School Attendance Rule Prompts Concern

By JANE WELBORN
Reflector Staff Writer

A split-vote school board decision allowing some families to bypass attendance rules for Pitt County's newly merged school system may bring renewed efforts by Greenville-area parents for new guidelines to assure "unity and growth."

Interviews today with some of the people involved in hearings on the school attendance plan, adopted Monday by an 8-7 vote of the school board, indicated a split along city-county lines — just as the board members cast their votes.

At the root of the dissension is an "unlimited" grandfather clause allowing all children in a family to attend the schools they are currently attending. The clause would be extended to unborn children.

The original county members of the consolidated board voted for the plan. Board members approving the plan were Ferrell Blount, Anne McGaughey, Steve Tripp, Walter Gaskins, Robert Halstead, Beverly Congleton and Jim Black. Chairman Mark Owens cast the deciding vote for the plan.

The original members of the city board, plus the three minority members appointed to the consolidated board, voted against the plan. The members casting no votes were Donovan Phillips, Frank Grooms, Alfreida Parker, Erma Carr, George Williams, Jack Wall and David Shackelford.

School Superintendent Eddie West said today the administrative staff attempted to incorporate as many interests as possible in drawing the attendance line plan.

"We tried real hard to accommodate as many points-of-view as we could," West said. "By having annual assessment and review and by having the short-term goals of trying to bring about the organizational changes and accompanying racial balance changes within all the attendance areas, we are trying to take seriously the comments made at the public hearings.

"We had several calls from people wanting to know where they are going to school," he said. "Unless people had been keeping up with it all along, they didn't know."

West said that "with 15 members on a board, you can't predict how the vote is going to go. They are individuals and I respect each one of them highly."

He said that the administrative staff is working to put the attendance line plan in motion.

"Tuesday, the school administrative staff sat down and outlined every task that had to be accomplished to put the policy into effect meeting the appropriate timelines," West said. "We are preparing an informational brochure for the community which will delineate the attendance lines and provide information in a format that will help the public understand the board's action regarding attendance lines.

White House Makes Last-Minute Plea To Keep Contra Aid Flowing

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hours before a House vote on delaying $40 million in military aid for Nicaragua's Contra guerrillas, President Reagan's national security adviser said today that a break in the aid pipeline would leave the guerrillas "at the mercy of the Sandinista forces."

The House prepared to vote late in the day on holding up the money it originally approved last year.

GOP leaders conceded a recent run of bad news had eroded support for the rebels. But leaders of both parties predict President Reagan will prevail in the end as there aren't enough opposition votes in the House to override a presidential veto of an aid suspension.

As the vote neared, national security adviser Frank Carlucci said after a meeting with House Republicans that any cutoff of funds "obviously would create enormous problems" for the Nicaraguan rebels.

"There are a number of people inside the country who went in based on a commitment from the U.S. government," Carlucci said. "If the rug is pulled out from under them, they are at the mercy of the Sandinista forces and that's a very serious problem."

The House vote is on a measure to delay until September the $40 million and to order the administration to account for all funds already sent to the Contras.

The Senate is expected to vote next week on a resolution to cut off the money altogether. The $40 million is "in the bank," said Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan.

Democratic leaders say they have a far better chance of killing Contra aid for future years, a prediction that will be tested over the next several months in votes on the $105 million Reagan has requested for fiscal 1988.

Many Republicans reluctantly agree with that, saying their efforts to sustain the aid program have been hurt by the turmoil of the Iran-Contra disclosures, the recent resignation of popular and moderate Contra leader Arturo Cruz and allegations of corruption within Contra ranks.

"That hasn't helped us," said House Minority Leader Bob Michel, R-Ill., speaking specifically of the Iran-Contra affair. "I have to be realistic when I see votes slipping away."

Democrats were divided about whether or not to take a stand on the $40 million aid installment or to let it proceed.

Sen. Christopher J. Dodd, D-Conn., said a fight over that money would be a waste of energy and political capital far better expended on a final battle to kill Contra aid once and for all.

FORE! — Greenville has shivered under winter-type weather this week, but the hint of summer's coming has driven people outdoors in search of fresh-air activities. House To Vote On Speed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Senate leader in the fight to allow states to raise the speed limit to 65 mph predicts the House will approve the measure next week, an action that likely would make the higher maximum speed inevitable.

The House vote was made possible Tuesday when House conferees on the bogged-down highway and mass transit bill agreed to a Senate request to break out the speed issue, which was the major obstacle left to compromise highway legislation.

Sen. Steven Symms, R-Idaho, who led the Senate fight for the higher speed and who sought the House vote, said, "I'm placing my chips on the House because with all the publicity on this issue, the elected representatives of the people will vote yes."

"There is tremendous pressure to complete this bill," said Rep. James J. Howard, D-N.J., a leading advocate for maintaining the current 55 mph speed limit. "We all want to get the highway money out to the states and get on to other things."

The agreement was the first of several that saw the conferees end their public meetings on the highway legislation and predict that their staffs would iron out the final details and produce a compromise bill early next week.

But Howard, the lead sponsor when the 55 mph limit became law in 1974, promised to fight against the proposed higher speeds on the House floor.

ECU Diabetes Study Unit Gets $2.55 Million Grant

An East Carolina University School of Medicine research program investigating the cause of the most common form of diabetes has been approved for funding by the National Institute of Health, according to medical school officials.

The federal agency, the nation's principal source of funding for biomedical research, will award the school $2.55 million to carry out the project over the next five years. The award is the largest research grant in the school's history.

Architect and principal investigator of the project is Dr. Jose F. Caro, professor of medicine and director of endocrinology and metabolism. Caro will coordinate the efforts of more than a dozen faculty member in the multidisciplinary project.

The wide-ranging research effort will target the cause of Type II, or adult-onset diabetes, which typically strikes people over the age of 40. It will not involve Type I, or juvenile-onset diabetes, which develops only in children and adolescents.

Type I diabetes is characterized by the inability of the pancreas to produce adequate amounts of insulin, a hormone important in the metabolism of carbohydrates, protein and fats. In Type I patients, insulin must be artificially supplied to the body, usually via injection.

Type II diabetes is a much more common disease, representing 90 percent of all diabetes cases. Unlike those afflicted with the Type I form, however, persons with Type II diabetes have normal or above-normal levels of circulating insulin, but for unknown reasons their cells are unable to use it. "The problem," said Caro, "is that the cells are blind to insulin. They are insulin-resistant."

It is this mechanism of cellular resistance to insulin which Caro proposes to investigate. At this time scientists are uncertain whether the problem is a defect in the cell wall itself or in the chemical messengers which relay information about the presence of circulating insulin to the cells.

Various members of the project will be examining this mechanism in minute amounts of live muscle and fat tissue obtained from both animal and human subjects.

ECU faculty members with major roles in the project include Lynis Dohm, Madhur Sinha, Hisham Barakat, Walter Pories, Ralph Ingersoll, Jan Silverman, Phillip Pekala, Paul Fletcher, David Dabbs, Edward Flickinger, Samuel Atkinson, Richard Marks, Kevin O'Brien, Melvin Swanson, Prabhakar Khazanie and Richard Israel.

The project will also include contributions from three of the country's most renowned experts on diabetes: Dr. Jeffrey S. Flier of Harvard medical school, Dr. Ira Goldfine of the University of California at San Francisco and Dr. Lawrence Rudel of Bowman Gray School of Medicine.

Caro is hopeful that acquisition of the grant is another step toward the establishment of a diabetes center at the ECU School of Medicine. Eight U.S. medical centers now bear that designation, which entitles them to priority status in the commitment of diabetes research funds. Researchers at the ECU School of Medicine have emphasized the study of the disease, in part because of its prevalence in eastern North Carolina.

In a more immediate sense, though, Caro hopes the research carried out over the next five years will yield important clues to understanding diabetes, and possibly point the way toward more effective treatment of the disease.

"Until we learn why the disease is there," said Caro, "we cannot be comfortable with our present-day therapy and we obviously will not be able to find a way to prevent it."

Grants Available

GRIMESLAND — About 30 persons attended a public hearing Tuesday night in Grimesland for an explanation of grants available to the town in conjunction with Tuesday's referendum on a proposed $700,000 water and sewer bond issue.

The purpose of the hearing was to inform citizens of the status of possible assistance grants.

Mayor Ann Hudson said presentation of the grants program was outlined to the audience by Connie R. Price of the Mid-East Commission. Price is senior land use planner for that agency.

Grants that could be available, if approved by officials at state level, include the Community Rehabilitation Grant, which primarily covers water and sewer needs for housing rehabilitation, and an Economic Development Grant, oriented to financial assistance in water and sewer categories to industries.

These two phases of possible grant assistance are areas of the Community Development Block Grant program.

An application for the town of Grimesland to be considered for grant assistance will be submitted by April 1, "and we should know by sometimes in May whether our application has been approved," Mrs. Hudson said. "The grants are totally free ones, with no matching funds required."

Honduras Putting U.S. Aid To Work To Improve Its Standards Of Living

By CARL MANNING
Associated Press Writer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — President Jose Azcona Hoyo's government is putting hundreds of millions of U.S. aid dollars to work to bring electricity, roads, jobs, schools and health clinics to Honduras' impoverished countryside.

The Central American country neighboring on Nicaragua and El Salvador has received $1.15 billion in U.S. aid since 1981, with $770.5 million going for economic development and the remainder for military assistance.

The funds have increased steadily over the years, commensurately with the U.S. military presence in the country as well as with the establishment of bases for Nicaraguan guerrillas — the Contras who are fighting Nicaragua's Sandinista government.

Since taking office a little more than a year ago, Azcona's main preoccupation has been with the Contras in southern Honduras, but they have promised to move their operations inside Nicaragua by late spring.

Honduras has never officially acknowledged that it allows the Contras to operate here and it has closed one eye to their presence.

The Contras' promise to move out has helped defuse a major domestic issue and permitted Azcona to look toward solving some of Honduras' own problems in his remaining three years in office:

- Unemployment is at 25 percent.
- Half the nation of 4.5 million people is without electricity.
- Illiteracy is estimated at 40 percent.
- The annual per capita income is about $800.

GUC Cites Load Savings

By STUART SAVAGE
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville Utilities Commission saved $187,578 in February through load management operations, the commission board was told Tuesday night.

Roger Jones, superintendent of GUC electric systems, said the savings resulted through load management operations between 7 a.m. and 8 a.m. on Feb. 10 — the time of Carolina Power & Light Company's system peak.

Jones said operation of radio-controlled load management switches on domestic water heaters produced $94,941 in savings, while voltage adjustments accounted for $87,422 in savings.

Operation of generators at the commission's water plant accounted for $2,491 in savings, while operation of generators at Procter & Gamble Paper Products resulted in a savings of $2,723.

Since January 1985, load management operations have saved the commission more than $3.14 million in wholesale power costs.

At the end of February, there were 8,330 load management switches installed on water heaters throughout the GUC system and 8,586 of the radio controlled switches on central air conditioning units. Customers that had the switches installed on water heaters and air conditioning units receive up to $40 credit on their utility bills during the four summer months.

Jones also reported that the new Frog Level electric substation was placed in service during February and said the new substation at Simpson should be in service by Thursday.

Commissioners took no action on a proposal to reduce connection fees on a new water main to be installed along the Belvoir Road. Instead, the board agreed to consider the proposal at a workshop meeting on March 31 after City Manager Gail Meeks raised questions about the legality of reducing the connection fees.

The sale of surplus property — including eight trucks, a car and other items — was approved. The auction was scheduled for 10 a.m. April 11 at the GUC operations center parking lot at 801 Mumford Road.

The board also approved the purchase of materials and equipment from low bidders, including: 75,000 feet of aluminum cable from Rigby Electric Supply Co. for $39,975; 50 padmount transformers from Westinghouse Electric Supply Co. for $49,500; 15 group-operated switches from Rigby Electric for $21,600, and a conventional tractor with trenches and backfill blade from Charlotte Ford Tractor Inc. for $23,297.

Farmville Residents Protest Planned Construction Of Apartment Project

By CAROL TYER
Reflector Staff Writer

FARMVILLE — Farmville citizens living near the intersection of Grimmersburg and Pitt streets at-

Council Agenda

A contract for consultant services to prepare a Community Development Block Grant application heads the list of items to be addressed Thursday in the regular session of the Greenville City Council.

Council members will also consider appointments to boards and commissions, a resolution to close a portion of 300 block of Hilltop Avenue and schedule a public hearing for April 9, a resolution authorizing the mayor to seek Section 18 Transit Grant assistance and enter an agreement with the N.C. Department of Transportation, and the sale of disposal parcels in the South Evans Community Development project.

Other matters to be addressed include the acceptance of Bethesda and John Hopkins drives for permanent maintenance, tax releases and refunds, acceptance of a planetarium donation from the U.S. Navy, adopting a supplement to the Greenville City Code, a 25 mph speed limit on Prince Road in Eastwood subdivision, and replacing a yield sign with a stop sign at the intersection of Elizabeth and West Fifth streets.

The council will also discuss an ordinance to abolish school zones on Chestnut and Myrtle streets and establish school zones on Spruce Street, Watauga Avenue, Halifax Street and Manhattan Avenue for Agnes Fullilove School, a supplemental agreement with Benefit Plan Services Inc. for additional supervisory services for the city's self-funded Health Care Plan, and a request from the city of Kinston to adopt a resolution in support of the first state farmer's market for eastern North Carolina to be located in Kinston-Lenoir County.

The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the third floor council chambers of City Hall, 201 W. Fifth Street.

Revival Friday

Bell Chapel Church will have revival services Friday at 8 p.m. with Charles Covil and Crusade Party as guests.

tended the Farmville commissioners' meeting Tuesday night to protest a proposed apartment complex in their neighborhood.

Jimmy Cowan and Durwood Wiggins, who have made plans to build 12 apartments units at 110 and 112 N. Pitt Street, were appealing a planning board disapproval of their site plan. The planning board decided in a Feb. 24 meeting that the presence of apartments in this neighborhood, located near three Farmville schools, would create too much traffic congestion in the area.

Residents of the area said they were unaware until this proposal came about that their area, now largely single-family dwellings, had been rezoned in 1982 to allow multifamily units. They asked why weren't they notified. Town Administrator Frank Bradham said that, in 1982, there was no law and no procedure for notifying by mail individual owners of property in an area being rezoned. The only public notice was two runnings of a legal notice in a newspaper. Now it is law and notifications are being made by mail, he said.

Action on the appeal was deferred until the April 7 meeting to give time for a traffic study in the area to be conducted, commissioners agreed.

A public hearing was held on whether to extend the city limits of Farmville to include a portion of U.S. 264A near Farmville Central High School. High school Principal Charles Long had requested the annexation so that the speed limit in the area can be lowered to 35 mph. Final action was not taken because only three board members were present and at least four affirmative votes are needed to annex property. Commissioners Oliver Murphrey and Alfred Williams Jr. both were absent because of illness.

A public hearing was conducted for reprogramming of 1984 Community Development Block Grant funds for resurfacing several streets. Crestwood Drive, one block of East Vines Street, a section of West Vines Street from Main to George streets, and South George Street from Wallace to Vines Street are to be included. The cost of the work is expected to be about $27,400.

It was announced that a special meeting will be held before the April 1 deadline to consider a flood damage prevention ordinance for the town. This ordinance is needed if the town is to continue as a participating municipality in the National Flood Insurance Program. Participation allows national flood insurance to be available to property owners.

It was agreed that the town will negotiate with preoperty owners on Blalock Street to buy property needed for rights of way, so new construction and paving can be done. The property owners involved are Joseph C. Griffin, Margaret Murphrey, Wiley and Linda Mayo, the Reba Carraway heirs, Ray Braxton and Wilton Duke. The proposed amount of each acquisition was $704 or less.

Purchase of a one-ton van through state contract was approved. The van will be used for a crash truck by the Farmville Rescue Squad. The cost will be about $14,000.

Public hearings were set for April 7 to consider the following rezoning requests: 912 S. Main St. from R-5 residential to neighborhood business; 1310 S. Main St. from light industrial to highway business; property on the north side of Anderson Avenue and on the west of Mount Moriah Holiness Church from light industrial to highway business; and a portion of the F.M. Davis heirs property from R-5 residential to highway business making shopping center a permitted use. All of these rezonings have been recommended by the planning board.

A proposal that a pay classification and organizational study of the town government be conducted by a paid consultant from the League of Municipalities was turned down by the board. They said they feel the organization of the town is in good shape and that any study needed can be conducted by the town administrator.

Approval was given to move the advertisement of 1986 taxes that are liens on real property to April 2. This is an earlier date than has been used in recent years.

It was announced that the water lines that will enable Farmville to supply water for Fountain residents have been completed and are being sterilized. When this is completely, probably before the end of March, water will begin flowing, Bradham said.

Correction

An ECU News Bureau release printed in Sunday's Daily Reflector incorrectly identified the coordinator of student teaching in the school of education at East Carolina University.

The coordinator is Dr. Marjorie Calhoun. Dr. Thomas A. Chambliss was former director of student teaching prior to a school of education reorganization last year.

Correction

The date of a workshop for parents of premature infants and chronically ill or developmentally disabled children to learn about support from other parents was incorrectly given in Tuesday's Daily Reflector.

The workshop will be held March 19, not March 12, in Room 2E92 of the Brody Medical Sciences Building on Moye Boulevard. For more information, call 757-3084.

Extend Limits

It is important for the Pitt County Commissioners and the Greenville City Council to cooperate on extending the city's extraterritorial limits to allow the Eastern Carolina Medical District to expand.

Objections to the expansion voiced at a recent public hearing on the issue should not deter the boards from seeking the extension. The comments were made by only two residents of the area affected. The future of the Medical District potentially affects every citizen in Pitt County.

The objections to the enlarged jurisdiction were not logical. Residents said the city already has too much control and should not be granted any more. The issue is not a question of control, it is a question of planning and progress.

Certainly the rights of property owners should be attentively reviewed and all legal considerations explored carefully. But it is the responsibility of the county commissioners, since they must endorse the expansion, to make sure the growth of this most important project is not impeded.

The Medical District is an exceptional issue that requires special handling and consideration. For the district to flourish and become the profitable resource the community envisions, it must have the property to expand. This means the city and county must work together to provide this room to grow. That requires Greenville's extraterritorial jurisdiction be extended so that planning and zoning requirements can be implemented.

The county commissioners should go ahead and publicly support the city's extension of limits so that planning for progress can proceed.

Protection Needed

The U.S. Supreme Court treated with one of the sensitive issues of our society last week in a ruling that protects people with contagious diseases from job bias.

The case did not deal specifically with AIDS, but it was seen as a ruling which will protect AIDS victims as they continue their careers.

The Supreme Court ruled 7-2 that recipients of federal aid cannot discriminate against persons with contagious diseases if they are otherwise qualified to continue work or participate in some activity.

The ruling can apply to government contractors and public schools. The ruling was hailed as a victory by civil rights groups who work with AIDS victims. It was seen as preventing the firing of a person solely because he has AIDS.

Labor law experts say the ruling places a heavy burden on employers to make decisions on an individual basis. However, a U.S. Chamber of Commerce attorney saw the ruling as reasonable. He said employers could make reasonable and rational decisions based on medical knowledge.

The decision, of course, applies to the whole broad range of diseases that we know to be communicable and its effects will have to be felt in the workplace before we know its impact.

It appears likely that employers who receive federal funds will have to show they have taken clear steps to make a determination before action is taken in individual cases. That precludes a blanket policy of dismissal from the job when a feared communicable disease is suspect. The steps that are developed by federal aid employers will be the pattern for all employers.

Not Trustworthy

The sentencing of Jonathan Pollard and his wife for espionage against the United States in behalf of Israel is beginning to sink into awareness of the Israeli public to an extent that apparently is not yet felt by most Americans.

The United States government says extent of damage to this country was "great" and vast amounts of "secret" information was sought out and betrayed to a country with whom a "special relationship" has long been a tradition.

Israel's government disavowed any role and blamed it all on "rogue" elements and a few adventurists. Nevertheless, that government saw fit to reward the air force officer who recruited Pollard with a highly-prized promotion.

No mention has been made of the possibility (or probability?) that others beside Pollard could have been supplying Israel with information that government would not have received through proper channels. Such tactics might be expected from unfriendly; and Israel's government was not exactly living the role of a trusted ally.

The unhappy conclusion must be the Israeli government is not to be wholly trusted. Seriousness of Pollard's misdeeds is indicated by the life imprisonment he received. His sponsors must be wondering if this country will "punish" them, too.

Public Forum

To the editor:

"Amerika" aroused varied interest as well as editorial criticism. Perhaps earned by the overdramatization of our possible situation over the next few years, and its focus on the apathetic attitudes of the people the individual liberties vouchsafed therein. My feelings are that it carried an important and timely message that presents to each of us an unusual opportunity to strengthen our appreciation for the great nation in which we live. What better time than the 200th anniversary of the Constitution which on Sept. 17, 1987, the United States will commemorate? This bicentennial year affords renewed opportunities to learn more of the divinely inspired charter of our liberty, to speak in its defense, to help preserve, protect and sustain it in the face of danger from evil designs toward destruction or change.

President Ezra Taft Benson has declared that "We as members of the Church Of Jesus Christ Of Latter-day Saints accept the Constitution as being divinely inspired, and the Lord justifies us in befriending it, and further that prophets beginning with Joseph Smith have loved and sustained the constitution." President Benson went on to say, "Because some Americans have not kept the faith with our founding fathers the Constitution faces severe challenges. Those who do not prize individual freedom are trying to erode its great principles. We believe the Constitution will stand, but it will take the efforts of patriotic and dedicated Americans to uphold it."

The nation's second President John Adams offered special insight when he said, "Our Constitution was made only for a moral and religious people. It is wholly inadequate to the government of any other."

Every citizen has a responsibility to exercise vigilance and to do his part to preserve the Constitution and safeguard the way of life it makes possible. May I encourage everyone to participate and become involved in this effort? Especially this bicentennial year.

