Homeless Blamed For Fire In Which 3 Died

By GEOFFREY HAYNES

Associated Press Writer

DETROIT (AP) — A blaze that began in an abandoned building and took the lives of three firefighters is a sign of Detroit's decline, the mayor said in describing the tragedy as the worst in the fire department's history.

The five-alarm fire, which began about 3 p.m. Thursday, destroyed the warehouse and a paper products company next door, which made up a city block.

A lieutenant and a trial firefighter, who was to receive his badge on March 23, died of smoke inhalation after a roof in the paper supply building collapsed on them about 6 p.m. Another lieutenant died after an explosion rocked the three-story warehouse.

More than 120 firefighters with 30 pieces of equipment worked on the blaze as falling rubble from the warehouse building squashed cars parked nearby, and streetlight and telephone poles were toppled.

The buildings were in a light industrial area about five miles from downtown Detroit where many businesses and homes have been boarded up or torn down.

Two men were questioned today by police homicide investigators in connection with the fire, said police spokesman Marvin Redlawski. He did not know their identities.

The fire was believed to have been started by homeless people trying to keep warm, the Detroit Free Press and The Detroit News reported.

Authorities early today declined to confirm the reports.

"Beyond question, it's the worst tragedy to ever befall the Detroit Fire Department," said Mayor Coleman Young, who arrived at the fire as the body of one victim was being pulled from the fire.

"It's a tragedy that men lose their lives over an abandoned building," Young said. "What you see here is the result of an abandonment of a major city."

Detroit has suffered tremendous loss in population in the last quarter-century, and those who remain must deal with high unemployment and crime rates.

The warehouse contained bales of rags left when the building was abandoned by the Motor City Wiping Cloth Co., said Deputy Fire Chief Earl Sanders.

"We do have sufficient evidence to classify that fire as an arson fire," said Donald Robertson, a chief in the Fire Department's fire marshal division.

"We've had a lot of problems with fires in these vacant buildings," said Carlo Daniele, owner of Continental Paper & Supply Co. "Vagrants get in to them and start fires to keep warm. None of them have been serious."

At least 10 firefighters were injured in the fire. The westbound side of adjacent Interstate 96 was closed for about 2½ hours during the evening rush hour to serve as a temporary landing pad for medical helicopters.

Judge Clears Prosecutor To Press Iran-Contra Study

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dismissing lawsuits that struck "at the core" of independent counsel Lawrence E. Walsh's authority, a judge says Walsh can forge ahead with his investigation of the Iran-Contra affair and the man who tried to stop it: Oliver L. North.

U.S. District Judge Barrington D. Parker's rejection of two North lawsuits Thursday cleared one potential obstacle for Walsh, but still left him racing to develop a possible criminal case before North and other key figures are granted congressional immunity.

An immunity grant would prevent Walsh from using congressional testimony as the basis for a criminal case.

Turning down North's constitutional challenge to the Walsh probe, Parker said, "The nation demands an expeditious and complete disclosure" of the Iran-Contra affair. North, he concluded, "has not suffered an injury of sufficient keenness to warrant the court's intercession" in a criminal investigation.

Parker said North's challenge "strikes at the core of Walsh's authority to conduct a criminal investigation" and raises an issue of "grave constitutional importance."

North, a fired National Security Council aide, is the central figure in the investigation of arms sales to Iran and possible diversion of payments to the Nicaraguan Contras. His lawyer, Barry Simon, declined to comment on a possible appeal.

Walsh, commenting on the ruling, said, "We welcome the prompt determination of the court that the investigation of independent counsel continue without interruption or disruption."

Meanwhile, a similar challenge to the independent counsel law mounted by lobbyist Michael K. Deaver, a former aide to President Reagan, remained alive Thursday.

The U.S. Court of Appeals granted Deaver an emergency order, good through next Tuesday, that prevents the independent counsel in that case from seeking a grand jury indictment.

By Monday, attorneys for Deaver and independent counsel Whitney North Seymour Jr. are to file legal papers arguing their positions. Seymour on Feb. 25 announced his intention to seek a four-count perjury indictment, but now has been stopped twice by temporary court orders, the first by a lower court judge the day the suit was filed.

Both Deaver and North contended that investigations by independent counsels are unconstitutional because the counsels are appointed by a three-judge court. Criminal investigations must be conducted by the executive branch, under authority of the president, they argued.

In other developments: —President Reagan's chief legal adviser, Peter J. Wallison, said in an interview that he was rebuffed by Vice Adm. John M. Poindexter when he tried to learn details of the Iran-Contra scheme in the days after its disclosure. Wallison, who is leaving his post today, said in the New York Times interview that Poindexter told him: "I'm sorry, we've had all the legal advice we need from the attorney general, and you really don't have a role in this."

—The board of the National Endowment for Democracy, which provides grants to promote democracy abroad, planned to act today on a recommendation to remove its money from an organization mentioned in connection with the Iran-Contra affair.

Endowment President Carl Gershman, who made the recommendation, said there is no evidence the Washington-based Institute for North South Issues misspent its grant money.

Bombers Strike Funeral

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Four bombs exploded in Belfast today, injuring at least five police officers, four of them outside a cemetery where a slain colleague was to be buried, police said.

The bombings followed telephoned warnings from callers identifying themselves as representing the outlawed Irish Republican Army, police said.

A car bomb blew up near Roselawn Cemetery on the outskirts of Belfast as police, alerted by a phone call, arrived to inspect the vehicle, the Royal Ulster Constabulary reported.

Three officers suffered shrapnel wounds and a fourth was in shock, said a police spokesman, Superintendent Leonard Bleakney.

The blast occurred shortly before the cortege carrying reservist Peter Nesbitt, who was killed by a bomb in Belfast on Tuesday night, was to leave a church for the cemetery.

Another policeman was slightly injured when a bomb exploded at Smithfield Market in the center of the British province's capital, police said. Minutes later another bomb exploded at the enclosed complex of

Council Approves Consultant's Fee For Block Grant

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The Greenville City Council — by a 5-1 margin — has approved a $5,800 contract for consultant services with Talbot Cox and Associates Inc. to prepare a Community Development Block Grant application.

The city is applying for $650,000 in federal funds to be channeled through the state, according to City Manager Gail Meeks, who said the money would be used for rehabilitation of the West Greenville neighborhood.

Council member Lorraine Shinn, who cast the lone dissenting vote, said she felt paying for consultant services to prepare the application was an unnecessary expense.

"I feel like we really need to take a serious look at the amount of planning staff we have here now and their ability to submit this grant themselves," Mrs. Shinn told fellow council members at their monthly meeting Thursday night.

"Personally, I believe that they have the time and the ability to do it and could save us this money if they were willing to submit this grant through the city staff. So I would object to going outside to have it done."

Bobby Roberson, director of Planning and Community Development, told the council he didn't believe his department had the time or staff to complete the application.

Meanwhile, the council unanimously approved a resolution authorizing the mayor to seek Section 18 Transit Grant assistance and enter an agreement with the N.C. Department of Transportation.

Ms. Meeks said the request for federal funds for operating assistance is the city's annual transit application.

In other business, Council members approved a resolution of intent to close a portion of 300 Block of Hilltop Avenue and scheduled a public hearing on the matter for April 9.

The panel also approved the sale of disposal parcels in the South Evans Community Development project, the acceptance of Bethesda and John Hopkins drives for permanent maintenance, tax releases and refunds, acceptance of a planetarium donation from the U.S. Navy, a 25 mph speed limit on Prince Road in Eastwood subdivision, and replacing a yield sign with a stop sign at the intersection of Elizabeth and West Fifth streets.

The council approved the adoption of a supplement to the Greenville City Code, an ordinance to abolish school zones on Chestnut and Myrtle streets and establish school zones on Spruce Street, Watauga Avenue, Halifax Street and Manhattan Avenue for Agnes Fullilove School, and a supplemental agreement with Benefit Plan Services Inc. for additional supervisory services for the city's self-funded Health Care Plan.

Council members also approved a request from the city of Kinston to adopt a resolution in support of the first state farmer's market for eastern North Carolina to be located in Kinston/Lenoir County.

The council approved the appointments of Jim Mulligan to the Environmental Advisory Commission, Frank Yancey to the Community Appearance Commission and Brenda H. Teel as second alternate to the Planning and Zoning Commission.

Ship Fire Kills 13

RAVENNA, Italy (AP) — Fire spread dense smoke through an Italian ship undergoing repairs near this Adriatic port today, killing 13 workers who were trapped deep inside the vessel.

Police said the 13 victims were among 14 workers waterproofing an inner plate at the bottom of the liquefied gas carrier Elisabetta Montanari. The only exit for the workers was a tiny passageway that quickly became engulfed in smoke, police said.

One of the 14 escaped unharmed, but the others were trapped and could not be reached in time by rescue workers, police said.

None of the other workers aboard the ship were injured, police said.

About 70 people were working on the 2,893-ton vessel at the CMT shipyard in Porto San Vitale when the fire broke out, police said. They said all those aboard the ship had been accounted for.

The fire apparently started in the fuel tank and spread quickly, engulfing much of the vessel in smoke.

The cause of the blaze was under investigation.

Girl Scouts Celebrate 75th Year

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — Girl Scouts worldwide celebrated their 75th anniversary with programs ranging from a solemn White House ceremony to a youngster giving thanks in a prayer before North Dakota lawmakers for getting her out of school.

The girls organization, which has 174,000 U.S. members and members in 62 other nations whose parents are U.S. civilian or military personnel, was founded March 12, 1912, by Savannah native Juliette Gordon Low.

Scouts from Mrs. Low's coastal Georgia hometown were among the 2,000 girls who gathered in Washington on Thursday for a ceremony featuring first lady Nancy Reagan and the organization's national president, Betty Pilsbury of Laurens, S.C.

Mrs. Reagan, a one-time Brownie Scout, praised Mrs. Low as a woman who "deeply believed in the power of young American women — their power to improve themselves and their society."

Girl Scout Troop 340 of Bismarck, N.D., gave the prayer and conducted the opening of the 46th day of the North Dakota House of Representatives in honor of the Scouts' founding. They also served cake to the lawmakers.

Hillary Brown of Bismarck was pragmatic about the value of Scouting in her life. She got a laugh from the lawmakers when she said in a prayer, "Thank you for letting us get out of school."

The White House ceremony followed release of a new 22-cent stamp honoring the Girl Scouts and preceded an around-the-world recitation of the Girl Scout Promise.

At a gathering in Washington, older Scouts got a preview of their new uniforms.

Although the organization saw its membership drop in the 1970s, in part because of a smaller population of school-age girls, the number of Girl Scouts grew to 2.9 million in 1986, a 4.1 percent increase over the previous year, said Brenda Burrows, a spokeswoman for the national headquarters in New York.

She said that increase was the group's largest in 18 years.

The first nationally franchised sale of Girl Scout cookies was held in 1936, and cookie sales remain a major fund-raising tool of the organization. Last year, 138 million boxes were sold nationwide.

How They Voted

WASHINGTON — Here's how area House members were recorded on major roll call votes during the week ending March 6. The Senate had no record votes.

House

HELPING THE HOMELESS — By a vote of 264 for and 121 against, the House passed and sent to the Senate a bill (HR 558) authorizing an additional $500 million this fiscal year in aid to the homeless.

The money would be added to about $260 million Congress already has appropriated in 1987 homeless aid. The bill is silent on how the new money would be raised.

Although it mainly bolsters existing federal efforts to provide shelter, food and medical care, the bill also creates new programs for the mentally ill persons who have been released to the streets by state and federal psychiatric hospitals.

Supporter Bill Green, R-N.Y., said the bill "addresses a crying need ... that we can see virtually on our doorsteps every night."

Opponent Toby Roth, R-Wis., said the $500 million pricetag unaccompanied by offsetting spending cuts "means adding to our unbearable deficit."

Members voting yes favored the bill.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Walter Jones, D-1; Tim Valentine, D-2; Martin Lancaster, D-3; David Price, D-4; Stephen Neal, D-5; Charles Rose, D-7; W.G. Hefner, D-8; Alex McMillan, R-9, and James Clarke, D-11.

Those voting no were Howard Coble, R-6, and Cass Ballenger, R-10.

REVENUE TRANSFERS — By a vote of 203 for and 207 against, the House rejected an amendment requiring that the $500 million in homeless aid (above) by taken from the budgets of other programs, not raised by Treasury borrowing.

Republicans who initiated the anti-deficit amendment did not specify the budgets to be reduced. Mischievous Democrats then narrowed it to require the $500 million to be taken from fiscal 1987 foreign aid budget, which the Administration wants to increase.

Sponsor Robert Michel, R-Ill., said the bill lacked "fiscal integrity" by failing to identify how the $500 million would be raised.

Opponent Barney Frank, D-Mass., said, "We can afford in this wealthy country to provide the money."

Members voting yes wanted the increased homeless spending to be offset by foreign aid cuts.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Valentine, Lancaster, Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Those voting no were Jones, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

AIDS TESTING — The House rejected, 101 for and 292 against, an amendment to the homeless aid bill (above) to begin testing certain street people for the AIDS virus.

The amendment originally called for mandatory testing, but was softened to make the AIDS examinations voluntary for those seeking medical care at homeless shelters.

Supporter Dan Burton, R-Ind., said it was time for Congress to bear down on the AIDS epidemic, "the number one issue of the late '80s and '90s."

Opponent Harry Waxman, D-Calif., termed the amendment "hysteria" and said that to test the homeless for exposure to AIDS would leave no money for their basic medical care.

Members voting yes favored AIDS testing of the homeless.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Those voting no were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

DELAYING HOMELESS AID — By a vote of 124 for and 206 against, the House rejected an attempt to freeze the $500 million in homeless aid (above) for six months after the measure becomes law.

Under the amendment, U.S. agencies were to spend the six months working to prevent waste and duplication in allocating the money.

Sponsor George Gekas, R-Pa., said his "common sense" amendment puts "the horse and the cart in the right order."

Opponent Bruce Vento, D-Minn., said the amendment urges study rather than action and "shoots the horse."

Members voting yes wanted agencies to delay spending the $500 million in homeless aid.

North Carolina representatives voting yes were Coble, McMillan and Ballenger.

Those voting no were Jones, Valentine, Lancaster, Price, Neal, Rose, Hefner and Clarke.

Jones' AIDS Study Gets Panel Backing

By DON REUTER
Reflector Staff Writer

The N.C. House Committee on Health has recommended approval of a resolution filed by Rep. Walter Jones Jr., D-Pitt, calling for the creation of a legislative study commission on AIDS.

Jones, who introduced the joint resolution to study the impact of AIDS on public health and health care in North Carolina said today he was pleased by the unanimous support of the House Committee on Health and expects a commission to be funded by the Appropriations Committee.

"There is an immediate need for this commission due to the severity and complicated nature of AIDS," Jones said. "The citizens of North Carolina deserve to have all the information and protection that we can give them."

Dr. Ron Levine, state director of health services, spoke to the committee in Raleigh in support of Jones' resolution to create the legislative research commission.

Jones said the commission will not be effectively created until funded by the General Assembly at the end of the session.

The commission would be required to study the need for funding public information programs about the virus, according to the resolution.

The panel would study the need for legislation regarding the required testing of donated blood or body parts for HTLV-III antibodies and requiring any particular subgroup of the state's population to undergo mandatory testing for AIDS, the resolution said.

The commission would also examine the adequacy of North Carolina's quarantine statute as it relates to AIDS, reporting requirements and identification and control in the prison population, the legislation said.

Acquired immune deficiency syndrome, which cripples the body's ability to fight off various, has struck 30,839 people in the United States, killing 17,728 of them so far, according to the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control. Two-thirds of the reported cases have been in homosexual or bisexual men, but heterosexual transmission is an increasingly serious problem.

U.S. Offers New Missile Inspection Plan To Soviets

By TIM AHERN
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is offering the Soviets a new inspection plan as part of the effort to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe, while also appealing to U.S. critics for more time to negotiate arms reductions.

The U.S. plan was presented Thursday to the Soviet Union in Geneva, where the two sides are trying to work out a treaty. The Soviets already have accepted the principal of on-site inspection to help verify compliance, which is the major stumbling block to an agreement.

The proposed pact would require dismantling, over the next five years, of 268 U.S. weapons based in West Germany, Great Britain, Belgium, the Netherlands and Italy, along with the 243 Soviet weapons targeted on Western Europe.

The latest U.S. verification proposal has three parts. First would be confirmation by on-site inspectors of missiles deployed, followed by inspectors watching the missiles being destroyed.

The final stage would be stationing U.S. inspectors in Asia where they would watch the 100 mid-range Soviet missiles as they are moved there, with the Soviets given the same right to check on U.S. weapons, which would possibly be put in Alaska.

State Department spokesman Charles Redman said he was making the details public because there is "a great deal of interest in this question" and because the Soviets already had the information. Normally, the two sides don't reveal details of their positions.

On Capitol Hill, Richard Perle, a major administration figure on nuclear policy, told a House Foreign Affairs subcommittee the next "six to eight months are critical" in the effort to work out arms reduction treaties.

Perle, who announced his resignation later Thursday as an assistant secretary of defense, urged Democrats who control both the House and Senate not to force administration actions, such as continued compliance to the SALT II arms treaty, which he argued would tie the hands of U.S. negotiators at Geneva.

The same plea came from Kenneth Adelman, director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, as he testified at the hearing.

"It is ironic that those in the House and Senate who talk most about arms control and who are most critical of us for not doing more are those who, in my mind, are the biggest threat to getting a good agreement," said Adelman, challenging those who would legislate cuts in U.S. programs that the Soviets hadn't even won at the bargaining table.

Adelman and Perle restated the administration's complaint that the Soviets have violated past arms control treaties, a view which has been disputed by some Democrats.

But Rep. Dante Fascell, D-Fla., chairman of the Foreign Affairs panel, questioned whether the administration is "engaging in a campaign to convince us of Soviet non-compliance rather than proving it."

Congressional Democrats plan to make arms control a major focus of their legislative efforts this year. They have criticized the administration for not doing more in that area, and they successfully adopted restrictions on major weapons last fall. But they abandoned the limits when Reagan appealed for national unity before meeting Soviet leader Mikhail S. Gorbachev in Iceland. Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., continued his criticism Thursday with the second in a series of speeches and reports on the Senate floor taking issue with Reagan's argument that the administration can change the U.S. view of the 1972 Anti-Ballistic Missile Treaty.

The proposed change would permit tests of Reagan's "Star Wars" anti-missile defense program not now allowed. Critics say any alteration would have to be approved by the Senate, just as the chamber ratified the original treaty 15 years ago.

Nunn, chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said in a speech the administration was wrong in asserting the 15-year-old records were ambiguous and were open to a revised interpretation.

But Perle took issue with Nunn, telling the House panel he believed Nunn was "quite wrong" in reading the deliberations. Perle, a strong supporter of the new "broad" interpretation, said he had himself reviewed the records and found them "crystal clear."

At the State Department, Redman also disputed Nunn. "We believe that the evidence of the (U.S.-Soviet) negotiating record supports the president's conclusion (about the legality of a changed interpretation) fully," Redman said.

Perle Resigns As Pentagon's Hard-Line Arms Policymaker

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard N. Perle, the Pentagon's hard-line arms control policymaker who is leaving the administration, said today the United States and Soviet Union appear to be on the verge of a breakthrough in efforts to eliminate medium-range nuclear missiles.

