snow was expected today, before the storm leaves the state. A band of heavy snow that swept through the mountain areas Wednesday night and early Thursday left up to 2 feet of snow in some areas.

The storm forced Four Corners Regional Airport at Farmington, N.M., to close sporadically Thursday.

The 10 inches of snow that Los Alamos, N.M., received made this season the snowiest on record for the area, with a total of 131 inches. The old record of 123.6 inches was set in 1957, the weather service said.

FAA To Require Training On Wind

WASHINGTON (AP) — New training techniques aimed at helping pilots combat wind shear will be distributed to all airlines, along with notices that federal regulations will be proposed to require pilot training on how best to avoid the deadly weather threat.

Most major air carriers already have comprehensive wind shear training programs in place, but the Federal Aviation Administration training program will make the latest training techniques available even to the smallest carriers, officials said.

A particularly powerful type of wind shear, the microburst, has been blamed for at least five airline accidents and 536 deaths during the past decade, including the 1985 Delta Air Lines crash at Dallas that killed 135 people.

The weather phenomenon, one of the most dangerous in aviation, can virtually drive a jetliner into the ground during takeoff or landing because of the powerful, narrow downdraft of air, preceded by a strong headwind.

The training program, developed by an industry consortium headed by the Boeing Co., cost the FAA $1.8 million.

Meanwhile, the agency disclosed that it intends soon to move ahead with new regulations that would for the first time impose a federal requirement for pilots to undergo wind shear training.

The proposed regulations also would require jetliners to have new equipment that will help pilots detect wind shear conditions so that they may react more quickly. Often a pilot has only about five seconds between the first warnings of a shear to when his aircraft may be doomed, aviation experts say.

The airline industry is divided as to the usefulness of such equipment, with some experts saying it provides a pilot with precious seconds to react, while others say by the time a warning is sounded it may already be too late.

The new equipment is not designed to predict an encounter with a shear, something that would require Doppler radar, but would be able to rapidly analyze changing flight parameters.

Bush Escapes Tower Ax, Wins Major Endorsement

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG
AP Political Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Vice President George Bush, who escaped any direct criticism from the Tower commission, is making a political foray into New England, his presidential prospects boosted by an endorsement from the Republican governor of New Hampshire.

The vice president was delivering a luncheon speech in Bedford, Mass., and then flying to Manchester, N.H., to address a Lincoln Day dinner in the state that holds the nation's first presidential primary.

Gov. John H. Sununu's endorsement of Bush for the 1988 GOP presidential nomination and the issuance of the Tower commission's report on the Iran-Contra affair took place within an hour of each other on Thursday.

Bush, in an interview in today's New York Times, conceded Thursday that mistakes were made and that the White House decision-making process had been flawed, but he said he does not believe the Tower report shows that any laws were broken and he wasn't going to go around the country "trying to cover my own backside."

At a news conference in Concord, N.H., Sununu said, "It is no secret that I am a strong admirer and supporter of President Reagan," and added, "I firmly believe that George Bush will continue to implement the Reagan agenda."

"I intend to use all the political support and all the political chits that I have garnered over the years to make sure George Bush wins the New Hampshire primary," the governor told a second news conference at the National Press Club.

Sen. Gordon Humphrey of New Hampshire said that despite Sununu's endorsement, the race is "wide open" for the presidential primary.

"The vice president enjoys a substantial lead right now, but it's, in my opinion, very shallow, it's a name recognition lead more than anything else," said Humphrey. "I don't see the conservatives who will play a pivotal role in the New Hampshire primary going for Bush in any significant numbers."

The senator said he hasn't decided whom to support, only that "I have decided not to support the vice president."

He said he doubted Sununu could add "all that much to the support that the vice president already has."

The report issued by the commission composed of former Sen. John Tower of Texas, former Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, and Brent Scowcroft, former national security adviser to President Gerald R. Ford, contained few references to Bush and none of the criticism leveled at other officials including Reagan, his staff chief Donald Regan, his former national security aides John Poindexter and Oliver North, and even Secretary of State George Shultz.

Asked at a news conference about Bush's role in the whole affair, Muskie said the vice president "doesn't have a management responsibility, but he has a responsibility as one of the four statutory members of the National Security Council."

However, Muskie said, "there were not more than two or three, at most three, full meetings of the National Security Council to consider this policy, its consequences, its progress, its results and its problems. So there were too few meetings at which Vice President Bush and the other members of that council were given an opportunity to influence the result."

As Bush already has acknowledged, the report said he was aware of the secret arms sales.

Jetliner, Cessna Collide

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Continental Airlines jetliner taking off at 150 mph with 91 people aboard was where it was supposed to be when it collided with a small plane crossing the runway at Los Angeles International Airport, an airline spokesman said.

No one was injured in the collision Wednesday night.

Federal investigators planned to interview both pilots today, said Gary Mucho, a National Transportation Safety Board investigator.

The Boeing 727 jetliner struck the tail of a twin-engine Cessna 310 but continued on its scheduled flight to Houston and landed safely three hours later, officials said. The Cessna's tail was severely damaged.

The Continental airliner had been cleared for takeoff and was under the guidance of a local controller, Federal Aviation Administration officials said.

The Cessna, with only the pilot on board, was under the guidance of a ground controller, who directs planes on the airport's ramps, aprons and taxiways, officials said.

"We were right where we were supposed to be," said Bruce Hicks, vice president for public relations at Continental headquarters in Houston. Hicks said the Continental pilot believed he missed the small plane.

Tapes of communications between the tower and the two aircraft will be reviewed to determine whether controller error was involved, as the Continental pilot believes, NTSB spokesman Mike Benson said Thursday.

In Bakersfield, Calif., a pilot safely landed a United Airlines jetliner Thursday night after reporting trouble with the plane's steering system and landing gear, officials said.

The Boeing 727 was en route from San Francisco to Bakersfield. It was not immediately known how many people were on board.

School Activities

Several speakers visited Falkland Elementary School recently and special activities were held.

Renee Walden visited Betsy Smith's class to discuss the four food groups.

In observance of Counseling Week, two students in Mrs. Smith's class were chosen as "VIPs" each day and wore special badges of recognition.

ECU student nurses Nancy Uhlmann and Joy Moss presented a program on proper dental care. Ebbie Hatton, a dental hygienist from Dr. Jasper Lewis' office, visited the second-grade classes to discuss dental care.

Jo Rogerson of the Pitt County Health Department discussed personal hygiene with the second-grade class of Vicky Coggins.

Black History Month was celebrated in Carolyn Hoots' reading lab with a bulletin board, "A Salute to King."

Robin Morris, Falkland physical education teacher, spoke to Jane Reel's fifth-grade class about exercise.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

SOME MODERN METHODS ARE AS OLD AS THE HILLS!

AMONG THE ANCIENT BIBLICAL PEOPLE THE DANGERS OF SUNSTROKE WERE ALWAYS PRESENT BECAUSE OF THE VERY HOT CLIMATE IN THE SUMMERS AND THE FACT THAT THE PEOPLE WERE AN AGRICULTURAL PEOPLE, USED TO WORKING ALL DAY IN THE HOT SUN. SO THE STORY ABOUT THE YOUNG LAD WHO SUFFERED A SUNSTROKE (II KINGS 4:19,20) WAS NOT AN UNUSUAL ONE--WHAT IS UNUSUAL ABOUT IT IS THE PROPHET ELISHA'S WAY OF HANDLING THIS PREDICAMENT! NOT UNTIL THE 20TH CENTURY DID MEDICAL MEN START TO RESUSCITATE THE VICTIMS OF HEART ARREST BY USING MOUTH-TO-MOUTH BREATHING TO START THE VICTIM'S HEARTBEAT AGAIN, YET THIS IS WHAT ELISHA DID (II KINGS 4:34) MORE THAN TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO! WHICH LEADS ONE TO SURMISE THAT THERE IS A LOT OF TRUTH IN THE OLD SAYING "THERE IS NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN!" ALSO, IT SHOULD BE NOTED, THAT THE FIRST THING ELISHA DID WHEN HE STEPPED INTO THE ROOM WITH THE DEAD CHILD, HE "PRAYED UNTO THE LORD"--NOT A BAD THING FOR ALL OF US TO REMEMBER, RIGHT?!

Churches Step Up Efforts To Promote Sex Education

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Spreading repercussions from random sexual activity, including mounting teenage pregnancies and the AIDS crisis, have prompted churches to step up cautionary guidance about it.

Among adults and youths alike, classes and teaching materials about sexuality are being expanded, emphasizing moral principles against loose sex and its heightened dangers.

Some churches have designated special AIDS liaison officers at local and national levels to bolster compassionate ministry to victims, to dispense information and integrate it with general teachings about sex.

The moves have come among Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish bodies.

The sex instruction, particularly the technical, value-free type offered in some public schools, have brought protests.

Occasionally, some parents also object to church classes about sex, insisting it's a matter for home and family. But the widening scars of casual sex have spurred more church attention to it.

and various sex-transmitted diseases, along with parental anxieties.

"Many parents do want help," she adds, despite sensitivities about the subject. She says church teaching about it will be more than just information, stressing values and Christian principles.

Many Roman Catholic dioceses and parish schools also have augmented attention to the subject.

In Chicago, Cardinal Joseph Bernardin issued a special pastoral letter on the AIDS crisis, mobilizing a compassionate ministry to victims and education about it, to be added in parish school teachings about sexuality.

"It's an overall educational effort," says Sister Cathy Campbell, communications director for the Chicago Catholic schools.

In Los Angeles, James Comiskey, religious education director of the Benziger Publishing Company, which produces family-life educational material widely used in Catholic schools, says it is being revised and expanded.

"We're in the middle of a crisis," says the Rev. Lynn Coggi of New York, the Episcopal Church's new AIDS consultant, adding that a church-wide educational program about it is under way for old and young.

She says sexuality courses for adolescents, emphasizing responsibility in all relations, are incorporating the AIDS threat in material about sexually transmitted diseases.

Cecile Beam of Nashville, Tenn., coordinator of human sexuality education for the United Methodist Church's Board of Discipleship, says it has begun a new sex-education program and is developing staged curricula for it.

"It will deal with human sexuality at all levels," she says, noting the abandonment of a previous sex-education program in 1979 because of controversy.

But the board now has decided that "because so many issues are involved we must deal with it. We cannot afford in the light of the current situation to neglect it any longer."

The AIDS problem "was definitely a factor" in the decision, "but not the only factor," she says, citing the rise of promiscuity, teen-age pregnancies

Colorful Ambassador Is Retiring

By STEPHEN R. WILSON
Associated Press Writer
ROME (AP) — True to style, Millicent Fenwick is staying with friends rather than spend U.S. taxpayers' money at a hotel before returning home to begin retirement at the age of 77.

"I had to get out of my apartment because a colleague wants it," said Mrs. Fenwick, a former four-term New Jersey congresswoman. "I'm staying with an old friend, so there's no expense for anybody. I've always been terribly aware of spending other people's money."

She ends her four-year stint as the first U.S. ambassador to the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization in the same style she began it. When she came to Rome in August 1983, she turned down the Cadillac limousine that went with the job.

"When you are involved with an agency designed to help the starving," she said, "a Chevrolet, a Ford or a Plymouth, please. A certain restraint is called for."

Mrs. Fenwick was interviewed in her modest office in the U.S. Embassy annex near Via Veneto. She smoked the pipe that has become her trademark and helped inspire the character of Lacey Davenport in the comic strip "Doodlesbury."

The slender, gray-haired grandmother of 11 turned 77 on Wednesday. She leaves Saturday for home, a 50-room French Provincial mansion in Bernardsville, N.J. "I haven't got any plans," she said. "Isn't that heavenly? I don't want to commit myself to anything."

Mrs. Fenwick served in New Jersey state government before being elected in 1974 to Congress. President Reagan named her to the FAO after she lost a Senate race in 1982.

Before getting into politics, she modeled for Harper's Bazaar magazine and spent 14 years as a writer and editor at Vogue magazine. Mrs. Fenwick married in 1932 and had two children, but she was divorced in 1940 and has not remarried.

One of her pipes sold for $125 at a YWCA auction in Plainfield, N.J. last year, but she admitted, "I was so hurt when I got to Congress. All they would say was 'pipe-smoking grandmother.' And I would say 'For God's sake, hard-working grandmother, same number of syllables.' But I couldn't persuade them."

The FAO sponsors projects for development of agriculture, fisheries and forestry in developing countries.

Mrs. Fenwick said it and other international agencies are not doing enough to help those they were meant to serve.

"We have marvelous people," she said, "Ph.D.s from the best universities in the world ... good will, high intellect, great plans, lots of time, lots of money, and we don't get very far."

"If we're going to make these programs really useful, we've got to get down to the village and listen to the people. ... We cannot take the haughty view that we know best."

"Stop thinking so big, gents," she pleads. "Get back to the small, village-oriented projects."

As examples of successful, income-producing projects she cited a tomato-processing plant run by women in Central America; strawberry growing along the Nile in Egypt; fish farming in Zambia; a chair-manufacturing business in Peru, a day-care center in West Africa.

She recalled the day last year when a cable arrived from Washington referring to a "villager-oriented" project.

"I nearly jumped out of my chair..." she chuckled. "That is the beginning of wisdom in my book. Until we get that point of view, it's perfectly useless."

Mrs. Fenwick, who says she is not a feminist, believes development projects would get better results if more women were in policy-making positions.