To the editor:

In 1984, when the Greenville City schools and the Pitt County schools decided to merge, a position statement was prepared. Mark Owens, then chairman of the Pitt County School Board, presented the conditions for merger and Jack Wall, then chairman of Greenville School Board, accepted the conditional merger on behalf of the Greenville City School Board, whose members represented the people of Greenville. When the conditions of merger were accepted, it meant the conditions were met. It appears that the citizens of Greenville either were misinformed by the Greenville City School Board or did not comprehend the fact that it was a conditional merger and that there would not be a merger until these conditions were met.

The position statement is public record. The citizens of Greenville need to read it. Merger is based on conditions, not mere promises or emotionalism. Unless the conditions are met, there is no merger. This is fact.

There are numerous conditions, but due to space allowed, we will address conditions referring to capital outlay and grandfathering. Of the 14 conditions listed regarded capital outlay, Greenville City was to receive funds last. Let us reiterate: This was agreed to by the Greenville City Board of Education as a condition for merger.

The following quote comes from page 25 of the position statement that was accepted in 1984 by both school boards:

"That, in anticipation of consolidation of the two school systems, attendance lines would be 'grandfathered' for current students and future children of families in the Winterville and Belvoir schools until graduation."

Therefore, it is obvious that, unless these conditions are upheld, there is no merger. This was the agreement.

To the editor:

Change is often necessary and causes one to reflect upon our very existence. This evaluation enables us to establish goals and direction.

Many years ago, a group of innovative people had a desire for growth and respect. These individuals shared a specific goal to see their community incorporated, which Webster defines as "blending or combining thoroughly to form consistent whole." The goal became a reality when Grimesland was incorporated, thus nurturing positive change. Growth and prosperity were forefront in the minds of its creators.

On March 17, 1987, the citizens of Grimesland will be afforded the opportunity to determine their destiny in the proposed Wastewater Bond Referendum. If the issue passes with a majority vote, the town will be able to pursue the financing of a wastewater collection and treatment facility.

Although the opposition stresses that the benefactors of the proposed project will incur financial hardship, without investment, there are not rewards. Cost is inconsequential when considering the immeasurable value the facility would offer. The town would surely experience economic growth, real estate appreciation and, most notably, a resurgence of community pride.

The citizens of Grimesland will not only be deciding the fate of today, but the conditions for future generations as well.

Opportunity knocks, but seldom repeats itself. Vote your conscience on March 17 with awareness that the future depends on the rational decisions of today.

David Kyle Hodges, member Committee of Concerned Citizens for Passage of Wastewater Referendum, March 17, 1987

Hollywood No Longer Swinging

Hollywood is not the swinging place it was in days of yore. The fear of AIDS has made it the anti-bundling capital of the world.

The other night I was at a dinner table in Beverly Hills that was graced by the most beautifully turned out men and women in California. I was therefore surprised when they immediately declared where they stood on the matter of seeking out a love mate.

Idra Darkeyes announced that she was not only against having a long-term love affair, but was fearful of participating in one-night stands as well.

Clark Ablebody said he couldn't care less about making it with women, nor was he interested in how they felt about not making it with him.

The lady whose name was Sue said she'd rather be pushed over a Malibu cliff than bundle with a man. Her date said he wouldn't do it even if two uniformed policemen held him in a chokehold grip.

"Do they still do it back East?" my host asked me.

"No," I said. "We haven't done it since James Watt destroyed the environment."

"What do you do in the East in place of sex?" my hostess inquired.

"We study the Tower Commission report. The feeling back home is that it's much better to read about White House erotica than create your own." "I don't know anybody out here who does it anymore," Clark said.

"But," I protested, "if you people in California are so determined not to do it, why does everyone always dress up as if they want to?"

Sue said, "You have to pretend or they will think you have lost your sex appeal. Just because you don't do it doesn't mean that you can't look like you would."

The host said, "People don't need a sex drive to be attractive. You see these custom-made jeans I'm wearing? Cost me $800. To look at me you would think I'm the son of Casanova. What no one knows is you have to drag me along the freeway behind my BMW before I will fool around."

I said, "Is the table unanimous on California celibacy?"

Idra said, "Of course we are. Women are just not into sex anymore, and happily men feel the same way. The struggle at the door is over. Now when you have a date it's a race to see who can get home first to watch David Letterman."

Clark said, "I met a girl the other night who said she would bundle if the circumstances were right."

"What did you do?" the hostess asked.

"I reported her to the Surgeon General of the United States."

Strength For Today

Probably many people would prefer some other type of work than the work they are doing. Many of these people feel that they can never be happy as long as they are tied down to these tasks.

But one of the best prescriptions for happiness is constantly to cultivate a love for the things we have to do. There are some tasks in the careers of all of us which are unpleasant and can never be made into anything else. But in general, if we can find our joy in things in which our sphere of labor lies, we will find happiness indeed. The very happiest people in this country or in any other country are to be found in the walks of daily life — humble men and women who have learned to enjoy the things they have to do.

Nothing can give us happiness; we must find it where we are.

Gorbachev Working On Domestic Reforms, Foreign Policy

MOSCOW (AP) — In two years, Mikhail S. Gorbachev has steered the Soviet Union toward an arms control agreement, mapped out a rescue plan for the economy and opened a small window for social and artistic expression.

But the Soviet leader had said progress in changing the vast country has been painfully slow, and his campaigns for higher productivity and technological innovation have been met by resistance and indifference.

Gorbachev took control on March 11, 1985, a day after the death of Konstantin U. Chernenko, and became the fourth man in less than three years to hold the post of Communist Party general secretary.

A robust contrast to his aged and ailing predecessors, Gorbachev made foreign trips and traveled to distant regions of the Soviet Union to drum up support for his campaigns.

He held two summits with President Reagan. The first was in Geneva, where hopes for better superpower relations were kindled, and then there was the October meeting in Iceland when they failed to reach agreement on arms control.

In a speedy Kremlin housecleaning, Gorbachev replaced several old guard members of the Politburo with representatives of a younger generation that for the most part embraces his efforts toward broad change in Soviet society.

Some of the nation's most prominent dissidents, including Andrei D. Sakharov, have been released from prisons, labor camps or exile, suggesting to some that Gorbachev is confident enough to withstand criticism.

Emigration of Jews and dissidents, however, has not notably increased.

The 56-year-old leader appears in control of the party and government apparatus. But he is encountering some resistance at all levels — from workers not inspired by promises of a higher standard of living, from military conservatives who see no results from what they perceive as gestures to the West on arms control and from entrenched bureaucrats.

The extent of resistance is unclear. Officials tend to refer only to "shortcomings" in carrying out official policy or "insufficient attention" to the demands of the times, and the average Soviet does not publicly criticize the leadership.

Living conditions have not changed substantially, and the people still face long lines for meager supplies of food, consumer goods and quality entertainment.

If job performance is any indication of how seriously the workers are taking Gorbachev's efforts, the leader's problems are widespread.

The official Tass news agency reported last week that 60 percent of the country's heavy industries failed to meet January output targets because of tougher quality control.

Gorbachev's efforts toward what he calls "democratization" have been met with enthusiasm by the controlled media and by intellectuals. Much of the labor force, however, is unsure how the reforms will affect their daily lives.

The democratization campaign aims to encourage a freer exchange of ideas and broader participation in decision-making.

Here, too, Gorbachev has encountered opposition.

In a speech last month at a Kremlin meeting, Gorbachev disclosed he was facing opposition. But he took a firm stand and said the policies are irreversible.

"Democracy is not the opposite of order," he said. "It is order of a greater degree, based not on implicit obedience, mindless execution of instructions, but on full-fledged, active participation by all the community in all society's affairs."

The most visible change under Gorbachev has been his policy of openness, which has resulted in a flood of media reports criticizing many aspects of Soviet life, from food shortages to the misuse of alcohol and drugs.

Newspapers that rarely acknowledged even the most serious accidents and natural disasters now issue reports about fires, floods, shootings and black-marketeering.

Despite the volume of news on crime and social problems, many subjects remain off-limits and such things as the repressions under Stalin have been mentioned only vaguely.

When the world's worst nuclear accident occurred at the Chernobyl power plant in April, it went unreported in the Soviet Union for nearly three days.

Gorbachev has been credited with allowing a freer rein to writers, filmmakers, artists and performers, and several previously banned films and works by Soviet authors have been released over the last two years.

State commissions have been set up to review the works of Boris Pasternak, the Nobel literature laureate who died in official disgrace in 1960, and the unpublished songs and poems of the late Vladimir Vysotsky, who had a large underground following.

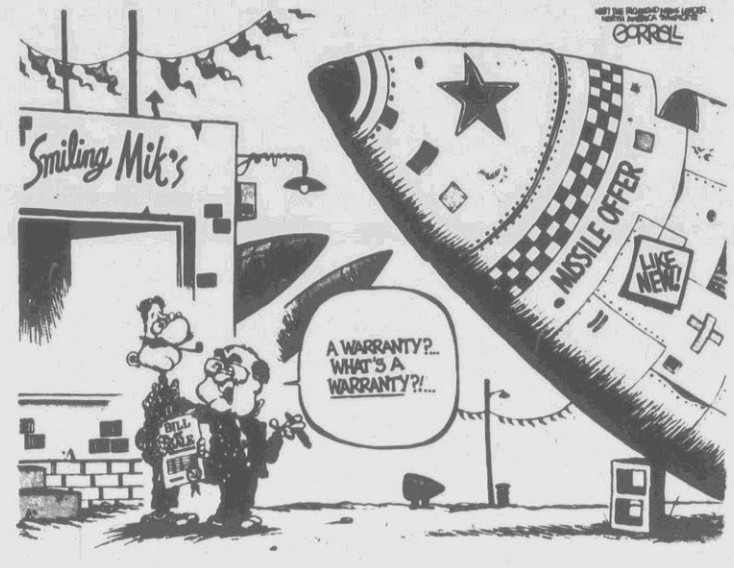

On the international front, Gorbachev has announced that the Kremlin is now willing to sign an agreement removing all superpower medium-range missiles from Europe.

There may be resistance from military leaders, who apparently pushed Gorbachev to abandon his 19-month halt in nuclear testing.

The Soviets have claimed they moved the arms control negotiations out of deadlock with the proposal on medium-range weapons by Gorbachev on Feb. 28. The United States reaction was generally positive.

If Gorbachev can sign an arms agreement with the United States in his third year as Soviet leader, it would increase his prestige at home and would also allow him to devote more resources to his economic reforms.

Carol J. Williams has been reporting from Moscow for The Associated Press since July 1984.

Greater Loss Than His Job

WASHINGTON (AP) — When a Washington power broker has a power failure, he or she loses more than the key to the executive washroom, the black limousine and the ear of the president of the United States.

As former White House Chief of Staff Donald T. Regan found out last week, the formerly powerful also slip in the pecking order of protocol, even when it comes to investigators wanting to ask questions about one's conduct in office.

Before he resigned, Regan had an appointment last week to give a deposition to the Senate select committee investigating the Iran-Contra affair.

That's where protocol stepped in. Some prospective witnesses are questioned by staff investigators only. Some are important enough to rank the presence of Chief Counsel Arthur Liman. Some get not only the chief counsel but senators as well. And in some cases, senators and investigators go to the witnesses rather than having the witnesses come to them.

Regan, as the president's chief of staff, was to get the full treatment.

The committee would go to him for a question-and-answer period at the Old Executive Office Building across a private drive from the White House.

And because he held the position he did, the panel would be represented not only by Chief Counsel Liman but by Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, the committee's chairman, and Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H., the vice chairman.

Then Regan resigned, the dictates of protocol shifted, and a new procedure was hurriedly adopted.

The committee would still go to Regan at the Executive Office Building, represented by Chief Counsel Liman.

But Inouye and Rudman would not attend.

"It's just protocol," Rudman explained.

For years, NCNB customers have had the option of paying only the interest each month until maturity with LineOne Equity. And it can actually cut your monthly payments in half. Because at NCNB, we believe that if you can qualify for the loan, you're more than capable of deciding how much to pay. And when to pay it.

After all, it's not really a 15-year line of credit if you have to start paying it back immediately, the way other banks require. Economic Forecast Hints At Reduced Revenues

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — An updated forecast indicates that economic growth will not generate enough money to pay for needed improvements in education and other state services, a legislator says.
"We need a lot of money, and I was hoping the projections would be better," Sen. Bill Staton, D-Lee, said Tuesday after results of a study predicting sluggish growth for the next two years were presented to a joint meeting of the House and Senate Economic Growth committees.

State tax collections rise or fall as the economy grows or shrinks. Robust growth creates huge surpluses that enable the Legislature to cut taxes or embark on ambitious spending programs.
But the forecast, sponsored by the University of North Carolina at Charlotte and First Union National Bank, predicts growth rates of only 2.5 percent for 1987 and 2 percent for 1988, with increases in the number of North Carolina jobs of 1.8 percent this year and 2.1 percent next year.
"There's no recession and no hint of a recession — and I think that's the good news," John E. Connaughton, UNC-C associate professor of economics, told the legislators. He called the situation "not as exciting as it was in '82 and '83 and '84 when it was a boom or a bust period. ... But it's much more stable."

Staton said the forecast was "not bad news but it's not real good news." If it proves accurate, the Legislature will have to raise taxes or modify its plans to upgrade the state's "infrastructure" — school buildings, roads, water-sewer systems and other public facilities.
"We face difficult political choices of increasing taxes or not enacting programs that these various studies have called for," Staton said, referring to studies on growth by the Martin administration, a legislative commission and the Commission on the Future of the South. "And no one likes to increase taxes."

Connaughton said lawmakers should expect no major departures from current trends — slow growth in most sectors but a decline in manufacture of durable goods.
The forecast predicts 7.5 percent growth in the state's agricultural economy this year, but Connaughton said much of that would be recouping losses from 1985-86. Farming "is still going to be in a ... long-term structural decline," he said.

Elsewhere, the First Union-UNC-C study forecasts growth in 1987 of 5.3 percent in mining, 6.3 percent in construction, 3.8 percent in nondurable manufacturing including textiles and apparel, 3.4 percent in transportation, communications and public utilities, 2.1 percent in wholesale trade, 3.1 percent in retail trade, 2.1 percent in finance, insurance and real estate, 3.2 percent in services and 0.7 percent in government.
The forecast sees a 1.2 percent slump in durable goods manufacturing.

Rep. Al Lineberry, D-Guilford, chairman of the House Economic Growth Committee, said the report made plain the need for state government to prime the economy through such measures as one-stop business licensing and establishment of a Rural Economic Development Center. Both measures are being considered by the legislative panels.
"We have got to do something to assist free enterprise in a creative way and an innovative way to recapture some of the productivity and ... the non-durable goods market," Lineberry said.

N.C. State Begins 100th Anniversary Celebration

RALEIGH (AP) — With a roar of axes and a low rumble of nays, North Carolinians voted to establish a state agriculture and mechanical arts college — for the second time.
The vote came Tuesday as student actors from North Carolina State University re-enacted the passage of the bill that created the N.C. College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts on March 7, 1887.
Charles Martin, director of the NCSU Thompson Theater, wrote the script, which was based on legislative records. Martin said the original bill stipulated that the two-building college be built with prison labor and set limitations on the number of faculty members.

The first classes began in 1889 with 72 students.
"We have much to celebrate," said Bruce R. Poulton, the university's 10th and current chancellor.
By votes of 49-0 in the Senate and 111-0 in the House, the real General Assembly approved a joint resolution honoring the university and its founders as Poulton and other NCSU officials watched from the galleries. Afterward, the legislators gave the university visitors standing ovations.
Rep. Wendell H. Murphy, D-Duplin, said creation of NCSU had "filled a void that had existed since the dark days of Reconstruction, when North Carolina lay in economic ruin."
"N.C. State has produced an agricultural awakening of untold value, but the ax and plow have been supplemented by the nuclear reactor and the laser beam," Murphy said.
Rep. Bob Etheridge, D-Harnett, said that while many of the school's graduates had become well known figures in government, science and other fields, perhaps the university's best contribution was educating students who returned home to be ordinary but productive citizens.
"They are farmers, merchants ... who have made this state what it is today," Etheridge said.
Sen. Jim Speed, D-Franklin, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, handed the university's commitment to the state's farmers.

Several lawmakers who are NCSU alumni, many clad in red, made joking references to the school's basketball victory over the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill in Sunday's Atlantic Coast Conference tournament.
"I feel that State has long been meeting challenges, including the one last weekend," said Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland.
N.C. State is the largest university in North Carolina, with 24,000 students enrolled in 10 schools, and a major research institution with a national reputation.
William Friday, president emeritus of the University of North Carolina system, received the university's Watagua Medal at a Founders' Day dinner Tuesday night.

Legislature Acts Favorably On Jobless Benefit Proposals

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — House and Senate bills have come together on cutting unemployment taxes and raising jobless benefits, but they remain at odds on how to use a $200 million state reserve fund.
The House voted 112-0 Tuesday to tentatively approve a bill to give employers an average tax break of 14 percent while raising the top unemployment benefits from 60 percent of a worker's former salary to 66.6 percent. The House bill calls for 15 percent of the interest from the fund to go to Employment Security Commission administration.
A Senate Finance subcommittee voted 4-2 Tuesday for a version with the same tax cut and improved benefits. However, the panel voted against earmarking any money for the ESC, choosing instead to channel all of the interest on the $200 million into training unemployed workers.
Rep. Jeff Enloe, D-Macon, who sponsored the House bill, said final action must be taken by next week, no matter how the bill shakes out.
"I've been up against a rock and a hard place on this bill for some time," he said. "If we don't get this bill passed and ratified early next week, there will be no tax cuts this year."
Enloe said employers must be notified of their tax status by mid-March. The cut of $50 million a year has been proposed because North Carolina's contributions to the federal unemployment trust fund will soon exceed the reserve needed to guard against high unemployment in the future.
Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, who joined Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, in opposing the version adopted by the subcommittee said training wouldn't do any good in counties with high unemployment.
"I don't want to waste money training them before we've got jobs to put them in," he said.

Rand had argued against establishing a state fund, favoring a simple tax cut and increase in benefits for employees. Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, said he was convinced to back the Thomas version after a staunch industry lobbyist said North Carolina doesn't do enough job training.
The Senate version must next go before the full Finance Committee, while the House was scheduled to give final consideration to its version today.
House Finance Committee members said it was likely a joint conference committee would be needed to iron out differences.

Fire Destroys Gastonia Firm

GASTONIA, N.C. (AP) — Firefighters spent four hours battling a three-alarm blaze that destroyed a Gastonia business and caused a bottleneck in downtown traffic, according to authorities.
Flames already had engulfed Quality Imports warehouse on Main Avenue when firefighters arrived shortly before 2 p.m. Monday. The flames shot more than 30 feet above the roof and a cloud of thick, black smoke rolled even higher into the sky as 30 city firefighters operated five pumpers and a bucket truck.
Fire officials estimated damage to the building, owned by Mickey Crowe and Carl Hayes of Gastonia, at $100,000. Officials said $350,000 in contents went up in the fire.
"The bad thing about it was that we just put a new roof on it," Hayes said.

House Approves Cap On Prisons

RALEIGH (AP) — A bill to place a ceiling of 18,000 on the state prison population was enacted Tuesday when the House voted overwhelmingly to accept two Senate amendments.
Under the bill, whenever the inmate population reaches 97 percent of 18,000, the state Parole Commission will release enough criminals to reduce the number to 96 percent.

IN THE STATE

Hawke Leading

RALEIGH (AP) — Political allies of Gov. Jim Martin appear to be dominating the early voting in their battle against supporters of Sen. Jesse Helms for control of the state Republican Party, GOP statistics indicate.

In 12 of 13 counties in which GOP delegates have been counted, former Martin campaign manager Jack Hawke holds a commanding lead over challenger Barry McCarty for state party chairman.

"We are finding almost everywhere that party people are just overwhelming them (the National Congressional Club forces)," said Frank Rouse, a former state party chairman. "It's not really a contest."

Strategists for McCarty, who is backed by Helms and the Congressional Club, concede Hawke is leading in early balloting, but predict McCarty will oust Hawke as party chairman at the May 30 state GOP convention in Asheville.

Drug Arrests

FAYETTEVILLE (AP) — Nearly 60 soldiers and civilians have been charged with drug trafficking following the recovery of more than $200,000 worth of illegal drugs, Cumberland County and Fort Bragg authorities said Tuesday.

Fort Bragg officials said that a final phase of an intensive drug operation resulted in the apprehension of 37 Fort Bragg soldiers for drug trafficking on and off post.

Barry Lea, head of the narcotics bureau, said 21 civilians are charged with drug trafficking and 16 of them had been arrested as of Tuesday morning. The 21 arrests will result in 51 felony charges and will be handled by state courts, Lea said.

According to Fort Bragg spokesman Maj. Ken Smith, about $208,000 worth of drugs have been confiscated from dealers in the Fort Bragg and Fayetteville area since the undercover operation began in early January. Drugs seized were marijuana, LSD, amphetamines and cocaine.

Civil Suit

GREENSBORO (AP) — A group of businessmen have filed a federal civil lawsuit against a former High Point banker, charging that they lost at least $108,768 in a home investment plan because of his negligence, false representations and breach of contract.

Barry L. Cook of Winston-Salem and his businesses — Market Square Partners LTD. No. 1, B.C. Properties and Market Square Associates — were named as defendants in the civil suit filed in U.S. District Court in Greensboro.

Cook was president of Preferred Savings and Loan Association in High Point at the time, but the savings and loan firm was not involved.

Bagley Named

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Smith W. Bagley, a former Winston-Salem businessman and politician, has been appointed vice president of the finance committee of the Democratic National Committee.

Bagley, who now lives in Washington, will devote at least half of each business day to raising money for the Democrats, said Paul G. Kirk Jr., the national party chairman.

In his new post, Bagley will work under C. Victor Raiser II, the party's national finance chairman.

Finalists

RALEIGH (AP) — Teachers from Wayne County, Durham County and Salisbury city schools have been named finalists for North Carolina teacher of the year.

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Craig Phillips made the announcement of the three finalists Monday after a panel spent two days interviewing and reviewing scrapbooks of the eight regional nominees.

