NCNB Delivers Installment Of $100,000 Gift To ECU

NCNB National Bank of Greenville today presented the first installment of a $100,000 commitment to the East Carolina School of Business Golden Anniversary Campaign for use in enriching instruction and research. "Our feeling is that the university is becoming an ever-increasing resource to eastern North Carolina as both a source of employable graduates and technology," Sidney R. Warner, executive vice president and eastern regional executive, said.

Warner and Edgar W. Kirby III, NCNB city executive and vice president, delivered the first installment of the gift to ECU Chancellor Richard Eakin. Warner is a member of the East Carolina University Foundation, Inc.

"NCNB is growing as well, and we want to work together with East Carolina to ensure future growth in our region," Kirby said. "We've been very pleased with the ECU graduates we've hired and with those we encounter in our dealings with other businesses.

"We're happy to be able to support the school of business as it prepares these young people to become tomorrow's business leaders."

Assistance from area businesses creates numerous opportunities for the university, Eakin said after accepting the contribution.

"We are most appreciative of this generous gift from NCNB," Eakin said. "It clearly demonstrates a strong commitment to East Carolina University and to higher education in North Carolina."

"Support from our business leadership enables the university to achieve the high quality programs needed to educate our future businessmen and women. Quite simply, higher education is our best hope for the future. We appreciate NCNB's recognition of this fact and their willingness to participate in making education opportunities available."

Based in Charlotte, NCNB is the largest bank in the state and the Southeast.

James L. Lanier Jr., ECU vice chancellor for institutional advancement, said the gift represented a wise business decision.

"NCNB did not gain its position by making bad investments. This gift was a decision reached after much thought and consideration," Lanier said. "I am sure the board and management of NCNB realize that they will receive many dividends from this investment as new programs and graduates impact on eastern North Carolina and increasingly other parts of the country."

The ECU School of Business Golden Anniversary Campaign was announced in April 1986 with a goal of $2 million. The campaign celebrates 50 years of service and is East Carolina's first major gifts campaign for academic purposes.

Eakin said the NCNB gift accomplishes the campaign's original goal. Official announcement of the total raised will be made at the annual meeting of the school of business Commerce Club.

The campaign will allow the school of business to enter a new phase of development and to assume a greater leadership role in redirecting the economic thrust of eastern North Carolina, Dean Ernest B. Uhr said.

Funds raised will support ECU's first distinguished professorship, program enhancement and curriculum needs, student development, international programs, visiting executive programs, and student professional organizations.

With more than 2,000 students and a full-time faculty of 55, the school of business is the largest of ECU's nine professional schools.

Teen-Agers' Suicides Set N.J. Community Reeling

By PAUL MOSES and SCOTT LADD

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

BERGENFIELD, N.J. — Four teen-agers, some of whom had been close acquaintances of another youth who died a violent death last September, were found dead early Wednesday in a fume-filled garage. They left a suicide note in which they asked to be buried together.

The county prosecutor said they had been drinking.

The middle-class New York suburban community of Bergenfield reeled under the shock of the deaths of Thomas Olton, 19, his friend Thomas Rizzo, 19, and two sisters, Cheryl, 17, and Lisa Burress, 16. The teens were found in Olton's 1977 Chevrolet Camaro, whose engine was running.

The suicides brought to eight the number of Bergenfield teen-agers and young adults who have died unnatural deaths since last June. Bergen County Prosecutor Larry J. McClure said all apparently had been drinking before their deaths.

At a hastily prepared press conference a few hours after the deaths, McClure said, however, that he was not ready to link the deaths.

He said that a "lengthy" suicide note was found on a brown paper bag on the passenger's side of the car's front seat. He said that all four teens signed the note which said that they wanted to be waked together and buried together.

The bodies of the four — Olton in the front seat, the two girls and Rizzo slumped in the back — were discovered about 6:30 a.m. Wednesday by a resident of the Foster Village apartment complex. The man had heard a car running in a garage and contacted police.

"They looked like they were sleeping," said Eddie Regal, 28, who lives next to the garage complex and saw the bodies being removed. "The one girl, her eyes were opened and she was staring up. I'll never forget that sight."

Rizzo and Olton were dropouts from Bergenfield High School, according to McClure. They apparently had been having troubles with their parents and their futures, according to people who knew them. A preliminary examination of the bodies of Olton and Rizzo revealed old and fresh slash wounds on their wrists, according to McClure. A box of razor blades was found near Rizzo's body, McClure said. Autopsies will be performed Thursday.

Cheryl Burress, the older of the sisters, also was a dropout, according to McClure. A friend of the victims, Regina Ruggiero, 17, a senior at Bergenfield High School, said she believed the youths may have been depressed about the September death of a friend, Joseph Majors, who fell from a cliff. "Everyone had taken that very hard," she said.

Rizzo's mother told a reporter that Majors was her son's best friend and had committed suicide.

"They have a pact going on here in Bergenfield and they are dying one after another," she said.

"Obviously, if there was only one

U.S. Allows Iran To Buy Computers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Commerce Secretary Malcolm Baldrige today defended his department's tentative decision to permit the sale of computers to Iran despite the Pentagon's objections.

The computers in question have no military applications and "we could ship them directly to the Soviet Union for that matter," Baldrige told a Senate committee.

At issue is a proposed $1.4 million shipment of relatively unsophisticated computers made by Digital Equipment Corp. of Maynard, Mass., intended for use by the Iranian press agency and in electric power production.

"We have no reason not to approve it," Baldrige said. "These computers have technologies that are eight to 10 years old."

In his testimony to a Senate Banking subcommittee, Baldrige confirmed a dispute between the Commerce Department and Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger.

The New York Times reported in today's editions that Weinberger has requested that the issue be taken up by the National Security Council and ruled on by the president if necessary.

Since 1984, the United States has not permitted the export to Iran of goods that could have military applications.

Baldrige said he was a little miffed by Weinberger's position. "This is not a defense issue; this is a foreign policy issue," Baldrige testified.

On another issue, Baldrige said that he and Weinberger both oppose the proposed takeover by Fujitsu Ltd. of Japan of the Fairchild Semiconductor Corp. of California.

Baldrige has urged the administration to consider blocking the move, claiming it could lead to the undermining of the U.S. semiconductor industry.

South Africans Rally To Support Detainees

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Hundreds of South Africans, both blacks and whites, rallied today at churches, union halls and campuses in support of thousands of detainees held without charge under the state of emergency.

At the largest rally, about 800 people packed into a hall at the Central Methodist Church in Johannesburg. They included many of the country's most prominent anti-apartheid activists.

The main speech was by the Rev. Beyers Naude, general secretary of the South African Council of Churches and an Afrikaner who broke with the mainstream of that dominant white ethnic group over apartheid.

"We call for our country to be free of dictatorship and tyranny," Naude said to cheers and raised fists. "As long as one child remains in prison and detained, our country remains in shackles."

Later, about 60 of the blacks from the rally began jogging downtown, singing anti-apartheid songs. They were turned back by tear gas and pursued through side streets during an operation which, under state-of-emergency curbs on reporting about security force action, cannot be fully described.

The Detainees Parents Support Committee called for fasting, prayer and lighting candles today in support of detainees. It estimates at least 25,000 people, including 10,000 children, have been detained for varying periods since a national state of emergency was declared June 12. President P.W. Botha said it was to combat political violence and anti-apartheid protests.

Buyers Return To Retail Stores

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's retail sales rebounded in February as car buyers returned to the showrooms and stemmed a one-month plunge in auto sales, the government reported today.

The Commerce Department said retailers posted sales of $122.3 billion in February, up 4.1 percent from January and 4.4 percent from February 1986.

The advance was led by auto sales, up 14.4 percent from January. January was an especially dismal month for autos, with sales 27.7 percent below the levels of December, when people rushed to buy cars before the new tax law eliminated sales tax and interest deductions.

Excluding autos, sales advanced 1.5 percent in February from January levels, with modest improvements in every category.

Durable goods, including autos, advanced 8.8 percent. Sales of non-durable goods were up 1.3 percent.

Department stores posted sales advances of 2.0 percent in February. Grocery store sales were up 0.3 percent, and clothing store sales were up 0.8 percent.

The total sales figure of $122.3

By including an "unlimited" grandfather policy in the redrawing of attendance lines for the school system, the Pitt County Board of Education will allow certain families to choose the schools their children attend.

Eligible students currently enrolled in the school system — as well as their yet unborn siblings — will be able to choose whether they will attend the school they have been attending or move to the reassigned school.

However, the grandfather clause stipulates certain conditions under which the policy may be implemented. A majority of the students enrolled in the Greenville schools will not be covered by the policy; some of the students now in the Winterville schools will be able to take advantage of the clause.

The board approved the new attendance plans Monday by an 8-7 vote. A split occurred between board members and between city and county residents over the grandfather clause.

The approved policy states: "Parents of current students and future children of families currently residing in reassigned attendance areas will be allowed to continue to enroll all their children in the current attendance area as long as they desire to do so, subject to annual reviews to determine adherence to legal requirements and federal regulations. All children of a family must be enrolled in the same attendance area."

Barry Gaskins, public information director for the school system, said today the impact of the grandfathering policy cannot be predicted. The federal guidelines which might come into play will not be evident until the 1987-1988 school year.

The policy contains the provision: "If annual adjustments to the grandfathering provision by school are required to assure adherence to legal requirements or federal regulations, then grandfathering shall be denied on the basis of postmarked date or receipt of annual applications by parents-students and consideration of grade level and number of years a student has been enrolled in the school."

The definition of parents used in the policy is extended to include legal guardian and court-decreed custodians.

According to school officials, the only students eligible for the grandfather clause are those being moved from one attendance area to another attendance area. Students being moved from one school to another within the same attendance area — such as from Eastern School to Third Street School, both of which are in the J.H. Rose attendance area — are not protected by the grandfather clause. Students being reassigned from W.H. Robinson to the new school must attend the new school.

The parents' choice of attendance area for their children must be presented in writing by April 15 this year and by April 1 in subsequent years. Gaskins said the administration currently is identifying the specific students that reside in areas affected by grandfathering. Eligible students will receive a letter at school declaring their eligibility for grandfathering. Parents then must obtain, from the school, a form on which they declare their choice of schools for their children to attend. The form must be received by the school administration by April 15.

The policy says that eligible

Parks Panel Backs Removal Of Meters On Tennis Courts

By JERRY RAYNOR
Reflector Staff Writer

Action was taken Wednesday night at the March meeting of the Greenville Recreation and Parks Commission to approve the removal of meters to operate night lights at tennis courts in Greenville.

The decision has followed consideration over a period of several months on the possibility of some method of control other than the use of collection meters to cut on lights during night play time.

Recreation and Parks Department executive director Boyd Lee told commissioners that a study of the matter has shown that money needed to constantly repair the meter boxes "equals or exceeds the revenue from the meters."

Vandalizing of the meter boxes has been a continuing problem despite the fact that the city's two park guards each night make rounds to collect coins immediately after the 11 p.m. lights cut-off time.

Suggestions were made about several alternatives, including the possibility of retaining some courts for night use, and not lighting other courts during night hours. Commissioner Dr. Alfred King pointed out that lighting courts on a partial basis would result in players often not being able to get a court to play on.

Commissioners unanimously voted to discontinue use of meters and to remove them from all courts.

In a second matter up for action, commissioners unanimously approved a motion to suggest a name for a proposed advisory board for the Science-Nature Center at River Park North. Lee said city attorney Mac McCauley is working to come up with a plan that "will spell out the makeup in terms of the number of members and duties of members of such a board."

Once formed, the board will have a strictly advisory role as liaison persons without any voting powers. It will operate under the guidance of the Recreation and Parks Commission to recommend and report means of fund raising and program planning for the center.

"What we envision," Lee said, "is to have an advisory group drawn from different areas of the community that would be knowledgeable in the areas of human health, the planetarium, and in the natural sciences."

Commissioners expressed ideas that an advisory board would be drawn from representative areas — city and county schools, East Carolina University and the medical school, groups like the Sierra Club as well as individuals with interest and know-how in these areas who would like to volunteer their services.

Commissioners appointed a liaison committee to contact prospective advisory board members. These are: Sydney Womack, chairman of the commission, members Dr. Carl Willie and Dr. Alfred King and Lorraine Shinn, city council member who is the representative to the Recreation and Parks Commission.

"I see such a board as an opportunity on the part of agencies, schools, and individuals to serve in efforts to work for future achievements in the city's Science-Nature Center, both in terms of financial and program assistance," Wille said.

Representatives of agencies, groups or interested individuals are invited to call the department to get more information on the proposed advisory board. (Call the city number, 752-4137 and ask for the Recreation Department.)

In a discussion of the status of the proposed expansion of the current single building Science-Nature Center at River Park North, Lee informed commissioners on the status of plans for the construction of three buildings and other needs applicable to the center.

"The bids are for considerably more than the $250,000 that has been appropriated for the project," Lee said. "We have worked with the architect, the city engineer and others in an effort to bring the plans for the center within the budget, but it just can't be done adequately within that figure."

Lee said, as an example, that funds to update the planetarium instrument that has been donated by the Navy is estimated to be $20,000 to $35,000. The estimate for the dome for the planetarium is something like $40,000.

He said he has been informed that the ECU Med School has in hand about $15,000 to apply to the school's planned exhibit in their proposed Adventure in Living Center. "When completed, the exhibit will cost about $150,000. I understand it will be an exciting, informative, even spectacular exhibit, something everybody in Greenville and eastern North Carolina will enjoy and benefit from."

In view of the situation of appropriated funds not being sufficient to cover the costs of the planned three buildings and programs, Lee will give a full report on March 23 to the city council. "Until that time," Lee said, "we don't know what to expect, but I feel the council will do everything possible to help us go ahead with plans for the center."

Acting Too Quickly

When the General Assembly wants to move fast, it can. But in its haste, it often acts unsteadily.

Last week the state legislature took barely 24 hours to introduce, debate and enact an emergency construction bill that no one liked.

Lawmakers were intent upon heading off a takeover of the state's correction system by federal authorities — a move launched by several lawsuits claiming North Carolina's prisons are crowded to the point of violating inmates' constitutional rights.

Despite the almost frantic haste there is no guarantee the measure would satisfy the courts. Sen. Jim Johnson, D-Cabarrus, says the state's position will be that "we have a good faith effort" to reduce crowding. Basically, he admits, it will be a plea for leniency.

If there are people in the General Assembly and administrative branch of government who are dismayed by the threatened court action over prison conditions and the slowness of lawmakers in dealing with prison problems, the public at large should be angry, too.

First, citizens should be angry that legislators allowed conditions that endangered the health and well-being of citizens entrusted to the care of the state. Secondly, the public should be peeved at lawmakers for moving so slow a takeover of the corrections system by federal authorities is threatened. What those authorities did in past takeovers in other states proved a terribly costly experience.

In the recent legislation, an emergency building program was authorized. It will add 2,200 beds to the crowded prison system by replacing one prison and expanding 21 existing facilities across the state.

The bill also creates 23 new positions in the Department of Corrections to handle an expected load of parole candidates if a ceiling of 18,000 is put on the prison population and make additional inmates eligible for parole whenever that population reaches 97 percent of the 18,000 ceiling.

To expedite the construction program certain bidding laws were suspended.

Some early critics of the state Department of Corrections are backing off, acknowledging cumbersome regulations that made rapid construction of state buildings nearly impossible. Some even raise the point it was not that department's job to build prisons. State Budget Director C.C. Cameron has since been designated to take charge of the emergency construction program.

In 1985 the legislature set aside $12.5 million to relieve south Piedmont prison crowding — a measure which has not yet been accomplished. The next year another $14 million was added to the budget to begin expanding the rest of the system. The latter appropriation was never spent.

These two facts prompt speculation concerning whether, without the court's interference, the emergency measures enacted last week would become reality. North Carolina's people have a lot to complain about and a lot more to complain about if the present emergency measures prove too little and too late.

The action of the legislature is no way to manage the state's business.

Appealing Prospect

Two spotlighted politicians of the Southern states, Gov. Martha Collins (Ky.), and former Gov. William Winter (Miss.), recent North Carolina visitors, were asked the familiar question of whether Democrats should have a Southerner on the national Democratic ticket in 1988's presidential election.

Both thought it would represent a strong inducement to rallying Southern voters and both thought there could be a favorable impact on non-Southern party voters.

The prospect is appealing and one that Democrats must look at long and hard before the blanks on 1988's presidential ticket are filled in.

Winter sees the South as being where the votes are now. "If you extend the South all the way to Texas, New Mexico and Arizona ... the so-called Sun Belt ... the South has the largest number of electoral votes of any section of the country."

That is an accurate statement, and judging from the Democratic party's dismal failure to capture these votes in 1984, it is a statement that must be heeded in 1988. Many Southern voters balked at supporting the '84 party ticket because it was perceived as too liberal, in Winter's view. That is also a sound assessment.

It's still too early for naming names of potential candidates without getting out on a limb, but the region does have a number of Democratic leaders who have been building reputations as governors and senators. Several have experience in diverse governmental roles and prompt name recognition throughout the country.

In time, those proven individuals will emerge to the forefront. They have time to build even more attractive images.

Where Were You, Mr. President?

'Ronnie, I wrote it all down on your shirt cuff. The button is under the dining room table next to your foot. You step on it once to launch an all-out missile attack on the Soviet Union ...'

People don't care where you were on Aug. 8. They want you just as long as you will be their Teflon President.

"How can I be a Teflon leader when I don't know my own whereabouts?"

"Many Presidents did not know where they were during their terms in office. But that didn't stop them from getting into the World Almanac. History will remember you for what you forgot."

"Nancy, it's weird. I can't sleep in the afternoon trying to recall what I did on Aug. 8."

"Doesn't your staff have some record of that date?"

"They can't even remember what Donald Regan was doing that day."

"The date couldn't have been an important one or someone would have remembered seeing you."

"Suppose I was on a secret mission with Bud McFarlane and Ollie North flying arms in dense fog over Iran."

"You wouldn't do that."

"I would if I was still working at Warner Brothers."

"If I know you, Ronnie, you were probably doing nothing more than holding a photo opportunity on the White House lawn."

"Why don't I call Sam Donaldson and ask him if he shouted at me in the Rose Garden on Aug. 8?"

"It wouldn't mean anything. Sam shouts at you every time he sees you. Ronnie, you have a lot to remember now without trying to recall what you were doing two summers ago."

"But, Nancy, my whole credibility depends on it. How can a President maintain his popularity if he has no idea what he was doing in the heat of 1985?"

"Ronnie, all the people want to know is when you OK'd the arms for Iran."