"If we're successful — and while there are difficult issues left to negotiate, I believe we will be — we will have for the first time eliminated an entire category of weapons," Perle said in an interview on NBC's "Today" show.

The U.S. plan was presented Thursday to the Soviet Union in Geneva, where the two sides are trying to work out a treaty. The Soviets already have accepted the principle of on-site inspection to help verify compliance, which is the major stumbling block to an agreement.

The proposed pact would require dismantling, over the next five years, of 268 U.S. weapons based in West Germany, Great Britain, Belgium, The Netherlands and Italy, along with the 243 Soviet weapons targeted on Western Europe.

Perle, who announced Thursday that he would resign his post as the assistant defense secretary for international security policy this spring, denied that he was stepping down because of unhappiness with the current U.S. negotiating position.

"No, not at all," he said. "Indeed, I've supported the position we're now pursuing from the very beginning. It was controversial back in 1981, but is now widely accepted."

Perle added that the Reagan administration's contribution to the nation's security has been "to set a new and realistic, far more demanding standard for what constitutes effective arms control."

"The agreements of the past provided for massive increases in nuclear weapons," he said. "We are now on a path toward massive reductions."

Perle said an agreement was possible by the fall, but the United States had to "nail down the remaining issues, which are the treatment of shorter-range missiles and a sound program of verification."

Perle has fought any arms control proposal that didn't call for deep reductions in nuclear weaponry.

Canada Agrees To Prosecute Alleged Nazi War Criminals

OTTAWA (AP) — The government announced it would change its laws to allow prosecution of people charged with Nazi war crimes following publication of a report recommending that urgent action be taken against 20 people accused of World War II atrocities.

Justice Minister Ray Hnatyshyn told Parliament on Thursday the government would propose legislation to change the Criminal Code to permit the prosecution of people on charges of war crimes they allegedly committed elsewhere.

He did not say when the government would submit the proposed bill, but the legislation is expected to pass easily in Parliament, where Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's Conservative Party has a large majority.

The government proposal was announced after the Commission of Inquiry on War Criminals released a report based on a two-year official investigation of more than 900 people suspected of war crimes.

The 966-page public report said that of those cases, 698 were dismissed for lack of evidence or because the suspects died or never reached Canada, and that further investigation was needed in 218 cases.

However, the commission, headed by Judge Jules Deschenes, said it found sufficient evidence to recommend the government act immediately against 20 people, either by deporting them or putting them on trial.

No names were included in the commission's report, but the commission said most of the cases involved East Europeans.

Jewish groups have alleged there are 3,000 to 6,000 suspected Nazi war criminals in Canada, but the report said those numbers are grossly exaggerated.

Hnatyshyn rejected negotiating new extradition arrangements with countries seeking the return of suspects, such as Israel and the Soviet Union, and said the government would not strip suspects of citizenship retroactively, as the commission suggested.

Canada will seek evidence from witnesses in the Soviet Union and other countries but will follow its customary judicial safeguards, Hnatyshyn said.

The judicial commission took two years to complete its work, at a cost of $4 million ($3 million U.S.).

Sol Littman, Canadian representative of the Simon Wiesenthal Center, which hunts Nazi war criminals, accused the commission of "wholesale dismissal by ineptness." He expressed doubt of the government's commitment to prosecute even those cases in which atrocities can be proven.

"We're going to watch and wait, but not wait very long because the biological clock is ticking away and some criminals may cheat justice by dying," Littman told The Associated Press.

He said experience in other countries showed that "normal police procedures aren't adequate for this kind of crime" and only special Nazi-hunting units can track down war criminals.

Irwin Cotler, spokesman for the Canadian Jewish Congress, backed the idea of Canadian trials for war criminals.

"The Deschenes commission has given the government the remedies," he told a news conference. "It is now the responsibility of the government to exercise the requisite political will."

In New York, Abraham H. Foxman, associate national director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said Canada had shown "a commitment to securing justice and a warning that Canada will not allow itself to be a haven for Hitler's persecutors."

The report claimed to have "established beyond a reasonable doubt" that Josef Mengele, the sadistic Auschwitz doctor known as the "Angel of Death," never entered Canada or applied for a visa from Buenos Aires, as rumored since 1962. Mengele drowned in Brazil in 1979.

It also said no evidence was found to confirm that one unidentified suspect headed a police unit responsible for killing 8,000 Jews in Eastern Europe in 1941.

Representatives of Canada's 800,000 Ukrainians expressed relief over the finding of no evidence against the Galicia division of Nazi Germany's Waffen SS.

More than 1,000 Ukrainian members of the division entered Canada after the war and hundreds are still alive. Jewish groups have accused the division of murdering thousands of Jews.

Board Disunity Must Be Reversed

The Pitt County Board of Education made two mistakes when it adopted the school attendance line revisions with an unlimited grandfather clause.

First, opting for an unlimited grandfather clause was not a feasible decision. The attendance line revisions themselves are sound and can improve the quality of education by better distributing resources and equalizing the racial mix of schools. The board should be applauded for accepting such a plan.

But allowing unlimited grandfathering makes the approved changes virtually meaningless. The measure guarantees unborn children the right to attend a particular school — a weak-kneed, unrealistic move that could annihilate the very progress the plan was designed to promote.

Under the unlimited grandfather clause, the revised attendance lines do nothing to improve racial balance in the schools. There is a valid question whether or not this approach will pass U.S. Department of Justice scrutiny.

Second, the board's 8-7 vote split on an important issue like revising attendance lines was a serious occurrence. The split was doubly disturbing because it came on a clear city-county power division. "City" members of the supposedly unified board that governs the county's consolidated school system voted against the unlimited grandfathering. "County" members voted for it.

Obviously, the word "consolidated" means little to the board. Battle lines have been drawn between factions, and the implications of this fact can reach far beyond the board conference room. Divisiveness is not a responsible attitude for a board of a merged school system. It certainly is not one that promotes strong, balanced government for public schools.

As a widely-divided group, the Pitt County Board of Education cannot make sound decisions about the schools' future. The vote on grandfathering is a blatant illustration of that fact. A verdict on a far-reaching public issue such as redrawing attendance lines should not be made by a board marked by sharp dissension. The result is a policy of little use.

That situation is potentially damaging to the future of Pitt's public school system. For this reason, the board must respond to a challenge to work together and dissolve this disunity. Members must accept, collectively and individually, the responsibility of governing a school system that is neither city nor county.

Politically, there is no longer a "them and us" situation in Pitt County's classrooms, and this mentality, made so evident by the attendance line vote, is obsolete, backwards and detrimental. It promotes weak government and defeats progress.

Rather than allow this trend, the Pitt County Board of Education must develop the ability to function as a responsible body concerned with the overall picture — and with doing what best benefits all students.

Grant Welcome

East Carolina University medical scientists will be studying the cause of Type-II or adult-onset diabetes following receipt of a $2.55 million grant from the National Institute of Health.

The grant, largest ever received by ECU, will be awarded over the next five years. It is particularly significant that these funds will be used by an eastern North Carolina research facility since the money will combat a disease particularly prevalent in this geographic area.

The effort will be coordinated by Dr. Jose F. Caro who hopes the grant will be a step toward establishment of a diabetes center at the ECU School of Medicine. Immediately, however, the research which will be made possible by the grant may help medical scientists to understand diabetes and could lead the way to better treatment.

In Type II diabetes the individuals have normal or above-normal levels of circulating insulin. But, Dr. Caro says the cells are blind to insulin. It is the cellular resistance to insulin that Caro and other researchers will investigate. Some of the nation's most renowned experts on diabetes will also contribute to the project.

From its inception the ECU Medical School has involved itself in health matters that are of primary concern to eastern North Carolina. That has included pre-natal health care, improving the infant survival rate, organ transplants and improved health care for the elderly.

Type II diabetes is a disease which afflicts a larger share of eastern North Carolina residents than in other areas and it is appropriate this significant research will be carried out at the university medical school.

The real beneficiaries of this grant will be the people served by the ECU Med School. Dr Caro and his associates have done the area a service in their successful efforts to obtain this grant.

Public Forum

To the editor:

The Pitt County Consolidated Board of Education has made an inappropriate decision for the children of Pitt County. Many schools in Pitt County will suffer. The city of Greenville will suffer. Our neighborhoods remain split by this issue ... split by "grandfathering."

We must all remember that, even though one may choose to grandfather, for whatever the reason, it will deter any progress made by redistricting for years. If we can redirect our energy from this emotional issue toward our assigned school, there will be results. We must work hard to improve and support the school to which our neighborhood has been assigned. Let's make it work!

The direction of our schools now rests with each individual home. As parents and responsible adults, we can accept this challenge and make the school system better, despite the decision of the school board. Our children need to hear a message of "unity, dedication and progress." Hold these thoughts in your heart as you decide whether or not to "grandfather" your child.

To the editor:

It is with sadness that I view Monday's decision by the Board of Education. I know many people are elated because they get to continue attending county schools. But let's look at those children who attend city schools. Two-thirds of the children in city schools will be moved, and they do not have the privilege of the grandfather clause to let them remain in their present schools. Instead of two schools that are racially unbalanced, five-to-seven racially unbalanced schools will be created by changing our configuration and allowing neighborhoods slated to attend city schools to grandfather. Yes, our children are being moved and, not only away from their friends, but to schools which will now have an inner-city nature.

I question how policy for a whole district can be decided by a 7-7 vote with Chairman Owens breaking the tie. The board members have many questions and concerns about this policy, and with the Board split, how can we move forward in a unified effort?

Mr. Blount stated that the Board has to make tough decision and put this animosity to an end. I believe the animosity is only beginning because parents in the city have been put in an unbearable and unacceptable position by this decision. Our children's education is in jeopardy and we will not accept that situation. No, this will not end, and we will not go away. This battle will continue, either through the courts or the justice department, until a wrong that has been done is corrected. Yes, it makes me sad, because parents in the city will feel the need to act as the Board's policemen and report those not currently residing as the policy reads. And those children affected by the grandfather clause are losers, because each year the loss of their grandfather privileges hangs over their heads.

Yes, we're all losers, because, instead of ending the animosity and anger, it will only continue and that is the saddest of all.

Babbitt Tries 'Make Waves' Approach

MANCHESTER, N.H. (AP) — Ten years as governor of Arizona is not the ticket to the kind of national recognition that enables a presidential candidate to register well in the early opinion polls.

So Bruce Babbitt plans to "make some waves," raise issues that will get him noticed even if there is no guarantee they will get him the votes he needs.

The Babbitt strategy was on display Tuesday in his speech declaring he was a candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.

In New Hampshire, a state in which the slightest hint of an inclination to raise taxes is considered political suicide, Babbitt talked about taxing the Social Security benefits of wealthier Americans.

In a state heavily dependent on the income from vacationers, Babbitt talked about eliminating the tax deduction for mortgage interest on vacation homes.

In a state known for its hostility toward federal social programs, Babbitt advocated adding 8 million children to the Medicaid rolls and creating a national child care voucher for families in which both parents work.

'Bruce Babbitt plans to "make some waves," raise issues that will get him noticed even if there is no guarantee they will get him the votes he needs. The Babbitt strategy was on display Tuesday in his speech declaring he was a candidate for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination.'

But there is a method behind the former governor's rhetoric.

In part, he is trying to establish himself as the candidate with leadership qualities.

"The next president of the United States must dare to be different, willing to cast aside the tired orthodoxies that hold back our leaders," he told supporters.

Babbitt also would like to assume the role Gary Hart had entering the 1984 New Hampshire primary.

During that contest, Hart's second-place finish in Iowa established him as the alternative to Walter F. Mondale. And New Hampshire voters were ready to support an alternative to Mondale.

The Colorado senator also had established himself as a candidate willing to turn away from traditional Democratic Party orthodoxy in a search for solutions to national problems.

Babbitt's hope this time around is that he will emerge from Iowa as the candidate of new ideas and as the alternative to Hart.

That strategy depends on Hart's New Hampshire support proving fickle, based more on anti-Mondale sentiment than any strong commitment to the Coloradan.

At first glance, Babbitt's Social Security proposal raises a few eyebrows. After all, Ronald Reagan quickly backed away from an attempt early in his administration to limit program benefits and then had to vow he never would tamper with the program.

But Babbitt's plan is only an extension of current law, which taxes as regular income half the Social Security benefits paid to couples with an income of $32,000 or more.

For retirees with an income of about $35,000, Babbitt would treat all Social Security benefits as regular income subject to taxation.

Mike McCurry, a spokesman for the former Arizona governor, indicated his political strategists would relish other Democrats making an issue of Babbitt's Social Security proposal.

"Anyone who ends up in a two-way or three-way race with Babbitt is going to try to slam him on Social Security," said McCurry, acting confident his boss would end up looking like a leader who has the courage to make tough choices.

To buttress that image, the Babbitt plan would earmark the revenue, estimated at about $3 billion a year, to expend catastrophic health coverage for the elderly poor.

Babbitt isn't the only presidential candidate attracting attention by advocating a change in Social Security.

Strength For Today

The German poet Goethe died crying, "Light, more light!"

When will light come? We often ask ourselves. When will we know with some assurance what we ought to do or when will we have that certainty of conviction that will give peace amidst life's turmoil?

Strange as it seems, the light almost never comes until darkness has reached its most extreme stage. But the world is not made after a pattern of eternal night. Darkness is always succeeded by light, and no matter how black it may appear as we look out of our windows, we can know that God has so arranged things that eventually the light will come.

We have to have the dark night in order to live with steadfastness and purpose when morning breaks.

Topsail Island Faces Ocean, Rapid Building

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
TOPSAIL BEACH, N.C. (AP) — While high-rise condominiums sprout on the north end of Topsail Island, officials here at the southern end wonder whether some beachfront buildings will have to be abandoned to the advancing ocean.

"Some folks are talking about moving, some are talking about sand-bagging and some may just let the tide wash under (their houses) and get as much use out of them as they can before they fall in," said Topsail Beach Town Manager Tony Caudle.

Meanwhile, state officials say the northern end of this 23-mile-long barrier island is probably being developed more quickly and intensely than any other part of the North Carolina coast. The area, in Onslow County, has been called West Onslow Beach, but developers call it North Topsail Shores.

"It's hard to imagine a more irresponsible development than that," said Duke University geologist Orrin Pilkey, well-known for his warnings that beaches are not safe places to build. "In case of a hurricane, those people are doomed."

Topsail Beach, on the southern end of the island in Pender County, bore the brunt of December and January storms, suffering more than $3 million in damage. Caudle said 42 structures — not including walkways and decks — were damaged, ranging from washed-out windows to undermined foundations.

Dunes along a 1.1-mile stretch from the Sea Vista Motel to Jolly Roger Pier were destroyed.

"We now have no dune structure at the southern end," he said. "Any efforts to put it back are pretty much going to be futile because it's in an active tide area."

The town is trying to restore dunes

North Carolina's 3,375-mile tidal shoreline, long neglected but now a focal point for development, has become the center of major controversy over preserving the past and moving on to the future. Do you build for tourists and vacationers, or do you leave the original shoreline to nature? This is the fifth of a six-part series exploring the problem.

along a four-mile stretch to the north, but may have to stop when the town runs out of money, he said. After the December storms, the town spent $15,000 on replacing dunes that the January storm swept away again.

The town is considering a beach replenishment project using sand dredged from elsewhere, but Caudle estimated it would cost between $5 million and $10 million to reconstruct the entire 5.5-mile beach to its former width.

Sand-bagging efforts are also being considered. But in Long Beach, which also was hard hit by the January storm, many sand bags were destroyed early in the storm when they were punctured by debris.

At the Sea Vista, now a "motelminium" where people own individual rooms, the December storm washed sand out from under the concrete first floor, letting it and about eight of the 35 rooms cave in. The January storm took out the front wall and two more rooms, said manager Frances Ricks.

"This is the third year in a row the owners have had to come up with money to repair damages from a hurricane or a northeaster," she said. "They're getting kind of discouraged."

Owners meeting after the storm said each may have to pay $1,400 to pay for damage this time, she said.

Topsail Beach Mayor Kip Oppgaard said he saw no problem with building on barrier islands, but that he probably wouldn't build near the ocean himself. He said many of the houses damaged this year were built 10 or 15 years ago, before all the publicity about the dangers of beachfront development.

"I've heard Orrin Pilkey," he said. "If he's so damn smart, how come he didn't tell us about it then? ... It's good to have hindsight, but nobody said anything about erosion back then."

Pilkey said: "If he read the newspaper then, he would have seen (the warnings). ... A lot of people claim, 'How were we supposed to know? But if you're living near the coast, most people have been through storms and seen the erosion.'"

Meanwhile, Pilkey said, the high-density development in North Topsail Shores is "a catastrophe waiting to happen."

The December and January storms washed away parts of the road leading to it, and bulldozers have been trying to push sand up from the beach into protective dunes.

"Because the beach is being steepened, that's going to make it erode more rapidly than ever," he said. "In a major storm, those artificial dunes are going to be flicked

Onslow Woman Takes Lead In Struggle To Save Shoreline

By TOM MINEHART
Associated Press Writer
HOLLY RIDGE, N.C. (AP) — For those concerned that development may be harming the delicate North Carolina coast, Lena Ritter has some not-so-delicate advice.

"Get off your behind and go to work," says the 51-year-old Onslow County woman, who led a successful fight to stop development on Permuda Island and protect the shellfishing waters of nearby Stump Sound.

"If you sit down, they're going to take it away from you. Hold your officials to the fire. If they don't listen, replace 'em at the polls."

For six generations, Mrs. Ritter's family had harvested oysters from the sound. It saved them during the Depression, when they ate oysters for breakfast, lunch and dinner.

She and her husband, Graham, were shellfishermen themselves in December 1982, when she read that developer Marshall Thomas planned condominiums, tennis courts, swimming pools and a marina for Permuda Island, which lies in Stump Sound between their mainland home and Topsail Island.

She remembers fuming about the development — how its bacterial-laden stormwater runoff and the oil from boats using the marina could pollute the sound.

"I was so angry ... to think that for a profit, they would ruin our heritage and livelihood ... that we'd have to give it up for a rich person from New York to have a place to play."

They didn't give it up. During a recent interview by a wood stove at the Ritter's small house, she chain-smoked cigarettes as she recounted how she and hundreds of neighbors founded the Stump Sound Shellfishermen Coalition and joined with environmentalists to fight the development.

A tall, wiry woman with graying, curly hair, glasses and a ready smile, she often jumped up and rummaged through the kitchen for documents and clippings to illustrate how she organized many of the 2,500 people who make their living from the sound.

"My thing was getting them riled up to start with," said Mrs. Ritter, but her husband said she did much more than that.

"She kept them informed, spread the word, gathered them up, chartered the buses," Graham Ritter said. "She's the talker in the bunch."

She'll admit to that much.

"I don't bite my tongue," she said. "I'm not a public speaker, but with enough hell in me I just get up and talk. If I don't use proper English, I don't worry about it."

In early 1983, she organized a meeting in her husband's workshop, where he began making cabinets after uncertainty over the sound forced them to give up oystering. She led a delegation of fishermen to a meeting of the Onslow County Planning Board, which agreed to tour the island — to "appease us," she said.

The developer's marina consultant came along on the tour.

"He was stupid enough to say, 'Generally, we sympathize with these people, but damned if we're going to be bothered with them.' I didn't need that ... that really set me on fire," she said.