The nominees are: Diane Price, who teaches English to academically gifted students at Southern Wayne High School; Todd Harris, who teaches biology and advanced biology at Northern Durham Senior High School; and Cynthia B. Zeger, who teaches mathematics at Salisbury High School.

Deputy's Trial

LUMBERTON, N.C. (AP) — A former Robeson County deputy went on trial Tuesday on charges of conspiring with two local drug dealers to steal drugs, including cocaine confiscated from one of the dealers, from a sheriff's department evidence locker.

Mitchell Stevens, who left the sheriff's department last October, is charged with four counts of conspiracy in connection with the Aug. 1, 1986, theft of more than 400 ounces of cocaine and other drugs from the Robeson County Sheriff's Department.

During opening arguments in a Raleigh federal courtroom Tuesday, a federal prosecutor said John Delton Locklear and Johnny Lee Jones, who both pleaded guilty Monday to federal conspiracy charges, will testify that Stevens agreed to obtain and give them the drugs, including 400 ounces of cocaine he had confiscated during a March 1986 arrest of Locklear.

Senate Objects To Tying Waste Facilities To Nuclear Generators

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — State lawmakers won't be able to turn their backs on political pressures when it comes to choosing the site of a low-level radioactive waste facility, a senator has warned.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, tried unsuccessfully in the Senate Tuesday to require that such a site be placed near nuclear waste generators, preferably on land owned by electric utilities. He said 95 percent of low-level radioactive waste comes from nuclear plants.

Thomas said the Senate voted against his idea 31-17 "because so many of our members have such a compassionate feeling for our utilities."

He warned that without legislative direction, officials choosing a site for radioactive wastes would prey on counties with little political clout.

"I'll bet my Cadillac it will not go to the mountains as long as Liston Ramsey (D-Madison) is speaker of the House," Thomas said. "So those people in the East had better look out."

Thomas proposed that counties benefiting from taxes and jobs due to power plants should be the host for waste associated with the plants, unless no suitable land was available there.

"The site should be selected in those counties and cities that get all the jobs and all the money," Thomas said. "Some of you have got the taxes. The rest of us ought not to have the poison."

Sen. Tom Taft, D-Pitt, said the proposal would likely mean a low-level radioactive waste site would end up in Wake, Mecklenburg, Brunswick or New Hanover counties, where nuclear generators and a nuclear processing plant are located. He said the siting authorities might bypass a superior area in order to keep the site near a major source of waste.

"The effect of this amendment ... could easily require them to accept a minimum criteria over an optimum criteria site if one of these four facilities that are located in the state of North Carolina had a site that met the other criteria," he said. "If we start with amendments like this, there will be other amendments that follow."

Sen. Lura Tally, D-Cumberland, who sponsored the bill under consideration, said Thomas should choose another bill for his amendment.

Debate on the issue came as the Senate considered several bills aimed at regulating low-level radioactive waste. After defeating Thomas' amendment, the Senate voted 48-0 for Mrs. Tally's bills.

Helms Files Smokies Measure

RALEIGH (AP) — Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., has introduced legislation which competes with a Democrat-sponsored measure that would preserve most of the Smoky Mountains National Park as a wilderness area.

Helms introduced his legislation in response to an announcement Monday by Sen. Terry Sanford, R-N.C., and Rep. Jamie Clarke, D-N.C., that they would sponsor legislation designating most of the park as wilderness area.

The Democratic measure, also introduced Tuesday, would bar roads and other development in 467,000 acres of the 520,000-acre park, including an area north of Fontana Lake where some Swain County residents want the federal government to build a road so they can visit the graves of their ancestors.

The road was never built despite a 1943 agreement from federal officials. Sanford and Clarke resolved the dispute by reimbursing Swain County with a $9.5 million grant and retiring a $1.6 million Farmers Home Administration bond used for school construction in the county.

The Helms-sponsored bill is similar to the Democratic legislation with one exception, according to Barbara Lukens, an aide to Helms.

Helms' bill would appropriate $950,000 for the construction of a primitive road to the cemeteries, Ms. Lukens said in a telephone interview, and would exempt about 44,000 acres of land surrounding the cemeteries from wilderness designation.

"I offer this bill to assure justice to the people who entered into an agreement with their government in 1943 and to redeem the honor and integrity of the federal government," Helms said in a statement. "The failure of the federal government to live up to its pledge has obvious implications."

Tom Lawton, Sanford's press secretary, would not comment on the bill, which is nearly similar to a measure Helms sponsored in 1983. That attempt was unsuccessful.

Nags Head Retains Appeal Despite Urban Growth

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
NAGS HEAD, N.C. (AP) — One of North Carolina's first coastal resort areas, Nags Head has changed tremendously since Don Bryan retired from the Air Force, moved here to take up a second career as an artist and found himself elected mayor.

"Ten and 15 years ago in the wintertime, you could walk out on the beach and the next day, the only footprints would be your own," said Bryan, 62. "Now that's not true."

When Bryan first began vacationing here in the late 1960s, he had to go to Manteo for groceries in the winter — and to Elizabeth City or Norfolk for other items.

Today, Nags Head has a shopping mall, three smaller shopping centers, a five-lane bypass, several high-rise hotels and condominiums, a full-time planning department, a year-round population of 2,000, a summertime population of more than 25,000 and the occasional crime and drug problems of many small cities.

"It's a boon to have things available here," said Bryan, who moved here permanently in 1972 and was elected mayor in 1978. "Of course, it destroys some of the charm a place like this has. To visitors, it makes it seem more like the thing they left, and some don't like that."

"From an artist's standpoint, no, it hasn't lost its charm," he said, however. "There are still lots of scenes to be painted. ... When you compare Nags Head today to other places — Myrtle Beach (S.C.), Ocean City (Md.), Virginia Beach — it's still a relatively rural and unspoiled area." During the Civil War period, plantation owners sent their families here to avoid outbreaks of yellow fever and take in the clean Outer Banks air. After the war, other vacationers came by boat from Elizabeth City. But it wasn't until the early 1900s that significant numbers of people moved here, Bryan said.

Now the town has a computer to keep track of all the residents and the policemen, firemen and garbage collectors the population requires. And it has a strict building code — rules for density and height that Bryan and other residents hope will keep development more low-key than in neighboring Kill Devil Hills.

As the shoreline advances, "our policy is one of retreat," Bryan said. "As the ocean erodes the shorefront, we move the building back to another lot, or back on the same lot. We want to accommodate the changes the ocean brings, rather than fight it, because that's useless. ... There are buildings in Nags Head that have been moved back five times."

A few large masonry buildings can't be moved, but they aren't in imminent danger, he said. Beach renourishment is a "forlorn hope" at the moment — it would cost about $1 million for each of the town's 11.5 miles of beachfront, he said. And to be effective, it would have to include 30 or more miles of beachfront to the north.

Last year, the Nags Head town council approved a $200 million development on the 380-acre Epstein Tract, which had been one of the largest undeveloped, privately owned North Carolina's 3,375-mile tidal shoreline, long neglected but now a focal point for development, has become the center of major controversy over preserving the past and moving on to the future. Do you build for tourists and vacationers, or do you leave the original shoreline to nature? This is the third of a six-part series exploring the problem.

tracts remaining on the Atlantic coast. Developer Jud Ammons of Raleigh has an eight-year plan for an 18-hole golf course, 1000 residential units in single-family homes and condominiums, two hotels and a shopping center.

Bryan said the golf course, which is already being built, would keep development away from the sound while lowering density. He said the planned structures are "aesthetically pleasing," that the oceanfront hotel would be set back twice as far from the surf as the law requires and that the development would take care of its own sewage and storm-water runoff.

"Recognizing the fact that the land would be developed sooner or later ... this will be a development that will certainly set a tone for not just Nags Head but for the rest of the coast," he said.

But some Nags Head residents oppose the development, saying the town gave Ammons too many concessions.

"He got the gold mine, and the taxpayers and citizens got the shaft," said John Acree, president of the

Nag's Head Civic Association. "They gave him the world."

Acree said current town regulations limit the height of buildings to 35 feet. But Bryan said Ammons is being allowed to build to 60 feet under a rule that allows buildings that high if the space around them is twice the building's height.

Acree said allowing Ammons to move a half-mile of N.C. 158-Business about 300 feet west would give the project more beachfront land, but would hurt the business of store owners near where the road would bend. Bryan said Ammons plans to move the road at his own expense and that the development would actually bring the stores more business.

Acree said the town should have tried to get Ammons to provide more public beach accesses — with parking — than the plan calls for. Bryan, whose town now has 32 accesses, said Ammons was providing or improving a "relatively generous" four beach accesses, plus accesses on the sound, which the town now doesn't have.

Ammons said his project would also double the tax base of Nag's Head while preserving a larger "visual window" of the beach than required. In this case, he said, the profit motive is tied to the need to preserve the coast.

"The way to make money is to convince people not on the ocean that they're living on the ocean," he said. "The way to do it is not to mess up the ocean."

"Very few people have an opportunity to take that large a tract ... and plan it," he said. "We have a special opportunity to do something nice."

Meanwhile, Acree and his wife, Jeanne, have more to discuss than many married couples. Mrs. Acree is on the Nags Head Town Council, with which Acree is often at odds.

"We don't agree on everything, but the world wouldn't be too good a place if everyone agreed," said Mrs. Acree. "He doesn't always walk three steps behind me like he's supposed to."

Current issues before the board include proposals to develop 160 acres of Nags Head Woods, plans to build a desalination plant and a proposal to build a central sewage system.

Currently, most residents rely on individual septic tanks, and Mrs. Acree fears that a central system would encourage more development density.

She's also worried about the bridge and roads to Manteo and the mainland.

"I just hate to see a lot of people killed," she said. "Even if the population stayed like it is, traffic was backed up 20 miles during Hurricane Charlie (in 1966). The state has got to help us with our bridges."

The council is also working on plans for rebuilding after a major hurricane, discussing how small the lots can be and how far the new structures must be from each other and the ocean.

Even under current rules, Acree said, he wouldn't be able to rebuild the house he and his wife built in 1967 because ocean erosion has left it too close to the surf. But he doesn't think the government or insurance should have to pay for his house if the ocean finally takes it.

"I built what I could afford to lose," he said. "I have no problem with a man building in the area if he's willing to take all the risk."

After Hurricane Gloria in 1985, he said, "we didn't expect to see our house again. Anybody who builds where we build, if they're going to worry about a storm, they shouldn't be here."

Panel Keeps Wary Eye On Plans For Development of Buxton's Forest

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
BUXTON, N.C. (AP) — Deep inside Buxton Woods, a hawk dives between the pines and 60-foot dunes and grabs a lunchtime rodent scurrying through plants seldom seen this far north.

Elsewhere in this 3,000-acre maritime forest lie trash dumps and sand mines, testimony to the changes coming rapidly to this part of Hatteras Island on the Outer Banks.

For now, however, those changes apparently do not include an 18-hole golf course and housing development that Dr. William Lovett had wanted to build in the woods.

On Jan. 23, the Coastal Resources Commission ruled that the proposed golf course was an Area of Environmental Concern under North Carolina's Coastal Management Act, which means it would require special permits. The commission also ruled that the site lies over a wellfield required for the island's water supply.

"I'm stupid enough that I never give up, but the truth is I think it (the rulings) killed the project," said Lovett, a 54-year-old former surgeon who lives in Buxton. "I think it's a shame."

The golf course was opposed by the conservationist Sierra Club and by a group of nearby residents called the Friends of Hatteras Island. They said the golf course threatened plants, birds and animals on one of the most important maritime forests on the East Coast — another is Nags Head Woods about 50 miles north. They said herbicides and pesticides used on the golf course could pollute the area's water supply.

"We're not against development, we just want responsible development," Buxton artist Shay Clanton, a member of the Friends of Hatteras Island, said during a recent trip through the woods.

Ms. Clanton said she wouldn't mind seeing development continue in the forest as long as it preserved as many trees as possible around isolated single-family dwellings.

But she said the golf course would require chopping down hundreds of trees, removing a canopy that protects other plants from the salt spray of the ocean. She said the island's groundwater, lying only a few feet from the surface, could be contaminated.

Lovett leads a group of 62 investors, most of them from the area, who wanted to build a golf course and 125 single-family houses on 260 acres of Buxton Woods. The U.S. Park Service owns about 1,000 acres of the forest.

While most golf courses have between 100 and 150 acres of grass, this course would have only 65 acres.

U.S. Sees Surge In Strikes, Lockouts After Long Decline

By MATT YANCEY
AP Labor Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time this decade, strikes and lockouts are on the increase in the United States as both unions and employers are showing a renewed willingness to launch or fight work stoppages.

New Labor Department figures for 1986 in three categories are all above levels of the two previous years: the number of major strikes or lockouts, the total number of striking workers and the number of lost work days for the year.

Major work stoppages, or those involving at least 1,000 workers, had been declining steadily for six years — from 235 in 1979 to 55 in 1985. But the number jumped back up to 69 last year, as more than half a million workers either walked off or were locked out of their jobs, compared with just a third of a million a year earlier.

"The unions feel they've come to the end of the line on givebacks and concessions; they want back what they gave up and they're a little more restive," said Leo Troy, a professor of labor economics at Rutgers University.

"On the other hand," Troy said, "economic conditions are still working against them, particularly in manufacturing — just look at the trade balance with Japan — and employers are not willing to give in."

According to the new figures from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, nearly 11.9 million work days were lost to strikes or lockouts last year, a 68 percent increase over 1985.

A 25-day strike against American Telephone & Telegraph Co., a six-month labor dispute affecting 22,000 United Steelworkers at USX Corp. and a five-month combination strike-lockout affecting 12,000 members of the United Auto Workers at Deere & Co. accounted for more than half of the days idle.

In all three cases, the companies were demanding further wage and benefit cuts, elimination of annual cost-of-living adjustments (COLA), or an end to restrictions on their ability to farm out work to non-union suppliers.

"Employers still generally have the momentum," said Charles Craypo, chairman of the economics department at the University of Notre Dame. "They're going for the third and fourth straight rounds of concessions, using the threat that otherwise they'll shut down."

"Workers and unions are resisting concessions now because their experience leads them to believe it won't save their jobs," Craypo said. "It's those two forces that are colliding."

Just as big a factor, Craypo and other labor economists agreed, is the breakdown in so-called "pattern bargaining" in which one — usually the lead — company reaches a settlement in a particular industry and the others quickly agree to the same terms.

Pattern wage floors have constantly been eroding in the airline and meatpacking industries. And for the first time in recent history, the seven major steel companies decided last year to bargain separately instead of as an industry with the Steelworkers union.

Several of the largest railroads and coal companies have indicated in the past few months that they will join that trend the next time their contracts expire and break away from industrywide bargaining.

White House Guards Put Up Pickets In Pay Dispute

WASHINGTON (AP) — The men and women who guard the gates at 1600 Pennsylvania Avenue say they'll return to demonstrate outside the White House unless their demands for better pay and benefits are heard.

About 100 officers of the Uniformed Division of the Secret Service paced up and down in front of the White House on Tuesday to bring attention to their cause.

"I think the president is entitled to the best security possible, and I think he gets it," said Peter England, president of the local union organizing the march, the Uniformed Division Officers Association. "Looking out his window, he has to see that we're unhappy, but I don't think he knows how difficult it is for us to survive as family men."

The officers, who were not on duty nor in uniform during the demonstration, toted signs that read: "I'm a target every day, why can't I get better pay?" and "The president can sleep because the U.D. doesn't."

Many of the officers carried children in their arms or pushed baby carriages during the peaceful demonstration along Pennsylvania Avenue.

William Corbett, a spokesman for the Secret Service, said the uniformed division had received raises to keep up with the cost of inflation along with other federal employees.

He said the Secret Service has requested a 12 percent raise for the division, and drafted legislation to that effect that is now under review by the Treasury Department.

Speaking of the uniformed division, Corbett said, "Their job is an intricate part of the Secret Service. ...

They are very professional and do an excellent job. We are trying to get them the equal pay that they have always deserved."

England charged that the suggested pay raise was not enough to keep the force in line with other uniformed police organizations.

He also said he believed the president's security was at risk because many of the officers were forced to work outside jobs in order to help support their families.

"We get tired too," he said. He said they would return if more attention wasn't paid to their complaints.

England, a 17-year veteran of the force, contended the officers had not received a "real" pay raise for 10 years. Starting pay is $20,552 and rises to $29,600 after 20 years, he said.

"We think it's sad. I don't think there anybody's happy about marching at the White House," England said.

He said officers "would never even consider" going on strike.

The Uniformed Division is a 600-member security force that provides around-the-clock guard service at the White House, the vice president's home and other federal sites.

The division is separate from the stony-faced Secret Service agents who are seen acting as the president's bodyguards.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, asked if Reagan had an opinion about the officers' complaints, said, "We won't take sides in those kinds of disputes." Asked if Reagan were aware of the demonstration, Fitzwater replied, "The whole world is probably informed of this, so I would assume he is aware of it."

An attorney representing the officers, Michael T. Leibig, said the officers' pay and benefits are below par for the District of Columbia area.

USDA Submits Plan To Cap Subsidies

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is providing Congress with a detailed report on the failure of existing restrictions on federal payments to big farmers and how those loopholes can be corrected.

Under present restrictions, some producers have been able to split holdings or set up paper organizations to bypass limitations and collect millions of dollars in federal subsidies.

The USDA proposal sent to Congress includes a $50,000 annual limit on total direct payments to individuals in the 1988 fiscal year that will begin next Oct. 1.

Currently, there is a $50,000 lid on regular "deficiency" payments and land-tiling payments for complying with acreage programs for key crops such as wheat, corn, cotton and rice.

Some other type of payments have been exempted.

Survey Says U.S. Youngsters Think Parents Are OK

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Through the eyes of kids, American parents are doing a much better job of raising them than the adults themselves believe, a new survey shows.

"Philosophers have long debated the meaning of happiness, and they have yet to find one," said the study of 1,000 youngsters released Tuesday by the Roper Organization. "But whatever happiness may be, American youth appear to have it."

The poll, conducted through one-on-one interviews across the country with youngsters age 8 to 17, shows children approve of the emphasis that parents place on everything from school grades to hobbies, friends and television.

"Yet interestingly enough, parents themselves — and the larger adult public — do not agree with young people's assessments here," the poll said. "A 1986 Roper survey of adults found that, when asked the same question, parents fault themselves for placing too little emphasis on almost all these things."

The young people surveyed were asked to choose from a list of things that would make their home life better. Leading the list with 39 percent of those polled were: getting along better with brothers and sisters and talking openly with parents.

Younger children were most concerned with sibling relations, while for 44 percent of the teen-agers, the No. 1 ingredient for improving home life is to be treated as an adult.

Another place in which the kids differed with adults was in family size. Roper found in 1985 that adults felt the ideal family size was one or two children.

The kids, who come from families averaging 3.1 children, felt three or more to be ideal.

Burns W. Roper, whose organization conducted the poll for the American Chicle Group, said it was the first time such an in-depth survey was made among children and teen-agers.

The sampling error was about 3 percentage points either way. "In general, young people believe that their parents are doing a good job guiding them through their lives," the poll report said.

Of the majority, 62 percent said children do no better or worse in school if their mothers work, 7 percent thought they do better and 26 percent said worse. But 40 percent thought children of working mothers get into more trouble and 47 percent thought they are more independent.

The students were asked to assign a grade to their school on a scale of A to F. The result: A-29 percent; B-48 percent; C-16 percent; D-4 percent; F-2 percent.

Asked to grade specific aspects of their school, "how safe you feel" got an A from a solid 60 percent of the children. In contrast, the cafeteria food rated lowest, with only 16 percent giving it an A.

Regarding sex education, 61 percent thought it should be taught in the home, 55 percent said school and 9 percent said it should be left to religious schools. Only 1 percent said it should not be taught at all.

And on another controversial subject, school prayer, 75 percent of those in non-public schools favored organized prayer, while those in public school were evenly split.

What worries young people? Kidnapping, said 76 percent; the possibility of nuclear war and AIDS, said 65 percent; drug use by professional athletes, said 52 percent; having to fight a war and air and water pollution, said 47 percent; increasing divorce by parents, said 39 percent.

And things that make them feel good? Being an American is first with 95 percent. But singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" is last.

Cocaine Ring Broken At Airport

NEW YORK (AP) — A $1.5 billion cocaine ring masterminded by a former Pan Am employee used trusted airport workers to bypass customs in Brazil and New York, authorities said in announcing charges against 45 people.

Nineteen of those charged were part of the ring that imported an estimated 200 pounds or more of cocaine a month during the past six years through Kennedy International Airport, authorities said. The others charged were part of smaller rings also based at Kennedy, officials said.

There was no apparent link between the rings and organized crime, the government said.

"It is a case of white-collar people, passenger service agents, who in effect are the system at the airport, who corrupted themselves" to smuggle narcotics, said Robert Stutman, New York chief of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration.

Pan American World Airways, which cooperated with the investigation, said safety was not affected by the smuggling. No pilots were among those charged.

The charges come six months after 22 Eastern Airlines employees and one Mexicana Airlines worker were indicted on charges of smuggling cocaine from Colombia through Miami International Airport.

Say Hello To A Flirty Spring

By JUDIE GLAVE
Associated Press Writer

RAIN STAY AWAY — An informal picnic look describes this Betsy Johnson spring collection. (AP Laserphoto)

Hall. Arrivederci androgynous look. If major department stores get their way, consumers will be saying hello to a frivolous, flirty spring.

With a few exceptions, stores are wholeheartedly embracing the puffed, ruffled romantic look that designers in the United States and Europe offered for spring.

So when the latest designer duds start trickling onto racks, expect to see crinolines, crinolines and more crinolines.

"We think of it as the season of the flirt," said Sonja Caproni, vice president and fashion director at San Francisco's I. Magnin. "It's definitely going to be a skirt season. Short full skirts with crinolines will be big because it's very easily understood for evening and daywear."

But will it sell?
Macy's Joan Kaner thinks it will — in a big way.

"It's such a change from the more severe and spare clothing we've been seeing. You have to give people a reason to shop and this is something new for a woman to add to her wardrobe."