She said, "When I start talking about these village projects, some of my dear friends among the men who run all these things, I've seen their eyes glaze with boredom. They don't listen."

A man's advice launched her into politics. She said a plumber from her hometown of Bernardsville, A.J. Maddaluna, convinced her to run for town council.

"I said, 'What me? They've never had a woman,'" she recalled. "He said 'That doesn't matter. You were chairman of the recreation commission appointed by the mayor, so people know you. I think you could make it.'"

She did, but it was her election to the state legislature that touched her most.

"A moment of awe," she said, "when I went down to the state house in Trenton and thought, 'My God, I belong here. I am an elected representative of Somerset county.'"

Eleanor Roosevelt was a role model.

"I always felt Mr. Roosevelt really just always wanted to get elected, but Mrs. Roosevelt really meant it," Mrs. Fenwick said.

She took to heart the words of a rabbi who served with her on the New Jersey civil rights commission: "You will never arrive at the solution and never be absolved from responsibility of trying."

"Isn't that magnificent?" Mrs. Fenwick said. "You don't have to worry about success. You just have to make sure that you've got something worthwhile to do and you're doing your best to do it."

"That's how I'd like to be remembered. As someone who tried to be useful. That's all."

Expert Says Teens Should Be Treated As Individuals

By PAM IZAKOWITZ
The Arizona Daily Star
TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — Gisela Konopka is 76, but she still remembers the pain and fear of growing up and how her attitudes changed.

And that may be part of the reason why the stocky gray-haired woman with a thick German accent wants society to change its view.

"Adolescents are people, but they are treated as if they are the plague," she told a seminar of the South Tucson Youth Development Task Force recently.

Adolescents — those between ages 11 and 20 — are creative, active and searching for answers, said the professor, author, lecturer, consultant and nationally recognized authority on adolescents.

It's an exciting age, one of rebirth, of extraordinary physical capacity and strong mood swings, a time of wonderful struggle, the youth advocate said.

But she also cautioned against using generalities when dealing with adolescents.

"They want to be seen as individuals. They do not like to be treated 'by the book,'" she said. "They want to have a place to fill, but we don't give them enough of a place. We don't involve our adolescents in activities. They want to feel a part of a community."

Ms. Konopka peppered her speech with anecdotes from her experiences in working with troubled youths in detention centers and drug programs. She read poetry young people have written about growing up.

A professor of social work at the University of Minnesota since 1947, she was born in Berlin and studied at the University of Hamburg.

During World War II, she was involved in the anti-Nazi movement in Germany and spent a short time in a concentration camp.

She came to the United States in 1941 and received a master's degree in social work from the University of Pittsburgh and a doctorate in social work from Columbia University.

She also is director emerita of the Center for Youth Development and Research at the University of Minnesota, having retired in 1978, and she is author of six books that have been translated into 11 languages.

Young people yearn for family life and feel responsible for family strife, she pointed out. "They are action-oriented and feel deep resentment about divorce," she said.

Runaways don't run away from home, she added. "They are pushed out, thrown out."

Those runaways who turn to drugs, alcohol or suicide do so because of a sense of rejection. Many are desperate. "Believing this is the end," she went on, adding that adolescence is the first time most youngsters experience pain and suffering.

Yet young people should not be shielded from life's realities, she advised. Though she believes death and pain should not be preached, "young people should realize they can't avoid pain."

The term incorrigible, she added, a term often used to describe delinquent youths, is a hopeless label.

"Those with problems need time, and time has been removed from our services. We have instant cures, instant coffee, instant tea."

Too often professionals don't work effectively with adolescents. "We treat them," she said. "When we work with young people, we have to really understand them. They live in a different time. We have to accept them. They will make mistakes. We have to allow them mistakes."

Japan Encouraging Retirement Overseas

By STEVEN K. PAULSON
Associated Press Writer
TOKYO (AP) — Teruhiko Mano is the type of person the Japanese government hopes to send abroad in his retirement.

Mano, 50, is a banker who has lived in New York, London, and Switzerland and speaks several languages.

He fits the profile of what the Ministry of International Trade and Industry calls the perfect candidate for its new overseas retirement program. Under the program Japanese will be urged to move to a foreign country, such as Spain, Greece, Australia or the United States, when they retire.

The government says retirees would be able to live better abroad because of the strength of the Japanese yen, but critics say that Japan is trying to export its social problem of having to provide services for a growing elderly population.

Mano says he has no intention of leaving Japan when he retires. Nor does he think any other Japanese will want to either.

"To visit overseas is one thing, but to live there is something entirely different," he said. "What about our friends? What about our family?"

The retirement program, scheduled to begin in 1992, the 500th anniversary of the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus, is known as "Silver Columbia." The term was coined by officials to characterize older people becoming explorers, according to a ministry spokesman.

Takao Kitahata, director of service industries for the ministry, said he got the idea while lounging on the beach in Spain, where he worked for the Japanese government.

Because of the high cost of living in Japan and because the high value of the yen has made living overseas cheaper, Kitahata thought some retirees might like to live in places like Spain.

Only 1,200 Japanese have chosen to live abroad in retirement, according to government figures. They are social anomalies in a land where family ties are cherished, and where people tend to stick together in school and at work.

In contrast, about 350,000 Britons and 580,000 West German retirees live abroad, the government said.

The plan has drawn criticism, at home and abroad. Foreign countries complain that elderly Japanese would require substantial services, like medical care, that would put a heavy burden on local communities.

Critics in Japan say the government would be exporting its problems like it exports cars. Japan's elderly now make up more than 10 percent of its 121 million people. The figure is expected to exceed 20 percent by the year 2000.

Kitahata said Japan is not trying to "export" its elderly, but to help them benefit from the strong currency they've spent their lives helping to build. The government hopes that the lure of income to help offset trade deficits will persuade other countries to accept Japanese retirees.

The government also hopes money is to be made in a new industry of officials call "transborder services," providing transport and goods to Japanese who choose to live overseas.

Takasuke Koneko, an economist with the Dai-ichi Kangyo Bank, said companies do see a possible industry developing, but they see limited participation and a lot of problems.

One is language. "Most Japanese elderly people speak no foreign language and wouldn't like to live where there was no one they could talk to," Koneko said.

He said Japanese would want to live together in communities, which is not what the government is proposing to potential host countries.

Koneko says Japan won't solve its problem of providing services to the elderly because participation in overseas retirement will be small — perhaps 10,000 or so.

Some foreign countries, such as Spain, have expressed interest, trade officials say, while other countries have said they are not interested.

A spokesman for the Australian embassy in Tokyo, who spoke on condition he not be identified, said an influx of Japanese residents could create many new problems, especially since they would require medical care.

The embassy spokesman said Japanese applicants participating in the program would be considered as individuals. Primary consideration would be given to families being reunited in Australia, or to people with working skills.

He said there was a special category for retirees, but only 260 people were admitted last year, and Australia had no plans to expand the category.

"If nothing else, it will give our elderly people a choice on where they want to live," Koneko said. "It gives them something to dream about."

Ex-Bank Teller Tells Gripes And Abuse

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I've read letters in your column from nearly every segment of society. How about giving some space to an ex-bank teller? That job ranks No. 1 for the most abused employees in the working world. Of all bank employees, the tellers have the most contact with the public, making us the most vulnerable for extortion, kidnapping, etc., yet we are the lowest on the pay scale.

If a customer has a complaint, the teller hears it first — in the most foul and abusive language imaginable. When I've asked to see an ID before cashing a check, I've been called every name in the book for not remembering someone I may have seen before.

So, I am no longer a bank teller. Thank you. I feel much better now. — A DISGRUNTLED EX-TELLER

DEAR DISGRUNTLED: My pleasure. That's what I'm here for. Have a good day.

DEAR ABBY: I used to think you gave pretty good advice for the most part, but you fail our young people when you advise them to use contraceptives for premarital sex.

We know that premarital sex is wrong, just as we know shoplifting is wrong. So, do you think it's OK to say, "Shoplifting is against the law, so if you're shoplifting, come to me and I will tell you how to keep from getting caught"?

You tell people if you drink, don't drive. Abby, people aren't supposed to drink in the first place, so why not just tell them not to drink instead of saying, "If you're going to drink, don't drive"?

About sex for unmarried people: When you advise them to use contraceptives to keep from getting pregnant or catching a disease, you are giving them permission to have sex and helping them get by with it by telling them how not to get pregnant or diseased. You might as well say, "Although you're not supposed to have sex, go ahead and have fun, kids — but don't get caught." I would like an answer. — UPSET IN INDEPENDENCE, MO.

DEAR UPSET: One of the most powerful urges inborn in the human animal is the sex drive. Nature intended it to ensure perpetuation of our species. It is not comparable with the temptation to swipe a candy bar or a T-shirt.

A great many young people are having sex, with or without permission. So in the interest of saving lives, they should know how to prevent pregnancy and disease — particularly since AIDS is incurable. Denying them such information will not stop them from having sex; it will only leave them ignorant and vulnerable to a life-threatening disease. Wake up. What people don't know can not only hurt them, it can KILL them.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is recovering from a severe heart attack. "Sol" must lose 40 pounds, and his doctor has told him that he may not smoke or drink any more.

Sol is very unhappy about these orders, and his frustration is compounded by comments from his friends. One said, "After my heart attack, I went back to drinking, smoking and eating, and it didn't do me any harm." Another said, "You're on a 1,200-calorie diet! Why, I eat that much for breakfast."

Then there are those who invite us for dinner and insist that my husband have a second helping of pie topped with ice cream. Sol knows he shouldn't have it, and so do they, but they tempt him anyway.

Abby, I love my husband and want him to live, but all these so-called friends are undermining his efforts to regain his health. He can't afford another heart attack, and I don't have the courage to tell them off in front of Sol.

What can I do? — WORRIED WIFE

DEAR WIFE: Are these so-called friends ignorant or malicious? If they're ignorant, educate them. If they're malicious, find new friends.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Mills-Markarian Vows Solemnized

WASHINGTON, N.C. — Mona Renee Markarian of Washington, N.C., and Mark Kent Mills of Greenville were united in marriage Feb. 14 in the Second Baptist Church. John Melancon performed the double ring ceremony.

Edward and Ramona Markarian of Washington, N.C., and Godfrey and Mavis Mills of Greenville are parents of the bridal couple.

Beverly Perry played the piano and Jim and Beverly Perry, and Nita Jones were vocalists. Dennis Modlin played the guitar.

Connie McRoy of Chocowinity was the maid of honor. Lisa Respass of Washington; Deborah Evans, cousin of the bride of Greenville; Melanie Rapp, cousin of the bride of Tabb, Va., and Pearlie Mills, sister-in-law of the bridegroom of Greenville were bridesmaids. Jessica Duckett of Tarboro was the flower girl.

The father of the bridegroom was best man. Eddie Markarian, brother of the bride of Washington; Danny Mills and Jerry Mills of Greenville, brothers of the bridegroom, and Loren Elks of Chocowinity were ushers. Ben Duckett of Tarboro was the ring bearer.

Given in marriage by her parents, the bride wore a formal gown of white organza over taffeta with a Queen Anne neckline formed with schiffli embroidered lace and a narrow lace ruffle. Silk Venise lace beaded with pearls enhanced the shoulders which were bordered with a ruffle of chantilly lace extending to a V-back. Sheer full sleeves were cuffed with rows of lace ruffles. The bodice was overlaid with beaded silk Venise lace motifs. The full skirt and semi-cathedral train were bordered with a deep flounce and decorated with chantilly and Venise lace arranged in a scalloped pattern. Her two tiered fingertip veil of illusion was held by a half-crown of lace flowers beaded with pearls and crystal. She carried a lace covered Bible surrounded by baby's breath, white flowers and red rosebuds accented with ivy and roses in front.

The reception was held at the VFW Post in Washington. Linda Evans cut the cake and Irene Roberson and Betsy Elks poured punch. Presiding at the champagne fountain were Wayne Evans and Roger Allen. Pat Rapp presided at the register.

A rehearsal dinner was held Feb. 13 at the Holiday Inn of Washington. Several bridal showers were given prior to the wedding.

The bride, who previously attended East Carolina University, is currently attending Durham Technical Community College and works as a pharmacy technician at Durham County General Hospital. The bridegroom works at Brakes, Inc. of Raleigh.

The couple is living in Durham.

Stock And Market Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market showed a small gain today, rebounding from Thursday's setback.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks rose 4.35 to 2,221.03 in the first half hour of trading.

Advancing issues outnumbered declines by about 5 to 4 in the overall tally of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 566 up, 456 down and 482 unchanged.

Volume on the Big Board came to 20.75 million shares as of 10 a.m. on Wall Street.

Today, the government said its revamped consumer price index rose 0.7 percent in January, for its biggest increase since June of 1982. And in another report it said the United States posted a $14.78 billion trade deficit in the same month, up sharply from the previous December.

American Express rose 3/8 to 73 3/8, propelled by persistent speculation that the company might be considering spinning off its Shearson Lehman Brothers subsidiary.

The NYSE's composite index of all its listed common stocks gained .35 to 161.76. At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up .16 at 320.51.