To raise money, the fishermen held auctions, bake sales and oyster feasts. Graham and the other men built a 16-foot working skiff and raffled it to bring in $1,700. Mrs. Ritter took a job at a local pie factory and traded days off with co-workers to continue the fight.

People donated money to help with her massive phone bills, and those without money donated oysters they had scraped from the sound. Eventually they raised a total of $7,000 — enough to hire a lawyer.

Martin Defends Johnson's Role In Handling Prisons

By JOHN FLESHER
Associated Press Writer
RALEIGH (AP) — Gov. Jim Martin defended Correction Secretary Aaron Johnson's work on relieving prison crowding and announced a new task force to help rural areas during his weekly news conference.

Martin said Thursday Johnson had been "a very strong leader" and had made an honest effort to deal with a problem that had festered for years.

He said lawsuits over poor prison conditions and the threat of a federal takeover of the prisons came from the situation his administration inherited.

"And I hope that some of those who are criticizing Secretary Johnson will make clear who it is they believe ought to be criticized for our not having done anything in the 1984 and '83 and '82 and '81 and '80 sessions of the General Assembly," Martin said.

The Republican governor said Johnson is strong enough to take the criticism, "But I think it's unfair ... for them to try to assuage their own feelings of inadequacy about what was not done in previous years."

The Legislature has enacted two bills within a week to address prison crowding: a $13 million package to build and expand facilities and a ceiling of 18,000 on the inmate population.

Republican and Democratic legislators have blamed Johnson and his department for letting the situation reach the crisis stage.

State Puts Limits On Lake Discharges

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Environmental Management Commission has unanimously enacted strict limits on the discharges of about 50 sewage treatment plants that discharge into Falls and Jordan lakes and the rivers and streams that feed them.

The bipartisan commission, the state's top environmental protection authority, Thursday also unanimously endorsed a statewide ban on phosphate detergents. The EMC passed a similar resolution in 1984, but the proposed ban bogged down in the face of heavy lobbying by the soap and detergent industry and was never approved by the General Assembly.

The action reduces the levels of phosphorus that can be discharged into the Falls and Jordan watersheds to 2 parts per million from sewage plants with a daily treatment capacity of 50,000 gallons or more.

Now, phosphorous levels discharged from the plants average 5 to 7 parts per million, said George T. Everett, chief of the Division of Environmental Management water quality section. The new restrictions must be implemented by 1990, according to the EMC action.

While the restriction was approved with little discussion, lengthy conversation preceded the resolution urging the ban on phosphate detergents.

Woman Fights Back

At a public hearing, county commissioners tried to limit each speaker to five minutes, but the fishermen pooled their time to let the lawyer talk for an hour.

"One commissioner told me, 'What you're doing is just like communism.' But the way I look at it, communism is walking all over us, and that's what they were doing," she said.

County commissioner Cecil Morton of Jacksonville, who had voted to rezone the island for the development, said recently that the shellfishermen "certainly had legitimate concerns."

But he added, "It wasn't our job to maintain the safeness of the water. As county commissioners, what we were doing was rezoning."

The county planning board and county commission approved the development in the spring of 1983. But Mrs. Ritter had already "tried to head them off at the pass" by organizing a bus trip of fishermen to Raleigh.

There, allied with the North Carolina Coastal Federation and other conservationists, they lobbied state officials on the permits the developer would need.

"When you go in there with a busload of 50 people, the calculators start going," she said. "They count up votes." Still, she said, she was "bounced from one agency to another 'til I felt like a rubber ball."

"We did everything we could that was legal," she said. The fishermen debated the development's effect not only on fishing but on wildlife and even on the island's archaeology. Mrs. Ritter toted a bucket of Indian artifacts, including a clay tobacco pipe, to hearings to bolster their case.

She became a master at working with the news media, inviting reporters out to the sound where, clad in hip boots, she would putter around in her skiff and rake for oysters while the cameras whirled.

"She's crafty, too," said Todd Miller, director of the Coastal Federation. "That's part of the reason she's been successful — she's more astute than people give her credit for."

In early 1984, the state Division of Coastal Management denied construction permits for the project on the grounds that sewage treatment and stormwater runoff plans were inadequate, and Thomas sold the island to Hal Kinlaw of Lumberton. A smaller project by Kinlaw was rejected last September for similar reasons.

The coalition was winning because the developers were being held off. But Mrs. Ritter still couldn't relax, because they could have reapplied for the permits at any time.

In December, however, the private North Carolina Nature Conservancy agreed to buy the island for $1.7 million, and the state has agreed to buy it back for its estuarine sanctuary system.

"I still can't believe it," Mrs. Ritter said. "We fought for four years, we thought it could come back, one phone call and it's all over."

Not only did the shellfishermen win back their sound, they also changed the face of local politics in Onslow County, she said. They supported two successful candidates for the county commission, which she said reversed its 4-1 pro-developer configuration in the November election.

"The hardest part was accepting that your elected officials had turned their backs on you," she said. "I never bought it."

Topsail

away like you flick a dead fly off the table. Storms don't even find them a momentary obstacle."

With the road gone and the ocean washing through in a storm, hundreds of people could be trapped and "a good number are not going to make it," Pilkey said.

"The only way to make the community safe is to build a bridge (across the inlet to the mainland) to evacuate people." But even that bridge would be unsafe because the inlet keeps shifting, he said.

Developer Bobby Dixon said there are currently more than 1,500 residential units on the northern end of Topsail Island, and hundreds more are planned. The summer population currently reaches about 3,000.

Roger Page, owner of Pace Oil Co. of Winston-Salem, said he owned most of the land where the North Topsail development is going up and still owns or controls about 70 percent of the entire island. He said his holdings are worth $15 million.

Page said moving the road closer to the center of the island would eliminate North Topsail Shore's washover problem. He wants to move four miles of the road about 200 to 400 feet west, a project he said probably would cost him about $3 million. The plan has been approved and is expected to begin in a few weeks.

During the December and January storms, North Topsail "got less (damage) than anybody," he said. "The buildings are constructed well, but the fact is we don't get as much hurricane (damage) as other places, like Carolina Beach."

Tax Cut Proposal Nears Approval

By F. ALAN BOYCE
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The state Senate has agreed to postpone controversy in an effort to enact a tax cut for employers before a March 17 deadline.

The Senate Thursday tentatively approved the bill, which would cut unemployment taxes an average of 14 percent and would increase jobless benefits. But senators agreed to let the Appropriations Committee decide how to use interest from a new $200 million state unemployment reserve fund established by the bill.

Sen. R.P. "Bo" Thomas, D-Henderson, had wanted the interest used to train unemployed workers, while state House members had earmarked 15 percent of the interest for Employment Security Commission administration costs.

Sen. Marshall Rauch, D-Gaston, chairman of the Finance Committee, urged senators to delete both plans so the measure can be enacted by next week and the tax cut can take effect this year.

"Then, if you have to change something, you can do it next month," he said.

The Senate tentatively approved the bill 47-0 and was expected to return it to the House today. Rep. Jeff Enloe, D-Macon, who sponsored the House bill, said the House would likely concur next week.

At stake is a tax cut estimated at $50 million the first year and an increase in top jobless benefits from 60 percent of former salaries to 66.6 percent in 1988. The bill was drawn when state officials realized North Carolina employers were contributing taxes faster than necessary to bring a federal reserve fund to $1.4 billion by 1991. The state fund would let the state control part of the reserve in case of a recession.

Sen. Bill Goldston, D-Rockingham, remained opposed to having interest from the state fund put into state coffers.

"We're taking interest money from a fund that has been dedicated for many, many years," he said. "We are going to be setting a precedent now if we adopt this amendment that we can go in and take the interest off any of our funds."

Goldston said if the state needs the money, it should ask industry for it directly.

"Without our industries, gentlemen, we wouldn't have enough money to be here," he said. "Let's don't blindside them."

Rauch, however, said the state already ready benefits from interest in another Employment Security Commission fund for penalties collected.

Landfills

A bill to require that sanitary landfills be 10 times farther from major rivers and streams than under current law drew criticism Thursday for putting water quality ahead of county needs for disposal sites.

Rep. Joe Hackney, D-Orange, said he introduced the bill because current state policies appeared to be encouraging the placement of landfills close to running water.

"Why should you protect someone who might drill a well in the corner of Alamance County at the expense of the entire water supply?" he asked.

Hackney proposed to increase the current setback of 250 feet to 2,500 feet from any major river.

Murder Plea

COLUMBUS, N.C. (AP) — A man charged with the slaying of a Hendersonville man pleaded guilty Wednesday to second-degree murder and was sentenced to 50 years in prison.

Gary Thomas Case, 33, of Hendersonville originally was charged with first-degree murder in connection with the shooting death of Richard Dale Lyda, 30, of Hendersonville.

Attorneys had selected five of 12 jurors and entered the second day of jury selection in Polk County Superior Court when Case pleaded guilty to the lesser charge. If found guilty of first-degree murder, Case could have received the death penalty or life in prison.

Lyda's body was found at World's Edge, a scenic overlook on the Polk-Henderson County line in Edneyville, on May 25, 1986. He was shot at least three times with a .38-caliber revolver, investigators said. Case was found in a semi-conscious state less than 100 feet away. A .38-caliber revolver was found nearby, investigators said.

Dole Meeting

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — Officials from Wilkes and Yadkin counties plan to meet Monday with Elizabeth H. Dole, the secretary of the U.S. Department of Transportation to seek support for the widening of U.S. 421.

Joe H. Byrd, the chairman of the Wilkes County Board of Commissioners, said the delegation plans to explain the importance of widening U.S. 421 to four lanes throughout Yadkin, Wilkes and Watauga counties.

Byrd said that the meeting could lead to federal money for the project. About 27 miles of the highway in Watauga and Yadkin counties have been scheduled for widening, beginning in the early 1990s. No date has been set for the widening of another 33 miles, mostly in Wilkes County.

Widening the 27 miles in Watauga and Yadkin counties will cost about $61 million. The cost of widening the extra 33 miles has not been estimated.

No Regular

HIGH POINT (AP) — "Fill 'er up with regular" will soon be a futile command at Amoco stations across the state.

Amoco will stop offering regular leaded gasoline on April 6 as part of the company's state-by-state phasedown of leaded gasoline sales. Other oil companies are expected to follow suit in the next year or two, joining a nationwide movement spearheaded by the federal government.

The Environmental Protection Agency has proposed a ban on sales of leaded gasoline by Jan. 1, 1988.

Generally, vehicles and equipment that use regular leaded gasoline can be operated with unleaded fuel without suffering ill effects according to the EPA.

Escaped Lion

HIGH POINT (AP) — An alert continued Thursday for a 100-pound African lion cub that escaped from its cage at the Rainbow Bird Ranch near Flint Hill sometime Tuesday, Randolph County sheriff's deputies said.

Owner Jimmy Wright said the tan-colored 7-month-old cub escaped from its cage and disappeared into nearby woods. He said it possibly was frightened by stray dogs. Dog tracks were found around the cage, he said.

Wright said the cub probably would not be dangerous unless cornered, but he cautioned pursuers to be careful if dogs were near it.

Bad Sausage

RALEIGH (AP) — A Spanish sausage sold by Abvin Packing, an Elizabeth, N.J., meat company, has been voluntarily recalled by the firm in 20 states, including North Carolina, the state Agriculture Department said Thursday.

The product, packed in 14-ounce cans, is under the brand name of El Mino Chorizos, and may contain food spoilage organisms, which in extreme cases, could cause botulism, a serious form of food poisoning, said Agriculture Department spokesman Jim Devine.

Effectuated cans have EST.2136 printed inside the U.S. Department of Agriculture seal on the label, Devine said. Anyone having the product should return it to the place of purchase, he said.

No other products packed by the company are effected, Devine said.

Devine said anyone with more information on the sausage should contact Bob Gordon, director of the N.C. Department of Agriculture's Food and Drug Protection division.

FSU Chancellor Contends His Job Is On Line

RALEIGH (AP) — Fayetteville State University Chancellor Charles Lyons says his job is on the line, but the school's board of trustees has declined to take a stand supporting him.

Lyons Thursday stopped short of saying he had submitted his resignation after an hour-long private meeting with the FSU trustees.

"Whatever they do, I won't go without meals on the table," Lyons said, referring to a meeting today of the University of North Carolina Board of Governors.

C.D. Spangler Jr., president of the UNC System, has declined to discuss Lyons' situation, saying it is a personnel matter. But he told black legislators earlier this month he was not pleased with the performance of Fayetteville State.

Dr. C. Mason Quick, a Fayetteville physician, Thursday read a statement at the trustee's meeting calling on the board to stand behind Lyons.

"We are not privy to what Dr. Spangler refers to as personnel matters, but we have observed and marveled at the ability Dr. Lyons has demonstrated as he has provided direction and presided over the transition of FSU from a teacher-training institution to a regional university," Quick said.

Quick's statement said Lyons, 60, should remain in his job while a new chancellor is sought so Lyons could "complete unfinished tasks."

The Rev. Lorenzo Lynch of

Durham shouted to the trustees, "You have your man right here, and you should keep him."

After emerging from the hour-long closed session, the trustees declined to take a stand in support of Lyons.

The Board of Governors, which oversees all 16 UNC campuses, has the authority to hire and dismiss chancellors.

Banking Nominee Faces Opposition In Legislature

RALEIGH (AP) — Former legislator Ben Tison won a Senate committee's endorsement for state banking commissioner after vowing his longtime employment with NCNB National Bank would not lead him to show favoritism.

But House members said after a public hearing Thursday that Tison had not satisfied their concerns and his nomination was in trouble. Both chambers must approve the nomination for Tison to get the job.

"We ought not to take this nomination process lightly," Rep. Dennis Wicker, D-Lee, said after lawmakers grilled Tison for nearly an hour. "I think there are a lot of questions in the House."

The hearing was before a joint meeting of the House Banking Committee and the Senate Commerce Committee.

Gov. Jim Martin has nominated Tison, who spent 10 years in the House and two in the Senate, to replace James S. Currie, a Democrat whose term as the state's chief banking regulator expires this month. Tison is a vice president and trust of ficer with NCNB National Bank in Charlotte.

A majority of the Senate's Democrats indicated in a recent caucus they would back Tison and Lt. Gov. Bob Jordan, who presides over the Senate, has added his endorsement.

Sen. Kenneth Royall, D-Durham, interrupted the questioning to move that the Senate panel recommend confirming Tison's nomination. The committee voted swiftly to endorse Tison.

Some House members say privately that the strong opposition in that chamber stems from Tison's decision in 1985 to switch his party registration from Democrat to Republican. The move came after Tison lost a bid for the 9th District Democratic congressional nomination in 1984.

Tison has speculated that another problem might be his failure to support Liston Ramsey's bid for House speaker in 1981. Ramsey was elected and has held the post since then.

Ramsey noted in an interview Wednesday that the state banking commissioner generally has not come from the banking industry.

Rep. Ray C. Fletcher, D-Burke, chairman of the Banking Committee, said if the panel had voted Thursday the nomination would have been defeated.

Fletcher has recommended that Martin withdraw the Tison nomination. But the governor said at a Thursday news conference he was standing behind Tison.

During the hearing, House members focused on whether Tison's 24 years in the employ of a national bank made him unfit to regulate the industry.

"I only consider that an asset," Tison said, adding that he would retire from NCNB if approved as commissioner. "I don't consider that to be a negative in any way. I do not feel that it would prejudice me."

"My job is going to be to answer to a 14-member state banking commission. As I understand it, they're going to review my work every 60 days," Tison added.

Wicker repeatedly questioned Tison about whether his affiliation with a national bank would hinder his objectivity in regulating smaller, state-chartered banks.

Noting that six of the members were representatives of state banks, Tison said, "I feel if there were any bias shown it would be corrected in a hurry. And I wouldn't be fool enough to try to beat that."

The House panel is not expected to vote before a meeting scheduled for next Thursday.

Wilson Building Destroyed

WILSON, N.C. (AP) — Firefighters were keeping an eye on the smoldering ruins of a downtown Wilson tobacco warehouse today.

The fire burned the warehouse, which covered a city block, and also burned down power poles Thursday night, knocking out electricity to some sections of the city.

Wilson Fire Chief Bruce Rose said there were no injuries from the fire, which started about 8:30 p.m. in the Watson Warehouse.

The warehouse, which Rose said was destroyed, houses a floral shop, interior design shop and at least one other business.

"It's pretty much destroyed," said Sherwood Stott, a utilities dispatcher. "We've got a lot of power off in town."

Stott said all of the city's firefighters and a number of volunteer departments from surrounding areas helped control the blaze.

Rose says authorities don't know the cause of the blaze.

Kemp Calls For Broad Party Base

WILKESBORO, N.C. (AP) — To win in the 1988 elections, the Republican Party must broaden its base and become a party for all people, says Rep. Jack F. Kemp, R-N.Y.

"We've got to be a party that cares about all people," Kemp said Thursday. "Our party cannot be a party of capital without being a party of labor... working men and women, families who are trying to work and save and invest in their children's education."

Kemp, 51, an undeclared candidate for the GOP presidential nomination, told about 250 people at a fund-raising dinner for the county GOP that the Democratic Party is more liberal than most Americans.

"We may be a minority in the United States Congress, but ladies and gentlemen, we represent the majority of the American people's philosophy," Kemp said.

He criticized the vote Wednesday by House Democrats to freeze $40 million in aid to the Nicaraguan Contras.

"They've underestimated the intelligence of the American people," he said of the Democrats. Most Americans would support any effort to fight communism anywhere in the Western Hemisphere, he said.

He said that the Iran-Contra affair is discouraging but that the public wants Congress and President Reagan "to get on with American foreign policy and make this country stronger and resist the tide of communism in the world."

In a press conference before the dinner, Kemp said that the Iran-Contra affair will not harm the GOP's chances of winning the 1988 presidential election.

Goldsboro School Expells Girl For Modeling Swimsuit

GOLDSBORO, N.C. (AP) — The parents of a 17-year-old senior at Goldsboro Christian School say they are outraged that their daughter was expelled two months before graduation because she modeled swimsuits in a department store fashion show.

"We were not even notified," Robert Outlaw said of the expulsion of his daughter, Machel. "Nobody called us. They just expelled her for the rest of the term, just over a bathing suit."

"I wonder now if this is the kind of school you want to send your kids to. Eleven years she was there and two months before graduation, and they expelled her without even so much as giving her a chance because she had been modeling in an exclusive area of a department store," Outlaw said.

Miss Outlaw said she was called to the office of principal Reginald Kingsley Wednesday and then taken to the office of the Rev. Tom Harper, pastor of Second Baptist Church, which sponsors the school.

"When I went in, they told me they had a bad report on me," she said Thursday. "They told me someone reported that I had modeled a bathing suit in a window in the mall on Friday and Saturday nights."

Miss Outlaw said she told Harper she had not modeled in a window but in a secluded area of the women's department. She said she had modeled on a Saturday night with other teen models.

"Then he asked me if it was a one-piece or a two-piece," she said. "I told him I had modeled both. We talked for a few minutes and then he told me I would be expelled because I had modeled a bathing suit. He said that whenever I left the school, I was representing the school and that modeling a bathing suit was putting a bad influence on the school."

"He said I was putting a bad influence on the school because I was revealing my body," Miss Outlaw said. "That's basically what it boiled down to."

The modeling of the spring line of swimwear was done for women in a small area of the women's department at Weil's department store, Miss Outlaw said.