Marshall Field's James Griebenow, vice president of the Chicago-based store's fine apparel division, agrees that the "sassy, puffed category" will dominate the spring-summer season.

But, "I think it's largely an evening presentation. I don't think it lends itself toward executive dressing," says Griebenow.

While Macy's plans to promote the look in women's, designer and junior division, Griebenow says Field's will aim the look at its contemporary customers. "The very traditional woman is not about to put on a short, poufy skirt. It's for the woman who never wore it the first time around."

Anita Gallo, fashion director at B. Altman's, says she doesn't believe the Altman customer goes after what she called "fashion of the moment." So, they will present the look in a limited way.

Altman's will offer lace-collared blouses, some ruffles and sedate petticoats. But as for the puffed, poodle-skirt look, Ms. Gallo says: "I don't think the lady who one season wears a tailored man's suit is going to jump smack into four tiers of ruffles."

Jean Navin, vice president and fashion director at Lord & Taylor's, disagrees. "Basically, I don't think there's a lady out there you can't sell it (the look) to this year."

Ms. Kaner believes it is a look that offers something for everyone.

The junior customer — firm-bodied nymphs who missed the crinoline craze of the '50s — began snapping the net underpinnings up over the winter holidays.

"They've been buying nylon crinolines and are wearing them as outerwear," teamed with skintight bustiers, Ms. Kaner says.

The less adventuresome can embrace the look with something as ordinary as a slim skirt with a flounce at the bottom. "That one detail gives movement and a more feminine look," Ms. Kaner says.

And for the traditional, "the look can be achieved by wearing a long, full button-up skirt with a few buttons open and a petticoat with eyelet edging" peeking out.

"It may not be a steady diet for everyone but inside every woman there lies two personalities," says I. Magnin's Ms. Caproni. "This look will appeal to the more flirty, playful side but she can still retain her serious, chic, sophisticated clothes."

Still the question remains, where to store all this monstrous puff and stuff when you're not out partying the night away?

"Maybe people just stand them up in the corner of the room and use it as an ornamental fixture," says Ms. Kaner.

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: This concerns "J.F. in Vancouver, Wash." who visited Munich, Germany, where she took a tour of eight model homes open to the public. He was shocked to find that all the homes had bathrooms located about six feet from the front door. On inquiring of the salesman, he was told that homeowners were required by law to provide toilet facilities for anyone who asked to use them!

He asked if you had ever heard of such a thing and you replied, "Never."

Abby, I recently saw a TV program showing several interiors by Swedish and Norwegian home designers, and they all had indoor bathrooms by the front door, so maybe there is such a law abroad. — LOUISE S., EVERETT, WASH.

DEAR ABBY: Being German, I would like to put my 2 cents in about the model homes in Munich. A Vancouver visitor was shocked to see the bathroom located near the entrance of the house. It is not a "bathroom" with a shower and tub; it is simply a toilet and a washbasin — to accommodate guests, so they do not have to go into the family's living quarters to use the facilities. There is no such "law" requiring homeowners to let strangers in to use the toilet. I know; I have lived all my life in Germany. — BORN GERMAN, PORT ST. LUCIE, FLA.

DEAR ABBY: Having lived in Holland for eight years, I think the salesman must have been pulling that tourist's leg. I am not sure about Germany, but I know for a fact that the building codes in Holland state that bathrooms must be separated from the general living quarters by two doors for reasons of privacy. These bathrooms are always located in the front hallway. However, there is no law requiring a homeowner to open his door to a stranger from off the street. — LEX BORGER, LAGUNA HILLS, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Regarding the person who wondered why bathrooms in Bavarian homes were built so they were accessible to the public: I don't know the official reason. However, having been born in Bavaria, I suspect that the centuries of beer drinking have prompted the town fathers to legislate an oasis of comfort for emergencies. — HELEN WATKINS, MISSOULA, MONT.

DEAR ABBY: It is my impression that "J.F. in Vancouver" got a stupid answer to a stupid question. I spent seven years in Munich, and no, you do not have to let strangers into your home to use the bathroom, kitchen, broom closet or anything else. The architect put the bathroom near the front door because nothing infuriates Germans more than children running in and out of the house to use the john.

Championship Winners Named

Dave Proctor and Graham Davis were first place winners in the Thursday night club championship game played at the Senior Center. Their percentage was .59.

Others winning were Effie Williams and Mrs. Harold Forbes, second; Mr. and Mrs. Jeff McAllister, third.

Saturday afternoon club championship winners were Lee Hastings and Selby Corbett, first with .61 percent; Mrs. Harold Forbes and Emma Warren, second; Mrs. Stuart Page and Mrs. M.H. Bynum, third; Chris Jones and George Martin, fourth; Mrs. Mel Wright and Mrs. A.L. Roque, fifth; Beulah Eagles and Mrs. Robert Barnhill, sixth; Mrs. Robert Crandall and Alice Johnson, seventh; Mr. and Mrs. Everett Pittman, eighth.

This way, the neighborhood kids can use the bathroom without running across the wall-to-wall carpet with their dirty shoes.

Apparently "J.F." not only lacks a sense of humor, but also displays a certain amount of hostility toward people of other cultures, or the salesman would not have tied that bear on him — as the Bavarians would say.

I'll bet the Bavarian salesman is still laughing at that gullible Yank. — A.N.M., DENTON, TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: I have traveled widely in Bavaria and never heard of such a "law," but I haven't been

Game To Benefit Arthritis Research

Duplicate bridge will be played to raise funds to combat arthritis when the Greenville club holds its charity game Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Senior Center.

The same hands will be played nationwide with hand analyses to be distributed following play. The local club is participating in a cooperative effort of the American Contract Bridge League and the Arthritis Foundation. The foundation has been designated as the ACBL charity of the year.

Donations will go to support research in over 100 forms of arthritis.

there in the last dozen years, so maybe a law was passed by a suburban municipality in the meantime.

I know Bavarians, and they are the world's greatest tricksters, with an almost perverted sense of humor, so one of this type might have told what he considered a too-nosy visitor this tale with a straight face.

Practically every German town has public toilets that smell to high heaven, but they are available to the bladder-deficient public, and in a country that idolizes the manufacture, sale and consumption of beer, that's a sizable populace.

Anyway, no well-bred German would think of asking to get into a private home to relieve himself. He'd rather be arrested behind a bush than be embarrassed by asking a stranger to open his toilet door. Few Germans would let a stranger into their home to use the telephone — much less the toilet. Blue Denim Yarn Is New

Pat's Pointers
Pat Trexler

"Blue denim" is this season's most exciting fashion yarn — and this knockout blue denim sweater proves to be an unbeatable addition to your wardrobe.

The unusual, flattering cowl neckline worked in a cool, casual yarn of cotton and acrylic is perfect for spring and summer outings. With its flexible roll-up sleeves, this terrific sweater suggests sportive fun or dressed up with a few accessories assumes a more sophisticated look.

The unique texture of this sweater is achieved through the "picket fence" stitch, a deceptively simple combination of garter stitch accented with purl dashes. Easy to assemble with no armhole shaping, the blue denim sweater is designed for sizes small (32), medium (34-36), large (38) and extra-large (40).

To obtain directions for making the blue denim sweater, send your request for Leaflet No. Z-030887 with $2 and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to: Pat Trexler Crafts, The Daily Reflector, P.O. Box 419148, Kansas City, Mo. 64141.

Or you may order Kit No. K-030887 by sending a check or money order for $23.95 for small, $26.95 for medium and large or $29.95 for extra-large to Pat Trexler Crafts at the same address. The kit price includes shipping charges, full instructions and blue denim yarn.

Dear Pat:

Is there any magic formula to knitting a complicated pattern stitch? I started a lace Pointelle stitch sweater pattern five times and finally gave up. I would be interrupted while I was knitting and counting and would forget where I was. — Pat Newport, Avon Lake, Ohio

This reader took the time to copy the pattern stitch directions and included them in the letter. It is one of those patterns full of yarnovers and the knit-two-togethers. Patterns of this complexity are perfect candidates for my oft-repeated tip of using index cards to keep track of an involved pattern.

The pattern Pat sent has eight pattern repeat rows, so eight index cards should be used. Write the directions for each pattern stitch row on a separate index card and clip them together. The first row should be on the first card and the others should follow in numerical sequence. When the first row is completed, move that card to the bottom of the stack; Row 2 will be the next card in view. Continue in this manner throughout.

If you are interrupted in midrow and are not yet familiar with the pattern stitch, lightly circle in pencil the last stitch worked and you will have no trouble picking up where you left off. I always either type the cards or use an indelible pen to write out the original directions. I once spilled iced tea on a set of cards and saw all the carefully written instructions blurred beyond recognition.

Another way to make life easier is to place markers on your needles between each repeat of the pattern. For example, in Pat's pattern, each pattern repeat is worked over 20 stitches. Without the markers alerting her to start anew on the next repeat, a great deal of counting would be required.

This seems a good time also to mention ripping back to mistakes. On a less complicated pattern stitch, if you discover a mistake several rows back, you can slip the stitches off the needle and quickly rip back to the offending row. Then with a smaller-size needle pick up all the stitches of one row and work them off with your regular-size needle.

When a lacy pattern with a lot of yarnovers and decreases is used, most people find they cannot successfully pick up an entire row of stitches. In this case, you may have to grit your teeth and rip back the stitches one at a time. However, following the earlier tips about using index cards and ring markers will help eliminate most mistakes.

SPORTY SWEATER — Blue denim yarn gives this easy-to-knit sweater a sporty look. The picket fence stitch adds texture.

To cut down on monthly water waste, put sealed plastic bottles filled with water and an inch or two of sand or pebbles in your toilet tank. In an average home, taking such a measure can save 10 or more gallons of water a day.

Services Find Welcome On Hawaiian Islands

By STEPHANIE CASTILLO
Honolulu Star-Bulletin
KAUNAKAKAI, Hawaii (AP) — Because of Jenny Whitman's midwifery program at Molokai General Hospital here, the birth of Nanette Napoleon's third child recently was a pleasant experience.

That wasn't the case two years ago, when the birth of Napoleon's son on Oahu turned into a lonely and unhappy time.

That's when her husband stayed on Molokai to tend their first child while she waited in Honolulu for her overdue baby. It was expensive and inconvenient, plus "plenty policies and rules" to follow in the Honolulu maternity ward.

With family members and Whitman at her side this time, Napoleon says, her 10-hour labor and birth were much more personal.

"This is the big advantage of having midwifery care," says Whitman. "It's a much more comprehensive involvement. It bonds you with the women."

"An accident of fate" ushered Whitman into the welcoming hearts of Molokai mothers-to-be two weeks after she started the midwifery program at Molokai General Hospital in August 1985.

There were 11 births right in a row," recalls Whitman, a certified nurse midwife, one of about 2,000 in the United States. "For two weeks straight, I was up day and night. All were really nice births, no complications. Everybody — the women, their families — had a good reaction."

Whitman, 34, had never heard of Molokai before taking the job, but rural health care was a familiar challenge. She had been a Peace Corps volunteer in Guatemala and had done her clinical training as a nurse midwife in rural hospitals in Mississippi.

When she and her husband arrived here from Maryland, both felt "something powerful" had brought them.

Today, Whitman says she is bonded to this island, to her work and to the women for whom she provides full-time professional health care.

She sees healthy expectant mothers through every stage of their pregnancy, labor, delivery and post-partum experiences. Before Whitman, the women had to share their doctors with every other person on Molokai.

So far, Whitman has safely delivered 90 Molokai babies and has cared for 113 women, 35 of whom had to deliver in Honolulu for medical reasons.

The midwife arrangement began six months after the island's family doctors, who no longer could afford obstetrics insurance, stopped delivering babies. The women had to give birth off-island, and a Honolulu doctor flew over weekly to do obstetric-gynecological exams.

Under her agreement with the hospital, Whitman takes care of only low-risk births. High-risk cases are handled by a Honolulu physician. Whitman is trained to recognize abnormal situations and always works with a team: the Honolulu doctor and Molokai General emergency staff doctors. A Honolulu air ambulance stands by.

Attendance Rule Prompts New Concerns

At public hearings and school board meetings prior to the Monday decision, the public expressed its feelings about the proposals. Twenty-two citizens spoke at the Monday board meeting.

Several of the people who spoke before the board gave their impressions of the board's decision in interviews today.

"I am very disappointed that the school board did not make any kind of compromise concerning the grandfather clause," said Judi Orbach, whose child attends Eastern School in Greenville. "Because they didn't, I don't think the people in the city will be satisfied and will continue to fight this until we have an equitable system."

"I thought that if the vote was that close that the chairman should not have broken the tie in the way he did," she said. "I thought it would have been better to table this and put it off for another year."

"We have gotten together a good network of people (in the city) and we will continue to gather and discuss the situation," Mrs. Orbach said. "We probably won't do anything until the people who plan to grandfather register their children so we can find how it will affect the racial balance in the schools. We need some time to regroup and think about what's happened and where we're going."

"There are rumors of the Justice Department being brought in and that wouldn't be a very happy situation for any of us," she said.

Mrs. Orbach said her child will be bused from Eastern School across town to Third Street School. "These children are the white children who will help the racial balance be even at Third Street. We are willing to do that."

"There are other schools like Sadie Saulter and Elmhurst who will suffer because the grandfathering will keep them from being racially balanced."

"We feel we have some recourse because of the (Board of Education) elections in the fall," she said. "Perhaps we can solve some of these problems at that time."

"We feel that the decision made was fair and just and that it is in the best interest of all our people," said Gene Hemby, who lives on the Farmville highway and whose children attend schools in the D.H. Conley attendance area.

"It will allow racial balance. There are provisions in there to achieve that aspect of it," Hemby said. "We feel like over a period of time it will allow all schools to work toward the goals we are trying to find, and that is equal education for all."

"Everyone I have spoken with, both black and white in the county, feels that it is fair and equitable for all," Hemby said. "They all want their kids to stay where they are."

Hemby said that his children will remain in the Winterville school district despite the changes in attendance lines. "I was fighting for something I will probably not need to make use of. I was fighting for the principle."

Brenda Allen, who also lives on the Farmville highway and is a member of the A.G. Cox, W.H. Robinson and D.H. Conley advisory councils, said her children will remain in the Conley attendance area under the redrawn attendance policy.

"I am glad that they adopted a grandfather clause and I think in the short-run and the long-run that it will benefit everybody," Mrs. Allen said. "When changes have to be made, if people are given a choice and a voice in the matter, things usually run more smoothly."

"The grandfather clause became a matter of integrity as well as education, because it was promised," she said. "In this day and age it is important that we be able to believe and trust in each other."

"What we want to work for now is unity and quality education," she said. "I don't feel like this is the end of it."

"The people of Pitt County should make their wishes known to the school administration and to the Board of Education members on a regular basis. I don't mean just when something comes up," Mrs. Allen added. "I think we leave it up to them until they do what we don't want them to do and then we jump all over them."

"I didn't particularly like the idea of the way the decision went," said D.D. Garrett of Greenville, president of the Pitt County NAACP chapter.

"I don't think a student or a parent ought to be allowed to live under the grandfather clause indefinitely. I think there ought to be a cutoff date. I can't go along with the idea of the grandfather clause extending to the unborn children, although I understand and her maternal great-grandparents, W.C. Helms Sr. of Oakboro and Mr. and Mrs. E.C. Little of Oakboro.

"I think basically that it will have an adverse effect on the racial population, especially as it relates to the blacks in the community," Garrett said.

He said the NAACP will meet Monday night and probably will make a position statement on the issue.

Have-Nots Glad For The Chance

By The Associated Press

Was it fair to favor Fairfield? Idiotic to invite Idaho State? Peculiar to pick Penn? Silly to select Santa Clara?

Like it or not, agree or not, believe it or not, these four have-nots — with a combined record of 61-56 — are in the NCAA Tournament will such have as Nevada-Las Vegas, North Carolina, Indiana and Georgetown.

The have-nots weren't invited to college basketball's biggest shindig. They crashed the party as automatic qualifiers from their respective conferences.

Once inside, they got the sporting version of the table nearest the kitchen — first-round games against some of the top basketball teams in the country.

But does that bother these teams? Not on your life.

"We're going to enjoy this trip," Santa Clara Athletic Director Tom O'Connor said of his team, the West Coast Athletic Conference tournament champs who will take an 18-13 record into their game against Big Ten power Iowa on Friday at Tucson, Ariz.

"We're going to spend some money on the trip and say thanks to some people who have helped us," O'Connor said. "And the $80,000 (the school's share of the first-round proceeds) is not entirely athletic department money. In the next week, we'll be talking with the administration about how it will be used.

"But it will have a significant impact on athletics. We're going to put it toward some needs, and I'd like to put it in some scholarships."

Mitch Buonaguro, coach of a Fairfield team that split 30 games, tried to put the best possible face on the Stags' first-round assignment — No. 4 Indiana at Indianapolis.

"I think it is a tremendous thing to play Bobby Knight in Indiana. I think it will be a very difficult game, but the kids will be up for it," Buonaguro said.

"Indiana, the top seed, in Indiana, in the Hoosier Dome is tough," forward Tim O'Toole understated. "We will go in and do our best."

No concession of defeat, however. That's a theme sounded by coaches and players of all four teams, who are anxious to prove they belong.

"We wouldn't be very good competitors if we didn't think that we could go down there and try to pull something off," Penn Coach Tom Schneider said.

Where the Quakers, 13-13, are going is Charlotte, N.C., and the team they'll be trying to pull something off against is second-ranked North Carolina.

"We're loose. We have no pressure on us," Penn center Bruce Lefkowitz said. "They're No. 2 in the nation. They have a little (pressure) on them. ... I expect to surprise a few people down on Tobacco Road."

Lefkowitz and crew surprised Memphis State in 1985 when, as the 15th seed, they extended the Tigers before falling 67-55. Memphis State advanced to the Final Four that year.

"I think that the key thing is that we've had a lot of experience since then against top-ranked teams," Lefkowitz said. "Again, I don't mean to sound like I'm cocky or brash or confident, but I think we can play with these guys."

On paper, the guys facing the biggest test are the Bengals of Idaho State, 15-15, who drew top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas in a Thursday opener.

"Some people say it's like David and Goliath. It's like our football team playing Oklahoma," Idaho State Coach Jim Boutin said.

Idaho State almost played UNLV earlier this year, but lost to Navy in a first-round game of the Las Vegas Classic.

"When we saw that Las Vegas handled Navy with ease, we were glad we hadn't played UNLV," Boutin said.

There'll be no dodging the Rebels this time, however.

"The thing for us is to be able to handle their defensive pressure. We have to do a very big job in handling that."

How?

"We're not a particularly big team. Maybe a lot of prayers. Knowing that our kids are going to play hard, you hope that you're not going to be embarrassed."

Even if the four apparent misfits don't survive the weekend, they might end up winners in the long run.

"You just can't predict how it will affect recruiting," Santa Clara Coach Carroll Williams said of the tournament exposure. "That's what the whole tournament comes down to, isn't it? Marketing."

Blue Devils Eager For Another Trip To Finals

DURHAM (AP) — Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski says his team should be a full strength for the first time in weeks going into the first round of the NCAA Tournament, and he expects the Blue Devils to be eager for a second straight trip to the Final Four.

"I think we're going to be hungry. Guys will be diving for balls and taking charges," Krzyzewski said Tuesday. "If we get beat, somebody's going to have to give us a good shot."

Although Duke finished the regular season at 22-7, they looked sluggish late in the season and in the opening game of the Atlantic Coast Conference basketball tournament. They lost a 71-64 decision to eventual tourney champion North Carolina State.

"The main reason we're struggling is that we haven't had good continuity because of sickness or injury," Krzyzewski said. "Since the first of January, we've constantly had to make one or two changes at a time.

"We're not shooting well but the attitude's been great all year long, and the effort has been excellent," Krzyzewski said.

For the NCAA Midwest Regional at Indianapolis, Duke will regain the services of Billy King, a junior forward who sat out five of the last six games with a broken wrist. The Blue Devils meet Southwest Conference champion Texas A&M, 17-13, Thursday afternoon at the Hoosier Dome.

Guard Quin Snyder has been battling a bad back, but he is expected to be at full strength for Thursday. Tommy Amaker sprained an ankle against North Carolina on Feb. 26, but he is near full speed for Thursday.

"Texas A&M will be a very tough team for us. They're very physical and athletic," Krzyzewski said. "They just won their own tournament so they've got to be a hot team."

The Aggies, who downed Baylor 71-46 in the SWC finals, are led by are led by 6-foot-7 forward Winston Crite, who scored 72 points in the SWC tournament and earned most valuable player honors. He is averaging 16 points and seven rebounds per game.

"Texas A&M is a team that would like to score in the upper 60s," Krzyzewski said. "They have good athletes and they're an older team."

Tar Heels Carrying No Guilt For Losing ACC

CHAPEL HILL (AP) — North Carolina coach Dean Smith says his Tar Heels will go into the NCAA East Regionals against Pennsylvania Thursday without a burden of guilt for losing the Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament last weekend.

"Losing the ACC Tournament championship ... or losing to Notre Dame ... I think you start questioning yourself. But that can be a healthy sign," Smith said Tuesday. "We can learn from this."

"I think we can beat Penn," Smith said. "I think we can defeat anyone. But anyone can beat us."

Senior forward Dave Popson just wants to put the 68-67 loss to North Carolina State behind him.

"We just have to forget about it," Popson said during a news conference in Chapel Hill. "It's in the past. We don't have to redeem anything. It's a new season."

Smith now chooses the accent the positive. "The second half of the N.C. State game was positive," he said. "So is the team chemistry."

The preparation will emphasize what the 29-3 Tar Heels will do, not what will be done to them.

"Maybe they (Penn) know about some of the things we do," Popson said. "Maybe they don't."

"Teams can change for us," Smith said. "We can't worry about it."

Smith said he does not expect many of the top seeds to be left in the NCAA tournament by next week. But he points out that the Tar Heels have achieved a good percentage of success in matching or exceeding their seed in the past six years. Only once, in 1984, did North Carolina fail to finish the regional as well or better as the NCAA tournament selection committee predicted.

