Conley Residents Seek 'Grandfather' Clause

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

At a heated public hearing Monday, the Pitt County Board of Education was bombarded with requests to establish a grandfather clause so that entire families may continue attending school in the district they currently attend.

The board held the hearing to receive comment on short- and long-term proposals for redrawing the school attendance lines.

A capacity crowd of 500 people attended the hearing in the Wahl-Coates School Auditorium. Many of the 34 speakers raised their voices while addressing the board members and were backed by standing ovations and energetic applause from the audience.

Greenville residents, concerned with racial balance and with the alleviation of the inner-city nature of the city schools, spoke against a grandfather clause which would undermine the racial balance corrected by the new proposals.

The majority of the speakers, representing the D.H. Conley attendance area, asked the board to honor its "promise" of a grandfather clause for entire families.

The speakers were referring to a 1984 position statement on conditions of the merger of the Pitt County and Greenville school systems presented to the Pitt County Commissioners. That consolidation statement included a grandfather provision for households so that students attending school in the Winterville and Belvoir areas would be able to continue attending those schools after the merger.

The largest number of students who would be affected by the new attendance proposals currently attend the Winterville schools.

Twelve-year-old Tracy Davis, a student at A.G. Cox Grammar School in Winterville, told the board that she and her 9-year-old brother will be moved to the Greenville schools under the new proposals. "For the most part, the students in Greenville won't be leaving their friends," she said. She mentioned the community and extra-curricular activities she would leave behind.

"We students are really worried about what lies ahead for us ... Do you realize that your decision will come right before we take the California Achievement Test," she said.

Gene Hemby of Winterville said the board made a promise to grandfather the students in 1984. "Do we have a double standard to teach our children one thing and practice another?" he asked the board.

"When you arbitrarily draw school lines and shuffle them around, you treat them as numbers, not children," Hemby stated.

Richard Tucker said that when he and his wife built their home in Westhaven they consulted Superintendent Eddie West about the school district their children would attend. He said that West told him that a grandfather clause would allow his entire family to attend the Winterville schools if changes were made in the school attendance lines. "We wanted to make a freedom of choice to build a home where our kids could continue in school" in Winterville, Tucker said.

Jimmy Nunn, a resident of Westhaven subdivision, said his daughter will attend four different schools in four years under the new proposals. "This obviously would create a crisis for my child," he said.

Barry Hainer, speaking on behalf of Bedford and Grayleigh subdivisions, asked the board to "use the new school to alleviate overcrowding

County Delays Room Tax Bill

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Pitt County Board of Commissioners Monday postponed approval of a local bill that would enable the board to create a 3 percent motel room occupancy tax after a representative of the Pitt-Greenville Chamber of Commerce and Greenville Mayor Les Garner voiced objections to the proposed legislation.

The proposed bill, to be presented to the county's legislative delegation for passage by the General Assembly, would allow the commissioners, by resolution, to institute a "room occupancy and tourism development tax."

It would also allow the board — again by resolution — to create a "tourism development authority" to administer the program and designate how proceeds from the tax would be spent.

At a meeting between commissioners and members of the Greenville City Council on Feb. 9, both boards indicated support for a room tax.

Then on Feb. 16, the chamber presented a resolution to the board asking commissioners to seek local legislation to levy a room occupancy tax.

That resolution also asked that commissioners, "in cooperation with the city of Greenville, create an authority for a Convention and Visitors Bureau," to administer the program.

The 12-member authority, as proposed by the chamber resolution, would include: one member from the Board of Commissioners, one from the City Council and one from the chamber; six member motel-hotel operators (three selected by the Board of Commissioners from a list of at least 10 nominees furnished by the chamber and three selected by the City Council from the same list) and three individuals involved in the travel and convention industry (one appointed each by the county board, the City Council and the chamber).

Council Wants Joint Bill

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council has asked members of the city staff to meet with Pitt County officials to iron out differences in a proposed occupancy tax bill designed to promote the area's convention and travel industry.

"The council asked that the city manager, city attorney, county manager and county attorney work together to get a draft bill that would be based on the original proposal discussed by the city and county at our last joint meeting," City Manager Gail Meeks said.

The council, which approved the concept of a 3 percent occupancy tax during a Feb. 18 meeting, requested the collaboration at a workshop Monday night.

Pitt County Commissioners tabled a draft bill on the tax at a Monday morning meeting after hearing objections from Greenville Mayor Les Garner and the Pitt-Greenville

Court Issues Pro-AIDS Ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a ruling likely to help AIDS victims fight employment discrimination, said today a federal law aiding the handicapped protects people with contagious diseases against on-the-job bias.

By a 7-2 vote, the court ruled that all recipients of federal aid, including government contractors and virtually all public schools, may not discriminate against people with contagious diseases if those people are "otherwise qualified" to work or take part in some activity.

The decision, however, did not directly involve acquired immune deficiency syndrome, a viral disease that can kill its victims by destroying their immune system and leaving them vulnerable to other diseases.

The ruling revived a lawsuit by former third-grade teacher Gene H. Arline, fired by the Nassau County, Fla., School Board because she was diagnosed as having tuberculosis, an infectious respiratory disease.

The court, led by Justice William J. Brennan, rejected Reagan administration arguments that employers do not violate a 1973 law barring bias against the handicapped if they fire employees based solely on a fear that they may spread a disease.

"It would be unfair to allow an employer to seize upon the distinction between the effects of a disease on others and the effects of a disease on a patient and use that distinction to justify discriminatory treatment," Brennan wrote.

He said allowing discrimination based on a disease's contagious effects "would be inconsistent with the basic purpose" of the 1973 law,

Parks Staff Expansion Proposed

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

A request for five additional parks department employees to help maintain facilities in a safe and proper manner has been included in Greenville's 1987-88 budget.

"The parks division is at a very critical stage this year," Boyd Lee, director of Recreation and Parks, told City Council members at a workshop meeting Monday night.

"We have grown in the number of facilities over the past few years, but not in the number of staff to maintain them," he said. "Year after year because of tight budgets, we have not added staff. The last new position was in 1978."

The proposed employees include one equipment operator I, two laborers, a parks maintenance technician and a custodian.

The parks department will be unable to provide proper service without the additional manpower, according to Lee, who presented budget proposals for four parks and recreation divisions at the meeting.

"We have moved several positions from the recreation division to the parks division to help with our manpower crisis, but now we have to consider adding additional personnel," he said.

"Because of the growth of Greenville, our entire staff, both recreation and parks divisions, have responsibilities and work loads far beyond their normal 40-hour work week."

Lee included the five additional employees in his $744,979 request for the parks department.

The parks budget request marks a $210,593 increase over $543,386 estimated for 1986-87.

Veteran Performers Die

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Randolph Scott, the rail-thin, ramrod-straight "Southern gentleman" who played laconic heroes in 96 Westerns, war films and comedies during a 33-year career, has died at age 89.

Scott died in his sleep Monday, said son-in-law Sam Tyler. He had suffered a weak heart in recent years, and had several bouts with pneumonia.

Scott, who got his foot in the door in Hollywood when he met producer Howard Hughes on a golf course in 1929, retired in 1962 after making "Ride the High Country" with Joel McCrea.

He said he didn't miss the movies, hated publicity and was offended by screen sex.

Warren Sponsors Appropriations Bill

Rep. Ed Warren, D-Pitt, has co-sponsored a bill in the 1987 General Assembly to appropriate funds for domestic violence centers throughout the state.

The proposed legislation would appropriate $564,366 from the General Fund to the Department of Administration, Council on Status for Women for the 1987-88 fiscal year and $564,317 in 1988-89.

The bill, which was co-sponsored by Warren, chairman of the House Appropriations Expansion Budget Committee, Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, and Rep. Wendell Holmes Murphy, was filed last week.

The Council on the Status of Women may use up to $50,000 of the money appropriated to the centers for administrative purposes and $10,000 shall be used each year for a grant-in-aid to the N.C. Coalition Against Domestic Violence, according to the bill. The remaining funds would be used for grants for local domestic centers.

"Each of the 56 domestic violent centers in operation on Aug. 1, 1986 that offered services including hotline, transportation services, community education programs, daytime services and call forwarding during the night shall receive a grant each year of the biennium to be used for operation of their center," the bill said.

In counties in which only one center is eligible to receive a grant, the eligible center shall receive an annual grant of $20,000, according to the proposed legislation.

In counties in which more than one center is eligible to receive a grant, each eligible center will receive an annual grant of a pro rata share of $20,000, the bill said.

Ex-Green Beret Says Military Retaliated

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — A former Green Beret who said he briefed Lt. Col. Oliver North in El Salvador on gun-running operations to Nicaraguan rebels says the Army has canceled a $16,000 contract with his company because he disclosed key names in the Contra supply operation.

Iain Crawford, 30, of Fayetteville also told The Fayetteville Observer he has been contacted by Senate investigator who wants to talk to him about the gun-running operation.

Crawford said in a Feb. 4 television interview that he had briefed North and retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord about the secret network that ferried arms to the rebels fighting the Sandanista regime.

Two days later he won a Fort Bragg contract to produce assault webbing equipment for special operations units, but was asked to "terminate for the convenience" of the government two weeks later.

"It's a rather small contract for the military," Crawford said, but added that the termination forced him to lay off two workers in his Fayetteville shop.

"They're penalizing me for exercising my freedom of speech, and it's awfully hard to prove," Crawford said. "All I have are the termination papers."

Crawford said his lawyer suggested the Army may still have to pay for the contract, but Crawford says he would rather have the job, not a bribe.

"This is a corporation, not an individual. I don't ever want this to happen again," he said.

Crawford said he did not know which Senate committee the investigator represents. He said he was contacted last week and told a member of the investigation team wanted to speak to him.

He said he did not know what investigators specifically wanted to know from him, but guessed it would include his employment in Central America from Jan. 1, 1986, through October.

During that time Crawford, who was in Special Forces for 11 years, participated in a gun-running operation that was exposed on Oct. 5 when a C-123 cargo plane was shot down in Nicaragua and the lone survivor of the crash, Eugene Hasenfus, was arrested.

Hasenfus was a parachute rigger who had replaced Crawford in late May.

According to Crawford, North, Secord and a third man came to Il-opango airstrip in El Salvador in a private jet in April. Crawford said he was asked by Dick Gadd, who was heading the operation, to brief the three about the operation.

Crawford at the time did not know who the men were but recognized them when they appeared on television as the Iran-Contra scandal became public.

According to published reports, Crawford told North that seven tons of ammunition, rifles and grenades were dropped to Contra units from a Southern Air Transport plane. He said North's response was "Thank God, we got away with it."

Eight Thefts Reported

Investigators said eight thefts were reported to Greenville police Monday.

Officer D.R. Wyrick said $25 was taken from a cafeteria cash register and several classrooms were vandalized at Third Street School in a break-in reported at 6:55 a.m., while $125 in cash was taken from a desk in an office at the Lee Building, 111 E. Third St., in an incident reported at 11:20 a.m.

Officer W.E. Davis said a propeller valued at $110 was taken from a boat motor at 1215 E. Wright Road in an incident reported at 7:23 a.m.

Officer E.E. Laughinghouse said two telephones were taken from 513 W. 10th St. in a break-in reported at 2:14 p.m., while Officer J.E. Woolard said a "Union Jack" flag was taken from the Town Common — witnesses said by three young women — in an incident reported at 4:40 p.m.

Officer W.S. Heath said $120 worth of bed and bathroom linen, a telephone, a wall mirror valued at $125 and a television set valued at $600 were taken from a guest room at the Sheraton hotel on Greenville Boulevard in a break-in reported at 4:51 p.m., while Sgt. T.V. Woolard said a wallet was taken from Annabelle's Restaurant at The Plaza in an incident reported at 5:40 p.m.

According to Officer A.P. White, a television set and a telephone answering machine were taken from 1401 W. Third St. in a break-in reported at 9:25 p.m.

Action On Room Tax Postponed

In addition, the chamber resolution suggested that the tax be used "for the sole purpose of the promotion and marketing of the convention and travel industry" in the county.

On Feb. 18, the City Council unanimously approved the room occupancy tax concept. But the council suggested that the 12-member authority include: one voting member of the council, the Board of Commissioners and the chamber board; six representatives from the hotel or motel industry (two each appointed by the council, the county board and the chamber) and three outside delegates (with the council, the commissioners and the chamber appointing one each).

In an effort to speed up passage of the enabling legislation, and with the idea that the composition of the governing board could be worked out at a later date, commissioners Friday instructed County Attorney W.H. Watson to prepare a bill that, rather than establishing a date for the tax to become effective and setting up a commission to allocate revenues, would give the board the authority to institute the tax and to establish a governing board by resolution.

But Bill Clark, speaking for the chamber Monday, told commissioners, "We've got some basic concerns" with the board's proposed legislation.

Clark suggested that the bill should limit the use of the tax to "promotion of this industry," rather than allowing any portion of the money to be used for convention or other facilities that would attract people to the county.

He also suggested the bill should include details on "the makeup of the board."

"We feel like the makeup of this authority should be spelled out in this bill," Clark emphasized. "The bill should be very explicit about the makeup."

Garner suggested to commissioners that "the City Council should be involved" in the design of the legislation and that any bill "should come before us before being taken to the Legislature in Raleigh."

"I'd appreciate it very much if the City Council is involved (and the board) postpone action on this."

"We want the city to be involved," Commissioner Charles Gaskins said, while Commissioner Gene James said he was under the impression that the proposal to institute the tax was "a joint venture."

Commissioner Tom Johnson then suggested that the city and county managers and attorneys "get together to prepare a proposed law," and that the Board of Commissioners and City Council each "approve the bill" before it is sent to the General Assembly.

Commissioners gave tentative approval for the expenditure of an estimated $11,000 for renovations to the Health Department Building after health director, Dr. Tim Monroe, told commissioners that the project would make the building more efficient.

Monroe proposed that an area in the building's lobby be enclosed for use as a business office and said that by installing sinks and examination tables in several interview rooms, the rooms could be used as either interview rooms or examination rooms.

He said the money for the project would come from funds now being held by the state.

The board also approved continuing a 4-H assistant's position full-time until June 30, after Agricultural Extension Service Chairman Leroy James said state money — $4,066 — has been found to pay 63 percent of the cost for one person to work half-time in the position for the remainder of the fiscal year.

James said the county's share of the cost for the half-time position would be $2,388, while to continue the position full-time until June 30 would take $5,879.

James reported that total income from agriculture in the county during 1985 totaled $104 million, compared to $102 million in 1985. He said tobacco accounted for $38 million of the 1986 total.

Tax Supervisor Jimmy Hardee told commissioners that his office is making "good progress" on the property revaluation program and said "all 229 of the 400-scale maps" scheduled to be received under the county land mapping program have been completed.

Hardee said the 100- and 200-scale maps of subdivisions and municipalities in the county should be completed on schedule. He said the contractor is "waiting for the weather to break" so aerial photographs from which the maps are made can be taken.

Director of Social Services Ed Garrison reported that the surplus food distribution program would continue through September, with the next distribution of food in Pitt County scheduled for Wednesday and Thursday.

The board took no action on a request by the towns of Winterville, Ayden and Grifton for support for local legislation which would extend the extraterritorial jurisdiction of the three municipalities to the boundaries covered by the Contentnea Metropolitan Sewage District 201 Facilities Plan limits.

County Engineer Phil Dickerson told the board that the proposed extraterritorial area includes about 20,000 acres and extends as much as two miles on either side on N.C. 11.

Suggesting that the request "is premature," Gaskins said the proposal "needs more study."

The board also elected not to participate in a proposed solid waste disposal study, being considered by the Mid-East Commission and Neuse River Council of Governments, after Dickerson suggested the county would receive little benefit from the $20,000 it would cost Pitt County.

Economic Index Falls In January

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government's main gauge of future economic activity plunged 1 percent in January, the biggest decline in 30 months, the Commerce Department reported today.

The setback in the department's Index of Leading Indicators ended four consecutive months of increases, including a giant advance of 2.3 percent in December.

The large decline had been expected by economists, who said it confirmed other barometers showing that business activity slowed considerably in January after a sudden spurt at the end of last year.

In December, sales to businesses and consumers rose sharply as both groups rushed to make purchases before the new tax law took effect on Jan. 1.

However, many of those sales simply borrowed from purchases that would have been made in 1987, making the start of this year look even weaker.