An aspiring professional model, Miss Outlaw is a member of the store's Teen Board, a group of young women who serve as youth advisers. Besides organizing fashion shows, the teen board works with the underprivileged and is involved in a number of charity projects, said Linda Leach, Weil's advertising director.

Miss Outlaw's parents said Harper made the decision without consulting the school's board of directors. They are protesting the expulsion and planned to meet with school officials to discuss the situation.

A woman who answered calls at the church said Thursday that Harper would have no comment on the expulsion.

Ms. Leach said someone from Goldsboro Christian School called her Wednesday asking about Miss Outlaw, saying the school wanted to do a feature on Miss Outlaw and wanted to know if she had done any modeling.

"They did not give me the impression they were concerned about her modeling," she said. "I was under the assumption they were doing a feature story on her."

Miss Outlaw said there was no rule against modeling in the school's rule book, but that girls are forbidden to wear dresses shorter than knee-length or to unbutton more than the top button on blouses.

Miss Outlaw said she had been called to the principal's office only one other time in her life, for chewing gum in school.

Miss Outlaw said many of her classmates have visited since she was expelled.

"A friend told me it's real quiet around there now, and said 'You would have thought somebody died,'" she said.

Goldsboro Christian School was the focus of a 1983 ruling by the U.S. Supreme Court which said the government has the power to deny tax exemptions to racially discriminatory church-related academies and colleges.

The school had refused to admit blacks for 20 years, but the church changed its admissions policy a few months after the court ruling and said blacks were welcome.

It could not be determined Thursday if any black students have since enrolled at the school.

Panel Will Seek Six-Month Delay In Waste Site Choice

By MARTHA WAGGONER
Associated Press Writer

RALEIGH (AP) — The Hazardous Waste Treatment Commission says it wants six more months to pick a site for a treatment facility, which would push the start of plant construction to spring 1989.

The General Assembly had set an April 1 deadline for the commission to select a site, with design drawings for the facility to be completed by Sept. 1. But the commission voted Thursday to ask legislators to move the site selection deadline to Oct. 1 and the drawings deadline to April 1, 1988. Construction would begin within a year after drawings were approved.

Joe Harwood of Charlotte, the commission vice chairman who works with Duke Power Co.'s environmental affairs office, said it would be "very difficult" to meet the April 1 deadline set when the General Assembly passed the law ordering the facility in 1984.

The commission also agreed to announce a whittled-down list of possible sites for the treatment facility when it meets March 27. The commission approved Thursday five additional selection guidelines that will eliminate some of the 139 sites under consideration.

John Graham, an industrial realtor in Raleigh, encouraged the commission to eliminate as many sites as soon as possible.

"Since January, those 139 sites have been under a cloud as far as any other use is concerned," Graham said. "It (the search for a facility) has not been a help to North Carolina's industry hunt either."

The new guidelines take into consideration air quality, surface water, population density, emergency response services and groundwater protection.

The commission agreed that the facility will not be located in an area that already does not meet emissions standards in the Clean Air Act. None of the facility's property boundaries may be within 200 feet of an existing pond, lake, stream or river. The nearest storage or treatment unit on the site must be more than 1/2-mile from the nearest licensed institution such as a school, day care center, hospital, nursing home, prison or jail.

The treatment facility also must not be more than five miles from an existing volunteer or full-time staffed fire station by the nearest paved road.

The site's ground surfaces must be five feet or more above the historic high groundwater table, the commission agreed.

Henry von Oesen of Wilmington suggested that concrete be placed beneath the entire facility and not just the tanks and other holding facilities. Such a design gives more assurance that no contamination seeps in the groundwater.

"We've got to contain any spillage, any rainwater, anything that comes in there," he said. "Anything that falls in there has to be contained and checked before it" leaves the site.

The buffer area would be left in its natural state, he said. The commission took no action on the suggestion but left it open as a possibility.

N.C. House OKs Holiday For Martin Luther King

RALEIGH (AP) — The state House approved a bill to establish a paid holiday honoring Martin Luther King Jr., but only after fending off attempts to honor two presidents on the same day and give the holiday a new name.

"The principles espoused by Martin Luther King are those espoused by the Judeo-Christian code ... freedom, justice, equality and peace," Rep. Dan Blue, D-Wake, told the House Thursday. "I say to you the movement Martin Luther King led gave fresh emphasis to those principles and has inspired millions ... to hope for a better day."

The bill, which would force the State Personnel Commission to replace one of 11 holidays observed in 1986 with a King holiday on the third Monday in January, was approved 78-29 mostly along partisan lines and sent to the Senate.

On the first vote on the bill, a 77-34 tally for tentative approval, Rep. Ray Warren of Mecklenburg County and Guilford County Reps. Margaret Keese-Forrester and Trip Sizemore were the lone Republicans favoring it.

The only Democrats opposing the bill were Reps. Richard Wright, D-Colombus, Dave Bumgardner, D-Gaston; Barney Woodard, D-Johnston; and John Tart, D-Wayne.

During debate, Rep. Foyle Hightower, D-Anson, offered an amendment to add Abraham Lincoln's and George Washington's names to the holiday bill. Hightower said he supported the King holiday but that the two presidents also should be honored.

House Speaker Liston Ramsey ruled that the amendment would violate a House rule that requires a bill's caption to reflect its contents. The caption refers only to King.

Wright moved to return the bill to the judiciary panel that approved it so an amendment removing King's name from the holiday could be considered. Wright recommended naming the holiday "Human Relations Day" or "Human Dignity Day."

Wright said North Carolina traditionally has shunned honoring individuals, a habit he said stemmed from colonial days when the state suffered under the dictatorial rule of royal governors. That suspicion, he said, has made North Carolina the only state that does not allow its governor veto power.

"It was part of our heritage, our stubbornness, our feeling that we all should not recognize someone as being above the rest of us," he said. Wright's motion was defeated 71-40.

Blue, chairman of the House Black Caucus, said North Carolina is one of only 10 states and the only Southern state without a paid King holiday. The Legislature in 1983 made King's birthday an unpaid holiday.

"Just as we as a state led our region in moderation because of our belief in a lot of the principles espoused by Martin Luther King, so again we should lead our region and our nation by joining with them ...," Blue said.

He and other supporters of the bill argued that North Carolina has yet to eliminate racism and that a special day is needed to call attention to the lingering problem.

Warren, who drew fire from some of his GOP colleagues for being the lone Republican co-sponsor of the measure, reminded the representatives that virtually all of them could recall when segregation was legally sanctioned.

"This is not ancient history," Warren said. "This happened in the lives of every member of this House."

"Segregation ... was a bond of shame that held this entire state down for a century," he said. "Every person who's ever benefited from the economic miracle of the New South should get down on his hands and knees and thank God for Martin Luther King Jr."

"Things don't just happen. Without dreamers, there would be no dreams."

Some opponents argued the bill would cost the state money, but Blue said nothing in the bill would prevent the commission from having fewer than 11 holidays.

Commuters Await Details Of Merger

WINSTON-SALEM (AP) — Nearly 12 commuter airlines are wondering how they will be affected by the merger of USAir Group Inc. and Piedmont Aviation Inc.

USAir has agreed to buy Piedmont for $1.59 billion.

The most immediate concern is how the merger will combine USAir and Piedmont airlines, the companies' two main operating divisions, but the commuter airlines that feed passengers to these carriers are also concerned.

Piedmont and USAir Group make extensive use of commuter airlines. Piedmont owns two smaller airlines, Henson Airlines and Jetsream International. It also retains marketing agreements with CCAIR Inc. and Brockway Air.

USAir owns Suburban Airlines and Pennsylvania Airlines and retains marketing agreements with a handful of small airlines in the mid-Atlantic region.

These commuter airlines often have routes that overlap each other and the direct jet service provided by USAir and Piedmont Airlines.

Andrew Price, vice president of marketing for Brockway, said the airline, based in Burlington, Vermont, is looking forward to the merger, although he isn't sure what it will mean to Brockway's routes.

Some shuffling is expected, he said.

"It will be interesting to see how things shake out," said John Kruse, the director of sales and marketing at Jetstream.

Eddie Bacon, the director of sales and marketing with CCAIR, based in Charlotte, said that whatever happens with the merger between USAir and Piedmont, "They're still going to want the feed in Charlotte."

Compensation Bill Is Drawing Support

RALEIGH (AP) — State officials and an advocate for crime victims Thursday urged a House committee to approve a bill that would establish a $1 million fund to compensate victims.

"The state has an obligation to its citizens who are injured by criminals to try to make them whole to the extent we can do it," Joseph Dean, secretary of crime control and public safety, said at a meeting of the House Judiciary IV Committee.

The committee took no action on the bill.

The Legislature approved legislation in 1983 to create a crime victims' compensation program, but no funding has been provided. In 1986, money was appropriated to hire victim-witness coordinators in all the state's judicial districts.

Rep. Bob Hunter, D-McDowell, has introduced a bill to appropriate $1 million in fiscal 1987-88 and the same amount in 1988-89 for the program.

He also is sponsoring proposed legislation to increase the fee that criminals on probation or parole must pay for their supervision from $10 per month to $15 per month.

That would generate about $1.3 million annually, more than enough to pay for the crime victims' compensation fund, Hunter said.

Hunter said that was a better funding mechanism than boosting court costs, a revenue raising measure sought unsuccessfully in recent sessions.

"I think it's appropriate that the people who have committed the crimes, who have hurt these victims, pay these costs," Hunter said.

Attorney General Lacy Thornburg said over 40 states had some form of crime victim compensation program and that North Carolina "has been somewhat lax" in the area. "The real guts of this matter depends on whether or not you actually decide to fund it."

Lynn Minick, director of the Fayetteville-based People Helping Victims, said the fund would not be enough to compensate victims fully.

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

This is a dramatized version of facts taken from the Book of Genesis intending to show some of the customs of these ancient and traditional times

A BRIDE FOR ISAAC

ABRAHAM, IN HIS DECLINING YEARS, AND AFTER A LIFETIME OF GREAT PROSPERITY IS CONCERNED THAT HIS SON, ISAAC, DOES NOT YET HAVE A WIFE, SO....

...NOW, THEREFORE, YOU MUST DO CERTAIN THINGS!

...HE SUMMONS HIS TRUSTED SERVANT, ELIEZER....

...TO HIS STEWARD, ELIEZER, HE OUTLINES WHAT MUST BE DONE...

YOU MUST GO TO THE LAND OF MY BIRTH AND OBTAIN A WIFE FOR ISAAC!

WHAT IF I CANNOT OBTAIN A MAIDEN WHO IS WILLING TO RETURN HERE AS ISAAC'S WIFE?

ABRAHAM TELLS HIS STEWARD HE WILL BE ABSOLVED OF HIS OATH, IF HE CANNOT FIND A MAID WILLING TO RETURN WITH HIM TO CANAAN, AND NOW, IN THE CUSTOM OF THESE ANCIENT TIMES, ELIEZER SWEARS TO DO ALL THAT ABRAHAM HAS REQUESTED, IN ORDER TO FIND A WIFE FOR ISAAC!

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — The men and women who work in the modern, spacious building consider themselves "armchair apostles." Their product reaches around the world, facilitating prayer.

They start each day with a prayer of their own and then begin sorting, packing and shipping kits for making rosaries.

"We're just like a mail order house, with one exception. We never show a profit, but are self-maintaining," said Tom Young, president of Our Lady's Rosary Makers.

It was started here by a Xaverian brother in 1949 and the club now has 13,000 members scattered across the United States and other countries. Dues are $2 a year.

"After purchasing their supplies from us, the members assemble the rosaries in their homes or in groups and send out about 4 million a year," Young said.

Most go to missionaries who have requested them in the club's monthly bulletin. Others are mailed to hospitals or to prisons.

"Naturally, there is no charge. Our people do this to help spread the faith and as an act of love," Young said. "It's a passport into almost every area of life."

The kits cost $10.25 and contain an instruction book, enough material for 10 rosaries, plus special pliers with pointed ends.

"We obtain the pliers from a factory in Germany because we couldn't get anyone in this country to furnish them. I guess our orders aren't large enough."

After serving with the Air Force during the Korean War, Young was a manufacturer's representative and was transferred to Louisville in 1952.

"I was in town two years before learning about the club. The idea fascinated me, partly because it became something for me to do while on road trips. Pretty soon, I was completing a rosary a day in my motel room."

Young retired in 1980 and began spending most of his free time at the club, which is open five days a week. There are 18 full-time employees, and three or four volunteers usually drop by to lend a hand.

"Like everyone else, we have had our ups and downs," Young said. During the late 1960s, the number of rosaries sent to missionaries fell nearly 300,000. "Things have turned around since then and demand is getting stronger."

Catholics pray the rosary to Mary, asking her to intercede for them with her son Jesus.

"That's the reason the membership is getting more and more appeals for rosaries from Third World countries. The families there feel close to Mary because they have a close relationship with their own mothers," he said.

As the club continues to grow, "we will have greater opportunities to reach into the lives of people who we ordinarily would never be able to contact," Young said.

"Everybody is praying for peace in the world. The rosary is one way of doing it."

'Censorship' Is Focal Point Of Debate Over Humanism

NEW YORK (AP) — Broad, persistent disagreement swirls in the wake of a federal court's ruling that a special kind of human-centered religion, "secular humanism," has pervaded the public schools.

Oddly, each side hurls the word "censorship" at the other.

Opponents of the decision say it threatens "censoring" of textbooks, while others say it counters a dominant philosophy in American classrooms that "censors out" mention of God.

Both sides regard the case as having significant impact on an issue festering widely in society and likely to be a matter of continuing strain in forging the culture's directions.

The conflict has flared in many communities, but last week's court decision in Mobile, Ala., was the most sweeping yet about the matter.

"It was important educationally and threatens our separation of church and state," says Frederick Edwards, executive director of the American Humanist Association, based in Amherst, N.Y.

The Rev. Richard Neuhaus, a Lutheran theologian and church-state scholar, says:

"It's a potentially historic decision that moves beyond the question of parental rights and responsibilities and moves to the non-establishment question in a very central way, turning the whole debate upside down."

That happened because groups ordinarily favoring closer links between schools and faith used the Constitution's clause against establishing religion to rid schools of an asserted rival "religion" — secular humanism.

It is, indeed, a kind of religion, ruled Federal District Judge Brevard

Hand, a naturalistic faith in human reasoning and science alone, without any greater, divine authority.

The judge held that tenets of this religion are being unconstitutionally promoted in public schools and pervade school textbooks.

That it is a religion was specified by the U.S. Supreme Court 26 years ago.

In that 1961 case, the high court ruled that a Vietnam conscientious objector, who refused to affirm belief in God, nevertheless had a religion that the court termed "secular humanism."

The phrase also had been used early in the century by the late educational authority, John Dewey, who strongly influenced shaping of the nation's school system, advocating for it a non-theistic "common faith" — secular humanism.

Advice Given On Preschoolers

Dr. Louise Bates Ames is a child development specialist and associate director of the Gesell Institute of Human Development, which she co-founded in 1950 in New Haven, Conn. She is the co-author of many books about children, including "Don't Push Your Preschooler." She was interviewed by Washington Post staff writer Sally Squires.

Q: Why doesn't putting pressure on your preschooler help the child to succeed?

A: Mostly you are pushing preschoolers to do academic things, like read. In the first place, their eyes aren't ready for it. The second thing is even if you could by some miracle get them to pick out words and letters, they don't really know what they are reading about. They really need experience in the three-dimensional world before they are flattened down to just getting things on paper. You might be able to get a child to say butterfly while looking at a picture of a butterfly, but he probably doesn't know what a butterfly is.

So you are kind of wasting time when they could be living in the real world.

But the main harm is in your attitude. They've got to live up to what you want them to do rather than what they are able to do. Gradually as they get older, they realize that you are disappointed in them. And that of course is very harmful to a child — very painful to a child.

It's important not to try to push your child into being a different kind of person from the way he or she is. Encourage your children, but don't force them to do things.

We should pay more attention to different kinds of intelligence. Don't try to push your children into doing something faster than they can. Don't try to force them into being different than they are.

Q: Is the phenomenon of pushing children to get ahead a recent one?

A: There have always been two points of view about child development. Those people like myself believe that you should recognize and respect immaturity and let the child take its own course. Then there are those who believe you can make children do anything any time you want to. This is a big philosophical difference.

While the idea of pushing your children has been around for a while, I'd say in the last 15 years that it has become commercialized. There has been this talk about super babies and all that sort of thing.

It's a way of capitalizing on the fact that some people want their children to get ahead. This is especially true up and down the East Coast, I think.

There are just a lot of highly ambitious people who want their kids to achieve. And someone has somehow convinced them that if they don't get their children into the right nursery school, they won't get them into the right college. Some parents genuinely believe that they have to do this to their kids, that they have to push them for their own good. For others, it's a matter of ego satisfaction. They just want to be able to say, well he's only 3 years old and he can play the violin and read already.

Q: But aren't more parents putting pressure on children today?

A: I don't think that it is probably as universal as people think. All around the country there are hundreds of thousands of parents who are bringing up their children just the way they always did — letting children grow up at their own speed.

Q: What key things can parents do for their child's education?

A: The most important thing is to not start them too soon. That isn't going to solve all your problems but it will prevent a great many. Probably half of the so-called learning disabled kids brought to our clinic are just perfectly good kids who just started school too soon.

Education has changed; it's gotten pushy. One of the aspects of that has been the unfortunate drive to all-day kindergarten. If they have all this important academic work to do, it takes all day to do it. Our position is that they shouldn't be doing academic work and that they get too tired if they are in school all day.

Q: At what age should children enter kindergarten?

A: I'd like a girl to have had her fifth birthday and a boy to be 5 1/2 before starting kindergarten. By that time, they are better able to handle school. Before then they don't have the attention span to do the work. And again, it's best to limit kindergarten to half days.

Q: What about putting children in day care centers or nursery school?

A: I would say if a parent can wait until a child is 2 to 3 years of age before going to a day care center or nursery school, that would be the best thing. It would be very hard for me to put a baby in a day care center. Some people have to depend on it and it's okay. A good day care center should be like a good nursery school. When we ran a nursery school at the Gesell Institute, it was just a half day, three times a week. We like to think of nursery school as just supplementing the home life, not taking its place. But parents whose children are in day care centers early in life should be reassured. Kids are resilient. A good day care center undoubtedly is adequate.

Q: What is the current thinking about so-called "infant stimulation"?

A: The whole crib bit — those mobiles and all that — is introduced much too early, before the children are visually ready. That's not too good an idea. I think that part of the crib bit was started by the toy manufacturers and a lot of the popularity of infant stimulation has petered out. I am not enthusiastic about it. Most of what they recommend as infant stimulation is what any sensible parent would do anyway.

The reason that I don't like books about infant stimulation is that the kind of parent who needs to be told to play patty cake is probably not going to read the book. The kind of parent who reads the book is the kind who is already doing everything a mother and father should be doing. They read the book and get the idea that they should be doing a lot more. Obviously you should interact with the child. The more the better. But you should do it in a natural way.

Q: Why are mobiles in the crib too much for the child?

A: After the child is 6 months old, it is certainly all right to have a mobile. But in the first four months, most children lie on their stomachs and have limited movement of their heads. They simply cannot see a mobile hanging in the middle of the crib. The child is usually not looking up. A mobile is a stimulus that is not useful, and if it hangs too low might even be interference.

Q: How does a parent know how to deal appropriately with an infant or preschool child?