On Thursday the Dow Jones industrial average dropped 9.56 to 2,216.68.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by more than 3 to 2 on the NYSE, with 608 up, 925 down and 423 unchanged. Big Board volume totaled 165.80 million shares, against 184.14 million in the previous session.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Sarah Lindsay of the home; one stepdaughter, Mrs. Sarah Ella Eppes of Pinetops; six sons, Robert Lindsay Jr. of Elm City, David Lindsay of Washington, James Lindsay of White Oak Acres in Wilkes County, Joshua Lindsay and Raymond Lindsay, both of Rocky Mount, and Timothy Lindsay of Pinetops; two sisters, Mrs. Gladys Bridges of Rocky Mount and Mrs. Catherine Taylor of Fountain; three brothers, Willie Lindsay of Saratoga, James Lindsay of Fountain and Tommy Lindsay of Farmville, and 16 grandchildren.

Family visitation at the church will be from 8 p.m. until 9 p.m. Saturday, and at other times the family will be at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Lindsay in White Oak Acres. Arrangements are being handled by the Hemby Funeral Home, Fountain.

Morris
NORFOLK, Va. — A funeral for Mrs. Dorothy Moore Morris, formerly of Farmville, N.C., will be conducted Sunday at 3 p.m. in the Union Primitive Baptist Church Center, Fountain, N.C., by Elder Lester Moya. Burial will be in the Crestlawn Memorial Gardens near Farmville, N.C.

Mrs. Morris was a native of Pitt County, N.C., but had lived in Norfolk for the past several years. She is survived by her husband, Jr. of the home, and her maternal grandmother, Mrs. Nettie Lassiter of Winterville. The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. today.

Slade
ROBERSONVILLE — Mr. William Slade died Monday in Pitt County Memorial Hospital. His funeral will be conducted at 1 p.m. Saturday in Roberson Baptist Church. Burial will be in the Robersonville Memorial Gardens.

Mr. Slade is survived by his wife, Mrs. Rubinell Slade; seven daughters, Mrs. Harriett Joyner of Peekskill, N.Y., Mrs. Linda Morgan of Charlotte, Ms. Vanetta Lloyd of New Haven, Conn., Capt. Wilma F. Slade of Boston, Ms. Mary Slade, Ms. Ruby Slade and Ms. Gail Slade, all of Robersonville, and four sisters, Mrs. Willie B. Roberson of Robersonville, Mrs. Allie G. Stokes of Brooklyn, N.Y., Ms. Josephine Slade of New York, and Mrs. Mary Turner of Newark, N.J.

Family visitation will be from 7 p.m. until 9 p.m. today at the chapel of Manson's Funeral Home.

Vincent
Mrs. Susan S. Vincent, 95, died today in the University Nursing Center. Her funeral will be conducted at 3:30 p.m. Sunday in the Wilkerson Funeral Chapel by the Rev. Willis Wilson. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

A Pitt County native, she spent most of her life in the Winterville community and was a member of Reedy Branch Free Will Baptist Church. Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Earl Johnson of Carrollton, Va., and Mrs. Edgar Hatten of Ahoskie; three sons, S.J. Vincent Jr. of Greenville, William D. Vincent of Newport Beach, Calif., and Gene A. Vincent of Wilmington; 13 grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren.

The family will receive friends at the funeral home from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday. The family suggests that those desiring to make memorial contributions consider Reedy Branch F.W.B. Church or a favorite charity.

Moseley
Mrs. Nell Skinner Moseley, wife of the late A.M. Moseley of Greenville, died Friday Morning in Wilson. She was 101 years old. The family will be at home at 200 Gray Street in Wilson. Father Chan Chase will hold a graveside service at 3 p.m. Saturday at Cherry Hill Cemetery in the old Episcopal Churchyard in Greenville. Surviving are: a nephew, Harry S. Bateman with whom she made her home; two great nephews and two great nieces. Funeral arrangements are through the Thomas Yelverton Funeral Home in Wilson. (Paid Announcement)

Shaking Startles Tar Heel Residents

HENDERSON, N.C. (AP) — Glasses rattled and mobile homes shook and several people heard sounds like blasting Thursday morning in several North Carolina counties, but no experts reported no earthquake activity.

"I was awakened from a sound sleep and the house kind of vibrated like someone was shaking it," said Rose Marie Thompson, who lives in a mobile home in Vance County.

Jack Newton of the Epsom community in Vance County said he heard two short blasts and then his house shook.

There were similar reports in Person, Granville, Warren, Wilson and Granville counties, sheriff's department officials said.

Students Had Guests

Twelve "Class of '89" students from the East Carolina University School of Medicine visited the first- and second-grade classes at W.H. Robinson School recently. Presentations focused on feeling good about doctor visits. Children were able to touch instruments and observe their usage.

The three fastest growing Pitt County townships from 1980 to 1984 other than Greenville were Ayden, Grifton and Grimesland. Ayden's population grew 2.7 percent, Grifton, 2.51 percent, and Grimesland, 1.88 percent.

The National Earthquake Information Center in Golden, Colo., said there was no indication of any seismic activity in the area, and a geologist made a similar assessment.

"To the best of our ability, we determined that this was not a naturally occurring situation, not an explosion," said Christine Powell, a University of North Carolina geology professor. "The origin of this disturbance is not in the ground. It was probably due to a high flying aircraft, probably a sonic boom."

Because the reports came from such a wide area, she said the aircraft, if it was the source of the noise, was probably flying very high.

"They probably did break the sound barrier," Ms. Powell said. "They're required to report this, but sometimes they get close to the Mach 1 level, and it still causes a disturbance, but they don't have to report it."

Dental Program

Dr. Hazel Brown, a Greenville dentist, recently visited the kindergarten- and first-grade classes at Stokes Elementary School.

Dr. Brown presented a dental program to the students, viewed a filmstrip on "The Battle of the Bands," and discussed proper dental care and nutritious meals with the classes.

strategic opening to Iran may have been in the national interest but that the United States never should have been a party to the arms transfers," the report said. "As arms-for-hostages trades, they could not help but create an incentive for further hostage-taking."

On ABC-TV's "Good Morning America" show today, Tower said Reagan had "many things on his plate" in the fall of 1985, when the Iran initiative began, but "that does not excuse the fact ... that the president through his subordinates should have been monitoring and controlling this operation."

Commission member Brent Scowcroft, who was President Ford's national security adviser in the mid-1970s, assessed the political damage to Reagan on NBC-TV's "Today" show.

"I think the president has been hurt badly, but not mortally," Scowcroft said. "I think the real problem is that Ronald Reagan's image as a president who is standing tall and who made the American people feel they were standing tall, especially with respect to terrorism and hostages, and now what they have seen in their eyes is the president behind the scenes doing exactly what he said he would never do. I think that has deeply shaken (the American people)."

Greenville's first public library was established in 1904.

The inch-thick report castigated Reagan's management style as well, saying he bore "primary responsibility for the chaos that descended upon the White House" after the secret arms deal became public.

In introducing the Tower commission members after privately accepting the highly critical report, Reagan said, "I intend to read and digest it first, think carefully about its findings and promptly act on its recommendations."

"I pledge to the American people today that I will do whatever is necessary to enact the proper reforms and to meet the challenges ahead," he said, then left the commission members to answer questions, brushing aside reporters' queries about Reagan's fate.

The senior administration official said he could not speculate on changes Reagan might decide to make over the weekend but said the president likely will be working the phone frequently from the White House residence and may even call people in if he chooses.

It had been announced Wednesday that Reagan and his wife Nancy had canceled their regular weekend trip to the Camp David, Md., mountain-top retreat.

Some of Reagan's staunchest supporters called this period a crucial one for his presidency. "I think if he responds assertively and if he does in fact assert himself ... there's no reason why the last two years shouldn't be successful," said Rep. Richard Cheney, R-Wyo., who was chief of staff for President Gerald R. Ford.

But if the Tower report "gathers dust," he said, it could be "a very frustrating time not only for the president but for all of us who support him."

Edward Rollins, Reagan's former political director, said that during the president's speech to the nation next week, "He's got to come out and say exactly what he feels," to admit that he made mistakes and that he's going to correct what went wrong.

North Pitt Girls Top Chargers

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer
LITTLEFIELD — North Pitt's Amy Heath sank a 5-foot jumper with nine seconds left to lift the Pant-Hers to a 50-48 victory over Ayden-Grifton in the semifinals of the Eastern Plains Conference girls basketball tournament.

In the boys tournament game, Eric Blount scored 30 points as Ayden-Grifton exploded for 31 fourth quarter points to defeat Pamlico, 76-57, to advance to the finals tonight against Greene Central at 8:30 p.m.

With the score tied at 48-48 with less than a minute remaining, the Pant-Hers held the ball for the last shot and Heath swished it. Ayden-Grifton had a chance to tie the game on its last possession but Jaunita Murphy was called for traveling with three seconds left.

North Pitt, which improved to 16-9 with its eighth straight win, meets top-seeded Farmville Central tonight at 7 p.m.

North Pitt Coach Randy Avery said Heath is one of the players his team goes to in pressure situations.

"What we're supposed to do in that situation is look for our shooter," he said. "Gwen (Pilgreen) is one and Amy is the other. She took a good shot and it went in."

North Pitt's Keisha Pilgreen led all scorers with 23 points, and Gwen Pilgreen totaled 12. Karen Edmonds tallied 11 points and Kim Barfield chipped in 10 to pace the Lady Chargers, who fell to 17-7.

The Pant-Hers were not aggressive enough on offense, according to Avery, who said he expected a close game.

"We were somewhat tentative getting the ball inside. Ayden-Grifton did a great job on defense versus our half-court game," he said. "We thought it was going to be a nip-and-tuck game."

The Lady Chargers were hampered by the loss of starting center Michelle Whitfield, who was injured early in the third quarter. Whitfield left the game with nine points.

"When you go deeper than your seventh player, you're going to people who haven't played a lot in these types of situation," Ayden-Grifton Coach Kathy Frazier said.

The Lady Chargers gave the Pant-Hers, who shot 12-17 from the foul line, too many scoring oppor-

Allison's Fast Lap Surprises Himself

ROCKINGHAM (AP) — Rookie NACAR driver Davey Allison says he thought he had a good lap in qualifying for the Goodwrench 500 at North Carolina Motor Speedway, but he didn't know it was good enough to set a track record and capture his first pole position.

"Basically, it's a lot of guys out there doing their job," Allison said, the son of NASCAR veteran Bobby Allison, said Thursday after running a record lap at 146.989 mph in his Ford. "I felt like it was a good lap, but I didn't realize it was that good."

In becoming the first rookie to win a pole in a Winston Cup event since 1981, Allison eclipsed the track record of 146.948 mph set last October by Tim Richmond and also broke the event record previously held by Terry Labonte.

"The first pole is really special to us," Allison said. "I think I'd be crazy if I'd try to tell anyone we're not all fired up. Who could've thought we'd be doing something like this?"

Allison was the only one of the 45 drivers attempting to qualify that broke the track record.

Higher qualifying speeds were expected based on a special practice session held at the speedway last week. Also, the cars have been reduced from 3,700 pounds to 3,500 pounds.

"All of us expected speeds to be quicker today," Allison said, "but the humidity in the air hurt the horsepower. We realized in practice before qualifying that the speeds weren't going to be as quick as expected."

Geoff Bodine will join Allison on the front row for Sunday's race. Bodine ran 146.518 mph.

Results from Thursday's qualifying for Sunday's Goodwrench 500 NASCAR Winston Cup Race with position, type of car, time and average speed:

1. Davey Allison, Ford, 24.908, 146.989 mph
2. Geoff Bodine, Chevrolet, 24.988, 146.518 mph
3. Ken Schrader, Ford, 25.012, 146.378 mph
4. Benny Parsons, Chevrolet, 25.026, 146.296 mph
5. Ricky Rudd, Ford, 25.052, 146.144 mph
6. Neil Bonnett, Pontiac, 25.069, 146.045 mph
7. Bill Elliott, Ford, 25.139, 145.638 mph
8. Danny Waltrip, Chevrolet, 25.218, 145.182 mph
9. Terry Labonte, Chevrolet, 25.243, 145.038 mph
10. Buddy Baker, Oldsmobile, 25.288, 144.780 mph
11. Harry Gant, Chevrolet, 25.308, 144.666 mph
12. Sterling Marlin, Oldsmobile, 25.311, 144.649 mph
13. Richard Petty, Pontiac, 25.333, 144.278 mph
14. Dale Earnhardt, Chevrolet, 25.353, 144.409 mph
15. Bobby Hill, Jr., Buick, 25.376, 144.278 mph
16. Morgan Shepherd, Buick, 25.385, 144.210 mph

CAA Tourney Next Stop For ECU

East Carolina's Pirates will open play Saturday at noon in the Colonial Athletic Association's annual basketball tournament.

At stake is the league's automatic berth in the NCAA tournament field, with defending champion Navy the favorite to come away with the prize.

East Carolina, after a disappointing season that saw the Pirates jump off to a 6-2 start only to end up 12-15 overall and seventh seeded in the eight-team field, will be facing arch-rival UNC-Wilmington in the first round game. It is the second straight matchup between the two teams in the tournament's first round. UNCW defeated the Pirates, 75-54, in last year's tournament opener.

In fact, the Pirates will be attempting to break a five-game losing streak against the Seahawks. UNCW defeated the Pirates in both regular season meetings this year after a sweep of the two regular slate games and the tournament meetings last year. ECU's last victory came during the 1984-85 season when it downed the Seahawks, 78-61, in Greenville.

The tournament will be played in the Hampton, Va., Coliseum, and all games of the event will be telecast over the Home Team Sports network. That can be seen in Greenville over cable television channel 16.