The Reagan administration had hailed the big December rise in the index as evidence that the long-awaited rebound in economic recovery was underway. But many analysts said the January drop confirmed their belief that the economy is still mired in a period of sluggish growth.

The 1 percent January decline was led by a huge drop in orders for factory equipment and a fall in building permits. The decline in building permits was essentially a correction from a huge increase in December caused by a rush to take out applications in California before higher fees took effect.

In all, six of the 10 indicators contributed to the decline in the index. In addition to factory orders and building permits, the other negative contributors were a drop in orders for consumer goods, changes in raw materials prices, vendor performance and unemployment claims.

The biggest positive factor on the index came from a steep increase in stock market prices, followed by changes in business formations, a decline in the average work week and a drop in the money supply.

The various changes left the index at 183.8 percent of its 1967 base of 100. Many analysts said they believed the index is correctly forecasting continued sluggish growth in the months ahead.

The U.S. economy, as measured by the gross national product, grew just 2.5 percent last year, the weakest performance since an outright decline during the recession year of 1982.

The Reagan administration is predicting growth will pick up substantially this year. It pins these hopes on a belief that the trade deficit, which hit a record $170 billion in 1986, will shrink by between $30 billion and $40 billion this year.

Many private economists call that estimate far too optimistic, predicting a much smaller narrowing of the difference between what America imports and what it exports.

Economists believe a modest $5 billion to $10 billion improvement in trade is likely to be overwhelmed by a much sharper reduction in consumer spending, the driving force behind the recovery from the 1981-82 recession.

ding to City Manager Gail Meeks, who said she will provide recommendations after studying all the city's needs.

"These are uncut budget requests," Ms. Meeks said. "At the end of April, the City Council will receive a balanced budget with budget cuts."

A request of $662,556 from the recreation department includes $506,122 in personal services, $145,119 in operating expenses and $11,315 in capital outlay. The proposed budget in the recreation department marks a $54,507 increase over the 1986-87 budget.

"Operating expenses are generally in line with last year with most increases coming only because of increased purchase prices," Lee said. "Only the most urgent capital outlay and capital improvement projects have been proposed in this budget."

A $186,171 request for the Greenville Aquatics and Fitness Center includes $93,871 in salaries, $84,620 in operating expenses and $7,680 in equipment.

The budget was established to account for expenses associated with the operation of the fitness center. Funds are generated through paid memberships to offset these expenses, according to city officials. No city funds are involved in operating the center.

"The aquatics and fitness center budget is based on the assumption that we will maintain 1,000 memberships," Lee said. "If this number varies either way, we will adjust the budget accordingly."

A $20,397 budget request to operate the Elks Lodge as a teen center includes $12,793 in salaries for a part-time center supervisor, a part-time maintenance person and an off-duty police officer, $5,804 in operating expenses and $1,800 in capital outlay.

The Recreation and Parks Department teen center is expected to open in March or April, according to Lee, who said the major cost associated with operating the center is utilities.

Pitt-Greenville Airport Authority's request for $196,190 includes $71,190 in operating expenses and $125,000 in capital outlay for land acquisition, a runway sweeper and expansion of the terminal building.

The Pitt-Greenville Airport is an agency of the city of Greenville and county of Pitt. Airport operations are subsidized equally by the city and county. The city and county usually discuss and agree upon the annual appropriation to the airport for operating and capital prior to including such funds in the budget, according to Airport Manager James G. Turcotte.

Council Wants Joint Tax Bill

Chamber of Commerce regarding the composition of an authority charged with the responsibility of using the additional local tax revenue.

The county proposal omitted details of how members of the authority would be appointed.

According to council recommendations made at the Feb. 18 meeting, the authority would be comprised of 12 members to be appointed by the chamber of commerce, the City Council and Pitt County Commissioners.

Each body would appoint one voting member, two representatives from the hotel or motel industry or other taxable accommodations, and an outside delegate to the authority, according to the council proposal.

A mutual bill would be in the best interest of both parties, according to City Attorney Mac McCarley, who said the finished draft would go before the N.C. General Assembly.

"If there is disagreement between two local elected government bodies, then your representatives in the General Assembly are not going to be interested in picking sides in that fight," McCarley told council members.

In other business, council members agreed to study the feasibility of a joint data processing system between the city and Greenville Utilities.

"Council member Ed Carter, the council's liaison to the Utilities Commission, will inform them that the City Council is interested in discussing data processing further with the utilities," Ms. Meeks said.

Council member Lorraine Shinn said the board is looking out for tax dollars.

"We need to do what's best for the citizens of this community — not the city and not the utilities," she said. "We need to do something that is cost effective so that people won't feel their utilities rates and taxes go up."

The city staff is in the late stages of evaluating bids for its data processing system, while the GUC has agreed to continue a contract with Arthur Young through the design bidding and evaluation phases, at a cost not to exceed $32,000.

Members of the city staff feel a joint system would have economic benefits, but members of the GUC have said drawbacks of a joint system outweigh any possible benefits.

The council also directed Ms. Meeks, Ms. Shinn, and Greenville Recreation and Parks Department to meet with members of the Epes Alumni to discuss repairs and improvements to the C.M. Epes Center.

Public Hearing

in Robinson and Cox as originally intended and make no other changes this year."

He suggested that a decision on redrawing the attendance lines "wait until the new board is elected in the fall" to allow appropriate representation from the school attendance areas.

He added that a grandfather clause is psychologically and economically attractive and would decrease movement of students to private schools.

Hainer said that an early deadline for school registration would alleviate confusion about student populations. "We would rather pay for managing the confusion in the school administration than in our homes," he said.

Brenda Allen, who lives on U.S. 264, said the residents of her area "strongly identify with the Winterville area" and have been a part of that community "for several generations." She urged the board to support a grandfather clause so that the eight children in her area affected by the redistricting would be able to choose whether to attend schools in Winterville or Farmville.

Heidi Lane, a teacher at Conley, said that students work hard to excel in extra-curricular activities in high school. If the students are transferred to another high school, school spirit, tradition and school pride is at risk, she said.

Speaker Dorothy Hudson said, "Everybody seems to be unhappy. Perhaps we should just scrap the whole thing."

She commented on the 700 students who would be moved from the D.H. Conley attendance area to other schools.

"We aren't asking you to make any changes" in the proposals, she said, "we're asking you to keep your promise."

Dale Manning, a representative for Stick Valley, said that 18 students in his area would be moved from the Conley attendance area to the Ayden attendance area.

He mentioned the parents' fundraising efforts for the Conley attendance area. He said moving the students would be like telling the parents, "We appreciate you raising the funds for this activity bus. Now you've got to go to Ayden and help them get theirs."

Wayne Adams of Tucker Estates, whose children attend the Winterville Schools, asked that the redistricting be delayed. "The redistricting plan has radically changed six times since Dec. 5," he said.

He added that "the new school will not be used for its intended purpose ... $1.02 million of taxpayers' money will be wasted by not using the new school to its potential."

"The newest proposal tears down a very good school district that has taken many, many years to build," Adams said. "If it were right in the first place, you wouldn't have this crowd here tonight."

Greenville residents told the board that a grandfather clause would undermine the proposals attempts at racial balance in the schools.

"Grandfathering does not serve the best interests of the school system," said speaker John Chaffee.

He said that the changes in the attendance lines is "more traumatic to parents who resist change ... It is not as if the child is being uprooted from his community and friends ... just moved to another school."

Judy Orbach, speaking for the Brookgreen and Dellbrook subdivisions, said, "A grandfather clause would only be appropriate for children enrolled in high school" because "racial balance would be negatively influenced."

James Ebron, a member of the Greenville K-6 advisory council, asked the board to reconsider the reassignment of the 143 students in Greenfield Terrace from the Greenville schools to the North Pitt attendance area.

He said that the transfer of the students "actually makes the racial ratio more imbalanced" and except for those children attending Wellcome Middle School, the students would have farther to travel to attend school.

Speakers from the Ayden-Grifton attendance area continued to object to the small size of the student population and to the transfer fourth-grade students to Ayden Middle School.

A regular monthly meeting of the board tentatively has been scheduled for Monday at 7 p.m. in the board room in the county offices. The agenda includes a decision on the redrawing of attendance lines.

Two More Effective

Where computers, the city and Greenville Utilities are concerned, two may be better than one.

A proposal for city personnel and GUC to share one computer and save money appears, on the surface, to be feasible. Why pay for two expensive data processors and the personnel to run them when one could do the job?

An analysis of the organizations' tasks, however, makes the proposal less credible. That's the verdict of a national computer consultant that studied the options, and the two boards charged with making a decision should heed that advice.

The consultants told members of GUC and the City Council that it might take less money to set up a joint data processing center, but that's where the savings would end. One computer would likely require less initial capital expense but could create headaches negating any possible benefits.

Even a neophyte in computer science can see the arguments against a shared system are sound.

For example, sharing software for a computer would be difficult because of the varied duties the two organizations need to perform. GUC needs the computer to do billing. The city needs an information center to store and utilize data on accounting, finances, car costs and other day-to-day municipal chores. It doesn't take a whiz to recognize that these applications conflict, and might not coexist.

Governing shared personnel would be another drawback. Do these employees work for GUC or for the city? When conflicts arise, which organization will resolve them? Will the City Council or GUC set policy for the data processing center? A separate board would be the only fair way to deal with problems, and that measure would not be cost or time effective.

Greenville Utilities has a $32,000 contract with a consultant for design, bidding and evaluation on a data processing system. The city is in the final stages of reviewing bids for its own computer. Both are too far along to reverse direction and begin work on a joint project that appears to be neither cost efficient nor feasible.

GUC and the City Council should proceed independently and purchase two computers — systems they know will fill their organizations' data processing needs.

The State Won

There was a spirited battle between Raleigh-Durham Airport and Charlotte-Douglas International Airport for direct flights to London. Charlotte was victorious, but in the end, the entire state won.

Piedmont, with its already established hub at Charlotte, wanted the new service and American Airlines, currently building its hub at Raleigh-Durham was also strongly in contention. It seemed likely that one of the North Carolina airports would get the service, but which one?

Civic leaders and the airlines launched strong public relations programs to convince the public to support their plans. It was clear that London flights from North Carolina would be of great economic and prestige value.

Last week an administrative law judge recommended that Piedmont and Charlotte-Douglas Airport be the recipients of direct service to London.

The U.S. Department of Transportation is expected to give a final decision by April.

No doubt the decision is a disappointing one to the Raleigh-Durham area. Nevertheless this was a situation in which North Carolina could not lose. Our state will benefit from a direct air link to London. It will mean that citizens traveling to Europe can make their connections at Charlotte and thus avoid the traditional airports such as Dulles at Washington and New York. This can mean a considerable savings in time and expense.

For Pitt County it was also a no-lose situation. The area already has connections with Charlotte through Piedmont Commuter. We will soon have connections to American's Raleigh-Durham hub through American Arrow flights.

It may be that in the future both airlines will have London or European flights. If so, air travel across the Atlantic will be even more convenient.

For now, however, it appears likely that local travelers can board a flight at Pitt-Greenville and soon connect with a Piedmont London flight at Charlotte. Now that's convenience.

Truth In 'PACkaging' Bill

RALEIGH — No one likes to buy something only to find out that the product in the box is different from the picture on the package, that's why consumer laws forbid such deceptive advertising.

Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-Pitt, doesn't think voters should have to deal with deceptive PACKaging. He doesn't think PACs (political action committees) should be able to name themselves in a way that misleads the public as to their purpose.

Jones planned to file two bills this week which, if enacted, would force PACs to tell the public, upfront, what they advocate and how they feel about any candidates they're buying advertising for or against.

In the first bill, Jones would require all PACs to identify the interests they represent in their names. Many PACs use antiseptic names like Citizens for Better Government, or Americans for Democracy. Those high-sounding names sometimes simply cover the group's much more narrow interest. Maybe the PACs represent widget salesmen, hula-hoopers or ex-cons.

'Rep. Walter B. Jones, D-Pitt, doesn't think voters should have to deal with deceptive PACKaging. He doesn't think PACs (political action committees) should be able to name themselves in a way that misleads the public as to their purpose.'

When a citizen sees that Candidate X is supported by Good Guys For America, he has no idea of what that PAC stands for, and that, says Jones, violates the spirit of the state's campaign contribution disclosure laws.

"For the democratic process to remain strong," Jones says, "groups that support candidates should be clearly identified... Sometimes it is very difficult to know who that group is that is supporting a candidate."

Under Jones' bill, PACs would have until September to change their names to comply.

Jones' second bill would require that all sponsors of political ads during a campaign clearly state whether they support or oppose the candidate, or referendum issue, upon which they are commenting.

Jones says he doesn't know of any instances in recent years where this law would have been needed in North Carolina, but they are not hard to imagine. Take a hypothetical ad in which the Citizens for Good Government, whoever they are, decide they don't like Candidate X. So they write up an ad congratulating him for his courageous support of the effort to repeal the Martin Luther King Holiday — and they run the ad in newspapers likely to get considerable circulation in black neighborhoods.

In that case, Jones thinks it ought to be clearly stated that the people purchasing the ads are working against this candidate.

Jones would like one other requirement made of candidates and PACs. When either raise money for political purposes, they are required to list contributors by name and address. Jones says those contribution reports should also include the occupations of contributors. You can tell a lot about a candidate by figuring out the special interests which are giving him money.

In 1985, Jones filed legislation that would have outlawed lying in political campaigns. Politicians found to have lied in their campaigns would have been subject to removal from office.

While that bill may have been based on great intentions, the bill would have been totally impractical, and Jones concedes now that he was a bit naive to even propose it. But he doesn't apologize. "Maybe I was a bit idealistic," he said, "but don't you think we (legislators) ought to be?"

His truth in PAC-naming bill would appear to stand a good chance for passage, as many legislators have, no doubt, come up against groups whose names gave little indication of what they stood for.

To the editor:

Congratulations are in order for the first heart transplant performed at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. I hope the recipient continues to steadily improve and that more success will follow for transplantation at Pitt.

Carol Tyer's account of the transplant in the Friday, Feb. 20, Daily Reflector was excellent. Ms. Tyer included, by name, all of the members of the participating surgical teams.

Dr. Chitwood and Dr. Williams have trained long, very difficult years to enable them to perform surgeries of all descriptions on the heart. Much personal sacrifice went into their years of education and training.

However, the members of the participating teams put in many long hours of dedicated effort, much of which goes unheralded. A surgeon's performance is enhanced by well-trained, knowledgeable personnel who must meet needs before, during and after a variety of procedures.

As Pitt continues in its capacity as a trauma and multi-faceted health care facility, procedures being performed in the operating room and other areas have, at times, become more involved and lengthy. The personnel tending to our ill and infirm must possess stamina as well as dedication. We should all remember the price is not only in monetary terms when we speak of our health.

My hat is off to the folks at PCMH. As a former staff nurse in the operating room at Pitt, I am very proud of my former peers. I commend their efforts to always do the very best job.

We are fortunate, indeed, for the talented and caring individuals available to us in Pitt County.

To the editor:

Anyone who reads the President's proposed budget for the Veterans Administration should be morally offended that the VA is not being given the resources to keep pace with the critical health care needs of America's sons and daughters who, now increasingly elderly, were prepared in their youth to sacrifice their lives for "a grateful nation."

Our concern for America's veterans is two-fold: moral and practical.

On a moral level, our government made a commitment to provide health care for those who took the time to leave their families, friends and jobs to help keep our country free. This is an obligation upon which our government now is reneging by reducing the size of the VA — at a time when all World War II veterans are approaching the age at which their health care needs will grow dramatically.

According to an independent study undertaken by the Paralyzed Veterans of America and three other veterans service organizations, the proposed VA budget is about $700 million less than is needed to maintain adequate health care services in FY'88. Yet, this budget reduction occurs at a time when the administration also is proposing a buildup of our national defense.

PVA has just completed a study which shows that many veterans are indigent, and/or medically uninsured or underinsured. Our study notes that, if the VA turns them away, many of these Americans have no choice but to seek charity medical care from the private sector or local government facilities. In effect, the only thing cutting the VA's budget does is shift health care costs from one sector of society to another.

It's too bad that many of America's veterans, during their time of need, have become pawns in the national budget battle. They never bargained for such shabby and inhumane treatment when their government called on them in time of national need.