"It's not that easy. I'll bet there isn't one person in this country who can remember when they OK'd an arms shipment to Iran."

"It doesn't matter. What matters is where you keep the button and how you push it."

"What button? I don't know anything about a button. Have I got a button here somewhere? Who said anything about a button?"

"Ronnie, I wrote it all down on your shirt cuff. The button is under the dining room table next to your foot. You step on it once to launch an all-out missile attack on the Soviet Union, and twice when you want the butler to clear the table. Can you remember that?"

"Of course. That's something that stays in a President's mind forever. What butler?"

Public Forum

To the editor:

I wonder if Mr. Keefe or any other newsman would look good under the same scrutiny they give our President. It is my humble opinion that the negative articles and cartoons being placed in your newspaper (like your Sunday, March 8, 1987 rendition of President Reagan's loss of memory as depicted by Mike Keefe of the Denver Post) should be spiced with a bit of praise.

I don't know of anyone who could have done more for this country the past six years than Ronald Reagan and, if the Congress had been more cooperative the past six years, we wouldn't have the trillion-dollar debt the news media and Congress want to say is his responsibility.

As in Jerry Clower's story about the coon hunt, the one in the tree says, "Well, shoot up here among us anyway. One of us has got to have some relief!"

I feel the media has not only shot up in the tree, but pulled him out and, like dogs, want to tear him to pieces. The election for a new President is not until November, 1988, so let's give Ronald Reagan a break and spend some time finding fault with the new candidates. I'm sure they will not be perfect either.

To the editor:

- What is one to think of someone who:
1. Wears clothing with little holes in them.
  2. Wastes hours of time engaged in non-productive activity.
  3. Has an awful odor about them at all times.
  4. Diverts money from their households to support a drug habit.
  5. Continues with the habit guaranteed to encourage illness and hasten their untimely deaths.
  6. Exposes everyone around them to the some dangers.
  7. Hurts their children before and after they're born.

8. Refuses to accept the facts showing that they are self-destructing.
9. Infringes on the rights of everyone else while "exercising their own rights."
10. Goes absolutely nuts when confronted with the examples listed above?

The individual outlined above could be almost anybody. He may have recognized himself by now. Many of the traits above apply to alcoholics, cocaine addicts and the like. More correctly, they characterize the average everyday smoker — smug in his knowledge that all the scientists are fakes and all statisticians are liars.

He provides a textbook example of "cognitive dissonance" — basically stated, "he who will not believe" even when faced by the irrefutable facts. He doesn't plan to be a burden on society, but he will. (He is sick more often, will die earlier, will run up a giant hospital bill etc.) He doesn't mean to burn holes in your clothes, but it happens (oops!) He does a good job at work, when he's working (not on a smoke break) He loves his kids, but he's giving them emphysema.

He's a nice fellow unless asked to smoke elsewhere. His cologne only compounds the odor. He can afford to smoke (He doesn't really miss that sailboat he could have owned by now if he had diverted the cigarette money to a special account).

Smokers and those whose loved ones smoke — it's not too late. For help or counsel, call 1-800-4-CANCER.

Strength For Today

One of the great philanthropists of the 19th century was a British surgeon named Bernardo.

One evening he came across a neglected little boy asleep on a London park bench. After being awakened, the boy on the park bench led the doctor to a shed where he found 13 such homeless boys.

As he looked at these poor waifs, Dr. Bernardo had a vision of a life of great service. He began an extensive and effective campaign to build homes for the boys.

Eventually, he raised money all over the British empire for this purpose. By 1900, it was estimated that there were 10,000 "graduates" of these homes in Britain.

Few of us can carry out philanthropy on such a scale as Dr. Bernardo, but all of us can carry the spirit of charity in our hearts.

Scapegoats And Missed Signals

WASHINGTON — In the present "We've turned the corner" mood of Ronald Reagan's — or, perhaps more accurately, Howard Baker's — Washington, the watchwords seem to be: "Now that this aberration is behind us, let's get on with the real business of the country."

Along with that state of mind, another familiar capital trait has been exhibited: the search for scapegoats.

As often happens in this kind of Washington political exercise, everyone and no one is ultimately to blame.

The president, in his speech about his role in the Iran-contra scandal, gives the impression that he was misled by a soft heart and misguided by well-intentioned subordinates. But not to worry, everything's okay now, you ain't seen nothing yet and just watch as that third and final act unfolds.

Congress, in thrashing about to afix responsibility, offers the excuse that the administration misled it. "They" didn't tell us, the politicians complain. Not, one notices, that failures of their own oversight investigatory functions contributed to disaster.

The Tower commission, in its report detailing massive mistakes, indicts nearly everyone, including the president, but somehow manages to exculpate him. It was just an isolated incident, a matter of inattentiveness to detail, a case of lax presidential "management style."

Now the intellectuals, political and literary, have weighed in with other findings of guilt. The press and its conspiracy of silence is to blame. If only the press had told us about Reagan, they wail, then we would have been forewarned and could have averted this.

As James David Barber, the distinguished presidential scholar and political scientist at Duke University, observed in The New York Times Sunday, echoing similar commentary in the latest New Yorker magazine:

"All sorts of newly wise observers — out to lunch for six years — now tell us that Ronald Reagan is not in charge, independent and factual, but rather is a president who has delegated his presidency, who has bought whatever scripts his aides have handed him and who could not have cared less whether he was speaking fact or fiction. True, but late. Where were these pundits when we needed them back when we the people were trying to figure out who ought to be president?"

For those in the press, that charge contains a measure of truth. Obviously, neither press nor Congress was vigilant enough in examining Reagan administration doings, especially given clear signals of illegality surrounding contra aid. But it is nonsense to suggest that Americans have not been well informed about Reagan's beliefs and methods of governance.

Reagan's personal and political record has been made abundantly clear for nearly a generation. It's ridiculous for political scholars and thoughtful citizens to claim otherwise.

For example: Squirreled away among other miscellany in the bottom of my office desk drawer is a 24-page published report about Reagan. It is dog-eared, stained by ink and coffee and has numerous passages underlined or highlighted by yellow markings.

Read now, it seems an obvious critique of the Reagan presidential style that produced the Iran-contra affair. Instead, it's a report by the moderate-to-liberal Republican Ripon Society 19 years ago. It analyzes Reagan's public record as candidate and California governor after his first presidential campaign took form.

Its unsparing criticisms have been repeated in all of Reagan's subsequent campaigns and throughout his White House years, namely:

"Our first conclusion concerns the governor's administrative ability. Ronald Reagan has spoken frequently on the dangers of big government, the need for lowering taxes, the desirability of cutting budgets and the importance of private initiative. He has preached those themes forcefully, illustrating his points with engaging anecdotes and well-turned phrases.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. says he gave up his 1988 presidential aspirations when he became chief of staff at the troubled Reagan White House. His supporters, and those who would have opposed him, say they take him at his word.

Still, Baker's sudden burst into the limelight after his relative obscurity since he left the Senate as majority leader three years ago has people asking:

Can this canny, ambitious politician who has so long sought the nation's highest office really have abandoned the quest in order to take on the possibly thankless job of sorting out the tangle left by the arms-to-Iran scheme?

The answer appears to be yes, at least for 1988.

But, it is asked, may he yet enter the fray, possibly as a last-minute compromise candidate, with a deadlocked convention turning to him as the man who salvaged President Reagan's second term?

The answer appears to be that such an outcome is highly unlikely.

Baker left the Senate partly because he said he did not think he could run for president while serving as majority leader. Yet he had managed to do so in 1980 while minority leader, letting his deputy, Ted Stevens of Alaska, step in for him. And his successor as majority leader, Kansas Sen. Bob Dole, is an active unannounced presidential candidate now.

Nobody has ever tried to run for president while serving as chief of staff of the White House, but there is pretty general agreement that it couldn't be done.

"It becomes a Catch-22 situation," said John Buckley, a spokesman for GOP presidential aspirant Jack Kemp. "In order to be viewed as having helped put the Reagan presidency back on track, he needs to stick to it for some time, but in order to stick to it for some time, this precludes a presidential bid."

In other words, while Baker is tied down at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave., Vice President George Bush, as well as Dole, Kemp and the others, will be out on the hustings doing their best to get to that address.

Even if White House prospects looked so good that Baker felt able to leave his post after the Iran-Contra investigations wind up, perhaps late this year, he would still have lost crucial time and could hardly make it up before the nominating process begins in Iowa in February.

Then what about the idea of a deadlocked convention?

Although some do not rule it out as an outside possibility, most observers call it unlikely, to say the least.

For one thing, there has not been a national political convention that has gone for more than one ballot since 1952, when Illinois Gov. Adlai E. Stevenson won the Democratic nomination over Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee on the second ballot in Chicago. The last time for the Republicans was 1948 in Philadelphia, when the delegates took two ballots to pick New York Gov. Thomas E. Dewey over Sen. Robert Taft of Ohio.

"The dynamics, certainly since he was running third, behind Bush and Dole, in a crowded field in most public opinion polls.

The former majority leader said Feb. 27 that he accepted the White House job "with the full knowledge this will eliminate me as a candidate for president (in 1988). You can't do both."

Sen. Warren Rudman of New Hampshire, who had been a Baker supporter in that state's pivotal early primary, visited the new chief of staff on his first day in office and reported, "He told me unequivocally that you can't be a candidate and do that job well, and I take him at his word."

Rudman declined to speculate, however, on the possibility of a deadlock among the delegates in Atlanta.

As for deciding whom to endorse, he added, "I'll take my time."

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, going out on a limb farther than most on the chances for a deadlock, said, "It's a long shot, but not inconceivable."

Baker aides say all of this does not

'Can this canny, ambitious politician who has so long sought the nation's highest office really have abandoned the quest in order to take on the possibly thankless job of sorting out the tangle left by the arms-to-Iran scheme?'

1964, have been for both parties to be swept along by the primary process, so we don't have an expectation that a deadlocked convention is likely any time in the future," said Buckley.

Even if there were a second ballot, "the bargaining is going to be among people who have delegates, who have something to offer and in return want something," said a GOP political consultant who spoke on condition he not be identified. Baker, this source said, would go to the convention "with no delegates and so therefore... absolutely zero to bargain with."

All of this speculation may be pointless, since Baker made his withdrawal pretty clear, even though mean the former Tennessee senator has given up politics.

"That's not what he said," Baker assistant Thomas C. Griscom told the Chattanooga News-Free Press. "There are other things in politics besides being president."

There is also 1992. When people start announcing their presidential candidacies four years from now, Baker will be 65.

W. Dale Nelson covers the White House for The Associated Press and covered the Senate while Howard Baker was its Republican leader.

Life On Ocracoke

Island Village Tries To Weather Tourism

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
OCRACOKE, N.C. (AP) — Elizabeth Howard has weathered every hurricane that has hit Ocracoke since 1913, but she wonders whether her island-village way of life will survive the current onslaught of tourist-related development.

North Carolina's 3,375-mile tidal shoreline, long neglected but now a focal point for development, has become the center of major controversy over preserving the past and moving on to the future. Do you build for tourists and vacationers, or do you leave the original shoreline to nature? This is the fourth of a six-part series exploring the problem.

Born here in 1910, she can trace her ancestry back to most of the families who settled here in the 1700s. But she feels the island is increasingly at the mercy of people who arrived a few years ago from places like New York and Florida.

"It's been a good place to live ... like one big family," she said in an interview at her home, built from timbers of a sailing ship. "But it's different now. Ocracoke has lost its hospitality. People aren't as friendly."

The Outer Banks village of Ocracoke, with about 650 year-round residents, lies at the southern end of Ocracoke Island, most of which is part of the Cape Hatteras National Seashore. It is still accessible only by boat.

The skyline as seen from the Cedar Island ferry once was dominated only by the island's lighthouse and a water tower. Now they've been joined by the Anchorage Motel, whose fourth story is under construction, and the three-story condominium Pirate's Quay.

"I don't like tall buildings. It takes the breeze away," said Mrs. Howard. "I wouldn't want someone to put a skyscraper next to me."

Alan Piper, a British yachtsman, settled in Ocracoke about three years ago after his ketch wrecked nearby. He recently returned from a cruise to Venezuela with his wife, son and two Ocracoke boys.

"Just in the year we were gone it's changed so much," he said. "They (islanders) moan about it."

Piper pointed to two harborside buildings. "That building has been here for years; it's owned by an islander, and no one complains. That one was built by an 'outsider,' so it's ugly," he said.

Mrs. Howard said long-time islanders are clannish — they even divide themselves among "Creekers" and "Pointers," depending on what part of Ocracoke they're from.

But she said Ocracoke has long depended on tourism — there was a popular boarding house on the island when she was a girl.

"Every place changes," she said. "You go forward or stand still."

The way those changes are managed will determine "the survival of a close-knit community," said Alton Ballance, a descendant of a long-time Ocracoke family, a Hyde County commissioner and teacher at the Ocracoke School.

"They're so used to the idea that Ocracoke is a small village where everyone knows everyone else," he said. "Suddenly, they see that little lot with the trees on it developed, and soon there are weird people there yelling and carrying on."

Before the surge in tourism, most islanders were from the same socio-economic background, he said.

"You introduce competition, money ... and that leads to greed and jealousy," he said. "Ocracoke is rapidly being bought up by people who can afford a $33,000 lot and a $100,000 house."

Until recently, development in the unincorporated village was unregulated, with some lots divided into tiny parcels, houses going up shoulder-to-shoulder and motels and restaurants mixed in with residences. Residents and tourists were concerned about traffic problems, the effect on the scenery and occasional water and electricity shortages. Officials were concerned that the increasing population could bring crime and other problems seen elsewhere on the coast.

Last April, the county commissioners adopted a development ordinance that sets limits on building height, setback, business parking and advertising.

"The atmosphere was right to introduce some development controls — people noticed some structures were incompatible aesthetically, and they saw a potential threat to the economy and the culture of the village."

If development is not controlled, Ocracoke may end up with the "honky-tonks ... and go-go-dancing" of Virginia Beach, said Frank Wardlow, director of the Ocracoke Water Association.

"People want to get away from that," said Wardlow, whose outfit is hooking up island buildings to a new water system. "But so far, our economy is not big enough to support beer joints."

Ten years ago, most of Ocracoke's visitors were families who brought children they could turn loose on the island. But today, Wardlow said, families can't afford to stay and most visitors are younger or older childless couples.

Ocracoke became popular "about the time the out-of-the-way places became the 'in' places to go," said Jake Johnson, manager of the Sandpiper sandwich shop.

As property values have risen — between 100 percent and 1,600 percent in eight years — many elderly people have been forced to sell their homes.

But even more people might have to leave if it weren't for the tourist-oriented development, Johnson said.

"If the tourist industry left the island, there'd probably be a mass exodus 12 or 18 months later," he said. "If the tourism industry goes, the whole island's gone."

Ballance estimated 75 percent of the businesses are now owned by "outsiders" — including the Sandpiper. But many long-time residents have profited from the other businesses, from increased employment and from selling their land.

"People are offered more money for their property ... than they've seen in a lifetime," said Johnson. "You're talking about people's pocketbooks now."

Johnson, 38, said he was born on the mainland but has become accepted by the islanders through his marriage to Hettie Johnson, 37, who also works at the Sandpiper. They have daughters aged 6 and 3 and a 7-year-old son.

"It's a great place to raise kids," said Mrs. Johnson. "We have no crime rate."

When she was growing up, Mrs. Johnson and her contemporaries hardly ever left the island, except to go to the hospital. They shopped by catalog and viewed television news, when it came, as "a comic book ... a fantasy world."

"A lot of people still never leave here," she said. "Half of them are afraid to go outside."

Ballance says Ocracokers must overcome their fear of the outside and the changes wrought from outside if the village community is to survive.

"Will Ocracoke be a place where people can afford to live year-round, a place where you can raise a family in a place that provides adequate services? Or will the emphasis be placed on developing the service economy so much that we forget about ... the school, churches, civic organizations that are at the heart of the community?" he said.

"Everyone needs to get more involved to make Ocracoke a better place to live, as opposed to a better place to make more money. That's either going to save or break Ocracoke. If we lay around like we do now, we're going to fall into the hands of the developers."

OCRACOKE RESIDENT — Elizabeth Howard has weathered every hurricane that has hit Ocracoke Island since 1913, but she wonders now if her island lifestyle will survive the current onslaught of tourism development. Tourism has become a major concern all along North Carolina's coast. (AP Laserphoto)

Legislature Gets Bills To Revise Schools' Leadership

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan are pushing competing blueprints for overhauling the leadership of the state's elementary and secondary school system.

However, the two plans agree on a key point: the superintendent of public instruction, a member of the Council of State who is elected statewide, should be appointed by the State Board of Education.

The Martin and Jordan plans were to be introduced today in the Senate. Both were filed Wednesday.

The measures, which would require a constitutional amendment and would have to be approved in a statewide referendum to take effect, promise to be controversial. Lawmakers for years have resisted efforts to make the superintendent's position appointive, even as they've agreed the current administrative system is unwieldy.

"I'm very hesitant about asking the people to give up their right to vote on officials," House Speaker Liston Ramsey said in an interview. "I don't think the people will go along with it."

Jordan acknowledges there is considerable resistance to altering the status quo. But the co-sponsor of his bill, Sen. Charles Hipps, D-Haywood, says the decision by Superintendent Craig Phillips not to seek re-election next year gives the Legislature an opportunity to change the system without appearing to attack the incumbent.

"If we're ever going to do anything about this situation, now is the time," Hipps said.

Phillips said in a telephone interview he opposes making his job appointive. He has called for making the superintendent chairman of the State Board of Education.

Critics deride the existing system as "a three-headed monster."

The superintendent, elected on his own, does not answer to the State Board of Education and the two often have clashed, Jordan said. The board chooses the controller, who manages the education bureaucracy's finances. The governor appoints 11 of the 13 board members, subject to the Legislature's approval. The other two are the lieutenant governor and the state treasurer.

Under the Jordan plan, recommended by a legislative study committee, the board would elect the superintendent, who would choose the controller. The board would consist of the lieutenant governor, treasurer and 12 appointees — eight by the governor, two by the Senate and two by the House.

That system would give the state's elementary and secondary schools the same leadership system as the University of North Carolina system and the Department of Community Colleges, both of which have policy-making boards that choose the system presidents, Jordan said.

"You'd have a very, very strong superintendent ... (who) would exercise the kind of influence over the board that a Bill Friday did over the Board of Governors," Jordan said, referring to the retired UNC president. "A consensus would be reached (on school policy) and the superintendent would be the person that would articulate the consensus."