In addition to the noon meeting between the Pirates and Seahawks, Richmond and American collide at 2 p.m., with Navy taking on William & Mary at 7 p.m. and George Mason and James Madison closing out the first round at 9 p.m.

The semifinal games will be played on Sunday at 2 and 4 p.m., with the championship game Monday night at 7:30 p.m.

This is the first year that the tournament has been played on a neutral court. All previous meetings have been either at one host school, or with first round games at higher seeds.

"The neutral court will help all the teams," ECU Coach Charlie Harrison said. "When you are playing for a bid to the NCAA, it's not a fair advantage to play on someone else's home court. That's a very positive thing for the home team."

The Pirates will be led into the tournament by senior forward Marchell Henry, who averages 19.2 points per game and 6.5 rebounds, both tops for the team.

Also in double figures is forward Blue Edwards, hitting 14.6, while senior center Leon Bass is averaging 11.3 points a game.

Edwards, however, is not expected to start as Harrison goes with an all-senior lineup that helped defeat James Madison in the final regular season game of the year, 74-68.

In addition to Henry and Bass, it should include forward Derrick Battle, 2.0 ppg; and guards Keith Sledge, 6.6 ppg, and William Grady, 3.1 ppg.

For the Seahawks, the dominating factor is senior all-star Brian Rowsom, a 6.9 center. He averages 22.4 points a game and 11.6 rebounds an outing.

Also in double figure scoring is 6-3 senior guard Sandy Anderson at 10.7 ppg. Other starters are expected to be Greg Bender, a 6-7 sophomore forward, averaging 8.1 ppg; Charles Cherry, a 6-5 junior forward, hitting 5.4 ppg; and Rob Wagner, a 6-1 senior guard, scoring 3.0 ppg.

UNCW leads the league from the three-point line, hitting 42.0 percent from behind the arc. Earlier this year, they downed the Pirates by hitting four of their first five baskets from three-point range and banging in a total of seven of 11 in the 61-51 win.

"They are a good blend of people, a very veteran team," Harrison said. "With Rowsom inside, and the people on the perimeter who are good shooters, when they play well, they're hard to beat. Rowsom is awfully talented and active within 15 feet of the basket."

Harrison said that there isn't a whole lot that can be done to stop the three-point shooting. "It makes them difficult to guard. If you go out and put a lot of pressure on them, they spread things out and isolate Rowsom and turn him loose. If you stay inside on him, you have to expect them to put it up. You just have to do the best you can."

Harrison is hopeful that the win over James Madison in the final game of the regular season will be a springboard for the Pirates. "I hope the win did some good, but you never know. The biggest thing is that they realize that some of the things they did they need to do all the run — run the floor, push it down the floor. It also gave them more confidence in getting the ball inside to Tree (Bass). Except for the William & Mary game, he's played very well down the stretch for us."

"I just want us to play hard and play to win. I think we will."

For Harrison, the tournament will be his last hurrah at East Carolina. He has resigned effective the end of the season. He is hopeful that that end is still some games away.

Tar Heels Top Duke, 77-71

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina Coach Dean Smith and Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski say both their teams failed to take advantage of open shots, but in the end, it was the Tar Heels who missed fewer of them.

"Our offense was hurt very much by missing some open 3-pointers," Smith said Thursday night after his second-ranked Tar Heels defeated the 17th-ranked Blue Devils 77-71. "I never thought we would throw the ball away more against a Duke zone than against the man-to-man. We had some open ones, some very good shots, I think."

"They just came out and put so much pressure on us," Krzyzewski said. "And we missed shots, some open shots. It kind of snowballed from there."

North Carolina held a 26-point lead early in the second half, but Duke used an inside-outside shooting combination to pull within six points at 61-55 with 7:25 left.

The Blue Devils closed the gap to 72-67 on Danny Ferry's 3-pointer with 2:22 left. But Duke's chance to cut the lead to three points disappeared when Ferry's inbound pass after a North Carolina turnover went out of bounds with 50 seconds left.

North Carolina hit 5 of 6 free throws in the final 49 seconds to preserve the victory.

Purdue Making It Count At The Free Throw Line

By The Associated Press

Purdue is still in the running for the Big Ten basketball championship because of a turnaround, not a jumper, at the foul line.

The sixth-ranked Boilermakers beat No. 3 Indiana 75-64 Thursday night, largely by making 24 of 32 free throws, a far cry from the 18-for-30 performance in an Indiana win earlier in the season.

"We shot 32 free throws, and they shot 19," said Purdue guard Troy Lewis, who led the Boilermakers with 18 points, 12 coming on his 14 free-throw attempts. "That's the difference (from the 88-77 loss on Jan. 31). We didn't hit our free throws at IU. I've had my problems shooting free throws the last two games, but tonight, they were going in."

Lewis also made two 3-pointers, his only field goals of the game, as the Boilermakers, 22-3, moved within one-half game of the Hoosiers, 23-3, for the Big Ten lead. Indiana could have clinched a share of the title with a victory.

Purdue, 13-2 in the conference, still has games with Ohio State, Michigan State and Michigan, the last two on the road. Indiana, 15-1, will play at Illinois and then close the season with a home game against Ohio State.

"We have our destiny in our hands," Lewis said. "There's always a chance of a letdown, but we don't know how big. If we lose to Ohio State, this win means nothing."

"We're still climbing the ladder, playing for the (conference) championship," Purdue Coach Gene Keady said after his team snapped the Hoosiers' nine-game winning streak and extended its own to six games.

In other games involving ranked teams Thursday night, No. 1 Nevada-Las Vegas beat Pacific 82-55; No. 2 North Carolina defeated No. 17 Duke 77-71; No. 7 Iowa crushed Michigan State 93-64; and Vanderbilt upset No. 18 Florida 84-76.

Purdue's largest lead was 42-30 early in the second half but Indiana closed to within one point twice, the last time at 53-52, before Lewis hit a 3-pointer. The Boilermakers' lead wasn't safe, however, until the closing minutes, when three Indiana starters fouled out and the Boilermakers got nine of their final 11 points on free throws.

Purdue was able to handle Indiana's Steve Alford, as the Hoosiers' all-time leading scorer finished with 15 points, none from the free-throw line, a point not overlooked by Indiana Coach Bob Knight.

"Looking over the stats, the thing that strikes me and is hard for me to believe is that he can play 40 minutes and not be fouled," Knight said. "I thought they did a good job defensively, and they always do a good job defensively on Steve."

Alford, who went to the free-throw line 15 times in the first meeting with Purdue, was held scoreless for the game's first 12 minutes as Everett Stephens covered him from the game's start.

Daryl Thomas led Indiana with 18 points.

No. 1 UNLV 82, Pacific 55
Nevada-Las Vegas' six seniors closed out their home careers with an easy blowout of Pacific for the Runnin' Rebels' 14th consecutive victory.

Reserve Gary Graham scored 20 points, Armon Gilliam added 17 and the two seniors scored 25 of the Runnin' Rebels first 30 points as they opened a 30-10 lead and were never headed.

The Runnin' Rebels, 29-1 and 17-0, led by as many as 37 points in the second half. Christian Gray led the Tigers, 10-16 and 6-11, with 19 points as Pacific lost its fourth straight.

No. 7 Iowa 93, Michigan State 64
Iowa pulled away from a 44-26 halftime lead for a school-record 24th victory. The Hawkeyes, who have lost four games, trailed 13-9 but went on a 22-2 run that gave them a 33-15 lead with 5:58 to play in the half.

Roy Marble led Iowa, 11-4 in the Big Ten, with 18 points, while B.J. Armstrong added 15 for the Hawkeyes, who broke the school record for victories in a season set by the 1979-80 team which went to the Final Four.

Vernon Carr had a career-high 26 points for the visiting Spartans, 10-15 overall and 5-10 in the conference.

Vanderbilt 84, No. 18 Florida 76

Barry Goheen scored 10 of his 25 points in the final five minutes as the Commodores snapped a five-game losing streak with the homecourt victory. Florida tied the game 61-61 with 5:52 to play when Goheen, a sophomore guard, took over for the Southeastern Conference game.

Goheen made three free throws, scored on a fast break and then converted a three-point play to put the Commodores, 15-14 and 6-11, in front 73-64 with 3:12 to play. He made two more free throws with 2:28 to play for a 77-67 edge.

"It's good to see that Goheen played well tonight. It was only a matter of time before he got his offensive game back together," Vanderbilt Coach C.M. Newton said.

Florida, 21-8 and 12-5, which made three of eight shots from the field in the final eight minutes, was led by Andrew Moten's 14 points.

Other Games

Kevin Houston, the nation's leading scorer, had 44 points but Arkansas lost to St. Peter's 71-68 despite holding a 22-point lead in the second half. The Peacocks, 20-6 and 11-3, clinched the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference regular-season title with the victory.

Pee Wee Barber scored a career-high 40 points to offset the 30-point, 16-rebound performance of Tito Horford as Florida State beat Miami, Fla. 108-84.

Reggie Miller's 36 points led UCLA to an 82-76 victory over Southern Cal as the Bruins won the Pacific-10 regular-season title.

Montana State won the Big Sky regular-season title despite having the night off as Nevada-Reno ended Boise State's eight-game winning streak with a 74-69 victory that gave the Bobcats the top seed in the postseason tournament.

Rik Smits scored 27 points to lead Marist to its 11th consecutive victory, an 84-78 triumph over St. Francis, Pa., in an ECAC Metro Conference game.

Tulsa won the Missouri Valley Conference regular-season title despite losing to Wichita State 63-61. The Golden Hurricane, 21-6 and 11-3, earned the top seed in the conference tournament on a tiebreaker because Bradley lost to Drake 79-77 to finish with an 11-3 conference mark.

Texas-El Paso earned at least a share of the Western Athletic Conference regular-season title with a 67-50 victory over Air Force. The Miners, 22-5 and 12-3, have won the last four WAC titles. Texas-El Paso was assured of at least a partial title when New Mexico beat Wyoming 92-89.

Conference Tournaments

Big South

Top-seeded Baptist, 19-9, advanced to the semifinals with a 78-59 victory over Augusta, 8-19, as Ben Hinson, Heder Ambrose and Oliver Johnson each scored 18 points.

In other games, Aswan Wainwright's layup with two seconds left gave Radford, 17-13, a 71-69 victory over Winthrop, 8-20; Clarence Grier scored 28 points as Campbell, 16-12, held off Armstrong State, 6-22, 92-86; and William Funderburk converted a four-point play with 38 seconds remaining as North Carolina-Asheville, 15-10, trimmed Coastal Carolina, 12-16, 73-68.

Women Enjoying Stay In Hawaii

PRINCEVILLE, Hawaii (AP) — Cathy Gerring and the other leaders of the LPGA Women's Kemper Open say they like playing two tournaments in as many weeks in Hawaii.

"The best thing for me about these two back-to-back tournaments in Hawaii is that it tends to relax me," said Gerring, who led after Thursday's first round of the $300,000 LPGA Kemper Open with a 6-under-par 66. "Being relaxed is good for me. I tend to get going real fast and my game suffers."

Gerring said she was using the Kemper and last week's Tsumura Hawaiian Ladies Open on Oahu to double as her honeymoon. She married Jim Gerring on Dec. 27.

"We never had a honeymoon and we're using this time in Hawaii to finally have one," Gerring said.

Gerring's game suffered during the first week of her honeymoon. She tied for 44th place at the 54-hole Tsumura.

She did much better in Thursday's opening action, shooting what she called a "phenomenal ball-striking" round.

Gerring birdied the fifth and sixth holes and eas at 2-under-par 34 after nine holes. After she made the turn, she birdied the 10th, 11th, 12th and 14th holes, giving her a back-nine total of 4-under 32.

Cindy Rarick, who won the Tsumura, agreed with Gerring that two weeks of play in Hawaii relaxes the players and improves their games.

"I know the back-to-back tournaments in Hawaii have helped me," said Rarick, who shot a 3-under 69. "I get such a comfortable feeling in Hawaii. When I have fun, my golf game is better. Things just seem to fall into place."

Rarick, who attended the University of Hawaii from 1978 to 1980, said she was a bit concerned over Kemper after winning her first LPGA tournament.

"After my practice game here at Princeville on Monday, I was so exhausted after nine holes I was worried," Rarick said. "But the next day, I hit the ball solid and am back into the swing of things."

Jane Geddes, who finished one stroke behind Rarick at the Tsumura, was tied with Missie Berteotti at 5-under 67, one shot behind Gerring.

Geddes said the back-to-back tournaments in Hawaii were a blessing for the players.

"I've noticed that in the past, the first week we're in Hawaii, the first few days you suffer from jet lag," Geddes said. "I feel my energy level is much higher this week than it would have been if I had just gotten into Hawaii."

Janet Coles, who was tied for fourth place with five other players at 69, offered another reason for liking the two tournaments in Hawaii.

"I love the back-to-back tournaments because it has allowed me to do something I have always wanted to do — even up my golfer's tan," Coles said. "Usually when I come to Hawaii, I rush my tan, get sunburned and play lousy golf. Now I'm getting an even tan and playing good golf. What more could I want?"

Visit From Coach Helps Langer Get Back On Track

MIAMI (AP) — Bernhard Langer says a visit from his coach has put him back on track.

"The last four days, we've been working on my swing," Langer said after a 7-under-par 65 had staked him to the first-round lead Thursday in the $1 million Doral Open Golf Tournament.

Langer lost by a single stroke in the Bob Hope Classic earlier this year, had a chance to win before finishing third at Pebble Beach and led through two rounds at Hawaii.