Strength For Today

A few days before John Wesley died, this great founder of Methodism raised his gaunt arms toward heaven and cried out: "The best thing of all is that God is with us." These words are carved on his tomb in Westminster Abbey.

Sometimes it must have been hard for Wesley to believe this triumphant manifesto. Although he was a minister of the Church of England, the doors of practically every church in that communion were barred against him. Yet through all these years, Wesley carried in his heart the unshakable conviction that God was always with him and his people.

Certainly the best thing in the world is the certainty of God's support. No tragedy is too deep, no disappointment too devastating, no sinful relapse too shameful to dim the reality of this great truth.

Analysis

Soviet Offer Aimed At American Allies

MOSCOW — Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's decision to negotiate a separate agreement to reduce medium-range missile forces in Europe appears to represent primarily an appeal to American allies in Western Europe, but also an assessment that, despite President Reagan's problems, he will remain the U.S. leader for the next two years.

The Soviet offer this weekend came one day after the publication in Washington of the Tower commission report on the Iran-contra scandal. A Soviet analyst noted Monday that the report, while forcing changes in the Reagan team, had not challenged Reagan personally. "The basic assumption is that we will continue to deal with Reagan for the next two years," he said.

Soviet analysts dismissed the argument that the new Soviet stance — offering to negotiate on medium-range missiles separately from the package of strategic, medium range and space defense weapons discussed at the Iceland summit last October — is a ploy to exploit the current weakness of the Reagan administration.

"We are not interested in a weak Reagan," said one Soviet official. "We are interested in a Reagan who can deliver."

Viktor Karpov, who heads the disarmament department in the Soviet Foreign Ministry, said at a press conference here Monday that Soviet negotiators had had "to take account of what was taking place in Washington." But, he continued, "We do not negotiate with separate individuals, but with the administration of the United States. Our premise is that our policy should not depend on ... political crises."

Although the Reagan administration is the ultimate target of the latest Soviet initiative, several diplomats and analysts Monday viewed the offer also as a lure to Western European governments, which they see as being better prepared to deal with Moscow than they were several months ago.

Soviet analysts suggested Monday that the Kremlin hopes its new flexibility on medium-range missiles will gain it some political good will in Europe, perhaps strengthening those within NATO who argue against Washington's adoption of a "broad" interpretation of the 1972 U.S.-Soviet antiballistic missile treaty. Such an interpretation would permit the Reagan administration to accelerate the pace at which its controversial Star Wars anti-missile defense system could be developed.

One Soviet official linked the timing of the new arms offer to Moscow's resumption last week of nuclear test explosions after an 18-month moratorium. He suggested that Moscow sought to balance that move, taken after continued U.S. tests, with a conciliatory gesture.

Since the Reykjavik summit, the Soviet Union has been lobbying with European governments, many of which had expressed private reservations about the tentative agreement in Iceland to eliminate all U.S. and Soviet medium-range missiles in Europe. The NATO allies worried about being left to face overwhelming Soviet conventional forces and about becoming "decoupled" in nuclear defense from the Americans.

Since then, however, high-level European visitors have streamed steadily through the Soviet capital, including Italian Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti this week. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher is to arrive at the end of this month.

According to one Soviet analyst, this sense here of a new Western European willingness to deal with the Soviets was instrumental in the weekend offer.

He also said the decision to separate the Reykjavik package and not insist that all agreements be contingent upon a U.S. willingness to limit Star Wars was a tactical, rather than a strategic, one.

Arms Pact With Russia Could Put Reagan On Rebound

The faith of the American people in President Reagan's leadership abilities, shaken by earlier revelations about the Iran-contra affair, has been dealt a body blow by the sober findings of the Tower Commission. There are signs that the collapse of confidence will ultimately be even more pronounced in allied countries whose cooperation and support are vital to U.S. foreign policy.

So where do we go from here? If we had a parliamentary system akin to Great Britain's, the president would have to face an early vote of confidence in Congress. If he won, he could go forward with a fresh mandate. If he lost, new elections would be held and the people would have the opportunity, if they so chose, to vote in a new government.

But that isn't the way our system works. For better or for worse, once a president is elected he has the job for four years — barring only impeachment, death or resignation.

Reagan will not be impeached. There is no reason to think that he will resign — although suggestions to that effect are being heard — or that he will suffer a disabling illness. This means that for the next 689 days the president of the United States will almost certainly be Ronald Reagan.

It is important to find out where the decision-making process went wrong and to assign responsibility for mistakes in order to avoid similar policy disasters in the future. But it is also important to get the fact-finding and blame-assessing behind us; the world will not stand still while we are sorting things out.

Since it was Reagan's errors of omission and commission that got him and the country into this mess, it's his responsibility to get himself and the country out of it. A lot depends on whether he spends the rest of his term defending past mistakes or trying to be the best President that he knows how to be.

Members of the Democratic-led Congress, for their part, should recognize that what we have is not just a Reagan crisis or a Republican crisis but a national crisis. The country has a right to expect the Democrats to rise above politics as usual, despite the obvious temptations to behave otherwise.

The United States faces serious problems that if allowed to slide will only grow worse.

At home there is the enormous budget deficit and the related trade deficit, which if uncorrected will destroy the country's future economic prospects. There are a host of other problems, including the need for steps to encourage U.S. industry to become more competitive, to legislate additional safeguards for the beneficiaries of corporate pension systems, and to throw an economic safety net under older Americans struck by long-term catastrophic illnesses.

At best, though, Reagan only has so much time and so much energy. So he should concentrate on the things that can be done only by the president under our system — the prime example being the negotiation of a nuclear-arms-reduction agreement.

No outsider can know for sure what is going on in the Kremlin. But a wide range of U.S. specialists, joined now by such hard-core skeptics as Assistant Defense Secretary Richard N. Perle, have become convinced that Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev is dead serious about internal reform — and that this fact could bring the conclusion of an arms-reduction agreement within reach.

The feeling is growing, in Western Europe especially, that 1987 is a window of opportunity in East-West relations, and it could be true. There is considerable reason to believe that the Soviets are willing to accept significant cuts in offensive nuclear missiles and, if pushed by skillful diplomacy, to settle for something less than their demand that missile defense research be kept in the laboratory. Letting slide the opportunity to find out could be a blunder of historic proportions.

As a senior West German politician said the other day, when it comes to dealing with the Soviet Union on strategic and nuclear issues, there is no substitute for a strong and rational United States, led by an effective president. It would be positively dangerous, for Americans and people everywhere, for U.S. foreign policy to remain immobilized for the remaining 22½ months of the Reagan presidency.

As a French official said Saturday, "Anything that weakens the United States doesn't please us. We hope the whole thing (Irangate) ends quickly."

As recently as last week Moscow was still telling people that the Kremlin wants to deal with Reagan, rather than wait three or four years until a successor is elected and set-ties in. Gorbachev's weekend statement, seemingly opening the way for a deal on European-based, medium-range missiles, appears to bear that out.

However, if the Soviets perceive that the president is finished, that he is incapable of conducting business or winning Senate ratification of a treaty even if one were negotiated, they could well find the temptations toward mischief-making too enticing to pass up.

Such temptations must be considerable already, considering some of the early reactions.

Panel Calls For Judicial Complex In Raleigh

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — The state's judicial bureaucracy, which is scattered "all over Raleigh," should be housed in a single complex with space to accommodate change as the court system grows, a commission says.

"The judicial branch of government is now moving into the 20th Century," Associate Supreme Court Justice Harry C. Martin said. Technological advances in record keeping and other functions are another reason for the severe space shortage confronting the court system, he said.

Martin is chairman of an eight-member panel that Monday issued a report calling for construction of a judicial center in downtown Raleigh. The panel of legislators and attorneys recommended putting the 243,000-square-foot building in the block diagonally northeast of the state Capitol.

The building would house the Supreme Court, the North Carolina Court of Appeals and the Administrative Office of the Courts, which manages the day-to-day operations of the state court system.

Currently, the Supreme Court is housed in the state Justice Building south of the Capitol. The building is shared by the AOC and the Department of Justice, but both must rent space in other buildings because of crowded conditions.

The Court of Appeals is located in a separate building just west of the Justice Building. The Justice Department also uses some space in that building.

The two courts and the AOC "have serious space shortages; and if no action is taken, these shortages will become more critical with the passing years," the commission said in its report, which summarized the findings of an 18-month study authorized by the Legislature.

The report does not request a specific amount of money or recommend a time frame for the project. In a news conference, Martin declined to speculate on either point, though he said he "certainly" wanted the building finished before the mid-1990s.

He said he was "delighted" that Gov. Jim Martin's proposed 1987-89 budget seeks issuance of $45 million in bonds for a judicial complex. But Justice Martin said the commission had not endorsed the governor's approach, leaving the financing decisions to the Legislature.

"We tried to anticipate the needs of the court down to the year 2050," Martin said. "We felt that it would be very short-sighted to build a new court structure which would last 20 or 30 years and then we'd be back here again... doing this all over again."

Aside from the growth of North Carolina's population, Martin said, the biggest reasons for the space problem are that litigation is increasing and becoming more complex.

When the Court of Appeals was created some 20 years ago, it had six judges; it now has 12. "Our figures indicate that it'll be adding six judges about every 10 years, roughly," Martin said. The addition of each judge requires space for secretaries, law clerks and other needs.

The report recommends that the new building "be of a classical monumental architectural style" generally comparable to that of the Justice Building. Martin said the structure probably would not exceed five stories.

Economists See Little Change

RALEIGH (AP) — Despite soaring prices, stocks will probably remain a good investment this year, First Union officials say, even though the aspirin indicator and Super Bowl indicator for the market cancel each other out this year.

G. Bud Carrier of First Union Corp.'s Fund Management Group said at a luncheon Monday that there would be "no recession but no boom" in the coming year. He said improvements in the balance-of-trade picture might offset declining spending by consumers and the federal government.

Dick Waggoner, director of First Union's Capital Management Group, admitted that stock market forecasting has gotten a questionable reputation since such things as aspirin production and the Super Bowl winner have been shown to accurately predict Dow Jones performance.

"If aspirin production is up from one year to the next, the market in fact will go down," he said. "I'm here to tell you that last year, in fact, production was up 500,000 pounds."

"As we look back at the Super Bowl indicator, we know that if the original NFL team wins then the market in fact is going to rise and if the original AFL team wins, the market is going to drop," he added. "In 1987, as you know, the New York Giants won and they are an NFL team. ... That leaves us with one up and one down."

The tie-breaker, then, is skirt length, Waggoner said.

"If skirts go up, the market goes up," he said. "If skirts go down, the market goes down. It's worked consistently every year with the exception of the late '70s. That's when the women went to those long skirts with the slit up the side and you couldn't tell exactly where the market was gonna go."

Carrier said consumers put less than 4 percent of their income into savings last year, the lowest in 40 years.

"In consumer spending, I expect to have real slow growth," Carrier said. "The consumer just is not putting away much of his money these days," he said. However, buoyed by surging stocks, those who have investments may feel wealthier and continue to borrow money for spending, Carrier added.

Consumer spending usually has a multiplier effect because it benefits retailers, then manufacturers who hire more people, pay more salaries and feed more money into the spending cycle, he said. Therefore, any improvements in the U.S. trade deficit could be very important, said Carrier, who predicted a better export picture in 1987.

"What's been happening the last few years is that although retail sales have been going up a lot and consumer spending has been pretty strong, the process has been short-circuited because a lot of the goods they're buying are not being produced here but they're being produced overseas," Carrier said. "So, instead of creating new jobs at our factories, it's creating new jobs at some of the factories overseas."

The U.S. budget deficit should fall from $220 billion in fiscal 1986-87 to $190 in the current fiscal year, Carrier said. That, too, will reduce stimulus to the economy, he said.

Inflation will likely go up to the 3.5 percent to 4 percent range, but interest rates will remain low, Carrier said.

Those factors will likely make stocks a good investment, despite fears that the soaring Dow Jones Industrial Average may have completed its upward rush, said Waggoner.

Moore County Dam Collapses, Flooding Mobile Home Park

By The Associated Press
About 35 Moore County families were forced into temporary shelters after an earthen dam collapsed, sending flood waters into 40 mobile homes in a subdivision, emergency officials say.

Steady Meares, emergency management director for Moore County, said the weekend's heavy rains had already caused minor flooding before the Lake Bay dam gave way Monday afternoon, flooding Riverview Acres near Vass.

Richard Womack, a subdivision resident, said the water was four feet deep in some of the mobile homes at the peak of the flooding.

Meares said the evacuated families spent the afternoon at an area church, but most had returned home by 5 p.m. as the waters receded.

Meanwhile Monday, knee-deep water in the Hestertown section of Lumberton threatened about 100 homes, but most of the residents there chose not to leave their homes.

"It's 14 feet now (on the Lumber River) and the people down there ... still won't move," said David Carter, the Robeson County emergency management coordinator, said Monday night. "They're afraid their property will be stolen."

"We've advised them to evacuate and told them there is a shelter but they wouldn't listen," Carter said. "They've asked us to take food, kerosene and water in (to them). This is a 30-year on-going thing and I think they're used to it."

Carter said water seeped inside some of the homes as the Lumber River reached 13.95 feet Monday and was expected to crest at 15.5 feet by Friday. Eleven feet is flood stage.

By week's end, he said a foot of water probably will be inside some of the houses.

Helen Ruth Thompson, who was wading in the flood waters, couldn't recall seeing the water higher.

"The water is on my front porch. This is the first time I've ever seen it on my front porch," she said. "The current is strong. It's really heavy when you're walking in it, but boy, it's a heap of fun."

Sarah Little, executive director of the Robeson County Chapter of the American Red Cross, said at least 15 families who evacuated their Hester-town homes relocated temporarily in the homes of area relatives, instead of using a shelter.

In Red Springs, at least two families, including a 91-year-old woman, were evacuated from their homes off N.C. 71 to motels for the night, Carter said.

Fort Bragg officials Monday night were monitoring the rising Little River near the base water treatment plant.

Rain May Boost Crops This Spring

By PAUL NOWELL
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Above-normal rainfall during the past two months has replenished North Carolina's supply of ground water and should give farmers a good growing season as long as another dry spell doesn't set in, experts say.

"With the recent rains and the precipitation in January and February we should be in pretty good shape for this year," hydrologist Ron Coble of the U.S. Geological Survey said Monday.

"The way we're heading now, we should be way above average for the spring planting season," he said. "But we'll still have to keep filling that rain barrel."

Grant Goode, a climatologist with the National Climatic Data Center in Asheville, said that late February and early March are the primary months when water tables are replenished.

"The critical period of last summer's 100-year drought was late winter and early spring when we had no rebuilding of the water tables," he said. "It left us in very poor condition."

Coble, who is based in Raleigh, said many areas of the state are currently above normal levels — with some approaching record levels.

"At the beginning of February, the water tables were two or three feet below the all-time highs in Asheville and the Piedmont regions," he said.

Goode said it takes a long time for the water tables to rise or fall significantly. He said the seeds of the 1986 drought could be found in last winter's weather patterns.

"We had the driest back-to-back seasons we've ever seen," he said. In Asheville, for example, the water tables were at their lowest levels in the 86 years that the records have been kept, he said.

Both experts say only a prolonged dry spell could result in another drought like 1986 for the state.

"Unless we stop everything, farmers should have plenty of deep soil moisture for the rest of the spring," Goode said.

He said last weekend's rains reminded him of another headache for farmers.

"It might be too wet for them to even get in their fields," he said. "They're damned if they do and damned if they don't."

Charge Upheld

MARSHALL, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has upheld the conspiracy indictment of former state Board of Transportation member Zeno Ponder, rejecting defense contentions that the indictment lacks specific charges.

Judge Kenneth Griffin Monday denied defense attorney Herbert Hyde's motion that the charges against Ponder be dismissed. Hyde said he would appeal the judge's decision.

Ponder, a 65-year-old veteran of Madison County Democratic politics, was indicted Jan. 13 by a Madison County grand jury on charges that he profited from information obtained while he was a member of the state transportation board.

The grand jury charged Ponder, a tobacco farmer and ex-dairyman, with conspiring to secretly purchase 19.5 acres on the proposed route of Sweetwater Creek Road. Once it is completed, the highway will connect southwest Madison County to Marshall.