While Smith does not want North Carolina to carry the memory of the ACC Tournament into the first round of the NCAA, he also does not want them to be too emotional.

"I don't want our team to be extremely high," Smith said. "I think our team is always enthusiastic. Whether the game is in January or (in a tournament), we try very hard. If you're going to do it, why not do well?"

Smith says he has seen what overdone emotion can do.

"The three times we've lost, there has been an unbelievable celebration at midcourt," Smith said. "They do go up a notch for Carolina. But check their next game ..."

Vikings Look For Consistency

By TOM MORRIS

D.H. Conley's basketball team finds itself in a very unfamiliar position as the Vikings prepare to take on

EASTERN 3-A REGIONALS
 □ D.H. Conley (19-8) vs. Madison Mayodan (21-6)
 □ Game Time: 5:30 p.m., Thursday at the Cumberland County Memorial Arena in Fayetteville.
 □ Conferences: D.H. Conley (Coastal Conference); Madison-Mayodan (Triad Conference)
 □ Key players: D.H. Conley: G — Troy Ebron (9.0), F — Ricky Farrow (12.0), C — Phil Medlin (31.0); Madison-Mayodan: F — Chris Daltor (14.6), G — William Moseley (14.6), G — Guy Wall.

Madison-Mayodan in the Eastern 3-A Regional playoffs Thursday night.

Only one Viking team has ever made past the Eastern Regionals, and that was the 1974-75 team that finished third in the state.

So, it's a new experience for both coach Walter Claybrook and his players. The Vikings, who won the Coastal Conference regular season title and were the runnerup in the tournament, take a 19-8 mark into Thursday's game.

"We have gone a lot further than we thought we would," Claybrook said. "It's been a surprise to everybody."

This is Claybrook's best season since he took over the Viking program three years ago.

"Even when we had Keith Gatlin, we never did win the district final," Claybrook said. "We told the team last night that we had only one team (the 1974-75 team) that ever went further."

Conley has a well-balanced team led by seniors Troy Ebron and Ricky Farrow, as well as underclassmen Phil Medlin and Paul Merritt.

Claybrook said that although the team has done well, it is still looking for game to game consistency. At times, the Vikings have shown it, such as wins over Havelock and West Craven, while at other times they have struggled against less talented opponents.

"It goes back to that word — consistency," Claybrook said. "We've been trying to talk (about) consistency. We have not been as consistent as I would like to see. It's a tribute to the team that (despite the lack of consistent play) once we got on a roll, we did what it took."

While it is easy to look at the Vikings' 6-7 center Phil Medlin as a barometer of their play, Claybrook said Ebron's play at point guard is a better indication.

"He's like a third coach on the floor," he said. "It is crucial that he knows what you want to do. He has a lot more decisions to make (than the other players)."

"The last few games, I haven't thought Troy has played real great games, but we've been fortunate (in that we won). At the beginning of the season, if he hadn't played well, it would have been over for us."

Both Ebron and Farrow have been with Claybrook since their freshman seasons when he started as the Vikings' J.V. coach. Because of that long association, Claybrook said both players know what he expects on the floor.

Next up for the Vikings is Madison-Mayodan, a team that Claybrook said is on a roll.

"From what I understand, they are on an 11-game winning streak," he said. "Their front line is big. They've got three or four guys that run 6-4 to 6-7 and they've got a couple of real quick guards. The two leading scorers are a 5-6 guard and a 6-5 forward. They are a patient team and overall they are bigger than we are."

Claybrook said he is planning no changes for the Vikings and that he hopes to maintain as even a keel as possible.

"The biggest thing is keeping what you have been doing so that you don't change the guy's mental atmosphere," he said. "It's sort of a new experience for all of us. Not having this experience before, I'm just trying to take it like a normal game."

Wiggins Glad To Have Chance

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

The setting is different — Biloxi, Miss., instead of Houston — and so are the amenities — an economy motel with vending machines instead of room service in an expensive hotel. The road trips are to Topeka, Rockford and La Crosse, instead of New York, Chicago and Los Angeles.

But the rim is still 10 feet off the floor and a jump shot is still a jump shot. So Mitchell Wiggins drives, stops and pops — and is grateful for the opportunity to do that, considering the circumstances.

"Money-wise, it's not close," said

Wiggins, who was barred from the NBA in January for taking drugs, and now is playing for the Mississippi Jets of the Continental Basketball Association. "I'm not here for the money. This is an opportunity to do what I do best, play basketball. I feel good about that."

And it is the start of the road back.

"I want to be back in the NBA next year," Wiggins said. "It's a realistic goal. I know the ban says a two-year minimum but I am going to petition for an earlier return. I feel good about my chances. I'm building a foundation to get back a year early. I've done everything they asked. They can test me any time they want. If I had disappeared, there would be no basis for feeling this way. But I'm a good guy who just made a mistake. I faced that. There is so much more in life to be done. I am in touch with that part."

No player banned by the NBA for using drugs has yet returned to the league. Micheal Ray Richardson is eligible to apply for reinstatement next January but his problems since being barred may hurt his chances.

Wiggins is clean and contrite and wonders how all this happened to him.

Women Split With Fla. A&M

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — East Carolina University's Lady Pirates split a pair of softball games Tuesday in the Florida State Invitational. East Carolina bowed in the opening game to Florida A&M, 10-5, then came back to grab a 7-5 win in the nightcap.

East Carolina got the initial run in the opening inning, but A&M came back with two in the bottom of the first, then added two more in the second for a 4-1 lead. Both teams scored single runs in the third to make it 5-2. Then, in the fifth, A&M exploded for five runs to put the game out of reach.

East Carolina rallied for three runs in the top of the sixth. Eva Hughes singled and Denise Higgins reached on a fielder's choice. Jeannie Murray singled to load the bases and Lynda Barrett reached on an error, scoring Hughes. Chris Byrne then tripled in the remaining runners, but the rally ended there.

Murray led ECU's hitting with two.

In the second game, ECU pushed over five runs in the third to take the lead. The difference, however, came in the sixth, when the Pirates stretched their lead to 7-0.

Kathy Schrade led off the sixth with a walk and Kim Adams reached on an error. Leslie Cramer sacrificed in Schrade and Murray hit a long sacrifice fly to score Adams.

A&M rallied for five runs in the bottom of the seventh, but fell short.

East Carolina got only one hit in the game, that by Byrne.

The Lady Pirates are now 5-2 on the year and will face nationally ranked Florida State today in a twin-bill.

Reunion Of Sorts For Coaches

By The Associated Press
For Marquette Coach Bob Dukiet and Nebraska's Danny Nee, tonight's meeting in the National Invitation Tournament will be a high school reunion of sorts.

While an assistant at Princeton University, Dukiet once spoke at one of Nee's basketball banquets during Nee's coaching days at a New Jersey high school.

"I've known Danny Nee for a long time, and I know his team will be a reflection of him," Dukiet said. "They will be tough, aggressive and will get after you."

The Marquette-Nebraska game at Lincoln, Neb., is one of three opening-night contests that kick off the 50th NIT, the nation's oldest post-season basketball tournament.

In other first-round action, Utah plays at Boise State and Washington is at Montana State.

In Thursday night's games, it's La Salle at Villanova; Rhode Island at Florida State; Cleveland State at Tennessee-Chattanooga; Baylor at Arkansas-Little Rock; Akron at Illinois State; Jacksonville at Vanderbilt and James Madison at Stephen F. Austin.

Six games will be played Friday to wrap up first-round action in the 32-team field: Seton Hall at Niagara; Arkansas State at Arkansas; Mississippi at Southern Mississippi; St. Peter's at St. Louis; Oregon State at New Mexico, and Fullerton State at California.

In his first year at Nebraska, Nee has rekindled a spark with the Cornhuskers. He promised an up-tempo type of basketball and has come through despite lacking some of the personnel he said would be better-suited to the running game.

To make his point that fast-break basketball is what he intends, Nebraska came out running with nationally ranked Oklahoma earlier this year. The 17-11 Cornhuskers couldn't keep up with the blistering Sooners but refused to wilt in a record-breaking 133-97 loss in Norman, Okla.

Oklahoma Coach Billy Tubbs saluted Nee for trying. Dukiet figures to encounter a similar effort from a determined team and fiery coach.

"We will have to be at our best and have to get back on defense because they will come at us full throttle," said Dukiet, whose team is 16-12.

Nee's team has averaged more than 74 points a game this season. The Huskers ran through a non-conference schedule with a 10-3 record but stumbled early against Big Eight Conference teams.

Nebraska's effort against Oklahoma said something for the determination of a late-season charge that saw the Cornhuskers defeat nationally ranked Kansas 83-81 in overtime at home, Kansas State 78-76, Oklahoma State 79-77 in overtime and Iowa State 66-65.

"For us to be in the first stage of our program and make a post-season tournament is very significant," said Nee. "It's going to help in recruiting in the future."

The teams played common opponents in Colorado, Kansas State and Creighton. Both teams beat Colorado twice. Marquette lost to Kansas State by one point while Nebraska dropped two of three to the Wildcats. Marquette beat Creighton while Nebraska split two games with the Bluejays.

Nebraska and Marquette have met five times previously but not since the 1958-59 season. Marquette leads the series 3-2.

Another coach familiar with his opponent in the NIT field is Utah's Lynn Archibald. He's an old Boise State nemesis from his days as coach of Idaho State University — and has been effusive in praising the Broncos.

"A lot of people think Boise State is the best team in the Big Sky (Conference), maybe in a long time," Archibald said. "Some coaches say Boise is the best man-to-man team on the West Coast."

Boise State, 21-7, hosts the 17-12 Utes at the BSU Pavilion.

Beyond the fact they are from neighboring states, there are some intriguing connections between Boise State and Utah that are expected to help fill the 12,000 Pavilion to near capacity.

Boise State, which lost by one point in the first round of the Big Sky tournament to eventual league champion

Idaho State, has an ex-Ute on its roster.

Reserve center Gregg Dodd, who jumped from Archibald's tutelage last year, has been a somewhat inconsistent contributor for the Broncos'. But at 6-foot-9 and 245 pounds, he's added muscle to a front line that has pulled down three more rebounds per game than its opponents this season.

Utah has its own Boise State connection in point guard Tommy Connor, who has been the Utes' sixth man for most of the season. The 5-11 Connor led Boise's Borah High School to back-to-back state championships. His father, Bus Connor, is a former BSU coach, and his brother Steve, who played in the 1970s, is the Broncos' all-time leading scorer.

There are only three NIT teams with better records and four with records equal to Boise State, which finished tied for first in the Big Sky regular season race with Montana State, another NIT participant. The Utes finished fifth in the regular-season Western Athletic Conference race before losing in the first round of the league tournament to Wyoming.

Washington enters tonight's game at Bozeman, Mont., with an 18-14 record, while Montana State is 21-7.

The Huskies will have a height advantage against Montana State, whose tallest starters are 6-foot-9 sophomore center Mike Fellows and 6-8 junior forward Tom Domako, the Big Sky's scoring leader.

The Huskies front line includes 7-foot center Christian Welp and 6-10 Phil Zevenbergen.

"They certainly will present problems for us," said Montana State Coach Stu Starner. "Both Welp and Zevenbergen are considered to be number one draft picks in the NBA."

Appalachian In Women's Field

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Cal-Berkeley and Appalachian State will square off in the first round of the women's basketball National Invitation Tournament next week, officials said Tuesday.

Tournament spokesman Doug Simpson said eight teams will try to reach the championship game scheduled for 8 p.m. CST March 21 at the Amarillo Civic Center.

Four games are scheduled for the first round of action March 19, starting with Cal-Berkeley, 19-9, vs. Appalachian State, 24-4, at 1 p.m.

The Mountaineers are still celebrating their Southern Conference championship, which they earned with a 68-65 victory over Marshall last Saturday.

"I didn't get much sleep Saturday night after winning the Southern Conference championship," Appalachian State coach Linda Robinson said. "Sunday morning, I sat by the phone waiting for the NCAA to call. I got my assistants to come over, we ordered some pizza and waited for the call that didn't come. That was the low point of the day."

Robinson said NIT officials called late in the day with their invitation.

"It's a great opportunity for our players to have a good time, take a good trip and play some good basketball," she said. "Appalachian's women have never been to a post-season tournament before."

Other first-round pairings: Providence (22-7) vs. DePaul (22-6), 3 p.m.; Stephen F. Austin (23-5) vs. Creighton (21-6), 6 p.m.; Montana (25-3) vs. Arkansas (17-12), 8 p.m.

The third place game will be at 6 p.m. March 21, followed by the championship game at 8 p.m.

NCAA Rep Says Cards' Play Kept Them Out

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Louisville Coach Denny Crum must look no farther than the play of his team to discover why it was rejected by the NCAA Tournament, selection committee member Jim Delany said Tuesday.

"For two days I've listened to Coach Crum's scapegoating Jim Delany and, by inference, the Ohio Valley conference, the NCAA selection committee and the Metro Conference, for Louisville's failure to be selected," Delany said in an interview.

"I do not appreciate having my honesty or integrity called into question by the basketball coach or athletic director at the University of Louisville," he said.

Crum, seething because his 18-14 Cardinals were not invited to the 64-team tournament they won a year ago, has termed Middle Tennessee State as "the most exaggerated case."

Crum also has criticized his own Metro Conference for a decision that led to the controversy in the first place.

The Metro voted unanimously to allow probation-saddled Memphis State to participate in its post-season tournament. The tournament is set up to decide the Metro's automatic NCAA entry.

So when Memphis State beat Louisville, the selection committee concluded that the Metro had no automatic qualifier and had no team that deserved an at-large bid.

Middle Tennessee, 22-6, the Ohio

Valley champion, did receive one of the 35 at-large invitations. Delany is Ohio Valley commissioner.

"Our schedule was almost twice as difficult as theirs," Crum said. "We also played — on the road — Indiana, Purdue, Syracuse, UCLA ... most of them Top 10 teams, on the road. The most difficult team Middle Tennessee played ... was Michigan. There's no comparison in difficulty of schedule. There's no comparison in the leagues."

"Could it possibly be because the commissioner of the OVC, Jim Delany, is on that selection committee? Or is it just that they did not do their homework?"

Delany, 39, said he followed committee procedures and left the room when Middle Tennessee State's case was deliberated.

"I did not participate in the analysis or selection process connected with Middle Tennessee State's selection as an at-large team," Delany said. "Nor did I privately lobby for its inclusion. The committee's rules and practices do not permit or condone such practices."

Delany said Crum is wrong if he believes Middle Tennessee was the last at-large team.

"The fact is, Louisville wasn't in competition with Middle Tennessee. There were other schools that were selected subsequent to Middle's selection," he said. "The seeding doesn't necessarily reflect the order of selection. Middle wasn't the first at-large team selected, but I can tell you they weren't the last. They weren't the next-to-last, either."

Louisville's poor record against good teams was its downfall, Delany said.

"Let me suggest, after all outside persons, conferences and committees have been carefully examined as the reason for Louisville's failure to be included in the tournament, that Coach Crum take a close look at the performance of his '86-87 basketball team."

"Coach Crum's comments are totally inconsistent with the University of Louisville's tradition of success and fair play."

Delany said he does not mind having his judgment attacked.

"If he wants to get into the comparisons of teams and records, that's fine. Hey, we're people and we make mistakes. But I resent the inference that it was a set-up. He may disagree with the results, but I object to the implication that there was political chicanery or dishonesty."

"I'm not going to listen to anybody saying there was an effort to promote Middle Tennessee at the expense of Louisville. That's just not true."

Delany, a reserve guard on North Carolina's Final Four teams in the late '60s, said he has not talked with Crum.

"It's not my job to call him. He's the one who brought the subject up. I've listened to it for two days. I'm tired of it."

Clemens Willing To Sit Out 1987

WINTER HAVEN, Fla. (AP) — While the Boston Red Sox were ready to fine pitcher Roger Clemens $1,000 a day until he returns to training camp, the 24-game winner said he was set to sit out the 1987 season.

There seemed to be little evidence Tuesday to indicate the American League MVP and Cy Young Award winner would be in a Boston uniform very soon. In fact, Clemens and agents Alan and Randy Hendricks were ready to strike back with a $1,500 daily increase in their proposal rejected last week.

Boston's offer was $500,000, plus incentive clauses totaling $350,000. The Clemens proposal was for $2.4 million for two years — $1 million in 1987 and $1.4 million in 1988.

"I don't see anything happening, but if I don't hear from them, I'll have to try to call them tomorrow," Boston General Manager Lou Gorman said Tuesday.

With a speaking engagement scheduled, Gorman did not know that the Hendricks were waiting to meet him if he wished, along with the Boston camp media, in Dunedin.

In Gorman's absence, the Hendricks said that an option to sit out the 1987 season is being "seriously considered" by Clemens, who led the major leagues with a 24-4 record in his second full season with the Red Sox.

Randy Hendricks, speaking for both himself and Alan, said that Clemens is "determined, disappointed and insulted."

In response to the Red Sox' threat of a $1,000 daily fine starting today unless Clemens ends his walkout, Hendricks said: "Starting Wednesday our offer to the Red Sox will increase by $1,500 a day."

He added: "I'm tired of reading the Red Sox have the hammer. Other people have hammers, too."

Hendricks said he hadn't discussed the fine threat with Clemens, but "I think it will harden his position."

"We understand the consequences if he doesn't play all year," Hendricks said. "We realize we'll lose bargaining position and seniority. But he's prepared to take the most punitive action he can. Let the Red Sox understand their commitment to winning and putting good players on the field."

Hendricks said that the Red Sox's offer of $500,000 for the 1987 season was "ridiculously low."

"They've got to get the message," Hendricks said. "Roger is at the head of his class. He is not going to be made an example of. Ten years from now he doesn't want people telling other players Roger Clemens took this lousy contract, you can, too."

Hendricks said he has not attempted to contact the Red Sox since both sides' proposals were rejected and Clemens walked out of training camp during practice last Friday.

However, he would be agreeable to renewing the talks "if the Red Sox change their position." He said the Red Sox so far have refused to discuss a two-year contract.

Hendricks stressed that Clemens would not beg.

"If they're waiting for us to come groveling to them, they have a very long wait," he said. "They can wait until next year."

Hendricks ridiculed the Red Sox's offer of $350,000 in incentive clauses, which could push the pitcher's pay to $850,000.

While pitching the Red Sox to the pennant last year, Clemens earned $340,000, including $120,000 in bonus money.

"Their proposal has incentives very difficult to achieve, particularly two years in a row," Hendricks said. "They would include $50,000 for World Series MVP, $50,000 for AL Championship Series MVP, $100,000 for AL MVP, $100,000 for the Cy Young Award, and $50,000 for making the All-Star team."

"They're like cherries and nuts put on top of ice cream. They're not a substitute for the ice cream."

Bad Weather Halts Games

Bad weather knocked out most spring sports activities involving area teams Tuesday, and has already forced the postponement of a couple of games reset for today.

East Carolina's baseball game with Rhode Island, set for Tuesday, was washed out and may not be rescheduled. There was a possibility that it could be reset as part of a double-header on Thursday.

Rose High School's baseball and softball games with Greene Central, originally scheduled for Tuesday, then moved to today, have been further delayed until March 25.

Ayden-Grifton and Conley, scheduled to play baseball and softball, have postponed those games, with new dates still to be set.

A baseball and a softball game between Farmville Central and Roanoke have been reset for Thursday. In addition, a tennis match between Farmville and Bertie has been moved to March 25.

Chocowinity and Jamesville have postponed their baseball and softball games, originally set Tuesday. The baseball game is now scheduled for today, while no new date has been set for the softball contest.

A track meet between Ayden-Grifton, Conley, Greene Central and Rose, scheduled Tuesday and reset for today, has now been canceled.

Ex-SMU Starters Pack For UCLA

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A pair of three-year starters for Southern Methodist University's football team are transferring to UCLA and will play there next season, the Bruins' recruiting coordinator said Tuesday. Seniors David Richards, a 6-foot-5, 300-pound offensive tackle, and Ben Hummel, a 6-4, 230-pound outside linebacker, chose UCLA after a three-day recruiting spree at the SMU campus in Dallas that drew recruiters from schools throughout the country, Bill Rees said. The National Collegiate Athletic Association has banned SMU from playing football this year and limited its 1988 season to seven road games because of improper cash payments made to players while the school already was serving a probation handed down in August, 1985. In imposing a one-year "death penalty," the NCAA ruled that SMU players could transfer to other schools without losing a year of eligibility and without having to sit out a year. Richards, from Highland Park, Texas, and Hummel, from Rockwall, Texas, both will be given one-year scholarships, said Rees. The Bruins recruited both players out of high school but "came up a little bit short," he said. SMU's recruitment of Richards and Hummel "had never been brought into question," during the NCAA's investigation of SMU's football program, so UCLA didn't hesitate to accept them, Rees said. "It's a good situation all the way around," he said. "It's a good situation for the players who want to have the opportunity to contribute right away."

Parrish, Phils Getting Closer

By The Associated Press
Catcher Lance Parrish makes his pitch later this week to join the Philadelphia Phillies while Boston pitcher Roger Clemens may be close to catching a plane home. Two of baseball's more prominent spring soap operas took new twists Tuesday when last-ditch negotiations to avoid a grievance arbitration and enable the Phillies to sign Parrish collapsed, while one of Clemens' agents said that sitting out the 1987 season is an option being "seriously considered" by the American League's MVP and Cy Young winner. The arbitration to settle the dispute between Parrish and the Phillies is scheduled for Thursday in Tampa, Fla. The Major League Baseball Players Association claims the Phillies agreed to a $1 million, one-year contract with free agent Parrish, the former Detroit catcher, and then tried to insert a clause that Parrish would sue baseball for alleged collusion against signing free agents. Phillies President Bill Giles said the club never agreed to the contract without the no-suit clause.