The Martin plan also calls for an appointed superintendent. But it would have the governor continue to appoint all board members except the lieutenant governor and state treasurer.

"The governor is the chief executive officer of the state, the person to whom the people look to establish educational policy," Ward Purrington, Martin's chief lobbyist, said. "The State Board of Education is an executive board that sets policy."

Teacher Evaluations Criticized

RALEIGH (AP) — Teacher evaluation programs like those used in North Carolina are inadequate, fail to help teachers improve and may do more harm than good, an education expert says.

"Our approach to teacher evaluation is so impoverished that it is likely to be destructive rather than constructive," said Arthur Wise, director of the Center for the Study of the Teaching Profession operated by the Rand Corp. in Washington.

Wise, speaking Wednesday to about 200 school administrators attending the spring conference of the North Carolina Association of School Administrators in Raleigh, was critical of recent attempts to develop objective standards for evaluating teachers.

"Teacher evaluation is inherently a subjective activity," he said. "When you screen out all the subjectivity, you end up focusing on the most trivial aspects of teaching."

The state Department of Public Instruction is testing new evaluation criteria that focuses on research-based teaching practices that can be observed objectively in the classroom. Those standards could be used to evaluate teachers statewide next year.

Wise told the administrators they must begin upgrading the professionalism of teaching. Instead of putting more controls on teachers, they should loosen the controls and raise the standards of certification.

Without using a professional approach to evaluating teachers, fewer talented people will be attracted to the profession, he said.

Backers Of Early Parole Bill Retreat Before Opposition

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Supporters of a bill allowing youthful drug dealers to qualify for early parole and probation beat a hasty retreat after opponents said it would send North Carolinians the wrong message.

A bill to eliminate a law that bars drug traffickers from being sentenced as "committed youthful offenders," even when they qualify in every other respect, Wednesday was referred to the Senate committee that endorsed it after meeting heavy fire during floor debate.

"I do not believe society in the condition it is now needs to give any further break to people who traffic in drugs," said Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland.

Under existing law, judges may sentence nearly all criminals under age 21 — and some as old as 25 — as committed youthful offenders. The designation means the lawbreaker is immediately eligible for parole, regardless of the length of his sentence.

However, the law says convicted drug traffickers may not receive CYO status. The bill, sponsored by Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, would remove that exemption.

Swain said only about 50 people currently behind bars would be affected. "It will make the law just ... more equal," he said.

Sen. Jim Johnson, R-Cabarrus, a defense attorney who said he had represented many young drug dealers in court, said the bill would convince them they would not be punished severely for their crimes.

"If you don't train a young dog early, he's a chicken killer the rest of his life," he said. "You can't send two messages. You send one or none."

Swain said the bill was supported by the chairman of the North Carolina Parole Commission, which decides which inmates should be paroled. Also supporting the bill was Sen. William H. Barker, D-Pamlico, who said his experience as a prosecutor indicated that CYO status offered a tool for inducing youthful offenders to cooperate.

The debate finally bogged down on legal technicalities, leading the Senate to vote 46-1 to return the measure to the Judiciary III Committee for further study.

In other legislative action: After lengthy debate, the Senate tentatively approved 47-2 a bill to clarify which lawbreakers are eligible for community service parole, which allows early release in exchange for 32 hours of community work per 30 days.

The eligibility criteria for community service parole includes a requirement that the offender be serving his first active sentence of a term longer than one year.

Sen. Bob Swain, D-Buncombe, said some judges are interpreting the requirement as exempting offenders sentenced to consecutive or concurrent sentences, although people guilty of the same crimes who are not given consecutive or concurrent sentences are considered eligible.

But Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, argued that it would enable people with multiple convictions to be eligible for community service parole. "I don't believe a man with two or three offenses on his record should be eligible," he said.

Greater predictability of pay, equalization of benefits among state employees and a better grievance procedure were among issues of concern to the State Employees Association.

Butch Gunnells, executive director of the group, told the Senate State Personnel Committee that employees feel they have been "living on the edge" since merit pay was frozen in 1982.

Gunnells proposed a salary adjustment fund so that when jobs are reclassified across the board the pay won't be contingent on which department has the most money left in their budgets.

Gunnells said there are differences in benefits between the state Highway Patrol and general state employees and that disability varies between law officers and other government workers.

He also said the grievance procedure should be changed because "employees almost always lose one way or another."

Bills to speed child-abuse trials to reduce the trauma on victims and minors testifying were sent to a Senate subcommittee after drawing some debate.

Ron Stephens of the Conference of District Attorneys said mandating faster trials could pose some practical problems.

The bills by Sen. Ollie Harris, D-Cleveland, would affect cases involving victims and witnesses under age 18.

Sen. Dennis Winner, D-Buncombe, filed for introduction a bill to narrow the criteria for appealing convictions directly to the state Supreme Court.

Currently, convictions that result in a sentence of death or life imprisonment, except those based on a plea of guilty or no contest, are sent directly to the Supreme Court.

Under Winner's bill, only capital murder cases resulting in a death or life imprisonment sentence would bypass the N.C. Court of Appeals.

Sen. Bill Redman, R-Iredell, submitted his resignation and bade farewell to the Senate. Gov. Jim Martin has nominated Redman to serve on the state Utilities Commission.

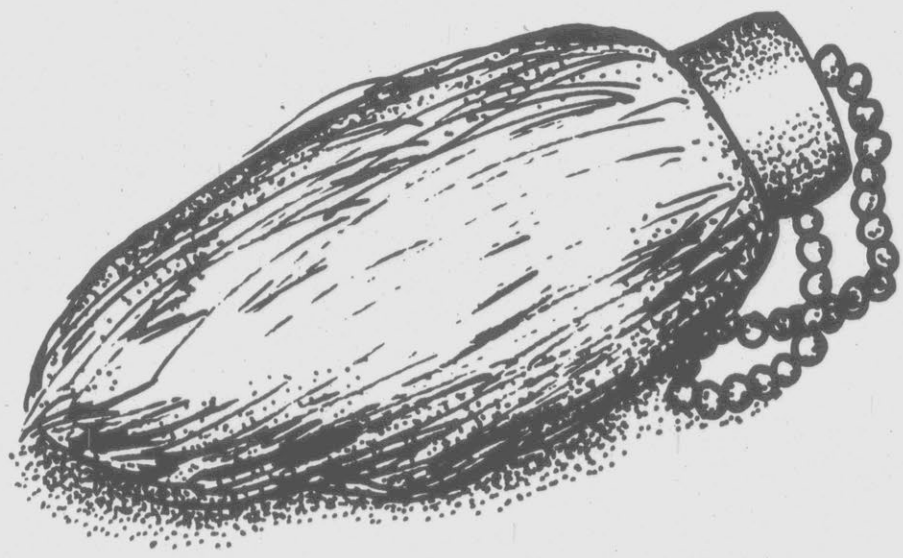

The House and Senate were expected to confirm the nomination in a joint session as early as today.

"I am convinced that few citizens of this state understand the burden that legislators carry," Redman, two-term Senate minority leader, said in a floor speech that drew an ovation from his colleagues.

Sen. J.J. "Monk" Harrington, D-Bertie, the president pro tem, hailed Redman as "an outstanding statesman and a good senator. We couldn't ever get him over to the right party, but he ... tried to do a good job for the people of North Carolina."

Redman's replacement is Howard Bryan, former mayor pro tem of Statesville.

Senators To Study Tax Bills

RALEIGH (AP) — Competing versions of bills to cut unemployment taxes and increase benefits are headed for debate on the Senate floor after winning approval in vastly different ways.

While the House had no debate in passing its version 105-0 Wednesday, the Senate Finance Committee exchanged strong words before agreeing by a slim 11-9 margin to advance the other bill.

Both bills would provide an average tax cut of 14 percent for employers. Each would raise jobless benefits to pre-1983 levels, when those out of work got as much as 66.6 percent of their former salaries instead of the current 60 percent. Each bill calls for a $200 million state reserve fund to supplement a federal reserve of $1.2 billion.

The controversy came over how to use interest from the state reserve. The Senate plan would spend it on job training while the House bill would designate 15 percent for the Employment Security Commission and the rest would stay in the fund. Both versions were scheduled for consideration in the Senate this afternoon.

Sen. Tony Rand, D-Cumberland, said earmarking money for job training "is a classic example, I would say to you, of throwing money at a problem."

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, retorted that lawmakers have long balked at spending money on anything except buildings and roads.

"There's nobody in North Carolina deserves any more sympathy than these people we're talking about," Thomas said. "We're talking about somebody here who's lost his job. You lawyers don't really understand that because you never are unemployed, you've never produced any income."

That brought comment from Sen. R.C. Soles, D-Columbus, another attorney on the panel.

"We're really tired of broadside slaps at lawyers and he just lost one vote," Soles said. But Soles later joined the majority in endorsing the bill.

Thomas apologized on the Senate floor for his comments.

Report Says Justice Department To Back Suit Over Judicial Elections

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — The federal government is preparing to side with the NAACP in a lawsuit that challenges the system used to elect Superior Court judges in North Carolina, a Winston-Salem newspaper says.

The lawsuit says that the state's method of judicial elections is discriminatory and unconstitutional because it dilutes minority voting strength. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People filed the lawsuit in October in the U.S. District Court in Raleigh.

The Winston-Salem Journal reported in today's editions that a U.S. Justice Department brief it had obtained supports the NAACP's contention that judicial elections fall under Voting Rights Act of 1965, which prohibits voting discrimination.

Attorneys for the state have asked Judge W. Earl Britt to dismiss the lawsuit because, they say, Section 2 of the Voting Rights Act applies only to elected representatives, not judges.

But the Journal said the government brief expected to be filed this week quotes from a ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court that appears to refute the state's primary argument that the Voting Rights Act makes a distinction between legislative and judicial elections.

The brief quotes the Supreme Court as saying, "It is quite clear that no such distinction can be attributed to the Act."

"In sum," the brief says, "there is no basis under either the Voting Rights Act or the United States Constitution for exempting altogether the election of judges from Section 2's prohibition against discrimination in voting."

The brief was signed by Richard J. Ritter, an attorney with the Civil Rights Division of the Justice Department, the newspaper said.

C. Allen Foster, the Greensboro lawyer who filed the suit said that the state's election process makes it difficult for minorities to win election to the Superior Court bench.

The state is divided into 30 judicial districts, but elections for those districts are held statewide.

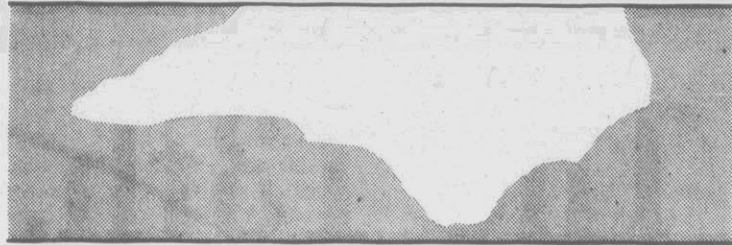

The lawsuit asks that those elections be held within subdivisions, or electoral districts, of those 30 judicial districts. If the judicial districts were subdivided, the suit says, electoral districts within eight of them could contain a majority of blacks or other minorities.

In the past, Republicans also have sought to abolish statewide election of judges. Because Democrats outnumber Republicans in the state, Republican judicial candidates generally do not fare well, they say.

Foster, a Republican, had asked the Justice Department to intervene in the case, said Romallus O. Murphy, an attorney for the state NAACP. Murphy, the NAACP's associate general counsel, praised the federal government's intervention.

"It is important that the Justice Department would file that motion supporting our case," he said. "The Justice Department has been deeply involved in voting rights litigation."

IN THE STATE

Deputy Trial

RALEIGH (AP) — A confessed drug dealer says he accompanied a former Robeson County deputy to the county courthouse to retrieve drugs stolen from the sheriff's evidence locker and paid him $19,000 for the cocaine and other drugs.

Johnny Lee Jones testified for almost five hours Wednesday in the trial of Mitchell Stevens, who is charged with four counts of conspiracy in connection with the August thefts from the evidence room.

Jones and John Delton Locklear, who were also charged in the case, pleaded guilty Monday in U.S. District Court in Raleigh to two counts of conspiracy to traffic in cocaine. Each could face up to eight years in prison.

More than 400 ounces of the cocaine later stolen from the sheriff's department was confiscated when Stevens and other deputies arrested Locklear in March 1986. Locklear's arrest came after Jones agreed to help sheriff's deputies set up the drug buys, investigators say.

Gateway

RALEIGH (AP) — The Raleigh-Durham Airport Authority has told the U.S. Department of Transportation it may have to reopen the London gateway hearings because of the recent announcement that Piedmont Airlines plans to merge with USAir.

In briefs filed at the Department of Transportation in Washington Wednesday, RDU director John Brantley said that in the past, USAir has been offered gateways to London from its Pittsburgh hub. But Brantley said USAir turned down that gateway, saying it didn't want to get involved in international routes.

Now that Piedmont is going to be owned by USAir, the transportation department ought to find out what USAir's intentions are before acting on a recommendation that Piedmont and Charlotte — rather than Raleigh and American Airlines — get the gateway, Brantley said.

Flea Solutions

BURNSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — There's more than one way to skin a cat — or get rid of fleas — as Burnsville Elementary School Principal Alan Lusk now knows.

Since a newspaper story about the flea problem plaguing two classrooms appeared last week, Lusk has been besieged by calls and letters offering solutions "from napalm right on down."

Many of the suggestions are simple home remedies people swear will do the trick: agricultural lime, Sevin and Blue Devil dust, salt — sprinkled all over everything.

"They don't just tell you what will work — they tell you the whole history of the cure. They've called me at home, at school, long distance in some cases," Lusk said.

Only one home remedy — burning sulphur in the school — has been positively ruled out by Lusk. While it might do in the chemical odor as well as the fleas, Lusk is having none of it.

"I don't know whether you've ever smelled burning sulphur, but it's about as fragrant as 18-week-old eggs," he said.

Conviction

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — A Forsyth County jury deliberated just 15 minutes before finding a Winston-Salem man guilty of assault with a deadly weapon and felony hit and run for allegedly running down a black motorcycle rider.

Witnesses Wednesday depicted Cecil Wayne Bost, 31, of Walkertown as a man whose overpowering racial hatred led him to drive over Donny Ray Murray last July and ram a carload of black people through a doughnut shop window in 1984.

Bost had pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to the charges.

"I've wanted to apologize to this man for some time, but I haven't had a chance to," Bost said after the verdict was returned. "I do not hate black people. I never have."

Bost said he ran Murray down because he is a manic-depressive and didn't know what he was doing at the time.

It was the second time Bost has been convicted of assault charges involving black people. He pleaded guilty Sept. 22 to hitting a car from behind with a truck and pushing into a doughnut shop.

Dog Rescue

GOLDSTON, N.C. (AP) — A 7-month-old mixed breed puppy has been credited with saving the life of an 82-year-old man who spent a cold and rainy night in a shallow ditch after he became disoriented on a walk.

Albert Oldham was discovered Tuesday about a mile from his house after searchers heard a dog barking, said Mark Scott, Chatham County's director of emergency management.

Oldham, who Scott said seemed to be in good shape when found, was transported to Chatham Hospital for observation. Oldham was found on his back in a ditch with the dog sitting on his chest, Scott said.

The 7-month-old black, brown-and-white mixed breed dog named Sheila, which belongs to Oldham's neighbor, Robert Lee Barnes, had apparently followed Oldham on his journey and had stayed with him throughout the ordeal.

Banking Nominee Says He'll Stay

By The Associated Press

Gov. Jim Martin's nominee for state banking commissioner says he will not withdraw his name from consideration, even if the House Banking Committee refuses to give him a positive review.

"If I don't get favorable recommendation, I'm still gonna let the House and Senate vote," Ben Tison, a vice president and trust officer of NCNB National Bank in Charlotte, said Wednesday. "I would certainly not withdraw my name."

A hearing on the nomination was scheduled today before the House Banking Committee and the Senate Commerce Committee. The full House and Senate must vote on the nomination after the committees make their recommendations.

Rep. Ray Fletcher, D-Burke, chairman of the banking committee, said Tison faces a struggle.

The nomination "will come out of the committee one way or the other. At this point, it looks like he may not come out in the affirmative," Fletcher said.

Senate Democrats in a recent caucus indicated they would support Tison's nomination, the newspaper said.

The complaints in the House center on Tison's career with the state's largest national bank and how he would handle the job of regulating state-chartered banks.

"Legislators wonder if he'll be really interested in the people," Fletcher said.

Even some Republicans, such as Rep. Harold Brubaker of Randolph County, have expressed concerns about Tison's ties to large banking interests. Brubaker says it might be better to look for a bank commissioner more familiar with state banks.

Tison served 12 years in the Legislature — 10 in the House and two in the Senate — as a Democrat. In 1985 he abandoned the Democratic Party and registered to vote as a Republican.

Tison says it is old feuds and the Democrats' desire to show their independence of a Republican government that are threatening his nomination.

Bill Draws Opposition

ROBBINSVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Legislation introduced by U.S. Rep. James McClure Clarke, D-N.C., and U.S. Sen. Terry Sanford, D-N.C., aimed at settling the North Shore controversy has already met opposition.

First, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., said he could not support the legislation and now the Graham County Board of Commissioners has voiced its opposition.

The Clarke-Sanford bill would require the federal government to pay Swain County $9.5 million and to forgive a Farmer's Home Administration loan to the county for the building of a new high school. The bill also designates almost all of the Great Smoky Mountain National Park as wilderness, and does not provide for a road to cemeteries on the north shore of Fontana Lake.

Members of the North Shore Cemetery Association are also opposed to the Clarke-Sanford bill because they are afraid that the wilderness designation will eventually deny them access to cemeteries left in the park.

The commissioners said Wednesday they support Helms' bill, also introduced Tuesday, that would allow the National Park Service to build an access road to the cemeteries north of Fontana Lake and would exempt 44,000 acres of the park from wilderness designation.

It is the 44,000 acres north of Fontana Lake and the primitive road that have been the bottleneck in settling the dispute. There has been no opposition to the cash settlement to Swain County and the forgiving of a Farmer's Home Administration debt, officials said.

State May Relocate Wild Ponies

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials may relocate some wild ponies that roam an island wildlife sanctuary in Carteret County after a dozen of the animals died from what authorities believe was starvation.

John Taggart, coordinator of the state's estuarine sanctuary program, said Wednesday the number of ponies in the Rachel Carson Estuarine Sanctuary near Beaufort might be reduced this fall because vegetation on the island might not provide enough food.