Klan Pleas

RALEIGH (AP) — Two of five men involved in a white supremacist plot to rob a Fayetteville restaurant and then blow up the headquarters of an anti-Ku Klux Klan group in Alabama have pleaded guilty to the charges against them and have agreed to testify against the other defendants.

Wendell Lane and Simeon Davis will be sentenced after Stephen Miller, Robert Jackson and Anthony Wydra go to trial late this month. Court records show that Lane and Davis pleaded guilty Jan. 28.

In a plea agreement reached with the government, Lane and Davis agreed to testify against the other three defendants in return for possible inclusion in the federal witness security program.

The five were indicted on conspiracy charges Jan. 8, and Miller also was accused of firearms violations.

If convicted, Miller faces a maximum sentence of 25 years in prison and a $30,000 fine. All the others could be sentenced to five years behind bars and fined $10,000.

Prisoner Escapes

RALEIGH (AP) — A Central Prison inmate being treated at Rex Hospital overpowered the guard assigned to watch him, took a hospital employee hostage, stole a car and led authorities on a chase through four counties before being recaptured.

James Lee Ellis, 26, was driving a car belonging to a hospital nurse when he was caught about 6:30 p.m. Monday by the state Highway Patrol in Durham County after a 45-minute chase at speeds of up to 80 mph, authorities said.

Terry Brisson, 41, a Department of Correction officer, was shot in the left hand after Ellis allegedly stole his gun during a short struggle in a hospital room, police said. A hospital spokesman said the injury was minor.

Ellis was serving a 40-year sentence for second-degree burglary and second-degree sexual offense, a Central Prison spokesman said.

Shooting Probe

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A citizens' coalition has asked the Robeson County Board of Commissioners to revoke votes in 1981 and 1984 that allowed Sheriff Hubert Stone to hire his sons as deputies, but the board refused to take immediate action.

More than 70 members of the Robeson County Citizens for Better Government crowded the county board room Monday night as three ministers representing the group also asked the board to create a citizens' law enforcement review panel and to support legislative efforts to create a countywide public defender system.

The group, formed to protest the fatal November shooting of an unarmed Lumbee Indian man by the sheriff's son, also complained that the department had no written policy governing the use of deadly force.

TOKYO (AP) — Former North Carolina Gov. Jim Hunt has left Japan for home after a six-day tour that included a meeting with Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Hunt told Nakasone Monday that "if Japan claims to be a member of the international community, Japan must open up its education," said Yusuke Kataoka of the U.S.A.-Japan Committee for Promoting Trade Expansion.

Hunt was in Japan as head of a delegation from American universities seeking to establish branch campuses here under a program organized by the committee. During his stay, Hunt met with local officials

Legislators Hear Pleas For State Support Of Area Economic Goals

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — Education, leadership and wise use of resources are essential for the South to be competitive in the race for economic growth, Kentucky's governor and a former Mississippi governor told North Carolina legislators.

In speeches to a joint General Assembly session Monday, Gov. Martha Layne Collins of Kentucky and former Mississippi Gov. William F. Winter warned that the South had rivals from abroad as well as from other regions of the United States.

"Other states aren't standing still," Mrs. Collins said. "They're moving and changing while we're still trying to pull up beside them."

Although Southern states battle among themselves for industry and in other ways, they "must be willing to share ideas and resources and to pull together," Mrs. Collins said. "The progress of the Southern states, both individually and collectively, depends on it..."

Winter, chairman of the Southern Growth Policies Board, said that despite the region's progress in recent years, it faced "very serious problems" — especially in its rural areas.

Failure to act quickly, he said, could "relegate our region ... to another generation of missed opportunities and unrealized goals."

Mrs. Collins and Winter were invited to address the Legislature on a report issued last November by the 1986 Commission on the Future of the South, a creation of the Southern Growth Policies Board.

The report, "Halfway Home and a Long Way to Go," outlines 10 goals for the South to attain by 1992. They range from providing a "competitive" education for all Southern students to increasing the region's capacity for generating and using technology to implementing new economic development strategies.

"The South is at a crossroads ... and we have to travel the road together," said Winter, calling the commission's report the "road map" to regional prosperity.

Mrs. Collins, chairman of the commission, said implementing its recommendations would require prudent use of resources. Also, the South must identify and develop leaders who can motivate its people and must establish a structure to continue progress.

"The essence of leadership is not a defense of the status quo — a commitment with things as they are," Mrs. Collins said. "Leadership — genuine and true leadership — requires a willingness to push beyond what is convenient to what is necessary."

Legislative leaders hailed the speeches and said North Carolina already had taken steps toward implementing some of the commission's recommendations. They cited the Basic Education Program, an eight-year, $800 million initiative to upgrade school quality.

Mrs. Collins and Winter also praised the report of the Commission on Jobs and Economic Growth created by Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, especially its call for establishing a Rural Economic Development Commission to help the state's rural areas and small towns.

At a news conference prior to the legislative session, House Speaker Liston Ramsey said it would cost only about $2 million to implement. "That's peanuts" alongside the $9 billion state budget, Ramsey said.

The House and Senate have created standing Economic Growth committees to debate the Jordan panel's recommendations and the Martin administration's Blueprint on Economic Growth.

Imported Tobacco Rejected

WILMINGTON (AP) — Three shipments of imported tobacco have been rejected because they contained residues of an insecticide and a weed killer not approved for use on tobacco in the United States, agriculture officials say.

Lionel Edwards, director of the tobacco division of the Agricultural Marketing Service, said Monday that the rejected import shipments contained residues of permethrin, an insecticide, and dicamba, a weed killer.

Edwards said the chemicals may be approved for use on tobacco in other countries but they have not been approved by the Environmental Protection Agency for use on U.S. tobacco crops.

Permethrin is recommended to kill tobacco bud worms on cotton, said Mark Keene, an extension agent in Pender County. When dicamba is applied to tobacco, it causes the leaves to turn yellow, making the plants appear ripe.

Edwards told The Morning Star in Wilmington that when the marketing service refuses to approve shipments, buyers for the rejected tobacco must be sought outside the United States. He said two of the shipments were from Brazil. The other shipment was from Germany. Two shipments contained flue-cured tobacco, and the other was a mix of flue-cured and burley tobacco.

He declined to identify the U.S. cigarette manufacturers that had purchased the shipments. "It was a substantial amount," Edwards said, although he did not know the exact number of pounds.

There's Still One Tax Deduction That Hasn't Gone Into Retirement.

If you've been reading about the recent changes in the tax law, you probably know that many tax deductions are soon going to be a thing of the past.

Fortunately, there is still one tax deduction that isn't going into retirement: an NCNB IRA.

Fixed-Rate Accounts
Variable-Rate Accounts
Mutual Funds
Government Securities
Stocks and Bonds

Invest in an NCNB IRA by April 15 and you can deduct the entire amount from your 1986 taxes. So it makes a lot of sense to get an IRA from NCNB now, if you haven't already.

But regardless of how the tax law affects you in 1987 and beyond, an NCNB IRA is still one of the best ways around to prepare for your retirement.

An NCNB IRA offers the widest variety of investment options, from fixed-rate accounts to mutual funds. So you can find the combination that works best for you.

What's more, you won't pay tax on interest you earn on this year's IRA or future contributions until you make withdrawals at retirement. So just drop by your neighborhood NCNB office today and ask us about an IRA. With all of the advantages that an NCNB IRA has to offer, you'd really have to be off your rocker not to take full advantage of them.

Reported Child Abuse Shows Big Surge In Several States

By JILL LAWRENCE
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Higher public awareness and economic hardship contributed to a big surge in reports of child abuse and neglect to state agencies, a congressional survey says.

The six-month survey of 50 states and the District of Columbia found that such reports rose 54.9 percent from 1981 to 1985, covering abuse of more than 660,000 additional children.

Forty-five states surveyed by the House Select Committee on Children, Youth and Families linked the rise in child abuse reports to greater public awareness, while three-quarters of the states ranked deteriorating economic conditions in the top three factors affecting the reporting rate.

The number of reported cases nationwide was 1,211,323 in 1981 and 1,876,564 in 1985, the report said. In North Carolina, reports of abuse rose 2.2 percent, from 27,017 in 1981 to 27,625 in 1985.

"This report documents that there has been an alarming increase in the reports of child abuse and child neglect over the past five years," committee chairman George Miller, D-Calif., said Monday in a statement.

He said abused and neglected children need preventive services and effective treatment programs and added: "Absent an active role by the federal government, neither the states nor the charitable organizations will have the capacity to respond fully to this growing problem."

The committee staff sent letters and questionnaires last spring to the governors of all 50 states and the mayor of Washington, D.C. It received responses from all of them and conducted extensive follow-up interviews.

The report, "Abused Children in America: Victims of Official Neglect," was endorsed by the committee's 18 Democrats for formal release today.

It includes the dissenting views of the dozen Republicans on the panel, who said the survey methodology was flawed and the report is not comprehensive as it claims to be. But the minority conceded that "as a snapshot, it is a very useful document."

GOP lawmakers in their dissent said it was good news that despite a decline in federal assistance, the total money devoted to child protection and welfare services had increased 1.9 percent over the five-year period.

But the main report said the 1.9 percent increase amounted to about $1 million per state. "Child abuse and neglect reports have increased faster than available federal, state and local resources in 29 of the 31 states reporting such information for 1981-85," the report said.

Staff turnover, inadequately trained staff and uncoordinated efforts by multiple agencies also were cited as significant barriers to serving abused children, the report said.

In addition, states said they had little information on how many cases were referred to law enforcement agencies, how many were prosecuted and how many people convicted.

The survey found that neglect is the most common form of maltreatment, affecting more than half the children brought to the attention of state agencies.

But it said sexual abuse, while accounting for 14 percent of cases reported, is showing the most dramatic increase. In the 19 states that submitted complete information for different categories of abuse, sexual abuse reports went from 25,677 cases in 1981 to 70,767 in 1985.

The rate of substantiated cases — those which have been investigated and abuse or neglect confirmed — stayed the same over the 1981-85 period, averaging about 44 percent in 29 states, the committee report said.

Thus, the actual number of maltreated children served by state agencies has risen at the same rate as reports of abuse, the report said.

From 1981 to 1985 federal program cuts caused a loss of $131.5 million in child welfare and protection money in the 31 states that provided complete information on the subject, the report said. Taking other resources into account, there was a $37.7 million overall gain in funds for such services.

The GOP committee members, in their dissenting view, said state employees assigned to answer the questionnaire may have had an ax to grind "in terms of the state's own agenda, especially with regard to budget items."

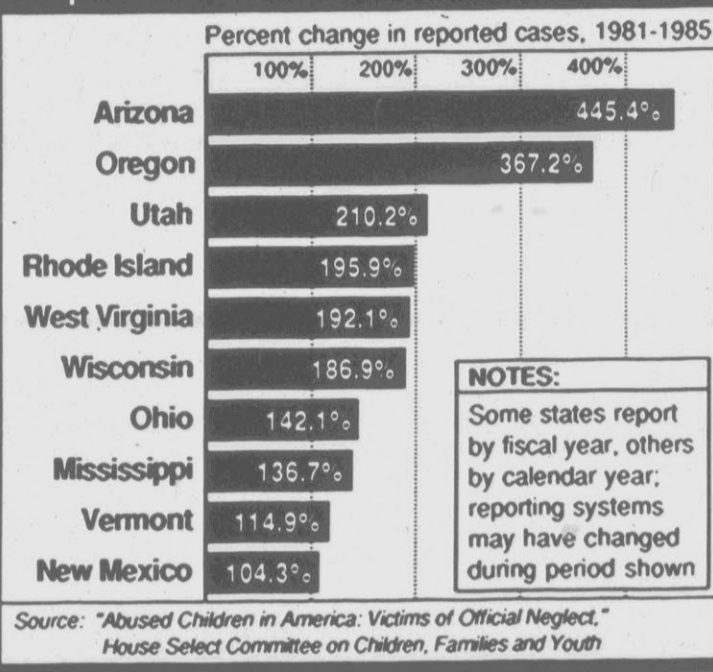

The survey results also are hampered, they said, by lack of a standard definition of child abuse and neglect across the country; lack of attention to the causes of child abuse; lack of attention to the large number of reported cases that cannot be substantiated; and changes in reporting laws that may have helped pad the number of reported cases.

The GOP members did say they were encouraged by state expenditures noted in the report for parent education programs, homemaker services, parent aides, respite care and crisis nurseries.

NASA Looks For Robots To Perform Space Duties

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three years ago, groaning and grunting, two astronauts operating in the space shuttle cargo bay pulled the electronic innards out of a failed satellite and restored it to health with a transplant brought from home.

The task was so physically demanding that after the flight the National Aeronautics and Space Administration used it as a test to challenge manufacturers of robots to show what their devices can do.

The only company to accept the challenge was a small Minnesota manufacturer of remote control devices used in the nuclear industry, Central Research Laboratories of Red Wing.

The NASA task involved removing screws from panels, unplugging and plugging cables and lifting out the electronics box. It was detailed in 31 pages of step-by-step instructions.

In a recent demonstration, an engineer from Central Research Laboratories, sitting in front of four television screens and using a metal hand controller, swapped out the instrument box on a mockup 20 feet away, in 3½ hours. It took astronauts George Nelson and James van Hoften 15 minutes longer when they restored the real Solar Max satellite in April 1984.

The difference, of course, was that they had to spend more than seven hours outside the relative safety of the shuttle cabin in a fatiguing, hazardous environment. It would have been far easier to have robots make the space walk, controlled by astronauts inside the shuttle.

The Central Research Equipment was set up in a huge room at NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center near Washington, where remote control devices are being tested for eventual use in the U.S. space station.

IRS Distributing Simplified Version Of New W-4 Form

By TOM REDBURN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — The Internal Revenue Service unveiled a simplified version of its W-4 income tax withholding form Monday and announced it will not impose penalties for underwithholding on any taxpayer who fills out either new form by June 1.

The simpler two-page W-4A form, issued by the IRS in response to a storm of protest over the complexity of the earlier four-page version, is expected to be available by mid-April.

In a heavily attended news conference, IRS Commissioner Lawrence Gibbs defended the longer version as more accurate, but acknowledged the new form is expected to be more useful for many taxpayers.

"We misjudged the willingness and capacity of many taxpayers to handle the additional complexity it takes in order to make withholding more accurately match tax liability," Gibbs said. "So, we went back to work to come up with an alternative."

The new worksheet is much easier to follow and it eliminates the intimidating full-page table designed for families where both spouses work.

Taxpayers can choose either withholding form, since the earlier form will still be made available for those seeking maximum accuracy.

Gibbs said about 45 million individuals, or nearly half of all employed taxpayers, should be able to adjust correctly the amount of income tax withheld from their paychecks by just using the half-page worksheet on the front of the new form.

Those with large itemized deductions or in two-earner families should do the additional calculations available on the back of the form.

The original W-4 form issued by the IRS for the first year of the new tax law is more advantageous chiefly for taxpayers with substantial income from non-wage sources such as rents or capital gains and those who take advantage of various business-related tax credits. It also allows high-income families with two wage earners to reduce excessive withholding and come close closer to matching their actual tax liability.

Reaction to the new form by IRS critics was cautiously positive.

A spokesman for Sen. David Pryor, D-Ark., who earlier called the longer W-4 form "a disaster," said the simplified worksheet was "more understandable. The calculations appear to be simpler and it more clearly explains which sections each taxpayer should or should not fill out."

The new tax overhaul law requires every wage-earner to file a new withholding form with his employer by Oct. 1. Submitting an updated W-4 is necessary to adapt taxpayers' withholding to tax code changes that include dramatically reduced rates, the elimination of several popular deductions, and the nearly doubled value of personal exemptions.

The IRS said that about 80 percent of all taxpayers received a tax refund last year, which averaged about $1,000. According to IRS calculations, those who use the new simplified form will, on average, receive a refund next year of about $475.

A DOLL'S DREAM — Julie Collier, head of Christie's Collectibles department, peers at one of the 40 antique doll houses that belonged to Mary B. Rhoads of Lancaster, Pa. The houses and furniture will be auctioned today. (AP Laserphoto)

Woman Sells Lifelong Dollhouse Collection

By BETHANY KANDEL
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — Mary B. Rhoads has 40 houses up for sale. She hasn't lived in any of them; they're all too small.