"This whole thing has been aggravating from the start. It's been a yo-yo, and today (Tuesday) was another part of the yo-yo," he said. Giles said he was upset because Don Fehr, executive director of the Players Association, refused to approve a modified version of the clause in question which was negotiated between lawyers for the club and Parrish. He said that Parrish's agent, Tom Reich, and Phillies' lawyers were in agreement on how to handle the no-suit clause. "Don Fehr is the one holding it up," Giles said. "Fehr is calling the shots. Reich told our lawyer yesterday (Monday) that, in essence, he and the player were willing to do what we'd asked." Parrish had asked his old team, the Tigers, for $1.8 million and turned down a $1.2 offer. He then broke off negotiations and said he would never play for the Tigers again. If the Players Association wins its grievance, the ruling would make Parrish a member of the Phillies without any no-suit clause. If the arbitrator rules against the union, it still has the option of agreeing to the modification.

Today is the day the Red Sox have promised to begin fining the unsigned and AWOL Clemens $1,000. Clemens fired back when agent Randy Hendricks said Tuesday that "starting Wednesday, our offer to the Red Sox will increase by $1,500 a day. I'm tired of reading the Red Sox have the hammer. Other people have hammers, too."

Hendricks described Clemens as "determined, disappointed and insulted. e understand the consequences if he doesn't play all year. We realize we'll lose bargaining position and seniority. But he's prepared to take the most punitive action he can. Let the Red Sox understand their commitment to winning and putting good players on the field."

Hendricks called the Red Sox' offer of $500,000 "ridiculously low." The club rejected Clemens' proposal of $2.4 million for two years the pitcher walked out of training camp last Friday. While pitching the Red Sox to the pennant with a 24-4 record last year, Clemens earned $340,000, including $120,000 in bonus money. Meanwhile, Dennis "Oil Can" Boyd, sidelined by tendinitis in his pitching shoulder, threw on the sideline for the second straight day without apparent pain. "I feel good. I think I'll be ready to start pitching by the weekend," Boyd said.

The Red Sox got some more good news when pitcher Bruce Hurst checked into the clubhouse one day after he had to leave a game with pain in his groin. "I felt a twinge and we'll keep it iced down for a couple of days, but I'm hoping that all I did was break an adhesion," said Hurst, who missed seven weeks last season with a pulled groin muscle. "He was a little sore, but all signs are very encouraging," trainer Charlie Moss said.

Other Developments
—Pitcher Kirk McCaskill said he will report back to the California Angels today, ending his six-day holdout over a contract dispute. The Angels had said they would fine McCaskill $1,000 a day beginning Monday.

"I can accept their latest offer," McCaskill said. When the pitcher left camp last Thursday, he was given the option of signing for $222,000 or having his contract renewed for $210,000. —The Toronto Blue Jays renewed shortstop Tony Fernandez' contract for an undisclosed amount. He had sought $500,000 and the team offered $350,000.

"As far as I'm concerned, it's over," said Fernandez, who had asked Manager Jimmy Williams to keep him out of the first three exhibition games. "There's nothing else for me to say now. Now it is time for me to play baseball. I have to forget what has happened and do what I love to do."

Fernandez led the Blue Jays with a .310 batting average last season and his 213 hits were the most ever in one season by a major-league shortstop. In his first spring game Tuesday, Fernandez had a double and a sacrifice fly in Toronto's 4-3 victory over Boston.

—Baltimore outfielder Mike Young was to undergo surgery today for a torn ligament in his right thumb and will be out of action for at least eight weeks. Young was hurt Sunday when he tried to make a diving catch. —Seattle pitcher Scott Bankhead does not have any major shoulder problems. Bankhead was sent back to Seattle on Monday and examined by a radiologist.

Exhibition Results
—Lee Mazzilli's two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning gave the New York Mets a 5-4 victory over the Houston Astros for the defending world champions' first spring triumph in four games. —Fred Lynn hit a two-run homer as the Baltimore Orioles defeated the Minnesota Twins 14-4 for their first victory in four games.

—Joel Davis became the first Chicago pitcher to work three innings, allowing one run as the White Sox edged the Pittsburgh Pirates 4-3.

—Mike Diaz hit two home runs and drove in five runs as another group of Pirates beat the Kansas City Royals 10-7.

—Tom Herr and Jack Clark each drove in two runs in a four-run fifth inning as the unbeaten St. Louis Cardinals beat the Detroit Tigers 9-7. Clark finished with four RBIs and Herr also had a solo home run.

—Mike Scioscia's two-run single capped a five-run second inning that carried the unbeaten Los Angeles Dodgers to a 5-4 victory after the Atlanta Braves scored four times in the first inning off Fernando Valenzuela.

—George Wright, one of several outfielders competing for jobs left vacant by Tim Raines and Andre Dawson, paced a 12-hit Montreal attack with a single, double and homer as the Expos and Red Sox played to an 8-8 tie.

—Mike Schmidt hit his first spring homer as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Cincinnati Reds 10-7 for their first victory. Cincinnati's Dave Parker also homered.

—Home runs by Jeff Kunkel and Pete O'Brien paced the Texas Rangers over the New York Yankees 11-5.

—Brian Dayett's RBI single in the bottom of the 10th inning gave the Chicago Cubs a 10-9 victory over the California Angels. California rookie Devon White, who is mounting a strong challenge for the right field job, had his second straight 4-for-4 game, raising his spring average to .550 with 11 hits in 20 at-bats.

Hondurans Down U.S. Drug Plane

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — The American pilot of a U.S.-registered airplane apparently on a drug mission refused to identify himself before Honduran combat jets shot it down, killing all three people aboard, the government said.

No narcotics were found in or around the wreckage of the DC-3 plane in western Honduras, "but it is believed the cargo was thrown out by the crew" shortly before the craft was intercepted, the Honduran armed forces said in a statement Tuesday night.

The plane was shot down at 11:30 p.m. Monday after entering Honduran airspace from Nicaragua and proceeding in a northwesterly direction. The armed forces statement said the plane's path indicated it probably came from Colombia or elsewhere in South America.

Wreckage and human remains were scattered over nearly one square mile near the settlement of El Palmital, according to the statement. El Palmital is near the town of Guarita in mountainous Lempira province, about 6 miles from the border with El Salvador and 108 miles west of Honduras' capital, Tegucigalpa.

The pilot was identified by personal documents as Joseph Bernard Mason, and carried U.S. and Panamanian pilots' licenses, the armed forces said. A spokesman at the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa, speaking on condition of anonymity, said details about Mason were being withheld pending notification of relatives.

The other two people on board remained unidentified by early today.

"The detection of the aircraft caused the reaction of our air force, which immediately deployed combat planes," an earlier statement from the armed forces said.

"The crew of the plane did not identify itself," it said. "Because of that, with all peaceful procedures exhausted, the air force carried out warning shots and then shot down the plane."

The armed forces said the crew also ignored orders to land on a specified airstrip.

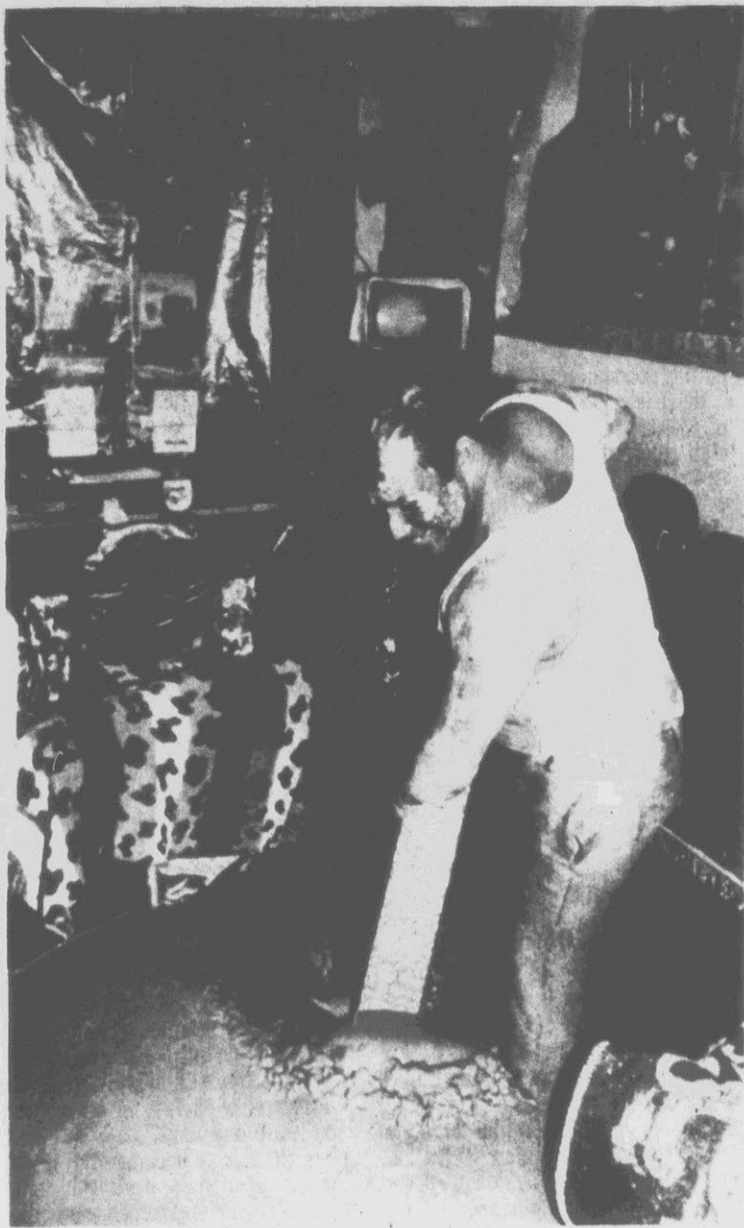

Authorities said the plane bore a U.S. registration number, 49454, on its exterior, and the Colombian registration HK-313 on the inside.

The statement said the plane's route was similar to that followed by a plane captured three months ago carrying two Colombians and a load of pure cocaine valued at an estimated $500 million.

The twin-engine, propeller-driven DC-3 is a favorite with South American drug smugglers. Built during World War II, the plane can fly long distances at low altitudes and land or take off on short runways, such as the clandestine grass airstrips in Central America commonly used by smugglers flying from South America to the United States.

In Washington, U.S. government sources said they suspected the plane might have been involved in drug smuggling. The Pentagon said no U.S. military aircraft were operating in the area.

In Managua, Nicaragua, the Sandinista government's Defense Ministry said it had no planes similar to the DC-3 and that none of its planes had been shot down.

MUD CLEANUP — A resident of Chosica, a city 25 miles from Lima, Peru, struggles to remove mud from his home which was flooded by the Rimac River during the weekend. Ecuador Halts Debt Payments In Wake Of Quakes, Mudslides

By ROBERT SEAVEY
Associated Press Writer
QUITO, Ecuador (AP) — The government canceled payments for the rest of the year on its $8.2 billion foreign debt following strong earthquakes and mudslides that cut off its main oil pipeline, killed an estimated 300 people and left about 4,000 others missing.

Air force planes and helicopters today continued to search the remote jungles of eastern Ecuador, where provincial officials said villages were buried by giant mudslides triggered by the quakes last Thursday and Friday.

Many villages could not be reached by land because roads and bridges were washed out or buried.

The mudslides also destroyed a 25-mile stretch of the nation's main oil pipeline, forcing a halt to oil production and exports. On Tuesday, the government canceled foreign debt payments for the rest of 1987 because of the projected revenue losses.

"We are not going to receive an enormous amount of foreign exchange so we cannot fulfill the debt accord this year," Finance Minister Domingo Cordovez said late Tuesday.

Initial reports after the quakes and mudslides listed few casualties but the death toll has mushroomed as aircraft fly over outlying areas hit hardest by the disaster.

The Red Cross said in a communique Tuesday that 300 people were killed and 4,000 others were missing. It said 2,700 rescuers were conducting relief and search operations in disaster zones.

Officials in Napo province confirmed 100 deaths but said there could be many more.

"This is the most serious disaster in our history," President Leon Febres Cordero told the nation after he toured stricken areas earlier this week.

Ten earthquakes struck Thursday night through Friday afternoon. The Quito Astronomical Observatory said the strongest quake registered 6.8 on the Richter scale, which is a gauge of the energy released by an earthquake as measured by the ground motion recorded on a seismograph.

A quake measuring 6 is capable of causing severe damage.

The quakes were felt all along the nation's 2-mile-high Andean spine from the Colombian border to Riobamba, 95 miles south of Quito. Damage was heaviest in the northernmost mountains and in the northern and eastern jungle regions.

One of the strongest quakes was centered near El Reventador volcano, 42 miles northeast of Quito, where officials said 19 people were killed by mudslides and 2,500 were cut off by washed out roads.

Rescuers set up temporary shelters in Napo to aid the homeless as 50 tons of U.S. aid, including food, tents and blankets, was sent to the region.

Both the government and the International Red Cross, which donated $32,000 Tuesday for rescue efforts, appealed to foreign nations for help.

Febres Cordero asked Ecuador's 12 fellow members of the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries and other oil-producing nations to assume Ecuador's sales commitments. He said Ecuador would pay them back in oil when it was able to resume exports.

Havana Says 13 Hurt In Hijacking

MIAMI (AP) — A man armed with hand grenades commandeered a domestic Cuban flight in an attempt to hijack it to the United States, and one grenade exploded, injuring 13 passengers, Havana radio reported today.

The would-be hijacker, identified as Juan Carlos Jimenez Gonzalez and described by government radio as "an anti-social element with criminal records," was shot to death by a police officer on board, said the broadcasts monitored here.

Guilty Plea

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A former postmaster in Chatham and Moore counties has pleaded guilty in U.S. District Court to charges he embezzled almost $7,000 from the U.S. Postal Service.

Franklin Phinell Newsom, 33, of Carthage pleaded guilty to charges he issued himself postal money orders totaling $6,895.30 without paying for them, according to assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Weinman.

Newsom was released on his own recognizance. A sentencing date has not been set.

The postal service began investigating Newsom in October, shortly after he transferred from a post office in Chatham County to the West End Post Office in Moore County, Weinman said.

The broadcasts, which quoted an official statement of the Cuban interior ministry, said a Cubana Airlines flight was taking off Tuesday night from Havana's Jose Marti Airport bound for Youth Island off Havana when the man threatened the crew with hand grenades.

He ordered the crew to divert the plane to the United States, the reports said, adding the effort was "frustrated by the reaction of the crew and passengers."

When one grenade detonated, a 5-year-old boy was among the injured passengers. The hijack ended when a police officer among the 44 passengers killed the hijacker.

No details were released on the landing of the plane or the extent of damage.

While the reports said 13 people were injured, they gave the names of only 12. One was hurt seriously and the others received minor injuries, including an Angolan student, the reports said.

Old Catalog Stirs Owner's Memories Of Past

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Nostalgia for items of the past in American culture, lifestyles and technology can be discovered in the most unexpected places or sources.

On a recent winter weekend, while belatedly cleaning out a long neglected corner of my attic, I opened a box I had marked "Japan." One of the items packed away in the cardboard container was a catalog I had obtained in 1956 in the huge used book store area of Tokyo. I recall that the book dealer threw it in as a free offering with purchases I made.

The catalog, a sturdy 186-page edition complete with index, is a cloth-bound book with sage green covers and gold stamping. It was published in 1900 by the press of Warren J. Robinson & Co., Boston.

The catalog listed a wide variety of items for sale by the Crosby Steam Gage & Valve Co., manufacturers of Standard Appliances with stores in Boston, New York, Chicago and London.

Evidently, Crosby was a thriving manufacturer in its day to judge from the dozens of appliances in the field of instruments for steam boilers and steam engines produced by the firm since its founding in 1875.

Turn Of The Century Firm Offers Its Wares

Each item offered in the catalog is pictured in excellent black and white drawings with extensive descriptions and application uses described in detail.

Even at that time, the turn of the century, prices for the heavy duty accessory metal items for steam boilers and engines did not come cheaply. Some were fabricated of iron; others with parts in nickel plate, and a large number were made of brass. Prices ranged for a few dollars for small pieces to hundreds of dollars for larger items.

Pressure and hydraulic gages, steam gage cocks and various spring-seat valves and safety valves constituted a large portion of the appliances.

The section of the catalog that most appeals to me is that dealing with musical whistles. These bring back strong memories from the past — the remembrance of musical whistles heard in the night as trains traveled through eastern North Carolina; or the signal sounds of ships coming into harbor in London, Panama or Tokyo.

One of the various whistles in the catalog, "The Original Single Bell Chime Whistle" will serve to give the flavor of nostalgia associated with these items. The textual description is:

"The peculiar merit of this whistle consists in producing three distinct tones pitched to the first, third and fifth of the common musical scale, which harmonize and give an agreeable musical chord.

"It is more penetrating than the common whistle, and can be heard at a greater distance. If effectually obviates the harsh, disagreeable noise which has been a source of common complaint in other whistles and gongs.

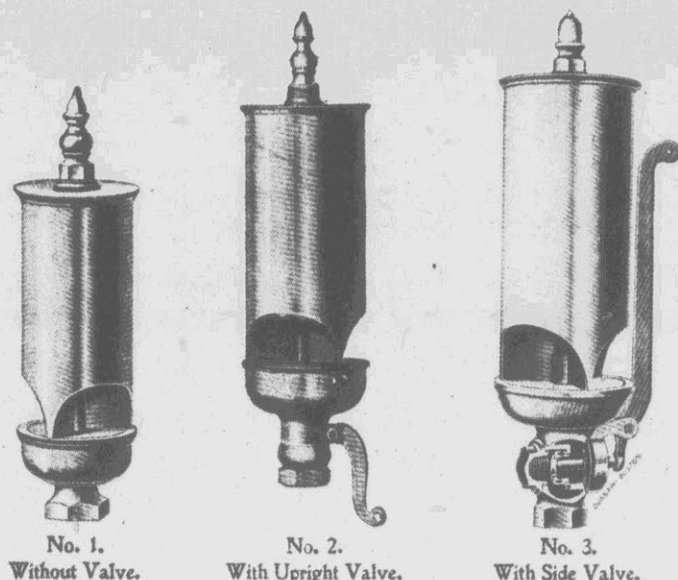

"This whistle is used extensively on locomotives, and is warmly indorsed by railroad men and by the traveling public wherever used. They overcome one of the chief annoyances of railway travel, and serve to distinguish passenger from freight trains.

"Many of the larger sizes of this whistle are in use on the largest transatlantic steamships and cruisers and light-ships of the Government of the United States; on factories, railroad shops and in connection with fire departments. They are specially adapted for this service."

The merits of this turn of the century lure to buy, in itself typical of America's approach to selling, ends with a note of caution. "BEWARE OF IMITATIONS!"

Prices for this charmer in 1900 ranged from $4.50 for a tiny 1½ inch bell without valve (number 1 in the illustration), to a hefty $300 for the 12-inch bell with side valve, (number 3 in the illustration).

Piano Tuner Steps Back In Time

By ELIZABETH FOSTER
The Beaufort Gazette

BEAUFORT, S.C. (AP) — Stepping off Craven Street into Hamer McCorkle's Piano Tuning and Restoration workshop is like taking a step back in time.

The wood and felt materials of his craft, the Monet and Renoir prints on the walls, and the romantic classical music emanating from a dusty turntable stuck away under shelves and shelves of intricate piano parts, are all from another time.

They're from a time when things weren't made or manufactured with obsolescence in mind, when time itself was measured by the lazy climb and descent of the sun, not the impatient sweep of a second hand.

"Whenever I work on a piano, I have to go back in time," McCorkle said during a recent interview.

"It's a 19th century craft, a craft not controlled by time. I have to think like a 19th century piano builder would think. I have to adapt to the technology of the time."

McCorkle has been a piano tuner and technician for 12 years and the most annoying question in his experience has been, "how long is it going to take?"

"I think all tuners agree on that," he said, with an impatient draw on his cigarette. "Piano tuners can be as different as night and day, but we all have that something in common. We're very independent people. We don't like working under a structure or with someone leaning over our shoulders and giving us time constraints.

"The time scheme is different with every piano. That's what makes the profession so unique. Sometimes it takes a little longer to do it right."

A native of Lumberton, N.C., McCorkle has always marched to a different beat. At the age of 5, when most boys were finding great fun in catching frogs and playing soldier, McCorkle found enjoyment in his piano lessons. He can't remember a time when he didn't want to play the piano. He continued playing and, when he was a senior in high school, McCorkle's family moved to Charlotte, N.C.

The following year he began his stint as a "professional student" at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte. He earned a degree first in geography and then majored in political science with the hope of attending law school. Instead, he began doing graduate work in the creative arts.

McCorkle will not say how many years he remained in college, but a foot-high stack of UNCC yearbooks in the corner of his working area gives testimony to the years he spent in the world of academia.

And it was one of McCorkle's creative arts professors who suggested he pursue a career in piano technology. "I've always enjoyed mechanics and I saw this as a way of combining the art with the craft. I had played for years and never knew the piano as a physical entity," he said.

Corkle went to work as an apprentice for two piano rebuilding shops in North Carolina.

"These were top-notch professional people," he said. "Their fathers and grandfathers had been in the business. It's a 19th century craft, an inherited knowledge. You can't learn it from a book and you find out right away whether you have the talent, patience and aptitude to do it.

"It's precision work, down to the one-sixty-fourth of an inch and there's always the aspect of adaptability. Every piano is unique. Every job is unique. Every piano has its own personality."

After working in Charlotte for several years, McCorkle decided the city was getting too big and made the move to Beaufort, a town he had visited many times as a youngster. He set up his shop here in January 1986. The signs painted on his windows say "Piano Tuning and Restoration" and he says the two aspects of piano technology are very different things.