But he played poorly in the last two rounds at Hawaii and then was unimpressive in the Australian Masters.

"I kind of lost it the last two rounds at Hawaii and in Australia," the West German star said.

A quick visit from his coach, Willi Hoffmann, a long-time friend from Germany, got him turned around, Langer said.

"I'm back at it with spirit. With a lot of hard work, I'm on my way to a very important swing change to make me a better player in the future," Langer said.

He birdied the first three holes he played Thursday, then took the lead with birdies on three of the last five.

"The only bad part of my game was some tee shots. Except for a blocked chip shot, I didn't make any mistakes," he said.

Larry Rinker, not yet a winner in six full seasons on the PGA Tour, was second after a 66 in what he called "a 2-club wind. And with the gusts, it was very tricky."

Tom Kite, a former Doral champion who has a history of strong play in this tournament, and Phil Blackmar, who twice holed in from off the green, were another stroke back at 67, five under par.

They were followed by Ken Brown of Scotland and Tom Sieckmann at 68.

Jack Nicklaus, the 47-year-old Masters champion, scored an eagle-3 in a round of 69 that left him in a large group at three under par.

Garner Is Named

Gerald Garner has been named as the new baseball coach at North Pitt High School, replacing Doug Warren, who remains as athletic director at the school.

Garner, while attending East Duplin High School, was twice voted to the All-East baseball team and went on to play collegiate baseball at Atlantic Christian, playing both in the outfield and pitching.

During 12 years of coaching, Garner has led his teams to four conference championships and one state runner-up season. In two seasons of junior varsity coaching, he was 19-11, while his 10-year varsity record is 162-47.

Warren posted a 33-71 record, including a 7-11 mark this past season, all at North Pitt.

Garner has previously served on the coaching staffs at Rose and Conley in the Pitt County system.

SMU Booster Used Slush Fund

DALLAS (AP) — Developer and sports agent Sherwood Blount Jr., who was banned from booster activity at Southern Methodist two years ago, was the unidentified source of payments for student athletes cited in the NCAA's probation report, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

The NCAA Wednesday cited the payments as the basis for the harshest penalty ever against a college football program. The NCAA identified the source of the money only as "an outside athletics representative who had been disassociated from the university's athletics program."

In a copyright story Thursday, the newspaper quoted sources close to the SMU athletic department as saying that Blount was the source of $61,000 in cash payments.

When asked Thursday about the newspaper report, Blount told The Associated Press, "I appreciate that opportunity (to respond), but I have no comment." He was one of nine boosters barred from SMU athletics in August 1985 when the NCAA stripped the football program of 45 scholarships, placed it on three years probation and criticized alumni involvement in recruiting violations.

Blount said, "I won't comment on that unless you reveal your sources," when the Times Herald told him that sources had identified him as the booster referred to in the NCAA's report.

"Please make sure you're right, because I hold you personally liable if you print that. If you're wrong, we'll go to court and prove you wrong. Let me tell you this, unless you read it in the NCAA report or you were told by an SMU official, we will look to you and the newspaper as responsible."

The NCAA on Wednesday canceled SMU's 11-game schedule for 1987, limited the team to only seven games in 1988 and cut the coaching staff from 10 to six until 1990, reduced scholarships and prohibited television and bowl appearances in 1988.

The NCAA report did not identify 13 implicated players, but said 10 players who received the illicit payments, which ranged from $50 to $725 monthly, completed their eligibility last year or already had left the university. Three other players with eligibility remaining also received money.

two from the line, Carole Stokes scored to pull Ayden-Grifton within one at 44-43 with 3:10 to go.

Keisha Pilgreen, who sank nine of 10 free throws in the fourth quarter, gave the Pant-Hers a 48-45 lead with 1:52 to go, but Barfield nailed a short jumper and Edmonds hit one of two free throws to knot the game at 48-48 with 1:08 remaining.

The Lady Chargers overcame the early deficit but were unable to get over the hump, according to Frazier.

Ayden-Grifton coach Bob Murphrey said the Chargers, who became the conference's number one seed in the state tournament by virtue of the victory, were able to win despite a poor second quarter performance.

"We had our usual lull where we miss some easy shots and tighten up. We were getting pretty good shots in the middle and around the basket, but they just wouldn't go," he said. "We're not going to be able to afford that luxury tomorrow night" against Greene Central.

Blount, who shot 14-14 from the free throw line all in the fourth quarter, is ranked second in the league in free throw percentage, according to Murphrey.

"He's an excellent free throw shooter," Murphrey said. "He's the guy we want on the line."

Ronnell Peterson managed 15 points for Ayden-Grifton, which improved to 19-5, despite a slow start.

"He was cold," Murphrey said. "I knew if he got untracked we'd be all right. We need points from Peterson and Blount."

Stuart Squires led Pamlico, which fell to 11-13, with 23 points. Jamie Gibbs chipped in 12 points and Deon Gibbs added 10.

The Chargers, who never trailed in the contest, came out strong and opened a 12-2 lead on a driving layup by Blount with 2:46 left in the quarter.

Trailing 18-10 after one period of play, the Hurricanes stormed back with six unanswered points to make it 18-16 with 3:08 remaining until intermission.

Leon Dixon hit a short jumper for the Chargers with just under three minutes left in the half to break a five-minute scoreless spell.

Columbia Takes Win

WASHINGTON — Third seeded Columbia downed number two Northampton East in the semifinals of the Tobacco Belt Conference basketball tournament Thursday night.

Columbia came away with a 56-53 win and will face top-seeded Belhaven for the championship tonight.

In the girls' division, second-seeded Creswell beat number three Belhaven, 57-53, to advance to the finals. Creswell will face number four Bath in the finals tonight for the title.

Regular Medicines Can Alter Tests

By The Associated Press
North Carolina and Duke are requiring permission from the team doctors before they can take over-the-counter medicines for colds because the medications might show up in mandatory drug testing prior to the NCAA tournament.

"Before they (the basketball players) take any medication, they are to tell the team doctor about it, and he will put it in their file," said Dick Baddour, associate athletic director at North Carolina.

"We told them (the players) if they took anything, even for a cold, that it had to be approved by the team doctor," Duke basketball coach Mike Krzyzewski told the Greensboro News & Record. "If they take anything, we are going to record it chronologically, and we want to try and find out if they have taken anything in the last few weeks."

The NCAA has announced that it will test all basketball players on the 64 teams chosen to compete in the 1987 championships as soon as possible after they are selected March 8.

"We're going to subject every single athlete in the tournament to testing, either before a game, (or) right at the conclusion of a game, and that includes the conclusion of the Final Four," said John L. Toner, director of athletics at the University of Connecticut and chairman of the Special NCAA Postseason Drug-Testing Committee.

Any player who tests positive will be declared ineligible, although current NCAA regulations do not provide for team sanctions, according to an announcement from the NCAA office in Kansas City.

The 3,000 drugs on the Banned Drugs Reference List include Dristan, Sudafed, Bayer Cough Syrup for Children and other common over-the-counter drugs. Those common medicines are causing headaches for those responsible for students athletes.

"You are at risk of failing the NCAA drug test if you take any of the drugs listed, because every one of them contains something that could be a performance-enhancing drug," said Dr. Richard G. Hiskey of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Hiskey is faculty chairman of athletics and alumni distinguished professor of chemistry.

"It is really a problem," Hiskey said. "It is especially difficult this time of year when so many medicines one might take could result in testing positive for drugs."

Pirate Golfers Set For Opener

East Carolina University's golf team, with a new coach, opens the spring season today at the Palmetto Intercollegiate Tournament, seeking a new start in the program.

Hal Morrison, a veteran coach, comes to ECU from Methodist College where he coached for two seasons. Prior to that, he was at East Tennessee State, where he was three times the Southern Conference Coach of the Year. Among pro golfers he has coached are J.C. Snead, Bobby Wadkins and Brian Hulbert.

Morrison is looking for an improved golf team at East Carolina this spring after a fairly good fall season. "I told the team in the fall that to play good golf is to play a steady, cool headed game and we are definitely capable of doing that," the coach said. "We definitely got better as the fall season progressed. We played just about everybody in the fall so we could get a good look at what we had. I was pleased with what we saw."

Morrison looks to seniors Mike Bradley and Paul Steelman to show the way for the Pirates in leadership if not in strokes. Others expected to perform well include junior transfer Brian Conner, sophomore Chris Winkel and freshman John Maginess.

"Our first goal is to play steady, consistent golf and win the CAA tournament. Then maybe we'll set our sights somewhere," Morrison said.

Holley's Late Bucket Lifts Washington

HAVELOCK — Angela Holley scored with four seconds left to lift Washington's girls basketball team to a 36-35 victory over West Carteret Thursday night in the semifinals of the Coastal Conference tournament.

In the boys' division, number two Havelock defeated number three West Craven to move into the finals tonight.

In the boys' title game, Havelock will take on regular season champ Conley for the title, while East Carteret, the number four seed, will face Washington for the girls' championship.

Washington fell behind early and had to struggle back. At the end of the first quarter, West Carteret had built up a 12-4 lead. Things got no better offensively for the Lady Pam Pack in the second period as it scored only two points — but Washington was able to hold the Lady Patriots to just four. That left West Carteret up, 16-6 at the half.

In the third period, however, Washington got itself together and stormed back, outscoring West, 18-10. That cut the lead back to 26-24 going into the final quarter.

Washington kept coming in that, and Holley's 10-footer with four seconds left allowed the Lady Pack to pull out the win.

Holley led Washington's scoring with 12 points. Cindy Murdoch led West Carteret with 16 while Jennifer Bedsworth added 10.

New proposals seek to ease the financial burdens a catastrophic illness can impose on a family. The ancient Chinese had a unique way of avoiding the poverty that illness can cause. They only paid doctors for keeping them well. And doctors often had to make payments to PATIENTS who became sick! If a patient died, a special lantern was hung outside the doctor's house. A doctor who collected too many of these lanterns might find himself short of paying customers.

Horoscope From The Carroll Righter Institute

FORECAST FOR SATURDAY Feb. 28
GENERAL TENDENCIES: You find this is not the day to get involved in new activities. Go along on an even keel and bring your deep-seated urges into expression now.
ARIES (March 21 to April 19): Quietly eradicate whatever is not good for your plan of existence. Be with those who help you remain calm.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): Contact friends who have proved themselves in times of need and show how much you appreciate them.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Avoid allies who are apt to try to limit you today. You can now handle a civic duty you have neglected.
MOON CHILDREN (June 22 to July 21): It's not a good day to do whatever is annoying you, so concentrate on releasing tension.
LEO (July 22 to August 21): Forget about romance and fun for now and get busy on keeping promises you have made. Keep your car running well.
VIRGO (August 22 to September 22): An associate can be of great assistance to you at this time. Get your heads together and produce results.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22): Today is fine for making arrangements for a good time later. Take any health treatments you need.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21): Put an added touch on whatever you are working on and make it more effective and valuable.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21): Do something of a progressive nature. Tonight is fine for having guests in and enjoying their company.
CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 20): Do something different to your home. Some sight-seeing with friends can prove quite interesting.
AQUARIUS (January 21 to February 19): You know how to show your finest abilities, so get busy on this. Plan to be with people you like.
PISCES (February 20 to March 20): You know how to make your life more interesting now. Do whatever will please your mate the most.
IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY ... he or she will definitely be a modern age product, but it would be wise to teach this one more about conventional, standard principles. Upon reaching adulthood your progeny will be able to communicate with almost anyone, but don't forget about a fine education.

Sometimes you just cannot utilize your resources to full advantage. That's the time to enlist the aid, albeit unwilling, of your opponents.

East-West were employing a weak no trump opening bid, showing 12-14 points. South's jump overall announced the equivalent of an opening bid and a good six-card suit, so North had no hesitation in raising to game.

East jumped up with the ace of clubs on his partner's opening lead of the jack, and found the excellent shift to the jack of spades. A seemingly easy contract suddenly was in jeopardy, because that took out North's side entry before the diamond suit could be established for a discard. Declarer was now in danger of losing two spade tricks in addition to the two minor-suit aces.

With great skill declarer mounted his counter offensive. He won the spade in dummy and drew trumps in three rounds, taking care to discard a diamond from the table; the third club would be needed later. After cashing the king of clubs, he led a diamond to the jack. East could not afford to win this trick, and declarer took advantage of his entry to dummy to ruff the remaining club. Now when he led a diamond to the queen, East had to win, but he was trapped.

Left with nothing but pointed-suit cards (spades and diamonds), he was left with a Hobson's choice. No matter which suit he elected to return, he was forced to give de-

'PALS' STAR — Don Ameche stars with George C. Scott as two old war buddies who are roused out of their retirement when they stumble upon $3.6 million in drug money in the CBS movie "Pals." The movie is scheduled Saturday night. (AP Laserphoto)

Ameche, Scott Find Spotlight In 'Pals'

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Don Ameche and George C. Scott star as two old war buddies who are roused out of their retirement rut when they stumble upon $3.6 million in drug money in the CBS movie "PALS."

"They were buddies in World War II and now they're retired in the same trailer park in Florida," said Ameche. "Neither one of us ever married and he lives with his mother. All we do is fish. There's nothing else in our lives. Then one day we find this money."

The money sends them off on a merry spending spree, accompanied by Scott's batty mother, played by Sylvia Sydney, and a purple-haired runaway played by Susan Rinell. Hot after them is the drug dealer, who in an amusing twist has a bad heart and years to retire. And the FBI is after all of them.