But they're a perfect fit for a doll. The Lancaster, Pa., woman has been collecting dollhouses for 20 years, since her youngest grandchild was 4 years old. "Then another one came along and she wanted a dollhouse and then another — I have five granddaughters," said the collector who admits to being "over 55." The dollhouses "grew into one village and then another village, and soon I had a whole room full," she said. Today, her collection of 40 dollhouses ranging from 11 to 46 inches tall, dozens of sets of miniature furnishings and dolls in all shapes and sizes are going on the auction block at Christie's East.

It's not easy to part with the collection, Mrs. Rhoads said. But she and her husband are moving to a smaller home and they decided to sell all but three of the dollhouses. Among those for sale are an 1890 four-room Victorian mansion with French-doored balcony, fireplaces, lace curtains and a widow's walk; a miniature antique shop furnished with rugs, porcelain, furniture and various bric-a-brac; and an entire 19th-century Lancaster County farm with stables, two gazebos, smokehouse, water pump, outhouse, chickenhouse, farm animals and implements. Mrs. Rhoads, who bought most of the dollhouses unfurnished at antique stores around the world, has been a stickler for detail, decorating each building with tiny furniture appropriate to its style and scale. Some of the bedrooms have oak-stained mirrored armoires, lithographed pictures in molded gilt-metal frames and four-poster beds covered in delicate quilts. Kitchens boast tin ice boxes, completely stocked china cabinets, hand-crank wall phones and sets of metal cutlery.

"Each house has its own family living in it," she said of the antique dolls she matched to move into each. "I've made some of their clothes and sewed curtains and upholstered furniture using bits of material from my mother's trousseau."

It's unusual to have a group of so many antique American dollhouses, said Julie Collier, head of the collectibles department at Christie's.

"Most of the dollhouses owned by little girls at the beginning of the century were from England and Germany," she said. The ones produced in America were often made individually as a replica of a house a family lived in for the child or grandchild of the family, she said.

Mrs. Rhoads anticipates that most of her collection will be bought by serious collectors and not end up in the playrooms of rowdy children. She said her only desire is that they find good homes.

"I've loved every single one of them and put a lot of tender loving care into each," she said. "I hope they're as appreciated by the people who buy them."

If you switched from drinking one regular soft drink a day to one diet soft drink a day, you could lose 15 pounds in a year.

Waistlines Come And Go — Fast!

Ever since I read that Dolly Parton is down to a 17-inch waist, I haven't been able to sleep at nights.

Seventeen inches! Do you have any idea how small that is? It's only 11 inches more than the rubber ring around your jar of pickles. It's the same as Cher's earrings. It's three inches more than Scarlett O'Hara's waist just before she passed out.

I hope this isn't going to be one of those trendy things ... like small feet or cleavages that come in and out with fashion. My waist "peaked" at age 9. It was wedged between baby fat and puberty pig-out and lasted 10 weeks. Then I went on to pregnancy and stabilized at acute water retention. I'd hate to try to recapture age 9 again.

I should have suspected something like this was developing. For the past two or three years, the feminine figure has been layered in some of the most formless clothes ever to hit the racks. We all walk around looking like parachutes just before they hit the ground. Blouses hang loose from shoulder to thigh, sleeves billow loosely around the arms. God only knows what is growing under the elastic waistbands and the drawstrings in slacks. You could have a camel in there and no one would ever know.

But think about it. Designers giveveth and designers taketh away. We should remember that these are the wonderful people who lulled us into the shapeless maxi look and, when they were sure our legs had grown together, hit us with the mini skirt.

Maybe I'm getting paranoid, but since Dolly's announcement of a 17-inch waist, I've been keeping my eyes open and everyone seems to be getting one. Angela Lansbury is curving in, Loni Anderson has to be holding up her pantyhose with suspenders, and I don't know what Lee Iacocca did to the Statue of Liberty, but she's obviously sucking it in.

I was buying a pair of knitted slacks the other day with a 72-inch drawstring. As the salesperson poked her head in the door of the dressing room, I said, "Pardon me, I have a question. If I were to have a waist, where would you calculate it would be?"

She studied me for a moment and said, "This is just a guess, but I think ... right around here."

I put my hand on the spot and looked in the mirror. "You're kidding!" I said.

"How big is your waist?" she asked.

"No bigger than the Statue of Liberty's," I said defensively. "So ... she's a little taller."

Comforting Words Helped Widow

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago last month I wrote you asking for the address of a famous female entertainer. My husband was killed two days after we had attended her concert, and I wanted to thank her for adding to my precious collection of happy memories. I never heard from the entertainer, but I still cherish the letter I received from you.

You did not disregard my pain with cliches; instead you comforted me with simple, loving words, and ended with, "He must have been a wonderful man." Abby, I needed to hear that! Thank you.

It's clear from Webster's Dictionary definition that Webster was never a widow. The definition should be: "A frightened woman hanging onto threads of sanity, one who is totally alone, no matter how many people surround her."

I wish I could go to every widow and say, "You are not crazy, and believe it or not, you will survive this overwhelming pain."

It took me two years to understand the words of a young widow who came to console me. She said, "You wonder when the pain will go away. Well, it never goes away completely, but I promise it becomes more bearable as time goes on."

My dear widow friends: Be forgiving and understanding with others, and always remember that we, too, were once oblivious to this kind of pain. Counseling is very helpful, but the bottom line is "self" — self-searching, self-understanding and, most important, self-love. Be good to yourself, and you'll be good to others. — TERRY

DEAR TERRY: Your message to widows is well worth the space. Thank you for wanting to help others as you have been helped. Now a word from a recent widow:

DEAR ABBY: May I elaborate on your comment to "Yea or Nay?" who wanted to know about sending a sympathy card three months after a death. I'm glad you said "Yea." Abby, the cards received later are appreciated as much as those received in the first deluge of mail. Sometimes, more.

1. Send a card or a personal note. I have read and re-read those notes many times. This is an important part of the grieving process — to know that others cared.

2. Don't forget us at the holiday season. I was sadly amazed at the number of greeting cards I didn't receive from friends I had always heard from. We widows and widowers need to get through the holiday time, and it's very important to hear from loved ones.

3. I have just passed the first-year milestone of my dear husband's death. I received many calls and personal notes to let me know they remembered, and missed him, too.

In closing, if there's doubt in your mind, write or get in touch. The fact that you care will far outweigh the moment of sadness that is there anyway. Sign me ... A RECENT WIDOW

DEAR ABBY: I am a single parent of a lovely 15-month-old daughter. Her father (I'll call him Brad) and his family do not acknowledge her socially, but Brad is paying child support.

Brad plans to marry in three weeks, and says he does not intend to tell his fiancée that he has a daughter to support. I feel that his fiancée has a right to know before she marries him.

Would it be wrong for me to tell her? I am fairly certain that nobody in Brad's family will. If I were in her shoes, I would consider it a favor to be told. — SUZIE'S MOTHER

DEAR MOTHER: The bride-to-be has a right to know. Tell Brad that if he doesn't tell her, you will. Then do it, if you have to. But I'm betting you won't have to.

Negotiators Press For Quick Plan

GENEVA (AP) — U.S. and Soviet negotiators on medium-range nuclear weapons met today, pressing their efforts for a quick agreement following Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev's proposal to rid Europe of such weapons.

Soviet delegation spokesman Alexander Monakhov said the group on medium-range missiles, headed by Lem Masterkov and Maynard Ghitman, was meeting at the Soviet mission. He said he had no further details.

The negotiations are divided into groups on medium- and long-range nuclear weapons, and space and defense systems.

The talks got a push Monday after the Soviets formally presented the U.S. side with Gorbachev's proposal for an immediate elimination of medium-range missiles in Europe. The group on medium-range missiles had been scheduled to end its current round of talks this week but agreed Monday to extend them.

Soviet officials said Gorbachev made his new offer Saturday in an attempt to break the Geneva deadlock. The proposal dropped a Soviet demand that the United States restrict its Strategic Defense Initiative, popularly known as "Star Wars," before an arms control package could be agreed on.

Gates' Nomination Withdrawn

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is again looking for someone to run the CIA, his nomination of acting chief Robert Gates a victim of congressional outrage over the Iran-Contra affair.

Faced with the Senate Intelligence Committee's determination to stall the nomination pending further investigation of the arms-and-money scheme, Reagan on Monday accepted Gates' offer to withdraw.

Reagan, alluding to the climate on Capitol Hill, said in a statement released Monday that "at any other time, I am certain he would easily have been confirmed without delay."

The names of retired Air Force Brig. Gen. Brent Scowcroft, former CIA deputy director Bobby Inman and National Security Agency chief Gen. William Odom immediately surfaced as top-level prospects.

along with former Sen. John Tower and Vernon Walters, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations.

Scowcroft and Tower were both members of the Tower commission that investigated the Iran arms deals. The Washington Post reported today that Tower had been offered the job and turned it down. Tower declined to comment on the Post report.

the way most pictures are now," he said in 1973.

In "Ride the High Country," McCrea and Scott played aging marshals assigned to protect a gold shipment and were directed by Sam Peckinpah. Scott played his usual tough, taciturn role.

"We got the best notices, both of us, in our entire career, because we were playing ourselves, at our age," the 81-year-old McCrea said Monday. "We liked each other. ... When we worked together, it was one of the most pleasant experiences I ever had, because he was a Southern gentleman. I take my hat off to him."

"He was an outstanding man, and he was a fine actor who made a lot of excellent western movies," cowboy star Gene Autry, 79, said in a statement.

Actor James Stewart, 78, remembered Scott as a "great credit to the motion picture industry."

"He was a fine actor who enjoyed a wonderful career. His pictures helped audiences to watch the development of the Western frontier of our country," Stewart said. "Those who knew him as a person or through his pictures will miss him greatly."

Scott, who made 96 pictures, entered the movies in 1929 and became a leading man in the mid-'30s with such movies as "She," "The Last Roundup," "The Last of the Mohicans," "High Wide and Handsome" and "Jesse James."

He appeared in such musicals as "Roberta" and "Follow the Fleet," both with Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers, as well as such comedies as "My Favorite Wife" with Irene Dunne and Cary Grant and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" with Shirley Temple.

During and after World War II, Scott portrayed military heroes in such films as "Corvette K-225," "Bombardier," "Gung Ho!" and "China Sky."

His career staple was westerns, and he starred in two dozen, including "Santa Fe," "Fort Worth," "Man in the Saddle," "Man Behind the Gun," "Ten Wanted Men," "Ride Lonesome" and "Comanche Station."

In "The Doolins of Oklahoma," Scott played an outlaw for a change. At least two of his films, "Sugarfoot" and "Colt .45," became television series.

From 1950 to 1953 Scott was among Hollywood's top 10 box office draws.

He once said of westerns: "They have been the mainstay of the industry ever since its beginning. And they have been good to me. Westerns are a type of picture which everybody can see and enjoy. Westerns always make money. And they always increase a star's fan following."

Scott was born Randolph Crane in Orange County, Va. Although most movie biographies give his birth date as Jan. 23, 1903, his son-in-law said Scott was actually born in 1898.

Scott was educated at Georgia Tech and the University of North Carolina. After serving in the Army in World War I, he enrolled at the Pasadena Playhouse. He began in films with a bit part in "The Far Call" in 1929.

Besides his wife of 43 years, Patricia, survivors include a son, a daughter and three grandchildren. He will be buried Wednesday in a family plot in Charlotte, N.C., with a private graveside service, said Randy Heath Lytle, Scott's niece. The Rev. Billy Graham, a longtime acquaintance, will deliver remarks.

great style," Cowan said. "There was a serious side as well as his zany side."

The Brooklyn-born entertainer got his start as a clowning busboy on New York's Borscht Belt during the late 1920s and went on to Broadway, Hollywood and the concert stage.

Kaye often portrayed a disaster-prone, manic clown with good intentions. His daughter recalled that once in a restaurant in China, Kaye tried to order chicken by flapping his arms around and making clucking noises.

The waiter, she said, nodded knowingly and returned with two eggs.

His television appearances featured songs in gibberish and rambling stories told with childlike innocence and fractured language that captivated young audiences.

Kaye's work on behalf of young people earned him recognition as UNICEF's longtime "ambassador to the world's children."

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences presented Kaye with the Jean Hersholt Humanitarian award in 1982 for his charitable works, especially UNICEF. Although Kaye couldn't read music, he conducted symphonies all over the world to benefit children.

"It's been no trouble at all," Kaye said when he accepted the award. "I'm crazy about children, conducting and flying. What I'm not crazy about is disease, famine and neglect. We all in our profession share a long and wonderful tradition of doing something about it."

Among his movies were "The Inspector General" in 1948, "The Secret Life of Walter Mitty" in 1946, "Hans Christian Andersen" in 1952 and "White Christmas" in 1954.

Denmark's Queen Margrethe knighted the rubber-faced song-and-dance man in 1983 for his portrayal of the Danish author Hans Christian Andersen in the Hollywood musical. The citation called him "the Pied Piper to the children of the world."

Kaye won Emmy awards for television's "The Danny Kaye Show" in 1963 and best children's special in 1975. He received a special Oscar in 1954.

He also has served as the official permanent ambassador-at-large for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

AIDS Ruling Issued

"which is to ensure that handicapped individuals are not denied jobs or other benefits because of the prejudiced attitudes or the ignorance of others."

The fact that a person with a "record of impairment" is also contagious does not necessarily remove that person from the law's protection, Brennan said.

His opinion noted that the court was not deciding today "whether a carrier of a contagious disease such as AIDS could be considered to have a physical impairment, or whether such a person could be considered, solely on the basis of contagiousness, a handicapped person as defined by the law."

Despite that limiting language, the decision represents a huge victory for gay rights activists.

Bob Kunst, director of Cure AIDS Now, a Miami-based group, hailed the ruling as "a fantastic victory for all Americans" and "a major defeat for the Reagan administration."

And, quite separately, the decision is a personal victory for Mrs. Arline, whose lawyers contend her school board employers never tried to accommodate her handicap by, for example, finding her some non-teaching job within the school system. "I'm very, very happy. I'm very grateful," Mrs. Arline said today after learning of the court's decision. Asked whether she resented her case being tied to the national debate over AIDS, Mrs. Arline said, "If it will help someone else, it will make me happy. It doesn't bother me."

The high court today sent Mrs. Arline's case back to a federal trial court so it can be determined whether she is "otherwise qualified."

The law relied on by Mrs. Arline, the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, says "no otherwise qualified handicapped individual ... shall solely because of his handicap be ...

Rose Girls Run Past Saints

Rose High School's girls, the champions of the Big East Conference, cruised to a 59-39 victory over Southern Wayne, the Midwestern Conference's number five team, in the first round of the 4-A girls state playoffs.

But the Rampettes were the only Big East survivor as the other five conference representatives all went down to defeat.

Second seeded Wilson Fike lost in overtime to Wilmington Laney, 46-44, while number three Northern Nash fell to Wilmington Hoggard, 50-49. Kinston, the Big East's #5 team, was crushed by Fayetteville Westover, 67-25, while #4 Rocky Mount fell to Mid-South runner-up Terry Sanford, 66-36.

Rose looked for a while like it might turn the game into a rout early, scoring the first six points of the game. But the Rampettes hit a lull at that point, missing their next five shots in a row and allowing Southern to rally and close the gap to 8-7 behind the play of point guard Tonya Neal. Neal then hit again with six seconds left in the quarter to push Southern into the lead, 11-10, at the end of the quarter.

In the second period, the two swapped the lead back and forth until Lisa Leisten hit with 6:21 to go for a 14-13 margin for the Rampettes. After that, Rose never trailed again.

Led by Leisten and Kim Dupree, Rose steadily pulled away, building up an eight-point margin over the Saints at 22-14 before settling for a 24-18 halftime lead.

And for Rose from there on, it was clear sailing.

Dupree hit a three-pointer to open the third period, running the lead to nine, 27-18, and the margin reached 10 on another Dupree basket at 33-23. Rose led at the end of the quarter, 35-29.

Midway the final quarter, Rose put together a string of 14 straight points as the defense came up with a total of nine turnovers in the period — most of them forced — to put the game out of reach. From a 39-33 edge, Rose ripped out to a 53-33 lead, and led by as much as 21, 55-34, before settling for the final 20-point margin.

"I thought we played a pretty fair game," Kuykendall said, "although we didn't run well until the third quarter.