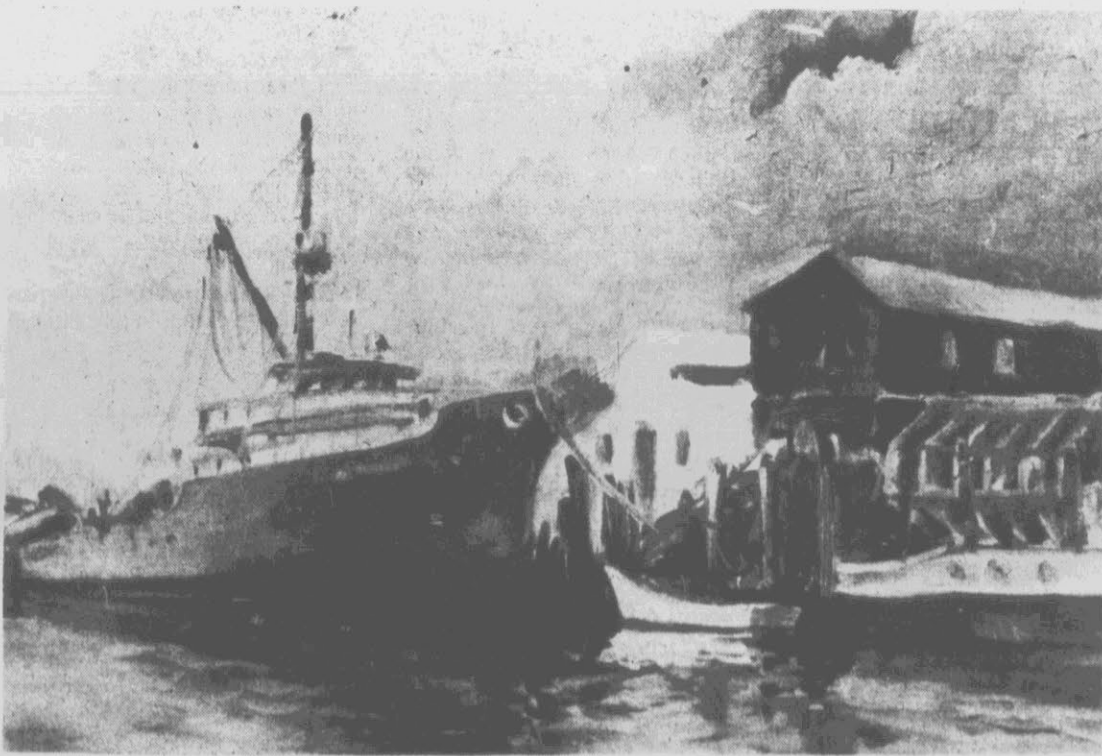

"Tuning has nothing to do with the mechanics of the piano or how the piano feels. Tuning is bringing the instrument to pitch. That's where my musical ear comes in."

The mechanical aspect requires the ability to rebuild parts as they were originally made 50, 100, or more than 100 years ago and the ability to forget what tools and technology are available in the modern world.

"A piano is a fragile and a sensitive instrument," he said.

McCorkle says the greatest joys of his profession are improving the musical lives of the people he works for. "I try to treat everyone the same way. It doesn't matter if I'm working on a piano for a little girl who is taking her first piano lessons or a concert pianist, the bottom line is music."

FISHING BOAT AT DOCK — Paintings by Greenville artist Bob Pittman and poems by his wife, Claire, are currently on view in two ground-floor hallways at Pitt County Memorial Hospital. The show can be viewed without charge seven days weekly, 24 hours daily. The joint Pittman exhibition will be on view through March.

Pittmans' Works Featured At Pitt Memorial Showing

Paintings and framed copies of poetry by a husband-wife team from Greenville constitute the current show on view in the hallways of Pitt County Memorial Hospital.

Painter Bob Pittman and his poet wife, Claire, have joined forces to give viewers art in paintings and poems as complementary art forms.

She is the daughter of a widely known earlier 20th century poet, the late Gastonia newspaper publisher Stewart Atkins.

For this show, Claire Pittman's poems have been copied in calligraphic script by Mary Faye Wilshire.

Her poems have been published in numerous publications, including Crucible, Tar River Poetry, The Rebel and Tar Heel Magazine, among others.

Some of her poems were selected for inclusion in "Portfolio," a collection by poets of the Southeast edited by Ann Deagon and published at Guilford College.

Several of the poems presented in the hospital show were written to relate to paintings by Pittman. The couple plans to further pursue a parallel assemblage of poetry and paintings in the near future.

His favorite painting subjects are mostly of eastern North Carolina scenes, ranging over familiar materials like old barns, rural landscapes, waterfront and boat scenes, marsh grasses and scenes of the Outer Banks.

He also extends his efforts farther afield, in sketches and drawings made in Holland and other away-from-Carolina locales.

Pittman's work, both watercolor and oils, are in numerous area and statewide private and public collections, including the Greenville Museum of Art.

The Bob-Claire Pittman show is hung in two ground floor hallways at Pitt Memorial Hospital. The show can be viewed 24 hours daily, seven days weekly, and will remain on view through the month of March.

Rural Doctors Are Disappearing From The South

By KRISTI UMBREIT
Associated Press Writer
JELLICO, Tenn. (AP) — Rural doctors evoke memories of late night house calls to deliver a baby, and maybe even a calf or a foal.
But the number of physicians answering that call are on the decline, and their absence is being felt most across the hollows and mountains of the South.

Take for instance, Dr. Jesse Walker.
At 71, he says he was supposed to retire two years ago, but couldn't find a doctor to replace him at the Indian Mountain Clinic in East Tennessee's poor, coal-mining region.
"If two doctors walked in here today ... we'd put them to work tomorrow," Walker said.
"It's never been easy to recruit," he said. "And many physicians still working in the rural areas are in their 60s or 70s. That's part of the problem too."

Things won't get better anytime soon. Congress is phasing out a 16-year-old program known as the National Health Service Corp., which lent medical students tuition in exchange for promises that they would practice temporarily wherever they were told.

As many as 1,500 students a year borrowed the government's money for tuition during the 1970s, but only 150 scholarships were given out this school year or last and the available funds are being scaled back.

Walker is the only one of five doctors at his clinic near the Tennessee-Kentucky border who is not a National Health Service recruit.

About 40 percent of the doctors in the program are absorbed into eight southern states: Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi.

The program ends next year. Ray Davis, who directs physician placement services in Tennessee for the corporation, said what is happening in Tennessee is typical of most rural areas across the country.

Most of the young physicians want only to pay their debt and move on into more lucrative areas of medicine.

"We've got plenty of doctors but they're specialists and they're concentrated in the urban areas," Davis said. "They're cardiovascular surgeons in Nashville. That doesn't do much good in Coffee Ridge where people have lacerations and the children have fevers."

State records show that from 1963 to 1983, the number of doctors going into specialty areas such as cardiology and dermatology rose 84 percent. Those doctors usually stay in the larger cities, he said.

For the same period, the number of family practice doctors, those who are generalists and who usually go to the rural areas, dropped almost 16 percent, he said.

"To magnify the problem, over 43 percent of our family practitioners in Tennessee are beyond 55," he said. As the older doctors retire or die, few are taking their place, he said.

One rural Tennessee physician, who is among 100 assigned by the federal program to Tennessee, said she had no intention of staying in her assigned area once she has paid off her government loan.

"It hasn't been fun," said the doctor, who did not want to be identified because of possible reprisals against her by patients.

"There's a lack of people here who have goals and interests similar to mine. People who live in the rural areas have a different outlook on life," the physician said. "(Patients) demand a lot more without being able to give as much — things like courtesy, regards for your time," she said.

Davis and others in Tennessee said the state must be weaned off the federal program if it is to meet the medical needs of rural areas.

"For some rural areas, solutions other than a physician in residence must be sought," said Joseph W. Morris, a community development specialist at Tennessee State University.

Obesity Is Mostly By Habit

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer
Most obese children will become obese adults, said a local professor of food nutrition. But, most obese adults were not obese children.

"The problem with weight we (adults) have in this country is not because of overweight children," said Margie Lee Gallagher, associate professor with the Department of Food Nutrition and Institution Management at East Carolina University.

Most adults become obese because of eating habits, she said. For example, holidays and good deeds are celebrated with food, and "almost everybody wants some food when they're sick," Ms. Gallagher said.

"Overweight parents tend to have overweight children because it is a matter of that family's eating habits."

Children are encouraged to eat all the food on their plates because food costs money, and some people are starving, Ms. Gallagher said. Parents also encourage children with phrases such as "you have to clean your plate before you have dessert."

Obesity is defined as a body weight 30 percent higher than the values of accepted weight and height charts, according to "Children and Obesity: A Growing Problem" distributed by the American Heart Association.

The number of obese children ages 6 to 11 has grown 54 percent in the last 15 to 20 years, the literature said. The rate of obesity in those from 12 to 17 years old has increased 30 percent.

Obesity is twice as high in preadolescent black children than in preadolescent white children, the literature said.

"If you have small children and you overfeed them, they will make more fat cells" in their bodies, Ms. Gallagher said explaining a fat cell theory. "It's much harder for them to lose weight" when more fat cells develop.

When cells are filled with fat or stretched, she said, "the body is not so resistant to lose that fat."

When cells have an average amount of fat, but there are too many fat cells in the body, "the body is going to be resistant to lose that fat."

Another fat cell theory suggests that when the cells are too large, they simultaneously produce new fat cells as a result of being over-weight for too long, Ms. Gallagher said.

The Other "Babe"

Jackie Joyner-Kersey recently became the eighth woman to win the Sullivan Award, given each year to America's best amateur athlete. But will any female athlete ever measure up to Mildred "Babe" Didrikson? At the 1932 Olympics, the five-foot tall, 105-pound Texan won a gold medal in the javelin throw and another in the 80-meter hurdles. Later, she excelled at basketball, swimming, billiards, and golf. She once pitched to the Boston Red Sox in spring training.

DO YOU KNOW — What woman won last year's Sullivan Award?

West led the king of diamonds, ruffed by declarer. A club to the queen won, and the club return to the jack was taken by the ace. Since the club suit was now established, a trump return would not have helped the defense, so West persevered with a diamond.

Declarer ruffed, cashed the king of clubs for a heart discard and led a heart. West took the ace and returned the suit to dummy's king.

The queen of spades was covered by the king and won in hand. A heart ruff was followed by a diamond ruff, bringing declarer's total to eight tricks and reducing the hand to this interesting position:

When declarer now led a club, the trump spots worked in a peculiar way. If West ruffed, his forced red-suit return would allow declarer to score his trump ten en passant. If he did not ruff, declarer would ruff with the table's four, forcing East to overruff with the jack and setting up the ten as the fulfilling trick.

The First Snowflake

By Kelly Andrews

From one tiny snowflake
 A new world has begun.
 Each is a miniature prism
 Dancing in the sun.

Blanketing the frozen ground,
 Gleaming in the light,
 Beckoning birds southward-bound,
 To hurry in their flight.

Waiting patiently for children,
 While the cool winds blow,
 And wondering which child will put

The first footprints in the new-fallen snow.

The children build a
 And engage in a snowball fight.
 They catch snowflakes on their long flight.

 They've played all afternoon.
 As they go inside to warm themselves,
 The snow whispers, "Hurry back soon."

There is peacefulness in winter
 sound.
 And the beautifulness of winter arrives
 touches the ground.

The Little Red Squirrel

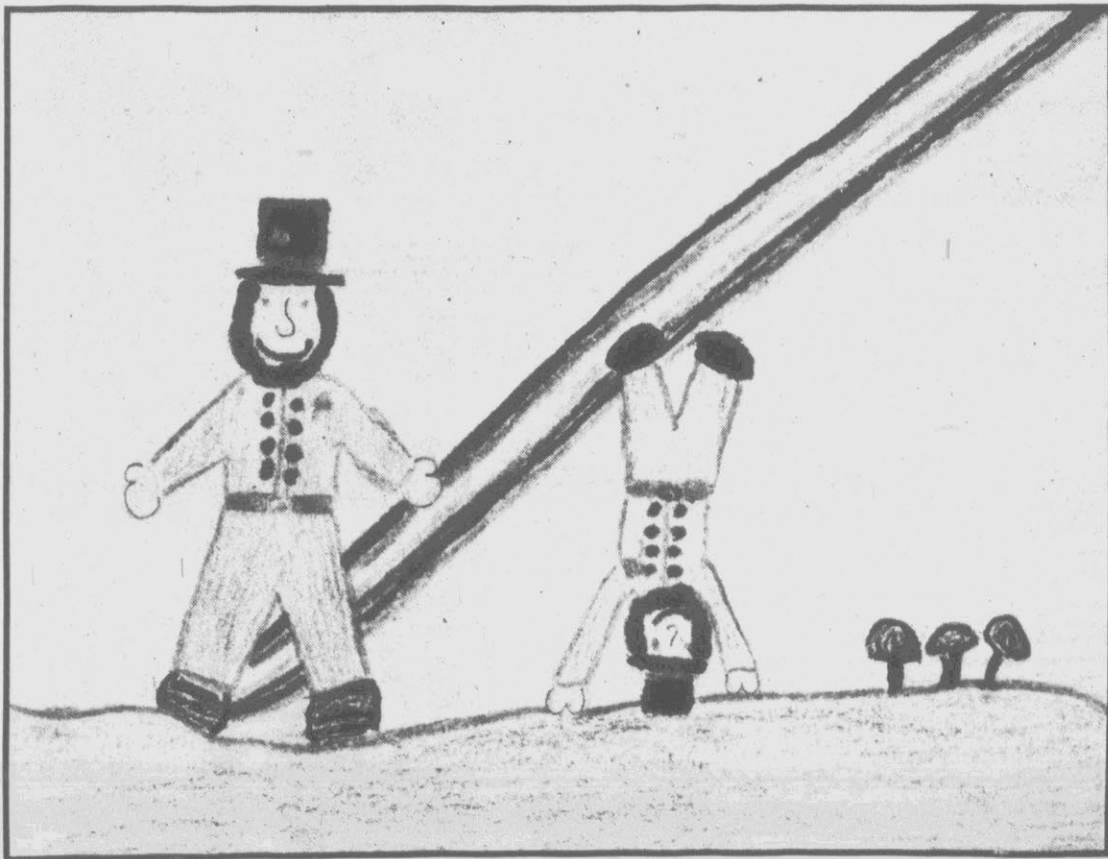

By Sheri Small

One day the little red squirrel saw a house. She did not have a place to stay. She did not like the oak tree. She did not like the oak tree anymore.
 Then she knocked on the door, but no one answered. Then someone came up to the house.
 She did not know who
 it was so the little red squirrel ran to the oak tree. The person went into the house. The little red squirrel saw the person with a bat in her hand.

 She was afraid! The person came out and left the door open. The person did not look back ... so the squirrel ran in.
 She went to the kitchen. A lady was there. This would not be a good place for her so she ran out.

Death Of A Friend

By Jennie Stoneham

I was reading a story about this boy I once knew.
 He was the cutest thing, his eyes were even blue.

And in the story I read that he had died.
 All I could do is lay down and cry.

Though we had some bad times we were still friends

But I still don't understand why his life had to end.

Now its so hard not to think of him everyday.
 Only if he were here, oh the things I would say.

The more I think about him,
 the more I realize.
 Another life begins as another one dies.

So till my time comes to die,
 we will be far apart.
 I hope he still remembers that I love him from the bottom of my heart.

Jennie Stoneham, 15, a student at E.B. Aycock School

The Sweet Holy Child

By Teresa Haddock

Falling rain brushes a window's ledge.
 Darkness sets as clouds pass slowly over a sullen meadow.
 Frail gray houses cry by aging brook,
 While the wind blows sadly through the tall, weeping trees.

a fawn cries for its mother.
 When a child walks the path beside the animated brook,
 The rain subsides and the sun breaks through those once blackened clouds.
 The houses stop wailing and the birds soar as
 The child's hair whisks gently

in the wind.
 The fawn arises, sensing the presence of the Sweet Holy Child.

Everybody wants it,

 Some can't live with it,

It forms people's greed,
 to live it's a need.
 The ones with tons of it are a

Make Mom Happy — Exercise And Eat Wisely

When your mother told you to eat your vegetables, drink your milk and go outside and play, she was giving you good advice. Good nutrition and adequate exercise are two key elements for a healthy body.

Exercise involves more than good intentions and an expensive pair of running shoes, of course. Good nutrition involves more than a daily vitamin pill, plenty of protein and frequent trips to the salad bar (which can be disastrous to the waistline.)

"I know, I know," you're probably thinking, "but exercise takes time. So does cooking meals with those four food groups Mom used to talk about. And time is what I don't have a lot of."

Exercise can be worked in more easily than you think. Get up 20 minutes earlier than usual and go for a brisk walk. You can manage a mile in that time if you don't dally and that's enough to put a smile on your doctor's face and burn a lot of calories in a month's time.

Eating right need not be terribly time-consuming either. A small container of yogurt in the morning is just as filling, fast and portable as a doughnut.

For those evenings when you don't feel like really cooking, turn to the freezer. A reduced-calorie entree, such as macaroni and cheese, will provide good nutrition with few calories in no time — and taste good too.

Of course, Mom would say you also need some vegetables and fruit, and Mom would be right. So stir-fry some snow peas (10 minutes maximum) and pour some hot fruit sauce over sliced pears (another 10 minutes).

For your efforts, minimal as they will be, you'll get everything Mom could hope for and all for only 500 calories and 20 minutes — plus eating time, of course.

PEA POD STIR-FRY

1 6-ounce package frozen Chinese pea pods
1/2 cup sliced mushrooms
1 teaspoon margarine
2 teaspoons soy sauce
1 clove garlic, minced
1/2 teaspoon lemon pepper
1 teaspoon chopped pimento
In medium skillet, saute snow peas and mushrooms in margarine over high heat, stirring constantly for 3 minutes. Add soy sauce, garlic and lemon pepper. Heat an additional 3 minutes or until vegetables are tender-crisp. Remove from heat. Stir in pimento. Makes 2 servings.

SLICED PEARS WITH SPICY APPLE CIDER SAUCE

1 cup apple cider
2 teaspoons cornstarch
1/2 teaspoon allspice
1 tablespoon fresh or frozen cranberries
1 tablespoon raisins
1 large pear, sliced (about 1 cup)
In small saucepan, combine apple cider, cornstarch and allspice. Cook, stirring constantly over medium heat until mixture is bubbly and slightly thickened. Stir in cranberries and raisins. Simmer 3 minutes or until hot. Serve over pears. Makes 2 servings.

Desire For Sweet Food Can Be Traced To Birth

By CHERIE EVANS
Reflector Staff Writer

People are born with a natural preference for sweet tastes as opposed to bitter tastes, said Kathryn Kolasa, professor and section head of Nutrition Education and Services at the Eastern Carolina Family Practice Center.

"We do know today that the infant is born with a preference for sweets," she said, speaking to the sixth class of the six-week class "Eating for Heart Health that met at the center on Tuesday night.

Preference for sweets may have developed as a defense mechanism, Ms. Kolasa said, explaining that sweetness may have been a safety indicator in foods.

According to "Sweet Choices" distributed by the Calorie Control Council in Atlanta, historical evidence supports the research in the preference of sweets.

For example, a 20,000-year-old cave painting of a neolithic man robbing a wild bee's nest illustrates the preference people have for sweet-tasting edibles, the literature said.

While it has been found that people naturally desire sweet tastes, people have learned to control the natural urge for sweets by "training yourself to ignore the preference or training yourself to reduce the preference for it," Ms. Kolasa said. But, the desire for sweets is not eliminated.

Sweet tastes have been satisfied naturally by honey and fruits, and since its refining about 600 years ago, table sugar has been the standard for sweetness, the literature said.

Various caloric sweeteners and low calorie sweeteners, however, recently have provided alternatives to table sugar or sucrose.

Pure crystalline fructose, high fructose corn syrups, sorbitol, mannitol and xylitol are alternative sweeteners that add a significant number of calories when used and may not be suitable for various dietary and health needs.

Aspartame and saccharin are alternative sweeteners that contribute few or no calories to the diet and are used in various dietary foods and beverages.

BLUEBERRY BRUNCH CAKE

1 cup all-purpose flour
1/3 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt
1 egg
1/2 cup milk
1/3 cup vegetable oil
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 cup fresh blueberries
1/4 cup sugar
2 tablespoons all-purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon ground cinnamon

Combine first four ingredients in a medium bowl, and set aside. Combine egg, milk, oil, and lemon juice; add to dry ingredients, mixing well. Pour batter into a greased 8-inch square baking pan; sprinkle with blueberries.

Combine remaining ingredients; sprinkle over blueberries. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Yield: 9 servings. 186 calories per serving.

CHERRY NUT BREAD

3/4 cup sugar
2 eggs
2 1/4 cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
1/4 cup maraschino cherry juice
1/2 chopped nuts

THE RIGHT STUFF — Good nutrition is both quick and delicious when you start with calorie-reduced macaroni and cheese — less than 300 calories — from the freezer case, and add stir-fried snow peas and poached pears.

Fresh Fruits Complement Ready-Made Crepes

LOS ANGELES — With the promise of spring comes all of the produce specialties of the season like fresh strawberries and the year's first tender, succulent asparagus. And along with longer days and warmer weather, most people resolve to spend less time and energy in the kitchen, so that more enjoyment can be had in the fresh outdoors.

So, it's smart to take advantage of convenience products that taste great and can be kept on hand for whenever needed. Voila — fresh, ready-to-eat crepes are here! Made from a French recipe, the crepes are now available nationwide in supermarket produce and deli departments. The thin, French pancakes come 10 to a package, along with recipes and serving suggestions.

The crepes sold under the label

"Table De France" contain no preservatives or additives, but have an excellent shelf life. The crepes stay fresh for up to three weeks at room temperature, or for two months refrigerated, and they can be frozen.