A: It's important to know the developmental stage of your child. The more you know about what to expect at the different ages, the better you are able to interact with your child. That doesn't mean that you don't have fairly high standards, but you won't be trying to bend them all out of shape. For instance 4-year-olds are wild and wonderful. Don't try to hem them in too much.

Q: What are 3-year-olds like?

A: In general, 3 is a calm age. Some work at Brandeis University — not everyone agrees with this — but it suggests that the brain grows in fits and starts. There are ages where there is a lot of brain growth and some ages when there is not so much growth. There is some evidence that the quiet ages in terms of behavior occur at a time when there is not much brain growth going on. This is a controversial concept, but I think that it is plausible.

If you are busy thinking about what you are going to do to the child in the way of stimulation, you are less apt to be looking at him or her and trying to figure out what the child is really like.

Q: What about the terrible two's?

A: This is an incorrect characterization of our own work at the Gesell Institute. Two-and-a-half is a very difficult age. But two is very good age.

Q: Is that because a child is attempting to exert some independence?

A: Yes, to some extent.

Q: What about 1-year-old children? What should they be doing?

A: One-year-olds are creeping and walking. They like to poke at things. They are either interested in walking or they aren't. It's not important exactly when children start walking.

Q: What can parents do to encourage children to learn?

A: Have a lot of good reasonable toys around. Sturdy blocks and puzzles and all this sort of stuff and certainly read to them a great deal. Pay a lot of attention to them. Hold them a lot. Give them good physical warmth.

I don't feel that an intelligent parent needs all that help. People are very patient with babies. If baby isn't creeping at a certain age, it's no big deal. If we could just could just remember the patience we showed to our children when they were infants, then later on we would all be real good parents.

Magazine Debut Draws Interest

By CAROL J. WILLIAMS

Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP) — Fashion-starved Soviet women will soon have an ally in their quest for stylish up-to-the-moment attire, a Russian-language version of a popular European fashion magazine that includes patterns for women to make their own clothes.

But some eager readers are already complaining that the planned press run of 100,000 copies of the Russian version of Burda magazine will be too small.

Even though it has not yet been offered for general sale, the magazine is already the most sought-after fashion item in Moscow.

An introductory fashion show by the Burda company of West Germany was a major event in Moscow on Tuesday, but only women with the best official connections were invited.

Raisa Gorbachev, wife of the Soviet leader, had been expected to attend, according to organizers, but she did not show up for the presentation at the ornate Hall of Columns in the House of Unions.

Burda owner Aenna Burda did attend, and some of the models, including Monica Schnarre and Christi Turlington, were from the New York-based Ford agency.

The massive marble hall was dotted with about 100 mannequins wearing Burda fashions, and the more than 1,000 guests were each presented with a copy of the Russian-language magazine to be issued to the general public soon, reportedly in time for Sunday's observance of International Women's Day.

The Communist Party daily Pravda reported Tuesday that the magazines would be available "within a few days," but gave no exact date or specific outlets where copies can be purchased.

Pravda said the joint venture with the Burda company envisions a monthly issue of 100,000.

"That's nothing," declared one Moscow woman, who said she and her friends copy the patterns from magazines brought in by foreigners.

Tass said the press run could gradually climb to 2 million copies.

"I hope our fashions will find their way into the hearts of Soviet women who are known for their fantastic skill in sewing clothes for themselves. Our magazine is designed first and foremost for such skillful women," Ms. Burda was quoted by Tass.

Burda magazines include patterns for making some of the fashions shown in the glossy publication, making them a favorite with Soviet

Choosing Up Sides Hurts Children Who Are Last

Dear Abby
Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: My heart ached for the little boy whose teacher appointed two captains to choose up teams, and he was always chosen last. I'm 67 now, and when I read that letter, all the feelings of humiliation, anger and anxiety came flooding back like it was yesterday. I was always one of the last to be chosen for sports because I was small and poorly coordinated. I wanted to die when teams were chosen because when it got down to the last two kids, I was always one of them.

Once I sneaked out of the room and went to the restroom and cried. Another time I forced myself to throw up so I could go to the nurse's room to escape this cruelty.

I'm amazed that this humiliating system of choosing teams is still going on. I hope teachers everywhere will see this and realize how damaging it is to a child's self-esteem, and put an end to that brutal practice. - CHOSEN LAST

DEAR CHOSEN: I hope so, too. I heard from teachers everywhere who offered unique (and face-saving) ways to choose up teams. Here's a letter from a retired school teacher who had the right idea years ago:

DEAR ABBY: Re choosing up teams: I taught school from 1914 through 1963. My method: The last one chosen becomes captain of the next team. No one was ever last more than once. - MURIEL LINK, AGE 90, SPRINGFIELD, VT.

DEAR ABBY: This is the first time I've written to you. I don't know where else to turn. Our daughter, who has just turned 18, has informed me that she and her boyfriend are planning to go camping together with friends this summer. I'm not naive, and I don't for one moment believe that they will be sleeping in separate tents.

My problem is this: Do we, as parents, have a right to forbid her to go? We are still supporting her and are paying for her schooling. - NOT NAIVE

DEAR NOT NAIVE: You have every right to forbid her to go since you are supporting her, and she is living under your guardianship.

However, if you suspect that your daughter is already sexually active - or is about to be - I hope you have discussed with her the importance of "safe sex" in order to protect herself from an unwanted pregnancy and/or venereal disease. If you have not, you must.

Let her know that you are not condoning premarital sex, but as a responsible parent you do not want her to risk her future, her health, and possibly her life because of carelessness or ignorance.

DEAR ABBY: Please say something to those ill-mannered people who have the disgusting habit of coughing without covering their mouths.

The other night my husband and I attended a play for which we paid $37 a ticket, but we could not enjoy the play because this woman behind us coughed on our necks repeatedly. We got results (temporarily) after we turned around and glared at her.

I recently quit a volunteer job that I really enjoyed - delivering Meals on Wheels. Why? Because the driver never covered his mouth when he coughed. My son complains that a girl who sits next to him at work does the same thing.

How would you handle this situation? Would you hand the person a tissue? Or just courteously say, "Would you please cover your mouth when you cough?" It would be embarrassing to me to have to do either. On the other hand, if the person is so rude, he deserves to be reminded of his manners. - I'VE HAD IT

DEAR HAD IT: Why not do both?

Hand the offender a tissue and request that he/she use it while coughing. It's not what you do; it's the way you do it.

CONFIDENTIAL TO RUSS IN MAUI: It's not always better to have loved and lost than never to have loved at all. It depends on what you've lost.

(To get Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions," send a check or money order for $2.50 and a long, stamped (39 cents), self-addressed envelope to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054.)

Student Magazine Is Extended To Other Campuses

By WILLIAM KATES
Associated Press Writer
SYRACUSE, N.Y. (AP) — Michael Weiss found the lives of some of his more celebrated Syracuse University classmates so interesting he started a magazine to highlight them.

The 25-year-old law school graduate is counting on that same curiosity and fascination about the famous to make his magazine, Panache, successful on other college campuses across the nation.

"It's kind of a People magazine of and for college students," Weiss said of the quarterly magazine, which recently made its debut on 65 campuses around the country with a 100,000 copy printing. "It's a magazine that highlights the hottest people on campus."

The magazine has enjoyed great success at Syracuse, where it was launched by Weiss in early 1985.

"Syracuse has a student newspaper and a university magazine," Weiss said in a telephone interview from the magazine's new offices in the Queens borough of New York City. "But there was nothing that really excited the students in the way that some of the national magazines do. Nothing with any flair."

Weiss, who had attempted to produce a similar, less flashy magazine while an undergraduate at Stanford University, only to see it succumb upon his departure, decided to give his idea another shot at Syracuse.

Joining with two Newhouse School of Public Communications students, Robin Clark and Catie Lott, Weiss persuaded the school's student organization to contribute $500 and sold some advertisers on his idea.

"At first the response was 'We don't need another magazine, especially when it's not going to add anything to the campus environment,'" said Weiss, who set out to prove that thinking wrong.

The first issue featured Syracuse student Tim Green, a Rhodes Scholar candidate and an All-American defensive lineman who now plays for the Atlanta Falcons of the National Football League.

"There was a big, positive reaction to it," Weiss said. "With full-page glossy colored photos and pull-out posters, everybody thought a professional organization was getting involved."

Eventually the student organization contributed an "unprecedented" $11,000 to the publication, advertisers more than doubled that figure and Panache was selling 15,000 copies on a campus of 21,000.

At that point Weiss and his two colleagues began thinking about a national magazine.

"We sent out old copies to schools and the reaction was even more positive. And I felt there was a void there to be taken advantage of," said Weiss, who has put his law career on hold to pursue his dream.

The magazine also was able to attract national advertisers, although that accomplishment did not come easy, said Weiss.

Because Panache comes in an 11-by-16 inch tabloid form, Weiss first had to persuade companies it was worth their trouble to alter the size of the advertisements. The magazine's independent nature also made some companies hesitant, he said.

"While they had faith in the concept, they weren't sure we were going to be around after the first issue," Weiss said.

The 56-page first issue featured profiles on UCLA tennis player Tim Triguero and University of Miami diving star Daphne Jongejans, as well as regular sections looking at entertainment, fashion, upcoming events and what people are doing a year after graduation. Panache also will feature a serialized fictional piece called "General University," which Weiss describes as "America's first college soap opera."

Nearly all the stories and photographs are the products of students at the 65 schools that received the first nationwide issue of Panache, which was free. Starting this fall, the magazine will sell for $1.95.

"That way we can provide a good gauge of what students find interesting. It will convey student life because it will be them writing it," said Weiss.

The publisher says he makes no pretense about its being an issue-oriented magazine nor excuses for the elitist theme of the publication.

"It is strictly a leisure magazine," he said. "We will try to balance stories about people who get recognition with stories about people doing things of value but not getting recognition for it. But people like to read about people who have a lot going for them."

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market headed higher today with a lift from declining interest rates and some favorable news on inflation.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials edged up 3.82 to 2,271.16 in the first half hour of trading.

stores and coffeeshops, causing no casualties.

A fourth bomb went off in a women's clothing store on the Dublin Road, a commercial thoroughfare, causing no injuries, Bleakney said.

Police were checking an unspecified number of other bomb warnings, he said.

The IRA has made policemen a prime target in its war to drive the British from Northern Ireland and unite the Protestant-dominated province with the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republic.

Nesbitt, the 237th police officer killed in Northern Ireland since 1969, was answering what turned out to be a hoax call to investigate a robbery at a candy store in the Catholic Ardoyne area of Belfast. He was killed when a bomb exploded in an adjoining bakery.

The IRA claimed responsibility for Nesbitt's death.

Bombings once plagued Northern Ireland daily, but they have been on the decrease since the 1970s. Government figures published last month showed explosions down from 1,382 in 1972 to 766 in 1976 and 172 last year.

No Announcement

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Sen. Dale Bumpers says he regrets saying this month that he had decided whether or not to run for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The Arkansas Democrat said Thursday that within three days of reporting March 1 that he had decided, he began to re-evaluate his decision.

Bumpers still would not say what his decision had been or what caused him to rethink it.

He also would not say when he would announce his plans, but said it would be soon.

Bumpers said money was not a factor in his decision.

"I promise you, if I do this thing, I will not go into debt," he said.

Obligation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Former Nevada Sen. Paul Laxalt says he is leaning toward establishing a presidential exploratory committee, saying he's "got a very deep obligation to keeping this Reagan revolution moving forward."

After a speech Wednesday night to a conservative political group, Laxalt said he will decide about running for president within a few weeks.

Homeless Blamed

said state police Sgt. Robert Thornton.

The firefighters who died of smoke inhalation were identified as Lt. David Lau and Trial Firefighter Larry McDonald. Lt. Paul Schimeck, 46, a 26-year veteran of the department, died of head and neck injuries after falling after the warehouse blast, said Detroit Southwest Hospital spokeswoman Rose David.

"There was an explosion, he was hanging on a window, he lost his grip, bounced off a ledge," said Dr. John Feemster, an emergency room physician at Southwest.

Five firefighters were treated in Detroit Receiving Hospital and released, said emergency room supervisor Garnet Robertson. Three others were admitted, and two were held for observation. She would not reveal the identity of those injured.

About 50 employees were evacuated from Continental, which housed paper products, plastics and chemicals, said warehouse manager Steve Celestini.

Conley Overcomes Jitters, Rips Falcon Five, 58-39

By TOM MORRIS
Reflector Sports Writer

FAYETTEVILLE — While both teams had the early game jitters, D.H. Conley was able to overcome them while Madison-Mayodan wasn't and the Vikings rolled to a 58-39 win in the Eastern 3-A Regional Basketball playoffs Thursday night.

"I thought both teams were real tight and evidently we loosened up a little bit more than they did," said Conley coach Walter Claybrook.

The Vikings connected on only 33 percent of their shots in the first half but the Falcons were no better, shooting at only a 23 percent clip. Still, Conley forged a 22-17 lead by halftime.

"We got good shots in the first half," said Madison coach Tony Johnson. "They just didn't go in."

In the third quarter, Paul Merritt hit a tip-in, was fouled and canned the three throw to give the Vikings a 25-17. Troy Ebron then came up with a steal, was fouled and hit a free throw to move the lead to 26-17 with 6:13 remaining.

Madison's Donald Corns countered with two free throw and Tom Collins canned a jumper to pull the Falcons within 26-20 but Ricky Farrow countered with a jumper to make it 28-20.

The Vikings slowly inched the lead up to 32-23 with 1:32 to go in the third quarter when Merritt followed a miss by Phil Medlin to make it 34-23. Farrow then followed his own miss and Jonathan Bonner added a layup to move it to 38-23. Guy Wall countered for Madison but Farrow added two free throws as the quarter came to an end with the Vikings leading 40-25.

"We went from five down at the half to 12-13 down real quick," Johnson said. "That changes what you have to do defensively. You have to take some chances. We went to a half-court trap and we created some turnovers but we didn't convert."

Conley's shooting improved in the second half to 44 percent while the Falcons' poor shooting (25 percent) continued in the second half.

"I think when you get to this point, that (nervousness) does play a role in the game," Johnson said. "(It comes down to) who can come out and play loose."

"This is the first time any of these kids have been to a tournament such as this," Claybrook said. "So I expected them to be nervous or jittery. But I felt we made up for that playing hard and hitting the boards real well."

Indeed, the Vikings held a 41-36 rebounding advantage over the taller Falcons.

Conley steadily added to its lead in the final period as Madison trailed by at least 11 points the rest of the way.

Any comeback hopes by the Falcons in the final quarter of play were thwarted by Conley's 8-12 free throw shooting down the stretch.

"Even though we did win the sectional, probably the closest margin (of any of the games) was 10 points, we still didn't do a good job of executing in the last two minutes," Claybrook said. "We did do a better job today coming down the stretch."

Ebron too, felt the Vikings kept their composure down the stretch. "I feel everybody stayed under control, took their time and let the game come to them," he said.

Farrow led the way for Conley, with a game high 19 points and nine rebounds.

Claybrook said the teams' shooting improved as the game wore on, particularly Farrow's.

"Matter of fact, I got on him because he missed a few and he quit shooting," he said. "He's carried us a long way and he's got to take the shot if they give it to him."

It was advice worth taking, according to Farrow.

"He was telling me to go ahead and shoot the ball and stop penetrating and not knowing what to do with it," Farrow said. "I took his advice."

Claybrook said he was happy with Ebron's defense on Madison point guard William Mosely. Ebron hounded him into a 2-11 shooting performance and five turnovers.

Corns led the Falcons with 12 points. Madison-Mayodan finishes with a 21-7 record.

Next up for the Vikings is Bartlett-Yancey, a 59-47 winner over Eastern Guilford in the other 3-A regional game. Tip off is set for 6 p.m. Saturday.

Vikes' Success No Surprise To Players

FAYETTEVILLE — D.H. Conley's basketball team has gone further than any other team in school history and while that may surprise some people, the Vikings' Ricky Farrow isn't one of them.

"A lot of people might be surprised but this team doesn't think so," Farrow said after the Vikings defeated Madison-Mayodan to advance to the Eastern 3-A Regional final. "I've really enjoyed this team this year. We have a lot of fun together, guys joking around and stuff."

Oh yeah, and the Vikings are also winning big this year. After defeating Madison-Mayodan, 58-39, Conley improves to 20-8 and will face Bartlett-Yancey, 28-2, in the regional final Saturday at 6 p.m.

Farrow and fellow senior Troy Ebron have played under Conley coach Walter Claybrook since they were freshmen, first on the JV team and then on the varsity squad.

Both Farrow, a 6-2 forward, and Ebron, a 5-11 guard, were starters on last year's 12-12 team that finished in fifth place in the Coastal Conference but they have been part of a remarkable turnaround that has featured a conference championship and a chance to play for the state title.

"At the beginning of the season, we started off kind of slow," Ebron said. "As time progressed, we got better and better. We realized we're a great team and we took it from there. Everybody has been playing great. Everybody has a lot of confidence."

The two seniors have been the catalysts for the Vikings all season. Farrow led the way against Madison-Mayodan with a game-high 19 points while Ebron ran things from the point position and nailed six of eight free throws down the stretch to prevent any Falcon comeback attempts.

"I was just trying to increase the lead as much as possible," Ebron said of his late-game free throws. "Free throws are very crucial down in the end and that is something a point guard has to do."

Farrow overcame a rocky start to lead the Vikes in scoring and he also pulled down nine rebounds despite being matched up against a taller opponent in 6-5 Tom Collins.

"I felt like this was the biggest game I've been involved in since I've been in athletics," Farrow said.

And he played like it. He was all over the court, knocking in long jumpers or driving inside for layups.

"I could say these guys don't surprise me," Claybrook said. "But I wouldn't be telling the truth. Truthfully, when it's all over and done with, win or lose, you have to say it's been a surprise year for us."

Robinson Scores 50 But Michigan Wins, 97-82; UNC, TCU, Irish Triumph

CHARLOTTE (AP) — A spectacular farewell performance by Navy's David Robinson highlighted the first day of the East Regional in which all four games turned out to be one-sided affairs.

Robinson scored 50 points in a losing cause Thursday as Michigan beat Navy 97-82 to advance to the second round of the NCAA tournament. Michigan, which rode a career-high 33-point performance by Garde Thompson to meeting with second-ranked North Carolina, which easily disposed of Pennsylvania 113-82 after leading by only two points at halftime.

Saturday's other contest will feature No. 19 Texas Christian, a 76-60 victor over Marshall, against No. 18 Notre Dame, which got 27 points from David Rivers and 24 by Donald Royal in an 84-71 triumph over Middle Tennessee State.

Robinson's school-record and career-high effort came on a day in which the 7-foot-1 all-America was named the recipient of the Naismith Award, given annually to the finest college basketball player in the nation.

"Anyone who knows me knows I don't place a lot of emphasis on awards," said Robinson. "I'd be a lot happier if (Kansas center) Danny Manning won it and we went to the second round."

Robinson made 22 of 37 shots from the floor, grabbed 13 rebounds, notched three steals and blocked two shots.

"He's the best player I've seen in my seven years of coaching, including Patrick Ewing," claimed Michigan Coach Bill Frieder. "He's just a great shooter and shot-blocker."

Unlike Thompson, who received offensive help from teammates Gary Grant (26 points) and Glen Rice (21 points), Robinson did not get the support he needed. Navy's 13-game winning streak came to an end because while Robinson made 13 of 25 shots from the floor in the second half, the rest of the Middies converted only 4 of 19 field goal attempts.