Taggart said the herd, which now includes 53 ponies, and the vegetation would be examined to determine how many animals will be allowed to stay in the sanctuary.

An autopsy on one of the ponies found dead in the sanctuary last week showed the animal died from a combination of starvation and infestation by parasites, Dr. C.W. Pittman of the state Department of Agriculture's animal disease laboratory told the News and Observer of Raleigh.

Pittman said a lack of food had severely weakened the animal, while parasitic worms further limited its ability to digest food. He said the pony had no food in its stomach when it died and its body had used up reserves of fatty tissue.

"I found the animal to be in a very poor state," he said. "There was no evidence of fatty tissue found in the entire body."

Taggart said the summer drought damaged vegetation in the sanctuary, but most of the animals appeared to be in good condition when they were examined in January.

He said the state probably would work with residents to find homes for any animals that are removed. He said state officials supported efforts by a group of local residents to feed the remaining animals with hay until the natural vegetation returns this spring.

Taggart said there are no plans to treat the remaining animals for parasites.

"We look at them as part of the wildlife on the site," he said. "They have survived very well."

Scientists Sought For Collider Effort

RALEIGH (AP) — The science adviser to Gov. Jim Martin says the original project coordinator trying to bring a superconducting supercollider to North Carolina has been removed and will be replaced by a science director and a physicist.

Earl Mac Cormac removed Patricia Poteat as project coordinator March 2. With the deadline for the $6 billion project less than five months away, he says he is looking for two scientists to head the state's efforts to get the giant underground atom smasher.

As the project coordinator, Ms. Poteat oversaw the consultants and researchers who worked on the many technical and legal aspects of the project.

"I thought her performance was fine, up to a point," Mac Cormac said. The main reason for reassigning her, he said, was to put technical people in the project's top spots.

Ms. Poteat, who has returned to her post as deputy director of the state Board of Science and Technology, had worked on the project for 18 months. Grace Rohrer, the head of the state's supercollider task force, said Ms. Poteat played a critical role in developing the state's bid.

She said she had heard no complaints about Ms. Poteat's performance and said the move "was a surprise to all of us."

David W. Guth, the special assistant to the secretary of administration, said: "Pat seemed to have a thorough knowledge of the project. If she had any deficiencies in her technical background, she more than made up for it with her organizational skills.

"There may be some philosophical or personal differences between her and Earl Mac Cormac. It's never been laid out to me. I get the impression that there was something in the chemistry between the two."

On Feb. 10, the U.S. Department of Energy set a deadline of August for bids from states wanting to build the supercollider. The project is an underground, 52-mile tunnel that will measure the energy of atomic particles colliding at fantastic speeds.

The new deadline forced the state to accelerate the work on its application.

Baptists Confirm Ban On Women

ATLANTA (AP) — Southern Baptists confirmed their decision to prohibit the denomination from offering financial support to churches pastored by women.

The Home Mission Board's trustees voted 44-24 without discussion Wednesday not to repeal the decision.

"The Home Mission Board is now in the hands of the fundamentalists, and they can do virtually anything they want to within their philosophy," said board Vice Chairman Marvin Prude.

Prude, of Birmingham, Ala., made the motion so that the board could include all small Southern Baptist churches in the church pastoral assistance program, which helps small, financially strapped churches hire a full-time minister.

The Southern Baptist Convention, the largest Protestant denomination in the United States, has for several years been split between conservative and moderate factions.

Conservatives take a fundamentalist, or literal, view of the Bible. They say the Bible forbids women to have authority over men, thereby barring them from serving as pastors.

After the vote, a new organization called the Southern Baptist Alliance announced it will solicit donations to help small churches that appoint women pastors.

The alliance's chairman, the Rev. W. Henry Crouch of Charlotte, N.C., said, "We have to accept the fact that polarization has reached the point that (the conservatives) have the power to exclude people. This time it's women."

U.S. Planes Escort Soviet Fighters During Test Of Coastal Defenses

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Air Force and Air National Guard planes escorted two Soviet fighter planes down the East Coast this week as they flew through U.S. radar zones, apparently during a routine defense test, officials say.

The two Soviet planes were identified as TU-95 Bear "D" models, which are four-engine reconnaissance aircraft capable of carrying armament, said Lt. Joseph Murphy, a spokesman for the 177th Fighter Interceptor group at the Air National Guard base here.

"They did not violate our airspace or come near the continent" during the flight early Monday morning, Murphy said Wednesday. "They do fly down through this part of the country every once in a while. I imagine they're just testing our defenses."

Officials of the North American Aerospace Defense Command detected the two Soviet planes on radar when they approached U.S. airspace without notification.

Planes flying into U.S. airspace are required to file flight plans in advance, Murphy said. When the two unidentified planes were first detected on radar off the Massachusetts coast, he said, two F-106 Delta Darts from the Air National Guard's 102nd group were sent out immediately.

Other Air National Guard planes joined the intercept mission as it headed south, Murphy said, including F-106s from units in Atlantic City and from the Homestead Air Force Base in Florida and F-4D Phantom IIs deployed from Seymour Johnson Air Force Base in North Carolina.

The fighters were directed by E-3 AWACS aircraft from Tinker Air Force Base in Oklahoma, and the planes received in-flight refueling from planes based in Arkansas and Georgia, Murphy said.

No radio contact was made between the Soviet and U.S. planes, he said, because the Soviets were operating on different frequencies.

The closest the two Soviet planes ever came to the United States was 140 miles off Cape Hatteras, N.C., Murphy said.

The incident marked the third time this year that Soviet military aircraft have been intercepted, identified and tracked off the coast of the United States.

Reagan Likely To Gain Release Of Contra Aid

By LAWRENCE L. KNUTSON
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan is in a good position to secure release of $40 million in military aid to Nicaragua's Contra rebels after weak House approval of a plan to freeze the money for six months.

The House voted 230-196 to block release of the aid until the administration accounts for payments diverted from secret arms sales to Iran, official U.S. aid, and other funds said to have flowed secretly to the Nicaraguan insurgents.

The resolution was supported by 213 Democrats and 17 Republicans and opposed by 156 Republicans and 40 Democrats.

But the tally fell far short of the two-thirds majority needed to sustain a virtually certain presidential veto. Even Democratic leaders predicted the $40 million would shortly be released.

With a certification Reagan made to Congress last week, release of the previously approved $40 million is automatic March 20 if the president prevails.

One key House Republican, Rep. Mickey Edwards, R-Okla., asserted the GOP would have won outright had the vote been on a straight-forward effort to kill the aid money entirely.

White House spokesman Roland Popiduk told reporters: "There's still the Senate vote and there's also the option of the veto. We're confident that we'll get the $40 million as the process plays itself out."

House Democrats had hoped for a strong vote for the aid freeze to "send a signal" that the $105 million Reagan requested for the Contras for the next fiscal year is in serious trouble and that the time has come for a new U.S. Central American policy that puts emphasis on diplomacy, not military action.

That may still be the case. But Republicans said the 34-vote margin by which the freeze proposal passed the House was too weak to carry such a message.

In Miami, recently resigned Contra leader Arturo Cruz said his departure from the movement did not prompt the House vote.

"The writing was on the wall," he said, noting the certainty of a presidential veto.

The struggle now shifts to the Senate where a vote is set for next week on a resolution to disapprove the aid, originally approved by Congress last year as part of a $100 million assistance package. All but the $40 million has already been dispersed.

Meanwhile, the Senate votes today on a resolution, with strong bipartisan support, endorsing the peace initiative offered last month by Costa Rican President Oscar Arias.

The plan has been hailed by some in Congress as a sign of hope that a negotiated solution can be found to Central America's troubles without further bloodshed.

That hope was voiced often in the House debate on the six-month moratorium proposal as was the spectre raised by the disclosures that millions of dollars in proceeds from secret U.S. arms transfers to Iran may have been diverted to the Contras.

On the other hand, virtually every GOP speaker raised the fear that cutting off U.S. aid to the Contras would result in a permanent Soviet beachhead in the Western Hemisphere.

By previous agreement, Republican after Republican opened or closed their speeches with the words: "I do not want to be recorded as contributing to handing Central America over to the Soviet Union."

In concluding the debate, House Republican Leader Robert Michel of Illinois described the Democratic moratorium proposal as "an evasion wrapped in a subterfuge inside a runaround."

But Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., who managed the debate for the Democratic leadership, said that while the power of the Reagan veto would probably stymie the freeze proposal, the Contras have much to account for.

They are crumbling, he said.

"under an avalanche of allegations," and have left behind them not military victories but "a trail of corruption and deceit ... running all the way to Iran and back to the basement of the White House."

"Before we can even consider spending another dime for the Contras we must know the full extent of the corruption ...," Bonior said.

"What you vote for today is simply to find out what happened to the money," said House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

Edwards, who managed the debate on the Republican side, contended that if the aid money was frozen, the Contras would be rendered defenseless and "will die cursing every man and woman in this Congress."

"This is not about accountability; this is about cowardice," Edwards said. "And the cowards are not in Nicaragua; they are here in Congress."

But another Republican, Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, said Contra supporters are in the grip of "zealotry."

"Our policies have become mired in the quicksand of Swiss bank accounts, probable fraud ... and modern day Hessians unable to account for gifts received," Leach said. "It is time to sit back and reassess."

Arms Sale Probers Consider Limited Immunity Proposal

By CLIFF HAAS
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional investigators and the independent counsel probing the Iran-Contra affair are discussing a plan for John M. Poindexter and Oliver L. North to be granted limited immunity for their testimony before Congress by the end of May.

"Both committees and the independent counsel are really searching for the same thing, which is the truth," independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh said after meeting Wednesday with members of the Senate select committee probing the sale of arms to Iran and alleged diversion of funds to Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Walsh wants Congress to wait at least 90 days before granting immunity to Poindexter, a Navy rear admiral who quit as President Reagan's national security adviser, and North, a lieutenant colonel fired from the White House staff for his role in the apparent diversion of money.

However, leaders of the two congressional committees probing the Iran-Contra matter have argued that the public is demanding a quick airing of the facts in the case.

But to accommodate Walsh's effort to build a criminal case, public hearings on the Iran-Contra affair would not begin until the middle of May, three weeks later than first planned, said Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, the chairman of the Senate select committee.

This would allow Walsh more time to deal with witnesses before the committee interviews them under any immunity that might be granted. There might be additional time to deal with Poindexter and North, since they would not necessarily be the lead-off witnesses.

"I am convinced that the House and Senate committees together with the independent counsel will come forth with an agreement that will meet the requirements and the mandate of both of us," Inouye said after the meeting with Walsh.

But neither Walsh nor the senators gave details of their discussions of immunity and there was no indication any final agreement had been worked out.

Walsh and counsels for the two committees plan to work into next week on the details of the deal on Poindexter and North.

As Walsh and the committee hashed out arrangements for the key witnesses, the Democratic-controlled House voted 230-196 Wednesday night to freeze $40 million in Contra aid for six months until millions of dollars in allegedly missing money is accounted for.

Reagan, however, is certain to veto the legislation if the Senate also passes it.

Democratic leaders have said they do not expect to be able to override the veto. Instead, they say they are aiming to defeat the $105 million in additional funds Reagan has requested for the Contras this session.

In other developments related to the Iran-Contra matter:

—Contra leader Adolfo Calero testified Wednesday about rebel finances for a third time before the federal grand jury that Walsh has convened. Calero's attorney, Joseph Portuondo, said Walsh is seeking more documents, including diaries, in addition to the rebels' financial records Calero already has turned over.

—The House and Senate select committees on Wednesday voted separately to grant limited immunity to Albert Hakim, congressional sources said. Hakim is an Iranian-born businessman believed to have information about the financial transactions involved in the possible diversion of arms sales payments to the Contras.

Neither Inouye nor Rep. Lee H. Hamilton, D-Ind., chairman of the House select committee, would confirm that their panels had voted to seek immunity for Hakim to persuade him to testify.

But sources, speaking only on condition they not be identified, said each committee produced the necessary two-thirds majority required for such proposals to pass.

Hakim is an associate of retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Richard Secord, identified by the presidentially appointed Tower commission as another central participant in the affair.

One Senate official said Secord is not being considered in discussions of possible immunity grants. He is resisting a request to sign a waiver that would give investigators access to secret Swiss bank accounts that he controls.

Walsh said he was not concerned by the action granting immunity to Hakim. "Hakim is not as critical a person as North and Poindexter," he said.

Previously, the committees have voted to seek partial immunity for North's secretary, Fawn Hall; Robert Dutton, a retired Air Force colonel who also is an associate of Secord; and Edward De Garay, head of a company that hired cargo handler Eugene Hasenfus, whose plane carrying weapons intended for the Contras was shot down over Nicaragua last October.

Inouye said there are still "about half a dozen or so on the 'possible' list" for receiving grants of immunity.

CRUZ ARRIVES IN U.S. — Recently resigned Contra leader Arturo Cruz walks with his wife, Consuelo, after they arrived in Miami Wednesday night on a flight from San Jose, Costa Rica. Asked about the U.S. House vote to suspend $40 million in military aid to the Contras, Cruz said, "The writing was on the wall." (AP Laserphoto)

Abrams Confident Aid Forthcoming

WASHINGTON (AP) — Assistant Secretary of State Elliott Abrams says he is confident the Congress will approve more military aid for the Nicaraguan rebels later this year despite clear erosion in legislative support for the program.

Abrams said Wednesday's House vote on the final $40 million installment of Contra aid for the year was not a true test of House sentiment because of ground rules which, in effect, would require a two-thirds majority of both chambers to block the aid.

A more genuine test of the legislative mood will occur in late summer when the administration's expected request for $105 million for fiscal 1988 comes to a vote, Abrams said.

"We don't expect to lose. We expect to win," said Abrams, who heads the State Department's Latin American affairs bureau.

Abrams spoke to reporters hours before the House voted to delay delivery of the $40 million while a full accounting is made of how previous aid has been spent. But the 230-196 vote fell far short of the two-thirds margin required to override a presidential veto.

Abrams pointed out that the administration's support is stronger in the Senate, which is expected to vote on the aid proposal next week.

Speaking at an Overseas Writers Club luncheon, Abrams said he believes support for the Contras will increase once the rebels are able to demonstrate improved military capability.

"The notion that the Sandinistas are invincible is not right," Abrams said, disputing critics who claim U.S. aid should be cut off because the Contras are unable to take on Nicaragua's powerful military establishment.

Fawn Hall Rejects 'Fast Bucks'

By LEE BYRD
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Fawn Hall doesn't welcome the attention she's received because of the Iran-Contra affair, and she's not another good-looking, unskilled secretary trying to parlay her notoriety into instant wealth, her friends say.

Instead, she is a reluctant witness who is "disgusted" by offers to turn a fast buck.

Playboy asked her to pose sexy and Penthouse asked her to pose nude. Other modeling and film offers poured in. Through her attorney, Plato Cacheris, she is declining all offers.

"I'm not even returning their calls," Cacheris says. "We're not accepting any of these things, period. This young woman is determined not to trade on this situation. And I admire her for it."

"You're talking about a very self-effacing woman, who coincidentally happens to be very beautiful," says F. Andrew Messing, a friend and director of the National Defense Council Foundation. "Anybody who thinks this lady is another Liz Ray is dead wrong." Elizabeth Ray was the congressional secretary who couldn't type — but did serve as the mistress of a congressman.

Ms. Hall, the tall, blue-eyed blonde who was Lt. Col. Oliver L. North's secretary for nearly four years, is "not the kind of person who seeks attention, or even enjoys it," her friend, Katy Dickey, says. "And right now, I assure you, she does not enjoy it."

But she's gotten plenty of it since the disclosure she had been granted immunity from prosecution before telling the special counsel in the Iran-Contra investigation that she shredded sensitive documents, while North watched, and altered key memos to obscure the role of his superiors in the affair.

Instantly, the former part-time model and private secretary became a media sensation. Cameras peered through the windows of her home in suburban Annandale, Va., where the 27-year-old woman lives with her parents. Television vans trailed her in her red Fiero through traffic, once trapping her at a gas station, and nearly forcing her off the road on another occasion that left her physically shaken.

The New York Post labeled her the "Iranscam Beauty."

The intriguing mix of Fawn Hall's association with North, her stunning beauty and even her trendy name have made her a target of innuendo or worse. A New York escort service, without permission, put her picture on the cover of a brochure. And NBC's David Letterman devoted a segment of his Feb. 25 show to a heavy-handed spoof of Ms. Hall.

"My question is," says Messing, "Can David Letterman type?"

While portrayed as distraught over North's plight, Ms. Hall has thrown herself into her new job as secretary to a civilian official at the Department of the Navy, friends say.

On Cacheris' advice, she has declined all interviews. The lawyer did present her at a 15-minute "photo opportunity" outside his offices in hopes she could subsequently drive to and from work in peace.

"How do you like all the attention?" reporters called out.

"I thought it was kind of humorous the first day," she replied.

"She tried to put a good face on it," says Ms. Dickey, who became close to Ms. Hall when she and Messing coordinated congressional trips to Central America through North's office. "She wasn't going to stand there weeping, but I know she's disappointed in the way it came out — like here was a person enjoying this. She didn't."

Fawn Hall grew up in a government family where hard work is expected. She was active in the Girl Scouts and took part-time jobs while still in high school. Her stepfather, Ronald C. Hall, is a photographer for the Defense Department, and her mother is a longtime National Security Council secretary whose bosses included Robert McFarlane and John Poindexter, North's superiors.

It is a family that has known tragedy. In 1979, Ms. Hall's stepbrother, Phillip Hall, killed himself with a police officer's revolver moments after he had been committed to a state mental institution. Wilma Hall witnessed her son's suicide.

After graduating from Annandale High School, she went to work as a secretary at the Navy Department in 1977, eventually transferring to the NSC in 1983. Friends say she rarely complained about the demands of her job, including extra hours on weekends or at night, and constantly deflected their suggestions that she quit and go to college. Her position, a GS-9, has a top scale of about $30,000.

One notable romance was a 15-month involvement with Arturo Cruz Jr., the 33-year-old son of the Contra leader who stepped down this week. The younger Cruz was then a Ph.D. candidate at Johns Hopkins; his father, meanwhile, was intimately tied to North's Central America stratagems. North once arranged for the father to draw a secret $7,000-per-month stipend.

But according to friends of both Ms. Hall and Arturo Cruz Jr., the pair rarely discussed politics. They went to movies together, ate at Thai and Chinese restaurants, and, on fall Sundays, would go to a friend's apartment to watch Washington Redskins games over pizza and beer.

The younger Cruz says, "more than liberal or conservative, she is traditional. This is the kind of woman who always worked, even in high school, somebody who always grew up believing you have to earn what you have."