"The adjustment we made really wasn't that significant. Nicole (Maxon) was making the long pass for the break, but they were doubling on us and stopping it. But we told Nicole to get past their first line, then pass, and it worked. They started coming up on her, and we were able to get free. We got four or five in a row and broke it open," Kuykendall said.

Dupree led the Rose scoring with 21 points while Leisten added 18 and Kim Bridges had 10. Neal paced Southern Wayne with 12.

"Lisa has really made a difference with her scoring from the outside," Kuykendall said. "She's made Dupree and Bridges better from the inside. People used to collapse on them, but they can't now, not with Lisa hitting like she is. And she's also making a big contribution on defense. She had a number of steals tonight."

The victory boosted the Rose record to 22-2 while Southern Wayne ends its year at 9-11.

Conley Rips SE Halifax

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

HOLLYWOOD — D.H. Conley coach Walter Claybrook said he wasn't sure how his basketball team would react coming off a loss to Havelock, but the Vikings rebounded with a 71-43 romp over Southeast Halifax in the first round of the state basketball sectional playoff Monday night.

The Vikings, who won the Coastal Conference regular season title, lost to Havelock, 71-69, in the Coastal Conference Tournament finals last Friday.

"You don't always know," Claybrook said. "There is always that unknown element. I thought the guys would be ready but you never know for sure."

Claybrook had little to worry about in this game. The Viking starters enjoyed a height advantage at every position over the Trojans, though they were slow to take advantage of it.

Southeast Halifax jumped out to an early 4-0 lead before Conley scored nine straight nine points to take a 9-4 lead en route to a 17-10 advantage after one quarter of play.

The lead quickly grew to 11 at 25-14 as Paul Merritt scored six of the Vikings' first eight points of the second period. Two of the baskets came on feeds inside from center Phil Medlin.

"I thought the highlight of the game was our inside passing," Claybrook said. "I think the height differential was a big factor."

Though the Vikings built up a 34-20 lead by halftime they missed on numerous chances to blow the game wide open. They suffered through seven first half turnovers, most of them coming in the transition game.

"I don't know if we were lackadaisical or what," Claybrook said of his team's first half performance. "I don't know if it was due to the last game or what it was. The biggest thing is I think some of the guys tried to force it. We talked a little bit at halftime that we could still make some improvement on our man-to-man defense. I thought we cut off the penetration in the second half."

The Trojans came within 10 early in the third quarter at 34-24 but Conley went on a 8-0 run to squelch any ideas of a comeback.

Meldin started things off when he scored two on a goal-tending call. Merritt then scored six straight points. He scored on a follow shot of his own miss, then followed a miss by Jonathon Bonner and he added a layup off a pass from Medlin for a 40-24 advantage.

The quarter ended with the Vikings leading 50-29.

The final quarter would decide only the margin of victory and whether or not every player on the Conley roster would score.

"I was pleased it was the type of game you can play everybody," Claybrook said.

Ten of the 14 Vikings scored, with Sherwood Wilder (eight points) and Mayfield Hugee (six points) leading the contributors off the bench.

Conley will now travel to SouthWest Edgecombe, where it will take on Southern Nash on Thursday.

North Pitt Rips Fuquay-Varina

BETHEL — North Pitt's girls rolled up a 47-30 victory over Fuquay-Varina in the first round of the 2-A girls basketball tournament Monday night.

North Pitt will advance to face James Kenan, a 43-42 winner over Northampton East, on Wednesday at 7 p.m. on the Pant-Hers' home court.

Fuquay-Varina inched out into a 9-8 lead after the first period of play, but was unable to sustain its lead. North Pitt took charge after that, powering out to a 12-8 margin in the second quarter. That left the Pant-Hers in the lead, 20-17, at halftime.

In the third quarter, North Pitt continued to pull away, taking a big step with a 16-3 advantage. That left them up on the Lady Bengals, 36-20. They finished off Fuquay-Varina with an 11-10 margin in the final period.

Gwen Pilgreen scored 19 points for North Pitt while Keisha Pilgreen added 17. Amy Heath added 10 as the three accounted for all but one Pant-Her point.

Kara Yallas led Fuquay-Varina with 11 points.

North Pitt, now 18-9, has won 10 straight games in advancing into the state tournament.

Lady Chargers Nip Plymouth

LITTLEFIELD — Ayden-Grifton High School, seeded third from the Eastern Plains Conference, slipped past Northeastern Conference #3 Plymouth in the girls 2-A state basketball playoffs Monday night, 53-50.

The game was close all the way. Ayden-Grifton outthit Plymouth in the first quarter, 12-8, to take the lead, but the Valkyries came back in the second period with a 10-8 advantage. That cut the Lady Charger lead back to 20-18 at halftime.

In the third period, Ayden-Grifton tacked another point to its lead with a 17-16 margin, giving the Chargers a 37-34 edge to take into the final period. Plymouth fought back, however, and tied it up on two occasions, then took the lead at 48-46.

But Karen Edmonds hit two baskets back-to-back, to put Ayden-Grifton ahead once more, 50-48, and Plymouth never caught up again.

Navy's Goal Is The Final Four

HAMPTON, Va. (AP) — While some college basketball teams consider it a major accomplishment to make the NCAA tournament, Navy's Midshipmen have set their sights a bit higher.

"I think this year's team's goal right now is the Final Four," Navy's Carl Liebert said. "I think we feel like if we come out to play on any given night, we can beat anybody."

Liebert and his teammates could afford to look beyond mere entry to the 64-team field after a 53-50 win Monday night over North Carolina-Wilmington. Navy's victory came in the title game of the Colonial Athletic Association tournament, and earned the Midshipmen an automatic berth in the NCAA event.

Navy, winning its 13th straight game, improved its record to 26-5 and captured the CAA crown for the third consecutive year. The victory also improved the Midshipmen's overall mark against North Carolina-Wilmington to 8-0, although it did not come easily.

With 1:19 remaining, North Carolina-Wilmington's Charles Cherry got the Seahawks to within 51-50 on an 18-foot jumper.

Tournament most valuable player David Robinson answered with two free throws at the 20-second mark to push Navy's lead to 53-50.

Nine seconds later, Sandy Anderson attempted a 3-point field goal that would have put North Carolina-Wilmington in front. But the ball bounced off the rim, and was bobbed by several players from both sides as the clock ran out.

"It was a crazy finish," North Carolina-Wilmington Coach Robert McPherson said. "The ball was kicked around about 15 times by six different players."

North Carolina-Wilmington, seeking its first-ever postseason invitation, dropped to 18-12, but McPherson said the Seahawks deserve to have their season extended, either in the NCAA or the National Invitation Tournament.

"I would hope that because of the type of schedule that we played this year that we would get some consideration," he said.

Robinson, Navy's 7-foot-1, 235-pound senior center, put the Midshipmen ahead for good at 28-20 on a layup and free throw with 17:13 left.

Robinson's 3-point play marked the start of a 15-4 run by the Midshipmen. But North Carolina-Wilmington came right back with a 12-4 surge, capped by Ricky Griffin's 3-point field goal that trimmed the Navy lead to 44-43, and the Seahawks stayed close the rest of the way.

"Other than about six minutes, I thought we controlled the tempo of the ballgame from start to finish," McPherson said. "This program has

Notre Dame Finally Makes Poll

By The Associated Press
After his team suffered an 80-63 season-opening thrashing against Western Kentucky, Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps had no reason to think about national rankings. He had more serious problems on his hands.

"When we played Western Kentucky, we were a horrible basketball team," Phelps said.

That's not the case anymore.

On Monday, a few hours before Notre Dame improved its record to 20-7 with a 76-57 victory over Brooklyn College, the Fighting Irish ranked into the Associated Press rankings as the No. 20 team. It was Notre Dame's first appearance in the poll, capping a season-long recovery from that 17-point beating.

"We're excited about our 20th win, especially with the problems we had at the beginning of the year," Phelps said. "At the beginning of this season, I thought we would be looking at 16 to 18 wins total."

Notre Dame, Missouri and UCLA moved into the ratings this week as Kansas, Florida and Providence fell out, and several other teams skipped places. But there was no change at the top, where Nevada-Las Vegas remained a strong No. 1.

The Runnin' Rebels, 30-1 after completing an unbeaten run through their Pacific Coast Athletic Association schedule, attracted 50 of 63 first-place votes and 1,244 points from a nationwide panel of sportswriters and broadcasters.

The other 13 first-place votes went to No. 2 North Carolina, which totaled 1,210 points. The Tar Heels, unbeaten regular-season champions of the Atlantic Coast Conference, are 27-2 overall.

Purdue made the biggest move among the nation's elite, climbing three spots to take over third. The Boilermakers, 23-3, received 1,118 points after Big Ten Conference victories over Illinois, Indiana and Ohio State.

Indiana, 23-4, which also lost to Illinois in surrendering the lead in the Big Ten, dropped one spot to fourth with 946 points. DePaul, 25-2 after a 73-62 loss to Notre Dame, was another point back in fifth place.

Iowa, 25-4, and Georgetown, 23-4, each improved one spot after receiving 935 points and 914 points, respectively.

Temple, the Atlantic 10 regular-season champion, fell from fifth to eighth. The Owls, 29-3, lost their final conference game to West Virginia and received 848 points.

Alabama, 23-4, the regular-season champion in the Southeastern Conference, moved up one spot with 799 points while Syracuse, 24-5, rounded out the Top Ten with 654 points.

Pittsburgh, 23-6, dropped two slots and leads the Second Ten with 582 points, followed by Illinois, Clemson, Duke, Texas Christian, New Orleans, Oklahoma, UCLA, Missouri and Notre Dame.

Last week's Second Ten was Syracuse, Oklahoma, Clemson, Illinois, Texas Christian, Kansas, Duke, Florida, New Orleans and Providence.

UCLA, 21-6, was ranked for two weeks earlier in the season, reaching 11th at one point. The Bruins, the Pac-10 regular-season champions, have won 18 of 20 games, including victories last week over Southern California and Louisville.

Missouri, 21-9, is making its first poll appearance this season after winning the Big Eight Conference regular-season title.

Two More SEC Schools Worry

DALLAS (AP) — While students and officials at Southern Methodist University nurse wounds from the NCAA's harshest penalty ever for recruiting violations, two other Southwest Conference schools prepared to deal with their own athletics-related problems.

About 100 SMU students showed up Monday for a forum sponsored by the Student Senate, featuring a panel discussion with Interim President William Stallcup, NCAA faculty representative Lonnie Kliever and student body president Trevor Pearlman.

It was the first meeting of students and university officials since the NCAA Committee on Infractions announced its sanctions against the school last Wednesday. SMU will play no football in 1987 and can play only seven away games in 1988, in addition to various other penalties that would affect the program until 1990.

Meanwhile, Texas Tech said it would announce today the outcome, and possible sanctions, arising from an NCAA investigation into recruiting violations. Allegations reportedly involved ex-coach Jerry Moore, four former assistants and six recruits.

Also, former University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman admitted in a memorandum released Monday by university officials that he occasionally gave his players cash, but in amounts never more than $35. Yeoman, in charge of fund-raising as a special assistant to University President Richard Van Horn, defended his actions in the memorandum, saying the money was for humanitarian purposes.

The Southwest Conference Council said Monday that it would allow SMU football players to transfer to other SWC schools without sitting out a year. Players transferring to another school usually must sit out a year before resuming athletic activity.

In remarks to the SMU students on Monday, Stallcup said university officials "did what we had to do and in the way we had to do it to discover the full extent of our problems and attempt to restore the integrity and respect of our athletic programs."

Kliever acknowledged the controversy surrounding SMU's decision to cooperate with the investigation into NCAA violations and to grant immunity to the people involved with player payoffs.

"Every road looks different depending on where you're standing on that road," he said.

"I would have preferred our sources to identify themselves and make a clean breast of the problems," Kliever said following the two-hour meeting. "That option simply wasn't available."

Kliever said that "under the circumstances, we had no alternative" but to promise immunity and confidentiality to those involved in the investigation. He said neither the school nor the NCAA has the name of the booster allegedly responsible for $61,000 in payments to players.

While some students at the forum expressed hope for the future of SMU football, several others said the school was being punished for the actions of a few people.

"Everybody feels very victimized," second-year law student Doyle Glass said.

Pearlman, a third-year law student, said students resented the administration's agreement to grant immunity, "not because we want to be vindictive, but for us to carry on with a taint-free program. I find it truly difficult to comprehend the decision that was made."

Pearlman said that, without knowing who was involved in this episode, there's no guarantee the violations won't occur again.

Valvano Says That Pack Deserves Bid

RALEIGH (AP) — North Carolina State coach Jim Valvano says he doesn't know if his Wolfpack will be going to a post-season tournament, but he believes they deserve it.

"I really feel good about the end of the season," Valvano said Monday after North Carolina State defeated Chicago State 86-78. "If we had two more wins this year, we'd be exactly where we've been the last few years. I'd like to think that we'd be in a post-season tournament. I think we will, I think we deserve that."

Junior point guard Vinny Del Negro scored 18 of his career-high 30 points in the last 10 minutes to give the Wolfpack their third win in a row.

Senior forwards Benny Bolton and Mike Giomi, playing their final home games for the Wolfpack, added 17 and 11 points respectively as North Carolina State upped its record to 17-14.

Junior Center Darren Guest paced the Cougars, now 11-17, with 24 points. Junior guard Kenton Terrell chipped in with 14 points, Shawn Balark and Tyrone Dowd had 11 apiece, and Stanley Jones added 10.

The Wolfpack was trailing 63-61 with 10:33 left when Del Negro scored 11 points to give North Carolina State a 73-66 lead with 5:41 left. A 3-pointer by Dowd and dunks by Fred Shepard and Guest led the Cougars close to within 75-73 with 4:18 left, but they could get no closer.

The Wolfpack hit seven of 10 free throws down the stretch to seal the victory, taking their biggest lead at 86-75 with 15 seconds left.

"Vinny hit some critical shots down the stretch; he really had a great game," Valvano said. "They were giving us the outside shot and Vinny was able to hit it."

Chicago State coach Bob Hallberg said the Cougars showed they were capable of playing basketball on a national level by staying with an ACC team.

"The game itself boiled down to one thing, our inability to hit the free throws in the second half," Hallberg said. "If we could have made our free throws in the second half, I think we could have won the ballgame."

Chicago State was two of 11 from the free throw line in the second half.

reached a level this year where we're no longer intimidated by anybody."

"Three games in three days is tough on any young guys," Navy Coach Pete Herrmann said.

Neither team shot well from the floor — Navy made only eight of 25 first-half shots and finished with a 19-for-48 outing, and the Seahawks connected on 22 of 58 field-goal attempts. But Herrmann said the Midshipmen made up for their lack of accuracy in another way.

"We know we struggled offensively," he said. "But we're very proud that we could dig in and come up with the defensive effort necessary to win the championship."

Robinson, who missed his first three shots, had 15 of his game-high 23 points in the second half. He also contributed eight rebounds, five blocks and three steals.

Senior center Brian Rowsom, the Seahawks' career scoring and rebounding leader, finished with 15 points and 13 rebounds. Anderson, a senior guard, added 10 points and four steals.

Robinson was joined on the all-tournament team by Anderson, Liebert and Rowsom, as well as two players from the losing semifinal teams, Richmond's Steve Kratzer and Eric Brent of James Madison

Irish Have Rebounded From Bad Start

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — At the beginning of the college basketball season, Notre Dame's Fighting Irish didn't show much fight.

"When we played Western Kentucky, we were a horrible basketball team," Coach Digger Phelps said of the Irish's season-opening loss last December.

But things have certainly changed for Notre Dame. The Irish moved into the national rankings in the No. 20 spot this week after upsetting DePaul and captured their 20th victory Monday night by defeating Brooklyn, 76-57.

"We're excited about our 20th win, especially with the problems we had at the beginning of the year," said Phelps, whose Irish were the only ranked team to play Monday night.

Brooklyn Coach Mark Reiner attests to Notre Dame's ability to play hard despite the loss of four seniors to graduation and a key freshman to Proposition 48.

"Notre Dame is one of the hottest teams in the country right now," Reiner said. "Sometimes you feel good playing teams like this. They didn't come out and overpower us, but before we knew it, they were up by 10."

Donald Royal led the Irish, 20-7, with a game-high 20 points, including 8-for-9 on the free throw line.