"PALS," airing Saturday, Feb. 28, was shot on location in Savannah, Ga.

Ameche's role as the level-headed Art is reminiscent of his Academy Award-winning supporting role in the movie "Cocoon," about a bunch of senior citizens who find a fountain of youth. In "PALS," all Art really wants is a microwave oven with a carousel.

Though Scott is associated most strongly with dramatic roles, he is sensational as Jack, who goes bananas over all the dough and does a hilarious social-climbing act that hasn't been matched since Jiggs met Maggie in the funny papers.

There may be holes in the story, but "PALS" is a pleasant, charming little movie about two guys who took the wrong exit on the freeway of life, and you can't help but root for the hapless pair.

"The gist or moral of this is what money can do to you," said Ameche. "It's so much money you can give vent to your fantasies. He goes wild and I don't."

Ameche said he learned in real life to resist the changes too much money can bring.

"It was many years ago and one of my children came home from a birthday party that cost $25,000," he said. "I had six children — my oldest boy is now 53 — and I got them out of that Hollywood environment. We raised our kids in the Midwest."

He grew up in Kenosha, Wis., and at an early age began working in radio, eventually starring on shows like "First Nighter," the soap opera "Betty and Bob," and with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy. Many still remember him for "The Bickersons," which he did with Frances Langford.

He made numerous movies, but was most famous for the 1939 "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." The role firmly established him in the public's mind as the inventor of the telephone to the point that many called it "the Ameche."

"I don't get kidded much now about the telephone," Ameche said. "But it's been only in the last three or four years that people finally stopped making jokes about 'the Ameche.' Now, you have to explain it to young people. They don't know what it means."

Young people now know Ameche, though, thanks to his movie comeback after 12 years in the 1983 hit, "Trading Places," starring Dan Aykroyd and Eddie Murphy.

"They wanted Ray Milland, but he couldn't pass the physical," Ameche said.

"It was almost the same thing on 'Cocoon.' They offered it to Red Buttons but he was tied up. Then they offered it to Buddy Ebsen and he was busy."

Ameche said the Academy Award came as a shock so late in his career.

"I never thought I'd be nominated," he said. "I never thought I'd win. I couldn't believe it when I won. But it's a great, great feeling. In my own mind I have to believe there was a considerable residue for having made so many contributions over a long time. And that doesn't disturb me at all."

Broadway Banks On Imports

By DREW FETHERSTON
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — "Les Miserables," despite its name and theme, is just the sort of thing to cheer Broadway up.

"The arrival of a hit show skews the numbers on attendance and (box office) gross radically," says Gerald Schoenfeld, chairman of the Shubert Organization. "With a major running hit, you're looking at a $22.5 million gross a year, 600,000 more people in the theaters. With numbers like those, there will be no articles about how badly Broadway is doing."

Broadway, though hardly moribund, could use the tonic effects of a new hit show. Several important numbers — of shows, of theater occupancy and of total attendance — are down a bit from last year, although box-office receipts are up slightly. More disturbing is the drop in attendance over the past 10 years: More than 6 million seats had been filled at this point in the 1976-77 season, compared to 4.6 million this year. More than a third — 13 of 38 — Broadway theaters are dark. Ten years ago, 32 shows were running; today there are 19, with an additional six scheduled to open in March.

Those healthy figures from the '70s are already part of Broadway lore, embodied in the hallowed tenet that "Chorus Line" saved Broadway. "Chorus Line" was preceded by "Equus," said Schoenfeld. "When 'Chorus Line' followed, you had a drama and a musical show that generated tremendous publicity. It was a major turning point that took us out of a trough that had begun in 1969."

The hope now is that "Les Miserables," with more than $10 million worth of tickets sold in advance of its opening (Saturday in previews, March 12 officially), will repeat the miracle of "A Chorus Line." "This is a business of cycles," said Schoenfeld. "We are in a down cycle now, but we hopefully will be emerging from it shortly."

"Les Mis" is only one of what Broadway hopes will be a string of London-born hit shows: "Starlight Express" opened in previews Tuesday night with a healthy advance sale of $5.4 million. (Advance sales include bookings, often large, by theater-trip groups; "Starlight Express" includes $2.4 million of such group sales. Group tickets aren't paid for immediately, and may be canceled if a show fails to live up to its expectations.)

Later looked-for arrivals with similarly bright Broadway prospects include "Les Liaisons Dangereuses" (previews in April) and, next season, "Chess" and "The Phantom of the Opera."

Hit shows can do more than merely boost box-office receipts. "When Broadway has a few successes, it adds incentive for production of new shows," said Craig Wakefield, tourism marketing analyst with the state's Commerce Department. "People get more interested, more excited — producers as well as consumers."

"They have an encouraging effect on others to produce musicals and straight plays," added Schoenfeld. "Then, the following year, that effect is felt on the road."

Demand requires supply, and a hot season could attract new American works — as opposed to revivals and imported ones — to Broadway. Fewer than a dozen of this season's new Broadway plays and musicals were original American works.

Nor is Broadway the only part of town cheered by the applause and cash that greets a blockbuster. "Broadway theater remains the single largest high-level attraction in New York City," said Wakefield. It isn't hard to understand the esteem in which "A Chorus Line," and to a lesser extent "Equus," are held. The two seasons before "Equus" opened in October, 1974, were the worst that Broadway had seen: Attendance was 5.4 million in 1972-'74 and 5.7 million the following year.

"Equus" helped pull those figures up to 6.6 million, and "A Chorus Line" which opened in July, 1975, boosted them further. By the end of the first season of "A Chorus Line," attendance was 7.3 million; it rose further, to 8.8 million, the next year. "Obviously 'A Chorus Line' and 'Equus' did not account for everything," said George Wachtel, research director for the League of American Theatres and Producers. "But they certainly started to focus attention back on Broadway."

Other factors that lifted theater in those seasons included the first television advertising (for "Pippin"), first acceptance of credit cards at the box office and, shortly thereafter, first use of telephone sales.

"For the first time, going to the theater involved only one trip," said Wachtel.

Despite ups and downs at the box office, theater retains its ability to draw visitors to New York. Wakefield cited surveys that asked respondents to name attractions that would draw them to New York City. Between 1983 and 1985, an average of 42 percent said theater, compared to 28 percent for sightseeing. Dining out and shopping were cited by 9 percent.

Even last year's much-publicized centennial of the Statue of Liberty did little to dent theater's dominance. Theater slipped to 34 percent in the state survey, but sightseeing rose only to 30 percent.

Those figures have caused the state to emphasize theater, almost to the exclusion of anything else, in its "I Love New York" advertising campaign. Indeed, the emphasis was so great that viewers came to believe that the campaign was for theaters alone, a perception that led to changes in the ads. The new ads, said Wakefield, "have some theater in them, but they focus more on nightlife in general."

Still, big events are necessary, Schoenfeld acknowledges. "They're the only way we have to attract audiences to go to the theater for the first time," he said. "They then may go to see something else."

FAMILY TEAM — Rock singer Joan Jett and actor Michael J. Fox acknowledge applause as they portray Patti and Joe Rasnick, a sister and brother who play in a bar band, in a scene from the movie "Light of Day." (AP Laserphoto)

'Light Of Day' Flounders As Family Tries To Escape

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
As writer of "Taxi Driver," "Raging Bull" and "The Mosquito Coast," and director-writer of "Blue Collar," "Hardcore" and "American Gigolo," Paul Schrader has taken a corrosive view of contemporary life, with special attention to the deterioration of the American family. He is back in the same territory with "Light of Day."

Schrader's story concerns the Rasnick family of Cleveland. Joe (Michael J. Fox) works in a factory by day, plays guitar in rock bars at night. Also in the band is his sister, Patti (Joan Jett); he shares a house with her and her young, fatherless son. Patti's wild ways have alienated her domineering, God-fearing mother (Gena Rowlands), whose husband (Jason Miller) remains complacently neutral.

Patti and Joe seek escape from their squalid lives. She tries a bit of burglary, and when she fails, Joe dutifully rescues her. Next they attempt to break into the rock bigtime, but that fails, too. The family is splintered, but the mother's fatal illness draws them back together.

Interwoven in the family saga is the theme that rock music constitutes redemption for the younger generation. This is expressed by both Patti and Joe — unconvincingly, since the music they play lacks the buoyant vitality of rock at its best.

"Light of Day" flounders because of Schrader's simplistic symbolism: the rebellious children, the unhearing mother, the lifeless father. The story limps from one predictable scene to the next. Even revelation of the father of Patti's child comes as no surprise.

Joan Jett, lead singer of the Runaways and more recently the Blackhearts, makes her film debut in the demanding role of Patti. She is more than convincing onstage, but the script requires her to be continually sullen. Michael J. Fox plays straight this time out, and he proves a capable actor, although in a subservient role.

Since the days of the Indians, tobacco has been a major crop for the Pitt County area. However, it was not until 1891 that the Greenville tobacco market opened with the completion of the first of several local tobacco warehouses.

Gena Rowlands exercises her considerable talent to lend dimension to a two-dimensional role. Michael McKean registers strongly as a member of the Barbusters band.

Schrader first wrote the script as "Made in the U.S.A." and sent it to Bruce Springsteen. Nothing happened, except that Springsteen borrowed the title. In return, he contributed a new song, "Just Around the Corner Is the Light of Day," which Miss Jett sings over the end titles.

Produced by Rob Cohen and Keith Barish, the Tri-Star release is rated PG-13, mostly for language. Running time: 107 minutes.

'I'll Take Manhattan' Offers Return To Short Miniseries

By KATHRYN BAKER
AP Television Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — This is great. Those creepy, intellectual "Amerika" people are finally gone, so we can get back to mindless entertainment like this CBS miniseries, "I'll Take Manhattan."

That other miniseries about what if Russians took us over was seven nights long and had a lot of dull, political stuff in it, and we didn't even win in the end.

"I'll Take Manhattan" is only four nights, starting Sunday, and plenty happens. Nobody expects us to think. In fact, it's better if we don't. Else we risk being insulted.

For instance, the title. This has about as much to do with Manhattan as it does Omaha, Neb., except for a few shots of the skyline and a chance to watch a Big Apple big shot like Donald Trump embarrass himself in a cameo appearance.

Judith Krantz wrote the novel. She's the one who wrote "Scruples," "Princess Daisy" and "Mistral's Daughter," also made into miniseries. She claims she doesn't write books to be miniseries, but they might as well send a screen writer to look over her shoulder. Just a suggestion to save time.

Anyway, in the opening installment, Zachary Amberville, played by Barry Bostwick, gets killed off immediately.

His kids rush home from jet-setting when they hear their mother and uncle have called a secret board meeting of the family magazine conglomerate.

Valerie Bertinelli plays the main kid, Maxi. We have to pretend she's been divorced three times and has a teen-age daughter. Luckily, things rip right along, so we don't have to think about this but for a few minutes.

At the board meeting, Uncle Cutter Amberville, played by Perry King, who should get an Emmy in the Best Creep category, announces he is selling some of his dead brother's magazines that aren't making any money. Oh, yeah, he mentions that he and the kids' dim-bulb mother, Lily, played by Francesca Annis, got married yesterday.

This especially steams Maxi who wants to fight Cutter and preserve her daddy's publishing empire.

Then we go a flashback of straight-arrow Zachary returning from World War II, and Cutter with a beautiful babe semiundressed in the back seat of a car.

Zachary gives Cutter a saber he took off a dead enemy. After Zachary leaves, Cutter breaks the sword and throws it in the trash. We get it.

Bostwick is real good as the good brother Zachary. Too bad he died. In the flashback to the 1940s, he gets into the magazine business and falls in love with the woman we're supposed to like, Nina, played by Jane Kazmarek. She wants a career, not marriage. Of course, we know she'll regret this later.

Zachary goes to England and falls for Lily who wants to be a ballerina. But ballet doesn't like her as much as she likes it, so she marries Zachary, they have kids and one goes blind. Cutter makes Lily his sex slave and she gets pregnant by him. End of Part One.

The second night, Cutter moves to San Francisco and takes advantage of a dumpy rich girl. Maxi falls in love with an Italian artist — we know he's Italian because he's named Rocco and says "deez" and "doze," and because he's played by Jack Scalia. She gets pregnant.

Lily has turned into a good fake of Queen Elizabeth. She still has the hots for Cutter, but Zachary finds out about their affair and tells Cutter to buzz off. End of Part Two.

Treatment Still Headache For Migraine Suffers

By DAVID LARSEN
L.A. Times-Washington Post

Aristotle, Thomas Jefferson, Virginia Woolf, Sigmund Freud, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, Lewis Carroll, Frederic Chopin, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Joan Didion — all did or do suffer from them.

For the estimated 20 million Americans who endure migraine headaches — about 70 percent of them women — there is nothing quite so agonizing as the throbbing pains that usually occur on one side of the head and sometimes are accompanied by nausea, diarrhea, dizziness and blurred vision.

What, then, is relatively new with one of mankind's oldest afflictions, one that has for the most part defied a cure?

"For one thing there has been the development of a sustained-release Inderal capsule," said Dr. Seymour Diamond, founder of the Diamond Headache Clinic in Chicago. If taken on a daily basis, Diamond explained in a telephone interview, this time-released and long-acting beta-blocker propranolol (most commonly used to control blood pressure) can be a prophylactic or preventive measure for migraine sufferers.