According to Messing, "she was a secretary in the old sense of the word, not someone who just typed, but someone who helped North wrap up details. I'm not talking about making decisions, but wrapping up details."

Arturo Cruz Jr. says he met Ms. Hall by accident. "I went to North's office to talk to him, and then I started to find every possible excuse to go by."

According to The Washington Post, North disapproved of the relationship, but Ms. Hall apparently ignored her boss on that score. Still, the pair eventually broke up, which Cruz attributes more to a clash between two strong personalities than to politics.

Cruz says he remains "deeply grateful" to Ms. Hall and admires most of all "her spirit, her sense of loyalty, her sense of dedication."

LOW PROFILE — Fawn Hall, who was Lt. Col. Oliver North's secretary for nearly four years, reportedly is "disgusted" by offers to turn a fast buck on her sudden fame. Her attorney says she is not returning calls from magazines or modeling agencies. (AP Laserphoto)

LIGHT SENTENCE — Victoria Sellers, daughter of the late actor Peter Sellers, is joined by her lawyer, John J. Barry, outside the Federal Court building in Newark, N.J., on Wednesday. She was sentenced to three years' probation and 600 hours of community service for her role in a cocaine conspiracy. (AP Laserphoto)

Sellers Daughter Draws Probation

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — Actress Victoria Sellers's life in the fast lane meant a great deal of taking and not much giving, said a judge in sentencing her to probation for her role in a cocaine ring.

U.S. District Judge Dickinson R. Debevoise ordered Ms. Sellers to perform 600 hours of community service during her three years' probation as "a vehicle to bring (you) in touch with some of the people with disadvantages you haven't had."

Ms. Sellers, daughter of the late actor Peter Sellers, had pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of concealing a crime in exchange for her testimony against other members of the Los Angeles-based ring headed by Reed Wallace, her talent agent and housemate.

The 22-year-old actress and one-time Playboy model admitted she took cocaine from Wallace and lured a customer to their house for a beating.

Wallace pleaded guilty to running a continuing criminal enterprise and faces a 10-year prison term. Eight other people have been convicted or pleaded guilty in connection with the ring.

The judge said Ms. Sellers showed "a somewhat hedonistic approach to life (that) seems to be prevalent in California — those fast-lane activities."

Such a lifestyle, he said, meant "a great deal of taking and not much giving."

At the request of her attorney, John J. Barry, Debevoise recommended against deportation for Ms. Sellers, a British citizen.

"In all real respects, she's had a very difficult job of it," Barry said, adding that she never had a stable home, her parents divorced when she was 4 and her father died when she was 15.

After the sentencing, Ms. Sellers said she would continue to take acting classes in Los Angeles, work as a secretary for a record producer and live in with her mother, actress Britt Ekland.

"I didn't know what to expect," she said. "I was glad this is what I got."

College Censures Amy Carter

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — Amy Carter and 19 other students received probation from Brown University for an anti-apartheid protest that disrupted a trustees' meeting.

Miss Carter, daughter of former President Jimmy Carter, and 18 students on Wednesday received limited probation, the least possible penalty that the University Council of Student Affairs could have imposed, short of finding them innocent.

One student received full probation, a somewhat harsher sanction but still far short of the suspension or expulsion the students could have faced.

Probation means parents will be informed of the punishment, but it will not affect the students' permanent records provided they commit no further infractions for the remainder of the semester, said Thomas Bechtel, dean of undergraduate counseling.

"This carries no restrictions on their activities. What is does is caution them of the possibility of running afoul (again)," he said.

The protesters, members of Students Against Apartheid, issued a statement expressing "a collective sense of relief" and saying no appeal will be filed.

The students admitted violating a rule at the Ivy League school against disrupting university functions and some said they had learned a lesson.

Miss Carter, a sophomore, was not among the four students who read the protest group's statement to reporters. She has shunned media attention since enrolling at Brown last year.

Miss Carter, 19, has been arrested several times at demonstrations. Her trial is pending in a Massachusetts case stemming from an anti-CIA protest.

Revised FmHA Rules On Farmer Loans Prompt Senators' Protests

By WARD SINCLAIR
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Angry senators demanded Wednesday that the Farmers Home Administration abandon proposed new operating rules that would, by several estimates, prevent at least half of its 275,000 borrowers from obtaining further loans.

Members of the Agriculture Committee and a number of witnesses, including four Midwestern states' attorneys general, denounced the proposals as an illegal effort to subvert the intent of Congress and to end FmHA's role as the farm lender of last resort.

Chairman Patrick J. Leahy, D-Vt., declared: "The regulations are a dramatic shift away from the agency's mandate to provide supervised credit to farmers in trouble. ... The FmHA is a bulwark in our defense against farm bankruptcy and foreclosure. I intend to make sure it stays that way."

Last month, at Leahy's insistence, the Agriculture Department agreed to extend its public comment period to 60 days, ending next week, but that did little to placate the committee.

"You've made up your mind," Leahy fumed. "You are training people to enforce regulations that are not even in effect ... the idea of a comment period is merely window-dressing."

Other members echoed Leahy's criticisms, but FmHA Administrator Vance L. Clark was not conciliatory. He insisted that the proposed rules — 90,000 words covering 100 pages — were intended to streamline the agency and improve its ability to make and service loans.

Clark promised to let the committee see the new regulations before they are published, but he contended that they were not as dire as depicted. He estimated that only about 18 percent of current borrowers would be unable to get more loans.

The General Accounting Office and the state attorneys general, however, said the impact on farmers who cannot obtain loans elsewhere would be disastrous, with at least 50 percent shut off from further funding.

Robert Spire, Nebraska attorney general, said, "Vance Clark said that only 18 percent would be affected. We suggest that that is an understatement. But even 18 percent would be appalling and devastating in Nebraska. ... We're not asking for a favor or some special treatment beyond the intention of Congress."

Spire went on, "By our calculations, 50 percent of present borrowers would not be allowed to apply for loans under the new regulations and 17 percent would be over-qualified. ... In effect, we feel the new regulations would serve only 33 percent of the current borrowers."

James T. Massey of the Farmers' Legal Action Group of St. Paul, Minn., said the "radical revamping" would be "the nails that will hammer closed the coffin that has been crafted for FmHA borrowers."

He said the proposals would violate the 1985 farm law and would give the agency unprecedented new powers — for example, the right to overrule county-level selection committees and to deny loans to farmers who grow commodities that are in surplus.

Frank Kirschenheiter of the Credit

Review Board of North Dakota said the new rules, in combination with FmHA's plans to cut operating loan money by about 50 percent this year, would bring more economic disruption to his hard-hit state.

"We have a concern for the small towns," he said. "When a farmer goes out, the land will be farmed, but when a small business goes out there is no incentive to someone to come in and take over. ... North Dakota needs to get new people on the land. But without FmHA there are no other games in town."

Nicholas Spaeth, the state's attorney general, said, "We can't afford to lose these people. The regulation is illegal and exceptionally bad public policy."

Judge Rejects Deaver Bid To Oust Special Prosecutor

By DENNIS BELL
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — A federal judge cleared the way for a perjury indictment of former White House aide Michael K. Deaver Wednesday and said a lawsuit challenging the constitutionality of the law used to appoint Deaver's prosecutor will probably fail.

The six-page ruling by U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson will probably affect a similar pending suit filed before a different judge by fired White House aide Lt. Col. Oliver L. North in an effort to block the criminal investigation into the sale of U.S. arms to Iran and the diversion of arms-sales profits to Nicaraguan rebels.

Lawyers for North and Deaver have said that the appointment of special prosecutors by federal judges violates the constitutionally mandated separation of governmental powers because it denies the president the exclusive power to enforce the laws.

Jackson disagreed. "The arrangement, on its face, will probably not be found to offend the constitution," Jackson said in the ruling.

But, Jackson also said that the arrangement did raise troubling constitutional issues. He said that a "citizen-prosecutor" appointed by federal judges in a secret proceeding, armed with all the powers of the attorney general, but answerable to the judges and the Congress "is a constitutional hybrid which neither the framers of the Constitution nor any court since expressly contemplated."

Deaver filed suit Feb. 25, hours before he was scheduled to be indicted for four counts of lying to a grand jury investigating his lobbying activities and to a congressional subcommittee. Jackson granted a temporary restraining order that prevented Manhattan attorney Whitney North Seymour, the special prosecutor in the case, from asking a grand jury to vote an indictment.

Maureen's Remarks Irk GOP Chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — Republican National Committee chairman Frank J. Fahrenkopf Jr. harshly rebuked his co-chairman, Maureen Reagan, in private for her comments at a White House news conference, sources say.

"She's never going to do that again," Fahrenkopf told others after his meeting with the president's daughter, according to party sources who spoke on condition they not be identified.

The GOP chief apparently was angry because Ms. Reagan's answers to questions at a Monday session with reporters overwhelmed the message party leaders were trying to present after a lunch with her father, President Reagan.

Ms. Reagan said at the briefing that her father was upset at misdeeds of administration staff members detailed in the Tower commission report on the Iran-Contra affair.

She suggested that former National Security Adviser John Poindexter and his former aide, Marine Lt. Col. Oliver North, be court-martialed for their actions.

Fahrenkopf called Ms. Reagan to his RNC office on Capitol Hill and rebuked her after the meeting, the sources said.

The Washington Post reported that Fahrenkopf was so angry over the episode that he was "bouncing off the walls."

Without confirming the story, RNC director of communications Terry Wade said the two party leaders have a good relationship.

"They have been friends for many years, when both were involved in the Young Republicans. They have a close working relationship and look forward to continuing that," Wade said.

RNC spokesmen were also careful to make clear that Ms. Reagan's comments on the Iran-Contra affair were "her own personal views and not the official position of the RNC."

The latest strains between Ms. Reagan and Fahrenkopf came after the Monday lunch with the president.

At the news briefing, the party chief wanted to emphasize that the lunch was a forward-looking session, that the Republican Party was united behind Reagan in moving ahead with other issues and putting the Iran-Contra affair behind them, the sources said.

Ms. Reagan attended the lunch, but was not scheduled to be at the briefing.

As the briefing was about to begin, reporters noticed Ms. Reagan in a nearby hall and called out for her to join the news conference. Not long into the briefing by Fahrenkopf, reporters turned their questions to Ms. Reagan.

By the end of the briefing, Fahrenkopf looked visibly annoyed.

How to measure:
If installing inside window frame, measure width and length.
If installing outside window frame, add desired overlap, such as molding width, to inside width. If there is no molding, recommended overlap is 1/4" per side. For example, if you are installing inside a window frame that measures 23 1/2" wide and 56 1/2" long, select the package marked 23" to 23 3/8" wide x 64" long. Blind lengths can be shortened at home.

First Lady: Nation's 2nd Toughest Job

By BOB McHUGH
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — The scenario is familiar: the presidency is in crisis, and the first lady — battling to protect her man — steps into White House affairs, as the nation wonders who's wearing the presidential pants.

No, it's not 1987, but 1919, when Woodrow Wilson was crippled by a stroke, leaving the nation with a "petticoat government" run by his wife, as one senator put it.

Nancy Reagan is not the first first lady to come under scrutiny for exerting unelected influence over her husband's office.

First ladies, by tradition, have often been relegated to stereotyped duties like rearing the first family, and picking out curtains for the White House. The Library of Congress' card catalogue offers entries including "First Ladies Cookbook" and "First Ladies in Fashion."

The history books also show another side of presidential wives. Dolley Madison's parties gave the then-new capitol city its now-institutionalized social scene, and Sarah Polk helped her husband write speeches.

Eliza Johnson, wife of Andrew, stood solidly by the only president to face an impeachment trial. She proclaimed, "I knew he'd be acquitted. I knew it."

The job's toll has been high. Betty Ford's drug and alcohol dependence was chronicled in a recent network movie. Mary Todd Lincoln, taunted as a Rebel in a Union White House, was declared insane years after her husband's assassination.

"This is nothing new in American history," says Louis Gould, an American history professor at the University of Texas. Gould, authoring a book on Lady Bird Johnson, says first ladies have often been unprepared for the superhuman demands of their unpaid job.

"It changes their lives," he said. President Reagan came to his wife's defense last week, denouncing as "despicable fiction" reports that she had forced the resignation of Chief of Staff Donald Regan and was involved in government decision-making.

"There is nothing to that," he said, "and no one who knows her well would ever believe it."

Still, the controversy surrounding the first lady recalls the dominant Edith Wilson, whom critics called "secret president" and "presidentress" as she protected her ailing husband.

Mrs. Wilson also took it upon herself to oversee White House personnel after the 62-year-old Wilson was incapacitated by a stroke in October 1919. The secretaries of state and the treasury, as well as two key Wilson aides, all felt her wrath.

Mrs. Wilson, the president's second wife, took control of Wilson's agenda, controlling what papers he signed, and who got in to see him. She stood her guard until Wilson's term ended nearly 18 months after he fell ill.

The first lady's dominance led Sen. Albert Fall of New Mexico to complain to colleagues. "Mrs. Wilson is president. We have a petticoat government." She responded in memoirs years later, calling Fall, "a provincial westerner of small intelligence."

Fall demanded to see Wilson, and was granted a bedside audience. Mrs. Wilson sat nearby, jotting down their conversation for the record.

In her book, "My Memoirs," she explained that she had no designs on presidential power. "The only decision that was mine was what was important and what was not," she wrote.

But Wilson scholar Arthur Link says history has been unkind to the woman Wilson called "little girl." Link, director of the Woodrow Wilson papers at Princeton University in New Jersey, says the charges that Mrs. Wilson ran the government are "a lot of nonsense."

"She was protective. Her predominant concern was about 'my husband' and his health," said Link, who spoke with Mrs. Wilson many times before her death in 1961.

Eleanor Roosevelt was another first lady who became a public figure in her own right. Mrs. Roosevelt's weekly press conferences, for the then all-female press corps assigned to her, sometimes made more news than her husband's.

She acted as the legs for President Franklin Roosevelt, who was crippled by polio. Roosevelt dispatched his wife around the nation and world. She turned up in coveralls at a Depression-ridden West Virginia coal mine, and reportedly was targeted by spies in World War II.

But even the energetic Mrs. Roosevelt was restricted by the undefined boundaries of her job, says first lady expert Gould — who believes the unelected position may rival the presidency as the toughest in the nation.

"Eleanor Roosevelt was a political partner of the president ... a very limited, junior partner," Gould said.

Cold Remedies — What's Safe?

At Wits End
Erma Bombeck

While visiting my mother last week, I said, "Your cold sounds terrible. What are you taking?"

"I can't take anything," she said. "I'm not well enough."

"What are you talking about?" I asked. She handed me a bottle of cough syrup and said, "Read!"

In bold letters the label warned if you exceeded the recommended dosage you could suffer from nervousness, dizziness and sleeplessness (or excitability if you were under 12). You could not take the medicine at all if you suffered from high blood pressure, heart disease, diabetes, thyroid disease or were presently taking a prescription antihypertensive or antidepressant drug containing a monoamine oxidase inhibitor.

The medicine was not to be taken if you had glaucoma, asthma or difficulty in urination due to enlargement of the prostate gland.

To further comfort you, it warned that in case of accidental overdose, you were to seek professional assistance or contact a Poison Control Center as soon as possible.

Mother was right. She would have to get a lot better before she could take the cure. "This is ridiculous," I said. "There should be something you can take. Here's one that's a pain reliever for cold symptoms." I started to read the label. "Are you pregnant or a nursing mother?"

"Get out of the sun," she said. "Do you have an ulcer?" "No."

"Are you allergic to aspirin or do you have a bleeding disease?" "What's a bleeding disease?" she asked.

I tossed it back and picked up another bottle. "No sense taking chances. Here's one. Let's see, the side effects are dryness of the mouth, drowsiness, temporary blurred vision, dilation of the pupils, disorientation, memory disturbances, dizziness, restlessness, hallucinations.

confusion, skin irritation, dry, itchy, red eyes, and you can't operate any dangerous machinery." Mother looked hesitant. "Hey, look upon it as a trade-off."

"I don't think so," she said. "Okay, here's a simple nose spray that could burn, sting, cause you to sneeze and, if this dispenser was used by another person, could spread infection."

I scooped up all the remedies and put them on the top shelf of the medicine cabinet. "There aren't any children here," said mother. "I know. I'm keeping them out of the reach of sick people."

Kayak Trip Is Full Of Adventure

BY CONRAD DEFIEBRE
 Minneapolis Star and Tribune
 AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Living in an unheated house with no telephone or car isn't a hardship for Matt Simonson and Rose Kuth.

Not when you consider they've lived on an annual budget of less than $1,000 for the past 5½ years, on a 20,000-mile kayak trip that took them to the Arctic Circle, the Gulf of California and back to Minnesota.

"We call it the poverty kayak traverse," said Simonson, who ended his prolonged return to nature this fall.

"If Minnesota were like it was 150 years ago, I would have had no incentive to go on a trip like this," Simonson said. "But now the restrictions and rules are piling up every year in the north country too."

To cut expenses since then, they've left the furnace and water heater off and they eat raccoon, muskrat and beaver that Simonson traps in the woods.

It's a style of living they are accustomed to after experiencing the hardship of a 500-mile walk from Haines, Alaska, to Jackson, Wyo., when the rivers froze early, and nearly running out of water when high winds marooned them for three days on a desert island in the Gulf of California. They camped in 25-below-cold in homemade tents and sleeping bags and ate what they could hunt, fish or scrounge.

Modern equipment has made long-distance canoe and kayak trips increasingly commonplace, said Dave Harrison, editor of Canoe magazine in Kirkland, Wash. But Simonson and Ms. Kuth took a more primitive course.

They put their kayaks into the Le Sueur River near Ellendale on April 22, 1981. They took them out of the Root River near Dexter Oct. 12, 1986.

They had planned to be gone two or three years. But Ms. Kuth's inexperience slowed their progress at first, then a combination of sketchy maps and wanderlust kept stretching their itinerary.

"We made a lot of side trips," Simonson said. "We went mostly by guess and by golly."

Simonson, 36, had previously kayaked alone most of the way around Minnesota's borders, a five-month trip, and later paddled to the Gulf of Mexico and back in nine months. Before that he spent three years majoring in geology in college, until he decided he didn't want to make a living exploiting natural resources, and parts of five years working at the Hormel packinghouse in Austin.

He quit his job with Hormel after buying his house for $3,000 in cash and paying his debts. Since 1975 he has been a trapper and handyman, never earning more than $2,000 a year, he said.

"I'm an outdoor type person," he said. "I'd just as soon make my living working closer to the land."