Thompson made 9 three-pointers to help Michigan, 20-11, pull away from the Middies in the second half.

Navy finished the season 26-6.

North Carolina, the top seed in the East, also used an explosive second half to dispose of the Ivy League champion Quakers, who finished 13-14. After a wild first half in which the Tar Heels struggled to a 55-53 lead, Penn Coach Tom Schneider said he told his team that the first five minutes of the second half would be "crucial."

He was right.

North Carolina, 30-3, opened the half with a 15-2 run and kept pulling away, outscoring the Quakers 58-29 in the second half.

Joe Wolf scored 14 of his game-high 25 points in the second half to key the rally.

"The difference in the game was our defense in the second half," said Tar Heel Coach Dean Smith. "As far as Michigan goes, we're going to have to play 40 minutes of ball if we expect to win."

Carven Holcombe, the Southwest Conference Player of the Year, was bothered by the flu but scored 30 points to lead TCU to an easy victory over Marshall. Despite his illness, Holcombe made 14 of 17 shots from the floor after playing all 40 minutes.

"He told me in the dressing room after the game that he was very weak from the flu," said TCU Coach Jim Killingsworth. "I'm not surprised he waited until then, because he probably thought I'd rest him."

TCU, making its first appearance in the NCAA tournament since 1971, went up by 11 points at halftime and coasted past Marshall, the Southern Conference champion.

TCU improved its record to 24-6 in rebounding from a disappointing loss to Texas A&M in the opening round of the SWC tournament last weekend. Marshall, which entered the game on a roll after winning 20 of its last 21 games, finished at 25-6.

Notre Dame Coach Digger Phelps prepared his team for little-known Middle Tennessee State by showing them films of last year's NCAA tournament opener, in which another little-known opponent, Arkansas-Little Rock, upset the Irish.

Duke Advances; To Face Xavier

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Winning is the only similarity Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski sees between his 1986 NCAA runner-up squad and the Blue Devil team he has brought to the second round of the 1987 tournament.

Duke, 23-8, defeated Texas A&M 58-51 Thursday and faces Xavier of Ohio in second-round play in the Midwest Regional at the Hoosier Dome on Saturday. Xavier used a 29-point performance by junior guard Byron Larkin to upset No. 14 Missouri 70-69 in the opening game Thursday.

No. 3 Indiana and Auburn meet in Saturday's opening game. Indiana, cheered on by the majority of the 29,610 fans, the largest first-round attendance in NCAA history, overpowered Fairfield 92-58 in the final game of a Thursday doubleheader that drew 55,172. Auburn edged San Diego 62-61 in the opening evening game when Paul Leonard was called for a double dribble with one second to play while driving for the potential winning basket.

"They kind of muck it out," Krzyzewski said of his Blue Devils. "That's what we've kind of done the last two months. I think it shows some character about our youngsters."

Duke overcame a series of physical problems to advance.

Krzyzewski said sophomore guard Quin Snyder became nauseous before the game and had a temperature of 100 degrees. Sophomore forward

Danny Ferry suffered a hip injury in the first half and, although he returned, Krzyzewski said his availability for Saturday was uncertain. And junior guard Kevin Strickland scored a game-high 20 points despite having his right shoulder pop out of joint in the first half.

"Last year's team was like a machine at times, they were so consistent that they just went through things. Nothing seemed to phase them," Krzyzewski said. "This year's team is young and trying to gain their confidence. It's gone through a lot more adversity."

Duke had its lowest point production of the season as it overcame having Ferry, its leading scorer for the season, go scoreless. Robert Brickley came off the bench to contribute 12 points.

"We have had to face adversity a lot of times, but we have guys who can come off the bench," said Duke guard Tommy Amaker, the only returning starter from last year. "We always know there's someone who can come in and do the job."

In the opener, Larkin's 3-point shot gave Xavier the lead for good at 48-45 and his two free throws with 31 seconds to go gave the Musketeers a 70-66 lead. Lynn Hardy, who topped Missouri with 21 points, made a 3-pointer with 13 seconds remaining but Xavier was able to dribble away the remaining time with Missouri

Austin Peay Knocks Off Illinois

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Austin Peay Coach Lake Kelly was ready to take on the world after his team's upset victory over Illinois.

"If we had to play the Lakers and the Celtics combined Saturday night, it wouldn't make any difference. We're going after them and play them the same way," he said.

And how's that? "Sic 'em," he said.

The Governors beat 11th-ranked Illinois 68-67 on two free throws by Tony Raye with two seconds left in the game.

And as it turned out, Saturday's opponent is Providence, the long-range gunners who blew away Alabama-Birmingham 90-68 in the nightcap of the four-game opening round of the NCAA Southeast Regional.

Billy Donovan had 35 points for Providence, including 6-of-9 attempts from 3-point range, the most points any individual ever scored against the Blazers. He also had a career-high 12 assists.

"There are three people in New England who know who Austin Peay is, and I'm one of them," said Providence associate coach Gordon Chiesa.

"Dick Vitale said on ESPN that Austin Peay plays awful defense. Stu Jackson (also an associate coach) comes running into the locker room and says Austin Peay plays defense just like Georgetown. We almost had a heart attack."

Providence Coach Rick Pitino is skipping press conferences in the wake of the death of his infant son on Sunday.

Illinois was a favorite to make it to the regional finals, possibly even the Final Four. Austin Peay was being used as an example of the evils of automatic bids.

"This is the sort of thing our conference, the Ohio Valley Conference, needed to survive that attack," Kelly said.

Darryl Bedford had 24 points and Lawrence Mitchell had 22 for Austin Peay. Ken Norman led Illinois scoring with 17 points. Tony Wysinger had 16 for the Illini, and Doug Altenberger and Lowell Hamilton had 12 apiece.

It was the first trip to the NCAA playoffs for the Governors in 14 years and their first victory in the tournament since 1972.

Delray Brooks had 16 points for Providence and was 3-for-5 from 3-point range. Abdul Shamsid-Deen had 12 points on the inside, and David Kipfer had 10.

Eddie Collins had 17 points to lead Alabama-Birmingham. Dylan Howard had 13 and James Ponder 12.

In the afternoon games, 16th-ranked New Orleans beat Brigham Young 83-79, and ninth-ranked Alabama beat North Carolina A&T 88-71.

Saturday's winners go on to the regional finals at Louisville, Ky., on March 19 and 21.

New Orleans Coach Benny Dees said that to beat Alabama on Saturday, his team will have to handle guard Terry Coner and center Derrick McKey — and he'll have to hang onto his lucky rock.

A fan gave Dees a lucky rock when his team was 2-2 early in the season. New Orleans ran off 14 straight victories, lost by one point at Memphis State, then ran off 10 more victories, including Thursday's conquest of BYU.

Dees dropped the rock at Lamar, and it broke. He scooped up the pieces and now carries them in a plastic bag.

"Of course, I still have it. If I didn't we'd be on the bus back to New Orleans right now," he said.

But he's pinning his team's slender hopes of beating Alabama on defense and the scoring of Ledell Eackles and Ronnie Grandison.

"If we beat Alabama, it will be the biggest upset since David and Goliath," Dees said. "We can't beat those guys, but we can play hard."

Dees served four years as an assistant to Wimp Sanderson at Alabama before taking the head job at New Orleans.

"For us to beat Alabama, we'd have to shut down Terry Coner, and nobody's been able to do that all year," Dees said.

"You saw us get outrebounded today something terrible. If we don't rebound any better Saturday, Derrick McKey will kill us," he said.

Sanderson said he believes New Orleans could have finished in the top three in the Southeastern Conference, where Alabama, 27-4, was both regular-season and tournament champ.

"In the years I have been head coach, I believe this will be the toughest second-round game we've had," he said.

It's Alabama's sixth straight NCAA tournament, and the Crimson Tide went to the round of 16 three of those years.

Sanderson joked that to stop Eackles, "We'll probably use a box-and-one and put the box on him."

Mark Gottfried said he will probably draw the job of controlling Eackles, who had 25 points in Thursday's victory over BYU.

"He's a good one. I'll have my hands full," Gottfried said.

Grandison had 15 points and 11 rebounds for the Privateers.

Alabama got 29 points from Jim Farmer and 25 points and 14 rebounds from McKey in the victory over North Carolina A&T.

Brigham Young, which finished at 21-11, got double doubles from both Jeff Chatman and Michael Smith. Chatman had 25 points and 10 rebounds, Smith 23 points and 15 rebounds.

For the seventh straight year, North Carolina A&T bowed in the first game of the NCAA tournament. "I just want one season to end with a Cinderella story," Coach Don Corbett said.

The Aggies got double-digit scoring from Claude Williams, 25 points; George Cale, 16, and Thomas Griffith, 13. The Aggies, champions of the Mid-East Athletic Conference, finished 24-6.

Xavier's first-ever NCAA triumph gave the Musketeers a 19-12 mark. Missouri, which had a nine-game winning streak broken, fell to 23-10.

Texas A&M, playing in the tournament for the first time since 1980, finished 17-14. Winston Crite was high for the Aggies with 13 points.

"They showed more patience than we did," said Texas A&M Coach Shelby Metcalf, who had seen his club win the Southwest Conference tournament after finishing eighth in the regular season. "I thought the big difference is they've been here (in the tournament) and we haven't."

Mike Jones scored 24 points and Jeff Moore contributed 14 points and 14 rebounds to Auburn's victory, giving the Tigers an 18-12 mark. Danny Means, who missed a free throw that would have tied the game with six seconds left, was high for San Diego with 18 as his club finished 24-6.

The Hoosiers, seeded first in the region, coasted to their 25th victory in 30 starts as reserves played much of the second half. Indiana was ahead by 25 when All-American Steve Alford sat down for the night with 15:09 to play.

Alford, Indiana's all-time scoring leader, finished with 13 points to bring his career total to 2,213.

Cowboys Top Cavs, Look To UCLA

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Wyoming Cowboys say they're happy about their victory over Virginia.

But the victim they really want is UCLA.

The Cowboys earned a shot at the 15th-ranked Bruins Thursday night when they edged Virginia 64-60 in the first round of the NCAA basketball tournament.

UCLA moved into Saturday's second round by downing Central Michigan 92-73, giving the Bruins' first NCAA tournament victory since 1980.

Even though his club was an underdog against Virginia, Wyoming guard Sean Dent suggested his team was guilty of looking past the Cavaliers.

"We know we can come in and play with anybody," he said. "The main thing we were looking at was playing UCLA."

Top-ranked Nevada-Las Vegas easily advanced with a 95-70 romp over Idaho State. The Runnin' Rebels will face Kansas State, an 82-79 victor in overtime over Georgia.

It seemed like the entire population of Wyoming was in the Special Events Center at the University of Utah Thursday night.

Virginia Coach Terry Holland said the noisy crowd wasn't a factor in the game. But the officials and Wyoming center Eric Leckner were, he said.

"We certainly didn't get very many breaks out there," Holland said. "I really don't think they (the officials) worked as hard as our players did. ... I can't say very many good things about them."

The Cavaliers also had big trouble with Wyoming's big players, specifically the 6-foot-11 Leckner, who scored 22 points.

"He's just so big," Holland said. "He just backs into the lane, turns around and sticks the ball into the hole. There's not much you can do about it."

Leckner is looking forward to facing UCLA. He's from the Los Angeles area, but wasn't recruited by the Bruins.

"I saw them in our bracket and knew that we were going into the playoffs and could play against the team I had watched as a kid and would have liked to play for," he said. "Now I want to play against them."

Fennis Dembo added 16 points for Wyoming, the Western Athletic Conference champion, which boosted its record to 23-9.

Virginia, 21-10, was troubled by fouls throughout the contest. The Cavaliers were paced by Andrew Kennedy's 14 points.

UCLA wasted no time dispatching Central Michigan.

Reggie Miller scored 24 of his 32 points in the first half as the Bruins took a 53-21 lead.

"Our team played the best half that maybe we've played all season," Coach Walt Hazzard said.

The Bruins led by 38 points in the second half before the Chippewas used a series of three-point bombs to make the score respectable.

Miller also had 13 rebounds for the Bruins, who improved their record to 25-6.

"A lot of people look at Reggie as just a shooter," Hazzard said, "but he plays defense and does a lot of other things for us."

"This was one of his best (games) and it came at the right time."

Tommie Johnson topped Central Michigan, 22-8, with 18 points.

Snubbed Teams Make Big Impression

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

One team that was snubbed by the NCAA and another that was almost snubbed by the National Invitation Tournament are both making it hard for others to ignore them.

Cleveland State, ignored by the NCAA playoff selection committee, got off to an auspicious start in the NIT with a 92-73 victory over Tennessee-Chattanooga Thursday night.

In another first-round game, Stephen F. Austin — which squeezed into the tournament at the last minute only because Louisville decided to stay home — defeated James Madison 70-63.

"I still don't understand why we were overlooked by the NCAA selection committee," Cleveland State Coach Kevin Mackey said. "We advanced to the final 16 last season and won 24 games this year. You would think that would be enough for a bid. "Right now, we're just happy there's one tournament around that still wants us. We're going to give everything we've got to go to New York and win the NIT."

In other action in the far-flung tourney Thursday night, it was La Salle 86, Villanova 84; Florida State 107, Rhode Island 92; Arkansas-Little Rock 42, Baylor 41; Illinois State 79, Akron 72 and Vanderbilt 74, Jacksonville 72.

First-round play will conclude tonight with Arkansas State at Arkansas; Seton Hall at Niagara; Mississippi at Southern Mississippi; St. Peter's at St. Louis; Oregon State at New Mexico and Fullerton State at California.

The 32-team tournament began Wednesday with Nebraska edging Marquette 78-76; Boise State nipping Utah 62-61, and Washington defeating Montana State 98-90 in overtime. Cleveland St. 92, UT-Chattanooga 73. Ken McFadden scored 21 points to pace visiting Cleveland State over Tennessee-Chattanooga. The Vikings, 25-7, of the Association of Mid-Continent Universities, grabbed the lead in the first 14 seconds and never let go.

The Moccasins came within two points with 17:38 remaining, 54-52, on a layup by Maurice Head. But Cleveland State then ran off 10 straight points to lead 64-52 with 13:19 remaining. The Moccasins never got closer than 10 points again.

The Moccasins, of the Southern Conference, ended their season at 21-8.

UT-Chattanooga Coach Mark McCarthy said his Mocs failed because they blew too many early opportunities.

"I thought we lost the game in the first 20 minutes," McCarthy said. "We handled their pressure better than we had expected to, but we missed eight layups. You can't do that against a team with this much talent and not expect it to haunt you later on."

S.F. Austin 70, James Madison 63. Clarence King scored 19 points to lead Stephen F. Austin over visiting James Madison. The Lumberjacks extended their winning streak to 12 and improved their season record to 22-7.

James Madison ended its season at 20-10.

"We came out with great intensity and played to the brink of exhaustion on a few occasions," said Stephen F. Austin Coach Harry Miller. "We did an awfully good job on defense, especially rebounding."

Clarence King played probably the best game I've ever seen him play since he's been here."

Said James Madison Coach John Thurston: "Not rebounding in key situations really hurt us. We just couldn't get the big rebound when we had to."

La Salle 86, Villanova 84. Lionel Simmons scored 21 points, including a running jumper at the buzzer, to boost visiting La Salle over Villanova, the 1985 NCAA champion.

Larry Koretz scored 23 points, 18 of them in the first half, and Rich Tarr added 14 second-half points as the Explorers held off a withering Villanova comeback.

La Salle, which held a 41-37 halftime lead, improved its record to 17-12, while Villanova finished its season at 15-16.

Florida State, 107, Rhode Island 92. Randy Allen had 23 points and 11 rebounds and Pee Wee Barber scored 22 to lead Florida State over Rhode Island. It was the fourth time in the last five games that Florida State, 19-10, went past the century mark in scoring.

Rhode Island, which finished the season with a 20-10 record, was led by Atlantic 10 Freshman of the Year Kenny Green, who finished the night with 26 points and 13 rebounds, both game highs.

Arkansas-Little Rock 42, Baylor 41. James Dawn made two free throws after time had expired to boost Arkansas-Little Rock over Baylor.

Darryl Middleton had put Baylor on top 41-40 when he made one of two free throws with 24 seconds remaining. But Dawn was fouled as time ran out and calmly hit the free throws that won it for the Trojans.

The Trojans, 24-9, led 21-20 at the half and by three points on three occasions in the second half. The Bears, 18-13, and runner-up in the Southwest Conference, held a two-point lead on five occasions.

Illinois State 79, Akron 72. Tony Holifield scored 23 points to lead Illinois State over Akron. Holifield scored 15 of his points in the second half to help Illinois stem an Akron comeback.

Marcel Boyce, Akron's leading scorer this season with an average of 19.9 points per game, finished his collegiate basketball career as the game's high scorer with 24 points.

Host Illinois State improved its record to 18-12. Akron, this season's Ohio Valley Conference runner-up, closed its season at 21-9.

Vanderbilt 74, Jacksonville 72. Barry Booker keyed an 18-4 Vanderbilt run at the start of the second half with three 3-point baskets and the Commodores held on to beat Jacksonville.

The victory assured Vanderbilt, which finished ninth in the Southeastern Conference, a winning season with a 17-15 record. Jacksonville, the No. 2 team in the Sun Belt Conference, ended its season at 19-11.

Trailing 74-72 with seven seconds to play, Jacksonville had an opportunity to tie when Pat Laguerre was fouled driving to the basket. But Laguerre, a 79 percent free throw shooter, missed the front end of his 1-and-1 opportunity.

SMU Releases Bad-Booster List

DALLAS (AP) — The same day Southern Methodist released the names of nine boosters involved in a burgeoning scandal, a Texas congressman said he wants to make it a federal crime to provide improper payments to student-athletes.

The names were in a report released Thursday in order to comply with a National Collegiate Athletic Association order to show cause why the school should not be penalized further if it did not take additional action against the boosters it banned in 1985.

Meanwhile, in Washington, U.S. Rep. John Bryant said he will propose legislation next week that would make paying student-athletes illegally if a federal crime punishable by up to one year in prison.

The proposal also will carry a provision that would cut federal funding to universities that participate in making the payments, the Dallas Democrat said.

"The purpose of this is to make a clean sweep of this entire matter of the corrupting of college athletics by boosters who pay illicit payments to amateur athletes to induce them to play for their alma mater, and universities which turn their heads the other way," Bryant said.

Last month, the NCAA suspended SMU's football program for 1987 because of a booster slush fund that paid $61,000 to 13 players even after the school was placed on its sixth probation in August 1985.

SMU repeatedly had refused to make public the names of the nine boosters, four of whom had received lifetime bans from associating with the university's athletic department.

The other five were banned from two to five years for allegedly offering inducements, including money and entertainment, to student-athletes.

Thursday's report said the university made permanent a three-year ban in the case of one booster, Dallas investor John S. Appleton, but left the other penalties unchanged.

Although the report did not directly name the booster the NCAA said ran the slush fund that led to the Feb. 25 sanctions, it said the university found no evidence to contradict stories in the Dallas Times Herald that it was banned booster Sherwood Blount, a former SMU football player and Dallas developer.

Blount was one of the four permanently banned from involvement with the university's athletic department in 1985.

The other seven named in the report were Dallas-area businessmen Ken Andrews and George Owen, sports agent Ronnie Horowitz, banker William F. Stevens, former SMU football player George Wilmot, and Corpus Christi businessman Jack Ryan and his son, Reid Ryan.