Non-steroidal anti-inflammatory agents, originally used as painkillers to treat arthritis, have also proved useful in preventing migraine attacks in some patients, Diamond said. But clinical controversy over migraine drug therapy has been around for as long as the torment itself, he added, and arthritis drugs such as Nalfon and Anaprox have not gained unanimous acceptance in the medical community for migraine treatment.

In the last few years, some patients have reported success in preventing migraines by using calcium channel blockers, such as Isoptin and Calan, Diamond said. "These drugs don't affect the bone calcium, but work at the blood vessel level, preventing expanding and contracting."

The drug most commonly prescribed for migraine has been around for decades. Formerly a rye-attacking fungus known as ergot, it is now produced synthetically as ergotamine, mixed with caffeine (which shrinks blood vessels) and marketed under names such as Cafergot and Wigraine. Diamond said that it is available in a nasal-spray form in Europe, where it is meeting with a good deal of success.

Dr. Seymour Solomon, director of the Headache Unit of the Montefiore Medical Center in New York City, said fish oil capsules — generally found in health food stores — have been found by some to prevent migraines. "But this is so new that it hasn't been confirmed to any significant extent," he added.

Last year a University of Cincinnati Medical Center study found that nearly 75 percent of migraine sufferers reported relief after their diet was enriched with fish oil, taken in capsule form equivalent to eating 12 salmon a day.

But since there is no known cure, the goal is prevention. Those familiar with migraine attacks are usually familiar with the "triggers" — especially foods — that often can bring on the dreaded throbbing.

These triggers, physicians say, include aged cheeses, chocolate, alcoholic beverages — especially red wines — yogurt, excessive amounts of citrus, caffeine-containing drinks such as colas and coffee, the flavor-enhancer monosodium glutamate, anchovies, chicken livers, hot dogs, sausages and bacon (because of the nitrite preservative), nuts, lima beans, guacamole, excessive amounts of bananas or figs and products containing yeast.

Solomon, of the Montefiore Medical Center's Headache Unit, said the hospital is also studying whether the artificial sweetener aspartame produces migraines. "Some comments indicate that perhaps migraine sufferers will have to avoid diet drinks," he said.

Dr. Donald Dalessio, chairman of the Department of Medicine at the Scripps Clinic and Research Foundation in San Diego, said that the converging of as many as 10 factors may be responsible for ushering in a killer headache.

The National Headache Foundation in Chicago (until last September the National Migraine Foundation) is a not-for-profit organization established 16 years ago to promote research, answer questions, and educate the public, some of which it accomplishes through a quarterly newsletter.

Each year in the United States, according to the foundation director of administration, Suzanne E. Simons, migraine sufferers miss more than 64 million workdays.

Migraines, according to the foundation, fall into two categories:

—Common migraines, which don't have a dramatic period before the onset, although many people report an uneasy or irritable feeling.

—Classic migraines, which are characterized by a 10- to 30-minute warning period. "The victim may see flashing lights, zigzagging lines or areas of total darkness. There may be tingling of the lips, face or hands, weakness of an arm or leg, loss of appetite, slight speech abnormality, confusion, restlessness, watery eyes, nasal stuffiness and sweating. Soon after this aura, the headache begins."

The typical reaction is to lie down and avoid light. And when the storm has run its course, there often follows exhaustion and depression.

What had happened, according to the doctors interviewed, was a two-stage vascular event: First the vessels carrying blood to the brain constricted, then the ones near the scalp dilated.

The debilitating headaches, said Simons, can be hereditary: "If both parents have them, there is a 75 percent chance their children will have them. When only one parent does, the chance is 50 percent. If even a distant relative has migraines, a 20 percent chance exists that any offspring will be prone."

Diamond, who also is executive director of the foundation, said that among female sufferers, migraine is related to the menstrual cycle in 60 percent to 70 percent of the cases.

Although certain foods get much of the blame for the attacks of what are known as sick headaches in both sexes, the foundation mentions stress and underlying depression as additional triggers, and new ones are being studied.

Dr. Kenneth Peters, medical director of the Northern California Headache Clinic in the San Francisco Bay area, said the first step in treating a patient is to determine trigger factors.

"Sleeping patterns may be one," he said in an interview. "This may sometimes account for what are called weekend headaches. If your habit is to get eight hours of sleep on weekdays, that is what you should get, even when your days off arrive."

Peters said other triggers can be environmental — such as high altitudes, smog, changes in barometric pressure, glare from excessive sunlight, or the pungent smells of perfumes or solvents.

Even the cessation of stress can play a role in triggering migraines, said psychologist Alfred Scopp, co-founder of the Northern California clinic.

"The most common day of the week for migraines is Saturday," he noted. "The arteries which go to the brain dilate when a high level of stress drops to a low level."

The Northern California Headache Clinic, the Elkind Headache Center and many other professionals use biofeedback to treat migraine sufferers. In simplified terms, with biofeedback a patient is trained to modify involuntary body functions with the help of electronic devices.

Among those who have found biofeedback helpful is Los Angeles Lakers center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who suffered his first migraine attack at age 14. "You just can't explain them to someone who doesn't have them," he once said.

In the 1984 championship basketball series against the Boston Celtics, he had six attacks in nine days. So far this season, according to Janice Wise, the team's assistant public relations director, the 39-year-old player apparently hasn't been troubled with migraines.

Much of the credit, according to Abdul-Jabbar, belongs to David Bresler, a Santa Monica acupuncturist formerly associated with the Pain Control Unit at UCLA.

"Not only was Kareem treated with acupuncture, but he quickly learned self-management skills such as biofeedback and guided imagery, which is positive use of your imagination," said Bresler.

"If you think of a lemon, you'll start to salivate. If you are having a headache because your blood vessels are dilating, you can imagine cooling ice helping to constrict them."

Blood Supply May Trigger Migraines

CHICAGO (AP) — Symptoms of some severe migraine headaches are caused by insufficient blood to the brain, not by any disorder of the brain itself, according to new research.

Researchers in Denmark were able to measure the amount of blood flowing simultaneously to 254 areas of the brain during migraine attacks suffered by 11 patients, said Dr. Niels Lassen, one of the three researchers.

The 11 were among 205 patients at the Bispebjerg Hospital in Copenhagen who underwent cerebral angiograms between 1979 and 1983 aimed at discovering why they suffered temporary loss of eyesight or control of portions of their bodies.

But a leading migraine expert said that the study would not end a riddle over whether migraines are a neurological disorder of the brain or a vascular problem originating in blood vessels.

"The more we learn about migraines, the less we seem to know," Dr. Vladimir Hachinski, a professor of clinical neurological sciences at the University of Western Ontario, said in a telephone interview.

Hachinski also is associate editor of the American Medical Association's Archives of Neurology, which published the Danish team's report in its February issue.

Hachinski, who has worked with the Danish research team on previous studies, said Thursday that about 15 percent of the population is troubled by migraines of all types and severity. He said 5 percent suffer from the severe, classic migraine.

Symptoms of the inherited disease can include partial or total, temporary blindness, or temporary numbness and loss of the use of limbs or parts of the body, he said.

Hachinski said in a telephone interview that one problem in the debate has been the difficulty in getting accurate information on how much blood is flowing to various parts of the brain during a severe migraine attack.

Part of the success of the Danish team's research, he said, was due to "good timing — they were able to measure the blood-flow during an actual migraine." He said such a research chance has been rare.

But it helped lead to the most accurate detection yet of blood-volume around the brain during a migraine, Hachinski said.

"The whole field of migraine research is just a jigsaw puzzle, and we have added a little bit (to solving the puzzle) that points to the vascular factor of the disease," said Lassen.

Human Organ Transplantation May Become Victim Of Its Own Success

By DON COLBURN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

Almost unthinkable a generation ago, human organ transplants have become practically routine in many medical centers, epitomizing both modern medicine's technical prowess and the no-easy-answer questions that medical progress raises for society.

In barely 30 years, doctors have learned to transplant an array of vital human organs — kidney, heart, liver, pancreas, lung — into patients who often have no alternative but to die.

But transplantation may also be a victim of its own success. Limited less and less by technical obstacles and more and more by the shortage of organs, the life-saving procedure poses hard questions of fairness and cost.

Who lives? Who dies? Who decides? And, increasingly, who pays?

Experts say transplantation offers a glimpse of the troubling ethical issues that may eventually confront the rest of the health care system in a time of burgeoning technology, growing demand and limited resources.

"Transplants are a sort of early warning system of the problems involved in allocation of scarce resources," said Arthur Caplan, associate director of the Hastings Center, a New York think tank specializing in study of ethical issues in medicine. "It looks like the classic rationing case: Who gets the organs, and what rules do we follow?"

Most decisions about how to spend medical resources, Caplan said, haven't reached the rationing stage yet because "there's still a lot of fat and waste out there. But the rhetoric of rationing is all over the place—we're talking as if we're in a lifeboat."

"In transplants, we are in the lifeboat." On any given day, more than 10,000 Americans are on waiting lists for a new heart, kidney or liver. Many of them will die before a suitably matched donor can be found.

"Rationing" is a frightening word," said Dr. William B. Schwartz, professor of medicine at Tufts University Medical School and author of "The Painful Prescription." "As a physician, I certainly find it frightening, and I would if I were a patient. But transplantation is one of the few areas of health care where true rationing is taking place."

"For the first time in the United States, we have to ask in a big way: How do you ration an expensive medical technology?" said George Annas, professor of health law at Boston University and former chairman of the Massachusetts Task Force on Organ Transplantation.

For the nearly 80,000 Americans with kidney failure, thrice-weekly dialysis treatments that filter wastes from the blood can keep them alive. But patients with heart failure or liver failure have no such alternative.

"You either get a transplant," Annas said, "or you die."

Fifteen years ago, only two U.S. medical centers — Stanford University in California and the Medical College of Virginia in Richmond — performed heart transplants. Today, 90 centers around the country do them, and that number could double in the next five years.

The annual number of heart transplants in the United States has increased 20-fold since 1981. Liver transplants have increased more than 30-fold. On average, U.S. doctors perform 30 transplants a day of hearts, livers and kidneys.

The explosive growth is the result of many factors, including improved anesthesia and surgical techniques, advances in tissue-matching and the accumulation of experience. But perhaps the biggest factor is an anti-rejection drug called cyclosporine. It was approved by the Food and Drug Administration in 1983 after dramatically increasing survival rates during experimental use.

Cyclosporin, which suppresses the immune system, has pushed back the limits of transplantation.

But will there be enough organs to transplant?

Even with increases in the supply of donor organs, growing demand will lead to a shortage of at least some organs.

And even in the unlikely event that the organ shortage were suddenly "solved," experts warn, the natural rationing now imposed by a sheer lack of transplantable organs could turn into economic rationing.

Insurers, including the federal Medicare and Medicaid programs, would suddenly have to ask a question they have largely sidestepped in the past: Should the U.S. pay for an expensive but potentially life-saving treatment for thousands of patients?

Every 1,000 additional transplants a year, at an average cost of $100,000, could add $100 million to the nation's health bill.

Many insurance companies still refuse to pay for adult liver transplants, for example, on the grounds that they are "experimental."

Transplant patients at most medical centers must also pass what has been dubbed "the green screen." "In other words," said Jon Gold of the federal Office of Organ Transplantation, "you either have to have insurance coverage, or pay $50,000 or $100,000 up front. That's a pretty effective screen."

Transplant recipients also must take cyclosporin for the rest of their lives at an annual cost of $5,000.

of organs, most transplant centers have set up waiting lists, specifying "objective medical criteria" that in effect are ways of rationing available organs.

Brain Transplants May Offer Hope For Nerve Injuries

By PAUL RAEBURN
AP Science Editor

CHICAGO (AP) — Researchers have induced severed optic nerves in laboratory rats to regrow and make new connections with the visual areas of the brain, a scientist says.

The nerve cells "have a way of knowing where they're heading and where to stop to make connections," said Dr. Roger Morrell, a neurologist at the Neuroscience Research Foundation in Southfield, Mich.

Morrell, chairman of a session on brain transplants at the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, also said it may become possible in as little as three to five years to improve memory in Alzheimer's disease victims by giving them brain cell transplants.

Experiments in rats have shown that the infusion of new brain cells can restore normal levels of a brain chemical called acetylcholine, the supply of which is drastically reduced in Alzheimer's victims, Morrell said.

"I think the experiment, in many people's minds, is crying to be done," Morrell said in an interview.

He cautioned, however, that such an experimental treatment for Alzheimer's disease, for which there is now no treatment, would face many regulatory and ethical roadblocks.

For one thing, the most promising source of the brain cells to be transplanted would be the brains of human fetuses, which retain the capacity to divide and grow, unlike mature brain cells.

It is not clear, Morrell said, whether society is willing to allow fetal brains to be harvested for such experiments.

It is also possible, he said, that appropriate acetylcholine-producing brain cells could be taken from regions in the spinal cord, or that brain cells could be grown in laboratory cultures for use in transplants.

"There is a body of animal work that has to be undertaken" before a brain transplant could be attempted in an Alzheimer's disease patient, Morrell said.

He believes such experiments will be safe. "The likelihood of doing damage in a carefully controlled experiment with an appropriate Alzheimer's patient is minimal," he said.

The research on the regrowth of optic nerves was done by Albert Aguayo of McGill University in Montreal, Morrell said.