"Our goal, of course, was to get 20 wins," Royal said. "But to be honest, I really had no idea how many we'd win. We were blown out by Western Kentucky. We had serious doubts then."

Frank Gregov led Brooklyn, 10-17, with 18 points. Keith Grady, the Kingsmen's leading scorer with an 18.2-point average, failed to score in the first half and finished with six points.

With six minutes left, Brooklyn pulled to within 61-51 on a pair of Gregov free throws. But Notre Dame scored 11 straight points, including six from Royal, and the Kingsmen's effort to catch up faltered for good.

Notre Dame opened the second half with seven consecutive points after Brooklyn pulled within nine points, 38-29, at the half.

The Irish substituted freshman players freely midway through the first half after the starters built a 10-point lead.

Notre Dame improved its lead to 22-10. But the Kingsmen fought to within 28-23 on the shooting of Gregov and Kirpatrick before the Irish starters took the floor again.

Four free throws from Royal extended Notre Dame's halftime lead.

Others

Senior forward Dave Kipfer scored 17 of his season-high 20 points in the first half to lead the Providence to a 97-80 Big East win over Villanova. Senior guard Billy Donovan added 28 points and a game-high 11 assists for the Friars, scoring 10 straight Providence points in the waning minutes of the game from the free-throw line.

Ex-Houston Coach Admits Giving His Players Cash

HOUSTON (AP) — Former University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman admitted to investigators that he gave cash to his football players on occasion, but never more than $35, according to a memorandum released by the school.

Yeoman, who resigned last fall after 25 years as coach, defended his actions on grounds the money was given in small amounts and generally for humanitarian purposes.

The memo, released Monday, quoted Yeoman as saying he gave money to players in order to pay for such things as gas for their cars, utilities or rent for players' parents.

"For example, if one of the player's parents could not pay rent and were about to be evicted, Coach Yeoman would provide the money for that month's rent," the memorandum written last July says.

In such circumstances, money was given directly to the parents and not to players.

The admissions by Yeoman were released in the memorandum as a result of a school investigation by the Houston law firm of Lidell, Sapp and Zivley, which looked into allegations that Yeoman and his assistant coaches had paid players in violation of NCAA rules.

The former coach told the investigators that some of the money came from his own pocket, and that occasionally he called on alumni to contribute money.

"I have no comment now, tomorrow, next week or next month," Yeoman said Monday. Attorneys for the school said they would withhold comment pending completion of the NCAA investigation, which is in its preliminary stages.

The in-house investigation began after several former Cougar football players said that, while on the team, they either received cash from coaches, bought gasoline with the coaches' school credit cards, or had car repairs made free of charge through arrangements made by the coaches.

Some former players also cited payments for a wedding, an abortion and rent. All would constitute violations of NCAA rules.

Yeoman, who was replaced Jack Pardee, is now in charge of athletic fund-raising as a special assistant to University President Richard Van Horn.

Krause Gets First Place

GREENSBORO — Jason Krause of Greenville captured first place in the 14-and-under age group in the State Racquetball Tournament, held this past weekend in Greensboro.

Krause, 12, the son of Jeff and Cathy Krause, won out in a field of six other competitors for the state title. He also competed in the 12-and-under age group, where he finished second.

It marked the second state title for Krause, who won the 12-and-under group two years ago.

Missouri Valley Conference

Byron Boudreaux made a three-point shot with 25 seconds left to break a 56 tie and David Moss added two free throws as Tulsa defeated Southern Illinois 61-56 in the semifinals of the MVC playoffs.

The Golden Hurricane will face Wichita State in Wednesday's championship game. Sasha Radunovich scored 18 points, including a game-winning jump shot with 38 seconds to play, to lead Wichita State to a 56-53

SNOW HILL — A benefit basketball tournament for the Greene County Special Olympics will be held March 13-15.

The round-robin tournament will be played at the Snow Hill Junior High School.

A $75 entry fee is being charged for teams participating.

Big East Move?

SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — The growth of the Big East Conference basketball tournament has been helped by the glare and attention of holding it at New York City's sports temple, Madison Square Garden.

But, Syracuse University Coach Jim Boenheim thinks it's time for the show to go on the road.

"We don't need the Garden anymore," said the veteran coach, who is upset that the league is negotiating to hold the conference tournament at the Garden through 1991.

"When we went there for the first time, we needed it. We needed New York," said Boenheim. "I think it's time we start moving it to other (Big East) cities."

Tenth-ranked Syracuse will open the tournament Friday afternoon against Villanova in one of four quarterfinal games. The league's last two finishers, Boston College and Connecticut, will meet in a playoff Thursday night for the eighth spot in the tournament and the opportunity to play Georgetown, the tourney's top seed, on Friday.

Syracuse, 24-5 overall, finished the regular season conference campaign with a 12-4 mark and tied with 11th-ranked Pittsburgh and the Hoyas for first place. The Orangemen will play as the tournament's third-seeded team because they lost both league games to Pitt and Georgetown.

Boenheim said it was necessary to move the tournament to the Garden in 1983, after holding it at Providence, Syracuse and Hartford during the conference's first three years of existence.

"We needed the publicity," he explained.

That is no longer the case, said Boenheim, who argued the tournament's popularity would continue no matter where the games were played.

"It's a tremendous homecourt advantage for St. John's. I think St. John's was 1-3 or 2-3 in the tournament before they moved it to New York. Since then, they're like 10-3," he said.

Actually, the Redmen have gone 9-2 since 1983, playing in three of the four championship games and winning two of them, including last year's 70-69 thriller over Syracuse.

The Big East is currently renegotiating with Madison Square Garden officials for a new three-year contract to replace the one set to expire after the 1988 tournament, said Chris Plonsky, the league's director of public relations.

"Playing at another site has been brought up in the past because of the location and that some people feel St. John's has an advantage," she said. "But people realize it became the star-spangled event it has because it went to New York. I'm sure the athletic directors know that. It's the toughest ticket in New York. For four days, it corners the market in publicity in New York."

Boenheim agreed.

"No question it has become the event it has because of New York," he said. "It's easy to get to and it generates a large amount of publicity. But we don't need that publicity anymore."

George Hamilton Is Playboy Agent In CBS' 'Spies' Debut

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — In his newest series, George Hamilton portrays a playboy spy who apparently gets his cloak and dagger from Gucci.
Hamilton stars as Ian Stone, a sophisticated rogue who lives high on the expense account to maintain his cover as a carefree member of the jet set.
"Spies," which makes its debut Tuesday night on CBS, is a spook sendup that aims for laughs, not revelations about the intelligence industry.
Barry Corbin, as the head of "the company," is concerned about Stone's high living and penchant for disobeying orders.
The boss sends out a bright-eyed rookie played by Barry Kroeger to keep Stone in line. Hamilton says the comedy works because of "chemistry" between himself and Kroeger.

"They're thinking of getting rid of Stone, but the kid protests that he's a legend," said Hamilton. "So they send him out to take care of me. And the chemistry between me and this young actor works so well. I think the show depends on that fragile thing, chemistry."
"He came out of 'Saturday Night Live.' So many times I've depended on him. I'd say, 'What do you think?' He has a great sense. Now I'm having a movie written for the two of us. I've done at least 50 movies, and I don't think I've had the right chemistry more than three times."
Six episodes of "Spies" have been made for the spring tryout.
In the meantime, Hamilton has taken off for Tucson, Ariz., to star with Elizabeth Taylor and Tom Skerritt in the CBS movie "Poker Alice." Miss Taylor plays a religious woman who wins a bordello in a card game. Skerritt is a bounty hunter who falls under her spell, and Hamilton is her cousin and closest friend since childhood.
"She's been disowned by her very proper Boston family because she's a compulsive gambler," Hamilton said. "We have a platonic relationship, although we sleep in the same bed. I have to kill a few guys because of the vulgar liberties they take with her. I've never played this kind of character before."

Hamilton's most recent series was ABC's "Dynasty," which he left about a year ago.
"The original concept when I went into 'Dynasty' was that I would be a ne'er-do-well director who was going to help women to become a star," he said. "He had more larceny in mind than talent. But it ended up something quite different. He had a face made over to look like Krystle. They put him in the attic and it became 'The Collector.' I wondered, how did I end up on 'Dynasty' in the upstairs attic? They told me it was going to be very glamorous."
"I was supposed to do eight shows but it got extended. I thought it was because of my wonderful talent but it was because they were introducing 'The Colbys.' They finally dropped the story. They were wonderful to me. I was never unhappy, but the plot was so ludicrous."
In the 1960s, he was in something of a forerunner of the prime-time soap about love and greed and treachery among the super-rich, "The Survivors," which later turned into "Paris 7000."
"The story goes that the show was born when novelist Harold Robbins pitched the idea to the president of ABC in a skyscraper office, gazed off, saw a boat on the Hudson River, and began, 'I see a yacht in the Mediterranean...'"
"The Survivors" also starred Lana Turner. It turned out to be ahead of its time.
"I had the highest salary of anyone in television at the time," Hamilton said. "I got $17,500 a week, plus 'sweeteners.' Lana and I were kind of pitted against each other. I made a larger salary. I said I didn't want top billing."
"Then in a few months when they folded the show I was the only one kept. Not because of my talent, but because I had a play-or-pay salary. So they put me to work on another show, 'Paris 7000.' They said I would be an embassy official in Paris helping old ladies. I went to work the next Monday."
Hamilton starred in two movie spoofs, "Love at First Bite" and "Zorro, the Gay Blade," and hopes to do a sequel to "Love at First Bite" with Susan Saint James.

Management Takes Over

NEW YORK (AP) — Management employees at ABC and CBS filled in for hundreds of striking news writers and editors as the two broadcast giants sought to keep the walkout from affecting their news operations.
ABC's Peter Jennings and CBS's Dan Rather appeared on their evening newscasts Monday. Neither anchorman is a member of the striking Writers Guild of America, which represents 525 news-related employees.
Jennings, who mentioned the strike on his newscast, called it "one piece of economic news we would rather not be reporting this evening."
"Those people on strike are our co-leagues and our friends, and we hope it is resolved very soon," he said.
Negotiations between the networks, which were bargaining together, and the guild broke down early Monday after a three-year contract expired. Union members had voted 420 to 29 last week to authorize a strike, and picket lines went up in the morning.

Group spokesman George Schweitzer, referring to the management job cuts.
The Writers Guild represents writers, editors, production and desk assistants, researchers and graphic artists at the networks and stations. Their minimum pay ranges from $274 per week to $790 per week, said union spokesman Martin Waldman.

NBC's news writers are members of another union and that contract doesn't expire until March 31. Those talks were to begin today, according to Day Krolik, NBC's vice president for labor relations.
The strike is the first against the two networks since they came under new cost-conscious management.
During the past year, more than 1,200 management positions and an estimated 300 hourly positions were eliminated at CBS, and about 1,300 jobs have been cut at ABC since it was taken over by Capital Cities.
"This has nothing to do with money. It is entirely job security," said Les Blatt, 42, a 19-year employee at ABC and a writer for "World News Tonight," who was on the picket line.
Spokesmen for both networks said the strike would not affect operations as management employees were filling in for the strikers.
In addition to the ABC and CBS national news operations, seven radio and television stations owned and operated by the networks in New York, Chicago, Washington and Los Angeles were struck.
The networks are seeking major concessions including the right to fire or lay off employees at will, without cause and without the worker's recourse to arbitration. They also are seeking the unlimited right to use temporary and part-time employees and to have on-air people write for others besides themselves.
Ms. Mangan issued a statement saying the networks presented no final offer, made no money offer at all, and stuck to their original proposals, which she said would effectively gut the contract.
"Our proposals are not inconsistent with what has been going on at CBS for a year," said CBS Broadcast

Willis Hurt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A skiing injury will keep actor Bruce Willis off the set of the popular ABC-TV series "Moonlighting" for about a week.
Willis, 32, broke his collarbone Sunday on a run down a slope at Sun Valley, Idaho, said Paul Bloch of the Rogers & Cowan agency. Bloch didn't know anything else about the accident, but described Willis as a good skier.
He returned to Los Angeles with his left arm in a sling but in "very good spirits," Bloch said.

Key Notes
 On this day in 1931, Francis Scott Key's "Star Spangled Banner" became the national anthem. Actually, Key only wrote the lyrics for the song. The music was written in 1777 by John Stafford Smith, an Englishman. Smith wrote the song for the Anacreontic Society, a social club in London. The original lyrics praise the joys of love, music and wine. The melody quickly became popular in the United States. By 1820, 84 different sets of lyrics were being sung to the melody.

DO YOU KNOW — What is the U.S. national flower?
MONDAY'S ANSWER — The "Big Three" are General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

 Declarer drew trumps by cashing the queen and the table's other master trump, then led another club. His analysis was confirmed when East rose with the ace and continued the suit; East's failure to return a spade made it clear that he had begun with a singleton spade. When West followed, the count was complete and declarer could claim.
 West was known to have started with six spades, two hearts and at least three clubs, so he could have no more than two diamonds. Declarer cashed the ace and king of the suit, then had the choice of either throwing East in with a diamond to force that defender to lead a minor suit for a ruff-sluff, or throwing West in with a spade to eventually force a ruff-sluff that would enable declarer to get rid of his losing diamond.

Therefore, declarer took his ace of spades. Since he was doomed to defeat if West had the ace of clubs, at trick two declarer crossed to dummy with a high trump, led a

Shultz, Chinese Trade Pledges Of Stability In Governments

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer
BEIJING (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz and top Chinese leader Deng Xiaoping exchanged assurances today that internal political problems that have shaken both governments are over.

Shultz told a news conference that Deng and other senior Chinese leaders convinced him that a current campaign against western liberal ideas should not be viewed "as a return to the restrictions and oppressions of the not-too-distant past" in China.

Shultz also said: —He welcomed a proposal by Kremlin leader Mikhail Gorbachev to eliminate medium-range missiles from Europe, and he might meet soon with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze, although no date has been set.

—The Chinese, who U.S. officials say are the largest suppliers of arms to Iran, apparently were not swayed by his call for them to suspend the shipments as a means of helping end the Iran-Iraq war. The Chinese deny they are selling the weapons.

—He opposed the expulsion of Chinese journalists from the United States in retaliation for China expelling two reporters recently.

—He would not discuss the Iran-Contra affair pending a scheduled speech Wednesday night by President Reagan on a report issued last Thursday by the Tower commission.

In the opening minutes of the meeting between Deng and Shultz, reporters heard the secretary of state assure the Chinese leader that President Reagan had dealt effectively with the Iran-Contra affair by appointing former Senate Majority Leader Howard Baker as his chief of staff.

Reagan, said Shultz, "had a rough patch, but he's dealt with it very swiftly."

Shultz, in a later speech in the port city of Dalian and at his news conference in Beijing, urged China to continue efforts to introduce market forces into the economy and to open China to western ideas, capital and technology.

"Closed societies will fall behind and wither," Shultz said in a speech at a joint U.S.-Chinese management training center in Dalian.

The city was the scene of a minor demonstration last month, part of a wave of unrest by students in more than 12 cities advocating that western democratic ideas be introduced along with economic reforms.

Reaction against those demonstrations led to the Jan. 16 ouster of Communist Party Secretary Hu Yaobang, and called into question the future of the reform movement.

Deng told Shultz that "as for the troubles we recently encountered, they are also finished." However, Deng also said, "they could exist for a long time."

In his meeting with Shultz, Deng sought to portray himself as a pragmatist, said one U.S. official, quoting the Chinese leader as saying: "Some people say I am a reformer. Others say I am a conservative. I just believe in seeking truth through facts."

Deng, receiving Shultz in the Great Hall of the People, expressed sympathy for President Reagan, comparing the president's difficulties over the Iran-Contra affair to the Watergate scandal that forced the resignation of President Richard Nixon and to a financial scandal that toppled Japanese Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka.

Nixon and Tanaka are still regarded as great statesmen and old friends of China because of their roles in restoring relations between their countries and China.

Associating the names of Nixon and Reagan was probably intended as a compliment by Deng, although in the past the Chinese leader has criticized Reagan for selling advanced U.S. arms to the nationalist government in Taiwan. Mainland China claims Taiwan, and Deng has described U.S. support for the island as the main obstacle to better U.S.-Chinese relations.