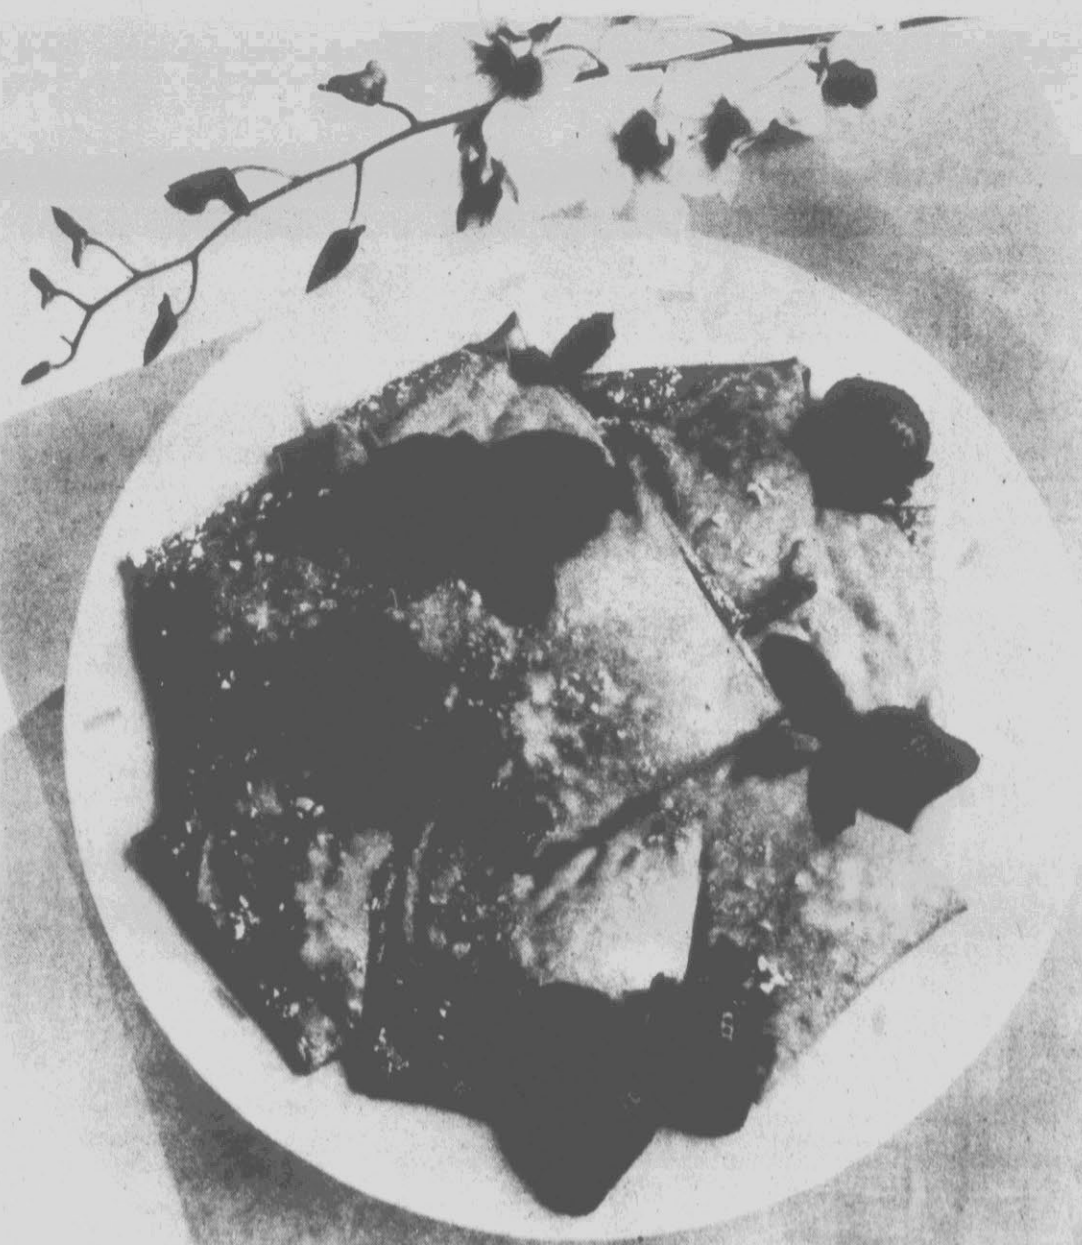

Since they can be used directly from the package (no warming is necessary), the crepes lend themselves to a variety of sweet and savory fillings.

Use fresh fruits and vegetables as easy fillings for the fresh crepes. Certainly steamed asparagus, perhaps with the traditional hollandaise sauce, or a simple sprinkling of basil and Parmesan cheese, would be a delicious natural complement for fresh crepes. Broccoli buds or baby carrots, along with sliced mushrooms, are other sensational substitutes.

For desserts and afternoon tea, it's hard to resist a strawberry crepe, nestled under a billow of whipped cream or vanilla ice cream. Fruits like fresh pineapple, papaya, kiwifruit and bananas, treated the same way, are equally satisfying — for the cook as well as the lucky guests. Pureeing some of the fruit, and adding a bit of sweetening to the puree, makes a super-easy, low-calorie sauce for fruit-filled crepes. Blintzes are an all-time favorite, but not difficult to make with fresh packaged crepes. The simple recipe for Fruit 'N Cheese Blintzes calls for a filling of cream cheese, cottage cheese, egg and sugar beaten together. Low in calories, these blintzes are not only natural for brunches.

HINT OF SPRING — What could be fresher than strawberries and fresh mint served with warm, sugar-sprinkled blintzes?

Fresh Herbs In Demand

By JOAN DRAKE
L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

Today's top chefs and cooks are choosing only the freshest recipe ingredients — including herbs used to enhance the flavors of other foods. The resulting demand for fresh herbs not only has encouraged a resurgence of the age-old custom of raising your own plants, but also has spawned an industry across America that markets freshly cut herbs.

In the early 1900s, almost every American home had at least a small herb garden. Easy access to high quality, commercially dried herbs and changes in life style were no doubt responsible for the decline in growing herbs during the past few decades. But a revival is now being seen — the public is once again showing a major interest in raising their own herbs.

This trend is also evidenced in increased sales reported by nurseries that specialize in herbs. An informal poll of several nursery owners showed the most popular choices include basil (sweet, as well as the other varieties), tarragon, rosemary, oregano, dill, thyme, parsley and bay trees. Because most of these plants can be grown even in containers, it is possible for those with very limited space to still raise their own herbs.

Of course, not everyone who wants to cook with fresh herbs has the time or inclination to grow their own. The solution for this group is cut fresh herbs now readily available at supermarkets, specialty stores and at produce stands.

Formerly annuals were only seasonally available, but growers are now raising quality plants in hot houses and can market them year round.

Growth estimates of the fresh-herb market vary, but many supermarket produce buyers agree that sales of these herbs have skyrocketed during the last two to three years. They universally agree this increase can be attributed to the public's desire for fresh, healthful foods.

Some stores are selling the herbs packaged in specially designed zippered-style plastic bags that the manufacturer claims inhibits ultra-

 1/3 cup vegetable oil
 3/4 teaspoon salt

 1 cup cooked mashed pumpkin
 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
 1 teaspoon soda
 1/2 cup each of raisins and nuts

Fold in nuts and raisins. Pour into 2 greased 8 1/2 x 4 1/2 loaf pans. Bake at 350 degrees for one hour or until loaves test done. Cool in pans or wire rack. Yield: two loaves. 36 half-sliced pieces.

ORANGE SHAKE

1/3 cup concentrated orange juice (1/2 of 6-ounce can)
 1/2 cup skim milk
 1/2 cup water
 2 tablespoons sugar or honey
 1/2 teaspoon vanilla extract
 5-6 ice cubes
 Combine all ingredients in blender and blend for 30 seconds. Serve with a garnish or orange slices. Yield: 3 cups.

BANANA MILK SHAKE

 1 cup iced cold skim milk
 1/4 teaspoon vanilla (optional)
 Combine ingredients in a blender and mix until frothy. Serve at once.

ANGEL FOOD CAKE

1 cup sifted cake flour
 3/4 granulated sugar or 1 1/4 cups confectioner's sugar
 1 1/2 cups egg whites (12-14) at room temperature
 1 1/2 teaspoons cream of tartar
 1/4 teaspoon salt
 3/4 cup granulated sugar
 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
 Combine sifted flour with sugar and sift three more times. Set aside.
 In a large bowl, beat egg whites until foamy. Add the cream of tartar and salt; beat until soft moist peaks form (tips will curl over when the beater is withdrawn). Continue beating the egg whites, gradually adding the remaining sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time, until stiff peaks form (tips stand straight when beater is removed). Add vanilla and almond extracts. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.
 Sift 1/4 cup of the reserved flour-sugar mixture at a time over the meringue until all the flour-sugar has been used. Gently fold in each addition. Turn into 10 x 4-inch ungreased tube pan. Gently cut through batter with a knife to prevent large air pockets from forming.

 Bake 30-35 minutes, or until top springs back when lightly touched.
 Remove cake from oven and immediately invert pan. Let cool in pan (approximately 2 hours).
 To remove cake from pan, run a sharp, thin knife around the sides of the pan and then remove outside rim. Run knife under cake and around inside rim to separate from bottom of pan.

BAKED PEARS WITH APRICOT SYRUP

6 pears
 1/3 cup apricot preserves or jam
 1/3 cup cognac or 1/3 cup water plus 1 teaspoon vanilla extract garnish: if served hot: 2 tablespoons margarine
 1/4 cup toasted wheat germ
 If served cold: 1/4 cup chopped almonds or pistachio nuts
 Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Peel pears. Cut in half, lengthwise. Scoop out center seeds. Place pears, cut side down, in 9 x 13-inch baking dish.
 In a small bowl combine apricot preserves with cognac or water and vanilla. Pour over pears. Cover with aluminum foil and bake 20-30 minutes or until pears are tender. Do not allow liquid to evaporate while pears bake. Add more liquid during baking period if necessary.
 If serving hot: Dot pears with margarine and sprinkle with toasted wheat germ. Return to oven and bake until margarine bubbles. Serve immediately.
 If serving cold: Allow pears to cool at room temperature. Refrigerate until chilled throughout (about 2 hours). Remove from refrigerator and place on platter or individual plates. Sprinkle with chopped nuts.

 Pour sauce over bananas. Sprinkle with almonds and dot with margarine, if desired.
 Bake in a 350 degree oven for a total of 25 minutes, basting bananas with sauce after the first 15 minutes of baking.

but perfect for a late-evening dessert with coffee.

Breakfasts and brunches are especially popular at this time of year, and using ready-made crepes can offer a head start. Instead of a casserole or omelet, try Asparagus Souffle Crepes with a light, airy filling reminiscent of a souffle. The egg mixture bakes inside the crepe along with spears of fresh asparagus, and the whole dish is topped with a simple basil cream sauce.

For an easy appetizer, try flavorful meat and cheese-filled crepe rolls for Crepe Hors d'oeuvres. Make ahead and chill to bring out to your guests just before serving. Try flavored cream cheeses for interesting variations.

Spinach Salad Crepe Cups are versatile crisp cups made with crepes. Use them to corral a salad or to hold a few scoops of ice cream, sherbet or cut-up fruit. Make ahead, if desired, but on the same day they're served.

FRUIT 'N CHEESE BLINTZES

1 8-ounce package cream cheese, softened

- 1 cup small curd cottage cheese
- 1 egg
- 1 tablespoon brown sugar
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 8 crepes, at room temperature
- Sifted powdered sugar
- 1 tablespoon melted butter or margarine

Desired fruit topping (prepared blueberry, cherry or peach pie filling; sliced fresh fruit, or fruit preserves)

In food processor or blender, place cream cheese, cottage cheese, egg, brown sugar and vanilla. Cover and blend until smooth. Spoon 2 heaping tablespoons of mixture onto center of each crepe, spreading into a small circle. Fold crepes in half over filling; then fold left and right edges to center. Fold over once more to make a packet.

Place blintzes, fold side down, in a buttered ovenproof dish. Brush crepes with melted butter. Place in a 400-degree oven for 10 minutes. Sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve with desired fruit topping. Make 8 blintzes.

ASPARAGUS SOUFFLE CREPES

- 24 stalks asparagus
- 6 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 6 tablespoons flour
- 1 2/3 cups milk
- 2 tablespoons crushed dried herbs
- 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan cheese

- Grated peel of 1 lemon
- 1/4 teaspoon pepper
- 8 eggs, separated
- 1/4 teaspoon cream of tartar
- 6 crepes, at room temperature
- 1/2 cup milk

Break off woody ends of asparagus stalks; steam asparagus for 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Set aside. Spray 8 individual au gratin dishes or a large shallow baking pan with sides with aerosol shortening. For souffle mixture, in a saucepan, melt butter; stir in flour. Add 1 2/3 cups milk all at once. Stir in herbs, cheese, peel and pepper; cook and stir until mixture thickens and bubbles. Cook 2 minutes more. Set aside half of mixture (about 3/4 cup) for later use.

Whisk egg yolks until blended in a medium bowl; stir into remaining sauce mixture. In another bowl on high speed of electric mixer, beat egg whites with cream of tartar to stiff peaks. Using a rubber spatula, fold one-third of the beaten whites into yolks; carefully fold in remaining whites.

To assemble, open a crepe onto baking dish. On half the crepe, lay 4 spears of asparagus so tips extend out a bit from each end. Spoon some of the souffle mixture of asparagus; fold crepe over it. Repeat with remaining crepes.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven for about 12 minutes, or until souffles appear set. Meanwhile, reheat reserved sauce; stir in remaining milk. Serve crepes at once with sauce. Makes 6 servings.

CREPE HORS D'OEUVRES

- 2 4-ounce containers whipped cream cheese with chives
- Few drops bottled hot pepper sauce
- 6 crepes, at room temperature
- 1/2 pound thinly sliced smoked turkey, ham or beef

Stir together the cream cheese and hot pepper sauce. On the lighter side of each crepe, spread one-sixth of the cream cheese mixture; top with meat slices. Roll up crepes tightly. Chill 1 hour, or up to 24 hours. To serve, slice each roll on the bias into 1-inch thick slices. Serve slices on a lettuce-lined platter. Makes about 42 appetizers.

SPINACH SALAD CREPE CUPS

- 6 crepes, at room temperature
- 2 cups fresh spinach leaves, washed and torn

- Half of a red bell pepper, chopped
- 1/2 cup shredded jicama
- 1 8-ounce container plain lowfat yogurt
- 2 teaspoon honey
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1/8 teaspoon pepper

Spray 6 glass custard cups or a popover pan with aerosol pan coating. Fold a 1-inch tuck in the center of each crepe; fit one crepe into each cup (crepes will extend about 2 inches above edges). Place cups on a baking sheet. Put a ball of aluminum foil inside each crepe cup so crepes hold their shape. Bake crepes in a 300-degree oven for 15 to 20 minutes, or until edges are crisp. Cool slightly; carefully remove crepes from cups. Discard foil.

Herbs,

violet rays and prolongs life. They recommend leaving the herbs in these bags for storage and standing the bags in the refrigerator, rather than laying them flat. Other markets are selling the herbs in small bunches that the shopper can pick up, look at and sniff.

With the exception of basil, tests conducted by the University of California Cooperative Extension found herb quality was best maintained at temperatures close to 32 degrees. They believe the optimum storage temperature for basil is 40 degree to 45 degrees. Other experiments stored basil in zippered-style plastic bags at temperatures up to 60 degrees with good results. Most herb experts consulted, however, still recommended basil be stored in the warmest part of the refrigerator. Morgan suggests storing herbs under refrigeration, covered in a firm plastic container with a slightly dampened paper towel on the bottom.

Although some fresh herbs hold better than others, all are intended to be used immediately. The large-leaf herbs such as basil should not be kept for more than a couple of days at the most. Thyme and rosemary may last up to a week or more, but the quality will deteriorate. With top quality, fresh herbs so readily available, it is easy to purchase herbs needed when they will be used. But for people who enjoy growing plants, another option is to raise the herbs used most often and purchase those that are out of season or used only occasionally.

Despite all the growth in herb use reported, industry experts believe many people are still intimidated by the thought of using fresh herbs. Being able to readily purchase or grow herbs successfully is only valuable if cooks know how to use them. Shirley Kerins of the Huntington Botanical Gardens in San Marino, Calif., says many people who have not used fresh herbs "think they are going to make the food taste funny." But those familiar with the use of fresh culinary herbs believe anyone who has always relied on the dried products will find that fresh herbs offer a new, exciting and pleasurable experience.

When substituting fresh herbs for dried herbs, use two to three times the amount specified. Taste, then a little more may be added if desired. To protect the delicate aromas and flavors of fresh herbs such as basil, chives, baby dill, chervil and savory, add them only during the last few minutes of cooking.

In cases where an entire bunch or package of herbs is not utilized, or at the end of the growing season, fresh herbs may be dried. Most sources recommended spreading the herbs on drying screens and placing them in a warm, dry place away from sunlight. After drying, package herbs in clean glass bottles and label with the name and date (It is also a good idea to date any dried herbs you purchase). Any herbs not used within a year will have lost most of the flavor. Fresh herbs may also be used to flavor vinegars and butter. Many cookbooks featuring recipes using fresh herbs can be found at a local library or bookstore.

CHICKEN BREAD

- 4 pounds wheat flour
- lukewarm water
- 1 garlic clove
- 1 chicken, skin removed, prepared as for wat (or use meat wat)
- 12 eggs
- 1 1/3 cups butter
- 2 teaspoon berberi
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon Wat Spices (see recipe following)
- 1 teaspoon ginger powder

Take a little wheat flour and mix with lukewarm water. Ground garlic and peel. Add them to wheat flour mixture. Cover it and let stand overnight. (This forms the yeast.) Next morning take out the garlic. Put the yeast in a large pan and add the wheat flour to it. Mix well with warm water to form a thick dough. Knead well. Cover and let rise. Knead again. Cover to rise. Hard cook the eggs. Prepare Doro Wat (recipe to follow). Before the wat gets cold, add the sauce from the wat to the wheat dough and knead well. Line a warmed baking pan with banana leaves or grease-proof paper and place the dough on this. Push the hard-cooked eggs and pieces until brown. Cook, cut in pieces, and serve for breakfast or cocktails. Serves 12 to 15 as a snack.

HONEY CARROTS

- (4 servings)
 - 10 to 12 small young carrots
 - 2 tablespoons margarine
 - 1 tablespoon brown sugar
 - 1 tablespoon honey
 - 2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley or fresh mint
- Wash and trim carrots. Cook in a small amount of boiling water for 15 minutes, or until tender. Drain.
- Melt margarine in a skillet or saucepan. Add sugar, honey and carrots. Cook over low heat, turning carrots frequently until well glazed. Sprinkle with chopped parsley or mint, and serve immediately.

Can't-Fail Recipe Makes Bread Baking No Big Deal

By MARIE BIANCO
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

The cook who has conquered the soufflé and can make a beurre blanc without stress often closes the cookbook at the bread chapter. Yeast. It seems magical, mystical, intimidating. Besides, baking bread takes too much time.

But homemade bread can be a cinch, if you follow our can't-fail recipe guaranteed to win converts. Simple and foolproof, it uses quick-acting dry yeast and the food processor to turn out fresh, fragrant loaves in two hours — start to finish.

And the cook actually spends only a few minutes in the kitchen. Most of the time, the bread simply needs to be left alone to rise.

Try this recipe three times, and you'll feel as if you've been baking bread all your life.

QUICK FOOD-PROCESSOR WHITE BREAD

- 2 packages quick-rising yeast
- 1/2 cup water (105 to 115 degrees)
- 1 tablespoon granulated sugar
- 2 cups ice-cold water
- 7 cups all-purpose flour or bread flour

- 6 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into chunks
- 2 teaspoons salt

1. Be sure to use yeast before expiration date on package. Rinse a bowl or measuring cup in warm water. Add the 1/2 cup warm water, sprinkle the yeast over the water, add sugar and stir until dissolved. If yeast does not seem to be dissolving, mix it with your fingertips. Set aside for 10 minutes. It will develop a foamy head. Combine this mixture with the cold water. (The processor will generate heat and turn itself off when it gets too hot, so cold water is used to keep the dough cool.)

2. In processor bowl with a 7-inch diameter and using the plastic dough blade, combine flour, butter and salt. Process for 20 seconds, or until butter disappears.

3. With the machine running, pour yeast liquid through the feed tube in a slow, steady stream, pouring only as fast as the flour can absorb it. This should take about 35 seconds. Continue processing until dough forms a ball and cleans the side of the work bowl; then let machine run for 60 seconds to complete kneading. If the machine turns itself off, it means that it is too hot. Allow it to cool for 15 minutes and try again. If dough feels too crumbly and does not form a ball, add 1 tablespoon cold water with the machine running. Repeat once or twice more, or until dough becomes moist, forms a ball and cleans sides of container. If dough is too sticky, add 1 tablespoon flour at a time with motor running and process 5 to 10 seconds. Repeat until dough forms a ball.

4. Remove dough from processor bowl and knead with your hands for one minute on a lightly floured surface. Shape dough into a ball. Place dough in a buttered bowl, butter top of dough and cover bowl with plastic wrap kept in place with a rubber band. Set bowl in a warm spot such as inside a gas oven with only the pilot light on, or in an unheated electric oven with a large pan of hot water below the rack the bowl is resting on. After about 30 minutes, the dough should be doubled in bulk and ready for shaping. Poke two fingers into the dough. If the dents remain, it has risen sufficiently. If the dent fills up rapidly, let the dough rise a little longer.

5. Punch down dough by pushing your fist into the center of the dough. Pull edges together and pinch any large air bubbles. If you have used bread flour, cover dough with a bowl and allow it to relax for 15 minutes, to allow the gluten to develop. This will make the dough easier to roll out.

6. Divide the dough in half. On a lightly floured surface, roll out each half into an 8-by-12-inch rectangle. Beginning at the short end, roll up dough tightly, pinching edges and ends to seal. Place loaves seam-side-down in two buttered 9-by-5-inch pans (or divide in thirds and place in three buttered 8-by-4-inch ones). Cover dough lightly with buttered plastic wrap and allow it to rise 15 to 20 minutes longer. Dough should rise to pan edge and the indentation should remain when dough is gently touched.

7. Bake pans on middle rack in a 375-degree oven for 30 minutes. Remove loaves from pans and return to oven for 5 to 10 minutes longer. Bread is done when its color is golden-brown and loaf sounds hollow when tapped on the bottom. Set bread on rack to cool completely. Makes 2 (or 3) loaves.

Variations:

Rolls: Divide each half of dough into 8 portions. Roll each out on a lightly floured surface until dough is 10 inches long. Shape each one into a loose knot. Bake in a 375-degree oven for about 18 to 20 minutes.

Wheat bread: Substitute 3 cups whole wheat flour for 3 cups white flour.

Rye bread: Substitute 3 cups rye flour for 3 cups white.