The report indicated only Blount, Appleton and Owen committed further violations after being banned.

Appleton, who originally was dissociated from paying for a student-athlete's auto repairs, entertained an assistant football coach at his summer home in Wisconsin in the summer of 1985, the report said.

Appleton told the Fort Worth-Star Telegram that he paid $400 to an athlete in 1984, but said he had done nothing in violation of NCAA rules since.

"I have endowed a scholarship, and if this is their attitude, I am going to ask for it to be returned," he said.

Horowitz and Stevens did not return calls from The Associated Press, and Blount declined to comment. Andrews, Owen and Wilmot could not be reached.

But Reid Ryan noted that his probation expires next month.

"The frustrating thing was that I never got a chance to give my side of things to SMU, or to the NCAA," Ryan said. "They wanted me banned for life and they've never even come down here to ask me about all these things they accused me of."

"I'd rather not make any comments until I've studied it," Jack Ryan said when reached at his office. "I would just have to really read it before I make any statements."

Although the university upheld the permanent ban of Horowitz and Stevens in 1985, the report noted that school officials knew of no subsequent infractions by the boosters.

It cited a case in 1986, however, in which a student-athlete was allowed to stay for four months before paying rent in an apartment in which Owen — one of those permanently banned — held an interest. The student later was suspended from the team.

BELTED BOWSER — Gary D. Murray of Reno demonstrates his "Pet Luv" seat belt on his 9-week-old Germany shepherd pup "Typo." Murray received a patent for the device he developed after his Yorkshire terrier was killed in a 1982 traffic accident. (AP Laserphoto)

Dog Lover's Grief Leads To Seat Belt

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Buckle up your beagle and strap in your Siamese cat, says a man who started making seat belts for pets after his Yorkshire terrier was killed in a car accident.

"This is not a pet rock kind of thing," according to Gary D. Murray. "It's not a yuppie thing. It's to save animals' lives. I had one lady who was complaining she didn't like the color. I said, 'Listen lady, it's not for you. It's for the dog.'"

Murray, 38, recently received a patent for his red "Pet Luv" harnesses and is planning to mass-market the devices, which attach to regular car seat belts and sell for $16.95.

The Reno, Nev., resident was in San Francisco this week to show his invention to the local chapter of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

Chapter president Richard Avanzino said restraining devices such as the seat belts are a good idea, even for pets that enjoy traveling and usually are well-behaved.

"We hear of an untold number of incidents where dogs have jumped out of windows or out of the backs of pickup trucks, causing a serious traffic hazard," Avanzino said. "Not only can the pet be killed, but it can cause a lot of human suffering because of people having accidents trying to avoid them."

Mark McGuire, executive director of the Nevada Humane Society, said many accidents also are caused by pets that interfere with drivers and distract them from the road.

In 1982, Murray was driving a friend's car in Nevada when a tire blew and the car crashed into a tree. Murray, who only a short time before had himself started wearing a seat belt, suffered a cut on the head that required a few stitches. His dog, however, was thrown into the windshield.

"About two months later, when we got another dog, I tried to get something to make sure that if we took the dog anywhere it wouldn't get hurt," Murray recalled Thursday. "Regular leashes don't work. They've got cages you can carry them in, but they bounce around inside them like ping-pong balls."

He said when he asked several veterinarians where he could get something that works like a seat belt for people, they suggested he make it.

Murray, who at the time was a technician for a cable television company, said he spent seven or eight months working on designs and asking the advice of veterinarians.

After about 50 versions, he went after the patent.

The belt is a harness that fits around the pet's chest and around its legs. Loops on the harness are attached to the vehicle's seat belts. Murray said the harness allows the pet enough mobility to sit up and lie down, but not enough to jump onto the floor or out the window.

Officers Quit Vermont Town

MILTON, Vt. (AP) — State police were called in to protect this town of 6,800 today after its six full-time police officers quit over unspecified differences with the chief.

The officers and two dispatchers submitted resignations Wednesday, effective this morning.

Town Manager V. Michael Duffy called the dispute a difference in style between Police Chief W. James Lyons and the officers, who said they would outline their grievances today.

The chief did not return a telephone call to his home.

Since 1960, Pitt County's population has increased from 69,942 to approximately 95,000.

Revised W-4 Form Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — Final approval has been given to a revised W-4 tax-withholding form that the Internal Revenue Service expects to begin distributing by mid-April.

The White House Office of Management and Budget recommended several minor changes in the instructions for filling out the forms, called W-4A in the revised version, and the changes were accepted by the IRS, according to IRS spokesman William Fadely.

Wage earners are required to fill out the withholding form by April 15, 1987. The new form will be available by the 1986 tax season. The changes are minor, but they will change the way the form is filled out.

W-4 that was released in December. The W-4A was offered by the IRS as a substitute after the agency received many complaints that the four-page document was too complex.

The IRS estimates that half of all wage-earners need only use the first page of the W-4. The revised version points out at the top of the form that about 12 million workers who are exempt from withholding do not even need to use the worksheet on the first page; they go to the bottom of the page and fill out the seven-line form itself.

About 25 million people — those who do not itemize deductions, have a working spouse or a second job — need only fill out the brief worksheet and the form. Those with more complicated financial affairs probably will need to fill out the second page, and those with large amounts of non-wage income may need to complete the four-page W-4.

The law requires that federal income taxes be paid in advance, either through withholding or by quarterly estimated payments. One change brought by the 1986 law requires that advance payments cover at least 90 percent of the person's 1987 tax liability.

IRS Commissioner Lawrence B. Gibbs has promised that penalties for failing to meet the 90-percent requirement will be waived this year for workers who make a good-faith effort to meet the goal but fall short because of confusion about the form. To qualify for the waiver, taxpayers must file a W-4 or W-4A by June 1.

Hearst Corp. Buys Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON (AP) — The Hearst Corp. is making the biggest newspaper purchase in its 100-year history with a $400 million acquisition of the Houston Chronicle, the largest daily newspaper in Texas.

"We're very, very confident in your management and you," Hearst president Frank Bannack Jr. told the newsroom staff after the sale was announced Thursday. "You will continue to operate very much as you do now," he said.

The Houston Endowment Inc., a non-profit corporation that owned the newspaper, had to sell it by 1989 because of a tax law change requiring tax-exempt foundations to divest themselves of control of operating companies.

"We're disappointed it had to happen, but you go on," Richard J.V. Johnson, who will remain Chronicle president and publisher, said at a Thursday night news conference.

He described Hearst's proposal as the best offer received and said he was pleased with the sale. Hearst has been in the newspaper business for 100 years, since Randolph Hearst became proprietor of the San Francisco Examiner in 1887.

Bannack said the sale involved $300 million in cash and $100 million in notes. Hearst and Chronicle officials would not discuss further details of the transaction.

The acquisition is Hearst's largest newspaper purchase and its second biggest purchase behind last year's $450 million acquisition of Boston television station WCVB, said Bannack, a former publisher at the San Antonio Light, another Hearst-owned newspaper.

Friday The 13th: Dreading It Is Nothing New

By BETTY CUNIBERTI
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — If Franklin Delano Roosevelt were alive and president right now, he would not want to host a dinner party tonight. But if he had to, and if the dinner was planned for 14 and one guest didn't show up, he would order his secretary, Grace Tully, to hurry and join them rather than allow 13 people to dine at a table.

If Irene Stein were having labor pains today, she would do what she did on Friday, Nov. 13, 1959: Ask her doctors not to deliver her baby until after midnight. (They complied.)

Coldwell Banker sales agent Brenda Reed was supposed to be closing a deal on a home in Los Angeles Friday, but the fidgety buyer insisted that the sale not be recorded until Monday.

Why? Triskaidekaphobia! That is fear of the number 13. Dreading 13, and especially Friday the 13th, goes back thousands of years to the Norse gods and still thrives in the minds of countless people worldwide.

In Paris, 20-year-old Alexis Glorieux occasionally hires himself out for 1,000 francs (about $165) as a 14th dinner guest when a frantic hostess discovers that 13 people are showing up.

"It is not always funny, but at least you know that you will eat well," Glorieux said. "I always remain discreet at such a party because I know I have been invited only because they are superstitious. If no one asks me anything, I don't say anything."

Mystery writer Stephen King has said that he will not stop reading a book on Page 94 or 193, the numerals that add up to 13. He'll read one more page. And when he ascends his stairway, he leaps over steps 12 and 13 in one bound, so that he has taken 12 steps.

For such triskaidekaphobes, this particular Friday is a very, very bad day. This is the second of three Friday the 13ths that will occur (at least we hope they'll all occur! quick, throw some salt) in 1987. It never happens more than three times in one year, and the triple whammy won't visit us again until 1998. So if being scared of Friday the 13th is part of your life style, you should panic NOW!

What is it about 13 that has given it such a reputation?

"The oddest thing I know about it is that the 13th of the month is more likely to occur on Friday than any other day of the week," said Kenneth Hoffman, the former head of mathematics at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology who now runs the Washington public affairs office for the Joint Policy Board for Mathematics. That was shown to be true in a famous thesis, "To Prove That the 13th Day of the Month Is More Likely to Be a Friday Than Any Other Day of Week," written by S. R. Baxter at the age of 13.

Thirteen "is just a prime number, divisible by nothing at all," said Arthur Mattuck, the current chairman of mathematics at MIT.

"All these theories about 13, even Friday the 13th, it's just a joke," Mattuck said. "I've always been amused by how many hotels don't have 13th floors. The question then is whether the 14th floor becomes the 13th floor. What's in a name? It's the 13th floor no matter what you call it."

Los Angeles' Century Plaza Hotel decided the 13 superstition was old hat. The 20-year-old section of the hotel does not have a 13th floor, but the 2-year-old tower section does. "And we certainly book it. It doesn't go empty," said Georgiana Francisco, a spokesperson for the hotel. "The new wave is not to be superstitious."

Two of the most famous tall buildings in the world, New York's Empire State Building and the World Trade Center, both have 13th floors. "When you have 110 floors, 13 seems so insignificant," said Joe Laciotti, spokesperson for the World Trade Center.

Eastern and Pan Am airlines do not have a row 13 on most of their aircraft, but apparently the belief that people don't travel on Friday the 13th is incorrect. United Airlines, the nation's largest domestic carrier, showed no drop in travel on Friday the 13th last month. Airline spokesman Matt Gonring said that Friday's bookings were heavy as well. United, as well as Delta, have a row 13 on their aircraft.

Hard-core triskies contend that both Fridays and 13 have historical significance that backs up their jitters. According to Jerilyn Ross, president of the 6,000-member Phobia Society of America, the most commonly cited event is the Last Supper, where Christ joined his 12 disciples as the 13th dinner guest, was betrayed and ended up being crucified — on a Friday. That is thought to be the primary culprit behind the strongest 13 superstition of all: Never to seat that number at a dinner table.

The other two most significant factors, Ross said, are that the ancient Romans regarded number 13 as a symbol of death, destruction and misfortune, and the belief that witch covens always consisted of 13 persons, the 13th one considered to be the devil.

Other experts say the 13 bugaboo goes back even further than that to yet another ill-fated dinner party, this one attended by Norse gods in Valhalla. Twelve good-guy gods had planned to dine but the party was crashed by a notorious troublemaker, the demonic god Loki. A fight ensued and the most popular guest, Baldur the god of light, was killed.

As for Friday, the dictionary of slang notes that in the United States, Friday was known as Hangman's Day. But Lloyd Hooker, a librarian in the federal prison system library, ran a check of random dates and deduced that only about one-third of executions by hanging took place in the United States on Fridays. Many were held on Saturdays, because they were events entire families liked to attend.

Is 13 really associated with bad events?

King Alfonso XIII (the 13th, that is) of Spain fled his throne. His last day in power was April 13, 1931.

Hospitals Warn Of 'Free Care'

By SPENCER RICH
L.A. Times-Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Hospitals incurred losses of $7.4 billion providing free care to the poor in 1985, an amount that threatens to swamp many hard-pressed institutions, the House Ways and Means health subcommittee was told Thursday.

The losses are more than double what they were in 1980. Hospitals are finding it difficult to cover the losses by raising charges "to privately insured patients and those who are able to pay their own bills," according to Jack Owen, executive vice president of the American Hospital Association.

"Many of the hospitals currently providing large volumes of unsponsored care will be forced to choose between bankruptcy and a drastic reduction in service to the poor," Owen warned.

The hardest-hit hospitals are those in metropolitan areas, particularly public hospitals, that have large numbers of uninsured poor people who flock to the outpatient clinics and emergency rooms to obtain free care, witnesses said. The number of people without insurance has been rising in recent years. About 37 million people lack coverage for all or part of the year.

Owen said the volume of charity care and unpaid bills was only $3.5 billion nationally in 1980 but had jumped to $7.4 billion by 1985.

He said the ability of hospitals to subsidize the cost of free care by charging other patients higher prices "has declined sharply" in recent years.

Owen and other witnesses said Medicare and Medicaid have imposed cost-controls on what they pay hospitals generally and provide no subsidy "for costs incurred by the medically indigent who are ineligible for either program."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — What will become of the romance between brainy barmaid Diane Chambers and the ex-jock Sam Malone now that actress Shelley Long has left the NBC show "Cheers"?

The network isn't telling, and the final episode of the season, to be shown May 7, was filmed under tight security Tuesday.

An invitations-only audience that included actresses Diane Keaton and Carol Kane and NBC entertainment executive Brandon Tartikoff watched filming of Long's final "Cheers" episode. A wrap party followed.

Witnesses said insurance companies and other hospital payers are also increasingly striving to obtain discount and other low-cost arrangements for people they cover, making it more and more difficult to shift unpaid indigent-care costs to paying patients.

In addition, financially hard-pressed state, county and municipal governments have been unable to increase payments to hospitals enough to offset mounting losses on indigent care, according to James J. Mongan, executive director of public hospitals in Kansas City; Ann Brown, administrator of Jefferson County Hospital, Fayette, Mo.; and numerous other witnesses.

They said this is particularly threatening to public hospitals that depend heavily on local governments for their finances and have the heaviest indigent-care burdens. Subcommittee Chairman Fortney H. "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., said that in "our 100 largest metropolitan areas, public hospitals account for 21 percent of uncompensated care, although they have only 5.5 percent of the beds."

"This year we should consider a national program that addresses hospital charity care costs," providing some form of subsidy for such care, he said.

The Apollo 13 space mission had to cancel a planned trip to the moon after an oxygen tank ruptured on April 13, 1970, forcing the craft and its three astronauts to return to earth. A space shuttle flight in 1984 was originally designated as STS-13 but changed to 41-C. When the ground crew radioed a 31-13 sports score to the astronauts, they said the outcome of the game had been "31 to 41-Charlie." The shuttle later landed safely, and was greeted by the phrase, "Welcome home on Friday the 41-Charlie," on Friday, April 13th, 1984 — the anniversary of the Apollo 13 explosion.

A case can be made that just as many good things are associated with 13 as bad. There were 13 colonies. On Oct. 13, 1792, construction began on the White House. On Sept. 13 and 14, in 1814, Francis Scott Key was inspired during the bombardment of Fort McHenry to write the "Star Spangled Banner." Of course, nobody can really sing it.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Garrison Keillor is calling it quits just as his popular radio program, "A Prairie Home Companion," is finally reaching a television audience. The 44-year-old singing storyteller from Lake Wobegon announced last month he was ending the nationally broadcast public-radio show to "resume the life of a shy person." The news came as a surprise, since the Disney Channel had just agreed to televise the season's last 17 episodes on a tape-delay basis. Keillor, who at nearly 6-foot-4 bills himself as the world's tallest radio comedian, said he had decided to end the show before he signed the contract with Disney. "I wouldn't do it if I didn't have an end date, because I think the fear of failure is so great," he said. "The thought of cancellation after 13 shows would be almost unbearable. And having done this show on radio for 13 years, I'm not about to be canceled." "A Prairie Home Companion" will be broadcast for the last time June 13 from the World Theater in St. Paul. On March 7, the Disney Channel broadcast its first installment. The pay television service is broadcasting 90 minutes of each two-hour Saturday show, which is heard by an estimated 4 million to 5 million Americans, said Minnesota Public Radio President Bill Kling. The Disney Channel extends the reach to more than 3.1 million cable television subscribers, but Keillor isn't among them. He has yet to subscribe. "I've got to get it," he said. "My kids have been after me to get it for a long time." Keillor said some listeners had complained he was destroying their illusions about his imaginary hometown of Lake Wobegon by going to television. "To me, going from radio to television is to want to give up those illusions — and especially personal illusions that people might have — and to reveal myself, to reveal this show and to show what we're doing in the mercenary way that television does," he said. Keillor, whose book "Lake Wobegon Days" topped the best-seller lists in 1985, said leaving the program would sharpen his writing. "The writing that I do about Lake Wobegon is based on tiny things that I see around me and on my contacts with people," he said. "I used to get a lot of wonderful ideas for stories and characters from people whom I knew casually. People who come in and empty your wastebasket, the men who come in and fix the lights at the office. ... "In order for you to gather this material and to have some sense of the life of this imaginary town, you have to be an ordinary person. You have to have some semblance of anonymity, and I don't have that anymore in St. Paul. And so I really can't do the show here except as a caricature of itself. And I really don't think I could do it elsewhere, so I choose to step out."

In 1985, Keillor married a Danish high-school classmate, Ulla Skaerved, and after the last "Prairie Home Companion" show, they will move to Denmark. "I get excited whenever I think of it," he said. "Getting on a plane and getting off eight hours later in a country where I functionally am an idiot and where I walk around with my wife and we have a different life."