Ms. Kuth, a 29-year-old nursing assistant, had never been kayaking except for short training jaunts on the Cedar River in Austin.

"We didn't realize how slow I would be," she said. "On the Le Sueur River, Matt was ready to send me home. On the Minnesota River, I was ready to go home. It was upstream and droughted out. By the time we got to the Red River, we got together and decided to stick it out for at least a year."

Ms. Kuth got seasick on Lake Winnipeg, sprained her ankle portaging in Saskatchewan, fell through the ice in frigid northern Alberta and capsized in heavy seas off the Mexican coast. Simonson wrapped his kayak around a rock shooting rapids in Colorado. But they were never seriously injured, he said.

They had no radio transmitter and sometimes went for weeks without seeing another person. They spent four northern winters in permanent quarters, mostly trading work for free lodging in places like a garage in Alberta and a half-built log cabin in the Northwest Territories, 100 miles from the nearest store.

But the hardships were a small price to pay to experience wonders like the ice breakup on the Mackenzie or a charging Alaskan grizzly scared off by a shotgun blast.

"Both of us have lived all our lives in a highly developed artificial area," Simonson said. "We wanted a chance to see animals in their natural state and large areas of land that still are undeveloped."

Marry If You Are Ready To Move

Dear Abby

Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Let me add a few words of advice to "Tears on My Pillow," who doesn't want to move from her home in West Virginia to California where her fiancé has a better job: Grow up!

I am a military wife, and we have moved 34 times and lived in 14 states and also foreign countries. In every new location, I've made new friends who became close as family, and I cried bitter tears every time we had to move — only to find that the people in the next place had as much to offer as the last, if not more.

Incidentally, I, too, am from West Virginia. My whole family lives there so I know how you feel, but if a wife must make a choice, her place is with her husband — not her parents.

My 64-year-old mother was in the same position as you, only Mother was already married when she decided that the hills of West Virginia were more important to her than her husband, so she divorced him, and now she sits alone in West Virginia.

Please listen to Abby. She's right to suggest that "Maybe you're not ready to marry Buddy — or anybody else." — ABBY'S ECHO

DEAR ECHO: Many other readers echoed my advice to "Tears." Read on:

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago, my daughter and her husband were visiting us, and because they had made so many moves, I asked them when they were going to "settle down."

My daughter said, "Even though we move a lot, we are settled down. We both have jobs, furniture, an apartment, cars, etc." I told them I meant really settled down in one place. She said they might never live in one place forever, and she wasn't sure they'd ever want to — then she looked lovingly at her husband, gave him a little pat on the knee, and said, "He's my home."

That is what I would like to tell the girl from West Virginia who's dreading her wedding day because she doesn't want to leave West Virginia. Home is where the heart is. She should wait until she meets a man she will follow anywhere. — PHOENIX MOM

DEAR ABBY: I think you were very unsympathetic to imply that "Tears on My Pillow" was immature because she didn't want to leave her friends and family in West Virginia to marry Buddy and move to California. I think you should have told her to dump Buddy unless he was willing to move closer to her family.

Twenty-four years ago, I married a serviceman who promised me that when his tour was up, we would move back to my hometown. We never did. He paid no attention to my pleas to go home because he didn't want to go back there to live. Lest you think I'm a whiner who sits next to the window crying to go home, I'm not. I believe you bloom where you are planted. I'm active in my kids' schools, I work part time at a job I love, and have a wide and varied circle of friends. But there isn't a day that goes by that I don't wish I could move back home. I'm still homesick, and I miss my family.

Would I marry my husband again? Only after he found a job in my hometown — or very nearby.

I'd have advised "Tears on My Pillow": If Buddy doesn't consider what's important to you, he'll make a poor husband. Dump him! — TEARS IN MY HEART

DEAR TEARS: I told "Tears on My Pillow" to put her wedding on hold — that she may not be ready to marry Buddy, or anybody else. One "dumps" only that which she is absolutely sure she wants no part of. I think "Tears" should play it safe. She might grow up in the meantime.

Impact Uncertain

(Continued from A-1) parents would be given the option to surrender their grandfather assignment and enroll children in the newly assigned attendance area. If a parent decides to enroll the child in the reassigned school, the grandfather clause would no longer be in effect and the decision could not be reversed.

All children attending school outside their attendance area must provide their own transportation to and from school. Parents will not be allowed to drop their child off at the closest bus stop; they must deliver the child to the school.

There are a couple of exceptions to the grandfather clause which will effect student assignments.

Students reassigned due to the construction of a new facility in the attendance area are not covered by the grandfather clause. There are no students currently being affected by this exception. Students will be moved from within the Conley attendance area — from A.G. Cox and W.H. Robinson — to the new school; there are no students being moved from the J.H. Rose attendance area to the new school.

Suicides

(Continued from A-1) death we would be concerned," McClure said. "With this many deaths, we are even more concerned, and we will do whatever we can to alert people to help them can receive at mental health facilities." McClure, releasing the names of the four Bergenfield youths who died last year, said all of their deaths were ruled alcohol-related. —On June 14, 1986, 21-year-old Christopher Curley was killed after being hit by a train in Dumont. —Two months later, Paul Brummer, 21, drowned in a pond near Bergenfield. —In September 1986, Joseph Majors, 18, was killed after either falling or jumping off Englewood Cliffs. According to classmates, Majors had been dating Lisa Burress at the time of his death. —Later in the same month, 19-year-old Steve Kessling was killed after being hit by a Conrail train.

Children enrolled outside their assigned attendance area in 1986-1987 will not be granted the privilege of the grandfather policy. However, a child attending a school outside the assigned area during this school year would be allowed to complete all grades house at the school; he would then enroll in the newly assigned attendance area. Citizens residing in the J.H. Rose attendance area (Greenville schools) are concerned that a grandfather clause will undermine improvements in the racial balance. During public hearings before the attendance line vote, speakers expressed fears that the Greenville schools would become inter-city in nature, with a predominantly black population and decreasing educational standards. Residents of the Winterville area (D.H. Conley attendance zone) contend that a grandfather clause had been promised them in a 1984 position paper on conditions of merger of the Greenville City and Pitt County school systems. During public hearings, the Winterville-area residents urged the board to support the grandfather policy.

Postage Expected To Rise Next Year

WASHINGTON (AP) — Postage rates will probably rise in 1988 — a year earlier than anticipated — because of increases in postal employee retirement costs, Deputy Postmaster General Michael S. Coughlin predicts.

A new retirement system ordered by Congress could cost the agency $2 billion in additional spending over the next two years, Coughlin said in a speech on Wednesday to New York-based mailing companies.

"This new requirement will force the Postal Service to ... propose an increase in postal rates to go into effect in 1988, a year earlier than we had planned," Coughlin said.

While he did not detail the amount of the increase in his prepared speech, The New York Times reported that Coughlin estimated the hike at between 1 cent and 4 cents on first class letters. The current first-class rate is 22 cents.

Postal Service spokesman Bob Hoobing later explained that Coughlin had been asked if the hike would be as much as 4 cents, and had said "probably not."

Maye
RALEIGH — A funeral for Mrs. Louise Morgan Maye was to be conducted today at 3 p.m. in St. Ambrose Episcopal Church in Raleigh. Burial was to be in Mount Hope Cemetery.

Pirates Add Victories Over Fairfield, 11-2; And Rhode Island, 5-0

By WOODY PEELE

Reflector Sports Editor

East Carolina's Gary Smith and Craig Van Deventer both flirted with no-hitters Wednesday before coming with four-hit and five-hit victories, respectively, as the Pirates added two more wins to their growing list.

East Carolina dumped Fairfield, 11-2, in the opening game, then came back with a 5-0 win over Rhode Island in the second. Both games were cut to seven innings, however, because of the cold weather.

Now 4-0, the Pirates were to face Rhode Island again this afternoon in a 3 p.m. game at Harrington Field — weather permitting. (East Carolina has already lost seven games to bad weather this spring.)

"I thought we got two excellent pitching jobs from Gary and Craig," ECU coach Gary Overton — who recorded his 75th career win in the opener — said. "That was the story in the first game. In the second, we got two key hits — the bases-loaded single by (Mike) Andrews and the home run by (Jay) McGraw. Those two hits put the game away."

The Pirates, who outscored Fairfield, 40-8, in their two games, had little trouble in the opening game, taking a 9-0 lead after three innings. Smith, a junior college transfer, making his first start and second appearance this spring, held the Stags in check through five innings without a hit before giving up three in a row in the sixth inning.

But he came back strong and struck out the final two batters in the inning on the way to his four-hitter and a 10 strikeout performance.

Meanwhile, the Pirates were banging out nine hits, including a double by Steve Sides, to go along with 10 walks surrendered by three Stag pitchers.

"Once again, it was a story of when we got into their bull pen, we had them on the ropes," Overton said. "Their lefthander threw well at the start, but we finally got to him and opened up."

Against Rhode Island, Van Deventer, also making his first start and second appearance, had a no-hitter for three innings, allowing a total of five hits on the day as he recorded the first ECU shutout of the season.

East Carolina got only five hits off two Ram pitchers, but Andrews' single drove in two runs and McGraw's homer accounted for the other three.

"I played summer league ball in the valley last year, and that's helped me a lot," McGraw said of his hitting so far this year. He's hitting .333 so far with two homers. "I saw a lot more quality pitching. Coach (Billy) Best has worked with me a lot, too, and I have more confidence up there. I'm just taking every cut seriously to get something out of it and have some fun too."

The Pirates pushed over two runs in the second inning against Fairfield to take the lead for good. With two away, John Adams singled and Andrews walked, as did David Ritchie. Tommy Yarbrough also walked, forcing in Adams. Sides then reached on an error, allowing Andrews to score.

Trouble Coming

East Carolina shortstop Mike Andrews (left) is set to put the tag on Fairfield's Ken McGovern (14) after the runner was caught off first base and dashed for second. McGovern managed to kick the ball away from Andrews and reach second safely but died there as the Pirates took an 11-2 win the game Wednesday. (Reflector Photo by Chris Hollis)

Ex-Ohio State Coach Woody Hayes Is Dead

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Woody Hayes, whose hard-driving style brought Ohio State two national championships and made him one of college football's winningest coaches, died today at age 74.

Dr. Robert Murphy, Hayes' physician, said the retired coach died apparently of a heart attack as he slept. Anne Hayes discovered her husband dead in his bed in their suburban home about 6 a.m., Murphy said. Hayes, the fifth-winningest coach in college football, compiled a record of 238-72-10 in 33 seasons at Denison University (1946-48), Miami of Ohio (1949-50) and Ohio State (1951-78). Only Paul "Bear" Bryant (323), Amos Alonzo Stagg (314) and Glenn "Pop" Warner (313) won more major college football games.

"What sticks out in my mind right now are all the good things he did for his former players and coaches. He always had a lot of time for them," said Earle Bruce, now the coach at Ohio State, who was an assistant under Hayes.

"He was a tremendously different person off the field than on. Off the field, he knew everybody's name and always had a word of advice. On the field, he was quite demanding, to say the least."

Michigan Coach Bo Schembechler, also a former longtime assistant under Hayes, said, "Woody was a great personal friend of mine, and this is a tremendous loss. He was one of the greatest, if not the greatest, football coach we've ever had in the Big Ten football conference."

"He was almost like a father to me. He was my mentor, and I was very close to him."

Hayes coached at Ohio State for 28 years, compiling a record of 205-61-10. Two of his teams — in 1954 and 1968 — were awarded Associated Press national championship trophies.

After he suffered a stroke in July 1985, he said in an interview from his hospital bed, "Every year after '68 I expected to be national champion. I didn't make it again."

As successful as Hayes was, he was nearly as controversial, mostly because of a temper that he admitted he never learned to control.

It was that temper that led to his firing as the Buckeyes' coach a few hours after the 1978 Gator Bowl loss to Clemson. In full view of national television cameras, Hayes struck Charlie Bauman after the Clemson noseguard had intercepted an Ohio State pass in the closing minutes of a 17-15 setback.

Hayes had been in failing health in recent years. He suffered a stroke in May 1984 and a second stroke in the summer of 1985. On Sept. 28, 1985, he suffered a heart attack.

In his 28 years at Ohio State, 13 of his teams won or shared the Big Ten Conference championship and eight of his squads went to the Rose Bowl.

Born in Clifton, Ohio, Feb. 14, 1913, the son of a secondary school superintendent, he guided Denison to a 19-6 record in 1946-48, and led Miami of Ohio to a 14-5 mark in 1949-50 before he was named to succeed Wesley Fesler as Ohio State coach.

Hayes coached two Heisman Trophy winners, Howard "Hopalong" Cassidy in 1955 and Archie Griffin in 1974 and 1975, along with 58 All-Americans. His teams won a league-record six consecutive Big Ten titles or co-titles, ending with the 1977 season.

Farmville Central Rallies, Slips By Bengals, 65-53

By TOM MORRIS

Reflector Sports Writer

FAYETTEVILLE — Farmville Central coach Mike Terrell said his team didn't start to play until it overcame stage fright but afterwards the Jaguars were able to rally past Fuquay-Varina, 65-53, in Eastern 2-A Regional play Wednesday night.

The Jaguars, playing in their first Regional playoff game, came out and felt right on their collective faces as Fuquay-Varina jumped on top early and took a 10-point lead into halftime, 34-24.

"We told them at halftime that evidently they came down for the ride and to eat at McDonald's," Terrell said. "I told them I've never seen this team before."

The Jaguars quickly returned to their normal persona in the second half.

Kennedy Williams scored 14 of his 18 points after intermission and the Jaguars went on a 10-2 tear to open the third quarter that quickly shifted momentum Farmville's way.

Kennedy Williams scored six of the 10 points and Gary Moore hit the other four during the early spur to draw Farmville within 36-34 with 4:02 remaining in the third period.

Farmville eventually took the lead at 39-38 on a basket by Alexander Daniels with 55 seconds left in the third quarter and took a 41-40 advantage into the final quarter.

"We came back in the second half (and) executed our offense," Terrell said. "We were much more aggressive on defense. We made very few mistakes. We could not have played better in the second half."

Kennedy Williams put it more succinctly. "At halftime, coach said 'play with your heart,'" Williams said. "We just came out and went wild."

The Jaguars scored the first four points of the fourth quarter to go up 45-40. Mark Williams canned a jumper and Tyrone Joyner found Kennedy Williams on a back-door play.

William Foster nailed a jumper from the right side to narrow the gap to 45-42 with 6:15 to go but Kennedy Williams again got free underneath and scored on back-door play to make it 47-42.

Andy Wright hit a free throw for the Bengals but Daniels knocked in a short jumper to run the lead to 49-43.

Foster countered with another jumper from the right side to make it 49-45 but that was as close as Fuquay-Varina would get. Farmville outscored the Bengals 16-8 over the final three minutes to secure the win.

The Jaguars also hit seven of nine free throws down the stretch to thwart any Bengal comeback hopes.

"I think we got a little rattled," said Bengal coach Milton Senter. "I think we started putting up some bad shots."

They came out and played hard and they were hitting their shots. Other than Foster, we couldn't get anything going from the outside."

In rallying past the Bengals, Farmville overcame serious foul trouble. The Jaguars usually only play six or seven players but were forced to go most of the second half with three starters playing with four fouls apiece.

Mark Williams picked up his fourth in the first half while James Reid and Joyner picked up theirs in early part of the third and fourth quarters, respectively.

"(Assistant) coach (Billy) Taylor and I were praying," Terrell said. We were (having) to play a freshman, Jarvis Lang. We moved (our big) people around. Our biggest concern was Joyner."

All four were able to finish the game though.

Fuquay-Varina was rolling in the first half behind the play of 6-6 center Andy Wright. He totaled 11 points in the first half but scored only one point in the second half.

"Their defense was strong and it kept us from getting the ball inside to Wright," Senter said. "He was just out of the ballgame in the second half."

Farmville shot 59 percent in the second half compared to only 42 percent for Fuquay-Varina.

"We stayed in the zone (defense) as long as we could," Senter said. "But when they started hitting their jumpers then we were forced to go man to man with them. We tried to play it tight but by spreading the floor we got picked off."

"They just did a real good job running their man to man offense. Basically from there on it was foul and hope."

Joyner led the Jaguars with 19 points but Terrell also lauded the play of Moore and Daniels, who chip-

IRS Wants Names From SMU

DALLAS (AP) — Officials of Southern Methodist University and the NCAA have been asked by the Internal Revenue Service to provide information on boosters who contributed to a "slush fund" for football players and on the athletes who got the money.

In the harshest punishment ever meted out, the NCAA shut down SMU's football program for 1987 because of the fund, set up by boosters, through which players received bonus money — sometimes as high as $25,000 — to attend SMU, as well as payments ranging from $50 to $750 monthly.

In a report made public Feb. 25, the NCAA said that after SMU was placed on probation in 1985, 13 SMU players continued to be paid from the fund.

William Hutchison, chairman of SMU's board of governors, said he would formally disclose today, for the first time, the names of boosters involved in the "play for pay" scandal.

The NCAA also directed SMU to take further action against nine boosters who in 1985 were disassociated from any involvement with the SMU athletic program. SMU was to respond to that request today.

But officials also confirmed the beginning of an IRS probe to determine whether SMU boosters improperly claimed tax deductions for their contributions to the fund and whether the athletes failed to report the payments as income.

Darella Banks, assistant registrar at SMU, said Wednesday that IRS agents were given the addresses and telephone numbers of 10 former players this week and late last year.

David Berst, the director of enforcement for the National Collegiate Athletic Association, also disclosed Wednesday that the NCAA had complied with an IRS request last week for information about its investigation of SMU, the Dallas Times Herald reported.

Berst said it was the first time the NCAA, the ruling body of major college sports, has been contacted by the IRS in connection with any of its inquiries.

Initially, Berst said, the NCAA provided only "public information," which does not reveal the names of SMU boosters who contributed to the slush fund that disbursed more than $100,000 to student athletes.

But there was a clear suggestion, Berst said, that the IRS agent who contacted the NCAA might soon return with an administrative subpoena that would require the NCAA to surrender confidential information about boosters gathered by NCAA investigators or supplied by SMU.

Marlene Gaysek, the spokeswoman of the IRS in Dallas, said she could neither confirm nor deny that an IRS investigation was under way but said, as a matter of routine, the agency is interested in allegations that might involve a failure to report income or improper deductions.

Berst said the IRS did not indicate whether the agency was interested in student-athletes, boosters or others, but made a general request for all information.