Shultz said he had discussed with the Chinese a statement by Gorbachev in favor of eliminating U.S. and Soviet intermediate-range missiles in Europe and allowing only 100 such Soviet warheads in Asia and the same number on American missiles in the United States.

Gorbachev balked at the same formula at the Iceland summit last October, arguing that any deal should include a promise by Reagan to curb research on "Star Wars" space-based defenses, formally known as the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Shultz said both the Chinese and Americans "would like to get the number (of medium-range missiles) down to zero" in Europe and Asia.

Asked whether he would meet soon with the Soviet foreign minister, Shultz said: "as far as any travel by me is concerned, Mr. Shevardnadze and I have an agreement when there is something that we should meet about that would be worthwhile, we'll go out of our way to find the time and arrange for us to do that."

"I am anxious as I am sure he is to move things thing forward if we can," he said.

"I think the development of identifying intermediate-range missile talks as an area for potential agreement without reference to the other talks is a positive development," said Shultz. "It's something we have advocated consistently. And we are glad to see this statement by General Secretary Gorbachev."

Earlier, Shultz warned that some actions by Beijing could shake the confidence of U.S. businessmen in China's modernization and thereby jeopardize the supply of American capital and technology which is helping to drive the transformation.

American firms have invested more than $1.5 billion in China, said Shultz, a rate of investment exceeded only by Hong Kong.

"More than ever before, the economic well-being of all nations is dependent upon their ability to adapt and compete within an open and growing world economy," he said. "Closed national markets, no matter how big, are no longer large enough to ensure a competitive and prosperous economy."

Craxi Ready To Quit

ROME (AP) — Following months of squabbling within his coalition administration, Premier Bettino Craxi was expected to resign as leader of Italy's longest-lived government since World War II.

Craxi, the nation's first Socialist leader, last week told coalition leaders that he would make a "political communication" to the Senate today, a phrase which was interpreted as meaning he would offer to resign.

President Francesco Cossiga would have to accept Craxi's resignation before it became final. His resignation could lead to early parliamentary elections, or political leaders could try to re-form the same coalition of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Republicans, Liberals and Social Democrats under a new premier.

The coalition already has been revived twice — when Parliament rejected a finance bill last summer, and in October 1985 after falling apart over Italy's handling of the Achille Lauro affair.

The Christian Democrats, Italy's largest party and a coalition member, say Craxi agreed last June to turn over the premiership to someone from their ranks in March 1987.

But Craxi, who has led Italy's 45th postwar government since August 1983, says such an accord is "non-existent."

Craxi's objections in recent weeks to an automatic transfer of power from his party aggravated divisions among coalition partners.

Italian press reports have said the Socialists would agree to let a Christian Democrat lead the coalition only if Craxi's party received the posts of treasury minister and defense minister, now held by a Christian Democrat and a Republican, respectively.

Earthquake Drives Thousands From Homes In New Zealand

AUCKLAND, New Zealand (AP) — Hundreds of strong aftershocks rattled New Zealand's North Island today following a powerful earthquake that drove thousands from their homes, damaged a major earthen dam and injured at least 25 people.

Police said two people were missing after the Monday afternoon quake that tore a mile-long fissure through rolling pastures and woodlands. A team of 40 hazardous waste experts was dispatched to investigate reported spills of toxic chemicals.

"We're getting at least one earthquake a minute appearing at the Tarawera seismometer," said Peter Wood, a state geologist. He said, however, he did not expect another major earthquake to follow.

New Zealand lies on a major fault line known as the Pacific Rim of Fire where earthquakes are common. Monday's quake was the most powerful to strike the nation in 19 years.

ment set up a fund to help victims and vowed to subsidize a public relief appeal "dollar for dollar."

The quake was centered about nine miles off North Island in the Bay of Plenty, roughly 250 miles north of Wellington, the capital, and 150 miles southeast of Auckland. About 50,000 people live in the affected northern coastal area, which includes the towns of Edgecumbe, Te Teko, Kawerau and Whakatane.

The Matakina earthen dam suffered surface cracks and had to be drained late Monday as a precaution against a possible collapse that might have flooded villages downstream. The dam later was declared structurally sound.

Abandoned Ship Holds Dynamite

CHERBOURG, France (AP) — A Danish freighter carrying 400 tons of dynamite drifted in the busy shipping lanes of the English Channel today after being abandoned by its crew, and French authorities were considering blowing it up, maritime officials said.

The Hornstrand was heading south toward the Atlantic and was off Cherbourg, France, when it reported heat was building up in a hold from which smoke was rising, a Cherbourg maritime center official reported.

NIE Programs Used To Bring Students Up To The Minute

During her time spent as coordinator of language arts and social studies for the Pitt County schools, Sue Branch says she has become well-acquainted with The Daily Reflector's Newspaper In Education program.

She's even become a fan, because, as she puts it, the educational tools offered by NIE can help teachers bring their students up to date, up to the minute and closer in touch with their communities.

Math, social studies, language arts, all classes and all students — there's no distinction — can benefit from use of materials designed to link newspapers to education, she said.

Among programs offered by the Reflector's NIE department are News Currents, a lending library and educational sessions for teachers and students alike.

A long-standing feature of the Reflector's NIE program, News Currents materials are designed to motivate students to read the newspaper in and out of the classroom.

Each month, a new News Currents package is generated providing film strips and correlated workbooks to assist teachers in instruction. News Currents is effective in grades three through 12. Instruction is teacher-guided and can take as little as 15 to 20 minutes each week or can be expanded to fill longer class periods.

The Reflector lending library is composed of films, posters, games and lesson units, all created to better acquaint the child with the world around him and the effect that newsmakers can have on his life.

A sampling of materials includes activity cards for students K-8 provided by The Courier Journal and The Louisville Times in Kentucky as well as a film on efforts to save the dwindling elephant population. News-o, a bingo-type game designed to teach the parts of the newspaper and newspaper jargon, is available, too. Grades K-12 are addressed.

Tours, classroom visits and teacher workshops that partially fulfill re-accreditation requirements also are available or can be arranged. Information on tours of the newspaper plant, classroom instruction and workshops are available from Diane Williams, Reflector NIE coordinator, 752-6166.

In addition, Ms. Williams posts lending library materials through the school mail system twice monthly to teachers requesting loans.

For a complete lending library list or further information on NIE programs, write NIE, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 1967, Greenville, N.C., 27835.

DEVELOPING SKILLS — Eric Ruffin, a sixth grader at Wellcome Middle School identifies the who, what, when, where and why of an article found on the front page of The Daily Reflector. The activity is part of a program being run by Wellcome Middle to improve students' language arts skills. (Reflector Photo)

Wellcome Middle School

Improving Language Skills With Newspapers

The facts don't lie.

•For the past several years students at Wellcome Middle have scored below the state and county level in language arts skills.

•More than half the students at Wellcome Middle do not have access to newspapers in their homes.

The list goes on, but those two deficits in themselves were all the encouragement Principal Ed Tadlock needed. It was all that was required to prompt the Wellcome Middle principal to roll up his sleeves and face the challenge — the truth that his students just weren't doing well enough.

What he did no one else has done. But that's not why he did it. He did it for his students, for their futures. He didn't do it alone.

Five days a week for three weeks, sixth graders at Wellcome Middle meet in a classroom with instructor Betty Rayle where they work together putting the principal's concept into practice.

Simply called Reading/Speech the required course is designed to promote oral and listening communication skills, increase student awareness of current events and motivate students to cultivate sustained reading interests.

The strategies Ms. Rayle employs to accomplish this include speaking and listening to others, reading and discussing events happening around the world, seeing News Currents filmstrips provided by the Daily Reflector and listening to a novel Ms. Rayle reads aloud.

That's a pretty big order for only three weeks of instruction, but through use of newspaper articles, literature selections and films, Ms. Rayle hopes to turn out the kind of communicators Tadlock envisioned when he dreamed up the class.

Speakers who don't slump, shuffle, stutter, giggle, wink or blink; conversationalists who know their topics well, know where and how to find the information they need, and listeners interested enough in what their fellow students have to say that they, too, control their giggles, snickers and winks.

"It's a beginning for these kids. A beginning that Ms. Rayle and all the other teachers who are working on this same concept in their social studies and language arts classes that makes the students more able to stand up and talk," Tadlock said.

Although the school term is not quite finished, Ms. Rayle said she has seen some improvement in student performance already. And while she said teaching the children how to speak in public, use a newspaper and become better listeners may not show results on language arts test scores right away, she said at the very least Wellcome Middle is giving its sixth graders the tools they need to do better in school and in the real world.

Solving Those Rainy Day Blues

Rainy Day? Kids driving you mad?

Take the advice of Dr. Helen Gay and pick up a newspaper. Doing something as simple as that could turn just another dizzily, pass-the-time-away day into a productive, fun time for the family.

An assistant professor in East Carolina University's School of Education, Dr. Gay recommends home use of newspapers to increase children's interest in their communities and to establish broader vocabulary skills. She also encourages her education students at ECU to use newspapers in a structured classroom environment.

“The newspaper is a very valuable, very available tool, that even little children can learn to use,” she said. “But of course,” she added, “you have to pick and choose materials suitable for each child's particular age and development status.”

Activities Dr. Gay suggests for parents and children are listed below. Don't stop at the end of her list, however. She suggests that you take involvement one step further and be creative, dream up a different approach, individualize the time you spend reading the paper with your kids.

•Have your children scan the front page of the newspaper for information on the important stories of the day, then have them compare what they read with the news spots on the 6 p.m. television news. This activity will increase vocabulary skills, encourage verbal communication about issues and increase a child's fund of information, according to Dr. Gay.

•Capitalize on the educational opportunities offered by each individual component of the paper. Have your children locate and learn to use the movie advertisement section, the television viewing calendar and the index. If your child is interested in sports, show him or her Scoreboard or one of the other regular sports information features in The Daily Reflector.

•Parents also can teach children how to get information out of a story without having to read the whole piece. Dr. Gay suggests that parents show children the headline and first and last paragraphs of a story, then see how much they can say about the article.

•Finding bargains and clipping coupons is always a favorite with children. “It makes them feel part of the family to help save money,” Dr. Gay said. Too, she added, the activity acquaints children early on with the value of money and the need to economize.

Newspaper Makeup, A Guide To More Informed Reading

Do you know where the editorials are located in your local newspaper? Without flipping through the sports section, can you tell which team won the big basketball game last night?

If you know how the front page of a newspaper is put together, you can.

An art and science within itself, newspaper makeup is based on the helping principle. Newspaper editors want to make their product as easy to read as possible. So with that end in mind, editors and composing room makeup artists put together each day's paper.

Two of the most readily visible techniques The Daily Reflector uses to guide its readers through the paper are the Index and Ears.

The Ears of the paper can be found at the extreme top of each front page, directly above the Flag or Logo. Traditionally boxes highlighted with color, the paper's ears draw attention to important news and sports stories located inside the paper. (Also called the Masthead, the logo or flag identifies the newspaper's name with a distinctive style of type so it can be easily recognized. Also included in the logo is information on cost, years of publishing and date of publication.)

Headlines serve as attention getters as well. In a very few words, each headline tells what is going on in the story below, affording readers the opportunity to decide whether or not they want to look at a particular news item. Headline size also tells a great deal about the importance of a story. For instance, a Head set in small type carries the message that the story it describes may not be as significant as the story opposite carrying a head twice the size.

Story placement reflects the importance of an article, too. Therefore, the most news worthy or Lead Story of the day is usually located at the top of the front page below the logo. Stories of lesser importance are located below the Fold or half-point of the front page. All stories placed on the front, however, are considered to be the most important a paper has to offer for a particular day whether they have local, state, national or international slants.

Datelines tell Reflector readers whether a story deals with local, state, national or international matters. Located at the beginning of articles originating from outside Greenville or the city in which a paper is published, the dateline indicates the name of the city where the action being reported took place. In cases where the name of a city is not commonly known, the capitalized dateline is followed by an abbreviation for the state, country or territory where the city is located. For example, while CHICAGO may stand alone, BEAR CLAW, Tenn., couldn't. Similarly, if a paper published a story about a recent meeting of President Reagan and Congress, the dateline would read WASHINGTON.

Often following the dateline of a story are the letters AP contained in parenthesis — (AP). AP is an abbreviation for Associated Press, a national and international Wire Service that supplies news from around the world to papers. Dating from 1848 the AP Wire Service today has at least one bureau in each of the 50 United States as well as bureaus in more than 80 foreign cities. The service translates its news into five languages — Spanish, French, German, Dutch and Swedish.

Wire or local, all stories have at least one component in common, the Lead. The first paragraph of a story or lead functions like a second headline of sorts, telling readers in short form the most important details of a story. Reporters use a variety of writing techniques such as metaphors and similes, alliteration and personification when constructing leads to whet the interest of readers.

This same short, but grabbing, writing style is also used when writing Cutlines. Traditionally placed below photographs, cutlines are headed up by a few capitalized words called the Tagline. Both the tagline and cutline are used to further explain news and feature events shown by photographs. Called Cuts during the hotlead days of newspapering, photos or photographs are used by newspapers to provide visual relief for readers, illustrate a story or as news reports themselves.

Two final components of news stories include Bylines and Jump Lines. The Byline of a story names the person or persons responsible for writing the story. Also often given in conjunction with the byline is the name of the paper or publishing operation the writer works for. For instance, bylines printed in The Daily Reflector might read as follows.

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

or
By ANITA GAMBOLIANTI
Smithsonian News Service

Activities

Lead Story — Look at the front page of The Daily Reflector. Read the lead story, the story found highest up on the page. Write a brief summary. Imagine you have one minute to tell the story on the evening TV news. Remember audience appeal is important. Have everyone in the class choose a different story from the newspaper and hold a half-hour news program. How well did your news program work?

Headline — Look at the front page of the newspaper and count how many headlines there are. Remember a headline is the large type above a story stating the story's main idea. The headlines you see on the front page were written by editors. Sometimes before the headline gets to the state it is in on the finished paper it has to be rewritten several times. Pretend you are rewriting the headlines in today's paper. Use as many synonyms as you can think of for the words used in the headline. Change the meaning entirely by substituting antonyms.

Lead Paragraph — The lead or first paragraph of every story tells the most important details that will be written about in the article. Choose a lead paragraph from an article on the front page. Create a crossword puzzle based on the words from the lead. Give the puzzle to a friend or classmate and see if he or she can identify the article from which the puzzle was created.

Dateline — If a story has a dateline, it is found at the very beginning of the lead paragraph. The dateline tells where the story came from if the news was not generated in the city in which a paper is published. Scan the front page and list all the different datelines in alphabetical order. Can you locate the datelines on the globe or on a map?

Wire Service — A wire service is a national or international news agency that distributes news and pictures over telephone wires to member newspapers and radio and television stations. Look at the front page of today's Reflector. Total the number of news stories. What percentage comes from the AP? What percentage comes from other news services? Compare the number of wire service articles to local articles. Discuss why different papers might carry more or less wire service stories.

Photos — Find a photo or photograph in the first section of the newspaper. Write a limerick about the picture. Remember a limerick has five lines, the first two rhyme and the last line is a surprise ending. Try to make your limerick as funny as possible.

Logo or Flag — Each newspaper has a logo or flag. It is its trademark. Decide on a name for your classroom paper. Design a logo. What type print would you use? What information would you want to put in your logo?

Cutline — Cutlines help tell what is going on in a news photo or they can be used to give additional information needed to understand a picture. Cut some photos out of the paper and tape the cutline that goes with each to the back of the picture. Give the photo to a friend or classmate and see if he or she can tell you what is going on in the picture without looking at the cutline. Look at the cutline and see how close his or her ideas were to the real story.

Index — Newspapers like most text books have a table of contents. Look for something in The Daily Reflector that gives you the same information that a table of contents would. What is it called? Where is it located? Why do you think the newspaper's editors chose to put the index where they did? Practice using the index, then organize a race with your friends to see who can find a particular piece of information the fastest.

Editorial — Newspapers basically exhibit two kinds of writing, news and opinion. Articles expressing the opinion of the writer are generally called editorials. Select an issue that is important to you. Write an editorial about the issue and draw a cartoon to accompany your piece. Which way of expressing your opinion do you like better?

Ear — Notice the names of the different sections of the newspaper. How well does the word ear fit the boxes giving information at the top of each newspaper front. If you could call the ears by another name, what would you call them? Why?