Cole Porter's 'High Society' Makes Hit In London Debut

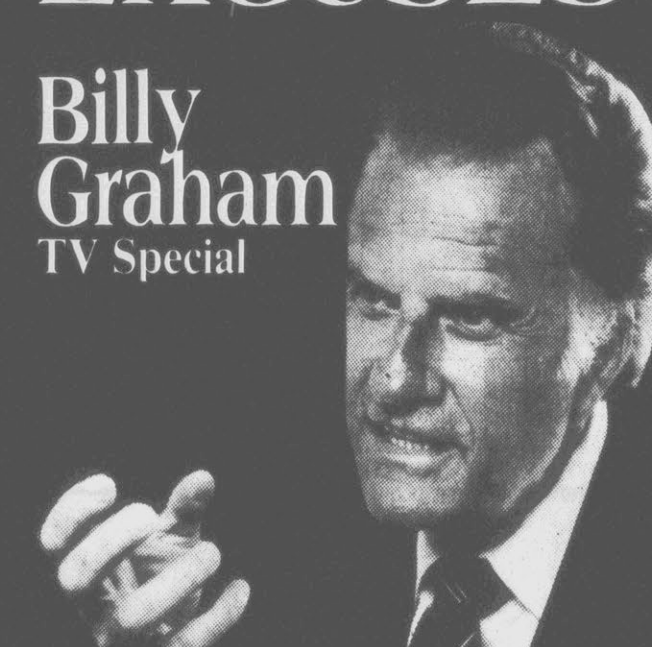

By MATT WOLF
Associated Press Writer
LONDON (AP) — The lights dim and the music swells. "True Love" marks the surge in the lovers' hearts and the song on their lips. Thirty-one years after the late Bing Crosby and Grace Kelly immortalized the melody on screen, Cole Porter's "High Society" is making its bow as a stage musical at London's Victoria Palace Theater. The musical is adapted from the 1956 film, which in turn had been based on Philip Barry's "The Philadelphia Story," itself a successful play and film starring Katharine Hepburn and Cary Grant. Richard Eyre, who adapted and directed the production, said the show's celebration of romance and style made it a natural for the stage. "Like all really good ideas, you can't imagine why nobody had thought of doing a stage version of 'High Society' before," said Eyre, who will succeed Sir Peter Hall as director of Britain's National Theater in September 1988. At the National in 1982, Eyre staged a revival of Frank Loesser's "Guys and Dolls." Skeptics were dubious about Britons performing a classic American musical, but the show got rave reviews and remains the biggest musical hit in the National's history. London critics were mixed about "High Society" at its Feb. 25 opening. Milton Shulman in The Standard called it "a bland, old-fashioned entertainment not likely to remain in the mind beyond next morning's breakfast." But Rosalie Horner in The Daily Express wrote: "'High Society' goes to your head like champagne and leaves you feeling good to be alive." The 1956 movie also had a mixed welcome, with some reviewers calling it cold and dull reworking of the wittier and more sophisticated "The Philadelphia Story." The $1.9-million musical has choreographer David Toguri and designer John Gunter, who also worked on "Guys and Dolls" with Eyre. Natasha Richardson, daughter of actress Vanessa Redgrave and the director Tony Richardson, stars as Tracy Lord, the idle Philadelphia heiress who is about to be remarried but still loves her wayward first husband. Trevor Eve and Stephen Rea play C.K. Dexter Haven, Tracy's first husband, and Mike Connor plays the gossip writer who was portrayed by Jimmy Stewart and Frank Sinatra on film. All three London leads are "musical virgins," but director Eyre says he wanted a cast who could act. "I wanted absolutely first-rate actors who could play the play of 'Philadelphia Story,' and also sing and dance," he said. "That's a tall order, and they acquit themselves remarkably well." The stars had the difficult job of shaking the ghosts of the past and creating new portrayals. "You know you can't do it like Bing, you know you can't do it like Cary," said the 35-year-old Eve. "They were doing what made them legends." Eve does two solos — "I Love You, Samantha" and "Little One" — and teams with Miss Richardson on "True Love." He leads the ensemble in the curtain number, "Well, Did You Evah?" It's daunting work for an actor whose last musical was Porter's "Kiss Me, Kate" at drama school. But Eve takes it in stride. "The shell shock is now wearing off," he said. "I try to get it quite casual and, hopefully, elegant. You have to go in and do it yourself." Miss Richardson agrees her own personality comes first. "I'll always be Natasha," said the 23-year-old actress. "Hepburn was Tracy Lord and I've taken all that on board. When there's been a near-definitive performance, you cannot ignore it, but I am playing the part now."

FOCUS

It's Friday the 13th

Perhaps Friday the 13th is even unlucky for black cats, whose bad reputations probably come from the belief that they are really witches in disguise. Much older, however, is the notion that black cats bring good luck. Thousands of years ago, many people believed it was a GOOD omen for a black cat to cross a person's path at the start of a journey. Egyptians believed that the goddess Bast had the head of a cat. They mummified dead cats and buried them in cat cemeteries.

DO YOU KNOW — What breed of cat has no tail?

THURSDAY'S ANSWER — Light travels approximately 186,000 miles per second.

"Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury:

"It is obvious that there is no case against my client, West. The fact that East is suing him for malpractice is sheer vindictiveness—East refuses to give South credit for thoughtful declarer play.

"Let me recap the events of the day. My client admits that East had a classic weak-two opening bid at any vulnerability. He concedes that three no trump is a normal contract for North-South to reach under the circumstances.

"My client found the good opening lead of a club—even East is prepared to concede that his partner could not lead his suit. After dummy's ten won, declarer realized that West had to be void in hearts. So South cashed the table's three high diamonds and, since leading a heart would mean instant defeat and since he had no entry to his hand, declarer led a club to the king.

"The defendant cashed his club tricks as declarer sluffed hearts, but he was then forced to exit with a spade. Declarer ran that to his ten and made the rest of the tricks. Instead of this frivolous lawsuit, East should be congratulating declarer on his fine effort at trick five."

"In deference to learned counsel's excellent presentation of the facts, East does not contest that declarer performed most creditably. However, we do insist that West is fully to blame for the catastrophe that ensued. Instead of exiting with a low spade after cashing his clubs, West should have played the king!

"After winning the ace, declarer would have had a choice of ways to go down. He could cash dummy's spades and have no way to reach his hand, or he could win the second spade in hand with the ten and then be cut off from the table. Either way, declarer would be stranded with a losing heart at the end."

"Guilty as charged!"

Exhibit Focuses On Latest Spy Equipment

By FRED T. SHUSTER
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — If you ever have the feeling you're being watched, you probably are, say artists whose new exhibit turns the tables, often humorously, on Big Brother.

The show of video, photography and audio pieces involving spy technology includes the work of 29 artists. One piece eavesdrops on people and broadcasts their conversations, while another work is made up of clandestinely taken pictures of people driving on a highway.

"What this show looks at is not just how the technology is used but why. It looks at the effect of surveillance in our daily lives," said Branda Miller, curator of the exhibit, which is partly funded by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

"It's not about some strange paranoia of the 1960s or 1970s," added Joy Silverman, director of the non-profit Los Angeles Contemporary Exhibitions gallery.

"Radio Painting," by Los Angeles artist Gary Lloyd is one of two pieces that contain hidden microphones, which broadcast what they overhear. The frequencies used can be heard on car radios within a five-block radius of the gallery.

"All of my paintings and sculptures are surveillance works," Lloyd said. "They receive any information they hear and broadcast it openly on airwaves just up to the limit the FCC permits."

"Picturemachines," a 15-minute video by Heiner Mühlenbrock, shows ordinary pedestrian traffic at a government office in West Berlin. But the soundtrack consists of scores from vintage crime movies, transforming the comings and goings of office workers into scenes from a John Le Carré spy thriller.

Another video, "Television Believers" by Aron Ranen, takes a behind-the-scenes look at a TV faith healer who claims to perform miracles. The tape shows the man being fed information about his audience on a secret audio channel.

Some pieces at the exhibit document cases of American citizens who were targets of government investigations.

New York-based artist Margia Kramer was inspired by the life and death of actress Jean Seberg for her thought-provoking "Racial Matters."

"In 1979, when Jean Seberg died, I requested her (FBI) file using a Freedom of Information Act request," said Miss Kramer. "I was trying to make art that dealt with real rather than irrelevant issues."

Miss Kramer's piece incorporates blow-ups of pages from Miss Seberg's FBI file that discuss the parentage of the child she was pregnant with. Through portions of the panels, the viewer can watch an 18-minute documentary on the actress by Miss Kramer.

After Miss Seberg's suicide, FBI officials admitted that in 1970 the bureau spread false rumors that the actress had become pregnant by a member of the Black Panther Party. The effort to discredit her came because she supported the black nationalist cause.

The piece has been exhibited at the Museum of Modern Art in New York and the documentary is currently showing at the Whitney Museum.

Jake Seniek's tense "Borrowed Time" is a wall display of 72 black-and-white photographs, each 8-by-20 inches, depicting occupants of automobiles as they drove under an overpass near a busy Seattle highway.

Using a telephoto lens and high-speed film, Seniek selectively took photos of cars as they passed below him on the highway.

The passengers are frozen in an eerie gray light, suggesting they are either in danger or part of a criminal investigation.

"Listening Post," by New York City film archive owner Richard Prelinger, anchors the show, vividly illustrating the invisible net of surveillance surrounding society.

The exhibit uses audio scanners programmed to receive 92 channels in the Los Angeles area including police, immigration, the Internal Revenue Service and the district attorney's special investigations unit.

By eavesdropping on the crackling stream of information, Prelinger said, the listener becomes aware of the usually monotonous nature of undercover work.

"Everyone thinks this is real James Bond stuff and ascribes almost supernatural status to these people. But they're just doing their job. They have a specific methodology and you can learn about it," Prelinger said.

"This is not art, it's information."

British Judge Blocks Effort To Halt Ex-Spy's Memoirs

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — A judge today cleared the way for publication of memoirs written by a retired British intelligence agent, saying the revelations may be embarrassing to the British government but were outdated and would not harm Britain's national security.

Judge Philip Powell of New South Wales Supreme Court dismissed Britain's attempt to block retired agent Peter Wright's book "Spycatcher," and gave the British government 28 days to appeal.

Powell also ordered the British government to pay the legal costs incurred by Wright and his publisher, Heinemann Aust. Britain said it will consider appealing the ruling.

Britain had sought an injunction to bar Heinemann from printing the book by Wright, a former officer in its MI-5 counterespionage agency, maintaining its national interests would be harmed if the book were published.

Wright, 71, whose MI-5 job was tracking down traitors, retired in 1976 and lives in Tasmania.

His book claims the late Sir Roger Hollis, MI-5's director from 1956-65, was a Soviet spy. Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told Parliament in 1981 that intelligence chiefs had investigated Hollis and found no proof he was a traitor.

"Spycatcher" charges that others in the organization were double agents as well, and that MI-5 agents were involved in a plot to destabilize Harold Wilson's Labor Party government in the 1970s.

Powell summarized his 286-page judgement to a packed courtroom.

"It must have been apparent to anyone who had cause to consider the matter that, as a result of the acquiescence, or inaction, of the British government, the service (MI-5), for years, leaked like a sieve," he said.

He said much of the information in Wright's book was about events that happened 20 years ago and thus had "ceased to be of relevance in this modern day world."

Powell called "incredible" the British government's failure to take steps to halt publication of a previous book on the British security service, Chapman Pincher's "Their Trade is Treachery."

Britain acknowledged during the five-week hearing, which adjourned Dec. 19, that it had not tried to stop publication of other revealing books about its spy community. But it argued Wright was the first "insider" to write about MI-5 and that his manuscript contains previously unpublished material.

Powell said publication of some information in the manuscript may embarrass the British government, but its claim this "will cause detriment to it sounds decidedly hollow."

There is also no evidence, the judge ruled, to support the claim that friendly nations would be less likely to share intelligence with London if the book is published.

He noted the United States still cooperates with Britain despite the well-publicized cases of Britons Kim Philby and George Blake, who were Soviet double agents.

CIA Analyst Gets Reduced Workload

WASHINGTON (AP) — Charles Allen, the CIA analyst who apparently was the first to detect the possibility that Iranian arms payments were diverted to the Contra rebels, has been given a reduced workload, intelligence community sources say.

Allen, who had served for some time as a deputy to Duane Clarridge at the CIA's counterterrorism center, as well as being a national intelligence officer for terrorism, is leaving the deputy's post, the sources said Thursday. The sources said the purpose was to give him a more manageable workload.

CIA spokesman George Lauder said, "We never talk about the movements of national intelligence officers." But he added, "Allen has not been disciplined. There is no reason to discipline him. If there were any change, it would not be because of any wrongdoing or suspicion of wrongdoing."

On Oct. 1 last year, Allen alerted his superiors to the possibility that payments from the sale of arms to Iran, being managed by National Security Council aide Oliver L. North, were being diverted to the Nicaraguan Contras by middlemen whom North was using in both the Iranian deal and a separate Contra-support operation.

Allen's alert came a month before the public disclosure of arms sales to Iran and nearly two months before Attorney General Edwin Meese III publicly disclosed he had found evidence of diversion of Iranian payments to the Contras.

Some members of Congress were critical of Gates and Casey for not mentioning Allen's suspicions in Casey's Nov. 21 testimony to Congress, but Gates has said they did not do so because they considered Allen's warning "flimsy speculation."

'Average Looking' Galaxy Could Be Universe's Largest

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronomers say a long-overlooked galaxy drifting in the void between the Milky Way and the Andromeda constellation is one of the largest objects in the universe.
Markarian 348, an isolated, average-looking collection of stars and gas that astronomers have glanced at for 20 years, now appears to be the largest known galaxy, a report published today in the journal Science says.
Using a powerful radio telescope to peer past clouds of gas and the glare of background starlight, scientists say they found the galaxy to be a giant spiral of stars swollen with a massive hydrogen cloud to 13 times the size of the Milky Way.

The galaxy, located 300 million light-years from Earth, is an oddly shaped mass of stars and gases which puts out many times the energy of a normal galaxy and a brightness 100 billion times that of the sun, the scientists said.
Astronomers said Markarian 348 is 1.3 million light-years in diameter. This is a giant compared with the Milky Way, in which the Earth's solar system is located. The Milky Way measures about 100,000 light-years in diameter and contains billions of stars.
A light-year is the distance light travels in a vacuum at 186,000 miles per second in a year's time — about 5.9 trillion miles.

Dr. Susan M. Simkin, professor of astronomy at Michigan State University, made the discovery with Dr. Hong-Jun Su of Nanjing, China, formerly a visiting scientist at Michigan State, and Drs. Jacqueline van Gorkom and John Hibbard of the National Radio Astronomy Observatory at Socorro, N.M.
The galaxy appears to have at least one, and possibly two, long spiraling arms which are tightly wound near the center and branch out at irregular angles.

More interesting than the galaxy's size, the scientists report, is the action of the great cloud of hydrogen that surrounds it. The gas cloud appears to be moving in a tidal fashion under the gravitational influence of a smaller, nearby galaxy, they said.
The galaxy may be so large because of the tidal interaction with the smaller companion, Simkin said

GALACTIC GIANT — This picture shows the distant galaxy "Markarian 348" and its giant hydrogen gas cloud. It tentatively has the distinction of being the largest known galaxy in the universe. Scientists say it is about 1.3 million light years across, compared to the Milky Way, which is about 100,000 light years across. (AP Laserphoto) in a telephone interview Thursday.

Gravity from the small galaxy appears to make the gas undulate around the core of Markarian 348, much as the moon causes tides in the Earth's oceans, she said. The gas gains momentum from the orbital motion of the smaller galaxy, causing it to spread out.
Scientists have long speculated on the existence of tidal effects as the cause of spiraling movement in galaxies, but it has never before been observed in detail, Simkin said.

Markarian 348 is the largest isolated galaxy seen outside of collections of galaxies known as galactic clusters, and one of the largest objects in the known universe, according to the National Science Foundation, which sponsored the work.

The galaxy has been known to optical astronomers for more than 20 years, but was thought to be about the size of the Milky Way, an average-sized galaxy, the foundation said.

However, the recent observations, using the massive Very Large Array radio telescope in New Mexico to penetrate intervening light and gas, disclosed its hidden properties. The telescope is an array of 27 antennas scattered across miles of desert and tied together electronically into a single instrument.

In 1985, Pitt County's average weekly manufacturing wage was $332.98.

Researchers Say AIDS Drugs Don't Work Together

By WARREN E. LEARY
AP Science Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — Two drugs which separately may be beneficial in treating AIDS show noticeably less effectiveness and may even harm patients when used together, scientists say.
Researchers at Boston's Massachusetts General Hospital and elsewhere said Thursday they tested the drugs AZT and ribavirin in several different human cell cultures and found they antagonized one another.
"It is conceivable that this mechanism happens in people as well," Dr. Markus W. Vogt said in a telephone interview. "This should be tested in animals before trying the combination in humans."
The researchers cautioned that desperate patients with the fatal disease who obtain the experimental drugs illegally may harm themselves if they mix the two.
"I am afraid that both AZT and ribavirin are or will be available on the black market, particularly in large cities on the East and West Coasts," said Dr. Martin S. Hirsch, head of AIDS research at the hospital.
"It is a natural temptation for people who are desperate and fear for their lives to attempt to combine these drugs," he continued.
The Boston researchers tested azidothymidine, or AZT, made by the Burroughs Wellcome Co., of Research Triangle Park, N.C., with ribavirin, an antiviral drug made by ICN Pharmaceuticals of Costa Mesa, Calif.
The researchers said it appears ribavirin prevents necessary chemical changes in AZT that are required for the drug to interfere with reproduction of the virus which causes acquired immune deficiency syndrome.
In a multi-staged process, AZT must pick up phosphorus to become active against viral reproduction, Vogt said. Ribavirin, which goes through the same process, seems to compete with AZT to decrease its effectiveness, he said.
AZT, which reduced the symptoms and death rate of patients with AIDS in a trial last year, is being taken experimentally by thousands of patients in a new test.
A Food and Drug Administration advisory panel recommended in January that AZT receive prescription approval, but the application still is pending, according to FDA spokesman Brad Stone.
ICN, which claims ribavirin helps delay the onset of full-blown AIDS in people infected with the virus that causes the disease, has applied for approval of expanded trials with the drug. The application is pending until the company provides further information on preliminary tests that the FDA requested, Stone said.
In a report published today in the journal Science, the Boston researchers, including Robert Schooley, Kevan Hartshorn and Leslie Coleman, and Phillip Furman and James Fyfe of Wellcome, said the drug mixing results were unexpected.
The scientists had hoped the combination would produce a synergistic effect, meaning the action together would be more powerful than just the sum of the individual drugs.

Panel Says NASA Needs Expendable Launchers

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer
WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel says the National Aeronautics and Space Administration should, "on a most urgent basis," buy a fleet of throwaway rockets to launch cargoes that don't need to be carried aloft by the space shuttle.
The NASA Advisory Council, in a study released Thursday, said the space agency should use the shuttle only for "shuttle-unique" cargoes — those that can't be launched any other way or need the involvement of astronauts.

NASA, faced with a growing backlog of cargoes because last year's Challenger explosion grounded the remaining three shuttles, has talked about buying expendable rockets but has not asked Congress for the money to do it.

Single-use rockets were phased out by the space agency when the shuttle came on line and was proclaimed to be the principal cargo carrier. The Air Force, caught in a similar bind, has expendable launch vehicles on order.

The study was done by a task force of the NASA Advisory Council, which is the senior external advisory body to the space agency and its administrator. The task force was headed by retired Air Force Maj. Gen. Jasper Welch.

The task force told NASA it cannot handle more than 12 shuttle flights a year and should not plan for more when the agency has its four orbiters flying again. NASA has set 16 flights as its goal after a gradual buildup beginning next year.

"The task force recommends a major evolution in NASA policy from one that has maximized the use of the shuttle, to a policy that preserves the space transportation fleet for those critical missions that require its unique capabilities," the council said.

It said the agency should make every effort to shift cargoes to expendable launch vehicles — "even in cases where modification of the payload is required, in order to conserve the shuttle for its prime mission, for which the task force sees plenty of demand."

The task force said that even with high use of expendable launch vehicles, 12 manned flights a year and shuttle cargoes restricted to those that only can be carried on the space plane, NASA will fall seven or eight flights behind in the years 1988 through 1992. The shortage will become worse after that with space station requirements.

"The task force views this shortfall with measured but real alarm," the study said. "Serious effort by NASA is clearly required in 1987 to resolve the post-1994 supply and demand for the shuttle."

NASA plans to resume shuttle launches in February 1988.

The advisory council said a robust program for access to space should include a fleet of diversified launchers, both in size and type; shuttles; sufficient capacity in each launcher class to carry on if another class is stopped for any reason; and launchers with much larger and heavier payload capabilities than the shuttle.

Anti-Death
ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Repeating their long-standing opposition to bringing back the death penalty in New York state, its Roman Catholic bishops say they find no evidence that capital punishment reduces violent crimes.
The bishops also said the penalty is "not administered equitably, with the poor and members of minorities more likely to be executed," and history shows that the innocent sometimes are executed.