Banks said information about former players David Stanley and Albert Reese was requested in December following Stanley's revelation to WFAA-TV in Dallas last November that he received a $25,000 bonus from boosters for signing a letter of intent with SMU and $750 a month thereafter.

On Tuesday, the registrar's office also gave the names and telephone numbers of eight former players: Donald Allen, Jerry Ball, Reggie Dupard, Rod Jones, Terence Mann, Ronald Morris, Marquis Pleasant and Sean Stopperich.

It was Stopperich's disclosure to the NCAA in 1984 that he had received money and that boosters had helped relocate his family from Pennsylvania to Dallas that sparked an investigation and resulted in SMU being placed on probation in August 1985.

Trevor Pearlman, SMU student body president, said he also has been contacted by the IRS to turn over "all relevant information" about the scandal and he said he intends to pass along tidbits of information he has collected.

In an interview with The Dallas Morning News, Hutchison said Wednesday that SMU's board of governors should be abolished and replaced with a smaller, more diverse group that would exclude members "who have been there too long."

"The real problem we've had at SMU is one of governance," he said.

Texas Gov. Bill Clements, who resigned as chairman of the board of governors after being elected last November, revealed last week that he and other members of the board were aware of the slush fund, but decided to allow the payments to continue to athletes already receiving them.

He apologized during a news conference on Tuesday, saying that was obviously a mistake. The payments to athletes should have been stopped immediately rather than being phased out, he said.

If Hutchison's recommendations are adopted, they effectively could remove from the board of governors some of SMU's biggest financial contributors, including several of those said to have been aware with Clements of the improper payments and part of the agreement to allow them to continue.

He said SMU's 71-member board of trustees — from which the board of governors' members are selected — should be reduced to about 30 to 35 people.

The SMU Faculty Senate voted Wednesday to recommend that faculty members be included on a reorganized board and that the board not interfere in the day-to-day operations of the university.

Supporter Asks For Money Back

DALLAS (AP) — A Southern Methodist University booster, informed he has been banned for life from any active association with the school because of a cash gift to a football player, said he will ask the school to return a $150,000 scholarship endowment he had made.

"I fell it's unjust," Dallas businessman John Appleton, one of nine boosters named in the SMU football scandal, said after SMU interim president William Stallcup Jr. apprised him Wednesday of the school's action.

"I have endowed a scholarship, and if this is their attitude, I am going to ask for it to be returned," Appleton said.

He admitted paying $400 to an athlete in 1984, which contributed to SMU's being placed on probation in 1985, but said he had been guilty of no improprieties since.

Appleton told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram he was told of the lifetime punishment during a telephone conversation with Stallcup on Wednesday afternoon. He said he called Stallcup after hearing news reports that an announcement concerning the banned boosters would be made today.

"The problem I have with this (ban) is that I've broken no other NCAA rules," Appleton told the Star-Telegram.

He said he feels he and other SMU boosters are being made a scapegoat for Gov. Bill Clements and other members of the SMU board of governors who became aware of payments to athletes and decided to continue them — a decision that resulted in the one-year shutdown of football.

"Just because Governor Clements and another booster continued payments to the players which caused the additional penalties is no reason why I should be banned," said Appleton, who owns a videotape shop and received both his undergraduate and graduate degrees from SMU.

The NCAA last month shut down the SMU football program for 1987 because of boosters' payments to players. SMU officials were told at the time to ban the boosters for life or explain why such action is unwarranted. Officials had announced they would respond today.

The permanent ban means Appleton would be unable to rejoin the Mustangs' booster club, buy season tickets, associate with players or coaches, donate money or support services to the athletic department, visit the campus, or join any organization affiliated with SMU.

Appleton said he had no part in a $61,000 "slush fund" that was used over the past two years to provide payments ranging from $50 to $750 a month to 13 SMU football players.

Appleton, 36, a 1972 alumnus, in 1985 was ordered disassociated from the SMU athletic program for three years for a 1984 payment to lineman Sean Stopperich. Appleton said he gave Stopperich $400 for automobile repairs in a 1984 accident.

Stopperich, of Pittsburgh, reportedly was paid $5,000 when he was recruited in February of 1984.

NEAC Sets All-League

WILLIAMSTON — Roanoke and Williamston high schools each landed a member on the Northeastern girls' all-conference team, as selected by the league's coaches.

Each also added a member on the second team in the selections.

Picked for the first team were Joyce Outlaw, a sophomore at Roanoke and Monique Pou, a senior at Williamston. The other members of the first team, all seniors, were Josie Bell of Northampton East, Cindy Smallwood of Ahoskie and Arlene Twine of Edenton.

Named to the second team were senior Sheila Carlisle of Roanoke and Cham Miller, also a senior, from Williamston. Other second team choices were Stephanie Harris of Northampton East and Susan Hockaday of Roanoke Rapids, both juniors; and Shawn McCray of Plymouth and Sharon Riddick of Edenton, both seniors.

The boys' all-conference team has not been announced since Edenton is still involved in state playoff action.

Pirates...

The third broke it open, however, as seven more runs scored. McGraw opened with a single and stole second. Calvin Brown beat out an infield hit and an error on the play let him take second and scored McGraw. Adams was hit by a pitch and Andrews walked, loading them up. Ritchie walked, forcing in Brown, and Yarborough singled to left, scoring both Adams and Andrews. Mike Sullivan got a hit to score Ritchie and McGraw walked. Brown also walked, forcing in Yarborough and a wild pitch plated Sullivan for a 9-0 lead.

The Pirates got two more in the sixth. Jim Riley singled and courtesy runner Ed Tant moved up on a wild pitch and an out. He scored on Andrews' sacrifice fly. Ritchie then walked and John Thomas singled. Sides followed with a double, driving in Ritchie.

Fairfield's two runs came in the top of the sixth. Matt McLaughlin opened with a single — the first hit off Smith — and Ken McGovern followed with a double to left. Joe Mancini then singled in McLaughlin, and an error on Joe Solimine's grounder allowed McGovern to score.

Sides led the ECU hitting with two, while McLaughlin had two for Fairfield.

In the second game, Rhode Island threatened several times, but each time, Van Deventer managed to get out of trouble and preserve his shutout.

Meanwhile, the Pirates scored twice in the second. McGraw reached on an error and moved up on an out. Chris Cauble walked as did Thomas, loading the bases. Andrews then singled to center, scoring both McGraw and courtesy runner Yarborough.

The other three crossed in the fifth. Sides opened with a double and Mike Sullivan reached when his sacrifice bunt was dropped on the relay. McGraw then followed with a strong poke to left center, easily clearing the fence for a three-run homer.

No one had more than one hit for the Pirates in the second game, while Kevin Shea picked up a pair for Rhode Island.

He also developed many coaches who went on to head coaching success: Schembechler at Michigan, Bruce at Ohio State, Notre Dame's Lou Holtz, Dave McClain at Wisconsin, Indiana's Bill Mallory and Bill Arnsparger at Louisiana State.
 A tireless worker, his career almost came to an end after a heart attack in 1974. He still did not slow down.

One of his former assistants, Lou McCullough, once joked that he would get ide up a list of high school prospects and would call each, wishing them a merry Christmas.
 "Yes, every Christmas I would get a telephone call and I knew it wasn't from Santa Claus," McCullough said.
 But almost as much as his on-the-field success, he was noted for his off-the-field controversies.
 He was placed on probation by the Big Ten office at least twice for his behavior, once for personal loans to his players in 1956 and for a sideline altercation with an ABC-TV cameraman at Michigan in 1977.

Hayes also was rebuked by the American Football Coaches Association's ethics committee in 1959 after a ruckus with two California sports writers following a 17-0 defeat by Southern California in the Rose Bowl.
 Years later, The Los Angeles Times filed assault charges against the Ohio State coach, charging he had pushed a camera in the face of staffer Art Rogers prior to the 1973 Rose Bowl. The charges were later dropped in a Pasadena, Calif., court.

After he was fired for punching Bauman, two-time All-America linebacker Tom Cousineau, a member of Hayes' last Buckeye team, said, "It's a disappointment to me that a great career, a coaching legend, has to end on a note like this. The only way wat to fire him. He never would resign."

Despite his firing, Hayes remained unwavering in his support for Ohio State.

"I gave the university about everything I had," he said. "I'll never take it out on this university; it means too much to me."

He salary did not exceed $30,000 a year until late in his career. He once turned down a raise, saying he was doing his part for inflation.

He volunteered for four trips to Vietnam and would have gone a fifth, but stayed on campus to help quell anti-war riots.

A close friend of presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, he still was a popular speaker after his coaching career ended.

The campus street which runs alongside Ohio Stadium was renamed Woody Hayes Drive. Roasts were held for him in Miami, Fla., and Columbus. Ohio State bestowed its Distinguished Service Award upon him. And he spoke all over the nation, including once at Clemson.

He is survived by his wife and a son, Steve, who is a municipal court judge in Columbus.

Knight Not Writing Off Stags

By The Associated Press
Bobby Knight was right last year. The Indiana coach doesn't want to be right this year.

Before last season's first round of the NCAA men's basketball tournament, Knight told anyone who would listen that Cleveland State was capable of beating his Hoosiers. They did, 83-79.

Tonight, the third-ranked and top-seeded Hoosiers, 24-4, face Fairfield, 15-15, another team that is being written off by most people — except Knight.

"I said at (last year's) press conference that Cleveland State was capable of playing against anybody and playing well, and that Cleveland State could very easily beat us the next day," Knight said Wednesday after his team practiced at Hoosier Dome. "And I don't think anybody in there paid any attention to me."

His players did.
"We hope we learned a valuable lesson last year with Cleveland State," Indiana guard Steve Alford, a two-time All-American who is the school's career scoring leader with 2,300 points, said. "We hope things are different this year, but we can't really tell until the game starts. Hopefully, we'll be in it."

Also in the Midwest Regional first round in Indianapolis today were No. 14 Missouri, 24-9, vs. Xavier, Ohio, 18-12; No. 17 Duke, 22-8, vs. Texas A&M, 17-13; and Auburn, 17-12, vs. San Diego, 24-5. Friday's Midwest games will be played at Rosemont, Ill. and it will be No. 8 Temple, 31-3, vs. Southern U., 19-11; Georgia Tech, 16-12, vs. Louisiana State, 21-14; St. John's, 20-8, vs. Wichita State, 22-10; and No. 5 DePaul, 26-2, which plays its home games at the Horizon, vs. Louisiana Tech, 22-7.

Alford and Knight both had reasons to praise Fairfield, which is making its second consecutive NCAA appearance as champions of the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference.

"The thing about Fairfield we have to respect is they weren't expected to win their conference championship," Alford said. "But yet they've won four or five games to finish the season, and I'm sure they're going to be very hungry and motivated to play against us, especially at the Hoosier Dome, where there's going to be a lot of Indiana fans."

"They won their tournament last year and came back to win it again this year," Knight said. "There will not have been very many teams in this tournament this year, of all 64, that are either repeat conference winners or repeat tournament winners."

Fairfield Coach Mitch Buonaguro, who was an assistant to Rollie Massimino the year Villanova won the national championship, has had other things besides basketball to occupy his mind this week. Last Thursday, his first child, Michael Anthony, was born.

"It's been a great week," Buonaguro said.

SOUTHEAST
In the Southeast Regional at Birmingham, Ala., Alabama-Birmingham, 21-10, will play Providence, 21-8, tonight as the Blazers are one of the teams to enjoy a homecourt advantage in the opening rounds.

But Providence's first trip to the NCAA tournament since 1978 has been tempered by the death last Sunday of Coach Rick Pitino's 6-month-old son, Daniel, who had been suffering from complications since birth.

"Rick has had a hard year," Providence assistant coach Gordon Chiesa said. "He has always been conscious of it."

The Friars postponed their departure to Birmingham by a day as the funeral was held Wednesday in Providence.

In other games today at Birmingham it was No. 16 New Orleans, 25-3, vs. Brigham Young, 21-10; No. 9 Alabama, 26-4, vs. North Carolina A&T, 24-5; and No. 11 Illinois, 23-7, vs. Austin Peay, 19-11. Friday's Southeast Regional games will be played at Atlanta and it's No. 13 Clemson, 25-5, vs. Southwest Missouri State, 27-5; No. 20 Kansas, 23-10, vs. Houston, 18-11; No. 4 and top-seeded Georgetown, 26-4, vs. Bucknell, 22-8; and Kentucky, 18-10, vs. Ohio State, 19-12.

EAST
Penn Coach Tom Schneider knows about playing top-seeded teams in the first round of the NCAA tournament.

Two years ago, Scheider was the head man at Lehigh when the Engineers had to face Georgetown in an opening-round game. Lehigh lost 68-43.

Tonight, Schneider send the Quakers, 13-13 and champions of the Ivy League, against No. 2 North Carolina, 29-3, in a first-round East Regional game at Charlotte, N.C.

"We know we're playing a great team, and against one of the greatest coaches who's ever been in the game, but we're going to work at it," Schneider said.

The man Schneider called one of the great coaches, Dean Smith, remembers Penn from years before Schneider was the coach of the Quakers.

"Beating Penn will certainly not be a given," Smith said. "I remember what they did to us in the 1979 tournament at Raleigh."

That day, Penn beat the third-ranked Tar Heels on the way to the Final Four.

In other East Regional games today at Charlotte it was No. 19 Texas Christian, 23-6, vs. Marshall, 25-5; No. 18 Notre Dame, 22-7, vs. Middle Tennessee State, 22-6; and Navy, 26-5, vs. Michigan, 19-11. On Friday in the East Regional at Syracuse, N.Y., it will be No. 7 Purdue, 24-4, vs. Northeastern, 27-6; Florida, 21-10, vs. North Carolina State, 20-14; West Virginia, 23-7, vs. Western Kentucky, 28-8; and No. 10 Syracuse, 26-6, which will be playing on its home court, vs. Georgia Southern, 20-10.

WEST
Virginia Coach Terry Holland feels his Cavaliers, 21-9, have a legitimate chance at winning the national title and they'll start their march tonight against Wyoming, 22-9, in a West Regional game at Salt Lake City.

"This basketball team has every possibility of putting together six straight wins," Holland, who has each of his starters scoring in double figures, said. "That's our goal and what we will work extremely hard for."

Wyoming will be working just as hard to stop Virginia.

"We are going to have to play as good defensively as we ever have to beat this team," Cowboys Coach Jim Brandenburg said.

In other West Regional games today at Salt Lake City, it was Georgia, 18-11, vs. Kansas State, 19-10; top-ranked and top-seeded Nevada-Las Vegas, 33-1, vs. Idaho State, 15-15; and No. 15 UCLA, 24-6, vs. Central Michigan, 22-7.

Friday's West Regional at Tucson, Ariz. will have No. 6 Iowa, 27-4, vs. Santa Clara, 18-13; Texas-El Paso, 24-6, vs. Arizona, 18-11, which will be playing on its home court; No. 12 Pittsburgh, 24-7, vs. Marist, 20-9, and Oklahoma, 22-9, vs. Tulsa, 22-7.

Exploding Star
 Astronomers recently discovered a relatively "close" supernova about 163,000 light years away. Debris from this explosion is reported to be traveling outward at more than 9,000 miles per second! In 1054, the Chinese recorded one of the brightest supernovas ever seen. Its remains are known today as the Crab Nebula, shown here. It originally gave off enough light to be visible during the day. At night, it even cast a shadow! The Crab Nebula is about 5,000 light years away.

collection of junk declarer could now claim his contract.
 Had he had nothing to guide him, declarer's best line would have been to lead three rounds of spades. If the suit split 3-3 or if either defender held a doubleton honor, the long spade would have taken care of declarer's heart loser. If nothing favorable transpired, declarer could still use his trump entry to dummy for a heart finesse. That would have spelled defeat as the cards lie.
 Because West's action marked him with at least four hearts, and, therefore, no more than two spades, declarer had a sure-trick alternative line. He cashed the ace-king of hearts and ace of spades, and then continued with a low spade. When West followed low, declarer simply finessed the nine. East won, but had a choice of losing returns. He could either lead a spade into dummy's K-10 tenace, or else play a diamond, which would allow declarer to sluff the jack of hearts while ruffing on the board. Either way, 11 tricks were in the bag.

NBC Says Its Two Lawyer Shows, 'Alf' Will Return

By JOHN CARMODY
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NBC Entertainment Wednesday announced that three of its newest hits, "L.A. Law," "Matlock" and "ALF," have been renewed for next season. We'd call the last two the real new hits, since both have been slotted at 8 p.m. and, unlike "L.A. Law," were never protected by powerful lead-in programs at 10 p.m.

So far this year, "Matlock" is ranked 18th out of 86 primetime series on all three networks this year; "L.A. Law," which is climbing fast, is tied for 24th; and "ALF," who kind of sneaks up on you, is 33rd.

NBC has previously renewed "Amen" and "Our House," raising the total of NBC first-year series renewed to five.

Tom Jarriel will sit in for Peter

Jennings next week when P.J. heads for the ski slopes and a week's vacation from "ABC World News Tonight With Peter Jennings."

CBS News in New York Wednesday eliminated 29 of the 71 positions in its archives department, a move that resulted in the termination of 17 more employees. That brings the total of News division layoffs to more than 230 since last Friday.

Archives personnel produce program transcriptions, maintain film and videotape libraries, and handle all research activities for the division.

And any day now, a consolidation of foreign and national desks at CBS News in New York is expected to result in further layoffs.

In other developments at CBS News Wednesday, veteran newscaster Walter Cronkite addressed pickets at CBS headquarters in New York before and after he attended the monthly CBS board of directors meeting.

The Writers Guild of America is striking CBS and ABC news operations, a walkout that affects 525 writers, editors and desk assistants at the two networks.

On leaving the meeting, Cronkite assured a crowd of some 300, including WGA pickets, that he had pressed the writers' case before the board. He said he reminded board members of the serious morale problems at CBS News and told them it was time to get writers back to work "with an intelligent contract." To cheers, Cronkite said he was "hopeful" and assured the pickets that if he weren't, he would have resigned the board.

Also joining the pickets at CBS headquarters Wednesday was the Rev. Jesse Jackson.

Jackson told reporters that "the issue here today, in addition to affirmative action, is a question of job security. It's the issue of corporate greed, the issue of integrity of news coverage."

Cronkite Upset Over CBS Firings

NEW YORK (AP) — Walter Cronkite, a symbol of CBS News and a member of the network's board of directors, says he understands the need for the recent cuts in the news division's budget and personnel but disagrees with the way they were handled.

"My anger is not directed at the size of cuts or the need of cuts," the 70-year-old former anchor of the "CBS Evening News" said after a meeting of the CBS board Wednesday.