In a paper scheduled for presentation at today's symposium, Aguayo reported that rat optic nerves were stimulated to regrow across gaps of an inch or more when other rat nerve fibers were transplanted across the gaps to act as conduits for the new optic nerve growth.

The experiment, Aguayo said, underscores the ability of adult mammalian nerves, which until recently were thought incapable of further growth, can regenerate and form connections, with other nerve cells.

Morrell noted that researchers at Rockefeller University in New York have used brain transplants to restore normal hormonal activity in brain-damaged rats whose sexual hormones had been disrupted.

"Each question opens up many areas of research — for which there are likely to be answers," he said.

School Superintendent Wants To Guarantee Students

By ANNE McGRATH
Associated Press Writer

CANTON, Conn. (AP) — The school superintendent, tired of complaints about the quality of public education, wants to offer employers something they can understand: an unconditional warranty with every graduate.

"I came up with the idea because I believe in what we're doing. Why don't we stand behind the product?" asked Superintendent C. Frederick Kelley, who proposed the plan to the Board of Education on Thursday night.

The board took no immediate action on the proposal, which met with objections from some parents who said it treats youngsters like used cars.

"I know the junior high students. My daughter's in junior high. They don't like being labeled a product," said Patti Maulucci, who also has a 10-year-old son.

Kelley had proposed that written guarantees be issued to all graduates of Canton High School certifying their mastery of reading, writing and mathematics.

The guarantees also would say graduates have passed fitness tests in running, swimming and throwing; can read music and operate a computer; know the basics of early child care; understand the requirements of responsible U.S. citizenship, and have performed community service.

A promise that a graduate doesn't smoke also could be included if the student desired.

"And if an employer called me up and said, 'Hey, Fred, you said this kid could read and write and I find he can't,' I would say, 'Send him back,'" Kelley said.

The school district would retain the individual in high school or adult education classes without cost to the graduate, whose attendance would be voluntary, the superintendent said.

Similar plans have been used by some colleges and by schools in Boston and Howell, Mich.

Kelley said he came up with his proposal after reading remarks by David T. Kearns, chief executive officer of Stamford-based Xerox Corp. that the public school system was "failing and close to collapsing."

Nick Salvatore, principal of the high school in this community of 7,900 people 20 miles northwest of Hartford, said he was heartened by the warranty idea.

"This blanket condemnation of public education hurts the schools that are doing the job and really doesn't help the ones that aren't," he said. "I think the superintendent has struck a blow for all of us who have been doing the job."

On Thursday night, Kelley asked that the board evaluate the idea and bring it up again in June.

"I think the diploma should stand for itself," argued David Kubas, whose children are in kindergarten and fifth grade. "That is the implied warranty."

"We don't have to go to these grandstanding effects to give this town a reputation."

In October, the Howell, Mich., school board included a similar plan in a seven-point program for excellence, said David Johnson, superintendent of the rural school system of 5,500.

The guarantee that graduates can read, write and do mathematics was intended in part to bolster employer confidence, said Johnson. He said he doesn't expect many graduates will be sent back, and that students generally supported the proposal.

"They appreciated the fact they weren't going to get dumped at graduation," he said.

Federal Buildings' Elevators Are Due For A Face Lift

By JUDITH HAVEMANN
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The No. 1 complaint involving federal buildings is about their elevators.

Many government elevators, especially in the capital city, are so old that some cannot be repaired. One of them, a 50-year-old lift at the north entrance to the Internal Revenue Service building, has been cannibalized to keep its three companions running.

Administrator Terence C. Golden jokingly cites two choices facing the GSA: "Replace these elevators, or put them out of service and make climbing stairs part of our physical fitness program."

Golden proposes spending $45 million over the next two years on elevator replacement and repairs.

"This work needed to be done for health and safety," he said. "Elevators are symbolic. People coming to Washington wonder why they don't work. It translates into a concept of government: slow and outdated in its business methods."

Golden said that elevators in several buildings — including the headquarters of the Justice, Commerce and Interior departments, the Interstate Commerce Commission and the U.S. Customs Service — have not been replaced since they were installed in the 1930s. The Ariel Rios Building, sometimes called the New Post Office Building, at 1200 Pennsylvania Ave. NW in the Federal Triangle, also has its original Depression-era elevators.

The government still employs between 12 and 16 persons to manually operate elevators in the Commerce, State and IRS buildings. All of these vintage elevators are to be converted to automatic service under the GSA program and their operators transferred to other federal jobs.

"The old systems are not functioning well and do not have the latest technology," Golden said. "Some of them have electromechanical circuitry with a lot of relays that in humid weather tend to stick. Parts are hard to replace and hard to maintain. Service is forever breaking down, elevators are out of service for a good bit and many of them are slow."

"This is not another Band-Aid. We really think we have fixed the elevator problem" with the $45 million program, he said.

Golden said that three persons were reported injured on federal elevators last year and four in 1985, although the injuries were relatively minor. The GSA inspects federal elevators every six months and each given a safety test every five years.

During the test, an elevator is raised to the top of the building, loaded with 2,000- to 4,000-pound weights (depending on its capacity) and started down, its cables held aside.

The claw-like brakes, which grab the rails along which the elevator slides, must stop the fall within about 24 inches. No elevator has failed a safety test, officials said, but occasionally brakes have needed adjustment so each engages at precisely the same time on both tracks.

There is no rigid schedule for replacing elevators, because "a building is a living thing with character," according to Reed C. Eagle, an engineering technician and the GSA's elevator expert.

"If you have a new occupant with five times as many people, you need to modify service. Things you can't adjust you may have to replace, sometimes because of age, sometimes because the components can't be replaced," he said.

In historic buildings, such as the Commerce Department, walnut elevator cabs have been removed and repaired while a new mechanical system is installed, Eagle said, running his hand over a nearly invisible patch in the wood.

One of the biggest changes involving the federal elevator system had nothing to do with the GSA, but occurred after the Metro subway system opened.

Church Of England May Admit Women Priests

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — Opponents threatened to break away from the Church of England after its General Synod voted to move toward admitting women to the priesthood, but a group pressing for the change said it was delighted by the vote.
The assembly of bishops, clergy and laity voted 317-145 Thursday in favor of a report that sets out the steps needed to phase women into the priesthood. There were two abstentions.

Approval of the report clears the way for the synod's standing committee to draft legislation for Parliament to consider. Because the Church of England is a state church, Parliament must approve any major changes in church law.
The Most Rev. Robert Runcie, Archbishop of Canterbury and the church's spiritual head, said required legal processes made it unlikely there would be a woman priest in the church before July 1992.
Addressing the synod before the vote, Runcie urged the members to "take this courageous step" toward women's ordination.

The 4,000-member Movement for the Ordination of Women said afterward it was "absolutely delighted" by the decision.
But Peter Bruinvels, a legislator and synod member, called it a disaster and said he would form a breakaway Church of England if women became priests.
Margaret Hewitt, moderator of the Women Against the Ordination of Women, said: "The character of the legislation is going to produce some very serious difficulties."

Bishop of London Graham Leonard, who opposes ordaining women, said he would not lead a breakaway but was ready to approach the Roman Catholic and Orthodox churches for some kind of association for Anglican dissidents.
All 44 bishops in the synod signed the approved report, although eight had voted against it. Signing was not an endorsement of ordination of women, as the report merely set forth the measures necessary for women to be ordained.

Among other things, it suggested that women priests be phased in over several years so opponents can get used to the idea.
The report concluded the church would survive women's ordination. It said preserving unity was paramount, but there should be safeguards for bishops, clergy or parishes that refuse to accept women priests, and financial compensation to those who feel they must leave the church.
The Church of England is the mother church of 70 million Anglicans in 27 provinces worldwide. Nine foreign provinces have ordained about 750 women priests, most of them U.S. Episcopalians, but the mother church has moved much more slowly on the matter.

The growing influence of women in the church will be underlined today when Runcie ordains 15 women deacons in Canterbury Cathedral, and on March 22 when Leonard ordains 70 more in St. Paul's Cathedral.
The church has 750 women deaconesses who act as assistants to priests.

Earthquake Hits Aleutian Islands

HONOLULU (AP) — A severe earthquake struck near the Aleutian Islands of Alaska, but was not strong to generate a Pacific-wide tidal wave, the Pacific Tsunami Warning Center reported.
The quake, measuring 6.6 on the Richter scale, hit late Thursday night near 53.6 north latitude and 167.3 west longitude, the center said.
The Richter scale is a measure of ground motion as recorded on seismographs. Every increase of one number means a tenfold increase in magnitude. Thus a reading of 7.5 reflects an earthquake 10 times stronger than one of 6.5.
An earthquake of 3.5 on the Richter scale can cause slight damage in the local area, 4 moderate damage, 5 considerable damage, 6 severe damage. A 7 reading is a "major" earthquake, capable of widespread heavy damage; 8 is a "great" quake, capable of tremendous damage.
The San Francisco earthquake of 1906, which occurred before the Richter scale was devised, has been estimated at 8.3.

Iran Says Basra Offensive Over

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iran announced the end of its 7-week-old offensive against the key Iraqi city of Basra after claiming its forces killed or wounded 2,000 Iraqis in a final battle in marshlands east of the city.
Iran claimed in the surprise announcement carried Thursday by its official Islamic Republic News Agency that it had completed fortifying a bridgehead inside Iraqi territory only 5½ miles east of Basra.

The news agency, monitored in Nicosia, had claimed earlier Thursday that Iranian Revolutionary Guards beat back two Iraqi attacks aimed at dislodging them from the bridgehead.
Iraq's official news agency, also monitored in Nicosia, quoted

Baghdad communique as saying the Iranians attacked first but were beaten back with "heavy losses."
It also said Iraq's 2nd Army Corps killed or wounded 300 Iraqis in fighting further north.
Neither claim could be independently confirmed. The two countries rarely have allowed reporters near the 730-mile-long war front since fighting began in September 1980.

Iran launched its offensive on Basra, Iraq's second largest city and only outlet to the Persian Gulf, on Jan. 9. IRNA said Thursday in announcing the offensive's end that the goal had not been to capture Basra but to destroy as much of Iraq's military machine as possible.

Craxi To Resign As Power Shifts

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
ROME — Socialist Prime Minister Bettino Craxi, Italy's longest-serving postwar leader, will resign next week and pave the way for an orderly turnover to a Christian Democrat under a long-planned agreement to share power, Socialist Party sources said Thursday.
The sources said Craxi will summarize his more than three years in office in a speech to the Italian Senate on Tuesday, then present his formal resignation to President Francesco Cossiga immediately afterward.
The prime minister's days in office have been numbered since July, when a government crisis forced him into an agreement with his Christian Democratic coalition partners to step down in March. Under the agreement, a Christian Democrat would take over leadership of the five-party coalition until regularly scheduled parliamentary elections in 1988.
Last week, however, Craxi balked at the imminent power transfer and said that he considered the July agreement "liquidated" and that early elections might be necessary.

But Socialist Party sources said that he had reluctantly decided to go ahead with the plan to surrender the prime ministership without breaking up the coalition that has ruled since he became prime minister in August 1983. They said he will announce his intentions Friday at a meeting of leaders of the coalition parties.
These, in addition to the Socialists and Christian Democrats, are the Liberal, Republican and Social Democratic parties.
The Christian Democrats are the dominant coalition partner, with about 60 percent of the government's seats in Parliament and 32 percent of the voters nationwide, slightly more than the Communists.
Although the party has not yet named a candidate for prime minister, speculation has centered on Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti, 68, who was prime minister on four occasions in the 1970s, and Ciriaco de Mita, 59, secretary of the Christian Democratic Party and a relative newcomer to Italian politics.

France To Buy AWACS

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service
PARIS — Following British precedent, France announced an $800 million purchase of three U.S. E-3A AWACS reconnaissance planes Thursday, along with an option to buy two more later this year.
Defense Minister Andre Giraud said the acquisition will give the French air force capability to mount independent early-warning and command-and-control operations outside the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's AWACS network, based mainly in West Germany. At the same time, he said the aircraft can be used in conjunction with U.S. and NATO reconnaissance operations for Europe and with six other AWACS, whose purchase was announced last December by Britain.
The question of autonomous military capabilities has been particularly important here. France, while remaining a member of the North Atlantic Alliance, withdrew from NATO in 1966. The French military has maintained a high level of cooperation with NATO planning and operations but, Giraud pointed out, has recently relied on inadequate ground-based radar systems for air defense rather than NATO surveillance.
In a clear reference to French military commitments in Africa, notably Chad, Giraud also said the French AWACS could be deployed outside Europe in "foreign theaters of operations." In the past, U.S. AWACS, or airborne warning and control systems, have been brought in to inform French intervention forces in Chad on Libyan troop movements or aircraft deployments.

The French decision to buy AWACS has been widely expected since Britain announced that — despite concern for the national aircraft industry — it plans to buy the Boeing planes rather than a competing British aircraft, the Nimrod. Britain and France had been studying possible joint Nimrod purchases to promote European cooperation and self-reliance in defense.
"We came to the same conclusion they did," Giraud said, "and that is that the Nimrod does not respond to the question."
In an apparent effort to balance the picture of European cooperation, Giraud went out of his way to underline French and British cooperation in negotiations for the E-3A — a military version of the Boeing 707 airliner — and said British and French crews will train together with the U.S. instructors.
"Franco-British cooperation has come out of this considerably stronger," a ministry statement added, "and it is possible to imagine that fruitful exchanges will take place between the two users when it comes time to maintain and improve the systems."