"My disappointment is over the style of the cuts and timing of the cuts. I think the necessity of getting that fat out of the budget is definitely there, and I only quarrel over the tactics."

It was Cronkite's first public comment since 215 news employees, including long-time on-air personalities, were abruptly fired Friday as part of a reorganization designed to save about 10 percent of the estimated $300 million annual news budget.

Irish Actor Holds Bright Spot As Star Of 'Les Miserables'

By JOSEPH C. KOENENN
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

NEW YORK — Colm Wilkinson was named for one of Ireland's great saints (Columille), who sent missionaries all over Europe and may have dispatched some so far afield that they discovered what's come to be known as America.

America is about to discover the saint's namesake. He is sailing into the New World as the star of the $4.5 million musical, "Les Miserables," and if the excitement generated by that show is enough to make it the Broadway blockbuster of the '80s, the betting on Wilkinson is that he's destined to be one of the decade's major stars.

Even in London, where the critics were not uniformly kind to "Les Miserables," there was abundant praise for Wilkinson. In Washington, where the American production just ended an eight-week premiere run, the reviews for both show and star were enthusiastic.

"Wilkinson's remarkable voice and seasoned presence ... provide a rock-solid anchor to this sweeping and technically elaborate production," Variety said.

"Les Miserables," the musical treatment of Victor Hugo's 19th-century classic, is scheduled to open Thursday night at the Broadway Theater with Wilkinson in the central role of Jean Valjean, the harshly treated ex-convict who spends the latter half of his life in an almost saintly pursuit of righteousness.

The show's producer, Cameron Mackintosh, spent months here last spring and summer, auditioning actors for the part. He insisted that he had every intention of fielding an entirely American cast for the Broadway version of his London hit.

Eventually, he came to believe that Wilkinson was the man to create Valjean for American audiences. "He is a very special actor. I think it is that occasional thing that happens, an extraordinary fusion of an actor and a role," Mackintosh said.

Mackintosh has been quoted as saying that "Colm's soul and Jean Valjean's soul are at one." Wilkinson raised his eyebrows appreciatively at that. "I loved it," he said. "When I read that, I figured I'd ask him for more money."

The London-based Mackintosh is the most likely man on Broadway to be asked for money today. With sell-out productions of "Cats" playing around the world, a brand new London hit in "Phantom of the Opera," the still-running London production of "Les Miserables" and $11 million in advance sales for "Les Mis" here, he is probably the single most important producer on either side of the Atlantic.

It was Mackintosh who came up with the idea of translating what began as a limited-run French arena show into a full-blown stage musical. The team of Claude-Michel Schoenberg (music) and Alain Boublil (book and lyrics) created "Les Miserables" for the 4,500-seat Palais des Sport in Paris in 1980. It was hugely successful throughout its scheduled 16 weeks.

An album came out of it, and a copy reached Mackintosh, who decided to mount it in London with Trevor Nunn of the Royal Shakespeare Theater as director.

"Les Miserables," which has supplied ideas for two dozen movies and at least one television series ("The Fugitive"), follows Valjean from his release after 19 years in prison. He is pursued relentlessly by Inspector Javert (Terrence Mann) who believes he should be returned to prison.

Wilkinson, as Valjean, is on stage for most of the musical's 3½ hours. He estimated that he spends about 2½ hours singing; as in many contemporary British musicals, there is no spoken dialogue.

"The understudy went on for a week and lost 10 pounds," said Wilkinson, a sturdy 42 year old with a gray-flecked beard. "This is the hardest thing I've ever done in my life."

His vocal range is 2½ octaves, "diminishing rapidly," he said. "No, I don't mean that. If anything, a role like this stretches your range. I used to hit A's. When I hit B's, it was a strain. Now, I can hit C's.

"This thing is what people like Pavarotti dread having to do on stage every night, and we do it eight times a week. You would want to have a throat like the inside of the exhaust pipe on a car."

The strain is not only on Wilkinson's throat; his back takes a beating, too. At one point, he must carry Marius (David Bryant), a wounded young revolutionary, through the sewers of Paris to evade police. "I put my back out carrying the guy in London. He was 14 stone (196 pounds). David's not that heavy."

Jars of honey sit on shelves in Wilkinson's dressing room. He uses it for energy and to coat his throat. "I use garlic a lot, too. I take a medium-sized clove and eat it with honey. It's a great antibiotic. It heals the body. Soldiers used to carry garlic with them and rub it on their wounds."

There is still a strong sound of Ireland in Wilkinson's speech, just as there is a pronounced Cockney flavor in that of Frances Ruffelle, the only other repeating member of the London cast. When they are singing on stage, though, they sound as American as the rest of the cast.

It was a conscious decision to sound that way, said Ruffelle, who perfected her American accent as a member of the original London company of "Starlight Express," where everyone played American trains.

Trevor Nunn picked her from that musical, which he also directed, to play Eponine in "Les Miserables."

Finding his Jean Valjean was more difficult.

Wilkinson's experience had been mainly as a singer, with several Irish pop groups as a youngster and later on the original recording of "Evita" as Che. His earlier stage work included appearances in "Jesus Christ Superstar" and in a concert of material by Tim Rice, lyricist for that show and most of Andrew Lloyd Webber's earlier musicals.

"I have a longstanding friendship with Tim. We've worked together a lot. He was talking to Trevor about directing his new musical, 'Chess,' which he subsequently did. The talk got around to what Trevor was doing and he mentioned 'Les Mis.' Tim told him, 'Exactly what you want is Colm Wilkinson.'"

"I relate, I suppose, to what Jean Valjean was," Wilkinson said. "I'd be described as being more spiritual than religious. I believe in a lot of different things."

Eddie Murphy Defends Suit Over Start Of His Career

MINEOLA, N.Y. (AP) — Eddie Murphy says fighting a $30 million lawsuit filed by a man claiming to have launched the comedian's career is a headache, but a necessary one.

"I think they thought I'll pay a lot of money to not go to court. But it's principle. It's like they extorted," said Murphy, who during a break in his trial helped a courtroom artist embellish her sketch of him.

Irving Broder has testified in his lawsuit that he took Murphy as a teen-ager on Long Island, transformed him into a marketable product, and signed him to a contract in 1980.

The last work the 64-year-old Broder said he recalled doing for Murphy was telling him that "Saturday Night Live" was looking for a black comic.

After winning fame on the television program, Murphy starred in the movies "48 Hours," "Trading Places," "Beverly Hills Cop" and "The Golden Child."

"I took an uncut stone and turned him into a gem," Broder said Wednesday.

As testimony centered on the contract, Murphy read the document at the defendant's table.

"You know what I did a little while ago? I read the contract for the first time," he told reporters during a break Wednesday.

He mocked Broder's claims that they had hundreds of meetings, saying frequent sessions between "a 16-year-old black guy ... and a 57-year-old Jewish guy" seemed unlikely.

"It sounds like a bad TV show," he said.

Murphy said Broder arranged four engagements for him when he was 17 or younger "in places I shouldn't have been anyway — bars."

The comedian, now 25, said he was not paid for three of the shows and received $50 for one performance, $15 of which Broder insisted on for himself.

Both Murphy and Broder have been placed under special guard because of concern for their safety. Judge Kenneth Molloy ordered armed court officers to join Murphy's personal body guards after a woman who demanded to enter the packed courtroom allegedly posed a serious threat. Murphy said the woman had bothered him before.

Broder has said he received threats by phone, and Nassau County police said they have checked his Levittown office four times.

Actress Has Role As Doctor In TV Film On Famine

By JERRY BUCK
AP Television Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ally Sheedy says the cast and crew of "We Are The Children" were in the middle of a Kenyan desert, an hour and a half by plane from the nearest village, when soldiers with machine guns shut down production.

The film, about the famine in Ethiopia, also stars Ted Danson and Judith Ivey. It airs Monday on ABC.

"We'd originally tried to film in Ethiopia, but the government got very upset about the content of the script," she said. "They were also very angry that we were filming in Kenya and put on a lot of diplomatic pressure. The Kenyan soldiers showed up on the set one day with machine guns and ordered us to stop work."

"It was so frightening because I was doing a scene, and when I turned around there were these guys. We had to stop work for several days while they worked out some kind of a deal. It was a very strange feeling to be out in the middle of the desert with no communications and these soldiers and their guns."

Ms. Sheedy plays a young Philadelphia doctor named Annie Keats who volunteers to work in a small medical clinic. Danson plays a free-lance television reporter named Duffy Lynch, and Ivey is a nun and nurse named Brenda Hayes.

The executive producer was the Rev. Ellwood Kiser, a Paulist priest, and the movie is only the second made by the Roman Catholic Church for network television. "The Fourth Wiseman" several years ago was the first.

The story tells of the romantic relationship between the doctor and the reporter, against the backdrop of the famine and the civil war, and how Ms. Sheedy's character persuades the reporter to tell the world about what is happening in Ethiopia.

"Before I left for Africa I met a young woman doctor who had been there and done all those things," Ms. Sheedy said. "We went over the script, and she said they didn't have things like X-rays or I.V.s or the things you take for granted here."

"She also made me feel good about the relationship with Ted Danson. I felt it might be too trivial. She said you go crazy there if you don't have human contact."

"We Are The Children" is Ms. Sheedy's first work for television in several years. She is best known for such movies as "War Games," "The Breakfast Club," "Oxford Blues," "St. Elmo's Fire," "Twice in a Lifetime" and an upcoming comedy called "Maid To Order."

"When I first came out (to Los Angeles) from New York, I worked on 'Hill Street Blues,' in a few TV movies and an afternoon special," she said. "On 'Hill Street' I played a Catholic high school girl named Kristen Murphy who tried to seduce Johnny LaRue."

PLAYS DOCTOR — Actress Ally Sheedy will play a doctor named Annie Keats in a film about the famine in Ethiopia. The ABC-TV movie will be called "We Are The Children" and is her first work for television in several years. (AP Laserphoto)

Ms. Sheedy was born and raised in New York and moved here about seven years ago. Her father worked in advertising and her mother was a literary agent.

"I started acting in plays," she said. "Mostly amateur productions, then some small Equity plays. I'd do wardrobe, stage managing, sweep the stage, wash the costumes. I started dancing with the American Ballet Theatre when I was 6. When I was 15, I got an agent because I wanted to do commercials. I did a lot of commercials."

"Then when I was 18 I wanted to get as far from my family as possible. I wanted something new. I wanted a perspective on my life different from New York City. I wanted to do parts in television and especially in movies."

Her first movie was "Bad Boys," in which she played Sean Penn's girlfriend. Her first starring role was in "War Games." She said, "That attracted a lot of attention and I starting going up for many more roles."

In her newest film, "Maid To Order," coming out this summer, she plays a rich Beverly Hills snob.

"She gets into all kinds of trouble, and her fairy godmother turns her into a maid in a house in Malibu," she said. The movie also stars Valerie Perrine, Tom Skerrit, Dick Shawn, Beverly D'Angelo, Michael Ontkean, Merry Clayton and Rainbow Phoenix.

Ms. Sheedy said she is not anxious to do any more films for television. "The shooting schedule is too quick," she said. "I like more time to work on scenes. Actually, what I'd like to do next is a play."

Joan Baez Leads Appeal for Group

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Musicians led by folk singer Joan Baez have appealed for the release of the leaders of a Czechoslovakian jazz organization convicted of engaging in illegal economic activities.

Five leaders of the Jazz Section were convicted Wednesday, two receiving prison terms, even though they claimed the group's goals had been humanitarian and cultural.

Ms. Baez's Humanitas International human rights group sent a telegram to Czechoslovakian President Gustav Husak after the verdict and planned to send a letter as well.

Martha Henderson, associate director of Humanitas International, said the letter bears the names of Ms. Baez; her sister, Mimi Farina; British rocker Peter Gabriel; Canadian musician Bruce Cockburn; the folk singing group Peter, Paul and Mary; Jim Kerr of the group Simple Minds; and singers Graham Nash, Arlo Guthrie, Bonnie Raitt and Pete Seeger.

Airlines To Stay Flight Delays

NTSB Says Flight Recorders Needed

By H. JOSEF HEBERT
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The airlines, pressured by government concern that flight delays will worsen this summer, gather next week to rearrange schedules in and out of two of the country's busiest airports.

The Transportation Department on Wednesday directed the scheduling changes at the airports in Chicago and Atlanta and said it would decide next week whether similar scheduling shifts will be needed at five other busy airports as well.

The airlines have grudgingly agreed to re-examine their summer flight schedules, which go into effect in June, amid warnings from the Transportation Department that if no action is taken the government may force schedule changes.

Most of the changes at the airports will be aimed at spreading flights so they are not bunched around the most popular flying times, a widespread airline practice that the Federal Aviation Administration has blamed for many of the non-weather related flight delays.

"Such talks are essential to reduce the delays to which the American public has been subjected in recent months," Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole said in a statement.

The department indicated in late January that it might seek scheduling shifts at as many as 13 airports, but in an order Wednesday it said the delay problems are not severe enough at six of those airports to warrant schedule changes.

Last year, 367,000 flights were delayed at least 15 minutes at the 22 busiest airports, a 25 percent increase from the year before. While many of the delays are caused by bad weather, a large number were blamed on "airlines scheduling more operations at peak hours than airports can handle," said the Transportation Department.

But it said scheduling changes should be taken at Hartsfield Atlanta International and Chicago's O'Hare International and that it would decide after looking at summer schedules at Dallas-Fort Worth, Boston, Denver, Newark, N.J., and Philadelphia whether to call for flight shuffling at those airports.

The FAA order provides formal antitrust immunity to allow the air carriers to meet and work out schedule changes.

Bill Jackman, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the major airlines, said the air carriers planned to meet at a scheduling conference beginning next Monday in Washington. The ATA had no other immediate comment on the government order.

The FAA and airlines held similar talks two years ago after a sudden increase in flight delays during the summer of 1985.

The six airports where the department said delays seemed to have eased to a point where scheduling changes likely will not be required were New York's LaGuardia and John F. Kennedy airports, Washington's Dulles and at airports in Minneapolis-St. Paul, San Francisco and St. Louis. All six airports were targeted for schedule shifts in the department's preliminary notice Jan. 28.

Earlier this week, FAA Administrators Donald Engen said that changes in the air traffic control system, which created additional airline corridors in and out of the three New York City-area airports, have resulted in a 26 percent reduction in delays at LaGuardia and Newark airports in recent weeks.

The FAA and airlines agree that most delays — perhaps as many as 70 percent — are the result of poor weather and cannot be avoided.

"Weather drove our major delays last year and it will be the determining factor this year," Engen said.

But the government and airlines have disagreed on what has been causing most of the non-weather delays.

The FAA and its parent Transportation Department have largely blamed the airlines for bunching flights to attract customers and scheduling flights beyond airport capacity during peak travel times.

Meanwhile, the airlines have chastised the FAA for not providing enough air traffic controllers to handle a free flow of air traffic

WASHINGTON (AP) — When investigators arrive at an airline crash site, they head first to the "black boxes" in search of the secrets they may hold. But too often the boxes are nowhere to be found, because they're not required on hundreds of commuter planes, safety officials complain.

For years the commuter industry, which in 1986 carried more than 26 million passengers, has fought requirements to have the recorders, which monitor cockpit conversation and aircraft performance. They argue they're too expensive.

So far, the Federal Aviation Administration has gone along, despite repeated urging from the National Transportation Safety Board, which investigates airline crashes, that the recorders are critical in determining the cause of many accidents.

At least three members of the House Appropriations subcommittee on transportation planned to introduce legislation today that would require the recorders in all commuter aircraft.

The NTSB has been trying to get the devices into commuter planes since 1982. The absence of the "black box" recorders, already required in all large jetliners, has severely handicapped investigators in a half-dozen commuter accident probes in recent years, NTSB Chairman Jim Burnett has said.

The FAA for two years has been considering a regulation on recorders for commuter planes and a proposed rule has been sent to the Transportation Department for review, according to agency officials.

"It's still moving along," FAA Administrator Donald Engen said when asked about the proposed regulation. "I know (Transportation Secretary Elizabeth Dole) wants to push it out."

DON'T MISS THE BOATS.

Two of the most awesome powerboats ever seen in this area will be on display Saturday, March 14th, at Bob Barbour BMW/Volvo. One is a Fountain Twelve Meter Inboard-Outboard Sport Boat, with 330 horsepower. The other is a 29-foot Fountain Sport Fisherman. This will be the exclusive, first-time ever showing in Greenville for either of these two boats. And a Fountain Powerboat representative will be on hand to answer any questions you may have about them. So don't miss the boats on Saturday, March 14th at Bob Barbour. And don't miss the cars, either. We have one of the largest selections of BMWs and Volvos anywhere.

Diamonds From Sky May Give Clue To Evolution

By LEE DYE

L.A. Times-Washington Post News Service

The universe is awash with tiny diamonds that sometimes rain down on the Earth in meteorites, bringing evidence from deep space that may be of profound importance in understanding the evolution of the universe, scientists have discovered. The diamonds, so small that trillions could rest on the head of a pin, were formed in the violent explosions of dying stars long ago, and may be the oldest particles ever discovered, according to the current issue of Nature, the British science journal, which described the discovery as "astounding."

The diamonds should contain traces of every element created by exploding stars known as supernovae, which are believed to be the source of the heavy elements that formed new stars and even life on Earth, Roy Lewis, a physicist with the University of Chicago and a co-author of the report, said in a telephone interview.

Thus the diamonds are messengers from deep space encoded with the history of the evolution of stars, he said. "This is a sample return mission that goes beyond the wildest dreams of NASA."

When the solar system was formed 4.5 billion years ago out of clouds of interstellar gas and dust, most of the original ingredients were melted or vaporized, losing their chemical identities, Lewis said. The diamonds, however, were strong enough to have endured that process, and many of them were trapped in the matrix that was then coalescing into such things as meteorites.

The announcement came on the heels of the discovery three weeks ago of a supernova that is the closest exploding star observed in nearly 400 years.

Lewis and Edward Anders, also of the University of Chicago, discovered the diamonds quite by accident while studying a rare xenon gas that was carried in small grains of carbon in primitive meteorites. The gas had intrigued them because its composition was such that it could not have been formed in the solar system.

They discovered the diamonds while continuing the work of John Wacker, who had left Chicago for a position with the Scripps Institution of Oceanography in San Diego. Wacker had found "something unusual" when he examined the waste materials left behind after dissolving a meteorite in order to study its gases, Lewis said. The residue looked like ordinary white carbon, but the Chicago team later determined it consisted of trillions and trillions of diamonds.

Diamonds normally form only when carbon is subjected to extreme pressures.
